Showers Refresh Texans

A-J News Services

Showers over the weekend brought new hope to parched areas of West and North Texas, as weather forecasters indicated that dry July in Lubbock may go out in a spray of rain to cool the memory of its weeks of 100-degree days and cloudless skies.

There was only a trace of rain Sunday at Lubbock International Airport, but a number of other South Plains cities recorded generous showers. And the extended outlook for Saturday through next Wednesday calls for above normal precipitation.

Heavy rains are possible this afternoon and tonight in the mountains and southeastern plains of New Mexico, according to the National Weather Service.

Partly cloudy skies are expected here through Tuesday, with temperatures in the mid-80s today and mid-90s Tuesday. The low tonight should be in the mid-60s.

A Lubbock weatherman said today that the huge high pressure system that caused the prolonged hot weather has moved east to the East Coast and New England.

The trace recorded Sunday is the only moisture Lubbock has had so far this month. The National Weather Service normal for July is 2.23 inches.

June brought 1.93 against a normal of 2.78.

Area rain reports Sunday ranged from 1.50 at Morton to traces also at Jayton and Spur.

Others were .27 at Abernathy, .40 at Brownfield, .06 at Crosbyton, .27 at Dimmitt, .56 at Friona, .07 at Levelland, an inch at Littlefield, .37 at Lockettville, .69 at Muleshoe, .17 at Olton, .11 at Plains, .04 at Post, .58 at Snyder and .02 at Tahoka.

There were unofficial reports of 2 inches at Wolfforth and 3 inches northwest of Muleshoe.

New Mexico rain reports included 1.14 at Clovis and .21 at Goodland.

Area temperatures were mostly in the 80s Sunday as the heat finally broke. It was 78 in Lubbock.

The extended West Texas forecast calls for normal temperatures and above-normal rainfall July 29 through Aug. 2.

A Lubbock weatherman said rain is not forecast here for the next 36 hours, but that rain is a fair possibility later this week.

The scattered showers of Sunday afternoon over Texas had mostly dissipated before dawn today except for some showers on the upper Gulf Coast.

Demo Stalls Action On Gas Price Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Delaying tactics by a liberal Democrat opposed to a natural gas deregulation agreement brought Senate action to a near standstill today.

Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., launched what amounted to a one-man filibuster to protest a proposed compromise that would free natural gas from price controls in 1985.

Although the natural gas measure — a key part of President Carter's energy program — is not scheduled for Senate floor action until next week, Abourezk began his delaying tactics today.

He began by lodging objections to a number of routine Senate motions, including the standard daily motion by Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd that the reading of the previous day's minutes be done away with, a motion that requires unanimous consent.

Abourezk then demanded that a clerk read the name of every senator to see whether a quorum was present.

He could bog down the Senate for days through such tactics.

Abourezk told reporters he would do all he could to tie up the Senate in hopes the delay would reduce chances that the natural gas compromise — which he opposes as too costly to consumers — can be enacted.

"I don't really have a plan. I just intend to fight in any way I can," said Abourezk, who with Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, led an unsuccessful two-week filibuster against the same legislation last fall.

Abourezk said he was unhappy that congressional leaders had decided to take up the natural gas bill before voting on two other parts of the president's energy program which are also now ready for final Senate action. Those parts deal with energy conservation and electric rates.

Abourezk's parliamentary tactics are expected to delay Senate debate, scheduled to begin today, on whether to lift the 3-year-old arms sale embargo against Turkey.

The president has called the embargo question the most important foreign policy matter still facing Congress this year.

In the House this week, a move will be made to join with the Senate in voting to prohibit Carter from imposing an import fee on foreign oil.

Carter has threatened to impose a fee of up to $6 a barrel if Congress fails to approve his crude oil tax proposal.

Dollar's Dip To New Low Hikes Fears

TOKYO (UPI) — The reeling dollar plunged below the 200-yen level today for the first time since World War II, sparking a worldwide selling spree that pushed the U.S. currency to record lows across Europe.

The dollar's steep drop reflected fears that OPEC nations may abandon the American currency as the basis for oil prices. Financial experts also said there was a widespread belief that Western leaders failed to solve global currency problems at the Bonn economic summit last week.

The dollar closed at 199.10 yen in Toyko today after momentarily hitting a low of 199 yen in heavy trading. The previous low close was 200.50 yen on July 5.

The dollar fell at a drastic rate in European money markets, hitting a series of record lows, and gold soared to its highest prices in more than 3 1/2 years.

Traders in Zurich sold dollars for 1.7745 Swiss francs and reported the U.S. currency was falling even farther from that record low.

Cashiers at American Express offices and other money-changing firms reported many American tourists converted their dollars to other currencies before exchange rates deteriorate further.

The Bank of Japan gave up its efforts to bolster the U.S. dollar after buying an estimated $300 million, banking sources said. Trading was extremely heavy, with turnover totaling $900 million — the largest volume since $1.25 billion changed hands on Aug. 27, 1971.

Although the 200-yen level was primarily a psychological barrier for the dollar — "like the difference between $2 and $1.99," one New York dealer said — many experts believed the dollar's dip below that price reflected the beginning of a serious downward trend for a variety of reasons.

The new dollar-yen rate amounted to a revaluation of 54.77 percent for the Japanese yen in six years. The yen has increased in value more than 90 percent since the post-World War II exchange rate was fixed at 360 yen to one dollar.

Traders in Zurich sold dollars for 1.7745 Swiss francs and reported the U.S. currency was falling even farther from that record low. Another low was recorded in Amsterdam — 2.2048 guilders — and in Paris the dollar traded at 4.4025 French francs, its lowest since October 1975.

Gold jumped $4 in Zurich to $195.625. In London it traded at $195.50. Both prices were the highest rates for the metal since December 1974.

"The 200-yen level was sort of benchmark of how bad things would go," one monetary analyst for an American multinational corporation said, "but no one really can say what it really means."

The dollar's slide to less than 200 yen has meant a 35-percent increase in the price of Japanese goods sold in the United States since 1971. Prices of Japanese cars sold in the United States have been raised six times within the past year.

Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda's chief spokesman, Shintaro Abe, attributed the decline of the dollar to the expectation that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will drop the dollar as the basis for oil prices.

Abe said the dollar's fall will be temporary, prompted mainly by the recommendation by the OPEC nations to replace the dollar with a "basket" of major international currencies such as the yen and the German mark.

A senior official at the Bank of Tokyo indicated the U.S. dollar may continue to drop on the Tokyo money market unless the Japanese government conducts a sweeping package of economic measures to slice Japan's trade surplus.

Fukuda has repeatedly indicated that Japan will import some $4 billion worth of aircraft and enriched uranium from Western Europe and the United States to correct the trade imbalance.

But government and banking sources believed such commitments by Japan and other industrialized nations at the Bonn summit are unlikely to be put into practice soon, in light of inflation and unemployment rates in the participating countries.

The Finance Ministry announced last week Japan's monthly account surplus totaled $2.33 billion in June, bringing a record semi-annual high of $8.81 billion.

President Carter and the leaders of the world's industrialized nations had gathered in Bonn to tackle global economic problems —including the sagging dollar — but the economists said the outcome was disappointing.

Japan and West Germany promised to rev up their economies and reduce huge surpluses in their balance of trades.

Trustees Divided On Suit

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The most important debate on the suit challenging the Lubbock Independent School District at-large election system may take place not in a courtroom, but in the board room of the district's administration building.

According to interviews, the school board may well be divided over how to respond to the class action, filed in federal court by eight minority voters late Friday. Some board members say they agree in principle with the plaintiffs.

So before school trustees start defending themselves, they must reach a consensus on the issue of at-large vs. single-member district elections.

School board president Charles Waters said he hopes to call his colleagues into an executive session soon to discuss the litigation with attorneys. "I honestly don't know how the board might want to manage this lawsuit," Waters said.

He said there seem to be "four or five alternatives. We need to know how each board member stands."

For example, Lynn Stafford — who was elected to the board in April — said she stands by her campaign statements favoring a combination of the two election systems.

(The current system is at-large, meaning citywide voting with no residency restrictions. Under a single-member district system, certain seats on the school board would be designated for particular geographic areas of the city.).

Mrs. Stafford noted that the city already is divided into five high school attendance zones. "I still believe that having one school board member from each high school attendance area, and two members elected at large, would be a fair way to represent the city," she said.

Friday's suit, similar to one pending against the Lubbock City Council for the past two years, contends that at-large citywide voting dilutes the strength of minorities and handicaps them in getting representation on the school board.

Jose Ramirez, elected to the board in 1974 and currently serving as board secretary, said he would "tend to agree" with the plaintiffs.

"Ordinarily it is difficult for a Mexican-American to get elected at-large," he said. "From that standpoint, it (a single-member district system) is needed" in ensuring full representation of all segments of the city on the board.

At the same time, however, Ramirez sees drawbacks in such a "ward system." Under the system, school board members may be looking out only for their own zones, instead of for the school district as a whole.

"My reaction is this: I don't particularly care for the ward system as such. But I can see some arguments for it that may outweigh the disadvantages," Ramirez said.

School board vice president Monte Hasie said that in terms of minority representation on the board, single-member districts may have no advantages over the current system.

He noted that the Lubbock school system has had and still has minority-group members on its governing board. Joan Ervin, a black, served on the board from 1970 to 1978; Ramirez's term won't be up until 1980.

Mrs. Ervin was defeated in her bid for

Hance Aids Resolution

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas legislators completed work today on a resolution that asks Congress to provide for a balanced federal budget.

"Are you going to carry this with you when you go to Washington?,' Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, asked Sen. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, who is in a hot November race for Congress.

"Those are my plans," Hance replied. "I certainly will press for it when I get to Congress."

The Senate approved the resolution with Sens. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, and Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, voting against it.

"I'm going to continue my practice of voting against memorializing Congress to

City's Infant Mortality Rate Alarms Officials

By ROBERT M. COCKRUM
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A group of health officials and doctors will meet Tuesday to determine their next moves in an effort to stem the high, if not rising, tide of infant deaths in the Lubbock area.

Dr. Marjorie K. Orr, the city health department director who is busy fighting just to keep what she has in the wake of a city taxpayer revolt, says the need for expanded medical care for children up to a year old is critical.

The infant mortality rate in Lubbock is almost 21 per 1,000 live births.

"That's a baby dying every two and one-half weeks, and that is not necessary," said Dr. Orr.

The state average is 14.7 deaths for every 1,000 births, and that is Dr. Orr's minimum goal through a well-child clinic in the health department.

Because the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) has designated the Lubbock area as a "pocket" much above national levels, there is a possibility of federal help.

Representatives of the state health department, the Texas Tech University School of Medicine and others will meet Tuesday to check the possibility of financing the battle against infant mortality with HEW funds. Grants of $300,000 and $500,000 may be available, according to Dr. Orr.

"It would come down to us through the state health department," she said. "In any event, I don't believe HEW would see a program as stopping at the city limits or county line."

Federal money or not, Dr. Orr is looking for a commitment from Lubbock citizens and the city government.

The preliminary budget first proposed by City Manager Larry Cunningham placed health department funding at $968,271. His recent list of potential budget cuts reduces the total to $688,094.

"That's just unacceptable," said Dr. Orr. The cuts would leave her available funds $200,000 lower than current spending levels.

"Our city facilities are less than a third of what they should be now," she said. "That would put us at $1.99 per capita for public health. We're already at $3.50, among the lowest in the state."

Dr. Orr, a pediatrician who practiced many years in Midland before receiving her degree in public health from Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, said Texas, in general, is 20 years behind the rest of the nation in public health programs.

"I guess it's a matter of never wanting it," she said in assessing Lubbock's lack of what she considers a well-rounded department.

Just as the state moved to improve public health care on a regional basis, she believes it could move toward imposing standards at the municipal level.

Dr. Orr ticks off the list of her department's shortcomings: public health education, none; crippled children's services, inadequate; child health, none; noninfectious disease detection, none; and basic epidemiological services, none.

When it comes to environmental health, she scans the programs related to water, food, waste control, general sanitation, and then her eyes touch "Vector Control."

"Boy, do we ever have 'vector control'," she said. While she considers the control of mosquitoes, flies and rodents as necessary, Dr. Orr sees the Lubbock emphasis far out of proportion to the problem. Of the current $888,891 budget for the department, approximately $200,000 goes to vector control, according to Denzil Percifull, Dr. Orr's immediate superior as head of public services.

"You're comparing apples and oranges," he said, when asked if there should not be a reordering of priorities with an infant mortality rate so high. "Reducing infant mortality is a high priority, and when disease-carrying mosquitoes are found, then vector control is high (on the priority list)."

Dr. Orr bristles at a reporter's suggestion that her pediatric background makes her more sensitive to child health and

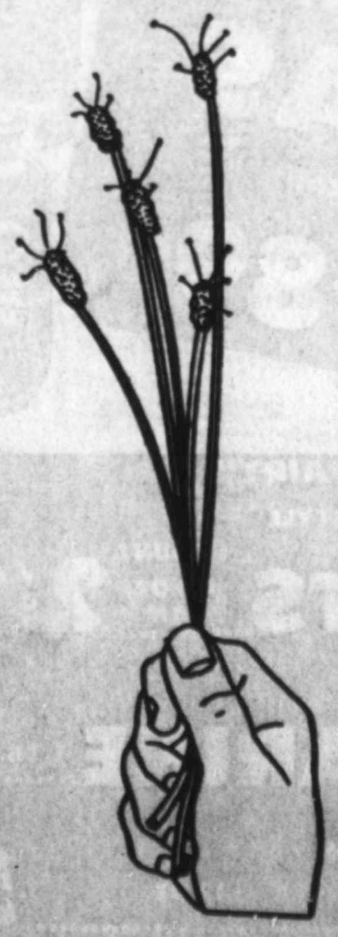
Use Weeds As Swords



By SHARI LEWIS

The summer vacation is fun — at first. And then you get fidgety. And then you get feisty. When you really need a little action, don't do battle with anything but the long-stemmed seed heads of certain weeds. The one called the English Plantain is perfect, and people have had mock bottles with these for years and years.

One person holds the stem straight out. The other person tries to hit its seed head right off, using a second stem. Then it's the other way around, and the other person gets to bang away at the first one's seed head.

Whoever loses his or her head first loses the game. The Bible says, "They shall beat their swords in plough shears," but nobody ever said swords would go to seed!

TODAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: If a man built a house with four sides, each having a southern exposure and a big bear approaches, what color is the bear and why? (Look for the answer in tomorrow's Kids-Only Club column.)

Airport Home Of Sparrow

DALLAS (AP) — Plenty of food and water, lots of sunshine, a couple of trees, no cats — what more could a sparrow want?

A Bloody Mary?

Bernice the Bird has it all, including a choice of cocktails inside the passenger waiting area of an airline terminal at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport.

The sparrow, who flew into the building one day and decided to stay, spends a good part of her time grazing on food dropped on the floor of the waiting area.

In the cocktail lounge, one of the bartenders leaves a glass of water and sometimes birdseed for her in a back corner booth.

"She'll drink what's left over on any of the tables, but she's got that back booth as her spot," the bartender said.

"Yes, she has developed a taste for alcohol," reported a waitress. "Bloody Marys are her favorite."

Czar's Kin Eyes Claim To Throne

By ARTHUR HERMAN

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — If the Russians ever want a new czar, there is a man in Madrid ready to take the job.

Grand duke Vladimir of Russia says: "My motto is rather like that of the Boy Scouts — 'Be prepared.'"

Vladimir, 61, is the current head of the House of Romanov, the family which ruled Russia for three centuries. From 1613 the Romanovs reigned with practically absolute power as the country's czars and empresses until 1917 when the Communist revolution hit Russia.

"I was born in 1917 just during the pre-revolutionary months when my parents managed to get out of Russia and into Finland," Vladimir said in an interview.

Czar Nicholas II, the first cousin of Vladimir's father, was not that lucky. He and his immediate family remained in Russia and all were slain by the Bolsheviks on July 17, 1918 — or, at least, so the history books say. Dispute over the fate of the Czar's family, sparked by the fact no bodies ever were found and by conflicting evidence, has continued for all these 60 years.

"I would like to believe that they got away with their lives and died peaceful and natural deaths but I very much fear that it is higly improbable...highly improbable," Vladimir said.

And so the grand duke has lived his life in exile, settling since 1941 in Madrid in the "rather sad situation of having never known our country."

But he added in the next breath in his perfect British-accented English, "Luckily I am not a sad person by nature. I am optimistic and so far have always looked on the brighter side of life."

And Vladimir still hopes the Romanovs may one day take the throne again in Russia.

"There still could be some chance," he said. "I don't say that it would be in my lifetime but perhaps in the lifetime of my daughter. If the Russian people should one day look for a more satisfactory form of government, I think that it is quite possible they might turn to monarchy."

Vladimir does not seem bitter about the Communists. In fact he can joke that the walls and electric gate at his elagant Madrid suburban home "are not to keep the people out. They are to keep our dogs in. It's the Soviet system," he grins.

Bacause of the murky circumstances surrounding the fate of the czar and his family, various people have come forward and claimed to be long-lost Romanovs who escaped the massacre in the old Russian city of Ekaterinburg.

Vladimir doubts such claims, saying they "border on fiction."

"Personally I think that they (the czar and his family) were all assassinated or murdered or whatever you like to use as a verb and the only thing one can't be quite certain of, is that the assassination took place in the case of all the family at Ekaterinburg," he said.

"If the family were outside Russia and had been saved, then there would be no necessity for them to be kept completely in secret residence in some country. Sufficient heads of state — royal and not royal — have had to leave their country or fled for political reasons. They all lived abroad quite peacefully and never had any necessity to hide.

"In the case of our family I don't think there would have been either."

Vladimir said he believed the Kremlim must hold very exact information on the fate of the czar and his family. "unless those files are destroyed intentionally or by accident certainly some day the answers will come to light," he said.

Joan Kennedy Reveals Battle With Alcoholism

NEW YORK (UPI) — Joan Kennedy lived on the dark side of Camelot. Beneath the flashing smile and Cape Cod tan, the wife of Sen. Edward Kennedy was an alcoholic.

Washington always thrusts attention upon its favorites, but as the wife of a Kennedy, her life was magnified. Her movements were recorded on film, her voice on tape and her slightest action could make headlines.

The social drinking kept pace with the pressure, then became worse. Gradually, one of America's premier families faced still another tragedy.

"Unfortunately, I found out that alcohol could sedate me," she said in a lengthy interview with McCall's magazine published last week. "So, I didn't care as much. And things didn't hurt so much."

Mrs. Kennedy detailed in the interview how she finally yielded to alcoholism, then recognized it and fought her way back with helping hands from her sister-in-law, Jackie Onassis, and Alcoholics Anonymous.

She told the magazine many factors drove her to drink, but leading the list was having to hold up in times of crisis and gossip that her husband was involved with other women.

"People ask whether the newspaper stories about Ted and girls hurt my feelings. Of course they hurt my feelings. They went to the core of my self-esteem," she said.

"I began thinking, well, maybe I'm just not attractive enough, or attractive anymore, or whatever, and it was awfully easy to say ... if that's the way it is, I might as well have a drink."

She said in the interview that the Washington whirl along with a series of miscarriages and letdowns after tragic or moving events forced her to seek refuge in a bottle. But she didn't always succumb.

When her son Teddy's cancerous right leg was amputated, she didn't take a drink while the boy was in the hospital, she told McCall's. "But as soon as he was well ... I just collapsed. I needed some relief from having to be so damn brave all the time."

She sought out Jackie Onassis, to whom she always felt close, when she discovered the drinking was starting to be a problem, she told the magazine.

"I'd been told that an alcoholic by nature starts to blame everything and everybody except himself, and that's when I knew I had to get away from there (Washington) and have some time for myself," she told McCall's.

"So Jackie and I talked about all that. I felt close to Jackie because both of us needed space to be alone."

She left Washington last year to study music at Boston's Lesley College. She said in the interview she's been sober this year, sees a psychiatrist three times a week and still misses alcohol occasionally because "it had become a physical and psychological addiction."

Mrs. Kennedy said the stigma of alcoholism is worse for women than men.

"I tried to talk about it, but I was embarrassed and Ted (her husband) was embarrassed about it," she told McCall's. "Everybody was embarrassed, but nobody would really talk about it."

She said she continued to drink, and tried to seek help with a psychiatrist but felt no progress. Life in Washington, she said, didn't help her situation because it was hard to live there "and have a life of my own."

"There's someting else about living in Washington and being married to a senator," she told the magazine. "Your whole life revolves around government. Conversations tend to be only about politics ..."

She said in the interview that her move to Boston wasn't an attempt to run away from her husband, but to take a step for herself.

"Washington tends to be a nebulous town," she said, "With people moving in and out so fast it's hard to make friends. Here there are roots. Kennedy roots."

She said her children see her often, especially her eldest daugher, Kara, who will attend Trinity College in Hartford, Conn., this fall.

Mrs. Kennedy told the magazine that during her Alcoholics Anonymous sessions she is like any other alcoholic who needs to stay sober. Her success in combating alcoholism, she said, has come from finding direction and a goal.

"Having that goal is really important for me now," she told McCall's. "Now I'm going to school, I have homework and even during vacations, there is always reading.

"I have a job to do."

SAYS RUMORS DROVE HER TO DRINK — Joan Kennedy, wife of Massachusetts Democratic Sen. Edward Kennedy, says rumors that her husband was seeing other women drove her to drink. She says she was aided in her battle against alcoholism by Jacqueline Onassis. She now goes to Alcoholics Anonymous in Boston where she attends graduate school. (AP Laserphoto)

Suspect Enjoys Continuing Steadfastness

NEDERLAND (AP) — The woman facing a September trial in connection with the slayings of a five-member Winnie family says her friends and relatives are remaining steadfast at her side.

"They know me and know I didn't have anything to do with it," said Linda May Burnett in a Beaumont Enterprise copyright story.

"I'm not guilty. I don't believe in violence."

The bodies of Bishop Phillips and his wife, Ester, of Winnie; their son and daughter-in-law, Elmer and Martha Phillips of Woodward, Okla.; and their grandson Jason were found in a single grave in Jefferson County earlier this month.

Mrs. Burnett, 30, admitted to an affair with Joe Dugas, also charged with capital murder in connection with the Phillips' deaths.

"I hope I will have common sense enough to never get into that kind of situation again. Once is enough," she said.

Problems in her marriage now have been taken care of, Mrs. Burnett maintained as her husband, Leo, looked at the floor.

"I learned that a woman's place is in the home and with her husband," she said.

Burnett, 53, said he was shocked by his wife's arrest. "I've never once doubted my wife's innocence."

Their three daughters, ranging in age from 12 to 5, have been fully informed of the charges. Mrs. Burnett said only a few snubs by friends have troubled them.

Jane Burnett, 11, came to her father for advice after a friend would not speak to her when they met on a street.

"I took her in the house and told her to get out the dictionary and look up the word 'compassion.' Of course, she doesn't understand fully," said Burnett.

"But I asked her, 'If 20 years from now if this happens to a friend of yours, what are you going to do? Are you going to ignore them or take the advantage of putting your arm around them and offering your help?'"

Cards expressing support have been sent to Mrs. Burnett.

"Our friends and neighbors have offered me everything they've got," she said.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

No Bloodshed In Talking

DESPITE THE fact that the issue of mutual force reductions in Central Europe remains deadlocked after more than four years of NATO-Warsaw Pact negotiations, an ex-U.S. defense official says the talks serve as a significant forum in the quest for international stability.

William B. Prendergast reports in a study published by the American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research that notwithstanding the stalemate, the talks "do help ease East-West tensions (and) while admittedly a longshot could conceivably produce a breakthrough leading to an agreement."

CONCEDING THAT immediate prospects are not encouraging for enhancing security in the heart of Europe by reducing the density of military might, the author observes, "It is an idea whose time certainly has not yet come but may one day."

Prendergast formerly served as U.S. defense adviser to NATO, deputy special assistant to the secretary and deputy secretary of defense and associate professor of government at the U.S. Naval Academy.

Underscoring the disparity between the opposing participants, the author writes: "Both sides went to Vienna (in 1973) ostensibly to seek agreement on force reductions, but with clashing concepts of the desired outcome.

NATO wished not only to reduce forces but to change the existing relationship between the military strength of the two sides in Central Europe. The Warsaw Pact wished to reduce force levels but to maintain their existing relationship."

THUS, THE EAST, lead by the Soviet Union, sought to maintain the military edge that it enjoyed, while the West, led by the U.S., sought a more equal balance of forces.

With the passage of time, the NATO powers have come to realize that their real worry is not simply an imbalance of manpower but adequate warning time in the event of an attack and the firepower superiority of the Warsaw Pact forces.

Prendergast is convinced that the Vienna talks, recessed on Dec. 15, 1977, should be resumed. They serve the cause of detente, he says, and "help break down communication barriers between the East and West."

They also reassure those concerned over a possible erosion of Western forces in Europe that as long as the negotiations continue, most NATO nations will remain under pressure to maintain their defense effort in Europe, thereby staving off a little longer force reductions which might go into effect if the talks are ended for good.

Young Tells It Like It Isn't

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Kenneth May and One Man's Opinion will return after a brief intermission.)

WASHINGTON—A close examination of the Central Intelligence Agency's latest report on the Kremlin's current world-wide propaganda campaigns should convince President Carter that Ambassador Andrew Young is following the international Communist line in his public pronouncements on several major issues.

In addition to his shocking allegations of "hundreds, maybe thousands of political prisoners" in the U.S., the free-wheeling U.S Representative to the United Nations deliberately attacked and made misleading statements about pro-West activities of West Germany and France in Africa—current targets of Moscow.

A graphic illustration of Young's public spouting of the Kremlin's line is his statements concerning a small missile launching test site operated in Zaire by a consortium of West German companies known as OTRAG.

IN SEVERAL INTERVIEWS with European publications, Young used the Soviet line about the commercial missile testing site to justify East Germany's role in the Katangan rebel's aborted invasion of Zaire. Here is how Young put it in his interview with the French newspaper Le Martin de Paris:

"The East Germans are effectively training and arming Africans in situations like this one (Zaire) and they have a good reason to do so. They were worried about a West German missile development program underway in the western part of Shaba province."

Most disturbing to aides of President Carter is that Young's statement, "they (East Germans) had a good reason to do so."

The number one black official in the Carter administration had been fully briefed on the commercial purposes of the test site. Young also had received a copy of the CIA report detailing the massive Soviet propaganda campaign to distort the truth about the missile launching site.

INSTEAD OF ACCEPTING and using the CIA information, Young slanted his statements about the missile site to make it appear that it was a West German government installation, and the East Germans had good reason to take action to try to put it out of operation.

Deeply upset about Young's constantly undercutting U.S. allies in Western Europe, a White House aide told this column "with the information that the CIA had furnished him about the Soviet campaign against the missile site, Young should have exposed it rather than giving the appearance that he agreed with it."

Highlights of the CIA report on the "OTRAG case", as it is referred to in U.S. intelligence circles, which was sent to Young and other top government officials, are as follows:

"ANOTHER RECENT EXAMPLE of misleading Soviet propaganda is the OTRAG case. In 1975 a consortium of German Air industry companies combined to create OTRAG (Orbital Launch and Rocket Corporation), a company intended to develop a capability of placing satellites in space for commercial clients.

"In 1976 OTRAG contracted with the Government of Zaire for a large testing and launch range in the Shaba province. The site was accessible to the public, and technical facilities as of 1977 were observed to be extremely crude.

"However, in the fall of 1977 TASS began to send its clients stories claiming that OTRAG was a West German rearmament scheme designed to produce cruise missiles and IRBM's.

"By early 1978 a combination of TASS, the Soviet internal press, and KGB covert press placement had created a legend that the U.S., France and West Germany, with Zairean President Mobutu's connivance, were engaged in a conspiracy to help Germany become a major nuclear missile power through development of OTRAG as a cruise missile testing range...

WEST GERMAN GOVERNMENT officials were so upset over Young's use of the missile site to justify East Germany's activities in the region that President Carter extended a personal apology to West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt in their private talks in Bonn.

The State Department earlier was forced to issue a statement saying that Young's criticism of French policy in Africa does not "reflect the policy of the administration and must be considered his personal views."

With the French taking the lead in opposing communist aggression against Zaire and several other small African nations, the Kremlin has launched a massive campaign to try to discredit these efforts. The timing of Young's blasts and their content fit neatly into the Soviet campaign.

Holmes Alexander:

But Which Witch Is Which?

WASHINGTON—You can always tell which side Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., is on—the wrong side. He was the modern meat-axe wielder on Defense funds with his annual bill for a sightless 10 per cent cut.

He got to the Senate in the first place via the purse strings of a secret membership, pacifist, ban-the-bomb gang, called Livable World which bankrolled to narrow victory in a Republican state.

He has consistently been a Castro-buddy, an unswerving opponent of national security methods, and he just about wrecked the Democratic party which hit its nadir in the presidential year of '72.

MY HEART DID GO out to George for his misfortune of being beaten by a crook, for McGovern is as honest as Abe, though as mistaken as some of our worst political boobs.

His latest offense is the McGovern measure, a spastic reaction to the foolishness at Helsinki, which effectively abolished travel restrictions, among other national safeguards.

As matters stood over the July Fourth holidays, the Carter State Department is currying Brezhnev's favor in the SALT confabs by throwing open American ports to suspicious visitors from the Soviet Union and its satellites and by granting temporary visas to persons whom the FBI figures to be spies, terrorists and anarchists.

The FBI's request for 125 additional sleuths is on the waiting list in the Intelligence committees of both Houses.

IN THE MONEY-saving spirit of California's Proposition 13 and Mr. Jimmy's avowed hope of a treaty to abolish all nuclear weapons, the chances of beefing up the FBI are awfully slim.

It isn't that McGovern has any leadership on Capitol Hill, but he does personify the postwar Russian offensive and penetration which we resisted by executing the atomic spies, the Rosenbergs, jailing Alger Hiss and enacting protective legislation.

Don't ask me why the American people who supported those precautions, and even tolerated the alcoholic, heavy-handed Joe McCarthy, have now turned revisionists and think it beastly of us to use our Immigration officers to defend our shores the same as we count on the Armed Forces.

Mid-summer congressional sessions are going to see public hearings on the Dr. King and President Kennedy assassinations, and it would be a good season for an old-fashioned witch-hunt by the House and Senate.

Downtown Washington knows that the federal offices are swarming with light-fingered foreign agents who pass along to the enemy any documents and information that could be used against us.

There won't be any crackdown unless it comes from concerned conservatives in Congress or from some don't-give-a-damn officer such as Atty. Gen. Bell, who would keep his job or lose it without a blink.

If you're asking me, I say we're in Act Three of the Decline, and at the very least should unmask the villians of the piece. Exposing and exporting spies is about the least expensive part of the war for survival.

There are such technological developments in strategic weaponry in both enemy camps that it's entirely possible the land and sea missiles will cancel one another out, as the Russians seem to think in preparing a tank warfare in the European theater, and that the fight will revert to primitive conflicts of hand-to-hand and mind-to-mind.

If we need any excuse for declaring open season on spies, though, this thought will do.

Death Traps Snare Grieving Survivors

(Last In A Series)

IF A DEATH OCCURS in your family and if you are a close survivor of the deceased, you immediately will become a target for some of our nation's most vicious swindlers.

Often, they will be men or women who seem to you to be friendly and honest—but don't fool yourself, they are neither.

If you are a dependent widow of the deceased, you will become not only a target but, all too frequently, also a victim for your defenses will be way down and you're so easy a mark that it's actually painful for me even to write these warnings to you.

IF YOU ARE A member of the deceased's family or an intimate friend, you, too, will be lured into making decisions that are, at the very best, of no help in dealing with the emotional and social stresses and are, at worst, harmful to all who are left behind.

In short, beware! The death traps are set for you.

* For instance, a favorite device is to collect a debt that the deceased never owed, or to deliver unordered merchandise for payment by the survivors (say, a Bible that was never purchased or a similarly heart-tugging item).

* Another favorite of these gypsters is to inform the close survivor of a non-existent life insurance policy on which a final premium must be paid before benefits can be collected, or some other "valuable asset" requiring a final payment of so kind before the asset can be "yours."

* STILL ANOTHER favorite is for a promoter of securities to phone with a report that he (or she) had been asked to recommend new purchases of stocks or bonds or switches in an existing securities portfolio of the deceased's that the survivor should carry through at once.

The goal will be merely the commissions involved in the purchases and sales—but in the befuddled state of mind of the survivor, the first inclination is to say, "If that's what...wanted, go ahead and follow the instructions."

If you are a dependent widow: you must be even more on guard against making ignorant, stupid decisions and errors now.

* Don't listen to any advice on investments and don't make any investment of any sort until your mind is working more normally and you have had ample time to get the advice of competent objective advisers concerned only with your welfare.

* Don't buy or sell any securities.
* Don't make any loans.
* Don't convert your insurance policies.
* Don't buy annuities.
* Don't, in short, do anything. You have a limited amount of money which is now more important to you than ever.

OTHER WARNINGS for you, the survivors.

* If you have decided on cremation (which costs only around $100) don't let anyone sell the family extra goods and services which can run up the bill into the $1,000 range even wwithout a funeral service.

* If you have decided to scatter the ashes, don't let anyone talk you out of doing what you want to do. You can scatter the ashes with or without ceremony, at any time (even years later).

If they are to be scattered, however, have the ashes pulverized first, so that all the ragments are broken into a white powder which can be returned to the elements in a clean, orderly way.

* IF YOU ARE planning bequeathal to a medical school, be sure the funeral director contacts the school to find out what kind of embalming (if any) the school wants. Ordinary embalming usually is not acceptable.

* If the body is to go directly to the medical school, let the school make the arrangements with the funeral director.

In sum, to sidestep the viciously cruel death traps on all sides, be cautious, go slow, consult experienced, trusted advisers.

Neither pay any unfamiliar debt nor sign any document before careful investigation and before you have recovered your balance.

Berry's World

John D. Lofton:

A Cold Shower Couldn't Hurt

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—America is an "out-of-control mess," an "outrageously sexist" nation that "bloats with inertia." Our country is "a system beyond anyone's control, slowly consuming itself like a cooling star.

"It will continue, of course—nothing can overwhelm the combined forces of inertia and entrenchment, at least not now—and improvement seems hardly likely...No one dares come to the inescapable conclusion: This country is dying, slowly, and there's very little anyone will be able to do in the near future."

What makes the '70's so "inert" and "dangerous", is the "general, but by no means pervasive, comfort" of the age. "But every intelligent person clucks over the headlines each day and then forgets them, unless they directly affect him or her. And no one does anything. Despite the claims to the contrary, progress is not forthcoming."

WELL, AMERICA MAY be "bloated with inertia," but Andrew Multer isn't. No siree, he's busy working his little head to the bone cranking out his apocalyptic claptrap for Harvard University's Crimson newspaper.

So what is it that has young Multer in such an uproar? As a "speculative reader," he has read a bunch of recent newspaper articles, and although they are "seemingly disparate," he has tied them together. The result: he feels "bewildered."

The first thing that bugs Multer is that an insufficient number of state legislatures have ratified the ERA. Noting that this is so despite the fact that 100,000 pro-ERA persons marched on Washington, he says: "Here is a clear case of inertia holding the upper hand." Oh, really?

IN RECENT MONTHS, the Illinois legislature has voted down the ERA and the legislatures in Kentucky and South Carolina have rescinded their approval of this measure. This is not inertia. This is positive, affirmative action against passage of the ERA. To maintain otherwise is—well, bewildering.

Another thing that bothers Multer is the recent conviction for espionage of David Truong and Ronald Humphrey (he calls him Roland Humphrey), who stole government documents and gave them to the North Vietnamese. Although he notes that both men admitted stealing the documents, and they did not get the life sentences they could have drawn, Multer says:

"The fact they were convicted at all demonstrates that there are serious problems in the federal government and in the White House."

THE CONVICTION OF these two, he says, singles out Truong and Humphrey "as if to demonstrate Washington's contempt for Vietnam...the whole affair smacks of Cold Warriorism, and jibes with Carter's recent gung-ho re-escalation of old-style brinkmanship in foreign policy."

What in the world is this supposed to mean? What about Vietnam's contempt for Washington, clearly demonstrated by the acceptance of these stolen documents? Is the U.S. government supposed to idly stand by while our nation's secrets are passed to the Communists?

Had our government done nothing about this espionage, this would have shown serious problems in the federal government and the White House. To argue otherwise is, again, bewildering.

FINALLY, YOUNG Multer is upset that a federal court has ruled that former CIA agent Frank Snepp must surrender the money he made from his book, "A Decent Interval."

The reason Snepp has been ordered to do this is because he wrote his book without first clearing it with the CIA, as he promised to do in an oath he signed when he went to work for the agency.

Multer says the "most astute" comment on this miscarriage of justice has been made by Snepp's publisher, Robert Bernstein, the president of Random House, who is quoted as observing that there are two clases of American citizens:

"ONE IS THE select group of high officials, including Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger, who are free to make use of classified secret material in the preparation of books and to demand extraordinary sums of money for them.

"The second class are the legitimate whistleblowers, like Frank Snepp, who, despite unchallenged care in preventing the compromise of secret material, run the risk of a lifetime gag order and the penalty of forfeiting any earnings from their writings."

But Multer and Berstein are confused. Snepp was not convicted of disclosing secret material. He was found not to have kept his promise to clear his book with the CIA prior to its publication.

To my knowledge, neither Nixon nor Kissinger have ever made such a promise to the relevant government authorities. If they ever have, neither Multer nor Bernstein say they did. To mix these apples and oranges is—once more, the word seems apt—bewildering.

SENSING THE muddleheadedness of his own ravings, Multer concluded his outburst, declaring: "Perhaps it's a case of paranoia born of early-summer lethargy; perhaps the result of reading the paper without the benefit of the accustomed cynical attitude.

"But when the overwhelming realization penetrated, despite the sun on the shoulders and cold drink in hand, the day was shot. Pessimism may be fashionable, but it's no fun."

Well, I don't know exactly what you've got either, Andy. But I'll cast my vote for paranoia. The next time you're in one of these speculative moods, before writing, I'd suggest not a cold drink, but a nice, long, cold shower.

And, by the way, what were you drinking? I'd like to stay away from the stuff, at least when I'm writing.

Hayakawa Against Restitution

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, whose ancestors came from Japan, says any attempt to seek restitution for Japanese-Americans forcibly relocated during World War II would only rekindle old resentments.

HAYAKAWA

Hayakawa, after addressing the closing banquet Saturday night of the Japanese American Citizens League's meeting, said in an interview: "The relocation was perfectly understandable ... even the JACL supported it at that time."

Earlier in the week, league delegates unanimously endorsed a resolution seeking $25,000 redress for each Japanese-American sent to the relocation camps.

Hayakawa, who was born in Canada, was a Canadian citizen during World War II, and spent the war years teaching English at the Illinois Institute of Technology in Chicago. He became a U.S. citizen in 1954.

Since the war, Hayakawa said the country has changed its attitudes toward its Japanese-American citizens.

"Thirty-five years after Pearl Harbor, I run for the U.S. Senate in California — the hot spot of anti-Oriental agitation — and not once was my race used against me," he said.

Singer Visits Small Town

OLIVIA, Minn. (AP) — Olivia Newton-John! Step right up and meet Olivia, Minn.

The popular singer, dressed in blue jeans, a red western-style shirt and a 10-gallon hat, was the guest of honor and grand marshal as the town of 3,200, about 100 miles west of Minneapolis, celebrated its 100th birthday Saturday.

Miss Newton-John responded to an invitation from Olivia's centennial committee, which said the town wanted to thank her for popularizing the name of Olivia.

"The letter was such a kick," Miss Newton-John said. "How could I pass it up? This is the only place I've ever heard of with the same name as me."

She waived appearance fees and her entourage paid for the rented plane that flew her from Los Angeles to nearby Willmar. However, she did receive some fresh bread and two dozen ears of corn to take home.

Miss Newton-John was showered with gifts from Olivia residents, including dog licenses, a building permit, traffic tickets, a T-shirt that read "I Love Olivia," and keys to the city.

In return, centennial chairman Dick Hagen made one request of the Australian singer: "On your 100th birthday, we'd like to be invited to your town."

Pie-Thrower Angers Billy Carter

NORTH VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Billy Carter, here to judge the World Bellyflop and Cannonball Diving Championships, looked like a human cannonball as he shot out after a man who tried to hit him with a pie.

Witnesses said that when Carter realized Saturday that he was the intended target of the lemon meringue pie, he became furious and tried to go after the pie-thrower, but was restrained by onlookers and security guards.

"I want him," Carter reportedly shouted.

"He was furious. He just popped his lid," said Ross Kenward, a photographer for The Vancouver Province.

The toss was deflected by a security guard, and the man fled.

Later, the Anarchist Party of Canada claimed responsibility for the pie-throwing incident. Members of the group have hit several politicians with pies.

Mrs. Carter Talks With Pope

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy (AP) — Lillian Carter, mother of President Carter, emerged from a private audience with Pope Paul VI and called him "a saint who makes you feel, too, a saint" and "the most gentle person I ever met."

Mrs. Carter said her 20-minute meeting with the pontiff Sunday at his summer palace in the Alban Hills south of Rome was "the dream of my entire life."

The 80-year-old pontiff chatted with the 79-year-old Mrs. Carter after addressing a crowd of 1,500 from the balcony of the palace. In his address, the pope appealed to Roman Catholics to aid regions of Ethiopia affected by famine.

After the meeting, Mrs. Carter flew to Rabat, Morocco, beginning a 10-day tour that will include visits to African countries currently crippled by severe drought.

In a brief statement before leaving for Rabat, she said the pope praised her son and blessed some rosaries she took to the audience. She said she plans to give the rosaries to American and Philippine friends.

Thousands See Baryshnikov

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — The New York City Ballet, sparked by the addition of Mikhail Baryshnikov, drew a record 90,500 people to its three-week summer season at the Saratoga Performing Arts Center.

BARYSHNIKOV

Center officials announced the attendance figure at Saturday night's final performance. Virtually every performance was sold out, they said.

The center was the site of Baryshnikov's July 8 debut with the New York City Ballet, in George Balanchine's "Coppelia."

The 30-year-old Baryshnikov, who defected from the Soviet Union several years ago, also danced in Jerome Robbins' "Afternoon of a Faun," as well as in Balanchine's "Stars and Stripes," Robbins' "Other Dances" and twice in Balanchine's "Rubies."

Baryshnikov left the American Ballet Theater several months ago, saying he wanted to dance for Balanchine, who is also a native of Russia.

Parting Is Such Sweet Sorrow

MIAMI (AP) — Rose White has lost her baby to the Miami Police Department.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

Wiping away the tears, the 68-year-old woman saw him for the last time this weekend when he graduated from the department's canine corps training program.

"Oh my baby," she wept. "Look how beautiful he runs."

Fuzz is a 3-year-old German shepherd that Miss White had to give away because the new Washington, D.C., apartment she's moving to doesn't allow pets.

Saturday was graduation day and Fuzz and his six classmates showed off some of their skills — such as sniffing out hiding people and scaling walls — to a crowd of 150 at a park near the Orange Bowl.

Afterward, Miss White bade Fuzz a last farewell.

"It's mommy. It's mommy," said a teary-eyed Miss White. "C'mon, give mommy a kissy-poo. Are you gonna give mommy a kiss?"

Fuzz hesitated, then gave her a goodbye slurp of the tongue.

Sen. Talmadge 'Anxious' To Reimburse Senate

ATLANTA (AP) — Sen. Herman Talmadge will reimburse the Senate for any overpayment he received for official expenses, according to a spokesman for the Georgia Democrat.

"The senator is anxious to make reimbursement for any discrepancies as soon as possible," Talmadge press aide Gordon Roberts said Sunday.

The Washington Star reported Sunday that an independent audit shows Talmadge collected about $35,000 in overpayments between 1971 and 1977.

The newspaper quoted "informed sources" as saying the audit revealed that Talmadge received $24,000 for expenses he never incurred and $11,000 for expenses the Senate does not consider legitimate, such as entertainment.

Roberts said Talmadge would repay "whatever amount is required" to the secretary of the Senate after the Senate Ethics Committee completes its audit of Talmadge's special office account.

Talmadge initiated the audit, conducted by his own accountants, last month after the Star reported irregularities in his office finances.

Roberts said there were no immediate plans to release the results of the audit. "It's our position that (these) matters are properly released to the committee," he said.

The committee already was investigating certain aspects of Talmadge's office-related expenses. The investigation stemmed from earlier reports quoting Talmadge as saying he routinely accepted small gifts of cash from friends and supporters during speaking tours of his home state.

In the future, Roberts said Talmadge plans to donate such gifts to charity in order "to avoid any embarrassment to his friends."

Talmadge also has been the subject of a number of stories in The Atlanta Journal-Constitution. Those stories, based largely on information contained in court records of his divorce case, have raised questions about possible influence peddling in connection with a number of real estate transactions.

On Sunday, in a letter published by the Journal-Constitution, Talmadge denied using influence in 1975 to persuade U.S. postal authorities to rent an Atlanta office building owned by two brothers.

Two years earlier, the brothers purchased land from Talmadge and 12 other investors. According to court records, Talmadge made about $500,000 profit on the deal.

Talmadge said it was "no secret" that he made money on the land sale. "There is nothing immoral, improper or illegal in making a profit on a business venture," he said.

Talmadge said the accusation that he influenced the Postal Service's decision to move into the building was based on second-hand information contained in "an unclear and garbled tape recording" secretly obtained by an FBI informant.

He accused the newspapers of trying to "destroy him" and said he would take his case "to the people" if necessary.

World Bank Plans Loan To Vietnam

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The World Bank is preparing to lend Vietnam up to $60 million for rice development, its first loan to that country since the fall of the Saigon government, bank sources say.

A bank official at the executive level said the bank has agreed in principle on the loan, and its loan committee would advance the application in proceedings this week.

Bank spokesman John Meriam confirmed the loan was being considered, but he denied it would be voted on any time soon.

"That loan has been put 'on hold.' It won't be voted on this week or next month," Merriam said. "There is nothing imminent."

France, Japan and other industrial countries in the World Bank have strongly favored the agricultural loan while the United States strongly objects, bank sources said.

However, a bank executive director said the loan would be approved over U.S. protests.

"The bank is apolitical," the director said. "The proceeds from this loan are not going to support any government or government policy. The benefits of these proceeds will be enjoyed by the peasants at the grass-roots level. We must look at the needs of people in making these decisions."

The loan of up to $60 million would be used to construct dams and irrigation channels to improve rice production in Vietnam, once the main rice supplier for Southeast Asia. The war between the communist north and U.S.-backed southern forces destroyed most of the nation's rice fields and irrigation systems.

It is uncertain how much of the $60 million will come from bank funds. Kuwait and Japan have offered to supply come of the money requested by Vietnam.

President Nixon promised Vietnam $2 billion in development aid during the Paris peace talks of the early 1970s. But in 1976, Nixon told Congress the communists breeched the agreement by invading the south after the United States withdrew its troops.

Vietnamese officials told UPI at the last World Bank meeting that loans from the bank would constitute a satisfactory settlement of the aid dispute with the United States.

The World Bank, which began operations in 1946, was created mainly by the United States as an independent agency to finance the recovery of Europe and Japan from the destruction of World War II.

The United States is still the largest single contributer to the bank and has the largest single vote, but the membership has expanded to include more than 130 countries and that has diminished U.S. influence.

Patty Hearst Says Prison Life Has Helped Her Grow, Learn

CHICAGO (AP) — "I just try not to be bitter," the young inmate said. "I try to look at the good side of this.

" ... A lot of things have happened to me that I don't suppose will ever happen to anyone else. And because of that, I've grown. I'm in prison now, but I'm still learning and I'm still growing and I just try not to let it get me down."

The words were spoken by Patricia Hearst, who entered Federal Correctional Institution last May to complete a seven-year bank robbery term.

To the American public, she says, "Patty" is the heiress who joined up with her Symbionese Liberation Army kidnappers, robbed a California bank and tried to get off the hook by hiring hotshot lawyers.

But to prison authorities and to herself, Patty is "just one of the people in prison," she says.

Her remarks were published in the Chicago Tribune's Sunday editions in a copyrighted article by columnist Bob Greene.

"When it was all happening to me, it was hard for me to accept that there were so many people who didn't care. And yet if I take myself back to when I was 19, maybe I wouldn't have been much different from them.

"... I guess maybe I'm trying to figure out a way to see why people didn't care about me. ...

"Part of it had to do with my grandfather (publisher William Randolph Hearst). A lot of people just hated the man, and because of that, the hatred carried on to me.

"Part of it came from people thinking I'd get off too easily. First it was, 'Oh, she'll get away with this, she'll never go to trial.' Then it was, 'Oh, she'll never go to prison.' Then it was, 'Oh, she'll beat it on appeal.' Then it was, 'Oh, she's out on bond, she'll never go back.'

"And now ... now the same people are saying, 'I never thought this would happen to you.'"

Miss Hearst, 24, said her lawyer has forbidden her to discuss her SLA experiences. She says she has turned down publishers' requests to write a book because "what they want is to print all the juicy details of what happened to me."

She also said she's trying to separate herself from "Patty," the name the press and public use to identify her.

"I don't like that name so much anymore. It's just something from a bizarre headline. Just something that someone invented. I don't think it's me anymore. I'm someone else. And Patty ... well, Patty is just that person in the headlines."

Judge May Step Down From Passman's Trial

SHREVEPORT, La. (UPI) — A federal judge said he may have to step down from presiding at the bribery-tax evasion trial of former Rep. Otto Passman because he is related to an accountant whose firm worked on Passman's books.

District Judge Tom Stagg learned Friday that he would preside at the Monroe, La., trial of Passman, 78, who is accused of conspiring to accept $213,000 in bribes from Korean businessman Tongsun Park, accepting $98,000 of the money and evading taxes on the amount.

Stagg is a brother-in-law of John Savage, senior partner of Savage, Moore, Miles and Johnston, a Monroe, La., accounting firm that reportedly handled Passman's books. Stagg's wife and Savage's wife are sisters.

Stagg Saturday said he did not expect to remove himself from the case because the tie was so remote, but Sunday he said he had reconsidered and would present the issue to Nauman Scott, senior judge for the Western District of Louisiana, who was trying a case in New Orleans.

"Whether there is a basis for recusal in the Passman case has not been decided," he said. "I will submit the facts to Judge Scott and a decision will be made.

"It would appear that if John Savage is a witness, it might be better that I recuse myself. I don't think anybody can fail to be aware that judges want to avoid impropriety or any appearances of impropriety."

Savage refused comment on the matter, saying it would be unethical to discuss clients' affairs.

Scott originally was expected to preside over the trial, but he recused himself because his son was involved in accounting for Passman.

No date has been set yet for the trial.

NEW AMBASSADORS

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — William H. Gleysteen presented his credentials to President Park Chung-hee today, succeeding Richard Sneider as U.S. ambassador to South Korea. Gleysteen, a career diplomat, last served as deputy assistant secretary of state for East Asia and Pacific affairs.

Economist Sides With People On Inflation

By MIKE FEINSILBER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Economist Gar Alperovitz claims to have discovered something about inflation so obvious and fundamental that it has escaped the government's attention. Only the people share his secret.

It is that for most people inflation is worse than the government thinks. The prices of necessities — what 80 percent of the people spend 70 percent of their money on — are climbing faster than prices overall.

When people say they're worse off economically than they were five years ago, and the government cites economic statistics to show it is not so, Alperovitz sides with the people. Judging by what they spend most of their money on, they are worse off, he says.

The prices of food, fuel, medical care and housing in 1978, he says, are climbing at a rate of nearly 13 percent, almost twice what the government says will be the general inflation rate this year.

That kind of analysis is typical of Alperovitz, 42, son of a Racine, Wis. manufacturer. He is an unorthodox economist.

Deeply involved in a move to revive the steel town of Youngstown, Ohio, he advocates such ideas as worker participation in economic planning and community ownership of factories.

An associate says it is no accident that Alperovitz talks much about the necessities and about community.

He finds a religious conscience in much of Alperovitz' work — a strange thing to say about a practictioner of what has been called "the dismal science." In general, economists conceal any notion that their data deals with lives, bread, pain.

When Jimmy Carter came to Washington, Ralph Nader and about 50 liberals in Congress put Alperovitz forward as a candidate for the Council of Economic Advisers CEA). But Alperovitz was too much the gadfly.

Instead, his shop operates as a CEA in exile, with lines into the Harvard and Cambridge university networks in intellectual Washington.

But he is summoned from time to time to the White House, as a backdoor adviser to Carter's advisers.

Alperovitz is co-director of the National Center for Economic Alternatives, a Washington "think tank" established by 30 foundations and philanthropists to find alternatives to the conventional wisdoms.

"It's very clear that the final quarter of the 20th Century is going to be very different from the period we all thought was normal, the postwar boom," he says.

"The boom is over. We're in for slower growth, more stagflation, resource problems. Our position in the world economy is slipping. All of that means traditional solutions are failing. Self-evidently, it's a new ballgame."

His principles:

—Through government action (he has a list of 100 possible measures), "stabilize the prices of things that matter most, the necessities" and let prices for luxuries go up. Rebates, for example, would let householders pay for needed electricity but not power to run air conditioners. This concept is not far from Carter's original energy plan.

—Treat the economic health of every locality, making it a priority that no community is permitted to fall below a reasonable level.

"In Youngstown," he says, "we've had our first two suicides (since the Youngstown Sheet and Tube plant closed. It's very ugly; people's lives are being destroyed."

—Decentralize. Promote local business ownership, cooperatives, worker management, workplace democracy.

"You get innovation and productivity when you let 1,000 flowers bloom," Alperovitz says.

At Cambridge, Alperovitz wrote a thesis arguing that Harry Truman dropped the atom bomb on Japan more to impress the Soviets with U.S. power than to force the surrender of an already tottering Japan.

This revisionist view of history, now partially accepted, is characteristic of his tendency to challenge accepted ideas.

This spring Alperovitz' organization conducted a $300,000 government study to see if 250 Youngstown religious leaders were right.

They argued that community ownership could reopen the steel plant, closed by its conglomerate owners at a cost of 5,000 jobs.

The experts said it could be done with half a billion dollars in government-backed loans. They said a reopened plant could make a 9 percent profit.

Alperovitz says a profit that size is enough if your interest is keeping a town alive, but not if you are a multinational conglomerate interested in the 18 percent profits available elsewhere.

He is critical of the multinationals and thinks the people are, too.

He compares this period to the time the peace movement became a force in politics.

"Multinationals have not been good citizens," he says. "Their record is rife with bribery, payoffs, corruption and scandal. The million dollar salaries that many top executives get are not reasonable. Their pollution record is not good.

"At the bleakest point in the recession, polls showed people were willing to try new ideas. Two-thirds thought fundamental changes were needed in the economy; two-thirds thought workers ought to own their companies; two-thirds said they would support a presidential candidate who would form a movement to basically change the corporations.

"Sure, things were bleakest when people were saying these things. But you get a sense of where we're going by looking at the bleak periods. We're going to have more bleakness."

Farm Workers Set For Produce Strike

By The Associated Press

The August tomato harvest may be doomed to rot in the fields if the 16,000 migrant farmworkers in Indiana, Ohio and Michigan carry out their threat to strike for higher wages and benefits.

Most of the farmworkers are from Texas.

Baldemar Velasquez, director of the Ohio-based Farm Labor Organizing Committee (FLOC), said the union plans to call a strike against major tomato canneries supplied by Indiana growers unless growers agree to help farmworkers push for increased benefits from the canneries.

"The more we push the canneries, the more the canneries are going to close down," a Muncie grower said at a meeting between workers and growers last week. "Our profit margin is such now that it wouldn't take much to push us into soybeans or something else."

"I'm sorry you're stuck in between," Velasquez told the six growers — out of the 100 invited — who showed up at that meeting. "But you've got to be sorry for us because we've been at the bottom of the industry for a long time."

Federal law guarantees the minimum wage of $2.65 per hour for the workers, 85 percent of whom come from Texas. But Velasquez said the law often is ignored, and the union wants the canneries to amend this year's contracts to include better pay and health insurance benefits.

Large canning firms such as Stokely-Van Camp, Libby's and Heinz buy tomatoes from Indiana growers, who, along with Ohio producers, supply about 30 percent of the nation's tomatoes. California grows the remaining 70 percent.

Representatives of the union, which has 2,600 members, are scheduled to meet with Ohio growers July 27 at Bowling Green, Ohio. And although FLOC boasts membership of only one-eighth of all migrant workers in the Midwest, Velasquez said he was confident all the laborers would cooperate if a strike were called.

"I don't intend to let a strike flounder once it's begun," he said, adding that the union has placed $5,000 into a relief fund for workers and plans to add $10,000 more after the Ohio meeting.

Warren Spangle, executive vice president of the Indiana Food Processors Association, which represents 25 state canners and processors, said he does not see the need for contract negotiations this year.

"Before the workers came up here they were advised what the rate of pay was," Spangle said. "They came not out of servitude but with the expectation that they will make good money.

"I think it's unfortunate that these people come in from the outside to cause problems for people who want to work," he said, adding, "Should the migrants strike this summer, the processing plants will find a way to harvest the tomatoes."

Texarkana Charges Result In Arrests

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — Kentucky authorities have arrested three youths in connection with the stabbing and beating Friday of a Texarkana man.

A spokesman for the Texarkana Department of Public Safety said the three, two 18-year-olds and a 15-year-old, were arrested Sunday. They are being held for extradition to Texas in Bowling Green, Ky. The identities of the three were withheld pending the filing of formal charges.

Clarence T. Childers, 68, of Texarkana, was beaten and stabbed several times early Friday at the Texas Travel Bureau rest stop on Interstate 30, about a mile west of the Arkansas state line. Childers was listed Sunday in fair condition at a Texarkana hospital.

Authorities said three youths forced Childers into a car where he was undressed, stabbed and beaten. The youths then stole Childers car, police said.

Kentucky authorities said the youths were apprehended in a car matching the description of Childers' vehicle.

Ray Seeks Young's Aid

PETROS, Tenn. (AP) — James Earl Ray, still trying to win a new trial for the 1968 killing of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., has asked the help of United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young.

Ray sent a letter — in which he said he is a political prisoner — to Young after meeting Friday at Brushy Mountain State Penitentiary with four congressmen on the House Assassinations Committee.

"Since Memphis is a lot closer than Moscow, I ask you to meet with President Carter and ask him to request that I be given a new trial," Ray said in his letter to Young. "Those trials in Moscow may be unfair and completely political but at least the defendants there have a trial. For 10 years, that is all that I have asked for."

The U.N. ambassador recently aroused the ire of Carter and some of the nation's diplomats when he said the United States has its own political prisoners. The statement came during the recent Moscow trials of dissidents Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg. Young later clarified his remarks.

Young was one of King's aides and was with him at the Lorraine Motel in Memphis when King was killed by a rifle shot on April 4, 1968, during a municipal garbage strike.

In exchange for a 99-year prison term rather than the death penalty, Ray pleaded guilty in 1969 to killing King.

But Ray tried to withdraw the plea three days after entering it. He has been trying ever since to win a new trial, denying he fired the shot that killed King. State and federal courts, including the U.S. Supreme Court, have turned down Ray's appeals.

He met Friday with Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, assassinations committee chairman, and three other congressmen. Ray later told reporters that his testimony at next month's Washington hearing may include previously unreleased information about King's death. Ray declined to provide any details.

He has met with the committee's staff eight times in the past two years behind the East Tennessee prison's walls. Ray's attorney, assassinations buff Mark Lane, said he had to evade efforts by Stokes and the others to subpoena testimony from Ray in private Friday.

Stokes and the committee's staff denied that they planned to subpoena testimony Friday from Ray but declined comment about what was said at the meeting. Other committee members there were Reps. Samuel Devine, R-Ohio; Robert Edgar, D-Pa., and Harold Sawyer, R-Mich.

With Ray were his brother, Jerry; Lane and Memphis attorney Duncan Ragsdale, one of Lane's associates.

Ray said the congressmen did not ask him specifically about the King assassination. Instead, he said, the meeting focused on what areas his testimony will cover and details for transporting him to Washington.

Fire Victims To Gather At Party

By CYNTHIA KADONAGA

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Three eucalyptus trees that exploded in flames and helped fuel the brush fire that destroyed Bill Luc's $250,000 home last year are growing again — right under the hot tub at Luc's new home.

Luc and many of the Sycamore Canyon residents who lost their homes in the July 26, 1977, blaze are rebuilding, remembering the ashes of last year.

The 740-acre fire — sparked when a kite became tangled in power lines and propelled by 70 mph winds — caused $28 million in property damage and about 100 minor injuries in the exclusive canyon area of this wealthy coastal community. Most of the burned homes had values over six figures.

The victims talk about the destruction caused by the one-day fire like old war wounds, pointing to burn scars with pride and disbelief.

"The day after the fire, I sifted through the rubble for my sterling silver place settings," said Luc, an attorney. "I found a clump of them — all melted together. I'm having the jeweler make it into a conversation piece for my new house."

More than 60 "fire veterans" are expected to meet Wednesday night on the anniversary of the disaster for a $10-a-plate dinner party.

The party — "for fellowship and to get better acquainted" — is the second since the fire, Luc said.

The first gathering, held a few days after the fire, was marked by "dazed people wandering around in brand new T-shirts and Levis because all their clothes had burned," Luc said.

"We heard stories about how one guy stayed behind to fight the fire and was badly burned. And there was a boy who hurt his feet running over hot coals. One person would say their house was gone, and standing next to him would be someone whose house was spared."

This week's party has fire prevention as a main theme. Fire officials say last winter's heavy rains made grass grow higher than ever. But officially, the fire hazard is described as moderate.

Ray Nokes of Santa Barbara's Public Works Department said 60 percent of the fire victims plan to rebuild homes, with many installing solar energy equipment on rooftops. Of the 216 homes destroyed, 33 already have been replaced and another 41 are under construction, he said.

Most of the burned homes were insured for one-half or one-third less than their actual value. Nokes said many owners are building with the help of federal Small Business Administration loans.

Some, like 76-year-old carpenter Artilio Serena, are doing the work themselves.

"Everything burned down," said Serena. "All that was left was my wife and my dogs. But we've built the house again and moved in. I did most of the work myself."

Serena built his home on the same brushy site. "Fire is something that if it comes, it comes," he said.

Other victims of the fire have bought asbestos roof shingles and are sawing down highly flammable eucalyptus and pine trees.

Until their new homes are completed, the owners are living in everything from teepees to apartments.

Joann Chenwick, recently wed to an electrical engineer, said she has a "honeymoon cottage" in a camper overlooking a rubble-strewn pool area. Her husband was living in the house with several other men and bought out their shares in the property after the fire.

Dave Winters built a garage where he, his wife and two daughters are living while he rebuilds their house — now a frame highlighted by black-crayoned planks carrying the message, "I may be slow, but I'm getting there."

HOT OFF THE PRESS — Printing assistant Glenn Chapman of the Wadewitz School in Racine, Wisc., passes around the first page of a book, "The Wheelers and Pushers," written by children who attend a class for handicapped youngsters. The book tells about getting around in a wheelchair. (AP Laserphoto)

Handicapped Book Written By Youths

By TIMOTHY HARPER

RACINE, Wis. (AP) — It won't be a best seller and they won't earn a nickel from it, but the seven young co-authors hardly mind.

Members of a special education class for handicapped children at Wadewitz School here, the seven make up the Light and Bright Writers Club, and their latest book is a labor of love.

Their hot-off-the-press 58-page softcover book is called "Wheelers and Pushers," subtitled "Going Places in a Wheelchair."

The book, the club's third after the past two years' classes explored the problems of epilepsy and having one hand, is a humorous yet informational look at the human condition from a wheelchair.

Written solely by the seven younsters, ages 10 to 12, including five confined to wheelchairs, the book is often devastating in its simplicity.

"When you are wheeling along," the book advises in one of many pages featuring original art by the students, "you will meet people who stare. You're never sure how to handle them. Should you smile or make a face or ignore them?"

After wondering whether the stare is at the chair or the wheeler and considering whether to offer those who gape a lap ride, the authors agree, "Oh, well, better to keep smiling."

Jan Damaschke, 24, the teacher-editor, said the initial printing was 500 copies, but she hopes more will be sponsored.

She said last year's "Gripping Tales — Living with Epilepsy," was requested so much from people and groups all over the country that the state's epilepsy foundation sponsored a second press run of 4,000.

"The kids had so much they wanted to say," Mrs. Damaschke says, noting that most wheelers object to condescending friendliness as much as cold stares. "They just want people to take them for themselves."

Besides letters from Miss Wheelchair America and triple amputee Max Cleland, head of the federal Veterans Administration, the book includes advice for new wheelers and pushers and has dozens of photos of the students at work and play.

There is a history of the wheelchair and a list of common gripes among wheelers: second-floor restrooms, berserk motors on electric chairs, rear entrance ramps, high service counters and sinks, gravel park paths and rude people who get in a wheeler's way.

However, the book also points out the numerous advantages of being a wheeler, including never having to wait for a place to sit and being able to pull a friend on a skateboard.

The whole idea of the book, summed up on the back cover, is that being in a chair is not necessarily "Hell on Wheels."

Ousted Ford President Not Joining Chrysler

DETROIT (AP) — Lee A. Iacocca, ousted last week as president of Ford Motor Co., won't be moving over to rival Chrysler Corp., according to directors of the nation's No. 3 automaker.

Speculation among auto industry observers here in the week since Henry Ford II removed Iacocca is that Chrysler, reeling under a nearly $120 million first-quarter loss and saddled with a declining share of the auto market, would offer Iacocca a top job.

Chrysler's two top officers, chairman John Riccardo and president Eugene Cafiero, have no sales background and Chrysler's top two sales executives resigned in March. Iacocca's strength at Ford was sales and marketing.

Last week, a group of Chrysler dealers sent a telegram to corporate officials recommending the hiring of Iacocca.

But Chrysler board members, canvassed Wednesday by the Detroit News, insist such move has not been seriously considered.

"I'm satisfied with the leadership at Chrysler now," said Gabriel Hauge, a Chrysler director and chairman of Manufacturers Hanover Corp. in New York. "We have two fine people. Whenever there is a change in Detroit auto industry, the rumors start flying."

Hauge, considered a most influential board member because his bank is the agent fo $4e million in revolving credit commitments obtained by Chrysler, said Iacocca's name has never come up at board meetings.

One unidentified director, however, said hiring Iacocca would be "a fantastic move that would keep Chrysler in the eyes of the world as it challenged Ford with one of its own men." But he added, "Chrysler can't afford him."

Iacocca has been one of the nation's highest-paid businessmen, earning nearly $1 million last year. Riccardo and Cafiero made less than half that amount.

Iacocca himself has been unavailable for comment since he lost a power struggle last week with Henry Ford II. His wife, Mary, said Wednesday he has been out of town all week.

Industry analysts feel Chrysler's hiring of Iacocca would be a logical move, but one said "Chrysler has immediate problems. Anyone coming in could not change the course of the company for 24 to 36 months."

Antiquated Plumbing Can Pollute Water

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Water produced by municipal plants is degraded on its way from the waterworks to the home tap," Donald L. Porth told a recent meeting sponsored by Resources for the Future.

Water passing through antiquated mains, water meters and home plumbing can pick up undesirable pollutants, Porth explained.

"Home systems can contain a variety of metals, such as black iron, galvanized iron, copper and brass," he said.

Porth is president of the Water Quality Research Council, a non-profit group devoted to research and education.

Contributions Grow For Presbyterians

ATLANTA (AP) — Contributions to the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. increased last year by almost 18 percent, despite a membership decline of .9 percent, the denomination has reported.

Statistics released by the Office of the General Assembly show a membership of 874,897, down 7,923 from 1976. Contributions in 1977 were $245.2 million, up $37,200 from 1976, representing per capita giving of $280, up from $236 in 1976.

Tobacco Firms Report Hike In Earnings

NEW YORK (AP) — R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc. and American Brands Inc., two of the nation's largest tobacco producers, Thursday reported improved second quarter earnings based on sales increases.

R.J. Reynolds, the nation's No. 1 cigarette maker, reported record net income of $111.8 million for the quarter, up 11.8 percent from $100 million in the same period last year. The improvements were attributed to improved revenues in domestic tobacco, international tobacco and shipping operations.

The Winston-Salem, N.C.-based company, whose products include Winston, Salem and Camel cigarettes, said earnings per share also set a record at $2.18 in the quarter, up 12.4 percent from $1.94 a year ago.

Rising revenues in the firm's tobacco sector and at Sea-Land Service, the world's largest containerized shipping company, offset a serious decline in energy sales.

Reynolds' energy subsidiary had 1978 second quarter revenues of $156 million, down $125 million from $216 million in the same quarter of 1977.

American Brands reported second quarter earnings of $42.54 million or $1.58 per share, up 3 percent from $41.5 million or $1.54 in the same quarter of 1977.

DR. LAMB

Limit All Types Of Fats

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read in one of your writings that some fish contain polyunsaturted fats. I wonder if you could name the fish for me.

DEAR READER — As a generalization about one third of the fat in fish of all types is polyunsaturated fat. Some fish are flounder. In these fish, since there is almost no fat to begin with, you won't find much polyunsaturated fat in them.

By contrast salmon, which contains quite a bit of fat, will have a reasonable amount of polyunsaturated fat. The evidence that a marked increase in polyunsaturated fats in the diet prevents fatty cholesterol build-up is rather meager. It is better to limit all types of fat and particularly the saturated fats.

Since only about a third of the fat in fish is saturated fat, fish makes an ideal source of meat protein. The polyunsaturated fat in fish is unique. It is much more unsaturated than the polyunsaturated fats found in vegetables and cereals. Some people think the presence of such highly polyunsaturated fats in the diet is helpful in lowering the blood cholesterol levels.

To give you more information on fish, along with tables to provide the fat values and cholesterol values in different fishes I am sending you The Health Letter number 11-12, Fish and Shellfish As A Health Food. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, 78292.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am especially interested in what causes bursitis. Will it clear up eventually? Is there anything to do for it except take aspirin? I have had it for about nine months now. I have had two shots but they only gave relief for about 24 hours. I am going on 70 and am a female. I do a lot of yard and garden work besides housekeeping.

DEAR READER — Bursa are little sacs filled with fluid. The material that forms the sac looks about the same as the plastic wrap material you have in the kitchen.

These little fluid-filled sacs are cushions around bony prominences, tendons and in the joints and they are there literally to cushion the effect of movement and protect tendons and joints from wear and tear. They can become irritated by injury or a number of different infections, but a high percentage of cases of bursitis occur with no known cause and they're not all easy to treat.

It's common to rest the joint involved to avoid additional physical trauma. In your case if the joints involved are used extensively for yard and garden work when you have bursitis you probably should avoid doing too much of that. Heat is sometimes used to provide some muscle relaxation and relief.

Aspirin is commonly used to help control the pain and when these general measures are not useful, stronger medicines are used including the injection of steriods into the joints. This is very effective in some cases and not so successful in others. A diagnosis of chronic bursitis depends on how long it lasts.

Running For Office Becomes Popular Pastime In Kentucky

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI) — Running for office has become a popular sport in Kansas this summer: there are 29 candidates, including the daughter of Alf Landon, in the Aug. 1 primary for senate, governor and one seat in Congress.

The most crowded race is for the senate. Four Democrats and nine Republicans, including Nancy Landon Kassebaum, are seeking the seat to be vacated by the retirement of Republican Sen. James Pearson.

The Senate contenders have collectively spent more than $1 million so far — an expensive race by Kansas standards.

Top among the high rollers are Republican businessman Sam Hardage, $309,331; college professor-banker-farmer Wayne Angell, a Republican, $199,813; former Rep. Bill Roy, a Democrat, $148,026, and Mrs. Kassebaum, $118,477.

Roy, an obstetrician who also has a law degree, is the acknowledged leader in the four-candidate democratic primary and the early favorite in the November election. The two-term former congressman vacated his seat in 1974 for a close but unsuccessful race against Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan.

In the GOP race, observers give the more conservative Angell and Hardage an edge, with Mrs. Kassebaum, a moderate, in second or third place.

Mrs. Kassebaum, daughter of former Gov. Alfred M. Landon, the 1936 Republican presidential nominee, has used the family name and a few appearances by her 90-year-old father in advertisements.

The 45-year-old Wichita Republican announced her candidacy from the steps of the Landon mansion in Topeka. She also has resurrected her maiden name, prominently displaying it in ads. She is the vice president of Wichita radio station KFH.

There are several question marks, including the candidacies of two state legislators, Senate Republican Leader Norman Gaar and Sen. Jan Meyers, another female candidate. Deryl Schuster, a former Pearson aide, also is making a showing, particularly in western Kansas.

Even though Gov. Robert Bennett is a favorite to win a second term, he faces two opponents in the Republican primary. Three Democrats are battling for the right to take him on in November.

Bennett is figured to be an easy winner over the Rev. Harold Knight and former State Printer Bob Sanders.

Kansas House Speaker John Carlin, hopes to combine his post as the first Democratic speaker in more than 60 years with an aggressive attack on Bennett, to win the nomination.

Most observers think Carlin, with an energetic staff and the support of many of the state's top Democrats, has the edge over Sen. Bert Chaney and attorney Harry Wiles. However, Chaney has support from several labor groups and Wiles has backing from some associates of former Gov. Robert Docking.

Five Republicans and six Democrats are running for the chance to succeed retiring veteran Rep. Joe Skubitz, R-Kan. In the 2nd District, two Republicans are contesting for the nomination to oppose Rep. Martha Keys, who has no Democratic opposition.

Patience Pays Off For Young Hunter

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Ronald Jones took a tip from an old adage — the one that says "if at first you don't succeed, try, try gain" — to bag his first turkey.

He had no luck last year.

"My friends thought I was crazy, and I'll admit I almost went broke hunting," said Jones, a former local high school tennis star. "I must have gone hunting 30 times."

This year, in his second trip, he bagged a gobbler tipping the scales at a robust 20 pounds and 8 ounces.

"Last year I only saw one turkey, so I thought maybe I didn't know how to call them properly," he said. "So I got myself a good caller and did a lot of practicing."

Woman To Lead Washington Legion

SEATTLE (AP) — For the first time in its 60-year history, the Washington state branch of the American Legion has elected a woman as commander.

By a 234-215 vote, Doris Gross of Des Moines was elected Saturday over John Jensen of Arlington. Gross, a World War II veteran, is past vice commander of the organization and a 32-year legion member. She will serve in the post for one year.

Chile Fires Member Of Junta

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — Chile's military government today fired Gen. Gustavo Leigh, commander of the Chilean air force, from the four-man ruling junta in a political duspute that shattered the junta's once granite unity.

Leigh, 58, was asked to resign by the other three members of the junta, President Augusto Pinochet, Adm. Jose T. Merino and Carabineros police Gen. Cesar Mendozae, after a four-hour meeting at the downtown defense ministry.

A crowd of about 200 gathered before the ministry as word of the crisis spread, and police moved in to keep them moving.

Armed army troops took up position on the roof of the ministry.

A communique issued by the government said the other three members of the junta had "unanimously agreed to declare the impossibility of Gen. Gustavo Leigh to carry out his duties as commander of the air force and of the honorable government junta for repeatedly failing to follow the principles that inspired the movement of Sept. 11, 1973."

Sept. 11, 1973 was the date the junta ousted the leftist government of President Salvador Allende in a bloody coup.

Leigh, the communique said, would be replaced by air force Gen. Fernando Matthei as commander of the institution and as a member of the junta.

Matthei was sworn into his new posts at midday at the government's Diego Portales headquarters, not far from the defense ministry. Matthei had previously been the military government's health minister.

The split between Leigh and the junta surged into the open last week when the air force leader, in remarks to an Italian newspaper, questioned the timetable the regime has set for returning to democratic rule in this country.

Leigh would like to move much faster than the junta proposes and there were reports he would seek elective political office.

A list published last week in Santiago newspapers placed Matthei 10th in rank of the ruling military. This would indicate that eight other generals had been fired with Leigh.

Nine Christians Killed In Lebanese Fighting

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The latest outbreak of Syrian-Christian warfare in Beirut subsided into an uneasy lull at dawn today after nearly 36 hours of firing.

Christian spokesmen reported nine Christians killed and 62 wounded in 48 hours.

Traffic between the Moslem and Christian halves of the city resumed cautiously. But the Syrians' chief target, the Christian Hadass neighborhood in Southeast Beirut, remained shuttered.

The firing started a few forest fires in the pine woods between the presidential palace and the residence of U.S. Ambassador Richard Parker, five miles east of Beirut. But a police spokesman said the fires were quickly extinguished, and neither the palace nor the embassy mansion 500 yards away were damaged.

The fighting began Saturday night in Hadass, subsided briefly at daybreak Sunday and erupted again in the afternoon. Shortly before dusk it spread to the Ashrafiyeh and Ein Rummaneh districts and the port area.

The Syrian command reported early today it was pounding Christian neighborhoods because militiamen were firing mortars from concealed positions.

The Syrians accused Christian militiamen of starting the trouble Saturday by shooting two Syrian soldiers on patrol. The Christian commands said their forces came under unprovoked fire from the Syrians.

One Christian spokesman said the Syrians were "fomenting the clashes on threadbare pretexts." Al Amal, the Phalange Party newspaper, said the Syrians "invented the sniper story, then shelled residential quarters indiscriminately."

The Syrians also accused the National Liberals and the Phalangists, the two biggest Christian parties, of "deliberately provoking Syrian forces as part of rightist plans to partition Lebanon" into Christian and Moslem states.

President Elias Sarkis contacted the commander of the Syrian forces and demanded an immediate cease-fire, the Phalangist radio station reported.

Christian civilians moved mattresses and other household items into basements and otther shelters Sunday night, and some residents were reported taking refuge in northern Lebanon.

"We are bracing for a hot night," said one man in Ein Rummaneh. "This time we will be much better off than last time. We have replenished our stocks of food and fresh water."

The Syrian army, which intervened in the Lebanese civil war to save the Christians from defeat, now is trying to bring them under its control and end their cooperation with the Israelis in southern Lebanon.

Nearly 200 Christians were killed in Syrian-Christian fighting in Beirut in the first week of July.

Pereda Prepares To Pick Cabinet

LA PAZ, Bolivia (UPI) — Gen. Juan Pereda met with military officers and civilian politicians today to pick a "cabinet of national unity," but found little opposition support for his claim to be Bolivia's legal president.

The official newspaper Hoy printed a full-page legal brief calling for the Electoral Court to reverse its decision that annulled the July 9 presidential election.

Such a move would make Pereda, who accepted command of the nation from a military junta that ousted President Hugo Banzer and seized power Friday, the legal president because he won 50 percent of the vote in the disputed race.

Hoy printed the brief, which was drafted by an independent lawyer, F. Humberto Fernandez, as a news story. The independent daily newspaper El Diario printed it as an advertisement. The Catholic daily Presencia did not use it.

A headline in Hoy said the Electoral Court was expected to hear arguments on the appeal today.

Pereda met with high-ranking generals who streamed in and out of the presidential palace in downtown La Paz to discuss formation of a new cabinet.

Schools were still closed and the country remained under a state of siege, but there was little evidence of the crisis that has held Bolivia for almost a month.

Guards that surrounded the palace with automatic weapons during Pereda's meetings Saturday were removed, replaced by red-clad ceremonial dragoons. The military officers all arrived without bodyguards and there was little evidence of the military muscle that had reinforced weekend events.

"We are seeking a cabinet of national unity," Pereda press secretary Enrique Eduardo told reporters Saturday at the presidential palace where the Pereda government held its first meetings.

The opposition charged massive fraud in July 9 balloting that gave Pereda 50 percent of the vote, enough to win the presidency outright. Pereda last week had the elections annulled because he said he feared "chaos and violence."

But working from the Peoples National Union stronghold in Santa Cruz province, he engineered a military-civilian power play Friday that resulted in President Hugo Banzer's resignation and Pereda's taking office from a military junta formed only hours before.

The National Union contends that Pereda, having won the disputed election, is the "constitutional president" of Bolivia. Pereda appeared to be promoting a civilian image.

But response to the Pereda rebellion and particularly Eduardo's statements about a "cabinet of national unity" has been bad. All the opposition parties, either through official spokesmen or statements issued over the weekend, rejected Pereda's claims to legitimacy.

A failure by Pereda to induce the opposition to enter his government would leave him with a cabinet composed of military personnel and members of his own party.

Police Appeal To Commission

HOUSTON (UPI) — Two policemen indefinitely suspended for unsuitability have asked the city civil service commission to prevent the chief from following through on firing them.

Osbie Debose McGregor, 28, and Clifton Carl Nelius, 27, were indefinitely suspended — tantamount to firing — by Chief Harry Caldwell two weeks ago.

Caldwell said that, although the two had violated no laws, he believed that over a period of time they had demonstrated they were "incompatible with police work."

The chief has not detailed charges, but records show the commission twice blocked attempts to fire McGregor, once because the move came during "emotional stress associated with terminal illness and subsequent death of his mother."

The attempts in 1977 followed charges he had not reported for duty on several occasions, disobeyed regulations and had written checks for insufficient funds. He was suspended for 90 days.

Funeral services will be at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the Sacred Heart Catholic Church here with the Rev. Larry Hemp, pastor, officiating.

Burial will be in Sacred Heart Cemetery under the direction of Hammons Funeral Home.

Alvarez, a former Littlefield resident, was dead at 11:50 p.m. Saturday on arrival at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo. He was the victim of a shooting incident.

The Littlefield native had lived in Amarillo two years where he had worked as a welder.

Survivors include his wife, Mary; a daughter, Amy of the home; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Pedro Alvarez of Littlefield; five brothers, Marcelino Lara of Littlefield, Frank and Rufus Lara, both of Amarillo, Tom and Issac, both of Arizona; four sisters, Rosie Arguiar of Amarillo, Dolores and Lydia Ruiz, both of Littlefield, and Janie Esquibel of Lubbock.

Ralph L. Barton

Services for Ralph L. Barton, 72, of 3002 E. 4th St. will be at 2 p.m. Wednesday in Resthaven-Singleton-Wilson Funeral Chapel with the Rev. Oscar Newell, pastor of the Roosevelt Baptist Church, officiating.

Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Resthaven-Singleton-Wilson Funeral Home.

Barton died at 5:15 p.m. Sunday at Community Hospital after a brief illness.

Barton, retired owner of the Barton Pump Co., had lived in Lubbock for 33 years, moving here from St. Louis, Okla. He had been employed by the Hilton Supply Co. nearly 18 years before he owned the pump company.

Survivors include two sons, Dale of Lake Ransom Canyon and Eugene of Euless; a daughter, Mrs. Joy Rojas of Lubbock; a brother, Ernest of Duncan, Okla.; 12 grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren.

Owen J. Bybee

HEREFORD (Special) — Services for Owen J. Bybee, 69, of Hereford will be at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the First Baptist Church here with the Rev. Doug Manning, pastor, officiating.

Burial will be in West Park Cemetery under the direction of Gililland-Watson Funeral Home.

Bybee died at 7 a.m. Sunday in St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo after a lengthy illness.

Bybee, a native of Childress, had been a lawyer here with the firm of Cowsert, Bybee, Line and Hoelscher since 1945. He was a member of the First Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife, Thelma; three sons, Bruce of Wichita Falls, Gerald of Amarillo and Lynn of Middleton, Wis; two sisters, Mrs. Raymond Hander of Bella Vista, Ark., and Marie Ratliff of Spur; and eight grandchildren.

Mrs. Freeman

FORT WORTH (Special) — Memorial services for Mrs. Mary Leonard Freeman, 46, of Portland, Ore., will be at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in Fort Worth.

Mrs. Freeman, a former Lubbock resident, died Saturday in a Portland hospital following an illness.

She was the daughter of the late Marvin Leonard, founder of Leonard's Department Stores in Fort Worth. The stores were recently bought by the Dillard's Department Store chain.

A native of Fort Worth, Mrs. Freeman had lived in Portland more than 10 years. She was a graduate of Texas Christian University and a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority. She was a member of the Episcopal Church

Survivors include two sons, Harry Hubert Porter III and Marvin Leonard Porter, both of Portland; a daughter, Laura Miranda Porter of Tacoma, Wash.; her mother, Mrs. Marvin Leonard of Fort Worth; and three sisters, Mrs. John M. Griffith Jr. and Mrs. Madelon L. Mariotti, both of Fort Worth, and Miranda Leonard of Boston, Mass.

The family requests memorials be sent to the American Cancer Society or to CARE.

Arrangements in Fort Worth are being handled by Harveson and Cole Funeral Home.

Mercedes Moreno

Rosary for Mercedes Moreno, 73, of Smyer will be said at 8 p.m. Tuesday in St. Theresa's Catholic Church in Carlisle.

Requiem mass for Moreno will be at 10 a.m. Wednesday in St. Theresa's Catholic Church with the Rev. Patrick Maher officiating.

Burial will follow in Peaceful Gardens Memorial Park in Lubbock under the direction of Henderson Funeral Directors.

Moreno died Sunday afternoon in Highland Hospital.

He was a native of Mexico, moving to Smyer in 1951 from Elgin.

Survivors include his wife, Simona; two sons, Lino and Antonio, both of Lubbock; two daughters, Lupe Ramirez and Lydia Salgado, both of Smyer; six brothers, Ignacio, Eusebio, Reyes, Juan, Mateo and Cruz, all of Taylor; three sisters, Rosa Gomez of Granberry, Lupe Moreno of Taylor and Presentacion Moreno of Chicago, Ill.; his stepmother, Francisca Moreno of Taylor; nine grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

Prisoners Live, Die By Numbers

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

MCALESTER, Okla. (AP) — Years before the computer threatened to reduce all humanity to a statistic, men lived and died by the numbers:

60939
12-25-1900

Mulligan's Stew

10-29-59
Women, too:
70376 B-F
1-16-1938
7-4-1961

Stark in their entirety, blunt as the presiding judge's gavel, these are epitaphs on the whitewashed headstones in the prison cemetery across the highway from the maximum security wing of the Oklahoma penitentiary. By the hundreds, the convict dead are lock-stopped into orderly rows, each in his last narrow cell forever laid, serving the final sentence.

No crosses, no sculptured angels, no uncouth rhymes implore the passing tribute of a sigh. Not even a "Beloved Father Of...," a "Loving Wife Of..." or a "Rest in Peace."

All we know of 60939 is that he was born on Christmas Day in 1900 and died at age 58 on Oct. 29, 1959. Somewhere along the way, melancholy marked him for her own. If he wasn't a lifer, it turned out that way.

Off to the side near the unlocked gate, segregated by race and sex, 70376 B-F, a black female who died at age 23, rests in the shade of a giant cottonwood tree. Free at last. What was her crime? How long could she have served to die so young? Was the few hundred yard journey cross the road and under the wooden arch marked "prison cemetery" her first and only trip outside those high walls since sentencing?

There is no question of the fate of:

W
EXC

White male, executed. The crude printed figures don't tell us when or why. With that low number was he hanged? Or had the electric chair come to Oklahoma by then? Time and the wind that never seems to cease blowing acorss these plains have obliterated the numbers on most of the other stones in "Death Row," which seems a strange designation for that part of the graveyard reserved for prisoners dispatched by the state instead of their Maker. One tombstone has its head lopped off so that only the letters "EXC" appear on the portion of stone protruding from the sod like a busted tooth.

W 20391 rates yellow plastic flowers on his grave, the only evidence of grief hereabouts, save for the keening of the locusts in the tall grass. On visitors day at the penitentiary, a handful of relatives may cross the road and open the gate, but perhaps months and years and decades go by without anyone pausing to remember W 11252 or B 7563.

From yonder machine-gun mounted tower, sirens wail the prisoners' passing hours — get up, wash up, line up, chow up, work details, bed check — without anymore disturbing the sleep of W 14021 or B 19722.

Not all the numbers here are nameless in death. James Whithope, Leroy Ellis, John Barber, Andrew Suggs and a few others have their names as well as heir numbers on their headstones, a custom that seems to have begun around 1939, judging from the dates. Nothing fancy or jolting like "Pretty-Boy" Floyd, "Machine-Gun" Kelly, "Baby-Face" Nelson or "Bonnie & Clyde," who operated in these parts but died elsewhere. Just ordinary phone book names like Ronald Fisher and Aaron Pearl. Names for a headstone not a headline.

And, for sure, there are some proven innocents here, like:

Baby of 44119
3-7-42 and:
Baby of Emilie Hind
50270
died
9-29-49

In the rising heat and dust of another summer afternoon in the high 90's, four boys on bicycles with fishing poles across the handlebars pause in the shade of a sign: "WARNING. HITCHHIKERS MAY BE ESCAPING CONVICTS."

A mound of straw-colored earth over a freshly dug grave in a new section of the cemetery catches their eye. No whitewashed headstone yet with crude black lettering. But a metal marker with a cardboard name tag has been implanted in the dirt: "Michael Lancaster, 1952-1978, Chaney Funeral Home."

Lancaster is the latest arrival and, at the moment, the best known occupant of this timeless turf, where for many their time in life is up before their time is up.

With Claude Eugene Dennis, Lancaster broke out of the McAlester penitentiary on April 23, escaping through a sewer. The two shot their way across a half dozen states in the Deep South, killing eight people, including three Oklahoma Highway patrolmen. On May 26, they met their end in a shoot out with deputies and state police in the little town of Caddo, Okla., and reportedly were riddled with more bullet holes than the legendary Bonnie Parker and Clyde Barrow.

For 34 days, Michael Lancaster was the most wanted man in America.

In death, nobody wanted him. No one came to claim the body. When they get around to greeting his stone, the undertaker's casket marker will wrinkle and vanish in the late summer rains and only a black scrawled number will mark his blood smeared passage through this life.

Expectant Mothers Show Togetherness

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — When Frances Syner and her sister-in-law, Jean Keough, each became pregnant they began a mutual routine.

"Our very first prenatal visit we went together, and every one all the way through," Mrs. Syner said of their visits to Dr. Vito Coppa.

Recently, at a local hospital, Mrs. Keough gave birth by Caesarian section to Elizabeth Anne, 7 pounds, 2 ounces. Some 10 hours later at the same hospital, Mrs. Syner gave birth to Catherine, 7 pounds, 9 ounces.

Skateboarding Injuries Rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — As skateboarding grows in popularity so do skateboard injuries, according to the Health Insurance Institute.

It says that according to the Consumer Product Safety Commission "some 370,000 skateboarders were injured last year — twice the number hurt in 1976."

Riders between the ages of 10 and 14, it says, accounted for almost half of the injuries "while those between 15 and 17 years run a close second."

Rosalynn Gives Gown To Smithsonian

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rosalynn Carter presented her blue chiffon inaugural gown to the Smithsonian Institution last week for its collections of first ladies' dresses.

Mrs. Carter gained publicity during her husband's 1977 inauguration as president by deciding to wear the same gown that she had worn to his inauguration as governor of Georgia in 1971.

The dress, designed by Mary Matise, becomes the first in the Smithsonian collection that was worn to two inaugurals.

S. Dillon Ripley, secretary of the Smithsonian, noted that all first ladies since 1912 have contributed to the collection.

"This marvelous unbroken collection has become a popular symbol of the history of our country," he said at an outdoor ceremony at the Smithsonian's Museum of History and Technology. "It is a mirror of the tremendous interest the American people have in the first lady."

Like the other first ladies' gowns at the museum, Mrs. Carter's will be displayed on a mannequin that will wear gold slippers and carry the same gold leather evening bag Mrs. Carter used for the inaugural balls.

A matching full-length coat embroidered with blue and gold threads completes the ensemble. The mannequin, with Mrs. Carter's hairstyle and physical size, will be placed next to gowns donated by former first ladies Betty Ford and Pat Nixon.

With Mrs. Carter's gown, the collection, one of the Smithsonian's most popular, consists of 13 dresses, including 17 that were worn to inaugurals.

Ripley used the occasion to announce that the Smithsonian will expand the First Ladies Hall by adding a recreation of the Red Room in the White House as it looked during the Kennedy administration.

He said the Red Room will contain the curtains and rug actually used in the room plus several pieces of the original furniture "to recreate an area in which we can display first ladies gowns beginning with that of Mrs. Kennedy."

OIL GLUT

NEW YORK (AP) — A current global oil glut will continue for at least two more years, says Priceline, a newsletter. The newsletter notes that despite warnings that oil supplies are getting low there are at present 4-5 billion barrels a day of spare crude oil capacity.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible.

MARK 10:10-26, The Living Bible

10 Later, when He was alone with His disciples in the house, they brought up the subject again.
11 He told them, "When a man divorces his wife to marry someone else, he commits adultery against her.
12 And if a wife divorces her husband and remarries, she, too, commits adultery."
13 Once when some mothers were bringing their children to Jesus to bless them, the disciples shooed them away, telling them not to bother Him.
14 But when Jesus saw what was happening He was very much displeased with His disciples and said to them, "Let the children come to Me, for the Kingdom of God belongs to such as they. Don't send them away!
15 I tell you as seriously as I know how that anyone who refuses to come to God as a little child will never be allowed into His Kingdom."
16 Then He took the children into His arms and placed His hands on their heads and He blessed them.
17 As He was starting out on a trip, a man came running to Him and knelt down and asked, "Good Teacher, what must I do to get to heaven?"
18 "Why do you call Me good?" Jesus asked. "Only God is truly good!
19 But as for your question—you know the commandments: don't kill, don't commit adultery, don't steal, don't lie, don't cheat, respect your father and mother."
20 "Teacher," the man replied, "I've never once broken a single one of those laws."
21 Jesus felt genuine love for this man as He looked at him. "You lack only one thing," He told him; "go and sell all you have and give the money to the poor—and you shall have treasure in heaven—and come, follow Me."
22 Then the man's face fell, and he went sadly away, for he was very rich.
23 Jesus watched him go, then turned around and said to His disciples, "It's almost impossible for the rich to get into the Kingdom of God!"
24 This amazed them. So Jesus said it again: "Dear children, how hard it is for those who trust in riches to enter the Kingdom of God.
25 It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the Kingdom of God."
26 The disciples were incredulous! "Then who in the world can be saved, if not a rich man?" they asked.

New Jersey Postal Employees Ousted

By The Associated Press

At least 80 striking postal employees have been fired in New Jersey, while in San Francisco union dissidents planned a campaign of roving picketing to show their discontent over a new contract.

Nearly half the morning-shift workers at facilities in Jersey City and Kearney refused to work today, and union officials planned an afternoon meeting in New York to decide whether to sanction the wildcat strike, according to Robert Knoloe, a spokesman for the postal workers' union.

Roy Braunstein of Trenton, legislative liaison for the New Jersey Postal Workers Association, said the state organization at first did not sanction the wildcat walkout. But "now that brothers in the union have been terminated, we will have to reassess our position."

Twenty striking employees at the New York Bulk and Foreign Mail Center in Jersey City were fired Sunday and 60 more were fired overnight.

Meanwhile, postal workers vowed to send roving pickets to San Francisco area post offices in defiance of a judge's order to halt their wildcat strike.

The protesting workers are upset at a tentative three-year pact reached early Friday, averting a nationwide postal strike. The contract calls for pay raises of about 10 percent, with cost-of-living protection boosting that to 19.5 percent. The present average salary is $15,877.

Dissidents say the new pact does not raise pay enough and permits too much overtime scheduling.

An order temporarily enjoining "any further strike activity" at the San Francisco Bulk Mail Center, issued Sunday by U.S. District Judge Stanley Weigel, is "basically an intimidation tactic to try to break the strike and scare other workers," said Irwin Lum, shop steward for one of two union locals at the center.

"We'll be out there strong," he said, promising to surround the center, located in Richmond, Calif., with picket lines today.

Despite termination notices reportedly sent to at least 50 workers, union officials said they would increase picketing today with "roving pickets" at various bay area post offices.

Ten union stewards were ordered by Weigel to appear in court today on the government's motion for a preliminary injunction against the strike. But Lum said the officials would be on the picket lines, with their attorneys representing them in court.

The two locals are branches of the American Postal Workers Union and the Mail Handlers Division of the Laborers International Union. They threw up their first picket lines Saturday morning.

The decision to defy the judge's order drew support from neighboring locals of the postal union in the east San Francisco Bay area and the National Association of Letter Carriers, which together represent some 1,800 east bay employees.

A meeting is scheduled this evening to decide if members of those two locals will walk out in support of the Richmond strike.

The Richmond center employs about 900 people and serves northern California, western Nevada, Hawaii, Arizona and the Pacific Trust territories.

The walkout has caused 24-hour delays in processing second, third and fourth class mail, foreign mail and military mail service. First class mail delivery has been unaffected.

Mail handling in Jersey City has been delayed one day, but Harry Nigro, regional communications director for the Postal Service, said Sunday, "There's no problem, the operation is operating."

As about 20 pickets marched outside the center's gates, 245 of 565 scheduled workers reported Sunday at 7 p.m. During Friday's day shift, 90 percent of the workers stayed away, and about 70 percent stayed off the job Saturday.

The facility processes half a million pieces of second, third and fourth class domestic bulk mail daily for New York City, Westchester County, Long Island and north New Jersey. It also distributes 70 percent of incoming and outgoing non-air foreign mail.

About 10 to 12 pickets demonstrated earlier Sunday at a Kearny, N.J., facility, which handles about 1 million pieces of mail during a normal weekday, said Clifford Rowland, manager of employee and labor relations.

Of the 240 employees scheduled for the Sunday shift, only 50 reported for work, Rowland said.

The New Jersey dissidents say the proposed contract is a "sell-out" because it does not recognize the high cost of living in the New York area.

HEADING FOR RELIEF — Christian Walker of Boston heads for the fountain at the Christian Science Center to get relief from Sunday's sweltering temperatures in the upper 90s. The heat wave in the East sent more than a dozen persons to hospitals for treatment. Christian's crutches are temporary, since he just has an infected foot. (AP Laserphoto)

Women Approach Equality In Crime

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Women are approaching equality with men in the criminal arena, but they favor embezzling, fraud or forgery over violence, a government-financed study revealed today.

Publicized female "armed robbers, political terrorists, kidnappers and murderers" are rare exceptions, University of Illinois researchers said in a report prepared for the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

The crime rate among women has risen faster than among men, especially since 1967, the report said, but the women are turning to property crimes while the level of their violent crimes has remained low and fairly stable, the report said.

"It is larceny, embezzlement, fraud and forgery that are proving so attractive to women and not homicide, assault and armed robbery," the report said.

Rita J. Simon and Navin Sharma, who conducted the study as part of the university's Program for Law and Society, said calculations show women are gaining on men in the FBI's annual crime report.

In 1975, women committed 29.7 percent of the reported forgeries, compared to 14 percent in 1953. For embezzlement and fraud, the ratio rose from 18.3 percent to 34.7 percent, and for larceny, from 13.9 percent to 32.5 percent.

But for homicide it rose from 14.1 percent only to 15.6 percent, burglary from 2 percent to 5.5 percent, robbery 4.3 percent to 7.1 percent, and for assault it dropped from 15.9 percent to 13.9 percent.

The two authors also noted that targets of women's criminal violence remained the traditional ones: "their husbands or their lovers, other women with whom their men have become involved, or their unborn babies.

"With the women's movement, a much greater proportion of women are working outside the home, which provides more women with greater opportunities to embezzle and commit fraud," the report said, and added:

"The expectation or fear that large numbers of young women will turn to radical politics or become revolutionaries has little to support it. The Patty Hearsts and Emily Harrises are probably as rare a phenomenon as was Ma Barker."

Most of the analysis was based on court records in Washington, where women accounted for a higher percentage of total crime and a lower percentage of property crimes than they did in the rest of the nation.

Since they were able to follow each Washington arrest case to its end, the researchers discovered "men were much more likely to receive prison sentences than were women," but they said the source records did not explain why.

"From our observations of women defendants in other jurisdictions, our guess is that many of these women have young children and that fact influenced the judge's decison," they said.

Change To Void Equipment Bid

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Laundry equipment for the new county jail will be re-bid because the low bidder asked a change in the contract conditions, Lubbock County commissioners decided today.

Project engineer Arnold Maeker told the commissioners in their regular meeting today that Pellerin Laundry Machinery Co. of Kenner, La., asked him last week if it could order and have the county pay for the $26,081 in equipment now and store it in Louisiana until it is needed in the expected 18-month project.

The commissioners decided to tell the company its bid bond will be forfeited if a signed contract is not received this week, and Maeker said he was told the contract would not be signed as it is because of an expected price increase in the equipment prior to the contracted delivery date.

Maeker said the only other bid was not made strictly according to specifications and that at least one well-known company was unable to meet the bid deadline when the first bids were taken.

The engineer noted that the electrical, mechanical and construction contracts were signed last week and said the Roanoke Iron & Bridge Co. one for jail cells and other detention equipment should be received from Virginia this week.

In other business, county purchasing agent Bill Crutcher told the court that typewriters offered the county on a low bid last month were found unacceptable by the tax assessor-collector.

Russell Hardin, tax assessor-collector, asked when the bids were opened to test the typewriters before the bid was accepted. He said typewriters taken on previous low bids had not been acceptable.

Bill Nelson, his chief deputy, was in the courtroom before the 10 a.m. meeting started, but Crutcher informed the commissioners of what the office had decided.

Neither Hardin nor Nelson was in the room when the commissioners approved a motion by Commissioner Alton Brazell to "reject all bids on the recommendation of the tax office."

The court approved a Plains Detox Center application to the Criminal Justice Council for a $123,000 grant.

Center board member Jim Kimmel said the Lubbock center was opened April 24 with private donations because of complications in getting state money, but that he recently was informed that money had become available.

Kimmel emphasized that the original conditions of the county sponsoring a grant — the money being handled by the Mental Health-Mental Retardation Center and no present or future obligation being incurred by the county — would be maintained.

Since April, he said, the 2507 Amherst center has met its $7,000-per-month expenses with about $5,000 in private donations and the rest in patient fees.

He said 132 persons have been treated for alcoholism there.

When the one-time emergency grant runs out, Kimmel said, the Texas Council on Alcoholism, which he serves as an advisory board member, probably will be a funding source.

He explained that the county is technically involved because the state council prefers to make its grants to a government entity.

The commissioners worked through the meeting agenda this morning and were to resume budget hearings this afternoon.

Mothers Refuse To Trade Babies

HAIFA, Israel (UPI) — Two mothers who took the wrong babies home from the hospital now refuse to give them up, a report on government television said Sunday.

Blood tests proved the babies were switched six weeks ago but the mothers insist on keeping them, the report said.

The snafu was blamed on lost identification tags, but spokesmen for Rambam Hospital and the Health Ministry declined to comment on the case, calling it too sensitive, legally and emotionally.

Tattoos are made with indelible ink by electromagnetically powered needles that pierce the skin about one-hundredth of an inch.

Israel Reported Ready To Talk

JERUSALEM (AP) — Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan told Parliament today Israel is prepared to discuss the question of the ultimate sovereignty for the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

Israel also is willing to discuss a territorial compromise "if a concrete proposal is submitted," Dayan told the Knesset as he opened a debate on the Mideast situation.

The cabinet on Sunday rejected President Anwar Sadat's proposal that Israel return two areas of the Sinai Desert to Egypt as a good-will gesture, but said it was willing to negotiate a trade for the northern coastal town of El Arish and Mount Sinai.

"Nobody can get something for nothing, and this will be the policy of Israel," Prime Minister Menachem Begin told reporters after the cabinet meeting. "No unilateral step is feasible by any country."

Dayan gave a 45-minute report on his meeting last week in Leeds Castle, England with Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohammed Ibrahim Kamel and U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance.

The Knesset corridors, meanwhile, were buzzing with the news that Commerce Minister Yigal Hurvitz, a hawk on the question of Mideast peace, had tendered his resignation over a budget proposal he regards as inflationary. Begin was trying to change Hurvitz' mind and smooth over the tiff between Hurvitz and Finance Minister Simha Ehrlich.

Dayan said the question of future sovereignty in the West Bank and Gaza is "the central gap between the Arab attitude and ours."

Israel's peace plan offers the Palestinian Arabs in the two occupied territories administrative autonomy, or limited self-rule, with continued presence of the Israeli army in these areas captured in the 1967 Mideast war.

"If Israel's proposal of administrative autonomy is accepted," Dayan said, "Israel is prepared ... to discuss after five years the question of the sovereignty over Judea and Samaria and the Gaza Strip." Judea and Samaria are the biblical names for the West Bank.

Egypt demands the return of these lands to Arab sovereignty and the withdrawal of Israeli troops to the pre-1967 borders "with minor rectifications," Dayan said.

Although Israel was willing to discuss a territorial compromise, Dayan said he had asked the Egyptian delegation at Leeds Castle if Egypt would agree to a compromise and they replied, "on no account, of course not."

Dayan said there were some "meeting points" between the Israeli and Egyptian peace proposals but they were outweighed by differences. Dayan said he was not pleased by Egypt's ideas on assuring Israeli security.

Dayan said Egypt wanted mutual demilitarization on both sides of the pre-1967 borders, limitation of forces on both sides, U.N. forces to supervise the agreement, warning stations operated by the United Nations or the United States, freedom of navigation in the Gulf of Aqaba to be guaranteed by the United States or the United Nations, and emphasis on the establishment of a peace agreement and good neighborly relations. No Israeli soldier or settlement could be left outside the 1967 border.

City Health Setup Gets Criticism less caring about vector control.

"When 21 babies die that wouldn't have, it doesn't matter whether I'm a pediatrician or not. I'm not the only one concerned," she said. She cited last week's weather-related death of a one-month-old baby as a preventable occurrence. The child died of dehydration.

"Waco, about the same size as Lubbock, spends $15,000 on vector control," she said. "If everything else in this department were up to the attention given flies and mosquitoes, we wouldn't have any problems."

In the preliminary budget, almost $81,000 is set aside for the well-child clinic and the necessary laboratory services. It could be one of the first items lopped off, should taxpayer pressure end with that result.

"Everybody is so afraid it's going to cost them a dime," said Dr. Orr, explaining that programs at the public health level eventually pay for themselves.

"The cost falls back on all of us in terms of insurance or taxes," she said. "It costs $13,000 a year for a student at the state school. Perhaps one of the reasons the child was defective and needs that state care is because of little or no prenatal care or attention after his birth."

Dr. Orr said too often the public confuses patients coming to her department with welfare cases.

"They're not welfare," she said. "They're the working people who cannot afford medical care. But these people need to be motivated and educated."

She said a public health nurse, "who is much more than a hospital nurse," can save the taxpayers and the individuals involved thousands of dollars and succeed where medical specialists in big university hospitals cannot.

"They're too high up there," Dr. Orr said. "You need someone on a very personal level who interviews, intervenes, reinforces and leads by the hand."

re-election by Mrs. Stafford.

School trustee Giles M. "Buddy" Forbess said he also favors the existing at-large system. The present system ensures that school trustees have a "citywide perspective" on issues, he said.

Waters himself said, "I don't have any objections personally to single-member districts." But he noted that "We've proven under the existing plurality system of voting that minority candidates can be elected.

"Under the present system, the community has show it will support and elect competent, qualified, dedicated citizens, whatever their race."

As a whole, the school district's population is estimated at 61 percent white, 27 percent Mexican-American and 12 percent black. The current school board has six whites and one Mexican-American.

The board isn't scheduled to hold another election until April, 1980.

do anything," Parker said.

The resolution passed the House earlier.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby named a conference committee to work with House members in negotiating differences on a bill that would repeal the state utilities tax and increase inheritance tax exemptions. Senate members are Hance, chairman, and Sens. A.M. Aikin, D-Paris; Frank Lombardino, D-San Antonio; Grant Jones, D-Abilene, and Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls.

The special summer session had only 16 days left to conside the pile of complex tax relief proposals submitted by Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

Farmers Facing Wire Shortage

AUSTIN (AP) — In addition to the drought and grasshoppers, Central Texas farmers have a new worry — a shortage of baling wire.

Baling wire to bind hay for storage to feed livestock throughout the winter months has become virtually impossible to obtain, the Austin American-Statesman reported today. The small amounts that can be bought are being sold some places at more than twice the normal retail price.

"I haven't run into one farmer or rancher yet who doesn't feel that someone is holding back somewhere," said Caldwell County agent Ervin Kaatz. "I sure have to question the business ethics of someone somewhere when the price of a spool of wire suddenly jumps from $26 to $50. . . A lot of pastures are burning up. They need to be cut. A week's delay can really drop the quality of the hay."

Carl Clark said he has sold wire at Lockhart Implement Co. for 33 years and has few kind words for the "black market," which he suspects exists in Central Texas.

Clark said dealers can never estimate what the weather will be. "The farmers have got to start buying wire in the winter when prices are low," he said.

Whiz Kids Start New Magazine

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — A brand-new magazine is being published for those who run the country's small businesses, a magazine that is likely to attract attention not only for quality but for marketing approach too.

Slick, colorful, very professional, Successful Business, a quarterly, exemplifies its name. The editors clearly know what they are about, and why shouldn't they. They have had lots of experience.

Chris Whittle, publisher, and Phillip Moffitt, editor, are the acknowledged whiz kids of publishing, this being the ninth publication they and their associates have founded in the past eight years or so.

Their company, 13-30 Corp., begun when they were students at the University of Tennessee, is well into the black now, but they can't forget owing friends and relatives more than $1 million in the past.

They know small businesses, and they know markets too. Their original publication, Nutshell, is aimed at the college market. 18 Almanac is for high schoolers. Young Marriage explains itself.

Analysis

Focusing on the youth market, they also produce a travel magazine. Two of their publications help promote the U.S. Army as a career. And more might be coming, because 13-30 refers to the age of their interests.

In every instance, the editorial products of 13-30, which utilize the best efforts of professional writers, are distributed free through arrangements with advertisers seeking to reach specific markets.

The degree of association varies. Various colleges seeking students, for example, have advertising arrangements with and help distribute 18 Almanac.

But America, a travel publication, is sponsored, though not editorially controlled, by Datsun. While it accepts advertising from various companies, it is distributed mainly by Datsun alone.

That brings up the odd parentage of Successful Business, whose cover carries the label "The Magazine For Independent Business." But the magazine itself is not independent; a Fortune 500 company owns it.

That company, Control Data Corp., and its subsidiary, Commercial Credit Company, have a keen, salesman's interest in the small business market and felt that one of its great needs was a good magazine.

They approched Whittle and Moffitt, who at first were less than cordial. In the past, they themselves had conceived their publications and then had sold the ideas to sponsors. This was different.

The agreement reached was this: 13-30 would have full editorial control under a two-year contract; Control Data would own the publication and take care of marketing and financial matters.

How independent therefore is the magazine of independent business? Is it simply another profit-seeking business venture by a major coorporation, or does it have a more complicateed purpose?

— The agreement, said a spokesman, gives Whittle and Moffitt the exclusive right to decide on articles, conceivably even those critical of the sponsor. But they could lose that two-year contract too.

— Other companies can advertise in Successful Business, at $16,000 a page, but Control Data reserves 10 of each 64-page issue for itself. And it will not accept advertising from competitors.

It possesses another distinction separating it from general circulation publications: It will be free to those who fit Control Data's definition of small-business person. Others will pay $10 a year.

"This is a marketing tool," said the spokesman for Control Data. "It is designed to position us with a major market. We are just not interested in promoting our competition."

Clearly, the new quarterly is not as independent as it might appear to some casual readers, despite the high quality and usefulness of its contents, and its intention as well of being profitable by the 1980s.

But Successful Business quite likely will be successful, because it gives the busy small-business person practical information on such things as managing capital, collecting debts and hiring personnel.

In that sense, it fits perfectly with a basic premise of James Norris, that if you provide a useful service you'll make money. Norris knows. He built Control Data from nothing to assets of $5 billion.

Action By Dallas-Based Firm Classic Example of Stock Split

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — The news was good last week for stockholders of a Dallas-based company called Tyler Corp.

Joseph F. McKinney, chairman of the producer of pipe, utility fittings and other industrial goods and services, announced Tuesday he would recommend that the board of directors vote a 2-for-1 stock split.

Tyler shares, listed on the New York Stock Exchange, rose ⅝ that day and another ⅜ the next, reaching an all-time high of 29⅜. At that level the stock was up about 50 percent from its 1977 low of 19¾.

All this may not have caused much of a stir among traders preoccupied with faster-moving, better-known issues than Tyler, which had sales of $364.7 million last year to rank as No. 493 in the Fortune 500.

But it provided a classic example of the dream that runs through many an investor's mind whenever the phrase "stock split" is mentioned.

Technically, a split does nothing to change the value of a company's shares. In a 2-for-1 split, for example, investors get two new shares for each one they previously held, but the nominal value of each of the new shares is only half that of the old.

The price-earnings ratio and aggregate book value remain the same. So does the dividend yield unless, as in Tyler's case, an accompanying increase in the cash payout is proposed.

But for various other reasons, stock splits occupy a lofty place in the mythology of Wall Street.

"Although technically a stock split provides no advantage to the shareholder, it is generally considered a bullish development," Standard Poor's Corp. observed in a report on the subject.

"More often than not, an issue will rise in price at the time directors of a company propose a split. Searching for split candidates, therefore, can be a rewarding undertaking.

"One reason for this is that a split tends to call investors' attention to a company's progress. Another is that the reduced price per share makes the issue more attractive to smaller investors, who normally shy away from stocks carrying high price tags.

"Moreover, an increase in the cash dividend often accompanies a split."

Beyond that, SP noted, the pace of stock-split activity provides a measure of general market conditions, although it tends to be a lagging rather than a leading indicator.

"Last year there were 88 splits of 3-for-2 or more (including stock dividends of 50 percent or more) among NYSE-listed issues. This was down from 99 in 1976, a year in which the market turned in a far stronger performance."

The peak year for splits in modern market history was 1969, when 147 were voted at the last stages of a booming bull market. The number hit a low of 35 in 1974, when the market was severely depressed.

Analysts caution that stock-split possibilities are but one of many many factors to be considered in making investment decisions.

And a long-standing Wall Street axiom holds that, while higher stock prices often come with splits, the rise is likely to occur before and at the time of the announcement rather than afterward.

For traders seeking stocks that might be split at some future date, SP lists several things to look for: "An increased market price, a comparatively limited number of stockholders, and a history of stock splits or large stock dividends, suggesting that directors have no aversions to taking such action."

Tyler, for instance, had split its shares before — 2-for-1, in 1976.

SP concluded: "It should be noted that some companies prefer high prices for their shares for reasons that may include a perceived sense of prestige imparted by such quotations.

"Many boards of directors, on the other hand, vote splits even when their stocks are at prices within the range of most investors. Their principle objective may well be to broaden the distribution of ownership of the shares."

Eagle Backs Down To 'Foreigner'

DETROIT (AP) — One of America's most cherished symbols, the proud bald eagle, is being challenged by an import — at least at the Detroit Zoo.

Cream Puff, a feisty female bald eagle, is now sharing her quarters with "Joe," a bird that is just as ornery — a rare buzzard eagle from South America. And the American bird has already backed off in one confrontation, although her rival is only half her size.

"Cream Puff may have met her match," said Bill Austin, zoo curator for education, who had the unpleasant chore of bringing the new bird from a zoo convention in Albuquerque in a plastic dog case. "Some people thought I had a poodle, until they got close enough, and the bird began squawking loudly and shaking the cage with its beak."

The buzzard eagle, confiscated in New Mexico by wild life officials as an illegal import, is believed to be the only one of its kind in captivity in the nation.

Roby Schools Seek New Superintendent

ROBY (Special) — School Board President John Matties announced Friday that the Roby Independent School District is accepting applications for the position of superintendent of schools.

The opening, created by the resignation Tuesday of current Superintendent Caffey Welch, effective August 1, 1978, must be filled for this fall.

Matties said applications will be taken at the high school's administrative offices.

President Carter Finds Congress Frustrating

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — In midsummer Washington a cloud of hot air often obscures the Capitol from anyone strolling up Pennsylvania Avenue from the direction of the White House. If Jimmy Carter ever notices that cloud, his smile likely turns rueful, and his thoughts distinctly darken.

For if Carter has learned anything since he strolled down Pennsylvania Avenue in January 1977, it ought to be that Congress plays a larger role than he anticipated in writing the record of any president.

And one word — frustration — best sums up Carter's relations with the Democratic-controlled Congress.

If there's a dominant mood on Capitol Hill these days, it's a determination to head home by early October to campaign. When that happens, the Democratic leaders will issue statements citing the vast number of bills passed and claiming significant progress in dealing with pressing national problems.

Even Jimmy Carter likely will bite his tongue and find something nice to say about his fellow Democrats, who control both the House and Senate by substantial majorities.

But any realistic assessment of the record of the relationship between Congress and the new president would have to focus on their inability to resolve conflicting interests that dominate issues like taxes and energy. Add to that the historic tug of war between the executive and legislative branches over which should have the decisive role in domestic and foreign affairs.

The northern tier states with bitterly cold winters have strongly differing views on oil and gas pricing from the southern producing states.

And those conflicting interests have stalemated the Carter energy package.

In foreign policy, the president complained that legislative restrictions imposed by Congress were preventing him from responding decisively to Soviet and Cuban adventurism in Africa.

Congress seemed ready to accept his argument. Republican and Democratic leaders emerged from a White House meeting and said they were prepared to consider any Carter proposals to remove undue restrictions.

The idea quietly faded when the administration failed to come up with any specific measures they wanted repealed.

This week, the Senate will take up the foreign military aid bill and there's a good chance it will use the occasion to try, once again, to enlarge the congressional say in the forming of foreign policy.

For example, a bipartisan group of senators, including both liberals and conservatives, is ready to add still another restriction. They are backing a proposal to require presidential consultation with Congress before any changes are made in the defense agreement between the United States and Taiwan.

The group includes senators normally far apart on foreign policy issues. Among them are Sens. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz.; Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y.; Bob Dole, R-Kan.; and Dick Stone, D-Fla.

All are concerned that the United States maintain its commitment to the defense of Taiwan even if formal relations are established with the Chinese government on the mainland.

The same bill also will see fights over whether to lift the congressionally imposed arms embargo on Turkey and whether to lift the economic embargo on Rhodesia, as well as the administration's plan to reduce U.S. troop levels in South Korea.

By the time of the debate, Jimmy Carter may yearn for a good, simple fight like the one over ratification of the Panama Canal treaties.

Schools Buy 40 New Buses

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The State Board of Control says Lubbock's new school buses will cost $17,800 each — and at that price, school administrators have exercised their option to buy 40 such vehicles, instead of the original requisition of 35.

Superintendent Ed Irons and his aides say the larger bus fleet will make things more convenient for students involved in court-ordered integration this fall.

Meanwhile, the Texas Education Agency has announced it will send a team of specialists here Tuesday to evaluate proposed routes for crosstown busing. The team will advise the Lubbock Independent School District on how to minimize students' riding time without sacrificing safety.

Irons said the one-time capital costs of the transportation plan — the buses plus such equipment as seat belts and two-way radios — will be about $800,000, a figure "well within" the district's means.

And running the buses shouldn't be too expensive.

Budget projections for next year show that bus operations will run about $725,000, compared with $215,000 in previous years. Part of the difference is offset by a $90,000 decrease in school aide salaries (bus drivers will double as aides) and a $50,000 increase in state funds for transportation.

The integration-related costs are expected to be only a fraction of what anti-busing advocates had claimed. We the People, a group opposed to busing, once alleged that court-ordered busing here would cost taxpayers $6 million during the 1978-79 school year.

The school district's integration plan is a combination of mandatory and voluntary student reassignments. It will require the busing of about 2,000 elementary children and several hundred secondary students a day.

The State Board of Control, which serves as a purchasing agent on such matters, took bus bids this month. Irons said he has been informed the buses will cost about $17,800 each.

Irons had been projecting a cost of $16,000 to $18,000.

Ronald Gooch, assistant superintendent for business affairs, said that by buying 40 of the 70-passenger buses, the school system will be able to arrange its routes so that buses depart as late as possible in the morning.

As planned, students will gather at their neighborhood elementary schools in the morning. Those scheduled for reassignments then will board buses about 8 a.m.

Cost of the buses isn't the only news the district had last week about its integration plan.

School officials said voluntary transfers to Iles Elementary — a "magnet program" they hope will draw students from throughout the city — have topped 125, far beyond the district's expectations.

Administrators originally expected only 54 whites to transfer to previously all-minority Iles for special features beginning in August. They didn't project to break the 100-student transfer mark for three years.

Ed Stokes, the district's elementary education director, said registration for Iles, 2401 Date Ave., has "greatly surpassed" court-ordered guidelines on racial balance and enrollment.

Indeed, he said, Iles may have a majority of whites when it opens in August. Stokes also said Iles may be able to accept minority transfer students since it appears the court-ordered racial ratio will be no problem to maintain."

Kay Knight, the new principal of Iles, said the school is "still accepting applications." The official deadline is Tuesday — so the district can prepare a report for Woodward by Aug. 1 — but administrators indicated late applications will be considered.

Besides the regular class day, Iles will have optional activities from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. These include supervised sports and recreation, arts and crafts, accelerated academics and tutoring programs.

Stokes said Iles will provide opportunities in music, dance, art and other disciplines far beyond what can be offered in other elementary schools. This is possible because Texas Tech University is focusing its resources at Iles.

Iles will also have an "exemplary program" in basic skills, expanded opportunities for gifted and talented children, team teaching and individualized instruction, Stokes said.

He said the facility is being renovated to provide more "open space" areas for flexible teaching.

Renovation also is taking place at

Manpower Trial Opens

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Brownsville insurance salesman Robert Massey, charged with stealing $10,000 from a Harlingen-based union fund, went on trial today.

Massey is the second of several Rio Grande Valley defendants whose trials were moved to Corpus Christi following a court of inquiry into the misuse of federal manpower funds last December in Brownsville.

The charges center on Massey's involvement with Don and Clarence Gray. Don Gray is the business manager of a Harlingen plumbers union. His brother is the director of a Harlingen trade school. Both men have pleaded guilty here to charges of stealing manpower funds.

According to testimony at the court of inquiry, Don Gray gave Massey $32,000 in union certificates of deposit to establish a union health and welfare fund. Massey told the panel all but $10,000 was spent administering the program. He said the remaining funds were deposited an account at a Brownsville bank titled "Massey and Associates."

Business & Industrial Review

Red Barn Meat Market Tells Process Assuring Top Value

"There is a difference."

For this difference, an eye-opener awaits at Red Barn Meat Market, 8112 Indiana Ave.!

Reports on these pages previously have pinpointed the many superior facits of the market's operation, service and products, but special emphasis again is directed to the meticulous process involved in bringing to the customer the very finest in beef...at Red Barn Meat Market.

Not one...but three...coolers are utilized.

First, beef is brought into the aging cooler where it is kept a minimum of 10 to 14 days, with longer aging when requested by the customers.

Then, the meat is taken into the priminal cooler where it is cut for placement in the cases.

So..finally, one observes, compares and and selects from the cases, last of the three cooling operations.

Not just some of the beef, but all of the beef sold at Red Barn Meat Market is subjected to this process for greater customer satisfaction.

This customer consideration, plus USDA Choice corn-fed beef, and across-counter service by knowledgeable staffmembers, is just part of the convincing story that unravels at Red Barn Meat Market, a logical place to trade!

Willis Watts, conducting all his market operations at this one location, works hard to assure that the products, facilities and staff merit one's confidence and trade in this complete-service market.

Whether reason for a visit there this week is to stock up the home freezer, to secure meat for a special dinner, to pick up convenience-type items, or just to browse and select where you know quality comes foremost, trading at Red Barn Meat Market is a rewarding experience.

Early this year the Red Barn Meat Market, 8112 Indiana Ave., announced that all beef made available there was USDA Choice corn-fed cattle.

The response to this consideration has been most gratifying, with clients apparently appreciating this quality assurance.

Over-Counter Service

A lengthy service case is noticed upon one's entry to the spacious market. Knowledgeable attendants are on hand for over-counter service that assures personal attention.

In another area, a self service case makes available 5 lb. boxes of bacon wrapped fillets, top sirloins, ribeyes and KC steaks, all individually wrapped.

Then, as further service, convenience type items (necessities for picnics, barbeques, etc.) are stocked including milk, bread, chips, sauces, cookies and more.

Watts points out that now could be a very good time to purchase meats for the freezer, with expected further price increases on both beef and pork.

More about the type of products at Red Barn Meat Market:

"We urge you to look for the grade on the beef you buy," is the suggestion of owner-operator Willis Watts. "All of our beef at the Red Barn is USDA Choice corn-fed cattle. Also, it is 'yield graded'. We don't buy anything above a '2' yield, meaning that we maintain the best of quality and yet keep the fat content as low as possible. In addition to this, we also age our cattle, adding to the flavor and tenderness."

All cattle are from feed lots in the Hereford area.

Watts and his most capable staff take pride in introducing the customer to this "better and complete service market", a description to which a lot of area residents have attested since in market's opening in mid-1976.

Willis Watts formerly owned and operated the Red Barn facility on the Levelland Highway, selling that unit in June of 1977.

The South Indiana market was planned and functionally designed to not only be attractive, but to be convenient, efficient and thoroughly service oriented. Watts opened this big market in May 1976, and reports that it is the largest independent retail meat market in all West Texas.

THREE—STEP COOLING — Owner Willis Watts of Red Barn Meat Market calls attention to the progressive and vital cooling areas for beef there, with up to 35-head capacity in the initial aging cooler (top), then to the second room (center) where the meat is cut for the cases, and finally placement in the cases themselves for customer comparison, selection and purchase.

Summer Sidewalk Sale Affords Exceptional Values At Maxine's

Every important fashion look for the discriminating junior or missy is found at Maxine's Accent..and these looks now are to be found at tremendous savings during Maxine's annual Summer Sidewalk Sale now in progress.

This event at Maxine's in its beautiful expanded quarters in the cool air-conditioned mall (Briercroft Center, 50th Street and Avenue Q) is anxiously awaited each year because the selection of fine merchandise is very extensive. Yes, shop for quality merchandise at unbelievable prices in the cool, comfortable, enclosed mall!

Actually, selections at low, low prices are better than ever at this semi-annual event.

Drasticaly reduced for this Sidewalk Sale are shorts, cool tops and halters, swim suits, sun dresses, long dresses, lingerie and accessories.

Back-to School Items

Also included are many back-to-school and fall items reduced as much as 70 per cent, including sweaters, blouses, pantsuits, long dresses, etc.!

Visa and Master Charge purchases are most welcome on these sale items, as well as on all regular priced merchandise.

Lines by major manufacturers, such as Collegian, Corinth Street, College-Town, Strawberry Plant, Jerrell, Lady Wrangler, Lilli Ann, Les Wilk, Pant-Her, and Patty Woodard are included in this sale.

Fall Coats

Also in this event are fall weather coats at 20 per cent off, for a short time only.

Maxine's Accent has become one of the top specialty stores in West Texas in almost nine years, not only recognized and appreciated by customers in this area but also signally recognized by institutional publications for expertise in fashion merchandise and as "an outstanding specialty store".

Staffed To Serve

An important facit of the store's success and wide popularity is the qualified staff that includes Maxine, her daughter Sharon who is assistant manager; Maxine's mother, Mary McCollum; Lue Ree McGee, Alice Scarborough, Paula Marberry, and part-time staffmembers Poppy Burnette and Kay McGee.

Fur Sale Looms

Maxine at this time also announces a Pre-Season Fur Sale to be held on Monday and Tuesday, Aug.14-15, in association with Pam Mahoney for A.H. Scheener & Son, fine furriers of Dalas and New York. Further information will be announced at a later date.

Maxine has recently returned from a buying trip to Europe and is excited about selections made there to be arriving for fall. A tremendous selection of fall coats, dresses and sportswear is in the store now (great for layaways for the coming season).

"We'll eagerly look forward to your visits at Maxine's Accent, during the present sale or at any time, with a friendly staff and with every service and merchandise item geared to today's fashion needs, for you as an individual and as a treasured friend."

Exceptional Bike Offer Aids Summer Fun, Fall Preparation

Woolco works hard at provid proving:

"We Want To Be Your Favorite Store."

Woolco works hard at stocking the desired merchandise, at value prices, throughout the year.

Woolco passes on special savings when possible, including in-season needs such as the exceptional offer outlined here by Assistant Manager Kent Sweet who is very value conscious.

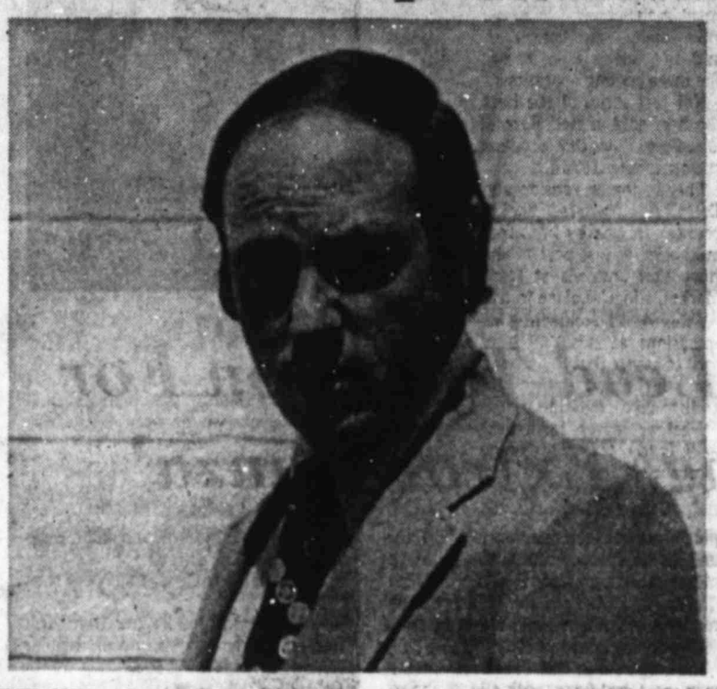
Big Dollar Saver

For a limited time, this fantastic bicycle offer is posted:

Men's and ladies' 10-speed 26-inch Olympia bikes, regularly priced $86.99, have been drastically reduced in price to only $59!

Only 33 of these are in stock, so the advice from Sweet is to act immediately if interested in an unheard-of bicycle bargain for keeping fit this summer, for vacation enjoyment, or for impending back-to-school.

"You just don't find such a great bicycle price on every corner! The whole point is that Woolco has scored again in its continuing policy of keeping the customers' interests foremost. But don't delay...buy at this big saving while the supply lasts."



ASSISTANT MANAGER STICKS HIS NECK OUT — Kent Sweet of Woolco this week has drastically reduced prices on a select and elite bicycle group as outlined in the story above. Such outstanding values in reality are a way of business at Woolco where there is evidence of continuous effort to assure 'we want to be your favorite store'. Other key values are noted in the ads on this page, truly representing Woolco's consideration of the customer and his or her budget.

FURNITURE, CARPET VALUES DETAILED AT SELF'S

'All Roads Lead To Slaton For Self's Savings Extravaganza'

"All roads lead to Slaton for the Sale of the Season at Self Furniture!"

"See Self's and Save" probably never has had more meaning than during the present sale, even though the firm has admirably served the region for more than three decades.

Not only are the current sale prices most inviting, but the items all are recognized for quality, backed by well-known and respected brand names.

All Carpet Sale Priced

Presently, there are exceptional buys in quality carpet.

"We have 44 rolls of carpet in stock" Clark Self of the popular store at 235 W. Garza in Slaton reports. "Every roll is on sale, and there are many colors from which to choose.

"Why order when we have it in stock at a lower price?"

The wide stock includes kitchen prints, plush, cut and loop, commercial, Saxonys and indoor-outdoor, and all is on sale, remember.

Carpet values include Nylon Saxony plush, three rolls, regular $10.95 but now just $7.88 installed.

And there are four rolls of kitchen print, installed for a modest $7.88.

Recliners

La-Z-Boy rocker-recliners are stocked in profusion (with actually over 80 on the floor) and these start at just $166.

All pictures and lamps are one-third off.

There are over 80 sofas in stock including all styles, colors and sizes. All sofas and chairs are on sale, and many of these items are new to stock.

Groupings

See the Broyhill beautiful wood arm group with sofa, loveseat and chair, regular $1,295 but now $1,099.

And several regular size sleepers start at $248.

Another real value is the Bernhardt white dining group (six piece), regular $895 but sale marked at $588.

On and on the values continue, in every department of Self's.

Finest selections are assured.

Free Delivery

Free delivery is a Self feature, and purchase terms are available.

Visa and Master Charge purchases are welcomed.

"If you are economy minded and quality conscious, then we strongly suggest you check item by item at Self's in Slaton and see for yourself how at any time, and especially during the present sale, all roads lead to Slaton for values at Self's Furniture."

A-1 Nursery Continuing Special Sale Prices On Trees, Other Season Needs

The giant-size Tree Sale continues at A-1 Nursery!

This means that giant size shade trees, for example, are marked down from regular $59.95 price to only $29.97, or four for $100! These are 12 ft. to 14 ft. tall and are extra, extra nice, well balanced Silver Maple and Fruitless Mulberry.

Concord grapevines 2 1/2 ft. to 3 1/2 ft., with grapes on them, are $3.47 each instead of the regular $6.95! There are Thompson Seedless, too, at the same price.

There are other size trees, including sycamore, locust, ash, willow, sweet gum, red bud, plum, fruit trees, live oak, red oak and purple leaf, all at 50 per cent off list!

Mums

A sale on Cushion Mums makes them available at just 29 cents each, or $2.88 dozen, and available in pink, white, red, gold, yellow and orange.

Extra nice pinon pines are half price!

And Bermuda grass seed, regular $3.99 lb., is sale marked at $2.88 lb. or $10 for four pounds.

Texas Everbearing Figs, regular $7.95, are $3.97.

Then, there is fertilizer (Zipp 16-8-8 with iron and zinc, or ammonium nitrate Nipak 34 per cent, regular $8.99 but super sale priced at $5.99 (covering 2,500 square feet).

Pretty hanging baskets, 10-inch, are only $5.99.

A-1 Nursery, at 7500 82nd St. (just five minutes from South Plains Mall) is open from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m. weekdays, with Sunday hours 1:30 p.m. until 5 p.m.

A-1 has a tremendous selection in every department, well worth the drive to view and select . . . and save.

Residents throughout the region long have benefitted from the landscape design, installation and maintenance service of A-1, and these and other services still are available.

For more than 20 years, area folks have been assisted by the services of Winfred Self, owner and operator of A-1 Nursery, since 1973 at its present expanded quarters.

The "know how" of Self and his experienced staff possibly is the biggest asset of A-1, as hundreds of customers can attest to the superior help there through the years.

"Come on out during the big sale this week and see for yourself how A-1 Nursery can meet your individual needs, at a price you'll appreciate. Just as your neighbor likely already is an enthusiastic A-1 customer, you, too, can benefit from the experience, the interest, the products and the prices of this firm that knows how to get the most into a South Plains landscape."

Summer Clearance Event Beginning Today At Onell's Apparel In City

Onell's Summer Clearance Sale begins today!

Yes, from July 24 through Aug.5, it's the big stock reduction event at Onell's, 4818 Louisville Ave., phone (806) 799-1642, in Lubbock.

Lots of new fall shipments are arriving, the room must be made, so check the following among banner specials at Onell's:

Dresses

There is one rack of 50 or more square and round dance dresses reduced to $20, available in sizes 6 through 20!

Petticoats

There is 55-yd. Marqueset reduced from $23.95 to $15; and 35-yd. and 30-yd. Marqueset reduced from $16.95 to $14 (limited quantities on these).

The price on Malco Mode three-layer petticoats has gone up from $22 to $27, but we have approximately 100 petticoats in stock and will sell at the old price of $20 while the present supply lasts!

Shoes

Coast shoes have been reduced to $15 pair on certain colors and styles. There are 25 pair of gold and silver Billie, nine pair brown basket, 12 pair camel color Billie, and one pair of tabasco colored Billie.

And six pair only of Promenader Classics at only $8.95!

10% Off Reduced Prices

One rack of miscellaneous merchandise includes an extra 10 per cent off on such items as ladies mix 'n match blouses and pants; little girls dresses, sizes 6 and 6x (five only); and five of 2-piece dresses; 33 men's western shirts, solids and some patterns; five pair of men's western pants, double knit, in waist sizes 29, 42, and 44; one only size 46, black texturized polyester western leisure suits in sizes 40, 42 and 44.

Tennis Dresses

There is a large rack of tennis dresses selling at $8, representing a close-out of Jacques Originals, a very good savings for the tennis enthusiast.

Sun Dress Kits

Sun dress kits are just $6 per kit. Material is 54-inch long in red, blue, brown and black check and in bust sizes of 32-in., 34-in., 36 and 38. These are too long for most ladies but are of enough material to make a nice cape to match your dress.

Accessories At 20% Reduction

Accessories for men and women will carry 20 per cent off price tag (items in the glass display counter only will carry this discount).

Othie and Rue Nell Upton, owners and operators of Onell's, have been square dancing since 1968 and they know the needs of both square dancers and round dancers.

They extend a warm invitation for everyone to visit the shop at 4818 Louisville Ave. (facing Murryhill Post Office from the west).

Not only is a wide selection of everything in its field stocked, but Onell's is a great information source regarding scheduled dance events, etc.

NSC Rent-A-Car, Warranty Plan, Joe Smith Motors Aid Public

For purchase of a pre-owned auto, for rental of a really fine auto, for a new concept in carefree motoring, protected by warranty, meet Joe L. Smith!

With vacation time and travel time well underway for most, understanding of Smith's services could be of special value.

"If you drive, then National Service Company (NSC) and Joe L. Smith Motors, 1301 19th St., can perform quite a service for you . . . in fact, several vital services are afforded."

Services Defined

(1) NSC provides "the newest idea in automotive history," the 12,000 mile or 12 month 100 per cent Lubricant Warranty Agreement for one's present vehicle (whether purchased at Joe L. Smith Motors or not).

(2) A rental fleet of family-size and luxury type autos, really better previously-owned cars, affords the type rentals one can really appreciate.

(3) Previously-owned autos, also of family size and luxury type are sold by Joe L. Smith Motors, a firm proven by Smith's long record of service in Lubbock. In business since 1950, he has been on 19th Street for 12 years, and on the same prominent corner for five years.

Questions Answered

More about the NSC warranty:

The lubricant limited warranty covers 100 per cent of the cost of repairing or replacing water pump, engine assembly, transmission, drive line and differential . . . and protects against excessive oil consumption.

What does it mean to own a NSC Lubricant Limited Warranty Agreement?

It means that the vehicle you presently own can be protected with full coverage on the power train and parts described above. Joe L. Smith Motors and NSC put their honesty and integrity on the line so that you can drive thousands of carefree miles. It means you don't have to buy another auto in order to get "new car coverage"!

Requirements for qualification are simple and few:

The auto must be inspected and approved by one of the NSC inspectors; it must not have in excess of 68,000 miles; it must be 1972 model to current year model, not be of foreign manufacture or American made sub-compact, and pick-ups must be one-half ton only.

NSC will provide legal documents that give binding proof that your car carries the NSC power train service agreement for 12 months or 12,000 miles, whichever comes first. Nothing is left to chance.

"Leave your worries with us. Call today for an appointment to get full details and have your car inspected."

It is at Joe L. Smith Motors, remember, at 1301 19th St., phone 762-0658.

NUMEROUS VITAL SERVICES FOR MOTORIST — Joe L. Smith is shown at the motor firm bearing his name where one can buy, lease, or secure an NSC Lubricant Warranty Agreement as outlined in the accompanying story. The well-underway vacation season prompts increased awareness and appreciation of any or all these services.

Business & Industrial Review

FOR BOOKKEEPING AND TAX RETURNS — Jim Johnson, owner, and Gayle McCullough, computer operator, are shown at the Advanced Data firm in Redbud Square where modern methods and long-time know-how are combined for superior service.

'Government Red Tape, Businessman's Nightmare, Prompts Special Action'

"Is government red tape causing you to have bad dreams? Do you have the yearly tax-time nightmares? Well, now you can take a vacation. Go anywhere your heart desires and leave your bookkeeping and tax worries behind. Get yourself a good night's sleep!"

Turn it all over to Advanced Data, a modern, efficient bookkeeping service locally owned and operated since 1969, and located in Suite 33, Redbud Square, 13th Street and Slide Road.

In times of rising costs and prices, Advanced Data has several unique features that makes their service "a good guy" for the businessman.

Advanced Data designs systems tailored exclusively for each business. It maintains a highly qualified, full-time staff of accountants and bookkeepers for systems development, management training and client service.

An in-house computer assures safety, security and confudential processing of the businessman's source documents and records. A full-time pickup and delivery service frees more valuable time for the business owners to be productive.

No Long Delays

Advanced Data does not charge add-on fees for client consultation about tax or business problems; nor do they keep bocks and records for weeks and months on end. Advanced Data has a proven in-house turn-around time of 10 working days...and less.

At Advanced Data the personnel are friendly, courteous and easy to work with. The problems of their clientele are the main concern, and these are taken seriously.

A telephone call to Jim Johnson or Gayle McCullough will confirm the friendly spirit at Advanced Data and can bring forth a no-obligation, on-site survey of one's business which will furnish the information needed to make a decision, and a refreshing change..."A price before the fact".

Jim Johnson, president of Advanced Data, tells:

"We are tickled to death to visit with business people about our services. There is no obligation whatsoever. We have no contracts to sign, just a handshake, friendship and the best bookkeeping service we can offer."

New Services

"We have installed a couple of new services," Johnson explains.

"One which we are very excited about is a service for executives, businessmen and women, housewives or just about anyone who hates paying monthly bills.

"The service includes going to a place of business or residence and collecting bank statements, bills, checks, envelopes, etc. We will write the checks, address and stamp the envelopes, reconcile the bank statement and enter the taxable income and tax deductions in a record format and simplify year-end income tax preparation, returning everything ready for signatures.

"We are prepared to offer this service to folks who want to take an extended vacation, too. Have a good time and let Advanced Data worry about the bill paying!"

Call Jim Johnson, 792-6325, and learn about this truly unique service for West Texas.

Try this other service on for size: a Last Will and Testament registration and keeping service.

Many people write wills which become misplaced over the years. Advanced Data will maintain a copy of your will, registered and filed in fireproof safes until such time as it is required by heirs, estate or executor. Cards are prepared which can be left with your heirs, accountant, attorney or executor, and the will is released to them upon proper identification and signatures. Check into this one today...it could be a problem saver for a small investment.

Bank safe deposit boxes are frozen upon a person's demise and create headaches when a will or other important documents are needed. Advanced Data's Will registration and keeping service can speed the process of getting your will to the proper people.

Full Line Service

Advanced Data is a progressive company seeking to serve the business community with a full-line bookkeeping, income tax and data processing services. Call today for no-obligation information.

"You don't have to be a big business to receive professional and courteous treatment. Our clients are our friends. Many have been with us for years. Even the small businessman requires some professional help and advice nowadays. Government regulaions, taxes, forms and restrictions make it almost impossible to transact business without some help.

"Advanced Data welcomes the small businessman." A special service program has been developed for them.

"If you are in business but feel like you are too small to afford a professional service or consultation, call today and learn the facts about Advanced Data's ABC's: 'Annual Bookkeeping and Consultation Service'."

Better Hearing Aid Center Offers Area-Wide Service

The services of James O. Davidson, certified hearing aid audiologist, not only are available at the Better Hearing Aid Center in Lubbock, but also at the Clovis Hearing Aid Center.

A lot of people in the region have depended on the Better Hearing Aid Center, No. 30 Redbud Square in Lubbock, for a long time.

Now, the area of services reaches still further, and with greater convenience to the customers out from Lubbock. For friends in New Mexico and the western Panhandle and South Plains, Davidson has provided the Clovis Hearing Aid Center at 117 E. 7th St., in Clovis.

El Paso Wholesale, Lubbock Division, Serves Wide Region

"El Paso Wholesale Company Lubbock Division knows that it can make the entire year more profitable and certainly more convenient for retail firms throughout the region, ultimately saving for the consumer ... you and me."

There are a number of carefully planned factors that make this statement possible and true:

Selling wholesale only, the El Paso Wholesale Company in Lubbock is the city's complete wholesale firm.

Customers include grocery and hardware stores, auto supply houses, service stations, toy stores, sporting goods stores, etc.

Located at 206 23rd St., phone 747-1841, in Lubbock, the El Paso Wholesale Company Lubbock Division carries and stocks a full selection of hard line merchandise.

From time to time partial lists of the products have been published on these pages of the Avalanche-Journal, and readers have noted that the products and brand names are ones that can be appreciated, together with the completeness of this wholesale firm.

Among the benefits area merchants find foremost at El Paso Wholesale Company Lubbock Division, aside from the selection, is the freight situation.

Doesn't it make sense that savings are enabled through the regions by virtue of the big-stock Lubbock warehouse that features faster, shorter delivery transport? Let this Lubbock wholesale firm prove it to your own benefit with products such as:

Guns by Remington, Marlin and H. and R.; ammunition from Federal and Remington; and gun accessories such as Outer & Hoppes solvents and gun cleaning kits.

C.B. radios by Midland and Cobra, and the Fuzzbuster radar detector; plus Mr. CB accessories and Antenna Specialist antennas.

Of course there are lots of quality housewares, including Corning Ware and Pyrex, Nordic Ware and Rubbermaid.

Among the many appropriate items for young birthdays are toys by Fisher-Price, Mattiel, Playskool, Tonka and Marx.

Electronics

In the electronics field, select from television sets by G.E., Midland, Hitachi and Sony; and stereos by Soundesign and Hitachi; plus miscellaneous items including eight-track and cassette recorders, walkie talkies and TV video games.

Quality cameras and supplies include Polaroid and Kodak catheras, projectors and film, and accessories such as camera cases, viewers and film reels.

Sporting Goods

Diversified sporting goods items include . . . for the fishing enthusiast there are the famous lines of Diawa, Garcia, Zebco, Mr. Twister, Fleck Lures and Mepps.

For camping, select from Coleman, Igloo, Ray-o-Vac batteries and Nelson Sales camping accessories, and Buck knives.

For outdoor sports, the lines of Rawlings, Spalding, Wilson and General Sportscraft are represented.

And there are Daisy and Crossman BB guns and Huffy bicycles.

Small appliances are stocked in abundance, including coffee makers by Norelco, Mr. Coffee and ...nector-Silex; and pressure cookers from Presto and Mirro Aluminum; and Hamilton Beach, Waring, G.E. and Sunbeam appliances, together with such lines as Dazey, Munsey, West Bend, Oster and Rival.

Hardware is not neglected, either, and includes Stanley Tools, Black & Decker power tools, Crescent wrenches and Nicholson files, Peerless and Hancock Gross plumbing supplies.

Gift items include the quality Cross pens, Zippo lighters, watches by Timex and Texas Instruments, clocks and calculators.

In the personal care category, there are hair dryers by Gillette, Clairol, Conair and Sunbeam; and hairsetters and make-up mirrors by Clairol, Gillette, G.E. and Hamilton Beach; and Water-Pik, too.

Automotive items include Hollywood and Cal custom accessories, Fram Filters and Autolite tune-up accessories; and Rubbermaid, Lifeline and Robert automobile accessories.

And more!

ALWAYS PROGRESSIVE — McWhorter's Truck Center in Lubbock has a record of expansion and customer service, and the U-Bolt machine demonstrated here by assistant manager Durwood Hallman is one of the practical considerations, with more new equipment and services recounted in the accompanying story.

Service, Staff Capabilities Score For City Truck Center

There is continuing proof that McWhorter's Inc., Truck Center at 213 North Ave. U, serves best!

The facilities and stock, long unmatched elsewhere in the southwest, now are even more complete.

A big 36 ft. by 70 ft. addition now is utilized to provide increased parts stock, an added bay and heavy duty front end machine, even a U-bolt bending machine.

Any U-bolt can be made right here in the McWhorter's shop, with a large stock of materials and the correct machines for fabricating a bolt to order.

A good stock of overload springs for pickups and light trucks is noted.

Brake Shoe Exchanges

And now, still something else has been added: a brake shoe exchange program enabling exchange of these truck and trailer needs without waiting!

Four truck front end and frame machines are provided.

Look at some other services and products—all at this one location:

Air-Ride truck seats are stocked, as are MGM brakes.

A good inventory is maintained in truck and trailer brake drums, and an inventory of truck and trailer springs also is kept.

Suspension Units

McWhorter's at 213 N. Ave. U. also can overhaul Hendrickson suspension units in the big trucks. (Exchange walking beams are kept to speed the work on the units, with drivers being able to go on their way in less than a day.)

For RV Needs Also

And — a quite good stock of electric brakes is available for recreational vehicles, boat trailers, etc.

McWhorter's is distributor for electric brakes for every need — for trucks, trailers, etc.

Frame, front end work and other services are available for the RV needs, just as for trucks.

Experienced Management

The big McWhorter's Truck Center is managed by long-familiar manager Bob Dean (27 years with McWhorter's).

Durwood Hallman, assistant manager has 28 years with the firm; and Alvin Morris, service manager, also has 28 years as a valued staffmember.

Leonard Gordon, mechanic actually is the longest-tenured McWhorter's staff member, still on the job and serving capably just as he has done since March 1946!

Versatile Facility

The large building at McWhorter's can service any length and size vehicle (that is legal on the highway) inside, without extending through any doorways.

Ten huge trucks and trailers can be accommodated at one time within the Center at the bays. Even more vehicles can be served if detached from trailers or if of smaller size.

Even showers are provided and appreciated for truck operators; a sleeping area is available for these truck drivers while their vehicles are being repaired.

Pick-up, Delivery

McWhorter's, Inc., Truck Center is especially noted for its pick-up and delivery service on trucks and trailers, with this particularly advantageous on fleet job drum turning and brake shoe relining.

Truck and auto owners alike have discovered that the front end alignment, brake work, wheel balancing, frame straightening, etc. at McWhorter's assures satisfaction as only experts can guarantee.

The firm's promise is emphasized on all repairs:

"It must be right or we make it right."

McWhorter's backs this policy with professionalism throughout the staff, and with the best in equipment and facilities.

The Center was established at its present spacious headquarters in 1951, is staffed by men long on experience and "know how," and each takes a personal interest in the job at hand.

Frame straightening and the rebuilding of wrecked trucks by McWhorter's is known by fleet owners and operators from Dallas on to the West Coast.

Thirty-ton and 100-ton jacks are part of the specialized equipment that gets the job done.

Wheels can be balanced without removal. Alemite and Stewart-Warner wheels balancers, together with Bear front end alignment equipment, are included in the equipment.

The 35-ft. truck frame at McWhorter's is one of the largest in a multi-state area.

Suspension Units

Truck and trailer front end and frame parts are stocked.

Among other services are rewiring and repair of lights on trucks and trailers, replacement of trailer 5th wheel king pins, repair 5th wheels of any make, overhaul vacuum booster brakes, and the installation of tacographs.

McWhorter's Brake Shop is distributor for a host of famous-name products.

Check the products, the service and the workmanship; you'll like the McWhorter's way of doing business!

A & J Blind & Shade Shop Outlines Current Specials

Special savings at A & J Blind & Shade Shop provide a distinct advantage at this time.

For example . . . 20 per cent off on all mini-blinds!

"One's budget must and should be considered, and A & J, at 1917 19th St., phone 762-4013, in Lubbock, does all in its power to befriend your budget for home improvement."

Whether the need is quality woven woods, window shades (or even another of the firm's specialties . . . venetian blind repair) or still other A & J products and services, now is a very good time to patronize A & J, and profit!

Owner-operator Julius Ysasaga aptly points out:

When one can secure famous-names lines at low A & J prices, from a firm that puts the emphasis on value throughout the year, why delay? Shop now and save.

Service Foremost

Quick Service on all custom shades is a longstanding practice at A & J.

Woven woods are one of the newest additions to the Joanna Western window treatment collection, and enable one to "do something nice for your windows today"! These colorful woven shades are an exciting way to give any room a brand new look. They are available in a variety of styles, patterns and colors to fit any decor.

Actually, when the need calls for shutters, laminated shades, venetian blinds, draperies, custom-made window shades, light-proof shades — all the new woven woods, and more, a superior product, service and fast attention all are assured at A & J Blind & Shade Shop.

The newest in materials and patterns, with equal emphasis on service and lowest possible prices, is the correct image and reputation of that firm that can be of exceptional service in home and business improvements. A lot of area residents can attest to this fact.

Quick service on drapes is one of the many advantages at A & J.

Venetian blind repair is another specialty.

The shop continuously has the greatest variety in window shades one could imagine, with over 50 colors in beautiful fabrics and patterns.

"Tis home improvement time . . . and it is A & J Blind & Shade time, too, wouldn't you think? For savings and quality, shop the big specials at A & J; save the difference for vacation enjoyment!"

'HOME OF ONE OF THE LARGEST STEEL INVENTORIES IN WEST TEXAS'

Cotton Trailer Packages Among Many Benefits At Lubbock Steel & Supply

Wouldn't you say that now is a very good time to assure an adequate amount of cotton trailers in your operation this year?

"Then inquire now regarding advantages of the cotton trailer packages from Lubbock Steel and Supply Co., 62nd Street at Quirt Avenue, phone 745-4195. "You'll be glad you did."

(There is a new shipment just arrived of 8-ft. and 9-ft. widths in cotton trailer wire, too.)

Add to this the many products and the exceptional facilities and the experienced customer-oriented personnel at Lubbock Steel and Supply, and you recognize the advantages of relying upon this firm in every season.

Years of Experience

Doug Williams, on the Lubbock steel scene for some 14 years, in manager.

Jim Height, assistant general manager, is Doug's right-hand man and a person upon whom the customer can depend for knowledgeable service. Jim has been associated in local and area steel service for about nine years.

Newest in the capable staff is Judy Ewerz, formerly with Ducommun Metals. Judy is well known and experienced in the field and is most valiable addition to the inside sales force.

Home-Owned

"Serving the man on the Land", Lubbock Steel and Supply was opened in January of 1977 as a division of Lubbock American Iron and Metal, Inc. Heading the parent firm is Bobby Jarvis as president, and Jack Williamson as vice president.

For one's steel needs, whatever the size order, large or small, Lubbock Steel & Supply wants to serve. If the needed material possibly might not be in stock, the firm usually has its own truck in Houston three times a week, and overnight delivery can be given on special items.

Added Convenience

Something else of interest, a situation one may not have recognized:

"Bring your scrap metal in to Lubbock American Iron & Metal, at 3202 Quirt Ave., and then drive on over to secure your cotton trailer kits or new steel needs at Lubbock Steel and Supply, just on down at 62nd St. at Quirt, where modern facilities and 27 acres of steel just can't be overlooked!"

Cash-and-carry building materials are stocked including rebar, remesh, roof decking, beams, pipe siding, barbed wire, bailer wire, bar grating, etc.

For all one's steel needs, Lubbock Steel and Supply comes through, whether the need is angles, flats and rounds, tool bar material or whatnot.

From the really huge paved parking area to the exceptionally good inventory, modern facilities and helpful assistance, everything says "welcome" to Lubbock Steel and Supply, wholly locally owned, for all one's steel needs.

"May we have the pleasure of your visit and your trade? We look forward to serving you as old friends or new customers.

Insulating Windows Firm Open

The location is 1616 Ave. F, and the phone number is 744-2347!

"We're talking about Insulating Windows, Inc.!"

For those who have depended upon Jim Haynes for Arcadia Stone, there is further good news:

Not only does Haynes still provide the products and services at 1922 Ave. E in Lubbock, but he has opened an added facility, the Insulating Windows, Inc., at 1616 Ave. F, where aluminum replacement windows, storm windows and storm doors are custom made!

"For cleaner and more comfortable living", Haynes and his experienced crew can perform quite a service.

Imagine, for example, rubber seals on the custom-made windows, with this self sealing innovation making caulking unnecessary.

These products and services by Haynes are made possible upon his purchase in June of the window department of House Clinic.

W.M. Smith Electric Business Affording Multiple Services

Well electrification . . . the W.M. Smith Electric Company way . . . is heartily recommended!

"Let us explain how we can serve you, as we likely have aided your neighbor, with vertical hollowshaft, v-belt drive, tumble-shaft drive and all the other advantages."

Well electrification by W.M. Smith Electric Co., 1911 Clovis Road, has further advantages, such as rodent protected, all-weather and temperature sensing control panels, flanges for tumble shafts, compact base gearhead mountings, high service factor engineering drives, all name-brand equipment and top resale value.

Free estimates on well electrification are featured, and one can be assured of service around the clock, quality in installation, wiring, material and workmanship, and for correct modifications in well set-ups.

Compressor Values

In-stock compressors at extra low prices are one of the company features in Lubbock.

Sales and service for all makes of hoists, including the Budget line, is another key segment of the business.

Motors

W.M. Smith Electric is distributor for three major lines of electric motors: General Electric, U.S., and Baldor, in all sizes.

Furthermore, the firm has parts for everything it sells, offering service on everything sold, also.

Steve's Flowers Invites, Merits Full Consideration

"It would seem that Steve's Flowers, 3833 50th St., has been purposely established just for weddings, party decorations, business and home floral needs and for special-occasion service throughout the year!

Yes, Steve's Flowers, phone 793-2721, in Turner Square, is a delightful and ready source for needs of any season.

Steve's is a member of FTD, Teleflorist and the American Floral Service as a customer consideration.

Both Visa and Master Charge cards are honored, as are American Express, Diners Club and Carta Blanche.

And just now there is an exceptionally good selection of green and blooming plants.

Steve's Flowers is new,..it is different...it is pretty...and the service and stock prove the customer is appreciated!

The firm has been opened only since Jan. 1, but the owners and founders are veterans in the field.

"Meet Mr. and Mrs. Steve Dearth (Steve and Tommie) who are your kind of folks."

Tommie Dearth is a Lubbock native and is a 1952 graduate of Lubbock High School and a '56 graduate of Texas Tech. She is the former Tommie Wynn.

Steve is a 24-year Texas resident and has been in the floral business "most of his life". The couple owned a retail florist business in Amarillo some seven years before coming to Lubbock 10 years ago, with Steve associated with another Lubbock florist firm during this period.

Both Steve and Tommie are on the job to lend their expertise and to personally assure the service that one can appreciate; the friendly and informal atmosphere is most evident, yet professionalism is equally noted.

Prompt delivery is another "plus" for the firm.

Everything is new, and Steve personally did all the decorations that have drawn acclaim from early customers.

"Won't you too, come in and let's get acquainted? We are open from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m., Mondays through Fridays, and until 12 noon on Saturdays."

San Antonio Garbagemen Fired

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — About half of this city's garbage workers began partial trash collections this morning amid taunts from pickets representing 106 of their fired counterparts.

There were no incidents, but police were on hand and city officials said they would provide protection for non-striking workers if necessary.

Meanwhile, the first 53 replacements for the ex-garbagemen, who struck because of a wage dispute, were taking physical examinations and being readied to start work Tuesday.

Some 150 of the city's 300 garbage workers began collections today, driving past about 30 pickets.

"We're gonna have some problems," said assistant city manager Louis Fox. "There's some concern, but we'll protect the people."

"I'm asking for no violence, but I don't know what the outcome will be," said strike leader Eddie Leija, one of those fired Saturday.

"We do anticipate some problems in garbage collecting," City Manager Tom Huebner said Sunday. "We will maintain that service. I would anticipate it will take two to four weeks to get back to normal.

"I mean business. I will not be intimidated. It's all over. These men have lost their jobs."

More than half of the 300 garbagemen in the nation's 10th largest city refused Saturday to pick up trash. Huebner promptly fired 106 of them and said 58 others face suspensions for refusing to work in the face of threats from strikers. A handful refused to work this morning.

Philadelphia and New Orleans also have been hit by garbage worker strikes within the past week.

Strikers had hoped to spread the strike to landfill workers, airport maintenance employees, animal control officers and street department workers, but indications this morning were that no such support was likely.

Asked Sunday if other city employees who strike in support of the garbagemen would be fired, Huebner replied, "I intend to be consistent in my actions."

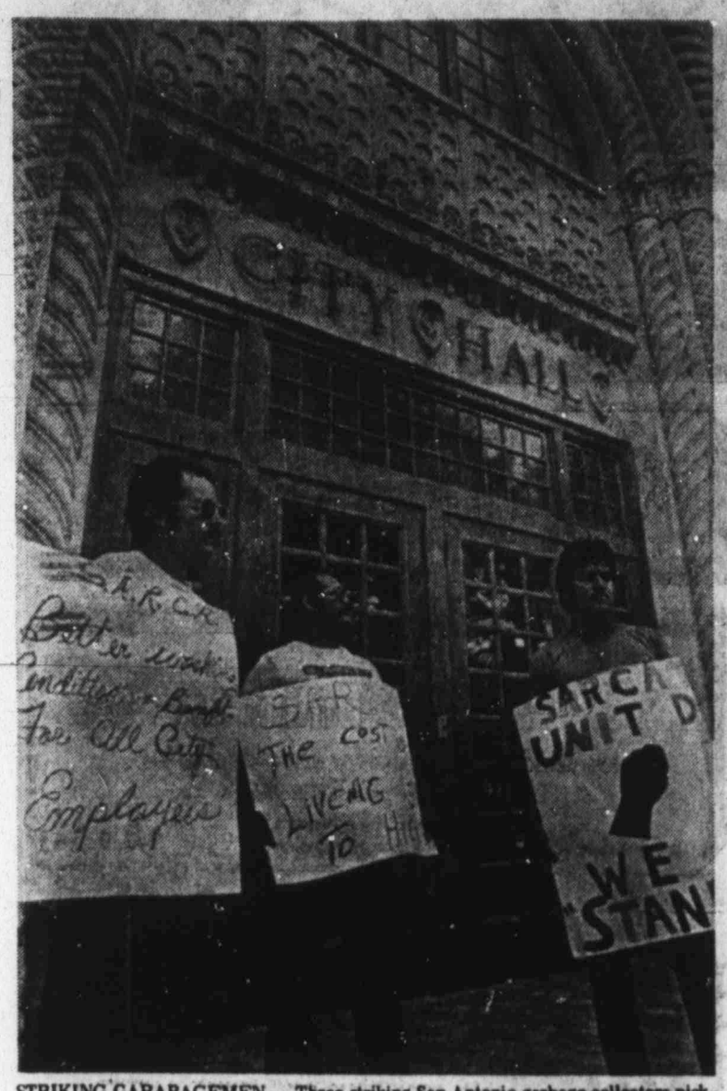
Trash collections were planned only for the south side of this city of 800,000, where temperatures have hovered near 100 degrees. Northside residents were instructed to take their garbage to the landfill or to three public parks, where trucks were stationed.

Union members, who staged a three-day walkout last May over wages and working conditions, are unhappy with the city council's decision last week to give all city employees a 6 percent raise. The union had asked for a 9.3 percent wage hike.

Only 74 trash collectors, most of them members of a rival union, went to work Saturday. No violence was reported.

"This is unfair and unjust," Leija said Sunday of the firings. "He (Huebner) didn't reason with nobody. He knows this is a low-paying city. He knows the money is there to pay a raise, but he won't pay it."

Strikers said the average garbageman's salary was $500 per month, but Huebner said it was $790. The starting salary for a garbage collector is $3.15 per hour, while a new driver gets $3.28 per hour.



STRIKING GARABAGEMEN — Three striking San Antonio garbage collectors picket Sunday outside City Hall. More than half of the city's 300 trash collectors walked off the job Saturday in a wage dispute. City Manager Tom Huebner promptly fire 106 strikers and said another 58 will be disciplined. (AP Laserphoto)

Dallas Demonstrators Protest Mexican-American Boy's Death

DALLAS (UPI) — About 350 protestors gathered to show their indignation with the Justice Department's decision not to pursue the police killing of a 12-year-old Mexican-American boy, but their discontent ran deeper.

The demonstrators, carrying signs saying "Federal Government Supports Killer Cops" and "Carter: Take This Justice And Shove It," Saturday marched peacefully to the police station and City Hall.

The Justice Department last week said it would not file civil rights charges against former Dallas policeman Darrell Cain, who was convicted of murdering Santos Rodriguez five years ago today while the boy was handcuffed in a police car. Cain received a five-year prison sentence, which Mexican-American leaders say was not severe enough.

"This is a sign of solidarity and unity of purpose like we have never seen in our city," said Adolf Camales of the Mexican-American Assembly for Civic Involvement. "But, we are also here to demonstrate our anger and frustration. We will not rest until equal treatment and justice to all is an equal statement to all minorities."

"We're going to let them hear us all the way to Washington," said Juan Perez of the Brown Berts. "If they don't hear, the next time a child gets killed the same thing will happen."

Mexican-American leaders had said the march was meant to be non-violent.

But Gregorio Villa Lopez of the central committee of the Brown Berets, a Hispanic civil rights group, pledged Mexican-Americans would use "any means necessary to make our feelings known."

"We urge our people to use the Second Amendment of the Constitution which gives us the right to bear arms," said Lopez.

Representatives of sympathetic organizations spoke to the marchers from the steps of the Police Department and later at City Hall while armed police Tactical Unit forces in bulletproof vests waited inside the buildings.

Lopez and Brown Beret member Ernesto Fraga told the group their goal was independence from the United States government because of its refusal to file civil rights charges against Cain. They said they wanted Mexican-Americans to garner enough support to be represented at the United Nations.

"Independence is inevitable in the Southwest states between Texas and California," Lopez said, urging the marchers to "prepare for the coming revolution."

They said Mexican-Americans will begin attempting to gain international recognition by holding another protest march July 29 at the International Bridge at Laredo.

"This will be a massive demonstration. If as many people show up for that as they have today, we will let the world know our position," Perez said.

Watching the sometimes emotional protest was Bessie Rodriguez, the victim's mother, who would not comment on the Justice Department's lack of action in her son's case.

"The way I feel right now, I might say something I shouldn't," she said.

"I'm not going to give up hope. It's a great honor to have all these people —," Mrs. Rodriguez said, her voice cracking with emotion.

Briscoe's Ranchland Assessed At Fraction Of Actual Value

UVALDE (UPI) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe's South Texas ranchland is worth an estimated $362.50 per acre, but according to county records, the property is assessed at an average of $28.20 per acre.

Despite a constitutional mandate that all Texas land be taxed according to its fair market value — or what a buyer would pay for it if it were for sale — most agricultural land in South Texas is taxed according to what it can produce for the farmer or rancher who owns it, according to a story in the Sunday edition of the Dallas Times Herald.

The South Texas system produces property values significantly lower than those assessed by tax officials in most urban areas of the state. The varied assessment approaches has led the Legislature to consider tax reform as well as tax limitation during its current special session.

Briscoe, the biggest landowner in South Texas, owns 57,910 acres in Uvalde and according to studies conducted by the Texas Real Estate Research Center at Texas A&M University in College Station, land in Uvalde County and its environs is worth $362.50 an acre.

But Briscoe's land is assessed at an average of $28.20 an acre. E.F. Williams, who owns 9,009 acres in Uvalde County, much of it adjacent to Briscoe's land, is assessed at $15.47 an acre. The Horton brothers, who own 7,815 acres east of Uvalde, are assesed an average $24.78 an acre.

Briscoe's 1977 tax bill totaled $92,130 — $663,340 less than what he would have owed had his land been assessed at what the Research Center claimed is its true market value.

The governor and his fellow ranchers were not cheating the taxman but only paying what the local government said was owed.

Local officials maintain agricultural land cannot be taxed as the law requires.

"You couldn't tax them at what it's (the land) worth. It would bust them," said McMullen County Judge Claude Franklin Jr.

"It takes 20 acres of land in this part of the country to run a cow. Now when that rancher goes to sell the calf at the end of the year, he's going to get a few hundred dollars, probably less this year than last. So how is he going to pay $30, $40 taxes on each of those acres it took to raise that calf?"

Police Probe Links In Multiple Killings

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Police said Sunday they are investigating the possibility that the killing of six steakhouse employees is linked to the slaying of three members of a San Antonio Air Force family found shot to death near Purcell, Okla., last month.

Evidence also has led police to consider the theory that prison escapees are involved in both incidents and are killing witnesses who could identify them and return them to prison, officers said.

"It's one theory of the case that we can't rule out at this time," said Sgt. Jim Woodie, a supervisor in the detective division.

The Texas family was found shot to death along Interstate 35 south of Purcell June 22 and their pickup with a camper was found parked at an airport hotel a few days later.

Tech Sgt. Melvin Lorenz, 38; his wife, Staff Sgt. Linda Lorenz, 31; and their son Richard, 13, were shot with .38-caliber bullets and Lorenz's .357 magnum pistol is missing, police said.

Six employees of a south Oklahoma City Sirloin Stockade were found dead in the restaurant's meat freezer about closing time July 16. Police said they had been herded into the freezer and shot in the head and body. About $1,200 was taken from the cash register.

They were Louis Zacarias, 43, Anthony Tew and David Lindsay, both 17, Terri M. Horst and David Gregory Salaman, both 15, and Isaac E. Freeman, 58.

Officers have not revealed the caliber of the bullets used in the Sirloin Stockade deaths, but police spokesman Sgt. Tom Mundy has said the bullets were from a medium caliber gun.

"We know at this point that it was larger than a .22-caliber bullet and it was smaller than a .45," he said.

No suspects have been identified in either killings.

Woodie said the restaurant investigation had not stalled and police still had leads to work on.

Meanwhile, the restaurant was scheduled to reopen today, Sirloin Stockade vice president Wes Gant said.

He said the locks on the doors had been changed.

Pot Discovered With Ice Cream

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Some customers of an ice cream vendor were able to buy pot as well as popsicles and fudge bars until a patrolman acting on a tip asked to inspect the wares, according to the Indianapolis Police Department.

Patrolman Fred Carey said it appeared Sterling Saunders, 21, was doing a lucrative business in "potsicles" from the ice cream van.

Carey arrested Saunders recently on a charge of possession of marijuana. He was scheduled for a court appearance today. A 16-year-old girlfriend was charged with disorderly conduct.

Police said the officer found what was described as a "large amount" of marijuana in the truck with fudge bars and popsicles.

They impounded the truck to complete an inventory of its contents, but found they had a problem in keeping the merchandise cold.

Asked Carey, "What do you do with 400 fudgie bars."

Jobs In Forestry Start To Climb

By BRUCE NICHOLS

NACOGDOCHES (UPI) — Students who dreamed of forestry as a natural, ecological and otherwise idealistically superior career clogged colleges in the early and middle 1970s. Jobs evaporated.

Now the forestry job market is opening up just a little and Pat Bray, chief counselor-advisor in the School of Forestry at Stephen F. Austin State University, is encouraged.

But he encourages realism, too.

"What happened was a big boom for forestry, the big ecology or 'I want to get back to nature' kick," Bray said. "'Let's save the trees and the woods, so let's look for an occupation to help do that.' Ah, forestry sounds like that.'"

Stephen F. Austin's School of Forestry grew to 900 students in 1974. Many of them found the course of study disillusioning, too scientific, too difficult. What had they expected?

"They'd say, 'Well, I always liked to work in the woods. I like to hunt and fish. I was in scouts for a while.' So, they think it's an ideal kind of continuation of their Boy Scout experience.

"It's also got a stereotype that you don't have to be smart to do forestry. They think 'I could probably handle that.' They got in and found out that we're a forestry school."

"Our responsibilities aren't really an ecological type training. It's not a training in Sierra Club. We're not teaching people to backpack and things like that. We manage the forests."

That means cutting down trees as well as protecting them.

The disillusionments and difficulties of the course work and deterioration of the job market have helped cut forestry enrollment at SFA to about 680.

Bray would like to keep a stabilized, forewarned, committed student body.

"I tell them it's not as easy as they might think. I try to burst their bubble. It's a lot more technical than just grabbing a big axe and going out and chopping down a tree.

"The main purpose is how to manage forests more effectively. We're in a situation now of needing more wood products for more people grown in less space in a shorter time," Bray said.

That means jobs will be opening up.

"I think the job supply and demand thing will work out. There's a trend that looks like it's opening up a little. It's not going to be wide open for years and I don't know if it will ever get to that point.

"But it's not completely locked out."

Mrs. Burnett Denies Guilt

NEDERLAND (AP) — A date as the defendant at a September murder trial has not isolated Linda May Burnett from family and friends.

"They know me and know I didn't have anything to do with it," the woman said in a Beaumont Enterprise copyright story.

Mrs. Burnett and Joe Dugas are charged with capital murder in connection with the slayings of Bishop and Ester Phillips of Winnie and their son, daughter-in-law and grandson from Woodward, Okla.

Their bodies were found in a single grave in Jefferson County earlier this month.

"I'm not guilty. I don't believe in violence," Mrs. Burnett, 30, told The Enterprise Friday.

She admitted to an affair with Joe Dugas, but said it was over and her 6-year-old marriage is now in good shape.

"I hope I will have common sense enough to never get into that kind of situation again. Once is enough," she said. "I learned that a woman's place is in the home and with her husband."

Leo Burnett, 53, said he was shocked by his wife's arrest. "I've never once doubted my wife's innocence."

Cards expressing support have been sent to Mrs. Burnett.

"Our friends and neighbors have offered me everything they've got," she said.

40 Buses

Struggs Junior High and Dunbar High School facilities. Those two campuses are being combined this fall as the Dunbar-Struggs High School, a secondary-level magnet program.

Mike Payton, vice principal there, said he expects voluntary transfers to boost the school's enrollment from last year's 450-500 to about 890. Like Iles, that also is in line with court-ordered specifications.

The Dunbar-Struggs school will offer vocational programs that previously were maintained at Monterey and Coronado high schools; extra honors programs and athletics; jazz-rock, piano, commercial art, watercolor painting and various courses new to Lubbock; and student options for early-morning (7:30 a.m.) classes and early afternoon dismissal.

Dallas Man Killed By Police Officers

DALLAS (UPI) — Two police officers answering a disturbance call shot killed a 73-year-old man who had fired at them.

The officers were responding to disturbance reported to have involved a drunk man with a gun early Sunday. The officers confronted Roy Smith at his car, and he allegedly pulled a gun on them and began firing.

Smith was hit once in the chest and once in the hand.

Migrant Worker Drowns In Lake

ELKIN, N.C. (UPI) — A 28-year-old migrant worker from Fort Worth drowned Sunday while swimming in a private lake.

Yadkin County Sheriff Ronnie Ball said David Torres Saldana had gone to swim in the lake south of Elkin with eight other migrant workers.

Saldana entered the water, went under and did not surface. Yadkin County rescue workers found Saldana's body in 10 feet of water.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

The young mother had never sent a son to camp before. She felt apprehensive, sad, old, and a little lonely already.

"Stuff your pajamas under your pillow each morning," she cautioned "and you'll know where they are."

Her son took the pajamas out of the suitcase, threw them back in the drawer and groaned, "No one wears pajamas."

"The list mentions rain gear and I've got it all folded inside this little packet."

"Mom! I am not taking a raincoat to camp."

"Your soap and all your other toiletries are in this little zippered bag so you can take it to the shower with you."

He threw it on the bed. "If you think I'm going to take a bath at camp, you're cuckoo."

"Here are the extra pair of shoes they mentioned, in case you need dry ones for church or something."

He plucked them out of the suitcase and said, "I'm wearing the only pair I'll need."

"Here's postcards with the stamps on them. You will write and let us know how you're doing."

Disgusted, he stuffed the cards in a corner of the suitcase.

"Here, put this lotion where you can find it. It blocks out the sun and a bad burn could ruin your entire week at camp."

He grimaced. "What are you trying to do to me? I am not taking lotion."

The mother re-checked the list. "Where's the towels?"

"I took 'em out."

"And the six sets of underwear?"

"That's too many."

"And the mosquito repellent?"

"No one in camp will have his own mosquito repellent."

As they drove to camp, the mother was instructed to stop the car just inside the gate. "You don't have to take me all the way to the door," he said. "Just go on home. And don't kiss me. None of the other guys kiss their mothers."

As the mother turned the car around, she heard a voice, "Hey Mom, I almost forgot! Did you pack my $5 for candy and junk?"

The mother looked at her son blankly with no sign of recognition on her face. "Whatsa matter, kid, did you lose your mother?" she sped off.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q76 ♡9 ◇AK8742 ♣Q62
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	1 ♡
2 ◇	2 ♡	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Although your side certainly has the balance of power, you might not have the defensive tricks to defeat an opposing game. In any event, the opponents have a cheap save against your vulnerable game. Don't give them any time to discover their massive fit. Force them to guess right away by bidding five diamonds.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQ ♡KQJ952 ◇843 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Pass	Pass	Dble.
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	2 ♡
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Bid three no trump. Partner must have reasonable values—after all, he elected to defend one diamond doubled and then bid three clubs. You don't need much luck to produce eight tricks in your own hand, so it's worth a shot.

Q.3—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠94 ♡AKJ7 ◇AQJ6 ♣872
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 NT	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Pass. With a balanced hand, you don't want to introduce a second suit on a minimum. Since you have no chance for game, your object should be to keep the auction at the lowest level. Even if the opponents are able to defeat you in one no trump, they are likely to make a part score in one of the black suits, so the loss will actually be a profit (!), for you will have prevented them from getting a start toward their second game

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠95 ♡AQ872 ◇963 ♣AK7
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	2 NT	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Pass. Don't let the fact that you have 3½ quick tricks go to your head. You have a minimum opening bid, no source of tricks (unless partner has excellent diamonds), and a distinct liability in the form of a low doubleton in spades. Unless you are blessed with a great deal of luck, this hand will not produce nine tricks—and the final contract may be doubled to your eternal regret.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A107 ♡98742 ◇6 ♣8653
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?

A.—Despite your five-card trump support and singleton, you have a poor hand. A simple raise to two hearts is all you can afford—a jump to four hearts would be a vast overstatement of your assets. If partner can't move over two hearts, it is most unlikely that this hand is going anywhere.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠102 ♡AQ754 ◇J102 ♣532
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 ◇
1 ♠	2 ♣	?

What action do you take?

A.—With a mediocre hand and no particular fit for partner's suit, you may employ a time-honored message to convey this information. Pass! Partner could have doubled if he wanted to hear about your hearts.

Q.7—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠8 ♡AK72 ◇A9853 ♣J62
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 ♠	2 ♣	?

What action do you take?

A.—You may well have a game in one of the red suits. However, it is also possible that partner has a long spade suit and no particular fit for either of your suits. In that case, you may be able to extract a significant penalty from the opponents by doubling. True, you would like to have better trumps for that action, but consider your prime defensive tricks and the option partner has to run if his hand is unsuited for defense. And if the worst does happen, you won't have doubled the opponents into game.

Q.8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠8 ♡KQ10762 ◇852 ♣832
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Even though you have three-card support for partner's first-bid suit, this is not the time to take a preference. Your hand is useless at anything but a heart contract, so you should rebid two hearts.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: My 14-year-old daughter wants to be "trusted" and I would like nothing better than to trust her, but she has lied to me so many times I have lost count.

Last Friday she asked if she could spend the night at a girlfriend's house, so I let her. When I checked with the friend's mother, she told me that HER daughter was supposed to be staying HERE!

My daughter lies to me about where she goes, who she's been with, and just about everything she does. I am worried sick about her. I have tried to get her to go to a counselor, but she won't go.

I am a divorcee, work full time, and have cut my own social life to a minimum in order to be here when she wants me. But she's never around, and I am completely shut out. Please help me.

HELPLESS MOM

Dear Helpless: You are not helpless. Counseling is available for parents who have lost control. You need to learn how to deal with a child who learned long ago how to manipulate you. Your local Family Service Association offers excellent counseling. And if there's a Parents Anonymous in your area, contact them, too.

DEAR ABBY: I love to play Bingo, and I play every chance I get. I hardly ever win, and it really runs into money when you play as often as I do.

My landlord told me if I wanted to win at Bingo, I should get myself a book and study up on it.

I have never heard of a book on Bingo, but if there is such a book, can you tell me where I can buy a copy?

E.B.: WINONA, MINN.

Dear E.B.: I think your landlord is putting you on. Bingo is strictly a game of chance, and if there is a book on how to win at Bingo, I've never seen it.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter was married in a church. We went to a great deal of expense and effort to make her wedding as lovely as possible, and it would have been perfect, had it not been spoiled by a crying baby!

The baby's parents insisted on bringing their 10-month-old child to the ceremony, and when she started to cry and fuss, instead of taking her out of the room immediately, they allowed her to cry until her cries became hysterical screams! It was terribly distracting for those who were trying to keep their attention on the ceremony. Needless to say, it wasn't the baby's fault.

It's too late for us, because my daughter's wedding ceremony has already been ruined, but I hope you will print this so others will realize that children who are too young to understand the importance of keeping quiet do not belong at a church wedding.

MOTHER OF THE BRIDE

Dear Mother: I have mentioned this in my column several times, and the number of letters I have received saying, "Babies belong in church" was astonishing.

(P.S. I've visited the Mormon church and congratulated them on the good manners and respectfulness of their wee ones.)

CONFIDENTIAL TO "DAFT" (DEAR ABBY FANS TOGETHER): Your loyalty is deeply appreciated, but your devotion is embarrassing. I don't deserve it. Enough, please.

Actress Discusses Screen Nudity

PARIS (WNS) — Sophia Loren, 43-year-old Italian superstar currently making the film "Brass Target" in Switzerland, was discussing the pros and cons of appearing nude on the screen.

"If men grow accustomed to seeing too much of an actress it becomes rather like watching their wives at home," she says.

"I am not 17 any more, and it would not be easy for me now. But, I would consider doing it in the right film — and for the right director — someone like Ingmar Bergman, perhaps; someone who wouldn't want me to do it just for the sake of exposing my body on the screen."

What Teacher Mary Lou Wise learned:

'Losing weight at Pat Walker's is fun'

So begins a letter from the vivacious Ms. Wise, who teaches second-grade pupils. She continues:

"Before going to Pat Walker's, I just ate without thinking. My eating habits have changed, thanks to the program. I know now how to eat the foods I enjoy without having ever to look again at the 65¾ inches and 37½ pounds I have lost."

Now that she weighs 113 pounds, it has been self-rewarding to shop for a size 9 instead of a 16, she adds.

A PAT WALKER exclusive SYMMETRICON, found only at Pat Walker's is the passive exercise equipment that safely and gently firms and tones body tissue, simultaneously improving your circulation and helping to correct your posture. Treatments are given in complete privacy, of course, and you can wear your regular street clothes. You reduce safely — but effectively — as your measurements go down just where they need to do so.

The Slim Gourmet

By Barbara Gibbons

FROM THE SLIM GOURMET'S FAT MAILBAG — "Can you advise me what to expect in the way of food in Hawaii? I am a diabetic, and am planning a trip there this summer. Any tips will be appreciated." Mrs. R.M., Hackettstown, N.J.

Dear Vacationer — Neither dieters nor diabetics should have any trouble finding delightful but diet-safe dining in our 50th state. The local cuisine is a marvelous blend of Chinese, Japanese, Polynesian and mainland "melting pot." Hawaii abounds in lush fruits and vegetables and absolutely delicious seafood...all low-calorie. You must sample giant prawns — shrimp as big as lobster tails — and mahi-mahi, which is likely to become your favorite fish. Also known as the Hawaiian dolphinfish, mahi-mahi is sweet and moist, large-flaked, with a delicate flavor. The meat is pure white like the finest flounder or sole, but better! Both prawn and mahi-mahi are very lean and low-calorie.

Locally grown fruit favorites include native pineapple, mango and papaya, available on the islands with a lushness, ripeness and sweetness you can never hope to find in back-home supermarkets. They make calorie-safe desserts for dieters, and can probably be worked into a diabetic's fruit exchange (but check with your doctor).

One warning for dieters, and diabetics especially. Beware of drinks and dishes with Polynesian names because they may include sugar or large amounts of sweetened juices. Avoid anything "sweet 'n' sour" for the same reason. The indigenous cuisine is lean, but heavy on the sweets (and calories). Hawaii has a high rate of diabetes and fat was once considered a beauty asset. You'll see lots of local citizens who are fat enough to stretch the seams on a muu-muu!

Other than that, diabetics (or anyone on any strict diet) should have no more trouble than they would in any mainland city. Anything you can find here is also available in the islands' highly urbanized tourist destinations. You'll find the same products in the supermarkets — sugar-free soft drinks, dietetic foods, low-fat cottage cheese, etc. — but they cost more!

DIETETIC TRAVEL TIPS

Diabetics with the travel bug should first get hold of the June issue of "Diabetes Forecast," published by the American Diabetic Association, 600 Fifth Ave., N.Y., N.Y. 10020. (Send them $1 for a back issue, or check your library.) This annual travel issue has a trunkful of tips to smooth a diabetic's way anywhere on the globe. For example:

The flight from the East coast to Hawaii is a long one so be sure to bring aboard whatever you'll need in the way of medication or blood-sugar regulating nibbles.

You'll want to take advantage of the airline's special diet menu; you can arrange that when you book your flight. Be sure to check before departure that your diet meal is aboard. (Low-calorie, low-fat, low-cholesterol and low-salt meals are also available.)

Since you'll be crossing time zones, ask your doctor about adjusting your meal and medication schedules.

Travelers to foreign countries should carry a note from the doctor explaining their diabetic condition...and all those syringes in their luggage!

For all travelers: Keep a record of your medication requirements, and a list of substances to which you are allergic, in your pocket or handbag. Give another copy to your traveling companion.

Wear some sort of bracelet or nametag that identifies you as a diabetic. (It's illegal for someone to open your purse or wallet without your permission.)

If you're traveling to a foreign country, have the ID tag translated into the language of the land you'll be visiting.

Also learn how to say, "I am a diabetic. Get me a doctor. Some orange juice or sugar, please," in the language of each country in which you'll travel.

If the length of your trip means that you will have to purchase insulin in a foreign country, be familiar with the different strengths of insulin and how to switch from one to another, if needed. You can write to the manufacturer of the insulin you use to inquire about its availability in the countries you plan to visit.

If you are going to an area where vaccinations are required, take them weeks ahead of time so that your diabetic balance isn't upset during your trip by a reaction to the vaccination.

Since a diabetic can't afford to wait for meals, try to stay in a full-service hotel with a 24-hour restaurant or room service. Don't wait until the last minute to call room service; it might take 30 to 40 minutes. A room with a refrigerator allows you to keep high-protein snacks, fruit and juice on hand.

It's always a good idea to let the hotel manager know if you are a diabetic, or have any condition that might need emergency help.

Breakfast wisely and well! For a complete guide to calories, carbohydrate, protein and fat in today's packaged cereals — by brand name — send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 35 cents to SLIM GOURMET CEREAL GUIDE, in care of this newspaper, Sparta, N.J. 07871.

Several Choices Open To Local Volunteers

By BEVERLY O'BRIANT
Family News Staff

Summer home economics students at Dunbar have taken an empty room adjacent to the waiting area in the Department of Human Resources (DHR) building and turned it into a playroom for children whose parents are waiting for interviews.

The students decorated the room, made pillows, painted child-size chairs, built shelves, obtained new toys or repaired old ones — in short, converted an empty room into a pleasant play area.

The students will maintain the playroom, periodically checking to see if repairs, new toys or other items are needed.

This project was an entirely volunteer effort, both for the students and within the community: all funds and materials used in the project were donated by Lubbock citizens.

This is just one of many such volunteer projects within the city, according to Mrs. Nova Purdy, regional consultant for volunteer services. Mrs. Purdy works with Alice Day and Danny Ortega, coordinators of volunteer services for the city and county of Lubbock, in handling all volunteer services within the DHR.

Last month Mrs. Purdy reported 363 volunteers in a 15-county area, with 2,422 volunteer hours utilized. This, however, is only a partial list of volunteers.

"It's hard to get our volunteers to register," Mrs. Purdy said, because "they object sometimes to filling out the forms."

The purpose of the coordinators is to find and recruit volunteers. A 1967 federal mandate requires that state departments use volunteers in an effort to involve citizens in the community.

According to Mrs. Purdy, about 41 percent of all volunteers nationwide are men, but it often happens that "women do the volunteering and men serve on the boards."

Many volunteers with whom the coordinators deal are one-time volunteers, but some are continuously involved in volunteer work. Most volunteers are working people, and the ages range from high-school through middle-age. Volunteers donate time during regular daytime hours, as well as nights and weekends.

Among the projects in which Lubbock area volunteers are involved are counseling for abusive parents, Meals-on-Wheels, day care, transportation services for children and the elderly and Christmas parties for foster children.

Students are often involved in volunteer work, Mrs. Purdy noted, and many Texas Tech University and Lubbock Christian College students do their field work through the DHR. Students from Tech's home and family life department often do volunteer work in family and vocational planning, and one LCC student, majoring in psychology, has done intensive work with an autistic child through the department.

Volunteers work with department staff members and enrich the services of the department rather than replace them, according to Miss Day.

"In many instances where services are needed which simply cannot be handled by paid staff, volunteers can provide good ideas and services for which no tax funds have been or are likely to be appropriated," she said.

A person who is interested in working as a volunteer can call the volunteer services division of the DHR and request to serve. He will be asked to complete an application and be interviewed by one of the coordinators to determine where his interests and abilities lie.

Interests and skills are then matched with a request from a social worker, and the volunteer and social worker work out the details of what the volunteer will be attempting to accomplish. The social worker is familiar with a particular case, and can help the volunteer in many ways. The volunteer performs the service, but the responsibility for what happens lies with the social worker.

Clients (those who are being aided by the DHR) can be a welfare recipient; a person who was pointed out by interested individuals, hospital or other organizations as having a certain need which the department might be able to fill; or someone who has called the department to ask for assistance.

Assistance requested might be counseling, instruction or special services, and the client has the right to refuse volunteer services; at that point, the case must be handled by a social worker entirely.

One example of volunteer service is instructing a young mother about nutrition after child neglect has been reported, to offer support and improve the parenting skills of the mother. Instruction in nutrition, proper health care, cleanliness and other facets of child care are offered, depending upon the mother's needs.

Volunteer service is not always individual in nature, and may be done by religious or service organizations. Groups seeking such projects can contact volunteer services for ideas or specific projects.

The interest of such people and their willingness to help open a door to people in real need, Miss Day said. She said that because of the position of the DHR in the community, its workers can often pinpoint needs in the community an ordinary citizen might never come across.

She added that when there is a need and no volunteer, the department inquires of various people, including heads of college departments or teachers, who might be able to direct them to suitable volunteers with the necessary skills. Then when coordinators receive a call about a problem or need, they can refer the client to an organization or person able to help.

Some available outlets for volunteers are Thanksgiving food baskets or family meals for the aged and Christmas parties for foster children and the elderly. Tutors will be needed when school starts, as well as emergency funds and food closets.

People are also needed to work with foster children in many capacities, and to visit the aged. Volunteers can work in medical clinics for the welfare children, and transportation to doctors, clinics and other places in the area is a simple, but vital, volunteer service.

The Junior League supports an Abusive Parent Council, which might interest some volunteers, and there is a need for day care center workers and babysitters for foster children during the Foster Parent Association's monthly meetings and occasional weekend workshops.

These activities are only a few of requested volunteer services. Many requests for services involve a specific case of need on a one-time basis, but some are a continuing situation.

Survey Finds Ethnic Groups Feel Identity Important

By TRACY EARLY

NEW YORK (WNS) — Among Italian, Jewish and Slavic American women of three generations studied recently, it was found they considered their ethnic identity important though their values are changing.

The youngest generation was found less likely to marry or find their closest friends within the ethnic group, but still to value ethnic foods, holidays and sense of community.

And though only 12 percent speak the ethnic language even occasionally, 53 percent say it is important for youth to learn it.

A report on the study, "Grandmothers, Mothers and Daughters" by project director Corinne Azen Krause, has just been released by the American Jewish Committee. The committee sponsored the study through its Institute on Pluralism and Group Identity.

For each of the three ethnic groups, Dr. Krause located 25 families that included a grown daughter, mother and maternal grandmother, but not necessarily living together. All lived in the Pittsburgh area.

Dr. Krause and her associates taped interviews with each of the women in their homes and got most of them to fill out questionaires.

As expected, the results showed major changes from generation to generation in attitudes toward women's roles.

While 84 percent of the grandmothers saw the role of a woman primarily in the traditional terms of wife and mother, almost the same percentage of daughters rejected that view. But only 21 percent of the daughters would place career over family.

The daughters were also much more likely to approve premarital sex, though even in this generation a majority disapproved.

Dr. Krause said the study was intended to provide help for educators wishing to improve ethnic studies, and for mental health professionals serving women of ethnic groups.

Grandmothers face special problems, she concluded, because they find their greatest satisfaction within the family, whereas the mothers, to some extent, and the daughters, much more, look to their own accomplishments for satisfaction.

"Mothers bear a major burden," says Dr. Krause in her report. "They represent the middle generation on whom the older and younger generations depend."

"Dissatisfied with their own opportunities for individual achievement, yet tied down by obligations to parents and children, these women are the candidates for anxiety and depression," she says.

The study found some differences among the ethnic groups. Slavic women placed greater importance on having houses of their own. Italian women were notable for valuing the extended family of cousins, nieces, nephews and so on. Jewish women placed greater emphasis on education, and changed less through the generations in the belief that a woman should marry someone of her own ethnic group.

Grandmothers were generally the most stoical in facing problems. The daughters worried more than their grandmothers, even about old age.

In general, the 75 families showed upward mobility. But Dr. Krause notes that the women participating in this study may not necessarily be typical, since it was likely that only those coping with American life reasonably well would agree to be interviewed.

British Medium Explains Work

PARIS (WNS) — Mrs. Jessie Nason of London is one of the busiest professional mediums in the world, holds private sittings, demonstrates her art on TV, has toured Europe and Canada.

"A medium is nothing more than a human telephone between two people," she says. "It's a fallacy to say we disturb the dead. If somebody doesn't want to come back, I can't bring them back."

Her current problem centers around the late Maurice Chevalier. As she explains, "Maurice Chevalier has dropped in to see me. He complains to me that people never sing his favorite French songs."

Seabrook Workers Begin Searching For Jobs

SEABROOK, N.H. (AP) — Hundreds of construction lamps still blaze through the night at the Seabrook atomic plant. But this week, many of the project's 1,800 workers, laid off when the site was closed, will crowd New England union halls looking for scarce jobs.

In the statehouse and in the offices of Public Service Co., other groups will gather to search for some way to overrule a federal order halting construction at the sprawling plant.

An eleventh hour attempt by labor unions to postpone a Nuclear Regulatory Commission stop-work order failed Friday just before the 6 p.m. deadline, when a U.S. District Court judge ruled the injunction was being sought in the wrong court.

Judge Louis Oberdofer dismissed the complaint, saying the matter should have been brought before the U.S. Court of Appeals.

The commission ordered the shutdown so a re-evaluation of the plant's location and of the system used to cool its twin-reactors could be made without the pressures of continuing construction.

Union and Public Service officials have told the workers repeatedly that the layoffs will be brief, but most workers say they are preparing for the worst.

"I'm like most of the other guys. I live from one paycheck to the next, and if that paycheck doesn't come, my family is in big trouble," said Tony Petre, a marine welder with three children.

"My wife and I talked about it all night. So I'll go down to the hall tomorrow and if there aren't any jobs, we'll pack up and move somewhere else."

Petre can afford to move from his Dover home. He has a highly skilled job that he says is "always in demand somewhere." He is living in a rented house with no lease.

Hundreds of others are not as lucky.

Workers who flocked to New England three years ago when the Seabrook project was announced came expecting eight solid years of work, many bought houses.

A large number, such as laborers, electricians and carpenters, say the job market is flooded with their skills and there is no place for them to go.

"I pour concrete, but so do a thousand other guys who are out of work," said a 34-year-old man from Manchester. "I've got a $44,000 mortgage on a house I just bought. I'll lose that house next month if Seabrook doesn't reopen because I know I can't find another job."

One worker who had heard the Nuclear Regulatory Commission had scheduled a prehearing conference Tuesday on alternative New England sites for the Seabrook plant said he was sure the plant would never be built.

"Hearings, appeals, law suits — all they do is talk," he said bitterly. "The country's out of oil, New England needs energy, I'm out of a job and instead of letting us build Seabrook and solve those problems, the government would rather talk."

Trend Toward Early Retirement Raises Concern Among Experts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Thirty years ago, nearly half of all men 65 and over were employed or seeking jobs. Today, among people 65 and over, only one man in five and one woman in twelve are in the workforce.

But two Cabinet members and other experts question whether the nation can afford the trend toward early retirement — especially when the people born in the post World War II baby boom become senior citizens.

Witnesses at recent hearings of the Senate Special Committee on Aging testified on the percentages of those working over 65, and expressed cocern about the Social Security costs and the loss of skilled workers to early retirement.

Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph Califano told the committee other changes also are taking place which may require a reconsideration of the whole U.S. policy on work and retirement.

People are living longer, he noted. In 1940, the average life expectancy at birth was 63.5 years — now it is 69 for men, 77 for women. Three-fourths of the population now reaches 65 and, once there, lives on the average to 81.

"We are at the dawn of the first four-generation society in the history of our nation," said Califano.

The baby boom following World War II, Califano noted, will become a "senior boom" in the early 21st century. In 1940, 7 percent of the population was 65 or older; today it is 11 percent; by 2030 it will be nearly 20 percent.

Today six active workers support one in retirement. By 2030, the ratio is expected to be 3-to-1, and under present trends, the federal government will have to spend $635 billion by 2025 — up from $112 billion this year — for Social Security, other pensions, Medicare, welfare, food stamps and various other services for the elderly.

This would be a growth from 24 percent to 40 percent of total federal outlays.

Dr. Harold Sheppard, director of the Center on Work and Aging of the American Institutes for Research, said the coming senior boom means that by 2000, there will be 8 million Americans over 80 — 1.7 million more than had been projected as late as 1971.

How will the increasing proportion of Americans in their early 60s in the next century support these octogenarians if they themselves are retired, he asked.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said it may be difficult to ensure older Americans a comfortable retirement by shifting money through Social Security, welfare and other programs.

He said it will be necessary to expand employment opportunities for the elderly.

Congress took one step in that direction last April when it raised from 65 to 70 the age at which a private employer can require a person to retire solely because of age, and removed the upper age limit of 70 for most federal workers.

It also agreed to allow older Americans to earn larger amounts of money without losing Social Security benefits, and to increase a worker's retirement benefits by 3 percent for each year of work past 65.

Population Panel Holds Hearings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Earlier this year, while the big-name committees of Congress ruminated over weighty world issues, a less heralded panel was quietly hearing about the most fundamental global question of all — population.

The new House Select Committee on Population plans hearings next month on the controversial contraceptive depo-provera, and in a newsletter the panel's two leaders reviewed the findings of 33 days of hearings it has held during the past six months on population trends and family planning.

Among the witnesses were the late John D. Rockefeller III talking about teen-age pregnancies, anti-abortion leader Mildred Jefferson likening abortion to a step toward genocide, Sargent Shriver talking about the ethics of contraception and the need for "wealth control not birth control," and women's health crusader Barbara Seaman suggesting research on male contraceptive techniques.

"We were told that our cities might be better places to live and work if they hold fewer people," said Chairman James Scheuer, D-N.Y., in the newsletter to committee members.

Ranking minority member John Erlenborn, R-Ill., said he was more concerned about population growth in less-developed countries and divided opinion among experts as to whether a nation's population policy should be set before or after national economic goals.

"Again and again witnesses from the developing countries cautioned that aid must mean exactly what it says: aid — not the imposition of our views of family planning on people of another nation," Scheuer said.

Agreeing, Erlenborn said: "Less-developed countries must generate their own population policies. For one thing they have concerns about their sovereignty, and in the last analysis, 'genocide.'"

The chairman, however, dismissed the argument that limiting population in black and poor countries amounts to genocide, a notion he said is spread by radical political elements, not by national leaders or a country's women.

"It appears that family planning services are very much desired. The real question appears to be what kind of services would be most effective and how they can best be delivered."

Erlenborn said there is no prescription for national population questions, but there is a need for "informed decisions" by individual parents.

"We can't say that now people should have 1.8 children and later, as we discover that we are below replacement level say, 'now have 2.8 because we are shrinking.' we can't view population growth as a spigot. It doesn't work that way — we can't turn it off.

Ed Chauncey 795-5506 home 793-2009

It's hard to believe that you can have almost 3,000 sq. ft. of living area for under $50,000. This 3 or 4 BR/2 1/2 bath home is near Monterey-distinctive and unusual.
Elizabeth Bigness 795-5506 home 795-2328

You can own a John Mosser home in an established area for only $55,000! This quality-built home has 4 BR/2 baths and a mansard roof.
Nita Kiesling 795-5506 home 799-5928

Touch football anyone? There's plenty of space for it between the pool and horse stables. A little imaginative remodeling could make this house a palace on 1 3/4 acres in Robalet Heights. Price recently reduced.

Storm Leaves One Dead, 60 Hurt

EAST BRADY, Pa. (AP) — A violent thunderstorm swept through the Allegheny River valley following a four-day heat wave and left a path of destruction.

One man was killed while trying to dock his boat. About 60 persons were injured, mostly from fallen debris, when a funnel cloud dipped suddenly into the valley late Sunday afternoon.

The National Weather Service said the storm probably was a tornado, but they could not confirm it.

"I figured a normal storm was coming and all of a sudden it was like being in the bottom of a swimming pool," said George Wolf, owner of the KOA Campground at nearby Knox.

"The wind was so strong it bent two-inch steel pipes to the ground," he said, pointing to downed flagpoles at the battered campground.

About 30 camping trailers, some turned upside down, were demolished or heavily damaged at the campground, located in Clarion County. Some 1,000 persons were camping at the site when the storm hit, pelting the grounds with golf-ball sized hail.

Two women were pinned for more than a half hour when their tent-trailer was lifted upside down. They were hospitalized with broken arms, and six other campers were reported slightly injured.

The storm, which touched down about 5:30 p.m., crossed several Pennsylvania counties, including Clarion, Jefferson, Armstrong and Centre. Power lines were knocked down, trees were uprooted, mobile homes were overturned and roofs were blown off.

Killed was Charles Schockey, 37, of Butler. He and a companion were tying up a boat when the funnel appeared.

"One hit the deck and the other was swept in the water," said state police Capt. Robert Palladino.

Most of the injured were treated and released at five area hospitals.

Four persons were injured, one seriously, when a pontoon boat capsized on a creek near East Brady. Another woman was injured when the roof of her house was blown off.

State police, hampered by power and phone outages and blocked roadways, were unable to assess immediately the extent of the damage.

Ed Beck was boating on the river with his girlfriend when the storm arrived. "The next thing you know I saw a misting mass of water like a water spout and I said, 'Let's get out of here.'"

Beck pulled his boat to shore and ran to a mobile home 50 yards away. "Trees started coming down everywhere. It looked like it was raining trees," he said.

Armstrong County sheriff Joseph Frick said, "As far as we know, everyone is accounted for of the people who live here. But who knows? We may get calls later in the week about people missing."

Brookville, in adjacent Jefferson County, requested assistance from the Civil Defense and Red Cross, state police said.

"The roads are closed. Nobody is allowed in or out of the town," said trooper Paulette Cowell.

"There is extensive damage. There's no telephone, no electricity and as far as we know, there's no reports of major injuries or any deaths," she said.

In State College, a 30-foot section of roofing was torn off the Nittany Mall, a shopping plaza.

The Penn State University weather station reported winds were clocked up to 60 miles an hour.

MANGLED MONEY — Doris Hanford, standing, watches Ada Grant piece together damaged money in Washington. 'Mangled Money' Creates Puzzles

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID

WASHINGTON (AP) — "No," says Doris Hanford emphatically, she does not do jigsaw puzzles as a hobby.

"I did like them at one time," she admits, but she has lost the taste in 27 years of piecing together torn, burned, mangled and mutilated money.

You see, the government replaces damaged money — dollar for dollar — as long as you have at least half of each bill.

And it's Mrs. Hanford's job, as manager of the examining branch of the mutilated currency division of the Division of Currency Claims, to verify how much money should be replaced when damaged bills are brought in.

For example, one man arrived carrying a package of money pieces and asked for a replacement.

He had hid the money in a shotgun, forgot it was there and — you guessed it — blasted fragments of federal reserve notes all over a field.

Mrs. Hanford began piecing the bits together, sent the man back to the field to search for more fragments and eventually reconstructed more than half of most of the bills.

If an individual with currency fragments, or Mrs. Hanford and her staff, cannot reconstruct more than half of a bill, then there is no reimbursement.

"We receive money that has been burned, buried, laundered, bleached, subjected to natural disasters, contaminated by chemicals or otherwise," Mrs. Hanford commented.

There was even a case — "before my time" she points out — in which a farmer sent in the stomach of a cow that had eaten his wallet.

Bleached money can be a problem, but the government pays if Mrs. Hanford and her staff of 30 can determine that it was the real thing and can read enough to determine the value.

"We have had other things sent in claiming to be genuine notes, which were not," she said, noting that such action would qualify as counterfeiting if it were intentional.

"But of course, often the people sending it in just don't know whether it's money or not, and they want to find out," she said.

The mangled money can be taken to local banks for forwarding or it can be sent directly to Mrs. Hanford's office, in which case she recommends registering the letter and wrapping it securely.

Mrs. Hanford's office examines between 50,000 and 52,000 cases of mangled money a year. In 1977 the government paid out about $10 million in reimbursements.

Report Says Firm Aware Of Defects

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — The Firestone Tire Rubber Co. discovered serious problems with some of its steel-belted radial tires in tests three years ago, but did not report the findings to the government, according to a published report.

The Akron Beacon-Journal said in its Sunday editions that the company was aware as far back as 1975 that a significant number of its steel-belted radial passenger car tires may have been defective.

A computer printout of test results from 1975 shows that 56.5 percent of the tires tested by Firestone from a warehouse stock awaiting shipment to General Motors failed to meet a critical government high-speed performance standard, the newspaper reported.

Firestone maintains that its tires are safe and reliable. The company also has released a statement discounting the significance of the computer test results.

A failure rate of more than 50 percent is beyond tolerable limits, according to Frank Armstrong, head of the Standards Enforcement Division of the National Highway Safety Administration.

A lawyer with the federal agency said a manufacturer is required to inform the secretary of transportation if it finds its automotive product contains a defect or does not comply with "an applicable federal motor vehicle safety standard."

Firestone said in its statement that the 1975 computer printout summary "relates to research and testing of the kind that covers many matters and goes on regularly as part of our over-all research and development activities." The company also maintained that the test results did not have to be submitted to the federal government.

The Transportation Department announced earlier this month that it had made a preliminary determination that a safety-related defect exists in Firestone 500 Steel Belted Radials and in identical tires manufactured by the company under the brand names Super Shell Steel Radial and Grappler Radial, 8,000 series.

It said at the time that the company should "immediately issue a recall of these tires" and scheduled a public hearing on the question next month.

The department's National Highway Safety Traffic Administration began investigating the tires in February because of complaints about blowouts and other problems with the tire. Congressional hearings also focused on troubles with the Firestone 500s.

Officers Find Dazed Woman

NEW YORK (UPI) — A 29-year-old woman carrying financial statements indicating assets of $22 million was found wandering in a daze on an expressway just outside Kennedy Airport Sunday morning, police reported.

A Port Authority police spokesman identified the woman as Linda Duke of Atlanta.

The spokesman said the woman was found walking on the Van Wyck Expressway at the entrance to the airport by two officers about 7:30 a.m.

She was carrying expensive jewelry and had $10 in cash and three $20 travelers' checks in a shoulder bag, the spokesman said.

But in a green canvas flight bag, the spokesman said, the woman had "bank statements, stock papers and other financial statements" indicating assets of $22 million and a flight ticket issued by Alitalia Airlines.

The spokesman said the woman was "in a daze" and was taken to the City Medical Center for observation. A hospital spokeswoman said the woman was listed in fair condition.

Warren Burger Pushes For More Judgeships

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chief Justice Warren Burger, terming the situation "critical," is urging Congress to swiftly enact legislation that would create more federal judgeships.

"If the new judges are not authorized by the close of the present session, there is a real possibility that trials of civil cases in some districts may stop completely," Burger said Sunday in a letter to the chairmen of the House and Senate judiciary committees.

"Because the critical situation which has developed over the past eight years is now reaching crisis proportions, I urge your support for a swift enactment of the Omnibus Judgeship Bill," Burger wrote.

Legislation on the federal judiciary is in the final stages, with the House and Senate passing somewhat differing versions.

A joint conference committee has agreed to add 117 district judgeships to the current 398, and 35 circuit judgeships to the current 97.

The committee meets Wednesday to continue working on remaining differences, one of which deals with splitting the 5th Circuit.

A congressional spokesman said the legislation is expected to pass both houses promptly when the conference committee's work is finished.

The spokesman noted the bill establishes Nov. 1 as the effective date of the legislation, so it would be next year before new judges actually are named.

Transit Walkout Enters Fifth Day In Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — A relative trickle of buses and subway trains returned to service today as wildcat strikers continued to cripple the capital's public transit system. The limited return to work did little to alleviate traffic jams of commuters forced to use their cars.

The walkout entered its fifth day as bus drivers, subway operators and mechanics defied a federal judge's back-to-work order and advice of their own union leaders to return.

In the first reported violent incident, authorities said a firebomb was thrown at a bus in southwest Washington today but missed its target and caused no damage or injuries.

Cody Pfanstiehl, spokesman for the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority, said about 200 of the system's 1,600 buses were on the streets for the morning rush hour.

Subway service also was in operation for the first time since Thursday as a small segment between Silver Spring, Md., and northeast Washington reopened.

Pfanstiehl said about 150 of the buses in service were operating from the transit authority's Arlington, Va., garage, which serves routes primarily in the Virginia suburbs. Seven other garages were virtually shut down.

On Saturday, U.S. District Judge Louis F. Oberdorfer ordered the workers to operate the buses and trains or face contempt of court citations. He threatened the strikers with fines and jail sentences.

With temperatures hitting 100 degrees and a pollution alert in effect Sunday, about 400 transit workers voted to continue the walkout.

They said they won't return until they're paid a 20-cent-an-hour cost-of-living increase due earlier this month, an issue that's scheduled for arbitration.

The workers also want amnesty for 180 Metro employees suspended by the transit system when they first walked off the job Thursday.

Oberdorfer has given the union and Metro until today to show him an arbitration timetable that will settle the money issue by Aug. 6.

The system, which serves Washington and its suburbs in Virginia and Maryland, has about 4,500 drivers and other members of the Amalgamated Transit Workers union. A half-million commuters use the system on weekdays.

Osborne Still Hopes For Hiccup Cure

ANTHON, Iowa (AP) — Charles Osborne has had hiccups for 56 of his 84 years, but he hasn't given up hope of finding a cure.

"I'd give everything I got in the world if I could get rid of them," says Osborne, including the notoriety that sprang from a 1936 appearance on Robert Ripley's "Believe It or Not" radio show and put him in the Guinness Book of World Records.

"I don't know what it would be like not to have them," Osborne said. "I get so sore jerking all the time."

A veteran of many tries at a cure, Osborne is now being treated by Dr. Terence Anthoney, an associate professor at the Southern Illinois University School of Medicine who has been interested in hiccups since he was a medical student.

Osborne's hiccups began on a farm near Union, Neb., in 1922.

"I was butchering hogs and hauling a 350-pound hog. ... While I was hanging the hog up I started to hiccup," he said.

He was taken to Omaha, Neb., for treatment by his employer. They stopped only to start again once he got home.

"I made four trips to Omaha. But every time I got back home they would start again. I've had them ever since," Osborne said.

Osborne continued to work as a farm laborer then bought his own farm. He retired in 1961. His wife died March 12.

He said the longest he has gone without hiccups was for 50 hours a few weeks ago. But except for brief reprieves, the hiccups are with him day and night at the rate of 40 times a minute, interrupting his sleep and ruining his taste for solid food.

"I don't know what to make of it," said Anthoney, who said he is treating Osborne with various drugs.

Anthoney said hiccups can be caused by irritation from many parts of the body, but so far he has not pinpointed any cause in Osborne's case.

Indians Fail To See President

WASHINGTON UPI — The Longest Walk could end in an armed struggle to prevent "spiritual, cultural, political and physical genocide," says one of the leaders of the week-long Indian protest.

Walk leader Vernon Bellecourt said he does not want to detract from the "spiritual nature" of the walk, but believes "the whole world should know the Indian populations of North and South America have an unquestionable right to armed struggle in the interest of their survival."

At a benefit Sunday, Bellecourt said: "In view of our condition in life under colonial domination — we are faced with spiritual, cultural, political and physical genocide — the red civilization in both North and South America is in its death throes."

He said Indians who participated in walk from San Francisco that started Feb. 11 will return to their reservations with "seeds planted in their hearts and minds" and a first-hand knowledge of obstacles Indians face in Washington.

"The seeds will grow," Bellecourt said. "We will organize our struggle. We will continue to make the international community, through the United Nations and other organizations, aware that the Indians of North and South America remain literally in the jaws of the colonial beast."

The walk was successful, he said, in focusing attention on the plight of Indians in the United States at a time when President Carter is protesting human rights violations abroad.

The Longest Walk was intend to recall the forced marches of Indians westward as the country was colonized by Europeans.

The group is concerned about 11 bills introduce in Congress, particularly the Native American Equal Rights and Opportunities Act, that would eliminate all treaties, reservations and federal Indian programs.

But Bellecourt and other leaders said the walk drew little commitment from Congress, even though the black and Hispanic congressional caucuses supported their cause.

As for coping with the federal bureaucracy — which the Indians call "white tape" — another walk leader, Bill Wampahpah of Oakland, Calif., said "many doors have been opened to us." But the Indians were unable to see President Carter.

National Park Service officials said the demonstrations came off peacefully with the only incident a dog bite. The 1972 "Trail of Broken Treaties Caravan," with many of the same Indian leaders, ended in the takeover of a federal building and $2 million damage.

A tepee village was set up near the Washington Monument for a small group of the Indians, but most of them stayed at a camp site 12 miles from downtown Washington.

Pageant Promotes Peace, Man Says

ACAPULCO, Mexico UPI — The president of the Miss Universe contest says tonight's beauty pageant will do more to promote world peace than the United Nations.

Harold Glasser, president of Miss Universe Inc., said Sunday the contest's estimated worldwide television audience of 600 million "will see that the contestants are no different from them. They will find that, although men and women are different, we're all just human beings.

"This may sound pompus but the pageant does more to promote world peace than the United Nations where there is just debate and controversy. At least we're trying," said Glasser, who organized the first Miss Universe Pageant 27 years ago.

Between 60 million and 70 million Americans are expected to tune into the telecast from this jet set Pacific resort beginning at 8 p.m. CDT.

The winner will be chosen from among 75 contestants on the basis of beauty, charm, poise and charisma.

She will be crowned with a silver coronet and showered with gifts worth $50,000.

Glasser would not estimate how much profit Miss Universe Inc. would make this year, but said, "I will be in my opinion the greatest show we've ever had although they, the beauties, are somewhat behind in their choreography."

Twelve semifinalists will be chosen from a week's modeling competition in swimsuits and evening gowns and interviews with the judging panel.

After the beauties dance Mexican arrangements, the 11 judges will select five finalists and then the winner on the basis of new modeling and personality interviews by Master of Ceremonies Bob Barker.

Designer Robert Cazalli, one of four male judges, said he will vote for the contestant "who gives me the most feeling of excitement."

The other judges include actress Ursula Andress, opera star Anna Moffo, singer Melba Moore, former Indonesia first lady Dewi Sukarno, movie director Milos Foreman, Broadway director David Merrick and Mexico comedian Mario Moreno, better known as "Cantinflas."

Hoffa Family Encouraged By Recent Convictions

DETROIT (UPI) — Despite recent FBI success in related cases, James R. Hoffa's family says justice will be served only with convictions specifically for the missing Teamster leader's abduction and presumed slaying.

James P. Hoffa, the family's spokesman since his father vanished on July 30, 1975, said in a recent interview he is encouraged by convictions won against several organized crime figures linked to the Hoffa case.

"But I hope the FBI renews its efforts to solve the case with regard to the disappearance of my father and not think justice has been done by putting certain suspects in jail in other cases," he said.

"We will only be satisfied when the people who did this thing to my father are brought to justice for that case. The public demands that and the Teamsters Union demands that."

The most notable related case involved Anthony "Tony Pro" Provenzano, a New Jersey Teamsters official and one of two reputed organized crime figures Hoffa said he was meeting for lunch the day he disappeared.

Provenzano was sentenced to life in prison June 21 in New York for ordering the 1961 murder of Anthony "Three Fingers" Castellito, a rival in Teamsters Local 560 in Union City, N.J., whose body never was found.

Others linked to the Hoffa case also have been the targets of court action the FBI said stemmed directly from its investigative work.

"These are all direct spinoffs from our Hoffa investigation," an FBI source said. "It shows we haven't been sitting around the past three years."

Hoffa, a 37-year-old attorney, admitted his impression of the FBI's efforts and those of his family have changed in the past few months and he concedes "the FBI is trying."

Hit Tonight Will Give Rose Tie

MONTREAL (AP) — Pete Rose is glad to be moving to New York tonight to attempt to tie the consecutive-game hitting record after surviving the daylight of Olympic Stadium.

"I've had some great and wonderful things happen to me in New York," said Rose, now one game shy of the league record of 37 set by Tommy Holmes of the Boston Braves in 1945. The major league record is 56 games by Joe DiMaggio of the American League's New York Yankees in 1941.

Rose ran his streak to 36 games Sunday with a single and double before driving in Cincinnati's winning run with a 14th-inning sacrifice fly in in a 5-4 victory over Montreal.

Rose continued his hot streak in difficult conditions — most players agree that the ball is tough to pick up coming into the batter during daylight hours at Olympic Stadium.

"This is the toughest ballpark in the league to hit a ball in," he noted. "I've talked to all the Montreal players, and they don't like to play day games here. It's tough to see when the sun's out and tough to see when the sun's in.

"One time today the sun went down and that's when everybody got all their runs. That's when (Dan) Driessen hit the home run and that's when they came back with their three-run inning."

Rose won it for reliever Manny Sarmiento, 8-6, in the 14th after pinch-hitter Rick Auerbach drew a leadoff walk against Expo reliever Wayne Twitchell, 3-9. Auerbach went to second on a wild pitch and was sacrificed to third by Dave Concepcion. Ken Griffey reached on an infield single before Rose powered the ball to Valentine in right field.

NEVER SATISFIED — Pro golfer Jack Nicklaus grimaces after missing a putt on the 14th green during the final round the Philadelphia Golf Classic Sunday. Nicklaus managed to hold on to a one-stroke lead, set a course record of 270 for 72 holes and pocket $50,000 in the tournament held in suburban Philadelphia. (AP Laserphoto)

Hollis Stacy Takes Title

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Hollis Stacy, happily clutching a second consecutive U.S. Women's Open Golf Championship, had no illusions about herself.

"I'm not Chris Evert and never will be. I'm not Chris Evert or Jack Nicklaus. They really dominate. I'm not that type at all," she said.

It may be difficult to convince veteran JoAnne Carner or record-setting Sally Little of South Africa, 1-shot losers to the gritty little Miss Stacy in the rainy, stormy Sunday that provided one of the most exciting of all the women's tournaments.

There was the early, spectacular 6-under-par 65 — by 2 shots the best score ever fired in this tournament — put on the board by the pretty, slender Miss Little.

There was the steady, grinding pressure exerted by the veteran Miss Carner, playing in the last twosome with Miss Stacy.

But in the end it was the fiercely competitive, almost combative, Miss Stacy who won it with a last-hole scrambling par, climaxed by a 4-5 foot putt that sent her leaping and screaming with joy into the arms of her caddy, Bill Kurro.

"I'm standing over that putt and I said, 'Well, I just have to make this, don't I?'" she said later. And she rammed it into the back of the cup.

It finished off a final round of 1-over-par 72 and enabled her to make a successful defense of the title she won a year ago in Minnesota. She finished with a 289 total, 5-over par on the rain-soaked, 6,115-yard Country Club of Indianapolis course.

Miss Carner, twice a winner of this title and a five-time women's national amateur champion, and Miss Little were a single shot back at 290.

Miss Carner, who led on two separate occasion and was tied four times during the final round, had a 72 that also included an amazing save on the last hole.

Had Miss Stacy missed that last putt — and it can happen in the nerves and pressure of what she calls "the U.S. Opens" — it would have gone to a three-way playoff.

She never faltered, never hesitated.

"I come from a family of 10 kids," said the 24-year-old from Savannah, Ga. "When there's nine other kids around in the same family, you learn to be competitive in a hurry."

It appeared the title chase, in a round twice interrupted by storms, was going to be a race only between Miss Stacy and Miss Carner, playing in the last twosome. But Miss Little, playing 1½ hours in front of them, one-putted 13 times and put her record score on the board early. At that time, she was two shots back.

"I don't want to wish anything bad on anyone, but I sure would like to have a chance," she said and then settled down to watch while the other two began drifting back to her.

From a tie, Miss Carner missed the green on the par-3 18th and bogeyed. "The critical mistake," she said.

End Of An Era?

ALL HUNTERS AND shooters must have felt a twinge of sorrow Sunday when they saw that little story on one of the back pages of the Avalanche-Journal's sports section. The story quoted Otis Chandler, owner of Outdoor Life magazine, as saying the future of big-game hunting is bleak and that his publication will shift its emphasis to photography, camping and backpacking.

This is not really news to informed sportsmen, of course. They have watched in dismay the last 20 years as vast areas of Africa and Asia have been closed to foreigners. Game herds have dwindled and difficulties in obtaining permits have increased tremendously.

Even in our own country, population growth and urban sprawl have had an effect on hunting. Economic prosperity has made it possible for a lot more nimrods to go afield for big game, but the big-game country is getting smaller all the time.

Then there is the growing campaign against hunting, pressed by groups who consider the sport cruel, wasteful or even immoral.

Chandler is right — the outlook for big-game hunting is indeed bleak.

OPPONENTS OF HUNTING, or even target shooting, have received a lot of help from some thoughtless or criminal types in the past. There have been persons carrying rifles or shotguns who have been lacking in sportsmanship and common intelligence. West Texas ranchers and farmers have seen their livestock hit by careless shots, their windmills and tanks riddled by vandals, and their gates left open by intruders.

No wonder that the "posted" and "no hunting" signs began sprouting all over the Southwest region right after World War II. It was a matter of protecting life and property.

Even residents of the Rocky Mountain states have had their problems with persons shooting from the highways, trespassing on private land and violating game regulations. Many an antelope has been wounded, then not pursued, by someone shooting from a vehicle.

Game hogs are found at all levels and in all areas, it seems.

IF THE ERA of big-game hunting is coming to a close, as indicated, it will be a shame. A properly conducted hunt in a beautiful wilderness region is the experience of a lifetime. This scribbler has been fortunate enough to trek through some of the most magnificent mountain country in North America —the Canadian Rockies, the Teton Wilderness in Wyoming and the primitive area of Central Idaho — and no Super Bowl can compare with the excitement of tracking a Bighorn ram across a snowy peak.

In 1959, three of us flew to Calgary for what was one of the last of the old-time horseback hunts in Alberta. There were three guides, a wrangler and an outfitter who also served as cook. Eight saddle horses and 20 pack horses made an impressive sight as they tramped through the forests and forded the rivers in the wilderness area just northeast of Banff Park.

We spent three weeks hunting rams and never even saw another party of hunters. We never even saw a game warden or park ranger, either. It was that remote and that wild.

It would have been a great outing even without hunting.

THERE WILL CONTINUE to be some big-game hunting for the next decade or two, hopefully, because of the strict conservation measures in the western states and Canada. But it is going to be increasingly difficult to get licenses or permits, and increasingly expensive.

Deer hunting may be with us always, since the little whitetail has shown a remarkable ability to adapt to civilization. They are found even near the big cities of the East and on the West Coast. During the dry season in Southern California, deer come down out of the hills to browse on the lawns and look for a drink of water.

Whitetail deer may not be big game in the classic tradition, but the way things are going we may be lucky to have the little critters around!

Hunting is deeply ingrained in man. For thousands of years, man existed by his ability to spear, club or snare game. That instinct is slow to die.

The world is changing and the time may come when hunting is not possible. Then we will have lost something for which there is no substitute.

Big Jack Racks Up 66th Win

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Jack Nicklaus just keeps adding to the legend.

Professional golf's premier player won the $250,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic Sunday. It was his 66th tour victory, second only to Sam Snead with 84.

The $50,000 first prize made it eight straight years that the one-time "fat kid from Ohio" has earned at least $200,000. It was the 16th straight year he's won at least $100,000, boosting his lifetime tour earnings to $3,336,343.

What is there left to maintain his golf incentive?

The 38-year-old Nicklaus had the answer Sunday after he shot a 3-under-par final-round 68 for a record 72-hole total of 270 to beat Gil Morgan by one stroke over the Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course.

He wants the grand slam of golf — the Masters, U.S. Open, British Open and PGA all in one year. Even he doubts it will ever be done, but it's all that's left in the Nicklaus world of golf.

His longing was voiced sort of indirectly Sunday. He was asked if he would be back next year to defend the Philadelphia championship he's won three times.

"I've always defended a championship," Nicklaus said.

Then it was pointed out that the Philadelphia Classic in 1979 falls between the British Open and the PGA. The Masters, of course, is in April.

Nicklaus hesitated, then added, "Well, let's say I'll be back if I haven't won the first three (majors).

The closest any golfer ever came to the grand slam was Ben Hogan in 1953. He won three, choosing for some reason not to play in the PGA.

Nicklaus went home for a few day's rest and a reunion with his family. Then, he's off to Oakmont, near Pittsburgh, to practice for the PGA, which starts Aug. 3.

At Whitemarsh, Nicklaus built a three-stroke lead after two rounds, tying the course record the second day with a 64. He slipped to a 1-over-par 72 on the third round, falling one stroke off the pace. Then, Sunday, he caught up with Bruce Lietzke, passed him and held on to win.

Lietzke shot 74 the final day, stumbling with a double bogey and bogey on the front nine.

When it was over, Nicklaus nipped Morgan, who was two strokes ahead of Jerry Pate and Hale Irwin, each with 273.

Birdie putts on the 11th and 12th Sunday were listed as the key to victory by Nicklaus, although the winning shot was a 30-foot downhill putt on the 16th for a bird. Morgan couldn't make that one up.

After the top four came Hubert Green, who had a hole-in-one on the final round and finished at 274, and Mark Hayes, Lee Elder, Miller Barber and Lietzke, all at 275.

Austin Wins TAAF Crown

It took an "if" game and a change of sites, but the Austin Bruisers captured the state TAAF girls softball championship Sunday.

The Bruisers blanked the Fort Worth Dusters 10-0 in the championship battle at Moose Hood Park at 24th and Q.

The tournament was sponsored by the City Parks & Recreation Department, and Saturday's portion of the 16-team tournament was held at Mackenzie Park. But rains Sunday made the fields there unplayable and the tournament had to be moved.

Sunday morning, the Bruisers knocked the Dusters into the loser's bracket with a 12-0 shutout. But the Dusters battled back, nipping Alice VFW 9-7 in eight innings. Then the Dusters turned the tables on the Bruisers by a 13-3 count. That set up their third game of the day.

Sunday's earlier games: Hurst Saints 21, Wichita Falls Tomahawks 4; VFW 6, Fort Worth Bandits 3; Saints 19, Corpus Christi Cardinals 5; VFW 4, CC Hustlers 3.

Red Sox Struggling To Maintain Lead In AL East

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The Kansas City Royals and Boston Red Sox have passed this way before. The Royals are enjoying the "deja vu" effect but, for the Red Sox, it's like the recurrence of a nightmare.

The Royals won their ninth straight game Sunday, completing a three-game sweep of Boston with a 7-3 victory. The triumph moved Kansas City three games ahead of California in the American League West.

The Red Sox, meanwhile, dropped their fourth game in a row and seventh in their last 12. Their AL East lead over Milwaukee, once a solid 10 games, shrunk to a shakier five games when the Brewers topped Texas 17-8.

Elsewhere in the American League, the New York Yankees beat the Chicago White Sox 3-1, Baltimore bested Minnesota 8-5, Oakland was a 5-3 victor over Toronto and California and Detroit swapped a pair of 4-3 wins, the Angels taking the nightcap after the Tigers rallied in the last inning to win the opener.

"This is what happened to us last year," said Royals Manager Whitey Herzog. "We had that 10-game streak and swept Baltimore and Boston. This time we beat Milwaukee, New York, Texas and Boston. Some of them came on the road last year like now, too."

That 10-game streak was quickly followed by a 16-game skein which clinched the Western Division title for the Royals in 1977.

"I thought that 10-game streak was a lot more important than the 16-game streak we had," added Herzog.

As Kansas City took control of the West once again, the Red Sox might have been looking back at last season, when they built a solid midseason lead before wilting down the stretch.

"I think their club has more to do with it than my club," said Boston Manager Don Zimmer of the three losses in Kansas City, where Boston has won only two games in three years. "They're good hitters and have speed. And they keep the ball out of the air. That's a big thing on this artifical turf. It's a different story in Boston."

George Brett had a double and two singles, scoring twice and driving in a run, and Marty Pattin relieved starter Rich Gale with two outs and the bases loaded in the third and promptly set down 19 of the final 20 batters to even his record at 2-2.

"That's probably the best I've ever done against them," said Pattin. "I'd have to go back and check to make sure, but in my mind it's the best. I've had some bad ones against them, too. Last year they hit three homers against me in a game. Nobody likes that."

Brewers 17, Rangers 8

Milwaukee set club records for most hits and runs in a game as they swept Texas, sending the Rangers to their sixth straight loss. Larry Hisle hit his 23rd homer of the season and added three singles while scoring three runs and knocking in four. Sal Bando homered and knocked in five runs and scored four with three hits. Gorman Thomas also homered, his 20th of the year.

"I believe miracles can happen," said Milwaukee Manager George Bamberger, "and our catching the Red Sox would be a miracle.

"Our guys think they can win, but when we went into spring training I would have taken .500 for the season. It would have been improvement because Milwaukee's never had a .500 season.

"I think we can catch Boston because of the way the guys are going about their jobs. They have proven to me they believe in themselves.

"But we're not as good as the Sox. They are more experienced. But we'll be better in a couple of years."

Yankees 3, White Sox 1

New York stretched its winning streak to five games and handed Chicago its ninth straight loss as Ed Figueroa and Rich Gossage combined for an eight-hitter.

Chris Chambliss doubled home Lou Piniella from first in the ninth inning for the winning run and Graig Nettles' squeeze bunt scored Chambliss.

"This is the kind of pitching we've been waiting for and it could turn us around," said Martin.

Reggie Jackson returned to the team after serving a five-day suspension handed down by Martin last Monday. Jackson, who was suspended for diregarding the manager's orders in an at-bat against Kansas City, did not play against the White Sox.

"I had no intentions of using him," said Martin. "I don't know if he can swing a bat."

Orioles 8, Twins 5

Lee May hit his first homer since June 26 and Jim Palmer won his 12th game despite not having his best stuff.

"I hope I've broken out of this drought," said May, who has 16 homers this season. "I don't know what's been happening."

Palmer was elated at winning even though not being at his best.

"You've got to be happy any time you win," he said. "This obviously wasn't one of my better performances."

Palmer gave up seven hits and four runs in seven innings. Don Stanhouse picked up his 13th save in relief.

A's 5, Blue Jays 3

Mitchell Page led off the seventh with his 11th home run of the season and Oakland got another run in the inning when Mario Guerrero doubled and was singled in by Taylor Duncan.

Before the game, A's owner Charlie Finley said he intended to keep the club and was not pursuing any potential buyers.

Tigers 4-3, Angels 3-4

Detroit won the opener with a three-run rally in the bottom of the ninth. Dave LaRoche walked Aurelio Rodriguez with the bases loaded to force in the tying run and Dyar Miller's first pitch in relief of LaRoche sailed off catcher Brian Downing's glove for a passed ball to score the winner.

Joe Rudi, who had a two-run double in the first game, homered in the nightcap in support of Nolan Ryan, 5-8. Ryan struck out 11 and hurled a four-hitter. One of those hits was a three-run homer by Rusty Staub.

Little League Teams Bid For District Honors

By SCOTT SUDDUTH
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Four all-star teams will gather at the Southwest diamond at Maxey Park tonight and all will be seeking the District 2 championship and another step up the Little League playoff ladder.

Dixie and Northwest LL all-stars from Lubbock will join Post and Wolfforth — winners in last week's area tourneys — will fight it out for the crown and the right to advance to the bidistrict playoffs against the Abilene area winner in Snyder July 29.

Semifinal action is scheduled tonight at 6:30 p.m. and the championship tilt will be Tuesday at 7:30 p.m., preceeded by a third-place battle. Tonight at 5:30, Northwest, the Area I champ, will take on Wolfforth, the Area III winner, and Dixie, the Area II champion, will go against Post, the Area IV representative at 7:30 p.m.

Dixie advanced to the tournament with a 4-2 victory over the Southwest all-stars, and Northwest downed the Eastern all-stars 18-12 for the Area I championship.

Post won over North Lynn in the Area IV tourney, and Wolfforth defeated Crosbyton in Area III action.

Lubbock Nine Captures NBC Crown

Entering the top of the ninth Sunday, the Town Draw Brewers' summer winning streak was in jeopardy and it appeared a 13th game would be necessary to determine the West Region NBC Tournament championship.

But hold on! The Lubbockites paraded 13 men to the plate and scored 8 runs en route to a 10-6 triumph over El Paso and a berth in the state tournament, which begins its four-day run at Mackenzie Park next Thursday afternoon.

And it was lightning striking twice in the same spot, as last Friday the Brewers scored 4 times in the ninth to best El Paso 7-3 in the winners' bracket finals.

Tom Airington gave up a run on Rick Stevens' RBI single in the first, but drew a bases-loaded walk in the bottom of the frame to knot the game.

El Paso got 2 runs in the second on a walk to Bob Alsup, Steve Brady's triple to left and Rich Hildebrand's single. EP added 3 runs in the fifth on Jim VanNostDale's RBI single and an error on Brewer second baseman Pat Foster, which allowed 2 runs to score.

Town Draw tallied once in the sixth which Chuck Foster drew a bases-loaded walk. Bryan Cowan led off the ninth with a single, Jim Horton walked and Ernie Helwig singled to load the bases. Scott Leimgruber walked to force in a run. With one out Gary Long's infield bounce was bobbled, allowing 1 run to score, and Foster walked to force in another run.

Johnson then blooped a single to right to score 2 runs and the Brewers were up 7-6. A wild pitch scored another run and Horton ended all doubts with a 2-run single.

House picked up the win, hurling 7 2/3 innings, allowing four hits, striking out five and walking three.

The Brewers will take a 13-0 mark into the state meet.

Montreal Falls To Cincinnati In 14th Inning

By JOHN NELSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

It seems everyone in the National League is pulling for Pete Rose, even the man against whom he could tie the league record for hitting in consecutive games.

Pat Zachry, a former teammate at Cincinnati who came to the New York Mets in the Tom Seaver deal, will face the Reds tonight as Rose goes for a hit in his 37th straight game. That would tie him with Tommy Holmes of the old Boston Braves, who set the NL mark in 1945.

Rose came within one game of the record Sunday night, going 2-for-6 and driving in the winning run with a 14th-inning sacrifice fly in Cincinnati's 5-4 victory over Montreal at Olympic Stadium.

Rose's first hit, a single, came in the sixth inning in his third time at bat against Expos starter Steve Rogers, the man who earlier this year yielded Rose's 3,000th career hit. And he doubled off reliever Darold Knowles in the 10th.

But as far as the Reds were concerned, his most important appearance at the plate came in the 14th inning. Pinch-hitter Rick Auerbach led off the inning with a walk, went to second on a wild pitch and took third on a sacrifice bunt. Rose then sent a long fly to right fielder Ellis Valentine to score the winning run and give the Reds a three-game sweep of the series.

While Rose was extending his hitting streak to 36 games, San Francisco's Jack Clark was quietly sneaking up on the record also, hitting in his 25th consecutive game and driving in a run in the Giants 3-1 victory over Pittsburgh.

In other NL games, St. Louis shut out Los Angeles 2-0, Philadelphia clobbered Houston 13-2, Atlanta whitewashed New York 3-0 and Chicago edged San Diego 4-3.

Giants 3, Pirates 1

Clark, whose 25-game streak is a Giants record, won't have a chance to extend his skein today since San Francisco has a day off before hosting St. Louis on Tuesday.

"It's a good feeling to know you set a record for a team which has had so many great players," said Clark. "But when I come to the park, I don't think about anything but helping us win."

Jim Barr, 5-8, pitched a five-hitter for the Giants, relieving some of the pressure put on the bullpen while San Francisco's other starters have struggled. Barr threw just 97 pitches in the game.

Cards 2, Dodgers 0

Pete Vuckovich tossed 6 1/3 innings of no-hit ball, winding up with a three-hitter to pace St. Louis past the Dodgers. George Hendrick and Jerry Morales had the two Cards' RBI that made a loser of Don Sutton, 10-9.

Vuckovich, 8-7, walked seven hitters, including three in the first inning, but got out of a couple of jams with some timely strikeouts and ground balls.

Vuckovich, asked when he first considered the possibility of a no-hitter, first answered facetiously: "About the first inning."

"But seriously," he added, "I was just thinking shutout. Hits don't bothher me. If I give up 15 hits and no runs, I've had a good day."

Phils 13, Astros 2

Rich Hebner and Garry Maddox each smacked three-run homers and Jerry Martin added another shot to back left-hander Steve Carlton, 9-9, in his 200th career victory.

It was Carlton's seventh try for the magic number, but he said he wasn't pressing.

"I've gone farough this before," he said. "But maybe this time I got more attention because I was going for 200."

Carlton went eight innings before wilting in the 100-degree heat at Veteran Stadium. He gave up eight hits and struck out four before Rawly Eastwick finished up.

Braves 3, Mets 0

Atlanta jumped on Mets starter Jerry Koosman, 3-11, for four singles and one run in the first inning and rookie left-hander Larry McWilliams and Gene Garber combined for the shutout. It was the second time this season the two had teamed to blank the Mets.

Bob Horner drove in two runs with an RBI single in the first and a groundout in the eighth.

Cubs 4, Padres 3

Chicago right-hander Dennis Lamp, 3-10, scattered nine hits to beat San Diego with the help of some sloppy Padres fielding.

With men on first and second and two out in the sixth inning, Rodney Scott grounded to San Diego shortstop Ossie Smith. Smith, trying to cut the runner down at third, threw wildly and two runs scored.

Randy Jones, 7-9, was the loser, giving up nine hits and three walks in six innings.

Williams Cut By Falcons

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — The Atlanta Falcons cut two Southwest Conference players Saturday, both of them free-agent rookies, as preparations were made for the arrival in training camp of the remainder of the veterans.

Sammy Williams, a wide receiver from Texas Tech, and Dyrul Thomas, a runningback from the University of Houston, were released.

They were among five cut. The others were Robert Taylor, runningback from Idaho; Tom Prongay, defensive tackle from North Carolina State; and Jim Williams, linebacker from Clemson.

Thorne Drives To Victory

Hollis "Sasquatch" Thorne of Lubbock drove his '68 Camaro to an 11.541-second win in the Super Semi finals in a mishap-dotted session at Lubbock Dragway Saturday night.

Numerous shattered engines and other mechanical disasters kept track crews busy and prolonged the program.

In the Pro Stock division, Mike Haigood of Plainview prevailed in a '69 Plymouth with a 13.609 clocking, and other winners were Jerry Adams of Odessa (Heavy), Tammy Owens, Lubbock (Street) and Jay Crawford, Idalou (Motorcycle).

Steve Monroe of Sunray won the Service Insulation Bonus offered the driver running closest to his dial-in time. Monroe drove his '67 Olds to an 11.981 after dialing in an 11.98.

Johnson Wins Dirt Feature As Top Challengers Break

Dame Misfortune played no favorites at Lubbock Speed Bowl Saturday night as leading drivers were victims of breakdowns and Larry Johnson took advantage of circumstances to salt away a win in the modified stock car feature.

Hershel Cook started the disasters by blowing a rear end in the opening heat and Jimmy Bilbrey followed with a blown engine. Charley Whorton lasted until the feature, when he ran over a shed wheel and ruptured an oil pan.

New Mexico visitor Hollis Baffer of Eunice, meanwhile, fared well, winning both the trophy dash and the semi before exiting the main via a collision.

In the street stocks, Ruben Perez, Gary Artz and Bobby "Cherokee" Mears were double winners, Perez winning his heat and the semi, Artz taking a heat and the trophy dash and Mears grabbing the main and the consy.

"MY ENGINE RAN WHEN IT WAS OFF

I'd switch the ignition off but the engine wouldn't stop. Instead it sputtered, rocked and coughed. Then I discovered WYNN'S® SPIT-FIRE. Now my troubles are over," writes a happy user. Yes, engine "after run" can be not only exasperating but downright dangerous mechanically. So be kind to your car and yourself. Add a can of WYNN'S SPIT-FIRE to your gas tank today. Available at

Hirschfield Fired As Chief Of Columbia Pictures

By KRISTIN GOFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Alan J. Hirschfield, one of the key figures in the controversy surrounding former Columbia Pictures production chief David Begelman, has been replaced as top executive of the motion picture company.

Hirschfield, 42, was fired last week after he refused to resign as president and chief executive officer of Columbia Pictures Industries Inc. He also rejected an offer to continue as a consultant after the board said it would not negotiate to renew his contract. Hirschfield, a former investment banker, who had run the company for the past five years, said only one of the seven members who voted, Chairman Leo Jaffe, backed him.

Hirschfield blamed his dismissal solely on deteriorating relations with board members following his stand last fall against reinstating Begelman. But Dan Lufkin, chairman of the board's executive committee, described the split as "a no fault divorce" that "had nothing to do with the Begelman affair."

In a terse statement, Columbia said that Hirschfield was being replaced by Francis T. Vincent, a former Washington banking and corporate law attorney who four months ago went to work for the Securities and Exchange Commission.

SEC officials, who are investigating Columbia, said Vincent's position as an associate director in charge of disclosure and compliance was separate from any investigation work which comes under the enforcement division. Vincent immediately resigned his government post Thursday.

Begelman, Columbia's former movie and television chief, admitted misusing company money, including improperly cashing checks made out to actor Cliff Robertson and others.

Hirschfield's stand against rehiring Begelman after the production chief was briefly suspended last fall reportedly earned Hirschfield the wrath of several directors of the motion picture firm.

At a news conference Thursday, Hirschfield disputed a reference in the company statement on the "need for fresh leadership," saying his record of bringing Columbia to record levels of profitability "speaks for itself."

"It is a direct outgrowth of the David Begelman affair, during which there were serious differences of opinion and judgment between certain members of the board and myself," Hirschfield said.

"I think it's a sad day for me, and it's a sad day for Columbia, its shareholders and management," he said.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Lufkin indicated that the company simply wasn't satisfied with Hirschfield's performance.

"The change in management had nothing to do with the Begelman affair," Lufkin said. "...The focus issue was the lack of unity in fundamentals: Development and procedure and strategy," he said.

"The fact is that you are running a company and there is no treading water," Lufkin said. "You do everything to achieve harmony and everything was done to achieve harmony but it wasn't achieved."

Despite the Begelman controversy, Columbia recently has enjoyed financial success, thanks primarily to the smash hit, "Close Encounters of the Third Kind."

Hirschfield, who took credit for bringing together a management team able to produce record profits, told the news conference that he agreed to continue serving on Columbia's board of directors because of a sense of duty to the management and shareholders of the company.

He also said he "assumed" that his contract, which doesn't expire until the end of the year would remain in effect. That provides for an annual salary of $250,000 and a bonus plan tied to profits. "I have done nothing to breach it," he said.

While Hirschfield told newsmen he did not want to "rehash my position on Begelman", he did say he now felt he made a mistake in December when he went along with a decision to rehire Begelman.

"I brought him back in hopes of ending the disruption in the company. It turned out to be a mistake," he said.

Hirschfield said he was opposed to the reinstatement of Begelman on ethical grounds because he admitted embezzling from the company.

"There is no room for that kind of person in a publically held company. It is inconsistent with today's corporate responsibilities," he said.

But that attitude reportedly earned him the enmity of Herbert A. Allen Jr., who along with other members of his family control the Columbia board and who supported Begelman at least in part because of his string of hit movies.

Begelman eventually resigned on Feb. 5, after the company and other portions of the entertainment industry came under increasing pressure. But he has a contract with Columbia as an independent producer, a contract that reportedly earns him about $300,000 annually.

Several weeks ago, Begelman — who had pleaded no contest to one count of grand theft — was fined, ordered to make restitution by making a movie on the dangers of drugs and placed on probation.

In the wake of the scandal involving Begelman, Los Angeles country District Attorney John Van De Kamp, has begun an investigation of the movie industry's financing. Van De Kamp has said that no specific case is involved in the probe, but that he wants to explore whether corporate crime within the industry is being reported to authorities.

Neither Columbia nor Robertson pressed charges against Begelman, although Robertson said he was willing to testify against him.

A CHANGE AT COLUMBIA — Alan J. Hirschfield, president of Columbia Pictures and one of the main figures in the controversy surrounding a former Columbia production chief, David Begelman, was fired last week. In a terse announcement, Columbia said Hirschfield, left, was being replaced by Francis T. Vincent, right, an official of the Securities and Exchange Commission. Hirschfield claimed the firing stemmed from his stand in refusing to rehire Begelman after the former movie and TV chief admitted misusing firm money. (AP Laserphoto)

FTC Begins Beer Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you're popping open a Lowenbrau about now, are you aware the beer you're about to drink was made in the United States, not Germany?

The federal government thinks it's important that you know you're drinking an American beer.

The Federal Trade Commission said last weekend it is investigating Lowenbrau advertising to determine whether it may lead consumers to think they're getting the German beer — brewed in Munich since 1383.

The largest American brewer, Anheuser-Busch, asked for the investigation last year, complaining that American Lowenbrau is brewed differently from the German beer.

The U.S. Lowenbrau is brewed by the second largest U.S. brewer, Miller, under a licensing agreement with the German company. The German beer has not been imported since late 1977.

Miller has opposed the Anheuser-Busch petition, saying at one point, "We find it incredulous that the world's largest brewer would ask the FTC to protect them."

British TV Listings Provide Relief From Summer Reruns

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Yeah, summer sure is a bummer on TV. Nothing's on but repeats of repeats, or a stray special, like tonight's "Miss Universe" on CBS. But we may be lucky, considering.

We don't face an epic called "Mud! Mud! Glorious Mud!"

That, neighbors, actually was part of the vast sonata of entertainment available for London viewers one night last week.

We came by this intelligence while reading a British newspaper's TV listing in lieu of watching "I'm Dickens ... He's Fenster" (my set only picks up old canceled shows for some reason).

Oh, sure, Londoners could see the debut of a new action series, "Spearhead," which "follows the fortunes of a group of British soldiers in Ulster — B Company, Wessex Rangers."

But no doubt many felt that too violent, and opted for a cultural show, like "The Wombles." Or "Schools Prom," which featured the Bromley Schools Concert Wind Band, among others.

The determined viewer could go right from that to "Life Begins at Forty," and then, after the 10 p.m. news, curl up with "Being Second Is Just No Good at All."

That program was a documentary on a Belfast engineering professor "who 10 years ago took his ideas on engine design to the British motorcyle industry. No interest was shown."

(He had the last laugh. Now works in Japan, he does.)

Meself, I'd have tuned in a competing program called "A Taste of Britain," which looks at regions of England through their food and drink.

In it, "a Bermondsey family remembers hop-picking holidays in Kent ... and we see the salt marshes of Romney ... and a part of Sussex where a rare vegetable grows on the beaches."

The last might be some kind of holy weed or something.

It's possible many viewers would never know, though, having dozed off only to be rudely awakened by the night's last program, an 11:35 p.m. proceeding called "Closedown."

In it, says the TV listing, "Gabriel Woolf reads 'The Golden Journey to Samarkand (Prologue)' by James Elroy Flecker."

It is said CBS bought this show to put against 'Happy Days" and "Laverne and Shirley" next winter.)

I suppose Londoners bored with the telly could turn to radio, which on the day surveyed offered such as "The Great Gorilla Scandal" and "The Story of Ragged Robyn."

But by neddies, I'd rush to Wales, even though they talk funny there. It's where the BBC has a TV program called "Heddiw." And where commercial TV offers not only "Twyllwyr," but also "Bywyd."

Anytime you can get a "Heddiw," "Twyllwyr" or "Bywyd" instead of a "Love Boat" repeat, well, it does restore your faith that somewhere, something interesting is on TV. Even in the summer.

Teen-Aged Skydiver Dies In Washington

ISSAQUAH, Wash. (UPI) — Skydiver Kirk Edson, 16, Bellevue, Wash., fell 7,000 feet to his death Sunday when his main parachute malfunctioned and his reserve chute failed to open.

Police said Edson was an experienced skydiver making his 51st jump.

Witnesses said Edson had a slight pulse just after his fall.

More than 6,000 species of rhododendrons live in mountainous areas in New Guinea, Malaysia, Europe and North America.

The Almanac
TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

Today is Monday July 24, the 205th day of 1978 with 160 to follow.

The moon is moving toward its last quarter.

The morning star is Jupiter.

The evening stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Leo.

American aviatrix Amelia Earhart Putnam was born July 24, 1898.

On this day in history:

In 1679, New Hampshire became a royal colony of the British crown.

In 1929, President Herbert Hoover signed the Kellogg-Briand Treaty under which 43 nations agreed to denounce war as an instrument of national policy.

In 1969, Apollo 11 returned to earth after a historic moon landing mission.

In 1974, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled President Nixon must give Judge John Sirica White House tapes for the criminal trial of his former associates.

A thought for the day:

American author Albert Terhune said, "Win without boasting, lose without excuse."

Hollywood Tree Surgeon In Demand As Actor

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Actor William McKinney spends more time in trees than Tarzan ever did, but he will never portray the fabled ape man.

McKinney is that rarest of hyphenates, an actor-tree surgeon.

When he gets a telephone call from Clint Eastwood or Steve McQueen he can't be certain whether it's for a role in a movie or the opportunity to trim a grove of eucalyptus trees.

McKinney has, in fact, worked in top roles with Eastwood, McQueen, Burt Reynolds, Jon Voight, Paul Newman and Warren Beatty, almost always playing a vile, kinky heavy.

In "Deliverance" with Reynolds he was the depraved hillbilly. With Eastwood in "Guantlet" he was the filthy-mouthed Las Vegas constable. He was the gimlet-eyed killer who blew away Warren Beatty in "The Parallax View." In "Valentino" with Nureyev he was the disgustingly sadistic cop.

He recently completed "Every Which Way But Loose," his fourth picture with Eastwood, and "When Are You Combing Back, Red Ryder?" with Marjoe Gortner.

McKinney is not a man to be trifled with. He had 26 amateur heavyweight fights as a youth in his native Tennessee and as a sailor in the U.S. Navy.

When he decided to become an actor, McKinney settled in Hollywood and studied at the Pasadena Playhouse. Like a thousand other hopeful actors he had to moonlight to eat. To keep body and soul together McKinney took a summer job as a brush swamper for a tree trimming outfit.

"I loaded tree limbs and underbrush on trucks," the rugged McKinney recalled. "But after two weeks I just felt I had to climb trees. So I became a trimmer and topper, working all over Los Angeles and Pasadena."

After five years of hit-and-miss acting roles and tree trimming, McKinney founded his own business, Quality Tree Service.

"I took a couple of courses in tree surgery and read all the books on the subject I could find," he said. "And I learned more than all that stuff combined by working with a man who was a professional grover.

"You'd be surprised how profitable tree surgary can be. For 10 years my business kept expanding and growing. It really interfered with my work as an actor. I had to make the important decision of whether I wanted to spend my life in trees or acting.

"I found I began to resent trees. In the beginning I loved the outdoor work, climbing and trimming. There's a mystique to trees. They've taught me a lot of things about life.

"Trees are much older than man. They know a lot of things we don't. I realize it sounds irrational but I even began communicating with trees. Me, a guy who never believed in things about people talking to plants.

"But I climbed a big conifer to begin trimming one day and it seemed to say to me, 'Eliminate the obvious and my form will dictate what else to do.' It didn't sink in until a couple of days later, but that tree was absolutely right.

"Tree surgery isn't half as dangerous as making movies as far as I'm concerned. I've fallen 15 feet from a tree and landed on my feet. I've worked a hundred feet up in trees in perfect safety.

"But I was almost killed in 1970 riding a motorcycle for 'Angel Unchained.' I pulled a 100-foot wheely and skidded through a reflecter, three garbage cans filled with broken bottles and into a car. I hit the car going 35 miles an hour.

"I was banged up badly for most of a year. But three months after the accident I trimmed the biggest tree in Beverly Hills, 135 feet high."

Among McKinney's tree surgery customers are Andy Griffith, Ed Asner and Gene Kelly. Some of his other customers are astonished to see the actor at their door when they call for tree service.

"A couple of them want me to forget about acting and stick to tree surgery," McKinney said, grinning.

"There were days when I really couldn't get too excited about working in trees. I guess I wanted more recognition as an actor. That's when I made up my mind to concentrate on acting.

"A friend told me if I put as much energy and time into acting as I did into tree surgery I'd be a superstar. Well, that hasn't happened yet, but I have really cut back on the tree business.

"I've been working more and more in movies now and even though I once knocked off $1,600 in a single day with my tree work, acting pays a lot better.

"Maybe someday I can combine both my careers. I'm reading a screen treatment right now that has a tree surgeon as the hero. It might just work out.

"For five years I've been taking vocal lessons. I want to branch out as a singer as well as an actor."

Bill McKinney may never play Tarzan. It's possible he won't make the world forget Frank Sinatra. But there's every reason to think he'd be a sensation singing "Trees."

Shooting Earns Town Notoriety

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo. (UPI) — The heavy sound of a Union Pacific freight whistle floats across the valley on an easterly wind. Two long blasts, followed by another short and a long, echo off the treeless hills and sandstone cliffs ringing the town.

The train rolls through the center of Rock Springs where the red and brown brick of older commercial buildings testifies to the city's more sedate past. Today its name is synonomous with the economic backlash associated with the modern energy boom town — the late 20th century version of the brawling Gold Rush mining camp.

Since the early '70s, transient workers have come to Rock Springs following the lure of high pay and a rootless, swaggering lifestyle to mine coal and trona, drill for oil and help construct a giant power plant east of town. The influx has wrought a raw transformation in this once quiet coal mining town on the southwest edge of Wyoming's Red Desert — where the Continental Divide splits on its way up to the Wind River Mountains.

But of late, Rock Springs has earned notoriety, not only for its ballooning development and the related activities of gambling, drug trafficking and prostitution. Last week an undercover narcotics agent, a subpoeaned witness for a grand jury investigationg the city's power structure, was shot and killed as he sat with other officers in an unmarked car.

The victim's boss has been charged with the shooting. An affidavit read in a justice court this week paints a grim picture of Ed Cantrell holding a .38-caliber pistol in his outstretched hand and shooting Michae Rosa, 29, between the eyes. Cantrell said he thought Rosa was going for his gun.

The incident has pushed Rock Springs reluctantly even more into the limelight and created what City Attorney Robert Johnson termed an atmosphere of "community paranoia."

But Rock Springs hasn't always been a town for brawlers. When Ann DeCroo, 70, came to town in 1937 the sign said "Population 11,657." The sign has never been changed and no one knows how many people live here now. Estimates range from 26,000 to 30,000.

"Now our town has a bad name," said Mrs. DeCroo. "Everywhere I go they want to know why I'm living in such a corrupted town. They ask, 'Is that where so and so did such and such? Is that the little town?' Well, I don't care what they say, it's not a little town anymore."

The eastern boundary of Rock Springs begins with a trailer court spilling down a gently sloping hill. The tree-lined streets and modest homes of the older parts of town tell of quieter times, when Mrs. DeCross and her husband went to community events and the entire town turned out.

As for the center of town, where the train moves through regularly, the old brickworks crumbles in spots and is often festooned with flashing lights and garish signs. On the infamous K Street, from the Black Mountain Trading Post and Pawn Shop up to Fanellis' Music Store, the prostitutes stroll the sidewalks and work the bars, and pawnshop manager Jeff Stewart said everyone knows it.

Rock Springs is a poorly constructed puzzle with pieces that don't fit. Trailer courts nest on the arid hillside, next to salvage yards littered with rusting hulks of metal and occasional buses marooned below the clifts like beached fishing boats.

On another hillside are new apartments finished in attractive deep-green and trimmed in brown. But they stand starkly against the dusty brown of the rangeland and backdrop of treeless sandstone mesas.

In the late afternoon the wind shifts and stiffens ahead of a summer thundershower, picking up clouds of dust from construction projects and sending it rolling through the valley.

JACKIE ON HER LUNCH HOUR — People didn't stop and stare, but the lady behind those glasses was Jacqueline Onassis, taking a lunch hour stroll in New York City recently. The two men flanking her were accompanying her to a nearby coffee shop where they had ice tea together. (AP Laserphoto)

Test-Tube Babies Reported

LONDON (UPI) — Dozens of other mothers are pregnant by the test-tube methods that will allow Mrs. Lesley Brown to give birth to the first baby ever conceived outside the womb, a London newspaper reported Sunday.

The Sunday Express said "up to 20 women were implanted with fertilized eggs in a single week at Oldham General hospital," where Mrs. Brown awaits her baby's birth the first week in August.

"By the time the first baby is one year old, scores of other mothers could have given birth to children conceived in a laboratory," the newspaper said. The Oldham hospital refused to confirm or deny the report.

Mrs. Brown, 32, was the first known success in a surgical technique developed during 12 years of research by Dr. Patrick Steptoe.

He took an egg from Mrs. Brown and ferilized it with sperm from her husband in his laboratory. Then he implanted the fertilized egg into Mrs. Brown's womb, a technique that bypassed faulty fallopian tubes preventing normal conception.

Birth of her baby, expected to be by Caesarian section, has been put off until early August.

Already, the London Sunday Times said, the first "test tube" baby has cost Britain's nationalized National Health Service $101,600.

The newspaper gave no breakdown of its figure, but said, "that covers only the capital equipment, the equipment's running costs and a technician's pay. It does not include the time of the two doctors, Patrick Steptoe and Robert Edwards."

THE WHITE HOUSE

Carter Given Flowers By German

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidents and their families sometimes do things in public on the spur of the moment, but it's not always easy to tell what's spontaneous and what's pre-planned.

When President Carter went to West Berlin last weekend, a woman approached the outdoor platform where he was standing and waiting while his remarks were translated into German for his audience.

The president stepped from beside his bullet-resistant rostrum and reached down and smilingly accepted flowers.

Was this spontaneous or pre-planned?

If it wasn't planned in advance, it was a breach of normal security procedures.

President Nixes Plan

The relative rarity of spontaneity in such situations was emphasized in Wiesbaden, West Germany when an Army major approached the president as he was about to leave and expressed a desire to give Carter a plastic white eagle — symbol of the military unit reviewed by the visitor.

A White House advance agent intercepted the major and announced: "The President can't accept that. It wasn't part of the plan."

So Carter accepted it any way, which proves even presidents don't always adhere to the scenarios prepared for them.

Jordan Jokes

Presidential assistant Hamilton Jordan was questioned in West Germany about prospects for an exchange of American-held prisoners for Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky.

Jordan acknowledged, at least in jest, that this was correct but added, "Midge doesn't want to go."

Jordan, the most powerful of presidential assistants, referred to Margaret "Midge" Costanza, who long resisted top-level demands that she vacate her office closest to the president's private quarters when the senior staff was expanded a few months ago in an effort to dispel criticism.

Conflicting Interests

During Carter's visit to the West German capital of Bonn, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance scheduled a meeting with reporters that was to coincide closely with an on-the-record briefing by Robert Strauss, Carter's chief trade negotiator.

As the hour for the Vance session approached, one reporter after another got up and walked out the only exit — right beside Strauss' platform.

After at least half a dozen had paraded past him toward the exit, Strauss interupted himself to comment dryly, "I'm going to empty this joint pretty soon."

Strauss Not Bragging

In final negotiations for a seven-nation economic summit declaration, Strauss insisted the document state that negotiators for liberalized trade had succeeded in fulfilling commitments made at the previous economic summit in London, in contrast to failures to deliver on other promises.

French Premier Valery Giscard d'Estaing suggested this might be acceptable if the trade negotiators — and he was staring directly at Strauss — wanted to brag on themselves.

Strauss responded with one of his favorite stories involving baseball Hall of Famer "Dizzy" Dean, a pitcher out of the Ozarks, not far from Strauss' home state of Texas.

"It ain't bragging if you've done it," Strauss quoted Dean as saying when it once was suggested he was bragging on himself.

U.S. Stresses Education As Savings Bond Pitch

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Banks do it. Stock brokers do it. Mutual fund and insurance salesmen do it.

What they do is suggest to long-term investors or savers an education for their children or a comfortable retirement, knowing that the leavening of taxes and inflation may make such goals mere fantasy.

In the free enterprise world we tend to accept such hyperbole as a consequence of the competitive effort and the reasonable tendency of competitors to create the happiest picture possible.

But what should we think when Uncle Sam also plays the game through U.S. Savings Bonds, of which there are outstanding some $79 billion worth, owned by 25 million households, or roughly one in three?

"Americans earn over $4 billion in interest yearly on their savings bonds," the Savings Bond Division states. But not a word about 10 percent inflation that reduces it to a multibillion dollar loss.

"Here's how your dollars for education grow in Series E Bonds," Uncle Sam announces in a brochure designed to encourage bond purchasers as a way to meet rising tuition costs.

If you buy a $37.50 bond each month from the time your child is born to age 18 you will have accumulated, based on current 6 percent interest, a total of $14,260.94. Before inflation.

What rate of inflation should prevail during the next 18 years? The current rate of about 10 percent seems unlikely. What about half that? Too much? Then let's try 4 percent, a figure likely to be too low.

At 4 percent inflation a year, the purchasing power of that $14,260.94 would be cut in half. You would have invested $8,100. You would have buying power of less than that.

Uncle Sam advertises "A retirement plan that brings you income." it does, of course, but how much? Again, inflation may take away more than the government pays in interest. And federal taxes, however small in retirement, will take away more. Says Uncle Sam in a promotional piece: "You put in $18.75, and five years later you pull out $25. You put in $37.50 and you pull out $50. You put in $75 and pull out — well, that's the idea."

When the magician does it with rabbits he knows that you know it's an illusion. Uncle Sam doesn't look at it that way. He believes, apparently. His promotional message continues:

"No wondering if your money's safe from fire, flood, theft, or fluctuations of the money market. No war of nerves. All peace of mind, with Uncle Sam's safety bond."

In defense of the Savings Bond savings technique, and for that matter, the technique of saving in the bank, it is often said that it's better than not saving at all. But that too is questionable.

As many people have found, money spent now on certain durable items is sometimes a much better way of saving.

Analysis

That is, the items purchased today often are worth more tomorrow, and can be redeemeed for cash.

It is this understanding, in part, that is responsible for the growing interest in old furniture, antique automobiles, houses, and various "collectables" such as plates, jewelry, silver, gold, books and art.

This is the legacy of inflation, a legacy that to a great extent is passed on by a seemingly generous Uncle Sam, a fine fellow whose biggest fault, perhaps, is his inability to live within his budget.

As we see, his bills become our bills, and it doesn't matter whether we pay them through official taxes, such as that on income, or unofficial taxes, as through inflation. We pay.

Sheriff Says Pair Killed Dillinger

ETNA GREEN, Ind. (AP) — A 79-year-old sheriff says it was a pair of hired gunmen — not the FBI — who killed Public Enemy No.1 John Dillinger outside a Chicago theater.

Harley Person, sheriff of Kosciusko County, Ind., at the time, says the gunmen — known to him only as O'Neil and Zarkovich — were hired by the town of East Chicago, Ind., and killed Dillinger outside the Biograph Theater the night of July 22, 1934. Person said East Chicago hired O'Neil and Zarkovich after a bank robbery attributed to Dillinger that resulted in the death of a school crossing guard.

Sweeteners Doubted As Cause Of Cancer

CHICAGO (AP) — The moderate amounts of artificial sweeteners used by human beings do not cause cancer, a major study in Baltimore has concluded.

The Baltimore study involved 519 patients with bladder cancer at 19 Baltimore-area hospitals between 1972 and 1975. It also involved 519 other people, called controls, who were matched for age, sex and other factors but did not have bladder cancer.

Since the government banned cyclamates in 1970 and restricted the use of saccharin in 1972, there has been much controversy, especially among those who use these sweeteners in diabetic diets or to control obesity.

The government actions came after studies of laboratory rats showed that dosages of the sweeteners — far in excess of those used by human beings — caused bladder cancer.

But the Baltimore study, conducted by Dr. Irving Kessler, now of the University of Maryland school of medicine, and J. Page Clark at Johns Hopkins University, showed that the relevance of animal tests to the problem of cancer development in humans is unclear.

"Species and strains within species differ widely in their response to the same environmental agents," Kessler and Clark said.

They concluded in a report published in the July 28 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association that the ingestion of artificial sweeteners, at least at moderate dietary levels, is not associated with an increased risk of bladder cancer.

In their study, Kessler and Clark questioned cancer patients and the matched controls about their consumption of artificial sweeteners in carbonated and non-carbonated soft drinks, iced tea and other liquids, and in salad dressings, candy, ice cream, pastry, gelatin, chewing gum and other foods.

Both patients and controls were questioned also about smoking habits, occupational history, diabetes and other factors that might have been involved.

Those who conducted the interviews did not know which subjects were cancer patients and which were not. They found no significant difference in the amounts of food or beverages containing cyclamate or saccharin consumed by the patients or the controls.

Brzezinski Attacked By Pravda

MOSCOW (AP) — Pravda renewed its attack today on Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Carter's national security adviser, claiming his ideas and recommendations "inflict no small damage to the cause of detente."

Senior commentator Sergei Vishnevsky wrote in the Communist Party newspaper that Brzezinski was still "professing the theory of the natural character of international conflicts" which he espoused during his academic career as a Soviet affairs expert at Columbia University.

"Far from all scholars and politicians of the U.S. share this theory," Vishnevsky continued. "So Brzezinski was all the more gratified to find in Peking a frame of mind that is so close to his."

The commentary said during Brzezinski's visit to Peking in May, he "noted his common views with the Chinese leaders and described as 'brilliant' the analysis of the international situation given by (Communist Party Chairman) Hua Kuo-feng."

Vishnevsky charged that Brzezinski believes the United States must have "overwhelming military might. He does not conceal his yearning for lost strategic supremacy.

"Detente, naturally, does not tally with Brzezinski's theory of international conflicts," he continued. "Cold War would be far more preferable, as it would be profitable for the United States.

"True, he now terms detente as a combination of rivalry and cooperation, but the main emphasis is still on rivalry."

Pravda said Brzezinski's views are a "sharp contrast" with Carter's claim that he is not embarking on a "personal vendetta" against Moscow.

"Noting this contradiction, Americans are calling into question the sincerity of Washington's promises to develop the process of detente," the commentary said. "... The concept of confrontation holds no promise in the long run, and the Washington strategists would be well advised to understand it."

Five Sought In Shooting

RICHMOND, MO. (AP) — A Sunday predawn ambush left one country music promoter dead and another wounded, and ignited a search for five assailants.

Dead with a small-caliber bullet wound in the back is George Barnett, 49, who police said moved into a trailer in rural Ray County less than a month ago from Richardson, Texas.

In stable condition at Ray County Memorial Hospital with a wound in the ribs is Donald D. Crumpley, believed to be in his late 30s. The police said Crumpley, who lives in Warrensburg, is a music promoter with Heritage Records and may have planned promotions with Barnett, who had country music ties in the Southwest.

George McBroom of the Missouri Rural Crimes Squad said the shootings may have been drug related. He said a substance believed to be marijuana was found in the trailer where the shootings took place.

The five suspects were believed to be from Texas, McBroom said.

Police said the two men were in bed when the five men attacked the trailer. Police said Crumpley was able to escape in his pickup and awaken a farmer at a home two miles away.

"He rang the doorbell and was beating on the door with his fist like he was really wantin' attention," said Everett Yoakum, the farmer. "I went to the door and this fellow was standing there and he said, 'I've been shot and they shot the other guy.'"

Yoakum said two pickup trucks drove up and Crumpley said, "There they are. Turn off the lights and let me in."

Croy Resigns As Leader Of New Mexico Demos

By LARRY CALLOWAY

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico Democratic leaders, unanimously electing a new party chairman, expressed unity over the weekend but it wasn't a completely gracious reunion.

Dan Croy, former Lubbock psychiatrist, handed in his resignation as party chairman with a proviso that the party better not try to stick him with a $9,000 note owed to a Santa Fe bank.

National Committeeman Rudy Ortiz told the gathering, "I'm pleased to be back in the Democratic Party after a brief delay."

He referred to his prosecution on bribery charges by Attorney General Toney Anaya as "the trauma I experienced last year."

He was acquitted in December by a Santa Fe jury and has weathered demands from some Democrats that he resign as national committeeman. One came last year from former Gov. Bruce King, the party nominee for governor this year.

Ortiz told the gathering he's not bitter against the party. "I'm a Democrat, and I'm going to help all I can. Isn't that right, Bruce?"

King, seated beside the rostrum nodded to Ortiz and said, "Right."

Anaya, the party candidate against Republican Sen. Pete Domenici, took the microphone next and suggested that party officials who don't support the party candidates should be removed from office.

Croy, who was put in the chairmanship 16 months ago at the insistence of Gov. Jerry Apodaca, had alienated many of the county chairmen.

Former Party Chairman Ben Alexander echoed their sentiments when he told an unrelated meeting Sunday, "We've got 32 county chairmen that don't amount to a hell of a lot because the elected Democratic administration won't let them amount to anything."

Croy didn't attend the central committee meeting Saturday. He submitted his resignation in writing and left before it was called to order.

The new chairman, choice of former Gov. King, is Larry Ingram, 48, of Tucumcari. Ingram, who has been Quay County Democratic chairman for a decade, fired Croy's handpicked $30,000 a year party executive director as the first order of business.

Instead, Ingram will hire an administrative assistant, Donna Smith of Albuquerque, at a lower salary. "I do not require an extremely high-salaried person to make decisions for me," Ingram told the party executive committee.

White Says Carter Improving In West

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — The Democratic Party has a $1.6 million debt and often brawls in public, but national chairman John White forecasts success in the mid-term elections despite the internal problems.

White, the folksy former Texas agricultural commissioner, told western state leaders the party is running a lean $300,000 political operation during the mid-term elections and will focus on voter registration.

"We are the majority party," White said Sunday. "We must be doing something right."

He said the Republicans scaled down forecasts of winning 78 seats in Congress to 60, then 35 or 40, and now maybe 15 or 20.

"The Republicans say they should do something to meet the people — go out and play golf," White said. "As long as they do that, we can continue to screw up and win. The Republicans will be sitting around and wondering what went wrong — we had all this money."

White said Carter is improving his political ratings in the West, where Gerald Ford won every state but Hawaii in 1976.

"This is a swing region of the country," White said. "It is probably the most independent region of the country. I think the perception of Jimmy Carter in the West in 1976 was that he was a Southerner.

"There is disagreement on many regional issues. But on the big issues — the economy, employment, energy, civil service reform, war and peace — I think there is general agreement and he will be well received."

White said the party was gradually settling a $1.6 million debt from the 1968 primary and general election presidential campaigns and cannot be expected to be a major source of revenue for the mid-term elections.

"Our job is to help register voters, but your job is to get to the polls the ones who you know will vote for you," White said.

"The reason we are in is a decade ago we did things we wanted to do and didn't pay for them," he said.

Banker Says Xerox Name Hurt Investment In Firm

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — In an antitrust suit against Xerox Corp., defense attorneys tried to shake the testimony of an investment banker who said the Xerox name had a chilling effect on Van Dyk Research Co.'s efforts to raise money with investors.

Peter Bennett, an executive in the investment banking department of Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, testified in federal court here Thursday that institutions were unwilling to subscribe to a $10 million private placement proposed in 1974 by Van Dyk when they heard the copier manufacturer competed with Xerox.

In 1975, a cash crunch caused Van Dyk to file for reorganiization under Chapter IX of the federal Bankruptcy Act.

In cross-examining Bennett during the $65 million suit Friday, Xerox lawyers sought to establish that there were reasons other than Xerox's patents and marketing power behind the failure of the proposed private placement.

Bennett said other factors weighed by the institutions considering an investment in Van Dyk included the "aggressive" pricing of the securities, the lack of depth in Van Dyk management and competition from other manufacturers — Eastman Kodak and IBM, for example.

Lawyers for Van Dyk called to the stand Richard D. Wellbrock, another former investment banker for Van Dyk. He testified that a large financing he had attempted through venture capital companies failed due to the "aura" of Xerox.

Wellbrock's former employer, Mayflower Securities, had successfully underwritten two public offerings of Van Dyk stock in 1969 and 1972 by marketing the securities to individual investors.

Van Dyk attorneys say they will seek to introduce into evidence documents concerning Xerox's alleged cartel and "patent web."

Xerox Chairman C. Peter McColough and other top corporation executives are scheduled to begin testifying Tuesday.

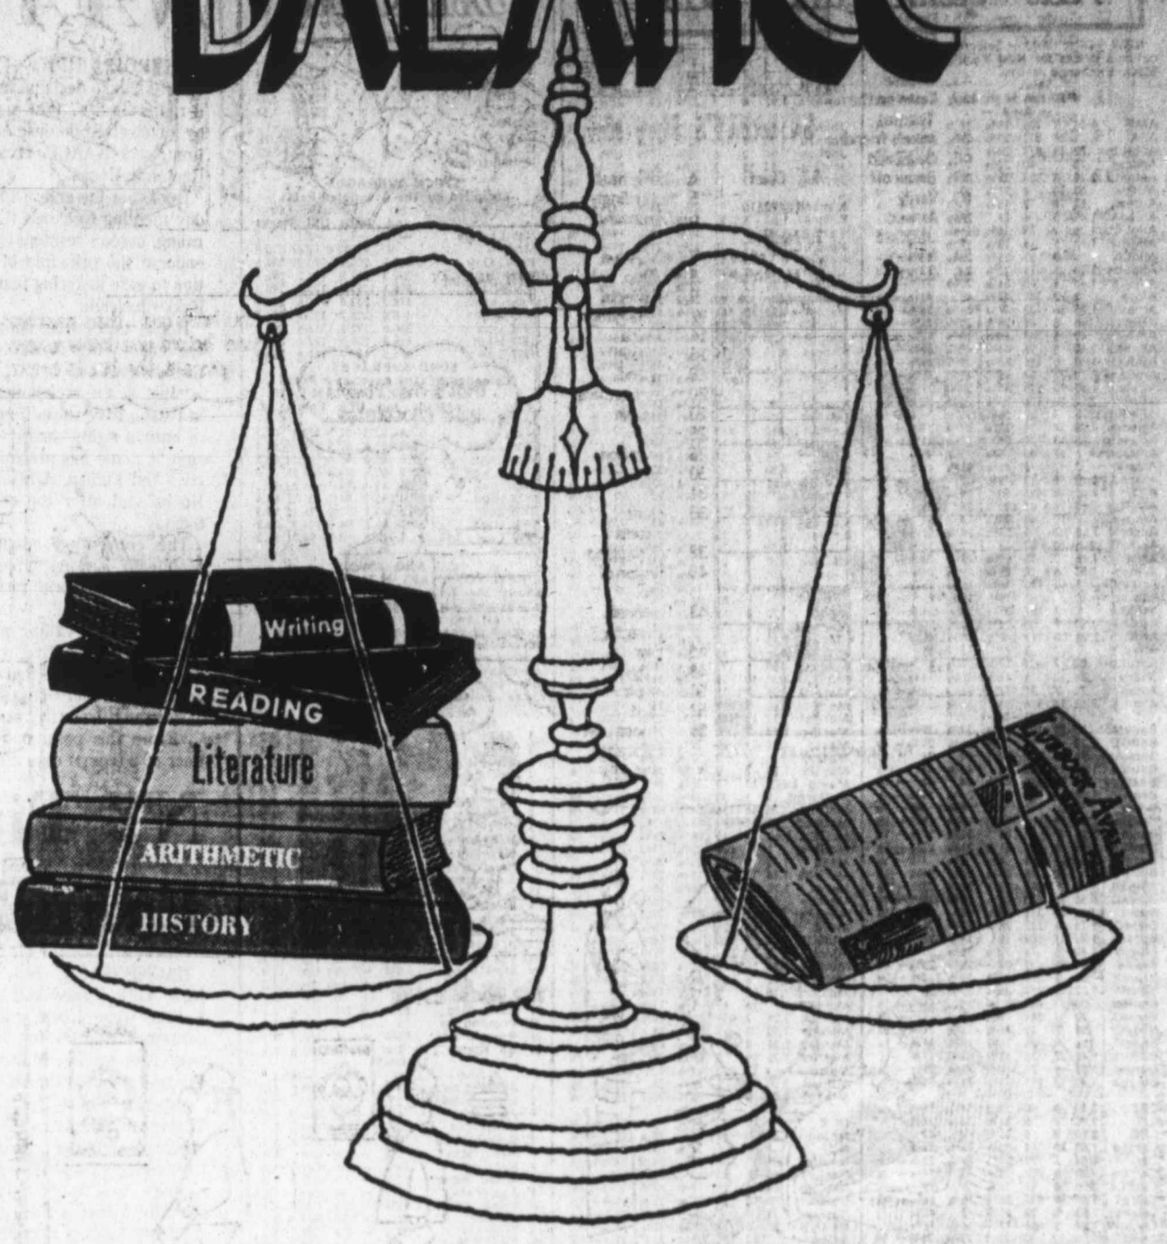
BALANCE



A textbook is a necessary part of classroom instruction, but it can't possibly cover an event or discovery that has developed in the past 24 hours.

Many teachers have found they can utilize a newspaper as a source for information not yet available in the textbook, thus providing a balance between yesterday and today.

If you're a teacher, you can find out how to put balance in your classroom, by attending Avalanche-Journal's 7th Annual "Living Textbook Conference", to be held August 8th, on the campus of Texas Tech University.

TODAY'S STOCK PRICES

Stock Mart Off Sharply At Noon

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly today as the dollar slumped in foreign exchange.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 6.24 at 827.18.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The dollar declined sharply against leading foreign currencies and passed a psychological landmark when it slipped below the 200 Japanese yen level.

Analysts say the newest factor weighing down the dollar has been the recommendation of a committee of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries that OPEC peg prices against a package of currencies rather than in dollars.

The dollar's fluctuations in recent months have often set the tone for the stock market.

Continental Corp. topped the active list, off ⅛ at 24⅜. A 200,000-share block traded at 24¼.

Gold stocks, which frequently thrive in periods of monetary uncertainty, gained ground today. Dome Mines climbed 1⅞ to 84⅜ and ASA was up ⅝ at 25⅝.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .32 to 54.59. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .39 at 151.45.

Volume on the Big Board came to 10.01 million shares as of noontime, against 10.21 million at the same point Friday.

Livestock

AMARILLO (AP) — Panhandle area cattlot meat trade (f.o.b. the plant) as of 11:15 a.m. (beef trade-Texas Panhandle, western Oklahoma and New Mexico):

No early sales carcass beef or primal cuts reported. Packers reported good interest, firm undertone noted. Few loads choice heifer beef 2.00 higher. Sales reported on 6 loads carcass beef, no primal cuts.

Marijuana Crop Found In City

A 19-year-old Lubbock man and his 17-year-old wife remained in Lubbock County Jail early today after police recovered about six ounces and 30 plants of suspected marijuana at an eastside residence Sunday.

Officers secured a search warrant for the house after they received information that the young man allegedly was in possession of a stolen gun.

In recently reported property crimes, whoever broke a car window with a rock Sunday at the rear of 2421 Broadway reportedly made off with $1,000 cash, according to victim Francis Savage.

Someone else apparently couldn't eat just one, so they stole $30 worth of potato chips from the Sonic Drive-In at 4th Street and Avenue T early Sunday.

The hungry burglars shattered a plate-glass window to get to the goods.

Tool boxes were popular weekend targets, according to several unhappy Lubbockites.

Jay Turner said he is out $847 after someone stole 300 pounds of tools from his unlocked garage at 4308 33rd St. Saturday or Sunday.

Similar property worth $500 reportedly was swiped from Richard Garcia's pickup parked at his 3202 Harvard St. home during the same time and Herbert Williams complained that a box containing $215 worth of tools was stolen from his pickup parked at his 2909 68th St. residence.

According to Lessie Thompson of 2610 Elm St., burglars broke through a window at that house Sunday and carried off a $630 television set.

Arsenia Flores of 2510 2nd St. reported two TV sets with a total value of $350 missing after burglars got through an open window Sunday.

Frank Saldana of 1411-A Ave. L told officers some stole a TV set and two watches, altogether worth $500, from his residence Sunday.

Two handguns, a CB antenna and a speaker were taken from Nicolas Martinez' pickup at his 1515 E. 17th St. home during the weekend, he told police.

A break-in artist reportedly kicked in the front door of Mario Benitez' home at 1906 28th St., rear, Sunday night and got away with a $225 stereo.

Police are seeking an 18- to 25-year-old white man suspected of indecently exposing himself to a 14-year-old girl about 7:20 p.m. Saturday.

The girl told police she and a friend were walking near 52nd Street and Avenue X when a black pickup drove by and stopped beside the curb in front of them.

The girl said a man in an orange shirt and blue cutoff jeans exited and got under the vehicle. As they walked past, the complainant said, the man called to them and exposed himself.

Weekend fights sent several Lubbockites to city hospitals with minor injuries.

Charles Coleman of 2901 E. Colgate St. told police he was at a neighbor's residence about 3:40 a.m. Sunday when a fight broke out. He was cut several times he said.

Patrick Okey Asogwa of 2701 8th St. told police he was at a club in the 1700-block of Parkway Drive early Sunday morning when a man hit him over the head with a chair because he asked the man's female friend to dance.

A 30-year-old 4th Street resident told police a man who intended to rape her attacked her about 11:25 p.m. Saturday. She said she had just climbed into bed when the man jumped on top of her. Her struggle, she said, forced him to discontinue his effort.

Jeanetta Lucille Brandon of 1220 18th St., No. 6, told officers she waved down in the 1400-block of Ave. E a man had beaten her about 8:15 p.m. Saturday. She said the man had been arguing with her when he grabbed a broom and began hitting her.

Juanita Morales of Route 3 reported she was at a swap meet in the 200-block of North Avenue U about 2:30 p.m. Saturday when a woman charged from behind a booth and began striking her.

Burglars who broke into Double D Produce at 2103 E. Broadway about 4:40 p.m. Saturday walked away with two bank bags filled with $974 in cash and checks, Don Holton reported. He said the bags were taken from his wife's purse.

Georgia, Illinois Prisons Quiet

By The Associated Press

Georgia officials said today that a riot at the State Prison may have been prompted by an uprising one day earlier at an Illinois prison. A total of four guards and two inmates died in the two disturbances.

Both the Georgia institution at Reidsville and the Pontiac Correctional Center in Illinois were quiet today. "Tense but under control" was the description given by one Georgia official after Sunday's riot.

"Our feeling is this occurred because of the incident Saturday in Pontiac, Ill.," said Sara Passmore, spokeswoman for the Georgia Department of Offender Rehabilitation. She said it appeared from the outset that the riot was directed at the prison administration.

Two inmates and a guard died in the Georgia riot.

At the Illinois prison, three guards were killed and $3 million in damage was done in a seven-hour rampage by several hundred inmates.

The Georgia prison, beset by racial troubles and overcrowding, has suffered earlier outbreaks in which two inmates were killed and about 30 others injured.

On July 5, U.S. District Cort Judge Anthony Alaimo ordered inmates separated by race.

But Mrs. Passmore said Sunday, "There are not enough facts" to determine the cause of the riot.

But, she added, since the riot broke out simultaneously in two wings, "it's apparent it was planned."

The violence erupted at 4 p.m. as inmates in two adjacent wings of the sprawling facility were being escorted to dinner.

According to Mrs. Passmore, a group of black inmates overpowered four guards — three white and one black. The three victims and another guard who was seriously injured were white.

Mrs. Passmore said the facility is 60 to 65 percent black.

After taking the guards hostage, inmates set fire to "bedding and things like that" and unlocked dormitory doors with keys taken from the officers, Mrs. Passmore said.

Guard Dan Harrison was found stabbed to death. Guard Preston Foskey, 32, was taken to Tattnall Memorial Hospital with at least 10 stab wounds in the neck, head, chest and arms and a collapsed lung. Foskey was reported in serious but stable condition early today.

The other two hostages were unharmed, Mrs. Passmore said.

The body of one slain inmate was found in a hallway of one wing shortly after the rioting inmates were subdued, she said. The other was found at the rear of a dormitory in the other wing an hour later.

The inmates' names were withheld pending notification of families.

Norman Cavender, a member of the state Board of Offender Rehabilitation, said agents of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation had questioned the prison's 2,480 inmates, but he declined to say whether they had determined the cause of the riot.

Pontiac guard Jack Conkle said he was uncertain whether he would return to work at the Illinois prison. He is worried he might treat prisoners unfairly, knowing some of them murdered his brother.

Robert Conkle, 22, was one of three guards stabbed to death Saturday. William Thomas, 49, and Stanley Cole, 47, also died.

Three other guards and three inmates were injured. Prisoners also burned three buildings. Warden Thaddeus Pinkney said about 20 inmates took part in the assault and about 200 participated in the riot.

Officials said prisoners will be locked in their cells until a state police investigation is complete.

"I really like the job but I don't know if I can treat them fairly or not," said Conkle. "I'd be frightened but if someone came up to me and said something about my brother, I don't know how I'd react."

Conkle said inmates who worked in certain shops had access to sheet metal and could make knives like the ones used to kill his brother, who was stabbed in the back several times.

A search of all prisoners turned up about 100 knives, mostly handmade, Pinkney said.

State officials said Sunday that the violent nature of some inmates, coupled with temperatures of up to 110 degrees in small overcrowded cells, probably led to the uprising.

"There are a lot of very vicious people in there and they don't have to have any cause to kill or maim people," said Charles Rowe, state director of corrections.

One of the buildings burned down was the clothing supply and laundry building, along with about $30,000 worth of inmate clothing.

"They're wearing not much of anything right now," said assistant warden David Sandahl.

Ford Mum On Iacocca Successor

DETROIT (UPI) — Ford Motor Co. officials had no immediate comment on a report that company chairman Henry Ford II will choose Philip Caldwell to succeed the ousted Lee Iacocca as president of the nation's No. 2 automaker.

In a copyrighted story, the Detroit News Sunday said Ford's board of directors would name Caldwell, now the company's deputy chief executive, as president at the board's regular meeting either in September or October.

Iacocca, known as the "father" of the popular Ford Mustang, was fired two weeks ago in an apparent personality conflict with the Ford chairman. His departure becomes official Oct. 15.

Ford spokesman Bill Harris said he and other company officials "really know nothing" about the News report.

"I'm personally scratching my head about it," said Harris. "I can't comment on it, confirm it or deny it."

The News said Caldwell, 58, is in line for Iacocca's job because his current duties in effect conform to the title of president. He currently answers directly to Ford at the top of the automaker's corporate hierarchy.

Caldwell has a reputation as a highly capable manager, and he has scored repeated successes as head of Ford's Philco, truck and Ford of Europe operations.

Another factor in his favor, the News said, is that he is seen as less ambitious than Iacocca in the eyes of Henry Ford, who plans to retire in four years.

Caldwell became a top company figure in April, 1977, when Ford announced the creation of a three-man "office of the chief executive" that included himself and Iacocca.

In June, Ford added his brother, William Clay Ford, to the triumverate and dropped Iacocca into a role subordinate to that held by Caldwell.

Recent speculation concerning Iacocca's successor has centered on William O. Bourke, the company's executive vice president.

Bourke had taken Iacocca's place at last week's unveiling of the 1979 Mustang and Capri and said at the time he

Detective's Persistence Frees Innocent Man

CLEVELAND (AP) — Anthony Pickens is free today because a Cleveland detective refused to believe he was a rapist and pursued the case until he found a man who bore a striking resemblance to Pickens.

Detective Bernard Gates and his partner, Isaac Rogers, were skeptical when the 22-year-old Pickens was indicted by a grand jury on two counts of kidnapping, two counts of robbery and one count of rape.

Pickens did not act like any rapist Gates had met in his nine years on the force, he said.

Pickens was arrested last March after two women aged 19 and 21 picked his mug shot from 300 photographs. They said he looked like the man who approached them while they walked together on an east side street, took them at gunpoint to an abandoned house and robbed them of $243.

The 21-year-old said she was raped.

Pickens' photograph was on file because of a breaking-and-entering arrest, but Gates described Pickens as mild-mannered and argued that he showed none of the traits the victims had attributed to their assailant.

Pickens also insisted he was innocent, saying he had spent the night in question with his wife and had a neighbor as witness.

Official Suggests Sharing Olympics

NEW YORK (AP) — City Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin says that if New York makes a serious bid for the 1984 summer Olympic Games it should consider sharing the games with Boston.

Goldin suggested in a letter to Mayor Edward Koch that Olympic events could take place in Boston and New York City as well as in cities between the two.

Carter Decision May Hurt Trade

By JAMES A. WHITE

NEW YORK (UPI) — President Carter's decision to use U.S. technology exports as a lever in relations with the Soviet Union has stirred business concern about the future of U.S.-Russian trade relations.

The White House, reacting to the recent trials of Soviet dissidents, placed all oil technology exports to the Soviet Union under government licensing requirements.

Carter also ordered cancellation of the planned sale of a $6.8 million Sperry-Univac computer to Tass, the Soviet news agency, for use at the 1980 Moscow Olympics.

Sperry Rand called the news disappointing that the export license for which it applied last September will be denied..

The U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade and Economic Council said the administration decision signals a reversal of U.S. policy encouraging Soviet trade and could spell a loss of American jobs and a worsening of the U.S trade deficit.

"To develop trade with the Soviet Union takes long, painstaking and continuous effort," said Harold B. Scott, president of the council, a private binational group.

"Putting controls on nonstrategic exports now will reverse the trend established over the last 20-years and on which the American business community has relied," Scott said.

The new controls on oil technology exports apparently will not affect a $144 million Soviet contract with Dresser Industries of Dallas, which previously obtained export license approval. That contract, announced June 1, is for the expansion and equipping of a Soviet plant making high-quality drilling bits.

Ed Luter, Dresser senior vice president for finance, said work under the contract is proceeding but he predicted U.S. firms in the oil service field could lose new Soviet business to foreign competitors because of the Carter decision.

"I think it will just add a further complication to doing business with the Soviets," Luter said. "I expect a lot of the business will go to our foreign competitors.

"We'll continue to do business with them in every legal way we can," he said, "but we don't know now if we'll get the orders."

Dr. Arthur A. Meyerhoff of Tulsa, Okla., a geologist who has served as consultant to the Russian oil industry and assisted in major U.S.-U.S.S.R. industrial agreements, said Russian production would suffer if Carter halted the flow of U.S. oil technology.

"In the long-term the effect is going to be enormous on the Soviet Union if Carter sticks with it," he said, even considering purchases from other countries and domestically produced euuipment. "They cannot manufacture oil equipment at a rapid enough rate to fill the demand."

U.S. non-agriculture exports to the Soviet Union have been in a decline, according to Commerce Department statistics. Exports last year totaled $565 million, down from about $800 million in 1976, and U.S. exports in the first quarter totaled $95 million, below last year's pace.

Oil production is a particularly sensitive area of the U.S.S.R. economy. The CIA last year predicted declining oil production in the Soviet Union, now the world's largest oil producer, will slow the country's economic growth in the 1980s and shift it from an oil exporter to an importer.

Oil exports provide the Soviets with hard Western currencies but the country has been slow to develop its energy reserves, many of which lie east of the Urals in areas remote to population and industrial centers.

Petroleum experts said that while other countries, including Japan, Norway, West Germany and Canada, are active suppliers of much equipment needed to expand and update the antiquated Russian oil industry, the United States remains the primary source of the most advanced equipment.

Not only is the Russian equipment outmoded, Meyerhoff said, their maintenance is faulty.

"They have incredibly antiquated junk. You would not believe your eyes."

DREAM MACHINE — An unidentified barefoot man took advantage of a parked car to catch a few winks in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, recently. The unorthodox napping arrangement was apparently to the man's liking. He only nodded his head groggily and returned to his dreams when passersby tried to rouse him. It is a common sight to see poor people sleeping on the streets at any time of the day or night in the port city of five million inhabitants. (AP Laserphoto)

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Make no commitments tomorrow or you could run the risk of having your generosity highly abused. Give only your good wishes until you check out the one in need.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Unless you're very explicit about your targets you're going to go off on a tangent and muddle things badly. Understand your objectives.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Take the big news item another will be telling you with a grain of salt. If you don't, you could jump in, only to discover the water's over your head.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Ignore "something for nothing" deals you hear about. The only way to get ahead tomorrow will be to roll up your sleeves and go to work.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Because you will lack the drive required to accomplish your goals tomorrow, you're apt to gamble on anything, sight-unseen. It would be a mistake.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your judgment is clouded by unwarranted optimism. You'd be wise to allow more time before committing yourself to something serious.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Double-check all serious work and don't assume others have done things right. If a mistake is made tomorrow, it will be a major one.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Promises made tomorrow are likely to be broken later so be careful in all your dealings, but especially in those involving money.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Guard against being too opinionated tomorrow or you could give an erroneous impression. Listen to all points of view before you state your case.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You could lull yourself into false security tomorrow. Where you think you have an ace-in-the-hole, it will be trumped if you play it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Trying to imitate the way another lives could be costly tomorrow. Those who can't accept you for what you are are fair weather friends anyway.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're going to be caught off-guard tomorrow if you rely too heavily on one who promised to help you out in a pinch. He or she won't.

Your Birthday

July 24, 1978

This coming year offers much of promise that will come your way with small effort on your part. If you treat these situations too lightly, however, nothing concrete will result.
