Jurors see dramatic video in Parker trial

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Dramatic videotaped confrontations between the alleged kidnappers of June Gilkerson were shown to a jury today, with one revealing a horrible fate met by the woman and the other, a retching, gasping denial of involvement by one of the men.

The tense evidence was shown to a federal jury in the second day of the kidnapping conspiracy trial of Kenneth Wayne Parker, 42. He is accused of the Nov. 8, 1986 abduction of Ms. Gilkerson from a deserted Midland County road, and is on trial in federal court before U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton.

The first video was recorded Nov. 24, 1986, after David Russell Alderink, now 22, had told police Parker had participated in the kidnapping. He was fitted with a "body bug," an electronic surveillance mechanism and a bulletproof vest, a lead investigator in the case testified today.

The video was taped at the parking lot of the Midland County Public Library, where Parker was night custodian, Det. Sgt. B.G. Johnson said. A Department of Public Safety undercover van was used for the operation, he testified.

Alderink was fitted with the vest because he was "definitely very scared" of the defendant, Johnson testified.

Little was visible to jurors on the video monitor set up in the courtroom, but written transcripts of the meeting were distributed to the 12 jurors and two alternates.

The audio portion of the tape was fairly clear, mixed with street noises.

"I'm just scared," Alderink says on the tape.

He continues, "They told me she's still alive and they know where she is, man."

"They're just trying to tell you stories, they're trying to tell me stories," Parker responds.

A few moments later, Alderink is heard cursing, running, and seems out of breath.

"He put it on a piece of paper," he says into the microphone. "Said she was cremated, cost $15,000, over and done with." Later he repeats the story for officers: that Parker had held up a piece of paper with the word "cremated" on it, Johnson testified.

On another videotape made the following day at police headquarters, detectives changed their strategy. This time, Parker was told by police about the secret taping but Alderink wasn't, Johnson told Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre, who is acting as a special prosecutor in the case.

As the tape begins, Parker quickly raises his voice and appears to show the younger man he is not bugged by briefly removing his clothes.

"Why did you ever bring me into this," the standing Parker exhorts to Alderink, who is seated. "Why? Why?"

Parker then screams at Alderink, about "the woman you told police you called. What's her name? June? What did you get me into this...for?"

At that point Parker — who was described in earlier testimony as claustrophobic — begins to have trouble breathing, makes loud choking noises, and appears to reach for a metal trash can.

Prosecutors maintain Parker and Alderink kidnapped the woman as part of a plot to sell her into prostitution. Alderink pleaded guilty to the crime February 1 and is serving a 20-year sentence for aggravated kidnapping.

He is expected to be the key witness against Parker, who has denied his involvement.

The first witness in the case was June's grandmother, who was on the stand for nearly two hours Monday. Mary Caspar of Tampa, Fla., was visiting June and her husband Ron at the time of the disappearance, she testified.

After June received a telephone call early on the morning of Nov. 8, she left "in a great big rush," about 9:30 a.m., Ms. Caspar said. She waited for June at the couple's west Midland condominium, but when she didn't return by 3:30 p.m. when her husband returned, Ms. Caspar began to worry.

"I have visions of someone knocking her in the head and throwing her in a ditch," she said she told Ron Gilkerson.

As the evening approached, Gilkerson was noticeably upset about his wife's whereabouts — especially when he found her empty car and a letter detailing an affair with another man — the grandmother testified.

"He was the most shocked, most devastated human being I had ever seen," she said.

On cross-examination, defense attorney Tom Morgan questioned the grandmother repeatedly about her version of events.

Juanita Willis, June's mother, next took the stand and told jurors her daughter had talked frequently about her job at the Midland County Restitution Center, and specifically about one inmate, a man from Michigan.

"She said she felt sorry for him," Ms. Willis said.

On cross-examination, Morgan quizzed prosecution witness Terry Luck, then probation officer of the Restitution Center who was notified that Ms. Gilkerson was missing.

Luck said Gilkerson stayed "relatively calm" about his wife's disappearance, and never wept.

"He never cried when I saw him," Luck said.

Earlier Monday, attorneys for both sides delivered vigorous opening arguments and a few surprises to the jury expected to hear evidence all week.

The lead prosecutor in the case told the jury Ms. Gilkerson's disappearance was caused by a lover's betrayal and greed. Assistant U.S. Attorney Wayne Speck said evidence would show the woman — incredibly — was abducted to be sold into white slavery after a scheme to snatch another woman fell through.

"Why don't we just take June Gilkerson?" Speck said the defendant told Alderink. Unfortunately, Speck said testimony would show Alderink agreed with the suggestion.

"One of the worst betrayals you've ever heard of," said the prosecutor describing Alderink's action.

Appendicitis attack prevents man's defection

SAN ANGELO (AP) — A Goodfellow Air Force Base airman suffered an appendicitis attack and failed in his attempt to defect to the Soviet Union, the Air Force said Monday.

Airman 1st Class Russell Tinnell, 20, of Christianburg, Va., recently pleaded guilty to desertion, failure to follow regulations and writing bad checks, a statement said.

Tinnell was sentenced June 2 to a dishonorable discharge, confinement for 10 years, total forfeiture of all pay and allowances and reduction to airman basic.

Officials said Tinnell's problems started when he wrote $1,500 of bad checks at Goodfellow, in San Angelo, and Laughlin Air Force in Del Rio in December.

He had an appointment to discuss his financial problems with the military when he decided to defect to the Soviet Union, according to the news release.

Capt. Robert Coit, Goodfellow's deputy staff judge advocate, said Tinnell received instructions from the Soviets.

"He contacted the Soviet consulate in San Francisco and the Soviet Embassy in Washington," said Coit.

Lower oil prices likely despite OPEC pact

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

After haggling over whether to extend production quotas for three or six months, OPEC reached an agreement today to extend its production quota of 15.06 million barrels per day until the end of the year, causing oil prices to take a jump in prices.

Oil prices on the New York Mercantile Exchange opened 23 cents higher today, but it was the first increase since last Wednesday. Rumors of discord and inaction, in advance of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meeting which started Saturday in Vienna had caused oil prices to retreat $1.08 in four days.

Despite today's perk in futures prices, now running neck and neck with the posted price, the posted price for West Texas Intermediate is expected to fall this week. Amoco dropped its posted price for WTI from $16.75 to $16.50 Monday, and other crude oil buyers are expected to follow.

"I think it is safe to assume that if prices remain as low as they are, that the posted price will be at $16.50 before the weekend," said Bill Rigney, crude oil buyer for Permian Corp. "The refiners don't like the posted price and mercantile to get this close."

While OPEC ministers meeting in Vienna Monday could not reach an accord to cut their production quota of 15.06 million barrels per day, Rigney calls the quota largely a "cosmetic" quota. He said, in reality, production for the 13-member cartel has been closer to 18.5 million barrels per day.

According to the Associated Press, Iraq, which is at war with Iran, refuses to sign the accord unless it receives a quota equal to Iran.

Some analysts have suggested that there may be more room for downward movement in oil prices, says Rigney, but that's "just a crap shoot."

He said the current downward pressure on the market was purely OPEC driven and had nothing to do with market forces. Rigney added, however, that market forces are not expected to exert any upward pressure on prices at this time.

"We are in the middle of the gasoline season, but API (American Petroleum Institute) inventory reports show crude stocks down and products up. That makes for an essentially flat situation — not enough demand to exert upward pressure," he said.

City soaks owners for water runoff

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

Keep it green. Just don't shower it.

There's nothing cheap when it comes to watering lawn and landscape in Midland, especially when that water is running out in the street.

No, water costs haven't gone up. What has, is the price that homeowners, shopping centers and apartment complexes could end up paying in penalties for runoff from grass to pavement — runoff that promotes road decay.

Last week, city code enforcement officers told David Pine to put up a $500 bond after his company was cited under the city's "nuisance" water ordinance for the third time.

Pine, president of Chaparral Realty, opted for a jury trial instead.

Property owners are being fined $500 or given the option to put up a $500 bond, which is refunded if no citations are issued after six months. However, the city will still charge the owner a $100 administrative fee and $10.50 in court costs.

Pine, whose company operates Colonnade at Polo Park on North Garfield, said his own options are simple — water or kill off $100,000 worth of landscaping.

Can SBC moderates halt fundamentalist tide?

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Battling Southern Baptists headed toward a showdown decision that would either curb rule of their 14.6-million member denomination by fundamentalists, or perpetuate it for the next generation.

More than at any time since the fundamentalist tide began rolling nine years ago, moderates seemed to feel they had an even chance of breaking it at this year's convention, which meets today.

"They have a chance because they have a good candidate," said Toby A. Druin, of Dallas, assistant editor of the weekly Baptist Standard, referring to the prospective moderate nominee for the denominational presidency.

The Rev. Richard Jackson, the moderate from Phoenix, Ariz., is expected to be pitted against fundamentalist candidate Jerry Vines, a minister from Jacksonville, Fla.

The nominations and voting for president of the denomination, the nation's largest Protestant body, come this afternoon.

Jury's award to smoker's widower hailed by lawyer

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A jury awarded a smoker's widower $400,000, the first damages ordered for disease caused by cigarettes, but cleared tobacco companies of conspiring to mislead the public about smoking's dangers.

The widower's lawyer said today the verdict boded well for future cases against cigarette makers. However, the attorney for the company ordered to pay damages said he regarded the award as "sympathy" for the bereaved husband of Rose Cipollone, who died of lung cancer after smoking 1½ packs a day for 40 years.

The U.S. District Court jury Monday exonerated the cigarette makers Liggett Group Inc., Lorillard Inc. and Philip Morris Inc. of conspiring to mislead the public about smoking's dangers, and rejected punitive damages.

Instead, it decided Liggett failed to warn about the dangers of cigarettes and violated its promise, or "express warranty," to produce a safe product.

It awarded Antonio Cipollone, a 64-year-old retired cable splicer, damages on the warranty claim but not for failure to warn the public because his wife was 80 percent responsible for contracting the disease that killed her in 1984 at age 58.

Liggett faced additional claims because it manufactured the Chesterfields and L&Ms that Mrs. Cipollone smoked before 1966, when Congress ordered health warnings on cigarette packs. Mrs. Cipollone later used brands by Lorillard and Philip Morris, smoking even after having part of her lung removed in 1981.

Baker resigns as chief of staff

WASHINGTON (AP) — Howard Baker will resign as White House chief of staff and be replaced by his deputy, Kenneth Duberstein, on July 1, it was announced today.

In addition, White House communications director Thomas C. Griscom intends to leave his post, but has not said when he will leave, said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

Although Baker had promised Reagan to stay until the end of the administration next January, he asked to be excused from that commitment, citing the ill health of his wife, Joy, and stepmother, Irene, who are both hospitalized, Fitzwater said.

Baker's decision to resign is also sure to fuel speculation about him as a possible candidate for vice president. His name has been on many lists of potential running mates for George Bush.

Baker joined the White House staff on Feb. 27, 1987, in the aftermath of the Iran-Contra scandal.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Partly cloudy skies continue

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders can expect partly cloudy skies tonight with a 20 percent chance of thundershowers, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the middle 60s and winds will be southeasterly 10-15 mph.

Wednesday will be much the same with partly cloudy skies and a continued 20 percent chance of thundershowers. The high will reach into the upper 80s and winds will be southeasterly 10-20 mph.

Monday's high of 89 was 14 degrees cooler than the record temperature of 103 set for that date in 1947. The overnight low of 71 was 15 degrees warmer than the record low of 56 set for this date in 1947.

STATE

A flash flood watch is in effect across the Panhandle and South Plains where persistent showers and thunderstorms were reported early today.

The flash flood watch will expire at 4 a.m. Wednesday, the National Weather Service said.

The precipitation was being triggered by an upper level storm over the Texas Panhandle.

Showers and thunderstorms were also reported early today in Mexico just to east of the Big Bend area and in Southeast Texas.

Forecasts called for scattered showers and thunderstorms over western portions of the station through tonight with some of the thunderstorms possibly reaching severe levels. There will be widely scattered thunderstorms through tonight over the coastal plains. The rest of the state will have partly to mostly cloudy skies through tonight.

Lows tonight will be in the lower 60s in the Panhandle and in the 70s over the rest of the state.

Highs Wednesday will again be mostly in the 80s and 90s with a few readings in southern sections of the state expected to reach the 100-degree mark.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms converged on the South and Midwest today, bringing drenching rains to the Texas Panhandle, after much of the North sweltered in a record-breaking heat wave.

The thunderstorm system rumbled through northeastern New Mexico, southwest Kansas and the Texas Panhandle, and a flash flood watch was in effect for a number of counties in the southwest Panhandle.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered across Minnesota and the Dakotas, with the most intense thunderstorms in eastern South Dakota and southwestern Minnesota.

Showers and thunderstorms also lingered over southern Florida.

Dry weather prevailed across the rest of the nation, with clear skies over much of America's eastern half.

Monday, the heat wave scorched sections of Wisconsin. At Green Bay's, Austin Straubel Airport, the temperature hit 94 degrees, surpassing the 1956 record high of 93.

In Michigan, Marquette reported a 93-degree high, the sixth day this month a record mark was set there. The old record of 85 degrees was set in 1976. In Alpena, the temperature reached 94, breaking the old record set that year by 2 degrees.

The high for the nation Monday was 107 degrees at Laughlin, Nev.

Chaparral wasn't alone last week when it visited Municipal Court. Similar action was taken against the owners of Saddle Club and Polo Park apartment complexes, both of which put up the $500 bond.

"We've issued between 150 to 200 warnings since January," said Code Enforcement Administrator George Wolf, whose department has been cruising city streets at the crack of dawn for would-be street spillers.

"A big part of it comes from the apartment complexes," said City Manager Fred Poe, who blamed the city's maze of automatic sprinklers for Midland's incurable pothole dilemma.

Enforcement of the ordinance — approved last year by the council — is only now being tested. "We're getting serious about it...this isn't water from rain...it's water running from the yards," said Poe.

In fact, lawn water runoff delayed the pouring of cement Monday along the Wadley Avenue project, which was doused by a hearty overnight sprinkling from a number of apartment sprinklers.

"If we could keep the pavement dry, we wouldn't have nearly as many potholes as we do now," commented Harvey Hansen, the city's director of streets, traffic and engineering.

Currently, Hansen has two full-time crews on pothole duty. The city spends an estimated $160,000 a year on road maintenance, a portion of which is designated for pothole repair.

Pine said he understands the basis for a nuisance water law — it's the enforcement of it that concerns him.

"Colonnade is a planned district. When the city approved it, it approved the landscaping scheme as well...we don't point our sprinkler toward the street," he said.

He believes those that abuse the ordinance should have to pay. However, Pine said he can neither control wind direction nor road design, which promotes runoff into the street at Colonnade.

"I'm trying to work within the structure of the ordinance and I am going to talk to council," he said, adding the problem just isn't commercial. "It's the same in every subdivision in Midland."

Council was expected to address the issue at its bi-monthly meeting today.

'Super spreader' has given 4 women AIDS, report claims

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A California man doctors call the "super spreader" has infected at least four women with AIDS and is still having sexual encounters, according to a report released today.

"He has infected four out of five of his partners that we have seen, but we don't know all of his partners," said Dr. Nancy Padian of the University of California at Berkeley.

In other research presented today, Dr. William Haseltine of the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute in Boston described the discovery of a gene in the AIDS virus that seems to slow the virus' proliferation inside the body.

Ms. Padian said the "super spreader" — a hemophiliac infected through contaminated blood products — is in his 20s, lives in southern California and is still healthy with no signs of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Ms. Padian outlined the outbreak attributed to this man as part of a study of infection rates among women who engage in risky sex.

"He is now using condoms," she said. "We asked him to tell" women about his AIDS infection, "but we can't guarantee he is doing that."

Ms. Padian and Haseltine described their findings at the Fourth International Conference on AIDS.

Haseltine said the new gene, dubbed vpu, has been isolated by his and two other research labs.

"The virus without this gene grows faster," he said.

He said the gene is one of four in the complex AIDS virus that regulate the speed with which it makes new copies of itself inside infected cells.

"Now we have two genes that speed the virus up and two that slow it down," Haseltine said.

Researchers believe it may be possible to shut down the AIDS virus with drugs that could manipulate the microbe's built-in control genes.

Among research described at the meeting Monday:

— Dr. Anthony Adams of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control said that between 20 and 25 health care workers around the world have become infected with AIDS as a result of on-the-job exposure to the virus.

"We are now almost a decade since the transmission of the virus became reasonably common," he said. "We are still looking at a very small number of people who get infected in the health-care setting."

— Dr. Samuel Broder of the U.S. National Cancer Institute said that the experimental anti-AIDS drug CD4 "still looks very promising," despite concerns that it may not protect against the spread of AIDS to the brain.

PARKER

Speck continued, "We're not here to prove that David Alderink is a good guy. He did lie, repeatedly."

But, "David Alderink was totally dominated by the much older man, the much larger man," he said of the 6-foot-5-inch Parker.

Native Midlander Parker met Alderink, from Michigan, at the library, testimony showed Monday. Parker was an employee there and Alderink worked there as part of a probated sentence for a burglary, according to testimony.

Ms. Gilkerson, who held a degree in criminal justice, was a part-time volunteer worker at the Restitution Center, now known as the Midland County Community Rehabilitation Center. While there, she met the "strikingly handsome" Alderink and quickly the two became lovers, Speck said evidence would show.

Morgan then quickly walked to the lectern for his opening statement to the jury.

"Kenneth's side of the story has never gotten out, and I've been looking forward to this," Morgan said. He had earlier blasted media reports of the case as inaccurate, and following a brief hearing Bunton denied his request to move the trial to Houston.

The attorney — a former Midland County prosecutor — told jurors the government's case was like a "house built on sand." He briskly attacked the prosecution's key witness.

"David Alderink, a two-time convicted felon, an admitted liar...some fingerprints...and some convenience store clerks. That's their case," Morgan said.

Parker did go to Austin with Alderink, and may have stopped at stores in Brady and Llano, Morgan said. But after the duo returned to Midland the morning of Nov. 8, his client dropped the younger man off at his motel and "went straight home."

Relatives of Parker would testify he was with them at about the time of the kidnapping, Morgan said.

At least one witness would back Morgan's argument that Ms. Gilkerson may in fact be alive — and may have left voluntarily, the attorney said.

A cellmate of Alderink's at the Midland County Jail would tell jurors Alderink claimed Ms. Gilkerson was in Mexico, Morgan said.

Another witness would claim to have danced with the woman several times at a nightclub in Piedras Negras, Mexico, across from Eagle Pass, on March 7, 1987 — several months after her disappearance.

"He's 100 percent sure of that," Morgan told jurors.

In a letter he would introduce as evidence, Ms. Gilkerson reportedly wrote she wanted to leave Midland for a place with "a good climate and lots of men," which he said proved she may have wanted to leave.

"It's going to be fun for me frankly," Morgan told the jury. "It's fun catching him (Alderink) in all these lies. I'm glad that Kenneth's story finally will get out."

SBC

Through successive presidencies, whose appointments gradually determine ruling trustees of the denomination's far-flung operational network, fundamentalists nearly have completed their takeover.

Their timetable says one more year would seal the process.

But moderates see signs that many who have supported fundamentalists before think they have gone to excess in newly restrictive measures on institutions and agencies, driving out some widely respected personnel.

Indications also have arisen of links between fundamentalist strategists and the religious right on social-political issues.

That gives the conflict a broad political tinge rather than it being an intramural difference over Bible interpretation, as it often has been pictured.

"People are becoming alarmed," McClellan said. "There's a definite swing against these extremes."

However, some peculiar backstage maneuvering has gone on that possibly could scuttle the expected contest between Jackson and Vines.

The Rev. John Bisagno of Houston suggested that to dampen the head-on conflict, only one of the two be nominated as a consensus candidate this year, the other two years hence.

That seemed unlikely, but the possibility was discussed that Bisagno himself might be nominated, which probably would reduce chances of the moderate-backed Jackson.

A hint of fundamentalist strength also came in a preconvention pastors conference Monday afternoon when a fundamentalist, the Rev. Ralph Smith of Austin, was elected president.

He defeated a moderate, the Rev. Paul Powell of Tyler.

The presidency of the pastor's conference has been a stepping stone to the convention presidency for the last decade.

Among the fundamentalist engineered steps that have intensified controversy during the last year:

— Endorsement of Judge Robert Bork for the U.S. Supreme Court, contrary to long-time denominational policy against siding for or against specific candidates. The conservative Bork later withdrew from the nomination.

— Adopting mission board policies against women clergy and divorced ministers in most cases, and instituting screening of personnel to assure that they took a literalist view of the Bible.

— Moves that drove from office the Rev. Randall Lolley as president of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary in Wake Forest, N.C., and the Rev. Larry Baker as head of the denomination's ethics agency, the Christian Life Commission.

Liggett attorneys promised an appeal. Cipollone's lawyers said they would ask the judge to overturn the decision not to award posthumous damages to Mrs. Cipollone.

The $35 billion tobacco industry mounted an elaborate defense — one analyst put the cost at $50 million — to avoid a judgment that might unleash a flood of multi-million-dollar lawsuits. Reaction to the verdict, which followed five days of deliberations, focused on its potential impact on hundreds of such cases pending around the nation.

Cipollone's attorneys said the decision showed the tobacco industry is not invincible.

"Any time a jury awards a $400,000 verdict, I don't think you can take it too lightly, particularly in a situation where five years ago people thought we were crazy and when for the past 30 years people have failed," said Marc Z. Edell, Cipollone's lawyer.

Speaking today on CBS-TV's "This Morning" program, Edell said: "This is the first case to be won by the plaintiff. We'll get it better the next time...a better verdict, a bigger verdict. We'll recover on other claims."

Fewer than a dozen of about 300 smoker lawsuits have gone to juries and the tobacco industry has not paid a dollar in damages. Most of the other cases withered in the face of the well-heeled tobacco industry's legal forces.

"All I know is that we're not another notch in their gun," said Edell.

But some said the damages awarded might not be enough to encourage other lawsuits.

"Are you going to sue if all you're going to get is $400,000?" asked tobacco industry analyst Allan Kaplan of Merrill Lynch in New York.

Financial markets were closed when the verdict came in but Kaplan predicted no long-term negative impact on tobacco stocks.

In trading today, Liggett Group Inc.'s stock price opened at 7¾ after closing at 8⅛ Monday. Philip Morris Cos. Inc, which closed Monday at 85, opened at 84 today. Loews Corp., which is the parent company to the third tobacco company, Lorillard, finished trading Monday at 65⅝; it was the only one to open with a gain at 65⅝.

"Plaintiff attorneys cannot be encouraged by the small size of the award, which pales in comparison to the $3 million they spent in time and money to try this case," said a joint statement from Peter Bleakley of Philip Morris and Robert Northrip of Lorillard, both New York-based.

BAKER

In a statement read by Fitzwater, Reagan said he accepted Baker's resignation with deep regret.

"Sen. Baker has been a close friend and adviser who has guided my staff deftly and effectively for the last 16 months," Reagan said. "He held a steady hand in the operation of the White House while the Iran-Contra investigations were being conducted and his wise counsel fostered the spirit of cooperation in which those issues were presented to the American people."

Reagan, asked during a picture-taking session Italian Prime Minister Ciriaco De Mita whether Baker's departure could be seen as further evidence of a lameduck administration, replied:

"Well, I don't think it should be. He had his reasons for what he's had to do. We're going to miss him, of course."

Asked if the resignation signals unsteady times at the White House, Reagan said, "No, that means a little change."

Praise for Baker's job came quickly on Capitol Hill.

"He's done a superb job as chief of staff for the president," said Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

Dole said he has talked with Baker and "I do know his wife, Joy, has not been well and that's another reason he's indicated."

Researchers heartened by increased number of eagles

BAGDAD, Ariz. (AP) — The bird raced along the face of a 1,000-foot canyon wall, headed effortlessly upstream. Its white head and tail were unmistakable.

Bob Hall nearly whooped. Despite a torn knee ligament, Hall jumped from his pickup and hobbled toward the rim to follow the bird's path.

Across the creek, in an aged sycamore tree, was a massive tangle of sticks, the nest of a southern bald eagle, the first to nest there within Hall's memory.

The southern bald eagle is coming back from the edge of extinction.

In 1971, there was but a single breeding pair known in all of Arizona. In the mid-1970s, as many as five or six pairs were known, numbers that still led to grave concern by researchers.

Now, according to Hall, a raptor biologist for the Bureau of Land Management's Kingman Resource Area, and other biologists, Arizona is home to at least 26 pairs of eagles and scattered individual adults that are producing offspring at the rate of about 20 per year.

Of even greater interest to Hall, a member of a federal-state eagle-recovery team, the eagle found a few years ago exclusively in the Salt and Verde river systems in central Arizona is expanding its territory.

In 1985, researchers were surprised to find a pair nesting in western Arizona above Alamo Lake. This year, Alamo and the Bill Williams River between Alamo and the Colorado River are home to six eagles.

There is a new nest on the Gila River in eastern Arizona as well as the one spotted by Hall on Burro Creek near Bagdad, a rugged and remote area about 120 miles northwest of Phoenix.

"There is definitely an expansion under way, and it appears to me to be a very healthy expansion," Hall said. "There also are reports of new nests in Mexico, as many as five or six of them. This species still has a long way to go before it's out of the woods. But this is encouraging."

Bob Mesta, a U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service biologist who is a representative on the Southwest Bald Eagle Management Committee and coordinator of the Arizona Bald Eagle Nest Watch Program, also is heartened by the discovery at Burro Creek.

Mesta regards the Burro Creek find as evidence of "a pioneering effort" by the eagle indicating that the population "has reached such a level that the birds are expanding beyond their current limits into new drainages. In less than two decades, we have seen a major expansion of the eagle population."

There are records of eagles nesting throughout the lower Colorado River, but none is there now, Hall said. He said the southern bald eagle was much closer to extinction than was the northern bald eagle, whose plight was much more widely publicized.

Partly because of its small numbers, relatively little is known about the southern bald eagle, which is of the same subspecies as the northern eagle but is smaller.

"The most unique adaptation by the southern bald eagle to desert survival is a behavioral one," Mesta said. "It has shifted its breeding season to winter to avoid the extreme summer temperatures. Chicks wouldn't be able to survive here in summer.

"Northern birds, on the other hand, winter here and return to the north, where they breed in late spring."

A group of researchers specializing in radio telemetry and working under the name Biosystems Analysis Inc. has been under contract to the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation since the fall of 1986 to monitor movements of eagles from the Salt and Verde rivers.

Last June, research leader Grainger Hunt said, a juvenile eagle from a nest on the Verde River was tracked up the Strait of Georgia to Vancouver, on the coast of British Columbia. The journey of more than 1,300 miles took the bird less than a week.

Another juvenile eagle flew to Yellowstone Park; a third went nearly to Glacier National Park in northern Montana.

Those birds flew from Arizona in early summer, unlike migrating northern bald eagles from southern California which fly northward in August in a migration associated with the inland run of spawning salmon.

"The population of the southern bird is unique from the northern eagle in that its environment is harsh, its numbers small, its habitat increasingly limited," Mesta said. "It is, therefore, more threatened, more endangered."

New technology and the nest-watch program Mesta heads are permitting scientists a much closer look at the eagles' habits and movement.

Human observers are assigned during the breeding season to watch eagle nests, particularly those where there is a high potential for disturbance, Mesta said.

"The first priority of the program is to monitor the nest sites to protect them," Mesta said. "The second priority is to collect life data on the birds; the third is to give young biologists experience in the field."

Angler wasn't trying to catch record

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Angler Craig Merchant's battle with a quillback carpsucker won't qualify as a great moment in fishing history.

He says the fish didn't fight, he wasn't trying to catch it, and he didn't know what it was when he did.

But as the world will soon know, Merchant's quillback carpsucker — a fish that truly looks like its name and smells worse — was something special.

Apparently, it's the biggest quillback carpsucker ever caught.

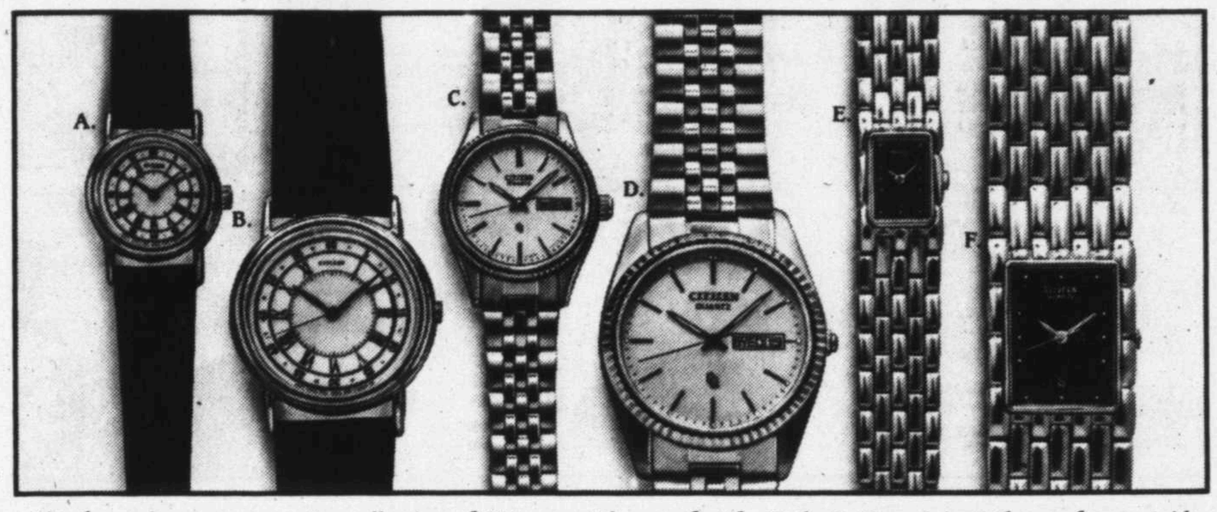

The 22½-inch, 6-pound, 14-ounce fish has been confirmed as a state record and is expected to meet quick approval for the world record from the Freshwater Fishing Hall of Fame in Wisconsin, Michigan Department of Natural Resources spokeswoman Patricia Merrick said Thursday.

The fish was caught April 30 in the Kalamzoo River northwest of Kalamazoo in southwestern Michigan. Merchant, a 43-year-old toolmaker from nearby Wayland, said he almost threw the fish back because he didn't know what it was.

"I thought it was just an old trash fish from a dirty old river," Merchant said. "I was fishing for walleye."

The previous world record quillback carpsucker, 5 pounds, 12 ounces, came from Lake St. Clair, near Detroit, in 1982. Merrick said the bony, bottom-feeding fish averages one to two pounds.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 15, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your finances and relationships undergo a positive transformation. Flexibility is advised. A change of residence could make it easier for you to land a job, enjoy better health. Influential people are feeling better about the economy. Your chances of obtaining financial support for a special project are excellent. A close relationship becomes more affectionate. Show tenderness. Make the call you know will bring a loved one back into the family fold.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: catcher Lance Parrish, Gov. Mario Cuomo, actor Jim Belushi, hitter Wade Boggs, centerfielder Brett Butler, jazz pianist Erroll Garner, composer Edvard Grieg, country star Waylon Jennings, diva Ernestine Schumann-Heink.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are eager to complete a project. Keep a steady hand on the throttle. Allowing more give-and-take in a relationship could turn your life around. Be willing to serve for the public good.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Squelch an urge to demand special treatment; it will not serve your best interests. Diplomacy is the key to getting ahead today. Observe all safety rules when traveling. Put your valuables away.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are making tremendous progress. You do not have to be a "yes" person so long as you avoid rocking the boat. Your intuition tells you what to do to avert a crisis.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be aware of your influence and use it to help yourself and your family. Cut your ties to someone who has demanded a lot without giving anything back.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): There is a new sense of harmony in your life. Give a free rein to your creative urges. A close relationship becomes even more special. Celebrate in a quiet, romantic spot.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Seize an opportunity to discuss your views with higher-ups. A candid talk should prove constructive. A stroke of luck will help you increase your earnings. Family problems are easier to solve.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Avoid making secret deals with associates in faraway places. Tackle those jobs you can handle alone. Read the small print of any document you are asked to sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Domestic affairs demand your attention. Your sense of humor is put to the supreme test. A good day for projects designed to increase the value of your property. Seek bargains at secondhand stores.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Give yourself more time to solve recent problems. You may have to expend greater effort. Progress is slow but steady. Later today, trust your instincts when discussing a close personal relationship.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): What you intend to be constructive advice could be translated as criticism. An older person tries to interfere in your business. Stand your ground, but be polite.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Many demands will be made on your time. Reschedule anything that can be put off. Do not argue with someone who has the final word.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Welcome an opportunity to socialize with an influential person in an informal setting. A hobby could earn you extra cash. Contact people who can supply information you need.

Opening lead: 10 of ◇

Do you reason logically at the bridge table? If so, you should come up with the winning line on this hand.

The diamond lead doesn't really help you all that much. You have two certain losers in trumps and must concede a trick to the ace of clubs. To make your game, the heart finesse will have to work and you must limit your club losers to one. That's actually a redundancy, for if the heart finesse succeeds, you can repeat it and discard a club on the third round of hearts. While doing all this, you must keep East off play to prevent a lead through your club king, since West's double makes it likely that he holds the ace of that suit.

Therefore, you cannot afford to draw trumps before tackling hearts. It is quite likely that East holds a high trump, and his club return will defeat you before you even get started. So after winning the first trick in hand lead the ten of hearts. Since it is immaterial whether or not West covers, let's presume he does not. When the ten wins, repeat the finesse and cash the ace of hearts for a club discard.

Is it time to lead a trump? Not yet! If you do, and the cards lie as in the diagram, West will win the jack, cash the ace of clubs and lead his last heart. East will ruff with the king and you will lose three trumps and the ace of clubs.

How do you avoid this catastrophe? Simple. First lead the table's last heart and discard your king of clubs! No matter who wins the trick, when you regain the lead you will be able to lead trumps, and limit your losers to two trumps and a heart.

Researcher interviews men who can't read, write to aid De Niro in role

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Actor Robert De Niro is preparing for his role as an illiterate mill worker by having a researcher interview men who can't read or write.

De Niro

Cynthia Ryan was here last week videotaping current and former illiterate adult men from western Massachusetts, where part of the film tentatively named "Union Street" will be shot.

Ryan said some of the men she is videotaping agreed to the interviews only after she promised to conceal their identities.

The researcher is making 10 hours of videotapes for De Niro to study for his role as a man who is taught how to read. He is now on a movie set in California making a film about a Vietnam veteran.

De Niro's co-star in "Union Street," Jane Fonda, has raised the ire of some veterans in a few New England towns for her anti-war work during the Vietnam War.

Holyoke aldermen voted in January to approve a symbolic resolution protesting Fonda's plans to film in the city because of her visit to Hanoi during the war. Beverly aldermen narrowly defeated a similar resolution.

LOS ANGELES — Actress Bernadette Peters couldn't refuse the role of the mother of David Rothenberg, a boy set afire by his vengeful father, in a based-on-fact TV movie.

The ABC-TV movie "David" features Miss Peters as the bewildered but courageous mother of the boy. The youngster survives the motel room fire, but emerges horribly scarred.

"She was thrilled to get this role. The script was spectacular. She just couldn't resist," Richard Grant, publicist for the actress, said Monday.

Miss Peters begins rehearsals this month, and filming starts July 6 in Los Angeles, Grant said. The movie will be directed by John Irman, best known for his AIDS movie "An Early Frost."

LONDON (AP) — The telephone company launched a new service for culture-lovers Monday — Dial-a-Poem.

For 70 cents a minute, British Telecom's customers can hear five-minute recordings of leading poets reciting their verse.

Callers dialing 0898-222255 could hear John Heath-Stubbs, 70, saying: "I'm very happy to be the first poet to be recorded in this dial-a-poem series," before reciting from four of his poems, ranging in subject matter from Noah's Ark through cats in poetry to clocks and space.

Heath-Stubbs is among six contemporary poets chosen for Dial-a-Poem.

It's too soon to tell whether the innovation will confound the 19th-century historian Thomas Macaulay's conviction that "as civilization advances, poetry almost necessarily declines." But something clearly is astir.

The London subway has been displaying verses of Percy Bysshe Shelley, Robert Burns and Walter de la Mare on some of its trains, and a year ago the railroad company organized poetry readings at some of its stations.

Sarah Chesney of the English Language Society, the literary group that selected the poets for Dial-a-Poem, explained in a telephone interview: "We felt we should make poetry more accessible."

State-owned until it was floated on the stock market in 1984, British Telecom is ever on the lookout for a profit-making sideline, and it said that if Dial-a-Poem attracted 1,000 calls a week, it would make the service permanent.

Others poets reading their verse for telephone callers during the six-week trial run are Kathleen McPhilemy, Jeremy Reed, Bernard Kops, James Berry and Gillian Allnutt.

"We wanted something refreshingly adventurous — poetry that is not so obscure that it doesn't come across well on the phone, but that is also not strictly traditional," said Ms. Chesney.

She said each poet would receive 10 percent of the profits from the service.

One problem is British Telecom's phone lines, which aren't famous for their clarity. Heath-Stubbs came through somewhat faintly and would only be comprehensible in a quiet room.

Tomlin

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lily Tomlin disputes rumors she and "Big Business" co-star Bette Midler fought during filming, saying emphatically that they are good friends and that the warmth comes across on the screen.

In the film, which opened last weekend, Ms. Tomlin and Miss Midler each play a pair of identical twins who are mixed up at birth and raised as fraternal twins. One set winds up in a hillbilly hollow; the second set lives luxuriously in New York.

"I'm very fond of Bette and I felt that we were cute together," Ms. Tomlin said. "I thought if we could be to the ultimate what we both are, it could be super."

Midler

Ms. Tomlin, who has played a disgruntled secretary in "9 to 5," a happy housewife who became "The Incredible Shrinking Woman" and a body snatcher in "All of Me," is working on an animated special for CBS, based on the character Edith Ann, a mischievous 5-year-old.

Asked if she ever has the urge to play a more mainstream role, she said: "Not really. Shrinking women, body snatchers, these are the things movies are made of."

NEW YORK (AP) — Teen-agers who are pregnant or have given birth from unintended pregnancy will be featured in a new series of public service announcements designed to fight teen pregnancy, two medical groups announced Monday.

The radio and television public service announcements have been approved by major networks and cable systems in the United States, said the American Academy of Family Physicians and the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

More than 1 million unintended teen pregnancies each year could cost society as much as $18 billion annually, the groups said in a joint statement.

There are two designs. One features a large, black-and-white photograph of Attorney General Edwin Meese III with "What, Me Worry?" stenciled beneath it, without apologies to Mad magazine.

The other is based on a poster that appeared mysteriously all across Washington weeks ago. The poster and T-shirt read: "Experts Agree! Meese Is a Pig."

Visit to library isn't 'suspicious'

So many things make us aware that we're living in the 1980s that it's always a little jarring to be reminded that some elements of American society are frozen in another time — say, about 1952, when J. Edgar Hoover ran the FBI and Sen. Joseph McCarthy was loose in the land. A case in point: the FBI's growing interest in the reading habits of those who visit public libraries.

The bureau won't talk about its investigative practices, of course, but a number of incensed librarians will. At least 14 libraries, including some at major universities, have been visited by FBI agents during the past 18 months. Appealing to patriotic instincts, these investigators are asking librarians to keep an eye on those who do a lot of photocopying, read lots of technical journals or engage in other "suspicious activity."

Apparently the FBI thinks that by monitoring libraries it can ferret out Soviet agents who comb the stacks for data about superior U.S. technology. Never mind that all the information in public libraries is, well public. As one librarian quoted the FBI, "once aggregated with powerful computer software," such material could be used to harm U.S. national security.

That rationale could, of course, be applied to many things. The Feds could, for example, open a dossier on a 7th-grader who writes abroad for information for an encyclopedia he hopes to compile. In fact, they did, and four years later, 17-year-old Todd Patterson of Newark, N.J., is suing the FBI, which has classified nearly all of his file SECRET, because he fears the file will harm his chances of getting into the Foreign Service. Based on past abuses of Americans' rights, who can say his fear is groundless?

Some librarians told the FBI to get lost, but now they expressed the fear that this cloak-and-dagger tampering with free expression will, as an American Library Association executive put it, "cast a shadow over library users." They will begin to wonder who is watching and are they looking at the wrong topics? Are they doing something that could be construed as un-American?

Perhaps so. Hundreds of Americans who oppose the Reagan administration's Central American policy were watched for six years under the rubric of an "anti-terrorist" investigation, presumably to get around strict guidelines governing domestic investigations. Not a shred of evidence of terroristic or any other criminal activity against these people has been presented, yet some were harassed at work by the FBI, some had their address books and notes photocopied by Customs agents when they returned from abroad and some were victims of unsolved break-ins at their homes or offices.

All of the above occurred under an enlightened regime headed by Judge William Webster, who until recently was believed to have broken the FBI of its bad old habits dating from the McCarthy and Vietnam War eras. Judge Webster now heads the CIA, his successor admits to no wrongdoing on the part of FBI agents and Todd Patterson's dossier is still classified SECRET.

What year is this?

Another View:

Belated signatory

After thinking it over for 102 years, the United States is about to join the Bern copyright convention, formally the Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works.

The House unanimously passed enabling legislation to make U.S. law conform with the international document and the Senate is likely to follow suit, thus setting the strategy for U.S. adherence to a treaty adopted in 1886 and since ratified by 76 countries. It's an appropriate move, given the growing importance of commerce in intellectual property, a trade in which Americans enjoyed a $1.5 billion surplus last year.

Signatories to the Bern treaty pledge to give the same copyright protection to artists, writers, composers, filmmakers and computer software producers, among others, from other countries as they do their own. The United States already has bilateral agreements with many countries. But 24 countries, mostly in the Third World, have neither adhered to the Bern treaty nor concluded bilateral accords, and experience has shown that they are more likely to respond to bilateral pressure from signatory governments. U.S. adherence would increase that pressure.

Intellectual property is high on the Reagan administration's agenda in ongoing global trade negotiations in Geneva. U.S. arguments that the international community needs more stringent copyright standards and tougher enforcement mechanisms will carry more weight in that forum once this country adopts international norms aimed at securing those objectives.

Some American publishers and film producers objected at first to changing U.S. law out of the fear that conforming to the Bern Convention's "moral rights" clause protecting the artistic integrity of works — "colorization" of old black-and-white films is one example — would impinge on their rights as producers and distributors. Proponents argued persuasively that adherence to the treaty will neither expand nor restrict American artists' rights before U.S. courts to challenge adulteration of their works.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, June 14, the 166th day of 1988. There are 200 days left in the year. This is Flag Day.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 14, 1777, the Continental Congress in Philadelphia adopted the Stars and Stripes as the national flag.

On this date:

In 1775, the United States Army was founded.

In 1801, former American Revolutionary War Gen. Benedict Arnold died in London.

In 1841, the first Canadian parliament opened in Kingston.

In 1846, a group of settlers proclaimed the free republic of California at Sonoma.

In 1917, Gen. John Pershing and his headquarters staff arrived in Paris during World War I.

In 1922, Warren G. Harding became the first president to be heard on radio. (Baltimore station WEAR broadcast Harding's speech dedicating the Francis Scott Key memorial at Fort McHenry.)

In 1928, the Republican National Convention, meeting in Kansas City, nominated Herbert Hoover for president on the first ballot.

In 1940, German forces occupied Paris during World War II.

In 1954, President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed an order adding the words "under God" to the Pledge of Allegiance.

In 1967, the space probe Mariner 5 was launched from Cape Kennedy on a flight that would take it past Venus.

In 1982, Argentine forces surrendered to British troops on the disputed Falkland Islands, ending a 74-day conflict that claimed some 1,200 lives.

JACK ANDERSON

Army whistleblower fighting for job

WASHINGTON — George Schoenberg spent more than two decades in a civilian job for the U.S. Army. Along the way, he picked up several awards for catching costly mistakes and wasteful spending. And he was fired, twice.

Jack Anderson

In spite of Schoenberg's pluses, his bosses thought he was uncooperative, even combative, and said his work was unsatisfactory. The first time they fired him, he was reinstated through union arbitration. Once again, he is fighting for his job.

Schoenberg claims he was the target of harassment and reprisals because he was a cost analyst who did his job too well — pinpointing waste — and that angered superiors.

Schoenberg's employee union backs his claim, saying he was fired because he made things uncomfortable for management.

His is the whistle-blower's lament. He saw abuses, reported them and then earned a reputation as a curmudgeon. Regardless of how he aired his complaints, Schoenberg's concerns are valid in an age when purchases of $435 hammers and $640 toilet seats have put the U.S. Defense Department's buying practices under heavy criticism.

Schoenberg began work in the mid-1960s at the Army's Tank Automotive Command (TACOM), in Warren, Mich.

He was fired in October 1986, reinstated in July 1987 and fired again last January. Our reporter, Scott Sleek, has obtained an opinion from a TACOM attorney written before the first firing, which indicates that TACOM officials were looking for grounds to fire Schoenberg. But they had trouble getting past his employment record.

The letter was written by TACOM attorney Kathryn Hoener in response to a recommendation that Schoenberg be fired. Hoener said that despite what she described as Schoenberg's disruptive actions, his record didn't appear to justify firing. She recommended a 30-day suspension. "A review of Mr. Schoenberg's official personnel folder indicates no previous disciplinary action," Hoener wrote. "In fact the (record) reflects an exemplary employee who has received several awards for his work effort ..."

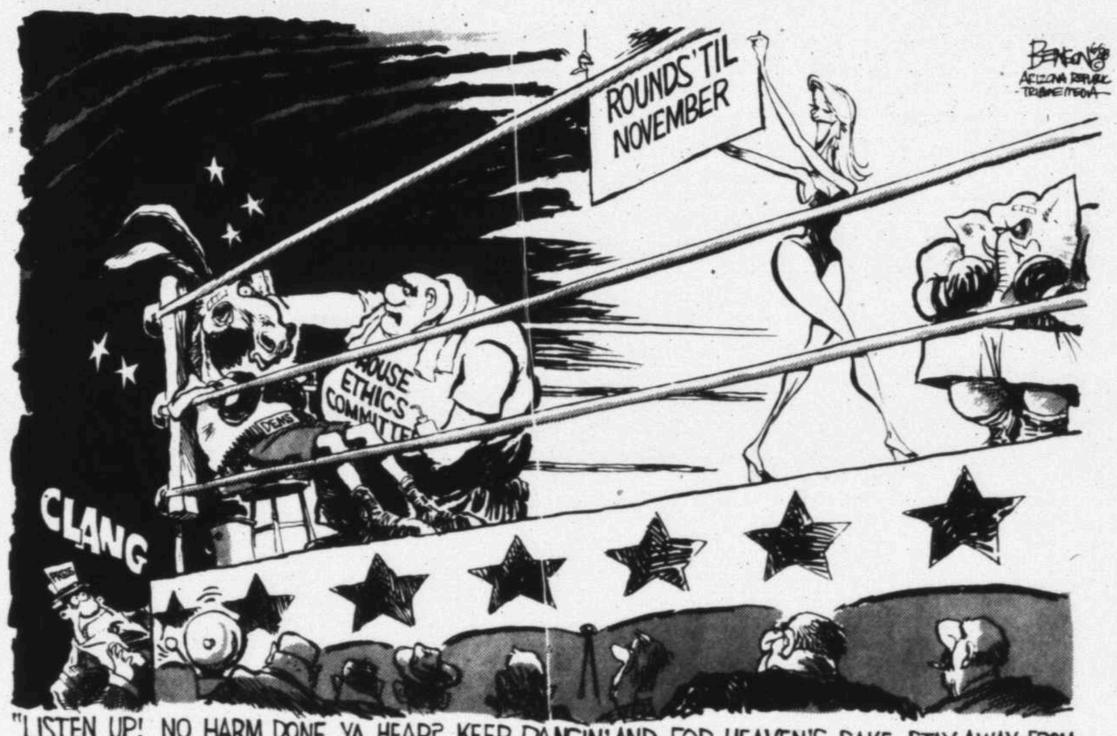

Schoenberg's work to save taxpayers' money won him numerous commendations from Army officials. In 1983, he was honored for identifying $6.3-million that could have been saved on a contract. That same year, he invented a simulated ballistic missile to be used for training purposes, or as a military decoy. He was officially commended for the invention, which was subsequently patented.

Throughout his history at TACOM, Schoenberg said he tried to correct waste and fraud, but could not get a satisfactory response from supervisors. He eventually called the inspector general staffs at TACOM and the Defense Department.

Schoenberg wasn't always diplomatic. In September 1986, he posted a scathing letter on a tree at a staff picnic, criticizing management for wasteful spending practices. He claims that is why he was fired a month later. Management claims that he was fired for gross insubordination, inefficiency, repeated malicious, obscene and defamatory statements and falsification of a travel voucher. Schoenberg denies he ever falsified the travel claim.

In July 1987 he was reinstated without back pay and given a job he said was menial.

Last January he was told to attend a training course in Dayton, Ohio. But the Friday before he was scheduled to leave, he received a summons to appear in traffic court for a parking ticket at the TACOM lot. He was surprised, since he was not on the base the day the ticket was issued. He stayed in town to go to court and was fired for being absent without leave from the training course. The U.S. attorney's office later dismissed the parking citation, noting it was a clerical error.

MINI-EDITORIAL — A 13-year-old boy from Garden Grove, Calif., really knows how to live. UPI reported the story of the boy who found $4,000 on a bus bench and didn't even think about opening an IRA or buying a T-bill or setting up a college fund. He checked into a motel room, filled it with junk food and spent four days at Disneyland. The party ended when he misplaced what was left of his wad at Disneyland. Since nobody else has reported the $4,000 missing, the boy has filed a missing-property report at Disneyland in case someone turns in his unspent loot — someone not as smart as he is.

Baker will stay until Wyoming fishing trip

WASHINGTON — The long-anticipated shift of Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III to Bush-for-president national chairman will not come before a Wyoming fishing trip with two close political associates next month during the Democratic national convention.

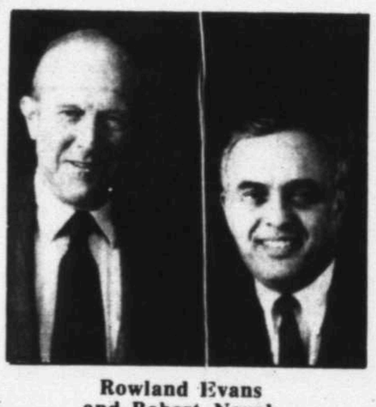

Fishing for trout with Baker during the week of the July 18 Democratic conclave in Atlanta will be veteran California political consultant Stu Spencer, a top Reagan 1984 campaign adviser, and Rep. Richard Cheney of Wyoming. In 1976 when Cheney was White House chief of staff, it was this same trio that ran Gerald R. Ford's losing presidential campaign.

Cheney is high among influential Republican congressmen who for weeks have been privately advising that Baker's presence is desperately needed to get the Bush campaign out of the rut. When Baker takes the chairmanship, Spencer's advisory role — until now very limited — will expand dramatically.

VIENNA SUMMIT?

The next Reagan-Gorbachev summit may be held late this fall in Vienna, not on strategic arms reduction, but on European security — if the Soviet leader succeeds in getting his whole political reform program through the upcoming special Communist Party conference.

That would clear the decks for major Soviet concessions at the Vienna-based "Helsinki" conference on European security, particularly in the human rights field, thus opening the door for new talks on reducing conventional weapons, a top priority of Mikhail Gorbachev.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

Secretary of State George Shultz has quietly sounded out aides on tentative planning for just such a "grand finale" summit between the two leaders. But there is no certainty that Gorbachev will get the Party conference to adopt the far-reaching political and human rights reforms he wants. Without them, Reagan would not dream of going to Vienna for the windup session of the "Helsinki" conference.

RELUCTANT BILL BRADLEY

Just as support for him as vice president is rising among Gov. Michael Dukakis' academic advisers, Sen. Bill Bradley has reiterated to friends that under no circumstances would he agree to become a running mate.

The rise of Sen. John Glenn as front-running vice presidential prospect, now that interest in a Southern running mate has declined, disturbs Dukakis' advisers from the academic community. Harvard dons such as economist Robert Reich are pressing for ex-Rhodes scholar Bradley instead of ex-astronaut Glenn.

But when a Democratic political operative who has been a strong Bradley booster raised the point last week, the senator replied he would not accept under any conditions. At the least, Dukakis would face a hard sell should he decide on Bradley.

TALK-MUSCLE FOR BUSH

White House speechwriter Joshua R. Gilder, a first cousin of Reaganomics guru and best-selling author George Gilder, will switch from Ronald Reagan to George Bush soon, reclaiming a far more important spot as a Bush wordsmith than he had in 1985 when he joined the White House speech team.

Gilder and top presidential speechwriter Tony Dolan are privately acclaimed even from the State Department for being the chief architects of Reagan's highly-successful human rights campaign in Moscow during the recent summit. The president's speech to Moscow University students was regarded by Reaganites as one of the best speeches Reagan ever made.

The 34-year-old Gilder is expected to move to the Bush campaign soon, where he will work closely with Peggy Noonan, whose title is "consultant," though, in fact, she is the vice president's chief speechwriter.

A THIRD ADLAI III?

Much to the dismay of Illinois Democratic politicians, ex-Sen. Adlai Stevenson III has been privately sounding out supporters about the possibility of a third race for governor in 1990.

Stevenson feels his second try against Republican Gov. James Thompson in 1986 was unfairly doomed from the start when Lyndon LaRouche's supporters forced him off the Democratic line and onto a Solidarity Party ticket. But Democratic leaders want no more Adlai and will urge State Attorney General Neil Hartigan, who bowed out in 1986 when Stevenson made a late entry, to go all the way this time.

A footnote: If George Bush is elected president, Thompson may become his attorney general. If not, he could well try for a fifth term as governor in 1990.

'Willow' celebrates decency in cynical age

Unless you have given up on life and become nothing more than a mobile drudge, go see George Lucas's new film, "Willow." By all means take your children.

Charley Reese

Ordinarily I do not write about films but the pseudointellectual cynicism of film critics is only a symptom of a larger problem. Film is only visual literature. A film can fall into one of four categories: a good story well-told, a good story badly told, a bad story well-told or a bad story badly told.

That's all there is to it. The pedantic attempt to intellectualize a non-intellectual art form is nothing more than a pitiful attempt at ego-building.

Lucas is one of the few creators of good film literature these days, and in "Willow" he returns to the theme of how love and compassion and friendship can transform people. Though he sets his story in a fairy tale setting, the theme, character, and motivation are as real as any news story or history lesson.

Willow, is an elf, a farmer who by happenstance becomes the guardian of a baby sought by a wicked ruler for destruction. Forced into what is to him a land of giants, the little farmer time and again, gripped by fear and a sense of self-preservation, is driven by his love for the baby to heroic actions.

Cynics, of course, mock this as comic-book fantasy, but cyncism is born of cowardice, and the coward must always mock the hero lest he be forced to judge himself by a standard he cannot meet.

It happens I just read a new book, "The Altruistic Personality," by Samuel and Pearl M. Oliner. It is a sociological study of the motivation of those Europeans who saved Jews from Nazis. It is based on extensive interviews with the rescuers who survived.

The parallel between them and the fictional Willow is precise. Like Willow, they were ordinary people — essentially powerless. An evil regime, backed by a powerful army and a cruel secret police with a far-flung network of informers, was ruthlessly searching out Jews to destroy them.

Well-founded fear and the sense of self-preservation argued against helping any Jew, because the penalty was death and in some cases death for their families. And the odds of succeeding? Practically hopeless.

Yet, like the little farmer in the Lucas film, these people were transformed by their love, compassion and decency into heroes. No matter what they risked, they could not turn their backs on fellow humans in need.

The Oliners interviewed one Polish woman who saved a Jewish baby. The baby's mother, knowing they would soon be killed, thrust the child into the Polish girl's arms, begged her to save it, and fled. The Polish girl endured incredible hardships and risks but she saved the child.

So don't let cynics poison your life with their own deformed souls. The world is indeed a magical and wondrous place, full of good and evil, and people with heroes and heroines.

William Faulkner, who knew a bit more about literature than these critics, might well have been speaking of Lucas when he said in his Nobel Prize acceptance speech that "the writer must teach himself that the basest of all things is to be afraid; and, teaching himself that, forget it forever, leaving no room in his workshop for anything but the old verities and truths of the heart, the old universal truths lacking which any story is ephemeral and doomed love and honor and pity and pride and compassion and sacrifice. It is the writer's privilege to help man endure by lifting his heart."

George Lucas's film "Willow" will lift your heart. He has used one of the most competent of film story tellers, Ron Howard, to translate his tale into a film. Howard does it beautifully.

Lucas, having once nearly died, has the courage to celebrate decency in a cynical age.

Azerbaijani annexation turned down

WORLD

MOSCOW (AP) — Many Armenians who joined a strike to demand annexation of a disputed region of neighboring Azerbaijan returned to work today after being assured their republic's government would press their demand.

But the Azerbaijani government voted to reject ceding control of the Nagorno-Karabakh region, where most residents are ethnic Armenians.

Mofses Gorgisyan, an Armenian jailed in April and May for staging nationalist demonstrations, said a general strike shut down most businesses in Armenia on Monday, but that today "some people are working, maybe half."

He said students agitating for annexation had for three weeks staged a sit-in outside the Opera Theater in Yerevan, capital of the southern republic.

Nagorno-Karabakh was assigned to Azerbaijan in 1923. Most Azerbaijanis are Moslems and most Armenians are Christians.

A journalist for Azerbinform, Azerbaijan's press agency, said today by telephone from his republic's capital, Baku, that the Azerbaijani government determined annexation of Nagorno-Karabakh would not be in the best interests of the people and rejected the idea. The journalist declined to give his name or provide other details.

Azerbaijan's official Baku Radio reported today that the executive committee of that republic's legislature met Monday in Baku and turned down the request by Nagorno-Karabakh officials that their territory be transferred to Armenia.

The report, monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp. in London, said the Presidium of the republic's Supreme Soviet found the demand "unacceptable" because it would be "contrary to the interests of the Azerbaijani and Armenian population of the republic and would be incompatible with the tasks of consolidating the friendship between all the peoples of our country, as well as with the task of reconstruction."

It said the annexation request came from the Nagorno-Karabakh Autonomous Region's Soviet of People's Deputies, one of two chambers of the region's legislature. A request from the same body in February touched off major street demonstrations and strikes in Nagorno-Karabakh and Yerevan.

Armenia's legislature is to meet Wednesday to discuss the annexation demand.

Armenia's new Communist Party leader, Suren Arutyunyan, told more than 500,000 demonstrators in Yerevan on Monday that the Armenian Supreme Soviet would "decide positively" on their claim, according to Gorgisyan and Sergei Grigoryants, a dissident journalist in Moscow.

Gorgisyan quoted Arutyunyan as saying a majority of Supreme Soviet deputies indicated they support annexation. He said the speech was replayed three times on Armenian television, apparently in an effort to persuade people to return to their jobs.

Since the Azerbaijani legislature has rejected the annexation demand, if the Armenian Supreme Soviet calls for transfer of Nagorno-Karabakh, the issue would have to be decided by the central government in Moscow.

Moscow officials have rejected the demand.

Gorgisyan said Armenians believe the next move is up to Moscow: "We are interested in Moscow's answer. Moscow has been silent so far."

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev got involved in the issue in February, appealing to Armenians and Azerbaijanis to be calm and promising the dispute would be reviewed.

The Kremlin later rejected the annexation demand and the central government instead approved a package of social and cultural improvements for Nagorno-Karabakh.

According to Gorgisyan, three Armenians have been lying on the square outside the Opera Theater on a hunger strike since June 4. He estimated that 2,000 to 5,000 people were gathered on the square, where the latest round of demonstrations began May 25.

A worker at the Yerevan Hotel said the general strike was still on and demonstrators were making speeches and holding posters. "It's very peaceful. People are highly cultured," said the worker. The phone conversation was cut off before a reporter could ask the woman's name.

The ethnic dispute has erupted into violence several times.

DIFFICULT CHILDREN:

Not always the parents fault.

In a recently published book entitled: ATTENTION DEFICIT DISORDER, a common but often overlooked disorder of children; parents of difficult children are given support and praise.

The book states that children who are having academic or behavior problems, have a high probability of having Attention Delicit Disorder (or A.D.D.). A.D.D. is one of the most common disorders of children, especially boys, but is often overlooked due to the variations in symptoms among children.

Characteristics of A.D.D. children are:

- *Directions must be repeated often
- *Difficulty in concentrating on tasks for long periods of time.
- *Rarely finishes anything, especially school work
- *Becomes frustrated easily.
- *Impulsive
- *Easily distracted
- *Irresponsible behavior

Children with A.D.D. are usually average or above average intelligence but their school performance is poor or below their potential. Many of these children are creative in areas not related to academic endeavors. These children are sometimes overly sensitive to criticism and other times exhibit no remorse for their deeds. This type of behavior is confusing to the parents and usually leads the parents to blaming themselves. The behavior and academic performance of these children is not the fault of the parents.

The book is written in a conversational tone and is easily understood. The author, Glenn Hunsucker, is Director of an A.D.D. Treatment Center in Abilene, Texas and has worked with hundreds of these children.

This book is now available at Hastings Books in San Angelo, Midland & Abilene.

Israel to force parents to post bonds on children

JERUSALEM (AP) — In a new effort to end the Palestinian anti-occupation uprising, Israel plans to force Gaza Strip parents to post cash bonds to free children detained in clashes with Israeli troops.

Police, meanwhile, announced that they would step up aerial patrols to spot arsonists. A tenth Arab arson suspect was seized Monday night as he fled a burning wooded area near Jerusalem, Israeli radio reported.

A military source said that to curb the daily violence in the occupied Gaza Strip, authorities would make parents of detained children deposit cash bonds rather than promissory notes to keep their youngsters off the streets.

The death count continued to mount in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, where Palestinians have for six months been revolting against the 21-year Israeli occupation.

Israeli soldiers fatally shot 43-year-old Mahmoud Hussein in the West Bank village of Abwein near Ramallah on Monday when he did not heed an order to halt, said Dr. Yasser Obeid, director of the Ramallah hospital.

The victim's family said Hussein was hard of hearing and probably did not hear the order.

A military spokesman said the army was checking into the death, which brought the total number of Palestinian fatalities in the uprising to 207. Two Israelis have been slain.

The military source who reported the cash-bond plan said Gaza City parents would have to pay 5,000 shekels, about $3,100, to obtain the release of their children detained for the first time. The money would be confiscated as a fine if the children were detained a second time, he said.

Previously, families could sign a document guaranteeing to pay the amount if the suspects were arrested again after being released.

"It has to be seen in the context of a whole series of actions we have taken to reduce violence," said the source, who was not idenfitied in line with army regulations.

An Arab resident of Gaza said new fines amounting to the equivalent of $9,500 against homeowners whose houses were painted with Palestine Liberation Organization slogans have virtually eliminated such graffiti.

"When people see writing on the wall they take it off and do a whitewash — they're frightened and don't want to put themselves in trouble," said the resident, who asked not to be named in fear of reprisal.

Officials reported more brush and forest fires Monday night in central Israel, and they blamed Palestinian arsonists.

Fires in recent weeks have destroyed at least 25,000 acres of grazing areas, forests and nature reserves, according to naturalists.

'Flight' reunites Eskimos after 40 years

PROVIDENIYA, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Alaskan and Soviet Eskimos holding their first major reunion since the Cold War imposed a forced separation 40 years ago sang and talked animatedly today about current events — like walrus hunting.

The meeting at the Palace of Culture in this remote Siberian port was one of the highlights of the 225-mile "friendship flight" from the western Alaska town of Nome by an 82-member U.S. delegation.

Timothy Gologergen, 68, of Nome shared a traditional song with a Siberian Eskimo who identified himself as Kaygigun, 41, from the nearby village of New Chaplino.

"They got three walruses last night," Gologergen said later. "They were hauling them back and forth by dog team, and he heard that we were coming. He dropped everything and came over.

"He said this way is really good — just to speak our own (Yupik) dialect and not listen to the war stories or think about war, or plan about war — just be doing our thing, speaking our Yupik language and hunting and being relaxed," Gologergen said.

The Soviets earlier this month approved the charter flight by Eskimos, Alaskan business leaders, peace activists and politicians, the product of two years' work by Alaskans.

Eskimos once freely crossed the icy Bering Strait in motorboats and walrus-skin umiaks to trade and visit with relatives. The Cold War ended all that in 1948, when the border was closed.

Summit meetings between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev helped make the "friendship flight" possible, said Bob Clarke, a State Department official on the flight.

The summits were "strong on people-to-people exchanges," Clarke said. "This is a real grass-roots effort."

The leader of the effort was James Stimpfle, a 40-year-old Nome real estate agent who dreamed up the flight two years ago to help thaw relations between Alaska and Siberia.

Stimpfle said he wrote hundreds of letters to U.S. and Soviet officials, trying to win acceptance for his idea of breaking down political barriers with good will.

"There's security in friendship," he said.

While eastern Siberia is eight time zones away from Moscow, it's only 3 miles from Alaska at the closest point.

Provideniya, with about 5,000 residents, is a gray city of concrete-block apartments surrounded by mountains. Remnants of the winter's packed ice still clog the fringes of the harbor. Like Nome, an old gold-rush town of 3,700, Provideniya has no roads leading inland.

As the Alaska Airlines Boeing 737 came to a halt on the gravel Siberian runway, schoolchildren waved Soviet and U.S. flags. Local officials and visitors shouted greetings in Russian, English and Yupik over the roar of jets.

Leaders of the Alaskan delegation were handed carnations beneath a sign proclaiming "Peace and Friendship Between Alaska and Chukotka!" Provideniya is in the district of Chukotka.

Formality soon gave way to a frenzy of hugs, handshakes and trading of pins, flags, chewing gum and postcards.

The reunion came too late for John Waghiyi, 64, an Eskimo born on St. Lawrence Island, 40 miles from the Siberian coast, who came looking for a distant relative on his father's side, but learned the man had died years ago.

Waghiyi remembered visiting the relative as a young man.

"The next year, I was going to see him at Gambell (on St. Lawrence Island). He was going to give me a Russian coat, but they closed the Russian border."

Other potential reunions were aborted when a planned trip to a nearby native village was canceled by poor weather.

Still, Waghiyi and others hoped the visit would clear the way for more interchanges between Alaska and Siberia.

WORLD in brief

Travelers given sex dictionary, condoms

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — As part of the campaign against the spread of AIDS, travelers are being given the opportunity to learn how to suggest the use of a condom in seven languages.

"Sex has become more dangerous...This does not mean that one should be afraid of sex, but observant and careful of oneself and others," says a pamphlet included in a package for sale at travel agencies and train stations around Sweden.

The package includes a packet of condoms and a dictionary of sex-related phrases, according to the Social Affairs ministry. Among the phrases are, "I want us to use a condom," and "I think I might have a venereal disease."

"Only the condom can provide any good protection against sexually transmitted diseases," the pamphlet says.

Health authorities this year sent 4 million pamphlets to homes to explain in graphic detail how AIDS is transmitted and distributed camouflage condoms to military conscripts.

Mexico debt plan studied

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Treasury Secretary Gustavo Petricioli says he is seeking new formulas to reduce the interest charges on the nation's foreign debt of $100 billion, the second highest in the developing world.

Petricioli spoke with reporters Sunday before going to Washington for talks with U.S. Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, Federal Reserve chairman Alan Greenspan, World Bank President Barber Conable and International Monetary Fund director Michael Camdessus.

He vowed to continue his search for more favorable payment terms with "firmness and creativity."

Even though restructuring has helped reduced the debt from $105 billion to $100 billion, interest payments are still draining the ailing Mexican economy, he said, according to reports in several Mexico City newspapers Monday.

Mexico paid between $8 billion and $9 billion dollars in interest last year. It has paid a total of $50 billion dollars in interest and amortization in the last six years.

Europe to launch rocket

PARIS (AP) — Europe this week will launch its biggest, most versatile rocket ever, which could give it an edge over the United States and other countries in the race to commercialize space.

Ariane-4, which is to blast off Wednesday from the European Space Agency's space center in Kourou, French Guiana, was declared ready for service on Saturday. Fueling of the rocket began Sunday.

The new generation rocket is designed to serve as Europe's "workhorse on the world launch services market until the end of this century," according to officials at Arianespace, the commercial arm of the 13-nation European Space Agency consortium.

The rocket will on its inaugural launch carry an international payload of three satellites into orbit, demonstrating the vehicle's space readiness to potential customers.

Iranians hit oil tanker

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iranian gunboats attacked a Singapore-flagged oil tanker with machine guns and set it on fire today in the Persian Gulf, shipping executives reported.

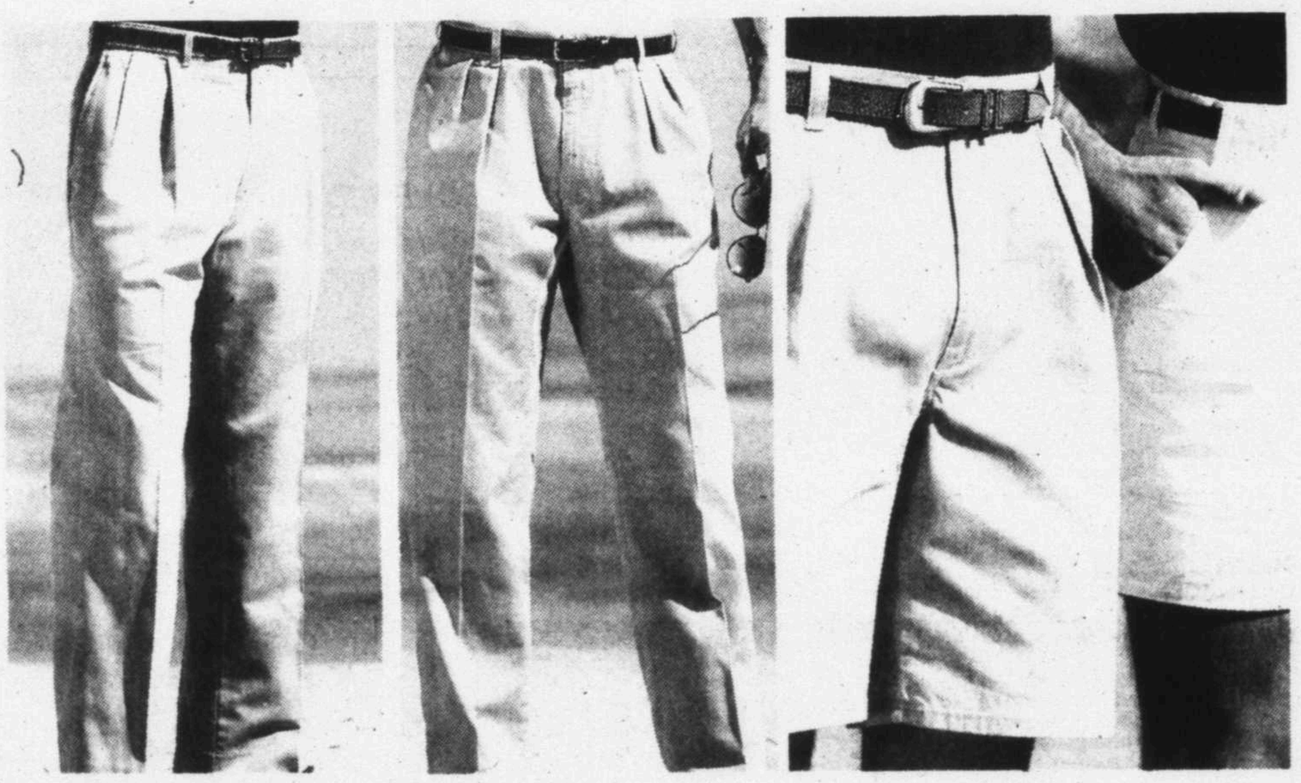

It was the second time in four days that Iranians raided a tanker near Iran's Farsi island off Saudi Arabia's coast.

The shipping sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, identified today's target as the 87,768-ton Neptune Subaru. No casualties were reported.

They said its Asian crew, including a Sri Lankan captain and sailors from Malaysia, Singapore and India, put out the fires, and the vessel sailed under its own power to the Saudi Arabian port of Jubail for inspection.

Program teaches welfare recipients job skills

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A positive-action program to encourage struggling welfare people to cut themselves free of the welfare cycle and to become productive citizens by learning job skills and gaining self-esteem is being carried out by a pilot program in Midland County.

"We have had a lot of good success stories," said Midland County Commissioner Win Brown, who is chairman of Project Self-Sufficiency (PSS), "and we have had some phenomenal stories. We have had some heartaches, but you are dealing with people."

The two-year-old pilot PSS program works in conjunction with the Midland County Housing Authority and the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA).

PSS, which has about a 70 percent success rate, gets enterprising welfare recipients "on their feet" and helps them generate pride in their self-sufficiency, Brown said.

"We are beginning to develop a track record from a shoe-string operation," he said.

"They are proud of what they have done," Brown said, "and that's what it is all about."

Most are single parents, said Brown. "The majority of them are minorities," but, he said, "We don't even look at that (race)."

Midland College has worked "beautifully" in the program in helping PSS participants to attain formal education and marketable job skills.

"I think this is one of the best programs that come down the pike to break the poverty cycle," Brown said. "And I don't like federal programs, but this one has proven itself."

Through the Midland County Housing Authority, people on public-assistance programs receive rental-subsidy aid, which allows them shelter while they study and train in self-improvement courses at Midland College. Those on public assistance also may receive federal food stamps.

"This is such of a dynamic program," Jerrie Ann Westmoreland, executive director of the Midland County Housing Authority, said of PSS. "The neat thing about PSS is that it allows for the coordination of existing social services," she said. "This is not a 'hand-out' but is a 'hand-up.'"

Serving on the housing authority board are David Thurbon, assistant director of the city of Midland's Department of of Planning and Development; Carmen Eiker, Midland lawyer; Dr. Elizabeth Robinett, Midland College counselor; Dr. Pamela Howell, Midland College instructor in English, and Gloria Walker, director of business services at Midland College. Thurbon is board chairman.

"We have a good board, and I think it will work smoothly," Ms. Westmoreland said.

Board members were appointed by the Midland County Commissioners' Court.

"The reason for creating the board was to get it out of county politics and out of the cumbersome coordination with other county offices, like the County Auditor and the County Attorney, who already are overloaded with county business and problems, and to ensure closer supervision of the (housing) office," Ms. Westmoreland said.

Ms. Westmoreland carries out the "day-to-day operation," while the board members "are my bosses," she said.

The housing authority currently funds rental subsidies for 195 families.

"Rents have gone down," Ms. Westmoreland said, "and so have incomes."

Ms. Westmoreland said that she does not envision Midland County having anywhere near Odessa's 2,500 or Big Spring's 800 rental subsidies.

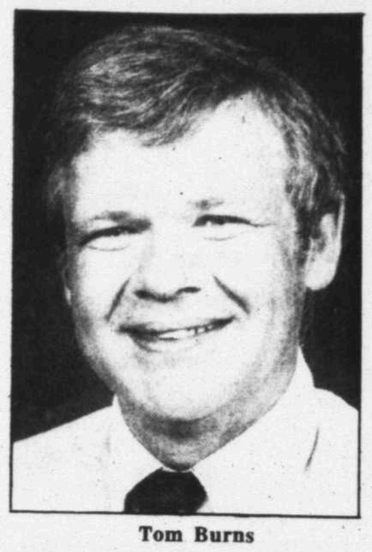

"We are looking at quality programs rather than just housing people and having them become dependent on our services."

Along with JTPA, PSS, the housing authority and Midland College's Center for Reassessment, "We are putting a package together, so they (welfare recipients) can get off of the public-assistance system," Ms. Westmoreland said.

"As it is, many people get hung up on the welfare system, and they don't have a way to get off of the poverty cycle," she said, "They have no money to sharpen their skills. And without sharpened skills, they can't get a better job, or they can't get a job, period."

Men and women in the self-improvement program are training in such fields as nursing, legal assistance, computer science, and medical technology.

"Instead of creating dependency, we have welfare people who are being integrated into society to become productive citizens who pay taxes," Ms. Westmoreland said. "They become taxpayers instead of tax-takers. We see their self-worth, their self-esteem, rise and, most importantly, that (self-worth, self-esteem) of their children."

Tom Burns

Jerrie Ann Westmoreland

Tom Burns, a social worker who is PSS executive director, said that currently 30 men and women are in the self-improvement program.

"Self-esteem is role-modeled by the parent or parents," Burns said.

"Therefore, self-sufficiency and being happy are more desirable than being caught up in the social-welfare system."

Commissioners 'streamline' departmental operations

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

"We won't have to look up Albert (Stewart) to get authorization on a brake job." The move "will take some of the responsibility off of your shoulders."
— Commissioner Durward Wright

The Midland County Commissioners' Court on Monday did some policy shuffling within the county's Road and Bridge Department to effect "more streamlined" operations and "better working relationships" between Road and Bridge and other departments within the county.

The re-organizational move essentially gave Albert Stewart, Road and Bridge Department superintendent, more time to supervise road building and maintenance by freeing him from overseeing shop work at the county maintenance barn.

Kenneth Morehead was named shop foreman.

"We won't have to look up Albert (Stewart) to get authorization on a brake job," Commissioner Durward Wright said in offering an example of the efficiency of the new move.

"We will only have to go to a private vendor (for mechanical work on vehicles) when it is an emergency."

The move "will take some of the responsibility off of your shoulders," Wright told Stewart.

Stewart, who has been Road and Bridge Department superintendent since 1977, said that the Commissioners' Court has his "blessing" to effect the change.

"I think it will be more efficient," said Stewart, who noted that it would be "hard" for him to oversee the maintenance-shop operations while he is out on road jobs.

The county's maintenance shop has more than 100 vehicles to maintain — from lawn mowers and patrol cars to bulldozers and road-graders.

In addition to making the operation "more streamlined" and heightening working relationships between Road and Bridge and other departments, the move will results in increased productivity and a saving of tax dollars, Wright said.

"We all are working for the taxpayers of the county," Wright said, "for the better utilization of the funds that we have."

"We are just trying to stretch a dollar," Stewart said.

All GISD third-graders pass TEAMS math test

From Staff Reports

One hundred percent of all third-graders in the Greenwood Independent School District mastered the math section of the Texas Education Assessment of Minimum Skills (TEAMS) tests, according to statistics released this week.

TEAMS math, reading and writing tests are required by state law to be given to all first-, third-, fifth-, seventh-, ninth- and eleventh-graders in state public school districts.

Results of GISD's third-, fifth-, seventh- and ninth-graders' scores revealed high scores.

Besides the 100 percent math scores, 94 percent of the GISD third-graders mastered the reading test and 97 percent of that population mastered the writing section.

Ninety-seven percent of the fifth-graders mastered the math section, while 94 percent and 80 percent of that grader mastered the reading and writing sections respectively.

Only 2 percent of the seventh-graders didn't master the math section, while 89 percent and 82 percent of that grade passed the reading and writing sections respectively.

Ninth grade scores showed that 90 percent passed the math section; 93 percent passed the reading section and 73 percent passed the writing section.

Mastery of the skills is demonstrated when students correctly respond to three of four questions, a GISD spokesperson said.

Remedial skills classes are planned for all GISD students who failed to master any portion of the TEAMS tests, a spokesperson said.

Typo makes mother 253 years old

PLAINVIEW, Texas (AP) — Melody Swearingen of Plainview would now be 253 years old, if her daughter's birth certificate is correct.

When Ashley Swearingen was born at Lubbock General Hospital two years ago, on June 5, 1986, her mother's age on the birth certificate was listed incorrectly as 251 — instead of 25 — because of a typographical error.

But Ashley's birth certificate has been certified to be correct by the deputy registrar of Lubbock County.

Mrs. Swearingen elected to keep the original certificate, claiming she can always say she looks pretty good for her age.

Ector County commissioners discuss security for planned computer system

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The ability to maintain security for a planned county-wide computer system was to be the subject of a meeting this morning between members of Ector County's judicial system and a computer study committee.

Late Monday afternoon, with approval of commissioners court members, Fiscal Services Director Tom Pace was contacting district judges, the district attorney, the district clerk, county judges, the county attorney and the sheriff, asking them to meet jointly with computer study committee members.

The action was prompted by law enforcement concerns that plans to establish a computer that would store all county records, administrative as well as judicial-criminal, might create a situation whereby sensitive information could be accessed by unauthorized persons.

Pace suggested to commissoners that members of the county's judicial-law enforcement system meet with the study committee to determine what type of computer software system would be required to safeguard sensitive records and information.

Concern surfaced when it was announced the committee planned to recommend one of three companies be awarded a contract for a $200,000 computer software package that would have sufficient storage capacity for all county administrative, judicial-law enforcement records.

Pace said he suggested those involved in the judicial system and law enforcement be asked for input because, while study committee members are familiar with computers and software programs, they do not fully understand the needs of these segments of county government.

Today's meeting was scheduled for 11 a.m., Pace said, with a final decision on award of the contract for the computer software package expected to be made next month.

Convoy plans international bridge rally

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — An international bridge protest rally was planned for tonight by members of the Veterans' Peace Convoy, which has been stopped at the Mexican border for nearly a week by a trade embargo with Nicaragua.

The convoy is made up of 106 people, 38 vehicles and about 30 tons of medical supplies, food and clothing an assortment of groups opposed to U.S. policies in Central America collected for Nicaraguan children.

The caravan planned to enter Mexico last Wednesday, until U.S. Treasury officials said the vehicles intended to be left in Nicaragua would violate the Nicaraguan Trade Control Regulations.

The group has said it would give the government until Wednesday to agree that their trip is legal, and then will attempt to leave the country.

"We feel that reason probably will prevail," said Ed Deaton, a Vietnam veteran from Tallahassee, Fla., who is traveling with the convoy.

Treasury officials said the humanitarian cargo is exempt from the trade embargo, but that the vehicles carrying the supplies cannot be taken to Nicaragua unless they are returned within 30 days.

The convoy planned to leave the 28 mini-pickup trucks, one 2½-ton truck, two regular pickups, one Volkswagen van, five school buses and one car in Nicaragua as part of its donation.

"We don't intend to return the vehicles within 30 days," Deaton said Monday. "We also don't plan to lie to the government. We're going to comply with whatever's being requested of us."

He died Monday at his residence after a lengthy illness.

Hudec was born April 3, 1916 in Eola and was a driver for Permian Corp. until he retired in 1981. He was a member of the Tabernacle Baptist Church and the Eagles Lodge.

Survivors include his wife, Rosie Hudec of Crane; two daughters, Betty Davis of College Station and Shirley Sanders of Crane; a son, Raymond Hudec of San Angelo; a sister, Olga Sue Hudec of San Angelo; and seven grandchildren.

Court temporarily blocks Rainbow meeting

TYLER, Texas (AP) — A federal appellate court issued a stay temporarily blocking the back-to-nature Rainbow Family from gathering at a national forest next month.

The Forest Service had asked the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans to grant an emergency injunction blocking the weeklong celebration of "peace, love and justice" by the 1960s style group at an East Texas forest.

However, a hearing was scheduled to resume today in U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's court in Tyler on a request for a permanent injunction to prevent the group from gathering. Justice recessed the hearing Monday afternoon following the appellate court's decision.

Federal court officials in Tyler at first were confused about the appellate court's ruling, believing the court had ordered a halt to the proceedings in Tyler.

But later Monday afternoon, attorneys talked by telephone with the appellate judges and determined the temporary injunction deals only with the Forest Service's appeal of Justice's earlier ruling that a requirement for the Rainbows to obtain a special use permit is unconstitutional.

The three appeals court judges said they will conduct a conference telephone call next Monday to hear arguments from government attorneys and Rainbow family attorney Larry Daves.

Justice on June 1 refused to grant a temporary injunction, saying it could infringe on rights of free speech and assembly.

The Forest Service contends the Rainbow Family needs to obtain a special permit for the gathering to make arrangements for parking, water supplies, sanitation, waste disposal and environmental concerns such as protecting endangered wildlife.

About 120 family members have been camping out over the past two weeks near Ritter Lake about five miles from Groveton, in the Davy Crockett National Forest. They say they are testing the site, 100 miles north of Houston, as a possible location for the "Gathering of the Tribes" in early July.

Meanwhile in Washington, U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm asked federal officials to establish a task force to ensure the law is upheld if the group has its "Gathering of the Tribes" scheduled for July 4.

In Austin, Gov. Bill Clements said Monday that he is prepared to call out the Texas National Guard if laws are broken by the group during its gathering, which could draw as many as 20,000 people.

Gramm, R-Texas, said he asked U.S. Attorney Bob Wortham of the Eastern District of Texas to set up the law enforcement task force with U.S. Marshal Keith Gary; Phillip Jordan, the southwest regional administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration; and the Forest Service.

Gramm said he wants to be sure that state and federal laws are enforced.

"In particular, we want to assure that anyone camping on federal property who possesses or uses illegal drugs will be arrested and prosecuted. Should insufficient enforcement authority be available, we will not hesitate to ask Gov. Clements to call out the Texas National Guard to join federal and local law enforcement officials in enforcing the law," Gramm said.

"Based on concerns expressed by the forest service, I have also asked federal fire officials to assess the potential dangers of forest fire that could result from this encampment," Gramm said.

Possible billing irregularities investigated

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — An investigation is under way into possible billing irregularities involving several contracts a San Antonio-based firm had with a U.S. Army missile base in Alabama, authorities say.

Jack Pytel Jr., a lawyer who represents Texas Mil-Tronics Corp., says a a federal grand jury three weeks ago subpoenaed company records relating to military contracts. Pytel also represents the company's president, Gene Rodriguez.

Pytel said it is his understanding the contracts are with the U.S. Army Missile Command at Redstone Arsenal in Huntsville, Ala.

Texas Mil-Tronics, which filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy in November and is seeking a buyout through a potential California buyer, is general contractor on nine contracts with the Alabama missile base.

A procurement spokesman at Huntsville said most of the contracts are for circuit boards and electronic components for missile systems.

Pytel said he could not discuss specifics, but he said the investigation involves "progress payments" or bills that are sent to the government for increments of contract work completed "whether they (the payments) were made, where they went to and things involving general contractors and subcontractors."

The lawyer said investigators at Kelly Air Force Base are participating in the investigation, but Kelly officials could not answer inquiries about the investigation late Monday.

The attorney told the San Antonio Light he did not know the exact nature of what federal authorities are investigating.

"They have not made any accusation of any wrongdoing," he added.

Texas Mil-Tronics disclosed the existence of the Defense Department investigation and its list of contracts in documents filed with the bankruptcy court here last week.

The document states the military is investigating the company and Rodriguez, "regarding certain pre-petition (bankruptcy filing) progress payment claims made with respect to at least one government contract."

Texas Mil-Tronics is seeking to sell itself to Resdel Engineering Corp., a defense contractor in Arcadia, Calif., with annual sales of $25 million, according to documents filed as part of a reorganization plan.

The San Antonio Local Development Co., a city-sponsored loan program that lent Texas Mil-Tronics $300,000 in 1986, agreed Monday to extend an additional $140,000 loan to Resdel to make the buyout possible.

Documents filed by the company indicated that without the Resdel buyout, Texas Mil-Tronics planned to avoid repaying the $300,000 loan through bankruptcy. The company, formed in late 1985, is headquartered in one of Control Data Corp.'s buildings here.

Resdel, a publicly traded defense contractor with 35 years' experience, offered to assume the $300,000 note in return for the additional $140,000, according to loan documents filed with the San Antonio Local Development Co.

Baptists select Denver as pilot project site

DENVER (AP) — Denver has been chosen — along with Columbus, Ohio — as a pilot project for the Southern Baptist Convention's latest program to spark church growth and evangelism.

Next summer Baptists plan to ring doorbells at 740,000 households in the Denver area.

"According to our research, that'll give us a chance to witness to just about everybody who is out there," said the Rev. Cloyd Sullins of the Denver Association of Southern Baptist Churches.

The immediate goal is to save souls, church officials said. But a wave of new members also would help the financially troubled Colorado Baptist General Convention. And working together on a project of this kind could help heal wounds caused by a 10-year battle over the Bible at the national level that has divided the denomination.

"Forget infighting or outfighting or anything like that," said Sullins, director of local efforts in the Sharing His Abundant Redemption Everywhere project or SHARE. "This is about missions. This is the kind of project that unites Southern Baptists, no matter what...Starting churches and evangelism — those are the two rails the Southern Baptist train runs on."

The SHARE effort is part of a 25-year Southern Baptist effort to witness to every person on the planet by the year 2000. The local project began with a rally on May 9 for 1,000 people from 58 Denver-area churches and missions.

The door-to-door drive will be backed by direct-mail campaigns, Sullins said. The 1988 budget for SHARE is $60,000, with that total rising during 1989, the year when most of the work will be done. Funds will be provided by the SBC's national Home Mission Board.

Sullins said he does not expect national-level feuds to affect how the local Southern Baptists are viewed when people answer their doorbells.

Regents fire SWTSU president

AUSTIN (AP) — Robert Hardesty says he's leaving Southwest Texas State University with pride despite being fired twice as president in less than a month.

Monday, Hardesty, a former speechwriter for President Lyndon B. Johnson, was dismissed by five regents of the Texas State University System, who insisted that Hardesty had been warned months ago to clean up his act.

Hardesty said he would leave Southwest Texas "with my head held high — proud of my 6½-year stewardship at that institution and proud of the progress we have made. No other university has made so much progress in such a short period of time."

Hardesty contends his firing stemmed from his friendship with former Democratic Gov. Mark White, who was unseated in 1986 by Republican Gov. Bill Clements. Hardesty supported White and his wife, Mary, was a White aide.

But Clements' press secretary, Reggie Bashur, said, "I can only state in the strongest possible terms that we were not involved in the dismissal of Mr. Hardesty."

It was not the first time claims of politically motivated academic firings have been raised.

In 1944, Homer Rainey was dismissed as president of the University of Texas after he refused to repudiate his charges that regents had made attempts to limit academic freedom at the school.

In 1970 John Silber lost his job as dean of the UT College of Arts and Sciences, culminating a dispute in which he fought plans to divide the arts and sciences college into three separate colleges.

Both Rainey — who was defeated in a runoff for governor in 1946 — and Silber had strong support, much like that demonstrated on Hardesty's behalf by students, faculty, staff and townspeople.

Regents had voted 5-4 May 19 to fire Hardesty, but that ouster was overturned by State District Judge Jon Wisser of Austin, who ruled that regents had violated the Texas Open Meetings Act because the action was not on the agenda.

Hardesty, who was made president in 1981 after serving as vice chancellor at UT, was given five days to vacate the president's house at San Marcos and his pay was cut off Monday.

After Monday's vote, which drew boos from some of the crowd of more than 300, Hardesty shook hands with each regent and spoke briefly with regent Norman Elder of Del Rio, who had presented the case against Hardesty.

Elder said Hardesty, 57, had failed to follow board rules by arranging contracts without board approval. He said Hardesty had used money given to Southwest Texas to fly first class, stay in hotel rooms costing over $250 a night and pay dues to five private clubs.

Elder said Hardesty in 1987 had spent one of three working days out of the office and had made 11 out-of-state trips. In 1988, Elder said, Hardesty had made eight out-of-state trips by May and had been away from the office with even greater frequency.

"The amount of time away doesn't make any difference, it's what you do when away," Hardesty countered.

"I hope that this issue and these controversies do not permanently rub off on Southwest Texas or on higher education in the state of Texas," Hardesty said after the dismissal.

He said he did not know if he would sue as a result of his firing.

At the meeting, former U.S. ambassador to Australia William Crook, a Hardesty supporter, said regent Ruben Escobedo of San Antonio should abstain from voting.

Regent Ed Longcope of San Marcos read a statement alleging that Escobedo had said previously he had been contacted by Clements office and told, "The governor wants Bob Hardesty fired."

New DPS director sees 'no drastic changes'

AUSTIN (AP) — The man taking over the Texas Department of Public Safety says the law enforcement agency is doing a good job now and that major changes aren't likely.

Lt. Col. Joe E. Milner, 56, was appointed to succeed Col. Leo Gossett, who announced Monday that he will retire July 31 after nearly 40 years with the DPS.

"I plan no drastic changes in the operation of this agency. The DPS is a good, effective organization. We are extremely fortunate to have a workforce of men and women who are very dedicated to our objectives," Milner said.

Gossett, 62, joined the DPS in 1949 as a trooper and had served as assistant director for the 19 years prior to taking command.

Milner has served as assistant director since Gossett took over.

"With the retirement of Col. Gossett, we are losing a man who has been with the DPS for all but 14 years of its existence," said Ruben Cardenas, chairman of the Public Safety Commission.

Gossett was named DPS director on July 1, 1987, following the retirement of former FBI agent Jim Adams.

"The DPS is regarded as one of the top state police agencies in the United States and enjoys an international reputation," Gossett said.

The new DPS director also is a veteran of the agency.

Having joined the DPS in 1954, Milner became head of the traffic law enforcement division, which includes all uniformed DPS services, in 1968 and held that post until becoming assistant director.

"Joe Milner is an outstanding career law enforcement officer and administrator who will be a very able successor to Col. Gossett," Cardenas said.

Milner said no major changes were planned in the agency's operation.

"The DPS is a good, effective organization. We are extremely fortunate to have a workforce of men and women who are very dedicated to our objectives," he said.

Milner, who served in the Navy during the Korean war, was stationed as a Highway Patrol trooper in Edna after joining the DPS. Promoted to sergeant in 1957, he served at Conroe, Houston and Lufkin. In 1963, he was promoted to lieutenant and assigned to Harlingen. Three years later, he was made a captain and transferred to Houston.

North Carolina, Illinois, Tennessee favored for SSC

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Energy, in an unpublished list, has reduced to three the number of states under consideration for the $4.4 billion superconducting super collider project, according to published reports today.

The department denied any of seven prospective sites had been removed, even tentatively, from consideration.

A Nashville, Tenn., newspaper, The Tennessean, citing unnamed sources whom it did not characterize, said the states on the department's list were Tennessee, North Carolina and Illinois.

The four other states on the department's published list are Arizona, Colorado, Michigan and Texas.

Rep. Bart Gordon, D-Tenn., told the Tennessean Monday, "I have learned that there is a shorter short list, and that Tennessee is on it."

An Energy Department spokesman, Jeff Sherwood, said the department had no shorter list of sites.

"The intent is not to go to any kind of a short short list," Sherwood said. "The intent is to go from the seven best qualified sites...right down to one site in late November."

Medical board to inform institutions of complaints

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas State Board of Medical Examiners for the first time plans to inform medical institutions of complaints against physicians during the time the doctors are licensed in Texas.

The information will not be available to the public, according to state law. It will be given only to hospitals, health maintenance organizations, nursing homes, group medical practices, medical societies or other health-care agencies that submits a written request, the Austin American-Statesman reported Monday.

Complaints against Texas physicians have been held confidential by the medical board, and some physicians may not even be aware a complaint is on file against them. But a 1987 state law authorized the board to inform any "health-care entity" of such complaints.

The board assumed the disclosure law applied only to complaints lodged against doctors after Sept. 1, 1987, when the law took effect, and has been releasing information only about those complaints, the American-Statesman said.

A recent opinion by Attorney General Jim Mattox, however, requires the board to release information about any complaint lodged against a doctor licensed by the board.

Mattox's ruling poses an immediate problem for the medical board because it has no central filing system for the thousands of complaints against doctors, board officials said.

Classic pearls are always a fashion

Lustrous jewelry can be stylish with any wardrobe

By DIANE DORRANS SAEKS
Copley News Service

Blame it on Coco Chanel. When pearls were only for the very rich, she had the imagination and wit to put multiple strands of pearls (mostly fake) around models' necks to show off her chic little suits. Designer Karl Lagerfeld, reviving the Chanel look, piled on even more pearls. Now, it seems, every designer is in on the act. No longer just for brides and dowagers, pearls are back in fashion; more women are wearing real or frankly fake pearls than ever.

"Pearls never go out of fashion, but this year sales are up. More people are looking for exotic pearls in unusual colors and shapes to give as gifts, and many women are buying real pearls for themselves. Their careers take off, and they buy themselves discreet pearl necklaces, earrings or lapel pins to wear to the office," said Marilu Klar, the jewelry buyer for Gump's in San Francisco. She was wearing pearl earrings, a South Sea pearl ring and a triple-strand pearl choker with her black business suit.

"There has also been a return to rather traditional tastes, like circle pins, bar pins, single-strand graduated pearls, simple pearl rings and pearls as debut mementos. And for many young women, pearl earrings and rings are the choice for everyday jewelry," she added.

When the Duchess of Windsor, now remembered most, perhaps, for her multimillion-dollar jewelry collection, opined, "You can never have too many diamonds," she could easily have added the advice that a plethora of pearls is good, too. Klar notes that you can wear pearls for breakfast and for lunch, in the country, to the office and for weekend get-togethers, but you couldn't really try that with diamonds without looking rather overdressed.

The most desirable colors, she said, are rose, iridescent blue and pale cream. Pure white is neither the most prized, nor the most flattering. White pearls usually lack luster because their crystalline coating is very thin. For most women, rose looks prettiest against the skin. Colors range, however, from deep bronze to steel blue and lavender. Today, almost all pearls on the market are cultured, not natural pearls.

"When buying fine pearls, judge luster first," Klar advises. A gem-quality pearl will have an iridescent quality, a glow from within, and should reflect both a pink and blue light. Since even a pearl of a lesser quality will still feel smooth, touching it is not the way to gauge value. A fine pearl necklace should have well-matched pearls, and each pearl should be even."

Many women are attracted to baroque pearls, those that are not perfectly round, plus shapes ranging from flat lozenges, flakes, teardrops, ovals, round buttons and the tiny "rice" pearls worn in multistrands.

"Baroque pearls make wonderful costume jewelry, and they're generally less expensive than 'perfect' pearls," Klar says. Their colors can be matched with a dress or sweater, and they work particularly well with clasps of semiprecious stones like jade and lapis lazuli, rose quartz, many shades of coral.

When you're in the mood to buy pearls, she suggests, educate yourself first by window shopping. Ask your jeweler to bring out styles you like and look at a range of pearls and settings. Feel the weight, try them on, see which pearl colors look best against your skin. Get advice on the setting.

Pearl strands usually are sold in standard lengths: 16-inch chokers, 24-inch matinee, 32-inch opera (which also can be worn as a double-strand choker).

"For a small purchase — say you've saved $500 — I suggest searching for a perfect pair of classic creamy pearl earrings," Klar says. "You'll wear them forever. For fun, a small freshwater pearl necklace or a single strand of baroque pearls in a variety of colors could be very versatile."

Klar advises against buying pearls as an investment. While these gems have tripled in price during the past decade, they are not a liquid asset; the pearls could never be sold for the retail price you've paid. Still, she suggests people buy the finest-quality pearls they can afford.

"Plan a wardrobe of pearls and buy pieces that are versatile and won't date. Avoid fussy settings that will catch in your clothing and be too fragile to wear often. Since there's not a lot of labor cost in a pearl necklace, you can start with a choker and later have it extended to opera length.

"Don't see a pearl necklace as static or get locked into one style. You can work on it over the years and have it restrung, add a clasp or a pendant, add stones, maybe diamonds or have gold rondelles strung between the pearls. Buy the best pearls for your rings or earrings first, and you can add a gold or diamond setting later."

Anyone hoping to hear about a pretty starter string of gem-quality pearls for a nice little three-digit figure is bound to be disappointed. And turning to fabulous fakes isn't always the answer. You have to shop carefully for them, too. The cheaper the fakes, the quicker the pearl coating chips off. Some of the costume pearl necklaces with the Chanel label cost almost as much as cultured pearls. And once you've seen the best pearls, it's harder to settle for less than the real thing.

Cure pet boredom 'on line'

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

A man from Tennessee has just come up with a cure for "pet boredom." I don't know how you can tell when a pet is bored. We had a Yorkshire terrier once who waited until the front door slammed behind us. Then he wet on every chair leg, chewed the toes out of all my shoes, took the bell out of a new toy and dragged a dead animal through the doggie door. He could have been bored, but I think he was just your basic, vindictive, spiteful, spoiled beast who was paying us back for leaving him at home in the first place.

James Garner (no relation to Rockford) has invented the Pet Phone, which allows pets to answer and hang up the phone by stepping onto a 20x13-inch riser that covers a built-in phone. He says the phone is an answer to long, lonely days when the master is away at the office.

Let's put aside for a moment the small fact that dogs and cats can't talk once they get the phone off the hook. The big question is, Can a pet be trained to hop onto the platform and answer the call? Garner says years ago he had a dog named Wiggle Tails who loved to listen to country-western music on the radio. When he couldn't hear it from the yard, he had sense enough to go into a nearby tree house where the radio was. His present dog, E-Z, lives in the carpeted tree house, with bay windows and ramp to the yard. She had a pet switch with a light and cable TV, but she could not care less about that. He put a thermostat under the rug and attached a switch. E-Z lies on it for warmth on cold winter nights. The point is, if you offer an animal something to relieve boredom, the animal will train itself.

I would warn all of you who are contemplating converting your animal from couch potato to phone-of-his-own status to remember how it was when you first shared your phone with children.

It will only be a matter of time before a phone ring will bring your dog bounding out of nowhere, baring his teeth and growling. (Translation: "Touch that phone and you're a dead woman!")

Your phone bill will reflect an additional $125 when your cat, feeling abandoned and out of touch with her peers, calls the Kitty Teen Gab Line.

It's probably a coincidence, but the announcement of Garner's invention came at the same time a Barsotti cartoon appeared in The New Yorker. A dog, answering the phone and hearing "Woof, woof" come out of it, turns to another dog and says, "They're out. It's the damn answering machine."

You've been warned.

DEAR ABBY

Woman's marriage hopes crushed

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am truly in love with a man who is in training to be a police officer. We've gone together for three years and I am ready for marriage, but "John" says he doesn't want to get married — ever.

He tells me he loves me, but because of the risks involved in his job, he doesn't want to bring sorrow to a wife and family in case something happens to him in the line of duty. I've tried to tell him that if anything happened to him, it would still cause the same amount of sorrow whether we were married or not. I try to reason with him, but he refuses to discuss the subject, and gets upset every time I bring it up.

I want to get married, have a family and spend the rest of my life with John, but none of this seems to matter to him. He is even against the idea of living together!

Abby, the thought of not being able to marry the man I love is very depressing. Different friends are giving me advice. One says, "Give him a scare by making him think there is somebody else in the picture and if he doesn't marry you, he could lose you."

Another friend says, "Don't give up — hang in there and eventually John will change his mind."

Another friend has advised me to forget him. What do you say, Abby? — LOVES JOHN

DEAR LOVES: I vote with the friend who advised you to forget him. John deserves high marks for acknowledging that he doesn't want to get married — ever. Accept it as a clear message that if you want marriage, you can't count on John.

DEAR ABBY: Please offer suggestions to this problem. There are many ex-spouses in similar situations who could benefit from your advice. When a divorced person has remarried, should that person and his former spouse continue to phone each other? (I am told it's about the kids, but the "kids" are in their 20s and 30s.) Is it considered ethical and proper for a remarried person to visit the ex-spouse alone in that person's house? I always believed it was common courtesy, out of respect to the present spouse, never to meet alone with the ex-spouse. Am I wrong? — WONDERING IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR WONDERING: Your "questions" indicate a great deal of insecurity on your part. You obviously feel threatened when your spouse meets alone with his ex-spouse. Straight talk with your spouse about your feelings (and suspicions) will do more to clear the air than my answers to questions regarding "ethics and propriety."

DEAR ABBY: In our office, someone is always collecting for a birthday, wedding, baby or get-well gift for one person or another. I have always been more than happy to participate because I know when we all go in together, we can buy one gift that will be extra nice.

The amount we each pay varies from $2 to $15 per person. Now my complaint: On one occasion, we sent a get-well floral arrangement. I happen to know it cost $19.95, delivered, and $15 was collected. So what happened to the leftover $5.05? We are never shown the bill, and no one mentions how much it cost. If there's a party, the gift is opened and we all see it, but we never see the bill.

Would I be out of line if I asked the collector to show us the bill? Please print this, Abby. There must be many other offices where this is going on. Just sign me ... A PETTY RIP-OFF

DEAR RIP-OFF: When collections are made, the collector usually circulates the bill among the contributors, and if this is not done in your office, it's time to suggest it.

Abby's favorite recipes are going like hotcakes! For your copy, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Abby's Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

Fired employee takes hostages; shoots himself

RICHARDSON, Texas (AP) — A man who had been recently fired returned to his office to confront his former boss, but instead held two coworkers hostage at gunpoint for several hours before fatally shooting himself, authorities said.

Mervin Dale Gilliam, 28, went to Zeus Components of Dallas in suburban Richardson to find his former boss at about 8 a.m. Monday, said Richardson police spokesman Jim Wheatley.

Gilliam, who had served 11 months of a five-year term for aggravated kidnapping and robbery, attempted to take four hostages, but two of them escaped, Wheatley said.

Donna Dippel, a company secretary in her 20s, was released early afternoon and Roman Gonzales, a Dallas resident in his early 30s, was released at about 4 p.m., Wheatley said.

Gilliam, who was fired last week, telephoned The Dallas Morning News on Monday afternoon during the siege and said he was angry at his former boss, office manager Mark Patla, over a raise he claimed he had been promised.

"I came in here to kill him (Patla) this morning, and four people showed up," Gilliam told the News. Patla had not arrived for work when Gilliam appeared. He told The News he had no comment on the incident.

Police were talking to Gilliam on the telephone when they heard a muffled gunshot and the phone went dead at about 5:20 p.m., said Capt. Joe Hanna. Police immediately entered the building and found Gilliam dead, Hanna said.

Associates said they were shocked by the incident.

"He was a very nice guy," said Greg Foster, pastor of Hamilton Park First Baptist Church where Gilliam attended.

"Sometimes something in a person's life comes up that you can't explain. Mervin wasn't capable of this," Foster said.

Dwain Thompson, who described Gilliam as a friend and "a very talented young man," said Gilliam had recently been through a period of depression after losing his girlfriend and his job.

Members of the gunman's family arrived at the offices late Monday morning to help police negotiate, Wheatley said.

Gilliam told The News he has struggled to live in society with a criminal record.

He was arrested Sept. 30, 1983, on a charge of aggravated kidnapping for using a shotgun to hold a former girlfriend hostage. At the time, he was on 10 years probation for a February 1979 aggravated robbery in Tarrant County.

Gilliam's robbery probation was revoked after the kidnapping charges and he was sentenced to two concurrent 5-year sentences. He went to a state prison Aug. 17, 1984, and was released July 19, 1985.

"I've made a mess of my life and I tried to really do it up and do it right. But I always lose," he said.

Jury sworn in at trial over petition forgeries

Bailey

Mountain

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — The attorney for a Houston political consulting firm's says the company's reputation is at stake in a case involving alleged forgeries on petitions to put a Republican presidential candidate on the GOP primary ballot.

"We're talking about lots of money, but more importantly, we're talking about a company's reputation that's already been tarnished because of this," said Charles Soechting of Houston, attorney for Southern Political Consulting.

A conviction could mean a fine of more than $500,000 for the firm, while Rocky Mountain, a partner could face a fine of more than $100,000 and up to a year in jail if found guilty in the misdemeanor forgery case.

A three-man, three-woman jury was selected Monday for the trial, which attorneys said is expected to last at least one week.

Mountain, 27, and Southern Political Consulting each were indicted on 64 counts of forgery.

If convicted of the Class A misdemeanor, Mountain would face a maximum penalty of a $2,000 fine on each count and a jail term of one year. Southern Political Consulting would face a maximum penalty of $10,000 per count.

"Their reputation is on the line because they've been accused of something that I don't think the evidence will show happened," Soechting said.

The trial is being conducted in San Marcos by Judge Sherman Ross, who presides over a Harris County criminal court at law.

Casey O'Brien, assistant district attorney for Harris County, said he expects to call as witnesses about 40 of the 64 people whose names were allegedly forged on petitions to place Pete Du Pont on the GOP primary ballot in Texas.

Nine accomplice witnesses, who allegedly were directed to sign names to the petitions, also will be called O'Brien said.

"I don't think it's sufficient to convict either or both of the defendants to show that names were written without someone's consent," said Joe Bailey, Mountain's attorney. "The important thing is whether or not there was intent to defraud or harm at the time the signatures were signed."

The defense also said the firm was not hired by Du Pont's campaign.

Apparently forged signatures were found on petitions submitted by Du Pont and several other GOP primary contenders, but all 64 alleged forgeries at issue in this case were on Du Pont's petitions.

The Texas Republican Party required its candidates to submit petitions signed by 5,000 voters to get on the ballot. However, party rules last week were changed to permit candidates to either submit petitions or pay a $5,000 filing fee.

Petition drive would disincorporate city

AMES, Texas (AP) — Residents of the only predominantly black community in Liberty County say they are tired of paying taxes and getting little in return and are determined to disincorporate the 16-year-old town.

In 1972, a ballot proposal to incorporate Ames, settled in the 1890s by Louisiana Creoles, was approved by the 260 eligible voters.

Only eight people voted against the proposal.

Now, 274 valid signatures have been gathered to put the question back on the ballot.

Residents say they are upset with taxes rising while property values fall.

"The main problem is we aren't getting anything for the money we pay," E.L. Cox, a retired school principal who served on the first city council, said. "I thought a regular city would furnish us sewer utilities, clean our ditches and provide good streets. But it didn't happen," he told the Houston Chronicle.

"I don't believe 10 people want it to stay a city any more, except maybe the few who are running the show," said Wilda Carrier, 63, who runs the town's only filling station and grocery store.

Make-over from Salon Unique gives you fresh new 'total' look for summer

Freshen up your look for summer with a complete hair and skin make over from the experts at Salon Unique.

Call 697-8711 today and set up your appointment with Scarlet Butler and Susan Reid for a totally new look for summer. For the price of a single cut and style ($35), you will receive personal attention from both of these professionals - Scarlet will cut and style your hair and Susan will perform a make-over.

"We are offering our services together, in this special, because hair and make-up should complement one another," Scarlet said. "Exactly," Susan agreed. "If you hair is casual, casual make-up will give up a 'total' look that is right for you."

"Choosing the right 'total' look for you is what we are trained for," Scarlet explained. "Whether you wear your hair long or short, the proper cut is the foundation of healthy-looking, beautiful hair."

Scarlet, a native Midlander with more than 16 years of experience in hair care, has studied with several experts to perfect her hair care techniques. These include Paul Mitchell, well known for his hair design expertise and Henri Mastey of Paris, famous master of hair color. Scarlet spent time with the KMS Research Team studying different techniques of permanents and waving and with Adam Shoeman of Boston, learning the art hair cutting.

Susan will begin your make-over by cleansing your face. During the process of applying make-up Susan will explain each step so that, with practice, you will be able to replicate the procedures at home.

"Once you know how to apply cosmetics, you will be able to wear any color with confidence that you look your best," Susan noted, explaining that many women buy cosmetics that they seldom use, because they don't know how to apply them correctly.

Susan is especially talented in the art of corrective make-up, used to cover imperfections and small flaws.

"I look at each face as a canvas," Susan said "and I make it up like a piece of art."

"Scarlet and I listen very carefully to each of our customers," Susan said. "If you don't wear much make-up, I won't use much in your make-over. But I can show you how to use that small amount more effectively. I will take the time to answer you questions concerning skin care and make-up."

Both Susan and Scarlet are extremely knowledgeable about the hair and skin products they use. All the products sold by Salon Unique are guaranteed 100 percent, including the full line of Sebastian cosmetics and Aveda hair products recommended by Scarlet and Susan.

"Hair and skin care should be very simple," Scarlet and Susan agreed. "And it can be if you know how to do it."

To look your best for summer and the upcoming holiday, call 697-8711 today and ask for Scarlet and Susan. Receive personal service from an expert hairdresser and make-up artist at Salon Unique, Northwest Crossing Shopping Center, Midland Drive at Loop 250.

LET'S DO LUNCH

IS MIDLAND READY ...for RESTAURANT REVIEWS?

We think so...and beginning JUNE 16 a new column in the Reporter-Telegram will do just that!

"LET'S DO LUNCH" will be geared to that growing number of Midlanders who are "eating out" at lunchtime and will include a review of a specific meal at a local restaurant along with information on specialties of the house, price ranges, hours and other pertinent facts.

"LET'S DO LUNCH" will be of interest to those who eat out regularly now. And by giving an inside view of the variety of eating places as well as the range of dishes available in Midland it might be just the encouragement others need to join the crowds...

"LET'S DO LUNCH...beginning June 16...and on alternate Thursdays thereafter in our LIFESTYLE SECTION.

The professional staff at Cattleman's Restaurant are ready to serve you the 'meal of a lifetime.' Come in to 3300 N. Big Spring for lunch or dinner.

Cattleman's Restaurant has reputation for great food & drink, better service

Cattleman's Restaurant, located at 3300 N. Big Spring, boasts the "best steaks in town," and once you've tried them you're sure to agree.

"Cattleman's is the kind of place you can bring a business associate for lunch," says Bill Hinkle, owner. "Or the family for dinner."

This popular Midland restaurant has a tradition of personable service and generous portions that keep you coming back for more.

Along with steaks, chicken and seafood, Cattleman's clientele can enjoy homemade soup, which the staff prepares fresh twice a day.

Blueberry muffins, dinner rolls and cornbread are made from scratch every day.

And don't forget Cattleman's famous salad bar, well-known in Midland for its variety and size. Here you will find fresh items awaiting your selection. "We feel that every meal should start off with a fresh green salad," says Bill.

And don't forget to try Bill's beans. Bill purchases only Colorado pintos, grown on the western slope of the rockies. They are cooked for a minimum of eight hours, for the best pot of beans you'll find in Texas.

While you enjoy your salad and await your meal, you won't want to miss sampling a delicious appetizer or two. Try the delicious onion rings or fried zucchini and set your appetite for the main course.

Although Cattleman's may boast of a fine selection of beef, chicken and seafood, Bill says the most popular choice is the six ounce filet. "The cut has no fat," he continues, "and like all of our entrees, it is prepared by the Whirl method." This special cooking process is 100% cholesterol free, explains Bill.

Heartier appetites will be satisfied with Cattleman's T-bone, sirloin, ribeye, club steaks, spaghetti, hamburgers or chicken fried steak.

Children are very special guests of Cattleman's, also. They will love the "Kiddie Corner" selections which are sized just for them. Cattleman's always includes red gelatin among their salad bar selections, especially for their younger customers.

If you have room for dessert, your meal will be complete with a tasty Cattleman's treat. Try some fresh apple pie, cherry cheesecake, ice cream or pecan pie.

Silk flowers have come a long way from the "plastic" flowers first mass produced in the sixties.

"Today's silk flowers look very realistic," agrees Jane Drennan of Fancy Fans & Gifts. "They are the perfect alternative for those who do not have the time or talent for a green-thumb."

Silk flowers will grow anywhere and add color to your entire house. Stunningly natural in appearance, these flowers never need water, won't die or fade away and are safe for children and pets.

Let pots of silk greenery and plants or hanging baskets add fun to your summer. Choose from piggy back, Swedish ivy, strawberry geranium, Chinese evergreen, split-leaf philodondren, English ivy, corn plants, palm trees, geranium ivy, baltic ivy and an endless supply of flowers and greenery. Hanging baskets add color to your patio with bougainvillea, geraniums, azaleas, fuschia, jasmine and more.

Be sure to see the large assortment of silk fruit and vegetables now available for wreathes and table arrangements. Great for patio party decorations or every day in your kitchen.

Fancy Fans stocks an infinite supply of creative twist ribbons in all the new summer colors. This gauze-looking paper will spruce up old arrangements, as well as the new.

Don't forget, Fancy Fans & Gifts has everything for the do-it-yourselfer, or let the professionals create the look best suited to your home or office. Jane will gladly visit you at either location and design a look exclusively for you.

Vitale safe as Spurs hire Brown

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

Throw away your toothbrush, Dick Vitale. Forget about buying kneepads.

During the last college basketball season, Vitale, the television commentator who can talk up a storm that would flatten the corn in Kansas, said that he would clean the floor of Allen Field House with a toothbrush if Larry Brown was still coaching the Jayhawks when next season begins.

Vitale knows his nomads.

"I'm brokenhearted," Vitale said. "I was looking forward to scrubbing the floor. I had my toothbrush ready. But I said all along Larry's a soap opera. He's bigger than Luke and Laura on General Hospital."

ON MONDAY, Brown said he is leaving the Univeristy of Kansas, where he coached the Jayhawks to the national basketball championship April 4, for the Land of Oz, which happens to be Texas. The good witches of the Southwest are the San Antonio Spurs of the National Basketball Association, who will reportedly pay Brown $3.5 million over five years.

"A once in a lifetime opportunity," Brown called it.

"I don't think there's that much money in Kansas," athletic director Bob Frederick said. Brown had five-year contract with Kansas that rolled over every year. Including television shows, a summer camp and a shoe contract, he was thought to total about $500,000 annually.

The day before the Jayhawks beat Oklahoma for the NCAA title at Kansas City, Brown said in answer to a question of why nobody seemed to want the fired Walt Hazzard at UCLA:

"Leaving UCLA was the worst mistake I ever made."

Brown left the NBA to become the third coach at UCLA after John Wooden, who won 10 national titles in 12 years. But Brown never gave himself a real chance to become another Wizard of Westwood. He left UCLA after a 22-10 record in 1979-80 and an appearance in the Final Four, in which the Bruins lost 59-54 to Louisville in the final, and a 20-7 mark in 1980-81.

The UCLA job was the first as a college coach for Brown, who coached Carolina of the old American Basketball Association in 1972-73 and 1973-74, Denver of the ABA for the next three seasons and Denver of the NBA in 1977-78 and 1978-79.

It looked as if Brown was going to rectify his mistake. He visited UCLA three days after Kansas won the title, and officials of the California school scheduled a news conference to announce a new coach.

Back in Kansas the day after talking to UCLA, Brown announced he was staying as coach.

"I just didn't think I could face the kids — and Freddy (athletic director Frederick)," Brown said of his change of heart.

However, after time for thought, perhaps Brown remembered that one of the kids he wouldn't be facing next year at Kansas is Danny Manning, the college player of the year who was drafted by the Los Angeles Clippers.

The Clippers job is not open.

IT MIGHT also have dawned on Brown that one of the players he will be coaching at San Antonio in the 1989-90 season is David Robinson, the college player of the year two seasons ago at Navy. Robinson is now completing his military obligation.

Of .the San Antonio offer, Brown said, "I didn't think it would be fair to my family not consider it."

It wouldn't be, but Larry Brown seems to be a man who feels the ball is always bouncing higher on somebody else's court.

When he returned from UCLA in April, Brown said he called his agent and was told that there was a "a minor problem — on UCLA's part."

"It was just something small, no big deal. It was correctable in five minutes," Brown said. "But it gave me an out."

Perhaps the Spurs should make the print on Brown's contract Texas-size.

Coaches applaud contract

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Some coaches in the National Basketball Association are taking another look at their own contracts now that Larry Brown has left Kansas University to sign a 5-year, $3.5 million contract to coach the San Antonio Spurs.

"I'm going to toast Larry Brown. He just set a new standard for the rest of us," said Los Angeles Lakers Coach Pat Riley when he heard the news Monday at Pontiac, Mich., where his team is battling the Detroit Pistons for the NBA championship.

If the Spurs were willing to pay $700,000 a year for Brown, then the Lakers may be willing to find some extra cash for a coach pushing toward a second consecutive NBA title.

Pistons coach Chuck Daly also applauded the announcement.

"God bless him (Brown) with his salary," Daly told the San Antonio Light.

Daly is a free-agent himself and faces negotiation for a new contract with the Pistons once the season is over.

The reaction among coaches at the NBA Finals Monday was that Brown has landed in a good situation with the Spurs, a team with several up-and-coming youngsters — including former Navy center David Robinson, who has another year of commitment to the Navy before he can play in the NBA.

Detroit assistant coach Dick Versace, who spent eight years as the head coach at Bradley University, said making the jump to the NBA is "like you're graduating from college."

"It's like hitting the lottery," Versace said. "What are you going to do, turn it down? You're not going to turn down winning the lottery in order to call 18-year-olds every year and ask them what color tux they're going to wear to the prom."

Shreveport wins 1st half

Associated Press

Rick Nelson's solo homer helped power the Shreveport Captains to a 3-2 Texas League baseball victory over the Tulsa Drillers and give the Captains the first-half championship in the Texas League East.

In other Texas League action Monday night, Wichita slipped past El Paso, 9-8, and Arkansas edged Jackson, 4-3.

Shreveport's other run came on sacrifice flies by Paul Meyers and Jeff Carter in the seventh inning.

Scott Coolbaugh had a two-run single for Tulsa in the eighth inning.

The winning pitcher was Joe Olker, 7-1. Joe Dominguez, the league's leader in saves, picked up his 12th of the season. The loser was Bob Malloy, 1-7.

Paul Quinzer ended a ninth inning rally and allowed the Wichita Pilots to take an 8-7 victory over the El Paso and place the Diablos to within one loss or one San Antonio victory from elimination in the West.

The Diablos had scored four runs in the ninth inning off reliever Ruty ford and had a runner on first base with two outs. Quinzer took only three pitches to get Joe Mitchell to hit into a game-ending force play.

Wichita scored three runs in the top of the second after El Paso took a 1-0 lead in the first inning. Carlos Baerga and Mike Basso highlighted the ninning with RBI singles.

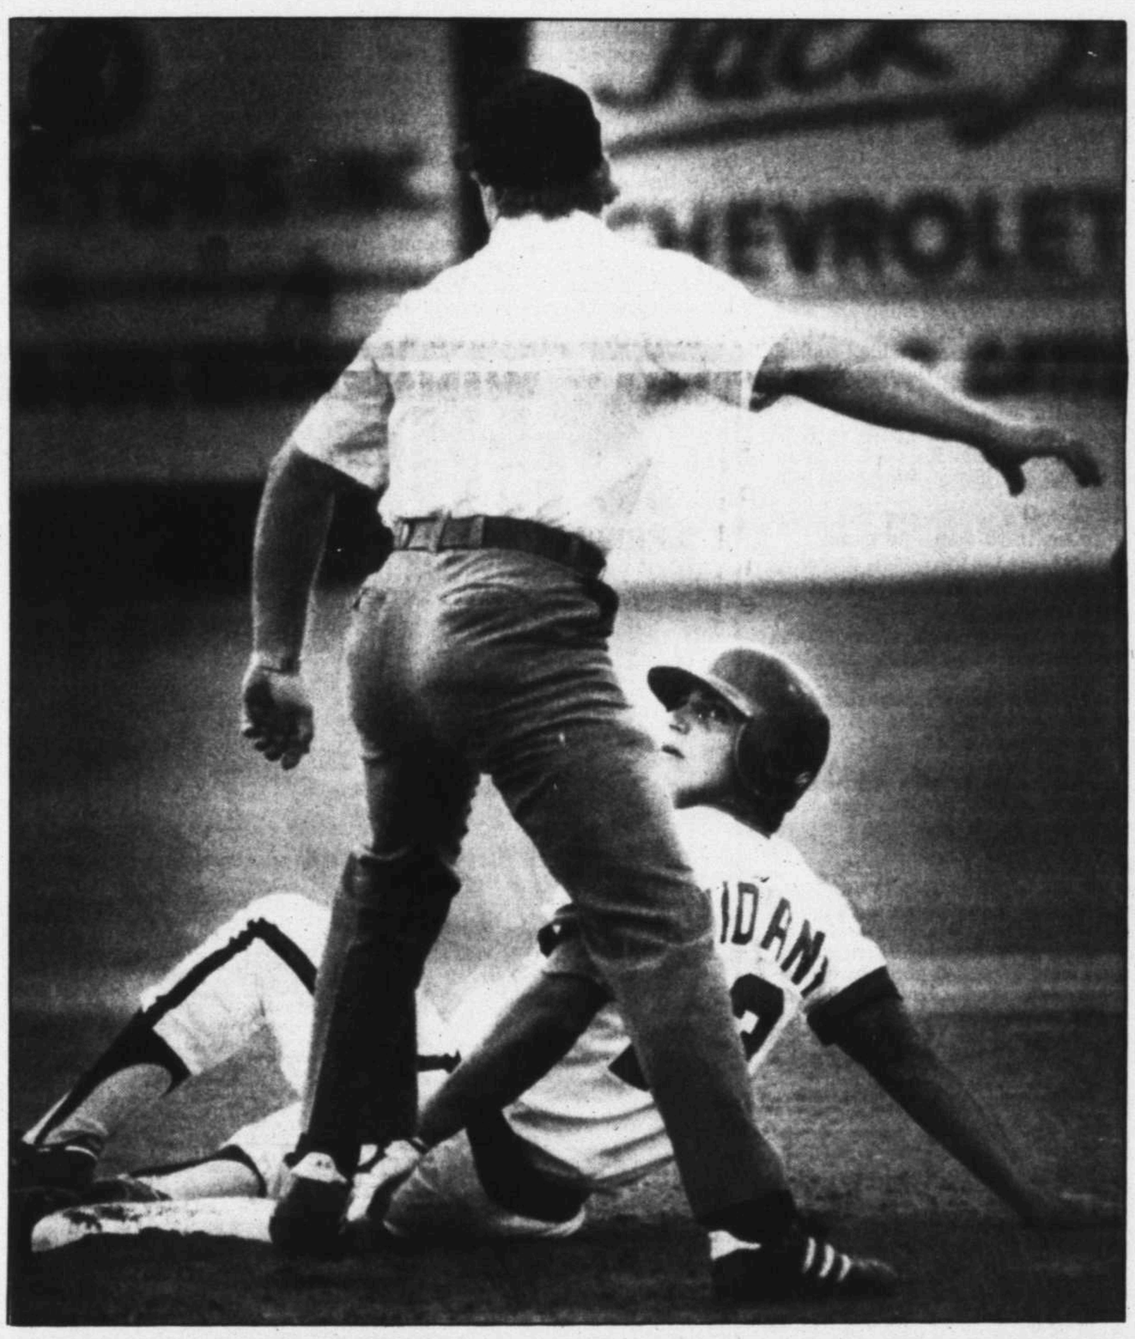

Wichita added four runs in the fourth inning on RBI singles by Bill Wrona and Craig Cooper and Jimmy Tatum's two-run double.

El Paso cut the Wichita lead to 7-3 with a two-run fourth. Both runs were unearned after Pat Jelks' error in center field.

The Pilots got two more runs in the eighth on a two-run double by Chris Knabenshue.

The Diablos got a RBI double by Greg Vaughn in the eighth inning and then scored four times in the ninth off Wichita's Ford.

Frank Mattox tripled in one run and Mario Monico doubled in another. Gary Sheffield ground out scored a third run and George Canale hit a run-scoring single for the last El Paso score.

George Wolf/Reporter-Telegram

Midland Angel runner Erik Pappas looks up in disbelief at umpire Mike Dumont after being called out while trying to stretch a single into a double Monday night at Angel Stadium.

Pistons' gloom erased by dome

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The gloom is gone. The Detroit Pistons say they're ready to fight back and are determined not to be doomed in the Dome.

Home was not sweet to the first-time NBA finalists on Sunday. Their shoddy play was there for all 39,188 spectators to see. The Silverdome crowd, the second-largest in championship series history, watched the Los Angeles Lakers humble the Pistons 99-86 and go up 2-1 in the best-of-seven series.

Detroit must win tonight or face the prospect of losing its third consecutive home game, not to mention the series, in Thursday night's fifth game. The Pistons have a good chance if they raise their performances as quickly as they did their spirits.

They also hope guard Isiah Thomas can make a speedy recovery from a lower back bruise sustained late in Sunday's game. He didn't attend practice Monday but said, "This is the NBA finals. I'll play with a broken arm if I have to."

THAT WAS encouraging to a team that didn't need another setback on top of the loss.

"I don't think there's any question our morale was down" after the third game, Detroit coach Chuck Daly said. "But after several inspirational talks, both individually and as a group, they came back up."

And some of them are mad like they were before their 105-93 victory in the series opener.

"We read the paper before Game 1 and we watched television before Game 1 and we went into Game 1 with a mission to prove to all the media that we belong here," Detroit forward John Salley said. "We're down 2-1 now. We get mad when they come in your arena and they embarrass you."

Trailing by just one point at halftime, the Pistons were helpless against the Los Angeles fast break and fell behind by 14 after three quarters Sunday. In the second half, Detroit hit just 34 percent of its shots.

The Lakers gained confidence from the victory but had the opposite emotional struggle facing them. The Lakers have to resist getting too high, knowing now that they can't lose the series at Pontiac.

"That's probably one of the problems now," Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley said. "We know we have an opportunity to go back to L.A. It could soften you up a little bit."

"Hopefully, we won't let up," Lakers guard Magic Johnson said. "That can be a big problem, especially having two more games in the Silverdome. They're a great home team."

"We could go back home down 2-3," Riley said. "That's scary, even if you're going home. ... Detroit is a long ways away from being out of this thing."

Unless Thomas is out of tonight's game.

He led Detroit with 28 points, nine assists and four steals Sunday and stayed in the game after falling flat on his back. But he had trouble getting out of bed Monday morning.

"I do know he has an incredible tolerance for pain," Detroit trainer Mike Abdenour said. "I also know he was in great pain."

But Thomas rarely misses practice and his playing status was to be based on his response to treatment with ice, heat and medication.

NBA Playoffs

Missions discover way to halt rally

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

History will record that the San Antonio Missions eked out an 8-7 win over the Midland Angels when pinch-runner Juan Bustabad scored on a wild pitch by Midland reliever Frank DiMichele in the 12th inning at Angel Stadium Monday.

But the Missions really won the game in the ninth inning with an unusual defensive alignment that foiled a bases-loaded, one-out situation and sent the game into extra innings.

The Missions carried a 7-3 lead into the bottom of the ninth. With ace reliever Mike Munoz (0.60 earned run average before Tuesday) on the mound, things looked tough for the hosts.

But Munoz walked Jim McCollom and Tom Alfredson to lead off the inning. Jeff Manto and Erik Pappas then stroked back-to-back triples to bring the Haloes within one, and Lee Stevens hammered a single up the middle to tie the game and send Munoz to the showers.

Off new Mission pitcher Mike Schweighoffer, Stevens moved to second on a sacrifice by Mike Knapp and to third on a wild pitch.

But the Missions intentionally walked both Norm Carrasco and Jim Thomas to load the bases and went to a six-man infield against C.L. Penigar.

Penigar worked the count to 3-2 before rapping a sharp grounder up the middle. That's where "right fielder" Mike Huff came in handy, even though he was no where near right field at the time.

Huff fielded Penigar's grounder while standing near the second base bag and threw to home in time to retire Stevens. McCollom then flied to Huff playing in his normal position to end the threat.

San Antonio manager Kevin Kennedy credited infield coach Mark Sheehy with devising the six-man formation.

"We knew Penigar hit lots of balls up the middle and it was a do-or-die situation," Kennedy said. "That's why this staff works so well together.

Ward promoted to Edmonton

From Staff Reports

Midland Angels' relief pitcher Colby Ward was promoted to the Class AAA Edmonton Trappers after Monday's game with San Antonio.

Ward was ostensibly used as a set-up man by Midland after spending his first two pro seasons as a closer, though he did record two saves for the Angels. But the 6-foot-2, 185-pound righthander exceeded expectations with a 9-2 record and team-leading 2.68 earned run average. With four games left, Ward will almost certainly finish the first half of the season as the TL's winningest pitcher despite his recall, since no other pitchers had as many as eight wins.

The former Brigham Young University standout gave up 42 hits in 40 innings, but walked only 19, while striking out 32.

Ward took his callup in a matter-of-fact fashion. "You always want to get called up," he said. "You just have to get the breaks."

The Lansing, Mich. native saved 27 games in his first two pro seasons.

The Angels could not confirm Ward's replacement on the Midland roster, though former Angel hurler Marty Reed was mentioned as a possibility.

STEALS

Milwaukee has only 20 stolen bases and are led by Paul Molitor's 17. Rickey Henderson of the Yankees leads the AL with 41.

Sierra rises with heat

ARLINGTON (AP) — Ruben Sierra's idol is the late Roberto Clemente.

In games like he had Sunday night, Sierra even looks like the former Pittsburgh Pirates' star, the greatest player Puerto Rico ever produced.

The switch-hitting Sierra served a Dave Stewart fastball deep into the rightfield stands to give the Texas Rangers a 3-2 victory over the Oakland A's.

It was Sierra's 10th homer of the year and his third the last four games.

If Sierra could only play all of his baseball games in the simmering summer.

"Once the weather warms up, Ruben warms up," said Rangers' manager Bobby Valentine. "He's starting to put up the kind of numbers he put up last year."

SIERRA, SIGNED as a free agent by Texas in 1982, had 169 hits, 109 RBIs, and 30 homers last year. He became only the sixth player in major league history to post so many homers and RBIs before he turned 22. He hit .263.

And this was after he got off to a bad start in the cold and damp spring when he only had five hits in his first 36 at-bats.

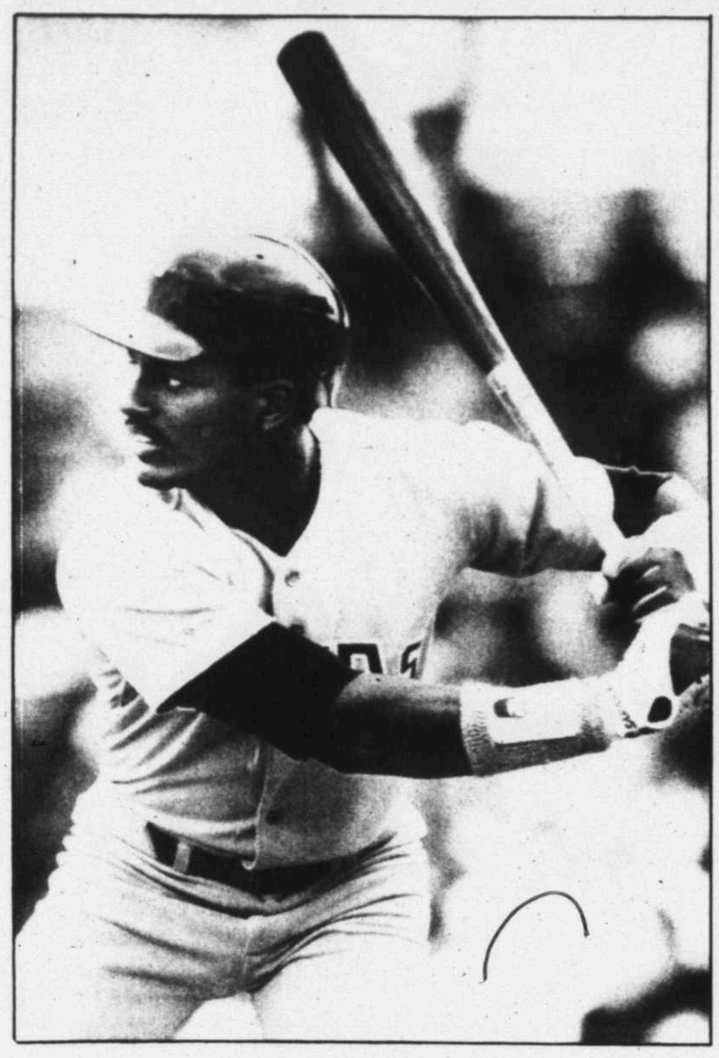

"I got off to a bad start again this year but I hate to blame it on the weather," Sierra said. "I'm just being more selective at the plate. Before, I was swinging at bad pitches and getting behind on the county. I'm staying back and using my hands more. I guess I do always get hot when the weather gets hot."

Sierra is definitely on one of his highs.

He has hit safely in 24 of 27 games and has 27 RBIs in the last 18 games.

"It seems that when Ruben gets going the whole team gets going," Valetine said.

Sierra still resides in Rio Piedras and like many Puerto Rican youngsters grew up imitating Clemente's swing.

Texas' Ruben Sierra
...getting hot as the heat rises

"I've been told a hundred times I swing like he did," Sierra said. "I just hope some day I can have the same results he did."

The Rangers' rightfielder has a tremendous arm and is one of the fastest players on the team.

He scored 97 runs last year, fourth highest total in club history. Sierra also had two inside-the-park homers, attesting to his great speed. He also stole 16 bases.

"Ruben has it all, he can hit, run and field," said Rangers' general manager Tom Grieve. "When he puts it all together he can be very exciting. He can just dominate a game."

Currently, Sierra and the Rangers trail American League Western division leading Oakland by 10 games.

If only the Rangers could start playing games in June.

Yankees defeat Clemens

Cy Young winner gives up career high hits, runs

Associated Press

The New York Yankees beat Roger Clemens on the ground and in the air.

Clemens, a two-time Cy Young Award winner, gave up 15 hits and nine runs, both career highs, as the Yankees defeated the Boston Red Sox 12-6 Monday night. Nine of the 15 hits were groundball singles. Clemens also gave up Jack Clark's three-run homer.

"We got bloops, choppers and the blast," said Dave Winfield, who doubled, singled twice and had three RBI. "Maybe he was missing one mile-an-hour on his fastball. Those things happen, but he's still the best pitcher in the league."

Clemens started the game with a league-leading 1.82 earned run average and left with a 2.37 mark. He struck out five, raising his major league-leading total to 140. It was the right-hander's third consecutive home loss.

"The guys scored some runs. I just didn't do my job," said Clemens, who pitched 6⅔ innings. "I didn't have velocity, movement or location. Those are three things needed to win."

Rafael Santana led an 18-hit attack with three singles and his second homer, a three-run shot in the ninth. Jose Cruz and Claudell Washington had three hits each.

Orioles 6, Tigers 4

Mickey Tettleton hit a three-run homer in the ninth inning after a solo shot in the seventh as Baltimore snapped Detroit's five-game winning streak.

Fred Lynn started the decisive Baltimore rally in the ninth with a one-out single and Pete Stanicek ran for him. Guillermo Hernandez, 3-2, who had relieved Walt Terrell after Lynn's single, walked Jim Traber. Tettleton then hit a 1-2 pitch into the lower deck in left field for his fifth homer.

Tom Niedenfuer, 1-1, the fourth Baltimore pitcher, pitched the final 1⅓ innings.

Indians 8, Blue Jays 6

Cory Snyder's two-run homer and Mel Hall's two-run double highlighted a four-run fourth inning as Cleveland defeated Toronto and snapped its four-game losing streak.

With one out in the fourth, Ron Kittle was hit by a pitch from Jim Clancy, 3-8, and Brook Jacoby singled. Hall then drove in both runners with a double to right and Snyder followed with his 14th homer to give the Indians a 6-1 lead.

Bud Black, 3-1, replaced Rich Yett to start the second after Yett complained of a sore rib cage. Black pitched 5⅔ innings, allowing five runs on five hits. Doug Jones pitched 2⅓ scoreless innings for his 15th save and 11th in his last 11 appearances.

White Sox 4, Twins 1

Melido Perez combined with two relievers on a seven-hitter and Ivan Calderon went 3-for-3 with a home run to lead Chicago past Minnesota.

Perez, 6-2, became the first six-game winner on Chicago's staff. The 22-year-old rookie struck out five, walked two and allowed six hits before being replaced by Rick Horton after Kirby Puckett's leadoff single in the top of the ninth.

Gary Redus also homered as the White Sox won for the sixth time in nine games. The Twins lost for only the sixth time in their last 22 games.

Brewers 3, Mariners 1

Bill Wegman combined with Dan Plesac on an eight-hitter for his first career victory against Seattle and Robin Yount drove in three runs to lead Milwaukee.

Wegman, in his second start since coming off the disabled list June 6 after a bout with elbow tendinitis, beat the Mariners for the first time after five losses. Wegman, 5-5, allowed five singles in eight innings, walked none, struck out two and allowed only one runner to reach third.

Plesac gave up Mickey Brantley's RBI double in the top of the ninth but earned his 14th save in 16 opportunities.

Royals 5, Angels 3

George Brett went 3-for-4 to drive in two runs, and Floyd Bannister snapped a personal three-game losing streak as Kansas City won at California for the Royals' 10th victory in their last 11 games.

Bannister, 7-5, allowed five hits, walked none and struck out three in five innings. Steve Farr, the third Kansas City pitcher, worked two hitless innings and struck out three for his fourth save.

Following Wally Joyner's single in the second, Bob Boone gave the Angels a 2-1 lead with his first homer of the season and the 100th of his career.

With former major-league infielder Ray Boone's 151 homers, the Boones became the only father-and-son combination aside from Gus and Buddy Bell to have 100 homers each.

McEnroe seeding sparks debate

LONDON (AP) — He has yet to set foot on the court or hit a single ball, but John McEnroe's return to Wimbledon next week already has sparked lively debate.

The 29-year-old left-hander, who has not played the All England championships since 1985, received on Monday the No. 8 seed slot for the June 20-July 3 Grand Slam event. Barring upsets, that means he should reach the quarterfinals.

Although McEnroe is ranked 19th in the world computer listings, officials said his record in the championships — three men's titles and two runner-up medals — was sufficient reason to promote him so high in the seedings list.

With five players higher than himself in the rankings but not competing at Wimbledon, McEnroe should, on paper, have been seeded No. 14.

But tournament referee Alan Mills said the seedings committee was unanimous in its judgment that the New Yorker was worthy of being elevated in the listings.

"We went on past records and the fact that it was grass. I cannot remember there having been such a change in all my time as referee. But we reserve the right every year to depart from or go with the computer rankings, and the Men's Pro Council knows this," Mills said.

The seedings committee kept faith with the computer for the first five places as Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, the world's No. 1 player, was named top seed.

He was followed by Mats Wilander of Sweden, going for his third straight Grand Slam tournament title after winning the Australian and French championships. Then came countryman Stefan Edberg, reigning Wimbledon champion Pat Cash of Australia and American veteran Jimmy Connors.

Two-time Wimbledon champion Boris Becker, ranked seventh in the world, was seeded No. 6

Padres win for McKeon

Associated Press

The San Diego Padres can't explain the difference since Jack McKeon took over as manager in words, so they're doing it in deeds.

When Larry Bowa was fired as manager on May 28, the Padres were 16-30 and 11½ games behind first-place Los Angeles in the National League West.

McKeon, who also is the team's general manager, has won 10 of 16 since taking over and has moved the Padres within eight games of first.

The Padres followed their three-game sweep of the Dodgers over the weekend with a 7-3 victory over the San Francisco Giants on Monday night at Jack Murphy Stadium.

Mark Davis preserved Eric Show's victory with his 10th save in 10 opportunities and also hit a two-run homer.

"I haven't changed my style and the club hasn't changed since Jack took over," Davis said. "Larry used me and Jack's using me. Essentially that's all I ask. We're just doing the little things better."

The Padres beat Mike Krukow despite the right-hander's fifth career homer, a one-out shot off Show in the third. Show, 5-6, pitched 7⅓ innings and allowed four hits before giving way to Davis.

Leading 5-3 in the eighth, Tim Flannery walked and two outs later Davis hit his first major-league homer.

"I didn't even have a bat out there," Davis said. "So I borrowed one from Eric. I hope he lets me keep it. I haven't asked him yet. I have to enjoy this one. You never know when you'll hit another."

With the score tied 2-2, Roberto Alomar led off the bottom of the third with his fifth homer. The Padres added two more in the fifth on Carmelo Martinez's two-run double.

The Giants took a 1-0 lead in the first on Will Clark's 16th homer, but the Padres came back to take a 2-1 advantage in the second.

Keith Moreland, Martinez and Flannery hit consecutive singles for one run, and Martinez scored the second run of the inning when shortstop Matt Williams bobbled Dickie Thon's grounder.

Pirates 8, Cubs 0

Bob Walk continued his pitching mastery over Chicago and Bobby Bonilla and Barry Bonds each hit their 14th home run as Pittsburgh defeated the Cubs at Wrigley Field.

Walk, 7-4, pitched his first complete game and shutout of the season despite a 15-mph wind blowing out. He allowed eight hits, struck out five and walked four to improve his lifetime record against the Cubs to 9-1, including three victories this season.

Phillies 5, Expos 2

Chris James, Luis Aguayo and Mike Young each hit solo home runs as Philadelphia beat Montreal at Veterans Stadium and snapped the Expos' four-game winning streak.

Shane Rawley, 5-6, pitched a seven-hitter and struck out seven en route to his third complete game.

Hubie Brooks had three hits for the Expos, including the 1,000th of his career.

Astros 6, Braves 5

Denny Walling's eighth-inning single scored Kevin Bass from second base to break a 5-5 tie as Houston beat Atlanta at the Astrodome.

The victory moved Houston into a virtual first-place tie in the NL West with Los Angeles. The Astros trail the Dodgers by two percentage points.

Juan Agosto, 3-0, got the victory with one inning of relief. Nolan Ryan started for the Astros and struck out eight in seven innings to regain the NL lead from teammate Mike Scott. Ryan has 97 and Scott is second with 96.

Mets 2, Cardinals 1

Switch-hitter Lee Mazzilli broke an 0-for-13 slump as a right-handed hitter when he singled home the winning run in the 12th inning to lift New York over visiting St. Louis and snap the Mets' five-game losing streak.

Mazzilli bounced a single over charging third baseman Tom Lawless that easily scored Howard Johnson from second base with none out.

Starters Larry McWilliams of the Cardinals and David Cone of the Mets were brilliant, yet neither got a decision. Cone and winner Rany Myers combined to hold the Cardinals to just one hit after the fourth inning.

No-man's land bites Astros' Scott

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Mike Scott is the latest to learn that the ninth inning has become no-man's land for no-hit pitching efforts this season.

Scott was on the brink of his second career no-hitter Sunday when Atlanta's Ken Oberkfell lined a single to right field with two out in the ninth inning. Scott then retired Gerald Perry to end the game for his second career one-hitter and a 5-0 victory.

But it made Scott the sixth pitcher this season to lose a no-hitter in the ninth inning.

"There's no looking back, but I'm sure I will," Scott said. "Sure, I wanted to throw that no-hitter."

Scott retired the first 13 batters he faced until Dion James reached base on shortstop Rafael Ramirez's fielding error in the fifth inning, spoiling Scott's hope for a perfect game.

Ozzie Virgil reached base on third baseman Craig Reynolds' throwing error in the eighth inning.

James and Virgil were the only baserunners until Oberkfell lined a hit to right field in the ninth.

"I'm sure no-hitter was on everybody's mind late in the game," Oberkfell said. "His stuff was outstanding. He threw a great one-hit shutout."

Scott has been accused by several managers of scuffing baseballs, but Braves manager Russ Nixon never challenged Scott.

"It doesn't do any good unless you just want to get some time in front of the camera," Nixon said. "We've gotten pails of balls of his and others, but nobody cares or does anything, so why bother with it."

Instead, Nixon said he thought Scott pitched an outstanding game.

"I tip my hat to him. He's capable of doing that every time out," Nixon said. "We need more like him in baseball, but I know the hitters wouldn't say that."

Dale Murphy, who was hitless in three tries and was Scott's eighth, and final, strikeout victim, said Scott's control was at a peak.

"He had control and stayed ahead of the hitters," Murphy said. "When the pitcher gets behind, the hitter has a good chance. Today he pitched ahead the whole game and had good stuff."

Scott, 7-2, won his first six games this season, his best start ever. But he had thrown poorly and lost his last two decisions before Sunday's game. He pitched four innings in losing to Los Angeles 11-1 last Wednesday.

"When you build up a lot of innings, you just may need some rest, and after getting knocked out early against LA, I got some," Scott said. "I felt rested and better today, and the results were better."

Scott pitched a no-hitter against San Francisco on Sept. 25, 1986, that clinched the National League's Western Division title.

He had a one-hitter in a 4-0 victory over Los Angeles April 15, 1987.

The Astros maintained the traditional silence on the bench while Scott was working on his no-hitter.

ANGELS—

"Every level should have a coach who was a middle infielder. Mark has been with me for five years because he played the middle infield positions and he knows what to do in these situations.

"You have to give them credit for coming up with that shift," Midland manager Max Oliveras said. "When you're hot, you're hot."

Schweighoffer came into Monday's game having allowed 44 hits in 38 innings, but the righty threw four innings of one-hit relief after the Angels had rapped 17 hits off three previous San Antonio pitchers.

The Missions pulled out the win in the top of the 12th with a rally that started on a single by Walt McConnell. Bustabad immediately entered the game as a pinch-runner and advanced to second on a sacrifice bunt by Luis Lopez.

DiMichele then replaced Kurt Walker, 3-2, and intentionally walked pinch-hitter Jose Mota. Juan Bell hit into a fielders choice for the second out, but DiMichele uncorked a wild pitch that scored Bustabad.

The Missions took the early lead with one run in the first and second innings and two in the fourth off Midland starter Chris Collins. San Antonio then added two in the eighth and one in the ninth to seemingly have the game in hand, but for Munoz' uncharacteristic collapse in the ninth.

All Midland could manage before the ninth were single runs in the third, fifth and sixth innings.

San Antonio opened up a three-game lead over El Paso with Monday's win, since the Diablos lost 9-8 to Wichita. But Kennedy isn't counting his chickens despite there being only four games left in the first half of the season.

"I never take anything for granted," Kennedy said. "We can't worry about El Paso. We have to take care of ourselves and not look back."

The Angels had been tied with Wichita for third place in the West before Monday's loss.

ANGEL NOTES: Midland reliever Vinicio Cedeno was ejected by home plate umpire Kerwin Danley in the ninth inning after his second pitch to Huff sailed behind the Mission's back. DiMichele had been tossed under similar circumstances in the Angels' recent set at San Antonio.

On a happier note, Manto was named league Player of the Week after going 15-for-28 with four home runs and 13 RBI between June 5 and 11. Manto was hitting below .300 for much of the season, but was 10th in the TL at .315 going into Monday's game.

'The' Country Club lands Open limelight

By HANK WESCH
Copley News Service

BROOKLINE, Mass. — The United States Golf Association never forgets a date. Or a good place to hold a U.S. Open Championship.

As has been the case in recent Opens, the USGA granted the event for this year to a place where golf history can be commemorated and modern-day players can be congenially tormented in order to determine a worthy champion.

Welcome to The Country Club.

Yes, that's capital "T" The Country Club, and it's entitled to it because this was one of the first American country clubs ever formed.

It came about in 1882 by a group of Bostonians that wished escape from the city — hectic as it must have been then — to relax and ride horse in the country on the weekends.

Originally, the major sport at The Country Club was horse racing. But in 1892, golf was introduced and gradually became the diversion of choice.

It is said the outlines of the old race track can still be seen circling the first and 18th fairways. But it takes a bit of imagination, an expert eye, or an expert pointing to the area, for a first-time visitor to recognize traces of it.

While golf grew in popularity at The Country Club, enough that it was one of the five original members of the USGA, the onetime race course didn't become a course for golf history until 1913 when the U.S. Open was staged here.

A 20-year-old amateur named Francis Ouimet, who had grown up literally across the street from the course, threw the golf world into a tizzy and stirred interest in golf worldwide like it had never been stirred before.

First the sales trainee at a Boston sporting goods company, whose most significant previous achievement was a victory in the Massachusetts Amateur Championship, played his way into a tie with British professionals Harry Vardon and Ted Ray.

Then Ouimet outplayed the duo that has been characterized as the Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer of the time in an 18-hole playoff for the championship.

Ouimet employed a 10-year-old named Eddie Lowery as his caddie — it made for a touching, Mutt 'n Jeff-type picture as they stode the fairways, the lanky Ouimet and Lowery not shoulder high to him — and shot 72 in the playoff to 77 for Vardon and 78 for Ray.

The amateur beating the pros made huge headlines. And Ouimet's shots heard round the world are widely considered to be the spark that led to the U.S. developing more and better golfers than Europe — until the recent emergence of foreign players like Severiano Ballesteros, Bernhard Langer, Sandy Lyle and Greg Norman.

Monday (June 13), just over three months shy of the actual 75th anniversary of Oimet's feat, the U.S. Postal Service kicked off U.S. Open week by issuing a 25-cent commemorative stamp honoring Oimet at a ceremony on the club grounds.

Strange feels U.S. Open pressure

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Curtis Strange, identified by his peers as the American most likely to succeed, shoulders intense pressure going into the 88th United States Open Golf Championship.

"It's the most pressure I've ever had. I hope I can handle it," Strange said before a practice round for the American national championship that begins Thursday at The Country Club.

"I've always felt pressure should get you more prepared, make you play better," Strange said. "You want to use it positively. Sometimes it goes the other way, but you want to try to make the pressure work for you."

The situation arises from Strange's emergence as this country's premier player, as the man expected to take the lead in the battle against the major foreign stars who are touted as the leading contenders for the Open title.

"Curtis is absolutely the best player in the world right now," two-time U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin said after Strange's recent victory in the Memorial tournament.

Strange, prematurely graying at 33, set money-winning records in two of the last three seasons and now has 14 victories in a 12-season Tour career.

"He's certainly among the top three, up there with (Greg) Norman and (Sandy) Lyle," said Ray Floyd, winner of four major titles and recently appointed captain of the 1989 U.S. Ryder Cup team.

"Curtis' recent record is very, very good," said Jack Nicklaus, holder of a record 18 major professional tournaments. "But he hasn't yet won a major. He needs to do that to confirm his record.

"And I think he will. I think he'll win a major. I think he'll win more than one major. He's just coming into his prime years now. And his game is suited very well to the U.S. Open."

"Those are great compliments. And they're appreciated," said Strange, who has won five tournaments in the last 10 months, including two this season. "But I don't look at myself in that vein. I don't look at it that way. I just go out to play and do best I can.

"I've got a lot more things to think about than who's 1, 2 and 3. At the level I've reached, I know if I keep working, if I keep improving my game, if I keep the fire in my belly, I can get to the next level."

The next level is that of golf's recognized major championships, the U.S. and British Opens, the Masters and PGA.

"I want to win a major," Strange said. "I would love to win two or three. To do that, you have to win the first one.

"The Open in awful tough. It's a very important golf tournament for me. But it's only one golf tournament. You have to be realistic. The majors are more important. But you can't make them a live-or-die situation.

"They are important, but you just can't have it ruin yourself mentally for next month if don't play well. You don't want to destroy a career in one tournament.

ESPN loses NHL rights

MONTREAL (AP) — The National Hockey League on Monday voted to award its United States national television rights to Cablevision Systems Corp. for more than $50 million over three years.

Cablevision owns SportsChannel America, which operates regional cable networks in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, New England and Florida. SportsChannel will offer up to 50 regular-season games each year.

Cablevision replaces ESPN, which paid $24 million to broadcast NHL games the last three seasons.

Trade deficit shrinks 15.5 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit shrank to $9.89 billion in April, the lowest level since December 1984, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said that a steep drop in imports helped push the deficit down by 15.5 percent from the revised March figure of $11.7 billion.

Many analysts had feared that the deficit would widen in April, so the report showing it actually shrank to its lowest level since late 1984 sent investors scrambling to buy dollars and U.S. stocks and bonds. The buying wave pushed the dollar up sharply against key foreign currencies, wrenched down interest rates in the bond market and gave an early boost to Wall Street, where stock prices jumped.

The key Dow Jones industrial average of 30 stocks rose more than 20 points to 2,133 in the first hour, the highest range since the stock market crash in October.

"This is great news all the way around," said Jay Goldinger, a Los Angeles investment counselor. "We should heave a great sigh of relief. Everyone was prepared for a hurricane and we got bright sunshine and not a cloud in the sky."

The Reagan administration was also gloating over the figures. Commerce Undersecretary Robert Ortner said at a news briefing that the figures proved America's trade problems were finally on the way to being resolved.

"These figures are very encouraging," he said. "We are continuing to get an improvement in trade."

The government said that Americans' appetite for imports declined by 6.4 percent to $36.1 billion in April. Exports were also down, but by a smaller 2.5 percent to $26.2 billion. The trade deficit is the difference between imports and exports.

The improvement gave the country its first single-digit trade deficit since a $9.90 billion imbalance in August 1985.

The March deficit was originally reported as a single-digit figure as well at $9.7 billion. But that was before the department began adjusting to take into account seasonal factors.

After those adjustments, the March deficit grew to $11.70 billion. Beginning with the April report, the department will report only seasonally adjusted figures in the hope that the adjustments will smooth out some of the erratic swings that in past months have sent financial markets into a tailspin.

OPEC oil ministers reach agreement

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — OPEC oil ministers reached a final agreement today to extend their existing oil output pact for six months, Venezuelan oil minister Arturo Herandez Grisanti said.

"We have reached a final agreement," the minister said as he was leaving the morning session of the 13-nation cartel's regular midyear meeting. "We think the market will have a good perception of what we have done."

He said the United Arab Emirates' oil minister, Mana Saeed Oteiba, would return to the conference this afternoon, when the meeting was to reconvene, and said it was likely that Oteiba would sign the rollover.

Saudi Arabian oil minister Hisham Nazer also expressed optimism on that front and said, "As far as I'm concerned, the meeting is over."

Oteiba had left the conference on Sunday.

Asked if Iraq would remain out of the quota system, OPEC President Rilwanu Lukman, who also serves as Nigeria's oil minister, said, "It looks that way."

Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries ministers, who began their conference Saturday, gathered to decide whether to change the agreement to limit output to 15.06 million barrels a day.

The accord, which would have expired June 30, was designed to maintain oil prices at $18 a barrel, but it failed to achieve that goal.

In another development at today's meeting, Subroto, Indonesia's former oil minister, was named OPEC's secretary-general, a post which has been vacant since 1983, said Fawzi A. Shakshuki, who serves as Libya's oil minister.

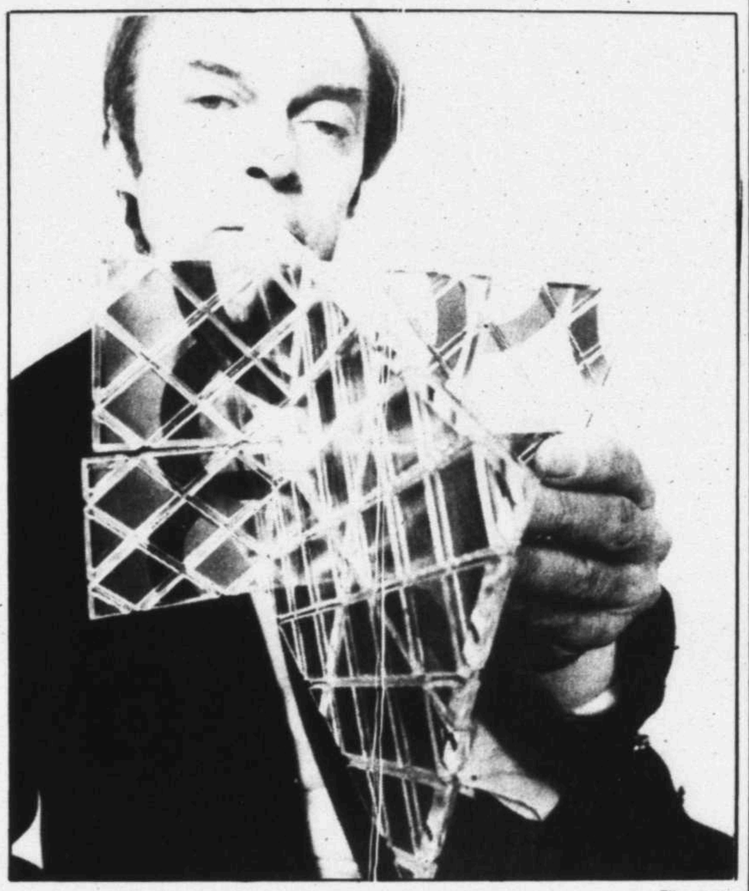

OPEC ministers had haggled over whether to extend the production accord by three months or by six months, sources said. On Monday, they held informal talks in small groups, which is how the ministers seem to prefer to negotiate.

One OPEC faction wanted to cut production to push weak oil prices up to the target level. A minority, led by Saudi Arabia, wanted to increase production or maintain it at current levels to take advantage of an increase in demand expected in the second half of the year and to maintain OPEC's market share.

Iraq refused to sign the current accord because it wants a quota equal to that of Iran, with which it has been at war since 1980.

OPEC President Rilwanu Lukman, Nigeria's oil minister, said Monday that the ministers were working hard on a compromise to bring Iraq back into the fold.

Iran has a daily production quota of 2.369 million barrels. Iraq, which previously had a quota of 1.54 million barrels a day, is producing 2.6 million barrels daily. Success on that front would lower Iraq's production, which could help boost oil prices.

County arranges mortgage refinancing

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

A refinancing arrangement announced Monday by the Midland County Housing Finance Corp. could relieve about 130 county homeowners from worries about balloon payments or possible foreclosures.

Some of the 11¼-percent mortgages created from a $15 million bond issue in 1980 have begun to mature, leaving homeowners to ponder an uncertain future about their home financing.

"Up until now, the best we have been able to tell them is to stay current with their payments," said MCHFC president Steve Davidson. "Now we have something more to say."

The corporation has arranged, in conjunction with Commonwealth Mortgage Co. of Houston and the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., for refinancing of outstanding loan balances of home mortgages made under Series B of the county's 1980 housing bond issue.

Series B — one of four series issued during the year — had a seven-year maturity, while the other three offered full-term 20- and 30-year mortgages.

"Borrowers will not have to requalify for the loans, but employment will be verified and the payment record on the loan must be acceptable to the FHLMC," Davidson said.

New loans will be limited to the original loan value, and the notes can include new closing costs, prepaid interest and escrow balances. Although an interest rate for the Commonwealth program has not been set, it will not be higher than the existing 11¼ percent rate, Davidson said.

"The corporation was not required to make any arrangements for refinancing the mortgages, but we felt a moral obligation to do what we could," said County Commissioner and MCHFC board member Durward Wright.

"We wanted to protect the equity of county residents and allow them to continue to make payments without having to find new financing on their own," Wright said.

One important consideration of the program is that owner-occupied homes will not require appraisal, which could have forced mortgage holders to come up with additional "up-front" cash to pay the loan down to a financeable level, Davidson noted.

"The program does require individual initiative of the affected homeowners who must call Commonwealth Mortgage in Houston to be sure they are included," said Wright.

Commonwealth will accept collect calls from borrowers at 713/439-7666.

Borrowers must continue to make payments through their current mortgage company to keep it current until the refinancing is completed, Davidson said. Even though some of the seven-year loans will not mature until later in the year, the MCHFC board urged homeowners to contact Commonwealth as soon as possible to ensure their eligibility for the program.

Mortgage holders who no longer reside in the house they financed with the bond money will be required to have the property appraised and the new loan will not be allowed to exceed 70 percent of the appraisal.

Wright recalled the original program was initiated to build the local tax base and offer mortgage money to low- and middle-income families below the prevailing 15 percent mortgage rate.

He added that eligibility was limited to borrowers with adjusted gross income below $40,000 and that the majority of homes financed through the Series B program were in the $60,000 to $90,000 range.

Given the prevailing mortgage market of tight money, high closing costs and 15 percent rates, "the bond money went very fast," Wright said.

Business starts show seventh straight fall

NEW YORK (AP) — A continuing decline in the number of new U.S. businesses reflects the nation's changing economic profile and not necessarily broad economic problems, according to a business information concern.

The number of new domestic businesses declined by 6.6 percent to 53,382 in the first three months of the year — the seventh straight quarterly drop — from 57,158 in first quarter 1987, according to Dun & Bradstreet Corp.

Dun & Bradstreet officials cited the maturing of the nation's economic expansion, now in its sixth year, and a shift from consumerism to export-driven growth as factors in the decline of business starts, a barometer of economic activity and money-making opportunities.

Joseph W. Duncan, Dun & Bradstreet's corporate economist and chief statistician, said the number of new retailing businesses fell because of expectations that consumer demand will weaken, and startups of new service businesses fell in response to increased competition and corporate budget reductions.

Retailing and service concerns account for about half of all new businesses.

"While the current surge in U.S. exports will create new business opportunities in some sectors, existing manufacturers are the primary beneficiaries," Duncan said in a report of the latest figures.

Business starts are considered important because they signal the level of entrepreneurial activity and perceived opportunities for profit. But a persistent decline in starts does not necessarily indicate a broader economic problem, said Reid Gearhart, a Dun & Bradstreet spokesman.

Dun & Bradstreet data indicated first-quarter business starts fell in seven of the nine major industry sectors. The largest decrease came in the finance-insurance-real estate category, which fell 9.8 percent. Retail business starts dropped 8.1 percent and services fell 5.7 percent.

Starts also fell in the construction, manufacturing, wholesale and transportation sectors, with decreases of between 5 percent and 8 percent.

Increases were seen in agriculture, up 11.5 percent, and mining, up 2.3 percent.

"Both mining, which includes oil and gas extraction businesses, and agriculture appear to be turning the corner after several years of severe stress," Duncan said.

Despite a drop in manufacturing-related business starts, there was evidence that export growth was encouraging some entrepreneurs, Duncan said. An analysis of manufacturing starts showed significant increases among motor vehicle and equipment makers, metal producers and office equipment manufacturers.

Icahn says he put aside funds for bid

Icahn

NEW YORK (AP) — Financier Carl C. Icahn said Monday that he had put $310.2 million into an escrow account, promising it would be distributed to Texaco Inc. shareholders if he fails to come up with financing for his $60-per-share bid for the oil giant.

In a statement, Icahn also said he had signed a "bare bones" merger agreement providing for $60 per share in cash to each Texaco stockholder, and that it had been sent to the White Plains, N.Y.,-based company.

"If Texaco executes the merger agreement, we will terminate our proxy contest and withdraw our slate of nominees," the statement said.

A Texaco spokeswoman said the company had no immediate comment on Icahn's latest move.

In late trading on the New York Stock Exchange, Texaco stood at $50.25 a share, down $1.62½ per share. Since Icahn launched his bid last month, the stock has remained at levels $9-to-$10 below his offering price, reflecting Wall Street's lack of confidence in Icahn's offer, analysts said.

Texaco's largest shareholder, Icahn has offered to pay $12.4 billion for the 207 million Texaco shares he does not already own. He paid about $1.2 billion for his existing stake of about 36 million shares. The offer puts a value of $14.6 billion on the nation's third-largest oil company.

The takeover specialist originally offered to put $100 million in escrow to ease market suspicions that he could not come up with the money to buy the company.

But the company refused to put the offer to a vote of shareholders, prompting Icahn to follow through on a previous threat to field a slate of five candidates, including himself, for the Texaco' 14-member board. The proxy fight deadline is Friday when it holds its annual meeting in Tulsa, Okla.

He has said he wants the seats on Texaco's board so he can push it into putting his offer before the shareholders.

Last week, he upped the $100 million ante to $300 million, and promised it would be distributed to Texaco shareholders — instead of going into Texaco's treasury — in the event of his failure to back up his offer.

Texaco dismissed that move as changing "exactly nothing."

"Because he has attached such a jungle of strings, conditions and red tape to his so-called 'guarantee,' it doesn't matter what number he attaches to it — he's never put up a dime and we are convinced he would never have to," Texaco said.

Dollar quiet in pre-report trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was little changed in Europe this morning as markets awaited the release later in the day of U.S. trade data. Gold made slight gains.

In Tokyo the dollar fell 0.14 yen to a closing 125.05. Later, in London, it was quoted at 125.12 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Monday:

— 1.4414 Swiss francs, down from 1.4424

— 5.8210 French francs, up from 5.7265

— 1.9349 Dutch guilders, up from 1.9345

— 1.281.00 Italian lire, down from 1,281.75

— 1.2185 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2203

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.8150, compared with $1.8165 Monday.

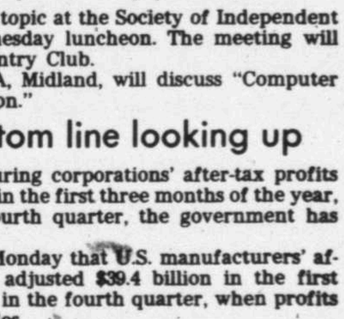

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $450.20 a troy ounce, compared with late Monday's $449.00. At mid-morning Tuesday, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $450.80.

In Zurich, the bid price was $450.70, up from $448.50 late Monday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, where trading resumed following a long weekend, gold closed down $5.41 at a bid $452.58.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $6.98 a troy ounce, down from Monday's $7.02.

Stocks hold own before trade report

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market seesawed in a tight range Monday but still managed to hold its ground ahead of a key report on the nation's trade deficit.

The Dow Jones average of 30 blue chips fell 2.31 points to close at 2,099.40.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 10-to-9 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 769 issues up, 696 down and 481 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the NYSE came to 125.31 million shares, down from 155.71 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trading at regional exchanges and on the over-the-counter market, totaled 151.717 million shares.

The Dow started off the week about eight points shy of its post-crash high, and traders began the session by cashing in on the previous weeks' gains. The Dow fell about 10 points before turning upward and continuing its flirtation with the 2,100 mark.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $738 million, or 0.03 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained 0.13 to 153.02.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials rose 0.30 to 313.92, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 0.17 at 271.43.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 1.19 to 308.14. The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 386.81, up 0.56.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Commissioner Sharp to address producers

Texas Railroad Commissioner John Sharp will be the guest speaker at Wednesday's luncheon meeting of the West Texas Producers Forum. The luncheon will be at the Petroleum Club, beginning at 11:45 a.m.

Cost of the meeting will be $12 per person.

Computer applications will be the topic at the Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists' Wednesday luncheon. The meeting will begin at 11:30 a.m. at Midland Country Club.

Kevin Schepel, of Exxon Co. USA, Midland, will discuss "Computer Applications in Formation Evaluation."

Manufacturers' bottom line looking up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Manufacturing corporations' after-tax profits averaged 6.3 cents per dollar of sales in the first three months of the year, up a sharp 43 percent from the fourth quarter, the government has reported.

The Commerce Department said Monday that U.S. manufacturers' after-tax profits totaled a seasonally adjusted $39.4 billion in the first quarter, compared with $27.4 billion in the fourth quarter, when profits averaged 4.4 cents per dollar of sales.

Bank subsidiaries can underwrite securities

Associated Press

The Supreme Court says banks can use subsidiaries to underwrite and deal in some securities, reaffirming a lower court decision that such activities do not violate a Depression-era law separating commercial and investment banking.

The justices on Monday also let stand a ruling that allows states to indirectly tax interest paid to banks and other financial institutions from investments in Federal Home Loan Bank bonds.

The court also ruled the government may be forced to pay damages when a vaccine it licenses causes the disease it was intended to prevent, and it barred states from banning all direct-mail advertisements sent by lawyers to potential clients.

House moves to clamp down PCB loophole

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation to close a loophole in the regulation of polychlorinated biphenyls, the highly toxic chemicals whose manufacture was banned in 1976, has been approved by the House.

The bill, sent to the Senate Monday, would require brokers, the middlemen who arrange for the transportation and destruction of PCBs, to be registered, keep records and demonstrate financial responsibility.

Rep. Thomas Luken, D-Ohio, said the legislation is a response to reports that unregulated PCB brokers have handled the chemicals improperly and in some instances have gone bankrupt, leaving power companies and communities to clean up PCB storage sites.

DEVELOPMENT

■ GRAND BANKS PLANS PROGRAM IN MITCHELL FIELD. Four new producers are planned for the Sharon Ridge (1700) field of Mitchell County by Grand Banks Energy Co., Midland. Three are on the J.L. Strain lease, and one is in the Empire-Milkls lease. Proposed depth for all four is 1,700 ft.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Banks free to charge fee on deposit certificates

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I recently redeemed a $1,000 certificate of deposit on its maturity date. The bank sent me two checks — one for the correct amount of interest, the other for $998. A $2 "collection fee" was deducted from my $1,000.

Is this procedure followed just by some banks? I have had CDs at other banks and savings and loan associations on which no fee of any kind was ever charged for redeeming on the maturity date. I have since redeemed another CD at the same bank and the same $2 fee was charged.

Doyle

A. You've really answered your own question. In this era of deregulation, banks and S&Ls are free to charge whatever fees they please. While collection fees such as you ran up against are rare, some banks and S&Ls do levy them.

However, a bank or S&L can't hit CD customers with redemption fees or any other charges completely out of the blue. Each CD is a contract. You agree to leave money on deposit for a certain length of time; the bank or S&L agrees to pay you interest at a specified percentage rate. Both sides must abide by the contract, which usually contains additional provisions.

One of those provisions might spell out a collection fee. Or, without going into detail, it might say the bank or S&L has the right to charge fees. The latter is more likely, because it gives the bank or S&L more leeway.

That's why it's wise to check all provisions of a CD before depositing your money.

Q. One of my bank CDs is about to mature. If I transfer it to another bank or S&L, will I receive the full amount or will a transfer fee be withheld?

A. That depends on the policy of the bank at which you have the CD and the provisions of the particular CD. CD contracts often contain language permitting the bank or S&L to charge fees or waive them. When a bank or S&L has that choice, it's more likely to levy a fee when the CD money is being moved to a competitive institution.

There will be a charge if the money will be transferred by wire to a different bank or S&L. Billions of dollars are moved that way every business day and costs are involved. You can't expect the bank from which you are transferring the money to swallow the expense. But the bank or S&L to which you move the money might pick up the wire transfer cost — if you can make that arrangement in advance.

Q. The bank at which I have my individual retirement account is in financial troubles and recently was taken over by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. The bank says my IRA is insured up to $100,000 by FDIC, separate from my other CDs, money market account and other deposits. They also gave me a brochure to that effect.

Is this separate IRA insurance coverage guaranteed by FDIC? Or is is just a policy of this bank, which might be changed if the bank fails?

A. Don't fret. FDIC insures your IRA, as it does Keogh self-employed retirement plans, at each bank up to $100,000. It's not an arrangement of each bank. It cannot be changed. Your money is safe, up to the limit of FDIC coverage, even if that bank goes belly up and is closed. All this should be explained in the literature the bank gave you.

The same thing applies to Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. coverage at S&Ls.

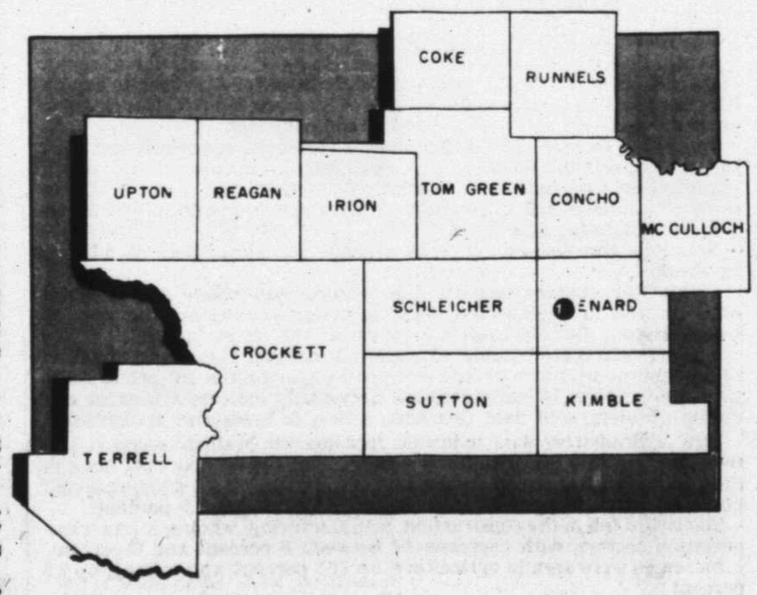

Q. I am considering turning my investments, amounting to about $300,000, over to a bank's trust department. With FDIC coverage stopping at $100,000, wouldn't that be a risk?

A. Except for CDs and other deposits, there is no FDIC coverage on trusts. However, securities and other things you place in a trust belong to you. They are not part of the bank's assets and cannot be claimed by the bank's creditors if the bank fails.

Q. How can I find an attorney who specializes in trusts, especially one who won't charge an arm and a leg?

A. Ask your local local bar association for a number of names. And ask each lawyer on the list what he or she charges?

Recent scandals boost popularity of 24-hour business radio

Creators say stock market crash also helped create demand

By JAMES HIRSCH
New York Times News Service

Funny things have happened to the dull world of business in recent years: scandals embarrassed Wall Street, corporate raiders shook up board rooms and investors made and lost billions of dollars in the stock market. In short, business became more interesting. And that is a major reason why round-the-clock business radio programming will soon be available to stations across the country.

The first all-business radio station in the country, a small AM station in Los Angeles called KMNY "Money Radio," began last year, and now the station's founders and principal partners, Vera Gold and Edward Schwartz, plan to syndicate its programming starting in August.

Two other groups — Business News Broadcasting Inc. in Boston and Business Radio Network Inc. in Colorado Springs — are also trying to syndicate 24-hour business programming. They say their formats will be on the air within several months; stations can buy the programming for the full day or in smaller blocks.

Each company said it was involved in negotiations with dozens of stations, mostly in large markets, but no final agreements have been reached.

Many radio and television stations have expanded their business reports in recent years, but the more comprehensive coverage proposed by these three companies would be a far more dramatic step. The simultaneous appearance of these programs can be credited to improved satellite transmission technology and to "the general glamorization of business news," said Kenneth J. Barnes, editor of Radio and Records magazine in Los Angeles. "The Wall Street scandals, the movie 'Wall Street,' the crash — all created a higher consciousness for business news, and these companies want to meet that need, real or imagined."

MOST RADIO analysts, including Barnes, are skeptical, maintaining the long-held industry attitude that radio is better suited for rock 'n' roll and coverage of police stake-outs and baseball games. The skeptics say that local stations will be unwilling to surrender attractive drive-time slots to all-business programmers and that there will not be enough listeners at other times.

But developers of business formats say increased numbers of investors, business graduates and entrepreneurs has created a demand — particularly since the stock market crash — for immediate, accessible financial information.

"We cut out the rapes and murders and sensationalism of the news and give what the corporate executive needs," said Mrs. Gold, executive vice president of KMNY.

The market for financial news programming lies among the 6,000 AM stations in the United States, many of which have struggled for years to find a niche in the face of competition from FM and its superior sound, and from television.

Increasingly, radio stations, following the success of trade magazines, are airing programs that appeal to specific audiences. Business news programming should attract particularly affluent listeners, Barnes said.

John H. Knowles Jr., vice president of marketing for Business News Broadcasting, said that potential advertisers include brokerage firms and computer companies that do business-to-business sales.

"WE'RE TELLING AM stations, 'Here's a way to reach a small audience but one that advertisers want to talk to,'" said Michael S. Lowery, chief executive of Business Radio Network.

Advertising will provide 90 percent of the revenues for the companies offering the business formats.

The three business news formats, still being fine-tuned, appear to be similar. They will be fast-paced and filled with market summaries, currency exchange rates, live interviews, reports from abroad and longer analyses.

Business News Broadcasting spent more than $12 million on start-up costs and probably will not make money for two years, he said. The staff will include 25 reporters, mostly in Boston, New York, Chicago and Washington.

Business Radio Network's 20 reporters will be in New York, Chicago, Dallas, Los Angeles, London and Tokyo. The network will offer sports and weather reports as well as information on corporate management and investment strategies.

The company said it hoped to make a profit by its second year.

Mrs. Gold of KMNY said the station had 16 reporters in its Los Angeles studio and 100 stringers in the United States and abroad. After 14 months with all-business programming, the station has 1 percent of the Los Angeles-area audience, Mrs. Gold said.

The station did not show a profit this year, she said, only because of the costs of developing its syndicated service.

Houston bankruptcies rise 3 percent

HOUSTON (AP) — The number of bankruptcy filings in Houston increased by 3 percent for the first quarter of 1988 when compared to the previous quarter, a study released by the accounting firm of Price Waterhouse says.

The number of quarterly filings were up 13 to 429, compared to 416 in the fourth quarter of 1987.

"While the overall number of business bankruptcies increased slightly during the first quarter, various sectors of Houston's economy showed signs of improvement," said Donald E. Thomas, partner in charge of reorganization and litigation services.

During the quarter, there were 15 oil and gas bankruptcy filings down 32 percent from 22 in the fourth quarter. Most of the companies were small operations with less than $1 million in reported assets and liabilities.

The filings came as the U.S. and Texas rig counts declined as a result of normal seasonal factors.

Houston's petrochemical industry is facing improved economic conditions, Thomas said. Low crude oil prices are helping to moderate product costs, and declining exchange rates have made domestic products more competitive on foreign markets.

Bankruptcy statistics also improved in the real estate and construction industries where bankruptcy filings declined for the fifth consecutive quarter. There were 92 filings in the first quarter, compared to 108 in the fourth quarter of 1987 and down over 40 percent from the peak of 160 recorded during the fourth quarter of 1986.

"The decrease in real estate and construction failures appears to confirm a consensus that the real estate market has stabilized," Thomas said. "Excess office and retail space may take years to absorb, but current signs indicate that the market is firming."

In other sectors, manufacturing bankruptcies declined 33 percent from the prior quarters. Retail bankruptcies fell slightly from 158 to 155 during the first quarter — the lowest in almost two years. Filings in personal and professional services increased from 22 to 12 in the fourth quarter.

Safeway selling Houston region stores

HOUSTON (AP) — Safeway Stores Inc. is selling the 99 stores in its Houston region to a local investment firm, sources close to the company say.

"Safeway, of course, is going through a restructuring. There has to be a sale of assets related to our leveraged buyout. Until now, it's been business as usual in Houston," Safeway spokesman John Shepherd told the Houston Chronicle Monday.

Safeway sold 140 stores in its North Texas Texas region last year.

The grocery chain has struggled to survive in the competitive Houston marketplace in recent years, and at one time the grocery giant obtained wage concessions from its unions to make the Houston Safeways more profitable.

The sale of the Houston stores has been rumored for months. H.E. Butt Grocery Co. of San Antonio and a group of Safeway employees were mentioned as possible buyers.

The managers of the Houston Safeways were called to a meeting Monday and given a statement from the company that said, "Today's announcement of an agreement to sell our stores in the Houston region to Duncan, Cook & Co. brings to an end all speculation regarding the future.... Duncan, Cook & Co. intends to operate the division using the current management and work force."

Shepherd and other Safeway employees refused further comment Monday and said questions would be answered during a news conference today in Houston.

Debbie Rog, public affairs manager for Safeway in Houston, did not return phone calls to The Associated Press Monday evening. Officials at Safeway headquarters in Oakland, Calif., also could not be reached for further comment.

Safeway's Houston region stretches from the Austin to Waco to Beaumont area. About 50 Safeway stores are located in the Houston region.

Icahn's response Monday apparently was designed to stifle such criticism.

His statement said $310,201,955 in cash was "placed in escrow with Fleet National Bank of Providence, R.I., on behalf of the Icahn affiliated companies."

"The guarantee is $1.50 per share in cash to all Texaco shareholders of record for a special shockholders meeting we are seeking," the statement said.

Icahn said the escrow would be forfeited, if at the time of the special stockholders meeting the financing is not in place.

As with his previous offers, he said the escrow would not be forfeited if by the time of the meeting another entity makes a legitimate bid for more than $60 per share, or if the Internal Revenue Service fails to give required approval to Icahn's proposal.

"We are making our financing guarantee payable directly to Texaco stockholders because we have absolutely no confidence in Texaco's exising management," Icahn said.

On Friday, Icahn said he was forming a new holding company to act as his sole vehicle for acquisitions, including a possible hostile takeover bid for Texaco.

The Icahn group of companies also will contribute equity to the holding company, including its 36.1 million shares of Texaco and its interests in Trans World Airlines Inc. and ACF, a leasing company.

Icahn stated that if his slate was elected but a majority of the Texaco board refused to allow a shareholder vote on the offer, he would consider making a hostile bid for it through the new holding company at yet to be determined terms.

DEFICIT

The original February deficit, which was higher than expected, sent the dollar plunging in value around the world and pushed the Dow Jones industrial average down by 101 points, its fifth worst loss ever.

The markets were not particularly cheered by the March trade improvement, because it showed a steep rise in imports along with a record level of export sales. Financial investors worried that the big rise in imports indicated that faster domestic demand would lead to higher inflation.

The big decline in April imports was expected to ease fears that the U.S. economy is overheating.

For the first four months of the year, the U.S. trade deficit was running at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $141.8 billion. If this trend holds for the rest of the year, it would be a sharp improvement from last year's record trade deficit of $170.3 billion.

The Reagan administration and many private economists are looking for a smaller trade improvement for the whole year of around $150 billion.

The good trade news was especially welcome by the administration as the president plans to travel to Toronto on Sunday for his eighth and final economic summit with world leaders. The administration plans to use the trade improvement as evidence that Reagan's free market economic program is working and should be adopted by other countries.

The April improvement in imports reflected an 8 percent drop in foreign purchases of capital goods, which fell to $7.9 billion. Purchases of foreign cars were also down, falling 4.6 percent to $7.3 billion while purchases of other consumer goods dropped 7 percent to $7.7 billion.

Oil imports rose in April by 3.5 percent to $3.35 billion.

GENERAL NEWS

Afghan capital at same time capitalist, communist

By EARLEEN FISHER

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — When the dust storms come, Kabul vanishes from sight behind a white cloud that grittily obscures all sense of what is and is not real.

Then the winds die down, and the dust suspended in the air drifts to the ground. The sun breaks through and the city of mud brick houses and 2 million people shimmers back into view.

It's a bit like stepping into a magic spell and visiting "Brigadoon," the Scottish Highlands town in the Broadway musical that appears for a day once every hundred years before fading away into the mist again.

Kabul has that same sense.

The distinction between reality and fantasy blurs.

The Afghan capital is at once communist and capitalist.

The government of the People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan is one of the Soviet Union's most successful attempts to impose communist rule on a Moslem nation.

But here, the United States has entered the fray by supporting and helping arm the anti-communist guerrillas who are fighting Afghan and Soviet soldiers.

And in spite of the Soviet-style government, Kabul is a capitalist city. Dollars are avidly sought by merchants who sell everything from century-old handwoven Afghan carpets to gaudy lace stockings from Far East sweatshops.

Kabul is a city full of life and, increasingly, of death.

Teen-age girls strive for the latest styles as their tailors stitch government-issue blue cotton into school uniforms patterned on the skirts and jackets shown in European fashion magazines.

The markets bustle with more traditionally clad women wearing the "chadri," an all-enveloping veil that descends in pleats from a skullcap with only a coarse mesh panel over the eyes to let the wearer see out.

Small boys in pajama-like tunics and pants turn cartwheels in grassy traffic circles, dodging sprays of water from tanker trucks that keep the geraniums blossoming.

At night, streets are virtually deserted. The rare motorist is suddenly stopped by an Afghan soldier who emerges from the gloom to wave his rifle and check the traveler's identity.

Soviet soldiers have started withdrawing from other cities as part of a pullout ending the Kremlin's eight-year military intervention. But they still surround Kabul with a ring of tanks, armored personnel carriers and fortified bunkers.

Guerrilla rockets hit Kabul several times a week, usually at night. Often they land near Afghan and Soviet military posts, but rockets are notoriously inaccurate and many of the casualties are civilians asleep in their homes.

One of these victims was carried into a hospital X-ray room a few days ago. The white-haired man lay unconscious on a narrow bed of ropes woven across a wooden frame. His right eye was closed, his left concealed by a bloody bandage. Blood stains covered the shoulders of his brown tunic, and one leg lay at an improbable angle under a red plaid blanket.

He had been brought to the hospital by three men wearing turbans, baggy trousers and layers of robes.

Death is tangible at Tapa-e-Shuhadan, "the Hill of the Martyrs," Kabul's cemetery for government troops who have died in the decade of fighting the mujahedeen, or Moslem holy warriors.

Tapa-e-Shuhadan is off-limits much of the time, even to mourners, for it is in a military zone. A visit to the hill quickly reveals the reason: Tapa-e-Shuhadan sits atop a huge ammunition dump, evident from the concrete doorways and little ventilation chimneys built into the slopes below the graves.

The members of the Peace, Solidarity and Friendship Organization who escort foreign visitors to the cemtery were at a loss to say how many men are buried there. But a rough reckoning, achieved by counting graves in one quadrant and extrapolating, made 10,000 seem a conservative estimate.

These escorted visits add to the blurring of reality and unreality in Kabul. But there are other encounters that seem genuine, like the one with a man in a crocheted white skullcap who declared himself a "mujahed," one of those seeking to oust the government.

He spat on the ground to express his contempt for the Afghan government, communism and the Soviet Union.

Speaking in Arabic he said he had learned from the Koran, Islam's holy book, and from three pilgrimmages to Mecca in Saudi Arabia — one of the countries arming the mujahedeen, he said: "God willing, the brotherhood of Moslems will see victory in Afghanistan."

Sweden shows off contribution to American life

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — It hardly merits a mention in most history books, but Sweden is celebrating the 350th anniversary of its short-lived colonization of the New World and Swedes' contribution to the American way of life.

Marking that long-ago foothold, Sweden is putting on a traveling show of their emigrants' contributions that range from the zipper and Coca Cola bottle to ball bearings and monkey wrenches.

The year-long celebration began with a 14-city U.S. tour by King Carl XVI Gustaf and Queen Silvia.

Swedish settlers disembarked on the shores of the Delaware River on March 29, 1638, 18 years after the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock, Mass. At its peak, "New Sweden" had 500 people, but within 17 years the Swedes lost their colony to the Dutch who then lost it to the British.

"It's not much to celebrate. We are a peaceful people and even then we had no knack for colonial work," said historian Per Sorbom of Uppsala University.

"But it's a good excuse to make Sweden a little more known in the United States and to give Sweden an identity," said Sorbom, who has organized an exhibition of inventions and innovations by Swedish emigrants.

Sorbom's "It's Swedish" exhibition consists of about 1,000 exhibitions, music festivals, seminars and other events planned in the United States for the celebrations called "New Sweden 88."

Among the Swedish immigrants are many whose names, but not their contributions, have been forgotten:

Alexander Samuelsson. A glassblower from Goteborg who emigrated in 1883, he won a design contest for a company selling its fizzy drink at soda fountains.

Coca Cola wanted a bottle "that would be recognizable even if it was broken in the gutter," said Sorbom, and Samuelsson's design is still in use.

Justus Sjoberg. He moved to Chicago from Goteborg and changed his name to Seeburg. He is credited with inventing the parking meter and the jukebox.

Gideon Sundbach. In the early 1900s he patented the modern zipper.

Court's ruling on vaccine suits may have limited impact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court has reduced the government's protection against lawsuits by victims of defective federally licensed vaccines, but some authorities say the ruling's impact may be limited.

The justices ruled unanimously Monday that the parents of Kevan Berkovitz, a Pennsylvania boy crippled by polio, may sue the government.

But Ronald J. Greene, a lawyer for Lederle Laboratories which manufactures polio vaccine, said the impact is unclear.

The decision appears to cover all government-licensed vaccines and possibly other drugs as well, he said. But he added that the standards enunciated by the court may affect few cases.

"The facts alleged here are unusual and I don't know whether they (the Berkovitz family) can prove them," he said. "These are circumstances that are unlikely to arise" very often.

Health experts, meanwhile, said the nation's common vaccines pose little risk.

"In terms of serious side effects, it's far better to be vaccinated than to get the disease," said G. Scott Giebink, professor of pediatrics at the University of Minnesota Medical School.

Polio paralysis results only from about one out of every 3.2 million doses of oral polio vaccine, he said.

In another example, about one in 110,000 children who get the Diphtheria-Tetanus-Pertussis vaccine develop a brain dysfunction that can include seizures. It is usually temporary. Only about one in 310,000 vaccinated children suffer permanent damage that includes mental retardation or movement difficulties, according to the Centers for Disease Control.

Reagan administration lawyers had warned that exposing the government to financial liability for faulty vaccines could have serious consequences.

The Justice Department said the threat of big-money damages against the government could threaten availability of lifesaving vaccines by prompting federal officials to reconsider the approval of polio vaccine, and delay or withhold approval for new vaccines.

The Food and Drug Administration, which licenses more than 40 vaccines, declined to comment on the ruling.

A financial analyst said the decision may be good news for drug manufacturers.

"This is very good for the vaccine companies, but there are not that many of them," said Richard Vieter, a drug industry analyst with Merrill Lynch Co. "One might look ahead to vaccines such as AIDS vaccines and other bio-tech applications, though.

"It seems the government will have to exert quite a bit more care in the approval process to prevent placing the government in a liability situation," Vieter said.

Kevan Berkovitz was two months old in May 1979 when his pediatrician in Charleroi, Pa., gave him a dose of Orimune, a polio vaccine made by Lederle.

Orimune, a form of Sabin oral vaccine, was licensed by the government in 1963.

Kevan was stricken with polio within a month after taking the vaccine and the U.S. Communicable Disease Center determined he contracted the disease from the vaccine.

The boy, now 9, is paralyzed from the neck down and uses a respirator to help him breathe. Monday's ruling provides an opportunity in court to seek compensation for him from the government.

His lawyer, Ellen Viakely of Pittsburgh, said of the ruling, "It's a case where the government knew that this particular polio vaccine violated its own regulatory safety standards. By the government's own regulatory standards, this vaccine was unsafe. But it licensed it anyway."

Flag bears stars from each state

PITTSBURGH (AP) — An American flag bearing stars given by each of the nation's 50 governors was hoisted at dawn today to celebrate Flag Day.

Each governor or their representative cut out a cloth white star and sent it to the National Flag Foundation for the 10- by 19-foot flag, which was raised at Flag Plaza near Pittsburgh's Civic Arena.

"This U.S. Flag is the most representative of the 50 states of the union," said George Cahill, executive director of the non-profit group that promotes the flag and American patriotism.

About 100 people, including about 50 Boy Scouts, attended the brief ceremony at 5:49 a.m.

Senate adjusting welfare bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A landmark welfare bill aimed at using education, jobs and training to help people break out of poverty is undergoing final adjustments as senators try to avert a presidential veto of the $2.6 billion, five-year measure.

The Family Security Act sponsored by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., reached the Senate floor Monday after 18 months in the making. The painstaking groundwork produced a bipartisan bill co-sponsored by nearly two-thirds of the Senate.

"This bill is not far off from what I find most people want," said Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., Republican floor manager of the measure. "This is as good an effort as we're likely to get out of this Congress."

A more expensive House measure passed Dec. 17.

Under the Moynihan bill, states would be required to set up education, training and work programs and include as many participants as they could afford.

Besides putting more welfare recipients to work, the bill would force more absentee parents to pay child support and require states to provide at least six months of annual welfare benefits to poor households with two parents.

Government checks would be a last resort, an income supplement reserved for when parents could not contribute an adequate amount in child support or earned wages. The bill would reverse the current system, under which the check is the central and usually only element.

"Never has the Senate considered so fundamental a redirection of the (welfare) system," Moynihan said.

Key senators and their staffs started meeting Monday with administration aides to discuss White House demands for several new provisions. A presidential veto was threatened if administration demands were not met.

The administration wants the bill to give states broader authority to use federal money for experimental welfare schemes; to require that a certain percentage of welfare recipients participate in jobs programs; and to set up a new mandatory workfare program that Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said could cost as much as $900 million.

Aid to Families with Dependent Children, the current welfare system, was begun in 1935 to help widows with children to raise. The joint federal-state program now serves 3.7 million families, including 7 million children, and the recipients are no longer widows — they are for the most part single or divorced mothers.

The nation is "trying to make do with a Rube Goldberg welfare system developed during the Depression to meet the needs of a society that no longer exists," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. "Let's not lose this opportunity to move our country forward."

FBI agents could be disciplined, sources say

WASHINGTON (AP) — An internal FBI report recommends disciplinary action against some bureau personnel in the probe of domestic groups opposed to Reagan administration policies in Central America, government sources familiar with the report said today.

The internal review urged that some FBI employees at headquarters in Washington and offices elsewhere in the country be punished for the way they carried out their surveillance campaign, said the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

It could not be determined how high up in the FBI's hierarchy were those recommended for discipline or what the recommended punishments were as a result of the probe of the Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador. The New York Times reported today that action had been urged against FBI officials and more than one field agent.

FBI Director William Sessions has the recommendations under review.

Meanwhile, a House Judiciary panel is considering writing tougher standards for FBI terrorism investigations in the United States to prevent the bureau from violating the rights of legitimate domestic political groups.

Lawmakers concede that election-year politics probably will delay action until 1989. But during a hearing on Monday into alleged FBI abuses in an investigation of anti-Reagan administration activists, members of the House Judiciary subcommittee on civil and constitutional rights agreed with witnesses who recommended new controls on such investigations.

The FBI conducted much of its probe of CISPES, a U.S. group opposed to Reagan administration policies in Central America, under guidelines that are supposed to cover investigations of international terrorism.

Using those guidelines allowed the bureau to conduct widespread surveillance of political rallies and individuals including nuns, union officials and college professors opposed to administration policy.

Witnesses and lawmakers at Monday's hearing said there should be just one set of guidelines instead of the current two — domestic and international — governing such investigations.

The standard, witnesses agreed, should specify that the FBI look for criminal actions and steer clear of a group's political activity.

Lawmakers and witnesses also agreed that the standard should be written into law instead of left to the attorney general to determine.

"What we've tried to do in the past is rely on the Constitution for protecting individual rights," said Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif.

Police storm church, take children

LUCEDALE, Miss. (AP) — Police stormed a barricaded church run by a fundamentalist minister, taking custody of some of his supporters and residents of the home for troubled youths he operated.

At least seven people, including the church's assistant pastor, were arrested Monday at Bethel Baptist Church, authorities said.

At least three dozen children were taken from the church after about 60 state troopers, local police officers and sheriff's deputies entered it following a four-hour standoff, witnesses said.

Law officers, who were searching for three children who returned to the home after a judge temporarily closed it, moved into the white wood-frame church after unsuccessful attempts to negotiate a settlement.

As officers entered the building, some church members sang hymns and quoted Scripture. Some asked, "If this isn't Nazi Germany, what is?"

The state Department of Public Welfare took custody of 11 children after they were interviewed, but it was uncertain if all had been former residents of the Bethel Home for Children.

Authorities said they took all the youngsters in the church because church officials refused to point out the three who had returned to the home after its closing.

Bethel Baptist's pastor, the Rev. Herman Fountain, was arrested twice Monday, the first time along with two staff members and a 17-year-old after a fight broke out at the home.

The second arrest came after Fountain got involved in a shoving match with a law officer outside the courthouse.

Friday, Chancery Judge Robert Oswald ordered all the residents of the school temporarily placed in state custody.

Oswald ruled that the children, ages 10 to 17, had been subjected "to physical abuse, medical neglect and detention amounting to imprisonment."

The public welfare department removed 64 children, but many others fled the home. Twenty-two of the 64 were released over the weekend to parents or guardians, state officials said.

Monday, Oswald began hearing the cases of the 42 youngsters placed in state custody.

Fountain refused to respond to Oswald's questions about the whereabouts of the runaways, and the judge issued 11 subpoenas to the home's staff members.

Fountain returned to the campus in the early afternoon and told staff members not to comply with the subpoenas.

Man who romanced cashier to her death executed in Louisiana

ANGOLA, La. (AP) — A man who romanced a cashier, robbed her and beat her to death with a hammer was electrocuted today, becoming the nation's 100th person executed since capital punishment resumed in 1977.

Edward R. Byrne Jr., 28, had argued that he did not intend to kill the woman during the 1984 gas station robbery. But he said Monday he had dated her with the intent of robbing her, knowing she handled large sums of money. And he said when he tried to knock her unconscious, "It didn't work. She didn't become unconscious. I just kept hitting her until she did."

Eighteen of the 100 executions since the U.S. Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty have been in Louisiana, which is tied with Florida for the second-highest number nationally. Texas has put 27 people to death.

Thirty-seven states enacted capital punishment laws after the 1976 Supreme Court ruling.

A coroner pronounced Byrne dead at 12:12 a.m., said Jim Morris, deputy secretary of the Louisiana Department of Public Safety and Corrections.

Three state and federal courts Monday refused requests by Byrne's lawyers to block the execution. Louisiana's Pardon Board also refused to recommend a commutation of his sentence to life imprisonment.

Six pro-capital punishment demonstrators waited outside the prison for confirmation of Byrne's death. One held a sign reading "Thanks, Sam Jones," alluding to the pseudonym used by officials to protect the anonymity of the executioner.

The sign-carrier identified himself as Johnny Reece of Pineville. He said he felt deprived because the man who killed his 16-year-old stepdaughter was sentenced to life imprisonment.

"It gives us a sense of justice to see this done to him (Byrne)," Reece said.

Non-violent Arab resister to press Israel to take him

NEW YORK (AP) — Mubarak Awad, an Arab-American advocate of non-violent resistance to Israel, said today he would try to rally public opinion to pressure Israel into allowing him to return to his birthplace of Jerusalem.

Israel deported Awad, a U.S. citizen, in defiance of the United States. Awad arrived here Monday night but did not meet waiting reporters at Kennedy International Airport.

"My immediate plan is to try to have a Palestinian peace movement and try to bring the Palestinian issue to the American public," he said on CBS' "This Morning" program. He said he planned to give lectures and meet with government officials.

On ABC's "Good Morning America," he said his message would be: "There is something wrong there and there is injustice over there."

The deportation made Awad the 21st Arab to be expelled by Israel since the Dec. 8 start of the Palestinian uprising in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Awad, a Christian, also said he may as a last resort convert to Judaism to take advantage of Israel's Law of Return, which states that anyone who is a Jew can come to Israel.

Mecham loses mistrial bid

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Former Gov. Evan Mecham has lost a mistrial bid on the eve of closing arguments in his trial on charges of concealing a $350,000 campaign loan.

Attorneys were to give closing arguments this morning, and the jury was expected to begin deliberations in the afternoon.

Mecham and his brother, Willard, are charged in the Maricopa County Superior Court trial with concealing the $350,000 loan in financial reports required by the state.

In a motion for mistrial, defense attorney Michael Scott contended that Judge Michael Ryan may have prejudiced the case by expressing surprise when the prosecution and defense said Friday they had no more witnesses.

Pioneer 10 still on line

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (AP) — After 16 years and more than 4 billion miles, Pioneer 10 is still speeding toward interstellar space and perhaps for the next decade should continue to provide clues to some of the puzzles of the universe, scientists said.

The little spacecraft, which left the solar system five years ago, has literally and figuratively gone far beyond its original mission to study Jupiter and the asteroid belt, scientists said.

The 570-pound Pioneer 10 is relaying strong evidence to suggest a mysterious Planet X or possibly two smaller planets exist beyond Pluto, John D. Anderson of the National Aeronautics and Space Adminstration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory said Monday.

The probe was launched in 1972 and traveled an arc-shaped, 620 million mile path from Earth before making its closest approach to Jupiter — 82,000 miles — on Dec. 3, 1973.

'Poetic justice' wins out

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Alas! 'Tis poetic justice, wrote the jurist, perhaps disturbing your legal purists.

In a ruling that started with a poem, U.S. District Judge H. Lee Sarokin upheld a bankruptcy judge's decision that Kevin A. Rowland's filing for bankruptcy was no protection from an $8,500 award won against him by Sean Coughlin.

Coughlin, 27, won the award in his lawsuit against Rowland, who punched out his front teeth during a teen-age fracas in Bergenfield in 1979, according to Sarokin's opinion.

In his ruling Monday, Sarokin wrote:

"On this appeal the facts are undisputed; Mr. Rowland's punch caused Mr. Coughlin's teeth to be uprooted."
