Snake serum

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A Bayside man who gives snake safety demonstrations was bitten by a deadly cobra Friday afternoon after he lifted it up to see if it were dead.

An antivenin was rushed to Corpus Christi from a Lufkin animal park where a supply is maintained, said Mike Cox, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety. The antidote to the cobra's poison was relayed by the DPS's fastest plane, dispatched on an emergency basis by officials in Austin.

A cobra bite with severe envenomation could be fatal if an antivenin isn't administered within six hours, doctors said.

David Estep, 37, was bitten on a finger of his left hand after he lifted up the large reptile with a snake handling stick, said his wife, Dee Estep.

"He was going to feed it," she said. "It looked like it was dead and he went to take it out. It turned around and got him."

Estep was listed in stable condition at Humana Hospital Friday night after the antivenin was administered, said hospital spokeswoman Mary Daniels. He was conscious and alert, she said.

Contras balking

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Contra guerrillas said they stopped disarming Friday and cited an "atmosphere of uncertainty and social instability" provoked by the Sandinistas, who turned over power last month to Nicaragua's new, U.S.-backed government.

In a communique signed by Contra chief of staff Israel Galeano, the rebels asked for new talks on disarmament accords.

Galeano accused the Sandinistas of acting with "vengeance, frustration and rancor" and said they were trying to "sabotage and frustrate the first measures of reconciliation, democratization and demilitarization."

John Paul II

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II turned 70 Friday but the Vatican marked the day with little fanfare and no public birthday party.

The Vatican was "overwhelmed" by messages and telephone calls pouring in from well-wishing world leaders too numerous to identify, papal spokesman Joaquin Navarro said.

Basin fields part of project

■ North Cowden and McElroy oil fields have been chosen as pilot projects in a $600 million experiment aimed at reducing declines in oil reserves.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

The Permian Basin will receive an economic shot in the arm from a federal research program aimed at halting the rapid decline of U.S. oil reserves.

Two major local oil fields have been designated as pilot projects for a 15-year, $600 million federal energy research program.

U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, R-Texas, announced Friday at a Permian Basin Petroleum Museum press conference that the North Cowden Field in Ector County and the McElroy Field in Upton and Crane counties have been tabbed for initial study.

He said $16 million in contracts would be let for technological applications in the two fields in October and that the program will run until 1997.

"Much of the millions of dollars for the program will be spent right here in the Permian Basin with local contractors," said Smith, a member of the House Subcommittee on Energy Research.

"It is a definite plus for the Permian Basin." He added there will not be a federal task force involved with the project and that there would be no facility in the Permian Basin to coordinate the research efforts.

Smith said the intent of the pilot projects is to focus on preserving economic access to defined, high-potential oil fields that are rapidly approaching their economic limits, and that the North Cowden and McElroy fit that criteria.

"Lessons learned in these two fields will be passed on to operators of similar fields around the nation, who can apply the same technology," said Smith.

Conventional and new technologies which will be employed in the two fields are expected to result in the recovery of 420 million additional barrels from the North Cowden and 460 million barrels from the McElroy.

He noted that results of the efforts in the field could be encouraging enough to stimulate additional project money for the North Cowden and McElroy and for additional U.S. field projects.

Two other Permian Basin fields that are set to be part of the $600 million project are the Hobbs and the Eunice Monument fields in Lea County, N.M. No details were revealed for those fields. Eventually 12 reservoirs nationwide will be included in the DOE research program.

Regulators take over Southwest

■ Southwest Savings Association — with two Midland branches — has been taken over by federal regulators in what observers see as the first admission of failure in the 1988 bailout plan.

Associated Press

Southwest Savings Association, Texas's third largest thrift and the second of the controversial 1988 bailout deals, was taken over by government regulators Friday in what analysts said was an admission of failure the first time around.

The institution has two Midland branches — former Briercroft Savings locations at 200 N. Loraine and at 35 Dellwood Plaza.

Southwest customers can expect business as usual. Jim Cooper, the official placed in charge of the thrift said Southwest's 69 branches will continue to operate.

The $5.5 billion thrift, owned by the Caroline Hunt Trust Estate, is the first of the Southwest plan institutions to fail.

Bush tells Williams: 'I'm all for you'

By Matt Quinn
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

DALLAS — President Bush, returning to his adopted home state to campaign for Texas Republicans, told GOP gubernatorial nominee Clayton Williams Friday night, "Claytie, I am all for you — 100 percent. You must and you will win."

Bush gave Williams the warm endorsement at a GOP fundraiser that party officials said would raise about $1.5 million for the Texas Victory 1990 Committee, which has been established to promote the party's statewide ticket.

In his prepared remarks, Bush recalled striking out on his own in 1948 by moving from Connecticut to Texas to set up an oil business before running for political office.

Texas "gets into your blood," Bush said. "It sticks to you like tumbleweed to a barbed-wire fence. And you know, once it's there, it never leaves."

Besides Williams, GOP leaders appearing with Bush at the dinner included Gov. Bill Clements, the state's only Republican governor this century, U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm and candidates for statewide office. Williams is in a hotly contested race against Democratic State Treasurer Ann Richards in the November election. Gramm is the overwhelming favorite over State Sen. Hugh Parmer of Fort Worth for re-election to a second term.

In his speech, Bush said he needed Republicans in office to help him wage war against illegal drugs and to push his legislative priorities in Washington. He commended Texas Republicans for "blowing away the stuffiness of irrelevant liberalism."

"To win the war on drugs," Bush said, "we must continue the fight being waged so well by Bill Clements. We need this Republican team — headed by Clayton Williams — in Austin, to continue this cooperative battle."

Bush's appearance began a two-day stay in Texas. He was flying to Houston Friday night after the speech.

On Saturday, Bush is scheduled to visit the office of aides planning the economic summit of the seven major industrialized nations, which will be held in Houston in July. He was also to take part in the Doug Sanders celebrity golf tournament before flying to Austin to deliver a commencement address at the University of Texas. Afterward he flies to Oregon and California for more GOP fundraisers.

Sammy Davis Jr. given final ovation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sammy Davis Jr. received his last standing ovation as thousands of fans and countless fellow entertainers mourned the song-and-dance man in an emotional memorial service Friday.

The 1,200 people filling a hall at Forest Lawn Memorial Park in the Hollywood Hills and hundreds more who couldn't get inside cheered when Davis' recording of "I've Got to be Me" was played during the 90-minute service.

"He has answered the curtain call over and over and over again, and now we want an encore," the Rev. Jesse Jackson said in a eulogy. "Encore, encore no more. Let him rest. Let Mr. Bojangles rest. He has earned it."

Jackson said Davis had forged new attitudes about blacks in America.

"The world of segregation had to stop ... to let him get on and change the world," said the civil rights leader who urged the crowd to stand at the end as a recording of Davis performing "Mr. Bojangles" was played.

Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Michael Jackson and Bill Cosby were honorary pallbearers.

"How lucky we all were to have Sammy in our lives and how dearly I will miss him," his widow, Altovise, told the mourners as her voice broke and tears came to her eyes.

Davis died Wednesday after a long struggle against throat cancer. He was 64.

His bronze casket was positioned at the front of the hall, surrounded by flowers, ferns and ficus. The Motown group The Temptations sent one flower arrangement with a ribbon that said, "We love you Sammy."

"He was a constant and enthusiastic presence," Rabbi Allen Freehling told the audience in a non-denominational service. Davis, whose family was Baptist, converted to Judaism in the 1960s.

"Sammy fought the good fight in his battle with cancer. Finally having exhausted all the energy that was his, he went gently into the good night," Freehling said.

Jackson recalled in his eulogy that three weeks ago he sat

Staff Report

Some 30 black Midland teenagers will attend a weekend Life Management Skills Retreat at Camp Butman south of Merkel this weekend, Casa de Amigos community center officials announced.

The retreat is sponsored by Casa's PASS (Promote Another Student's Success) program in cooperation with the Midland Independent School District and the Midland YMCA. The retreat is funded by a United Way Venture Grant.

The retreat will address the issues in home, school and community that cause students to drop out of school, officials said.

Students will take part in a series of workshops in which they will learn community- and self-esteem building techniques, problem identification and problem solving skills.

This program is based on a successful model used with Texas migrant students.

The coordinator for this weekend's retreat is Urbano Rios of the Region 18 Educational Service Center. Trained counselors will be the Rev. Hadley Edwards, James Fuller, Jacqueline Patricia Sheely, Kerry Hillmon, Wanda McGrew and Virginia Conner. Assisting will be Dale Andrews and Robbyne Fuller.

Bell donates Big Spring building

Staff Report

BIG SPRING — Southwestern Bell Telephone donated a two-story building and adjacent parking lot located at 301 Runnels to Big Spring Main Street Inc., at a deed transfer ceremony on Friday.

"We have been working with the Big Spring Main Street Inc. group for several months on the details of the donation," said Darlene Gifford, public relations, Southwestern Bell.

"The donation was intended to enhance the creation of jobs through ecomomic activity and improve traffic to downtown Big Spring," Ms. Gifford said.

The building historically has housed long distance equipment, operators and a business office.

Paul Roth, president, and Tom Brunner, vice president of public relations of Southwestern Bell Telephone, handed the deed over to Richard Atkins, Chairman of Big Spring Main Street Inc. Friday afternoon.

Atkins said the building will be used to create a new office complex and counseling center for Big Spring State Hospital. "It will be remodeled and ready to open later in the year creating 21 jobs in Big Spring and moving 23 jobs from the existing complex," Atkins said.

THRIFT: Customers can expect business as usual

(From 1A)

The Office of Thrift Supervision placed the Dallas-based institution under control of the Resolution Trust Corp. Both agencies were created last year to clean up the faltering thrift industry.

Marc Adams, spokesman for the OTS in Washington explained that the purpose of the move was to place Southwest under government control so that whatever values remain in the thrift's holdings would be maintained, and further losses would be stemmed. The future of the thrift now lies in the hands of the RTC.

"We want to emphasize," he said, "that Southwest Savings was and is a well-managed institution."

The OTS said Southwest had liabilities of $5.6 billion and a tangible capital-to-assets ratio of minus 5.64 percent, far below than the required 3 percent.

These woes were caused, according to Adams, by continued decline in the value of Southwest's real estate holdings and other holdings as well as decline in the value of real estate used as collateral in loans made by the thrift.

The OTS said Southwest was operating in an "unsafe and unsound condition and had incurred losses that depleted substantially all of its capital, with no prospect of replenishment without federal assistance."

"Moreover ... substantial capital forbearances granted by regulators in 1988 no longer can be counted as part of the institution's regulatory capital, a factor that contributed to the insolvency," the agency said.

M. Danny Wall, who championed the Southwest Plan deals as head of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., said the thrift's failure was not an indication of problems in the 14 other deals.

"This is an exception from the standpoint of the deals that were done," Wall said by telephone from his Washington, D.C. area home. "It was early in the process and as more time went on there and elsewhere, we discovered the problems were greater in institutions in Texas and elsewhere than we thought."

The structure of the 1988 deal also contributed to Southwest's downfall, most observers agreed.

"Although FSLIC guaranteed approximately 60 percent of the assets obtained through the consolidation, the assistance was insufficient to offset the non-performance of the non-covered assets and the decline in market value of real estate owned," the OTS said.

"The thing never had a chance," said industry analyst Bert Ely, because "when they did the deal, they only covered the losses only in the other four institutions and they didn't cover it in Southwest Savings."

On May 18, 1988, the original Southwest Savings, owned by Miss Hunt's estate, took over four other institutions: Lamar Savings Association, City Savings and Loan Association, Briercroft Savings Association and Stockton Savings Association. Miss Hunt, daughter of billionaire oilman H.L. Hunt, has an estimated worth of about $1 billion.

"The observation needs to be made that Southwest Savings itself needed help fairly soon after the deal was made," said Wall, who was forced out as head of the OTS in part because of congressional displeasure with the Southwest Plan deals.

"Clearly our view at the time we made the decision was that there were deep pockets at the parent, and the deep pockets would protect their investment," Wall said.

Also Friday, the OTS placed First Savings and Loan Association of Borger, Texas, and First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Conroe, Texas, in conservatorship and sold Houston's Cornerstone Federal Savings Association to Great Southwest Savings, also in Houston.

Staff writer Melia McEwen contributed to this report.

the program, the government provides the technological assist and the field operators provide cooperation. Operators benefit from the additional barrels recovered."

The federal program under which the massive doses of technology will be applied to declining fields is known as the Oil Research Program Implementation Plan. One of its authors and prime supporters within DOE has been Midlander Michael McElwrath, deputy secretary for fossil fuels.

Over the long haul the $600 million dollar plan is expected to create 300,000 jobs, primarily in the oil patch, and improve the balance of trade by $2 trillion by producing incremental oil that would have otherwise had to be imported.

The program is expected to be self sustaining and cost effective, since federal taxes on the additional oil recovered will more than equal expenditures for research.

with Davis and his family to pray.

"He mustered a smile through pain and then we prayed. He was at peace with himself and thus he died on May 16," Jackson said.

Gregory Hines, who co-starred with Davis in the film "Tap," recalled being 10 years old and seeing his idol performing several shows a day in 1956 Harlem's Apollo Theater and being inspired in a backstage meeting.

"It was indescribable, he could do everything," Hines recalled of Davis, who not only sang and danced, but played many instruments. "He could do all those things and he could tap also. I could only tap."

Other mourners included Liza Minnelli, Stevie Wonder, Carroll O'Connor, Ben Vereen, Billy Crystal, Tony Danza, Robert Wagner, Jill St. John, Angie Dickinson, Robert Guillaume, Ricardo Montalban and Burt Reynolds.

Unlike most celebrity funerals in Hollywood, ordinary fans had their place at Davis' service. More than 1,000 people stood in line behind a white chain barricade to get one of 400 stickers entitling them to a place inside the hall.

Exterior lights and marquees at resorts along the Las Vegas Strip were to go dark for 10 minutes Friday night in memory of Davis, who was a frequent headliner at Nevada clubs.

LHS student, 19, arrested for carrying gun to campus

Staff Report

A 19-year-old student was arrested this week at Lee High School for unlawfully carrying a .25-caliber semi-automatic gun in her purse, according to Midland Police Department reports.

Delisa Renee Jones, 4400 Holiday Hill Road, was arrested about 2 p.m. at the school after being confronted by a security guard in the principal's office, the reported stated.

Ms. Jones had been called to the principal's office after another student reported that she was in possession of the gun, said Ted Miller, a spokesperson for the Midland Independent School District. There was no evidence that she brandished or threatened anyone with the gun, Miller added.

Bond was set at $3,500 by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine, police said. Jones is not currently in jail, officials said.

Jones has been temporarily barred from attending school, Miller said. It is up to the school board to determine whether Jones will be expelled.

"She has a right to a hearing from a school board," Miller said. A date has not yet been set, he said.

The last day of school for the 1989-90 school year is June 1. Jones was not expected to graduate, Miller said.

All schools must have a discipline management plan, a Texas state required procedure fror every school district, Miller said.

Carrying a firearm is "in the highest level of misbehavior listed," Miller said.

Officials tour flooded areas, hand out checks

LIBERTY (AP) — State and federal officials toured flood-stricken areas along the Trinity and Red Rivers Friday and distributed the first disaster relief checks to the state's most recent flood victims.

"No government money is going to take the water away," U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm said after taking a 10-minute helicopter ride over the Trinity River at Liberty, about 50 miles east of Houston. "But we do have programs to help the people rebuild their lives."

Officials from the Federal Emergency Management Agency dispensed checks to flood victims who have been forced from their homes by the rising water of the Trinity, swollen by heavy rains more than two weeks ago some 200 miles to the north.

"We're staying at a hotel and this will help," Beau Deal, whose house is flooded for a second straight year, said after getting a $355 government check. "I'm glad to see them taking steps like this."

"I'll be able to get out of there now," added Laura Baird, who has refused to leave her water-surrounded home near Kenefick because she had no money. She received a $415 check.

"Now I can go find a place on dry land. I'm about to cry I'm so relieved," she said.

She and her son and husband have been living in the area known as Trinity River Plaza since last September and are experiencing their first flood. Their only way in and out of the house is by boat.

"They're saying we should have water in the house by tonight and four to five feet in a few days," she said.

"We had been staying in a motel because we had nowhere else to go," said Debbie Glenn. "I think they're doing great and I'm surprised they got back to us as soon as they did."

Mrs. Glenn and her family have lived for seven years in Triple Lake Estates, a riverfront settlement of about eight homes, only three of which are occupied full-time. They applied for government help just a few days ago and picked up a $415 check.

"We knew when we moved there it would flood once a year and this is our second big flood," she said. "It's pretty bad."

Liberty Mayor Scott Parker, however, said his city of 8,300 was coping well as long as heavy rains stayed away. The only signs of flooding within the city are some trailer homes with water under them right on the Trinity River banks.

Elsewhere, flooding below the Lake Livingston Dam, which is funneling unprecedented amounts of water into the lower Trinity River, is confined to a few rural subdivisions.

"We have been trying to explain to people the city of Liberty is not being washed out into the Gulf of Mexico," Parker said. "We feel like we're in pretty good shape."

Gramm announced Friday that five more counties have been declared disaster areas, bringing to 38 the number of counties eligible for additional aid. The latest counties included San Jacinto, Polk, Leon, Madison and Henderson.

"I want people to take advantage of the programs," Gramm said, noting that Texans have been paying taxes for such relief programs that earlier were used for victims of hurricanes and earthquakes elsewhere.

Brad Harris, who oversees the Federal Emergency Management Administration for a five-state area that includes Texas, said at least 3,000 people have requested aid and that FEMA officials "bent the rules" because many people left their homes in anticipation of floods and asked for help before their areas were officials designated as eligible.

"We've been striving to reduce red tape and get money to the people," Harris said.

Tornadoes damage homes near Austin

PFLUGERVILLE (AP) — Tornadoes touched down Friday and damaged several homes in north Travis County, but no injuries were reported, authorities said.

Two miles west of the town of Pflugerville, a few miles north of Austin, a tornado struck about 12:30 p.m. in the Wells Branch subdivision, according to the Travis County Sheriff's Office.

Authorities originally said the roofs of four homes had been blown off, but later said damage was limited to downed fences, shattered windows and one home sustained minor roof damage.

Another tornado destroyed a mobile home and damaged some others in the northern part of the county, according to Travis County Deputy Sheriff Mark Sawa.

Sgt. Robert Ames of the sheriff's department said there were sightings of other funnel clouds "that would touch down for a few moments and then go back in the clouds."

In nearby Round Rock, in Williamson County, a tornado sighting was confirmed, according to Sgt. Dick Coble. But he said no damage or injuries had been reported.

Lawmakers still talking with Clements on school finance

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Lawmakers and Gov. Bill Clements were talking tough but keeping their lines of communication open as protracted school finance discussions continued Friday.

"It's this or allow the court to do it. That's what it comes down to," said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby of the latest proposal to go back and forth between legislators and Clements' office.

"What prompted the 'take it or leave it' was the attitude of the members in the House and Senate," said House Speaker Gib Lewis.

"My phone rang off the wall all yesterday and all morning and all last night from members saying, 'You all have given too much,'" he said.

Lewis Thursday had said a compromise proposal from the Legislature included a concession cutting the amount of money the state will send to school districts next year from $555 million to $450 million. That concession was withdrawn Friday.

Meanwhile, talks between Clements' office and the Legislature will continue, said Lewis' chief of staff, Mike Milsap, a former House member representing Fort Worth.

Lawmakers, now meeting in their third consecutive special session, are trying to forestall a court-ordered school finance plan and satisfy a Texas Supreme Court ruling that found the current system unconstitutional.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, was one legislator ready to jump ship over the issue of lower aid.

Friday, he stated flatly, "I'm not going to vote for $450 million." Given a chance to vote on such a compromise, "I would tell my colleagues that it would not meet the court's mandate," said Parker.

Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan and a lead nogotiator in the protracted talks, said Friday the amount of first-year aid was brought back above the $500 million mark, in part to placate Parker.

"What prompted the 'take it or leave it' was the attitude of the members in the House and Senate."

— House Speaker Gib Lewis

"The chairman of the Senate Education Committee being for the bill makes a lot of difference," said Caperton, referring to one of Parker's primary senatorial functions.

However, the Port Arthur lawmaker appeared ready to acknowledge that the $555 million level is more than sufficient if the trade-off is more money for human service agencies that are facing severe shortfalls.

An aide, Sally Haenelt, said if Parker is convinced that poorer school districts will receive sufficient help, he might agree to a lower figure.

That scenario could fall in line with a compromise proposal from Rep. Nick Perez, D-El Paso, one of the architects of school finance legislation that was originally approved by the House.

Perez said Friday one idea discussed to help solve the impasse would peg an entire revenue package at about $600 million, including money for human service shortfalls.

Clements said Friday he could not accept a proposal lawmakers gave him Thursday because it depends in part on a quarter-cent hike in the state sales tax, an idea he has consistently opposed.

Still, he said he would not veto a bill sent to his office earlier this week until Monday "because I'm not ready to veto it this afternoon." Lawmakers also could vote to withdraw the bill and change it, if compromise talks are successful.

The proposal Clements was considering included a total $653 million package that depended on $153 million garnered from budget cuts, $113 million from a 10-cent hike in the cigarette tax, $40 million from an increase in professional fees, $53 million from other fee increases and $70 million in a speed up on taxes on insurance premiums.

Within that package, $85 million would have gone to human service budgets.

Clements in a prepared statement delivered late Friday afternoon said that the level of first-year aid is not a problem. "The sales tax is the problem," he said.

Purely education-related compromises proposed to the governor included allowing him to appoint the commissioner of education from a list developed by the State Board of Education.

Under the proposal, a district would receive maximum state aid when its rate reaches $1.14 per hundred dollars of valuation, a figure that is down from $1.18.

Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis, center, defers to Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, right, after the two legislative leaders emerged from a Friday meeting with Gov. Bill Clements. Hobby and Lewis gave the governor a "take-it-or-leave-it" school finance reform proposal, capping days of compromise talks.

STATE IN BRIEF

Suit milks most out of 'moos'

LUBBOCK (AP) — Is "Moo" too close to "Mooo?" That's what a state district court is being asked to decide in a suit filed against a Dallas-based restaurant chain by a Lubbock restaurant.

Yet Inc., which operates two "Bob York's Western Sizzlin' " restaurants here, filed suit against Western Sizzlin' Inc., a Dallas-based restaurant chain, alleging that the chain has begun using "Moo" on a number of advertising properties.

Yet Inc. has been using the "Mooo" slogan as its trademark since 1984.

Western Sizzlin' Inc. President Mike Stack was not available for comment on the suit, a company secretary said today.

Attorneys for Yet Inc. claim in the suit filed Wednesday that the company created the "Mooo" slogan in 1984 and has used it on a variety of company materials, including Mooo saddles for children to sit in, Mooo horns to wear and Mooonues from which to order a Mooo meal. Children who take a table manners course from Mr. Mooo (who travels in a Mooo Mobile that is parked in the "Mooo-K Corral") received a degree from Mooo U.

The suit alleges that the parent Western Sizzlin' Inc., dropped an "o" from the Lubbock slogan and illegally appropriated the similar "Moo" designation for its own "Moo U" (for the company's restaurant management training center), "Moo-Lah" (for a payroll program for its restaurant services) and Moo News (a company newsletter).

Noted Austin theater closes after 54 years

Larry Beckha who attended the closing feature Thursday — "Roger & Me" — said that both the theater, which opened in 1936, and the movies it played earned the Varsity respect.

"It was a combination," he said, after buying popcorn and a drink. "But the movie is always the important thing."

Theater Manager Steve Wilson planned an open house for longtime friends of the Varsity before Monday when architects and construction crews from Tower records will move in and begin renovating the building as a record store.

Wilson said he would put the name of the movie "Red River" on the marquee for the open house. "Red River" was the John Wayne epic that was the closing movie in the Peter Bogdanovich film, "The Last Picture Show."

Wilson said the theater was the victim of the videotape revolution, advanced multi-screen movie houses and that the Varsity's limited parking sealed its fate. The theater enjoyed modest success during the mid-1980s as an art film theater then switched to a discount format more than one year ago.

"That last year, we played the best movies in the world — things like Jean de Florette and Manon of the Spring — and we were just barely breaking even," he said.

Steve Minarik, a regular patron since 1982, was a fan of the theater's discount admissions.

He said that both the building and the movies it played created the Varsity mystique. "I just really like the theater," he said, adding he probably would not be back when the building opens as a record store.

Though Minarik voiced the dominant feeling at the last show, one person in the crowd said, "I'd rather have a good record store here than another dollar house."

Aquifer concern mounts

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Water officials say heavy spring rains may have area residents complacent about the Edwards Aquifer even though the underground water reservoir's level is dropping about a foot a day.

"Everyone talks about how we got all that rain, but we really didn't," said Russell Masters, general manager of the Edwards Underground Water District. "It was a few heavy rains over a short period of time."

The Edwards Aquifer, the sole source of drinking water for San Antonio, reached its 1990 high less than two weeks ago.

But the aquifer level has sagged to more than 15 feet below the average for May, prompting concerns that by midsummer it may fall enough to trigger voluntary water conservation measures.

The aquifer level was 650.9 feet above sea level Thursday, down from 652.5 feet the previous day. On May 6, the level measured at the Bexar County index well at Fort Sam Houston was 658.1 feet, the highest of the year.

Mom indicted in death

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman whose stillborn child showed traces of cocaine has been indicted for possessing the cocaine passed on to the child.

The cocaine was found in the liver of a stillborn child born to Traci Jackson, 18, last July.

It is the first such indictment in Harris County.

Officials found the body of Ms. Jackson's stillborn baby in a plastic grocery bag in an apartment closet in July 1989. Friends told police Ms. Jackson appeared ill when she arrived at the apartment July 9 and used the bathroom for about 30 minutes.

Donnie Alexander, who lives in another apartment in the same complex, said Ms. Jackson had some crack cocaine "rocks" the same day.

Ms. Jackson later argued with a friend, Jeanne Cecile Cooper, about the contents of the closet, according to police. Ms. Cooper told police she later found the baby's body in the closet.

An autopsy performed on the 3½-pound, 7-month male fetus, found "large quantities of metabolized cocaine" in liver cultures. It also determined the baby was stillborn.

Police chief trades down

EL PASO (AP) — Police Chief John Scagno has decided he can't fight crime from a fire-engine red Mercedes-Benz and still look good in the media.

Scagno swapped the 1987 Mercedes he'd been using for official business for a Chevrolet Celebrity Thursday. The $27,000 Mercedes was confiscated from an accused drug smuggler who U.S. authorities believe owned the 21 tons of cocaine found in a suburban Los Angeles warehouse last year.

Ten years later, frustrations same in Liberty City

Except, perhaps, things have gotten worse.

Expectations that stark social problems highlighted by the riots would be remedied have dwindled as few concrete changes materialized.

Mayor Xavier Suarez, elected in 1985, agreed relief efforts have been slow in coming. "Apparently, at the time there was a lot of promising going on," he said.

Typifying Liberty City dilemmas is that of Darnell, Rudolph and Leroy Taylor, who sell hubcaps and used appliances from a scarred Liberty City street corner. They say local authorities have been little help.

"On every corner they got cocaine. But they don't want nobody selling hubcaps," said Leroy Taylor, brother of Rudolph and uncle of Darnell. "They stop us, but they can't stop the cocaine boys."

Their complaints echo those of others who lament the lack of progress made since Liberty City and other inner-city Miami neighborhoods exploded on May 17, 1980, after five white police officers were acquitted in the beating death of black insurance executive Arthur McDuffie.

The Taylors' 6-month-old business consists of about 20 stacks of hubcaps, set in from a neat row of tires. The men say they make about $25 a day.

"We are free-market entrepreneurs," said Rudolph Taylor, 54, who is disabled and holds a county peddler's license. But an inspector recently told the trio their business violated county codes and ordered them to move.

The Taylors say they have no money to start up a permanent business, or to afford insurance, licenses and other costs. They are not alone.

A 1989 Dade County report summarized the causes of the 1980 riot and three other violent civil disturbances later in the decade as: "lack of economic opportunity and economic and political power, lack of concern on the part of civic leaders, housing problems, unemployment, police-community relations and the criminal justice system in general."

In December 1979, McDuffie led police on a chase after running a stop sign on his motorcycle. When they caught him, they battered him with nightsticks and heavy flashlights, one of the officers testified at the trial moved to Tampa because of publicity.

Mishaps color capital punishment

N.Y. Times News Service

In Alabama, Franklin Dunkins Jr., a mildly retarded murderer, was shocked twice in the electric chair after the first jolt failed to kill him.

Texas prison technicians prodded murderer and former drug addict Stephen Morin's arms for 40 minutes, searching for a suitable vein in which to inject the fatal poison.

Mississippi state officials cleared the room when Jimmy Lee Gray's desperate gasps for air in a gas chamber repulsed witnesses.

And just this month in Florida, an execution took a macabre turn when flames and smoke shot from Jesse Tafero's head as he was being electrocuted.

That fact is now coloring the capital punishment debate that has raged since the Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty in 1976.

Alabama state officials announced recently that the 73-year-old electric chair at Atmore would be replaced with a new one after two of the last seven executions were bungled.

Dunkins' July 14, 1989 execution, which had already been controversial because of his retardation, caused an uproar when the first jolt didn't do the job.

Proponents and opponents of the death penalty both say they are troubled by such events, but differ on their bearing on the merits of capital punishments.

"From my perspective, I'm not real concerned about (an inmate's) suffering," said Wendy Nelson, a Florida resident whose 10-year-old daughter Elisa was brutally murdered in an orange grove in 1980 by a man now on Florida's Death Row. "There are those who believe they ought to die the way their victims did."

Those seeking to abolish the death penalty contend the botched executions are only the most glaring examples of a punishment too cruel even for society's most despicable killers.

"There is no such thing as a humane way to kill another person," said Watt Espy, who runs the one-man Capital Punishment Research Project in Headland, Ala.

About 35 people opposed to the death penalty are participating in a march from Florida State Prison in Starke to Atlanta.

The pilgrimage, as the march is being called, is intended to renew the national focus on capital punishment.

Since the Supreme Court cleared the way for executions 14 years ago, 124 prisoners have been put to death in 13 states.

The vast majority of those executions have been in the South.

Activists say they'll use the Florida execution to sway public opinion. "It ought to make people take a second look at what we're doing," said Leigh Dingerson, director of the Washington-based National Coalition to Abolish the Death Penalty.

Death penalty proponents don't expect much fallout from either the march or the most recent execution foul-up. John Scully, counsel for the Washington Legal Foundation, called these mishaps "totally irrelevant.".

"Accidents occur in a lot of things," said Scully, whose nonprofit group fights for victims rights and supports the death penalty. "I don't think a march by 40 abolitionists or publicity about one or two mishaps that occur are going to seriously affect that debate."

The Tafero death and a handful of others in the 1980s are the most recent examples in a string of bungled executions that date back to the days of the hangman.

One hundred years ago, New York became the first state to use the electric chair. The prisoner was killed only after a second jolt of electricity ran through his body for five minutes.

Richard Dugger, Florida's corrections secretary, concedes mistakes are always possible.

"You can't ever guarantee there won't be some malfunction," Dugger said. "Machines are always subject to trouble. And anytime you've got the human element to contend with, you're likely to have mistakes made."

Noriega remains Panama's spoiler

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — People don't fear the military as they did when Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega was in power, but deciding on its role and personnel is a problem for the new government.

Noriega

The new Public Forces include officers who were loyal to Noriega. Many Panamanians question whether high-ranking officials of the old regime have a place in the new order.

"Panamanians won't accept that officers of the old Defense Forces could be those who, in a democracy, control the police," the newspaper Panama-America said. "To think about putting into uniform and arming those who for many years oppressed, punished and tortured is not an easy task."

The military's makeup should be submitted to a referendum, said Alberto Conte, leader of the Civic Crusade, a business and professional organizaion that led the opposition to Noriega.

Keeping Noriega's old officers "doesn't offer any guarantee that the new Public Forces will be efficient, respectful and demilitarized," he said.

Eusebio Marchosky, in charge of recovering state property stolen by Noriega and his cronies, said officers who had served the dictator were hindering his work and retaining them "is against the national will."

Ricardo Arias Calderon, who is second vice president, interior minister and justice minister, has said Panama's leaders chose to keep Noriega's officers after the U.S. invasion in December because "to exclude them would be to judge them categorically, and not as individuals."

Special prosecutor Rodrigo Miranda charged Capt. Leslie Loaiza, head of the Judicial Police Academy, with involvement in the kidnap-killing of Marcos Rodriguez Justines, 3-year-old nephew of former Col. Marcos Justines, who was Noriega's second in command and now is in jail.

Officials say the apparent reason for the abduction was to force Justines, jailed on charges of helping steal $47 million in a bank scandal, to share the money. Why the child was killed is uncertain.

Forty-seven other other Noriega officers are jailed on charges ranging from misdemeanors to murder.

Noriega took refuge in the Vatican Embassy, but surrendered to U.S. forces Jan. 3 and now awaits trial on drug charges in Miami.

Arias said many Panamanians had suggested "firing everyone and recruiting from zero." On the second day of the invasion, he said, the leadership had to decide between that and issuing "a call to service on new terms."

Forming an entirely new military and police force would have meant asking U.S. soldiers to remain three to five years while it was done, Arias said.

Mario Rognoni, a legislator from Noriega's Democratic Revolutionary Party, said: "the idea of demilitarizing the country is an error because a modern state must have the necessary elements of security."

He said Panama is made vulnerable by its location and the fact that it will assume control of the Panama Canal at the end of the century.

For more than two decades, the Panama Defense Forces were responsible for all military and police functions, which now are under civilian control

This year's military budget is $80 million, about $70 million less than under Noriega and only 3.5 percent of the total national budget.

Several specialized battalions Noriega controlled have been disbanded, along with six schools or bases generally used for military instruction. A civilian police academy is in the planning stages.

Panama's air force is run by the National Air Service and 12 of its more costly planes are assigned to the Treasury Ministry. The navy and marines no longer exist.

"There will be nobody in uniform in charge of all services," a role reserved for the civilian president, Arias said.

He said a commission concluded the ratio of security forces to citizens should be 4 to 1,000, meaning 8,000 officers, but that Panama needed 12,000 because of its forests and special maritime needs. The commission was made up of security officials from Spain, Argentina and Costa Rica, which disbanded its army more than 40 years ago.

Noriega's Defense Forces numbered about 15,000.

Evangelicals turn tide for Peru's Fujimori

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Alberto Fujimori, the Roman Catholic son of Buddhist immigrants, counts on Protestant evangelicals to help him defeat novelist Mario Vargas Llosa, an agnostic, for the presidency of Peru.

Fujimori's parents immigrated to this predominantly Catholic country from Japan in 1934. He finished a close second to Vargas Llosa in a field of nine candidates April 8 and a runoff between them is scheduled for June 3.

Vargas Llosa, an advocate of free markets, was the favorite, but Fujimori surged late in the first campaign despite a shortage of advertising funds. Polls show the once-obscure agronomist leading his famous opponent less than three weeks before the runoff.

Evangelical Christians, responding to Fujimori's message of work, thrift and honesty, carried his campaign to areas the poll-takers never penetrated.

They spread the word in revival meetings, knocked on doors in Lima slums and the violent Peruvian countryside.

Raul Gonzalez, a sociologist, attributed Fujimori's strong support in regions where leftist guerrillas are dominant to the grassroots work of evangelicals and the diminishing presence of the Catholic Church.

"The evangelicals have been working door to door, almost person to person," he said. "That has been very important."

Evangelical denominations have grown rapidly in Peru. Sociologists say they offer moral and social discipline in a nation being driven to anarchy by economic crisis and the leftist insurgency.

About 1 million of Peru's 22 million people attend storefront Protestant churches and the number has doubled in five years, according to the churches. The largest denomination is the Assembly of God, which has 1,152 churches in Peru.

The evangelical movement also has grown elsewhere in Latin America. Efrain Rios Montt, a retired army general and evangelist who led a Guatemalan military government in the early 1980s, is a leading candidate for president this year.

Jaime Althaus, a Peruvian anthropologist and newspaper columnist, said the evangelicals reflect the conservatism of Change 90, embodying the "values of work, effort, savings that are at the base of grass-roots capitalism."

Fujimori recruited Carlos Garcia, a Baptist preacher, in November as a candidate for one of the two vice presidencies. Garcia later was elected president of the National Evangelical Council, an organization of Protestant churches ranging from Methodists to Pentacostals.

Evangelicals made up about one-fourth of the 200 congressional candidates for Change 90, Fujimori's party. Many young party workers belong to the movement.

Change 90 won about 50 of the 240 congressional seats April 8, but the official results have not been announced. Fujimori got 30 percent of the vote for president, two points less than Vargas Llosa.

"The evangelicals like Fujimori because he is honest and he is the only truly independent candidate," said campaign worker Ricardo Massa, a born-again Christian.

Massa's uncle, Alejandro Rojas, is an evangelical minister and general secretary of Change 90.

Guillermo Yoshikawa, a Methodist minister and Change 90 congressional candidate, addressed a letter to the "evangelical public" urging churchgoers to support the party's candidates.

"No longer will we have to ask 'favors'," it said. "Our brothers in parliament will make sure that the rights granted us in the constitution become a reality for all evangelicals."

Catholic church officials claim Change 90 supporters sent flyers to convents, monasteries and groups of Catholic mothers urging people to vote against Vargas Llosa because he is an agnostic.

Tiny reptile's skull may bridge evolutionary gap

N.Y. Times News Service

Detailed scrutiny of a 260-million-year-old skull has convinced scientists at the University of Toronto that a reptile about the size of a modern house cat was probably a great-granduncle of the human race.

The skull, which was discovered in 1897 in Baylor County, Texas, has spent most of the years since it was unearthed in a drawer at the American Museum of Natural History in New York City.

Its discoverers, who named the animal Tetraceratops insignis, believed that it was an ordinary pelycosaur, a type of reptile that flourished during the Permian period before the rise of dinosaurs.

But Michel Laurin and his faculty adviser at the University of Toronto, Dr. Robert R. Reisz, have concluded that tetraceratops was actually a missing link that closes what had been a perplexing gap in the fossil record leading from primitive reptiles to man.

In an article being published Thursday in the British journal Nature, Laurin and Reisz report that previous examinations of the tetraceratops skull had failed to disclose its true nature because the fossil was mostly encased in rock that was difficult to remove.

They said their own painstaking study revealed that the skull actually belonged to an animal intermediate between the lumbering pelycosaurs and the later therapsids, active animals known to paleontologists as "mammal-like reptiles."

In fact, they said, tetraceratops is "the oldest known therapsid" and not, as was formerly believed, a pelycosaur.

Paleontologists agree that mammals belong to a lineage that stems from the pelycosaurs, but until the new report, there was a conspicuous gap in the line of descent.

Pelycosaurs played the same ruling role in the Permian period (from 280 million to 230 million years ago) that dinosaurs played in the later Triassic, Jurassic and Cretaceous periods.

A characteristic of many pelycosaurs was a high, sail-like ridge consisting of a frame of verticle bony spikes linked by a membrane of flesh.

Paleontologists do not agree about the purpose of pelycosaur sails, but many believe that the sails were used as radiators, to cool the animals' blood in hot weather, and to collect the warmth of the sun on cool days.

This explanation implies that pelycosaurs were cold-blooded.

Pelycosaurs seem to have been more active than many of their reptilian contemporaries, and one of the carnivorous forms of pelycosaur, the eight-foot-long, dagger-toothed dimetrodon, was probably the terror of its day.

From the pelycosaur line arose the therapsids, mammal-like reptiles that had faces and teeth resembling those of wolves. They were almost certainly warm-blooded and were probably covered with fur.

The therapsids themselves were eventually eclipsed by a later line of reptiles called archosaurs, a line that included the crocodiles and dinosaurs, but the small, furry descendants of the therapsids kept the protomammalian design alive until the demise of the dinosaurs opened new evolutionary niches for them that eventually led the way to man.

But the animal's teeth and palate, the shape and position of the holes behind its eye sockets, the mammal-like musculature of its jaw and other characteristics mark it as more advanced than pelycosaurs but less advanced than previously known therapsids.

The two scientists used a computer technique to compare the characteristics of fossil skulls to arrange various reptile types in a diagram called a cladogram.

Cladograms chart the proximity of animal groups to each other according to the number of similarities they share.

Child care legislation hits working, affluent families

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — While helping the working poor, a child care bill recently passed by the House of Representatives would take away some popular benefits for wealthier families where both moms and dads hold down jobs.

"This bill, as written, would curtail and not broaden child care benefits for many employees," said Ken Feltman, who is lobbying to change the legislation which is pending before a House-Senate negotiating committee.

Feltman, executive director of the Employers Council on Flexible Compensation, released a study recently showing that some firms say they would eliminate their child care programs rather than pick up the increased administrative costs the new law would require. That could hurt working parents on all income levels, he warned.

With considerable ballyhoo, the House passed the child care bill on March 29. It provides $27 billion over five years for expansion of Head Start, block grants to states who develop child care programs and subsidies for working parents with family incomes of $20,000 or less.

However, to offset the cost, the legislation would phase out child care benefits for about 2 million families with total household incomes of more than $70,000 — ending all child care tax breaks for families where the mom and dad together earn $90,000 or more.

The legislation targets two tax breaks favored by these more affluent dual-income families:

— The credit of 20 percent of child care costs in figuring federal income taxes. Higher income families get a maximum tax credit of $480 for one child in day care or $960 for two or more.

— An employer-provided benefit that lets workers set aside up to $5,000 in pre-tax funds in a flexible-spending account to pay for child care. To a family in the 28 percent bracket, the maximum benefit is a $1,400 tax break, more than the $480 to $960 they could get from claiming the tax credit.

The phase-outs were proposed by Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, and passed with little opposition on the House floor.

Families earning $90,000 a year or more "can take care of themselves" without a child care tax break, said Damon Tobias, legislative director for Stenholm. "That's the top two percent of all taxpayers so I'm not sure it places them in the middle class."

The phase-out starts at $70,000 a year in family income, the bill's opponents said. In some areas of the country, that's the combined salaries of two schoolteachers who each earn about $35,000 and struggle with providing day care for their children.

In addition, the legislation puts new paperwork burdens on employers with child care plans. For example, firms would be responsible for keeping track of the total income of employees and their spouses in determining how much tax-free income employees could put into flexible-spending accounts for child care.

The Employers Council on Flexible Compensation released a survey of 138 employers including 93 with dependent care programs. Of these 93, nearly half (47.3 percent) said they would cut back or eliminate the programs if the House child care bill passed.

The council is a lobbying group supporting 401(k) plans, "cafeteria" benefits and other elective compensation plans.

Tobias said he didn't know how the phase-out of benefits for affluent working parents would fare in the House-Senate conference committee. The child care bill passed by the Senate does not include these provisions.

Arkansas youth wins math competition

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Arkansas eighth-grader who entered the closing round of a math competition in last place out-figured his opponents in rapid-fire fashion Friday to win the National MATHCOUNTS finals.

Brian Jenkins, 14, of Malvern, Ark., gave the correct response of 10 when asked how many combinations of wins and losses are possible if a team is to win a series of basketball games, and if the series is won when one team wins three out of five games. He won the competition with that answer.

Jenkins correctly answered three of the last four questions during the fast-paced Countdown Round to top Matthew Crawford, 12, of Birmingham, Ala. The winner takes home an $8,000 scholarship, a gold medal, a personal computer and spends a week at U.S. Space Camp in Huntsville, Ala.

Runner-up Crawford took home a silver medal and a $6,000 scholarship, while third-place finisher Daniel Schepler, 14, of Beavercreek, Ohio, was awarded a bronze medal and $4,000 scholarship.

For the first time since the program began in 1983, the Countdown Round, which resembles a game-show, began with three students getting perfect scores on the written portion of the competition.

Odessa's Crockett Jr. High named 'Drug Free School'

Odessa did it. Why can't Midland?

Odessa's Crockett Junior High School recently was recognized by the U.S. Department of Education as complying with President Bush's Drug Free Model School program. We congratulate the faculty, staff, students and parents at Crockett for showing us it can be done.

N.A.B.'D. Survey, April 1990

More than 95 percent of parents interviewed said they would favor a school policy to permit Midland's public schools to meet the qualifications for President Bush's Drug Free Model School program. Ninety-seven percent said they believe there is a drug/alcohol problem among public school age children in Midland. Nearly 71 percent said they believe school discipline could be improved.

Here are some of the qualifications for a Drug Free Model School

- Strong emphasis on academic excellence
- Drug curriculum in grades K-12
- Strong parent involvement
- Closed campuses during school day
- Strong no-use requirement for athletic and co-curricular programs; no-use pledges signed by participants and parents

Let your school board member know that you support these important goals.

Wake Up Midland!

Cancer risk greater for mill workers

By Paul Recer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Flour mill employees who worked with grain pesticides for many years face a risk of cancer that can be nine times greater than the risk faced by other grain industry workers, according to a study reported Tuesday.

Examination of health records of more than 22,000 workers in the grain industry by the National Cancer Institute found flour mill workers were at sharply increased risk of developing leukemia, pancreatic cancer and non-Hodgkin's lymphoma.

"We have a suspicion that it is a result of pesticide exposure, but that isn't proven yet," said Michael C. R. Alavanja, an NCI researcher who supervised the study.

Results of the work were reported in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute issue dated Wednesday.

He said flour mill workers were twice as likely to have applied pesticides than were workers in other portions of the grain processing industry, and the excess numbers of cancer deaths "appears most striking among flour mill employees."

Alavanja said that in the last 40 years a variety of chemicals has been used at different times to control insects that infest the nation's stored grains. In the 1940s and 1950s, the industry commonly used DDT and hydrogen cyanide. Carbon tetrachloride, a known cause of cancer, was used until it was banned in 1985. Phosphine gas is now the most commonly use fumigant.

Phosphine, for instance, becomes a gas after it is applied to the grain and the chemical is allowed to escape before milling begins, he said.

Recent studies by other researchers have shown that workers exposed to phosphine experience some chromosome changes that could be related to some types of cancer. But Alavanja said it will take more study before scientists can say for sure that the increased cancers are due to any of the pesticides used in flour mills.

The NCI study included telephone interviews and questionnaires that probed the exact jobs that each worker held.

"We determined potential exposures to pesticides for each individual in this group by linking employee's work history to exposure information" provided by the companies, the study said. It was found that a wider variety of pesticides were used in the milling segment than in other portions of the grain processing industry. Also, said Alavanja, the study found that 31 percent of the flour millers applied pesticides routinely during their careers, compared with only 16 percent of all workers in other segments of the industry.

Harsh Penalty

DALLAS (AP) — University of Texas basketball coach Tom Penders thinks his one-game suspension and one-year probation for criticizing officials is harsh, according to an assistant coach punished with him.

The Southwest Conference office Thursday upheld its one-game suspension against Penders. Penders spent four hours in an appeal hearing before the SWC's compliance committee on Wednesday.

An assistant UT basketball coach who was punished along with Penders said the coach, who is in Hawaii, thought the penalty too harsh.

"He feels it's too severe," Jamie Ciampaglio, an assistant UT basketball coach punished along with Penders said Thursday. "He thinks it's a precedent that other commissioners and this conference obviously will have to live with."

■ Midland High's Bulldogs bare teeth in 19-4 area playoff victory over unsuspecting Burges.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

For El Paso Burges baseball coach Bob Osborne, the third inning of the Mustangs' 19-4 loss in Friday's first game of an area playoff series against Midland High at Angels Stadium might as well have lasted 24 hours.

That was when the Bulldogs capped a six-run second with a nine-run third to put Burges down by a 16-1 count with plenty of innings remaining. It was also when MHS hitters showed their patience, as Mustang pitchers walked in five runs on six consecutive bases on balls.

The win give MHS (21-9) a 1-0 lead in the best-of-three series, with Game 2 set for a noon start today.

"That third inning was a day. It seemed like we played the second inning on Friday and third on Saturday," said Osborne, whose troops fell to 24-4 for the season.

However, the second was the real point when the 'Stangs saw that their starting pitcher, Jesse Munoz, did not have what it took to handle the Bulldogs — at least on Friday. Munoz, an off-speed pitcher, saw MHS pound away in the second and the start of the third before Osborne jerked him with no outs in the third frame.

Bulldog pitcher James Madrid, who went the distance on the hill with 11 strikeouts to go 11-2 for the season, started the second with the first of his two doubles in the game. Munoz appeared to be working himself out of the jam, though, as retired the next two MHS batters.

But leadoff hitter Keith Gilbreath turned the tide when he singled in Ruben Almager, who was acting as courtesy runner for Madrid. Then Scott Melzer singled, and he and Gilbreath advanced another base when Burges left fielder Adrian Ceniceros mishandled the ball. Patrick Mowles watched four balls go by, to set up cleanup man Gabriel Salazar with the bases loaded.

Salazar stepped up and ripped a double to left-center to drive in three of his RBI on the day. But that was only a prelude of what was to come, as Will Sowders followed with a fence-clearing shot to the right side of the Angels Stadium scoreboard.

Munoz finally got out of the second, only to see MHS designated hitter Greg Galvan hit a wind-aided homer

Bulldogs eye area sweep

■ After Friday's area baseball laugher, MHS hopes a sweep is in today's plan, but the 'Dogs are wary of such talk.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

Today would be an excellent day for the Midland Lions club to conduct a broom sale, preferably near the entrance to Angels Stadium, say around noon.

That's where Midland High baseball fans will be gathering. And after Friday's 19-4 laugher over El Paso Burges in the area playoff opener, those fans will be expecting a sweep in the best-of-three series.

Those expectations were likely nurtured as early as the Bulldog's six-run second inning. They probably reached fruition as suddenly as MHS' nine-run third.

Midland faced three El Paso pitchers in the third inning, and two of them combined to walk five Bulldogs in succession — after the bases had already been loaded with a walk.

The nine runs lifted the score to an insurmountable 16-1 advantage, made James Madrid a winner of three straight playoff games and set the stage for the Mustangs' ouster from postseason play as expected by the fans.

However, Bulldog skipper Tim Whalen and his charges prefer a more wary, and respectful approach to today's clash at noon.

The 'Dog's Ruben Almager had a polite appraisal of the Mustangs, as courtesy runners would be apt to have.

"I think they're a much better team than they showed out there today," said Almager, who scored four times in Game 1. "They just really looked like the trip down here wore them out, but I'm sure they're a much better team than they showed so far."

Bulldog head coach Tim Whalen is taking nothing for granted. Sure his team pummeled Mustang pitching for 19 hits, including two-run homers by both Will Sowders and Greg Galvan. Yes, his charges demonstrated rare patience at the plate, earning 12 walks from four pitchers.

But Whalen has also seen double header sweeps, like last Saturday in Lubbock where his Bulldogs came back from a one-game deficit to defeat Lubbock Monterey twice and move into the area playoff.

And although MHS abused the majority of the Mustang staff for 19 runs — 18 earned — the Bulldogs have not seen Burges pitchers Robert Barrueta (6-0, 1.36 ERA) or Eric Vidal (7-1, 3.00

MC women take third national title

Staff Report

TUCSON, Ariz. — The Midland College women's tennis team clinched its third National Junior College Athletic Association title in five years Friday.

The Lady Chaps scored 39 points, five ahead of second place Cooke County. Tyler Junior College was third with 29 points.

MC's Alison Bradford was the only player to bring home dual singles and doubles titles.

In singles action, Sharla Barone, MC's No. 1 singles player, defeated Sinclair College's Chris Burkhart, 6-2, 6-4, becoming MC coach Joe Williams' first No. 1 national singles winner in his Midland career.

Barone faltered in doubles, though, combining with Janneke Garos to lose to Broward College's No. 1 duo, 6-3, 6-1.

Garos, at No. 4 singles, defeated Sophie Linghag, of Cooke County, 6-1, 6-0.

Bradford, at No. 3, defeated Cooke County's Suzanne Pollman, 6-1, 6-2. Bradford and Maria Vago teamed to defeat Broward in No. 2 doubles, 6-1, 6-2.

Vago and Mara Lencina were ousted in semifinal singles action on Thursday.

"I felt we would be able to win it all along," MC head coach Joe Williams said. "We had a little bit of a scare Thursday when we lost the No. 2 and 5 singles.

Steam up for No. 7

■ San Antonio and Portland need anything but added pressure from a seventh NBA playoff round.

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — San Antonio and Portland didn't need a pressure cooker of a seventh game to work up a sweat. Everyone's already a little steamed.

"If this were the best of 15, you might as well get some boxing gloves and put ropes around the court," the Trail Blazers' Clyde Drexler said of the Western Conference playoff that warmed up Thursday night in San Antonio when the Spurs evened the best-of-7 series at 3-all and forced Saturday's deciding game.

It was apparent in Game 6 that these two teams have had just about enough of each other.

First there was Drexler, who suffered through one of the worst games of his career, hitting one of 10 shots and scoring just four points before he was ejected in the third quarter when official Mike Mathis called him for a punching foul against Willie Anderson.

Drexler said the call was undeserved. He said he hit Anderson with his forearm because the San Antonio guard had been using excessive hand-checking. Anderson called Drexler a dirty player.

"Clyde is always giving out those cheap shots," Anderson said. "He was getting frustrated because he was having a bad night. He was doing a lot of crying and whining out there. I'll get him back someday."

During the grousing that followed Drexler's ejection, the two

Orioles crush Rangers, Witt

Associated Press

The Baltimore Orioles tied an American League record with eight consecutive singles — all hit softly — in a seven-run first inning against Texas pitcher Bobby Witt and crushed the Rangers 13-1 Friday night.

Witt (1-5) threw 44 pitches in the first inning but remained in the game until the fifth, when he walked David Segui with the bases loaded to force in the eighth Oriole run.

Witt threw 107 pitches in 4⅓ innings, yielding nine runs, 10 hits and walking three. He was charged with a ninth run when Bill Ripken hit into a forceout against reliever Gary Mielke.

Joe Orsulak homered off Mielke in the sixth inning and Segui had a two-run double in the eighth.

Dave Johnson (3-2) scattered eight hits as Baltimore snapped a three-game losing streak while handing Texas its fifth consecutive loss and 10th in the last 12 games. The Rangers scored in the seventh on Julio Franco's double and Pete Incaviglia's single.

Baltimore's eight straight singles tied the AL record set by the Washington Senators against Cleveland on May 7, 1951, and matched by the Oakland Athletics against Chicago on Sept. 27, 1981. The National League record is 10 straight singles.

The inning began with a leadoff walk to Phil Bradley and a forceout by Steve Finley. Cal Ripken then topped a roller toward third for an infield hit on which Scott Coolbaugh made no throw.

Orsulak and Randy Milligan blooped singles to right. Orsulak's single scored Finley with the first run and Milligan's hit brought Ripken home. Harold Baines mishandled the ball in right and Orsulak also scored on the error, with Milligan going to second.

Milligan stole third and scored when Mickey Tettleton hit a bloop single to center. Craig Worthington bounced a single through the right side of the infield and Segui hit a soft liner that dropped in front of center fielder Gary Pettis, driving in Tettleton with the fifth run.

Bill Ripken followed that with a pop that fell in short left for another hit, scoring Worthington to make it 6-0. Segui scored when Bradley, batting for the second time, bounced a single past the diving Coolbaugh for t hit No. 8.

Finley grounded out and Cal Ripken hit a long fly to center, the hardest hit ball of the inning, for the third out.

Royals 4, Yankees 1

Bret Saberhagen pitched a two-hitter for his second victory of the season and first in more than a month and batterymate Mike Macfarlane drove in all four runs with two doubles and a homer.

Saberhagen (2-3) had three defeats and two no-decisions since defeating Toronto 3-1 on April 14. But he gave up only a second-inning single to Claudell Washington and a seventh-inning double to Roberto Kelly while walking one and striking out four.

Macfarlane hit a two-out, two-run double in the second inning and led off the seventh with a home run off Tim Leary (2-4), his first homer of the season. He also doubled off Alan Mills in the eighth, driving in an unearned run that was charged to Greg Cadaret.

Indians 5, Mariners 0

Black (4-1) walked one, struck out two and reduced his ERA to 1.83 in pitching his first complete game and halting Seattle's four-game winning streak.

The shutout was the fifth for the Indians' staff but the first four were combined efforts. Black is 4-0 with a 1.06 ERA in 42⅓ innings at Cleveland Stadium.

Loser Erik Hanson (3-3), who yielded five runs — four earned — and seven hits in seven innings, walked Candy Maldonado leading off the Indians' fourth. Brook Jacoby doubled Maldonado to third and he scored on a groundout by Chris James. Keith Hernandez struck out but Sandy Alomar followed with a bloop single to score Jacoby for a 2-0 lead.

The Indians scored their other three runs in the fifth. Mitch Webster beat out a one-out bunt and went to third on Dion James' single. Maldonado's looping liner fell

Jacoby was intentionally walked to load the bases and Chris James grounded into a forceout, with Dion James scoring on the play. Maldonado also came home when second baseman Harold Reynolds threw wildly past first as he tried to complete a double play.

The Mariners' best scoring opportunity occurred in the first inning. They had runners at first and third on one out singles by Cotto and Alvin Davis but Jeffrey Leonard grounded into a double play.

Angels 4, Blue Jays 2

Donnie Hill homered, doubled and singled and last-minute replacement Jim Abbott scattered six hits over 6⅔ innings as the California Angels handed the Toronto Blue Jays their fourth straight defeat.

Abbott (2-3), filling in for Chuck Finley, who sprained his right ankle on the way to the SkyDome, allowed both Toronto runs. Abbott, pitching on two days' rest after lasting 1⅓ innings in a 13-5 loss to Milwaukee on Wednesday, was backed by four double plays.

Loser Dave Stieb (5-2) was tagged for four runs and seven hits in 3 1-3 innings.

The Blue Jays got the lead runner aboard in the first, second, fifth and sixth innings but the Angels turned a double play each time.

Twins 6, Red Sox 0

Rookie Tim Drummond and veterans John Candelaria and Terry Leach combined on a nine-hitter and Gary Gaetti drove in two runs with a homer and sacrifice fly as Minnesota blanked Boston for its 12th victory in 15 games this month.

In his first major-league start, Drummond allowed five hits, all singles, and struck out six, but lost a chance for his initial victory when he was replaced by Candelaria with runners on first and third and two out in the fifth.

Candelaria (4-1) retired Mike Greenwell on a fly ball and earned the victory as the Twins padded a 1-0 lead with three runs in the sixth and two more in the seventh.

Brewers 5, Athletics 0

Bill Wegman pitched his second career shutout, Dave Parker hit a pair of run-scoring doubles against his former team and B.J. Surhoff had a bases-loaded single in a meeting of American League division leaders.

Wegman (2-0), who was 0-5 lifetime against the Athletics, limited Oakland to six hits in his second start. He began the season in the minors recovering from 1989 shoulder surgery. Wegman walked three and struck out four.

The A's have lost five of their last six games.

Parker doubled with two out in the fourth and added another two-out RBI double in the fifth.

Parker, who played two seasons with the A's, helping them to World Series appearances in 1988 and 1989, signed with the Brewers as a free agent in the off-season.

Wegman pitched out of trouble in the fourth after singles by Rickey Henderson and Carney Lansford.

Tigers 8, White Sox 2

Cecil Fielder had three hits, including his major league-leading 15th homer, for Detroit.

The Chicago loss snapped the Sox' six-game winning streak.

Fielder, Mike Heath, Tony Phillips and Alan Trammell each drove in two runs as the Tigers extended their winning streak to four games and rookie Brian DuBois (1-2) earned his first major-league victory.

DuBois worked five innings and gave up eight hits, including a run-scoring single by Carlton Fisk in the first inning and Ron Kittle's sixth home run in the third. Ed Nunex pitched three scoreless innings and Jerry Don Gleaton one.

Loser Melido Perez (3-3) was knocked out in the third when Fielder doubled a run home. Fielder's home run in the seventh gave him 36 RBIs, also tops in the majors.

Longhorns rip Hogs; Rice falls

Associated Press

AUSTIN — David Tollison homered twice as the Texas Longhorns scored all 11 of their runs in the first three innings and went on to defeat the Arkansas Razorbacks 11-4 Friday night in the Southwest Conference postseason baseball tournament.

The Longhorns, 47-15 and ranked fifth nationally, are the only unbeaten team in the double-elimination tournament. Arkansas, 47-12 and ranked fourth nationally, will play Saturday against Houston, which eliminated Rice, 11-0, in an earlier game Friday. The Houston-Arkansas winner will play Texas at 7 p.m. Saturday.

SWC

Should Texas lose Saturday night, the tournament championship would be decided in a 2 p.m. game on Sunday.

The Hogs had taken 2-of-3 from Texas during the regular season en route to winning the championship.

Tollison, the All-SWC second baseman, is the conference's top run producer with 66 RBI and now has three two-run homers in the tourney and 12 for the season.

Clay King, returning to the lineup Thursday from a broken wrist, rapped out three hits and drove in three runs in front of 5,203 fans. King also had three hits in the Longhorns' 9-1 win over Houston Thursday.

Brian Dare was the winner, improving his record to 7-2 for the season.

The Longhorns, who have been in the tournament championship game 12 times in 14 years, pounded Hog pitching for 11 runs and 12 hits in the first three innings, chasing Arkansas starter Mark Swope (7-3) after 1⅔ innings.

After getting two runs in the first inning, Texas struck for five runs in the second on the strength of Tollison's first homer and a Johnny Walker solo shot. Tollison's second round-tripper capped a four-run third.

Kirk Piskor and Greg D'Alexander each had two hits of Arkansas' 12 hits.

Dejected Rice right fielder John Elerman rests on a squeegee during a rain delay of the SWC baseball tournament Friday, trailing Houston 6-0 at the time.

After Texas jumped off to a 7-0 lead, Arkansas got a run on the board in the second inning. Bubba Carpenter led off with a double and scored on Jeff Houck's single.

The Longhorns padded their lead to 11-1 in the top of the third. Piskor hit a solo homer for Arkansas in the bottom of the inning.

Houston 11, Rice 0

Ricky Torres went 5-for-5 and drove in three runs, and Ben Weber limited Rice to four hits as 19th-ranked Houston eliminated the Owls.

The start of the game was delayed for more than three hours because of rain, and play was halted again for 10 minutes in the bottom of the fourth inning, with Rice at bat and trailing 6-0.

The fourth-seeded Owls end their season at 33-29.

The Cougars jumped out to a 6-0 lead after four innings on the strength of seven hits, four for extra bases.

Torres, who has six hits in two tournament games, keyed Houston's four-run fourth inning with a two-run triple. Torres' five hits ties a tournament record set by Burk Goldthorn of Texas and Mark Machalec of Rice in 1981.

Fred Hinojosa's three-run home run in the sixth made it 11-0. Hinojosa, the Cougars' all-time leading hitter, and Keith Darter followed Torres with three hits apiece to head the Cougars 15-hit outburst.

Weber raised his record to 8-4, walked only one batter and fanned six. The sophomore has four complete games on the year and three shutouts.

John Polacek (11-9) was the loser after exiting in the fourth.

Angels plan damage suit

NEW YORK (AP) — The California Angels plan to file a grievance seeking damages from the New York Yankees over the Dave Winfield affair, New York Newsday reported today.

General Manager Mike Port said the grievance would be filed in the next few days. The Angels charge that Yankee owner George Steinbrenner's two-hour "air-clearing" meeting with Winfield on Monday was inappropriate and damaged their bargaining position.

The Angels traded pitcher Mike Witt to New York for Winfield last Friday but the outfielder refused to report, citing his right as a 10-year player who has spent the last five years with the same team to veto trades. The matter seemed headed for arbitration until Winfield agreed to the deal Wednesday when California offered a three-year, $9.1 million contract extension.

While the trade was in limbo, Steinbrenner met with Winfield, assuring him that he would be a fulltime player if an arbitrator ruled that he remain with the Yankees. The Angels, who were using a regular job as one of their incentives to get Winfield to report, referred to the Steinbrenner meeting as "tampering in its grandest form."

Steinbrenner said he saw nothing improper about meeting with Winfield, his longtime adversary during the last 10 years. "I was asked to meet with the player," he said. "And I got permission to meet with him before I did it.

"I just went to tell him what had happened and clear the air on some things.

Weather haunts Indy hopefuls

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Weather or not, the 33-car lineup for the Indianapolis 500 is going to be filled, somehow, sometime.

With a 70 percent chance of thundershowers today and 40 percent on Sunday, the final weekend of qualifications for the May 27 race were definitely in jeopardy.

That was hard to believe Friday as sunny skies and lighter winds finally allowed the drivers to rediscover — or in some cases find — some speed. Tuesday and Wednesday were virtual washouts because of rain and Thursday was too windy for anyone to go all out.

Rick Mears, a three-time winner and second-fastest among the first-weekend qualifiers, was the fastest of the day at 225.118. But Al Unser Jr., considered the most likely candidate to knock Mears' teammate, Emerson Fittipaldi, off the provisional pole when qualifying resumes, jumped back up to 224.955.

Those two topped 46 cars that made it onto the 2½-mile oval during the final full day of practice.

THE SIX-DAY hiatus in first-round qualifying did prove costly to Unser, whose qualifying engine blew Friday. The fast lap by his 1990 Lola was accomplished late in the day with a backup Chevrolet Indy V8 engine.

"We got about 300 miles on that qualifying engine and she blew up," he said. "That's the reason we weren't getting any 26s (226s). But the guys did a good job getting the car back the way it was.

"Emerson really put up some great numbers and that's going to be hard to get. The key to everything is just to make the show. That's more important" than winning the pole.

Asked if another weather delay would bother him, Unser said, "Nope. I've got the car working good enough right now that I can sit out anything."

Arie Luyendyk, another driver with a shot at the front row, had his Lola-Chevrolet up to 223.586, followed by Fittipaldi, working on his race day setup, at 222.668.

Luyendyk, from the Netherlands, said, "The wind was a key factor in slowing us down up until 4 o'clock. I'm ready. I did four laps at 220 and there's more there."

Rain shortened two days of qualifying to just 86 minutes last weekend, leaving 15 cars qualified and 15 more still eligible to try for the pole. That left Fittipaldi's record four-lap average of 225.301 daunting but possibly vulnerable.

Others with at least a shot for a front row berth include former winners Danny Sullivan, Tom Sneva and A.J. Foyt.

Foyt, looking for a record 33rd consecutive Indy start, got up to 218.803, while Sneva was up to 216.836 and Sullivan 215.848.

Struggling Ben Crenshaw
...hitting to the Colonial lead

Crenshaw assesses self-imposed hurt

FORT WORTH (AP) — Ben Crenshaw battled back from a pair of penalties on one swing and gained a share the lead Friday after two rounds of the Colonial golf tournament.

But for a losing skirmish with the rule book on the 12th hole at the Colonial Country Club, Crenshaw would have a two-shot advantage over Russ Cochran at the tournament's halfway point.

As it was, a self-imposed penalty and another assessed a couple of holes later turned Crenshaw's potential 63 into a 65 and left him in a tie for the top spot with the left-handed Cochran at 134.

Crenshaw, who won this tournament in 1977, was addressing his ball in the 12th fairway when it moved in the gusty winds.

Crenshaw, one off the pace at that point, promptly called a one-stroke penalty on himself.

"The ball must have been on a little tuft of grass, because when I soled my club, it moved a good three inches toward me," he said.

Crenshaw hit into a greenside bunker, then holed a 50-foot sand shot and marked it down as a par-4.

"I'm thinking it's one of the great pars I ever made," he said.

But two holes later he was discussing the incident with Tournament Director Mike Shea of the PGA Tour and the official asked Ben if he had replaced the ball in its original position after it moved.

No, Ben said.

Add another, Shea responed.

Crenshaw did. He took three swings on the hole, thought he had a par-4 and eventually settled for bogey-5.

He then birdied the 16th and 18th to tie Cochran at six under par.

"I'd put this among the three or four best rounds I ever played," Crenshaw said.

"And it was one of the most emotional I ever played.

"I was up because I was playing so good. Then I was down when the ball moved. Then I was up when I holed the sand shot, then down again when I found out there was another penalty.

"It's a round I'll remember the rest of my life — every shot," he said.

He also will remember a rule he didn't understand.

"I thought when the ball moved you just went ahead and played it. I didn't know you had to replace it. I didn't know the rule," he said, then ruefully added:

"But I do now.

"Thankfully," he said, "I got the right score down before I signed the card."

Former U.S. Amateur champion Billy Mayfair came on with a 68 and was one stroke back of the co-leaders at 135.

CHAPS: Third national crown

(From 1B)

"I think this team is very much like the one in 1986. The top four positions are stronger, but the team is not as strong. We felt like we could win it going in (in '86), whereas '88 was a surprise. I thought the competition was weaker this year, and we were stronger going in."

The Lady Chaps have won national titles in three straight even-numbered years — 1986, '88 and now '90.

The Midland College men begin their quest for the national title Sunday when action begins in Tyler, Tex. Championship round play is May 26 in the men's division.

Richard grabs LPGA lead

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Deb Richard, a self-proclaimed wind player, fought 20 mph gusts Friday to grab the second-round lead in the LPGA's Pat Bradley International.

After teeing off in the afternoon, Richard struggled through windy conditions for the second day in a row on the front side of the par-72, 6,250-yard Willow Creek Golf Club course. But she put her game together on the final six holes of the back side, recording four birdies.

The five-year tour veteran, who didn't lead an event last season, was on top with 15 points in the modified Stableford scoring system. Richard's 10 points during Thursday's first round was good for second place.

Barb Mucha, who has never finished better than fifth in her four seasons on the women's tour, was three shots back. Sherri Steinhauer jumped into contention with six birdies and is in third with 11 points.

Sherri Turner and Allison Finney were tied for fourth with 10 points.

Defending champion Robin Hood missed the cut after coming in at minus three, as did fourth-leading money winner Ayako Okamoto, who finished at minus two.

This week's scoring system awards points for birdies and better and subtracts points for bogeys or worse.

Perret in Preakness spot

BALTIMORE (AP) — Craig Perret is a jockey on the spot, and Pat Day put him there.

Perret will be a focal point of Preakness coverage Saturday as the rider of Kentucky Derby winner Unbridled, a colt Day rode before deciding that Summer Squall would be his Derby mount.

"Hindsight is 20-20," said Day, whose view of the Derby was a rear view of Unbridled, who was 3½ lengths ahead of Summer Squall at the finish. "I'm still confident of my choice. I still wouldn't trade places with Craig."

That one choice Day doesn't have anymore.

Trainer Neil Howard was still confident of Summer Squall's chances even though a trickle of blood was noticed coming from the colt's nostril after a strong gallop on the Pimlico track Friday morning.

"He's done it a couple of times," Howard said. "It's a three-or four-minute type of thing — nothing to worry about."

Summer Squall has raced and worked on the diuretic Lasix since he bled during a workout in February. He was not on the medication for the gallop on Friday.

Cot Campbell, who manages the partnership that owns the colt, said Summer Squall bled slightly a few days before he won the Blue Grass Stakes April 14 at Keeneland.

Besides Summer Squall, also racing on Lasix are Unbridled, Music Prospector, Land Rush, Fighting Notion and J.R.'s Horizon. Mister Frisky, Kentucky Jazz and Baron de Vaux will be drug free.

Unbridled was the 7-5 early favorite for the 1 3-16-mile race, but the Preakness does not appear to favor his one-run style of coming from off the pace.

Summer Squall, the second choice at 2-1, is likely to be close to the pace, whiled Mister Frisky, who finished eighth as the Derly favorite, is likely to be on the lead before the race is very old on a track that favors speed.

"On this track speed goes, and it's bye-bye baby," said Laz Barrera, Mr. Friskey's trainer.

If that's so, the question is how it might affect Perret's strategy with Unbridled. He has been quoted as saying he might have to make adjustments.

In the Derby, Unbridled was able to come from off a very fast pace with a clear run that swept him past Summer Squall in the upper stretch.

Barrera and jockey Gary Stevens would like to dictate a slower pace Saturday, which might force Perret to be closer to the lead than he would like to be.

"I've done my part, now it's up to Craig," trainer Carl Nafzger said. "Craig Peret will have to read this race and ride this race — and that's it. It's a jockey's race."

Not so, said Barrera. "This is a horse race. If you don't have a good horse, the jockey can't win. The best horse will win here."

Derby winners have won the Preakness in two of the last three years — Alysheba in 1987 and Sunday Silence last year.

The last beaten Derby favorite to win the Preakness was Snow Chief in 1986. He finished 11th in the Derby.

If all nine 3-year-olds go to the post at 4:32 p.m. CDT, the 115th Preakness will be the richest with a purse of $686,000. The winner gets $445,900.

ABC will televise live from 3:30-5 p.m.

Cubs blank struggling Astros

Associated Press

Andre Dawson drove in three runs and rookie Mike Harkey pitched eight strong innings Friday night as the Chicago Cubs, despite a rare error by second baseman Ryne Sandberg, beat the Houston Astros 7-0.

Sandberg's record streak of 123 games without an error ended with a wild throw on Eric Anthony's grounder in the fourth inning. He had handled 582 chances without a mistake since an error last June 20, and his consecutive games and chances set major league records for infielders, excluding first basemen.

Dawson increased his National League-leading RBI total to 35 with a two-run double and a run-scoring single. Chicago sent the Astros to their 10th loss in 12 games.

Harkey (4-1) gave up six hits, walked three and struck out four. He has never pitched a complete game in the majors, and Mitch Williams worked the ninth. Bill Gullickson (2-3) gave up five runs on six hits in 1 1-3 innings.

Dawson and Dwight Smith hit RBI singles in the first inning. The Cubs made it 5-0 in the second on run-scoring singles by Sandberg and Shawon Dunston and a sacrifice fly by Mark Grace.

Dawson hit a two-run double in the fifth after Sandberg walked and Grace singled.

Sandberg's error came on a grounder by Anthony that deflected off the glove of Grace at first base. Sandberg fielded the ball about 20 feet from first base, but threw wide of Grace.

Reds 1, Cardinals 0

Paul O'Neill homered with two outs in the ninth inning.

NBA's ping-pongs search for millions

NEW YORK (AP) — Ping-pong balls are often used to determine who wins millions in state lotteries.

When the NBA inaugurates the use of ping-pong balls in its annual draft lottery Sunday, it's not certain the winning team will get a basketball player worth millions.

Syracuse senior Derrick Coleman is considered the most likely No. 1 choice in the NBA draft on June 27, but as Dallas Mavericks general manager Norm Sonju said, "I don't see any of the lottery teams bringing a uniform with his name sewed on the back."

Coleman, a 6-foot-10 forward, is the most highly regarded big man in a draft that could be otherwise dominated by perimeter players such as Gary Payton of Oregon State, Dennis Scott of Georgia Tech, Chris Jackson of LSU, Kendall Gill of Illinois and Rumeal Robinson of Michigan State.

"It looks like Derrick Coleman's the best player out there," New Jersey Nets vice president Willis Reed said. "I don't see anything out there that would change that."

At least in theory, the Nets will benefit most from the new "weighted" lottery.

That's where the ping-pong balls come into play, because the worst teams will get more balls in the lottery drawing. The best teams, Seattle and Atlanta, will get only one or two balls out of 66 in the hamper.

In previous years, all the lottery teams, regardless of record, had the same opportunity to win the No. 1 draft pick.

The Nets, with a league-worst 17-65 record, will have 11 balls in the hamper. A pre-lottery drawing between Miami and Orlando, both 18-64, will determine which team will get 10 balls and which will get nine.

Charlotte (19-63) will get eight balls, Minnesota (22-60) seven, Sacramento (23-59) six and the Los Angeles Clippers (30-52) five.

Dallas is the only playoff team in the lottery because it acquired the first-round pick of Washington (31-51) in a 1986 trade for Jay Vincent. So the Mavericks will get the Bullets' allotted four balls.

Golden State (37-45) will have three balls and Seattle and Atlanta, both 41-41, will have a drawing to determine which will get one or two balls.

Like previous years, the lottery will determine the first three picks. After that, the draft order of the remaining eight teams in the 11-team lottery will be according to record.

Minnesota, the best team this season among the four expansion franchises, is happy to be close to the middle in the weighted lottery.

Although the rules change severely damages his chance for a high pick, the Mavericks' Sonju said the weighted lottery is the fairest system.

"This is exactly the way it should be," Sonju said. "Under the old system, a team that needed the first pick desperately had the same chance as a team that was basically solid but had missed the playoffs because of injuries. That happened the first year when the Knicks got Patrick Ewing and Golden State, despite a horrible record, picked seventh.

"In this case, I wear my NBA hat rather than my team hat. This system is fairer."

Graf pulls rally over Meskhi

WEST BERLIN (AP) — Top-seeded Steffi Graf of West Germany fell behind early against Leila Meskhi of the Soviet Union, then won nine straight games and advanced to the semifinals of the German Open women's tennis tournament Friday.

Graf lost serve in the third game and trailed 2-1 and then 4-2, but after that, she was not troubled by Meskhi, easing to a 6-4, 6-1 victory.

Graf's semifinal opponent will be another Soviet, No. 8 seed Natalia Zvereva, who beat No. 9 Judith Wiesner of Austria 6-7, 6-0, 6-4.

In other quarterfinal matches, second-seeded Monica Seles of Yugoslavia overpowered sixth-seeded Conchita Martinez of Spain 6-0, 6-3, and 16th-seeded Sandra Cecchini of Italy upset No. 10 Nathalie Tauziat of France 7-6, 6-3.

"I tried to rush too much at the start," Graf said after her 60-minute victory. "I needed to be more patient and then everything was OK."

Graf's victory stretched her winning streak to 65, leaving her only nine short of the record held by Martina Navratilova since 1984.

Victory at this event and the French Open, which begins May 28, would enable Graf to tie the record.

SPURS: Backs to the NBA wall

coaches, Larry Brown of San Antonio and Rick Adelman of Portland, exchanged heated words.

And there were three double-technical fouls called because of shoving matches involving Frank Brickowski and Mark Bryant, Sean Elliott and Jerome Kersey, and Buck Williams and David Robinson.

The Williams-Robinson matchup has been especially rough.

Because of injuries to centers Kevin Duckworth and Wayne Cooper, Adelman is forced to put the 6-foot-8 Williams, who was named Tuesday to the NBA's all-defensive team, against the 7-1 Robinson.

Williams believes that physical play is the only way to counter Robinson's huge size advantage.

"I think it has been a very physical series with two competitive teams," Adelman said. "And now the seventh game is what it comes down to, and I am sure both teams will be ready to go."

Then there are the fans, who have played a major role in elevating the emotional level of the home teams.

The Blazers are confident that will make the difference Saturday. San Antonio has lost 12 in a row in Portland since 1986 and is 0-5 there this season. The Blazers are 5-0 at home in the playoffs.

"The pressure is definitely on them now," Portland's Terry Porter said. "We just need to go out and execute and we'll be all right."

But the Spurs don't feel that way.

"We've got the advantage," Elliott said. "We've put a lot of pressure on them time and time again. They've beaten us three times up there. I think we owe them one."

The Spurs nearly ended their Portland losing streak in Game 5 Tuesday night, when they overcame a 22-point third-quarter deficit before falling 138-132 in double overtime.

"We've played so much better in these last four games than we did in the first two," Robinson said. "That's got to be frustrating for them. They've got to be real tired of us."

For the first time in the playoffs, Portland closed its practice to the media Friday.

Cooper's status remained uncertain. He has missed the last three games because of back spasms and illness that resulted from anti-inflammatory injections he was given this week.

Duckworth has missed the entire series with a broken bone in his right hand. He may be able to play Tuesday night in the opener of the Western Conference finals, if the Blazers win Saturday. Backup power forward Mark Bryant continues to be hobbled by a sprained ankle, but he is expected to play Saturday.

"It's going to come down to who wants it the most," the Spurs' Terry Cummings said, "whether we want to keep playing or go home for the summer. I want it bad."

Italian Open set for semifinals

ROME (AP) — It's only fitting that the Italian Open has come down to a showcase for the world's finest clay court players.

Andres Gomez of Ecuador, Emilio Sanchez of Spain, Thomas Muster of Austria and Andrei Chesnokov of the Soviet Union moved into the semifinals of the $1.28 million clay court event Friday.

Gomez, the No. 3 seed, needed less than an hour to beat unseeded Omar Camporese of Italy 6-1, 6-2. Sanchez, seeded fourth, defeated Guillermo Perez-Roldan of Argentina 7-6 (7-5), 6-2. Muster, No. 10, overcame unseeded Guy Forget of France 6-2, 3-6, 6-3, and No. 8 Chesnokov showed his mastery of the slow red clay at the Foro Italico by eliminating defending champion Alberto Mancini of Argentina 7-6 (7-3), 6-0.

The first set between Chesnokov and Maninci lasted one hour, 25 minutes, and featured blistering baseline rallies, acrobatic gets and head-to-head exchanges at the net. But after Chesnokov won the tie-breaker, Mancini appeared to lose his desire. He won only 10 points in the second set, which lasted just 24 minutes.

"I definitely had a letdown after the tiebreaker," Mancini said. "We ran a lot in the first set."

In Saturday's semifinals, Chesnokov will play Sanchez and Gomez will face Muster.

Gomez became the title favorite after the top two seeds, Americans Brad Gilbert and Aaron Krickstein, were eliminated in the third round Thursday.

Winner of the Italian Open in 1982 and 1984, Gomez has compiled an outstanding clay court record of 15-3 this year. He has won tournaments in Barcelona and Madrid.

Bulldog hurler James Madrid lifted his record to 11-2 with a 19-4 victory over El Paso Burges in Friday's area playoff opener. Madrid also hit two doubles in the game.

ERA).

"I expect it to be a lot closer tomorrow," admitted Whalen, who was unable to explain how his team could score 19 runs off a team that boasted a 24-3 record.

"I guess we were just on and they weren't. But I do know they have some pride. They'll come back and play. This series is not going to be a cakewalk."

"That man (Burges head coach Bob Osborne) didn't coach 20 years and not know what he's doing. He's got some pitchers left, and the ones that threw today didn't get so much work that they couldn't come back tomorrow if needed," he said.

"It's definitely not over yet."

It will be if Midland batters come close to their production of Friday. Five Bulldogs had doubles, Madrid had two, and Gabriel Salazar's two-bagger cleared the bases in the second for three of his game-high six RBI.

Every Midland player either scored a run or knocked one in, and four had three-hit games, including No. 1 and 2 hitters Keith Gilbreath and Scott Melzer. Catcher Patrick Mowles scored three times for MHS.

After the Bulldog's big third inning, Burges countered with three runs in the top of the fourth. But Madrid had been cooling off during the onslaught that Coach Osborne would later tell reporters had seemed not like an inning, but "like a week."

"It's tough to keep your mind on the game when you have that big a lead," said Whalen.

But Madrid was rescued from his four hit, one walk inning when Brian Conaway gunned down Zivan Snively at third for the last out. The junior right-hander allowed just one baserunner over the last three frames.

Also, Madrid, while holding the Mustangs at bay with an eight-hit, 11-strikeout effort, is considered Midland High's No. 2 pitcher behind Salazar (10-5) who will pitch today's first game.

That, coupled with the high expectations of the home crowd, could make brooms move faster than the one under the Wicked Witch of the West.

BULLDOGS: Play again today

to bring Osborne out of the dugout. Burges tried Mark Bustillos and Ceniceros on the hill, but they could not retire a Bulldog batter and issued the six consecutive walks. Sophomore Dan Beck finally came over from first base to complete the game with six walks and three strikeouts.

Gilbreath, Sowders, Mowles and Madrid all ended the game with three hits, while Sowders was a perfect 3-for-3 with a pair of walks. Additionally, every Bulldog to play — except for Madrid — crossed the plate at least once. The only reason Madrid did not score was because Almager ran for him every time he reached base.

Those numbers were testament to Osborne's assessment that 'Dogs are the best-hitting ballclub Burges has faced all year.

"Also, we kind of got into a situation where we didn't want to use our whole staff in one ball game. We would like to be able to be in the game tomorrow," Osborne said.

"Coach (Tim) Whalen said before the game we needed to watch the curveball against Munoz. That's all we hit in batting practice. In the first he got me to swing at a low curveball and after that I got kind of mad and started concentrating," said Salazar, who earned at least one RBI in four of his five at-bats.

"They were pressure situations (with men in scoring position) and after last week's win over Lubbock Monterey we feel like we can handle pressure," he said.

"We hit the ball pretty hard today, and they gave us some pretty good pitches to hit. It was just one of those deals where we were hot today," Whalen said.

Salazar (10-5) is expected to be on the mound for MHS in Game 2 today, with Madrid coming back for Game 3, if it is played. Burges still has two pitchers who did not throw Friday, with Eric Vidal (7-1) a possible starter for Game 2. Osborne may also rely on Robert Barrueta (6-0, 1.36 ERA).

"Even the New York Yankees get beat bad occasionally. We'll come back," Osborne said.

"I expect tomorrow we'll see a lot closer ball game. They've got some pride about them and something to prove," Whalen said.

Del Valle dumps Cooper with late rally

Staff Report

ABILENE — El Paso Del Valle scored five runs in the sixth inning to post a come-from-behind 7-5 win over Abilene Cooper in the first game of an area baseball playoff series here Friday.

The teams meet again at noon today. If Cooper wins, the teams will play a third game immediately.

Today's champion will face Arlington Martin in the regional round next week. Martin, 20-9, features University of Texas signee Todd Van Poppel, a right-handed pitcher who may be one of the top picks in the upcoming free-agent draft.

Cooper, 18-8, got off to a hot start with three runs in the first inning and another in the second before Del Valle pitcher Moises Pereyra, 7-2, settled down to blank the Cougars until Steve Plemons' solo home run in the seventh.

Cooper ace Scott Jenkins was touched for a pair of unearned runs in the second , but allowed only one hit until a disastrous sixth inning.

Carlos Chavez led off with a pinch-single, Jenkins threw the ball into center field on an attempted force play and Ruben Estrada beat out a bunt single to load the bases.

Jenkins struck out to next two batters, but No. 9 hitter Danny Chavira walked on four pitches to force in a run, and Baldo Carrillo followed with a three-run double to put the Conquistadores, 18-6-2, ahead.

Pecos drops Estacado 13-5 to take series lead

Staff Report

Pecos dropped Lubbock Estacado 13-5 at Angels Stadium Friday to take a 1-0 lead in a best-of-three Class 4A area baseball playoff.

The Eagles exploited the pitching of Cruz Abila and four Matador errors to build on the 5-3 lead they took in the fourth inning.

In the first inning Abila allowed a double to Dion Thompson and walked three more Estacado batters to give the Matadors a 3-0 lead. But then he settled down and faced only two more than the minimum number of batters the rest of the way. None of the Matador runs were earned.

Meanwhile, Pecos batters pounced on Estacado starter Cory Flores, with three runs in the fifth and sixth each. Flores eventually gave way to reliever Chris Bryand in the sixth.

The win makes the Eagles 17-7 for the season, while Estacado fell to 18-8.

Pecos faces the Matadors again today at Angels Stadium, where the teams will face off immediately after Midland High and El Paso Burges have decided their 5A area playoff.

Oilers dismantle Bruins at the Garden

BOSTON (AP) — Jari Kurri drove Wayne Gretzky from the record books, Andy Moog from the game and Boston from its own home with a 2-0 Stanley Cup deficit.

Kurri scored three times, jumping three goals ahead of his former teammate with 92 for his playoff career, and added two assists as the Edmonton Oilers routed the Bruins 7-2 Friday night.

The Oilers can repeat their 1988 finals sweep of the Bruins and gain their fifth NHL title in seven years by winning at home Sunday night and Tuesday night.

Boston faces a monumental task achieved by just three of the 34 teams that dropped the first two games of a best-of-7 finals. Toronto in 1942 and Montreal in 1966 won titles after losing the first two at home. Montreal succeeded in 1971 after dropping the first two in Chicago.

But the Bruins, who had the NHL's best record and defense during the regular season, face huge odds as they seek their first title in 18 years.

Kurri's seventh career playoff hat trick gave him 10 goals in the current post-season. His power-play goal at 10:53 of the first period gave the Oilers a 2-0 lead, his goal at 4:21 of the second gave them the lead for good 3-2, and he finished the brilliant performance with another power-play goal that completed the rout at 7:27 of the third period.

The Bruins, who had won eight consecutive home games before the series, did a good job keeping Edmonton from shooting. But their goalies did a terrible job keeping the puck out of the net.

Actress, cancer crusader Jill Ireland dead at 54

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Jill Ireland, the British actress whose six-year battle against breast cancer made her a model of strength and determination, died Friday of the disease. She was 54.

Ireland

Miss Ireland, the wife of her frequent action movie co-star Charles Bronson, was with the actor and several of her children when she died at her hillside home at 11:30 a.m., said her publicist, Lori Jonas.

Though she appeared in many movies and starred in the TV series "Shane," she was better known for her highly visible work on behalf of cancer sufferers. In two books and frequent lectures on her battle with the disease, Miss Ireland spoke eloquently about self-respect and optimism in the face of devastating illness. She called herself a survivor, rather than a victim.

The actress, who appeared in such movies as "The Mechanic" and "Death Wish II," first underwent surgery to remove a cancerous right breast and eight lymph nodes under her arm in 1984. After a brief remission, the cancer spread to her lungs.

In April 1989, Miss Ireland began feeling pain in her shoulder. She was diagnosed with cancer that had spread to her lungs, hip, femur and thyroid.

When she took a turn for the worse Sunday, paramedics were called to the house and treated her, but didn't take her to the hospital.

Miss Ireland's life was filled with calamity. Jason McCallum, the son she adopted with first husband David McCallum of "The Man From U.N.C.L.E." fame, was a longtime drug abuser who died in November at age 27 of a drug mixture both injected and ingested. He was to have been married a few days later.

The actress wrote about fighting breast cancer in the best-seller "Life Wish." At the time of her death she was completing a third book, "Life Times," which profiled some of her friends.

Last month, she accepted a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame, beaming though obviously ill and wearing a wig because she'd lost her hair from cancer therapy. "This is really quite a thrill," she said in a hoarse voice.

As recently as two weeks ago, she managed to attend the wedding of her son, Paul McCallum. She had pledged to live to see him marry.

Funeral arrangements weren't immediately announced.

AP Laserphoto

Jill Ireland appears with her husband and frequent co-star, Charles Bronson, in a scene from 1982's "Death Wish II."

"We have moved into an arena where competition is the thing, and outdoing the other fellow may have surpassed the notion of serving clients, of seeking justice," Crier told members of the Grand Rapids Bar Association on Wednesday.

Ms. Crier, 35, said she decided to accept CNN's offer in October 1989 in part because she was frustrated by unnecessary litigation, including the case of a woman who sued her obstetrician because she suffered pain during childbirth.

"'It hurt,' she said. Well, I'm very sorry it hurt, but it dragged the doctor into court for several years in the process," Ms. Crier said.

In 1984, Crier became the youngest woman to be elected as a state district judge in Texas.

At CNN, she drew criticism at first for her lack of a journalism background. She said her skills in public speaking, legal writing and international relations helped her get the job.

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Beatle Paul McCartney gained a spot in the Guinness Book of World Records for the largest paid attendance at a public event, his publicist said Friday.

McCartney and his band performed for a crowd of 184,000 at the Maracana Stadium in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil on April 21.

He broke the record of 175,000 set by Frank Sinatra at the stadium on Jan. 26, 1980.

The Guinness Book acknowledged the record early this month, said Mika El-Baz, McCartney's New York publicist.

Everything keeps going corps' way

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Peace Corps is undergoing an impressive revival as increasing numbers of foreign governments seek the kind of low-cost expertise the volunteer agency provides.

"In the next 18 months, we will enter more countries than were entered in the last 18 years combined," says Paul Coverdell, the former Georgia state legislator who has served as Peace Corps director for the past year.

President Bush, who has stressed the importance of volunteerism, is a big booster of the Peace Corps. At a time of budget austerity, Bush is showing his commitment by asking for $181 million for the Peace Corps for 1991, a record $16 million increase.

Congress also has been supportive, partly because of the 20 former volunteers who have since become lawmakers.

Everything seems to be going the Peace Corps' way lately. Internationally, governments are showing less interest in ideology and more concern about solving human problems. For many of them, the Peace Corps is a logical place to turn.

The anti-communist evolution in Eastern Europe last year opened up a whole new region from which the Peace Corps had previously been excluded. When the agency was created in 1961, East bloc countries were asked whether volunteers would be welcome. The answer: No, thanks.

With English becoming increasingly accepted as the language of international business, what better agency than the Peace Corps to fill the need for classes?

"Everybody wants to learn English," Coverdell said. The Peace Corps also sends out experts in agriculture, urban development, engineering, health, nutrition and a new area suddenly in vogue: the environment.

"There's no institution ready to do so much for so many for so little," said Coverdell, an Atlanta businessman and long-time Bush backer.

After an auspicious beginning under President John F. Kennedy almost 30 years ago, the Peace Corps eventually fell into disfavor in the mid 1970s.

Enrollment dropped along with the budget. Watergate and the war in Vietnam made many qualified young people cynical about serving in a government agency, and applications fell. Some volunteers were haunted by charges they were CIA operatives disguised as do-gooders — even though Kennedy, early on, ordered the CIA to stay away from the agency.

President Nixon stripped the Peace Corps of its independent status, making it a part of an umbrella volunteer agency. In the process, the corps lost some of its unique identity. The agency became independent again in 1982.

The current enrollment, 6,500 volunteers and trainees, is still far below the late 1960s high of more than 15,000. But Coverdell predicts that almost 7,300 will be serving by the end of 1992.

When Coverdell, 50, took over in May of 1989, the Peace Corps was operating in 64 countries. By the end of this year, he expects that figure to rise to 76.

Volunteers will be at work in Hungary and Poland in the coming weeks and in Czechoslovakia in a few months. Initial contacts with Bulgaria and Romania have been made, and even Mongolia, one of the world's most isolated countries, has shown interest. Latin American countries that once shunned the Peace Corps are now welcoming volunteers.

"There is broad expansion on every continent," Coverdell said.

Obviously, the Peace Corps can have only a marginal impact on a given country. The Philippines historically has had the largest number of volunteers — there are about 300 there now — but poverty remains pervasive, afflicting well over half the population.

And as the first Peace Corps director, Sargent Shriver, sees it, the volunteers, not the host country, get more out of the experience than anyone.

As always, Peace Corps performance is impaired by some volunteers who view their two-year stint less as a commitment to the poor than as a chance to see exotic places. But not since the halcyon days of 1961 has the agency's image been as favorable as it is now.

Compared with those early years, when the ranks of the Peace Corps were dominated by young liberal arts graduates, the agency projects a grayer appearance nowadays, thanks to the 12 percent who are over 50.

The average age of all volunteers is 31, a more mature force than the one envisioned by Nixon who, campaigning against Kennedy in 1960, said the Peace Corps would become a discredited haven for restless youth.

DON'T STOP THERE...

What a disappointment! You had a tremendous drive, the perfect chip shot, and a brilliant putt. Then your ball stopped at the edge of the cup. The birdie you thought was yours didn't materialize.

Of course, it's only a game. It doesn't really matter. But blighted hopes are not always so trivial. What if something really big passes you by? Suppose you don't get that promotion, your child's scholarship is given to someone else, an important client changes his mind, or the stock market wipes out your investment? Where do you turn? Where do you find strength to meet life's disillusionments?

Spiritual values are constant. Fortunes may shift and change, but God's House stands firm. The truths and inspiration you find there give meaning, purpose, and stability to your life.

Be inspired this week.

Did Southern Baptists ask for criticism?

By George W. Cornell
AP Religion Writer

Southern Baptists, wondering what others think of them, invited representatives of several denominations to offer their assessments — and got a blunt and peppery earful.

It was a rare case of Southern Baptists getting an evaluation from beyond themselves.

They've stayed mostly aloof from the ecumenical movement for Christian unity, its interdenominational organizations and dialogues of mutual edification and criticism.

But that insular tendency to shun voices of others was thrust aside at a session held at a meeting in Nashville, Tenn., of the denomination's Historical Commission and Historical Society.

"If you do not find a way of altering your image of fighting and feuding, your biblical message will fall on deaf ears," said the Rev. Robert A. Dalton, Roman Catholicism's longtime observer of Southern Baptists.

He referred to the decade-long conflict between fundamentalists and moderates in the nation's largest Protestant denomination.

Asked to offer views of that church body, Dalton and representatives of the United Methodist Church and the American Baptist Churches had praise for some qualities but barbs for others.

The Rev. J. Richard Peck of the United Methodists deplored the impact on Southern Baptist seminaries of the denomination's long, internecine quarrel over whether the Bible is "inerrant" — without error in all fields.

The result, most mainline denominations would agree, is "that Southern Baptists have effectively amputated their academic community's major reason for being — a marketplace for inquiry," Peck said.

"It is a place for education, not indoctrination," he said.

The Rev. George D. Younger of East Orange, N.J., the executive minister of American Baptist Churches of New Jersey, said Northern Baptists see the Southern body as having "sat out" the civil rights movement.

He also noted these other images: "ecclesiastical super-organization," "mission imperialism," "theological obscurantism," "social quietism" and "denominational exclusivism."

However, a Southern Baptist church historian, the Rev. G. Thomas Halbrooks, said at a later session that despite impressions to the contrary, the "historic Baptist stance" favored relationships with other churches.

"Others have often perceived Southern Baptists as being isolated sectarians who consider themselves as having no need for relationships with anyone else," he said.

Some actions have upheld that "negative perspective," said Halbrooks, president of the denomination's Historical Society and a professor at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary in Wake Forest, N.C.

He said the 15 million-member denomination has varied roots, some of them such as the "colonial root" and "Eastern root" supporting cooperation with other denominations. On the other hand, he said, a "frontier root" and "Western root" stressed exclusivity as "the only true church" and joined with the provincial "Southern root" in becoming dominant.

"Southern Baptists may look to their Eastern and colonial roots and there find guideposts that can point the way out of the darkness of their provincialism into the brightness of the broader community of the Christian faith," he said.

In the earlier comments from other denominations reported by Baptist Press, Dalton, who for a decade has been the Roman Catholic observer at Southern Baptist conventions, said he admires their zeal and music.

But he said the in-fighting and preoccupation with church membership threaten to obscure larger social issues, while a "lack of ritual" and emphasis on "show rather than substance" may undercut genuine worship.

Dalton of Cincinnati, an educator and vice president of Glenmary Home Missioners who work extensively in the South, said: "What I see in Mr. or Mrs. Average Baptist sometimes saddens me. I see a conversion experience in danger of becoming only a ritual of 'walking the aisle.'"

In the South, Catholics "tend to view you defensively, with prejudice and with a certain amount of disdain," he said.

Church council unveils restructuring

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The nation's largest ecumenical body, faced with dwindling contributions from member churches, on Tuesday unveiled a reorganization plan designed to cut costs and weaken its governing board.

"We refer to it as a leaner, kindlier council," said the Rev. J. Martin Bailey, spokesman for the National Council of Churches.

The council represents 32 Christian denominations with 42 million members. Most major Protestant, Orthodox and Anglican religions sponsor the council to help further education, missionary work and other projects around the world.

The reorganization plan was presented on the first day of the semi-annual meeting of the council's 250-member governing board.

Bailey said President Bush "and his thousand points of light" led to tight finances and forced the reorganization.

Member churches are contributing less to the council because of inflation and the need to fund social programs once backed by the federal government, he said.

Under the plan, the council would combine into four units 11 divisions responsible for subjects ranging from overseas ministry to sacred music.

Bailey said the reorganization would remove most decision-making power from the governing board and give it to smaller boards overseeing the new units.

The governing board, however, still will set policy, elect officers and approve the council's budget, which in 1989 totaled $44.6 million.

Church leaders said the restructuring will make the council more efficient.

"We found that a lot of our costs, too many of them, were going for meetings and other administrative functions," Bailey said.

The council's Stewardship Commission, which develops fund-raising programs and helps local churches manage their finances, opposes the reorganization for fear it will lose power, said the Rev. E. Wayne Antworth of the Reformed Church of America, the commission's co-chairman.

The governing board is to vote on the plan Thursday. If approved, it will go into effect in 1991.

Also Thursday, the board is scheduled to vote on a resolution that would urge the Defense Department to withdraw troops from the Philippines by 1996.

Another would ask U.S. coffee producers to stop buying coffee from El Salvador, where six Jesuit priests were gunned down in November 1989.

Pastor from capital to address congregation

The Rev. William C. Howland Jr., senior minister of National City Christian Church in Washington, D.C., is the pulpit guest Sunday at First Christian Church, 1301 W. Louisiana. He will speak at both the 8:30 a.m. and the 10:30 a.m. worship services.

Howland

Howland has served as senior minister for National City Christian Church since 1977. The church is the national cathedral for the Disciples of Christ denomination.

A fellowship coffee to honor Howland and his wife will follow the 10:45 a.m. service.

This is the second special event for May — designated Home Missions Month — as First Christian Church continues its year long centennial celebration.

Howland is a native of Enid, Okla. He and his wife, Ann, are parents of Midlander Mary Hurt.

He holds a B.A. from Phillips University, a Master of Divinity degree from Yale University Divinity School, and honorary Doctorates from Texas Christian University, Bethany College, Phillips University and Lynchburn College.

Howland has served pastorates in Hustville, Ala., Hot Springs, Ark., Fort Smith, Ark., Longview, Texas, and Austin, Texas. He served as deputy general minister and president of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) in Indianapolis, Ind. from 1974-1977.

Children's musical focuses on 'Creation Sensation'

"Creation Sensation," a children's musical, will be presented at 10 and 11 a.m. Sunday at Kelview Heights Baptist Church, off North Big Spring at Scharbauer Drive.

The musical will be presented by the third through sixth grade choir.

The story is told from the perspective of a middle-grade child who is preparing an assigned speech for a science class on "How the Earth Began." At the opening, the child appears confused by the obvious discrepancy between the theories being taught and illustrated in the science textbook and the Biblical account of creation presented at church.

"A subsequent dream, filled with imaginative settings and costumes, fanciful characters, humorous dialogue and delightful Broadway-style music, brings both cast and audience to grips with some very hard questions," says a release from the church. "But the child awakens, prepared with solid scriptural answers and impressed with the awesome creativity of all-powerful God."

The musical is designed for old and young alike, the release says.

The church's pastor, the Rev. Frank Johnson, invites the public to attend.

Bellview celebrating 40th anniversary

Bellview Baptist Church, 1710 N. Big Spring St., is holding its 40th anniversary celebration Sunday.

The day also will mark the dedication of the church's new Christian Life Center. The Rev. Royce Measures will be the featured speaker for the building dedication. He is a charter member of Bellview and now pastors the Golden Acres Baptist Church, Houston.

Other guest speakers include the Rev. Johnny Law, Midland Baptist Missions director; former members Bill Measures and Donna Simpson; and former staff members Mark Stepherson.

Special recognition will be given to those who helped build the original sanctuary in one day. Bellview charter members also wil be recognized during the morning worship which begins at 10:50 a.m. Featured musicians will be vocalist Margaret May and trumpeter Hal Medley.

A barbecue lunch will be served after the morning worship service. Cost for lunch is $5 per person. For reservations call the church office at 682-9474.

The new building dedication will begin at 1:30 p.m. in the Christian Life Center.

The evening service will feature the children's choirs and will begin at 6:40 p.m.

The Rev. G.A. Magee invites the public to attend the anniversary celebration. A nursery will be provided.

Smugglers' tunnel found at Arizona-Mexico border

DOUGLAS, Ariz. (AP) — U.S. Customs agents on Friday uncovered a fortified tunnel under the U.S.-Mexican border and said it had been used to smuggle at least a ton of cocaine into this country.

"It was like something out of a James Bond movie," Customs spokeswoman Judy Turner said.

The tunnel was about the length of a football field and 30 feet underground, authorities said. They said the smuggling operation included a warehouse and elaborate entryways on both sides of the border.

Thomas McDermott, who heads the Customs Service in Arizona, told reporters that U.S. officials and members of the Mexican Judicial Police had arrested four members of the smuggling ring.

McDermott said they also confiscated the Agua Prieta, Mexico, house of businessman Rafael Francisco Camarena and two of Camarena's businesses — Douglas Building Supply and Douglas Redi-Mix Concrete.

The northern end of the tunnel was in a Douglas Building warehouse built eight months ago about 200 feet north of the fence that divides the two cities.

McDermott said the tunnel began in Camarena's house. The excavation was hidden in the family room beneath a concrete slab on which rested a pool table. He said that when an operator turned a small mechanism shaped like a spigot, an hydraulic lift boosted the slab, with pool table, about 5 feet into the air.

"It was a tremendously sophisticated operation," McDermott said. "This the most unique smuggling operation I have ever come across."

U.S. Customs agents look toward the Mexican side of an underground tunnel uncovered Thursday night. The 200-foot-long tunnel, extending from Douglas, Ariz., to Agua Prieta, Mexico, is believed to have been used to smuggle cocaine.

Ms. Turner said Customs had suspected the tunnel's existence and that agents used aerial surveillance to track the shipment of 2,258 pounds of cocaine with an estimated street value of $102 million from Douglas to a spot outside Phoenix on May 11.

Protests lead to Mills reversal

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Mills College trustees on Friday reversed their decision to admit undergraduate men, after two weeks of campus protests that shut down the 138-year-old school.

Cheers, tears of triumph and popping champagne corks greeted the announcement by board chairman Warren Hellman.

"All of you have had a lot of banners for us all week. Here's one for you," Hellman told a crowd of about 300 women as he unfurled a banner that read, "Mills — For Women. Again."

"I think we have all won," he said.

Two weeks ago, the trustees decided to admit males an undergraduates because of financial problems stemming from declining enrollment.

Alumnae raised $3 million during a seven-day telephone fund drive after a group of former Mills' students met with Hellman and offered a massive rescue effort.

"They made a bad decision and the community has risen to the occasion and given them a way to solve this problem they've created," Michelle Lawdaughter, a 1989 graduate, said before the reversal. "The mission of Mills College is to educate women."

Cathy Gildea, who graduated in 1987, said she talked to "hundreds of alumnae, and we're committed to making (the rescue plan) work."

She said the trustees were simply unaware of the resources that existed among Mills alumnae and hadn't taken advantage of them to keep Mills afloat as a women's school.

The rescue plan includes adding $10 million to the college's endowment and doubling the alumnae association's yearly gift to Mills.

Teachers voted by a 2-to-1 margin to ask Mills trustees to reverse the move and allow five years to see if changes in recruitment and curriculum could increase enrollment.

Protests swept the campus of the elite liberal arts college after the trustees' May 3 decision to begin admitting male undergraduate students in fall 1991 to boost enrollment and stabilize finances.

The switch to co-education had been under consideration for a year, prompted by declining enrollment and revenues and a desire to avoid dipping heavily into the school's $70 million endowment.

Wellesley seniors happy with Bush-Gorbachev ticket

WELLESLEY, Mass. (AP) — Now that Barbara Bush is bringing Raisa Gorbachev along to share the podium at the Wellesley College graduation, more students say they have someone with whom they can identify.

The big worry has become is the crush of reporters coming to the June 1 commencement.

The climate on campus Friday had changed from last month, when it was announced that Mrs. Bush would give the commencement address. Some of the 600 seniors protested then that the first lady is likeable but doesn't cut it as a role model.

About 150 of Wellesley's 2,200 students signed a petition that said Mrs. Bush "gained recognition through her husband's achievements," not her own, "which contradicts what we have been taught over our years at Wellesley."

On Friday, it was Mrs. Gorbachev, the wife of Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who was the talk of Cazenove Hall, a dormitory at the 120-year-old women's college. Students said they liked the fact that Mrs. Gorbachev, a former college professor, had a career independent of her husband's.

"I'm really excited," senior Angie Hickman, 21, of New York City, said as she chewed thoughtfully on her breakfast oatmeal. "She might have something more interesting to say."

The 58-year-old Mrs. Gorbachev is a former university lecturer with a doctorate in philosophy from Moscow State University. She met her future husband in a ballroom dancing class while he was in law school and she was a graduate student from Siberia.

Mrs. Bush dropped out of Smith College after her freshman year in 1944 to marry Bush, then a Navy pilot. Since then, Mrs. Bush, who turns 65 on June 8, has been a career homemaker, raising six children. She's also been a lifelong volunteer.

In recent years she has gained recognitions for promoting literacy and other causes, including the care of babies with AIDS.

Wellesley granted Mrs. Bush's request that she bring along Mrs. Gorbachev to speak while their husbands are holding their summit meeting.

It became official Thursday.

Anna Perez, press secretary for the first lady, said Mrs. Bush was "absolutely delighted" that her Soviet guest could come along.

The two first ladies will travel together to Wellesley on the second day of their husbands' four-day summit at the White House and Camp David, Md.

Hubble picture due on Sunday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Hubble Space Telescope is about to send its first picture to Earth.

Unless something unexpected interferes, the picture will be sent to the Goddard Space Flight Center in Maryland Sunday afternoon. NASA said it won't know the exact time until Saturday.

The image won't be much better than a similar view taken with much-less expensive telescopes from Earth. It won't have much scientific value either.

But, it will be the first photograph ever taken above Earth's obscuring atmosphere by a telescope of this size and complexity. Ground-based telescopes are hampered by airborne particles that absorb and distort incoming starlight.

"We will consider it a total success if the first picture that comes down is as good as a ground-based exposure," Ed Weiler, NASA's program scientist for the telescope, said Friday. "You'll hear a lot of cheering when that happens."

The $1.5 billion telescope, which has a 94.5-inch diameter mirror, was carried to an altitude of 381 miles by the space shuttle Discovery and left to orbit on its own April 25.

Tourists die in crash

BIG PINE, Calif. (AP) — A charter bus carrying German tourists rolled over on a mountain highway on Friday, killing one person and injuring 47 others, authorities said.

The crash did not involve any other vehicles, said Alice Huffaker, spokeswoman for the California Highway Patrol in Sacramento.

The bus, operated by Southwest Charter Co. of Phoenix, Ariz., was traveling state Highway 168 in mountains above the Owens Valley, which runs down the eastern flank of the Sierra Nevada range. It is the same general area where the nation's second-worst bus killed 21 people in 1986.

Father found guilty

WAUKEGAN, Ill. (AP) — A judge on Friday found a man guilty of first-degree murder in the sulfuric acid poisoning of his infant son in what prosecutors said was a scheme to sue a commercial baby formula manufacturer.

Ricky Irby Sr., 29, could face the death penalty.

Irby and the child's mother, Sheila Smith, both were charged in the death of Quinten Irby. The infant, who was 3 months old when he was force-fed sulfuric acid in 1984, lived for 27 months. He died in 1986.

Ms. Smith already has pleaded guilty in return for a 20- to 65-year prison sentence.

Studies go public

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said Friday it will release the long-secret health records of 200,000 people who performed some of the riskiest tasks in building nuclear weapons.

The information, dating to the start of U.S. atomic bomb building in the early 1940s, is considered by experts to be the nation's most detailed information about the long-term effects on human health of chronic exposure to low-level radiation.

The government has maintained that its weapons plant staffers are not exposed to appreciable health dangers, although some recent studies have indicated that the workers may be developing unusually high rates of cancers related to radiation.

A court-supervised group, the Three Mile Island Public Health Fund, sued the Energy Department for release of the documents in 1989 after the department rejected an earlier request for the data under the Freedom of Information Act. The group was formed after the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant accident in 1979.

North diary hints Bush was player in Iran-Contra

WASHINGTON (AP) — Newly released portions of Oliver North's notebooks suggest then-Vice President Bush may have played a role in pressing Israel to take partial blame for diverting Iran arms-sale profits to the Nicaraguan Contras.

As a private group released 1,200 pages of North's notebooks Friday, a new federal grand jury convened to continue the 3½-year-old criminal investigation of the Iran-Contra affair.

The grand jury will attempt to determine the precise roles of then-President Reagan and Bush, sources familiar with the investigation said.

Bush has said he did not know details of the Iran initiative until Dec. 20, 1986, and did not know of North's Contra resupply operation while it was in operation.

A North notebook entry from Nov. 25, 1986, the day the affair became public, refers to a telephone call to North from National Security Adviser John M. Poindexter and then states, "VP call Peres," Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres.

The entry adds that the "Contra connection" has been "discovered" and that it "wd be best if Israel wd accept that they were aware that some funds were diverted."

It is not known if any phone call between Bush and Peres was made that day or whether the possibility of making a call was brought up with Bush.

But Attorney General Edwin Meese in disclosing the diversion that day, put the responsibility partly on Israel. Meese said Iran arms sale money went directly from the Israelis into bank accounts held by the Contras. Meese's statements, which he made after interviewing North and Poindexter, drew immediate complaints from the Israeli government.

Peres called Meese later that day and said Israel had not paid anything into any Contra accounts. Peres "indicated that Israel ... was not going to take the blame for the diversion," the congressional Iran-Contra committees said in their final report in 1987.

On Air Force One en route to Dallas, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters: "We have nothing to add. This matter has been thoroughly investigated by congressional committees."

Told that Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., the House chairman of the joint committee that held Iran-Contra hearings in 1987, had said the newly revealed diary entries had not been examinaed, Fitzwater said: "I'll leave that for him to comment on.

"It's been looked into by independent counsel, congressional investigators. They spent $40 million to $50 million looking into this. There's nothing we could add at this point."

Israel had made three arms deliveries to Iran in 1985 with the blessing of the Reagan administration and had charged far in excess of what it had paid the Pentagon to replenish the arms. The diversion to the Contras apparently began with the November 1985 shipment of Hawk missiles, when unexpended funds wound up in accounts controlled by Richard Secord and Albert Hakim.

North and Poindexter may be called as witnesses before the grand jury at a later time, said sources close to the investigation, speaking on condition of anonymity.

■ Shortly after Panamanian Gen. Manuel Noriega's alleged involvement in drug trafficking was exposed in The New York Times, CIA official Duane Clarridge and North on Aug. 24, 1986, discussed a possible meeting sought by Noriega to discuss "cleaning up image."

Art world abuzz over $160 million sale

NEW YORK (AP) — A 74-year-old Japanese paper magnate owns the world's two most expensive paintings after landing Pierre Auguste Renoir's shimmering "Au Moulin de la Galette" for $78.1 million.

Saito told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Friday that he had not expected to win the auctions.

"They are world-class, wonderful works," he said.

After the van Gogh purchase, Saito had told the Yomiuri Shimbun newspaper: "It cost 5 billion yen (33 million dollars) more than I expected, but that's nothing. Next I want the Renoir."

The bidding for the Renoir started at $25 million and went up in increments of $1 million. Applause broke out as the winning bid, received by telephone, was announced.

Renoir painted two versions of "Au Moulin de la Galette" in 1876. The one offered for sale at Sotheby's was the property of Betsey Cushing Whitney, the widow of John Hay Whitney, the financier, publisher and former ambassador to Britain. A larger version hangs in the Musee d'Orsay in Paris.

Seventeen of the 70 lots sold for less than the pre-sale estimate and 12 were not sold because they failed to reach a minimum sale price set confidentially by the seller.

The total for the night still was $286 million, which Marion described as "a record sale in any way that you want to count it."

Marion rejected reports that the high prices paid for paintings in recent years may be softening. "It is a very solid market," he said.

"When you have a tremendous painting, like the van Gogh or the Renoir ... you're going to get extraordinary prices," Esterow said.

Otherwise, he said, "the market is correcting to a more realistic level" after the frenzied buying of the past few years.

At the Christie's sale where the van Gogh was sold, 24 of the 81 offerings went unsold.

Before Thursday's auction, the highest price paid for a Renoir was $17.7 million in April 1989 for "La Promenade"; it was bought by the J. Paul Getty Museum.

But art experts said no Renoir of the caliber of "Au Moulin de la Galette" has been on the auction block.

Six of the 12 most expensive paintings sold at auction have been bought by Japanese bidders, who are especially interested in the Impressionists.

Other important works sold Thursday at Sotheby's were three paintings from the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum. Wassily Kandinsky's "Fugue" sold for $20.0 million, Amedeo Modigliani's "Boy with a Blue Shirt" sold for $11.55 million and Marc Chagall's "Anniversaire" sold for $14.85 million.

Pan Am puts shuttle up for sale

NEW YORK (AP) — Pan Am Corp. on Friday put its Pan Am Shuttle service up for sale in an attempt to raise money for the operation of its biggest subsidiary, Pan American World Airways.

Pan Am has previously indicated it was looking for partners after coming off one of the worst years in its 62-year history.

The decision means that both of the air shuttle services carrying passengers along the heavily traveled Northeast Corridor may be sold. Developer Donald Trump said recently he was considering selling his Trump Shuttle.

Demonstrators outside the New York Supreme Court building in Brooklyn react after learning of the guilty verdict handed down to Joseph Fama. Fama was convicted in the 1989 slaying of Yusuf Hawkins in the Bensonhurst section of Brooklyn.

New York City mayor has yet to calm city's racial tensions

By Greg B. Smith
Hearst News Service

'We risked our lives to get you (Dinkins) to Gracie Mansion .... It is imperative for us to try and wake Dave up.'

— Rev. Al Sharpton, Black activist

NEW YORK — Deepening racial tensions in this city of immigrants are handing Mayor David N. Dinkins his first major challenge — one made more difficult by his position as the city's first black mayor, according to political observers and community leaders.

Dinkins has been in the national spotlight the last few days as he has tried to appease whites, blacks and Asians in weaving his way through a racial minefield.

He's had a few hits and a dropped a few balls, the sources say. Above all, his performance has highlighted divisions within the black community that was a key factor in his victory last fall. For the first time since he took office, Dinkins is under fire from his own people.

At the eye of the storm is the so-called Bensonhurst case, which came to a climax this week with split verdicts in the murder trials of Joseph Fama and Keith Mondello, both 19, two of eight men charged with the shooting death of black 16-year-old Yusuf Hawkins.

Hawkins died Aug. 23 in the mostly white Brooklyn neighborhood of Bensonhurst. Fama was convicted Thursday night of murder, weapons possession and discrimination. Mondello was acquitted Friday of murder but was convicted of rioting, unlawfully holding Hawkins, discrimination and weapons possession. The other six suspects face trial later this year.

Compounding the tensions in that case is a race-driven conflict in Flatbush, another Brooklyn neighborhood. There, a group of blacks are entering their fifth month of picketing a Korean grocery store because they claim the owner beat a Haitian customer.

When he campaigned last summer, Dinkins called himself the "great healer" and promised to lead the city's "gorgeous mosaic" that is New York City's diverse community.

He won by a slim 2 percent margin, relying heavily on black votes to put him over the top. Ironically, some of his loudest critics now are blacks.

Some are angry because Dinkins expressed sympathy to the people of Bensonhurst, who he said were unfairly painted as racist, and because he took the Korean side in the boycott, calling the protest action wrong.

The Rev. Herbert Daughtry, one of Dinkins' strongest supporters, called the speech "eloquent" but voiced concern that the mayor had showed support for the Korean grocery store owner. Daughtry noted that dozens of irate callers to the black radio station WLIB had blasted the mayor.

"In the black community, the feeling is we were not treated justly," Daughtry said. "The true reason why people are out there boycotting was not addressed."

Dinkins also attacked the Rev. Al Sharpton, a black militant, for trying to stir racial tension. Sharpton is best known for advising Tawana Brawley, the black teenager whose claims that she was raped by six white rapists were labeled unfounded by a grand jury.

At a news conference in Harlem's Cotten Club Friday, Sharpton fired back at Dinkins.

"We risked our lives to get you to Gracie Mansion," said Sharpton, adding that the mayor "has consistently decided that he wants to bash black people. It is imperative for us to try and wake Dave up."

One of Sharpton's allies, attorney C. Vernon Mason, had a stronger message for Dinkins: "What the hell do you think we elected you for? To ignore us?" he asked. "We're going to work to expose you. David, you're not a racial healer. We don't know what you are."

Balancing the needs of blacks with whites, Asians, Hispanics and other constituencies could become Dinkins' toughest juggling act, according to James P. Shenton, a Columbia University professor who teaches courses in ethnicity and race history.

Dinkins, he said, "is the first black man who doesn't have to answer to a black constituency alone. There is in all of this a very calculated concern about how to reach out beyond the black vote to the ethnic vote, which was clearly somewhat pulled away by the issue of him being a black man."

Shenton was referring to the fact that in last year's election, exit polls indicated many whites didn't vote for Dinkins. The professor also noted that blacks make up only 25 percent of New York's 7.3 million people.

Dinkins is also constantly compared with his predecesor, the often acerbic Edward I. Koch.

"We have different personalities," Koch said, adding that in the Korean-black dispute, "I would have handled it differently. He was elected because of his quiet personality. People wanted that. I'm more direct."

Koch said his approach in the grocery case would have been to go to the boycotted store and buy a week's worth of groceries.

Dinkins' quiet negotiations have yet to produce results. Also, he waffled on the issue. In his televised speech, he said the pickets were wrong. A few days later, he said that such picketing was "as American as apple pie."

Some Koreans say he took too long to get involved in the boycott. Sung Soo Kim, head of the Korean American Small Business Service Center, which has helped mediate the dispute, summed up the view of many who recall Dinkins claim to being a "great healer" during last fall's election.

"I still like David Dinkins," the Korean leader said. "I like his philosophy. I admire him, but he still has to find some solution."

Despite protests from rights groups Louisiana carries out execution

ANGOLA, La. (AP) — Dalton Prejean, a nearly retarded man who killed twice as a teen-ager, went quietly to his death in Louisiana's electric chair early Friday in an execution that world wide protests couldn't stop.

Amnesty International, the European Parliament, the American Civil Liberties Union and numerous other civil rights organizations denounced the electrocution. Telephone calls urging Gov. Buddy Roemer to call it off outnumbered pro-death penalty calls 206-129 this week, Roemer's press office said.

In the moments before it happened, Prejean himself said his death would serve no purpose.

"One mistake ... 13 years ago, and that's a long time," he said during a rambling, barely audible final statement. "Nothing is going to be accomplished. I have peace with myself."

Prejean, 30, died for the 1977 murder of state trooper Donald Cleveland, who was killed during a routine traffic stop in Lafayette. Prejean was 17 then and had served more than two years in reform school for killing a taxi driver when he was 14.

Convicted murderer Dalton Prejean, 30, was executed early Friday at Louisiana's Angola prison. Civil rights groups denounced the electrocution.

A black man, he was convicted of killing a white man by an all-white jury, a factor that led to charges of racism by capital punishment opponents.

His supporters also argued he had suffered brain damage as a child, apparently at the hands of an abusive aunt. His IQ of 71 was just above what would be considered mentally retarded. And his tender age at the time of his crime was another reason for mercy, they said.

"I doubt that in documented recent world history there is an execution ... that has such a pile of reasons not to do it," said Steve Herrick, southern regional director for Amnesty International.

Roemer was unmoved. He already had rejected a 3-2 recommendation of his pardon board to commute the death sentence to life in prison. Repeatedly in recent months he had noted the trooper was killed in cold blood by a gun shot in the face.

"I'm never happy with these things, but I do not, as a representative of the people, have a choice," Roemer said.

Prejean's final Supreme Court appeal was rejected about 7 p.m. and he became the first murderer to die under the Supreme Court's 1988 ruling that allowed the death penalty for crimes committed by 16- and 17-year olds.

Contra forces stop laying down arms, citing 'instability

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Contra guerrillas said they stopped disarming Friday and cited an "atmosphere of uncertainty and social instability" provoked by the Sandinistas, who turned over power last month to Nicaragua's new, U.S.-backed government.

In a communique signed by Contra chief of staff Israel Galeano, the rebels asked for new talks on disarmament accords.

The announcement by the Nicaraguan Resistance came as the National Assembly was debating proposals by President Violeta Barrios de Chamorro's government to alter or suspend laws passed by the leftist Sandinista government before it stepped down on April 25.

Her efforts to make similar changes by presidential decree led to a strike by government workers that paralyzed her administration earlier this week.

The estimated 11,000 Contra fighters had agreed to lay down their weapons by June 10 after spending years trying to oust the government of former President Daniel Ortega, with U.S. support.

Galeano complained that promises under the agreements were not being met. The basic accord for the Contras to disarm and demobilize was signed on March 23. Galeano did not sign that agreement, but he did sign one on April 5.

Rebels in security zones began disarming May 8.

Galeano Friday accused the Sandinistas of acting with "vengeance, frustration and rancor" and said they were trying to "sabotage and frustrate the first measures of reconciliation, democratization and demilitarization."

He complained that wounded and crippled Contras were not getting proper care; that two demobilized Contras were beaten when they tried to return home; that Sandinista troops had not completely evacuated Contra security zones and that Sandinista sympathizers had not been disarmed, and that demobilized Contras were not getting enough food.

Only about 1,000 of the fighters had actually laid down their weapons as of Thursday, and many of the weapons turned in were old.

'This is a result of the terrible damage done by 10 years of war to the national conscience. Nobody trusts anybody.'

— Luis Sanchez, first vice president of the National Assembly

Luis Sanchez, an official of Mrs. Chamorro's coalition and first vice president of the National Assembly, said the Contra announcement, like the Sandinista-led strikes, was not surprising.

"This is a result of the terrible damage done by 10 years of war to the national conscience," Sanchez said. "Nobody trusts anybody."

He asked the Sandinistas, who came to power in 1979, to halt actions that undermine the government and asked the Contras to observe the disarmament accords.

Sanchez said the government had no advance word of the Contra decision before it was read over Radio Nicaragua, the government station, Friday.

Former Vice President Sergio Ramirez, leader of the Sandinista delegation in the National Assembly, said the disarmament accords could not be changed.

"It would be extremely serious to open a new stage of negotiations to go over this matter, which should be closed," he said.

He said Contra disarmament must be completed by June 10 "exactly as established in the accords."

Ramirez said to change the accords in any way "would be to renew uncertainty, to open the perspective of more pain, more death, more blood." Meanwhile, the assembly discussed and voted on bills annulling legal changes made by the lame-duck, Sandinista-controlled assembly.

Changes in the general labor law were annulled by a 48-2 vote, with the assembly's 40 Sandinista members attending but refusing to vote.

U.S., Soviets near weapons pact

MOSCOW (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union worked toward a treaty to reduce their long-range nuclear weapons Friday and scheduled an extra day of negotiations in a drive to complete the pact in time for the Washington summit two weeks away.

The participation of Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who met for five hours with Secretary of State James A. Baker III, gave new impetus to the discussions.

Baker agreed to hold more talks today with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze. Both men said they had made progress, although a senior U.S. official told reporters shortly before midnight: "I can't tell you we are there yet."

The progress was centered on restricting cruise missiles, one of the most difficult issues. "The gaps are not seen as being unbridgeable," the official told a briefing held under rules granting him anonymity.

He also cautioned reporters: "I can't tell you we are going to get there."

Baker met with Gorbachev and Shevardnadze in the Kremlin for five hours. Baker then broke off to see Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene of Lithuania, urging her to suspend the republic's March 11 declaration of independence, said a U.S. official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Baker told Mrs. Prunskiene that both sides would have to compromise to end the impasse over Baltic independence, said the official.

The secretary of state then continued with Shevardnadze for another five hours.

Today, the secretary of state had planned to have a news conference and fly home. Instead, he scheduled another meeting with Shevardnadze and delayed his departure until at least mid-afternoon.

"If you can close (a deal), obviously you are going to do it," the senior U.S. official said. "If you can't, it's not the end of the world."

Other U.S. officials gave a more upbeat assessment. They said Baker and Shevardnadze had settled most of their differences over limiting the ranges of cruise missiles carried aboard planes and ships.

A settlement on the elusive, nuclear-tipped weapons would clear the biggest obstacle to a treaty cutting the overall arsenals of U.S. and Soviet long-range nuclear weapons by 30 percent to 35 percent. Presidents Bush and Gorbachev would announce the agreement in principle at their summit May 31-June 3.

But the officials, who spoke only on the condition of anonymity, cautioned that many details still had to be worked out.

Baker and Shevardnadze had reported earlier that they were making progress on the treaty.

"I have always believed the main points will be agreed upon," Shevardnadze said. "Things are moving in that direction."

Baker, after seeing Gorbachev, told reporters: "We made some progress. ... We still have a number of issues that are still out there."

Shevardnadze, standing at his side, chimed in:

"We did a lot, We accomplished a lot today."

The foreign minister also gave a positive report on negotiations to ban the production of chemical weapons. Asked whether a U.S.-Soviet agreement was ready for the summit, he replied:

"Yes. Major progress was made."

Bush last week offered to halt the production of U.S. binary weapons — which use two chemical potions that become deadly when mixed — if the Soviets are willing to schedule the destruction of their poison gas stockpiles. Shevardnadze gave no details of the emerging accord.

Earlier in the Kremlin, Gorbachev said the Soviet side was doing its best to stitch together a Strategic Arms Reduction Talks (START) treaty. He had been accused of backsliding by the Bush administration before Baker's arrival here Tuesday.

The Soviet leader said he did not know whether the goal of a framework agreement would be met, but told reporters: "I think we are moving closer."

Prime Minister Prunskiene told Baker about her meeting Thursday night with Gorbachev, and Baker summarized for the Lithuanian leader his discussion with Gorbachev about the campaign for independence in the Baltic Republics.

"We find it very encouraging that Mrs. Prunskiene was able to meet with President Gorbachev yesterday," Baker said.

However, he obviously did not consider the session to be the substantive dialogue the Bush administration has been pushing the Soviets to engage in.

"I think it remains to be seen the degree to which that will continue," Baker said of Mrs. Prunskiene's meeting with Gorbachev.

Cosmonauts stranded in space until ferry repaired

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two cosmonauts aboard the Soviet space station Mir have no reliable way to return to Earth in an emergency because their space ferry has been damaged, an industry magazine reports.

The cosmonauts are waiting for a ladder to be brought aboard an unmanned resupply craft before venturing into open space to repair the Soyuz ferry docked to the Mir's nose, Aviation Week and Space Technology says in its May 21 issue.

Damage to the Soyuz was disclosed by the Soviets soon after its launch Feb. 11. A ground controller asked about the protective blanket on the ship having "become dislodged," according to a transcript of a ground-to-space conversation with cosmonauts Anatoli Solovyev and Aleksandr Balandin, who are aboard the Mir.

Asked whether a spacewalk might be required, the cosmonaut replied: "We are prepared for that work. Therefore, there is nothing too special about that either."

The Soviets use small Soyuz capsules to transport cosmonauts to and from the space station. Sometimes the crews will ride their own Soyuz back to Earth, at other times a crew that has been aboard the Mir will travel in a Soyuz brought by other cosmonauts. The space station has several docking ports.

Aviation Week interviewed cosmonaut Alexander A. Serebrov, who recently returned from the Mir, where he photographed the damaged Soyuz TM-9 vehicle from his own TM-8 spacecraft.

Aviation Week said Serebrov's photographs show large thermal blankets on the outside of the TM-9 have been ripped out of place and are blocking key sensors needed to align the spacecraft properly for reentry.

In addition, the vehicle's metal skin has been exposed to space, degrading its ability to control temperature inside.

"The Soyuz has become cold, causing a buildup of water condensation in the vehicle," Aviation Week said. It quoted Serebrov as saying engineers are concerned that the condensation could cause an electrical malfunction during reentry.

Some repair materials were aboard an unmanned resupply vehicle, Progress 42, which docked with Mir on May 8. The ladder is expected to arrive aboard an unmanned Kristall module scheduled for launch on June 1.

The photographs show that three of eight thermal blankets were ripped upward from their bottom attachment points. One is floating at a 90-degree angle form the spacecraft, the other two at a 60-degree angle.

To keep the Soyuz as warm as possible, the Mir complex has been oriented so that the space ferry gets the heat of the sun.

Recount ordered in Dominican presidential election

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — The Central Electoral Board ordered a recount Friday of the tight presidential race after challenger Juan Bosch accused the board and incumbent President Joaquin Balaguer of fraud.

Bosch at the same time withdrew his threat to lead street demonstrations protesting the vote count, which went into its third day Friday.

The recount could delay the outcome of Wednesday's general election by two more days or longer, officials said.

Balaguer, a five-time president who is 83 and blind, and Bosch, 80, a former president who was overthrown in a 1963 military coup, were locked in their fifth race for the presidency of this Caribbean nation of 7 million people. Balaguer won three of the four previous races.

With 87 percent of polling stations reporting, Balaguer led Bosch by less than 11,500 votes, according to the Central Electoral Board.

Balaguer had 570,459 votes and Bosch 558,979 with 5,780 of the 6,663 polling stations reporting, official results showed. Jose Francisco Pena Gomez, a former socialist mayor of Santo Domingo and a former Bosch protege, was a distant third with 373,058.

'Any fraud or honest errors will be discovered and resolved.'

— Former President Jimmy Carter, election observer

Former President Jimmy Carter, one of 30 international observers of the voting, announced the decision to review the vote count at a news conference Friday afternoon.

"Any fraud or honest errors will be discovered and resolved," said Carter, reading in Spanish from a statement signed jointly by him and Froilan Tavares, the Central Electoral Board president.

Carter said all eight presidential candidates approved the procedure under which vote totals obtained by the four main parties will be checked against tallies received by the electoral board.

He said Bosch called off a street demonstration planned for Friday and was cooperating with the recount.

"Neither Professor Bosch nor any of the candidates presented to me any evidence of fraud," Carter said, in answer to questions. He said there were some complaints about minor errors, "but I have no doubt these errors can be corrected."

The electoral board announced on television Thursday night that election law barred public demonstrations while the vote count continued. The announcement was repeated several times.

On Friday morning, a scuffle broke out when Bosch arrived at his Dominican Liberation Party headquarters, where about 200 supporters had gathered. Reports conflicted as to what happened.

Party vice president Elfidio Baez said an army intelligence agent stepped from the crowd and pulled a gun on Bosch as he stepped from a car, while two other men "pushed Bosch around." Supporters began hitting the agent before security men intervened and took him away, Baez said. He said the two other men fled.

An army spokesman confirmed the man involved was an intelligence agent, but denied the man drew a gun. The spokesman, who insisted on anonymity, said the agent suffered minor injuries and was taken to a hospital by police.

Bosch, who served only seven months as president before being overthrown in 1963, accused both Balaguer and the Central Electoral Board of fraud in tabulating votes.

"The Central Electoral Board and Dr. Balaguer committed a colossal fraud," he told reporters Thursday, without elaboration.

Bosch, an author and intellectual who describes himself as a Marxist but not a Communist, ran on a moderate platform, endorsing capitalism as the best way to improve his country's economic plight.

Balaguer, now blind from glaucoma, was first elected president in 1966 and served three consecutive four-year terms before losing in 1978. He was re-elected in 1986.

Lithuania should make concessions, U.S. official says

MOSCOW (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III urged the prime minister of Lithuania on Friday to suspend the republic's declaration of independence to meet Mikhail S. Gorbachev's strict conditions for secession, U.S. officials said.

Baker told Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene both sides must make concessions to settle the impasse, said a U.S. official, who spoke on condition of not being further identified.

Prunskiene told reporters she thought Baker had given Lithuania a boost by meeting with her in Moscow.

"I became convinced again that the U.S.A. as well as other governments support the restoration of independence and the path we are taking," she told reporters at Spaso House, the U.S. ambassador's residence where she met with Baker.

Baker met for five hours in arms talks with Gorbachev and Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze in the Kremlin. He then broke off to see Mrs. Prunskiene, urging her to suspend the republic's March 11 declaration of independence, said the official.

Baker has said the Baltic impasse was casting a shadow over the May 30-June 3 summit in Washington between Gorbachev and President Bush. Another U.S. official, also speaking anonymously, said Baker told Mrs. Prunskiene "a way has to be found" to settle the dispute.

Bronislovas Kuzmickas, deputy chairman of Lithuania's legislature, said Baker promised to press for Lithuanian membership in the United Nations. But U.S. officials in Moscow and the United States said they were unaware of the offer.

In the Lithuanian capital of Vilnius, thousands of anti-independence demonstrators demanded that the secessionist government resign and Soviet rule be restored.

Military helicopters dropped leaflets saying, "Down with the Government of Separatists! Long Live Soviet Lithuania." Elsewhere in Vilnius, soldiers reportedly shot a youth trying to enter a military compound.

Lithuanian television reported that Soviet troops in Byelorussia tried to stop an armored car carrying $193.2 million, according to Potashinskas.

Simas Ardjiunas, a parliamentary spokesman who saw the broadcast, said the troops were trying to prevent Lithuanian from obtaining money to pay government workers.

There were no other details on the incident.

In Lithuania's neighboring Baltic republics, Latvia's Communist Party chief warned there might be "serious confrontation." And Russian-speaking workers in Estonia decided to strike Monday to protest the independence campaign, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported.

Three days earlier, anti-independence activists tried to seize the Parliament building in Riga, Latvia, and briefly took over part of the government headquarters in Tallinn, Estonia.

Interior Ministry "task groups" were being sent to Latvia and Estonia to help local police strengthen law and order, Tass said, without elaborating.

In Moscow, Baker met with Mrs. Prunskiene for more than an hour, twice as long as planned. Mrs. Prunskiene said she told Baker about her talks Thursday with Gorbachev and Lithuania's offer to suspend its independence drive in exchange for talks with the Kremlin.

"We had a full discussion on the situation with respect to the Baltics, particularly Lithuania," Baker said. "We are very hopeful, as we have been for some time, that a dialogue can begin. It remains to be seen the degree to that which will be continued."

Baker has said the Baltic impasse was casting a shadow over the summit later this month in Washington between Gorbachev and President Bush.

Kuzmickas, who attended the meeting, told reporters Lithuania was pleased that Baker recognized Lithuania's dispute with the Kremlin as an international issue, not a domestic one. And he said Baker reiterated that the United States does not acknowledge the republic's annexation by the Soviet Union in 1940 and pledged to promote negotiations with Moscow.

Asked whether Baker agreed to support Lithuania's attempt to gain a seat at the United Nations, Kuzmickas said: "Yes, he promised, but without a guarantee of success."

The official said Baker pointed out that winning U.N. membership "is not easy," but the Lithuanians were encouraged.

"It would be a big step forward for us," Kuzmickas said.

Protesters rally in Bucharest

Anti-communist demonstrators defy rally ban

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Hundreds of anti-Communist demonstrators defied a ban on political rallies Friday and swore to remain in central Bucharest until Romania has a government untainted by links to Nicolae Ceausescu.

"Our round-the-clock protest will continue until we get our liberty back, until democracy is restored in our country!" protest leader Dumitru Dinca shouted to demonstrators in downtown University Square, Bucharest's main traffic artery.

Thousands of protesters gathered on the square late Friday. Close to midnight, those remaining jeered loudly at a TV-screen-sized movie of interim President Ion Iliescu being shown on the wall of a building on the square.

Demonstrators have occupied the square since April 22, demanding that Iliescu and other former Communists quit politics. Iliescu became interim president after the overthrow and execution of Communist dictator Ceausescu in December, and is heavily favored in Sunday's presidential election.

Iliescu had said the protesters should be "cleaned out" of the square after the campaign officially closed Thursday. Campaigning and political rallies are banned the last two days of the campaign.

The turbulent and sometimes violent campaign officially ended Thursday night with the first-ever televised debate by Iliescu and his two opponents in the presidential race, Radu Campeanu and Ion Ratiu.

But Premier Petre Roman said the government decided to tolerate the demonstrators' "violation of the law" for the time being.

A young woman in Bucharest reads about candidates running in Sunday's elections, the first free elections in Romania since 1946.

Several told reporters Friday evening they received reports of irregularities in the election campaign and were investigating.

"No one has suggested ... that the election (campaign) has been carried out without difficulty," said Roy Hattersley, a member of the British Parliament. "We can't tell the extent of the problems."

Sen. Joseph I. Lieberman, D-Conn., told the news conference the fairness of the election was the "threshold question" for U.S. authorities considering the future of relations with Romania.

Both men were part of a 60-member international delegation sponsored by the U.S. Republican and Democratic parties' Institutes for International Affairs.

In Washington, the State Department revived charges that the National Salvation Front, which has dominated Romanian politics since December, engaged in violence and acts of intimidation against the opposition in the campaign.

Dinca said if the government had tried to oust the demonstrators, "it would have been with violence, because nobody in the square would have left this sacred place."

"Above our heads, and above their heads, a second revolution would have burst out," he said.

"I prefer to stay here and face a bulldozer than a dictatorship," said Dumitru Duduman, 30, a forestry worker who has been living in one of the dozens of tents pitched around the square.

The protest drew tens of thousands of people Thursday night. But Iliescu and his National Salvation Front are heavy favorites in Sunday's elections for president and a 506-seat, two-chamber parliament.

Polls of uncertain accuracy indicate that Iliescu, a 60-year-old former Communist minister demoted after criticizing Ceausescu in 1971, is expected to get up to 60 percent of the vote.

The Front expects a majority in parliament.

'Our round-the-clock protest will continue until we get our liberty back, until democracy is restored in our country!'

— Dumitru Dinca, protest leader

In Timisoara, cradle of the revolution, a rally by more than 1,000 Front supporters was abandoned Thursday evening after fighting broke out.

Gheorghe Ilia, Front secretary in Timisoara, said opposition supporters with clubs and knives attacked the rally and 15 people were badly beaten.

But Lumintia Lepugeanu, a spokeswoman for Campeanu's National Liberal party, said Front supporters attacked opponents. She said five people were hurt, none seriously.

The conflicting reports were made by telephone to The Associated Press in Bucharest.

The electoral commission said Friday that 15.9 million Romanians aged 18 or over are eligible to vote. For most, it will be the first time they can elect their representatives.

Candidate Campeanu, 66, is a former political prisoner whose National Liberal Party draws most of its support from urban youth and intellectuals and advocates of rapid privatization.

Ratiu, 72, belongs to the National Peasants Party, which gets most of its support from rural areas. He left Romania in 1940 and returned after the revolution.

Thief jailed after breaking into prison

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — A convicted thief broke into a prison office the day after he was released from the jail, court officials said Friday.

Gondai Madekufamba, 26, pleaded guilty in the Harare magistrate's court to stealing items worth about $8,000 from the storeroom. He was sentenced to a five-year term.

Officials said he completed a sentence at Chikurubi prison for theft on March 30, but returned the next day and burglarized an office where the storeroom keys were kept. He was caught soon afterward.

Texas man charged with rape of minors

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A Texas man believed to be suffering from AIDS has been arrested near the U.S. border on charges of sexually assaulting more than 50 boys during the past three years and illegal entry into Mexico, the attorney general's office said Friday.

A statement from the attorney general's office identified the suspect as William Lee Heigel, 43, originally from Ventura, Calif., and last known to be living in Fort Worth, Texas.

Federal agents on a routine inspection for drugs searched and arrested him last Saturday at a bus station in Nuevo Laredo, across the Rio Grande from Laredo, Texas.

Heigel was arraigned before a federal judge in Nuevo Laredo, who ordered him held for medical observation at the local jail. Sexually assaulting minors is a federal crime in Mexico.

"Preliminary medical tests showed he had symptoms of immuno-deficiency syndrome," the statement said.

The statement said Heigel is suspected of raping more than 50 boys under age 12 in the United States and Mexico during the past three years.

Heigel said he first visited Mexico in 1987 when he "got bored" with raping boys in California, when he lived in Ventura, and estimated he had sexually abused about 30 of them in California and Texas alone, the statement said.

Emperor Akihito, right, and Empress Michiko lay wreaths of flowers at the Atomic Bomb Memorial Park in Nagasaki, the southern Japanese port city, Friday. It was the first visit to the site by Akihito since ascending the Chrysanthemum Throne.

Japanese emperor honors bomb victims

NAGASAKI, Japan (AP) — For nore than four decades, the bitter memories of war and defeat clung to Emperor Hirohito. That same ghost now haunts his son, Emperor Akihito, who Friday paid tribute to Nagasaki's atomic bomb victims.

About 3,800 people stood in steady rain as Akihito, accompanied by Empress Michiko, became the first monarch to remember the devastating Aug. 9, 1945, attack at a monument to its 70,000 victims.

The royal couple was greeted by loud yells of "Banzai" — a wish for long life — when they arrived for the ceremony. And as they left, some in the crowd sang "Kimi Ga Yo," Japan's unofficial national anthem.

The emperor and empress later visited a hospital for patients suffering from illness related to the bombing.

In a statement, Akihito said that seeing the park and hospital "renewed my thoughts for peace ... and prayers for those who still are in pain because of the bomb's effects."

In Nagasaki, that pain runs deep.

"I think he has helped heal some of the wounds by coming," said store clerk Sachiko Nagata, who was 7 years old when the bomb was dropped and now suffers from radiation sickness.

"But it took too long for him to come to this park," she said.

Though the late Hirohito visited Nagasaki for a sporting event in 1969, his son, Akihito, is the first emperor to present flowers at the Peace Park memorial.

Mayor Hitoshi Motoshima was the emperor's guide on the first of his four-day visit to southern Kyushu Island. Motoshima was shot in January by an ultra-rightist for saying Hirohito bore some responsibility for the war.

Motoshima made the comment at a city assembly meeting in December 1988, as Hirohito lay dying of the cancer that ended his life one month later.

The mayor also said Hirohito could have helped end the war sooner and saved Nagasaki from the atomic bomb. Japan surrendered six days after the attack.

Though many Japanese share Motoshima's opinions, his candor angered ultra-rightist groups. For more than a year, he received death threats.

Since the shooting, Motoshima has become a symbol of freedom of speech.

Though the mayor described Akihito as a "wonderful human being," he also said the monarch should strive to understand and heal the wounds of the past.

"I hope the new emperor will reflect on why that war occurred, and use his position to further peace," Motoshima said Friday.

Skinheads charged with desecration

Suspects accused of vandalizing Catholic graves so Jews would be blamed

PARIS (AP) — Three skinheads, wearing masks to conceal their identities, were charged in court Friday with desecrating about 100 graves at a Roman Catholic cemetery and trying to make it appear Jews committed the crime.

In a new incident, vandals in the Canadian capital of Ottawa knocked over headstones and spray-painted swastikas and Nazi slogans on graves at the area's oldest and largest Jewish cemetery.

Police said the three suspects in France wanted people to believe the vandalism Wednesday night in Nantes was committed in revenge for the gruesome desecration last week at a Jewish cemetery in Carpentras. A corpse there was dug up and impaled on an umbrella handle.

Slogans painted on graves in the Nantes suburb of Saint Herblain included "Carpentras will be avenged" and "Death to Le Pen" — a reference to far-right leader Jean-Marie Le Pen.

Police said the suspects apparently decided several days in advance to carry out the desecration to protest the detention of right-wing extremists during the investigation of the Carpentras incident.

The suspects, who did not enter pleas, face sentences of up to two years if convicted on the charges of vandalism and provoking racial hatred.

In Ottawa, 16 tombstones were knocked over, broken or defaced in the oldest part of the cemetery overnight Thursday, while at least eight were spray-painted in silver with swastikas and the slogans "SS," "Fourth Reich," and "skinhead."

The vandalism at the Ottawa Jewish Community Cemetery came one day after a similar desecration was discovered at the only Jewish cemetery in Ste. Foy, near Quebec City.

As sunset ushered in the Jewish sabbath Friday, members of Ottawa's Jewish community inspected the damage at the local cemetery.

"It's sickening when you see it on television," said Rabbi Reuven Bulka, of Congregation Machzikei Hadas, referring to recent coverage of the events in Quebec and France. "But it's even worse when you see it firsthand."

Bulka said he was worried about the growing number of incidents at Jewish cemeteries around the world. "It started in France, and it's spreading," he said. "Who knows where it's going to stop."

As of late Friday, the Carpentras case remained unsolved. The government said it was considering posting a reward, a step rarely taken in France.

The skinheads, all in their early 20s, were arrested at their homes in Nantes late Thursday and early Friday.

Skinheads in France generally sympathize with neo-Nazi groups and have shaved heads or close-cropped hair.

In Royan, a regional government education official served as the substitute teacher Friday for Christiane Guiard. She was severely beaten by two masked intruders at her home after she devoted a class to the ramifications of the Carpentras desecration.

The administrator, Loic Legoherel, presented a brief discourse on freedom in France to three classes of Ms. Guiard, a history and geography teacher at a high school in Royan, near Bordeaux.

Thousands of Koreans rampage on bloody anniversary

KWANGJU, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of anti-government demonstrators rampaged through downtown streets Friday, burning tires and hurling rocks at police on the 10th anniversary of the nation's bloodiest uprising.

"Down with Roh Tae-woo!" the crowd screamed, waving red, yellow and blue banners. "Yankee go home!" they shouted in an outpouring of rage against President Roh and the U.S. military forces stationed in South Korea.

Nationwide, about 70,000 police were deployed in a show of force to prevent violence, officials said. In Seoul, about 12,000 riot police guarded government offices, public buildings and foreign legations.

The violence erupted after some 100,000 people rallied downtown to mark the May 18, 1980, pro-democracy uprising in this provincial city, which seared the psyche of Koreans more than any incident since the 1950 Korean War.

A three-hour nighttime rally began peacefully. People demanded the ouster of the Roh government and the 43,000 American troops in South Korea under a mutual defense treaty.

Roh, a former army general, is extremely unpopular in Kwangju because of his alleged role in crushing the 1980 revolt militarily. He was a key member of the then-martial-law government that quelled it.

That uprising began when hundreds of thousands of citizens rose up against the central government to protest a crackdown on political dissent. Protesters drove out police and took control of the city for 10 days before being crushed by tank-led paratroopers.

By official count, about 200 people were killed and more than 1,700 others injured or wounded. Kwangju citizens claim the death toll was much higher.

Anti-U.S. sentiment is also strong among Kwangju citizens because many believe Washington condoned the ruthless crushing of the revolt.

After the initial nighttime rally, about 7,000 people marched along downtown streets, shouting anti-government and anti-U.S. slogans.

The rallies in Kwangju followed a memorial ceremony at Mangwoldong Cemetery, a hillside graveyard where victims of the revolt are buried. Thousands braved downpours to offer prayers to the memory of the victims and burn an effigy of Roh clad in a military uniform.

"My child, my child," cried an old woman in white mourning clothes, rubbing a gray tombstone bearing the name of her 17-year daughter killed in the revolt.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Two Germanys seal economic merger

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The two Germanys Friday signed a historic treaty that will bind them into a single economic entity in less than seven weeks and all but formally end their four-decade separation.

The treaty will also plunge fragile East Germany into the rigors of capitalism starting July 2. Many East Germans fear unemployment and price increases could be the immediate result.

For the first time, the two German governments convened in a single room, witnesses to an event that in many ways will finally end their separation.

"What we are living through here is the birth of a free and united Germany," said Chancellor Helmut Kohl, who has aspirations of becoming reunited Germany's first leader.

"This is a historic hour in the life of the German nation," said the West German leader, addressing members of both his Cabinet and that of East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere.

Nonetheless, formal unification cannot occur until the thorny question of a united Germany's military allegiance is settled. The Soviet Union flatly rejects NATO membership for the united country, while the United States says the German nation should belong to the Western alliance.

Smoking host quenched

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A prominent journalist who regularly smoked during his television talk show has been reproved by a public panel, officials said Friday.

The behavior of the journalist, Goran Skytte, prompted nine viewer complaints to the Radio Council, which monitors media ethics. He had been smoking and drinking with his guests during the half-hour interview show.

Controllers nix overtime

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — About 40 domestic flights were canceled and international traffic was delayed up to three hours after air traffic controllers refused to work overtime Friday, officials said.

"At the moment it is impossible to say for how long this situation will continue," said Rune Andersson, chief of air traffic control at Arlanda airport outside Stockholm.

The controllers are negotiating for higher pay for the extra hours, saying they are short-staffed because authorities failed to anticipate increased air traffic.

The negotiations could last through the month, Andersson said.

Andersson said a 1983 study had predicted air traffic would decline and fewer controllers were trained.

Blast kills 10, injures 54

LAHORE, Pakistan (AP) — A powerful bomb hidden near a movie theater in one of the city's most congested districts exploded Friday as a show was letting out, killing 10 people and injuring at least 54, police said.

Drought taking heavy toll on California trees

Hearst News Service

SACRAMENTO , Calif. — Estimates of the number of dead and dying trees in Northern California's drought-seared forests are growing larger every day, say worried state and federal forestry experts.

The grim news was contained in a report to state officials attending a recent meeting of the California Drought Task Force.

Across California, they were told, an estimated 6.5 million trees are dead as a result of the drought and another 3.3 million to 6.6 million more trees could die this summer.

In the picturesque Tahoe Basin, as many as 800,000 trees — or one out of every five trees covering the steep mountain slopes — are dead, the victims of thirst, crowding, and beetles that prey on the weakened trees.

"It's phenomenal," said John Swanson sadly. "We're finding more dead trees every day."

Swanson, timber manager for the U.S. Forest Service's 185,000-acre Tahoe Basin unit, said 60 percent to 80 percent of the trees are dead on some patches of forest around Lake Tahoe up to 150 acres in size.

Overall in the Tahoe Basin, he said 15 percent to 20 percent of the forest is dead. That would mean that between 594 million and 792 million board feet of timber, or 600,000 and 800,000 trees, have succumbed to the drought.

The state's estimate of the number of trees now dead throughout California is roughly three times higher than U.S. Forest Service estimates released only a few months ago.

The huge volume of dead timber has created extremely dangerous fire conditions. California put all of its state firefighting bases on full alert status this week, close to a month earlier than normal.

Bob Jessen, fire preparedness officer for the forest service's El Dorado National Forest district office in Placerville, said federal forest firefighters will be put on around-the-clock alert beginning Sunday.

College graduate leaves 7 marks

She managed to get herself shown as a graduate seven times in the 1990 yearbook at the University of Kansas, using different names and looks.

There's Buffi J. Baker in Business. Or Bertha Heffer in Engineering, wearing studious spectacles. Even Violet Couleur in Fine Arts.

And how about Anne (U.) Rissom in Allied Health and Dorrie N. Collum in Architecture. Or Kacey Starr in journalism, an apparent play on the name of The Kansas City Star newspaper.

'Since we're not athletes or student presidents or anything, we wanted to be remembered for something special.'

— Carol Jong, Kansas University senior

"We wanted to leave our mark at KU," said Ms. Jong, a senior graduating from the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. "Since we're not athletes or student presidents or anything, we wanted to be remembered for something special."

She spent $27 last fall over five weeks to get nine different pictures taken for the yearbook. She changed her hair and clothes each time and sometimes spoke with foreign accents.

The yearbook's editors weren't amused.

"I mean, it's a great joke as far as she's concerned," said Jeannine Kreker, assistant editor of the Jayhawker. "But as far as Kansas alumni and everybody who's going to look at this book years from now is concerned, it makes us and the university look pretty silly."

Not all of Ms. Jong's fakes slipped through. There's no Penny Sylan in Pharmacy. Or, for that matter, no Anna L. Gesik, one of her roommate's names.

Fifty lawyers get together on a couch

N.Y. Times News Service

What do you have when you put 50 lawyers together on a couch?

Sounds like yet another lawyer joke. In fact, what you have is a partnership retreat of Morrison, Cohen, Singer & Weinstein in New York and there is nothing funny about it.

In each of the last four years, usually in some rustic setting far from their telephones and Tagamet bottles, the firm's partners have met with Dr. Edward Shapiro, a psychoanalyst and family researcher at Harvard Medical School.

Together they have drawn trees, devised baseball teams, impersonated college deans and South American dictators — the better to know themselves and, they hope, to serve their joint enterprise.

In the process, they have taken the art of running a law firm into a brave new psychological world.

Another New York firm, Kramer, Levin, Kamin, Nessen & Frankel, has a psychiatrist on retainer who consults occasionally with individual lawyers. But Shapiro, who was recently named medical director of the Austen Riggs Center in Stockbridge, Mass., is not paid to hear about bad marriages or tortured childhoods.

"Every lawyer in New York City either goes to a shrink or has someone in his family who does," said Robert Stephan Cohen, the managing partner of Morrison, Cohen. "It is simply going the next step for a firm to consult one.

"I don't think it's saying 'we're sick,' but that 'we want to be better.' It's a concession that we're swimming upstream, that we want to get to where we're going, and we need all the help we can get."

Like the short-lived World Journal Tribune of New York newspaper fame, Morrison, Cohen is the product of an awkward tripartite marriage, with three separate sets of folkways, loyalties and egos.

It is also a midsize firm in formation when many such operations are disintegrating. And it faces the problems of all law firms, regardless of size: battles over authority, autonomy, money, power and perks.

Pragmatic lawyers (the term may well be redundant) may scoff at the "touchy-feely" approach.

But Morrison, Cohen partners say the group therapy, though awkward and occasionally even brutal, has helped a firm of disparate parts survive, cohere and grow — from 18 lawyers six years ago to 46 today.

The treatment has even helped the firm develop a subspeciality: handling schisms at other offices.

When Morrison, Cohen was assembled in 1984, it brought in Hildebrandt Inc., the Somerville, N.J., consultants who are to running law firms what Walt Hriniak is to the science of hitting baseballs.

On nuts and bolts Hildebrandt was fine, but the firm was still unable to make a partnership of strangers gel.

Shapiro, who had no prior contact with law firms, conducted his first weekend retreat in October, 1986.

For Shapiro, the work has been so interesting that he is devoting a chapter in his new book, "Lost in Familiar Places," to his experiences at Morrison, Cohen — with the permission of the patient (which he refers to as "Able, Bingstrom & Cabot"), of course.

'Fat City' changes image with 2-year program

WELLSBURG, W.Va. (AP) — Cholesterol readings are bandied about like baseball scores and residents brag about whittled waistlines two years after this town became part of a program aimed at reducing cardiovascular disease.

"When we started this, everyone called us 'Fat City,'" program director Bill Reger said recently. "Now, we're being recognized as one of the most fit towns in the country."

The results of the $3.3 million lifestyle modification study, scheduled to end next month, have been encouraging, Reger said.

Twice as many participants exercise regularly compared to when the study began in May 1988. And, Reger said, nearly all of the 1,000 participants, out of the town's roughly 4,000 people, have reduced their intake of fat, salt and cholesterol.

Participants' blood pressures, cholesterol levels, weight and other cardiovascular risk factors were checked every three months during the two-year study.

Tests earlier this year found more than half of the participants had lowered their average cholesterol readings by 15 points, from 221.3 to 206.3. A reading below 200 is desirable, according to the American Heart Association.

Their average weight dropped from 169.4 pounds to 166.4 pounds. They also reduced their blood pressure by an average 5 points and lowered their resting pulse rates by four beats per minute.

All of those values either remained about the same or decreased in the study's final health screening in late April, according to Reger. Results of those tests are to be released June 9.

Reger said the most substantial improvement has been in the cholesterol readings, especially in the reduction of LDL cholesterol, the bad kind.

"I think it reflects the fact that most people have changed their diet to one centered on vegetables, fruits, beans, peas and lentils," said Reger. "Two years ago, people we're saying there's no way I'm going to eat that stuff, it tastes like cardboard.

"But now, they've found they can give their food even more flavor by staying away from salt, fats, oils and other things they used to use."

"There's no more red meat as far as I'm concerned," said Mary Jo Kuli, 68, whose cholesterol plummetted from a worrisome 266 to 177. "I eat fruits, vegetables, pastas, brown rice. I even bake my own bread so I can control the amount of fat and fiber.

"I put jelly or applesauce on bread instead of margarine."

The program's impact can even be seen in the town's restaurants, where steamed vegetables, fruit plates and oat bran bagels have replaced mashed potatoes and gravy, ice cream and doughnuts as favorites.

"Now they want dry toast, or a dry bagel or muffin," said Vicki Mercer, 51, a waitress at Stella's Goodie House.

"But what really gets me is they'll order deep-fried fish or chicken and pick off the breading or I'll have to blot all the grease off with a napkin," she said.

Grocers, too, have been affected.

"Cheese and beef sales have taken a drastic hit, but I can't keep my oat bran cereals and whole wheat pasta on the shelf," said Bill Konkle, a butcher and grocer.
