Tyson's fish

SAN FRANCISCO — Tyson Foods, the Arkansas firm so closely linked to President Clinton's political fortunes, gained a huge share of the lucrative Pacific whiting catch in direct intervention by the Commerce Department. Smaller commercial fishermen claim Tyson leaned on Commerce Secretary Ron Brown to twice overrule his department's own fisheries council in decisions that meant millions of dollars in advantages for Tyson and four other giant trawler operations. A special prosecutor is monitoring the case but has not begun a formal investigation. Page 8A

U.S.-Japanese deal staves off trade war

Associated Press

GENEVA — Dodging imminent American sanctions, Japan promised on Wednesday to open its long-shielded auto market to the United States in a sudden agreement that staved off an outright trade war between the world's two largest economies.

The real effects of the agreement could take years to determine. But President Clinton hailed it as a breakthrough that will give the United States access to Japan's mammoth auto market and create thousands of American jobs.

The pact that culminated two years of negotia-

Residents, officials hash over ideas to improve I-20 corridor

By Katherine Poteet

Utilities, rezoning, beautification and better access were brought up at a public hearing Wednesday designed to get input in the development of Interstate 20 between Fairgrounds Road and Loop 250.

About 80 residents, many of whom own property along the interstate, attended the hearing, along with City Planning and Development Coordinator Cameron Walker and J.T. Dunkin, a Dallas-based planning consultant.

City staff and Dunkin recently completed an assessment of land use, zoning and driver accessibility around the interstate.

In a 24-hour period along the interstate in Midland, about 11,500 vehicles travel the main lanes, and about 5,500 to 6,500 drive down service roads (depending on the section), according to state- and city-

Unabomber 'prank' snags airlines, mail

Trail of the Unabomber

A 17-year run of package bombings is code-named Unabom because early bombings targeted universities and airlines. The Unabomber claims to be part of an anti-technology anarchist organization he calls the "FC," but the FBI believes the Unabomber works alone.

■ Self-described anarchist who terrorized executives, researchers for 17 years says his threat to blow up a jetliner was one last ruse.

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — After throwing air travel and mail delivery into chaos with a threat to blow up a plane out of Los Angeles, the Unabomber said it was all just "one last prank."

The New York Times said late Wednesday it received a letter in which the Unabomber took responsibility for the bomb threat and said the whole thing was a ruse.

"Since the public has a short memory, we decided to play one last prank to remind them who we are," the letter said. "But, no, we haven't tried to plant a bomb on an airline (recently)."

The Times said the FBI authenticated the mail late Wednesday at its headquarters in Washington.

The threat to blow up a plane by the July Fourth weekend temporarily grounded all mail in California on Wednesday and imposed the tightest airport security since the Gulf War.

The warning received Tuesday by the San Francisco Chronicle, read: "WARNING. The terrorist group FC, called unabomber by the FBI, is planning to blow up an airliner out of Los Angeles International Airport some time during the next six days."

The typewritten letter was pronounced authentic by the FBI.

"We are taking it very seriously. ... We do deem it to be a credible threat," said Ed Jones, division manager of security for the Federal Aviation Administration.

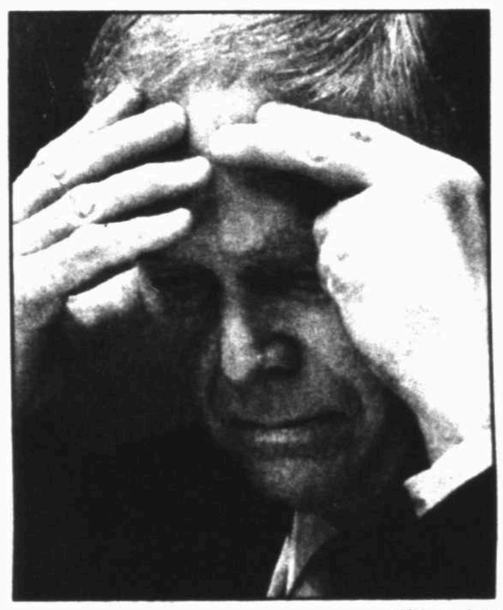

It represented the first time the elusive bomber had threatened a target in advance.

At airports from San Francisco to Los Angeles and San Diego, passengers had to produce photo ID at counters and curbside baggage check-ins and were told their bags might be opened. The FAA also warned travelers to watch out for suspicious bags or parcels and expect security delays.

Long lines formed as ticket agents checked passengers' identification.

Justice Department closes investigation, calls off prosecution

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department has closed its investigation of Sen. Bob Packwood and has decided against prosecuting him over allegations that he solicited job offers from lobbyists for his ex-wife.

The department told Packwood's lawyers of the decision in a letter dated Wednesday and obtained by The Associated Press.

However, the Oregon Republican still faces Senate ethics committee charges concerning the job offers and complaints that he engaged in sexual misconduct and altered his diaries to obstruct the panel's probe.

"This will inform you that the Public Integrity Section has declined prosecution and closed its investigation of allegations that your client, United States Senator Robert Packwood, arranged for certain individuals to make job offers to his wife in exchange for official acts," the Justice Department letter said.

City water trickles toward north on citizen requests

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Citizen requests have prompted initial plans to create a public improvement district in a north Midland community to allow the city to pipe in water.

If established, about 20 parcels of land off Midkiff Road between Mockingbird and Bluebird lanes would have access to municipal water. Those residents now depend on well water and bottled water.

"The (well) water out there is not any good," said Fred Nobles, a Bluebird Lane resident. "You don't drink it, you don't cook with it."

Nobles said he welcomes the construction of a main water line to his neighborhood. "I've been asking for it for 12 years," he said.

For the city to bring water to the area, a minimum number of residents must be in agreement, officials said.

County faces budget-balancing puzzle, tries to hold line on tax

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The challenge of balancing the budget by matching projected income with the estimated outflow while maintaining a cash reserve — a savings — once again is confronting the five-member Midland County Commissioners' Court.

The county's governing body was steeped in a budget-study session Wednesday with county department heads in trying to determine how to trim the $20 million in departmental requests in the upcoming 1995-96 fiscal year to the $18.3 million in the county's projected income from property taxes, the half-cent sales tax, fines, fees and grants.

"The biggest challenge is to provide the needed county services without raising taxes," said Midland County Judge Jeff Norwood, who has pledged not to raise taxes in 1995 in his first year in office.

"There are unlimited numbers of good causes, but very limited funds," he said. "And I believe this court is committed to adopting a budget that will not require a tax increase."

In doing so, the court will be forced to cut department budgets and, for the fifth year in a row, to forgo pay raises for the county's 525 employees.

Serb bombing of Sarajevo TV center, apartment kills five, wounds dozens SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Rockets fired by rebel Serbs blew gaping holes in Sarajevo's TV center and an apartment building Wednesday, killing five people and wounding dozens of residents and foreign reporters.

The attack appeared to be retaliation for government attacks on two Serb-held suburbs, including shelling by government guns near the TV center, as part of its effort to break the Serb siege of Sarajevo.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic, marking the important Serb holiday of Vidovdan, urged Serb troops to bring an end to the war by stepping up their attacks.

Three more people were killed in shelling elsewhere in Sarajevo Wednesday, hospital officials said.

Television journalists, their faces bloodied, stumbled through shards of glass, office furniture and shattered walls after Serb rockets hit the second floor of the TV center just after 9:30 a.m.

One guard was killed and 36 people were injured inside the six-story concrete building, built for the 1984 Winter Olympics. Its top four floors are unused because they are too exposed to shelling.

About an hour later, a rocket punched a hole through the fifth and sixth stories of an apartment block across the street, killing at least four people and injuring dozens.

In both attacks, the Serbs used powerful but inaccurate homemade rocket bombs, said U.N. officials.

The rocket that hit the TV building carried an estimated 550 pounds of explosives, said U.N. spokesman Lt. Col. Gary Coward.

"We believe they make them by connecting up to four high-caliber shells together, probably 128-mm, and then they launch them by rocket," said Maj. Myrian Sochacki, a U.N. spokeswoman. "They are crude but they can cause tremendous damage."

Bosnian Serb leader, marking the important holiday of Vidovdan, urges troops to bring an end to the war by stepping up their attacks.

The Associated Press Television office on the second floor was destroyed. APTV employees Eldar Emric, Asja Resavac and Mirsad Helac were hospitalized, and Emric underwent surgery to remove shrapnel that pierced a lung.

Also injured was Cable News Network employee David Albritton, an American who had only been in Sarajevo a few hours, and Faridoun Hemani, a Canadian who works for Worldwide Television News.

U.N. spokesman Lt. Col. Gerard Dubois said Albritton was in stable condition after surgery for serious lacerations on his neck, hands and arms.

Other foreign media, including Associated Press news writers and photographers, operate from other buildings that were unscathed Wednesday.

The attack took place on Vidovdan, a Serb holiday that originated with Vid, the ancient Slavic god of healing.

On June 28, 1389, the Serbs lost the battle of Kosovo Polje, beginning 500 years of Turkish rule. Since then, the day has commemorated their struggle to keep their identity and Orthodox Christian faith under Muslim domination.

On the holiday in 1914, Serb nationalist Gavrilo Princip triggered World War I by killing Austria's Archduke Franz Ferdinand in Sarajevo. In 1992, Bosnia's rebel Serbs established their army on Vidovdan.

On Wednesday, government artillery shelled Serb-held western and southern parts of Sarajevo beginning at 8 a.m., and infantry troops joined in the attack about an hour later. The Serbs responded by pounding government-held suburbs, U.N. officials said.

Artillery gunners and snipers have been killing civilians since the government offensive began June 15. Five people, including two children, were killed and 16 were injured in the 24-hour period ending just before the TV attack.

Other U.N.-declared "safe areas" supposedly off-limits to attack also have suffered.

Ukrainian peacekeepers in the eastern enclave of Zepa said their base narrowly escaped damage in a two-hour barrage late Tuesday. Sochacki said Serbs launched the attack, the first serious shelling of Zepa this year.

Another Major rival gears up to challenge him

LONDON (AP) — John Major took another punch in his fight to keep the prime minister's job when another big-name rival sent out hints Wednesday that he would challenge him.

Publicly, Employment Secretary Michael Portillo reasserted his loyalty to the prime minister.

But his supporters told the media Portillo didn't believe Major would win the July 4 contest for Conservative Party leader.

In that event, his supporters said, the employment secretary will join a second-round race for party chief, who automatically becomes prime minister.

In what at first appeared to be a bold gambit, Major resigned as leader of the Conservatives last week.

Balloting least violent in Haiti history, U.S. official says

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Despite the chaos at voting stations and some post-electoral violence, Haiti's weekend balloting was the most free and least bloody in the country's history, a U.S. official said Wednesday.

The latest victim of violence was Col. Dumarsais Romulus, formerly a top officer in Haiti's now-disbanded army. He was shot by unidentified gunmen Tuesday night near his home in Port-au-Prince. Circumstances of the killing were not immediately known.

A candidate for the Chamber of Deputies was slain in southern Haiti on Monday, and there were reports that the president of a polling station west of the capital was missing.

"I hope it's not the beginning of a cycle of violence," U.S. Embassy spokesman Stan Schrager told reporters. "We have to believe that it is not."

Sunday's elections — in which 10,000 candidates ran for 2,000 local offices and 101 legislative seats — were "the most free, most complex and least violent" in Haiti's history, Schrager insisted.

The period surrounding Sunday's elections was comparatively less violent than presidential elections in 1990, which Jean-Bertrand Aristide won in a landslide. However, the U.N.-supervised vote five years ago was considered free and fair despite the campaign violence.

The vote count continued Wednesday. Electoral officials said it would take at least eight to 10 days — by next Monday at the earliest — to hand-count all the ballots.

The Organization of American States said Wednesday its observation of the vote count would continue for several more days. With 300 monitors, it had the most observers overseeing the elections and subsequent tally.

The OAS noted several problems in different parts of the country, including canceled votes, burned ballots, threats against polling station presidents and general confusion. Its observers estimated overall voter turnout at 50 percent.

Schrager acknowledged that the balloting was marked by "regrettable" administrative and logistical problems.

"This was a rocky first start, but it was still an important day in the history of this country," Schrager said.

He said he expected far fewer problems in the July 23 runoff and December presidential election because far fewer candidates will be involved.

Aristide's leftist Lavalas Platform was expected to sweep Sunday's elections and secure a majority in parliament.

In Washington on Tuesday, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said the Foreign Relations Committee would hold hearings next month on the U.S.-funded elections, apparently challenging what has been a foreign policy success for the Clinton administration.

Helms, a staunch foe of Aristide, had criticized last fall's U.S.-led intervention that removed brutal military rulers from power and reinstated the elected president, who was ousted and exiled in a 1991 coup.

Chances of rain keep climbing

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a 30 percent chance of rain, a high in the mid-90s and southeast winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be mostly cloudy with a 40 percent chance of rain and a low in the mid-60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Friday should be mostly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of rain and a high in the mid-80s.

After an overnight low of 65, Wednesday's high reached 95, compared to the record high for that date of 114 set in 1994. The record low was 52 set in 1985.

STATE

It was partly to mostly cloudy and hot over most of Texas on Wednesday. However, sunshine baked broad expanses of Southwest and West Texas.

Afternoon thunderstorms, some severe, roamed North Central Texas and the Coastal Bend. A flash flood warning was issued for southern Lampasas County after 2 to 3 inches of rain fell.

Temperatures peaked generally in the 80s and 90s, with Del Rio and several points in the Lower Rio Grande Valley reporting 98 degrees at 3 p.m.

NATION

Storms soaked the Southeast from Virginia to the South Carolina-Georgia line and into the Gulf states from Beaumont, Texas, to Florida's western panhandle on Wednesday, while showers swept from the High Plains into the Midwest.

In Virginia, hundreds of people fled flooded homes, offices and factories in areas drenched by a second day of rain.

One death has been blamed on the flooding, and divers, dogs and boaters searched Virginia's mountainous northern tip for a 3-year-old girl swept into a stream Tuesday as her grandparents watched helplessly.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

HASH: Public hearing airs ideas for I-20 corridor

compiled statistics.

Despite the high volume of traffic, many residents expressed concern over the lack of highway signs to lure motorists into the city and difficult access on and off the interstate.

"My question is, what can be done about access from the interstate to the access road?" said resident James Conn.

One resident said there is no sense of arriving in the city from either direction on the loop.

"Access is a key issue in development of this interstate," Dunkin said. "And, I believe another important issue is the beautification and sense of arriving into a city. I agree that most motorists probably pass Midland by without knowing it's there."

Mayor Bobby Burns said the city is looking at better access to the interstate as one of the problems for the underdevelopment of that area. Another issue the city is looking at, according to the mayor, is bringing utilities into the area.

Recently, a main sewer line — from the water control plant at Cloverdale Road and I-20 to just west of Rankin Highway at I-20 — was installed, in part, to make way for development in the area. The line runs along the south side of the interstate.

Several residents asked if a similar line would be installed along the north side of the interstate for residents there.

"I know that one of the holdups in the development of the property along the interstate is lack of utilities," said Kathleen Owens. "Is there going to be an effort to get a sewer and water system on the north side of the interstate?"

"My understanding is that the (sewer) line that was just completed will service both sides of the interstate," Burns said.

Additionally, Burns and City Council member Pat Schneider both said the council could rezone the area in order to expedite development.

"We need to know what you want along that interstate," Walker said, after a resident pointed out that a good deal of the area is zoned for office space. "If you want it commercial, it can be that. If you want more indoor shopping and restaurants, then we can zone it retail."

Dunkin said comments made at the meeting would be looked at and incorporated into the recommendation made to City Council.

TRICKLES: Northside residents push for city water

(From 1A)

To create the necessary public improvement district, half the property owners must sign a petition as well as people representing half the valuation of the proposed area, officials said.

The City Council has given the city's legal staff the go-ahead to prepare a petition and some residents have volunteered to gather the required signatures.

"Everybody wants it, but they're worrying about the cost," said Pat Schneider, District 1 City Council representative.

If the project goes forward, officials said, the estimated cost to residents would total $137,000 and the city would fund about $113,000. The city generally pays material costs for any water line greater than 8-inch in diameter.

The installation would include a 16-inch main water line on Midkiff Road from Mockingbird Lane to just south of Bluebird Lane, and a 12-inch line on Bluebird Lane about 1,000 feet each side of Midkiff Road.

"I anticipate there will be some people who will not voluntarily participate in the line," said Assistant City Manager Glen Hackler.

If the required number of residents petition the city, then others will essentially be forced to participate. Generally, residents would pay for their share of the line over a five to seven year period; non-participants would, by way of a lien, pay their assessed portion plus interest at the time their property is sold.

If a public improvement district is established, the water lines would probably be installed in spring of 1996 before anticipated widening and improvements of Midkiff Road by the state.

THREAT: Unabomber says threat was 1 last ruse

(From 1A)

"I feel unsafe, but I try not to let it ruin my life," said John Mulcrone of West Hollywood, who had to produce his driver's license as he checked in at the curb at Los Angeles International Airport.

But others took precautions.

Tracy Woods, originally scheduled to fly to Dallas from Los Angeles International Airport, switched to a flight out of Burbank Airport.

"I do really take this fellow really seriously, somebody who has been able to elude the FBI for this long," she said. "If it was some kind of terrorist threat or something like that, then I might not take it seriously. But this I do."

She said she also was concerned because of her surname. The Unabomber has shown a fascination with wood in building his bombs and in previous targets and return addresses.

Some airlines waived fees for passengers wanting to change their flights. There was no rush to cancel flights in advance of the Independence Day holiday, airlines said. But signs of the scare began to show.

"We've had a lot of worried people calling," said Joel Weinberger, an agent at Adore Travel in Los Angeles. He had just one cancellation, however.

All mail flown in and from California was ordered halted for most of the day. Many of the Unabomber's explosives have been mailed from Northern California post offices, and the FBI has said the Unabomber probably lives near Sacramento.

Late Wednesday, the Postal Service said it had worked out guidelines with the Federal Aviation Administration to resume shipment of letters. It said it also would soon resume package service under heightened security measures.

"It is our intention to deliver the mail in the safest, most secure manner," the Postal Service said in a statement from Washington. "We will take every precaution to see that there is minimal disruption to service."

It was not immediately clear how the Unabomber's second letter would affect mail delivery and airport security.

Calls to the FBI in Washington were referred to the agency's San Francisco bureau. A message left seeking comment was not immediately returned.

Some of the mail security measures are similar to those taken during the Gulf War, said Postal Inspector Daniel L. Mihalko in Washington. He said anything going aboard aircraft would be scrutinized.

Federal Express and United Parcel Service, which rely on their own planes, said they will continue to fly but are instituting stricter security in California. Both said occasional or first-time air shippers are being asked for personal ID, and all documents and packages are subject to visual inspection.

The New York Times had earlier reported receiving a suspicious package Wednesday that it turned it over to the FBI. George Grotz, a spokesman for a federal Unabomber task force in San Francisco, said the package resembled previous communications the Times had received from the Unabomber, but didn't elaborate.

It was not immediately clear if the package and the letter were the same thing.

In Sydney, Australia, police searched a United Airlines jet that arrived from Chicago and Los Angeles this morning after a bomb scare.

DEAL: U.S., Japan reach last-minute agreement

tions came hours before Washington's deadline to impose 100 percent tariffs on 13 Japanese luxury car models, including Toyota's Lexus and Honda's Acura lines. The talks had long appeared doomed.

"We all went from pessimism to the agreement without stopping at optimism," said U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor.

Aware of the high domestic political stakes, both sides claimed victory. Clinton said the agreement would lead to a major increase in sales of U.S. automobiles and spare parts to Japanese companies.

The United States dropped its threat to impose the sanctions against $5.9 billion worth of luxury Japanese automobiles, due to take effect at midnight Wednesday.

What may have clinched the governmental accord was the United States' dropping its insistence on numerical targets to measure increasing sales. Japanese Trade Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto said the accord excluded targets. Instead, Washington accepted "voluntary" plans by top Japanese car companies to boost purchases.

"This agreement is specific. It is measurable. It will achieve real, concrete results," Clinton said in Washington. "I have insisted on it from the start."

Hashimoto said Tokyo had withdrawn its complaint against the United States before the World Trade Organization — the global trade police officer — in return for Washington dropping the sanctions threat.

"This successful agreement is a victory not just for the United States and Japan, but also for the newly created WTO and its member countries," Hashimoto said.

Some had feared unilateral U.S. action would undermine the authority of the new international body, which is meant to help settle disputes.

A trade war would have undermined global business confidence and soured political relations. There had been indications that Japan would have retaliated against American products.

The dollar surged in morning trading in New York on news of the agreement. It rose to 85.40 Japanese yen, up from 84.35 yen before the accord was reached. It rose to 1.4065 German marks, from 1.385 marks.

At the heart of the auto dispute was the U.S. trade deficit with Japan, which reached $66 billion last year, more than half in the automotive sector.

"This agreement helps to close the gap," Clinton said. "This commitment means thousands of new jobs for American workers — jobs for Americans making parts sold in Japan, jobs for Americans making parts for Japanese cars sold in the United States.

Hashimoto said benefits of the deal would be extended to other trading partners.

CLOSES: Justice Department ends investigation

based in Washington, D.C.

Justice Department spokesman John Russell confirmed that the Packwood case had been closed and said no other issues related to the senator were being probed.

"There are no outstanding remaining matters at the Department of Justice," he said.

Packwood's press secretary, Bobbi Munson, said the senator and his lawyers had received the letter from Radek, adding, "We're very pleased and beyond that we should not comment."

The Justice Department's decision does not put an end to the senator's problems, given the ongoing investigation by the Senate ethics committee.

Packwood met privately for nearly three hours Wednesday with the Senate ethics committee. It was the second consecutive day he responded to committee charges of sexual misconduct, tampering with evidence and peddling his influence in an attempt to secure jobs for his wife to reduce alimony payments.

Sen. Richard Bryan of Nevada, ranking Democrat on the committee, said Packwood would return for more questioning Thursday.

"It's going to require more time," Bryan said. "We don't know how much more, but we'll continue tomorrow (Thursday)."

The ethics panel is considering only whether Packwood broke Senate rules, but the committee can make referrals to the Justice Department requesting a criminal probe.

The Justice Department launched its probe 1 1/2 years ago. It called several lobbyists before a federal grand jury here in February to question them about job offers they made to Packwood's ex-wife, Georgie.

The Packwoods divorced in 1990.

The department subpoenaed Packwood's diaries and other evidence after the Senate ethics committee discovered a diary entry about one of the lobbyists during its inquiry into alleged sexual misconduct.

COUNTY: Commissioners sharpen pencils, attempt to balance budget

missioners' Court was a $25-a-month pay raise, or $300 per year, in 1990. Since then, however, the court has approved occasional pay increases for selected individuals who have taken on additional responsibilities and duties.

Commissioner James Brezina said that a county employee "pay raise would be warranted for those departments that consistently stay within the constraints of their budgets and save the county money."

Brezina said he is impressed with office managers, including Midland County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry, who operate efficiently on a down-sized staff even though their workload has "increased tremendously.

"They can't eat compliments," the commissioner said, "but they can use the money to buy groceries."

Mrs. Cherry "watches that (tax) dollar like it were her own money," Brezina said. "Rosenelle does an outstanding job. She's good people."

"She does a great job," said Commissioner Louisa Valencia.

"If people would be conservative with their budgets and cut their expenditures, we could give raises," Mrs. Valencia said. "Otherwise, how do we do it without raising taxes?"

The 1994 county property tax rate of 26.43 cents per $100 valuation was designed to bring in $9.85 million or about half of the county's general-fund revenue. The revenue is based on the countywide $3.728 billion tax base.

"The appraised values are up," said County Auditor Carole Wayland.

The 1995 tax rate, to be set by the Commissioners' Court this year, will be pegged to the revised $3.918 billion tax base, which is $190 million more than last year's countywide valuations.

More than 20 elected and appointed county officials formally are to submit their budget requests to the Commissioners' Court this week. Eleven officials tendered their requests on Wednesday.

In today's session in the Commissioners' Courtroom in the Midland County Courthouse, Sheriff Gary Painter at 11:15 a.m. is scheduled to present his budget proposals to the court. The sheriff's two-fold budget, jail and public-safety operations, totals about $6 million, or one-third of the general revenue.

In presenting her proposed budget to the court, Mrs. Cherry, Midland County clerk since 1951, said, "I don't have any padding in mine." The court agreed.

But Mrs. Cherry seemed frustrated by prospects of yet another year without pay raises for her employees as if they were on fixed incomes. She expressed concern over another year of declining morale.

"I never thought it could get any worse, but it does," she said following her session before the court. "I am a working clerk. And I am not a figurehead."

Midland County Attorney Mark H. Dettman, who noted that his office is functioning on four assistant attorneys instead of his allotted five lawyers, said that Mothers Against Drunk Drivers (MADD) helps with his budget by furnishing video-cassette cameras for use by law-enforcement officers in video-taping people who are arrested on suspicion of driving while intoxicated (DWI).

Video-taping alleged intoxicated drivers at the scene and at time of their arrest is more practical and beneficial to their prosecution than taping them much later at jail, he said.

"It (going to jail) gets their adrenaline going, and it has a sobering effect on them," Dettman said.

Egyptian leader boasts country could overthrow Sudan's rulers

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Hosni Mubarak, who blames Sudan for an attempt on his life, boasted Wednesday that Egypt could topple its radical Islamic regime in 10 days.

Sudan, which borders Egypt to the south, denied any involvement in the attack by gunmen on Mubarak's limousine as he arrived Monday in Ethiopia for an Organization of African Unity meeting.

Sudan accused Egypt of attacking three towns along their disputed border on Tuesday night. It said two Sudanese police officers were killed and seven were wounded.

Egypt had reported a border incident earlier, saying it was a scuffle that escalated into gunfire. It said seven Egyptian border guards were wounded.

A Sudanese Interior Ministry statement said the attacks were "provocations by the Egyptian regime against the Sudanese leadership, revolution and people" inspired by hostility toward Sudan's Islamic fundamentalist beliefs.

Well-wishers — including several hundred Sudanese exiles — gathered in Cairo for a second day of government-organized festivities celebrating Mubarak's escape from the attack.

Greeting them at the al-Ittihadiya presidential palace, the 67-year-old president said Egypt doesn't interfere in Sudan's affairs.

"But if we wanted to interfere and overthrow the government — and this is not our style — we could do that in 10 days," Mubarak warned. He didn't say whether Egypt would take action against Sudan.

Hundreds of Egyptian militants are believed to be training at camps in Sudan. Last year, 300 were arrested trying to cross into Egypt. More than 750 people have been killed in a 3-year-old campaign inside Egypt to overthrow Mubarak's government and impose Islamic rule.

Sudan's military ruler and the Islamic cleric believed to be the power behind his regime both denied any role in the attack. Mubarak accused cleric Hassan Turabi by name earlier in the week.

Mounties employ Disney as guard for their image

TORONTO (AP) — Dudley Do-Right and Donald Duck? They won't be on joint patrols quite yet, but the Royal Canadian Mounted Police has surprised Canada by hiring the Walt Disney Co. to oversee the licensing and marketing of the Mounties' image.

The news was greeted with ridicule and anger, forcing Disney and RCMP officials on the defensive Wednesday as they sought to explain a deal involving the most cherished of Canada's national symbols.

The Mounties had been looking for licensing expertise since January, when they declared they were fed up with tasteless exploitation of their image. Sample offenses: a pro wrestler dressed as a Mountie; a pseudo-Mountie in a porn movie; a Mountie on a poster hawking Canadian beer in Britain.

Even when Mountie products were tasteful, the police force was receiving no royalties from sales. So an all-volunteer Mounted Police Foundation was formed to negotiate strict licensing contracts.

After hearing proposals from Canadian and U.S. firms, the Mounties selected Disney's Canadian affiliate, Walt Disney Canada, to administer the worldwide licensing of Mountie hats, T-shirts, postcards and so forth.

The agreement does not portend any Disney films featuring Mounties, at least in the foreseeable future.

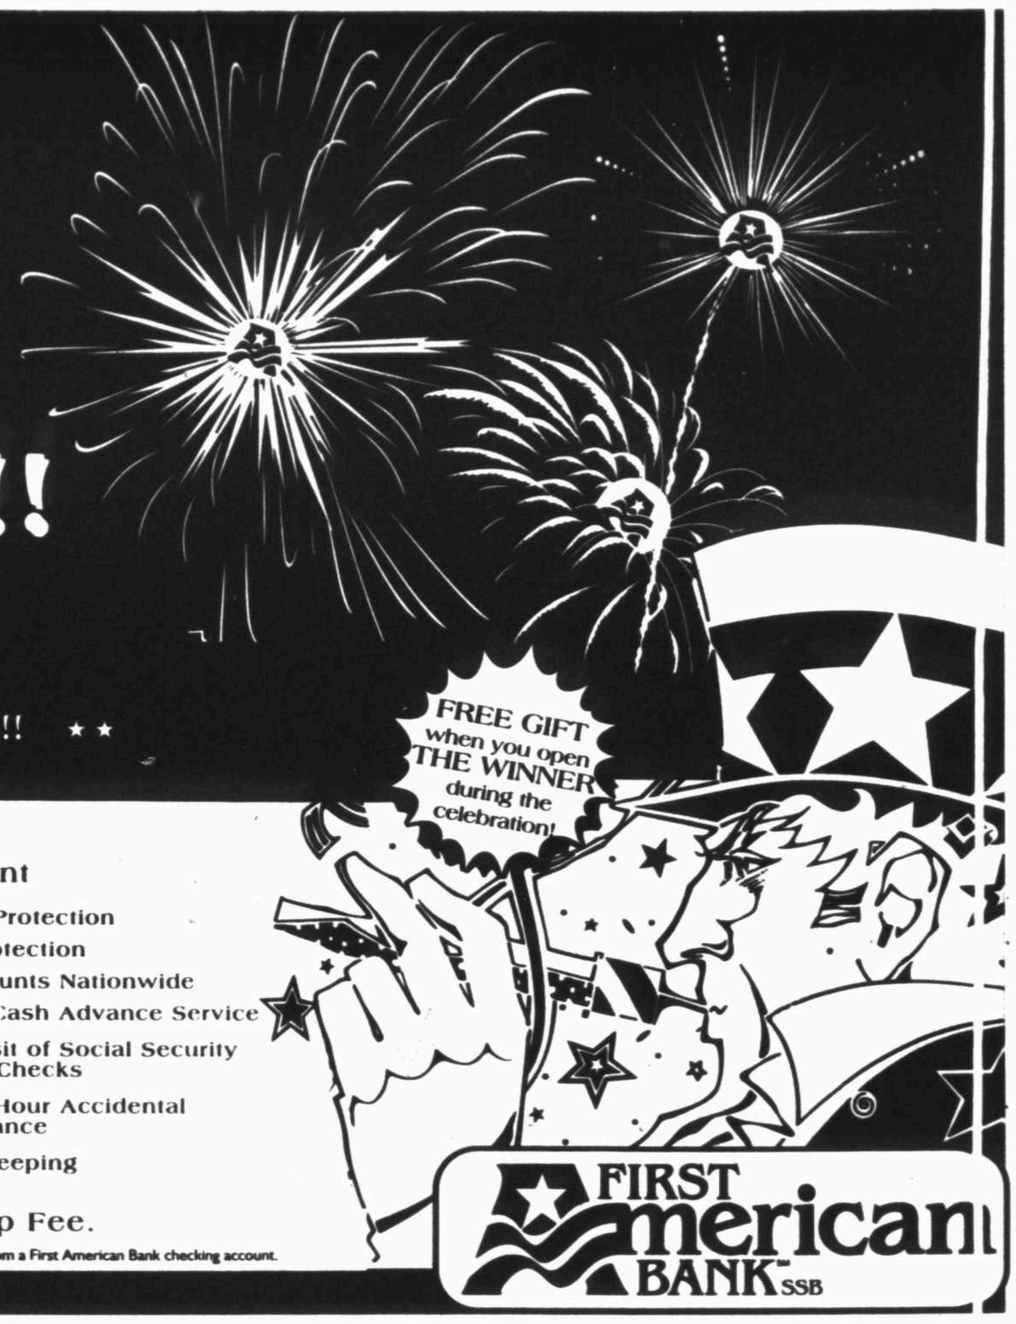

Gary Gurmukh, owner of a company that makes T-shirts with Mountie themes, was among several business executives irked by the deal. The Mounties were "a Canadian institution" and should not have chosen a U.S.-controlled company to market them, he told the Canadian Broadcasting Corp.

Anti-crime push deserves praise

The concerted effort launched by Roy Smith, pastor of True Lite Christian Fellowship Church, and others, and intended to combat drug dealing and rising crime in east and south Midland deserves the support not only of the residents of those Midland neighborhoods but of the entire city. Drug dealers and other criminals do not recognize neighborhood boundaries and their illicit activity infects the entire community.

Smith is obviously a man on a mission, saying the drug dealing and rising crime in the neighborhoods "is disgusting and I'm not going to sit idly by as my neighborhood is taken over."

What is needed, the pastor said, is a plan of action and the involvement of those in the community. He's absolutely correct. Past activity by the organization Neighbors Against Burglary and Drugs, Neighborhood Watch groups and other local organizations have graphically illustrated that when local citizens get involved in policing their own neighborhoods, the crime rate falls.

Of course, the other activities mentioned by Smith are equally important — teaching family values, giving praise to only those who deserve it and offering positive role models.

Yet all those changes begin with the involvement of people whose first tendency may be to stay at home and mind their own business. If they do, the person they're hurting most is themselves. To have an impact on the crime rate, people have to get involved and take definite steps to turn around the apathetic attitude that infects most communities.

We encourage all Midlanders to get involved in the effort to stop the rising crime rate in the community. If they don't, we will all suffer the consequences of apathy.

Court rightly rules for district, not athletes

WASHINGTON — The question before the Supreme Court was whether an appellate judge was correct when he said, "Children are compelled to attend school but nothing suggests that they lose their right to privacy in their excretory functions when they do so." By a 6-3 vote the court decided on Monday that the public school athletes voluntarily compromise that right in Vernonia, Ore.

Will

In the late 1980s Vernonia teachers and administrators became alarmed by a boastful, flaunting embrace of drugs by students who became increasingly rude, profane and disruptive. Authorities noted that athletes, who often loom large in the lives of small towns, were leaders of the drug culture. And authorities worried about drug use increasing the risk of sports injuries. In addition to psychological effects on motivation, drugs can impair judgment, slow reaction time, mask pain, interfere with the body's normal fatigue responses and increase heart rate and blood pressure.

So the school district instituted a policy of random urinalysis drug testing of all athletes. But James Acton, then a seventh-grader eager to play football, objected, arguing that the testing violates the Constitution's Fourth Amendment protection against "unreasonable searches."

So, what is "reasonable"? Vernonia's policy is, says the court. Speaking through Justice Scalia, whose opinion was joined by Justices Rehnquist, Kennedy, Thomas, Ginsburg and Breyer, the court noted that it is settled law that such testing constitutes a search. Reasonableness is judged by balancing the intrusiveness of a search against the promotion of a legitimate governmental interest, which the prevention of drug use by children surely is.

Unemancipated minors do not enjoy all the rights of adults, particularly in the context of a school acting somewhat in loco parentis, charged with inculcating civility. Students are routinely required to have vaccinations and physical examinations. And regarding noncompulsory participation in athletics, Scalia says: "School sports are not for the bashful." Athletes commonly submit to regulations and codes of conduct. So, "We find insufficient basis to contradict the judgment of Vernonia's parents, its school board, and the district court, as to what was reasonably in the interest of these children under the circumstances."

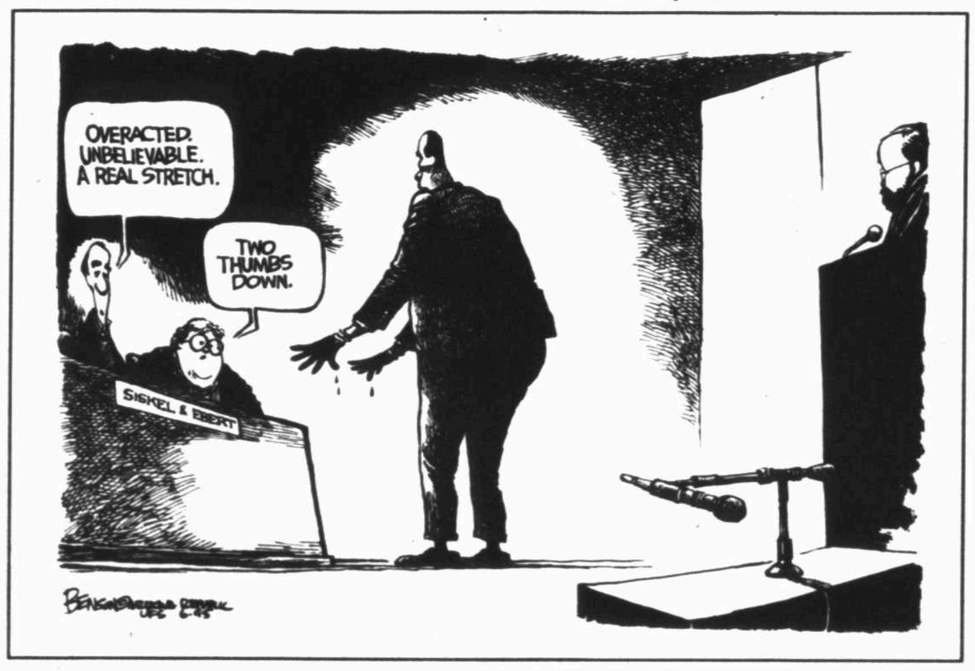

Justice O'Conner, dissenting and joined by Justices Stevens and Souter (appointees of Reagan, Ford and Bush, respectively), says the record in this case does not demonstrate that there was a drug problem at Acton's particular school. So much for trusting the judgment of the community and its institutions. O'Connor says that Fourth Amendment law generally forbids broad "searches" of whole groups (in this case, athletes). Individualized suspicion is required to justify searches.

O'Connor concedes that the record "demonstrates there was a drug-related discipline problem in Vernonia of 'epidemic proportions.'" The Oxford English Dictionary defines "epidemic" as "widely prevalent, universal." So what is wrong with a testing program that targets a category of persons — athletes — most identified with something "widely prevalent," persons who can avoid testing by avoiding non-compulsory athletic activity?

O'Connor would have the district deal with its drug problem, which she says the record showed to be "of epidemic proportions" (epidemic, but not proven to have touched Acton's school?), by focusing testing on students whose behavior is disruptive or otherwise suspicious. Time was when the discipline problems in American schools concerned running the halls and cutting classes. But Vernonia is in today's America, where rights are trumps and seventh-graders get lawyers and local authorities get no respect. Which just may have something to do with the fact that the Vernonia school district, which is not unlike thousands of others, has a handbook in which the list of disciplinary "problem areas" includes "recklessly endangering," "weapons," "extortion," "arson" and "explosive devices."

Simpson case takes gold for lack of taste

Most murder trials are not like the O.J. Simpson circus. But this TV series does suggest some disturbing legal and cultural trends, such as: ...

TV trauma: Putting humans in front of a camera changes their behavior. When celebrity lawyers and a star-struck judge know they're on television, they tend to do inappropriate things. The judge and all the lawyers spend far too much time in pompous sidebar conferences and in unneeded commentary. The lawyers, especially the defense, endlessly repeat themselves, concoct preposterous hypothetical tales to distract and confuse TV viewers and jurors and play to racial and ethnic animosities (partly to lay the groundwork for the trial after the mistrial?). They're constantly auditioning for the next lucrative trial. ...

Class, more than race, is an issue: The huge Simpson defense team, and its ability to turn the trial into a joke, is a strutting display of why so many Americans think the justice system favors the rich. At the very least, it should emphasize the need for an adequate number of highly competent public defenders for poorer defendants.

The banality of hype: There's nothing new in kind about the hype that surrounds the Simpson case, but, give it credit, it has achieved a gold medal in tastelessness.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, June 29, the 180th day of 1995. There are 185 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 29, 1767, the British Parliament approved the Townshend Revenue Acts, which imposed import duties on glass, lead, paint, paper and tea shipped to America. Colonists bitterly protested the Acts, which were repealed in 1770.

On this date:

In 1776, the Virginia state constitution was adopted, and Patrick Henry made governor.

In 1941, Polish statesman, pianist and composer Ignace Jan Paderewski died in New York at age 80.

In 1946, British authorities arrested more than 2,700 Jews in Palestine in an attempt to stamp out alleged terrorism.

In 1949, the government of South Africa enacted a ban against racially mixed marriages.

In 1954, the Atomic Energy Commission voted against reinstating Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer's access to classified information.

In 1966, the United States bombed fuel storage facilities near the North Vietnamese cities of Hanoi and Haiphong.

In 1967, Jerusalem was reunified as Israel removed barricades separating the Old City from the Israeli sector.

In 1970, the United States ended a two-month military offensive into Cambodia.

In 1972, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled the death penalty, as it was being meted out, could constitute "cruel and unusual punishment." (The ruling prompted states to revise their capital punishment laws.)

In 1992, a divided Supreme Court ruled that women have a constitutional right to abortion, but the justices also weakened the right as defined by the Roe vs. Wade decision.

Ten years ago: The release of hostages from the hijacking of TWA Flight 847 was delayed, with Shiite Muslim leaders calling for guarantees from the U.S. and Israel that there would be no retaliation.

Five years ago: Fernando Valenzuela of the Los Angeles Dodgers and Dave Stewart of the Oakland A's became the first pitchers to hurl no-hitters in both the National and American Leagues on the same day. (Oakland shut out the Blue Jays in Toronto, 5-0, while Los Angeles blanked the St. Louis Cardinals 6-0 at Dodger Stadium.)

One year ago: Japan's parliament chose Tomiichi Murayama to be the new prime minister, succeeding Tsutoma Hata. In a British TV documentary, Prince Charles said he'd been faithful in his marriage to Princess Diana "until it became irretrievably broken down."

MIKE ROYKO

Basketball player should take money and run

As if we don't have enough to worry about, now there is the question of Kevin Garnett's future.

Royko

If you are the kind of lump who doesn't keep up with hot new controversies and haven't given any thought to Kevin's future, don't fret. There is still time. By next week, grave concerns for Kevin's future will be jumping out of your TV, news magazines and the papers.

Actually, the grave concerns have already started. Some sportswriters can't resist being the first on their block to have wrinkled brows.

Yes, this involves sports. Which means we are talking about money, ethical dilemmas and social issues. Modern sports are much more than playing bouncy-ball.

This Kevin Garnett is a basketball player. He just finished high school, and the experts say he is the greatest high school player in the history of the planet, the galaxy and possibly the universe.

He is said to be so good that he will skip college and go straight into the professional NBA. Only three other high school players have done this. And one of them was already a hulking 20 years old when he got a diploma.

Kevin is only 18, although he stretches nearly 7 feet high. So there are grave concerns about someone that young entering the professional arena.

There are concerns that he is too young to be exposed to the frisky lifestyle of many older professional athletes and that he will be deprived of the enrichments of college life.

There also are concerns that at so tender an age he will spend half of each year traveling from city to city, stadium to stadium, and will be isolated from real-world experiences.

And there are concerns that the lanky waif will be manipulated and exploited by owners, coaches, agents and those who sell gym shoes. (Charles Dickens did not anticipate gym shoe makers as oppressors of the young.)

As you can see, for those who write about sports, if it's not one worrisome thing, it's another.

But it is my nature to try to look for a silver lining in every dark cloud. So let us examine these questions.

First, is 18 too young for even an exceptionally talented young fellow to embark on a money-making career?

Actually, many young men do essentially the same thing. At age 18 or thereabouts, they launch careers as plumbers, carpenters, tuck pointers, furniture movers, waiters, garbage collectors, window washers, construction workers, farmhands and countless other pursuits.

Every day, lads of 18 or 19 are taught by skilled drill sergeants in various ways how they might kill an enemy should the national need arise. That's pretty serious work, no matter how old you are.

And around Farragut High, the Chicago school attended by Kevin, some precocious teens have already launched careers as drug dealers and shooters, which is a cloud lacking even a speck of silver.

So it really isn't all that unusual for a person of 18 to start working for a living. And if Kevin were only 5 feet 8 inches, pudgy and going to work on a newspaper delivery truck, I doubt if many sports journalists would fret about his future.

Then there is the question of Kevin skipping college entirely.

It would be nice if Kevin and every 18-year-old could go to college. If nothing else, it keeps them off the streets.

But it appears that after 12 years of schooling, Kevin doesn't have a scholarly nature. His grades and tests wouldn't get him into anything but a junior college.

So imagine that you are the parents and your son comes to you and says:

"Folks, I just got the word. Despite my academic shortcomings, I can enroll at Dullsville Junior College."

"Well, son, that ain't Harvard or Yale, but it's a start."

"Right. Or I've been offered a job that I can take right away and skip college."

"That's a serious step, son."

"Right. But the job will pay at least $1 million a year and maybe $2 million. And if I work hard, my pay will go up."

"On second thought, son, we can hire some private tutors."

I've never understood why someone has to attend college if they plan on making a career out of bouncing a ball and dropping it through a hoop. Especially with the colleges selfishly keeping all the money from TV and ticket sales for themselves.

If college were essential to develop basketball skills, then the starting center for the Bulls would be a 5-6 math whiz named Ling Wang.

So Kevin and his mom, both of whom lived until recently in a poor Southern town where the view of real life is far clearer than in a stadium press box, should take the money and run to the bank.

I'm trying to imagine what the reaction might have been if someone had offered a million or two to the 18-year-old guys I grew up with.

The only questions would have been: "Who do I got to kill and should it be slow or fast?"

ART BUCHWALD

Courtroom could use some pointers from sports

Whenever I have nothing to do I think of ways to improve the legal system in this country. This does not mean that it needs much improving, but a teenie-weenie bit wouldn't hurt.

Buchwald

If I have learned one thing from the O.J. Simpson trial, it is that as soon as they get in the courtroom lawyers never seem to be able to find the piece of paper they are looking for. I have come to the conclusion that the length of a trial could be cut in half if basketball rules were applied to the legal profession. In pro basketball a team has to shoot in 24 seconds or lose possession of the ball to the opposing side. This has speeded up the game and prevented the players from "freezing the ball" when they are ahead.

If applied to legal proceedings, lawyers on both sides would have only 24 seconds to locate a document.

If they couldn't do it, they would be penalized and the judge would hold them in contempt of court.

By imposing this kind of regulation lawyers would no longer be able to pretend that they don't know where a piece of paper is, nor could they claim that they have no idea what they're looking for.

One of the strategies frequently used by lawyers is to bring out a 500-page loose-leaf notebook and start fumbling through it as if they have just seen it for the first time. While all eyes are on them, they suddenly find what they want and slam-dunk it in the witness' face.

If the 24-second rule is adopted, attorneys will either have to shoot or dribble, which is all most of them do anyway.

Another idea I had for the improvement of the profession comes from ice hockey. If a lawyer is guilty of calling the other lawyer some terrible name, the offending counsel would be sent to the penalty box and forced to sit out the questioning of the next two witnesses, thus putting his side in a scoreless situation.

Sports are far better policed than the legal profession, and the players take the rules very seriously since they will be booted out if they don't obey the regulations. This is not true of the legal profession, which, thanks to the Simpson case, is now considered a contact sport — anything goes as long as the judge is not looking.

I have one more suggestion to solve the gridlock in our courts. The debate rages over the welfare system.

The solution is for welfare recipients to serve jury duty in order to qualify for benefits.

Those with more than 12 children will be sequestered during the length of the trial, and welfare jurors will be permitted to negotiate their own book contracts with publishers.

Unlike the Simpson trial, people on welfare will have to stay to the very end, even if Judge Ito doesn't like the way they look at other jurors.

These are only a few humble solutions on how to improve our judicial system. They would make for a smoother, fairer legal system and give the CNN fans at home something to root for.

Art Buchwald's column is distributed by the Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

Ito delays FBI witness' testimony

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson's judge, seething at a prosecutor for springing surprise evidence, abruptly recessed the murder trial Wednesday and threatened sanctions on the prosecution for withholding pictures allegedly linking Simpson's clothes to fibers found at the crime scene.

Deputy District Attorney Marcia Clark denied she had purposely hidden the pictures, insisting that prosecutors disclosed reports on the fiber evidence and that the pictures were merely "illustrative."

"Your honor, the notes were turned over to the defense. The photos are not evidence," Clark told Superior Court Judge Lance Ito.

"If the photos are not the evidence, you don't need them," the judge snapped during arguments outside the presence of the jury.

"There's an old Chinese saying that a picture is worth a thousand words," he added. "To argue it's not evidence is a specious argument."

Ito said he was "troubled" by Clark's effort to show the photos to the jury without first giving defense attorneys time to investigate them. Clark insisted she hadn't seen the picture display prepared by an FBI expert until last week.

But her witness, FBI Special Agent Douglas Deedrick, told Ito the pictures were taken in late 1994 and were given to the prosecution in April.

The pictures show tiny strands of bluish-black fiber on several items of key evidence: a pair of bloody socks, a bloody glove and the shirt of victim Ronald Goldman. One piece of fiber is entwined with a hair from victim Nicole Brown Simpson.

Ito noted that another display prepared for jurors includes a picture of Simpson, taken hours before the killings, wearing dark clothing.

"Given the type of clothing that Mr. Simpson was wearing, you're going to argue ... that this is fiber from the clothing of the assailant?" Ito asked.

"Yes, your honor, I am," Clark said.

Police have never found the killer's clothing.

Ito recessed the trial about 40 minutes earlier than scheduled to give defense lawyers time to analyze the pictures.

"If that is still not adequate time ... I will consider other sanctions, as I would like to finish this case sometime this lifetime," the judge said testily.

Defense attorney F. Lee Bailey demanded that neither Clark nor the witness be allowed to say they have "matched" hair or fibers to Simpson since that is scientifically impossible.

"The use of 'match' or any similar word is deadly," Bailey said. "It would be grounds for a mistrial."

Earlier, the prosecution delayed revealing its final witnesses because of "very late-breaking" developments" in the case.

Deputy District Attorney William Hodgman, who has been working behind the scenes, appeared in court and told Ito, "There are certain things going on. These are very late-breaking, and the investigative efforts will determine —"

At that point, Ito interrupted and summoned lawyers to his bench for a private conference. After much animated whispering, Hodgman left the courtroom.

Deputy District Attorney Christopher Darden tried to cool immediate speculation about a bombshell ending to the prosecution case.

Fishermen claim Commerce Department intervention aided Tyson Foods

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two separate and deliberate interventions by the Commerce Department saved Tyson Foods thousands of dollars in fishing permit fees and carved out a huge share of the lucrative Pacific whiting catch for the Arkansas firm so closely linked to President Clinton.

Small-scale commercial fishermen claim Tyson leaned on Commerce Secretary Ron Brown to overrule his department's own fisheries council in 1993 and 1994, decisions that have meant millions of dollars in advantages for Tyson and four other giant trawler operations.

A special prosecutor is monitoring the case but has not begun a formal investigation, The Associated Press has learned.

"We think it's smelly," said Zeke Grader, executive director of the Pacific Coast Federation of Fishermen's Associations. "We saw what happened — Brown stepped in and overruled the council."

A member of that council concurred, if less bluntly.

■ More national news/6B

"Many people will point out that one of the big trawler companies is Arctic Alaska, and that is owned by Tyson Foods, and that was the point of entry into the Commerce Department," Pete Leipzig said.

Leipzig is one of 13 members of the Pacific Fisheries Management Council, industry and local government representatives appointed by the Commerce Secretary to advise on fishery decisions.

Tyson, the nation's largest poultry processor, has been closely linked to Clinton for years. Don Tyson, a personal friend of the president, was a major financial contributor through Clinton's years as Arkansas governor and his White House campaign.

A special prosecutor looking into Tyson's relationship with the Clinton administration "is aware" of the fishing dispute but hasn't subpoenaed evidence, a federal source told the AP on condition of anonymity.

According to the source, prosecutor Donald Smaltz is interested in what transpired at a University of Arkansas basketball game on Feb. 1, 1994, when Deputy Secretary of Commerce David Barram met with Tyson officials in the company box.

Smaltz declined comment.

Barram "remembers maybe meeting some people in the box but not having any discussions regarding fisheries," said Brown's spokeswoman, Carol Hamilton.

Tyson spokesman Archie Shaffer said Barram "stuck his head in the Tyson box to look at the decor and say hello," but insisted there was no talk of Pacific whiting or any other Tyson business activity.

"We had no contact with Commerce about that issue whatsoever," Shaffer said.

Brown's office declined to respond to other written questions the AP telefaxed June 14 regarding Tyson and the Pacific whiting fishery. The White House press office has not responded to questions submitted Monday.

Although Tyson is nationally known for its chicken products, in 1992 it also became the second-largest American company fishing for Pacific whiting, used for frozen fillets and crab substitute. That's when it bought Arctic Alaska and its two giant trawlers, since renamed Tyson Seafood Group.

Counties lift ban; no fireworks in city

■ Fire officials hope residents won't be confused by retailers' ads such as "fireworks are legal. The ban is lifted."

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

While last year's ban on fireworks in Midland and Ector counties has not been reinstated this year, those wishing to celebrate July 4 as the founding fathers envisioned — with fireworks — are being warned.

No fireworks are allowed in the city under any circumstances, warns Midland Fire Marshall Jerry Petree.

Even if the fireworks are intended for use in a legal area on another day, they cannot be brought into the city limits — or even within 5,000 feet of the city limits.

The city ordinance against fireworks is almost laughably repetitive to ensure no misunderstanding.

City Code Section 7-3-2, Chapter Three reads:

"It shall be unlawful for any person to have, keep, store, use, manufacture, assemble, sell, handle, transport, receive, offer for sale, or have in his/her possession with the intent to sell, use, discharge, cause to be discharged, ignite, detonate, fire or otherwise put into action any fireworks of any description."

Petree hopes that Midlanders will not be confused by recent fireworks retailers' advertisements. Although ads such as "fireworks are legal. The ban is lifted" can be found around the Permian Basin — no fireworks are legal in or near the city limits, he emphasized.

"We're afraid people might think that the ordinance doesn't exist any more," Petree said.

For those who choose to violate this ordinance, officers with the Midland Police Department and the Fire Marshal's office will be on patrol this weekend and until the Fourth of July, he said.

While the fine for the misdemeanor offense is up to the discretion of the municipal judge, the fines are usually $500 and can be as much as $2,000.

If children are found with fireworks, the parents will eventually be stuck with the fine, he said. "We want people to know that we're very serious about bringing (fireworks) into town."

But those fireworks aficionados expecting to slip out into the county to shoot fireworks should be aware that Midland County officials have made arrangements for 12 extra deputies and constables on patrol, said Midland County Fire Marshall Dale Little.

These officers, along with the usual compliment of manpower in the county, will be patrolling four days up to and including the Fourth.

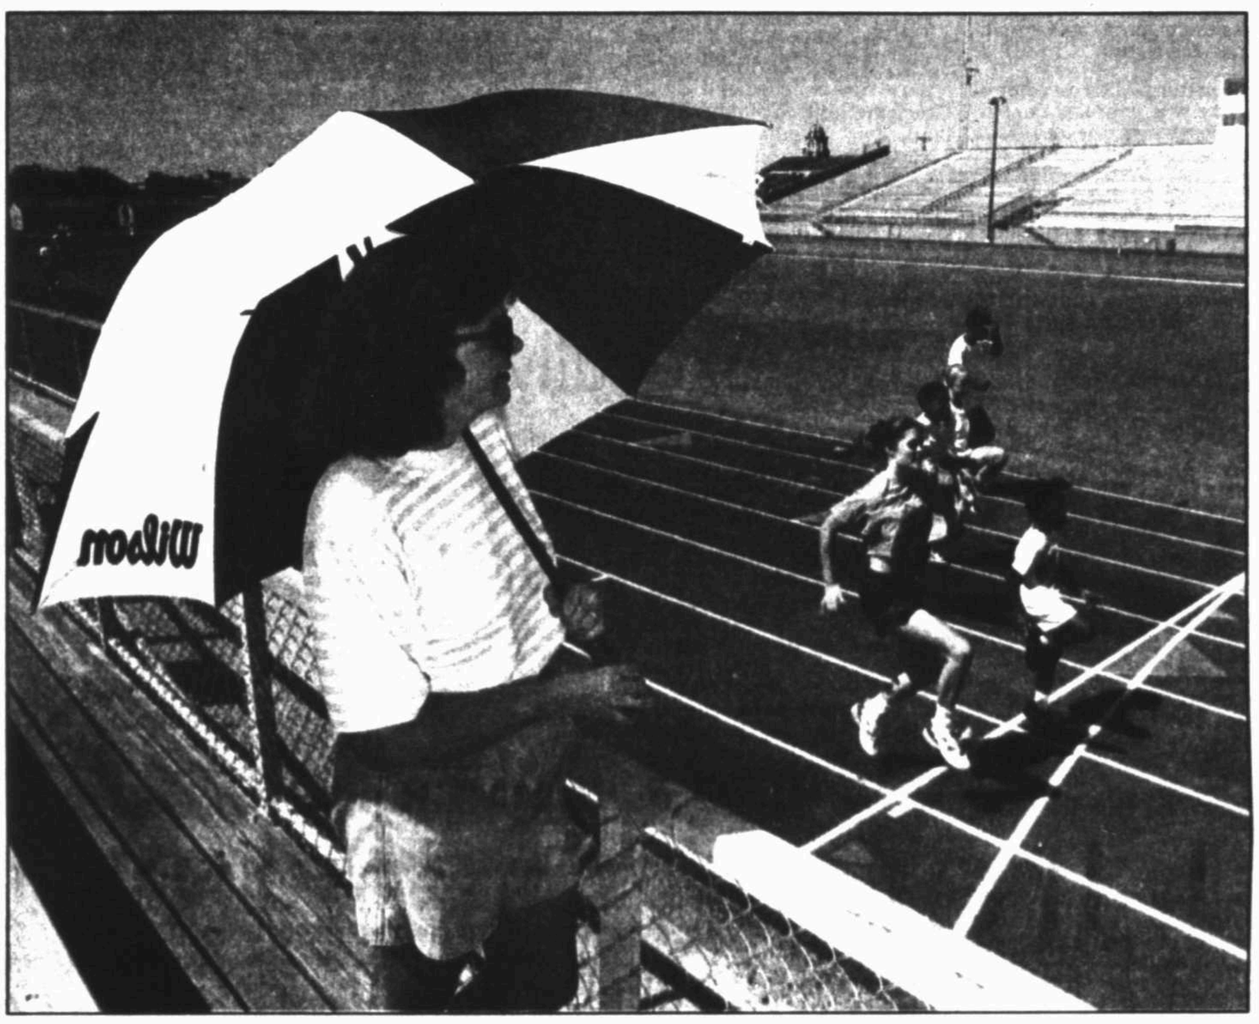

While setting fireworks in the county is in itself legal, these deputies will be writing fines for littering, setting fires and for public intoxication if alcohol is being consumed in quantity, Little said.

The only place to escape legal consequences is on private land with the permission of the landowners.

Those with no access to private county land should plan to avoid private fireworks in favor of a public display.

While no July 4 display is scheduled in Midland, the Midland Angels will have their largest displays of the year following the games Saturday and Sunday.

Panel of judges to rule on court's constitutionality

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

A summary judgment hearing on the constitutionality of the 385th District Court of Midland is set to be heard by a three-judge panel on Wednesday, according to Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman.

A hearing on whether or not the 385th District Court in Midland will become effective and ready to hear cases was originally set for April 28 by the three U.S. District Judge panel in Washington, D.C., but was postponed and rescheduled for July 1 originally, Dettman said.

The court, which was created by the state legislature in its last session to help ease an overburdened court docket in Midland County, was not cleared for operation by the U.S. Department of Justice.

The Justice Department has ruled the at-large system of electing judges in Texas is unconstitutional despite a Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals ruling upholding the election system.

The Justice Department wants to see judges elected through precincts allowing minorities more voice in electing their judges.

The state filed a lawsuit in U.S. District Court against the Justice Department for holding up the court. The state had asked for a summary judgment in favor of the state.

Dettman said the court can make a ruling without a trial through a summary judgment.

"In that kind of hearing, the court doesn't have to consider evidence or testimony, but can refer to law and precedence such as the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals decision a few years ago in which it ruled in favor of the state," Dettman said.

Dettman said he believes the Justice Department wants to "relitigate" previous court cases to mandate the way the state elects judges.

However, the county attorney said case precedence is on the state's side making the end results look favorable.

Two previous panels of three U.S. district judges had heard similar cases from New York and Georgia, and in both cases found in favor of the state.

"The panel said it felt bound by the New York and Georgia cases, which were exactly like ours and they were both pre-cleared in addition to precedence set by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in the Lulac vs. Clements case in which it ruled the at-large system doesn't discriminate," Dettman said.

The summary judgment hearing has been slated for Tuesday. Dettman indicated the Justice Department has completed their

MCT executive director deems AACTFest '95 success

By Georgia Temple
Staff Writer

The final curtain has fallen on the American Association of Community Theatres Festival '95, leaving Midland Community Theatre staff and volunteers tired but satisfied.

"I was immensely pleased with the entire AACTFest '95, and justifiably proud of our staff and our volunteers, who did an outstanding job making the festival work — whether it was transportation, registration, hospitality, technical, etc.," said Don Bachmann, MCT executive director. "Everybody did their job and did their job remarkably well."

After opening last Wednesday evening, the intense festival, with its 340 registrants and 240 volunteers, began Thursday through Saturday with 8 a.m. to noon workshops. Hour cuttings — if the play went over 60 minutes it would be disqualified — were presented Thursday and Friday afternoon and evening, concluding around midnight both days.

Then, after seeing the final two shows Saturday afternoon, the adjudicators retired to make their decision while festival registrants and volunteers prepared for the awards banquet Saturday night.

"There's a lot of things we tried in Midland that were new, and I think that a lot of them worked out very well," Bachmann said. "We tried a new workshop format. We tried a new awards ceremony. Rather than piecemeal pricing for registration, we rolled things into one package deal. Almost to a man, the people here felt they got their money's worth, and it was really beneficial for them to do the full registration.

"We also solved transportation problems, and this was done through chairman Earl and Kathy Keller and Linda Brown with the Chamber of Commerce Visitors and Convention Bureau. We had a great transportation schedule."

Bachmann deemed MCT's long range planning a success, and said, "I think the Midland festival in '95 was probably the best national festival that's ever been done by AACT. This really should be the case.

"The same way it should be the case that in 1997 when the nationals (every other year) are held in Grand Rapids, Mich., that that one will be the best national festival ever held. We profit by our success and our failures; we evolve and as a consequence, we get better."

Midland Community Theatre's budget for hosting the nationals, which have never been held in Texas, was around $65,000, Bachmann said. "The income should be right around $68,000. I don't have the final numbers. That's off the top of my head."

When MCT, now celebrating its 50th season, decided to make a bid to host the national festival, Bachmann said he promised the board of governors, "We wouldn't run in the red. And it looks like we will come up a few thousand (dollars) to the good."

Soda war: MISD favors coke

Pepsi or Coca-Cola?
Dr Pepper or Mr. Pibb?

A school district vending machine bid practically ended in Coca-Cola and Pepsi representatives debating which of their products was more popular with students during Tuesday night's board meeting.

MISD administrators recommended awarding the three-year contract to Southwest Coca-Cola to service drink and snack vending machines in secondary schools. Coca-Cola offered slightly higher commissions (50 percent commission on their drink products versus 49.858 percent from Tri-City Beverage; and 20 percent on candy commissions vs. Tri-City's offer of 17.32 percent).

While vending machine commissions may appear to be inconsequential in the grand scheme of education, it was noted that last year's commissions amounted to more than $200,000 being

ODESSA — Some area students will have scholarships this fall, thanks to a permanent endowment fund established Wednesday by Southwest Coca-Cola.

Joe Loya, regional manager of Coca-Cola, presented a check for $50,000 to University of Texas of the Permian Basin officials Wednesday. The check established the Southwest Coca-Cola Endowment Fund, which was enhanced with an additional contribution of $25,000 from Houston Endowment Inc.

Houston Endowment had pledged to match one dollar for every two raised by UTPB from June 30, 1994, through Friday.

"We will never spend the principal, but rather will spend the earnings of the endowment fund," said UTPB President Charles Sorber. "We are delighted that Coca-Cola could play a part in meeting the challenge grant. UTPB students have financial needs in excess of $5 million this year, and those needs are usually met in loans. So, we appreciate every dollar in scholarships."

Currently, more than 60 percent of UTPB students receive financial assistance to fund their education. Sorber said the endowment fund will allow some students to attend the university without increasing their debt burden through student loans.

Rick Renshaw, UTPB director of financial aid, said the $75,000 endowment would provide "in the neighborhood of $6,000 to fund about six to fifteen scholarships" in the 1995-96 school channeled into secondary campus activity funds.

SODA: MISD recommends Coca-Cola

Activity fund money must be spent for student benefit, according to Ricardo Torres, MISD executive director of secondary operations. He said the money can be spent on anything from staff development for teachers, computers and software to photographing top students for publication. Revenues from vending machines in teacher lounges are separated and put into accounts for teacher use. Over the years, vending machine commissions have grown to become an important source of revenue for schools.

"When we took over the vending machines several years ago, the district had brought in $140,000 in commissions. We raised that to more than $200,000," said Joe Loya, regional manager of Southwest Coca-Cola.

Jim Mudd, of Abilene-based Tri-City Beverages, said the bidding process was unfair since Coca-Cola had been allowed to negotiate lower commissions (in the past) then stated on the contract to bring in products not manufactured by the company, "yet we must provide different brands at the principals' requests," Mudd said to trustees Tuesday night.

"We can only promise these commissions on products we manufacture," Loya said.

Leon Hartter, MISD director of purchasing who oversaw the bidding process, said the beverage companies were asked to pledge commissions on their products only.

Some trustees said, in the past, when the school district dealt with many vendors for the machines at once, it created an organizational nightmare, and commissions were lower.

Trustees, somewhat blindsided by the sudden debate, voted in favor of Coca-Cola 5-1-0, with trustee Michael Dobey opposed to the motion and Dianne Anderson abstaining.

Loya said Coca-Cola chose to set up the endowment because "UTPB gives our students an opportunity to earn a quality education," and the beverage company was seeking a way to "give back to the community."

"The scholarship will be open to all area students," said Mike Barker, UTPB Director of Institutional Advancement. "There will be some criteria to award the scholarships to our deserving students," he said.

Mike Flores, Southwest Coca-Cola vice president, said "We believe that the students in the Permian Basin deserve the best education possible. Our endowment is one more way to make sure that more students have that opportunity."

Renshaw said criteria for the scholarships is in the planning stages.

Sorber congratulated Coca-Cola on becoming a "corporate partner forever" with the permanent endowment fund.

HEARING: Panel to rule on constitutionality

pretrial investigations.

"I anticipate this being the end of it with a favorable result for Midland County and the other counties involved – that is my expectation," Dettman said.

He said the panel could make a ruling soon after the hearing or years later.

He said all the effected counties in the lawsuit - Fort Bend, Harris, Tarrant and Midland counties - are involved in sharing expenses for retaining the Bickerstaff firm from Austin to assist the state in the lawsuit. This law firm specializes in this type of litigation, Dettman said.

"We need to get that court filled because the docket is getting more and more bogged down," Dettman said.

A new courtroom has already been constructed on the fourth floor of the courthouse.

Midland attorney Willie DuBose was elected to the office in the Nov. 8 election, but cannot assume the judgeship until the State of Texas vs. the United States lawsuit has been resolved and the new court approved.

BAN: Officials give fireworks warning

(From 1B)

Those wishing for fireworks on the evening of the holiday might consider an outing to Big Spring — with city officials planning a 25-30-minute professional display.

The Big Spring display should begin about 9:15 p.m., shortly after dark, said Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce Director Linda Walker.

The fireworks will be fired from atop the Big Spring State Park at Scenic Mountain and can be viewed from on top or around the base of the mountain along FM 700, she said.

Those wishing to park at the top should arrive early, since the road up will be closed an hour before the show begins, she said.

END: Executive director calls festival success

(From 1B)

Haven during AACTFest '95, exemplifies the attitude displayed by those whose productions made it to the national finals — 'If you don't like the heights, don't climb the mountain."

Without fail, adjudicators David Young, Ron Cameron and Kent R. Brown saluted the 10 community theater companies for the risks inherent in the hour-cuttings they had selected to perform for their state and then regional competitions.

Young, in his comments following the Chino Community Children's Theatre production of "A Few Good Men," told director Lisa Qualls-Cherry, "You've asked them to do the impossible, and they've done it pretty well .. It was a brave and perhaps crazy choice, but that's what theater's all about."

Earlier in the evening, Young had told the Oak Ridge Community Theatre cast of the musical drama "Falsettoland," which won first place, "Difficult show to do because it was a pace setter. Although it's brilliant in spots, it has a lot of Puccini in it. Bravo for your town."

Brown told the Kalamazoo Civic Players who presented "Dancing at Lughnasa," which received third, that they had selected a play where things "can go wrong massively. Every mistake can be made." Of this cast he said, "Excellent work."

To Jill Bess, author and star of "The Mommy Dance" from Out North, Anchorage, Alaska, which finished second, Cameron said in opening his eomments, "One person shows are particularly terrifying. There's no one on the stage to help you at all. Talk about vulnerability. It's a study in terror. I expected to see a sonic boom and did." He closed by saying, "I will wait until nearly one o'clock any time, anywhere, you will give me a performance like this."

To the Harvard Community Theatre cast and crew of "A...My Name Is Alice," Young commented that the play is "99 percent the woman's point of view. This is the first time I've seen it directed by a man."

Between performances, festival registrants spoke of the opportunity to see diverse work.

"We get to see a lot more variety and racier things than we do in Racine," said Elisa Weeks from Racine Theatre Guild, Wisconsin.

Although the nationals are over, the impact of AACTFest '95 continues as the companies who presented their works here receive invitations to international festivals.

Those international invitations include, to date:

n "Falsettoland," by the Oak Ridge Community Playhouse, Oak Ridge, Tenn., which placed first, will be presented in September of 1996 at Aeruba, in the Caribbean;

n "The Love Course" by the Lakeshore Players, White Bear Lake, Minn., will be presented in September of 1996 in Toyama City, Japan;

n "The Problem" by the Burlington County Footlighters, Cinnaminson, N.J., will be presented in May of 1996 in Nova Scotia; n "Falsettoland" by the Lewiston Civic Theatre, Lewiston, Idaho, will be presented in June of 1997 in St. John, Newfoundland;

n "Dancing at Lughnasa" by the Kalamazoo Civic Players, Kalamazoo, Mich., which placed third at nationals, will be going to Monaco for the international festival there in August of 1997;

n "Strange Snow" by the Muskogee Little Theatre, Muskogee, Okla., will be going to Dundalk, Ireland for the international festival there in May of 1996.

On site for the nationals, was Stephen Burns, mayor of Dundalk and president of the international festival there.

"Having seen all of the plays, I had to eliminate some for a number of reasons," Burns said of his decision to invite "Strange Snow," the regional winner of this region, Region VI.

"Some were too short as our festival requires a play of an hour and a half to two hours. Of those that were suitable, I had no hesitation in choosing 'Strange Snow.' I thought it was extremely well written and magnificently acted.

"People kept saying to me — 'Will a play about Vietnam go in Ireland?' I think this play is about a lot more than Vietnam. It's about a human situation for a woman, and it combines the two ingredients which I think are most important in theater — laughter and tears."

Not all of the shows usually receive an invitation to an international festival. "The Mommy Dance" was offered a bid, Bachmann said. "I don't think they are going to be able to go."

International festivals provide the opportunity for U.S. community theaters to engage in, Bachmann said, "An exchange of culture, which brings people closer together. People come together to share their art, their culture with other people. This is how you break down barriers — through the sharing process."

History-making apolomado falcon chick learns to hunt

HARLINGEN (AP) — Defying nature's odds, a history-making aplomado falcon has fledged and is learning to hunt.

"It's basically flying with its parents. They are out there making lots of kills," Steve Thompson of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said Wednesday.

The 2 1/2-month-old bird is the first known aplomado falcon to be hatched in the U.S. wild in 43 years. The bird's parents were reintroduced to South Texas in a captive-breeding program run by the Peregrine Fund of Boise, Idaho.

The falcon hatched in May from a nest atop a 65-foot utility pole on a remote tract of Port of Brownville property.

The bird, Thompson's not sure whether it is male or female, made its first flight Friday from the pole to the grasslands below.

"It will start taking off on its own," said Thompson, manager at Laguna Atascosa National Wildlife Refuge. "The more experience it gets, the better it will get. At first it's really clumsy and awkward."

Survival of aplomado falcon chicks in the wild is generally 50 percent. Thompson said the chances should have been even worse for the first chick in the U.S. wild in more than four decades.

But he said the parents have aggressively defended the nest from predators, and now they are showing their chick how to chase and kill gulls, ravens, blackbirds, nighthawks and other species.

The dark-winged, white-brested aplomado falcon once soared in abundance in Texas and New Mexico.

Biologists blamed their near extinction in the United States on shrinking habitat and pesticides, which contaminated the food chain.

The Peregrine Fund retrieved hatchlings from a remnant population in Mexico and has bred the birds in captivity in Boise.

The group has released 67 aplomado chicks at the 40,000-acre Laguna Atascosa Refuge since 1993. Volunteers feed and protect the chicks until they are ready to fly and hunt on their own.

Atlantis-Mir docking: Pilot prepares for difficult task

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — He's flown combat missions in Southeast Asia, tested experimental aircraft, raced stunt planes and piloted space shuttles five times, more than anyone else.

But the real challenge comes today, when Robert "Hoot" Gibson docks the 100-ton Atlantis with Russia's sprawling space station Mir.

Gibson considers it the ultimate flying experience. Truth be told, though, he didn't want it. At the time, he was chief astronaut, with responsibility for helping select crews for shuttle flights.

"I was very happy being chief of the astronaut office," he said in an interview before the flight. "I fought it for a while and finally gave in."

Now, of course, he wouldn't trade this for anything.

Such large objects have never docked before in orbit, and it will be up to Gibson to make sure everything goes well.

Atlantis closed in on Mir on Wednesday as NASA astronaut Norman Thagard and his two Russian comrades did some last-minute tidying up aboard the cluttered station. Two Russian cosmonauts aboard Atlantis will replace the three men on Mir, who will come home next week on the shuttle.

Gibson, 48, a Navy captain, spent the past year practicing for today's rendezvous and docking, the first linkup of U.S. and Russian spacecraft since the Apollo-Soyuz mission in 1975.

Before Atlantis blasted off Tuesday, Gibson and his U.S.-Russian crew of seven had logged 500 hours in shuttle simulators at Johnson Space Center.

The docking is considered one of the most complicated space tasks ever.

Gibson must bring the docking ring on Atlantis to within 3 inches and 2 degrees of the proper angle to catch the matching ring on Mir. He will have to do this within two minutes of the appointed time while closing in at a gentle one-tenth of a foot per second. All this happens as the two spacecraft zoom around Earth at 17,500 mph.

One false move and Atlantis could crash into the 123-ton Mir. A breach in the pressurized hulls of the spacecraft could be catastrophic for the crew members. The Russians are also squeamish about damage to Mir's fragile solar panels, which generate electricity for the equipment aboard; as a result, all shuttle jet firings will be directed away from the station.

"It's not an easy thing to do, but it's very repeatable and it's the kind of thing you can train to do," Gibson said. "It's kind of along the lines of some of the stuff I used to do, air-to-air refueling and any of those precision tasks."

'It's not an easy thing to do, but it's very repeatable and it's the kind of thing you can train to do. It's kind of along the lines of some of the stuff I used to do, air-to-air refueling and any of those precision tasks.'

— Robert Gibson
space pilot

Seven such dockings are planned over the next two years.

Unlike many astronauts, Gibson didn't grow up wanting to fly in space. He wanted to fly, period. His parents were pilots.

"I watched all the space missions eagerly ... but I wasn't interested in doing that myself because those weren't airplanes. Those were capsules and those were spacecraft, and my whole life has been devoted to airplanes," said Gibson, who was born in Cooperstown, N.Y., and grew up on Long Island.

In the early 1970s, he flew combat missions during the Vietnam War.

NASA chose Gibson as an astronaut in 1978. Also in that first shuttle astronaut class was Jerry M. Rhea Seddon, whom Gibson eventually married. They have two sons, ages 12 and 6, and a daughter, born June 9. Seddon has flown three shuttle missions.

Gibson wasn't always at the top of his class.

NASA grounded him in 1990 after his stunt plane collided with another craft at a Texas air show and the other pilot was killed. NASA bars flight-crew members from high-risk pursuits in their free time. Gibson humbly accepted the punishment and was back in orbit two years later.

His most interesting shuttle flight, until now, was a 1988 military mission in which he had to rendezvous twice with another spacecraft. He can't say much more about it. Top secret.

"When I look at the space shuttle or I look at F-14s," he said, "when I look at racing planes — and sometimes I try to forget about things I've done in racing planes — but when I look at the things that I've been able to do in my flying career so far, this is going to be the biggest."

Transportación es proveida en autobus con un horario regular en cuyas rutas transporta a pupilos en niveles intermedios (grados 4, 5, y 6) dentro de los grupos de primaria. Pupilos en los grados 1,2,y3 pueden ser transferidos a otra escuela en el grupo de primaria cuando la raza o los antecedentes étnicos son la mayoría escolar de area residencial. También, la raza o los antecedentes étnicos deben estar en la minoría de la escuela que lo recibe. Summer Breeze

Ceiling fans reassert themselves as 'cool' additions to almost any decor

AP Laserphoto
Snoopy fan from Hunter Fan Co. of Memphis, Tenn., has three blades and a 48-inch diameter. The Snoopy applique mounts to the ceiling.

By Barbara Mayer
Associated Press

As summer gets set to simmer, the pleasures of ceiling fans reassert themselves. These oldies but goodies have been rediscovered by a generation raised on air conditioning.

Promoted as energy savers — the breezes they create make people feel cooler at higher temperatures — the popularity of ceiling fans also is related to their ability to stir up a breeze of fashion excitement.

What's new is the explosion of styles now available. Hunter Fan Co. of Memphis, Tenn., for example, markets about 350 models. Ten years ago, the company made only 44 ceiling fans. Other manufacturers also offer a wide assortment.

"We discovered that consumers would buy more ceiling fans if they fit into their decor," says Steve Martin, marketing manager of Hunter. "They want quiet fans in the bedroom, good light in the kitchen and elegance in the dining room."

Since all fans include the same parts — a motor and blades suspended on an armature from the ceiling — the variations in looks are achieved with decorative trim, color changes for motor housing and blades, and the design of the lighting fixture that is a feature of many ceiling fans. Blades may be wood or aluminum and motors chrome- or brass-plated.

The variations extend from a reproduction of a ceiling fan offered in the 1880s to a novelty fan that resembles a World War I airplane, as flown by the cartoon character, Snoopy. A model geared for kitchen installation comes with a 150-watt halogen bulb, while a fan for a dining room resembles a chandelier with blown-glass light bulbs and a brass motor housing. Controls also vary. Top of the line models come with remote controls that can be used to turn fans on and off and to change speed.

The many variations show that ceiling fans have come a long way since 1886 when John Hunter and his son, James, began marketing a water-driven model invented by the elder Hunter in Fulton, N. Y.

A few years later, an engineer named Samuel Tuerk employed an electric motor to drive a ceiling fan. This triggered the beginning of commercial production, and ceiling fans became one of the earliest successful electrical appliances. Their first use was mainly in industrial and commercial settings, such as factories, hotels and restaurants. By the 1940s, however, the ceiling fan became a popular home appliance and remained so until home air conditioners displaced them in the 1950s and 1960s. The energy crisis of the 1970s resurrected fans, according to Martin.

These days, a ceiling fan is as much a decorative accessory as a functional appliance. A fan can set a mood, especially in rooms decorated in tropical or Caribbean, Victorian and early 20th-century bungalow style.

Holly K'Lynn, a designer in Ridgefield, Conn., recently placed ceiling fans in both the dining room and a loft apartment in a house that she is redoing in Norwalk, Conn. For the Victorian-style dining room, K'Lynn placed a fan with walnut blades, a black engine housing and a Victorian-style globe light over the table in place of a chandelier. She outfitted the contemporary loft with a white fan with light oak blades. Silhouetted against the slanted white ceiling, the blades catch the light and add interest to an otherwise bland expanse.

When she wants a fan to blend into a modern setting, K'Lynn usually chooses an unobtrusive, streamlined fan with three blades and a very small mechanical center mount. She selects a bright-colored fan or one with an unusual light fixture or motor housing when she wants to call attention to it. To integrate a fan into its setting she chooses one that has a color or wood finish similar to something else in the room.

The decorator often accentuates the effect by adding other suitable accessories. In a room with a tropical theme, for example, she might also use tall potted plants, wicker and filigree iron furniture or accessories. For a child's room, she would consider one of the theme fans, such as one with arms shaped like baseball bats and a globe light in the form of a baseball suspended from a catcher's mitt.

Is there any type of setting in which a ceiling fan would be out of character?

"If you have very low ceilings or are going to have a museum-quality room that reflects an authentic period, you might not want a ceiling fan," says K'Lynn. "Otherwise, most standard fans are appropriate for most decors."

Prices of fans range from about $50 on sale up to $500, reflecting the great variety of available features. Look for the best selection in large home-improvement centers and discount chains.

Herter Brothers designed furniture for mansions

By Barbara Mayer
Associated Press

Herter Brothers, a New York furniture and interior design firm, reigned supreme in the second half of the 19th century.

Much of the furniture was made for mansions built with the wealth amassed by the captains of banking and industry such as Jay Gould, J. Pierpont Morgan and William H. Vanderbilt.

But times and tastes change. In 1870, Gustave Herter retired to his native Germany. His brother, Christian, died in 1883. And by 1906 the company that bore their name was out of business.

Then, in the 1940s and 1950s, as mansions turned into white elephants and were destroyed, their elaborate, large-scale furnishings were dispersed. Many wound up on Hollywood movie back lots as props in scores of movies, including "The Unsinkable Molly Brown," the 1964 musical set in 1880s Denver.

Fast-forward to 1995. Herter Brothers' work is enjoying a revival. Some 50 spectacular pieces are on view at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York through July 30. Earlier exhibitions were at the Museum of Fine Arts, Houston, and the High Museum in Atlanta.

Some of the most remarkable Herter pieces would overwhelm ordinary spaces. There is, for example, a 14-foot-high mirror console in rosewood with marquetry and gilding that introduces the exhibition. It took 19 workers 2½ days to unpack and assemble the mirror that originally graced the music room of Thurlow Lodge. The mansion in Menlo Park, Calif., was built in the 1870s for Milton S. Latham, an investor and politician.

A scholarly catalog, profusely illustrated, "Herter Brothers: Furniture and Interiors for a Gilded Age" (Abrams, $60 hardcover, $45 paper), has been published in conjunction with the exhibition, but it's best to see the pieces firsthand.

Photographs don't do justice to the the rich materials, intricate design and fine workmanship. Whether it is carving, marquetry, inlay or upholstery, each piece is a revelation of a flamboyant, yet controlled, exuberance that could well be in a class of its own.

Herter furniture meets and often surpasses the best made in Europe; yet, it is uniquely American, according to Alice Cooney Frelinghuysen and Catherine Hoover Voorsanger. The two women, curators at the Metropolitan, are also curators of the exhibition with Katherine S. Howe of Houston's Museum of Fine Arts.

William H. Vanderbilt's New York City mansion, on Fifth Avenue near where Rockefeller Center now stands, is regarded as Christian Herter's crowning achievement. It was begun in 1879 and took three years to build, with up to 700 men working 18 months to complete the elaborate woodworking and installation of the decor and furnishings.

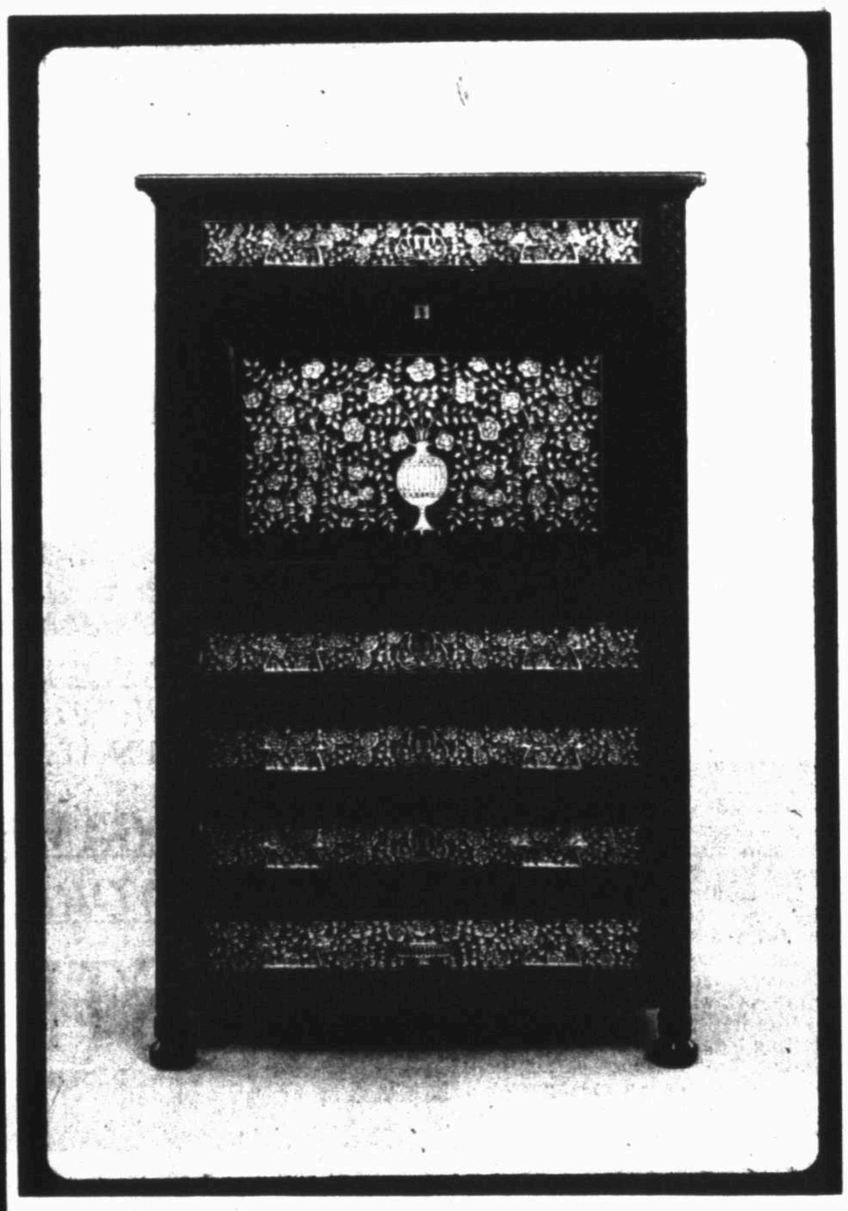

Eight pieces of furniture from the Vanderbilt mansion are in the exhibition. They include a library table described in the catalog as "immovable as granite and heavy as bronze" and a drawing room side chair of gilded maple and mother of pearl.

Even with a top-drawer clientele and distinctive style, a piece of Herter Brothers furniture, previously unknown, occasionally turns up. A velvet portiere, a heavy curtain usually hung in a doorway, which is in the exhibition was bought several years ago at a flea market by a New York textile collector. An elaborate dining room piece, recently discovered, is to be auctioned in California.

During its golden age from about 1858 to 1883, Herter Brothers made a lot of furniture, including pieces of normal scale, Frelinghuysen says. An authenticated grand piece such as the Thurlow Lodge mirror would probably fetch six figures today, and a standard-size chair might go for several thousand dollars, the curators say.

A number of cabinetmaking firms worked in similar styles, and it may take an expert to make a secure attribution. So be warned, Voorsanger says, "There are a lot of would-bes and wannabes."

This ebonized desk (above) with marquetry was made by Herter Brothers for Jay Gould, a New York financier and rail baron, in 1882. It is currently owned by the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. This console with mirror (left) was created by Herter Brothers in 1872 for the music room of Thurlow Lodge in Menlo Park, Calif., owned by Milton S. Latham, an investor and politician. The piece is currently the property of the Los Angeles County Museum of Art. Both Herter Brothers pieces of furniture are a part of an exhibition now on display at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. The show concludes July 30.

DEAR ABBY

Couple must tell adult son it's time to leave the den

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My wife has a 30-year-old son from a former marriage. I'll call him "Jerry." For the last three years, we have been raising Jerry's 10-year-old daughter with little or no help from him.

Van Buren

Jerry is now in the process of divorce, and he's moved into our den. He is bright, intelligent and artistically gifted, but he suffers from low self-esteem and sees no reason to look for a full-time job. When he does work, it's a part-time job and he's paid under the table. Our garage is so full of his personal belongings, we can't park our car inside.

Jerry has been jailed twice, and I have reason to believe he is using drugs. I empathize with my wife when she says she feels a strong obligation to help her son. She says she loves him, and he's welcome to stay as long as he wants.

I say Jerry is old enough to get out and fend for himself. He will never learn responsibility and self-reliance if he doesn't have to.

I am more than willing to continue taking care of his daughter, since my wife and I are in a better position to provide a safe and caring environment for her.

What do you think? We will abide by your decision. —FRUSTRATED IN SANTA BARBARA

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Give this talented, bright artist one month to get a job and remove his belongings from your garage, or prepare to support him for the rest of his life.

You do him no favor by crippling him with kindness. Trust me.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, who is a college sophomore, has introduced her father and me to a very nice young man who just graduated from college. "Dave" has spent quite a bit of time with us, and we expect to see him often in the future.

The problem is he hardly ever removes his baseball cap. I was raised to believe that a gentleman always removes his hat inside the house. I am a schoolteacher, and still insist that boys take off their caps in the classroom.

I have not said anything to Dave because I don't want to make a big deal out of it, but it grates on my nerves. As a compromise, I will tolerate the cap being worn in the house, but not at the dinner table.

Abby, how should I handle this sticky situation? I realize that males are wearing baseball caps all over the place these days, but I find it tacky — especially at the dinner table.

Should I say something to this young man? — AN OHIO MOM

DEAR MOM: Say nothing to the young man; he's not one of your students. And if he graduated from college, it's safe to assume he has plenty besides hair under that baseball cap. However, if you prefer he not wear it at the table, mention it to your daughter.

DEAR ABBY: I'm the kind of wife who tells her husband everything. And he's the kind of son who tells his mother everything. And she's the kind of person who tells her neighbors everything. Now, everybody in Pine Bluff, Ark., knows my business.

Abby, how do you get a man to keep his mouth shut? Or should I tell his mother to keep hers shut? — TALKED ABOUT

DEAR TALKED ABOUT: Since you know that everything that goes into your husband's and mother-in-law's ears goes out their mouths, if you keep yours shut, you won't have to worry.

Good advice for everyone — teens to seniors — is in "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It." Backyard barbecue is battle of speed, fire

By Erma Bombeck

If there's anything more American than a cookout, I don't know what it is.

To most families, it brings together the clan in a ceremony second only to the lighting of the torch at the Olympics. Sacrificial hot dogs are carried from the kitchen while the pit of charcoal lights up the sky. Plates that do not have to be washed are thrown around like Frisbees. If something drops on the ground, the dog eats it. All the rules of eating indoors are broken.

Bombeck

We have the grillmeister. Forget the fact that most people look upon a cookout as a leisurely event. Not us. My husband considers the barbecue grill to be one of the most sophisticated weapons being produced today. "If we had 200 of those suckers, we could go into Bosnia and turn things around," he says. He believes that.

At the unveiling of the kettle, he reveals her parts with all the showmanship of a stripper. First, the plastic garbage bag is peeled from the dome and folded nearby. Next, the grill is released from a brown paper bag. Finally comes the counting of the briquettes as if they are nuggets of gold. Not too many; not too few.

We all go to our appointed rounds while he lights the briquettes. Two stand by with fire extinguishers, one stands by the phone ready to dial 911, and the rest hover behind something solid.

While the coals are heating up, there is his lecture on carcinogens and the risks we are all taking by pursuing this venture.

This is followed by the battle over whether the food cooks better with the lid on or off, which is followed by the confrontation on how many times you can turn something.

For a man who plans his headaches, his announcement that the meat is done stuns everyone. The buns are still in the package, the potato salad in the refrigerator, and we still need four chairs.

Within minutes, the meal is consumed. We know it is at an end when my husband jumps up from the table and puts the entire process on rewind. There is no small talk or social amenities. It's clean-up time! The grill is snatched and taken to the sink, where it is soaked. The kettle top is scrubbed and the ashes disposed of. Within the hour, the whole thing looks like something that just came off Sears' showroom floor.

"I think we can all breathe easier now," he says.

Which is what he says every Christmas when he takes down the tree two hours after he put it up.

Homeowners 'deck' the house

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Why do homeowners build decks onto their houses?

A national survey of contractors and remodelers who worked on five decks or more in the past year, provides some answers.

Most people wanted them for relaxation (36 percent) and entertaining (33 percent) or to add living space (31 percent) and value to the home.

The survey, conducted by Thompson's Water Seal Products, indicated 31 percent liked being outside and 20 percent felt decks expanded their living area.

Asked about repairing decks, 36 percent of the contractors surveyed said such decks averaged 6-10 years old, while 27 percent named decks 11-20 years old. Principal reasons for repairing decks included rotted wood (59 percent) and cracked or split wood (40 percent).

Asked if most decks are adequately protected from rain, sun and mold, contractors replied: rarely (58 percent), sometimes (23 percent), usually (12 percent), and often (7 percent).

Power tools are no longer just a 'guy' thing

By Paul Grondahl
N.Y. Times News Service

ALBANY, N.Y. — You could call it a division of power at the Zemgulis household in Glenville, N.Y. There are Steve's power tools. He works in construction. His tools are fancy, expensive and heavy. Their duty is restricted to the job site. There are Faye's tools. She's a do-it-herselfer and homemaker. She has her own hand tools and some power tools, not commercial grade, but adequate for household jobs.

"We're a real power tool family," says Faye Zemgulis, who bought her daughter her own tool box to prevent tool squabbles. "When my husband has been working construction all day and there's a project to do at home, he's happy to have me do it."

Power tools, one of the last bastions of strictly guy things, are gradually losing some of their longtime reputation as men-only equipment.

Perhaps it was inevitable, what with men infiltrating the kitchen in growing numbers, that women would begin to hunker down at the basement workbench.

Nearly 40 percent of the power tools bought in this country's $2.8 billion power tool industry are purchased by women (many as gifts for men), according to Edward Abrahams, an international trade specialist at the U.S. Commerce Department and author of "A Competitive Assessment of the U.S. Power Tool Industry," a 114-page booklet published by the department in 1992.

"More and more women are assuming the responsibility as the head of household and they're buying power tools for themselves," Abrahams says. "The power tool marketers are coming to realize they have to market power tools to people of both genders."

In the sales circulars, men still rule. There's no end to the guy gadgetry advertised. One of this year's hottest sellers is the Black & Decker Snakelight, a cordless, pythonesque affair that promises to illuminate those hard-to-reach places. Ads picture men with the things draped around their necks like some kind of do-it-yourself reptile.

The cordless revolution continues apace, too. Cordless drills and screwdrivers are being joined by cordless saws, cordless glue guns, cordless hedge trimmers, even cordless lawn mowers.

"Cordless power tools just keep getting bigger and bigger," says Joseph Truini, senior editor for Home Mechanix, a home improvement magazine.

"It's kind of an obsessive pastime for a lot of people," says Larry Okrend, senior editor at Workbench, a home improvement magazine.

Truini of Home Mechanix says: "I have more tools than I know what to do with."

Truini says at the risk of sounding sexist, he disputes the notion that women are buying more power tools. "It's still a guy thing. How many women do you know who have gone out to buy a router just to start routing things?" Truini asks.

Power tools are in a time of upheaval. Not only may power tools becoming more gender-neutral, but they're hardly recognizable as symbols of American-made nationalistic pride anymore. For instance, Makita, a huge Japanese power tool manufacturer, now makes a lot of its tools in the United States. And some of the U.S. maker Black & Decker's power tools are constructed in foreign countries. "It takes a lot of looking at the fine print to see where the tool is actually made nowadays," says Abrahams of the Commerce Department.

Despite the changing power tool scene, some sexism remains.

"I don't let my wife buy me power tools anymore," says Jerry Bolduc, of East Greenbush, N.Y., who owns B&G Contractors and has worked commercial construction for more than two decades. He was buying two cordless power tool holsters the other day. A regular construction cowboy.

Bolduc has laid down a power tool manifesto: "I tell my wife to buy me a tie or something for Father's Day, but let me buy the tools. I'm very particular about my tools."

House approves amendment to ban U.S. flag desecration

WASHINGTON (NYT) — In fevered tones, the House of Representatives on Wednesday asserted its devotion to Old Glory and voted for a constitutional amendment to allow Congress and the states to make it a crime to desecrate the American flag.

"If you need to burn something, burn your congressman in effigy," Rep. Lindsey Graham, R-S.C., exhorted on the House floor with the passion that typified this culturally divisive debate. "But don't burn the flag."

The vote in support was 312-120, with 93 Democrats joining 219 Republicans to surpass the two-thirds majority, or 280 votes, needed to amend the Constitution. Twelve Republicans joined 107 Democrats and one independent in opposition.

The overwhelming support indicates that of all the Republican attempts to amend the Constitution this session, this may be the one that succeeds, altering the Constitution for the 28th time since the founding of the republic. The Constitution was last amended in 1992 to prevent Congress from granting itself an immediate pay raise.

The measure now goes to the Senate, where it has strong support and is likely to be voted on next month. If it wins a two-thirds majority there, it must then be ratified by three-fourths, or 38, of the states. No presidential action is needed.

Fairly rapid approval by the states seems all but certain, since the veterans groups choreographed resolutions from 49 state legislatures — all but Vermont — asking Congress to pass the wording that the House approved Wednesday: "The Congress and the States shall have the power to prohibit the physical desecration of the flag of the United States."

"This amendment restores the flag to its rightful position of honor," declared Rep. Gerald B.H. Solomon, R-N.Y. He oversaw passage of the measure, which was orchestrated by veterans groups after the Supreme Court ruled in 1989 that burning the flag was protected as a form of free speech.

"Real down-to-earth people say this amendment would not violate their right to free speech," Solomon added. "They don't believe flag-burning is free speech."

But opponents argued that destruction of the flag was exactly the kind of unpopular speech that the First Amendment was designed to protect, and that the overblown rhetoric on the other side was an empty form of patriotism that forced a reverence for symbols while undercutting fundamental rights.

"It is easy to confuse the symbol of something with what it symbolizes," said Rep. Wayne T. Gilchrest of Maryland, one of the dozen Republicans to oppose the measure. The amendment, he said, "would allow governments to coerce respect" for something that is "the symbol of freedom from government coercion."

Hubbell becomes first casualty of Whitewater, gets 21 months

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Webster Hubbell, a confidant of President Clinton and the former No. 3 official at the Justice Department, got 21 months in prison Wednesday for bilking clients at the law firm where he and Hillary Rodham Clinton were partners.

Hubbell becomes the first former government official sentenced to prison in the 18-month-long Whitewater investigation.

U.S. District Judge George Howard Jr. rejected the former associate attorney general's claim that his charitible acts made him eligible for a reduced sentence. Hubbell had asked for less than 16 months; federal guidelines called for 21 to 27.

"For unto whomsoever much is given ... of him shall be much required, and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more," the judge said, quoting from the Gospel of Luke.

Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr spoke glowingly of Hubbell's contributions to his community and country but said nothing of the defendant's cooperation with the Whitewater investigation. Prosecutors also didn't mention that many of Hubbell's charitable acts were paid for with money he stole.

Howard ordered Hubbell to repay $135,000 of the $482,410 he stole and spend three years on probation after his release from prison. After his release, Hubbell must lecture inmates on the value of family and education.

Hubbell, a golfing buddy of Clinton's, must report to prison by Aug. 7. He asked to go to a Pennsylvania federal prison that has TVs, pool tables, softball and a horticulture program. The prison is close to Washington, where his family lives. The judge said he would leave the decision to prison officials.

Neither Hubbell nor attorney John Nields would comment after the hearing.

Starr said Hubbell's sentencing was a "sobering and humbling part of the judicial process."

White House spokesman Mike McCurry said, "The president and the first lady look forward to the day when Mr. Hubbell can rejoin his family and his community."

Hubbell, a former Little Rock mayor and Arkansas chief justice who was appointed by Clinton to the bench, pleaded guilty in December to fraud for stealing from the Rose Law Firm and former clients from 1989 to 1993, the year he joined the Clinton administration. He also admitted evading $143,747 in federal income taxes and agreed to cooperate with Starr.

Clinton ups ante in budget battle, raises issue of his possible veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton warned Republicans Wednesday to compromise with him on balancing the budget or risk an autumn veto battle, raising the pressure on GOP lawmakers about to push their outline for tax and spending cuts through Congress.

In identical letters to Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., and House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., Clinton complained that the Republican blueprint for balancing the budget by 2002 cuts too deeply into Medicare, Medicaid, education and training while cutting taxes "for too many who don't need it."

"Though I am determined to work with you to balance the budget, I cannot accept legislation that will threaten the living standards of American families," Clinton wrote.

"I hope we can work together and avoid a situation in which I would have no choice but to use my veto authority broadly," the letters said. "The American people want us to work together to balance the budget and to do it the right way. I am ready to do that."

Wednesday's letters put him closer than ever to threatening a veto confrontation over the bills cutting spending and taxes that Congress will send him later this year. The budget itself, which the House and Senate plan to approve on today, does not require the president's signature.

Lingering suspicions: Man awaits arrest 19 years after friend's death

By Michael A. Giarrusso
Associated Press

WAVERLY, Pa. — Dr. Steven Scher's best friend was killed 19 years ago in what Scher claimed was a skeet-shooting accident: the victim supposedly shot himself in the chest while chasing after a porcupine.

Martin Dillon's death was ruled accidental, but suspicion of Scher grew when he married Dillon's widow two years later. And this spring, the victim's bitter father forced authorities to reopen the case, who changed the cause of death to homicide.

Scher, 56, who says he has been hounded by the suspicion for years, is waiting for police to charge him.

"I want to come forward, present myself to the state police and turn myself in and say, 'Arrest me and let's get on with this trial so I can forget about the last 19 years,'" he said Wednesday in this Scranton suburb.

Scher left Susquehanna County in 1976 but returned to northeast Pennsylvania this week after coroner Robert Bartron changed Dillon's cause of death from accidental shooting to homicide.

"I did nothing to deserve this," Scher said. "I've been unfairly persecuted for the past 19 years. It's destroying my life."

A year before the shooting, Scher's wife at the time accused him of having an affair with Patricia Dillon, and he reacted by filing for divorce. He and Patricia Dillon, now his wife, say they did not become romantically involved until a year after Dillon's death.

Scher said that on June 2, 1976, he and Dillon, then 30, were shooting skeet targets. Dillon was chasing a porcupine out of Scher's sight when he heard a gun go off, Scher said. He said he found Dillon bleeding from the chest.

Dillon's body was exhumed in April because of a civil lawsuit filed by his father, Larry Dillon. A new autopsy was performed, and Bartron said it uncovered evidence of a homicide, although he wouldn't elaborate.

Dr. Stephen Scher, left, talks to the media with his lawyer Peter T. O'Malley, center, as Patricia Dillon Scher, the doctor's wife and widow of Martin Dillon, looks on in Waverly, Pa., Tuesday.

According to Scher's attorney, Peter T. O'Malley, State Police Lt. Francis Hacken asked his client to come in for questioning.

"If they want to question him, they can come and arrest him," O'Malley said. "But they know they have no case."

"Three administrations of district attorneys have refused to prosecute this case," O'Malley said. "Larry Dillon tried to have a special prosecutor appointed because the current D.A. wouldn't investigate."

District Attorney Jeff Snyder did not return phone calls seeking comment.

State police also have refused to comment on the case, saying they are still investigating. Larry Dillon refused to comment as well.

Scher and O'Malley, however, have orchestrated a media campaign.

Scher said he wants to go to trial to end the distrust that forced him to leave Pennsylvania.

"People don't look you in the eye and call you a murderer, but they talk behind your back, and your children hear it," he said.

Patricia Scher said the real victims are her and Dillon's two adult children, who have heard their grandparents call their stepfather a murderer.

"My children have been irreparably damaged. It's been cruel and malicious and vicious and hateful," she said. "To think for even a second that something would happen where (Scher) would destroy a life — it's incomprehensible."

Mantle released

DALLAS — Baseball great Mickey Mantle was discharged from the hospital Wednesday after showing significant improvement from liver transplant surgery nearly three weeks ago, his doctor said.

"He was doing very, very well," Dr. Robert Goldstein said. "We had a long talk (Wednesday morning) and decided to release him. He was very anxious to get out of the hospital."

Mantle

"Because of his notoriety, he's been rather isolated," the transplant surgeon said. "He's ready to spread his wings."

Mantle, 63, left Baylor University Medical Center about 1:30 p.m. The Hall of Famer has been recovering satisfactorily from a June 8 liver transplant at the Dallas hospital, doctors say. He had been hospitalized since May 28.

"It was time for him to leave, and he was ready to leave," said hospital spokeswoman Lisa Wren.

Mantle had demanded that hospital staff withhold advance knowledge of his release, which was announced about 2 p.m., Ms. Wren said.

Goldstein said Mantle has been spending 15 to 20 minutes a day on an exercise bicycle and managed to walk out of the hospital Wednesday.

"He says he can't wait to get out and start walking. I'd expect he's out doing that now," Goldstein said less than three hours after Mantle's release.

Ranger recall

ARLINGTON — The Texas Rangers recalled pitchers Jose Alberro and Christ Nichting from Class AAA Oklahoma City on Wednesday.

The two right-handers were summoned after the Rangers placed left-handed starter Darren Oliver and right-handed closer Jeff Russell were placed on the disabled list.

Alberro, who turns 26 on Thursday, was 1-0 with a 3.42 earned-run average in two starts and seven relief appearances since the Rangers optioned him to the 89ers of the American Association on May 25. With the Rangers, he was 0-0 with a 9.00 ERA in seven appearances.

Astros get catcher

CHICAGO — The Houston Astros, looking to add power behind the plate, acquired catcher Rick Wilkins from the Chicago Cubs in a trade Wednesday for outfielder Luis Gonzalez and catcher Scott Servais.

Wilkins, who hit 30 home runs in 1993, was struggling this season. He is batting .191 with six homers and 14 RBIs for the Cubs.

"I was shocked. It's not something that you think about," Wilkins said.

Under-21 set dominates '95 NBA draft list

By Wendy E. Lane
AP Basketball Writer

TORONTO — The NBA draft belonged to the young, even more than usual.

The first five selections Wednesday night were players younger than 21, including four who left school after their sophomore years and one straight out of high school.

The Golden State Warriors made Joe Smith, a 6-foot-10 forward from Maryland with silky inside moves, the first pick. The Los Angeles Clippers followed with another forward, Antonio McDyess, a player largely unnoticed during his two years at Alabama until his strong postseason.

With NBA commissioner David Stern announcing the selections for the first NBA draft held outside the United States, Philadelphia used the fourth choice to take North Carolina's Jerry Stackhouse, a forward expected to play shooting guard for the 76ers.

Minnesota went fifth, producing the biggest question mark of the draft, Chicago high schooler Kevin Garnett. The rail-thin 6-10 forward is only the fourth high school player ever selected in the NBA draft.

McDyess, Stackhouse and Wallace are 20, and Smith will be 20 next month. Garnett is only 19.

Not until the expansion Vancouver Grizzlies took Bryant Reeves, the best true center of the draft, at No. 6 was a four-year player selected.

The NBA's other new franchise, the Toronto Raptors, made Arizona point guard Damon Stoudamire a surprise seventh choice. The Raptors already had a point guard, former Chicago Bull B.J. Armstrong, from the expansion draft,

Angels clip Wranglers

■ Midland breaks a 0-0 tie with three runs in the eighth inning to top Wichita 3-1.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

For 7 1/2 giddy innings, the 3,592 baseball fans at Christensen Stadium Wednesday night must have felt like they had showed up at the wrong Texas League address.

It was over that span that Wichita and Midland were tied zip-to-zip, leaving football crazy West Texans trying to figure out a way to win on penetrations.

But then there was one George Arias to step to the plate in the eighth inning with one out and Jose Carvajal at second base and Tim Harkrider at first.

Arias then showed why he is the Texas League leader in RBIs, crashing a two-run double off Wichita reliever Don Strange (0-1) to raise his league leading run producing total to a hefty 66 for the season, leading Midland to a 3-1 victory.

"We weren't doing a good job at the plate, but we hung in there," Arias said after the heroics. "I didn't feel any pressure in that situation because I felt like the pressure was on the pitcher (Strange). He gave me a ball I could drive. I'm a better hitter with runners on base because I'm looking for a pitch. What I need right now is to be more disciplined when runners aren't on base."

Catcher Todd Greene followed with another double to plate Arias to account for all three Midland runs. Wichita scored an unearned run off David Holdridge, who recorded his first Angel save, in the ninth.

Up until the Arias blast down the left field line, pitching and fielding was the game, a rare treat at Christensen Stadium, where runs grow like a jungle crop.

Midland's Darrel Akerfelds, a former major leaguer who was making his first start for the Angels and who had only found out that he would start Wednesday's game late Tuesday night, pitched shutout ball for six innings, allowing only two hits and facing only 20 Wranglers.

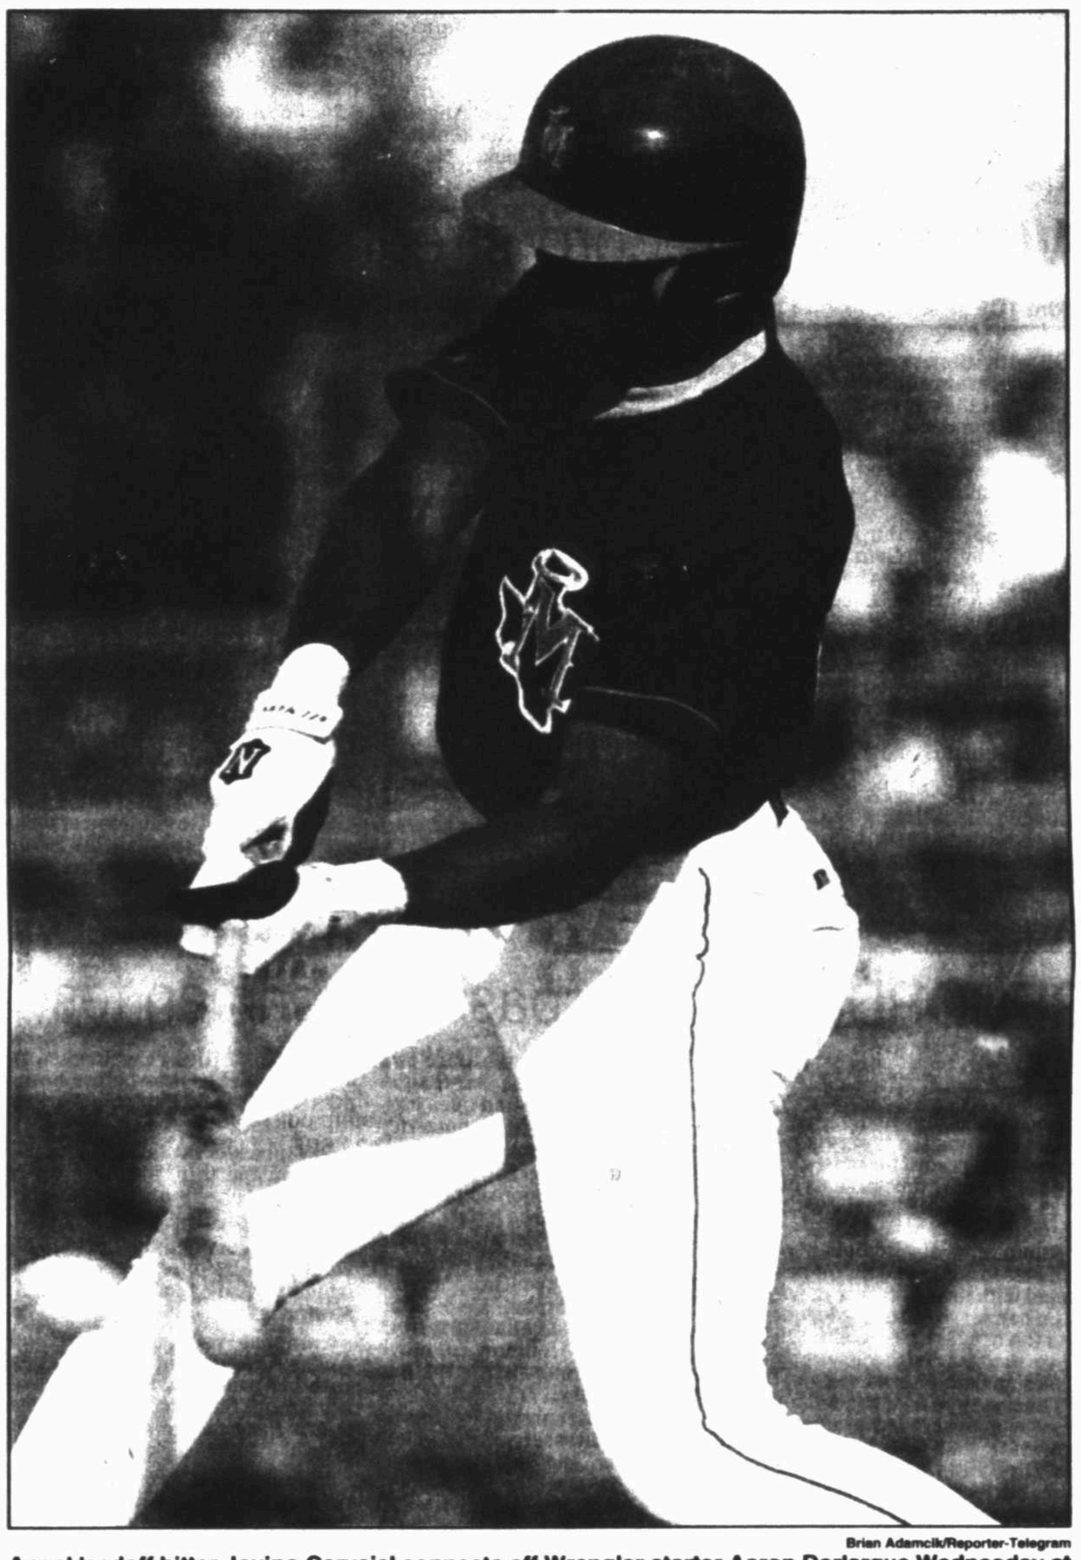

"I really wasn't disappointed about coming out of the game even though there was no score," Akerfelds said. "I was pretty much spent and was pushing balls the last two innings.

"Being a starter is a lot different that being a reliever. As a reliever, you are conditioned to pitch 30 pitches two or three times a week where you need to go about 120 pitches as a starter. I've done it all in my career (which includes big league stints with Oakland, Cleveland, Texas and Philadelphia over five years). It really doesn't matter if I'm a starter or reliever, but the two are very different.

"Still, I was very pleased with the six innings. I had some great plays behind me from Munie (second baseman Orlando Munoz) and George (Arias). They both started great double plays and I didn't have to make many pitches over the six innings."

Arias had a part in eight outs, fielding third base like the Angels always thought he would.

Cowboys' tackle blocks indictment

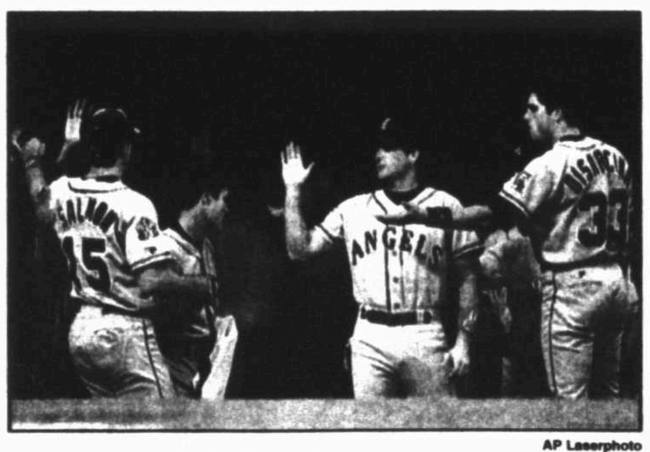

By Terry Wallace

McKINNEY — Erik Williams emerged from a two-month legal shadow Wednesday when a grand jury declined to indict the Dallas Cowboys offensive tackle on sexual assault allegations.

The suburban Collin County grand jury found insufficient evidence to indict the former All-Pro and a friend in the alleged sexual assault of a 17-year-old girl at Williams' home.

WIMBLEDON, England — Mary Pierce's first Wimbledon didn't last long, while Chanda Rubin's match lasted a record 58 games.

The fifth-seeded Pierce was beaten in the second round today by Nathalie Tauziat of France 6-4, 3-6, 6-1.

The 20th-ranked Tauziat, coming off a victory in last week's Wimbledon warmup at Eastbourne, outplayed Pierce from the baseline in the decisive third set.

It was the first match on Centre Court for Pierce, who was born in Canada, lives in Florida and plays for France. It was also the first meeting between the Fed Cup teammates.

Tauziat was supplanted as France's No. 1 player when Pierce opted to play for France. While the two are considered uneasy rivals, Tauziat said she wasn't trying to settle any scores.

■ Wimbledon

"I just wanted to win," she said. "I wasn't playing Mary to say I can be No. 1. It's important for me to beat Mary, that's it. She's a star everywhere in the world. To beat her gives you a lot of confidence. That was important for me."

While Tauziat and Pierce battled on Centre Court, Rubin and Canada's Patricia Hy-Boulais were involved in a record marathon match on Court 16 — with the American winning 6-7 (7-4), 7-6 (7-5), 17-15.

The 58 games broke the record for the most games in a women's Grand Slam singles match. The previous record was 56 games, set in 1972 when Kerry Mellville beat Pam Teegarden, 9-7, 4-6, 16-14, in the but general manager Isiah Thomas said Armstrong would be traded.

The selection of Stoudamire drew a mixed reaction from the crowd of 21,268 fans in the SkyDome.

Smith became the third sophomore selected No. 1 overall, following Magic Johnson in 1979 and Chris Webber in 1993. Smith also was the first No. 1 pick from Maryland since John Lucas, selected by Houston in 1976.

"When I got to Maryland, no one expected me to have as successful a season as I had," said Smith, who was not heavily recruited out of high school. "I came out and surprised everybody, even myself."

In Oakland Coliseum Arena, about 2,000 fans cheered wildly when Smith's name was announced.

"You will love this guy," new Warriors general manager Dave Twardzik told the fans. "He's a blue-collar worker, he's going to do a lot of dirty work for us."

Last year with the Terrapins, Smith averaged 20.8 points, 10.6 rebounds and 2.9 blocks a game. For the Warriors, he fills a void up front left by the departure of Webber, top pick of the 1993 draft who was traded to Washington early last season after a dispute with former Golden State coach Don Nelson.

■ NBA players file law suit against league/1D

"He's a guy that has improved every year, we think there's still a tremendous amount of growth to him," Twardzik said. "He brings us size and mobility, he can defend and he can score. He has a great presence on the floor."

Portland, who had traded with Detroit to get the eighth pick, took shooting guard Shawn Respert of Michigan State. New Jersey followed with UCLA forward Ed O'Bannon at No. 9, and Miami took Texas Christian power forward Kurt Thomas at No. 10.

The 11th pick, by Milwaukee, was Ohio's Gary Trent, followed by Duke center Cherokee Parks, taken at No. 12 by Dallas.

Sacramento selected Arkansas forward Corliss Williamson 13th, and Boston chose Eric Williams of Providence with the 14th pick.

The New York Knicks had no draft pick, and the Los Angeles Lakers and Houston Rockets had only second-round picks, No. 37 and 41 respectively.

ANGELS: Arias more comfortable in field after coaches help footwork

(From 1C)

"I'm much more comfortable in the field now than at the beginning of the season," Arias said. "My foot work was just not there early, but Eddie Rodriguez (California defensive coordinator) and Mario Mendoza (Midland manager) have worked with me every day and now I want the ball to come to me."

Akerfelds, however, didn't get the win. That went to Bryan Harris (3-4), who inherited a 0-0 game in the seventh. He pitched two shutout innings and no hits. Holdridge gave up a hit and two walks in the ninth, but got Wichita pinch hitter Reuben Smiley to fly out to Basilo Ortiz to end the game.

Wichita starter Aaron Dorlarque matched Akerfelds on the mound for six innings, allowing only five hits and zippo runs.

ANGEL DUST: In addition to the great defensive efforts of Munoz and Arias, Ortiz threw out Rod Myers at the plate in the second to save a run... The Angels are now 5-3 on the current homestand and remain in first place in the second half... Pitcher Ben VanRyn is expected to join Midland today from AAA Vancouver. VanRyn was 14-4 with a 2.21 ERA with San Antonio in 1993... Pitcher Mike Butler has been granted his release... Michael Wolff, who may be the overall star of the current homestand, is sporting a marine-type haircut. He got a bunt single in the game... Arias, Greene and relief ace Mike Schooler have been picked for the Double-A All-Star Game for July 10 in Shreveport. Mario Mendoza will manage the team since he has the best record among American League Double-A teams. He will take with him coaches Kernan Ronan, Jeff Barns and trainer Scott Sowell...

WIN: Smith's record streak ends at 19

ji Gil with runners on second and third to preserve an 8-6 lead in the eighth, but blew it in the ninth.

Otis Nixon drew a leadoff walk in the Texas ninth, Mark McLemore singled and Clark tied it with a double off the center-field fence.

Clark moved to third on a slow groundout by Juan Gonzalez. After Mickey Tettleton was intentionally walked, Rodriguez lined a single to right field.

Chris Nichting (1-0), called up from Triple-A Oklahoma City earlier in the day, pitched four scoreless innings of two-hit relief for his first major league win.

Jim Edmonds and Tim Salmon hit solo home runs in the first inning for the Angels. Edmonds extended his hitting streak to 22 games with his 11th homer and Salmon hit his 15th.

Salmon went 4-for-5, making him 8-for-9 in the first two games of the three-game series. He is 16-for-19 with four homers in his last four games at The Ballpark.

The Angels scored twice in the fourth for a 4-0 lead against Kenny Rogers on Damion Easley's sacrifice fly and Chris Turner's RBI single. Gonzalez hit a two-run homer, his sixth, in the fourth off Mark Langston.

The Angels knocked out Rogers with a four-run fifth. The Rangers tied a team record by making three errors in the inning, two by Gil at shortstop. A double by Edmonds helped the load the bases, and Salmon hit a ground that rolled under the glove of third baseman Luis Ortiz, scoring three runs.

Texas closed to 8-4 in the seventh on an RBI double by Ortiz and Otis Nixon's run-scoring single. Pinch-hitter Esteban Beltre hit a two-run double with two outs in the Texas eighth off Bob Patterson, and Smith relieved.

Astros blow out Cards for 4th straight win

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Mike Hampton's domination of the St. Louis Cardinals isn't enough. He needs to start beating other teams for the Houston Astros to get back into the NL Central race.

Hampton allowed five hits over eight innings as the Astros beat the Cardinals 9-0 Wednesday for their fourth straight victory.

■ NL Roundup

Hampton (2-3), who struck out seven and walked two, improved to 4-1 career against St. Louis and lowered his ERA to 0.42. He is 1-6 against the rest of the National League.

"Hopefully, I can change that," said the 22-year-old left-hander. "That's not a good statistic. I want to start beating other teams, too."

Hampton, who spent time on the disabled list this season, lowered his ERA to 2.08.

"Mike's got a great slider, but his changeup is what keeps the batters off stride," Houston manager Terry Collins said.

Cardinals manager Mike Jorgensen added, "He's got several good pitches, but the one that really caught my eye was the changeup. I can't believe he's their number five starter."

The victory capped a three-game series in which the Astros outscored St. Louis 26-2 as part of the four-game home winning streak. They were five games behind NL Central-leading Cincinnati before Wednesday.

Braves 4, Expos 3

ATLANTA — David Justice hit a two-run homer with no outs in the bottom of the ninth inning to give Atlanta a victory over Montreal.

RECORD: Sampras passes Henman test

(From 1C)

French Open semifinals.

The 32 games in the third set a Wimbledon record for most games in a set, topping the previous mark of 26 games — reached six times previously.

Rubin and Hy-Boulais looked exhausted when the match finally ended with the Canadian, down 15-40 on her serve, hitting a forehand into the net. The two walked slowly to the net before exchanging kisses on both cheeks.

Tauziat appeared headed for an easy win over Pierce when she broke for a 3-2 lead in the second set, but Pierce started connecting with her serve returns and won four straight games to take the set.

Tauziat regained command by winning the first four games of the final set. Pierce broke for 4-1, but Tauziat served out the match two games later.

It was a quick exit for Pierce, who had pulled out of Wimbledon at the last minute the past two years. Winner of the Australian Open this year, she had been considered a possible title contender here.

"Nathalie is a great player on grass and she has more experience than I do," Pierce said. "She played a really good match and I made too many mistakes."

Meanwhile, two-time men's defending champion Pete Sampras overcame a valiant test from Britain's Tin Henman to move into the third round with a 6-2, 6-3, 7-6 (7-3) victory.

Sampras lost only three points on serve in the first set and two points in the second. But the 174th-ranked Henman, inspired by the support of the Court One crowd, battled Sampras evenly in the third set.

Henman broke for the only time in the first game of the third set, hitting a running cross-court forehand that sent Sampras diving in vain onto the grass.

Sampras saved two more break points at 5-5. The two were even at 3-3 in the tiebreaker before Sampras won the next four points to end the contest.

Sampras complained several times in the third set over overrules by chair umpire Carlos Ramos.

"All of a sudden, he decided he wanted to be part of the match, which I wasn't too happy about," Sampras said.

Sampras, seeded No. 2 behind Andre Agassi, said he was happy with his game and his chances of becoming the first player since Bjorn Borg to win three straight Wimbledon titles.

"I feel I can play better tennis," he said. "I've won it twice, and there's no reason why I can't do it again."

Earlier, two-time Wimbledon finalist Goran Ivanisevic served 28 aces in a straight-set victory over Jonathan Stark of the United States.

Report: Forman to relinquish crown

LOS ANGELES (AP) — George Foreman has decided to relinquish his International Boxing Federation heavyweight championship and not give Germany's Axel Schulz a rematch, the Los Angeles Times reported.

The move would leave Foreman, who won the IBF and WBA heavyweight titles last November when he knocked out Michael Moorer, without a major title.

Foreman, 46, was stripped of the WBA title because he wouldn't sign for a mandatory defense against No. 1 contender Tony Tucker. Instead, he fought Schulz in Las Vegas on April 22 and won a controversial majority decision.

The IBF ordered Foreman to give Schulz a rematch and said it would strip him of the title if he refused.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, JUNE 29, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The employment picture is about to brighten. Count on your dignity and good sense to help you through some tense moments. An unexpected windfall or legacy could make this Christmas one of your best ever. Romance takes on new significance early in 1996. You discover something very special when forced to make a tough choice. Put children's needs first.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: "NYPD Blue" actress Sharon Lawrence, baseball player Pedro Guerrero, actress Ruth Warrick, civil rights leader Kwame Toure.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Self-reliance is a tremendous asset now. Exciting financial and career opportunities arise. Study your options carefully. Consult mate or partner before making a final decision about a career change.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your problem now may be deciding who to believe. Sort out garbled communication and erroneous information. Wait until new data can be verified before making an announcement.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are given a wonderful opportunity to prove your worth to a business. A leadership role is the prize. Heed a new friend's warning. Publicizing your plans in advance would be a mistake. Keep secrets.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): People are apt to ask and follow your advice today. Check classified ads for job openings. Networking will bring solid leads, too. Handle a "hot potato" issue with restraint.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not allow a domestic dispute to get out of hand. Rein in your temper and let good judgment prevail. You would be wise to decline a strange invitation. Make a graceful, convincing excuse.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Getting back to basics will make you more effective at work. Someone who arrives on the scene today can help you cut through red tape. A lighthearted approach smoothes over a tempest in a teapot.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Curb a tendency to scatter your energies. Choose a definite course and stick to it. Someone's impatience could get on your nerves. Be courteous even if this person monopolizes the conversation. Bide your time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A slight may have been unintentional. Give others the benefit of the doubt. Devote more time to the young and young-at-heart. Timely home repairs will save you money in the long run.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Delegate routine tasks if burdened with too many responsibilities. Charm and tact will help you garner support for an ambitious project. An exciting business opportunity falls into your lap. Strike while the iron is hot.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Favorable news regarding a raise or promotion puts you in a feisty mood. Many eyes are watching you. Be careful of what you say and do. Finalize weekend plans only after talking with a parent.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Once you set your sights on an objective, nothing can stop you. A serious commitment could be part of the picture. Romance will blossom if you give it a gentle nudge. Show your sentimental side.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Hard work will help you widen your sphere of influence. Others applaud your efforts. In fact, they could be in awe of you. Strive to balance a busy work schedule with play. Exercise works wonders.

Opening lead: Jack of ♡

We like to pretend that bridge is an exact science. However, once in a while a hand comes along where declarer has to rely solely on guesswork. Here's an example.

Looking at the North-South holding, the slam is not very good, yet the bidding cannot really be faulted. Change any one of the side-suit queens to the queen of spades and 12 tricks would be laydown although there would be no change in the combined point count of the two holdings.

WHO KNOWS?

Obviously, to make the slam declarer has to find either king-queen bare of spades, considerably against the odds, or split trump honors. When the honors are split declarer has to know which hand has the doubleton honor to play the suit correctly.

Facing this combination in a side suit, declarer might be able to draw trumps and discover the exact distribution of the hand before tackling the suit. Here, however, the problem is the trump suit and any attempt by declarer to learn more about the lie of the cards by cashing plain-suit tricks could lead to a fatal ruff by a defender.

South has to guess which defender to play for a doubleton honor. Should declarer choose East, the jack of trumps should be led from dummy. If East ducks, so does declarer, then lays down the ace of spades next. If East covers, declarer wins and leads a trump toward the ten. In either case only one trick is lost.

If declarer decides West is short in trumps, correct is to start the suit by leading low from hand toward the jack-ten. If West rises with the honor, East is finessed for the other honor. If West follows low and East wins, South cashes the ace of spades on regaining the lead. As the cards lie here, that is the winning line.

Inadvertent booking gem: Dee Dee, Hugh to be on same Leno program

NEW YORK — Will Hugh Grant and Dee Dee Myers turn "The Tonight Show" into Court TV?

In an inadvertent masterpiece of booking, the two celebrities who have since had separate brushes with the law are scheduled to appear on the July 10 "Tonight Show with Jay Leno."

Dee Dee Myers

Grant was arrested Tuesday in Los Angeles while allegedly indulging in a sex act with a prostitute in his BMW. Myers, the co-host of CNBC's "Equal Time" and former White House press secretary, was arrested in Washington the same day and charged with drunken driving.

Hugh Grant

"She's still booked," said Bronwyn McElroy, a publicist for CNBC.

"He plans to go through with it," Grant publicist Sandy Rice said Wednesday.

One suggested topic for discussion: Playing it safe behind the wheel.

SAN FRANCISCO — It's not open until the princess says so.

Princess Margaret

Princess Margaret visited a new Alfred Dunhill men's store, saying "lovely" a few dozen times as she inspected merchandise that ranged from $10 cigars to $4,000 humidors.

The British royal also lifted a black velvet veil on a plaque proclaiming that she dedicated the store, which actually opened in March.

Declared the Princess: "There. Now you're truly open."

The 87-year-old vibraphonist was alert and doing well at Mount Sinai Hospital after Tuesday's stroke, said Drs. George Forster and Lawrence Werther.

Hampton performed two weeks ago at Marietta State College in Athens, Ga. He had planned to begin a European tour on July 6 with his Golden Men of Jazz band, but his doctors advised against it, said his spokesman Philip Leshin.

Hampton also had a stroke on March 30 and spent two months at Mount Sinai.

PHILADELPHIA — All shook up about claims Elvis Presley is still alive? For $15 you can have a copy of his will.

"Here's proof positive that you can frame for your den that Elvis is dead. Legally, anyway," said entrepreneur Robert Sammons.

Sammons paid $35 to the Shelby County Department of Records in Memphis, Tenn., for a copy of the signed document.

Officials at Graceland, Presley's estate, told Sammons his money-making project is "tacky and tasteless," he said.

A spokeswoman for Graceland, which displays the King's gold lame jumpsuits and mirrored ceilings, did not return a call seeking comment.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Roy Clark is being honored, and not for his strumming or his corny jokes on "Hee Haw."

A floor of St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis will be dedicated in his name Thursday to salute his fund-raising efforts for the hospital.

The "Hee Haw" star raised $2.3 million by sponsoring a golf tournament and gala for the past four years in West Palm Beach, Fla.

"If I can, in just some small way, be part of healing one young person's life, then maybe my life will have value," he said.

St. Jude, founded by entertainer Danny Thomas, specializes in treating children with leukemia and other serious diseases.

Prices climb

Gasoline futures prices rocketed higher Wednesday on the New York Mercantile Exchange after unexpectedly strong demand fueled sentiment of a supply shortage.

The American Petroleum Institute reported gasoline stocks fell 1.937 million barrels last week to 208.6 million barrels. Most investors had expected increases as U.S. refiners pumped out more fuel.

Prices received an additional boost after Amoco Corp. shut down its 120,000 barrel-a-day unit at its Texas City, Texas, refinery because of an unspecified mechanical problem that caused a release of pollutants.

August West Texas Intermediate rose 20 cents to $17.97 a barrel. Local crude purchasers raised their posted price 25 cents to $16.25.

August natural gas fell 3.7 cents to $1.532 per 1,000 cubic feet.

The API data, confirmed by the Energy Department in a separate report, took traders by surprise. Gasoline prices in particular have been hammered in the past week, dropping as much as 3 cents amid ideas Americans were not driving as much as expected during this peak summer season.

Dollar advances

NEW YORK — The dollar surged Wednesday, hitting its highest level against the yen in more than a month, on news of a U.S. agreement with Japan that averted a costly trade brawl.

The dollar rocketed to a high of 86.00 yen soon after word of the agreement was reached. That's the highest level for the dollar since May 25 when it reached an intraday peak of 87.30 yen.

Profit-taking and some resilient doubts about the effectiveness of the trade deal eroded some of that gain. But in late New York trading, the dollar was still higher at 85.68 yen, up 1.8 percent from 84.18 yen Tuesday. The dollar also fetched 1.3970 German marks, up from 1.3863 Tuesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Tuesday: 1.1600 Swiss francs, up from 1.1470; 4.8960 French francs, up from 4.8740; 1,636 Italian lire, up from 1,623; and 1.3743 Canadian dollars, unchanged.

The British pound was quoted at $1.5755, down from $1.5840.

Stocks rebound

NEW YORK — Stocks posted moderate gains on Wednesday after the United States and Japan reached a compromise in their automotive trade dispute, narrowly averting an all-out trade war.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 14.18 points to 4,556.79 after logging three straight days of losses.

Volume was moderately heavy, with 368.05 million shares having changed hands on the New York Stock Exchange. That was up from 346.96 million on Tuesday.

Advancing issues had a slim 5-to-4 lead on decliners on the Big Board. Broad-market indexes ended higher. The NYSE composite index rose 0.93 to 291.68. The Standard & Poor's 500 stock index added 2.30 to 544.73. The American Stock Exchange's market value index gained 3.83 to 497.13, topping its record high of 495.97 set last Thursday. The Nasdaq composite rose 0.96 to 920.52.

Midland attracts two manufacturers

■ A pharmaceutical manufacturer and a boat manufacturer are taking steps to locate to Midland.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Two new manufacturers are looking to move to Midland, according to Chamber of Commerce officials.

At Wednesday's monthly Chamber board meeting, it was reported that an "over-the-counter" pharmaceutical manufacturer and a boat manufacturer are both pursuing financing through local banks as a step toward locating to Midland.

LuAnn Morgan of TU Electric, who serves as the board's vice president of economic development, said the pharmaceutical manufacturer came from a local referral and the boat manufacturer was first contacted during a marketing trip to California in April.

The chamber staff is also working with U.S. Postal Authorities in Washington, D.C. to establish a postal "Remote Bar Coding" facility in Midland.

Tom Stinson, director of economic development for the chamber, said the Postal Board will meet in September to consider expanding the current 50 facilities. He added that if an additional 160 locations or more are approved, Midland stands an excellent chance to gain one of the new sites, which would create 450 new jobs.

Mike Canon, who serves as vice president of community development, reported that the subcommittee working on revitalizing downtown Midland, has tentatively chosen HOK Architects and Planners of Dallas and Leland & Associates of Denver to help the committee develop a revitalization plan. He said representatives of the two companies will be in Midland July 12 to meet with committee members and begin work on devising a specific plan, and will return in September for further planning.

Charles Perry, chairman of the Midland-Odessa Transportation Alliance, reported that two buses have been chartered to take volunteers to a Texas Department of Transportation hearing July 18 in Lubbock that will discuss the TxDOT Route Study from Lubbock to Interstate 10 and from Amarillo north to the state line. The main topic will be the selection of the five most feasible 10-mile wide corridors within the study area, three of which would begin at Interstate 27 in Lubbock. MOTRAN's proposed route running from Lubbock to Lamesa south through Midland-Odessa to Interstate 10 near Fort Stockton is expected to be among the five presented.

Perry urged volunteers from both Midland and Odessa to make the effort to travel to Lubbock, saying a strong show of support from the two communities would go a long way toward getting the proposed route selected. The two buses leave at 4 p.m. that day, one from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin campus, and one from the Midland College campus. A light supper and drinks will be provided en route to the hearing, which begins at 7 p.m. The buses will return to Midland and Odessa after the hearing ends.

In other reports, the Leadership Midland Alumni Association continues to take applications for the Community Spirit Award.

Indian state acts to end Enron project

By Thomas Wagner
Associated Press Writer

NEW DELHI, India — An Indian state controlled by a right-wing coalition has taken another step toward canceling the largest foreign investment in India, newspapers reported Wednesday.

The outcome of the case involving a U.S. consortium led by Enron Development Corp. is being watched closely by investors and the Indian government, which introduced free-market reforms four years ago.

Financial analysts warned that if Maharashtra state scraps the deal, India's efforts to attract badly needed investment in its outmoded infrastructure would be undermined, clouding the country's long-term growth picture.

The Times of India and The Economic Times said a panel set up by the recently elected government of Maharashtra has recommended scrapping the $2.9 billion, 2,015-megawatt power project.

The reports quoted unidentified sources close to the committee saying the deal with the Dabhol Power Corp. consortium violates the Indian Electricity Act and the Electricity Distribution Act.

When it was formed, the committee said it would answer these questions: Why wasn't the contract put up for competitive bidding? Why were clauses kept secret? Why are capital costs so high? Why will the state electricity board pay so much for the power?

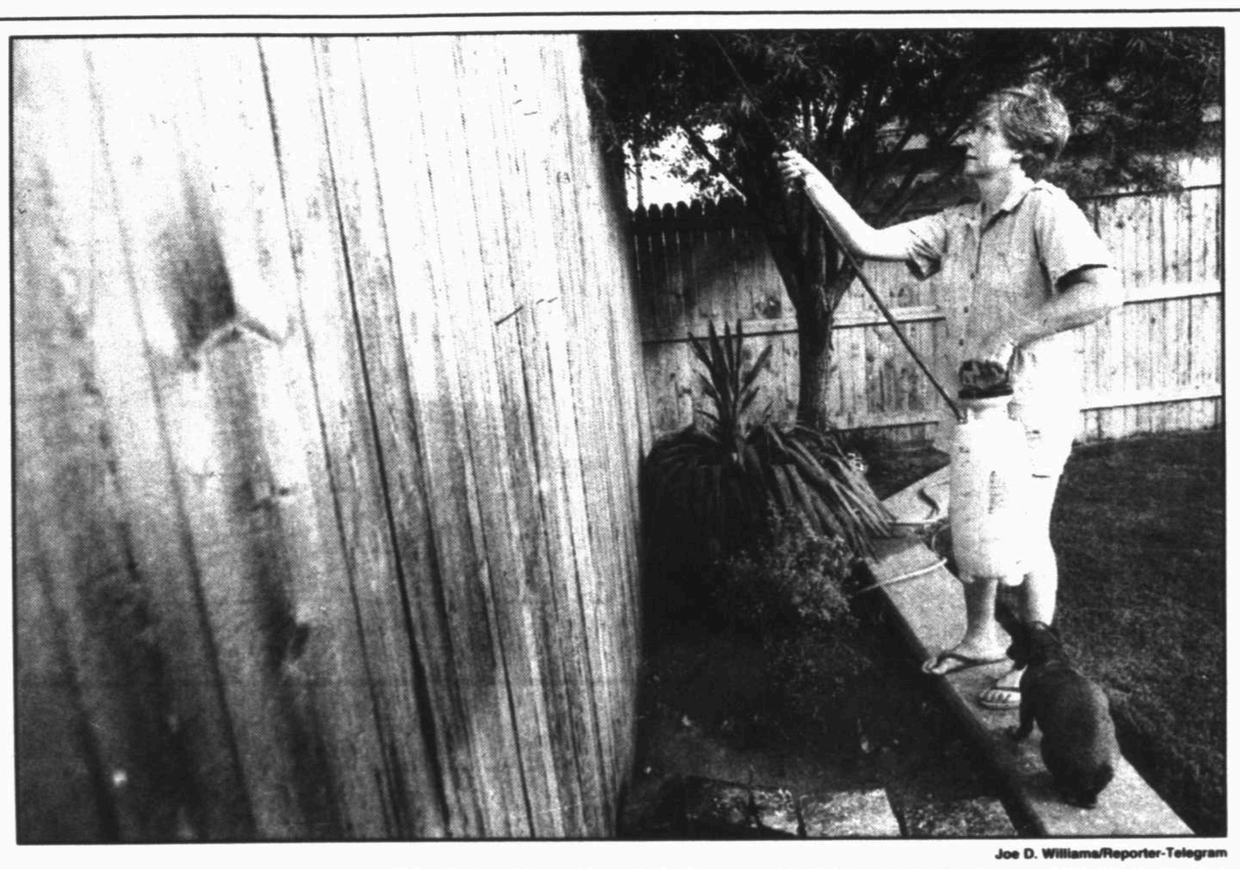

The news reports about the panel's recommendation couldn't be confirmed Wednesday.

Enron issued a statement saying it had acted in compliance with U.S. and Indian laws on the project. The Houston-based company also said it hadn't been contacted by the state government about the committee or its reported recommendation.

Phiroze J. Nagarvala, vice president of Bechtel Enterprises Inc., another member of the consortium that also includes General Electric Capital Corp., hadn't received the report either. He said he remains hopeful about the project.

No official word on the committee report is expected from the state until its chief minister, Manohar Joshi, returns next week from a trip to Britain, Canada and the United States, where he has traveled to promote investment in Maharashtra.

It remains unclear when the government will make a final decision regarding the Enron project. The government of the extremist Shiv Sena party and the Hindu nationalist Bharatiya Janata Party reportedly is arguing over whether the Cabinet or state Assembly should make the decision.

Local companies bring new types of wood care products to Midland

■ Wood care products help local fences, structures weather Midland's heat, wind.

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Three local companies are bringing a new and better form of wood care to Midland, where wind, rain and dirt can age wood in a short amount of time.

The products, a cleaner and an oil-based sealer, are being distributed locally by Ready Products of Midland. Spartan Seal-Coat, owned by Paula Wier, and Fence PROtect, owned by Steve Venters, are the two service companies which apply the product in Midland.

"The oil-based sealer is superior to water-based sealers because it repels water," said John Whitaker, owner of Ready Products of Midland. "Water-based sealers will wash away with water. You have to reapply them about every six months."

The product is good for any wood, be it on a fence, deck or other structure. A cleaner is applied to the wood to rid it of mold, mildew or fungus, which turns wood a grayish color. The cleaner is then neutralized and washed off. The sealer, which comes in six colors of stain, is then applied to the wood.

"The oil-based sealer has a two to five year guarantee," Whitaker said. "At that point, you don't have to reclean the fence. You just touch up the stain."

Whitaker said the main advantage to using the oil-based sealer is that the life of the wood is prolonged and residents avoid the cost of replacing the wood.

"It costs about $12 per linear foot to replace a typical fence," Whitaker said. "We charge a base rate of 30 cents per square foot for the cleaner and sealer. Because the sealer repels water, you are not only improving the looks of the wood, but increasing its longevity."

Whitaker started Ready Products of Midland as a branch of Ready Products in Dallas after seeing the work the Dallas company had done in the Metroplex.

"The company is nationwide and was started in Dallas about five years ago," Whitaker said.

The Midland branch is the main distributor for the West Texas and New Mexico area. In addition to Spartan Seal-Coat and Fence PROtect, the two applicators in Midland, there are applicators in Lubbock, San Angelo, Abilene and Odessa.

Whitaker said if residents prefer to clean and stain the wood themselves, Ready Products of Midland offers a do-it-yourself kit.

Ready Products next line of product to be marketed is a grafitti-cleaner and bond-breaker. Whitaker said the bond-breaker is a clear bond applied to any structure that will keep paint from adhering with the surface. Paint can then be removed with water.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Annuity is poor option in placing IRA investments

BY BILL DOYLE

Q: My husband's individual retirement account matured in October. It was valued at $12,000 and was drawing 3 percent interest.

Doyle

An adviser at the bank where he had the IRA talked him into putting the money into a tax-advantaged account with an out-of-state insurance company.

That account earns 6.1 percent interest, but we cannot draw any money out without a penalty for seven years, unless one of us dies. My husband is 70 years old, and will have to withdraw money next year.

Other than a small certificate of deposit, this is our life's savings. Our only income is a $3,000-a-year pension and Social Security benefits.

So, why a tax-advantaged account?

A: For no good reason whatsoever. Based on your letter, your husband was conned into placing your family retirement nest egg in an absolutely wrong place.

Although you're a bit vague on information, it's clear your husband removed the money from an IRA CD and put it in an annuity or some similar arrangement.

The "tax advantage" there is that the interest building up on the account is deferred from income tax until the money is withdrawn. But IRAs already have tax-deferral.

An annuity is a mighty poor choice as a place for IRA money.

Your story is a prime example of the way some banks are victimizing customers through the sale of such things as annuities and mutual fund shares. Federal and state regulatory authorities have begun cracking down on such unsuitable sales.

In your shoes, I would go to that bank and demand cancellation of the annuity contract. If you're stonewalled, take your complaint to state banking authorities.

Q: I'm amazed to see banks selling annuities to their depositors. Doesn't that cannibalize the banks' deposits?

A: Indeed, it does. But it provides banks with another service to offer and a method of competing with insurance agents and stockbrokers.

The big incentive for a bank to peddle annuities is the sizable and immediate commission on every annuity sale.

Q: How safe are 11-month "flexible savings certificates" with interest guaranteed only by the investment company that issues those certificates?

A: Each one is as safe — or as risky — as the issuing company. More often than not, they are quite risky and are somewhat of a vanishing breed.

In years gone by, such certificates were quite popular because they offered interest higher than banks were allowed to pay. But banking deregulation in the 1980s changed that.

Now, if you spot a savings certificate paying interest higher than a bank CD with a similar maturity, you know there is risk involved.

Unless you are ready, willing and financially able to take on risk in hopes of greater financial reward, it's a mistake to give up the rock-solid safety of bank accounts with Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. coverage.

Q: When my $25,000 CD was about to mature, I sent for and received a prospectus from a Pennsylvania securities firm selling "demand variable rate certificates."

The firm offers 7.25 percent on three-month certificates, 7.75 on six-month certificates, etc.

I am 72 years old. How great a risk would I be taking with these certificates?

A: Too great, unless you have much more money tucked away than the $25,000 you mention.

Besides the fact that the rates you cite are higher than prevailing CD rates — indicating risk — how can certificates with set maturities and fixed interest rates be called "demand" and "variable?"

That's oxymoron material.

Leaverton named to Who's Who

Midland High punter-kicker Dave Leaverton was recently named to Who's Who in Sports. Leaverton, who will be a senior for the Bulldogs next season, was a unanimous all-District 4-5A kicker and second team punter last year.

Last year for Midland, Leaverton converted seven of nine field goals with a season long of 49 yards. He led the district in number of field goals converted, longest field goal, PAT percentage (22 of 22) and scoring among kickers with 43 points.

His 38.7-yard punting average was second in the district, including a 68-yarder against El Paso Bel Air. In the recent Midland spring game, he connected on a 52-yard field goal and had a 50-yard punting average.

White Sox, Yankees advance in Big League

The White Sox and the Yankees advanced with wins late Tuesday night in the 1995 Big League double-elimination tournament at Timlin Field.

Hector Morales' RBI single in the seventh proved to be the game winner for the White Sox as they defeated the Athletics 4-3. Mike Brandt had a home run and Steve Wilson had the only other hit for the White Sox as Brady Simmons picked up the win on the mound.

James Latishaw and Heath Grizzle had doubles for the Athletics.

The Yankees broke through in the third inning and went on to beat the Red Sox 11-1. Curtis Reinhart had a double for the Yankees while Albert Flores had a pair of singles to lead the team. Edward Ochoa, Mike Valenzuela and Gregg Dreyer also had hits for the Yankees.

Marco Garcia accounted for the Red Sox's only run with a home run.

Local man gets hole in one

John Van Aukeu scored a hole in one Wednesday on the No. 3 hole at Ranchland Hills Country Club. He used a 7-wood on the 143-yard par-3 hole which was witnessed by Dalvin Awalt, Lou Deayse and Jim Underwood.

Mavs surprised to get Parks at 12

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks were all set to take a power forward in Wednesday's draft because they figured the top two centers would be gone by their pick at No. 12.

But when Duke center Cherokee Parks slipped past the expansion teams and skidded through several other teams who needed inside help, Dallas was happy to snap up the solid shooter who can also block shots.

"I just didn't think that Cherokee Parks would slide that far," Mavs player personnel director Keith Grant said. "Some teams were making some offers for us to move up in the draft and get him, but we held firm."

Grant said he was "extremely happy." Parks described the choice as "great."

"That's the type of team that I feel like I can get out there and run floor with them and help them out inside," Parks said.

Parks, 22, is a nice fit in Dallas. He's got a good attitude, he improved better every year at Duke and he experienced both good times (two national title games) and bad times (missing the NCAA tournament last year).

As a senior, Parks had career-highs of 19 points and 9.3 rebounds per game. He left the Blue Devils as the school's second-best career shot blocker with 231.

"I didn't think Cherokee would be there," said Jason Kidd, Dallas' top pick last year and the co-Rookie of the Year. "As long as he can stay healthy and he does the things he was drafted to do, we're going to be OK."

Mavericks coach Dick Motta should have no problem fitting Parks into the middle of his offense.

"Dick is already drawing up the plays," Grant said. "We've got a big guy that can shoot the basketball and block shots. This is a good day."

Dallas also had the 24th overall pick.

■ Draft list/3C

Getting Parks changed Dallas' strategy for that pick, which was expected to be used on a project-type player at center. Instead, they could hope for one of several power forwards they wanted at No. 12 but slipped.

The Mavericks weren't expecting to find a starter with their first pick, but may have in Parks. He's 6-foot-10 and 247 pounds; an improvement from last year's starter, 6-foot-9, 213-pound Lorenzo Williams.

Should Parks work out, it would continue Dallas' trend of rebuilding quickly with smart draft picks. The Mavericks began their climb by getting Jim Jackson in 1992, Jamal Mashburn in 1993 and Kidd in 1994.

Dallas traded its second-round pick to Houston in February, although the Mavericks may be getting an extra player next year in Deon Thomas.

Jordan, others file class-action law suit against NBA

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Jordan, Patrick Ewing and five other NBA players today filed a class-action suit against the league today in federal court in Minneapolis.

Lawyers for the players who wish to stop collective bargaining said they had delivered to the NBA petitions from more than 180 players — more than half the league's players — to decertify the National Basketball Players Assocation.

Leaders of the players' association had last week reached a tentative agreement on a six-year labor deal, but it hasn't been ratified.

The surprise announcement by the players came hours before the NBA conducted its annual rookie draft in Toronto. The draft would not be affected by the lawsuit.

Jeffrey Kessler, a lawyer for the players who want to stop bargaining, said he believes the league will do one of three things on July 1, when the current moratorium on signings end:

—start a lockout.

—impose the tentative agreement the union's board refused to ratify last week.

—continue the current salary cap system.

"We believe any of those things would be considered an unreasonable restriction under antitrust laws," Kessler said. "The only reason they could do that is because there was a union."

Last week, Jordan and Ewing were among 17 players who filed a petition with the National Labor Relations Board to decertify the union. The NLRB has scheduled a hearing for July 5 to determine whether to call an election.

"They agreed to something without asking us," Ewing said of the union leadership. "If they had asked us what we wanted, we wouldn't be in the situation we are in today."

Kessler claimed that by giving the decertification notices to the NBA, collective bargaining must cease.

"The election is now sort of irrelevant in the sense we already know a majority of the players have voted for decertification," Kessler said.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Hut Stricklin arrived in Daytona Beach a few days early for the Pepsi 400. But racing wasn't on his mind.

"I'm really just going to do a little sleeping, I guess, and lay out in the sun," Stricklin said, laughing.

That attitude sums up the staggering difference between the Daytona 500, stock-car racing's most prestigious event which kicks off the Winston Cup season in February, and Saturday's Pepsi 400, the laid-back, unofficial start of the second half of the season.

Because of schedule changes over the years, the race is now a little before the halfway mark, 15th on the 31-race lineup.

"It's like night and day," said Larry Balewski, an assistant to NASCAR president Bill France Jr. and a former sports editor of the local newspaper. "Not only from the teams' standpoint, but even the people at the speedway. We can almost do this one with our hands tied behind our back."

Compared to the high-pressure stakes of the Daytona 500, the Pepsi 400 is a low-key affair. It's the race where drivers, their families in tow, arrive a few days early to soak up a few rays and take advantage of a rare break in the middle of the Winston Cup season.

"Obviously, it's a big race that sets the tone for the second half, and it's important to get the second half going in the right direction," Balewski said. "But there's not that pressure to win NASCAR's crown jewel."

In February, the teams face an enormous burden. It's like beginning the season with the Super Bowl, and the pre-race activities are much greater than at any other track. There's actually four races for the Winston Cup drivers, counting the Busch Clash and two qualifying events, not to mention hours of practice and the mandatory wining and dining of corporate sponsors.

For the Pepsi 400, "it's basically three days and out," Balewski said.

MEXICO BRIEFS

By The Associated Press

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Thousands of Mexicans who are refusing to pay the high interest rates on credit cards and personal loans rallied at a Mexico City stadium to protest the government's handling of the economic crisis.

Some 15,000 members of the protest movement El Barzon held a first National Congress, opposing official policies designed to end the 6-month-old financial tailspin.

Interest rates are running over 80 percent annually on credit cards, home mortgages and loans. Housings and cars are being repossessed and businesses are failing as a result of a steep peso devaluation that began last Dec. 20.

The quickly growing movement is protesting what it has described as "unconstitutional" quadrupling of interest rates and a hike in the nation's value-added tax from 10 percent to 15 percent on April 1. ———

MERIDA, Mexico (AP) — Militants of the opposition National Action Party held weekend rallies around the nation to demand that their candidate be declared the rightfully elected governor of Yucatan state.

The marches and roadside rallies are part of a civil campaign to protest the outcome of a controversial May 28 ballot in Yucatan, won by Mexico's governing party.

Officials certified Victor Cervera Pacheco the Yucatan governor by a 40,000-vote margin. He is an old-style boss of the Institutional Revolutionary Party, which has governed Mexico the past 66 years.

National Action withdrew from a national dialogue on political reforms last week, angrily claiming numerous irregularities in the Yucatan voting had prevented its candidate, Luis Correa Mena, from winning.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The former head of the Federal Judicial Police has been charged with obstructing justice in the murder of Jose Francisco Ruiz Massieu, local reports said Monday.

Massieu, secretary-general of Mexico's ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, was shot dead outside a capital hotel last Sept. 28.

Adrian Carrera Fuentes turned himself in on Sunday and was released on bond of about $5,000, or 30,000 pesos.

The victim's brother, Mario Ruiz Massieu, is sought in Mexico for allegedly trying to obstruct the investigation into the murder. Last week a federal magistrate in Newark, N.J., refused to extradite Massieu, saying the testimony against him was obtained through torture.

Sin tierra en el Cuatro de Julio

Por William O. Medina

El Cuatro de Julio será una fecha de perplejidad para mi en este año. Los cambios de la ley de inmigración podrian echar a perder la festividad. Las propuestas de Washington piden que a los niños nacidos de padres indocumentados se les niegue la ciudadanía de los Estados Unidos y que sean deportados.

No estoy cierto sobre la situación de inmigración de mi madre cuando yo nací, pero hay una posibilidad de que pudiera declarárseme como ``no estadounidense".

¿Qué tal si yo quedara incluído por alguna serie de acontecimientos? ¿Podrían las personas como yo resultar atrapadas en las redadas de inmigración y ser deportadas á México?

Es dudoso que yo pudiera convertirme de pronto en ciudadano mexicano. Después de todo, no nací en México.

Puede que yo me designara a mi mismo como ciudadano del mundo y rechazar el nacionalismo de un todo.

Las propuestas recientes sobre inmigración pueden lucir factibles en el papel, pero no han sido puestas a prueba todavía. A menudo, cuando los cursos de acción federales hacen contacto con las personas, tropiezan como un adolescente extraviado.

¿Qué idioma hablaría un ciudadano del mundo? El inglés es el idioma con el que me siento más cómodo, pero dudo que eso signifique alguna diferencia para los legisladores que quieren declararme como ``no estadounidense".

Puede que se inventara algún idioma para todas las personas sin patria. Podríamos formar una confederación de entidades apátridas sin fronteras, vinculadas solamente por un idioma común. Podríamos desarrollar un idioma culturalmente neutral, basado en cifras resistentes al verso poético.

En verdad, yo perdería mi empleo en la enseñanza. Tendría que adentrarme en la economía de las sombras, donde se esconde el ``dejar hacer". Aunque sería ilegal el contratarme, estoy seguro de poder hallar empleo. Los negocios están acostumbrados a la mano de obra barata. El aroma de las ganancias elevadas lleva hasta a los más piadosos a infringir la ley.

Pero surge una paradoja: Por una parte, seré un apátrida, sin derechos y despreciado; simultáneamente, seré un recurso valioso.

Clinton opposes "bracero" program

Statement by the President released by the Office of the Press Secretary

THE WHITE HOUSE - I oppose efforts in Congress to institute a new guestworker or "bracero" program that seeks to bring thousands of foreign workers into the United States to provide temporary farm labor.

In its most recent report, the bipartisan Commission on Immigration reform chaired by Barbara Jordan unanimously concluded that a large-scale guestworker program would be a "grievous mistake." We have worked hard to reduce illegal immigration and have made great progress toward controlling this longstanding and serious problem. To allow so-called temporary workers to cross the border now would undermine all the success we achieved.

A new guestworker program is unwarranted for several reasons:

* It would increase illegal immigration
* It would reduce work opportunities for U.S. citizens and other legal residents
* It would depress wages and work standards for American workers.

When these programs were tried in the past, many temporary questworkers stayed permanently - and illegally - in this country. Hundreds of thousands of immigrants now residing in the U.S. first came as temporary workers, and their presence became a magnet for other illegal immigrants.

If our crackdown on illegal immigration contributes to labor shortages - especially fro perishable crops that require large number of workers for short periods of time - I will direct the departments of Labor and Agriculture to work cooperatively to improve and enhance existing programs to meet the labor requirements of our vital agricultural industry consistent with our obligations to American workers.

President Vows No Haven for Traffickers

By JOSEPH B. FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Ernesto Zedillo said Monday he was determined that druglords would find no haven in Mexico, speaking shortly after the army made one of the country's biggest drug arrests ever.

At a ceremony marking the International Day Against Illicit Drug Trafficking, Zedillo promised new laws and a new effort to fight the narcotics trade and to purge police corrupted by the cartels.

He did not mention Hector Luis Palma Salazar by name, but praised the army troops who last Friday arrested the reputed leader of the Sinaloa drug cartel, Mexico's fourth-largest.

"We have just demonstrated that, despite the corrupting power of drug trafficking, it can be fought with success," Zedillo told the dignitaries gathered at his Mexico City compound.

"Despite the fact that there are bad police and bad public servants we also have capable men and women, honorable and fully dedicated to this struggle," Zedillo added.

It was the cartel leader's capture Friday, at the home of the federal police official protecting him, which underscored most clearly how the official fight against drug trafficking in Mexico has been undermined.

Palma Salazar was arrested by the army near Guadalajara, 280 miles northwest of the capital, along with some 33 federal police agents suspected of protecting him.

Reputedly one of Mexico's most violent druglords, he reportedly was being treated at a Guadalajara military hospital for injuries suffered in a Thursday night plane crash that alerted agents to his whereabouts.

Palma Salazar is wanted on arrest warrants in connection with a series of murders, including the 1993 slaying of Roman Catholic Cardinal Juan Jesus Posadas Ocampo at the Guadalajara airport.

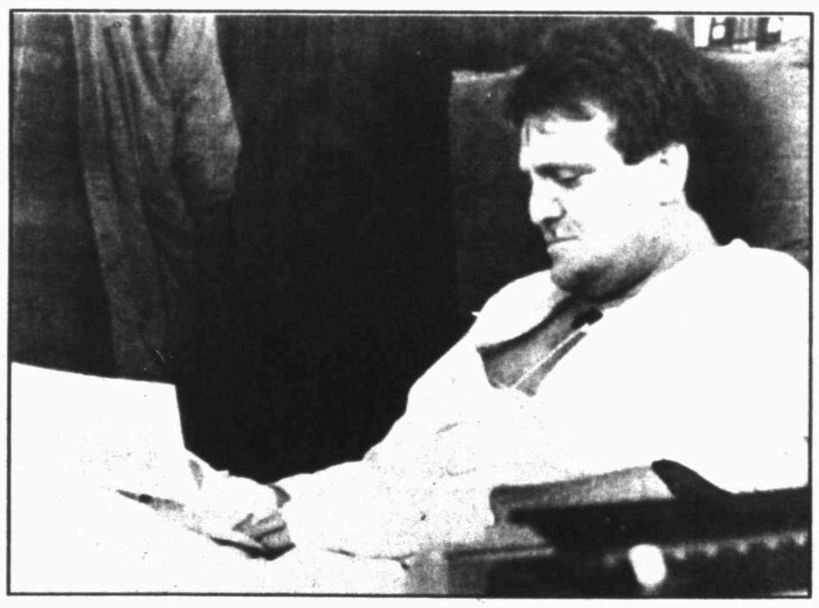

In his speech, Zedillo chided consuming nations for not doing more to fight the drug war.

"Mexicans feel that the effort being undertaken in the main consuming countries does not match the size of their resources, their technological capacity or the importance of the illicit traffic in their territories," he said.

He did not mention any country, but nations that produce drugs or serve as a drug corridor frequently criticize the United States for doing too little to curb demand.

Consuming nations "should be the first to assume their responsibilities and act," said Zedillo, who emphasized that trafficking is nonetheless a grave threat that must be combatted by all without hesitation.

Mexico is the key corridor for South American cocaine bound for the United States and produces much of the marijuana for American markets.

Plans underway for 1995 Mex-Tex Menudo Cookoff

By Amarante Cordova.

Plans are now underway, committees formed, chairmen elected, and responsibilities distributed among volunteers in preparation for the 1995 Mex-Tex Menudo/Chili/Fajita Cook-off and Family Festival.

This year's cook-off takes place Friday through Sunday, July 14 - 16, at Twin City Speedway, on County Road 1300, halfway between Midland and Odessa.

Over the years, the Cook-off has become one of the largest and most popular events sponsored by the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, attracting thousands of visitors from across West Texas and southeast New Mexico, and generating revenue to fund Chamber activities and programs throughout the year.

Event organizers promise that there will be something for everyone at this year's event. At the heart of it all is the cook-off itself, a culinary competition guaranteed to excite the palate whether your taste is for sizzling fajitas, the original 'bowl of red' chili, or that 'breakfast of champions,' menudo. In fact, the call has already gone out for cooks for this year's competition.

"What we try to do is, we try to recruit as many cookers as we can for the cookoff," said Debbie Oliva, who chairs the cookoff committee for this year's event. "We're going to recruit from the whole Permian Basin and West Texas area. And we're going to recruit as many cooks as we can from the area because it's a heck of a lot of fun In the past, we have had eight to ten entries in each of the categories. And this year, we're hoping to double that."

"Within the three main categories - menudo, fajitas and chili - we do have different sub-categories and entry fees. There's 'My Mama's Recipe,' the Amateur category, and the entry fee for that is $15. Then we have the Commercial/Restaurant category, and the fee for that is $100. Then we have a VIP/Sponsor category and the fee for that is $150."

The cookoff competition takes place Saturday, July 15. Turn-in times are 2:00 PM for chili, 3:00 PM for fajitas, and 4:00 PM for menudo.

"In the past, menudo cookers were on the last day, on Sunday," explained Oliva. "And what we wanted to do this year, we wanted to bring them in on our big day, and get them more recognition. Because that's what the festival is all about, really."

"We will have the clay pot trophies for first, second and third in each of the categories. And we'll be presenting them to the winners Saturday night, at the big dance."

There will also be awards for the cooking team that puts on the best show. Visitors to the cookoff will be allowed to taste the entries for themselves, while supplies last.

Each cookoff team must have a team captain, or "El Jefe," and is allowed up to five members. The registration fee not only provides cooking space for each team and it's camp, but also special gifts for the team members and "goody bags" filled with promotional items other surprises from event sponsors.

Teams may register by calling the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, at 682-2960. They will then be provided with a registration packet which they will be encouraged to fill-out and return as soon as possible.

"We will be taking applications up until Wednesday July 12. And probably at the door, too, in case they are dying to enter!

Landless on the fourth of July

But just now, I'm not in a mood for "American" food

By William O. Medina

The Fourth of July will be a perplexing time for me this year. Changes in immigration law might spoil the celebration. Proposals in Washington call for children born to undocumented parents to be denied U.S. citizenship and deported.

I'm not clear about my mother's immigration status when I was born, but there is a possibility that I could be declared a "non- American."

What if I'm included by some bizarre turn of events? Could people like me be caught in immigration sweeps and be deported to Mexico? It's doubtful that I could suddenly become a Mexican citizen. After all, I wasn't born in Mexico.

Maybe I could designate myself as a citizen of the world and reject nationalism altogether. The recent immigration proposals may appear feasible on paper, but they remain untested. Often, when federal policy makes contact with people, it stumbles like an awkward teenager.

What language would a citizen of the world speak? English is the language I feel most comfortable with, but I doubt that it makes any difference to lawmakers who want to declare me non- American. Maybe a language for all stateless people could be invented. We could form a confederation of stateless entities without borders tied only by a common language. We could develop a culturally neutral one based on numbers resistant to poetical verse.

I'd certainly lose my teaching job. I'd have to enter the shadow economy where laissez-faire lurks. While it would be illegal to hire me, I'm sure I could find work. Business is addicted to cheap labor. The aroma of high profits leads even the most pious to break the law.

But a paradox arises: on the one hand, I will be a stateless person, without rights and despised; simultaneous, I will be a prized commodity.

Will taxes be deducted from my paycheck? There is no probability of escaping them without incurring the wrath of government. But why should I pay them when I'm a non-person?

If I desire to divert my taxes to my adopted borderless state, how will I be assured that the money will get there? And what about the vote? Polls will be closed to non-persons like me. I won't be able to cast my ballot for the first Hispanic governor of California or the first Afro-American president of the United States.

And yet laws passed at every level of government will land on my doorstep each day. It sounds like taxation without representation.

If California is suddenly attacked, should I shun the army when it desperately needs war fodder? Would it be fair to ask me to shed my blood? This spring there was a commemorative ceremony in Southern California for Ysmael Villegas, who like many young Mexican men came to this country without papers during World War II and fought for our democracy.

He rushed six bunkers during a battle against the Japanese and was killed. Villegas saved many lives that day. He was decorated with the Medal of Honor. Would Ysmael Villegas be deported if he were still alive today?

Recently, I became a father for the second time. If I were declared illegal, would my children be illegal, too? When picked up by the migra, where will they be sent? As they say goodbye to their small friends, they will have to explain what it is like to be illegal. My 7-year-old daughter will have difficulty adjusting to a new home. I think she's too American.

But there might be a remedy for me. My paternal grandmother is a Miwok Indian. It's possible that the tribe can secede from the United States. I could become a citizen of the Miwok Nation and learn their language. It would be new and cumbersome, but at least I would be welcome. But I do worry about my Uncle Bill in Sacramento. He's past 80. Does he has the strength to launch a national liberation movement?

I still plan to have a family Fourth of July barbecue this summer. In the past, I've always cooked hot dogs and hamburgers. But just now, I'm not in a mood for "American" food.

Si deseo desviar mis impuestos a mi estado adoptivo sin fronteras, ¿cómo tendré la seguridad de que el dinero llegará allí?

Si alguien ataca a California súbitamente, ¿debería yo soslayar al ejército cuando necesite urgentemente carne de cañón? ¿Sería justo pedirme que derramara mi sangre?

En esta primavera hubo una ceremonia conmemorativa en el sur de California para Ysmael Villegas, quien como muchos jóvenes mexicanos vino a este país sin documentos durante la Segunda Guerra Mundial y combatió por nuestra democracia. El asaltó seis casamatas durante una batalla contra los japoneses y resultó muerto. Villegas salvó muchas vidas aquel día. Fué condecorado póstumamente con la Medalla de Honor. ¿Sería deportado Ysmael Villegas si estuviera vivo actualmente?

Hace poco llegué a ser padre por segunda vez. Si se me declarara ilegal, ¿lo serían también mis hijos? Cuando la "migra" los recogiera, ¿a dónde serían enviados? Mientras dijeran adiós a sus amiguitos, tendrían que explicar lo que significa ser ilegal. Mi hija de siete años tendrá dificultad para ajustarse a un hogar nuevo. Creo que ella es demasiado estadounidense.

Pero podría haber un remedio para mí. Mi abuela paterna es una indígena de la tribu Miwok. Es posible que esa tribu se separe de los Estados Unidos. Yo podría convertirme en ciudadano de la Nación Miwok y aprender su idioma. Sería algo nuevo y difícil, pero por lo menos me darían la bienvenida. Pero me preocupo por mi Tío Bill, que vive en Sacramento. El tiene más de 80 años. ¿Tiene él la fuerza suficiente como para lanzar un movimiento de liberación nacional?

Todavía me propongo tener una barbacoa para el Cuatro de Julio en este verano. Anteriormente, siempre he cocinado perros calientes y hamburguesas. Pero ahora mismo no estoy de ánimo para los alimentos "estadounidenses".

Los genios pueden venir de muchos colores

Por Rick Martínez

Sólo 24 horas después que la escritora Sandra Cisneros fué honrada con uno de los galardones más prestigiosos de la nación, el tributo fué descartado por un crítico de arte de Nueva York, quien dijo despreciativamente que la Fundación de John D. y Catherine T. MacArthur sólo estaba siendo políticamente correcta.

La selección de dos latinas -- Cisneros y su colega Alma Guillermoprieto -- entre dos docenas de ganadores de galardones como "genios" fué elogiada por la directora del Programa de Miembros de MacArthur, Catharine Simpson, como que reflejaba "un florecimiento de la cultura latina en los Estados Unidos, en el arte y la literatura".

Pero en un comentario de la Radio Nacional Pública, el crítico Edward Lisson se opuso a las selecciones de este año, infiriendo que se pasó por alto a hombres anglo-americanos.

Ahora todos sabemos que los críticos son como voceadores de parques de diversiones, que esperan hasta poder echar un vistazo por debajo de la carpa. De modo que sería igualmente fácil descartar a Lisson como alguien que carece de refinamiento para las palabras e ideas que se originan en lugares inconcebibles como Texas.

No estoy diciendo que Lisson tuviera a Cisneros especialmente en su punto de mira cuando se inmiscuyó con su táctica de francotirador en las selecciones de la Fundación MacArthur. Sin embargo, si Lisson hubiera estado en West Martin Street, en San Antonio, donde vive Cisneros, el día en que él hizo sus comentarios, sin duda que lo habrían pateado en el trasero. Muchos de los fanáticos de Cisneros tomaron sus comentarios personalmente.

El comentario de Lisson ilustra, en gran medida, la ola creciente de ira pasiva-agresiva que está dirigiéndose a los hispanos y otros grupos en muchos niveles.

Ya sea el tema la diversidad en el centro de trabajo, la acción afirmativa o los galardones de la Fundación de John D. y Catherine T. MacArthur a los genios, las personas de color y las mujeres que logran algún nivel de éxito son medidas con demasiada frecuencia contra un varón blanco ilusorio que debe haber sido pasado por alto para que esta persona que no es un varón blanco haya tenido éxito.

Hace treinta años, cuando los escritores hispanos como el finado Tomás Rivera, de Texas, comenzaron a surgir y contar sus historias, a menudo basadas en la existencia migratoria de la familia de trabajadores agrícolas, la perspectiva fresca fué elogiada con tratos para libros universitarios, galardones pequeños y cátedras al nivel de entrada.

Ahora, a medida que Cisneros y sus contemporáneos llevan la experiencia hispana al nivel inmediato superior, hay algunos del establecimiento que se figuran que ella debe ser la homenajeada en un concurso de belleza de corrección política, sin duda desplazando a un varón blanco mucho más meritorio, que acierta a no ser el sabor del día.

A medida que nos aproximamos al milenio, lo que estamos viendo realmente es el género de lucha de clases que se ha repetido a través de la historia.

Las minorías raciales y étnicas están abriéndose paso lentamente hacia los bastiones que hace una generación no estaban abiertos para ellas. A muchas personas no les gusta eso. Veremos que el escenario de Cisneros se repetirá una y otra vez, a medida que los hispanos continúen descollando en las artes, la política, el aula de clase y la sala de la junta de directores.

Esta crítica sobre Cisneros es sólo un ejemplo más del hecho de que el mundo cambia demasiado rápidamente para algunos.

La lección para los hispanos es la de no olvidar la dinámica de esta lucha de clases y dar una mano a los que están en sus terrenos respectivos y vienen detrás de ellos. Por ejemplo, mi organización, la Asociación Nacional de Periodistas Hispanos, efectuó sesiones de adiestramiento para 50 estudiantes de periodismo durante nuestra convención en El Paso en este mes.

No fué una sorpresa para los que conocen a Cisneros que, el día después de ganar su galardón de $225,000 otorgado por la Fundación MacArthur, ella estuviera de regreso en el barrio dando charlas a los estudiantes del Centro Cultural de Artes Guadalupe, en San Antonio.

Este ejercicio de recordar las propias raíces se ejemplifica en una línea de la obra de Cisneros, "La Casa de la Calle Mango": "Ustedes serán siempre la Calle Mango. No se puede borrar lo que uno sabe. No se puede olvidar lo que uno es".

"Padrino" of journalism inspires new generation

In the 1960s, Felix Gutierrez held a masterUs degree in journalism from Northwestern University. Yet no one would give him a job at a newspaper. A generation later, he now is considered a media expert and "padrino," or godfather, of journalists of color.

Through his efforts, hundreds of students have become journalists and countless professionals look up to him as a teacher and mentor.

The Los Angeles native is now the executive director of the prestigious Freedom ForumUs Pacific Coast Center in Oakland, Calif., which is part of a non-profit foundation dedicated to the promotion of free speech and freedom of the press.

Coauthor of "Minorities and the Media: Diversity and the End of Mass Communications," Gutierrez was honored for his contributions to the profession earlier this month at the binational conference of the National Association of Hispanic Journalists (NAHJ) held in El Paso, Texas, and Juarez, Mexico.

Gutierrez comes from a family of journalists. As a student at Arizona State Teachers College (now Arizona State University) his mother, Rebeca Muoz was a correspondent for the Mexican Voice—a student newspaper cofounded by his father, Felix J. Gutierrez, while he attended Pasadena Junior College in the 1930s. Published by the Mexican American Movement civil rights organization, the newspaper was in the tradition of El Clamor Publico, which was published in the 1850s in Los Angeles and protested the mistreatment of Mexicans.

Back then and for many decades, English-language newspapers were not allowed in many Mexican or Latino homes because the media constantly denigrated nonwhite and working-class communities.

The senior Gutierrez, made a living picking oranges while he published the Voice (which became "Mexican Americans Forward" after World War II). He died at the age of 37. Years later, his wife found among his possessions a note to himself that read: "Nothing open now. Maybe in the future."

He had applied for a job at local newspapers during the war—back when newspapers opened their doors to women, but not generally to people of color. This note, Felix recalls, showed that his father was an optimist and hoped that through perseverance he would break through those doors. He never did.

In 1969, the younger Felix was offered a job as assistant dean of students at Stanford University. "It was easier to find a job in academe than in the news media," he recalls.

There, he went on to receive his Ph.D., then became a professor of journalism, first at California State University at Northridge (where he was adviser to the Chicano student newspaper, El Popo), then at the University of Southern California. He also was one of the cofounders of the California Chicano News Media Association in the early 1970s, and NAHJ in the 1980s.

In his inspirational voice, one can still hear traces of wistfulness, from generations of unfulfilled dreams. He is reminiscent of the great black baseball players who were for many years relegated to the Negro Leagues.

Nowadays, when we read about court rulings against affirmative action programs, we think about Felix Guitierrez and others from his generation who were cast aside.

But to us, he harkens back even further to what the Aztecs called their writers, the "possessors of the red and black ink." These were the writers who risked being killed or silenced by the Spaniards, who learned to encode their messages and write in double meanings to survive.

In ancient Mexico, a wise person had the responsibility to pass on knowledge—"to pass the book." Guitierrez has done just that. In addition to guiding journalists, he has funded political initiatives from the various ethnic media and integrated their voices into the profession.

The discrimination that Felix faced ultimately helped create a great teacher. A plaque given to him at the conference borrows from an old Aztec saying: "Thanks to the teacher, the people humanize their will...the teacher makes strong their hearts, comforts the people, helps, resolves, attends to everyone."

At the conference we thought not simply about the injustices of the past but about the successes and hopes of the future; like Stanley Acosta, a Dominican student from the Bronx, who was offered an internship with The New York Times, and Cindy Bautista, a Chicana from El Paso who made up her mind to pursue journalism—and truth—as a career. We believe through them, and the many other students who attended the conference, that the voices of their silenced ancestors will be heard.

Shortage of water is withering in Mexico, but U.S. crops thrive

By Nancy Cleeland
Copley News Service

GUSTAVO DIAZ ORDAZ, Mexico — Rodolfo Adame's field of corn is dried, stunted and riddled with insects — a pathetic crop that won't even cover his debt.

But just across the Rio Grande, in Texas, Adame's neighbors are tending green fields of sugar cane and cotton. The difference is water: Texans have it, and Mexican farmers don't.

A five-year drought has killed cattle, made rain-fed farmland useless and turned reservoirs into muddy ponds across northern Mexico. Now it is changing dynamics and testing nerves in this fertile river valley that has thrived on irrigation.

Suddenly, every drop counts. That's why the United States turned down Mexico's desperate request last month for a water loan to see farmers through the growing season. And that's why some Mexican farmers pumped from the river anyway, knowing it was illegal.

The pumping has stopped for now, in part because of stepped-up vigilance by Mexican authorities. But observers on both sides of the border predict trouble in the next planting season unless a hurricane-force storm fills the reservoirs.

"These people on the river have always had water. They're like rich men," said Hernan Cortes Longoria, an inspector for the Mexican National Water Commission, which patrols the river for illegal pumping. "How do you tell a rich man there's no more money? He's not going to believe you."

For four decades, farmers in this region have amicably shared the Rio Grande, known in Mexico as the Rio Bravo. With two enormous binational reservoirs upstream, there was plenty of water to go around.

HUGE WATER LOSSES

The drought has changed all that, highlighting a tremendous gap between the two countries in water technology and conservation. Mexican officials concede that their irrigation system, with miles of open dirt canals, loses as much as 50 percent of its water through seepage, evaporation and spillover.

"They (in Texas) are very efficient compared to us," said Claudio Medina Salazar, operations director for an important irrigation district that runs from Laredo to Rio Bravo in the state of Tamaulipas. "This is going to force us to improve."

Mexico quickly used up its allotment from the two international dams, which provide irrigation water to most of the valley and are monitored by a binational commission. And a half-dozen reservoirs in Mexico, which once subsidized the irrigation, are now down to less than 5 percent capacity.

Some farmers were caught with half-grown crops, lacking a final critical irrigation.

The prevailing opinion among farmers and water planners in Texas is that the Mexican government didn't react quickly or strongly enough to the looming crisis. But several Mexican water officials blamed their shortfall on the stubborn optimism of some farmers, who refused to believe in the drought and planted all their fields.

"They have a lot of faith in God," said Julio Munoz Quiroz, chief engineer with the Mexican National Water Commission in Ciudad Acuna. "We advised them to cut back. But they prayed, and they were sure He would send them rain."

Technical help offered

The rain never came, so the farmers turned to their government, which in turn asked the United States for a loan of water. The request was immediately attacked by south Texas farmers, who have been on a stringent conservation program for a year, and who bought their water rights like private property.

In a delicate meeting with Mexican President Ernesto Zedillo, Texas Gov. George W. Bush said a loan was out of the question, but offered to help Mexico, a major trading partner, improve its water conservation and planning by providing experts.

"Texas has a huge stake in Mexico," said Tony Garza Jr., Texas secretary of state. "A situation like this can devolve very quickly into, 'You just don't want to help us, do you?' That's why we had to respond so quickly, in a very forthright and honest way. We had to make sure they understood that this wasn't federal water, but was in every sense a local property right."

Indeed, what could have become an international incident was quickly defused. And when farmers continued to pump water illegally, the Mexican government immediately sent surveillance planes north to patrol the river and put an end to it.

Hernan Cortes Longoria was among the inspectors who flew over the riverbanks and later drove into farms to cite offenders. He said farmers eventually cooperated, turning off their mobile diesel-powered pumps — but not until after they finished a critical final irrigation.

"We were able to convince them this year," he said. "But next year, we're going to need some legal backing to make them stop. If they need the water, it will be almost impossible to stop them."

A DOUBLE WHAMMY

For Mexican farmers, already hit by a peso devaluation that inflated their bank loans and raised the cost of fertilizers and pesticides, the drought couldn't have come at a worse time.

Huge tracts of land stand unplanted, some tilled earlier in the season in a vain hope for rain. Irrigated land, planted primarily in corn and sorghum, now holds shriveled crops. The feed corn planted here is always dried before harvesting, but this year the stalks are abnormally short, and ears of corn are stunted and plagued with drought-loving insects.

Adame, a small-scale farmer who picked through his cornfield to save what he could one recent afternoon, said he normally harvests five tons of corn for every hectare (about 2.5 acres). This year, he said, he'll be lucky to get two tons.

"I need three tons just to pay the bank," he said. "And here there is no insurance. Who will pay? Who will pay us to live this year?"

Down the road near the border town of Reynosa, Juan Guel, who runs a 125-acre family farm, said he planted only 50 acres this year because of the drought. All of his corn turned out stunted and plagued with disease.

"It's very, very difficult," he said. "Some farmers in Rio Bravo are selling their land, their tractors, everything."

Hit with the combination of devaluation and drought, agricultural towns such as this one, set on the river 15 miles west of Reynosa, are drying up as quickly as the surrounding fields. At least half the businesses facing the main plaza, including a restaurant, hardware store and supermarket, were closed and pasted with For Sale notices.

"If the drought continues, this will be a ghost town," said Cortes, who was born and raised in Gustavo Diaz Ordaz. "Everyone is going to the other side. Here, there is nothing."

NERVOUSNESS IN TEXAS

But even Texas, which prides itself on efficient water usage and runs water through underground pipes or concrete-lined canals, might be in for disaster next year. The two international reservoirs — Amistad and Falcon — are close to levels reserved for domestic usage, and normal rainfall this summer would leave little or nothing for irrigation.

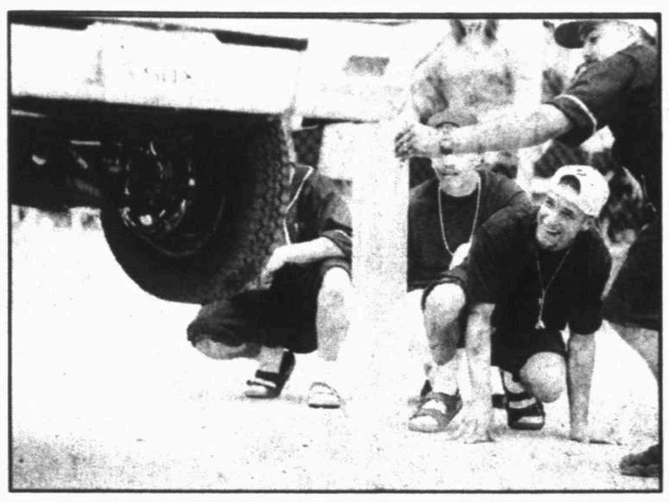

"We have just enough to finish this year," said Cornelio Morales, general manager of the Maverick County Water Control District in Eagle Pass, Texas. "Everybody's trying to irrigate as little as they can, but it doesn't look good for next year. Right now, I have my fingers crossed."

Among farmers in the Rio Grande Valley, which produces most of the fruit and vegetables grown in Texas, the talk is equally grim.

"It's gonna get to where you can walk across the Rio Grande in your boots," said Newt Dyer, who farms sugar cane, cotton and vegetables on the north bank of the river, now flowing wide and muddy. "And you're talking to somebody that doesn't ever like to be pessimistic."

Dyer's property overlooks a small pumping station on the south bank of the Rio Grande. He said his neighbor in Mexico ran it illegally through most of May.

"They stole our water," he said. "Now we're all in trouble."

Mexican, U.S. businesses expect to get together — sooner or later

By Diane Lindquist
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Almost nothing separates Mexican and U.S. businesspeople so much as their concept of time.

"We have the same timepieces but we do not understand the same time. Here lies one of the most fundamental differences between our countries," Tijuana businessman Gaston Luken said Thursday.

Luken, the president of Dunor, a conglomerate that includes a chain of French bakeries in Baja California, was one of several Tijuanans who shared their insights into the cultural aspects of doing business in Mexico at a University of California at San Diego Connect program.

Along with different views of relationships, corporate protocol and business customs, the Tijuanans noted the vast disparities that exist between the United States and Mexico in time.

Gonzalo Hoyos Gomez, a Coopers & Lybrand partner, said the business day in Mexico starts later but lasts longer than in the United States. It begins about 9 a.m.; is broken up about 2 p.m. by a long, convivial lunch and might end as late as 7, 8 or 9 p.m.

"We do not separate social time from business time. It gives us a different attitude, but we still are serious about business," Hoyos said.

Then there's the manana issue. In working on a three-month project, an American will say the work will be ready in three months while a Mexican will promise it manana — literally, but seldom accurately, tomorrow. "It's based on a desire to do more than we can do," the accountant said.

And, don't be surprised if Mexicans are late for meetings, Hoyos warned.

"We spread ourselves too thin," he lamented.

The perpetual tardiness of Mexicans often can be explained because a prior meeting has run long. A Mexican could not conceive of ending one meeting to go to another. It's considered rude, Hoyos said.

On this side of the border, it apparently is not bad form to leave one meeting for another, he said. "Maybe it's good. Maybe that is understood in the American way."

Many Mexicans are adapting their concept of time to get in sync with the rest of the world, said Luken.

An example of the change is illustrated by Domino's entry into Mexico. When the fast-food pizza franchise opened in Tijuana, offering the same guarantee as in the United States to deliver within 30 minutes or not require payment for the pizza, "many of us were thrilled," he said.

"We were going to get a free pizza. When it came before the 30 minutes we were disillusioned. We had to pay for our pizza," Luken said and added that now the pizzas arrive within 15 minutes.

Time can be an important consideration for U.S. business executives who are interested in doing business south of the border, advised Hoyos.

"You've got to spend time in Mexico to understand why things are not the same way as in the United States," he said.

Business opportunities available on the internet

Dallas, Texas - The Texas Association of Mexican American Chambers of Commerce (TAMACC) announced yesterday that work has been completed on the long-awaited Bulletin Board System that will provide Hispanic businesses with access to many business opportunities via the Internet. Now anyone having access to the Internet anywhere in the world can call in and review information about business and employment opportunities. Work currently being conducted on TAMACC's Home page includes formatting of business opportunities from its many corporate partners. later this year the information base will be expanded to include government contracts, procurement and international trade.

TAMACC's staff and corporate partners started planning for the Texas Business Center nearly two years ago so that Hispanic businesses in Texas would have a centralized resource of businesses information, contacts and referrals. The Texas Business Center became operational in 1993 and has since developed a successful track record. With the guidance and support of its Corporate Partners, AT&T, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, Frito-lay Corporation, and NationsBank, TAMACC and its 9,500 members have on-line services with the bulletin board system. In addition to financial support, the Corporate Partners spent countless hours with staff helping design and develop the system. To access the BBS, use the TAMACC domain: www.tamacc.org.

"We are very pleased that this innovative Bulletin Board System is operational and available on the Internet," said Massey Villarreal, TAMACC Vice Chairman of Economic Development. "Tools like the BBs and the Internet place TAMACC and its membership leaps ahead in the business world."

"The BBS will be showcased at the upcoming TAMACC Convention's Business Expo in Dallas, July 20-22 at the Anatole Hotel. The Convention theme is "Fostering Hispanic Entrepreneurship". Approximately 5,000 attendees from around the region are expected. The Business Expo is free to the public. The featured speaker is Governor George Bush. Convention sponsors include AT&T, Southwestern Bell, Pepsi, GTE, and Anheuser-Busch. the Greater Dallas Hispanic Chamber of Commerce is the official host for the annual event.

TAMACC is the largest statewide network of Hispanic business-owners in the United States with more than 9,500 members in Texas. Based in Austin, TAMACC has emerged as the most effective Hispanic business organization in Texas.

Two hot albums among releases

By RAMIRO BURR

Recent Tejano CD releases include two winning works and one major disappointment.

On the positive we have the excellent production by Michael Salgado, 24, of Eastland (south of Abilene), titled "Cruz De Madera," on Joey Records.

LATIN MUSIC

This is easily one of the best productions put out this year because of its sharp musicianship and clear, clean sound engineering by producers Jerry Narbaez and Joe S. Lopez.

Salgado makes his accordion sing melodically and his liquid vocals convey an emotional tone that makes this music ride the thin line between South Texas Conjunto and Mexican norteno music. Few people can distinguish between the two.

Both genres employ the accordion-fueled polka are the core but they splinter when it comes to vocal approach. Conjunto leans towards lively themes punched up by heavy percussions while norteno relies heavily on plaintive lyrics dueling with harmonic accordion runs while pushing the percussions lower in the mix.

The title track and hottest hit, "Cruz De Madera," shines because of the accordion's irresistible melodic hook and the poignant lyrics about a man's final wish before dying. A graceful request to keep his funeral simple and his grave marked only by a wooden cross.

Also outstanding is the bolero "Usted No Me Conoce," where Salgado pours his guts out on a song about trying to forget a bad love. Comparisons to Ramon Ayala are predictable but Salgado has his own rich shades of emotional expression.

The band includes brother Ernie Salgado on bajo sexto and backup vocals, cousin Joe Tanguma on bass and uncle James Salgado on drums. These four guys produce more music and better material than your average Tejano band. Everywhere. Salgado uses his versatile, nimble fingerwork to make his accordion sing.

At least six of the 10 tunes are original tales written by the Salgados which makes me wonder if next time Joey Records can spring for a lyric sheet?

Relatively new Tejano conjunto outfit Intocable delivers a memorable set of cumbias, polkas and boleros on "Otro Mundo."

Hailing from Zapata, this group stands out in a crowded field of soundalikes. Again, the combination of a fluid accordion runs and instantly recognizable vocals, this time from Ricardo Munoz, 19, makes this a standout.

Listen to Munoz' emotional cries and you swear it's Oscar Gonzales of La Mafia. Excellent backup vocals from Johnny Lee Rosas, who also plays bajo sexto, provide rich harmonies throughout.

Another winner is "La Mentira," a thumping, instantly catchy polka that dares you to resist the dancefloor.

Munoz isn't as nimble as Salgado, but he has an intuitive sense of understatement. He knows when to employ the accordion as spice, and not run all over the songs as young players tend to do. "Perdoname" is a bluesy bolero made noteworthy for its sweeping vocal harmonies and lyrical tone of forgiveness.

Several tunes here are disposable but the balance make this CD a keeper.

The rest of the band is Felix Salinas, bajo sexto; Rene O. Martinez, drums; and Sergio Serna, tumbas.

Produced by Jose Luis Ayala, brother of Ramon Ayala, this CD lacks the musical tightness of Salgado's CD, but the group shows a lot of promise in the Tejano Wasteland.

By comparison, Gary Hobbs' latest CD "Soy El Mismo," is a dismal disappointment.

In recent years Hobbs has risen in the Tejano ranks as a ballad singer with melodic hits like "Mentiras" and "Tus Miradas."

Unfortunately, this CD is made insufferable through monotonous keyboard- synthesizer riffs by an apparently lazy Carlos Castillon, who otherwise shows promise as a songwriter. He wrote seven of 10 tunes here.

"Por Favor Corazon" is getting heavy airplay which may say more about Hobb's momentum that programmers' discretion. It's an average cumbia that becomes instantly forgettable because of its childlike keyboard runs. Some of these keyboard hooks are so simplistic and repetitive, I thought they went out with the mid '80s sound of what industry cynics then called the Meow-Meow groups -- La Mafia, Mazz and Majic, for their keyboard-saturated music. Obviously, this was before the accordion make it's incredible comeback.

"No Ya No," and "Solo Quiero," are ballads made salvageable only because Hobbs manages to inject emotional depth. Both songs though, still suffer from overproduction and obtrusive keyboard runs.

Hobbs produced this CD recorded at his Faith Digital Recording Studio. Advise to Hobbs: stick to singing and crack the whip on Castillon. The rest of the band is Mario Cervera, drums; Rene Rodriguez, guitar; Ruben Pacheco, bass and Carlos Iglesias, accordion.

Hobbs may be riding the charts now because of previous hits. But unless he gets inspired again, he's going to fade into the pack of faceless bands.

NEW ARTISTS

Tejano continues to attract new labels and artists.

BMG has signed up Las Venenosas, an all female Tejano outfit and Lizza, a new solo singer. Veteran producer/songwriter Luis Silva has been contracted by BMG to scout new talent and produce them for the label.
