Along The Waterfront

Ray Bennett, John Ray Bennett, Jim Stansell and Al Smith fished in the gulf Tuesday and brought in ten king mackerel, ranging in size from five to 16 pounds each.

Frank Boxwell, Les Powell, and Tom K. Bransford, all of Dallas, fishing with Buck Armintrot in the charter boat Alys-Lou, caught 143 trout in one day's angling. The next day the went to the Gulf and caught four kingfish and two two seack anglers. They came inside to finish the day's angling, and caught 18 gafftops and four trout.

Mr. and Mrs. John of Houston also fished with Armintrot and caught 115 trout.

Terry and Roger Lew, Ken and Roy Kwan, and Robert King, all of San Antonio, caught 104 trout.

Elmer L. Butler of Calvert, and W. E. Butler and Dale K. Cooper, of Cleveland caught 27 kings, Buck said, and Mr. and Mrs. Gene Colbert of San Antonio, along with their daughters, Mary Beth and Susie, brought in a string of 89 trout the day they fished.

Dr. A. F. Day and his son Jeff, of Karnes City, caught 42 trout.

Leave Those Squirrels Alone Says Chief

"If people don't want to get bit, they ought to leave those squirrels alone," said Chief E. A. Stautzenberger today, and he declared the number of calls he has been getting to protect some poor defenseless human from a man-eating squirrel.

"That's tight," said Mayor Herman Johnson. "I don't know how many calls we've gotten recently because people have tried to pick up a squirrel and got bitten. A lot of the squirrels around town are so tame they'll allow some nut to pick them up, with the inevitable result. They get bitten."

Mayor and chief said that they had received many calls of persons who have been bitten or who have had someone in their family bitten, and who are afraid of rabies.

"Those squirrels are tame, all right," Johnson said, "until someone picks them up and scares them, and then they'll sure-enough bite. We've had some under observation, but none of them have shown any sign of rabies. Dr. Skinner (the veterinarian) says that they're rodents and that rodents seldom get rabies. But they also have the usual chisel teeth that all rodents have and these can inflict a most painful bite.

"Then we get a call and have to spend a lot of time and trouble catching the animal. If people would remember that any wild animal, no matter how tame it appears, will struggle to escape when caught, there would be none of these accidents."

Former Area Soton Dies

Harvey Shell, 79, a former state representative for 14 years in this district and a member of a pioneer family in Calhoun County, died Saturday in Gregory after a lengthy illness.

Shell, a 1903 graduate of Baylor was a leader in the Democratic Party.

He and his father, the late J. H. Shell, engineered in 1903 the first irrigation program in Calhoun County for rice farming. Their original fresh-water dam is now known as Foster Lake at Indianola.

The Shell family drilled many of the water wells in that area, and were early sponsors of the Intra Coastal Canal Association. They also built and operated cotton gins in Calhoun and San Patricio.

The original Shell Farm is now the DeShazor Park Addition in Port Lavaca, and the former Shell home is in the block west of the courthouse.

He had lived in Gregory since 1916, and represented Aransas County in the State Legislature for many years. He had a host of friends and acquaintances here.

Funeral services were held at 4 p.m. at the First Baptist Church in Gregory, with the Rev. J. C. Turner officiating. Burial was in Gregory Cemetery, with Cag-Marshal Funeral Home of Taft in charge of arrangements.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mary Alma Shell; a daughter, Mrs. J. S. Wilson of Ingleside; and three grandsons.

Local Firm Makes Forms For Corpus Christi Skyscraper

A local firm—Rockport Steel Form and Manufacturing Co.—has much to do with the look of the 600 Broadway Building, rising on the side formerly occupied by the White Plaza Hotel, having made the forms for the hooded windows that add so bizarre a touch to the landscape.

Windows, originally invented to protect from wind, rain and cold, and to admit light, are sometimes a mixed blessing in sunny Corpus Christi. Here the need was for a window that would keep out the sun, reduce glare, and lower air conditioning costs.

Jenkins and Hoff, the Houston architectural firm that designed the building, in company with the Granite Construction Company, another Houston firm awarded the contract for construction, dumped the job in the lap of Joe Phillips, of the Steel Form Company. All he had to do, they said, was to come up with a new steel form for a concrete window frame that would have unusual design and appearance and shut out the sun, economically.

The three firm team eventually came up with the answer on paper, and Phillips was given the green light to manufacture forms capable of producing a frame with a 17 degree pitch at the top. A pilot form did the job for which it was intended, so Phillips went ahead and built seven forms and 14 steel pallets. In these forms, 378 units were pre-cast. The decorative form was designed, and then concrete poured for the units.

The pitched windows are expected to keep out glare and thus reduce the volume of air-conditioning required when the sun is hitting the building.

Phillips also got into the act on additional building materials. He prefabricated 20 huge final forms used to cast decorations to be installed on the first six floors of the building.

The pitch on the windows has given the building at 600 Broadway a fresh style-note, builders say. The method of installing the windows has caused much comment in the area, and seems sure to open a whole new world of architectural styling for homes, office buildings and other structures.

Other recent Rockport Steel Form jobs have been the fabrication of all steel forms for the 5641 foot Devil's River bridge at Del Rio, and an unusual recent contract was fabrication of 12' and 16' diameter tunnel forms for the Sanford at Borger.

Art Lecture To Be Given at Aransas Pass

The antiquities of ancient civilization will be covered in a slide illustrated lecture on art history by Mrs. Mary Louise Jones in fellowship hall of the Presbyterian Church at 8 p.m., Wednesday, July 31, Aransas Pass.

The close association between the study of history and art will be presented in a lecture entitled "Art Is For Always," similar in nature to about 30 lectures Mrs. Jones has presented recently to groups in Europe while teaching in the American school in Bitburg, Eifel, Germany.

Painting, architecture and sculpture will be traced briefly by Mrs. Jones beginning with the ancient Egyptians and Mesopotamians, Greeks and Romans, and continuing through the Byzantine and Gothic periods of the Middle Ages down through the Renaissance period in Europe.

Mrs. Jones will also include in her lecture a discussion of painting covering methods and purposes beginning with cave man wall paintings through present day trends.

Most of the art centers and art objects to be presented in slides were visited and studied by Mrs. Jones while traveling into the art centers and art museums of the Mediterranean area, the Middle East, and Far East and on the continent of Europe.

The lecture is under the sponsorship of the Women's Division of the Chamber of Commerce of Aransas Pass and is being held to raise funds to improve beach facilities.

Admission to the lecture will be $1 for adults and 50 cents for students, according to Mrs. Warren Hower, chairman of the lecture presentation.

Mrs. Kenneth McCaleb, chairman of the ticket committee, said that tickets will be on sale this week at the Chamber of Commerce office, The Progress, Kaufman's and Una Kennedy's office in Aransas Pass, and at Kaufman, Jr., and Fred Jones Pharmacy in Port Aransas. Tickets will also be sold at the door.

Refreshments are to be served following the lecture. The wife of the late C. I. Jones of Aransas Pass, Mrs. Jones spent a year teaching in Tripoli, Libya, North Africa, before accepting the teaching post in Germany.

She received a bachelor of arts degree in painting from Texas Women's University in Denton and a master of arts degree in fine arts and education from Columbia University of New York City.

Mrs. Jones is a member of the South Texas Art League and has served on the board of the Texas Fine Arts Association in Austin for many years.

She is included in the Hall of Fame of the American Association of University Women in Washington, D.C.

Rockport AFS Changes Command

The command of 813th ACW Squadron changed hands Monday, July 22, when 1st Lt. Charles R. Dennis assumed command from Maj. Walter S. Falk, Jr. Major Falk, who commanded the squadron for nearly a year, departed Tuesday for Adair Air Force Station, Oregon, where he will be assigned to Headquarters, Portland Air Defense Sector.

Lieutenant Dennis is a native of Brooklyn, New York and was graduated from Manhattan College with a Bachelor of Electrical Engineering degree. He was assigned to Rockport Air Force Station as Communications Officer in January 1959, after a year in Korea.

On August 1, the unit will become known as Detachment 4, 29th Air Division and will report directly to the division headquarters at Richards-Gebaur Air Force Base, Missouri. The station will be manned until final closing by a permanent cadre of four military personnel headed by Lt. Dennis. He is assisted by Staff Sergeant Robert Prince, Airman First Class Rodolfo Cantu and Airman First Class Richard Delaney.

Sergeant Prince is a native of Corpus Christi where he attended W. B. Ray High School. He entered the Air Force in 1955 as a radar repairman. His service includes a tour at Kisatoyama Island, Japan, and instructor duty in radar maintenance and ballistic missile systems. He has taken college courses at Allen Hancock Junior College. After his release from the Navy he was employed for three years by Chrysler Missile Division. He returned to the military service in 1961 and attended radar school at Keesler AFB, Miss., before being assigned to Rockport in October, 1962.

Bond Sales Here Exceed Quota, Chairman Says

Sales of Government E and H Savings bonds in Aransas County continue to be good, according to Fred Bracht, county chairman, who said that they have already reached 114.3% of the quota set for the county at the first of the year, with approximately six months still to go.

Percentage-wise, this places the county far ahead of the other nine in District 7, of which Allen Wood of Corpus Christi is chairman.

In June, sales were $8368, bringing cumulative total for the first six months to $68,596. The quota set was $60,000. Next high county in the group is Live Oak, which has sold $4457 in June, for a cumulative total of $32,764, and 65.5% of its quota.

Others, in the order of the percentages of bonds sold are Nueces, $431,164 in June, for a cumulative total of $2,473,301 and 64.9%; Bee County, $25,315 in June, $94,784, 63.2%; Brees County, $8829, $54,303, 60.3%; Kleberg, $25,723 in June, $115,468, 48.1%; San Patricio, $29,390 in June, $184,786, 39.3%; Jim Wells, $11,136 in $68,976, 35.2%; Kennedy County, none; McMullen County, none.

Pollution Unit Okays Aransas Sewage Plant

The Texas Water Pollution Control Board ruled unanimously Thursday to approve an application by the American Liberty Oil Co. for construction of a sewage treatment plant in Lamar townsite, Aransas County.

The Liberty firm is building a motor hotel and boat marina on Copano Bay. Residents of the area had protested bitterly for the past several weeks.

The board qualified its approval of the Liberty application by specifying that point of deposit of the treatment plant must be extended 500 feet further out into the bay.

The seven member board Wednesday listened to testimony from witnesses and discussed a large volume of correspondence from private citizens concerned about pollution of the bay.

Mrs. Joseph T. Kenny of Aransas County, who was representing herself and 12 other area land owners, said:

"We strongly urge that you deny this permit as being contrary to the best interest of the surrounding property owners and to the waterfront owners of the adjoining district."

Speaking on behalf of the American Liberty Oil Co. and endeavoring to give assurances of effective sewage control in connection with the motel permit were Ed Munson, consulting engineer from the firm of Lockwood, Andrews and Newnam (designers of the treatment plant,) and Liberty attorney H. F. Parks of Dallas.

Sheriff Shivers Attends Meet In San Antonio

Sheriff Virginia Shivers, who has been attending the convention of the Sheriff's Association of Texas in San Antonio, attracted a good deal of attention as being the only woman sheriff at the meeting.

In the San Antonio Light for Wednesday, it said: "Sheriff Virginia Shivers is a 5-foot-2 grandmother who won her position over eight men in an Aransas County election last November."

"The third elected woman sheriff in Texas history. Mrs. Shivers was first appointed to fill the job which was held by her husband, Arley C. Shivers, for 11 years. He suffered a heart attack in October of the first year of his new term."

"Friends encouraged Mrs. Shivers to run for the election to finish out her husband's term. She didn't participate in the campaign, but came out winner in a plurality election."

"She doesn't really need that 357 Magnum to keep the peace in the island and coastal county of Aransas. In fact, she admits with a chuckle, she doesn't even know how to use one."

"But with her two trusty deputies, she says that things are quiet in her county of about 7,500, except when the tourists arrive. Then she is kept pretty busy tracking down visitors to deliver emergency calls."

"For the most part, Mrs. Shivers stays in the sheriff's office, serving as dispatcher and taking care of the paperwork."

"She has a radio in her car and at her house to be available for emergency calls at any hour."

"Sheriff Shivers says that she and her deputies are now cracking down on minors consuming and possessing alcoholic beverages in the seacoast county."

"The red-haired Mrs. Shivers had the honor of being the only lady-sheriff present at the sheriff's (continued on page 8)

ARANSAS NATURAL GAS CO. INSTALLS NEW-TYPE OF PIPE

In one of the first installations of its kind on the Gulf Coast, the Aransas Natural Gas Co. of Rockport has completed a distribution system on Lamar Peninsula, utilizing plastic pipe.

Earl G. Toll, of the DuPont plastics division, who was one of those supervising the construction, said that this was done for a number of reasons. The material used, Delprin, is one of the newest plastics, and the first to be fabricated into pipe of this type.

"It is definitely pointed at the pipe market where resistance to hydrocarbons is important," Toll said, "for the material has unusual resistance to these. We have been selling a good deal of it to the oil industry ever since 1960, to use for salt water disposal and ground flow lines, and it has been found very satisfactory for these purposes."

"It is extremely corrosion resistant, has better mechanical properties, better fatigue endurance, and higher tensile strength than any plastic developed for such purpose prior to this time."

Toll said that the pipe had been so satisfactory elsewhere that a year or so ago his company had started developing sizes and fittings that could be used in gas distribution work.

"The one at Lamar is one of the first in the Gulf Coast region," he said. "One reason for its use there was its high resistance to corrosion. The Lamar region is highly corrosive to conventional metal pipe, and required a great amount of cathodic protection, which adds to the cost of installing metal pipe."

"Another reason for its use, I suppose, was the fact that Aransas Natural Gas didn't have to hire any outside help to install the pipe. The company crews, with a small ditch digger, handled the whole thing. Of particular interest in keeping down leaks and making for easy installation is the fact that the pipe is heat-fused together, or welded end-to-end by an easy to handle machine that practically anyone can operate."

Toll said that until recent years, DuPont had only been in business to supply raw materials to others who manufactured the plastics into finished products such as hose, cloth, and all the other things now made of these materials.

However, he said, the company had taken a step forward and built its own pipe factory, capable of manufacturing between 10,000,000 and 15,000,000 feet a year at Tulsa, Okla. He pointed out that this plant, in the midst of the oil fields, was at an advantage for a number of reasons. The plastic pipe is lighter, and freight on it is lower than on much of the metal pipe previously used.

He said that DuPont was interested in tourist type business development like that in this area, and to which the plastic pipe was valuable because of its ease of installation.

Aransas Natural Gas has installed about four miles, with 27-inch main along Highway 35, and 34-inch lines for distribution.

TWO LOST AS PLANE CRASHES INTO GULF

G. Charles Childre, 43, president of the Texas Continental Life Insurance Company of San Antonio, and E. W. Samuels, 60, treasurer of the company, were lost Saturday night when the new plane Childre was flying crashed into the Gulf of Mexico off Port Isabel.

Childre was the husband of Mrs. Ruth Childre, well known in San Antonio art circles and a frequent visitor to Rockport, where she has attended summer school at the Rockport School of Fine Arts for many years.

Wreckage of the five-place twin-engine plane was sighted 22 miles offshore Sunday morning by a fishing boat.

Childre flew to Brownsville to confer with two of his Brownsville insurance agents. One of them, R. H. Owens, accompanied him to the airport Saturday night.

It was first reported that parts of a human body were sighted. However, no bodies were recovered from the wreckage. A coast guardsman said that the debris indicated the plane hit the water with terrific force and that the victims could have been thrown from the craft.

Childre's briefcase was found in the wreckage. An intensive search was started in the 32-foot deep water for the bodies.

The Coast Guard dispatched several boats to the scene. It also sent a Coast Guard plane from Corpus Christi.

Childre also was president of the First Security Life Insurance Company and the Bankers Life Insurance Company, both of Little Rock, Ark. He also had banking and investment interests.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. McElveen and children returned last Friday after a week's camping trip on which they were accompanied by Linda McElveen of Corpus Christi.

Park Board Makes Recommendations To City Council

The City Council, at its regular meeting, considered recommendations made by the City Park Board, and approved them.

The Board recommended that a portion of Live Oak and of Morgan Streets, shown as intersecting in the center of Mathis Park be closed, and that the present existing portion of Live Oak Street be designated as the proper route of Live Oak Street.

The Board also recommended that the existing portion of Morgan, paved from Live Oak Street to Church Street (Highway 35) be designated as the proper route for Morgan Street, and that the portion of Morgan Street from Magnolia to Live Oak Streets, be opened only when it becomes necessary, and then not in such a way as to interfere with Mathis Park.

These recommendations, the Board said, were made so that the wooded area now being used as a park can be preserved as a playground and picnic area. "It is further recommended," the Board said, "that the portion of the lots on the outer extremities of the park area be kept as future play areas for such activities as shuffleboard, badminton or tennis."

In addition the Board recommended that the following improvements be made now to the wooded area of the park:

1. That water be made available at the park for drinking as well as for irrigation.

2. That dead wood be removed from the trees and grounds.

3. That existing equipment be repaired.

4. That a hurricane-type fence be erected on the north and east side of the wooded area.

5. That electric power and lights be brought into the wooded area.

The Park Board members said, they plan to use existing money in the Park Board budget to build family-type barbecue facilities and tables.

"Realizing also," the Board said, in its letter of recommendation, "that work is being done at the present time toward preparation of next year's city budget, the Board recommends that consideration be given to raising the budgeted amount for parks from $500 to $1,000. It is the feeling of the Board that this requested amount is not extravagant—rather it is a minimum figure needed to make the planned improvements to Mathis Park and to Dickson Memorial Park."

The Park Board is composed of Chairmen Charles A. Roe, Jr., and members, Paul Clark Sorenson, James Adams, James Little, Mrs. Byron Bushart and Mrs. W. A. Ormand.

Wend and Czech Communities Make Interesting Tour

For those who like to explore the lesser-known parts of Texas, a most interesting Sunday tour from Houston starts out over Highway 290 through Satsuma and returns through the country of the Czechs and Wends.

Past Hockley from whence market hunters used to bring game to sell on the Houston market, through Waller, named for a signer of the Texas Declaration of Independence, the road leads. Four miles out of Waller is Prairie View State Normal and Industrial College for Negroes (visitors welcome) and 4.5 miles farther is a roadside park where a sign on a gate says Liendo Plantation.

From the gate a dirt road winds about two miles through oaks, yuccas and dogwoods to the state-ly, white, 15-room mansion erected in 1851 by Leonard Groce and purchased in 1874 by the noted sculptor, Elizabeth Ney and her husband, Dr. Edward Montgomery. Their graves are still on the plantation, which is private property.

Continue on Highway 290 through Hempstead (once known as Six Shooter Junction) to Chappell Hill and its century-old Thomas Inn. From here it is only 22 miles to Brenham, famous for blue bonnets, handsome old gingerbread house (listed by the local Chamber of Commerce) and its annual Maifest, when the whole town turns out and has a good time.

Independence, the birthplace of Baylor University, where ruins of the first college still stand, lies 12 miles to the north, over U. S. 90 and FM 50. Also found in this little hamlet are the old rock Independence Baptist Church, built in 1839, where Sam Houston was baptized and the Houston family burial plot. There are also a number of homes in the area built before the Texas revolution.

From Independence take FM 390 through Gay Hill, named for two pioneer citizens, on to Burton, through some of the most beautiful country in Texas. At Burton, named for another pioneer, turn right on U. S. 290 once more to Carmine, Ledbetter and Giddings. The latter town was established in 1872, by the Wends, from the nearby settlement of Serbin. One of the towns newspapers, the Giddings Deutsches Volkblatt possesses the only Wendish type in America, although the paper was only published in English and German.

At Giddings, also, is the grave of Wild Bill Longley, early Texas gunman.

Turn left at Giddings on FM 448 to its junction with FM 2239, then turn right to Serbin, and you are in the country of the Wends. These people pass for German, since the parent stock has lived in Prussia and Saxony for more than 1500 years. But in reality the Wends—or Serby, as they call themselves—are Slavs, constitut-

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Marvin Franz, Sr., Beaumont, announce the engagement of their daughter, Doris Lee, to Bobby Eugene Reed, son of Mrs. O. B. Reed of Rockport, and the late Mr. Reed. Miss Franz is a May graduate of Lamar State College of Technology where she received a BBA degree in secretarial science. Mr. Reed is a second class petty officer, stationed at Norfolk, Va., with the U. S. Navy.

ing the smallest group of a strain that includes Russians, Poles and Czechs.

The old cemetery at Serbin is noted for its porcelain miniatures and for the cedars trimmed in the quaint European manner, while St. Paul's Lutheran Church was built almost 100 years ago. In the beginning, men occupied the balcony for worship, while the women worshipped from the lower floor.

Continue west from Serbin on FM 2239 to a sign on a paved crossroad pointing south towards Smithville and Buescher State Park, which is a mile or so outside the town. Smithville itself is located on the site of an ancient Tonkawa Indian camp ground.

From Smithville, take State Highway 71 southeast, through West Point and Plum to its junction with FM 609 and then turn right to FM 2436 and the little village of Hostyn, first Czech settlement in Texas. In 1956, although Hostyn's population is normally only about 25, over 10,000 people celebrated its centennial.

Top attraction is a famous group of shrines, grottoes and chapels, surrounding the white, steeped church. There are fourteen marble shrines with statues two chapels, a tall granite cross and a replica of Grotto of Lourdes in France.

From Hostyn, return to FM 609 and turn left, to Flatonia. This community was named for Texas pioneer F. W. Flato, whose home still stands, surrounded by beautiful oaks. Its walls are of stone and three feet thick. Flatonia is one of a number of Czech settlements in the area; others are Paraha, Fayetteville, Shiner and Bubina.

Incidentally, at Dubina, between Weimar and Schulenburg, off a dirt road leading to the Catholic Church of St. Cyril and St. Methodius, are the remains of the Pyolovany house, built like an old-time peasant dwelling in the Russian Ukraine, from whence the Pytlavany originally came.

However, to continue the tour, leave Flatonia on State 95, headed south through Moulton. At Shiner there is a huge plant that manufactures all sorts of wire baskets, a brewery, a large general hospital and the beautiful St. Cyril and St. Methodius Catholic Church (another one, for these are the patron saints of the Czechs, who are fond of naming their churches after them.)

From Shiner to Hallettsville it is 15 miles east on U. S. Highway 90A. Otto Goedecke, Inc., a leading world cotton firm, headquarters at Hallettsville, which has a tall and ancient courthouse, an old-fashioned square on which stand old-fashioned business houses, and many fine old homes. The one belonging to M. L. Bozka is considered outstanding in Texas.

Leave Hallettsville on U. S. Highway 90A east, and after 30 miles turn left on State 71 at Altar, and drive 11 miles into Columbus. A massive stone courthouse stands here, surrounded by huge magnolia trees which county commissioners recently refused permission to cut, even though the refusal blocked plans for Columbia pictures to film "The Traveling Lady" by Horton Foote in Columbus.

On the southwest corner of the square stands an old brick water tower, now a Confederate Museum and meeting place for the local chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

From Columbus, take U. S. Highway 90 east through Sealy to where, a couple of miles east of that town a road leads off to old San Felipe and Stephen F. Austin State Park. A reproduction of Austin's cabin stands there, as well as a bronze statue and many other things of historical interest. Leaving San Felipe and turning east once more on U. S. 90, the route leads through Brookshire and Katy to Houston and home.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Foster and children Craig and Dorothy of Houston left by jet Friday for six weeks to be spent touring England, Belgium, Holland, France and other European countries. Mr. and Mrs. Foster are former Rockport residents. She is a niece of Mrs. G. C. Mullinax and Miss Lillian Gray.

Visiting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Schlieder this week are her sisters, Mrs. Loyce Risinger, Dallas, Mrs. Eunice Hitzfeld of Alice, a niece, Mrs. Lois Ricks, Vicki and Miss Joyce Harper of Ft. Worth.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Freshwater, of Weirton, West Va., and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cunningham and son Gary, New Cumberland, West Virginia, are visiting the Joe Phillips' brother, and Mrs. Doris Cunningham is her sister.

New Highway Bridge Being Built West Of Del Rio

One of the highest bridges in Texas, now rapidly nearing completion, will help tame the Devil's River.

The stream comes by its name honestly. Usually it flows quietly through eroded rock canyons, and some years it is possible to walk dry shed over long stretches of its bed. But three times within the past two decades cloudbursts have transformed it into a raging devil that took hundreds of lives and did hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of damage.

To tame these demons and harness their power, the governments of the United States and Mexico and have joined forces to build the great Amistad Dam, which will be finished sometime in 1967. This will stretch 6½ miles across the Rio Grande Valley, and behind it will be confined the waters of both the Devil's River and the Rio Grande.

But even before construction can be started on the dam itself, work must be completed on a $10,000,000 preliminary project; the relocation of 14 miles of main line of the Southern Pacific, most of it in the Devil's River Canyon, where water will be 190 feet when the dam is finished.

This project, handled by contractors under the auspices of the International Boundary and Water Commission, will keep the railroad as nearly to its old alignment as possible, while lifting it out of the area to be flooded.

Three bridges are necessary to do this, and the largest will be 2230 feet long, and tower more than 236 feet above the present river bed. This is nearly as high as the famed Pecos River Bridge on the same line where it crosses the Pecos River a few miles to the west, 85 feet higher than the new bridge, will be when it is completed.

The two abutments and five piers of the new bridge will contain 2,000 tons of reinforcing steel—some of it 2¼ inches in diameter. This is buried in 24,000 tons of concrete. Footings for three of the piers are sunk as much as 68 feet into the solid rock of the river bed.

Supervising construction of the three railroad bridges and relocated rail lines for the Fort Worth office of the U. S. Corps of Engineers are Marvin Taylor, resident engineer, and Joseph Cruz, assistant resident engineer on the job.

Working closely with them are two Southern Pacific engineers who serve as liaison men between the railroad and the International Boundary and Water Commission. They are James F. Scheuneck, resident engineer, and S. A. Stutes, project supervisor of structures.

For the access highway and reclamation of U. S. Highway 90, the resident engineer for the Texas Highway Department is C. P. Brown.

Contractor on the railroad relocation is Collins Construction Company, with Norvell Justice as superintendent. Contractors on the bridge are Massman Construction Company and John F. Beasley Company with R. D. (Dutch) Bleich and Richard McLain as superintendents, respectively.

Completion of the bridge and roadbed is scheduled for this spring.

Another huge project being readied for pre-dam construction is a 5,500-foot state highway bridge to carry vehicular traffic over the reservoir area. H. B. Zachry holds this contract, and equipment was moved in for the $4,000,000 project in December. A total of 11.5 miles of highway will be relocated.

Also due for relocation is the bridge over San Pedro Flats for U. S. Highway 277 traffic, tabbed at around $1,000,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Schwab and their son Eric, of Van Nuys, Calif., left Monday after visiting Mrs. Schwab's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Davis for a week. Their daughter Christine stayed for a longer visit with her grandparents.

Mr. and Mrs. James Casey and children of Alexandria, Va., arrived Tuesday to visit with his mother, Mrs. Nora Casey, and Mr. and Mrs. C. E. McElveen and the Ernest Russell's for a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Davis and children of Houston spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Jackson and Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Davis.

This clipping when presented at the Cove Drive In box office will admit Orvil Cawthorn and guest to attend the show on Sunday, Monday or Tuesday, of this week, free of charge.

How to treat a steak

A thick and tender steak sizzling on the platter — ah, that's noble eating! But only if it's cooked just right.

Of all the ways to cook a steak, none's better than broiling it in a modern gas range. The controlled instant heat of a gas broiler seals in those savory juices and makes it easy to cook your steak just the way you like it — from rare to well done.

And incidentally, you broil with the door CLOSED in a gas range. You cook the steak, but not the cook.

Food tastes better,
with a gas range!

George Catlin First Painter of Comanches

The first and freshest record of the Comanches, once scourges of Texas and Mexico, was made during the 1830's by George Catlin who wandered alone through the West with a paint box, risking his life to leave an undying picture of Indian life.

Be sheer grit, Catlin made his way among no less than 48 tribes in seven years, and by instinctive tact he gained the hospitality of the Indians and overcame their superstitious fears of his brush and canvas. He came back with a priceless historical record consisting of some 500 paintings and dozens of notebooks filled with descriptions of their tribal customs. These he later published in a book varying title which, in its earliest form, was called "Letters and Notes on the Manners, Customs and Conditions of the North American Indian . . . With 400 Illustrations Carefully engraved from His Original Paintings."

He spent his lifetime making hazardous journeys on foot and horseback through the West and South America in search of his material. His pictures in the Smithsonian Institution and the great libraries of America are a gold mine of information for modern artists and historians, yet all of his life was a struggle and the material he amassed through ordeal and self-sacrifice couldn't save him from a lonely and penniless old age.

The pictures he painted were as real and striking as those of a candid camera. While his colors seemed to have been squeezed from the red earth and rock of the Indians' home, and though he used them more like a map marker than an artist, he had the crack journalist's eye for significant sweep and detail. Each Indian was an individual whose portrait he limned with meticulous care. And he painted them all—Sacs, Foxes, Sioux, Delaware, Objibway, Mandan, Blackfoot, Crow—even the blowgun Comibos of the South American pampas and the savage Fuegians of Cape Horn and the Island of Fire.

His Comanche and Pawnee paintings were made when he accompanied the military expedition of the First Dragoons in 1834 as they traveled across the Southern Plains to the Rocky Mountains—a government undertaking that was the first move toward acquisition of the Mexican-controlled southwest, as well as one of the most disastrous marches in the early days of the U.S. Army in the West.

Adventure was Catlin's constant companion, but on this trip it almost got the better of him. In a letter, the artist wrote of the illness which struck the dragoons with devastating effect:

"I have been detained here (at the False Washita) with the rest of the cavalcade from the extraordinary sickness which is affecting the regiment . . . nearly one-half the command, including several officers, have been thrown upon their backs by the epidemic, a slow distressing bilious fever. The horses of the regiment are also sick . . . They are dying daily and the men falling sick, and General Leavenworth has ordered Colonel Dodge to select all the men and horses able to proceed and be off tomorrow on the march toward the Comanches. . . . Catlin accompanied the drastically reduced contingent, only to fall sick himself, so sick he had to be carried in a horse litter."

Day after day Colonel Dodge led his dragoons westward, knowing they were in Comanche country and that the Indians were aware of their presence; wondering if they would be received in peace or annihilated. At last, one day about noon, a large party of horsemen was observed on a distant ridge and if Catlin was a litter case, he found time to observe everything that happened during their peaceful reception, and to write about it afterwards.

The leader of the war party "rode a fine and spirited horse . . . In his hand he tightly drew the reins upon a heavy Spanish bit; and at every jump he plunged into the animal's sides, until they were a gore of blood, a huge pair of spurs plundered no doubt from the Spaniards in their border wars . . ."

The artist learned when he painted Indian's portrait that he was called His-co-san-chees (Jesus Sanchez), Little Spaniard, and Catlin thought he was a halfbreed. More likely he was a Mexican child, kidnapped and raised by the Indians. Whatever his antecedents, Catlin said that although the Comanches generally held such people in contempt, this man was one of the most highly-regarded warriors and leaders of the entire tribe.

At the time of Catlin's visit in 1834, the Comanches had already gained a wide reputation for their horsemanship, and during the days when the dragoons traveled with Little Spaniard's war party, the Indians showed off their prowess—dashing off at breakneck speed to sink an arrow in the heart of a buffalo, capturing and subduing the finest wild horses, and displaying the trick riding methods used when they engaged in mortal combat. Among the most impressive of these was their way of throwing themselves far down on the sides of their horses while riding at full speed in the heat of battle.

If the Comanches were a new experience to Catlin, Catlin was a new experience to the Comanches. Portrait painting was an awesome thing to them. Only the boldest would approach at first, for in their eyes he was a strange and fearsome medicine man. But his remarkable faculty for winning the friendship and confidence of Indians served him particularly well among the Comanches. Once he convinced them there was no danger, everyone wanted to have his picture painted.

It was not the first time plains Indians had been painted, but it was the first time they had been painted as a tribe, in their own country, at their customary occupations, Catlin's Comanches wear the garments and decorations, live in the tipis, perform the ceremonies and engage in labors specific to their tribe and station in life. A Catlin Comanche is a Comanche, and this is important for popular American art had conventionalized the red man, presenting him in Mohawk costume in either a Cherokee corn field or an Objibway canoe, totally ignoring the vast difference between many of the tribes!

He exhibited the same meticulousness during the time he spent painting the various tribes of North America. Everywhere he went, Catlin found the strange details of a life unique upon this earth and recorded it for posterity. Revolted by the Indian practice of scalping, for instance, that didn't prevent him investigating it. A scalp, he was told, was evidence that the owner had killed an enemy and to be genuine must show that it was from the crown of the head. This prevented a deceitful warrior from taking two trophies from the same victim! Scalps, to the Indians, were foolproof records of his prowess!

Catlin embarked upon his project of preserving a record of the Indian tribes in 1832; in 1836 he exhibited 494 paintings, including those of the Comanches and their village in New York, quickly attaining international fame. Men like Henry Clay, Daniel Webster and S.F.B. Morse saw them there and in his successful exhibitions at Philadelphia, Washington and Boston. Then in 1839—when public interest along with admission fees had waned—Catlin took his gallery to London. There he stayed for nearly six years before moving to France. In Paris he exhibited in the Salle Valentino and, by command of King Louis Philippe, at the palace of the Tuileries and the Louvre. But the French uprising and riots in 1848 brought disaster. It was only with great difficulty he reached London once more, where his luck ran out. He became the victim of unscrupulous speculators and fell deeply in debt. In 1852, bankrupt, he lost his entire collection to his creditors and another catastrophe struck, for his wife and son died suddenly.

An American, Joseph Harrison, Jr., paid off the artist's debts and took possession of the paintings and paraphernalia that Catlin had exhibited, shipping them to his home in Philadelphia where they were stored for 27 years, out of sight and deteriorating until they were donated to the Smithsonian Institution seven years after Catlin's death.

When he lost his collection, Catlin was 56. Financially ruined and his life's work obliterated, he bravely started to remake all his paintings from sketches and memory. He also began to travel again and between 1852 and 1860 covered more territory than ever. He visited native tribes in South America from Tierra del Fuego to the Upper Amazon and went clear across that continent from the Atlantic coast to Peru.

Once, during a siesta, he woke to find a jaguar pawing his sleeping arm, a giant fugitive slave named Caesar, who carried Catlin's supplies and drawing materials. Another time one of the big cats attacked Catlin and almost killed him.

Returning from South America with a new treasure trove of paintings, the artist also made another extensive trip to the Northwest part of the United States and even to Alaska—a slim little man in an old brown derby and ancient frock coat, equipped with a few maps, little money and one of Colonel Colt's revolving carbines.

George Catlin died December 23, 1872, in Jersey, in his 77th year, after a painful illness. He had painted and repainted pictures of the American Indians, and championed their cause to the very end of his life. Practically the last words he spoke were: "What will become of my Indian gallery?"

OUTDOORS IN TEXAS

By VERN SANFORD

Our favorite fish in the Gulf of Mexico knows no particular season.

It is the flounder . . . one of the most unusual of all fishes.

This is a fish with many aliases, the most popular of which is the fluke. Webster describes fluke as a mistake. And that's what a flounder looks like.

Flounder fishing long has been considered one of the favorite night fishing sports. It can be found in shallow waters, at night by the use of a Coleman lantern or a strong beam lamp of similar nature.

During the last few years rod and reel anglers also have discovered that bait fishing for flounder can be real sport.

A flounder will hit on most anything that will tempt a speckled trout. It will fight lures. Or it will nibble away at a live shrimp and finally take it with a grab.

You can catch flounder while fishing off boat docks. Also in the middle of Laguna Madre. Or in any of the backbay waters along the Texas coast. There is particularly good flounder fishing along the coast from Rockport south to Port Isabel.

Flounder put up a wonderful fight on light tackle.

Last fall Doug English, who makes Bingo baits, was standing on the concrete wall of the basin around the Red Fish Lodge at Port Mansfield. He was just killing time while his boat was being readied.

Doug flipped a yellow Bingo along a concrete revetment. Next thing he knew he had a big flounder. He caught a half-dozen in as many casts.

Another time a group of biologists working down the intracoastal canal decided to spend the night of Padre Island near the Port Mansfield cut. They caught flounder until they tired.

A group of Sweetwater business men, headed by Earl Webb, go to Port Isabel each summer. They fish in Laguna Madre in the vicinity of Three Islands and catch enough flounder in a couple of days to fill their deep freeze.

Usually flounder are found on the bottom, where they do their feeding in the mud. That is why in the fall of the year they move into the shallow waters, along the coastline, to feed.

There is tremendous floundering activity in the vicinity of Port Aransas during the early winter months. Hundreds of persons, wearing waders and carrying gas lanterns and gigs, work these shallow waters.

By shining the light down on the water they are able to see the backs of these flounders as the fish grope through the mud looking for small crustaceans. When sighted they are speared and dropped into gunny sacks trailing in the water behind the fishermen.

Although fried flounder is delicious, undoubtedly one of the most appetizing fish dishes served anywhere is a stuffed flounder.

Many seafood restaurants along the coast make a specialty of this delicacy.

Stuffing of the flounder is simple. After they are cleaned and placed flat in a well-greased pan, they slit down the middle of the exposed side. Flesh then is pulled back to make room for stuffing.

Stuffing is made of a mixture of onions, cracker crumbs and celery, held together with your favorite dressing or sauce. Once stuffed, the flounder is placed in the oven and cooked until done.
