US oil production tumbling, but low prices may hold on

Associated Press

PARIS — Oil supply from the United States, Russia and other countries outside of OPEC is expected to drop sharply next year — possibly the steepest decline since the Soviet Union collapsed — because of low prices, the International Energy Agency forecast Friday.

In its latest monthly report, the IEA says non-OPEC production is expected to drop nearly half a million barrels to 57.7 million barrels a day in 2016. But a prominent investment firm questions whether even a cut that steep will shrink the glut of oil on the market enough to boost the price.

Amid booming U.S. production and high OPEC output, the benchmark price of oil plunged from over $100 last year to about $45 this week. Global oil demand has grown, but at a slower pace, and analysts have said big production cuts are needed to balance the market.

Rig count drops for second week in a row

By Joshua Cain
Houston Chronicle

The number of active oil rigs fell by double digits again this week, the second weekly drop in a row after two months of small increases in the count tracked by oil field services firm Baker Hughes.

Drillers idled 10 oil rigs to bring the total number to 652, the fewest rigs in the field since the week of June 17. Rigs drilling for natural gas also fell by six.

The renewed plunge in oil rigs comes after weeks of instability in the price of crude, with West Texas Intermediate, the U.S. benchmark, hitting as low as $37 on Aug. 24 before recovering to nearly $50 by the end of the month. Since then, crude has hovered around $45.

Despite the steep drop off in oil rigs from their Oct. 2014 high of 1,609, U.S. oil production has remained stubbornly high. That has left traders and analysts on the lookout for any sign that producers could finally be slowing down amid a persistent global glut of crude oil.

An International Energy Agency report Friday said that oil prices could bring a reckoning for shale oil drillers in Texas and North Dakota by 2016, with the Paris-based group saying that production in those areas could collapse by 400,000 barrels per day next year.

Annie Robbins

Annie Robbins 94 went home Wednesday September 9, 2015, to be with her Savior and is dancing with Ernest once again.

A graveside service will be held at 3:00 p.m. on Saturday, September 12, in Dido Cemetery, Fort Worth.

In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to Hospice of Midland, 911 W. Texas Ave Midland, Texas 79701.

Annie was born on October 5, 1920, in Coblenz, Germany. She entered the United States on the shores of Ellis Island with her parents at the age of two. Growing up on the farm in rural Louisiana, she became a strong and independent girl leaving home at an early age to see the world. She met and married the love of her life, Ernest Robbins, a union lasting over 50 years.

Her greatest accomplishment was becoming a wonderful homemaker, wife, and mother. Her German roots guaranteed an amazing meal for visitors and neighbors alike. She never met a stranger, gracing the world with her quick-witted humor.

Annie was preceded in death by her husband, Ernest.

Survivors include her brothers, Lucian Sheppard, and Bill Sheppard and wife, Phyllis; son, Ronald Robbins and wife, Shirley; daughter, Barbara Watlington and husband, Mike; granddaughter, Lynn Rogers and husband, Cole; and great-granddaughter, Charli Michelle.

Today in history

Today is Saturday, Sept. 12, the 255th day of 2015. There are 110 days left in the year.

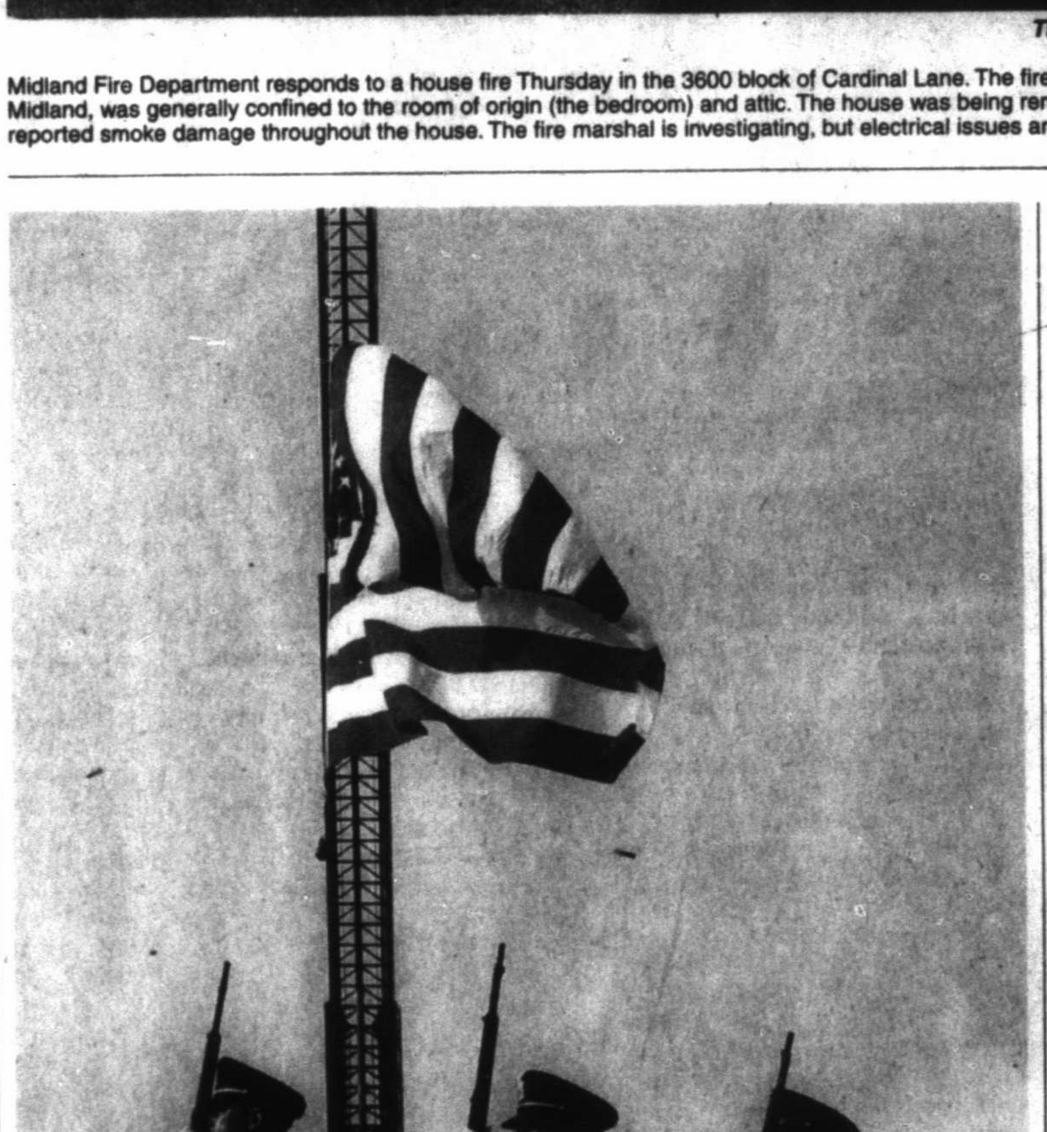

Today's highlight:

On Sept. 12, 1962, in a speech at Rice University in Houston, President John F. Kennedy reaffirmed his support for the manned space program, declaring: "We choose to go to the moon in this decade and do the other things, not because they are easy, but because they are hard."

On this date:

In 1953, Massachusetts Sen. John F. Kennedy married Jacqueline Lee Bouvier in Newport, Rhode Island.

In 1960, Democratic presidential candidate John F. Kennedy addressed questions about his Roman Catholic faith, telling a Southern Baptist group, "I do not speak for my church on public matters, and the church does not speak for me."

DALLAS — Gov. Greg Abbott ordered all flags in Texas to be flown at half-staff Friday to remember victims of the 9/11 terrorist attacks.

Events were planned through the weekend across Texas to honor those killed 14 years ago in the attacks in New York, Pennsylvania and Washington, D.C.

A steel sculpture in the form of a cross, taken from the rubble of the World Trade Center, went on display Friday at Dallas Love Field.

A recently opened fire station in Beaumont was getting a new flagpole dedicated on what's also known as Patriot Day. The Greater Austin Crime Commission planned a memorial gathering.

A ceremony was planned Friday at the Lincoln-Juarez Bridge in Laredo to honor the nearly 3,000 people killed in the 9/11 attacks.

A 9/11 heroes run has been scheduled Saturday at Ellington Airport in Houston, with proceeds benefiting organizations that assist first responders and their families.

Citizens should remain vigilant and report suspicious activity to law officers, said Steven McCraw, Texas Department of Public Safety director.

"This anniversary is a stark reminder that terrorists and criminals exist who wish to harm communities, target critical infrastructures and destroy our way of life," McCraw said.

Chris Brown granted joint custody of daughter

A judge has granted R&B singer Chris Brown joint custody of his young daughter in Texas.

A judge in Houston on Friday agreed with Brown's request to share custody of the toddler, Royalty, with the child's mother, Nia Guzman.

Brown's attorney, Mark Geragos, said Guzman previously had primary custody of the girl, who was born about 16 months ago in Houston.

Brown must continue monthly child support payments of $2,500. Guzman had sought $15,000 per month.

Guzman now lives in Los Angeles. Geragos said Brown is a resident of Virginia.

Both parents were in court Friday. Brown performed Thursday night in Dallas.

GRANDVIEW

Dad, teenage daughter face bank robbery charge

A North Texas father and daughter have been accused of bank robbery and leading police on a chase with speeds reaching 150 mph.

Johnson County jail records show 41-year-old Michael Bailey and 19-year-old Megan Bailey were being held Friday on aggravated robbery counts.

He's also charged with evading arrest for allegedly driving the getaway car after Thursday's holdup in Grandview, 30 miles south of Fort Worth.

Grandview police Sgt. Curran Massey said investigators believe Michael Bailey had a gun and robbed the bank. His daughter stayed in the car. Massey said the car crashed after speeds of 150 mph and into oncoming traffic.

Investigators recovered about $12,000 from the vehicle.

The father's bond was $500,000. His daughter's bond was $25,000. Jail records didn't immediately list attorneys to speak for them.

Some question orchestras playing 'The Star Spangled Banner'

By Cary Darling
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH — On the evening of Sept. 11, 2001, the musicians of the Fort Worth Symphony Orchestra launched their concert with a piece that many of their symphonic compatriots nationwide were also playing that mournful week: "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Unlike with most other orchestras, this wouldn't just be a momentary musical bowing of the head, a single remembrance of a horrific day in American history. It became the start of a tradition.

Fourteen years later, the Fort Worth Symphony is one of the few major-city orchestras that play the national anthem before every full-orchestra performance.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported that patrons know the ritual well: After the recorded "silence your cellphones" announcement, first the concertmaster and then the conductor walk onstage.

The conductor steps onto the podium and signals for a snare-drum roll. The orchestra members rise and begin to play — from memory — as the audience stands and faces the flag onstage. The singing by the music-loving audience is much better than at other public events. More often than not, a soprano can be heard lingering on the "free" high note near the end.

The orchestra takes the rhythmic piece at a good clip; the whole thing lasts about 90 seconds.

Recently, the routine inclusion of the national anthem has ruffled feathers, prompting the head of the orchestra to publicly defend the tradition.

A musician attending a concert at Bass Hall wrote a Facebook post Aug. 29 bemoaning the anthem's automatic place at the top of the program, calling it "an outrage that the musicians of the excellent Fort Worth Symphony" must play it at every concert.

The post received enough supportive replies to compel the symphony's president, Amy Adkins, to write a lengthy post on her Facebook page. The post has been added to the symphony's page.

"It is a simple but poignant way that we can use music to honor those who serve or have served in the U.S. military, as well as those who have lost their lives," she wrote. "Van Cliburn, Fort Worth's most adored citizen and one of the greatest pianists of our time, began every recital with his own rousing rendition of the anthem."

Her post drew dozens of supportive comments, some by notable composers and musicians in the classical music world.

"I had a long conversation with Yo-Yo Ma after the gala about a year and a half ago about arts being instrumental in creating social change," Adkins elaborated in an interview. "The orchestra does that in many ways, but the performing of the national anthem is a symbol of that. In a small way, it's creating a sense of unity."

For Theodore Harvey, a cellist with the Dallas Symphony Orchestra who wrote the critical Facebook post, it's an issue of place and mood.

"I don't think orchestra concerts are meant to be nationalistic or patriotic events unless it's a specifically patriotic program," Harvey said in an interview, noting that he was speaking for himself, not the Dallas orchestra.

"When a conductor plans a program, he has a certain selection of music and a certain order in mind. The first piece that he picks is meant to set the mood. It's very jarring for the people who are there just for the music.

"When I go to a concert of Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven, I want to be immersed in the world of 18th-, early-19th-century Austria, and 'The Star-Spangled Banner' manifestly does not fit with that."

Harvey is not alone in his sentiments. Comments on his post ranged from "Why do we need to prove our patriotism at a concert? How many of those people sing but cannot be bothered to vote or read the paper?" to "As Dr. Johnson observed, patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel."

Norman Lebrecht, the British commentator and author who runs Slipped Disc, a website devoted to classical music worldwide, didn't comment on the post. But he understands the sentiment.

He said he doesn't believe nationalistic anthems belong on every program. Similarly, he holds no nostalgia for the days when "God Save the Queen" was played in British movie theaters before the first and after the last screening.

"Times have changed. There was more pomp and circumstance about a live performance 50 years ago. Now it's less formal. I prefer the informality," Lebrecht, whose books include "Who Killed Classical Music?" and "The Life and Death of Classical Music," wrote in an email.

"It's a distraction. I go to a concert for art and elevation, not national service."

While most American orchestras include the anthem sometime in the year — often for a season-opener or for pops, outdoor and holiday-related concerts — it's unclear how many perform it as regularly as the Fort Worth Symphony.

The League of American Orchestras, an umbrella group of about 800 North American orchestras, doesn't keep track, but the organization's media relations director, Rachelle Schlosser, said, "It is certainly a rare occurrence."

One orchestra that can match Fort Worth's is the Oklahoma City Philharmonic, which has played the anthem before nearly every performance since 1990. In fact, the OKC Phil's marketing director, Susan Webb, said the orchestra began playing "The Star-Spangled Banner" regularly after audience members requested it with a signed petition.

More typical is the Dallas Symphony, which this season will play the anthem at the AT&T Gala on Sept. 26 and at each of the first set of concerts that launch the Texas Instruments Classical Series, taking place Oct. 1-4.

"We also might perform the anthem during special patriotic-themed concerts outdoors — the Patriotic Concert and Fireworks at Flag Pole Hill that we do annually on Memorial Day comes to mind," DSO spokesman Chris Shull said.

Fort Worth visual artist J.T. Grant is glad the Fort Worth Symphony plays the song, which officially became the national anthem in 1931.

"If you look at the context of the time, the Depression was underway. Now, beginning with 9/11, there was a similar sense of having the floor pulled out from under us," he said. "It's played at football and baseball games, but it's not a fight song. Its purpose is to unify us and take us out of the individual and remind us of what we're capable of."

Oil

From 1A

Producers in the U.S., who need a higher price per barrel than OPEC countries to break even, have started to cut back. The U.S. Energy Department estimated this week that production fell by 140,000 per day in August. The decline is expected to widen in the coming months, and production should average 400,000 barrels a day less in 2016 than in 2015.

Russian and North Sea supply is also forecast to shrink in 2016, according to the IEA. Overall, non-OPEC production should drop the most since 1992, when non-OPEC output shrank 1 million barrels after the USSR fell apart.

Low oil prices are also sparking an increase in demand, IEA said. With pump prices well below $3 a gallon in most states, gasoline demand in the U.S. is at an eight-year high. The agency said demand in China is still growing, despite signs of economic weakness, as growing use of transportation fuels offsets lower industrial demand for crude oil. The agency forecast global oil demand would rise 1.7 million barrels a day this year, the highest in five years, and grow by another 1.4 million next year.

The IEA does not provide a forecast for oil prices. In its report earlier this week, the U.S. Energy Department said it expects U.S. oil to average $49 per barrel this year and $54 per barrel in 2016, about $5 below the estimated average for Brent crude, the benchmark for many international types of crude.

Goldman Sachs, however, said Friday that the glut in oil is greater than previously thought, and slashed its forecasts for the U.S. benchmark price of oil for next year to $45 a barrel from $57 a barrel previously.

Goldman analysts now believe it will take a dramatic drop in production — far greater than the decline forecast by IEA — to get supply back in line with demand and spur higher prices.

DAY OF REMEMBERANCE

CONGRESSMEN SPEAK ABOUT 9/11

It has been fourteen years since Sept. 11, 2001, the day terrorists shook this nation to its core by attacking our people, our homeland and our way of life. Nearly 3,000 Americans lost their lives that day and countless others were injured, some in an attempt to save others from harm. And while New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia felt the immediate physical impact, Texans and the entire country joined in feeling the pain and anguish of that day together.

In attacking the United States of America, the terrorists grossly underestimated the strength and resolve of our people. They did not anticipate that these cowardly acts would only amplify the sense of pride, patriotism and service that defines the American spirit. In the face of adversity, Americans come together. And every moment since that fateful day, we have only grown stronger.

Fourteen years later, as we remember the lessons of that day, we also must preserve the memory of the American heroes who made the ultimate sacrifice for their fellow countrymen. To the passengers on Flight 93 who brought down the plane in that Pennsylvania field, to those who were wounded themselves but still managed to carry others out of the World Trade Center and the Pentagon to safety, and to the first responders who acted quickly and bravely across the nation to save, protect and comfort: Thank you for your courageous actions.

And to every Texan who answered the call to help their neighbors and defend our nation: we are forever grateful. Because of your service and sacrifice, we remain free.

— U.S. Sen. John Cornyn
Member of the Senate Judiciary and Finance committees

We will never forget the horrible act of terror that occurred on our soil 14 years ago. We will always remember the heroic actions of the brave men and women who rushed to the rescue of those in need, many sacrificing their own life to save another. We still mourn with the families who lost a loved one in this cowardly act of terror. The heartbreak that struck our nation on Sept. 11 will never fade away, and we will be forever grateful to all the public servants and members of the military who have and will continue to protect our great nation.

— U.S. Rep. Mike Conaway, District 11

9/11 victims' relatives mark anniversary with grief, appeals

By Jonathan Lemire and Jennifer Peltz
Associated Press

NEW YORK — During years of going to ground zero every Sept. 11, Tom Acquaviva has seen crowds diminish at the ceremonies commemorating the terror attacks. But his determination to participate hasn't.

"As long as I'm breathing, I'll be here," Acquaviva, 81, said Friday as he arrived to pay tribute to his late son, Paul.

More than 1,000 victims' relatives, survivors and recovery workers marked the 14th anniversary at ground zero with grief, gratitude and appeals to keep the toll front of mind as years pass. "It's a hard day. But it's an important day. I'll come every year that I can," recovery worker Robert Matticola said.

But if the private ceremony is smaller than in its early years, the date has also become an occasion for the public to revisit ground zero, where the memorial plaza now opens to everyone on the anniversary.

Around the country, the date was marked with what has become a tradition of lowered flags, wreath-laying, bell-tolling and, in New York, reading the names of the nearly 3,000 people killed in the terror strikes at the World Trade Center, the Pentagon and a field near Shanksville, Pennsylvania. One woman at ground zero collapsed during the ceremony, apparently overcome by grief; bystanders helped her to her feet.

Family members praised first responders, thanked the armed forces and prayed for unity and security. They also sent personal messages to their lost loved ones.

"You are the reason that I wear this uniform and stand here today," Air Force Technical Sgt. Sparkle Thompson said of her uncle, Louie Anthony Williams.

In Washington, President Barack Obama and first lady Michelle Obama stepped out of the White House for a moment of silence at 8:46 a.m., when the first of four hijacked planes hit on Sept. 11, 2001, striking the World Trade Center's north tower. Later Friday, the president told troops at Fort Meade in Maryland that he hoped Sept. 11 would inspire thoughts of what binds the country together, while Vice President Joe Biden praised New Yorkers' resilience in remarks to bikers and police officers taking part in a 9/11 memorial motorcycle ride.

The Flight 93 National Memorial near Shanksville marked the completion of its $26 million visitor center, which opened to the public Thursday. At the Pentagon, Defense Secretary Ash Carter and other officials joined in remembrances for victims' relatives and Pentagon employees. Other observances were held around the country.

Some Americans honored the anniversary in their own ways.

"I don't go to the memorial. I don't watch it on TV. But I make sure, every year, I observe a moment of silence at 8:46," electrician Jeff Doran said as he stood across the street from the trade center, where the signature, 1,776-foot One World Trade Center tower has opened since last Sept. 11.

> "My kids and I would like to humbly thank everyone who has helped us, through the last 14 years, to be able to gently go through the sorrows, the suffering, the pain. Thank you all very much — the city, the nation, the friends, the family."
> Jyothi Shah, spouse of 9/11 victim

The memorial plaza opened in 2011 but was closed to the public on the anniversary until last year, when an estimated 20,000 people flocked there to pay respects in the evening. Moved by the influx, organizers decided to open it more quickly after the ceremony this year.

Some victims' relatives welcome the openness after years when the site was largely off-limits for construction. "It's a little more comfortable for people to be here," said Alexandria Perez, who lost her aunt, Ana Centeno.

But to Erick Jimenez, a brother of 9/11 victim Eliezer Jimenez Jr., "every year, it's a little less personal," though he still appreciates being with others who lost loved ones.

This year's anniversary comes as Congress is weighing whether to start providing financing for the memorial plaza and whether to extend programs that promised billions of dollars in compensation and medical care to Sept. 11 responders and survivors. They're set to expire next year.

"People are still dying because of what happened," both on battlefields and from illnesses that some responders have developed after exposure to toxic dust, Army Sgt. Edwin Morales said as he arrived at ground zero in remembrance of a cousin, firefighter Ruben "Dave" Correa.

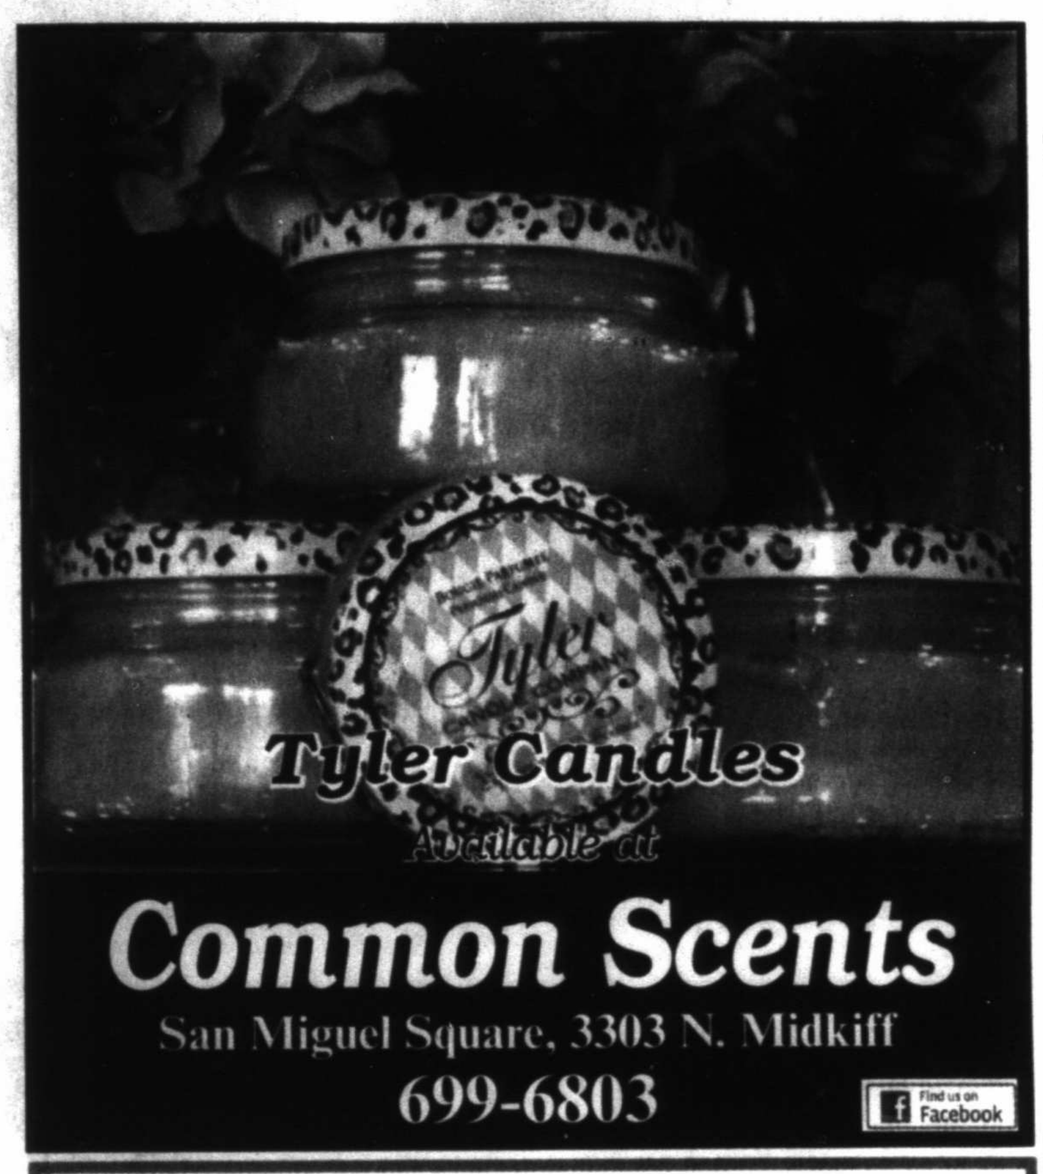

Jyothi Shah read names of victims in memory of her husband, Jayesh Shantitlal Shah, then paused with a message for the public.

"My kids and I would like to humbly thank everyone who has helped us, through the last 14 years, to be able to gently go through the sorrows, the suffering, the pain," she said. "Thank you all very much — the city, the nation, the friends, the family."

A flag is placed along the South Pool prior to a ceremony at the World Trade Center site in New York on Friday. With a moment of silence and somber reading of names, victims' relatives began marking the 14th anniversary of Sept. 11 in a subdued gathering Friday at ground zero.

After a wobble, US stocks manage slight gains

By Matthew Craft
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Major stock indexes shook off an early stumble to finish with slight gains on Friday as traders turned their attention to a key meeting of the Federal Reserve next week.

It was a quiet end to another turbulent week. Thanks largely to a big jump on Tuesday, the market finished with a 2 percent gain for the week, recouping a portion of the steep losses from the week before.

The major indexes headed lower at the opening of trading on Friday, as falling oil prices pulled oil and gas companies down.

The economic news wasn't encouraging, either. A reading on consumer confidence this month sank to its lowest level since September of last year.

"It seems people are focused on the market's volatility and the potential impact of a slowing China," said Phil Orlando, chief equity strategist at Federated Investors in New York, the money-management firm. "I understand why folks are nervous. I think eventually things will settle down."

The Standard & Poor's 500 gained 8.76 points, or 0.5 percent, to close at 1,961.05.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 102.69 points, or 0.6 percent, to 16,433.09, while the Nasdaq composite rose 26.09, or 0.5 percent, to 4,822.34.

News about China's slowing economy, a looming rate increase from the Fed and a host of other concerns have combined to knock the market down 6 percent over the past month. It has been a staggered fall, with sharp drops one week followed by slight gains the next.

Wall Street is divided over whether the Fed will raise its benchmark lending rate next week for the first time in nine years. The Fed slashed its key rate to near zero during the financial crisis, supporting the stock market's seven-year run. Uncertainty over the Fed's timing has kept investors on edge.

Major markets in Europe ended with losses on Friday. Germany's DAX dropped 0.9 percent, while France's CAC-40 sank 1 percent. Britain's FTSE 100 slipped 0.6 percent.

In Asia, China's Shanghai Composite Index added 0.1 percent, while Hong Kong's Hang Seng shed 0.3 percent. Japan's Nikkei 225 fell 0.2 percent.

Before traders return to their desks on Monday, a large batch of Chinese economic news will come out over the weekend. Joshua Mahony, market analyst at IG in London, said that could lead to a turbulent start to trading next week.

"The weekend release of Chinese retail sales, industrial production and fixed asset investment numbers means that Monday is likely to start with a bang," Mahony said.

Back in the U.S., Kroger gained 5 percent after reporting earnings that beat analysts' estimates. The grocery store chain's stock rose $1.89 to $37.29.

Prices for U.S. government bonds rose, pushing the yield on the 10-year Treasury note down to 2.19 percent from 2.23 percent late Thursday.

In the commodity markets, precious and industrial metals finished mostly lower. Gold dropped $6 to settle at $1,103.30 an ounce, and silver sank 14 cents to $14.50 an ounce. Copper settled unchanged from the day before at $2.45 a pound.

The price of oil fell on concerns that the current glut of oil would persist well into next year. Goldman Sachs cut its forecast for oil prices next year to $45 a barrel from $57, saying supplies were far higher than previous estimates. U.S. crude fell $1.29 to close at $44.63 a barrel in New York. Brent Crude, a benchmark for international oil, fell 75 cents to close at $48.14 in London.

In other trading:

- Wholesale gasoline fell 2.4 cents to close at $1.370 a gallon.
- Heating oil fell 2.5 cents to close at $1.550 a gallon.
- Natural gas rose 1 cent to close at $2.693 per 1,000 cubic feet.

House goes on record against Iran nuclear deal

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Republican-led House cast largely symbolic votes on Friday against the Iran nuclear deal and sought to restrict President Barack Obama's authority to lift sanctions against Tehran, one day after the Senate ensured that the administration can implement the accord without congressional interference.

After three hours of hot-tempered debate, the House voted 269 to 162 to reject the deal; 25 Democrats broke with Obama to register their disapproval.

The fate of the agreement on Capitol Hill, however, was sealed on Thursday when Senate Democrats voted to uphold the accord with Iran, overcoming heavy GOP opposition to hand Obama a victory on his top foreign policy priority. The Senate action guaranteed that any legislation disapproving of the accord will never reach Obama's desk.

Obama marked the end of House votes with a statement saying it is time to turn the page.

"Now, we must turn to the critical work of implementing and verifying this deal so that Iran cannot pursue a nuclear weapon," the president said in a statement. "In doing so, we'll write the latest chapter of American leadership in the pursuit of a safer, more hopeful world."

During the debate, Democrats argued that the agreement would stabilize the Mideast, stop Iran from rushing to develop a nuclear bomb and offer a chance to end the standoff with Iran diplomatically, while retaining a U.S. threat of military action. They claimed House Republicans used their opposition to the nuclear deal to take a partisan shot at the president.

Republicans countered that the agreement's inspection regime against Iran, a state sponsor of terrorism, is weak and repeatedly recalled how Islamic extremists attacked America on Sept. 11, 2001.

Perry first to exit 2016 Republican presidential race

By Steve Peoples and Will Weissert
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Former Gov. Rick Perry ended his second bid for the Republican presidential nomination on Friday, becoming the first major candidate of the 2016 campaign to give up on the White House.

The longest-serving governor in Texas history told a group of conservative activists in St. Louis that "some things have become clear" and he was suspending his campaign.

"We have a tremendous field of candidates — probably the greatest group of men and women," Perry said. "I step aside knowing our party is in good hands, as long as we listen to the grassroots, listen to that cause of conservatism. If we do that, then our party will be in good hands."

Dallas businessman and longtime Perry donor Roy Bailey said Friday that the former governor called him Thursday night and broke the news that he was planning to leave the race.

"He was very matter of fact, he was confident in his decision," Bailey said. "He hated it, because he's such a confident person, that that's what it came down to. He'll take a breather and jump back into life out of politics."

Former Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee, who took the stage at the Eagle Forum conference in St. Louis immediately after Perry announced his exit, called on the crowd to pray for Perry's future success.

"The only thing harder than to get into a race for something like president, is to make the decision to get out of the race," said Huckabee, the runner-up for the GOP nomination in 2008. "And I hope that all of you will recognize that it was a very difficult decision. I've been there before."

Four years after his first bid for the White House ended after disappointing finishes in the Iowa caucuses and New Hampshire primary, Perry this time couldn't even make it to the second debate night of the 2016 race.

After failing to poll well enough to qualify for the featured primetime debate last month, Perry was again relegated to a pre-debate forum for the back of the pack at next week's debate at the Reagan Library outside Los Angeles.

He delivered a stronger performance at that first event than he did four years ago, when he couldn't remember the third federal agency he'd promised to close if elected and muttered, "Oops" — a moment that doomed his bid in 2012.

But few noticed in a 2016 GOP campaign dominated by billionaire Donald Trump, who stole away Perry's Iowa campaign chairman after Perry was forced to suspend paying members of his staff as his campaign fundraising dried up.

"It'd be easy just to keep going, be easy to go do the debate next week, be easy to keep going to Iowa and South Carolina and other states and everything and taking your money and dragging it out," Bailey said.

But, Bailey said, "he could see it was pretty obvious to him he wasn't going to be the next presidential nominee from the Republican Party."

A group of super PACs, largely funded by three big Perry backers, had briefly kept Perry afloat by raising $17 million, hiring their own Iowa staff and producing television and digital ads and mailers. His decision Friday appeared to come as a surprise to those groups, which are barred from communicating directly with the campaign.

A pro-Perry super PAC emailed its supporters Friday morning saying it was back on television in Iowa to promote his candidacy. A Twitter message from the group sent later in the morning further emphasized, "In It For the Long Haul."

Police body cameras show more than just the facts

By Eileen Sullivan
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A Seattle man was arrested in January during a demonstration to protest police violence. Though he has yet to be charged with an offense, his arrest — captured on police body-camera recordings, along with his full name, address, phone number and birthdate — are public records.

The use of police body cameras, like those used in Seattle, is spreading to keep officers honest about using force against citizens. But how and when the public gets to see the footage is up for debate.

Months after the arrest of Michael Moynihan, the 32-year old Seattle man, the Seattle Police Department said his case is under review. Moynihan said he supports police wearing body cameras, but his own experience shows the unsettling consequences.

"That's a very dangerous weapon that they have there," Moynihan said.

Videos of police shootings across the country have become critical to determining what happened in situations that turn deadly. In some cases, strapping cigarette pack-size cameras to officers' uniforms has been framed as a way to curb police brutality and stem deteriorating trust in law enforcement.

It's not that simple. While the recordings may help get to the truth of an incident with police, they also record distraught victims, grieving family members, people suffering from mental illness and citizens exercising their rights to free speech and civil disobedience. Cameras may solve one problem but create others.

"Any policy that categorically shields or opens up body-camera footage is probably wrong," said Jay Stanley, a senior policy analyst with the American Civil Liberties Union.

The use of police body cameras is still in its infancy, with no official count for how many of the 18,000 state and local departments have turned to them. But dozens of agencies across the country are testing them, and many have plans to roll them out more broadly.

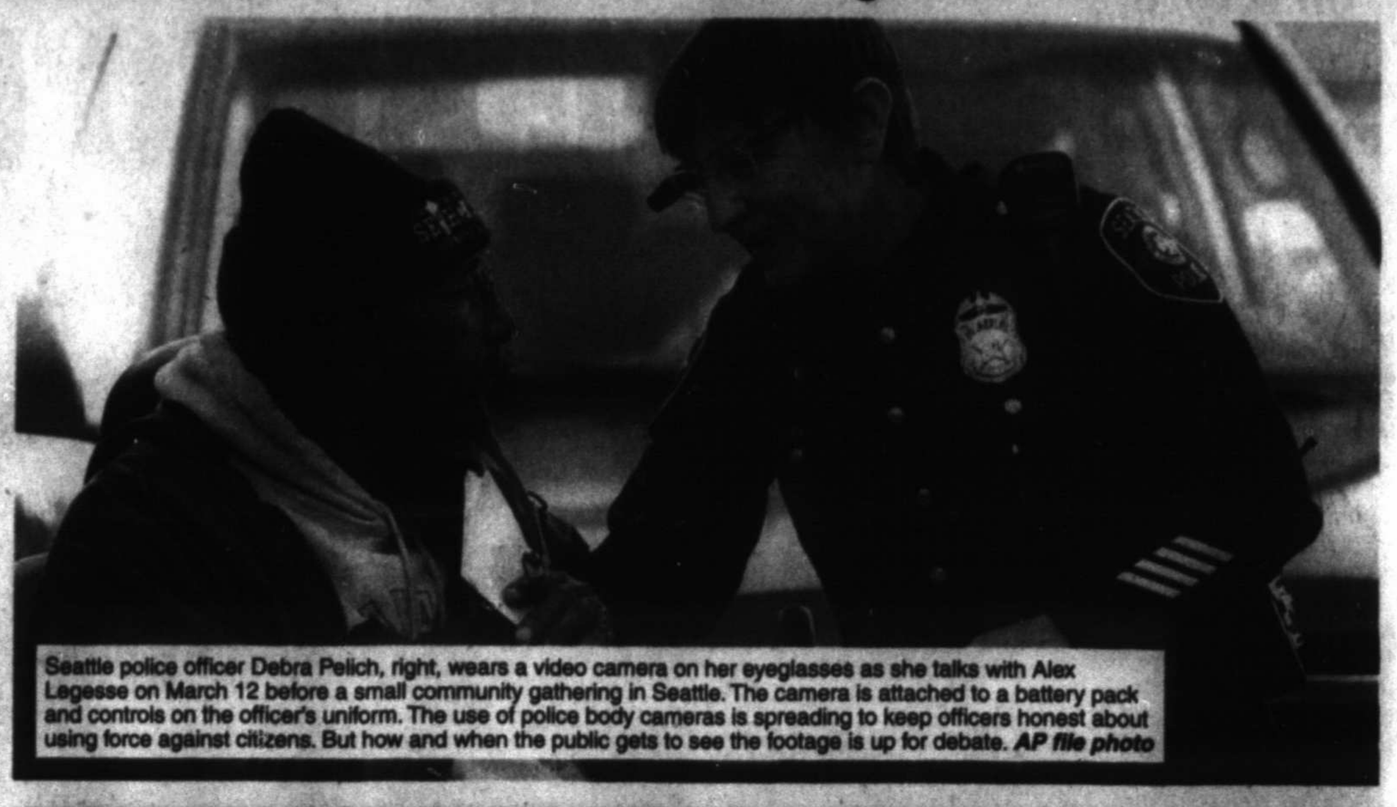

Some existing laws that govern what information is released to the public are on the chopping block, as states try to strike the balance between a citizen's right to privacy and making officers answer for their actions.

A policy to release all police-recorded videos could mean footage of the inside of a person's home or a hospital would be available. But if the policy is not to release footage in order to protect a person's privacy, that could mean a video of an officer shooting someone would not be made public, defeating the main purpose of the use of these cameras.

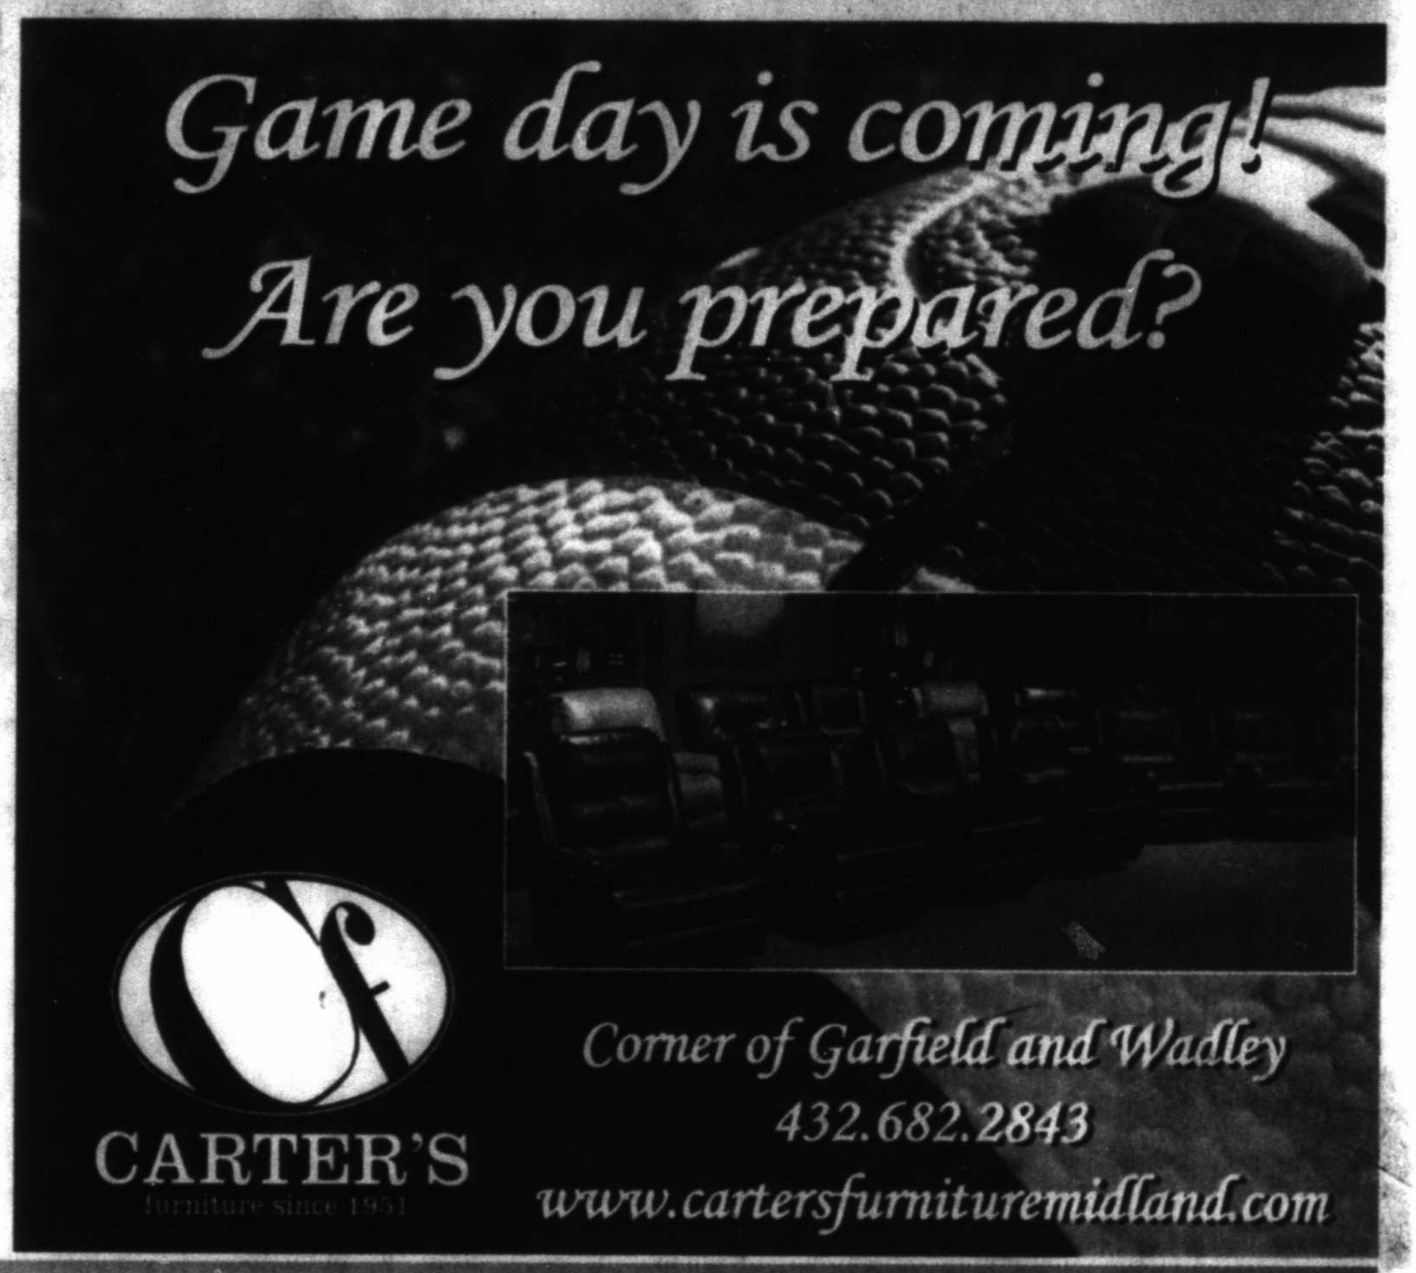

"What started as an effort to capture or prevent bad police behavior, I think now we're starting to see the realities of it capturing true human suffering," Frank Straub, chief of the Spokane, Washington, Police Department, said earlier this year at a policy forum on Capitol Hill.

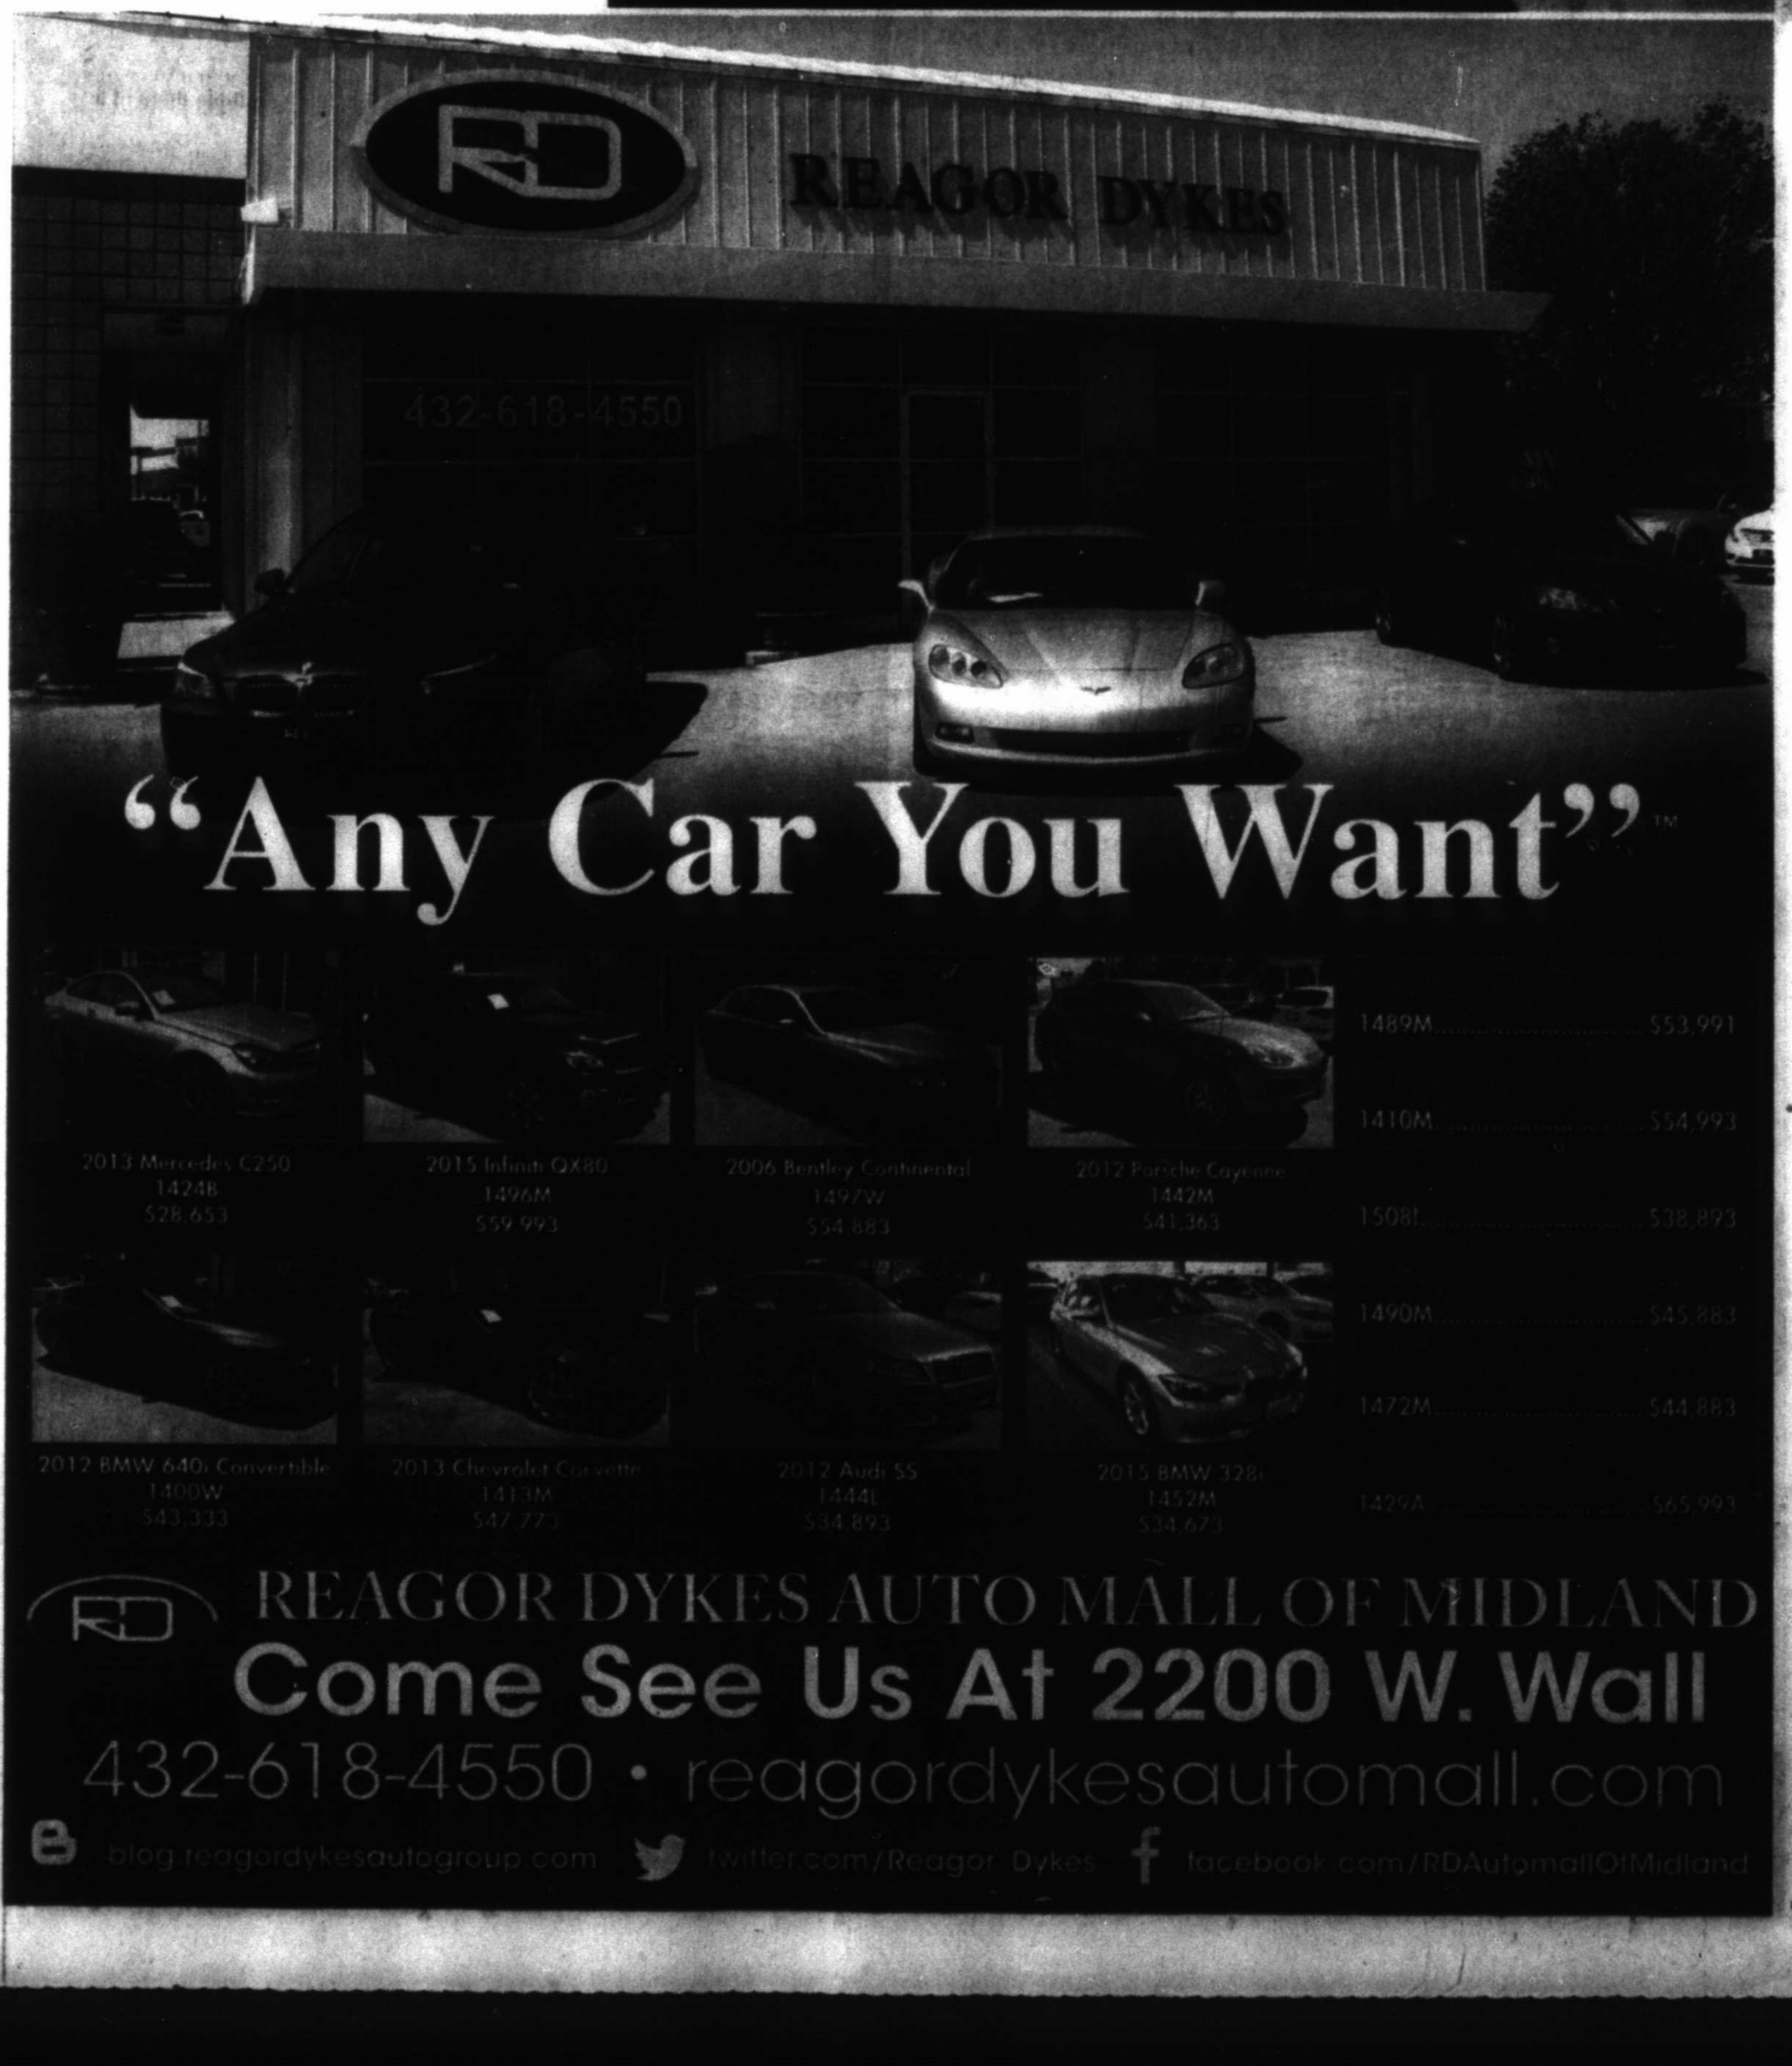

The solution is somewhere in the middle. Some departments redact the faces of bystanders or those arrested, or blur a video so much that little is recognizable. Others won't release video if it's part of an ongoing investigation. Some policies allow officers to turn their cameras on and off. Even completely uncensored footage may not crystalize an incident because it's taken from one officer's physical position, often a moving one. This can create shaky footage and in some cases won't capture all details of a violent encounter.

State laws vary about what the public can see. Existing recordings are covered under these laws, such as videos from cameras mounted inside patrol cars. But body cameras produce more footage than dashboard cameras — footage that can show officers inside peoples' homes and other private places.

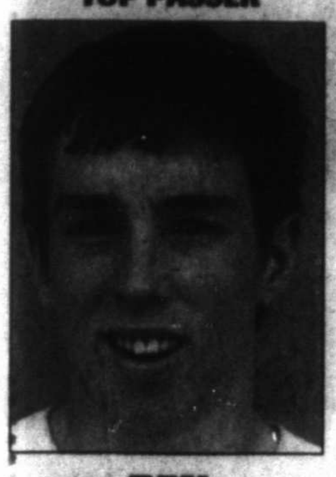

Seattle police officer Debra Pelich, right, wears a video camera on her eyeglasses as she talks with Alex Legesse on March 12 before a small community gathering in Seattle. The camera is attached to a battery pack and controls on the officer's uniform. The use of police body cameras is spreading to keep officers honest about using force against citizens. But how and when the public gets to see the footage is up for debate. AP file photo

Midland High vs. Hurst L.D. Bell, AT&T Stadium in Arlington, 5 p.m.

James Durbin/Reporter-Telegram

Midland High safety Holt Wood (17) tries to stop Keller running back Tyler Tutt (3) on Aug. 27 at Grande Communications Stadium.

Wood thriving in MHS' 'Dawg' position

By Christopher Hadorn
chadorn@mrt.com

As a child, Holt Wood dreamed of being a Midland High Bulldog football player.

Wood

Wood used to attend the Bulldogs' football practices at Memorial Stadium in his younger days.

"I would sit up there in the stands, watch them all run around," Wood said. "I would get to know their names. It was fun."

Now a teenager, Wood's dream has come to fruition as he is key part of the MHS' defense. Wood and the Bulldogs (0-2) will seek their first win today as they face Hurst L.D. Bell at 5 p.m. at AT&T Stadium in Arlington.

Wood, a junior, has thrived at Midland High's "Dawg" position even though this is just his first year on varsity. Bulldogs coaches named Wood the team's top performer in their defensive secondary in both of their games versus Keller and El Paso Montwood.

Wood ranks third on MHS in both solo tackles (10) and total tackles (14). The 6-foot, 180-pound Wood has recorded one tackle for loss and recovered a fumble as well.

"He's a gritty player," said Bulldogs defensive coordinator Tim Anuszkiewicz. "He's got some things — he's not the fastest guy on the team or he's not the biggest, strongest guy on the team, but he's got a toughness that you just can't teach. Some guys just have a toughness about them and Holt brings that to the table. He's that kid that shows up every day and plays through minor injuries.

"It seems like he's always kind of banged up a little bit, but he just kind of keeps plugging away. He's kind of an old school football player. He is just a hard nosed kid."

In 2014, Anuszkiewicz said Wood was good enough to play at the varsity level as a sophomore. However, MHS boasted an experienced, veteran defense so Wood didn't have a clear path to play.

As a result, Wood was assigned to the junior varsity squad where he could develop on the field.

Nevertheless, Wood still drew his share of time with the varsity team in practices so he got a grasp of the speed and tempo as a sophomore. Britt Boler, a three-year starter and first-team, all district performer as a senior, took Wood under his wing and showed him the ropes.

Now Wood has made a seamless transition to the Dawg position in place of Boler.

"I've got something to prove," Wood said. "I need to show everybody that I mean business, that I'm here to stay and I'm a force to be reckoned with."

"Down there on the J.V., you think you're this, you're think you're that," Wood added. "You get up to the varsity and you have to prove yourself. You have to show the older guys that you mean what you are and just come out there work hard every day. You can't take a day off."

As a "Dawg", Wood plays probably the most versatile position on the MHS' defense, according to Anuszkiewicz. The "Dawg" has to be physical against the run in a linebacker-type role and needs the agility to cover receivers in a strong safety-type function.

Even though Wood doesn't have the mass of a prototypical linebacker, he prefers to be closer to where the action is.

"I like playing closer to the line," Wood said. "It's more physical and I find it to be more fun, more exciting, more of a challenge."

When Wood isn't at varsity football practices, he can be found sometimes helping out future varsity Bulldogs players during the football functions at San Jacinto Junior High, Goddard Junior High and Midland Freshman High School. Wood is passing the torch, inspiring a new generation of Bulldogs just like his predecessors sparked his passion for Midland High football.

"That's what Holt is doing right now," Anuszkiewicz said. "He's a character type person that

Stanton uses ball control to beat rival Forsan

By Christopher Hadorn
chadorn@mrt.com

STANTON — Behind a ball control strategy in the second half, Stanton held on to defeat Forsan, 21-20, in a tough, physical non-district game at Buffalo Stadium on Friday night.

Stanton (2-1) scored the go-ahead touchdown when Tristan Graves connected with Austin Fryar with 8:14 remaining in the fourth quarter.

Fryar's score capped off a 15-play, 80-yard drive as SHS pounded Forsan (2-1) with 11 straight runs, none of the rushing attempts for more than nine yards.

Carroll rolls past Rebels, 52-14

By Will Korn
wkorn@mrt.com

SOUTHLAKE — The Southlake Carroll football team showed why it is a perennial state championship contender, as it reeled off 530 total yards of offense in a 52-14 whipping of visiting Lee, Friday night at Dragon Stadium.

Carroll junior quarterback Mason Holmes completed 19 of his 28 passes for 267 yards and a whopping five touchdown passes. Senior running back Lil Jordan Humphrey was a big play machine for the Dragons. He ran the ball 12 times for 126 yards, a score and also caught nine balls for 142 yards and three of Holmes' touchdown passes.

With the loss, the Rebels fell to 1-2 on the season and are now 0-6 all-time against Carroll since 2004.

The Dragons' spread offense drove the ball up and down the field, using a potent combination of bubble screen passes and a steady dose

Series Midland leads 2-1

Ryon Healy went 4-for-5 and Jaycob Brugman drove in three runs to help the Midland RockHounds to a 9-5 victory over Corpus Christi in Game 3 of the Texas League South Division Series Friday night at Security Bank Ballpark.

With the win, the RockHounds take a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five series and have a chance to clinch at 7 p.m. today at Security Bank Ballpark.

Midland jumped on the Hooks early as the RockHounds scored two runs in the first and then added a run each on the second, third and fourth innings for a 5-0 lead.

Meanwhile, Midland's Chris Jensen had a solid start on the mound as he allowed three runs on six hits with one walk and six strikeouts.

The Hooks got back in the game in the fifth thanks to a three run inning to cut it to 5-3.

But Corpus Christi manager Rodney Linares was ejected for the second straight game when he was tossed by home plate umpire Clay Park in the fifth.

Hooks hitting coach Dan Radison was also tossed by Park in the sixth.

The RockHounds added a run in the fifth and three more in the sixth, thanks in part to a two-run home run by Brugman.

MHS vs. Hurst L.D. Bell

When/where: 5 p.m. today, AT&T Stadium, Arlington
Radio: KNFM (92.3 FM)
Records: Midland High 0-2; L.D. Bell 0-2
Last game: El Paso Montwood 28, Midland High 14; Rockwall-Heath 38, L.D. Bell 0
Last meeting/series: In 2014, Midland High defeated L.D. Bell, 49-6, to even all-time series at 1-1.

Five things to watch

■ Midland High will be participating in one of four games played Saturday at AT&T Stadium as part of the Southwest Showcase. AT&T Stadium is the home of the Dallas Cowboys.
"It's exciting for our players to have this kind of opportunity," Bulldogs head coach Craig Yenzer said. "I'm not sure it could be hitting us at a more perfect time. If you can't get yourself ready in that venue, then we're in trouble."
■ Bulldogs wide receiver Courtney McMaryion is questionable to play because of an undisclosed injury to his left leg. McMaryion leads MHS with 13 receptions, 168 receiving yards and two touchdowns.
■ Midland High will likely lean upon running back Ricky Hubert with McMaryion's status in question. Hubert leads the Bulldogs with 211 total yards from scrimmage.
■ Following a 1-9 season, L.D. Bell is in transition under first-year head coach Mike Glaze, a former offensive coordinator with Cedar Hill, the 2014 Class 6A Division II state champion. The Blue Raiders have scored only three points in their first two games, which included a 6-3 overtime loss to Keller Central in week 1.
"They kind of look like us," Yenzer said. "They are still learning the system. Two very similar teams I would say at this point."
■ Bell runs the same 4-2-5 defense look that Midland High employs. The Blue Raiders operate a spread offense on the other side of the ball.
Next: Midland High at El Paso Franklin, 8 p.m. CDT, Friday, Sept. 18; Abilene High at L.D. Bell, 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sept. 18 of strong, but speedy runners in Humphrey and fellow senior Shemar Coleman.

LEE

With the exception of a couple of series, Lee's defense struggled and allowed nine plays of at least 15 yards or more, including three of 25 or more. The end result was a dominant performance from start to finish by Carroll (2-1).

The Dragons scored quickly to open the game, as they used a seven-play, 70-yard drive — capped off by a 10-yard strike from Holmes to Humphrey in the corner of the end zone — to take a 7-0 lead following the extra point.

Carroll would then extend its lead to 17-0 before Lee finally got on the board. Senior Ashton Akbar's breakaway 78-yard touchdown run with 2:05 left in the first quarter cut Lee's deficit to 17-7 and for a few moments, gave the Rebels' sideline a bit of life.

But outside of another solid performance by Lee's ball carriers, not much else went according to plan for the Rebels. Lee ran the ball 45 times for 261 yards as a team, but junior quarterback Sema'J Davis had difficulty revving up the Rebels' passing game. He began to rely on his mobility increasingly often in the first half.

Aided by nearly penalty- and turnover-free play, Lee's offense put together some nice drives into Dragon territory. But ultimately the unit became too predictable to keep pace with Carroll, which led, 31-7 at halftime.

Fort Worth Star-Telegram

Southlake Carroll running back Lil' Jordan Humphrey (4) gets wrapped up by Lee linebacker Kade Hicks (44) and Kaleb Nunez (26) during the first quarter, Friday night at Dragon Stadium in Southlake.

The Rebels came out determined to open the second half, driving down the field nearly 60 yards before turning the ball over on downs. Carroll scored under two minutes later and took a 38-7 lead with 8:31 left in the third quarter.

The Dragons then proceeded to find the end zone on their next two possessions, even with second-string offensive players in for most of that time.

Akbar led Lee with 113 yards and a touchdown on 11 carries, as well as one catch for 23 yards.

Nicco Sorianello, who scored Lee's second touchdown with 1:17 left in the game, finished with 19 yards and the score on seven carries. He also went 2-for-4 for 21 yards through the air.

For Carroll, receiver Zach Farrar caught four passes for 54 yards and a touchdown. Coleman added 61 yards on five receptions.

STANTON

to only 10 by Forsan.

"That's exactly what we wanted to take the clock time off from them, not let them be on offense," Stanton head coach John Peterson said. "Eat up that clock. That was a great drive for us."

With 2:54 remaining, Forsan quarterback Jesse Cervantes broke away on a 47-yard touchdown run, cutting Stanton's lead to 21-20.

However, SHS was called for a pre-snap penalty on the point after attempt, moving the ball half the distance to the goal line.

Instead of going for the 1-point kick, Forsan head coach Jason Phillips opted to go for the 2-point conversion.

On a quarterback keeper to the outside, Cervantes was stopped short of the goal and Stanton held onto its 21-20 advantage.

"Yard and a half, we had faith in our offensive line, faith in our backs, we're going to try to win the game right there, especially from a yard and half, instead of three (yards)," Forsan coach Jason Phillips said. "It was a no brainer once they got that penalty. We just couldn't execute."

Following the failed 2-point try, Forsan's defense forced a three-and-out on Stanton's offense.

However, FHS muffed Stanton's punt with 2 1/2 minutes to play, which was recovered by Stanton's Fryar on Forsan's 29-yard line. With Forsan having no timeouts left, Stanton sealed the win with a 10-yard run by Estevan Chavez.

FHS had a couple of critical turnovers in the red zone.

Early in the first quarter, Cervantes burst through the middle of the line on a quarterback keeper and found daylight on a 70-yard run. It appeared to be a sure touchdown run for Cervantes, but Stanton's Alex Martinez spoiled the moment for Forsan as he hustled toward the goal line and stripped the ball loose from the quarterback at the 2-yard line and recovered the loose ball.

SHS capitalized on the turnover as it turned around and scored on an impressive eight-play, 98-yard drive that was capped off by a 12-yard rushing touchdown by Chavez.

Tied 14-14 in the third quarter, Forsan drove to the Stanton 16-yard line, but Cervantes threw an interception to Johnathan Anderson to kill the drive.

Cervantes finished with 200 rushing yards on 22 attempts.

"Coming next week, we're still going to put the ball in his hands and we're still going to win lots of games behind that kid," Phillips said of Cervantes.

Graves threw for 117 yards and hit Tanner Luxton on a pair of passes covering 74 yards.

MHS begins 3-6A play with tough Abilene squad

By Christopher Hadorn
chadorn@mrt.com

The Midland High tennis team won't be easing into District 3-6A team tennis play when matches start today.

Right off the bat, the Bulldogs host 2014 district runner-up Abilene High in their District 3-6A team tennis opener at Midland High at 9 a.m.

In 2014, Abilene High spoiled Midland High's district opener with an 11-8 victory.

"Our kids have not forgotten that," said Alan Biel, Bulldogs head coach. "We have been working hard for almost a full year for the opportunity to play Abilene High again."

Today is a chance for MHS to build on a breakthrough season in 2014. With a third-place finish in District 3-6A at 3-2, Midland High qualified for the area tournament for the first time in nearly a decade.

In the pre-district season, Biel has seen improvement as the Bulldogs (9-2) have beaten teams such as Amarillo Tascosa, Amarillo High, Katy Seven Lakes, Plano and College Station A&M Consolidated.

"When we are able to do things like that, I think it shows the players that we're a stronger team than we were last year because we are beating teams that we've lost to last year and the year before," Biel said. "To a certain extent, it builds confidence with the understanding that if we're not able to translate them to our district matches, it is what it is. It's a preseason win."

Midland High's two losses were to Lubbock Coronado (12-7) and Southlake Carroll (10-1).

"It was the first time that we ever had a chance to play them," Biel said of Southlake Carroll. "We lost 10-1 but we were ahead at No. 1 girls singles, No. 2 girls singles, No. 3 girls singles when we stopped the match."

Biel is bullish about his girls group, which includes Kate Daugherty, Allison Stewart and Hannah Rey, all of whom qualified for the Region I-6A Tennis Championships as individuals in the spring.

Lee opens up Tuesday

At 4 p.m. Tuesday, Lee hosts Odessa High in its District 3-6A team tennis opener at the Bush Tennis Center. Neither team earned one of District 3-6A's four playoff spots in 2014.

Williams stunned in US Open semis by Vinci

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press

Associated Press

Serena Williams stumbles as she fails to catch up with a drop shot from Roberta Vinci, of Italy, during a semifinal match at the U.S. Open tennis tournament, Friday in New York

NEW YORK — For Serena Williams' first 26 matches this year at major tournaments, no deficit was too daunting, no opponent too troublesome, no victory too far from reach.

She was unbeaten and, seemingly, unbeatable, nearing the first Grand Slam in more than a quarter-century. All Williams needed was two more wins to pull off that rare feat. And yet, against an unseeded and unheralded opponent in the U.S. Open semifinals, she faltered. Her pursuit of history ended, oh so close.

In one of the most significant upsets in the history of tennis, Williams finally found a hole too big to climb out of, losing 2-6, 6-4, 6-4 on Friday at Flushing Meadows to 43rd-ranked Roberta Vinci of Italy.

"I don't want to talk about how disappointing it is for me," Williams said at the start of a briefer-than-usual news conference. "If you have any other questions, I'm open for that."

Vinci had never before played in a Grand Slam semifinal; Williams owns 21 major titles. In four previous matchups, Vinci had never taken a set off Williams.

"Every so often," Vinci said, "a miracle happens."

How little faith did even she have? Vinci said she booked a flight home for Saturday, the day of the final.

But Vinci's unusual style, full of slices and net rushes and volleying skills she honed while winning a career Grand Slam in doubles, kept Williams off-balance enough to cause problems and prevent the 33-year-old American from becoming the first player since Steffi Graf in 1988 to win all four major tournaments in a calendar year.

As Williams quickly left the scene, hopping in a waiting black SUV and taking off, her coach, Patrick Mouratoglou, was explaining to reporters what he called "a bad day, clearly."

He said he could tell before the match that something was off.

"She was very slow. There was no movement with her lower body, so she was in bad positions to be aggressive and play her attacking game," Mouratoglou said. "She couldn't find it today. You don't wake up the same way every day. Some days you feel good, other days you don't feel good. That's life. Usually she finds a way, and today she did not."

Williams had been pushed to the limit before — this was her 12th three-setter in a major this season — but had managed to win titles at the Australian Open on hard courts in January, the French Open on clay courts in June, and Wimbledon on grass courts in July. And she had won five matches on the U.S. Open's hard courts over the past two weeks.

This time, for once, the No. 1-ranked Williams could not pull it out, undone by 40 unforced errors, twice as many as Vinci, including four double-faults. That negated the impact of Williams' 16 aces, including one at 126 mph.

NYC arrest video shows ex-tennis pro being thrown to ground

By Jake Pearson and Colleen Long
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Video surveillance released Friday of the mistaken arrest of former tennis star James Blake shows a plainclothes police officer who has a history of excessive-force complaints grabbing Blake by the arm and tackling him to the ground.

Officer James Frascatore's rough arrest of the hometown favorite outside a midtown Manhattan hotel on Wednesday prompted apologies from New York City's mayor and police commissioner.

Frascatore was the subject of four civilian complaints in a seven-month period of 2013, and he has been named in two federal civil rights lawsuits as being among a group of officers accused of beating, pepper spraying and falsely arresting two Queens men in separate incidents that year.

The surveillance footage shows Blake standing against a silver post outside the Grand Hyatt New York when Frascatore approaches suddenly, grabs Blake, spins him around and throws him to the ground.

Stephen Davis, the NYPD's top spokesman, released the video Friday and said Blake was interviewed by internal affairs detectives Thursday night.

Frascatore, who has four years on the force and previously worked as a police officer in Florida, was the officer who arrested Blake, a law enforcement official confirmed Friday. The official was not authorized to publicly discuss the case and spoke on condition of anonymity.

The official said one of the complaints was exonerated, another dismissed, a third — for refusing to identify himself — was substantiated, and the status of the fourth was unclear.

In a statement, Blake said that "while I continue to believe the vast majority of our police officers are dedicated public servants who conduct themselves appropriately, I know that what happened to me is not uncommon."

Mayor Bill de Blasio and Police Commissioner William Bratton said in a statement that the city "extends deepest apologies to Mr. Blake" and that both the mayor and police commissioner "stand ready" to meet with Blake.

"The incident remains under investigation to determine what contributed to the errors made, who may be held accountable, and what we can learn to prevent these mistakes from being repeated in the future," they said.

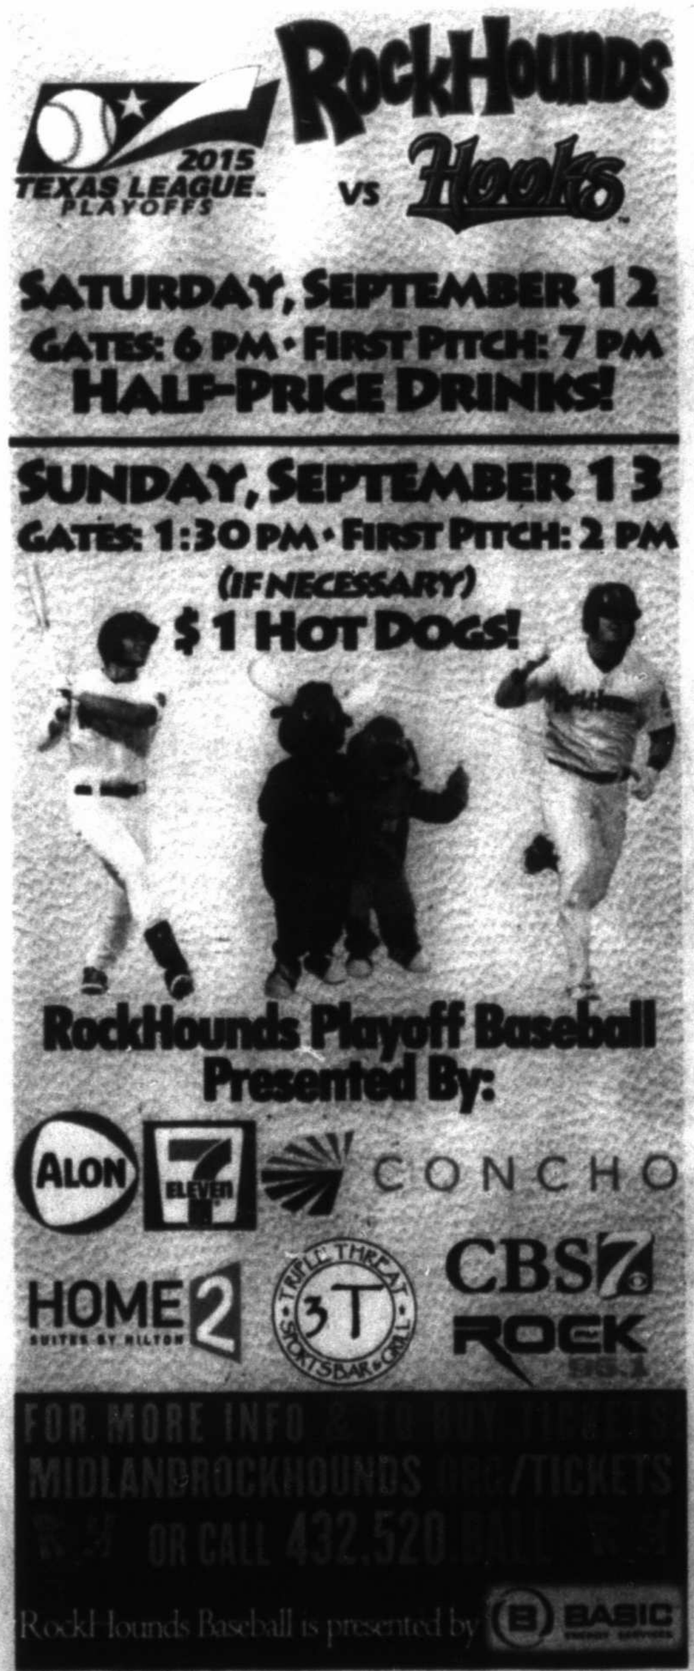

Bratton said earlier Friday that investigators were reviewing the officer's disciplinary record "understanding that some of those issues were exonerated." He didn't elaborate.

A number listed for Frascatore, 38, wasn't in service Friday and a spokesman for his union declined to comment on the claims.

Patrick J. Lynch, head of the police officer's union, said the officer was apprehending "what he had every reason to believe was an individual who had just committed a crime."

He said he regrets any embarrassment or injury suffered by Blake as a result, but the apprehension was made "under fluid circumstances where the subject might have fled, and the officer did a professional job of bringing the individual to the ground."

Blake had been ranked as high as No. 4 in the world and reached three Grand Slam quarterfinals. Before retiring after the 2013 U.S. Open, he won 10 singles titles, most recently in 2007.

POWER POINTS

THE ULTIMATE FOOTBALL CONTEST

A 'GRAND PRIZE' WEEKLY IN POWER POINTS CONTEST

The Midland Reporter-Telegram will carry this season's POWER POINTS Football Contest, which features a weekly grand prize of $1,000.

Along with other newspapers in the South region, the Midland Reporter-Telegram will publish the contest for 17 weeks, beginning September 6th. Entry forms publish every Sunday and Monday in the sports section.

In addition to the $1,000 regional grand prize, a local prize of a $50 gift card from Domino's Pizza will be awarded each week.

In POWER POINTS, the object of the game is to amass as many of the 136 possible points each week as you can. Contestants select winners from each week's list of games – mostly NFL action but with a smattering of top regional college games. Contestants pick their winners and plot them along a weighted point scale according to their confidence in them. Your highest-confidence pick goes on the 16-point line, your lowest-confidence pick on the 1-point line.

The contestant regionally who tallies the most of the 136 points each week wins $1,000. The local contestant who tallies the most of the 136 points is the local winner.

To enter the contest, drop off your entries at Midland Reporter-Telegram, 201 E. Illinois Ave., Midland, Texas.

Weekly deadline for entry is 2 p.m. on Thursdays.

NFL clears Patriots of headset suspicion in opening game

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — Philadelphia Eagles coach Chip Kelly has heard air traffic control coming in over the headsets he uses to communicate with his staff. Former Ravens coach Brian Billick said he once heard a pizza delivery guy.

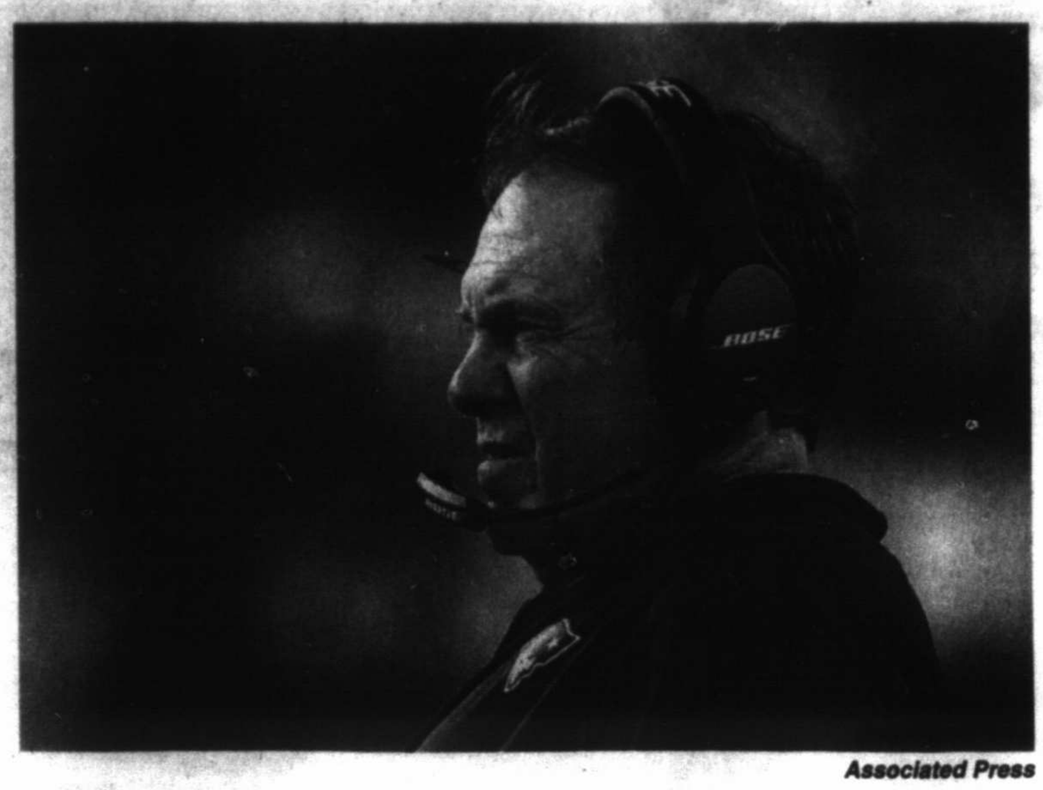

So when the Pittsburgh Steelers coaches started picking up the home radio broadcast on their headsets, there shouldn't have been any cause for suspicion.

Except they were at the home of the twice-convicted New England Patriots.

"The whole world sees it," Cleveland Browns linebacker Karlos Dansby said on Friday, a day after the Steelers' headsets went out in the Patriots' 28-21 victory. "Everybody (saw) it last night. You're like, 'What? The headsets? What?' C'mon, man. You've got to be kidding me."

On the night the Super Bowl champions were hoping to turn from "Deflategate" to their title defense, the Patriots instead found themselves denying new allegations of shenanigans from Steelers coach Mike Tomlin and a chorus around the NFL complaining that the headset technology seems to fail more often in New England.

Tomlin's clenched-jaw postgame news conference gave new life to league-wide suspicion that something sinister is at work whenever something goes wrong against the Patriots. After describing the problem with the headsets on Thursday night, Tomlin told reporters, "That's always the case."

New England Patriots head coach Bill Belichick watches action from the sideline in the first half of an NFL game against the Pittsburgh Steelers, Thursday in Foxborough, Mass

"Here?" he was asked.

"Yes," Tomlin said.

Patriots coach Bill Belichick responded on Friday that "it's just not right" for opponents and their fans to attribute the team's success — six trips to the Super Bowl, and four NFL titles — to dirty tricks involving videotaping, deflated footballs and now headsets.

"I think it's just sad commentary and it's gone to a pretty low level. It's sunk pretty deep," Belichick said, breaking his silence on the "Deflategate" scandal and an ESPN report last week citing 90 sources around the league — many of them anonymous, and many of them suspicious of the Patriots' techniques.

"To take away from what those teams accomplished ... it's just not right," Belichick said.

The league agreed with the Patriots — at least in this case.

NFL spokesman Michael Signora said in a statement late Friday afternoon that the audio interference was "entirely attributable to an electrical issue made worse by the inclement weather."

"It involved no manipulation by any individual," he said. "The Patriots had nothing to do with it."

The latest accusations came just as the Patriots were trying to celebrate their fourth Super Bowl title and change the subject from the deflated footballs scandal that dominated the last seven months.

Patriots quarterback — and reigning Super Bowl MVP — Tom Brady, was originally suspended four games in connection with the deflated footballs. A federal judge vacated the suspension last week, ruling that the penalty wasn't allowed by the union contract and clearing Brady to play in the opener.

"They get away with it. He got off," Steelers linebacker Lawrence Timmons said.

It was the second time the organization has been penalized by the league for taking liberties with the rules, following the 2007 "Spygate" brouhaha in which Belichick was caught illegally videotaping opponents' signals.

"Don't forget about Spygate now. That's Real Deal Holyfield right there. It doesn't get any bigger than that," Dansby said. "At this point, nothing is going to happen to these guys. They're 'Teflon Don' all the way across the board."

Mayweather insists Berto is last fight of perfect career

By Tim Dahlberg
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Floyd Mayweather Jr. insists this is it, though he may be one of only a few who really seem to believe it.

Nineteen years and 48 fights haven't taken a big toll on Mayweather, but he's not taking any chances. He has seen what taking too many punches did to his uncle, Roger, and is determined to leave boxing with his brain fully intact.

Rich beyond belief, Mayweather doesn't need to fight anymore. And he says he's comfortable walking away from the sport he began learning before he could even walk.

"Not gonna miss it at all," Mayweather said. "I feel like I've been dealt a royal flush."

Those not on the inside in the Mayweather camp scoff at the thought he will retire after facing Andre Berto on Saturday. They wonder how he can resist trying to break the late heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano's perfect mark of 49-0 and — perhaps more importantly — resist the huge money another fight would bring.

Those who know him best say he means what he says, even though an earlier retirement ended after 21 months.

"Why can't a man go out when he's had an illustrious career, accomplished everything that he needs to accomplish and be done?" Mayweather confidante Leonard Ellerbe said. "And he's done it his way."

Of that, there is little debate. Mayweather managed, in a career that dates to his pro debut in 1996, to reinvent himself several times and make more money than any fighter before him despite a defensive style that borders on boring in the ring.

He earned some $220 million in his last fight alone, a staggering figure that dwarfs all his other paydays. It happened because the desire to see him fight Manny Pacquiao was so frenzied that people paid up to $39,000 for ringside tickets and 4.6 million households bought the pay-per-view at the princely price of $99.95.

The frenzy has long passed, replaced by a sour taste most got from watching Mayweather methodically dispose of Pacquiao. There's so little demand to see him fight Berto that tickets were both available and plentiful direct from the MGM Grand in almost every section of the hotel's arena in the days leading up to the bout.

Part of that is the hangover from Pacquiao, though part of the blame has to go to Mayweather's choice of an opponent. Berto may be a former champion, but he has lost three of his last six fights — two of them to fighters Mayweather beat easily — and is a lopsided 20-1 underdog in man-to-man betting.

To try and sell the fight to those at home for a suggested price of $74.95, Mayweather has played up Berto's aggressive style and vowed to seek a knockout.

"Berto is not a pushover," Mayweather insisted. "No matter who I chose the media was going to have something to say; the critics were going to have something to say."

Mayweather weighed in Friday at 146 pounds, a pound beneath the limit, for the welterweight title fight. Berto was a pound lighter at 145.

The promotion for Berto has been so low key it almost seems as if the fight is an afterthought to Mayweather. He bristles when it is suggested that it takes a name opponent for him to sell a fight, especially when his last five fights on Showtime have closed in on 10 million pay-per-view buys with total revenue of nearly $750 million.

"Nobody's forced to watch," Mayweather said. "Watch if you want to watch. If you don't want to watch, don't watch."

Berto says people should tune in, especially if they want to see Mayweather get beat. Though a huge underdog, he has never been afraid to trade punches, something opponents don't normally do against Mayweather.

"I've been counted out from Day 1," said Berto, who represented Haiti in the 2004 Olympics. "I'm coming for my respect and for everything I deserve. He's sharp but I have certain tools that will make things difficult for him."

If so, Berto will do something Pacquiao couldn't do. Mayweather was at the top of his game when he beat his longtime rival in the richest fight ever, and if he does retire as planned it will be with a 49-0 record that matches Marciano.

Logano wins pole for Saturday night's Cup race at Richmond

By Hank Kurz Jr.
Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. — Joey Logano won the pole Friday for the NASCAR Sprint Cup regular-season finale Saturday night at Richmond International Raceway.

Logano turned a lap a 126.470 mph to emerge from the final 12 drivers in the knockout qualifying format.

He edged Matt Kenseth, whose best lap came at 126.357 mph, to win his fifth pole of the season.

"It's nice to have a good starting spot here," Logano said. "Obviously, if you're up front you can take care of your tires a little better through the first part of the race. That should help us along with a good pit stall."

Logano, who is second to Kevin Harvick in the points race, has won two of the last four races, and is the only one to have cracked Victory Lane outside the Joe Gibbs Racing stable in the past eight events. Kyle Busch has won three times in that span, Kenseth has won twice and Carl Edwards won last weekend at Darlington.

Four drivers went into qualifying for the last race to make NASCAR's Chase for the Sprint Cup needing to win the 26th race of the season to qualify for a spot in the playoffs, and all four made it into the final round.

Associated Press

Joey Logano talks to the media after qualifying on the pole for Saturday's NASCAR Sprint Cup auto race at Richmond International Raceway in Richmond, Va. Friday.

David Ragan finished with the best spot of the four, starting fifth, while Tony Stewart will start 10th, Austin Dillon 11th, and Kyle Larson 12th bidding for one of four spots still up for grabs.

Ragan was surprised, and delighted.

"We showed up here with one goal in mind and that's to win the race and put ourselves in position," he said. "We weren't that great in qualifying trim so I didn't know what to expect, but obviously we have a good car."

Larson started with the fastest car in the first practice, but faded to 17th fastest in the final session.

"I'd have liked to have been a little better, but it's nice to make the final round," he said.

Basketball Hall of Fame welcomes class of 11 new members

By Brian Mahoney
Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Spencer Haywood and Dikembe Mutombo were great players who accomplished as much or more off the court.

On Friday night, they were celebrated for both.

The two former NBA stars were enshrined in the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame, part of a class of 11 players, coaches and referees.

Kentucky coach John Calipari was scheduled to be last member of the class to speak at Symphony Hall.

The rest of the class includes referee Dick Bavetta, former Celtic Jo Jo White and women's star Lisa Leslie. Tom Heinsohn is being inducted as a coach after already being enshrined as a player, and will be joined by former coaches George Raveling and Australia's Lindsay Gaze, plus ABA star Louis Dampier and early African-American player John Isaacs.

Players such as LeBron James, Kevin Garnett and Kevin Durant will likely be here one day, and will owe a debt of gratitude to Haywood.

His battle with the NBA that went all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court in 1970 knocked down the age requirement that required players to be four years removed from high school. Once in the league, he went on to play 12 seasons, make four All-Star teams and win a championship.

"Remember guys, I had game," Haywood said. "It was not like I just did this Supreme Court thing. I had some serious game."

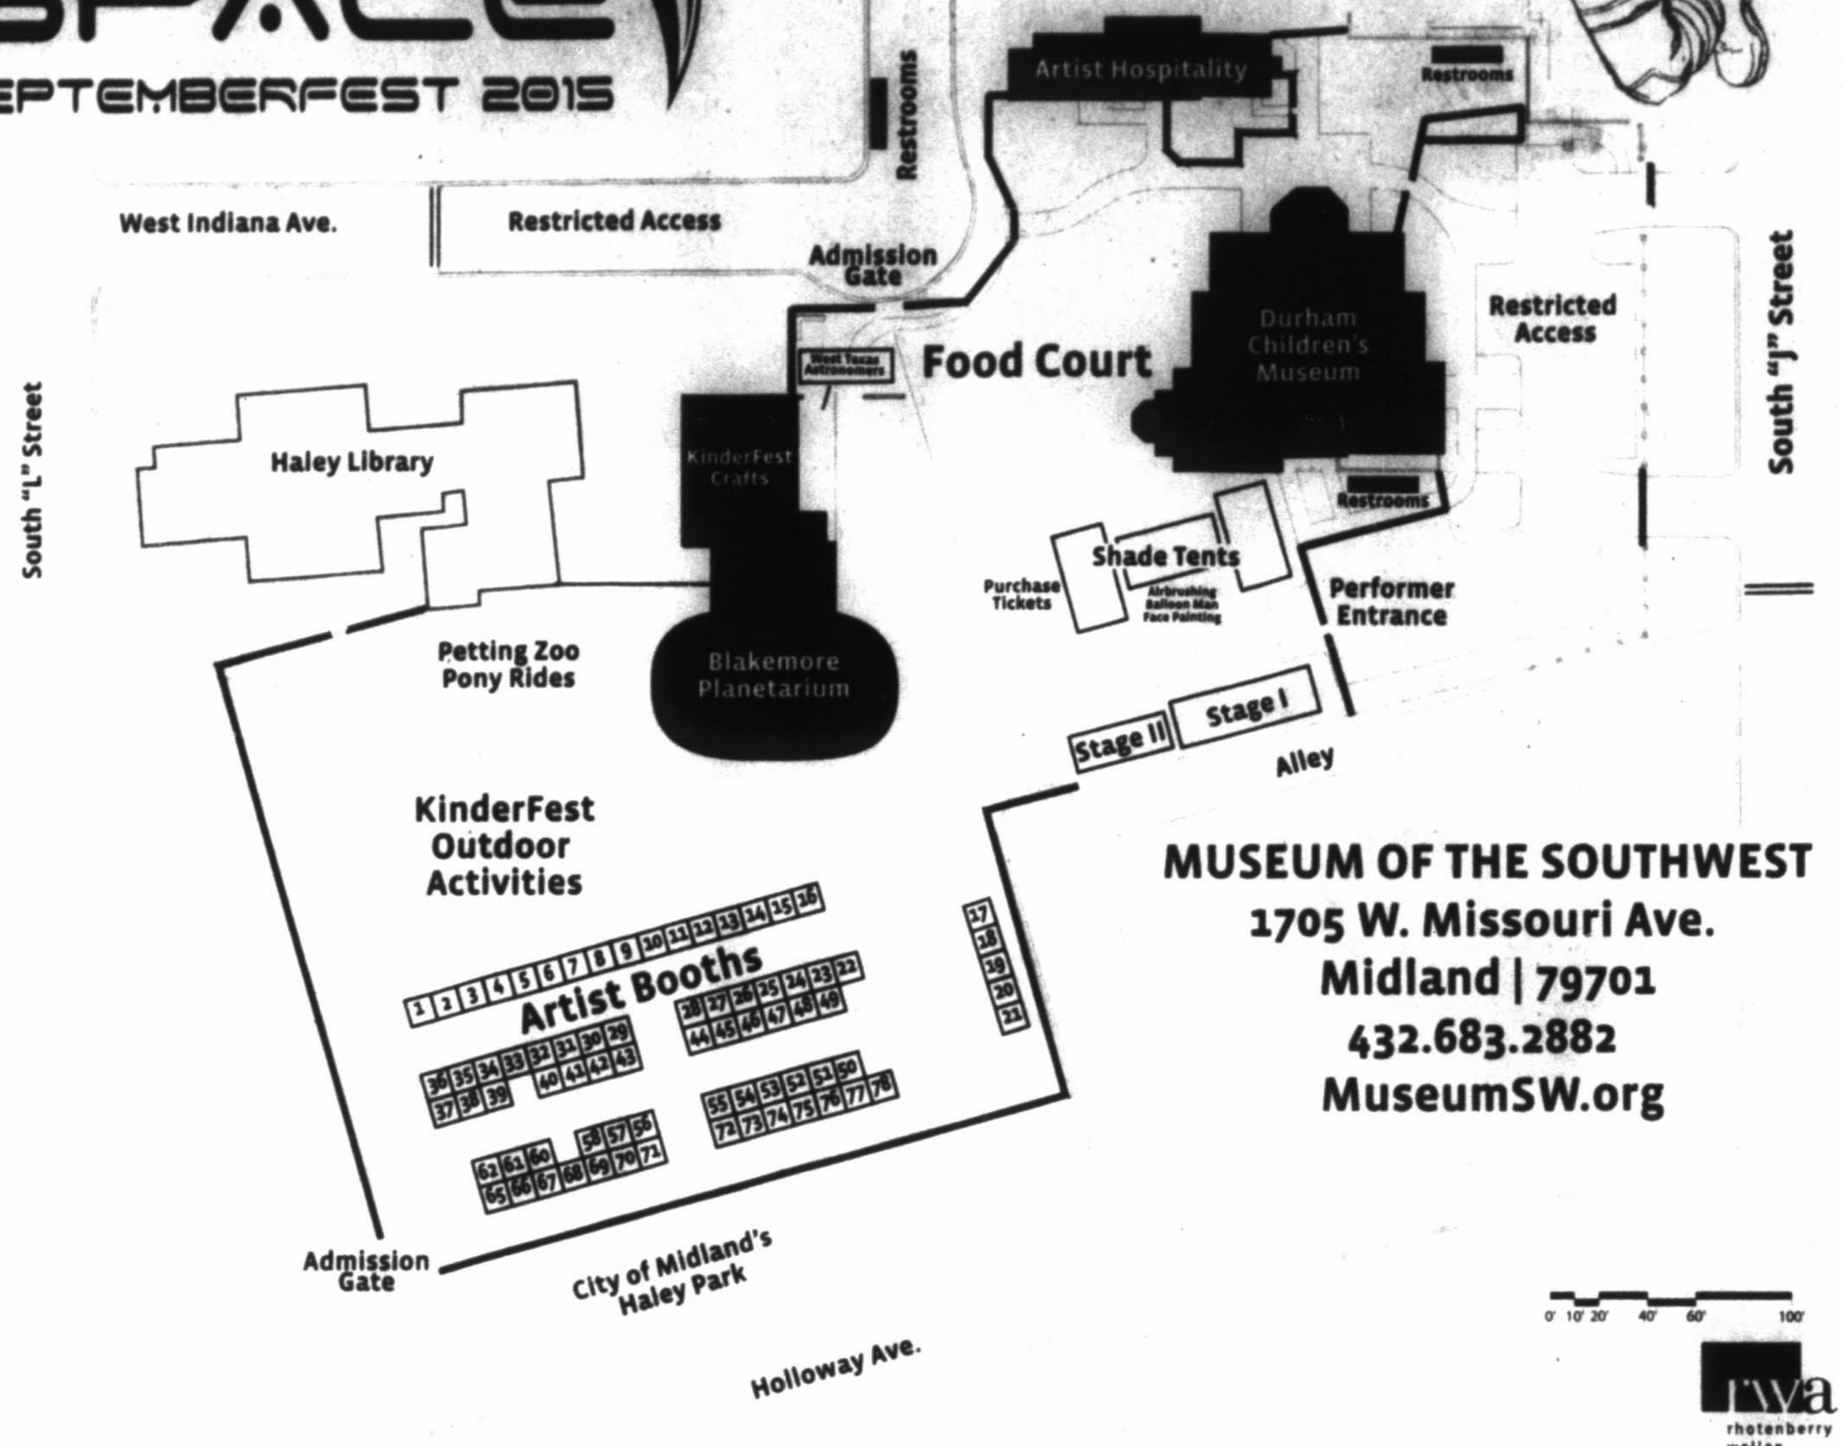

So did Mutombo, a fierce defender and shot blocker for 18 seasons. He said he was proud to have been the third African to play in the NBA, "to come to the U.S. with nothing and now I'm part of the NBA history."

And he's giving back, opening a hospital in his homeland of Congo that he said has served 140,000 people. He twice won the NBA's J. Walter Kennedy Citizenship Award and now works for the league as a global ambassador.

"Playing basketball allowed me to become a global citizen," Mutombo said, adding that he may not have won a championship "but I'm a champion to so many people."

Texas Tech wide receiver Devin Lauderdale (6) reaches for a reception Sept. 5 in Tech's season opener against Sam Houston State.

Texas Tech hopes to finish today versus UTEP

Texas Tech coach Kliff Kingsbury wants his Red Raiders to develop a killer instinct.

The biggest question is, how long is that going to take?

"We'll find out," said Kingsbury during the football team's weekly press conference on Monday. "We're going to try to coach it and try to put our guys in situations to do that, but I think we have some guys that have it. As a collective group we have to get better at it."

The Red Raiders hope to take that step to having that killer instinct at 2 p.m. today when they host UTEP (0-1), which is coming off a 48-13 drubbing at Arkansas. The game will be televised on Fox Sports Southwest.

It seemed like not too many people were happy after last Saturday's 59-45 win over FCS power Sam Houston State.

The Red Raiders didn't think they played good enough defense, and they were right after a porous first half that saw too many missed tackles. And Kingsbury thought his receivers dropped too many passes — eight by the coach's count.

OSCAR LEROY
Oleroy@mrt.com

Those kind of things will get the Red Raiders beat against the more talented teams they'll face this season. Those things also contributed to a 4-8 season last year and Kingsbury certainly doesn't want a repeat of that performance.

"The biggest disappointment was not finishing the game," Kingsbury said. "Coming off the field, I still feel that same way. But there were some positives from young guys who made some plays, which was good to see when the lights came on, but lots of room for improvement."

For the most part, Kingsbury did like what he saw from sophomore quarterback Patrick Mahomes, who was named Big 12 Offensive Player of the Week after passing for 425 yards, four touchdowns and an interception in only his fifth career start. He might be in for another big game today against a young UTEP secondary that was torched by the Razorbacks for 308 passing yards and four TDs.

Mahomes also showed the ability, against Sam Houston State, to extend plays with his feet, which is what gave him the edge over junior Davis Webb.

As for the much-maligned defense, it did come up with four turnovers and it did make second-half adjustments under first-year defensive coordinator David Gibbs, so there was at least some silver lining.

"For whatever reason, they went out there, I don't know it was the first time in front of a crowd, I don't know what it was, but unacceptable," said Gibbs, who seems to tell it like it is. "I take the blame. It's not their fault. They weren't prepared.

"Sam Houston was better than most people

Texas shakes up offense before Rice

By Jim Vertuno

AUSTIN — Charlie Strong had to do something.

After one game — the third straight humiliating loss dating back to last season — Texas ranked dead last nationally in total offense and tied for last in scoring.

So Strong reshuffled his offensive staff, stripping lead play-calling from assistant head coach Shawn Watson and whatever was left from offensive line coach Joe Wickline. He turned the unit over to wide receivers coach Jay Norvell in search of some inspiration Saturday night when the Longhorns (0-1) face Rice (1-0).

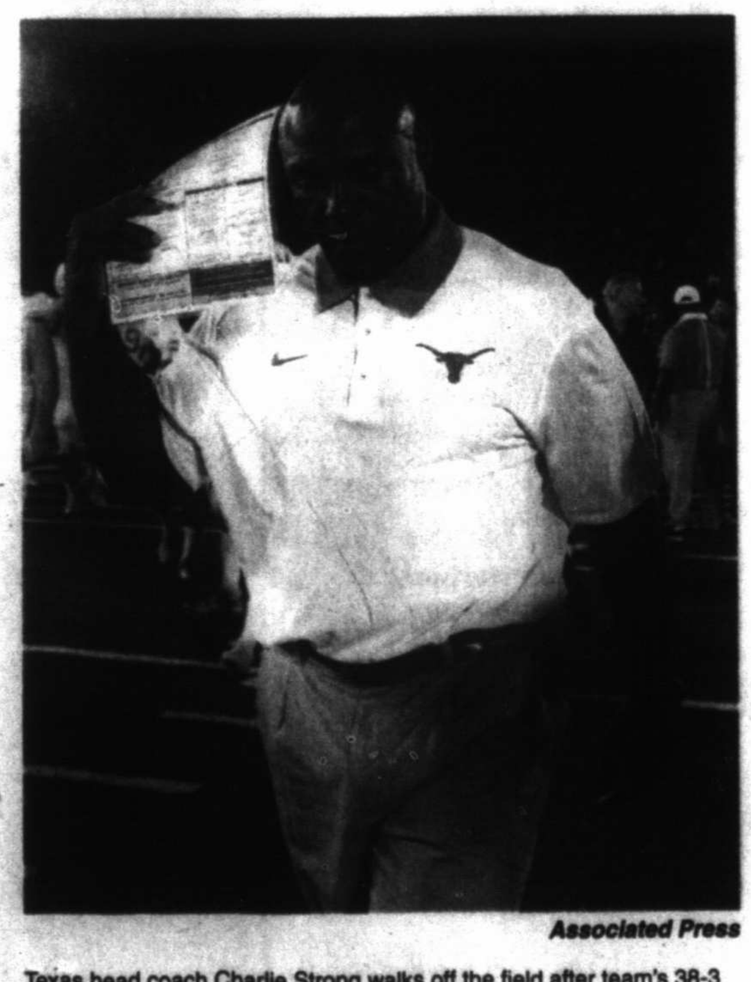

Doing so meant Strong rejected two of his biggest staff hires at Texas to lean on a first-year assistant who hasn't called plays in almost 10 years. It also showed Strong is desperate to avoid a second-consecutive losing season.

Strong is two seasons into a five-year, $25-million guaranteed contract, but losing to Rice would turn up the heat to levels few thought possible so soon.

"We have to get this program on track. ... We expect more, want more and the fans deserve more," Strong said. "It was a tough decision. Shawn and Joe and I have been friends for a long time."

Texas' pro-style offense simply wasn't working. Strong acknowledged as much after a 6-7 finish in

Oklahoma has Rocky chance to give Big 12 needed boost

Associated Press

Things to watch in the second week of the Big 12 Conference season, when again all 10 teams are playing:

Game of the week

No. 19 Oklahoma at No. 23 Tennessee. The Sooners make their first-ever trip to Rocky Top, and the Big 12 could certainly get a boost from a road victory over a ranked SEC team. The Big 12 has only eight games this season against teams from other Power Five conferences, and likely only three of those will be in the Top 25. Texas lost 38-3 at No. 9 Notre Dame, and Texas Tech goes to No. 18 Arkansas next week. Oklahoma is no stranger to such games, having won at Florida State in 2011 and at Notre Dame two years ago. "We've been on this stage before," coach Bob Stoops said.

The Sooners won at home against the Volunteers last season, the only previous meetings between the teams were in the 1939 and 1968 Orange Bowls.

Best matchup

Iowa St. vs Iowa. The Cy-Hawk Trophy is on the line in the series that dates to 1894. The Cyclones beat their instate rival from the Big Ten on a late field goal last season, one of their two victories in 2014. Iowa State has won three of the last four against the Hawkeyes, but still trails 40-22 in the series.

Inside the numbers

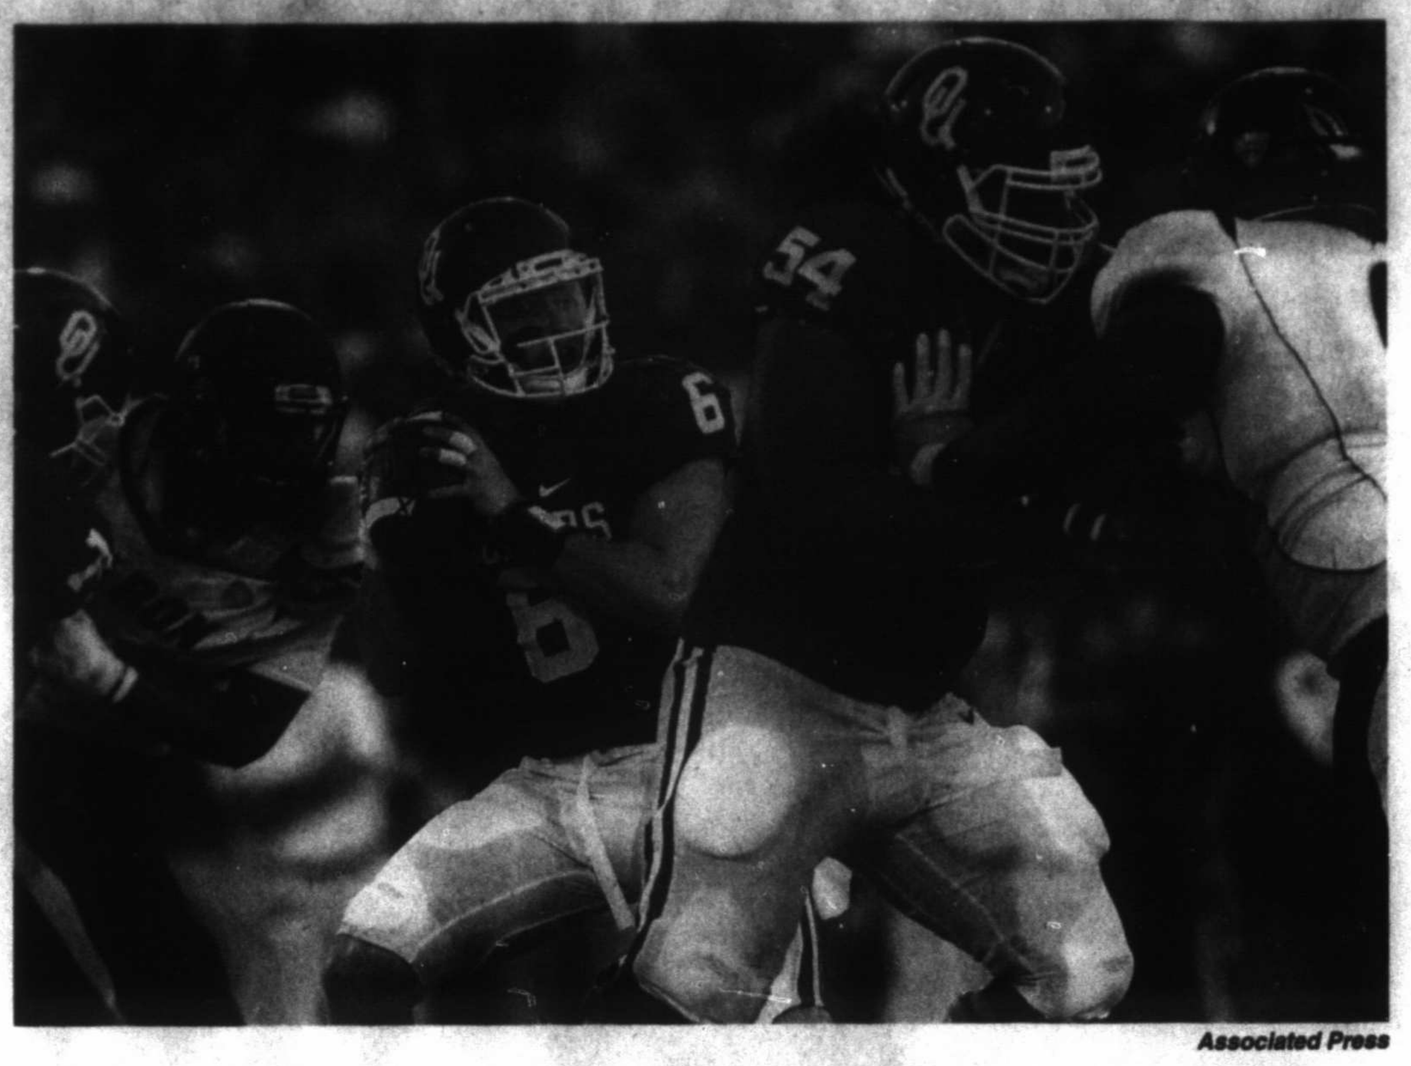

Oklahoma State has won 19 consecutive home openers, and Texas has won 15 in row. The Longhorns are also 40-2 against Rice since 1965. ... Four Big 12 quarterbacks threw for more than 350 yards with multiple touchdowns the opening weekend — Texas Tech's Patrick Mahomes, Oklahoma's Baker Mayfield, Baylor's Seth Russell and West Virginia's Skyler Howard. ... Kansas State has 97 non-offensive touchdowns since 1997, the most in the nation in that span, including Morgan Burns' 100-yard kickoff return in the opener.

Long shot(s)

Defending Big 12 co-champions No. 3 TCU or No. 4 Baylor losing their home openers against FCS teams. Both are undefeated in non-conference home games the past three seasons — the Horned Frogs 6-0 and the Bears 7-0. TCU is home against Stephen F. Austin, which lost by 60 points in Fort Worth in its only other trip there seven years ago. The Bears, who host Lamar, have won those seven non-conference home games by an average margin of 51 points.

Impact player

Junior college transfer Ke'aun Kinner made his Kansas debut with the Big 12's only 100-yard rushing game in Week 1. He had 27 carries for 157 yards and two touchdowns in the Jayhawks' loss to South Dakota State. Kinner had 3,614 yards rushing the past two seasons for Navarro Junior College.

thought they were," Gibbs said. "Now, were they that good? No. But they were Saturday. So, obviously we've got a lot of corrections to make."

Although UTEP gave the Red Raiders a scare last year in my hometown of El Paso before Tech prevailed, 36-26, I don't see today's game being that close. Tech should win on talent alone: 42-24.

After the first week of Big 12 football action, here are my Big 12 power rankings:

1. Baylor (1-0): The Bears took care of SMU 56-21 and now turn their attention to Lamar, an FCS program that restarted football in 2010. This could get ugly.

2. TCU (1-0): The Horned Frogs escaped with a win over a tough Minnesota team (23-17) last week, but shouldn't have a problem against Stephen F. Austin.

3. Oklahoma (1-0): The Sooners beat up on Akron (41-3) last week like they should have, but we'll find out a lot about the Sooners when they head to Tennessee this afternoon.

4. Kansas State (1-0): The Wildcats rolled to a 34-0 victory over South Dakota and should continue to roll through its non-conference schedule with UT-San Antonio and Louisiana Tech coming up in the next two weeks.

5. West Virginia (1-0): The Mountaineers killed Georgia Southern, 44-0, last week and should dominate again today against Liberty.

6. Oklahoma State (1-0): The Cowboys didn't look that impressive in a 24-13 win at Central Michigan but it was the first game of the year and it was on the road, so we'll give them a pass for now. OSU hosts Central Arkansas tonight.

7. Texas Tech (1-0): The Red Raiders' defense left a lot to be desired after last week, but Tech at least showed some improvement. The offense, despite some drops, looked impressive.

8. Iowa State (1-0): Despite the program continuously being in the bottom half of the league, 61,500 fans still showed up to last week's 31-7 home-opening win over Northern Iowa. Who knows? Maybe the Cyclones will give them a little more to cheer about this year. They take on rival Iowa today.

9. Texas (0-1): The Longhorns shouldn't be this bad with the talent that's on campus. But when a team is still looking for a quarterback and not just an athlete who happens to play quarterback, it's not going to help. And I don't think changing offensive play callers after one game is going to be the quick fix head coach Charlie Strong is looking for.

10. Kansas (0-1): Don't worry Jayhawks fans, basketball season is only a couple of months away.

Ball State at Texas A&M

Ball State (1-0) at No. 16 Texas A&M (1-0), 7 p.m. (ESPNU)
Line: Texas A&M by 29 1/2.
Series Record: First meeting.

■ What's at stake: Texas A&M looks to improve to 16-0 in non-conference games under coach Kevin Sumlin in the first game since a $485 million redevelopment of Kyle Field. The redevelopment has increased the capacity of the stadium to 102,733, which leaves it as the biggest stadium in the Southeastern Conference and the fourth largest in the country. Ball State looks for its first win over an SEC team (0-9).

■ Key matchup: Ball State's offensive line vs. Texas A&M's pass rush. The Aggies rank second in the nation in sacks after piling up nine in a win over Arizona State in the opener in the first game under aggressive defensive coordinator John Chavis. DE Daeshon Hall led four and DE Myles Garrett added two. This week they'll test a Ball State line that is the strength of the team. The Cardinals return all of their starters from 2014.

■ Players to watch:

Ball State: RB Darian Green. He tied a school record by scoring four touchdowns, three rushing and one receiving, in Ball State's 48-36 win over VMI last week.

Texas A&M: QB Kyler Murray. He lost the starting job to Kyle Allen in camp, but Sumlin used him on several drives throughout the opener and said Monday that he wants to do that this week as well. He had some struggles against the Sun Devils but also showed flashes of the electric player he was in high school, throwing for 49 yards and running for 69 more.

■ Facts & figures: A&M WR Josh Reynolds needs 80 yards receiving to reach 1,000 yards for his career. ... Aggie WR Christian Kirk had 106 yards receiving with a touchdown to become the first freshman in school history to reach 100 yards receiving in his debut. He also had a 79-yard punt return for a score. ... Ball State has scored at least 40 points in three straight games dating back to last season. ... The Aggies have 22 players who weigh at least 300 pounds, which is the most in school history

Lamar at No. 4 Baylor

Lamar (1-0) at No. 4 Baylor (1-0), 7:30 p.m. (FSN)
Line: None
Series Record: Baylor leads 2-1

■ What's at stake: Baylor plays its home opener against Lamar, an FCS team in only its sixth season since reviving the program. Even though it is only the second week of the season, the playoff-hopeful Bears could use the lopsided victory everyone expects. Baylor, the first team left out of the first College Football Playoff last season, has won 16 consecutive home games. Over the past two years, that includes three games with 70 points, and another with 69 points.

■ Key matchup: All-Big 12 defenders Shawn Oakman and Orion Stewart vs. Lamar offense. Big defensive end Oakman and safety Stewart are going to be raring to go after missing the opener because of one-game suspensions for violations of unspecified team rules.

■ Players to watch:

Lamar: Reggie Begelton is the career receiving leader for the Cardinals with 174 catches. The senior had four catches for 37 yards and a touchdown in a lopsided opening victory over NAIA school Bacone. The senior also has 1,927 yards, which is 172 yards from another school record.

Baylor: Corey Coleman and KD Cannon made the Bears the only FBS team with a pair of returning 1,000-yard receivers. The duo is already off to a good start in 2015, both with 100-yard games and a touchdown against SMU. Coleman had five catches for 178 yards, while Cannon had three catches for 104 yards.

■ Facts & figures: The Bears' 723 total yards in their opener included a school record with 10.48 yards per play. ... Like Baylor in the Big 12, Lamar plays a round-robin league schedule in the Southland Conference. The Cardinals' final 10 regular-season games after the trip to Waco are league games. ... Baylor is 6-0 in its inaugural season at McLane Stadium, the riverfront campus stadium they moved into last year.

Stephen F. Austin at No. 3 TCU

Stephen F. Austin (0-1) at No. 3 TCU (1-0), 3:30 p.m. (Fox Sports 1)
Line: None
Series Record: TCU leads 1-0

■ What's at stake: TCU tries to win its 14th consecutive home opener, the first of consecutive games at Amon G. Carter Stadium to end its non-conference schedule. After holding on for a 23-17 win at Big Ten team Minnesota, the Horned Frogs get to play an FCS team they beat by 60 points in their only previous meeting, with a chance to get more work for their up-tempo offense and a young defense.

■ Key matchup: Stephen F. Austin's experienced offensive line vs. TCU's defense. The Lumberjacks returned all five starting offensive linemen, a group of three seniors and two juniors that has played in a combined 151 games with 115 starts. Three of TCU's top four linebackers for the opener were freshmen, and the only upperclassman, junior Sammy Douglas, sustained a season-ending injury. Another LB, Michael Freeze, is taking a leave of absence from the team and DE James McFarland broke his toe and is out for year.

■ Players to watch:

Stephen F. Austin: Junior QB Zach Conque, the son of the Lumberjacks head coach, threw for 297 yards with a touchdown while running for 68 yards and two more scores in the opening loss to Northern Arizona.

TCU: After setting a school record with 1,018 yards receiving and 11 touchdowns last season, senior Josh Doctson started this season with eight catches for 74 yards and an 11-yard TD against Minnesota.

■ Facts & figures: The Horned Frogs have a nine-game winning streak, the third-longest in FBS behind Ohio State (14) and Boise State (10). ... The Horned Frogs have the nation's longest active streak by forcing a turnover in 26 consecutive games. ... SFA is 0-8 against Big 12 teams, getting outscored 441-39 in those games. ... TCU running backs coach Curtis Luper has bachelor's and master's degrees from Stephen F. Austin, where he was an All-Southland Conference running back in 1993.

Texas

From 1C

2014 with a promise the Longhorns would incorporate a spread attack. But eight months later, Texas reverted back to its old form and managed just 163 total yards in a 38-3 loss.

Texas fans certainly want more and expect to see improvement soon. By mid-week, the school had more than 15,000 unsold tickets for Saturday.

Other things to watch when Texas plays Rice:

Texas quarterback Jerrod Heard

Whether Heard gets his first career start or is back on the bench will indicate the direction Texas wants to go on offense the rest of the season. Heard couldn't beat out Tyrone Swoopes in Watson's pro-style offense. But he's a gifted runner who won two Texas state high championships running the spread.

Longhorns lines

The Texas offensive and defensive lines were dominated by Notre Dame. On offense, the Longhorns started two freshmen who played like youngsters and Swoopes was constantly on the run. A weak defensive line was more of a surprise. The big guys up front are supposed to be the strength of the team.

Owls quarterback Driphus Jackson

Dual-threat quarterbacks have given Texas fits and Jackson could be the latest to do it. The senior passed for 143 yards and a touchdown and ran for 79 yards and a score against Wagner.

Malik Jefferson

If any Texas player stood out against Notre Dame, it was the freshman middle linebacker who had nine tackles. The Longhorns are leaning on him to shore up a defense that gave up more than 500 yards in the first game.

LEVEL

For each of the word groups below, change one letter in the top word to one of the letters that appears in the bottom word, then rearrange the tiles as needed to form a new common word. Do the same with each new word until you arrive at the bottom word. For example, one path from BARK to PLUM is BARK, MARK, RAMP, RUMP, PLUM.

MEALY → TROUT

QUIET → HAVOC

Yesterday's Answer: DYNAMO → DONKEY; INFANT → ADRIFT

Local forecast

Expect above-average temperatures and dry conditions for the next few days, according to the National Weather Service.

The high on Friday reached 94, while the low was 69. The record high for Sept. 11 is 102 set in 2000 and 1930. The record low is 50 set in 1935. On Sept. 11 of last year, the high was 86 and the low was 69.

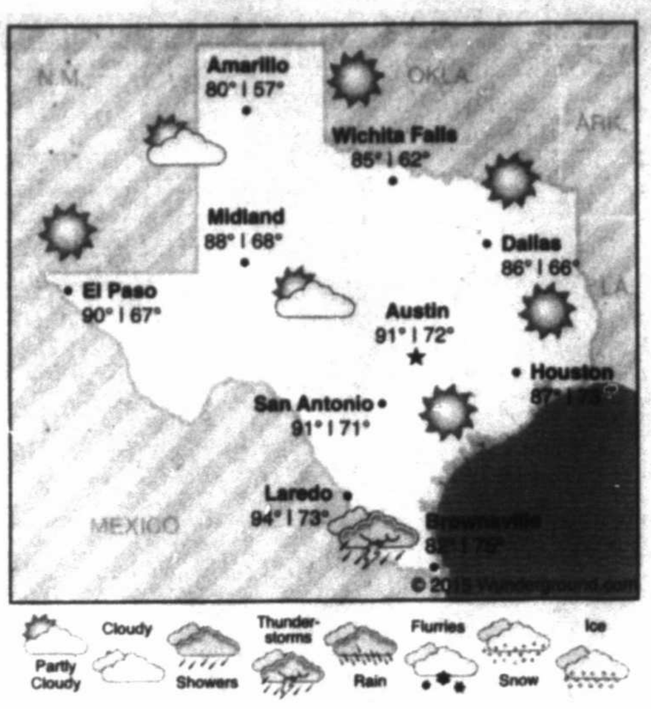

Science brief

HONOLULU

Scientists expect Hawaii's worst coral bleaching ever

Warmer-than-normal ocean temperatures around Hawaii this year will likely lead to the worst coral bleaching the islands have ever seen, scientists said Friday.

Many corals are only just recovering from last year's bleaching, which occurs when warm waters prompt coral to expel the algae they rely on for food, said Ruth Gates, the director of the Hawaii Institute of Marine Biology. The phenomenon is called bleaching because coral lose their color when they push out algae.

Lasting attraction to abuser troubles victim

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I am 19 and going into my second year of college. I was sexually and emotionally abused during my first two years of high school by a boy a year older than me. I attended therapy for a while and eventually found myself in a loving relationship with my boyfriend. We've been living together for a year.

Everything was going fine until I came home for summer break. I have never gotten over the feelings I had for my abuser, but I love my boyfriend and would never want to hurt him or endanger myself again. Why should I have feelings for someone who treated me so terribly? And what should I do about them? — ABUSED AND CONFUSED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ABUSED AND CONFUSED: I commend you for recognizing that the status quo isn't in your best interest. Old habits die hard, and you may still be physically attracted to your abuser. Now that the school year is beginning again, head straight to the student health center and talk to a counselor about this. Do not put it off, because understanding this is important for your emotional well-being now and in the future.

DEAR ABBY: We are having a housewarming party and would like to invite a married couple we know. However, the wife is notorious for having one of her female friends tag along for everything they do — movies, vacations, concerts. Everything! I don't care for the third wheel, and I don't want her at our party. What's the proper way to word the "guests only" without it sounding cold or insulting? — NO TRESPASSING IN VIRGINIA

DEAR NO TRESPASSING: After you issue the invitation, call the wife and tell her your party is for "guests only" and that you would prefer she not bring any extras. If she asks why, tell her the truth. It is a breach of etiquette to bring uninvited guests to someone else's party, so stop worrying about sounding cold or insulting because this couple appear to have hides of steel.

DEAR ABBY: I have asked my son to let me watch (via video chatting) my grandson open any gifts or cards I send. They live far away and I want to feel included. He promises to do it, but he never follows through.

My grandson is not being taught to have any regard for my feelings. What should I do? Should I drop the request and any expectation of contact? Should I stop sending gifts? It just upsets me too much. — LONELY GRANDMA IN MICHIGAN

DEAR GRANDMA: I don't blame you for feeling upset, but the person you should be upset with is your son. If you stop sending gifts to your grandson, you'll be punishing the wrong person. His parents should be teaching him the importance of acknowledging gifts because it is part of basic good manners that will benefit him in the future.

Because you want to stay in contact, after sending the boy a gift, call to ask him if he received it and how he liked it. If you do, it may help you to establish a closer relationship.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Sept. 12, 2015:

This year you will have a new beginning in at least one area of your life. You might be reluctant at first, but ultimately you will be very happy. Be careful, because you have a tendency to be too me-oriented. If you are single, you will meet someone of significance this year. This person will turn your life upside down. If you are attached, remember that a relationship goes both ways. You and your sweetie will enter a new phase of your relationship, which will be significant for the next 12 years. VIRGO can be difficult to relate to on a deeper level.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ You like to keep your interactions and thoughts as positive as you can. However, some negative feelings could arise from out of the blue. You might feel awkward trying to keep the lid on an emotional display. You can do only so much. Tonight: Get into a favorite pastime.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ You will notice all the feelings and emotional expressions that surround you. In some way, this will help you feel more secure. Reach out to a child or loved one who seems to want more of a connection with you. Make plans with this person ASAP. Tonight: Let it all hang out.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ You could be overwhelmed by everything that is happening around you. You might not be able to break out of a certain mood. Of all the signs, you tolerate feeling restricted the least. Your drive and determination will take you into a new realm of emotions. Tonight: Stay close to home.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★ Your sense of direction helps others. If you can contain your feelings a little more, you will be more helpful to someone who does not understand his or her changing moods. You are a champ at handling raw emotion. Show off your skills. Tonight: Help a friend let go.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ You could be at your wits' end with a friend or loved one. You simply cannot seem to identify with this person's issues. You are much more self-confident and see life differently from how he or she sees it. Do your best to be kind and open. Tonight: Make it your treat.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ You feel energized with today's New Moon in your sign. Use it well, as any resolutions made now are likely to be more easily carried out. Others clearly want to know you better. In fact, someone special could be seeking you out. Tonight: Your charisma draws in others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★ You might not feel up to snuff. With that realization, you'll want to plan a perfect weekend escape, perhaps by yourself or with one other person. Though you might be feeling emotional about a situation in your life, let it go for now. Tonight: Say "yes" to an offer.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ You might have pushed too hard in order to accomplish what you want. You could be dealing with a slight amount of disappointment as a result. Don't make a big deal out of this; your expectations were unusually high in this case. Tonight: Where the crowds are.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★ You continue to feel pressured, but perhaps you don't realize that the pressure is coming from you and what you think you need to do. Make it OK to take a break, even if just for today. The result will be far more beneficial than you had imagined. Tonight: In the limelight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ Read between the lines, and you will see a personal matter differently. You will enjoy yourself much more if you try to understand what the other party is really saying. This person might be too subtle for your taste; make the effort anyway. Tonight: Where there is great music.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ You have the rare opportunity to move forward and handle a personal matter directly. The other party appears to be a captivated audience, at least for the moment. Be careful, remain loving and choose your words with care. Tonight: A reason to celebrate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★ Your imagination always takes the lead. Frequently, because of your expectations, you might feel disappointed more often than you would like to. Avoid getting into an emotional scene with a partner, because it will be his or her way today. Tonight: Go along for the ride.

Ask the Guys

Dear Classified Guys,
I know everyone is concerned about how much gas they use nowadays and it's understandable. I go through at least 2 tanks every week commuting back and forth to work. Since I live in a lake community, I've also noticed how people's boating usage has changed over the past few years as well. It seems like there are fewer motorboats out on the lake, and those that are out certainly seem to drive around a lot less. People only go a short distance and anchor, a process we call "playing turtle". Considering boats get even worse mileage than my large SUV, the boating world seems to have taken quite a hit with the gas prices. Since the auto industry is beginning to adjust, producing more hybrids, do the boat manufacturers plan on doing anything similar? If so, maybe I should consider buying a new boat that uses less gas and selling my old one.

Cash: There have been fuel-efficient boats around for years…they are called sailboats! They get even better mileage than the new hybrid cars.

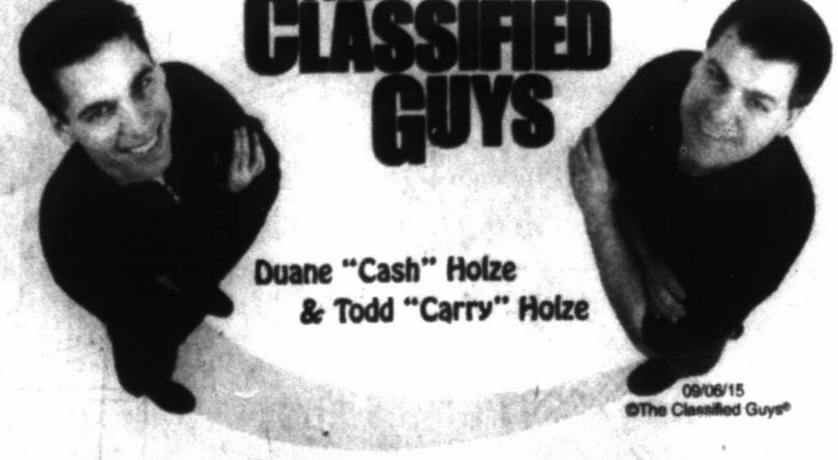

Carry: However unlike most of today's cars, boats are still considered luxury items used for pleasure activities like "playing turtle" or waterskiing. Most people don't use them on a daily basis to get to work, unless of course they're professional fishermen.

Cash: It's not so much that the boat manufacturers don't want to be fuel-efficient. Much like the auto industry, there has to be a consumer demand for things to change. Many people didn't consider giving up their large SUV's until gas prices skyrocketed. And like yourself, some still consider them worth the cost.

Carry: Despite the lack of demand, some manufacturers have forged ahead and incorporated solar power and rechargeable electric motors into their boats, but not on the average powerboat. Most designs are smaller boats equipped to travel up to 10 miles per hour.

Cash: For most weekend boaters, power is important and necessary for activities such as waterskiing or wakeboarding. Electric motors are not capable of producing and sustaining such power.

Carry: Today, much like hybrid cars, the idea of alternative powerboats is still in its infancy. In fact, it lags behind cars by several years. However, new ideas are constantly developing and you never know what the future could hold. One day you could be driving around in your hydrogen-fueled, electric hybrid speedboat.

Fast Facts

Powered Out

Boating is one of the fastest growing sport and recreational activities. The National Sporting Goods Association estimates over 29 million people spend time on their motorboats. While many of them own a boat, others have found different ways to enjoy the sport. According to a survey sponsored by the US Coast Guard, over 50% of these people own or share their boat, 16% rent a boat, 13% borrow a boat and 19% are able to hitch a ride with a boat owner. Looks like there is more than one way to get out on the water.

Safety First

For many people power boating seems like an easy sport to master. However the "rules of the road" are much different on the water and diligence is required. The U.S. Coast Guard reports that over 700 people die each year and over 3,400 more are injured from unsafe boating practices. Nearly 59% of all recreational boating injuries are the result of collisions. More surprising is that 65% of boat operators have never taken a boating safety course and only about 2% have taken a course in the last year.

Christened

Most weekend boaters have no idea what they are doing at a boat launch. One guy, who must have been new to launching, entered through the exit and headed down the ramp the wrong way. When the front of his car was facing the water, he realized his mistake. However instead of pressing his brakes, he accidentally hit the gas and drove straight into the water, boat and all.

Two of us on shore rushed to make sure he was okay and helped him to dry land. While I was sympathetic to his tragedy, the other guy joked about the event.

"You know," he said handing him a towel, "it's much easier to launch your boat if you back down the ramp!"
