Rash of robberies

Midland police officers responded to a rash of robberies of fast-food delivery people Saturday night. From 7-9 p.m. five different delivery people were "strong-armed" of their wares, officers said. Two Pizza Hut, one Pizza Inn, one Domino's Pizza and Shogun's Orient Express delivery persons were confronted by two men. The suspects reportedly came up behind delivery persons and strong-armed them of their deliveries, and in some cases, their money bags. The incidents occurred on Caldera and Whitmire Streets, and at Windscape, Windtree and Junction apartments, officers said. Witnesses described the men as being black and close to 6-feet tall. Police officers were searching for a black four-door mid-1980s model Oldsmobile or Cutlass with tinted windows and five-star chrome rims. One suspect was described as being about 5 foot 8, wearing a wool pullover sweater with a hood and shorts. The other suspect, about the same height, was wearing a mid-thigh black jacket, a flannel shirt and jeans.

Report: Permian Basin economy shows strength

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

The Midland/Odessa economy is showing signs of growth with a 9.2-percent increase in gross sales receipts over the same period last year.

A statistical analysis of Midland/Odessa sales receipts has been released by the office of Texas Comptroller of Public Accounts Research Division. This State Sales and Use Tax Analysis Report evaluates sales during the second quarter of 1993 and compares these findings with second-quarter 1992 figures.

The largest percent change in the Midland/Odessa Metropolitan Statistical Area (MSA) is found in agriculture. Gross sales in the agriculture/forestry category are up 62.3 percent from 1992. This, however, does not greatly impact the overall economy as agriculture comprises only $6.5 million of 1993's $1.1 billion in gross sales.

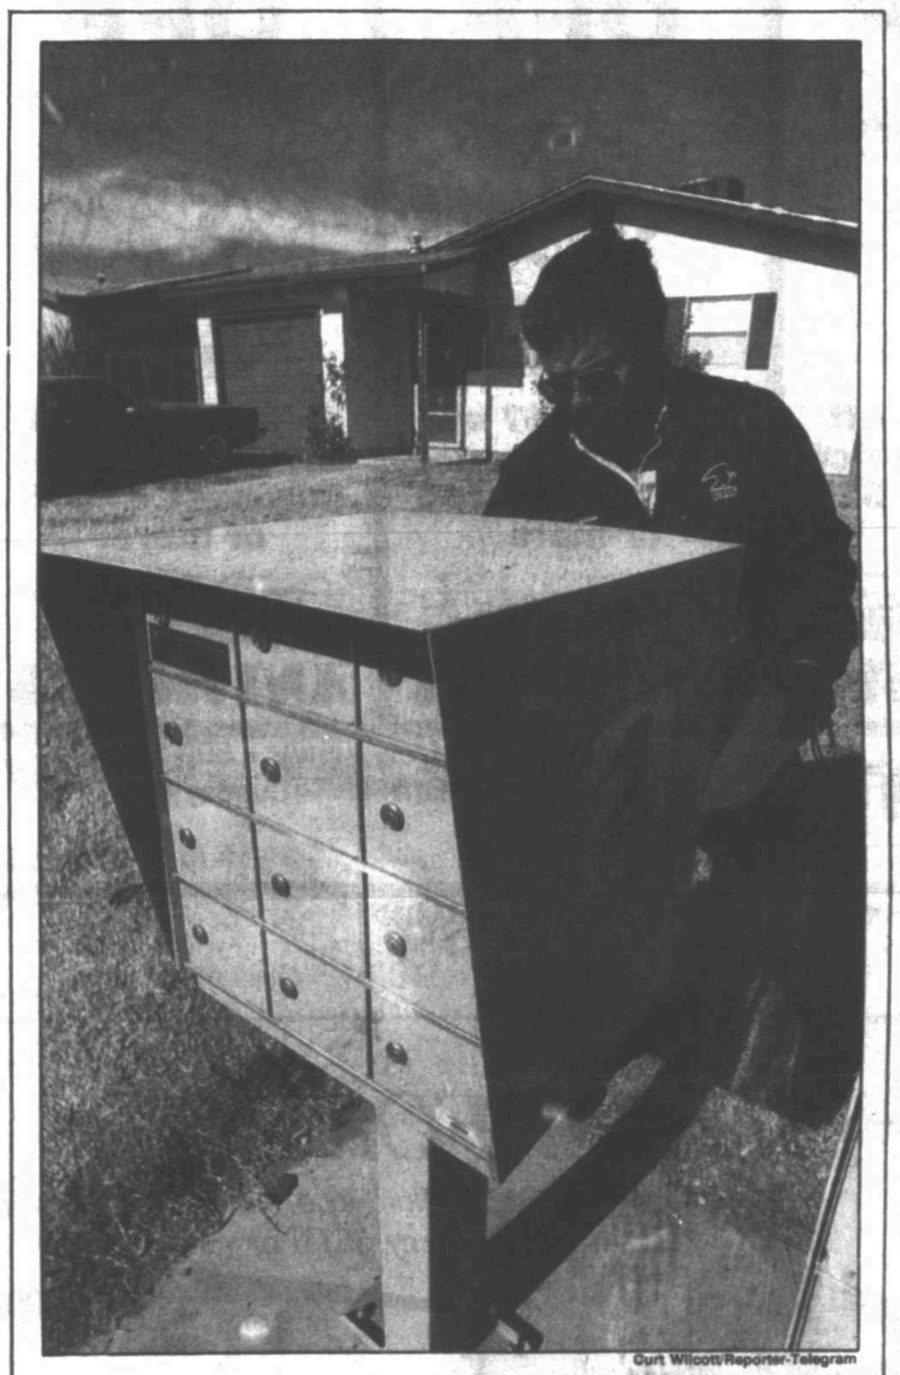

Probably the most significant finding in the report is the positive growth in what has been termed as 'items of choice.'

Probably the most significant finding in the report is the positive growth in what has been termed as "items of choice," said Jerry Jones, president of the Midland Business Center. Marked increases in sales of automobiles and building materials is a very positive sign for the local economy, Jones explained.

Automotive retail jumped 20.9 percent over second quarter 1992 figures, with gross automobile sales crest-

Iran-Contra report faults 2 presidents

■ Prosecutor says Reagan 'set the stage' for scandal; Bush failed to tell truth.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a sharp attack on two former presidents, the Iran-Contra prosecutor's final report concludes that Ronald Reagan "set the stage" for the scandal's illegal activities and George Bush failed to tell the truth about his role, according to sources familiar with the document.

Lawyers for Reagan and Bush have read the report by Iran-Contra prosecutor Lawrence Walsh and were quick to dispute its conclusions. Reagan's lawyer called them "utterly irresponsible" while Bush's attorney called on Walsh to "fold up his tent."

The soon-to-be-released report says Reagan created an atmosphere in which top aides felt free to maneuver outside the law, according to the notes of several individuals who read portions of the document.

In particular, the report states that comments Reagan made to a top adviser left White House aide Oliver North feeling as though he had an "invitation to break the law," according to the sources' notes.

There is "no credible evidence that President Reagan violated any criminal statute. Nevertheless, he set the stage for the illegal activities which ensued," the sources' notes quote the report as saying.

Theodore Olson, Reagan's lawyer, said he was forbidden by court order from commenting on the report but Walsh's conclusions "would be completely unwarranted and utterly irresponsible."

"All the evidence . . . shows that President Reagan complied with all laws and at all times directed his subordinates to do likewise," Olson said in a statement.

Officials offer Neighborhood Box Units to cut mail theft, destruction

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Because of rising incidents of mail theft, mail destruction and mail-box vandalism, Midland Post Office officials are offering free Neighborhood Box Units to replace door-to-door delivery.

The neighborhood boxes are of durable metal construction, containing eight, 12 or 16 individually locked compartments. At customers' requests, these boxes will be installed and maintained at no cost to the customer, said Midland Postmaster Stan Sartain.

The boxes are currently offered on a request basis. A time likely will come, however, when all of Midland's door-to-door service is replaced by the neighborhood boxes, Sartain said.

When Sartain first arrived in Midland 15 years ago, 65 percent of mail was delivered to the customer's door, he said. Currently, only 35-38 percent is home delivered, he said. Door-to-door delivery in Midland might dwindle away entirely within 10 years, he said.

In new portions of the city, neighborhood boxes are the only postal delivery offered, he said.

Homeowners with door-to-door service will not be forced to switch to the neighborhood box system unless ongoing problems regularly inhibit the normal distribution of mail, or place the carrier in danger, as in the case of homes with vicious dogs, Sartain said.

City plans to examine ways to develop Lamesa Road area for more business

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Sometimes a business looking for a home may be discouraged about a particular site because of the need to request a zoning change.

"Businesses don't like to waste a lot of time and money on architecture fees and two or three (planning and zoning) meetings that then may or may not get approved," said Jose Cuevas Jr., at-large City Council member.

With that in mind, the city of Midland plans to examine the current zoning along Lamesa Road for changes that might be more attractive to businesses.

"We're going to be studying Lamesa Road from north of Scharbauer Drive south down to roughly Highway 80 looking specifically at retail zoning," said Glen Hackler, assistant city manager.

The re-examination resulted from recent inquiries by interested business people about zoning on the eastside roadway.

City officials plan to inventory all tracks along Lamesa Road to determine if additional retail zoning is needed, which appears to be the case, officials said.

Hackler said a four- to six-month study by representatives from City Council, the Planning and Zoning Department and eastside interests will be conducted.

The group also will solicit input from eastside residents through neighborhood meetings.

"A lot of what happens will be dictated by what the public wants," Hackler said.

City officials and other interested parties anticipate zoning to allow and attract businesses such as offices, restaurants and convenient stores.

"The (Hispanic) chamber knows we'll never get a mall here. We'll get mom-and-pop, family-owned businesses, and lawyer, CPA and insurance offices, that kind of thing," said Charlene Romero-Wurtz, executive director of the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

"I envision Lamesa Road, not as a major thoroughfare for the city, but a major thorough-way for the southeast side," she said.

Cuevas voiced similar sentiments:

Immigrant horse trainer lives American dream

By Barry Shlachter
N.Y. Times News Service

JACKSBORO — At 13, he ran away from home and, with only a few years of formal schooling, worked years in a dairy, earning $350 a month and getting four days off a year.

It didn't help that he arrived in the United States as an illegal immigrant with two words of English — "yes" and "no" — and with $50 purloined from a father who had opposed his leaving their small ranch near Valparaiso in Mexico's Zacatecas state.

Today, Ascencion Banuelos is a sought-after trainer of cutting horses, which are painstakingly taught to separate cattle in high-dollar national competitions. He has sold 3-year-olds for $70,000 and $100,000, and this year he sold a 49 percent share of one horse to a wealthy Ohioan for $50,000.

At 36, he has a slew of cutting horse

Farmers from Europe, India, Japan, Canada gather, protest GATT

GENEVA (AP) — Farmers from around the world demonstrated Saturday against "American imperialism" and the GATT trade accord they fear will ruin hundreds of millions of farmers and uproot centuries-old traditions.

The agreement, sponsored by the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, aims to cut farm production and export subsidies, roll back trade barriers and end outright import bans on products like rice.

"GATTASTROPHE," read one banner, summing up the mood of the estimated 3,000 demonstrators. Most were from France and Switzerland.

Police in riot gear sealed off the entrance to GATT headquarters and fired tear gas to disperse bottle-throwing demonstrators who tried to force their way through the barricades. No injuries or arrests were reported.

The protesters, who carried another banner that read "Let Us Unite Against U.S. Blackmail," included contingents from Europe, Japan, India and Canada.

A small delegation had a "short and to-the-point" meeting with GATT director-general Peter Sutherland, who told them their objections were unfounded, a GATT official said.

Negotiators preparing the groundwork for a meeting Monday between European and American trade officials in Brussels were tight-lipped.

"No questions," insisted Deputy U.S. Trade Representative Rufus Yerxa when spotted by a reporter as he mingled incognito among the protesters.

To loud cheers, an Indian representative said GATT opponents in India would launch protests against symbols of "American imperialism," including McDonald's, KFC (Kentucky Fried Chicken), Pepsi Cola, Madonna and Michael Jackson.

Indian farmers are concerned that plans for international patent protection will give American seed multinationals like Cargill Inc. rights over local farmers producing their own seeds.

M.D. Nanjundaswamy, a representative of the Indian National Alliance, said this would force about 450 million subsistence farmers with less than 2½ acres out of business. India has a population of about 800 million.

A 12-member Japanese farmer delegation warned that millions of Japanese rice farmers would go under if the country were open to cheaper imports.

Farmers groups in the 12-nation European Community predict the cuts in farm subsidies will halve full-time jobs in agriculture, wipe out supply industries, empty villages and wreck traditions.

France, which has threatened to block GATT by vetoing an EC-U.S. farm deal, seemed closer to approving the accord after apparently obtaining concessions this week from Washington, though Paris says more are needed.

The farm accord would slash European farm exports by 21 percent over six years. France argues that would be too harsh on its 1 million farmers and would give unfair export advantages to the United States.

U.S. and EC negotiators Monday are expected to thrash out their final differences in the farm accord, the main obstacle in the 116-nation GATT deal. Negotiators face a Dec. 15 deadline — the last day President Clinton can present GATT to Congress in a take-it-or-leave-

Somalia talks stall; Aidid's odd man out

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Informal talks on Somalia stalled Saturday despite efforts by Ethiopia's president to get 12 Somali factions to work with their rival, warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid.

"There is a halt in the talks for the time being," said Col. Abdi Warsama Isak, leader of one of the 12 factions opposed to Aidid.

However, Warsama said he expected "a breakthrough in the next three or four days," perhaps after faction leaders meet face-to-face with Aidid.

Warsama spoke after faction leaders met for two hours with Ethiopian President Meles Zenawi, whom the Organization of African Unity has asked to mediate negotiations on Somalia.

The factions have rejected two of Meles's principal suggestions. The Ethiopian leader has proposed that the factions agree to another conference on reconciliation within Somalia, and appealed for the release of Aidid's aides detained by U.N. peacekeepers there.

Warsama said the factions do not consider another reconciliation conference necessary because no factions are fighting each other in Somalia. Aidid favors such a conference and has proposed it be held next month in Mogadishu.

Regarding the release of Aidid's aides, Warsama said the 12 factions had nothing to do with the warlord's disagreements with the United Nations.

The United Nations only recently canceled an arrest warrant for Aidid, which was issued after the June 5 slaying of 25 Pakistani peacekeepers. Aidid's people were blamed for a series of attacks that subsequently killed scores more U.N. troops, including 24 Americans.

The 12 factions, however, are willing to review an accord signed here last March, which they accuse Aidid of violating.

That agreement called for disarming clan militias, a cease-fire, and the creation of district and regional councils, Warsama said.

Aidid has rejected the councils already created, saying the United Nations picked the members so that they were sure to act against his interests.

Aidid, probably the most powerful clan warlord in Somalia, met Saturday with his 25-member delegation and all were unavailable for comment.

The meeting on Somalia began Friday, one day after an international humanitarian conference on rebuilding Somalia, which Aidid boycotted.

Donors nations and charities expressed their continued commitment to helping Somalia's neediest. However, they warned the factions to stop squabbling.

Yeltsin stays above election fray, seeks image as 'father of nation'

By Deborah Seward
Associated Press

■ News analysis

MOSCOW — Four years ago Boris Yeltsin brought zest to Russia's parliamentary elections, plunging into crowds, pressing flesh and promising change.

This time around, Yeltsin has remained closeted in the Kremlin. He has attended no campaign rallies and endorsed no candidates. He even plans to leave Russia before next Sunday's elections for talks in Brussels with European leaders.

The March 1990 parliamentary election was a turning point for Yeltsin, a springboard to the presidency. The Dec. 12 elections may prove to be a turning point for the entire nation, a decisive moment in Russia's democratic development.

Yeltsin, however, has tried to remain above the political fray, cultivating a new and powerful image as "father of the nation."

Although he is not a candidate, he has a lot at stake: whether Russians will approve his proposed constitution, whether the new parliament will be more reform-minded than the one he disbanded in September, whether his reputation as a democrat will remain intact.

Yeltsin's democratic image — which hit its zenith during the failed hard-line coup in August 1991 — was battered in the autumn political storm that led to the early elections.

First he dissolved parliament and used tanks and troops to drive recalcitrant lawmakers out of the Russian White House. Then he banned some hard-line parties, shut down opposition newspapers and threatened to withdraw TV air time from candidates who criticized his constitution.

Unless the balloting is perceived as free and fair, Yeltsin could lose the support of democrats both at home and abroad.

The main political bloc supporting Yeltsin, Russia's Choice, uses a picture of Peter the Great in its campaign logo, and political commentators have noted that Yeltsin likes to identify himself with the czar whose name is synonymous with reform.

Peter the Great, who ruled from 1682-1725, wrenched Russia from the Middle Ages and made it a European power. Yeltsin is trying to wrest Russia from the grip of a failed communist experiment and transform the country into a capitalist giant.

His economic reforms have been painful for many Russians, but they are starting to bear fruit.

Many goods scarce in 1990 are now widely available, mainly in private shops that sprang up as a result of Yeltsin's reforms. A new class of entrepreneurs has emerged.

Yeltsin has been less successful in undoing the Soviet political legacy.

The old parliament initially supported his reforms, but then turned against him and sought to make itself the supreme power in Russia.

Yeltsin is hoping the new elections will restore a pro-reform majority to parliament. But the relatively weak legislative branch envisioned by his constitution may be unable to act as a check against presidential power.

Egypt charges nine in assassination attempt on premier

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Nine members of the Islamic extremist Jihad movement have been charged with trying to blow up Egypt's prime minister in an attack last month that killed a schoolgirl, an official said Saturday.

Interior Minister Hassan el-Alfy said the arrests foiled plans to carry out further attacks. He said the nine suspects were "highly trained in Afghanistan in the use of explosive materials."

At their hideout, police seized 44 pounds of TNT, five homemade bombs, machine guns, handguns, detonators and a radio-cassette player stuffed with receivers to activate detonators by remote control, he said.

Among the items found, he said, was a remote-control device used in Nov. 25 attack, in which a car bomb went off outside a suburban girls' school as Prime Minister Atef Sedki's motorcade passed.

Sedki was unhurt, but a 12-year-old student was killed by a schoolhouse door knocked from its hinges. Four of her fellow pupils were among 21 people wounded.

Asserting that a remote-control device triggered the bomb marked a major change in the government's version of the attack.

STATE

Texas recovered from a rain-soaked Friday night, as clear and sunny skies were reported throughout the state Saturday.

South Texas, which had several thunderstorms Friday, had clear skies, mild temperatures and no precipitation. Most parts of the region were in the 60s and 70s, according to the National Weather Service.

The area should see clear to partly cloudy skies through today. Lows could reach the upper-40s, and highs were expected in the 70s.

NATION

Rain spread across the Ohio Valley, the Middle Atlantic states and New England on Saturday. Thunderstorms speckled some parts of the South.

Snow fell in the colder air of northern New England, and up to an inch of snow had fallen in the Adirondacks of New York, with another inch or two possible, according to the National Weather Service.

Several inches of snow were also possible in northern New Hampshire and Maine, where winter weather advisories were posted.

A half-inch to 1½ inches of rain was common with the storm system that reached from the lower Mississippi Valley into the Tennessee and lower Ohio valleys.

In a 24-hour hour period ending Saturday morning, nearly 4 inches of rain fell at Pine Bluff, Ark., more than 3 inches at Hot Springs, Ark., and nearly 3 at Memphis, Tenn.

The storm system also triggered a line of strong to severe thunderstorms that rumbled across eastern Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi.

Wind from one storm damaged a house and mobile home near Moreauville, La., resulting in three injuries. Winds damaged a barn and downed trees near Merryville, La., while trees were downed and roofs blown off garages near Oakdale, La.

In Mississippi, tornadoes touched down near McComb and Jefferson, causing minor damage. The top floor of a sawmill was destroyed and a barn damaged by thunderstorm winds near Collins, Miss.

A strong storm system also raced into the Rockies. A high-wind warning was posted across parts of Wyoming, where winds gusted to near 90 mph near Buford and 60 mph at Casper.

The northern mountains of Colorado braced for several inches of snow, and the weather service said there could be considerable blowing and drifting.

Temperatures across the nation were generally seasonable. The coldest spot in the Lower 48 states on Saturday morning was Gunnison, Colo., where the temperature dipped to 1 degree below zero.

CUTTER: Horse trainer goes from rags to riches achievements under his belt, a financially sound training operation just west of Jacksboro and a sprawling, 4,500-square-foot home that he shares with his Oklahoma-born wife, Tiffani, their three children, two brothers and a nephew. He has two mares competing in the 1993 National Cutting Horse Association World Championship Futurity, which runs through Dec. 12 at John Justin Arena in Fort Worth.

"I call him my hero," said Tom Lyons, the second-highest all-time money-winning cutting horse trainer, "because only in America could someone do what he has done — cross the border illegally without a penny hardly to his name and gone on to become a well-thought-of cutting horse trainer of national prominence."

Banuelos' life reads like a 19th century, poor-boy-makes-good tale updated with the hard-edged drama of living years with the fear of arrest and deportation as an undocumented worker.

The son of a cattle trader who hired a man to teach his 13 children to read and ride, Banuelos — the fourth-oldest — dreamed of making it in the United States, where an older brother worked in a northern California dairy.

For a few years, the youth had ridden to a nearby school, where he received an elementary school certificate. In Valparaiso, he had competed in rodeos since the age of 9.

"I always wanted to do something in life, but I didn't like school," Banuelos said.

At 13, he intimated to his mother that he would be heading north, but he knew better than to tell his father.

"He was very strict," he explained. "We didn't communicate. I was afraid to take the money, about $50 in pesos, because it was against the way we were raised, but it was the only way I could do it."

After Banuelos began working in California, he repaid his father, who remarked: "That's OK, but he won't last but two weeks."

The boy almost didn't make it at all.

The "coyote," or smuggler of undocumented workers, who Banuelos linked up with in Tijuana was discovered along with 40 other Mexicans by the U.S. Border Patrol, leaving a terrified adolescent hiding in the brush alone.

"I started walking, hoping to find the Border Patrol because I was very hungry," Banuelos said.

He stumbled north for hours, then came to a house but couldn't communicate with the American family. A bilingual telephone operator explained that the youth wanted to wash, eat and call his brother in Sonoma, north of San Francisco.

"They gave me a big hug, fed me real good, let me take a shower and then dropped me off in town." From San Diego, another "coyote" drove Banuelos north to his brother.

His brother's employers hired the boy, who was passed off as 18.

"I didn't tell them my real age until I knew the job real well and was 14," Banuelos said. He helped milk 400 cows a day for room, board and $350 a month, with two days off every six months.

When the dairy was sold, Banuelos moved on to a larger operation that had 1,100 cows, and his salary reached $1,400 plus bonuses for quality milk.

But he was still illegal. The Border Patrol raided a party at his brother's home and found Banuelos hiding in a locked closet. Held overnight, he was dropped across the border, but made it back to work a day later.

Three years into his new job, he took a 70 percent pay cut to work with horses — actually, cleaning out stalls — when a Canadian family bought a nearby ranch.

"I had been sending all my money home. My mom bought a house with it. I had two or three pairs of pants and a couple of shirts, that's all," he said.

"My employers, the Gallelli family, knew I liked horses, was good around horses. Their trainer taught me how to break colts. My first horse was one they gave me for my birthday."

He trained it as a trick horse and sold it for $4,000.

By then, Banuelos had discovered cutting, and his employers, seeing his promise, arranged for him to learn from a master.

"When he arrived, he didn't know heck about cutting horses," said Wayne Hodges, a respected nonpro trainer and competitor. But Hodges spotted Banuelos' natural talent.

"Ascencion gets into the horse's mind, and he just understands horses. He has a feel for horses most people never get, a good part of your trainers never get," said Hodges, who recalled that his protege once feared that discrimination might hold him back, saying: "I can't win. I'm a Mexican. People won't let me win."

"I told him, 'If you're good and honest, you can. How many Mexicans are out there cutting?'

"'None.'

"'Well, if you're good, they'll remember you. You can be very successful if you try.'"

Banuelos made his own opportunities, Hodges said.

His first cutting horse, bought on an installment loan, won $4,000 in its initial competition and was later sold for $30,000.

"Ascension's horses are always big movers, always seem to have a lot of style," said Lyons, 45, who is based in Grandview. "They are hard-stopping horses — a horse has to stop on his hindquarters, hard and quick . . . He has his horses broke very well, they handle well, responsive to his direction, and willing.

"He's a real good horseman and he's a good horse trader."

But Banuelos' first operation was not a financial success.

"I knew how to run a place, but I didn't know how much it cost to run a place," he recalled.

He moved from California to Utah and then to New Mexico, working for others before he again opened his own place near Amarillo, and later near Jacksboro to be close to major cutting events in the Fort Worth area.

When amnesty was offered to undocumented workers, "I was probably the first one to get it. I spoke to a lawyer friend who said I didn't need a lawyer because I had all my paperwork. They sent me a green card right away."

Before and after his success, family has been important. When a brother died in a traffic accident and his father was badly injured, "he sold everything he owned, raised $50,000 and paid the hospital bills," his wife said.

In May, Banuelos returned to Mexico to put on the first cutting horse demonstration with the hope of encouraging the sport in his homeland.

ATTACK: Iran-Contra report faults Reagan, Bush

to Iran in exchange for the release of hostages and the diversion of some of the profits from those sales to a clandestine network run by North to funnel military supplies to Contra rebels in Nicaragua. At the time, Congress had forbidden U.S. military aid to the rebels, who were fighting the leftist government of Nicaragua.

Walsh's report was completed in August but has been sealed from public scrutiny by a special panel of federal appeals judges to give those named in it time to submit responses.

That three-judge panel announced Friday it would release the report soon, possibly with minor deletions.

For now, the report is only available to those named in it, and their lawyers. Those who read it are prohibited by the court from discussing its contents publicly.

A number of sources provided The Associated Press with a description of its contents, including notes from sections of the report. The sources insisted on anonymity.

The sources said the report concludes Bush was not telling the truth when he declared publicly that he was "out of the loop" — unaware of important aspects of Iran-Contra when he served as Reagan's vice president.

Bush has said that he didn't know until after the scandal erupted late in 1986 that the arms sales were linked to the release of American hostages held in Lebanon.

"Contrary to public pronouncements, Bush was fully aware of the Iran initiative," the sources' notes quote the report as saying.

The sources said the report also states there are seven unanswered questions about Bush's knowledge of the scandal that Iran-Contra prosecutor Lawrence Walsh intended to raise by questioning Bush at the trial this year of former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

That trial, however, was scuttled last Christmas Eve when Bush pardoned Weinberger and five other Iran-Contra figures.

In an interview, Bush's lawyer, Griffin Bell, said that Bush did not mislead the American public about his role in Iran-Contra.

"Judge Walsh has seven unanswered questions, but he had seven years to look into them," Bell, a former attorney general in the Carter administration, said Friday.

"I think Judge Walsh is a nice man and he ought to just fold his tent, which is what he's doing with this report," Bell said.

Told of the comments by Reagan's and Bush's lawyers, Walsh said he would decline commenting until after his report is issued.

The AP reported in October that the Walsh report, according to sources' notes, also concluded Reagan's top aides engaged in a coverup to protect the president from possible impeachment.

Among those it blamed was Edwin Meese, alleging the former attorney general concocted a "false account" of an Iranian arms-for-hostages deal to cover up Reagan's role, the sources said.

The sources said the report also concludes CIA official Robert Gates — contrary to his sworn testimony — had to have known North was operating a Contra resupply operation. At the time, Gates was deputy CIA director. He later became agency director under Bush.

Gates rejected Walsh's conclusion Saturday, saying that "neither in the independent counsel's investigation nor in any other investigation did anyone testify that I had knowledge of North's operational activities. No one did so testify because no one could." Gates said the "selective leaking of the independent counsel's report without the context of the full report and without my response submitted to the court . . . is fundamentally unfair."

ZONE: City hopes to develop Lamesa Road

that Lamesa Road can be a prime location for businesses sustained by neighborhood residents.

To do so requires new businesses coupled with new housing and neighborhood amenities such as full development of the new eastside park, Cuevas said.

"All of these have to work hand in hand: people living there and buying there," he said.

One positive indication in that direction is that banks are becoming more receptive to considering loans for eastside housing and minority-owned businesses, Cuevas said.

Ms. Romero-Wurtz said a sense of pride among residents is vital to put the area on the road to development.

"I think the community and people in this area need to care for the area and beautify it," she said. "But we need to start somewhere and we need to start with our zoning."

"It (zoning) will help us, the chamber, in attracting new businesses," she said.

In addition to encouraging business development, zoning changes should keep in mind the preservation of the integrity of the neighborhoods, Hackler said.

"We don't want to have anything this study might do to have adverse effects on the neighborhoods," he said.

Lamesa Road is currently lined with homes, businesses and empty lots.

Over the last 10 years, there have been considerable improvements along Lamesa Road, according to several officials.

During the mid-1980s, an Eastside Economic Development Task Force was set up by the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce to prepare an economic development strategy for Midland's east side.

That study was instrumental in the re-alignment of Lamesa Road and laid out plans to stimulate the economy in that area, officials said.

Former City Council member Oralia Corrales — who served on the council from 1985 until 1988 — said she has witnessed significant changes in the area over the last several years. That includes new businesses and beautification projects, she said.

"It's all the difference from going into a ghetto to going into a new area of Midland," she said.

"But there's still a lot of improvements needed, don't misjudge me there," Ms. Corrales said. Two measures conducive to improvement would be better law enforcement in the area and proper lighting along Lamesa Road, she said.

Hackler said some changes in the last several years — including street and drainage work, and housing — have helped pave the way for further improvements now, such as the proposed zoning changes.

Cuevas said he has observed about five new businesses along Lamesa Road in the last few years but the stretch of road has lacked in beautification efforts.

One setback in developing Lamesa Road was the overall bust of the Midland economy in the 1980s, officials said.

And although several businesses — especially restaurants — have failed along Lamesa Road, the rate hasn't been any greater than other parts of the city, Ms. Romero-Wurtz said.

While officials examine re-zoning concerns of Lamesa Road, they also plan to look at possibilities to develop the Lee Street area, Hackler said.

BOX: Post office officials offer Neighborhood Units

dividually locked compartments capable of handling several days of normal mail as well as small package delivery. In addition, all neighborhood boxes have a separate area for the delivery of larger packages, saving the home owner from driving to the post office for these packages, Sartain said.

As well as providing a less time-consuming means for postal workers to deliver mail, the boxes protect mail from theft and destruction, Sartain said. The boxes are resistant to vandalism as well, he said.

Mail theft in Midland has greatly increased in the last 10 years, Sartain said. From a time when one complaint a month was a rarity, Midland postal officials now receive two to three calls each day regarding stolen mail.

This problem is more pronounced near schools, Sartain said. Outgoing mail is torn open and left lying along the street, he said.

The ongoing problem of vandalism is worsening as well, Sartain said. Instances of mail-box baseball, where vandals strike mailboxes with bats wielded from passing vehicles, have been increasing, he said.

Even the heavy bricked mail boxes have been damaged, Sartain said.

When postal workers receive a request for the new locked boxes from one person, they will canvass the neighborhood, finding out which postal customers would like one of the neighborhood boxes.

Customers in the neighborhood also decide where the box will be placed, Sartain said.

Because of the canvassing and negotiations over placement, coupled with construction time, installation of the neighborhood boxes will take about six weeks from the time of the initial request, he said.

If a customer is having a severe problem with mail delivery, however, postal workers will attempt to expedite the process, Sartain said.

GROWTH: Area's economy shows strength

ing $100 million, according to the comptroller's report.

The sale of building materials, increasing 20.7 percent, mirrors growth in construction and is a favorable economic indicator, Jones said, calling this finding "extremely positive."

Automotive sales and building material sales appear to indicate more consumers making use of low interest rates during the second quarter, he said.

Important to note, Jones explained, is a 2-percent drop in clothing sales and low sales at food stores. This could indicate some consumers are deferring some needed purchases to acquire the higher-ticket items, he said.

In food stores, the number of reporting units; that is, the number of operating food stores, increased from 263 in 1992 to 334 in 1993, according to the report. Overall food sales, however, increased only 4.3 percent.

This does not reflect favorably on the current profitability of food retailing, Jones said.

The only negative part of the report of significant importance to the overall economy is a drop in manufacturing sales, Jones explained. The study shows a drop in overall manufacturing sales of 0.3 percent.

Because of the importance of manufacturing to the overall economy, even this small drop should be seriously considered, Jones said. Of interesting note, he said, the number of manufacturers reporting increased from 392 to 408, indicating more manufacturers making less sales. The growing number of manufacturers, however, is a good sign of itself.

There were also increases in outlets for wholesale and retail trade, according to the report. In overall figures for the quarter, there were 160 more outlets reporting in Midland and Odessa than during the second quarter of 1992.

The percentage increase in reporting units is lower than the percentage increase in overall sales, which indicates the local economy is strengthening, Jones said.

Restaurants did well in the second quarter, according to the report. Although some restaurants went out of business since 1992, those remaining did 5 percent more business in the second quarter of 1993.

One small-but-positive sign is a 43.7 percent increase in sales of financial services, Jones said. Although these sales totaled only $2.17 million, the increase should be interpreted as positive for the overall economy, he said.

Poll: Many in U.S. are ingnorant of Holocaust

By Alan Riding
N.Y. Times News Service

PARIS — Often accused of trying to ignore France's role in the deportation of Jews during World War II, the French are much more knowledgeable about the Holocaust than Americans and Britons, according to a poll carried out for the American Jewish Committee.

The results of the poll, released Thursday, also show that while a majority of the French are aware of the movement to deny the existence of the Holocaust, 94 percent of them — compared with 84 percent of Britons and 62 percent of Americans — believe that mass killings of Jews did take place.

The poll by Louis Harris-France last month followed similar polls carried out in the United States last November and in Britain in May this year aimed at measuring the level of public information about the Holocaust. Results can be compared because most of the questions were same in the three polls.

David Singer, the American Jewish Committee's research director, said the principal conclusion was that "people in France and Britain know much more about the Holocaust and are much less open to the possibility of denial than Americans." He said the French were also better informed than Britons.

But he believes the American results were more a measure of ignorance than of anti-Semitism. "Americans have a great deal of difficulty with United States history," he said. "European history is even more daunting. Knowledge of the Holocaust is for many a footnote in the history of World War II."

Unlike Britain, France had the direct experience of four years of occupation by Nazi Germany between 1940 and 1944. During this period, some 75,000 French and foreign Jews were deported to Nazi death camps, often with the help of the collaborationist Vichy regime. Only 2,000 survived.

Tabloids on defensive after Diana leaves limelight

LONDON (AP) — Two of the country's most sensationalist tabloids promised Saturday that their shutterbugs won't be skulking through the shrubbery for a shot of Princess Diana any more.

The statements from the Sun and the Daily Mirror came a day after Diana said she was cutting back on her public appearances because the media attention was driving her to distraction.

"We'll leave her alone," said a front-page editorial in the Daily Mirror, which last month sparked a furor by publishing pictures of the princess as she pumped iron in a health club. The photos were taken by a hidden camera.

The Sun, which once published a photograph of a pregnant Diana in a bikini, also promised restraint.

"We will respect her wishes, and we will cover the events that she wants us to cover, her public duties, very public events," said Stuart Higgins, The Sun's deputy editor.

"But we will not be sneaking up behind bushes or waiting outside Kensington Palace to catch her going out in the evening or things like that."

But in the midst of the remorse, critics noted that Diana had been the exploiter as well as the exploited.

"It is not a one-sided story," said Roy Greenslade, former editor of the Daily Mirror. "It must be viewed in the context of Princess Diana's attempts to manipulate the press."

In January, it was revealed that Diana had fed information to some newspapers — just like her estranged husband, Prince Charles, was doing with other papers.

"Diana is a story . . . everywhere," said Jean-Paul Dousset, a photographer who has followed her for a decade.

$6 million bounty on Escobar to go to his victims' widows, orphans

MEDELLIN, Colombia (AP) — The $6.2 million bounty on druglord Pablo Escobar's head will be shared by the widows and orphans of his victims and the men who hunted him down, President Cesar Gaviria said Saturday.

"We will use the reward money to ease the anguish of the families of those who fell in the fight," Gaviria said in the city where Escobar was shot and killed by security forces Thursday.

The 44-year-old head of the Medellin cartel was accused of ordering the assassinations of presidential candidates, judges, journalists and police. Hundreds of ordinary Colombians died in bombings of shopping centers, neighborhoods and a passenger airplane.

In Medellin, the base of his ring's operations, Escobar and his gang were blamed for the deaths of at least 500 police officers since 1989.

Despite his cartel's violence, Escobar had many fans among the poor, who Saturday continued to mourn their hero's death. Escobar, who began his criminal career as a car thief, had financed urban renewal projects for the impoverished neighborhoods of his native Medellin.

After Escobar died, "there were a lot of tears, a lot of desperation because for us it was like losing a father," said Marcela Jaramillo, a 26-year-old housewife who lives in a neighborhood the drug trafficker built for the poor.

Thousands of people attended Escobar's funeral Friday at a cemetery on the outskirts of Medellin.

'We will use the reward money to ease the anguish of the families of those who fell in the fight.'

— Colombia's President Cesar Gaviria

Among those whom Escobar's family invited to speak at the burial was Isaura Garcia, 72, known as the "grandmother" of the Medellin Without Slums neighborhood group.

Garcia said Escobar's mother, Hermilda Gaviria de Escobar, told her to "'tell them what Pablo was really like, what he did for you and your people.' So I did."

While Escobar won support in Medellin by sharing a small portion of the billions of drug dollars he made, he also recruited the city's slum boys as his hired assassins.

"He took our young people without hope and turned them into killers," said a Medellin resident who identified himself only as Leon.

"Escobar was not a hero," Gaviria said during his speech honoring the police and soldiers who hunted the drug trafficker for 16 months before killing him Thursday. "He was a delinquent who received the punishment that criminals deserve.

"No one should remember Medellin as the city of the cartel," the president continued. "There is no more Medellin Cartel. That name died with Escobar."

Gaviria said that most of the $6.2 million the government had offered for Escobar's capture dead or alive would go the families of his victims.

Some money also will be used to build housing for the security forces who hunted down and killed him, he said.

Escobar's death was not expected to make a serious dent in the flow of cocaine from Colombia to the United States and other countries. But many Colombians hope his demise will help ease the drug-related violence that has plagued this South American nation for more than a decade.

Tipped off by several traced phone calls, including one Escobar made to his 16-year-old son, Juan Pablo, police and soldiers raided the drug lord's two-story hideout on Thursday.

They shot and killed the portly, bearded Escobar and his bodyguard as they tried to escape over the roof.

Sarajevo fog closes airport, quiets snipers

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Fog helped shield Sarajevans from the sights of gunners and snipers Saturday after several days of increased shelling, but it also closed the airport to U.N. aid flights.

The relative quiet was a welcome respite from artillery and sniper fire on Friday that killed seven people and wounded more than 20, including two French peacekeepers.

But the U.N. suffered casualties elsewhere — one Spanish peacekeeper was killed Saturday and another injured in a land-mine explosion north of Mostar in southwestern Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Squadron Leader David Fillingham of the U.N. Bosnia Command said it wasn't clear whether the soldiers were in a vehicle or on foot when the mine went off.

It was the 65th fatality among peacekeepers in the U.N. mission in former Yugoslavia.

Shelling and sniping was especially intense in Sarajevo on Friday, the day after talks in Geneva among Bosnian Serbs, Croats and the Muslim-led government broke off. They made no progress on a peace plan to divide Bosnia into three ethnic ministates.

Cmdr. Idesbald van Biesebroeck, a spokesman for U.N. forces, said 21 U.N. convoys delivered 733 tons of aid across Bosnia on Friday, a relatively successful day, as the warring sides mostly honored pledges to let aid through.

One convoy struggling to reach the Muslim town of Tesanj in northern Bosnia finally gave up Friday because of fighting.

"There was still shelling all around the convoy . . . so they just turned around and went back," said U.N. relief agency spokesman Ray Wilkinson.

Zimbabwe capital tense; clashes kill 15, wound scores

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Malawi state radio Saturday broadcast a call for the east African country's government to resign following riots in the capital that killed at least 15 people and left scores wounded.

The appeal was issued by the all-party National Consultative Council after a crisis meeting overnight, said a Western diplomat reached by telephone from Zimbabwe.

The council cited the government's failure to control soldiers who clashed with members of the youth wing of the ruling Malawi Congress Party. The council urged the government to step down in favor of an independent interim president pending elections, the diplomat, who requested anonymity, said in the Malawi capital of Lilongwe.

Is protesting abortion crime? Supreme Court to decide

By Sharon Cohen
Associated Press

CHICAGO — In Joseph Scheidler's world, there are times when it's his moral duty to break the law. To trespass, if he must, or be a vandal. It's his way of following his conscience — and stopping abortion.

"People don't like to hear this, but there's a higher law: Thou shalt not kill," he declares. "I'm doing what I have to do. So what? I've got some misdemeanors. . . . I don't consider myself a criminal."

Scheidler says he isn't violent. He says blockading abortion clinics or painting over abortion ads serves a greater good. "Abortion isn't an individual decision," he says. "It's a community decision. It's a family decision. . . . The bottom line is we're trying to save lives."

To some, Scheidler and other abortion foes are social activists in the mold of Gandhi. To others, they're thugs in a league with a mobster like Gotti.

It's now up to the U.S. Supreme Court to judge.

On Wednesday, the justices face one of the most divisive issues in America as they consider whether the Racketeer Influence and Corrupt Organizations Act — a law aimed at organized crime — can be used to sue protesters who block access to abortion clinics.

The case pits the National Organization for Women and abortion clinic owners — supported by the Clinton administration — against abortion foes, including Operation Rescue and its founder Randall Terry and Scheidler, head of the Chicago-based Pro-Life Action League.

Abortion has been legal nearly 21 years, but the passions and conflict it stirs remain strong: Just last month, the House and Senate passed measures to crack down on abortion violence. And on Feb. 21, trial is set to begin for a man accused of killing a Florida abortion doctor.

The Supreme Court has weighed in, too: In January, it ruled federal judges may not stop abortion clinic blockades by invoking an 1871 civil rights law.

Using RICO as a tool against anti-abortion protesters has been tried with varying results: An appeals court rejected it here, but it was successful in a Philadelphia suit.

This case — NOW et al. vs. Scheidler et. al — is considered important because a victory for NOW and its allies could open the door for damage suits against protesters who shut down or vandalize abortion clinics.

"If they have to pay the price for terrorism, they might think twice about it," says Fay Clayton, a lawyer representing NOW and the abortion clinics.

"It's using nuclear bombs against the pro-life movement," responds Walter Weber, a lawyer for Operation Rescue and Terry. "There's not that much to win, but a whole lot to lose."

RICO is a potent litigation weapon that could "dry up a pool of money in the pro-life movement," Weber said. "There would be no incentive to have a budget because it would just be a target of lawsuits."

RICO, the anti-racketeering law enacted in 1970, was designed to combat organized and white-collar crime, but increasingly has been used in business disputes and cases ranging from commodities traders to gang members.

In a series of decisions, the Supreme Court has refused to narrow the scope for using the law.

Wednesday's debate will feature RICO's author, G. Robert Blakey, a Notre Dame University law professor, arguing for the anti-abortion side.

The 7th Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago ruled RICO didn't apply here because even though anti-abortion groups may engage in "reprehensible criminal . . . conduct," they did not have the economic motive the anti-racketeering law requires.

Abortion rights advocates say RICO doesn't specify such a motive.

Supporting them are the American Medical Association, attorneys general of seven states, several women's groups and the Clinton administration.

Government lawyers say groups may engage in illegal acts largely for political reasons but still gain financially, such as getting increased contributions.

Burglars steal computerized AIDS records

MIAMI (AP) — Burglars at a hospital made off with computerized records of at least 6,000 people with AIDS or HIV, the virus that causes the disease.

Police said the burglary at Jackson Memorial Hospital, in which three personal computers and several diskettes were taken, may have been an inside job. They said burglars got by double-locked office doors.

The burglary was discovered Nov. 15 but officials didn't publicize it for fear of alarming patients.

The names were on a list of people served by the South Florida AIDS Network. Barbara Loyd, the network's administrator, said the agency has copies of all of the stolen records.

Jim Towey, secretary of the Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, said several codes protect the information from easy access.

The theft prompted Towey to send inspectors to check security at 35 county health departments and AIDS agencies across the state.

State law makes unauthorized disclosure of records of HIV-infected people illegal, and hospital administrators and health officials said there was no evidence that any of the names had leaked out since the burglary.

But AIDS activist Jim Pruitt said: "This is really disturbing. . . . People are really fearful about their confidentiality. Some of the people who receive services are acutely sensitive to this, and understandably so.

Author examines true case involving love, sex, murder

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press

DALLAS — In October 1983, two paramedics entered a suburban Dallas home and discovered a young woman nude and near death, her hands and legs bound to a four-poster bed.

■ Review

She had been shot twice in the head and strangled. Her 4-year-old son was at home but unharmed.

Rozanne Gailiunas, 33, the estranged wife of a prominent Dallas kidney specialist, died two days later without regaining consciousness.

So began a marathon murder case that, 10 years later, still has not run its serpentine course but is nonetheless the subject of Ken Englade's latest true crime offering, "To Hatred Turned."

A second book on the same case, "Open Secrets," by Dallas author Carlton Stowers, is due out in June.

Englade, of Albuquerque, N.M., has become something of a quick-and-dirty journalistic gun with six books on several of the nation's most lurid and widely publicized cases.

"To Hatred Turned" (St. Martin's Press, $22.95) is, as the publisher proclaims, a steamy story of passion, vengeance and murder in Texas.

It is also a page flipper.

There's a dour and jealous husband, a ministerial student turned killer, a dope-snorting lawyer, a plodding investigator and a purported villainess just recently extradited from France.

To Texans, at least, the name Joy Aylor should ring a bell.

Mrs. Aylor, then 34, a voluptuous interior designer and wife of a wealthy Richardson contractor, is accused of capital murder in the killing-for-hire of Rozanne Gailiunas.

She is also charged in a separate murder attempt on her husband, Larry.

Larry Aylor and Mrs. Gailiunas were engaged in a torrid love affair at the time of the slaying.

In light of later events, it's a bit puzzling that Mrs. Aylor was not first arrested until 1988 and the hired killer remained at large for more than five years.

Englade gives us an early clue, however, when Aylor tells the chief investigator he believes, correctly, his lover's death was a contract job.

"You've been watching too many movies," the cop shrugs.

Since the logical suspects had alibis, and the victim was neither raped nor robbed, it would seem that the possibility of a hired killer would be better than remote.

'Heaven has no rage like a love to hatred turned, nor hell a fury like a woman scorned.'
—William Congreve
1670-1729

And it's hardly a tribute to the investigative skills of the Richardson Police Department that the killer was caught and Mrs. Aylor implicated.

No stranger to high-profile murder cases, Englade does an admirable job of weaving a strong story out of a bundle of loose threads and a truly bizarre cast of characters.

He is less successful in illuminating the character of Joy Aylor, who, allegedly, was the Machiavellian influence behind the whole sordid affair.

"One of my biggest regrets about writing this book is that I was never able to interview, or even see, Joy Aylor," Englade said. But noting that she had proved herself an adept seductress, he added:

"I was, and still am, fascinated by the woman and the web she allegedly managed to weave."

It is unfortunate, but unavoidable, that the book could not include the murder trial of Mrs. Aylor. Neither author knew there would ever be one.

On the eve of her 1990 trial, Mrs. Aylor fled with a new lover, Mike Wilson, a onetime Dallas prosecutor who was facing a courtroom showdown of his own on drug charges.

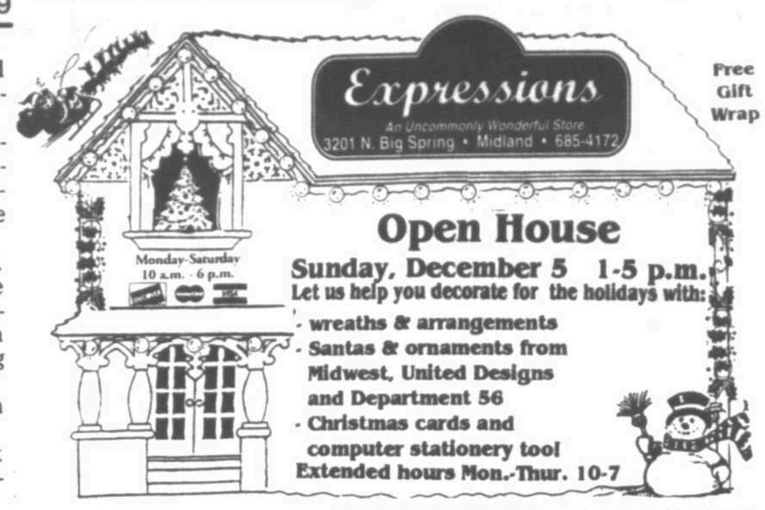

Wilson was captured a month later by Canadian authorities.

In March 1991, after an accident in a rental car, Mrs. Aylor was arrested in the South of France, where she was living under an assumed name.

The highest court in France recently upheld her extradition to Texas after receiving assurances she would not be executed if convicted of capital murder.

France struck down the death penalty in 1981.

Mrs. Aylor was returned to Dallas just weeks ago and is awaiting her date with Texas justice.

Every holiday season, Child Protective Services provides us with the names, ages and Christmas wishes of children who are in need, or who have been abused or neglected. These requests are put on "wish cards" and are available at participating Bank One branches. Simply choose a card, purchase the wish and return the wrapped gift to the branch. We'll make certain that the wish gets into Santa's bag for Christmas delivery.
So this year, help make a wish come true in The Spirit of Christmas.

West Texans find wide-ranging fans of special chile rellenos

By Andrea Hawkins
Associated Press writer

PECOS — Ben's Spanish Inn was the place to be in Pecos.

For 30 years, sometimes twice a week, Betty Greear and her family would go there to eat, see and be seen.

"One particular dish was absolutely spectacular," Greear recalls. "The chile relleno was unique ... nobody you could not figure out what was in it."

For years, Mrs. Greear tried to re-create the elusive secret recipe Ben's was famous for. She was sure there were beans in there somewhere.

Four years ago, the restaurant's owner, Ben Matta, decided to hang up his apron and retire.

For Mrs. Greear and her husband, also named Ben, it was a chance to rise out of the dying oil field business of West Texas and keep the restaurant's famous food alive by marketing the beloved rellenos to other areas.

"Besides," Mrs. Greear said, "my curiosity was just killing me."

While she won't divulge the recipe, developed by Matta over his 40-plus years in business, she will admit her surprise to discover it wasn't as "sinful" as she had imagined.

"It's a very mysterious product," she said.

And there were no beans in it.

Today, the famous chile rellenos are sold as frozen food in grocery stores throughout Texas, and will soon be available in New Mexico and a California fast food chain. Orders are shipped all over the country and as far away as the United Kingdom for the rellenos and their miniature offspring, the Tid-Bit.

The rellenos success story began in 1942, when then-Safeway employee Ben Matta started the Spanish Cafe on the east side of Pecos. His wife, Chuy Matta, would work at the restaurant during the day until her husband joined her after work at night.

"It had never been easy, it took two or three years to really get from behind the bushes," Matta said. "Fortunately in the '50s, '60s, '70s and '80s, this town had been a booming little town."

Matta remained at the grocery store for about a year and a half until he felt the restaurant business could support the family.

The name changed to its current moniker in 1947 with a new restaurant on Highway 80 across from Santa Rosa Church.

The rellenos, Matta said, didn't come about until the 1950s.

"It's actually my own creation," he said. "I just worked at it until I got it perfected. I created this recipe and it took off right away; it was the best thing I ever invented."

While the original rellenos were stuffed with cheese, Matta experimented with meat and other ingredients.

The secret, he said, is in the consistency.

'They (rellenos) have to be the same every day. Even though when it got too big, I had to make sure they were just as good as they had been yesterday.'

—Ben Matta
restaurant owner

"They have to be the same every day," Matta said. "Even though when it got too big, I had to make sure they were just as good as they had yesterday."

The family raised its own chile peppers on their farm in Fort Davis, with lots of good, sweet water, he said. Extra chiles were brought in from Hatch Valley, N.M.

Every year, Matta would roast 20 tons of chile for the winter on his own specially built roaster.

The restaurant moved two more times before its final location on Third Street in 1961.

"That was a very beautiful atmosphere," Matta recalled. "There was an enclosed patio on the east side. There's nothing in the near area that would compare to the environment."

The 376-seat restaurant was filled to capacity several nights a week with locals and often school buses filled with out-of-town football teams or their boosters in town for a game.

The restaurant's success sent all six Matta children to St. Mary's University, and paid for the inevitable retirement of Ben and Chuy Matta when the years got the best of them as Matta developed severe arthritis and back problems.

While three of his sons gave the business a try, the oil bust in the 1980s took the wind out of the sails of Ben's Spanish Inn.

"If I had to do it again, I would do the same thing," Matta said.

He sold the restaurant to the Greears in 1990, a couple who admits they had the drive, but not a lot of food experience.

"We were a little naive when we started this," Mrs. Greear said. "If we had done more research, we probably wouldn't have been brave enough to jump into it."

The couple tried to restore the restaurant, but couldn't juggle the mass-production and the business at the same time.

The stores they tried to market to wanted a proven product, which they also didn't have.

They also didn't bargain for the massive regulations set by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, which Greear said let them open before all the paperwork was completed, then closed them down because it wasn't completed yet. Production times still see daily USDA inspections.

However, the business recently gained approval for a child nutrition label, which, if they wanted to, could be used to sell for school lunch programs.

"In our fourth year, we have the hardest part behind us I hope," Mrs. Greear said.

The original recipe has changed somewhat with the introduction of the Tid-Bit.

"In demonstrations in the stores, the large chile rellenos are just impossible to serve," Greear said. "I tried to create something for demonstrations, and now they outsell the chile rellenos."

Greear, who perfected a flare igniter in the oil field business, developed a conveyor belt system for the relleno mixture based on a sausage-stuffing principle.

He mixed chopped chiles in with the mixture for the smaller bite-sized pieces to create the Tid-Bits, and realized a 60 percent reduction in labor costs when they switched from whole chiles in the larger version.

Watergate burglar, Sturgis, dies at 68

MIAMI (AP) — Watergate burglar Frank Sturgis, who served 13 months in prison for the crime that brought down the Nixon administration, died Saturday of cancer. He was 68.

Sturgis died at the Veterans Affairs hospital in Miami a week after he was admitted, said his lawyer, Ellis Rubin. Doctors diagnosed lung cancer that had spread to his kidneys.

Sturgis was a member of the burglary team caught after a break-in at Democratic Party headquarters at the Watergate hotel.

"In Watergate, he claimed to his dying day that he was acting under orders of the White House," Rubin said. "He had no idea that he would be put in prison as a result."

'In Watergate, he claimed to his dying day that he was acting under orders of the White House. He had no idea that he would be put in prison as a result.'

—Ellis Rubin
lawyer

Sturgis received a 1- to 4-year sentence for the burglary. He was denied a pardon by President Carter.

Interviewed last year for the 20th anniversary of the botched break-in that ultimately brought Nixon's resignation, Sturgis said he thought the United States was better off for the experience.

"It really screwed up the country," Sturgis said. "But it made our government a little bit stronger. ... I feel the laws that came about after Watergate didn't give the president — whether it was Nixon or anybody else — the free rein to do what a dictator would do."

The Philadelphia-born former police officer, private investigator and rabid anti-communist was an active leader of PUND, a Miami paramilitary group intent on toppling Cuba's Fidel Castro.

Sturgis was the second Watergate figure to die in less than a month. Former Nixon chief of staff and Watergate conspirator H.R. Haldeman died Nov. 12 in Santa Barbara, Calif.

Sturgis is survived by his wife, Jan, and a daughter.

Astronauts prepare to overhaul telescope

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Two astronauts floated into the vacuum of space Saturday night to begin five days of repairs on the Hubble Space Telescope.

Story Musgrave and Jeffrey Hoffman were so eager to begin the job that they got an hour's jump on leaving space shuttle Endeavour's crew cabin.

"We are ready," commander Richard Covey told Mission Control earlier in the evening. "Let's go fix this thing."

After thousands of hours in rehearsal, the real task of fixing the Hubble Space Telescope was finally at hand. The telescope was placed safely aboard the shuttle Endeavour earlier Saturday, with a bent wing and ready for overhaul.

Even before Musgrave and Hoffman ventured out, there was a problem. One of two blanketlike solar arrays on the Hubble was twisted out of shape and its supporting stem was bent like a bow.

While putting on their bubble-shield helmets and bulky white suits in an airlock, Musgrave and Hoffman smiled and waved gloved hands in front of a camera.

In their six hours in the open cargo bay, Musgrave and Hoffman intend to replace two pairs of gyroscopes and two electronic control units. The repair involved removing some bolts and loosening others, opening access doors, disconnecting electrical plugs, installing new units, and buttoning it all back up.

The gyroscopes, called rate sensing units, are required to point and track the telescope. One of each pair have failed, probably because of bad electronics. The electronic units, located elsewhere, serve as the gyros' brains and they, too, have two bad units.

The first day's EVAs — the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's traditional shorthand for extravehicular activity, or spacewalks — were the prelude to other work: swapping out the solar arrays Monday, installing a new planetary camera Tuesday, installing corrective optics for other instruments Wednesday, and substituting more electronics Thursday.

Alternate pairs of spacewalkers will go into the cargo bay on successive days. Their tasks are eased by the fact that Hubble was intended to be serviced every three years.

Hubble was launched in April 1990, touted as being able to see to the edge of the universe. But two months later, an embarrassed NASA had to admit that the 94-inch primary mirror was ground too shallow at the edges, making the instrument nearsighted.

Although the telescope has been enormously productive, it developed other flaws, all of which are due for correction on the Endeavour flight. The solar panels developed an annoying jitter 16 times a day — whenever the telescope left daylight for darkness and vice versa. Computers were programmed to work around the problem.

Experts believe that a jam in the mechanism to compensate for shrinkage and expansion because of drastic temperature changes caused a kink in the stem and the resulting twist of the solar blankets.

Search intensifies for abducted girl

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) — Backed by tools that ranged from horses to helicopters, more than 300 people fanned out over a three-square-mile area on Saturday, looking for clues to the kidnapping of Polly Klaas.

The wooded hills and fields just east of Santa Rosa had been heavily searched earlier last week, but Sonoma County Sheriff Mark Ihde said: "We are going back to ground zero just to make sure that we haven't missed anything."

The area most rigorously scoured was near the spot where evidence was found last Sunday linking prime suspect Richard Allen Davis to the Oct. 1 abduction.

Divers were brought in to check reservoirs and water tanks in the area and motorcyclists also were being used, said Petaluma police Sgt. Mike Kerns. There also were searchers on horseback and in helicopters, although the emphasis was on the foot search.

Polly, 12, was taken from her home in Petaluma, 20 miles south of Santa Rosa, by a knife-wielding stranger who interrupted a slumber party. About an hour later, a woman who lives in what is now the search area reported a trespasser to the sheriff's office.

Deputies responded and confronted Davis, who told them he was sightseeing. They searched his car and checked to see if he was wanted. Finding nothing — and knowing nothing about the kidnapping because they were tuned to a different radio frequency — the deputies let him go.

But last Sunday, when the woman reported finding clothing and other items, a check of Davis' record revealed that he was a twice-convicted kidnapper in violation of parole. Davis, 39, was arrested Tuesday and is being held in the Mendocino County jail on a 30-day drunken driving sentence.

On Friday, Petaluma police and FBI agents announced they found a palm print matching that of Davis in Polly's bedroom. They planned to ask prosecutors to file charges sometime this week.

Kerns said Polly's fate was still not known. "We are exploring every possibility," he said.

Some, including her father, Marc Klaas, advanced the theory that Davis had an accomplice who is holding the girl. But authorities have said they have no evidence of that.

Officials have declined to say whether Davis is talking.

About 30 people held a candlelight vigil Friday evening outside the jail where he is being held, chanting, "Tell the truth for Polly. Set your conscience free."

Polly's father made a public appeal for information. "We're prepared to man our phones all night long if necessary," he said.

Klaas also said prisoners at the state prison in Soledad recently sent a $1,000 check to help with the search. "Just like everybody here, they don't like crimes against children," Klaas said.

Clinton mixes fundraising with economic business

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Clinton found it easier to raise political funds than economic expectations on Saturday, getting a stark assessment from government, civic and business leaders on California's economy.

The president was the main draw at one of the biggest party fund-raising efforts ever, star-studded events expected to yield some $2 million for Democrats.

But before turning his attention to show business, Clinton was told by participants at a business roundtable that the federal government needs to do more to help California get back on its feet.

"Please, Mr. President, tell your Pentagon to consider regional fairness (in further defense cuts)," Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., told him. "I don't know if we can absorb any more."

With an unemployment rate in November of 8.6 percent, more than two full percentage points higher than the national average, California remains in deep distress, Clinton conceded.

"We couldn't restore the American economy without restoring the California economy."

He said that many of his initiatives, including plans to help convert defense industries to civilian ones, are helping. But he said it will still take more time.

"There is no silver bullet. The problems are complex and require a broad-based approach," he said at roundtable discussion at the Rockwell International's Canoga Park Rockedyne Division, which manufactures engines for the space shuttle.

At the session, Clinton:

—Announced the Labor Department next week will unveil a $14 million program to help retrain defense-related workers at GTE, Westinghouse, Lookheed, General Motors and McDonald Douglas.

—Announced a $46.2 million grant from the Department of Housing and Urban Development to Los Angeles to help revitalize public housing projects, the largest sum of money under the program ever given to a single urban area.

—Said he will soon announce a "NAFTA iniative...making sure all the commitments made are kept." It will focus on programs to help American workers who might be displaced if jobs do shift to Mexico, as opponents of the newly approved North American Free Trade Agreement contend.

—Promised to give serious thought to a controversial proposal by Boxer that the $4 trillion in funds that private pension plans have on deposit with the government be tapped to help rebuild the nation's roads, bridges and other infastructure.

It was Clinton's eighth trip to the state that he won in 1992 but which has gone Republican many times in the recent past and which he cannot politically afford to ignore.

Most attention on Saturday focused on Clinton's mingling with movers and shakers of the entertainment industry.

He was the guest at a fund-raiser for the Democratic National Committee hosted by Creative Artists Agency, one of Hollywood's top talent agencies. With tickets selling for $1,000 to $2,500, the 400-person guest list included Kevin Costner, Warren Beatty, Meryl Streep, Glenn Close and Whoopi Goldberg.

Later, he was headed for an even more exclusive, more-expensive, fund-raiser.

Entertainment tycoon Marvin Davis was hosting a dinner party at his Beverly Hills mansion, with up to 200 guests from the show business and corporate worlds, including Barbra Streisand and Steven Spielberg, paying between $25,000 and $100,000 to attend.

All told, the Democratic National Committee expects to raise $2 million from the two fund-raisers.

Much of it is so-called "soft money" that Clinton's campaign-finance legislation would eliminate: money that bypasses the $1,000 limit on indvidual contributions by funneling it to various party-building and get-out-the-vote.

It's a giant loophole used by both parties.

"We're going to continue to push for campaign finance reform," White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers said.

Gambling keeps growing despite hard times

By Francis X. Clines
N.Y. Times News Service

LAS VEGAS — The newest perspective on the booming national industry of legalized gambling is now open for business: futuristic virtual-reality rides to soothe the losers' souls, just up the theme-park escalator from acres of the latest video slot machines.

Here in the desert where Bugsy Siegel started it all six decades ago as a limited-audience, amoral escapade for high rollers, legalized gambling is displaying its growing mass-entertainment role in grand fashion.

Three huge new casinos costing a total of $2 billion are opening with a new kind of Hollywood star power: a tie-in emphasis on special-effects theme-park entertainment.

"Did you see that?" asked one distracted loser, Jim Czarniecki, emerging in great delight from one of the new participatory trompe l'oeil theater entertainments at the mammoth new Luxor casino hotel.

With its replica of Tut's tomb, the glass pyramid-cum-Sphinx extravaganza is enough to make the old American connotation of the sinfulness of gambling seem as quaintly distant as the Conestoga wagon.

The sin is indeed gone from the nation's gaming industry, obliterated by the notion of mass entertainment. Fifteen years of unprecedented growth has seen legalized gambling mushroom from just two main casino cities and a handful of state lotteries and racetracks to take root in some form in all the states but Utah and Hawaii, creating an estimated 500,000 jobs.

Americans, unrestrained in their entertainment appetite by the recession, spent $29.9 billion on legal gambling last year. That was six times what they spent on movie tickets, as the gambling industry enlarged its share of the nation's entertainment dollar through a dizzying, competitive combination of state lotteries, Indian reservation casinos, and riverboat gambling that saw the industry buck the recession with an 11 percent annual growth rate across the past decade.

Of all the factors that rolled back the bias against gambling, the steady growth of mass-market state lotteries may be most influential if least flamboyant in making gambling accepted more as middle-class recreation.

From New Hampshire's first lottery in 1964, elaborate lotteries now are under way in 37 states, raking in 38 cents of every legally wagered dollar.

With new, more inviting video technology helping increase play, the total tax revenue from the lotteries alone climbed to $11.45 billion last year, an increase of 12 percent over 1991.

Popular lottery acceptance, recession pressures on state and local budgets, and a sudden cascade of casino investments on land and water are the main factors in gambling's growth.

"People are now looking at gambling as another entertainment option," said Paul Dworin, publisher and editor of Gambling & Wagering Business magazine.

"Americans spend more on leisure and entertainment and gambling has become a significant part of that economy," said Dworin.

Youngest victim of plane crash had future plans

BUHL, Minn. (AP) — Jerry and Eleanor Christensen had everything planned: They would flood a makeshift ice rink so a young relative from California could live his dream of tying on hockey skates and playing the game he loved.

The couple was at the airport last Wednesday night, waiting for 11-year-old Tony Trujillo with a welcome poster, when word came the plane crashed, killing all 18 people on board.

"He was just a nut about hockey, knew all the stats and knew all the stars," Christensen said Friday. "The last time I was in California, I would watch him rollerblade until it was too dark to see and he'd be pretending he was skating in a hockey game to his heart's content."

The Northwest Airlink flight crashed into a snow-covered hill in a freezing rain. Tony had never seen snow. The welcome poster, with his photograph blown up, was under some papers in the Christensens' kitchen.

"He called me up and said, 'I'm sending you a picture of me so when you go to the airport to pick me up you'll see this is what I look like,'" Mrs. Christensen recalled. "This is such a small airport that I had to laugh when he said that, as if we'd miss him."

Tony, the son of Mrs. Christensen's niece, had two weeks off between his sixth-grade classes in Palmdale in Southern California. He was a top student, an editor on the school newspaper and a football player.

He had bugged his parents since August to let him go to Buhl, population 900. Finally, Dennis and Cindy Trujillo agreed and Mrs. Christensen began making plans.

She arranged for him to practice — and maybe get into a game — with a community youth hockey team. She rented Tony some skates and bought a big blue jersey with his last name across the back in large white letters. She inked his name on a big blue helmet and got out her son's old pads.

Tony's parents went to Hibbing to make arrangements for their son's return to California. When they go home, they will take the hockey jersey, helmet and pads so Tony's younger brother can wear the dream outfit.

Tilton seeks permission from court to use 1871 law

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Televangelist Robert Tilton has asked the U.S. Supreme Court for a decision on whether he can sue a Tulsa lawyer and five others under a 122-year-old civil rights law.

In documents filed Thursday, Tilton alleged he was denied his right to exercise his religion by Tulsa lawyer Gary L. Richardson; Texas lawyers C. Tony Wright, David Burrows and George A. Otstott, and Trinity Foundation Inc. officers Ole Anthony and Harry Guetzlaff.

He wants to use the Civil Rights Act of 1871, also known as The Ku Klux Klan Act, which covered members of minority groups claiming racial oppression or members of other protected classes.

Richardson represents three women who said Tilton's ministry conspired to fraudulently solicit funds.

Two of the women claimed they suffered emotional distress after the Word of Faith Outreach Center Church continued to solicit funds from their deceased husbands even though the ministry was notified of the deaths.

A Tulsa district judge ruled in Tilton's favor last July, but the women are appealing the decision.

In his Supreme Court appeal, Tilton called the Tulsa lawsuits and others filed in Texas "frivolous."

He accuses Richardson and the other defendants of conspiring against him and his church because of bigotry.

In his appeal, Tilton said the ministers and church are a "relatively new and small religious class of believers whose message and interpretation of Holy Scriptures is not accepted or appreciated by conventional Christianity."

Tilton, through his attorney, J.C. Joyce of Tulsa, filed the appeal after a September ruling by the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver upheld a lower court's dismissal of Tilton's lawsuit.

U.S. District Judge James Ellison dismissed the suit saying it might not belong in federal court.

Richardson asked for the dismissal, he said, because Tilton and his church did not qualify under the act.

Report: Astronaut spurns FBI sting operators

HOUSTON (AP) — The FBI threw all they had at rookie astronaut David A. Wolf — a limo ride, Dom Perignon, fine food, topless dancers.

But Wolf, 37, failed to bite on a lure seeking out bribes to NASA officials to get bogus medical projects flown on the space shuttle, The Houston Post reported in a copyright story Saturday.

Citing unidentified sources, The Post said a federal agent posing as an Atlanta businessman picked up Wolf, who took his first space shuttle ride in October, in a limousine and took him first to an expensive downtown restaurant, then a topless club.

The undercover agent took the astronaut out to discuss a medical project, according to the story. The agent's strategy was part of FBI's Operation Lighting Strike, which has so far fingered about a half-dozen NASA employees and up to 24 contract workers in possible fraud and bribery activities.

Wolf told supervisors he felt stuck with the businessman for the evening because he did not have his own car with him.

A NASA spokesman, interviewed by The Associated Press on Saturday confirmed The Post's account.

"I'm not aware of anything in that story that is inaccurate," said Doug Ward, a spokesman at Johnson Space Center.

But the fact Wolf did not immediately end the conversation with the undercover agent earlier in the evening and failed to call a cab, doesn't worry NASA, who on Saturday stood by Wolf and said no action will be taken against Wolf who possibly violated the agency's in-house ethics policy.

According to the policy, all NASA employees — including astronauts — should not engage in behavior that could appear to be compromising to the space agency.

"Yes, there is an ethical situation," said Ward.

But he insisted that astronauts are frequently asked for comment on devices used in space.

"It's not unusual at all for advice for comment on things," Ward said.

As for the topless club venture, Ward said had Wolf known that was part of the evening, he would not have gone.

"I think he they (any astronaut) knew that was on the agenda, any one of them would refuse," Ward said.

"The issue here is judgement versus criminal wrongdoing," he said.

The Post did not say when the evening on the town took place or if Wolf was engaged in a business transaction that evening on behalf of NASA.

The evening jaunt was arranged by a former Wolf colleague who also was present that night. Sometime after the meeting, Wolf received a prospectus on the medical device. He said in The Post's story that he threw it away and avoided repeated calls from the former colleague, who had formed a company to market the product.

There was no answer at Wolf's home on Saturday.

Wolf joined NASA in 1983 to work at the Johnson Space Center's medical sciences division and has several patents on medical instruments.

Statistics gauge safety of commuter aircraft

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commuter aircraft are far safer and popular than they used to be, but they are five times more likely than larger airliners to have a fatal accident, according to government statistics.

The small planes, known to travelers as "puddle jumpers" and "white knucklers," are the fastest-growing part of the nation's airline industry.

As major carriers abandon small airports and short-haul routes to save money, regional airlines are stepping in with turboprops, like the one that crashed last week in Minnesota, killing all 18 people on board.

"I fly them all the time, being from South Dakota," said Sen. Larry Pressler, senior Republican on the Senate aviation subcommittee. "I feel safer in the big planes quite frankly."

Commuter planes are a third less likely to be involved in an accident as they were in the 1970s when the industry was deregulated.

But there were seven fatal crashes involving the small planes last year, a rate of 0.243 per 100,000 departures, according to the National Transportation Safety Board.

The rate for larger airliners — those that carry more than 30 passengers — was 0.050.

Twenty-one people died in commuter accidents last year, compared to 33 in larger planes which fly far more miles and carry far more passengers than commuter flights.

"None is acceptable. No one thinks we have the safest flight operation we can possibly have," said Walter Coleman, president of the Regional Airline Association.

The regional carriers have experienced explosive growth and healthy profits during a period when the nation's biggest airlines are failing or struggling to survive.

Some are owned by major airlines. Others fly independently or under one of the major's names. Northwest Airlink Flight 5719 that crashed in bad weather last week was owned by Atlanta-based Express Aviation II Inc.

Regional carriers boarded nearly 49 million passengers last year, nearly three times as many as they did in 1982. Two of the largest, Comair and SkyWest, reported third-quarter earnings of more than double a year earlier.

But the safety of commuter carriers is still the subject of a long-running debate among federal regulators and congressional investigators.

Aircraft that fly 30 or few passengers, such as the British-made Jetstream 31 that crashed in Minnesota, are exempt from many federal regulations.

Commuter pilots undergo less training than their counterparts flying jets, they complain of having to fly on less sleep, and on average they are younger and far less experienced. Pilots for major airlines earn three times what commuter pilots earn, according to the Air Line Pilots Association.

Some of the planes the commuter pilots are flying, including the Jetstream 31, are as sophisticated as older-model jets like the DC-9, but they still have limitations, experts say. Small planes, for example, cannot fly over bad weather as jets do, they have to fly through or around it.

Commuter aircraft are "far more reliable, sophisticated and larger" than planes used in the 1970s and early 1980s and accidents are "quite rare events," a House committee reported last year.

Dallas banker faces possible 5-year prison term

DALLAS (AP) — Harvey D. McLean Jr., a Harvard-educated banker whose Dallas business associates included Herman K. Beebe Jr. and Don R. Dixon before they became convicted felons, has followed his former mentors on a path toward prison.

McLean pleaded guilty Friday to a federal charge of participating in a conspiracy to misapply more than $2 million in funds from his now-defunct Paris Savings and Loan Association.

McLean's conviction carries a penalty of up to five years in prison and a possible fine of $250,000. U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer scheduled a sentencing hearing for Feb. 18.

McLean also agreed to cooperate with federal investigators and, if asked, to serve as a government witness in future cases.

McLean admitted in court papers that he approved two loans in 1985 that caused Paris Savings to lose more than $7 million. He said both loans were secured by real estate that was overvalued.

Paris Savings collapsed in 1988 and was merged with 11 other failing thrifts at a combined taxpayer loss of $1.3 billion.

After his thrift's demise, McLean was forced into involuntary bankruptcy proceedings and was ordered in 1990 to pay $1.5 million to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

He agreed Nov. 17 to plead guilty.

In return for the guilty plea, federal prosecutors agreed to dismiss three other felony counts and refrain from pursuing any other possible bank fraud case arising from any of McLean's actions in the 100-county Northern District of Texas before 1989.

Also, prosecutors agreed to make no sentencing recommendation to the judge.

"I will have a judgment against me for the rest of my life, because they say that I conspired with Don Dixon to defraud" the FDIC, McLean lamented in 1991.

Dixon benefited from several large loans at Paris Savings and had taken McLean as a partner in an apartment project in Mesquite. McLean, in turn, hired Dixon's wife as an interior decorator at a Carrollton apartment complex and purchased life insurance and computer services from companies controlled by Dixon.

New York to bar age bias in public places

By Esther B. Fein
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — New York City merchants, restaurateurs and hospitals are bracing themselves for an influx of new patrons and visitors in nine days.

No, not holiday tourists, but people some establishments have worked hard to keep out: the elderly, teen-agers, children and possibly even — now stay calm — infants.

New rules issued by the city's Commission on Human Rights will take effect on Dec. 13, prohibiting discrimination based on age — or youth — in public places.

Laws prohibiting age discrimination are common, but most of those pertain to housing and employment. City officials said they thought this was the first law in the country specifically aimed at barring such bias in places that are generally open to the public.

The rules will still allow some limited restrictions to protect individuals — for example, a health club that requires children under a certain age to be accompanied by adults in a swimming pool. And federal, state and local laws that restrict access to places like bars or R-rated movies will stand.

But the blanket exclusion of teen-agers from stores, or older people from exercise classes or babies from movie theaters, will no longer be legal. Violators will be courting fines of up to $100,000.

"The sweeping exclusion of whole groups of people based on their age will not be allowed," said Rolando T. Acosta, first deputy commissioner for human rights. "If people are rowdy or disruptive, fine, you can exclude them. But just being a certain age is not a valid reason to keep someone out of a public place."

The new rules grew out of a 1991 revamping of the City Human Rights Law, which prohibits discrimination based on race, sex, disability, sexual orientation and age, among other factors, and covers discrimination in employment, housing, credit and public accommodations.

The commission cannot say how many establishments in the city refuse to admit people because of their age, because it never before had a system to handle such complaints.

Members of the commission say they were motivated not by some powerful lobby, but by ordinary citizens — a father from Queens who called to complain because his teen-age daughter and her friends were denied seating at a nice restaurant after their senior prom; a middle-aged woman who asked whether it was legal for a gym to bar her from an exercise class because she was too old, and a teen-ager who was upset because she couldn't visit her parent in the hospital.

Indeed, for some New Yorkers this change is an injustice corrected. But many people who sought protection from broken furniture, screams to dine by and roving bands of rowdy teen-agers are appalled.

Administrators of the Frick Collection, for instance, were horrified at the prospect of having to let toddlers and teen-agers roam the halls where priceless artworks and furniture from the 16th to the 19th centuries are displayed openly, with barely a velvet rope or restraint.

The museum, at Fifth Avenue and 70th Street, excludes children under 10 and those under 16 without an adult and plans to file a request for a waiver immediately.

The commission will consider such requests if an exemption is necessary to protect "the health, safety or well-being of the public and is not inconsistent with the goals and policies" of the City Human Rights Law.

"We love kids as much as anyone, but even with adult supervision, it's hard to keep a toddler from reaching out and touching," said Robert Goldsmith, deputy director of administration for the museum. "And if we were forced to comply, we would have to alter the fundamental nature of the collection by restricting access."

But don't expect to get into the Frick with your — naturally — well-behaved 6-year-old after Dec. 13.

Biologists capture Alabama sturgeon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal biologists have captured an Alabama sturgeon for the first time since 1985, apparently settling one major issue — whether it's extinct — in the controversy over whether the fish should be declared an endangered species.

James Stewart, a biologist with the Fish and Wildlife Service in Jackson, Miss., said the fish was caught Thursday morning in the lower Alabama River.

"What this does is remove any doubt whatsoever that the fish still exists," Stewart said. "I don't see how that can be a question in anybody's mind anymore."

An Alabama business coalition opposed to listing the fish as endangered repeatedly had questioned whether the fish still existed. A coalition leader, Offa S. Nichols Jr., president of the Warrior-Tombigbee Development Association, agreed that Thursday's catch will end those questions.

But he said it might also bolster the coalition's contention that the Alabama sturgeon is not a distinct species, because more accurate comparisons with the Mississippi shovelnose sturgeon now can be made.

The coalition contends that listing the sturgeon as endangered could halt dredging of rivers in southern Alabama and cost the state's economy billions of dollars and thousands of jobs over the next decade.

With that much riding on the listing decision, Nichols said no action should be taken without "unchallenged evidence of what that fish is and needs."

A panel of independent biologists from across the country concluded last month that the Alabama sturgeon is not extinct and is a distinct species. The panel rejected arguments raised by coalition-hired biologists that the fish may be just a variant of the Mississippi shovelnose sturgeon.

The government must decide by next summer whether to list the sturgeon as endangered.

Stewart said a fish and wildlife team from Panama City, Fla., headed by biologist Pledger Moon caught the sturgeon on the bottom of the river in 30 feet of water, using a gill net.

"The fish is in excellent condition," he said. "It is just over 29 inches long, which means that it is an adult fish and probably an older adult."

Stewart said the fish had not been weighed by Friday afternoon. It was taken to a holding facility where it will be examined Monday by a biologist with the U.S. Forest Service lab in Oxford, Miss., to verify that it is indeed an Alabama sturgeon.

Girls' apparent suicide bewilders hometown residents

By Jonathan Rabinovitz
N.Y. Times News Service

SETAUKET, N.Y. — Two high school honor students, described by friends as normal teen-agers who gossiped in the library, danced at parties and wore the latest combat boots, lay down in front of a rushing train Thursday evening in what police have called a double suicide.

The two girls, Mili Subudhi, 15, and Ellen Liu, 16, apparently had been planning their deaths for a month, a law-enforcement official said, adding that notes about the suicide had been found among their belongings, including an apology by one girl for the pain it would cause her boyfriend.

The deaths stunned people in Setauket, where the high school is proudly cited as one of Long Island's finest and where parents expect teachers and administrators to notice any signs that their children may be in trouble.

But Friday, as those who knew the two replayed in their minds their most recent conversations with the girls and mulled over the details of their academic and social lives, no one had a clue as to what went wrong.

"Why?" asked Robert C. McKean, the principal of Ward Melville High School, his head propped against his hand and his eyes filling with tears. "We don't have an answer. That's what's frustrating to us. These were not high-risk kids. There was nothing that would suggest that they would do something like this. "It totally hit us by surprise."

What makes the deaths even more troubling is that they occurred in a community that has tried to be sensitive to the stresses facing adolescents.

In 1991, a student committed suicide at the high school, hanging himself from the football goal posts, and the school stepped up its efforts to identify students who might be at risk.

Six weeks ago the John T. Mather Memorial Hospital in Port Jefferson opened an adolescent psychiatric unit. And last week, a local newspaper, The Village Times, carried an article on the signs that a teen-ager may be suicidal.

Friday, McKean grimly and politely answered several dozen calls from reporters as he struggled with concerns that publicity about the two deaths might encourage students to try suicide to gain attention.

Twenty extra counselors, along with the dozen or so usually at this high school of 1,760 students, were brought in, and students and teachers were encouraged to attend special grieving sessions, if they felt the need.

But McKean ordered that classes go on as scheduled, that drama rehearsals and sport practices continue.

"We don't put the flag at half-mast," he said. "We don't have a memorial service. We don't have an assembly. We won't do that. And that upsets many of the friends of these students. But we feel that any public recognition of such an act presents the danger of a follow-up."

Outside a 7-Eleven on Friday, several hundred yards from the school, four girls who had known Miss Subudhi and Miss Liu since junior high school, talked about their classmates over Slurpees and licorice and tried to recall ways that the two had acted that might have suggested plans for suicide.

The two of them were "brilliant, they were geniuses," said Mindy Palmer, 16, one of their 11th-grade classmates, shaking her head.

Processed foods don't want to be frozen out

WASHINGTON (AP) — Though it has neither roots, seeds nor leaves, the humble tuna has entered the debate over how to make sure school children eat more fresh fruits and vegetables.

The canning and frozen food industries worry the Agriculture Department's "Fresh Start" program to buy more raw produce will tarnish their image and cut back on millions of dollars of government purchases.

"Many popular school lunch meals rely on foods that are, practically speaking, available only in processed form," John R. Cady, head of the National Food Processors Association, says in testimony he'll give to the department this week.

"Where would schools find the main ingredient for tuna melt or tuna casseroles except in cans?" Cady asked.

Cady will speak here Tuesday at the fourth and final department hearing on how to improve the quality of meals served to 25 million school children each day. Those meals cost the government about $4 billion a year in direct payments to school districts, commodity purchases and vouchers for schools to buy commodities.

Also testifying will be Steven C. Anderson, head of the American Frozen Food Institute, another group that recoils at the new stress on "fresh."

"When they initially announced the program, we were very concerned that they were going to be excluding frozen products from the school lunch program," Anderson said in an interview.

"We think the message out there is confusing because the perception is there's something wrong with frozen," he said.

Anderson stressed that quick harvest and freezing lock in the flavor and nutrition of frozen foods. No salt or fat is added. The foods are easy and cheap to prepare.

The industry groups want the department to shift its emphasis to getting the right amount of fruits and vegetables regardless of fresh, frozen or canned.

"Anytime you have a change in policy that's been set for a number of years, you're going to ruffle a few feathers," countered Andrew Moore, manager of congressional affairs for the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association.

Cady, whose group includes makers of canned foods as well as frozen, said "the vast majority" of canned and frozen vegetables are virtually fat-free, more canners have cut back on the salt and sugar, and they generally have no preservatives. No fuss, no muss, either.

"Processed foods don't require cutting, peeling and chopping and cooking by school lunch personnel," he said. "And there are no vines, peels, pods, hulls or other agricultural wastes to be disposed of by the school system."

Schools have to make some adjustments for fresh foods. The affluent suburb of Fairfax County, Va., for example, is making changes for fresh potatoes provided by USDA this year.

"We're going to have to bring in staff to cook those earlier," said Penny E. McConnell, director of food service.

The schools just received $4,000 from the department to buy fresh pears and potatoes — not enough to feed each child in a district that serves 64,000 meals a day, said McConnell, vice president of the American School Food Service Association.

New figures: Violence among younger students increases

NEW YORK (NYT) — New figures on crime and disorder in the city's public schools show that more and more serious incidents are occurring among younger and younger students in many junior high schools and even some elementary schools.

Most schools still report few problems. But, student for student, more serious incidents — from assaults to the possession of guns and makeshift weapons — were reported last year in eight junior high schools than in the worst, long-troubled high schools.

While some of the difference may result from more complete reporting by junior high school principals, school officials, including Schools Chancellor Ramon Cortines, say it reflects a disturbing new pattern of violence among children in both schools and neighborhoods.

"It is clear that you are seeing younger and younger people involved in very disturbing behavior both in and out of school," said Frank Sobrino, a spokesman for the chancellor.

Students say many of the incidents reported at the schools involved assaults between groups of youngsters. In 1992, more than 900 elementary and junior high students were suspended for bringing illegal weapons into school.

The report defines serious incidents as assaults, robbery, possession of a weapon, possession of drugs or alcohol, and sex offenses — which range from unwanted touching to harassment or abuse.

At Intermediate School 52 in the South Bronx, with 867 students, which ranks near the top of the list with 67 serious incidents, or 77 serious incidents per 1,000 students, students spoke about the dangers of seventh and eighth grade.

Robert Rivera, who is in eighth grade, said that the only reason he did not carry a "shank," or a box cutter, in school was that he had friends to protect him.

"I've got no shank, I've got friends. You got no friend, they flip you. They jump you," the 15-year-old said Friday standing outside the school.

Cortines said he was releasing the violence reports as part of a campaign to make the school bureaucracy more accountable, and "tell the bad with the good," has already moved to step up security by installing metal detectors at 10 junior high schools and expanding conflict resolution programs.

Board of Education officials said that the reason some junior high schools have higher violence statistics than high schools may turn out to be the effectiveness of improved security, including metal detectors at 41 high schools.

Not only have weapons been seized, but the presence of security guards and both counseling and classroom discussions of avoiding violence have helped reduce incidents, the officials said.

Only a few years ago, the Board of Education would not consider moving the metal detector teams into junior high schools. But with violence pushing down into lower schools, the move seemed inevitable.

Last February, a 15-year-old special education student was stabbed to death by another student in the Lower East Side Junior High School. They were on their way to a conflict resolution class.

Neill Rosenfeld, a spokesman for the United Federation of Teachers, which tracks attacks on teachers, said that the union had detected a pattern of declining incidents in high school, and an increase in lower grades.

He, too, attributed the decline to the metal detectors in about a third of the high schools.

Officials attributed the increasdents of violence suffered from multiple problems and were more likely to have low attendance by students, low math and reading achievement, and teachers with five years or fewer experience.

Linda K. Smith, who has a penchant for organization and molding firmness with compassion, has been appointed director of the Midland Judicial District's Community Supervision and Corrections Department, which oversees 3,000 Midland County probationers.

"I appreciate the trust and confidence that they have placed in me," said Mrs. Smith, who was named to the post by Midland's three Texas district-court judges, Dean Rucker, John G. Hyde and George D. "Jody" Gilles, who make up the Midland Judicial District. "And I will do my best to accomplish the objectives" of the 61-member department which she now heads. The three judges set policy for the department and monitor its operations.

By her leadership, Mrs. Smith said that she will emphasize the "pro-active" approach in operating the department rather than the more traditional "reactive" approach.

"You want to keep a crisis from occurring," she explained. "If we are on top of things, then it (any situation) will not get to a crisis."

From the candle flame lit to honor the Virgin Mary in Latin America, to lighting a candle during the African-American celebration of Kwanzaa, to igniting the wicks of candles in a Jewish eight-branched menorah, light became a universal symbol of man's commonality Saturday.

Cotillion offers young people steps to life

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Many Midland youngsters don't know which fork is for which dinner course. Others hesitate to shake hands and confidently introduce themselves to new people.

But, two Midland women hope to change all that.

Jennifer Holden and Karen Beal have joined forces to bring a professional organization to town that will offer courses teaching etiquette, music appreciation and dance.

The classes will be part of the first Jon D. Williams Midland Assembly that is offered for girls and boys between fifth and eighth grades.

Ms. Beal said her daughter participated in a cotillion in Odessa last year and benefited from the program. So, in turn, she wanted to extend the same opportunity to Midlanders.

Ms. Holden said the Jon D. Williams Cotillions, which have been in existence since 1949, have a history of bringing traditional values of the past and translating them into the social demands of today.

"An emphasis is placed on creating an educational environment that teaches young people through active participation, role modeling, team play and cooperation, while, most importantly, having fun in the process," Ms. Holden said.

"Young students develop communication, socialization and dance skills that will have a positive impact on their character and personalities throughout

'The Music Man' to be presented this week at Midland High School

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

"The Music Man," the story of a con man who comes to a small turn-of-the-century Iowa town selling more marching band equipment than he plans to deliver, will take the stage this week at Midland High School.

The musical is best known for the rousing song "Seventy-Six Trombones" and the ballad, "Goodnight, My Someone."

"It's a good family show and a good show for this time of year," said Kay Brahaney, MHS fine arts teacher and choral director of the show. "It's a real upbeat, fun show with fast dance movements and songs people know."

There won't be 76 trombones, but the MHS orchestra will be joined by some members of the seventh-grade band of San Jacinto Junior High School to fill the auditorium with music composed by Meredith Willson.

Performances are set for 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday in the

GARY OTT

Test determines marriage adaptability quotient

One of the more peculiar aspects of writing a newspaper column is that people think they know you and, as a result, feel perfectly comfortable calling you up and asking personal questions.

Ott

These questions vary widely, of course, but more times than not, the crux of the inquiry deals with that age-old subject of male-/female relations. The caller might want to know my views on dating, for example, or whether or not the person in question should become involved with an older man who has a history of — and I quote — "loving 'em and leaving 'em."

Being the kind, caring, sensitive, compassionate human being that I am, I often spend hours talking to the person, offering my astute insights and opinions on the numerous nuances that so often impact a relationship.

I take on an almost fatherly kind of role, particularly if the caller happens to be female. I employ huge doses of charm and wit to put her at ease, hoping to relax the poor child to the point that she will be comfortable enough to open up and say what is truly on her mind. Then, and only then, can we get to the root of her problem. Once that has been accomplished, we invariably sort out her various fears and concerns and work out a reasonable solution.

She becomes a well-balanced woman who once again is in complete control of her own destiny and I, in turn, have the self-satisfaction of knowing that I, in my own little way, have helped a fellow human being find happiness.

It doesn't get any better than that. And, of course, I expect nothing in return.

Still, their gratitude abounds. And, more times than not, they bubble with enthusiasm, saying things like, "Gee, Gary, you're so wise. You know everything." Or, "Golly, Gary, how can a kind, caring, sensitive, compassionate human being like you not be married?"

And the gushing continues.

For the most part, I let the compliments come and go with little or no fanfare — instead offering only a polite "thank you" or "you're much too kind" in return.

But when it comes to the married part I have to smile to myself and say nothing. For there are two kinds of people in this world — those who were meant to be married and those who were not — and nothing can change that simple fact.

OK, fine, you might be saying. But how does a person determine which group he (or she) belongs to?

Simple. You take this test. If you answer "yes" to seven or more questions you should never, under any circumstance, give even the slightest thought to getting married.

Ready?

Good. Here goes. And, remember, a "yes" answer means marriage is the ultimate no-no.

(1) Does it irritate you when a person says, "Oh gross, there's hair growing out of your ears"?

(2) After a long day at the office, do you sometimes enjoy drop-kicking your dirty underwear high into the air and leaving them wherever they land?

(3) Speaking of dirty underwear, a source of constant conflict in any marriage, if, after going through all of your clean underwear, does it strike you as logical to run down to Kmart and buy new ones rather than do laundry?

(4) Do you like to scratch yourself without hearing the words, "Oh yuk"?

(5) On occassion, when feeling particularly giddy, do you enjoy standing in front of a full-length mirror and doing your favorite Elvis Presley immitation, complete with a snarling upper lip, without fear of "being busted" by another person?

(6) For no apparent reason, do you sometimes get an uncontrollable urge to hit any person who happens to be within striking distance?

(7) Does it bother you to wake up next to a person with breath that would bore a hole through a concrete wall?

(8) Do you consider it acceptable behavior to engage yourself in deep philosophical discussions, complete with much arm-waving and finger-pointing?

(9) Do you hate being corrected, especially when the other person is right and you are wrong?

(10) Do you find it charming to be known as a "selfish, egotistical, self-centered louse?"

Me too.

Midland youngsters soon will be able to participate in a cotillion where they will learn etiquette and other social skills in addition to various dance styles.

their lifetimes."

Ms. Holden said students in "the cotillion learn a wide range of traditional and contemporary dances. The program emphasizes that dance is not only a form of art, a humanity and inherent part of our culture ... Students learn how to properly address their partners, positioning, footwork and execution," she said. "In the process, they learn how to feel comfortable and confident with one another."

She also said students are encouraged to develop a diversified appreciation of different styles of music ranging from classical to country and western.

"Regardless of social or economic background, developing confidence, self-esteem, pride, sensibility and social responsibility will create a profile for success," Ms. Holden said.

Ms. Beal said the cotillion instructors have a "way of appealing" to the students. She said the boys feel very comfortable with their instructors, one of whom is a tennis pro.

Each class session has a different topic. For instance, the younger students will have a 50s party for one class, while the older students will have a country-and-western party.

While the students aren't required to have formal attire, the boys need to wear a suit or sports coat with slacks and black or dark-brown shoes. Girls should wear a Sunday dress or skirt and blouse with low heels or flats. The exception is on nights when the class has a theme.

The founders of the Jon D. Williams Cotillions, Jon and Vivian Williams, received their early training from Fred Astaire. Mrs. Williams was a dance partner of Astaire and her husband was the director of one of Astaire's dance studios.

Williams' son, Jon D. Williams III, is conducting many of the classes along with his parents.

The younger Williams said he believes many of the skills taught in the cotillion are "survival etiquette skills" necessary to get along in today's society.

He said not only are the children learning manners they can use, but they have a lot of fun at the same time.

"The main thing is with all the alternatives today's young people have ... they need a positive attitude and social skills to get by," Williams said. "We teach students how to begin a conversation; teach them to shake hands and it is all done in a party atmosphere while having fun."

The Jon D. Williams Midland Assembly will be Monday evenings from Jan. 24 through Feb. 21 at the Petroleum Club of Midland.

Ms. Beal said the open admission is first-come, first-served.

Ms. Beal said the classes are split with one group of fifth- and sixth-graders and another group of seventh- and eighth-graders. Each group will have 45 couples that will consist of 45 boys and 45 girls. Ms. Beal said it is important for the class to be even so each student will have a dance partner.

The cost of the program is $125 for the five-week session. However, Ms. Beal said scholarships are available for families who want to enroll a child, but can't afford to pay. She said anyone interested in the scholarship needs to call and request further information.

Ms. Beal encourages interested parents to call early because classes are expected to fill up. The registration fee will hold the student's place in the class.

For further information or to request an invitation to join the class, call Ms. Beal at 683-7212 or Terry Wilkerson at 682-0774.

GOP challenges Richards' veto of gun bill

By Scott Rothschild
Associated Press

AUSTIN — Voters in next year's state Republican Party primary will be able to express their opinion on whether Texans should be allowed to vote on a handgun measure that Gov. Ann Richards vetoed.

The Texas GOP's executive committee on Saturday voted unanimously to place the non-binding referendum on the March 8 Republican Party primary ballot.

The proposition will read: Should the citizens of Texas be allowed to vote on the following question: "The Department of Public Safety should be authorized to adopt rules for licensing and training qualified citizens to carry handguns for self protection."

Texas Republican Party Chairman Fred Meyer stated: "We think that this is the kind of an item that the people of Texas should have had an opportunity to vote on."

Republican Al Clements of Houston introduced the proposition, saying, "Queen Ann — I can't believe the audacity of our governor to say that I know better than all of you citizens what you should do, so I'm not even going to let you vote."

In June, Richards, a Democrat, vetoed a measure that would have let Texans vote in the November general election on a non-binding question that asked whether they should be allowed to tote handguns.

Richards called it a taxpayer-funded opinion poll for gun interests, and she said handgun legislation would make Texas more dangerous. In killing the bill, Richards was backed by law enforcement, crime victims and other groups.

"The fact is Ann Richards made a commitment to the police chiefs of Texas that that measure would not go anywhere. She made good on her commitment to keep communities safe," said her campaign spokesman Chuck McDonald.

But Republicans criticized Richards for not letting voters express themselves on the matter.

"It is something that people want to vote on in both urban areas and rural areas," Meyer said.

Meyer said he was neutral on whether Texans should be allowed to carry handguns, and added he probably wouldn't want to carry one.

Clements said the ballot proposition will lure more voters to the Republican primary.

McDonald said the GOP was trying to score political points with the referendum, but said he doubted it would work.

Former Houston Oil chief sues energy agency

HOUSTON (AP) — The former chief of Houston Oil & Refining has sued the U.S. Department of Energy and Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to block the government from collecting nearly $58 million in possible crude oil overcharges.

Joseph Imparato, Houston Oil's ex-president says a government demand that restitution be made is based on now-expired statutes.

Phil Keif, a spokesman for the Department of Transportation, declined to comment about the lawsuit, filed in federal court in Houston Thursday.

Houston Oil & Refining was found to have made overcharges for the sale of more than 50 million barrels of crude oil from June 1979 through August 1980, back when there were federal price controls on oil and gas, according to the lawsuit.

Both Imparato and Houston Oil & Refining were told to make restitution.

The price controls were adopted in the 1970s to cope with oil embargoes and to prevent price gouging.

LIGHT: Folks spin yarns from Mexico, Africa, Appalachia

bols of Light in Jewish Ritual, Holidays and Culture" by Cherie Schwartz of Denver, Colo.; and "Yes, You Do Have Stories," presented by Donald Davis of Ocracoke Island, N.C.

Olga Loya, a native of East Los Angeles, spun tales of the mysticism of Montezuma in her presentation "Virgins, Death and Light."

Simply by changing voice inflection and using her hands to create images, Ms. Loya captivated an audience of parents and teachers. Even one student, reluctant to join the session when it started, pulled her chair closer to the storyteller. Five minutes into the presentation, the youngster moved to the edge of her seat.

"Montezuma saw the floating temples on the sea," she said, describing the arrival of Cortez by ship. "Montezuma hoped to send the light-colored people gifts so they would leave. He sent gold, silver, silk and 20 beautiful women," Ms. Loya said, stretching her arms out at the imagined splendor. "Now, do you think Cortez left?" she asked, to a roomful of laughter.

Ms. Loya said she spent her childhood taking in details and words. "I was caught up in the velvet and gold, and pomp and circumstance of Catholicism," she said.

Also an observer of the language of adults, she told a humorous story of memorizing an adult word which made people, "slide their eyes to the side," when it was said. Deciding the word was a good attention-getter, she used it at confession, and drew more of an outburst than she expected, when (as a youngster) she confessed to a priest her sin was "adultery."

"I didn't know what the word meant, but it was then I realized the power of a word," she said.

In another room of MISD's downtown administration building, Ms. Schwartz explained the spiritual meanings behind light in Jewish tradition.

She said lighting candles each day during Hanukkah represents the one small cruse of oil left in a Temple of Syrian idols which was used to light holy lamps. "The one light outlasted the enemy," she said. "It was a miracle and we never diminish a miracle. We must always add to light to increase the miracle each day."

She told of Jewish customs of collecting food, clothes and money. "Charity comes from the heart, as well as from the pocket," she said.

African-American Rex Ellis told of traditions and customs with roots in Africa. He said learning about these traditions has resulted in his celebrating Kwanzaa with his own family. Kwanzaa (which means "first fruit" in Swahili) is a seven-day harvest festival which celebrates African unity and the bounty of the first crops produced. (It is celebrated Dec. 26-Jan. 1 this year in the United States).

Ellis said the celebration centers around seven principles of black culture — unity, self-determination, collective work and responsibility, cooperative economics, purpose, creativity and faith.

Ms. Loya — writing about her art as a storyteller — said, "Storytelling is the mirror and the memory of who we are and what we are . . . It is the soul of folklore . . . The stories help weave the tapestry of our families and cultures, with all of our unique and similar traditions."

Davis, Appalachian storyteller and instructor on the process of "telling," also led workshop sessions including "Don't Worry About the Plot: Using Place and Person as Discovery Points for Story Creation."

Participants in Saturday's workshop attended four sessions offered from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The storytellers also presented a "storytelling concert" 7:30 p.m. Saturday at Midland College.

Saturday's events, and a Monday workshop for teachers, were sponsored by MISD language arts and social studies departments, the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs, and the Midland and Hispanic chambers of commerce.

Ellis will offer a free storytelling, multi-talent event 3:30 p.m. today at Southeast Senior Citizens Center, 1803 E. Indiana Ave. All interested Midlanders are invited to attend. The event is sponsored by the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs, in concert with MISD. Attendees may bring a canned food for the Permian Basin Food Bank.

Texas GOP praises Austin Apple decision

By Scott Rothschild
Associated Press

AUSTIN — The Texas Republican Party on Saturday praised Williamson County commissioners who voted against tax abatements for Apple Computer because of the company's policy granting health benefits to partners of homosexual employees.

The state Republican Executive Committee adopted a statement that commends the three commissioners "for having the courage to say taxpayers should not be forced to subsidize behavior that they believe to be immoral and illegal."

In a 3-2 vote Tuesday, the commission denied $750,000 in tax abatements that Apple had sought in building an $80 million sales support center that would employ 700 people.

The three commissioners said they opposed Apple's policy of providing health benefits to the partners of the company's gay and lesbian employees.

The decision brought national attention and Texas political and business leaders have said it could hurt economic development efforts by being seen as political meddling in corporate affairs.

Officials trying to salvage Apple's project said they didn't appreciate the GOP's comments.

"Any of the people on the (commissioners') court will be offended by an injection of partisan politics into this," said Williamson County Commissioner Mike Heiligenstein.

Heiligenstein, a Democrat, and County Judge John Doerfler, a Republican, voted for the tax abatements. Commissioners Jerry Mehevec, a Democrat, and David Hays and Greg Boatright, both Republicans, voted against the tax breaks.

"I would be interested in surveying the people on the (Republican) executive committee to see how many of them have had business dealings with Apple Computer. I wonder how many have Apple computers," Heiligenstein said.

Chuck McDonald, a campaign spokesman for Gov. Ann Richards, described the GOP position as strange.

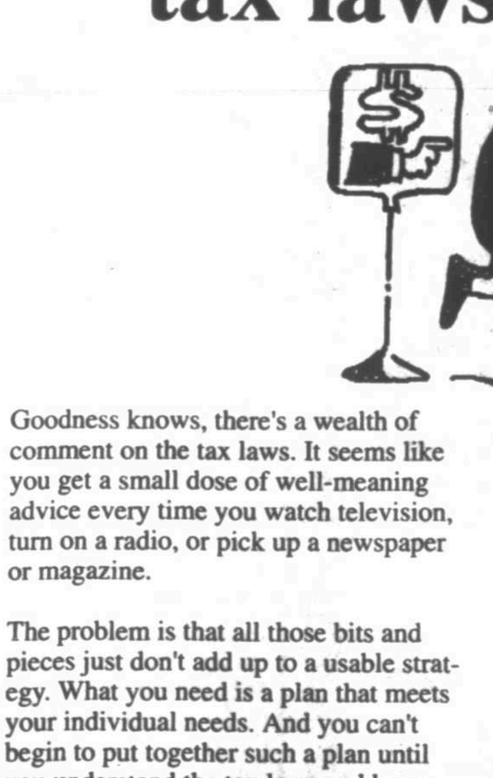

"Texans want jobs. They don't want government interfering in a private company's health plan," he said.

But Ernest Angelo Jr. of Midland, a member of the executive committee and Republican national committeeman, said the Williamson County vote was an attempt to restore basic values.

Lisa Byrne, a spokeswoman for Apple, said the company didn't have to defend its personnel policies.

CORRECTIONS: 'G.W.' Thompson to retire officer, investigator and captain of the Midland County Sheriff's Department's Criminal Investigation Division, is succeeding George "G.W." Thompson.

Thompson, who has been agency director since 1985, is retiring from law-enforcement and criminal-justice work to enter the education field.

"She is a talented crim..ial-justice administrator and manager," Thompson said of Mrs. Smith, "and has many years of experience in the criminal-justice system and in volunteer work in the community."

Thompson, who has known and worked with Mrs. Smith from the onset of her career, said that Mrs. Smith was the first woman peace officer from Midland County to attend the Federal Bureau of Investigation's National Academy and was the first woman officer to be elected to the FBI's National Academy Board of Governors. Additionally, Mrs. Smith is a graduate of the National Institute of Corrections in Colorado.

Since 1991, Mrs. Smith has worked for Thompson as a research-and-planning officer, training officer, director of the Midland Judicial District's Restitution Center, and, until her recent appointment, as Thompson's assistant agency director.

"G.W. Thompson is a strategic thinker," Mrs. Smith said of her former boss. "He's analytical. He's very good in planning for the future."

Judges Rucker, Hyde and Gilles selected Mrs. Smith for the post "from a field of 17 highly-qualified candidates," noted Rucker.

"In their endorsement of Mrs. Smith, the judiciary expressed complete confidence in her to effectively lead and administer the Department," Rucker said.

Mrs. Smith, who is married to educator-coach Tim Smith, said that she is a "very serious person" who has "good rapport with people.

"I view myself as very organized, being a good listener, and compassionate while being firm. I am not judgmental."

Her basic assignment is to regulate and monitor the lives of 3,000 probationers who have been placed on probation rather than court-ordered to prison for the crimes they committed.

Of the 3,000 probationers, up to 48 of them are to be assigned to the Restitution Center, which affords a structured environment designed to rehabilitate the offenders. Their assignment is to maintain stable and productive employment, perform volunteer community-service work, and "learn responsibility in order to be productive members of society."

"We try to provide group and individual counseling to the offenders," Mrs. Smith said. "The Restitution Center is for people who need more structure in their lives."

The non-violent offenders' stays at the Restitution Center could range from three months to two years.

"It provides them a second chance" of leading law-abiding lives without sending them to the already over-crowded Texas penitentiary system, Mrs. Smith said.

The Restitution Center recently was refunded and reopened by the Texas Department of Criminal Justice after it was revamped in programming and staff under the guidance of Mrs. Smith when she was the center's director.

"Everyone worked extremely hard to get the center re-opened: the judges, the administrative staff, and the line staff," Mrs. Smith said. "All of them contributed to the success of the center's reopening."

In her decision to enter law-enforcement in the 1970s, Mrs. Smith said she was strongly influenced by her "idealism about helping other people.

"From the time I was very young, I wanted to help people. Law enforcement touches a lot of lives and that doesn't always have to be 'bad' or 'negative.' "

Mrs. Smith said she derives "personal satisfaction" in helping effect "behavioral changes" in people who have been deemed criminals by the criminal-justice system.

Although Mrs. Smith acknowledged that "it is hard not to become cynical sometimes" when dealing with law-breakers, "I think we (in law enforcement and criminal justice) hope that a person can change and that things can get better.

"Hope is what it is all about," she said. "It's what keeps us going."

And while "there may be underlying circumstances that contribute" to people "doing wrong" and getting caught up in the criminal-justice system, Mrs. Smith said that she does "not judge them" just as she does not judge those who may have wilfully committed crimes.

"I simply perform a job, which is to perform a service that will help them and hopefully guide them in the right direction."

In directing her department, Mrs. Smith said that she has adopted the motto, " 'Capture the moment,' because I believe if you give all you can today, tomorrow will take care of itself."

In a message to her work staff, Mrs. Smith said that motivation to "achieve and set goals and handling life's challenges in the midst of AIDS (acquired immun deficiency syndrome), drugs, stress, crime, and financial problems are very difficult.

"There is more talk about dysfunctional families than ever before." As a result, Mrs. Smith said in her recent message, "Leadership is more important than ever before, not only at work, but especially at home."

"I will risk a little unpopularity to obtain excellent results from you," Mrs. Smith told her staff, "because by doing so, you can achieve your highest goals and achievements."

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Elementary choirs to ring out end of semester

By H.A. Tuck

It used to be known as "Dead Week", but this week now is just called "the week before finals."

Tuck

Regardless of its title, it's a time for faculty and staff to scurry to get everything done before the end of the semester.

But there is something ahead to help everyone at MC get into the season.

That's the four noon-time musical presentations in the Student Center by local public school musical groups. The Pease Elementary School Choir is performing at 12:15 p.m. Tuesaday; the Goddard Junior High Orchestra at noon Wednesday; Fannintastics, Too! at 12:15 p.m. on Thursday; and the South Elementary at noon on Friday.

While we know many parents will attend, the public also is invited to attend and enjoy these delightful musical groups.

A great fall season closes for the Chaparral basketball team on Monday at Muskogee, Okla., as the Chaps visit Bacone College.

The Chaps will be idle after that game until Jan. 5, when they visit Liberal, Kan., for a game with Seward College. Their next home game is a return match with Bacone on Saturday, Jan. 8, at Chaparral Center. After that it's time for the real games, with the Chaps entering their 12 straight conference games.

If you've not yet seen it, you have eight days left to view the 1993 Fall Student Art Show, being displayed in the McCormick Gallery in the Allison Fine Arts Building.

The student show closes next Sunday evening.

This is the final show for the fall term, but there are some great shows coming to McCormick Gallery next semester.

Although you might have missed the student art sale last Friday and Saturday, some of these works being displayed also are for sale if you are seeking something unique for your home, your office, or as unusual gifts.

Early registration has closed, but you now may obtain time permits for next month's official registration day. The time permits are being issued in the Student Services area of the Student Center from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Dec. 6-10 and Dec. 13-16.

Time permits reserve a time to report for registration on Thursday, Jan. 13. Without the permits, would-be or returning students are not processed until the final couple of hours, which cuts down on the chances of getting classes before they are filled.

We encourage you to obtain a time permit, and to get one as early as possible.

If you have any questions about registration, you should get them answered prior to Dec. 16. This includes admission requirements for transfer students, TASP tests, placement exams for those not-TASP-approved, and financial aid.

Some questions can be answered by phone if you call 685-4501.

If you're having a hard time getting into the Christmas spirit, we would suggest a late-afternoon or evening stroll around the campus looking at the lights that outline the buildings and Hodge Carillon Tower. Doctor Martens' shoes walk from Nazi Germany to MTV

Associated Press

Dr. Martens footwear may possibly be the only fashion statement ever shared by Madonna and Pope John Paul II.

The lug-soled leather brogans started out as therapeutic footwear invented in Nazi Germany. According to a company brochure, Klaus Maertens, a medical doctor living near Munich, needed more comfortable walking shoes after a skiing accident. He and an engineer designed the shoe with an air-cushioned sole using old tires.

It's the sole that makes the shoe so comfortable, its makers say.

Students can obtain registration permits

Staff Report

Prospective students who didn't take advantage of early registration may obtain time permits from Monday through Dec. 16 which will assign periods to report for registration on Jan. 13.

Time permits are available Dec. 6-10 and Dec. 13-16 at the Student Services Office, Student Center, from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Transfer students from other universities and first-time students at Midland College are required to present transcripts.

Students also may be required to present evidence of TASP (Texas Academic Skills Program) scores before being admitted to math or English courses. Pre-TASP placement exams for first-time students wishing to enroll in those courses will be given on Tuesday, Jan. 12.

"We had a large early enrollment, so it is important that students obtain early time permits in order to register for courses at desirable times or before they are closed due to limitations in class size or lab capacity," said Don Cates, associate dean of students and registrar.

All persons seeking financial aid or grants must report to the Financial Aid Office prior to enrollment.

"Prospective students are encouraged to come to the Student Services Office prior to the start of the Christmas holidays, since we are able to solve problems more efficiently now than when we get to the crush of registration without the student having enough time to obtain documents, plan for testing, or make financial arrangements," Cates said.

The administrative offices will be closed from Dec. 20-Jan. 2; they will reopen on Jan. 3. Jan. 17 will be observed as a holiday in memory of Martin Luther King, with classes beginning on Tuesday, Jan. 18. There will be a period of late registration from Jan. 18 through Jan. 27.

Just a reminder: the sleigh and reindeer at the entrance aren't designed to support the weight of even the smallest children, so please don't let your children sit or pull on them.

You might have missed the story recently about six speed bumps that are going to be installed around Chaparral Circle. Everything else possible was done to curtail speeders, but nothing seemed to deter them. So the speed bumps are being put down on an experimental basis for the next few months.

The Spring Bulletin for the Continuing Education Department will appear in the Reporter-Telegram on Sunday, Jan. 2. In the meantime, you can call 685-4518 to inquire about which courses will be offered, but you won't be able to register until Jan. 5.

Search ends with authentic seal of Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — When Texas Water Development Board employee Donna Darling began looking for the authentic state seal to put on her agency's stationery, she found a proliferation of pretenders.

"I'm sure this desktop publishing thing had proliferated into, 'Oh boy, I can play with the state seal,'" said Ms. Darling.

The seal is described as a white, five-pointed star on an azure background, encircled by olive and live oak branches, in a report by a committee appointed by the Third Congress of the Republic of Texas. The report was adopted in 1839.

But by 1991, when Ms. Darling began her search, about 100 different seals were showing up on state stationery, plaques and floors, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

Former acquaintance recalls dislike for Oswald

EL PASO (AP) — Aron Vigushin shrugs off his brush with one of the most infamous figures in U.S. history.

He has only a vague recollection of meeting Lee Harvey Oswald in 1960 in the Soviet Union, but he does remember he didn't care for the American who three years later would assassinate John F. Kennedy in Dallas.

"He was not attractive at all. We always wondered what Marina (Oswald's Russian wife) found in him. We wondered, what does she have to do with this jerk?" Vigushin said.

Vigushin told the El Paso Times that he met Oswald, then a 21-year-old defector to the Soviet Union, at a friend's home in Minsk. Lee and Marina Oswald lived in Minsk until 1962, when they moved to the United States.

"I don't know that it's interesting that I knew this man all these years ago," said Vigushin, who emigrated to the United States with his family in 1980.

But an incident at a Minsk rifle range does stick out in Vigushin's mind.

'He didn't like that I bragged about my success. He was hurt by a statement that somebody was a better shot than he was.'

— Aron Vigushin

Vigushin, now a drafting instructor at El Paso Community College, recalls that Oswald became agitated when Vigushin boasted about his own prowess with a rifle.

"He didn't like that I bragged about my success," Vigushin said.

"He was hurt by a statement that somebody was a better shot than he was."

Five or six years later, Vigushin learned that the man who assassinated the U.S. president was the same man he had known briefly in Minsk.

"He was maybe the first American I saw at all," Vigushin said.

Americans were an uncommon sight in the Soviet Union at the height of the Cold War, he recalled.

Vigushin said his friend and Oswald were part of a small counter-culture movement then developing in Minsk.

"My friend liked to read a lot. His interest was to learn something about different countries. He read some Western books and liked to talk to Oswald about these things," Vigushin said.

Vigushin soon grew uncomfortable around his friend and Oswald. "I didn't like this movement at all," he said.

Only their mutual interest in target shooting gave Vigushin and Oswald something to talk about.

Trio dominates all-district

■ Midland Lee lands seven and Midland High has two named to the all-district first-team.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

ODESSA — Midland Lee, Odessa Permian and Abilene Cooper, District 4-5A's three playoff teams, dominated the 1993 4-5A All-District football team with seven first team selections each.

Permian was booted from the state playoffs after one round, a victory over Lubbock Coronado, after it was ruled that the Panthers played an ineligible player and Permian had to forfeit all six District 4-5A games, leaving Lee, Odessa High and Cooper as district tri-champions with 5-1 marks.

The All-District team was chosen prior to the first playoff round and was picked by the league's seven coaches and four sports writers from Midland, San Angelo, Odessa and Abilene.

Abilene High coach Carlous Stone, who was reassigned after the last game of the season, did not participate. He sent an assistant coach. Abilene High was the only team which failed to land a first team selection.

Permian's Sheldon Bass was the key player

Rebs escape with narrow win

■ Lee wins, Midland loses in battle between El Paso schools.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

A change of venue brought out some changes in the four teams of the boys basketball double header here Saturday.

Friday night in the Chaparral Center, Midland High and Midland Lee both got wins over the visiting opponents in the first home action for the local boys teams. But Saturday, the teams switched opponents and sites, as the double header was moved to the Midland gym. And the change brought more than a few changes.

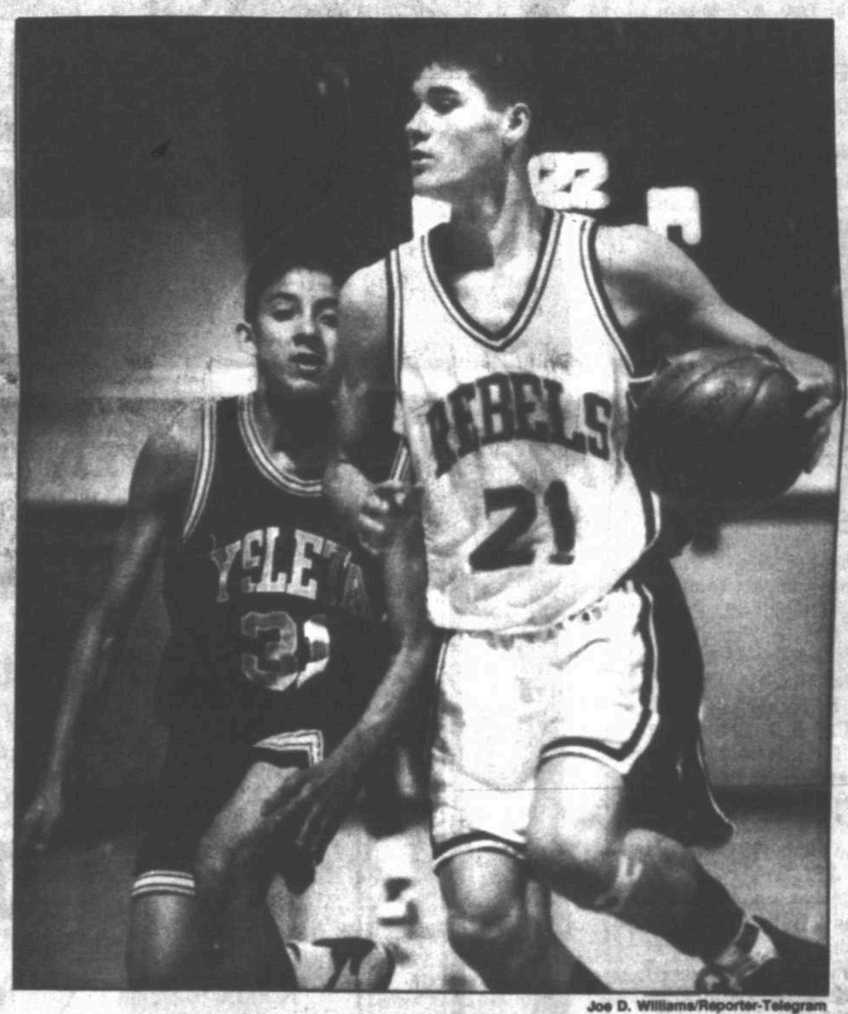

For starters, Lee narrowly escaped with a 66-61 win over El Paso Ysleta, a team that Midland High easily defeated 87-45 in Friday's action. And the Bulldogs found their fortunes had changed as El Paso Parkland muscled its way to a 59-55 win over Midland High on its own court.

The outcomes boosted the Rebels' record to 6-3 overall and dropped the Bulldogs to 2-2. The Ysleta Indians (5-5) and the Parkland Matadors (4-4) also evened their records.

After playing most of their home games in either the Chap Center or in the Lee gym, the Rebels found themselves in strange surroundings. But the Indians were much more at home in the cozy Midland gym than in the spacious Chap Center, and it showed.

Ysleta surprised the Rebels and the Chaps march past military

■ Midland College uses balanced scoring to run its record to 14-0.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

ODESSA — Midland College's first taste of conference opponents here this weekend in the Pre-Season WJCAC Tournament did little to push the Chaparrals off its unbeaten road. In fact that road is wider than ever.

The Chaps slammed its way to a 114-87 no contest win over New Mexico Military Institute at the Odessa College Sports Center Saturday to climb to a perfect 14-0 mark for the season.

Oh, the Chaps are still 19 victories away from the best season start in school history, but MC coach Steve Green isn't complaining these days. In fact, someone might ought to check his temperature. He's even singing praises of his team.

"I have nothing negative to say about the team's play this weekend," Green said after watching his Chaps dismantle both NMMI and New Mexico Junior College (114-94 on Friday) in the two-day event.

This is indeed high praise for a coach who isn't always so kind with his superlatives when it comes to his Chaps. That's almost proof positive in itself that MC is playing well right now.

NFL's hottest teams meet under dome

■ Houston puts its six game winning streak on the line against former coach Jerry Glanville, Atlanta.

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Jerry Glanville and Jack Pardee aren't feuding anymore. They're surviving.

Their coaching futures were in jeopardy when Atlanta started the season 0-6 and the Oilers got off to a 1-4 start after being projected as a Super Bowl contender.

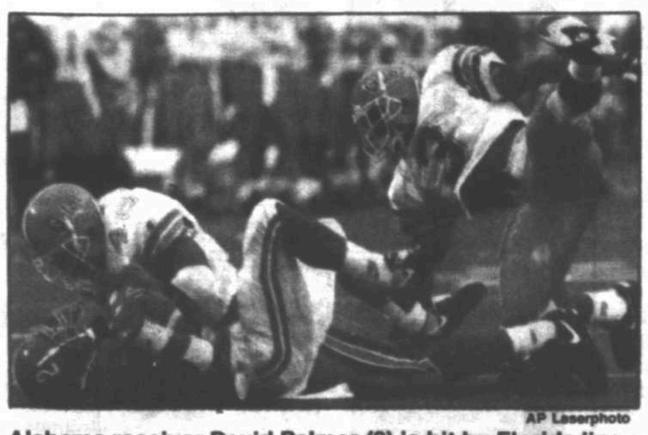

The Oilers (7-4) have won a league best six games in a row, something they haven't done since 1962, and Glanville has rallied Atlanta (5-6) to five victories in six games.

Glanville took the Oilers to three straight playoff appearances before moving on to Atlanta in 1990 and the Falcons spoiled Pardee's Oiler coaching debut with a 47-27 victory in Atlanta.

After the game, Glanville called Pardee a jerk and Pardee said Glanville should be familiar with the definition of a jerk.

That's all old news to Glanville. Now

Jackets stymie 'Stangs

■ Stephenville's defense shuts down Andrews' potent offense.

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

SAN ANGELO — Seventy-one yards is a long way. For the Andrews Mustangs Saturday in San Angelo Stadium 73 yards would have been so much longer.

The Mustangs (11-2) lost to Stephenville 17-7 in a Class 4A state quarterfinal. And even though 5th-ranked and unbeaten Stephenville held Andrews to nine yards of offense in the second half, the Mustangs appeared ready to pull off the upset before halftime. That's when Kevin Lawrence's 71-yard run fell two yards shy of paydirt and a 14-7 Andrews lead. Stephenville (14-0) plays Waxahachie in a state semifinal at a site and time to be announced.

Lawrence went on his long juant in the second quarter with

Bears, Packers meet in wide open NFC Central

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

The date was Nov. 17, 1963, and the coaches were George Halas and Vince Lombardi. The Chicago Bears beat the Green Bay Packers, 26-7, and went on to win the NFL title.

Now comes Packers-Bears II, being ballyhooed in both cities as "the biggest Bears-Packers game in 30 years."

Why?

Because it's the first time in 30 years the two teams have met in the second half of the season with winning records. They were 8-1 that Sunday in 1963.

This game took on added importance on Thanksgiving, when the Bears beat the Lions, 10-6. Not only did Chicago win its third straight to pull within a game of the Lions and Packers in the NFC Central, but the Bears knocked out Barry Sanders, making Detroit a candidate for the team most likely to plummet in the stretch.

Chicago's streak has come on the road — at San Diego, Kansas City and Detroit. The Bears also are playing great defense (isn't everybody?) — they allowed 26 points opening day and haven't allowed more than 19 since.

Defense is Green Bay's strength, too.

The Packers, who beat the Bears 17-3 in Green Bay, squeezed by Tampa Bay 13-10 last week, and Reggie White has begun to play like the $9 million man he is. His resurgence coincides with the return to form of Tony Bennett, whose presence after a half-season holdout gives Green Bay an alternative defensive force.

New York Giants (8-3) at Miami (9-2)

For a game between two teams with the best records in their conferences, this a snoozer. No one but a New York tabloid would label this a "Super Bowl Preview." In fact, the most notable thing is that this is the first time the Giants have ever played in Miami.

The game itself?

The Dolphins are down to Steve DeBerg at quarterback and the Giants have beaten only one team with a winning record and haven't been able to score touchdowns since Mike Sherrard was hurt six weeks ago.

One of the things working against the Giants is that Miami has become Philadelphia South: even in its best years, New York had trouble with the Eagles, particularly Keith Jackson and Keith Byars. What's working for them? The transplanted New Yorkers who will probably flock to the game and modify the home-field advantage.

LA Raiders (6-5) at Buffalo (8-3)

This is the Raiders' first visit to Buffalo since they lost 51-3 in the 1990 AFC title game. They come in off another embarrassment — a 16-10 defeat in Cincinnati that was the Bengals' first win of the year.

That makes this a must for the Raiders' playoff chances. It's also a must for the Bills, who are sandwiched between the Dolphins and Jets and need to stay within hailing distance of Miami before they meet in two weeks at Joe Robbie Stadium.

This could be dangerous for the Bills if the Raiders are riled enough. Their strength is the pass rush, and the Buffalo offensive line allowed four sacks in the 23-7 loss to the Chiefs. Jim Kelly is banged up, so look for Thurman Thomas to run — that's where the Raiders are vulnerable.

Minnesota (5-6) at Detroit (7-4)

The Lions are in trouble without Barry Sanders, who will be replaced by Derrick Moore, Eric Lynch and the newly signed Gary Anderson.

The Lions won 30-27 in Minnesota, a game that started a slide in which the Vikings have lost four of five and have fallen under .500 for the first time in Dennis Green's two seasons as coach. He's putting Jim McMahon, recovered from a shoulder separation, back at quarterback for Sean Salisbury.

New Orleans (7-4) at Cleveland (5-6)

Vinny Testaverde could be back at quarterback for the Browns, which might stop the "Bill must go!" chants from the Dawg Pound at Bill Belichick, whose team has lost three straight since Bernie Kosar was released.

The Saints are probably better off on the road. Their fans also have been restless since a the 1-4 slide that followed a 5-0 start and was stopped (with help from the officials) in Minneapolis last week. They also have an anti-Belichick guy, center Jay Hilgenberg, who was cut in pre-season.

Denver (7-4) at San Diego (5-6)

John Elway, who almost always plays well against the Chargers, will probably go over 3,000 yards this week in a game the Broncos need badly to stay close to the Chiefs in the NFC West.

But the Chargers, whose offense got going against Indianapolis' hopeless defense, need this one desperately to continue in the playoff race. They lost in Denver, 31-17, the first time. The home field hurts here: the Chargers have scored only four touchdowns at home, the same number they got in Indianapolis Monday night.

Kansas City (8-3) at Seattle (5-6)

Joe Montana playing two games in a row? He came out of last week's game healthy. He has fond memories of the Kingdome, quarterbacking San Francisco to a 38-7 win in his only regular-season appearance there in 1988.

This could be a good learning experience for Rick Mirer, who reminds some people of Montana and, of course, also played at Notre Dame. Mirer's learning the hard way; he's been sacked 35 times this year behind a less-than-brilliant offensive line.

Cincinnati (1-10) at San Francisco (8-3)

How one-sided is this Sunday night matchup? The Niners are favored by 24 points, the largest point spread in any game involving a non-expansion team in 27 years. And that's against a team celebrating its first win of the year, 16-10 over the Raiders.

San Francisco has scored 35 or more points in its last four games and is the only NFL team crossing the goal line with consistency — Jerry Rice's 14 touchdowns are three more than the Bengals have all year. The Niners may rest Rice and others if this gets one-sided — they have to go into Atlanta next week.

Indianapolis (3-8) at New York Jets (7-4)

The Jets have won five in a row, the last three against the bottom of the NFL, including a 31-17 win in Indianapolis. With 2-9 Washington next week, the Jets could be 9-4 before embarking on their killer final three: Dallas, at Buffalo and at Houston.

The Colts, who will come right back to the Meadowlands to play the Giants next week, can't get any worse than in their 31-0 loss to San Diego Monday night. One reason: they're last against the run in the NFL.

LA Rams (3-8) at Phoenix (3-8)

Now that Joe Bugel's gone over the loss quota of seven set by Bill Bidwill, he's got a good chance to win one.

All season, the Cardinals, who have actually outscored their opponents 200-195, have found ways to lose: seven of their eight losses are by a touchdown or less, including last week's 19-17 loss to the Giants on an improbable 54-yard field goal by Brad Daluiso in the final minute.

New England (1-10) at Pittsburgh (6-5)

Just when the Steelers were anointed as the AFC Super Bowl team, they went on the road and lost to Denver and Houston by a combined score of 60-16. The Patriots keep it a lot closer — seven losses by a touchdown or less — but they also lose more.

The Steelers may have Barry Foster back for this one, which should help them control the ball more. One interesting matchup: Pittsburgh offensive coordinator Ron Ehrhardt running the same offense against Bill Parcells that he used to run for Parcells with the Giants.

Washington (2-9) at Tampa Bay (3-8)

How much have things changed when Washington's record is worse than Tampa Bay's and they are underdogs to the Bucs? The Redskins have won the only three games they've played the 17 years Tampa's been in the league. NFL scheduling promotes parity by playing winners against winners and losers against losers.

This time, the Bucs are in better shape than the Redskins. They almost won in Green Bay last week and they seem to have found a quarterback for the future in Craig Erickson. Still, they'll have to hustle to avoid their 11th straight season with 10 or more losses.

Bears, Packers meet in wide open NFC Central

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

The date was Nov. 17, 1963, and the coaches were George Halas and Vince Lombardi. The Chicago Bears beat the Green Bay Packers, 26-7, and went on to win the NFL title.

Now comes Packers-Bears II, being ballyhooed in both cities as "the biggest Bears-Packers game in 30 years."

Why?

Because it's the first time in 30 years the two teams have met in the second half of the season with winning records. They were 8-1 that Sunday in 1963.

This game took on added importance on Thanksgiving, when the Bears beat the Lions, 10-6. Not only did Chicago win its third straight to pull within a game of the Lions and Packers in the NFC Central, but the Bears knocked out Barry Sanders, making Detroit a candidate for the team most likely to plummet in the stretch.

Chicago's streak has come on the road — at San Diego, Kansas City and Detroit. The Bears also are playing great defense (isn't everybody?) — they allowed 26 points opening day and haven't allowed more than 19 since.

Defense is Green Bay's strength, too.

The Packers, who beat the Bears 17-3 in Green Bay, squeezed by Tampa Bay 13-10 last week, and Reggie White has begun to play like the $9 million man he is. His resurgence coincides with the return to form of Tony Bennett, whose presence after a half-season holdout gives Green Bay an alternative defensive force.

New York Giants (8-3) at Miami (9-2)

For a game between two teams with the best records in their conferences, this a snoozer. No one but a New York tabloid would label this a "Super Bowl Preview." In fact, the most notable thing is that this is the first time the Giants have ever played in Miami.

The game itself?

The Dolphins are down to Steve DeBerg at quarterback and the Giants have beaten only one team with a winning record and haven't been able to score touchdowns since Mike Sherrard was hurt six weeks ago.

One of the things working against the Giants is that Miami has become Philadelphia South: even in its best years, New York had trouble with the Eagles, particularly Keith Jackson and Keith Byars. What's working for them? The transplanted New Yorkers who will probably flock to the game and modify the home-field advantage.

LA Raiders (6-5) at Buffalo (8-3)

This is the Raiders' first visit to Buffalo since they lost 51-3 in the 1990 AFC title game. They come in off another embarrassment — a 16-10 defeat in Cincinnati that was the Bengals' first win of the year.

That makes this a must for the Raiders' playoff chances. It's also a must for the Bills, who are sandwiched between the Dolphins and Jets and need to stay within hailing distance of Miami before they meet in two weeks at Joe Robbie Stadium.

This could be dangerous for the Bills if the Raiders are riled enough. Their strength is the pass rush, and the Buffalo offensive line allowed four sacks in the 23-7 loss to the Chiefs. Jim Kelly is banged up, so look for Thurman Thomas to run — that's where the Raiders are vulnerable.

Minnesota (5-6) at Detroit (7-4)

The Lions are in trouble without Barry Sanders, who will be replaced by Derrick Moore, Eric Lynch and the newly signed Gary Anderson.

The Lions won 30-27 in Minnesota, a game that started a slide in which the Vikings have lost four of five and have fallen under .500 for the first time in Dennis Green's two seasons as coach. He's putting Jim McMahon, recovered from a shoulder separation, back at quarterback for Sean Salisbury.

New Orleans (7-4) at Cleveland (5-6)

Vinny Testaverde could be back at quarterback for the Browns, which might stop the "Bill must go!" chants from the Dawg Pound at Bill Belichick, whose team has lost three straight since Bernie Kosar was released.

The Saints are probably better off on the road. Their fans also have been restless since a the 1-4 slide that followed a 5-0 start and was stopped (with help from the officials) in Minneapolis last week. They also have an anti-Belichick guy, center Jay Hilgenberg, who was cut in pre-season.

Denver (7-4) at San Diego (5-6)

John Elway, who almost always plays well against the Chargers, will probably go over 3,000 yards this week in a game the Broncos need badly to stay close to the Chiefs in the NFC West.

But the Chargers, whose offense got going against Indianapolis' hopeless defense, need this one desperately to continue in the playoff race. They lost in Denver, 31-17, the first time. The home field hurts here: the Chargers have scored only four touchdowns at home, the same number they got in Indianapolis Monday night.

Kansas City (8-3) at Seattle (5-6)

Joe Montana playing two games in a row? He came out of last week's game healthy. He has fond memories of the Kingdome, quarterbacking San Francisco to a 38-7 win in his only regular-season appearance there in 1988.

This could be a good learning experience for Rick Mirer, who reminds some people of Montana and, of course, also played at Notre Dame. Mirer's learning the hard way; he's been sacked 35 times this year behind a less-than-brilliant offensive line.

Cincinnati (1-10) at San Francisco (8-3)

How one-sided is this Sunday night matchup? The Niners are favored by 24 points, the largest point spread in any game involving a non-expansion team in 27 years. And that's against a team celebrating its first win of the year, 16-10 over the Raiders.

San Francisco has scored 35 or more points in its last four games and is the only NFL team crossing the goal line with consistency — Jerry Rice's 14 touchdowns are three more than the Bengals have all year. The Niners may rest Rice and others if this gets one-sided — they have to go into Atlanta next week.

Indianapolis (3-8) at New York Jets (7-4)

The Jets have won five in a row, the last three against the bottom of the NFL, including a 31-17 win in Indianapolis. With 2-9 Washington next week, the Jets could be 9-4 before embarking on their killer final three: Dallas, at Buffalo and at Houston.

The Colts, who will come right back to the Meadowlands to play the Giants next week, can't get any worse than in their 31-0 loss to San Diego Monday night. One reason: they're last against the run in the NFL.

LA Rams (3-8) at Phoenix (3-8)

Now that Joe Bugel's gone over the loss quota of seven set by Bill Bidwill, he's got a good chance to win one.

All season, the Cardinals, who have actually outscored their opponents 200-195, have found ways to lose: seven of their eight losses are by a touchdown or less, including last week's 19-17 loss to the Giants on an improbable 54-yard field goal by Brad Daluiso in the final minute.

New England (1-10) at Pittsburgh (6-5)

Just when the Steelers were anointed as the AFC Super Bowl team, they went on the road and lost to Denver and Houston by a combined score of 60-16. The Patriots keep it a lot closer — seven losses by a touchdown or less — but they also lose more.

The Steelers may have Barry Foster back for this one, which should help them control the ball more. One interesting matchup: Pittsburgh offensive coordinator Ron Ehrhardt running the same offense against Bill Parcells that he used to run for Parcells with the Giants.

Washington (2-9) at Tampa Bay (3-8)

How much have things changed when Washington's record is worse than Tampa Bay's and they are underdogs to the Bucs? The Redskins have won the only three games they've played the 17 years Tampa's been in the league. NFL scheduling promotes parity by playing winners against winners and losers against losers.

This time, the Bucs are in better shape than the Redskins. They almost won in Green Bay last week and they seem to have found a quarterback for the future in Craig Erickson. Still, they'll have to hustle to avoid their 11th straight season with 10 or more losses.

Germans take Davis Cup lead

DUESSELDORF, Germany (AP) — Michael Stich and Patrik Kuehnen beat Mark Woodforde and Todd Woodbridge in the doubles match today to give Germany a 2-1 lead over Australia in the Davis Cup final.

■ Davis Cup

The Germans won 7-6 (7-4), 4-6, 6-3, 7-6 (7-4) on the red clay court and are one victory from clinching their third Davis Cup title. They are playing without Boris Becker, who passed up the competition.

Stich and Kuehnen are undefeated in four Davis Cup doubles this year, and beat one of the strongest doubles teams in the world.

The Australian "Woddies" won the Wimbledon doubles title this year and were runners-up at the ATP Tour Doubles World Championships last week in South Africa.

The Germans saved three set points on Kuehnen's serve in the 12th game. He held, sending the set into a tiebreak, which the Germans won 7-4 on a service winner by Stich.

Kuehnen dropped his serve to give Australia a 3-2 lead in the second. He saved two set points in the ninth game, but Woodbridge served out the set in the next.

Kuehnen was in trouble again in the third game of the third set, saving three break points and needing eight deuces to hold. Woodbridge was broken in the next game. Woodforde scored five straight points in the sixth game after going down 0-40.

The Australians again jumped on Kuehnen's serve and Woodforde broke back when his service return skimmed the net cord for a winner.

The Germans were a break up again after the next game, when Woodbridge, who was serving, sent a backhand volley wide. But the fight for the set wasn't over yet. Stich had to save three break points before serving it out for a 2-1 German lead.

Germany went up in the fourth set by breaking Woodforde in the opening game. The Australian saved four break points in the fifth game, and were back in the contest when Stich, serving for the match produced a volley error and a double-fault to suffer a break.

Defying a foot-stomping crowd of 12,000, the Australians sent the match into the tiebreak.

The Germans gained three match points when Woodforde sent a volley wide. A volley error by Kuehnen wasted the first, but when Woodbridge sent a forehand into the net, the Germans had the victory after three hours and 56 minutes.

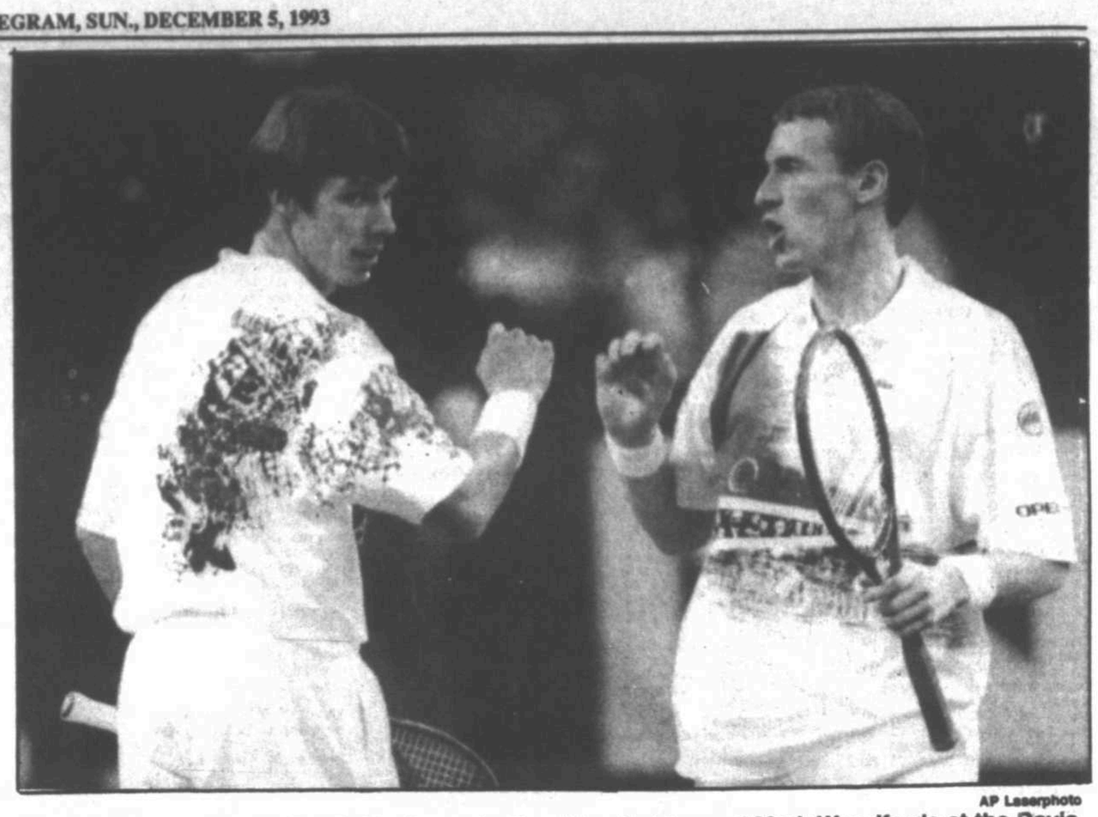

The teams were tied 1-1 after the opening singles Friday.

Jason Stoltenberg lost a five-set decision to Stich although he was up a break in the decisive fifth set.

Stich won 6-7 (2-7), 6-3, 6-1, 4-6, 6-3 to give Germany a 1-0 lead.

Richard Fromberg survived five match points before prevailing over Marc-Kevin Goellner in another five-setter that lasted four hours and 33 minutes. The Australian won 3-6, 5-7, 7-6 (9-7), 6-2, 9-7..

The key matches in the best-of-five 5 will come on Sunday in the reverse singles, when Fromberg faces Stich and Stoltenberg plays Goellner.

Price holds commanding lead

SUN CITY, South Africa (AP) — Zimbabwe's Nick Price continued his dazzling play in the Million Dollar Challenge golf tournament, firing his second straight 6-under-par 66 Saturday and taking a commanding 10-stroke lead after three rounds.

"I have never dominated like this before," said Price, whose 54-hole total was 199, 17-under-par over the 7,729-yard, par-72 Gary Player Country Club course. "To be 10 shots ahead of a field like this is special. ... The golfing gods are shining on me."

Price's countryman, Mark McNulty, moved into second place at 209 after shooting a 68. Germany's Bernhard Langer, who carded a 72, was third at 211.

World No. 1 Nick Faldo, who was tied with Price after the first round, continued to slip with a par 72. He was tied for fourth with Corey Pavin at 212. Pavin shot a 71 Saturday.

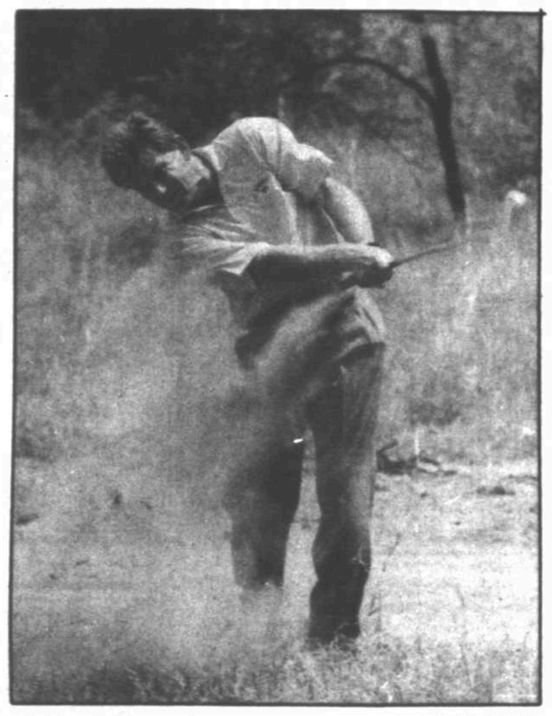

South Africans Ernie Els, Fulton Allem and David Frost were tied at 214. Els shot a 69, Allem a 72 and Frost a 73.

Price won four U.S. tournaments this year and was named Player of the Year. Now, after a third round that included seven birdies, he seems assured of overcoming his bad luck at the Million Dollar Challenge, which offers golf's richest top prize of $1 million.

Last year, Price had shared the third-round lead but was disqualified on a controversial call.

He was forced to pull out of the tournament twice before, once with appendicitis, once with a broken thumb.

Of the others in the field, Mark O'Meara shot a third-round 70 for 215, Payne Stewart a 72 for 222, Lee Janzen a 75 for 224, and Ian Woosnam an 80 for 234.

Strange holds onto lead at classic

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Curtis Strange fired a 4-under-par 69 on Saturday and held to his lead in the Greg Norman Classic with a three-round total of 204.

■ Greg Norman Classic

Strange, who hasn't won since taking the second of his consecutive U.S. Open titles in 1989, started the round with a two-stroke lead.

But little-known Australian John Wade charged home with a 66 to cut Strange's lead in half.

Strange won his head-to-head duel with Australian Steve Elkington at The Lakes on Saturday.

Elkington shot a 69 to slip three shots behind Wade, with Australia's Peter Senior and Fiji's Vijay Singh moving into fourth place at 211 place after rounds of 68.

Wade's round set up a final day pairing with Strange.

Making Wade's round look even better was the fact that his playing partner, Brett Ogle, led them off the course for 15 minutes from the 10th fairway after spotting lightning nearby, while the rest of the field played on.

"I was happy to keep going but it's pretty hard to play a one-ball, said Wade. "I just don't let things like that (the walkoff) worry me. If you do that you're in trouble."

Third going into the round, Wade made a flying start with a birdie and eagle on the two opening holes and capped his seven-birdie round with a 40-footer for a 2 on the par-3 18th.

Duffy Waldorf fired a 67 and was tied at 212 with Scotland's Sandy Lyle.

Tournament host Greg Norman finally overcame his putting woes with a 68 and was tied at 215 with Ray Floyd, who shot a 67.

Canadian Jack Kay endured one of golf's horrors when he hit three balls into the water from the same spot, attempting a 250-yard water carry on the 11th hole before making it for a quintuple-bogey 10.

"I tried my three wood, four iron and then three iron but the lies were bad. I didn't know what e

Springer, McNamara tie for Penny's lead

TARPON SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — The team of Mike Springer and Melissa NcNamara shot an 8-under 63 Saturday to claim a share of the lead after three rounds of the J.C. Penney Mixed-Team Classic.

■ JC Penny Classic

The bogey-free round by Springer and McNamara gave them a three-day total of 14-under 199 and a share of the lead with Tom Sieckmann and Deborah McHaffie, who combined for a 67 on the Innisbrook Resort Copperhead course.

One stroke behind the leaders is the team of Kenny Perry and Sherri Steinhauer, also with a 67. Tom Wargo and Nancy Scranton and Fred Funk and Tina Barrett were each two back at 201.

Springer arrived for the event viewing the week "as a paid vacation," a brief stop on the way to a planned hunting trip. But he has found the format to his liking.

"With this format, if you can just give yourself two picks of a ball on the green, you'll do fairly well," Springer said. "We've had one bogey all week and probably shouldn't have had that one."

Springer dropped birdie putts ranging from 3 to 10 feet after approach shots by McNamara, and she obliged with birdies of 10 and 30 feet. Everything else was easy pars.

That was enough to chase down Sieckmann and McHaffie, the 36-hole leaders who dropped into a tie with a bogey on the 15th hole after five birdies.

The tournament carries a $1.2 million purse and pays $120,000 to each member of the winning team.

Sprinter sets record at Asian Games

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A meet-record victory by sprinter Chen Zhaojing in the women's 200-meter run led China to five gold medals on the closing day of the Asian Games on Saturday, boosting its total gold haul to 23.

While China won more than half of all the gold medals in the meet, it fell one medal shy of the number it won at the last Asian Championships in 1991.

South Korea was a distant second, winning three gold medals.

On the final day, China also won the men's 200, the men's shot put, the women's triple jump and the women's 4 x 400 relay.

Woodard scores 36 in Lee win

BROWNFIELD — Midland Lee's Krissy Woodard scored a career-high 36 points Saturday as she led the Lady Rebels to a 63-52 win over El Paso Irvin for the championship of the Brownfield tournament.

Woodard, a 6-foot-2 junior post, was named the tournament MVP for the Lady Rebels, while guards Susan Seay and Dee Kendrick were picked to the all-tournament squad. Lee improved to 4-5 overall while Irvin lost only its second game of the season to fall to 9-2. Woodard had 19 of her total in the first quarter as Lee jumped to a 21-17 lead.

Lee led 32-24 at halftime but a 23-point performance by Irvin tied the score at 47-47 to go into the fourth quarter. After not being able to press the quick Irvin team in the first quarter, the Lee girls turned up the pressure, Lee coach Elise Kail said.

"We pressed for the first two minutes but they just went right by us," Kail said. "We started pressing to start the fourth quarter and we caused three turnovers in a row. By the time the fourth quarter rolled around, we wore them out and they quit playing."

Lee travels to Lamesa Tuesday and then plays Snyder Friday at Abell Junior High.

REBELS: Lee beats Ysleta; MHS loses

fans who were possibly expecting a blowout after seeing Friday's games. The Indians jumped out to a 19-15 lead in the first quarter and the Rebels did not take the lead until Sean Lowe drove in for two of his game-high 30 points to give Lee a 23-22 lead with 5:43 to play in the first half.

From that point, the teams traded baskets until late in the third quarter when the Indians put on a 6-0 run to take a 48-42 lead going into the fourth period.

But the Rebels outscored the Indians 24-13 in the final period to take the game.

Ysleta coach John Papa said his team improved quite a bit from Friday's performance.

"Our mental approach was a lot different than it was yesterday (Friday)," Papa said. "We were just in awe of that other gym and I think that affected us. Plus Midland High is such a physical team that really takes it to you."

After Lee narrowly edged Parkland Friday night, the Bulldogs knew they were in for a tough one. It turned out to be a rough game, with 39 fouls whistled between the two teams and more than 42 turnovers combined.

But a streaking fourth quarter put the Matadors ahead for good. Ahead 40-38 to start the fourth, the Matadors finally got their fastbreak going and scored 10 unanswered points to go ahead 50-38 with 5:06 to play.

From there it was a game of catchup for the Bulldogs, and they nearly did it.

Donald Carter and Jumon Hailey, who led MHS with 16 and 17 points respectively, took over and accounted for all but three of the Bulldogs' points in the fourth. They sank six free throws between them down the stretch and got several crucial baskets to pull the Bulldogs to within 55-52. But Jeremy Vauley and Patrick Francis both sank two free throws to ice the game.

Midland High coach Jack Stephenson said inexperience is still a factor in the way the Bulldogs are playing.

CHAPS: MC depth overpowers NMMI

From 1C

How well? Well, consider the fact that the two leading scorers this season have been Big John Brown and Kirk Ford. Neither hit in double figures against NMMI and the Chaps still bombed in 114 points for the second night in a row as 12 of 14 players on the roster scored and five were in double figures.

"I'm not really concerned when Brown and Ford don't score a lot of points because we've got a lot of different combinations, a lot of variety, that we can throw at teams. I like our balance."

The leader on this day was guard Kevin Rice, who was poppin' from all over, hitting eight of 10 shots from the field and 4-of-4 from the charity line. He also had seven steals.

Kevin Sims hit 8-of-8 from the field for 16 points and Earl Tyson hit all 15 of his points in the first half to head off a sluggish Chap start. Tyson also led the team in steals with eight. The Chaps had 31 steals in the game and there was the huge difference in the game.

NMMI hit 56 percent from the field as Lincoln Abrams had a game high 24 points, but the Broncos had only 50 shots on the night while MC was pumping up 86. The Broncos couldn't get the ball down the floor.

"They either hit it or turned it over and that makes for good odds," Green said.

If there was a negative, it was another sluggish start by the Chaps, who got down by eight points early and didn't grab its first lead until the 12:19 mark on a Rice layup.

"I am a little concerned about us not coming out of the gate as well as we need to," Green said. "It seems like we always come back strong after our first round of substitutions. It may take a lineup change, but that's something we are going to sit down and look at."

The Chaps ripped off 66 second half points after leading at the half by a meager 48-42 margin. That was a pace that even a hot shooting team couldn't match.

Former MC coach Reggie Franklin is still coaching at NMMI. He hasn't beaten the Chaps since leaving three years ago. He has a nice shooting team, but has to be disturbed with the turnovers (36) and the 38-28 difference in rebounding. NMMI is now 7-5 on the season.

Trinidad defeated Frank Phillips 104-91 in the earlier game. South Plains met NMJC and Odessa College faced Howard College in the late games.

Lewisville finishes 4-5A teams, tops Cooper 52-21

Staff Report

IRVING — The Lewisville Farmers trampled over Abilene Cooper, 52-21, by way of a 21-point third quarter and three touchdowns by Byron Mitchell in a Class 5A Division II quarterfinal game Saturday at Texas Stadium.

The Farmers improved to 12-0-1 and will face Temple at 2 p.m. next Saturday at Texas Stadium for a Class 5A Division II semifinal game. Temple defeated Killeen 42-0 Saturday in a rematch of the teams' earlier district contest.

The win makes Lewisville 2-0 against 4-5A teams this season after being knocked from the playoffs by Odessa Permian last season. Lewisville defeated Midland Lee 44-30 last weekend to advance to the quarterfinals. Cooper was the last remaining 4-5A team in the playoffs.

Cooper only trailed 17-7 at halftime, but two touchdowns by Dwayne Brazzell and another by Marcel Battle on a pass from quarterback Chad Nelson sealed the victory for the Farmers.

Cooper, which ended its season at 10-3-1, tried to rally by scoring twice in the fourth quarter on passes from quarterback Zac Allen, but Lewisville matched both scores to hold on to the winning margin.

Allen completed 14 of 25 passes for 220 but threw one interception and the Cougars lost three fumbles during the game. Running back Mike Rose rushed for 70 yards, just the second time this season he has been held under 100 yards.

Florida holds off Texas rally

AUSTIN, (AP) — Dan Cross made eight free throws in the final minute as Florida held off Texas for a 76-68 victory Saturday.

Florida's Gators (2-0) held the Longhorns (2-2) to 36.8 percent field goal shooting and had four players score in double figures. Junior forward Andrew DeClercq led the Gators with 18 points.

■ SWC Roundup

Texas took a 38-36 halftime lead on a Tommy Penders three-pointer, ending a half that saw 16 lead changes. But the Gators jumped ahead by eight early in the second half, posting the biggest lead of the game for either team.

With under six minutes to play, the Longhorns forced Florida into three quick turnovers, cutting the Gator lead to one. Forward Albert Burditt put Texas up 65-64 with 3:30 to go, but the Longhorn guards missed two key three-pointers on the ensuing possessions.

Cross made the first of his string of eight free throws with 55 seconds remaining and added two more when Burditt drew an intentional foul call. Cross finished with 15 points.

The Gators shot just 39.6 percent and had 28 turnovers, five more than Texas. The Longhorns' starting backcourt committed 14.

Burditt led all scorers with 19 points, only seven of which came in the second half. Terrence Rencher added 15 for Texas.

Houston 96, Lehigh 74

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Anthony Goldwire scored 21 points and Lloyd Wiles added 17 to pace Houston to a consolation victory in the Hawkeye Invitational.

Jessie Drain and Rafael Carrasco each scored 15 and Hershel Wafer 10 for the Cougars (2-2), who bounced back after a 77-67 loss to Long Beach State in Friday's first round. Lehigh (1-3), which lost 104-77 to host Iowa in Friday's other first-round game, was led by Rashawne Glenn's 21 points.

Goldwire hit two 3-point shots during an 11-0 run to start the second half as Houston expanded its 45-36 halftime lead to 56-36 with 17:22 remaining. Goldwire also set a tournament assist record, giving 23 in two games. The previous record was 21 assists in 1986 by Loyolla-Marymount's Chris Nikchevich. Goldwire's 13 assists Saturday were a career-high.

A basket by Kem Widmer, who finished with eight points, capped a 13-7 flurry for Lehigh and brought the Engineers to within 63-49 at the 11:38 mark. But baskets by Roderick Griggs, Carrasco and two foul shots by Goldwire pushed the lead back up to 20, 69-49, with 9:26 remaining and Lehigh failed to rally.

The Engineers, hammered on the boards 53-32, also were hampered by 39.1 percent (25 for 64) shooting from the floor while Houston hit 34 of 70 shots, or 48.6 percent.

SMU 65, Wichita St. 59

DALLAS — Troy Dorner and Chad Allen hit vital free throws in the final minute as Southern Methodist outlasted Wichita State to extend the Shockers non-conference road losing streak to 19 consecutive games.

The Mustangs (1-2) of the Southwest Conference were led by Dorner who scored 16 points, James Gatewood with 15 and Allen and Chris Jessen with 10 each.

The Shockers (1-1) of the Missouri Valley Conference were paced by Darrin Miller with 14, L.D. Swanson with 13 and Terrance Flowers with 10.

Allen hit four straight free throws and Dorner made two charity shots in the final minute as the Mustangs beat back a Shocker rally.

Two free throws by Swanson cut the Mustang lead to 61-59 with 19 seconds to play but Allen and Dorner hit two clutch free throws each to put Wichita State away.

Wichita State jumped off to an 8-0 lead before the Mustangs finally scored on a 3-point shot by Dorner after a drought of 3:20 to start the game.

SMU rallied to take a 24-18 lead as Jessen came off the bench to score seven quick points.

But the Shockers closed fast to take a 31-28 lead at intermission on a late 3-point basket by Flowers and a steal and a layup by K.C. Hunt.

Wichita State hasn't won a non-conference road game since it defeated Oral Roberts 92-91 on Dec. 12, 1988, in Tulsa.

SMU leads the all-time series 4-2.

No. 12 Virginia 59, Rice 51

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Cornel Parker led a second-half defensive effort that rallied No. 12 Virginia to a victory over Rice.

Virginia (2-1) overcame a cold-shooting first half by holding Rice (2-2) to two field goals during a span of nearly 17 minutes in the second half.

Parker, who sat out more than six minutes in the middle of the game after banging his head on the floor while diving for a loose ball, finished with 14 points and two steals.

He made an immediate impact after returning to the game with 16:29 remaining and the score tied at 31. He scored four points and forced three of Rice's six turnovers in a 9-1 run that gave the Cavaliers a 40-32 lead with 10:47 left.

Kevin Rabbitt hit a 3-pointer on the Owls' next possession, but Virginia's Junior Burrough countered with a three-point play, and Rice was unable to get closer than five after that.

The Owls made only six field goals in the second half, including a pair of 3-pointers in the final 34 seconds.

Burrough led Virginia with 15 points and Harold Deane had 11.

Torrey Andrews, with 15 points, was the only Owl in double figures. Adam Peakes, who came in averaging a team-best 16.7 points, was guarded most of the game by Parker and wound up with five points.

Virginia went cold after taking a 14-9 lead on Parker's 3-pointer with 11:05 left in the first half. The Cavaliers missed 12 of their final 14 field-goal attempts and turned it over six times, allowing Rice to build a 28-23 halftime lead.

Rice shot 36 percent in the half compared to 19 percent for the Cavaliers.

Texas Tech 69, SW Missouri St. 57

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. — Jason Sasser led three players in double figures with 21 points and grabbed 18 rebounds as Texas Tech defeated Southwest Missouri State for the championship of the Pizza Hut Classic.

In the consolation round, Andre Chevalier hit two free throws with 4 seconds left to give California State-Northridge a 66-64 victory over Central Michigan.

Southwest Missouri State's Tim Axley, who led the scoring in the championship game with 24 points, hit a jumper that gave SMS (3-1) its only lead at 38-37 with 14:25 left in the game.

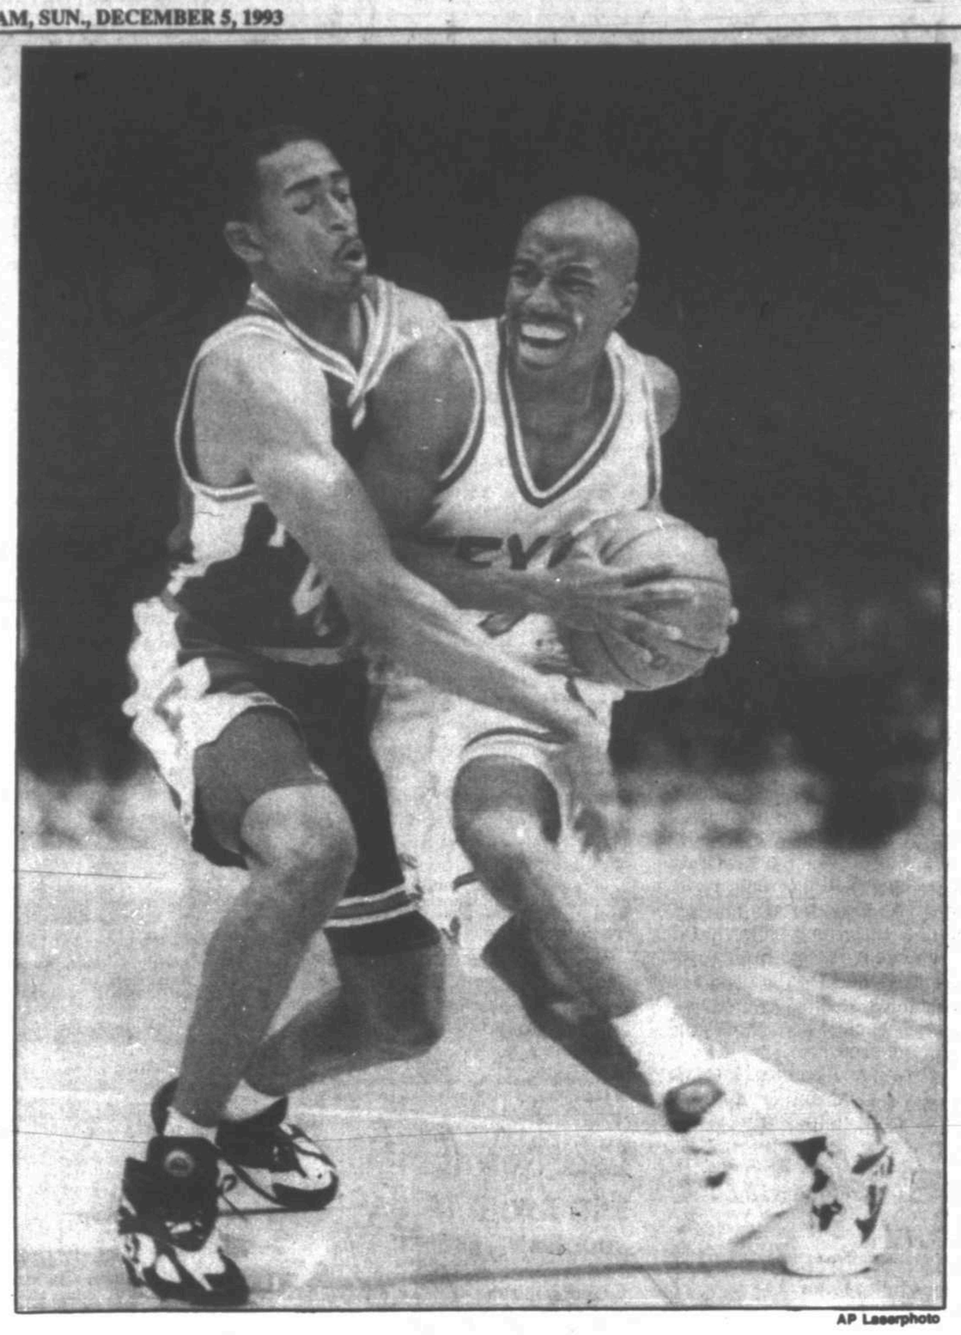

Texas Tech responded, as Sasser scored 13 points during a 22-9 run that gave the Red Raiders (2-1) a 59-47 advantage with 4:30 left to play.

Sasser was voted the tournament's most valuable player, while teammates Lance Hughes, who scored 20 points, and Mark Davis, who had 15 points and 12 rebounds, joined him on the all-tournament team.

Axley and Bears guard Johnny Murdock were the other all-tournament selections.

Southwest Missouri shot 32 percent from the floor, and made only 11 of 21 free throws.

Terry Alexander scored 13 points for the Bears.

Broncos tie school record in 126-66 win

EDINBURG (AP) — Greg Guy scored 23 points, leading the University of Texas-Pan American to a 126-66 victory Saturday night over winless Concordia Lutheran, tying the Broncs' record for most points in a game.

■ Texas Colleges

The record-tying performance came even though UTPA coach Mark Adams began substituting freely early in the game, which was the Broncs' season opener. Concordia Lutheran's Rams fell to 0-7.

UTPA led at the half, 62-33, benefiting from 34 Concordia turnovers in the game.

Guy, a 6-1 senior, was the NCAA Division I scoring champion last season, averaging 29.3 points. Saturday, he hit 9 of 20 shots and had 9 assists.

Reserve guard Joe Gaston led PanAm with 25 points in 16 minutes. Greg Black just missed a triple double with his 11 points, 12 assists and 9 rebounds.

Detroit Mercy 79, Texas Southern 73

MILWAUKEE — Tony Tolbert scored 24 points to lead Detroit Mercy to a victory over Texas Southern in the third-place game of the First Bank Classic.

The victory was the first for Detroit Mercy this season after three losses. It was also the 1,000th victory in school history as Detroit Mercy (1,000-844) became the 93rd school in Division I to reach that milestone.

Theon Dotson had 28 points for Texas Southern, which fell to 2-3.

In the First Bank Classic title game later Saturday night host Marquette (3-1) took on Wisconsin-Green Bay (2-2).

Detroit Mercy, which led by seven at the half, never lost the lead in the final 20 minutes. Texas Southern pulled to within four points at 64-60 with 5:50 left on a free throw by Herbert Ledee. But Kareem Hailey hit four straight free throws for a 68-60 Detroit Mercy advantage and Texas Southern never got that close again.

Tolbert — who had 41 points in the first round game against Wisconsin-Green Bay, one shy of the tournament record of 42 set by Pete Maravich of LSU in 1967 — scored 16 points to lead Detroit Mercy to a 36-29 halftime lead.

The score was tied five times in the first half, the last at 29-29 when Detroit Mercy's Greg Grant hit a basket with 1:08 left.

But Alan Renner-Thomas hit a pair of free throws with 56 seconds left to snap the tie. Tolbert also made a basket and Michael Jackson sank a 3-pointer at the buzzer to give Detroit Mercy a 7-point lead at the half.

Dotson had 10 points to lead Texas Southern in the first half.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Tom Etchison scored 22 points and came up with a 3-point play with 53 seconds left that sealed North Texas's victory over Eastern Washington in the consolation game of the Lobo Classic.

New Mexico (3-0) played Centenary (1-1) in the championship game.

North Texas (1-4) rallied from a 6-point deficit in the final four minutes after losing a 10-point lead midway through the second half.

Eastern Washington (1-2) got 26 points from guard Brad Sebree, whose three straight 3-pointers keyed a 20-6 run by Eastern Washington that erased a 43-33 North Texas lead in the second half.

Etchison hit five 3-pointers, but his biggest basket of the night came after Eastern Washington reserve Ed Bridwell cut the North Texas lead to 72-68 with a 10-foot jumper with 1:00 left.

Etchison then raced down the court, beat the North Texas defenders inside and got an off-balance reverse layup to fall. He was fouled by Sebree and hit the foul shot.

North Texas trailed 63-57 after Eastern Washington reserve Ed Bridwell scored four straight points on a pair of free throws and a short jumper. But the Golden Eagles scored 13 of the next 15 points, with an Etchison 3-pointer the catalyst for the late run.

Alabama State defeated Troy State 98-87 in the consolation game of the tournament.

'Prime Time' running out

By N.Y. Times News Service

If wonders never cease, then what should the world make of Deion Sanders? In this, the prime of his athletic life, the one thing that isn't on his side is time.

Sanders is 26, and he runs — "Prime Time, Prime Time, Prime Time" — like the mouth of Don King. He cuts — "Prime Time, Prime Time, Prime Time" — like Lorena Bobbitt. He covers receivers — "Prime Time, Prime Time, Prime Time" — like Ted Koppel does the story of the day. He dances, prances, struts and preens — "Prime Time, Prime Time, Prime Time" — like, well, himself.

And he's running on fumes. Exhaust fumes.

Can his body — well-oiled machine that it is — keep up this pace much longer?

"I really don't think so, because I'm exhausted right now," Sanders said. "Every day after practice, I sleep an hour after practice until the next day. I don't know if I can keep taking it on. But I'm having fun doing so."

He is, to borrow from his good buddy, rapper Hammer, "2 Legit 2 Quit". Now that Sanders is putting in a full-time work week with the Atlanta Falcons again, they look like a legit, even formidable, National Football League team. The Falcons enter tomorrow's game with the Houston Oilers (7-4) having won five of six.

That is no small feat, considering the Falcons were 0-5 and fending off speculation that coach Jerry Glanville was living on the edge of the unemployment line when Sanders arrived not-so-fresh off another long baseball season with the Atlanta Braves. Despite his late start on the football season, Sanders is tied for eighth in the NFL with four interceptions.

Lady Raiders beat Alcorn State

LUBBOCK (AP) — Connie Robinson had 22 points and 10 rebounds Sturday in pacing third-ranked Texas Tech to a 97-69 victory over Alcorn State in a first-round game of the Lady Raider Classic.

The defending national champions (3-0) won their 22nd consecutive game.

Ira Fuquay, Nickie Tatum and Jo Anna Simpson each had 17 points for Alcorn State (1-3), and Tatum added 10 rebounds.

Tech outscored Alcorn State 14-4 in one stretch to increase a 5-4 lead to 19-8 margin with 13:23 left in the half.

The Lady Braves, led by Fuquay and Simpson with 3-point goals, countered with a 16-6 run over a 3½-minute span to pull to within 25-24. But Robinson, Michi Atkins and Stephanie Scott led charge to a 47-35 halftime lead.

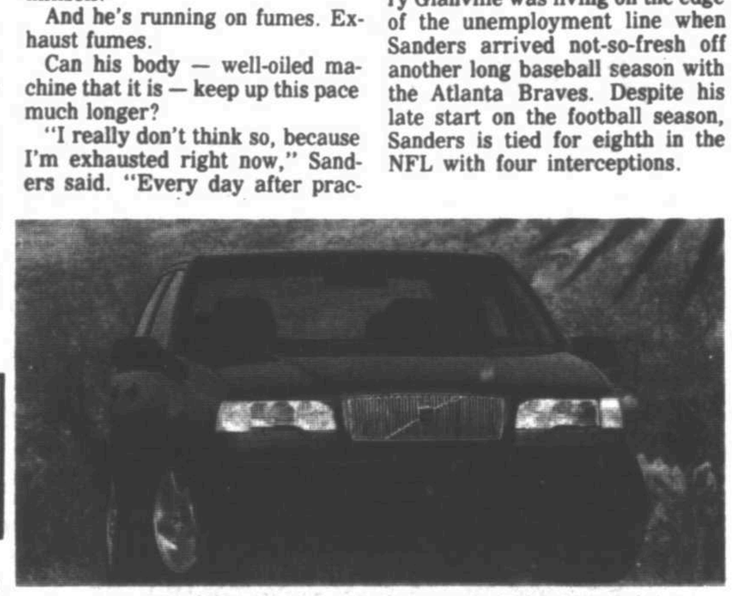

Atkins finished with 16 points and Noel Johnson and Nikki Heath had 13 each.

Hoosiers rebound, upset top-ranked Wildcats

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Damon Bailey scored 29 points Saturday, including 23 in the first half and six free throws in the closing minutes, as No. 21 Indiana beat No. 1 Kentucky 96-84.

Bailey was shut out in the second half until his first free throw with 2:46 to go as Kentucky rallied from 15 points down.

■ Top 25 Roundup

But as the Wildcats (2-1) tried desperately to battle back, Indiana (1-1) scored 10 of its final 12 points on foul shots.

A rebound basket by Alan Henderson put the Hoosiers up 88-79, and Pat Graham and Bailey hit two free throws apiece for a 92-79 lead with a half minute to go.

Travis Ford, who had a career-high 29 against Indiana last year, finished with 20 on Saturday, including a basket that cut Indiana's lead to 92-81. After two more free throws by Bailey, Rodrick Rhodes hit a 3-pointer for Kentucky and the Hoosiers' Todd Leary finished up with two foul shots.

Indiana, upset in its season opener a week earlier by Butler, widened a 55-44 halftime lead to 65-50 on four quick baskets by Brian Evans, who backed Bailey with 19 points. Consecutive 3-pointers by Ford, another 3-pointer by Tony Delk and a steal and layup by Jared Prickett helped bring Kentucky within 66-63. But a slam dunk by Henderson started a 15-6 streak that put the game out of reach.

Henderson finished with 17 for Indiana and Graham added 12. Rhodes added 19 for Kentucky and Delk 16.

Four Kentucky errors in the first two minutes helped Indiana to a 6-0 lead, and the Hoosiers twice took leads of seven points before collapsing under the Wildcats' press.

Two free throws by Ford, a free throw by Rhodes and a 3-pointer by Delk gave Kentucky its first lead at 20-19. Consecutive 3-pointers by Delk and Jeff Brassow gave Kentucky its biggest lead at 33-26, but the Wildcats managed only one field goal the final 7:30 of the first half.

Bailey had 13 of his first-half points over that stretch before intermission, including a driving layup and 3-pointer that put the Hoosiers up 43-38 with 3:18 to go.

A steal, layup and free throw by Ford cut Indiana's lead to two. Leary hit two free throws, Bailey followed with four more foul shots, and another basket by Bailey pushed the Hoosiers' lead to 51-44. In the closing seconds of the half, Graham hit two free throws and Evans turned a steal into a layup for a 55-44 lead.

The Hoosiers' biggest leads were 61-46 and 65-50, both after baskets by Evans.

No. 2 Arkansas 111, NW La. 76

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Al Dillard scored 16 points in less than 2 minutes and Arkansas took aim on the No. 1 ranking with a huge victory over Northwestern Louisiana.

Top-ranked Kentucky lost 96-84 to Indiana Saturday afternoon, clearing the way for No. 2 Arkansas (3-0) to move up.

Dillard's spurt, which included 4 of 5 3-pointers, was part of a 31-3 run that put Arkansas on top 54-35 at the half. Dillard entered the game with less than 4 minutes left in the half and the Demons' Larry Terry made a jumper to cut it to 35-34 with 3:37 to play.

Dillard hit from 23 feet with 2:50 remaining and then from 24 feet. He made a steal and converted a left-handed reverse layup. Roger Crawford canned a free throw and then Dillard hit from 23 feet. Clint McDaniel got the ball to Dillard for a fast-break basket and Dillard hit another from 22 feet to make it 52-34 with 57 seconds remaining.

Corliss Williamson, who turned 20 on Saturday, scored the first four points of the second half, and Northwestern (2-1) got no closer than 18. The lead reached 73-43 on Roger Crawford's tip with 13:53 to play.

Dillard scored 21, Williamson 19 and five other Razorbacks were in double figures. Eric Kubel led Northwestern with 21 and Kenny McMillon had 20.

Arkansas, which made 16 of 25 3-pointers against Missouri two nights earlier, made only nine of its first 29 shots and trailed 30-21 with 7:12 to play. At that point, the Demons had made 11 of 22. By halftime, the Razorbacks' shooting percentage was 46.7 and the Demons had dropped to 37.

Consecutive 3-pointers by McMillon gave Northwestern a 13-10 lead, the first time the Razorbacks trailed this year. Kubel's hook put the Demons in front 32-23 with 6:05 to play. Rebound baskets by Scotty Thurman and Dwight Stewart gave Arkansas a 34-32 advantage with 4:21 to play.

No. 3 Kansas 79, DePaul 74

ROSEMONT, Ill. — Steve Woodberry sparked a 29-9 second-half run with a pair of 3-pointers and No. 3 Kansas rallied from a 14-point deficit to defeat DePaul.

Woodberry scored 21 of his 23 points in the second half and hit four of his 3-pointers in the pivotal run as the Jayhawks (5-1) turned a 44-32 deficit into a 61-53 lead.

The Blue Demons (1-1) fell behind 65-55 before closing to 71-68, but a three-point play by Richard Scott, who finished with 13 points, gave the Jayhawks breathing room with 2:30 left. Woodberry followed with his fifth 3-pointer.

Brandon Cole, with 21 points, and Tom Kleinschmidt, with 20, led DePaul.

DePaul controlled the first half except for a brief 10-9 Jayhawks lead. A 3-pointer by Marcus Singer and two more by Cole put DePaul ahead 20-17. The Blue Demons went on a 12-2 run led by Cole and Kleinschmidt to take a 32-19 lead.

DePaul opened a 40-26 advantage before Scot Pollard scored twice for Kansas to cut it to 40-30 at the half.

No. 4 North Carolina 97, BYU 65

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — North Carolina started the game with an 11-2 run and opened the second half with a 16-4 burst to cruise past Brigham Young and win the Tournament of Champions.

The fourth-ranked Tar Heels won the tournament they now host for the second straight year and improved their record in Charlotte, where this season's Final Four will be held, to 113-14.

No. 22 George Washington beat South Carolina 77-71 for third place.

North Carolina (6-1) was impressive on the defensive end in the second half, but was inept from the free throw line in the first. The Tar Heels led 36-29 at halftime despite a 7-for-20 effort from the foul line.

Brigham Young (1-2) couldn't take advantage as North Carolina held the Cougars to one field goal over the first eight minutes of the second half.

Eric Montross led North Carolina, the defending national champions, with 17 points. Donald Williams and Jerry Stackhouse each added 13, while Kevin Salvadori had 12, Rasheed Wallace 11 and Brian Reese 10.

Randy Reid led the foul-prone Cougars with 22 points.

Reese, the worst of the Tar Heels from the foul line in the first half at 1-for-6, received a huge cheer from the pro-Carolina crowd at the Charlotte Coliseum when he made two free throws with 17:43 to play for a 41-31 lead. The ovation was louder when he nailed a 3-pointer with 10:39 left for a 57-39 lead.

Those cheers were dwarfed, however, when Wallace and Stackhouse, both freshmen, dunked emphatically on consecutive possessions for a 63-39 lead with 9:06 to play.

No. 5 Michigan 97, Tn.-Chattanooga 86

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Freshman Bobby Crawford scored 22 points as No. 5 Michigan held off a late Tennessee-Chattanooga rally.

Michigan (4-0) had a 17-point lead with 14:04 left in the game.

But with Maurio Hanson scoring 7 of his 17 points in a 21-7 burst, the Moccasins (2-1) cut the deficit to 72-69 with 7:30 remaining.

The Wolverines responded with a 17-7 run, sparked by Crawford, who had two 3-pointers and a pair of free throws in the spurt. That gave Michigan an 89-76 lead and the Wolverines were in command the rest of the way.

Crawford, seeing extra playing time because Dugan Fife was in foul trouble, hit 7-of-9 shots, including five of Michigan's 11 from 3-point range.

Michigan was 22-of-34 at the free throw line, while the Moccasins made only 7-of-16 free throws. The Wolverines shot 51 percent and finished with a 40-35 advantage in rebounds.

Juwan Howard also had 22 points for Michigan and Jalen Rose scored 18.

Brandon Born scored 20 points for Chattanooga before fouling out with 39 seconds remaining. Chad Copeland had 18 points and Gary Robb 15 for the Moccasins, who shot 53 percent.

Xavier cut Duke's lead to 59-54 with 8:39 left after trailing by as many as 13, but the Blue Devils went on a 15-0 run to secure the outcome.

Antonio Lang, Duke's spark in its first two wins, scored six points in the 5½ minute run, while freshman Jeff Capel hit a key 3-pointer as Xavier went cold from outside.

Lang finished with 15 points, while Cherokee Parks added 12 and a career-high 20 rebounds. His previous high in rebounds was 13 against Oklahoma last season.

Brian Grant led Xavier with 16 points.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Greg Minor scored 25 points, including five in a late 12-0 run to carry No. 11 Louisville over Michigan State.

Louisville (1-1) relied on its three experienced players down the stretch to take the lead and hold off Michigan State (2-2).

Minor's basket with 6:52 left started the run, and cut the Spartans' lead to 53-51. Clifford Rozier then tied the game with a shot off the backboard, and two free throws by Tick Rogers gave Louisville the lead for good.

With less than a minute left, Michigan State sank three 3-pointers, the last by Shawn Respert — who had 26 points — reducing Louisville's lead to 70-67. But the Cardinals made five of their six free-throw attempts to seal the victory.

All of George Washington's scoring came from the starters, and all five were in double figures. Nimbo Hammons got 17, Yinka Dare 14, Alvin Pearsall 11 and Vaughn Jones 10. The Colonial broke a four-game losing streak against the Gamecocks.

THE SOUP KITCHEN SAYS
"SHARE IN A DREAM"

For several years the Midland Soup Kitchen Ministry has been providing emergency food and clothing for the needy in Midland. There is now an opportunity to expand this ministry by providing emergency shelter for the homeless. Recently, the old YMCA building located on the corner of Orchard and Carver streets was donated to the Soup Kitchen. The "Ministry" would like to move into this larger facility. The added space provided by this building will allow the Soup Kitchen to meet the needs of more people. BUT WE CAN'T DO IT ALONE. We do not have the resources to make the necessary renovations to this building. We are looking for individuals who are willing to donate their time, skills and materials to make this dream come true. Especially valuable would be an electrician who could help in the wiring of this structure. All help of any sort is needed and would be welcomed. If you are looking for a place to serve in your community, this could be your opportunity. If interested, please call Mario or Mary Rendon at 683-6383 or 687-SOUP. Thank your for your support.

Our prayers are with you all as we exalt the name of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ together offer. Once again, "Thank You Midland."

Spurs run winning streak to eight with victory

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — David Robinson had 37 points, 14 rebounds and seven blocked shots, lifting the San Antonio Spurs to their eighth consecutive victory, 90-82 over the Philadelphia 76ers on Saturday night.

■ NBA Roundup

Dennis Rodman grabbed 14 rebounds as the Spurs won their fourth straight game on the road. Jeff Hornacek had 26 points for the 76ers, who lost their fourth straight.

The Spurs, leading 72-66 after three periods, started the fourth with a 6-0 run, including four by Robinson. A 3-pointer by Dana Barros with 6:01 left closed Philadelphia to 82-74, but that was the closest the Sixers got for the rest of the game.

Philadelphia's last lead was 51-50 with 10:08 to go in the third quarter. Dale Ellis then scored 10 points in a 20-8 run that gave the Spurs a 70-59 advantage with 2:13 left in the period.

Magic 87, Cavaliers 83

RICHFIELD, Ohio -- Donald Royal tipped in his own missed shot for the go-ahead basket with 21 seconds left and Shaquille O'Neal grabbed the clinching rebound for Orlando against Cleveland.

It was the Magic's first win in its last seven trips to Richfield Coliseum.

The Cavaliers, who led by 16 early in the third quarter, blew a big second-half lead for the second straight game. The Cavs lost a 17-point advantage in falling to New Jersey on Wednesday.

O'Neal had 23 points and 15 rebounds and Anfernee Hardaway scored 17 points 16 for Orlando. Mark Price led Cleveland with 17 points.

The Cavaliers trailed by six after Orlando's Nick Anderson drove for a dunk with 1:50 to play, but Cleveland tied it 83-83 on consecutive 3-pointers by Gerald Wilkins and Chris Mills, the last one with 43 seconds to go.

Royal then put Orlando ahead for good when he tipped in his own missed bank shot with 21 seconds remaining.

Trail Blazers 118, Bullets 105

LANDOVER, Md. — Clyde Drexler, held to a total of 25 points his last two games, scored 25 points in Portland's victory over Washington.

Clifford Robinson scored 26 points, Buck Williams had 21 points and 14 rebounds and Terry Porter finished with 22 points for the Trail Blazers, who extended the Bullets' losing streak to three games.

Washington was led by Don MacLean's 24 points and 15 rebounds and Rex Chapman's 20 points.

Knicks 123, Kings 101

NEW YORK — Patrick Ewing scored 31 points, and Anthony Bonner matched his season-high with 17 against his former teammates as New York handed Sacramento its sixth straight loss.

Ewing, guarded by the overmatched Mike Peplowski and Randy Breuer, scored all his points on layups, dunks and short jumpers. He had 16 points in the first quarter, 22 at halftime and left the game early in the fourth quarter with New York ahead by 19.

The Knicks, coming off a humbling home loss to the Houston Rockets on Thursday, outrebounded the Kings 62-34. Charles Oakley had 15, snapping a streak of three straight single-figure rebound games. Ewing added 10.

Lionel Simmons scored 22 points for the Kings, who have lost 12 straight games at Madison Square Garden since 1982.

Jazz 122, Hornets 108

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone had 35 points and 14 rebounds and Jeff Malone scored 25 points as Utah defeated Charlotte, the Hornets' fifth straight road loss and sixth defeat in eight games.

Alonzo Mourning led Charlotte with 36 points, matching the season high he recorded Friday night in a loss at Denver. Tony Bennett, starting for the injured Tyrone Bogues, scored a career-high 20, but All-Star Larry Johnson was held to eight points, giving him 11 in two games.

Charlotte, which never led in the game, closed to 107-102 with 5:29 left on a 3-pointer by Bennett. After Karl Malone's jumper from 15 feet, Mourning hit two free throws to make it 109-104, but the Jazz scored the next eight points for a 117-104 advantage with 2:20 to play.

Jeff Malone had three points in the run, including a technical foul called on Charlotte coach Allan Bristow. Mourning and Hersey Hawkins each hit two free throws to pull the Hornets to 117-108 with 1:37 left, but they came no closer.

Jazz rookie Bryon Russell added 14 points and John Stockton had 11 points and 17 assists as Utah won its third straight overall and fourth in a row at home. Dell Curry scored 16 points for Charlotte.

Charlotte, which trailed by 25 points in the first half, closed to 75-72 with 7:21 left in the third period after a 3-pointer by Hawkins and a steal and layup by Bennett. That capped a 15-8 surge by the Hornets.

Utah followed with a 7-1 run, expanding its lead to 82-73 with 5:06 left in the third. The Jazz scored four points in the third period on technical fouls, three on illegal defense and one on Johnson, and there were eight technical fouls and one flagrant foul assessed in the game.

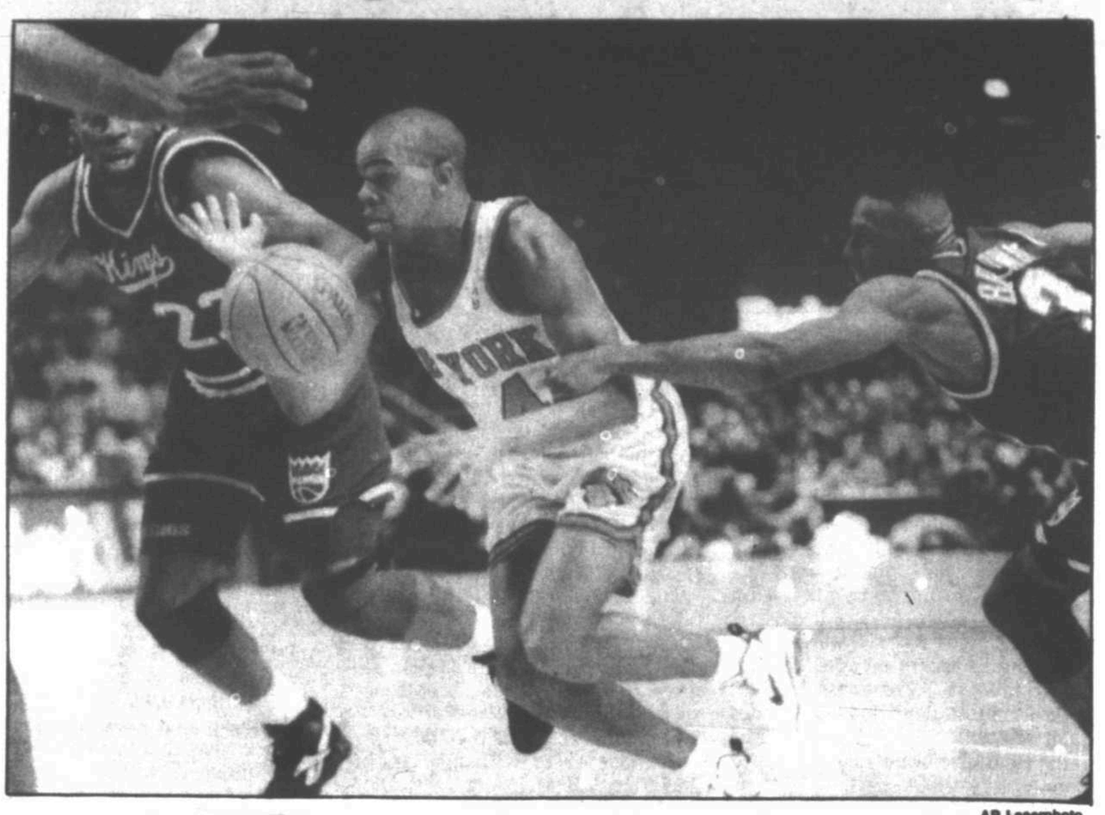

Utah built a 56-31 lead, its largest of the game, on a layup by Stockton midway through the second quarter.

SuperSonics 99, Timberwolves 82

SEATTLE — Sam Perkins scored 22 points and Nate McMillan's two 3-pointers led a decisive fourth-quarter spurt as Seattle beat Minnesota for its 13th victory in 14 games.

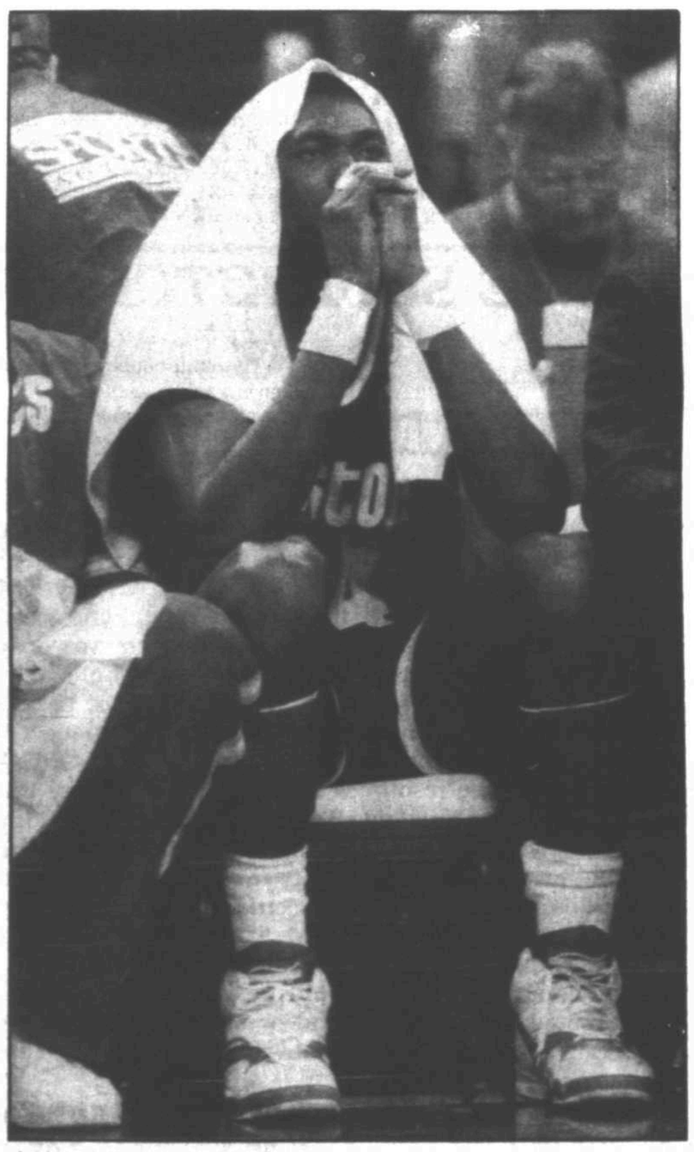

McMillan's two long baskets keyed an 11-0 run that gave the Sonics a 76-57 lead in the first 2:30 of the final period.

The Sonics, who have the NBA's second-best record, beat the Timberwolves for the 11th straight time, dating back to 1991, and held Minnesota to its season low. Doug West scored 18 points for the Timberwolves, whose previous low was 89 points on Nov. 20 against Denver.

Rockets run out of fuel on record chase

By Ed Shearer
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — Travel weary and emotionally drained, the Houston Rockets couldn't stretch the NBA's longest start-of-the-season winning streak to 16 games.

They had to settle for a record-tying 15 in a row when they relinquished the role of the league's hottest team to the Atlanta Hawks, who ran their winning streak to 10 games with a 133-111 victory over the Rockets Friday night.

"Twenty-six other teams would love to be in our position," Rockets reserve Scott Brooks said.

Brooks called Houston's 15-1 record "a phenomenal start."

"We're walking out of here heads high," he said.

The Rockets had tied the league's 45-year-old record set by the Washington Capitols when they beat the New York Knicks 94-85 Thursday night.

"We left a lot of our emotion in New York, and the travel down here was awful, but give most of the credit to the Hawks," Brooks said.

Houston didn't reach its Atlanta hotel until after 4 a.m.

"Sure, poor travel had an effect, but Atlanta's a good team, one of the toughest in the East, and they kicked our butts," Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich said.

"We didn't follow a single thing we planned. We lost every area of the game — rebounding, running, defense."

The Hawks, 8-0 at home this season, outran the Rockets from the start.

Mookie Blaylock had 16 of his 28 points in the opening period.

The Hawks trailed only once, 9-7 on a 3-pointer by Vernon Maxwell, who led Houston with 26 points. Dominique Wilkins, who scored 27, tied it on an 18-footer, and Stacey Augmon put Atlanta in front to stay on a short jumper with 8:51 remaining in the first quarter.

The Hawks led by 12 in the final minute, increased it to 19 just over five minutes into the second quarter and had it to 94-60 when Blaylock made a 20-footer with 2:11 left in the third.

"We didn't play our game, and the Hawks were prepared for us," said Hakeem Olajuwon, who was hounded all game by Jon Koncak and Andrew Lang, with double-team help from Blaylock.

Olajuwon, who was averaging 26.1 points and 13.5 rebounds, was held to 17 points and 7 rebounds. He sat out the final quarter.

"We have no excuses," Olajuwon said. "This team, the way we played them tonight, there is no way we can beat them at their home. It would have been more disappointing to lose to a team we should have beaten."

"I'm not disappointed to miss the record," Maxwell said. "We tied it. We're in the books. We gave it our best shot and now it'll be nice to have a day off."

"I'm sorry we only make one trip here," Brooks said. "We'd like to show the fans we're better than we looked tonight."

The Rockets' next game is Sunday at Cleveland.

Russina ice dancer wants to be American

By Jere Longman
N.Y. Times News Service

When he defected on Jan. 24, 1990, Gorsha Sur, the Russian ice dancer, made a bargain-basement escape, taking an unfurnished apartment in Brooklyn, N.Y., and outfitting his modest refuge in a style of urban discard.

He found a couch in a trash heap on the corner, salvaged a bed from another rubbish pile and anchored a three-legged cot with a rusty golf club.

Just before Sur's money ran out, serendipity seemed to write a blank check. He found a coaching job in Detroit that came with a house and car.

Next, he found a dance partner in Renee Roca of Colorado Springs. By early 1993, skating in a sensual style more European than American, Roca and Sur became national ice-dancing champions.

He seemed to have a surfeit of good fortune as the 1994 Winter Olympics approached, a new life, a new partner, a successful career. But there is one thing that Sur doesn't yet have — U.S. citizenship — and without it, he will be unable to compete in the Winter Games in Lillehammer, Norway.

His problem is this: Sur has been in the country fewer than four years and the residency requirement for citizenship is five years. Rep. Joel Hefley, R-Colo., and Sen. Ben Nighthorse Campbell, D-Colo., where Sur now lives, have attempted to speed up his naturalization process in Congress.

On Nov. 18, the House judiciary subcommittee on immigration voted unanimously to forward Sur's case to the full judiciary committee. If approved, the bill must go before the full House and Senate.

To qualify for Lillehammer, Roca and Sur must first win the U.S. championships in early January. Then Sur must win over Congress. He is basing his citizenship request on two things: first, these Olympics are a special case, coming only two years after the 1992 Winter Games under a new, staggered system. Second, to deprive him would douse the Olympic chances of Roca, who is an American citizen.

UCLA beats Runnin' Rebs, 108-83

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Freshman Charles O'Bannon scored 23 points Saturday night and five other Bruins were in double figures Saturday night as No. 10 UCLA thrashed UNLV 108-83.

UCLA (2-0) led by as many as 34 points with four minutes left in the one-sided contest.

Ed O'Bannon, Charles' older brother, and Shon Tarver each had 16 for the Bruins. Freshman Jermaine Smith led UNLV with 18.

Ironically, the elder O'Bannon and Tarver were committed to UNLV in 1990 before NCAA sanctions against the Rebels forced them to change their minds and enroll at UCLA.

Seven-foot center George Zidek contributed 15 points, Tyus Edney 14 and reserve Kevin Dempsey 12 for the Bruins.

The rout in its opener was the worst administered in the two years that Rollie Massimino has been coach at UNLV. The Rebels lost 90-74 to Southern California in the National Invitation Tournament to end the 1992-93 season.

UNLV hadn't lost by more than 25 points since a 97-70 blowout to Wyoming in the last game of the 1980 season when Jerry Tarkanian was the coach.

The Bruins, paced by Ed O'Bannon's five baskets, put the contest away early with a 19-4 spurt. When the older O'Bannon slammed home a dunk at the 15:05 mark, UCLA led 21-7.

The Bruins lengthened the advantage to 30-14 on Dempsey's 3-pointer at 12:31. UNLV battled back to 37-26 with 7:12 left in the first half. Clayton Johnson, who finished with 17, hit a field goal and sank the ensuing foul shot to bring the Rebels as close as they would get before trailing at intermission 56-38.

The Bruins hit 24 of 42 shots, 57 percent, in the first half while UNLV was just 13-of-34.

GATORS: Florida wins SEC title

From 1C

9 Florida (10-2) won its second SEC title in three years, defeating the 16th-ranked Crimson Tide in a rematch of last year's inaugural championship game.

Alabama (8-3-1) was a different team than the one which defeated Florida 28-21 for the 1992 championship on the way to the national title. In that game, Langham returned an interception for the winning touchdown with less than four minutes to go.

On Saturday, with Langham declared ineligible for signing with an agent, Alabama was forced to go with Tommy Johnson and Willie Gaston at cornerback against Florida's pass-oriented offense.

Johnson had two interceptions but was burned for a 43-yard touchdown pass to Jack Jackson which broke open a tight game late in the third quarter. Gaston also gave up a TD pass, getting sucked in by Dean's pump fake while Harrison Houston broke open for a 13-yard completion in the first.

Dean, who usually shares the quarterback duties, went the distance with Danny Wuerffel sidelined by a knee injury. Dean completed 20 of 37 passes for 256 yards and also ran for a 2-yard touchdown late in the first half which put the Gators ahead to stay 14-10.

Alabama closed the gap to 14-13 on Michael Proctor's second field goal with 2:14 remaining in the third period. Then Florida punter Shayne Edge came up with the key play of the game.

On fourth-and-8 at his 37, Edge took off along the right sideline for a 30-yard gain. On the next play, Dean hit Jackson in stride over the middle for a 43-yard touchdown.

Errict Rhett sealed the victory with a 3-yard TD run early in the fourth period.

With starter Jay Barker sidelined by a knee injury against Auburn two weeks ago, Alabama opened with sophomore Brian Burgdorf at quarterback but had star receiver David Palmer calling signals most of the second half.

Palmer rushed for 93 yards and passed for 90 but was unable to pull it off by himself. The loss capped a disappointing season for Alabama, which will settle for a Gator Bowl match against North Carolina on Dec. 31. Alabama, with three losses in its last four games, has yet to beat a team with a winning record.

Florida is expected meet No. 3 West Virginia in the Sugar Bowl.

Midshipman misses late field goal in loss

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Navy freshman Ryan Bucchianeri missed a 18-yard field goal attempt with two seconds to play Saturday, allowing Army to escape with a 16-14 victory in the annual classic between the service academies.

Navy (4-7) appeared ready to match Army's great comeback win of a year ago when it rallied from a 16-0 deficit early in the fourth quarter, then drove 79 yards to the Army 1 for Bucchianeri's chip shot.

The snap was good. The hold was good. The kick from a slight angle was wide right, sending the corps of Cadets and Army (6-5) into a celebration.

It also deprived Navy of a little revenge. The Middies blew a 17-point lead last season and lost 25-24 on a 49-yard field goal by Patmon Malcom with 12 seconds to play.

An unsportsmanlike penalty after the kick cost Army 10 yards and Navy tried to take advantage by lining up for another field goal. But it was Army's ball and Army's game.

It was a game Navy gift wrapped, too. Besides the last-second miss, the Middies turned the ball over three times inside the Army 30 in the first half and lost it once on downs at the Cadets 32 in the second.

Army took a 9-0 halftime lead on a 2-yard TD run by John Lane and a 20-yard field goal by Rocco Wicks.

Quarterback Rick Roper extended the lead to 16-0 late in the third quarter with a 9-yard TD run.

The Middies were seemingly out of the game at that point, but they came back.

The Middies' final drive started at their 20. Billy James led the way by carrying six times for 60 yards.

When Navy lined up for the potential game winning kick, it seemed like four years ago when the game was last at Giants Stadium. That ended with Frank Schenk kicking a 32-yard for the win.

James cost Navy points late in the first quarter when he fumbled at the Army 1.

Three team head to small college title games

Associated Press

The rain and mud didn't bother Jim Ballard a bit, and it came as no surprise to Mount Union coach Larry Kehres.

Playing at Alliance, Ohio, Ballard threw an NCAA Division III playoff record eight touchdown passes as Mount Union turned a battle of unbeatens into a 56-8 rout of St. John's of Minnesota to advance to the division title game.

Elsewhere in small college playoffs, it was:

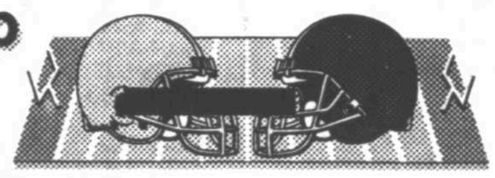

■ NCAA Division I-AA quarterfinals; Youngstown State 34, Georgia Southern 14; Marshall 34, Delaware 31; and Boston University was at Idaho and Troy State at McNeese State in later games.

■ NCAA Division II semifinals; Indiana, Pa., 21, North Dakota 6; and North Alabama 27, Texas A&M-Kingsville 25.

■ NAIA Division I semifinals; Glenville State, W. Va., 13, Central State, Ohio, 12, and Arkansas-Monticello against East Central, Okla.

■ NAIA Division II quarterfinals; Westminster, Pa., 24.

Javelina rally falls short in semifinals

FLORENCE, Ala. (AP) — Brian Satterfield rushed for 216 yards on 29 carries as North Alabama defeated Texas A&M-Kingsville 27-25 Saturday to advance to the NCAA Division II national championship.

North Alabama survived a failed two-point conversion attempt with less than three minutes to play by Texas A&M-Kingsville that would have tied the game.

The Lions (13-0) led 14-7 at the half and traded scores with the Javelinas (7-6) in the second half to advance to the title game against Indiana University of Pennsylvania next Saturday at Braly Stadium.

The Javelinas responded with a 49-yard drive on seven plays and scored on a 18-yard pass from Joe Menchaca to Dexter Deese with 2:42 left to make it 27-25.

A pass attempt for the two point conversion failed and UNA had the win.

Bad disc to keep Dallas' Haley out of game

IRVING (AP) — Dallas Cowboys defensive end Charles Haley will miss the Monday night game against the Philadelphia Eagles and possibly several more because of continuing problems with a ruptured disc.

Coach Jimmy Johnson met with Haley to discuss the possibilities of surgery, rest or continuing to play with pain.

"He hasn't been able to play as well as he did a year ago," Johnson said. "We hope that his back will improve next week or after two weeks where he can help us down the stretch. But we really can't make that determination until a later date."

Haley visited a neurologist last week who said Haley's back wasn't getting better but wasn't getting worse. Haley has an injury similar to quarterback Troy Aikman, who had off-season back surgery. Both hurt themselves lifting weights.

Haley talked over the alternatives with Johnson, then left Valley Ranch on Friday as practice was beginning.

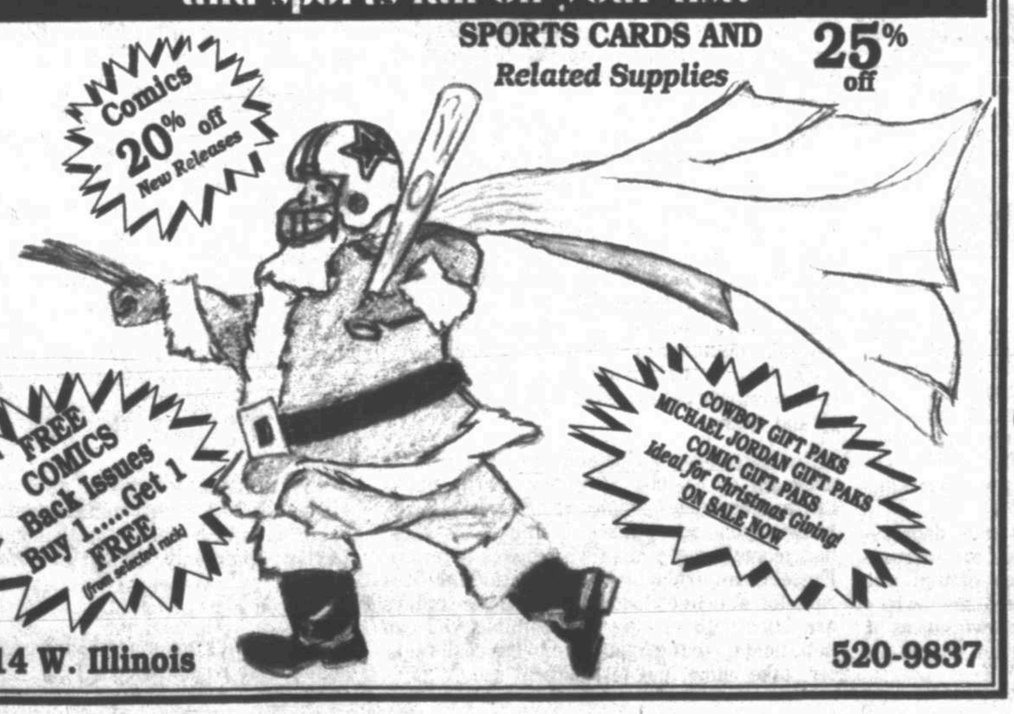

Jim Jeffcoat, who normally spells Haley at right end, will start in Haley's place, although Leon Lett also will be used in that spot, Johnson said.

Haley has just three sacks but leads the team in pressures and forced fumbles. Without him, the Cowboys' already troubled pass rush will be weakened.

"I would hope that Jimmie Jones would become more of a factor as he was last year," Johnson said.

Ruling is justice that's upside down

There obviously is something wrong with a system of justice in which a 71-year-old man can be mugged and nearly choked to death in a New York City subway station, while his attacker who was shot in the back by a transit authority policeman as he was fleeing the scene is awarded $4.3 million in damages — because the officer supposedly used excessive force!

Jerome Sandusky, the victim of the attack, was outraged, as well he should have been. "It's justice turned upside down," he said from his Newark, N.J. home. "And it sends a terrible message to other guys that crime does pay."

That is our sentiment exactly.

The Greek philosopher Plato, writing in The Republic, noted one of the major weaknesses of any democracy is the growth of complete equality in which even prisoners condemned to death had rights and, thus, are not put to death. That is a farcical extension of legal rights that smacks of tyranny.

Examine the facts: Who was in the right in the Sandusky case, Jerome Sandusky or the mugger who sought to take from Sandusky his personal property? Who was the criminal, the dreg of society? Bernard McCummings, the mugger.

If the transit authority officer who shot McCummings was attempting to stop a crime in progress, and if he warned McCummings to stop — which he says he did (McCummings denied it) — then it makes absolutely no sense that McCummings would be awarded the outrageous sum of $4.3 million in damages, even though he is paralyzed from the waist down because one of the bullets that struck him severed his spinal cord.

Isn't the Supreme Court, which upheld the jury award and the ruling of excessive force on the part of the transit authority officer last week forgetting that McCummings made the decision to attempt to rob Jerome Sandusky? Isn't it forgetting that criminals sacrifice most of the protections of a legal society when they embark on a life of crime?

From all indications, Sandusky is correct. The Supreme Court ruling in this case is justice turned upside down.

A.R. Titus' death touches Midlanders

The death Thursday of Adolphus Rene Titus will touch the entire Midland community in some regard.

Titus, who with his wife Margie, had owned and operated Tom's Pharmacy since 1968, was a driving force in the black business community and in the fight against racism, but his reach did not stop at the boundary of race. He was an effective force for good in all of Midland.

As his friend and pastor, the Rev. Hadley R. Edwards, noted, "He was a man that was into his job for the heart of it." As such, it was not uncommon for him to make arrangements for the mother of a sick child to pay out the child's medication.

"He was sensitive and caring," said Edwards, "and he served as a good role model for the entire African American community."

Without a doubt, Titus' death will be felt by the entire community. We extend our condolences to Margie Titus and the entire Titus family in this time of sorrow.

Ruling on indecency ban ensures access to smut

A federal appeals court puts a higher priority on protecting adults' access to prime-time slime on the airwaves than on shielding children from it.

A three-judge panel of the 12-member U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia has struck down an effort by the Federal Communications Commission to extend to midnight its current 6 a.m.-to-8 p.m. ban against indecency in radio and TV programs.

While acknowledging the government's compelling interest in trying to protect children from indecent broadcasting, the appeals panel said the FCC did adequately consider the First Amendment rights of adults to view such programs. In other words, ensure access to broadcast smut. ...

Besides nullifying the FCC's extension of its indecency ban from 14 hours to 18 hours a day, the appeals court panel also voided another FCC regulation. It required cable TV broadcasters to prohibit indecency on public-access channels. Cable operators must make these channels available to any member of a community.

This last ruling emphasizes that the rationale for federal regulation of TV — because the airwaves are limited, the government must apportion space on the television band — does not apply to cable. About 60 percent of U.S. households with TV have cable.

Arafat must adjust to peacemaking role

WASHINGTON — Yasir Arafat may be longing for the good old days when he could sow unrest without worry. The intifada was a cost of war for Israel but is now the price of peace for Arafat.

Anderson

As the leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization officially switches from soldier to statesman — seeking to suppress uprisings he once stoked — he is confronted by a harsh new fact of life: the intifada is a roadblock, not a route to self-rule. Life as a guerrilla may prove much simpler than life as a governor — as the Dec. 13 deadline approaches for the start of Israel's withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and Jericho.

Ruling newly liberated people poses problems for someone who has ruled the PLO by decree, fiat and an iron-fist. Arafat controls the PLO's purse strings, makes most major decisions by himself and often acts without advising even close allies. Whether Arafat makes the transition from dictator to democrat in the newly liberated Gaza and Jericho areas is a question on which the peace process might turn.

Last week marked the bloodiest day of street battles since the signing of the Israeli-PLO agreement. A quarter century of Israeli occupation has politicized Palestinians to the point where Arafat's peace agenda may go unheeded. Add to that the desperate mischief-making of the militant Palestinian group Hamas and Syria and what Arafat confronts is a challenge that could engender something like Gaza gridlock.

"He's been an autocrat," one of Arafat's closest Palestinian-American advisers told us last week. "How do they work out differences and how do they live as independent people. That's the test rather than the contradiction Arafat faces."

The Occupied Territories have changed substantially and politically since 1967. An unreleased Defense Department study sheds some light on the forces that have shaped the Palestinian consciousness, and now stand as obstacles to self-rule.

"Until the past few decades, Palestinian political involvement was primarily centered in a small elite of approximately 200 Palestinian families, known as the notables,'" the report reads. "The leaders of these families served the Ottoman empire as go-betweens with the populace of the Palestinian region."

The notables, who exercised an almost feudal hold over their fellow Palestinians, had a firm grip on power until the partition of Palestine in 1948. The establishment of an Israeli state, and the burgeoning Arab nationalist movement, set forces in motion that eventually eroded their authority.

The final blow to the notables' power base came in the Arab-Israeli war in 1967. Stripped of much of their land in the Arab states' humiliating loss, the Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip marked the end of the notables as a political force, and the final emergence of the Palestinian nationalist movement as the leader of the Palestinian people.

After the 1967 war, "Palestinian political leadership fit into two major categories," according to the Pentagon report. "Arafat's PLO and the local leadership inside the Occupied Territories. Until recently, those inside the territories looked to outside leadership to resolve Palestinian problems."

That all changed with the 1987 Arab uprising, or intifada, which spawned a whole new generation of Palestinian revolutionaries. At first completely spontaneous, the intifada soon became an organized outpouring of popular dissent.

Clinton's complaint destined to remain unanswered

Can President Clinton be serious when he complains to Rolling Stone magazine about never getting "one damn bit of credit" from the "knee-jerk liberal press"? Surely he is being sly, hoping to fish a little applause from a quarter reluctant to applaud anyone, least of all a middle-of-the-road president.

Baker

As a Rhodes scholar, he knows enough history and political philosophy to understand the plight of the knee-jerk liberal, press or otherwise.

We are speaking of a person hardened to ridicule. Even his political label — "knee-jerk liberal" — invites the world to think him moronic, the kind of numskull whose ideas are never passed through his brain for close examination, but are produced by rubber hammers tapping his knee.

A person who endures incessant ridicule on behalf of his politics is likely to be ungenerous with his praise when granted some small boon by those who treat him as a fool.

I speak from experience here, for I was once a knee-jerk liberal myself, though I didn't realize it until Lyndon Johnson entered my life. This was not the Presidential-Colossus Johnson, but the Senatorial Texas Johnson, who was the very soul of safe and sound political responsibility.

William S. White, then The Times' influential Senate correspondent, defined Johnson's politics as "centrism" and accurately described Congress as a place ruled by "powerful centrist forces."

The lobbies, of course, also shared in the rule, but their interests didn't differ much from those of the "centrist forces." Even the labor lobby, very big at that time, shared the "centrist" enthusiasm for pursuing the cold war aggressively.

"Moderation" was the great political philosophy of the day, despised only by a handful on the Republican right who listened to Barry Goldwater and by assorted Democratic liberals to whom Johnson attached various belittling labels.

They were "the knee-jerks," or "the bleeding hearts," or "the red hots." The message was clear: To be a liberal was to be absurd.

Goldwater and his handful on the right were similarly isolated by labels like "right-wingers," with its ominous European sound, or dismissal in the plain American stand-up-comic style as "right-wing nuts."

President Eisenhower, the Republican Landslide Hero, had declared "Moderation!" the banner that would lead them all to victory. Even a right-winger would have to be a nut to challenge Eisenhower, wouldn't he?

So we had the rule of Eisenhower's "moderation" and Johnson's "centrism." In tandem, they amounted to a tacit coalition of Southern racism, Wall Street economics, big-labor conservatism and cold-war enthusiasm.

On the fringes dwelt the famous "extremists on both sides," the "knee-jerk" and "bleeding-heart" liberals, "red hots" and "right-wingers," often of the "nut" species.

Studying politics under Johnson, I saw how unreasonable, how impractical, in fact how nutty I had been to support so many ideas that were not moderate, not centrist. The world had to be as it was; those who wanted to make it different were — well — funny, foolish, not quite with it.

Martin Luther King and the rest of that vast black movement of the dispossessed who were being so inconsiderate of Kennedy's problems were the ultimate in "knee-jerk" and "bleeding-heart liberalism."

Pursuing such unreasonable, impractical goals against overwhelming hostility tends to shrivel a person's generosity of spirit toward those who want him to be a good fellow and not make life so hard for a well-meaning president, but just give him a bit of praise.

Goldwater's right-wingers also declined to praise the Republican "moderation" establishment, being too occupied — how funny! — taking over the party with their nutty ideas.

Maniacal motorists drive thrill into daily commutes

WASHINGTON--You see them coming several blocks back. Your rearview mirror reveals cars driven with a nervous, jerking, lunging, spastic intensity, clinging to the bumpers of the cars ahead, weaving across lanes, rushing toward the next red light. Toward, and often right through.

Will

The spreading lawlessness of drivers in Washington, and not only here, is more than a nuisance, although it is that: Traffic moves more slowly because prudent drivers hesitate to enter an intersection even after the light has turned green, so frequently are red lights disregarded. And manic drivers are more than amusing, although as fools usually do, such drivers have a comic dimension: Even the most aggressive driving can cut but about 10 minutes from a 10-mile commute. Have they thought of leaving home 10 minutes earlier? Or are 10 minutes more in bed really worth risking life, limb and driver's license?

Actually, lawless commuters face decreasing risks of arrest because police are increasingly preoccupied with the slow-motion riot that is life in the inner city. Thus do the lawless from suburbia benefit from the lawlessness of the urban criminal class. But let us not be judgmental.

Instead, let us be advanced thinkers who study the increasingly, shall we say, interesting driving habits as evidence of America's increasing "diversity," and as a flowering of new "values." Let us begin, anthropologically: Even if this new lawlessness is just fallen humanity misbehaving again, why now, and why this way? What has happened to other ways of venting pent-up aggressiveness, like fighting Redcoats, clearing forests or watching football?

Lunatic driving in the evening may--although I doubt it--express an intense longing for hearth and home. But aggressiveness in the morning is mystifying: To what work are they rushing headlong? In Washington, often to government jobs, which in many cases means they are rushing to the sluggish river of paper that someday will result in some decision to which American society will be magnificently impervious. Perhaps the numbing everydayness of many people's work, in the private sector, too, explains the rip-roaring behavior behind the wheel going to and from.

Recently Joseph Epstein, the essayist and professor (of English, at Northwestern), put to me a startlingly simple question: "Do you know anyone who makes anything?" Epstein had recently met a man who makes pajamas. Epstein was struck by the realization that it is rare for him to encounter anyone whose days are filled with making things--things you can heft, hold up to the light, take to the cash register, take home, put to practical use.

Around campus most of the people Epstein sees make seminars and lectures--true, the occasional article and book, too, but it's somehow not the same, not as real, as pajamas. In Washington we make hearings, laws, litigation, lunch appointments and journalism. All of it is, of course, terrifically important, but perhaps the evanescence of it produces demented drivers. Just a thought.

Driving probably will become even wilder now that Christmas (in P.G. Wodehouse's words) has us by the throat. Holidays and homicide go together like eggnog and nutmeg, so 'tis the season to study the wildness in the streets. I have not noticed--are we still allowed to notice?--what nowadays are called "gender differences." Men and women are equally represented among the demented drivers, which probably is heartening evidence of the emancipation of women. BMWs are disproportionately driven by red-light runners, but I make no judgments. (New York Times headline, Dec. 2, 1993: "Impatient Driver Shoots Motorist for Moving too Slowly in Bronx." The shooter was driving a BMW.)

No judgments, so I will not dwell on the possibility that lawless driving by commuters from suburbia is of a piece with that inner city behavior commonly called "crime in the streets."

LETTERS

Folks mistake firemen for city police officers

It is extremely kind of Shirley Trimble to recognize the two young men, Gilbert Carter and David Allen, for helping her mother. The letter "Policemen bolt their way into folk's hearts" of the Nov. 28, 1993 edition, Reporter-Telegram is much appreciated and I thank you Mrs. Trimble for taking the time to write it. It is true public servants do get bad press and are never recognized enough.

I only want to say give credit to the correct group of people. The two men that helped Mrs. Trimble's mother are firefighters, not policemen. Captain Carter and Driver Allen are valued members of the Midland Fire Department. Again thank you Shirley Trimble for your letter, I am the wife of a firefighter and know they need all the appreciation they can get.

Commissioners court should be scrutinized

As another round of elections approaches, I find it necessary to examine the actions of the present commissioners court. First of all, the Republican-dominated court would seem to exhibit conservative views in their allocation of our tax dollars to the various county departments. I find this farthest from the truth. It is my guess that when they refer to the bare-bones budget they are not acknowledging the vast fat deposits on the bones. I offer the following in defense of my statements:

A money-saving measure initiated by the commissioners court is the creation of facilities management. Presently the department commands a million-dollar plus budget, and the latest cost saving measure is that of an air-conditioning system that no one really understands how to operate that costs in the neighborhood of $250,000. Secondly, in order to maintain communication with the other departments, cellular phones were installed in county vehicles for use during peak hours (8 a.m. to 5 p.m.). But I distinctly remember an 800 system being used by the City of Midland for just that purpose, and the county may participate. Can you count the savings so far?

Secondly, it was my understanding when the county initiated the purchase of uniforms for all uniform personnel that the clothing allowance would be done away with. Now it seems that more departments have clothing allowances and yet they wear no uniforms. The county even pays for the dry cleaning of the uniforms so why do they continue to fund the clothing allowance? My position is if everybody does not get it then no one should! When was the last time your employer offered to pay for the clothing you wear to work?

Also, the county is funding the purchase of a substantial quantity of vehicles and equipment for the road department. . .Does this mean they are going to fix some county roads? That budget is also swelling.

'Singling out older drivers is no answer'

I would like to speak up for the elderly. When we read or hear of a pedestrian being injured or killed by a motorist it is a tragedy. We must make every effort to keep dangerous drivers off our roads. But singling out older drivers is not the answer. Improved testing of all drivers is.

The accident rate among older drivers is disproportionately low. Drivers over 55 represent nearly one quarter of the driving population, but one is involved in only 18 percent of all accidents.

American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) supports and advocates improved driver testing. While the tests currently employed by licensing agencies are inadequate, there are sensory, cognitive and other changes that accompany aging. But how quickly they occur and the degree to which they impact driving varies greatly among individuals.

We offer an older driver education course called 55 Alive/Mature Driving to any driver 50 years or older.

The course is available in all 50 states and the District of Columbia. More than 450,000 older drivers take the course each year.

Finally, there is a growing society of older adults who live in areas where there is little or no public transportation. Access, availability of and information about public transportation must be made available to drivers.

Why didn't driver who hit pet stop?

On Saturday evening, Nov. 27, our beloved family pet, a young black labrador, was hit by a car sometime around 7 p.m. on Belaire St., off Loop 250. It was a hit-and-run. Whoever it was didn't have the decency to stop, give possible aid, read her tag, and give us the chance to get her the emergency care that might have saved her life. The reason we think she might have still been alive is the fact that there were blood drops leading up the drive to the sidewalk where she finally collapsed.

Granted, the street is extremely dark and she was a black lab. For all we know she might have run out in front of the car. That doesn't change the fact that we will never know if we could have saved her. The person or persons who hit her took that away from us with their callous disregard.

The after-effects of this tragedy are still upon our family. My husband who was closest companions with the dog is hurting terribly. Our kids, ages 11 and 7, are depressed and can't eat. We are going through various stages of guilt because we didn't know she was out front, anger and frustration because we can't do anything about her, and depression because she is not with us anymore.

My heart cries out to the driver, why didn't you stop?

Red light-runners should be punished

Hurray for Robert Elliott's letter that appeared in the paper on Nov. 28.

It is astounding the number of red lights that are run in Midland! If the police department needs extra money for bullet proof vests or whatever, it seems to me the cash could be raised in short order if they would issue citations to red light runners and be allowed to keep all, or a portion of, the fine proceeds. I'm not sure what the fine for running a red light is, but at $50 per pop, there is no doubt that thousands upon thousands could easily be raised each week!

It used to be that everyone would gas it from about a half block away to "beat the yellow light." Now it seems that yellow lights are mostly ignored by too many people who figure it's okay to go ahead and blatantly run the red. I suppose they figure why not, since there seems to be little or no attempt to enforce the law against this illegal and potentially deadly act.

God help the poor soul who ventures innocently and blindly into an intersection on green without looking both ways for some speeding, red light-running maniac. Come on Midland police! What's it going to take to get your attention on this life-threatening situation?

Reader has message for 'It's a baby ya'll'

I have plenty of experience knowing below average income girls and boys who participate in sex at the end of a date. The only amount of money they have is for the movie, a six-pack and a back seat of the car or his or her apartment.

How many of you with the sign in your yard are willing to take this baby from this girl or boy that participates in sex regularly with just anyone who will take them to the show or buy a six-pack and play games or rent a tape for the evening? It's a day before payday and there are only a couple of throw-away diapers left. So what do they do? Let me tell you. The diaper is left on the child until after the check is cashed and they go out to eat, then cigarettes are bought, then diapers. If you think that is not true then you should get involved with one or two of these girls.

Along with your sign out front, would you please add: "I will take your child: I will raise it, I will pay the doctor bill, I will buy the diapers at approximately $15 per week, buy you prevention at approximately $15 per month and I will come over every morning or evening and personally see that you take the pill."

By the way, ya'll, do you know that food stamps and welfare do not supply any money for cleaning supplies, and Medicaid does not give any money for off-the-counter drugs, such as Deitin, cold medicine, or any of those things. If the girl is really trying, she is fighting a losing battle. Do you want these girls to go back to retired nurses performing abortions on their kitchen table? I hope not.

There's more to story about whooping crane

It is with great reluctance that I feel compelled to write this letter. The death of the whooping crane is a tremendous loss not only to the whooping crane population, but also to those of us who care deeply for the world we must all share. Trying to lay blame for that loss on those who worked so hard to save the crane in the supposed guise of teaching a lesson to the public in proper handling and transport technique is ridiculous and petty.

Dr. Mel Richardson has stated that with different handling and transport methods, the crane may have survived. I would like to state for the record that Dr. Richardson never saw the whooping crane. He was not present in Midland nor was he present when the crane arrived in San Antonio to see transport conditions nor during the attempts made in San Antonio to stabilize the crane before it died. The comments he has made were based on hearsay from second or third party sources or videotaped news releases without context or questioning why things may have been done a certain way. Much of what he has publicly labeled as mishandling and as possible contributions to the crane's death never occurred.

The crane's beak was never taped shut. The cause of death was due to respiratory collapse caused by injuries sustained when he hit something in flight. The sternum was also fractured by the impact. He was not shot. The whooping crane's condition started to deteriorate prior to the flight to San Antonio. He collapsed just prior to leaving Midland. The news shots that Dr. Richardson commented on as cuddling the bird to comfort the bird were in actuality the attending veterinarian and the rehabilitator trying desperately to keep the bird breathing and out of shock. He was not restricted in his breathing ability by either the holding or any form of taping the wings to the body.

Yes, there were mistakes made and there are always things to learn. A playpen was probably not the ideal method of containment, but it is one solution to keep a critical bird that's in shock with a fractured wing that was not standing as quiet as possible.

Rehabilitators of wildlife are not paid employees of state or federal wildlife agencies. They are permitted volunteers who provide an invaluable service that the state governments cannot provide on their own. The rehabilitators are known to the game wardens and field agents who know who is available for the type of help needed in each case. These people welcome any help available from experts in problem cases. I know that the rehabilitator in Midland would have welcomed suggestions. Maybe if Dr. Richardson had offered assistance to the rehabilitator while the crane was still alive instead of criticism after it died, the crane's condition may have stabilized. Maybe not.

The people involved in a crisis situation have to deal with that crisis as they deem best from their position of involvement and the information they have available at the time. These people are the ones on the hotseat with the courage to try and do their best, knowing that if they succeed, they will be heroes and that if they fail, blame will be laid by those that always know how to do it better. To those that have the courage, I hope you will keep working.

'Socialism, deceit' describe Democrats

Two words describe today's Democratic Party — socialism and deceit.

Bill Clinton promised over 10 times to cut taxes or at least impose no new taxes on the middle class and lots of spending cuts. What have we received? Increased taxes and a democratic-led defeat of the Penny-Kasich bill that would have cut spending by 1 percent. To use Bill and Hill's favorite term, I do believe their GREED is showing.

Next on their agenda is socialized health care. All we have to do is look at Medicare to see that government-run health care doesn't work. Original projections showed 1990 costs to be $9 billion, actual costs were 744 percent higher at $67 billion. Administrative costs of government welfare programs can eat up 72 percent of every tax dollar that's allocated.

The Fairness Doctrine will follow shortly, a nice effective way to eliminate any from speaking out against the government or the politically correct.

The United Nations-sponsored Children's Rights Act championed by Hillary will make us more accountable to government than to God for how we raise our children.

Thomas Jefferson, our country's champion of limiting government powers and protecting individual rights, stated it best in the Declaration of Independence, "...whenever any form of Government becomes destructive of these ends (individual rights), it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it. and institute new government..."

We have the power of the vote to remove these people from office and return our government to the people.

Do leaders want 'abortion capital'?

The article in the Dec. 1 Reporter-Telegram that covered the pro-life news conference held on Nov. 30 missed the point of the conference. To begin with, the headline stated it was a rally, a description never applied by the organizers.

The conference was intended to be an appeal to the leadership of Planned Parenthood to reconsider their plan to make Midland the abortion capital of the Permian Basin. An appeal also was made to the Midland City Council urging them to demonstrate some leadership by holding a public hearing and taking a stand on the subject.

Tuesday's conference was led by the chairman of the Ministerial Alliance and by the pastor of one of Midland's largest churches. In attendance were a number of past and present officeholders. It was not an insignificant group.

In my remarks I stated my belief that the local supporters of Planned Parenthood were good citizens who I believed would not ignore a plea from the community leaders, including the city government, not to divide our community. Instead of contacting the heretofore unidentified volunteer leadership of Planned Parenthood for comment, the Reporter-Telegram made the usual calls to paid staff and gave them more than equal coverage to promote the future of their jobs.

This is an issue that tears at the heart of Midland at a time when more than ever we need unity, not division. An effort should be made to determine if the leaders of Planned Parenthood by their actions, and the mayor and City Council by their inaction, truly want Midland to be the abortion capital of the Permian Basin. I don't believe that is what most of the people want and that is the debate we hoped to spark on Tuesday.

Socialists prepare to overtax retired

Socialists regard the retired as a drain on society, useless now that we don't work anymore. So it appears that they are going to try to tax us to death.

The Clinton tax gouges the senior citizens mercilessly with tax increases on Social Security, Medicare, Medicare fees, cuts in Medicare services, and I can't wait for the new health plan that cometh. Down in this pork barrel there is a "sneaky tax" in counting as "income" a number of phantom dollars called "imputed" rent — which means if you own and live in your own home, for tax purposes you treat it as if you were renting it out and getting income each month.

Folks, this is rotten to the core and so unfair.

I'm sure you remember the joy of your final house payment after paying 20 or 30 years. Then all you had to do now was just pay the city and county taxes each year plus house insurance and utilities.

I'm sure when they get the charts ready they will tell us what our homes will rent for. So unless a repeal is adopted, get ready to pay the "imputed rent tax" on our homes that we own and live in.

Have a good day!

Texas should divide if D.C. gets statehood

I refer to recent efforts to grant statehood to the District of Columbia. The Shadow Senator from D.C., the Rev. Jesse Jackson, is the champion of this cause and would, presumably, be the real senator if these efforts are successful.

The president has promised to "study" the idea and well he might — given the likelihood that this small enclave would add two more senators to his Democrat majority.

I do think the citizens of D.C. should be granted suffrage. Their tax contribution may be small relative to the financial support received — but it's still taxation without representation. We Americans never liked that much.

The best solution would be to give D.C. back to Maryland, from whence it came. Forgive me, Maryland, for suggesting that you take back this murder-capital mess, but you should.

It is more than a mischievous idea that I suggest we have a plan in place to provide eight (8) more U.S. senators from Texas — should it get serious about statehood for the District of Columbia.

Is such machinery possible? Maybe so. In 1845, the Republic of Texas reserved the right to divide and add four more states — for a total of five states. This was written clearly in the Articles of Annexation to the United States. The U.S. government accepted readily this clause (given the propensity of many Texians to view San Jacinto as a mandate to expand their Western border to the Pacific Ocean).

Do I want to see this breakup of the State of Texas? Of course not. But I wouldn't mind using it as a hedge to keep Democrats from gerrymandering the District of Columbia into two more senatorial seats.

We should, therefore, take steps to test the feasibility of exercising our right to divide. I am told there was a case in 1868, the U.S. vs. White, which brought the issue to the Supreme Court. White apparently lost, but that was 125 years ago. Maybe it's time to challenge that decision.

If feasibility is established, it would be time to study how to set up a Confederation of Texas States (or some name more politically correct). Then the challenge would be to design a central administration to run the confederation without bureaucratic inflation.

I would hope that D.C. statehood would be D.O.A. before we got to that stage. If not, Midland should be the capital of the State of West Texas.

Reader's views on: Lee cheerleaders

Lee cheerleaders guard school spirit

I would like to respond to Ms. Elizabeth Banister's letter published Sunday, Nov. 14.

First, regarding the "disgusting delinquents" who are cheerleaders at Lee High School: most are honor students, and each of them takes his or her job of guarding school spirit very seriously. They would never do anything to intentionally offend any of the fans, either Lee's or the opposing teams'. These kids are not delinquents, and as for disgusting, Ms. Banister should have seen the display of obscenities by the Permian fans sitting at the south end of the field, on the Lee side of the stadium. I realize that these "fans" are more than likely not true Permian supporters, or they would have season tickets and would have been on their own side of the stadium; but nonetheless they were much more disgusting than male cheerleaders with NO MO MOJO written on their jogging shorts. These shorts were not underwear, and gave no impression of being underwear. The skit was done in good humor and school spirit. If they had intended it to be offensive the signs would have been painted on underwear or bare bottoms and shown toward the Permian stands.

Second Ms. Banister seemed upset that these kids did not act like adults — right she is! They acted like exactly what they are: high school teen-age kids! Wonder of wonders, we still have some of them left! Let them be teen-agers and enjoy being such. At least they didn't go onto the other side of the field and tear up Permian's spirit symbols like Permian's band did. Personally, I thought our cheerleaders showed great restraint when they simply walked over to where the band was, picked up the cardboard coffin that had been ripped to shreds, and walked back to where they had put it in the first place. The whole NO MO MOJO skit has been taken out of context — it was absolutely harmless and very humorous. Why didn't Ms. Banister object when REBELS was spelled out on shorts last year?

Banister quite simply exercises her right

In regards to the rebuttal on the actions of the Lee cheerleaders:

First of all, I have absolutely no connection with Ms. Banister, the cheerleaders, nor anyone else involved, so I have no proverbial "ax to grind," but I am very interested in freedom of speech.

Whether half of the people in the stadium felt as Ms. Banister did or if she stood alone in her embarrassment and disgust at the actions of the cheerleaders, she had every right to be able to express her opinion. Fortunately, we live under the Constitution where a lone individual can still do this. Also since this action was done in front of thousands of people it automatically became fodder for public praise or criticism.

We have come to a place in our society where we are demanding public apologies, bringing lawsuits, and passing laws against people who have simply said something someone doesn't agree with. Please remember everytime we demand the bridle be tightened around the tongue of all the Ms. Banisters of the world, whether it be by verbal intimidation or whatever, we are also having it tightened around our own tongue.

Freedom of speech, even if it doesn't agree with our own opinions, is one of the greatest gifts a people can have.

After all, who among us has wisdom enough to determine who has the privilege of voicing their opinions and who will be denied this right? Also who is wise enough to say what opinion is worthy of expression?

I, for one, am not that wise and quite frankly, no one else is either.

May freedom of speech never be taken from us.

May all the "Ms. Banisters" of this world keep on keeping on. Expressing their opinions, that is.

Stadiums make subtle changes for World Cup

By Barry Wilner
AP Sports Writer

Grass at the Meadowlands? Grass in the Silverdome? What's going on here?

The World Cup, that's what. And when it arrives next June in the United States for the first time, it will be staged on nothing but the real stuff.

FIFA, the world governing body for soccer, insists that all World Cup games be played on grass. It also made several other demands that have changed the look of most of the nine stadiums to be used for the world's most popular sporting event.

Not that American organizers balked at the criteria FIFA established. Actually, the World Cup USA people came up with some suggestions of their own — most notably playing in a dome — that required further changes.

"What they have done in Michigan is a miracle," German coach Berti Vogts said after the grass under glass made its debut last summer during the U.S. Cup.

German star Juergen Klinsmann added, "I've never played on a field in such perfect condition."

While the Rose Bowl will hold the finals and Soldier Field has the opener, the centerpiece of the tournament will be the Pontiac Silverdome.

At first, the idea of playing indoors must have struck FIFA as a strange American joke. Now, FIFA president Joao Havelange is raving about the idea.

The first soccer at the Silverdome was played by the NASL's Detroit Express from 1978-80. The team averaged about 13,000 fans a game, with a top crowd of 32,319 for a playoff game.

But that was on carpet, which many NASL teams used. The artificial stuff is unwelcome by FIFA.

Enter RapidTurf, basically a grass grown on plastic sheets — at a hefty cost of $1 per square foot. It grows two to three times faster than regular grass, using a mixture of organic wastes, including corn cobs, nut shells and processed sewage.

"The misconception is grass needs soil," says Mark Egan, one of the developers of RapidTurf. "Grass does not just grow in soil. Anything that transmits moisture and nutrients would be conducive for plant growing."

The U.S. team will play its first World Cup game in the Silverdome, where seating capacity will be lowered to about 76,000, mostly because the wider field for soccer will require team benches to be in the stands.

Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J., the site of sellout crowds during the days of the star-stocked Cosmos in the 1970s, balked at being host to World Cup games. But U.S. organizers, prompted by FIFA's disappointment that the Meadowlands might not be included, convinced the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority to participate.

Starting no later than April 1, a grass field will be installed over the existing artificial surface. A three-layer membrane-type surface that allows drainage of water not soil will be laid on top of the artificial surface. Porous plywood will be placed on top of that, and then comes 8-12 inches of soil.

Sod will be placed on top; it will be Bermuda grass overseeded with rye. Bermuda is the same surface as at the Rose Bowl.

"Why not have the same pitch (field) as what they'd have in the Rose Bowl?" said Charlie Stillitano, venue director for World Cup USA. "We don't want anyone to go out there and be at a disadvantage playing on a different type of pitch."

The field should be set up by early May and playable by May 15, more than a month before the first game. The surface will be removed the day after the final World Cup game at Giants Stadium.

The process will cost between $1.5 million and $2 million, and will be paid for by the local World Cup committee.

The Rose Bowl, where three crowds of more than 100,000 attended soccer during the 1984 Olympics, has undergone an $11.5 million renovation at the city of Pasadena's expense. Revenue from the lease of 38 luxury suites and special events like the Super Bowl and World Cup will pay off the bonds.

Seating capacity will be reduced by as much as 10,000 to meet field specifications; the field will be expanded to 75 yards wide by removing about 1,300 seats in the stadium's corners.

As part of the renovation, a new press box was built and luxury suites were upgraded. The three-story press box got its first test during the 1993 Rose Bowl game and it can accommodate 900 to 1,000 people.

Leaseholders on the luxury suites can't use them at the World Cup. Instead, they're supposed to be able to buy an equal number of seats in the regular stands.

In Dallas, the city replaced the Cotton Bowl's artificial turf with grass on April 12, part of $14 million in renovations. The grass will remain after the tournament; the Cotton Bowl has a New Year's Day bowl game and Texas-Oklahoma each year.

The refurbishment included an enlarged press box; new restrooms; new concessions; improved access with elevators and stairways, and new provisions for the disabled; new water and sewer lines; and new electrical and telephone service.

Although not much needed to be done at Stanford Stadium, the remodeling cost between $4 million and $5 million. All the stadium's wooden seats have been replaced with metal ones. Currently under way is a renovation and expansion of the locker rooms, and the stadium will be circled by a new security fence. A temporary DiamondVision screen will be added.

"Stanford will never look sharper than it will next year," said Peter Bridgwater, the venue executive director.

A $14.1 million facelift of Soldier Field, paid for by the city of Chicago, will include replacing chunks of cement that have fallen from the aging facade and upgrading concessions and restrooms.

Said Jim Froslid, press officer for the World Cup venue, "It certainly was prompted by the World Cup coming here, but the Bears will reap the benefits for years to come."

One potential problem unique to Soldier Field concerns parking.

At previous international soccer games, parking there has been horrendous. Police officers sometimes have directed traffic from one parking lot to another, forcing people to drive around the stadium in bumper-to-bumper traffic only to find all lots full.

Froslid said officials were considering selling parking passes and allowing only people holding those passes to park near the stadium.

The biggest problem, said John Koskinen, chairman of the Washington host committee, is accommodating the 1,000 print and broadcast media personnel and technical facilities for the matches. The most media the 56,000-seat stadium has handled for football is 650 for a Monday night game between the Redskins and Cowboys this September.

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — The Lillehammer Olympic Organizing Committee will distribute free condoms to all athletes, coaches, news media, VIPs and other accredited personnel as part of an anti-AIDS campaign.

"We thought it was important to emphasize the health aspect," said LOOC official Oystein Krugsrud. He said the campaign also includes information about AIDS and tips for preventing the spread of HIV, the virus that causes AIDS.

The liberated Norwegians had considered marketing condoms as an official Olympic product, wrapped in special packages adorned with the Olympic rings.

"We decided against it," said Krugsrud.

GAMES FOR CASH: Lillehammer is threatening to drop the slogan "Games for Life" — which was picked in a national competition — and select another one.

The problem is money.

LOOC offered $3,400 for the winning suggestion. But the winner wants $67,500 for the rights to his idea, said Torstein Rudi of the organizing committee.

The organizers upped their offer, but Bjorn Bjornson — the contest winner — told the Oslo newspaper Dagbladet on Wednesday that "the offer was so low I didn't hear it."

Rudi said that if Bjornsen doesn't accept the offer "we won't use the slogan."

If the slogan "Games for Life" sounds familiar, it's probably because the 1992 Barcelona Olympics' slogan was "Friends for Life."

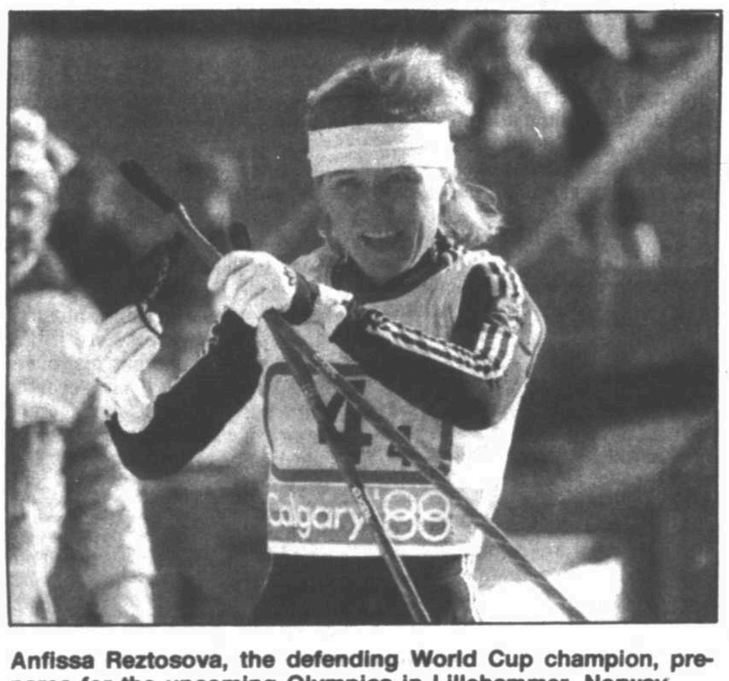

SLEEPY VOLUNTEERS: When Olympic organizers asked 2,300 volunteers to show up early Sunday to test the stadium for the opening ceremonies, almost half rolled over and went back to sleep rather than turn out in the cold.

About 1,200 of the volunteers actually showed up for the test, in which they played the role of athletes marching into the Olympic arena above Lillehammer.

LOOC said it couldn't exclude the possibility that missing volunteers, who were staying at the athletes' village as part of another test, had stayed out on the town late Saturday.

News reports said many had just hit the sack when wake-up calls started at 5:15 a.m.

TOO MUCH SNOW: Lillehammer organizers have worried for years that there wouldn't be enough snow at the 1994 Winter Games, since four of the past five winters have been alarmingly warm and dry.

Anfissa Reztosova, the defending World Cup champion, prepares for the upcoming Olympics in Lillehammer, Norway.

But it looks like Lillehammer crews may have to face the challenge of too much snow.

LOOC started making artificial snow at the Kvitfjell and Hafjell Alpine ski areas last month.

OILERS: Houston faces former coach

From 1C

he just wishes Atlanta's recovery could be as complete as the Oilers.

"The Oilers were able to come back and get in first place," Glanville said. "We were so far down and had so many chances but we're still a lot of games out. We played good at Detroit and Pittsburgh beat us good but other than that, we had a shot at every game."

A part of Atlanta's recovery can be pinned on the return of cornerback Deion Sanders. The Falcons are 5-1 since Sanders returned from the Atlanta Braves Oct. 14.

Without Sanders, Atlanta was 0-5 and the defense had only four takeaways, five sacks and two interceptions. With Sanders' on the field, the Falcons have 11 takeaways, 15 sacks and eight interceptions.

"They say one player doesn't make a difference but that's not true for the Falcons," Oilers wide receiver Ernest Givins said. "When Deion is around, everybody expects something big to happen and they aren't going to let too many people down."

Glanville also had received good performances from quarterback Bobby Hebert and running back Erric Pegram during the Falcons' rebound.

Hebert, a New Orleans reject, has thrown 11 touchdown passes in the past five games and his 17 for the season rank No. 2 in the NFC.

Pegram, who got his chance after Eric Dickerson's early season retirement, has rushed 867 yards this season, third in the NFL.

"As a rookie, I told the owner he should be another Tony Dorsett," Glanville said of Pegram. "He was a dancer and a pirouette, spin around guy. In this league if you don't go north-south you get negative yards.

"It took us awhile to get him out of that, but he has unbelievable toughness. Nobody is tougher than he is at carrying the football."

Pardee has benefited from the emergence of running back Gary Brown. Three weeks ago, he was just a name of the roster behind Pro Bowl starter Lorenzo White.

But Brown has rushed for 166, 194 and 79 yards in the first three starts of his career and sets up an interesting dilemma for Pardee when White recovers from hamstring injuries in both legs.

Brown's 5.8 yards per carry leads the NFL among running backs and he has leaped to No. 8 in AFC rushing with 549 yards on 95 carries.

"Gary Brown has to be in the game," Pardee said. "When Lo (Lorenzo) comes back, we'll just have to find a way to get them both in the game."

The return of Pro Bowl guard Mike Munchak set off a chain reaction that spurred the Oilers' comeback. Munchak solidified the line.

MUSTANGS: Andrews' season ends

From 1C

the score 7-7. The Mustangs looked out from a third-and-25 hole at their own 27. Andrew's junior fullback took a draw up the middle and ran into the open and past a few Yellow Jacket defenders. But as he neared the end zone Stephenville free safety Jason Bragg lunged and caught him on the two. The Mustangs later missed a field goal try and never got close to scoring again.

"I was on the other side and I saw it break and I took off running," Bragg said. "I saw his legs and dove."

Lawrence, who had 258 yards in last week's 24-17 region win over Brownwood, carried the ball 13 more times in the game for only 13 yards. His long run accounted for much of Andrews' 182-yard offensive total.

"I was looking for the other corner because they had told us their corners were fast," Lawrence said. "Just when I was looking he came up (and made the tackle). I think that could have changed the game. I feel pretty bad because I could've dove or something if I had seen him."

But Lawrence didn't cost the Mustangs the game. He gave them their best chance to win. A chance they didn't take advantage of.

The Yellow Jackets' passing game and their college prospect quarterback Branndon Stewart had off days, which, as much as anything, kept the Mustangs in the game. Stewart missed open receivers that could have scored or had big gains. And when he did hit his catchers, they dropped the ball on at least six occasions.

"I wasn't effective as I wanted to be," said Stewart, who completed only four of 17 passes. "I threw behind a little bit and overthrew when I should have zipped it in there."

Andrews scored first, its only touchdown of the game. The Mustangs drove 57 yards with quarterback Bryan Lepard throwing 16 yards to Chris Fisher for a first down and going 23 yards to Fisher for the score with 1:28 to go in the fisrt quarter.

The Yellow Jackets tied it up the next time they got the ball with Heath Haynes going 47 yards with a swing pass on the drive's big play.

Lawrence's run set Andrews up at the two with first and goal. But an illegal procedure penalty put the Mustangs back at the seven and Brad Couch sacked Lepard back to the nine on third down. Scott Peel was low on his 26-yard field goal try.

"I think when the defense stopped them when Lawrence made that long run, that was the turning point," Yellow Jacket coach Art Briles said.

While Stephenville's passing game struggled, its defense and Stewart's running gave it the win. Andrews had 173 total yards at half time and finished the game with 182. It didn't make a first down or complete a pass in the second half.

"I'm not saying I'm all that great a running back," Lawrence said, "but all season long I've been able to run and they just took me out of the picture."

"They just physically whipped us up front," Andrews coach W.T. Stapler said. "That's their strength."

Said Stewart, "That's the best defense I've seen them play all year. It's always hard to stop a running team and they dominated."

The Yellow Jacket quarterback rushed for 142 yards and scored the clinching touchdown on a 7-yard run in the final quarter.

The game had two side lights. Briles coached under Stapler in the mid 80's and Stapler announced his resignation from Andrews last summer.

"I hate it (putting Stapler out of the playoffs). I think it really takes an edge off the game ... but I have to put my team in front of my feelings," Briles said.

Stapler hinted at his return to Andrews.

"I don't know, maybe it's the kind of year that I should't get out," he said.

Cowboys move into semifinals

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — Hardin-Simmons took advantage of five turnovers to beat Mary 30-20 Saturday in the quarterfinals of the NAIA Division II playoffs.

Todd Sheldon passed for more yards (268) than Hardin-Simmons' Kevin Beam (200), but Sheldon's four interceptions proved to be the difference.

Hardin-Simmons (10-2) will travel to Westminster, Pa. (9-2) for a semifinal game next Saturday. 11. Westminster beat Findlay of Ohio 24-0 Saturday.

The Cowboys went up 7-0 when Collin McCormick picked up teammate Matt Carroll's fumble in the end zone.

Linebacker Mike Cagle picked off a Sheldon pass at the Hardin-Simmons goal line on Mary's first possession. It was the first of two Sheldon passes intercepted at the Cowboys' goal line.

The Marauders (8-3) capitalized on a turnover for its first touchdown. Linebacker John Belew intercepted Beam's throw at the Mary 38 and brought it back to the Hardin-Simmons 5. Two plays later Clay Wagner scored on a 1-yard run to tie the game 7-7.

An interception set up John Jones' 3-yard touchdown catch in the third quarter to put Hardin-Simmons ahead 16-7.

Matt Carroll gained 140 yards rushing for the Cowboys.

Houston facility will give Texans big time racing

By Gary West
N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — Given the litigation, the politics, the deals, the financial difficulties and the general welter of confusion into which the Texas racing industry has sunk, for most Texans a major-league racetrack exists only in dreamland, somewhere between the Land of Oz and Cimmeria.

That's especially true in North Texas, but in Houston the dream has been translated into something real, into steel and concrete, and soon into quality horses racing determinedly for lucrative purses.

It's going to happen, after all; major-league horse racing in Texas is going to happen.

Even skeptics can't dispute the tangible evidence in the northwest corner of the city, just off the Sam Houston Parkway, where construction crews have been working 12 to 14 hours a day, six days a week since June, to complete the state's first major modern racetrack.

A one-mile racing surface is there, although without rails. Sam Houston Race Park's surface is the creation of Dennis Moore, track superintendent at Hollywood Park in California and Remington Park in Oklahoma. The main parking lot, which will accommodate 5,500 cars, has been paved. A few barns, or rather the framework of what will be barns, indicates the future stable area.

And a nexus of steel girders has risen out of the ground, mocking the process that almost made the whole enterprise improbable, or dreamy.

"Every phase of construction is either on schedule or ahead of schedule," said James Murphy, Sam Houston general manager and former president of Atlantic City (N.J.) Race Course. "We were very fortunate that we had little rain over the summer."

Visitors taking a tour of the nascent, $84-million facility must wear hard hats. And if they wander beneath a diligent ironworker or in the way of an electrician, they're politely shunted aside, for nothing, not even curious VIPs, is allowed to impede the progress, Murphy said.

Within 30 minutes of just about anywhere in the metropolitan area, Sam Houston is to have a 190,000-square-foot, fully enclosed and air-conditioned grandstand, with seating for about 10,000 and a total capacity, including the infield playground-picnic area, for about 30,000. Throughout the grandstand will be work areas for studious handicappers, large information boards and 900 video monitors. The grandstand overlooks the paddock, with a view of the horses possible from all three levels.

"We've done everything to make the people aware of the horses," Murphy said. "We want the patrons to be close to the horses."

And next to the grandstand will be a 40,000 square-foot pavilion with a racing video center, an ideal area for simulcasting.

It is a track that is being built with a long-range plan, Murphy said, not just to accommodate a huge crowd on its busiest day. And when it's completed, the track will be a monument to perseverance and to the long-held vision of Texas racing, for indeed its progress, given its ominous start, has been remarkable.

Sam Houston was the first Class 1 racetrack licensed in the state, but until this year it looked as if it would be the last to open, if it ever would. The ownership group, which included former Thoroughbred Racing Association president Robert Levy, failed to develop the private financing necessary for construction.

Then it tried to create a nonprofit corporation to issue $198 million in revenue bonds. But that plan failed.

In May, former Gov. John Connally, a director of the Houston-based conglomerate MAXXAM, announced plans to arrange for financing. MAXXAM and its chairman, Charles Hurwitz, in effect bought out John McMullen, the unpopular former owner of the Astros who was a principal owner of Sam Houston.

Connally died shortly after he announced MAXXAM's involvement, but Hurwitz himself has assumed an active role in the track's development.

"(Hurwitz) calls me every day," Murphy said, "not to ask about our progress, but to ask if there's anything he can do. MAXXAM has been a big help."

The response to Sam Houston has been encouraging. ... actually, it has been overwhelming. The 19 luxury suites all have been leased; the 61 boxes all purchased.

ELEGANCE BY DESIGN

Design by Mark Stroker

Text by Kes Gilhome

It is apparent as soon as one walks into this large three bedroom house just how interesting and unique it is.

Located on a pretty corner lot which overlooks Cowden Park in Old Midland, this home boasts many original features which will be appreciated by those who like elegance in design.

However, it is not just the house which is unique: the rear of the house leads onto a yard which contains two patios and is surrounded by an ivy covered wall for privacy.

The use of varying floor and ceiling heights in the open plan formal and family areas helps to differentiate room usage whilst providing a sense of separation.

This technique is particularly successful with the formal dining and family rooms. These two rooms share a vary unusual brick through-fireplace which has built in storage for TV sets and other items.

That there should be storage space in the fireplace will come as no surprise when one sees just how many cupboards and built-in storage areas there are in this house.

It is quite usual to have large closets in a house, but the storage space in this unique home is extraordinary.

There is a chance to view this wonderful house between 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. this afternoon. Stop by at 2800 Princeton and let Nell Scott of Langston Realtors show you around this lovely house. If you can't make it, call her at 682-9495 to arrange an appointment at a future date.

The open flow design lends itself to both elegant entertaining as well as family life, but function has not been sacrificed. Italian tiled floors abound, saving wear and tear on carpeting, whilst providing a warmth to the home.

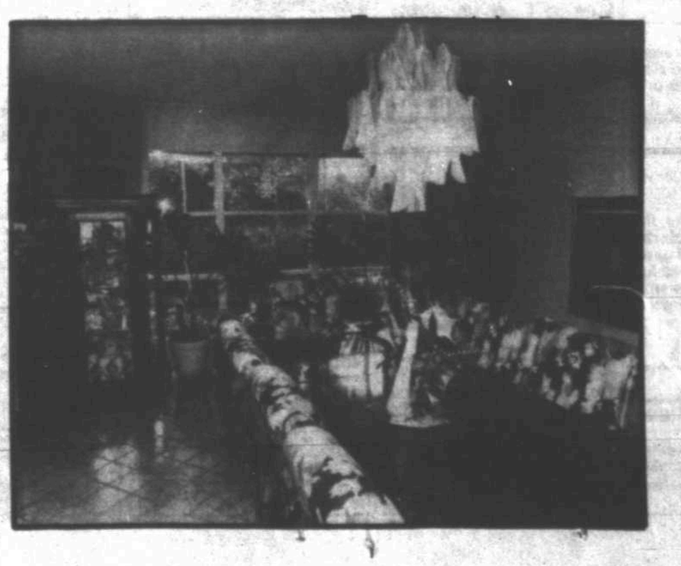

Using different types of tiles in different rooms adds variety to the feel of the house. This in turn helps the house to 'flow'.

The use of warm tones, brick and wood give this house a comfortable, cosy feel. This is especially noticeable in the study/patio which looks out over the garden. It is a pleasant retreat, ideal for use a home office or a private place in which to relax.

Langston Realtors Talks About . . .

A Salute to Charlie Wallace

Joanne Langston
Langston Realtors

Two days before Thanksgiving one of Midland's true pioneers in real estate sales and development, Charles Wallace, died. Harvey and I were not here to say "good-bye," so, if you will permit, we'll take this opportunity to do so.

"So long, Charlie, thanks for making Midland a little prettier city and for bringing honor and prestige to our profession of real estate.

"In 1966 when Harvey left Permian Abstract to become a partner in a real estate company, you were already one of the leaders in the field. Several months later, when Harvey established his own firm, Harvey Langston Realtors, and I joined him in the business, you were a resp[ected competitor and a great role model for us both. You were definately a class act, advertising over $1,000,000 in sales annually, and marketing properties $29,000 and over." In 1966 $29,000 bought an executive home: a brick 3 bedroom, 2 bath house with a fireplace, central air conditioning, (even if it might be an evaporative or swamp cooler), concrete block fence, 2 car garage and 2500 square feet. And it required many $29,000 sales to sell voer a million a year!

"You also believed that a Realtor made his living in the community, therefore gave back to the community, a lesson we've taken to heart. You served on the Chamber of Commerce Board, as president of the Midland Board of realtors, and on many other organization and club boards."

"Probably one of your most remembered accomplishments was introducing condominium/townhome living to Midland through the development of the prestigious Oaklawn Park Condominiums and their satellite, Highland park Townhomes. This new concept was hard to sell at first - who on earth would want to pay all that money for a house without a backyard and, for heaven's sakes, with a common wall! But Midlanders, especially those whose children were grown and gone, soon discovered that townhouse living was a great way to go in windy, arid West Texas and your patio homes were cloned all over town by other builders striving to emulate your success. Charlie, you were among a select group of Midland pioneers who, each in his own field and way, had a beautiful vision for our city, the courage to develop it and the grace to share it. Thanks for coming our way."

Joanne and Harvey

Real Estate Facts

How do agents do that?

Vicky Garrett
Chaparral Realtors

Planning to look at homes next weekend? Where will you begin? If you're going to buy a home soon, how can you locate the perfect place without conducting an endless search? Talk to a real estate agent!

Real estate agents have access to virtually all properties currently for sale. They can show you a wide selection of homes which suit your lifestyle and tastes. Best of all, you won't have to spend time looking at properties which aren't right for you.

How do agents do that? They have a two-step process which brings you fact-to-face with the home of your dreams.

First, they ask questions. Be prepared to tell the agent which locations are most acceptable to you. Price and features are vital to the search also. When asked, share your financial position to help establish a price range and suitable financing. Have a list of features and amenities you want in your home.

Once the agent understands your objectives, the second step in the process begins. Applying the parameters you have set, the agent will conduct a search of all available properties - locating only those which fall within your guidelines. Each home may be previewed by the agent to be certain its condition is reflected in the asking price.

This step can be very time consuming - for the agent. It has been said that an agent will do two hours research for every home you see. If you look at five homes, it is likely the agent has invested ten hours of intensive research.

Real estate agents have a cooperative network which allows them to show all listed homes. The time they spend searching, then separating and eliminating unsuitable properties, can save you untold days or even weeks of your valuable time.

Next time you buy a home, contact an agent first. Let the agent locate and show you the very best homes for the most pleasurable home purchase ever.

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for ★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?
Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?
Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?
An initial $100 refundable deposit is required.

PERMIAN BASIN OIL REPORT

SUNDAY, December 5, 1993 — SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

CRUDE CARDS

■ Send a holiday greeting to friends and customers on December 19 in the Oil Report.

BRIEFING

A driller 'waters down' while taking a break in the rig's dog house.

More drilling

Drilling activity rebounded during a Thanksgiving-shortened week ended November 24, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

The company reported that the Permian Basin rig count rose six to 136 during the week, above the year-ago level of 129.

Nationwide, the rig count rose 14 to 871, but remains below last year's count of 899.

Rig averages

The count of active rotary drilling rigs in the U.S. for November 857. The average for 1992 was 719, and the all-time high of 4,530 announced 12/28/81. Record low 596 announced 6/12/92. (Baker Hughes Inc., Houston).

Fracture class

A class on "Practical Fracture Treatment Design Using a 3-D Simulator" is being offered December 15-7 from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. The class will be held in the IBM Executive Training Room on the fourth floor of the ClayDesta Bank building.

The class will cover basic principles of fracture treatment design and modeling and optimizing a fracture treatment using Meyer & Associates MFRAC-II 3-D simulator. Basic log evaluation methods are covered to obtain relevatn formation and bounding rock properties for input parameters.

The course will include a day of training on the simulator and examples will be given from the San Andres, Spraberry and Delaware formations.

Cost is $395 and registration is available by calling 520-1510.

Diving prices

OPEC's decision not to cut production sent crude prices nosediving to three-year lows when futures traders returned from the Thanksgiving holiday.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, prices fell $1.07 to $15.31 at the beginning of the week and the posted price fell to $13.75 a barrel, levels not seen since before Iraq invaded Kuwait in the summer of 1990.

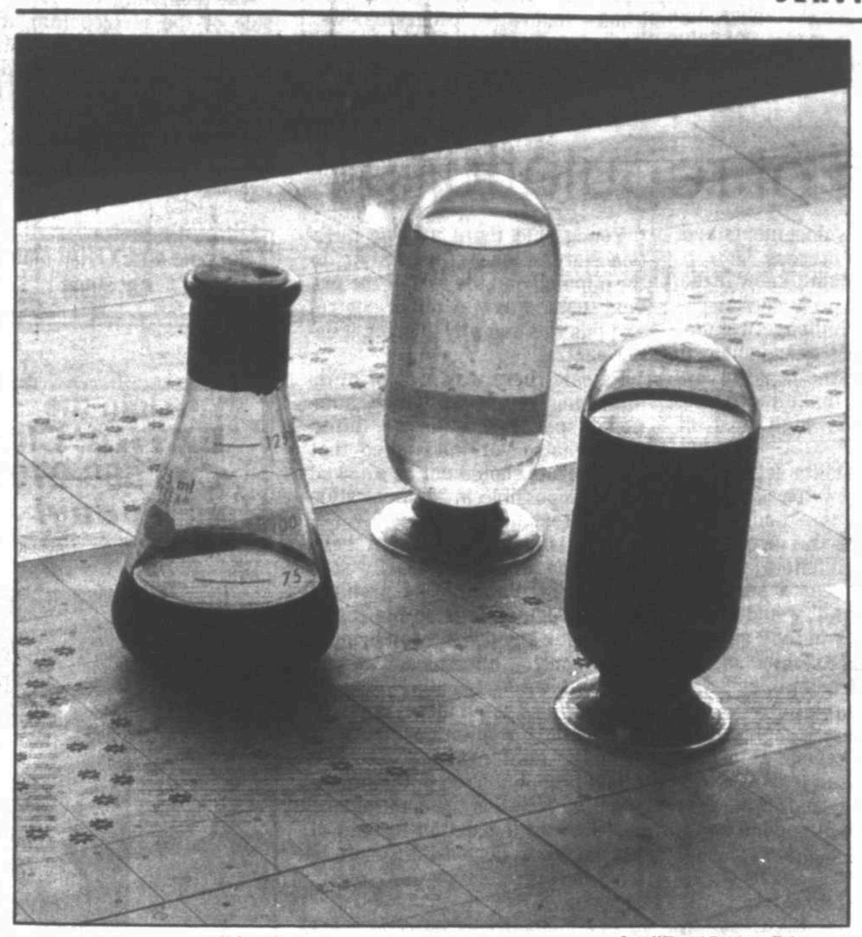

Candidate talks prices

Scott Campbell, Republican candidate for the 21st District seat in Congress, announced that he has a plan to help stabilize rapidly falling oil prices.

Campbell said the huge drop in oil prices that occurred during the Thanksgiving weekend is putting the industry and the area at grave risk.

"We must do something now to stabilize the price of crude, encourage domestic production and avoid dependence on foreign oil," he stated. "I propose that we provide regulatory and environmental relief and provide tax incentives for companies to drill new wells and work over others."

Campbell went on to say that he was looking at other potential solutions, including price floors and limits on legal damage awards.

New bills could slow excessive oil regulations

■ Legislation would require cost-benefit analysis of regulations.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

A survey of Permian Basin oil operators earlier this year revealed that a vast majority oil and gas producers feared growing and costly legislation even more than falling oil prices. But, new federal legislation, being introduced by Rep. Lamar Smith (R-Tx) could help allay those fears.

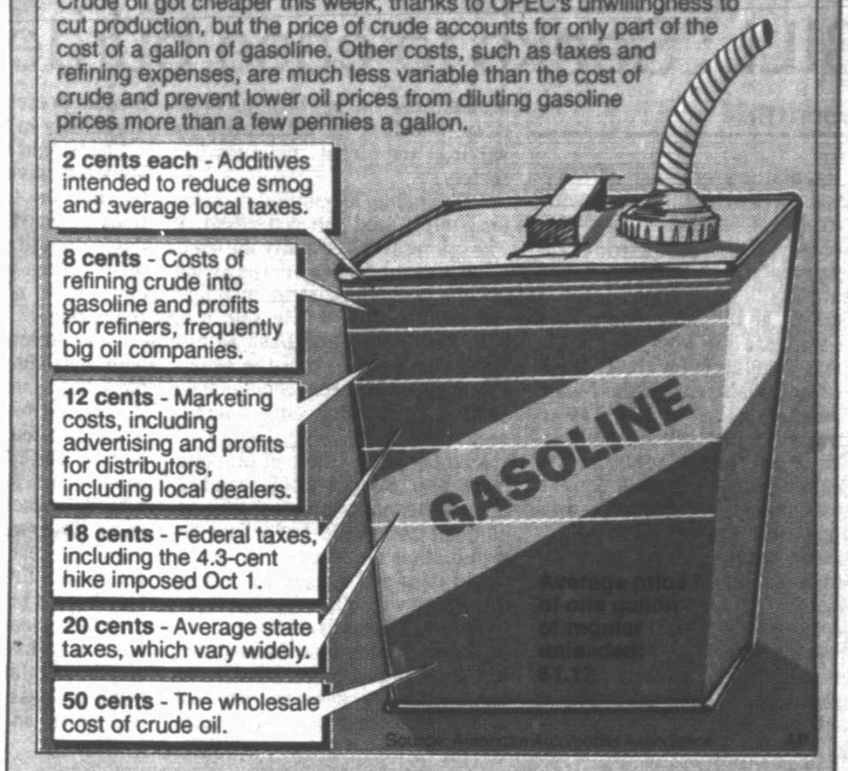

Experts say the oil industry and American business in general is being slowly choked to death by excessive regulation. Professor Thomas Hopkins of the Rochester Institute of Technology has estimated that federal regulations directly cost the U.S. economy $580 billion per year. Also added to that is another $500 billion a year caused by federal mandates on state and local governments.

Because of this high cost of regulation, Rep. Lamar Smith, representing Midland's 21st Congressional District, has introduced legislation to head off excessive regulation. Smith says that while the series of bills designed to slow down the growth of runaway regulation.

In the Tank

Crude oil got cheaper this week, thanks to OPEC's unwillingness to cut production, but the price of crude accounts for only part of the cost of a gallon of gasoline. Other costs, such as taxes and refining expenses, are much less variable than the cost of crude and prevent lower oil prices from diluting gasoline prices more than a few pennies a gallon.

Not everyone cries over low oil prices

■ Many outside oilpatch will benefit from lower oil prices

NEW YORK (AP) — While the oil industry decries low oil prices, others from motorists to homeowners to business people and the bond market are not so sorry to see lower prices.

Producers will suffer from weak cash flow, and oil industry jobs will be on the line. But, consumers are expected to benefit almost immediately from OPEC's decision last week to not cut oil production.

If the lower prices stick, consumers may see cheaper gasoline and heating oil in the next few weeks, say analysts. Eventually, cheaper oil prices can reverberate throughout the economy, dampening expectations of higher inflation and lowering everything from mortgage rates to the cost of airline tickets.

But analysts cautioned against expecting deep cuts in gasoline prices because much of the cost of a gallon of gasoline, as seen by the accompanying graphic are fixed.

"The real key is whether the decline is transitory or more permanent in nature," said Lawrence Goldstein, president of the industry-supported Petroleum Industry Research Foundation. "For the moment, prices do look to be fundamentally weak."

Many factors, however, can push them higher. Temperatures in the northern United States, the length of the Russian winter and Iraqi negotiations with the United Nations are just some of the variables involved.

Still, several analysts said consumers were likely to see savings.

"There's no question the consumer is going to benefit from this, at least in the short term," said George J. Gaspar, oil analyst at the Milwaukee investment firm Robert W. Baird & Co. Inc.

Stripper well group calls for oil floor price

■ Letter urges emergency action to remedy oil price drop

Staff Report

On the heels of falling oil prices, The National Stripper Well Association has asked President Clinton to establish an emergency floor price to protect the nation's domestic petroleum industry.

The request follows OPEC's unsuccessful efforts this week to cut production levels in order to boost world prices.

"Posted prices have fallen to $13.00 a barrel," said National Stripper Well Association President Virginia Lazenby. "If we allow prices to fall unabated, we will relive the crash of 1986 all over again." She said the 1986 price crash saw posted prices sink to $8 a barrel in some areas, putting hundreds of thousands of people out of work and accelerating a serious decline in domestic production.

In her letter to President Clinton, Lazenby states: "Many thousands of producers have been barely hanging on for months; this latest price drop could deal many small producers a fatal blow." Lazenby says that a price crash today could be even more damaging to the domestic industry that it was in 1986 because "marginal producers have been unable to raise capital to replace reserves so their oil sales have decline while their costs have risen, especially in the area of environmental compliance."

Lazenby warns that "further price declines at this time will seriously and permanently cripple the domestic petroleum industry, putting at risk more than 100,000 jobs and increasing the annual trade deficit by seven to 10 billion dollars annually. Domestic production, already at a thirty-five year low, will sink to lower levels and oil imports, already at fifty percent, will accelerate at an alarming rate. Our remaining domestic industry is our last line of defense against total oil import dependence."

"At a time when we are providing more than two billion dollars in U.S. aid to the Russian oil industry, can we afford to ignore our own industry here at home? Mr. President, we cannot," writes Lazenby.

Rep. Lamar Smith (R-Tx) also urged the president to take swift action to address the dire situation confronting America's independent oil and gas producing community.

JOHN PAUL PITTS

Oops, there go crude prices again!

Pitts

When the posted price of WTI dropped to $13.75 this week, it left producers in the Permian Basin as cold as a Panhandle cowboy facing down a blue northern with nothing but a barbed wire fence for protection.

One can only hope this intolerable price situation is temporary, because if it lingers long, it is bound to create a chill that will drop activity levels in the Permian Basin by several degrees.

A posted price of $13.75 simply will not cut it, and will result in serious reverses for some. Oil prices in the range of $10 to $13 could not sustain vitality in 1986, and they won't be able to do it in 1993. At those prices tens of thousands of marginal wells and a hundred thousand jobs are at stake in the oil industry.

The cut-off price seems to be $15. Nearly all operators can survive with a posted price of $15, some can move forward with that price and a few can even prosper.

It is a price to which many have already resigned themselves. As one producer commented recently: "I think we need to get used to $15 oil prices and gas prices near $3 for much of the rest of this decade."

Since most capital projects, acquisitions, exploration and drilling programs are already predicated on bottom-side oil prices of $15 per barrel, most are already prepared to deal with a $15 posted price. But hardly anyone is prepared to deal with $13 oil.

If oil prices linger in that range, they will indeed have a chilling effect on industry spending and personal spending.

Production in the Permian Basin stands at about 750,000 barrels per day and a price drop of $1 means a loss of revenue to the Basin of $750,000 per day. However, in the last four weeks the posted price of oil has dropped from $16 to $13.75, and that means daily oil revenues are about $1.7 million less today than they were a month ago.

Three months of such losses of revenue would equal is enough to build a major enhanced oil recovery project. A year of such low prices would equal enough lost revenue to build four Salt Creek CO_2 units.

In terms of personal spending, if you divide the population of the Permian Basin, about 350,000, into $1.7 million that translates to about $5 per day less in spending power for every man, woman and child in the Permian Basin.

This, of course, is by no means a true and accurate indicator of local spending impact, because a lion's share of Permian Basin oil revenues flow out of the Basin to the bank accounts of major oil companies and other absentee production and royalty owners, with some of it flowing back in the form of wages and capital spending. Trying to determine how much flows out and how much flows back is nearly impossible.

While exaggerated, the calculations do, however, demonstrate very well the principal that a serious drop, or increase, in oil prices has a serious impact on spending in the Basin.

PRICES: Consumers benefit

(From 1E)

In the wake of the OPEC decision, WTI crude oil for January delivery tumbled $1.07 Monday to $15.31 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Energy analysts estimated retail gasoline prices would drop an average 3.5 to 7 cents a gallon in the next few weeks. Such a savings would erase the effects of the government's new 4½-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax.

"We might see prices under $1 in the next month," said Morris Greenberg, manager of energy services at the Wefa Group, an economic forecasting service in Bala Cynwyd, Pa. But others cautioned that price cuts may come slowly, depending on the demand for gasoline in different areas and competition among gas stations.

The average price of U.S. regular unleaded gasoline was $1.12 a gallon in the American Automobile Association's Nov. 16 survey, but it appears to have dropped since then, said Geoff Sundstrom, an AAA spokesman.

For heating oil, analysts predicted a drop of 4 to 5 cents a gallon. A particularly cold winter, however, would quickly drive the price back up.

If crude oil prices stay low, the entire economy could eventually feel its effects.

"It will help business margins and offset some of the inflationary pressure we'd otherwise face" in an economic recovery, said Dan Seto, an economist at Nikko Securities Co. International Inc.

Such prospects sparked a rally early Monday in the bond market, pushing down long-term interest rates. Bond investors abhor high inflation, since it erodes the value of earnings from bonds. But the bond market reversed itself as the day wore on.

FLOOR: stability

(From 1E)

Said Smith in a letter to the President: "Your pledge that oil price stability will be a goal of our national energy policy, must be answered by solid action."

Smith reminded the President that he had said increasing oil and gas production would require innovative programs, increased research, and removal of disincentives to domestic drilling.

Gas company to split

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gas Service, the company that provides natural gas to the Kansas City area, will be split into two companies early next year if the move is approved by regulatory agencies in Missouri and Kansas.

The company, owned by Western Resources of Topeka, Kan., said Wednesday that the Gas Service name would cease to exist when the split is completed.

The company on the Missouri side of the metropolitan area — which would be renamed Missouri Gas Energy — is being sold to the Southern Union Co. of Austin, Texas.

Eugene Dubay, a Southern Union vice president, was named executive vice president of Missouri Gas Energy, which would be headquartered in Kansas City.

Southern Union distributes natural gas to more than 480,000 customers in Texas and the Oklahoma Panhandle.

BILL: Seeks to ease burden of regulations

(From 1E)

"Regulations are just as effective as taxes at strangling economic growth," said Smith. "Yet, there is no law even requiring that they produce benefits greater than their costs."

One of the bills that Smith says will mitigate the high cost of excessive regulation for the oilpatch and other businesses is the Federal Regulation Cost-Benefit Assessment Act of 1993, which would require that federal agencies to calculate the cost of regulations on private industry and state and local governments.

Based on an executive order from early in President Ronald Reagan's first term, the cost-benefit act, would require that no federal regulation with an economic impact of $100 million could be implemented unless it produces benefits in excess of its cost; its regulatory objectives were chosen to maximize the net benefits to society, and it is the alternative involving the least net cost to society.

J.T. Young, legislative director for Smith, said the congressman was taking steps to codify the executive order, because he was afraid the present administration might choose to cancel it. He said that both the Reagan and Bush administrations were certain the executive order had been beneficial in slowing the tide of onerous regulation.

As a law, The Office of Management and Budget would conduct the cost-benefit analysis of the regulations and would have final determination on whether or not it would pass or be rejected. Young says there would also be opportunity for input from industry.

"I would think that if a segment of the oil industry felt that a certain regulation does not produce benefit in excess of its cost that there would be a process whereby it could present its documents and arguments in the process."

Young said he didn't know if the law would give oil producers an extra avenue to challenge regulations in court, but acknowledged that it would put the issue in the public arena and make more people aware of the high cost of regulation.

Other accountability legislation being introduced by the San Antonio congressman is a budget bill that would reduce the direct cost of compliance with federal regulation by one half over a period of seven years. The bill would set up a budget process whereby various committees would examine and reduce the cost of compliance. "It will be the first time for a regulatory budget process," said Young.

"That means agencies would have to go back and look at every single regulation and that they could not pass the blame for costly regulation on to Congress," said Young.

Young said there was no question that the level of regulation on the oilpatch and the rest of the private sector was way out of control and this was one way to bring it under control.

He said there was a point of diminishing return at which additional spending made no difference whatsoever, and noted that bureaucrats should not be allowed to set impossible attainment standards at whatever cost.

"This is just the minimum legislation and won't necessarily stop onerous regulation. The problem of over regulation is so big that I don't think any one bill can bring it under control, but at least we can slow it down."

Young also noted that if the cost-benefit of regulation is ever brought into control Congress would probably have to take more of a direct hand in the drafting and oversight of legislation instead of passing that responsibility off to bureaucrats.

Several Odessa companies add new product lines

By Ellen Hopkins

All these Odessa companies contacted this week have started carrying new product lines to expand their customer bases and increase sales.

COOMBES EQUIPMENT in Odessa is now carrying a new poly pipe adaptor which is manufactured in Oklahoma. Poly pipe is used for production equipment, flow lines, etc., especially where corrosion is a problem.

Owner Kevin Coombes said the adaptor is self-threading and replaces the transition fitting which required equipment to fuse it in place. He said the adaptors simply thread in place, and he's stocking them in all different sizes and configurations.

Coombes Equipment has exclusive rights to sell the adaptors in this area.

BULLDOG SPECIALTIES' owner Gene Kirby has added the American Oilfield Products line which includes production gate valves, chokes and wellhead components.

Although the company has carried adjustable and positive chokes before, the other items are new to Kirby's inventory and he said they are selling well. Kirby said the new product line, manufactured in Oklahoma City, offers growth potential to Bulldog Specialties, which is a manufacturers' representative and oilfield industrial wholesaler.

Kirby said the company also has a new employee who is well known in the industry. Tom Tyson has joined Bulldog Specialties as a sales representative, having previously worked for Coombes Equipment.

BASIN EQUIPMENT & SUPPLY CO. has purchased the Reed American Centrifugal Pump product line, according to George McKinzey, salesman. He said the company is selling a lot of these pumps to drilling contractors and has noticed an increase in business overall.

B & B PIPE AND SUPPLY CO., INC. is also offering new products. Along with providing the industry with various sizes of structural pipe (1" to 40") for road crossing material and pumping unit fences, B & B is now manufacturing cattle guards and BBQ pits.

JANCO EQUIPMENT, a production and supply store, is now a distributor for ITT A-C ANSI pumps which has manufactured pumps for over 100 years.

Morriss Vannoy said he is carrying two new pumps used in the petrochemical industry.

The ITT A-C 734 Plus is a magnetic drive pump using rare earth magnets to drive the impellor. Vannoy said this pump's design features separate internal lubrication/cooling paths to assure adequate cooling, and a back pressure bearing arrangement to eliminate liquid flashing. He said the latter is important, in light of EPA restrictions, because isolating the fluid guards against potential releases of toxic or corrosive liquids.

The 731 Plus chemical service pump comes in 23 different sizes from 1-1/2" to 10" and in varying capacities. Vannoy said this pump is designed for severe pumping applications involving corrosion, abrasion and temperature extremes.

SERVICE TECHNICIAN COMPANY of Odessa is representing Latoka Engineering Co. located in Tulsa, Oklahoma and its new fluid packed gas dehydration system based on the Duo-sorb Concept.

Doyle Newman of Service Technician Co. said this new dehydration system was described in Oil & Gas Journal because of its patented process of conditioning gas. This design achieves turndown to minor volumes, high dew point depression, maintenance clean-out capability and vessel height control, all with easy installation, simple operation and high performance.

He said performance has been verified by 1,400 installations to date.

Two manufacturing firms, one in Farmington, New Mexico and another in Tulsa, will build the units.

Ellen Hopkins is a freelance wriier for the Permian Basin Oil Report. Items for Service Sector can be sent to the Permian Basin Oil Report, P.O. Box 1650 Midland Texas 79702.

Arch Petroleum posts net loss

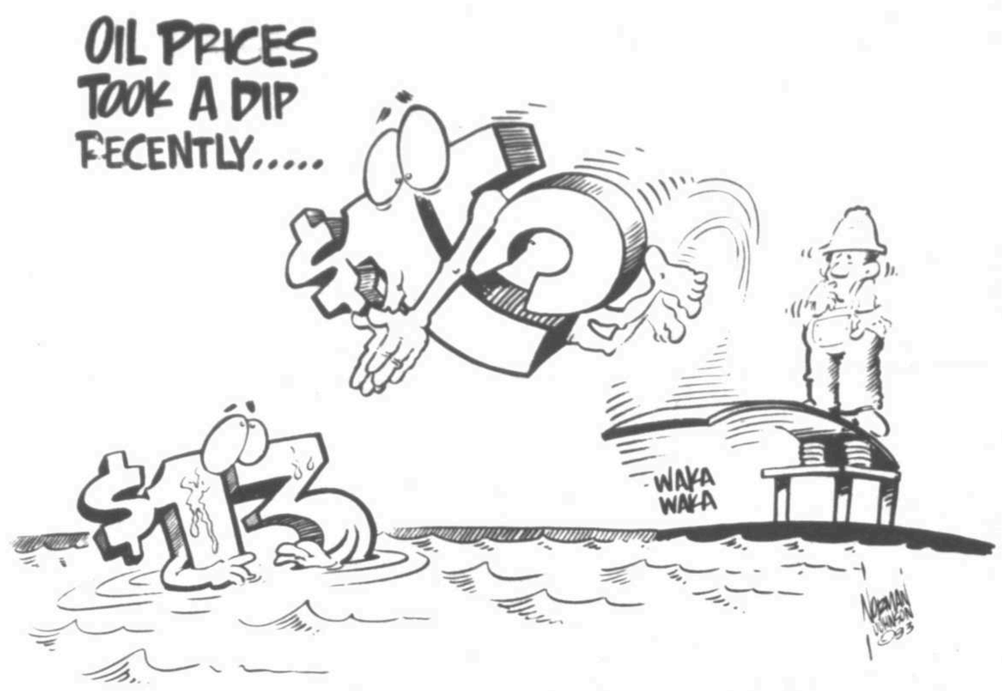

FORT WORTH — Arch Petroleum Inc. reported a net loss of $192,000 ($.02 per share) on revenues of $13.0 million for its third quarter ended September 30, 1993.

The company recorded losses of $43,000 and $114,000 for the comparable 1992 quarter and nine-month period.

Larry Kalas, president of Arch, said, "The previously reported curtailment of natural gas production from the Company's Keystone Ellenburger properties in Winkler County, Texas as mandated by the Texas Railroad Commission's amended interim order, continues to impact current earnings adversely. However, Arch has accumulated approximately 2 billion cubic feet of bonus gas allowable through September for sale at a later date. Additionally, we have made significant progress in our natural gas transportation and marketing functions. Revenues from this business segment have grown from $4.2 million in the first quarter to $6.0 million in the second quarter to $11.8 million in the third quarter. As we build natural gas volumes and add to our pipeline systems, we anticipate increasing spreads through the flexibility we are gaining."

Petrolite income rises

ST. LOUIS — Petrolite Corp. reported that net income for the fiscal fourth quarter ended October 31 rose 12.8 percent to $5.3 million or 47 cents per share.

This compares to $4.7 million or 41 cents per share for the same quarter a year earlier.

"The performance marked the 11th consecutive quarter of year-over-year profit improvement," observed William E. Nasser, chairman, president and chief executive officer. "The earnings gain was primarily attributable to improved chemical sales throughout all international markets."

Fourth quarter revenues were up 16.5 percent to $93.1 million from $79.9 million a year ago. The Welchem acquisition, completed in mid-April of fiscal 1993, represented about two-thirds of the gain.

"Results for the full year were encouraging, especially in light of the sluggish economic environment worldwide," Nasser explained.

Earnings before an accounting charge increased 24.7 percent to $20.5 million or $1.82 per share from $16.5 million or $1.45 per share in fiscal 1992.

Revenues totaled $351.8 million versus $318 million, an increase of 10.5 percent, with Welchem accounting for about half of the improvement.

After the impact of adopting Financial Accounting Standard Number 106 related to medical and other postretirement benefits, announced in the first quarter, fiscal 1993 net income was $14 million or $1.24 a share.

Stamp Out Holiday Blues

Rice Freeman-Zachery and Maxwell Smart, her cat, (above) sit in her rubber stamp playroom which houses her collection of over 2,000 rubber stamps. This box full of rubber stamps (left) is an example of just a few of the stamps Rice Freeman-Zachery owns.

Remember all those rubber stamps and inky stamp pads you had as a child? Remember the mess you made and how your mother would get really angry?

Well, those days are gone. Sure, kids still play around with rubber stamps and inky pads, and mothers still get angry about it, but some of those former children have grown up and taken their rubber stamps with them. And for many rubber stamp aficionados, their former childhood occupation has now become an art.

Rice Freeman-Zachery of Midland is a rubber stamper who has become expert in her craft during the three years or so she has been involved in it.

Her introduction to rubber stamping was slow, she said. "Like most rubber stampers, I got started slowly and by accident." She was attracted by a few rubber stamp designs and thought it looked like fun, but as she got more involved in rubber stamping, her love for the craft grew.

Now she has 2,000-3,000 rubber stamps in such diverse categories as cats (her cat, Maxwell Smart, even has some stamps with his likeness on them), foods, sayings, trees and likenesses of famous people.

In fact, she added, Max is famous in rubber stamp circles. "I've done some projects with him."

She also has done rubber stamping demonstrations at some stores in Midland, for which she was paid in rubber stamps. Sources for her craft are limited in Midland, but can be found at a few places locally, including Dearly B'Loved (and it's mall outlet, Tickled Pink) and Expressions, she added.

OF COURSE RUBBER STAMPS and other supplies used to make the art must be carefully cleaned and cared for to make them last for years of creative enjoyment.

Usually rubber stampers look at their craft in two different ways, Ms. Freeman-Zachery said. Serious stampers like herself usually end up becoming addicted to stamping; "most who are not serious usually end up with a couple of dozen stamps and that's it."

Some rubber stampers become really serious, she added. "There are some serious artists who make their living drawing and painting, who also do rubber stamping. A lot of people take it (rubber stamping) very, very seriously and resent it if you call it a hobby."

Dodsons celebrate 30th anniversary

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

"Gayle and Doc have been hitched for 30 years! So we're roundin' up friends and family for a Boot-Scootin' Celebration." So began the clever invitations to a party given for the Dodsons at the American Legion Hall on Nov. 27, their actual wedding date.

McKnight-Harrison

Hosts were their daughters, Jamie Dodson, a senior at Texas A&M University, and Kelly Hullender and her husband, Todd, who reside in Midland.

The band, Showdown, provided music for dancing. While guests were not on the dance floor, they enjoyed visiting and hearing how friends celebrated the Thanksgiving holidays. They snacked on popcorn and chips and salsa and enjoyed the two large anniversary cakes.

Decorations carried out a red, white and blue theme, depicting Gayle's well-known patriotic spirit. There were balloons and diamond-shaped bandanas over white cloths, along with bales of hay around the room.

In place of a registry book, guests were asked to sing posters, which were centered with enlarged photographs of the Dodsons on their wedding day. The serving table held pictures of the couple from their wedding day to the present. A caricature of the couple drawn by Nell (Mrs. Don) Furgeson on their 16th anniversary was displayed in the entry way.

Among the special guests were Gayle's wedding attendants, Sally (Mrs. John) Blanton of Dallas and Jeffrey (Mrs. Marty) McAllister of Fort Worth, both former residents of Gayle's hometown of Big Lake, and Nell Furgeson of Midland.

Others included Gayle's mother, Pete (Mrs. D.K.) McMullan of Midland and the Big Lake contingent of the McMullan family, Laura McMullan, Johnnie and Peggy McMullan and family, and Kenny and Glenda McMullan and children. Also present were Gayle's godchild, Jennifer Gayle Johnson, her husband, Eric, and daughter Erica, all of Fort Worth.

THE MIDLAND WOMAN'S CLUB is beautifully decorated for the holidays. Members gathered at the clubhouse in Hogan Park last Monday to decorate in an old-fashioned theme. They are now ready for the busy month of December and for the large number of parties and club gatherings to be held there.

According to president Dorothy Perkins, the Woman's Club has planned its Christmas luncheon for Dec. 16. Concert pianist Larissa Cherkasov will present the program, and the Twentieth Century Club will be the hostess group.

Club manager Joan Nobles has announced that the club is catering for holiday entertaining. Included are casseroles, party sandwiches, cookies, pies, cakes, salads and soup. She can be contacted for further information.

MORE THAN 100 friends and relatives gathered recently at Manor Park to celebrate the 90th birthday of Mabel Sowell. The party was hosted by her daughters, Carolyn Sowell of Midland and Sally and her husband, Dr. Grover Murray, of Lubbock.

The party area was decorated with balloons and baskets of colorful kale and dried arrangements. The guests enjoyed viewing a patchwork quilt make of 90 appliqued hearts and autographed by 237 friends and relatives, which was a gift to Mrs. Sowell. Another quilt on display contained pictures of Mrs. Sowell, her parents, and her 11 brothers and sisters.

Mabel Williams was born at Rosewood, Upshur County, Texas, on November 18, 1903. She graduated from the College of Industrial Arts (now Texas Woman's University) in Denton in 1926. Following college, she taught Home Economics in Gilmer. There she met Lawson Sowell, a teacher of Vocational Agriculture, and they were married in Tyler in 1931.

A collection of keepsakes from her days as a student, as well as a teacher, was available for the guests to view. Mementoes representing Mrs. Sowell's interests of cooking, sewing, traveling, gardening and volunteer work also were on display. Among the collection of items used during her growing up years were a butter mold, celery dish, bee smoker, and shoe last.

Pictures and a plaque indicated that Mr. and Mrs. Sowell were recognized in 1980 as The Outstanding Tree Farmers of Texas for the improvements they made on their East Texas timber farm and for their contributions to forestry.

Among those who attended the festive occasion from out-of-town were Mrs. Sowell's sister, Verna Powers of Gilmer and her nieces and their husbands, Walker and Pauline Watkins of Ralls, Jim and Jo Ann Murphy of San Antonio, and Kenneth and Suzanne Mayfield of Hawkins.

Developing holiday photos not simple

By Deborah Hofmann
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — These days, choosing where to have holiday photographs developed can be as tough as deciding where to go on vacation. Film processing has become a basic neighborhood service, with new photo-finishing labs as ubiquitous as greengrocers. But the quality of their color prints can vary greatly, making comparison shopping essential.

As camera prices have dropped dramatically, film processing time has been cut in half and the quality of prints improved by technological innovations. The processing of negatives, once handled by operators of varying motivation and training, is today done by computers, which read negatives with more precision.

Once negatives are produced, state-of-the-art printers can automatically make customized corrections to a photograph in a process called balancing. A knowledgeable consumer can ask for, say, a change in intensity of color tone.

People are taking more pictures — and demanding more for their money. About 17 billion photographs were taken in 1992 in the United States, up from 11 billion a decade ago, according to Harold Martin, editor of the Wolfman Report, which follows the photographic industry. Yet, he added, "many consumers still don't realize how good their pictures could be with good processing, nor how bad most processing can be."

IN MOST major cities there are four ways for amateur photographers to get film processed.

A mini-lab processes film on the premises, usually within the hour. According to the Wolfman survey, there are about 21,000 mini-labs in the United States, compared with 3,000 in 1982. Despite rapid turnaround, mini-labs generally do more careful work than huge photo-finishers. You can actually watch them cleaning the negatives and making adjustments on computers; perhaps this accounts for the improved quality: But they do not generally charge a flat rate, and their price lists can be confusing. Cost is based on a developing fee — usually $3 or $4 — plus a per-print rate (usually 30 cents to 40 cents apiece), which totals $12 to $16 for a roll of 36 exposures. Increasingly, mini-labs offer premiums like free rolls of film, enlargements or an extra set of prints. Opt for the prints; getting reprints later will be more expensive because of the extra labor costs.

If you are using a lab for the first time, you might wish to stay the hour to observe how the work is done. At the least, ask whether the lab uses fresh, high-grade paper by Kodak, Fuji or Agfa.

"If a print turns out badly, a person assumes that it is something they have done wrong," Martin said. "In fact, it might be that economizing was done at the finishing end." For instance, he said, every lab must refresh chemicals regularly.

INSPECT EACH print before paying. A blurred image, perhaps caused by the photographer's poor focus, cannot be fixed. But poor contrast in a photograph often can be improved. Most labs will remake poorly color-balanced photos for free. The Fromex chain in Manhattan, for example, allows customers to bring back photographs at any time, said Wendy Mirabal, assistant manager of the Fromex mini-lab in Manhattan.

Even when everything is done conscientiously, different brands and batches of film can create problems. Film batches may differ depending on when and where they were manufactured.

"It's like the best chicken soup: everybody loves it one year and the next holiday, it can come too salty," said Cliff Strome, who owns Clicks and the Pro-Print 1 Hour Photo, two mini-lab chains in Manhattan. "Film made in Singapore may differ from film by the same manufacturer in Argentina."

Camera stores are also good places for processing film, according to several editors at Popular Photography magazine. The owner may be prepared to redo work to your satisfaction; $12 is typical for a roll of 36 prints. Camera stores may also sell prepaid mail-in envelopes for you to send film to out- of-town manufacturers' labs like Kodak or Fuji (you pay for the processing in advance). Depending upon the mail, it may take up to two weeks to get prints, but the cost drops to between $8 and $10.

BEWARE OF the lure of bargain-basement prices, sometimes under $4 a roll. Many discount labs provide mailers intended to resemble those used by Fuji or Kodak but instead route film to enormous wholesale processing mills producing tens of thousands of prints a day.

Some work with outdated machinery. Occasionally a photograph comes back looking good, but a few months later, the colors will change or fade, a sign that cheap, out-of-date or exhausted chemicals were used.

THE MOST important thing is to build a relationship with an accountable supplier, whether it's in your own neighborhood, close to work or through the mail.

Above all, don't send essential pictures to a new supplier. If your photographs contain your baby's first steps, for example, you might want consider a custom lab that offers a full range of services for professional photographers.

STAMP: Create unique holiday designs

(From 1F)

And their love for their art grows. "I know a woman who has 16,000 rubber stamps," Ms. Freeman-Zachery said.

Rubber stamping can be used for any number of craft items, she said. This time of year, they can be used to create some unique holiday place mats with matching place cards or even personalized Christmas wrapping paper.

Rubber stamping can even be used to make "embossed" invitations to holiday parties or one-of-a-kind greeting cards. Some special embossing powder (available as many craft stores) and a safe source of heat are required for this procedure.

Rubber stamping can be used to make holiday gifts, such as clothing with rubber stamp designs (using ink that won't wash out, of course), wooden boxes with personalized designs and kitchen gadgets.

Stampers can even make decorations for the Christmas tree that are adorned with rubber stamp art.

Ms. Freeman-Zachery warns that rubber stamping can be addictive, and that stampers "have to live alone and have lots and lots of time, or have a partner who is real supportive and buys you presents" of rubber stamps and supplies.

She prefers the latter. "The family has to be involved or extremely understanding. My husband has given me his exercise room and been on trips (with her) that were just for stampers.

"My husband and mother have been really supportive," she added. "Not only do they buy me this stuff, but they help. They try to come up with solutions to (stamping) problems, cut clippings from the paper" and other aids. Her mother even helps her find wood and other resources for rubber stamping.

And Ms. Freeman-Zachery is the first to admit her own addiction to rubber stamping. "Sometimes I come out here (to her rubber stamping room) at 5:30 a.m. and start playing until I have to go to work.

"Some people are very serious about it (rubber stamping) and call it art, but I think it is too much fun to be called anything except playing."

For more information on rubber stamping contact Rubberstampmadness magazine, 408 SW Monroe #210, Corvallis Ore. 97333, for a sample copy. Cost is $5.

Hallidie inventor of cable railroad

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Francisco owes a debt of gratitude to Andrew S. Hallidie (1836-1900), who in 1867 invented and patented the cable railroad. Hallidie, a cable manufacturer, designed and built his first cableways for gold mines. His original cable car line for San Francisco began operating in 1873. The line was 2,800 feet long and climbed 307 feet. By 1877, cable railways using Hallidie's patented devices were operating in 20 American cities and in several foreign countries.

Electronic dating: The new bar scene

By Cliff Edwards

CHICAGO (AP) — Susan MacCoy, a 46-year-old hairdresser, steps into a room filled with regulars and a couple of newcomers. She glances around, notices a couple of guys she has dated and lights up a cigarette.

Men call her "goddess." Women do too, though few have actually seen her. MacCoy chats, flirts and has a good time — all without leaving her home, all via computer.

Computer bulletin boards are being called the bar scene of the '90s, an electronic forum where people share their most intimate — and often sexual — thoughts.

"It's techno-lust," MacCoy says. "It's the big bar in cyberspace, except you don't have to do your hair, put on your makeup and you can show up anytime you want."

Hy Roseman, 36, of Schaumburg, Ill., said he and his wife sign into an electronic forum for excitement. "There's so much flirting going on, it's just like being in a singles bar," he said.

MacCoy and Roseman are among several million people who subscribe to consumer-oriented, on-line services. They range from the thousands of small bulletin boards run by hobbyists to big commercial enterprises such as Prodigy, CompuServe, America OnLine and GEnie.

Some services offer news and information, let a subscriber pay bills, trade stocks and shop.

Many also offer "live" interaction, with individuals and groups trading messages while logged on. That's where on-line dating goes on.

Critics call it a "chilling" trend that leads to broken hearts.

Boosters say it's good, clean fun and, just possibly, a way to meet the person of your dreams.

The setup is eerily similar to bars. Most interactive, on-line services charge men fees ranging from $10 to $60 an hour. Women get in free.

The whopping phone bill that comes from using a modem to talk to people thousands of miles away can give users a headache to top the worst hangover. While some networks have local phone numbers, many charge fees that depend on the distance between users.

Conversations range from playful banter to pornographic come-ons. Various companies offer "alternative lifestyles" services, including chatlines for gays and lesbians.

Ron Pejril, who owns a Chicago-based computer bulletin board for adults called Compu-Erotica, says many people sign on to avoid the bar scene.

"There are a lot of people on-line who are sort of disillusioned with the singles bars or meeting each other through work or school," he said. "On-line, you get to know the person from the inside out. You see what a person is really like on the inside before you ever see the outside features, like how good-looking a person is."

Psychologist Michael Broder calls that hogwash.

"It's chilling. For a lot of people, it's a fantasy life," said Broder, an author on the subject. "People have to be advised they can't take this stuff too seriously. I've heard of a lot of hearts being broken.

"No real person can measure up to personalities one sees in computer messages. When these people try to have a real relationship, they're going to wind up feeling as though they have been cheated."

Indeed, in a widely publicized case in California, several women using an on-line service compared notes and discovered a computer lothario had professed undying love to each of them.

And the Justice Department recently warned that parents should keep a close eye on young computer junkies to ensure they're not contacted by pedophiles via electronic mail. On-line users say the lewdest come-ons often are from youngsters who use their parents' sign-ons.

Sociologist Bernard Beck of Northwestern University, in the Chicago suburb of Evanston, calls on-line dating a natural progression of technology and the social scene.

"The fact is that there's been a continuing problem of how people who don't have stable social connections and who are adults can find and meet people," he says. "For a while, it was fitness — going to the gym to meet people.

"Now, it's the development of new technologies that allow you to stay safely at home and do your business. It chilling, though, that our general social world has become more frightening to us, and we are kind of huddling behind our safe four walls," he said.

He believes fear of crime and catching AIDS likely are behind the increase in on-line users.

But there are some success stories.

Rebekah Goodwin, 39, says she met her husband, Peter, through an early service provided by America OnLine, which has some 800,000 subscribers.

"We became really good friends on-line," she says. "He was in Massachusetts, I was in California. We actually had, I believe, fallen in love on-line without ever meeting."

The two decided to take a two-week cross-country car trip, later developed a phone relationship and three years later were married.

Mrs. Goodwin, who had a bilateral mastectomy and calls herself "mildly agoraphobic" says that without the help of a computer, she likely would be alone now.

"I felt very unlovable, and I certainly wouldn't have given anyone in person a chance to get close enough to me to fall in love," she says. "Since it was on-line, we were able to interact as two people, rather than two bodies. I think on-line services provide a really unique opportunity if you use them wisely."

Her view is echoed by MacCoy, who owns a hair salon in Chicago. She said she met her boyfriend through her subscription to an on-line service.

DEAR ABBY

'Tis the season not to give worn-out clothes and toys

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: As the holiday season approaches, may I speak for all of us who work at agencies that serve the needy? We are glad that people wish to donate gifts of toys and clothing — and I don't mean to be ungrateful — but I wish your readers would keep these suggestions in mind:

Van Buren

(1) If it's too worn, or stained, or out of style for your child to wear, our kids won't want to wear it either. Self-esteem is as important for these children as it is for others.

(2) If a toy is broken, or part of it is missing, our children can't play with it either. You'd be surprised at the number of people who simply empty the entire contents of a toy box containing broken crayons and stray game pieces into a plastic bag, and drop it off as a donation.

(3) Older children, especially teen-agers, are often overlooked this time of year. Agencies that are swamped with gifts for younger children often have a hard time finding anything for older brothers and sisters.

(4) Some agencies appreciate gifts of money so that they can fill a particular need or a special wish.

Abby, please let your readers know that donations (large and small) are appreciated any time — not only for Christmas. I am signing my name, but please do not disclose it. — ANONYMITY REQUESTED

DEAR ANONYMITY: Thank you for an excellent contribution to this column.

DEAR ABBY: With the holidays just around the corner, I recall that last year, you printed a letter from a geriatric nurse who made some wonderful suggestions for what to give to people who live in nursing homes. I have another suggestion for older people who are not in the best of health.

My own grandmother was confined to a bed or wheelchair for several years, and had difficulty communicating due to Parkinson's disease, but "Grams" remained alert and oriented, and she retained her memory and sense of humor.

Four years ago, I, too, had difficulty deciding on a Christmas gift for her, then I hit upon an idea that became a ritual during my visits to her in the nursing home.

First, I would soak her hands in warm soapy water, then clean, trim and file her fingernails, and finally, apply nail polish. Then I washed her face, brushed her hair, and cleaned her eyeglasses. Finally, I would soak her feet in sudsy water and give her a foot massage. She would always tell me how good it felt to have her hands and feet massaged, and her legs and arms gently stretched. All the while we would chat, or quietly enjoy each other's company.

The cost? Next to nothing, except for my time and attention, the most valuable gift I could give her. So, why wait for Christmas? Do it now! — JOANN P. SEAVER, BYRON, CALIF.

DEAR JOANN: Beautiful. The most meaningful gifts cannot be purchased. One's time and loving attention — as you gave your grandmother — is the ultimate gift.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are "seniors" who, over the years, have received many wonderful gifts from our children. We are hard to buy for because we have more "things" than we can use.

Recently, we returned from a short trip to find that our children had hired a cleaning crew to give our home a thorough cleaning! They did the floors, walls, woodwork and windows. I don't know which sparkled more — the kitchen floor, or our eyes!

No gift could have been more thoughtful — or appreciated. — M.M.C. IN RICHLAND, WASH.

DEAR ABBY: Last Christmas was my first Christmas as a married woman. My husband and I spent the holidays with my family. It was the first Christmas my husband spent away from his family, and his mom felt a little blue.

Right after the holidays, my parents told me they want us to spend every Christmas with them. I'm an only child, and they think because my husband has many siblings to spend Christmas with his parents, we should spend the holidays with them so they won't be alone.

Abby, I don't want my parents to be alone on Christmas, but I have to consider my husband's family, too. When we got married, we thought a fair compromise would be to alternate between his folks and mine. This is acceptable to his mom, but not to my folks because I am their only child. Our parents live 2,000 miles apart, so there's no way we can split the day between them.

Do you have any suggestions on how we can keep everybody happy? — DREADING THE HOLIDAYS

DEAR DREADING: Your parents should realize that little girls grow up, get married and assume obligations that sometimes separate them from their parents during the holidays.

It's time for them to assume the responsibility of making their own plans for the holidays, because what they have in mind is unreasonable and unfair to your husband and his family. You are going to have to put your foot down and inform them that you now have two families with whom to share your holidays — so from now on, the time will be divided equally.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Sprouts are easy to grow

By Deborah A. Benge

Benge

This is not gardening on a large scale; in fact, anyone can do this type of gardening, even if you live in an apartment. Growing delicious, nutritious sprouts.

Sprouts are not only a lot of fun and easy to grow, but are very nutritious. In the germination process a great many vitamins, enzymes and other food materials are made more readily available. As an example, the vitamin C content of soybean sprouts from the time they first sprout until after 72 hours increases 700 percent.

There are many types of seeds that can be sprouted, including Mung beans, soybeans, lentils, alfalfa, chickpeas, sesame, oats, clover, corn, flax, garden peas, safflower, turnip, barley and Southern peas such as blackeyes. Mung beans and alfalfa seeds are two of the very best.

Sprouting these seeds is simple. It can be done in almost anything from a covered crock to special seed-sprouting devices. The following is an easy-to-construct seed sprouter. You will need the following materials for this project:

- Quart-size jar for large sprouts or a pint-size jar for small ones.
- Medium size cardboard box (about 6x12-inches should be adequate).
- Piece of quarter-inch plywood.
- Piece of cheesecloth.
- Seeds for sprouting.

You will also need some tools, including a small bladed saw to cut a hole in the plywood for the jar to rest in, a drill to start the hole so that you can cut an oval piece out of the center of the plywood, and perhaps some paint if you want to add an extra touch to your sprouting chamber.

Construct the chamber by removing either the top or bottom of the box (if flaps have been pulled open, cut these off and consider that the bottom. Cut through three sides of the top of the box to make a lid for the sprouting chamber, then measure a piece of plywood and cut an oval hole slightly larger than the jar so that the jar can be set at a slant on the rack. The jar will be suspended at about a 45 degree angle through the rack for better drainage.

Place two to three tablespoons of small seeds or one-quarter cup of larger seeds in the jar; fill it half full of water. Cover the top of the jar with cheesecloth, securing with string or rubberband. Soak small seeds for six to eight hours and large seeds for 12 to 15 hours.

Pour off the water and then invert the jar, placing it in the sprouting chamber with the cheesecloth dangling in the pan of water beneath the chamber. This keeps the cheesecloth covering the jar constantly moist and prevents the sprouts from drying out. Once or twice a day, remove the sprouting chamber and rinse the seeds. Replace in chamber. Check water level frequently as it evaporates.

Most sprouts are ready in two to three days. Some, such as alfalfa sprouts, will be even more nutritious if allowed exposure to light for a few hours or so. Be sure to use fresh seeds designed for sprouting and put your sprouting chamber in an area where temperatures will be about 70 degrees to 85 degrees.

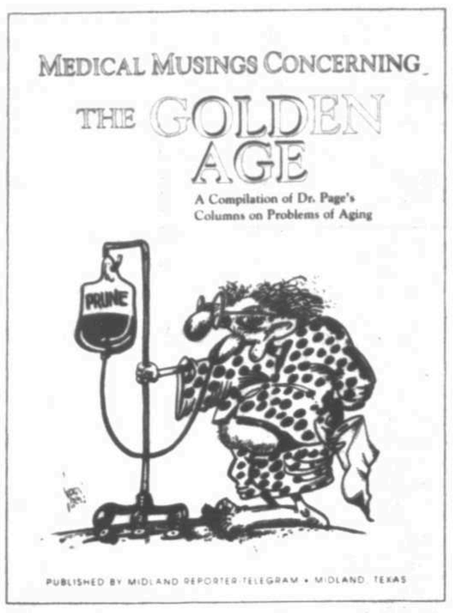

Never mind the weather or the space, you can do sprouting gardening in your kitchen.

Community colleges meet students' education needs

Associated Press

Community colleges, once the second choice for many students, are emerging as an essential educational vehicle, according to Better Homes and Gardens magazine.

For people who want to learn a special skill, improve their knowledge in a technical area, or re-enter the workforce, the low-cost alternative of a public, two-year community college may be the bargain of the century. Community college also is a practical choice for people who want to make a transition from high school to a four-year college, or just expand their minds.

"Historically, community colleges have provided job-specific skills for the businesses in their area," says Curtis Plott, president of the American Society for Training and Development in Alexandria, Va. "I think that role is going to become even more important in the next five to 10 years. Sixty-one percent of high school graduates in this country don't go to college, and businesses need people with training beyond high school."

THAT NEED has brought more and more students to their local college — even those who've been to college before. "There's a fairly large percentage of people attending who have other degrees," says David Pierce, president of the American Association of Community Colleges. "There are people who are simply trying to change their careers, make themselves more employable, or upgrade their salaries."

And why not? Since their beginning in the early 1960s, community colleges have positioned themselves as "access institutions," Pierce says. They are easy to get to, cost less and where financial aid is relatively easy to come by.

In 1992, the latest year for which statistics are available, 6.4 million people were enrolled in community colleges. That's up almost 2 million from 1985. Part-time students outnumber full-time, but that may change as full-time enrollment continues to grow, says Bill Reinhard, director of news services for the American Association of Community Colleges.

Reinhard says that for many students, the personal nature of a small community college is an advantage. Another advantage includes the fact that community college annual costs run about half that of a public four-year college.

MORE THAN 75 percent of the nation's community colleges are involved in on-site training programs for business. That means your community college is likely to be tied to one or more of your area's biggest employers.

While you can learn computers or robotics at a school designed specifically for that, a community college degree also requires course work in English, social sciences, and mathematics.

For many students, community college is the springboard to a bachelor's degree. Some start there because they want to improve on their high school grades. Others can't get into overcrowded classes at larger universities, so they take general education courses at a community college. The lower cost also is a compelling reason.

Studies have shown that students who transfer from community colleges do as well as or better than those students who began at four-year institution.

The most popular field of study, according to the American Association of Community Colleges, is business and management. An associate's degree in that area could qualify a person to work in banking or the retail industry, for example, or for a low- to middle-management position in a larger company.

The next most popular field is allied health. Community college students often become nurses, radiation technicians, dental hygienists and other health professionals.

Courses in engineering and related technology such as drafting and robotics attract many community college students and prepare them for jobs in manufacturing, construction and similar fields.

OTHER GRADUATES find work in public affairs or government services, in the food industry, law and fine arts, among others.

Remember that community colleges are meant to be accessible. To enroll, you usually do not need to take the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) or fill out a long application. Many offer on-site child care centers and counseling for displaced homemakers or workers laid off from their jobs.

End of spandex? Don't hold your breath

By Erma Bombeck

When is the spandex madness going to stop?

Any day now I expect to read that a person wearing a spandex body suit has fallen and can't get up. It's unhealthy. Cellulite cannot breathe in those confines.

Bombeck

No one has to tell me when a woman is girdled in it. Her face is bloated. That is because when the elasticized garment compresses all the flesh between it, the fat has to go somewhere. Fat rises. Everyone who has taken an introductory chemistry course knows that. It goes to your face.

When the miracle fabric first came on the market, it showed up in gyms all over the country. It didn't make any sense. If you were thin enough to wear spandex, you didn't need a gym in the first place.

I wore it. Then I figured out that forcing a leotard over your hips burned up more calories than chasing cars in the Indianapolis 500.

Eventually, the younger set bought dresses containing spandex that stopped short of their panty line and arrest. I'd see them tugging at the garment every time they stood up. It didn't help. The dress would ride up again.

Many have discovered the style is limiting. There are too many things you can't do while wearing it. You can't step up on a curb. You can't sit in the presence of someone you have not known for at least five years or to whom you are not currently married. You can't take an aspirin tablet without friends tracking it from the moment it enters your body to your bloodstream.

You can't bend over to pick up anything that has fallen. You can't stand higher than your heels measure or someone can look up your dress. You can't drive a car or try on shoes.

Models still wear spandex because they have a safe runway to walk on and nothing to do once they get to the end of it. Cheerleaders wear it because it showcases their assets.

Elastic waistbands are one thing, but elastic body suits should be sold only to women who can survive sudden drafts and who do not feel the need to breathe with any regularity.

Erma Bombeck's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Artificial hip joints' stress studied

ATLANTA (AP) — Reducing the amount of stress on a hip joint can help prevent excessive wear on an artificial one, says the Arthritis Foundation. According to Arthritis Today, a foundation publication, a full-scale study conducted by researchers at Marquette University in Milwaukee indicated the way a person carries a load or uses a cane may influence the amount of force placed on the hip during walking. Researchers measured the electrical activity from hip muscles in 20 people with total hip replacements as they walked carrying loads of different weights and on different sides of the body with or without a cane. Results from this study, funded by the foundation, suggest that using a cane on the side opposite the hip replacement decreases muscle-produced pressure on the replaced hip. They also found that carrying loads on the same side as a replaced hip decreases the pressures on the hip as well.

Colors enhance home's 'look'

Associated Press

If your house is more than 50 years old, it is, technically speaking, "historic." Today, several major paint companies produce historical colors for both exterior and interior treatments. To use them properly, you must first know when your house was built and identify its style, says Home Products Guide magazine.

Mellow historical hues can enhance a house of any age. The secret is to choose color combinations that go well together, then place them appropriately.

■ Pre-1830. House exteriors were either left unpainted or were painted white with green shutters. On the interior, homeowners often used whitewash, although they sometimes used linseed oil-base paints colored with organic, hand-ground pigments. Because it was impossible to get a perfect powderized mix this way, the final color had streaks of pigment, telltale evidence of this early period. Typical interior colors were yellow, ocher and Prussian blue.

■ 1830-1850. Harsh white on the exterior gave way to natural and muted earth tones such as sand, earth, clay, straw and slate. Light body colors were often complemented by trim painted several shades darker to pick out details.

On the interior, the preference was for neutral tints — grays and other "quiet" colors. Each room's use determined the color choice. Entry and stair halls were "sober" and painted in gray, stone or drab (a dull yellow-brown.) Libraries were painted in subdued colors. Bedrooms were "chaste" or "cheerful" spaces with light-color walls.

■ 1850-1870. By midcentury, the palette darkened, and contrasts became more vivid. Exterior details were defined in intense color, particularly in the Gothic and Italianate styles. Neoclassical Revival structures returned to the white-with-green-shutters scheme, although white was gradually tinted with gray, lavender, green and blue.

Architects urged homeowners to employ a variety of colors inside, especially sage, slate, violet, lilac, peach, salmon, "brownstone," and bronze-green.

■ 1870-1890. As ready-made paints became available in the early 1870s, Americans tried the new, richer colors. Ready-mixed paints let homeowners choose from tertiary colors (those formed by mixing two secondary colors), such as citrine, olive and russet. The light, natural colors of 1830-1850 survived throughout the century, but greens, olives, and oranges crept into use.

Interior schemes shunned white paint for rich, saturated colors. If woodwork was not stained, it was painted black, maroon, chocolate brown, dull dark red, dark blue or bronze-green.

■ 1890-1920. As the 19th century waned, American domestic architecture began to return to simpler lines. Paint colors also changed as primary and secondary colors began to replace tertiary hues. Body colors moved toward pastels. White again became the most popular color for trim and sashes.

Interior colors depended on the homeowner's preference for Revival or Craftsman styles. Revival styles urged painted woodwork. Craftsman styles featured natural or stained woodwork. Exponents of both styles accepted painted woodwork in bedrooms, kitchens and bathrooms because of its sanitary qualities.

For help selecting appropriate colors and where to place them, consult two recently published books: "Victorian Interior Decoration: American Interiors 1830-1900" and "Victorian Exterior Decoration." Both were written by Roger W. Moss and Gail Caskey Winkler and published by Henry Holt and Co.

Looking for gift for woman who has everything? Try pampering

By Karol Stonger

NEW YORK (AP) — A woman caught up in the holiday rush or mired in a winter rut might enjoy a gift that allows her to relax or re-energize. Such luxury comes in many price ranges.

Pampering pure and simple can be effected with the Donna Karan Bath & Body collection, natural ingredients that smell faintly of vanilla and have luxurious descriptions with prices to match. There are cashmere body lotion, velvet body cream, chiffon body powder, washed silk body cleansing lotion and satin bath bar. Suggested retail $15 to $65 each at fine stores nationwide.

Nivea's collection of moisturizing shower gels, creme soap and bath and body oils offer a bit of luxury for less. Treat your skin to ocean breeze, rain forest or chamomile scent for $1.99 to $4.99 suggested retail at pharmacies and mass market merchandisers.

Pampering on a higher plane might include five days and four nights at Back in Shape at Round Hill, a spa in Montego Bay, Jamaica, where you can shape up without distractions. Prices start at $1,560 plus airfare for one person, including all meals, exercise classes, hikes, yoga, swim, massage, facial.

If time and money are tight, consider a gift certificate for beauty treatments at a local salon. A day at Georgette Klinger in New York, beauty stop of choice for Hillary Rodham Clinton, is $275 for facial, body massage, manicure, pedicure, scalp treatment, shampoo and blow dry, makeup lesson and lunch. For the truly time-tied, the salon's Face the Day is $100, with facial, makeup, manicure and pedicure.

There are products that cater to those who like time at home alone, such as those from Repechage and Alfred Sung Spa Collection. Repechage's "Spa on the Go," skin care relies on seaweed and sea water to re-energize and detoxify. The kit is $79 at Repechage in New York and spas and salons worldwide. Alfred Sung Spa, an all natural and biodegradable line of spa products for hair, face and body, range from $13 to $40 at major department stores.

'2nd Greatest Christmas Story' comes to Theatre Midland

Early October 1843 found a desperate Charles Dickens in dire financial distress. He needed to write and couldn't.

He resumed his nightly London walks hoping for inspiration and an end to his depression. One night as he was returning home from a nightly walk near the tenements along the Thames River, it occurred to him to adapt a Christmas-goblin story from a chapter in "The Pickwick Papers."

Thus "A Christmas Carol" was born.

A musical adaptation of this Christmas story opens Thursday and closes Dec. 23 at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. It is being presented again this year because it was so popular last season. Before the two-act musical opened in 1992 the theater had sold 7,000 seats.

"We ran 99.9 percent capacity," said Don Bachmann, MCT executive director and director for the production. "It was enormously popular."

Bachmann, who describes himself as an avid fan and aficionado of the story, said he was "kind of surprised" by the response.

"I was surprised that so many Midlanders really wanted to come and see the show because 'A Christmas Carol' is so readily available through the re-televising of classic 'Christmas Carol' productions plus the new ones — 'Scrooge' and the one with Bill Murray ('Scrooged').

"I thought, 'Well, we are going to go up against all these folks. People will stay home and see them. They might not come out.' "

Instead, Bachmann discovered people "wanted to get the family and come into a nice pleasant environment and share the evening not only with family but with others in the theater."

MCT's 1992 production of "A Christmas Carol" marked the first time in a decade the theater had presented the play. The former production was not a musical.

"We used to do 'A Christmas Carol' for years. We stopped in 1982. There's so many people who missed the production we were trying to figure out a way to bring 'a Christmas Carol' back. Then, with the 'Nutcracker' not being done anymore, there really was no festive Christmas show. We decided to go in and spend the time to put together 'A Christmas Carol' the way it needs to be done."

Belle (Susan Leibrock) seems surprised by the display of affection by Mr. and Mrs. Fezziwig (Carl Moore and Rene Chambers).

He attributes the popularity of "A Christmas Carol" to its timeless nature.

"It is the Christmas classic show," Bachmann said. "Everybody knows the show, and you can't find a better piece of family entertainment to take your children to."

It also held a special appeal for its author.

"Once started on its course, his 'Christmas Carol' ran away with him," said Eleanor Farjeon in the introduction to "The Oxford Illustrated Dickens Christmas Books."

"He wept at it and laughed, and wept again; it so excited him that in the small hours, 'when all sober folks had gone to bed,' he walked London's back streets for 15 and 20 miles possessed by it," she wrote.

Thomas J. Burns tells the background in a Reader's Digest article December 1989, entitled "The Second Greatest Christmas Story Ever Told."

"Gradually, in the course of his writing, something surprising happened to Dickens," Burns wrote.

"What had begun as a desperate, calculated plan to rescue himself from debt — 'a little scheme,' as he described it — soon began to work a change in the author.

"As he wrote about the kind of Christmas he loved — joyous family parties with clusters of mistletoe hanging from the ceiling; cheerful carols, games, dances and gifts; delicious feasts of roast goose, plum pudding, fresh breads, all enjoyed in front of a blazing yule log — the joy of the season he cherished began to alleviate his depression.

"A 'Christmas Carol' captured his heart and soul. It became a labor of love," Burns wrote.

Tickets to MCT's production, co-produced by Parker and Parsley, are $10 for adults and $6 for children 10 and younger. MCT members receive a 20 percent discount. Reservations may be made by calling 682-4111.

MUSICAL: 'A Christmas Carol' comes to Midland

Jane Burgess as the Ghost of Christmas Past; Bill Kersh as the Ghost of Christmas Present; Rachel Santorelli and Margaret Webster as Scrooge's sister Fan; Shane Manley as the Young Scrooge and as Fred; Susan Liebrock as Belle and as Millie; Stephanie Webb as Martha; Will Coombes as Peter; Crystal Alvey as Lucy; David Thomas as Topper; Nancy Daugherty and Ms. Burgess as the charwomen, Mrs. Delber and Mrs. Crow respectively; Rene Brister Chambers as Mrs. Fezziwig; and Coombes, Stephanie Webb, Melissa Leeper, Anna Avakian, Kristin Loftis and Amber Loftis as the Cratchit children.

"Last year, I thought we had a very good cast," Bachmann said.

"And I was very pleased with the work they had done. Every year is a change. It's always interesting to see new talent work on a piece already established. They bring new things to it.

"Our hope is we will be able to build the production from year to year to year, and every year we do it, it will be a little better than the last year."

The cast also includes youth and adult ensembles.

The children's ensemble, which performs a traditional Christmas nativity scene, includes Stephanie Biernbaum, Jessica Ham, Katie Hinterlong, Clayton Cross, Morgan Merritt, David Curtis and Jeremy Wood.

The numbers featuring folk dancing and traditional Christmas songs, choreographed by Jan Collerd with musical direction by Jeff Fentem, will be performed by Martha Fentem, Karen Cole, Charlotte Wornell, Amber Kelly, Debbie Corlee, Shaun Skipper, John Comeaux, J.D. Webster, Matt Nicholson, Mark McDonald and Sandy Faulkner.

Stage manager is David Frerich.

"Last year we actualized about 80 percent of the production," Bachmann said. "Every script has a potential — the sets and the costumes, lighting and properties. We got a little bit more than 80 percent of what we wanted.

"This production is the equal of any major musical the theater has ever done," Bachmann said, referring to level of difficulty in presenting the show. "It's a mammoth undertaking.

"This year, we are going to complete (actualize) about 90 percent of the production. We are changing the visual effects of ghosts, upgrading the costumes and tying into a more definitive time period for the action of the play."

Set design is by Paul Fiorella, costumes by Mae Dawson and lighting and sound by Edward W. Taylor.

"It's a four-star production," Bachmann said. "It really is a good production."

The story carries a track record for success that dates back to its first edition.

"The first edition of 6,000 sold out by Christmas Eve," wrote Ms. Farjeon. "And as the little book's heartwarming message spread, Dickens later recalled he received 'by every post, all manner of letters about their homes and hearths, and how the 'Carol' is read aloud there, and kept on a very little shelf by itself.'"

The importance of "A Christmas Carol" in its own time is easy to overlook from the vantage point of 149 years distance," she wrote. "Dickens was a social commentator and, at heart, a self-proclaimed reformer. His sympathy lay with the downtrodden, for he knew what it was like to be poverty stricken.

"A Christmas Carol" did not solve Dickens' financial problems, but he made enough to scrape by, and Burns said, the novella's tremendous popularity revived Dickens' audience for subsequent novels.

"In the midst of self-doubt and confusion, a man sometimes does his best work," Burns wrote. "From the storm of tribulation comes a gift. For Charles Dickens, a little Christmas novel brought new-found faith in himself and in the redemptive joy of the season."

Austin production company releases documentary shot in Permian Basin

Staff Report

A documentary film shot in the Permian Basin, "Graveyard of the West: the Pecos River of Texas Where Myth Meets History," has just been released by Forest Glen TV Productions of Austin.

Written by Midland author Patrick Dearen and hosted by Dearen and Austin author Mike Cox, the one-hour VHS video examines the history and legends of the river that Charles Goodnight called "the graveyard of the cowman's hopes."

It was filmed by Glen Sample Ely of Austin, a recipient of the Texas Historical Commission's Award for Historic Preservation.

In his cover introduction, novelist Elmer Kelton of San Angelo writes:

"The Pecos in earlier times was a challenging river, its history a colorful pageantry of American Indians, emigrant wagon trains, stagecoaches, outlaws and cattle drives. This tape vividly recounts some of that history, with old pictures and old timers' reminiscences expertly inter-cut with scenes of the river as it is today. For those who know the Pecos, it provides a nostalgic hour of homecoming. For those who do not, it is a splendid introduction to a vital part of the Western Texas heritage."

Commentators include Robert Utley, author of "Billy the Kid: A Short and Violent Life"; folklorist Paul Patterson of Crane and Pecos; Indian expert Robert Wooster of Corpus Christi; and numerous old-timers who helped shape the history of the Pecos.

Serving as narrators are Dearen — the author of "Portraits of the Pecos Frontier" and "Castle Gap and the Pecos Frontier" — and Cox, author of six Texas-related books and press representative for the Department of Public Safety. Both are former reporters for West Texas newspapers.

"From mountains to desert, the Pecos county is truly a graveyard of history, and Dearen, Cox and Ely have vividly captured in full color and with all the warts the river's place in the story of Texas," said newspaper columnist Ross McSwain of San Angelo.

"...I highly recommend the video to anyone interested in knowing more about West Texas."

Graveyard of the West is available in Midland at Hastings Books, and Haley Library gift shop. It can be ordered for $29.95 plus $2.32 tax and $1.50 shipping from Forest Glen TV Productions, Inc. (512) 345-0691, P.O. Box 50238, Austin, 78763.

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Resist an urge to throw caution to the wind. Success is nearer than you think. Keep forging ahead at work. A large windfall is likely early in 1994. A family business would benefit from certain changes. Try something entirely new next summer. A child's progress boosts your spirits sky-high. The future looks brighter than ever. Romance could blossom when you take a trip in late fall.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Morgan Brittany, rock star Little Richard, author Calvin Trillin, actress-singer Carrie Hamilton.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A sermon could point out a new way to handle a recurring problem. Meet your responsibilities head-on. Cut back on social activities and save your energies for business and family life.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may have to change some social plans. A long journey is best postponed. Strive to develop a better understanding with your mate. Be more conscious of unspoken thoughts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Cupid's bow may be aimed at your heart. Your affection will be reciprocated! New social contacts may help you fulfill a wish. Iron out recent errors in judgment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Respond to the needs of those around you with more poise and optimism. If you act patient, you will probably see progress in the near future. Be discreet about a romantic relationship.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Rather than waste your time analyzing other people's behavior, be on the lookout for information vital to your own financial planning. A positive attitude will prevent tensions from escalating.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A good time to circulate, make calls, write letters and share your hopes with loved ones. You will soon see a long-cherished wish come true. Romance is under favorable auspices tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A new project unleashes your hidden talents. If stumped for a way to entertain children, try baking some holiday treats with them. Your ESP helps you zero in on fun social activities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A change of scene adds excitement to your day. A search for a new residence proves successful. You meet a valuable business contact at a social gathering. A telephone call brings joyous news.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A member of the opposite sex is anxious to talk to you. Adopt a direct approach. Use your power or charm wisely. Romance continues to play a major role in your life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A sermon or special TV program is inspirational. You receive some of the answers you have been seeking. Partner's actions could leave you confused. Do not pass judgment until you have all the facts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Unexpected news or a change in plans may throw you into a situation you did not anticipate. Everything will work out fine! A date may have to wait while you set sail for adventure.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Team tasks or health-related activities give you a natural high. Joining forces with a good pal could mean a new lease on life. Your spirits soar! Dance, dance, dance the night away.

Alchemists for centuries searched for a way to turn base metals into gold. Their bridge counterparts have long sought an infallible method for locating a missing queen. Neither is likely to succeed, although bridge players have the better chance if they count out the hand.

North's hand was borderline for an invitational jump raise to three spades and the good four-card support decided the issue. It did get North-South to a good game quickly and easily.

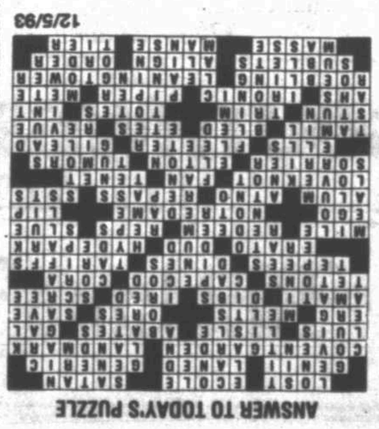

West led the ace of hearts and continued with the ten, overtaken by East's jack. A trump was returned. With a sure loser in the ace of clubs, declarer's problem was readily apparent—to locate the queen of diamonds, so it could be successfully finessed. The fly in the ointment was the finesse could be taken against either defender.

Even so, declarer made short shrift of the hand. The trump return was won with the jack and a second round was drawn, ending in the closed hand. Next came a club to the queen which lost to the ace and, when East exited with a club to the king, South discarded a diamond.

Two club ruffs sandwiched around a heart ruff provided declarer with all the information needed. East had started with two spades, five hearts (from the overcall and West's play to the first two tricks), five clubs (West had shown out on the fourth club) and, therefore, could hold only one diamond. So declarer cashed the king of diamonds and, when no queen appeared, confidently finessed the jack to land the game.

Animated features are not necessarily sure thing

By John Horn
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Steven Spielberg raked in millions with "Jurassic Park," but he hasn't made a nickel with his new animated film "We're Back! A Dinosaur's Story."

The movie's weak debut over the Thanksgiving weekend suggests prompt box-office extinction, which would once again add Spielberg to the growing list of filmmakers who have taken on Disney's mighty animation machine — and lost.

The dregs of the movie charts are littered with the remains of non-Disney cartoon pretenders. The animated busts range from "We're Back" to "Tom and Jerry: The Movie" to the impressively disastrous "Happily Ever After." Spielberg also failed miserably in 1991 with "An American Tail: Fievel Goes West."

While it's easy to fault these movies, you can't blame Disney's competitors for trying to play Uncle Walt's hand, since the economics of a successful animated film are staggering.

"Aladdin," Disney's most recent animated film, was produced for about $30 million. So far, it has sold $217 million worth of tickets in North American theaters, and some 18 million videocassettes. That translates to a profit in excess of $200 million — not counting lucrative overseas proceeds and rich merchandising revenues.

Since the movie doesn't star big-name actors demanding contingent compensation, Disney gets to keep every dollar. It's a pure money machine and, like other Disney animated classics, holds tremendous re-release value as new generations of moviegoers come of age.

With its eyes bulging at those numbers, Warner Bros. hopes to establish its own animation division and will release "Batman: Mask of the Phantasm" on Christmas Day.

Universal is busy with "Snowballs" and "Peter and the Wolf." TriStar has the rights to Dr. Seuss' "The Places You'll Go," and Fox will release "The Pagemaster."

The problem for Disney's competitors: It's a lot easier to admire the studio's balance sheet than mimic its animated creations.

While it's easy to fault these movies, you can't blame Disney's competitors for trying to play Uncle Walt's hand, since the economics of a successful animated film are staggering.

"It's really an operation unlike anything else," says Oscar-winning producer Richard Zanuck ("Driving Miss Daisy"), who's developing a Betty Boop animated film outside Disney. "It is tough to compete."

Thanks to 1992's "Aladdin," 1991's "Beauty and the Beast," 1989's "The Little Mermaid" and a half-century tradition of top animation, Disney has established a brand-name loyalty that's the envy of Hollywood.

The Disney signature can't single-handedly draw audiences into lackluster efforts. But it does mean parents won't simply drop their kids off at the movies.

They'll come in and watch, too.

"It's very hard going up against Disney," says Jaime Willett, the co-executive producer of last year's "Ferngully: The Last Rainforest." "If our movie said 'Walt Disney Presents,' we would have had double the gross."

As it turned out, 20th Century Fox made a little money on "Ferngully." The movie sold $22.8 million worth of tickets and enjoyed strong video grosses.

Because Disney has been producing animated movies for so long, the studio has refined the filmmaking process with assembly-line efficiency. Where other film studios might have to spend $40 million to turn out a topflight animated film, Disney can do the same for $30 million.

Furthermore, Disney has an uncanny knack for crafting stories with wide age and family appeal. At a time when a seemingly innocent PG-13 rated film might deliver some shocking violence and sex, the Disney animated films are a haven of good conduct.

"Right now, most mom and dads are looking for something that will entertain and uplift their kids," says Don Bluth, perhaps Disney's top rival as the creative force behind Universal's "An American Tail" in 1986.

Disney has many of the country's top animators under contract, and producers working outside the Disney walls have to scramble to track down the best available artists.

Finding the artists is but a part of the challenge. Giving them an attractive tale to sketch is another significant hurdle.

"You have to have a good story — and most people don't remember that," Willett says.

"Many people have jumped into the animated arena, but they don't understand how animation works" says Bluth, currently working in Ireland on the animated film "The Pebble and the Penguin."

"I would pay attention to the script and the story first. If that's good, the audience will follow," he says. "I don't think it has to be Disney to work. The thing that's important is that it's produced properly."

One of the best examples of bad producing came earlier this year with "Happily Ever After," advertised as a sequel to "Snow White" but remembered as the movie that nearly put upstart First National Film Corp. out of business overnight.

In "Happily Ever After," a dragon-lord turns Snow White's prince into an unrecognizable, mute hunchback. Seven pint-sized female deputies to Mother Nature (voiced by Phyllis Diller), called "dwarfelles," help Snow defeat her vile foe and reunite her with the prince, who has lurked in the background throughout most of the film, moaning and terrifying the dwarfelles.

What is 'reality based' entertainment?

SAN FRANCISCO (NYT) — Back in olden times, we didn't have "reality based" entertainment. We had instead the Three Stooges, painlessly poking each other's eyes out.

We had Custer's Last Stand, the Civil War and countless other historical combat epics brought to their gruesome conclusions on big screen and small, and nary a drop of blood in evidence.

But that was a long time ago, back in the days before Sam Peckinpah, when the world wasn't a dangerous place. Father knew best. Ronald Reagan was kept busy selling cigarettes, soap and Sanforization. And we left everything else up to The Beaver.

Today, all hell is breaking loose. Toddlers set the house on fire at the behest of Beavis and Butthead. Suicides are inspired by such insidious instigators as Judas Priest and Walt Disney.

And not long ago, Lorena Bobbitt cut her husband's member off and threw it in the street. Her next move was to hire a Los Angeles entertainment agency to represent her.

¿QUE PASA?

Elección separada por los ingresos familiares

Por Charley Reese

Los falsos conservadores - los neo-conservadores si usted esta dentro de la politica de contribuciones tal como Jack Kemp, Bill Bennett y esa muchedumbre que ahora están tocando elecciones escolares. Todo eso demuestra a usted lo que es un grupo de falsos.

Que es lo que esta mal con la elección escolar es que se hacen las preguntas incorrectas.

La pregunta correcta es. Usted quiere ofrecer educación publica a los muchachos? Si la respuesta es no, entonces revoque todo el sistema. Los mas de $180 billones en costos para la educación publica, si quedan en los bolsillos privados crearan un mercado para escuelas privadas.

Pero si la respuesta es si. Quiero mantener un sistema de educación publica, entonces usted tiene que rehusar a la elección escolar.

La elección escolar es un barco pirata que anda navegando bajo colores falsos. Los neo - conservadores alegan que inyectara los beneficios del mercado libre dentro de la educación publica. Esto es falso> No lo hará, porque no hay programa de gobierno que pueda responder en algún momento como una institución del mercado libre. Una escuela niega recursos adecuados por un sistema politico que no puede añadir estos recursos solo por mantener a estudiantes que quieran dejar la escuela. En otras palabras, los directores y maestros, de otro modo los dueños en negocio privado, no controlan sus finanzas. Consecuentemente, ellos no pueden responder a cambios en la población estudiantil.

Lo que las elecciones escolares realmente quieren es el privilegio de convertir parte del sistema publico escolar dentro de sus propios pagos de impuestos del sistema escolar privado. Ellos quieren que padres estén dispuestos a cambiar a los muchachos a la mejor - equipada, con el mejor personal escolar en el mejor vecindario, mientras muchachos de bajos recursos son dejados atrás con el peor - equipo, con el peor - personal escolar, en los peores vecindarios. Esto creara un total fingimiento de un sistema publico educacional. Creara una equivalencia de nada mas que una re-segregacion de escuelas esta vez con las bases del ingreso familiar en lugar de las bases de carrera. Esto justificara el crimen que muchos sistemas públicos escolares han cometido crimen proveido de la inmensa desigualdad de recursos en los muchachos del sistema.

Las verdaderas posiciones conservadoras es que una vez que perpetremos en un programa de gobierno de educación publica, nosotros emprenderemos la obligación moral de ver que los beneficios del programa de cada muchacho, sin miramientos de raza, ingresos o igualdad vecindario.

Concuerdo con Andy Jackson, que dice, «Es una pena que el rico y el poderoso muy seguido sometan los actos gubernamentales para su propio provecho. . . no es necesario tener demonios en el gobierno. Los demonios existen por sus propios abusos. Si se

History of the Virgin of Guadalupe

Our Lady of Guadalupe is the centerpiece of a small shrine, at a private home in southeast Midland.

By Jeffrey McDonald

She has become an enduring symbol of religious faith, and nationalistic fervor. Her image has graced the altars of churches, the banners of revolution, and the painted bodies of lowrider cars.

Perhaps no single image is more popular, and more common, in the history and culture of Mexico, and the Mexican Americans of the United States, than the Virgin of Gualdalupe.

Her story began on the morning of December 12th, in the year 1531. It had been ten years since the arrival of the Spanish conquistadors, and the fall of the Aztec empire. Not only had the earthly lords of the Mexicans been deposed, but the heavenly lords as well. Churches of the Christian faith were built upon the ruins of ancient temples, and the images of Christ, the Virgin Mary, and numerous attendant saints replaced those of the native gods.

This is not to say that the Christianity brought by the Spaniards to America was completely alien to the Indians. There were some similarities between the religions of the old world, and the new. Both believed in an afterlife, for example, and the concept of virgin birth, and a supreme god. Both practiced forms of baptism, communion, confession, under the direction of a celibate priesthood.

But there were many more differences than similarities, and the adoption of the new religion, and it's assimilation into everyday life, was not always a simple task for the Indians. To this day, religious practices in Mexico, as they do around the world, reflect a mixture of the old and the new, the indigenous and the introduced.

On that morning, late in 1531, an Indian

Historia de la Virgen de Guadalupe

Ella a sido permanentemente el símbolo de lá Fe religiosa, y el fervor nacional. Su imagen a engalanado los altares de las Iglesias, las banderas de la revolución, y las carrocerías pintadas de los «lowriders».

Quizás no hay imagen que sea tan popular, y mas común, en la historia y cultura de México, y de los México-Americanos de los Estados Unidos, que la Virgen de Guadalupe.

Su historia comienza una mañana del 12 de Diciembre de 1531. Siendo en ese tiempo diez años del arribo de los conquistadores Españoles, y la caída del imperio Azteca. No solamente habían deponido los dioses terrenales de los Mexicanos, pero los dioses de los cielos también. Las Iglesias de fe Cristiana fueron construidas sobre las ruinas de los templos antiguos, y las imágenes de Cristo, y la Virgen María, y numerosos santos reemplazando aquellos dioses nativos.

Esto no quiere decir que la Cristiandad fue traída por los Españoles a América como algo completamente extranjero para los Indios. Habían ciertas similares entre las religiones del viejo mundo, y el nuevo. Ambos creían en la vida después de la vida, como ejemplo, y el concepto de que dio luz la virgen, y del supremo Dios. Ambos practicaban formas de bautismo, comunión, confesión, bajo la dirección de un cura o sacerdote célibe.

Pero habían muchas mas diferencias cosas similares, y la adopción de una nueva religión, asimilación dentro de la vida cotidiana, no era siempre una tarea simple para los Indios. Hasta en estos días, las practicas religiosas en México, como lo hacen alrededor del mundo, refleja una mezcla del viejo y del nuevo, del indígena y del introducido.

En esa mañana, en los últimos meses del año 1531, un Indio llamado Juan Diego caminando hacia la misión de San Francisco rumbo a la ciudad de México. Diego que en ese entonces ya lo cobijaba la fe Cristiana, y llendo a la misión para instrucción religiosa, y para escucha la Misa. En las afueras de la Ciudad de México, en el cerro del Tepeyac, el se paro cuando escucho el sonido de los pájaros, y la voz de una señora llamándolo. Siguiendo la voz, el se encontró ante una preciosa Imagen, de una señora de tés morena. Una leyenda Nahuatl del siglo diez y siete registra su aparición.

"Su prenda de vestir brillaba como la luz del sol. Las rocas en las que posaba brillaban con los rayos del sol, y se veían como tobillos de piedras preciosas, y se reflejaba en la tierra como un arco iris," se dice. "Los árboles de mesquite, las tunas con espinas, y las otras plantas que crecen en esa parte, parecían que estaban hechas de esmeraldas, sus hojas de fina turquesa, y sus ramas y espinas estaban brillando como el oro."

La visión se identificó como la Madre del

La temporada navideña significa el tiempo de compras para muchos residentes del Oeste de Tejas, así como ellos hagan sus listas de regalos para la familia, amigos especiales y compañeros de trabajo.

Pero la coalición del área de negocios y agencias de servicios se han unido para urgir a los compradores que ellos necesitan añadir mas personas a esta lista. Ellos están pidiendo que nosotros "Vistamos a una Muñeca en Vivo" (Dress A Live Doll).

Este programa, patrocinado por el Ejercito de Salvación, esta ahora en su año diez y nueve. Y en este tiempo, se a abrillantando la Navidad de miles de jovencitos de Midland.

Esta es la manera que el programa trabaja. Con la ayuda de maestros y concejales, el Ejercito de Salvación a identificado a muchachos desamparados en Midland. Cuando usted llama el Ejercito de Salvación, o visita una de sus establecimientos de Midland, usted a usted le es dada las medidas y los tamaños de ropa para uno de esos muchachos.

Los donantes compran un juego completo de ropa para ese muchacho tomando la ventaja de descuentos especiales ofrecidos por el vendedor local, para 'Vestir una Muñeca Viva" (Dress A Live Doll). Luego la ropa se trae al Ejercito de Salvación, el cual empacara para regalo, y entregara el día de Navidad. Para muchos de estos muchachos, tal vez será la única ropa nueva que ellos recibirán este año.

"Siento que ropa nueva en Navidad es algo muy especial para un jovencito," explica Mrs. Major Ken Bush, del Ejercito de Salvación de Midland, quien esta coordinando el evento de este año. "Ayuda a la propia estima ponerse ropa nueva, para verse bien ante los ojos de otros jovencitos."

Y de una manera, es también un regalo especial para usted mismo, un sentimiento que estará con usted a través de todo el año, sabiendo que usted a ayudado a un jovencito de Midland.

"Yo pienso. De que otra manera haremos algo, al menos que todos nosotros jalemos juntos," dice Bush.

A través de los años, esto también a venido siendo un programa muy popu-

U.S. labor movement must help Mexican workers organize

By Juan González

In the end, Bill Clinton, the huckster with the watery eyes and knowing smile, gave Wall Street an early Christmas present. Clinton, the Democrat, proved himself the cold-hearted equal of Republicans Ronald Reagan and George Bush by glibly shattering the hopes of U.S. workers.

Reagan gave the green light to the savage union-busting of the 1980s when he fired 11,000 striking air traffic controllers in 1981, his first year in office. Bush, for his part, vetoed an increase in the minimum wage as inflationary and fought anti-striker replacement legislation.

But Clinton has outdone them both.

First he retreated on his ambitious federal jobs program a few months into office. Now, as point man for the North American Free Trade Agreement he has provided the backing of a Democratic president for the massive flight of U.S. jobs to Mexico, the cheap-labor and polluter-friendly haven south of our border.

Is this what Clinton meant last year during the campaign when he said, "It's the economy, stupid"?

Both sides agree — after the most frenzied corporate lobbying and White House arm-twisting in recent memory, that on Jan. 1 a new economic era dawns in North America.

Call it the new corporate Gold Rush.

Any capitalist who can move his production to Mexico and doesn't should have his head examined. Of course, the experts, including just about every publisher and media mogul in the country — most of them well-known patron saints of the U.S. laborer — disagree. New markets abroad, they insist in chorus, will create new jobs here.

They never mention how much those new jobs will pay, how many will be part-time or what the fringe benefits, if any, will be.

But the vote, as anti-NAFTA Rep. David Bonior (D.Mich.) said in a moving speech, was "more than about money and markets — it's about basic values — it's about the dignity of work." One thing no one denies: U.S. workers in general and the organized labor movement in particular have suffered another crushing defeat.

Part of it can be blamed on the fat cat leaders of the AFL-CIO who became complacent too soon when it seemed in early November that NAFTA would go down to defeat.

"I can't believe how naive the AFL-CIO leadership is," says a top New York union official who asked not to be identified.

Now that the NAFTA vote is over, how do U.S. workers stop the continued erosion of their standard of living by the maximum-profit addicts in the big banks and multinational companies whose only flag is painted green?

The key is Mexico, already on the way to becoming the new industrial heartland of the United States. Just as corporate America now regards Canada, the United States and Mexico as one market, labor must treat it as one labor

El movimiento sindical Estadounidense debe ayudar a los trabajadores Mexicanos a organizarse

Por Juan González

Al final, Bill Clinton, el vendedor ambulante de los ojos aguados y la sonrisa socarrona, dio a Wall Street un regalo de Navidad temprano.

Clinton, el demócrata, probó ser un igual de corazón frío de los republicanos Ronald Reagan y George Bush, al desbaratar con soltura las esperanzas de los trabajadores estadounidenses.

Reagan puso la luz verde a la destrucción de los sindicatos en el decenio de 1980 cuando despidió a 11,000 controladores del tránsito aéreo en huelga en 1981, su primer año en el cargo. Bush, por su parte, vetó un aumento del salario mínimo como inflacionario y combatió a la legislación de reemplazo contra los huelguistas.

Pero Clinton los ha sobrepasado a ambos.

Primero, se retractó de su ambicioso programa de empleos federales pocos meses después de haber tomado posesión. Ahora, como encarrilador de NAFTA, el Tratado Norteamericano de Libre Comercio, ha dado el respaldo de un presidente demócrata a la huida en masa de los empleos estadounidenses hacia México, el refugio de la mano de obra barata y de los contaminadores de nuestra frontera meridional.

De modo que esto es lo que la campaña de Clinton quería decir el año pasado cuando decía: "Es la economía, estúpido."

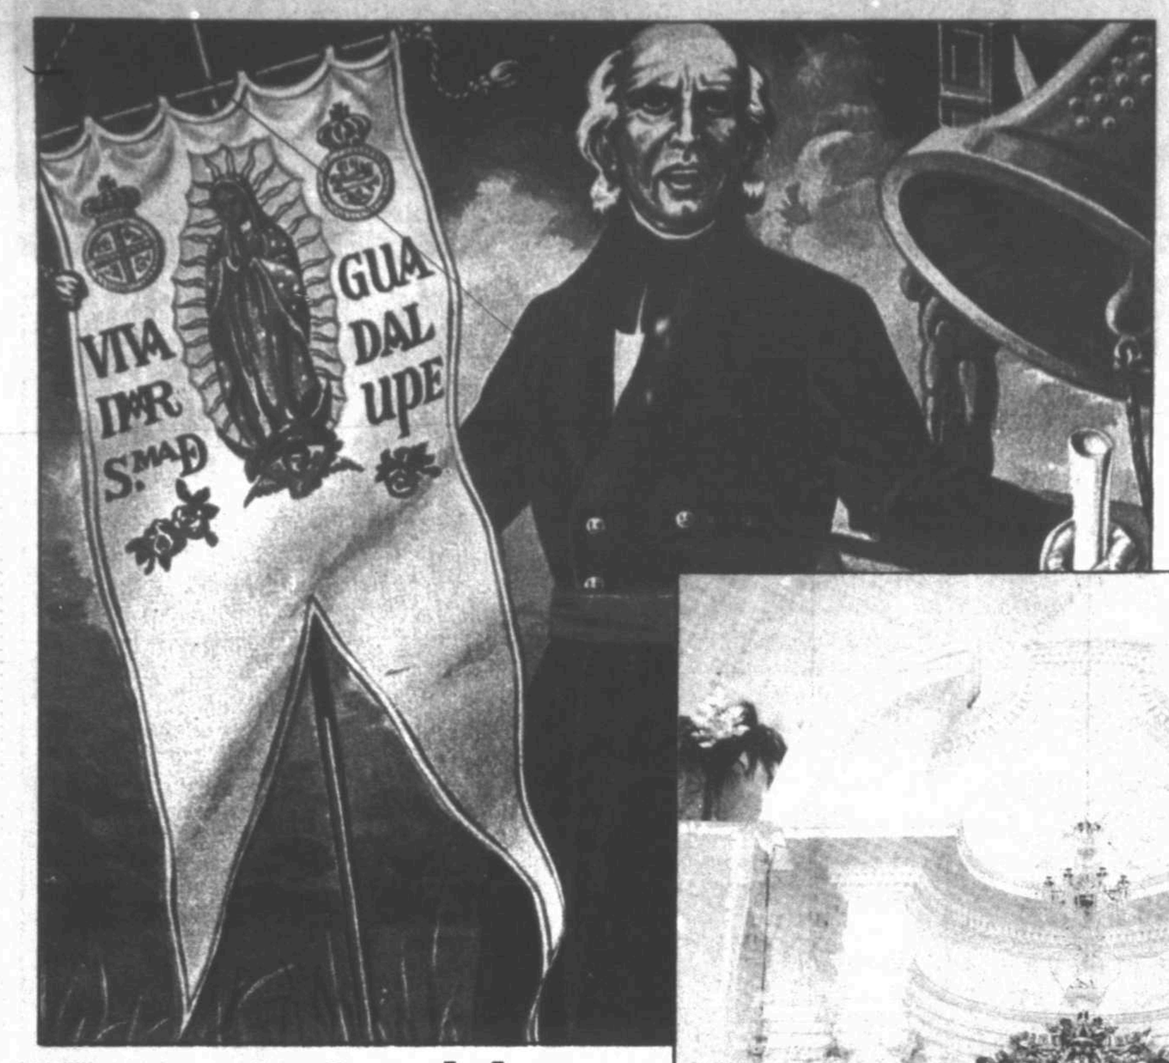

Ambas partes concuerdan, después del cabildeo empresarial y de la torcedura de brazos más frenéticos por parte de la Casa Blanca que se recuerde hace poco, que el 1x de Enero próximo, una nueva época económica amanecerá en la América del Norte.

Llámenle la nueva Fiebre del Oro empresarial.

Cualquier capitalista que pueda mudar su producción a México y no lo haga, deber a hacer que le examinaran la cabeza. Desde luego, los expertos, que incluyen a todos los directores y magnates de los medios informativos del país — la mayoría de ellos santos patrones bien conocidos del trabajador estadounidense — no están de acuerdo. Ellos insisten a coro que los nuevos mercados en el extranjero, crearán nuevos empleos aquí.

Ellos nunca mencionan cuánto pagarán esos nuevos empleos, cuántos de ellos serán a tiempo parcial o cuáles serán los beneficios marginales, si es que los hay.

EL MOVIMIENTO

Virgen de Guadalupe

Continua de la pagina 1

Verdadero Dios, y le dijo a Diego que ella quería que se le construyera una Iglesia en lo alte de ese cerro. De ahí, ella ayudaría y confortaría a Diego, y a sus amigos los Indios.

Diego llevo su mensaje a Fray Juan de Zumarraga, obispo de México, quien escucho la historia, sin hacer nada. Diego regreso al cerro para informar su fracaso, pero fue de nuevo motivado por la visión de la Virgen para que fuera una segunda vez. Una vez mas, Zumarraga escucho la historia, pero el insistió en una prueba.

Esta prueba fue proveida por la misma Virgen en la tercera visita. Ella cubrió la manta de Juan Diego de preciosas rosas de Castilla, las cuales las llevo con el obispo. Cuando Juan Diego abrió su manta, exponiendo las rosas en el suelo ante el obispo, la imagen de la Virgen, así como apareció en el cerro, milagrosamente apareció dibujada su imagen en la capa de Juan Diego. La capa fue enmarcada y puesta en una Iglesia, mas tarde en la Catedral, en el cerro del Tepeyac. En 1754, una orden Papal proclamo a la Virgen de Guadalupe como la patrona de la Nueva España.

La tés morena de la Virgen de Guadalupe, y su apariencia como un Indio , a contribuido en parte a su popularidad con la población nativa de México. Por lo cual ella a sido venerada por toda la gente.

«Siempre que pasaba cualquier Español por esta Iglesia, aunque fuera a caballo, ellos se apeaban y se introducían dentro de la Iglesia, y se incaban ante la imagen de la Virgen de Guadalupe y rezaban ante nuestra Madre para que los defendiera de todos los demonios,» escribe Miles Phillips, en los últimos del siglo diez y seis. «Si ellos no lo hicieran, ellos pensaban y creían que ellos nunca serían prósperos.»

Cuando el Padre Miguel Hidalgo levanto en grito la revolución de 1810, el eligió la imagen de la Virgen de Guadalupe, como el estandarte o bandera alrededor donde todos sus seguidores se congregaban.. Un sacerdote que sirvió las necesidades de una congregación empobrecida, hecha por Indios y otros de las clases sociales bajas de la colonia Española, Hidalgo sabia de la atracción tan especial de la Virgen que le tenia la gente.

Sin embargo Hidalgo seria capturado y fusilado, pero la revolución continuaría, y al final seria un éxito. Y la Virgen de Guadalupe sufriría con paciencia así como su imagen se reforzaría en todas partes, su gente y su fe. Un 12 de Diciembre que sigue siendo una fecha muy importante en el calendario religioso de México, un día de reverencias así como miles rezan ante la imagen en la capa de Juan Diego, la cual esta depositada en la nueva Basílica construida hace 15 años. Milagros han sido reportados sobre los siglos por aquellos que han rezado ente la Virgen de Guadalupe.

Así coma la presencia del Mexicano en América a crecido sobre los años, así se a sentido la presencia de la Virgen Morena. Numerosas iglesias a través de la nación se han dedicado por ella, así como la imagen enmarcada se expone. Como emblema de fe, nacionalismo, y orgullo etnico, la Virgen de Guadalupe es la imagen que ciertamente permanecerá en los corazones de la gente.

named Juan Diego was travelling to the Franciscan mission at Mexico City. Diego had already embraced the Christian faith, and was going to the mission for religious instruction, and to hear Mass. Just outside of Mexico City, on the hill of Tepayec, he stopped when he heard the sounds of birds singing, and a woman's voice calling to him. Following the voice, he came upon the image of a beautiful, dark-skinned woman. A seventeenth-century Nahuatl legend records her appearance.

"Her garments were as brilliant as the sun. The rock on which she stood was shot through with rays of the sun, and seemed like an anklet of precious stones, and it reflected on the ground like a rainbow," it said. "The mesquite trees, prickly pear, and the other plants that grow there, seemed to be made of emeralds, their leaves of fine turquoise, and their branches and thorns were as brilliant as gold."

The vision identified herself as the Mother of the True God, and told Diego she wanted a church to be built on this hilltop. From there, she would aid and comfort Diego and his fellow Indians.

Diego carried her message to Fray Juan de Zumarraga, the bishop of Mexico, who listened to the story, but did nothing. Diego returned to the hilltop to report his failure, but was urged to try again by a second vision of the Virgin. Again, Zumarraga listened to the story, but still insisted upon proof.

That proof was provided by the Virgin herself during a third visit. She covered the hilltop with Castillian roses in bloom. Diego filled his cloak with these roses, and carried them to the bishop. When he opened the cloak, spilling the roses before the bishop, an image of the Virgin, as she had appeared on the hill, miraculously appeared on the cloak. The cloak was enshrined in a church, and later a cathedral, on the hill in Tepayec. In 1754, a Papal bull proclaimed the Virgin of Guadalupe as the patroness of New Spain.

The dark skin of the Virgin of Guadalupe, and her appearance to a common Indian, has contributed in part to her popularity with the native population of Mexico. But she was revered by all people.

"Whensoever any Spaniards pass by this church, although they be on horseback, they will alight and come into the church, and kneel before this image, and pray to our Lady to defend them from all evil," wrote Miles Phillips, late in the sixteenth-century. "If they do not, they think and believe that they shall never prosper."

When Father Miguel Hidalgo raised the cry of revolution in 1810, he selected the image of the Virgin as the banner around which his followers flocked. A priest who served the needs of an impoverished congregation, made up of Indians and others in the lower social classes of the Spanish colony, Hidalgo knew the special attraction the Virgin held for them.

Although Hidalgo would soon be captured and executed, the revolution would continue, and ultimately succeed. And the Virgin of Guadalupe would endure as a powerful image of the county, it's people, and their faith. December 12th remains an important date in the religious calendar of Mexico, a day of reverence as thousands come to pray before the image on Juan Diego's cloak, which is now housed in a new basilica built 15 years ago. Miracles have been reported over the centuries by those who have come to pray before the image of the Virgin.

As Mexican presence in America has grown over the centuries, so has the presence of the dark-skinned Virgin. Numerous churches across the country are dedicated to her, as are many household shrines. As an emblem of faith, nationalism, and ethnic pride, the Virgin of Guadalupe is an image that will certainly endure in the hearts of the people, wherever thy may be.

confina a si mismo para protección igual, y como en el Cielo, la lluvia estará a favor tanto en las alturas como en las llanuras, el rico y el pobre, será una bendición incondicional.»

Si una escuela publica esta bajo finanzas, fináncese propiamente. Si esta insegura, hagala segura. Este es el compromiso adecuado que cada Americano deberá hacer a cada muchacho de América. El plan Kemp-Bennett es: dejar a los acaudalados volar pero dejen que a la clase media los subsidien, y dejen a los pobres sufrir porque ellos de todos modos no votan por nosotros los Republicanos.

Hay sus excepciones pero es la correlación entre los ingresos familiares y la inquietud de los padres acerca del bienestar de los muchachos. Esos muchachos que realmente estàn sufriendo mas por la negligencia de los padres o la indiferencia serán las que se dejen atrás por el éxodo para las mejores escuelas publicas.

Pero en realidad no hay una mejor escuela publica. Ninguna debe estar mejor equipada que otra, con mejor personal, o ofreciendo mejores cursos que otra. Si alguna lo hace, los muchachos en el sistema están siendo defraudados.

Estos neo-conservadores, estos Republicanos del Wall Street con sus falsedades de población retórica, merece ir dentro de las cenizas de la historia. Se dice que todo lo que usted necesita saber que Republicanos están pagando a Mikhail Gorbachev, un impenitente aun cuando los comunistas están desbalanceados, $50,000 para hablar a voz alta, altos fondos recabados por Republicanos. Para toda la gente en la tierra, que el ex-KGB seria al ultimo que un Americano decente invitara a hablar. Fue su incompetencia, no son intenciones, de cortar al comunismo.

Hispanic business... is good business

By Jeffrey McDonald

It's a busy time ahead for the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, and they're hoping that more concerned individuals, businesses, and civic organizations will become a part of the chamber, and it's activities.

On Tuesday, December 7th, the Hispanic Chamber will co-host a series of financial seminars with the Texas Association of Mexican American Chambers of Commerce (TAMACC), and NationsBank. The day begins with registration at 9:00 a.m. at NationsBank, 303 W. Wall, in Midland. The first seminar, "Developing Banking Relationships", begins at 9:30, and the second seminar, "Cash Flow Management Versus Profitability", begins at 11:00.

A working lunch break follows, at 12:00. The topic will be "How To Do Business With NationsBank", and will be presented by a member of that institution's Minority Business Development staff. After lunch, individual counseling sessions for business owners will be offered.

All sessions, including the working lunch, are offered free of charge to members of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, and the Texas Association of Mexican American Chamber of Commerce. For more information about the event, please call Charlene Romero Wurtz, Executive Director of the Hispanic Chamber at (915) 682-2960.

Adding to a busy month of activity, December is membership renewal time for the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. New memberships are also being encouraged at this time. The chamber offers a wide variety of membership categories, tailored to meet the needs of various individuals and institutions.

There is the Individual & Professional category, which costs $65 for the year. Members in this category receive one principal vote in chamber elections. Members in the Non-Profit category also receive one vote, with a $65 membership fee.

For businesses, membership categories and fees are based upon the size of the company. Those with less than 11 employees pay $110, and receive two principal votes. Those with 11-50 employees pay $165, and receive three votes. And those with 50-100 employees pay $225, and receive four votes. Companies with more than 100 employees come under the Corporate membership category. They pay a $525 membership fee, and receive five principal votes.

Members of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce are active throughout the year, improving the entire community of Midland through educational initiatives and scholarships for young people, networking opportunities and seminars for businesses, and fundraising through social and entertainment activities. Members of the Hispanic Chamber are automatically enrolled as members of the Texas Association of Mexican American Chambers of Commerce.

Las Tarjetas Latinas auguran una Navidad de abundancia para 1993

Por Margaret Hoyos

Desde el sentimiento tradicional de "Feliz Navidad" hasta los "mensajitos" de moda que se intercambian los escolares, las tarjetas de felicitación en español, están en boga y cada vez más. La temporada de Navidad, dicen los productores de tarjetas, es la más productiva para ellos con mucho.

Impulsadas por una demanda cada vez mayor de los consumidores Latinos, las empresas de tarjetas de felicitación están aumentando continuamente sus líneas de productos en español. Este surgimiento refleja a las cifras de la Oficina del Censo de los Estados Unidos, las cuales muestran que los 27 millones de Latinos de la nación tienen un poder adquisitivo que asciende casi a $200,000 millones, más que el doble de la cantidad de hace 10 años.

Hallmark Cards Inc., el fabricante con sede en Kansas City, Missouri, tiene 1,500 tarjetas en su línea "Primor" en español, lo cual es un aumento dramático desde las 44 tarjetas que presentó en 1983.

Aunque las tarjetas de Navidad y para el Día de las Madres son, con mucho, las que más se venden, la portavoz de Hallmark, Amanda Kleiboeker, dice que las tarjetas religiosas destinadas a las madrinas, los padrinos y los días especiales, tales como el Día de Reyes, el Día de los Muertos y el de Todos los Santos, se venden continuamente durante todo el año.

La línea "Primor" se vende mejor en Los Angeles, Chicago, Nueva York y Miami. Las tarjetas de "mensajitos" de Hallmark, con mensajes en ellas, se venden bien en las ciudades mayores. Los niños intercambian las tarjetitas con sus amigos.

El gigantesco fabricante de tarjetas American Greetings Corp., de Cleveland, anunció recientemente que estaba ampliando su línea en español, "La Flor," en un 20%.

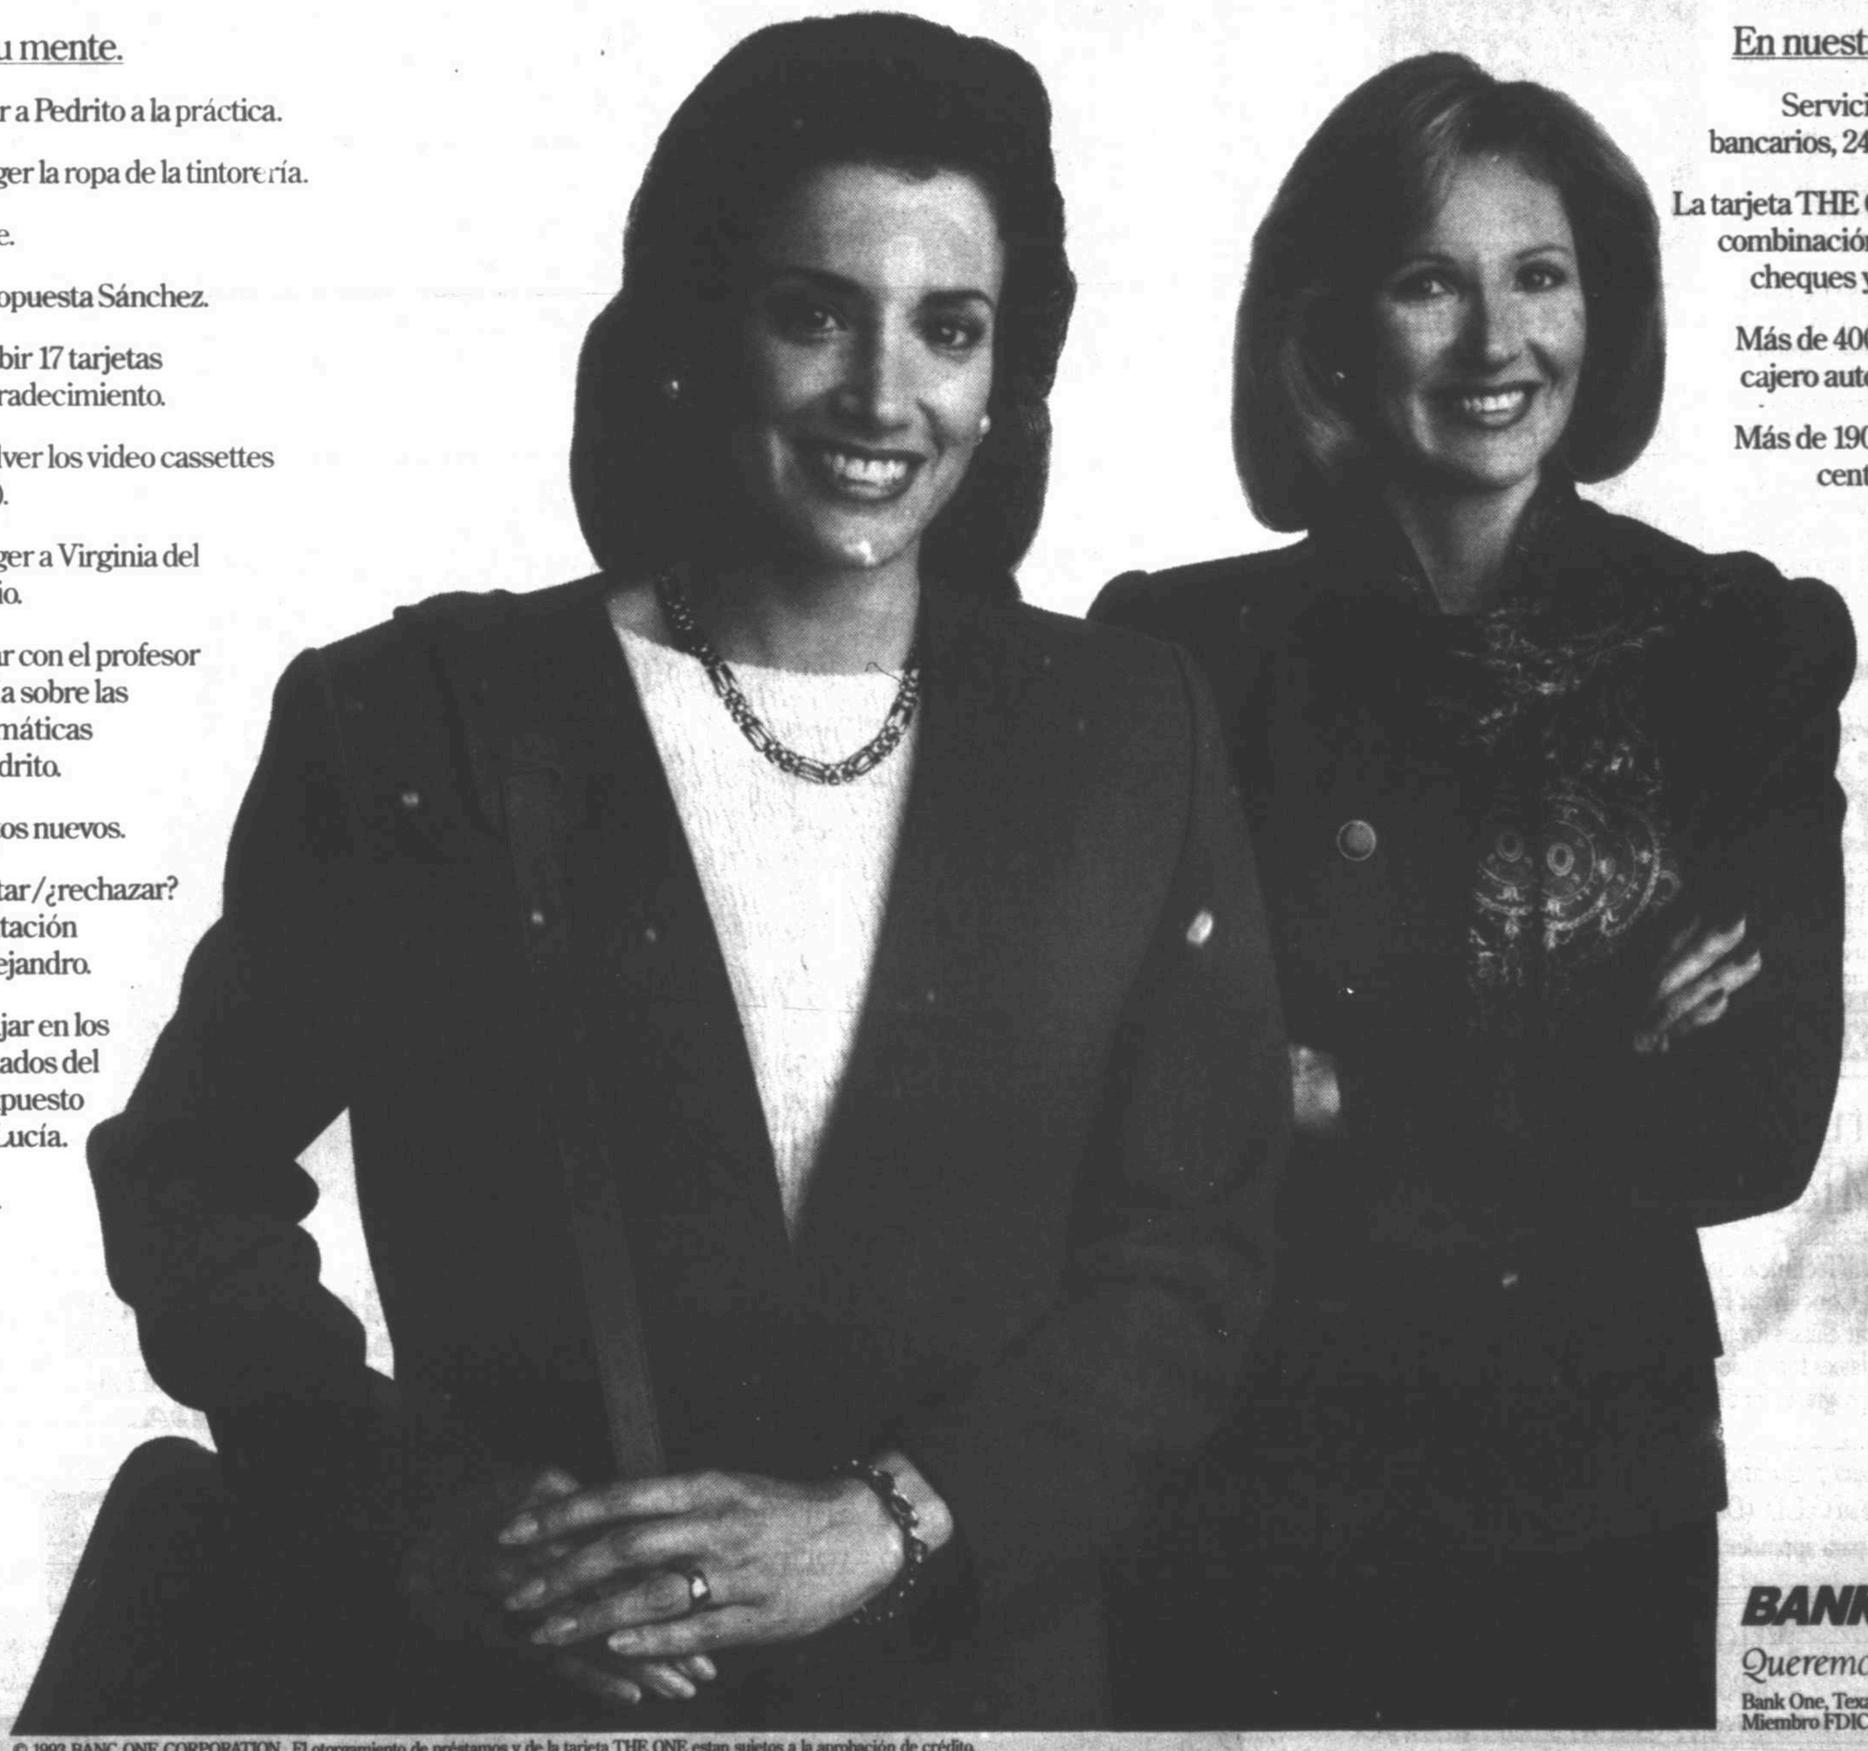

Según José Martinez, del grupo de administración de productos en español de American Greetings, las tarjetas en español representan el 16% de la línea conjunta de productos de esa empresa. La compañia

ENFOQUE A LA SALUD

Por el Baylor College of Medicine en Houston, Texas

HOUSTON—Una inyección sencilla puede traer alivio a los 12 millones de personas en este país que sufren de migrañas.

"Es semejante a las inyecciones que toman los diabéticos," dijo el Dr. Howard Derman, profesor asistente de neurologia del Baylor College of Medicine en Houston.

El medicamento, sumatriptan, no evitara las migrañas, pero en la mayoría de los pacientes, detendrá la migraña. "Los pacientes toman la inyección solo cuando sienten que les viene una migraña," dijo Derman.

Las migrañas se caracterizan por dolor en un lado de la cabeza, usualmente sobre el ojo o la mejilla, náusea o vomito, y sensibilidad a la luz. La mayoría de las migrañas duran de dos a cuatro horas y ocurren principalmente en mujeres.

Anteriormente se creía que eran causadas por en espasmo de un vaso sanguíneo, pero los investigadores ahora creen que las migrañas resultan de una interaccion entre un químico cerebral, la serotonina, y los vasos sanguíneos conectados a los nervios del cerebro.

"El sumatriptan es el primer medicamento para la migraña que se dirige a la secrecion de serotonina en vez del espasmo vascular," dijo Derman.

El medicamento se ha podido obtener en los Estados Unidos por cuatro meses. "Proporciona alivio rápidamente, usualmente en menos de 20 minutos, y has sido bien tolerado por mas o menos 80 porciento de los pacientes," dijo Derman. "Se alivian la náusea, el dolor de cabeza y la sensibilidad a la luz."

Derman menciona efectos secundarios mínimos como un poco de molestia en el pecho y sensación de hinchazón en la garganta que ocurren inmediatamente al recibir la inyección. Estas sensaciones desaparecen rápidamente y no causan ningún problema.

"Los pacientes con presión alta y una historia de enfermedad cardíaca no deben tomar el medicamento," dijo Derman. "Pero esto no afecta a muchos pacientes puesto que las migrañas tienden a empezar en la adolescencia y disminuir alrededor de los 40 años de edad."

Se probara una forma nasal del medicamento en el otoño en 50 centros en los Estados Unidos, incluyendo Baylor. Derman espera que la forma oral de sumatriptan, que se usa actualmente en el extranjero, será disponible en un año.

FOCUS ON HEALTH

Baylor College of Medicine, Houston, Texas

HOUSTON—A simple injection can bring relief for the nation's 12 million migraine sufferers.

"It is similar to the shots that diabetics take," said Dr. Howard S. Derman, assistant professor of neurology at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

The drug, sumatriptan, will not prevent migraines, but in most patients it will stop a migraine. "Patients take the shot only when they feel a migraine coming," Derman said.

Migraines are characterized by pain on one side usually over the eye or cheek, nausea or vomiting, and sensitivity to light. Most migraines last from two to four hours and occur primarily in women.

Previously thought to be caused by blood vessel spasm, researchers now believe migraines are an interaction between a brain chemical, serotonin, and blood vessels connected to nerves in the brain.

"Sumatriptan is the first migraine drug that works on serotonin release of blood vessel spasm," Derman said.

The drug has been available in the United States for four months. "it provide quick relief, usually in less than 20 minutes, and has been well tolerated by about 80 percent of patients," Derman said. "The nausea, head pain and light sensitivity are alleviated."

Derman sites minor side effects as mild chest discomfort and fullness of the throat that occurs immediately upon injection. These feelings subside quickly and do not cause any problems.

"Patients with high blood pressure and a history of heart disease should not take the drug," Derman said. "But that does not affect too many patients since migraines tend to begin in the teen years and taper off around age 40."

A nasal form of the drug will be tested in the fall by 50 U.S. centers, including Baylor. Derman expects the oral form of sumatriptan, currently used overseas, to be available in a year.

Pero la votación, como dijo el Representante David Bonior (demócrata por Michigan) contrario a NAFTA, en un discurso conmovedor, fue "más que acerca de dinero y mercados — se trata de valores fundamentales — de la dignidad del trabajo."

Algo que nadie niega: Los trabajadores estadounidenses en general y el movimiento sindical organizado en particular, han sufrido otra derrota aplastante.

De una parte de ella puede culparse a los dirigentes gordos de la AFL-CIO que llegaron a estar complacidos demasiado pronto, cuando a principios de Noviembre parecía que NAFTA seria derrotado.

"No puedo creer cuán ingenua es la dirigencia de la AFL-CIO," dice un dirigente sindical de alto rango de Nueva York, quien pidió que no se le identificara.

Ahora que la votación sobre NAFTA ha pasado, ¿de qué modo detienen los trabajadores de los Estados Unidos el desgaste continuo de su nivel de vida por parte de los adictos a las utilidades máximas en los grandes bancos y las empresas multi-nacionales, cuya única bandera está pintada de verde?

La clave es México, que ya va en camino de convertirse en el nuevo corazón industrial de los Estados Unidos. De igual modo que los empresarios estadounidenses consideran ahora al Canadá, los Estados Unidos y México como un sólo mercado, el sindicalismo debe tratarlo como un sólo movimiento sindical.

He aquí los detalles de una estrategia sindical que podría dar la vuelta a NAFTA, al enfocarse sobre los jornales Mexicanos en aumento, quitando así los estímulos a la huida industrial:

1) Substanciar el efecto de NAFTA: Un programa sindical para registrar cada planta que cierre en los Estados Unidos y abra nuevas operaciones en México, y para responsabilizar a los que votaron por NAFTA por sus efectos.

2) Comenzar un programa de Viajeros Sindicales por la Libertad: De igual modo que en los días de la lucha por los derechos civiles, los sindicatos estadounidenses deberían enviar brigadas — digamos de 500 o 1,000 organizadores sindicales que hablen español — a México, tan pronto como sea posible, para ayudar a las campañas de organización en las plantas estadounidenses, para substanciar las circunstancias de trabajo y ambientales en esas plantas y para observar al gobierno Mexicano en el cumplimiento de sus leyes.

3) Dirigir ayuda económica a los sindicatos Mexicanos: Muchas oficinas sindicales que he visitado en zonas remotas de la América Latina y el Caribe carecen de los recursos más indispensables — teléfono, máquinas de facsimil, autos decentes para los organizadores instalaciones de imprenta. Pequeñas cantidades de dinero — ese boleto de $1,000 para el recaudador de fondos de aquel político que votó por NAFTA, por ejemplo — podría significar la victoria de una campaña de sindicalización en Juárez.

4) Comunicaciones modernas, una Radio Sindical Libre: Establecer transmisiones radiales periódicas en español desde el lado estadounidense de la frontera hacia la zona de las maquiladoras de México, donde trabaja un millón de Mexicanos en 2,000 plantas de propiedad estadounidense.

5) No esperen por la AFL-CIO: Los sindicatos progresistas individuales, tales como los Trabajadores Automovilísticos Unidos, los Trabajadores de las Comunicaciones, el Sindicato Amalgamado de los Trabajadores del Vestido y Textiles, el Sindicato de los Trabajadores del Petróleo, los Productos Químicos y Atómicos, deberían dar el ejemplo. Si se espera por Lane Kirkland y sus amigotes para que actúen, el milenio llegará y la mitad de los miembros actuales de los sindicatos estarán trabajando con jornales de McDonalds y Burger King.

El 1x de Enero próximo, a medida que las barreras caigan para los negocios, también lo harán para la mano de obra. La lucha dista de haber terminado. Sólo que el ruedo se ha ampliado.

movement.

Here is the outline of a labor strategy that could turn NAFTA around by focusing on raising Mexican wages, thus removing incentives to industrial flight:

1) Document NAFTA's effect. A union program to chronicle every plant that closes in the United States and opens new operations in Mexico, and to hold those who voted for NAFTA responsible for it's effects

2) Start a Labor Freedom Rider program. Just as in civil rights days, U.S. unions should send brigades — say 500 or 1,000 union organizers who speak Spanish — into Mexico as soon as possible to assist organizing drives at U.S. plants, to document labor and environmental conditions at those plants and to monitor Mexican government enforcement of its laws.

3) Direct financial aid to Mexican unions. Many union offices I have visited in remote areas of Latin America and the Caribbean lack the most minimal resources — telephone, fax machines, decent cars for organizers, printing facilities. Small amounts of money — that $1,000 ticket to the fund-raiser for that politician who voted for NAFTA, for instance — could mean the victory of a unionizing drive in Juárez.

4) Modern communications, a Radio Free Labor. Establish regular radio broadcasts in Spanish from the U.S. side of the border into Mexico,s maquiladora zone, where half-million Mexicans work in 2,000 U.S.-owned plants.

5) Don't wait for the AFL-CIO. Individual progressive unions like the United Auto Workers, the Communication Workers, the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union, the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union should set the example. If you wait for Lane Kirkland and his cronies to act, the millennium will be here and half of today's current union members will be working at McDonald's and Burger King wages.

On Jan. 1, as the barriers come down for business, so do they for labor. The fight is far from over. Only the ring has expanded.

Home heating tips for the winter

By Jeffrey McDonald

It's become a fact of life in most homes in winter; as the temperature outside goes down, the cost of heating the inside goes up. The greater demands placed upon gas and electric utilities can not only be measured in the higher rates we pay on our monthly bills, but in the increased drain upon the natural resources consumed to produce the energy to heat our homes.

But some consumers may be surprised to learn that utility companies will be happy to help you reduce the energy consumption in your home, thus reducing your monthly utility bill. And that's not only during the cold winter season, but throughout the year.

The information you need to reduce home heating costs, is available in many ways. Literature, printed in both English and Spanish, is distributed regularly with the monthly bills sent out by utility companies. This literature is also available through your local utility company office.

Utility companies also engage in community outreach. A recent example was when the Energas Company delivered a bilingual presentation at Midland's Casa de Amigos. Most utility companies also maintain a staff of community relations personnel during normal business hours. You can visit with them, or you can contact them by telephone, with your questions.

You could also request a visit to your home, from a representative of your local utility company. Among other things, that representative could show you how to read your utility meter. They could also conduct an 'audit of your home, which could identify areas where energy is being wasted, and how they could be corrected. An audit can also be done through the mail, with your filling out a home energy questionnaire supplied by the utility company.

Utility company representatives stress that there are many ways that consumers can reduce energy consumption in their home, thus reducing their monthly utility bill. Many of these energy-reduction methods are free, or very inexpensive, and can be easily done by the energy consumers themselves.

Thermostat: for economy, set the your heater's thermostat at 68°. Set it at 63° if you're going to be gone for the day, and between 50° and 60°, if you're going to be gone for several days.

You can also set the thermostat at a lower temperature at night, when you're sleeping.

If you have central heating, set the thermostat for 'Automatic', rather than 'On', or 'Continuous'.

Passive Solar Heating: keep shades and drapes open to allow as much sun as possible, to warm your home. When the sun is not shining, keeping the shades or drapes closed, to keep the heat inside.

Fireplaces: while they may contribute to heating your home, they can also drain heat from your home. when your fireplace is not in use, keep the flue closed. Otherwise, your heat will escape through the chimney.

Hot Water Heaters: a well-maintained hot water heater not only conserves energy, it conserves water, too, saving you additional money.

Don't set your hot water heater's thermostat at the highest setting. 140° is sufficient. If you have a dishwasher with it's own water heating device, you can set your hot water heater even lower - 120°.

Most hardware and building supply stores sell inexpensive insulation 'blankets' or 'jackets' that will fit over your hot water heater, conserving even more heat and energy.

Wall Outlets: believe it or not, heat is escaping through the outlets installed in your wall. This can be stopped with inexpensive, easy-to-install, foam gaskets that can be purchased at hardware and building supply stores. These gaskets are pre-cut to fit both electrical outlets, and switchplates (single or multiple).

Window and Door Frames: a major source of heat loss. Weatherstripping, installed on the frames around windows and doors, is an inexpensive and easy-to-install method for reducing the heat loss. Caulking, while a little more difficult than weatherstripping, is another inexpensive and efficient way of reducing heat loss. Everything you need is at your local hardware or building supply store.

Floor Heaters: these are not the bargain that many people think they are. Though small, they still consume a tremendous amount of energy. You're actually better off using your home's heating system.

Similarly, running your oven is a relatively inefficient, expensive, and dangerous way of heating your home. Again, you're better off using your home's heating system.

For the cost of a floor heater, you might instead consider a humidifier, which makes the air feel warmer, making you more comfortable, with less heat.

Insulation: this is more expensive than the other tips we've presented, and more difficult to install. But the savings could be tremendous.

The ceiling is the area of the greatest heat loss, and should receive your attention first. The ductwork that transports air to different rooms in your home, may also need to be insulated.

An energy audit conducted in your home could make recommendations on where you could improve heating efficiency, and reduce costs, by installing or upgrading insulation.

More and more, contractors are building 'energy smart' homes, where the efficient and inexpensive consumption of energy is a top priority. But that doesn't mean our older homes can't be warm and comfortable during the cold winter season. For the most part, you can be reducing your heating bill, with just a small investment of your time, and little or no investment of your money.

Getting the information you need, is the first step. The local office of your utility company is one source of information. Your local library or bookstore, is another source. The salesman at the hardware and building supply store is still another source.

Bonilla criticizes House leadership for rejecting spending cuts

Henry Bonilla

WASHINGTON—Despite all the rhetoric about wanting to cut spending first, the House Leadership and White House rejected the bi-partisan Penny-Kasich Amendment which would have provided for real deficit reduction, Congressman Henry Bonilla (R-Texas-23) charged Monday night.

"This is the ultimate illustration of how foul Washington politics can be," Bonilla said. "Many people who claim they want to cut spending resorted to scare tactics and misinformation to avoid making the difficult choices."

The Penny-Kasich Amendment would have cut more than $90 billion in federal spending over five years with all of those savings going toward deficit reduction.

"In the past week, the President's cabinet, the House leadership and powerful special-interest groups have been engages in a full-court press to get members of Congress to kill Penny-Kasich," Bonilla said. "They have been spreading innuendo and untruths to frighten the public into thinking we can't cut spending."

"If the Congress cannot even support a proposal to cut just one penny from every dollar spent by the federal government, how will it ever do anything to reduce the deficit?" Bonilla said. "This vote on the eve of adjournment and in the dark of the night proves what every Texan already knows: virtually everything is under federal control these days except the federal budget."

"The vote on Penny-Kasich proved once again that while many Washington politicians might talk the talk, when it comes to making tough choices to reduce the deficit, they won't walk the walk," Bonilla said.

Late Monday night, Congress voted down the amendment sponsored by Congressmen John Kasich (R-Ohio) and Tim Penny (D-Minn.) by a margin of 219 to 213. Bonilla voted in favor of the deficit reduction measure.

Tarifas de camionetas tipo 'van' de pasajeros:

William Duncan, Ph. D.

Cuando es una van de pasajeros, un camión?

En cualquier tiempo se esta fabricando en otro país, de acuerdo con el Gobierno de los Estados Unidos. Y la razón es que a los Americanos debe de importarles es que si el gobierno hace las cosas a su manera, nos va a costar a todos muy caro.

Aquí esta la historia: Importadores de vehículos de pasajeros pagan el 2.5% cuando estos traen sus productos a los Estados Unidos, mientras esos camiones de carga importados pagan la exorbitante tarifa del 25%.

Hoy en día, las camionetas de pasajeros tipo van y la mayoría de los vehículos son importados como vehículos de pasajeros - siendo algo justificado. Una mirada a la propaganda del Big Three para estos vehículos es suficiente para que le digan a uno que ellos tratan con estos como vehículos de pasajeros - que es, a menos que usted considere que un mini-autobús lleno de chicos camino a su practica de soccer o una carga llena de productos alimenticios."

Pero un simple apunte de los servicios de aduana de los Estados Unidos pondrá a estos vehículos en la categoría de camiones, y un cargo

Lets add one more name

Christmas time means shopping time for many West Texas residents, as they put together a list of gift items for family, special friends, and co-workers.

But a coalition of area businesses and service agencies has come together to urge holiday shoppers that they add one more person to that list. They're asking that we 'Dress A Live Doll'.

This program, sponsored by the Midland Salvation Army, is now in it's nineteenth year. In that time, it has brightened the Christmas of thousands of Midland youngsters.

This is how the program works. With the assistance of school teachers and counselors, the Salvation Army has identified underpriveleged children in Midland. When you call the Salvation Army, or visit one of their Midland business locations, you are given the measurements and clothing sizes for one of those children.

Donors purchase a complete set of clothing for the child, often taking advantage of special discounts offered by local merchants, for 'Dress A Live Doll' purchases. The clothes are then brought to the Salvation Army, which will package them, and deliver them in time for Christmas. For most of these children, it may be the only new clothing they will receive this year.

"I feel that new clothes at Christmas is something very special to a child," explained Mrs. Major Ken Bush, of the Midland Salvation Army, who is coordinating this year's event. "It helps their self-esteem to put on new clothes, to look good before the other children."

In a way, it's also a special gift for yourself, a feeling that will stay with you throughout the year, knowing that you've helped a Midland youngster.

"I think so. How else would we get something done, unless we all pull together," said Bush.

Over the years, this has also become a popular program in which groups can participate. Co-workers in a business, for example, will pool their resources, in order to buy a set of clothing, as will students from a single class or school, and even neighbors.

"We need the large groups pulling together," explained Bush. "The churches, the civic groups, the business."

The Salvation Army of Midland, which sponsors the program, is a non-profit agency. Your purchases and contributions to the 'Dress A Live Doll' program are tax-deductible.

For more information about the 1993 Dress A Live Doll program, you may contact Mrs. Major Ken Bush, at the Salvation Army of Midland, phone number 697-7262.

Inmediatamente algunos 200,000 de estos vehículos, serán marcados en el mercado de los Estados Unidos, y el Big Three, que en estos momentos controla el 90% del mercado de estos vehículos en los Estados Unidos capturara el 100%.

Con la competencia de Europa y Japón fuera del mercado, en que manos usted cree que estarán los consumidores de los Estados Unidos? siendo no los únicos los precios de importación que se vayan a incrementar.

Presupuestos independientes tales como los de GM, Ford y Chrysler son también unos de los que están pensando en tomar ventaja de su nuevo asimiento en el mercado para incrementar los precios en un promedio de $1,300.00 por vehículo.

Una reciente historia en el área nos informa. Que en 1980, los Estados Unidos aplico el 25% en las tarifas de importación en las cabinas y chasis de camiones. Y también se aplicó en las camionetas compactas domésticas un 29% en los pasados tres años.

Serán estas tarifas las que ayudaran a crear empleos para los Americanos? No cuenten con esto. Cerca de la mitad de las camionetas de pasajeros tipo van marca Chrysler vendidas en este país son hechas en Canadá. Sin embargo, el acuerdo bilateral con Canadá los excluye a ellos de la tarifa. La tarifa incrementara las rentas públicas para el Departamento de Tesorería, como algunos dicen, hasta unos $300 millones de dólares? No cuenten con esto tampoco. Los impuestos de importación para la renta pública se estima asumiendo los vehículos que actualmente se han importado. Veinticinco por ciento de cero es todavía cero.

Y que, acercas de esas compañías que venden $50 billones en aeroplanos, computadoras, químicos, soya, maíz, y otros productos que los Estados Unidos embarca al Japón?

Buena esa simple marca con la pluma en los servicios de aduana de los Estados Unidos marcara una violación clave en el acuerdo del tratados internacional, incluyendo el Acuerdo General en Tarifas e Intercambio (GATT).

Estos acuerdo claramente prohiben intercambio de socios de aumentar las tarifas por medio de manipular la clasificación de las tarifas en los productos.

Los Japoneses y Europeos socios en intercambio comercial sin duda demandaran compensación en contra de las exportaciones de los Estados Unidos en exceso de $2 billones de dólares.

El Big Three quiere poner una barrera en contra de la competencia de importación sabiendo que ellos tendrán ganancias en el proceso. Esta es la única razón por la que le están diciendo al Presidente Clinton, y a todos los que escuchen, que las camionetas de pasajeros tipo van están diseñadas para transportar ladrillos, cemento, y fertilizantes.

Basta, ya no mas! Bastante es suficiente!

LATINO CARDS BODE A BOUNTIFUL '93 YULE

By Margaret Hoyos

From the traditional sentiment of Feliz Navidad to the trendy "mensajitos" traded between schoolchildren, Spanish-language greeting cards are hot and getting hotter. Christmas, say card-producers, is by far their most lucrative season.

Spurred by a growing demand from Latino consumers, greeting card companies are steadily expanding their Spanish-language product lines. This surge reflects U.S. Census Bureau figures showing that the nation's 27 million Latinos have a purchasing power worth nearly $200 billion, more than twice the amount of 10 years ago.

Hallmark Cards Inc., the Kansas City, Mo.-based manufacturer, has 1,500 cards in its Spanish-language Primor line, a dramatic increase from the 44 cards it introduced in 1983.

While Christmas and Mother's Day cards are by far the best-sellers, Hallmark spokesperson Amanda Kleiboeker says religious cards intended for madrinas y padrinos — godparents — and for special days such as dias de los reyes, de los muertos y los santos sell steadily throughout the year.

The Primor line sells best in Los Angeles, Chicago, New York and Miami. Hallmark's "mensajitos," cards with messages on them, sell well in the larger cities. Schoolchildren trade the small cards with friends.

Cardmaker giant American Greetings Corp. of Cleveland recently announced that it was expanding its Spanish-language line, La Flor, by 20 percent.

According to José Martinez, of American Greetings, Spanish product management group, Spanish-language cards represent about 16 percent of American Greetings, overall product line. The company reports annual revenues of $1.7 billion.

The company's research shows that La Flor buyers are 57 percent Mexican American, 19 percent Puerto Rican, 19 percent Central and South American and 5 percent Cuban.

The production increase in Spanish-language or Latino-influenced greeting cards is not limited to big greeting card makers. Independent artists and companies also report an expanding demand.

Diana Bryer, who owns Rumpelstiltskin Productions in Santa Cruz, N.M., paints a line of cards depicting Mexican-influenced scenes. One of her most popular, a Nativity scene with a Mexican Maria and baby Jesús, sold out well ahead of Christmas.

But Bryer has others in stock, like a Mexican Santa Claus wearing a poncho entitled "Manuel Rudolfo Claus," after Bryer's husband, Manuel.

Like other small card makers, Bryer doesn't talk in terms of census and research statistics, but says sales of her products are up because the economy is up.

Her cards also sell well among non-Spanish-speaking people, perhaps reflecting the popularity of Southwestern culture. She offers a boxed set called Southwest Tradition, which features cards titled: "Picking Pinons," "Cleaning the Acequia," "New Mexico Lovers," "Making Chili Ristras" and "La Llorona." The Mexican Museum in San Francisco features her cards.

"The market has always been there, but the mainstream card business has just woken up to the demand," says José Antonio Burciaga, an artist at California's Stanford University. Burciaga sells a line of cards he has designed over the years, which grew from drawings he did for his family Christmas cards.

Lohr González, owner of Pava Prints in San Juan, Puerto Rico, concurs. She says stores are buying more and manufacturers are producing more Spanish-language cards because they've just discovered their profitability.

González is in a position to know. Pava Prints is celebrating its 40th year in business. It markets almost exclusively to residents of Puerto Rico.

Its one foray into the continental market several years ago offered a card depicting Santa on a hammock under palm trees and setting sun.

"It sold well and we were asked for more, but we pulled it to concentrate on the Puerto Rican market," she says. Its designs this year depict uniquely Puerto Rican themes. Its all-time best-seller was an oil-painting depicting items traditionally associated with a Puerto Rican Christmas, including a cuatro (a type of guitar), gourd, coconut and maracas.

Burciaga has several cards available this year. A card titled "Three Wise Men" shows three men on horseback crossing through a break in a border fence; others include a cross that says "Paz Raza"; and "Poinsettia" tells the story of the flower's pre-Columbian history.

informa de ingresos anuales de $1,700 millones.

Las investigaciones de la compañia muestran que los compradores de "La Flor" son 57% Mexico-Americanos, 19% Puertorriqueños, 19% centro y sur Americanos y 5% Cubanos. "El aumento de la producción de tarjetas de felicitación en español o con influencia Latina no se limita a los grandes fabricantes de tarjetas. Los artistas y las empresas independientes informan también de una demanda creciente.

Diana Bryer, propietaria de la pequeña firma Rumplestiltskin Productions, de Santa Cruz, Nuevo México, pinta una línea de tarjetas que presenta escenas con influencia Mexicana. Una de sus tarjetas más populares, una escena de la natividad con una Virgen María y un Niño Jesús Mexicanos, se ha vendido con mucha anticipación a la Navidad.

Pero Bryer tiene otras en existencia, como un Santa Claus Mexicano que lleva un poncho, titulada "Manuel Rudolfo Claus," por el nombre de su esposo, Manuel.

Como otros fabricantes pequeños de tarjetas, Bryer no habla en términos del censo y las estadísticas de investigaciones, sino que cree que las ventas de sus productos han aumentado porque la economía ha mejorado.

Sus tarjetas se venden bien igualmente entre las personas que no son de habla Hispana, quizás si reflejando la popularidad de la cultura del suroeste. Ella ofrece un juego en su caja, llamado "Southwest Tradition," que presenta tarjetas tituladas: "Recogiendo Piñónes," "Limpiando la Acequia," "Los Amantes de Nuevo México," "Haciendo Ristras de Chile" y "La Llorona." El Museo Mexicano de San Francisco destaca sus tarjetas.

"El mercado siempre ha estado allí, pero la industria de las tarjetas de la corriente principal acaba de despertar a la demanda," dice José Antonio Burciaga, artista de la Universidad de Stanford, en California. Burciaga vende una línea de tarjetas que él ha diseñado durante años, y que surgió de los dibujos que él hizo para las tarjetas de Navidad de su familia.

Lohr González, propietario de Pava Prints, en San Juan, Puerto Rico, está de acuerdo. El dice que las tiendas vienen comprando más y que los fabricantes vienen produciendo más tarjetas en español porque acaban de descubrir su lucratividad.

González tiene por qué saber. Pava Prints está celebrando su 40x año de existencia. La firma vende casi exclusivamente a los residentes de Puerto Rico.

Su aventura hacia el mercado continental hace algunos años presentó a Santa Claus en una hamaca bajo las palmas y el sol poniente.

"Se vendió bien y nos pidieron más, pero la sacamos para concentrarnos en el mercado Puertorriqueño," dice el. Sus diseños para este año presentan singularmente los temas Puertorriqueños. El renglón de mayor venta de todos los tiempos fue una pintura al óleo que presentaba artículos tradicionalmente relacionados con la Navidad en Puerto Rico, incluyendo un "cuatro" (una clase de guitarra), un calabacin, un coco y unas maracas.

Burciaga tiene varias tarjetas disponibles en este año. "Los Tres Sabios" muestra a tres jinetes atravesando una brecha en una cerca de la frontera; otras incluyen una cruz que dice: "Paz, Raza"; y "Poinsettia," con un relato en el respaldo de la tarjeta sobre la historia pre-colombina de la flor.
