Venus Mission Begins

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - An Atlas Centaur rocket lifted the Pioneer Venus Orbiter skyward today on a mission intended to learn why Venus is so unlike its "twin planet" Earth.

The blast went off exactly on time at 9:13 a.m. EDT, the giant missile piercing a cloudy sky with a plume of white vapor.

Leak Confirmed

DENVER (AP) - The Army has confirmed that a nerve-gas bomb stored at the Rocky Mountain Arsenal near Denver was found to be leaking two months ago.

The leak was the second in a stockpile of 900 of the bombs, known as Weteyes, manufactured about nine years ago and scheduled to be shipped to storage facilities in Utah.

Soaking Rains Hike Planting Prospects

There were few things, if any, more desired in and around Scurry County the past week than a good, soaking rain, and it came Friday night.

A thunderstorm which moved in on Snyder around 10 p.m. Friday, ushered in showers which settled to a steady drizzle that continued into Saturday, bringing moisture ranging from an inch and a quarter to nearly four inches.

"There's no telling how much this is worth," said Billy Roach, County Extension Agent. "But it is bound to be worth a lot."

The county agent said cotton planting undoubtedly would get into full swing as soon as the farmers are able to get into the fields. A few had planted on the strength of rains some 2½ weeks earlier that were followed by light, but spotty showers.

However, it was generally agreed that there were few spots in the county that actually had enough moisture for planting cotton.

The rains Friday and Saturday quickly turned the situation around.

"A few of our farmers had half-heartedly planted," said Roach. "The hot, dry winds we had the past week were discouraging, and I feel that most of those who have planted probably will go back and plant over now that we've got some good rains."

Cattlemen also welcomed the rain. Roach said that grass which had greened up earlier had all but died. Then it had greened again temporarily following showers, only to deteriorate again. Roach said the rains this weekend should stimulate some growth on the ranges.

Stock tanks did not profit much from the rains Friday night and early Saturday because they fell so slowly. Neither did Lake J.B. Thomas. Rainfall measuring 1.20 inches was reported at the Lake Thomas dam Saturday morning, but it fell slowly over a period of several hours with no appreciable runoff.

Heaviest rains apparently were down the east side of Scurry County. Three inches or more were reported east of Snyder, 3.50 at Hermleigh, 3.75 to the south in the Inadale area, 3.00 around Dunn, 2.50 at Ira, 2.00 at Fluvanna and 1.25 to the north just over the Kent County line. In Snyder, the official gauge at the city water plant logged 2.00 inches and a light drizzle continued.

Forecasts indicated that the area could expect more showers over the weekend and possibly into the coming week.

If Randy Courtney could have had the luck his father did down at Austin the other day, he would be the state high school high jump champion and likely would have set a world record.

Randy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Courtney, went to Austin for the state track and field meet. Taking precautions that safety experts recommend, Ray slipped his billfold under the mattress of the motel bed when he retired for the night. When he lifted up the corner of the mattress to retrieve the wallet the next morning, he found not only his wallet but five $20 bills as well. Another cautious soul sometime back had put his money under the mattress, but had neglected to reclaim it when he checked out. Courtney already had found a $5 bill on a parking lot which proved to be a harbinger of better things to come.

The kid baseball and softball season has been launched and a lot of youngsters are getting their first taste of competition and the routine of workouts. Bill Clayton was telling about a workout in the girls softball program in which a rookie infielder got down to serious business. A hot ground ball was hit her way and she scooped it up and rifled a throw which narrowly missed the runner, who was approaching first base. Another grounder, and this time she bobbled the ball for a moment and the runner rounded first. Then came the throw which all but grazed the runner's nose. The little miss then apologized to the manager: "I didn't get that one in time to hit her with it before she got to first base."

Did you know that Texas has one of only four species of wild rice in the world? It does, and according to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Texas wild rice is an endangered species. This is not surprising, and we understand why people would be interested in protecting this plant from extinction. But it is difficult to fathom some of the reasoning behind these efforts. The Fish and Wildlife Service says Texas wild rice is found only in a 1½-mile stretch of the upper San Marcos River within the city limits of San Marcos, and that it has never existed outside the San Marcos River or its headwaters. Yet Dr. William Emery, a botanist at Southwest Texas State University was quoted as saying. "The value of Texas wild rice and the importance of taking positive steps to preserve its future are difficult to overestimate."

That makes it sound as if a small concentration of wild rice on a 1½-mile segment of a Texas river is vital to the survival of man. Botanists have been studying Texas wild rice extensively over the past years and are interested in its potentials for improving domestic and wild rice crops, according to the fish and wildlife service. That makes sense, but it seems strange that they hadn't noticed the plant was endangered before.

Hermleigh High Graduates 12

HERMLEIGH - The 12 graduating seniors at Hermleigh High School were told their graduation marked the first step to the rest of their lives, and they were challenged to make the most of what life and opportunity presented.

The keynote speaker at the Hermleigh commencement ceremonies Friday night, David Groves, was graduated from Hermleigh High in 1969, and from Sul Ross State University in 1975.

"My advice," Groves told the seniors, "is to study hard, work hard, and have self confidence."

He went on to say that a person can succeed in life if he tries and if he always puts forth his best effort in everything he does.

Similar thoughts were expressed in brief speeches delivered by Kelly Culp, the class valedictorian, and by Tracey Kruger, the salutatorian.

"In a very short time the youths of today will be the leaders of tomorrow," said Miss Kruger.

Miss Culp said, "Only we can determine if our future is successful or unsuccessful."

She went on to say that challenge is inevitable and that a person should not attempt to avoid it. Each person, she said, has his own unique talents and abilities that he can use in life.

Besides Tracey Kruger and Kelly Culp, other seniors who were graduated from Hermleigh High School Friday night were Carrolldon Burleson, David Cole, Ben Fuentes, Doug Jones, Jay Kincaid, Nancy Leatherwood, Alice Mireles, Laurie Peterson, Joe Don Williamson, and Britt Fuqua. Fuqua was graduated with a 91.63 average to make him the highest ranking male.

The diplomas were presented by Ray Simmons, superintendent of schools, and by Larry Farr, school board president. Performing the tassel ceremony was Clarence Spieker, teacher and coach and class sponsor.

The invocation was delivered by Father Thomas Jordan, and the benediction by Rev. Carl Nunn.

Scholarships were presented to Culp, Kruger, and Fuqua by high school principal Tommy Riley.

Two Missionaries Among Evacuated

The department said French and Belgian forces also had made radio contact with two other American missionaries who were reportedly alive and well.

Ira Seniors Urged To Focus On Higher Values

IRA-Eight seniors graduated from Ira High School Friday night. Also nine eighth graders graduated into high school during the annual commencement exercises.

Guest speaker for the occasion was Alvin Shambeck from Lubbock. He is a successful invester and a founder of the West Texas Boys Ranch.

Shambeck congratulated the young people on their achievement and urged them to continue to keep the lamp of education and all higher values burning in their hearts as they go out to meet the world.

High school valedictorian, Kim Layne, also addressed the audience as did salutatorian, Paula Clements. The eighth grade valedictorian, Kevin Huddleston, also presented a speech.

Ira School principal L.D. Monroe, recommended the candidates for graduation. Superintendent, Ronald Plumlee awarded the diplomas.

Pianist, Debbie Smith played the processional and recessional music and Gloria Sanchez sang the school song.

L.D. Monroe gave the invocation and Fred Kesner concluded the ceremony with a benediction.

Receiving high school diplomas were Hubert Keith Clements, Paula Jean Clements, Joe Allen Hall, Kristi Ann Hughes, Frederick Wayne Kesner, Kimberly Ann Layne, Nancy Waylene Lomax and Jack Allen Stack.

Eighth grade students graduating into high school were David Lee Crane, James Ray Crowder, Donna Deneen Dunn, Jimmy Alton Elam, Kerry Lynn Gardner, Kevin Leon Huddleston, Jane Ann McCarty, Marla Beth Phillips and Russell Scott Sharp.

Education Plan Due For Drunken Driver

A member of the steering committee of the Texas Traffic Safety Association, L.D. Womble, said plans are currently underway for the development of a comprehensive education program for the drunken driver.

And as it now stands, said Womble, Snyder will have one of the program's central offices.

Womble, the director of the local Council on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse, attended two recent meetings of the traffic safety association held in Austin and Huntsville.

"We're finally ready to develop a statewide mandatory program," he said. A bill that will make traffic safety education mandatory for the drunken driver is now being prepared and will be submitted to the Texas Legislature.

The purpose of the bill, said Womble, "is to reduce the number of highway fatalities involving alcohol related accidents." Plans currently being formulated call for the traffic safety education to be made a part of the drunken driver's probation.

"When the program is in operation," he said, "we hope to prevent at least 65 percent of the traffic fatalities."

If adopted, Snyder will have a central office coordinating the program's operations for Scurry, Mitchell, Fisher, Kent, Garza, Stonewall, Lynn, and Borden Counties.

Japan Opens Airport

NARITA, Japan (AP)- About 300 radical demonstrators tried to crash through a gate at Narita airport with two burning trucks tonight, several hours after the terminal officially opened, but they were held off by riot police firing tear gas.

It appeared to be a last-ditch effort by airport opponents to shut it down. Shortly after the official opening, police used water cannons to rout some of the estimated 15,000 demonstrators who hurled rocks and firebombs outside the airport.

Police said fire broke out at the gate where the nighttime assault was made. Twenty-four persons were reported arrested.

At about the same time, another group of radicals tossed firebombs at a gate leading to an aviation radar facility 30 miles east of here. There were no immediate reports of damage.

No injuries were reported at Narita among the protesters or among the 13,000 riot police, who wore specially treated uniforms designed to protect them from firebombs.

After the opening, in which the airport was blessed by Shinto priests to drive out evil spirits, nine police helicopters whirred overhead as demonstrators darted through narrow roads around the airport.

Some of the protesters cut air traffic control cables before the ceremony, disrupting Tokyo air service for three hours and forcing cancellation of 114 domestic flights.

Ask Us

Q - People in Snyder seem to take pride in Western Texas College, yet someone told me that Snyder had a chance to get Texas Tech but turned it down.

A - We suspect that someone was pulling your leg. Snyder had so many campaigns over a period of some 65 years trying to get a college that it almost became an obsession. When the state was looking for a site for Texas Tech, Snyder had a special committee that worked hard to get it here. Prior to that, Snyder tried to get the Presbyterians to put in a junior college here and also made a strong bid for "West Texas A&M" which never did get established anywhere. Also, a Snyder committee tried to get West Texas State University (it was Canyon Normal then) to move here after its main building burned back in the 'teens. Then there were half a dozen tries at a public junior college before WTC finally was established.

faster count needed

The recent primary election ballot admittedly was a long and difficult one to count. The old manual system of counting and tabulating ballots is difficult even at best. But use it in an election like the one recently, and headaches abound.

Scurry County had over 4,200 votes cast in the primary election. The polls closed at 7 p.m. and the last box to report was after 11 a.m. the following day. Another box reported they were finished at 6 a.m.

In nearby communities, some larger and some smaller than Snyder, the vote count went much more quickly. In Abilene, for example, the vote count county-wide was complete at 9:30 p.m. In Big Spring, we've learned the total count was finished at 9 p.m., while Lubbock was finished about 10 p.m. Andrews County, with about 2,500 votes cast, finished with the count at 7:30 - 30 minutes after the polls closed.

What's the difference? The answer is one word - automation. All the above mentioned counties have invested in the punch card method of voting and tabulation.

In Andrews County, the capital expenditure was $22,000 for 52 machines for the 6,000 registered voters. In Scurry County it would take a few more machines. According to our information, it is suggested one machine for each 150 voters.

The speed is in the vote count which is done in a computer type arrangement. It can be done by a central machine or by a precinct ballot counter.

We're told that the more votes you have, the more economical the system is to install. The Andrews county clerk who pushed for the automated system there has estimated that in time and salaries, the system will save $1,000 per election and will pay for itself in five years or less.

When used in a party primary, a school or city election, the machines can be leased from the county.

Based on the past experience and on the growth record of Snyder, we'd suggest that the Scurry County Commissioners Court take a look at the possibility of punch card voting here.

pollution business

Pollution is a big problem that has developed into big business.

U.S. firms expect to spend $10.98 billion for pollution control during the current year, according to a survey by McGraw-Hill Publications Co.

That represents a 21 percent increase over the $9.03 billion spent during 1977.

The biggest spenders are the energy industries - electric utilities and oil - and the biggest efforts are going into cleaning up the air - $5.86 billion, or 54 percent of total spending. Water is next with $3.94 billion, 36 percent.

Pollution control, the survey notes, now represents a major cost of doing business in the United States.

But with 1978 control expenditures accounting for 6.9 percent of the entire anticipated capital investment for the year, it has clearly developed into a major business in its own right.

paul harvey

cure for inflation

Historians are worried about inflation but not hopelessly worried.

Admittedly our dollar is sick. It may have cancer.

But there is a cure.

What I am about to relate is not ancient history, each of the three examples--of nations which did stop inflation when it appeared it could not be stopped--has happened since World War II.

First Germany.

If anything opened the door for a Hitler it was the frightful inflation in Germany during the Third Reich. A postage stamp came to cost 100,000 reichsmarks. In the end a million marks would buy nothing.

German money was again on the skids in 1948 when a courageous economic minister, Ludwig Erhard--against the advice of American occupation officials, against our advice--persuaded Chancellor Adenauer to remove wage and price controls and to drastically reduce federal spending.

Within a year inflation was stopped and Germany's economy was launched on a prosperous expansion.

Example number two: France.

In 1958 France was in political turmoil. The Indochina war had been lost. There was near civil war in Algeria. Every day French francs were worth less. It took thousands of them to purchase a pair of shoes.

In desperation the country delivered itself into the hands of DeGaulle.

Vermont Royster, who assisted me in preparing this chronology, remembers that DeGaulle was no economist--but DeGaulle had the courage to overrule his own political staff (including some in the Bank of France) and he recognized the reality of devaluation and he drastically reduced federal government spending.

Over the ensuing three years the inflation fever subsided. France's balance of trade with other nations was restored. Industrial and agricultural production increased.

Now we come to example number three: the United States in 1953.

Over the preceding four years our dollar had shrunk 10 cents. Black market prices were masked by price controls and the inflation rate was worse than that.

President Eisenhower, less than one month in office, courageously lifted price and wage controls and slashed the federal budget.

Whereas the previous Truman budget had called for spending $78.6 billion with a $9.9 billion deficit, Eisenhower's budget reduced expenditures to $67.5 billion with a deficit of $3 billion.

In August of 1954, eighteen months later, the price index had stabilized. Our dollar had stopped shrinking. Economic activity had resumed its progress.

Noteworthily, in each of these instances: Artificial price controls were not a solution to inflation. Slashing government spending was.

But currently the Carter budget is proposing spending beyond our income by $60 billion.

Letters To Editor

To The Daily News:

On August 31, 1977, I wrote a letter to the Snyder Daily News saying that many people were watching the political career of Rep. Bob Krueger and that we needed someone like him in the Senate. Apparently a lot of people in Scurry County and the rest of Texas felt the same way, since he was elected to represent the Democratic party in the fall election.

Some people may ask what is wrong with John Tower continuing as senator. I have supported John Tower in every election so far. I can't say there is a lot wrong him, but we have got to have someone in the senate who will not only support the oil industry but will fight, so to speak, for what he believes is right. Bob Krueger has tried hard for the past three years to get the oil industry deregulated.

Anyone who knows anything about the oil industry in Texas knows that under present conditions things are not going well for a lot of oil field areas. Oil drilling in Snyder is no longer being done to any large degree. Of course this is what the oil companies said would happen if the oil industry lost the depletion allowance.

Oil company officials, in a position to know, say there are other pay depths of oil in Snyder, but we are never going to know if things keep going the way they are.

I hope that you will support Bob Krueger in his race for the senate seat. We need someone to help the badly troubled Texas Oil Industry.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "A modern pioneer is a young mother who manages to get through a rainy Saturday with the television out of order."

The Snyder Daily News does not exist. In fact, according to the computer, Snyder does not exist.

It all happened Tuesday in an effort to obtain a serviceman to repair one of our electronic typesetting machines. Like we've done in years past, we placed a call to the Dallas service center.

We were told that the company now has a toll free "800" number to schedule repairmen. We called that number. Then the frustration began.

The switchboard operator immediately transferred the call to another girl, who transferred us to another girl who transferred us to another girl.

The fourth woman told us to call Dallas in order to get repair service. We explained that we had just talked with Dallas and had been told to call this number in Massachusetts.

"I know what I'm talking about sir," the woman urged. "You must call Dallas. I'm in Massachusetts and you're in Texas."

"Everybody's got to be somewhere," was the only comeback I could muster.

I then asked to be transferred back to the switchboard, thinking that the new procedure hadn't been passed down the line. She did but left me on the line and I overheard the fourth woman's conversation to the switchboard.

"I've got this hardhead from Texas on the line and he just won't listen to me."

With the blood pressure steadily rising, I asked to speak to someone in authority, preferably the president. I was then placed on a long "hold" only to be disconnected.

Placing the call again, I reached the same poor switchboard operator who had great difficulty in obtaining anyone who would take the infamous caller from Texas.

Twenty-five minutes have now passed since I started this routine project. I'm now placed on hold several more times as the operator tries desperately to find someone in authority willing to talk to the hard head.

Finally, now 35-minutes into the project, a vice president for marketing comes on the line to explain that I have the right company but was given the wrong phone number. He offers to call Dallas who will call me back to give me the correct number.

He did and they did. For the record, the last digit was the only difference. Dallas offered one additional bit of advice. They'll ask for your account number and it is 0069.

The new toll free number is then called, again a wonderful Yankee voice answers. Obviously she has already been alerted to expect a call from the hard-headed Texan.

She asks for the account number. "That is not correct," she said. "Where did you get it?"

Now 45 minutes into the project she asks if we're a "new unit."

"That depends on what a unit is ... is it something like a customer?"

Ignoring my sarcasm, she sends me to the file to pull old invoices on the company in an attempt to find the correct account number. The search reveals another number 5462.

"That's not correct, either," she says, "The computer does not read."

Thinking of computers and Star Trek, I asked her to beam me up. Again she ignores my attempt at humor although we're not laughing much some 60 minutes into the project.

She tries Snyder Daily News and a few other names she thinks might be accepted by the computer. Nothing works.

I then plead for mercy and a repairman. She says she'll work on it.

To date, we've seen no repairman but that's probably because the computer says we simply don't exist.

in washington

martha angle and robert walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) - President Carter is missing the point when he rattles off facts and figures proving middle-income families would gain more from his student aid proposal than from a tuition tax credit.

In dollars and cents, Carter is no doubt correct. But there is more at stake in his fight with Congress than the amount of money any given family might receive under the two alternatives.

The impetus behind the tuition tax credit is as much philosophical as fiscal. Its greatest appeal is that parents could take advantage of it with a simple check mark on their income tax returns - without first shipping their money to Washington and filling out pages upon pages of applications to get it back again.

The popularity of the tuition tax credit is part and parcel of the public backlash against big government and high taxes. Carter's enlarged student loan and grant plan, although welcomed warmly by colleges and the teachers' lobbies, remains just another expansion of Big Brotherism.

People are getting tired of Big Brother in all his guises. Federal, state and local taxes combined now gobble up more than 40 percent of all national income, and those who pay the bill increasingly feel they are getting precious little in return.

It is true that increases in state and local taxes over the past decade have far outpaced the growth of federal income taxes, but Uncle Sam remains the primary target of taxpayer resentment. And no wonder.

Those who pay state and local taxes at least see what their money buys - schools, garbage collection, street lighting, recreation centers and other visible programs. But the people who pay federal income taxes are seldom the same people who benefit from them in any direct fashion.

In fiscal 1977, for instance, 69 percent of total federal tax receipts went for "income transfer" programs - Social Security, medicare, medicaid, welfare, food stamps and the like.

By any measure that is income redistribution on a massive scale, and conservatives are beginning to draw blood when they rail against such a huge transfer of money "from those who earn it to those who yearn it."

Most taxpayers are not clamoring to get a piece of the government pie for themselves. What they want is to keep a large slice in their own pockets, to spend as they see fit.

The overt signs of a taxpayer revolt are evident all over the political landscape these days, both in Washington and in the states. But there is a hidden and more ominous side to the rebellion as well.

Although the government prefers to ignore the phenomenon, a "subterranean" economy is growing by leaps and bounds. It is an economy based on cash transactions and barter, unreported and untaxed.

Government figures show that by the end of 1976, some $381 in cash for every man, woman and child in America was sloshing around somewhere outside of banks.

Economist Peter Gutmann of Baruch College in New York estimates the "gross national product" of the underground economy at $200 billion a year - which represents a tax loss to Uncle Sam of some $40 billion.

Barter clubs are springing up across the country as professionals and businessmen trade services, without reporting the transactions to the tax man. Small retailers are dealing "out of pocket" instead of from the cash register.

When otherwise law-abiding citizens start resorting to this kind of widespread tax evasion, it's clearly time for the government to take a new look at what it is doing.

robert c schuller

its possible

By Robert Schuller

I stood in the "second story" of the MacDonnell-Douglas space lab and marveled at the incredibly efficient use of space. My guide explained the unbelievable number of "unsolvable" problems that were handled in this first three-man scientific laboratory to be sent into outer space.

"How did you solve so many complex problems?" I asked. His answer contains universal principles that you can use: "No matter how big the problem is, break it down until you get the smallest lump, and solve it and then another — until you put the solved parts together like pieces of a puzzle."

Organize to divide and conquer your problems! If you are having trouble with your problem get others to help you. Remember: the bigger the challenge or the tougher the problem, the greater is your chance to attract the support of outstanding Possibility Thinking experts.

Success is a matter of not quitting and failure is a matter of giving up too soon.

All radio stations in New Zealand were owned and operated by the government at one time. Jim, an acquaintance of mine in Auckland, together with some of his dynamic young Possibility Thinking friends, decided the country would be vastly enriched if it also had a privately owned and controlled commercial radio station.

"Impossible!" they were told. "The government would never allow it!"

The big problem — how to broadcast to the people of New Zealand without violating the law.

One night the fellows decided to play the Possibility Thinking Game. The upshot was a bright idea from one young lawyer. Place a radio transmitter on an oceangoing ship at anchor 12 miles from shore and broadcast to the mainland. They had found the answer but they had no money to buy or charter a ship. Again they played the game. The result? They approached a wealthy ship owner who was sympathetic to the idea.

"I'll let you use one of my ships — free, on one condition," he offered. "If you succeed in pressuring the government to finally give in and allow you to operate legally on the mainland, then I get a directorship on the board."

"It's a deal," they chimed in unanimously.

Now another "impossible" problem loomed. To relase the ship from the harbor a permit would be necessary from the minister of the Marine. Worse yet, the same official also served as the minister of Broadcasting. They were sure he'd never approve the sailing. Since Jim and his friends were deeply religious, they would not contemplate deception.

"Let's try anyway," one of the group suggested. "What do we have to lose?"

The government official listened to the young man's request. His response was incredible. Did they hear him right?

"I'll tell you what I will do," he said, "I'll let you sail. The truth is I have, as minister of Broadcasting, been privately thinking that our country might be enriched if we allowed private commercial radio stations. But I can't even bring the subject up! If you actually commence broadcasting and if you do a constructive job of it to the point that the people pressure my office to change our national policy, and permit private broadcasting — well, I won't block it."

This occurred several years ago. The ship sailed and the station went on the air in international waters. New Zealanders were astounded, then inspired, as they heard fresh new voices on their radios. They responded. Pressure for private broadcasting mounted. Within two years, the government relented and licensed the first commercial station to operate in that country. Now there are four additional private broadcasting stations in operation!

Investigate. You'll find a way to turn your impossible idea into a possibility!"

Carter's Mom Mad At Hugh

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)- Billy Carter wasn't the only one who took cousin Hugh to task for his new book about the Carter family, Hugh Carter has admitted.

He said Thursday that when he ran into President Carter's mother, Miss Lillian at an airport a few weeks ago, "she got really angry and said, 'You're the scum of the earth.'"

In fact, cousin Hugh said here on a tour to plug his book, the only Carter to thank him for an autographed copy of "Cousin Beedie and Cousin Hot" was the first lady. He said Rosalynn Carter wrote him that she and the president were reading and enjoying the book.

In Arapahoe, Colo., on Wednesday Billy Carter called Hugh a few names, suggested he belonged in a mental hospital and accused him of lying in the book, particularly about Miss Lillian.

The book cites "family gossip" that Miss Lillian felt Rosalynn was not good enough to marry into the family and that she "hit the ceiling" when her son Jimmy, announced their engagement.

"I deny I'm a liar, of course," the author said. "Everything in my book is true. You know, the truth hurts sometimes and maybe it's hurting Billy right now."

In fact, Hugh suggested, Billy ought to be kindlier about the whole thing.

"I don't even feel he's a redneck. He's a fine businessman and in my book I praise Billy more than he's ever been praised before," cousin Hugh said.

Six Seniors Get Hobbs Diplomas

HOBBS - Six seniors graduated from high school here Friday and 11 eighth graders graduated into high school in commencement exercises held in the school auditorium.

The Rev. Mike Hicks from the Cross Roads Baptist Church was the guest speaker. He congratulated the young people and told them they were entering life with a blank sheet of paper. He said that what was written on that sheet of paper at the end of their lives was up to them.

Valedictorian, Tammy Gober, and salutatorian, Sandra Gordon, also spoke to the gathering.

President of the school board, Howard Gordon, presented the diplomas to the seniors and processional music was provided by Mrs. Patricia Porter.

The invocation was given by Frank Mirand. The benediction, offered by Randy Etheredge, concluded the ceremony.

The traditional senior trip will be to Hawaii for this year's seniors. Mrs. Myla Black is class sponsor.

The graduating seniors were Randy Etheredge, Frank Miranda, Mark Anderle, Tammy Gober, Sandra Gordon and Kim Ratliff.

Eighth graders graduating into high school were Michael Porter (valedictorian), Lynn Hyer (salutatorian), Sylvia Alaniz, Gary Allen, Jay Anderle, Todd Etheredge, Rudy Garcia, Benny Medrano, Junior Miranda, Diana Molano and Breck Weathers.

HEALTH TIP from DEAN

The American Medical Assoc. estimates 250,000 products used in the home are potentially harmful. In a recent year there were 600,000 cases of accidental poisoning of children by chemicals resulting in the deaths of 1000 children under 5 years of age.

For example, chemicals used to clean out sinks and drains are clearly labelled as poisonous; yet they seem to get into food and are ingested, requiring expensive medical aid.

Cubs Give Funds To Scout Program

Leaders of Cub Scout Den 2, Pack 37 reported "surprise and delight" when the Cubs decided to give the $100 they had earned through various fund raising projects to the scouting program.

Cub Scout Commissioner Doc Griffin said he was caught completely off guard by the decision of the boys. He said the money will go into a fund to be used to restore Camp Ed Murphy on Lake J.B. Thomas.

It is the policy of the south district to recognize gifts of $100 or more with a Century Partners plaque. So, on Friday the members of the den were presented such a plaque by the Rev. Jonathan Jensen, acting for the district committee.

Rev. Jensen said that area scouting officials cannot recall such an incident ever occurring in this area before and that perhaps it was even a first nationally.

Dickenson To Campaign Here Monday

With the runoff election set for June 3, Bob Dickenson, candidate for the 11th Court of Civil Appeals, will be campaigning in Snyder Monday, May 22.

Dickenson will be hosted by Tommie Mills, Snyder attorney. Joining in the campaigning will be Dickenson's wife Joan, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Dickenson of Sweetwater.

In the May 6 election, Dickenson won 15 of the 23 counties that comprise the 11th Court and received over 26,000 votes.

"We wanted to return to the Snyder area before the June 3 runoff to campaign and to thank the people of Snyder and Scurry County for their wonderful support in the May 6 election," said Dickenson.

Dickenson graduated with honors from Texas Tech in 1954 and attended Southern Methodist University Law School on an academic scholarship, graduating in 1957. He was assistant professor of law at Baylor, and has had a full time practice of general civil law in Abilene since 1960.

No Price On New Stamp

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)- The Monday morning sale of an orange stamp bearing an eagle and the letter A will make Memphis the first city in the nation to sell a U.S. postage stamp with no price printed on it.

"Whenever a new stamp comes out, it is always put on sale in one city before it goes out anywhere else," Harold Fortner, public relations officer for the Memphis post office, said Friday. "It's quite an honor for Memphis to be chosen for the issuance of a unique stamp like this."

The stamps were printed in 1975 and 1976 but until now, Postal Service officials hadn't figured out what to do with them.

While there will be no price printed on the stamp, the Postal Service has decided to give it a 15-cent value.

Judge Rules State Can't Bar Nudity

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP)-A county judge has ruled that the state cannot bar nudity outside the home because it was so vague that it could be construed to ban taking showers at a YMCA.

The ruling struck down a section of the new state penal code, but it has no effect outside Allen County because only the Indiana Supreme Court can void a law statewide.

Paw Print On Accident Report

HORICON, Wis. (AP) - Police shook their heads, took a paw print and filed their accident report.

Puddins, a poodle owned by Kathryn Washchow, was the only occupant of a 1977 Lincoln Continental that backed down the main street here, jumped a curb and struck a restaurant.

Mrs. Washchow said she left the car, with the engine running, in front of a bar she and her husband operate while she unloaded groceries.

Since the poodle didn't have a driver's license, police had the dog affix his paw print to the bottom of the accident report for identification.

Identification Of Gifted Student Is Final Problem

How does one identify the gifted and talented child? This question was the final problem confronted by the Snyder Public School's Gifted and Talented Task Force. The group met and discussed several screening instruments, said Dr. Tom Scannicchio, assistant superintendent for instruction and project director, and then considered the actual format of a screening checklist with which to identify children to be provided services when the program is underway.

"The projection is," Scannicchio added, "that we will probably start with a pilot program, providing services for children in certain designated areas, and then expand our services over the years to include those talented in more of the various areas which are considered to be part of the field."

Therefore, the Screening-Identification Model should include checklists and tests which will identify all children who qualify in each area of giftedness and talent for entry into the program as it is expanded.

The meeting began with an overview of the year's progress on the development of this training program. According to Mrs. Grace LeMonds, coordinator for the gifted and talented program, highlights of the year included: Awareness sessions during inservice for all teachers within the Snyder Public schools, additional conferences presented to schools and the community, the production of three teacher-training booklets, the presentation of these training programs to 22 teachers and administrators during the month of April.

These programs, held at the Learning Resource Center at Western Texas College, gave the involved professional staff members a perspective on: orientation to the gifted child, presented by Dr. Bruce D. Mattson and Bill Danley, both of Texas Tech University; methods of identifying the gifted and talented child, by Mr. W. Alan Coulter of Austin; and techniques for planning, directed by Dr. Karolyn J. Snyder, also of Austin. These programs gave teachers and administrators an introduction to the needs of the gifted and talented child and how to prepare to plan for him-her in the classroom.

An Advisory Board to the same project met on April 24, with very positive results being expressed. This Board, made up of citizens from the community, was told of this progress and projections were made for the 1978-79 school year. It was announced that the Texas Education Agency has agreed to the necessary funding for the continuation of this developmental program. The end-result of this two-year project will be a complete training kit, containing the three teacher-training packages from this year's work plus other materials on programming and instructional techniques, which can be used by any school to train their own staff to work with gifted and talented children.

Oleometer Law Is Repealed

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP)-In 1836, the New York Legislature, reacting to chicanery in the whaling industry, enacted a law requiring the state to furnish each county clerk wth an oleometer.

It seems that some whalers had a habit of selling common whale oil to unsuspecting consumers who thought they were getting pure sperm oil - akin to selling Saturday Night Sonata in a Chanel No. 5 bottle.

With the oleometers, clerks were supposed to be able to distinguish between pure sperm oil and common whale oil.

Since 1836, the whaling industry's importance to the state has diminished and it is now almost totally extinct.

So the state Senate, keeping right up with the times, passed a bill Wednesday to repeal the 1836 law. The bill now goes to the Assembly.

Billie Sol Estes Seeks Racehorse

By DON HARRISON
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) - With a federal grand jury, the FBI, and the Internal Revenue Service and the Texas Attorney General's office nipping at his heels, paroled swindler Billie Sol Estes has opted for the legal talents of famed Houston defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes.

Estes met Haynes at the Fairmont Hotel here Friday where the flamboyant barrister was scheduled to address the Texas Criminal Defense Lawyers Association. Haynes told The Associated Press that Estes is interested in using his legal expertise to obtain a presidential pardon he applied for last March.

The bespectacled promoter was paroled in 1971 after serving about half of a 15-year sentence. He was convicted of masterminding a multi-million dollar phony fertilizer tank scheme at the expense of the federal government and several hundred red-faced private investors.

Haynes told The AP Estes approached him as early as a month ago concerning the pardon and various other "legal matters", in which Estes is embroiled. He said he has not decided whether to take Estes as a client.

"I'm going to listen to him, yes. We'll be discussing that (the pardon) and various other legal matters I understand are pending," Haynes said.

Asked whether Estes wanted to retain him on a permanent basis for any pending criminal litigation, Haynes said, "Well, it may be a little premature for that."

Estes, who arrived without his usual entourage of attorneys and private secretary at the law seminar about 30 minutes before Haynes, appeared apprehensive. The Abilene resident was his old immutable self, refusing to answer even the simplest of questions.

"We've talked a time or two before," Haynes said. "I guess you form your initial opinions about somebody on what others tell you, at least before you meet them. But, I find him homey, warm and he seems very open.

"You know a lot of people out in his hometown still like him and that speaks highly for a man, considering what he's been through."

Retaining Haynes could prove discomforting for Estes. Haynes, ever the obliging recipient of newsmen, has merely to show up in a city to attract reporters. Estes avoids publicity whenever possible.

Shuttle Diplomacy Claimed...

Vote Set On Gas Bill Tuesday

WASHINGTON (AP)- House energy leaders say a round of "shuttle diplomacy" by Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger appears to have lined up the votes needed to break a six-month stalemate over natural gas pricing.

Whether Schlesinger managed to pull it off, however, won't be known until Tuesday, when the House-Senate conference committee on President Carter's energy bill takes a formal vote on a natural gas compromise.

Although several past efforts to reach agreement have collapsed, conference leaders say this time they're reasonably confident they actually have the votes for approval of the compromise.

The plan would lift price controls on newly discovered natural gas on Jan. 1, 1985. The House had accepted Carter's plan to continue price controls indefinitely while the Senate voted for deregulation after two years.

The compromise plan would cost consumers about $9 billion through 1985 and even more after deregulation begins, say congressional economists. According to one analysis, this would mean roughly $40 to $50 a year in added heating costs for families using natural gas.

With indications that House conferees were still three votes short of the 13 needed to approve the compromise, Schlesinger shuttled back and forth Thursday night among three undecided conferees until he struck a deal that picked all three votes.

The three Democrats - Reps. Bob Eckhardt and Charles Wilson of Texas and Joe Waggonner of Louisiana-said Friday they will support the plan with a change backed by Schlesinger.

The proposed change would reduce somewhat the extent of federal price regulation over already discovered gas - which is not eligible for deregulation - in states where gas is produced. This "intrastate" gas is not currently subject to any federal regulation, but would be if the compromise is approved.

Conference leaders and aides said they did not think this change would lose any votes for the plan among its previous backers.

"We've got 13 firm votes and they'll stay firm," said Rep. Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio., a top negotiator.

A majority of Senate conferees already have indicated support for the deregulation-by-1985 compromise, but conference leaders postponed a vote on the plan until the additional House votes could be corraled.

State Seeks To Cut Red Tape With New Bureau

By DAVID AMMONS
Associated Press Writer

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP)- Starting a new business can bring on a gordian knot of government red tape. A potential grocer, for instance, needs 28 different licenses from a dozen separate agencies.

But this state has set out to undo the bureaucratic tangle with, well, another bureau: the Business License Center, an envisioned one-stop shop for budding entrepreneurs.

When the agency reaches full operation next year, a new businessman will only need to make application to it. Then the agency, not the businessman, will undertake the footwork and paper shuffling among other agencies to get the permits and licenses needed.

"I think this is one of the most significant things we have done in a long time for the consumers," said director Saul Arrington.

"In the past, it has been an awful headache getting licensed. The time involved is one thing, but also unless you had a CPA or an attorney, it could be very confusing, what with agencies spread all over the place."

Businessmen agree.

"It will substantially reduce the amount of time and energy it takes to wade through red tape," says Dave Gordon, head of the Association of Washington Business.

"Anything we can do to streamline the process leaves that much more time to tend to business. It's good for the business climate."

The bureaucratic maze that has existed for would-be merchants extends through 30 state agencies that regulate business in some way and issue more than 1,000 different permits and licenses.

Until Jan. 16, when the license center opened, a Spokane woman who wanted to start a beauty salon would have had to drive 300 miles to Olympia, the capital. She'd have to wander around town until she found every agency which issues a license she needs - assuming, of course, she knew what was needed.

In her case, the list would include a tax number, incorporation papers and various permits and forms from the Employment Security Department, the Department of Labor and Industries, the Division of Professional Licensing and other agencies.

The maze led state officials "to seriously reconsider whether we are licensing people to protect the public, or simply perpetuating bureaucratic red tape because that's the way we've always done things," says Arrington, who thinks Washington is on its way to becoming the only state with "master" business licenses issued by a single agency.

The full one-stop process for all businesses won't be reality until the fall of 1979, but the license center already provides:

—A toll-free telephone line with licensing experts standing by to help. They won't give advice on financial aspects of running a business, but they'll explain the governmental hurdles that must be cleared.

—Latest information about some of the federal and local requirements for businesses.

—A packet available by mail of all information and forms needed so paperwork can be done at home. From there, the applicant mails the forms to the proper agency.

The center will watchdog the process if asked.

The new agency grew out of a pilot program for grocers, who can now make out one application, with which the state arranges the licenses and permits they need. That program, deemed a success, is being expanded to included everything from one-man corner drugstores to Weyerhauser and Boeing operations.

All of the 1,000-plus licenses won't be brought under the license center umbrella. The state now is choosing which ones will be included, and some may be abolished.

Washington State has a new "sunset" law under which the governor and legislature nominate state agencies and government functions for possible extinction. The new licensing idea has "an obvious tie-in," says Arrington.

The legislature appropriated $350,000 for the project - enough to crank up the 23-person office and run it for a year. Some of the employees are transfers from other agencies, and some are new state workers.

Arrington figures he needs another $700,000 to computerize the operation.

"We'll be doing the running around instead of the consumer," he says.

While agencies no longer will be dealing directly with the public in the area of licensing, they will retain licensing powers, he says.

"We will not, for instance, be ruling on whether a business can get a liquor license," Arrington says. "That will still be up to the Liquor Control Board, which will run a full investigation. We will be trying to facilitate."

Board Endorses Sadler

AUSTIN (AP)-Chairman Carroll Key of the Texas Joint Railway Labor Legislative Board announced Friday that the board has endorsed Jerry Sadler for railroad commissioner.

"Sadler made a name for himself on the commission as a consumer advocate before the term 'consumer advocate' was even invented," Kay said in a statement.

The board includes the Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees and the United Transportation Union.

Sadler and John Poerner are in a June 3 runoff for the place now held by Poerner, who was appointed late last year by Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

Sadler was elected to the commission in 1938 and quit four years later to enter military service.

EVA RICH ... Signs With San Angelo

Rich Signs With Angelo State

Eva Rich, Snyder volleyball all-stater, has signed a scholarship with Angelo State.

Miss Rich, who was named to three all-tournament teams, named all-district, all-region and all-state while playing under Coach Joyce Elrod here, inked the contract last week. She is one of only four girls awarded scholarships by the college.

A physical education major, Miss Rich plans to keep active.

"I'm going to play softball too, if they'll let me," she added. She played softball during the summer here and was named to the Senior all-star team. She will play again this season.

Miss Rich, who moved with her parents to Snyder from Big Spring last year, was recruited by the University of Houston, Lamar University and Abilene Christian University as well.

Why Angelo State?

"Well, they offered a better deal I think and they are supposed to have a good physical education department."

Coaching the Ram (ettes) next season will be Seminole's Kathleen Brasfield who took the Indians to a 3A state championship during the past season. Brasfield will also coach Miss Rich on June 16 when she competes on an all-star team for the Texas High School Girl's Coaches annual clinic in Abilene - just another of Miss Rich's honors.

'Can't Sag Off' Of Seattle, Warns Washington's Motta

SEATTLE (AP) - Dick Motta doesn't want to be guilty of underestimating an opponent - at least, not publicly.

"Seattle has great balance," said the Washington Bullets' coach. "Their starting five all play defense and all score. You can't sag off on any of those guys."

The Eastern Conference champions, winding up preparations for Sunday's first game of the best-of-seven National Basketball Association final series, will have to be alert to beat the Super Sonics, according to Motta.

"Seattle's a good defensive team," Motta said. "They funnel everything into center Marvin Webster, and he's a great shot-blocker."

Webster sparked the Sonics to a 123-108 victory Wednesday night over the Denver Nuggets, clinching the Western Conference championship. That was Seattle's 20th consecutive victory on its home court.

The Sonics will lose something of their home-court advantage in the finals because a mobile home show has been booked into the Seattle Center Coliseum next week. Thus, the second game of the series will be played at Landover, Md. instead of Seattle on Thursday night. Game 3 also will be at Landover, with Game 4 back in Seattle - but at the Kingdome instead of the Coliseum.

Motta feels the switch in sites for the second game could be crucial.

"That can make all the difference," he said. "It's big plus for us. When a team gets the home-court advantage, it gets the first two at home. Now they've lost that edge. If we can win the first game in Seattle, we'll be in the driver's seat."

The Bullets were on the other end of a similar situation in the playoff finals three years ago. They lost the series opener at home to Golden State, then lost the next two games on the road and eventually were swept in four.

This is the Bullets' 10th consecutive playoff appearance. Last year they were knocked out in the second round, but Motta attributes this year's improved showing to three factors:

"The addition of Bob Dandridge, who allows us to play both ends of the court and to take the pressure off Elvin Hayes.

"The growth and development of Kevin Grevey. We wouldn't be where we are today if he hadn't stepped in and filled the void when Phil Chenier was injured," Motta said.

"The acquisition of Charlie Johnson, who has given our team a new personality." Johnson, a veteran guard released by Golden State, joined Washington in January after Chenier was injured.

Dandridge, with an average 19.3 points per game, was second to Hayes, who averaged 19.4 during the regular season, while Grevey scored 15 points a game.

Tigers Will Host Burk

Snyder High School baseball team - sitting idle on the sidelines while District 4-AAA playoffs were being held last week - at least knows where it's headed now.

Right back out to Moffett Field.

The Tigers, 3-AAA champs for a second consecutive season, will host 4-AAA title holder Burkburnett - also a two-time winner - Monday at 5 p.m. here in the first of a best-of-three bi-district series. If rain befalls the contest, everything will simply be moved to Tuesday, same time, same place.

The final game, or two games if necessary, will be held in Burkburnett beginning at 1 p.m. Thursday.

"They looked real good offensively and defensively," relayed Snyder Coach Albert Lewis who saw Burkburnett rally from a one-game deficit to take Weatherford two-of-two Friday. "They (Burkburnett) outplayed them. It was playoff experience. Weatherford looked like the better team and came into the games sure of itself, but you could see the momentum just suddenly change."

Burkburnett, which the Tigers swept in two straight games last season for the bi-district title, welcomed back two veteran pitchers in Kevin Burke (11-2) and David Nix (5-5).

"It will be a good series," added Lewis. "They look like a little better hitting team than they were last year and that will hurt us some."

Burkburnett will come into Monday's game with a 16-8 record - and riding on the whirlwind of victories in 10 of its last 11 games.

Astros Whip Atlanta; Cabell Out Of Slump

HOUSTON (AP) - The first 18 days in May were not very merry for Houston third baseman Enos Cabell. But the 19th was a bell-ringer.

Batting only .156 since May 1, Cabell broke out of his slump by becoming the first Astro to collect four hits in a game this season while driving in three runs in Houston's 6-0 victory over Atlanta Friday night.

"First, I tried taking 20 to 25 minutes of extra batting practice before each game for a few days," said Cabell. "Then I stopped taking BP (batting practice) completely. It was just a matter of keeping my left arm down."

Floyd Bannister scattered seven hits in his first start since April 22 as he collected his second major league shut-out and his first victory in three decisions this season.

The Astros tagged losing pitcher Dick Ruthven, 2-4, for three first inning runs on a run-scoring single by Cabell and a two-run triple by Bob Watson.

Terry Puhl's RBI double and a two run single by Cabell highlighted a three-run Houston outburst in the fourth inning as the Astros took their fourth victory in their last five home games.

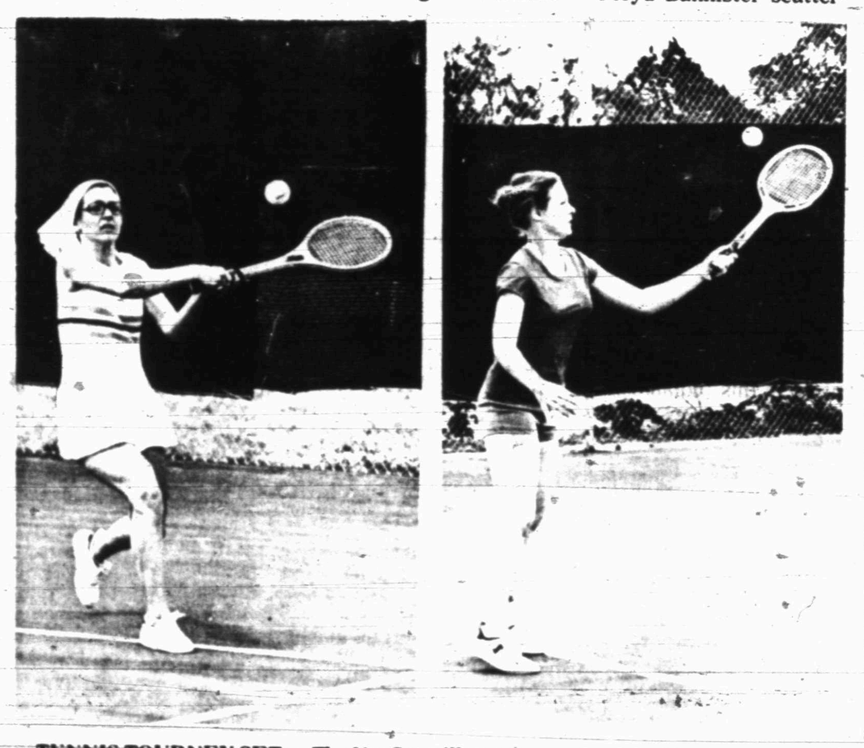

Puhl, who had two hits in four at bats, extended his hitting streak to 11 games, the longest by an Astro this season.

"That first win is always the toughest one," said Bannister, who walked only one and struck out six.

"I really felt tired out there in the first few innings. It took me a little while to get my rhythm going. It felt great to go all the way."

Atlanta Manager Bobby Cox, whose team lost for the 12th time in 16 road games this season, said Bannister got the Braves out in crucial situations.

"He seemed to get a strike out every time we had runners in scoring position. We just couldn't come up with the answer."

Off-Bench Tackle Recalled

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - Dick Maegle can tell almost immediately after the conversation starts that he's about to hear another "eye-witness" account of New Year's Day in the 1954 Cotton Bowl when Alabama's Tommy Lewis came off the bench to tackle Maegle in mid-touchdown run.

"They always say 'Oh yeah, I was sitting right behind the Alabama bench,' Maegle laughs. "Well, I must have talked to the entire east side of the stadium in the past 20 years because everyone seems to have been sitting right behind the bench."

Maegle has had plenty of opportunity to talk about being tackled by Lewis in the 20 years he's spent operating a motel across the street from Rice Stadium where he gained All-America stardom.

"It's good to be remembered and it is a good topic of conversation to get started talking," Maegle said. "But I'm always amazed at how many people were crowded into that section."

Lewis, who scored once for the Crimson Tide in a 28-6 loss, wrote himself into college football history with his action and took Maegle with him.

"Being in the hotel business you meet a lot of people in town on business or going to football game and when they find out I'm the guy who got tackled, they always want to talk about it," said Maegle.

Maegle might prefer after all these years to talk about some of his other accomplishments, like his single game bowl rushing record that still stands, or his performance against Baylor that allowed the Owls to reach the Cotton Bowl.

But all they want to hear about is the Lewis tackle, and Maegle patiently complies.

"To this day I can't believe he didn't know what he was doing," Maegle said. "All through your career you are taught that football is a disciplined game. So how can man be so regimented throughout his career and then in the biggest game of his career lose his cool and do something like that."

Maegle admitted he once thought of making a similar tackle during his pro career with the San Francisco 49ers when Chicago running back Willie Gallimore ran past him on the bench.

"He was doing one of his fancy deals in front of our bench but I just couldn't see myself doing it," Maegle said.

Maegle and Lewis' paths have crossed several times over the years since their first meeting in the Cotton Bowl.

We're not what you'd call buddy-buddy but we've talked several times," Maegle said of Lewis, who later played in the Canadian Football League.

D. Anderson slapped a triple and S. Bollinger added a double as the Tigers edged Red Devils following Snyder Girl's Softball Association opening ceremonies here Friday night.

L. Light knocked a pair of singles, as did D. Patrick, and Y. Anderson added one for the Tigers.

Hitting for the Red Devils were J. Giddens with two singles and P. Caldwell with one.

Rangerettes 10, Blue Bombers 8

Lightening-filled skies forced officials to call this game after four full innings Friday evening. Crissy Natividad socked a pair of singles for the Rangerettes. Teammate Tammie Robinson added another. The Rangerettes received 10 walks.

Susie Lee whipped a triple and a single for the Bombers. Lori Allen knocked a double and Lisa Rosas added a pair of first-baggers. Kimi Scott and Tonya Bennett each counted a basehit.

FARM LEAGUE

Indians 23, Braves 7

Only a few hits were indicated in this Indian-dominated contest. R.D. Stansell slapped a home run in the third and final inning and Mark Camire knocked a triple in the third. Mark Camire was the winning pitcher.

Giants 20, Athletics 5

Routs were the theme Friday as the Giants whipped the Athletics 20-5 in three innings.

Since time of substitutions were not mentioned, Kyle Layne and Bill Sheppard combined for two singles and a double; Brad Gambrell and Bryan Sherrard combined for a single; Tony Romero and Felix Gutierrez combined for three singles; Mike McKinney had three singles; Victor Bruns and Doug Vest combined for three singles; Robert Espinoza had two singles; David Holley knocked a single and Brent McFarland and Stephen Mack combined for a pair of singles for the Giants.

No hits were indicated for the Athletics. Kyle Layne, who received help from McKinney, was winning pitcher. Vincent Valdez took the loss.

LITTLE LEAGUE

Indians 16, Braves 6

Dude Jones, winning pitcher, slapped a double and three singles to hoist the Indians over the Braves Friday evening.

Aiding Jones were Willie Greathouse with a double and a single, and Todd Pollard, Chad Peterson and Tracy Koch with two singles each.

Eddie McClure knocked a double for the Braves, and teammates Kenneth Pickering, Lance Aldridge, Lee Minyard, John David Smith and Roy Overton added one each. Henry Alvarado took the loss.

Athletics 14, Giants 0

Rain forced the end of this lop-sided contest, paced by Jerry Comstock's triple and single for the A's. William Cotton, teammate, snared a double and a single and Jay Mayo added a pair of single base hits. John Murphy, Jeff Stewart, and Steve Stallcup added a single each for the Athletics.

The only hit shown for the Giants was a Fred Fleming single. Murphy took the apparent win - the Giants saw only two innings at bat - and Marty Gutierrez claims the loss if it stands.

Tully Snaps World Pole Vault Record

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP)- Mike Tully's perfect day of pole vaulting ended in confusion, but when the air had cleared, the UCLA senior had broken the world record set two years earlier just 40 miles down the road from here.

Tully's mark of 18 feet, $8\frac{3}{4}$-inches in Friday's Pacific - 8 Conference championships topped Dave Roberts' world mark set in Eugene, Ore., in the 1976 Olympic Trials by one-half inch.

The 21-year-old native of Long Beach, Calif., had a brisk breeze blowing at his back and he never missed starting at 17 feet, and progressing through 17-8, 18 feet and, finally over the world record height on his first try.

"The wind helps you run faster and it relaxes you," he said.

It also nearly cost him the world record.

After Tully had cleared the bar, the wind blew the bar to the ground. When officials replaced it and measured it, the height was only 18-8 - one-quarter inch short of the record.

However, international rules require a measurement only before the attempt, so Tully's record apparently will stand.

Some were calling it the best series of vaults ever, because Roberts missed three times when he set the record in 1976. After clearing 18 feet to clinch first place, Tully had the bar raised for the world record attempt.

"Conditions were perfect," he said, "but the officials could have been sharper."

He said it was apparent that Oregon State had not hosted many big track meets. He criticized the officials for taking too much time to measure the bar.

Campy Injured

SEATTLE (AP) - Texas Ranger shortstop Bert Campaneris will be sidelined about a week after suffering a cracked middle finger on the right hand during the first game of a double header Friday night with the Seattle Mariners, a club spokesman said.

Campaneris was attempting to put down a sacrifice bunt in the second inning of the American League baseball contest when he was struck by a pitch thrown by Seattle right-hander Dick Pole.

Jim Mason replaced Campaneris in the Texas lineup.

Request To Bale Set-Aside

AUSTIN (AP) - Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown wants grain sorghum farmers to have the right to bale their "set aside" crop as emergency fodder and hopes to show federal officials where it is needed.

Brown said he plans to fly the state Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service Committee over 10 drought-stricken counties in South Texas "where the prickly pears have dehydrated."

And he has invited federal farm officials along for the Monday flight.

"Grain sorghum set-aside acreage must be plowed up by June 23. I am asking Washington to let the farmers bale it so we can use it for emergency feeding of South Texas cattle," Brown said.

Farmers would sell the fodder for "whatever they could get," he said, probably little more than the cost of baling it.

Set-aside acreage represents crops that must be taken out of production in order to obtain federal supports.

"It doesn't make sense to plow under fodder when we have got starving cattle," Brown said in a telephone interview.

He said some federal officials are resisting his plea.

"If we can get them to come down and see this South Texas situation, more the better," he said.

In some areas, Brown said, starving cattle "are so weak they are having to pull them out of the auction rings."

Among the counties involved, he said, are Webb, Val Verde, Uvalde, Zavala, Zapata, Jim Hogg, Starr and Duval.

NOT FOR THE SIGHTED ONLY — Flowers can be enjoyed by the sighted as well as by the blind. Jack Greene can attest to that. Blinded in an oilfield accident in 1936, Greene keeps a small garden of alliums, a flower with a large purple bloom. (SDN Staff Photo)

Blind Gardener Enjoys Flowers, Pecan Trees

By JOHN LONG

The colorful beauty of flowers is a sight that only the sighted can fully appreciate, but even the blind can enjoy gardening. Just ask Jack Greene.

Blind 42 years, Greene maintains a garden of alliums, an unusual long-stemmed plant with a brilliant purple bloom. He weeds his own garden and takes care of the eight pecan trees around his home.

Inside his home, immaculate walls stare down on clean carpets, and the furniture bears no trace of dust. As two seeing-eye dogs loll about, Greene explains that he is helped in his chores by his wife and a housekeeper. His wife is also blind.

Greene was blinded in a Hobbs, N.M., oilfield accident Aug. 1, 1936. "I may forget my name, but I'll never forget that date," he said.

His wife of 31 years, Ola, lost her sight as a youngster due to congenital eye problems.

Although he has spent most of his 73 years as a blind man, Greene said he has never fully come to terms with his blindness.

"No," he said, "I don't think any adult is ever fully adjusted after losing his sight. There is no way to gain back what you lost. I don't sit around and cry about it because that doesn't do any good. But it's there."

"You never start to do anything but that you're handicapped by it," he added. Still, he has learned to cope with his blindness.

For relaxation he and his wife listen to television and radio. She reads braille, an art that has eluded him.

His wife is above average for a cook, he maintains, and can even sew on a sewing machine.

"We lead just about as normal a life as anybody else. It's just that our world is dark," he said.

At one time, Greene said, he could even read newspaper headlines. As his sight grew dimmer he could still distinguish between night and day. Now, even that little bit of sight is gone.

"I never figured anybody owed me anything but an opportunity," he said. "Not just blind people, but all handicapped people."

Although retired now, Greene has worked at a variety of jobs. He said he has sold everything from shoe laces to real estate. He has made mops and brooms, shined shoes, raised parakeets, and even rented out beds to oilfield workers. His wife has helped him in his endeavors, and even once worked as a secretary.

As the talk drifted back to gardening, Greene said the activity is more than just a hobby.

"No, it's more than just a hobby with me. It's just a part of living," he insists. "I can't get along in a rocking chair."

Declaration Of Disaster Areas Requested

AUSTIN (AP)-Gov. Dolph Briscoe said Friday he has asked the U.S. Department of Agriculture to declare Edwards, Frio, Pecos and Reeves Counties as disaster areas.

Such a declaration, Briscoe said, would assist farmers and ranchers in obtaining emergency loans to cover losses caused by drought from Jan. 1 through May 9.

The governor said he also had asked W.H. Pieratt, state director of the Farmers Home Administration, to declare Loving County a disaster area so farmers and ranchers may take part in emergency programs available through the administration.

Large fruit bats which live in colonies in the Philippines are often hunted for their flesh and fur.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Slow cure for weight problem

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm a 15 year old with drastic weight problems. I know you've probably heard this before but I've tried several diets, but to no avail. The low carbohydrate ones all sapped my strength and the calorie-restricted ones took too much courage and the fasting fad did me no good at all.

So as my final try I'm asking you for a diet that a school-going person could stick to without embarrassment. I weigh, and please keep this confidential, approximately 260 pounds.

If you have something please send it soon as I'm anxious to join my peers and become a social incast again.

DEAR READER — I never use names with columns so your identity is safe, unless you blow your cover by telling everyone your letter will be in my column.

Yes, your story is a bit familiar. And considering the enormous weight problem you have you will need medical supervision and help while reaching your goal. I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet, as it will provide a diet plan for you that is sensible and will help you lose weight gradually. It is a balanced diet. Others who want this plan can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Now a word of advice. Don't expect to become an incast overnight. You should not lose more than two pounds a week and one pound a week is fine. That is the only way to diet safely and get results. So you are looking at a long-term project. Your doctor will know if you have any underlying medical problems that are related to your obesity that need special management.

Do take full advantage of exercise to help you lose weight. For very heavy people I usually recommend walking. Start walking and walk and walk and walk. The more you are able to increase your walking every day the more effective your program will be and the better you will feel while doing it. That will also help you save your valuable muscles as the fat peels off.

Set some intermediate goals based on a one pound a week rate and chart your progress. It will be a morale booster as you go along and see yourself meet or beat your goals. If you have the will power to stick with it you can do it.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Could you possibly give me some information on hair care and baldness? At 21 I still have a full head of hair, of course, but would like to keep it that way.

DEAR READER — Don't say 'of course' because some young men have male pattern baldness at the forehead area very early in life.

The most practical thing I can tell you is to keep your hair clean. Some people have more trouble with oily scalp than others. A mild shampoo used as often as necessary, even if that means daily, helps keep hair healthy. The accumulation of oily secretions can lead to inflammations and processes similar to acne. The resulting inflammation can affect the hair follicles.

As a male you may not have to worry about curlers, pony tails and hot combs (although many males do use everything women use). In general anything that pulls or tightens the hair may cause injury to the hair. Loose hair treated as naturally as possible and kept clean is your best bet. Bleaches, dyes and exotic treatments are not natural and some pay the price by having less than an optimally healthy head of hair. Like many other aspects of health, nature's way is the best way.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My wife is 52 and her doctor says she has been in the menopause for seven years, but she still menstruates. Now the question is this, can she become pregnant as long as she menstruates even though she is 52? She says yes, I say no. Who is right? She hasn't let me touch her for seven years. I would like to know if she is handing me a line or telling me the truth.

DEAR READER — This question comes in regularly which indicates how many people do not know what to do about sex at or after the change in life. There is no valid record of any woman having a baby after 57 years of age. Women seldom if ever get pregnant if they have apparently completed the menopause and have not menstruated for two years — some doctors say one year. Many women have artificial menstruation induced by taking hormones part of the month and stopping them — as can occur with birth control pills.

If your wife is having real menstruation, not induced by pills, she is ovulating and indeed can get pregnant. If it is artificial menstruation from periodic stopping of hormones then you need an answer from her doctor. In any case many women who can get pregnant do have sex relations with their husband by using any number of precautions. The ability of a woman to get pregnant is not a valid reason for refusing to have sex. It sounds like you need to see a marriage counselor to improve your marriage.

To give you more information about the menopause I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-12, Menopause. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 77 years young and my heels have been hurting a lot. I went to a foot doctor and was told I have spurs. He has given me shots once a week for 19 weeks in the back of the toes or on the side of the heel. What are spurs? Do you think the shots will do any good?

DEAR READER — A heel spur is simply a bony spike or spine that grows on the bottom of the heel bone. It may be years in forming. The pain is usually not from the spur itself but the inflamed tissues around the spur.

Why does the spur form? The tendons and tough fiberous tissues of the arch of the foot attach here. If your shoes or occupation constantly put a strain on these they pull and irritate the heel bone where they attach. The spur grows in response to the repeated pulling.

This fact is the basis for the best treatment — get the pull off the attachment to the heel. That is helped some by a pad under the heel as it throws the foot forward and takes some of the strain off the arch. Another method is to put an inlay at the inner surface of the shoe so the weight is shifted to the outside of the foot with less strain on the arch and hence less pull. In a few weeks such a shift in weight will often bring relief.

I don't know what injections your doctor is giving you but I doubt they will relieve the fundamental problem described above. I would prefer to see a more direct approach to the fundamental problem.

You can get some help by staying off your feet but I don't like the inactivity that imposes on a person. In rare cases surgery is required but most cases will respond to good orthopedic principles that take the strain off the arch and stops pulling at the attachment to the heel.

700 Ill From Bad Water

WEST PLAINS, Mo. (AP)-Although the leak has been plugged, officials say they do not know how long it will be before the raw sewage dumped into underground caverns in northern Arkansas and southern Missouri flushes out.

At least 700 people were reported ill Friday night with an intestinal disturbance apparently contracted from drinking the tainted water. At least 10 were hospitalized.

Bottled water was selling for as much as $1 a gallon in much of the area and residents of Oregon and Howell counties in Missouri and Sharp, Baxter, Fulton and Randolph counties in Arkansas were urged to boil their drinking and cooking water.

One area official said there were likely hundreds more who were not seeking medical help.

"We've got some people who just figure they're sick," said A.D. Pierce, mayor of nearby Thayer, Mo. "And we've got some who are just too poor and too ignorant to know enough to boil water even if they hear the warning."

And Pierce said others were scared. "They don't know where to turn. They don't know where all this is going to end."

ASTRO-GRAPH

Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

May 21, 1978

You will have abundant opportunity to exercise your creative faculties in a variety of projects this coming year. Remember, it's not how much you do, but how well you function on individual items.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You don't stand a ghost of a chance of getting others to do your bidding today. Roll up those sleeves and do what needs to be done. Like to find out more of what lies ahead for you? Send for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter by mailing 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph Letter, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Blowing your top today over past spending will serve no purpose, but a lesson can be learned in budgeting if you review your financial situation realistically.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Think twice before attempting to dictate to others today. Even the lesser lights will fight back rather than be ordered about today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't allow your dark thoughts to run rampant or you'll create a severe case of depression for yourself today. A negative attitude never solved anything.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you can't afford to financially assist an old pal today, at least try to see if you can't come up with some sound suggestions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't let vanity and pride force you to be self-seeking today. You'll receive recognition and praise quicker if you humble yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If something's bugging you today, suffer in silence, put on a happy face and shortly your woes will disappear.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you're looking for praise or reward for efforts in behalf of friends, you could be in for a big letdown today. They'll be too wrapped-up in themselves.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be careful today that being No. 1 doesn't become too important. It isn't worth alienating associates in order to grab the brass ring.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It may be better to temporarily shelve a project today than to put forth a dismal effort. Come back to it later when it's a labor of love.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Select companions wisely today. Avoid a pal who has a chip on his shoulder. He could involve you in some embarrassing moments.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Sparks will fly the minute anyone displays a selfish attitude at home today. Be ready to cooperate. Do your part to keep the peace.

Your Birthday

May 22, 1978

This coming year you're likely to find you will be luckiest in situations where you rely on yourself rather than others. Don't be afraid to function in an independent manner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Strive to be less assertive in one-to-one relationships today. You could be thought to be overbearing or domineering and turn off people who are important to you. Find out who you're romantically suited to by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're pressing your outer perimeters regarding things that you neglected to do. Continued digression will make catching up extremely difficult.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Subdue any tendencies today to take outlandish gambles on hearsay information from friends. Impulsive actions could seriously bruise your purse.

VIRGO (Aug 23-Sept. 22) Disharmony is likely at home today if you take a "don't do as I do, but do as I say" posture. Set the example, not the rules.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A philosophy that has proven beneficial for you is not necessarily tailored to the needs of another. To impose your ideas is to ask for trouble.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Business dealings could be fraught with complications today. Should you find yourself getting into something sticky, back off. Don't get stuck.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In a situation where you share an interest, bend over backwards to be fair today. Failure to do so could provoke a serious disagreement.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Co-workers may be a bit difficult today, especially if you become a self-appointed supervisor. Tend to your own job.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Members of the opposite sex may not see you as charismatic today as you think you are. Come on too strong and someone could puncture your ego.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Stay well within your own sphere of influence today. Trying to project your authority could result in your being out of bounds.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll have little tolerance for anyone who doesn't completely go along with your ideas today. Exercise a bit of patience or angry words might follow.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This is one of those rainy days you should have saved your pennies for. If not, you might find your wallet holding nothing but faded photographs.

Foreign Firms Have 'Buy America' Bug

by KRISTIN GOFF
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Although foreign investment in the United States dates back to the founding of the colonies, the "buy America" bug is experiencing a new wave of enthusiam among foreign companies.

Within the past few years, there has been a dramatic increase in the number of foreign owned operations opening plants in the United States, or buying into U.S. companies. Real estate purchases also appear to be on the rise.

Purchases of farmland are particularly sensitive and difficult to track because foreign investors sometimes work through third parties to avoid the hostility of farmers who worry that prices will skyrocket and the land will lay idle.

In one such case, near Wichita Falls, Texas, wealthy Arabs reportedly purchased a tract of land for $1,000 an acre last year when the going price should have been around $350 an acre, according to David Edwards who is researching a book on international financing.

Some states are considering, or already have laws, to limit foreign ownership of land or other property. But in other areas foreign investors are being actively wooed because new businesses mean new jobs.

The State of Pennsylvania, for instance, was jubilant when Volkswagen chose New Stanton as the site for its first U.S. production plant. So far about 1,200 new jobs have been provided and officials estimate that eventually will grow to 5,000.

Because there are no reporting requirements for foreign investment, no one knows the total amount or types of investment and purchases.

But Richard Apcar, a Commerce Department economist, notes it "has very definitely gone up in the past 10 years."

In other business developments this past week:

—The cost of mailing a letter will be going up on May 29 to 15 cents, two cents higher than the current first class letter rate.

—The total of wages, salaries and other personal income jumped sharply in April, in what economists saw as a sign that spending will remain strong and continue to spur the economy.

—The White House proposed a government tax credit program for private businesses who hire poor young workers. Government officials say the plan could result in nearly two million jobs for economically disadvantages workers under age 24.

—Profits of corporations declined in the first quarter of this year, the government said. But Commerce Department officials predicted a rebound in the spring quarter. After tax profits in the first three months slipped 2 percent to $102.9 billion after rising 1.3 percent in the previous quarter.

—The Commerce Department also revised its earlier report on Gross National Product in the first three months, but it still showed a decline. The revised figure showed GNP fell at an annual rate of .4 percent instead of the .6 percent decline it initially reported.

The Monitor, a prototype armor-clad warship used by the Union Army during the Civil War, almost sank twice while steaming to Chesapeake Bay for its historic encounter with the Merrimack. On its next mission, it sank off Cape Hatteras.

Jimmy 'Runt', Then There Was Billy

ATLANTA (AP)-"Miss Lillian" Carter, saying her son Jimmy was "a runt" when he was born, told an Atlanta audience that "if I get pregnant again, I'm going to have a mid-wife."

President Carter's 79-year-mother spoke Friday night to a conference of the National Association of Parents and Professionals for Safe Alternatives in Childbirth.

When her youngest son Billy was born, "we never knew where he came from," Miss Lillian joked. "My husband...said it wasn't his."

Billy and Sibyl Carter, the president's brother and sister-in-law, also addressed the group, relating their experience with a midwife in the birth of their youngest child, 19-month-old Earl.

SCD Chairman Attends Session

W.L. Wilson, Jr., Chairman of the Upper Colorado Soil and Water Conservation District Board of Directors was among some 200 conservation leaders attending a statewide meeting in Stephenville on Tuesday to discuss the Resources Conservation Act of 1977.

George C. Marks, state conservationist for the USDA Soil Conservation Service, and Carl Spencer, executive director of the Texas State Soil and Water Conservation Board, served as co-chairman of the meeting.

Wilson, said that the meeting was held as a result of the Resources Conservation Act of 1977.

"The act recognizes the need for public participation to insure that conservation program are responsive to public needs," Wilson said. "Individuals and groups with an interest in conservation were invited to attend the meeting.

"One point I want to make clear is that districts in their 40-year history have always assisted landowners with voluntary conservation programs on their farms and ranches. We do not advocate any other approach since farm and ranch land is privately owned and that the interests and welfare of the owners must be served. Programs must be acceptable to them," added Wilson.

Some 50 individuals presented oral statements reflecting the direction they think conservation programs should take in the future, and a large number of others presented written statements. All statements were made a part of the record and will be considered fully in developing an effective, workable conservation policy and program for the future," Wilson said.

The Resource Conservation Act meeting in the Upper Colorado Soil and Water Conservation District will be held at 1:30 p.m. on Monday, June 26, in the City Council Room of the Snyder City Hall, 1925 24th Street, Snyder, Texas, Wilson said. Further details will be announced later.

For her headpiece, the bride wore a halo of pearls, flowers and beads with long satin ribbon streamers, each with its own flower at the end. She carried a bouquet of two dozen yellow rosebuds, tulle, baby's breath and streamers of yellow and white lace ribbon.

Boyd, Pierce Exchange Vows In Arlington

Retha Sue Boyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abner M. Boyd of Snyder and Kenneth Michael Pierce, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth R. Pierce of Evansville, Ind. were united in marriage May 6th in Arlington. Rev. David George presided over the double ring ceremony held at Lake Arlington Baptist Church.

The church was decorated with 30 votive candles set upon two spiral brass candleabra entwined with greenery and white ribbon. In the center of the church was a brass archway of 15 or more votive candles, also entwined with greenery and ribbons. A brass prayer bench was placed in front of this archway. Baskets of white and yellow daisies and gladiolas were placed on either side of the archway.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a white organdy empire gown with a chapel train. The hemline of the sleeveless gown was lined with two ruffles and cotton lace trim. The bodice had a heart-shaped neckline and was accented with lace trim. The bride also wore a picture hat with a veil of illusion over the face and falling to the floor behind. The crown of the hat was accented with white satin ribbon and a bouquet of flowers. To carry out the tradition the bride wore for something old a pair of earrings purchased for her paternal grandmother in 1892. Something new was a gold locket, a gift from the groom and something borrowed, her hat belonging to her sister-in-law, Triva Boyd and A blue garter made by the bride's aunt, Mrs. A. E. Sumruld of Big Spring. The bride carried a nosegay of spring flowers.

Vicki Stephens, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a four-tiered gown of navy and white polka dots trimmed with eyelet lace. Her white picture hat was trimmed with navy ribbon and a navy rose. She carried a nosegay of spring flowers similar to the bride's.

Flower girls were Shannon Stephens, niece of the bride and Laura Greenwood, niece of the groom. They wore matching dresses of navy and white polka dot over which were worn tabards of white eyelet with ribbon ties at the sides. They also wore white picture hats trimmed with navy ribbon and three white flowers and carried white baskets trimmed with ribbon and filled with flower petals. Ring bearer was Marci Greenwood also a niece of the groom. She was dressed identically to the flower girls and carried a heart-shaped pillow covered with spring flowers. The dresses worn by the flower girls and ring bearer were made by Raye Sterling, aunt of the bride.

MRS. KENNETH MICHAEL PIERCE

Mark Greenwood of Conroe served his brother-in-law as best man. He wore a tuxedo of navy and a white ruffled shirt. The groom was dressed in a white tuxedo. Ushers were John Boyd of Snyder and Michael Stephens of Arlington.

Melinda Stephens of Tulia was candle lighter. Leslie Lee of Arlington was organist and Anthony Hoylen of New Mexico sang "With You" from the broadway musical 'Pippin' and "The Wedding Song".

The houseparty included Triva Boyd of Snyder; Fielda Blair of Lorraine; Debra Billow of Erie Pa.; Daphne Wyche of Fort Worth, and Virginia Fulks of Tulia. The cakes were made by Jeanette Wall, a cousin of the bride.

The groom's parents hosted a rehearsal dinner at the Glenn Garden Country Club on Friday, May 5th.

The couple are at home at 5101 Cockrell, Fort Worth. The groom is a graduate of Purdue University and employed by Hensley Industries in Dallas. The bride recently received her master of fine arts in theatre from TCU.

Shower Honors Mother, Twins

Mrs. Jerry (Karen) Parker and twin daughters, Stacey and Lacey, were honored with a baby shower Tuesday evening at the multi-purpose building of the East Side Church of Christ.

The honorees were presented infant carriers as the gifts from the hostesses. Guests were served refreshments.

Hostesses were Mmes. Jim Saunders, Jimmy Cullar, Ed Neeley, William Stone, Joe Cheyne, John Hedges, Jerry Jolly and Bobby Dean.

Wives Play In Job Moves

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) - More than half of the proposed male executive career changes never take place because the organizations offering jobs fail to consider the wife's interests as well as where and how she wants to live, a national executive research firm based here estimates.

In many cases a wife may determine whether or not an executive will make the move from one company to another, says Ron Kelly, vice president of corporate development for Weatherby Associates.

The selection of a good real estate firm to show people around a new town, Kelly says, is an overlooked but important element in the hiring process. He suggests that corporations give relocation assignments to a competent staff member who will take the time to research thoroughly the religious, cultural, educationl and social needs of the prospect and his family, and then pass this information on to the home broker.

Peter, Paul And Mary To Reunite

NEW YORK (AP) - The rich harmonies and message-filled lyrics of Peter, Paul and Mary will be heard in concert this summer for the first time since 1971.

The trio, perhaps the most popular folk music group of the 1960s, announced at a news conference Wednesday that it will reunite for a 17-city tour and also produce two record albums.

Mary Travers said the tour will run from mid-August to mid-September, and that the group would consider making a television special this winter.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

The unlucky expert had cornered us again. This time his complaint was about his partner. Let's quote from his tirade.

"As you can see from the bidding, it wasn't much of a game. Imagine North jumping to six with only one ace. However, South wrapped up the slam after my partner opened the deuce of clubs. South's ace took my king. He led a trump to my ace and I had to guess whether to lead back a club or a heart. I was sure of one thing. My partner had led fourth best so declarer had one more club. I did lead a club on the theory that if my parnter held an ace he would have opened it."

We have some sympathy for the unlucky expert, but very little of it. We agree that West should have led his ace of hearts against the slam. However, East had given himself that third trick guess when he made the wrong play at trick one.

It was unthinkable that West would underlead an ace against that slam. Therefore, East should play his jack of clubs at trick one. Now when South wins with the queen East will know enough to lead a heart at trick three.

Ask the Experts

A Vermont reader wants to know if we think that any comparatively unknown player could be one of the greatest of all time.

Merwyn D. (Jimmy) Maier, who died in 1942 at the age of 32, had already won the Vanderbilt and Spingold Cups twice each, and, in Oswald Jacoby's opinion, Jimmy was likely to be the greatest player of all time.

It will soon be time for us to take out all of our canning supplies and get ready for another big year of food preservation. One item of canning equipment we need to take extra care to check on is your pressure canner. Here is a list of checks you need to make before using the pressure canner.

Clean removable petcocks and safety valves, using vinegar to remove any corrosion.

—Clean openings in lid of canner using a toothpick, pipe cleaner or string.

—Check gasket for tight fit and be sure it's free from grease and dirt.

—Use salt-free fat to grease the closing surface of lid that seals metal to metal, if it's difficult to remove or if steam escapes.

—Tighten screws on handles.

—Use plumber's paste to close nicks that allow steam to escape.

—Remove odors and stains using one of the following mixtures and processing at five pounds pressure for five minutes: juice of one lemon in two quarts water or two tablespoons vinegar in two quarts water.

—Check dial gauge using a maximum thermometer or master gauge tester. A weight gauge needs only to be cleaned according to manufacturer's directions.

This coming Thursday, May 25, there will be a special food preservation workshop to be held in the Scurry County Coliseum Annex foyer. At 10 a.m. we will all enjoy a special presentation concerning "Drying Fruits and Vegetables." If you have been experiencing difficulty in canning, freezing or any other type of food preservation, please bring your questions, we will certainly try to help you with answers. Handout references for you to use will be given out at the meeting.

The Knit Knacks Sewing Classes are still continuing on Friday mornings at 9:30. This week I will be teaching a different technique for using elastic at the waistband of pants or skirts. Special fitting of knit slacks will also be shown. You are invited to this class even if you were unable to attend the first classes. The classes are free of charge. If you do have any questions please feel free to call 573-5423.

FLOWER SHOW AND MUSIC — Mrs. Gertrude League pictured on the right, presented a flower show to residents at Leisure Lodge during Texas Nursing Home Week. Songs played were "Peg Of My Heart," "Springtime in the Rockies," "Moonglow" And Picnic," "I'm In The Mood For Love," "Beautiful Ohio" and many others.

Crime Up In Small Towns

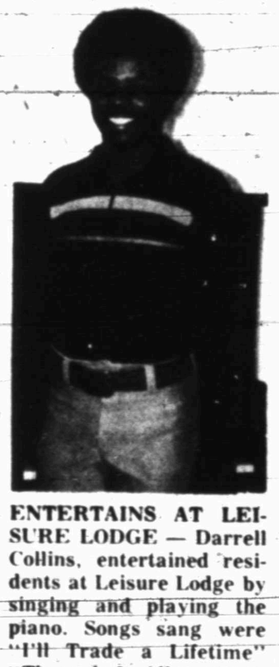

WASHINGTON (AP) Small towns in the South and West may replace large cities as places where the public is most apprehensive about crime, pollster Lou Harris says.

Already, residents of small towns are reporting the largest increase in crime, Harris told the congressional Joint Economic Committee on Wednesday.

"It is entirely conceivable that small towns will inherit many of the apprehensions that have beset the cities for over a decade now," Harris said.

Harris said Americans are worrying less about safety in the streets and for the first time since 1967, a majority of Americans feel crime is not increasing.

The future of large cities is not bleak, Harris commented, because they remain "the central hub, the central pivot of American society in the late 1970's, and the indications are that this will accelerate rather than decline."

ENTERTAINS AT LEISURE LODGE — Darrell Collins, entertained residents at Leisure Lodge by singing and playing the piano. Songs sang were "I'll Trade a Lifetime" "Through It All," "Walk Around Heaven All Day" and others.

"I JOINED THE LOSING TEAM AND I LOVE EVERY MINUTE OF IT."

That's what Judy Schultz of Lubbock says about the Weight Watchers Program.

Judy is 35 pounds lighter than she was six years ago. That's when she attended her first Weight Watchers meeting. Now she says, "I'm a lifetime member of Weight Watchers, and I'm confident that I can keep my weight this low with the Weight Watchers Maintenance Plan."

Isn't it time for you to check in and join the losing team? There is one near you.

Should He Marry Wandering Widow?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My wife died 18 months ago, and this lady I'm interested in has been a widow for three years. We knew each other "way back when." I'm 66 and this lady is 63.

Before I renew our friendship, I'd like to ask you a few questions. Since her husband died, she's had several men staying with her (one at a time) in her one-bedroom trailer. I've also heard that she has visited an old farmer at his farmhouse (just the two of them) for days at a time.

Last week she headed for Colorado with another old buddy in his camper truck. She said she planned to sleep in motels on the way, and he would sleep in the truck; she didn't say where they would sleep once they got to Colorado.

Now, Abby, I don't want to marry a woman who has a bad reputation. She's the talk of this little town, but she is really a very high-class lady and everybody likes her. What is your advice?

FRANK IN FLORIDA

DEAR FRANK: It seems almost a disservice to the community to take this aging swinger out of circulation—if indeed you could. But if you regard this woman as a "high-class lady," any advice I could give you would fall on deaf ears. And your vision isn't too good, either.

DEAR ABBY: I have recently moved into a high-rise apartment, live alone, and have a problem that I imagine other single girls who live alone must have. (I am 20 and am saving myself for marriage.)

When my date brings me home, should we say good-night in the lobby, where the doorman, night watchman and tenants can watch us? Or should I ask my date to walk me to my apartment door and say good-night there? Or should I invite him to step into my apartment to say good-night?

When I first moved here, I let my date step into my apartment to thank him for the lovely evening and it ended up in a one-hour wrestling match. I had a terrible time getting rid of him.

Please answer soon as I have no mother to ask.

SAVING MYSELF IN TULSA

DEAR SAVING: A girl's date should always see her safely to her door. Don't allow anyone to "step inside" if you have any doubts about how he will behave once he's inside. Even the most careful girls sometimes misjudge a man, so should you find yourself with the "wrestling" type, don't say "good-night"—say "GOOD-BYE!"

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old girl who has a very unhappy home life. My folks have been fighting ever since I can remember. They treat me like dirt, and I want to tell you, it is miserable and rotten.

My boyfriend, Brad, is 18, and he comes from a home that's even rottener, if there is such a word. His folks not only fight all the time, but his father beats on his mother. Anyway, Brad has been crazy about me ever since 7th grade and we are thinking of getting married when he graduates from high school in June. He plans to work days at a garage and go to trade school for mechanics at night. He's real good with cars and motors.

Should I quit school and get a job when Brad graduates? I'd have only a year to go, and could finish later. We wouldn't have much money, but we wouldn't need much, and at least we'd have each other. I need advice. Thank you.

TEARS ON MY PILLOW

DEAR TEARS: Don't use marriage as an excuse to get out of the house—no matter how "miserable" it is. I urge you to finish high school while you have the chance. The "later" you mention rarely comes. Children usually do, instead.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Supplemental Supply Of Energy Projected

By MAX B. SKELTON
AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP)-The American Gas Association estimates supplemental supply sources hold a potential of producing nearly 15 trillion cubic feet of gas annually by the year 2000.

Such supplemental sources include the vast natural gas reserves of Alaska's North Slope, liquefied imports, and coal gasification.

The AGDA study says the supplemental sources account for $97.4 billion of the $204.1 billion the natural gas utility industry will require in capital investments over the next 22 years.

The remainder of the $204.1 billion includes $77.9 billion for utility and pipeline construction and $28.8 billion for conventional exploration and development.

Capital costs were estimated on the basis of adjusting announced project costs to 1977 dollars and assuming no real inflation in construction costs over general inflation in the economy.

The GAG believes the 15 trillion cubic foot annual production level from supplemental supply sources is achievable and that such a level combined with conventional lower-48 supplies would permit gas to retain its current 30 percent contribution to total domestic energy consumption.

Supplemental supplies were projected to increase from 1.3 trillion cubic feet in 1976 to 2.9 by 1980, 5.7 by 1985, 8.7 by 1990, 11.8 by 1995, and to 14.8 trillion cubic feet by 2000.

The 1976 supplies included 1 trillion cubic feet of natural gas from Canada, 300 billion in substitute natural gas from liquids, and 10 billion cubic feet in liquefield natural gas imports.

Canadian supplies were projected to increase to 1.4 trillion cubic feet by 1980 but drop to 1.1 trillion by 1990, 1 trillion by 1995, and to 800 billion cubic feet by 2000.

Substitute supplies from liquids are expected to remain steady after moving to 500 billion cubic feet by 1980 and to 900 billion by 1985.

Projections for liquefied imports indicate 600 billion cubic feet by 1980, 1.6 trillion by 1985, 2.4 trillion by 1990, and 3 trillion cubic feet by 1995.

Supplies from Alaska, coal gasification, and new technologies do not appear in the projections until 1985.

Supplies from the Cook Inlet and other regions of southern Alaska would be transported by liquefied gas tankers. They are projected to approximate 100 billion cubic feet by 1985, 200 billion by 1990, 300 billion by 1995 and 600 billion by 2000.

North Slope supplies were estimated at 700 billion by 1985, 1.4 trillion by 1990, 2.2 trillion by 1995, and 3 trillion cubic feet by 2000.

Coal gasification first appears in the projections at 200 billion cubic feet by 1985 but is expected to rise to 4 trillion cubic feet by 2000. The 1900 estimate is 1.2 trillion and this is expected to climb to 2.4 trillion by 1995.

Supplies from new technologies were projected at 100 billion by 1985, 500 billion by 1990, 1 trillion by 1995, and 1.5 trillion by 2000.

The AGA said unconventional in-place gas resources requiring new improved technology to permit economic recovery are substantial. Such methane resources, the report said, include 300 to 800 trillion cubic feet in coalbeds, 600 trillion in tight formations, 300 trillion or more in geopressured zones, and 500 to 600 trillion in Devonian shale.

"For some of these sources, technology already permits production on a small commercial scale," the AGA report said. "For most, economic incentives will be needed before full scale commercialization can be realized."

Boll Weevil Trap Survey

The first week of boll weevil trapping indicated very few weevils. This was the indication after checking approximately 300 fields. The first survey was conducted Monday May 15 and is a limited report, but indicates that the past two years diapause program and the hard winters have reduced the number of emerging overwinter weevils.

Pink Eye In Cattle

With the advent of hot dry weather livestock producers should be on the lookout for the appearance of pink eye in their cattle. "Pinkeye" is an infectious eye disease of cattle of all ages and breeds, however younger animals under two years of age appear to be more susceptible than older ones.

A bacterial organism called Moraxella bovis can often be found in the secretion from the eyes of infected cattle. This organism has been reported to live in face flies for up to three days and an outbreak of pink eye is often associated with a high face fly population. A virus disease called infectious bovine rhinotracheitis (IBR) is sometimes associated with pink eye. Irritants such as intense sunlight, dust, pollen, seeds, lawns and tall grass seem to be capable of irritating the eye predisposing to the infection.

Cattle with unpigmented skin around the eyes seem to be affected more frequently, however severe outbreaks have occurred in black cattle. Once an animal recovers from the infection a temporary immunity develops, building up a resistance to further outbreaks for about a year. These cattle can still serve as a source of infection to other susceptible animals.

Preventive measures are well worth the effort since research has indicated that a suppression of weight gains may exceed 30 lbs. in calves affected with pink eye in both eyes. This could mean a $15 loss in 50 cent calves.

Some factors that can help prevent the spread of severity of the infection consist of fly control, pasture management, use of Vitamin A where this is lacking, and prompt treatment of the infection with anti-bacterial preparations.

1. Vitamin A does not necessarily prevent pink eye, but deficiencies in dry pastures may allow the eye tissues to be affected more easily.

2. Pastures should be clipped to eliminate the seed heads and to keep the stubble below eye level so as to avoid irritating the corneal eye tissue.

3. Fly control can be carried out through the use of sprays, dust bags, back rubbers, or by hand dusting in small herds.

Treatment of infected animals is more succesful if started early when the first signs appear. If infected animals can be kept in separate pastures this will help minimize the spread of the disease and make it easier for follow-up treatment if necessary.

Researchers have tried for years to produce an effective vaccine, but have been unsuccessful to date.

Statistics of boating accidents indicate the heaviest fatalities are usually among boat operators aged 20 to 28 and most often occur on a Saturday or Sunday afternoon in June or July.

Zoom . . . here come the kid race drivers

The young drivers race around tracks that are ½ of a mile around. In some ways, the cars look like mini-Indy racers.

Boys and girls . . . start your motors!

Quarter Midget racing is for kids from 5 to 15.

There are Quarter Midget racing clubs in almost every state. There is one in Canada, too.

Quarter Midget racing is a family sport. Mothers are usually timers and scorers. Fathers act as crew chiefs.

The kids drive tiny midget cars that can go as fast as 36 miles per hour. Older kids can go even faster.

Safety is very important. All drivers take a driving course. They must wear leather jackets, gloves, helmets and goggles. The cars are specially built for safety.

The people who run the sport say that it is not any more dangerous than riding a bike. There are pile-ups, but no one has been badly hurt.

In August, the group will hold its Grand National Race in Toledo, Ohio.

This might not be Indy, but 450 mini-cars and mini-drivers turned out for last year's race.

Bobby Olivero, 31, of Lakewood, California, started driving Quarter Midgets when he was only 6 years old.

Look at him now. He was an outstanding rookie in last year's Indy race. He was forced out in the 57th lap because of engine trouble.

Maybe, someday, Indy . . .

This Quarter Midget driver might be dreaming about driving in the Indy someday.

The idea behind Quarter Midget racing is not to train pro race drivers. It's to have fun and teach good-on-the-road manners.

But who knows?

The Snyder (Tex.) Daily News — By BETTY DEBNAM — Sun., May 21, 1978

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is oval shaped and 2 and 1/2 miles long. Drivers must go 200 laps to finish the race.

The biggie at Indy

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.— A big car race is coming up on May 28.

It's the Indy 500.

"Indy" stands for Indianapolis where the famous motor speedway is.

The "500" stands for the number of miles the cars have to go.

To enter, cars must qualify in trials held before the race. About 80 cars enter. Only 33 make the final race.

This race pays more money than any other car race in the USA.

Over $1,000,000 is divided among the winners.

All 33 drivers earn at least $15,000 in prize money. The winner gets about $250,000.

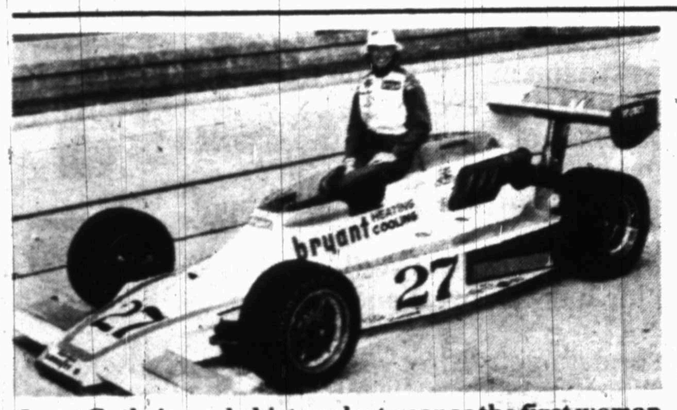

A.J. Foyt Jr.'s pit crew in action. A pit is a special place where drivers pull off the track. Each driver has a trained crew of eight to help him keep the car rolling. A.J. Foyt Jr. won last year's Indy.

Find these things in the picture.

- wheels
- helmet
- hat
- woman
- cars
- shirts

There is no "time out" in Indy racing. Every second counts. All cars going the full 500 miles must make eight or nine pit stops for fuel and new tires. The better pit crews are very speedy. In about 16 seconds, they can change two tires and put in 30 to 40 gallons of fuel.

Janet Guthrie made history last year as the first woman to ever race in the Indy 500. She had to drop out on the 27th lap because of engine trouble.

Indy cars are low to the ground. The more-than-800 horsepower engine is usually behind the driver. The cars have open cockpits and open wheels (no fenders). These cars can go as fast as 200 miles per hour. They can cost as much as $100,000 each. It takes about 3½ hours to finish the 200 laps.

To do: Make a list of five key words that tell you about the Indy 500.

Science Mystery?

Mystery: What is hard water?

Finding out:

1. Fill two small jars half full of water.
2. Put ¼ teaspoon salt in one jar and stir until salt dissolves.
3. Place a ball of soap about the size of a pea in each jar.
4. Put lids on the jars and shake about 15 times.

What difference do you see?
Which jar has the most suds?

Which one do you think will wash a dirty item best? Clue: Chemicals dissolve in water to make the water "hard." The dissolved chemicals keep the soap from making many suds. Try sugar to see if it will make the water "hard." How about baking soda?

Construction Costs Up 18%

AUSTIN (AP)-The average cost of building a house in Texas during the first three months of 1978 was $40,800-an 18 percent increase from the same period last year, a University of Texas researcher reported Saturday.

Average construction valuations of over $50,000 for new single-family dwellings were posted in Midland-Odessa, Longview-Tyler and in Abilene, reported Janet Tandy of UT's Bureau of Business Research.

At $20,600 per house, the Laredo area registered the lowest average estimated cost of production for single-family houses, Ms. Tandy said.

She said the value of new construction in Texas rose by 38 percent in the first quarter of 1978 to $1.6 billion.

Of that total, $967 million was for new residential construction, with single family dwellings accounting for 74 percent.

The valuation for total new construction declined from the 1977 level in Amarillo, Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange, Galveston-Texas City, Longview, Odessa, San Angelo and Tyler. Only Longview, however, showed declines in residential and nonresidential valuations.

During the first quarter of this year, 29.5 percent of all new construction valuation was concentrated in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, with Houston getting a 26.2 percent share.

Four metropolitan areas -Texarkana, Midland, Corpus Christi and Wichita Falls - had gains of over 100 percent in valuations of new construction from the first quarter of 1977 to 1978. Austin showed a 99 percent increase.

Midland had the highest per capital dollar volume of new construction-$330, followed by Bryan-College Station $218, Austin $217, Amarillo $212 and Houston $194.

Seven of the 25 metropolitan areas, however, had cutbacks in single-family houses from the first quarter of 1977. They were Amarillo, El Paso, Killeen-Temple, Longview, Odessa, Waco and Wichita Falls.

The number of new single-family units for the entire state rose by 13 percent from the 1977 total.

A total of $170 million of the valuation of new nonresidential construction was concentrated in stores and other mercantile buildings and $149 million in office-bank buildings, Ms. Tandy said.

Hermleigh Highlights...

School Term Closes: Library Remains Open

The 1978 Hermleigh school year ended Friday with a flurry of activities prior to the closing of school.

On May 11, the seniors returned from their week long trip to St. Louis. Tours of the Gateway Arch, the Missouri Botanical Gardens, Busch Brewery, Busch Stadium, and a day at Six Flags over Mid-America were among the highlights of their trip, but the class agreed that a dinner-theatre aboard the Goldenrod, a Mississippi River showboat, was the most memorable experience of all.

Both the elementary and high school held awards assemblies on May 15. Special recognition was given to the 23 pupils who had perfect attendance during the school year. Other students received awards for a variety of accomplishments.

Junior High graduation was held on Thursday night, May 18. Class Valedictorian Anthony Tate, Salutatorian Kenny Riley, and Historian Johnny Molina made speeches prior to the awarding of certificates.

Following the graduation, 33 high school and junior high students presented a melodrama directed by Phyllis Smith. Major roles were played by Curtis Tate, Tracy Warren, Clayton Riley, Jackie Williamson, and Chip Roemisch.

Senior baccalaureate was held on May 14. Rev. Buddy Helms preached the sermon, and Ralph Aycock and Rev. Rex Reynolds offered the invocation and benediction. Tanya Minton presented special music, accompanied by Debbie Helms.

High School Graduation was held on Friday, May 19. The valedictory was given by Kelly Culp and the salutatory by Tracey Kruger. David Groves, a 1969 graduate of Hermleigh and 1975 graduate of Sul Ross University, was the speaker for the ceremonies. Nia Schooler, accompanied by Tammy Farmer, presented special music. The invocation was given by Father Thomas Jordan and the benediction was said by Rev. Carl Nunn.

Although class sessions have ended, the high school library will remain open for student and community use. School personnel will be stationed in the high school library but will gladly take patrons to the elementary library upon request. Library hours will be from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The yearbook page plans have been submitted to the publisher and the staff expects the finished books to be delivered in August. If anyone who has not already purchased a subscription desires a yearbook, he or she should deposit $8.50 with the school secretary as soon as possible so that additional books can be ordered.

Friends are trying

By Karen Blaker, Ph.D.

Sometimes friends do more harm than good in their efforts to help. This hot-line caller was upset about her friends' bad advice. She was seeking an explanation for their trying behavior.

HOT LINE

MARY: My friends give me wild solutions for my problem and then seem offended when I don't take their advice. I don't want to seem ungrateful — but their reaction just doesn't seem fair. What would be the best way to handle this situation?

COUNSELOR: Why not start from the beginning? What kind of problem are you trying to solve?

MARY: Well, about a year ago I went out with a man for a few months. After I broke up with him, he started following and harassing me. He won't stop. Sometimes he even threatens me. Last week, just before I left on a business trip to California, he called to say my plane was going to crash. This is a big problem and I talk about it a lot with my friends.

COUNSELOR: How often does he bother you?

MARY: At least once a day — either by phone or in person. A few months ago, I even changed jobs but he found me. Now I am thinking about changing apartments because he was in the lobby of my building when I came home at 2 a.m. yesterday.

COUNSELOR: You sound frightened.

MARY: I am. His showing up like that at 2 a.m. frightened me.

COUNSELOR: What was he like when you met him?

MARY: I knew it! You are just like everyone else.

COUNSELOR: What do you mean?

MARY: Whenever I tell this story people always think it is all my fault — that I should have known from the start. But I swear he was a nice guy — average but nice — when we started dating.

COUNSELOR: I guess you feel like everyone is letting you down. You mentioned your friends are not giving helpful advice. What do they think you should do?

MARY: One says I should go back with the guy and let the relationship die a natural death. The other suggests I hire a gang of thugs to beat up the guy. Both suggestions sound equally outrageous. When I explain my reaction, they get mad and suggest I like this harassment.

COUNSELOR: You say you talk with them a lot about this problem?

MARY: Yes.

COUNSELOR: Maybe they feel helpless — and upset because they can't come up with some good advice. Rather than admit their suggestions are unworkable, they blame it on you and maintain the feeling of being your good friends.

MARY: I hadn't thought of it like that... you mean they may be feeling upset because they can't think of a way to help?

COUNSELOR: Yes. Are you putting a lot of pressure on them to come up with a solution?

MARY: I guess so. What do you think I should do about my problem?

COUNSELOR: What about filing a complaint with a lawyer on harassment charges? The consequences for the man would not be very serious but it might frighten him to have some contact with the law.

MARY: That might work. I did go to the police — but, of course, they said they couldn't get involved unless the guy actually tried to hurt me. I'll try that... I'm sure my friends will be relieved if this works. Then they won't have to listen to me all the time.

COUNSELOR: Well, it is a frightening experience and you do need to talk about it. How could you explain you aren't necessarily asking for advice when you bring it up?

Mary decided to tell her friends that she needed to talk about her problem but didn't want them to feel pressured to come up with solutions.
