Spring's song

An Easter lily, sparkling with spring dew, seems to trumpet the news: "Christ is risen!" The white flower, traditionally a symbol of purity, has come to represent resurrection and the newness of life. Easter is observed today by Christians around the world.

Texas' woes could pose threat to SSC, congressman says

By JENNIFER DIXON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fallout over the House Speaker Jim Wright's ethics woes, the savings and loan industry bailout and Sen. Phil Gramm's budgetary crusades all pose a potential threat to the $4.6 billion superconducting super collider, a Texas congressman says.

"To the extent Wright is weakened by any events related to this ethics committee thing, it will also weaken our ability to get the super collider," Rep. John Bryant, D-Texas, said.

Bryant expressed doubt that a coming report from the House Ethics Committee concerning his finances would wound the speaker. But he said unfavorable findings from the panel "could be devastating" to the future of the super collider — a massive particle accelerator the Energy Department is planning to construct at a Texas site.

Bryant said he even detects an anti-Texas undercurrent in Congress.

"The kind of budgetary pressure we're experiencing is unprecented and there is not a lot of good will right now toward our state," he said.

Bryant said Texas is being blamed for the planned bailout of the troubled savings and loan industry at an estimated cost of more than $100 billion.

Grumbling is also heard over an austerity plan to close military bases across the country but which leaves all Texas installations intact except the Navy's homeport at Galveston, which is under construction.

Texas also would gain from the possible construction of a space station, and members of its congressional delegation are traditionally at the front of efforts to fund the space budget, Bryant said.

"There is a general perception, with a president, speaker and all of these cabinet members (from Texas) and all of our (congressional) chairmen, that we have too many things going our way," Bryant said. "And we have to overcome that perception."

Bryant said Gramm's opposition to home-state projects of other lawmakers has caused a measure of consternation in the Senate.

"Gramm attacks every proposal here regarding spending, even those that were worthy proposals, and he's not receiving a very favorable reception from other senators when he goes and asks for his project," Bryant said.

Gramm recently told the Senate a coal purchase proposed by Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., was "felony theft of the taxpayers' money, perpetrated by special interest groups who have spokesmen right here on this floor." He called the Weed Science and Technology Center at North Dakota State University a pork barrel project that could bust the budget.

Unsurprisingly, Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D., replied by telling a recent hearing that the super collider was not high on his list of priorities.

John Paul celebrates Easter vigil

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Thousands of small candles illuminated St. Peter's Basilica on Saturday night as Pope John Paul II celebrated Easter vigil services to usher in Christianity's holiest day.

Before thousands of people packing the pews and aisles of Christendom's biggest church, the pontiff lit a long white candle to open the service commemorating the night Jesus Christ rose from the dead after his crucifixion.

The cavernous basilica was dark and silent as the pope, preceded by cardinals and bishops, carried the candle in a slow procession toward the altar under the Baldacchino, the baroque canopy designed by the 17th century sculptor Gian Lorenzo Bernini.

After the third chanting of the "Lumen Christi," or Light of Christ, the basilica slowly lit up as the congregation began lighting small candles to symbolize the "pilgrimage from darkness to light."

The pope then placed his candle at the altar, and the lights of the basilica were turned on.

After prayers and readings, the pope delivered a homily stressing the "natural power of water" and its role in the sacrament of baptism.

The pope then baptized and confirmed 16 people from eight countries: five each from Japan and the Korean peninsula and one each from the United States, France, the Philippines, Iran, Italy and Egypt.

The American was Curtis Devorn Wilkerson, 26, a surgical research technician from Joiner, Ark.

"In a wonderful way, your baptism and the wait for the Resurrection of Christ, which will happen tonight, are taking place at the same time," the pope said in his homily, delivered in Italian.

Trinity's Funfest will kick off fund-raisers

Midland's season of festivals and fairs, designed to impart pleasure while raking in funds for worthwhile causes, gets under way next month when Trinity School puts on its Funfest '89.

"The children's enthusiasm has just been wonderful — from the little ones to the older ones," said Cynthia Grubb, a Trinity mother who is promoting the Funfest. The event will be held on Saturday, April 8, on the Trinity campus off Wadley Avenue in northwest Midland.

The Funfest is the independent school's communitywide fun- and fund-raising event of the year and launches a series of money-raising events.

Still to come in '89 are Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church's Family Festival in May to benefit the parish; the Museum of the Southwest's Septemberfest; St. Ann's School's Family Fair in September to benefit the parochial school; Friends of the Library Book Sale in October, and the American rafters talk to Mexican authorities about sniper shooting

BIG BEND NATIONAL PARK (AP) — Three Americans who said shots were fired at them by a sniper while they rafted through the Rio Grande in Big Bend National Park gave depositions to Mexican authorities Saturday.

The three men — Reuben Saage II of Alpine, James Gentry of Houston and Russ Alexander of Riesel — had to file formal complaints with Mexican officials before they would open an investigation into Wednesday's incident, said Roy Given, a spokesman for the national park.

The three men were flown to Del Rio, across the border from Ciudad Acuna, Mexico, Saturday morning by the U.S. Border Patrol for the depositions, Given said. Now the Coahuila State Police can proceed with its investigation, he said.

It was the second sniping incident on the Rio Grande since November, when an Eastland man was killed while shielding his wife from the bullets of snipers who stalked them from cliffs on the Mexican side of the river. Two people also were wounded in that incident, which occurred several miles upstream from Wednesday's attack.

Four teen-agers were arrested in that incident and are awaiting trail.

Authorities have not determined a motive for Wednesday's shooting.

Three Mexican investigators on Friday flew to the scene of shooting, about 250 miles from Del Rio in a part of the national park called San Vicente canyon. Border Patrol agents and Mexican authorities found no shell casings and few other clues, officials said.

However, authorities have two suspects in the case, Given said.

"The investigation on our end is pretty much coming to an end. We know what happened," said Bob Rothe, a park ranger spokesman. "The follow-up is a Mexican responsibility."

The three men told authorities they carried .45-caliber and 9mm pistols and fired at least five rounds into the air after being shot at from a canyon rim on the Mexican side of the river, Given said.

Alaska official says oil clean up too slow

VALDEZ, Alaska (AP) — Millions of gallons of crude oil that spilled when a tanker ran aground spread across a wildlife-rich stretch of ocean Saturday, and Alaska's chief environmental officer criticized cleanup efforts as too slow.

The biggest oil spill in U.S. history created a slick about 7 miles long and 7 miles wide in Prince William Sound. The Coast Guard said only Reef Island and the western edge of Bligh Island had been touched by the slick.

"This situation, I think, was everyone's secret nightmare about what could happen with oil traffic in the sound," said Dennis Kelso, commissioner of the Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation.

Some 240,000 barrels — about 10,080,000 gallons — of crude oil from Alaska's North Slope spilled early Friday when the 987-foot tanker Exxon Valdez ran hard aground on Bligh Reef, about 25 miles outside Valdez, where it had taken on a total cargo of 1.2 million barrels. Initial reports indicated 270,000 barrels had spilled.

"What we have here is a major environmental catastrophe," said one oil spill expert, Richard Golob of Boston, publisher of Golob Oil Pollution Bulletin.

Golob said cleanup equipment at the site was "grossly inadequate" but added that even under ideal circumstances cleanup efforts would not have significantly reduced the spill's impact.

"It is an enclosed body of water," he said. "The only way for this oil to ecape out to the sea is by traversing the entire length of Prince William Sound with all its islands, fjords and bays and channels.

"And during that transit, undoubtedly a large stretch of shoreline will be contaminated," he said.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Forecast calling for rain

From Staff and Wire Reports

Strong winds may usher in thunderstorms tonight, forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport say.

Today will be partly cloudy with less than a 20 percent chance of late afternoon thunderstorms. Winds will be from the south at 5-15 mph and become gusty late in the day. The high is expected in the mid-80s.

Tonight will be cloudy with a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms. The low temperature should be in the lower-50s.

Monday will be mostly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms. The high temperature again should be in the low-80s.

The record high for Saturday was set in 1938 when it reached 90, while the record low for March 26 was set in 1965 when the mercury dipped to 20.

STATE

A low pressure trough stretched across the Low Plains into the lower Pecos Valley separating moist air in the east from dry air in the west to spawn scattered showers and isolated thunderstorms over parts of the Hill Country and south central Texas.

Low-level cloudiness covered much of the eastern half of the state, while mostly fair skies were over the west.

The forecast called for fair skies over the northwest with partly to mostly cloudy skies elsewhere. Widely scattered showers or thunderstorms were expected over parts of North Texas and South Texas.

NATION

A moist Pacific weather system spread showers across most of the western third of the nation Saturday, and locally heavy snow fell overnight in Maine.

Most of California had rain Saturday and rain also fell over much of the Pacific Northwest and sections of the Intermountain region between the Sierra Nevada and the Rockies.

The heaviest rain fell in northern California, but southern California also was hit and most of the Los Angeles area received a steady light rain during the morning, with amounts generally around a quarter of an inch.

Precipitation at Blue Canyon changed to snow late in the morning. Some higher elevations in the northern Sierra Nevada got around 1 to 2 feet of snow.

In the Northeast, much of Maine had heavy snow overnight, including 11 inches at Lewiston, 8 inches at Augusta, 6 inches at Rumford, and 4 inches at Portland.

That snow changed to rain during the morning and most of it ended by midday. Afternoon temperatures in the upper 30s and 40s throughout the state melted much of the snow.

Egg hunt

Midlanders hunted Easter eggs a day early at Angel Stadium. The Saturday morning event, sponsored by the Jaycees, was attended by 300-400 local children.

TRINITY

Asbury Fall Festival in November to benefit Asbury United Methodist Church and its mission.

Trinity's Funfest is the school's largest fund-raiser, said Mrs. Grubb.

The marathon day full of events will include the 9 a.m. walk-a-thon around Trinity's football field for students from kindergarten through the fourth-grade; a five-mile bike-a-thon through Trinity Meadows at 9 a.m.; and an evening dance-a-thon for students from grades 7 through 12. Upper-level students also may participate in the bike-a-thon.

Students in the endurance events — walking, biking, dancing — will earn funds through pledges.

The Funfest also will include a "quiet-as-possible" silent auction from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. in front of the Trinity library. Items to be auctioned will include art work created by the students, parents and faculty members, and additional donated goods and services, such as air fare, game hunting experience, estate planning, will making and a gourmet dinner prepared by Judy Floyd.

"It's like a four-star dining experience," said assistant Funfest chairman Karen Beal.

Eleven women needle-pointed a Nativity Scene for the silent auction.

And master-quilters Cathy Carruth and Diana Younger guided Trinity fifth-grade youngsters in helping to create a "masterpiece" quilt. The students' mothers, grandmothers and great-grandmothers helped out in the quilting.

The decorated pieces making up the quilt are "done on a Southwest theme," noted Cathy Carruth, a Trinity mother. Piece patterns include coyote, adobe house, cactus, snake, scorpion, sun burst, stars, and jalapeno peppers.

"The children did what they wanted and made their (theme) choices within limits," Carruth said.

Most of Trinity's 452 students will be participating in the Funfest.

Items made, stuffed and painted by Trinity students include Early American wooden toys and funny-and-strange things created by older students, influenced by Trinity's inventive artist, Jack Hickman.

Other items include stuffed egg shells, paint-on-canvas by kindergarten students, and original calendars made by pre-schoolers and elementary-age students.

Hickman is in charge of Trinity's Curiosity Shop, which is designed to excite the students' imagination. "And it is curious," Mrs. Grubb said of the shop, which has an organized clutter of things from "acorns and model airplanes to hand-made and tear-apart-and-fix-it" items that would not be found in most pawn shops.

"This used to be a pretty junky place until I got a hold of it," Hickman jested.

Funfest Chairman Connie Glasscock encouraged "everyone associated with Trinity School to rally around our efforts in order to ensure that Funfest '89 will not only raise much needed funds but will also be a celebration of another successful year for Trinity School," in a recent Trinity newsletter.

"She's a hot dog" in heading up the Funfest, Mrs. Grubb said of Mrs. Glasscock.

Assistant Chairman Beal said she is a "go-fer" for the chairman. And mainly what she goes for is "the money."

Mrs. Beal has been placed in charge of contacting sponsors "to underwrite this endeavor," said Mrs. Glasscock.

Funfest games and events will include face-painting, spin art, T-shirt painting, beadwork, balloons, pony rides, tape-walk, dunking booth, radar baseball, cookie decorating, picture booth, basketball throw and Trinity's M*A*S*H Unit to "make a patient of even the healthiest student," according to a Trinity newsletter.

The Funfest also will be serving "famished Funfest fans" charcoal-broiled hamburgers, roasted hot dogs, sliced barbecue, Jumburrito burritos and, snow cones, cotton candy and soft drinks.

One of the benefits of Funfest is in reinforcing the family-unit concept at Trinity. The Funfest also highlights the "strong volunteer force that we have here," Mrs. Glasscock said.

Trinity School was founded in the 1950s by the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity in Midland and became independent of the parish in the 1960s. Today, the school maintains close ties with its Episcopal heritage.

"All of the children attend chapel services daily," Mrs. Grubb noted, "but we are an independent school. Trinity School offers an excellent academic program in a loving atmosphere."

OIL

Divers Saturday said they had found six to eight holes in the vessel's hull large enough to swim through, said Frank Iarossi, president of Exxon Shipping Co. About 30 feet of the vessel is resting on a shelf on the reef.

Efforts to begin pumping 200,000 gallons of oil off the Exxon Valdez onto another tanker, the Exxon Baton Rouge, were halted early Saturday when authorities noticed that oil appeared to leaking as the pumping operation proceeded.

Eleven of 17 tanks that lie forward of the ship's masthead were ruptured in the accident, causing concern over removal of the oil, said Coast Guard Lt. Ed Wieliczkiewicz.

"Whenever you start removing oil from a vessel this size it has to be done in a controlled manner," Wieliczkiewicz said. "If it's not...you endanger the stability of the vessel."

Wieliczkiewicz said a boom was placed around the Exxon Valdez and the Exxon Baton Rouge to help contain oil around the vessels.

He also said four members of the Coast Guard's Pacific Strike Team from San Francisco, specially trained to deal with pollution and oil spills, arrived Saturday and were helping to rig pumps and assemble equipment needed to transfer oil to the Baton Rouge.

Kelso was highly critical of what he said was a slow response to the spill.

"The initial reponse was inadequate and unacceptable," he said before a news conference Saturday. Kelso said the efforts should have been under way in five hours, but took much longer. "You miss the opportunity right at the beginning and you've missed our best opportunity to do something."

Kelso said Alaska has a plan for oil spills that calls for action within five hours of a spill. It took several hours longer, he said, and only two of seven skimmers available to the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. were used at the outset.

Alyeska spokesman Chuck O'Donnel said he was satisfied with his company's actions. "I think our people did an excellent job," he said.

The spill's effect on wildlife had not yet been assessed, but commercial fishermen who depend on the sound for a catch worth millions of dollars were outraged and said a key herring spawning area had been polluted.

"The whole food chain could be affected by the spill," said Alan Reichman, ocean ecology coordinator for the environmental group Greenpeace, in Seattle.

"There's a high concentration of sea otter, waterfowl, sea birds and pink salmon in that area," said Steve Goldstein, a spokesman for the Interior Department in Washington. "Some birds have already died, and we are doing our best to try to save the fish by containing the oil to the area where it presently is and by trying to skim it."

Whales, porpoises and seals are also common in Prince William Sound. "It's kind of like sailing through a zoo," said Jim Lethcoe, who lives on a boat in the sound and operates a sailing business.

An animal cleanup station was set up in a building at the community college in Valdez, but volunteers there said they had no animals to work on by midafternoon.

The response to the spill also drew fire from the 12,000-member United Fishermen of Alaska.

"We feel that this should have been the easiest oil spill in the world to clean up," said Riki Ott, chairman of the organization's habitat committee. She noted that the spill had occurred in a protected area close to the Valdez marine terminal and the water was calm.

Ott said the spill had polluted Prince William Sound's primary herring spawning area. Fishermen also take salmon and shellfish from the sound. Last year, they were paid about $85 million for their catches, she said.

The Port of Valdez remained closed to tanker traffic. North Slope crude oil is shipped 800 miles through the trans-Alaska oil pipeline from Prudhoe Bay south to Valdez for shipment aboard tankers to refineries outside Alaska.

The Coast Guard said the Exxon Valdez struck the reef when it maneuvered outside normal tanker traffic lanes to avoid icebergs.

The vessel's captain, Joseph Hazelwood, has worked for Exxon for 20 years, at least 10 as a ship's master. It was unclear if a pilot was aboard the Exxon Valdez when it grounded.

There was no decision Saturday on whether to use chemicals to disperse the oil, but a test of the dispersal method was being conducted Saturday afternoon, as was a test to determine whether at least some of the crude oil could be burned.

Coast Guard Cmdr. Steven McCall said National Transportation Safety Board investigators are expected to arrive Sunday to take over the accident probe.

He said one or more blood-alcohol tests were administered after the grounding, but he said he didn't know know how many people were tested or the results. McCall said the tests routinely are administered in marine accidents involving federal jurisdiction.

Previously, the largest U.S. tanker spill was the Dec. 15, 1976, grounding of the Argo Merchant tanker off the Nantucket shoals off Massachusetts, in which 7.6 million gallons of oil spilled, Golob said.

Woman's head found along golf course brook

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A grisly find on a country golf course has police culling clues from around the nation, but so far detectives are baffled about the identity of a woman whose head was discovered lying along a brook.

Police say they may have to use the lastest technology of modern forensics to determine the victim's identity.

"We have nothing concrete," said Hopewell Township Police Lt. Michael Chipowski. "We've gotten dozens of calls about people who haven't been seen for a while, but they haven't led anywhere."

Chipowski said the case has recently drawn more than 200 leads and inquiries from across the nation.

"Probably nothing has stirred up such excitement here since the Lindbergh case," Chipowski said, referring to the trial of Bruno Hauptmann, who was convicted in a nearby courthouse of murdering flying ace Charles Lindbergh's baby son a half century ago.

"This is certainly out of the ordinary. It's a real mystery," he said.

The female human head was discovered March 5 by a golfer whose errant shot sent him searching for his ball along the bank of a brook at the Hopewell Valley Golf Club north of Trenton. Chipowski said police believe the killing occurred just before the discovery because there was fresh makeup on the head and "the features were in a good state."

"We have about 30 leads yet to complete," said Chipowski. "We'll run down every one of them."

POPE

"Let us await the Resurrection of Christ. Let us await the moment in which the stone will be overturned from the tomb."

The Mass lasted nearly two hours. The pope was to celebrate an open-air Mass in St. Peter's Square Sunday morning, followed by his "Urbi et Orbi," a message to Rome and the world that he was to deliver at noon from the balcony overlooking the square.

Earlier Saturday, the Polish-born pope offered Easter greetings to 300 Poles living in Italy and 250 youths from various countries belonging to the Community of Sant'Egidio, a Catholic youth organization.

Taking advantage of the warm spring weather, tourists from many countries began lining up early in St. Peter's Square as workers adorned the basilica steps with yellow, white and orange tulips from the Netherlands.

"When you're surrounded by a group of people sharing an experience like this, there's nothing that compares to it," said Vincent Damian of New Jersey, a priest in the Marist missionary order. "You read a lot about the pageantry and see it on TV, but there's nothing like being here."

The pope presided over several Holy Week ceremonies leading up to Easter.

On Friday evening, he carried a simple black wooden cross in a torchlit procession at the Colosseum. Tens of thousands watched in person and millions around the world followed on television as the pope symbolically retraced Christ's path to his crucifixion in Jerusalem.

On Thursday, the pope washed the feet of 12 priests in a ceremony re-enacting Christ's last supper with his apostles.

Carrying weapons in a national park is illegal, Given said, adding that officials had not yet decided whether to file charges.

The men said they armed themselves because they were going into one of the most remote regions of the park.

"Without the firearms, I don't think we'd have ever made it up that ridge," Alexander said. "If he had seen us, he'd have picked us off like tin cans."

"Here you are," Conrad told Gramm, "one of the foremost advocates of being tough on spending, in here advocating a spending project that would benefit your constitutents..."

"He (Gramm) was against North Dakota getting a thing, and now he's in here wanting it all for Texas," said Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky.

Gramm spokesman Larry Neal said Gramm stands by his criticism of Heinz and the North Dakota weed project.

"The weed research institute was a budget buster," Neal said.

Bishop says he does not believe in Jesus' physical resurrection

LONDON (AP) — The Bishop of Durham, a familiar voice of controversy in the Church of England, has reiterated his belief that the resurrection of Jesus Christ was spiritual rather than physical.

The remarks of the Rt. Rev. David Jenkins, recorded for broadcast Sunday by Tyne Tees Television, immediately drew suggestions he be replaced.

Jenkins has frequently fueled controversy in the state church by publicly questioning the literal truth of several basic Christian beliefs, including the virgin birth and Jesus' rising from the dead.

Some church members said it was an "act of God" when the great York Minster cathedral was struck by lightning and badly burned three days after Jenkins' consecration there as bishop in 1984.

In remarks for broadcast Easter Sunday, Jenkins said knowing Christ was alive was an inner feeling that did not need the physical proof of a corpse returning to life.

"I don't think it means a physical resurrection. It means a spiritual resurrection, a transforming resurrection, a real resurrection.

"Because the experiencing, which enabled people to know that Jesus was alive beyond death, must be more than the revival of a corpse," Jenkins said.

Geoffrey Dickens, a Conservative member of Parliament, accused Jenkins of "seeking to undermine the whole doctrine of the church."

"It would certainly be beneficial if ways could be found to remove him from office," he said.

Neil Hamilton, another Tory legislator, added: "When will the archbishop of Canterbury give a lead and speak out against this man?"

— Rt. Rev. David Jenkins

Jenkins said he was sure the disciples did not think of the Resurrection as a physical phenomenon.

"If you read the echoes of the narratives, let alone what St. Paul says, I don't think it means a physical resurrection at all. It's a real presence, a real renewal of personality which is now transformed, to be alive forever," he said.

Sir Nicholas Fairbairn, also a Conservative legislator, said of the bishop: "Does he not know that Christ appeared before his disciples and when they doubted he actually showed them the wounds of the nails on the cross?"

Another Tory, Irvine Patnick, commented: "I am sure Christianity, which has been going on for 1,989 years, will continue despite his sudden statement which demolishes the church and its teaching."

Controversy over Jenkins' beliefs prompted a church doctrine study in 1987. A commission of 14 theologians decided such controversies are "a sign of vitality in the church."

Mexico City gives Judas a reprieve

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Judas has been given a reprieve.

The centuries-old Easter Week celebration known as the "burning of Judas" was toned down Saturday because of concerns about air pollution and the dangers of fireworks used to explode papier mache effigies of the apostle who betrayed Jesus Christ.

Instead of the traditional exploding celebration held the day before Easter in Mexico City's Santo Domingo Plaza, officials held a "Pardoned Judases" event in which the effigies were displayed and spun around, but not blown up.

"We wanted to continue the tradition without creating any risks to the environment or the people," said Fernando Gallo, head of the Mexico City cultural development department and event organizer. "As you know, we have had problems with fireworks."

Gallo was referring to the Dec. 11 fireworks-related explosions and fire at the Merced Market, which killed 68 people.

The fire, which spread to five buildings near the crowded downtown market, was propelled through the area by a series of explosions in stalls where vendors had been selling skyrockets, Roman candles and other fireworks.

Selling fireworks to the general public is banned in Mexico, but the law had been widely ignored in a country where pyrotechnical devices are used in religious and other celebrations.

After the explosion, Mexico City Mayor Manuel Camacho Solis announced a new ban on the sale and use of fireworks in the Valley of Mexico.

As for Mexico City's severe air pollution problem, Camacho Solis has announced several measures in recent months to crack down on smog, including requiring emissions check-ups for some vehicles.

The Mexico City daily Excelsior said Saturday that city police were under orders to jail for up to 36 hours anyone caught using fireworks to explode the papier mache effigies.

Public safety inspectors also cracked down on markets that traditionally sell the devilish-looking figure with the customary firecracker to blow it up, Excelsior said.

None of the papier mache Judases were on sale in the sprawling Merced Market in the heart of the capital.

But hundreds of them, ranging from 6 inches to 8 feet tall, were on sale two blocks away at the Sonora Market — without fireworks.

450 anti-abortion protesters arrested

LOS ANGELES (AP) — More than 500 abortion foes capped an Easter Week crusade Saturday by blockading a women's clinic in defiance of a federal court order, and police in riot gear arrested more than 450 of them.

The protesters were met by at least as many jeering counterprotesters at the demonstration, the largest of a series designed to focus national attention on the Supreme Court's reconsideration of its 1973 decision legalizing abortion.

Some 300 officers on foot and horseback moved in on the anti-abortion activists who blocked the Family Planning Associates clinic. Most of those arrested were cited for trespassing and released, but some were sent to jails on more serious charges.

"We look forward to the day that you have to arrest the murderers," Randall Terry, founder of the national Operation Rescue anti-abortion group, shouted through a bullhorn before he, too, was carried away by police.

Police Lt. Fred Nixon said more than 450 people had been arrested by the time the last 20 protesters were led away in handcuffs to the cheers of pro-choice advocates about 1:30 p.m.

Chief Daryl F. Gates said he would urge the city attorney to sue Operation Rescue for the $60,000 to $100,000 the police operation had cost the city.

Doubts expressed over fusion discovery

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas scientists Friday greeted with wonder and skepticism claims by two researchers that they produced nuclear fusion at room temperature at a University of Utah laboratory.

B. Stanley Pons and Martin Fleischmann stunned the scientific community when they announced they had achieved nuclear fusion inside a small metal rod with a "cold-temperature" process that produced a surplus of energy for periods of up to 100 hours.

Fusion is the energy source of stars, such as the sun, and thermonuclear bombs.

Conventional fusion research costs hundreds of millions of dollars, requires enormous apparatus, and temperatures in the millions of degrees to power a reaction. Before now, researchers have not produced more energy than they have used.

Pons' and Fleischmann's findings, if confirmed, may lead to a relatively clean, safe and practical source of energy.

"If they actually have made fusion reactions which produce measurable power...that's very important," William Drummond, a physicist and director of the Fusion Research Center at the University of Texas, told the Austin American-Statesman.

"But based on what we have heard, it uses a mechanism we would find difficult to understand. But important things have violated scientific intution before," he said.

Allen Bard, an electrochemist at UT-Austin, said his lab would try to obtain enough details to test the Utah results.

Bard and other electrochemists, such as Marry Anne Fox at UT-Austin and John Appleby at Texas A&M University, said Pons and Fleischmann are reputable scientists known for careful work. "These are good people," said Ms. Fox. "It sounds bizarre, but I'd be uncomfortable being critical without more detail."

Bard said the news conference by Pons and Fleischmann, which occurred prior to publication of their findings, angered some colleagues.

"It would be wonderful if it's true. But a press conference well in advance, where no one can really evaluate it, is not playing the game the way it should be played."

The scientists at Utah said they wanted to experiment more before going public, but the magnitude of the discovery made it difficult to wait. "We've been under intense pressure to publish," Fleischmann said shortly before boarding a flight to Great Britain.

The University of Utah has submitted applications for a patent on the process, "but it's too soon for any kind of patent office action," said James Brophy, university vice president for research.

Utah Gov. Norm Bangerter announced Friday he would call a special session of the Legislature, probably next month, to grant $5 million for development and commercialization of the scientists' breakthrough.

Police pay freeze sours many officers, survey says

HOUSTON (AP) — Low pay and lower morale among Houston police officers could result in a critical shortage of manpower in the already pared-down department, according to a random sampling of officers polled by The Houston Post.

More than half the officers informally surveyed said they're ready to bail out and would leave as soon as a feasible offer was received, the newspaper reported Saturday.

Attrition already has taken its toll on the Houston Police Department, where a steadily increasing loss of officers coupled with a three-year hiring freeze has left the force at 92 percent of its 1986 level.

Most of the officers blamed their low morale on low pay, and they blamed the low pay on Mayor Kathy Whitmire.

Air Force studies B-1B structure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force says it has changed maintenance procedures for the B-1B's fuel system and is studying whether structural changes should be made to the aircraft in the wake of a crash last November.

But the service on Friday denied it had found any design or maintenance problems that contributed to the Nov. 8 accident near Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene, Texas.

An internal Air Force report, first disclosed by WBNS-TV in Columbus, Ohio, raised questions about the fuel system's design, according to officials Friday who spoke on condition they not be named.

Whatever the exact cause, "a B-1 design deficiency allowed the fuel in the overwing fairing to migrate into the compartment containing the environmental system precooler, which reaches temperatures sufficient to provide ignition," the internal document said.

The internal document elaborated on the findings of an accident report the Air Force made public in February on the Texas crash.

The public report concluded the B-1B crashed because a fire in the left wing knocked out two of the plane's four engines and burned out critical control equipment. All four crewmen parachuted to safety.

The public report also said the fire apparently had been fed by a ruptured fuel line in the portion of the wing that runs above the left engines, but added the crash impact had "destroyed evidence necessary to further isolate the cause of the fire and the exact location of the fuel leak."

The crew received no warning of a fire "due to lack of a fire detection system" in that section of the plane, the internal report says.

When they did realize the plane was on fire, they "had no means to shut off fuel flow...or suppress the fire" in that area, says the document.

The Air Force, in its statement Friday, acknowledged the internal report had spawned a new study that could lead to structural changes.

"The B-1B program office is also assessing engineering proposals to design a fuel isolation and fire detection capability for the overwing fairing areas," the Air Force said.

Addressing questions about the internal document, the public statement said, "It is a longstanding Air Force policy not to discuss details of these accident investigation reports."

"But no serious problems in the fuel lines were identified during the course of the investigation or at any other time. Additionally, no maintenance inadequacies were identified," the statement said. "However, the Air Force is aggressively implementing precautionary measures to prevent any possibility of a recurrence. These actions include inspections of key areas and the addition of some maintenance procedures."

Suspect in peso scheme to fight Texas extradition

DALLAS (AP) — An Oklahoma man accused of masterminding a multimillion-dollar pyramid scheme says he will fight extradition to Texas, where he faces charges that his "peso exchange program" violated state securities laws.

Arrested in Nevada earlier this week, Robert Leslie Johnson of Tulsa has told Internal Revenue Service agents that he was laundering money through a hotel in Las Vegas, according to an affadavit filed Thursday.

Johnson is being held without bail in the Clark County Detention Center in Las Vegas, where police said his refusal to return voluntarily to Texas will require Dallas County to seek extradition.

He was indicted in Texas on Feb. 24 for failure to register his currency exchange investment program with the Texas Securities Commission.

A former business associate has accused Johnson of pocketing $50 million to $90 million in funds from investors. But Johnson denied the allegations in an interview, The Dallas Morning News reported Saturday.

"If I received all this money, how would I receive it?" Johnson said.

Authorities say investors were drawn by promises of 12 percent weekly returns on their money, which supposedly would be used to purchase pesos at a discount from Mexican businessmen. But authorities believe much of the money invested actually went to repay investors who asked to receive their earnings during the eight months the program was in operation.

Eggs traded in for gems, perfumes

HOUSTON (AP) — Traditional children's Easter baskets, with eggs, chocolate and fake grass, are taking a back seat to those for adults containing precious gems and other expensive items.

The gems and fine perfumes adorn real grass in the finer baskets for women, while European-made shaving utensils are placed in wooden boxes decorated in pastel colors for men.

The traditional chocolate bunny has not been forgotten, but he is definitely playing a classier role than in years past.

In the finer custom-made baskets, he is considered, "a gourmet chocolate bunny," which, in most cases, merits him a much higher price and a higher rating on the caloric scale.

"The sky is the limit,' said Lisa Aaronson of Saks Fifth Avenue. "These baskets could be made to cost thousands of dollars, or $25, depending on the extravagance of the customer.

"This is probably the first year I have seen such extravagance used in designing Easter baskets," Ms. Aaronson said. "Marketing designers are catering more to adults by using finer, everyday items as festive gifts."

Merchants say the basket giving tradition has turned extravagant for a reason — to fit the needs, desires and personalities of their recipients, which can cost big bucks.

"We're putting anything from pearls to diamonds and mink-stuffed animals in the baskets,' said Sissy Davis, assistant manager of Neiman-Marcus.

"The idea of customizing baskets for adults has been growing year after year," she said. "The discovery tactic of having to find the items under the grass brings an excitement that children and adults never really get over."

Designers of the baskets also are using creative gimmicks to encourage shoppers to seek their next year.

The "Poolside Bunny" basket, containing a stuffed rabbit sporting sunglasses, and the "Texas" or "Young Farmer" baskets, which display farming utensils for the rookie farmers, can be made cute for a price far below that of many.

Panels OK $400 million education increase

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislative budget committees have endorsed a $400 million increase in state education funds to correct problems of unequal public school financing and a $300 million increase to boost state employee salaries.

State education officials on Friday lauded the proposed public school funding increase adopted by the Senate Finance Committee, but the largest state employee group said the proposed salary increase for state employees was not enough.

Lane Zivley, executive director of the Texas Public Employees Association, said the pay raise proposed by the House Appropriations Committee would lower already low morale among state workers.

"The turnover rate will go up. There will be an exodus of state employees going into the private sector," Zivley told the Austin American-Statesman.

But Jim Rudd, chairman of Appropriations, said the money for the proposed raise, "is about all we have right now. If there's some left over later we can put it back in there.

"At least we've given them something," the Brownfield Democrat said.

Under the proposal endorsed Friday, employees would receive a $100 monthly pay raise and a boost in the state's contribution to employee health insurance from $115 per month to $130 per month in 1990 and $155 per month in 1991.

The pay raise would translate into a salary increase ranging from 2.8 percent for higher-paid workers to 11 percent for lower-paid employees. It would apply to classified employees, but not to administrators in exempt jobs or to higher education employees.

Zivley said he was pleased lawmakers are considering a pay raise, but said a bigger increase is needed to keep up with the cost of living.

State workers received a 2 percent increase in September after almost two years without a pay raise. Before that, state employees received a 3 percent raise in 1983 and 1984 and a 4 percent increase in 1985.

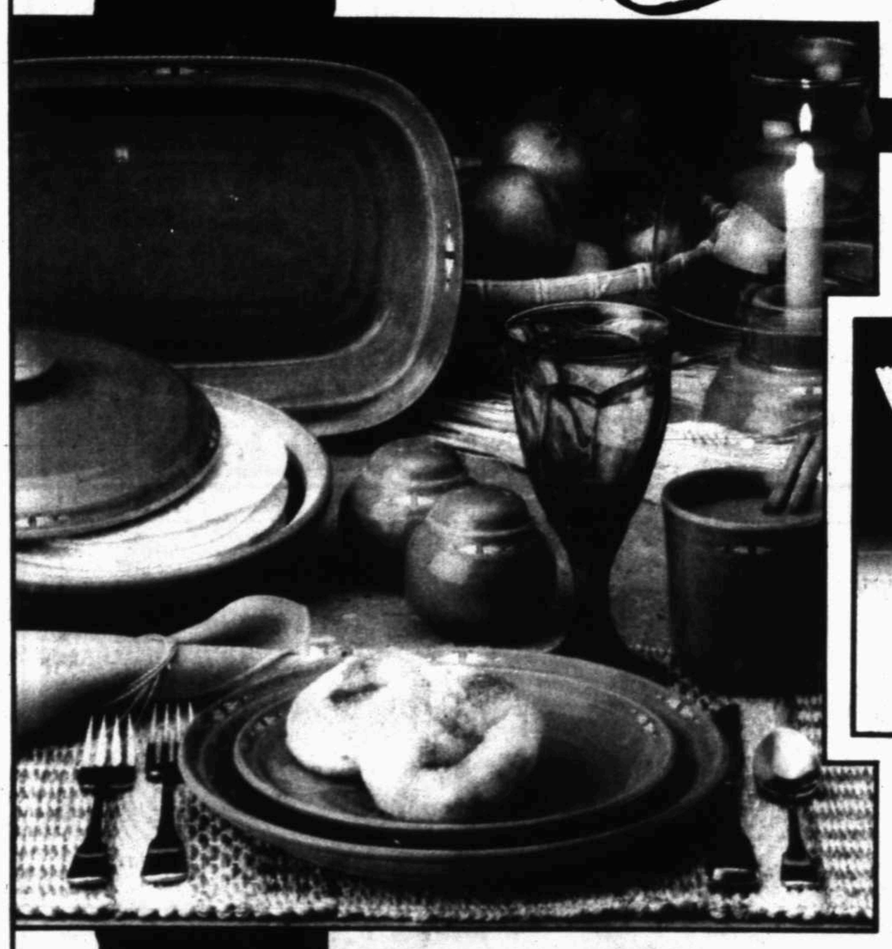

Under the education proposal, key senators and education officials described the $400 million increase as a starting point toward resolving the dispute over public school financing.

"It's a long way away from the solution, but it's a start in the right direction," said Texas Education Commission William Kirby.

"I think $400 million will be a good step, but it certainly doesn't solve the problem of equalization," said Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan and chairman of the Finance Committee.

'Most Wanted' recreates bizarre disappearance

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — For five hours, the three young men walked, posed, laughed and drank as they re-enacted their friend Mark Kilroy's bizarre disappearance for a Hollywood film crew.

But as Bradley Moore, Brent Martin and Bill Huddleston stood in front of an ordinary one-story red and gray brick building early Friday morning, their mood shifted.

It was the spot where the 21-year-old University of Texas pre-med student from Santa Fe, Texas, had vanished.

"It's really tough being here like this," said Huddleston, gripping the building wall and shaking his head.

Moore, talking to film crew member Kim Davis, looked concerned.

"Don't get me wrong," he said. "I'm not mad at you. But we've been having fun all night, and now this is the point where we lost him." A pained look came over his face. "Re-creating it is hard."

Fox Television's "America's Most Wanted" was recreating the events of early March 14 when Kilroy, on a night-clubbing jaunt over the border with his three pals from high school, vanished from a street crowded with other U.S. college students.

The segment will air Sunday on the program seen by 23 million people nationwide, its producers said.

Derailed train sparks fire

HOUSTON (AP) — A derailed train sparked a two-alarm fire in a freight yard Saturday, sending dark, billowing smoke over a northeast Houston subdivision.

A tanker carrying heptane, a gasoline additive, derailed as the train was being linked about 5 p.m. and took five other cars off the tracks. The heptane may have been ignited by the grinding wheels, officials said.

No one was hurt in the blaze, said District Chief W.M. Whatley of the Houston Fire Department.

Smoke from the fire blanketed a nearby subdivision and an environmental service company, EmTech, was called in to monitor the blaze.

Whatley said there was an initial explosion and then a secondary one as the heptane was ignited, but EmTech spokesman D.D. "Denny" Day told the Houston Post the material simply erupted in flame with no explosion.

Three cars caught fire, including a tanker carrying light lubrication oil and a boxcar carrying plastics, which erupted in orange flames, officials said.

Cruise line makes threats

THIBODAUX, La. (AP) — A Texas company that wants to base a cruise and gambling ship in Louisiana may go elsewhere because of a judge's ruling that it cannot, a company official said.

Gary Carr of Holiday Cruises Inc. of Pearland, Texas, said it depends on whether it takes more than 60 days to appeal the ruling by state District Judge Ward Fontenot of Cameron.

Carr said his company can't afford to let the 247-foot La Cruise sit idle for more than two months, so ports in Texas and the Florida Panhandle are now being considered.

"Our attorneys are looking at it to see if we appeal it, if it could get into court fairly quickly," Carr said Thursday. "If they say it's going to take another six months or even 90 days it's going be too tight for us to handle."

Fontenot ruled that slot machines on the ship violate a state statute banning the devices and "are contraband and subject to seizure," the ruling says.

The ruling came in a suit filed by the company in Cameron Parish after the decision was made to move the ship from Port Fourchon, in Lafourche Parish. Holiday Cruises bought the ship from Jerry and Corina Ledet after the state filed suit in Lafourche to seize the slot machines.

Fish stocking explained

AUSTIN (AP) — A Texas Department of Parks and Wildlife official said the agency stocked rainbow trout in the private pond of a relative of a state lawmaker in order to conduct research on whether the fish could survive a hot summer.

Gary Matlock, director of fisheries for the department, said parks and wildlife stocked Manly Leyendecker's pond near Columbus with about 500 rainbow trout as part of a research project, the Austin American-Statesman reported Saturday.

Jackson urging renewed effort to free American hostages

By WALTER MEARS

NATION

CHICAGO (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson is sounding an Easter season call for renewed humanitarian efforts to gain freedom for American hostages held in Lebanon, saying that "we should go on the offensive, the moral offensive."

Jackson

"Renewed effort and hope must replace futility," Jackson said. "It's time now to roll the stone away."

Nine Americans are held hostage in Lebanon, as are six men from other foreign nations. Longest held is Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, who was kidnapped on March 16, 1985.

"We are concerned about all of those who are held captive, whether they are Lebanese or French or British of American," Jackson said in an interview on the hostage situation. "We are concerned that a whole nation is held captive to these continued shellings and bombings.

"In a sense, Terry and the others are prisoners of war."

Anderson had covered Jackson's 1984 mission to Syria which led to the release of a Navy lieutenant whose plane was shot down during a U.S. raid over Lebanon. The Navy man was held for a month, then released to Jackson. Anderson himself was seized by gunmen in Beirut little more than 15 months later.

Jackson said it is important that the Lebanese Moslems holding U.S. hostages know that Americans are concerned about the rebuilding of that country, about children in refugee camps, about bombing and shelling.

"We are concerned about that," he said. "So was Terry."

"We should not take the position that Lebanon is a no man's land cursed with eternal and perpetual war," the black civil rights and political leader, twice a Democratic presidential candidate, said in the interview. He said the United States should make clear that it is prepared to help rebuild and restore Lebanon, just as Europe was rebuilt after World War II.

He advanced no new proposals for hostage release efforts, but urged a return to some that have been tried before, saying that the arms-for-hostage deal with Iran had undone humanitarian efforts that might otherwise have made headway.

Two Americans were released during the Reagan administration's arms-for-hostages dealings with Iran.

Jackson said that at the time, the administration complained that "citizen-to-citizen appeals would get in the way of government operations. Then it turned out that government operations meant straight swaps of hostages for arms and money.

"We want to put the focus again back on the captured as well as on our concern about the basic agony of the captors," he said.

Jackson said he is seeking sponsors and support for an effort to reach the captors of American and other hostages through advertisements and announcements in newspapers and on radio and television in the area.

"We have no way of knowing the impact, but we do know that they are read," he said.

Jackson said he would make the radio and TV tapes and would sign the advertisements.

"In Lebanon, the captors are basically nameless and faceless," Jackson said. "Therefore the appeal has to be a broad-based appeal to the religious and political leaders, and to others who care."

Jackson said he has talked with religious leaders from Lebanon during the past few weeks and will continue those appeals. "We should not leave our friends in an out-of-sight, out-of-mind position," he said.

He also suggested that the United States should seek action on its offer to pay reparations to the families of 290 people killed when an Iran Air jetliner was shot down by mistake by a U.S. warship in the Persian Gulf last summer.

Gramm to settle 5-year election dispute, to pay $30,000 penalty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, announced Saturday his 1984 campaign committee has agreed to pay a $30,000 penalty to settle a 5-year dispute with the Federal Election Commission.

Although errors made by his first Senate campaign committee were "unintended and in no way benefitted the campaign...they were errors," Gramm said.

"The FEC does not contend that anyone in the campaign committee consciously sought to violate any FEC reporting requirement and the committee is now in total compliance. They were technical reporting errors and they in no way benefitted my campaign," said Gramm, who intends to seek re-election in 1990.

In a statement, Gramm said he rejected suggestions that he take the FEC to court to fight the penalty as "unfair and unjustified" because a lawsuit would cost many times the $30,000 penalty.

Donald R. White, treasurer of the "Friends of Phil Gramm" 1984 Senate campaign committee, said the FEC accused the group of failure to make timely reports and failure to supply adequate documentation of campaign contributions.

According to White, the FEC questioned the campaign's handling of contributions from husbands and wives on joint checking accounts. The FEC has found that $15,000 of $690,000 in potentially excess contributions was outside the limit of $1,000 per person, per election.

After the committee provided documentation on the questionable contributions, the FEC decided $675,000 was within the limits. The remaining $15,000 will be donated to charity, White said.

Also, the FEC questioned whether the campaign fully reported primary debts, which White said were accurate, although most of the debt had not been billed to the campaign by the time original reports were to have been filed. The FEC also determined that $9,708 in corporate funds were erroneously accepted. The money has been refunded, White said.

The FEC complained that contributor identification data such as addresses and job title were not always available in a timely manner and not all funds were deposited within 10 days of receipt. White said both assertions were correct in "scattered" instances, and that complete information on each contributor was provided to the FEC.

Adams' first full day back home quiet one

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Randall Dale Adams toured his hometown and attended a quiet family gathering during his first full day back on Ohio soil since his release from prison.

But the man who spent 12 years behind bars in Texas for a crime he says he didn't commit appeared less concerned about the future than about adjusting to the life he left in 1977 — when he was sentenced to death.

"To be able to dress like a human being again — that adds to your self-confidence," Adams said Friday at a relative's home south of Columbus. "To be able to go out among people and not be an inmate, a convict, that improves (your outlook)."

At the family gathering, Adams told Columbus television station WBNS that he received a card containing a check from an anonymous source in the mail Friday.

He didn't reveal the amount of the check.

Adams, 40, was greeted by yellow ribbons and rousing cheers when he returned Thursday to Columbus. On Tuesday, he was released on a personal recognizance bond, almost three weeks after the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals had ordered a new trial for him, saying a witness had lied and a prosecutor suppressed evidence.

On Thursday, the Dallas County district attorney dropped the case against him, citing a lack of evidence.

Adams spent much of his second full day of freedom out of the public eye.

All was quiet at the blue and white trailer home on the city's west side where Adams' mother, Mildred, has lived since she sold her house in suburban Grove City to help pay her son's legal bills.

Mrs. Adams said her son embarked on a tour of the city early in the morning with filmmaker Errol Morris, who directed "The Thin Blue Line."

Several messages left for Adams at Mrs. Adams' home were not returned Friday.

Adams' case had garnered wide attention after "The Thin Blue Line," a documentary film, raised doubts about his guilt in the shooting death of Dallas officer Robert Wood.

He came within three days of execution in 1980 for the murder before his sentence was commuted to life in prison.

This week, a juror said she was convinced she had erred in declaring Adams guilty.

"If he had gone to the death chamber and all this had come out later, that would have been a horrible thing to have on my conscience," Bette Jane Fain, jury forewoman at Adams' 1977 trial, told The Dallas Morning News.

Adams, who worked as a clerk in the prison maintenance office and earned an associate degree in general studies while imprisoned, said he has no immediate job plans.

Only two of the four cooling towers at the Three Mile Island Nuclear Power Plant in Middletown, Pa. continue to pump steam in the night sky this week. Tuesday is the anniversary of the nuclear disaster at the plant.

A decade later, concerns over Three Mile Island still linger

By RICK KIRKPATRICK

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — Life nearly imitated art a decade ago in a nuclear technology that supposedly couldn't fail.

In nearby Harrisburg, a theater showed "China Syndrome," a movie in which a nuclear accident threatened to wipe out an area "the size of Pennsylvania."

At 4 a.m. on March 28, 1979, movie fantasy turned horribly real at the Three Mile Island power plant as a series of human and mechanical failures nearly triggered a nuclear disaster along the Susquehanna River.

By 8 a.m., after cooling water was lost and temperatures soared above 5,000 degrees, the top half of a reactor's 150-ton radioactive core collapsed and melted. Contaminated coolant water escaped into a nearby building, releasing radioactive gases.

Frightened by reports of uncontrolled radiation releases and a potentially explosive hydrogen bubble in the damaged reactor, as many as 200,000 people living within 50 miles of the plant fled the region. Women and young children within five miles were advised by Gov. Dick Thornburgh to leave.

The accident was contained, but it intensified fears about the potential dangers of nuclear power, killed plans for new U.S. plants, and left a once-complacent nuclear power industry defensive about its abilities.

Robert Long, director of planning and nuclear safety at Three Mile Island, recalled that before 1979 people in the industry were confident a serious accident was all but impossible.

"All of us felt it was just really remote," he said. "There are still people in the industry who think, 'It couldn't happen to us.' We're constantly trying to remind people it could happen to anybody."

The health effects continue to be debated. The utility says radiation doses outside the plant during the accident were less than background radiation, and 10 national and state studies found no evidence of increased human cancers or other serious problems in animals or plants. Anti-nuclear activists claim the studies were flawed and say they have seen evidence of increased cancers, medical problems in animals and vegetation mutations. Studies will continue for years.

General Public Utilities Corp., the New Jersey-based owner of the plant, suffered greatly. It lost a nearly $1 billion investment in the just-opened Unit 2, was vilified for mangling the region's psyche and teetered on the edge of bankruptcy until a cleanup financing plan was put in place in 1985 and its other reactor at Three Mile Island returned to service later the same year.

After overcoming both financial and technical pitfalls, the nearly $1 billion cleanup should be completed late next year. Seventy-one percent of the core has been shipped to federal research laboratories in Idaho, and General Public Utilities is being hailed by the industry as a model utility.

"We're trying to recognize people do make mistakes, but we're going to do what we can to learn from those mistakes," said Michael Roche, director of Unit 2.

For most of those who live near Three Mile Island, this week's anniversary will be just another day. But local activists will hold a vigil outside the plant, talk with reporters and recall those eerie days of 1979.

Two citizen groups, Three Mile Island Alert and Susquehanna Valley Alliance, have doggedly monitored plant activities and called attention to shortcomings in cleanup and operations.

"This is a utility that has lied, cheated and was convicted of a felony," said Eric Epstein, a spokesman for Three Mile Island Alert. "In our opinion, it lacks the requisite competence and character to operate a nuclear plant."

He referred to a guilty plea in 1984 for the use of false leak test results at Unit 2's cooling system before the accident, to accusations the company made false statements to the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission and to a cheating scandal involving operating personnel who took licensing tests in 1981.

"I think there are still underlying concerns, but people are getting on with their lives," said Joel Roth, a former chairman of Three Mile Island Alert.

"Underlying it, there is still quite a bit of feeling...the utility is going to do what it wants to do regardless of what anybody else does," he said.

One of the surprises of the accident was that the China Syndrome — a chain of events in which molten fuel burns through a reactor and containment building and spews radioactive steam into the air — can be stopped once started.

Although 50 percent of the uranium fuel melted and 20 tons of molten material flowed within minutes to the bottom of the steel reactor vessel, the remaining water cooled it and held it in place.

Ten arrested in nuclear protest

MERCURY, Nev. (AP) — Ten anti-nuclear protesters were arrested Saturday at the Nevada Test Site after they telephoned a Las Vegas radio station to announce they had infiltrated the highly sensitive desert area.

Energy Department spokesman Jim Boyer said he received a call from KDWN radio to inform him that the protesters were inside an old chapel at the site where the nation's nuclear weapons are tested. He then called security guards, who arrested them.

Boyer said the protesters were "just standing around" in the old building, which is now used as a storage area.

Mercury is a tiny base camp about 65 miles northwest of Las Vegas and within the borders of the test site. It is about 27 miles from the nearest active testing area, Boyer said.

The 1,350-square-mile test site is surrounded only by a simple barbed wire fence, although sensitive areas where tests are conducted are heavily guarded.

Artist gets revenge over flag exhibit

CHICAGO (AP) — An art teacher angered over an exhibit that prompted viewers to trample a U.S. flag and sparked waves of protest got revenge Saturday, offering observers a chance to walk on a caricature of the display's artist.

The teacher's exhibit, which opened Saturday at the small Vietnam Museum, features a life-size sketch of artist "Dread" Scott Tyler, drawn on cloth in the manner of a police outline of a homicide victim.

The cloth is on the floor, and a U.S. flag hangs above it on a museum wall.

"I was upset by seeing my flag on the floor," said Gary Mann, 33, a junior high school art teacher from suburban Deerfield, as visitors walked over his artwork.

Mann's display is a protest against Tyler's exhibit at the Art Institute of Chicago's school, which led to daily protests by hundreds of demonstrators outside the respected museum in early March. Tyler is a student at the institute's school.

His exhibit, which has since closed, featured a flag positioned on the floor in front of a book asking viewers to write their opinions on "What is the Proper Way to Display a U.S. Flag?"

Colorado toddler killed

CENTRAL CITY, Colo. (AP) — A 2-year-old boy wandered away from his home in this historic silver mining town and fell to his death in a nearby abandoned mine shaft, authorities said.

Gilpin County Coroner Dick Allen said the child, identified as Michael Mills, apparently was killed instantly from massive head injuries.

John Rittenhouse, search coordinator for the Gilpin County Search and Rescue Team, said the boy's body was found Friday night about 150 to 200 feet down the shaft, lodged among timbers and rocks. He said the shaft went far below that point.

Central City, in the foothills of the Rocky Mountains about 30 miles west of Denver, was a silver mining boom town from the mid-1800s till the turn of the century.

Authorities said probably 5,000 abandoned mine shafts are in the area, many of them uncovered.

The boy had been playing in his yard with his older sister, whom Rittenhouse described as being in her 20s.

The mine rescue unit was then called out and an access road had to be bulldozed about 100 yards up a hill to the shaft site, he said.

'Grinch' takes Easter egg

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — A grinch stole Easter in this western Colorado city by swiping 300 eggs that had been hidden in three city parks for egg hunts sponsored by two local businesses.

"There were all these little kids and their mothers walking around with empty Easter baskets," said Marilynn Sinclair, who took her young nephew to Hawthorne Park Friday morning. "It was sad."

The sponsors planned to try again with egg hunts at the same three parks today and Sunday morning.

They set a maximum age limit of 13 and decided to be on the lookout for early egg thieves.

Amtrak train, truck collide

TRENTON, Mich. (AP) — An Amtrak passenger train traveling 50 mph collided Saturday with a truck loaded with steel as the driver attempted to go around lowered crossing gates, witnesses and authorities said.

The impact of the daylight crash separated the truck cab from its flatbed trailer and sent 13-ton coils of steel flying, witnesses and police said. The driver reportedly was taken to a hospital, but his condition was not immediately known.

The train was carrying 43 passengers and three crew members. About 15 to 20 people were taken to local hospitals, including two train crew members, Trenton police Officer R.T. Rolak said.

'Party 'till you drop' is spring break motto

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Life in the fast lane moves at 10 mph on the "World's Most Famous Beach," where the unofficial mottos during spring break are "party till you drop" and "sun your buns."

Some half-million college students have invaded the resort for the 85-degree weather and the opportunity to watch scantily clad members of the opposite sex burn lobster-pink in the bright sunshine.

"This is the largest crowd to ever hit Daytona Beach. Traffic is snarled. Every parking space on the beach is taken, plus all the private and public parking near the beach," said Beach Department Chief John Kirvin. "At times, you can't even find any sand."

Sightseeing is one of the most popular activities.

"I came here to look at the boys...I mean men...to look at tan chests," said Michelle Abbott, a junior at the University of Kansas.

And to remember their days on the beach when they return to college, both men and women aren't the least bit shy about photographing the opposite sex.

"I'm on my second roll (of film) today and and I've got four more after that," said Larry Turner, a botany student at Southern Illinois, as he focused on a young woman strolling down the sand.

Some men carried signs urging young women to take off their bikini tops. One group of women carried a sign urging men to drop their trunks.

"If their parents only knew what their daughters were doing," said a beach police officer who asked not to be identified.

The "party till you drop" action moves from hotel pool decks onto the beach in early afternoon, Kirvin said.

He estimated that some 200 people have been arrested on the beach, most for disorderly conduct and alcohol-related offenses.

Alcohol is not allowed on the beach, but if students follow an officer's warning to get rid of it they are not charged.

There is no way, he said, that his 36 full-time officers and 15 part-timers can stop everyone drinking on 40 miles of beach.

"We try to curb it with selective enforcement," he said. "Most of the kids are super and very cooperative."

Conditions were quite different out West, where spring break at the desert resort of Palm Springs, Calif., was marred by hundreds of arrests this year. Police in riot gear were called to one hotel late Friday after young people began fighting, breaking windows and throwing trash, authorities said.

Once again in Daytona Beach, hotel balcony accidents take their toll. So far this year, four people have fallen, including a 22-year-old Illinois man who died Thursday after lunging from a balcony to catch a Frisbee. Last year, one person was killed and seven were injured in balcony falls.

On Saturday, a single-engine airplane towing an advertising banner crashed into the ocean just off neighboring Daytona Beach Shores, killing the pilot, authorities said.

The aircraft, owned by Aerial Messenger of New Smyrna Beach, went down in clear weather about a half-mile offshore, said Arthur Sterritt, a Volusia County sheriff's deputy. The name of the pilot, who was the only person on board, was not immediately released.

To the south, former spring break capital Fort Lauderdale expected fewer than 20,000 students this year, as a result of strict city rules on drinking and cruising. As many as 350,000 students descended on Fort Lauderdale for spring break in 1985.

Blood pump keeps man alive record 107 days

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Jack Fisher broke a record Saturday as the person to live longest on an electric blood pump to help his ailing heart. More than anything, though, the 46-year-old bond salesman hopes for a transplant.

"It's not a record I want to break," he said, grinning.

But "I don't mind" being a medical pioneer, Fisher said, relaxing in his hospital room with his wife, Edie, 39, and four of their five daughters. The girls arrived Thursday from the family's home in Rumson, N.J., to spend the Easter weekend with their father.

Surgeons at Presbyterian-University Hospital of Pittsburgh implanted a Novacor left ventricular assist device into a dying Fisher in an operation that ended Dec. 9. Saturday was his 107th day with the device while awaiting a transplant.

He had been diagnosed 3½ years earlier with cardiomyopathy, a disease of unknown origin that damages heart muscle.

"I think the toughest part psychologically is knowing that in order for you to live, you have to take something (a heart) from somebody else, even though you know the person can't use it," he said.

The 1½-pound, polyurethane pump was implanted behind the muscle of the front abdominal wall as a temporary means of helping the left ventricle, which does 85 percent of the heart's work.

Unlike the Jarvik and other total artificial hearts, the Novacor and other assist devices do not require removing the patient's own diseased heart. They are intended to keep people alive while awaiting transplants, although eventually a long-term device may be developed.

The Novacor is the only one of the devices to be driven by electricity, making it less bulky than the air-driven models.

A heart-assist device driven by electricity, rather than compressed air, allows the patient awaiting a transplant more mobility and reduces the risk of infection, said Dr. Peer Portner, president of the California-based Novacor division of Baxter Healthcare Corp.

Thirteen-year-old Alison also has mixed emotions about her father's feat.

"It's kind of funny to think of my dad breaking a record. I mean, I thought it would be a different record that he'd break, not this one," she said. "I'm upset that he's sick and everything, but I'm happy he's alive."

A tube protruding from Fisher's abdomen carries electrical wires that feed into a tiny white box on his lap. The box, in turn, is connected by 20 feet of cable to a 440-pound console and computer that control the pump and monitor his heart rhythm. A technician pushes the equipment beside him on his daily strolls down hospital hallways.

Ever present is the loud, constant click of the pump as it distributes blood through Fisher's body. The noise doesn't bother him, and the pump is painless.

"If this stops clicking, I'm in trouble," he said.

Soviet elections not charade anymore

MOSCOW (AP) — Television recently reminded Soviets what their elections once were like: smiling workers in cloth caps plunked ballots into an urn under a portrait of Josef Stalin and everybody running got 99 percent of the vote.

Such was the face of socialist democracy in 1937 and thereafter, but Soviet politics has taken a boisterous turn in campaigning for Sunday's parliamentary elections, the first in memory in which voters nationwide have a choice. For example:

■ Thousands of banner-waving Muscovites have taken to the streets in illegal demonstrations supporting maverick candidate Boris N. Yeltsin for the newly created Congress of People's Deputies. Pro-Yeltsin demonstrations Saturday drew more than 10,000 people.

■ With Nobel Peace Prize physicist Andrei D. Sakharov at their head, members of the Soviet Academy of Sciences voted down two-thirds of old guard candidates nominated by the academy's Presidium and called for new nominees, including Sakharov.

■ Mikhail S. Gorbachev, Soviet president, party general secretary and the driving force behind the election reforms, failed to win a unanimous mandate from the party's policy-making Central Committee, where 12 of 641 people voting opposed his serving in the assembly.

When it was Saturday evening in Moscow, Sunday dawned 11 time zones away in the Soviet Far East and the first of nearly 180,000 polling stations nationwide opened for voters. There are 190 million eligible voters.

Soviet cosmonauts Alexander Volkov, Sergei Krikalev and Valery Polyakov voted in the Mir space station orbiting Earth, the television news program Vremya reported.

Polls are open from 7 a.m. until 8 p.m. local time. The Tass news agency said the first election results are expected Sunday night but full returns will not be known for about 10 days.

Gorbachev's drive for "democratization" is far from both Western democracy and the old Soviet election charade. It has spawned a political system riven with contradictions, where crass ballot-rigging and the smothering of opposition co-exist with candidates whose outspoken and dissenting views once would have meant prison terms.

Over the past two months, candidates who never before dreamed of a shot at power have been able to publicize their ideas in government-financed posters and state television debates. In Moscow, Yeltsin calls for an end to special food stores and chauffeured limousines for the Kremlin elite, and a handful of candidates advocate a multiparty democracy to end the Communist monopoly on power.

WORLD

Thousands rally for maverick candidate

MOSCOW (AP) — Thousands of people, venting their anger over privileges of the Communist Party elite, rallied Saturday on the eve of national parliamentary elections to support maverick candidate Boris N. Yeltsin.

"For shame! For shame!" more than 10,000 people roared when speakers listed newspapers and politicians who have attacked Yeltsin for his unorthodox campaign in the Soviet Union's first contested election in more than 70 years.

Hundreds of police stood guard nearby.

Yeltsin is one of thousands of Soviets campaigning nationwide to win a seat Sunday in the new 2,250-seat Congress of People's Deputies. The new chamber was created last year in broad electoral reforms championed by President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Since his ouster as Moscow's Communist Party boss in 1987, Yeltsin has emerged as an anti-establishment crusader against privileges for the powerful, including access to special stores, better food and chauffeured luxury cars.

Critics in the party's Central Committee accuse him of accepting the same privileges.

Thousands chanted Yeltsin's name at the peaceful rally in a vast parking lot next to Lenin Stadium, supporting his campaign promise to work to reduce the privileges if voters elect him.

"Do away with special privileges for politicians and bureaucrats!" said a placard one demonstrator held aloft on a ski pole. "Servants of the people should have to stand in line!" said another banner.

Hundreds of police lined the entrance to the parking lot. Scores of reinforcements waited in dozens of buses parked nearby. Around a bend in the road, hidden by trees, 50 military trucks — packed with soldiers — were parked. Rally organizers from three Moscow political action groups had obtained permission for the three-hour rally after convincing authorities it would be better than having an illegal demonstration — such a March 19 rally in which thousands of Yeltsin supporters marched through downtown Moscow.

Yeltsin, 58, is running against 51-year-old Yevgeny Brakov, director of the ZIL auto factory, for the right to represent all of Moscow with its 6.5 million registered voters.

United jetliner lands safely after wing panel comes off

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A panel ripped off the right wing of a United Airlines jumbo jet over the Pacific Ocean on Saturday, but the plane returned safely to Manila and none of the 357 people aboard was injured.

The Boeing 747 landed at Ninoy Aquino International Airport about an hour after departing for Tokyo and San Francisco.

The accident did not affect the plane's ability to fly, the airline and the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration said.

Last month, the cargo door of a United Boeing 747 blew off after the plane left Honolulu for Auckland, New Zealand, ripping a huge hole in the side of the fuselage. Nine people died when they were sucked out of the hole.

In April 1988 a crew member was killed and 61 passengers were injured when a section of fuselage ripped off a 19-year-old Aloha Airlines Boeing 737.

These accidents and other recent structural failures have focused the attention of the U.S. aviation industry and the public on the age of America's airplane fleet, estimated to average about 12.7 years.

The plane involved Saturday was delivered to United more than 18 years ago, but an airline spokesman said he doubted its age was a factor in the accident.

Passenger Jonathan Miller, a 50-year-old aircraft engineer from Torrance, Calif., said the plane began to vibrate after a 10-foot-by-3-foot strip of the right wing blew off above the flaps near the fuselage.

"First, I felt a bump, then the plane began vibrating," said Miller, who was seated near the wing. "I saw a foot of the starboard wing peel off and then other pieces followed. You can clearly see through the hole."

But Rob Doughty, a United spokesman in Chicago, said the portion of a fiberglass panel that fell off was only five feet long and three feet wide.

He said there were other panels beneath it and that the accident did not leave a hole in the wing. "It's not a hole at all," he said in an interview.

Fred Farrar, an FAA spokesman in Washington, told The Associated Press the panel that flew off "was strictly there for streamlining."

He said it was "not structurally significant" and that there was "no compromise to the structural integrity of the airplane."

Doughty did not know how high the plane was flying when the accident occurred, but Miller said it was probably about 35,000 feet above the Pacific Ocean at the time. Miller said there was "very mild panic" inside the craft when the passengers learned about the torn wing section.

Maria Rowena Pizarro, a Filipino passenger traveling to Chicago, said she felt the plane vibrating but assumed it was wind turbulence. "I knew something was wrong when we saw some of the passengers seated near the wings frantically waving at the stewardesses and pointing at the plane's wings," she said.

Mrs. Pizarro said a crew member emerged from the cockpit, looked at the wing and announced the plane was returning to Manila.

"We were assured by the crew that everything was OK," she said. "And since we were not instructed to take any emergency procedures, I knew we were safe."

Rudy Flores, supervising air traffic controller at Manila's airport, said the crew discovered a fiberglass section of the wing tore off about 30 minutes after the plane took off from Manila.

Flores said the pilot radioed the airport's tower that the damage was considered minor and emergency assistance would not be needed.

"Nobody was hurt," Flores said in a telephone interview. "But because of the damage, the flight has been canceled."

Dr. Edgardo Francisco, the airport doctor, said one passenger showed symptoms of a heart attack but recovered after taking sedatives.

A United official in the Philippines said the plane's 340 passengers and 17 crew members would be flown from Manila on Sunday.

> "First, I felt a bump, then the plane began vibrating. I saw a foot of the starboard wing peel off and then other pieces followed. You can clearly see through the hole."

Olney Savings

You're probably fed up with bad economic news about Texas and our financial institutions, so how about a little good news for a change.

Under the Southwest Plan, several savings institutions have been combined to form single institutions with assets in the billions of dollars. Olney Savings is one of those vital organizations with assets of over 4.5 billion dollars. Olney is owned and operated by Texans, successful Texans, with a desire to see Texas and its people succeed.

It was important to fix those problems created by a puny economy, and now that it's done, it's time for everybody to get back to business. This is why we are writing this letter — because we appreciate your business and pledge to provide the products and services you need to make your lives simpler and more secure.

We are paying extremely competitive rates on your deposits, and we're making loans. Try doing business with Olney Savings. We'll make it worth your while.

Four Palestinians killed, 35 wounded in fighting

JERUSALEM (AP) — Four Palestinians were killed Saturday and 35 others were injured in some of the bloodiest outbreaks of anti-Israeli violence in the occupied territories, according to Arab and Israeli reports.

The army confirmed four people were dead and nine wounded.

It said two Palestinians were killed in clashes with soldiers in the occupied Gaza Strip. The bodies of two others found in Gaza were apparently killed after being suspected of collaborating with Israel, Arab reports and Israeli media said.

The four deaths raised to 411 the number of Palestinians who have been killed in the 15-month-old uprising against Israeli rule, including 60 suspected Arab collaborators. Eighteen Israelis also have died.

Also Saturday, about 60 Israeli peace activists, including three rabbis, traveled to the West Bank town of Beit Sahour, where they discussed peace with dozens of Palestinians over plates of chicken and salad, witnesses said.

The activists of the "Peace Now" movement said they sought to prove "dialogue between Israelis and Palestinians is possible when the government and the army do not interfere."

The body of one alleged collaborator, Jamel Abdel Hamid Nadi, was found Saturday behind a school in Gaza City's Rimal Quarter with multiple stab wounds and signs of beatings, Arab reports said.

The reports said graffiti reportedly scribbled on a wall near Nadi's home and signed by the Islamic Fundamentalist "Hamas" or Zeal movement, claimed the group had killed him for cooperating with the Israelis.

The other body was discovered in Rafah in southern Gaza and was identified as Subhi Hamdan Elsoufi, 21. Arab reports said Elsoufi was killed as a collaborator.

Israel's television and radio also said both men found slain were killed on suspicion of collaborating with Israel.

But the army denied either were collaborators and said that an investigation into their deaths showed "the men were killed as a result of an internal feud of a criminal nature," in a statement handed to journalists.

The two other deaths were in Rafah and Khan Yunis in the Gaza Strip, where soldiers opened fire on stone-throwing protesters, fatally wounding Ashraf Abu Jazar, 17, in the abdomen and Adli Erbea, 22, in the heart, Arab reports said.

It was the highest daily casualty toll in the rebellion for about three months. Twelve Palestinians and one Israeli have been killed in the past week.

Eighteen Palestinians suffered gunshot wounds during protests in Gaza Saturday, among them an 11-year-old girl and two 12-year-old boys.

Seventeen were injured by rubber bullets in the West Bank, Arab reports said.

The army confirmed only nine of the wounded in clashes in the West bank towns of Nablus and Tarkumiya.

The clash in Tarkumiya came as more than 500 Palestinians marched to a cemetery.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Government claims it thwarted new offensives

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — President Najib's government said Saturday its air force thwarted new offensives by Afghan Moslem guerrillas with bombing raids in the past 48 hours around eastern Jalalabad province.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Mohammad Nabi Amani said 345 insurgents and seven Pakistani militiamen were killed in the air strikes in Jalalabad and southern Kandahar province.

Amani said only 15 Afghan troops were killed. Six civilians died when they were caught in a cross-fire in the battle for government-held city of Jalalabad, he said.

According to Amani, 173 guerrillas died in bombing raids east and south of Jalalabad between sundown Thursday and late Saturday afternoon.

His figures could not immediately be verified. The Pakistani-based guerrillas usually report far lower death tolls.

Fighting was continuing near Jalalabad, he said, but it was "100 percent certain" the U.S-backed guerrillas were losing.

In another air strike south of Kandahar, 172 guerrillas and seven Pakistani militiamen were killed Friday, he said. The city has been under guerrilla attack for more than a year.

Also in Kandahar, Amani said, about 2,500 guerrillas attacked a security post at Takhta Poll, 25 miles south of the city. He claimed combatants included 500 Pakistani militiamen and 12 Saudi Arabian advisers.

Brew supplier arrested

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Police arrested a man identified as a supplier for the illegally brewed liquor that killed more than 130 people in the western Indian city of Baroda, news reports said Saturday.

The man was arrested late Friday, Press Trust of India said. The dispatch did not say if charges were filed.

Three people were arrested earlier for allegedly manufacturing and selling the poisonous liquor, PTI said. One of those people identified the man arrested Friday as the supplier of the methyl alcohol that made the liquor deadly, the news agency said.

The illegal brew was made from methyl alcohol instead of its normal ethyl alcohol base. Methyl alcohol paralyses the central nervous system, causing death.

The mass poisoning was the worst ever in Gujarat state, where more than 300 people have died in similar tragedies since 1981. Gujarat is the only Indian state that has banned the sale of alcohol.

Research labs burned

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — Arsonists set fires that extensively damaged two animal research laboratories in the Edinburgh area on Saturday, authorities said, and four firefighters were injured while battling the blazes.

Police sent warnings to other animal research establishments in Scotland to be on alert for possible arson attacks.

"We don't know if it was animal rights people but we suspect them," said Assistant Divisional Fire Officer David Mercer. "The investigation has been handed over to the police."

Acting Fire Chief Peter Scott, who was at both fires, condemned those responsible for risking the lives of firefighters. "If anyone had wanted to design a trap for firefighters they could not have done better. I'm livid," he said.

Flames leaped up to 20 feet into the air from the the Edinburgh University animal research unit near Penicuik, 10 miles south of Edinburgh.

Freed men given protection

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A Japanese businessmen held captive for 33 days by officials of a Korean firm in a business dispute is now under the protection of the Japanese Embassy, police said Saturday.

They said Tokuo Osawa, president of the Tokyo-based Osawa Press Seisakusho machinery company, was released in Seoul Friday and turned over to the Japanese Embassy.

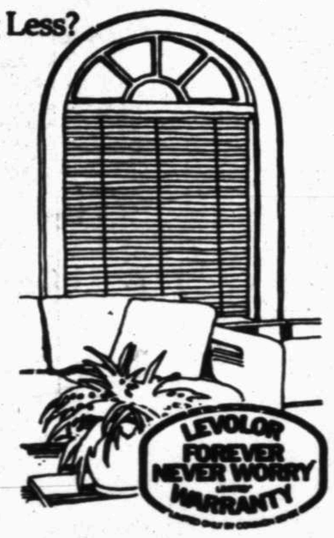

Osawa, 54, was taken to a hospital for a medical examination and then tranferred to a Seoul hotel under embassy protection, according to police.

"He is in good health and will be allowed to leave Korea after an investigation," said one Korean official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

He reported Japanese Embassy personnel said Osawa was seized by officials of the Namil Machine Co. at a Seoul restaurant on Feb. 20 and taken to the Namil plant in Chinchun, 80 miles south of Seoul, where he was held until Friday.

Local newspapers said Osawa was released after agreeing to pay about $385,000 in compensation for allegedly defective machines his firm sold to Namil last year.

Lawyer discipline debate continues

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Debate over whether grievances against lawyers should be aired publicly or "cloaked in secrecy" is raging in the Texas Legislature.

The current State Bar Act provides for the non-disclosure of grievances, such as those by a disgruntled client who may feel wronged by an attorney or more harmed than helped by a lawyer whom the client may view as indifferent, inept or dishonest.

Advocates of keeping the grievance hearings secret maintain that too many complaints against lawyers are "frivolous," without merit, and are born out of vindictiveness or of things not turning out the way the clients had envisioned.

Further, they claim open grievance hearings would harm reputations of unjustly accused attorneys and would erode lawyer-client relationships.

Proponents of grievance committee hearings being open to the public hold that "honest lawyers" would have nothing to fear and that consumers would have more information in selecting lawyers to best handle their cases.

Currently, State Bar of Texas grievance-committee records are confidential and are not subject to the open records act. However, grievances deemed valid by the State Bar of Texas may end up in a quasi-criminal public trial for the disbarment of attorneys charged with unethical conduct.

Georgia Kubiak, a Midland advocate of opening grievance committee hearings, is "against dismissing any complaints in secret" and wants all grievances publicly aired.

"Nobody every said (open hearings) wouldn't harm dishonest lawyers, but, after all, if they are dishonest, shouldn't they be harmed?" Ms. Kubiak asked.

Kubiak

Ms. Kubiak is the Texas State Coordinator for HALT, a 150,000-member national organization for "helping people dispose of their legal affairs simply, affordably and fairly."

"We are not saying that all lawyers are crooks," Ms. Kubiak recently told the Reporter-Telegram. "There are good lawyers out there. It would help to weed out the bad apples. We know we are going to have some reform," she said. "It's a question of how much and when."

Ms. Kubiak's stance is that people armed with enough information can determine "if a complaint is done out of vindictiveness or not" or if a grievance is frivolous or not. "Jurors do it all of the time."

"THE BAR IS BEHAVING like a professional trade association, which has no place in a state agency, especially a state licensing bureau," she said. "If they want to keep their image lily white, that is the job of a state trade association — not a state licensing bureau."

Last week, Ms. Kubiak, who has admitted emerging dissatisfied from a legal dispute, testified in favor of House Bill 901 — "The Lawyer Discipline Sunshine Act" — before the House State Affairs Committee last week in Austin.

Thefts most common crime on campus

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

If you think a college campus is immune to crime, think again.

Thefts appear to be the most commonly reported criminal offense on campus with the prime targets of such thievery being personal computers, television sets and stereo equipment, security officials at two area colleges say.

So far in 1989, eight thefts have been reported to Midland College security officers, according to Camal Dakil, dean of students.

Although the University of Texas of the Permian Basin escaped February without a theft reported to police, chief Bill Lewis surmised that such a trend probably won't last long.

Lewis' seven uniformed patrol officers, rather than responding to major crime reports, spent 21 hours tending to 110 service calls on record during the month of February.

"That takes up a lot of our time and that's good. It's the kind of work I like to do," he said, referring to requests for assistance in jump starting and unlocking vehicles.

Still, UTPB has had its share of major crimes despite Lewis' assertion that "this is basically a peaceful campus."

Among the most serious unsolved crimes on UTPB's blotter, was an aggravated sexual assault three years ago near the south edge of campus adjacent to University Boulevard.

"We've never lost a computer, but we did lose a copy machine that was about five years old. Apparently, the guy was hiding in the ceiling and, after we locked up, he dropped down through the tiles and hauled the copier out of the building.

Thefts such as the one depicted in this photo illustration make up the majority of criminal offenses that occur on college campuses, according to security officials at two area colleges.

"We never caught him," Lewis said.

The UTPB police department keeps monthly crime statistics for use in analysis by the University of Texas System in Austin.

Lewis said UTPB students — typically older, more settled and full-time workers — are less apt to be considered suspects in on-campus crimes.

Those are usually committed by persons outside of the university community, he theorized, attributing this to UTPB's location within Odessa city limits.

Midland College has the authority to certify its security force as peace officers, but hasn't because "we have a crack police department a mile away," Dakil said.

Besides, it's difficult for a criminal to walk off with a computer or TV without being seen.

Said Dakil: "What we've tried to do is create an atmosphere like Crime Stoppers, where you have a lot of eyes watching out for these kinds of things."

Avoiding burglary strikes altogether would be impossible, but the dean is confident that his security force can keep the numbers from creeping upward.

MC students may be of some help in that regard, Dakil asserted.

"Our students are very busy and they don't live in dorms, so there's not much time to mill around with nothing to do.

"They stay out of trouble that way," he added.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

As a youngster, John Tatum used to tag along with his mother to school board meetings. Today, he hopes to become Odessa's youngest City Councilmember.

ODESSA — John Tatum never ran for a seat on the student government at Permian High School because he found the candidates' interests more social than legislative.

As a 10th-grader, he quenched his thirst for politics instead by attending Ector County Independent School District meetings with his mother — a teacher — and hashing out issues with his father and brother around the dinner table.

Nine days ago, however, the 22-year-old Tatum applied to run for the at-large City Council position being vacated in May by Craig Heap, who decided not to seek re-election.

Tatum wants to take what he's learned at the dining room table and apply it to problems that surface around the U-shaped board table where Odessa's City Council sits.

"I'm not getting in this thinking, 'What are my interests?' or 'What are the interests of my group or my part niche in society?'

"Being a native Odessan...that's really important to me," said Tatum.

"I just decided it was a good opportunity for me and it's a way I think I could help in the city.

"A lot of people sit around and ask, 'Why is the government doing this?' but then they do nothing about it."

He knows the problems and thinks he has the answers.

Oil is not the city's future, Tatum believes. Officials should concentrate on attracting new industry and bettering conditions for existing small businesses.

"I'm really sort of pessimistic about oil's prospects. I don't think oil is going to be Odessa's future and I don't think it's going to get much better than it is right now," Tatum said.

He sees the area as a fertile ground for new business but thinks it important to help existing firms thrive instead of survive.

"We're stuck out in the middle of the desert. We're not well-known...there's a lot of things we have to overcome," Tatum believes.

"Really we need to look right here at home at businesses that are currently established. How can we help them and how can we make the atmosphere better for entrepreneurs who want to start businesses?

"That is the important place to start in trying to build our economy."

Odessa can't do it, however, without Midland; and vice versa, he said.

Tatum envisions the two cities' governments and chambers of commerce closing ranks to pull the Permian Basin out of its three-year-old economic rut.

Speaking of economic ruts, Tatum's self-prescribed "shoestring" campaign is sort of in one too. He chortles at pundits who tell him the average successful city council campaign runs upwards of $5,000.

"I think money is going to be a problem with me...as a student," Tatum, a speech communications and business major at University of Texas of the Permian Basin, said. His mother, the teacher, is also his campaign treasurer.

Fire whips through northwest Midland field

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Fire officials say children playing with matches may have caused a treacherous 640-acre grass fire Saturday that endangered northwest Midland homes and a 228-unit apartment complex.

Winds spread the fire, ignited behind the North Park Cinema on Billingsley Drive, over a wide territory bounded by Loop 250, Faulkner Drive and Caldera Boulevard, Midland Fire Department reports said.

Residents of the Windmill Park Apartments and homes west of Garfield Road and north of Loop 250 faced tense moments Saturday as flames as high as 20 feet lapped dangerously near the residences.

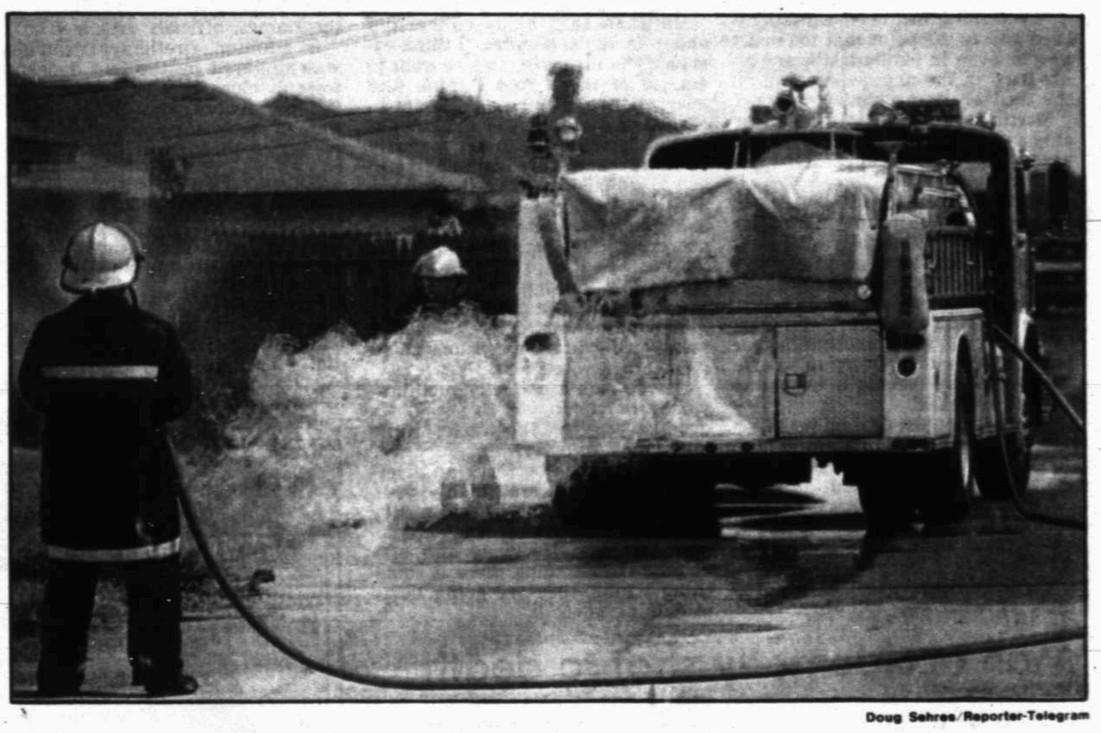

Midland callers dialing 911 around the noon-hour faced the probability of a busy signal because of the fire. One department dispatcher said he received more than 50 calls about the grass fire.

"It didn't take 15 minutes to get to the house," explained a shaken Debby Bryant. She saw flames overtaking a telephone pole and scorching land adjacent to her home on the corner of Caldera Boulevard and Whitman Drive.

"There was nobody (firemen) here when it approached my house," Mrs. Bryant said. Firefighters were battling the blaze from a different vantage point when a wind change sent the flames toward her home, she explained.

"I'd heard about grass fires, but I never dreamed how fast they travel," Mrs. Bryant said.

Windmill Park Apartments manager Jerrilyn Hatcher said Saturday's blaze was the fourth she's experienced during the two years she worked at the complex.

GARY OTT

Golf is game that lets players ride in cart, drink beer

Ott

As winter fades further and further into the past, Midlanders will begin taking to the great outdoors in increasingly large numbers.

Some will head to the few area lakes we have around here; others will try their hands at tennis. Older residents will amuse themselves with late afternoon strolls in the neighborhood, while tradition-oriented families will plan large get-togethers at the local parks, where they will fight the insects for the final piece of pecan pie.

Only the worst of couch potatoes will remain indoors and avoid the sunshine altogether.

One activity in particular that is sure to be popular is golf. It seems everyone has taken up the game.

And why not? It enables you to spend several hours outdoors and is one of the very few sports that allows participants to ride a cart, smoke cigarettes and drink beer while playing the game.

That's why you see so many fat people who can't catch their breath hanging out on golf courses. It makes them feel like they are getting some exercise even if they're not.

Another reason golf is such a popular summer pastime is that it is easy to organize one-day tournaments. It might be a group of people from work or a fund-raiser for charity or just some friends who all happen to call in sick at work on the same day. Funny how little things like that can happen.

In any case, golf tournaments are easy to organize and fun to play in.

Likewise, it can be enjoyable for people who aren't actually playing in the tournament to come out and watch the action. That's because they too can ride a cart, smoke cigarettes and drink beer while taking in the sun. And since they are only watching they don't even have to break sweat, which is the only negative thing about actually playing golf.

Still, these first-time spectators will need to learn certain nuances about the sport. And topping that list is "golf talk."

Newcomers to the game will likely be confused by what they hear golfers say from time to time. Golfers use recognizeable words, mind you, but their meaning can throw you off guard.

In particular, golfers will carry on conversations with their ball.

Let me give you an example: say you are watching a friend hit an eight-iron to the first green. He takes a full swing and connects. The ball soars toward the hole. Suddenly, your friend, who is normally a reasonally sane person, will begin yelling at his golf ball, as though the ball can comprehend what is being said.

Your friend might scream, "Sit down, baby, sit down!" That means he wants the ball to magically fall from the sky before the ball is ready.

The ball rarely cooperates.

Here are some other phrases you might hear:

■ "Fore Lord!" (Translation: The golfer has just hit the ball straight up in the air and he is afraid it might enter heaven before returning to earth).

■ "Get some legs!" (Translation: The golfer has hit a low shot that is going to be well short of the green, so he asks the ball to grow some legs and "run" toward the intended target).

■ "That'll be handy." (Translation: The golfer has hit an incredibly bad shot but his playing partner wants to say something nice. So he says, "That'll be handy." What the phrase actually means is that somebody should at least be able to find the ball).

■ "Euell Gibbons couldn't even find that S.O.B." (Translation: The golfer has hit the ball so far into the woods that it is hopeless. You don't even waste your time looking for it).

■ "That sucker looked like Fred Astaire." (Translation: The golfer has hit a beautiful approach shot to the green. When it hits the green, the ball takes one bounce forward and then skips backwards. In other words, it dances).

And you thought golfers didn't have culture.

BAR

"This bill is desperately needed," Ms. Kubiak told the committee, which included at least two "hostile" lawyers. "They seemed more concerned about lawyers than the consumers."

House Bill 901 would open "all disciplinary records and proceedings from the point of initial complaint," Ms. Kubiak told the committee. It also would abolish "secret (private) reprimands," and would remove the rule that makes it illegal for complainants to admit that they have filed a grievance.

Ms. Kubiak charged that under the present system, there is no way to determine if a lawyer has been found guilty of misconduct but is given a "secret reprimand."

However, the names of lawyers who are disbarred, suspended from practice or publicly reprimanded are published in the Texas Bar Journal.

Additionally, Ms. Kubiak told the committee that of the "thousands" of complaints lodged against Texas lawyers, only 5 percent or less actually end in disciplinary sanctions.

The State Bar received 5,383 complaints in 1987-88, she said. Of those, 183 lawyers were meted "any sort of public discipline," and 97 lawyers were given secret or private reprimands.

"Future clients will never know of their wrongdoing," she complained.

Ms. Kubiak said that the states of Washington and Oregon have open-records laws pertaining to the disciplining of lawyers. "They have been able to provide the public with information without damaging honest lawyers."

UNDER THE PROPOSED amendment to the Texas State Bar Act, "no complainant shall be liable for defamation for statements made concerning the accused attorney unless malice is shown" by way of knowingly making false statements or showing reckless disregard for truth or falsity.

Vern Martin, a Midland criminal defense lawyer and a former district attorney, said that most grievances are "frivolous."

He is opposed to making grievances public.

"There are some valid grievances that have been filed," Martin said. "But most of them are people looking for somebody to blame for the world not being the way they want it to be."

Martin said that a fellow lawyer, who specializes in criminal law, said that he has reached "'the point where I assume that anybody who walks in (my office) is more interested in finding an excuse to sue me than they are in hiring a lawyer" to get out of a bind.

"There is a trend in that direction," Martin said. "The bottom line is that people are always looking for somebody to blame."

The salient feature of the State Bar of Texas grievance committees is the "policing of one professional person" by his or her peers and non-lawyers on the committees.

"It is in the public interest all right," Martin said, "but it is not a public matter" until the grievance evolves into a trial for disbarment. "It is hard enough for lawyers to make a living without having people go up and criticize them," Martin said.

"Everything has been sensationalized now to the point that too many people, even in public trials, are being tried in the newspapers and on the media," Martin said.

Martin suggested that the personality and background of lawyers naturally lead them to approach cases differently.

"If you were to hire 10 lawyers to address the same problem, you are going to get 10 slightly different opinions about the appropriate way to handle it," Martin said.

One lawyer might deem it appropriate to "rush into court and start filing papers," while another lawyer in a similar case might try to resolve the dispute by placing a telephone call, he surmised.

"You are not just dealing with lawyers, you are dealing with facts, and you are dealing with what these people tell you," Martin said.

"And when people come to lawyers, what they really want to hire is a seer. They want you to predict the future.

"Most of them listen to about a third of what you tell them. And then, if things don't happen the way they wanted them to do, then they want to run in and file a grievance against you and so forth," said Martin.

Midland County Attorney Mark H. Dettman called a grievance "nothing but an accusation" that a client is "displeased with the lawyer's conduct."

But Dettman said that a grievance should not be made public until the grievance has been proven "valid."

"Litigation by its very nature results in unhappy people," Dettman said. "In any lawsuit, basically you are going to have a winner and a loser. So, 50 percent of people who have a case are going to be dissatisfied with the results. They may be dissatisfied with their own lawyer's performance. They may be mad at the other lawyer and think the other lawyer took advantage of them."

Or the person who lost a lawsuit might file a grievance out of "pure sour grapes."

"It would be totally unfair to ruin a professional, competent and honest lawyer because he is so good he wins cases, and the other side is always complaining about him. That would be totally unfair."

Or, Dettman said, a person bearing ill will could "make totally false and malicious complaints just to harm somebody."

Dettman noted that the State Bar of Texas metes out four levels of disciplinary action:

- Disbarment. After a five-year waiting period, a lawyer may seek re-licensing to practice law. "You can't take his law degree away or his education," Dettman said, "but you can take his license to practice (law)."
- Suspension of law license for up to five years.
- Public reprimand, including publication of the misconduct.
- Private reprimand. In that case, the reprimand becomes part of the attorney's record with the State Bar of Texas.

Dettman said that if all grievances were to be made public, there should be accompanying provisions to make the complaining party responsible.

"If you are going to have a system like that, you are going to have controls on it. If you file a false grievance, you are either subject civilly or criminally for making a false report.

"Right now, there is not a good faith protection. If you make a complaint about a lawyer, you are totally protected, period, whether you made it in good faith or not," Dettman said.

Under the proposed amendment, a grievance hearing would be just like a trial," Dettman noted. "It would not be in private," and the complaining party would be open to cross-examination.

"Any secrets they had would be subject to disclosure publicly," Dettman said.

Furthermore, people would not be as candid with their lawyer if they feel guarded information shared with and attorney might become public as a result of a dispute, Dettman theorized.

"It would kind of destroy the attorney-client relationship," Dettman said. "It would place attorneys and clients in too much of a potential adversary position. You've got to have basic trust in your attorney, just as you have got to have in your doctor."

Dettman said he is concerned about unethical lawyers. "I think everybody in the bar is, and we want to get rid of them. And I think (the association) is making an attempt to get rid of those kind of individuals.

"But to subject the vast majority of attorneys who are honest and ethical to ridicule based on the bad experience that a few (clients) have had with a few unethical attorneys is not curing the problem," Dettman said.

"It's just causing more damage. And that's not the proper solution."

Midland lawyer Jeffrey Hinkley fears open grievance hearings could turn into a witch hunt.

"If you ruin a perfectly good lawyer by innuendo, you have taken a good lawyer from the public," Hinkley said.

And lawyers who serve on grievance committees are "highly dedicated lawyers," Hinkley said. "They take their job seriously. They are doing their job effectively and efficiently. If they think there is something wrong, they are going to do something about it."

Man accidentally shot to death

From Staff Reports

A 31-year-old Midland man was accidentally shot to death early Saturday morning while unloading a car, police say.

Michael C. Holloway died in Midland Memorial Hospital's emergency room shortly after 3 a.m. Saturday, nursing supervisor Cheryl Simmons said.

The mishap occurred in the 500 block of East Estes Avenue, Midland Police Officer Jim Sevey said.

Although reports are incomplete, police say the man was helping another man unload items from a car into the Estes Avenue home.

He was apparently struck by a single shotgun blast to the upper body after the weapon the other man was carrying accidentally discharged, police said.

Police said the man also was carrying some clothing items.

The other man was not arrested, Sevey said.

BEE SMART

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1989 Regional Spelling Bee April 15 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through April 14. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

beaujolais — (noun) "Beaujolais" is a type of red Burgundy table wine made from grapes grown in France. The wine is named for the central region of France called "Beaujolais," where the grapes are grown. When pronouncing "beaujolais," don't forget that the "s" is silent. The French prefix, "beau," means beautiful, good or fine. There are several other words adopted into our English language that have the prefix "beau." Can you think of any?

"I think he's got a chance...but raising money will be a problem. When you're not in cliques here and there it can be difficult," Helen Tatum explained.

Tatum says he will just "get out there and ask for it."

That he is only 22 is both a blessing and a curse, he said.

"I am an intellectual. I like to look at the problems and try to figure out solutions that will help everyone. I'll bring a different perspective to the council," said the candidate, who is president of the UTPB Toastmasters' Club.

"Intelligence isn't dependent upon age," he says.

Conversely, he thinks age is also his biggest detriment, though he's got an answer for nay-sayers.

"I think they'll question how experienced I am and what kind of job I can really do being so young. A lot of young people leave Odessa. Being a young person, I can see the reasons they would want to leave," Tatum says.

With some luck and a little money, Tatum may halt that exodus.

FIRE

She wasn't surprised by Saturday's blaze, she said, recalling her unsuccessful efforts to convince city officials to cut down tall weeds in the field.

"The weeds had gotten so high you could barely see the fields," she explained.

Firefighters battled more than four hours and used five department units to extinguish the blaze, reports said.

Soft, sandy terrain prevented firefighters from driving directly into the blazing areas to spray water on the flames, officials explained.

In addition, firefighters' mobility was hindered by the fact hydrants weren't close enough to the field. Pumper trucks were used instead, though water supplies had to be replenished throughout the ordeal.

Midland Fire Department Batallion Chief Bob White said a fire truck driver may have run over an Energas Co. gas riser that caught fire Saturday in an alley near the flaming field.

Firefighters plugged the gas leak, however, and residents weren't in danger of being caught in the middle of an explosion, White said.

Body found in burned home

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The body of a white male believed to be in his early 20s was found among the rubble of a burned mobile home, sheriff's department reports said.

Firefighters found the man's body when exploring the remains of a west Odessa mobile home around 6:30 a.m.

Ector County Sheriff's Department Dep. Jeff Schwende said the body was burned beyond recognition and an autopsy was to be performed in the future.

Investigators do not know if the man was the owner of the trailer.

The cause of the trailer fire is unknown, Schwende said.

Agencies hope to promote state's seafood industry

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Legislators hope a change in state law will bring three state agencies together to promote what could become a multi-million dollar seafood industry.

"This is the fastest growing agricultural sector in the nation, with a 20 percent annual increase in production," said Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, sponsor of Senate Bill 1507, which would encourage commercial fish and shellfish farming and processing from the Gulf to the Permian Basin.

House Bill 2339 filed by Rep. Robert Saunders, D-LaGrange, is similar.

U.S. fish farming production represented less than 3 percent of worldwide production in 1987, Brooks said, but that share is increasing, "and Texas can become a vital part of this growth industry."

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, a co-sponsor of the bill with Sen. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, said at least one businessman is prepared to invest "several million dollars in Southeast Texas if this legislation is passed."

The region is ripe for commercial seafood investment, Parker said, but he added, "They're not willing to risk a major investment and rely on the whim of a board that can change the whole industry by changing regulations overnight."

Brooks noted that a seafood company is experimenting with brine ponds to raise shrimp near Midland and another company is hoping to develop redfish farms, although they have been stymied by Texas regulations that prohibit the commercial taking of redfish.

Even catfish, a favorite on Texas menus, most likely was raised in Mississippi because Texas never developed the industry, Brooks said.

"We Texans love catfish," he said. "But the next time you have a catfish at a Texas restaurant keep in mind that your catfish was probably taken from a Texas waterway, transported out of state for farming and then sold back to Texas at a profit."

So Brooks drafted the bill that would create a marketing council that would link the departments of Parks and Wildlife, Agriculture, the General Land Office and the Texas A&M Agricultural Extension Service to encourage production and marketing of domestically produced fish. Projects which could benefit from the bill include as Genesis Seafood in Stanton, which raises shrimp in brackish ponds, and Naiad Inc., which is building a catfish farm and processing plant that will employ 170 people in Brazoria County.

The bill would leave control of new species importation and enforcement of fish farming regulations in the hands of the Parks and Wildlife Department, but the Department of Agriculture would license the state's 390 fish farms and processing plants.

The General Land Office would expand its program of identifying and acquiring property for lease to Texas fish farmers while it also would support a Fish Farming Technology Transfer Center, Brooks said.

The bill would create an executive committee, comprised of the Parks and Wildlife Commission chairman, the land commissioner and the agriculture commissioner, to promote the fish farming industry. The committee would hire an aquaculture liaison officer, who would coordinate the program.

In 1987, the nation imported more than $8.7 billion in fishery products, while it exported $1.6 billion, Brooks noted. Commercial fish farming in Texas could offset that trade imbalance while it provides jobs for thousands of Texans, he said.

While some conservations have expressed concern over the bill, Brooks said he felt the bill answered the main criticisms when it kept with the Parks and Wildlife Department the authority to protect public waterways against the introduction of new species that might harm native game fish.

"We're talking about clarifying the lines of regulatory responsibility," he said.

He added that he does not plan to remove any Parks and Wildlife authority over wild game and natural resources in the public domain, but he said the prohibition against any commercial taking of redfish has prevented farming operations from operating in Texas.

That is why Granada Corp. takes fingerlings from Texas hatcheries and raises them in Panama, Brooks said.

Parker said the shift in emphasis was needed because the Parks and Wildlife Department "has been geared to avoid selling (fish and game). They're police. They're not promoters."

He added that utility companies have "ready-made brood stock ponds" with their cooling ponds.

"I would hope the interest groups that generally lobby bills affecting fish and wildlife will not be obstructionist, but will participate with constructive suggestions on how we can get this accomplished," Parker said.

Alan Allen, executive director of Sportsmen Conservationists of Texas, said his coalition of 88 sportsmen's clubs was not opposed to development of the commercial seafood industry, but it was concerned about any attempts to reduce the regulatory authority of the Parks and Wildlife Commission.

"Maybe I'm being a little paranoid," Allen confessed, but he sees the possibility that as the seafood industry becomes more powerful, "it's going to be easier for them to put pressure on the Legislature to allow more exotic species."

And while commercial fishing is a potential industry, Allen noted that sport fishing already is a $4.1 billion industry in Texas. "When you start doing something that will affect that much of an economic boon to Texas, you have to be very careful," he said.

Allen added that his group would have a problem with utilities closing public access to ponds that Parks and Wildlife has stocked with fish, but it would have little recourse for the majority of cooling ponds that never were stocked with public fish.

HOW THEY VOTED

Congressional Quarterly

WASHINGTON — Votes of area members of Congress on key issues during the week ending March 24, 1989.

KEY HOUSE VOTES

House OK's Minimum Wage Increase. Setting up a potential confrontation with President Bush, the House March 23 voted 248-171 to raise the minimum wage from $3.35 to $4.55 an hour over three years. The proposal also includes a lower "training wage" for first-time workers and increases the tip credit to 50 percent from 40 percent.

The vote came after the House rejected a Bush administration proposal to limit the hike to $4.25 an hour and broaden eligibility for the training wage.

The administration favors a six-month training period — in contrast to the House's two-month proposal — that could apply to all new hirees, not solely to workers starting their first job.

Last year, the House moved to raise the wage, but a Senate bill was stymied by a filibuster. The Senate's new version of the measure, awaiting floor action, would set the wage at $4.65 and does not presently include a training wage. But Senate Democrats have signaled they may accept a training wage to avoid another filibuster and potential veto.

Supporters of the wage increase said the proposed hike which would be the first since 1981, is long overdue and that the present rate leaves families well below the poverty line. And, they noted, after adjusting for inflation, the minimum wage has lost one-fourth of its value since 1981.

"For millions of Americans, working does not provide a route out of poverty," said Ted Weiss, D-N.Y. "The minimum wage represents a statement by society that pay for work should meet certain basic standards."

Opponents contended that the administration's proposal was adequate and that a higher wage hike would mean a loss of hundreds of thousands of jobs by companies forced to curtail labor costs. They also said that the increase would fuel inflation and noted that only a fraction of minimum-wage earners head households.

"We have made great strides in this country during the '80s to restore employment opportunities," countered Denny Smith, R-Ore.

"Raising the minimum wage...would cause job losses in the hundreds of thousands, and have farther-reaching effects throughout the economy."

Voting for the minimum-wage increase:
Gonzalez (D).

Voting against:
Smith (R), Combest (R), Stenholm (D), Sarpalius (D).

House Defeats GOP-Supported Wage Hike. Prior to accepting a Democratic-sponsored wage-hike compromise, the House March 23 voted 198-218 against a Republican-supported substitute amendment that embodied President Bush's plan for raising the nation's minimum wage.

The substitute amendment would have increased the hourly minimum wage to $4.25 from the current $3.35 over the next three years. It also would have allowed employers to pay newly-hired workers a so-called "new-hire" or "training" wage for six months. This wage would initially be $3.35 an hour and, thereafter, amount to not less than 80 percent of the minimum wage.

Proponents of the substitute argued that to approve a minimum wage higher than $4.25 an hour would hurt rather than help the working poor it would affect. They claimed the higher wage would lead to higher inflation, more unemployment and fewer entry-level jobs.

Opponents of the substitute countered that a higher minimum wage was necessary and overdue. They pointed out that no minimum wage increase has been forthcoming in the last eight years, while the dollar's purchasing power has continued to decline.

Voting for the minimum-wage substitute amendment:
Smith (R), Combest (R), Stenholm (D), Sarpalius (D).

Voting against:
Gonzalez (D).

Easter's message a promise fulfilled

People today are not significantly different from the people who walked the face of the Earth nearly 2,000 years ago when Jesus of Nazareth lived. We still have good days and bad days, we still struggle to acquire the necessities of daily life, will still argue with our neighbors, distrust that which we don't understand, wage wars and, essentially, live our lives far differently from the way Jesus taught us to live.

But today, as millions of Christians throughout the United States join others across the world in celebrating Easter, we can know that through that seemingly insignificant event long ago, the promise of which Jesus Christ spoke has been fulfilled — that death is not the finality of life, but a portal to everlasting life.

The trials and the tribulations that confront modern-day man are awesome, no doubt, but they pale in comparison to the Cross that Jesus Christ carried on that final walk. He died on that Cross to atone for the sins of man, so that those who believe in Him can join Him in the life beyond this one on Earth. His promise to man was recorded in John 14:1-4:

"Do not let your hearts be troubled. Trust in God; trust also in me. In my Father's house are many rooms; if it were not so, I would have told you. I am going there to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come back and take you to be with me that you also may be where I am. You know the way to the place where I am going."

Today marks the Christian observance of the fulfillment of Jesus Christ's promise — of His resurrection from the grave. Rejoice! He is risen.

Project's recipients praise CIA benefits

When Christmas in April's 1,500 or so volunteers converge on their projects Saturday, April 29th, it will be the 17th year the housing repair project has been conducted for Midland's elderly and handicapped residents. And in those 17 years, it has made thousands of Midlanders safer and happier.

The project, designed to make the homes safe and weathertight for recipients, has grown so much in recent years as word of its success has spread, that there now are Christmas in April projects in Washington, D.C., and 12 Texas cities in addition to Midland.

But for all that growth, the program still addresses the needs of its recipients and funnels virtually all the donated money to recipients' homes. There is extremely little overhead cost, according to CIA president Bobby J. Trimble, the project's strongest supporter.

That's because all the materials to repair the homes are purchased with donations to CIA and the work is performed by volunteers who give up a few Saturdays a year to perform most of the work. The bulk of the work is completed on the annual workday, but some volunteers help Trimble at other times in the year when special work needs to be done.

This year, Trimble said, about 120 homes will be repaired on the workday, but the total number of houses to be repaired this year will number about 200.

Other than Trimble's staunch support, some of the highest praise for the project comes from recipients and others who have contributed to the project. One woman wrote to CIA saying, "I want again to express my love and appreciation for the generous and unselfish help of Christmas in April. Christmas in April helped me to repair and condition my home ...."

Another's letter said, "Dear Mr. Trimble, You are doing a great work. Your crews helped on my house five years ago. I really did appreciate the help and wish I could send you a big check. I am now living on Scharbauer in a housing complex, am 95 years old, living on Social Security, am able to do my work and am very thankful.

"I thank you for what you do for the needy. I am sorry my check can't be a big one."

And another letter from an elderly couple said, "We are very sorry we cannot contribute to your most worthy cause.

"But we are doing our best to make ends meet as we are 82 and 83 years old and I am nearly blind, too.

"So hoping you all the very best."

Not everyone can give, of course. Christmas in April is making a difference in the lives of the elderly and handicapped of Midland, but it cannot perform its work without funds. This year's program is estimated to cost about $120,000. Won't you volunteer to help in the April 29th workday or mail a check to Christmas in April.

It will make a difference.

Another View:

Exploiting athletes

Three federal lawmakers, two of them former stars in the National Basketball Association, have proposed a law that, if enacted, would blow the whistle on some of this country's unscrupulous exploiters of college student athletes.

The bill requires colleges getting federal aid to disclose the graduation rates of student athletes. The legislation was proposed by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., who played for the New York Knicks; Rep. Tom McMillen, D-Md., formerly of the Washington Bullets; and Rep. Ed Towns, D-N.Y., who ran track and played basketball in college but, like most of his teammates, didn't go pro.

In their quest for the big-time money that goes with big-time sports, too many colleges and universities are interested mainly in showcasing their student athletes on TV, not educating them. Students have emerged from these schools without the ability to even read a street sign, much less a computer manual. How are these young people supposed to find a job?

Requiring schools to report their graduation rates wouldn't stop the abuse altogether. But, as Bradley said, it would at least help high school athletes make "an informed choice" in picking a college. Some of the more blatant offenders — colleges that drain athletes like pop bottles and dump them rather than prepare them for adulthood — would no longer be able to hide so easily.

Ideally, the National Collegiate Athletic Association would have imposed this disclosure requirement. In failing to do so, the NCAA put the ball in Congress' court. The Bradley-McMillen-Towns bill ought to be enacted promptly.

Groups profiting from war on drugs

WASHINGTON — The war on drugs has reached the vigilante stage.

There is a growing national sentiment that no matter how much money the government throws at the crisis, it will not slow the injection of drugs into our neighborhoods. We have a new drug czar, but there are no signs that the average person believes that can make a difference. Private business and solo drug busters are taking up arms in the fight, including some entrepreneurs who see the crisis as a gold mine.

Jack Anderson

We know of one former Pentagon criminal investigator who has roamed the nation's southern coast this year collecting evidence to help state and local police bust drug smugglers.

More and more citizen groups are patrolling the urban battlefields, disgusted with the failure of the police to close the open-air drug supermarkets. Along with the vigilantes are entrepreneurs — non-profit organizations soliciting money, ostensibly to fight the battle privately.

Citizens for a Drug Free America is one such group. The aggressive outfit is choking the U.S. Postal Service with solicitations. The group's alarmist style makes Nancy Reagan's "Just Say No" slogan sound like a Girl Scout pledge.

"Have you ever been physically assaulted, robbed or mugged?" the group's literature asks for openers. "There is about a 72 percent chance that it happened because the criminal was addicted to an illegal drug." The pitch lambasts political, business and even church leaders who, it claims, tolerate the drug epidemic. It scolds lawyers "who scheme and lie to get their wealthy drug-dealing clients put back into our neighborhoods."

If that fires you up, don't grab your gun, grab your checkbook. Citizens for a Drug Free America wants your money. Founder Roger Chapin says his goal is to make the group "the No. 1 anti-drug organization in America very shortly and to reduce drug use by at least 50 percent by December 1993."

Chapin has no experience in criminal justice or drug-abuse prevention. But he informs potential donors that he has met with more than 100 "experts" in the field. Chapin is a conversational dynamo and has bent many an ear in Congress trying to find someone to endorse his idea for a federal Drug Emergency Act.

Another group, the Criminal Justice Policy Foundation, approaches the problem with a little more decorum. The group researches and advocates criminal justice reform. Its president is Eric Sterling, a seasoned crime analyst who spent eight years as legal counsel for the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Crime.

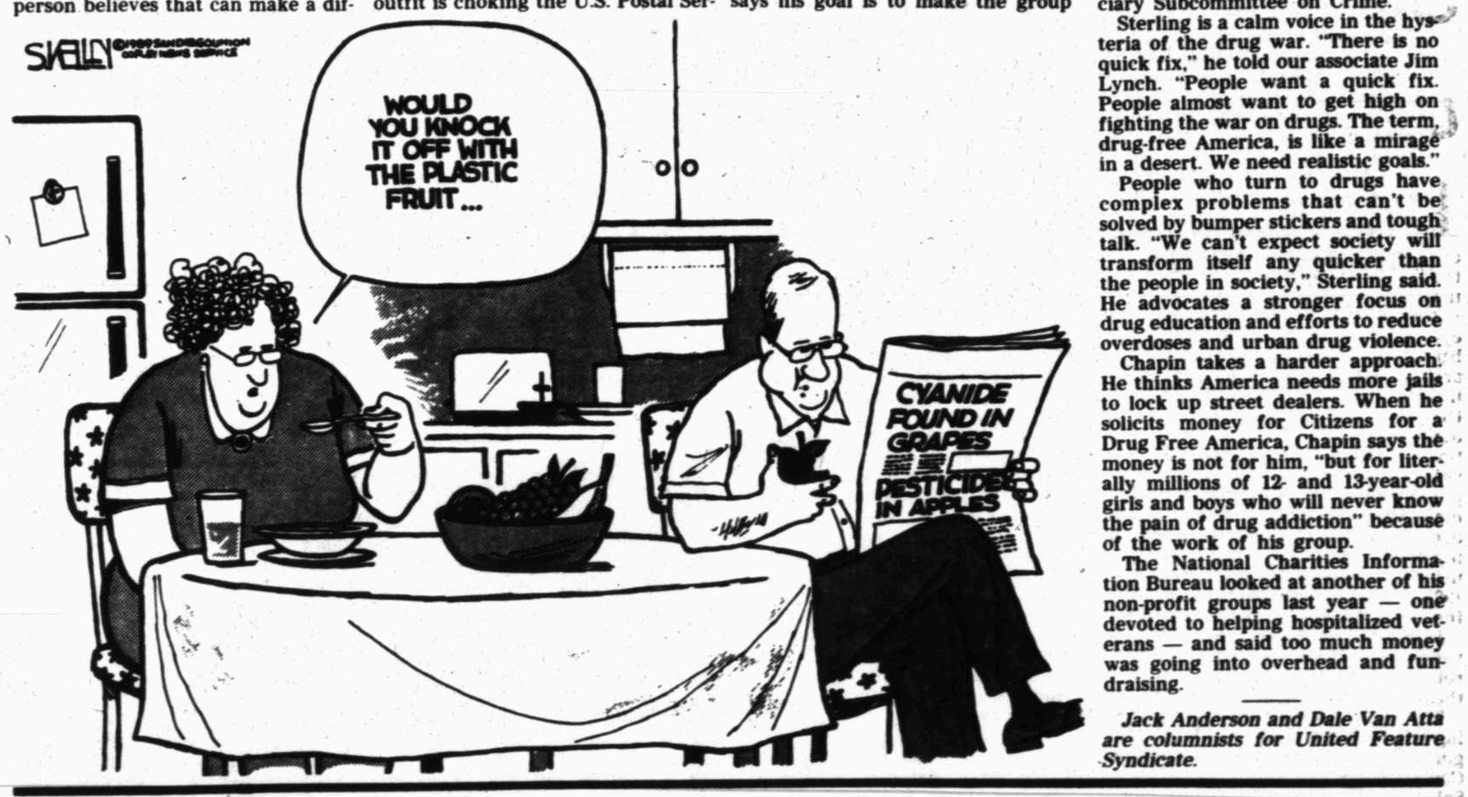

Sterling is a calm voice in the hysteria of the drug war. "There is no quick fix," he told our associate Jim Lynch. "People want a quick fix. People almost want to get high on fighting the war on drugs. The term, drug-free America, is like a mirage in a desert. We need realistic goals."

People who turn to drugs have complex problems that can't be solved by bumper stickers and tough talk. "We can't expect society will transform itself any quicker than the people in society," Sterling said. He advocates a stronger focus on drug education and efforts to reduce overdoses and urban drug violence.

Chapin takes a harder approach. He thinks America needs more jails to lock up street dealers. When he solicits money for Citizens for a Drug Free America, Chapin says the money is not for him, "but for literally millions of 12- and 13-year-old girls and boys who will never know the pain of drug addiction" because of the work of his group.

The National Charities Information Bureau looked at another of his non-profit groups last year — one devoted to helping hospitalized veterans — and said too much money was going into overhead and fundraising.

My how urban living expands government!

WASHINGTON — The future often moves east from the West, being foreshadowed in southern California. However, news usually travels east to west, so sufficient notice was not taken of 123 intimations of tomorrow's social issues and political choices.

George F. Will

The South Coast Air Quality Management District's jurisdiction is the Los Angeles basin. That includes 13,350 square miles, an area larger than nine states, and five percent of the nation's population — more than the population of 47 states. The existence of the SCAQMD may not even now be known to most of the 12 million people whose lives will be touched by implementation — if that happens — of the 123 recommendations for reducing smog. If implemented, it is possible that within ten years average visibility in the basin will be 60 miles instead of today's ten miles.

The SCAQMD operates on the provable premise that when 12 million people live together, anything that large numbers of them do, from driving cars to painting patio furniture to firing up their barbeques, matters a lot. It matters because life is a matter of cumulations.

Not long ago the problem of air pollution was considered a problem of vehicles and large stationary sources such as power plants and oil refineries. Not any more. Now the SCAQMD's proposals range from the minor and mundane (banning aerosol hair sprays and deodorants) to the major and visionary (electric vehicles). The proposals include a ban on bias-ply (non-radial) tires because they throw off too many particles, steep increases in parking fees for cars carrying only one person and limits on the number of cars each family can have.

The state should stay out of the bedroom? O.K., but it may soon rummage around in the bathroom: Even some non-aerosol deodorants might have to be reformulated to eliminate certain reactive compounds. Gas-powered lawn mowers (think of millions of them shattering the silence of a May morning in the basin) may have to go. So, too, may lighter fluids for backyard barbeques. But, then, when millions of barbequers substitute twigs and crumpled newspapers....

The SCAQMD agenda has ignited what will be a decade of fierce debate: How much will it cost in money, jobs and freedom? Will the cost be regressive, falling heaviest on those with the least disposable income? Six days after the SCAQMD spoke, the East was heard from on the subject of air pollution. Data gathered by the Environmental Protection Agency indicates that 329 chemicals — only seven of them regulated by the EPA, 60 of them cancer-causing — are being pumped into the air from industrial plants at the alarming rate of 2.4 billion pounds a year.

The spate of news about air pollution comes while notice is being taken of the tenth anniversary of what news stories still refer to as the Three Mile Island "disaster." Some disaster: No one killed, not even any measurable health consequences. The bad environmental consequences of Three Mile Island were the multiplication of delays in the development of an environmentally sound technology for generating power. In the name of reducing risks from nuclear power, we are incurring other risks.

One of the large industries in developed societies, the insurance industry, embodies the modern determination to socialize risks. The welfare state, more properly called the social-insurance state, socializes risks of unemployment, sickness and aging. The pursuit of public health through environmental regulation is a policy of dispersing responsibility for reducing risks.

Americans are intensely, sometimes unhealthily, health-conscious. But the nation's public-health priorities often are peculiar. The week that SCAQMD proposed measures that would impinge upon many freedoms, the nation was mesmerized by the health hazard posed by two lightly poisoned grapes. Health is indeed the first wealth, and Americans, who are more carefully polled concerning their appetites than concerning their willingness to pay the costs of them, constantly call for measures to produce a healthier environment.

However, the SCAQMD agenda is a cold shower of costs. The costs can be calculated in money and in the social supervision of what once were taken for granted as spheres of private discretion.

Philosophers of freedom have frequently had recourse to John Stuart Mill's essay "On Liberty" and his distinction between "self-regarding" and "other-regarding" acts. Self-regarding acts are those that affect no one other than the actor. In an open society, they are generally exempt from state control.

The logic of environmental reasoning (it is scientific as well as social logic) is this: High-density urban living in the industrial age transforms many actions, such as driving and barbequing, from self-regarding into other-regarding actions. Thus does government grow.

RUSSELL BAKER

Move over, Tower, another Texan's next!

It's been easy so far not to take sides in what passes for the politics of the Bush era.

The fight over the Tower nomination, for instance: only someone obsessed to the point of lunacy with small-bore politics could have cared much how it turned out.

Russell Baker

Tower's money ties to Pentagon contractors were odious, to be sure, but the entire Congress had been in cahoots with the military-industrial cabal for decades, so what else was new?

Of course it was good to see a Texan booted away from the federal trough for once. You don't often get Texas's snout out of that sweet-smelling, ever-loving, money-packed trough, not with all those key government offices in Texas custody.

Why Texans are uniquely qualified to run the country when they can't even run a savings and loan association is a mystery, but it is a rare season that doesn't find them occupying catbird seats all over Washington and shipping gravy by the tank car to the Lone Star State.

Does the government need a multibillion-dollar "space center"? A multibillion-dollar supercollider for physics research? You can bet it will build them in Texas.

So keeping the Defense Department Texas-free was gratifying. Now Texas will have to make do with just the presidency, the State Department, the speakership of the House of Representatives, the chairmanship of the Senate Finance Committee and a multibillion-dollar Treasury dole to bail out the savings-and-loans.

On the other hand, Tower's defeat was a victory for bluenoses and must therefore be lamented.

The bluenoses are on the march in this country. Or to put it more precisely, on the jog, on the white wine and Perrier, on the low-cholesterol diet, and on the high-fiber breakfast.

Historically, temperance and health movements have been powered by industrialists with a money stake in uplift. A society on a sound moral and physical regimen provides employers with a profitably malleable labor force.

Periodic efforts to make Americans amenable to factory discipline date from the early 19th century and usually travel under cover provided by the forces of moral and physical uplift.

Before about 1830, in the supposedly idyllic age of the early American craftsman, Americans were famous for getting drunk often and whenever they pleased.

Since this manifestation of independent spirit would have crippled the Industrial Revolution unless tempered, capitalism and uplift have cooperated ever since to tame the impulse.

When stifled, however, the impulse can turn nasty and dangerous. When goodness last prevailed over alcohol, it gave us Prohibition, bathtub gin, Al Capone and the Tommy gun, and trained us in contempt for law.

John Tower apparently retained that early American spirit of contempt for the time clock. This was made justification for rejecting him as secretary of defense.

The early American spirit would be a dangerous debility in a job said to demand a 24-hour workday all year round. Or so ran the argument.

Possibly so. Yet suspicion persists that had Tower been one of the Senate's beloved old clubmen his relish for both grape and grain would have been overlooked.

Suspicion persists that a lot of his old colleagues simply didn't like Tower and so found it easier to toss him over the side than argue against the increasingly popular bluenose movement.

In short, we are not talking about politics of any consequence whatever, but of such sociological claptrap that might fuel a popular Washington novel written to be turned into a mini-series.

Now that it's over, Tower must lift an occasional glass in the evening and thank his lucky Texas lone star that he lost the job. If he had got it he would now be serving a dreadful, self-imposed sentence of total abstinence, unable ever to lift a glass or cup without wondering how many undercover agents were secretly watching.

So the first great political onset ends with little passion stirred, because it was politics of no consequence.

There was a rare setback for Texas and a small blow struck against the military-industrial lobby, but new strength has been given to the bluenose movement.

After his silly promise to become a teetotaler, Tower is lucky to be out of it. H.L. Mencken said he wouldn't want to live in a country where you couldn't get a traffic ticket fixed. A country where a cabinet man can never take a drink would be just as bad.

Now we move on to the fight over Speaker Jim Wright's ethics. This could be really satisfying. He is another Texan.

Ethical spotlight now shifts from Tower to Wright

Bill Modisett

With the U.S. Senate properly dignified after having officially "scolded" one of its former colleagues, John Tower, attention in the nation's capital is now turned to Jim Wright of Fort Worth.

Wright, like Tower, is a man of noteworthy political infighting ability and his battle with the House Ethics Committee likely will be an interesting one. Politically, at least, one has to wonder whether the committee will tear into Wright with as much ferocity as the Senate showed with Tower or whether the fact that Wright is a Democrat in a Democrat-controlled House, whereas Tower was not a sitting member of the Senate but rather a former senator and prospective appointee, will make a significant difference.

It shouldn't. As noted before, the emphasis the electorate now places on proper ethical behavior by elected officials has been focused by events in recent years and current politicians and would-be governmental servants are being held to a higher standard. That isn't a counterproductive development; if anything, it should lead to better, more efficient government a few years down the road.

But when the determination of proper conduct falls into a political arena, such as the Senate Armed Services Committee or the House Ethics Committee, one should become concerned as to the reasons for the determination.

In Tower's case — and in Jim Wright's case — it's not a question of ability to perform the job, but rather one of whether the individual's ethical, or perhaps I should say unethical, tendencies will compromise him in that position or endanger his ability to do that job in the proper fashion. Both Wright and Tower have shown through the years that they can work the floor in their respective chambers well enough to not only get by, but also to climb the ladder of prestige and power.

While I don't agree with Wright's liberal tendencies on most votes, I have had to admit that he was able to keep his political supporters in line so that he could do his job well and succeed in Congress. Wright has always been one to go his own way, even at the time that Reagan was firmly entrenched behind the Nicaraguan Contras and Wright was openly showing that he thought there might be a better way to find peace. Meanwhile, the Congress as a whole wasn't sure which way it wanted to go.

Wright fought his own battles — politically — and didn't fare too badly.

I didn't agree with what Wright was doing. I thought that as speaker of the House he should have supported the president's position on a peace plan for Central America. He didn't; in fact, he spoke out in direct opposition to it and was probably partially to blame for the failure of Reagan's plan in the Congress.

But, as I said before, the ethics question isn't one of political ability. Rather, it's one of how far the voting public wants to let its officeholders stray beyond ethical lines. What's acceptable behavior for a public servant? What's a little too far?

The Senate voted for one standard when it rejected President George Bush's nomination of John Tower for secretary of defense. Now it's up to the House Ethics Committee to determine whether Wright stepped over that murky line in publishing a book and collecting fees for it or if he violated conflict of interest rules.

The decision rendered will, hopefully, further clear up the question of just what is ethically acceptable for a politician — and what is not.

Salvadoran election points up failure of U.S. policy

Flora Lewis

PARIS — If President Bush still has doubts about the failure of Reagan administration policy in Central America, Sunday's elections in El Salvador make it indisputable.

American policy has been to build up the army and the political center, on the thesis that democratic elections would provide the kind of popular government that would drain away backing for the leftist insurgents. Since 1981 it has cost $3.2 billion, mostly for the military.

It should be remembered that Salvador was called the "test case" for relations with Moscow at the start of the Reagan administration.

The initial reason given for attacking the Sandinista regime in Nicaragua, including establishment of the Contra army, was to block its aid to Salvadoran rebels. They were then expected to fade into insignificance.

Now, Washington is hoist with its own petard. Presidential elections have been held, on schedule, free and reasonably honest according to foreign observers but disrupted by the rebels. Turnout was under 50 percent. The nine-year-old civil war rages on.

The clear winner was Alfredo Cristiani, candidate of the right-wing ARENA party, which was founded eight years ago as a paramilitary organization, linked to the notorious "death squads."

Although President Jose Napoleon Duarte, who is dying of cancer, could not run again, his Christian Democratic Party, on which U.S. strategy relied, has been resoundingly rejected by those who voted.

That gives ARENA monopoly control of the government. It has already won, in various elections, a solid majority in the legislature and most of the provincial capitals.

Two-thirds of the mayors daring to remain in office after rebel threats belong to ARENA. It also dominates the supreme court.

True, it has a new face. Its founder, Roberto d'Aubuisson, whom President Jimmy Carter's ambassador to Salvador called a "pathological killer" and who was refused a visa to the U.S., stepped aside to let Cristiani create a more moderate image.

Nobody can be sure which of the two leaders will now call the tune.

Vice President Dan Quayle stopped off in San Salvador last month to warn that resurgence of human rights violations and death squad activities would endanger the flow of U.S. aid. It was supposed to help the Christian Democratic candidate, but it didn't.

On Election Day three journalists were shot dead, two of them apparently quite deliberately by soldiers, reminiscent of the murder of an American television journalist early in the war.

It's hard to tell whether ARENA's success came from its populist message, with strong anti-American undertones and a pledge of efficient services, or from revulsion at the Duarte regime.

Duarte never delivered on his promises of peace and prosperity. His administration was widely criticized for incompetence and corruption, much enhanced by opportunities arising from American aid.

Washington's reaction has been the predictable tight-lipped acceptance of the voters' decision plus more warnings about human rights.

That won't be enough. There will have to be at least a behind-scenes admission that it doesn't know how to fix what ails El Salvador, and some new thought about the Central Americans' own approach to their problems.

One wise American diplomat who has watched all the folly in frustration commented recently that the worst mistake of all was the destruction of multilateralism in dealing with Central and South America as well.

Washington was so sure it knew better that it kept pushing aside the Latins' efforts to work out joint solutions.

Even now, the U.S. is trying to hold off instituting the agreement made by all five Central American presidents to disband the Contra forces in return for democratic elections in Nicaragua.

Bush style: A combination of personality, experience

Jim Servatius

George Bush is using a different tactic in winning friends and influencing people.

Instead of the browbeating, threatening ways of some past presidents, Bush reportedly is giving some congressmen and reporters tours of the private presidential quarters — that area traditionally off limits to all except those nearest and dearest to first families.

Groups of Washington congressional and media types are said to be receiving personal glimpses of such special attractions as the Lincoln Bedroom on tours conducted by none other than Bush himself, the first lady, or both.

If this is part of the president's kinder and gentler way, then power to him.

No one was ever injured nor, I imagine, was justice ever demeaned by treating people, albeit select people, like decent human beings. And if the result is a measure of political support from lawmakers and media members, well, surely more despicable means have been used to gain that.

As for critics who say the new president is just too darned and dadgummed down-to-earth, why are they surprised? New York Times columnist William Safire said in a recent piece published in this newspaper that Bush even intoned an earthy "Come on, gang!" as he led a group onward during one of those tours.

So?

The whole thing sounds like vintage Bush.

What pleased me as well, maybe more so, was the report that followed a recent interview Bush granted representatives of six major Washington news organizations, including the Hearst newspapers.

As expected, a number of serious issues came up, including House Speaker Jim Wright's woes and Bush's support of the import ban on military-style semi-automatic rifles. But what impressed me was his response to questions about how he is reacting to criticism, including comments that the Bush agenda is off to a much-too-slow start.

"I couldn't be more relaxed about criticism," he said, adding "It's different than it used to be in the campaign. I used to get uptight about it ... But I feel comfortable in this job and I don't feel overwhelmed by it in any way. I don't feel as tense about everything as I thought I would."

Bush was not being overconfident or cocky, just candid. He was saying he feels secure about his job and in his ability to handle it. The same thing comes across in his to-date frequent televised exchanges with the White House press corps.

That's great. There are a lot of things this country doesn't need but one of them is an uptight, tense, overwhelmed, over-reacting and constantly defensive chief executive.

Some of Bush's confidence may reflect the often-stated theme that his administration's task is to build on accomplishments made during the Reagan years, that he has no need to tear anything down. Since he had a part in those accomplishments, that attitude isn't surprising, of course. But it also enables him to take a calmer posture and play a different role than the one that would be played by a candidate who, unlike Bush, had waged an aggressive campaign against a sitting president and won.

But Bush's demeanor probably also reflects something else. It's what accompanies coming to the pinnacle of power by way of congressional service, a couple of major diplomatic posts, a top federal agency chieftanship, topped off by an eight-year tour of duty as vice president.

Experience and confidence. They're usually not strangers.

Mary Kay Ash doesn't deserve bad treatment

I am one of the fortunate few who works in a job I love and for and with a person I admire and respect. Her name is Mary Kay Ash, the founder of the skin care and beauty products company that bears her name. Mary Kay Ash has built her life and her business on a philosophy of mutual support, high moral values and a commitment to individual rights and responsibilities.

I was shocked recently to see her compared in a comic strip in your publication to the Iranian leader Ayatollah Khomeini, who condones terrorism and murder, abuses basic human rights, calls for the death of dissenters and categorizes women as second class citizens.

Mary Kay herself would defend to the last Mr. Breathed's right in his "Bloom County" cartoon strip to poke fun at her or anyone else. We all enjoy the irreverent look at life he presents through the eyes of "Opus," "Bill" and the caricatures of "Bloom County." But Mr. Breathed goes too far when he compares Mary Kay, even in satire, to a zealot who posts death bounties and condones persecution of people for their beliefs.

I know I speak for all of us at Mary Kay when I say the kind of comparison aimed at any responsible American citizen is inappropriate. Mr. Breathed will continue to submit his comic strip as he sees fit. We support that right and the responsibility for fairness that goes with it. We hope you choose to print my letter to express our opinion.

Teen-agers need facts to contend with suicide

As a parent of a sophomore at Lee High School, I'm concerned over the alarming amount of teenage suicides in Midland. I've seen the terrible grief in the faces of friends who attend these funerals and I wonder who will be next. Will it be my son who I think I know so well or your precious child whom I don't know at all?

My husband and I are ordinary people trying to raise our teen-ager to be a kind and caring person. It's a time filled with pressure for everyone — the grades, relationships, driver's license, cars — just all the ordinary things parents and teenagers argue over. Life is so precious, but there are no reasons to commit suicide.

Teen-agers haven't arrived at thought out conclusions that life is so bad, but instead they act before thinking. These aren't bad kids, but kids crying out for help.

Suicide is happening in all social classes across the community of Midland. No one is exempt! There were two teen-age suicides in eight days recently and many others in 1988. Some people feel that if we talk about suicide it causes the "copycat syndrome." I feel the worst thing a community can do is withhold its knowledge on suicide. Teen-agers need the facts. Suicide isn't glamorous, but a final, futile, and selfish act. Heroes don't end their lives.

A real hero is someone who lives and copes with everyday problems. I'm just one parent trying to make a difference. Parents should talk more to their children. We should encourage additional training for teachers, youth ministers and anyone who can point out potential problems before it's too late.

Accident also affects drunken driver's life

In reference to Faye Higgins' letter of March 12, I would like to share with Ms. Higgins and readers a different point of view: One from my life experience as a mother of a son who drank and drove and was involved in an accident.

In my own case, the entire family was traumatized by the event, from the younger sister to the oldest grandparent. There were no previous arrests, or any prior vehicle violations. He had visited with an officer outside the club before driving away.

I still awaken at 4:23 a.m. — the time I received the call and was notified of the accident. My son had been 19 for two months at the time. He was held accountable for his actions by the law, and was given the appropriate sentence by the judicial system.

The responsibility to prevent such accidents reaches further than law enforcement officers to arrest, juries to convict, or the judges to sentence. The adult friends that allowed him to drink and gave him liquor after I asked them not to, the cashiers who sold him alcohol without asking for an ID because he looked older or was a friend, and the club he frequented and was served liquor because he was with an adult are all part of the problem. If liquor was dispensed by responsible adults and the public was more supportive of sobriety, then things might be different. It is too late once a person is in an accident and a fatality occurs for some things to change. It was for my son.

Look in the mirror and note that responsibility begins with you; the peer group, teacher, mom, dad, extended family or liquor salesperson. It also begins with the public learning more about alcoholism, warning signs, and counseling available for families. I am sure the first person who chose to share a drink with my son did not know a person's life would be taken so needlessly, but it was.

The question of "Am I my brother's keeper?" is asked again. The answer remains the same, "The voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground."

I grieve with the many families that have lost their loved ones. I also grieve with the families of the convicted. Neither group will ever view life the same.

MISD board deserves thanks for decision

My son was one of the 37 students involved in the boundary dispute between Bush Elementary and Quanah Parker. I would like to send heartfelt gratitude and appreciation to the Midland Independent School District board members for their decision.

It is refreshing to know that we, the public, can be heard by those who make the important decisions concerning our children. The parents in Fairmont Park subdivision came before the board with valid concerns and the board kept an open mind and took an active interest in our arguments.

Thank God for a democratic country where the voice of the people can still be heard and changes be made according to the wants and needs of the public.

Supercollider shuffled off after terminal wait

I think I may have figured out the real reason that Midland did not get the supercollider.

It seems that when the advance teams were surveying Midland International Airport for suitability, they noticed that it was not unusual for off-loading passengers to wait 35 minutes for their baggage. They noted further that there is a five-minute waiting time limit for persons picking up off-loading passengers.

Also, they were temporarily confused, but favorably impressed, by the spectacle of 10 to 15 cars orbiting the terminal area; at first they thought this activity was a special presentation by Midland citizens designed to resemble the supercollider as it whirls around. Regrettably, they soon discovered that it was merely the Five-minute Shuffle, a regular occurrence when planes are landing and passengers are waiting for baggage.

The last straw in the negative decision was when City Coucil members proudly informed the inspecting team that Midland was aggressively seeking at least one additional major airline to serve the areal market. The team leader is said to have remarked, "Why do you want another airline when you can't handle the present situation?" With that, the team wrote Midland off, and when last seen, was attempting to exit the terminal area without getting locked into the Five-minute Shuffle.

It should be noted that, as a gesture of good will, the City Council offered to tear up the parking violation citations served on the team while they were inspecting the airport.

Public should be told about bomb threats

On Jan. 1st my letter in the Reporter-Telegram made the point that in my view the public has as much right to information about bomb threats as diplomats.

Almost three months have passed since the Pan Am 103 tragedy. I have heard no convincing arguments that it was right to restrict that information. Not long ago we learned from London that authorities there too received a warning, in specific terms.

It is for me to decide for myself if a risk is one that I want to take. No government or official body can do that for me. If someone knows a flight or a route has been threatened, where is the moral justification for keeping that secret? I can see plenty of economic justifications.

The public is being treated like children, but we generally care for children better than that. We are being treated in a high-handed, dictatorial, "we know better than you what is good for you" fashion that I find totally unacceptable.

U.S. losing campaign to restore democracy in Nicaragua

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — With little happening on the Washington political scene this week because of the Easter congressional recess, it is an appropriate time to call attention to the increasingly serious situation in Central America.

We are clearly in danger of losing our long and costly campaign to restore democracy in Nicaragua and safeguard the security of the United States.

This is not just my personal opinion. It is the conviction of some of the most realistic experts on Central America in and outside the State Department.

They have spoken frankly to our national editor in Washington, Joe Kingsbury Smith, my friend and cohort, but they spoke anonymously because they do not wish to hamper Secretary of State James Baker's efforts to obtain bipartisan congressional support to avert the dismantling of the Contra freedom fighters before scheduled elections are held in Nicaragua Feb. 25, 1990.

During 40 hours of intensive discussions on Capitol Hill this past week, Baker succeeded Thursday in getting a tentative agreement with congressional leaders to continue nonmilitary humanitarian aid to what's left of the Contra forces — about 11,000 men mostly located in refugee camps in neighboring Honduras.

This would keep the Contras intact until after elections are held next February and thus have them available to resume fighting with new American military aid if elections are not held or if Ortega refuses to give up power if he is defeated. That would be the only trump card the United States would hold to pressure Nicaragua's Daniel Ortega into holding free elections and abiding by the outcome.

However, Baker's tentative agreement is subject to approval by the Senate, the House of Representatives and the five Central American Presidents, including Ortega, who concluded an appeasement peace plan that led to a cease-fire.

Most disturbing of all was a New York Times report Friday that President Bush's objective is to get free elections held in the hope "opposition leaders might gain a share of power through free elections."

That would seem to imply we would settle for Ortega remaining in power. He shared power with the moderates once before but soon forced them out of the government to establish a dictatorship, and he would probably do so again. It would be naive of President Bush to think otherwise.

So, little hope is held in knowledgeable quarters in Washington that genuine democracy will be restored in Nicaragua unless the Bush administration links that issue with Soviet eagerness for western financial aid to save its crumbling economy.

Since Nicaragua's powerful military forces were built up and are maintained by Soviet-Cuban support, Moscow could cease its military intervention in Nicaragua with less loss of face than it suffered in pulling out of Afghanistan.

As long as the Soviets continue to help Nicaragua maintain the most powerful military force in the Central American region, I share the doubts in Washington that President Ortega will give up power even if he loses the elections next year, assuming they are held.

For all you do, this ad's for you.

It's our way of saying "thanks" on National Doctor's Day.

We call them to the hospital in the dark of night, to bring new life into the world...or to save lives that might be lost without them. We ask them to give every ounce of their talent and training every time, time after time, knowing time is so often working against them. We count on them to offer a word of reassurance, a moment of understanding, and a spark of hope during the most trying times a family may ever face. For the physicians of Midland Memorial Hospital, it's all in a day's work.

We're lucky at Midland Memorial. With more than one hundred of the area's best and brightest physicians on our staff, we have so much to offer our community in the way of quality health care. So give yourself a pat on the back, doctor. This community needs and appreciates you more than you'll probably ever know. And on the occasion of National Doctor's Day, the least we can say is thanks.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

MC preparing to host 'Sesame Street Live'

By H.A. TUCK

The college is closed this week for its Easter-Spring break, which is a combined holiday this year. Classes resume on Monday, April 3.

• • •

Folks at Chap Center aren't getting to take a holiday at this time due to the number of events which are upcoming in the next couple of weeks.

"Sesame Street Live" is coming to Chap Center April 4-5. There's a 7:30 p.m. performance on April 4, with shows on April 5 at 4 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

That's followed quickly by the annual Midland Jaycees' Texas vs. USA Junior College All-Star game at 7 p.m. on Saturday, April 8. Among the players for the Texas team will be Smokey McCovery of Midland College, Larry Johnson from Odessa, and Keith Stewart from South Plains. Dennis Helms of Odessa will be coaching the Texas team. University of Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs will speak at a banquet the night preceeding the game.

Tickets also are on sale for the April 14 concert by Reba McEntire and Ricky Van Shelton, and for the April 17 show by Sandi Patti.

• • •

We've just received information that noted vocalist Leonard Johnson, associate professor of vocal pedagogy at the University of Texas-Austin, will be at MC in May.

Johnson will conduct a master class May 5 from 1-3:30 p.m. Vocal students wishing to perform for Johnson should call Dr. Michael Jordan at 685-4647 when the college reopens. Performers will be scheduled for the master class on a first-come basis.

Johnson will present a recital in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium at 2 p.m. May 7. This is free and open to the public.

Johnson's appearance is being sponsored by the MC Student Senate and the Fine Arts Division.

• • •

There aren't any Continuing Education classes beginning this week, but here's the list of classes which start the week of April 3: Stained Glass II, Aerobic Dance, Intermediate Country-Western Dance, Oil Painting, Introduction to the Stock Market, Crochet, Introduction to Photography, Interior Decorating II, Quilting II, Sign Language II, Silk Flower Arranging II, Tole Painting I, Total Image Perfection, Concrete Masonry, Certified Public Account Review-Business Law, and Certified Professional Secretary Exam-Module III.

You can register for any of these classes April 3 in the Continuing Education Office, Administration Building. More information is available that day by calling 685-4518.

The HMR Program for Weight Management at Permian Health Resources

"The Treatment of Choice for Serious Weight Problems"

When your weight problems are approached realistically and you're given accurate information about weight management, being over weight does not have to be a way of life.

Consider These Differences:

The HMR Program;	Other Programs;
•Average weight loss 49.8 lbs.	•Average weight loss 11.5 lbs.
•52% achieving goal weight, average loss 63.1 lbs.	•Less than 8% loss 40 or more pounds
•Over 60% of weight lost is kept off long term	•Less than 10% of weight is kept off long-term

Why PHR Is Different:

•Medically Supervised HMR Fasting Program
•Comprehensive WEEKLY Educational & Behavorial Program Instructed by PROFESSIONALLY Trained Staff Including Ph. D. HEALTH EDUCATOR, BEHAVORIST & REGISTERED DIETITIAN
•Emphasis on LONG TERM WEIGHT MAINTENANCE
•Medical Insurance Reimbursement Available with Many Health Plans

MAKING THE GRADE

Nichundra "Nicki" Holloway, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Holloway of Midland, has been named a United States National Award winner in foreign language.

Holloway

Miss Holloway was nominated for the national award by Richard Catania, a French teacher and soccer coach at Trinity School. Her picture will appear in the United States Achievement Academy Official Yearbook.

The Academy annually selects USAA winners on the basis of exclusive recommendation of teachers, coaches, counselors or other school sponsors and standards of selection it has set forth. The selection criteria are: academic performance; interest and aptitude; leadership; responsibility; enthusiasm; motivation to learn and improve; citizenship; attitude and cooperative spirit; dependability; and recommendation for a teacher or director.

The USS Saint Paul Association, made up of crew members of the famous Pacific Fleet heavy cruiser, is searching for lost shipmates to join their group. Affectionately known as "The Fighting Saint" to her crew, the Saint Paul, CA-73, earned 18 battle stars for her actions in World War II, the Korean Conflict and Vietnam. More than 15,000 men served aboard the ship. However, only 600 have been located so far. The Association hopes to triple that number by the time of their next reunion, to be held in San Antonio on Oct. 16-19, 1990. If you served aboard, or know someone who did, please contact J.D. Guarnere, 1-409-722-8807 or write to him at 189 Hilldale Drive, Nederland 77627.

Final Four pieces falling together

Wolves slam Cavs

By PETER ALFANO
New York Times News Service

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Ten days after their championship hopes appeared doomed when their head coach left on the eve of the national tournament, the Michigan Wolverines earned their first trip to the Final Four since 1976, overwhelming Virginia, 102-65, in the final of the Southeast Regional Saturday.

Steve Fisher, 44, the assistant coach who took over when Bill Frieder took the job at Arizona State, has been the beneficiary of one of the more torrid shooting streaks in post-season play.

Led by Glen Rice, who had 32 points, and Sean Higgins, a sophomore who made 7 3-point baskets and finished with 31 points, the Wolverines made a rout of the regional final by halftime and humiliated the Cavaliers in the second half.

Rice made 13 of 16 field-goal attempts, among them three from 3-point range as he provided the impetus for Michigan, which surged to an early lead. Higgins was spectacular in the second half as the Wolverines met little resistance from Virginia.

The victory improved Michigan's record to 28-7 and also made it a little more difficult for Bo Schembechler, the athletic director and football coach, to hire anyone other than Fisher as the school's next head basketball coach.

Fisher, Frieder's assistant for seven years, had been a head coach only at the high school level before stepping in when Frieder left.

The victory moved Michigan into the national semifinals next Saturday in Seattle, where the opponent will be the winner of Sunday's Midwest Regional final between Syracuse and Illinois.

Both Michigan and Virginia had perceived themselves as underdogs, overcoming adversity to reach the regional final. Virginia lost five consecutive games at one point in the season and lost two players because of injuries and academic problems.

Terry Holland, the soft-spoken coach, was sidelined in January after undergoing surgery. The Cavaliers were 3-3 in his absence.

Before the season, Michigan was considered a strong team capable of winning the national tournament, but the Wolverines stumbled a bit at midseason — winning only 8 of 14 games in one stretch — and then were shocked by Frieder's departure.

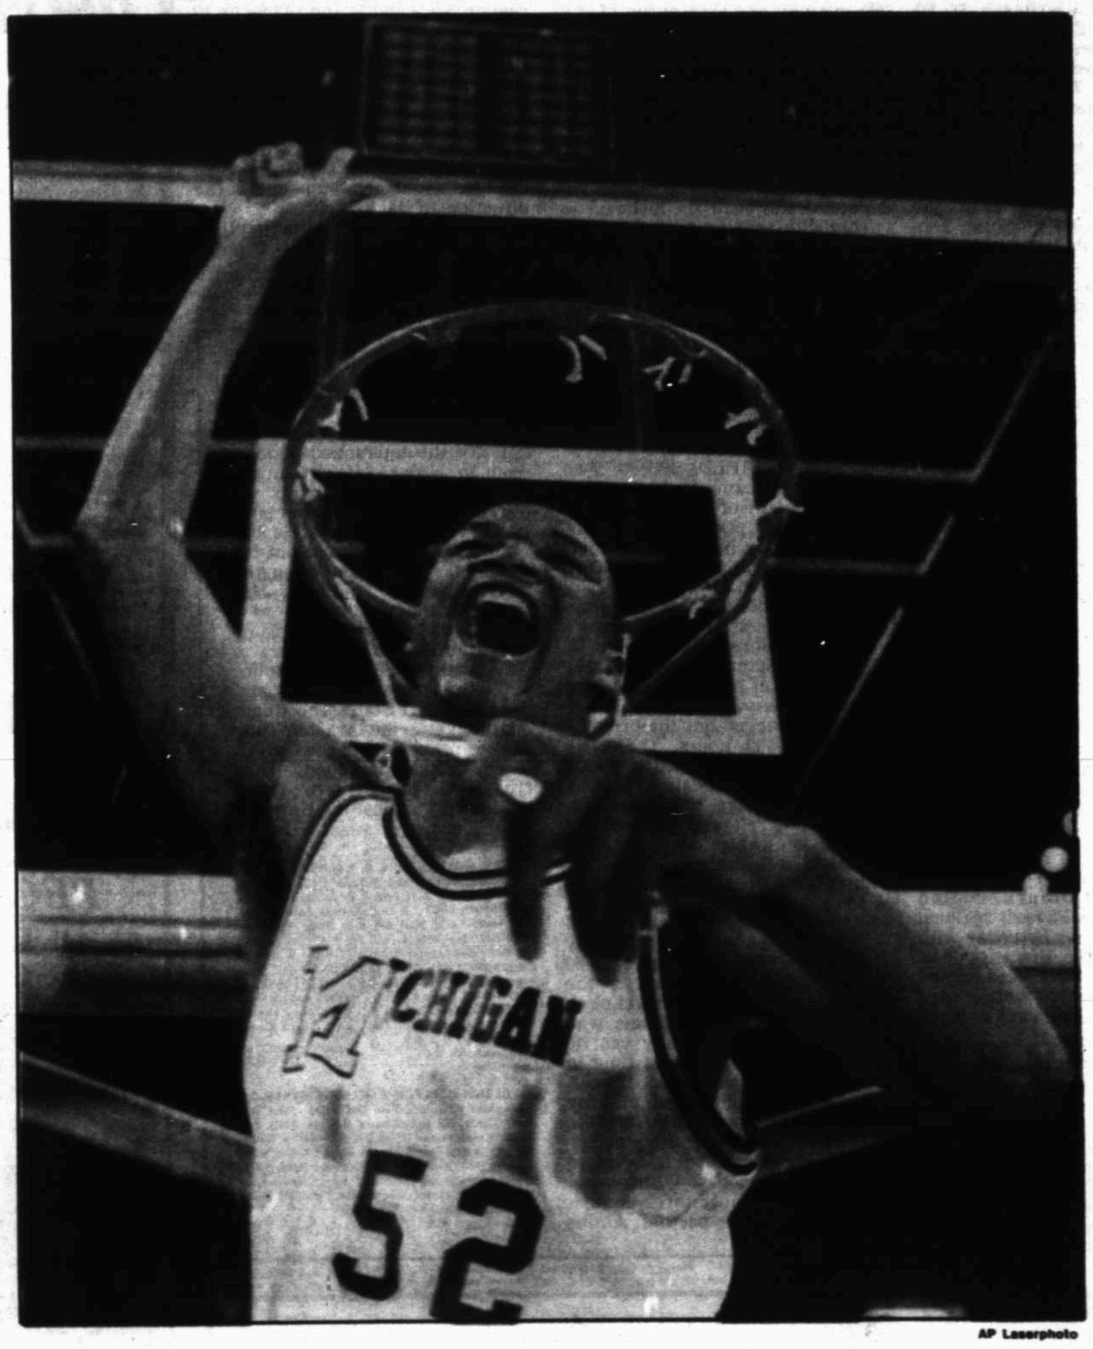

But under Fisher, Michigan has rallied to play as well as it did early this season, when the Wolverines opened with 11 consecutive victories.

Fisher has given the players more freedom on the court and the strategy has worked. The Wolverines are playing as if they are enjoying the tournament.

"Basically, we've changed very little on this team," Fisher said before today's game. "We've got good shooters so it would be foolish to try to change too much."

Rice, the forward with an excellent outside touch, has thrived, especially from 3-point range. Rumeal Robinson, the point guard and team leader, has become more vocal under Fisher, directing the team on the court.

Hall floors Vegas

By THOMAS GEORGE
New York Times News Service

DENVER — Seton Hall is going to the Final Four.

The Pirates won the West Regional championship Saturday, trouncing Nevada-Las Vegas, 84-61, before 16,813 at McNichols Arena.

Seton Hall (30-6) will play the East Regional champion, Georgetown or Duke, on Saturday in the Kingdome in Seattle in the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament semifinal.

Unlikely Seton Hall has done it all.

The road it took to Seattle — through Tucson, Ariz., and then here, through Big Ten champion Indiana and run-and-gun Nevada-Las Vegas — was full of bumps and rocks and booby traps.

But whenever the Pirates hit a snag, they threw a dose of defense and crisp, wondrous passing at their foes. Whenever they needed a lift, there was Andrew Gaze or Anthony Avent or Michael Cooper or Pookey Wiginton.

There was always someone there against UNLV (29-8) as the Pirates, picked by Big East coaches to finish seventh in their conference this season, got the last laugh, cutting down the nets here in a celebration that P.J. Carlesimo, the Seton Hall coach, will long remember.

"I'm very proud of what we accomplished today," Carlesimo said. "We beat an awfully good team and we have certainly become one."

Seton Hall led by 71-51 with 6 minutes, 18 seconds remaining and kept pouring it on.

Gaze scored 19 points to lead Seton Hall. Daryll Walker had 12, Avent 11 and Cooper 10 for the Pirates. Greg Anthony scored 16, hitting on five 3-pointers, for the Runnin' Rebels.

Both teams were diving after loose balls and scrapping for every edge in the first half, which ended with Seton Hall leading by 34-30.

UNLV opened the game as if it wanted to play a combination man-to-man and zone defense, but it quickly got out of that after Andrew Gaze took a weakside pass and ripped in a 3-point shot to give the Pirates the early lead.

Anthony matched Gaze with a 22-footer, and the standard was set early for a battle from the perimeter.

Three minutes into the game, the Pirates' Gerald Greene began mixing the attack. He drove the length of the court and was fouled, making one free throw, then drove inside for a scoop shot that pushed Seton Hall ahead by 8-3.

UNLV, however, remained poised, and Stacey Augmon made the glitzy basket of the half with a perfectly timed slam off Anthony's alley-oop pass, giving UNLV an 11-10 edge with 14:56 remaining.

At that point, Carlesimo decided he needed a quicker lineup. Ramon Ramos was taken out and did not play the rest of the half.

Wiginton and Frantz Volcy joined the starters Morton, Walker and Gaze. But the lineup did not jell without problems. A turnover in the backourt led to a riveting slam by Moses Scurry and a 21-14 U.N.L.V. lead with 8:35 left in the half.

Henson all smiles

Midwest Final

By MIKE NADEL

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Illinois coach Lou Henson uses his isn't-it-great-just-to-be-here attitude. Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim relies on sarcasm.

Regardless of the approach, neither coach seems obsessed about never having won an NCAA title while fielding talented teams year-in and year-out.

"The question is, 'Do I have anything to prove?' The answer is, 'No,'" said Henson, whose third-ranked Illini plays Boeheim's seventh-ranked Orangemen in the NCAA Midwest Regional final Sunday at the Metrodome.

"If we win the ballgame, great. But if we lose, I don't want (Illinois players) to hang their heads, to dwell on whether they win or lose.

"I don't think the players have anything to prove. And, as a coaching staff, I don't think we have anything to prove, either."

If Illinois, 30-4, can win, it would meet No. 10 Michigan next Saturday in Seattle, the Illini's first Final Four appearance since 1952. Only once in Henson's 15 years has Illinois reached a regional final, losing to Kentucky in 1984. The last three years, the Illini made quick exits from the tournament.

Syracuse, 30-7, has had only slightly more postseason success under Boeheim, getting to the Final Four just once in his 13 seasons. That was in 1987, when the Orangemen lost 74-73 to Indiana in the title game.

Unlike Henson, who has been congenial — and even affable — when questioned by the media about his record, Boeheim has been defensive.

After Friday's 83-80 victory over Missouri in the regional semifinals, he was asked about Syracuse's inability to win a title and snapped: "Some questions don't deserve an answer. That's one."

At Saturday's news conference, he said coaches are generally unfairly criticized.

"Good things happen because of players, bad things happen because of coaches," Boeheim said. Later, when asked about Syracuse's problems on the free-throw line, he said: "It must be my coaching. It can't be anything else. It's so consistently bad."

Boeheim and Henson talked quite a bit about the merits of big basketball players.

Henson has spent much of the tournament lamenting his team's lack of size. The Illini's tallest regular is spindly 6-foot-8 forward Marcus Liberty and they may be handicapped further if 6-7 Lowell Hamilton and 6-6 Kenny Battle can't play because of injuries.

Hamilton hurt his ankle early in Friday's 83-69 victory over Louisville and didn't practice Saturday. Battle played sparingly Friday after twisting his knee in practice Thursday, when he slipped on a Metrodome floor that was wet because of leaky roof.

Golden opportunity awaiting Bulldogs

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

It's do or die time for the Midland High soccer team Monday, and Coach Tom Esikhati wants to make sure his team realizes that.

The Bulldogs, 9-5-1, showed signs of rigor mortis in last Tuesday's 5-2 loss to Abilene High, but MHS insiders say the 'Dogs are ready to growl in bi-district playoff action against Wichita Falls Rider, 13-5-3, at 7 p.m. Monday on the Hardin-Simmons University field in Abilene.

"They need to emphasize the importance of this game," Esikhati said. "They need to realize that this is just three steps away from the state tournament."

Monday's winner faces the El Paso High-El Paso Eastwood winner in area playoff action that must be completed by next Saturday.

Esikhati's players say the AHS debacle didn't have much effect on their confidence level, especially when it's considered that the Bulldogs shut the Eagles out from scrimmage.

"We feel pretty confident even after getting beat like that," right forward Shaun Savas said. "We're more motivated to win now."

Not that the Bulldogs weren't fired up in the match against Abilene, which determined where the District 3 co-champions would start playoff competition. But MHS was victimized by two successful penalty kicks and three direct free kicks by AHS midfielder Derek Hailey on a cold, cold day in San Angelo.

Rider knocked off the Bulldogs 1-0 in non-district play earlier this season — on a penalty kick. MHS has the Raiders beat in the speed department, but even the speediest Bulldog — Savas — says his team may need to play down that advantage.

"There's going to be some things that have to change," the senior said. "We have to pass more.

"We had a different plan against Abilene, but we've gone back to controlling the ball and working it upfield."

Lady 'Horns ousted

By JACK KEEVER

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Deanna Tate and Carla Holmes, perhaps the best-kept secrets in women's basketball, scored 32 and 28 points, respectively, Saturday night as No. 5-ranked Maryland advanced to the Final Four with a 79-71 victory over No. 6 Texas.

The victory in the NCAA West Regional basketball tournament stretched the Terrapins string to 21 in a row and ended a 24-game winning streak for Texas, longest in women's basketball this season.

Tate and Carla Holmes, both 5-foot-8 guards, quieted the Texas home crowd of 12,874 — fourth largest in Lady Longhorn history — with their slashing drives, passing and shooting.

Holmes clinched the victory with two free throws and 73-68 lead with 43 seconds left in the game, and added two more free throws on an intentional foul with 10 seconds remaining.

That halted a late Texas rally that started after Texas trailed 50-36.

Maryland led at halftime 38-32, even though Olympic gold medalist and high scorer Vicky Bullett sat out the final 7:02 with two fouls.

Pete Rose gambles with immortality

By HAL BOCK

The gamble for a sports hero, for a man who has achieved success at the top of his craft, is not as simple as win, place or show. It goes well beyond point spreads and favorites or underdogs.

The gamble for a sports hero is the chance of disgrace.

It is a gamble that Pete Rose, who had more hits than any man in the history of baseball, faced last week when the office of the commissioner disclosed that it was conducting "a full inquiry into serious allegations," involving the manager of the Cincinnati Reds.

Sources have said that Rose, arguably the most popular player of his time, is being investigated for heavy involvement in sports gambling, including betting on baseball. That activity that could result in his suspension from the sport for a minimum of one year under major league rule 21-d, which details specific penalties.

What would the impact of a suspension have on Rose's otherwise substantial Hall of Fame credentials, which include 19 records like most hits (4,256), most games played (3,562) and most at-bats (14,053)?

The language of the ballot distributed to 10-year members of the Baseball Writers of America is open to interpretation. It directs the electorate that "voting shall be based upon a player's record, playing ability, integrity, sportsmanship, character, contribution to the team or teams on which he played."

"I can't say how the voters would apply that criteria to a suspension," said Bill Guilfoile, associate director of the Hall of Fame.

It is clear, however, that the writers give heavy consideration to non-statistical factors. Three current Cooperstown candidates — 300-game winner Gaylord Perry, who flaunted his use of the illegal spitball, and slugger Orlando Cepeda and pitcher Ferguson Jenkins, both of whom had brushes with illegal drugs — fell well short of election this year.

And writers routinely wonder whether past involvement with drugs will hurt the future chances of potential candidates like Dave Parker, Keith Hernandez, Dwight Gooden, Willie Wilson and Vida Blue. The same is true of the recent domestic problems of Steve Garvey and Wade Boggs.

It is Guilfoile's task to assemble the list of Hall of Fame candidates each year. To be eligible, a player must have 10 years of service and be retired five years. That list, usually 50 or so players, is passed along to a BBWAA screening committee which decides which players will be on the ballot.

According to Guilfoile, a supension would not change Rose's status when he becomes eligibile in 1992.

Angels fall to Athletics' Double A farm team

From Staff Reports

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Infielder Chris Cron slammed a two-run homer, but the Midland Angels still went down to an 8-3 loss at the hands of the Oakland Athletics' Class AA farm team in exhibition baseball action here Saturday.

Catcher John Orton produced the other Midland run with an RBI single, but starting pitcher Roberto Hernandez allowed all eight runs on six hits in his first four innings.

Gary Buckels, Scott Richardson and Jim Bisceglia then combined for shutout relief over the last five innings.

Bullett, averaging 21.9 points a game, finished with only nine points, just one more than her season low.

Clarissa Davis, recently chosen as Naismith Player of the year in women's basketball, ended her Texas career with a team-high 29 points.

The 6-1 senior scored 2,008 points in four years even though she missed the equivalent of an entire season with injuries.

Tate, Holmes and Bullett all made the All-West Regional team, with Tate selected as the most valuable player.

Davis and freshman Vicki Hall made the team for Texas.

The game was televised nationally by ESPN.

Auburn 77, Mississippi 51

AUBURN, Ala. — Vickie Orr scored 18 points to lead second-ranked Auburn over Mississippi in the women's NCAA Mideast Regional championship.

Auburn, 31-1, now advances to the Final Four in Tacoma, Wash.

The 12th-ranked Lady Rebels, 23-8, jumped out to a 11-9 lead. But Linda Godby came off the bench to score 11 points in a 15-0 run, capping the surge with a free throw with 7:28 remaining for a 24-11 lead.

Cynthia Autry scored 11 points in the next three minutes to pull the Lady Rebels within 29-26 with 3:49 left, but Auburn used an 8-2 run, led by two baskets by Patrena Scruggs in the final 36 seconds, to take a 37-28 halftime lead.

The Lady Tigers scored 16 straight points in the second half to increase the margin to 53-28 with 13:58 remaining and Mississippi never threatened again.

Joyce McGilberry scored 11 points for Auburn, while Scruggs added 10.

Besides Autry, the only Mississippi player in double figures was Teena Bender with 12.

The Lady Tigers limited Mississippi to only 25 percent shooting in the second half and 29 percent for the game.

The Lady Rebels played most of the game without their leading scorer, Kimsey O'Neal, who injured her knee in Thursday's semifinal 68-63 victory over North Carolina State. She played only eight minutes and scored only two points.

Tennessee 94, Long Beach St. 80

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. — Bridgette Gordon scored 33 points as No. 1 Tennessee pulled away in the second half over No. 7 Long Beach State in the final of the NCAA Women's Tournament East Regional.

Leading 59-58 lead with 13:07 left, Tennessee went on a 16-4 run to go ahead by 15 points with 5:53 left.

Long Beach cut the defici to nine twice but could come no closer. Tennessee extended its lead to as much as 17 with 28 seconds left.

It was Tennessee's 15th straight victory and earned the Volunteers a berth in the Final Four in Tacoma, Wash., against the winner of the West Regional.

Tennessee took a 32-19 lead with 5:18 left in the first half before Long Beach State got started. The Lady 49ers then outscored Tennessee 16-7 in the final 4:45 of the half to trail just 39-35 at intermission.

Sheila Frost added 15 points, Daedra Charles 13 and Melissa McCray 11 for Tennessee, now 33-2.

Cheryl Dowell paced Long Beach State, 30-5, with 14 points. Penny Moore and Dana Wilkerson added 13 each.

No. 3 Louisiana Tech 85, No. 4 Stanford 75

RUSTON, La. — Venus Lacy had 20 points and 11 rebounds to lead third-ranked Louisiana Tech to over No. 4 Stanford in the NCAA Midwest regional championship game Saturday, sending the Lady Techsters to the Final Four for the third consecutive year.

Tech, 32-3, advanced to a Friday matchup with Auburn, which claimed the NCAA Mideast regional championship earlier Saturday with a 77-51 victory over Mississippi.

Stanford, which advanced to the final eight for the first time, ended its season at 28-3, breaking 22-game winning streak.

Despite shooting 38.4 percent from the field to Stanford's 46.8 percent, the Lady Techsters led throughout the game and shot ahead by as much as held its biggest lead at 19 points, 62-43, on a layup by Lacy with 13:54 to play.

Stanford came within seven points, 67-60, when Jennifer Azzi hit a 12-foot jump shot with 7:03 to play.

Norman takes USF&G lead

PGA

By AUSTIN WILSON

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Greg Norman, fully recovered from a wrist injury that hampered him last year, shot his third straight 68 Saturday to take the lead after three rounds of the USF&G Classic.

Norman tore tendons in his left wrist last summer when his club hit a submerged boulder in the second round of the U.S. Open. He missed nearly two months of play and was slowed by the injury for the rest of the year.

His 54-hole score of 12-under-par 204 put him one shot ahead of Tim Simpson, who entered the day tied for the lead with Dan Forsman and shot a 70.

Forsman had a 71 and wound up tied with Hal Sutton at 206. Sutton shot a 67.

Sutton eagled No. 11 and birdied Nos. 1, 10 and 15. His eagle came on a 305-yard drive, a 240-yard 4-iron and a putt of less than six inches.

Tom Kite, seeking a third straight tournament victory, shot a 74 and was at 213, nine strokes off the lead. The last golfer to win three in a row was Gary Player, who did it in 1978.

Kite bogeyed his second hole, bogeyed the fifth, double-bogeyed No. 10, then had birdies on 11,,16 and 17 before closing with another bogey on 18.

Norman had six birdies and two bogeys. He two-putted from 10 feet on No. 5 for a bogey and two-putted from 12 feet on No. 18.

His shortest birdie putt was a five-footer on the second hole. He sank birdie putts of 15 feet on No. 7, 30 feet on No. 9 and 14 and 12 feet on 12 and 13.

Simpson, who had three birdies, had a chance to tie for the lead but made only his second bogey of the tournament on the final hole.

The tournament is the first professional event at the 7,106-yard, par-72 course at English Turn, a course dredged from a swamp under the direction of Jack Nicklaus.

The sun came out for the first time since torrential rains on Tuesday and Wednesday threatened to turn the course back into a marsh.

Chap netters impressive

From Staff Reports

SPRINGFIELD, MO — Two university teams couldn't take a set from any of the Midland College tennis players here Saturday, as the Chaps began a five-day spring tour. The Chaparral men knocked off the University of Evansville, Ill., 9-0, while the women trounced Illinois State 6-0 in an abbreviated match.

Action Saturday was almost as fouled-up as the trip to Missouri for the Chaps, whose van breakdowns dragged out the drive by an extra 12 hours. The Chap women were supposed to play a second match against Murray State, Kentucky, but three Murray State players came down with mononucleosis so that match was cancelled. Another match for the men slated against Iowa State also was wiped out when Iowa State was a no-show.

The MC men are slated to play Southwest Missouri State at 1:30 p.m. today. In addition to the wins, there was more good news for MC coach Joe Williams, who was able to use Tonny van de Pieterman for the first time in more than two weeks. Pieterman, who had been playing number one singles and doubles, has been sidelined with a mysterious leg injury. But he warmed up and felt good, so Williams put him in at number three doubles with his regular partner, Amine Boustani. Pieterman and Boustani are the top-ranked doubles team in junior college tennis.

"Neither of the teams we played today was especially strong for Division I schools, but we'll have our work cut out for us Sunday afternoon when the men go against Southwest Missouri," Williams said.

On Monday, still in Springfield, the Chaparral men are to play Southwest Baptist, Missouri, while the women take on Southwest Missouri State. The Chaps go to Fayetteville, Ark., on Tuesday for practice with the University of Arkansas squads. They finish their tour in Tulsa Wednesday against the University of Tulsa.

Introducing the new Macintosh IIcx.

Meet the extraordinary Apple® Macintosh® IIcx.

With the Motorola 68030 microprocessor, it's every bit as powerful and fast as our top-of-the-line Macintosh IIx—in a smaller size.

Because of its size and flexible design, you can put the Macintosh IIcx on top of your desk. Or below. Stack it horizontally under a monitor. Or vertically beside it.

And because the Macintosh IIcx is expandable, you can choose from a variety of monitors, keyboards, and other peripherals to build the system that meets your needs, your workspace, and your work style.

Stop in, and try one on for size.

MICHIGAN

In last Thursday's victory against North Carolina, Robinson chastised Rice late in the game for not concentrating on defense.

"We have a desire right now," Robinson said. "We felt we embarrassed ourselves during the season, losing games we shouldn't have. I got upset at Glen, I get a little hot-headed at times."

Virginia had focused its offense on Richard Morgan, the senior guard, and Bryant Stith, an unheralded freshman forward. Saturday, though, neither was on target. Stith scored only 9 points and Morgan had 15, making only 5 of 18 field-goal attempts.

The Cavaliers are not especially big, but much of their success in the tournament could be attributed to their success in rebounding.

There were not many rebounds available in the first half, however, as Rice continued his incredible shooting display. He made 9 of 10 field-goal attempts, among them all three from 3-point range. He had 21 points lifting Michigan to a comfortable 44-25 lead.

Morgan, meanwhile, was held scoreless for the first 16 minutes and Stith had just 2 points. Virginia could not compensate for their lack of offense, although the point guard John Crotty scored 8 points to keep his team in range with 8 minutes 10 seconds to play in the half.

Then Michigan put on another offensive burst with just about everyone in the lineup taking part. The Wolverines outscored Virginia, 15-5, with Robinson contributing his first points of the game and Rice adding a pair of jumpers.

By the time Morgan finally scored — a 3-pointer with 3:41 remaining — Michigan's lead was 39-22. Morgan hit another jumper moments later but Higgins, who will likely succeed Rice as Michigan's main offensive threat next year, added a basket and free throw in the closing minute, giving him 13 points.

Rice closed out an almost perfect half for the Wolverines, converting an off-balance jumper.

HALL

Carlesimo called a timeout and inserted Avent, a 6-9 sophomore forward. For the next four minutes, Avent carried the Pirates. He scored on a 3-point play, nailed a baseline jumper, scored on the end of a fast break and grabbed two defensive rebounds.

Avent's 7 consecutive points helped Seton Hall catch the Rebels at 24-24 with 5:45 remaining. And during that stretch, Seton Hall extended its defense and harassed the Runnin' Rebels, who finished the half shooting only 28.9 percent on 11-of-38 shooting.

Two critical plays for Seton Hall came in the final 1:35 of the half. A loose ball near midcourt bounced off at least six hands before Wiginton, sprawled across the floor between two Rebels, snatched the ball and passed it quickly to Morton, who was fouled. Morton made one free throw, giving Seton Hall a 31-27 lead.

Then, with 30 seconds left, Nick Katsikis, who is making a habit of coming off the bench cold and hitting a 3-point shot, did it again.

David Butler led UNLV with 9 first-half points and Scurry had eight rebounds. UNLV outrebounded Seton Hall in the half by 23-16 and made seven fewer turnovers than the Pirates' 12. But Seton Hall shot 44.8 percent from the floor, although Morton missed all five of his shots from the floor. Gaze, who contributed in nearly every category for Seton Hall, made three steals.

In the second half, after Seton Hall led by 46-45 with 14:09 remaining, UNLV was blitzed in a manner much like the one it is used to employing itself.

The Rebels went the next 5:06 without scoring a basket. Gaze hit a 3-point shot; Volcy scored inside; Michael Cooper scored on a pass from Wigington, and Greene made a 3-point play. By the end of the spurt, the Rebels were trailing by 60-45.

ILLINI

"On Hamilton, we don't know. We're treating him," Henson said. "On Battle, we're hoping he'll be better but I know he's not going to be at full strength. We have two players who are our primary inside defenders who both might be out. It really hurts us. Syracuse is tough inside.

"Syracuse has a great fit because they're big. (Derrick) Coleman is a 6-9 guy who can rebound with any player in the country. And they have Owens (6-9 freshman Billy Owens).

"I think we have a good fit, too. We'd just like to have a little more size. Maybe we can do it without it. These guys (his players) think they can." Boeheim thinks that, with all their players ranging between 6-4 and 6-7, the Illini have as much overall team size as anybody.

Smith planning comeback against Duke

By BILL BARNARD

East Final

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Charles Smith, who played the role of El Cid against North Carolina State, hopes to return as Charles Smith on Sunday when Georgetown meets Duke in the NCAA East Regional final.

Smith, after missing practice for two days because of fever, played 32 minutes in the Hoyas' 69-61 victory over North Carolina State Friday night, but was used mainly as a decoy. He took only two shots from the field and scored one point.

"It was like the El Cid story, where they propped him up even though he was dead and went out to fight the battle," Georgetown coach John Thompson said Saturday. "We just put Charles out there and it makes everyone else feel better even when he can't be as active as he usually is."

Smith, Georgetown's leading scorer with an 18.6 average, had 34 points in a second-round victory over Notre Dame, but he had to help the Hoyas in other ways against the Wolfpack.

Dwayne Bryant and Jaren Jackson took over the outside scoring chores, scoring 21 and 17 points, respectively, and combining for eight 3-pointers.

"My presence on the court made it easier for Dwayne and Jaren," Smith said. "North Carolina State overplayed me and that helped the other guys. But I'm feeling fine and I'm not running a fever now. I should be ready for Duke."

Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said that he would prepare his team with the assumption that Smith would be at full strength.

"Our major concern is us; we don't fluctuate too much from game to game," Krzyzewski said. "We run a system that works against everybody. You assume the other team will be 100 percent, individually and collectively.

"I don't want our guys going to the game thinking about injuries — theirs or ours."

But Krzyzewski said he wished Smith would follow the advice of North Carolina State coach Jim Valvano:

"Eat some chicken soup and stay in bed for a couple of days."

Georgetown, 29-4, and Duke, 27-7, which routed Minnesota 87-70 in Friday's other semifinal, are the top two seeds in the East Regional.

Duke will be looking for its third Final Four appearance in four years — the other two came with wins at the Meadowlands — while Georgetown is trying to duplicate the national championship it won in 1984 at Seattle, the site of this year's Final Four.

But the two teams haven't faced each other since 1933, when Duke won 35-30.

"I'm surprised we haven't run into each other in a tournament somewhere along the line," Krzyzewski said.

The game matches two 6-foot-10 freshman centers — Georgetown's Alonzo Mourning and Christian Laettner.

Mourning scored 12 points and matched his nation-leading average with five blocked shots against the Wolfpack. Laettner had 10 points and 11 rebounds against Minnesota, the second time in two games at the Meadowlands in which he had double figures in points and rebounds.

"It won't be Christian against Mourning all the time," Krzyzewski said. "Georgetown runs so much that you can't have one man guarding one man every time down the court."

Rockets walk all over Warriors, 144-104

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Akeem Olajuwon and Buck Johnson each scored 24 points as the Houston Rockets crushed the Golden State Warriors 144-104 Saturday night.

The 144 points and 65 rebounds were the most in both categories by the Rockets this season. With the victory, the eighth for Houston in its last nine meetings with Golden State, the Rockets snapped a two-game home losing streak.

Mitch Richmond led the Warriors led with 21 points and Terry Teagle added 20.

For Houston, Sleepy Floyd added 23 points. Otis Thorpe scored 18 points and pulled down 12 rebounds. Olajuwon had 15 rebounds.

Houston used a 9-0 run in the final two minutes of the first period to build a 36-23 lead over Golden State, which never led.

With the Rockets ahead 79-60 with 8:06 to play in the third quarter, Floyd hit a 3-point basket and Thorpe followed with a lay-up to begin a 16-2 run that ended with the Rockets up 96-62 with 5:24 left in the third.

Buck Johnson was 10 of 12 from the field and the Rockets were 55 of 99 for the game.

Houston took control by outscoring Golden State 34-18 in the third quarter.

Heat 107, Spurs 105

MIAMI — Pearl Washington scored two baskets and set up two more in an early fourth-quarter run that helped the Miami Heat, who last scored with 3:27 remaining, to a victory over the San Antonio Spurs.

The victory is the second straight and the third in the last four home games for Miami, 12-55. It was San Antonio's fourth straight loss and its 15th in a row on the road.

With the score tied at 86-86, Washington hit a short shot and then added a pull-up jumper from the line.

NBA

He then fed Jon Sundvold for two long jumpers that put the Heat ahead 94-86 with 9:50 left to play.

The Spurs scored the next five points, but Washington passed to Sundvold, who scored eight of 16 points in the fourth quarter, for another jumper. Scott Hastings hit two free throws and Grant Long added a three-point play that made it 101-91 with 7:38 remaining.

Bullets 111, Pacers 108

LANDOVER, Md. — Ledell Eackles hit key lay-ups in the closing minute of regulation and again in overtime as the Washington Bullets beat the Indiana Pacers to extend their home winning streak to 11 games.

The Bullets, who have won 10 straight at the Capital Centre and another in Baltimore, have not lost at home since Feb. 4.

Mark Alarie scored 18 of his career-high 22 in the second half, including seven in the fourth quarter, helping the Bullets rally.

Pistons 113, Hornets 101

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Bill Laimbeer made eight of his nine shots for 16 points as the Detroit Pistons shot 60 percent from the field en route to a victory over the Charlotte Hornets.

Laimbeer also grabbed 11 rebounds as the Pistons improved their record to 49-17 with their 13th victory in their last 14 games.

Eight Detroit players finished in double figures, as the Pistons took a 23-point lead on a 3-point basket by reserve center James Edwards with 7:18 remaining.

Bucks 113, Cavaliers 105, OT

MILWAUKEE — Ricky Pierce scored 29 points, including seven in overtime, as the Milwaukee Bucks defeated the Cleveland Cavaliers.

The loss dropped the Cavaliers one game behind first-place Detroit in the Central Division.

Brad Daugherty scored 30 points and Mark Price added 22 for the Cavaliers.

Jazz 112, Nuggets 90

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone scored 37 points and the Utah Jazz broke open a close game in the third quarter, defeating Denver to snap the Nuggets' five-game winning streak.

Bobby Hansen added 15 points for the first-place Jazz, who increased their lead to six games over third-place Denver in the the Midwest Division.

Hawks 115, Knicks 108

NEW YORK — Dominique Wilkins had 34 points and Moses Malone scored 21 of his 27 in the second half as the Atlanta Hawks defeated the New York Knicks.

The loss was the second in the last three home games for the Knicks.

Tarpley unaware of drug ring's reputation, history

DALLAS (AP) — An interstate drug ring linked to two slayings sold cocaine to Dallas Mavericks forward Roy Tarpley, a Dallas County prosecutor said.

Tarpley did not know that the people he bought drugs from were so dangerous, Assistant District Attorney Cecil Emerson told The Dallas Morning News.

"When he heard about the murders, he started gasping. He almost fell out of his chair," Emerson said.

Emerson said Tarpley, who has been suspended from play since Jan. 5 for violation of the NBA's drug policy, met voluntarily with the district attorney's office Thursday. He returned to Dallas from a California treatment center last week.

Tarpley's name surfaced during an investigation of a cocaine ring believed to be operating out of Dallas, Detroit and Milwaukee, Emerson said. No charges will be filed against Tarpley, the prosecutor said.

"He had no connection to these major drug traffickers except for being a user," Emerson said.

Prosecutors also do not plan to subpoena Tarpley as a witness for any trials or grand jury hearings connected to the cocaine traffickers, Emerson added.

"The man turned himself in," Emerson said. "He's trying to change his life. ... The evidence is insufficient to charge him with anything."

Tarpley was accompanied at the meeting by his lawyer, Jay Ethington; NBA director of security Horace Balmer; and local NBA representative Ben Nix. The 24-year-old forward, who won the Sixth Man Award in 1988 as the NBA's top reserve, admitted buying and using cocaine while playing for the Mavericks, even after he first sought help for alcohol and cocaine dependency in July 1987, Emerson said.

Tarpley could not be reached for comment by The News and the Mavericks have asked that reporters not talk to him while he is recovering from the latest drug incident.

Tarpley's agent, George Andrews, said Friday: "I don't feel it would be fair to comment, and I don't know why the DA's office would say anything for publication anyway."

Tarpley also told prosecutors that he falsified drug tests required by the NBA after he was first placed under league restrictions in 1987, Emerson said. To beat the urine tests, Emerson said, Tarpley apparently either obtained urine samples from other people and turned them in as his own or collected and saved vials of urine when he was "clean."

Investigators said Tarpley's drug suppliers were believed to be mid-level distributors in an interstate drug ring that has been under investigation for almost eight months.

Frederick Rollin Hood, 31, who police believe headed the drug ring in Dallas, was found slain last September. The remains of Toyia Wooten, an 18-year-old New Orleans college student who had come to visit Hood in Dallas last September, were found on March 2 in southeastern Dallas County.

Boston wins thriller over LA

Associated Press

It wasn't as dramatic as Carlton Fisk's famous home run in the 1975 World Series. It wasn't as emotional as Kirk Gibson's last October. Luis Rivera's home run on Saturday did, however, help his prospects of making the team.

Rivera's three-run homer in the bottom of the 15th inning gave the Boston Red Sox a 5-2 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Some teams call it a tie after 11 or 12 innings in spring training. Boston is not one of them.

"When conditions permit, you play baseball to a conclusion," said Boston Manager Joe Morgan, who was at Pawtucket for a 33-inning game in 1981 that set the professional record.

With one out in the 15th, Gary Tremblay doubled off Jim Neidlinger, 0-1. Sam Horn was walked intentionally and Rivera hit a 2-1 pitch for his first spring homer and Boston's fourth consecutive victory. Rivera, acquired from Montreal, is competing with Ed Romero for a utility job.

Mets 5, Astros 3

Darryl Strawberry hit his second home run in two days, his fourth this spring, and hit a sacrifice fly.

Reds 4, Pirates 3

Second baseman Sammy Khalifa's two-run error set up a four-run second inning.

Danny Jackson, 2-0, allowed eight hits and three runs and walked five in six innings.

Twins 2, Tigers 1

Kirby Puckett hit a two-run single in the sixth and Frank Viola, 1-2, allowed seven hits in six innings.

Cardinals 4, Blue Jays 2

Nelson Simmons snapped an eighth-inning tie with a two-run single and Vince Coleman drove in two runs.

Expos 9, Braves 4

Tom Foley hit a three-run homer in the fifth inning to give Montreal an 8-1 lead.

Rangers 4, Phillies 2

Cecil Espy hit a two-run triple to snap a sixth-inning tie.

Curt Ford's solo homer in the top of the inning had tied the score 1-1 in the sixth. Espy broke the tie with his hit, then scored on Bobby Meacham's second squeeze bunt this spring.

Royals 4, White Sox 2

Charlie Leibrandt, rookie Tom Gordon and Jerry Don Gleaton no-hit the White Sox over the final seven innings.

Brewers 7, Indians 6

LaVel Freeman hit a sacrifice fly to deep center in the 11th inning off Brad Havens, 1-1.

Padres 4, Cubs 2

Bruce Hurst won his fourth game of the spring, striking struck out eight in seven innings and allowing five hits. Hurst, 4-1, has 27 strikeouts in 30 innings. Greg Harris relieved and Mark Davis pitched a two-hit ninth for his fourth save.

Giants 3, Mariners 1

Kelly Downs, 1-2, scattered five hits over seven innings and Donell Nixon scored twice on wild pitches.

"Shoeless Joe Jackson could be elected by the Oldtimers' Committee," he said. "As far as the Hall of Fame is concerned, he's eligible."

Jackson was one of eight players barred from baseball for life following the 1919 Black Sox scandal. He is alleged to have conspired with Buck Weaver, Ed Cicotte, Fred McMullen, Happy Felsch, Lefty Williams, Chick Gandel, and Swede Risberg to fix the World Series against Cincinnati. Despite a number of investigations which seemed to exonerate him, he never was returned to baseball's good graces.

However, when the first Hall of Fame vote was conducted in 1936, Jackson, whose career batting average of .356 was third highest in history, received two votes. And, as recently as last month, Leo Durocher, who was suspended from baseball for the 1947 season because of alleged involvement with gamblers, got 10 votes from the Oldtimers Committee, six short of election.

"The main job of the commissioner is to uphold the integrity of the game," Kuhn said. "I thought their employment with casinos was inconsistent with any employment in baseball."

DOGS

The Bulldogs have been relying on long passes to Savas on the right and David Allen on the left for much of the season, a fact reflected in season goal-scoring statistics. Savas leads the team with 15 goals, while midfielder Shane Barden has seven and Allen four.

Midfield play may be the key, Esikhati said. The Bulldogs offer the likes of sophomore co-captain Jeff Lanning at a halfback, while Rider's leading scorer is center half Michael Middlesworth.

"Our midfield has to be more involved," Esikhati said. "We're playing a team that is very good at ball control and switching direction."

Defensively, the Bulldogs could get a boost with the expected return of stopper Mike Savas, who missed most of district play with a hairline leg fractuce but was cleared to practice beginning this past Thursday.

Otherwise, standout sweeper Sikes Johnson and fellow fullback Jeff Ehler help keep pressure off goalkeeper Bryant Mueller — not that Mueller normally needs that much help.

Tuesday was an exception for the Bulldog sophomore. All three of Hailey's direct kicks seemed within reach, but a gusty wind made judgment difficult and two of the kicks just glanced off the keeper's fingers.

That's all in the past, however, Mueller said.

"I just have to put it out of my mind. It got me down pretty bad, but I can't go into the next game thinking about it," Mueller said.

The Bulldog keeper said Rider poses enough challenges without carrying over any baggage from the past.

"Rider controls the ball well. They can take the ball out of the air and make it hard for me to distribute the ball to my players.

"It will keep me talking to my defense."

Midland's February loss to the Raiders is enough to keep the 'Dogs humble, Mueller added.

"We're not cocky about this game since we didn't win the last time. We realize that we'll have to play pretty intense.

"But I think the loss against Abilene woke us up."

Except for the deciding penalty kick — a shot hard for any keeper to stop — Mueller did quite well against the Raiders in their early-season matchup, with 11 saves.

But Midland misfired on all 10 shots off Rider keeper Danny Holland, as the sophomore Raider keeper notched one of his 11 regular-season shutouts.

Rider, which has made the playoffs every year since the soccer program was started three years ago, blanked Wichita Falls High last Friday to win the District 3 championship after tying the Coyotes twice earlier in the season.

Wichita Falls High also tied Midland High in the Bulldogs' season opener.

An Easter Surprise

As Peter Cottontail was hopping down the bunny trail in Green Tree North late last night, he surely must have enjoyed visiting this week's featured home. Built a year ago, the elegant interior of the home was designed for a large family. The home is highlighted by two living areas, a study and an upstairs gameroom — with many windows overlooking the backyard pool and Green Tree Country Club golf course.

This four bedroom and four bath home is situated on a large lot that is landscaped with Live oak trees. A brick archway leads to the front door which opens into a spacious tile entry. The entry flows into the formal living room, with the formal dining room situated to the right.

VIVID TEAL walls span 15 feet high into a white ceiling creating a dramatic contrast in the formal living room. A wall of windows brighten this room as well as provide a lovely view of the backyard pool and golf course.

Three walls in the formal dining room are decorated in a floral wallcovering that features soft hues of rose, blue, taupe and green. A large window along one wall views the front yard and the open flow between the dining and living room is ideal when entertaining.

A door from the dining room opens into wonderfully arranged kitchen and breakfast room. The U-shaped kitchen has a central work island with a General Electric cooktop. The kitchen sink is placed below a corner window that has a great view of a lake on the north part of the golf course. The other General Electric appliances include a self-cleaning oven, microwave, trash compactor and dishwasher. The breakfast area is situated across from the kitchen and these rooms are decorated in a country print wallpaper in two complimentary patterns with a border highlighting this large room.

ALTHOUGH THE kitchen and breakfast room open into the family room — creating an enormous area for family fun — two built-in cabinets visually separate these rooms. The cabinet which is located by the ovens in the kitchen can be used as a breakfast bar and is also ideal as a desk. The cabinet by the breakfast table is perfect for storage and can double as a server when entertaining.

The family room focuses on a fireplace with a brick hearth that curves around into the corner of the room. An adjacent wall has three large windows that views the backyard. A mother can easily keep a watch on small children as they play from this area.

A hall next to the kitchen and family room leads to the utility room and three car garage with an automatic door opener. A half-bath is situated off the utility room and a door provides access to the backyard pool. Another door in this hall leads to the front yard, where children and their friends can come and go from the front and backyards.

A PRIVATE study is located to the left of the entry. Hunter green walls with a mallard duck border fashionably decorate the study which offers a quiet retreat when working at home on the computer. Three vertical windows provide lots of sunshine into this room.

The tile entry leads past the study to three of the home's bedrooms. The first bedroom has a pale wallcovering in shades of pink, purple and cream. A private bath with a bathtub and a walk-in closet with built-ins are the other amenities of this children's bedroom.

The second bedroom is well-suited for a boy of any age due to the blue walls and a complimentary wallpaper and border. This room has a spacious closet and a private dressing area.

DUE TO its location and decor — right across from the master bedroom — the third bedroom is ideal as a nursery for a smaller child. A lamb motif wallpaper in shades of a pale green adorn the walls of this room which also has a dressing area and a walk-in closet. A door leads into the bathing area of a bathroom which is shared by the second bedroom.

Please see EASTER, Page 3D

The master bedroom has pale peach walls that are highlighted by a fashionable border around the cathedral ceiling.

The tile entry leads to the formal dining room which is situated to the right of the front door.

EASTER

The master bedroom is sequestered from the other bedrooms and is situated off the formal living area. A wall of windows view the backyard and a door provides a private access to the pool. This room has pale peach walls and a cathedral ceiling.

A door opens into a large bath that is decorated in shades of rose. The bath has two separate vanities, a tile tub and a built-in shower. The bath also has a uniquely designed walk-in closet with a his-and-her side. Each side has built-in cabinets for storage.

Although the master bedroom affords lots of privacy away from the children's bedrooms, a door in the bathroom leads to the children's wing of the home so parents can check on their children at night without having to walk through the formal living room.

A staircase across from the study leads upstairs to a large gameroom. This room can easily accommodate a pool or ping-pong table, as well as a large sitting area. There are also two closets for storage and a window seat.

The other amenities of this approximately 4,200 square foot home are rose colored carpeting, ceiling fans, crown moulding and sprinkler system.

First Realty of Midland/Better Homes and Garden is offering this home for $289,000.

George Wolf/Reporter-Telegram

One of the most appealing areas in the home are the kitchen and breakfast room. The kitchen is designed around a central work island and these are visually divided from the family room by two multi-functional cabinets.

Experienced associates at Chaparral provide professional service

David Pine of Chaparral, Realtors has many associates, including Reecia Pigman, Becky St. John and Patti Wallace, who help Chaparral to remain a professional, full-service real estate company.

Pigman

After moving to Midland from Pecos last year to pursue her real estate career, Reecia Pigman was ready for a new challenge.

"I decided before I put my real estate career on the self, that I needed a new challenge and moving to Midland would give me a new experience as a Realtor," explained Pigman. "I feel my choice to move here was a right one. I love Midland and its people. I believe the growth potential and opportunity are the best in West Texas."

Pigman and her husband, Reeves County Judge W.O. Pigman, have owned their own real estate firm in Pecos since 1978. "Before I began my real estate career , I had owned and managed a ladies speciality shop in Pecos. When I 'retired' from that business, I wanted a profession I could enjoy with a small investment in inventory," stated Pigman. "I have also enjoyed the challenge of going back to school and earning my GRI (Graduate Realtors Institute) designation."

After having several years in management, Pigman is enjoying the personal production and identity challenge that a career here affords her. She was associated with Home Realty for four months where she gained a tremendous experience and many contacts in that office.

"My move to Chaparral, Realtors has offered another far-reaching source of opportunity for me. Chaparral is an office full of aggressive, self-motivated Realtors. Many have had their own businesses of various nature and they know the meaning of self-employment. It makes for a very responsible group," she added.

Through her many years in Pecos, Pigman has been involved with many clubs and civic organizations. She has spent a great deal of time in public life since her husband has been involved in local politics all of their married life, having served as the mayor of Pecos before being elected as county judge. Pigman is also looking forward to her association with the Midland Board of Realtors.

Working with the various offices and personalities of very professional, aggressive and highly motivated men and women, Pigman finds exciting and very rewarding. Through her association with Chaparral, she has been given a tremendous exposure as a Midland Realtor. "I enjoy the friendly and 'homey' atmosphere that this company offers its agents. I can only benefit greatly from my experience and training that my association with Chaparral affords me," she concluded.

Patti Wallace, a native of San Antonio, began her real estate career with Chaparral, Realtors eight months ago and has already achieved over $1 million in sales. She has lived in Midland for the past 12 years and has developed a deep love and admiration for the Midland community.

Wallace

"Midland has a uniqueness all of its own that comes from the people who live here," she explains. "From all walks of life, they radiate what I call the 'Midland spirit' — warmth, caring, commitment and camaraderie.

After graduating from Southern Methodist University with a B.A. in Education, Patti taught school in San Antonio and Midland. She has served the Midland community in many capacities that include Pi Beta Phi Alumnae, Act IX Theatre Guild, Junior League of Midland, Inc., Ballet Midland and the American Cancer Society Board.

Working with the people of Midland in a professional capacity as an associate of Chaparral is very challenging to Patti. Becoming a Realtor is a dream that she began to pursue 11 years ago.

"Having a builder as a husband, I was involved daily in the business as an observer and I felt that his was a profession that I have possible talents in. Chuck and I have worked together in many projects in the community and really feel that we definitely will enjoy being able to work together as real estate agents for Chaparral," she concluded. "I hope I can live up to the 'Midland spirit' that I so admire.

Prior to her association with Chaparral, Realtors, Becky St. John had been in real estate for four years after receiving her license in 1978. She then became affiliated with the mortgage and loan department at Banc Home, currently Olney Savings, and became a licensed insurance agent in 1986.

"During the time that I was affiliated with Banc Home, I also kept up with my real estate interests. Two years ago, I became associated with Home Realty which is a division of Banc Home. My move to Chaparral has enabled me to be a part of a full-service real estate company and I have been challenged by the many opportunities that I have encountered," she explained.

St. John

St. John is a native Midlander who enjoys the flexibility that a career in real estate affords her. "Even though the hours a Realtor must keep at times can be more than an eight to five job, I like being able to schedule the hours that I work," said St. John.

"Purchasing a home is one of the greatest investments a person makes in their life and this decision can be a very emotional one. I enjoy getting to know both the buyers and sellers and enabling a smooth transition for everyone involved," concluded St. John. "Chaparral, Realtors has given me the opportunity to be as successful as I am capable of being and to achieve many new goals."

St. John is a member of the Midland Board of Realtors, the Texas Association of Realtors and the National Association of Realtors. She is also a member of the Uptown Chaper of Business and Professional Women.

Culver attends relocation conference

Louise Culver, president of Carriage Company, Realtors, has just returned from the annual Network 50 Relocation Conference in Phoenix, Arizona. Network 50, Merrill Lynch Realty's full service international referral network, was the host for over 250 industry professionals who met to address today's prevalent relocation issues.

"The annual Network 50 conference gives relocation professionals from across the country the opportunity to share success stories and to discuss new ideas," Culver stated. "The workshops and seminars focus on new ways to provide quality service and innovative products to the transferee while still meeting the financial objective of the corporate client."

Speakers at the conference introduced exclusive new products and comprehensive programs specifically designed to sharpen members' real estate and relocation skills. Speakers also reflected on the success of Network 50 in 1988, and discussed aggressive future goals for 1989.

Louise Culver

"This past year was a record breaking year for Network 50 with over 65,000 referrals and a 20 percent conversion rate," said Richard E. Schwartz, president of Network 50. "With plans to expand, as well as to strengthen the membership through new products development, we will surpass these accomplishments during 1989."

Culver reports that Carriage Company, Realtors, has been a member of Network 50 for the past two years. This premier organization is an affiliate of Merrill Lynch Realty and has a membership of over 300 independent firms like Carriage and more than 35,000 associated professional real estate agents. Relocation assistance is provided throughout the United States, Canada and other countries. Merrill Lynch Realty is one of the nation's leading full-service real estate companies whose principal lines of business include real estate brokerage, relocation management and residential mortgage financing.

Cooper explains what traits to look for when selecting a real estate agent

A winning personality and a firm handshake are not useful criteria to determine the marketing expertise of an agent. According to Brian Cooper, it may be in your best interest to avoid a relationship when the agent fails to carefully explore what you actually need.

Cooper

The agent you seek should be one whose concern generates pertinent questions about you and your objectives. That agent will provide you a number of alternatives to use in developing a successful marketing strategy. An effective marketing strategy goes beyond placing ads in the newspaper, insertion in a Multiple Listing Service, or holding an open house.

Selecting a real estate agent who will represent only your interest is vital when structuring a real estate transaction. Numerous details, technical hurdles and special provisions are encountered in every transaction. To best protect you, the agent you select must be more concern with how the transaction affects you, rather than how soon he can get paid.

The precision and care of the concerned, professional agent may cause your transaction to start a little more slowly, explained Cooper. But it is not better for you to have your agent make a thorough investigation of all aspects of the documents and potential transactions before acting?

You can spot the professional agent by the thoroughness of his approach. Often your needs may be substantially different from what you think you want. An agent who uses the counseling approach, one of listening to you and gathering information from you, is on the right track. The counseling approach will stimulate your thinking and possibly develop more desirable alternatives that might otherwise be overlooked.

Cooper advises selecting a professional agent to represent you who is:

- Thorough in his or her search for detailed information concerning your needs.
- Interested in why you need to change ownership at this time.
- Concern about what you intend to accomplish.
- Knowledgeable about the price and terms that can be obtained in today's market.
- Willing to realistically interpret current market conditions even when that indicates something you may not want to hear.
- In constant pursuit of education, continually upgrading his knowledge by attending appropriate seminars. (Don't be afraid to ask you agent about his educational program.)

When you find these characteristics in an agent, your chances for a comfortable, successful and profitable transaction are excellent.

Brian Cooper, GRI, CRS is co-owner of First Realty of Midland, Better Homes and Gardens.

ASK ABOUT REAL ESTATE

Bargains in foreclosed real estate, investment properties discussed

By DON G. CAMPBELL

One man's misfortune, sure enough, is frequently another man's opportunity.

Dear Mr. Campbell: Could you please give any information you have on the subject of foreclosed Real Estate and investment opportunities in foreclosed property? Also, I would like to now if California has a "deficiency judgment" as it pertains to defaults going to sale. Mr. R.B., Joshua Tree, Calif.

Answer: Aha! You've been reading those advertisements and seeing those television commercials about making "fabulous fortunes" in foreclosures. Well, there's some truth in it it is, indeed, possible to find bargains in foreclosed Real Estate if the psychological pressure of capitalizing on someone else's bad fortune doesn't haunt you.

Essentially, there are three ways to buy property in foreclosure: (1) keep an eye on the legal notices that lenders must publish before pursuing a sale and then contact the harried homeowner who is facing foreclosure, or (2) buy the home AT the auction that the court, or the trustee, has ordered, or (3) buy the home AFTER the auction from the lender or agency that took the home back.

Almost invariably, Real Estate experts put thumbs down on the first two approaches, particularly for the novice. In the first instance the homeowner can declare bankruptcy at the last minute and tie the property up for months he may also have put other liens on it that aren't apparent at the time. This possibility also makes it difficult to get title insurance on the property.

The second approach (buying it AT the auction) has a couple of other potential headaches. Most purchases have to be on an all-cash basis and, secondly, the original owner can sometimes reclaim the property even after the foreclosure sale.

So, the third remains the best bet: buying if from the lender or agency that has taken the property back. You have the assurance, here, that all previous claims and liens have been satisfied and, for that reason, the title insurance company's primary worry has been laid to rest.

How to find such properties? Contact local lenders and ask to speak to their foreclosure, or REO, department. REO simply refers to "Real Estate Owned," or the property that the bank or savings and loan association has had to take back, which is earning them no return on their investment, and which they normally want to get rid of as fast as possible. And, for this reason, they are frequently amenable to giving you a nice discount on the house as well as attractive financing. A price 5 percent to 10 percent under the appraised value of the home, even in a strong market, is commonplace.

Watch too, for newspaper ads frequently placed by HUD, the Department of Housing and Urban Development, calling notice to FHA foreclosures, and by the Veterans Administration.

On final tip: Hire an appraiser or a home inspection professional to go over the property before you make an offer. This will not only give a good idea of the home's fair price, but it should uncover any major deficiencies requiring expensive renovation that could wipe out all profit.

Yes, California has a "deficiency judgment" law as do a number of other states which prohibits a lender from going back to the original home buyer if he has permitted a second party to assume his loan and the second party then defaults.

But tread carefully, because there are a lot of "its" and "buts" involved. It doesn't protect the original buyer, to cite just one instance, if there is also a home improvement loan wrapped into the mortgage. And, of course, it doesn't protect you if the original loan were insured by the VA since most courts have held that the VA's right to pursue a deficiency judgment against the original buyer supersedes state laws.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I own a condo in Florida that I used as my principal residence for five years. Subsequently, I leased it for one year and now I would like to sell it most likely at a loss. Will I be able to offset the loss with gains from other investments? My total income is only in the low 30s. Mr Y.V.D., Vero Beach, Fla.

Answer: It's not likely you would be able to pull it off, the Internal Revenue Service tells me since the condo would have to classify as an income property and the key here is intent. And occupying it for five of the six years as a residence throws a considerable cloud on it as an INCOME property.

Fair is fair, and the lender is entitled to his pound of flesh, but on a typical 30-year, $50,000 mortgage at 10 percent, 95 percent of each monthly payment is going to the lender for interest 5 percent of it is going to your equity build-up. You can speed up the process, save thousands in interest and shave years off your mortgage through painless acceleration of principal.

Don Campbell is a columnist for the King Features Syndicate.

The Legend of Billy the Kid

Text by LINDA ANDERSON

Most people live the years of their lives, and then die, remembered only by their loved ones. But some are destined to become legends, and their lives live on in fact — and fiction.

The man who history knows as William H. Bonney — or who is even better known as Billy the Kid — is said to have been one of the most ruthless killers the Old West ever knew. Legend tells of his daring escapes, bloody gun battles and, of course, romantic encounters with love-smitten senoritas.

The Kid is said to have killed 21 men — one for each of the 21 years of his life — before the gun of Sheriff Pat Garrett ended his infamous career July 14, 1881.

But according to William Allison of Midland, the legends of Billy the Kid are just that — legends.

Allison's knowledge of Billy the Kid is based on his personal research, both historical and family. Allison claims to be related to Billy the Kid through the marriage of his grandmother to the Kid in 1945.

Wait a minute — wasn't Billy killed in 1881? Not according to Allison. That's part of the legend.

Most facts about the Kid's life — even his birth date — are unknown. He was supposed to have been born Nov. 23, 1859, in New York City, but Ramon F. Adams, in his book, "A Fitting Death for Billy the Kid," wrote: "... no one has ever been able to document the birth date of the Kid ... In spite of the search by several historians in the vital statistics of New York and the newspaper files of New Mexico, no records have been found to substantiate the place and date of the Kid's birth."

THAT MAY be because Billy was born December 31, 1859, in Buffalo Gap, according to Allison.

"His real name was William Henry Roberts," Allison said. "William Bonney was a name he took. He took all those aliases to keep his daddy from finding him."

According to Allison, Billy's mother died when he was 3 or 4 years old. His father, Henry "Wild Bill" Roberts, who was off fighting in the Civil War with William Clarke Quantrill and his band of guerrillas, wasn't much of a parent, so Billy's aunt, Catherine Bonney McCarty, raised him. During his early years, he was known as Henry McCarty, Henry Roberts or Henry Antrim. Antrim was his aunt's married name.

Legend says Billy the Kid killed his first man when he was 12 years old, because the other man insulted Billy's "mother." Adams wrote, "The 'first' killing, of the man who insulted his mother in Silver City, never happened. ... His troubles in Silver City started after the death of his mother (aunt Catherine Antrim, who died in 1874)."

Billy's first brush with the law, said Allison, occurred when "him and a buddy stole some Chinese laundry for a joke."

William A. Tunstill, in his book, "Billy the Kid and Me Were the Same," quoted The Grant County Herald, dated Sept. 26, 1875: "Henry McCarty, who was arrested on Thursday and committed to jail to await the action of the Grand Jury, upon the charge of stealing clothes from Charley Sun and Sam Chung, escaped from prison yesterday through the chimney. It is believed that Henry was simply the tool of 'Sombrero Jack,' who did the actual stealing whilst Henry done the hiding. Jack has skipped out." Billy was about 15 years old at the time.

Allison said in the stolen Chinese laundry incident, "the Law tried to scare him by putting him in jail. Billy broke out and went to Arizona."

IN 1877, TUNSTILL wrote, the Kid killed his first man. "The victim, a civilian employee at Camp Grant, was a husky blacksmith named Frank P. Cahill. Cahill enjoyed 'bullying' the Kid. The fatal day the quarrel occurred followed a card game. There was a name-calling session which erupted into a fist and pushing disturbance. Cahill then threw Billy to the ground and said he would kill him. A witness, Gus Gildea, said 'He had no choice, he had to use his equalizer.' The day after the shooting, Frank Cahill died."

Allison said the Kid then went back to Buffalo Gap "to look his father up" and "finally found him in Carlton." He stayed with his father about two years, Allison continued, to help him "break horses," but after a major disagreement involving a horse Billy wanted that his father gave away — and a severe beating from his father that took a month or two to get over — Billy left.

"He started changing his name to keep his dad away," Allison said.

During this time, he said, Billy worked on cattle drives and rode for a while with the notorious female outlaw Belle Starr and her gang. He finally drifted into New Mexico, where he found work on John Tunstall's ranch. Unfortunately, Tunstall and his men were about to become key players in the Lincoln County War between the Murphy-Dolan-Riley faction and the McSween-Tunstall-Fritz group.

In the course of this "war" between feuding ranchers-businessmen and their supporters, Tunstall was killed. According to Tunstill, a posse "made up of known cut throat outlaws ... rode out to Tunstall's ranch to take all of John Tunstall's fine horses. Tunstall was in the process of taking the horses to Lincoln, when the posse overtook them. They opened fire on Tunstall and his cowboys, killing Tunstall in cold blooded murder. The posse then took the horses."

Adams wrote: "The truth of the matter is that Tunstall was on the trail driving a bunch of horses when he was killed. (Dick) Brewer, his foreman, and Robert A. Widenmann were driving the horses up ahead of Tunstall, while (Billy the Kid) Bonney and John Middleton were about five hundred yards behind chasing a flock of wild turkeys. Brewer and Widenmann had gone some fifty or one hundred yards off the trail when a party of about eighteen men started shooting at them. They sought cover, for against such odds they could do little else. It was later established from the testimony of eyewitnesses that Tunstall did not fire a shot. ..."

THIS EVENT is said to have triggered Billy the Kid's famous killing spree. "Billy swore he would kill every one of them (the men responsible for Tunstall's death), and I think he did," Allison said.

However, Adams adds up the killings differently. The Kid helped track down some of the killers, Adams wrote, but there is no proof that his bullets actually were the fatal ones.

Happy 40th Birthday to the Junior League of Midland, Inc.! The organization celebrated the milestone occasion at its general meeting Tuesday evening at Theatre Midland. Festivities began with a six o'clock cocktail buffet in the theatre lobby.

In honor of the anniversary, the league is giving a $100,000 gift to be distributed among 13 local nonprofit groups. This generous gift was formally pledged to the community at the meeting.

Although the event honored all league members, special recognition was given to the charter members, sustainers, new actives and the 1989-1990 provisional class.

The new provisionals were presented to the group by provisional chairman Anne (Mrs. George) Hover and assistant chairman Vicki (Mrs. David) Donnell.

The resident candidates are as follows:

Mrs. Paul (Jennifer Richardson) Barber, Mrs. John P. (Anne Freitag) Bates, Mrs. John (Lisa Hartley) Bettis, Mrs. Jack (Mary Beddow) Blake Jr., Mrs. Randy Alan (Lyn Thomason) Brown, Mrs. Tom (Lisa Cutcher) Burlas, Mrs. Andrew (Sara Crowe) Burleson, Mrs. Jim (La Veta Kroeger) Burr, Mrs. Pete (Linda Shons) Carter, Mrs. Donald (Sandra Huxman) Dunbar III, Mrs. Louis (Nancy Smith) Dunnam, Mrs. Joel (Pam Little) Dyer, Mrs. Jack (Andye Conly) Gevecker and Mrs. Steven C. (Janie Harp) Hofer.

Also, Mrs. Rip (Carla Tucker) Horkey, Mrs. Kevin (Linda Allbritton) Hughes, Mrs. Kiech (Susan Mertz) Jung, Jane Siler Kauffman, Mrs. William (Lisa Steward) Knight, Mrs. Charles (Machelle Mathis) Knight, Mrs. David (Debbie Jones) Logan, Mrs. Gary (Shaunna Rodawault) Madden, Mrs. Craig (Bonney McEldowney) Mulloy, Mrs. Steve Jay (Jane Porter) McCoy, Mrs. Brian (Cynthia Slaughter) McLaughlin, Mrs. Ken (Sharon Love) Owens and Mae Margaret Perry.

In addition, Mrs. Hal (Pam Bales) Rasmussen, Mrs. Chris (Courtney Hughes) Renaud, Mrs. Ed E. (Dana Josting) Runyan, Mrs. William (Rexanna Perkins) Sandlin, Mrs. Steve (Lisa Welton) Sell, Mrs. Kelly (Tracie Calhoun) Sewell, Mrs. Gary (Teresa Glasgow) Shumskie, Mrs. M.A. (Kay Bookout) Sirgo III, Mrs. Randy Lee (Julie Jordan) Stevens, Mrs. Greg (Kris Loy) Thagard, Tracee Teressa Thomas, Mrs. Fred (Lisa Underwood) Wagner, Mrs. Joseph J. (Connie Richards) Wagner and Mrs. Rudolph A. (Sandra Sampson) Woerndle.

Non-residents are Heather Elizabeth Dunbar of Columbia, S.C., Mrs. Mike (Belen Ellis) Elias of Dallas, Christa Adams Garlitz of San Antonio, Mrs. Richard Bane (Gail Johnston) Gunn of Lubbock, Mrs. James (Andrea Craig) Hungerpiller of Summitt, N.J., Mrs. William Duncan (Cathy Woodard) Kennedy of Oklahoma City, Okla., Mrs. Duncan (Randall Redfern) MacNaughton of Mission Viejo, Calif., Tony Norris of Tulsa, Okla., Page Ann Perry of Atlanta, Ga., Wendy Kim Purvis of Fort Worth, Mary Patricia Warren of Dallas, Katherine Elise Wood of Jacksonville, Fla., and Erin Dian Young of Houston.

Shari (Mrs. Bob) Koziol is the current league president, and Rhonda (Mrs. Lynn, Jr.) Durham is president-elect. The late Mrs. Paxton Howard was the group's first president.

TWO MIDLAND GIRLS have pledged social sororities at Southwestern University in Georgetown during Spring Rush.

They are Ginny Graham, daughter of Gerald Graham, Delta Zeta, and Suzanne Bryant, daughter of Pam and Ken Bryant, Zeta Tau Alpha.

THOSE INVETERATE SKIERS, Marjorie and Dan Kozak, recently returned from a three-week "ski safari," celebrating Marjorie's birthday in Sun Valley, Idaho, and Dan's in Santa Fe, N.M. Driving some 3,400 miles, they schussed down the slopes in four states.

Skiing Colorado at Purgatory, Telluride and Wolf Creek ski areas, they were house guests at the Durango ranch home of Midlanders Sarilyn and Bill Black. In Utah, they stayed in Salt Lake City while checking out Alta and Snowbird ski areas.

The couple continued their ski odyssey in Sun Valley as guests of a longtime friend, George Weston. George is president of the newly-formed American Athletic Academy, an educational organization perparing Olympic athletes for a confident transition from competition to fulfilling adulthood. The Kozaks were George's guests at the four days of opening festivities for the academy.

The couple spent the last five days of their sojourn in Santa Fe with their son, Dr. Jeffrey Kozak, his wife, Lee Ann, and daughter, Ashley of Houston. They loved initiating their three-year-old granddaughter into skiing at Santa Fe Ski Basin.

Group helps pack rats overcome bad habit

Hearst News Service

LOS ANGELES — By the time Melody, a Los Angeles businesswoman and mother, joined Messies Anonymous, her children were begging for mercy.

The problem was that Melody was a collector — of everything.

"It was bad. It was real bad," she says. "It's not a matter of dirtiness or uncleanliness. It was clutter. I love clothes. I love things from the past, particularly my children's past."

She bought things she liked in duplicate and triplicate — "like 30 pairs of socks instead of five." She filled six dresser drawers to her husband's three. The cleaning-fluid inventory under the kitchen sink had swelled to 30 bottles.

Melody's husband, who is not messy, began throwing things out on the sly, not out of meanness, but for survival's sake.

But the most hapless victims were her children. Their room was buried beneath provisions for the future, such as 30 sets of hair ribbons.

"Their room used to be so horrible," says Melody, 34. "They'd say, 'Mom, we can't have friends over here. We can't even get to our toys.' "

A year ago, Melody discovered Messies Anonymous, a support group for pack rats and the hopelessly disorganized. The group has 25 chapters across the country, and followers from as far away as New Guinea and the Middle East.

Melody began to get organized.

"It sounds silly, but it's so exciting," she says. "Now I throw stuff away every day."

Messies Anonymous was started in 1981 by Sandra Felton, a Miami high school English teacher who got fed up with her own terminal messiness.

"I started MA because all my life being messy was a terrible, terrible problem," Felton says.

"You see, messies love to save paper," she explains. "They love books, magazines, newspapers. They don't like to let any information get away. So I loved to save papers. Big batches of paper."

For a messy to get to the top of the heap, Felton says, "First of all, the person has to really want to change. Change is painful. Nobody's going to make a change unless it's more painful to keep living the way they are. If they're hurting so bad, they're going to make the change."

Felton's general rule, which may upset a few feminists, is that it is "not only the woman's responsibility, but privilege" to keep a house clean.

"I think it's because women take the house a great deal more personally than men. The house is a larger part of herself."

Then comes the method. Felton relates the one that helped her trash her old habits: A neat friend suggested "the Mount Vernon Method," a cleaning maintenance system she learned from the head housekeeper at George Washington's former home on the Potomac River.

The method involves systematically moving through the house and filling three boxes marked "Give Away," "Throw Away" and "Store Elsewhere."

The cleaning took Felton almost four months. "The reason it took so long is messies hate to make decisions. They don't want to risk throwing out something they might need later and feel bad about it. That's what wore me out."

The method paid off, and the following year she ran an advertisement in the local newspaper offering help to fellow frustrated messies. The ad attracted 12 anonymous messies, as well as national wire service stories and People magazine. A movement was born.

Felton says she may have received somewhere between 30,000 and 40,000 letters from messies over the years, but she's never organized her fan mail.

"Although the Kid had sworn to kill every man who had anything to do with the murder of his friend (Tunstall), there were 11 men in Brewer's posse, all shooting; and when the bodies were examined, it was found that (Billy) Morton and (Frank) Baker (two members of the posse that had killed Tunstall) had both been shot eleven times. ... It would certainly be hard to believe that only the Kid's bullets were the fatal ones."

In any case, with Tunstall's death, the Kid's legend was born. Allison said that although the Kid killed several people, the 21 deaths attributed to him are probably an exaggeration. "Back then, those people, if they had something they couldn't solve, they blamed it on him. He was really a victim of circumstance," Allison said.

By the time he arrived in Fort Sumner, N.M., in July 1881, the Kid was a hunted man. Earlier that year he had escaped from jail in Lincoln, N.M., after killing two guards, U.S. Marshal Robert Olinger and Deputy James Bell.

Legend says Billy the Kid was in Fort Sumner because he was courting a girl there. Adams wrote: "... Garrett, with his deputies (John) Poe and (Kip) McKinney, came into Fort Sumner searching for the Kid. On the night of July 14, 1881, they went to Pete Maxwell's to seek information. While Poe and McKinney waited outside, Garrett went in to talk with Maxwell, who had gone to bed. While he was there, the Kid came in, seeking a piece of meat for the meal his girl friend was preparing for him. As he approached barefooted, with a butcher knife in his hand and a gun in his pants' waist, he spied the deputies and inquired who they were. Going inside, he asked Maxwell about them. Seeing a figure sitting near the head of Maxwell's bed in the dim light, he jumped back and again asked who was there. Garrett recognized the voice and shot twice, the first shot killing the Kid, the second missing."

BUT WAS it really Billy the Kid who was killed by Garrett? Allison doesn't believe so. He believes that a friend of the Kid's named Billy Barlow actually was the man killed that night in Fort Sumner, and that The Kid was wounded in the shoot-out that followed.

Tunstill agreed: "Billy took two flesh wounds, (one) which struck him inside of (his) jaw, taking out one tooth and the second shot was a scalp wound."

A Mexican woman is said to have patched his wounds enough for him to ride out of Fort Sumner before dawn. According to Tunstill, Barlow's death was claimed to have been the Kid's death so that Billy could escape.

Rumors of his escape have been circulating since Garrett's shots were fired, Allison said. "Ever since they shot him, people have been saying he wasn't dead — those old people living up in New Mexico."

But Adams does not doubt that the Kid was the man killed by Garrett: "I still cannot help but believe that the friends who loved Billy and were saddened by his death, the people who prepared him for burial and sat up with his body in the carpenter shop that night would have known without a doubt whether the corpse was Billy's."

Of course they would know if it was his body, Tunstill said, and they would have identified it as his in order to help him escape. "Everybody out here (New Mexico) liked Billy the Kid," he said. "They hated Pat Garrett. ... Pat Garrett was a good bounty hunter, but that was about all."

"The outlaws back in those days stuck together," said Allison's wife, Wanda. "They made up stories that they were dead so people would quit looking (for them)."

TUNSTILL LISTS several reasons for believing the Kid was not killed by Garrett, including:

- A warrant issued for "the Kid," filed in San Miguel County March 5, 1883, almost two years after Garrett was supposed to have shot him.
- Garrett's uncertain handling of the death certificate
- The fact that the Kid's personal possessions disappeared.

"If he had killed the Kid, then it was his duty as sheriff to take possession of all the Kid's personal things such as ... horse, bridle, saddle, blankets, leather traveling bags, bed roll, two pistols and rifle. None of these were seen by reporters who flooded the scene three days after the shooting. Historians for the past 100 years have been at a loss as to what happened to the Kid's personal things," Allison said.

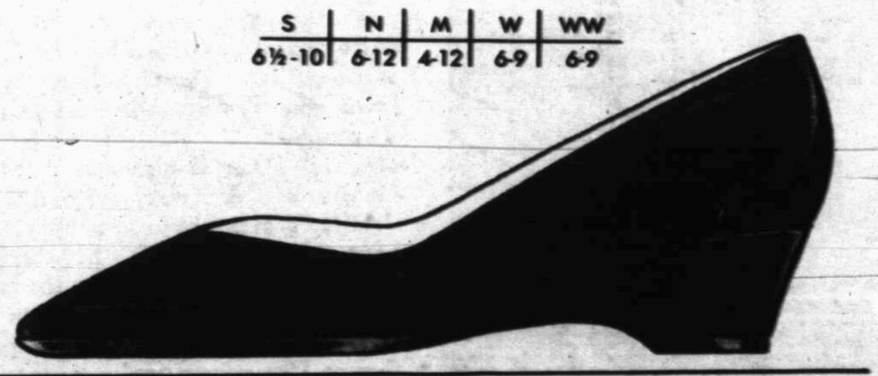

According to Tunstill, after the Kid's wounds healed, he headed for Mexico, where he lived for two years. When he returned to the U.S., he "took the name of 'The Texas Kid' and got a job at Decatur ... breaking horses for rancher Tom Waggoner."

During his career, Tunstill continued, the Kid became a scout for the Stage Coach Lines in the Black Hills of Dakota (1884), joined Pinkerton Detective Agency (1888), helped the U.S. Marshals track down the Dalton boys (1892), worked and rode in a rodeo for the Republic of Argentina (1893), was a deputy marshal in Oklahoma (1894), joined Teddy Roosevelt's Rough Riders and fought in Cuba (1898), operated a "Wild West Show" (1902), helped start a ranch in Mexico (1907), fought with Pancho Villa (1910), bought and traded horses, and worked rodeos in East Texas and Oklahoma (1912-29), was a plainclothes police officer in Gladewater (1929-40), took the name O.L. "Brushy Bill" Roberts (1940), and retired and moved to Hamilton and Hico with his third wife, Allison's grandmother (1945).

BRUSHY BILL was a born-again Christian, Tunstill wrote, having joined the Missionary Baptist Church near Boise, Idaho, in the 1880's, and "he must have had a guilt feeling that we all have when we know we have done something wrong. ... he had made attempts to come forth and confess his crimes."

In trying to clear his name, Brushy Bill, along with his lawyer, William V. Morrison, sought a pardon from the governor of New Mexico. On Nov. 28 and 29, 1950, Bill and Morrison met with Governor Thomas Mabry in Santa Fe, Tunstill wrote. But the meeting, which was planned to be private and informal, became public when historians, civic leaders, newspaper and broadcast journalists, Garrett's sons, rancher Wilbur Coe, and Rex Meador, state democratic chairman, were invited to attend.

Brushy Bill became distraught at the meeting, Tunstill continued, and had to be taken out of the room. "Brushy Bill returned to Hico, Texas, and was bed-ridden for the next three weeks before his fatal heart attack December 28, 1950." He was 91 years old.

Was Brushy Bill really Billy the Kid? Adams thought not: "Granted that the old man who claimed he was the Kid seemed to know a great deal about what happened, it was no more than a great many others knew."

The Kid was supposedly buried in Fort Sumner in July 1881. Tunstill, however, quotes a letter he received from a George E. Kaiser, who said he visited Billy the Kid's grave in Fort Sumner: "In August of 1927 ... my family went to see the grave of Billy the Kid. ... We went as directed down the west side of the river several miles to the grave site. We found the two graves about four feet apart. They were greatly weathered mounds of dirt ... There was no marker of any kind and no fence and no sign that any effort had been made thru the years to care for the graves. We were told one grave was of a Mexican and the other was Billy the Kid.

"In 1967, I was back in the area on business and heard of the old Cemetery south of Ft. Sumner. I went there and to my surprise there was a grave and grave stone of Billy the Kid. I went back to town and hunted up an old Mexican who had lived there most of his life and inquired about the new grave of Billy the Kid. He said that was just to get people to come there. I asked about the two graves and he said they were washed away in the flood on the river I believe he said it was 1934. He said no one would ever find any of Billy's bones. ..."

ALLISON SAID he has no doubt that Brushy Bill, his step-grandfather, was Billy the Kid. The NBC network television show "Unsolved Mysteries" recently devoted a episode segment to the Kid's continuing story.

But all agreed that the image of Billy the Kid that has been passed down for 100 years is mostly fiction.

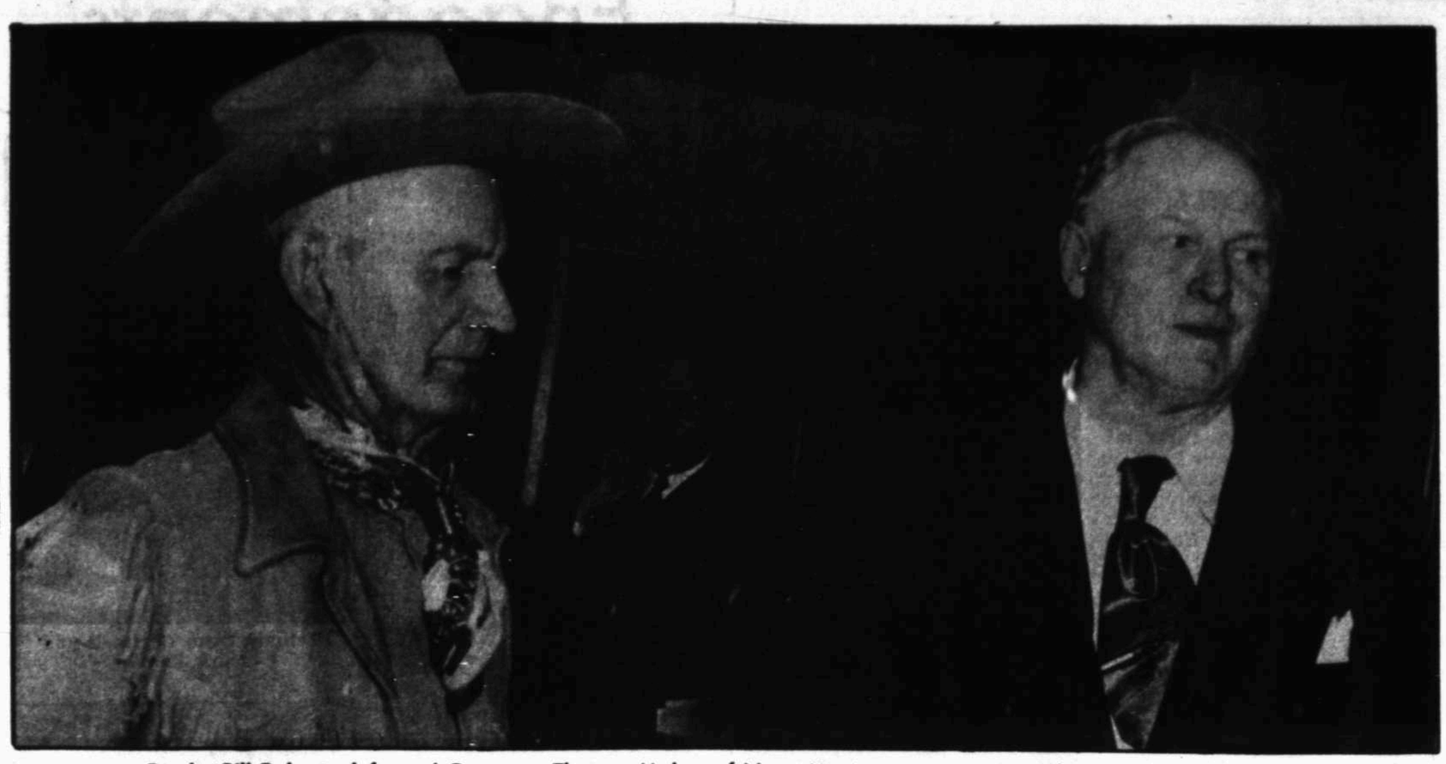

"Because a statement has been handed down unchallenged year after year does not make it a historical fact," Adams wrote. "Here are a few of the doubtful 'facts:' the Kid's being an expert at card dealing at the age of eight; his knife-killing at the tender age of twelve of the blacksmith who insulted his mother; his conflicts with the various Indians; and his ride of eighty-one miles in six hours to rescue a Mexican friend from a jail in Texas. ... the whole history of Billy the Kid's life, as it has come down through the years, has been false. It has been made up of misstatements of fact, some more consequential than others, but all contributing to the tissue of lies," Adams concluded.

"There are 800 books of record on Billy the Kid," Tunstill said. "Ninty-nine percent of them are fiction..."

Mrs. Allison said Billy the Kid was "not an outlaw by nature, he was not a murderer by nature."

"Billy didn't turn bad, he was still an honest man," said her son, Dan. "He was not outlaw, he just happened to be there when the trouble happened and was there to take care of himself."

But whether or not Brushy Bill Roberts and Billy the Kid were one and the same, the legend lives on.

Brushy Bill Roberts, left, and Governor Thomas Mabry of New Mexico meet in November 1950 in Santa Fe.

Catalog helps teachers, students

Copley News Service

Good books. Good teachers. Those are the requirements for turning a so-so reader or non-reader into an enthusiastic, inquisitive lover of books.

Teachers can turn to the International Reading Association's catalog of publications to locate publications that can help them help their students love all those good books out there.

This comprehensive, 60-page catalog provides a listing of books that will show how to develop students' reading and writing skills. Included are descriptions of books about reading, writing and language. Divided into topics of interest, the listings include selections for encouraging early reading, understanding reading tests, promoting adult literacy, stimulating reading among middle and secondary school students, working in cross-cultural reading programs, fostering reading skills in specific content areas, developing administration and staff and more. In addition, the catalog offers professional resources, such as informal reading inventories that can help teachers in the classroom and it supplies resources for parents who wish to help teachers help their kids.

The International Reading Association is a non-profit professional organization consisting of educators, librarians, reading researchers, psychologists and parents. Once teachers examine this catalog, they may be interested in joining the association, which offers to its members substantial discounts on book publications.

Barbara Bush projects positive image

Copley News Service

Barbara Bush's gray hair may be her crowning glory. Because by sporting her silver strands, the what-you-see-is-what-you-get first lady is striking a blow for womankind.

At least that's the opinion of white-haired Barbara Avedon, co-creator of TV's "Cagney & Lacey." She says Bush's decision to be herself — gray mop and all — makes a positive statement to women:

In other words, Bush is telling women that it's OK to show your age. But are women across the country going to go for the premature gray look?

Probably not, but Beverly Hills hairstylist Jose Eber says even if they do, that doesn't mean they can't look stunning.

WAY-EADS

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Lacy Way of Midland announce the engagement of their daughter Karol Ann to Russell Todd Eads of Midland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robby Dean Eads of Vernon. The wedding is planned for 2 p.m. June 3 at First Baptist Church.

Families should begin customs

Associated Press

Customs help develop family unity by establishing a sense of belonging, especially for children. According to family psychologist John Rosemond in Better Homes and Gardens magazine, they also unite generations and reemphasize the spiritual side of celebrations.

Family traditions create these important bonds in a number of ways:

They help children experience the world as a more stable place by providing a sense of continuity.

They provide children with a clearer sense of their membership in the family. As a child's contribution to family events grows larger, the youngster develops a greater sense of pride and bonding.

They convey a family's beliefs and values, teaching children the importance of such things as sharing, friendship, unconditional love and remembrance.

They can serve as rites of passage for children. By helping children cross the threshold of important transitions, traditions help reduce the anxiety children may feel when confronted with change.

They often connect the family's past and future by bringing generations together. As grown children come home for holidays, traditions also symbolize the renewal of family ties.

Career women put husbands 'on back burner'

Copley News Service

The phrase "No time for hubby" sounds like it could be a television situation comedy.

But according to a Family Circle magazine survey of 35,000 women, it's a real-life drama for husbands.

In a time crunch, for example, three out of four career women put their husbands on the back burner as opposed to half of them who put their best friends last.

So how does the big squeeze affect sex? You guessed it: 42 percent of women say they have sex "sometimes." Another one-third say they rarely make whoopee anymore.

Lifestyle policies

Policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle sections of The Midland Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographes will be published only for winners, not runner-ups. These announcements are published Tuesdays. Deadline is 5 p.m. Friday.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

We cannot mail forms to persons in Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication. To have a photo returned by mail, include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Unclaimed photos are discarded after a month.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required. A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Portraits of the bride only or of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements. A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted. The MRT reserves the right to deny publication of any photo due to quality or content.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

'Survival' vital on blind dates

Copley News Service

How do you avoid a good-night kiss on a blind date?

If you're a man, simply walk 15 feet behind the date as you get to the door. Keep your hands in your pockets and yawn.

That's the advice of Jeff Nagel, whose book "The Blind Date Survival Guide" is loaded with humorous information about blind dates.

If you're a woman who's stuck with a dork, either give yourself a nosebleed — fake blood will do — or hold out your right hand as far as possible before you get to your door.

Nagel also recommends that you never eat lobster or a salad when out on a blind date.

Stick with no-mess foods like steak or chicken. In fact, he says it's best to avoid dinner altogether.

Finally, to check out a blind date, tell her how you'll be dressed when you meet and ask her to do the same — then dress differently than you agreed so you can check her out without being recognized.

And ladies, don't forget, turn about is fair play.

DEAR ABBY

Divorce requires comfort too

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: When my husband left me and our two children for another woman, I was devastated. My family and friends made comments such as, "You're lucky to be rid of him."

Abby, I loved my husband, and although I know that my family and friends thought they were comforting me, they weren't. If a spouse dies, everyone assumes that the wife is grieving, and no one would dare to say, "You're lucky to be rid of him" — regardless of how terrible he was. But when you're separated or divorced, everyone assumes you hate him, and that isn't always true.

I'm sure there are others in my circumstances who would welcome a few kind words of sympathy after their marriage breaks up, so please pass this along to your readers. There are so many marriages failing these days, it's almost like a death in the family. — RECOVERING IN OHIO

DEAR RECOVERING: In a way, the end of a marriage IS a death. It's the death of many hopes, dreams and promises that were expected to last a lifetime. The loss of a spouse by divorce is still a loss, and a period of adjusting to that loss is sure to follow. Even those who are "lucky to be rid of him" (or her) cannot escape the pain of closing the book on something that was once good.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I associate mostly with other couples, and when we dine out we each pay our own share. Occasionally we are invited by widows to their homes for dinner. I have been told that because we are two, we should reciprocate with two invitations. However, I read somewhere that a widow should consider herself as a pair! I must add that when my husband and I attend something together with a widow, my husband does all the driving and pays for the parking. (Most women do not drive at night.)

Abby, if I have to have each widow twice, I will be mostly entertaining widows, which my husband does not particularly enjoy. We do associate with a few widows whose company we really do enjoy, but we prefer to associate with couples.

Please tell me what our responsibility is as a couple after accepting an invitation from a woman alone. — CHICAGOAN

DEAR CHICAGOAN: Nowhere is it written that a couple who has been entertained by a single person "owes" that person two invitations.

A single person is considered a "family" — so it's actually one family entertaining the other. And friends who count don't count.

DEAR ABBY: I quit my job at the local grocery store because the assistant manager's hobby was taking candid pictures. He also had this thing about girls' behinds and was always taking pictures of mine.

I got tired of this sick little camera game and quit my job. The reason I am writing is to let all working women know that they have rights and should stand up for them. I didn't realize it at the time, but I was actually a victim of sexual harassment. If I had known then what I know now, I would have filed a complaint to the labor board and gotten HIS job instead of quitting mine. — SMART TOO LATE IN ALABAMA

DEAR SMART: It may be too late for you, but writing as you did may help many of your sisters who presently are where you were then. Thanks for writing.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter has been dating a young man for about a year, and now he has asked us for her hand in marriage. Last night he told our daughter that he is a philatelist!

Do you think we should consent to this marriage? — HEIDI'S PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: Why not? He has just as much right to collect old stamps as you have to collect old jokes.

DEAR ABBY: Our puppy got very sick — vomiting, jaundice, etc. The vet removed four new pennies from her stomach! It seems that U.S. pennies minted since late 1982 are a poisoning danger if swallowed! This was news to me!

These newer coins contain nearly 98 percent zinc. If swallowed, the coins break down rapidly as stomach acids react with the copper-plated surface and zinc center. The result may be vomiting, sudden anemia, and in some cases serious illness and even death. Please, Abby, warn people with young pets to be careful about leaving coins around. Puppies are not very discriminating. — CLOSE CALL IN CLEVELAND

DEAR CLOSE: Thanks for the advice. Parents of small CHILDREN should also take note. If you suspect that your child might have swallowed a penny, contact your pediatrician or poison control center.

Abigail Van Buren is columnist for Universal Press Syndicate.

Magazine article incites controversy

BOSTON (AP) — A feminist devoted to improving opportunities for career women has caused an uproar by writing in the Harvard Business Review that women managers cost corporations more than men do.

The author, Felice N. Schwartz, also urged employers to recognize there are two kinds of female managers: those who put their careers first and those who care more about their children.

"The cost of employing women in management is greater than the cost of employing men," Ms. Schwartz wrote in the January-February 1989 issue of the Harvard Business Review in a piece titled "Management Women and the New Facts of Life."

"This is a jarring statement, partly because it is true, but mostly because it is something people are reluctant to talk about," she wrote.

Published by Harvard Business School, the prestigious review has 210,000 subscribers, about 95 percent of them in business.

Since the issue was published, furious debate has ensued, said managing editor Alan Webber. Women managers are talking about it at business conferences and the magazine has received a dozen letters. "It struck a nerve," he said.

"Everybody's very troubled by it," U.S. Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., said Wednesday from Washington. The article gives ammunition to those opposed to women's advancement, she said.

"There's nothing they love more. If you can find a woman who can say 'We don't deserve equal pay,' they love it," she said. "Women have really felt in the '80s they were really going backward anyway, and this gives the aura of the seal of approval of the Harvard Business School. That's the tragedy."

Webber said reaction generally touches on two themes. "A lot of people say it is a mistake to categorize the issue as a women's issue, that it's a family issue. ... Younger men who are interested, as a generation, in raising children are facing pressures not unlike those facing women," he said.

Other letter writers said they were glad someone opened debate on the subject. "It's been kind of a dirty little secret," Webber said.

Richard Lewis, chairman of Corporate Annual Reports Inc., wrote to the review describing the article as "a historical turning point in the discussion of women in business."

Ms. Schwartz is founder and president of Catalyst, a non-profit research and advisory group in New York that works with corporations to foster the career and leadership development of women.

In an interview from New York, Ms. Schwartz said those who attack her ideas didn't read her article closely. She said her point was that corporations need to adjust to the demographic fact that "there are not enough good men to go around."

She disagreed that corporate executives would use her article as an excuse to keep women back. "What they want is the best and the brightest to come to their companies. They're not looking for excuses," she said.

Scientists studying 'brain power'

Copley News Service

Remember back in grade school, when your teacher would ask you to figure out a math problem by "doing it in your head"? Well, that phrase is now proving to be literally true, as explained in Dr. Richard Restak's new book "The Mind."

Restak reports on the findings of three doctors at Washington University Medical School in St. Louis, who used PET scanners of the radioactive isotope oxygen-15 to observe the living brain at work.

With the aid of color-coded maps displaying the brain's terrain, Drs. M.E. Raichle, Michael Posner and Steven Peterson have been able to watch different areas become activated according to the mental activity being performed.

So there's now visible proof of activity in the brain's premotor and supplementary motor areas when we only think about a word, or do something "in our heads."

Calendars, datebooks for 1990 are here

Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — Though we've not turned half the pages on our 1989 calendars, the 1990 calendars and datebooks are upon us. This is the time of year when Publishers' Weekly, the trade magazine of the publishing industry, lists the array of calendars for the coming year.

Researchers from another galaxy would burn out their alien brain cells trying to get a fix on our culture by checking out how we keep track of our time.

It might have been easier a couple of generations ago. The calendars men nailed to their workshop walls came from the gas station or the hardware store; and they had pictures of cars or, semi-nude women (preferably both) on them. Women got their calendars from the church or the beauty parlor, and the pictures were flowers, landscapes or kittens.

The cars, cheesecake, flowers and fuzzy kittens are still calendar staples, but those old stand-bys have been joined by cartoon characters, cows, quilts, cookbooks, New Age religions and earnest efforts to learn a new word, a new Bible verse, or a new joke each day of the year.

More than 100 publishers turn out thousands of different calendars, according to the magazine's overview.

Many reprise the old standards: classic works of art (Monet, Manet, Degas, Renoir, the kind of pictures you are taught you ought to appreciate), good-looking women or men, pictures of the world's natural wonders like the Grand Canyon or Mt. Everest.

But there are calendars for those heavily dosed with contemporary trendiness. Video game freaks can get the Nintendo Calendar based on the electronic game. A calendar titled "Celebrating Women's Spirituality" includes meditations, "rituals, poems and affirmations" for the New Age woman. The have-it-all parents can get their kids the "Afterschool Calendar: One Smart, Silly, Funny, Safe Thing to Do Each Day Til Mom or Dad Comes Home!" There are calendars for organic gardeners, runners, weight-lifters and cooks.

A calendar called "Celestial Influences" is for astrology afficianados and tells when to plant your pea crop or change jobs.

There a calendar based on the teachings of the Essenes, those first century hermits who stored the Dead Sea Scrolls in their caves; and a Calendar of Baseball cards.

Animal calendars dominate the field, with cats apparently the favorite calendar creature. There are cat drawings, cat photos, Garfield the cartoon cat, and Hobbes, the cartoon tiger, with his boy, Calvin. There's "Kittens and Cats with Scripture" and "The Cat Sold It," featuring pictures of cats in advertising.

There are two cow calendars for those who prefer bovines to felines; one called the "All Cow Calendar" and the other the "Ultimate Cowlendar," billed as "udderly" unlike any seen before. There are plenty of calendars with fish, dogs and bears (both Teddy and Grizzly).

Cartoons continue to proliferate on calendar pages. The offerings range from the strange antics of Gary Larson's "Far Side" animals through the political commentary of Doonsbury to the worry-a-day angst of Ziggy and Cathy.

Birthdays traumatic

Copley News Service

Your 30th birthday may have been bad. But your 50th birthday may be the most traumatic, because when people turn 50 they start viewing their lives in terms of how much time is left rather than how much has passed.

According to Boston College sociologist David Karp, men in particular have a tough time turning 50 because they begin questioning their relevance in work and marriage.

Both men and women start asking themselves what they can do to make the rest of their lives more meaningful. But turning 50 is by no means fatal because along with the increase in reflectiveness, oldsters report a feeling of wisdom they never have had before.

'Fair fighting' benefits marriages

Copley News Service

It's too late to tell Robin Givens and Mike Tyson. But there is a fair way to fight when you're married.

According to a study by two American psychologists, certain arguments actually help nurture a relationship. Psychologists John Gottman and Lowell Krokoff call it a form of "fair fighting."

The most beneficial fights are those in which couples should feel free to scream at each other. That way, they can make themselves understood to the other partner. Then a compromise or some other arrangement can be worked out.

However, very few fights follow that rosy path. Destructive fights include making excuses, defensiveness, blame, insults whining and stubbornness.

The psychologists say "good" fights make couples feel as if they can weather the storm together.

AT YOUR LEISURE

by Sue Snelson

Midland Travel Agency

I recently returned from a fascinating fly/drive vacation in the historic heartland of England. Although I have visited England dozens of times, this trip was one of my favorites because I was able to travel with a group, but at my own pace in a rental car.

We took off from Manchester in a white two-door hatchback Ford Escort named Minerva. The first stop was Windermere, where we visited the home of William Wordsworth. Like all of the hotels we stayed in, the Wild Boar Hotel in this beautiful lake country is a member of the Best Western chain.

But unlike the Best Westerns we are accustomed to in the United States, English Best Westerns are often converted castles or historic mansions. They are usually located off the main highways, and the properties are very exciting. The Wild Boar is a lovely updated home, built in the 1800's.

The next day was an excursion to Harriot country, the area which inspired the famous author to write "All Creatures Great and Small." We stayed at the Ripon Spa Hotel, in Ripon, a nice, small town near York. York is one of England's "pride and joy" towns, where shopping is marvelous.

Stratford Upon Avon, the home of William Shakespeare, was our next stop. Visiting Shakespeare's home, Anne Hathaway's house and seeing "Shakespeare in the Round" was fascinating. The Warwick Castle and its wax museum was fun, too. It's one of the top sights in England, no doubt because it has its own torture chamber!

That evening, we drove to Leamington, known for more castles and wonderful shopping. There's lots of stores, for example, quaint, small dress shops. I found a wonderful throat lozenger in a chemist shop there. We relaxed at the Leamington Spa and Regent Hotel after our busy day.

In Chester, an old walled city, we stayed at a luxurious country house hotel named the Mollington Banastre. It's a four-star property, and truly worth the visit. Chester is the Williamsburg of England. Everything is restored just like it was in medieval times.

Chester and the city we visited earlier, York, are excellent walking cities. Since they are condensed, or confined within walls, you don't miss out on anything.

Traveling in this area of England makes an ideal vacation. The people are very polite, although much more formal than Texans. The food is very good!

For example, dinner at the Molliington Banastre included four choices on the main course alone--roast sirloin of beef in madiera and onion gravy, supreme of chicken filled with pate served with champagne sauce, lamb cutlets with mushrooms and tomato and poached salmon with hollandaise sauce!

With all of this in mind, I'm really excited to put together a similar fly/drive trip for June 17-25. It will include a caravan of six to eight cars, will originate in Manchester and end in London. You can travel with friends, at your own speed. You enjoy the camaraderie and fun of a gala dinner each evening and catch up on the individual adventures of the caravan members. The itinerary is already planned, and you fly on American Airlines. Double occupancy, the land portion is $543 per person.

I would love to have you go with us! For more information, contact Midland Travel Agency at 319 N. Colorado, or call 684-7428.

Chocolate Easter bunnies have new roles

By DENA KLEIMAN
New York Times News Service

Consider the chocolate Easter bunny.

Time was when all it had to do was sit there, a self-sacrificing confection, usually hollow, perhaps with a ribbon around its neck, waiting for some child to come along and bite off an ear.

No more.

Today's Easter bunny is under tremendous pressure to play a musical instrument, pitch a baseball game, be accomplished at tennis, dance like Fred Astaire, read books, fly into outer space, jog. And as if that weren't enough, it may be filled with peanut butter, have orange skin or wear pink foil that glows in the dark.

Easter, after all, with projected sales this year of $815 million, is the second-largest candy season in the United States after Christmas, surpassing Valentine's Day, Mother's Day and even Halloween.

NO WONDER THE competition among rabbits has never been more intense.

"There was a time when a rabbit could just sit or stand," said Alan H. Kline, executive vice president of the Frankford Candy and Chocolate Co. in Philadelphia, one of the largest producers of chocolate rabbits in the United States. "Now a rabbit has to do more."

Frankford supplies stores like F.W. Woolworth, K-mart, Rite Aid and Caldor with more than 100 types of rabbits that sell for 39 cents to $6.99. For them, Frankford makes a rabbit called Dunkin' Don that comes with a candy basketball; a Bunny Appleseed with a red candy apple; a Prima Bunnerina wearing toe shoes; a Huckle Bunny with a yellow candy fish, and Bunny Starhopper, an astronaut bunny accompanied by two miniature spacemen.

A TRIO of bunnies, Country Cousins, is among the company's biggest sellers.

"Basically we're looking for something different," said Frank Salvatore, a candy buyer for the F.W. Woolworth Co., which stocks hundreds of thousands of rabbits at Easter time and, like other national chains, is a powerful influence in the chocolate rabbit business.

"Everyone is trying to be novel," said Brian Susslin, director of marketing for C.J. Van Houten & and Zoon Inc. in St. Albans, Vt., which manufactures about 80 different types of bunnies. This year, he said, bunnies of white chocolate are "hot."

They are about 5 percent of Van Houten's market, Susslin said, and as much as 15 percent for some other companies.

Chocolate-flavored products made without cocoa butter have crept into the market, but bunnies made of pure milk chocolate are the biggest sellers.

The chocolate bunny has its origins in medieval Europe, where the hare became a symbol of Easter, in large part because of its fecundity.

German legend had it that after a long winter's sleep the Easter bunny would lay bright-colored eggs in the grass for good children to find.

The practice of giving decorated eggs at Easter dates to the Middle Ages.

But it was not until sometime around World War II, as automation took over the mass-market chocolate business, that the practice of presenting chocolate rabbits to children took this country by storm.

THE BORTZ Chocolate Co. in Reading, Pa., founded in 1916, was among the earliest to make chocolate rabbits on a large scale. It was also among the first to introduce bunny personalities, coming out in 1934 with a rabbit playing the accordion and another driving a car.

But in recent years the company has returned to a more classical bunny.

"There are bunnies today that ski, go to the beach and play video games," said Wayne Stottmeister, vice president of sales and marketing for Bortz. "But the traditional rabbit is here to stay."

Hollow bunnies give most Americans their first bite of chocolate, said Lisbeth Echeandia, publisher of The Confectioner Magazine, a trade publication in Orlando, Fla.

"Think about it," she said. "You don't give a small child a Hershey bar."

But the bunny might also be the child's first taste of deception. Who doesn't remember biting into a chocolate rabbit and, instead of a solid chunk of chocolate, getting a mouthful of air.

Of course, that was the sales pitch: a big, showy product for a fraction of what it would cost to buy an equally big solid bunny.

But these days a number of manufacturers have also begun to produce solid rabbits.

The solid models are less intricately designed, less expensive to make and less fragile to transport.

But they are a better value: a one-pound solid bunny, for example, might retail for $2.59, where a hollow one of the same weight could cost as much as $7.99.

Still, the hollow rabbits, usually clad in ornate pastel foil, festooned with sugar-candy props and branded with an astonishing diversity of names, are going strong.

OF COURSE in these savvy days of preschool sex information, children might be expected to know that it makes no sense whatsoever to say that the Easter bunny lays eggs.

But the story goes on, and so does the practice of biting off the ears — preferred as a first bite by 97 percent of the eating public, according to a poll by Fanny Farmer Candy Shops Inc. last month of 480 people 4 to 80 years old on the streets of Chicago.

"I always saved the head for last," Fran Kaufman, a vice president at the Children's Television Workshop, was saying the other day. "I don't know what it means."

Children's books 'best sellers'

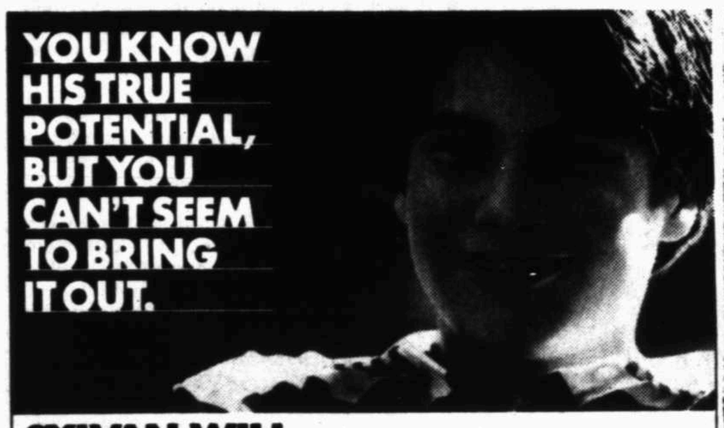

Copley News Service

You won't catch your baby reading in the crib. But younger children are developing an interest in books at an earlier age than ever before.

In fact, with more and more baby-boomers reading to their children, the sale of childrens' books — hardcover and softcover — has been skyrocketing.

Caron Chapman of the Association of Booksellers for Children says the sales of children's hardcover books are up by 85 percent and paperbacks are doing even better.

She says some of the hottest sellers include a poetry book called "Sing a Song of Popcorn," a book about a boy who can't quit sulking called "Spinky Sulks" and another nail-biter called "Find Waldo Now," about a little man who hides himself in historical settings.

Scrambled egg casserole a good post-Easter dish

Associated Press

What can you do with all those eggs you bought for Easter but didn't cook? You can assemble this brunch main dish up to 24 hours ahead, chill it in the refrigerator, then bake it just before the meal for 15 to 20 minutes.

SCRAMBLED EGG CASSEROLE

6 eggs
⅓ cup milk
Dash pepper
2 tablespoons margarine or butter
1 tablespoon margarine or butter
4 teaspoons all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon paprika
¾ cup milk
¾ cup shredded American cheese (3 ounces)
¾ cup seasoned croutons

In a medium mixing bowl beat together eggs, milk and pepper. In a large skillet melt 2 tablespoons margarine over medium heat. Add egg mixture. Cook without stirring until mixture begins to set on bottom and around edges. Using a large spoon or spatula, lift and fold partially cooked eggs so uncooked portion flows underneath. Continue cooking over medium heat 2 to 3 minutes or until eggs are firm but still moist. Turn into greased 10x6x2-inch baking dish.

In a small saucepan melt 1 tablespoon margarine. Stir in flour and paprika. Add milk all at once. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbly. Add cheese. Stir until smooth. Pour over egg mixture. Bake in 375-degree F oven 12 to 15 minutes or until heated through. Sprinkle with croutons. Makes 4 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 361 cal., 17 g pro., 11 g carb., 27 g fat, 437 mg chol., 656 mg sodium. U.S. RDA: 25 percent vit. A, 25 percent riboflavin, 26 percent calcium, 10 percent iron, 36 percent phosphorus.

Store Easter candy in cool dry container

NEW YORK (AP) — Chances are, you won't be able to eat all of that Easter candy at once. But, don't worry, chocolate will stay fresh if stored in a cool, dry place in a tightly sealed container. Moisture and/or high heat can cause clumping and gray discoloration, although neither affects cocoa flavor nor quality.

If you didn't get enough chocolate for Easter, try making your own Chocolate Dreams. When cooking with chocolate, melt chocolate in the top of a double boiler over hot, not boiling water. (Or use a stainless steel bowl over a pan of hot, not boiling, water.) Break chocolate into 1-inch pieces to speed the melting process. Stir the melting chocolate periodically with a wire whisk to help blending and discourage scorching.

For a dreamy dessert, try this recipe for Fruit and Chocolate Dreams.

FRUIT AND CHOCOLATE DREAMS

DREAM BASE:
1¼ cup all-purpose flour
½ cup sugar
½ cup butter, softened
½ cup jam or jelly
1 10-ounce package (1½ cups) Milk Chocolate Nestle Toll House Treasures baking pieces

TOPPING:
⅔ cup all-purpose flour
6 tablespoons butter, softened
6 tablespoons sugar
½ cup chopped pecans
½ teaspoon vanilla extract

DREAM BASE: Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In bowl, combine flour and sugar. With pastry blender or 2 knives, cut in butter until mixture resembles fine crumbs. Press into greased 9-inch square pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 20-25 minutes. Remove from oven. Spread with jam or jelly. Top with milk chocolate baking pieces and Crumb Topping. Bake 15-20 minutes longer. Cool completely.

CRUMB TOPPING: In bowl, combine flour, butter, sugar, pecans and vanilla extract. Mix with fork until mixture resembles coarse crumbs.

Food companies discontinuing use of tropical oils

Associated Press

ELMHURST, Ill. — Several food companies say they won't use tropical oils and lard in their foods in order to help reduce cholesterol.

Tropical oils are high in saturated fats, which can be converted by the body into artery-blocking cholesterol. These oils include coconut oil, palm oil and palm kernel oil. Other vegetable oils will be used instead.

Tropical oils had been used because they helped extend the shelf life of food products.

Diamonds Deliver Dreams

The gemstone of promises made and kept, diamonds deliver dreams. Think of a promise worth making, such as the promise to share your life with someone you love, and you'll understand why the promise worth having is worthy of a diamond.

Traditionalists may choose the so-called white diamond. Did you know, though, that diamond is available in fancy colors as well? If you dream in technicolor, diamonds still deliver dreams.

Consider pink diamonds. Recent diamond finds in Australia have included very special pink diamonds. The mine owners hold the pink diamonds until they are able to offer a noteworthy collection to buyers. Recently, one buyer bought all the pink diamonds offered and created a single suite of jewelry.

You've heard of the famous Hope Diamond. It is one example of blue diamonds. Imagine owning such a beautiful gem, one the color so many people see when they view the Hope Diamond at the Smithsonian.

Australia's diamond mines have also produced significant numbers of brown diamonds, sometimes marketed in tasty names such as "champagne" or 'cognac." If fact, brown diamonds may be especially well suited for the man who dreams and delivers.

No matter your choice of diamonds, we would be proud to help you make your dreams a reality.

Iced hot cross buns a favorite holiday treat to serve during Easter

By CRIS HARDY
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — It's the time of year for hot cross buns, favorites during Lent and Easter. Although Lent has already past, and Easter is upon us, it's not too early to begin collecting recipes for next year.

"A cross of confectioners' icing is the distinctive mark of this bread that is in every child's book of nursery rhymes," writes Bernard Clayton, author of "The Complete Book of Breads," (Simon and Shuster. $24.95)

"Despite its Christian overtone, the bun is supposed to have originated in pagan England. Even today, a hot cross bun baked and served on Good Friday is believed to have special curative powers," he writes.

The recipe below, from his excellent book, is "is speckled nut-brown, rich with cloves, nutmeg, currants and candied fruit."

Note: the dough is refrigerated overnight.

HOT CROSS BUNS

½ cup sugar
¼ cup (½ stick) butter, melted, plus extra for brushing
2 eggs, separated
1 cup hot milk (120 to 130 degrees)
3½ to 4 cups bread or all-purpose flour, approximately 1 package dry yeast
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon grated nutmeg
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
½ cup currants or raisins
¼ cup chopped candied fruit
1 egg yolk, beaten, mixed with 2 tablespoons water
1 cup confectioners' sugar mixed with 1 tablespoon milk and 1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 lightly greased baking sheet

In a large bowl mix the sugar, melted butter, egg yolks, and hot milk. Stir to blend and set aside for a moment.

Into a mixing or mixer bowl measure 2½ cups flour, the yeast, salt, and spices; blend. Pour the liquid mixture into the flour with 50 strong strokes of a wooden spoon, or for 2 minutes with a mixer flat beater. Add the currants or raisins and candied fruit. Blend.

Beat the egg whites until frothy but not quite stiff, and work into the batter. Add additional flour, ½ cup at a time, with the spoon or dough hook, until it is a rough mass. Knead for 2 or 3 minutes. Don't make it a stiff dough but leave it soft and elastic. Makes about 2 dozen buns.

BY PROCESSOR: Attach the short plastic dough blade. Mix the moist ingredients, as above. Measure 2½ cups flour, the yeast, salt, and spices into the work bowl. Pulse to blend. With the processor running, pour the liquid through the feed tube to make a batter. Uncover the bowl and scrape down the sides with the spatula. Drop in the currants or raisins and candied fruit.

With the processor on, add beaten egg whites and the flour, ¼ cup at a time, to form a rough, shaggy dough that cleans the sides of the bowl and rides on the blade.

FIRST RISING: Place the dough in a greased bowl, cover with plastic wrap, and let stand at room temperature while it rises to double in bulk, about 1½ hours.

(If prepared with a new fast-rising yeast and at the recommended higher temperatures, reduce the rising times by approximately half).

REFRIGERATION: Punch down the dough. Cover and store in the refrigerator overnight.

On the following day, remove the bowl from the refrigerator and allow to stand for about 1 hour at room temperature.

KNEADING: Turn the dough onto a floured work surface and knead for 10 minutes until the dough is smooth and elastic.

If using a food processor, return the dough to the work bowl and knead for 45 seconds.

SHAPING: Divide the dough into halves until you have 32 parts, and shape into small balls. Place the balls about 1-inch apart on the baking sheet.

SECOND RISING: Brush the balls with melted butter, cover with wax or parchment paper, and put aside to rise until double in volume, 1 hour.

PREHEAT: Preheat the oven to 375 degrees 20 minutes before baking.

BAKING: Remove the paper covering the balls. With a razor or scissors, slash a cross on the top of each bun. Brush with the egg-water wash.

Place in the oven until nicely browned, about 25 minutes. If oven space is limited, several batches may be baked.

FINAL STEP: Remove the buns from the oven. Place on wire racks. When cool, form a cross in the cuts on each bun with fairly firm confectioners' icing.

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Notify Social Security of changes

By STEVE EDWARDS

Edwards

Even after retirement, there are several things concerning Social Security that recipients should keep in mind. These reminders, or "things to do," will enable retirees drawing Social Security to get all the benefits to which they are entitled.

After you start receiving benefits, if your earnings might exceed the Earnings Limitation, phone the local Social Security Office and report this information to them. Having benefits withheld is less painful than having to pay back benefits that should not have been paid to you. Keep in mind that if benefits are paid incorrectly, recipients will have to pay them back. In addition, the law provides penalties for intentionally reporting your earnings incorrectly.

When you reach the age of 70, wages and salary beginning with the month of your birthday, are not counted toward the Earnings Limitation. At this age, you can then earn as much as you want without any reduction of benefits.

If you lose your card, visit your Social Security office and give them all the information they request. They will arrange for you to receive a new card with the same number. Do not apply for a new number. All of your earnings records are filed under the old number. You want to be sure you receive credit for all of your work.

If traveling outside the United States remember that Medicare, as a part of the Social Security program, does not pay for hospital or other medical expenses outside the United States. There are some exceptions, for example Canada. But these should be checked out before traveling. If you are under Medicare and plan to travel abroad, investigate other insurance.

In some cases, an individual can become eligible for a benefit on someone else's work record even though they are already receiving a benefit on their own record. Phone the Social Security office and tell them all the facts. Tell them you want to file an application. When they know about both benefits, they will figure both and you will get the larger one. If they do not know about one benefit because you do not apply, they cannot check to see if you should be receiving more.

Remember, Social Security is not ordinarily going to come looking for you to pay you benefits. They will not take any action until you apply. Then they will process your application carefully and with reasonable speed, considering that 39 million persons now receive Social Security benefits each month. In order to receive what you're entitled to, you have to apply for your benefits.

Steve Edwards is executive director of Community and Senior Services and the Visiting Nurse Service of Midland.

AT WIT'S END

Hats off to those who can wear one

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

Women who wear hats intimidate me.

So do women who shake cantaloupes near their ear as if they're tuning a maraca. Not to mention women who find their way back to their stadium seats from the rest room. As for women who try on a bathing suit wearing knee-highs at Loehmann's — are they courageous thrill-seekers living on the edge or what!

But women who wear hats intimidate me the most. It wasn't so bad when everyone wore a hat, but today the style is limited only to the few, the proud ... the tall. I think that's the key word here. Hats were never meant to be worn by women who can stand up under overhead bins on airplanes and not bash their heads in.

There was a time when I joined the Easter parade wearing a hat. One year, it was a dazzler with a wide brim that could have offered shade to Brazil. I felt like Grace Kelly in it until I saw myself in a snapshot. I looked like the Flying Nun in search of a runway, and I never wore it again.

Throughout the years, I have mentally put together a profile of women who can wear hats. They're generally women of great confidence. When they visit someone in the hospital, they park their car in the towaway zone. It's always there when they return for it. Their hair is always long enough on the sides to pull back and secure without little pieces standing out over the ears like Howdy Doody. They love blueberries out of season, and they never stain their teeth.

They have two children: a boy and a girl, who are not allowed to watch television. Their husband reads poetry to them that doesn't rhyme. They're the first to wear white shoes in the spring. The family dog wears braces for an overbite. The most devastating thing that has ever happened to them is they served dinner once with spotty glasses.

I know I am generalizing, but I'm bitter. In my heart, I know there is much to admire about a woman wearing a hat who knows that she attracts the attention of every eye around her and can still walk like a person. I used to give speeches, and I'd be so self-conscious that I'd walk to the podium as though I were marching into Poland.

Today the hat wearers will be out in force — those who are comfortable in them, and those who would not feel more conspicuous if two wombats were mating on their head.

I have a hat. It is graceful and feminine and has a wide brim with a red ribbon around the band. It gives me a certain dignity, as if I were attending a state funeral or something. People are generous in their compliments. Someday I may get up enough courage to wear it, instead of carrying it.

Chocolate Easter candy may be deadly for pets

Associated Press

DENVER — Easter baskets filled with chocolates and eagerly awaited by children could be lethal to pets. Chocolate contains theobromine. Even small amounts can cause vomiting and restlessness in pets, and larger amounts can cause their death.

What is a lethal dose of theobromine depends on the size of the animal and the type of chocolate. Ounce for ounce, baking chocolate has six to nine times more theobromine than milk chocolate.

The Journal of the American Animal Hospital Association reports the death of a springer spaniel after eating a two-pound bag of chocolate chips.

Few pet owners realize the toxic potential of chocolate, Dr. Aaron Glauberg, a West Orange, N.J., veterinarian wrote in the journal. "When pets are finally taken to veterinarians," he says, "they are often in more advanced states than if they had eaten something obviously toxic, like rat poison."

As little as 4 ounces of milk chocolate or one-half ounce of baking chocolate can be lethal for a small dog such as a Chihuahua or toy poodle, according to the journal.

While a very small amount of chocolate may not harm some dogs, it is safest to avoid giving it to them at all, says Glauberg. "Any amount is potentially toxic."

Midlander Marion McMillan handmade a large number of small ceramic roses to decorate the carousel horse at left.

Carousel horse maker seeks brass ring

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Marion McMillan has approximately 54 horses in her living room. And she says her husband wouldn't mind if she added a few more.

She's taken a childhood memory of riding the carousel and is turning it into a business, Kountry Karousel, that is drawing a lot of attention.

McMillan takes toy "Wonderhorses" she finds at garage sales, flea markets, or that she buys directly from the manufacturer, and turns them into carousel horses complete with fresh paint, flowers, ribbons and even jewels. One horse is festooned with a large number of small roses McMillan made herself. Another is bedecked with a fake fur saddle, furry mane and tail.

She cleans the horses up, removes the handles, wheels or rocker base, plugs the holes, sands them down, and then begins painting and decorating them. Or, as she puts it, "the fun part. Once you start decorating, you can think of hundreds of things to do with them. There's just no limit to your imagination."

She gets a lot of help and support from her husband, John, who cuts out the bases the horses are mounted on. He also cuts some of them in half to be decorated and used as wall decorations or mounted over the fireplace. McMillan says she thinks that will be a major selling point. She says she intends her horses be used as decoration in a living room, or even in a child's room.

RETAILING

Downhome retailer builds store empire

DE SOTO, Texas (AP) — The store manager of the Wal-Mart in this community on the outskirts of Dallas tells a story that gives an insight into the man considered responsible for a retailing phenomenon.

Manager Don Bost remembers one day last summer when a secretary telephoned from Wal-Mart Stores Inc.'s corporate headquarters in Bentonville, Ark. Chairman Sam Walton was about to land at a nearby airport and the secretary asked if someone could fetch him and bring him to the De Soto store.

Paying unexpected calls on stores is one way Walton has kept in close touch with everyday goings-on. His example is followed by other Wal-Mart executives and most make a point of spending a lot of time in the field.

Says Ed Nagy, district manager for 9 stores in the Dallas metropolitan area, "It's not like 'Uh-oh, someone's coming,' because they're always out."

By all accounts, Sam Walton's personality permeates operations throughout the company.

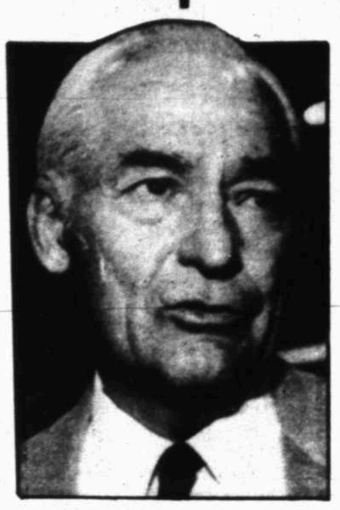

Everyone, from Wal-Mart President and Chief Operating Officer David Glass down to an hourly store worker, can readily quote the gospel according to Sam, as he is called.

To paraphrase Sam's primary rules of retailing, "Rule No.1 is the customer is always right. Rule No.2 says just in case the customer's wrong, revert to rule No.1."

If the principles sound old-fashioned and homespun, they are because that's the way Sam is, people who know him say.

He shuns the limelight that his company's success has shed on him and has decided to refuse almost all press requests for interviews.

He's happy to chat with folks in his stores, though.

Walton

He also regularly reminds Wal-Mart "associates" that hospitality to customers is crucial. He preaches it in person or via high-tech satellite hookup with his stores.

Wal-Mart employees became known as associates under a company effort to prove it cared about employees, partly to thwart a union organizing effort in the late 1960s.

One of the most sensitive subjects for Walton is the fortune he's amassed.

A close associate says Sam would "probably give anything" not to be named on Fortune magazine's list of the country's wealthiest people. The magazine has estimated that his immediate family's stake in Wal-Mart stock is worth about $6.8 billion.

"Sam Walton is more interested in his backhand than he is in his bank account," says Don Shinkle, Wal-Mart spokesman.

FAX for the world

Copley News Service

Forget about that cellular phone. If there's one office plaything you've just gotta have this year, it's a facsimile machine.

Just ask somebody who's already using one, if they haven't shamed you into buying one already.

Facsimile transmission has been around for decades.

The technology of transmitting documents between machines over telephone lines was touted back in the 1950s as even the wave of the future for newspapers. It was predicted that families would sit around their facsimile machine in their living rooms, reading the news of the day as their newspaper unfolded page by page from the fax machine.

They were right — sort of. People are sitting around a big, boxy machine, in their home, but it's not a fax.

But facsimile, or fax as it came to be known, hung around and is finally having its day, thanks to technology that led to large reductions in price and size of the machines and a vast improvement in transmission speed.

Fax is an industry in which sales have more than doubled each of the past two years, with shipments to the United States this year expected to double one more time, to 1.6 million units.

"It (fax) couldn't really get going until there were enough fax machines out there," said Bill McCue, president of Public Fax Inc., a Southern California-based publisher of fax directories and a promoter of public facsimile stations.

Midland woman sells 'ultimate' pickle

Food business fulfills dream

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

What do you do when all your friends rave that your pickles are the ultimate and keep urging you to go for it?

"I went for it," says Ann Dunbar. "I figured what the heck. How will I ever know if they are the ultimate pickle unless I market them."

That was over a year ago, now Dunbar is pushing her own brand of Midland-made pickles in local markets and looking to go regional and national with a recipe she says has been her family for years.

"It's a sweet, hot and spicy recipe with lots of garlic," says Dunbar, who calls her creation — of all things — The Ultimate Pickle.

Dunbar says the pickles have been in the stores locally for only a month, but that the response has been great. They are sold locally by Foods Fantastic.

"We sell to some customers by the case," said the housewife, who is married to Dick Dunbar, a Midland CPA, and is mother to a 16-year old daughter, 13-year old son.

She says she relied heavily upon her husband's accounting and business talents to launch the business. "He has the creative business sense, I have the dream," she said.

She said she also had help in marketing, labeling and pricing from Joanne West, a friend whose family founded the Wolf Brand Chili company.

Noted Dunbar: "It's interesting how helpful people are when you are launching a new business. I talked to the gentleman who founded Galante Picante Sauce. He was very encouraging. He started making picante sauce in a trailer at Hereford and now has a plant with eight employees."

Ann Dunbar expects to have her own plant someday, but currently he is manufacturing her pickles in the kitchen of Warfield Truck Stop, which is owned by her family. She explains: "I go in late, after hours, when I don't get in the way."

It is all part of her business plan, which was worked out with the help of the Business Department at Midland College. It calls for controlled, managable growth. "Growing too fast, getting more business than you can handle, can be almost as disasterous for a small company as too little business," she warns.

She also warns that launching a dream is no easy task: "It takes such a long time to take care of all the little details. It took months just to decide on the label."

Ann Dunbar, smiling from behind her behind her special recipe, isn't in a pickle but into pickles. She started the pickle business as a local operation and hopes to take it nationwide.

Can we count on Mexico for our oil future?

Pitts

The oil industry has been warning Washington for years about the dangers of foreign imports. Now that frightful picture of "Uncle Sam over a barrel of oil" is taking a new turn.

For the past five years, America's reserves and production have been shrinking at about the same rate its consumption of imported crude has gone up.

Now, we learn that Mexico, the sixth largest supplier of crude oil to the U.S., has been facing the same problem of shrinking reserves and growing consumption for the past five years. Mexican officials now warn that it may have to suspend exports within 20 years, a move that could put the U.S. squarely in the arms of an OPEC bear hug, unless it begins to take action now.

According to latest production figures recently released by PEMEX, the national oil company of Mexico, Mexican reserves shrank 2 percent in 1988 to 67.8 billion barrels. Since 1983 reserves have shrunk by 6 percent from an all-time high of 72 billion barrels as Mexico continues to drain reserves without replacing them.

Currently Mexico produces 2.5 million barrels daily of which 1.3 million barrels (about half to the U.S.) are exported. The rest, 1.2 million barrels, are used to fuel the Mexican economy. However, Pemex forecasts that domestic energy consumption, if it continues at present rates, will be 4.7 million barrels per day by the year 2010.

At that time, Mexico will have to consider a total suspension of oil exports and a costly exploration of new oil fields to meet the country's fuel needs, according to Pemex.

One of the reasons reserves declined is because Pemex refused to open new fields because of oil prices; another is a slow down in exploration.

So far Mexico has not vigorously pursued exploration, moreover it has poured capital expenditures into expansion of its petrochemical industry, meaning that it intends to continue to use its oil resources to create Mexican jobs rather than U.S. jobs. That being the case for Mexico, Saudi Arabia and others, the inference is that we can expect to import more and more products and less and less crude stocks — and to lose more and more petroleum jobs to foreign producers.

Last year Mexico exported an average of 1.30 million barrels per day at an average of $12.24 per barrel and earned approximately $5.85 billion, or about one-third of that country's export revenue. If crude oil were converted into gasoline, diesel and fuel oil, that number could easily increase by one-third.

What the country is losing from declining reserves it is hoping to gain by increased refining and export of petroleum products.

Last year Pemex drilled only 33 exploratory wells and 111 development wells, of which 87 were productive. No major finds were recorded, but it is obvious from past news accounts in this newspaper that Mexico expects to find new reserves one day in northern Mexico. The reserves may be there and they may not be. If they are not, it spells concern for America, because if we were counting on the reserves of Mexico to carry us through the next few decades, they just may not be there.

Washington has told us: "Don't worry about the growing imports because most of our imports are now coming from friendly neighbors like Mexico and Canada and not from the treacherous Middle East." The fact is Mexico is probably no more dependable a source of crude oil than the Middle East. Every nation, including Mexico, has its own agenda. And that agenda is doing what is right for the motherland when the time is right.

John Paul Pitts is business/oil editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

Texas Permits to Drill
Monthly Totals, 1988-1989

Source: Texas Railroad Commission

The Texas Railroad Commission issued 867 oil and gas drilling permits in February, down sharply from the 996 the commission issued in January.

Drilling permits continue declining

From Staff Reports

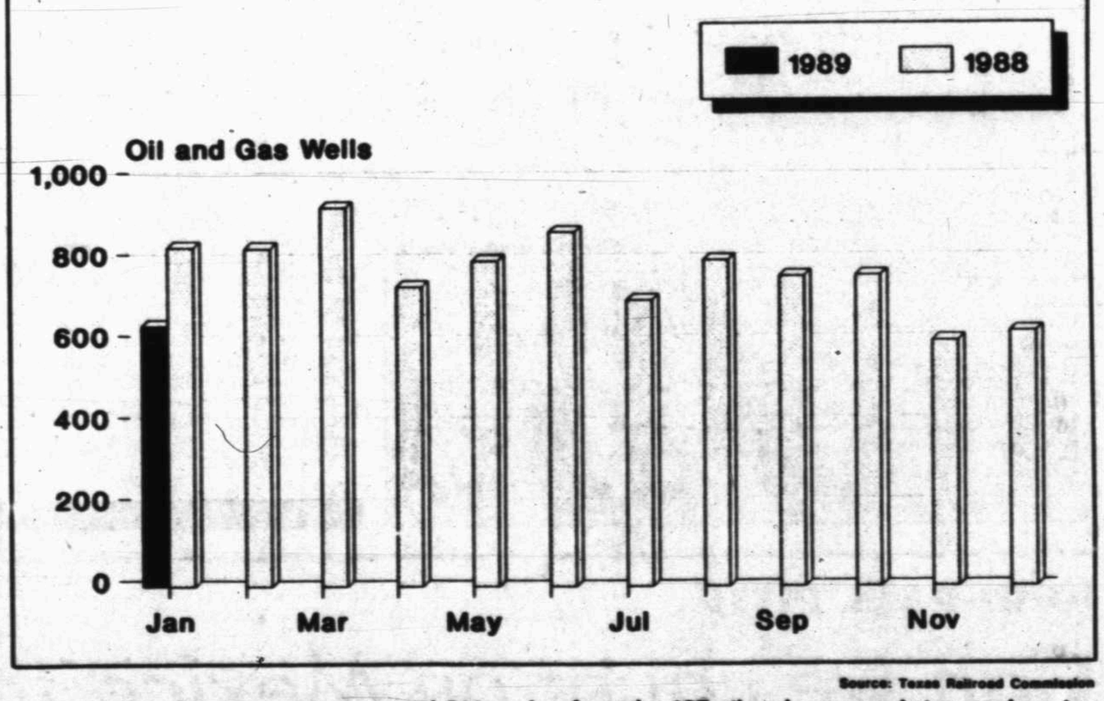

Austin — A total of 867 drilling permits were issued by the Railroad Commission in February, down sharply from the 994 issued in January.

The February total included 558 permits to drill new oil and gas tests, 30 to reeenter existing well bores, 29 to deepen existing holes, 143 to plugback existing holes, and eight for other wells. Operators were also issued 99 amended drilling permits.

There were 79 permits issed for new oil and gas holes in the District 8 (Midland) area, 43 in the District 8A (Lubbock) area and 44 in the District 7C (San Angelo) area.

In the first two months of 1989, the commission has issued 1,861 drilling permits, a 27.9 percent decrease from the 2,582 issued during the same period in 1988.

Texas Well Completions
Monthly, 1988-1989

Texas oil and gas operators reported 211 and gas and 390 oil completions in February, down from the 697 oil and gas completions and service completions reported in January.

Completions decline in February

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — Texas oil and gas operators reported 211 gas and 390 oil completions in February, according to the Texas Railroad Commission. February 1988's total was 219 gas and 610 oil completions.

In February, there were four gas completions and 79 oil completions in the District 8 (Midland) area, 28 oil completions in the District 8A (Lubbock) area and seven gas and 35 oil completions in the District 7C (San Angelo) area.

In the first two months of 1989, the commission has recorded a total of 1,370 well completions, a 24.4 percent decline from the 1,814 well completions recorded during the first two months of 1988.

Basin rig count drops one

From Staff Reports

Both the U.S. and Permian Basin rig counts were slightly lower this week.

According to Baker Hughes Inc., the U.S. count fell three to end the week at 740.

The Permian Basin rig count fell one to stand at 96, the company reported.

Lea County, N.M. continues to be the most active in the Basin with 15 rigs at work. Andrews County was second with 10 rigs.

Runnels County saw renewed activity this week, and no counties lost activity.

Among major oil producing states, Louisiana showed the greatest decrease — nine, while Pennsylvania was down five and Michigan was off four. Other declines were in North Dakota, two; and Colorado and Ohio, down one each.

Kansas had the biggest increase with six additional rigs, followed by Wyoming, with five. New Mexico was up by three, with California and Oklahoma each up by one. Texas was unchanged for the week.

API: Gasoline prices lowest since early 1970s

From Staff Reports

The average pump price of gasoline in the U.S. in 1988 — adjusted for inflation and higher taxes — was at its lowest level since the early 1970s, according to a study by the American Petroleum Institute.

The API reports that the average U.S. pump price of a gallon of gasoline in the year 1974 was 53.2 cents, an amount that included 12.3 cents of federal and state motor fuel taxes.

Though that average pump price had risen 43.2 cents per gallon by 1988, the API pointed out that this included an additional 11.8 cents in motor fuel taxes. Moreover, the API said the Consumer Price Index, a measure of inflation, steadily increased from 49.3 in 1974 to 118.3 last year.

When the adjustment was made to account for higher taxes and inflation, the study reports, the average retail price of gasoline in 1988 was 61.1 cents per gallon, 21.9 cents lower than the 83.0 average in 1974.

Insurance firms foreclosing on Texas properties

DALLAS (AP) — Life insurance companies, including some of the field's strongest, are foreclosing on commerical properties more than ever before, and it appears Texas is being hit the hardest.

"There is a lot of concern that today's underperforming property will become the distressed property of tomorrow," says Paul Saylor, a principal in the Atlanta office of Institutional Property Consultants.

One insurance company, Hartford, Conn.-based The Travelers, foreclosed on 47 commercial properties in Texas last year representing more than $280 million in outstanding loans, according to statements filed with the state insurance department in Austin.

Nationally, The Travelers foreclosed on 96 properties representing more than $535 million in loans, The Dallas Morning News reported.

Aetna Life Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn., recently took back an industrial property in suburban Richardson, Texas, from Dallas-based Trammell Crow Co.

Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York earlier this month foreclosed on Dallas-based Lincoln Property's 21-story Turtle Creek Centre in the Oak Lawn area. Equitable loaned $44 million, or the equivalent of $145 a square foot, on the 300,000-square-foot building in 1986.

Insurance companies invest in real estate two ways.

Direct ownership, or equity, investments typically account for between 2 percent and 4 percent of a company's total assets.

Mortgage investments, in which a company lends the money for a project, typically account for about 20 percent or more of total assets.

Some insurance executives say the commercial real estate cycle has hit bottom as have funds available for new purchases in Texas, especially in Dallas and Houston.

But many look for a long turnaround of three to seven years. They say there is too much real estate available and too many uncertainties with the ongoing bank and S&L situation.

"We're optimistic that we may be able to invest in Texas again someday, but not now," says Mike Towner, real estate vice president at New York Life.

With more than $490 million in loans on Texas urban properties, New York Life foreclosed on 10 Texas commercial properties in 1988, representing loans of $57 million. The company foreclosed on 21 commercial properties nationally representing loans of $121 million.

The New York City-based company has seen one of the most dramatic increases in problem loans. At the end of 1985, New York Life listed just $500,000 in foreclosed commercial and agricultural property on its books. At the end of 1988, that number had increased to $100.3 million.

Travelers appears to be the hardest hit company. It also is more concentrated in Texas than any of the other large life insurance companies.

In its annual statements on file in Austin, the company said it had urban loans — mainly for commercial projects like office buildings, apartments and shopping centers — of $1.4 billion in Texas, more than in any other state.

In addition to its 1988 foreclosures, the company also said that at the end of the year an additional 99 commercial properties with loans worth $557.9 million were in the process of foreclosure nationally. One-third of those properties, with loans worth $160 million, were in Texas.

The Travelers Corp., which operates Travelers Insurance, declined to make available to The News a real estate executive to discuss the situation.

JOBLESS BENEFITS

From Staff Reports

The U.S. Department of Labor has begun approving petitions from oil and gas-related companies applying for expanded employment benefits under the Trade Adjustment Assistance section of the 1974 Trade Act.

Certification allows all company workers laid off due to a lack of work to apply for enhanced unemployment assistance including: weekly trade adjustment allowances, job placement; employment counseling; vocational training; and financial assistance for retraining, job search and job relocation.

According to the Texas Employment Commission, petitions have been approved for workers separated from the following companies during the specified period:

■ Cactus Drilling Co. Midland plant, petition No. 21807; since Oct. 1, 1985.

Affected workers should contact Gay Honneywell at the Midland TEC office, 915/682-9421.

Corpus Christi accountant marks 50 years in profession

Still works 40 hour weeks, finds tax work challenging

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — In the autumn of a taxing but rewarding career, Corpus Christi CPA Ernest Johnson — one of the state's longest-practicing accountants — is busy meeting another last-minute income tax filing rush.

In a matter of weeks, Johnson, 71, a partner in the certified public accounting firm of Collier, Johnson & Woods, will mark his 50th year as a licensed CPA.

And that makes him an oldtimer in the profession. In fact, only 11 people in Texas have been practicing CPA's longer, says the Texas State Board of Public Accountancy. Johnson's license number is 737 — low when you consider the state board has issued more than 49,600 numbers to date. Incidentially, the dean of active CPA's is Waco's Ross Segrest, who holds license No. 405 issued Jan. 7, 1933. Johnson earned his CPA certificate in May 1939.

"I'm 71, but I'm healthy, I enjoy working hard, and I still find tax work very challenging," says Johnson, who has no plans to retire.

He still regularly logs 40 hours a week at the office and up to 55 hours weekly during the hectic tax filing crunch time between Jan. 1 and April 15.

Johnson personally handles more than 100 client accounts at one of Corpus Christi's oldest and largest independent accounting firms. Some have been repeat customers for more than 30 years.

To say preparing individual tax returns or conducting audits for business customers was much simpler when Johnson started his accounting career is a gross understatement.

"I can remember when taxpayers were allowed a $2,500 exemption for married couples," he said. "A lot of people didn't have to file returns because they didn't make that much in annual pay."

When Johnson began his accounting career, fees were $25 a day for senior accountants and $15 a day for juniors, compared with today's billing rates that range from $40 to $110 an hour, he says.

"I started working June 13, 1938, after graduating from the University of Texas for $125 a month at Carneiro, Chumney & Co., CPAs in San Antonio.

"That was considered a good salary. If you went to work with oil companies like Humble (Exxon) or Texaco, you might get $150. Most attorneys were starting at about $75 a month," he said.

After Johnson moved to Corpus Christi in December 1938, he counted himself among 15 accountants in the city of 60,000 residents. Today the Corpus Christi Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants, which Johnson helped organize in the fall of 1947, has 300 members.

"Today two-thirds of taxpayers and nearly all businesses need some assistance from accountants, tax lawyers or tax advisers" to complete their annual income tax returns, Johnson estimates.

Fifty years ago, the period from May into October was generally a slow time for accountants. But with more companies operating on fiscal instead of calendar years, changes and complexities in tax laws, more tax-payment extensions and broadened year-long tax planning and evaluation work, there is no slack time, Johnson says.

The need for tax preparers has been mounting since 1943, when employee income tax withholding taxes became law, Johnson noted.

Major revisions of the federal tax code in 1954 and 1986 plus more stringent practice rules set down by the American Institute of CPAs also boosted workloads for accountants. More individuals and businesses are reporting taxes quarterly instead of annually.

The 1986 tax overhaul and the 138 public laws modifying the Internal Revenue Code since 1976 have also impacted tax and audit preparation.

"Everything perceived by Congress to be a loophole to be closed was not necessarily a loophole," Johnson said of the 1986 changes. "They over-corrected in some cases.

"But the complexities of preparing returns have increased tremendously to comply with the law. It hurt almost every business by causing them added expenses."

It is difficult to give general income tax tips because individual taxpayer and business tax profiles vary so much, Johnson says.

"Good record-keeping is a very important tool to operating a profitable business and avoiding problems and pitfalls," Johnson says. "As your business grows, sound record-keeping practices become more vital to managing a successful business most efficiently."

Johnson was born in El Campo, where his Swedish-born father, Gustaf, operated a machine shop for most of his life. His mother, Augusta, taught grade school.

"I always liked working with numbers from as early as I can remember," Johnson said. "I thought working with figures would be something I'd enjoy. It didn't bore me, so I chose accounting."

In February 1947, Johnson, Jack Collier and Velda Woods formed an independent accounting firm. Collier died in 1987. Woods, semi-retired for about 10 years, still does some limited tax work at the firm.

AP Laserphoto

Only 11 Texans have been practicing accounting longer than Ernest Johnson, who has been with Collier, Johnson & Woods for 50 years.

In September 1947, Johnson married Ann McGloin. They have two grown daughters.

Johnson recalls that in the 1940s there were only three IRS agents in Corpus Christi to handle audits and collections. Now more than 50 federal tax agents work out of the local office.

"There was a table in the old Nixon Cafe where agents and accountants met and ate lunch every day for 35 cents," Johnson said. "We saw them regularly, went hunting and fishing with them.

"Now there is little social contact with the IRS, but we still enjoy a good relationship. I have no complaints. They do work that is responsible and as well as they can. In the final analysis, they are working for approval of others, just like the rest of us are doing."

And Johnson says his half century in tax accounting has led him to believe that the vast majority of taxpayers have no desire to cheat on their income taxes.

"It's only human nature not to want to pay taxes and keep as much income as possible," he said. "But most people want to pay only their fair share of taxes under the law."

Johnson's firm has grown to a staff of 28 employees, including 16 CPAs. It is one of the most active representatives of the Coastal Bend banking profession with 12 different banks as clients.

Permian gets new president

From Staff Reports

Following William D. Kleine's announcement of his retirement as president and chief operating officer of The Permian Corp., James E. Haas has announced he will retire as chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the board. This will complete his retirmenet from National Intergroup Inc., Permian's parent company.

Simmons

Gaylon H. Simmons, a 26-year veteran of the petroleum industry, has been named president and chief executive officer of the company. Laurance J. Farley, a member of Permian's board, will assume the duties of chairman of the board.

Simmons has been vice president of supply and wholesale marketing for Mapco Petroleum Inc. of Tulsa since 1985. He began his career in the petroleum industry by joining the controller's department of Gulf Oil Corp. in 1962 after his graduation from the University of Houston.

Farley has been a member of the Permian Corp.'s board of directors since September 1988. He joined NII in February 1988 as executive vice president, finance, planning and chief financial officer. In July he assumed the additional duties of chairman of FoxMeyer Corp., NII's wholesale pharmaceutical distribution subsidiary and was named an NII director. In January 1989 he was appointed NII president and chief operating officer, replacing Haas, who retired.

Howard M. Love, chairman and chief executive officer of NII, stated that "These appointments are part of our transition program developed over a year ago. We deeply appreciate the contributions made by Kleine and Haas since The Permian Corp. was acquired by NII in 1985. Bill Kleine joined Permian soon after it was founded in 1955 and has been instrumental in building it into one of the nation's largest and most respected crude oil gathering firms. At the same time, we are confident Simmons' broad experience in the oil and gas industry will be a valuable asset to Permian and its customers."

Celebrate Spring With Color

Following the cold, wet winter the nation's just completed, spring comes with a special welcome this year. The first blooms, the first buds on trees bring to mind the special pleasures of colored gems.

This spring fashionable colors include navy, white, ecru, pinks, oragnes, greens and purples. Gemstones which are welcome additions to the fashions of springs are pink tourmaline, citrine, green tourmaline or peridot, and amethyst. Because of this season's fashion choices, these colorful gems are good choices.

In addition to the cuts of gems you may be used to seeing, such as the so-called emerald cut, other options are possible. Beads give a friendly look while special fantasy cuts display sophistication. The traditional cabochon, a rounded-dome look, is still another possibility.

How do you select a colored gemstone? How pleasing you find the color is key. The most desirable color is not so light that the color is just hinted at and not so heavy that the stone seems black. Look for the gem which you will enjoy wearing.

You may be surprised to discover how many options await you in our colored stone department. We are prepared to discuss with you the colors and the gems of your choice. We will help you select your gem and tell you how to care for that gem so that the color continues as rich as spring.

MEETINGS

Midland sheriff to discuss drugs, oilfield theft

The Petroleum Accountants Society of the Permian Basin will meet Tuesday at Ranchland Hills Country Club beginning at 6 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Gary Painter, Midland County Sheriff, who will discuss narcotics, oilfield theft and the new jail construction.

WTGS to host Mobil production geologist

Dale Walker, production geologist with Mobil Oil's Midland Division, will be the guest speaker at Tuesday's meeting of the West Texas Geological Society. The meeting will be at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Walker will discuss "Identification of Subsurface Structure in United States Gulf Coast Using Remote-Sensing Imagery."

According to Walker, interpretation of remote-sensing imagery can identify surface indications of deep sub-surface structures in the U.S. Gulf Coast. Structural growth can cause subtle changes in surface geology, topography, drainage patterns, vegetation and soil moisture that are identifiable with Multiospectral Scanner Landsat and National High Altitude Photography Program.

Cost of the luncheon is $7 per person, and reservations should be made by calling the WTGS office by noon Monday.

Analysts see only temporary inflation halt

By STEVE LOHR
New York Times News Service

LONDON — The moderate monthly advance in U.S. consumer prices reported this week is seen by economists and corporate executives in Europe as at best a temporary respite in a worldwide trend of mounting inflation.

"Everywhere, there have been nasty inflation shocks," said Jeremy Hale, senior international economist for Goldman, Sachs International.

In Britain, strong growth and a consumer boom have combined to create one of the highest rates of inflation among the major industrialized countries. The latest figure showed that in January inflation was running at a 7.5 percent rate.

The global inflation, economists warn, poses a threat to the fragile equilibrium that has prevailed in the world economy for more than a year, characterized by calm currency markets and policy coordination among industrialized nations.

"It has to be a source of profound concern," said Stephen Marris, the senior European fellow in Paris of the Institute for International Economics, a research group.

Prices are being driven upward mainly by a worldwide consumer and investment boom, which has factories humming and skilled workers much in demand. The stepped-up pace of economic activity makes it easier for producers to command higher prices for their goods and for workers to win higher wage settlements.

Some special factors, particularly a jump of more than $6 a barrel in oil prices since November, have also contributed to inflation in recent months. And other commodity prices advanced 23 percent in dollar terms last year in response to strong industrial demand.

Oil and other commodity prices have about peaked by now, most analysts say, but because it takes three months to a year for higher prices for primary producers to work their way through into price tags, the inflationary pressure from high raw-material costs will persist for much of this year.

Even in nations with a deep historical aversion to inflation, like West Germany and Japan, prices are rising at a rapid rate, though from a low base.

In Germany, for example, where factories are working at 89 percent of capacity, the highest level in 15 years, consumer price inflation will more than double this year, to about 2.6 percent, estimates Goldman, Sachs International.

In Japan, consumer prices are likely to advance 2 percent this year, up from 0.7 percent last year, pushed along by higher wage settlements recently, in the 5-7 percent range. Such gains are well ahead of the recent increases in labor productivity in Japan, which have averaged 3 percent a year.

Yet the current bout of inflation, Hale and other economists say, is still a far cry from the virulent strain of the 1970s.

There are three main differences. First, oil prices may have rebounded, but it is nothing compared with the two oil-price shocks of the 1970s. Second, when central banks engineered an abrupt slowdown of the world economy to rein in inflation in the late 1970s and early 1980s, one result was high unemployment, especially in Western Europe.

Unemployment has fallen in the last few years, but because it was relatively high at the outset of the current expansion, wage-price demands were delayed.

Finally, industrial investment during this expansion has been stronger for a longer period than during the 1970s, thus yielding real productivity gains that restrain price increases. "But the risk now is that those gains will be eroded by a resurgence of inflation," Hale said.

Governments must decide how much to tighten fiscal or monetary policy — and when to do it — to get the maximum inflation-fighting effect without precipitating a recession.

Many economists view early action in the form of tightening fiscal or monetary policy, especially in the United States, the world's largest economy, as the course most likely to insure a gentle slowdown instead of a full-blown recession.

Once an inflation psychology takes hold and prices begin to ratchet upward, they argue, it takes a much bigger policy shock to bring inflation down, and the risk of recession is magnified.

Britain shows perhaps the most clear-cut case of an overheating economy. When he presented the national budget last week, Nigel Lawson, chancellor of the Exchequer, said, "The real threat is posed by the increase in inflation."

Few of Lawson's counterparts in other countries would be likely to make a similar admission, not because it is not true but for fear of encouraging a wage-price spiral.

Most treasury and finance ministers prefer to play down their worries about rising prices rather than be seen to be contributing to an inflationary psychology that results in higher wage demands by workers.

Indeed, average wage settlements are climbing in Britain. "And we're all going to face an inflationary spiral," said Henry A. Sweetbaum, chairman of Wickes PLC, a leading retailer of home-improvement products with 7,000 employees.

Yet Britain has also taken action to combat inflation, tightening monetary policy and sending domestic interest rates up 4 percentage points since summer, to 13 percent.

Prices range from $150 to $600, depending on how much work has gone into the decorating. She explains that "you have to get money for your time." She adds that she's willing to work with a customer on payment.

As to whether the price is right, McMillan says that "if people are buying them at the price we ask, then we know we're asking the right price. If they're not, then we'll have to rethink it." She's already sold four in the short time she's been making them.

In addition to the larger horses she decorates, her husband cuts out smaller wooden horses that she paints and sells for prices ranging from $20 to $28.

She got started making the carousel horses last fall when she bought one at a local flea market. "I bought one, and the idea hit me that if they could do it, I could do it," she recalls. "I've always been one to do arts and crafts. I'm a person that if I ever see anything, I'll figure out how to do it."

The first carousel horse she made, she says, took over a week. "When I first started, I was so afraid I would make a mistake," she laughs. "But after the first two, I've just been having a ball." She estimates she can do one in three to four days.

She hopes to place some of her horses in a store to be sold on consignment, noting that a furniture store or home decorating store would be the perfect place to sell them. However, she adds, she hasn't yet had the nerve to approach store owners. She says having her own store where she could sell her horses and other arts and crafts "would be ideal."

College didn't prepare Ann Dunbar for a business enterprise. She studied art in college and lived in Dallas for 13 year, where she worked as art librarian in the Dallas Public Library and managed an art gallery.

"Volunteer work gave me skills in marketing, public relations and dealing with people and I have been able to use them in this business," she said. She is active in Museum of the Southwest, Ballet Midland and the Midland-Odessa Symphony.

"When you see people in the food business, they are usually trying to live out a dream. So many people get ideas, but so few follow through on them. I thought it was time to follow through for me."

WALTON

Samuel Moore Walton turns 71 on March 29. He was born in Kingfisher, Okla., and grew up as the son of a farm-mortgage banker.

He graduated from the University of Missouri with an economics degree in 1940 and joined J.C. Penney Co. as a management trainee in Des Moines, Iowa. After serving three years in the Army, he went to Arkansas and opened a Ben Franklin five-and-dime store, eventually becoming the company's biggest franchisee.

The seeds of the Wal-Mart empire were sown when Sam and his brother James L., or Bud, opened the first Wal-Mart Discount City in 1962. The rest will probably earn an entry in the history of U.S. retail trade.

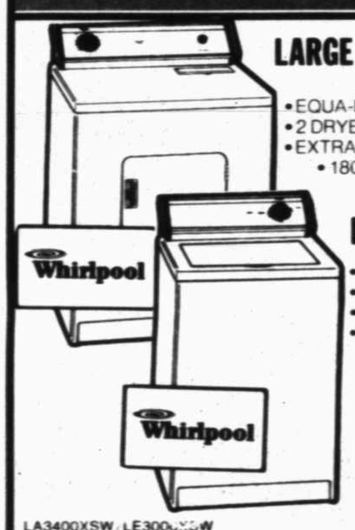

Bud is a senior vice president and board member of Wal-Mart. Three of the four grown children Sam and his wife Helen had are involved with the company in various capacities.

Sam hasn't slowed much, enjoying hunting and tennis as much as ever, and is said not to suffer after effects from a bout with leukemia, now in remission. He spends less time in the office since handing over most responsiblities to David Glass. Sam is still chairman of the board.

Glass doesn't hesitate when asked if Wal-Mart can flourish without Sam. The answer is an emphatic yes because, he says, "We have great people." The Walton family will always be involved, he adds.

Commenting on the future, Glass says: "We'll be judged on what we produce today. Tomorrow, what we've done in the past won't matter."

'I Ought to be in Pictures'

By GEORGIA TODD TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

"But if for any reason, you should want to make a phone call on my behalf — not out of any sense of loyalty or obligation or guilt, but just because you recognize some potential in me — I would appreciate it," 19-year-old Libby tells Herb, an over-the-hill screenwriter and the father she has just met after 16 years.

"Who taught you to talk like that?"

"Like what?"

"Like coming around corners, going up over the roof, down into the basement and up through the sewer. You got something to say to me, say it straight out."

Libby wants to be in pictures. Her aspiration is high. She most identifies with Jane Fonda, whom she "patterned" her "whole life after."

Thus begins Neil Simon's "I Ought to be in Pictures," opening Friday at Theatre Midland.

Midland Community Theatre's production stars Buster Tieman as Herb, Pam Lester as Libby and Flo Hughes as Steffy, Herb's current sleep-in-once-a-week girlfriend who is a makeup artist for Columbia Pictures.

"Simon talks about attachments and unattachments that we go through in our lives that we don't even realize were attachments until they're not there," Tieman says of the play.

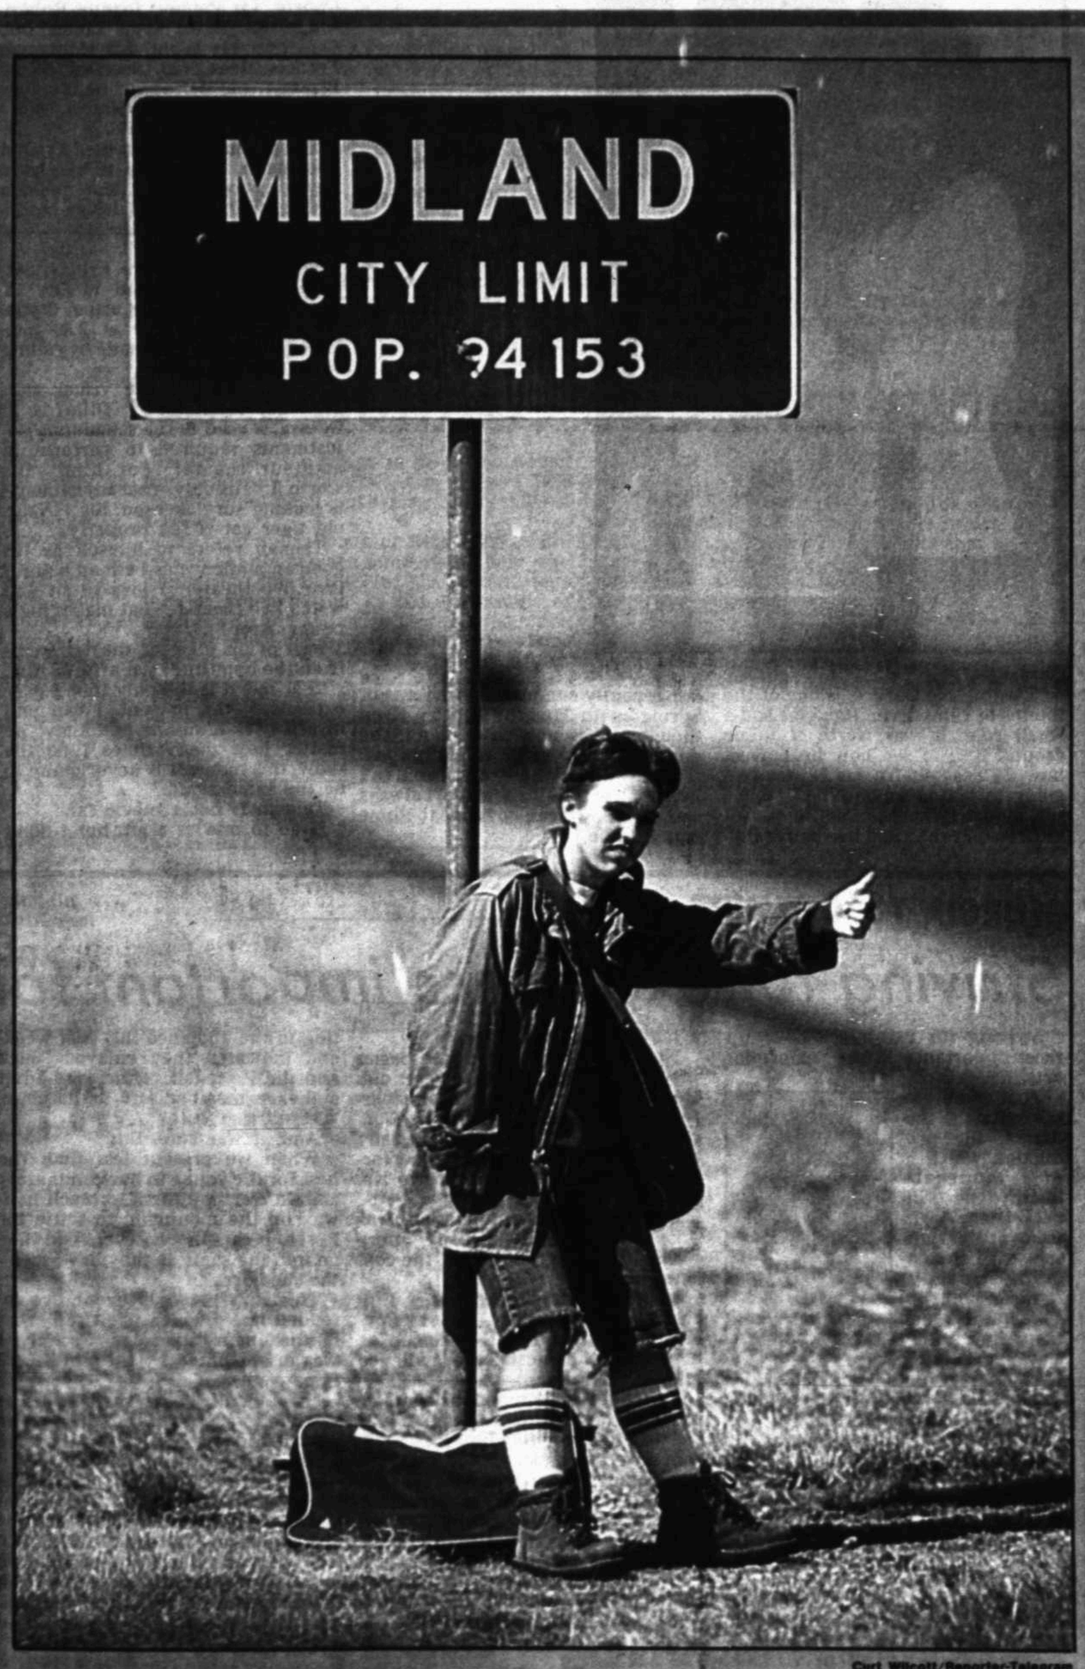

"I really like the relationships between the characters, I think the father-daughter relationship is very special," Miss Lester says. "Not only do the father and daughter become closer, but the mother and daughter become closer.

"You never see her. But, there's a phone call, and I think Libby really has learned more about her mother by talking with her father."

This comedy represents Miss Lester's first Midland show.

A recent graduate of the University of Colorado at Boulder, Miss Lester, of Odessa, has a bachelor of fine arts degree in theater performance. She plans to pursue a career in that field.

Currently, she works at Racquetball Spirits Center in Odessa, living with her family, "moving on, hopefully, when I get enough money saved up," she says.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Neil Simon's "I Ought to be in Pictures" arrives Friday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. Odessan Pam Lester plays the role of Libby, who hitchhikes from New York to California to find her writer father and launch a career in movies.

Acting for Tieman, also from Odessa, is "such a high." He didn't discover that high until he was in college and auditioned for Theatre III in Dallas.

"The first time I was on stage, I was paid. I went to an open audition for apprentices and took a semester off every now and then and would go on tour."

Tieman acted professionally for "a good long while" for Country Dinner Playhouse and The Gaslights, both dinner theater circuits.

"Then, it got to the point where I was really tired of everything I owned being in a duffle bag and a suitcase. And I wanted some dirt and some things.

"You have these intense relationships for a couple of months, and then you got to Chicago, and they go to Atlanta. It's a great life when you're young."

One of life's turning points happened in Oklahoma City in the early 1970s. Tieman and a friend of his, Rene Clemente, spent 48 hours talking about their lives.

"I just decided I didn't want to do it any more — the insecurities, the moving around. So I went to Amarillo, where my grandmother lived, and got into retail. Rene went to New York, and two weeks later he was the first replacement for Paul in 'Chorus Line' and in the original cast of 'Cats.' When I was in New York last year, he was in 'Les Miserables.' "

Does Tieman regret his decision?

"Yes. Every now and then I look back and wonder how it would have been different.

"When I was seriously trying to make it — people in the Southwest have this anti-New York thing — and everybody said 'go to L.A.,' and I did, and I hated L.A. I spent the most miserable year and a half of my life there — because there's no live theater there. I've never been interested in film work at all."

In the mid-'70s, Tieman finally visited New York for the first time.

"I felt at home the minute I got there. I don't know if I'd still be doing theater there, but I think if I'd gone there instead of L.A., I'd still be in New York."

Today, for Tieman, acting is "a wonderful hobby." Still, his heart's desire is to "be paid for what I do now, without having to hold down a real job. If I could get a weekly salary commensurate with what I make and do shows in West Texas, I'd be happy.

"I love theater in West Texas so much because of the challenge. The scripts and things you're able to do, and the people you're able to work with, and the audiences that you're able to play for, when all that comes together — fireworks."

When asked if he still dreams of being in a Broadway show, he quickly says, "Yeah."

Playing the role of Herb in "I Ought to be in Pictures" represents the fulfillment of a desire. Since Tieman's first acting role was in Neil Simon's "Star Spangled Girl," a " big touring attraction at that time in dinner theater," he learned early in his career that he liked Simon's "humor immensely.

" 'Pictures' comes after, when he started to not only entertain us with his humor, but be a little bit more personal with his comments on life and what people go through. This play, in particular, says so many things about people in my peer group who are afraid to make commitments or are surviving earlier commitments. I saw a portion of it on the Tony awards and wanted to play this role."

Perhaps best known to Midland audiences for his role in the two-man production "Greater Tuna," Tieman enjoys "the closeness of the small group as far as the actors. Of course, when we're looking at a show of any sort like that, no matter what size show you're doing, it still includes the same amount of volunteers, so you still get to work with a number of people. That's what I like about Theatre Midland."

Actress proud to be in 'Rain Man'

MCT

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In her first two American films, Italian-born Valeria Golino has had a dizzying contrast of lovers: Pee-wee Herman and Tom Cruise.

First came "Pee-wee's Big Top," in which she played the circus aerialist who wins the heart of the little guy in the tight suit. The comedy didn't exactly overload the nation's box offices, but her next film did. In "Rain Man," the season's reigning box-office champ, she is Cruise's secretary and bedmate.

Golino, 22, is unexpectedly modest about her work in "Rain Man."

"I am proud to be in the movie, but I am not in it very much," the dark beauty said. "But that is good. The relation is between the two of them (Cruise and Dustin Hoffman). That's what the movie is about: the relationship of two brothers. If I was there all the time, I would have been in an awkward position. Or I would have had to be arguing with (Cruise) all the time. So I had to leave."

Golino worked in the Los Angeles scenes, as well as the locations in Cincinnati and Las Vegas, but she missed the middle portion in Oklahoma.

"There was something about Cincinnati that I liked: the people, the architecture," she commented. "Las Vegas? It was fun, but two weeks and a half in Caesar's Palace was too much. There is something about the sound that gets you. You go in the rooms and you're like in a cage. There are things on the windows to keep people from jumping out. But you can have fun."

Golino's ascent to stardom appears to have resulted from a series of happy accidents.

"I started as a model in Rome when I was 14½ or 15," she said. "I was not planning to be an actress. Then I met (director) Lina Wertmuller, and she said, 'You are going to be in this movie.' It was not an easy thing for me. To work with someone like Lina, who is a wild woman, for the first time, it was kind of shocking.

"I said, 'I thought this was glamour, and this is hell!' She was very tough to me. She is very affectionate, also very severe. But after the first movie, I decided this was what I wanted to do."

She appeared in 11 Italian films, earning the Venice Film Festival's Golden Lion for "Love Story."

The producers of "Big Top Pee-wee" saw one of her films and brought her to Hollywood for a screen test.

"When I came here, I didn't know who Pee-wee Herman was or Randal Kleiser, the director," she recalled. "In the beginning I didn't want to do the movie; I had never done comedy before.

"Then I saw Pee-wee's first movie, and there was something about him that made me say, 'I can do this.' There was something about the way he moved, his character, that was so different, so original. I said, 'That's not going to be 'Police Academy.' It's going to be a comedy.' "

How did she land "Rain Man"?

"In the most traditional way possible. My agent called me and said, 'There is a movie with Tom Cruise and Dustin Hoffman.' I said, 'What?' He said, 'The role is written for an American girl. Now they're not sure. Let's give it a try.' "

The actress made a good impression on the casting director. She read scenes twice for the director, Barry Levinson, then with Tom Cruise. Having finished "Big Top Pee-wee," she flew home to Rome, then was asked to return to read once more with Cruise, then with Cruise and Hoffman.

"I've never done so much reading for such a small role," she said. The script was rewritten to accommodate her accent; since Cruise imported Italian cars, she could logically be his secretary-interpreter.

How was working with Cruise?

"It was much more interesting than I imagined," she said. "For the first moment I met him, I understood that this guy was great. He wasn't like anything I thought before. Always we have big prejudice when someone has big success: He must be an unbearable human being. So I found myself in front of a nice — in the most full meaning of the word — really nice guy, a gentleman."

And Hoffman?

"Unfortunately, the only thing I got to work with him on was in the elevator (where she tries to teach him to dance). It was a delicate scene to do because it could have looked very easily like seduction. It was a naive way of trying to make him happy because his date hadn't arrived.

Valeria Golino plays Tom Cruise's secretary and love interest in "Rain Man."

"Dustin, like DeNiro, is one of the totems of films. Even though I had a small role, it was worth it to be around him to see how he moved, how he reacted. To me it was like going to acting school."

Golino, who speaks English as well as Greek, French and her native Italian, recently completed "Torrents of Spring" with Timothy Hutton. Even though she is now in demand, she doesn't plan to settle in Hollywood.

"I like to work here, but I wouldn't want to live here," she said. "I always want to know I can go home to Rome and Europe."

Volunteers, in addition to the cast, working on "I Ought to be in Pictures" include, among others, Jim Choate, Liz Pauley, Joanne Robertson, Skip Carver, Tim Liner, Deb Cooledge, Liz Hight, Liz Montagna, Frances Mees, Amy Scofield, Susan Brown, Ann McKeown, Bobby Marshall, Chris Faucette, Karen Oliver and Marilyn Allen.

The production is directed by Don Bachmann. Set design is by David Layman, costumes by Mae Lawson and lighting and sound design by Eddie Taylor. Technical director is Ross A. Wilmeth.

Production dates are Friday, Saturday, April 2, 6-8 and 14 and 15. Evening performances are at 8 p.m. Sunday matinees are at 2:30 p.m. Reservations may be made by calling 682-4111.

Tieman, who is the visual merchandise manager of Dillards in Odessa, is used to the scheduling adjustments required to perform in amateur theater. For him, "It's worth it." His only "real adjustment" is making sure Jackson, his 14-year-old tiger cat is fed properly.

Tieman refers to himself as "as good an audience as I am an actor. I love live theater. I love to sit and watch live theater. That makes me a better actor."

Part of his love for theater stems from the opportunity it affords him.

"For me, it is the only time I ever experience the present. I can pull myself back a minute and know, no matter how many times I do the show, this moment is never going to be the same again."

Tieman is not a movie fan.

"I go to movies a lot, but I don't really go to movies unless I go to the play because it's a craft and live performing is an art. The experience I had in film work was to do it again and again the same, and you never get any better. It's like an audition almost. You never get to grow. In live theater, your last show should be far and above your first show of that run. You get to get better all the time."

"Simon talks about attachments and unattachments that we go through in our lives that we don't even realize were attachments until they're not there."

Buster Tieman on playwright Neil Simon

Tieman's favorite roles are the king in "The King and I," his Odessa debut, and "Greater Tuna," his debut to Midland audiences.

If West Texas didn't have live theater, Tieman says, "I don't think I would still be here. I go to everything. I don't miss a show that plays."

So far, his favorite local production has been "Little Show of Horrors" — which he saw five times. He's excited about the opportunity to see "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" again.

"The sheriff — when I get old enough, I want to play that role," Tieman says. "Maybe it's a little more true for men than women in theater — the better parts are still to come for me."

GEORGIA TODD TEMPLE

Striving for excellence important for performers

Striving for excellence is of upmost importance in the performing arts.

Temple

Too often we settle for the mediocre, the production which is of moderate quality, the ordinary. Here I am using ordinary in the sense of common quality, rank or ability.

Certainly, not one of the four National Young Artist performing winners I heard this week at the Midland-Odessa Symphony concert settled for less than the best. All struck me as the kind of artist who strives not to fall short of the mark.

I would encourage each to continue pursuing his or her speciality. In saying this, I am not suggesting that all will become solo concert performers. I have no crystal ball.

I do, however, feel that each is capable of pursuing a career in music and has the makings to fill a place in a major orchestra or company.

Not soon after Alfred Lee began playing, I forgot he was 16 years old. He has a powerful attack and performed brilliantly Prokofiev's Concerto No. 1 in D flat, Opus 10. Equally as moving was Lin Lin's performance of Beethoven's Concerto No. 4.

Emily Pulley's enunciation was crisp and clear in the balcony, where I was sitting the first half of the concert. Her voice is lovely.

I enjoyed saxophonist Henry Kinross White's selection — Ibert's Concertino da Camera. He seemed at ease with the music, the audience and his instrument.

The concert reminded me again of the need for all of us associated with the arts to strive for the best. Sometimes we fall short of the mark.

It disturbs me when we feel that productions for children need not have the polish or the quality we expect in those designed for adult audiences. I'm not a fan of Penguin Productions. I've now seen two of the company's shows, and I don't sense a reaching for excellence.

The laughter from the children sitting in the audience this past weekend indicated they enjoyed "Jack and the Beanstalk." And, one adult audience member said at its close, "Wasn't that cute?"

And, it was cute. But...

When we present less than the best for the young in our community are we teaching them to reach halfway up the mountain, to settle for less, to create in whatever field they go into the same as they have seen - the mediocre?

This isn't the only event I've attended lately which I felt fell short of the quality expected. Frankly, I was disappointed by the last MOSC Pops concert.

First of all, I was surprised that the guest artist read the music as he played the piano. Did he not have adequate time to prepare?

And the Gershwin selections didn't seem to me to be the ones which would be most appreciated by the audiences I'm used to seeing at a pops concert. Many like to hear music they recognize, that they can hum along with and thus, perhaps, re-visit pleasant times and experiences.

I wasn't surprised by the Thouvenel String Quartet's most recent performance. Once again, the Thouvenel dazzled its audience.

Also not surprising was the quality and variety of art work at the 11th annual Southwestern Art Show and Sale, presented by the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library.

This year marks the first time in several that the show has been held outside the Haley Library proper. The trend is encouraging. Over half of the pieces sold at the opening night set price, draw-sell.

The remaining works, which are still for sale, may be viewed at the Haley Library, 1805 W. Indiana Ave., through April 30.

On display next door at the Museum of the Southwest is Midland Arts Association's Spring Juried Show.

I found the overall appeal of this show not as eye catching and dynamic as MAA's 1988 spring show; however, the show includes several unusual pieces which made it worthwhile.

Ex-Midlanders entered in theater competition

From Staff Reports

Former Midlanders Ted Strickland, Brett Batterson and John Michael Warburton are members of the production team with a winning entry — "Pump Boys and Dinettes" — in the Southeast Regional American Association of Community Theatres FEST competition in Louisville, Ky.

The three are currently working together at The Little Theatre of Chattanooga.

While in Midland, Strickland, now Little Theatre managing director, was associate director at Midland Community Theatre. Batterson, Little Theatre designer, and John Michael Warburton, Little Theatre technical director, held similar positions at MCT.

The three will take the show to the national finals in Omaha, Neb., June 21-26. The three judges for the Southeastern Region voted to send to the finals in Omaha the Little Theatre production and a production of "On the Verge" by the Kudzu Playhouse of Hernando, Miss.

Regardless of how the Little Theatre places in Omaha, a possibility exists that the show will go on to international competition, said Strickland in the Chattanooga Times.

"The last time they had a festival, nine out of the 10 received international invitations, but only the top four are guaranteed," he said.

"Pump Boys and Dinettes" was co-written by Chattanooga native Jim Wann, now a resident of Chapel Hill, N.C. In February, Wann came to Chattanooga for two benefit performances to raise funds for the Louisville trip.

"I thought in Chattanooga, when I worked with them, they were exceptional," Wann told the Chattanooga Times.

"I predicted their victory," Wann said. "They have one thing that is absolutely essential to a superior production of that show. They all like each other a lot and that comes across on stage."

REVIEWS

'Leviathan' has some thrills, chills

By MYRA LEE SALCEDO

Salcedo

Although "Leviathan" takes place in deep-sea, the futuristic ocean-miners in the film don't find the fishy goings on caused by something in the water. No, there is a beast in the sea, which regenerates in humans due to something in the vodka. Not only that, but the Russians left the vodka in a sunken ship. (So, now we know who to blame.)

Before long one of the hapless crew members finds the stashed vodka and takes a nip. He later mutates into a serpentlike man-thing and "Leviathan" turns into a sort of "Alien" meets "The Thing."

It is up to the crew's leader (Peter "RoboCop" Weller) to keep the crews' wits about them even as their body parts head for nether regions.

Meg Foster, as the cruel above-water commander, puts her icy-blue eyes to good use. She refuses to let the silver mining ship up before its contract date expires. The other actors look properly horrified and desperate, and the special effects are above-par. There are some thrills, chills and the photography is excellent.

But some of the dialogue is stilted, and there is some mumbo-jumbo about the alien (which looks like a high-tech version of The Creature of the Black Lagoon) absorbing the intelligence of its victims. But as your basic beast-run-amok-in-an-isolated place film, "Leviathan" delivers. It's just too bad they couldn't come up with a more original alien lifeform.

"Leviathan" rates 2½ rigs.

"Leviathan," is rated R for language and graphic violence. It is playing at North Park Mall cinemas.

'Skin Deep' lacks humor, imagination

If I can convince you not to see one movie this year, make it "Skin Deep." "Skin Deep," an alleged comedy, stars John Ritter as Zach, a once-successful writer who's become bogged down in alcohol and in the male fantasy of too many easily accessible women.

The film opens with Zach seducing his hairdresser. He is caught by his mistress, who holds a gun to his head just about the time his wife arrives home. Although the set-up is great, something gets lost in the execution, and the film slides steadily downhill from here.

The idea of a male alcoholic pursuing his lustful fantasies has been done to death by writer/director Blake Edwards. His work was funny in "10," but "10" had a script. "Skin Deep" not only lacks a decent script, it is devoid of humor and imagination.

Because of these problems, Zach emerges as a pathetic, totally unsympathetic character. His alcoholism is no laughing matter, and one scene, which shows Zach detoxifying in a room he has trashed, it is the most offensive attempt at humor in the film.

Although Zach's bevy of beauties are easy on the eye, they all manage to stay shallow characters. Alyson "A Chorus Line" Reed has charisma, but she seems to be in the wrong film. And Raye Hollit (Ms. Los Angeles 1988 Bodybuilder Champion) has the acting skills of a potato.

The brief appearances of Nina Foch as Ritter's mother-in-law are some of the only watchable moments in the film. Ms. Foch (Ritter's former drama coach at the University of Southern California, according to production notes) is the only performer able to rise above the script. She also says the least, which may be the biggest contributing factor to her ability to still smell like a rose among the sewage. Unfortunately, Ritter drowns in the stuff. It's impossible to believe for a minute that he is some dashing womanizer, and his comic talents are wasted on tired gags and boring dialogue.

Much of the intended humor is based on the fact that Zach is a writer with writer's block who also becomes impotent at one point. He says not being able to perform sexually is "as bad as not being able to write." One wishes he would have stuck to writing.

The much-touted risque glow-in-the-dark sequence is only worth mentioning because it was the least sleep-inducing scene in the film. For the most part, skin deep never cracks the surface of your skin. It only irritates, like a nasty rash.

"Skin Deep," rates ½ rig.

"Skin Deep," rated R for nudity, sex scenes and consistent profanity, is playing at North Park Mall Cinemas.

Wagner's opera to be broadcast

The Metropolitan Opera will begin its broadcast of Wagner's complete cycle of "Der Ring des Nibelungen" with "Das Rheingold," broadcast live from the stage of the Met, at 12:30 p.m. Saturday, April 1,over the Texaco-Metropolitan Opera Radio Network. The broadcast will begin with a pre-curtain feature, followed by the opera at 2 p.m. The opera will be heard locally over radio station KWMJ FM 103.

The cast for "Das Rheingold" will include Ellen Shade as Freia, Christa Ludwig as Fricka, Birgitta Svenden as Erda, Siegfried Jerusalem as Loge, Horst Hiestermann as Mime, Hans Sotin as Wotan, Ekkehard Wlaschiha as Alberich, Jan-Hendrik Rootering as Fasolt, and Matti Salminen as Fafner. James Levine will conduct. The announcer for the broadcast will be Peter Allen.

Father Owen Lee, professor of Greek and Latin Classics at the University of Toronto, will discuss Wagner and "Das Rheingold" during the pre-curtain feature.

The Metropolitan's broadcast of the complete "Ring" cycle, the first broadcast of the cycle by the Met in fourteen years, will continue on April 8 with "Die Walkure," April 15 with "Siegfried," and April 22 with "Gotterdammerung."

Cowboys gathering for poetry

PENDLETON, Ore. (AP) — Cowboys fill their lives with roping, wrangling, riding and writing — poetry, that is. And so many of them write they're going have an overflow convention, of sorts.

Nearly 40 cowpunchers, farmers and ranchers from all over the West gathered here this weekend for an exhibition of cowboy poetry.

Elko, Nev., home of the annual Cowboy Poetry Gathering, is the undisputed capital city of cowboy poetry. But the popularity of cowboy poetry has outgrown Elko in the last few years, and this weekend's event is intended to provide the horseback bards another showcase, said Dave Thompson, head of the organizing committee for the First Annual Pendleton Cowboy Poet Roundup.

Some of the cowboy authors like to conjure up images of the Old West with poems about untamed horses and saloon gun battles.

Best Picture winner tough to call

By MYRA LEE SALCEDO

The 61st Oscars show will be telecast from the Los Angeles Shrine Civic Auditorium on ABC Wednesday at 8 p.m. CST

Usually when I write an Oscar-roundup, I feel like Bill Murray in one of television's early "Saturday Night Live," skits, the one where Murray picks his Oscar choices.

"Well, I didn't see that movie," Murray says, "so, it's out of the running. I didn't see that one or that, either," he adds, removing the films from his felt board until most of the contenders are on the floor.

However, this year is better than previous years because all five nominees for Best Picture have played in Midland before Oscar night.

■ BEST PICTURE. Of the five nominees: "Working Girl," "Mississippi Burning," "Dangerous Liaisons," "Rain Man" and "The Accidental Tourist," I think it will be a tough race between "Rain Man" and "Dangerous Liaisons." I'm torn between the two films, though "Liaisons" had a lot more going for it technically. It was an excellently done film.

However, previous winners of Best Picture, like "Cabaret" or "Terms of Endearment" tend to be films that leave the audience with a strong feeling of joy or angst. "Rain Man" fills the bill in that respect.

But Best Picture winners are often awesome in their sweeping cinematography and attention to detail such as "Out of Africa" and "The Last Emperor" (both overrated in my opinion). Although "Dangerous Liaisons" isn't an epic, it is filled with grandeur and the fine trappings of a period piece.

I was sorry, however, to see "Unbearable Lightness of Being," a haunting film, and "Who Framed Roger Rabbit," a technical wonder, left out of the Best Picture nominees.

■ BEST ACTRESS. Another reason I prefer "Liaisons" for Best Picture is Glenn Close. Her acting was exquisite and was enhanced by excrutiating close-ups. The other Best Actress nominees: Jodie Foster, "The Accused"; Sigourney Weaver, "Gorillas in the Mist"; Melanie Griffith, "Working Girl" and Meryl Streep, "A Cry in the Dark" are also strong contenders for Oscar.

But Ms. Close deserved an Oscar for her role in "Fatal Attraction," and since this is her sixth nomination, her day in the sun is long overdue. But all politics aside, Ms. Close earned her nomination with her stunning work in "Liaisons."

Miss Foster was also excellent, but her character didn't have the range of emotions expected. Also, "A Cry in the Dark" didn't play here, but Ms. Streep has received high acclaim for her role as an Australian woman accused of killing her own baby. So, I won't be surprised if Ms. Streep (with eight nominations and two Oscars) picks up another Oscar.

■ BEST ACTOR. As much as I liked Edward James Olmos work in "Stand and Deliver," I would give Best Actor to Dustin Hoffman for "Rain Man." His every movement and word was true to his character of an autistic man, who is lost without his constant rituals. (Even more surprising, Tom Cruise rose to the challenge of acting alongside Hoffman, and made his character sympathetic, instead of merely abrasive).

Gene Hackman was alternately witty and despicable in "Mississippi Burning," but his best work may be yet to come.

Max Van Sydow in "Pelle the Conqueror"? Didn't see it — it's not in the running.

Tom Hanks was wonderful in "Big" and showed even more maturity as an actor in "Punchline." If — by some quirk of the Academy — he beats out Hoffman for Best Actor, I can live with it.

■ BEST SUPPORTING ACTOR. This is a real tough category. Although River Phoenix outshone most of the competition in "Running on Empty," Martin Landau as a broken man in "Tucker: The Man and His Dream" really tugged at my heartstrings. I would give Landau the award (I know it's an unfair assumption, but Phoenix — God-willing — has a lot of years left to win).

Dean Stockwell was unforgettable as "Tony the Tiger" in "Married to the Mob," and Kevin Kline was fun in "A Fish Called Wanda." Alec Guinness in "Little Dorrit"? Sorry, it didn't show here. Give the award to Landau.

■ BEST SUPPORTING ACTRESS. I like Sigourney Weaver, and it's not just because she deserves the consolation prize of not winning Best Actress. Even when Ms. Weaver wasn't on screen in "Working Girl," her presence was felt. One feared that she would appear spouting flames at any moment.

Michelle Pfeiffer did cry a lot in "Liaisons," but it could have been her contacts. Joan Cusack in "Working Girl," Geena Davis in "The Accidental Tourist," and France McDormand in "Mississippi Burning" were all good, just not as affective as Ms. Weaver.

■ BEST DIRECTOR. My choice is Alan Parker of "Mississippi Burning." He managed to instill fear by what he left out of the film as much by what was left in the film, giving the audience an opportunity to use their own imaginations.

Charles Crichton's direction in "A Fish Called Wanda" was seamless, and the actors' pacing was excellent. I would be happy to see either Parker or Crichton walk away the winner.

As for the surprise nominee of the year, Martin Scorsese for "The Last Temptation of Christ," sorry, didn't see it either, adios.

Barry Levinson probably pulled in the reins quite a bit on Cruise in "Rain Man." But it's no secret that he was the third director chosen since Hoffman basically insisted on directing himself. Mike Nichols in "Working Girl" is also a contender, but overall, I would like to see Parker get this one.

■ BEST COSTUME DESIGN. "Coming to America" had some eyecatching costumes, but the meticulous attention to detail in the 18th century costumes of "Dangerous Liaisons" was breathtaking.

■ BEST ART DIRECTION. I would be happy to see either "Tucker: the Man and His Dream" or "Dangerous Liaisons" walk off with Best Art Direction. It's going to be a close call.

■ BEST MAKEUP. In the Best Makeup category, the nominees are "Beetlejuice," "Coming to America" and "Scrooged." Although Michael Keaton was nearly unrecognizable in "Beetlejuice," much of that could be attributed to his acting. However, the makeup in "Coming to America" was unbelieveable.

Makeup artist Rick Baker, who already has two Oscars for his artistry in "Harry and the Hendersons" and "An American Werewolf in London" transformed Eddie Murphy into an older white Jewish male. If I hadn't known it beforehand, I would have never guessed that Baker's creation was Murphy.

■ BEST ORIGINAL SCREENPLAY. I favor Ron Shelton's witty "Bull Durham." However, the screenplays for "A Fish Called Wanda" and "Big" were also wonderful.

■ BEST FILM EDITING. I don't have enough expertise to judge best editing. I only seem to notice editing when it's bad.

■ BEST SONG. The only song from a movie that I remember is "Calling You" from the delightful little film "Bagdad Cafe" — a charmer that I managed to rent on video tape.

■ BEST CINEMATOGRAPHY. I would love to see Sven Nykvist win for the visually compelling "Unbearable Lightness of Being." (Yes, it did play here for one week, folks.)

■ BEST ACTING BY A DOG (My own category). This award goes to the Welsh corgi who played Edward in "The Accidental Tourist." Who could ever forget that mournful doggie face, when he looked down the stairs he was afraid to descend?

Man returuns library books mother checked out in 1914

JACKSON, Mich. (AP) — A retired librarian who thinks it's never too late to turn the page on an embarrassing event in his family's past has returned three library books nearly 75 years after his mother checked them out.

Edward MacConomy Jr., of Virginia, said he wanted to clear the family name by returning the books to the Jackson Public Library.

In a letter to the Jackson District Library dated Feb. 21, he said his mother, Frances, must have inadvertently taken the three books when she moved from Jackson to Detroit in 1914 after she married.

"When she died in 1974, the contents of her library were just sort of boxed up and put to one side," MacConomy said. "It doesn't seem very logical, but I never got to the material to do anything with it or about it until just a few weeks ago. I thought well, they don't belong to her and they don't belong to me — I better send them back."

The books were Sir Walter Scott's "Quentin Durward," Kate Douglas Wiggin's "The Birds' Xmas Carol" and Louisa May Alcott's "Jo's Boys."

'The Women of Brewster Place' beats 'Wizard Oz,' 'Return of Jedi'

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC's "The Women of Brewster Place" starring Oprah Winfrey outbattled "Return of the Jedi" and "The Wizard of Oz," but NBC extended its hold on No. 1 to 39 weeks, one week short of the record.

"We've waited a long time for this week," Gerry Jaffe, NBC vice president for research projects, said Tuesday as the network moved ahead of its longest run at the top of the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings. CBS set the record of 40-consecutive weeks 26 years ago.

NBC's victory came even though ABC's "Roseanne" finished at the top of the Nielsens, ahead of NBC's popular "The Cosby Show." The shows finished in the same order, one-two, the previous week.

NBC won the week that ended Sunday with an average prime-time rating of 15.4. ABC had 13.1 and CBS 12.7. NBC leads in the season-to-date averages with a 16.1, to ABC's 12.9 and CBS' 12.6.

The first installment of the miniseries "Brewster Place" finished third. It was broadcast Sunday, opposite "The Wizard of Oz" on CBS and the first network showing of "Jedi." "The Wizard" finished in 14th place and "Jedi," which was shown on NBC, finished 31st.

"Roseanne," the sitcom starring Roseanne Barr, got a 38 share to Bill Cosby's 39, but had a rating of 26.1 to Cosby's 24.2. Each rating point represents 904,000 households with televisions. The share is a percentage of sets in use.

After "Brewster Place," here is the rest of the top 10: "Different World," NBC; "Cheers," NBC; "60 Minutes," CBS; "Wonder Years," ABC; "Golden Girls," NBC; "Who's the Boss," ABC.

Playhouse staging 'The Actor's Nightmare'

ODESSA — The Permian Playhouse is presenting one performance of "The Actor's Nightmare" at 8 p.m. Tuesday at Permian Playhouse, 310 W. 42nd St.

The production was chosen by Texas Non-Profit Theatres, Inc., as the regional representative to the State Festival in Fort Worth.

All tickets will be $5 and membership is suspended for this performance. The money will benefit the expenses of the volunteers and production to the State Festival.

The 1989 adjudicators at the State Festival in Fort Worth include former Midlander Arthur W. Cole, director of Midland Community Theatre for 35 years.

Cole is a member of the College of Fellows for both The American Theatre Association and The Southwest Theatre Association. He initiated and organized the first National Community Theatre Festival.

Past president of the American Community Theatre Association and Texas Non-Profit Theatres, Inc., Cole was named "Best Director" while representing the United States in 1974 at the International Drama Festival in Dundalk, Ireland.

The other two adjudicators are professional stage, screen and television actor MacDonald Carey, who is currently performing in "Days of Our Lives"; and Dr. Edwin R. Procunier, professor emeritus, faculty of education, University of Western Ontario, where he taught English and dramatic arts.

Procunier is president of Theatre Ontario and the London Community Players. He has written 27 plays of which 13 have been published and produced.

Collection of circus photographs, posters on exhibit at art institute

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The "Hertzberg Circus Collection" from San Antonio is coming to the Art Institute for the Permian Basin April 11.

A public open house will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, April 14.

The exhibition, organized by Radford Thomas, includes 44 antique circus posters, 13 original black and white photographs of circus performers and numerous lions, horses, clowns and other circus animals. A miniature "big top" circus tent along with calliope music and original sounds from the opening ceremonies of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus will be included in the exhibit.

Of particular interest will be the large circus posters. Thanks to circuses, the most prominent form of advertisement for decades was the poster. Historians have noted that the spirit of P.T. Barnum prevaded outdoor advertising after the Civil War. These posters were placed at random on nearly any wall or fence and gave rise tot he old warning "Post No Bills."

Early posters were printed in almost any size using the woodcut technique. Master printers carved and printed the bills using bright, primary colors. Later, the woodcut gave way to the stone lithograph. The size of the stones were about 42 inches by 56 inches so this dictated tyhe size of the circus poster. Some were double sheets, some were as large as eight sheets pasted together to form a poster 168 inches by 112 inches.

Posters developed into the outdoor advertising industry of today.

One item in the exhibition is a famous Barnum & Bailey Tiger poster that was originated by Harry Ogden in 1884. This poster was printed by one of the greatest show printers, Strobridge & Company of Cincinnati.

Also featured in the Hertzberg Circus exhibition will be two arena "squares" filled with animal acts and an animal wagon, containing lions, pulled by a team of horses. These miniature circus pieces are from the Scaperlanda bequest of the Hertzberg collection. Other posters included in the show are Dainty Miss Leitzel, a Charging Tiger, Gargantua The Great and Captain Clyde Beatty at work with his big cats.

The Hertzberg collection was made possible because Harry Hertzberg, a San Antonio lawyer, civic leader and state senator, was an avid circus fan and a prolific collection. He began collecting circus material in the early 1920s and was the most active circus collector of his time. His collection serves to keep alive memories of the American circus, an important aspect of the country's popular culture.

The "Hertzberg Circus Collection" is sponsored by the Junior League of Odessa and Sewell Ford and is part of "Child's Play" for 1989.

The show will hang through May 7. The Art Institute is open free to the public.

Two videos about art collectors will be shown

Two videos on art collectors will be shown at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., at noon, 2 and 4 p.m. Tuesday.

"The Quiet Collector: Andrew W. Mellon Remembered" and "Raphael and the American Collector" are from the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C.

"The Quiet Collector" dramatizes the life of Mellon, a leader in finance and industry, a former U.S. Secretary of the Treasury and a collector of the finest works by such artists as Rembrandt, Vermeer, Titian and Raphael. The National Gallery of Art was Mellon's gift to the United States, and the core collection came from his acquisitions.

"Raphael and the American Collector" tells about 20th century American collectors such as Isabella Stewart Gardner, J.P. Morgan, Mellon and P.A.B. Widener, who were avid collectors of the work of Renaissance master, Raphael. These works are now in several American museums.

Those attending at noon are invited to bring a sack lunch. No charge is made for viewing the videos.

The museum is open Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m.

The museum will be closed Easter Day.

Lettermen coming to Midland Center

The Opportunity Center auxiliary is presenting The Lettermen in "An Opportunity to Remember" at 7 p.m. Friday, April 14, at Midland Center, Wall Avenue and Main Street.

The evening includes hors d'oeuvres, cocktails, dinner and a silent auction, in addition to a performance by The Lettermen, whose first hit was the 1961 release "The Way You Look Tonight."

Other recordings by The Lettermen include "When I Fall in Love," "Come Back Silly Girl," "Theme from a Summer Place," "Goin' Out of My Head," "Can't Take My Eyes Off of You," Put Your Head on My Shoulder," "Hurt So Bad" and "Shangri-La."

Proceeds will help MARC build Opportunity Park, a recreational area in Midland designed for the handicapped.

Twin Cities Speedway to open season

From Staff Reports

Twin Cities Speedway kicks off its 1989 season Saturday with "Super Saturday Night."

Opening night, the late model stock series of the Texas International Drivers Association makes its premiere appearance at Twin Cities, located off Coors Road between Midland and Odessa.

Competition begins at 7 p.m. with qualifying time trials for the TIDA late model series cars. Twin Cities Speedway class races will start the racing program at 8 p.m.

The feature event of the evening will be a 75-lap — all green flag — TIDA Late Model Series Race No. 1 for the 1989 Season Circuit. TIDA race regulations will allow 22 starters in the 75-lap race.

The TIDA Late Model Series is composed of drivers from all parts of Texas and the Southwest. The defending driving champion of the TIDA-LM is John Kelly of Adkins.

Driving a well-prepared Kelly Green Ford Thunderbird to the 1988 TIDA-LM Series Championship, the San Antonio area driver won five of the seven series feature races. Kelly has announced his intention to defend his TIDA-LM Series Driving Championship in all scheduled races.

The TIDA Series cars are recognized to be the fastest stock cars racing hin the Southwest United States. Most cars utilize fabricated frames with replica bodies such as Camaro, Firebird, Thunderbird, Grand Prix and Olds Cutlass. Highly modified V-8 engines and high compression V-6 engines power the race cars.

The TIDA-LM Series is one fo the few stock car racing organizations to conduct events on both oval and road racing tracks. At last year's Texas Race of Champions at College Station, speeds up to 175 miles per hour were recorded on the main straight-a-way by Midland drivers Jay Watson and Race Ritchie and TIDA-LM drivers Tommy Riggins, Terry Labonte, Greg Davidson, Rick Rapp and Kelly.

Race headquarters is the Best Western Airport Hotel, located two minutes from Twin Cities Speedway — a three-eights mile asphalt oval track raceway.

During the winter, the speedway has installed new restrooms, additional bleachers, a new scoreboard, additional parking and an additional steel safety wall around the track to ensure the safety of the spectators.

Spectator admission for Saturday's show is $8 adult, $2 for children 6-11 and free to those under 6.

Cost for Saturday's pit pass is $15.

For entry information in Saturday's TIDA-LM Series races call Neil Upchurch, president of the association, 1-512-655-3222.

Following Saturday's grand opening, races will be held throughout the season on Friday nights. In addition, the Speedway will offer a number of special events during the season which will be held other nights of the week.

For more information on Twin Cities Speedway and upcoming racing events, contact co-owners John Foster and John David, 563-2220. For information on special events and signs call Monty Coldwell, the speedway's announcer, 563-5456.

On race days, for more information call the track number, 563-3983.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

MONDAY, MARCH 27, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Inside information and high-tech equipment will make your job much easier. After the middle of September, you can put your grand plan in motion. Health-enhancing exercise will help you look and feel fit. A chance encounter could lead to a new romance or rekindling of an old flame this summer. Your circle of admirers grows. Children show you how to be more creative. Do not let jealousy destroy what could be a fruitful relationship.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Michael York, singer Sarah Vaughan, cellist Mstislav Rostropovich, gymnast Bart Conner, auto racer Cale Yarborough, photographer Edward Steichen.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Powerful emotions could erupt in a business or personal relationship. Use a conservative approach to fend off a confrontation. Your finances get a huge boost from events at a distance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Work goes smoothly, but your domestic life will require firmer control. Enlist help from mate, family members. If you cannot always please a partner, please yourself. Your instincts are excellent.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be sure to see a job through to completion. An authority figure will be impressed. A raise or promotion is inevitable. Romance will require careful nurturing. Offer a sympathetic shoulder.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are learning the value of practicality. Project a more conservative attitude and you will win big in business circles. Your career could lose momentum if you switch romantic partners now.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can imprint your style if you use a laid-back approach. The competition will not guess your game plan! Acquiring high-tech skills will improve your chances for career advancement.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An emotional exchange surprises but pleases you. Once the truth is out, you achieve a new level of communication. Success comes through overseas contacts. Proceed slowly in romance. Know your own heart.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Mate or business partner appreciates your dedication, diplomacy and newly acquired patience. Together, you face current challenges. Although love has its ups and downs, you are entering a very happy period.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Continued success will be good for you, building your self-confidence. Find a good place to live and work. A loss can be amusing, depending on your perspective. Take setbacks in stride.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Travel could bring you new position or power. Be alert to any unusual events; they could help you decide on an important course of action. Mate is supportive. Show your deep appreciation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): See what you can do to make your days more productive. Try something new and do not be afraid to take small risks. Romance can be free, without commitment now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Step back and reorient yourself before pressing on. You finally come to grips with an important personal problem. Long-lost romantic attractions capture your attention. A new partnership is possible.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may feel like remaining incommunicado. The unusual information you acquire today may not have a practical use. Stop daydreaming and take action! Straighten out a misunderstanding without further delay.

4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡

We are particularly fond of this hand's theme. When we first encountered it at the table, the declarer was the greatest woman player who ever lived, the late Helen Sobel Smith.

Note North's raise to two spades. Although he holds an ace and two kings, his square distribution is a flaw and a simple raise describes his hand adequately, but he is maximum for such action.

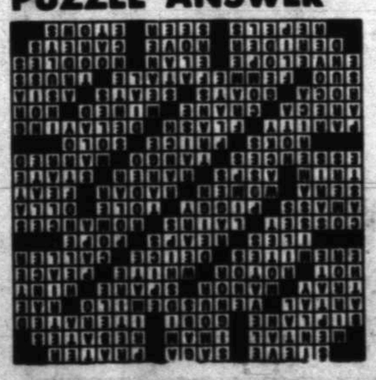

West led the king of hearts, and declarer's problem is obvious. He has a sure diamond loser, so he cannot afford to lose more than two club tricks. Since West almost surely holds the ace of clubs for his vulnerable overcall, East cannot be allowed to gain the lead before a diamond is set up, because a club shift through the king could be fatal.

We would expect most good players today to make their contract. The solution is simple, yet elegant. Despite the fact that declarer holds a singleton heart, he should allow West's king to win the first trick. Now the contract can be guaranteed if diamonds are 3-3 or if West, by some miracle, holds the ace of clubs no more than doubleton.

Suppose West shifts to a diamond. Declarer wins in hand, cashes the ace of trumps and continues with a low trump to dummy's nine. He discards a diamond on the ace of hearts, cashes the king of diamonds and ruffs a diamond. When both defenders follow, dummy's long diamond is established. Declarer crosses to dummy with the king of spades, in the process extracting the last of the defenders' fangs, and takes the diamond for his 10th trick. He can then lead toward the king of clubs in a futile attempt to score an overtrick.

ETSU professor's art on display

ODESSA — An exhibition of mixed media art works, entitled "The Life of Obe Garcia, A Psycho-Drama Autobiography," will be on display Monday through April 14 in Odessa College's art department gallery in the Instructional Building.

The collection of works by Lee Baxter Davis, an art professor at East Texas State University, may be viewed from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

The show features 11 pieces of art, including etchings, watercolor and ink drawings.

Davis, who has taught fine arts printmaking and drawing at ETSU since 1988, has exhibited his work throughout the United States. The native Texan received his master's of fine arts degree from Cranbrook Academy of Fine Arts and his bachelor's from San Houston State College.

He is currently chairperson of the fine arts printmaking division at the university.

Wambaugh's methods investigated

NEW YORK (AP) — Two years ago, author Joseph Wambaugh was intrigued by newspaper accounts about how the murderer of two teen-age girls in England was discovered through a new process of identification called genetic fingerprinting.

Waumbaugh

The writer of the best-selling police stories, "The Onion Field" and "The Choir Boys," headed for Leicester, the English city where the murders took place. He conducted extensive interviews with local police, the victims' families and others, and used the information for the basis of his new book, "The Blooding" ($18.95, William Morrow), a non-fictional account of what happened.

But the book's graphic details of the rapes and murders of Lynda Mann and Dawn Ashworth have prompted Leicester police to look into how Wambaugh acquired his information. They said "The Blooding" contains "distasteful" details that could cause further distress to the families involved.

Wambaugh seemed visibly shaken by the investigation when he talked about the issue in a recent interview.

"It's very upsetting, it's keeping me up at nights," said the 52-year-old writer.

"I'm worried that the parents, once they start down the slope of publicly complaining about the treatment of their private lives, will not be able to retreat back to common sense when they read and understand what I've done."

Chief Constable Michael Hirst of the Leicester County police has written to the book's British publishers, Bantam, about the book's closely detailed description of the attacks on Mann and Ashworth, both 15 when they died.

The parents of one of the girls had complained to Hirst, and to avoid any suggestion that the police endorsed the book, Hirst asked Bantam to remove an acknowledgment of the constabulary's help from the book.

Bantam said Hirst's letter arrived after the book was printed, and it was too late to remove the acknowledgment.

Wambaugh contacted Robin and Barbara Ashworth but has been unable to alleviate the situation.

"I'm trying desperately," he said. "I've written two letters and have gotten one response, which was not good from my point of view. I just feel that Robin Ashworth has gone down the road too far with the poisoned atmosphere and will be unable to read the work objectively.

"As we sat and talked together, repeatedly they uttered the same things, that it's not knowing that's the most awful thing. Very often we let our imaginations run wild and if we know we can lay the ghosts to rest and finish it off. Well I told them what happened."

On the evening of Nov. 21, 1983, Mann was raped and murdered in the village of Narborough while walking down a dark footpath called the "Black Pad." Despite an exhaustive police investigation, the murderer was not captured and the incident faded into the background.

But nearly three years later the killer struck again, this time in broad daylight, when Dawn Ashworth was raped and murdered while walking on a village footpath called "Ten Pound Lane." Police received a tip about the suspicious behavior of a kitchen porter, a confession was obtained and the case seemed to be finally settled.

However, the kitchen porter's father had read about a scientific breakthrough called genetic fingerprinting, developed in the mid-1980s by Leicester geneticist Alec Jeffreys, who discovered that every person's blood or semen has a genetic code as distinctive as a fingerprint.

A sample of the kitchen porter's blood was taken and the test showed that his genetic print did not match the semen samples taken from the bodies of the two girls.

The police launched a massive "blooding" program, testing every male in the vicinity who was born between Jan. 1, 1953 and Dec. 31, 1970.

When an employee at a local bakery revealed that he had been persuaded by Colin Pitchfork, a coworker, to take the test for him, police tracked down the suspect. Pitchfork was tested and charged with the murders.

Wambaugh tells the story in a matter-of-fact manner. The rapes are depicted in detail, reading like a well prepared police report. There is no real "message" in "The Blooding," outside of how genetic fingerprinting could revolutionize crime detection and that Pitchfork was a sociopath, incapable of feeling remorse for the crimes.

"If there was one single British writer doing a book I was going to back off. I thought, 'It's their country, their story and one of them should do it.' I didn't want to be some carpetbagging Yank."

But the author didn't anticipate certain cultural differences, especially the British need for privacy.

"They are reticent people who consider keeping one's mouth shut a major virtue. With Americans, once they start you can't shut them up. But the Brits are different. I spent a lot of money on drinks for a lot of people to get information I needed. I've done a book that they're not familiar with. They don't like non-fiction crime; it does not sell well in England."

Wambaugh's own interest in the genre came from reading Truman Capote's 1965 classic, "In Cold Blood."

"There was his book and there weren't too many others," Wambaugh said. "I was impressed that it could be written exactly in the style of a novel and be exactly true journalistically."

Wambaugh, the son of a police officer, lived in East Pittsburgh until he was 14 and his family moved to Los Angeles. At age 20, he developed an interest in literature but decided to become a cop because he needed a job and the pay was good. But he didn't give up his desire to write.

"The everyday policeman's routine is very rarely exciting and very rarely satisfying," Wambaugh said. "But when I'd get home at night or daytime, depending on the shift I worked, I started on that typewriter. Then I was challenged."

His first novel, "The New Centurions," was released in 1971. Based on his own experiences, it was a fictionalized account of a Los Angeles policeman's first five years on the force, culminating with the 1965 race riots in Watts.

The book sold well and his next novel, "The Blue Knight," did even better, selling over 1 million copies in paperback alone. "The Onion Field," released in 1973, was a nonfictional story about the murder of a police officer in an isolated onion field near Bakersfield, Calif. A critical and commercial success, Wambaugh considered "The Onion Field" a major breakthrough.

"From 'Onion Field' on I've really grown," said Wambaugh, who retired from the Los Angeles police force in March 1973 after 13 years on the force.

He has written 11 books, seven fiction and four non-fiction.

"They're both true kinds of writing. Stylistically, I write the same. I learned that from Capote; you can write the same as long as you have integrity and don't start writing fiction in a non-fiction story."

McMurtry didn't watch 'Lonesome Dove'

By LOUIS B. PARKS
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Half the country recently spent four nights tied to the television watching "Lonesome Dove." Not Larry McMurtry. The author of the Pulitzer Prize-winning best seller has not seen the CBS miniseries.

"I haven't seen it and I'm not going to see it for a while," McMurtry said from his Washington, D.C., antiquarian bookstore, Booked Up.

"I'm not going to talk about 'Lonesome Dove,' " McMurtry said. "I just have nothing to say."

There's no telling whether his silence indicates any unhappiness with the series, script or the overwhelming publicity , or just a general indifference on the author's part.

"Lonesome Dove's" success as book and movie is a small irony for a writer who once thought that Texas writers ought to take up urban subjects instead of relying on the Old West.

McMurtry was born in 1936 in Wichita Falls and spent much of his youth on his family's ranch near the small town of Archer City, about 50 miles south of the Oklahoma border. His grandfather was a cattleman, and McMurtry was exposed to the legend and fact of a Western heritage.

These surroundings contributed heavily to a first novel, "Horseman, Pass By," a contemporary western that became the movie "Hud," starring Paul Newman and Patricia Neal.

Archer City was the model for the town in "The Last Picture Show," about the troubled lives of several bored residents, including a young man whose growth is stifled by rural backwardness. The book became a film starring Timothy Bottoms, Jeff Bridges and Cybill Shepherd.

McMurtry did much of his early writing at Rice University, where he taught for several years in the 1960s. Texas dominated the settings of his novels until he moved to the Washington, D.C., area in 1969. Since then his books have included a wide range of locales, although Texas locations recur in books such as "Terms of Endearment."

"Lonesome Dove" was born in 1971, originally intended as a screenplay for Peter Bogdanovich. The hope was that John Wayne, James Stewart and Henry Fonda would play the three main characters who became, respectively, Woodrow F. Call, Gus McCrae and Jake Spoon.

McMurtry has said that the three actors each wanted different endings, all varying from the downbeat ending of the script. He came back to the script in 1980, and began putting the characters into a novel with a cattle drive setting.

Since "Lonesome Dove" won the Pulitzer, many of McMurtry's books have been been republished.

McMurtry talked, though reluctantly, about the effect the 1985 novel had on his popularity.

"There're up to eight (books re printed), I believe. I've written introductions to seven of those, maybe eight. It's an ongoing project. Obviously they did it because 'Lonesome Dove' won the Pulitzer Prize and I became a best-selling author."

The idea of his early works being read by more people doesn't hold much excitement for him.

"I suppose I want them to see my earlier works but it's not something I have a firm conclusion on," McMurtry said.

He does think about his small chain of bookstores, now up to three, plus one his sister owns in Archer City. In addition to the stores here and in Washington, McMurtry owns Booked Up in Dallas, and he is looking to buy another in south Los Angeles.

'YOUNG READER' REVIEW

The irrepressible and fun-loving Anastasia Krupnik is back. This time she's agonizing about a school assignment that requires her to write about her future career in "Anastasia's Chosen Career."

Author Lois Lowry has let Anastasia mature just a little from the first six stories. She's still the inquisitive, thoughtful and funny little girl from "Anastasia at Your Service" or "Anastasia Has the Answers," but this time she is beginning to travel a little further from home. And she has the support of two of the most sensible, sympathetic, cherrful and amusing parents and a little brother named Sam.

Again Lowry has given her young readers — 9 to 12 years of age — a fine mixture of wit and wisdom, offering humorous situations and funny adolescent dialogue that is not only true to their interests and language, but quietly moving as well.

Available in paperback from Dell Publishers, the Anastasia series would make delighgtful and entertaining summer reading for youths in the a upper middle grades.
