Gingrich poll

Newly elected Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich has been at the center of congressional controversy the last few weeks over a book deal that would have paid him more than $4 million in advance earnings from the book's publisher, Rupert Murdoch, who has business pending before Congress. After the controversy initially flared, Gingrich announced that he would accept only $1 as advance payment for the book, but would retain the right to collect royalties on its sale after it is published. As speaker, should Gingrich be allowed to write a book and possibly collect millions of dollars from a publishing house run by a person who has dealings with Congress? Or should Gingrich refrain from accepting what potentially could amount to large royalty checks because of a potential conflict of interest? Call Cityline's Community Pulse Poll at 560-2400, Category 7655. If you think Gingrich should be allowed to reap large financial benefits from a book sale, press 1. If you see it as being a conflict of interest, press 2. You also may voice your comments. We ask that you leave your name, but that is optional. USAir crash

Everything seemed normal on USAir Flight 427 until three clicks were heard in the cockpit. "Sheez," the captain said. Seconds later, a thump, more clicks and a second thump were heard. "Whoa," Capt. Peter Germano said. "Hang on." A transcript of the cockpit voice recording was released Monday as federal investigators convened a hearing into the Sept. 8 crash that killed all 132 people aboard./8A

O.J. seeks 1-minute talk

Day zero: Legal wrangling delays opening remarks

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson asked Monday to speak to his jurors for one minute and show them scars on his body, a stunning twist to a day dominated by attorneys scrapping fiercely over last-minute evidence the defense dumped on prosecutors.

The fight over evidence pushed the long-awaited opening statements back until noon CST today. Superior Court Judge Lance Ito brought the sequestered jurors into the courtroom only at day's end for half an hour of instructions.

Defense attorneys surprised the prosecution with a list of 34 new witnesses and a videotape of police walking through blood at the murder scene. They also offered evidence of an alibi for the first time — a witness who says she saw Simpson's white Ford Bronco outside his home at a time when the prosecution alleges he was two miles away killing his ex-wife and her friend.

U.S. tunes in; drama refuses to imitate TV

"Couldn't they have settled all this Friday?" asked an exasperated Tom Brokaw Monday on NBC.

After all the hype leading up to the beginning of the trial of the century, it was somewhat amusing to see the drama disintegrate on national television Monday. Monday's developments may have been important to the case, they might even have been exciting for a minute or two, but as television you could have titled it "Dull and Duller."

Brokaw's displeasure that the defense maneuverings hadn't been settled last week was somewhat unseemly, as was legal analyst Ira Reiner's response that it was Judge Lance Ito's fault. For his part, Ito said he didn't care whether the whole world was watching. Imagine that? A

Testimony begins in trial of Midlander accused of involuntary manslaughter

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Testimony began Monday in the trial of a Midland man accused of involuntary manslaughter in the beating and later death of a man run over by a motor vehicle.

In opening statements, District Attorney Al Schorre told the nine-woman, three-man, racially mixed jury that evidence in the case will show that on Dec. 30, 1993, the defendant, Bud Eugene Strickland, recklessly caused the death of Roy Sanchez outside the nightclub Bojangles on West Wall Street near Thomason Drive.

Witness testimony indicates Strickland and Sanchez knew each other and that they both left the club and became embroiled in an altercation just outside.

A witness testified that she saw

Foundation with Gingrich ties repeatedly puts off IRS filing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tax-exempt group that helps foot the bill for Newt Gingrich's TV college course has operated for nearly two years while putting off government-required disclosure of its finances.

Though the House speaker holds no formal title with the Progress and Freedom Foundation, it was created and staffed by some of his closest advisers and produces his weekly television call-in show as well as helping underwrite the cost of the college course.

The foundation has received a series of filing extensions from the Internal Revenue Service that one agency spokesman called "rare."

The extensions have allowed the foundation to raise more than $1.7 million and spend an unspecified amount to push the House speaker's conservative agenda while delaying disclosure of spe-

Texas town honors reputed birthplace of famous Comanche

By Steve O'Neil
Associated Press

WHITE CITY — A pump jack whines and whirs, making the only sound on a quiet stretch of road near Cedar Lake in northeast Gaines County. In the distance, several more rigs slowly slice the air with their rhythmic precision.

Although placid now, this area once was a favorite rest stop for Comanche Indians as they tracked buffalo up and down the Plains. Later during the first part of the century, the locale was home to a rowdy oil town.

But perhaps most significant is the area's claim of being the birth place of Quanah Parker — a man heralded as one of the greatest Comanche chiefs of all time. A weathered stone marker plunked down by the state of Texas in 1936 commemorates the area as his birthplace.

"It sure has attracted a lot of attention over the years," says Wayne Smith, chairman of the neighboring Dawson County Historical Society. "It used to be more popular years ago, people would go and search for Indian artifacts and arrowheads. But now not many people know that monument is out there."

Although some believe Quanah Parker started his life at the edge of this expansive alkali lake, leading historians are unsure exactly where the chief was born.

"It is one of the questions that might never be known," said William Hagan, a University of Oklahoma history professor and author of a widely acclaimed book on Quanah Parker. "He most certainly traveled through there, but I am not sure if anyone, even Quanah, knew exactly where he was born."

In 1936, a group of historians traveled through Texas and erected 900 historical markers for the state's centennial. Unfortunately, all research records from the markers mysteriously disappeared from the Texas Historical Commission's archives.

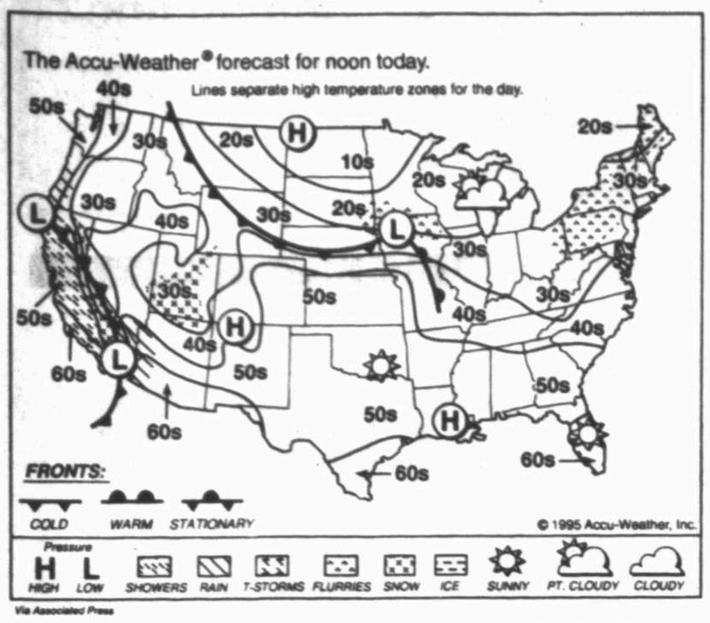

"Believe me, it's been frustrating," said Cynthia Beeman, a Texas Historical Commission historian. "In this case we have no access to any of the research that went into that marker — we only have a record that it exists."

But while the details surrounding

Highs won't break mid-50s

Staff Report

Today's forecast call for mostly cloudy skies with a high in the mid-50s and south winds at 10-15 mph. Tonight should be mostly cloudy with a low in the mid-30s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Wednesday should be mostly cloudy with a high near 60.

After an overnight low of 24, Monday's high reached 52, compared to the record high for that date of 82 set in 1950. The record low was seven set in 1966.

STATE

Sunny skies and low temperatures painted the weather for Texas on Monday.

Temperatures were generally in the 50s statewide.

The National Weather Service said clouds will increase today.

With more clouds rolling in today, the chance for precipitation increases. Rain is expected in far West Texas on Wednesday.

NATION

Moderate snow was scattered over parts of the eastern third of the nation Monday, icing highways and closing schools. Rain returned to California, bringing more mudslides.

Light snow fell as far south as northwestern South Carolina and the northern counties of Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia. Schools were closed in parts of northern Mississippi and northern Georgia.

"We're going to make a snowman if we can find enough snow," said Kathy King of Cartersville, Ga.

South of the snow line, rain was scattered over other areas of the Southeast, with 2.15 inches by early afternoon at Mary Esther, Fla.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

■ Samuel "Dirk" Waverley, 13, exhibited the grand champion breeding chickens. Samuel is a member of the Community 4-H Club in Midland.

■ Tara Price, 9, exhibited the grand champion pen of three rabbits. Tara is a member of the Community 4-H Club in Midland.

■ Melissa Pittman, 9, exhibited the grand champion breeding buck and doe rabbits. Melissa is a member of the Greenwood 4-H Club.

Commissioner Louisa Valencia, who has worked with her grandchildren in livestock projects, congratulated the 4-H and FFA boys and girls for working in such wholesome programs.

"We do appreciate what you are doing," Ms. Valencia said. "We do think about you when you do something good." In learning to be "good citizens" and in carrying out long-term projects, the boys and girls enable themselves to "be what you want to be."

Working in livestock projects "gives you leadership skills," said Allison Worley. "And you learn how to be more responsible."

Bradley Paulk noted that working in FFA and 4-H Club projects helps youngsters keep "out of trouble" and prepares them "for the future" in whatever endeavors they may undertake.

"The 4-H and FFA programs are very important for youth," said Charlotte Hold, Midland County's 4-H Club agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX), "because they build such wonderful potentials and characteristics in the youth."

The programs help develop leadership and responsibility in youths. The work "helps their self-esteem," Ms. Hold said. "And these types of programs are wonderful for youth development. And without these programs, I think youth would be at a disadvantage. We hope that more youths will join these programs in the coming years."

While the ceremony recognized the "great achievements" of the grand-champion exhibitors, Ms. Hold asserted that "we can't forget all those 4-H'ers and FFA students who maybe placed last in the show, or their animals may not have been the best quality. Those kids, too, worked just as hard, maybe even harder, sometimes, than some of these other children. They put in a lot of responsibility."

Other than livestock projects, the youths may get involved in studies and activities such as entomology, camping, recreation, fashion shows, food-and-nutrition programs, public speaking, and "all types of wonderful things," Ms. Hold said.

Earnest Kiker, the TAEX agricultural agent for Midland County, said the "livestock program is an excellent program for the growth and potential of the young people. It teaches them leadership and responsibility and self-esteem. It's also a family activity."

Additionally, livestock projects may develop into family and community bonding and help enhance communicative skills with people and animals.

FFA and 4-H activities offer "excellent" opportunities for parents and children "to share and travel together and learn and experience activities as a family," Kiker said. "It's an excellent growth potential for adults and kids as well."

Quanah Parker's birth are murky, much is known about his adult life.

Quanah Parker was born sometime in the mid-19th century to Chief Peta Nocona and Cynthia Ann Parker, an Anglo woman who was captured by Comanches when she was 9 years old. He quickly rose to prominence among the Quahadas, a division of the Comanches, according to Hagan. Quanah continued to influence his tribe after the U.S. government forced him onto an Oklahoma reservation.

"Quanah succeeded as chief because of his remarkable talent for seeking out the middle ground," Hagan writes in "Quanah Parker, Comanche Chief."

"A progressive on economic and political issues, he maintained his standing as a Comanche by refusing to reject important aspects of his tribe's culture."

Through deals with cattlemen, Quanah prospered financially and lived in a large house in Oklahoma with his numerous wives. He trekked to Washington several times to speak out on Indian affairs, and he was asked by President Theodore Roosevelt to be part of Roosevelt's inaugural parade.

"He was a remarkable man," Hagan said of Quanah Parker. "Today we would have difficulty comprehending the challenges he faced."

Gene Hendon was 15 months old when his family moved to an area a few miles east of Cedar Lake in 1930. Ever since he can remember, he has heard stories about Quanah Parker.

"I farmed around here my whole life," Hendon said, scanning the landscape from behind the wheel of his pickup. "People often stop me and ask where the monument is; it can be hard to find if you don't know just where to go."

Decades after Quanah Parker and other Plains Indians were banished to reservations, the area near Cedar Lake hosted a small oil boomtown called White City, named after the town's founders Gus and Winford White. Standing near the granite monument, Hendon points to a grassy hillside topped with pump jacks.

"There was a service station over there," he said. "And over that hill there was the movie theater."

Liquor sales were legal in Gaines County then, and the town sported a few saloons.

"I was too young to go to any of them," he said. "But my brothers kept me informed of some of the wild stories."

A rusty hand-crank gas pump, flanked by mesquite trees and a few concrete slabs, is all that remains of White City. And as for the presence of Quanah Parker and the Plains Indians, there is only the monument.

"I guess no one will ever be sure if Quanah was born there, but it makes for an interesting story," Smith said. "And who knows, he very well could have been born there."

DRAMA: Legal system is not ready for TV

judge who thought the law was more important than television.

ABC, which seemed to be excessively prim by declining to cover the trial until the opening statements, turned out to have made the right call as first one and then another network faded from sight. NBC, which came on bright-eyed and early at noon, blinked at 2:15 p.m. The CBS Eye closed shortly before 3 p.m. Court TV was so talked out about the case it switched to a wrongful death lawsuit at lunch.

And who could blame them. It can be tough when life refuses to imitate television, particularly for TV people. Brokaw said in another time the Simpson case would have been the stuff of grand opera, but Monday it couldn't even compete with soap opera as the legal wrangling over the prosecution's last-minute surprises made for glazed-over eyes. "We will put the use of the videotape on hold until we find out the whereabouts of the second and third videotapes" isn't classic legal drama, as defined by the networks (or anyone else). The expressions of outrage from the prosecution and defense, as well as Ito's frayed nerves later in the day, were good soundbites, but not ongoing drama.

When the legalese got really dense Brokaw asked, "Jack Ford, what did we just hear?" Ford explained it was the challenge of a subpoena. Moving right along . . .

That said, NBC's coverage seemed the most energetic. Brokaw was at his Koppelian best during interviews and NBC assembled its own dream team of legal expertise consisting of Ford, Reiner, Roy Black and Gerry Spence. CNN's twosome of Greta Van Susteren and Roger Cossack were also impressive, usually on top of developments before the competition. (Channel surfers may have noticed that Court TV was about 10 seconds behind the others. That's a matter of routine for Court TV, which pays greater attention to procedural matters like keeping identities secret that the court meant to be undisclosed.)

But are the networks interested in the trial only for its entertainment value, rather than its news value? Not really. With this much interest in the case, everyone including public radio was dealing with the story, even if it was Christopher Lydon asking his audience, "Should we be covering the story?"

The rest of the media carried on without the guilt or the mea culpas, although Lydon did an excellent job at telling some of his prissier listeners why the story did have most of America interested, if no longer riveted. Is this a latter-day "Othello"? Lydon made a good case for it.

Shakespeare wasn't invoked on television. As the day wore on, it was hard to invoke any genre of drama, high or low.

DELAYS: Foundation puts off IRS tax filing

(From 1A)

cifics until after the 1994 election.

The first tax report was supposed to be filed early last year. It will be filed in the next two months, said Bethany Noble, a foundation vice president.

The relationship with Gingrich has raised questions about the foundation's tax-exempt status, though officials say it is strictly nonpartisan.

"There's clearly an association between the Progress and Freedom Foundation and the speaker, but it's not a formal relationship," Bill Myers, another foundation vice president, said. "The speaker is a friend, but any characterization of Progress and Freedom being Newt Gingrich's think tank is just plain wrong."

Gingrich's spokesman, Tony Blankley, was in a meeting and could not be reached for comment, an aide said Monday.

As a not-for-profit organization, the foundation is exempt from taxes but is required to file an annual report with the IRS listing revenues and expenditures, the salaries of its officers and top employees and other financial details.

Public records show the foundation was granted tax-exempt status shortly after it was created in April 1993.

The initial financial report, covering the period through Dec. 31, 1993, was due early in 1994.

But John Alexander, a Philadelphia-based spokesman for the IRS, said the organization requested and received permission to file its report at the end of each fiscal year rather than at the end of the calendar year. It also received an extension for an interim report that should have been filed when the tax year was changed.

The new deadline was in March 1994, the IRS said.

Before the deadline, however, the foundation sought another extension that pushed the due date past the election, to Feb. 15 of this year.

IRS spokesman Dom Laponzina said it is not unusual for a group to switch tax years or file an extension. But, he added, "there has to be significant grounds for the second extension. There has to be extenuating circumstances. Those are rare."

Alexander said the IRS could not discuss specifics of the foundation's second extension.

TRIAL: Schorre to seat one or 2 more witnesses

(From 1A)

Strickland hit Sanchez, leaving him incapacitated in the roadway and went back into the club to retrieve his girlfriend just about the time Sanchez was run over by an automobile.

An autopsy showed Sanchez died of multiple blunt trauma to the head and chest. Death is due to a severed aorta and massive head trauma, Schorre said. A medical expert is expected to testify today.

". . . I seen Bud and Roy there fighting," the female witness said. "I seen Bud hit him. Other than that, I didn't see Roy really doing anything," she said.

The club owner testified that Strickland and Sanchez had been outside only a few minutes before Strickland hurriedly came back in, found his girlfriend and left the establishment.

Defense attorney Ian Cantacuzene told the jury that the evidence will show that Strickland did not cause Sanchez's death, and that the fight resulted from Sanchez's manhandling of Strickland's girlfriend at an earlier date.

"The only thing he's guilty of, if he's guilty at all, is assault," Cantacuzene said.

The owner of the nightclub testified that he saw Strickland put his girlfriend's driver's license in his shirt pocket earlier that night. This license was later found by Sanchez's body, according to testimony from police officers.

The driver of the car, Johnny Holt, testified that he was coming east on West 80, as Business Interstate 20 was called at the time, when he saw something in the road, hidden by the shadow of a street sign in the right lane.

Holt testified that he swerved but could not miss whatever was lying in the road. Only when he pulled his car over did he see that he had run over a man.

"It's been a year . . . and I try not to think about it because it gives me nightmares," Holt said.

Holt testified that he does not drink and that he was driving about 40 mph.

Police testified that Sanchez's body was found 14.9 feet north of the curbing along the south side of the road.

Strickland has been free on bond since the incident, but was taken back into custody a few days ago on the request of his bondsman. The reason for this is unclear, defense attorneys said. Strickland has been on time to every hearing in the case and has participated actively in his defense, defense attorneys said.

Judge John Hyde of the 238th District Court approved Strickland's bond Monday and he was released following testimony Monday. Schorre plans to seat an additional two or three witnesses today before defense seats their first witness.

O.J.: Ito to allow questioning on prejudice gested in court papers that police may have moved the Bronco as well as the bloody glove that matched one found near the bodies of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman last June.

(From 1A)

Deputy District Attorney Marcia Clark called the new evidence "trial by ambush" and said she was "absolutely shocked" by the last-minute disclosure. "This is a willful desire to deprive the people of a fair trial," she said.

Her colleague, William Hodgman, asked for a week's continuance to study the new evidence and witness list, which includes actress Tawny Kitaen, local TV reporter Tracie Savage, Los Angeles Police Chief Willie Williams and author Lawrence Schiller, who is writing Simpson's book.

"The truth, or part of the truth, has been hidden from us by the defense," Hodgman said.

Defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. responded with equal indignation.

"I am absolutely appalled that the prosecution comes here and says they are unprepared," he said. "They see a few charts from us and become frightened and want to run away and hide for a week."

Ito was tense during the exchange, interrupting attorneys at times to say, "You're wasting my time," and "Do you expect me to believe that?"

The prosecution strongly objected to the idea of Simpson talking to jurors or showing them "physical scars, injuries and limitations." The written request would seem to indicate he hopes to show he was physically incapable of committing the crimes.

Simpson's bid to address jurors is not unprecedented; other defendants have given opening statements. One was black activist Angela Davis, who was acquitted in June 1972 of charges she helped plan an Aug. 7, 1970, Marin County courthouse escape in which a judge, two convicts and an accomplice were slain.

Loyola Law School Professor Stanley Goldman, a former public defender, said he didn't think Ito would let Simpson talk to jurors or do more than lift an arm and describe the limits of motion.

"I think he'll just be allowed to be an exhibit," Goldman said. "I don't think there's any chance he'll be allowed to give an opening statement."

If Simpson participates in opening statements, however, Goldman said it would not obligate Simpson to take the stand later or be opened up to cross-examination by the prosecution.

Ito put off until today a decision on either of Simpson's requests.

On other matters, the judge rejected a defense request to make the prosecution show jurors a diagram rather than a photograph of the bloody crime scene. He also told the defense it may not mention Detective Mark Fuhrman in its opening statement but may cross-examine him later about his alleged racial animosity.

Drama had been anticipated Monday, with the prosecution poised to open with details of its case against the former football star. But fireworks of a different sort engaged the courtroom spectators.

Heaviest soldier loss in decade stuns Israel

JERUSALEM (AP) — Stunned, embittered and enraged, Israel buried more young soldiers Monday than it had in any single day over the past decade.

The government grappled with how best to deal with 52 deaths over the past four months at the hands of Islamic extremists, including 19 in Sunday's suicide bombing.

"We will continue our search for peace and at the same time we will pursue you and hit you hard," Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said of the Islamic extremists in a rare televised address to the nation. "No border will stand in our way. And we will eliminate you."

Television reports said the government was weighing a security defense border between Israel and the West Bank, under Israeli military rule since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. Rabin said a frontier heavily patrolled by soldiers and police could be established within months.

"We want to reach a division between us and you. We do not want the majority of the Jewish population, 98 percent of whom live inside sovereign Israel and united Jerusalem, to be vulnerable to terrorism," he said.

"We will divide between us and you and not according to the basis of the pre-1967 borders," Rabin said.

The idea brought immediate condemnation from Aharon Dombe, spokesman for the estimated 140,000 Jewish settlers in the occupied territories, saying the government was abandoning them.

The spiritual leader of the faction that claimed reponsibility for Sunday's bombing and opposes the September 1993 Israeli-PLO peace accord vowed Monday to continue the attacks.

"The Jihad (holy war) against the enemy will continue," said Sheik Abdullah Shami, whose group, Islamic Jihad, wants to destroy Israel and establish an Islamic empire throughout the Middle East.

Shami spoke during a wake attended by about 200 people at the Gaza City home of Anwar Sukar, 23, one of two suicide bombers held responsible for Sunday's double blast in central Israel.

The larger Islamic fundamentalist group Hamas was more conciliatory than Shami, and renewed a call for a truce with Israel if it withdrew from the occupied West Bank and Jewish settlements.

That's unlikely, said the health minister, a former West Bank commander considered close to Rabin.

"We have chosen to fight and by all means. There are no limitations for the security services — a free hand. We have taken off the gloves," Efraim Sneh said.

Israel radio said a close circle of Rabin's security advisers decided Monday to extend a "special dispensation" for agents of the Shin Bet security service in fighting terrorism.

The measures stopped short of right-wing demands to halt peace talks with the Palestine Liberation Organization, gaining increasing currency amongst a public losing its sense of security.

"We have become hostages. There is no safe public place," said Tal Hanan, joining scores of Israelis stopping to light memorial candles and pray at the site of the bombing, 18 miles northeast of Tel Aviv.

"We are saturated with empty promises. What kind of peace is this? We are sitting ducks."

Rabin sought to reassure the nation. "We will achieve peace, for this is the solution in the long term and to the terrorism, even if it is difficult for us now," he said.

The suicide bombing at the Beit Lid junction near Netanya mostly killed and maimed teenagers doing three-year national service.

Warnings were rife about Mexican economy months before collapse

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — While the Clinton administration and the Mexican government were saying until late last year that Mexico was a booming example of an emerging market that would bring wealth to workers in both countries, warnings were running rampant in both capitals that severe economic trouble lay ahead.

According to officials in Washington, the Treasury Department told several Mexican officials starting last summer that the country's short-term borrowings had reached a dangerously high level and that the peso was being kept artificially high. But on several occasions, officials said, the Mexicans responded that they were aware of the problem, but that nothing could be done during and just after the election that brought Ernesto Zedillo Ponce de Leon to power.

In Mexico City, officials now acknowledge that they knew the economy was in serious trouble months before Zedillo's election on Aug. 21. But they say that for political reasons, partly related to the elections and partly to the ambitions of President Carlos Salinas de Gortari to head the new World Trade Organization after leaving office, they chose to continue borrowing and spending at a tremendous pace, sustaining the illusion of a thriving economy.

On Monday, Guillermo Ortiz, the Mexican finance minister, said at a hostile meeting of the legislature in Mexico City that there was "a yellow light" in Mexico's balance sheets that anyone should have seen. He said that while the government was to blame, so was Wall Street, which "endorsed the economic policies and in particular the exchange rate policy of the Mexican government."

The series of warnings issued from Washington, however, raises a number of questions about what the administration was saying in public about the health of the Mexican economy, signals that were picked up by both American companies and investors.

In November, as disaster loomed, Clinton used the Summit of the Americas, in Miami, the first meeting of Latin American leaders in nearly three decades, to celebrate Mexico's economic management as a model for the region's growth. He and his deputies issued no warnings that Mexico was consuming too much too fast, or letting its debt grow too rapidly.

Prince finally wins one, halts gossip

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles put his foot down Monday.

Charles ended the latest round of gossip about his personal life by winning a court order to silence his former housekeeper, and receiving a vow of future confidentiality from his former valet.

Valet Ken Stronach resigned Monday, admitting it was "gross misconduct" to talk about his boss to a tabloid newspaper and give them pictures of the royal bedroom, the prince's lawyers said.

Stronach, 50, has apologized to the prince and disputed statements attributed to him in the News of the World about Charles's affair with Camilla Parker Bowles. He loses an $18,000-a-year salary, and the use of a house and a car.

Royal lawyers also obtained a High Court injunction last week restraining Stronach from making further revelations.

The High Court on Monday ordered Wendy Berry, housekeeper to Prince Charles and Princess Diana for nine years before they separated, to surrender all diaries and other manuscripts in her possession to the prince's lawyers.

The News of the World reported Sunday that Mrs. Berry kept diaries that included intimate details of the lives of Charles and Diana, and that she planned to publish them. The newspaper quoted from the diaries but did not say how it obtained the information.

All royal employees are required to sign contracts containing confidentiality clauses barring them from disclosing details of their service and speaking to the news media.

Royal gossip has filled newspaper columns for decades, but intense interest in the royal family in recent years has pushed the price-tag for royal revelations well into six figures.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, JANUARY 24, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your emotional state will be greatly influenced by your physical surroundings. Put some money into beautifying and modernizing your home. By spring, you will have a clearer idea of what you want from a lasting romance. Let your mate know that you are playing for keeps. Your personal finances show continued improvement throughout the fall. If you can juggle two jobs, you will make great financial progress.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Nastassja Kinski, singer Neil Diamond, gymnast Mary Lou Retton, comedian Yakov Smirnoff.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Others may wonder how long it will take you to learn certain lessons. Wise up! Only hard work will get you where you want to go. Grab a bargain if certain you can afford it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You exhibit great strength of character now. A candid conversation could lead to a more affectionate relationship. Your love life flourishes in a comfortable setting.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your self-confidence attracts interesting newcomers. A powerful attraction to a stranger could cause problems. Insist on your independence, but curb an urge to show off. When attending social events, dress to suit the occasion.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Attending a prestigious event could give you a totally different outlook. Follow through on a family matter. A new relationship could provide the motivation you need to stick to a diet. Exercise daily.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your confidence is restored by something that happens today. Someone may know you too well. Do not try to pull the wool over loved one's eyes. Give romantic partner a second chance to shine.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be alert to a loved one's desires. Your ingenuity helps you find a quick solution to a family dilemma. Older relatives could make extra demands now. Avoid behaving in a selfish manner this evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Push ahead with money projects; even mistakes can work in your favor! Your instincts about people are uncanny. Trust your first impression. This evening, focus on the warmth and support your mate provides.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You tend to be lucky in love. Concentrate on building more nurturing relationships within the family circle. Use your skills as a negotiator to boost profits. Convince the bank to extend your credit limit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): By reducing the stress in your life, you will automatically improve your health. A spur-of-the-moment phone call leads to new financial gains. Widen your social circle by hosting a small party.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Steps you take now will affect your personal life in a positive way. Seize a golden opportunity to form a new partnership. Keep your car in good repair to prevent costly travel delays.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An important relationship stabilizes. Count your blessings! An eccentric individual could complicate your life. Take better care of yourself and your resources. Take advantage of every opportunity you get to showcase a special talent.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A relationship picks up momentum today. Those in promotional work score big gains. A marriage proposal is likely. Know your own heart and mind. An exciting alliance will be strengthened when you keep a promise.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Queen of ♡

When technique alone may not help, fall back on psychology. That can be an equally potent weapon, as this hand from a team game testifies.

At both tables South played three no trump, after essentially identical auctions. As little as the jack of spades with North would virtually have guaranteed nine tricks. At both tables West led the queen of hearts, and dummy brought little cheer.

At one table declarer went down peacefully. After winning the king of hearts at trick one, declarer led the king of diamonds. East grabbed the ace and reverted to hearts, forcing out declarer's remaining stopper in the suit. Declarer had only eight tricks, and the defenders took the rest for a one-trick set.

At the other table, South did far better. Instead of meekly conceding defeat, declarer boldly led the king of clubs at trick two! West, looking at dummy's five clubs headed by the jack, made the expert play of allowing the king of clubs to hold in an effort to shut out dummy's suit. That is likely to happen anytime the club honors are split and either defender holds the ace guarded twice. With a club trick in the bank, declarer abandoned clubs in favor of diamonds and claimed nine tricks.

As the cards lie, declarer would have made nine tricks even if West won the ace. When the queen drops the club position becomes marked, and repeated finesses allows declarer to come to nine tricks with three spades, two hearts and four clubs. Stealing a club trick, however, would have been far more satisfying than finding the only distribution that delivers the contract legitimately!

Toni Morrison returns to dedicate library reading room in her honor

LORAIN, Ohio — Toni Morrison returned to the place where her love of books was nurtured to help dedicate a library reading room in her honor.

Author returns to dedicate library reading room.

"The Lorain Public Library was so important to me," she said Sunday at a ceremony in her hometown. "I spent long, long hours reading."

Morrison, 63, won the Nobel Prize in literature in 1993 and teaches at Princeton University.

She said she hoped readers will be drawn to the room.

"To be able to sit down, in what I hope would be comfortable chairs, and spend 45 minutes or an hour quietly reading books. In them lies the real knowledge," Morrison said.

SPARTANBURG, S.C. — The new James Bond, Pierce Brosnan, is abandoning his beloved British Aston Martins for a German BMW. But it'll be made in the U.S.A.

The new James Bond abandons British Aston Martins.

"Goldeneye," due out in November, will have Brosnan at the wheel of BMW's secret new two-seat convertible roadster, United Artists said Sunday.

Agent 007's car will be blue, but BMW's mum on other details, like when the car will be available to the masses or what it will cost superspy wannabes for their own Bondmobile.

The car is being made at a South Carolina plant. Installation of Bond gimmicks, like machine guns and oil slick buttons, was handled by United Artists, said Bobby Hitt, community relations manager for BMW.

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf has told his version of Operation Desert Storm. Now co-commander Prince Khalid bin Sultan is getting a turn.

The retired general and member of the Saudi Arabian royal family signed a contract Monday to write "Desert Warrior," his office said. All proceeds from the book will go to the Bosnian Children's Fund to help orphans in the former Yugoslav republic.

The contract gives Harper Collins of New York the English-language rights to the book, set to appear in the United States and Britain in May.

Two years ago, Prince Khalid blasted Schwarzkopf's book, "It Doesn't Take A Hero," for what he said was an attempt by the U.S. general to try to "portray himself as the sole hero" of the 1990-91 war.

NEW YORK — Demi Moore's on another magazine cover, and — you guessed it — she isn't wearing any clothes.

Demi Moore's on another cover — yes, without clothes.

The 32-year-old actress, who posed in the buff before and after childbirth for Vanity Fair, is clutching her bare breasts on the cover of February's Rolling Stone.

Moore, whose latest role is a sexually harassing boss in "Disclosure," told the magazine she's "very much a girl's girl."

"I have a lot of girlfriends, I do a lot of girl activities, and I take girl vacations. And I work mostly with women," she said.

She said she's eager for a son to go with the three girls she's had with husband Bruce Willis.

"I need to have a son so I can have a boy that really adores me like the girls adore Bruce ... then I could say I have a real boyfriend," Moore said. "Maria Shriver said to me that she was so in love with her son, and I said, 'Oh, man, I'm jealous.' "

LOS ANGELES — Don't compare Laurence Fishburne to Wesley Snipes, Denzel Washington and other black stars.

"I'm nothing like them," he said in Saturday's Orange County Register. "The only thing we have in common is that we're black actors and we grew up in New York."

The 33-year-old Fishburne, whose portrayal of Ike Turner in "What's Love Got To Do With It?" was nominated for an Academy Award last year, has two films out and a third due soon.

He plays a college professor in John Singleton's "Higher Learning" and co-stars with Ellen Barkin as a former CIA operative in "Bad Company." The movie "Just Cause" will be released next month.

Danger of rabies reaches high point

Midland pet owners should be aware of the rabies threat now existing in Texas and be certain to keep their pets vaccinated against the deadly disease. Rabies, while always present in the wildlife population, is at epidemic proportions in South and Central Texas, and the Texas Board of Health has designated all counties in the state as quarantine areas for the disease.

While that fact will mainly affect the owners of dogs and cats over 3 months old that don't have a current rabies vaccination certificate, hybrid animals such as domestic dog-wolf crosses and wild animals at high risk of rabies, virtually every Midlander should be aware that the danger of the disease is extraordinary at the present time.

Local veterinarians urge that people have their pets vaccinated if they do not have a valid certificate, and that they be on the watch for either domestic or wild animals acting in an unusual way. For example, people should be wary of animals staggering or walking in circles. Such animals should be reported at once to Animal Control of other officials.

Vaccinating domestic animals and pets against rabies and reporting animals acting strangely is the best way to prevent further spread of this deadly disease. Doing nothing when you are aware that the rabies danger is high will only permit it to escalate unchecked.

Between 1988 and 1994, about 530 cases of canine rabies were confirmed in Texas. During that period, about 1,500 people in South Texas were exposed to rabies and received treatment, according to the Texas Department of Health.

That's what can occur when rabies reaches epidemic proportions and begins to threaten man as well as the animal world.

It's critical that Midlanders ensure that all their pets are vaccinated against this dangerous and deadly disease.

CHARLEY REESE

Responsibility belongs with immoral person

As I understand it, some Republicans propose to cut off federal subsidies for bastards. I think that is a good idea.

Reese

Bastards — children born out of wedlock — are presently being subsidized via the welfare system, and like most anything that government subsidizes, they are proliferating.

Now it sounds harsh, doesn't it, to use that old and perfectly legitimate word, "bastard," to describe illegitimate children? We live in an age of euphemisms, when people try to blur reality by blurring the language used to describe it. This habit has helped to create many of the problems in our society. Humans live by adapting to reality. To blur the symbols used to describe reality often means you will not correctly identify reality. This will always lead to errors.

But there is more to it than just timid language. The secular sociologists, psychologists and politicians aspire to be the new priesthood. To do that, the old priesthood of actual priests, rabbis, imams and preachers must be displaced. One way to do that is to reduce human behavior from the realm of moral choices to the realm of social and economic conditioning. To do that, the language must be purged — morality cleansing you might call it — of all words which denote a moral judgment about behavior.

That's why prisons are called "correctional facilities" and sociologists speak of deciding on a "treatment" for an offender. But, of course, criminal behavior like sexual behavior is a matter of choice, and the choices are made on the basis of morality or lack thereof. You don't catch criminal behavior the way you catch a cold. You choose to be a criminal.

Between stimulus — some message from reality — and response lies a space in which human character is formed. That is the space where humans exercise their freedom to choose, which all humans, contrary to liberal sociological dogma, possess. Credit for this clear formulation belongs to Stephen R. Covey and A. Roger Merrill, authors of "First Things First: A Principle-Centered Approach to Time & Life" (Simon & Schuster, 1994, $23).

People choose to commit the act of bastardy, that is, producing illegitimate children. People choose to rob, kill or steal. And in both cases, it is a matter of morality, not a matter of social conditioning or economics.

At the root of all liberal and socialist rhetoric — and that may be a redundancy — lies the determination to avoid the subject of morality which, of course, deprives psychologists, sociologists and politicians of their status as a modern priesthood. That's why you hear talk about "values" rather than "morals."

But values and morals are not the same thing. A value is anything a person desires to acquire and to keep. That can be a house, public office or a mistress. Morals are rules for human behavior, specifically as to right or wrong.

Since most social problems from crime to bastardy are the result of bad choices by human beings in terms of how they should behave, it is obvious that what is needed is not government training, indoctrination or subsidies, but moral teaching.

George Washington said that no means of moral teaching for large numbers of people has ever been found that is more effective than religion. He's was right then, and that's still true.

Someone once defined insanity as doing the same thing and expecting a different result. Liberals want to keep on doing the same thing, but doing the same thing will produce the same results: crime and bastards.

MIKE ROYKO

Oprah's loyal fans tell all — to wrong number

When Steve moved to the Near North Side of Chicago a few months ago, he got a new phone number. He didn't know that it would give him a fast education in the world of TV show biz.

Royko

Almost immediately after it was installed, the phone rang and the voice said: "Oprah?"

"Who?"

"Is Oprah there?"

"You must have the wrong number."

Then it rang again, and someone said: "I'm calling about the show."

"What show?"

"Oprah's. I got the exact same kind of problem she's talking about."

"Who?"

"Oprah. Is she there? Can I talk to her?"

"This is not Oprah's show. You have the wrong. . . ."

"Tell her it's real important."

"You have the wrong number."

"Huh?"

It rang again. And again and again and again.

Steve discovered that his new number was only a clumsy finger away from the number people call to volunteer for Oprah's show.

So he joined a select group of people whose phones attract swarms of wrong numbers.

I'm one of them. If people call AT&T's problem number and dial 1-800 first, as instructed, they get AT&T.

But for some reason, many people skip the 1-800 prefix. Maybe they mistakenly believe they will save a long-distance charge.

Then they get my phone. If they are fortunate, my assistant answers and politely explains their error. I'm less forgiving of dumb dialing, and I usually say that AT&T has been bought by oil-rich Arab sheiks and only those who embrace Islam will be given phone service.

Steve, who runs a consulting business from his home, is more fortunate because he gets a more interesting mix of phone bumblers.

"You would not believe the calls," he says. "People are so naive and so needy. I'll tell you, I don't know whether to laugh or cry. Most of the time it is 50-50.

"Recently she must have had a show about finding lost loves or lost children or lost parents or dogs or somebody that's lost. I don't know for sure because I never watch those shows.

"But when I got home from an out-of-town trip my answering machine was overflowing with desperate people looking for someone. The calls came from all over — Chicago, Montreal, Georgia, Florida, New Jersey. Everyone looking for someone.

"It was miserable listening to it all. One woman was looking for a son she placed in a foster home more than 30 years ago; one woman looked for a lost love she met in Japan a long time ago. One woman couldn't speak English and went on and on in a language I couldn't identify. Then this one woman, I don't know what she was looking for because all she did was sob for several minutes."

Then why not put a message on your machine telling callers that it isn't Oprah's show and if they call again an electronic worm will slither from the phone into their ear and burrow into their head and eat their brain? That'll give them something to think about.

"Of course I leave a message. Nothing like that, but I say quite clearly: 'This is not Oprah. This is a private residence. Do not leave a message because Oprah won't call you back. If you think this is Oprah, you have misdialed.'

"But it doesn't matter. People don't listen. I communicate for a living and speak clearly and slowly. What more can I say? They pay no attention to the message and start talking anyway.

"What amazes me is how many people feel that Oprah has super powers and is able to do something for them. Or that they actually think she's going to call them back."

ANOTHER VIEW

Chechnya sets change for Russian military

Just a few years ago the Russian army was thought capable of barreling across the Fulda Gap in Germany and swiftly engulfing Western Europe. Those days are gone.

The army required more than a month to push back a ragtag militia and win control of the presidential palace in Grozny, the capital of Chechnya. That blundering performance demonstrates how little the army threatens the rest of Europe — and how much it threatens Russia itself.

Even a partial accounting of the Chechen battle, which President Boris Yeltsin has prematurely declared over, shows the calamitous cost of keeping a broken army: hundreds of civilians killed in indiscriminate bombing raids, a small city left in ruins, scores of soldiers dead from friendly fire or gunned down during feckless efforts to capture Grozny, near insurrection in the ranks and officer corps.

The Russian government can no longer put off the hard business of reforming the Russian military. The Chechen debacle is sure to incite calls from Communists and conservatives in Moscow to rebuild the military on the Soviet model, a disastrous step that would drain rubles from the exhausted Russian treasury, undermine economic reform and fail to reconstitute an armed force appropriate to Moscow's diminished needs and resources.

Yeltsin and democratic leaders need to get ready for the Chechen backlash. That means devising a plan to streamline the armed forces, and a political strategy to make it happen. The answer is not to fire senior commanders who opposed the assault on Grozny, which Yeltsin did Thursday.

Once the pampered and expensive symbol of Soviet power, the armed forces have essentially been gutted since the disintegration of the Soviet Union, without a coherent plan to reshape them.

The accumulation of grievances, including drastically reduced budgets, unanswered draft calls, shortages of everything from clothing to housing and a shattering loss of stature, is a combustible mix that can be exploited by Vladimir Zhirinovsky and other extreme nationalists.

History suggests that a hungry and humiliated army is not likely to be a building block of democracy.

Military strategists in Moscow and Washington talk about recasting the Russian armed forces as a lighter, more mobile force, making a clean break with Soviet doctrine that emphasized heavily armored divisions.

Maintaining a large air force no longer makes sense, particularly when training time for pilots is so limited that most rarely leave the tarmac. The same goes for a navy that rarely leaves port. Most experts agree that Russia should move from a large conscript army to a much smaller professional force, on the American model.

All that is fine, and should be done once Russia has the money and political stability to deal with long-term military problems. For now, Yeltsin needs a more immediate plan to get the army he has back on its feet with better housing, training and supervision. Defense Minister Pavel Grachev proudly calls the Chechen war "a turning point" for Russia's armed forces. It was, but not quite the kind he had in mind.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

It's time for events to spin out of government control

This Mexican peso mess might turn out to be one of those good-bad issues: bad in terms of immediate controversies and questions; good — we just have to watch and see — in terms of results down the line.

Murchison

The notion of U.S. government loan guarantees to Mexico understandably shocks some people, including Pat Buchanan and H. Ross Perot. They didn't like the North American Free Trade Agreement, and they sure don't like the loan guarantees. But the much more consequential matter — yes, more consequential even than $40 billion in loan guarantees — is the political loosening taking place in Mexico, which is a country, I feel bound as a Texan and near neighbor to add, we want to be as free and prosperous as possible.

This loosening manifested itself the other day in a pact signed by the Institutional Revolutionary Party, which has ruled Mexico for seven decades, and opposition political leaders. In the pact, the PRI (to use the familiar Mexican label for the party, from Partido Revolucionario Institucional Revolucionaria) has promised electoral reform, among other useful and salutary things. There are even supposed to be negotiations among the political parties, including the parties of the left and the right.

"The advance of democracy," said President Ernesto Zedillo Ponce de Leon, "is the responsibility of everyone. Democracy can't be imposed by a government, a political party, or an ideological current." Democracy just flows? Evidently.

The PRI sits somewhere in the middle of the pack: a dusty relic that's friendly to enterprise, but only to such enterprises as its supporters and good friends maintain, and too wedded to state enterprises — though far less so than 10 years ago.

The PRI is a more benevolent version of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union: fat, rich, self-satisfied, ripe for disintegration. No wonder it's disintegrating. It has outlived its time.

"Institutional revolution," indeed! Did you ever hear of such a contradiction in all your days? By their nature, revolutions — Mexico's, Russia's, anyone's — stop being revolutions the moment someone "institutionalizes" them. Mexico's "someones" contrived a little arrangement whereby they not only governed but passed the government down to each other.

This bred chauvinism, disregard for market forces and hostility to opposition. Of course, under the PRI system, you could oppose — you just couldn't win. The PRI regularly and ruthlessly stole all elections. Over the years, as you would expect, the party became quite proficient at stealing. But even the opposition became resigned to oppositionhood. The PRI was one of life's inevitabilities, like death and taxes.

In 1938, the PRI stole — "expropriated" was the polite term the party itself used — the country's oil industry from the Americans and British who had developed it. There wasn't much that could be done about it without going to war: where we almost were anyway. The PRI got away with it, as it got away in an earlier time with killing priests and nuns in its relentless war against the Catholic Church.

The new state-owned oil company, Pemex, became one of the props of the PRI regime — again, like the Soviet regime, which relied on oil as one of its principal sources of wealth.

In any case, the long sway of the PRI has become the source of Mexico' s greatest problems. The PRI mismanagement of the economy is one of the things foreigners can't work out for the Mexicans. When the whole thing starts to unravel, however, as Mexico's essentially colonial economy has done, it behooves neighbors to make as much space as they can for the new order.

That is why the loan guarantees, sizable as they are, and very, very unlikely to be called on, shouldn't horrify. The point, at least equally important, is that this is likely it for the PRI. How can it further restrain the economy? The economy, predictably, is slipping from the PRI's grip.

Events in Mexico spin out of government control — and that's good. Or, rather, it's about time.

Tracing quake destruction: What went wrong?

By Paul Alexander
Associated Press

KOBE, Japan — For Yoshihiro Takeuchi, the shattered landscape hit by last Tuesday's massive temblor is now a laboratory that contains specimens of everything he has studied.

Wooden and concrete buildings lay in piles of rubble. Others tilt at impossible angles. Elevated highways and overpasses collapsed.

Japan thought it was ready for a major quake. It wasn't ready for this.

"The human brain has a limit, but nature doesn't," said Takeuchi, chairman of the Earthquake Damage Investigation Committee for the Japan Institute of Architecture.

For Takeuchi, an engineering professor at Osaka Institute of Technology, the destruction from the magnitude 7.2 earthquake is familiar ground — except for one phenomenon rarely spotted in his visits to quake sites in Japan and elsewhere.

"The characteristic of this quake is the middle floors of buildings collapsing," he told The Associated Press on Sunday during a tour of some of Kobe's worst-hit areas. "In past quake history, we haven't seen this before . . . except for a few isolated examples."

The Sakura Bank building lost its fourth floor; the old city building its sixth. Part of the fifth floor of Nishishimi Hospital, in another neighborhood, collapsed.

In each case, there seemed to be little other structural damage; it was like a sandwich from which one slice of meat disappeared.

Takeuchi theorized that this quake simultaneously thrust upward and sideways, hence the wide cracks in sidewalks and the shift upward or downward of some buildings by two feet or more.

This motion also may have doomed some of the highways, which had been such a source of pride for Japanese engineers. After interstates were toppled in California quakes, they bragged that such a thing couldn't happen here.

"All the people saying that have received a shock," Takeuchi said.

Japan has different construction standards for highways and buildings. The huge pillars supporting raised roads consist of concrete cores surrounded by vertical steel rods that are then wrapped with vertical steel hoops and surrounded by another coat of concrete.

In Kobe, many ruptured, the reinforcing rods snapped like matchsticks.

The horizontal-vertical movement probably was to blame, but only detailed studies will tell, Takeuchi said. He doesn't foresee major changes to standards, but said the disaster could yield new construction techniques.

The bulk of the quake's energy was released just below the city on what had been considered a relatively inactive fault line. It still is uncertain whether two of the Earth's plates ground against each other, or one pushed over the other.

Although nearly 52,000 buildings were destroyed or severely damaged, Takeuchi said virtually all of those constructed since new, tighter regulations took effect in 1983 escaped largely unscathed.

A gleaming new 50-story city building, next to the damaged old one, didn't lose a single plate from its glass facade. Another glass building next to a collapsed highway entrance ramp also came out fine.

By contrast, seemingly all of the old wooden buildings, thought to be safe from quakes because of their elasticity, collapsed into splinters.

In this quake, the side-to-side vibration was as much as 20 inches.

"For a long-wave quake like this one, the wooden structure is weak," Takeuchi said. "Concrete is much safer."

Heavy roof tiles, popular in Japan, also contributed to damage in older buildings, making them top-heavy and easily toppled.

Death toll hits 5,000; outcry mounts, share prices plunge

KOBE, Japan (AP) — A strong aftershock shook buildings Monday night as the death toll from last week's earthquake passed 5,000. Share prices tumbled, and criticism mounted against Prime Minister Tomiichi Murayama for his handling of the crisis.

The death toll from Tuesday's 7.2-magnitude quake climbed to 5,060 when crews found more bodies in the ruins of this once-vibrant port city. Police said 102 people were missing.

More than 26,200 people were injured and more than 56,000 buildings were damaged or destroyed.

Three aftershocks shook the city Monday, including a magnitude 4.3 jolt that swayed buildings and shattered glass. Two more aftershocks followed early Tuesday, including one measuring magnitude 3.6. There were no reports of major damage or injuries from any of the aftershocks.

Nearly a week after Japan's deadliest quake since 1923, new signs of life emerged. About half of Kobe's schools reopened, and electricity was restored throughout the city.

The principal of one grade school, Michiru Yoshida, asked pupils to observe a minute of silent prayer. Some children cried as they bent their heads.

Elsewhere, the Kobe Central Wholesale Market was operating, along with one of the city's five garbage processing plants. The government unveiled plans to build 11,000 temporary homes within a month for some of the 300,000 people whose dwellings were destroyed or severely damaged.

Those steps, although welcomed, were small comfort to the thousands who lost loved ones.

"My daughter's voice, 'Dad, dad, please help me!' sticks in my ear," said Akio Haritori, 56, who lost a teen-age daughter when their house collapsed.

"It just doesn't go away," he said, wiping his tears. "I feel so sorry that I couldn't save her."

Survivors looked ahead to an uncertain future. "It's really difficult for a person my age to think about what to do next," said Tomoko Furanaka, 59. "I think this is as much as we could endure."

Shock waves from the quake also were felt in government and financial circles as the nation took stock of the expensive task of rebuilding.

Kobe was a major manufacturing center, the country's busiest container shipping port and an important transportation hub for moving component parts to factories throughout Japan and abroad.

Estimates on the economic impact vary widely. The Transport Ministry estimated it would cost $4.12 billion to repair damaged railway lines and stations alone.

Kosaku Inaba, head of the Japan Chamber of Commerce, estimated the overall cost of the quake would amount to more than $100 billion.

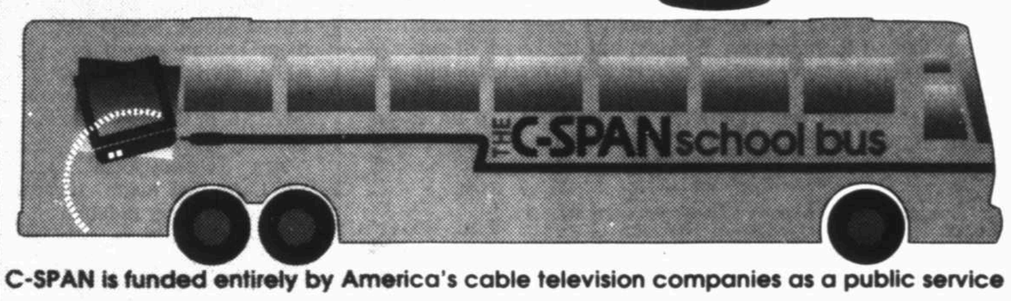

"In addition to the direct damage, you have shipping problems," he said in Tokyo. "Things aren't delivered, schedules are out of whack. Vehicles can't pass (on key highways). That means industries can't ship their products, and those companies will suffer."

Inaba accused Murayama of indecision in the critical hours shortly after the quake. "The response was scattered," he said. "What I'd like to see is the prime minister standing out front, taking the lead."

■ Maine judge cancels 'cookie tax'

AUGUSTA, Maine — The long arm of Maine's "snack tax" doesn't extend to Girl Scout cookies, a judge ruled Monday, chiding the state for bouncing around on whether to impose it.

Justice Donald Alexander said the state was "arbitrary and capricious" when it changed its interpretation of the 6 percent tax and extended it to Girl and Boy Scouts.

Assistant Attorney General Dennis Doiron said he will confer with the tax assessor's office Tuesday before deciding whether to appeal.

■ Menendez brothers to have retrial

LOS ANGELES — A June 12 retrial date was scheduled for Erik and Lyle Menendez, whose first trial on charges of killing their wealthy parents ended with juries unable to reach verdicts.

Superior Court Judge Stanley Weisberg announced the trial date during a hearing Monday at which he also denied a prosecution request that mental examinations of the brothers be conducted.

Weisberg refused the request "because he hadn't ruled on our motion to exclude a lot of the mental examination that's already been done," said Deputy District Attorney Carol Najera.

■ Internet users are subject to sabotage

NEW YORK — Intruders have learned how to penetrate sophisticated barriers and "hijack" computer systems linked to the Internet, posing a vast new security threat on the global network, authorities said Monday.

Millions of computers linked to the Internet are vulnerable to theft and eavesdropping by people who use the new technique, first described in an academic paper 10 years ago but known to be used successfully only in recent weeks, experts said.

Intruders can gain "root" or top-level access to host computers, then copy or destroy documents or do other damage by masquerading as an authorized user on the host system, the government-financed Computer Emergency Response Team said.

■ Orange County officer steps down

SANTA ANA, Calif. — Orange County's chief administrative officer agreed to step down Monday, but the board of supervisors stressed the move was not related to a diversion of millions of dollars in county funds.

Ernie Schneider has agreed to be reassigned to an as-yet undetermined position, board Chairman Gaddi Vasquez said Monday after a closed-door meeting.

Compiled from Reporter-Telegram wire services.

Safety board releases Flight 427 recording

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Everything seemed normal on USAir Flight 427 until three clicks were heard in the cockpit. "Sheez," the captain said.

A second later, a thump, then clicking were audible. As someone in the cockpit began breathing hard, a second thump and more clicks were heard. It took less than a half-minute for the plane to roll to the left and plunge a mile to the ground, killing all 132 people on board.

A transcript of the cockpit voice recording was released Monday as the National Transportation Safety Board convened a hearing into the Sept. 8 crash near Pittsburgh International Airport.

The clicks and thumps have baffled investigators.

"We've listened to them over and over again and we can't tell what they are," said Thomas Haueter, the NTSB's chief investigator for the crash.

Nor could the crew, apparently.

"Whoa," Capt. Peter Germano said.

"Hang on," he said a second later as a wail signaled the disconnection of the autopilot.

"Oh (expletive)" First Officer Charles B. Emmett said.

"Hang on," Germano said, as the sound of wings shaking is audible.

"What the hell is this?" Germano asked as vibrations rattled the aircraft and were picked up by cockpit microphones that recorded the pilots' desperate attempts to right the plane.

In early December, the Federal Aviation Administration released parts of the crew's communications with the airport control tower, withholding part out of compassion for the crews' survivors.

Some survivors criticized the decision, saying they had wanted the option of knowing everything, even if it was painful.

"We put out all the facts as best as we can," NTSB spokesman Michael Benson said in explaining his agency's decision to release the entire transcript.

The transcript showed that the three electrical-sounding clicks were heard 26 seconds before the crash, just before 7:03 p.m.

They were picked up only by the captain's microphone, and therefore could mean nothing, said Paul McCarthy, the chairman of the Accident Investigation Board of the Air Line Pilots Association.

If they had been caused by an electrical malfunction, they probably would have been picked up by other microphones, he said.

They could have been static or a short in the captain's headset cable, he said. "It could be nothing more than him twisting his head, reaching out in response to what the airplane was doing," McCarthy said.

The clicks were heard immediately after Emmett reported that he had sighted a smaller jet taking off from Pittsburgh International Airport. That plane is not believed to have contributed to the crash.

In the ensuing seconds, Germano said "hang on" three times as Emmett swore and exclaimed "Oh."

Eighteen seconds after the first clicks, Germano blurted to the airport control tower, "427 emergency." Then he urged, "Pull ... pull ... pull."

In the final two seconds, Emmett cried "God ... no!" and Germano screamed.

A pilot who had been a passenger on two earlier legs of the flight said there had been no unusual noises and the crew appeared to be working well together.

Witnesses Monday rebutted the notion that an explosion aboard the plane might have caused the crash, as theorized when it was learned that a witness in a drug investigation was aboard.

Haueter said the cockpit voice recorder detected no noises associated with a bomb or gunshots.

Wreckage examined by bomb experts found no explosive residue, testified William Perry, a supervisory special agent for the FBI in Pittsburgh.

The hearing gives investigators a chance to delve more deeply into material already reviewed by investigators for the safety board.

Kennedy family, friends remember their matriarch

By Robin Estrin
Associated Press

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. — When Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy died at the age of 104, she had been out of the public spotlight for more than a decade, but never far from its mind.

Condolences poured in for the woman who raised a family that included three men elected to the United States Senate and one of them to the presidency. Meanwhile, old friends remembered a woman who kept to herself but loved life in Hyannis Port and particularly loved to golf.

Mrs. Kennedy died Sunday at her Cape Cod home, surrounded by children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Police officers kept the media and the curious at bay Monday as delivery vans, including one from a florist, made their way in and out of the compound.

After a procession from Hyannis Port, the funeral for the daughter of a Boston mayor, wife of an ambassador and mother of a president will be Tuesday at St. Stephen's Church in Boston's North End. It was there that Mrs. Kennedy was baptized in 1890.

At sunrise Monday, parks crews swept aside clutter and debris in front of the Roman Catholic church. About a block away, a woman rushed up to the brick building where Mrs. Kennedy was born and left a bouquet of pink roses and lilies.

"To the memory of a woman of grace and courage — an example to generations present and to come. The personification of 'family values,'" the card read. There was no name.

Boston Mayor Thomas Menino ordered flags at city buildings lowered to half-staff, as condolences poured in.

As matriarch of the nation's most famous political family, Mrs. Kennedy saw three sons go on to careers in the United States Senate and one of them advance from there to the White House.

But four of her nine children died before their time, two in plane crashes and two at the hands of assassins.

President John F. Kennedy was assassinated in 1963, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy in 1968 and eldest son Joseph Jr. was killed during a World War II mission. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., is her only surviving son.

One of Mrs. Kennedy's five daughters was killed in a plane crash.

Her religious faith got her through three generations of political triumphs and personal tragedies. Her grief, and perhaps a natural tendency, made her a very private person, said those who knew her.

In tiny Hyannis Port, which includes only the Kennedy compound, a golf club, a post office and a grocery store, people recalled seeing her out walking or playing golf before a stroke in 1984, but even then she kept to herself.

"She pretty much stayed in the area, in Hyannis Port, in the compound, except when she'd go to church," said Marie O'Neil, a former secretary to the Kennedys in the late-1940s.

East, West experts discuss stolen art from WWII era

NEW YORK (AP) — Russian and Western art experts managed a polite discussion of one of the most contentious matters left over from World War II — what to do with art seized from German hands by the Soviet Red Army.

Although the former Soviet Union agreed several years ago to return "unlawfully removed cultural property," some German museum officials have accused the Russians of foot-dragging.

Nevertheless, discussions were cordial and frank at a three-day symposium on the issue last week.

"Many of these people had never met, or had met only in negotiations," said Professor Elizabeth Simpson of the Bard College Graduate Center for Studies in the Decorative Arts, which sponsored the "Spoils of War" symposium.

"We wanted to offer them a neutral ground so they could understand each other's problems," she said Monday, "and we were very encouraged by the atmosphere of friendliness."

The Russians offered new details about some of the millions of works of art, books and archives the Soviet army seized during and after the war in areas it took from the Nazis.

"The war is not ended so long as we have not settled these questions," Irina Antonova, director of the Pushkin State Museum of Fine Arts in Moscow, was quoted in Monday's New York Times. Old Masters paintings belonging to the Rotterdam Museum in the Netherlands had been hidden at the Pushkin since 1945.

Minimum wage, welfare to be part of president's speech

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton has decided to push for a minimum wage increase despite certain opposition from the Republican Congress, aides said Monday on the eve of his State of the Union address.

Although the president plans to reach out to Republicans in his address, officials said he also may issue challenges on welfare reform, foreign policy and political reform. Proposing an increase in the minimum wage, most likely to $5 an hour, would serve to draw a contrast between Clinton and newly empowered conservatives.

Without saying outright that Clinton would propose raising the minimum, now at $4.25 an hour, press secretary Mike McCurry said the president had made up his mind on the issue.

"It fits with a consistent theme that this president has articulated — that working families and those who work hard for a living need to get a break," McCurry said. He decried "the erosion in the value of the minimum wage over the last 30 years."

Other officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed Clinton had decided to press for an increase.

One aide said Clinton's economic team proposed an almost-immediate 50-cent increase, followed by an additional 25-cent hike within three years. The official stressed that the details could change before Clinton announces anything.

Republicans argue that any increase would make it more difficult for teen-agers to find work.

"If you legislate away those entry-level jobs — which is what the impact of minimum wage is — you assure that they will not have their opportunities to get started," said House Majority Leader Dick Armey of Texas.

10-year lawsuit

SAN ANTONIO — In a rented office packed with paperwork, Manuel Munoz Jr., his brother Jesse and their colleagues from Kelly Air Force Base work at what amounts to a second job.

Their mission: exposing what they say are discriminatory civilian promotion practices at Kelly, the city's largest employer.

"We feel that many injustices have gone on," said Manuel Munoz.

Their claim is the basis of a decade-old federal class-action lawsuit that may come to a climax this year just as the Pentagon and independent Base Closure and Realignment Commission decide whether to close Kelly./2B

Speaker plans 'dual personality' talk

■ Patty Ellis intends to cover topics teenage girls and their mothers must often deal with.

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Motivational speaker Patty Ellis plans a "dual personality" talk Saturday as the guest speaker for the "Mother and Daughter Special Night Out" at First Baptist Church Fellowship Hall, Louisiana Avenue at Garfield Street.

"The whole focus of Saturday night is going to be mother-daughter relationships," said Mrs. Ellis, author of "Girl Power: Making Choices and Taking Control."

This former professional model said she won't be talking about "how to put mascara on straight" or "get a boy's attention." She will be addressing the issues teenage girls find themselves facing in this country this decade.

"Teenage girls in our society today are experiencing some of the most important issues of our culture," said Mrs. Ellis, citing teen pregnancy, abortion, violence and welfare as examples.

"All of these issues were topics in the last congressional election. Our government spent $34 billion on programs for families started by teen mothers. Yet, go to the television, to the radio, to the bookstore, to the newspaper, how much do you see in any of those areas that speaks to the teen girl — not about her, but to her?

"I'm talking about something that nurtures her and gives her good information. And, as far as I know, there is not a book like my book on the market today that really speaks to a girl specifically in a very serious tone about the issues of her life. There may be one, but I haven't seen it."

She will speak, she said, with the teen girls present Saturday about such concerns as how a girl conducts "herself around boys, how she maintains her dignity,

Volunteer puts childhood skills to use

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Residents who benefit from Gail Warne's work with Midland Habitat for Humanity can thank the fact that she hated household chores as a child.

"I grew up on a farm in Iowa," Mrs. Warne said. "There were five children and each of us was assigned chores. I hated housework, so my mother would give me chores outside, such as milking the cow, bailing hay or roofing the house. When you live on a farm, you learn to do everything."

The roofing skills she learned as a child came in handy in 1991 when Mrs. Warne took over work at a Habitat house for her husband, who was called out of town due to work. Her work in 1991 led to two years of volunteer work for the organization and to her being named the executive director in June 1994.

"I was actually the acting executive director until September," she said. "In the mornings, I do paperwork and in the afternoon, I go out to the construction sites and help out there. Right now, we have placed four families in homes since 1991, we have four new homes under construction and nine families approved as partner families."

Cancer center gets approval of its program

Staff Report

The Commission on Cancer of the American College of Surgeons has granted three-year approval to the cancer program at Allison Cancer Center in Midland. This achievement culminated 13 years "of staff dedication to providing high quality care to patients who have cancer," Allison officials said.

Established by the American College of Surgeons in 1932, the Approvals Program encourages participants to equip and staff themselves so that they are able to provide the best in the diagnosis and treatment of cancer. Recognizing that cancer is a complex group of diseases, the program promotes consultation among surgeons, medical oncologists, radiation oncologists, diagnostic radiologists, pathologists, and other cancer specialists.

Allison Cancer Center opened its doors in May of 1981 as a division of Memorial Hospital and Medical Center in Midland. As a regional provider of "state-of-the-art" cancer treatment, Allison offers radiation therapy, medical oncology and numerous support services. In addition, Allison's Cancer Registry, which is an integral part of the Approvals Program, is an aggregate database that is a valuable resource for professional and public information.

All patients who are diagnosed or treated for cancer are listed in the registry so that the institution can maintain contact with them and make sure that they receive continuing care and assistance with rehabilitation. Information collected through the registry allows Allison Cancer Center to participate in national studies that are designed to improve patient care.

For example, patient care evaluation (PCE) studies of breast cancer were conducted by the Commission on Cancer whose diagnosis was made in 1983 and 1990.

Workshop provides tips for writers

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Every life is rich in family history. A writer's workshop to help cash in on those life stories will be held by Abilene author Nancy Robinson Masters this Saturday at Midland College.

"Everyone has an interesting story and there's a market for every story if you do it right," Ms. Masters said.

The workshop — "Writing Your Roots for Publication and Profit" — will focus on how to tell and sell one's story whether it be past or present life history.

Ms. Masters has presented the workshop "dozens" of times at various universities and before genealogical groups.

A freelance writer for more than 30 publications and author of five books, Ms. Masters integrated her personal experiences with her family history in a book titled "All My Downs Have Been Ups," released two years ago.

"It's a series of my aviation experiences as a pilot involving all my family history ..." she said. "I was born on Charles Lindbergh's birthday. What can I say?"

But one doesn't have to take to the skies to tell his or her story.

Personal histories can range from a vignette about growing up to an interesting circumstance or character in one's family to a notable person in the family tree, Ms. Masters said.

"I call it writing from the heart — writing something personal but which has universal appeal," she said.

And writers need to present their stories to the public, she said.

"It's a shame how many people do family research and don't know what to do about it," Ms. Masters said.

The workshop isn't designed to make anyone a great novelist but offers practical advice from a writer on how to transform research and sell the story to a magazine or other publication, she said.

"I'm going to tell them what not to do to get

Cup of coffee is necessary before answering question

More rambling thoughts ...

— Don't you just hate those people who walk up to you, especially on a Monday morning, slap you on the back and exclaim, "Isn't it a wonderful day to be alive?"

Ott

— At least let me force down that first cup of coffee before I have to answer that question.

— I like big-shot executives who answer their own phone calls.

— Does anyone care that the National Hockey League's season has officially begun?

— There was a time, many years ago, when I actually thought it was a big deal to be given a credit card. Now, "offers you can't afford to pass up" come in the mail almost daily.

— Where were those companies when I needed them?

— Most of us are not completely at ease when we're around people who are different than us, be it by color, religion or what have you.

— Unfortunately, no matter how hard we try to change that fact, it will probably always be the case.

— Question regarding Rose Kennedy's death: When does a person become a matriarch instead of just a mother?

— Regardless of how you feel about the Kennedy politics, it is hard to imagine any family suffering more personal losses.

— I sometimes wonder if, because of World War II, Americans still harbor ill will toward Germany and Japan, at least subconsciously.

— Even if the answer is "yes," it still boggles the mind to witness the devastation caused by the earthquake in Japan.

— Have you ever noticed that most people who grew up in the south, even big burly men, still refer to their father as "daddy."

— I can't decide if I like the way that sounds or not.

— The hoopla surrounding the O.J. Simpson case gives it the feel of a major sporting event, perhaps the Super Bowl or the seventh game of the World Series.

— I've often wondered if I could sleep at night if I successfully defended a murder suspect I knew was guilty.

— I know such action is necessary if our judicial system is to work, but it must be a strange feeling, nonetheless.

— Is it just me, or are you having a hard time getting used to the fact that Sonny Bono is a United States congressman?

— Gee, I wonder if he ever inhaled.

— For some reason, it drives me up the wall to hear someone pronounce "idea" as "idear" or "ideal."

— I have no idear why.

— And, today's final quote comes from Gilbert Keith Chesterton, who once said, "Don't ever take a fence down until you know why it was put up."

JOB: Habitat volunteer is new executive director

ing classes at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. She has a nursing degree and worked as an Ophthalmic Medical Assistant until her children — Charlie and Lisa — were born.

"I wanted to stay at home, but I got bored with that," she said. "So, I started my own manufacturing business."

She later sold the business and then worked for a commercial real estate appraiser.

After she filled in for her husband four years ago at Habitat, she continued to volunteer for the organization because she said she saw a chance to help people.

"I have always believed in helping people," she said. "When I was a kid, my mother would have us work in pairs to do our chores. Not only did you get done faster, but we learned that people need people to work with and alongside. And, with the families who come through Habitat for Humanity, they not only need a better home, but better self-esteem.

"They need to know they have value and self worth," she continued. "We aren't a handout organization, we are a hands-up organization."

Her belief in helping those around her has extended to assisting in the Christmas in April program at her church and to her children.

"My kids will help when they can at the homes," she said. "They have helped with the roofing, unloading wood and stuff like that. I have told them that if they see someone in need to help them. It doesn't matter who they are or what they have done to you. You help someone who needs it."

DEATHS

Goldie Haynes

TRICKHAM — Services for Goldie Haynes, 80, of Midland were held Saturday at the Trickham Union Church in Trickham with the Rev. Harry Pittam officiating, assisted by the Rev. Rick Sowell and the Rev. James Haynes. Burial followed at Trickham Cemetery under the direction of Henderson Funeral Home in Santa Anna.

Mrs. Haynes died Wednesday at her Midland residence.

She was born Oct. 15, 1914, in Tribby, Okla. She was raised in Coleman County and moved to Midland in 1993.

She married Joseph George Haynes in Rockwood on Nov. 7, 1931.

Mrs. Haynes was a homemaker and a member of the Baptist church.

Suvivors include her husband, Joseph George Haynes of Midland; five daughters, Wanda Titchen of Lovington, N.M., Connie Seals of Willis, Jeanelle Permenter of Oxford, Miss., Carol Faychak of Midland and Sue Kindel of Encinitas, Calif.; two sons, James Haynes of Smiley and Gerald Haynes of Wichita Falls; a sister, Maurine Blair of Coleman, 17 grandchildren, six step-grandchildren, 16 great-grandchildren, 10 step-great-grandchildren and four nieces.

Services for Willie Van Johnson of Midland are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Johnson died Monday at his residence.

Mary Berg

Services for Mary G. Berg will be at 2 p.m. today at First Christian Church with Revs. Tommy Potter and Bill Pennington officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Berg died Sunday at a local hospital.

Pallbearers will be Hank Henry, Jed Heard, Jason Hawkins and Tommy Hawkins.

Blasa Flores

Graveside services for Blasa T. Flores will be at 2 p.m. Wednesday at Easthill Cemetery in Fort Stockton under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Flores died Saturday at a local hospital.

Pallbearers will be Jimmy Gonzales, Ruben Frausto, Noe Flores, Luciano Ramos, David Flores and Carlos Baiza.

TALK: Motivational speaker deals with issues

(From 1B)

her pride, and how" she resolves "in her heart not to let anyone take advantage of her or beat her up."

Today's teenage girl needs an adult role model in her life, said Mrs. Ellis, who is the mother of two grown daughters.

"I don't think there's ever been a time when teenage girls needed adult women in their lives more than today because society gives them so little as far as how females should act, how a female should conduct herself, what a female's role is in relationship to men especially.

"Our girls are surrounded by a media which encourages sexual promiscuity. It applauds it. A girl needs that adult, and that word is paramount. I don't mean another little girlfriend. An adult woman, not a man. An adult woman in her life who is her role model, her example, her friend. I believe, more than ever before, the girls who do not have this are the ones who are experiencing the most severe problems."

Mrs. Ellis plans to speak from the mother as well as the daughter's perspective and address the tools mothers have to help their daughters "survive these teen years, which are becoming really crises years almost in the lives of young girls.

"Teenage used to be this fun, carefree time, which you outgrew and went on and created your life," said Mrs. Ellis. "It's not that way anymore. The issues are extremely serious and even more important, they are far reaching into the adult years."

The talk, set for 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., is designed for girls in the fifth through 12th grades and their mothers as well as grandmothers, teachers and counselors. Tickets for dessert and the talk, priced at $5, may be purchased by calling the event's sponsor, Fannin Terrace Baptist Church. For more information call Deborah Baty, 570-4209 or days at 687-3526, or Laura Dalgliesh, 683-7059.

"We're going to have a lot of fun. We'll laugh and we may cry a little bit. If you've got a teenage daughter, I guarantee you will not feel it's an evening wasted."

Also on the schedule while Mrs. Ellis is here from Houston is an autograph party at B-Dalton's, Midland Park Mall, from 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday.

"I'm really excited about the book signing. Those are always fun. And, it gives me a chance to meet people from the community."

Mrs. Ellis gave her first program for teenage girls about 18 years ago when she was a professional model.

"When I was modeling, I used to do little charm seminars," said Mrs. Ellis, recalling how she began speaking to teen girls. "I listened to the girls and began to realize that they needed to hear a whole lot more than get your blush on, hold your shoulders up and life's going to be great. I developed a program that I began to teach and it just took off. It was very unexpected for me."

A resident of Houston, Mrs. Ellis, spoke often in schools in the Houston Independent School District. She said when school district officials asked her to present her material in a video series they could use in the schools, she created the eight-part video series, "A Friend Like Patty." The series now is used in schools throughout the United States.

"The strong message I teach in my video series and my book is responsibility: being responsible for yourself and taking that responsibility because that is what gives us power in our lives. The focus of my program — the video series and the book — is self worth, self control and self determination."

Her future goal is a radio talk show for teenage girls.

"Teenagers listen to the radio a whole lot more than they watch television," said Mrs. Ellis, who has been on numerous national talk shows and co-produced and wrote a 30-minute special for PBS entitled. "Is Teenager a Disease?"

"According to my survey of 7,000 girls, what they preferred two to one was a show where they could come in and talk about their problems. What a wonderful way to reach girls who don't have anyone to talk to."

POLICE REPORTS

One-car wreck

MARTIN COUNTY — An Odessa teen-ager was killed following a one-vehicle accident Sunday afternoon.

According to Department of Public Safety officials, a 1988 Chevrolet Blazer, driven by 19-year-old Isaias Garcia Jr., was southbound on Highway 349, about 16½ miles south of Lamesa, when the vehicle went off the road to the right. Garcia overcorrected, lost control of the vehicle and the vehicle rolled three or four times, ejecting Garcia, officials said. The incident occurred at about 12:30 p.m.

Garcia was pronounced dead at a Lamesa hospital at 1:17 p.m.

Sunday

Burglary of a Residence: Sara Gonzales reported a burglary at 1708 Main St. at 8:42 p.m.

Anyone with information concerning these incidents should contact the police department at 685-7108 or Crime Stoppers at 694-TIPS.

YEAR: Cancer center gets approval from commission

(From 1B)

The study documents significant changes in surgical treatment that have taken place since the first Commission on Cancer survey of breast cancer that was conducted in 1978.

Radical mastectomy, which accounted for 45.3 percent of the operations in that study, had been replaced by modified radical mastectomy by 1982. Since that time, partial mastectomy has been used with increasing frequency and accounted for 25.4 percent of the operations reported in the 1990 survey.

The number of patients who would, by current criteria, be considered appropriate for breast-conserving surgery is unknown but it is estimated to be over half of the women with breast cancer.

The American Cancer Society estimates that 1,208,000 cases of cancer will be diagnosed in the United States and 9,400 cases will be diagnosed in Puerto Rico during 1994. Slightly more than one-fifth of the country's hospitals have approved cancer programs, and over 80 percent of patients who are newly diagnosed with cancer are treated in these hospitals.

published," Ms. Masters said.

The author will outline "seven deadly sins" of writers that commonly prevent stories from being sold and published. Knowing mistakes to avoid will put an amateur writer ahead of 90 percent of others, she said.

The workshop will include learning technique such as how to write about sensitive issues in a family history, an explanation of rights of a writer and copyright laws, and how to approach publications.

"There are more than 22,000 markets open to freelance writers in the country," Ms. Masters said. And her workshops, she said, "always result in someone being published."

"This is my philosophy: A writer without a reader is as useless as long sleeves on a shirt for a man with no arms. Every writer needs a reader," she said.

The workshop will run from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and costs $25. Registration will be accepted through Friday at the Continuing Education office in the Administration Building or by calling 685-4518.

The workshop will be held at the Davidson Lecture Hall in the Health Sciences Building.

Decade-old lawsuit may affect base closure decision

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — In a rented office packed with paperwork, Manuel Munoz Jr., his brother Jesse and their colleagues from Kelly Air Force Base work at what amounts to a second job.

Their mission: exposing what they say are discriminatory civilian promotion practices at Kelly, the city's largest employer.

"We feel that many injustices have gone on," said Manuel Munoz.

Their claim is the basis of a decade-old federal class-action lawsuit that may come to a climax this year just as the Pentagon and independent Base Closure and Realignment Commission decide whether to close Kelly.

All parties connected to the lawsuit, filed on behalf of approximately 2,900 Hispanic male workers at Kelly and seeking at least $300 million, say it should have no bearing on a decision about the base's future.

But San Antonio business leaders worry that the bias claim could hurt Kelly's chances of survival in this year's harsh round of military base closures.

"There have been rumors that that is a consideration which some people in the Pentagon regard as a negative factor" in determining whether to target Kelly for closure, said Jose Villarreal, co-chairman of San Antonio's Base Realignment and Closure Task Force.

However, Villarreal, an attorney and former Clinton administration official, said the lawsuit never has been discussed in his task force's lobby visits to the Pentagon.

"It is illegal to base a decision on, or to somehow penalize those individuals for, their attempt to redress their alleged violations of constitutional rights," Villarreal said.

The Air Force agrees.

"It's just not part of the criteria for base closure," said Mike Martino, spokesman for the Air Force Materiel Command at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Ohio, which oversees the Air Force's five aviation maintenance depots, including Kelly.

The Defense Department has until March 1 to make base closure recommendations to the independent commission.

The local lobby group organized by the city and Chamber of Commerce contend Kelly — the largest of San Antonio's five military installations — is efficient and has low labor costs. The Kelly boosters also note that 61 percent of Kelly's 10,400 civilian workers are Hispanic, accounting for 45 percent of Hispanic workers in the Air Force.

But the Munoz plaintiffs claim Hispanic men have been excluded from promotions to some white-collar jobs with annual salaries ranging from about $27,000 to about $86,000.

Michael Galvan Jr., is chairman of the Hispanic Civil Rights Defense Fund, formed by the plaintiffs to handle some of the workload and cost of the case. The defense fund has a small office suite near downtown, where volunteers copy documents, search through computer files and plan fundraisers like an upcoming $10-per-person "Sweetheart Dance."

"The longer it goes on, the more support that the class members are giving us," Galvan said.

The lawsuit got its start in 1982 as an administrative complaint. Then the Munoz brothers and others took it to federal court in 1985.

House committee to consider suspension of emissions testing

AUSTIN (AP) — A special House committee has been named to consider a bill that would suspend federally required auto emissions testing in Texas for three months.

The committee planned to hold a public hearing on the bill Tuesday afternoon, and the full House is expected to consider it Thursday, Speaker Pete Laney said.

Laney said he wanted "to make sure that bill could be considered in an expeditious manner and the public still have a full opportunity to let their views be known."

Federal law requires emissions testing in areas with high levels of certain pollutants, including Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston-Galveston, Beaumont-Port Arthur and El Paso.

Critics have said the program, which went into effect Jan. 2, is too costly and onerous.

"I think folks see that we need to back up and look and move a little bit slower on this and implement a different type program than the one that has been implemented," said Rep. Peggy Hamric, R-Houston, a sponsor of the bill.

The bill would suspend testing for 90 days to allow the Legislature and Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission to revise the program.

A committee of the county Tax Assessor-Collector's Association of Texas on Monday asked Gov. George W. Bush to suspend the program immediately while the bill is pending, saying they needed help to avoid long lines at the end of this month.

Board members anger committee chairman

AUSTIN (AP) — The Teacher Retirement System already is under fire. Now its board members have angered a key senator by failing to show up at a Senate Finance subcommittee meeting.

The board sent high-level staff members to Monday's session, but Senate Education Committee Chairman Bill Ratliff said that wasn't enough.

"The board has got to be aware of the level of controversy that currently exists about the mission of that board, and about the concern that the Legislature has about their activities, and for them to send in one of the hired hands ... I am not impressed," said Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, who heads the Finance subcommittee examining TRS funding.

"I came in this room today with what I believe was an open mind about the entire issue. But the fact that none of them showed leads me to believe that some of the comments that I've been hearing about the arrogance of that agency may in fact of some substance," he said.

State audits have cited spending on lavish office space while thousands of retired teachers lived below the poverty line, although Ratliff said current officials aren't responsible for past expenditures.

Inquiries also have shown big losses in soured real estate deals, although the Sunset Advisory Commission has called the system robust.

Ratliff gave the TRS board another chance, scheduling a Wednesday subcommittee meeting to which its members are expressly invited.

TRS board Chairman Dana Williams of Corpus Christi said he'll be there, and that he's sorry for his Monday absence.

"It's not a good way to win friends and influence people," Williams said. "I had no idea it would be one of those things where trustees would be expected to appear."

Mike Barron, chief financial officer of TRS, attended the subcommittee meeting along with the agency's deputy general counsel and controller. Barron said board members' failure to appear resulted from a misunderstanding.

"We probably misread the importance of this morning's meeting," he said.

There is a legislative proposal to increase oversight of the TRS and provide more accountability of its investments and expenditures. The $38 billion retirement fund provides benefits for 138,000 retired teachers and school employees.

The TRS board does not believe more oversight is needed, Barron said. He said members have worked for fiscal constraint and have "always been committed to the membership" of the retirement system.

Midland Muffler and Brake:

Protecting your investment

Most people don't get the wheels of their car re-aligned often enough, according to Mike Murrey, the owner of Midland Muffler and Brake Inc. Regular alignments once a year (or every 10,000 miles) are, however, a very important part of your vehicles maintenance schedule because of the role alignment plays in safe and reliable handling.

Aligning the wheels ensures that the car behaves in the way it was designed to. This means that the car will steer and drive properly and safely. There are other effects as well; tires wear unevenly if the wheels are not aligned properly, gas consumption is increased and the ride is rougher with the wheels out of alignment.

As the name of the company implies, Midland Muffler and Brake doesn't just do front end alignments. They are also certified brake and exhaust system technicians. Using state-of-the-art, computer controlled equipment, they can keep the exhaust system of your car or truck functioning safely.

There are three important reasons why vehicles have exhaust systems; to transport dangerous fumes away from the car, to quieten the vehicle and to protect the environment (by using a catalytic converter).

Holes and cracks in the exhaust system can increase noise levels above permissible levels, and they can let noxious fumes into the car. In order to decrease environmental pollution and reduce fuel consumption, the catalytic converter must be in working order.

For over 12 years, Midland Muffler and Brake have provided Midlanders with the very best in customer satisfaction and competitive prices.

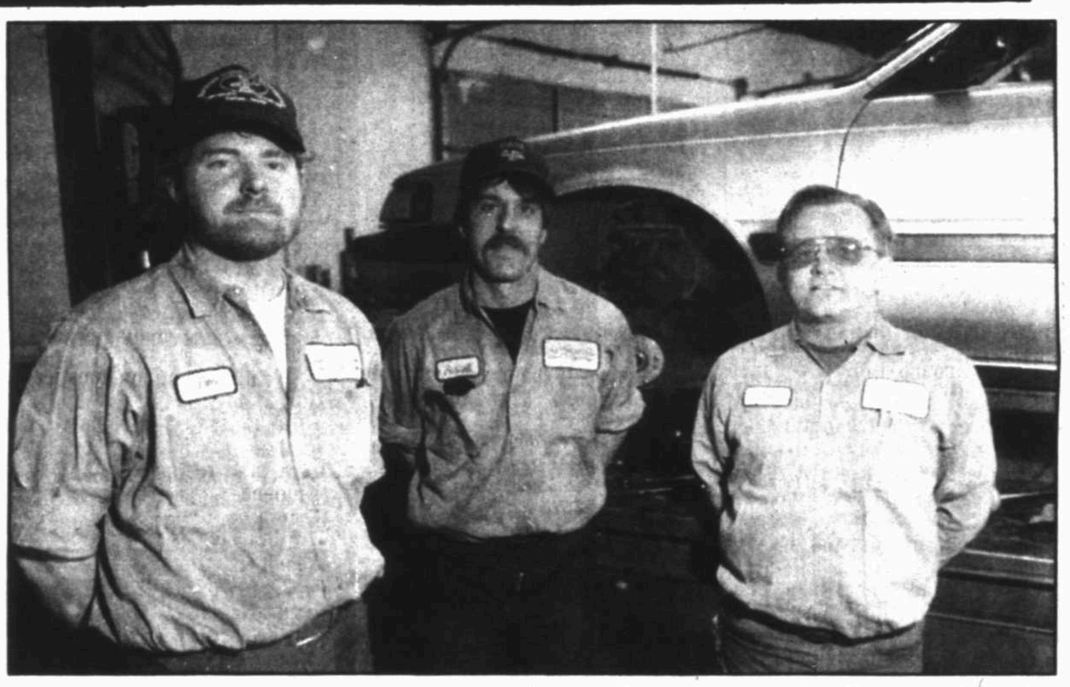

A vehicle's brake system is obviously very important, but few people get them checked every 35,000 miles, which is recommended by Midland Muffler's staff.

Front wheel drive trucks and cars should be checked more frequently because of the extra load on the system.

Checking the brake system on a regular basis can prevent dangerous and expensive problems before they start.

Midland Muffler's technicians are all professionally trained to provide the highest quality service available.

For more information about front-end alignments, state inspection requirements and repairing and installing brake and exhaust systems call Mike Murrey at 699-7924, or stop by their location at 3201 West Front Street in Midland.

Children benefit from style

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

A stylish suit (left) from Escada by Margaretha Ley, presented by Robbie Casey's, is worn by a model during the Junior Women's Association Style Show and Luncheon Monday.

By Linda Anderson
Staff Writer

What started out as a gray Monday blossomed into a rainbow of colors for about 400 Midland women who attended the Junior Woman's Association of Midland's Annual Spring 1995 Style Show and Luncheon at Midland Center.

Proceeds from the event benefit Memorial Hospital and Medical Center's Pediatric Fund and the Clinic of the Community Children's Ministry.

Fashions presented were from Escada by Margaretha Ley, courtesy of Robbie Casey's. The clothing featured colors of red and black, black and white, yellow, shades of blue, ivory and navy, as well as black-on-white stripes, animal prints and black leather. Styles were on the casual, easy-to-live-in side, in sportswear, daywear and even swimwear.

The luncheon, catered by Murray and the Frenchman, featured Caesar salad with walnut muffins, Chicken Florentine with Gourmet Sauce, Duchess Potatoes, zucchini filled with carrot puree and chocolate raspberry cake.

BEFORE THE fashion show got underway, Carole Hobbs, one of the founders of the Clinic of the Community Children's Ministry, and Laurie Johnson, public relations director of Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, spoke to the crowd.

The purpose of the Clinic of the Community Children's Ministry is to provide medical care for "sick children of low income families," said Ms. Hobbs. "It seems like most of our families are working parents who just don't have the money to cover medical expenses."

The clinic provides these children with doctor visits — for a $5 fee — as well as any prescriptions and lab work needed, and refers them to specialists if necessary.

The clinic "saw over 3,200 sick children this year," she said, and provided about "6,000 lab procedures. And we have 600 new patients.

"We have dedicated volunteers" and professionals who are "committed to giving skilled care with dignity and compassion," Ms. Hobbs said.

Ms. Johnson said that the Junior Woman's Association has been providing funds for Memorial Hospital and Medical Center's Pediatric Fund since 1977. Not only has the organization given medical equipment to the Pediatric Fund, but also has provided such items as sleeper beds and credenza beds for parents of young patients, and toys for the pediatric patients.

Between 1977 and 1994, the Junior Woman's Association has given about $118,000 to the Pediatric Unit of the hospital, she said.

DEAR ABBY

Postage price gets stamp of approval

DEAR ABBY: Oh, brother — here we go again. Another increase in U.S. postage! Has it been only four years since the last one? Don't you think it's outrageous to charge 32 cents to send a letter? I can remember when you could get a postcard for a penny!

Van Buren

I considered protesting the hike in postage by delivering my local mail personally, so I got in the car and drove 15 miles to our utilities payment center. As I was standing in line waiting to pay, I thought about how I had just spent $1.26 for gas and an hour of my time; so next time, I'll just put a 32-cent stamp on it and drop it in the mailbox.

Then I called the airlines and asked how much I'd have to pay for a round-trip ticket to deliver this letter to you in person. The price ranged between $600 and $900 — so I thought I'd put a 32-cent stamp on it instead.

Maybe 32 cents to mail a letter isn't so bad after all. — DIANE MORELLO, LA MESA, CALIF.

Capers selected

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Dom Capers brought his defensive expertise to the Carolina Panthers on Monday, but he said stopping opponents won't be his only target as he becomes the NFL expansion team's first coach.

Capers

"It's like going into a game,' Capers told a news conference formally introducing him as the head coach. "You do extensive planning, you do your homework, and then you have to react.

'Canes take Davis

MIAMI — Butch Davis has accepted the University of Miami head-coaching job under the terms of a guaranteed five-year deal that sources said is worth almost $700,000 annually and allows Davis a $1 million end-of-contract bonus and an additional year of guaranteed salary for every year the Hurricanes might spend on NCAA probation.

"This is a lifelong dream, to be a head coach," said Davis, whose hiring is scheduled to be announced at 3 p.m. today. "Hopefully everything will work out."

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones has already informed Jim Eddy that he'll be elevated from linebackers coach to Davis' successor as defensive coordinator. The organization is also examining its options for a new linebackers coach and a new defensive aide. First-year assistant Mike Zimmer is expected to join Davis in Miami, possibly as the defensive coordinator.

Davis said "security for my family" was instrumental in his decision. After making just $110,000 with the Cowboys last year — the basement of National Football League coordinators' salaries — Davis, 43, has it.

There are suggestions from the Los Angeles Raiders that Davis' interviews with that club were for a front-office position, not the head-coaching job. But a source said that is a face-saving "smoke screen" to benefit present Raiders coach Art Shell. The source also indicated the decision to sever talks between the Raiders and Davis was the team's choice.

"The Raiders wanted to look in another direction, so Butch took Miami," the source said.

Lee finalists down to six

■ John Tyler's Allen Wilson and TCU's Bobby Etheridge have dropped out of the running for the Midland Lee football head coaching job.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The search for a new head football coach at Midland Lee narrowed from eight finalists to six by attrition over the weekend and by the end of today that number will be trimmed to three.

Allen Wilson, who has won state championships at both Class 4A Paris and Class 5A Tyler John Tyler, has opted to stay at John Tyler while Bobby Etheridge, a former assistant coach at Texas Christian University who won a state Class 5A crown at Killeen in 1991, has taken the head coaching job at Class 5A Pharr San Juan Alamo.

Wilson is a Lee graduate, but has opted to stay in Tyler, according to Tim Whalen, Midland athletic director.

"Allen says that his family likes Tyler and he is close to his players there, so he has been dropped from our list," Whalen said. "Etheridge has taken another job, so that takes care of that entry."

The six remaining candidates are, in alphabetical order, Bob Alpert, Aldine MacArthur; David Browning, Oklahoma State University; Buster Leaf, Lubbock Monterey; John Parchman, Llano; Kelvin Ratliff, a current Lee assistant coach; and Jim Slaughter, Lufkin.

MC women rip Clarendon

■ The Lady Chaparrals take a break from WJCAC play to crush road-weary Clarendon 90-50.

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

Despite an open date in their Western Junior College Athletic Conference schedule, the Midland College Lady Chaparrals needed to get in a little work, even if it meant a non-conference opponent.

Unfortunately for the road-weary Clarendon College Lady Bulldogs, they would be the sparring partner for the Lady Chaps 90-50 victory Monday at Chaparral Center.

"I was happy with our level of concentration," MC head coach Ron Jones said. " It's hard to go from conference to non-conference games. We'll take it and get back to conference. Every game left means something."

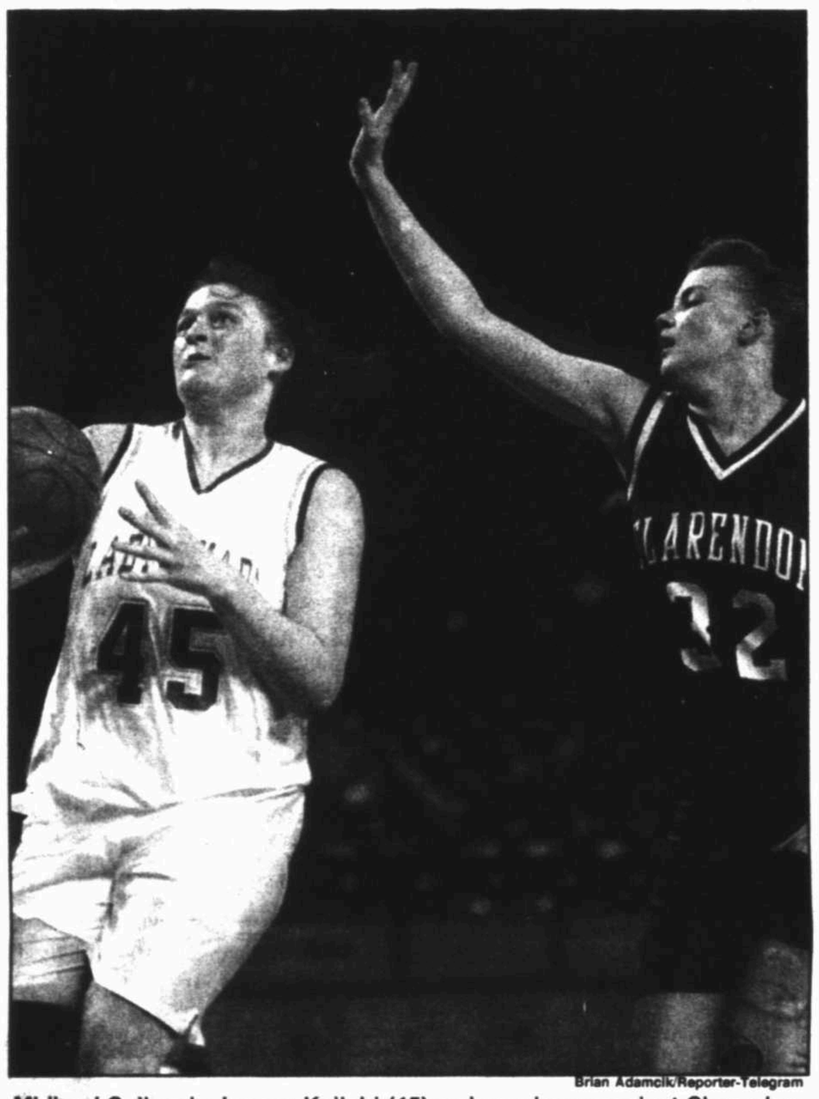

The Lady Chaps, 18-4, received a dominating effort from post Joanna Kailahi. The 6-3 sophomore took advantage of a smaller, weaker Clarendon team to put up a game-high 24 points and 10 rebounds.

"I played pretty well tonight," Kailahi said. "The past few games I don't know what was wrong with me, I didn't play too well."

Kailahi was not the only Lady Chap in double figures. Tomenia Porter scored 14 points, including four 3-pointers. Brandy Wright and Rashunda Jarmon had 13 and 12, repsectively.

The Lady Chaps spread the lead throughout the game. It reached 20 points at the halftime. MC would

Top notch contests

■ All four Midland District 4-5A basketball teams are at or near the top of the league standings, and they face each other tonight.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

With an .817 winning percentage against the rest of the league, the four District 4-5A Tall City participants clash tonight at Chaparral Center in two games which should go a long way in determining the district championship.

The Midland Lee and Midland High boys and girls teams have won all but five of their combined 27 district games this season and two of the losses have come at the crosstown rivals' hands. Three of the Tall City teams either lead 4-5A or are tied for the lead and the Lee boys, who sit in third place with a two-game lead over the rest of the field, would have to virtually collapse to miss returning to the playoffs.

The Lee girls, who are one-half game behind Midland at 6-1 in league play, will try to complete a sweep of the Lady Dawgs (7-1) as the girls teams meet at 6:15 p.m. Like the girls, the Lee boys (4-2) upset favored MHS (5-1) in the teams' last meeting and are looking for a sweep when the boys tip off at 8 p.m.

"It's a big week for us," said Lee boys coach Jon House. "If we beat Midland High, that will bring them back to us and then we turn around and play Abilene High. And if we beat them, we'll be right back in (the district championship race).

"For us to win a district championship it's a must-win game, because I don't think anybody else can beat them (MHS). We're the only team that's not

49ers set precedent for 19-point line last month

■ Fans who think the Super Bowl point spread is excessive need only look at the Dec. 11 meeting between the Chargers and 49ers.

By Hal Bock
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI — Fans wondering if the betting line of 19 points — the longest odds in Super Bowl history — is enough to balance San Diego with San Francisco should remember that it wasn't sufficient the last time they played.

The Chargers, who had opened the season with six straight wins, were in the midst of a slump when San Francisco arrived in town Dec. 11. Banged-up San Diego was in a win one-lose one treadmill at the time, and turned out to be easy pickings for the 49ers.

Final score: San Francisco 38, San Diego 15.

The loss — for those counting, it was by 23 points — was the Chargers' most lopsided setback since 1992.

It had all the trappings of a 49ers blowout. Steve Young threw for 304 yards and two touchdowns in a 417-yard attack. Jerry Rice caught 12 passes and Deion Sanders returned an interception 90 yards for a touchdown. San Francisco led 21-0 before the Chargers got on the scoreboard with a 50-yard field goal

■ Graham center leaves Stephenville turmoil behind.

By Yulanda L. McCarty
The Associated Press

GRAHAM — Graham's 6-foot-7 sophomore center Kolin Weaver staggers through two defenders and slams the ball in the basket. A roar erupts from Steers fans in the stands.

In four games, Weaver scores 76 points, blocks 24 shots and pulls down 29 rebounds. He's selected most valuable player at the Cross Timbers Classic.

Players from host Stephenville offer their best wishes.

Weaver responds with a smile.

Three months before the early December tournament, Weaver wasn't smiling. He was a student at Stephenville who was receiving "death threats."

His parents told school officials he was being physically and verbally harassed because his father, an attorney, had represented a former coach who had made allegations against the football program.

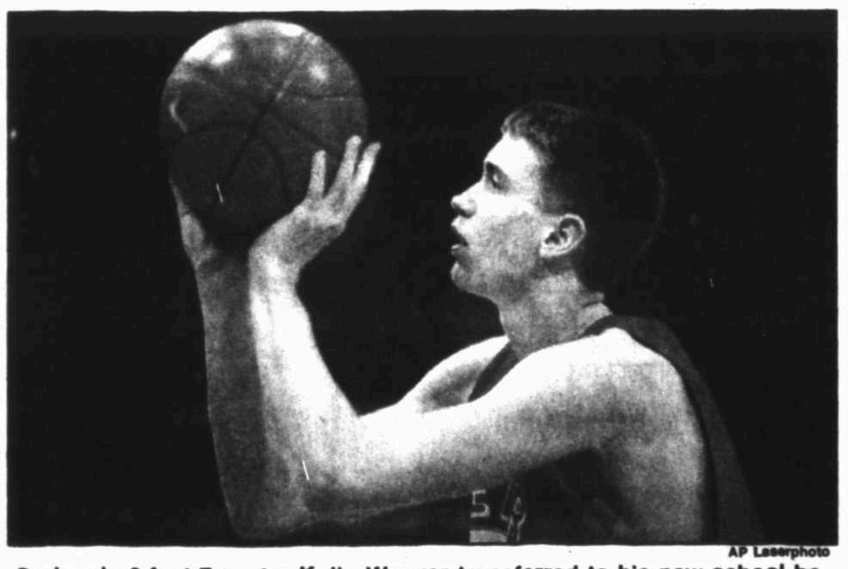

"It was unsafe to leave my home (in Stephenville)," Weaver said.

The University Interscholastic League granted Weaver a "special circumstances" waiver Sept. 28, clearing the way for him to transfer to Graham.

Weaver is now the force behind the 23-0 Graham basketball team, ranked No. 1 in the Class 3A state coaches poll.

Kolin's father, Wayne Weaver, said

No letup for Rebel soccer

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

Midland Lee's boys faced a tough test in their District 5-5A soccer opener against defending league and Region I champion Midland High Saturday. And the Rebels 5-5A schedule doesn't let up any today.

Lee (0-1 in district, 2-3 overall) goes for its first league win against Abilene High (1-0, 3-2) at 4:30 at the Lee soccer field. The Rebels need a win against the Eagles to avoid starting district in an 0-2 hole.

"They've got a real good team," said Lee coach John McCulloch after his team lost to Midland High Saturday 5-0. "They play the same style that we do. They're a little more laid back than Midland High. They try to work the ball more."

Other Midland 5-5A games have Midland High's boys at Abilene Cooper, Midland High's girls hosting Abilene Cooper at 4:30 p.m. and Midland Lee's girls at Abilene High. Both games in Abilene start at 5:30 p.m.

UConn's Allen stops Syracuse win streak

Associated Press

■ Top 25 Roundup

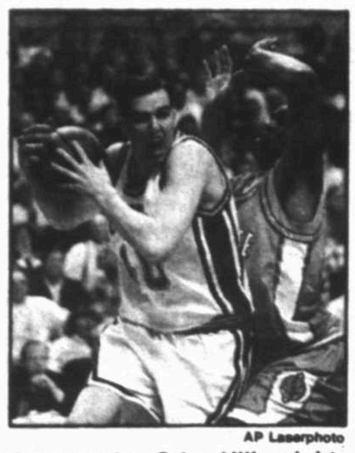

STORRS, Conn. — Ray Allen scored a career-high 31 points and No. 2 Connecticut solved Syracuse's 2-3 zone in the second half and pulled away to an 86-75 victory Monday night over the sixth-ranked Orangemen in a matchup of teams with 14-game winning streaks.

The Huskies (15-0, 8-0) remain the nation's only unbeaten Division I team and have the country's longest winning streak as well. They also have sole possession of first place in the Big East as the Orangemen (14-2, 7-1) lost for the first time since their season-opener.

The game couldn't have lived up to the hype and it didn't as the first half looked more like two teams which hadn't won a game in awhile. Connecticut committed 18 turnovers against Syracuse's zone and the Orangemen had 11 turnovers.

Connecticut — which won its 13th consecutive Big East regular-season game, one off the record set by St. John's in 1984-85 — looked to be in trouble when Lawrence Moten hit three consecutive 3-pointers and Michael Lloyd added another for a 58-47 Syracuse lead with 11:43 to play.

Then, as often happens with Connecticut's pressure defense and explosive scoring, things changed in a hurry.

AP Laserphoto

No. 7 Kansas 84, Nebraska 67

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Jerold Haase hit five of his first six 3-pointers Monday night and Kansas took charge early and rolled to a victory over Nebraska.

Kansas, which complained about having to play in Colorado on Saturday and then come right home to face Nebraska, unleashed a 23-7 run to post its 13th straight home victory over the Huskers (14-4 overall, 1-2 Big Eight), who had been off for five days.

Penn 92, Lafayette 57

EASTON, Pa. — Tim Krug scored 15 points and grabbed 12 rebounds as Penn handed Lafayette its 12th straight loss in non-conference play.

Three other players scored in double figures for Penn (10-3), which held Lafayette (2-15) to just 30 percent shooting in the contest.

extend it throughout the second half on 20-for-28 shooting from the field. However, it wasn't until a Pam Hicks' 3-pointer to end the game that MC got its largest lead. The game gave Midland College the chance to play everybody and see many things, most of those good.

"This was just another game," Kailahi said. "Today, we did pretty well, running through some new offenses. No one can stop us if we play like we want to play."

The one negative came in the game's opening moments when point guard Amber Follis went down with what team officials are calling a badly bruised left knee. Right now, Follis is listed as day-to-day with her status for Thursday's game against New Mexico Junior College questionable. Having Follis back in the line-up is key for Midland.

"Amber is a leader on and off the court," Kailahi said. "She's really crucial to the team."

The Lady Bulldogs, 10-11, are in desparate need of home cookin', having played 19 of their first 21 games on the road away from the friendly confines of Clarendon (one-hour east of Amarillo.) This includes their most recent stint through the state of Colorado. The Lady Chaps held Clarendon College to 22-for-56 shooting and controled the broads 44-30. Most importantly, Midland College's hustle allowed them to control the lackluster Lady Bulldogs.

"We need to play at home," Clarendon head Coach Joel R. Zehr said. "We stood around and didn't move. Midland College had a lot to do with that. The Lady Chaps are loaded."

The Lady Chaps will finish off their four-game homestand Thursday against New Mexico Junior College. The Lady Chaps, 3-1 in conference play, will look to stay in contention for a playoff spot with a win against the 10-11 and 2-2 Lady Thunderbird. The game will start at 5:50 p.m. at Chap Center.

Edberg, Novotna make exits

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Not since John McEnroe was thrown out five years ago had the laid-back, no-worries-mate Australian Open rocked like this.

There were 30,000 feet stomping, 15,000 voices screaming, and two players turning the joint into a raucous rage.

A national frenzy of wishful thinking accompanied the appearance of Patrick Rafter, Australia's last hope in its Grand Slam show, against Andre Agassi. When they arrived on court the stadium shook.

The fans got into an upset mood early on when former two-time champion Stefan Edberg fell in five dramatic sets to Aaron Krickstein and the "magic rackets" he plucked from a closet. They were the same ones he used to beat Edberg in 1988 and '89.

No sooner had Edberg exited, than No. 3 women's seed Jana Novotna did the same. She succumbed 7-5, 6-0 in a tumult of errors to short, pudgy, 96th-ranked Angelica Gavaldon, a Southern Californian who plays for Mexico and wonders whether she's a reincarnated Aussie.

"Maybe in my past life I was born here or something," Gavaldon said, trying to explain her unique success Down Under.

Upsets abounded, starting with Yevgeny Kafelnikov knocking out No. 8 Todd Martin, and Naoko Sawamatsu bumping off two-time finalist Mary Joe Fernandez.

■ Australian Open

So when Agassi and Rafter came on, the crowd was ready to believe in a miracle. Unfortunately for most of the fans — there was one extremely loud, obnoxious American from Oregon in red, white and blue paint who cheered relentlessly for Agassi — it would have taken a miracle for Rafter to win.

Agassi played one of those rare matches when he could barely miss a shot. He made only one unforced error in the first set, two in the second, and none in the third, never yielding on serve and winning 6-3, 6-4, 6-0 to reach the quarterfinals in 86 minutes.

A milder mood prevailed in a stadium sleeper Wednesday morning when Mary Pierce beat Natasha Zvereva 6-1, 6-4 to reach a Grand Slam semifinals for only the second time. Pierce, seeded fourth, lost to Arantxa Sanchez Vicario in the final of the French Open last year.

Michael Chang, the men's fifth seed, followed by beating Andrei Medvedev 7-6 (9-7), 7-5, 6-3 to gain his first Grand Slam semifinal since the U.S. Open in 1992 and only his second since he won the French Open in 1989. Medvedev fell hard, injuring his left wrist lunging for a pass by Chang in the tiebreaker. Medvedev, a right-hander who hits two-fisted backhands, received courtside treatment several times.

If there was any doubt that Agassi is in the form he showed when winning the U.S. Open last September, it was dispelled in the second set when he chased down a lob and flicked back a line drive over his head that a stunned Rafter volleyed into the net to fall behind 2-1.

"I was actually going to go between the legs," Agassi said, "but then I realized there's no way that he's going to stay back at the baseline. I knew he was coming in, so I figured I'd kind of make it look like I was going to go through my legs but then get it under his feet. It worked well. It was 40-0, so I had a little room to play."

That Agassi could think about all that and execute the trick shot so deftly speaks volumes about just how sharp he was against Rafter, who beat him in an exhibition two weeks ago. Agassi had just arrived in Australia the day before, but that victory by Rafter was enough to spark his and the country's hopes.

By the time Agassi finished off Rafter this time, giving up only six points in the final set and crunching one return after another against the Australian's big serves, it was obvious that the exhibition loss had been meaningless.

Still, the fans cheered wildly to the end, even when Rafter served at match point. It was as if they were oblivious to the score.

LEE: Wilson decides to stay in Tyler

(From 1C)

Whalen said that three of those names would be submitted to the Midland school board today in executive session. He would not say which three names would be taken to the board.

"We plan to announce the new head coach at Lee next Friday," Whalen said.

Browning, Leaf, Parchman and Ratliff all have coached at Lee.

Browning was offensive line coach under Spike Dykes in 1983 when the Rebels went to the state finals where they lost to Converse Judson. He has since been an assistant coach at Texas A&I, Applachian State and Oklahoma State.

Since coaching at Lee under Jim Acree in the mid-'70s, Leaf has had successful programs at McCamey, Levelland and Lubbock Monterey, placing all those schools in the state playoffs.

Parchman had been a head coach in El Paso before coming to Lee for two years. He left the Rebels after the 1993 season to become the head coach at Llano, where he put that team in the playoffs last season.

Ratliff has been in the Lee system under Earl Miller for several years and is a defensive assistant.

Alpert didn't make the state playoffs last season, but got to the Class 5A Small School championship game there in 1993, losing to Lewisville, 43-37, the same team that eliminated both Lee and Abilene Cooper from the playoffs that season.

Slaughter has had playoff teams at San Angelo Lake View, Corpus Christi Carroll and Lufkin. Lufkin went to the third round of the 5A Big School Division where it lost to Plano.

Prices retreat

NEW YORK — Petroleum futures fell for a third straight day on Monday, depressed by the perception that demand for gasoline is weakening.

Analysts said prices continued on a predictable downturn following strong increases early last week.

Gasoline suffered the most on Monday while losses in heating oil were smaller, as some traders sold gas and bought heating oil, analysts said.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in March settled at $18.10 per barrel, down 32 cents at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 25 cents to $16.75 a barrel.

February delivery of unleaded gasoline settled at 56.38 cents a gallon, down 1.02 cent.

February home heating oil settled at 47.82 cents a gallon, down 0.32 cent.

February natural gas prices settled at $1.389 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 3.6 cents.

Dollar advances

NEW YORK — The dollar rose against the Japanese yen on Monday, drawing strength from a plunge on the Tokyo Stock Exchange as investors worried about the impact of the Kobe earthquake on Japan's economy and rebuilding costs.

The dollar also advanced on the German mark, despite widespread European political and financial woes that had driven investors away from dollars and toward the perceived safety of German markets recently.

But after posting healthy gains in Asian and early European dealings, the dollar retreated in New York as traders mulled reports suggesting Congress could reject or cut the Clinton administration's proposed $40 billion loan-guarantee package for Mexico, hampering its efforts to recover from the peso crisis.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 1.5146 marks, up from 1.5115 late Friday.

The dollar also was changing hands in New York at 99.73 yen, up from 99.39.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday: 1.2700 Swiss francs, down from 1.2710; 5.2400 French francs, up from 5.2335; 1,589 Italian lire, down from 1,593; and 1.4183 Canadian dollars, down from 1.4229.

The British pound was quoted at $1.5945, up from $1.5890.

Markets slip

NEW YORK — Stocks ended mostly lower Monday, but significantly above their lows for the session, amid weakness on foreign markets and concern about interest rates.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 2.02 to 3,867.41, recovering from an early loss of about 31 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 5 to 3 on the New York Stock Exchange.

IBM earns $1.2 billion in fourth

Big Blue rides midsized-computer growth to 1st year in black since '90

Associated Press

NEW YORK — IBM posted its first profitable year since 1990 as it earned $1.2 billion in the fourth quarter, riding strong growth in its midsized computers that offset troubles in the personal computer division.

Even though the performance exceeded Wall Street forecasts, IBM's stock drifted lower in a pattern that appeared to reflect earlier speculation.

IBM's revenue improved and expenses were sharply below levels from a year ago. The most improvement came in the AS400 mid-range computer division and services and consulting. Harsh job cuts that have gone on for several years are mostly over.

"Despite the progress ... we are not satisfied with our revenue growth," Chief Executive Louis Gerstner Jr. said in a statement. "The pace of change at IBM must continue."

Gerstner's main priority when he arrived at the world's largest computer company in April 1993 was to restore profitability. With that accomplished, IBM will focus on increasing revenue, Chief Financial Officer Jerry York said.

IBM's profit amounted to $2.06 per share for the quarter that ended Dec. 31. It earned $362 million, or 62 cents per share, in the same period of 1993.

Revenue was $19.9 billion, up from $19.4 billion a year ago. Sales were higher in all regions of the world except Latin America.

Analysts had forecast a profit of around $1.75 per share for IBM. Nonetheless, the company's stock fell $1.12½ at $74.25 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Demand for IBM's largest systems outstripped supply in the fourth quarter and should continue to do so into 1995, York said. A drop in prices have made those systems, for years IBM's most lucrative, less profitable.

The profitability of service and consulting operations was twice as high as a year ago, a bright sign as IBM now relies on that business for one-sixth of its revenue.

IBM's personal computer unit, which grew sharply in 1993, experienced revenue declines in both the quarter and the full year.

"This is not the rocket science part of computing," York said, noting PCs represent more of a marketing and materials challenge than a technical one.

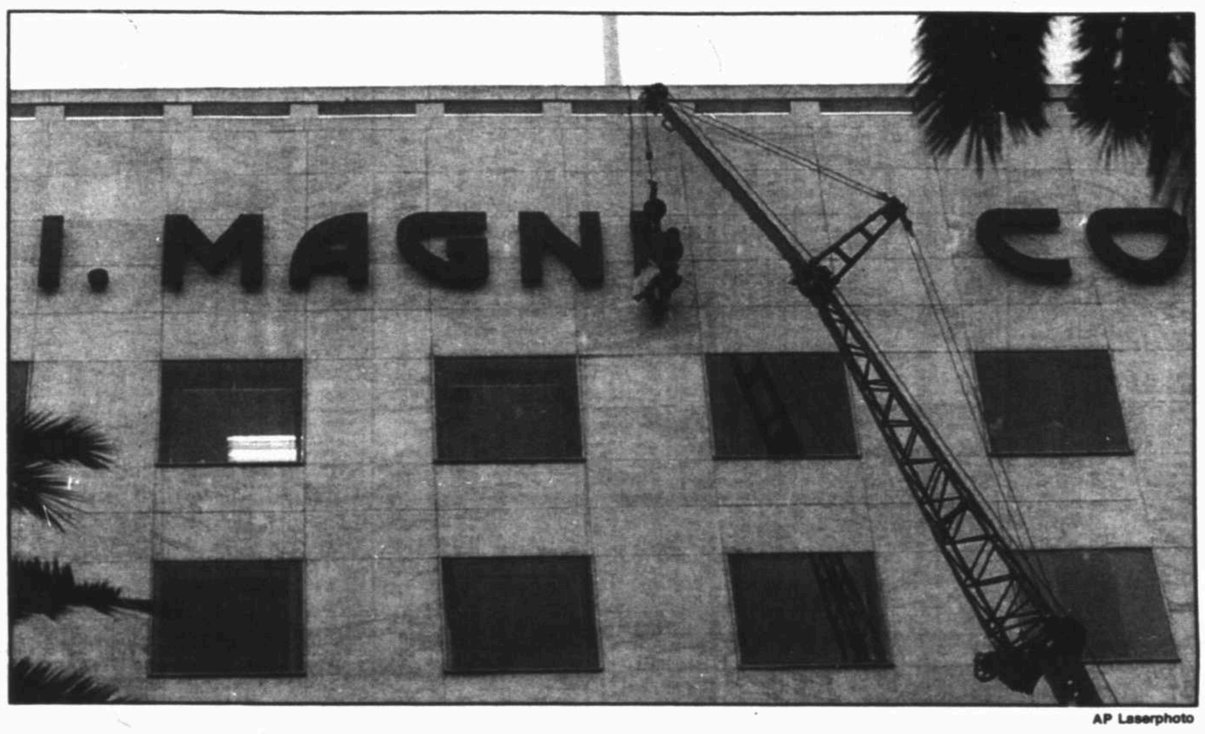

International Data Corp., a market research firm, estimated IBM shipped 1.37 million PCs in the quarter, down 15 percent from 1.61 million a year earlier. York attributed part of the drop to sales incentives at the end of 1993 that weren't repeated in the latest period.

To align itself with changes in the technology market, IBM has cut tens of thousands of jobs and shed unneeded office space and factory assets in the past few years. The job-cutting peaked with about 45,000 lost in 1993; last year, IBM cut about 35,000 jobs. It now employs about 220,000.

The company's fourth-quarter expenses were down 11 percent, or $729 million, against the year-ago period. Annual expenses dropped 15 percent, or $3.5 billion.

The company earned $2.88 billion, or $4.92 per share, in 1994. It lost $8.1 billion in 1993, or $14.02 per share, after taking a nearly $8 billion restructuring charge in the second quarter of that year.

In 1990, IBM earned $5.96 billion, or $10.42 per share. Revenue was $64.1 billion, up 2 percent from $62.7 billion in 1993.

Glaxo PLC bid for Wellcome could create huge drug firm

N.Y. Times News Service

LONDON — Taking the steady consolidation of the health care industry to a new scale, Glaxo PLC launched an unsolicited $14 billion offer for Wellcome PLC Monday, in a deal that would create the world's largest drug maker.

If completed, the deal between the two British companies would be the largest in a string of mergers and acquisitions among pharmaceutical companies, hospitals and other health care providers.

It also would rank among the two or three largest deals to date in any industry, behind the $30 billion merger of R.J. Reynolds and Nabisco completed in 1989 and neck-and-neck with the $14 billion combination of Time Inc. and Warner Communications in 1990.

Together, the companies would have $12.2 billion in worldwide sales, and would dominate the treatment of ulcers, AIDS and herpes. Their combined worldwide market share would be 5.3 percent, Glaxo said, compared with 3.9 percent for the current leader, Merck & Co.

Wellcome, the world's 20th-largest drug company, has long emphasized its desire to remain independent, and said Monday that it would study the Glaxo offer and consider possible alternatives.

But Glaxo, already the world's second-largest drug company after Merck, clearly has the upper hand, having made an offer that analysts described as being at the top end of the industry valuations. It also won a commitment from Wellcome's largest shareholder, the Wellcome Trust, an independent charity, to sell its 39.5 percent.

Glaxo said it was offering 10.25 pounds — about $16.20 — for each Wellcome share in cash and Glaxo stock, which is 49 percent higher than the closing price of Wellcome's stock on Friday.

KFC tests new upscale-restaurant concept in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — The new Colonel's Kitchen restaurant being tested by KFC is a little more expensive. It's got a much funkier red-and-purple neon chicken logo. And it offers more food variety, even — gasp — turkey.

The restaurant prototype opened Monday in Dallas, after a pre-opening fete complete with balloons, klieg lights and Dallas Cowboy cheerleaders.

"We've been really providing meals that people could eat at home for 40 years. The real challenge that I offered up to the group was how can we take KFC, which is a great brand, and develop the equity that we've built over the years and develop an even more contemporary store of the future, and this is what we came up with," said David Novak, who began working on the idea when he became KFC's chief executive officer and president on July 19.

Actually a remodeled KFC, the new Colonel's Kitchen has more windows, an open deli-style counter and an on-site bakery. Colonel Sanders is depicted in white relief near the entrance wielding a rolling pin.

"We want it to have the feel of a kitchen, the kitchen you'd have at home," Novak said.

KFC, with 5,100 U.S. restaurants, is one of three restaurant chains owned by Somers, N.Y.-based PepsiCo Inc.

The company is looking toward its next step, as many people steer away from fried foods and competitors like fast-growing Boston Chicken and Kenny Rogers Roasters multiply.

While Novak affirmed the company's commitment to its "fried heritage," KFC added rotisserie chicken to the menu in 1993 and wants to continue providing more choices, he said.

"KFC is looking for ways to do better," said Emanuel Goldman, an analyst for PaineWebber in San Francisco. "They used to be called Kentucky Fried chicken, and then the name was changed to KFC because of the 'f-word.' I think that the company would like to broaden beyond the fried image."

The Colonel's Kitchen menu has 36 offerings ranging from trendy to Southern to homestyle.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Living trust should not be substitute for will

By Bill Doyle

Q: Please explain the advantages and disadvantages of living trusts.

A: Living trusts, otherwise known as "revocable trusts," have a lot of positive features for families that have built up a considerable amount of assets.

Doyle

A living trust is not a substitute for a will.

With a living trust, you can designate a trustee to handle your financial affairs if you become unable to do the job yourself. Your family would not have to go through the traumatic court procedure of having you declared incompetent.

The trust can function as a legal entity to pay bills, handle your investments — whatever needs to be done in your name.

You can be the trustee, and you can name someone to come in to act on your behalf if you ever become unable to handle the job yourself. You also can have a family member be the trustee, or name a professional manager. Or, you can name co-trustees.

You can revise or revoke the trust at any time. You are not locked in. And, when you die, the trust goes into action to work on your behalf. Your estate avoids the often costly, time-consuming probate procedure.

The trust can be set up to protect your heirs' inheritence against the possibility of being wasted away by poor financial decisions, divorce decrees or other such contingencies.

You still need what is called a "pour over" will to cover all assets that are not in the trust, such as your car, home, jewelry, furniture and antiques collection.

The only disadvantage of having a living trust is the fees you have to pay an estate-planning lawyer and, if you so choose, a financial manager. Whether it is worth the fees you'd have to pay depends a lot on the amount of assets involved.

Q: My husband and I are planning to give our two sons 2 acres each of some valuable land we own. Right now, the land is worth $50,000 an acre. Is there any way we can avoid paying federal gift tax?

A: Probably.

First you have to get a current appraisal of the land that will stand up to examination by the Internal Revenue Service.

Under the allowed annual gift exclusion, each of you can give $10,000 — $20,000 total — to each son without having to file a federal gift tax return. Only after exceeding your lifetime gift and estate tax exclusion of $600,000 per donor would gift tax be due.

Enough money is involved in your gift plan to warrant seeking more-specific advice from an experienced estate-planning lawyer.

Q: I'm interested in buying some shares of blue-chip companies. Do you know of any way this can be done without having to use a stockbroker?

Is it possible to buy shares directly from the companies?

A: Some companies that have dividend-reinvestment plans allow you to buy your initial shares directly from the company. Several organizations compile lists of such companies and allow you to purchase initial shares for a small fee.

The National Association of Investors Corp. has a stock-purchase and dividend-reinvestment plan for its members that might fit the bill for you. The NAIC has an arrangement with 140 well-known companies that allows you to participate directly in their dividend-reinvestment plans.

You initially buy one share, or in some cases a few shares, to get started in a company's reinvestment plan. The NAIC makes the initial purchase for you and charges a $5 service fee for each stock you buy.

After that, your dividends are automatically reinvested, and you can purchase more shares directly from the stock issuer's agent without having to pay a broker's fee.

To participate in the program, you have to become a member of the NAIC. The $35 annual dues also covers a subscription to an investment magazine and other perks.

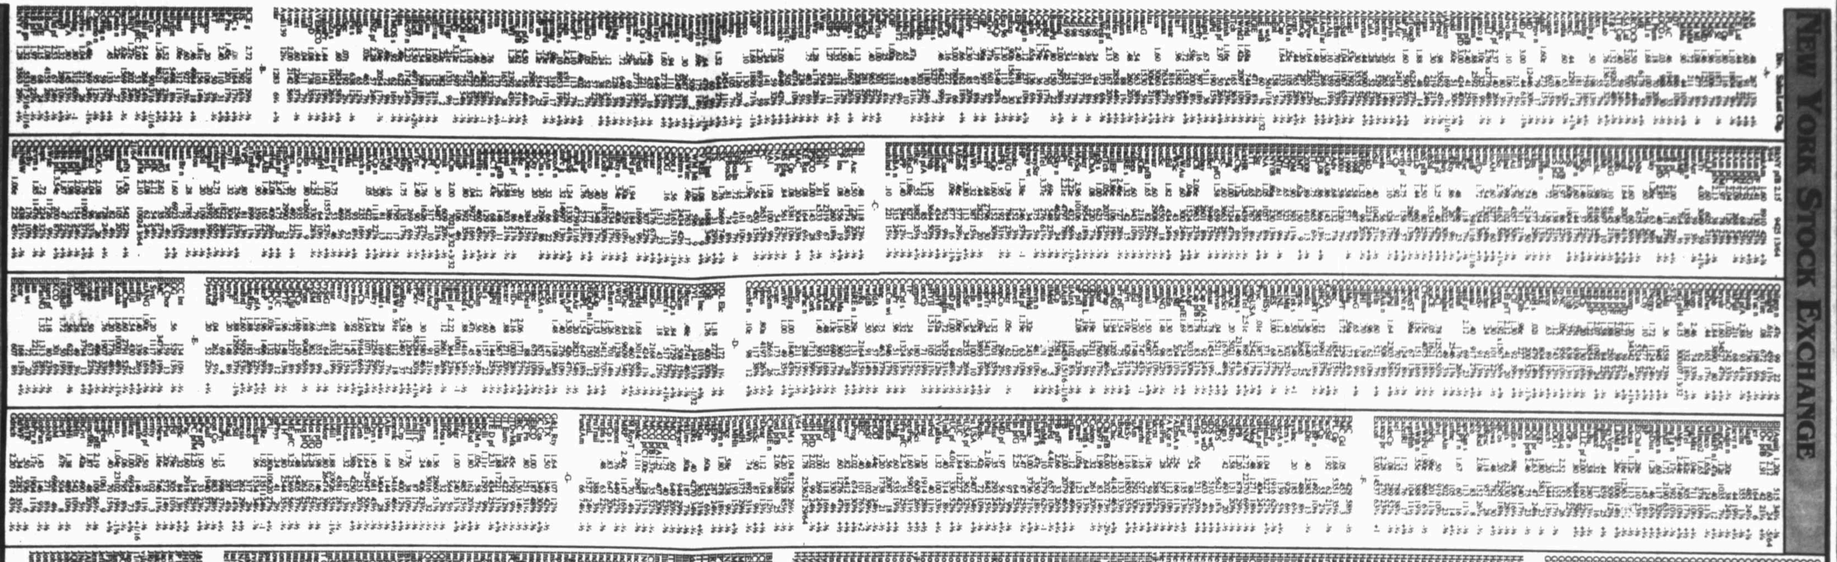

For more information, write to the NAIC, at P.O. Box 220, Royal Oak, MI 48068-0220.

RIVALS: MHS averaging 101 in last five contests

(From 1C)

scared of them," House said.

The Midland High boys have recovered nicely from the Lee loss, in which the Rebels held the high-scoring Bulldogs to a respectable 70 points. Midland has averaged just over 101 points in its last five games in reclaiming a district-leading tie with Abilene Cooper.

"We were ready the last game," MHS boys coach Jack Stephenson said. "I want to be fair to the whole situation. We played well. They just beat us.

"But we're playing better since then and when you're putting those numbers on the board, you're in pretty good shape," he said.

With less than three weeks to play in the girls district season, the Lee and Midland girls have very strong shots at playoff berths with only one loss each.

"Probably the team that wins tomorrow night (tonight) will win district," said Lee girls coach Elise Kail. "But I'm not letting the kids focus on that aspect. We're just taking it one game at a time."

It will be important for the Lady Rebels to control the tempo, Kail said, against an MHS team that has won 20 games in each of the last four seasons.

"We've got to maintain control like we did the last time," Kail said. "We want to do like we've played every district game except against Abilene High (Lee's only loss), where we're under control and playing a defensive game."

The Lady Rebels held the poor-shooting Lady Dawgs to just 42 points in the first district meeting and the Lee matchup zone has held all but one standout player in the district — including MHS' Amy Alcala — under their average.

"No doubt we play better when the ball is going up and down the floor," said MHS girls coach Jim Raughton. "We shot the ball very, very poorly and we weren't able to set up our press and run the ball."

But like their boys counterpart, the Lady Dawgs have also rebounded from the upset. Unlike they did in the 1991-92 season when they won 20 games but finished in third (before three teams in a district qualified for the playoffs) after dropping both games to Lee, the Lady Dawgs have responded and vaulted back into the district lead.

"The kids have reponded very well," Raughton said. "It's not like three years ago when we lost to Lee (in the first half of league play) and then just folded. These girls have responded in a completely different manner."

So with a possible district championship on the line combined with the always heated matchups between two rival schools, tonight's matches should be thrilling. What's new?

CENTER: New setting works

(From 1C)

his son is "enjoying Graham . . . he has made a lot of new friends, and it's been a very positive experience."

Said Graham coach Lonnie Gaylor: "It (the problems at Stephenville) was between adults, and a kid shouldn't have been in the middle."

Weaver said his family had been in a "state of turmoil" since July when it was revealed he was representing C.E. Carmichael, the former Stephenville girls basketball coach, who made the allegations.

But Weaver said he doesn't want to discuss the harassment.

Kolin Weaver and his mother, Susan, moved to a home in Graham, 90 miles northwest of Stephenville. Wayne Weaver and another son still live in Stephenville, where he practices law.

Before the football season began in September, the UIL district executive committee investigated the allegations of rule violations made by Weaver's client. Stephenville, the two-time defending Class 4A state champion, received a private reprimand.

Case closed.

Not for Kolin Weaver, though. UIL officials said Wayne Weaver alleged that "various members of his family had received death threats and had experienced personal attacks."

Stephenville Principal Garry Horn said he assured Mrs. Weaver that her son would be in a safe environment at the school. He said he was not aware of any death threats.

"Kolin was such a good kid and well respected, I feel very confident that no harm would have been done to him," Horn said. "There was nothing I know of that happened around the school."

Art Briles, Stephenville athletic director and football coach, denied any harassment by his football players.

"I know they didn't do that," Briles said. "The Weavers filed a hardship, and it was approved, and we signed the release. I really don't know the specifics of why he left."

When Weaver left, Stephenville basketball coach James Washington said he heard a lot rumors.

"I've had a lot of coaches say they heard he was beaten up and bloodied, but that didn't happen to my knowledge," Washington said. "I would have known if anything like that happened. The first (few weeks) of school I know he was confronted in the hallway, but that's the only thing I know about.

"I talked to his parents and the kid before he left . . . I really wanted him to stay, but I didn't try to talk them out of it."

At Graham, Kolin Weaver has been welcomed. The basketball team had four starters returning, but was missing an inside player who could shoot. Weaver added that dimension.

He leads Graham in scoring (17.6 points), rebounds (9.8) and blocked shots (4.9).

In preparation for this season, Weaver attended Indiana coach Bob Knight's camp last summer.

"Our attitude and a little bit of Kolin has helped out a whole bunch," 6-0 Graham forward Julian Taylor said.

LINE: Humphries explains loss

(From 1C)

by John Carney at the end of the first half.

Sound familiar?

And it's not as if the Chargers lacked incentive. They needed the win to clinch the AFC West.

Chargers quarterback Stan Humphries offers some explanation.

"We were missing some players," he said. "We had to play some rookies. We're not the same team now that we were then."

Among the missing that day were tight end Dwayne Young and left guard Joe Cocozzo. H-back Al Pupunu, who caught the 43-yard touchdown that began San Diego's comeback in the AFC championship game against Pittsburgh, was subpar, recovering from a bad knee.

Does the first win give San Francisco an edge the second time around?

"I don't know if that benefits us at all," said tight end Brent Jones, who scored the first TD in that game on a 10-yard pass from Young. "And I don't know if it was that easy. We felt like they were one of the top teams we played all year. I think it's going to give them some inspiration."

Jones knows both teams will make adjustments for the rematch.

"They're going to go back and look at film and see the areas they need to shore up," he said. "I don't know if it's any more of an advantage to us. I think it's more of a motivational factor for them."

San Francisco coach George Seifert insists the Niners won't take San Diego lightly.

"Our players realized even when we played San Diego the first time that they had gone through a tough period," he said. "They fought their way through it. They no longer have the same injuries they had at that particular time."

And Seifert doesn't think his team will take San Diego lightly.

"They are all professional enough to realize that we're going to go up against the best AFC team there is and one of the best teams, certainly, in football. Have we talked about it? Certainly we have. Do I have to talk about it a lot? No."

There's one other thing about this rematch. After getting beat up by San Francisco the first time they played, the Chargers were 9-5 and in some trouble with two straight losses for the first time all season and five losses in eight games.

They haven't lost since.

Record puts Guidry in lead

NEW YORK (AP) — A meet-record victory in the 200 meters has propelled Olympian Carlette Guidry into the women's overall lead in the Mobil Indoor Grand Prix track and field circuit.

Guidry's victory in 23.28 seconds at Saturday's Commonwealth Invitational at Cambridge, Mass., gave her 24 Grand Prix points after three meets.

Nekita Beasley, winner of the 800 at the Commonwealth meet, is second with 22 points, two ahead of Paula Schnurr of Canada and Rita Paulaviciene of Lithuania, tied for third with 20 apiece.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has routes available in the following areas:

Lee High School
Midland Dr. & Andrews Hwy.
Neely & Midland Dr.

As with all newspaper distributorships, this opportunity requires a 7 day a week commitment (when you go out of town, you must arrange a substitute for yourself) and it is early morning work.

Newspaper distributorships provide great supplemental income for anyone willing to work early morning hours. These routes require a small deposit.
