Reagan Pushing For Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, back from a California vacation and jokingly described as ready to "break a few kneecaps" for his budget and tax cuts, is lobbying personally for approval in Congress and support in the statehouse.

So far, Reagan's top White House adviser says, the reaction hasn't been so bad.

"You have the predictable special-interest group reaction," White House counselor Edwin Meese III told reporters Sunday aboard Air Force One en route to the nation's capital from California. "Yet even there the stridency has been lacking in terms of what you might have."

Workers Bill Coming Up

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton says the House will dig into a major controversy this week, taking up a bill denying unemployment compensation for people who quit their jobs or are fired for misconduct.

He said he expects the Senate-passed measure — which Gov. Bill Clements has designated emergency legislation — to be on Wednesday's or Thursday's calendar.

Tourist Slump In Florida

MIAMI (AP) — Cold weather, a well-publicized crime increase and the sluggish national economy have cursed the winter of '81 and driven away the tourists, say hotel operators and tourism officials in this resort city.

"How am I doing? I'm doing fine. Well, actually I'm lying," said Frank Thorn, manager of the plush Eden Roc Hotel on Miami Beach. "Everybody is in the same boat around here and it's just about staying afloat."

Fire Blamed On Broken Rail

DALLAS (AP) — It will take about 10 days before a Santa Fe railroad bridge over the Trinity River south of downtown will be open to traffic again, after a derailment and spectacular five-alarm fire that burned through the trestle on Friday.

A federal investigator, Thurman Toal, believes a broken rail on the bridge may have caused the derailment and resulting fire.

Court Agrees To Decide Case On Campaign Giving

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed today to decide whether an "unauthorized" political committee may spend unlimited money to back a presidential candidate whose authorized campaign is financed from public funds.

A $1,000 spending limit imposed by Congress was struck down by a three-judge court in Washington last year after Common Cause, a citizen lobby group, and the Federal Election Commission challenged multi-million dollar campaigning by three "unauthorized" committees for the election of President Reagan.

Under the Presidential Election Campaign Fund Act, Reagan had chosen public financing for his campaign and was granted $29.4 million.

He and the campaign committees he authorized to represent him could legally spend no more than that amount and were barred from accepting any other contributions.

The law allowed unauthorized political committees to raise and spend up to $1,000 each to support a party's presidential ticket. The law provides penalties up to a $5,000 fine and a year in jail for officers of a committee which violates that limit.

The Federal Election Commission has reported that unauthorized committees spent at least $11 million campaigning for Reagan, on top of the $29.4 million his authorized campaign was permitted to spend.

The Carter-Mondale Presidential Committee, representing Reagan's presidential opponents, filed a complaint with the FEC against such "unauthorized" big-money campaigns.

The FEC and Common Cause filed lawsuits last July against the high spending planned by three pro-Reagan committees.

Water Use, Cost Under Estimates

Both revenues and expenses fell slightly under budget estimate in January for the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

This is largely due to the distortion of assigning each month one-twelfth of the annual budget, which fails to recognize that heaviest expenditure and revenues occur in peak periods of the summer.

Revenues for the month amounted to $668,246 which was half of one percent off budget target. Expenditures for operation totalled $336,778, slightly over one half of one percent off the budget period. This left $331,468 surplus, of which $206,468 went to reserves for debt retirement.

Of the total revenues, $529,745 came from cities, $127,504 from oil companies. Biggest single item of expense was $181,645 for electric energy, or $76,535 less than budgeted. This will change drastically when summer pumping steps up. In January, 1980, electric energy cost $125,040.

One interesting figure was that 99.9 percent of the total 939,913,000 gallons of potable water produced came from Lake J. B. Thomas and Lake E. V. Spence. Sale of brine, or unpotable low-flow diversion from the Colorado River, brought total production for January up to 1,050,377,000 gallons. At the end of the month, Lake Thomas had 60,070 acre feet, or 29.45 percent of capacity, and Lake Spence had 237,790 acre feet, or 48.62 percent of capacity.

Soviets Ask Summit With U.S. On Arms

MOSCOW (AP) — President Leonid I. Brezhnev made a major overture to the new U.S. administration today, calling for a summit meeting between President Reagan and himself and a resumption of U.S.-Soviet negotiations to limit nuclear arms.

He also proposed that the two superpowers limit their submarine fleets and the deployment of submarine missiles. And for the first time he said that the Soviet Union would discuss Afghanistan with the United States although only as part of talks about the demilitarization of the Persian Gulf region.

Opening the 26th congress of the Soviet Communist Party, the 74-year-old chief of the party said in a keynote address that the state of relations between the United States and the Soviet Union "and the sharpness of world problems demanding resolution ... dictate the necessity of a dialogue on all levels, an active one."

"Experience shows that the decisive element here is meetings on the highest level," he added. "That was true yesterday and remains true today."

Referring to SALT II, the second Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty which the U.S. Senate refused to consider after the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and which Reagan says favors the Soviet Union, Brezhnev declared:

"For our part, we are prepared to continue the relevant negotiations with the United States without delay, preserving all the positive elements that have so far been achieved in this area. It goes without saying that negotiations can be conducted only on the basis of equality and equal security."

After a 90-second standing ovation from the 4,994 delegates in the Kremlin Palace of Congresses, Brezhnev asserted that the Soviet Union is working to "preserve and deepen detente" despite "acutely" more aggressive policies of the United States.

"When thunder clouds gathered on the international horizon by the beginning of the 1980s," he said, "the Soviet Union continued to persevere in efforts to remove the threat of war and to preserve and deepen detente and acted to expand mutually beneficial cooperation with most countries of the world."

He charged that the West, not the Soviet Union, is "slowing the detente process."

113 Animals Auctioned To Close Show

An excellent sale was reported Saturday at the close of the annual Scurry County Junior Livestock Show, said livestock association members.

One hundred thirteen animals were sold, with that figure breaking down to 21 steers, 42 lambs, and 50 hogs.

Among steers, top money was paid for the champion exhibited by Greg Kimzey of Hermleigh. His 1,135-pound steer was sold for $1.60 per pound and purchased by Roger B. Mize.

Brent Beck's first place lamb, weighing 116 pounds, sold for $11 per pound. Making that purchase were John Reed, John Ward, and Sonny Harrell.

Darren Hughes' champion hog sold for $5 per pound and weighed 242 pounds. Buying it was Source Services.

Heart Fund Drive Begins Here Today

This year's American Heart Association's fund drive was launched at a kickoff breakfast held this morning at Western Texas College.

George Gann is chairman of the 100 Heart Club, a part of the American Heart Association, and Ben Brock, WTC vice president, is vice chairman. A special guest at the breakfast was Susan Schmucker of Abilene, Regional Director for the American Heart Association.

The five captains for the drive are Phil Guerry, Bob Lemons, Don West, C.A. McCown, and Joe Fowler. Gann said each captain, with five workers, will try to raise $100 apiece by calling on individuals around town.

Gann said the drive is expected to conclude Friday.

Reagan Eyeing Gas Tax Hike

WASHINGTON (AP). — The Reagan administration is considering a 2-cent-a-gallon increase in the federal gasoline tax to help state and local governments finance highway maintenance.

The proposal, which would raise about $2 billion annually, would need congressional approval.

Budget director David A. Stockman told the National Governors' Association on Sunday the administration may ask that states be allowed to preempt some or all of the additional revenues raised through an increase in the tax, which now is 4 cents a gallon.

Revenue from the gasoline tax now is earmarked for a trust fund used primarily for highway construction.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis acknowledged that Congress had rejected several Carter administration proposals to raise the tax 5 cents to 15 cents a gallon to promote conservation. But he said he thought Congress would approve the measure now as a "user tax" to finance bridge and highway maintenance programs cut in President Reagan's proposed budget for fiscal year 1982.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California criticized the proposal, saying the federal government would increase the tax as a state relief measure and then drop it, leaving the states to re-impose it as a state tax.

"Reagan would have it both ways," Brown told reporters later. "He would get benefit for providing the money for us, and we would bear the blame for the higher tax."

What Brown called the "tax shuffle," and the sparks it struck, provided a vivid example of the problems the governors face with Reagan's economic recovery program. They had an hour-long appointment with the president today to discuss their concerns.

The governors' greatest fear, as expressed in the meeting's opening sessions, is that federal programs and aid will be cut without ensuring that state and local governments will be able to absorb the blow.

"I don't want to transfer the mess in Washington to a mess in all of the states with a lot less money," said Gov. Richard Riley of South Carolina.

"We appeal to you to stick with us," begged Gov. James Hunt of North Carolina. "We believe that when it gets to Congress, a lot of people are not going to want the states to have this flexibility."

The governors say they need flexibility in administering federally assisted or mandated programs, less federal regulation, consolidation of categorical grants and, most of all, assurances that programs cut by Reagan will not be dumped on them if they don't have the money to fund them.

25% Cut Recommended In FHA Direct Loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 25 percent cut in direct loans by the Farmers Home Administration is being recommended by the Reagan administration, but officials say the reduction would not be across the board.

The Agriculture Department agency was projected in former President Carter's budget in January to make more than $12.9 billion in direct loans in the fiscal year that began last Oct. 1.

According to the Reagan budget sent to Congress last week, FmHA direct lending may be held in the current fiscal year to slightly more than $12.4 billion.

Next year, according to the Reagan budget, FmHA lending would be cut to less than $7.9 billion from about $10.3 billion proposed in the Carter budget in January for the new fiscal year beginning next Oct. 1.

"This reduction will not be made across the board, but rather it will involve deeper cuts where credit is more readily available from private sources, and only modest reductions for farm operating loans, low-income housing and community development loans for the poorest rural communities," says an analysis prepared by Agriculture Department budget experts.

The analysis was hurriedly put together after the Reagan budget proposal was sent to Congress. Agriculture Secretary John R. Block told a budget briefing Friday the deepest cuts were proposed for farm ownership loans, with smaller reductions in loans to help farmers pay operating expenses.

According to the department's analysis, farm ownership loans would be reduced to $700 million in 1981-82, less than half what the Carter administration proposed in January. Those are expected to total about $790 million this fiscal year.

"These changes reflect heavier reliance on the Farm Credit Administration as a supplier of farm credit," the analysis said, referring to federal land banks and other cooperative lending institutions supervised by the administration. "Recent legislative changes should facilitate a more active role for that agency in the financing of young and beginning farmers."

Farm operating loans were proposed at less than $1.33 billion for 1981-82, substantially above the $850 million estimated for this year but still short of the $1.45 billion recommended in the Carter budget.

Considering Blockade To Curb Arms To El Salvador

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, preparing to release what it claims is undeniable evidence of Soviet-bloc aid to insurgents in El Salvador, is not ruling out a blockade or any other action against Cuba if it continues arms shipments to the Central American nation.

Presidential counselor Edwin Meese III said Sunday the administration is exploring diplomatic, economic and military options to stop the arms traffic. Direct action to punish Cuba is "entirely possible," he said.

"I think it's to Cuba's own self-interest to halt them (arms shipments) right now and end this transmittal of subversion into Central America," Meese said on ABC's "Issues and Answers" program.

President Reagan told reporters Sunday as he ended a vacation in California that he is "very concerned" about political instability in El Salvador. But he refused to say whether he could conceive of ever sending U.S. military advisers or arms because "I think too often in the past we told what we might or might not do."

Meese, asked if the United States would send troops to El Salvador, replied, "I don't rule out anything, but it is highly unlikely we will move military forces."

He said evidence of Soviet-bloc complicity with leftist Salvadoran guerri,ncontrovertible."

Administration officials hoped that releasing the evidence today would buttress their contention that the Soviet Union and its allies are committed to converting the country into the first Marxist state on the American continent.

The administration also decided to release its findings to build public support for actions to ensure that El Salvador remains friendly toward western interests, U.S. officials said.

deregulation needed

The prospect of paying higher prices for gasoline and other petroleum products doesn't exactly thrill us. But President Reagan's move to decontrol oil prices is constructive nonetheless. Coupled with other early actions of his administration, it gives us some hope for a real change in direction in Washington.

The immediate decontrol of oil prices does not actually represent a sharp break with Carter administration policies. Under legislation passed with Carter's support, those price controls were due to be phased out by September anyway. Eliminating them immediately should step up the search for new domestic sources of energy. We note that most observers don't expect prices to rise sharply right away, largely because of competition for omers among the oil companies. We're glad to see a more widespread recognition of the role of competition in holding prices down. We've noted that at some gas stations the posted prices are below the legal maximums now. As has always been the case, competition in the marketplace is the consumer's most effective protection.

Reagan's move is really more a symbol, a sign that he means it when he says, as he reiterated at his first official press conference, that he still intends to abolish the Department of Energy and the Department of Education.

We're pleased that he's still willing to stand by those commitments, though one of his statements gives us some cause for concern. He said that the present priority of the heads of the departments in question was to streamline the operations and recommend ways to transfer their functions to other parts of the goverment. Many of those functions shouldn't be transferred, they should be eliminated from government entirely. It's important that Reagan be thinking in these terms and that he urge members of his adminsitration to view functions in the same way.

We don't expect miracles from the Reagan administration. We think it should act quickly to cut deeply into the size and scope of government. Given the nature of political reality, it is unlikely that many major offensives beyond those instituted in the first sixty or ninety days will have much chance of success. Even some of those successful offensives will bear fruit slowly and haltingly in terms of more money in the pockets of tax payers and more options available for individual citizens. Patience and steadiness will be important.

While we recognize the virtues of patience, however, the more important virtue is a steady resolve to make genuine cuts in government spending and power. Reagan himself still seems sincerely committed to this course. We hope he will be able to stay the course when opposition develops and things get more complicated.

pessimists always wrong

Richard Frank, head of the National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration, last May 29, predicted "a major onslaught of tropical storms - unprecedented human and economic catastrophe."

The huricane season, 1980, came and went almost unnoticed.

Pessimists are always wrong!

Last February 22, Harry Kaufman of Salomon Brothers - he is the chief economist for that leading Wall Street investment firm - demanded our government declare a "national emergency" or face a "catastrophe." He caused the stock market to plunge 18.34 points in one day.

No emergency. No catastrophe.

In July of last year Henry Kissinger predicted "a major disruption of U.S. energy imports from the Middle East very quickly."

Another false alarm.

Economists are notoriously pessimistic - and consistently wrong.

In foretelling the rate of inflation, our president's Council of Economic Advisors has been correct only three times in 18 years. You could do better flipping a coin.

I love Billy Graham - but he's had us "standing on the doorstep of Armageddon" for 30 years!

Pessimists always have been wrong:

H.G. Wells, 80 years ago, was confident the submarine would never work - would "suffocate its crew and flounder at sea."

Lee DeForest was smart enough to godfather radio, but in 1926 he said television was "commercially and financially impossible."

Admiral William Leagy gave then-President Truman his opinion of the atomic bomb in 1945. "The biggest fool thing we have ever done. I speak as an expert in explosives. The bomb will never go off."

Nuclear scientist Harold Urey helped develop that bomb - but of man landing on the moon he said: "Impossible . . . the landing vehicle would be swallowed up in an ocean of dust."

Indeed, Science Digest as recently as August 1948, was confident that landing on the moon involved so many problems that it could not happen "for another 200 years."

Every pessimist in history has been buried in an unmarked grave.

Radio evangelist, Willie Jay Smith, has predicted the "Rapture." In his words broadcast over 29 radio stations: "'All Christians will be swept up into heaven - as though kidnapped by aliens from outer space."

He said it would happen "next Tuesday."

He said that May 3 of last year.

Then there is Timothy Leary who announced in December of 1979 that "enough states will drop out of the union in 1980 to cause the United States to fall apart." It didn't. He did.

Whatever "they" say - happy young year!

WASHINGTON (NEA) - A chief order of business for most state legislatures this year will be the reapportionment of congressional districts based on he 1980 census.

The Snowbelt-to-Sunbelt population shift documented by the census will require the Northeast to give up nine of its 113 current seats and the Midwest to relinquish eight of its 121 seats. The South will add eight seats to its current 125, while the West will add nine to its 76.

Ten states will lose at least one seat. New York will lose five, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois will each lose two, and Indiana, Michigan, Missouri, New Jersey, South Dakota and Massachusetts will each lose one.

Florida will gain four seats, Texas will gain three, California will gain two, and Washington, Oregon, New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada, Utah, Colorado and Tennesse will each gain one.

Moreover, population shifts will also require most of the remaining states to redraw district lines to maintain the constitutional requirement that all House districts be as equal as possible in population. All of this redistricting must be completed by 1982.

The Republicans see this process as a golden opportunity to follow up on their 1980 victories. Th party and conservative organizations are hoping to provide state legislatures with technical help in drawing boundaries in such a way that many of the new or redesigned districts will elect Republicans to Congress in 1982.

These redistricting plans will be based on the concept of "compact districts," which involves the tight grouping of citizens of like interests into a single district. In practice, this means attempting to place all members of a racial or ethnic community in a single district.

Let's say a town with a relatively large black population is entitled to two representatives in Congress. If most of the blacks are concentrated in one congressional district, it is likely that they would elect a liberal Democrat - probably a black - to represent that district but would have little impact on the outcome in the other district. If the blacks were divided equally between the districts, however, they might exert enough influence to elect liberals to both congressional seats.

So, concentrating blacks and other liberal influences into the smallest posssible number of districts increases the chances that more conservative candidates-in other words, Republicans-will be elected in the other districts. According to one estimate, such redistricting could affect six of the 18 members of the Congressional Black Caucus.

So, you can expect to hear many redistricting arguments based on the "theory" that good government requires compact districts.

In many of the states that are losing districts, two Democratic incumbents will be forced to run against each other in party primaries unless one steps aside.

For instance, it is expected that New York will lose four seats in the New York City area and one in the Buffalo area. Two Democratic powerhouses, Mario Biaggi and Benjamin Rosenthal, will probably end up in the same district. So will incumbent Democrats Stephen Solarz and James Scheuer as well as Theodore Weiss and Jonathan Bingham.

In Ohio, redistricting may pit two Cleveland Democrats - Mary Rose Oakar and Louis Stokes, a black - against each other.

Incumbent Democrats may be threatened even in California, which is gaining two congressional districts. Population movements may cause one seat to shift from the north of the state to the south, possibly forcing Bay Area Democrats John Burton and Ron Dellums into the same district.

Perhaps the most interesting redistricting battle will take place in Illinois. Republicans will try to redraw district lines to force electoral confrontations between two black Chicago Democrats, Harold Washington and Cardiss Collins, as well as between two influential downstate Democrats, Mel Price and Paul Simon. Democrats will try instead to place in jeopardy a suburban Chicago Republican, either Edward Derwinski or Robert McClory.

In any case, reapportionment is likely to become one of the liveliest political stories of 1981.

NEW YORK (AP) — This is prime time for the economic experts, as sometimes they are mistakenly called. In the Reagan economic scenario they have something to dissect, and they will peck away voraciously.

From the universities and think tanks and op-ed pages they will have their say. They will sympathize and criticize. They will condescend to explain how ideas are naive and why programs can't work.

Supporting economists, primed for the battle, will answer in kind. They will be learned, provocative, intolerant, and outraged.

Economists who hadn't been heard from in ages will feel resurrected, and they will write pontifical reports on the similarities and differences between now and then. They'll tell you what they'd do, and while doing it they'll make a final attempt to correct what they see as an unfair historical representation of their views and deeds.

In the past week, the president of the United States has presented for consideration the most sweeping economic program since President Roosevelt and the Great Depression of the '30s.

It was presented as a vast unit, its parts intricately related in an organic whole that reveals the whole political economic philosophy of the new president. For economists, it is a feast, not a tidbit.

From Columbia you will hear from Professor Raymond Saulnier (Eisenhower). Professor Walter Heller (Kennedy) will critique from Minnesota. Kenneth Galbraith (Kennedy) will report from Harvard. Professor Paul McCracken (Nixon) will write from Michigan. Professor Herbert Stein (Nixon) will declaim from Virginia, and Professor Herman Kahn (Carter) from Cornell.

There will be special commentary from Columbia Professor Arthur Burns, because he served both as adviser to President Eisenhower and chairman of the Federal Reserve, and because, correctly or mistakenly, he is seen as the epitome of responsible conservatism.

Milton Friedman, who carefully avoided the Washington scene and who, therefore, has avoided being branded as one whose policies failed, will be sought by the media because of his strong conservative views, his independence, and his popularity with the masses.

You will even be hearing from Adam Smith, Karl Marx, John Stuart Mills, and John Maynard Keynes — by way of self-appointed proxies.

But out of all this, what good will come to the people of America?

Robert Lekachman, an economist who examines other economists, has written a book on the subject called "Economists At Bay," subtitled, "Why the experts will never solve your problems."

He begins with a question: "When bright people say stupid things, the question inevitably arises, why is their perception of reality so blurred? Good economists are bright men and women."

You get the gist without waiting for his conclusion. Economists, he says, do not always address themselves to what is significant, and when they do, they do not always make significant contributions.

What economists must do, he suggests, is "rethink old assumptions, old certainties, and old emphases."

But don't bet on it. Chances are that what you hear over the next few years will be a rechewing of old arguments and old positions.

1 medium onion, chopped
1 4-oz. can sliced mushrooms, drained
1 10-oz. pkg. frozen chopped broccoli, thawed OR 2 cups fresh broccoli, chopped
3 tablespoons flour
1 10¾-oz. can condensed cream of celery soup
1 garlic cheese roll, cut up (5 or 6 oz. roll)

In small skillet, melt butter and saute celery, onion and mushrooms. Stir in flour. Turn into lightly greased slow cooker. Stir in remaining ingredients. Cover and cook on high setting, stirring about every 15 minutes until cheese melts. Turn to low setting for about 2 hours or until ready to serve. Serve hot with corn chips, crackers or raw vegetables. Makes about 1 qt.

BROCCOLI-RICE CASSEROLE

1½ cups cooked rice (½ cup raw)
2 cups fresh broccoli, chopped OR 1 10-oz. package frozen broccoli, chopped
¾ cup chopped onions
¼ cup margarine or butter
1 10-oz. can cream of chicken soup
½ cup cheese spread
1 tsp. butter or margarine for greasing casserole dish

In a 10-inch skillet, saute the chopped onions and broccoli in the butter or margarine until the onions are tender, but not brown.

Cook rice according to the package direction in a 2-qt. saucepan. Add the cream of chicken soup and the cheese spread to the onions and broccoli. Stir all this into the cooked rice. Grease a 2-qt. casserole dish with one tsp. butter or margarine and pour rice and broccoli mixture into the dish. Bake at 350 for 20 minutes until it is bubbly. Serve warm.

Serves six.

Limmer Gives Program On Food Poisoning At Regular Beta Sigma Phi Meeting

Nineteen members of Beta Sigma Phi were present Feb. 17 to hear Carolyn Limmer, home economics teacher at Snyder High School, speak on the subject of food poisoning.

Mrs. Limmer began her program by giving members a short quiz to test their knowledge on preventing food poisoning, followed by a filmstrip that discussed various types of food poisoning. She stated that often, people who believe themselves to be suffering from a 24-hour virus are actually suffering from food poisoning; it is a much more common illness than most people know.

Two rules of thumb that can be remembered in the preparation, storage and serving of food are to keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold and to never leave foods sitting at room temperature for more than four hours.

The program concluded with a skit entitled "Don't Blame Me," in which a courtroom scene was created and a defendant tried for carelessness in the kitchen. Those participating, in addition to Mrs. Limmer, were Bette League, Mary Lou Scott, Donna Fowler, Mona Bryan, Barbara Hamlett, Susan Chesser, Twila Polk, Carolyn Glaze, Dena Ellis and Laura Greene.

In the business meeting, the chapter decided to make a financial contribution to the Texas State Service Project of Beta Sigma Phi. Proceeds will go to help a critically ill Beta Sigma Phi member in the Panhandle.

Bette League thanked the chapter for efforts that made the Valentine Dance a success, and Dena Ellis expressed her appreciation at being chosen Valentine Queen.

Hostesses were Carolyn Greene and Laura Greene. Nancy Ballinger will present a program on science at the March 3 meeting and hostesses will be Paula Middleton and Donna Fowler.

Send A Unique Gift To Wedding Honoree

A wedding is a special occasion — a time to give a gift that sends your best wishes to the newly married couple as they embark on their journey through life together.

A unique present, something that will not be duplicated over and over again, will be appreciated by the newlyweds and show them that time and effort was taken to choose something extra special for them.

Need some original gift ideas?

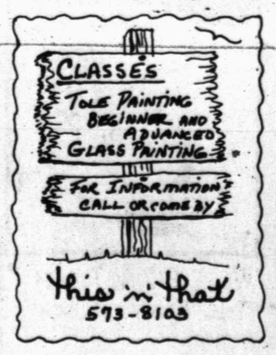

If possible, find out the color and decorating preferences of the couple and select a wall hanging or painting that complements their taste.

Give a planter or hanging basket in an interesting macrame weave, made from various types of ropes and cords. Fill the basket with a plant or a bouquet of flowers.

Champagne buckets, wine decanters, dessert dishes, vases and cheese boards are more traditional gifts yet items that are not commonly part of a newly put-together household — they are luxuries for the twosome just starting out.

Hobbyists will appreciate any addition to their favorite pastime, such as the latest in camping gear, sailing equipment or a weekend of skiing.

And, for those who possess a creative talent, there is nothing like a gift made with the giver's own hands and ingenuity.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Oswald: "Here is a hand that decided a Swiss team match. The bidding in the box took place at table one. South was one of those scientists who believe firmly that the more bids you make the better you are playing. Warned away from a spade lead, West opened his ace of clubs. The defense started with two club tricks. Later on, when South played trumps he went up with his king, lost two trump tricks and a vulnerable game."

Alan: "I suppose at the other table, South bid four hearts right over the two diamond rebid, got a spade lead, never lost a club trick and made five or six odd."

Oswald: "Exactly so! The losing South went through all sorts of explanations of how lucky the man who didn't show his four card spade suit had been. How failure to bid spades might have cost a slam, etc., etc."

Alan: "He might be right once in a blue moon, but if North couldn't find a rebid after South's one heart, followed by a direct jump to four hearts, then slam was not likely to be missed."

Oswald: "As the late Harry Fishbein, one of the greatest natural players once said, 'Let others have the education. I want to win.' "

'81 Bell Projects Cost Over Billion

Southwestern Bell will invest more than $1 billion over the next 12 months to meet the needs of Texas customers.

Doyle E. Rogers, vice president for Southwestern Bell in Texas, said the 1981 investment represents the fourth consecutive $1 billion construction budget for the company.

Southwestern Bell provides service to 4.9 million customers, representing some 8.8 million telephones in almost 500 Texas cities. The company is adding phones at the rate of 450,000 annually. By 1985, the total number of Texas telephones is projcted to reach 11.7 million.

Call volumes within Texas also have shown a significant increase over the past few years. In 1980, Texas customers made more than one billion long distance calls, compared to about half a billion in 1975.

Last year, during an average business day, Texas customers placed some 62 million calls. Of that number, 4.6 million were long distance.

To keep pace with the state's continued growth, Southwestern Bell this year will place about 7,000 miles of underground cable, much of it replacing aerial lines which are easily affected by adverse weather conditions. The company also will construct or enlarge switching offices to handle the ever-increasing number of calls and continue to bring customers the newest in telecommunications products and services.

Texas has one of the highest percentages in the nation of customers served by Electronic Switching Systems (ESS). Nearly 60 percent of the state's customers are served by the computer-operated switching gear which provides flexibility, is faster, more reliable and offers service options not available with older electro-mechanical equipment.

Checkups are important

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 42-year-old male and my wife has been after me to get a medical checkup. She says I should have one every year but I think that is a waste of time. I've told her that the Cancer Society said that early detection of cancer was not as important as they had thought. Also I know that the diet recommendations from the Heart Association are under dispute, too. So why have an examination as long as I feel good and am able to do all the things I want to do? Who is right?

DEAR READER — Your wife. I'm sure a lot of people have misunderstood the brief news stories on these matters this past year. Controversy always makes a good news story, but there are far more areas of agreement than disagreement.

First, it is absolutely WRONG to say that early detection of cancer is not important. The American Cancer Society actually said, "The Society finds that the early detection of cancer is a very important health promotion activity." Moreover, to accomplish that their recommendation was and is that "a cancer-related health checkup is recommended for all persons over 20 every three years, and for all persons over 40 every year." That includes YOU.

What controversy exists about diet and heart disease has nothing to do with the importance of detecting changes that can cause you to have heart attacks and strokes.

The very important reasons why you need regular medical checkups are outlined in The Health Letter number 10-2, Your Valuable Medical Examination, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

As that issue points out, half of all deaths today are still caused by heart attacks and strokes and other circulatory problems. You can prevent a lot of these by early detection of factors that lead to these disasters. Also, about half of the people who develop diabetes have abnormal tests before they have any symptoms. A regular medical checkup, coupled with attention to prevention programs can be your best investment in your health.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 16-year-old girl and I was wondering when a girl's body stops growing. I have heard that her hips and bust stop after her first period. I have also heard that a girl has the potential to grow a foot when she's 17, and continues growing taller until she's about 21. When do bust, hip and height growth cease?

DEAR READER — Cessation of growth varies a lot as it is tied to the onset of puberty. And that can vary a great deal. In general, a young girl first starts to develop some fat stores, compared to the lean body of the child.

The breasts usually develop first and about two years later the first menstrual period occurs. There is often a significant growth spurt preceding the onset of menstruation. This is sometimes called the puberal growth spurt. The average for this peak growth period is around 12 years of age. The pelvis gets larger about this time, too.

As the puberal growth slows the cartilage zone in the long bones calcifies and growth stops. With an average onset of puberty, most girls are through growing before age 18 and usually much sooner.

Dear Abby

Love and Respect Best Shown Now, Not Later

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Congratulations on your 25th anniversary as "Dear Abby." I have a very special reason for wanting to wish you well.

Twelve years ago you had a letter in your column signed TOO LATE. Abby, that letter motivated me to visit my aging and ailing mother every day during her last two years in a nursing home. I am ashamed to admit that until that time I thought I was doing quite well to visit her every Sunday for an hour.

I will always be indebted to you, Abby, for selecting that letter for your column. It motivated me to change my ways, and now I can live with a clear conscience.

Please run that letter again, Abby. It might do for someone else what it did for me.

GRATEFUL IN LONG ISLAND

DEAR GRATEFUL: I am grateful to you for reminding me to run it again. I have printed it three times, and each time I have heard from readers expressing appreciation. With pleasure I give it a much deserved rerun:

DEAR ABBY: I am the most heartbroken person on earth. I always found time to go everywhere else but to see my old, gray-haired parents. They sat at home alone, loving me just the same. It is too late now to give them those few hours of happiness I was too selfish and too busy to give, and now when I go to visit their graves and look at the green grass above them, I wonder if God will ever forgive me for the heartaches I must have caused them. I pray that you will print this, Abby, to tell those who still have parents to visit them and show their love and respect while there is still time. For it is later than you think.

TOO LATE

DEAR ABBY: I am a recent college graduate engaged to be married this summer. I became engaged while I was in college last year, and asked one of my school chums to be a bridesmaid. At the time we were good friends. However, we grew apart gradually, until now when we meet, she hardly gives me the time of day. In fact, the last few times we met there seemed to be tension between us. Now I don't even consider her a friend.

Must I include her in my wedding party? If not, how can I gracefully exclude her?

STUCK OR NOT

DEAR STUCK: Tell her candidly that your friendship has faded, and therefore it isn't appropriate for her to be a bridesmaid. It may not be very "graceful," but it beats getting stuck with a bridesmaid who is no longer a friend.

DEAR ABBY: I can't forget that survey you took after having received the letter from TIRED IN NEBRASKA. There must be something wrong with women who are 50 and tired of sex.

I am a woman of 59, and I enjoy my 61-year-old husband more now than I ever have. With our children grown and gone, the setting is ideal for romance. I still race home from the office to bathe and meet him at the door in a lace coat (the type one wears over a bathing suit). There's more to life than cooking, laundry and making beds!

I no longer have to worry about pregnancy or having the children hear us. These are the best years of our lives. I'm saving up for a mirrored bedroom ceiling!

Sign me, "Not Dead Yet in East Lansing, Mich." or

BETTER THAN EVER

Stalking The Cockroach...

Woman Charts Lives Of Creepy Crawlers

By IRA J. DREYFUSS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Betty Faber nonchalantly dips her hand into a shadowy terrarium crawling with cockroaches, grabs an insect one-third the size of her palm and smiles as it scuttles, hissing, up her arm.

"Like to hold one?" she asks, her eyes sparkling.

The offer is declined with a shudder.

An entomologist with a doctorate from Rutgers University, Mrs. Faber is five years into a long-term study of the ecology of cockroaches.

She keeps exotic types, such as Madagascar roaches that hiss through their breathing holes, in terraria in a dreary former janitor's room on the sixth floor of the American Museum of Natural History.

The room, decorated with cartoons of roaches, serves as an office. Her prime subjects, an unprepossessing colony of American roaches (Periplaneta americana) roam a nearby rooftop greenhouse.

There, Mrs. Faber catches roaches in food-baited traps, records the location and tapes numbers to their backs, so she can note them when she finds them again.

Her aim is to chart roach movements — where they go and what they do when they're left alone to do it. She wants to learn enough about their behavior in non-laboratory conditions to provide a framework for understanding roach lives.

"There are all these little bitty facts all over the place about different aspects of cockroaches," she said. And most of what people know, she said, depends on what, specifically, they wanted to find out.

Mrs. Faber proudly reports one thing she has not seen in her five years on the roof: "Migrations...en masse and with purpose, like birds flying south for the winter."

It's important, she said, because it discredits the stories that, for instance, tearing down a building will send swarms of roaches across the street to another building.

"Roaches do stay in pretty much the same place most of their lives," she said. An area of 6-to-12 feet square is the range for males, and 9-to-15 feet for females, she said, adding that she does not yet understand how or why a roach sets its range.

Thus, the roaches in your bathroom may never see their cousins in the kitchen, unless you make them meet by environmental changes such as spraying, she said. Even then, she said, they won't go as a group, but as individuals.

Mrs. Faber blames faulty observation for misconceptions about cockroaches.

"I think there are very few people who have a grasp on what they see when they're watching something like a cockroach," she said. "They don't know how to watch, and they don't have the patience to sit there and watch."

Losing 51 lbs: Several Inches !

S. Nelson is perhaps one of the more spectacular examples of the stunning results that may be attained through Pat Walker's Figure Perfection Salons International. Read what she has to say about the program that has benefited millions throughout the world over the past 30 years:

"I hated myself fat, and every new year I promised to really get with it and lose; however, it never happened. Finally my doctor advised me, tactfully, to stay out of his office until I decided to lose weight. He just couldn't help me. Out of desperation, not believing, I called for a courtesy treatment at Pat Walker's.

This was the turning point in my life. With a loss of 51 pounds and several inches, I began to enjoy my life with my friends and family, especially my three grandchildren. The Pat Walker program gave me a positive approach to everyday living."

How's your approach to life?

Now the national director for Pat Walker, Ms. Nelson firmly believes the program can upgrade the life outlook of the overweight as surely as it makes them slimmer, trimmer, more confident of their appearance—and themselves.

In the elegant atmosphere of a Pat Walker salon (where there's none of the noise and confusion you may have encountered at gyms and spas), you can reduce IN ABSOLUTE PRIVACY. Moreover, you have assistance from interested professional counselors (who also conduct their counseling, by the way, in complete privacy).

Another difference: SYMMETRICON

Symmetricon is the equipment, exclusive to Pat Walker's, providing passive exercise that gently shapes and firms your figure while it also improves your circulation and helps correct posture. You wear your regular street clothes during treatments. At Pat Walker's you can lose weight (and keep it off) ON YOUR OWN INDIVIDUALIZED PROGRAM—without strenuous physical exercise or stringent diets.

Texas May Be Getting Back Political Clout

By SOLL SUSSMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texans appear to be making their first strides toward regaining the clout they lost through retirements in the House two years ago.

That was when such longtime Capitol Hill fixtures, and committee chairmen, as George Mahon of Lubbock and the late Olin "Tiger" Teague of College Station retired.

Now that the committee assignments have been completed for the new 97th Congress, evaluations show members of the Texas delegation more strategically placed than they were in the last congressional session.

Hearings are held and legislation is shaped in committees, so congressmen perhaps can exercise their greatest influence at that level.

"I'd say we gained in terms of chairmanships," Rep. Phil Gramm, a College Station Democrat, said. "Certainly I would think the delegation's overall power and influence expanded."

Dary Stone, the new director of Texas state-federal liaison office in Washington, is convinced that the state's influence in Congress has increased.

"Absolutely, just no doubt about it," he said.

Here's the scorecard of changes from the 96th to 97th Congress:

The retirement of former Rep. Ray Roberts, a McKinney Democrat, cost the state's delegation one full committee chairmanship. It was the House Veterans Affairs Committee, ranked among the less powerful panels.

This year, Rep. E. "Kika" de la Garza, a Mission Democrat, became chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, a more strategic spot. That keeps the number of committee chairmanships held by Texans at two, since Rep. Jack Brooks, a Beaumont Democrat, retains the leadership of the House Government Operations Committee.

And no list of Texas clout in the House can overlook Majority Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth.

As far as subcommittee chairmanships go, Roberts also was chairman of a public works subcommittee on water resources. Former Rep. Bob Eckhardt, a Houston Democrat defeated last fall, was chairman of the commerce subcommittee in charge of oversight and investigations.

In the new 97th Congress, Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, a San Antonio Democrat, and Rep. Richard White, a Democrat from El Paso, traded in the subcommittee chairmanships they held in the last session for more powerful panels.

Gonzalez survived a challenge and moved up to the banking subcommittee on housing while White took over the armed services subcommittee on investigations.

Two Texans picked up subcommittee chairmanships on the veterans affairs panel. Rep. Sam Hall, a Marshall Democrat, will have the compensation and pensions subcommittee while Rep. Marvin Leath, a Marlin Democrat, heads the housing and memorial affairs subcommittee.

Other Texans returning to subcommittee chairmanships include Rep. J.J. Pickle, an Austin Democrat, to the important and increasingly visible tax-writing subcommittee on social security; Rep. Abraham Kazen, a Laredo Democrat, to the interior subcommittee on water and power resources; and Rep. Mickey Leland, a Houston Democrat, to the postal subcommittee on personnel and modernization.

Woman's Suicide Also Kills Kids

MESQUITE, Texas (AP) — A policeman's wife wrote a note for her husband and two kids that said, in part, "I wasn't the best Mom."

She then committed suicide by breathing automobile exhaust fumes and her children died in their sleep when those fumes leaked from the garage into the house, investigators said.

Jackie Marie Heerdt, 33, was found lying on the kitchen floor of her home in this Dallas suburb. Her automobile, gasoline tank empty, was in the garage and the door from the garage into the kitchen was open — carbon monoxide filled the house, police said.

She apparently was returning to the house when she collapsed, leaving the door open to the fatal fumes.

"She may have changed her mind about committing suicide, she may have remembered one last thing to do. We don't know," said field investigator Tony Badger of the Dallas County Medical Examiner's office.

"We think it happened sometime in the morning because the car had run out of gas, the kids were still in bed and it looked as if they had all been dead about six hours," Badger said.

The children — Richard Lawrence Heerdt, 5, and Sheryl Lynn Heerdt, 10 — were found dead in their beds, clad in their pajamas, he added.

The grim discovery was made by Mrs. Heerdt's estranged husband, Mesquite Police Sgt. Richard Heerdt, between 5 p.m. and 6 p.m. Saturday, police said.

Badger issued a preliminary ruling of accidental asphyxiation by carbon monoxide in the children's deaths.

"It didn't look like she meant to kill the kids," he said. "She left a note to her children and husband."

"'I wasn't the best Mom ... Do the best you can,'" Badger quoted one of the note as saying. The note included "kind of general stuff," he added.

The family's two parakeets also died from the fumes.

Relatives and friends became concerned Saturday when Sheryl did not show up for her own birthday party, which Mrs. Heerdt had planned, investigators said.

Search For Cans Yielded Cash Instead

WILSONVILLE, Ore. (AP) — Three men who were trying to earn spare change by searching roadside litter for returnable cans ended up going after paper instead. It was worth more.

The three Portland men, who asked police to withhold their names, found $14,000 in cash along Interstate 5 south of Wilsonville on Friday.

After the men brought the money to police, officers returned with them to the same spot on Saturday and found even more money.

The paper they found was worth some 300,000 cans and bottles at the going deposit rate.

Kings College, which later became Columbia University, opened in New York City in 1754 with eight students and one instructor.

3-Year-Old After His Dad's Record

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Henry Marshall Jr., son of the world's push-up champion, has broken one world mark and now wants to kick his father completely out of the record book.

Besides being able to do more than 3,000 push-ups in two hours, the main thing Henry Jr. has going for him in his quest is time — he is only 3 years old.

Young Henry got interested in doing push-ups from his father, Henry Marshall Sr. of San Antonio, who holds the world's record in 10 push-up categories and once did 2,800 push-ups using only one arm.

"Ever since he was a small baby he lay next to me during my four-hour workout," said Marshall Sr., 35, who was in El Paso visiting friends. "He started doing girls' push-ups on his knees and was up to 100 by the time he was 1. I got him a swimming pool when he reached 1,000 push-ups."

Henry Jr., who completed his record 3,078 push-ups in two hours during a trip to Japan where he competed against 5- and 12-year-olds, boasted "I'm going to take all my dad's titles away."

Although Henry Jr. likes to rip off his shirt, flex his muscles and and ham it up in front of a camera, Marshall said at his age the exercises won't make him muscle-bound.

"It just increases the oxygen flowing to his brain. It helps make him bright and builds character," he said.

Marshall, a photographer who can do more than 9,000 push-ups in five hours, thinks his son could be nationally famous. "I want to get him in commercials. I just wish someone would contact us," he said.

Tonight In Borger...

Western Takes On FPC

BORGER -- Western Junior College Athletic Conference winds down here tonight as the Prairie Dolls and Plainsmen of Frank Phillips College entertain Western Texas as 6 and 8 o'clock.

Tonight's show will be the final of the regular season for WTC's Dusters, which have already earned a bid to March 1-4 Region V Tournament. Western Texas' Westerners, playing in the late game tonight, finish up their season at home Thursday, hosting Midland College.

Neither of tonight's contests look to have much bearing on the WJCAC championship races, though both could alter seeding in the respective regional tournaments.

Coach Joe Cushing's Dusters, 8-3 in WJCAC play, are tied for second in the conference and would slip to fourth with an unexpected loss. The Prairie Dolls are 0-10 and have already been eliminated from regional competition.

WTC defeated the Dolls 98-72 in an earlier meeting this season and are expected to win again tonight.

The situation is reversed in men's play, where the 12-4 Plainsmen have little chance at the WJCAC title, but can move up in the seeding bracket for the Region V Tournament, to be held March 4-7. The Plainsmen are in second place in the standings, behind Midland and tied with Howard College.

Western Texas' Westerners are 6-10 in conference competition and have a dim - though possible - chance at making the regional tournament. To get there, the Westerners would have to win tonight and Thursday, and New Mexico Junior College and Amarillo would have to lose their remaining games.

Tigers Challenge Andrews Tuesday In Key 2-4A Tilt

ANDREWS -- In case you just got out of the lockup or have returned from an extended vacation, here are the obvious facts concerning Tuesday's key District 2-AAAA basketball game between the Snyder Tigers and No. 7 ranked Andrews Mustangs here:

1. Snyder comes here in a position to win the 2-4A crown outright, needing only one victory to sew up the school's third straight district title.

2. Andrews must defeat the Tigers to have any chance at the championship. A Mustang victory would in all probability set a rematch between first-round co-champs Snyder and Odessa Ector; the winner of which would meet Andrews in a title-deciding playoff.

3. Game time is 8 p.m., but officials from both schools are urging fans who wish to find a seat to arrive prior to the 6:15 junior varsity game. Tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for students.

Those are the crucial points, but there are other facts surrounding the game which serve to make Tuesday's tilt all the more exciting.

Snyder claims a 1-0 record over the state-ranked Mustangs, garnered on Jan. 27 when Eric Arnold canned a 16-foot jump shot at the buzzer to give the Tigers a scant 35-33 victory. The Tigers won the game in part by allowing Andrews just 8 second-half points after the Mustangs had built a 25-22 halftime lead.

Another key to the victory was the Tigers' defense of Mustang standout Jerry Alaniz, who averages over 20 points a game but was held to an unbelieveable three points in that meeting.

Andrews boasts a 25-4 record for the season; 12-2 in overall district play and 6-0 in the second round. Snyder, proclaiming a 16 game winning streak, is 19-12 for the season, 14-1 in overall 2-4A competition and 7-0 in the second round.

The key may be Andrew's 6-0 mark, meaning that the Mustangs have two more district games -- Tuesday's against Snyder and one Friday against Fort Stockton. Though not expected, the Tigers would still win the crown if the Mustangs beat them tomorrow but lost to Fort Stockton in their final game.

Vigeneron Ties Vault Record

GRENOBLE, France (AP) — Thierry Vigeneron of France tied his world indoor record in the pole vault with a leap of 18 feet 8½ inches in a European Track and Field meet dominated by East and West Germany.

Overall, West Germany and East Germany won six of the total 18 events in the two-day meet. Switzerland, Poland, Italy and Finland each had two victories. The Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria and France had one win apiece.

NMSU Claims First Place...

WTC 2nd In Holder Event

New Mexico State University shot a 294 here Saturday then came back with a day's low of 293 Sunday to win the third annual T.W. Holder Intercollegiate Golf Tournament with a 587 total.

Coach Bob O'Day's Westerners placed second with a 602 score. The Westerners, which will host the first annual Stephens Intercollegiate Tournament in Austin on Feb. 28 and March 1, led after Saturday's round with a 292, but recorded a 310 on Sunday to slip to second.

Western Texas entered three teams in the meet, finishing second, sixth and 11th. Nine universities and 12 junior colleges - 107 players - participated in the tourney.

"We had three teams play and I was proud of their effort both days," noted O'Day. "The field was very strong and we did not get good weather either day. New Mexico State University has an outstanding golf team and played very well to win the tournament."

Weather was cold Saturday with winds north to northwest at 25-30 miles an hour. Conditions warmed up slightly on Sunday, but west winds continued to blow in the low 20s.

Cameron University tied for second with WTC, carding scores of 294 and 308 for a 602. Fourth place went to New Mexico Junior College No. 1 with a 301 and a 309 for a 610 total. Fifth was Southwestern Oklahoma State University, 303 and 311 for a 614, while Western Texas No. 2 shot a 302 and a 315 for a 617.

Medalist was Ken Schall of NMSU with rounds of 68 and 71 for a 139 total. Second went to Cliff Pierce of Cameron with a 71-70--141, and third to Joe Malench of NMSU with rounds of 77-68 for a 145.

Jeff Seger of Western Texas No. 1 tied for fourth with a 146; rounds of 71 and 74. Freshman George Gonzales led WTC Green with a 149, nine over par. He finished in a tie for seventh in the medalist race. Sophomore Bill Leonard led the White squad with a 157.

LAMESA -- Snyder tennis team increased its District 2-AAAA team record to 5-1 over the weekend here, defeating Lamesa 16-2 and Pecos 17-1. The Tigers were to take on Lake View in San Angelo tomorrow, but Coach Bud Burke said efforts were being made to reschedule the match so the netters could attend the Snyder-Andrews basketball game.

The Tigers are to compete in the Regional Team Tournament, in Sweetwater, this Friday and Saturday. The top four finishers in the two-day tournament will advance to the State Team Tournament in Abilene.

Snyder will play its first opponent, Andrews, in Big Spring on Friday, due to lack of courts in Sweetwater. Eleven teams will compete in the tournament, with Brownwood, Brownfield, Fort Stockton and Snyder being the top four seeds.

Busy Weekend For City Police

A variety of incidents were reported during the weekend by city police.

Billy Grimmett reported the theft of a citizen's band radio Saturday. The CB was valued at $150. Working that case was Robert Harbin.

Vickie McGovern reported a dognapping incident. She claims that her Dachshund was removed from her car while the vehicle was parked at a local restaurant. The case was worked by Bill Armstrong.

Then, from the Westerner Bunkhouse, Curtis Lee said someone entered his room and took four $20 bills, leaving in their place four $1 bills. Investigating that report was Don Cheek.

From 201 East Highway, D.V. Merritt said someone took a 500 to 600-foot section of chainlink fence worth $750. Receiving that complaint was Sgt. Dale Burns.

The first traffic accident was reported Saturday at 10:45 a.m. in the 1300 block of 25th St. Involved in it were a 1977 GMC driven by David H. Reed and a 1972 Toyota driven by Ronald J. Autry. Kerry Fritz worked that accident.

The next traffic accident wasn't reported until Sunday at 10:50 a.m. when a parked 1977 Oldsmobile owned by Isidro Martinez was struck by a vehicle which left the scene. The accident occurred in the 2100 block of College Ave.

Armstrong worked the next wreck at 5 p.m. in the 500 block of 31st St. There, a 1970 Buick driven by Gerald Lee Woodruff and a 1972 GMC driven by Elies Bailey collided.

Tryouts Tonight For C-City Play

COLORADO CITY-Auditions for "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," the opening production for the 1981 season at Colorado City Playhouse, will be held tonight and Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Playhouse.

The musical-comedy which had a two and a half year run on Broadway and was later a successful movie has a cast of ten men and seven women. The music and lyrics for the show are by Stephen Sondheim, who also wrote the lyrics to "West Side Story".

The script is by Larry Gelbart, who has become famous as one of the originators and producers of the television version of "Mash".

Those persons interested in auditioning will be asked to read scenes from the play and should be prepared to sing a number of their choice. An accompanist will be provided.

Director Fred McFarland and music director Verna West of Snyder urge Snyderites to make the trip to Colorado City to tryout. A car pool arrangement will be made after casting to help defray gasoline expenses for rehersals and performances.

The musical will be presented at the Playhouse April 22, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30, May 1, 2.

Mother Buried Two-Year-Old

SAN JOSE (AP) — San Jose police dug up the remains of a 2-year-old child over the weekend after the mother said she buried the boy herself because she couldn't afford a proper burial.

The woman, identified in the coroner's report as 22-year-old Rose Adame, was arrested in Houston last week on an unrelated charge, and during the course of the investigation, police there learned of the incident.

Mrs. Adame returned to San Jose Friday and led police to a remote area on IBM property, where they dug up the body of Rudy Adame, according to a police news release.

She told authorities, according to the coroner's report, that the child became ill last November, that she had no money to seek medical treatment and that she buried him herself when he died Nov. 30 in a San Jose motel room where she was staying.

Initial autopsy results released Sunday failed to reveal the cause of death. No charges had been filed.

Homicide Lt. Robert Moir said Mrs. Adame had tears in her eyes when the child was exhumed.

"She buried the child two days before his second birthday," he said.

He said he assured her "there will be a decent burial for her child ... She was relieved that the child will receive a decent burial. It was like a ton of bricks being lifted off her shoulders."

Actress, Father In Drug Program

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Mackenzie Phillips, 21, and her musician father, John Phillips, are undergoing treatment for drug addiction together after squandering their fortunes, their careers and nearly their lives on heroin and cocaine, the two say.

Fired last year from her starring role on TV's "One Day At A Time," Miss Phillips said in an interview in this week's People Magazine that she had "always wanted to be like my father...even though he was a junkie."

More Take Advantage Of Sun As Energy Source

LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Supporters of solar energy are running into storm clouds in Washington, but the use of the sun to heat water and homes continues to spread.

The Energy Information Administration, which is part of the Department of Energy, said recently that 28 percent more square feet of solar collection devices were produced in the first six months of 1980 than in the same period a year earlier. The agency said the solar manufacturing industry is growing "vigorously."

The Solar Lobby, a nonprofit group formed to promote the use of renewable resources for energy, says that more than three hundred thousand active solar units have been installed in the United States. The organization also says the country could get as much as one-fourth of its energy from the sun by the year 2000.

The Reagan administration's budget plans, however, call for sharp cuts in government spending on the development of solar energy. Backers of solar energy say the proposals could cripple the industry.

There are two ways to use solar energy — actively and passively.

Passive systems make use of the architecture and design of a building itself. Extra-thick masonry walls, for example, or windows that face south can be used to gain energy from the sun.

Active systems start with a collector — an insulated, weather-tight box with a glass top and a dark bottom to absorb the heat from the sun's rays. The collector heats air or liquid which is moved to storage areas by fans or pumps. The heat is kept in the storage areas until it is needed. An auxiliary heater is used to provide heat and hot water during long cloudy spells. According to the Solar Lobby, an active solar system can provide 50 percent to 75 percent of a home's heating needs.

The cost of solar equipment has declined in recent years. Many families may find the sun's energy is cheaper than they think, and a hot water system is a relatively simple way to start using solar.

The Department of Energy says a solar hot water system, including installation, costs $2,000 to $3,000. You can get a federal tax credit of 40 percent of the first $10,000 you spend on an active solar system. (Passive systems do not now qualify for tax credits.)

You have to weigh the cost against what you save in fuel bills. You can get a rough idea of the savings by calculating how much you now spend on hot water.
