

Census Workers Start To Check Out 'Vacancies'

By PAUL SIMS
Managing Editor

Census workers in Hereford and Deaf Smith County have begun trying to determine whether houses originally reported as vacant have occupants—the U.S. Census Bureau district office's response to a challenge of a preliminary count.

The City of Hereford and Deaf Smith County filed challenges of the preliminary 1980 census figures, which showed the city with population of 14,814 and the county with 19,450 residents.

Both preliminary counts are low, according to Mayor Bartley Dowell and County Judge Glen Nelson who are concerned that the local area will miss out on census-based federal funds in the future.

"I've filed a form with the Census Bureau in Amarillo, showing our water meters and the number of people per meter," Dowell said. "It looks like we have quite a bit more (people) than they showed."

District census manager William Soule told The Brand today that workers this week are going to 575 houses in the city reported as vacant in the preliminary count.

"We're going back on our own to all these 575 houses.

We know they're not all vacant. Most of them probably contain people who didn't respond the first time around or people we missed."

Soule said he believes that primarily Mexican-Americans were missed in the original count.

"Where we messed up the most, I think, is in the Spanish areas. They just wouldn't respond," he said.

"On these houses we have to consider vacant, most of them just didn't send back their forms and we have to classify them as vacant until we check them out."

If a house is believed to be occupied but no one can be found at home, the census worker will check with a neighbor, according to Soule.

"All we want is a name and the number of people in that house. We don't care about the forms any more," he said.

Soule repeated his earlier statement that anyone who has not been contacted by a worker may call the district office collect at 335-1656. Callers will not be asked all the questions on the census form.

"We want their names, ages and where they live. It takes about two minutes. All we're worried about now is picking up the people," Soule said.

The district office is setting up stations in shopping malls at Amarillo, Pampa and Borger in an attempt to get people to respond. A similar undertaking is expected in Hereford sometime next week.

"We're trying to work something out like that in Hereford. Our workers will be out in the mall talking to people—asking whether they have been counted. Or folks who know they haven't been counted can simply go down themselves and talk to the workers," Soule said.

A "Were You Counted" form which has run twice in The Brand resulted in 20 to 25 responses, Soule said.

"We probably picked up 50 or 60 people in Hereford through that form," he said.

Libyan-Carter Probe Cleared

WASHINGTON (AP) — An agreement among Senate Republican leaders today apparently cleared the way for a congressional investigation of Billy Carter's ties with Libya and the way his case has been handled by the Carter administration.

A spokesman for Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said Baker and senior GOP members of key Senate committees in the case decided to accept a Democratic proposal for a seven-member panel drawn from the Judiciary Committee.

In lengthy sessions on Wednesday, Republicans had pressed for a larger special committee similar to that which investigated the Watergate scandals during the administration of Republican President Richard M. Nixon. Democrats insisted on the Judiciary panel.

The Baker spokesman, Tom Griscom, said Baker planned to meet later today with Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., to put the finishing touches on the agreement.

Griscom said Republicans would be prepared to ask the Senate to approve a larger Watergate-style committee "if during the course of the Judiciary hearings there is a feeling that the committee is not really going after the facts."

White House spokesman Jody Powell objected Wednesday to any comparison of the matter with Watergate, but said, "In general, we are dedicated to the proposition that we ought to be as forthcoming and straightforward in this matter as we possibly can be."

Powell added, however, that he could not say whether President Carter's aides would be available to testify before Congress concerning the activities of the president's younger brother.

Billy Carter registered under protest last week as a foreign agent for Libya and said he had received $220,000 in payments from the Libyan government which he said were the first installments of a $500,000 loan.

On Tuesday, the White House announced that the president's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, used Billy Carter as an intermediary last fall in seeking Libyan assistance to free the American hostages in Iran.

The Washington Post reported in today's editions that President Carter met with the same Libyan diplomat as Brzezinski about three weeks later, on Dec. 6, to discuss a stiff U.S. rebuke over the burning of the U.S. Embassy in Tripoli four days earlier.

However, the Post said there was no suggestion that Billy Carter helped arrange the president's meeting.

At the Capitol, Senate leaders agreed to continue their discussions today in an effort to break an impasse over whether the matter should be investigated by the Judiciary Committee, by part of that committee or by a special panel drawn from several committees.

Whatever their decision, Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., and Minority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., told reporters, using identical words, "There will be an investigation."

Volcano Eruption May Help Tourism

SEATTLE (AP) — Mount St. Helens' devastating blast in May had tourists quaking and canceling their Northwest vacations, but the latest eruption awed spectators with 10-mile-high plumes, and some officials hope the volcano could bolster the shaky tourist trade.

People more than 100 miles away scrambled to high spots in north Seattle on Tuesday evening to gaze at billows of dust and moisture glinting in the setting sun.

Drivers on Interstate 5 put on the brakes for the latest display, visible as far south as Corvallis, Ore.

"It was like the Fourth of July....It was a gorgeous sight. It was incredible," said Bill Wippel, who was driving by.

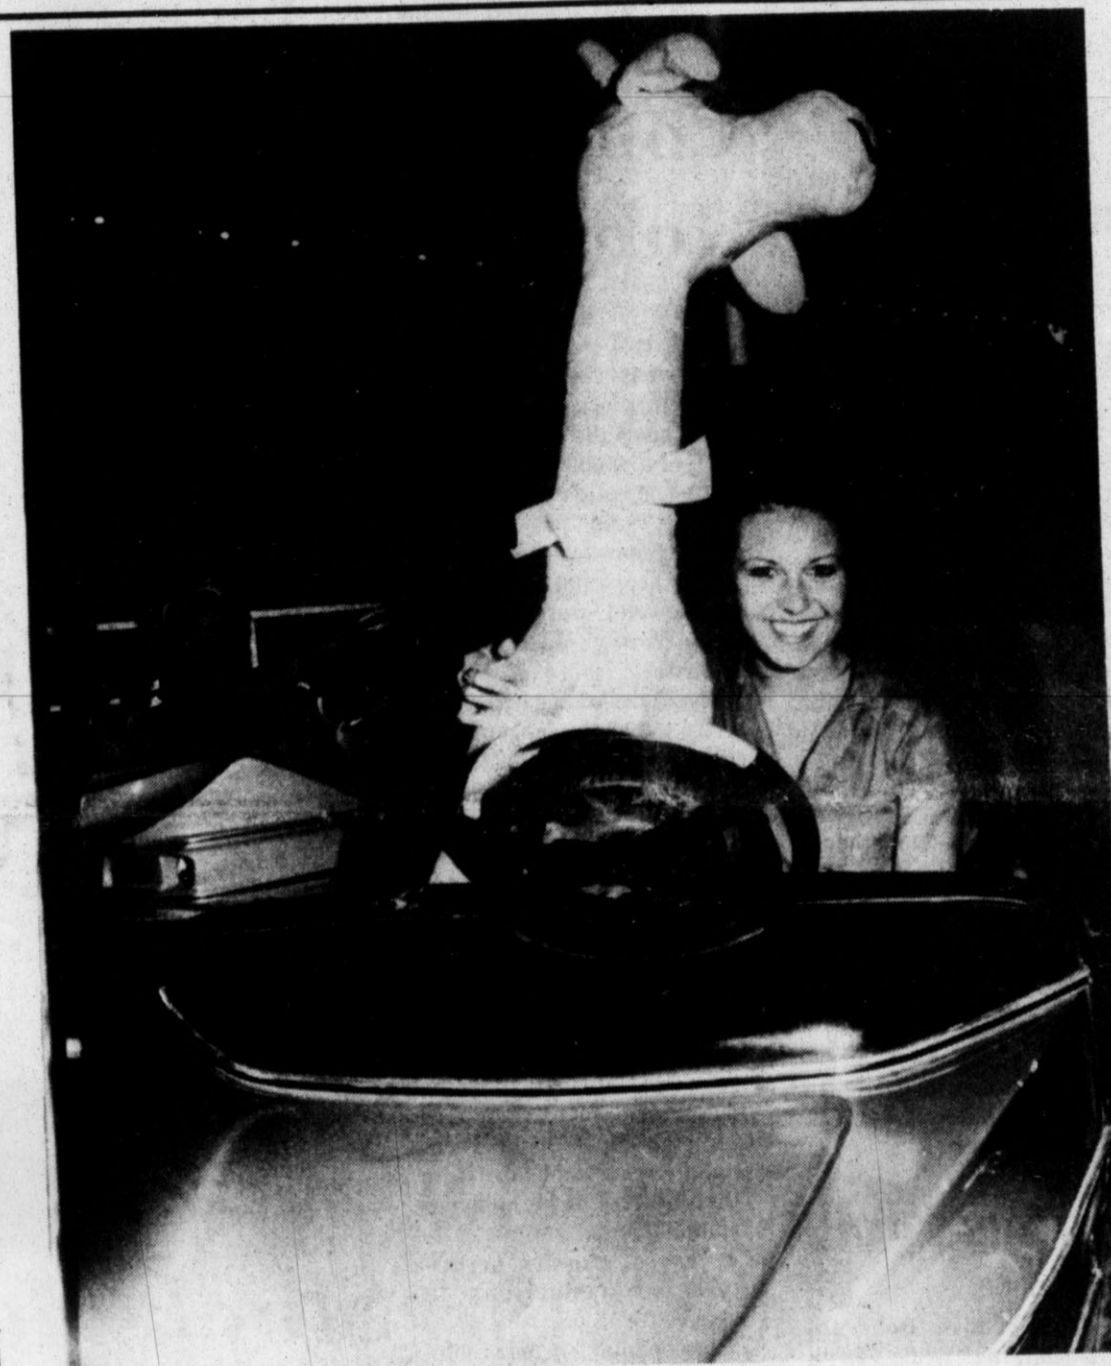

"There were gobs and gobs and gobs of people," reported Barbara Johnson, a Gifford Pinchot National Forest receptionist who was called back to work to help handle calls. "There were cars lined up along the roads wherever they could park."

Officials are hoping the volcano will become a tourist attraction, like Idaho's Craters of the Moon, Oregon's Crater Lake or Hawaii's active volcanoes.

"If it erupts, and you're in the area and you can collect some ash that will be a topic of conversation 20 years from now," said Steve Wilson, of the Idaho Department of Visitors Services.

"Many people go to Hawaii to see the volcanic activity there. Given the right marketing, I think you'll find it could

'Pink Panther' Sellers Dies at 54

LONDON (AP) — Royalty, celebrities and millions of the ordinary people who were his most devoted fans today mourned British comedian Peter Sellers, who died in a hospital soon after midnight following a massive heart attack. He was 54.

Sellers, one of the world's best-loved actors, made more than 40 hit movies in 20 years and was best known to Americans as the bumbling Inspector Clouseau of Pink Panther movies.

Prince Charles, one of Sellers' greatest fans, radioed a message of condolence from the Royal Yacht Britannia in the English Channel to the actor's widow, British actress Lynne Frederick, who will be 26 on Friday.

The text of Charles' message, sent as the heir to the British throne returned home from a visit to France, was not released. The prince's message was only one of thousands that poured into the Dorchester Hotel, where Miss Frederick locked herself away in Sellers' $476-a-day suite after his death.

Sellers' funeral will take place Saturday at Golders Green crematorium in North London, his publicity agent and longtime friend, Theo Cowan, announced. Cowan said the funeral would be a "private family occasion."

Miss Frederick, Sellers' fourth wife, whom he married in 1977, was at his bedside in the fourth-floor intensive care unit of the Middlesex Hospital when Sellers lost his last battle against a heart condition that has plagued him since 1964.

With her was Victoria, Sellers' 15-year-old daughter from his marriage to Swedish actress Britt Ekland, his second wife. Also there was Michael, 26, Sellers' son by his first wife, Anne Howe.

Miss Ekland, 37, whose five-year marriage to Sellers ended in 1969, told reporters: "I did not feel it right to go to the hospital."

Hospital administrator David Johnson said Sellers

Miller: Inflation Fight Would Suffer with Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary G. William Miller, told that the Senate probably will pass a tax cut this year, says the administration is not about to reverse itself and pretend that today's persistent inflation has become acceptable.

But that's exactly what would be required for the administration to endorse a Republican plan calling for Congress to vote immediately on a tax cut to take effect Jan. 1, Miller told the Senate Finance Committee on Wednesday.

He pleaded for the committee to delay action on any tax cut until early next year, saying a premature vote might undo all the government's recent efforts to slow inflation by restricting credit and federal spending.

The committee, which seems inclined to reject Miller's recommendation, sought advice today from several private economists.

The House Ways and Means Committee, meanwhile, arranged to hear from Arthur Burns, former chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, and the current chairman, Paul A. Volcker.

The Democratic-controlled committees scheduled the hearings after congressional Republicans and their presidential candidate, Ronald Reagan, began pressing for an immediate vote on a $36-billion tax cut that would take effect next year.

Republicans say the reduction — 90 percent of which would go to individuals — is necessary to offset part of the tax increase caused by inflation and to revitalize American business.

Inflation for the first six months of 1980 measured an annual rate of 14.8 percent. The Labor Department said Wednesday that consumer prices in June rose 1 percent,

Tuition Hike Expected To Go for Buildings

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas college tuition increases should be set aside for construction and capital improvements, including computers and library books, a special committee on higher education has recommended.

The State Higher Education Assistance Fund would be established only if the 1981 Legislature approves an earlier committee recommendation to increase tuition at least 100 percent. Ten percent of the increase would finance scholarships based on need. The rest would go into a special fund to be spent by colleges outside the University of Texas and A&M systems for land, construction, capital equipment — including library material — and major building repairs.

The Special Committee on Higher Education Financing in Texas, headed by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Bill Clayton, Wednesday also urged the Legislature to approve a constitution change that would allow UT and A&M to issue bonds and notes equaling 30 percent of all Permanent University Fund investments and assets, instead of the current 20 percent.

Kenneth Ashworth, state commissioner of higher education, warned it was a "high risk gamble" to disturb present state college financing which includes the Permanent University Fund for the UT and A&M systems.

"Texas has more funds available to make a great university than any other state," he said. The Texas College Coordinating Board had recommended that a tuition increase go mainly for faculty pay raises, with building repairs and rehabilitation as second, he said.

President Max Sherman of West Texas State University said he had "a concern that we should preserve what we have and not commit ourselves to new construction."

Frank Erwin, former UT regent, said the constitution change was needed because UT regents planned to share Permanent University Fund financing with eight or 10 of its system schools, relieving the Legislature of the need to finance their building programs with state taxes.

Tom Keel, director of the Legislative Budget Board, said it would take about two years for the proposed new building fund to accumulate if it is approved by the Legislature.

The proposed doubling of tuition would raise about $50 million a year.

Ford To Appear On Religious Network

CBN president Pat Robertson will interview Ford concerning Arrowhead Mills, which manufactures natural foods and vitamins. In a second portion of the program, which will begin at 9 a.m. Hereford time on Cable Channel 2, Robertson will interview one-time pickpocket Randy Bedoe and a policeman concerning the rising crime rate in the United States.

The show will be rebroadcast at 2 p.m. Friday, according to the spokeswoman.

CBN has 7.5 million subscribers and 2,200 cable stations throughout the country.

Showers Reported

In Heat-Stricken Areas

By The Associated Press
Widely scattered showers reached from the Texas Panhandle to the Dakotas, across the Southern Plateau into New Mexico, and over parts of the northern Rockies.

Showers and occasional thunderstorms were also scattered from the Gulf Coast to southern New England.

Kansas and Georgia, whose crops are suffering from drought conditions brought by the long heat wave, received little help from rainfall Wednesday.

Southern Californians, meanwhile, were experiencing the year's worst smog, produced by a combination of strong sunlight, lack of wind and a low inversion layer.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 50 degrees in Sault Ste. Marie and Houghton, Mich., to 95 degrees in Yuma, Ariz.

Church Conference

Praises Alien Ruling

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas is "bankrupt morally" if it refuses to educate children of illegal aliens, the executive director of the Texas Conference of Churches said Wednesday. The Rev. James C. Suggs praised a ruling by U.S. District Judge Woodrow Seals of Houston that the state must provide a free public education to the children. He criticized Attorney General Mark White's decision to appeal.

"It is premature to conclude that Texas schools will be bankrupt by the influx of children of undocumented workers, but we know for sure that our state is bankrupt morally if we continue to refuse to educate those children," Suggs said.

In 1979 and 1980, conference assemblies adopted resolutions calling for education of all Texas children, regardless of citizenship.

Suggs said in a statement that he feared statements by some Texas officials "could fan prejudice against immigrants, especially Hispanics."

Hostage Guard

Freed in Prison

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A special prison tactical team using tear gas this morning freed a guard who had been held hostage by rioting inmates for nearly 18 hours in smoldering Idaho State Penitentiary, authorities said.

Corrections Director C.W. "Bill" Crowl said no shots were fired and no one was injured in the five-minute assault by about a dozen heavily armed prison guards.

Crowl said that once guard Lynart Orr was freed shortly after 5:30 a.m. MDT, the plan called for action to regain control of the institution. About 200 law enforcement officers ringed the facility.

The decision to send in the tactical team came after inmates had burned nearly everything in the prison compound and fears for the hostage's life grew, Crowl said. Only the kitchen was spared the flames.

Crowl said the inmates were brewing a big batch of homemade whiskey and he feared that when it was ready, the inmates would go on "a wild drunk."

Cancer Outbreak

Found in Plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal officials reportedly fear they may find a high rate of brain cancer in plants that make chemicals from oil after the discovery of a larger-than-normal amount of brain cancer at two Texas petrochemical plants.

The investigation of the two plants began last year and turned up 25 brain tumor cases, including 24 fatalities, at a Dow Chemical plant at Freeport, Texas, and 18 other fatal cancers at a Union Carbide plant in Texas City, Texas, The Washington Post said today.

Thus far, investigators have not been able to single out a particular chemical that has caused the cancer rate, which is twice the normal level of the general population. Dr. Richard Waxweiler of the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health told the newspaper.

Some other plants are now being investigated, officials said.

similar to the one that looked into the Watergate scandals of the Nixon administration. Democrats resisted this and wanted the investigation done by the Judiciary Committee or a panel drawn from it.

At the White House, Powell was quick to assail any suggestion that the Billy Carter case in any way resembles Watergate.

"When I hear these congressional Republicans compare this to Watergate, it seems to me it might be worthwhile to make that comparison in detail," Powell said. "I think it will be very clear that in this instance the president has not attempted to obstruct justice or to influence the Justice Department or to contact the head of the criminal division" or have his chief of staff and to White House counsel mislead the public "in a conspiracy to withhold information."

Republicans on both sides of the Capitol were calling for the appointment of a special prosecutor in the matter.

"I don't know how even under the fairest attorney general you can get an investigation that would appear to the public to be unbiased when it's the president's brother," Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., said.

In Los Angeles, Republican presidential nominee Ronald Reagan gave his support for a federal investigation, saying, "Any time a charge is made I think we're better off if we clear the air."

In San Francisco, independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson also called for a special prosecutor, although he said he was not accusing President Carter of personal involvement in any wrongdoing.

Anderson said having the president's brother intercede with Libya on the Iran crisis was "unbelievably distressing....The impropriety of any member of the president's family dealing with a foreign power is so egregious it goes beyond description."

In New York, Billy Carter refused to discuss details of his loan agreement with the Libyan government.

"The loan was set up by an agent of mine, and the loan agreement is not public," he said on a WABC-TV interview program. "I'm not going to make it public. I have some privacy."

In another development, The Atlanta Journal said Atlanta real estate developer Thomas Jordan claims to have introduced Billy Carter to the Libyans two years ago in hopes of profiting from the relationship.

Jordan told the newspaper that in mid-1978 he was told that "the wealth of the Libyan state would be at my fingertips if I would deliver the younger brother of the president of the United States to Tripoli, so I delivered him."

Billy Carter flew to Tripoli later that year with Jordan and others.

Jordan said he agreed with Carter to establish an agency to represent Libyan business interests in the United States, but none of the wealth he hoped for ever materialized.

be an attraction."

The enthusiasm over Tuesday's eruption was partly because the blast was less damaging than May's. The ash fall was relatively light and missed major population centers. And it consisted of lighter material that traveled in a cloud and dissipated over Canada.

Since the May 18 blast, which leveled thousands of acres of forest land and killed dozens of people, officials said tourist revenues in Washington state dropped 10 percent to 20 percent from last year, but part or all of that may be due to the national recession.

To combat the tourist scare, there has been a national campaign promoting the scenic Northwest.

"What if it happens again?" asked travel advertisements, referring to the suddenly famous mountain. "While you're enjoying some of the finest country on earth, you may be lucky enough to see the old girl go off. And if there's a little more ash, you can take some home, free."

A "truth squad" has been outlining the good things to see and do in Washington, Oregon and Idaho. United Airlines took reporters from around the country on a wine and dine tour of the region, and a $148,000 state ad campaign boasted: "Except for our new tourist attraction, we're about the same as last year."

died at 12:28 London time after a 36-hour battle to save his life.

"His heart just faded away," he said. "His condition deteriorated very suddenly and he was gone."

"Every effort was made to keep his heart going, but it just didn't respond. He had all the drugs and all the machines it is possible to have. But there's a limit to what can be done."

Sellers collapsed in his Dorchester Hotel suite Tuesday and was rushed to hospital. Friends said it was his ninth heart attack since the problem was first detected in 1964.

Cowan said Miss Frederick, who flew from Los Angeles on Wednesday to be at her husband's side, "is composed and coping very well."

The actress and Sellers separated last year and had only recently been reconciled.

Miss Frederick said earlier that when she reached Sellers' bedside Wednesday afternoon "there was not even a flicker of recognition. Peter was totally unconscious."

Cowan said flowers and messages of condolences poured in from show business celebrities around the world.

More came from thousands of British fans, for whom Sellers was a star long before he achieved international fame with movies like the Pink Panther series and "Dr. Strangelove."

Sellers and one of his oldest friends, Harry Secombe, began their show business careers together after World War II in a comedy team known as "The Goons." Today Secombe said:

"It's like a light has been put out. The only consolation is that he has left a legacy of films and records that will keep his memory alive."

Sellers had been scheduled to fly to Los Angeles today to join his wife for a vacation and her 26th birthday Friday. But he collapsed in his hotel suite Tuesday afternoon, and she flew to London Wednesday. She said they had talked on the telephone Monday night and he was "absolutely fine, really bubbling."

Sellers suffered his first heart attack in 1964, seven weeks after marrying Miss Ekland. He had another major attack in 1977 and was fitted with a pacemaker. Last May he was admitted to a hospital in Dublin after a mild attack.

Comedian Bob Hope, enroute home from Connecticut when he learned of Sellers' death, said in Los Angeles that Sellers was "one of the most brilliant actors of our time....Thanks to his films, the work of Peter Sellers will always be enjoyed, admired and studied. The motion picture industry has lost a very great, valuable talent."

Sellers made 54 movies over a period of 29 years and a fortune said in press reports to total nearly $12 million. His first big international hit was

"The Mouse that Roared," in 1959; his greatest success was as Inspector Clouseau in the "Pink Panther" movies.

Despite his fame, wealth, homes on two continents, private jet, yacht, expensive cars and love life with beautiful women, he remained riddled by doubts.

Son of a vaudeville performer mother and a father who was a piano player and musical director in an English revue company, he once confessed:

several endorsements of a proposed readable car insurance policy and said it will decide on July 29 whether to adopt it.

Board members indicated they will approve the new policy, which is 3,500 words shorter than the present standard policy and uses common words instead of insurance jargon.

Richard Geiger of the Texas Automobile Insurance Service Office said one thing the new policy will not cover at all is radar detection devices, such as the Fuzz-buster.

"We think it is against public policy to insure these devices, whose only purpose is to avoid apprehension for speeding," Geiger said.

Rebecca Lightsey, managing director of the Texas Consumer Association, praised the new policy, which would go into use on June 1, 1981, if approved by the board.

"Insurance is one of the leading consumer problems, right behind auto repairs. One problem is individuals can't figure out what they are buying. It (the readable policy) will clear up a number of problems simply by being able to understand who is responsible for that," she said.

The Lighter Side

ANDERSON, Ind. (AP) — Carol and James McCarthy didn't exactly "Win the World" — just the chance to fly around it once a year for the rest of their lives.

The young Anderson couple had their heads in the clouds Wednesday after they learned they beat 3 million-to-1 odds to win Trans World Airlines' "Win the World" sweepstakes. The grand prize: one free trip a year for a lifetime anywhere TWA flies.

"My husband made fun of me when I mailed in the cards," Carol, a 28-year-old mother of one, said at the award ceremony in city hall. "He said it was a waste of postage. I guess the joke's on him."

Bill Meisler's Homestead Comes Home

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Bill Meisler's 18-acre "homestead" resurfaced this summer after a five-year absence.

Yes, that's right — resurfaced.

Meisler, a retired Evansville firefighter, says he never lost hope, faithfully paying his taxes even after his very own sandbar disappeared under the muddy waters of the Ohio River.

In the early 1960s, Meisler had the sandbar surveyed, put up $5 an acre, and claimed it under a little-used homestead law. But about five years ago, a new lock and dam system raised the river level some four feet, and Meisler's "homestead" went under.

This summer, the Corps of Engineers widened the channel. The excess sand was pumped halfway across the river and dumped on — you guessed it — William R. Meisler Island.

Meisler, however, has no plans for his prodigal property — even though his property taxes have soared from $3.50 in 1964 to $14 this year.

"I'll never give it up," he says.

For Sale: Streetcars Named Undesirable

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) —

Men Arrested For May Assaults

Three warrants for the arrest of suspects in a May 24 knifing incident were served Wednesday afternoon by police, and three more are expected to be served today.

Arrested were Adolpho Aguilar, 17, charged with aggravated assault with a deadly weapon; Joe Mendoza, 20, charged with aggravated assault with a deadly weapon; and Juan Mendoza, 18, charged with two counts of aggravated assault with a

Twenty-five streetcars named undesirable by San Francisco's Municipal Railway can be had for at least $2,000 apiece, if anyone has a weakness for "the dregs of the fleet."

With that description, Richard Sklar, the city's utility chief, persuaded the city's Public Utilities Commission to approve the sale. If buyers can't be found, the cars — different from the city's famed cable cars — will be sold for parts.

Sklar reported that in six weeks of partial service on three streetcar lines, there have been about a third to a half as many breakdowns with the new, computerized cars than when the old green-and-beige cars slid over San Francisco's streets.

Muni maintenance chief Frank Baggetta said saving the 42-year-old cars wouldn't guarantee a backup fleet. "You can't even buy lightbulbs for them."

In the incident, Joe Villarreal, 18, of 207 Roosevelt; Jimmy Moreno, 18, and Paul Moreno, 15, both of 401 Ross; and Joe Enriquez, 17, of 503 Grand were stabbed and beaten with chains and clubs.

Police Wednesday investigated five non-offense reports, a prowler report, and an harassing phone call, and issued 21 traffic citations.

Couple Explores Busted Nuke Plant

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) —

Two men put on paper jumpsuits, cotton overalls, firemen's cloaks and pants, three pairs of gloves, two pairs of plastic booties, rubber boots, hoods and breathing masks.

Then they walked into the gloomy chamber that was the site of the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident.

It was "a little like walking into a tomb," said William Behrle.

For 20 minutes Wednesday, he and Michael Benson explored the dark, cavernous reactor building at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant, where 16 months ago a radiation-releasing accident contaminated the plant. They were the first humans in the building since then.

When they emerged, they reported few surprises and little evidence of damage.

"The outstanding visual evidence of the intervening months since the accident was the condition of the floor. There was rust and discoloration," Behrle said.

However, the exploration was limited because, from their vantage point, the two men could not see the damaged reactor, steam generators, pressurizer or reactor cooling pumps. And their high-intensity lamp failed after 10 minutes, forcing them to use smaller lamps.

The men, who volunteered for the mission, said the only surprise they found was a dented stairwell door, which senior plant official Robert Arnold said probably had swung open and hit a pipe from the force of a hydrogen explosion during the accident.

The concrete floor was littered with several pieces of amber colored glass that may have come from a broken light bulb, Arnold said.

"We were very happy with the experience and with what we saw. Conditions do not appear to be any worse than we expected — perhaps a little better," he said. "The next step is another entry a month from now, probably into areas that were not covered today."

Stock Market Edges Down

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices edged down today as some major banks cut their prime lending rates to 10.75 percent and Mobil joined the list of major oil companies reporting large profit increases.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 3.92 to 924.66 in the first two hours of trading and declines outnumbered advances by a narrow margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

Signs of further declines in interest rates came from Chase Manhattan Bank, which cut its prime rate to 10.75 percent and was joined at the level by a few other banks, and from a federal regulator who predicted mortgage rates will fall further, perhaps to 11 percent by the end of the year.

The prime rate has not been below 11 percent since November 1978. It has fallen from 20 percent as the recession has depressed loan demand.

Jay Janis, the chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, made his mortgage prediction despite the action by some California institutions raising their rates this week.

Mobil, which announced its profits rose 64.6 percent in the second quarter to $688 million or $3.24 a share, still fell 3/4 to 78. Marathon Oil, which reported a smaller increase, dropped 3/4 to 59, but Union Oil, which reported a gain earlier in the week, rose 1 to 59.

Big Board volume totaled 16.05 million shares in the first two hours of trading, compared to 19.64 million at the same point Wednesday.

Texas Briefs

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — Retired State District Judge Hollis D. Garmon has agreed to hear the lawsuit filed by the Dallas Taxpayers' League to prevent use of the city's revised 1980 tax rolls.

The case, set for Thursday morning, had been filed in District Judge Leonard Hoffman's court in Dallas, but Hoffman withdrew Monday, saying only that he had a "very busy docket."

The taxpayers' league filed suit on the grounds that the new property valuations are arbitrary and illegal.

DALLAS (AP) — Former Hillcrest High School assistant principal George Blair took the stand again in the murder trial of his roommate, Lynn Edward Trout, to reiterate his testimony that Trout stabbed a male prostitute in self-defense.

Trout is on trial for the second time in the Christmas Eve slaying of Michael Lewis Glover, 25, at Trout's home. His first trial ended in a mistrial when the jury became deadlocked.

Blair testified in the first trial that he and Trout had lived together for six years and had developed a routine of soliciting sex from male prostitutes a couple of times each month. Shortly after his testimony, he resigned his position with the Dallas Independent School District.

DALLAS (AP) — The former bookkeeper of the Dallas County Dental Society has been indicted for theft of over $10,000 of the society's funds.

Lisa Rae Stone, 22, was indicted by a county grand jury for allegedly falsifying dental society checks.

The indictment accused Ms. Stone of submitting blank checks for approval by the society president and then filling in her name. It also claims that when the checks were returned, she changed them so they did not bear her name.

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — An 18-year-old man who had threatened to kill himself and his parents was killed Tuesday night by driving his car over a freeway embankment after officers chased him more than five miles at speeds of more than 100 mph, police said.

An officer began chasing Robert Lawrence Chandler for speeding at about the same moment that detective Ruben Puente finished drafting a mental warrant to have him arrested and committed to a hospital, Puente said.

Arlington police investigators said Chandler's death probably was a suicide. "There was nothing in the roadway to cause him to veer to the right and over the embankment as he did," Puente said. "And there were no skid marks to indicate he tried to stop from going over."

DALLAS (AP) — A 4-year-old boy was killed Tuesday after he accidentally shot himself in the chest with a .357-Magnum pistol at his parents' home.

Jerrold Wolf found the gun wrapped in cloth under his parents' bed and when he pulled the gun from the cloth, it discharged, police said. The boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Wolf, and three other children were alone in the house at the time.

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Public Transit Board Tuesday authorized $12 million to buy 85 new buses for the Dallas Transit System.

The buses, which will be equipped with wheelchair lifts, will be bought for $136,790 each from the Grumman Flexible Corp., a German company.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Chairman Mack Wallace of the Solar Advisory Committee announced Wednesday a statewide public hearing will be held Aug. 21 to discuss the committee's recommendations to the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council.

Wallace, a Texas railroad commissioner, said the recommendations were aimed at accelerating the use of solar and wind energy through financial incentives and by including such energy devices on future state buildings.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The president of the Texas State Teachers Association said Wednesday the TSTA will recommend a 33 percent teacher pay raise in 1982-83.

Dora Scott of Houston said the TSTA proposal to the Legislature would provide pay increases ranging from $1,300 per year for beginning teachers to more than $2,000 per year for more experienced teachers with advanced degrees.

She said the 33 percent increase would include the experience increments already in the law.

Mrs. Scott cited as reasons for the pay raise "the rising inflation rate, little help from the Legislature during the last two sessions, and a growing teacher shortage attributed to young people choosing better paying careers and veteran teachers leaving the classrooms."

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The two-year graduate program of the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas and four other Texas college programs are among 45 accredited by the National Association of Schools of Public Affairs and Administration.

In addition to the Master of Public Affairs degree offered by the LBJ School, other programs approved in Texas include Master of Public Administration degrees at North Texas State, Southern Methodist and Texas Tech universities and the Master of Arts in Urban Studies degree at Trinity University.

DALLAS (AP) — City officials received the first U.S. Census Bureau figures on the 1980 population count, but said information was provided only on the northern part of the city.

Bill Tolbert, administrative assistant in the Office of Management Services, said two other Census Bureau field offices will provide data on the remainder of Dallas.

Officials in other Texas cities, most recently Fort Worth, have protested preliminary population figures that they say are too low.

DALLAS (AP) — Police seized a record 19 ounces of cocaine and arrested a North Dallas nightclub owner early Tuesday.

Michael "Mickey" Bickers, 39, owner of Suite 113, was charged with possession of cocaine with intent to deliver. He was released on $10,000 bond.

While officers arrested Bickers, a team of detectives raided his house, where they found three of the ounces. Police estimated the entire haul would be worth more than $100,000 on the street.

Two women, 17 and 18, and a 19-year-old man were taken into custody at Bickers' house in connection with the case.

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas Board of Polygraph Examiners has adopted a regulation on confidentiality in the wake of a furor over test results in the Wylie ax murder case.

The Texas Department of Public Safety had asked examiners to furnish results of tests of anyone examined in the murder of Betty Gore of Wylie.

The ethics codes of state and national polygraph examiners forbid examiners from revealing information about specific tests to anyone other than the client or his representative, but no state law deals with the issue of confidentiality.

The six-member Texas Board of Polygraph Examiners unanimously passed the regulation, which becomes law upon passage at the second reading in October. It makes it a violation of the Polygraph Examiner's Act to reveal anything concerning an examination without the consent of the examinee.

HILLSBORO, Texas (AP) — The Hill County Sheriff's Department was holding an 18-year-old Navarro County man Wednesday in lieu of $100,000 bond in connection with the June 10 murder of Penelope grocer John Ondrej.

Officials said they are searching for additional suspects in the case. Ondrej was fatally shot by a gunman who demanded money when he barged into the grocery just before closing time.

DALLAS (AP) — Two years after seeking authority to serve Dallas Love Field, Air Florida will inaugurate service to Dallas-Fort Worth Airport Aug. 1.

"We are using Dallas to help fill our gateway in Miami," C. Edward Acker, chairman of the carrier, said in Dallas Tuesday. "We see Dallas as one of our major, major markets."

Air Florida has been singled out by airline analysts as the fastest growing regional airline in the country.

PHARR, Texas (AP) — Law enforcement officers released a composite sketch Wednesday of a Hispanic man whom witnesses say threatened a drive-up bank teller with a purported bomb and escaped with about $1,600 in cash.

The holdup occurred at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Security State Bank, said Sgt. Carlos Bazan, Pharr police detective. He said the man walked up to the window, stuffed what appeared to be a bomb in a green bank bag and demanded money.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission decided Wednesday against a split season for mourning doves in the North Zone, setting the season from Sept. 1 through Oct. 30.

The mourning dove season for the South Zone will be split: Sept. 20-Nov. 2 and Jan. 3-18.

The commission set the white wing dove season in the Rio Grande Valley for Sept. 6-7 and Sept. 13-14.

In counties with white wing seasons, the mourning dove season will end Oct. 29.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The state Public Utility Commission has no jurisdiction over the rates and service of the Texas Municipal Power Agency, Attorney General Mark White held Wednesday.

White said the agency is a "municipally owned utility authorized to engage in the generation, transmission, and sale or exchange of electric energy at a wholesale level only." He said it is not a public utility as defined in the Public Utility Regulatory Act.

White's official opinion was requested by Chairman George Cowden of the Utility Commission.

CONROE, Texas (AP) — At least one expert is blaming the heat wave for a rash of snakebites reported in Montgomery County in the last month.

Officials report 13 snakebite cases have been treated in the last 30 days, compared with four cases in the same period last year.

The hot, dry weather has caused snakes to move into populated areas seeking water, said Mike Ellis, director of Southeast Texas Poison Center in Galveston.

Ellis said snakes are more active in the warm summer months and can usually be sighted more often in the summer.

Medical Center Hospital here has treated four of the cases, including a 10-month-old baby bitten by a copperhead, one Montgomery County medical official said.

Hospital officials in neighboring counties said they have not noticed an increase in snakebite cases.

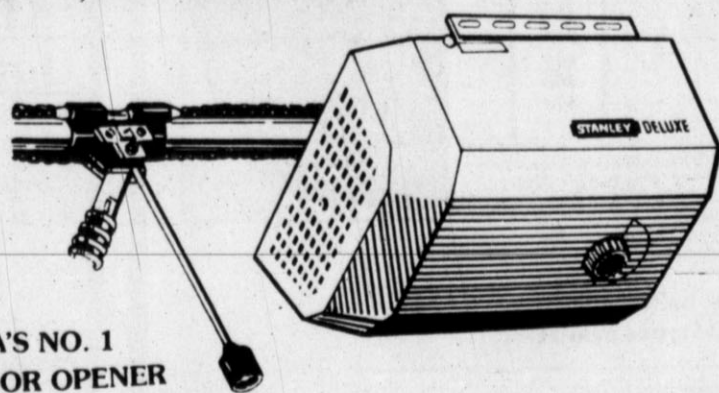

No deaths have resulted from the bites.

'Kuwait West' Getting Rich on Nuclear Plant

LOWER ALLOWAYS CREEK, N.J. (NEA) - Every now and then somebody comes to this Delaware River community to protest the presence of the massive nuclear power facility in the wastes west of town. They march in circles and worry about the well-being of the people who live close to the awful place.

Curiously, though, none of the natives, on the pickets. None believe the nuclear plant is so awful. People elsewhere may groan about radiation leaks, hydrogen bubbles and China Syndromes, but the citizens of Lower Alloways Creek thank you, are most happy to have nuclear energy as a neighbor.

It's made them wealthy, after all.

Last year, for example, the utility operating the Salem generating stations here paid $8 million in local taxes. Given the Creek's population of 1,600, it worked out to just over $6,000 per person. If that is added to the $6,500 average local wage, the aggregate per capita income is $12,500.

That makes this tiny locality about the richest place in the nation — on the level, actually, of some of the sparsely populated but enormous well-to-do Arab oil states. Indeed, residents call their town "Kuwait West." Kuwait, incidentally, has the world's highest per capita income: $13,000.

As do the Arabs, the people of Lower Alloways Creek think money is for spending. In recent years the community has bought its way out of the economic backwaters of rural America. It used to be one of the poorest municipalities in New Jersey; now it's the envy of people throughout the state.

To begin with, the residents pay no local taxes. And yet their services rival those anywhere in the country. The town has a six-man police force, a three-vehicle fire department, a $200,000 recreational park with six tennis courts, and an elementary school that has 30 teachers for just 350 pupils.

The school has been refurbished at a cost of $1 million. Lunches are free, the audio visual equipment looks like that at 20th Century Fox, and class size is strictly limited to 13 students. "We believe in good education," says Mayor Sam Donelson, "and we have the money we need to do what we want."

The tiny township also has the money to build a 42-unit housing project for its senior citizens ($30,000 per bungalow), donate nearly $1 million to a couple of regional hospitals, and maintain a $2-million municipal building which is designed around a pastoral, open air arboretum.

Not many people frequent the municipal building. Most of its rooms are empty. Those who do visit, for occasional business, like to browse through the color-coded appointments and eyeball the IBM machinery. The building, by the way, is not far from the swimming pool now under construction.

And then there's the ski resort. The Creek, whose annual budget is about $6.5 million, has purchased a 93-acre mountain complete with a 2,000-foot slope. The resort has snow-making and snow-grooming equipment. It also has a three-story lodge on the summit, and night lights on some of the trails.

It should be said that many people feel the ski resort is a bit much. There is also grumbling about the propensity of the government to spend money on itself. The Creek's executive salaries have increased 300 percent as late, also, the town presently hires one employee for every 16 residents.

And the criticism is not just local. In recent years people across New Jersey have complained that Lower Alloways has been abusing its good fortune. Last year even the state legislature began to grow irritated. No one was surprised when it decided the foolishness shouldn't continue.

In effect, the lawmakers argued that the community's tax profits were obscene. They pointed out that while Lower Alloways Creek was buying resorts, cities such as Newark were near bankruptcy. And so, over the winter, the legislature enacted measures to redistribute some of the Creek's windfall.

The natives don't like the imposition, naturally. Realtor Asa Wiltsee says, "The northern cities never helped us when they were rich and we were broke." If the state law hadn't passed, Mayor Donelson adds wistfully, the tax income here would have grown to more than $30 million a year by 1990.

Ah, well, the town won't exactly be thrown to the wolves. Under the new law the nuclear taxes will be about $4.4 million this year, and $4.6 from then on. That will remove the Creek from the Kuwait category, but, as Donelson puts it, "Anyway you look at it we're still rich."

And how. Aside from its other assets, Lower Alloways Creek now has $22 million in interest-earning bank accounts. If that's left in there for 10 years it will almost triple. God save the nuclear industry, says Creek resident Calvin Hill, because the only fallout from the local plants has been money.

"BEIN' A MOVIE STAR sure beats workin'," says "outlaw" Willie Nelson, who plays his first starring role in the new film "Honeysuckle Rose." Nelson is expected to spend some time this fall campaigning for one of his biggest fans — President Carter.

Nuclear City, 1990

In addition to its noteworthy tax wealth, Lower Alloways Creek will soon be distinguished in another respect.

By 1990 four generating plants will be in operation here, making the area the nuclear power capital of the nation.

At present, Public Service Electric and Gas Company has one plant in service, one completed and awaiting licensing, and two under construction.

When finished, they will have a total capacity of more than 4,300 megawatts of electricity, the largest concentration of its kind in the United States.

Aviation-Fuel Tax Requested by TAC

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The director of the Texas Aeronautics Commission today said the state should place a one cent per gallon tax on all aviation fuels.

Currently, all aviation fuel is sold tax-free in Texas.

C.A. Wilkins, testifying before the House Transportation Subcommittee on Appropriative Matters, said the tax would raise a needed $4 million in fiscal 1982. The money would be used for improvements at some of the state's 250 airports.

"The thing we don't want in Texas is another San Diego," Wilkins said after the meeting, referring to a tragic September 1978 plane collision.

Wilkins said improvements at small general aviation airports would reduce private plane traffic at major commercial airports. In the San Diego crash, a Pacific Southwest Airlines plane collided with a small private plane.

The proposed tax, already endorsed by the Texas Aeronautics Commission, would be charged on air fuel sold in the state. Wilkins said virtually all states — except Texas — have some method of raising money for a dedicated fund for aviation use.

"I don't think the tax would create a burden," he told the committee.

By 1990, the tax could pour $11 million into the commission, he predicted.

Texas has 60,000 general aviation pilots, and over 20,000 private aircraft.

The tax might draw opposition from the major airlines, said Wilkins.

Boos Don't Bother Grappler

PUEBLO, Colo. (NEA) - Randy Morse has had wrestling fans spit in his face. He has been hit over the head with a chair.

He has had to fight his way out of the ring. His car has been vandalized. His ears have been assaulted with every vile name in the book.

"It doesn't really bother me," sighs the pro grappler. "The more people hate me, the more they will come to see me."

Every professional wrestler has his own style. There are those who are "scientific" wrestlers, staying well within the rules.

Then there are the "rule-breakers," who take advantage of their opponents whenever the referee's back is turned.

Morse is not above pulling those shenanigans to make his more-than-comfortable living. He admits to pulling hair, sneaking in an elbow and kicking a guy while he's on the ropes.

"Rather than stay on the gracious side of the fans, you've got to protect your body," he says. "It's your body in the ring, not theirs!

"I don't care if they spit on me as I leave the ring or cheer my opponents. I just care whether my hand is in the air at the match's end and whether I get my paycheck."

The 6-foot-6, 255-pounder has been in the business for more than seven years. He began wrestling in high school because he was a "large person." Pro wrestler Larry Hennig later became his mentor.

Morse has never hired an agent. He does his own booking.

"I don't see why I should pay someone else 20 percent to answer the phone," he explains.

He had a few lean years to begin with, but promoters now call him.

Morse works only weekends while school is in session. The one-time high-school dropout is pursuing a degree in mass communications at the University of Southern Colorado.

He says he is continuing his education in hopes of becoming a sportscaster when his body gives out. He also has his eye on a career in real estate.

During summer breaks, Morse travels around the world, wrestling five to six times a week. He works on the West Coast for the most part, but has made many forays into Western Canada, Mexico, South Korea and Europe.

He has been to Japan four times and journeyed to South Africa last summer. That trip netted him one version of the heavyweight title — "for a couple of weeks."

For Morse, wrestling is not just a means of support but an outlet for his aggressions.

"That's where I take out my hostilities, in the ring," he says. He also enjoys the traveling and the doors that wrestling has opened for him.

So, is pro wrestling for real? Or is it just fake horseplay?

"In professional sports," says Morse, "the person with the show who can attract the crowd will rise to the top. There is show in every professional sport."

Morse insists that the ring antics are not rehearsed, that he has never been asked to throw a bout or make another wrestler look good.

"If you don't think pro wrestling is a sport, jump in there and try it," he says.

"The life" has not been easy on Morse's body. Both knees are shot, he says, and he suffered a major injury to his shoulder last year. And minor injuries are as common as a runny nose in winter.

"You always come out with minor injuries all the time," he says. "Fingers get sprained or broken, sore necks, bumps and bruises all over your body."

"These are things you expect when you use your body to make a living. You learn to live with it."

FROGMAN COURTNEY BROWN tows a 55-foot model of the ill-fated Titanic, which sunk on its maiden voyage in 1912 with about 1,500 passengers aboard. The model, which is said to have cost $5 million, was used in the forthcoming film "Raise the Titanic!"

Single, Working Mothers

Anxiety Can Be Cut Down

NEW YORK (NEA) - Life has always been hard for the single working mother. But now, it's worse than ever, says Dr. Helen De Rosier.

Associate Clinical Professor of Psychiatry at the NYU Medical Center, and author of "Women and Anxiety" (Dell-Corte Press), Dr. De Rosier says, "Formerly the major focus for the single working mother was to make a living and to see that her children were clean, fed and taken to school. And, because she was a traditional woman, she came 'at the end of the pile.'"

A dismal situation, you say, but she says "There was a certain simplicity to it. Today life is much more complicated. Society has given the single working mother a whole new set of standards which dictate to her that, for one, her job isn't just to make a living — it's to build an interesting career and make a lot of money. In addition she has to be smashing looking, have all kinds of clothes, a nice group of women to raise her consciousness with, and, of course, she's supposed to have an active sexual life." On top of which she still has to take care of her children.

"Younger women especially," she continues, "tend to act as if that's fine, that it's all manageable. Mind you, I'm not arguing against any of this, but it's impossible to cover all these fronts. And the young working mother who feels compelled to perform in these ways and knows she can't achieve what she's supposed to, is thrown into conflict: wanting to do something and not wanting to do it at the same time."

Another word for that is "anxiety," which often leads to a host of emotional and physical disorders. Of course, anxiety is a fact of life, for everyone. But, says Dr. De Rosier, no one, not the single working mother or anyone else, has to be tormented by

it. "Anxiety can be demystified, understood and reduced." Put in its place, in other words, once the woman learns to put her priorities in theirs.

And that's accomplished easily enough: the single working mother (or anyone else) simply has to deal with one "small question of living at a time," and settle it.

For instance, Working Mother comes home at night, exhausted, and wants to wash her hair. Her son, however, wants help with his homework and she can't do both. "But she feels if she doesn't help her son, she's not being a good mother," says Dr. De Rosier, "so that drives her to knock herself out. She becomes more exhausted, hates her son, feels guilty, is a bad mommy, and then strives again to be a good one." With more anxiety.

Instead, following the De Rosier method, Working

Mother comes home, takes a pad and pencil into her bedroom, sits down and confronts the problem in an organized way in four steps.

She writes, number one: the problem is not huge and philosophical such as how to deal with my child, but whether to wash my hair or help my son with his homework.

Number two: how to deal with the issue. "She evaluates the situation," Dr. De Rosier says. "Is this a valid request on the part of the child tonight which she can then decide to indulge, or is it a habitual demand which she's going to become resentful fulfilling? She's got to be able to say, what is the situation today, the priorities? Perhaps she'll decide, I come first. Tomorrow it might be the child or another night it might be to go out. In short, is this action possible, reasonable, or neglectful of her own person or the child's health, and that's all. If not doing something for the child is reasonable under these circumstances, I'm not being a bad mother by not doing it."

Instead of operating under one inflexible rule — I must always see to my child's needs first — she gives herself a range of options. That, in itself, defuses the situation.

Number three: putting number two into action. If she decides to wash her hair, she plans exactly how to tell her son, where, in what words, etc., and goes ahead and does it.

Number four: evaluating the action. If it was successful, knowing why will help Working Mother to be successful when she confronts the next little problem. If it failed, knowing why should help her, again, to be successful the next time.

Four short steps, that's all it takes, and there are no shortcuts allowed. All the steps have to be performed.

'Wellness' Classes Keep Folks Out of Hospital

NEW YORK (NEA) - If something lands you in the hospital as it does 36 million Americans every year - you'll pay at least $1,500, or about $200 a day for seven days, according to the American Hospital Association (AHA).

And not even the hospital, it turns out, is happy about that. At least, not 3,120 of them, or half the members of the AHA, which consists of 6,000 short-term stay (under 30 days) hospitals.

They want you to stay wealthy and fit, so they're sponsoring local "wellness" or health promotion programs.

They're running classes in exercise, nutrition and weight reduction; screening programs for high blood pressure and high blood sugar; and skiing and stress management courses, among other things. They're doing this free or for a fee, in shopping centers, schools, offices and sometimes at the hospitals themselves.

Even the AHA headquarters in Chicago is trying to keep its 800 employees perky - and health expenses down. Says AHA president Alex McMahon, "We wanted some experience with 'wellness' programs before recommending that the hospitals talk to employers in their communities about using these programs to reduce their health costs. So we paid for two sets of screening processes for our employees, which turned up a substantial number of hypertension and high blood sugar cases, which we referred to their own physicians for relatively inexpensive and easy treatment."

Employees with weight problems also turned up and these, he says, "were encouraged to attend weight reduction classes we run one day a week after work. And on Tuesdays and Thursdays we turn our cafeteria into an exercise room for about 40 minutes, under supervision."

And, while it's hard to pinpoint the cause behind the happy effect, he says, "We have had a reduction in our health insurance cost that more than offsets what we spent on the programs."

This, notwithstanding that the program is voluntary which means some employees must be looking the other way. In which case, The AHA tries to entice them to participate by looking into their wallets. "We tell our employees that there are just so many dollars in our compensation pool and if we take out so many for health care services, that leaves that many fewer for salaries and wages," McMahon says.

Still, in all instances, all over, the individual is ultimately responsible for his or her own well-being. But, says McMahon, "If our hospitals' 'wellness' programs have an impact on the health habits of only 2 percent of the population, we could cut the national annual hospital expenses of $80 billion by $2 billion."

And if you could get to those individuals while they're young and malleable, think of what the country could save in terms of money and human resources.

The four Samaritan Health Services Hospitals in Phoenix, Ariz., hope to do just that this fall, if the federal funding they've requested comes through.

"We want to provide teachers and then students in two local school systems with the program we've been offering our own employees, and which we've been marketing to industries here in Phoenix," says Thelma Uhrich, assistant vice-president, division of health promotion, Samaritan Health Services Hospitals.

The hospitals have already influenced half of their 6,000 employees, although FREEDOM went into effect only a few months ago, and took two years to plan.

"More than half our employees are voluntarily participating in the health assessments and following up with classes where they learn the skills they need to keep the programs going on their own," she says. And where they also receive self-help manuals should their memo-

In Bookstore, Only the Smoldering Pistol Missing

PHILADELPHIA (NEA) — Mystery is in the air. Murder beckons beyond the door.

Blackmail waits beyond each bend. And intrigue lurks in every corner.

Only a bloody dagger or a smoldering pistol is missing.

Inside Philadelphia's Whodunit bookstore waits a world of unsolved crimes, wily suspects and sly sleuths.

It's a heavenly place for any mystery buff. Even Sherlock Holmes would feel right at home.

Whodunit? the brainchild of owners Art Bourgeau and Sandy Sullivan, sells only mystery novels and magazines. With more than 7,000 titles, it is said to be the second-largest mystery dealer in the world.

In addition to carrying a complete line of current mysteries, Whodunit? has a back room overflowing with used paperbacks at bargain prices. Customers can trade in paperback mysteries for 25 cents in cash or credit and aardbacks for twice that amount.

The soft-spoken Bourgeau, a Tennessee native in his early 30s, has become a sort of godfather to local mystery fans. He estimates that 75 percent of Whodunit? customers purchase mysteries solely on his recommendations.

"Our trend seems to run opposite of the book industry," he says. "We only sell a few copies of hot best-selling mysteries because they are available at every corner store."

"We sell hundreds of copies of obscure novels, like the 1930 mystery 'The Moving Toy Shop' by Edmund Crispin."

Bourgeau read that book, which combines humor with mystery, when it came back into print in 1978. Once he started describing the book to his customers, it became the store's best-seller; between 1,500 and 2,000 copies were sold within 10 months.

"People who read mysteries are the most intellectual of all readers — including textbook readers," Bourgeau observes.

"Normally, mystery buffs are establishment people with a clear sense of right and wrong. Very few students read mysteries because the basic system always wins in a mystery story."

"The radical element is always brought to justice in the end. Mystery readers like to see right triumph."

Bourgeau notes that 65 percent of his clients are young women.

"Women gravitate to the English mysteries by Agatha Christie and Dorothy Sayers or the up-to-the-minute authors like Amanda Cross, Lynn Meyer and Susan Isaacs," he says. "These new authors all have modern-day, hip, 'Fear of Flying'-type women as their heroines."

"Women also like the occult mysteries. They will come back and say, 'That book scared me to death! I love it!'"

"Women go for books with details, low violence and settings, and look for more suspense and terror."

"Men, on the other hand, are interested more in movement. They usually don't care whether it's a straight spy story or a mystery as long as there is an action hero, suspense and a touch of sex."

Bourgeau notes that almost all mystery readers prefer a "series type of character rather than a one-shot character."

Who are the best-selling authors at Whodunit? Bourgeau divides them into two categories: British and American.

The first group is topped by Agatha Christie, Ngaio Marsh, P.D. James and Elizabeth Ferrers. The second group includes Raymond Chandler, Dashiell Hammett, Ross Macdonald, John D. MacDonald and Roger Simon.

The "mystery motif" in the front window of Whodunit? has done much to generate interest and controversy.

Herd Ends 6 Games Playoff Series Win Streak

Plainview Defeats Hereford All-Stars

By MAURI MONTGOMERY

Brand Sports Editor

DIMMITT—When Hereford pitcher Robert Martinez stepped up to the plate in the seventh and final inning of the State Babe Ruth All-Star clash with Plainview here Wednesday, he must have felt a little like the legendary folk hero Casey.

Not only was his team trailing by a margin of 7-4 (with two of those being pushed across home in a seventh inning rally), but the Herd already had two outs waged against its batting lineup.

And much like the hit Casey had been cheated out of, Martinez struck out on a full count. It wasn't the end of the world, but for Martinez who had gone 4-4 during the length of the contest (one of those hits coming as a ground rule double), the end result wasn't particularly satisfying.

The loss terminated a six game playoff series winning streak for the Hereford squad and pushed the team into the losers bracket of the Dimmitt tournament. The team is scheduled to play the winner of the Castro County (Hereford beat the Castro Club previously 18-7) and Lamesa affair Friday at 8 p.m. in continuing tournament play while Plainview will advance to the winners bracket.

Even though Hereford broke out of the scoring blocks first after racking up one run in both the fifth and sixth frames to end stymied play between both squads, it was Plainview's seven run onslaught in the seventh that eventually nailed the lid shut on the duel.

The Plainview crew had managed to clip five hits off hurler Robert Martinez before that final stanza of play, but Hereford's unyielding defense staved off each attack only to leave six potential Plainview scorers stranded on base.

And it was that same inability score that hampered the Hereford teams' progress and possibility to win as the squad added up a total of 14 in the LOB category before the conclusion of the contest.

Stevenson

Confident Of Boxing Career

MOSCOW (AP) — Teofilio Stevenson starts the rocky trail toward his third gold medal in the Olympic Games Friday — a quest he says will prove he is the best heavyweight fighter in the world. Pro or amateur.

Stevenson, the distant, silent man of the Moscow Olympics, reclined on a sofa in the foyer of the Olympic Village training quarters, watching swimming competition on TV, but he finally consented to discuss his illustrious career and future plans.

A pretty Russian guide sat next to him. People kept pushing forward to request autographs. Teofilio responded coldly, never showing recognition. A few newsmen pushed into the circle.

The 28-year-old Cuban fighter appeared to notice no one as he kept his eyes glued on the TV set.

Stevenson is a handsome 6 feet, 4 inches tall and weighs 220 pounds, with a long, strong-looking neck that is associated with aristocracy and busts of the great.

He closely resembles Muhammad Ali and has many of Ali's characteristics — whether by accident or design — without the latter's bombast, occasional puckishness and flair for the limelight.

To English-speaking interviewers, he holds up a hand and says, "No speak English." It is his handy weapon. Yet he understands and speaks English very well.

In the fifth frame, Brian Taylor singled to center field on an error provided by Plainview second baseman Michael Flores, and was later brought home following singles from Robert Martinez and Ricky McCracken. But Martinez and McCracken failed to score after Rod Simon struck out and Ronnie Collier was caught at first base on a grounder to short stop Leonard Trevino.

Those two stranded runners plus two more in the sixth-and four in the final frame ended the runaway type game the team had exhibited in earlier tournament play. The Hereford diamond crew did mount a short lived base after being hit by a wild pitch and base hitter Rod Simon, were batted in by a Ronnie Collier single plus Say What?

Hereford first baseman Brian Taylor produces a look of amazement as he heres the second strike called on him during Wednesday night's Babe Ruth All-Star tournament playoff bout with Plainview. The Hereford Club ended a four inning scoring slump by both teams after taking a 2-0 advantage at the conclusion of sixth frame, but eventually fell under Plainview's seven run scoring spree in the final bracket of play to lose the contest 7-4. The loss pushed Hereford into the loser's niche of the tournament, and as a result the squad is scheduled to continue tourney competition by meeting the winner of the Castro County and Lamesa contest Friday at 8 p.m. The game will be broadcast by KPAN Radio. Pro Golfers Anticipate Low Scores

WETHERSFIELD, Conn.

(AP) — Talk had it that scores at the 1980 Greater Hartford Open would be very low this year, and some golfers point to the excellent condition of the course as the reason for their opinions.

The $300,000 tournament, officially known as the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open, began today at the Wethersfield Country club. More than 150 professional golfers will be shooting for the top prize of $54,000 on the par-71 course.

"The course is very good," Hubert Green said Wednesday. Green, who tied for eighth in last year's GHO, said he expects to do well in the tournament but stopped short of making a prediction.

Defending champion Jerry McGee won the tournament with a 15-under-par 267 last year, but he said it would take 20-under to win this year. And Lee Trevino, who won the GHO in 1972, agreed.

"I had been saying that an 18-under would win here," Trevino said, "but I think now it will take a 20, maybe even a 22 to win."

Trevino said he decided to change his prediction after playing in a rain-delayed, nine-hole Pro-Am event. Trevino said the half-inch of rain that fell Wednesday morning made an already excellent course even better.

"It will be impossible to hide the flag now because of the rain," Trevino said. "You can stop the ball dead," which will improve scores, he said.

Trevino later called the course an "ego builder," and if he's correct then the GHO may be just what the ailing McGee may need.

Coming off his best year as a pro in 1979, when he won two tournaments and more than $166,000, McGee said 1980 has been "kind of a disappointment."

He came into the GHO with only $19,028, good for 104th on the PGA money leaders list.

The reason for McGee's disappointing play is hypoglycemia, a low blood-sugar illness that he says causes his "dizziness."

Maddox, Mets Bump Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — You'd think Elliot Maddox would be happy with his exploits Wednesday night. The New York Mets third baseman played errorless third base, tripled in the ninth inning and scored the winning run on Jerry Morales' sacrifice fly.

All that amounted to a 4-3 win for the Mets over the Houston Astros, but Maddox was far from happy.

Maddox is disgruntled because the Mets won't renegotiate his contract which runs through the 1982 season. The Mets moved Maddox to third base this season and he looks forward to being the first Met to start two years in a row at third.

"I think I've done a better job than anyone expected," Maddox said. "I take defense very seriously. I like to stay in the lineup and I don't mind where I play."

Some of the other Mets sported happier faces, like relief pitchers Jeff Reardon and Neil Allen. Reardon, 5-5, got the win and Allen finished up in the ninth for his 16th save, which made Manager Joe Torre happy.

"It's hard for young relief pitchers to go from day to day and not get overconfident at the victories and not get too down at the losses," Torre said. "They need to stay on an even keel."

"Allen was the real Allen tonight. He took charge out there. That's what's been getting us beat on this road trip. We'd let the firstman get on and then make a mistake."

Bullpen he was long overdue, considering that Cincinnati beat Reardon Sunday. Allen lost to the Astros Monday.

Arkansas Blanks Amarillo

By The Associated Press
Mike Bishop slugged a grand slam home run as the El Paso Diablos took a 9-7 Texas League baseball victory over the Jackson Mets Wednesday night.

In other Texas League action, Arkansas shut out Amarillo, 3-0. Midland beat Shreveport, 5-1, and San Antonio defeated Tulsa, 7-3.

Bishop, the league's leading home run hitter, slugged his grand slam homer in the third inning. Teammate Rick Adams also had a solo homer for the Diablos.

Bill Haserlig had a two-run homer for the Mets.

Steve Brown, 11-8, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Tim Leary, 11-6.

Arkansas Travelers pitcher Joe Edelen increased his season record to 9-2 as the Travelers shut out the Amarillo Gold Sox, 3-0.

day and Ed Glynn was tripped by Houston Tuesday.

"I'm glad the relief pitchers could contribute tonight," Reardon said. "The bullpen had lost three nights in a row so it was good to win for a change."

Astros centerfielder Cesar Cedeno had both the good and the bad. He scored the first Houston run, had a double in the eighth for his 1500th career hit, but committed two errors that resulted in two unearned runs.

Cedeno got on base in the second inning on a passed ball and, after Art Howz walked, consecutive RBI singles by Enos Cabell and Luis Pujols brought in two runs. Craig Reynolds' sacrifice fly made it 3-0.

But disaster struck Cedeno in the third when New York closed the gap to 3-2. After Pete Falcone singled, Lee Mazzilli doubled and Frank Taveras forced Falcone at the plate, Steve Henderson's sinking liner spelled trouble.

Cedeno missed the ball for one error, and was charged with another when his throw to third base went into the Mets dugout, allowing Mazzilli and Taveras to score.

The Mets tied it up on consecutive singles by John Stearns, Mike Jorgensen and Joel Youngblood in the sixth.

The Astros announced that pitcher J.R. Richard was admitted to Methodist Hospital Wednesday afternoon for "extensive diagnostic testing." Richard, on the 21-day disabled list, has been plagued by various physical problems all season.

Cards Bag 4th Straight Win By Whipping Los Angeles, 7-3

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

For much of the season, the St. Louis Cardinals have been waiting for the breaks to come their way. On Wednesday night they got the worst kind of break — but it could be a big break for Mike Phillips.

Garry Templeton, who tripled in the first and second innings to raise his batting average to .326 with 133 hits — both tops in the National League — broke his left thumb in the third inning and will be sidelined for perhaps four weeks.

"This is the worst time it could have happened," said teammate Ken Reitz, "just when we were trying to make a bid for 500."

With their 7-3 triumph over Los Angeles, their fourth consecutive victory and seventh in the last nine games, the Cards are 43-51 and fifth in the East, 9½ games out of first place.

"We know we've got Mike, too," Reitz said of Phillips, a bench-rider with a .171 average this year. "He'll be able to do a good job. Phillips in the past has always come in and done a good job."

In fact, Phillips took over for six games last year when Templeton hurt his wrist and the Cards won five of the six.

"I'll do my best," Phillips said. "If things get off to a good start, we'll be alright."

In Wednesday's other NL action, it was Atlanta 6, Montreal 5; San Francisco 14, Chicago 6; Cincinnati 7, Philadelphia 3; San Diego 3, Pittsburgh 2, and New York 4, Houston 3.

After Templeton's first-inning triple, singles by Leon Durham, Ted Simmons and George Hendrick made it 2-0. And in the second, Ken Oberkfell walked, Templeton tripled, Durham walked, Keith Hernandez hit an RBI grounder and Simmons doubled for another run. Dane Iorg had a two-run double in the fourth as the Cards handed the Dodgers their 10th loss in 13 games.

Braves 6, Expos 5
Gary Matthews punched a bases-loaded single in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the Braves their fifth victory in their last six games.

It appeared Jeff Burroughs had driven in the Braves' winning run with a three-run double in the eighth inning. But Montreal tied it in the top of the ninth on Jerry White's sacrifice fly.

Giants 14, Cubs 6

Jack Clark's four RBIs and Mike Ivie's three led a 21-hit San Francisco assault against the Cubs.

"We were due. It was one of those days when we were ready," said Clark, whose three-run homer highlighted a six-run third inning against Doug Capilla. His replacement in the fourth, Willie Hernandez, didn't do much better, giving up three runs, two on Ivie's double. Joe Pettini got his first big-league homer for the Giants in their three-run seventh.

Reds 7, Phillies 3

"We know we're certainly not as bad as we've played the last 10 days," Philadelphia Manager Dallas Green said after the Phils lost their sixth consecutive game and ninth in the last 12.

Joe Noian, with four RBIs, and Ken Griffey, with three, were Cincinnati's big guns. Mike Schmidt hit his NL-leading 24th homer, tying him at 259 with Del Ennis as the Phils' all-time home-run hitter.

Powell Seeks Victory In LPGA Tournament

JERICHO, N.Y. (AP) — Renee Powell has been on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour since 1967 and has earned only $37,060.

Divide the two statistics and you have an average annual salary of $3,088. Hardly enough to keep one in gas even before inflation struck, right?

In the case of Powell, who started playing golf at the age of 3 at a club owned by her father, Bill, in East Canton, Ohio, statistics do not tell the story.

"I've played only about six months most of the year since I joined the LPGA," explained the 34-year-old golfer prior to teeing off Thursday morning in a 72-hole, $125,000 tourney at the Meadow Brook Club.

"From 1974 until now, I have been living in England and I have been into more things than just golf. For example, I have been designing sportswear over there and I also have been writing for golf magazines."

"Let's just say that I haven't been dedicated to tournament golf every weekend."

To complicate matters for the only black now on the circuit, Renee had been ill for a good part of 1978 and '79. This resulted in a 35-pound loss in weight.

"It was very discouraging," continued the ex-captain of the women's team at Ohio State. "In 1978 I never touched a club for the entire year."

"You just can't return and pick up where you left off. When I came back, I found that I couldn't even walk a full 18 holes. Last week, when the tour was in Baltimore, I spoke with Frank Robinson (a coach with the Baltimore Orioles) and he gave me a great deal of encouragement. So did Jesse Owens, another good friend, last year."

Doesn't Powell find it tough going up against the likes of Amy Alcott, currently the leading money winner on the tour; Nancy Lopez-Melton, JoAnne Carner and Donna Caponi Young, all entered in the tournament on the par-72, 6,347-yard Meadow Brook course?

The tournament is sponsored by Western Union International.

Comaneci Falls But Still Olympics Contender

MOSCOW (AP) — The problem with perfection is you can only go down. The problem with spectacular buildups is that they rarely achieve any height.

Nadia Comaneci learned the first lesson Wednesday when her individual lead in team gymnastics slipped away in a tumble from the uneven parallel bars. Comaneci, who couldn't improve on her perfect routines at the 1976 Olympics and here on Monday, finished fourth in the competition won by the awesome Soviets.

But the acrobatic Romanian was to get a chance for redemption in the individual all-around event today. The Moscow Olympics today will also begin to see if the second lesson is true when Sebastian Coe and Steve Ovett, two running Britons engaged in a running feud, embark on their collision course.

Among the events in today's opening Olympic track and field session are finals in the women's shot put, the men's 20-kilometer walk and the women's pentathlon, plus the first heats for the men's 800-meter race. Coe is the world record holder in this event (1:42.4), with Ovett right on his heels. The semifinals are Friday and the long-awaited final Saturday.

"I'd like to think I'm well-prepared," said Coe.

Ovett predicted his chance of winning the 800 is about 50 percent.

If all goes as planned and they meet in Saturday's final, then their next confrontation would be next week in the 1,500 meters, in which they share the world record of 3:32.1.

Since no one has ever run a faster 1,500 than the two Britons, a case could be made for them being the best middle-distance runners of all time. Throw in the facts they don't take tea together and they've only raced twice against each other, and you have a couple of "Races of the Century" coming up.

Oops, there's that big buildup again.

Well, better to wax hyperbolic about races than to write about the conditions here at these first Games behind the Iron Curtain, says Vladimir Popov, vice president of the Moscow Olympic Organizing Committee.

On a day when sports — and not politics — managed to dominate, it was Popov who raised the possibility of deporting journalists for negative reporting. Popov was critical of western press coverage that has included stories on the stringent Soviet security here and the police's manhandling of an Italian gay rights demonstrator.

"You may be sure that if the national dignity of the host country has been offended, we shall demand that resolute sanctions should be taken against these journalists," Popov said through an interpreter at a news conference.

Citing the precedent of two reporters he said were sent packing from the Mexico City Games in 1968, Popov said it could happen again if "journalists have stepped beyond the limits of elementary decency and tact." But he said such an ouster would have to be made by the International Olympic Committee, not the Soviets.

It isn't any exaggeration to report that the Soviets and their comrades from East Germany are turning these Games into their personal playthings. After Wednesday, the fourth day of competition, the Soviets led with 17 gold and 32 total medals. East Germany had 26 medals, six of them gold. Next was Hungary and Bulgaria, each with seven medals.

Soviet diver Aleksander Portnov won the springboard event, but he won't receive his gold medal until Friday because of a protest that was turned down by the International Swimming Federation Wednesday night. Other divers had protested when Portnov was allowed to repeat a dive after complaining that crowd noise distracted him on an earlier attempt.

The Soviets were favored today in both the men's and women's all-around gymnastic events, while the East Germans and Soviets were solid choices in tonight's four swimming finals.

More than any other area, the swimming pool has felt the impact of the boycotting Americans. The American men won 12 of the 13 swimming events contested four years ago at Montreal. Although the East Germans and Soviets have powerful swimming programs, an American presence probably would have cut into their pool domination.

In fact, only three swimmers have cracked the Soviet-East German control, and two of them got their scholastic swimming training in the states.

Par Arvidsson of Sweden, who led the University of California to the NCAA championship this year, won the 100-meter butterfly in 54.92 seconds Wednesday. If he were an American, he said he would have been proud to support President Carter's boycott.

Earlier in the competition, Great Britain's Duncan Goodhew, who swam three years for North Carolina State, and Bengt Baron of Sweden joined Arvidsson as the only swimming winners not from East Germany or the Soviet Union.

The East German women won another swimming gold when Rina Reinisch lowered her world record in the 100-meter backstroke to 1:00.86. But the flying frauleins' bid for all 13 swimming gold medals was foiled by a Soviet sweep in the 200-meter breaststroke, as Lina Kachushite won in 2:29.54, an Olympic record considerably better than the best American time of the year, Tracy Caulkins' 2:33.06.

But in gymnastics, nobody is in the same league with the Soviets, who send out waves of young teen-agers who all look like the girl next door, except that they all can jump over the roof. Only their Eurasian beauty Nelli Kim, who will turn 23 this month, is cast from a different mold.

But even though she only finished sixth behind two Soviet teammates in individual scoring, Kim is the unmistakable team leader. When the triple gold medalist of the Montreal Games sealed the Soviet victory Wednesday with a 9.95 in the floor exercises, she was swept into the arms of her teammates and began sobbing tears of joy.

Soviet Coach Aman Shaniyazov called Kim the captain of the squad. "She helps me in all points of training," he said.

Drunken Drivers

DEAR ANN: I read your article in the paper on drunken drivers, and as usual I agree with your advice but feel that you should have gone a bit further.

I cite a case that happened to a friend of mine who owned and operated a cocktail bar. Upon closing his bar he felt that a certain customer was in no condition to drive home. He closed the car, locked the man's car keys in the cash register and called a taxi to take the man home.

On the way home the taxi was stopped by the police, and the driver was charged with drunken driving. The passenger was charged with being drunk in the auto.

The taxi company paid the passenger's fine, but he now has a record with the police department.

I believe you should caution people to check the driver of the taxi before engaging his service.—Concerned Covina Citizen

DEAR C.C.C.: I agree, it's a good idea to check out the condition of the driver before you get into a taxi, but a visual appraisal may not be accurate. Some people can be smashed and look perfectly OK. So, you take your chances.

I am aware that a drunk driver faces arrest because he may not be able to operate a vehicle safely, but I didn't know a passenger could be arrested for being drunk. I phoned Covina and spoke with Police Capt. John Lentz.

He said California has a law regarding drunks who can't take care of themselves. If the taxi driver were sober and had a drunk in the cab, and was stopped for speeding, the drunk would not be arrested since the driver would be watching out for his welfare. Capt. Lentz said it is a "preventive" law. When both the driver and passenger are drunk, they both get arrested because neither is able to take care of himself.

This is a state law. So if you go to California, folks, and plan to hang one on, make sure the taxi driver is sober—or you may spend the night in the slammer.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm writing in regard to your reply to "Ughsville, Mo." The notion that "trench mouth" is contagious is outdated. Here are the facts:

Vincent's infection, as it is more formally known, is caused by bacteria normally present in everyone's mouth. This disease takes hold when the following conditions exist: (1) poor oral hygiene; (2) lowered resistance (too much work or play) or serious illness; (3) emotional stress (separation, divorce, death, job loss, etc.).

The expression "trench mouth" was coined during World War I when many men in combat came down with it. Actually, they were tired, run-down, under extreme stress with poor diet and poor oral hygiene. The same conditions were present in some school dormitories, giving rise to the belief that it was contagious.

Please make it clear that the condition cannot be cured at home. Professional cleaning is required, and antibiotics are often necessary. The damage done by "trench mouth" is swift, irreversible and can lead to serious gum disease and loss of teeth. Urge your readers who have painful, bleeding and swollen gums to see a dentist immediately.—San Luis Obispo, Calif., Reader

DEAR READER: I can add nothing to your letter except my thanks for having written it. I hope my readers who have the symptoms described will take your advice.

Ann Landers discusses teenage drinking—its myths, its realities. Learn the facts by reading "Booze and You—For Teen-Agers Only," by Ann Landers. Send 50 cents and a long, self-addressed stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

At Wits End

By ERMA BOMBECK

The dull thing about men's fashions is that they're always so "practical."

"They always put zippers and buttons in the front of their clothes where they can see to fasten them. They never let their ankles see daylight. They always have a jacket handy to slip into and cover their stomachs after they eat. Their styles are controlled by the "conservative party," which has been in power since they voted out white knee socks and satin breeches.

It was rather predictable that during a recent transit strike in New York, men started to wear sneakers with their "serious suits" to work just to be comfortable when they walked long distances.

However, the real shocker is that the strike is over and men are still wearing their sneakers. I never thought I'd live to see the day when Prof. Irwin Corey and my husband would be trend-setters.

With Prof. Corey, it's an act. With my husband, it's a statement against style. He started wearing gym shoes ten years ago when he began to jog. "Healthy feet are my life," he would say dramatically. I went shopping with him just once for a pair of running shoes. With three more days, he could have created a world. We saw the inner sole dissected...the construction blueprint of the heel...the stress areas diagrammed. We looked at them in mirrors, in a crouching position and under an X-ray machine. He paid more for them than our wedding pictures. He never takes them off.

It's like traveling with Woody Allen. He walks into a room and just in case no one notices he's wearing blue sneakers with an 18-inch optic yellow cushioned tongue and grip-fast shoestrings with a star on each heel with a dress suit, he calls attention to it. "Yes, these little babies have carried these legs over the finish line at Boston, San Diego and Phoenix," etc.

I think there's more to it than just "comfort." I think "conservatives" are once again flexing their muscles and saying, "I'm sick of being told by my mother, my wife and my employer to wear 'hard' shoes. I'm sick of being told I have to wear a tie to be dressed up or a coat to be allowed to eat dinner in a restaurant with valet parking. From here on in, I wear what I want, when I want, and where I want."

As my hostess welcomed my husband the other night, she whispered, "What's he supposed to be?"

"Simple. From the ankles up, he's ivy league. From the ankles down, Little League."

The portrait of George Washington by Gilbert Stuart, which hangs in the East Room of the White House, is the oldest possession there. Brought to the executive mansion in 1800, it was saved by Dolly Madison when she escaped Washington in the wake of British troops in the War of 1812.

Heavy Rain

When seven inches of rain fell within 30 minutes at Cambridge, Ohio, one day in July 1914, the air was so full of water that anyone stepping outdoors found it virtually impossible to breathe. It was one of the severest rainstorms ever recorded in the United States.

THE PRIEST WITH PERPETUAL POWER

See then how great this Melchizedek is: (a) Even Abraham, the first and most honored of all God's chosen people, gave Melchizedek a tenth of the spoils he took from the kings he had been fighting. One could understand why Abraham would do this if Melchizedek had been a Jewish priest, for later on God's people were required by law to give gifts to help their priests because the priests were their relatives. But Melchizedek was not a relative, and yet Abraham paid him.

(b) Melchizedek placed a blessing upon mighty Abraham, and as everyone knows, a person who has the power to bless is always greater than the person he blesses.

(c) The Jewish priests, though mortal, received tithes; but we are told that Melchizedek lives on.

(d) One might even say that Levi himself (the ancestor of all Jewish priests, of all who receive tithes), paid tithes to Melchizedek through Abraham.

For although Levi wasn't born yet, the seed from which he came was in Abraham when Abraham paid the tithes to Melchizedek.

(e) If the Jewish priests and their laws had been able to save us, why then did God need to send Christ as a priest with the rank of Melchizedek, instead of sending someone with the rank of Aaron—the same rank all other priests had?

And when God sends a new kind of priest, His law must be changed to permit it. As we all know, Christ did not belong to the priest-tribe of Levi, but came from the tribe of Judah, which had not been chosen for priesthood; Moses had never given them that work.

So we can plainly see that God's method changed, for Christ, the new High Priest who came with the rank of Melchizedek,

Did not become a priest by meeting the old requirement of belonging to the tribe of Levi, but on the basis of power flowing from a life that cannot end.

And the Psalmist points this out when he says of Christ, "You are a priest forever with the rank of Melchizedek."

Miss Hall Honored At Bridal Shower

Rhonda Hall, bride-elect of Steve Nieman, was honored with a bridal shower Wednesday morning in the home of Mrs. Jim Perrin, 2018 Plains.

Receiving guests at the entrance were Mrs. Perrin, the honoree, her mother, Mrs. Elmo Hall, the groom's mother Mrs. O.G. Nieman and his grandmother, Mrs. A.D. Nieman of Lubbock.

Mrs. Craig Nieman of Littlefield, sister-in-law of the groom, was seated at the registry table. The table was laid with a white cloth and centered with an arrangement of white daisies.

Guests were served from a table laid with a white lace cloth over yellow. An arrangement of yellow and apricot silk flowers centered the table. Crystal and pewter appointments were used. Iced tea, punch, coffee, miniature sweet rolls, quiche and melon balls were served.

Servers were Staci Payne and Denise Womble of Amarillo, cousin of the honoree.

Those in the house party wore corsages of white daisies tied with yellow ribbon.

Gifts were displayed in four rooms of the Perrin home. Approximately 80 guests attended.

Special guests at the shower included Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hall, grandparents of the honoree; A.D. Nieman of Lubbock, grandfather of the groom; and two of the honoree's aunts, Mrs. Sterling Cummings of Lockney and Mrs. Lewis Womble of Amarillo.

Hostesses for the shower included Mrs. Jim Cavin, G.W. Payne, W.E. Sparks, Herschel Black, Charles Hoover, Truman Hazelrigg, Jeff Smart, W.A. Estes, Calvin Mitts, Bob Josserand, Willis Duggan, Tommy Carnahan, Robert Lloyd, Larry Wartes, Elmore Rains, Frank Barrett, Dean Herring, W.H. Kitchens, and Perrin.

The couple plans to marry August 14 in the First Christian Church here. They will reside in Hereford.

Rebellion Concludes Peaceful

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — The eight-week, bow-and-arrow rebellion in the New Hebrides ended peacefully today — a week before the archipelago gets independence — when 200 British and French troops landed on the island of Espiritu Santo, the government there reported.

Not a shot was fired and there was no resistance from the rebels on the South Pacific island, spokesman John Beasant said in a telephone interview from Port Vila, on Efate island, the capital of the 72-island chain 800 miles east of Australia.

He said rebel leader Jimmy Stevens, a former bulldozer driver who took over Espiritu Santo on May 28 with a band of tribesmen armed with bows and arrows, was on hand to meet the 100 British commandos and 100 French paratroopers.

"I understand there was a big crowd in Luganville to see them land," he said.

Stevens, who has said he gets his orders from God, had promised to meet any arriving military force with dancers and flowers.

"I don't know if he met them with flowers, but it was peaceful," said Beasant.

He said the paratroopers were dropped in first, cleared the airfield and then the other troops landed. The French came from neighboring New mother of the honoree, Mrs. O.G. Nieman, mother of the prospective bridegroom and Mrs. A.E. Nieman, grandmother of the prospective bridegroom.

Forming Receiving Line

A bridal shower honoring Rhonda Hall, bride-elect of Steve Nieman, was held Wednesday morning in the home of Mrs. Jim Perrin. Forming the receiving line were, from left, Mrs. Jim Perrin, the honoree, Mrs. Elmo Hall,

President James A. Garfield was ambidextrous and used to demonstrate his ability to guests by taking a pen in each hand and writing simultaneously in Greek and Latin.

Paul Harvey News

Tomorrow Won't Wait

Less than a hundred years ago there were bitter disputes and angry protest demonstrations in our nation over electricity.

In the news media and in the streets there were vehement objections to stringing electric wires which "might kill people."

Ordinances were passed in many cities and towns forbidding stringing electric wires which might cause deaths and fires.

And the controversy raged for 10 years--while Americans continued to incinerate themselves and their houses by burning candles.

Every innovation since the beginning of the industrial revolution has been frightening to some. The most fearful are often the least informed.

This awareness led anthropologist Robert Briggault to lose faith in the democratic process and to become a communist. Cynically, he concluded, "Not one man in ten thousand is entitled to his opinion."

The age of the atom was conceived in clandestine trust and born in the belly of a devastating bomb. Nuclear energy is as mysterious now as was alternating current 90 years ago. Each having been proved deadly dangerous, neither would be trusted for a generation. Evolution, at its most accelerated pace, is agonizingly gradual.

But this time we haven't time to wait.

Nuclear energy had been harnessed to provide 13 percent of our nation's electrical needs. In some cities, like Chicago, 50 percent. And entirely safely.

But then came the media-magnified false alarm over Three Mile Island and the scaremongers took to the streets.

The National Academy of Science is comprised of some of the most prestigious scientists in the world. The Academy has just completed a four-year study by 350 scientists, economists and environmentalists. Their conclusion: For the near term none of the exotic energy sources can produce enough energy fast enough to keep our nation's lights lit.

We have no option but to rely on nuclear energy and coal.

Again, this is the consensus of our most learned scientists following an in-depth study.

Yet their significant report is drowned out by the protests of pettifoggers who use rock musicians to gather crowds with whom they can share their limited learning and magnified fears. And utterly irresponsibly they can misuse the court process to paralyze huge power projects.

A very real and present danger has developed in the Persian Gulf. Oil is not worth going to war for and we don't have to.

Couple Married

Tommie Cherry and Brian Hufhines were married recently in the First Christian Church with Rev. Mack McCarter, pastor, officiating.

The bride, who graduated from Hereford High School in 1978, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cherry of 626 Stanton. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. G.R. Hufhines of Dimmitt. A 1978 graduate of Dimmitt High School, he is currently employed by Armour in Hereford.

The couple are at home at 500 C West Circle Drive in Dimmitt.

'Sensual' Oriental Dancer Fights Stereotypes

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (NEA) — Belly dancing is becoming a fad these days. But to authentic Oriental dancers like Asmara, most of it is just a cheap imitation. And the part that is not is widely misunderstood.

Asmara has performed as an Oriental folk dancer ever since a three-month visit to the Middle East a decade ago. Her name — pronounced with the accent on the last syllable — means "the dark one."

In real life, however, she is Sylvia Ashton (formerly Ashtoyan), a Milwaukee-born woman of Armenian descent.

"I would like to break some of the stereotypes," says Asmara, who has found that many Americans think of Oriental dancers as "dumb broads" or, worse, as strippers.

"Oriental dancing is sensual, not sexual," insists the English-literature graduate from Wisconsin's Ripon College. "It's interpretive and individual. It's an art."

U.S. attitudes about Oriental dance are far different from those of the Middle East. Today's top folk dancers in the Middle East receive the same esteem that prima ballerinas do in the West, Asmara says. Their names are household words in the same way that those of Hollywood movie stars are household words here.

Asmara has been on performing on the road for more than two years.

"I've danced in towns that just have gravel roads and I've danced in Middle East clubs in cities," she reports. And she finds satisfaction in both settings.

The advantage of Middle East clubs is that audiences are more knowledgeable. They know they will like the dance even before they see it, she says.

But a different pleasure is found in the small towns where audiences may have no concept of what an Oriental dancer does.

"It's nice when I can educate people, when they enjoy, accept and change their attitude toward professional dancing," she explains.

"Sure I don't like it when people think I'm ignorant or laugh or look down on dancing," she continues. "I'm not ignorant. I don't strip. And I don't go out with men every night."

"Some dancers do — but some secretaries do, too."

The origins of Oriental dancing are obscure, reports Asmara. Some people say it emerged with the Egyptian pharaohs, while others say it developed only about 200 years ago.

Asmara notes that the customs of various Asian countries have been incorporated into the dance. Finger cymbals originated in India, balancing acts began in Morocco and floor movements are of Bedouin origin.

What about the belly movements? They are thought to have begun as a ritual enactment of childbirth.

Asmara says the term "belly dancing" was coined by the French, who were shocked upon visiting the Middle East to find that dancers' midsections were exposed.

"Many dancers try to look 'Hollywood' now," she protests. "They wear rhinestones and spike heels without any thought to how the art actually evolved."

Asmara's working clothes, in contrast, consist of about 50 skirts and veils, all of which she sewed herself. Her costumes and jewelry represent an investment of thousands of dollars.

That includes the coins that adorn her costumes.

That tradition began long ago when coins were flung as tips from appreciative customers, explains Asmara. The dancer, usually from the lower class, sewed the coins onto her costume. When she had enough for her dowry, she could get married.

But Asmara says she has no plans to marry. "I've always been a loner," she explains.

Is Oriental dance difficult to learn?

No, she says, adding that the rhythm and a few basic steps are all one really needs to know before starting to dance.

The dance is not a chore, Asmara says, though it is a good exercise that tones the muscles. She thinks that may explain why Oriental dancing is gaining popularity in the United States.

And does she have to put in the long hours of practice that are required of ballerinas? Hardly!

"There is no reason to warm up or practice during the day," says Asmara. "Why should I when I dance six nights a week? If you dance too much, you might lose enthusiasm for it."

WANT ADS WORK!

WANT ADS WORK!

WANT ADS WORK!

DEAR DR. LAMB - I read your column on the way to correct back problems. At age 67 I'm finding it more and more difficult to grow old gracefully as I had promised myself to do. I'm thinking The Health Letter number 13-10 that you mentioned for help about the back might help me, too.

I know that old hitch in my get along is probably due to my reluctance to do almost any kind of exercise that causes any pain in the legs, especially the hip area. I suspect I have arthritis where the hip bone socket is. Will you send me your instructions? I'll be forever grateful to you.

DEAR READER - The kind of exercises you need to do to help support your back do not need to put a strain on your hip joints or your knees. The most important exercises to help prevent back pain are those which strengthen the abdominal muscles and the muscles of the back itself. These include sit ups to strengthen the upper abdominal muscles, modified leg lifts to strengthen the lower abdominal muscles, contraction and relaxation of the muscles of the buttocks and the muscles that help maintain a straight back.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 13-10, Backache and What to Do About It, that you have requested. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. It will include in further detail the proper way to do these exercises.

You have to be careful how you do leg lifts since if you lift your feet off the floor with the knees straight, you can put quite a bit of strain on the lower back muscles. You want to avoid that. Just follow the instructions that I'm sending you and it should help you avoid back problems.

Back pain is a symptom and it is important to have a medical examination to find out what's causing it. In many cases the underlying cause is lack of exercise which has allowed the muscles to weaken and cause undue strain on the back. But in some cases other problems, that are not helped by exercise, are the real cause.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I had heart bypass surgery last January. Is my heart now as good as before needing surgery? Am I able to do everything that I want, including lifting?

DEAR READER - The only way to find out what you can do at this point is through an examination that reveals how much residual heart damage you have. The fact that you had a coronary bypass operation indicates that you had significant amounts of fatty-cholesterol deposits in the coronary arteries to your heart muscle. Otherwise, the operation shouldn't have been done. You may also have had some heart muscle damage.

The major purpose for a coronary bypass operation is to relieve uncontrollable heart pain. In other words, to improve a person's enjoyment of life. In certain specific technical situations, the bypass operation can be life saving but in many instances good medical management makes it unnecessary to have the surgery. That management includes weight loss in people who are overweight, control of high blood pressure in people who have that problem, a low-fat, low-cholesterol diet and no smoking.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I'm a 46-year-old female. My blood pressure has always been on the high side but six months ago my blood pressure was 178 over 120 and I'm having nose bleeds. Now I'm taking Dyazide and it's been around 130 over 90, sometimes higher. Twice this last month I've been dizzy and my blood pressure was 118 over 84. What's happening and what should be done about this? My doctor said not to worry about my blood pressure being 130 over 90. A doctor that specializes in women's disorders said that that's too high and has to come down but nothing has been done to find out the reason it's so high. Who do I believe?

DEAR READER - Everyone would agree that your initial pressure of 187 over 120 was far too high and your readings of 130 over 90 show a significant improvement with your medical management. Sometimes the best that can be accomplished is to significantly improve the situation even though one might not achieve the most optimal results. Excessive zeal in treating moderately elevated blood pressure can lead to complications from the medicines.

I don't know what you mean by dizzy. You could mean that you were feeling faint which could be because your blood pressure was low or it could be related to your medicines which tend to wash out salt and water. That's how such medicines lower your blood pressure.

The dizzy spells could be an indication that you're getting as much medicine to lower your blood pressure as your particular system will tolerate. All these points are why there's no absolute rule that can be used in the treatment of every case of elevated blood pressure. And that's why each case has to be treated individually by the doctor who knows the patient and the patient's response to the medicines used.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 15-8, Your Vital Blood Pressure, which will give you more information on what determines blood pressure and its range and things you can do to affect it. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Now it's perfectly true that 130 over 90 is not an optimal reading, although many doctors would say it's normal. We do know that the lower your blood pressure is, as long as it's not so low as to cause symptoms such as faintness, the less likely you are to develop fatty-cholesterol deposits in your arteries which lead to heart attacks and strokes. More recent studies have shown that individuals with even mildly elevated blood pressure do better if they're treated to lower their blood pressure. Specifically, they're less likely to have strokes.

Some patients do better on a combination of medicines and if your doctor wishes and your blood pressure is elevated enough, he may want to add some other medicines besides washing out salt and water from your body. Sometimes small doses of Inderal are very effective.

Some individuals have intermittently elevated blood pressure levels. Many of these people really have anxiety which causes the blood pressure to become high when a person is anxious. At other times it is normal. It's very important to recognize the difference between high blood pressure caused by anxiety and hypertension as a disease since the treatment is entirely different.

Her needles are dull

DEAR POLLY - I do hope someone can give me some advice about what to do when knitting needles get dull. - MRS. J.M.

DEAR MRS. J.M. - Have you tried lightly sanding the tips with an emery board or very fine sandpaper? - POLLY

DEAR POLLY - My wife and I use identical razors. Since I have a tough beard and a very tender face I frequently have to change blades. My wife finds she can still use my discarded blades for several more shaves. Considering the price of blades this makes for quite a savings. - CHARLES

DEAR POLLY - To prevent my toddler from sticking his fingers in our window fan I put nylon net around the screen on each side. The nylon net is lightweight, very inexpensive and lets the air pass through it. The safety of little fingers is assured. - LELA

DEAR POLLY - On my last visit to my optometrist I took along a sample of the size print that I must work with in conjunction with my employment. He thought this was a great idea and commended me for bringing it along to be used with my eye examination. He even suggested, Polly, that I send it along to you to be shared with your many readers. - SHIRLEY

DEAR POLLY - To save a little bit of electricity each day I keep two kettles going and as soon as I have used the water in one and have turned off the current I put the other one on the still hot ring. This way I do not have to heat the next water from scratch. I only fill the kettles a little less than half full. - D.E.S.
