FATE OF GOOD ROADS IN BALANCE

Arizona Officers Fear Effort To Free Matthew Kimes

Wichita Falls Record—
Keep It Clear—
Have You a Piano?—
You Can Vote—

J. C. MTTINGER, speaking at the business council luncheon Friday, told his audience that in the 20 years he had lived in Wichita Falls no forward movement ha dbeen defeated, and that bond issues had been uniformly successful.

Wichita Falls should keep this record clear today when its residents go to the polls to decide on the $1,110,000 issue for better roads in this area. Elsewhere in this page is the population growth of Wichita Falls since, 1905, and in this period, which shows this city's development from a town of 3000 to a city of more than 60,000, bond issues have been always successful.

"No forward movement has ever been defeated" and that perhaps, is the explanation of the 20-year expansion of a village into the leading city of West Texas.

COUNTY AUDITOR E. P. WALSH who by the way is one of the most capable and efficient men to serve Wichita county, has figures on the outstanding bonds of the county which show a balance of $2,438,500.

Against this figure, the county owns bonds and has cash on hand of $491,103.01, according to Mr. Walsh's figures, leaving an indebtedness of $1,947,396.99. This would not indicate that Wichita county is so heavily burdened by its securities, or that additional bonds would be a handicap. Few counties of like development and population are in a more fortunate position.

DO you own an automobile, a piano, phonograph or your household furniture?

If so, and if you paid your poll tax this year, you are entitled to vote in the bond election today.

Every person, white or black, married or unmarried, male or female, may express his or her desire on issuing road bonds if such person has paid the poll tax and has any real or personal property subject to taxation.

TUBERCULOSIS figures for Wichita county cited by the proposed tuberculosis association are no different here from scores of other counties over the state. The number of persons afflicted with this disease, however, may show an alarming increase unless steps are taken to care for many patients who are unable to care for themselves or their families.

The war on tuberculosis is a state and national fight, but it can be made effective only through the effort and co-operation of every city and county. Wichita has too long lagged behind in this vitally important piece of public welfare. For the protection of his own family and friends, if not for humanitarian reasons, every resident should give such support as possible to the organization and work of this society.

EAST TEXAS tomato growers are making dividends. They have shipped a thousand cars of tomatoes to market and plan for the shipment of an additional 500 cars, or a total of 1500 carloads of one crop.

Cotton is given a black eye in East Texas. In that section the farmers are getting away from the one crop idea. In days of old they did not live at home, but now they have reversed their old system. They are living at home and they like it.

THE editor of the Waco Times-Herald writes of the proposed judicial amendments to the state constitution: "We do know that these proposed amendments only delay real reform and are an aggravation rather than a help to what the situation demands. Our idea is to defeat these so-called judicial reform measures and thereby make it easier to get what we want, fellow citizens."

Just what it is "we want, fellow citizens," the Waco editor does not reveal. Most of the citizens of the state have been waiting patiently since the early days for some change, and now that some effort at reform is being made, are rather inclined to support the plan. Modern Texas can not operate efficiently under constitutional limitations of "covered wagon" days.

THE WEATHER

East Texas—Saturday and Sunday partly cloudy, scattered showers near the coast; light to moderate southerly winds on the coast.

Oklahoma and West Texas—Saturday and Sunday generally fair, continued warm.

Local weather conditions for the 24-hour period ending at 5 p. m. Friday as reported by the Texas Electric Service company were as follows: Highest temperature, 96 degrees; lowest temperature, 69; at 5 p. m. 95; precipitation, none; clear; southwest breeze; average wind velocity, three miles per hour; maximum wind velocity 12 miles per hour; barometer reading 28.92.

POSSES GUARD AGAINST RAID BY KIMES' MEN

Arizona Police On Hunt For Comrades Of Desperado

HE TALKS FREELY

Oklahoma Outlaw Denies Any Part in Beggs Bank Holdup

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz., June 24. (AP) With Matthew Kimes, bank robber of Oklahoma and accused murderer, in custody, a posse of armed men guarded all roads in Coconino county tonight in the belief that other members of the Kimes gang might be hiding nearby. Kimes is wanted in Oklahoma for the alleged slaying of W. K. McAnally, chief of police at Beggs.

When overhauled by the posse yesterday, the outlaw fired several shots in what looked like a gun battle of the approved western type. A moment later, however, when he glanced down the sides of the jagged rocky canyon to the ribbon of water more than half a mile below, his only avenue of escape, he "put 'em up" and called for the officers to come and get him.

He Wants Russell.

Kimes said that he would not fight extradition to Oklahoma, where he terrorized banks and escaped frim the penitentiary last November, if Sheriff Russell of Okmulgee, would come after him.

The desperado talked freely in his cell in the county jail here.

"Yes," he said, "I am Kimes. I escaped from the state penitentiary in Oklahoma last November 21. I will not fight extradition if Sheriff Russell of Okmulgee comes after me.

"I am a marked man and I knew they were after me. I met G. H. Kady and his wife on the streets of Dodge City, Kan., and they brought me further west with them. I had never been to the Grand Canyon and thought that would be a good place to keep under cover. I was surely surprised when someone knocked on my cabin at the Bright Angle cottage and told me they wanted to take me to the park headquarters to talk."

Knew Ray Terrell.

Kimes was asked if he knew Ray Terrell or a man known as Whitehead said to have been connected with bank holdups staged by Kimes. He said he knew both of them in the penitentiary where "jobs" were planned, but not carried out. Sheriff's officers expressed the opinion that Kady was in reality "Whitehead," but reserved opinion as to whether the woman was his wife.

The captured bank robber denied having anything to do with the tying to a tree at Jennings, Okla., of the town marshal. He said he had not been there for some time.

Kimes said he had heard that persons were killed during bank robberies at Borger and Beggs, Okla., but denied he had connection with either. His information had come to him through the newspapers.

Worked in Oil Field.

He said he left Bristow, Okla., about ten days ago and was on his way to the Pacific coast when through the papers he learned that the authorities were after him. Up to that time he had been working for the Burkhart casing crew at Bristow.

Kimes admitted knowledge of bank robberies at Sapulpa and Beggs, Okla., and at Pampa, Texas which netted the looters about $100,000 but said he did not "pull" the jobs.

Spelling Match Victory Brings Ohio Boy Fat Purse

WASHINGTON, June 24.(AP)—Product of a small rural school, 13-year-old Dean Lucas of Congress, Ohio, today has the title as national spelling champion and a prize of $1000.

Lucas, who is in the eighth grade in his town of 150 population, last night "spelled down" 13 girls and three boys to win the championship which is annually conducted by 17 leading newspapers.

The word "abrogate" gained him the victory which Ralph Keenan of Waukeon, Iowa, aged 13, failed to spell. Keenan took second place and a $500 prize. Minerva Reesler, 12 years old, of Lancaster, Pa., took third place with $250.

Anderson's bond was set at $10,550 and Osborne's at $7250.

The two men, who had been out on bond were rearrested and were making bond late this afternoon.

Two other men, Otto Bruhn and Tom Weems, held on four charges each in connection with the flogging, were not indicted, but County Attorney John E. Taylor announced the pair were being held for "further investigation."

STRIKE ENDS AS MUTINOUS MINERS FIGHT

Hunger and Fear Conclude Outbreak in Kansas State Prison

LEADERS SUBDUED

Striking Convicts Compel Leaders of Mutiny To Give In

LANSING, Kan., June 24.(AP)—A short, fierce battle within the ranks of the 328 mutinous convicts in the Kansas penitentiary coal mine resulted in victory late today for the forces favoring surrender and ending the uprising.

In the battle, about 270 men, driven by fear and hunger after 77 hours of self-imposed incarceration 720 feet below ground, allied themselves against the 50 strike leaders and overpowered them.

Shortly before the men announced their willingness to come to the top, Dr. Charles S. Huffman, chairman of the state board of administration had assured a spokesman for the convicts over the telephone that "we can't promise you anything, except that your demands will be considered fairly and impartially."

The convicts last night had served an ultimatum on the board, demanding more consideration for parole applications and greater privileges under the prison rules.

All Given Baths

As the men were brought to the mine head, 12 at a time, each group was met by Warden W. H. Mackey, who said:

"You men go to the laundry and take a bath and change clothes. Supper will be ready for you just as soon as possible."

Nothing else was said to the convicts.

Several of the mutineers were carried from the mine hoists. Some were sick, others showed unmistakable evidence of the underground fight.

One convict hurled a brick at another as they reached the surface. The man hit was knocked unconscious and was taken to the hospital.

Fourteen prison guards were overpowered and imprisoned in the electric shop of the mine by the 328 mutinous miners when the mutiny was called Tuesday morning.

Several of the guards were sick when they were brought to the surface. "We have had nothing to eat since Tuesday morning," Charles Nicholson, one guard, told the warden.

"It was an awful thing to go through," Charles Hamlin, another guard, said. "You can't know how awful it was unless you were down there."

Guards Overpowered

Nicholson and John Moslop, pit boss, said they were overpowered about 11 o'clock Tuesday morning, and along with the other 12 guards, locked in the electric shop. They knew nothing further of the progress of the mutiny until 4 o'clock this afternoon when convicts came to the shop, broke out the windows, and told them there had been a battle, and that the mutiny was over.

When word reached the surface that the men were ready to come up, the night guards were called to reinforce the day guards about the mine top. The 100 guards, all equipped with shotguns, stood guard over the top as the hoists began bringing the men out. The first of the hungry, wearied men came up shortly after 5 o'clock and 45 minutes later the mine was emptied of the mutineers.

The electric shop, in which the guards were locked, was only 10 by 12 feet in dimension, and the guards were forced to lie down most of the time, they said.

A Record Mutiny

"We had some water, but no food," Moslop, the pit boss, said, "now and then we would see men pass the window. They were carrying long knives, but as they were masked, we could not tell who they were."

The mutiny broke by nearly 40 hours the longest previous mutiny, staged in 1900, which lasted 38 hours. Today's mutiny lasted more than 77 hours.

MOODY'S VETO RILES W. C. T. U.

Dean Law Enforcement Crippled, Is Claim

AUSTIN, June 24. (AP)—The Women's Christian Temperance Union which recently elected Governor Dan Moody to honorary life membership, feels that he "expressed lack of sympathy for enforcement of the Dean liquor law" by his veto of a prescription enforcement appropriation, Mrs. Claude de Van Watts, said here today.

Expressing "deep disappointment" in behalf of the organization, Mrs. de Van Watts asserted that the governor "further crippled" enforcement by "blue penciling" the provision in the state comptroller's budget for a permit stenographer.

W. C. T. U. Lobby Active

The money item vetoed was to appropriate for permit investigations the approximate $18,0000 annual prescription fees collected by the comptroller. The W. C. T. U. did some active lobbying at the recent special session of the legislature for inclusion of the item in the departmental appropriation bill, and the senate allowed it. The house allowed a flat appropriation of $5000 after an all-day wrangle, but the free conference committee made an adjustment for blanket appropriation of all prescription permit fees, which last year totalled $18,000.

"The women were jubilant," Mrs. de Van Watts said of five women's organizations endorsing the W. C. T. U.s advocacy of the item. "We had been working for this appropriation for seven years, and it was the only law enforcement measure passed in the 40th legislature.

Remember the search and seizure repeal passed the senate and was killed by a committee of the house. Governor Moody refused to submit it at the special session.

Praise Lawmakers

"We feel that our lawmakers in granting the $18,000 appropriation expressed a sound, sober vision and that a great forward step had been taken for prohibition. We made this statement to the press.

"The comptroller is charged with enforcement of the Dean law as regards permits, but the legislature has provided only two clerks and a stenographer in the office to administer the law. He does not have a single representative to investigate and check up on medicinal liquor. For this reason, the comptroller is greatly handicapped in enforcement regulating the sale of liquor for medicinal purposes."

Lindbergh Will Head Gigantic Firm To Be Devoted to Air Passenger Lines

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, backed by some of the outstanding leaders in commercial aviation, will head a gigantic passenger carrying air transport company, countrywide in its scope, if present plans materialize, he revealed today. Breaking silence just before he hopped off for New York this afternoon, after a series of rapid-fire conferences in this city, which were shrouded in secrecy, the lone eagle of the New York to Paris flight said:

"I have been in conference this morning with Harry Knight, William B. Mayo, Harold Bixby, Casey Jones, Howard Coffin, William B. Robertson, Chester W. Cuthell and Paul Henderson.

"The conference was for the purpose of discussing the establishment at an early date of a passenger carrying air transport line that will be national in its scope.

Considerable Progress

"We made considerable progress in the discussion of certain general principles.

"Committees have been appointed to prepare detailed plans of organization and the route to be established.

"I hope to be able to make a further announcement covering these plans sometime during the next few weeks."

"Lindy" revealed his plans and his dreams for the future only a few minutes before he climbed into the army plane asigned him at Bolling field for his flight to New York.

There was no disguising his elation over the result of his conferences here. As soon as he had made his statement he waved his hand, and flashing that golden boyish smile, sped down the field and zoomed into the air.

The take-off was at 3:38 p. m.

A glance at the names of those who took part in the discussions gives an idea of the solid backing of the passenger air transport project. Harry Knight, Harold Bixby and William B. Robertson were St. Louis promoters of Lindbergh's flight to Paris.

William B. Mayo is chief of the aircraft division of the Ford industry at Detroit. Howard Coffin and Paul Henderson are heads of the National Air Transport company, already operating air mail routes and soon to take over the government's prize Chicago-New York air mail trunk line.

First Line Planned

Casey Jones is the noted test pilot of the Curtiss company of Long Island. While routes have not as yet been decided upon, it was believed the first passenger carrying lines would be from New York to Chicago, then extended to the Pacific coast with divisional lines extending to the large cities of the east, midwest and south.

STATE FIGHTS BURRIER PLEA

Bond For Suspected Slayer To Be Opposed

Contending that the prosecution intends to request the death penalty, the state will bitterly contest the application of J. W. Burrier, accused of slaying John McDaniel, Lake Wichita filling station owner, for his release on bond, E. F. Fruechte, assistant district attorney, said Friday.

The application will be heard Saturday morning at Archer City on a writ of habeas corpus filed in the 30th district court before Judge E. G. Thornton.

After the arrest of Burrier, who is under indictment for the slaying of McDaniel on the night of May 5, Judge Thornton remanded him to jail without the right to make bond.

Burrier was arrested in Colorado City about two weeks after the slaying of McDaniel. Burrier is also under indictment for the alleged robbery of the Three Way Filling station in Archer county which is owned by E. H. McDaniel, the slain man's brother.

Burrier is alleged to have robbed the Three Way station one hour before he is alleged to have shot and killed McDaniel.

Mr. Fruechte, who will represent the state in the habeas corpus proceedings, said that he would contend that the state intended to request the death penalty for Burrier and as a result it was a non-bailable case.

ODDS FAVOR ADOPTION OF BOND ISSUE

Bitter Fight Over Plan To Improve Highways Nears Close

BIG VOTE CERTAIN

Issue Must Get Majority Of Two-Thirds For Victory

With the odds in favor of the voters adopting the $1,110,000 bond issue for the improvement of Wichita county roads, a hotly waged battle between proponents and opponents of the measure will come to an end today when citizens in precincts Nos. 1 and 3 cast their ballots.

Final arrangements for the election were completed Friday when ballot boxes and election supplies were distributed to the 24 polls, which will open today at 8 a. m. and close at 7 p. m.

There are 29 polls within the city limits of Wichita Falls, two in the Iowa Park city limits, one at the Allendale school house, one at Valley View and the other at Clara.

Those who can vote today in the road bond issue election:
All persons possessing poll tax receipts, who pay taxes in Wichita county on real and personal property.
Married women having an interest in community property.
Also negroes, possessing poll tax receipts, who pay taxes on real estate and personal property.

All are in road district No. 2, which was created by the county commissioners court and includes precincts Nos. 1 and 3.

Hot Battle Waged

The battle between proponents and opponents has been waged ever since the subject of a bond issue was first broached by those interested in improving the roads.

Although the law requires that two thirds of the voters must cast their ballots in favor of the issuance of the bonds before the debentures can be issued, which is a large barrier for the proponents to mount, nevertheless, it was the consensus Friday of "those who know" that the issue would be acted upon favorably by the voters.

After more than a year of investigation by the chamber of commerce highway committee, of which C. H. Clark is chairman, a petition sponsored by the chamber of commerce requesting an election for a $1,125,000 bond issue for the improvement of Wichita county roads in precincts Nos. 1 and 3 was presented to the county commissioners court.

Some Opposition

The court set the hearing on the petition for May 9. On that day a large number of opponents to the measure appeared before the court and protested the calling of an election and also requested more time in which to compile data to present to the court.

The court granted the request for "more time" and reset the hearing for May 20.

On May 20 the opponents again appeared and contested the calling of the election. After several hours of argument the court went into executive session and after dropping one of the projects contained in the petition and adding another called the election for June 25.

In dropping the project and adding the other, the amount involved in the bond issue was changed to $1,110,000.

During the first part of June, Wayne Somerville, county attorney, and E. P. Walsh, county auditor, received letters from the attorney generals office in which in-

Man In Yellow Roadster Blocks Archer Road To Terrorize Driver

A man in a fast yellow roadster was terrorizing motorists on the Wichita Falls-Archer City road early Friday night, it was reported to police by T. L. Ward, 703 Fillmore, whose brother-in-law, George Stinnett of Olney, had three encounters with the man.

Mr. Stinnett was returning to Olney with his wife and baby after visiting relatives here when he was confronted by the man's car parked across the road near the Three-Way filling station, 15 miles south of Wichita Falls. The man accused Mr. Stinnett of having robbed him and threatened his life, Mr. Ward told police.

Mr. Stinnett succeeded in driving away but was overtaken again by the yellow roadster within two miles, the roadster forcing Mr. Stinnett's car to stop in the ditch at the side of the road.

Breaking away a second time, Mr. Stinnett kept ahead of the man until they reached the Holliday creek bridge, about 20 miles south of Wichita Falls. The roadster was stopped so as to block passage to the bridge and the man walked towards Mr. Stinnett who got out of his car. The man cursed and started back to his car with the declaration that he would get his gun and kill Mr. Stinnett. Mr. Ward said his brother-in-law had told him.

After making two or three attempts, Mr. Stinnett drove his car onto the bridge while the roadster sped away towards Wichita Falls. The occurrence was reported to Archer City officers who drove out on the road looking for the man.

FULL TURNOUT OF VOTERS URGED TO INSURE ROAD BOND ADOPTION

PROGRESS AT STAKE TODAY

Wichita's Leadership For Good Roads Involved

"Saturday Wichita Falls is going to be on trial before northwest Texas, for the result of this $1,110,000 bond election is going to determine whether she shall retain her accepted position of leadership or be relegated to the more backward counties," declared J. C. Mytinger, chairman of the campaign committee supporting the bonds, in an address at the Business Council Friday.

Mr. Mytinger and Hubert Harrison, general manager of the chamber of commerce, outlined the plan to be followed Saturday in thoroughly canvassing the city in an attempt to get every eligible person to vote. Mr. Mytinger also gave a final elucidation of the reasons why the bonds were considered a progressive and forward-looking move for the county at this time.

Wichita Leods.

"Stressing the position of leadership occupied by Wichita Falls in the past in urging other counties to instill the spirit of progress and enthusiasm into their citizens, he affirmed that this issued would decide whether that place would be kept or lost. For 20 years there has never been a forward movement defeated, and the success of this election depends entirely on the support of those who champion it, he said.

"I do not doubt but that fully two-thirds of the voters favor the bonds, but the great danger is that they may fail to vote," he declared.

In answer to arguments of the opposition which he termed "without foundation and ridiculous," Mr. Mytinger told those present the answers to these objections as expounded by the chamber of commerce and every champion of the project.

"The opponents of the issue have errenously stated that the rate of interest on the bonds would rise as in the case of irrigation bonds, while the only way in which this is possible is through the jurisdiction of the people of the county," he affirmed. "This interest is provided for in the interest and sinking fund, and will get lower every year instead of higher.

Issue Is Clear.

"The legal aspects of the issue are clear. If there should be any disagreement, the legislature meets in September, and would clear the law on this point at that time.

"The opposition declares that taxes will be high, but the greatest burden falls on the man most able to pay, and every one of us is given more opportunity to make more money to pay that tax. And there will not be a man, woman or child in Wichita county that will not be benefitted by these roads.

"In answer to the argument that now is not the proper time for the election, we believe that it is the best possible time for we get a fresh start, put new money in circulation, give employment to many workmen now out of jobs, and offset a general stimulus in the community," Mr. Mytinger concluded.

Mr. Harrison also affirmed that there was a great deal more at stake than the building or the roads, as the failure of the issue would discourage every investment being planned for this city, and would mean a loss of confidence damaging in the extreme.

C. H. Clark, chairman of the highway committee of the chamber of commerce affirmed that the bonds would work no hardship on any one concerned, and that every forward-looking citizen could not afford not to vote. "The only thing left to do to get the voters to the polls and get them to vote," he said.

Workers Named.

Arrangements for canvassing the entire city in the interest of votes favoring the bonds were then announced. Every man asked to serve on a committee immediately accepted.

Following are those selected Friday who will canvas the city Saturday morning in the effort to get every voter to visit the polls:

Opponents of Bond Issue Make Final Statement On Proposal

Editor, The Record News:

We notice in the celums of the papers comments from a few of the citizens of Wichita Falls purporting to give reasons why the citizens of the Iowa Park and Wichita Falls districts should vote for the million-dollar road bond issue on Saturday, June 25.

In order that the reading public may understand that it at least appears to come of the voters in this county that there are two sides to this question we would like for our daily papers, in justice to the opposition to said bonds, to print in as conspicuous a way as it has the preceding articles in the papers the following reasons why said bond issue should not carry on next Saturday.

Attack Issue.

First: The proceeds of these bonds are to be used, as set forth by the orders of the commissioners court, primarily for private purposes, that is, only a very small per cent of the general public of the two precincts will ever receive any benefit directly or indirectly from the proposed road to be built up the irrigated valley where most of the million-dollar fund is supposed to be spent.

Second: This proposed road up the irrigated valley is and will always be a private road and will not when built ever get any state or federal aid either for the building or maintenance of said road on account of its private nature and the upkeep thereof will be a continuous burden on the taxpayers of the two precincts.

Third: The tax paying citizens of the city of Wichita Falls have paid and agreed to pay for the benefit of the land owners in the irrigated district about 65 per cent of the bonded indebtedness of $5,012,000 for the building and maintenance of the irrigation system and have paid and are continuing to pay each year this vast sum of money with practically no benefit or remuneration therefor. This vast amount of money being paid by the property owners of this city for the use and benefit of the farmers and land owners of the irrigated district ought to be and we think is a sufficient burden and donation to our friends the farmers and land owners of this district without calling upon us for an additional million dollars to build a private road to their respective holdings. It will doubtless be said that the people of the city are receiving benefit from this vast sum of money by obtaining water for city purposes but we are paying for each month's water bill to the city for every gallon of water used by every citizen in the city in addition to the taxes above mentioned.

Taxes Too High, Claim

Fourth: We are already overburdened with taxes in this county and city and are now paying five per cent per annum on our property investment for taxes.

The bonded indebtedness of the city of Wichita Falls appears to be $3,500,000. The bonded indebtedness of the Wichita Falls school district is a little over two million dollars. The bonded indebtedness for the county is a little over two and one-half million dollars. The bonded indebtedness for the water improvement district is a little over $5,000,000, making a total indebtedness of over thirteen million dollars. This indebtedness must be paid and there is no other way of paying the same except by taxation and there is such a thing as reaching the limit by these burdens that will make the ownership of property prohibitive. Think on these figures.

Fifth: The masses of the people as a matter of common justice should never be taxed for the benefit of a favored few regardless of who they may be.

Sixth The benefit suggested to the general public of such a road as is proposed to be built up the valley is that it will furnish a pleasure drive for the citizenship of this city. This sounds nice in its suggestiveness but as a matter of fact the pleasures to be derived by an occasional drive over such a road is not of sufficient benefit or of sufficient importance to justify the burdening of ourselves and our children with the payment of this million-dollar bond issue.

Seventh: Wichita county without this extra million dollars has, we are informed, the largest bonded indebtedness of any county in the state in proportion to its property valuation.

Why make these burdens greater and unbearable?

It has been suggested in come of the advertisements and statements carried in our daily papers that a city without a bonded indebtedness "has grass in its streets." This may be true but certainly the bonded indebtedness covering this city for city purposes alone of over $3,000,000 and for school purposes of over $2,000,000 and its portion of the irrigation bonds of over $5,000,000 and its further portion of the $2,500,000 county road bonds is of sufficient weight to mash out all the grass that will ever be scattered in the streets of any portion of this city. In fact it is so heavy and so burdensome that many of the people cannot afford to even try to raise grass in their front yards.

Water Rates

It occurs to us that instead of further laying the burdensome blanket of bonded indebtedness upon the people of this city so as to stamp out the aspirations of our citizenship that our good chamber of commerce, which is using some of its talent and a large portion of its money in support of this bond issue could do more for the citizenship of this town if it would promulgate a plan whereby we as citizens of the city could receive some small benefit from the heavy irrigation bonded indebtedness by at least getting the reasonable flat rate for our water for domestic use so that we could perchance raise a few sprigs of grass in our front yards and an occasional rose bed and flower garden that would add something to the beauty of our fair city.

We appeal to the citizenship of this town to not be disturbed over the statements made by various parties through our public print that our town will go to the bowwows unless these bonds are voted. That the sounding of such an alarm is the trumpet of the small politician who is looking to the private interest of himself or some friend and who never bothers his mind or allows his conscience to be disturbed by the suffering of the public as a whole.

Think before you vote.

CLARK REPLIES TO OBJECTORS

Road Bond Issue Leader Clears Doubt

C. H. Clark, chairman of the highway committee of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce, issued the following statement on the eve of the road bond issue to be held Saturday:

"Opponents of the road bond issue have circulated the report that estimates on the construction of the proposed roads as submitted by the chamber of commerce committee are exorbitant and unreasonable.

"I wish to say in reply that the committees has the advice of County Engineer J. M. Isbell in estimating this cost, an experienced man who has been county engineer of Wichita county for many years and who is well informed on the costs of road building of all types.

"In the second place, even if the estimates are high, our commissioners court certainly would not be foolish enough to spend one dollar more than is necessary to build the roads. All of the road work will be let by competitive bids and awarded to the lowest responsible bidder. The estimates of our committee have nothing whatever to do with the ultimate cost of the roads.

"Personally I have confidence in our county commissioners and county engineer and in their ability to build good roads for the least possible money.

"I also wish to dispute the statement that the roads will be 'gravel smered with asphalt.' They are to be crushed rock base with an asphalt surface similar to the splendid road running south from Electra to the Archer county line."

"My Plane and I—"

FROM THE LIPS OF LINDY HIMSELF"

BY WILLIAM HILLMAN.
(Copyright 1927, By King Features Syndicate Inc.)

He, who was to be called the "Lone Eagle of the Air," began his flying career with the awkwardness of an eagle learning to fly. What a picture he must have been—a long, gangling, rustic fellow, bashful to the point of seeming a "bumpkin" when he appeared at the Lincoln Aircraft company at Lincoln, Neb., to enroll as a student-aviator.

This "bumpkin" was five years later to stand as straight and graceful as a willow, to smile with the poise of one accustomed to receive tributes, to be feted and honored.

But Lindy drew only a laugh when he appeared at Lincoln.

"I rode a motorcycle to Lincoln from Little Falls, Minn., to go to the aviation school," Lindy said.

It was an old battered affair, the ghost of what was once a motorcycle. Those who remembered him arriving thought:

"Here comes another farmer who wants to fly."

Determined to Learn.

"I was determined," Lindy said, "to learn how to fly, having gone home after I left the University of Wisconsin. I took what money I had (it was about $500) deciding to learn slowly and carefully. I read a lot about planes and their construction before I went to Lincoln, and I already knew something of motors."

Those who were inclined to laugh at his appearance soon realized how serious Lindy was. No student worked harder. Lindy was no longer the wandering student of precarious schoolboy days, going from school to school, attending about 14 in all, nor the indifferent student of the university where theory bored him.

"I went through the regular ground training and study of the plane," Lindbergh said, "and soon I was taken up for my first flight with my instructor.

"It was great fun."

Lindy, however, was not permitted to pilot the plane himself for some time.

"I made my first flight as a pilot on April 16, 1922," said Lindbergh. "I remember the date because I made a note of it.

"I kept a little black notebook with a lot of data about my flying. It's not complete. I haven't got a detailed record of all the hours I have flown though I have the total, nor all the places though from time to time I try to keep it in order.

"I have flown through 35 states, Mexico, that is along the Mexican border, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Ireland, France, Belgium and England.

Flies 1835 Hours.

"Up to the time of my returning to the United States, I will have flown exactly 1835 hours and 55 minutes.

"That's not much. I know a lot of aviators who have done twice as much."

As soon as Lindbergh felt certain he had learned all that could be learned at the school and that he was capable to pilot an aeroplane, he left.

"I looked around to see what I could do," he said.

He then started on a career of "Gypsy" flying which was to have a great influence on future years. He offered his services to pilots and owners of aeroplanes who entertained crowds at the county fairs throughout the west with exhibits of flying and stunts.

Lindy did wing walking and parachute jumping from fast moving planes. He threw fear into the hearts of backwoods and farmer folk by walking out on the wing of a plane cruising along at terrific speed and at sharp angles.

"I didn't make much doing this," he confessed, "but I got a lot of experience."

"How much did you make?" I asked him.

Lindy shook his head. He was not telling.

But from a friend of his I learned that Lindy sometimes would make as little as five dollars a day for risking his neck entertaining the wonder-eyed populace.

Then "Slim" would pilot the plane and, with that uncanny bird instinct of his, make his plane do what birds never attempt, turns and loops and dizzy maneuvers. He would zoom close to buildings and the ground with that terrific speed he always likes to travel.

Even in the years that followed, when Lindy became the careful, conservative pilot, he would occasionally become the stunt pilot.

He Climbs Sky.

I saw him two days after his arrival in Paris climb the sky in a French plane he had never seen before. He was just able to cramp his long ,lanky body into it, cramp it so closely that when he landed he said:

"That was kind of a tight fit."

He always found it necessary to cramp himself in a French plane.

"They build planes in France for small men," he said. "It's hard getting my six feet two and a half inches into them."

He flew around Le Bourget for a few minutes. It was early morning, the sun coming up a golden ball over the distant roofs.

Then Lindy pointed the plane into a harp ascent, executed a loop, straightened out, gained a little more altitude, sideslipped, circled the field and began to make his plane execute a typical "Lindy dance," a series of daring turns and spins and maneuvers during which he lost little altitude.

The French aviators and officers on the field gasped. What daring "fool" was this to try such stunts in a plane unknown to the pilot.

A French army pilot, stirred by Lindy's play, turned up, shot into the air and joined Lindy. Together they started to maneuver and within five minutes were engaged in an air "duel." Lindy, the boy, Lindy the stunt flyer was happy. How they chased and "shot" at each other in the air.

The exhibition was too much for Commandant Weiss, in command of an air squadron of the field. He sent up a signal ordering the French pilot down.

Playmate Quits Him.

When his "playmate" quit him, Lindy decided to fly over Paris and left for a spin, the spectators on the field breathing easier.

"That wasn't so dangerous as you think," he said when he landed.

"What you call stunt flying is not always mere fool stuff. Every aviator must be able to do some of it. Certainly an army aviator must know lots about it.

"I never flew that plane before but it's like others I have flown."

Even when he arived at Brussels Lindy could not keep from giving the crowd a thrill by making a sudden sharp ascent just before he circled to land. In England, too, he stole out one morning to try stunts in a British army plane.

Lindy was not happy, however, until he could own a plane of his own. After several months of "Gypsy" flying and parachuting, Lindy succeeded in getting enough money together to buy a plane.

The U. S. army was holding a bargain sale of "second-hand" planes at Americus, Georgia.

Lindy purchased a biplane, one that had seen much service but was still in good shape.

"I got a lot of good flying out of it," Lindy said.

He would not say how much he paid for the plane.

But Lindy went back to the "home town," Little Falls, flying his plane. He took a lot of the neighbors up for rides, carried his father around to several sections of the state helping him campaign for governor of the state.

On 'Gypsy Tour.'

Then Lindy, with his precious biplane, left home again for another "Gypsy" tour, flying through Colorado, Wyoming, Montana and through the south.

He became more daring in speed; he knew all the loops and turns; and he would have fun with the crowd by suddenly dropping from his plane burlap bags that looked like bodies.

"I had flown several hundred hours during the period I flew at county fairs," he said. "I made a little money; not very much."

BYRD EAGER TO BEGIN FLIGHT

But Atlantic Storm Area Still Bars Way

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Another tantalizing storm danced over the Atlantic today and again delayed Commander Richard Byrd's plane flight to Paris.

He and his crew had expected to go at 4 o'clock this morning but now the prediction is that it will be Sunday before the weather clears enough to permit a take-off, although they will go sooner if possible.

"I am not waiting for ideal weather," Byrd said today, "but there is a storm out there that weather men say I couldn't fly through. If I were on my own, I'd probably hop off, but I have three fellows with me and I have the good of aviation to consider. It would harm aviation if the flight were not successful."

He expressed his keen disappointment at the necessary postponement and added:

"I have the positive statement of James H. Kimball, assistant government meterologist, that it would not be right to go. So it wouldn't be proper for me to go in face of such a positive statement. In other words I'm going when he says the weather is right.

"That low pressure area contains all sorts of bad conditions, fogs, low clouds, high winds and everything that would make flying difficult."

TRANS-ATLANTIC FLIGHT COSTS ENORMOUS SUM

NEW YORK, June 23. (AP)—When weather permits the tri-motored Fokker monoplane America to take off for Paris, Rodman Wanamaker will see the dawn of a dream which already has cost him nearly $500,000.

He and his crew had expected to go at 4 o'clock this morning but now the prediction is that it will be Sunday before the weather clears enough to permit a take-off, although they will go sooner if possible.

The America alone cost between $70,000 and $80,000, while other thousands were spent on hundreds of details to aid the efficiency and safety of the project.

A sloping runway which allows an advantage equivalent to 500 feet to take off distance has been built at Roosevelt field where Capt. Rene Fonck, French aviator, ended in disaster his effort to take off for Paris almost a year ago. Fonck is expecting delivery of a new plane next month in which he plans a second effort to span the distance to Paris.

An elaborate scheme for weather observation has been established by the Byrd expedition. Men have been sent abroad to arrange with foreign weather bureaus and government experts for advice and information while experts here are in daily consultation with the flight commander.

A north Atlantic storm, lying in the path which Byrd hopes to travel, prohibited a take off again yesterday and indicated that a start would not be made until tonight or tomorrow at the earliest.

T. Harold Kinkade, field engineer for the Wright Aeronautical corporation, builders of the three whirlwind engines with which the big monoplane is equipped, has booked passage for France.

Co-Operation "Big Point" In Growth of Cities

Editor, The Record News:

Communities rise and fall—some in their small way, and some in their larger way. Why? Resources and lack of resources? Primarily no! Credit or blame may be found in the co-operative spirit, or lack of it. Akron, O., is the world's greatest rubber center and one of our most thriving communities. Are there any rubber trees growing there? Co-operation did it. Rubber was secondary. With an ideal valley and a world of oil Wichita county, disrupted, is not fit to live in. With semi-arid space Wichita county has built through co-operation a most splendid community.

There are two good sides to the present bond question and plenty of good people are found on either side. Will anyone deny them the right to their opinions? Will anyone hesitate to co-operate with the will of the majority when it speaks? Will the carrying of the bonds ruin anybody? Wouldn't these roads open up a lot of good territory? And yet, it is a mistaken idea that their feat denotes stagnation. Increased taxation means progress to a point, and beyond that point it means unjust burdens and sacrifices, and in some cases drives people away. The question is have we reached the point where it is time to stop? Or are there other things needed more than roads? Here plenty of good people differ. Isn't each entitled to his opinion? Aren't we all willing to abide by the will of the majority?

The bond election may lose if it wins, or it may win if it loses. It all depends upon our spirit of co-operation tomorrow and next month and year. When the public mind speaks in our community, let's do as usual—all get on the band wagon and say, "Let's go."

THIRD MAN TO FACE CHARGE

Three Arrested in Graham Box Car Robbery

Investigations lasting more than three weeks and conducted by Sheriff W. G. Bralley with the cooperation of county and railroad officers of several Texas and Oklahoma counties, were ended with the arrest of A. L. Brannon at Frederick, Okla., Sheriff Bralley announced Friday.

Brannon was the third man arrested in connection with the theft of about 10 cases of cigarettes from a box car at Graham several weeks ago. E. J. Simerly of Wichita Falls is under bond on a charge of receiving and concealing stolen property and Haskell Hill is in the Graham jail charged with burglary. A warrant charging burglary was issued more than a week ago for Brannon.

Sheriff Bralley has made a number of trips in leading the hunt for the men. Several times he has driven hundreds of miles for the purpose of obtaining additional information in the case.

Five cases of cigarettes were found three weeks ago when officers searched a house here, Bralley said. No other cigarettes have been located, he stated.

Fate of Roads At Polls Today

formation to the effect that the issuance of the bonds would be illegal was contained.

The opinions from the attorney general's office, which were written by D. L. Whitehurst, assistant attorney general, set out that Wichita county could not vote district road bonds when there were county-wide bonds outstanding.

Barrier Hurdled

As Wichita county had over a million dollars worth of road bonds outstanding prospects looked dark for the proponents, however. Chas. I. Francis, attorney, and Hubert Harrison, general manager of the chamber of commerce, went to Austin and after a conference with Attorney General Pollard, the ruling of the assistant attorney general was reversed and the election declared legal by Mr. Pollard.

There are 13 projects contained in the road building program upon which the voters will cast their ballots. The projects include the concreting of some roads, asphalting of others and the building of one bridge and four underpasses.

All of the projects are considered as necessary for the advancement of the interests of Wichita county and for the growth of the county.

BOYS CONFESS THEFT OF $60

They Talk to Bralley When Conscience Hurts

Sheriff W. G. Bralley relied upon the consciences of two Wichita county youths Friday morning to solve the theft of $60 with the result that the money was returned to its owner.

A man reported to the sheriff that he had been robbed and furnished descriptions of the boys, who had just sold him a bushel of peaches. Sheriff Bralley drove to the home of the boys without finding them and had driven two miles toward the city when he met one of them.

The youths denied any knowledge of the $60 but asked Mr. Bralley to take his cousin with him to the court house. Coming toward town, Mr. Mralley said, the boys appeared to be worried and he stopped and asked them if they wanted to hold a private conference.

They stepped to the side of the road and talked a moment and then confessed to the sheriff that they had taken the money from the customenr's automobile as they delivered the peaches. They escorted the sheriff to the hiding place of the money and were later released, Mr. Bralley said.

Wichita Falls In 1893

Wichita Falls Belles of 34 years ago combed their thick, long hair in a high twist on the back of the head, with bangs across the forehead. For evening, a soft roll was often arranged at the back, with a cluster of curls dropping below on one side.

Millinery fashions for that summer were huge hats of soft straw, trimmed with puffs of shirred chiffon and ribbon, sheer laces, and flowers. The hat was worn high on top of the large hair-dress.

THE SENTIMENTAL SEASON

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Summer Madness Not Safe Basis for Marriage

By Beatrice Fairfax,
An Authority on the Problems of Love and Marriage.

THE season has come when instinctively we dream of a wonderful vacation!

Freedom from responsibility, idle relaxation, favorite pastimes with others like ourselves on pleasure bent, time for sentiment, even sentimentality—how the prospect allures and enchants!

This vacation dream, mingling in memory with beating surf, sting of flying spray, murmur of running brooks, rustling leaves or the warm, sweet fragrance of farm meadow-land, leads the average girl practically to consider two questions:

"Where can I spend my vacation?

"How much can I spend on my vacation?"

As a result, having chosen a healthful, lovely place approved by her dream, her parents and her pocket-book, Miss Vacation Girl starts joyously on her way, alone or in a group, to meet—who knows what romantic adventure!

Let us hope her best dream will be realized! Let us trust her well-earned holiday will bring health, rest, good times and at least a momentary, light-hearted, sentimental advent re!

What if this new friendship does not stand th test of Winter moods! A safe and pleasant comradeship of a Summer's day is not wasted even though it proves as fleeting as a little white cloud in a Summer's sky!

Beware a Summer tidal wave of sentimentality, when there is every chance for a careless flirtation, with neither the place, the time time nor the girl lacking!

A vacation is above all a getting away from the old, familiar scenes and routine. It is not so much where you go as this getting away that gives it tonic joy.

In the third year of their marriage, Jack and Jean still loved each other. But Jack found himself longing for a week or two of bachelor freedom and a good old fishing trip.

He mentioned this plan to Jean. She burst into tears.

Jack was tired of her—her marriage was a failure—she sobbed. Then she laughed and agreed to the plan.

"I'm getting hysterical and silly—I need to go away and rest," she decided.

So, leaving Junior with Grandma, where she knew he was safe, Jean departed with an affectionate farewell to her husband. How she loved the first few days of sleeping late, basking lazily in the warm sand and reading a novel in peace on the porch swing of the small camp.

As for Jack, he heartily enjoyed his first two days of bachelordom and was homesick for his wife by the third day. But he kept to his schedule—took his week's fishing trip and joined Jean for a few days before their return home.

How young and rested Jean looked! How good it was to be together again! He was proud of the admiring looks his pretty wife attracted from other men at the camp.

Now and then a week's absence from each other may be worth while even for the most affectionately happy married couple, if only for the appreciative joy of the reunion. But a week is long enough.

It is not always the girl in search of romance who finds it.

Ruth was so tired of doing everyone's work at the office while everyone went vacationing that by the time her own vacation came she wanted just one thing—a long, lazy rest!

"Let's keep away from people," she and her chum Dorothy agreed, as the steamboat ended its six-hour run from home to their vacation destination. "We will be polite to everyone, but wander away by ourselves to read and rest and be lazy."

So both girls kept a little apart from the good-humored crowd at the hotel. And, strange to say, this made them the more interesting to two young vacationists, who found it refreshing not to be run after or dated by these "different" Summer girls. The two young men saw in Ruth and Dorothy the gentle, old-fashioned, yet up-to-date girls of their dreams!

The girls enjoyed the companionship of these new friends, after all. And so a firm foundation was laid on that vacation, for happy romance for two young couples.

A well-spent vacation amid wholesome surroundings counts for sentiment and romance, because it counts for health of mind and body and these in turn attract noble, tender affection.

BOYS LIKE 'EM BOBBED

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

LIKE the pitiful king of A. A. Milne, who "DID like a bit of butter to his bread," there is a fussy young man or two still left around who, while he most modernly dotes upon short skirts and short hair, likes a little bit of decoration to his girl." He doesn't care for caricatures; in girls. He likes modesty in short skirts, and femininity in short hair. And they are both very possible. Witness the plenty of girls who are both. "Brief—but not INFINITESIMAL"—is his slogan. In other words—he DOES like a bit of hair on his sweetheart's head!

One of those HES has written me a letter about it. Had to tell someone; he couldn't tell her, because she won't speak to him now.

I'll call her Sherry, for it's a name very like that. And I shall call him Terry, for his was very like hers. And he solemnly begged me never to put his in print. Well, Sherry had short skirts, and short hair, and was a darling. Feminine, though humorous all through. Just, from his description, like the pretty and well-bred girl that the young man is being so fondly proud of in the first picture. Short skirts—but not plain envelopes. Short hair—but not scantiness. He is just as weary of the true boyish cut as he is of the figurines on filler-caps. Just as weary of frock that have just as much leeway as a slip-cover as he is of the endlessly repeated fashion-ads with their ladies with boneless arms and legs. That was it about Sherry—her hair was short, but it was decorative. Her frocks were short—but well-bred. She was a GIRL—not a hard picture.

And one day she walked out and cut herself to pattern. Made of herself a replica of a score of cartoons that Terry had seen. She looked sleeker, wiser, harder—and less decorative. She looked dashing—but not so sweet. There were no soft shadows 'round her face; and there seemed none around her soul. And Terry told her so, after a disgruntled glance or two at this strange, new girl of his.

I think he must have made a hash of the telling—for in his letter he sadly says, "At first she was surprised—and now SHE won't speak to ME any more! But I DID love her best the way she was a month ago!"

You see he "DID like a bit of hair to his Lady's head."

And you'd be surprised, if you should take a canvas, how unalone he is in it.

The Constant Fear of "What Will They Say?"

By Lucy Lowell.

THERE is a bugaboo in her life and it gives her no rest day or night.

It's name is "What will they say?"

LUCY LOWELL

Everything which happens to her or her home or her family — everything which by some remote possibility might happen— draws from her that instant reaction "What will they say?"

She never does anything the least bit out of the ordinary, however harmless it may be. She is afraid to. She is afraid that someone might say something about it. The fact that what might be said probably would be trivial and quickly forgotten makes no difference. The thought that it would concern her throws her into a panic.

Life to her appears a vast assemblage of watching eyes and wagging tongues all ranged about herself and ready to get going on the slightest provocation.

She sees herself on continual exhibition, rather like a goldfish in a globe.

And it's very sad—tragic, really and entirely unnecessary.

There is no average human being half as important to the community and the world as this woman sees herself. People have their own affairs to attend to; things of vastly more interest to them than the actions of any one of their number. Unless those actions are extremely bizarre, so far out of the course of conventional human conduct as to be eccentric, small attention is paid to them.

Of course, there are always folks who will talk. They talk for the love of talking, and if there is nothing unusual to furnish gossip they will seize upon what is usual and mull it over.

But their number is negligible; they themselves are of small moment.

The woman—or man—who is square-dealing and self-respecting and who goes along her or his way with reasonable regard for the rights and feelings of others, need have nothing to fear from "what will they say?"

Household Hints

When making fruit pies, put the sugar between two layers of fruit and the juice will not boil over.

Sugar rubbed at once on a fruit stain will remove it.

After washing hair brushes they should be held under a cold-water tap. This hardens the bristles.

Don't waste sour milk. For making scones it is better than fresh milk.

When making cakes that contain baking powder, they should be put into the oven as quickly as possible after mixing.

To prevent cakes from becoming stale, put a thick slice of bread in the tin in which they are kept and renew it every third day.

Hidden Causes of Some Chronic Invalidism

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.,
Former President of the American Medical Association.

"I AM twenty-eight, and have been married seven years. My great motive in marrying was to become a mother. This longing has not been gratified. For what reason I do not know. In spite of general good health I have latterly become nervous, emotional and sleepless and at times morose. My physician says I have neurasthenia. What does that mean?"

This correspondent has asked a typical question and presents a case that is typical of thousands of American women—yes, of women all over the world.

Properly speaking, neurasthenia is a weakness in the functioning of the nervous system. Its direct cause is generally an over-activity of the thyroid gland. This gland governs nutrition and tissue change. There is generally a corresponding failure of another gland, called the suprarenal gland, which controls the thyroid and keeps the sexual functions in balance.

Disorder of these two glands may be caused by physical stress or indiscretion or by bad mental states for they are in a sense the link between the nervous system and the healthy functioning of the body.

There are many women who become chronic invalids, neurasthenics, from failure to gratify the maternal instinct, the most powerful of all their instincts.

The illness is a very familiar one. The woman, like my correspondent, is about twenty-eight or so, just out of her youth. She is beginning to get anxious about her chances of arriving at a fulfilment of her maternal requirements. The factor bringing this anxiety to a head may be childlessness, or the loss of an only child and despair of having another. It may be that a man to whom she has been engaged a long time has jilted her, or she may have lost a parent or near relative after nursing them through a long illness. There are always two factors—removal of the object of love and a dreadful feeling that all her work for the loved one has been so much waste of time.

It probably has in some cases, for a woman's work is primarily to become a wife and a mother and not to sacrifice her life-work, her very destiny, to the aged or infirm. There is a normal limit to such sacrifices. The woman of this class usually has a little money of her own or someone on whom she can depend. If she had to earn her living or starve she would have no time or opportunity to be a neurasthenic. Her energies would find an outlet and the trouble would not arise. The childless married woman generally spends her spare time in coddling her husband to a ridiculous extent or interesting herself in his profession, she may adopt a child, breed cats and dogs, or make an absurd fuss over one of them. She may take up church work or become a slave to golf, bridge or motoring. These are "compensations," which may last her all her life or may not.

But if she has none of these outlets she starts to mother herself. This is the neurotic, hypochondriacal woman who is so common. She gets ill, and makes herself worse by the fearful interest she takes in her symptoms. She loves to have her doctor tell her that her case is the most wonderful of its kind and requires from him nothing more than a palatable medicine and an apparently absorbing interest and attention.

In such cases as my correspondent hope should come to her relief. Ascertain if there are physical reasons for the failure. If not she may conceive at any time. If there are incurable impediments then the ideal solution for a married woman is to adopt an orphan. It may be difficult to persuade her to do this, but a bright nurse, who will gain her confidence and then subtly interest her in babies by talking of them or bringing in a neighbor's child, may succeed in getting her to take the step. The doctor can assist by tackling the husband and pointing out its value to him.

Our Rhyming OPTIMIST

—By Aline Michaelis—

IT is easy to start on the upward trail, there is joy in its early days; but soon, how soon, do the spirits fail as men question the unknown ways! For high hopes falter and dreams grow dim in the stress of the weary climb, as the struggle seems endless, the effort grim; so they turn, in a little time, away from the grind of a wearing quest which their faint hearts soon forego; but the man who stays, he will do his best no matter what winds may blow! There is tribute paid to the man who dares grasping fame in one swift embrace, and often the glory the hero wears may be won in an instant's space. But only the heart that is brave and true fights on through the long, dark days, and the highest honors of life are due to the strength of the man who stays!

When Manners Are Correct

—By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman—

Tuxedo Incorrect.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
In a wedding where the young couple is being married at 7 in the evening with only the bride and groom and attendants present at the ceremony, would it be appropriate for the bride to wear the usual white dress and veil and the groom a Tuxedo? The couple will immediately after the ceremony go back to the bride's home, where they will be given a reception at which fifty or sixty friends will be present.

2. What style tie do the groom and best man wear, bow tie or four-in-hand? A READER.

NO, the groom should not wear a Tuxedo. He should wear full dress, especially since there is to be a reception following.

2. The only tie that can be worn with full dress is a white bow tie, and the only tie that can be worn with a Tuxedo is a black bow tie.

Informal Dress.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
I have a dress with the new dolman sleeves. Would it be proper to wear this dress to a dance or party? If not, where would it be proper to wear it?

2. What should a girl say to a boy when he thanks her for a dance? PEGGY.

YOUR dress with the dolman sleeves sounds too daytime-y to wear to an evening dance or an evening party of any kind. From your description it is apparently a daytime dress and would be proper for any daytime affair—luncheon, afternoon tea, bridge, and so forth.

2. Something that indicates that she, too, has enjoyed the dance—"It was delightful," or "That was such a delightful dance. I enjoyed every minute of it," or some other natural comment that will convince her partner that she, too, enjoyed the dance.

Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.

FOLLY'S DAUGHTER

A Thrilling New Mystery of New York Night Life

By ANN LISLE

Dinner with Shannon

JILL HATHAWAY, sitting opposite MacNeil Shannon in his own dining room in his own suite in his own hotel, feasted on nectar and ambrosia. The dinner was a real man's meal. And in spite of her agitation Jill ate heartily of caviar, canapes and thick soup and soft shelled crabs and squab chicken and asparagus and peach ice cream. And she drank a delicious cocktail and some liqueur which he told her was "Kimmel."

ANN LISLE

It was like a dream. The tapestries on the walls of dark panelled wood, the rich, dark wood of the refectory table, with its cloth of cream damask patterned in faint tan, the service of gleaming amber glass, the fine Colonial silver, the perfect service were all new to Jill. They were like fairyland come true. She was unaccustomed to all this. But it did not frighten her. She moved slowly, carefully through it all, doing the right thing by instinct and because of inherent good taste. And when she blundered she laughed in glee—that was the only childish thing remaining to show she was young Jill Hathaway and not the gorgeous, flaming prima donna she looked.

After dinner they went to an enormous living room, whose polished floors gleamed under the soft light of discreet lamps. Wide casement windows stood open and the moist fragrance of the June evening stole in softly. Everywhere there were great couches piled with pillows, long tables piled with books, low stands with marble smoking sets, suave oil paintings under hooded lights, soft rugs whose pile silenced footsteps. The vast room with discreet shadows and overwhelming beauty and luxury gave Jill a sense of awe. She felt as if she were in a cathedral. She was glad when Mac asked her to come out on the balcony for a look at the city below.

They stood for a while at the balustrade with the panorama of twinkling lights and gleaming stars to thrill her. She did not speak; her breath came heavily.

"Drunk with beauty?" he asked understandingly.

She turned to him and smiled. It was not the radiant child smile that went with the gay little costume she had created and Folly had stolen. It was the troubled woman smile that had been born of her bitterness and disillusionment and that went with her sophisticated, daringly cut dress.

"I love beauty," she said. "It seems as if I could never get enough."

"And you've had very little," he said prompting her with knowledge of the line that always came next.

"What does that matter?" she asked. "I've all the beauty I can imagine now."

"You shall have it always," he promised, stirred by her sweet solemnity.

She lifted her eyes to his trustingly. She put out her hand and laid it in his. His fingers closed over her hand, crushed its fine slenderness inside the hard strength of his palm.

Mac Nell Shannon stood and looked at Jill quizzically and the gleam of desire came to his eyes. The girl before him was tall, radiant, pulsing with vitality, fragrant with allure. The black dress sloped away from gleaming white shoulders. A faint perfume came to his nostrils. It was wise, sophisticated, Oriental like the girl's long languorous eyes. He did not know that it was Folly's perfume coming to him from Folly's dress. He did not know what forces Folly had set in motion that day—and how Jill had come to him out of bitter disillusionment that had been turned to terror when she thought for a few long minutes that he too had failed her. And now she was in a haven of beauty and peace—and his strength and the sheer male vigor of him shook her over-stimulated imagination and her reeling senses.

Jill shook a little as she met the look in his eyes. But she did not move when his hands went out and touched the soft, gleaming flesh bared by Folly's low-cut dress. His hands, unrebuked, lingered on her shoulders, caressed her creamy, pulsing throat and came to rest on her cheeks. He lifted her face to his and he asked:

"Are you happy with me, Carmen? Would you like to be with me—always?"

She sighed and nestled close. The faith that Folly had robbed her of came back. Loneliness and longing and the ache of bitterness seemed to melt away, and the queer, furtive, half shamed sense of mystery that worried her suddenly didn't matter. Kindness was her. And friendship. And something enormous and gorgeous and flaming that made her achingly happy. And love so warm and tender that it seemed to be enfolding her and lifting her on wings.

"Kiss me," MacNeil Shannon whispered. His voice shook.

Jill lifted her face to meet his. She gave her soft warm lips to his eager, seeking mouth. She was in a dream. She hardly knew when it was that the throbbing of her heart changed from ecstasy to the beginning of fear.

Where Texas Wool Grows

A STAFF writer for a Texas newspaper volunteers the information that the sheep men of Texas are making more money than they have ever made in the history of the wool industry. He says the sheep man on land valued at about $10 to $12 an acre is grossing annually about $4 an acre or about $2600 to the section. Furthermore, he says the farmer speaks of acres while the sheepman speaks of his sections, for the ranches in the Concho river county vary from the usual four section up to 50 and 60 and even 100 sections, while the average number of sheep is about 300 to the section.

He has figures to show there are about 4,500,000 sheep in Texas and about 2,500,000 goats. This year the long wool, or the wool which has been allowed to grow for 12 months, brought around 40c a pound; the 300 ewes to the section sheared from seven to eight pounds each; that is $2400 for the wool and it cost only 10 cents to 12 cents a head to shear them. In the Del Rio and Ozona country, shearing is done twice a year and the sheep produce about nine pounds annually when sheared twice.

It is interesting to be told that the Texas 12 months wool this spring was 22,000,000 pounds and the short wool or the eight months about 7,000,000 pounds. All this wool was sold. Buyers from Boston purchased it. There are vast plants or storehouses for wool in the sheep districts of Texas. There are 18 counties in the state in which the sheep business is carried on under wolf proof fences. Farmers in the sheep area made more money off their sheep carried as a side line than they have made off their crops.

There are two operators in West Texas who sheared the second largest crop of wool in their 185,000 pound accumulation. W. A. Miers of Sonora lead all others. He had 200,000 pounds of wool for the New England buyers. Mexicans are employed on these ranches. They are the best sheep herders to be found. They are professional shearers. They are docile and industrious and never desert their job. Wouldn't it be great if there were woolen mills in the sheep districts of Texas? Wouldn't it be great if Texas was a manufacturing state as well as a wool producing state and supplied the markets of the world with woolen goods instead of wool and mohair?

"Jim's" Bell County Road

NOW the gap in "Jim's" Bell county highway is to be finished. A Belton correspondent writes the state highway department is advertising for bids for a construction of two short pieces of road between Belton and Temple, "which were not completed at the time the rest of the road was built." One of the bits of road, according to the Belton writer, will be built under the Santa Fe railroad in the edge of Belton, and will be about one-half mile long, and the other is a short stretch near Midway and will be a paved section where the Belton-Temple Electric railway recently removed its track.

This is the conclusion, "When these sections are complete Belton and Temple will be connected by a first class paved highway for the first time in the history of the towns. Critics of the governor and the state highway commission have been telling the people in Bell and adjoining counties that the gaps would not be filled or completed because it was "Jim's road."

"Jim" started it; Dan and his three highway commissioners will finish it. Of course, the people will pay for it. This is their sacred duty.

Advertise the Black Hills

"I HAVE never seen anything that excels the region in here," remarked President Coolidge to the men and women of the National Editors association who visited the state game lodge to pay their respects. "When you are sending your dispatches back to your papers, I want you to advertise this territory to the limit, and I will do what I can to support you."

Sure. In advertising the Black Hills country to the limit, the aforesaid editors and publishers when they write their dispatches, will be compelled to let the world know that the president is having the time of his life in the Black Hills country, that the people are the finest and the voters the most intelligent to be found anywhere, and incidentally let it be known that when there is demand for wheat and corn at prices above the cost of production, the Black Hills country and the corn and wheat belts roll up heavy majorities for the Republicans from president to town constable.

Publicity is the thing. A wise political statesman knows its value. Pass it along, brothers of the press. There is no land like the Black Hills lands. There is no people like the Black Hills people. Next year will be presidential campaign year. Spread the glad tidings. Prosperity is neck deep everywhere, Andrew W. Mellon has reduced the public debt many billion dollars since Woodrow Wilson went out and Warren G. Harding came in. This is the prize song of the Republican Glee club. Spill it everywhere.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By BURTON ROSCOE

NEW YORK, June 24.—Mayor Walker has been complimented by famous tailors from London and from Paris on the cut of his clothes. By one of them he was designated as "America's best dressed man."

But Mayor Walker dresses more in "the New York manner" than the average well-dressed New Yorker. The average well-dressed New Yorker takes his cue either from London or from the colleges in the matter of dress. Mayor Walker's tailor apparently takes his cue from Broadway—or the mayor does—and so the mayor wears pin striped serges and closely woven materials, with rather tight fitting coats, usually single-breasted, with two buttons and narrow, long lapels. The same type of of suit, only in a more exaggerated form, witha a pinchback coat, is almost the uniform of the Broadway song and dance men.

Those who take their cue in dress from London, wear square-front vests, trousers pleated at the waist, coats with reinforced shoulders, tapering toward the waist, and made of goods that stay in press.

Those who take their cue from the colleges wear suits of cheviots worsteds and tweeds, loose-fitting, usually light in color and with a "comfortable" appearance.

Michael Williams in the Commonweal relates that Sinclair Lewis used to carry around a trunk full of plots, newspaper clippings, and notes of conversations for his novels. Lewis had so many plots carefully noted down on index cards when he met Jack London in Carmel, Calif., in Lewis' early days as a writer that he sold ten or 15 of them to London for ten dollars a plot. London was short of plots and Lewis, in those days, was short of cash. Out of the ten dollar plots bought from Lewis, London could write stories and sell them for $1000 apiece.

Here and there: Lucien Estey and Justin Spafford were broke when they compiled a questionnaire book called "Ask Me Another!" They have made a fortune of it . . . Dorothy Parker, the poet, is up and about again after an illness. Her book of poems, "Enough Rope," is among the nonfiction best sellers, and deserves to be . . . Texas Guinan spread out from the night club racket and put on a show called "The Padlocks of 1927." It proved to be a costly venture, drawing little patronage. . . . The higher up you get in a New York office building the less distinct are the separate noises from the street, but instead they are blended and so form a continuous roar . . . The term 'racket' in New York means a sideline, usually an easy way of making money. In Wall Street, for instance, a broker's clerk may have a few private customers, for whom he trades not through the company he works for, but through another brokerage house. That is his "racket." On Broadway, it means any method of making money inside from one's regular trade, business or employment . . . Something ought to be done about Robert Benchley. He is demoralizing. He has just published a new book, "The Early Worm." It is such darn funny nonsense that it takes you away from all serious thought and all serious endeavor; and that, as you know, is bad for the morale. . . There is a fight on between two local dramatic critics and they have been calling each other names in their columns and threatening each other with punches in the nose . . . The subway stations need re-painting. They are dingy and dirty. The unpainted wooden floors of the platforms at the Times Square and Grand Central stations of the subway shuttle have given the shuttle a temporary and unfinished look ever since it was constructed . . . Simile. As rare as a velour hat in June . . . In a crowded subway train the other day I found myself jammed up against former Ambassador Gerard . . . Tom Mix, the movie actor, has a most serious and dignified look when he is eating in a public restaurant . . . The things they call chili con carne on the bill of fares in some New York restaurants! I am fond of chile and seeing it on the menue of a restaurant I ordered some. What they brought me was a dish of boiled rice, tomatoes and green onions. Wonder what they think "con carne" means? And there was not a trace of chili pepper in the concoction. I sent it back and got what it was represented to be . . . There are two good places to get chili in New York, at Forons on Fifty-second street, and at chill parlor just opened on East Forty-ninth street just off Sixth Avenue. . . . The Automat is one of the best places to get good coffee. Except downtown, there are few restaurants where the coffee is good . . . There are some new taxicabs on the street which look like imported limousines. Their fare is the same as in most of the other cabs. Personally I like to ride in Hughie Roger's cab. It is a rattlely hack that has been long in service, but Hughie is a careful driver and he always points out the former residences of millionaires of the 'Nineties which are now occupied by business houses on the avenue, and usually tells me some gossip about the people who formerly occupied them. And Hughie knows, because he used to drive a horse drawn cab and his patrons were the rich old timers . . .

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

The entrance of America into the World war finds Phillip Wynne Tracy IV suffering from the collapse of his first passionate love affair. Before this, he had had a childish engagement with Natlee Jones.

Phil and Rod are the first to enlist. Phil's regiment is ordered back to New York, presumably bound for France. While in New York he meets Natlee and their love flaming anew, they plan to be married. The immediate departure of the troops, however, prevents this.

Phil's regiment is sent to the front soon after arriving in France and Phil is detailed on an extremely dangerous mission. Returning with important information is wounded and Rod is killed trying to save his friend. Phil wakes in a hospital and receives the croix de guerre for bravery.

In a gloomy frame of mind, Phil receives letters from home.

Here the story further unholds:

He had never been kissed so much in all his life.

CHAPTER XXXIX

A LETTER FROM NATLEE

Phillip Tracy did not realize that he had unconsciously delayed opening Natlee's letter, for after what his mother had written about Jerome Kenyon, he was almost afraid to read its contents. Its first words, however, reassured him:

"My Darling:

"Thank God, Wynne, you're still in the land of the living. Thank God, I can sit up here in my own little room, secure, I hope, from interruption, and put my thoughts on paper with the feeling that some time you will read them.

"Even as I write these words, I feel that I am the wickedest girl on earth for being the least bit thankful for anything, when Rod is dead.

"Out of my window I see across the street the old oak tree where you and I used to meet so often, and where Rod comforted me that last time when I knew that you had enlisted and were going to war.

"I am sure you won't mind, Wynne, dear, when I tell you that I have wished many times that I could have loved Rod instead of you, for I love devotedly and singly. Why, I know, if he thought at all after those cruel bullets hit him, it was with joy because he was saving you for me.

"Rodney Maxwell loved me all his life. You have only allowed me to love you.

"I do not say that to hurt you. It is only because I have before me the great uncompromising truth of Rod's death, that I have determined without the slightest hypocrisy either traditional or conventional, to write you exactly what is in my mind.

"Do not mistake me, dear heart. I think perhaps you love me as much as anyone of your blood could love one woman, but I know that I always have, and I always will have, to take my chance with the other distractions in your life.

"I have never been your interest in it, although I am sure I am your greatest. With Rod I was the beginning and the end. I wish I could have loved him as he loved me, but dear Wynne, it is a thrill that you or I will never have, because we have not the termperament for it.

"I expect I am utterly shameless to tell this to you.

"My mother, or even your mother, would probably have died before either of them would have confessed to the men they expected to be their husbands, what I am going to write to you.

"In their generation a woman considered herself immodest if she did more than submit herself to her lover's 'Protestations of love'—as they would call them. She allowed him to kiss her. I wonder sometimes if she ever kissed him in return.

"The war has changed all that, Wynne. We girls that are being called 'flappers' over here, though just what anyone means by that I do not know, have seen our lovers go away from us with the sickening feeling that they would probably never come back, consequently we have torn away all—all the crepe of convention and we glory in free speech at least.

"Oh, Wynne, I wish you would come home soon. I wish we had married as we planned that morning before you left. I wish I were your wife.

"I love you with all my heart—with all my soul—but Dad is driving me with his idea that I should marry Jerome Kenkon, and sometimes—don't misunderstand me, Wynne—I think I will do it.

"There! I've said it, and I'm glad I have, for however much it may shock you, I am sure that it will make me human in your eyes, and I have never had a desire to be either a superhuman or a divine woman.

"I am fond of Jerry. He is delightfully tender and uniformly gentle. He shows me in a thousand silent ways that he is fond of me. He defers to my tastes and follows my advice—something, my dear, that you have never done. I like him more than any other man I have met except you.

"Not even poor, dear Rod had the power to make me feel his presence the moment he came into the room, and Jerry has this power.

"I suspect you are thinking this is a very strange letter for a girl to write to a man who has, as it were, come back to her from the dead. It is just because I do realize this that I am writing it.

"You are probably thinking that if I love you as I say I do, I would have no place in my heart for any other man.

"Have you never had a thought for any other girl?

"And yet you say you have never really loved anyone but me.

"And, Wynne, if making my whole body tremble while thinking of you—if my soul's longing for the sound of your voice is so great that when any other man speaks—even Jerry—I almost would stop my ears—means that I love you, then you must believe that I do.

"Once you wrote that you judged your love for me by these very indications, which makes me think that a woman's love is no different than a man's.

"I want you to remember, dear, that I appreciate all the hardships you have gone through—all the bravery you have shown to go through them—and I am very proud that you are my man.

"NATLEE."

The first thing Phillip thought after he read this letter was that the war was turning this old world topsy turvy.

It had made his mother younger and more human in her heart, although she complained of white in her hair.

It had evidently brought virtue to Glad—if being chaste meant virtue.

It had made Natlee somewhat skeptical on the subject of love, and it had made himself feel old—so old—and although not yet 21, he was sorry for his lost youth.

He almost felt that Rod was the most fortunate after all.

With death all about him, he knew that living was going to be much harder than dying could possibly be. He was sure he could not go back home and take up the old life again where he had for so long been happy.

His artillery was in the Argonne woods. There had been 14 of them in his own detail of headquarters company when they had started out so gayly from the little French town to go up to the front. When he arrived back with his outfit, he found that he made the fifth that was left—but the round of duty went on.

All the happy-go-lucky temperament had gone out of Phil, however. He didn't realize in those months in the hospital how much he was going to miss Rod—how much he could miss Rod; that really the outfit only meant Rod to him. It was lonely and everyone was so sick and discouraged.

It was cold and rainy. It didn't seem as though the war was ever going to end, and his lungs hurt.

There seemed no place for him anywhere.

The very trees, with their shattered trunks standing up so patiently to the continuous shell fire seemed to say to him that if would go on forever—and O God, he was sick—sick in body and mind!

Major Andrews led him away as he was going down into the dugout.

"Tracy, you look like the devil. You've got to do something for yourself. I'll tell you what let's do. An order has just come in to send down two men to the motor school at La Blanc. It looks as if everybody thought this war was decided to motorize all the artillery."

"Maybe they think they'll want the horses for food, sir," said Phil.

"You needn't try to change the subject, Tracy. I meant it. You've either got to go back to the hospital or take this chance of going to school. I don't mind which."

"All right. I'll go to the school. When do I leave?"

"Tonight. Go and pack your things."

How Phil regretted that decision for it was only three days later that the armistice was declared and he was in La Blanc in the south of France. He would almost have given his soul to have been there with his outfit, when the guns ceased firing.

Everyone, however, seemed deliriously happy, but himself, in the little French town where he was a complete stranger.

That didn't keep everyone from kissing him, though. He had never been kissed so much in all his life as he was that day. Old women, old men, young women and children. Every American uniform seemed to hold their own special hero who had to be hugged and kissed and exclaimed over and treated to a drink—and oh, how drunk he got!

The next morning he could not determine if for him the end of the war was tragic or ridiculous.

He had started out with such high hopes. Such wonderful ideals. He had flung himself into the breach with the enthusiasm of a young crusader—and ended by getting drunk.

The motor school which Phil attended taught him all the things about the insides of tractors and motorcycles and how to repair them when they didn't work, and Phil kept wondering, "what's the use?"

It was only at night that sitting in the dining room of a small cafe, drinking red wine, eating goat's milk cheese and bread, that he managed to recapture a little of the contentment of living that he had known before he had gone up to the front.

Would he ever capture it as he had had it back home before he joined the American army overseas?

(To Be Continued)

Phil is sent to Germany. His mother plans to go to Europe to see him and Major Aukland begs her to go as his wife. Will she?

And they said, Go to, let us build us a city and a tower, whose top may reach unto Heaven; and let us make us a name, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth.

And the Lord came down to see the city and the tower, which the children of men builded.

And the Lord said, Behold, the people is one and they have all one language; and this they begin to do; and now nothing will be restrained from them, which they have imagined to do.—Genesis 2:4-6.

MODISH MITZI — Home Again! — By JAY V. JAY

Past the Statue of Liberty. Past the famous sky line—safely and impatiently tugged into the pier. Mitzi is home again—or near it. She's saying goodbye to French life, and incidentally to a number of French men. The only thing she can count upon keeping absolutely French, is her clothes.

Her hat, for instance, will always be as Paris made it—with the small tuckings in front, with the wide band and the jeweled pin on the side. Her ensemble suit with coat of silk and dress of striped georgette will help her to create a French atmosphere among the new friends she brings with her.

Aunt Sophia met Mitzi and Polly. Just when Mitzi was telling Aunt Sophia how they never had any trouble at all in traveling, the steward arrives with something Mitzi left behind her. He also says that another steward is coming with the hatbox she left. And where is her passport—not that she needs it any more but—The stewards will find it—they always have! Mitzi doesn't hesitate to ask Aunt Sophia right off if she doesn't like Polly's hat of snake and straw? And Aunt Sophia's jabor extending to the hip is like a dress she saw in Paris. Well, now for the customs of their own country. They appear in the shape of an official badge.

TRIMBLE THEATRE — By Segar

KID DUGAN — By Dick Dorgan

Dear Al,

This hear Kid Dugan is a fathead, and I ought to know better than credit him with any brains because he blames me for losing the fight when all I said was that Hazel Black who he's stuck on was there, and the big sap turns around and stops one with his chin when he ain't looking. Well, it looks like Tunney was safe and that Dugan won't have no acquaintance with him except to say "Hello, Gene," to him if he passes him on the street and Tunney won't answer the big bum back.

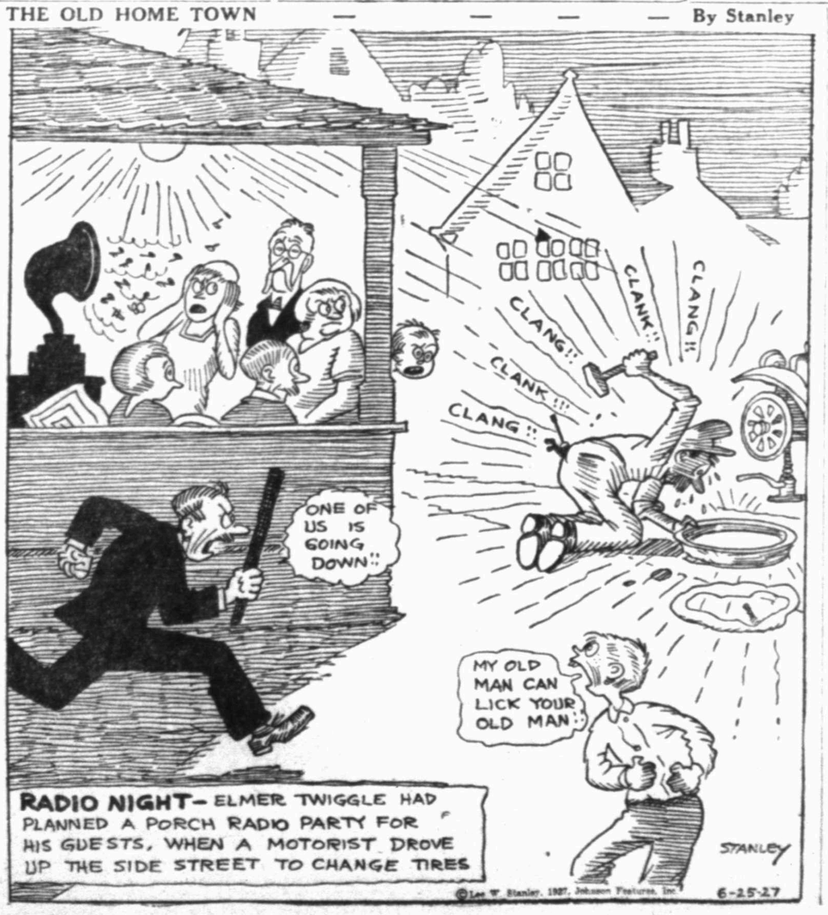

I don't believe I'll be home this trip because the boys might not understand after what the newspapers published on the fight and anyhow the Pirates are hanging on to first place by their teeth some of which is false so I guess Bush needs me. Hype Igoe has asked me to meet Jimmie Walker who is the Mayor of New York, and they tell me he is a good scout so I guess we will understand each other. Hope to see you soon.

Your friend,

Jack Keefe.

Since prices of groceries in the local markets — it depends on where one buys, when one buys, and in what quantity one buys—as to just how little or how much will be the cost, of furnishing the family table. "Love Apple Salad" Wins Special Award

The "Love Apple Salad" of Mrs. S. M. Holden, route 3, Iowa Park, Texas, wins a one dollar prize for being an excellent recipe. It seems a particularly palatable summer recipe.

Love Apple Salad

Take small red tart apples of regular size, wash and polish the apples, cut slices from the tops and remove the pulp, cut tops and thus removed into tiny pieces, mix with an equal quantity of celery, shredded fine and blanched in lemon water and half the quantity of chopped English walnuts, mix well and moisten with a good boiled dressing, and fill the apples well. On each place a heart cut from a halved maraschina cherry. Serve on individual plates covered with lace-paper doiles. This serves six people (It takes only 6 tars apples).

"Sour Milk" Complaint of Housewives Traced To Sun's Power On Porches

Milk should be immediately placed in an ice box after being delivered by the milkman, was the advice issued Friday by Dr. I. L. Lucey, director of the health department, following complaints lodged with his office by housewives who asserted that they were receiving sour milk.

"Naturally milk will sour," said Dr. Lucey, "if left on a porch for several hours with the sun shining at full blast on the bottle."

During the past several days, Dr. Lucey asserted, a number of complaints relative to sour milk have been lodged by housewives who declared that the milk dealers in the city were selling sour milk, however, after Dr. Lucey had questioned them he discovered that the milk had been left on porches for several hours after the deliveries had been made by the milkmen.

Dr. Lucey also stressed the necessity of housewives cleaning milk bottles when empty.

"When the bottles are not cleaned immediately after being emptied," said Dr. Lucey, "the milk left in the bottles hardens which makes it extremely difficult for the dairies to clean the bottles."

Here Are Points On How to Select Chicken, Popular Meat in Summer

There is no article of food which can be prepared and served in so many ways as chicken, and this is just the season when we are all seeking ned ideas. Most of us serve chicken more often during warm weather than in winter because it is not such a heating food, it does not contain so much fat as pork or some of the other heavier meats.

Chicken makes a splendid food for breakfast, dinner, luncheon, or supper. It is good in sandwiches for picnics, or salad to be served at the most formal luncheon. Left-over chicken can be easily made in a number of ways which does not seem as though we are serving left-overs.

Some housewives may consider that chicken is expensive. It is but not so much if you make use of every piece in leftover dishes, or if you are serving a large number. There is no meat which will go as far if combined with a sauce and served creamed, scalloped or in croquettes.

The selection of a chicken is one of the most important points to consider when planning a chicken dinner It should be plump, the flesh firm andthe ti pof the breast bone tender. The flavor is much improved if it contains fat. Fat in chicken is found in layers, just under the skin and around the intestines.

Chickens for broiling or frying must be young, while an older one can be used for baking and fricasseeing.

The white meat is more easily digested than the dark. The legs, because o fthe csonstant motion, are of coarse texture and dark, therefore, more difficult to digest.

Chickens which appear on the market in January weighing 1 1-2 or 2 pounds are called spring chickens, but fowl can be purchased anytime during the year.

BRIDES' LUNCHEON

When one is entertaining for the bride-elect, a veranda luncheon is an informal, pleasant affair. The same menu, as suggested by Miss Chinn of the National Dairy council, may also serve for the wedding luncheon:

Almond Soup
Stuffed Olives Celery Hearts
Broiled Spring Chicken
Peas in Patties
Au gratin Potatoes
Fruit Salad
Ice Cream and Bride's Cake.

In making almond soup, cook a cupful of blanched, chopped almonds in a quart of thin cream for five minutes; thicken a little; add seasoning; strain and pour over a cupful of thick whipped cream. Serve the soup hot while foamy in heated cups, with toasted crackers.

AVOCADO SANDWICHES

Mash the flesh of the avocado and spread thickly on toast or spread between thin slices of bread and serve as sandwiches. Salt and pepper. Avocado on toast goes well with any meal, as the main dish at breakfast, lunch, tea or supper or as an hors d'oeuvre at dinner.

COOKIE RECIPE

Mrs. F. G. Jeffers, 417 West Main street, will receive one dollar for the following recipe for cookies. Mrs. Jeffers states they are especially fine for summer as they require very little time to prepare.

1 cup chopped walnuts
1 cup chopped dates
1 cup powdered sugar
1-2 teaspoon salt
2 eggs
3-4 cup flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
3 tablespoons shortening.

Add sugar and salt to eggs, beat until foamy. Add shortening, stir in fruit, then flour and baking powder sifted together. Spread 1-2 inch thick in well-greased shallow pan. Bake in slow oven. When cool cut in squares and roll in powdered sugar. These cookies may be made any time during the week before.

USE BREAD CRUMBS

Even though the housewife is ever so careful, stale bread will accumulate. Very little time is required to grind this dry bread. After it is ground the crumbs may be placed in a slow oven where they will dry out thoroughly, then brown. If they are kept in a fruit jar the lid should not be tightened, or a cloth should be tied over the top of the jar, because moisture remaining in the crumbs will cause them to mold.

These crumbs have just as great a value as far as nutrition is concerned as the slices of bread which we consume daily. They may be used for croquettes, meat and vegetable loaf, pudding, cakes, casseroles, sauces, and as a thickening agent for soups.

CLOVER LEAF ROLLS

4 cups flour
4 level teaspoons baking powder.
2 teaspoons sugar
lard. oinr
4 level tablespoons butter or lard.
1 1-2 cups milk
1 level teaspoon salt

Sift flour once, then measure, add salt, baking powder and sugar and sift three times, rub shortening in with fork or spoon, mix lightly, add milk. Turn out on a well floured board and form into small balls 1 inch in diameter and place three in each muffin pan. Bake in a quick over 450 degrees F. fifteen minutes to seventeen.

Pineapple Adds Much To Meal; In Food Value

The opening of the pineapple season is of great value to the housewife not only from the culinary standpoint but for its medicinal properties.

Pineapple is one fruit which can be used for practically all purposes and on all occasions, from the most simple salad to one of greater expense, consisting of a combination of fruits, nuts and whipped cream. It can be used as an extender inasmuch as a little goes a long way when combined with other fruit.

It is not only used for salads, but for desserts, either plains or in puddings and it is perfectly delicious served with candied sweet potatoes.

Fresh pineapple requires little sugar, its tart and fragrant odor seems to just adde the proper zest to a meal.

"I see where a girl got $25,000 for a broken leg the other day," says impecunious Imogene, "and here I have two good ones that are nothing but an expense to me."

Nourishing Breakfast Important to Health

By MARION JANE PARKER

In this age of hurry, even the most sensible neglect their own personal needs. One of these offenses is committed when they fail to eat a good nourishing breakfast. By good nourishing breakfast I do not mean a slice of toast and a cup of coffee. No housewife would think of serving such a meager bit of food for lunch or dinner.

Between those two meals there has been only a period of four or five hours elapse, while the period between dinner and breakfast is always 12 hours and sometimes more.

Even so, some individuals extend this period for 4 or 5 hours more. Is this a fair way to treat the body?

So often the appetite is not hungry so we are led to think that the body is not hungry. But, this is a false assumption. To tempt this dormant appetite, we must make the meal so attractive that it cannot be resisted. A simple breakfast may be served on an attractive breakfast cloth with a pretty colored center piece of flowers or fruit. The surroundings add to the charm of the food. The neatness and cleanliness of the breakfast table is very important.

Since there are so many different types of breads, breakfast foods, and fruits, there is no need for monotony in food. If oranges are to be served there is an infinite number of ways to serve them. In the half-shell, sliced, sectioned, sugared, as juice, with other fruit, and in many more ways depending upon the imagination and ingenuity of the one serving.

Either cooked or uncooked cereals may be served. The kind depends upon several things. The hot cereals furnish more calories so are best for children and people doing manual labor.

Toast is very nice to be served for breakfast, but it becomes monotonous if served daily. If you do not have time to prepare hot breads in the morning, mix biscuits, or muffins, the night before, place them in the pans and they can be baked very quickly the following morning.

Always Visit Your Parents Often Dorothy Dix Tells Girl On Her Own

Dear Miss Dix: I am a girl 20 years of age, making a fair salary, enough to live comfortably on. Three years ago I left home because my mother and father were so strict that they would not let me go to places of amusement nor would they let me have any boys come to see me. I did not want to do anything wrong, just have a little innocent pleasure.

Now I love my mother and father, and they are anxious for me to come back home, but they refuse to give me a guarantee of a better home life. What shall I do, go or stay where I am?

WORRIED.

Answer:

Stay where you are and go to visit your parents from time to time.

Parents do not change their ideals, nor do they ever realize that their children are grown up and have a right to their own point of view about matters. If you go back home, you will find that your father and mother still feel that they have a right to boss you and to keep you from going to places of amusement, and you will have all the old bitter quarrels and heart-burnings over again.

It is very often a mistake for children to try to live at home when there is constant friction between a child and its father and mother. They are both happier when they are separated. Your parents will love and admire you more if you maintain your own independence and they have pleasant visits from you than they will if you go back and are in a perpetual fight with them.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix: I am in love with two girls. One of them is good-looking, intelligent,accomplished, capable of entering any society—a girl any man woud be proud to have for a wife.

The other girl is only average in looks, limited education, no accomplishments. Just a simple home girl who would make a good wife, take care of his home and save his money.

Between the two girls there is scarcely any comparison, and yet I find myself caring for the girl last described. It would be a shock to both my family and friends if I were to marry her, yet why should a man not follow his heart in spite of other things which we are probably too much inclined to consider.

AN UNDECIDED BACHELOR.

No reason at all. In love the heart is the only thing to follow. Love isn't a thing to be reasoned about. It's a matter of instinct. We do not love people because they are beautiful and intelligent and good and kind. They may be all of that and satisfy our highest critical judgment and yet leave us perfectly cold and unresponsive. In the end it all comes down to the Doctor Fell argument: "I do not love you, Dr. Fell; the reason why I cannot tell." And that's all there is to it.

Undoubtedly your first girl is much better fitted for your wife, so far as her qualifications go, than is the second girl. But her good looks and her intelligence and her accomplishments are as nothing weighed in the balance against that indefinable something the other girl has that draws you to her, that makes you want her, that makes you love her.

In a case where the choice had to be made between the girl that fires your fancy and the girl that comes up to your idea; I should take the girl that fired my fancy every time. DOROTHY DIX.

INTERRUPTIONS

When I sit down with my mending
The puss jumps in my lap,
And curls up on the stockings
To take a little nap.

The twins climb up in the evening
As I'm answering my mail,
And tease for a game or a romping
Or a rousing pirate's tale.

Friends drop in when I'm cleaning,
Or struggling to trim a hat,
And I must stop my working
To gossip with them and chat.

These hindrances and distractions
Strangely, do no irk.
Such friendly interruptions
Are pleasanter than work!

Today { At the Theaters

By Ruth Morrison

Majestic: "The Love of Sunya," with Gloria Swanson; comedy and news.
Olympic: Monte Blue starring in "Black Diamond Express," comedy and Fox News.
Mission: "Hills of Peril," and chapter 7 of "Return of the Riddle Rider." On the stage Pete Pate Musical show.
Garden: "The Little Boss," with Ruth Mix; No. 10 "Melting Millions," and Fable comedy.
Gem: Harry Carey in "Satan Town," and comedy.

Something entirely new in pictures is "Moulders of Men," which is coming to the Olympic theater Friday for four days.

Conway Tearle portrays the part of a millionaire doctor and a high official in the Elks' organization. He gets an appointment as head of a federal bureau so that he will be in a position to combat the crime wave that is rushing through his town, leaving corruption and destruction in its path. He captures one of the gangsters, who pleads with him to take care of his crippled brother. Tearle takes the kid to one of the large Elks' hospitals where a famous surgeon operates and restores the boy's health and shattered limb. In the end he rounds up the gang and regenrates the kid's brother.

Ralph Ince, who had charge of the direction, considers "Moulders of Men" one of the best pictures he has ever made.

Conway Tearle is an ideal selection for his part and he does some very wonderful emotional acting. Frankie Darro, who has displaced Jackie Coogan in the "kid" parts, takes the part of the crippled boy. Margaret Morris, radiantly beautiful as the feminine star, plays opposite Tearle as a newspaper writer.

A fine supporting cast includes Jola Mendez, Eugene Palette and Bill Knight.

HUGE SHALLOW PRODUCER IN EASTERN PECOS COUNTY FIELD

TOOLS BLOWN UP IN HOLE

Flow of 450 Barrels Hourly In Big Well

SAN ANGELO, June 24. — A flow of 450 barrels hourly from 1045 feet with tools blown up in the hole today marked mid-Kansas and Transcontinental No. 6—a Yates as one of the greatest shallow producers in Eastern Pecos county. It is the eighth in the field and the seventh on land owned by Ira G. Yates of San Angelo.

The well is near the north line of section 34 1-2 block 1. L. and G. N. Ry. Co. survey and five hundred feet south of number 1 I-C Yates, fartherest eastern producer until Allsman and Bell No. 1 Pecos river bed came in.

No. 4 Yates deepened to 1258 feet increased to three thousand barrels daily. It came in at 1229 feet for 2100 barrels daily. This well and six increased total production to 9428 barrels with all other producers pinched in some on 3-16 inch chokes.

Haskell Tests Drill Ahead

Both the Blackstone Oil company's No. 1 Grissom and Dr. Zeigler's No. 1 Scott, Haskell county wildcats, are drilling ahead after having encountered gas flows a shallow levels.

The Blackstone test is seven miles south of Haskell in section 12, W. J. Montgomery survey, penetrated two feet of gas sand at 1462 feet. The 10-inch was run, the gas shut off and the test is now drilling ahead with considerable prestige gained as a result.

Dr. Zeigler's well had its second gas flow at 1290 feet which was shut off. It is now drilling below 1400 feet.

Marland to Make Gas Well of Carver Test

AMARILLO, June 24. — The Marland Oil company has decided to complete its No. 1 Carver, in section 6, of William Heath survey, in northwestern Hutchinson county, as a gasser.

It was stopped at 3860 feet, some 495 feet below sea level and with no more oil or gas showing. The well will be plugged back to the gas sands, topped at 2925 feet and bottomed at 3215 feet, where the gas gauged 10,200,000 cubic feet a day.

This well had a small oil showing from 3250 to 3258 feet, but it did not make a commercial well.

Southeast of Dumas, in Moore county, the Marland Oil company has quit drilling at 3344 feet in No. 1 Sneed, in section 25, block 1, of J Poitevent survey. It was in blue shale with nothing showing. The plans call for plugging in back to save it as a gasser. It is reported that this well had an oil showing from 3152 to 3202 feet, but it failed to make a well when tested there.

The Douglas Oil company in No. 1 Beauchamp, in section 112, block 44, of H. & T. C. survey, due south of Dumas, was drilling below 3705 feet in a line, with nothing showing. It was then 149 feet below sea level. The owners plan to drill to 3800 feet, unless production should be found at a shallower depth.

News Of The Field

NEAR ARCHER CITY.

Pandem Oil corporation has spudded in and is drilling below 200 feet in No. 1 King and Looney, located four miles northeast of Archer City and in block 150, J. W. Harris subdivision, Archer county.

HOLLIDAY PRODUCER.

United Producers company et al. are skidding the rig 300 feet west to drill their No. 2, J. J. Perkins in block 22, league 3, Denton county school land, one mile southeast of Holliday in North Archer county. The No. 1 is being placed on the pump with an estimated output of 25 barrels from sand at 1012 feet.

SOUTH WICHITA COUNTY.

L. P. Hammond and associates are running pipe to test out a sand at 1762 feet in No. 1 Munger, located in block 31, Kemp's Wichita Valley land, South Wichita county.

SOUTH YOUNG COUNTY.

Ruthada Oil company's No. 3 Stovall in the South Bend field of South Young county, swabbed 45 barrels from the 3900-foot pay and may be drilled deeper.

A week's drilling should put R. W. Painter's No. 1 Donnell in the 4000-foot pay. This well, located in section 2371, T. E. & L. survey and near the Throckmorton county line, had 2000 feet of oil in the hole which was swabbed down. It is now fishing at 3980 feet. First oil showing was at 3804 feet where 700 feet of oil rose in the hole.

In extreme South Young county and north of Eliasville, the Texas and Pacific Coal and Oil company has made location for its No. 3 Donnell in the northwest corner of section 1211, T. E. & L. survey. No. 3 came in several weeks ago flowing 35 barrels per hour.

COOKE COUNTY.

Fain-McGaha Oil company has reached a depth of 2180 and is drilling in No. 1 Pybas-Binford, located in the Clements survey, Cooke county.

ANDREWS COUNTY.

Maer and Staniforth are drilling at 4030 feet in their wildcat test on the Meador ranch in Andrews county and in will drill considerably more of the big lime before quitting the hole. This test attracted considerable attention several weeks ago when it encountered a showing of gas at 3010 feet.

Seminole Flood Increases As Prairie Brings in Big Gusher

TULSA, June 24.—Almost each day sees a gusher producer in the Earlsboro pool of the Seminole field, Prairie Oil and Gas company bringing in the newest in its No. 2 Stidham, SE corner SW NE of 11-9-5, which at but seven feet in the Wilcox sand topped at 4307 feet, flowed 3190 barrels its first 14 hours, ended at seven o'clock yesterday morning. This well is one location east of the same company's No. 1 Stidham, which was drilled in a week ago and which had an initial output of 180 barrels per hour.

The Empire Gas and Oil company No. 1 Edmundson, SE corner SW of 3-9-5, which for five days after getting the sand produced more than 10,000 barrels daily, decreased slightly the 24 hours ended Thursday morning, when its total was 9866 barrels. This well came in on June 17.

Seminole field's production increased 4266 barrels Wednesday, the total for that day being 392,102 barrels, as compared with 387,836 barrels for the previous day. There are now 542 wells producing in the field.

The Bowlegs pool which made 166,010 barrels shows quite an increase, its output the previous day having been 160,433 barrels; Earlsboro made 85,407 barrels, which is an increase of over 3000 barrels in 24 hours.

Seminole City made 104,360 barrels which is a decline of 3927 barrels and Searight also shows a decrease, its total output being 36,262 barrels.

NEW YORK COTTON.

NEW YORK, June 24. (AP)—The cotton market was comparatively quiet today with prices generally lower under near month liquidation and selling of later deliveries which appeared to be promoted by a more favorable opinion of weather conditions in western and central belt sections. After selling off to 16.88 at the start, October rallied to 16.95, but broke to 16.87 in late trading, and closed at 16.92. The general market closed steady at net declines of three to four points.

The opening was barely steady at a decline of four to seven points on the more favorable view of the weather map, while there may also have been some selling on reports from Liverpool that the cotton yarn association in Manchester had decided to increase the curtailment of production; reducing it to about 65 per cent of normal compared with the present rate of 75 per cent. Initial offerings were readily absorbed, however, with spot interest buyers of July against sales of later deliveries while there was some trade buying and covering in the new crop months.

This demand seemed to be stimulated to some extent by the detailed weather reports showing further showers or rains in eastern belt sections and private reports showing that boll weevils were increasing. July sold up to 16.59 or back to yesterday's close, while December rallied from 17.12, the early low level, to 17.18, or within two points of yesterday's closing quotations.

These bulges met increased offerings during the afternoon when there seemed more disposition to liquidate long contracts for over the week-end, but the unsettled eastern belt weather and boll weevil complaints were sustaining factors. July sold off to 16.50 and December to 17.10 net declines of eight to 10 points, but a few points of the losses were recovered in late trading. The attention of traders during the day appeared to be centered on evening up of July contracts in preparation for probable notices next Tuesday, although the buying against sales of later deliveries at a difference of about 36 to 37 points between July and October, was regarded by some operators as establishing a basis for further liquidation.

Exports today 13,228 bales, making 10,736,363 so far this season. Port receipts 8986. U. S. Port stocks 1,327,914.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, June 24. (AP)—An indisposition to operate in advance of the first notice day for July tomorrow caused the cotton market to become dull and uninteresting today. Prices fluctuated aimlessly, and after declining in the early trading rose to 16.54 for July, or two points above the previous close. The market turned easy later and despite a fair rally in th e late trading closed at net losses for the day ofthree points onall active months.

After an irregular opening the market turned on the downgrade, additional July liquidation and selling based on the better weather outlook for the western belt carried July down to 16.45, October 16.80 and December 17.05, seven to nine points below the previous close.

The market then became quiet and prices fluctuated within the earlier range. After midsession some trade buying brought July up to 16.56, two points above yesterday's close, but that month later eased to 16.44. December madea new low at 17.02 on selling of that month against the July purchases.

The marekt rallied 6 to 8 points in the final trading on reports of considerable land being flooded in the Rio Grande valley.

Exports forthe day totalled 8,158 bales and for the week 73,277 bales.

COMMERCIAL BULLETIN.

BOSTON, June 24. (AP)—The Commercial Bulletin tomorrow will say:

The wool market continues to strengthen slightly from week to week. Prices in the west as well as in the eastern markets are slightly dearer, though not on all descriptions. Fine staple wools and quarter blood domestics have been in chief request. Scoured and pulled wools are firm. Carpet wools are rather slow.

The foreign markets are showing a hardening tendency in line with the expectation of a 5 per cent rise at London.

The goods market appears to be in better form, especially with the feeling of greater solidarity in consequence of the meeting Thursday in New York to consider a practical plan of co-operation primarily in the merchandising of goods.

The demand for mohair still is slow with prices unchanged. Wool quotations:

Scoured basis, Texas fine 12 months selected $1.05@1.08; fine 8 months 90@92c.

TEXAS VEGETABLES.

SAN ANTONIO, June 24. (Texas Market News Service.)—Texas fruit and vegetable movement yesterday consisted of 161 cars of watermelons, 2 of potatoes, 11 of onions, 1 of peppers, 14 of tomatoes, one of cantaloupes.

Tomatoes at shipping point were steady yesterday with a few sales of four basket crates of wrapped greens reported cash track at 90 cents and of sixes at $2.25. Four basket crates of wrapped turnings were listed this basis at 60 cents. The watermelon situation at Texas points did not show a great deal of change. Nominally $1 per cwt on 20's is the basis of wire order sales, but the actual volume of business remains very light. Georgia-Florida shipping points report an improvement in tone.

Stocks Score Good Recovery On Wall Street by Virtue Of Heavy Short Covering and Accumulation

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, June 24.—Stocks scored good recoveries in the stock market today on a combination of heavy short covering and fresh accumulation. The short interest is large, particularly in some stocks, and the bears may be forced to cover before the current advance exhausts itself. Some of the bears are turning bulls because of the action of the market. They have come to the conclusion that if stock values do not go down they should go up.

The slight stiffening of time money is not taken seriously in leading speculative quarters. What offset this development today was the improvement in the local reserve bank's position, which showed gains over the preceding week in the reserve position. Money loaned today at 4 per cent. The Italian lira made another new high mark. Commodities were lower.

Baldwin sold at a new high record price above 230. This was accomplished at the expense of the shorts. The stock is still 20 points under the price predicted for it by its sponsors. Improvement in the structural and products end of business is being reflected in the buying of the steels. Some leading firms have been steady buyers of steel common, the latter is one of the low cost producers and can make money when others cannot.

One of the laggard groups will be brought to the front shortly. That is the baking stocks. Developments in this industry are such as to warrant higher prices for the baking securities. This is particularly true of Ward and Continental, which have been in the background for months. Interests in the baking industry have come to an understanding. There will be no more mergers and clashes. No plants will be built in competition. The companies therefore, instead of spending money in factories, will endeavor to save it for thestockholders.

In the case of Ward Baking earnings are now said to be running beyond the fondest dreams of insiders. The floating supply of Ward has been greatly reduced. A block of stock held by banks in connection with mergers is said to have been taken over privately by strong interests. The old Ward crowd that really built up the properties are expected to take hold again and put this company back in its former stronk position.

There is even talk that the stock may pay a dividend this year. Earnings of Continental also are showing improvement.

Important developments are said to be pending in Texas Gulf Sulphur. The company is negotiating or has closed a contract with a big oil company for a crown of sulphur said to be one of the largest in the world. This will be accomplished, it is said, by lease of the property.

Importan buying is going on in American Express. This company does a world-wide banking business. It owns a large block of stock of the American Railway Express on which it receives a $6 dividend. The stock coming into prominence as Art Metals. Reports are current that negotiations are under way whereby it will be taken over by Remington Rand. Art Metals is one of Remington's competitors and the merger would be a logical step for Remington.

Renewed activity was shown by Colorado Fuel. Earnings for the first six months of this year are estimated at $8 a share. This would compare with $7.60 for the whole of last year. The company has been steadily plowing earnings back into the properties and this is being reflected in increased earnings.

Radio worked higer. International Air Flights have called attention to this stock. Its broadcasting stations are informing the world of developments within a few minutes. People who are picking up this stock and putting it away are predicting fancy prices for it within a few years.

Railroad stocks were practically neglected and interest confined to the industrials. There was some inquiry, however, for such stocks as Southern Pacific and Lackawana. Some of the roads are making favorable exhibits in their earnings report for May. Some of the merger roads are being groomed for a rise. Western Pacific continued in demand and new buying is understood to be going on in Chicago Northwest. Profit-taking in this issue is believed to be over.

Wll street is beginning to discuss the oil situation. Improvement in the industry is reported from Oklahoma. An oil man who has just returned from that state said today that the companies are beginning to draw from storage and once the Seminole begins to weaken it will disappear quickly.

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW.

CHICAGO, June 24. (AP)—With material immediate increase of the movement of new crop domestic wheat to market looked for, wheat prices today swung lower. Augmented receipts of corn were also expected. Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled at ⅛ cent to a cent net decline, corn 1⅝ cents to 2 cents down, oats ⅜ to 1⅛ cents off, provisions unchanged toa setback of 12 cents.

Rising temperatures over most of the corn belt had a decided bearish effect on corn and oats.

Provisions were inclined to sag owing chiefly to weakness of corn.

N. Y. Stocks

NEW YORK, June 24. (AP)—The stock displayed a firm undertone today in the face of week-end realizing sales and the uncovering of new weak spots by bear traders. Selling squalls swept through the market now and then, but the offerings were well absorbed. Pools, encouraged by the prospect of record-breaking dividend and interest payments next month, bid up nearly a score issues to new high levels for the year.

The day's business news was rather colorless in character. The weekly mercantile reviews called attention to the seasonable slackening in many of the leading industries, but apparently found no cause for discouragement. The price movement in the stock market seemed to be governed by conditions within, rather than without the market.

Bear traders made no concerted effort to follow up the advantage gained yesterday, although they did succeed in uncovering several new weak spots. Oils again proved vulnerable to pressure, Marland slipping below 34 to another new 1927 low, while severa lothers sagged close to their bottom prices of the year. Anaconda copper, Inspiration copper, American Piano, Electric Refrigeration, Ludlum Steel, and Savage Arms all sold at the year's low prices.

Motors, which were freely sold yesterday on gossip concerning the introduction of the new Ford models, rallied briskly on reports that the official announcement will be delayed for a few weeks, and that competition from that quarter will not make itself felt for at least several months.

Call money ruled unchanged at 4 per cent all day, despite the approach of month-end settlements. Time money rates held relatively firm and prime commercial paper was again quoted at 4 to 4¼.

In the foreign exchange market, Italian lire sold higher than 5⅝ cents for the first time since 1920. Spanish and japanes rates were heavy, but all the other important currencies held firm, with demand sterling quoted around $4.85 5-16 and French francs around 3.91¼ cents.

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, June 24. (AP)—Cotton seed oil was active and irregular today, closing at 10 points decline to twopoints advance.

Trading was mostly in the way of exchanging and evening up in anticipation of heavy tenders on notice day. Local and commission houses sold, while cotton houses were credited with covering shorts. Sales 17,700 barrels. Prime crude nominal; prime summer yellow spot 9.00; July closed 9.07; September 9.58; October 9.75; December 9.86; January 9.92.

COTTON GOODS.

NEW YORK, June 24. (AP)—The cloth markets continued quiet today with a fair demand reported on a few constructions. The burlap market was quiet and prices showed no change on the spot and afloat. This was perhaps the quietest week for the domestic linen market. A 10-yen decline in raw silk resulted in an especially active market at Yokohama.

WHEAT PRICE SHOWS SLASH

Good Crop Weather Brings Forced Liquidation

BY CHARLES J. LEYDEN,
Universal Service Staff Corespondent.

CHICAGO, June 24.—Favorable weather over the entire grain belt led to continued liquidation and other pressure in wheat and corn today. Prices dropped sharply with the yellow cereal in the lead. The close was on fair rally in all grains from the bottom. Wheat encountered a very good class of absorption on the break.

Houses with export and foreign connections were the most conspicuous buyers ofthe leading cereal. Shorts covered freely at advantageous levels. New crop grain is commencing to move southwest and increase in hedging is noted. They are talking excellent yields now in parts of Kansas.

July wheat opened at $1.41¼@1.41½, dipped to $1.40¼, rallied to $1.41⅝ and closed at $1.41⅛@1.41⅝. September opened at $1.39½@1.39⅝, dipped to $1.38⅞, rallied to $1.40⅛ and closed at $1.39½@1.39⅝. September corn opened at $1.02⅞@1.03, hit $1.03⅝, dipped to $1.01⅝ and closed at $1.02⅛@1.02¼.

Export wheat sales were 250,000 bushels. Demand generally a little better. Liverpool wheat futures finished one to 1⅜ pence lower.

Locally wheat closed ⅛ to ⅞c lower, corn 1⅝ to 1⅞c down, oats ⅜ to 1⅛c lower and rye to 1⅜c off.

The undertone in corn was quite weak, although a fair rally took place from the bottom. Bulls were less inclined to support this grain, and holders sold freely at times. Temperatures over the belt were higher and a few optimistic advices were received.

TAX DODGERS NOW MUST PAY

Costs of Suits Higher, Says State Ruling

A ruling which will materially increase the costs of trial for taxpayers sued for non-payment of city, irrigation and school district taxes was received Friday morning by Wayne Somerville, county attorney, from the attorney general's office.

Mr. Somerville said that as a result of the ruling, which was made by H. Grady Chandler, assistant attorney general, the cost of suits for city, irrigation and school taxes will be increased approximately three times the cost that has prevailed in the past.

The ruling does not affect state and county real and personal taxes according to Mr. Somerville.

In the past Miss Eunice Jackson, district clerk, has been allowed $1.50 as costs for the filing of all tax suits. This amount was not fees of office. The amount covered every procedure necessary for the filing of a tax suit.

As a result of the ruling when suits for collection of city, irrigation and school taxes are filed the costs will be the same as in an ordinary civil suit. The costs in civil suits are based on the number of necessary filings and services for the suits. However, Mr. Somerville said that he estimated that the cost of an ordinary irrigation, city or school tax suit would now, as a result of the ruling, be about $5.

Folks, Facts, Fancies

The Rev. L. S. White, pastor of the First Church of Christ, who has been ill for the past two weeks, is reported better and will occupy his pulpit at the Sunday services both morning and evening, according to an announcement made Friday.

Approval of bonds totaling $20,000 for building an addition to the Valley View school house has been made by the attorney general's office, according to information received Friday at the offices of Burl Bryant, county superintendent of schools. Formation of Tuberculosis Society Urged To Fight Spread of Disease

Plans for the establishment of an organization to be known as the Wichita County Tuberculosis association, headed by one or more public health nurses to investigate and help destitute families afflicted with the disease were discussed at the meeting of the Wichita Falls business council Friday at noon. A committee of three members was appointed to investigate the need for such an institution and will report to the board of directors of the chamber of commerce following their survey.

The proposal was submitted to the council on the recommendation of a group of citizens by A. A. Spencer who read the results of a recent survey of conditions in the county. It was revealed that 59 of the 850 deaths in the county during the past year were caused from tuberculosis, and statistics show that there are 15 active cases for every death.

Sixty to sixty-five per cent of the sales of Christmas seals would pay the salaries of the nurse or nurses, with no burden on the community it was stated in the resolution read.

The committee is composed of J. T. Harrell, W. U. McCutchen and Dr. A. H. Douglass.

Virginia Lady Tells How She Gets Most Beneficial Results In Treatment of Constipation and Indigestion.

Broadway, Va.—The home of Mrs. John L. Pence here is one of the thousands of homes in which Black-Draught has been in successful use for the relief of constipation and similar ills requiring a laxative or cathartic.

"Occasionally," says Mrs. Pence, "I am trouble with spells of constipation. I always use Black-Draught when I feel a spell of this kind coming on, for it saves me a bad headache.

"My color gets sallow at times. I get real yellow. I have found Black-Draught to be the finest kind of a remedy for this. I take Black-Draught and make a tea out of it, and take it along in small doses for several days. I have never found anything that served me so well.

"My husband also takes Black-Draught and he thinks it is splendid. I have told many of my friends about it and they agree with me that it is a good remedy.

"Since I have known about Black-Draught, I have not suffered nearly so much with headache caused from indigestion. If I find my tongue is coated, and I wake up with a bad taste in my mouth, I know I have been eating indiscreetly and I immediately resort to Black-Draught to straighten me out."

The Reputation of Wichita Falls Is At Stake

There is far more at stake in the road bond election today than the construction of needed roads, important as these needed roads are.

Prospective investors in industry and business are watching Wichita Falls today to see if we are going forward to build a bigger city or if we are going to follow the policy of backward communities and quit our program of development.

A vote against the bonds will identify you with those who do not have the vision of a greater city.

A vote for the bonds will classify you with those men and those interests who have built Wichita Falls and who will continue to make this a better place in which to live, to work and to succeed.

Help give employment to local labor.

Help stimulate general business.

Help increase population of our irrigated valley.

Help Wichita Falls to reach out for trade that other cities are taking by truck and bus.

The Roads Will Be Built Economically

Opponents of road bonds criticize cost estimates on our roads. The contracts will be let by competitive bids. Our county commissioners and engineer will not spend any more than is necessary to secure good types of roads.

We have confidence in our commissioners and engineer and their ability to build good roads.
