10 KILLED IN BUS WRECK

Hottest Primary In County History Expected

POLLS WILL OPEN AT 8 A. M. CLOSING 7 P. M. SATURDAY

DEMOCRATS AND REPUBLICANS HOLD PRIMARIES THROUGHOUT STATE

Beginning at 8:00 A. M. Saturday, July 24, one huge panorama of the day will begin, which will take in the whole of primary election day, marking what promises to be the most closely contested and the hottest voting of the State, and certainly of this part of it for some time.

The polls, as provided by the law, will open at eight o'clock, and close at seven o'clock Saturday evening. Every precinct chairman will be ready to open the polls promptly at the hour and will close upon the exact minute of seven o'clock.

Both the Democrats and the Republicans are holding their Primaries on this date, and both are promising to be at least interesting.

As pointed out by W. W. Campbell, county chairman of the Democratic committee, only Democrats can vote in the Democratic Primary, and Republicans only in the Republican primary. There can be no interchange of ballots, no Republican may vote in a Democratic primary and vice-versa. This is provided by law. The Democrats do not allow the colored people to vote in their primary.

Democratic Convention
The Democratic County convention will be held in the County Courtroom, Saturday, August 31, at ten o'clock A. M. Every voting precinct in the County will select delegates to the convention, to the ratio of one delegate for each twenty-five votes cast for the Democratic Nominee for Governor at the last general election in November 1924.

These delegates will be named at Precinct meetings, held by Precinct chairmen in each of the 26 voting precincts in Lubbock county, at the suggested hour of four-thirty P. M. Saturday, July 24.

In view of the fact that the women of the County have the same voting privilege and power as the men, it is urged that the women voters be well represented as delegates in the County convention, so that they will have equal representation there.

Qualified Voter Explained
There are some few technicalities of the voting law, Judge Campbell said, which have been the source of some argument and speculation. One of these is the requirements of age of a voter; and the authentic answer to this question is that no one can vote until they are 21 years of age, have resided in the county for six months, and in this State for 12 months, and until they have paid their poll tax if they are between the ages of 21 and 60 years.

However, in regard to the poll tax, it is to be understood that if a person become 21 after Jan. 1 of the voting year, he is exempt from the tax; but if he becomes 21 before Jan. 1, he is required to pay.

Federal Operatives File Liquor Suits

GALVESTON, July 23. (AP)—Federal prohibition operatives, working out of Houston, yesterday afternoon filed several scores of complaints with Brantley Harris U. S. Commissioner here, alleging violations of the liquor law. Those involved were bound over to the Federal grand jury.

The filing of complaints followed raids on "soft drink" stands in many parts of the city and is the most comprehensive campaign against liquor retailers since the closures by injunction last year. For a number of months the prohibition officers had confined their efforts to illicit distilling and brewing plants.

Candidates To Take Parting Shots Tonight

Pink L. Parrish, Mayor, has arranged a speaking for all candidates tonight, at the corner of Ave. I. and 13th Street. This will be the final say for all office seekers, and no long winded speeches will be allowed, and the meeting will be dispensed with in the shortest time possible. This will be an opportunity for the voters to see and hear, and become better acquainted with their favorite candidates.

Mayor Parrish also stated, the candidates names will be called from the official ballot, beginning at the bottom of the list and calling the list thru to the top. In this way, the minor candidates will be given first opportunity to speak, and get the most over, so that they can enjoy the speeches of the others.

Storms Follow In Wake Heat Wave Continuing Death

(By the Associated Press)
NEW YORK, July 23.—Destructive storms brought relief today to New England and the middle Atlantic states but increased by three score the death toll from a heat wave that had piled up new high temperature records.

Within 24 hours 67 deaths were added by heat and storm to Wednesday's toll of two score killed in the East and mid-west. The mid-west got relief in rain and cooling breezes early yesterday, but the East sweltered until last night.

Booth Tarkington, the author, was swept out to sea by a storm that arose while he was motorboating at Kennebunk port, Maine, but was rescued by another boating party. James Montgomery Flagg, the artist, rescued Isaac Cook, a retired St. Louis realty man from the water at Middleford Pool, Maine, to find that Mr. Cook had died of a heart attack.

Mr. Cook had plunged into the ocean to save his son's canoe, which a storm was blowing away.

There were 22 deaths in New England traceable to the heat, or storms, 10 in New York City, 11 in New Jersey, two each in Washington and Philadelphia and several upstate in New York. In addition to ten women on an outing killed by a bus accident at Nyack, N. Y. The biggest official temperature recorded was 107 in Hagerstown, Md. It was 103 in Washington and 100 generally in Pennsylvania, Maryland and Delaware.

Four persons went temporarily insane in Birmingham, N. Y. Dogs maddened by the heat, attacked children in Jersey City.

The heat here brought a plague of flies at Ogdensburg, N. Y., and snow shovels were used to clear them away. Prisoners were released from the city jail at Raleigh, N. C., on their own recognizance.

Seguin Man Lauds Hospitality Given T.C.E.A. Convention

"Lubbock has proved a wonderful host to the commercial executives of Texas and it is going to be difficult for the next convention city to equal the spontaneous hospitality displayed by you Plains people," declared Geo. D. Barber, secretary-manager of the Seguin Chamber of Commerce, who is seeking the next meeting of the T. C. E. A.

Mr. Barber is making a concerted effort to induce the commercial executives to meet with him in the "Crescent City of Texas," which is located only 36 miles east of the historic city of San Antonio on a paved sector of the Old Spanish Trail and on the main line of the Southern Pacific railway. He is offering the four-story hotel, one of which has an attractive roof garden, and the recreational advantages of the beautiful Guadalupe river.

"We hope to have three power dams completed on the Guadalupe in the proximity of Seguin by the next meeting of the T.C.E.A.," he explained. "These three dams will form lakes that compare favorably in size to Lake Cisco, Lake Worth and Medina Lake. They will afford no end of recreation for the secretaries, but without them, we can offer our guests more real enjoyment than they can possibly carry off in their pockets. I only hope that I may have the honor of doing for A. B. Davis next year what he and the good people of Lubbock have done for us during this meeting. It has been truly wonderful and Mrs. Barber and I are delighted that we have had the privilege of being your guests."

Mr. Barber stated that he was in Lubbock six years ago and the change was so marked he marvelled at the great vision of the empire builders of this section. He was here in July, 1920, just a few days after it was learned Lubbock county had sufficient population to separate the office of sheriff and tax collector. He smiled in recalling the great deluge of candidates announcing for the two offices.

Trainmaster Dies In Auto Accident

SEALY, Texas, July 23. (AP)—D. A. Ross, trainmaster of the Galveston Division of the Santa Fe Railway was fatally injured and B. L. Davis, road employee, seriously hurt in a motor car accident between Sealy and Bellville late Thursday. The motor car jumped the track and ran over Mr. Ross, who died later. Davis was moved to a hospital at Temple where his condition was reported serious.

SO THE PEOPLE MAY KNOW

The Journal and its publishers take this method of expressing thanks to the people of Lubbock and the Seventysecond Judicial District for their stand in the face of verbal assaults delivered against The Journal last night by W. C. Witcher, a candidate for public office.

The fact that Mr. Witcher's scathing attack was met with a deafening silence is taken by The Journal as an irrefutable argument that the broad-minded people of this city and this district realize The Journal's stand, and that of any other newspaper from the standpoint of accepting paid advertising.

The Journal is not a candidate for public office. It has no fight to make on any individual or set of individuals yet, at the same time, it will continue in the future, as it has in the past, to be a newspaper—standing behind the highest ideals of the profession—and it cannot be muzzled through attacks, verbal or otherwise, by any selfish individual or set of individuals.

The Journal points with pride at its record in Lubbock. The people know that The Journal has always been in the forefront whenever a municipal or sectional campaign of progress has been waged. It is proud of its representation in the Chamber of Commerce, the Board of City Development and every civic organization in this city and it knows that its efforts in behalf of progress and improvement have been appreciated and commended by the public at large.

The Journal's reputation for fair play has not been built in a day and neither does its future depend upon the soap box yelping of any lone individual. The Journal knows that no man, regardless of his self-heralded oratorical ability, or self-announced greatness, can come into this section of the state and by his unsupported statements, do this newspaper any harm.

Huge Crowd Hears Witcher Lambast Opponents As District Attorney's Campaign Here Reaches Fever Heat

"I Commend The Journal"
—Witcher

The following unsolicited statement of commendation appeared in the Plains Journal of April 9, 1925, over the signature of W. C. Witcher, appointed district attorney, who last night hurled a verbal barrage at this publication and its publishers as 3,000 people stood silently by.

This article, headed "Public Opinion," was signed by Mr. Witcher and delivered to the offices of this publication by him, personally.

Read what he had to say fifteen months ago and contrast it with what he says today. It is word for word in except as it appeared in the Plains Journal of April 9th, 1925.

Editor, Plains Journal:
"Having had occasion to note the progress which the Plains Journal has made since its establishment in Lubbock, and the splendid service it has rendered in the development of the great South Plains country, I believe that a word of commendation is not altogether out of order."

"Messrs. Guy and Roderick, editor and business manager, respectively, of The Journal, deserve the thanks of the South Plains people for their enterprising spirit and efforts to convert these virgin plains into growing fields of corn, cotton, wheat, maize, alfalfa and the hundred other products of which it is so abundant. While they are already a powerful factor in the field of journalism in West Texas."

"I commend the policy of The Journal as being absolutely fair."

Storm Warning Issued By Weather Bureau

WASHINGTON, July 23. (AP)—The weather bureau today issued the following storm warning:
"Advisory 10:00 a. m. torpid disturbance apparently central about 16 north; 64 west moving west-northwest; eastern advent at 10:00 a. m. south of longitude of 76 south of latitude 25."

Posses Continue Search For Eight Escaped Convicts

(By the Associated Press)
HUNTSVILLE, Texas, July 23. — Poses of officers, heavily armed and expecting battle, continued on the trail Friday of eight desperate fugitives who participated Wednesday night in the Ferguson farm prison break, during which Will Wade, 50, a picket guard, was slain.

Two of the men sought stormed the prison farm cell house where prisoners were confined, killed Wade, released six prisoners and all escaped in a speeding automobile while exchanging shots with other guards. Authorities centered their efforts on an endeavor to pick up the trail lost after the car had been traced to a ferry crossing on Trinity river, between Midway and Crockett, a few miles from the prison farm.

Pursuing officers describe those sought as men of the most desperate type. Five of the six freed, according to Warden Speer of the Huntsville penitentiary were sentenced to long terms for major crimes. The sixth, Richard Naylor, a youth of 17, was serving a two-year term for theft. Other prisoners liberated, their crimes and sentences were: George Dixon, theft and burglary, 34 years; Charlie Pryor, murder, 30 years; E. H. Holland, highway robbery and intent to murder 25 years; Robert Barnard, burglary, 14 years; and Ireland Alvin, bank robbery, 20 years.

Warden Speer also said the liberators of the prisoners are escaped convicts. Guards of the prison farm, he said, identified them as being Harvey Elmer and Charles Fowler, both released recently from the Ferguson farm.

BIG OIL COMPANY LAND MAN HERE

Harvey D. Thrope, of Fort Worth, connected with the land department of the Marland Oil company, is in Lubbock and is at the present time engaged in making a survey of eleven West Texas counties, he told the Journal at noon today. According to Mr. Thrope he was sent here as a result of the extensive leasing activities in Lubbock, Hockley, Cochran and Lamb counties, particularly, and upon his return to Fort Worth would make a report of the conditions in each county in respect to oil and gas possibilities.

Mr. Thrope and his wife came here a little more than a week ago, and will probably be here several days longer. While he stated that he could give no opinion concerning the petroleum possibilities as a whole that he believed that there were parts of the section that might have possibilities.

When his report is filed and passed upon by other officials if it shows commercial possibilities the Marland company will probably send geologists here to make a detailed report of the territory, he said. He has not bought any leases thus far.

Huge Loving Cup Is Given Hi School Band

A 17-inch silver loving cup was presented to the Lubbock High School band by John Boswell, manager of the Southwest Development service of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce, Thursday evening at a meeting of the Texas Commercial Executives Association. The cup is a gift of the Amarillo Good-Will party of the Dallas C. of C., in appreciation of courtesies shown them at the West Texas C. of C. convention in Amarillo, according to the inscription on the cup. The cup, which is mounted on a three and one-half inch base, is on display at Anderson Brothers.

Twin New Arrivals Named For Candidate

SHERMAN, July 23. (AP)—Two new supporters for Attorney General Dan Moody, candidate for governor, came into this world Friday morning on the eve of the election. Twins, a boy and a girl, were named by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robertson, Dan Moody Robertson and Mildred Paxton Robertson in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Moody. The weights were eight and eight three quarter pounds.

MANY OTHERS ON BUS EXCURSION SERIOUSLY HURT

STORM SWEEPS NEW YORK STATE LEAVING TRAIL OF DESTRUCTION

(By the Associated Press)
NYACK, N. Y., July 23. —Ten women and children out of 48 who sought to escape the heat of New York City on a bus excursion yesterday, are dead. The driver of the bus, which overturned, was held today in jail.

Three other passengers were on the danger list at the Nyack hospital. No passengers escaped injury; 24 were in hospitals. The rest were sent home after hospital treatment.

The passengers were returning to their homes in Brooklyn after spending the day in Bear Mountain Park.

Witnesses said the bus, driven by Daniel J. Lasstro, was not speeding prior to the accident. The machine bumped over a crossing in the heart of Sparkhill, N. Y., and fifteen feet east of the crossing swerved, then started rolling down a slight incline. Witnesses saw Lasstro working frantically with his levers and heard the screams of the women and children as the machine gathered momentum. The brakes refused to hold and when the machine reached the bottom of the incline and crashed against a store window, it rolled over.

The dead are: Mrs. Catherine Barth; Mrs. Margaret Hepler; May Reiter; Mrs. E. J. Eggleston; Mrs. Henry Schubert; Catherine Schuster; Mrs. Swenken; and three unidentified women.

38 Killed in Three Counties
SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 23. (AP)—Fearing down through Madison, Chenango and Cortland counties a gale of tornado-like proportions injured 38 persons, caused property damage estimated at $1,000,000 and left wrecked farm buildings and crops in its twisted path late yesterday according to reports today.

The 38 injured were pea pickers on a farm near Barville. They had sought shelter in a barn when the storm broke and the building collapsed. Hall and rain fell in torrents a moment before the wind swept over the area.

Precinct One Will Convene Tomorrow

Convention of residents of Precinct One, Lubbock county, will be held tomorrow afternoon and at that time delegates to the county Democratic convention will be chosen, Harley D. Woods, Precinct chairman, stated yesterday. The meeting will be held at three-thirty o'clock in the courthouse. Members of the nominating committee include Mrs. Percy Spencer, chairman, J. B. Maxey and Homer L. Pharr.

Subway Strike In Gotham Is Renewed

NEW YORK, July 23. (AP)—New York's subway strike is on again. Four hundred striking interborough Rapid Transit company employees, who today marched in a body to the company's yards to ask that they be given back the jobs they quit on July 6, were met with the announcement that the company would not treat with Edward P. Lavin, the strike leader.

The strikers shouted a derisive answer to the company's officials and returned to their headquarters to discuss the new phase of the strike. They declared they would not break allegiance to their strike leaders.

Journal News Reel

Hottest primary and heaviest vote in history of Lubbock county expected here tomorrow as Democrats and Republicans each hold election. Ten people killed as bus wrecks with New York party seeking to get relief from heat. Storm follow in wake of stifling heat wave in East, leaving death and destruction. Poses, heavily armed, continue search for eight escaped convicts in South Texas. Two theories are advanced toward solution of mystery murder of Texarkana. Big crowd heard W. C. Witcher continue political attack in campaign here Thursday night. Cotton crop of 15,350,000 bales indicated by condition report as of July 16.

IN SOCIETY

A. W. Mack Is Honored With Sunrise Breakfast

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Hubbard, and Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Hunt gave a sunrise breakfast at the Tumble "N" Pool Friday morning honoring A. W. Mack, who is going away for a two month's tour of the United States and Canada. Mr. Mack is a graduate of Edinburgh College of Art. He was also a teacher in the George Watson College of Art in Edinburgh, Scotland, and has studied in Paris, France, and London, England. Mr. Mack expects to return to Lubbock the first of October and open a studio. Those enjoying the sunrise breakfast were Miss Evelyn Wilson, A. W. Mack, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Hubbard, and son, Bryl, and Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Hunt.

Menus for the Family

BREAKFAST: Shredded fresh pineapple, cereal, thin cream, waffles, syrup, crisp whole wheat toast, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON: Consomme, rice and vegetable salad, brown bread and butter sandwiches, nut cookies, milk, tea.

DINNER: Broiled lamb chops, creamed potatoes, buttered new peas, head lettuce with French dressing, graham bread, creamed tapoca with fresh fruit, milk, coffee.

While it's perfectly true that we need less food in hot weather than in cold, what food we do require must be carefully and correctly chosen. Foods that nourish and are easily digested are necessary any time of year, but during the summer months dishes that keep up cool are in great demand. To this end salads and vegetables in abundance are suggested. The rice and vegetable salad is rather unusual, but one of those substantial meals that takes the place of meat on a hot day.

Rice and Vegetable Salad: One cup well cooked boiled rice, 1 sweet green pepper, 1 pimiento, 1 teaspoon grated onion, 4 tomatoes, 2 tablespoons Roquefort cheese, 1/2 cup French dressing, lettuce.

Boil tomatoes and peel. Chill for several hours. Boil pepper and slice off the thin tissue covering the flesh. Remove seeds and white pith and mince flesh. Mince pimiento. Combine rice, pepper, pimiento and onion with enough French dressing to make moist. Pack into four small cups or molds. Chill. Unmold on a bed of lettuce and surround with cheese slightly with a fork and heat to remaining French dressing. Pour over molds of rice and tomatoes and serve.

YOUR SMILE WILL TELL YOUR SECRET

One time I met a novelist who had had an hour's audience with Queen Mary of England. Naturally I asked, "What is she like?"

"Much maligned in photograph and biography," was the reply. "She is one of the rarest and truest of people. Her smile alone sets her apart. She has a fine mouth and a kind, natural smile."

We judge people invariably by their expressions—particularly by their smiles. To smile in itself means nothing. It is the way we smile. A smile may be the cruellest thing on earth. Recently a line caught my eye. "The hate that lies under laughter!" The devil, you know, always smiles.

Most of us are not like the "Virginian," who remarked to the man who had cursed him, "When you say that, smile!" We would rather take the pill without the sugar coating.

Nothing is so blasting as the smile of insincerity. A superficial culture is responsible for this. "Pack up your feelings in your old kit bag and smile, smile, smile!" Says Mrs. Grundy. "No matter how you feel, smother your emotions and smile."

Well, probably it is better to smile the wrong way than not to smile at all. For as a popular song told us not so long ago, there are about a hundred varieties—smiles that make us happy and smiles that make us sad. But the smiling smiles, sour smiles, cutting smiles, and sour smiles certainly could be reduced to a minimum if we would take ourselves in hand for a bit of self-analysis.

We are that if you are jealous or angry or disgusted or bored, your smile will find you out. Learn to like people and get rid of unpleasant character traits. When you think you are ready to be graduated, go to a little child for your final examination.

Mrs. E. Y. Lee Honoree At Birthday Dinner Party

Mrs. E. Y. Lee was given a surprise birthday dinner at 6 o'clock Thursday evening by her daughters, Mesdames R. G. Wilkerson and W. L. Burleson, of Tahoka, at the home of Mrs. J. W. Burleson. A three tiered birthday cake centered the cake and a chicken dinner with all accessories was served. Guests were Mesdames W. M. Green, R. F. Dixon, C. P. Simpson, Frank Stockridge and J. W. Burleson.

WOMAN'S DAY ABROAD

BY ALLENE SUMNER

ON BOARD S. S. LEVIATHAN, July 23.—"How heavenly! Six days at sea with nothing to do but rest!" exclaimed envious souls when I embarked.

"It is to laugh," we work hard! First of all, they steal exactly one hour on us at midnight each night. We may climb the upper berth ladder at 11:30 and go to bed at 12:30 one minute later. Seems to be something about the sun doing something funny at sea!

We stand in line for hours. Line to change money. Line to buy boat tickets. Line to get baggage checks. Line to get seat at table. Line to get steamer rug. Line to ask for a bath. (Baths will persist in running through my story.)

The bath stewards take a craftsman's pride in their work. They brag to one another of the "just right" temperatures they achieve, and how the last misadventure said she never had such a nice bath before.

They boast of the respective negligees their clients wear. "I say, old thing," I heard one steward say to his inquiry of his fellow, "Did you see the little feet my lady had?"

Glowing with manly pride, my particular bath steward invited me last night to come look at my baby in the bath.

I all ready to oh-and-ah over a rosy cherub divested of swaddling clothes, found that "the baby" was about ready for Eton or Rugby.

"Either you, I'm no purpose in the aquarium," he very properly rebuked his doting steward.

I am glad I am only a tourist. Melodies are floating from the second class cabin.

A lady old enough to remember that some folks should be seen and not heard is warbling "Asleep in the Deep."

The boat caste system is admirably shown in its library. We tourists have a few Cooper and Sir Walter Scott volumes.

Second class gets a bit more modern with "Garden of Allah" and "Penny Dreadful."

Up in the first class salon whither I bootlegged myself, they have Ben Hecht and "Green Hat."

However, they do not read up there. They play bridge, mah jongg, chew gum, smoke cigarettes, and languidly call "steward." The array of emerald and diamond bracelets and rings is dazzling.

The beauty parlor is doing a rushing business. I watched many a blonde emerge who had entered the emporium of fragrance as a brunette. Many are reading "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."

My duenna is reading guide books. We are traveling alone. No part for us. We once knew a girl who went with a party and has told for five years the story of how they didn't see Natchez by moonlight because the outlined trip did not specify moonlight and the guide wouldn't take them until the next night, when the moon was gone.

My duenna, who will figure much in this narrative, is traveling incognito. She says that a girl is known by the company she keeps. Her last name is Herring. Her middle name is Pretzel. And her first name is Pansy. Pansy Pretzel Herring just whispered in my ear that she had seen a school of porpoise. I am denied seeing such things, staying in this cabin as I must, to give news of what's what to my large and admiring following.

I now, too, go forth to see the porpoises, which are, it seems, large black fish, more coy than whales but smaller.

Earnest Bakin, of Amarillo, is visiting his mother here.

Epworth League Group Attends Enjoyable Picnic

About 40 members of the senior Epworth League of the First Methodist church enjoyed a picnic at Igo ranch Thursday evening. The group met at the church here, leaving about seven o'clock. A delicious picnic lunch was spread.

Splendid Services At Nazarene Church Meet

Rev. W. E. Ellis opened a revival at the church of the Nazarene Wednesday evening with a splendid service and indications are for an excellent revival, according to the pastor of the church. Reverend Ellis will be joined here Monday or Tuesday by his wife Mrs. Lula Ellis, a returned missionary from Japan. She will assist him in the singing and preaching. The preacher is an excellent speaker and Bible scholar, according to those who have heard him.

Mrs. C. C. Prater and son, Charles, and mother, Mrs. J. M. Neely, have returned to their home in Hamilton after visiting Mr. and Mrs. Guion Grege, 1941 10th street. Mrs. Prater and Mrs. Guion are sisters.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Campbell and family are planning to leave Monday for a visit into the New Mexico mountains.

A number of Lubbock people have planned their vacations to follow immediately after the elections this week end.

Mrs. Lon A. Robertson, of Plainview, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Young.

Sidelights On T. C. E. A. Meeting

Every secretary is loud in his praise for the fine way that Lubbock has entertained them. Chicken Cogdill of Brady is here telling the boys how to build chicken houses and hatcheries.

Big Roy Burge from the Port city of Port Arthur seems to be at home, even if he can't see the big waters of the gulf.

Barbecued chicken is a favorite dish for secretaries, they devoured several hundred fine specimens Thursday evening at the County Club grounds.

John Roswell the shiek of Dallas is giving the Lubbock girls the once over. Yes John is a bachelor.

Homer Wade is here with his big West Texas smile. Guy Hill, fine looking fishman of Shamrock entertains with the Charles every now and then.

Mrs. Paul Vickert of Midland says that the wives that do not attend the conventions don't know what they are missing.

E. S. Shoaf of Wellington, says that he expects to come back to Lubbock in 1928 when the West Texas chamber of commerce convention is held here. Wellington was a strong supporter of Lubbock at the Amarillo convention.

Mrs. Hamilton, secretary of the Alpine chamber says that Alpine is the finest town in Texas, but if she ever moves that it will be to Lubbock.

Jelks Castellaw the man that made the Ellis County Fair famous is here with his charming wife.

Trinidad, Colorado, is represented by Wm. E. Inglis and wife. G. C. Richardson of Brownsville drove 965 miles to attend the convention, some town and some convention says Richardson.

Lee Simmons, of Sherman says that he is glad to be in the city that cooperation built.

Walter Long, the presidents secretary is having the time of his life. Maury Hopkins, of Plainview, is another bachelor that is enjoying himself despite his loneliness.

The race for the next convention is expected to be a hot one, as George Barber of Seguin the city of many fine hotels is doing much hard work to secure the 1927 convention. Jacksonville is also a candidate, as is Sherman.

Wellington "The City of Unlimited Possibilities" is asking the secretaries to come to their city in 1928. Shoaf says he knows the boys will want to return to good old West Texas before many moons. Lubbock knows how to do things says pretty boy Bell of Marlin.

Mrs. P. B. Penny has gone to Fort Worth to be with her daughter, Mrs. Jess Williams, who is ill.

HUGE CROWD HEAR WITCHER IN HIS CLOSING TALK

entertainment, previously arranged to honor visiting chamber of commerce executives attending the annual convention of the Texas Commercial Executives association, was begun, the music from an orchestra playing in the Elks' hall across the street nearly drowning the speaker's words. Although the entertainment had been arranged in advance of Mr. Witcher's speaking location a compromise was made between the friends of the candidate and the committee in charge of the entertainment for the visitors was halted until the speech was ended. A this juncture Mr. Witcher took the opportunity to criticize the action of A. B. Davis, manager of the chamber of commerce, who is in charge of the local arrangements of the commercial convention. In his remarks concerning Mr. Davis he referred to the entertainment as a "ku klux trick" and from time to time in his address attempted to bring into the campaign the klar issue. He also directed a few remarks at the persons at the convention-entertainment, at one time challenging anyone present there to come down and "meet me like a man."

He Rape Grand Jurors In discussing the advertisement which appeared against him in two Lubbock newspapers, signed by a number of grand jurors who have served with him in the inquisitorial parts of the District court, Mr. Witcher reiterated his previous statement "that for the most part those grand jurors were handpicked and tailor-made."

Automobiles were parked solidly about the speaker's platform and many listeners were standing closely packed about the stand. For the most part the crowd was orderly, the lone exception being at the time of the controversy concerning the chamber of commerce entertainment.

STATISTICS VERY IMPORTANT TO C. OF C., SAID

Statistics can be obtained only through hard labor and patient and intelligent cooperation with the chamber of commerce and the heads of the larger business concerns, and then they are worthless, unless they are compiled, classified and filed in a practical, convenient and accessible manner, Hubert M. Harrison, general manager of the Wichita Falls chamber of commerce, declared here today.

Mr. Harrison spoke before the annual meeting of the Texas Commercial Executives association on "Statistics—How to Get and Compile." He said that some secretaries of chambers of commerce were so careless in obtaining the data that the men who want to know about businesses before making investments had begun to have little faith in the data obtained from the chambers. He urged that statistics be absolutely accurate, and advocated surveys of local industries.

"It is frequently the case that data obtained in a casual conversation, even when secured from the best known authority, are found to be inaccurate when re-checked. It is very necessary to be careful to impress the persons interviewed with the seriousness of obtaining real information, and not estimates, guesses or approximations. It is necessary to use a great deal of tact in obtaining the data."

'13' LUCKY FOR THREE TEAMS IN MAJOR LEAGUES

(By The Associated Press)

The number 13 is welcomed by a big league ball club when it represents a tally of its runs in one game. Three teams won their games by counting 13 runs yesterday. The New York Yankees beat the White Sox, 13 to 9, Washington defeated Detroit, 13 to 9, and Cincinnati humbled Boston, 13 to 3. The Pirates went down one better in turning back Brooklyn, 14 to 2.

The Yankees retained their seven game margin in the American League as Philadelphia lost its sixth straight and Cleveland won. Ruth cleared the bases with a triple for New York and Barrett, a pinch hitter, did the same for Chicago. Gehrig of the Yankees hit a home run.

Cleveland advanced to second position in the American League by beating the Athletics, 4 to 2. George Burns of the Indians led the attack with three hits, one of which was his 35th double of the season. Washington made five runs in the first inning and eight in the fifth. Ruth pitched all the way for the Senators and was hit hard in the closing frames.

St. Louis captured its third straight from the Red Sox, by 5 to 4, after 11 innings. Bill Jacobson, former Brown, now in the Boston outfield, made two doubles and three singles.

Cincinnati tallied eleven times in the second inning. Meanwhile Curtis Walker belted out two triples.

Pittsburgh amassed its 14 runs on 21 safe blows, five for extra bases. The Pirates had as many men left on the bases as runs scored.

The St. Louis Cardinals outlived the Giants, 10 to 8, but lost by 5 to 3, when the New Yorkers rallied in the ninth for two runs. Southworth and Bell of the Cardinals, and Terry of the Giants registered homers. Manager Hornsby of St. Louis was injured when a thrown ball took a bad bound and hit him.

Chicago went down in the opening game of the series with Phillies, 6 to 4. Leo Hartnett, Cub's catcher, was spiked in the eighth and was relayed by Gonzales.

Hank Severid, catcher, who gained fame with the St. Louis Browns, but late of the Washington Senators staff, has been obtained for the value price by the Yankees.

NEW CONTESTS IN RURAL SCHOOLS ANNOUNCED

AUSTIN, Texas, July 23.—New contests are announced by the Interscholastic League for one and two-teacher rural schools, according to Roy Bedichek, chief of the League Bureau of the Extension Division of the University of Texas.

"One of these contests," said Bedichek, "is athletic and one literary. The athletic contest is known as the 'Rural Pentathlon' and consists of five simple track and field events. The contestant from a one or two-teacher rural school who scores highest in these events at the county meet will be entitled to represent his county in the Rural Pentathlon in the district meet, and the winner in the district meet will be qualified for entry in the State Meet in the same events. There will thus be a state championship for the rural pentathlon, contestants in which are limited to pupils in the one and two-teacher rural schools.

"The literary event for schools of the same class will be known as the 'Three R Contest' and will consist of contests in reading, writing and arithmetic. The contest in each of these subjects will be based upon simple tests which have been devised by test and measurement experts. For illustration, the test in reading will be of the achievement type, and will determine the contestant's ability to read silently unfamiliar matter in a given time and give evidence of a comprehension of the paragraph. The test is based upon two points, viz., time taken in reading, and fullness of comprehension. The arithmetic test will be based upon speed and accuracy in the four fundamental operations; and the writing test will be based upon speed and legibility."

Northwest Golfers Lead Western Tourney

WHITE BEAR LAKE, ST. PAUL, July 23. (AP)—Two Pacific Northwest golfing stars were leading at the end of the morning 18 holes in the semi-final matches of the Western amateur golf tournament here today.

B. E. Stein, Seattle, was 2 up on Rudy Knepper, Chicago, and Frank Deip of Portland, Ore., playing a brilliant medal 69, was 6 up on Kenneth Hiert of Chicago.

Billy Evans Says

The two big surprises of the 1926 season are the New York Giants and the Washington Senators.

Last season Washington won the pennant in the American League with 96 victories and 55 defeats. The Senators finished 8½ games ahead of Philadelphia in second place.

New York won the place position in the National League, just ½ game away from Pittsburgh, the pennant winner.

In figuring the two pennant races for this season it seemed reasonable that a club capable of winning a pennant, and a team that was runner-up in the race, would surely be in the running.

Spring training conditions bore out the belief. The Senators looked as good as ever while McGraw was certain the Giants would get much improved pitching.

With the season half over these two clubs appear to be out of the running in their respective leagues. Both have fallen far short of 1925 form.

Unexpected slumps in baseball, whether of team or individual, are difficult of explanation. They just seem to happen.

When the old decline sets in on a baseball team it comes very quickly. The Giants and Senators both find themselves in such a position. It looks as if considerable rebuilding would be necessary.

When Southpaw Tom Zachary was with the Washington club he was one of the laugh-producers with a quaint sort of humor peculiar to himself.

Interviewed this spring as to the chances of the Washington club to repeat, after he had been traded to the St. Louis club for Joe Bush, Zachary said:

"If Stan Harris can dig up enough glue to keep the team together, he may be able to repeat. But if he ever runs short of glue that club is just naturally going to fall to pieces."

Reading Zachary's opinion of the club that he helped win two pennants for, first gave me a good laugh, then struck me as containing much logic in a home way.

A week or so later I was discussing the chances of Washington with Manager Stanley Harris and he made this observation:

"Tom Zachary says I will need a lot of glue to keep the club together. I hope his dope isn't right."

Now it would seem as if Zachary's prediction was well-founded. First the pitching failed and, when the pitching collapses, other troubles quickly follow.

Four veteran pitchers, Johnson, Reuther, Coveleskie and Zachary, pitched brilliantly last season. Fred Warberry was the greatest relief man in the majors.

The five pitchers named above won 77 out of the 96 games needed to win the 1925 pennant. This season they have failed to perform consistently.

Texas Team Defeats Veterans In Tennis

BROOKLINE, Mass., July 23. (AP)—The first upset in the men's doubles at the Longwood Cricket Club tennis matches came today when Malcolm T. Hill and Henry L. Johnson, Jr., both of Boston, seeded number four team, were defeated in straight sets by John Burr of Dallas and Wilmer Allison of Fort Worth, 11-9, 6-4.

The victory of Burr and Allison puts them in line to meet their fellow-Texasans, Louis N. White and Louis Taulheimer, of Dallas, national clay court doubles champions, in the semi-finals this afternoon.

In the other brace of the doubles semi-finals William T. Tilden, 2nd, and A. L. Wiener, both of Philadelphia, will play Alfred H. Chapin, Jr.,

of Springfield, Mass., and Berkeley of Austin, Texas.

AN APOLOGY

As regrettable as it is, The Journal apologizes to the members of the Texas Commercial Executives association, the city's honored guests, for the disgraceful epithets and insults hurled at them last night by a political street speaker, conducting a meeting outside the Elk's hall where an entertainment under the auspices of the local Chamber of Commerce was in progress.

Not content with publicly insulting Lubbock's guests by referring to them as "Ku Klux, un-American, cowardly curs" and daring them to come down and "meet him like a man," this speaker, W. C. Witcher, serving through appointment as district attorney, attempted to make votes out of the incident by persuading his audience that this evidence of the city's hospitality had been arranged by his political opponents to break up or disturb his meeting. The public knows that this entertainment was arranged a week in advance of Mr. Witcher's selection of a speaking location. Either ignorance of the announced plans of his city for the entertainment of her guests or totally disregarding them,
Mr. Witcher was determined to speak by force if necessary, according to his own challenge.

The Journal believes under the circumstances and in a spirit of fairness, that it was advisable to quiet
the orchestra and let Mr. Witcher finish, yet it sincerely regrets this cheap attempt to capitalize on the situation and insult the city's guests.

The Journal trusts that the visitors realize that the citizenship of Lubbock had nothing to do with these disgraceful proceedings yet it feels that an apology is due the representatives of more than 100 Texas cities, who were invited here to be honored. The Journal knows that the people of Lubbock resent this unnecessary affront and hopes that the visitors will overlook the incident.

THEY DO GRIND SLOWLY

It has been said that the mills of the gods grind slowly but they grind exceedingly fine. We are reminded that the mills of justice, too, sometimes grind slowly, and not so fine, at that.

Fourteen years ago Grace A. Fendler started the mills to grinding against Oliver Morosco and Richard Walton Tully, charging that her unpublished manuscript, "In Hawaii," had been plundered to make the stage success,
"The Bird of Paradise."

The other day, the appellate division of the supreme court finally ground out the decision that the play was plagiarized. What a gargantuan labor of grinding! Fourteen years!

It may mean a life here. Grace A.
Fendler, fourteen years ago, may have had dreams of fame. She may have found ready use, time after time, of part of the vast sum that the play-earned. For, "The Bird of Paradise," did run on for years, even as the courts
do, and made money by the basketful.

These fourteen years of grinding have meant much to the author of
"In Hawaii," more than the money involved. What might a successful fourteen years ago have meant to her?
Pride, the encouragement of her literary ambition, money, hope and ambition!

Justice delayed, here, seems to be justice denied.

THE NICKLE RIDE

Other cities are keeping an interested eye cocked on New York's big subway strike. And for a very good reason.

Aside from the fact that it is a very entertaining spectacle — to those, at least, who don't directly suffer by it —
New York is one of the comparatively few cities where a street car ride
may be bought for a nickel.

For years and years 5-cent fare has been a big municipal issue in the metropolis, and it goes without saying that it can't be maintained in the face of many wage boosts.

Other cities are saying, "Five-cent fare is fine, but we are wondering how you expect to keep it if you are forced to raise wages."

Hal Cochran's
Daily Poem

SYMPATHY

When mother has a headache,
from the same old daily grind, because she simply cannot get the housework off her mind, it helps a lot when other folk within the home are kind. She gets to feeling better of the sympathy she will find.

When little Willie cuts his foot
and, for the moment, cries, the way he takes it quite depends on how his mother tries to tell him he's a big man now: to make him realize that big men never shed a tear.

When dad comes driftin' home
at night, and everything looks

BROADWAYSWAN TOURS WHITE WAY IN COLORFUL EAST SIDE

NEW YORK, July 23.—The "gay white way" of New York's vast east side begins at Staynesant Square, a spot easily reached by east side subway or elevated trains.

This little belt of glaring area projects itself, like some glittering harrier, along Second avenue. The "gay spenders" of the foreign quarters may be found gathering about here at night. Taxicabs are as numerous as soon a populous corner of Broadway.

A roof garden presents a crude and gauche "girl show."

Police patrol the aisles of this "roof," whanging the fresh rowdies and, between acts, the place is filled with the noises of a dozen hucksters selling everything from hot dogs to ice cream.
All about are motion picture theatres,
whose titles and subtitles are done in many languages.

Now walk down the avenue a few blocks of a summer evening and you come upon a sidewalk coffee house—the Cafe Royal. The tables are partly hidden by green lattices and those seated about them sit chatting and watching the passing crowds. If one loses his eyes to the surroundings this might be Vienna or Budapest.

Here gather scores of artists and writers of the "foreign language" papers and magazines. The "old timers" have regular tables at which they appear with the accuracy of a time-lock puncher in a department store.

Actors from the Yiddish theatres are to be found there just before theatre hour, joined by young drammatists and writers—Hungarians, Germans, Russians. A dozen tongues being spoken. On the walls, in the languages of the world, are little cards announcing recitals, dances, new foreign books, musical attractions.

You walk along amusing photographic studios. In great show cases, brilliantly lighted and mounted above
the regular show windows are full of life figures of wedding parties. Most of them chromos in tinting, and stiff as the photos of grandpa in the old family album. Weddings and deaths are occasions for spending the family fortune in this section of the city.

At Ninth street look westward and you will see the Greek Orthodox church. A priest is entering. He has a heavy beard and a little rimless hat of some silken material. The crowds that make their way there of Sundays are strange mixtures of the American and the Balkan lands. The sermon is given in Slavonic.

All about, the streets blaze with invitations to dine at picturesque eating places. Most of them are Rumanian, Hungarian or Austrian, with a sprinkling of Yiddish and Russian.
"Little Rumania" begins just off Ninth street and Second Avenue. You will know you are there when you pass the "Marble Cemetery," where many of the historic folk of early New York days are buried. Now the boundary line of one of the colorful foreign colonies.

Shops of all sorts. Windows filled with exotic jewelry, sprinkled with cheap American imitations from the factories. Shops displaying women's clothing. Mostly in the latest American mode.

Music shops from which blare the loud speakers of the radio. Yes, it's some overworked song hit from Broadway, but inside you will find records in the music of all climes.

WASHINGTON
LETTER

REED IS DEMOCRATIC HOPE

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, July 23.—Watch
Senator James A. Reed of Missouri.
All the signs are that he is gaining strength every day as a Democratic presidential possibility.

Among politicians still in Washington—despite the congressional recess, they're constantly drifting out and in,
with tidings from all over the country—the increasing frequency of references to him, as such, is surprising.

Here are some of the things one hears in his favor:
He has a tremendous personality.
He has ability. He's an indomitable fighter. In his home state he has proved himself a wonderful campaign-er and vote getter.

Al Smith has all these qualities, but he's known somewhat too exclusively as a wet.

So is Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland.
While Reed's a wet, he stands for numerous other policies which ought to take some of the curse off his wetness even in dry territory.

William G. McAdoo would be all right to recommend him to any of the wets.

No wet could find any fault with Reed and, as previously remarked, he does have certain things to recommend him to some, at least, of the dries.
Another thing, the mid-west is clearly indicated as a good place to pick presidential candidates from in 1928.
Reed is a mid-western man. Smith and McAdoo are just as far east as they possibly could be without falling into the Atlantic ocean. McAdoo is western but the Pacific coast is rather too far west.

There'll be talk of Alice Pomerene
if Ohio elects him to the Senate in November. However, he may not be re-elected. Even if he is, there'll be talk also of Gov. Vic Donahey, and both being Ohioans, they'll tend to nullify one another.

Furthermore, geographically they're not as well situated as Reed with reference to the corn belt.
Neither, although both have national reputations, has either one a national reputation of Reed's proportions.

Democratic hopes are greatly stimulated by the undoubted split in the Republican ranks. However, they have a split of their own to be closed up, if they're to get any good out of the Republicans. If Reed can manage it, he's a wizard.

CANCER DEATH RATE UP

In previous articles you were given charts which showed diseases that have rapidly been brought under control, notable among these being charts of diphtheria and typhoid fever. Today there is shown a chart that is in very striking contrast, namely, that of cancer.

No one as yet has satisfactorily explained the cause of this apparent increase in cancer. There are certain obvious factors that, no doubt, have operated to increase the number of deaths from cancer that are reported to our health authorities.

Among these factors are more accurate diagnoses on the part of the physicians of today, and a more nearly complete report of all deaths as compared with fewer reports a number of years ago. This much of the increase is, of course, only an apparent, not an actual increase.

Another factor which has caused an increase in the actual number of deaths reported from cancer is the fact that so many more people now live to reach the age at which cancer develops than was formerly the case.

After all obvious factors concerned
in the reports of cancer are weighed,
it seems fairly well established that some of the increase in cancer reported is actual and not just an apparent increase.

How much of the increase is apparent only and how much is actual, it is difficult to say. It is generally observed that primitive peoples are not so susceptible to cancer as are the highly civilized, so that there are elements in our modern civilization that tend to produce an increase in the incidence of this disease.

That heredity may and probably does play an important part in the production of cancer seems fairly well established. In other words, a predisposition, a susceptibility, to cancer may be inherited, but other factors seem to be concerned in the actual production of the disease in those who are susceptible.

QUIRKS OF NATUREHERE IS A RIVAL OF THE

Some of the moths we see about

The cynthia an oriental immigrant to America.

quite commonly are moths from other lands which have been brought here in the past and, finding our country quite congenial, have made themselves
at home and multiplied.

Thus in certain portions of our eastern states, especially in the vicinity of New York, Philadelphia, Washington and Boston, there is found a large and handsome oriental moth known as the cynthia.

The cynthia is much like the native
cecropia in its markings, but it is olive green in color and its wings are nat-towed.

In certain provinces of China this moth is domesticated as a source of silk and it was to try it out as a silk producer that it was first brought to this country in 1851.

The cynthia is much like the native
moths. It usually appears in June, and appears again in smaller numbers in the autumn. Of two hundred and fifty cocoons taken from a tree in Washington last October, fifty had feebly hatched and some of the moths were still about. This would indicate that about one-fifth of the moths hatch in the autumn while four-fifths sleep till spring. The autumn moths all die with the coming of the cold, and their eggs die also.

The caterpillar of this moth feeds
almost exclusively on alanthus trees.
The cocoon is small for such a large moth. It is spun between two or three leaves of the food plant, and from it a heavy band of silk runs up the stem of the leaflet and along the midrib of the compound leaf to the twig to which it is attached.

Sometimes several cocoons will have a common stem, and sometimes two or three cocoons are spun together in a mass in such a way that the escape of only one of the moths is possible.

OUR TOWN

Who should say "Our Town"? Who should say "Your Town"?
Lanama belongs to the citizens who live here. It does not belong to the man who lives in the other part of the state, but it belongs to you and I.
Whether we own a business or a piece of property, Lanama belongs to us and it is "Our Town."

Don't we live here? Don't we get our means of sustaining life here.
Some other fellow may own the place where we work or the house in which we live, but this is "Our Town" and we should always act and talk with that in view.

There is something about a town that is above and beyond the mere ownership of a part of the physical forces that work to make up the acres of land and the houses.

The United States is our country

MORE GROWTH

Comes the announcement that one of the larger concerns building machinery for oil well drillers' use is to locate in Sweetwater. The announcement is backed up by the purchase of a lot and the securing of a building permit to go right ahead with the proposition. Several men will be employed here. While this acquisition does not mean so much in dollars and cents, yet it is highly significant in more ways than one. The increasing oil field development of West Texas coupled with the rail facilities and central location of Sweetwater is bound to bring more of these concerns here. The possibilities of the mid-continent oil field are pretty well known, charted and discounted. It is past its zenith. West Texas will get in the next five years, a bigger play than it has ever known. Sweetwater can profit by this development, even though not a drop of oil is found in this county.—Sweetwater Reporter.

NEIGHBORS' WIVES

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JOHN and FAY MILBURN buy a home when their baby girl is born and the advertising agency in which John is partner and copy writer lands a new contract. Among their acquaintances are—

NOEL and VERA BOYD, whose marriage is strictly "modern."

PAT and MARIAN FORBES, who have three children and whose domestic life is unhappy because of Forbes' roving tendencies.

John was fascinated on meeting NELL ORME. Pat hints she is having trouble with her husband.

Fay took JUDITH, the baby, to visit her parents in Houston, and during her absence John "ran around" a good deal. When Fay returned, gossip had related some of John's actions and sharp quarrels followed, one of which drove him "out on a tear," and caused Fay to threaten to leave him.

A growing, but timid, interest in Nell Orme is brought to a head by Vera Boyd, who takes delight in promoting "affairs." She has Nell out to tea and invites John. He goes again and again, and the day comes when he takes Nell madly in his arms. Fay hears about it and leaves him. John closes up the house and takes an apartment, where Nell comes to see him one night after a quarrel with her husband. Howard comes in on them, and threatens divorce. That night he commits suicide, and John for a short time is suspected of murder.

Dick Menefee begins to worry about John, who, he sees, is going to pieces under the strain of being talked about and linked up with the Orme tragedy. So he writes Fay a letter.

Then NATHANIEL GRAHAM offers to buy him out for $15,000, or let John buy, believing he cannot raise the money. And John realizing the business is all he has left now that Fay and Judith are gone, tries desperately to raise the money. Menefee lends him several thousand dollars, and when John has grown discouraged, Menefee and his wife write to Fay, explaining the situation to her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER LIX

Had John known that Dick and Margaret had written to Fay, he would have quit then and there. Dick realized this and for that reason was careful to keep even the slightest hint of it away from him.

Nevertheless, Menefee told himself and Margaret, it was time something was done. He had written Fay before, and something in the letter she had written in reply told him that she had not ceased caring for John.

"A pity," he kept telling Margaret, "a terrible pity that those two should be so stubborn when they both need each other so."

"Of course," Margaret suggested gently, "Fay had to do something. She couldn't let John go on—"

"Now Margaret, there you go. John didn't do half the things he was reported to have done. The man was slandered—it was positively ghastly."

"Slandered, yes—but not entirely innocent, my dear."

"Well," grudgingly, "he's learned his lesson."

At the end of that week John was mighty close to despair. Four days to go—and still six thousand dollars away from his goal. No one knew the sting of the feeling of defeat that sat upon him—the sense of futility—the bafflement.

And then, just when things looked blackest and he was on the verge of going to Nat Graham and saying the hell with the whole thing, Dick Menefee called him up, and exuberant joy was in his voice as he announced his news.

"It's been done, John—I've raised it."

It was unbelievable. "Where? Where?"

But Dick refused to tell him. "I've promised not to reveal my source of supplies. Promised on my word of honor as a gentleman and physician. But it's done—no need to worry."

"But Dick—it's like a fairy tale. You've got to tell me or I won't believe you. I've got to pay it back. Where did you get it?"

"Don't worry about that. You pay me back. Consider yourself indebted to me to the extent of twelve thousand dollars. Now then, old man, go ahead and lick 'em all!"

He would lick them all, John told himself grimly as he turned away from the phone. Across the room sat Nat Graham, and John smothered an impulse to run over and say it had been done. Instead, he fished from his pocket the paper on which Nat had written down the terms of the agreement. He'd wait, he told himself. He'd wait, and meanwhile he'd be swinging into action.

"Briggs," he called, "and the little fellow came trotting in, ink smeared on his arm, a brush stuck back of his ear. Briggs, you're going out to lunch with me. I've news—real news."

And Briggs smiled knowingly. Milburn had put it over!

Four days later, in the little conference room, and Graham leisurely drawing up a chair, a half-smile playing on his face, while John, masking his feelings with a worried expression, seemed reluctant to get down to business.

"Well, John, how about it? Ready to buy me out?"

The confession of his manner told John that he was far from believing that he was ready.

But John stilled. "I still think, Nat, that you're offering me too little for my share. Will you make it twenty thousand?"

"Lord no! Now," irritably, "we've gone into all of that before. You agreed. You gave me your word. I've got it here in writing."

"But don't you think you're getting it mighty cheap? I hate to let go, Nat. Do you think fifteen thousand is fair?"

"Why of course it's fair. It's not worth that. It's not worth more than twelve."

"Very well, Nat, I just wanted to make sure," he said casually.

"There's the fifteen thousand, Nat," and John laid the certified check on the table in front of Graham, who stared as if he had seen an apparition.

"But—Graham sputtered. "Look here, what are you doing, tricking me?"

"Not at all. That check's O. K. You just said fifteen thousand was what a half interest was worth. You said it wasn't worth more than twelve. All right, I'm overpaying you three thousand."

"Damn you, Milburn. You doublecrossed me," Graham was furious.

"Strong language, Nat, strong language."

"I won't sell. I'll be damned if I do."

"I've got it in writing, Nat. Right here in my pocket."

He started out of the room.

"Hold on," Nat called, "where are you going?"

"I'm going to get a witness." He raised his voice. "Briggs!" he called.

"Briggs," he said when the artist arrived, "what time is it?"

The artist glanced at his watch. "Quarter to twelve."

"Right. Now, do you see this check?" and he picked it up from the table.

"Yes," Briggs was grinning broadly.

"Now will you read this agreement?" Briggs read it.

"All right. Sure. What about it?"

"Well, what do you gather has happened?"

"Why I gather that you've bought Mr. Graham out."

"Exactly, Briggs, exactly." He turned to Graham. "Now Nat—"

But it wasn't going to be easy, John saw, now that the business was his, his troubles were just beginning. Graham immediately went over with Kelly and Jones, though John surmised that his plans and Kelly's, too, had received a severe jolt. Two days later, Briggs' assistant left, and he, too, John learned, had gone with Kelly and Jones.

"Plans deserting a sinking ship," John said to Briggs.

"Sinking nothing! This ship is going to sail!"

And so the fight began in earnest. There were just three of them now—himself, Briggs and Miss White, the inexperienced stenographer Graham had hired to replace Miss Kinsely and who seemed to be over her depth, but whom John hadn't the heart to fire.

He realized Nat would be making an effort to land all of the old Graham and Milburn accounts—especially Milltown Tools and Barker and Williams Toys. And Nat, most likely, would be knitting him pretty severely—telling all he knew of John's troubles.

LEADERSHIP OF C. C. SECRETARY IS NEEDED, SAID

APATHETIC MEMBER MUST BE EDUCATED TO WORK CHRISTIAN SAYS

Educating the apathetic members of chamber of commerce to responsibility and leading them gently but surely into active participation in community tasks is secretarial statesmanship. This means that the secretary must be a technician in civic methods and an advanced student of human nature. W. Roy Christian, manager of the Corsicana chamber of commerce, said here today.

Mr. Christian was speaking before the twentieth annual meeting of the Texas Commercial Executives association on "Keeping Members Effectively at Work."

From a chamber of commerce standpoint, Mr. Christian said, a citizenship may be divided into builders, by-standers and critics, and the problem of the secretary is to develop the leaders and convert the by-standers and critics. He urged the development of the least active members, and said they are the secretary's opportunity—and that his paper was dedicated to the awakening of the least active members and their development and conservation of man-power, a community's principal asset.

"Impress your community with the chamber of commerce service idea," Mr. Christian said. "Work it into the newspapers, advertisements, folders, banquet programs and annual reports."

"Keep the membership intelligently informed of what is going on. Interest grows with information."

"Give credit where credit is due. Reward the worker. Even the shyest and most modest warm up when given recognition for their part in worthwhile community achievements."

"Give a committee something to do which has a fifty-fifty chance of accomplishment, or if there is nothing in view, discharge it courteously. Public committee progress."

"The committee is the principal cog in the machine. Instead of the president naming all the committees, it may be wise to use a committee in making the selections. This means new blood. No one man can know the interests of all the membership. Thank committees for a particular good piece of work by a letter from the president."

"Give every member in the organization a chance to express his views on the community's need in shaping a program of work—either through a questionnaire, group meeting or on cards at annual banquets."

"Continually refer to committee chairmen, the achievements of other cities along the lines of the committee's program."

"Make the chamber plant a focal point for all constructive community activities as far as possible. Where there are numerous meetings in a chamber, you will invariably find an active chamber."

"Make the chamber an ally of every other civic organization. Coordinate the luncheon clubs with chamber activities. It is a vital point in highly organized cities.

"Ask for advice freely."

"Develop fellowship in your meetings and activities. Enjoyment of a task gets results faster than the atmosphere of cold duty. If you and your directors have developed a spirit of confidently expecting every person called on to come in, much of your problem is solved. When a chamber's affairs are so handled as to command respect, it will invariably get it."

TWO THEORIES IN MURDER HELD

TEXARKANA, Texas, July 23. (AP)—Officers here are working on two theories in connection with the murder of an unidentified man discovered Thursday at Spring Lake Park, just outside this city. The first is that the woman is the case, the wife of the murdered man, left with another man, and the second, that the wife was also a murder victim, whose body and the mode of death are yet to be found.

There have been no new developments. The officers are awaiting answers to telegrams that have been sent out for information on the identity of the persons involved.

It is probable that Spring Lake in the park will be dragged Sunday to determine whether the woman's body might have been put in the lake and a wide area of country that is rather wild around the park will also be given a thorough search, according to the officers.

Texas for the time has dropped consideration of "Ma" Ferguson and is producing apathy for the balance of the country.—New York Commercial.

CISCO MAN TELLS OF IMPORTANT C. OF C. WORK

Fundamentals of correspondence were laid down here today before the annual meeting of the Texas Commercial Executives association by Byron T. Johnson, secretary of the chamber of commerce at El Paso, in his address on "Correspondence."

"Promptness is generally conceded first place among the fundamental rules governing business correspondence," Mr. Johnson said. "All letters should, if possible, be acknowledged on the date of receipt. If the secretary receives a letter requesting information which he does not have at hand, he should promptly acknowledge receipt of the letter, advising its writer that the information will be forwarded as soon as confirmation may be obtained. If the secretary receives a letter which involves a matter requiring action by a committee or by a board of directors, he should answer this letter at once, stating that the subject of this correspondence has been referred to the proper authorities and that a report of action of the matter will be forwarded later."

The fundamentals laid down by Mr. Johnson:

"Prompt attention to correspondence is essential to the efficient operation of the chamber of commerce office."

"Neatness in typing, spelling and syntactical arrangement of a business letter also bespeaks efficient office management."

"A business letter should conform sufficiently to the established rules of written expression that it will convey the message intended and should be brief enough that a busy man will have time to read it."

"Sort your mail each morning."

Throw out the non-essential and give proper attention to that which relates to the business of your organization."

"Don't send out a questionnaire unless you fail to get the desired information from the national chamber of commerce, or from one of the other available sources, and don't take time to fill out a questionnaire, if you can answer it with a paraphrase."

"Commercial secretaries should cooperate in training the public to use the facilities provided by the local chamber. In information regarding other cities."

"File your correspondence so your or your assistance or any one connected with your organization can find it."

Dear Voter—

I am a WORKING man,
Am a Candidate for District Clerk
Believe you will agree
No business should be run by INEXPERIENCED help
Someone of EXPERIENCE should be at the head of any Business.
Glad this campaign came during dull time—No Court in session now—will be soon.
Am taking advantage of quiet time in District Court to Talk to you.
Have a LADY Deputy. They say she is a good one.
Years of Experience in County and District Clerk's Offices qualifies her to serve during my short absence from the Office.
You, too, could run that or any other business
If some one was there to direct affairs.
I have had experience in law also—may be essential, although I find it is not absolutely necessary
That's what we have Lawyers for—Thank Goodness.
My opponent is a fine girl—good friend of mine.
She has a good job—possibly "lifetime" job—good pay.
Not after her job—let her keep it—accord me same privilege.

He had proof of that in the letter that came from the Milltown Tool advertising manager:

"Graham tells me he has gone over with Kelly and Jones and that they've got a real agency. He also says some pretty mean things about your personal habits—that you've been messing around and getting your fingers burned. Of course, we don't like to hear about that, but we like the people who spread such news a great deal less. As long as your copy gets the results it has been getting, we're pretty well satisfied to string along with you."

And John replied with a wire:

"My heartfelt appreciation of your downright decent letter. As for my copy, you haven't begun to see real copy yet. Wait a week and I'll show you something new."

That was the way, he told himself. Make the world believe he was going to do something big. And at the same time, he was tremendously heartened by the friendliness of the Milltown letter.

"Not won't get anywhere there," he said with satisfaction.

"Briggs," he said later that day, "we need a real executive around here—fellow with sales ability. But I can't afford one just yet, so I'm going ahead and be my own sales manager. I'm going to proceed on the theory that good art and good copy—the best we know how to turn out—will be the best sales talks we can deliver for a while."

"Well," and Briggs grinned. "I'll show you a few things about drawing that'll surprise you. You've got me pepped up now, and I'll work my head off."

"It means," said John, "that you're going to be given an interest in this business."

Briggs stuck out his hand. "I knew I wasn't making a mistake, sticking with you, John."

Two weeks passed, and it was almost Christmas time. Toys were making their appearance in the shop windows and downtown throngs were a holiday air about them. It was a time of homesickness for John. The toys—and Judith. . . .

But with grim resolve not to cry over spilt milk, he flung everything he had into the work ahead of him. And though he worked from early morning till all hours of the night, and Dick Menefee warned him and warned him against "overdoing," he was enjoying it tremendously.

The knowledge that this business was all his to stand or fall on the results of his labors was sufficient compensation. And there was a fierce joy in matching his wits against those of Kelly and Jones—now Kelly, Jones and Graham.

And Briggs, too, worked like a Trojan. The little fellow was bubbling over with enthusiasm these days and really turning out work that surpassed anything John had ever seen him do. Even Miss White, clumsy and bungling as she was, tried hard and John felt very grateful, though privately he had decided that he must hire a really efficient secretary some time—a girl who could manage the office—and keep Miss White for purely routine work. He would advertise next week, he told himself.

The Barker and Williams proposition was proving a tough nut to crack. Graham was going after that hammer and tong, and evidently had a friend in their advertising manager. Despite all John and Briggs could do, the account was lost. A letter one morning announced they had decided to "try someone else" as soon as their contract expired.

That was a blow that hurt John pretty keenly. But Briggs, sticking out his jaw, said tersely, "All right. We'll go after some of Kelly's accounts."

John was not so buoyant, but he realized that even without the toy account he was going to make more money than he had when he and Graham were dividing the profits, unless they lost more ground. He agreed with Briggs: going into the enemy's camp was the thing to do, but he'd have to have an office manager, someone to take charge and let him get outside for a while. So he advertised for an experienced secretary.

And that night Dick Menefee telephoned him. "See you need a secretary, John. I've got the very girl for you. A peach. A wonder."

"I'm not looking for penches," John laughed. "I'm looking for a secretary."

"But this one, John—, I'm sending her over in the morning."

And Dick sounded so pleased with himself that John was puzzled. What was Dick up to now?

VOTE FOR

AMOS H. HOWARD for COUNTY CLERK

I feel that my eight years experience in handling records in the County Clerk's office due to my employment as Deputy Clerk of this county and with the Guaranteed Abstract and Title Company has placed my qualifications and ability to handle the work on a plane that cannot be disputed.

If elected, I promise to serve in accordance with my qualifications, giving the people of Lubbock county the SERVICE that they have the right to expect. Naturally, my full time will be devoted to this work, and I will always be found at my post of duty. Two years ago, I lost the race for this office by only eight votes, attesting my qualification and ability then, and I feel that I am now even more competent due to my longer experience in handling the records.

Tomorrow if you think that I am qualified to serve the office, I will appreciate your vote and influence.

Of S. M. N. Marrs In Lubbock People Votes

Declaring that Lubbock county should remember his services and commending the record of the man in office, J. A. Raley, Jr., today opened a latent campaign in the city for S. M. N. Marrs, state superintendent of public instruction and a candidate for re-election.

According to Mr. Raley Mr. Marrs, while a member of the local committee for Texas Tech, rendered a service to Lubbock that should be remembered at the polls.

Sheep, 2,000; steady; top native lambs $14.75, fat ewes $5.00-6.50.

WOOL REPORT

BOSTON, July 23. (AP)—The Commercial Bulletin of Boston will say tomorrow:
Manufacturers have been buying moderately in the wool market this week. Mostly interest has centered on the finer wools. Prices throughout the lot are firm. In the West, the outstanding feature has been the clean-up of the Roswell, N. M., wools, including nearly a half-million pounds of old wool with $1.55 firmly established as the basis, clean at seaboard of the best fine clips. Elsewhere through the West trading has been scattered and slower but growers are standing firm in their asking prices.
London holds up surprisingly well, in view of the continuance of the British coal strike, which has well nigh paralyzed the Yorkshire market. Further opening of staple lines by the leading independent manufacturers have been made at prices ten percent lower than a year ago, which meets the prices named by the American Woolen Company, and so a certain trading basis for goods is established. Mohair is more active and prices firm.
Wool quotations:
Secured basis, Texas fine 12-months' selected $1.10-1.12; fine 8-months' $1.09-1.10.

BUTTER AND EGGS

CHICAGO, July 23. (AP)—Butter lower; creamery extras 35 1/2; standards 25c.
Eggs lower; firsts 27c-27 1/2.

CHICAGO POULTRY

CHICAGO, July 23. (AP)—Poultry a live steady; old roosters 18.

Grain Markets

CHICAGO TRADING

CHICAGO, July 23. (AP)—Unexpected firmness of Liverpool quotations, together with higher temperatures northwest, helped to bring about an early today in wheat values here. Sellers were scarce. Opening 1/4c to 7/8c gain, wheat soon rose to a material further extent.
Corn and oats also ascended, corn starting 1/4c to 1 1/2c up and later showing additional strength.
Provisions held about steady.

KANSAS CITY REPORT

KANSAS CITY, July 23. (AP)—Wheat number 2 hard $1.32 1/2-1.40; number 2 red 1.36-1.36 1/2.
Corn: number 2 white 82 1/2-83 1/2; number 2 yellow 84 1/2-85.
Oats: number 2 white 42-42 1/2; number 3 white 41-42.

CHICAGO OREPORT

CHICAGO, July 23. (AP)—Cash: Wheat: number 1 red $1.42-1.42 1/2; number 2 hard $1.42 1/2-1.43 1/2.
Corn: number 2 yellow $36-36 1/2; number 3 mixed 80 1/2.
Oats: number 2 white 43-43 1/2; number 3 white 42 1/2-43 1/2.

CHICAGO POTATOES

CHICAGO, July 23. (AP)—Potatoes steady; Kansas and Missouri sacked Irish cobbler $1.25-1.60; Virginia barrel Irish cobbler $2.00-2.45.

CHICAGO FUTURES

CHICAGO, July 23. (AP)—Cotton futures closed: January 17.30c; October 17.41c; December 17.20c.

LIVERPOOL SPOTS

LIVERPOOL, July 23. (AP)—Cotton spot easier; American strict good middling 19.88; good middling 19.88; strict middling 19.32; middling 9.93; strict low middling 9.32; low middling 9.32; strict good ordinary 7.33; good ordinary 6.58. Sales 3,000 bales, 1,800 American. Receipts 3,400; all American.

NEW YORK TRADING

NEW YORK, July 23. (AP)—The cotton market had a steady opening at 1 to 6 points advance, with business rather quiet pending the government report at noon.

In addition to firm cables, and a better stock market, early buying was stimulated by official reports of a tropical storm in the West Indies, and by further reports of showery weather in the Southwest. Offerings came mainly from the South, Wall Street and Liverpool, but were well absorbed and the market held firm with October up to 17.45c and January 17.37c, or six to eight points net higher.

Just before the market closed to receive the government report it was in a very firm position through active covering due to the strength of cables and Southern buying on the tropical storm and showery weather over the belt, October selling up to 17.57c and January 17.49c, or 18 to 20 points over the previous close. The report, making condition 7.7 and indicated crop 15, 265,000 bales was considered a little bearish and on the re-opening the market was off 13 to 21 points from the 11.55 close and 12 lower to higher than last night's close.

The decline met very good buying, however, and rallies soon followed, elevating the list about 29 to 29 points from the bottom.

NEW ORLEANS TRADING

NEW ORLEANS, July 23. (AP)—The cotton market opened somewhat firmer in sympathy with better cables than due and because of early reports of considerable rain in the Western belt. A storm warning for the first tropical disturbance of the season in the West Indies may have helped the improvement.

First trades showed gains of 8 to 12 points. The market eased off 4 to 9 points from the opening on realizing that near the end of the first hour rallied again on prospects for more rainy weather in the belt. At the highest of the first hour October traded up to 17.35c and December to 17.25c. The market rallied sharply in the second hour owing to the prospects of showery weather and because of the tropical storm warning. There was also considerable belated short covering in advance of the bureau. December went to 17.34c and January to 17.35c, or 21 to 27 points above the previous close. Prices were at or close to the highs when the market suspended for the government report which showed condition of 7.7 percent and indicated a yield of 15,368,000 bales. When trading was resumed October opened at 17.26c, or 27 points down. Prices soon rallied slightly but eased off 31 to 32 points, under the high of the pre-bureau period of the morning but only 10 points under yesterday's close. At mid-session the market showed a tendency to rally.

COTTON SEED OIL

NEW YORK, July 23. (AP)—Cotton seed oil closed firm; prime summer yellow $14.75; prime crude nominal; January 19.92; February 19.89; July 15.95; August 14.80; September 14.00; October 12.76; November 11.28; December 10.95. Sales 11,100.

Stocks And Money

WALL STREET TRADING

NEW YORK, July 23. (AP)—Stock prices displayed a strong underdone at the opening of today's market. Bear traders, who had sold stocks freely late yesterday in anticipation of an increase in the New York Federal Reserve Bank re-discount rate, which failed to materialize, rushed to cover their commitments. Initial gains of a point or so were recorded by Mack Trucks, General Electric (new), Consolidated, Colorado Fuel and U. S. Steel common.

Execution of a large volume of over-the-counter buying orders brought about numerous gains of 1 to 5 points in the early trading. Speculators for the decline renewed their attacks, however, whenever the popular industrial issues showed signs of slowing up, indicating their belief that a further downward revision of prices was necessary after the recent sustained advance. Steels gathered fresh strength from publication of the favorable quarterly report of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, with considerable encouragement derived by operators on the long side from the statement of President Grace that the recent increase in steel prices had not caused any appreciable lessening in demand. Bullish operations were conducted with vigor in a number of specialties, Burns Brothers being one of the first to be pushed up to a new high level for the year on a quick run-up of over 5 points. Foreign exchanges made further recovery.

CALL MONEY

NEW YORK, July 23. (AP)—Call money steady; all loans closing bid 4; time loans firm: 60-day 4 1/2%; 4-6 months 4 1/2%; prime mercantile paper 4.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

NEW YORK, July 23. (AP)—Foreign exchanges firm. Great Britain demand 4.85-1.16; cables 4.86 1/2; 60-day bills on banks 4.82. France demand 2.35; cables 2.36. Italy demand 2.35; Belgium 2.39 1/2; Germany 23.80; Tokyo 47.20; Montreal 100.15 1/2.

Plans Complete For Giant Rail Merger

NEW YORK, July 23. (AP)—Plans for the great Looe merger in the southwest, combined the Kansas City Southern, Missouri-Kansas-Texas and St. Louis—Southwestern systems, were completed at a meeting of the Kansas City Southern directors today. An early application will be made to the Interstate Commerce Commission to approve the consolidation. The Kansas City Southern directors approved the plan. Directors of the other roads previously had taken action.

The merger which has been in the process of formation for more than a year, will unite railways with total assets of approximately $600,000,000 and a combined trackage of more than 6,000 miles.

Big Spring Plans Dairy Program Day

BIG SPRING, Texas, July 23.—The Big Spring Chamber of Commerce is planning a big Dairy program for Saturday, July 31st. There will be distributed ten registered bulls going to ten rural communities. The bulls have been purchased by the Big Spring C. of C. from Ed. C. Lasater of Fairbairn, Minn. One of the big features of the day will be the sensational "Trial of a Scrub Bull." Local assistance both to prosecute and defend has been employed. The following communities have signed up to get one of these registered bulls: Center Point, Vealmoor, Fairview, Moore, Elbow, Gayhill, Richland, and Knott, about four others are expected to come in.

Miss Baby Ford Rigney, Main street, has gone to Dallas, Leonard and other points for a visit of several weeks. Miss Vivian Rigney, of Near Fort Worth, who has been visiting Miss Rigney and attending the Tech, has gone to her home near Fort Worth, visiting friends enroute.

C. C. EXECUTIVES GUESTS AT WEST TEXAS BARBECUE

SECOND DAY OF ANNUAL SESSION HELD MUCH FOR DELEGATES

Ninety members of the Texas Commercial Executives' association, with their wives and friends, were entertained Thursday evening with a real West Texas chicken barbecue held in the Lubbock county park, as the close of the first day of their annual conference school being held in Lubbock July 22-24. Homer D. Wade, manager of the West Texas chamber of commerce, presided over the feast and the speakers.

John Boswell, of the Dallas chamber of commerce, presented to the Lubbock high school band, which was furnishing the music, a large loving cup, for their work at the Amarillo convention. A number of speakers, representing every part of the state were heard: J. E. Peters, of C. C. Richardson, Brownsville; A. L. Burge, Port Arthur; Bryan Blalock, Marshall; Mrs. W. R. Hamilton, Alpine; Roy Christian, Corsicana; O. C. Goodwin, Amarillo; W. R. Arnold, Panhandle; E. H. Lilly, Terrell; T. D. Motlet, Balcones; S. W. Inglis, Trinidad, Colo.; J. C. Castellano, Ennis; and Paul Vickers, Midland.

The program Friday opened with the 9 a. m. to 12 noon regular convention program, at the administration building of the Texas Tech; while in the meantime, visiting ladies were given an auto ride over the city at ten o'clock. At noon, a group picture was taken of the convention in front of the Tech administration building.

At the business session of the morning, W. D. Cargill, of Brady, discussed "Poultry Possibilities in Texas"; and J. E. T. Peters, of Cisco, "Selling Your Town a Program of Work."

Following luncheon at the Tech Cafeteria, the afternoon session convened at 1:30, with a business session and addresses from G. C. Richardson, Brownsville; Byron T. Johnson, Electric; H. Wren, Kaufman; Paul T. Vickers, Midland; W. N. Miner, Waco; and W. Roy Christian, Corsicana.

The program for the evening includes a banquet for secretaries at 7 p. m., and a dance at the Elks Hall at 9 o'clock.

Brother of Local Woman Buried Today

The funeral of George L. Davis, 62, who died at the home of A. Judd at 9:30 P. M. Thursday night, will be held this afternoon at four o'clock from the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, with Rev. K. I. Ingram and G. O. Dean conducting the services.

Full bearers are H. L. Johnston, P. W. Groes, Walter Williams, Tonye Dwyer, H. D. Phillips, and Morgan Dickinson.

Mr. Davis is survived by three sisters, Mrs. H. N. Richey, of Floydada; Mrs. D. P. Peak, and Mrs. A. Judd; and three children: Lawrence Davis, of Clovis, N. M.; Orville Davis, of Okla.; and Mrs. Geo. Deshazo, of Lubbock. Mrs. D. M. Davis, his sister-in-law, is here also.

The death of Mr. Davis follows an illness of some time. He has been living with his sister, Mrs. A. Judd, for some four years, and was well known in Lubbock, having been here for fifteen years.

Rix Undertaking company was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Houston's Tomb At Huntsville Is A Grassy Spot

HUNTSVILLE, TEXAS, July 23. (AP)—In the shade of scraggy pine and drooping willow trees, on a wind swept clay banked sand hill on the edge of this aged East Texas town, rests the bones of Sam Houston, Texas' greatest hero.

Near the edge of the old grave yard, bordered by a dilapidated wire and wooden patched fence, stands the dull gray monument at the head of the man who was cursed and ridiculed in his last days as governor of Texas, and who is now revered by the descendants of his bitterest enemies. Because he opposed the secession he left the office a discarded, broken man.

Grass has stretched its long tendrils over the small stone border around the plot, and spread itself on the sand that has sifted on the lot. Near this grave of Sam Houston's lay black and blank slabs of stone marking the graves of nameless dead, victims of a yellow fever scourge.

Not tall, but towering in its grim and morbid gray-blackness above the nearby stone markers of the dead, this monument over Sam Houston speaks in chiseled words, tribute to the man.

Those words of Andrew Jackson, "The World Will Take Care of Houston's fame," on the back of that piece of stone, are shaded by the sands of the summer and washed by the rains of the spring.

Briefly, the history of the man is told in the words that face the resting body of the General, and they are: "Soldier under Jackson; Boy hero of Horseshoe Bend; Congressman from Tennessee; Governor of Tennessee; Chief of the Cherokee; Commander in Chief of the Texas Army; Hero of San Jacinto; twice president of the Republic of Texas; U. S. Senator from Texas, and governor of Texas. Born Lexington, Vt. March 2, 1791—Died Huntsville, July 26, 1863."

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Horace Holshouser of 2221 14th Street, a son, this morning at 10 o'clock. He has been christened, Horace Jr., and the Senior Holshouser, Foreman of the Ice Cream Manufacturing Department of the Mistletoe Creameries of this city, stated the boy arrived just in time for the Primary tomorrow—and later, he would take his father's job in the Mistletoe Creameries, maybe.

Whitaker Speaks To Audience Here Today

Emmett L. Whitaker, of Dawson county, youthful "Preacher-Printer" candidate for Representative of the 11th district of Texas, spoke in the district court room of the Lubbock county court house here this afternoon in behalf of his candidacy, and was given a good hearing.

Mr. Whitaker explained that due to the large territory, it has been impossible for him to make a thorough canvass that he wished to make. He said that he will give every encouragement to the Tech College in his efforts, and is a friend of school children, believing in local control of school affairs. He said he was opposed to graft and favors economy, saying that need should be shown for ever y appropriation made by the Legislature.

Youthful Party Here For Flying Circus

Jerry Marshall, Webb Ruff, Bill Warren, and Ike Sewell, all Texas University products, the two former of whom are ex-army airplane pilots arrived here Friday with five planes and for the next four or five days will conduct a flying circus for the entertainment of Lubbock people.

The men, all yet under 30 years of age, have three pilots in the party including a stunt pilot and a daredevil who is reputed to be the youngest of the kind in the United States. Warren, the daredevil, is only 16, and a product of San Antonio high school, and does all manner of capers on the wings, a member of the party said.

The boys claim to have carried over 17,000 persons since they started the circus, and have not had an accident. Ages of passengers range from four months to 90 years, they said. They had not decided early this afternoon which landing field would be used by them.

Dallas Engineer Attends T. C. E. A. Meet

E. A. Wood, City Planning Engineer, of Dallas, is here attending the annual session of the Texas Commercial Executives' association, and is endeavoring to interest the various chambers of commerce over the state in his line of work, he said. Mr. Wood is to read a paper in connection with his work before the body Saturday morning.

Mr. Wood, whose sole study now is city planning, says that he is very much impressed with the city of Lubbock, especially from the standpoint of his work, and lauded the county commissioners for their efforts on behalf of the County park, saying that Lubbock should indeed be proud of such a place.

Sugar Rates Found Unreasonable By I C C

WASHINGTON, July 23. (AP)—Rates on sugar from points in Louisiana, Kansas, Colorado, Nebraska, Idaho, Utah and Arizona and Texas City, Texas, to points in Oklahoma, were found unreasonable today by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

A reasonable basis of rates was ordered prescribed.

Earth Slowing Up

NEW YORK—The earth is slowing up. Tidal friction acts on it like brake shoes on a car wheel, but professor Richard S. Lull says there's no reason to worry. July 23, 2026, will be only one-thousandth of a second longer than today.

Where ignorance is folly, 'tis bliss to be wise.
