Second body found off Japanese coast

By The Associated Press

A second body has been found in the waters off northern Japan and a police spokesman said Sunday that specialists were trying to determine if the victim, a woman, was among 269 people who perished when a Korean jetliner was shot down by a Soviet warplane.

President Reagan continued his angry attack on the Soviets, saying Saturday they have "mobilized their entire government behind a massive cover-up" of the downing of the South Korean plane.

In Moscow, Soviet television broadcast an interview with a pilot identified as the man who shot down the jumbo jet on Sept. 1. The pilot said he flashed his fighter's lights at the intruder plane but got no response. Two other pilots also spoke briefly on the extraordinary segment of the evening news.

In Finland, pilots announced a boycott of flights to their giant neighbor. Japan will ban flights for 14 days by the Soviet airline Aeroflot starting Sept. 15, Japan Broadcasting Corp. reported. KLM, the Dutch national airline, announced it was suspending service between Amsterdam and Moscow.

Reagan, in his weekly radio address after meeting with Secretary of State George P. Shultz and with the National Security Council, said the Soviets have "stonewalled the world, mobilizing their entire government behind a massive cover-up, then brazenly threatening to kill more men, women and children should another civilian airliner make the same mistake as KAL 007."

"Rather than tell the truth about the Korean Air Lines massacre, rather than immediately and publicly investigate the crash, explain to the world how it happened, punish those guilty of the crime, cooperate in efforts to find the wreckage and recovery the bodies, apologize and offer compensation to the families and work to prevent a repetition, they have done the opposite," he said.

Reagan has declared a national day of mourning Sunday for the people aboard the jet, including Rep. Larry P. McDonald, D-Ga.

Moscow has acknowledged destroying the jetliner, but a top Soviet general repeated in a news conference on Friday the Soviet argument that it was on a spy mission for the United States, a claim rejected by Washington.

Americans seek boycotts, protest downing of plane

By ANDY O'CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

The Washington House of Representatives and about 350 people at a Los Angeles rally added their voices Saturday to the calls for boycotts of Russian liquor in retaliation for the Soviet downing of a Korean Air Lines jetliner.

Meanwhile, groups of would-be visitors in both the Soviet Union and the United States canceled trips to each other's countries.

In Los Angeles Harbor, a lone protester carried a picket sign at the entrance to the wharf where a Soviet freighter has permission to remain docked until Sept. 17. The ship and its Soviet crew have been sitting at the berth since Tuesday because longshoremen have refused to unload it.

Three scientists from a major U.S. nuclear weapons laboratory in California canceled a trip to the Soviet Union. The scientists were afraid they would be unable to find a return flight from Moscow, Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory spokesman Mike Ross said.

Meanwhile, three Soviet scientists were to attend a conference on particle physics that begins Monday in San Francisco. Conference organizers said they won't know until Monday whether the Soviet scientists will appear.

Earlier this week, Lawrence Livermore's sister facility, the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico, suspended travel to the Soviet Union by its scientists.

In Columbus, Ohio, members of the state bar association voted 21-0 Saturday to cancel a 1984 tour of the Soviet Union.

The protesters af the federal building in west Los Angeles demanded a boycott of Soviet liquor and caviar, a cry that has become common in demonstrations against the Sept. 1 shooting down of the airliner, which carried 269 people, including 61 Americans.

Oregon Gov. Vic Atiyeh asked the state Liquor Control Commission on Friday to stop buying Soviet vodka.

Ship heads for Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — A Soviet freighter quietly left the Port of Houston on Saturday, while another steamed toward the Bayou City with cargo to unload.

The General Kravtsov was the first Soviet vessel to dock in Houston since a Korean Air Lines 727 was shot down by a Soviet fighter last week, killing all 269 people on board.

The ship docked Friday and was loaded with liquid tallow through a pipeline. No longshoremen were involved in the work, and the vessel departed without incident.

Museum takes on carnival air

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Puffy white clouds drifting across an azure sky greeted thousands of people who flocked to the Saturday opening of the 15th annual Septemberfest arts and crafts fair at the Museum of the Southwest.

Kids, tents, music, beer, pony rides, lemonade, ice cream, cotton candy and the smell of grilled German sausage impart a carnival-like atmosphere to the normally sedate, tree-shaded grounds during the two-day event, which ends today at 5 p.m.

Shorts, halters, sunglasses and straw hats are the order of attire as young and old alike stroll about attractions ranging from wood graphics and original paintings to an FFA-sponsored live pet farm, from which a white rabbit made its escape in a little girl's arms when no one was looking.

Artists and artisans from across the country have their finely crafted wares for sale, and for $3 the kids can get their pictures taken astride Jethro P. Lite — a docile, 1800-lb. Brahma bull brought to you by the Miller Brewing Co. of Milwaukee, Wis.

Jethro is filling in for Bufford T. Lite, who is recovering from a pulled tendon suffered in a dispute last week with some rodeo bulls at his domicile in Henryetta, Okla., according to his handler, Jim Shoulders.

He and Bufford do TV commercials for the company. "Bufford is the dogie Billy Martin won't punch," says Shoulders as he and his charge relax for a moment under the blue canopy that shields them from the sun.

Arrest, 24 hours in jail a traumatic experience

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

What does it feel like to be arrested, taken to jail, fingerprinted, photographed and put behind bars for 24 hours? Would the humiliation and frustration be much less if the charges and arrest really weren't genuine?

To find out, arrangements were made this week for the arrest of Reporter-Telegram Staff Writer Gail Burke. Co-workers, arresting officers and jail personnel did not know of those arrangements. Only the newspaper's management and key officials whose cooperation was necessary did.

It should be pointed out misdemeanor offenders ordinarily are not arrested while at work unless they refuse to report. It was felt Ms. Burke's refusal would add to the dimension of her experience.

A lump settled in my throat.

Two sheriff's deputies were standing in my editor's office.

Capt. Richard Sexton and Deputy Loyd Brazell had a warrant for my arrest — the charge was theft, a misdemeanor.

For a person who had never even been to the principal's office while in school, the experience of being arrested in front of my co-workers was devastating.

I was humiliated.

The officers escorted me to Midland County Jail. I expected a "Sgt. Joe Friday" voice to tell me: "You have the right to remain silent...." Nobody did. The officer said to call a bail bondsman.

"Which one?" I asked, wishing I knew what to do, what to say or how to act.

"I can't tell you which one, but here's the list in the yellow pages," said Brazell.

As I lit a cigarette, I called one and couldn't get an answer. I tried a second and a woman referred me to another. Tears welled in my eyes.

"OK, we're going upstairs," said Brazell. "You can call from up there. By the way, put your cigarette out. You can't smoke upstairs."

I was ordered to walk in front of the officer, following his verbal instructions — left, straight, stop.

We stood in front of the orange-colored bars. There was a thundering, screeching noise of metal hitting metal when the bars slid open. My heart jumped. The whole experience began to register — I was going to be locked up.

My head began to pound when the massive bars clanged shut behind me. We approached an elevator which took us to the fifth floor — the county jail.

I sat on a bench in the booking room. My purse was taken. I was told to approach the counter and remove my jewelry, count my money.

My hands shook. A sense of fear rushed through my body. I hung my head and more tears began to fall. I was scared.

"Don't cry," said Deputy Brenda Douglas. "Getting arrested is paper work. There's nothing to cry about."

She urged me to make another phone call, but I refused. Forms were completed; signatures were scribbled. Then I was brought to a small room with a stool and camera in it. Papers and ink lay on a shelf.

I cringed at the thought of having a "mug" taken. I'd seen enough police shows to know that this was routine. But, this firsthand look-see was turning into a nightmare.

Douglas necklaced me with a number board — 22482. Lights flashed before I knew what was happening. I was asked to turn my head. More pictures were taken.

Then I was fingerprinted. Douglas took my hand and pressed each finger on the soot-colored ink.

Storms pound East, South Texas

By The Associated Press

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms pounded East and South Texas again Saturday, while fair skies ruled in western and northern portions of the state.

A cold front pushed through the northern Panhandle near Dalhart, shifting winds from a southerly direction to a northerly direction.

Afternoon temperatures were mostly in the 80s and low 90s with Junction and Wink reporting high temperatures of 94 degrees and Victoria posting a rain-cooled 78 degrees.

The National Weather Service forecast called for mostly cloudy skies over East, South and Central Texas Sunday morning with temperatures dropping to near 60 in the Panhandle. Afternoon highs in the upper 80s and low 90s were expected across most of the state.

Night in jail traumatic experience

"Come with me," she said, escorting me to a storage room after the picture and printing procedure.

The deputy directed me to stand out of the way of the camera and remove my clothes. I cowered, took a deep breath and began disrobing. The jail uniforms — white smock and pants with the words "Midland Co. Jail" stamped on them — were clean, but had a sickening sterile smell.

"Put her in five," one of the jailers said, referring to what the inmates call "Tank Five."

Douglas opened the heavy door which had a small rectangular glass window in it. As she pulled the gateway to the cellblock toward her, I faced seven other women dressed in the pajama-type uniform.

The room was lit, but seemed dark. Six individual rooms with bars lined one side of the cement-slab floor. Each cell had a bed, a shelf and a gray sink attached to the toilet.

Opposite the cells, two tables with benches hugged the yellow-colored metal wall. Along this wall, there were three more small rectangular windows. I could not see out — they were covered from the outside.

I stood there, clinging to the worn blanket and toilet accessories issued to me. I was frightened. No, I was petrified. One of the inmates assisted me with my mattress, a chaise lounge-type pad. Two more came over to help me put the "cotton sack," or mattress cover on it.

"There's not a cell available, so you'll have to sleep here on the floor," Douglas said. She turned to one of the inmates and asked her to help me get settled in.

"It's not that bad," one woman said. "I've been sleeping on the floor."

I nodded. I sat down, bent my knees and buried my head. My "new home" embraced the metal wall. I glanced around the dreary room. Voices echoed as though we were in a tunnel. A camera peeking from a tiny window in the corner of the wall stared at me.

I wanted a cigarette. I needed a cigarette.

It was about 4 p.m. when my fellow inmates told me they were all there for misdemeanors. For most, it wasn't their first time in jail. They knew I was terrified. It didn't take long to form a common bond with my cellmates.

They knew the "ropes" and were quick to tell me what I "would get" for my offense.

"You'll be out in no time," one of them said. "If you want, just go into one of our rooms and cry it out. It'll get better."

Their ages ranged from 18 to 38 years. All colors and sizes; all there caged in this gloomy cellblock.

The inmates were compassionate and helped me. They joked about being there. But they also cried. Many paced. I, too, found myself pacing. The caged feeling was affecting my mind. I tried to read, but the romance books only depressed me. I learned how to play solitaire. Most of the time I sat, thinking.

I began reading the graffitti on the walls. I wandered into a few of the individual cells. Above the sink-toilet someone had written, "Push to return to kitchen." The thought of taking a drink from the sink nauseated me.

There was no privacy. No doors to close. All the inmates looked the other way when another used the facilities.

There I was — stripped of my dignity, my privacy.

Intermittently, a jailer looked through the tiny windows. We all stared at him.

By 5 p.m., or it could have been 6 p.m. — there was no way of telling time at that point — dinner was served through a slot in the wall.

The "bean hole" slot held just that — hot dogs, beans, bread, peaches and a cup of orange Kool-aid. A spoon accompanied the stainless steel tray and mug.

I tried to eat, but couldn't. Offering my food, I was quickly surrounded by the other inmates. The three-section tray was wiped clean in a matter of seconds. Hot dogs and bread were stashed away for midnight snacks, the orange drink was divided and the beans were devoured.

"You'll eat," one of my cellmates said. "You'll get hungry."

I didn't think I'd ever be hungry again. I sat and stared at a small black and white television set. I don't remember what was on. About 10:30 p.m. (I knew what time because the TV doubles as a clock) the lights in each cell dimmed. The three overhead lights in the "dayroom," or section outside the cells, stayed well-lit.

I laid my head down on a vinyl pillow and covered myself with the thin, yellow blanket I was issued. Tossing and turning, I drifted. When I woke periodically, I never knew whether it was day or night — the lights stayed on.

In the morning the food trays were squeezed again through the bean hole. Hands covered with plastic gloves handed each of us oatmeal, raisins, two bisquits and milk. My stomach still wasn't ready for the food. I picked and pushed at the sticky oatmeal.

One of my roomates left our cozy home for her arraignment. Another was told she would leave soon. Talk of leaving monopolized the conversation.

The day before I arrived, 14 women were placed in this six-cell tank. Seven of the women were transferred to Tank Four, which was adjacent to ours. The inmates would lie on the floor, knock on the wall and converse with each other. Jokes and jabs were exchanged. It was discovered that Tank Four had phone privileges and numbers were shouted through the metal wall.

I didn't want to have a call made. I wanted a cigarette.

Boredom took over. I slept. I walked. I wrapped my blanket around me and huddled on my bed. Time — too much time. There was an eerie silence. Nobody talked. It seemed to last for several hours.

A clanging noise from the bean hole perked up everybody. We lined up for chow. By noon Friday the growls in my stomach were begging me to eat.

I wanted out. A couple of more hours went by. A running toilet was driving me crazy. The loud chatter of the other inmates grated on my nerves. Then, the heavy door opened. A deputy called my name. I jumped to my feet, wondering, "what now?"

"Get your stuff," he said.

"Am I getting out?" I asked.

"Just get your stuff," he repeated.

The other inmates whooped and yelled — they knew. I was being released. I was taken back to the storage room and was told to get dressed in my street clothes. My heart rushed blood through my veins. I shivered with excitement. All I could think about was sunshine and a cigarette.

The ordeal was over.

About 200 bits of debris found

TOKYO (AP) — A fisherman has found a second body that washed up on Hokkaido's northeastern coast and a police spokesman said Sunday it could be one of the 269 people killed when a Soviet jet fighter downed a South Korean jumbo jet.

The spokesman in the city of Abashiri said the face was missing but a lock of auburn hair on the back of the head indicated the body was that of a white woman.

Specialists began examining the corpse to determine if the victim had been aboard the Korean Air Lines Boeing 747 shot down Sept. 1 when it strayed into Soviet air space.

Abashiri is about 40 miles east of the location where the unidentified body of a child was recovered last Thursday from the Sea of Okhotsk by Japanese fishermen.

Officials said about 200 objects and aircraft pieces from Korean Air Lines Flight 007 have been found by Maritime Safety Agency patrols, police and local volunteers in Japan's northern waters and beaches.

The material was mostly small pieces of airplane metal and plastic, they said, but also included clothing, a man's white sneaker, two different women's shoes, an empty handbag, film — including at least one roll of undeveloped color — bottles, plastic containers and other items.

More than 1,000 police officers and civilian volunteers, aided by eight aircraft and a small fleet of patrol and fishing boats, were in the search after pieces of the Korean jetliner's tail section first turned up on Thursday.

The 269 people aboard the jetliner were presumed killed in the crash into icy waters off Sakhalin Island, 180-240 miles northwest of the Japanese island of Hokkaido, where the debris was turning up along a 200-mile stretch of coastline.

A piece of seat covering, complete with safety instructions in English and Korean, is one of about 200 items found along Japan's northern coast.

Officials at search headquarters at Wakkanai, on Hokkaido's northernmost tip, hoped to recover some bodies and any communications gear that might shed light on the last hours of Korean Air Lines Flight 007.

Masashi Kato, a Japan Maritime Safety Agency official who heads the operation, said sea currents, aided by strong winds, from the north may push more debris toward the Japanese coast in the next day or so, and that more navy planes and boats would join the search, the Japan Fisheries Agency and Japan Self-Defense Forces.

Currents already apparently had carried some debris from the Sea of Japan, west of Hokkaido, through the Soya strait into the Sea of Okhotsk on the eastern side, Kato said. Wreckage included pieces of metal, seat cushions with Korean and English lettering, and other flotsam from the aircraft.

The mutilated body of a child, found by fishermen Thursday, was not immediately confirmed as having come from the Korean aircraft.

Police estimated the child to be about 11 years old, but said an autopsy could not establish identity, race or sex.

At Sarafutsu-cho, where a piece of the jetliner's tail section bearing part of the identification number was found on Thursday, searchers found a charred plastic canteen, a camera case and a Korean-made plastic bottle of cleaning fluid. Off the coastal town of Mombetsu, recovered debris included an American-made woman's shoe and another piece of the rudder.

The first physical evidence of Flight 007, found on Thursday, was a chunk of tail section, painted red with white letters "H" and "L." The second bore the numbers "44." The Korean jetliner was assigned identification number HL7442.

Moscow has acknowledged destroying the jetliner but a top Soviet general repeated in a news conference on Friday the Soviet argument that it was on a spy mission for the United States, a claim rejected by Washington.

Japan sharply reiterated its position on Saturday, with Chief Cabinet Secretary Masaharu Gotoda, the government's top spokesman, calling the Soviet explanation "insincere" and designed to avoid responsibility for the incident.

In a speech to the Parliament on Saturday, Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone called the shooting down of the jetliner "an act which all civilized societies must surely find reprehensible" and promised anew that Japan would join other nations in pressuring Moscow.

Burglaries, thefts reported

In a burglary complaint to city police, Dolly Ballenger of 19 Oaklawn Park reported the disappearance of jewelry worth $90,000. Police were still investigating the case Saturday and no details were available by press time.

In other complaints, $170 in cash was reported stolen from a desk drawer in the dental offices of Dr. Jick Hill at 2100 W. Tennessee Ave.

Paul Mathews of 4711 Cherokee said $85 in cash, a checkbook and assorted credit cards were among the items taken in a break-in of his residence. Entry was gained through an unlocked door, according to police. Total loss was placed at $595.

Randy Gameson of the Lexington Apartments at 1003 S. Midkiff Road said his apartment was entered sometime Thursday. Stolen were 36 tickets to Texas Tech football games, 24 cassette tapes and a Norelco electric shaver. Total loss was placed at $591. There was no sign of forced entry.

And Leslie Stewart of Stonegate Mobil Home Park on North Fairgrounds Road reported the disappearance of an 8-month-old registered Cocker spaniel named Bo. The dog was valued at $245.

Becky Hardy, chairwoman for this year's Septemberfest, looks at the milling clusters of people from the museum steps and says:

"It looks huge — what with the pretty weather and all. Last year, we had more than 10,000 admissions and grossed about $100,000. It takes 700 to 800 volunteers to put it together and some of the preparations take a year to complete.

"There are 71 artists from all over the country — California to Louisiana. We've really developed a reputation as a quality show."

Today's activities get under way at noon. They include a magic show, belly dancers, a jazz group and the Lone Star Revue Band.

Admission is $2 for adults. Kids under 12 are free.

Shuttle bus service, courtesy of the First National Bank, is available free of charge at the corner of Garfield Street and Missouri Avenue.

Italy's lack of response 'unsurprising'

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
European Correspondent, The Hearst Newspapers

ROME — Italy's Communists, known for their past criticism of Soviet transgressions, have had nothing bad to say about the shooting down of the South Korean 747 airliner.

Their silence is markedly out of keeping with their reputation for "independence" from Moscow. But it has come as no surprise here.

Gradually and little noticed outside of Italy, the party that invented "Eurocommunism" and denounced the Soviet invasions of Czechoslovakia and Afghanistan, as well as the suppression of Solidarity in Poland, has been moving back into the Kremlin's fold.

Veteran party boss Enrico Berlinguer, displaying almost visible pain, has kept his own counsel over the civilian airliner's destruction. But several leading party figures, including its chief parliamentary spokesman, publicly came down on the Soviets' side.

As Alberto Cavaleri, editor of the major Italian newspaper Corriere della Sera, pointed out, "Not for 15 years have Italian Communists who could be said to represent the party's mainstream supported Soviet aggression. Clearly, something has changed."

Asute communist watchers here believe the change's implications reach beyond Italy. A few years ago, the Italian party, by far the largest communist organization in the Western world, seemed poised for a complete break with Moscow. The latter's response was to bring to bear all of the political, financial and disciplinary weapons at its disposal in an all-out effort to whip the Italians back into line.

Professor Leopoldo Trieste, one of the country's keenest students of the communist movement, said the Russians' crackdown reflects a decision to "batten down the hatches."

"The Soviets are preparing for a lengthy period of international crisis in which relations with the West will remain at an extremely low ebb, possibly for many, many years," he said.

"In circumstances of that kind, the ambiguous position of the biggest Western communist party would be politically encumbent, to say the least. In an era of relatively relaxed tensions, the Soviets could just tolerate a maverick communist party in Italy. In the highly charged period they now foresee, it is inadmissible."

Their strategy has been the customary one of building up a hardline faction within the leadership, appealing to personal ambition as much as, if not more than, to ideological "purity." They have encouraged a sense of disillusion at the party's grass roots with its "softness" toward "imperialism" and the "bourgeoisie." This has been all the easier since the politics of moderation followed by Berlinguer for the past decade have not brought the party perceptibly nearer to power.

Although Berlinguer's position as party chief has not come under direct attack, he has been under growing pressure from the rising figure of Armando Cossutta, now widely referred to in Italian political circles as "Moscow's man." Not long ao, that label would have been enough to sink him. Today, in a changing climate, Cossutta is judged to be more popular with the rank-and-file than Berlinguer.

"A decade ago, the party's intellectuals and their publications were all critical of Soviet doctrine and actions," Trieste said. "Now, it's the reverse. The publications that speak for groups other than the party directorate are mostly pro-Soviet and critical of Berlinguer. It is plain that the Soviets have poured money into this offensive and are attracting the ambitious young party professionals who, in the past, would have been found on the other side of the argument."

With Berlinguer on the defensive, the Italian Communists are slipping back under stern Soviet tutelage where the only acceptable role for a party member is slavish obedience to orders from the East.

Marine compound shelled; U.S. jets thunder over Chouf

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shellfire hit the Marine compound at Beirut airport Saturday and U.S. jets thundered over the Chouf mountains, where Druse fighters were said to have massacred 64 Christian villagers. Fears mounted for the safety of as many as 40,000 other Christians trapped by Druse militiamen.

Beirut television reported that 70 carloads of Christian refugees from the mountain fighting demonstrated in front of the residence of U.S. Ambassador Robert Dillon demanding American intervention to halt the bloodshed, which blew up after the Israelis pulled back from the Chouf a week ago.

Warrant Officer Charles Rowe, spokesman for the U.S. Marine contingent of the multinational peacekeeping force, reported no casualties from the latest shelling. He said the jets — two U.S. Navy F-14 Tomcats from the carrier Dwight D. Eisenhower — scrambled to reconnoiter and demonstrate force.

The U.S. jets first took to the skies over Lebanon Wednesday along with French fighter-bombers after U.S. and French positions were shelled in west Beirut. Four Marines were killed Monday and Tuesday, and two French peacekeepers were killed Wednesday.

The U.S. frigate Bowen opened up with its five-inch guns Thursday after the Marine compound again came under fire from Druse batteries. It was the first use of American Navy firepower since the Marines landed a year ago. The Tomcats also flew over the Chouf Thursday.

The Christian Voice of Lebanon radio said Saturday that 64 more Christians were "massacred" by the Druse in the overrun Chouf village of El-Bire, 15 miles southeast of Beirut. The Druse Progressive Socialist Party said those killed in El-Bire were Christian militiamen.

Laure Speziali, director of the Beirut office of the International Red Cross, said army sources told her 64 bodies had been found in the village. But she said the Red Cross was unable to reach the town to check the massacre claim, one of several made both by Christians and Druse in the past week.

She said Druse fighters turned back two Red Cross convoys which on Friday tried to reach Deir Al-Kamar, where an estimated 25,000 to 40,000 refugees are trapped. Deir Al-Kamar and El-Bire are adjacent towns. Another Red Cross attempt to reach Deir Al-Kamar failed Saturday.

The local Druse leader, Sheik Mohammed Abu Shakra, said the Red Cross could enter only when Christian forces free 30 Druse women he claimed were taken prisoner after an alleged massacre of Druse civilians in the nearby town of Kfar Matta.

The overall Druse leader, Walid Jumblatt, told a radio interviewer in Damascus, Syria, that his forces would not storm Deir Al-Kamar and would protect Christians who took refuge there.

"I give the Christian population of Deir Al-Kamar and the refugees of that town my word that they will not be harmed," Jumblatt said.

But in Beirut, a spokesman for the Phalange, the largest Christian militia force, described the situation in Deir Al-Kamar as "more than tragic. People are sleeping in the streets and in the woods," he said. "Many of them have no blankets. We fear epidemics may be starting at any moment."

Most of the refugees come from Christian settlements.

Border chief feels he's spinning wheels, not deporting aliens

EL PASO (AP) — Alan Eliason feels like he's crying wolf. Most days his job of chasing illegal aliens is more like chasing his own tail.

The El Paso border patrol sector chief has been crying out since the first of the year that efforts to seal the U.S. frontier from job-hungry Mexicans have been hamstrung by manpower shortages and lack of legislation to hinder employers who give jobs to illegal aliens.

After ninth months of record-breaking apprehensions of illegal aliens on the four-state border with Mexico, no one seems to be listening to Eliason. "We're stretched as far as we can go," said the beleaguered 25-year border patrol veteran. "We now await the will of Congress."

Along the 1,952-mile U.S.-Mexico border, about 950,000 illegal aliens have been caught since October trying to wade, walk and sneak into the United States, immigration officials report.

House debate is pending on the Simpson-Mazzoli bill, which would impose civil and criminal sanctions on employers giving jobs to paperless workers. Currently, there is no penalty to U.S. companies that employ illegal aliens.

The Senate already has passed its version of the bill, but to many career patrolmen such as Eliason, their hopes for help on the border may go unheeded because so many Mexicans continue to flee their impoverished country in hopes of employment.

"At certain times, certain days, we cannot handle another illegal alien because our hands literally are full," Eliason said. Patrolmen often are so busy returning captured aliens to Mexico that they can't chase after others who have entered illegally, he said.

Alan Eliason

Eliason is one of 400 border patrolmen who prowl the Rio Grande near El Paso and pilot planes through the high deserts of southern New Mexico and West Texas over 341 miles of scrubland that is favored by aliens.

White House: Drought affecting food prices

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The White House says the cost of food has increased and is no longer dropping because of "the drought in the farm states."

Larry Speakes, deputy press secretary to the president, was asked if it would not have been cheaper had the government heeded the request of farmers earlier and extended federal aid to offset drought ravages. Speakes replied quickly that he could not answer that.

Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, returned to Washington Friday from a month of observing the effects of drought on West Texas farmers and ranchers. He predicted the price of meat would soon drop sharply.

But that could be only temporary relief for consumers, he said. The cost of cattle feed is way up, partly as a result of the Payment-in-Kind program initiated by the Reagan administration in an effort to cut surpluses of U.S. farm commodities. Farmers liked it because it made prices go up, but the price advance was not welcome to the men who must now pay for all of their livestock feed as the searing drought has wiped out grasses. Commodities futures are up because of the prospect of scarcity from ranches and farms.

"In West Texas today, cattle, sheep and goats are starving, so owners are shipping them to markets as fast as possible," points out Loeffler. "Some men are trying to buy them back cheap but that will not work for there is no way to feed the cattle. We need a feed assistance program but we have not been able to convince officials in Washington as to its urgency."

Loeffler spoke with sadness after spending a month looking into the faces of his constituents in the 21st district and having to tell them that aid was not on the way.

Loeffler's disappointment stems from the fact that the late arriving disaster and emergency loans will not help ranchers. To qualify for the aid, borrowers must first prove they cannot get credit from banks in the usual way. Interest on the two types of loans available is either 8 percent or 14 percent, depending on the borrower's means, but losses suffered must be proven. It is easier to do that with farmers, explained Loeffler. They can measure losses specifically at harvest time, but for a rancher who must sell his livestock now at low prices, that is difficult to assess.

"Few people from the 21st district can get any benefit from this type of disaster loan," said Loeffler. "It may help the people of the Midwest but it will not help people in West Texas."

Now that effects of the drought are being felt in other areas of the country some senators like James Sasser of Tennessee are urging that Agriculture Secretary John Block accept without appeal the decision of a U.S. district court judge. The judge ruled that Block had no right to interpret existing statutes governing distribution of a $600 million emergency loan program as unnecessary because Block judged the national situation not an emergency.

U.S. Marshalls guard courts

Since its inception, the U.S. Marshalls Service has been responsible for the security of federal courts. Today it's also responsible for the security of some 1,600 federal judges, U.S. magistrates and other members of the judiciary; for jurors, witnesses, attorneys and other trial-process participants, and for the general security of federal courts in 400 locations.

Truck drivers dump on Houston officials

HOUSTON (AP) — With horns blaring, some 60 dump trucks circled City Hall on Saturday to protest the City Council move to give out-of-town firms contracts to clean up debris from Hurricane Alicia.

The City Council last week awarded 10 contracts, worth $3 million. All but one of the seven contractors represent firms outside the Houston area.

"I think we should have gotten the jobs," said James Luce, 40, an independent truck driver. He said his truck has been idle for most of the past two years because of the city's sagging economy.

"But now we have a chance to make some money and someone from out of town is taking it," Luce said.

Gary Credeur, 30, a driver for J.K. Trucking, complained that out-of-town firms were undercutting local bids and "taking the work away from us."

Prisoners may be transferred

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Arbitrators will decide whether to transfer to federal custody 24 Texas prison inmates who claim they have been harassed since they were called as witnesses in the capital murder trials of fellow prisoner Eroy Edward Brown.

Attorneys representing the state and the inmates submitted the arbitration agreement to U.S. District Judge Norman Black of Houston. Black was expected to sign the agreement this week, said Douglas Becker, an Austin attorney representing the state.

Attorneys said they believed the agreement marks the first time the Texas Department of Corrections has allowed prisoners' claims to be settled outside court.

The 24 inmates asked to be transferred to federal custody, claiming they have been harassed for their parts in Brown's trials.

Brown, 32, was accused of murdering two TDC officers while trying to escape in April 1981 from the Ellis Unit outside Huntsville. Brown said he killed both men in self defense.

Brown's trial in the drowning of Ellis Unit Warden Wallace M. Pack was moved to Galveston on a change of venue. The first proceeding in March 1982 ended with the jury deadlocked 11-1 for acquittal. Six months later, Brown was acquiitted.

He also is scheduled to be tried Oct. 31 in Edinburg on a capital murder charge in the shooting death of Ellis Unit farm manager Billy Max Moore.

Brown will complete his original 12-year sentence for armed robbery next month, Becker said.

Several inmates testified that Pack was a vicious man, given to episodes of brutality. Others said they respected the warden and considered him a stern but fair administrator.

Chez Eddy's chef Judy Clay works up a broiled chicken with a sauce in the kitchen at Houston's Methodist Hospital.

Hospital develops gourmet restaurant

HOUSTON (AP) — About three years ago, a battery of chefs went into a kitchen at Methodist Hospital and began what sounded like an impossible task — developing recipes for a gourmet restaurant which would use very little salt and no butter.

Officials of the Sid Richardson Institute for Preventive Medicine, under whose auspices the restaurant was to operated, set tough limits on sodium, animal fat and cholesterol content. Doctors and patients at the institute are highly conscious of the effects those substances have on the cardiovascular system.

All of which presents a basic problem for a cook.

"When you take out the salts and the fats, you take away a lot of what gives food its taste," said John Adams, assistant administrator for the institute.

Adams and general manager Lois Johnson tout reviews like Houston City magazine's as evidence the team overcame its handicaps. Chez Eddy, the reviewer said, "might be the best restaurant in Houston; it is undoubtably the best restaurant in a hospital anywhere."

Chez Eddy's customers include patients in the Sid Richardson program (an exercise and diet plan run by the hospital), doctors and drop-ins.

About 65 customers pay an average of $13.60 apiece to indulge themselves in Chez Eddy's brand of asceticism at lunch each weekday, Adams said. The restaurant — named for Houston oilman Edward Scurlock, who formerly owned the land on which the building stands — serves about 35 at dinner, he said.

The kitchen staff of Chez Eddy compensates for the salt limits by flavoring food with stocks — boiling bones and draining off water, leaving a residue with a slight salt content. Cooks also substitute vechanels, light white sauces, for cream and butter.

"It's tough," chef Anthony Chin said. "You have to give up a lot. In the kitchen, it's very hot and people tend to get frustrated."

Chin said he and his colleagues worked about a year to concoct a menu which satisfied them, an achievement he said they reached by "doing a lot of trying and messing it up."

Border areas to get more federal grants

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Federal grants to private businesses and public institutions along the Mexican border to help rebuild the suffering economy are expected to continue, it was reported following a meeting of the Southwest Border Action Group with Vice President George Bush at the White House Friday.

Eleven cabinet members and representatives of the Small Business Administration and the Environmental Protection Agency summed up their efforts to date for Bush. He encouraged them to continue their effots while he is absent on a foreign assignment for the president. Cabinet members were present from the departments of Agriculture, Transportation, Defense, Interior, Treasury, Commerce, Labor, Health and Human Services, Housing and Urban Development, Education and Justice.

Among the projects being pushed are applications by four Texas border centers to become free trade zones. In free trade zones, goods may be brought into the country and left temporarily during transshipment or cargo regrouping, or stored under bond until disposed of. Such zones encourage trade and traffic and benefit the area financially, according to the Department of Commerce. Texas counties applying for this status are: Webb, Starr, Maverick, and Val Verde.

During the past week grants were given to provide construction and improvement of school facilities and libraries. Laredo Municipal Junior College received $800,000 to build a vocational and educational lobby.

It was reported that arrangements are going well to provide 500 jobs at Brownsville for construction of a heavy-duty drilling rig by Marathon-Le Tourneau with Global Marine Deepwater Drilling, Inc., of Los Angeles, participating. Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole described this as a Title II loan program with financing guarantees of $948 million. The government puts up no money but guarantees it if the parties to the transaction default.

Hispanic Week celebrated

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Hispanic Week will be celebrated in Washington with more recognition from national officials and power brokers than has ever been accorded Hispanic citizens in this country.

President Reagan will open Hispanic Heritage Week by greeting leaders in the Rose Garden of the White House Monday at 11:30 a.m. After that, Reagan will meet three more times with Hispanic groups during the week, with two of the meetings taking place at the White House.The groups meeting at the White House are the National Hispanic Assembly and the Hispanic Caucus.

The president will speak at one dinner arranged by the Republican National Assembly Wednesday night. It will be his second meeting with a group of Hispanics that day. Delegates to the national assembly are expected to attend.

On Thursday, Speaker of the House Tip O'Neill of Massachusetts will head a list of dinner speakers at the Hilton Hotel, including the Democratic candidate for president, Walter Mondale. Four Hispanic officeholders are also on the agenda: Gov. Tony Anaya of New Mexico, and three Texas congressmen, Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, Henry Gonzalez, D-San Antonio and Solomon Ortiz, D-Corpus Christi.

Convicted murderer asks for new trial

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Charles V. Harrelson has asked for a new trial in the slaying of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., arguing that one of the key witnesses against him may have been too sick with syphilis to testify credibly.

In papers filed Friday in federal district court here, Harrelson's attorney claimed the witness, Hampton C. Robinson III, was being treated at an alcohol and drug treatment center throughout the trial.

Harrelson is serving two consecutive life sentences from his conviction last December on charges of murder, conspiracy to murder and conspiracy to obstruct justice. Prosecutors contended he was paid $250,000 to kill Wood.

Wood was the first federal judge this century to be slain when he was gunned down outside his San Antonio townhouse May 29, 1979.

In seeking the new trial for Harrelson, attorney Tom Sharpe Jr. contended the government violated its court-ordered promise to reveal any illnesses such as the syphilis from which he claims Robinson suffered.

"The failure of the government to provide the complete medical record of Hampton Robinson compels the entry of an order granting a new trial," Sharpe said.

The Brownsville attorney argued that syphilis and the drugs that may have been prescribed to combat it could have hindered Robinson's memory, and that the fact that he had the disease may have impeached his credibility and that of his wife, another prosecution witness.

Sharpe said that Jo Ann Robinson revealed that she and her husband, a longtime Harrelson gambling companion, were kept at the Starlight Hospital in Kerrville during the 10-week trial.

Hospital officials, contacted Friday night, declined to discuss the couple.

The assistant U.S. attorneys who prosecuted the Wood case could not be located for comment.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

If you can't get bill, get study

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Legislative wisdom holds that "if you can't get a bill, get a study."

In that regard, members of the House of Representatives seem to have done well, judging from the list of "charges" to standing committees made by Speaker Gib Lewis.

Many of the major issues — and many minor issues, too — which failed to win approval in the 1983 Legislature are on the agenda for study before the 1985 Legislature.

For example, the Urban Affairs Committee is to "examine local option pari-mutuel wagering on horse racing, and its impact on urban areas."

There doesn't appear to be any call for a study of pari-mutuel wagering's impact on rural areas. But then, it's not likely the committee's study will come up with any particularly new or startling revelations.

Probably a more important charge for Urban Affairs is to work with the County Affairs Committee and the House-Senate Joint Committee on Indigent Health Care regarding payment of medical care provided to indigents at publicly funded hospitals.

Lawmakers have started on several occasions to grapple with that issue, which is of growing concern in a number of urban areas, and particularly in South Texas, and which has caused friction between some big-city hospitals and outlying areas over treatment of out-of-county patients.

Ways and Means members are to study taxes, including "all exemptions under the sales tax," and to work with the Select Committee on Public Education and the House-Senate Joint Committee on State Fiscal Policy.

Ways and Means members are likely to find themselves in an uncomfortable situation in 1985, unless the state's economy really begins booming again, since lawmakers managed to avoid a tax increase in 1983 only by postponing some expenditures, cutting back programs, and shifting money from one tax period to another by changing the dates for payment of taxes.

Natural Resources Committee is to look at legislation for management of groundwater, a perennial touchy subject, as well as changes on surface water rights.

The panel is also to work with the House-Senate Joint Committee on Water Resources, which is attempting to work out the differences between the House and Senate — and river authorities — which defeated the 1983 water legislation package.

However, Natural Resources isn't looking at importing water to West Texas.

That job has been given to the State, Federal and International Relations Committee, which is to talk with "bordering states" regarding "the possibility" of import (although interest by most states hasn't been overly encouraging in the past).

The same committee also is to monitor "the effect of the continuing Mexican peso devaluation on the economics of the Texas border area," and the effects of federal immigration legislation.

Liquor Regulation takes up what were two of the most controversial proposals during the 1983 session, with studies of the possibility of raising the legal drinking age from 19 to 21, and of laws prohibiting open alcoholic beverage containers "in moving vehicles."

County Affairs is to look at county ordinance-making authority, a long-standing source of contention, along with investigating sources of revenues for counties, which might include a look at optional sales tax authority.

Criminal Jurisprudence, which was one of the busiest, and most productive committees in 1983, is to continue looking at ways to improve Texas' penal system, including a general study of laws on fraud, fiduciary relationships and white-collar crime.

The panel's work also includes tracking the 1983 prison reform measures to see how they're being implemented and to "determine the benefits derived from these measures, both in terms of recidivism and in terms of monetary savings."

Congress returns to confront Soviets, Middle East, deficits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress returns from a five-week recess to confront an autumn of hard choices about the Soviet Union and the Mideast, and a legislative stalemate over trimming bulging budget deficits.

The recess ends with the House and Senate reconvening at noon Monday. While they were gone, legislators unleashed a torrent of angry rhetoric against the Soviet Union after one of its interceptors shot down a South Korean jumbo jet Sept. 1, killing all 269 people aboard, including 61 Americans. Among the passengers was Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga.

Initial legislative reaction to the incident will be largely symbolic, with leaders in the House and Senate preparing — in cooperation with President Reagan — resolutions condemning the Soviet action.

The long-term impact of the attack is more difficult to determine.

"The principle effect has been to restate the determination to stay militarily strong ...," said Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn. "It will enhance the chances for passing the general military budget."

Nevertheless, Baker added, arguments over separate elements of the defense budget — such as the MX missile and the B-1 bomber — will continue.

"It (the Soviet attack) will not automatically mean all these things will be disposed of. Some of them just won't pass. I can think of one or two that are in trouble and still will be in trouble," Baker said.

Another concern facing returning legislators is the continued civil war between religious factions in Lebanon and the lack of say from Congress in the deployment of U.S. Marines there.

Congressional sources have said Reagan's allies in the Republican-controlled Senate are preparing legislation that would approve the presence of U.S. troops in Lebanon.

The effect of such a measure would be to relieve the administration of pressure under the 1973 War Powers Act that would limit the stay of the Marines to a maximum of 90 days unless Congress approved.

The sources, who asked not to be quoted by name, said the idea of legislation authorizing the troops to remain in Lebanon surfaced during a Sept. 4 White House meeting during which the president briefed bipartisan congressional leaders on the Soviet attack on the South Korean jetliner.

But Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations, said last week that he would try to cut off money for U.S. troops in Lebanon as of Nov. 1 unless the president files a report under a section of the War Powers Act that would require him to acknowledge the Marines are in a combat situation.

Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md., said Saturday he would introduce a joint resolution Monday stating that the Marines are involved in hostilities covered by the War Powers Act. His measure would authorize keeping the troops in Lebanon for six more months, but would require congressional approval before the president could expand the number or role of U.S. forces there.

Mathias said he supports keeping the Marines in Lebanon for now. But, he added, "If the president fails to abide by the act, he runs a serious risk that the American people will not support our commitment in Lebanon."

Pushed into the background by intensified fighting in Lebanon and deteriorating relations with the Soviet Union has been U.S. involvement in Central America.

Instructor collects old folk medicine cures

JAMESTOWN, N.D. (AP) — Sick with the measles? Try eating a roasted mouse.

Tie the skin of a black cat around your neck if you have a sore throat from damp evenings.

And if your skin is turning yellow, roll a live spider in butter and eat it.

They are among the old cures collected by English instructor Jeanne Sorenson for the folklore course she teaches at Jamestown College.

"Folklore isn't something that's dead," says Ms. Sorenson. "It's our link with mass culture. Folklore makes a community. It binds people."

She admits that some bits of folklore are a little odd, like putting kerosene in the chickens' drinking water to keep them healthy in the winter, or carrying rattlesnake rattlers in a hat band to cure a headache.

But she points out that some is legitimate.

"Some people think that only the uneducated folks practice folklore, yet many of the folklore cures are grounded in scientific fact."

Early Spanish explorers, for instance, extracted a bitter white substance from the pulverized bark of the Cinchona tree. Dissolved in a beverage, it was given to people suffering from high fevers.

In 1820 two French chemists isolated the active alkaloid from that powder and called it quinine.

In 1775 an American doctor was advised by an old woman healer to use the purple foxglove plant in treating heart ailments. He later discovered in the plant's chemical composition what is now called digitalis.

Prime minister to visit friend, Andy Young

ATLANTA (AP) — A visit by Zimbabwe's Prime Minister Robert Mugabe to Mayor Andrew Young this weekend is a reunion between two friends who met at a party and went on to help shape a nation.

A few hours before Mugabe was due to arrive in Atlanta on Saturday, Young spoke warmly of his friend, saying Mugabe would stop off in Georgia to get "some sense of where this country is" before traveling to Washington for talks Tuesday at President Reagan's invitation.

The former U.N. ambassador compared Mugabe's independence struggle in Rhodesia with the American civil rights movement, and recalled the day he met the former guerrilla leader.

"To be candid, I met Robert Mugabe at a party," Young said. "It was a typical African party, very formal, at the Tanzanian ambassador's house in Mozambique.

"I SAW THIS LOVELY LADY standing in a corner, all alone, and that's who I went up to talk to. She said, 'I'm Sally Mugabe.' And I said, 'You're not related to that awful terrorist Robert Mugabe, are you?'

"And she said, 'He's my husband.' And just then, Mugabe leaned over and said, 'Young man, in Africa, before we speak to the wives, we meet the husbands.' And he laughed ... and we became good friends."

That was in 1977, when Young was serving as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations in the Carter administration. Mugabe's ZANU party was working for majority rule in white-controlled Rhodesia, which became the independent state of Zimbabwe in 1980, with Mugabe as its prime minister.

Young had helped the Carter administration develop policy guidelines that called for maintaining economic sanctions against the southern African nation despite the election of Bishop Abel Muzorewa, a black, as prime minister, in 1978. The settlement that had led to Muzorewa's election was rejected by Mugabe's guerrillas and by nearly every other African nation.

ALTHOUGH GREAT BRITAIN was chiefly responsible for the settlement that led to the creation of Zimbabwe, U.S. officials also credited President Carter's insistence that the U.S. sanctions be maintained until there was an agreement that offered fair elections leading to true majority rule.

Young said he developed an admiration for the soft-spoken former teacher.

"I decided he was the very proper British schoolmaster, not the rabble-rousing freedom fighter I had heard about," Young said. "He was stubborn ... very sure of himself, and highly principled and committed. I learned to attribute that to his Jesuit-Catholic upbringing."

Young resigned as ambassador to the United Nations in 1979 after a controversy over contacts with the Palestine Liberation Organization. He later founded two organizations to encourage U.S. companies to do business with the Third World, particularly Africa.

HE HAS VISITED AFRICA four times since taking office as mayor of Atlanta last year, and last visited Mugabe in January.

Mugabe's visit to Atlanta is scheduled to last through Monday morning, when he will leave for Washington and the beginning of his official state visit. While in Atlanta, he will hold a news conference, be honored at a dinner with hosts Young and his wife, Jean, and speak at Morehouse College, a predominantly black institution in Atlanta.

Young noted parallels in Mugabe's struggle for independence and his own work with the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. in the American civil rights movement.

"In the early '60s, as we began our demonstrations here, there began to be non-violent demonstrations in Zimbabwe as well. The difference is that (there) they were almost always put down by violence."

Mugabe will also meet with business executives while in Atlanta. Young said he hoped the visit would show Mugabe and the world "that this is the kind of place where you can come and do business ... I think Atlanta is a better gateway to America than New York or Washington."

And besides, the mayor noted, his friend should feel right at home in Atlanta. "Zimbabwe reminds me very much of Georgia," he said. "It's the only place in Africa where I saw big tall pine trees."

Couple marries in bus stop shelter

NEW YORK (AP) — The groom wore black tie and the bride dressed in white, but most guests wore shorts and honking horns substituted for wedding bells as Jerry Mosier and Roselee Blooston got married at the bus stop where they met and then rode off in a city bus.

A strolling violinist provided music. About 75 passersby joined 12 wedding guests in cheering and throwing rice as the couple tied the knot Friday in a glass-walled bus shelter on Manhattan's Upper East Side.

"It's where we met and it's where we're getting married. It's very simple," Mosier, 28, said before the ceremony.

Afterwards, waitresses from a nearby restaurant passed out glasses and their boss poured champagne as police kept the crowd from blocking 2nd Avenue.

The couple rented a city bus to carry the wedding party to a catering hall in Brooklyn. The destination sign on the bus read, "Just married. Congratulations Jerry and Roselee."

Transit Authority spokeswoman Jeanne Edelson said it was the first wedding in a bus stop that the authority was aware of.

"New York is a street fair, so that's what it's all about," said best man Paul Corell, who was dressed in a tuxedo.

Mosier, who works at a Manhattan advertising agency, met his 30-year-old bride at the bus shelter "at 11 p.m. on a cold and rainy night" three years ago in May.

"We talked and it was nice. We didn't exchange names, but we found each other anyway," he said.

Mosier knew from their conversation that Ms. Blooston was performing at the Comic Strip, a local comedy nightclub. He tracked her down by calling the nightclub, getting her name and looking it up in the telephone directory.

"I think it's very romantic," said Grace Seid, who lives near the bus stop and paused to see what was going on. "It's the spice of life."

And, Ms. Seid added, the bus stop wedding "is an inspiration for those who ride the buses. You never know."

School refuses to release film

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The University of Utah has decided against releasing film about the implant of the world's first permanent artificial heart at the request of the family of heart recipient Barney Clark.

"I think Mrs. Clark said it verges on sensationalism," said University Medical Center spokesman John Dwan.

The documentary, filmed by the university's public television station, KUED-TV, included films of the surgery itself.

Clark, a retired Seattle area dentist, died March 23 after living 112 days on the air-driven, plastic Utah Heart. He had suffered from cardiomyopathy, a degenerative disease of the heart muscle.

Pastor calls for Vatican protest

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A strike by priests "may not be a bad idea" if the Vatican persists in excluding women from the priesthood, says the Rev. Vincent G. Connery, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart.

Suggesting it may be time for "the slaves to revolt," Connery is calling on fellow clergymen to campaign against the Vatican's refusal to allow the ordination of women.

Connery, 33, made his comments in a letter to the editor in Thursday's edition of The Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.

His supervisor, Bishop Walter F. Sullivan of Richmond, said Friday that Connery "has a right to share his thoughts."

Children disinters remains

SPOTSYLVANIA, Va. (AP) — A brother and sister have been charged with disinterring the remains of their slain father, allegedly to remove gold-crowned teeth they believed bore the number of a Swiss bank account.

John Gavin III, 28, and his sister Julia, 24, were charged under a law that makes it a felony to disinter or displace a body after burial. A hearing was set for Monday.

Sheriff's Deputy D.W. Harr said Miss Gavis told him "the spirits told her" about a bank account.

John Stanley Gavis Jr. was shot to death in March 1978 at the family home along with his wife and one of their six sons.

Official named co-conspirator

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — U.S. Attorney Richard Turner has named AGRI Industries president B.J. O'Dowd as an unindicted co-conspirator in the alleged theft of 133,000 bushels of government wheat.

Turner said in the same court document Friday that one of the six AGRI officials indicted in July for conspiring to steal the grain later was given an "unprecedented" 25 percent pay raise by O'Dowd.

AGRI and six of its officials, not including O'Dowd, were indicted in July in a case involving 40 railroad cars of wheat, valued at $500,000, that had been stored in an AGRI-owned elevator.

Abortion clinic founder resigns

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Robert McCoy, founder and executive director of one of the largest abortion clinics in Minnesota, has resigned after investigators concluded that he sexually harassed female employees.

McCoy maintained Friday that he did harass employees, saying his resignation was prompted by the "turmoil" the allegations produced at the Midwest Health Center for Women.

Investigators for the Minnesota Department of Human Rights concluded that McCoy had sexually harassed female employees. The findings were published Aug. 29 by the Minneapolis Star and Tribune.

Girl killed on route to concert

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A 16-year-old girl was killed as she tried to run across railroad tracks in front of a passenger train on her way to a David Bowie concert, authorities said.

The girl was identified Saturday as Lynn Yoshida of Palos Verdes.

Stadium Operations Manager Bill Turner said she tried to get across the tracks despite warnings from her boyfriend and two other friends.

The four teen-agers were hiking across a field to the concert hall when the accident happened at 7:10 p.m. Friday, he said.

Bell announces sites of forums

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary T.H. Bell announced Saturday the sites of four regional meetings to discuss implementation of tougher standards in U.S. schools.

At those meetings, educators, parents and civic leaders will discuss a blue-ribbon panel's recommendations that schools should be more demanding of students and that teachers must also be better prepared.

The forums, which will focus on the National Commission on Excellence in Education's report, "A Nation At Risk," will take place in Philadelphia on Sept. 20, Athens, Ga., on Sept. 23, Kingsport, Tenn., on Sept. 30 and Renton, Wash., on Oct. 3.

That commission, which Bell appointed, warned in a widely circulated report last April 26 that the nation's schools were facing "a rising tide of mediocrity."

Bell's department held seven regional forums earlier this year, including one in Minnesota attended by President Reagan. Bell said a twelfth will be held next month at a site still to be selected, and that he then will convene a two-day national conference to discuss school reform.

Bell's department is inviting politicians, educators, and parents from surrounding states to attend the sessions, in which the education secretary and several commission members will participate.

The participants in the Philadelphia meeting, to be held at the University of Pennsylvania's Annenberg Center, will include educators and others from Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Ohio, New Jersey and the District of Columbia.

The meeting in Athens will be held at the University of Georgia's Fine Arts Center and draw participants from Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Mississippi and South Carolina.

The Tennessee forum will be held at the Ross N. Robinson Middle School in Kingsport for those from Tennessee, Kentucky, North Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia.

Those from Washington, Oregon and Alaska have been invited to the forum at the Charles A. Lindbergh High School in Renton, a suburb of Seattle.

The previous forums were held in East Lansing, Mich.; Hopkins, Minn.; Albuquerque, N.M.; Salt Lake City, Utah; Whittier, Calif.; Wichita, Kan.; and Portland, Maine.

Reagan likes hearing aid

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — President Reagan has told officials of Starkey Laboratories Inc. that he is pleased with the firm's tiny hearing aid, which he began wearing about two weeks ago.

"The president has reported back to us that he was doing fine and that it's nice to have a hearing aid. He said he liked the sound and it helps him hear better, which is good," said Dale Thorstad, vice president of the suburban Minneapolis company.

Reagan, who suffered a partial hearing loss years ago during his acting career when gun blanks were fired near his right ear, was fitted for his hearing aid Aug. 22 in Los Angeles, during his California vacation.

The president is using a new hearing aid called a canal-type.

"It's very, very small. Instead of filling the entire ear, it takes up just the canal portion of the ear and the rest of the ear is left open," Thorstad explained.

Canal-type hearing aids have been available in the United States for only about 1½ years, he said.

Jackson's staff readies for transition

By SOLVEIG TORVIK

From Our Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON - There is a single red rose on the reception desk where Matt Dauchess is sorting through hundreds of letters.

Otherwise, there is no visible sign of mourning in the hushed, nearly deserted office.

Dauchess is opening messages from all over the world — Jerusalem to Boston — to the family of the late Sen. Henry M. Jackson, Washington Democrat. They are from "people he's helped or who have followed him for 40 years," said staff aide Dauchess.

The pictures are off the walls. There are moving boxes stacked everywhere. A few visitors are still dropping by to sign the guest book and offer their condolences to the stunned staff, which is clearing out room 711 in the new white marble Hart Senate Office Building to make room for Republican Daniel J. Evans, who will move in Monday morning.

Evans, who may eventually be bumped out of the choice real estate on the 7th floor by a senator with more seniority, will have to be content with a small office formerly occupied by a senior aide while the move out of Jackson's inner office is underway. The plan is that he will have the main floor of the two-story suite and Jackson's people will be moved upstairs to finish sorting out the senator's effects.

The effects are considerable. Jackson had been in Washington 41 years, longer than any other member of Congress, when he died Sept. 1.

"We've got a stack of records and memorabilia 10 feet high in the attic of the Russell Building," said press secretary Rick Cocker. Jackson occupied an office there until last January, when the costly, controversial Hart Building was completed. Jackson had not decided where his papers would be donated before he died.

Congressional historians contend that 85 percent of a senator's papers can be destroyed without damaging the historical record, said Cocker. "The real trick is detecting that 15 percent," he said. "The main thing we have to do is make sure they are in a form that is retrievable and usable," he said. When Mrs. Jackson decides where the documents will be donated, that institution will provide his staff with professional assistance in saving items of genuine historical value.

Cocker manned the phones all night in the Hart office -- with a brief interruption to rush home at 3 a.m. to thwart a burglary in progress at his Arlington, Va. home -- the night Jackson died. He and he many of the staffers who don't leave right away for other jobs will be on hand to help Evans out in the transition.

Part of Cocker's efforts for the next 60 days while he and the staff remain on the payroll of the Secretary of the Senate will involve tracking down video tapes of the senator's appearances.

Among the unfinished business is the report of Jackson's observations on his recent trip to China and how to handle the hundreds of personal hardship cases still pending that involve Social Security or military personnel problems, said Cocker.

Blacks' spending power being felt

By the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

When the $70 dinner bill arrived at the table in the Beverly Hills restaurant, David C. Cherry Jr. did not whip out his usual credit card.

Instead, Cherry paid for the meal with a thick stack of $2 bills as part of Black Dollar Days, a Sept. 1-5 drive sponsored by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Blacks were asked to spend the seldom-circulated $2 bills and Susan B. Anthony dollar coins to illustrate the economic clout of the black community.

The restaurant employees reacted "with surprise and a little bit of disdain (because) they had to count through all that ... but they took it," Cherry, who was the Black Dollar Days chairman for the Los Angeles NAACP chapter, said. "It had its effect, a psychological effect and an awareness effect."

Black Dollar Days — pronounced as "chiefly successful" by NAACP Executive Director Benjamin L. Hooks — was designed to showcase the NAACP's new emphasis on economic issues rather than on the more traditional civil-rights concerns. Those traditional battles for such things as school desegregation and fair housing are still being waged, Hooks said, but because the NAACP has been instrumental in making gains in those traditional civil-rights areas, "now we're dealing with the last great barrier: economics."

The NAACP's other two major areas of emphasis are politics, largely by a renewed emphasis on voter registration and encouraging more blacks to seek office, and continuing economic support of black institutions and businesses, Hooks added.

The NAACP is focusing on economic issues now because "we've just simply not made the progress there," Hooks said.

A key part of the NAACP's economic thrust is its effort to negotiate, corporation by corporation, what it calls "fair-share" agreements.

In these negotiations, the NAACP demands black representation on boards of directors and in corporation management, an aggressive affirmative-action program and minority-procurement programs. The national chapter is targeting large corporations, utilities and national chains, while the local chapters are focusing on banks and small businesses.

So far the NAACP has negotiated several fair-share agreements worth more than $100 million. Among the companies entering into agreements with the national organization are Cincinnati-based Kroger Co., the big supermarket and drug-store chain, and Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., Louisville, Ky., the makers of Kools and other cigarettes.

The 3,400-member Beverly Hills-Hollywood NAACP chapter has negotiated agreements with Walt Disney Productions and MGM-UA Entertainment Co.

Boycotting companies reluctant to enter into agreements with the civil-rights organization will be a tactic reserved as a last resort. "Either they'll talk or we'll walk," Hooks said.

Watt's plans blocked

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A federal judge has issued a preliminary injunction barring the Interior Department from allowing development on 1.5 million acres of federal land in 10 Western states.

U.S. District Judge Lawrence Karlton issued the order Friday in a suit filed by six environmental groups.

At issue is whether Interior Secretary James Watt violated federal laws last year when he issued an order dropping the public lands from a wilderness inventory compiled by the Bureau of Land Management.

The environmental groups question whether Watt gave adequate opportunity for public participation before making his decision, whether environmental impact statements were needed and whether Watt violated other environmental restrictions and rights to appeal.

Robert Dreher, an attorney for the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund, said the case centers on "split estate" land owned by the Bureau of Land Management.

In the Chouf Mountains of Lebanon, right-wing Christian militiamen reload an artillery piece Saturday as a similar piece in the background fires. Druse and Christian forces continued to shell each other despite ongoing efforts to work out a cease-fire.

Lebanese leaders consider bloodless coup to end war

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration, in an effort to prevent the Lebanese government from being toppled by pro-Syrian, Soviet-backed forces, has begun preliminary discussions with Lebanese leaders about a bloodless military coup that would install a multi-religious governing national committee.

This was disclosed by administration officials who said that such a step would be a "last resort" if the fighting between the Lebanese army and Syrian-supported Druze and Shiite Moslems, which the State Department said Friday threatens to "turn even more tragic," continues to escalate.

The officials said there are no signs that the government of President Amin Gemayel is directly threatened, although there was heavy mortar shelling Friday near the presidential palace in the Beirut suburb of Baabda and the defense ministry in nearby Yarze, an area recently evacuated by Israeli troops.

But other sources pointed to several new developments that could hasten the declaration of a bloodless coup in Lebanon which would put the military nominally in charge but also might enlarge the mandate of the 1,200-man U.S. peacekeeping force.

The embattled Lebanese government has been pressing U.S. officials, chiefly Robert McFarlane, President Reagan's special Middle East envoy, to put more "muscle" into its non-combat role. "Syria looks at the U.S. and they see this dormant giant," Abdullah Bouhabib, Lebanon's ambassador to the U.S. said Thursday.

The U.S. role, already under attack in Congress because of the deaths of four Marines in the last two weeks and continued shelling of U.S. positions outside Beirut's international airport, could become even more crucial since the Lebanese army is only a fledgling force of 30,000 troops.

Bouhabib told reporters that U.S. troops have been intentionally targeted by the Syrian-backed Druze militiamen because they want to pressure Reagan into ordering the Marines home.

In an effort to bolster the government and avoid the need for a coup, the U.S. Friday began a massive new airlift of military supplies to the Lebanese army, which has received only one-half of the promised $400 million worth of tanks, howitzers, armored personnel carriers, ammunition and other weapons.

The airlift was said by Pentagon officials to be the largest operation of its kind since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. It comes only a day after Reagan promised the U.S. forces in Lebanon "whatever support it takes to stop attacks on you." Nevertheless, the unrelenting mortar fire continued Friday.

One senior administration policymaker pointed to an 11-member committee of national unity that was quietly formed last week by the Lebanese government to help draw up a new social contract among Lebanon's many warring religious factions.

Dublin's Soviet Embassy called 'clearing house' for major spy ring

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — The Soviet Embassy in Dublin was a "clearing house for a major international spy ring," Irish government sources were quoted as saying Saturday following the expulsion of three Soviets and the wife of one of them.

The Foreign Ministry on Friday expelled Soviet First Secretary and Press Attache Guennadi Saline and Second Secretary Viktor Lipasov and his wife, Irona, citing "unacceptable activities" — diplomatic language for spying.

The ministry, without elaborating, said the charges against them were "substantial, grave and certain."

Two British papers quoted security sources as saying Mrs. Lipasov was an officer of the Soviet KGB who visited Northern Ireland, London and the industrial north of England on intelligence-gathering missions.

The Mail on Sunday quoted security sources as saying Mrs. Lipasov led a spy ring that organized the supply of Soviet arms and ammunition to units of the outlawed Irish Republican Army operating in Northern Ireland and England.

Press Association, the British domestic news agency, quoted an Irish government source as saying the expelled Soviets had been "linked to intelligence-gathering from countries outside Ireland, including Britain."

Ireland International, a Dublin-based news agency, said the intelligence was relayed in code to Moscow from the embassy.

The national radio station, RTE, also quoting official sources, said the embassy was a "clearing house for an internatinal spying operation."

Press Association reported: "It is thought the expelled trio could have been concentrating on NATO affairs." Ireland is not a member of the 16-nation Western alliance.

The opposition Fianna Fail Party called for a "reappraisal" of the number of diplomats at the Soviet Embassy.

The number of Soviet diplomats in Dublin — 17 before the expulsions — is nearly three times as many as the six envoys the Irish Republic has in Moscow.

U.S. satellite data aids French in Chad

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — The French task force deployed in Chad receives minute-by-minute information on Libyan military movements in the beleaguered country from American satellites over the Sahara, qualified diplomatic sources said Saturday.

The equipment on these satellites is so precise it can pick out a truck in the northern desert where rebels aided by Libyan troops are entrenched, said the sources.

They disclosed operational details of the 3,000-man French task force on condition that their names, functions and nationalities not be published.

According to the informants, who spoke on the condition they not be identified, a sophisticated system has been set up to relay photographic and other information obtained by American military satellites to the task force commander, Brig. Gen. Jean Poli.

The highly secret relay, which passes through the French Defense Ministry in Paris, may constitute the closest French-American military cooperation since the late Gen. Charles de Gaulle expelled the headquarters of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization from Paris.

There has been widespread speculation that the French may receive information on Libyan movements from secret military satellites of their own, launched from the French launching site at Kourou, in French Guyana.

The sources said they had no information on this and stressed the bulk of French intelligence reports on Libyan military movements in northern Chad is obtained from American spy satellites which fly over the Sahara day and night.

The troops and aircraft of the task force are under strict orders to avoid contact with Libyan forces. There have been no reported clashes between the two forces, separated by a 200-mile deep no-man's-land, since the French arrived in this former colony a month ago.

On Aug. 10, Libyan-backed rebels fighting the government of President Hissene Habre overran the strategic northern oasis of Faya-Largeau, 500 miles northeast of N'Djamena, in effect taking control of the entire sparsely inhabited northern half of Chad. The French then set up a line of strongpoints along the 15th parallel as a "deterrent" to any further Libyan advance, while rejecting demands from President Habre for a French-led offensive to drive the Libyans out of the north.

French President Francois Mitterrand is trying to use the continuing standoff to seek a political solution to the conflict.

But for military security reasons, the French forces needed continuous and accurate intelligence information on the movement of Libyan troops, heavy weapons, tanks and aircraft in the desert.

Chileans want democracy back

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Months of violent social unrest have pushed President Augusto Pinochet to offer a limited restoration of political freedoms through talks with a generation of aging political leaders he worked to discredit in his 10 years as head of Chile's military government.

But the effort has fallen into a state of suspension following the deaths of five civilians in clashes last week on another of the opposition's "Days of National Prorest."

Weary of this decade of authoritarian military rule, a wide spectrum of Chileans say they are eager to rebuild what had been one of Latin America's oldest and strongest democracies.

A highly literate population had been weighing every word of "El Dialogo" — Pinochet's dialogue with the political leaders — for its bearing on an increasingly uncertain future.

On one side of this process is a broad Democratic Alliance. It unites politicians who fought each other bitterly over the Marxist program Salvador Allende tried to impose after winning the presidency with a minority popular vote in 1970.

On the other side is Gen. Pinochet, the army commander who overthrew Allende in a bloody coup Sept. 11, 1973, with the urging of many of those now opposing him. After blaming the Marxist debacle on the whole generation of political leaders and decreeing their elimination, he now has rehabilitated them as part of his plan to stay in power.

AFTER TRYING to repress four massive once-a-month demonstrations, at a cost of 39 lives, Pinochet's government in August lifted a state of emergency, eased press censorship, let 2,300 political exiles come home and started talks with the five-party Democratic Alliance through his interior minister, Sergio Onofre Jarpa.

But as Chileans near the end of their Southern Hemisphere winter, the "political spring" many were hailing just a week ago has been bloodied by new anti-government demonstrations in which five civilians were killed last Thursday night.

Charging police brutality, the Alliance announced it was suspending the talks until Jarpa comes up with "a clear calendar" for legalizing political parties and congressional elections.

The suspension is unlikely to last long because both sides need agreement on such a timetable.

The armed forces, according to Chileans close to them, appear to have conditioned their continued support for Pinochet on a political opening that would defuse the unrest while preserving a 1980 constitution that bans Communists and other advocates of "class struggle." Pinochet is scheduled to stay in office at least six more years under that charter.

The Alliance, for its part, includes more moderates who are willing to settle for a congressional body in the hope that it might weaken Pinochet, rather than follow a leftist route and permanently break off the dialogue and seek to undermine him through violence.

AP Laserphoto

A group of supporters of Chilean President Pinochet charge down a street to fight with opponents of the controversial president Friday in downtown Santiago, Chile.

"The suspension of the dialogue is very dangerous," said Enrique Silva Cimma, the Radical Party representative on the Alliance. "We are in a situation of growing violence from the extreme left and the extreme right. Talking to the government is the only non-violent way out. We have a political and patriotic responsibility to do everything possible to prevent a bloodbath."

AS PINOCHET PREPARES to outline his own vision of the next six years, in a speech Sunday marking his 10th anniversary in power, Chile's political future is mired in doubt.

The 67-year-old army commander can claim that the deep slide of a two-year-old recession is over. But the recovery, according to most political and economic analysts, will be too slow to end the monthly protests, which grow mainly out of unrest over high unemployment, for a long time to come.

Another element of uncertainty is the weakness of the democratic institutions Pinochet's regime has repressed. Unsure of their own constituencies, leaders of the still-outlawed parties stand to lose control of the protest movement if they seem too eager to accept limited concessions.

The Alliance represents recently united splinters of Allende's Socialist Party; one of its coalition partners, the Radicals, and three parties that backed the coup — the Christian Democrats, who governed from 1964 to 1970; the Social Democrats, and conservative Nationalists.

Salvadoran land program falls short of expectations

LA CARRERA, El Salvador (AP) — A 3½-year-old program to dole land out to El Salvador's landless peasants has fallen short of early expectations. The land reform, a key weapon in a political offensive against leftist guerrillas, is struggling against an array of opponents.

Diehard landowners and powerful right-wing political parties are trying to frustrate it. Guerrillas are trying to sabotage it. And outside critics say it is contrived and short-sighted.

As much as anything, the U.S.-inspired program is hobbled by a world economic slump, and by uncertainties, apathy, terror and bloodshed among the "campesinos" it is supposed to help.

"That was the trap — 'Get your own land,' " complained Miguel Ortiz, 49, once a hired laborer, now a member of the new peasant cooperative that runs this cotton plantation.

"What good is it if you're working harder than ever and getting less?" Other straw-hatted campesinos, crowded around a visiting reporter in a cow shed, murmured in assent.

But "la tierra" — the rich, dark earth that carpets these lowlands, stretches up distant volcanoes, spreads out over the plateaus of a crowded, pitifully poor nation — remains at the heart of El Salvador's conflict.

And land reform — success or failure — will help decide its outcome.

THE PLIGHT of La Carrera, in El Salvador's cotton-growing southeast, typifies the problems of many of the 326 cooperatives created when the agrarian reform was decreed in March 1980. A later phase of the program, just as troubled, is forming tiny farms for individual campesinos.

The 6,800-acre La Carrera, taken from one of El Salvador's wealthy landowning families and turned over to 800 plantation campesinos, is producing almost as much cotton as ever. But it has shown a total $700,000 loss over the past two years, a period of worldwide recession when the price paid for its bales dropped from 30 U.S. cents a pound in 1981, to 23 cents last year.

At the same time costs rose — including seed, fertilizer and the labor of 1,200 hired workers. And the campesino owners have had to grapple with a collective debt of $2.4 million, for new housing, equipment and compensation to the former owners.

"It's heavy," cooperative accountant Jose Ovidio Barrahona said of the debt. "We're talking to the bank about stretching it out."

It is estimated that two-thirds of the new cooperatives are losing money.

Although La Carrera's new owners grumble — for one thing, they no longer get the vacations and bonuses the old "patron" bestowed on them — many other campesinos across El Salvador express satisfaction at the simple fact of land ownership. But the number benefiting from the redistribution is much smaller than originally anticipated.

THE PROGRAM'S authors had predicted it would reach 200,000 of El Salvador's estimated 300,000 landless peasant families.

But the cooperatives have 30,000 member families, and the program's small-farms plan has benefited no more than 53,000 families. And both programs have slowed to a crawl, leaving four-fifths of El Salvador's 3.8 million acres of arable land untouched.

The reform's defenders point out, however, that it still represents a radical change from the near-feudal situation that existed before 1980, when it was estimated that 2 percent of the population owned 60 percent of the land.

At almost 500 people per square mile, this vest-pocket country, heavily agricultural, is the most densely populated on the mainland of the Americas. To U.S. and Salvadoran policymakers, it was clear four years ago that only land might keep peasants from lining up behind the growing leftist guerrilla movement.

Under "Phase I" of the reform program, decreed in March 1980, farms of more than 500 hectares — 1,235 acres — were seized and turned over to peasant cooperatives.

"Phase II" was to have confiscated an additional 1,700 farms ranging in size from 247 to 1,235 acres, including many prime coffee, cotton and sugar haciendas.

"Phase III" — also called "Land to the Tiller" — gives tenant farmers, those paying rent or sharing part of their crop with a landlord, the right to buy up to 17 acres of their rented land.

THE PROGRAM was promoted by the centrist Christian Democrats, who shared power after a military coup here in October 1979. But in May 1980 the military-civilian government, under increasing right-wing influence, delayed Phase II indefinitely and went ahead with Phase III.

Since then, critics charge, the rest of the program has been undermined.

They say the Phase I cooperatives are underpopulated by half; the army allowed only known government friends to become co-op members; soldiers or paramilitary groups have since extorted money out from the campesinos, and harmed or killed those who resisted, and the government has not provided enough technical assistance or credit.

On top of that, some cooperatives have faced guerrilla attack. Here at La Carrera, insurgents burned crops and 12 tractors, the members say.

Campesino organizations say thousands of tenant farmers have been evicted from lands before they could file rightful claims under Land to the Tiller, or even after applying. They say the evictions, which independent surveys confirm, are often carried out by official security forces acting for local landlords.

LANDOWNER RESISTANCE can be fierce. John Strasma, a University of Wisconsin land-reform specialist who studied the Salvadoran situation, attests to it.

"It's astonishing how deadset the big landowners are against even actions by the current Salvadoran government, right-wing as it is," Strasma told a reporter. "Some are prepared to let Salvador go down the tubes, to the guerrillas, rather than have land reform succeed."

Nations call for regional negotiations

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The foreign ministers of nine Latin American countries agreed Saturday on a plan for peace in Central America calling for regional negotiations, disarmament and a cutback in foreign advisers.

"For the first time foreign ministers of the region's five countries are in agreement with respect to very concrete measures," Panamanian Foreign Minister Oydeen Ortega Duran told reporters at the end of a three-day meeting.

The four so-called Contadora countries — Colombia, Mexico, Panama and Venezuela — have made peace proposals before, but this is the first time the foreign ministers of Guatemala, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Nicaragua and Honduras have endorsed such a plan.

Details of the document approved at the meeting were withheld pending official approval by the governments involved.

Ortega spoke to reporters as his colleagues emerged at 1:00 a.m. — 2:00 a.m. EDT — Saturday from a 15-hour session of closed-doors talks in a conference room at the National Bank of Panama.

He said the document calls for progressive disarmament to be enforced through systematic checks on regional arms supplies together with a cutback on the number of foreign military advisers in Central America.

He also said it stressed the Contadora group's efforts to bring Central America's conflicts to the negotiating table, and eventually to use "ballots instead of bullets" to settle their differences.

Ortega said the "countries of the region are aware that the problem is theirs," but "the United States as well as every other country has to cooperate by carrying out concrete actions."

The Reagan administration has said it welcomes efforts to settle the bloody disputes in Central America and backs the Contadora group, but it is at odds with the group's call for an end to arms shipments to the region and the withdrawal of foreign military advisers.

Officials want 'criminals' out

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — U.S. officials have started talks with Cuba in an attempt to persuade Fidel Castro to take back some of the "4,000 criminals" sent to this country during the 1980 boat exodus, says the assistant U.S. secretary of state for consular affairs.

Diego Asencio told a Commonwealth Club luncheon Friday that the United States wants Cuba to take back an estimated 1,500 known Cuban criminals who were locked up in federal prisons when they arrived.

"Some time within the next few months there could very well be some positive steps taken," said Asencio, a former ambassador to Colombia. His discussed U.S.-Cuban immigration policy at the luncheon.

The 52-year-old Spanish-born diplomat estimated that as many as 4,000 of the 125,000 Cubans who entered this country during the Mariel boatlift were hard-core criminals who had been released from prisons and mental hospitals in Cuba.

Greek warrior's face rebuilt

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — British experts working with ancient skullbones from a royal tomb have constructed what they believe is a good likeness of the battle-scarred face of King Philip II of Macedon — father of Alexander the Great.

Their portrait sculpture of a rugged warrior with a livid scar in the right eye socket was presented Friday evening at an international conference attended by more than 1,200 leading classical scholars.

"We don't claim this is a 100 percent likeness, but we think it's as close as you can get to how King Philip looked shortly before his death," Dr. John Prag, Keeper of Archaeology at Britain's Manchester Museum, said in an interview.

The new research is expected to help convince some scholars who still doubt that the tomb found in 1977 in Vergina, Greece, truly is the last resting place of the king who unified the Greeks in the 4th century B.C. and forged one of the greatest armies the world had ever known.

The stone tomb chamber found beneath a 30-foot-high earth mound was crammed with gold, silver and ivory, including the solid gold funerary casket that contained cremated bones showing damage to the right eye.

Ancient Greek warrior

According to ancient historians, King Philip's right eye was gouged out by an arrow while he was besieging the northern Greek city of Methoni in 354 B.C., 18 years before he was assassinated.

"The bone damage was compatible with a wound caused by a missile striking from above," said Richard Neave, a medical artist from Manchester University who applied forensic techniques to rebuild the skull.

Neave took plaster casts of the burned skull pieces which were used as the basis for the reconstruction.

"They revealed bone damage to the right eye socket and cheekbone caused some time before death," Neave said in an interview.

The artist rebuilt the soft tissue of the face in clay, using standard proportions established for depth of facial tissue, and produced a wax cast, made up in South European skin and hair tones.

"It's not the serene idealized ancient portrait of a great king, but what Alexander the Great's father might have looked like after a day's hunting," Prag said.

'Dim, fervent light' still burns

An Analysis

By DAVID MASON

MADRID, Spain (AP) — The European Security Conference is over after 34 months of East-West sniping, punctuated by Polish martial law, the Soviet Union's incursion into Afghanistan and its destruction of a South Korean jetliner.

But government leaders and diplomats from the 35 participating states — all of Eastern and Western Europe but Albania, the United States and Canada — still consider the so-called "Helsinki process" a landmark in postwar efforts to lay down a code of international behavior.

After 181 sessions, dating to Nov. 11, 1980, foreign ministers approved a final conference document Friday and left for their capitals. Spain's King Juan Carlos, appearing at the final session, summed up the conference by telling delegates:

"For the past three years Madrid has been the city of hope where in a world fraught with tensions, a dim, fragile but fervent light has continued to burn for a future of peace and liberty for all peoples."

Secretary of State George P. Shultz said that while he was disappointed with the outcome of the conference "it is an effort that must continue because it embodies the most basic interests, deepest convictions, and highest hopes of all the peoples of Europe."

He said, "Though this conference is coming to a close, our concern for human rights is enduring..."

For the West, the human rights provisions of the so-called Final Act, signed in Helsinki in 1975, are the most important.

Then-Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, who had been promoting a Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe for several years, wanted a statement from the West which in effect recognized the Soviet takeover of Eastern Europe after World War II.

This is included in a clause of the Final Act which says "The participating states regard as inviolable all one another's frontiers..."

But in exchange for the West's concession, Brezhnev had to agree to a series of human rights provisions, including "fundamental freedoms...The freedom of thought, conscience, religion or belief."

At the Madrid conference, called to review how the 35 nations have observed the provisions of the Final Act, the West accused the Soviet Union of violations of the human rights provisions, while the Soviets and their allies argued that this constituted unwarranted interference in their internal affairs. Interference in internal affairs of participating nations is prohibited by the Helsinki accords.

Because of this impasse, little was realistically expected from the Madrid conference.

But it succeeded in tightening up the Final Act with a commitment to cooperate to combat international terrorism and to assure freedom of religion.

The Madrid final document also provides for the formation of free trade unions, but "within the existing legislation of participating states."

Most important to those who argue for the usefulness of the Helsinki process is provision for a disarmament conference to begin in Stockholm in January, as well as a human rights meeting in Ottawa in 1985 and another on emigration from the Soviet Union, in Bern, Switzerland, in 1986.

Another followup meeting in keeping with the Helsinki accords also is scheduled for Vienna, Austria in 1986.

Leak in Turkish pipeline causes oil spill, burning of 20 houses

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — A leak in the 620-mile pipeline between Iraq and Turkey caused an oil spill and fire in a southwestern Turkish village, officials reported Saturday.

They said 20 houses burned in the village of Zak, 40 miles north of the Syrian border, but there were no casualties. Military units in the area helped to put out the fire, sources reported.

The pipeline, Iraq's only outlet for oil exports, was shut down for repairs, officials said.

They ruled out sabotage and said they believed the seepage was caused by a structural problem. Syrian-backed terrorist groups have bombed the pipeline twice since it went into operation in 1977.

The pipeline pumps Iraqi crude from the Kirkuk oil fields in northern Iraq to a Mediterranean terminal in Turkey at the Bay of Iskenderun.

Khartoum adopts Islamic code

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — All bars and liquor stores in Khartoum province were ordered shut down Saturday following an announcement by President Gaafar Nimeiri that a new Islamic-based penal code will be enacted, the official Sudan News Agency reported.

The agency quoted Nimeiri as declaring that Islamic punishments as outlined in the Moslem holy book, the Koran, for murder, theft, rape, drinking of alcohol, and gambling will be instituted by the government.

Penalties for these crimes include beheading for murder, cutting off the right hand for theft, stoning to death for rape and whipping for drinking and gambling.

Nothing was said about bars and liquor stores in other provinces.

Couple marks 100th anniversary

MOSCOW (AP) — An Azerbaijan couple celebrated their 100th wedding anniversary, the official Tass news agency said Saturday.

Tass said Niftula Agayev, 126, and his 116-year-old wife Balabeim marked their 100th year of "blissful marriage" in the high mountain village of Zuvuch in Soviet Azerbaijan.

The happy couple entertained their friends and relatives at their home, the agency said.

"The Agayevs have (a total of) 150 children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren (and) Niftula said not without pride that in his family there are more agronomists, zoologists and doctors that there were in all of Azerbaijan before the Socialist Revolution" of 1917, Tass said. The report did not give the number.

AIDS victim dies in Norway

OSLO, Norway (AP) — A 35-year-old homosexual man has become the country's first AIDS fatality, a doctor confirmed Saturday.

It was the second known AIDS death recorded in Scandinavia. A 47-year-old man died in Stockholm, Sweden last month.

Dr. Johan Bruun of Ullevaal Hospital said the Norwegian victim, of Larvik, south of Oslo, died Friday morning. The man, who was not identified, had been a patient at Ullevaal since Aug. 21, Brunn said. He had lived in the United States, where more than 2,000 cases and 900 deaths have been reported.

He said three other Norwegian men also have the disease, which has a 40 percent fatality rate.

The cause of AIDS — acquired immune deficiency syndrome — which has struck mostly homsexuals, Haitians, hemophiliacs and intravenous drug users, is not known.

Bus accident injures 34 people

DONAUESCHINGEN, West Germany (AP) — A bus skidded Saturday on a rain-slicked autobahn in southern West Germany and tipped over, injuring 34 people, police said.

The bus was carrying tourists from the village of Wyhl on a weekend excursion when the accident occurred about 20 miles north of the Swiss border, police said.

Most of the injured were only slightly hurt and were taken to nearby hospitals.

Engine rams passenger train

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — A switching engine rammed a passenger train inside the Swiss Federal Railways main terminal in Zurich on Saturday, seriously injuring a railroad worker and slightly injuring 20 passengers, Swiss police said.

The railroad worker was standing between two cars of the passenger train when the accident occurred, police said. He and the other injured passengers were taken to the hospital.

Iranian publications removed

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Authorities removed several publications from an Iranian exhibit at Zagreb's annual Grand Economic Fair, the national news agency Tanjug reported Saturday.

Tanjug said the publications were "almost exlusively of a military, political and religious nature that could have an adverse effect on Yugoslavia's relations with other countries." Dissemination of such publications is against the law, the agency said.

Customs officials inspected all the exhibits at the stand before the opening of the fair and confiscated 22 Iranian military, political or religious books, Tanjug said.

Marcos: Aquino's death 'national shame'

Hearst Feature Service

MANILA — Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos sees the assassination of his chief political rival as "a national shame, which has affected me personally because it cast doubts upon my reputation as a leader of a democratic country."

In an interview with a handful of foreign journalists in his office at Malacanang Palace, Marcos insisted that "I would have known somehow" if any government official, "even at a fairly low level," had been involved in the Aug. 21 murder of opposition leader Benigno Aquino at the Manila airport.

Marcos also revealed that he had intended to return Aquino to the same prison cell Aquino had occupied for years. But he insisted he had personal feelings "of frustration and devastation that swept upon me immediately — I couldn't sleep," after the murder.

The Philippine leader, who will be 66 on Sunday, dismissed rumors that he was suffering from a serious illness — particularly kidney problems — and appeared healthy and strong during the hour-long interview.

He also said that if his health is good, he will run for re-election in 1987.

"I have some severe allergy, and they suspected some infection caused by shrapnel inside my body," received in an explosion during World War II, Marcos said.

He said he has now recovered from the problems. "I can tell you I have not been operated on," he said. "I have no dialysis."

Most of the interview with the president involved questions about the assassination, which, along with questions about Marcos' health, have dominated his public appearances over the last two weeks.

Suggesting that the nation's Communists were behind the assassination, as he has done since the fatal bullets were fired, Marcos said the assailant was "motivated by the deepest kind of personal hatred" for Aquino.

That hatred was manipulated by the Communists, Marcos said. "This is the best story that I personally can think of right now," he added.

The alleged assassin, who was immediately shot to death after the Aquino killing, knew where his victim was arriving by watching the Philippine police officers who boarded Aquino's plane, Marcos said.

Marcos said he wasn't sure how the killer slipped through the tight security at the airport, except that "he was in the uniform of a utility man," meaning an airport mechanic. The president added, "There is a way of even hiding a .45" caliber pistol.

(Aquino was actually slain with a .357-caliber Magnum.)

Even if additional facts are revealed, Marcos acknowledged that his government might still be bloodied further. "No matter what explanation you make, no matter what will come out of the fact-finding commission, no matter what I say, there will always be a shadow" over his regime, the president said.

Marcos defended his security forces, who kept local press from viewing Aquino's arrival.

Opposition urges Marcos to disband commission

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The opposition Liberal Party on Saturday urged President Ferdinand E. Marcos to disband the commission probing the assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino and defuse a "time bomb of instability."

It said the Marcos-appointed commission was "so devoid of credibility that its functioning is likely to aggravate the danger of instability sparked by the horrifying Aquino murder."

"If the regime cannot conduct a credible investigation, it would be better to dissolve the commission because its expected finding absolving the highest political and military leadership (of) responsibility for the heinous crime will only serve to reopen deep wounds of public outrage and to trigger a popular explosion."

The opposition party added that the "best way of defusing the ticking time bomb of instability" created by the assassination was to hold honest elections to restore democracy to the Philippines.

Aquino's supporters accuse the authoritarian government of complicity in the assassination of Marcos' main political rival, and opposition politicians have been demanding that Marcos disband the commission and resign from the presidency.

Pope John Paul II stands next to Austrian President Dr. Rudolf Kirchschlaeger, right, Saturday at Vienna's airport. The pope is on a four-day visit to Austria.

Pope speaks on human rights in Vienna square used by Hitler

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Pope John Paul II, speaking from the square where Adolf Hitler harangued a huge crowd 45 years ago, issued an appeal Saturday for human rights, peace and tolerance to Austria "and its neighbors to the north, east, south and west."

The pope, clad in white and gold vestments, spoke from a podium in front of the former imperial palace shortly after arriving for a four-day visit to this neutral country, a traditional refuge for thousands fleeing the Soviet bloc.

In a suburb, about 500 people protesting the papal visit — the first in 201 years — attended an "alternative" rally where they derided the pope as "John Paul Superstar."

The 63-year-old pontiff appeared slightly flushed under a burning sun as he recalled dark days in European history and alluded to a troubled present.

"Nobody can be oblivious of the fact — a fact which deeply affects us all —that the common history of Europe is marked not only by glorious achievements, but also by dark and terrifying events which are incompatible with the spirit of humanity and the Gospel of Jesus Christ," the pope said to a crowd estimated by police to number 130,000.

It was the largest assembly in Heldenplatz, or Heroes Square, since Hitler appeared on a balcony of the former palace to declare Austria a part of the Third Reich.

About 400,000 people crowded into the square and neighboring streets after Hitler occupied Austria in 1938.

Nurses in light blue uniforms wandered among the crowds with large jugs of water, or fashioned paper hats to protect the elderly people in the audience from the brilliant sun.

The pope, speaking in German, said, "Time and again, people have been deprived of their homes, they have been driven into exile or forced to flee from misery, discrimination and persecution."

John Paul noted he was making his call for peace and human rights to countries along the Baltic Sea and "to the Urals" in the Soviet Union.

"The belief that man is made in the image of God and that he has been redeemed by Jesus Christ, the Son of Man, has founded the respect and dignity of the human being and the respect of his right to a free development in human solidarity, upon the history of salvation," the pope said.

Banners of the outlawed Polish trade union, "Solidarity," could be seen scattered through the crowd.

The pope mentioned a principle reason for his visit: the 300th anniversary of the Christian victory over Moslem Turkish invaders in the Siege of Vienna.

In his arrival remarks at Schwechat Airport, he struck a tone of conciliation between Christians and Moslems, saying, "We wish to celebrate (the battle) not merely as an anniversary...but rather as an exhortation to learn from history and to apply the lessons learned and the spirit of our faith to secure a joyful, common future of mankind."

Anderson leads Baylor to win over BYU

By The Associated Press

WACO, Texas — Senior tailback Alfred Anderson leaped for two short-yardage touchdowns, including the winning score with 49 seconds remaining, and sophomore quarterback Tom Muecke threw two long touchdown passes in the third quarter Saturday night as Baylor defeated Brigham Young 40-36.

Anderson, the deep back in Baylor's I-formation, gained a career high 144 yards on 25 carries. He leaped over the goal from the 1 in the third quarter and scored his 28th career touchdown — a Baylor record — from the 2 in the final minute.

The winning Baylor drive started at its 25 with 3:21 left to play. After the Bears advanced to the BYU 13, the 214-pound Anderson carried four straight times for the touchdown.

BYU's sensational senior quarterback Steve Young then took the Cougars downfield to the Baylor 30 in the final seconds. But a fourth-down pass into the end zone fell short of receiver Glen Kazlowski as time expired.

Young finished with 464 yards total offense, passing for 351 yards and running for 113. He ran for one touchdown and passed for another and also connected on two 2-point conversion attempts.

Muecke, part of Baylor's three-quarterback shuttle system, threw a 42-yard touchdown pass to Jerald McNeil with 3:39 left in the third quarter. About two minutes later, Muecke hit speedster Bruce Davis on a 39-yard touchdown pass.

Muecke, who has a reputation as a better runner than passer, completed 6 of 8 throws for 117 yards.

Air Force 28, Texas Tech 13

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. — Quarterback Marty Louthan, passing effectively to open up his team's wishbone ground attack, ran for three touchdowns in leading Air Force over Texas Tech 28-13 Saturday.

Louthan completed nine of 15 passes for 158 yards and rushed 14 times for 65 yards, scoring on a 1-yard run in the first quarter, a 38-yard scamper in the third quarter and a 21-yard jaunt in the final period.

His first score drew Air Force into a 7-7 tie. Texas Tech had scored on its first possession, with I-back Robert Lewis carrying on nine straight plays for 61 yards, and quarterback Jim Hart flipping a 3-yard touchdown pass to split end Leonard Harris.

But the Falcons countered barely two minutes later. Louthan passed to wide receiver Mike Kirby for gains of 18 and 35 yards, setting up the quarterback's dive for the tying score with 4:28 left in the quarter.

Air Force went ahead 13-7 at halftime after a pair of Sean Pavlich field goals in the second quarter. Louthan aerials of 32 yards to Kirby and 24 yards to Tom Coleman preceded Pavlich's second kick just before intermission.

The Falcons extended their advantage to 21-7 in the third period on Louthan's second TD. He set up the score with four straight running plays into the middle of the line by the fullback, then faked to the fullback and kept around the right side for the score. The Falcons tacked on a two-point conversion.

Tech battled back in the final period after a fumble by Louthan at the Red Raider 23-yard line. Tech went 77 yards in 14 plays, with Dale Brown scoring from the 5 to cut the deficit to 21-13 with 11:34 left.

Two possessions later, however, AFA clinched the victory, its second in as many outings, on Louthan's 21-yard run off the right side on a fourth-and-one play.

Lewis finished with 133 yards on 22 carries to pace th Red Raiders in their season opener.

Arkansas 17, Tulsa 14

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Sophomore cornerback Greg Gatson made two big pass interceptions and quarterback Brad Taylor set up two touchdowns with pass completions on the run as Arkansas held on to defeat Tulsa 17-14 Saturday.

Tulsa had a chance to tie but Jason Staurovsky's 43-yard field goal attempt into the wind was wide to the left and short. The kick came as time ran out.

Hurricane quarterback Steve Gage, a freshman redshirt, gave Tulsa a chance when he went 50 yards on an option play for a touchdown with 8:51 left in the fourth quarter. Gage also completed a 10-yard pass to start Tulsa's final drive and converted two first downs when he kept on the option play.

Gatson, who was credited with two tackles during the 1982 season, stepped in front of a pass by Gage at the Arkansas 2 to stop a first quarter threat and then stretched out for an interception at the Tulsa 27 that set up the first Arkansas score late in the first half.

Taylor, under pressure, followed Gatson's second interception with a 22-yard completion to Luther Franklin at the Tulsa 3. Freshman fullback Derrick Thomas scored the first of his two touchdowns two plays later.

SMU 20, Grambling St. 13

SHREVEPORT, La. — Darrin Mitchell, a sophomore special teams player, made two key defensive plays in the fourth quarter Saturday night to help No. 15 Southern Methodist secure a 20-13 victory over Grambling State.

Mitchell recovered a blocked punt for a touchdown with 10:22 remaining to give the Mustangs, 2-0, a 17-6 lead.

With 2:36 to play, Mitchell recovered a fumbled punt return by Grambling's Dwayne Jupiter at the Tigers' 10-yard-line. That set up SMU's final score — a 25-yard field goal by Jeff.

Minnesota 21, Rice 17

HOUSTON — Senior tailback Alan Reid scored on a 20-yard run with 5:37 left in the game Saturday night, capping a 97-yard drive to give Minnesota a 21-17 victory over Rice in a contest between two non-conference teams with long losing streaks.

The victory, in Minnesota's season opener, ended an 8-game Gopher losing streak. For Rice, the loss was the 14th straight, tying the Owls with Kansas State as the longest losing streaks in the nation among major colleges.

Rice, leading midway through the final period 17-14, nearly put the game out of reach as the Owls drove to the Minnesota 3-yard line. But Antonio Brinkley fumbled and Craig White recovered for the Gophers.

Minnesota then ate up 5:46, taking 12 plays with Reid, of El Paso, squirting out of the grasps of several Rice tacklers to burst the final 15 yards into the end zone.

Miami 29, Houston 7

HOUSTON (AP) — Miami's Jeff Davis kicked three field goals and freshman quarterback Bernie Kosar riddled Houston's secondary with two touchdown passes as the Hurricane took advantage of turnovers by Cougar quarterback Lionel Wilson en route to a 29-7 college football victory Saturday night.

Wilson tossed four interceptions and fumbled once, setting up 10 Hurricane points.

Houston, which lost to the Hurricane for the fourth straight time, took an early 7-0 lead on Wilson's one-yard run but Davis booted field goals of 21, 27 and 32 yards to give the Hurricane a 9-7 halftime lead.

Kansas 16, Texas Christian 16

FORT WORTH, Texas — Placekicker Ken Ozee booted three field goals including a line-drive 35-yarder with a second left Saturday night to give Texas Christian a 16-16 tie with the Kansas Jayhawks on Horned Frog coach Jim Wacker's debut.

Kansas placekicker Bruce Kallmeyer also kicked three field goals including a 35-yarder with 70 seconds to play for a 16-13 lead.

Linebacker Elvis Patterson recovered quarterback Anthony Sciaraffa's fumble at the Kansas 26 and the underdog Jayhawks scored 13 plays later.

However, Sciaraffa atoned for the bobble by taking TCU 62 yards in 11 plays to position the Frogs for the tying kick.

Cowboys worried about St. Louis

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys are worried that the high achieved in Washington last Monday night is going to bottom out in St. Louis Sunday.

"If we lose in St. Louis," said wide receiver Drew Pearson, "the Washington game will be put on the back seat — and that's the last thing in the world we want right now. We worked too hard in the heat and humidity for that."

The Cowboys are coming off a 31-30 victory over the Redskins, a remarkable comeback from a 23-3 halftime deficit. The Cardinals lost their season opener 28-17 last Sunday in New Orleans as young quarterback Neil Lomax suffered a bruised shoulder that will keep him sidelined against Dallas. Veteran Jim Hart will start.

Tony Dorsett, who rushed for 151 yards against the 'Skins, said the Cowboys appear to have suffered a letdown. "Practice just wasn't as crisp as it should have been," he said. "The guys were just going through the motions. That was all we could do under the circumstances."

And defensive end Ed "Too Tall" Jones said the combination of the Monday night game and the emotion was knocking him out of synch. "You go through the regimentation of training camp and get your schedule down," Jones said, "and then something like this happens. It throws off your whole cycle. It'll be next week before my body settles down again, and that might be too late."

IN ONE respect, this week won't be any different than last week. The fans in St. Louis are as vocal as the Redskins' faithful. "They treat us just like they treat us in Washington," said Pearson. "They hate us."

The last time the Cowboys defeated the Redskins on a Monday night in Washington, 17-3 in 1980's season opener, they fell apart in their second game and were blown out 41-20 in Denver. But Billy Joe DuPree doesn't expect a repeat.

"I don't think it's going to happen to us again because we know what it's all about," he said of the Monday night-Sunday syndrome. "It's all a matter of knowing what's ahead of you. Yeah, we're tired, but the guys know to prepare themselves now."

While Dallas tries to avoid the emotional letdown, St. Louis Coach Jim Hanifan says one of his tasks will be to prevent his younger players from viewing the Cowboys with a mixture of reverence and fear.

"The Cowboys are a good team, but they're not infallible," he said. "They're not a bunch of giants out there who can't be felled. The rookies probably are in awe of them because they're called 'America's Team.' They've been in some Super Bowls. But I'm not particularly worried," Hanifan said. "It would just take a victory to do away with those fears."

Navratilova wins first U.S. Open

AP Laserphoto

Martina Navratilova celebrates after defeating Chris Evert Lloyd 6-1, 6-3 to win the U.S. Open womens singles title Saturday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The dream came true Saturday for Martina Navratilova as she captured her first U.S. Open women's singles title with an easy 6-1, 6-3 victory over Chris Evert Lloyd at the National Tennis Center.

"You won't take the smile off my face for a long time," she said immediately after winning the only crown that had eluded her. "It's better than I expected."

Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl, who has yet to capture any of the Grand Slam titles, moved into the men's singles final earlier Saturday by eliminating ninth-seeded Jimmy Arias 6-2, 7-6, 6-1. Lendl, the No. 2 seed, advanced into Sunday's championship match against No. 3 Jimmy Connors, the defending champion, who rolled over No. 16 Bill Scanlon 6-2, 6-3, 6-2.

Appearing undecisive on whether to laugh or to cry, Navratilova screeched several times after she had won what she has on numerous occasions called her "most important goal."

"It's off my back," she said, referring to her failures in America's premier tennis event until this year. In her only other trip to the final, in 1981, she fell in three sets to Tracy Austin.

In contrast, Lloyd, who has won six times, suffered only her second loss in the final.

"She won it so many times," Navratilova told the crowd of Lloyd. "I'm glad she let me win it this year."

The victory was worth more than $620,000 for the Czechoslovakia-born left-hander who became a U.S. citizen two years ago. She received $120,000 for winning on the hard-courts here, and also collected $500,000 for winning three of the four tournaments that constitute the Playtex Challenge.

It also was her second consecutive Grand Slam title — she captured Wimbledon in July — and put her in line for another $1 million bonus if she can win the next two Grand Slam events — the Australian Open and the French Open.

Although Lloyd holds a 30-24 lead over Navratilova in their career meetings, Navratilova has won their last six battles and is 11-3 over the past three years.

"I'm still beating everyone in the world except one person," Lloyd said. "I still love to play and I'm still hungry. She was just hungrier than me. She had more to prove than I did.

"She's a better athlete, quick with her hands. She plays a versatile game. Her only vulnerability is mental. If she remains hungry and eager and doesn't lose interest, Martina could play great tennis for five or six years."

And it was great tennis Navratilova displayed in Louis Armstrong Stadium on Saturday as she demolished Lloyd in 63 minutes, her longest match of the 13-day tournament.

Tighe, Stallings win in third Run For Fun

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Runners swarmed the downtown business district as if it were an Olympic training site.

Approximately 400 entrants loosened up, jogged and stretched in preparation for the start of the Third Annual Lite Beer Run For Fun that kicked off Septemberfest.

The event, sponsored by the Midland Jaycees, Miller Lite and J.E. Borron clothing, was a tremendous success as far as reaching goals were concerned. The runners were very enthusiastic, and the Jaycees most likely reached their fund raising goal of $3,900.

THE RUNNERS started a few minutes past eight under cool, overcast skies. Ten minutes and 59 seconds later, Odessan Joe Tighe became the first finisher in the Run when he set the 2 mile standard for first place.

And Steve Stallings, possibly the area's strongest distance runner, claimed the 10K (6.2 miles) title with a time of 33:44.

"It was my first race in about six months," a tired Tighe said after the event. "But the cool breeze helped a lot." Tighe competed in last year's Run as well.

Stallings blew away any threat posed from the 10K'ers. At the final turn, he was a distant figure escorted by a police squad car leading the runners. Stallings was so far ahead of the field, no one else was within sight. Stallings' first place time bested the second place finisher, John Harris, by nearly two minutes.

"The wind was tough today," Stallings said. Stallings said he was gunning for a time in the 31:30 range, but fortunately he slowed the pace. Otherwise, Stallings could have lapped the field.

Run Director Roger Gose, competing and finishing about 12 minutes behind Stallings, felt the Run achieved the basic goals - to have fun, and to raise money for a good cause.

"We worked hard on it," said Gose. "The race was well organized and we had no problems. "It's the biggest race in Midland by far."

Miller Lite provided rodeo cowboy Jim Shoulders and the brew. The brew especially drew response. "A lot of runners are serious beer drinkers," Gose laughed. "I think they'll drink as much as possible."

Alabama makes Perkins' debut successful, 20-7

By The Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Ray Perkins made a successful debut Saturday as successor to the late Bear Bryant as 14th-ranked Alabama scored an early touchdown following a Georgia Tech turnover and went on to defeat the Yellow Jackets 20-7.

It took just 1:35 for Alabama to jump in front 7-0 on a 15-yard pass from Walter Lewis to halfback Joe Carter three plays after Georgia Tech quarterback Stu Rogers was sacked by linebacker Emanuel King and fumbled.

Tackle Randy Edwards recovered at the Tech 20 and the Crimson Tide was off and rolling, scoring on the third offensive play of the new regime.

Alabama's new-look offense — multiple sets with no sign of Bryant's beloved Wishbone — was far from precision perfect. But the Bear would have been proud of the Crimson Tide defense turned out by long-time aide Ken Donahue, which permited Georgia Tech to cross midfield only twice in each half.

Auburn 24, Southern Mississippi 3

AUBURN, Ala. — Bo Jackson scored a pair of touchdowns and Lionel James rushed for 172 yards on 16 carries to give fourth-ranked Auburn a 24-3 victory over Southern Mississippi.

South

Jackson scored on a 10-yard run and on a 44-yard pass play from quarterback Randy Campbell, running the last 34 yards after the catch.

Al Del Greco added a 41-yard field goal and three extra points to cement the Auburn victory before 73,500 fans, the largest crowd ever to see a season-opening game at Auburn.

Florida 19, Southern Cal 19

LOS ANGELES — Sean Salisbury threw a 25-yard scoring pass to Timmie Ware with no time remaining to tie the game, then a bad snap on the conversion attempt cost ninth-ranked Southern Cal the victory as the Trojans tied No. 18 Florida 19-19.

The Trojans marched 80 yards in the final 46 seconds to tie the score. Salisbury threw an incompletion on what appeared to be the final play of the game, but it was nullified because of a penalty against the Gators for having too many men on the field.

That gave Southern Cal one more chance. But after Salisbury hit Ware for the tying score, the Trojans muffed the PAT snap and the game ended as holder Tim Green threw a desperation pass that fell incomplete.

Florida State 40, Louisiana St. 35

BATON ROUGE, La. — Kelly Lowrey ran for three touchdowns and passed for two more, and tailback Greg Allen scampered for 201 yard to lead No. 12 Florida State to a 40-35 victory over 13th-ranked Louisiana State.

Florida State, 2-0, trailed 14-0 but scored three touchdowns in about five minutes late in the first half and early in the third quarter.

Lowrey ran for touchdowns of 1, 1 and 8 yards, and completed 19 of 31 passes for 233 yards, including touchdown throws of 16 and 20 yards.

Allen, last year's national scoring leader, got his only touchdown on a 28-yard run early in the fourth quarter.

Virginia 27, Navy 16

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Freshman Howard Petty rushed for 125 yards and Virginia's defense stopped Navy twice deep in its own territory as the Cavaliers defeated the Middies 27-16 Saturday night and opened a football season with two straight victories for the first time since 1972.

Petty, a freshman from Annapolis, Md., scored Virginia's first touchdown on a 15-yard run in the second quarter and helped the Cavaliers ice the game with 62 yards rushing as Virginia drove 91 yards in nine plays for a clinching score on Derek Jenkins' 18-yard run.

Navy took a 10-0 lead midway the second quarter, but Virginia struck twice for touchdowns in just over a minute late in the period to go in front 14-10 at halftime. The first was on Petty's run, and the other was on quarterback Wayne Schuchts's 15-yard pass to Billy Smith one second before intermission.

Tennessee 31, New Mexico 6

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — For the first time in a long time, everything worked right for Tennessee.

"This was an all-around good game," coach Johnny Majors said after the Volunteers overpowered New Mexico 31-6 Saturday in a non-conference football game.

"Our offense did not have any turnovers and I am happy for that because of the type of play on defense that New Mexico had," Majors said. "Our defense played hard and our kicking game was much improved."

Split end Clyde Duncan sparked the win by running a 53-yard pass for a touchdown. The Vols' strong defense enabled Mark Hogan to score by recovery a blocked New Mexico punt in the endzone.

"Our victory was not easy. It was hard-earned," Majors said.

New Mexico coach Joe Lee Dunn told reporters that his pre-game assessment was right — Tennessee is in a different league than his Lobos.

"We're a small team and we couldn't quite handle it," Dunn said. "The way Tennessee played tonight eliminated the things we do best on defense. They did things that hurt us and just kept doing them."

Tulane 27, Mississippi 23

NEW ORLEANS — Jon English hit Craig Harrison with a 12-yard scoring pass with 2:23 left in the game to give Tulane University a 27-23 victory over the University of Mississippi.

English, son of Coach Wally English, played his second game under a court order forbidding Tulane to follow an NCAA ruling that said the quarterback is ineligible. The victory evened Tulane's record at 1-1.

English relieved starter Bubby Brister after halftime and hit 14 of 23 passing attempts for 203 yards and the game-winning touchdown, which came after a 15-minute power failure in the Louisiana Superdome.

Mississippi carried a 23-20 lead into the closing moments after tailback Buford McGee burst for second-half touchdowns of 20 and 53 yards. McGee rambled for 167 yards on 20 carries.

English got the court order so he could play for his third four-year university in five years, which NCAA would not allow.

However, the youngster went to court and obtained a restraining order against both NCAA and Tulane.

William & Mary 28, VMI 14

LEXINGTON, Va.— William & Mary quarterback Stan Yagiello fired three touchdown passes and ran for a fourth score to lead the Indians to a 28-14 college football victory over VMI's Keydets.

Yagiello connected with Glenn Bodnar for 39 yards in the first quarter to tie the game at 7-7. He and Bodnar teamed up again for a 2-yard scoring pass on fourth down with 42 seconds left before intermission.

Yagiello's final scoring pass came in the fourth quarter, a 49-yard strike to Mike Sutton. Yagiello scored on a 2-yard run in the third quarter.

VMI scored on two touchdown passes from quarterback Johnny Mitchell. Tailback Kevin Mitchell caught a 37-yard scoring aerial in the first quarter and Billy Tilling finished the Keydets' scoring with a 58-yard reception in the third quarter.

Oklahoma 27, Stanford 14

STANFORD, Calif. — Freshman tailback Earl Johnson ran for two Oklahoma touchdowns while filling in for starter Marcus Dupree and led the second-ranked Sooners to a 27-14 victory.

Dupree, one of college football's top running backs last year as a freshman, rushed for 138 yards Saturday, with one breakaway dash of 40 yards before a Stanford Stadium crowd of 62,778. But he got only 31 net yards in the first half, when he was thrown for 17 yards in losses and fumbled once to set up a Stanford touchdown.

Johnson, who was a Sooners' redshirt in 1982, ran 16 yards early in the second period for the game's first touchdown. In the third period, he darted 33 yards to give Oklahoma a 25-7 lead, and he finished his first college game with 96 yards.

Tar Heels beat Memphis State, 24-10

By The Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Walter Black returned a punt 73 yards for a touchdown and tailback Ethan Horton rushed for 137 yards and two touchdowns as eighth-ranked North Carolina defeated Memphis State 24-10 Saturday.

Black's return — the first punt return for a touchdown by a Tar Heel since 1974 — helped North Carolina break away from a 10-10 halftime tie and raise its record to 2-0.

Black, who returned six punts in the game for 98 yards, took Stan Weaver's punt on the 27 with just under two minutes in the third period, burst up the middle and raced up the right sideline.

East

After North Carolina stopped the Tigers, Horton capped a seven-play drive with a 22-yard touchdown run with 12:55 left in the final period, his second touchdown of the day. He carried on all seven plays in the 45-yard drive.

Horton gained 117 yards in the second half as the Tar Heels won their 14th straight home opener before 49,000 spectators.

Rutgers 22, Connecticut 5

PISCATAWAY, N.J. — Quarterback Jacque LaPrarie passed for 173 yards, including a 2-yard touchdown strike to freshman tight end Scott Drake, and Tom Angstadt booted three field goals to lead Rutgers to a 22-5 victory over Connecticut.

John Cummins blocked two punts to set up LaPrarie's touchdown pass to Drake in the third quarter and Angstadt's third field goal, a 33-yarder in the fourth quarter.

The Scarlet Knights put the game out of reach moments later on Harold Young's 14-yard interception return into the end zone.

Maryland 21, Vanderbilt 14

NASHVILLE, Tenn.— Maryland quarterback Norman "Boomer" Esiason and tight end Bill Rogers teamed for a 43-yard touchdown play with 2:24 remaining to lift the 17th-ranked Terrapins to a 21-14 victory over Vanderbilt.

Rogers took the short toss from Esiason at the Commodore 40 yard line and broke away from a pair of tacklers to give the Terrapins their opening game victory.

Oklahoma State knocks off NTSU, 20-13

By The Associated Press

STILLWATER, Okla. — Rusty Hilger hit Jamie Harris with a 28-yard pass for one touchdown and reserve tailback Shawn Jones raced 46 yards for another on Saturday, leading Oklahoma State to a 20-13 intersectional football victory over North Texas State.

Hilger, a 6-4 junior who led the Cowboys to the Independence Bowl in 1981 before sitting out last season with a separated shoulder, used his strong passing arm to overcome an otherwise sluggish offensive performance in the Cowboys' error-plagued home opener.

The teams were tied 3-3 late in the first half when Hilger lofted his scoring pass to Harris, a transfer from Texas Tech who has run the 100-yard dash in 9.5 seconds.

North Texas tied the game 10-10 on its first possession of the second half, with quarterback Greg Carter completing four straight passes and scoring the touchdown himself on a 1-yard plunge.

Texas Lutheran 27, Austin Col 0

SEGUIN, Texas — Senior quarterback Mike Cantu scored two rushing touchdowns and passed for a third as Texas Lutheran defeated Austin College 27-0.

Cantu completed nine of 14 passes for the evening with 141 yards. The Bulldogs dominated the contest, which included two interceptions by junior cornerback Carroll Parker.

The leading rusher was junior running back Trent Faith with 71 yards. Faith scored a 1-yard touchdown before the half.

Texas Schools

Western NM 35, McMurry 14

SILVER CITY — Joe Kirven scored on a 59-yard run and Carey Starnes booted three field goals to lead Western New Mexico University to a 35-14 victory over McMurry College Saturday.

Kirven's touchdown scamper put the Mustangs on top to stay and Starnes connected on field goals of 35, 27 and 38 yards. WNMU also got a 4-yard scoring run from Doug Spencer and a 7-yard scoring run by quarterback Tom Matthews.

SW Texas 46, Prairie View 7

SAN MARCOS, Texas — David Longhofer ran 5 yards for a touchdown and Neil Neunhoffer kicked a field goal to help Southwest Texas State to a 46-7 non-conference college football win over Prairie View A&M Saturday, the Bobcats 18th consecutive victory.

SWT, which opened its season with the win, erupted for 37 points in the last half after leading 9-7 at the intermission on Longhofer's run and Neunhoffer's kick.

Prairie View's touchdown came on a 5-yard pass from Chip Seals to Tim Pitts. Prairie View is now 0-2.

Panhandle St. 10, Sul Ross St. 6

GOODWELL, Okla. — A 95-yard interception return by Michael Duramus helped Panhandle State University hand Sul Ross State a 10-6 loss, its first in regular-season play since 1981, here Saturday.

Duramus snagged a pass by Lobos' quarterback Tommy Holmes in the third quarter. The Aggies also scored late in the fourth quarter on a field goal.

W Michigan 21, Texas-Arlington 14

ARLINGTON, Texas — Tailback Shawn Faulkner scored two touchdowns and gained 170 yards to lead Western Michigan past Texas-Arlington 21-14 Saturday night in the first game for both teams.

Faulkner scored on runs of 1 and 6 yards and quarterback Steve Hoffman threw a 5-yard touchdown pass to Kelly Spielmaker for the Broncos' other score.

Idaho St. 12, Texas-El Paso 10

EL PASO, Texas — Safety John Berry returned a fumble 67 yards for a touchdown and Jeff Kaiser kicked a pair of field goals to lead Idaho State to a 12-10 victory over Texas-El Paso in a non-conference game.

The victory gave Jim Koetter a successful debut as the Bengal's head coach.

Berry picked off quarterback Kevin Ward's pitch out and ran for his touchdown with 53 seconds left in the first quarter. Kaiser missed the extra point but the Bengals led 9-0.

UTEP's Scott Wedel narrowed the score to 9-3 with a 42-yard field goal with 14:12 remaining in the first half.

Lamar 24, Stephen F. Austin 23

BEAUMONT, Texas — Ricky Fernandez kicked a 22-yard field goal with 3:47 left to play gave Lamar University a 24-23 victory over Stephen F. Austin.

ACU defeats WTSU

CANYON, Texas — Fullback Rod Mathis made a 77-yard touchdown scamper and ran to score again as Abilene Christian University tallied an easy 28-3 victory over West Texas State University here Saturday night.

Huskies blitz Northwestern

EVANSTON, Ill. — Tailback Sterling Hinds scored two touchdowns, one on a 31-yard romp, and Steve Pelluer passed for 211 yards Saturday to lead 19th-ranked Washington to a 34-0 victory over Northwestern.

Hinds scored on a 2-yard run to cap a 44-yard drive the first time the Huskies had the ball, and he ripped off his 31-yard touchdown run on Washington's first drive in the second half.

Pelluer, who completed 21 of 32 passes, scored on a 5-yard run and Jeff Jaeger booted field goals of 26 and 33 yards as the Huskies took a 20-0 halftime lead.

San Diego St. 28, California 14

SAN DIEGO — Running back Casey Brown had touchdown runs of 4 and 5 yards and linebacker Thomas Carter returned an interception 28 yards for another score Saturday as San Diego State pulled off a 28-14 upset victory over California.

The triumph in their home opener evened San Diego State's record at 1-1. California is also 1-1.

An aroused San Diego State defense stymied the Golden Bears' offense by generating five turnovers, four of which were interceptions.

Far West

Arizona 38, Utah 0

TUCSON, Ariz. — Arizona quarterback Tom Tunnicliffe moved into eighth place among Pacific 10 Conference all-time passers, throwing for 298 yards as 11th ranked Arizona overpowered Utah 38-0.

It was Arizona's defense that crunched the Utes in what was an often-sloppy overall performance until late in the game.

All-American inside linebacker Ricky Hunley, a senior; his linebacking brother, Lamont, a junior; senior cornerback Randy Robbins; safety Gordon Bunch; and linemen Ivan Lesnik and David Wood were stars in a gritty defense performance that held Utah to only 165 yards total offense.

Lamont Humnley and Robbins picked off passes by Utah quarterback Mark Stevens, with Robbins running his back for a 37-yard touchdown shortly before the end of the third quarter, putting the Wildcats up 24-0.

Irish bombard Purdue, 52-6

By The Associated Press

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Tailback Greg Bell ran for three touchdowns and caught one of quarterback Blair Kiel's two scoring passes Saturday as No. 5-ranked Notre Dame crushed Purdue 52-6 in their season-opening college football game.

Bell, a 6-foot, 210-pound junior who played in only two games and scored one touchdown last year, staked the Irish to the lead on their first possession with a 9-yard touchdown reception from Kiel.

Cincinnati 14, Penn State 3

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Quarterback Troy Bodine led Cincinnati to two touchdowns after a pair of second-quarter fumble recoveries as the Bearcats upset 20th-ranked Penn State 14-3.

Bodine, a junior college transfer from Garden Grove, Calif., completed 25 of 36 passes for 261 yards.

Cincinnati, which gained 207 yards in the first half to 57 for the three-touchdown favorite Nittany Lions, took a 7-0 lead with 13:32 left in the second quarter on an 11-yard pass from Bodine to split end Bill Booze.

The Bearcats, under new head Coach Watson Brown, struck again with 11:16 remaining in the half on an 8-yard touchdown run by Don Goodman to make it 14-0.

Holmes stops Frank

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Larry Holmes closed Scott Frank's right eye, knocked him down and stopped him in the fifth round of a one-sided fight Saturday night and retained his World Boxing Council heavyweight championship for the 16th time in an unbeaten career.

It was all Holmes from the opening bell, and the end came after Frank, complaining he had been thumbed by a right hand, dropped to the canvas in the fifth round. Referee Tony Perez ruled it a knockdown.

Frank got up at four and Holmes resumed the attack, but Perez jumped in and stopped the fight at 1:28 of the fifth round.

Frank came into the scheduled 12-round fight unbeaten but unheralded. He is still unheralded.

Before the fight Frank, who received $350,000, had said:

"It's hard for me to hit a guy who made me so much money."

Well, Frank barely laid a glove in the 33-year-old champion who in turn made a punching bag out of him.

Huskers roll UW, 56-20

LINCOLN, Neb. — I-back Mike Rozier scored four touchdowns and set a career rushing record as No. 1 Nebraska extended the nation's longest win streak with a 56-20 victory over Wyoming Saturday.

Nebraska has now won 12 in a row.

Rozier, who rushed for 191 yards on 19 carries, has 2,894 career yards, breaking I.M. Hipp's career total of 2,814.

Wyoming, 1-1, did not enter Nebraska territory until the second quarter but had to settle for a Roick Donnelly field goal after the drive stalled at the 25.

Rozier, who saw limited action in the second period, had 116 yards in the first half and touchdowns of 4 and 12 yards. He also scored on runs of 5 and 27 yards in the second half.

Nebraska, 2-0, scored eight of the first nine times it had the football and seven consecutive times. Husker runners accounted for 240 yards while the offense amassed 388 total yards in the first half.

Rozier also tied a school record held by himself and four other Huskers for his four-TD effort.

Michigan 20, Washington State 17

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Michigan quarterback Dave Hall ran 4 yards for a touchdown in the final quarter to help the No. 6-ranked Wolverines defeat surprising Washington State 20-17.

Hall's touchdown run, at the 6:10 mark, capped a 75-yard scoring drive in seven plays. Todd Schlopy's conversion attempt failed.

Rick Rogers ran 52 yards down the left sideline to put the Wolverines on the Cougar 10, just minutes after Washington State's Ruben Mayes ran for a 2-yard TD to put the Cougars ahead 17-14.

Washington State had a chance to tie it up at 2:15 in the final quarter, but John Traut missed a 38-yard field goal attempt.

Michigan St. 23, Colorado 17

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Ralf Mojsiejenko kicked three field goals and freshman running back Bobby Morse scored two fourth-quarter touchdowns to break open a close game as Michigan State posted a 23-17 victory over Colorado.

Morse, a 5-foot-10, 185-pound first year halfback rushed for 32 yards on 12 carries and scored Michigan State touchdowns on two 1-yard runs.

Mojsiejenko, who both punts and kicks for the Spartans, booted field goals of 41, 45 and 18 yards. He also hit a 64-yard punt in the first half and the Colorado Buffalos, under second-year Coach Bill McCartney, managed to return only one kickoff.

Ohio St. 31, Oregon 6

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Quarterback Mike Tomczak completed 21 of 25 passes for a career-high 273 yards and four touchdowns, leading seventh-ranked Ohio State to a 31-6 victory over Oregon.

Tomczak, a junior, was particularly effective in the third quarter. He completed all but one of his 11 passes in that period in helping the Buckeyes to a 21-point quarter.

Oregon, 0-2, made a game of it for the first half. The Ducks, who lost to the Buckeyes for the sixth straight time, trailed 10-6 at halftime.

Iowa 51, Iowa State 10

AMES, Iowa — Owen Gill rambled for 136 yards and scored four touchdowns to tie a school record and power No. 16 Iowa to its most lopsided victory ever over Iowa State, 51-10.

Gill's running and the sharp passing of quarterback Chuck Long, who accounted for two touchdowns, spoiled the debut of Iowa State Coach Jim Criner and enabled Iowa to snap a three-game losing streak to the Cyclones.

Playing before a regional television audience and a record crowd of 54,066 in Iowa State's stadium, Iowa took charge early, scoring four of the first five times it had the ball en route to a 31-3 halftime lead.

Iowa's total was the most points ever scored in the series between the two schools, which began in 1894. The most one-sided game previously was a 45-7 Iowa victory in 1913.

Missouri 28, Illinois 18

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Marlon Adler tossed two touchdown passes and scored on a 21-yard run and Bobby Bell swatted down two Illinois passes in the final minutes to lead Missouri to a 28-18 victory over the Illini.

Adler, with newly installed assistant coach Larry Beightol calling every play, led scoring drives on three of Missouri's first four possessions. His 21-yard run came just two plays after an Illinois fumble and put the Tigers on top, 28-10, with 14:15 remaining.

Indiana 15, Duke 10

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Steve Bradley, who sparked the drive by rushing for 41 yards on three carries, pitched to Bobby Howard on a quarterback option play for the winning touchdown as Indiana downed Duke 15-10 to make Sam Wyche's debut as their coach a success Saturday.

The Hoosiers drove 84 yards in nine plays for the winning score on Howard's 8-yard run with 4:22 to play. Bradley, a 6-foot-3, 212 pound sophomore making his first start for Indiana, ignited the drive by racing 21 yards on the first play.

Mahaffey widens lead to three shots

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — John Mahaffey overcame a sputtering start and went on another birdie spree Saturday in widening his lead in the third round of the $350,000 Bank of Boston Golf Classic.

Mahaffey fired a 67 for a 54-hole total of 201, 12 strokes under regulation on the 7,119-yard layout at Pleasant Valley Country Club.

Fuzzy Zoeller and Joe Inman also conquered par for a second-place tie at 204. Zoeller had a third round 69, while Inman moved up with a 66.

Sammy Rachels, winless in nine injury-marked years on the PGA tour, went into the lead briefly after 45 holes, but settled for a 69 and 205 with one round left in the event worth $63,000 to the winner.

Jim Thorpe, with a 67, and Wayne Levi, with a 70, were tied at 206.

Mahaffey, who is seeking a wire-to-wire triumph to break a two-year winless slump, continued his attack on one of his favorite courses after taking bogeys on the first two holes.

The veteran, who ended a prolonged slump by winning the PGA championship in 1978 and then adding another victory here a couple of weeks later, fired a 65 for a tie for the lead in the first round. Then he settled down after a sputtering start in the second round for a 69 and a one-stroke lead at the halfway mark Friday.

He lost the lead with his bogeys, but got going and offset them with birdies on the fourth and fifth holes, enabling him to return to 8-under for the tournament.

Mahaffey then made his charge with birdies on the 12th, 13th, 15th and 18th greens.

Inman, who was in a six-way tie at 138 starting the day, completed his fine round with a birdie 4 on the 54th hole.

Zoeller pulled to within one stroke of Mahaffey with a birdie 3 on the 17th green, but then slipped back with a bogey 6 on the final hole after hitting his tee shot into the woods.

Hal Sutton, the PGA champion and leading money winner with $413,000 in his second year on the tour, moved back up with a sizzling 66.

Sutton, who slipped with a 73 Friday after an opening 68, advanced into a tie at 207 with Donnie Black, rookie John McComish, Mark McCumber and Thompson.

Lee Freshman wins pair in football season openers

The Midland freshmen schools and junior highs got the 1983 football season off to a good start Thursday and Saturday with some impressive victories.

Midland Purple was the only victim to an Odessa team as they lost a 26-6 game to powerful Odessa Nimitz, the defending ninth grade champion. In other ninth grade games involving Odessa schools, Crockett rolled over Hood 33-0 and Bonham got past Ector 20-0.

In the eighth grade, Midland Goddard, the defending eighth grade champs, again got off to a fast start Saturday with a 52-0 whipping of Odessa Hood. San Jacinto also posted a shutout with an 18-0 victory over Odessa Crockett while Alamo clubbed Odessa Ector by a 29-6 count.

In the only other eighth grade game Saturday, Odessa Nimitz won a 14-6 victory over Odessa Bowie.

The Midland seventh grades open action next Saturday along with competition in the Midland City 8th Grade Conference.

Zarate 'badgers' Bullpups

MCCAMEY—It was mostly a case of McCamey's Ray Zarate came at the Midland High JV's from too many directions. Zarate ran for one touchdown, passed for another, caught a pass for another and kicked four extra points as the Badgers beat the Bullpups, 36-0.

The win gives McCamey a 2-0 record going into Friday's Upton County showdown with Rankin, 0-2, Friday night.

Zarate took a 20-yard pass from Lionel Balza for one TD, ran 20 yards for another and then threw a four-yard pass to David Stephens for the other score.

Kentucky will play Soviets

From wire reports

BASKETBALL—The University of Kentucky will honor a commitment to play the Soviet national basketball team on Nov. 22, regardless of the actions of other U.S. teams to cancel games in the wake of the Soviet downing of a Korean passenger plane. Kentucky AD Cliff Hagan said the school wouldn't cancel the game, pending a change of signals from the National Amateur Basketball Association-USA. "We're just waiting to see what they're going to do rather than make a knee-jerk reaction."...

Oilers face Raiders

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Houston Oilers, losers of eight straight regular-season games, are improving rapidly, making the Los Angeles Raiders very wary of them going into today's NFL contest.

"The Oilers are improved tremendously on offense," said Raiders Coach Tom Flores. "When you compliment a great running back like Earl Campbell with a passing game, that makes you that much more effective."

Campbell and quarterback Archie Manning combined to produce 471 of Houston's 498 total yards in last Sunday's season-opener against Green Bay as the Oilers scored 38 points.

That wasn't good enough, as the Packers, behind quarterbacks Lynn Dickey and David Whitehurst, scored 41 to win in overtime.

The Oilers haven't won a regular-season game since last Sept. 19, nearly a year ago, on the second weekend of the strike-shortened 1982 campaign. They lost their final seven games of the season.

Houston showed its vast improvement in its final preseason game this year, dropping a 34-31 decision to the powerful Dallas Cowboys. Again, a lot of offense but not much defense.

Los Angeles, a 10-point favorite over Houston, is coming off an impressive season-opening 20-10 victory at Cincinnati last Sunday.

"We're striving for improvement each week," said Houston Coach Ed Biles. "We've got 13 rookies, so what we're trying to do is eliminate mistakes."

About last Sunday's loss to the Packers, Biles said: "It can give us confidence, at least on one side of the ball, but it can also give our defense something to think about when you're giving up that many points."

Campbell gained 123 yards on 27 carries and ran for three touchdowns before leaving the game late in the fourth period with a bruised knee. He is listed as probable for Sunday.

"He's a very unique back," Flores said of Campbell. "He's powerful...I've never seen anybody so powerful in football.

"He doesn't just run through tackles, he destroys people. Very seldom will one person get him. He has that great power, but along with that, he has a certain elusiveness."

Manning also had a big game, completing 22 of 34 passes for 348 yards and one touchdown.

While the Houston defense doesn't figure to be tested as severely by the Raiders as it was by the Cowboys or Packers, the Oilers' offense probably will have a more difficult time moving the ball against Los Angeles than it did against Dallas or Green Bay.

IN THE WILD

In Texas, doves and football go together

AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN

TIOGA - Texans treat the opening of dove season with all the reverence they preserve for the start of football season.

Many adult male Texans, and some females too, recall when they got their first shotgun, usually a single-shot, hammer action .410 or 20-gauge.

And their first hunt, usually on grandpa's farm.

And the pulse-racing first attempt to take a game bird, a twisting, dipping, 40-mile-an-hour mourning dove.

And the first humiliating miss.

And the second and the third.

And finally the day of success when the hunter's swing was calculated perfectly with the flight of the erratic target.

And the taste of that first fried dove with gravy and some of grandma's okra.

The annual opening of dove season is not only important to thousands of Texans, it's downright sacred.

It is heavy tradition for generations of men and their sons and daughters.

It's reunions, and childhood memories.

It's sandwhiches and shotgun-sore shoulders.

It's cold pop and sunburned foreheads.

It's laughter and curses and a day in the field when modern society's problems are crammed in a gamebag.

Such was the recent opening near Tioga which is Gene Autry's birthplace and presumably where the singing cowboy popped a few shotgun caps himself before he found gold in California.

Dove hunts are treasured hereabouts in the valley between Gunter and Tioga because there won't be as many in the future.

The dam for Lake Ray Roberts is being constructed not far from Pilot Point and the trapped waters are expected to cover a large scale area of Cooke and Grayson Counties in North Texas by 1986.

On this particular day, a bumper maize crop drew doves by the droves into the area.

But a wind gusting to 25 miles and hour evened the odds for the darting birds, who annually make ammunition manufacturers enough money to afford Padre Island condos.

Misses were much more frequent than hits.

The little feathered missiles had learned their dodge-and-dip lessons well in pre-opening day flight schools most hunters are certain they attend.

One bird must have set the regional record for being shot at and missed.

It challenged a line of hunters hidden behind straw stacks and ran the gauntlet. Ear witnesses counted 15 shots. The dove proudly survived to earn a well deserved rest in a dense thicket.

When sunset arrived, one hunter looked around at his empty shotgun shells and counted the lumps in his game bag.

He figured the cost of the $8 license, the gas, the food, and the shells. He also threw in the $10 camper stool which shattered under his weight.

His mathematics deducted that his 10 doves (average weight about two ounces) cost him $6.80 apiece.

Children's programs offered

Programs for children this fall at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., include "Saturday A.M.," a series for children between the ages of 7 and 12, a children's film festival and studio workshops for children in grades 1-6.

Also, for the first time, the museum has designed a series for preschoolers, "First Saturday."

"Saturday A.M." will be offered in the third Saturday of each month beginning in October. Discussions and studio projects will range from ceramics to sculpture, from print making to experiments with color.

"Adaptations from Literature: A Children's Film Festival" will begin in October and run on the fourth Saturday of every month through May.

Studio workshops begin Oct. 4 for children in grades 1-3 and Oct. 5 for children in grades 4-6.

"First Saturday," a new storytelling/crafts program for children ages 4-6 begins Oct. 1 at 10:30 a.m. This 90 minute program will be offered the first Saturday of each month with a different topic explored each time.

Allene Kleweno, program designer for "First Saturday" and the storyteller for the series, said of the program: "There is a complimentary relationship between arts and crafts and books and stories. Storytelling stimulates the child's imagination. When children work with their hands in positive, creative ways doing follow up activities, variety and enrichment are added to the story time experience. Youngsters will have the opportunity to experiment with colors, shapes and textures throughout the monthly series."

For over 10 years, Mrs. Kleweno has been sharing the world of children's literature through story time programs. Several years ago, she was invited by the New Mexico State Library, Santa Fe, to participate in a video series on "The Art of Storytelling."

Dorothy St. Germain will be the instructor for the arts and crafts activities for "First Saturday."

Active for a number of years with the Los Novicios Craft Guild of New Mexico, Mrs. St. Germain's works have been exhibited at the Southwest Arts & Crafts Fair and at Peddlar's Cart gallery. She has worked with communities in teaching craft workshops to children in New Mexico, Utah and Texas.

For registration information for any of the educational programs offered at the museum call Anne Sherburn, 683-2882. Registration is limited.

'Strange Brew' — no chance for recognition

A Review

The Adventures of Bob and Doug McKenzie, "Strange Brew," belongs to the wee hours of the morning when anything seems funny.

Written (along with Steven De Jarnatt) and directed by the stars, Rick Moranis (Bob McKenzie) and Dave Thomas (Doug McKenzie), "Strange Brew" is the story of two brothers who revel in beer drinking. So, they decide to tell a local brewery they have found a mouse in their beer, and demand a new brew.

When they arrive at the Elsinore brewery, they find Pam Elsinore, heiress to the beer fortune, caught in the electric fence and they rescue her. But she was trapped by no mistake. Her evil uncle (Paul Dooley) and sinister master brewer, Dr. B.M. Smith (Max Von Sydow), are trying to produce treated beer that they will use to dominate mankind and Pam is only in their way.

It is the McKenzies who save the day and the world from the mind-bending concoction.

If only they had been able to save the world from this movie.

Even at the movie's end when they give their effort a weak-minded critique, Dave Thomas as Doug admits to plot flaws, while Bob shamelessly does a mock acceptance of an Academy Award.

No chance for recognition by the Academy this year, fellows. In fact, it is probably better to let "Strange Brew" drown in its own suds. That way the embarrassing performances by Paul Dooley (with his hair dyed a hideous black) and Max Von Sydow (who has donned bucked teeth and slanted his eyes for some unknown reason) will take their tenuous place in the film archives and we can all be spared "Strange Brew II."

Moranis and Thomas do little to elevate "Strange Brew" above the crop of "weird guys as heroes" movies this summer, lapsing into the same easy kind of lunacy. The laughs they do elicit come from sight gags like when Moranis is trapped in a vat with Pam (Lynn Griffin) and saves them by drinking all the beer.

Like an Anglo Cheech and Chong, Thomas and Moranis glorify drug abuse in alcohol and as such this theme should give some adults pause when suggesting "Strange Brew," rated PG, for the kids.

In fact, suggesting this movie for anyone gives me pause.

Indian exhibit displayed at museum

Now on display at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum is "Sacred Paths: Aspects of the Native American and Hispanic Religious Experience in the Southwest."

The exhibit, on loan from the Museum of New Mexico, Santa Fe, traces the origins of the native Pueblo people's religions and the introduction of Christianity to the region.

The Pueblo Indians first eagerly accepted the Christian message and style of worship, but later revolted in an attempt to remove Spanish influence from their lives. Reconquered, they accepted Christianity while retaining the old religions, often combining the two into a unique form. Present day Catholic priests often incorporate traditional Indian symbolism into their worship services.

"Sacred Paths" uses original artwork, drawings, text and objects to trace the two religions and their impact on the everyday life of the Pueblo Indians. The exhibit's emphasis is on the time from the pre-Hispanic era to the late Spanish colonial period.

The exhibit will be on display in the petroleum museum's west wing through Oct. 31. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday-Saturday and 2-5 p.m. Sunday. Admission is $1.50 for adults and 75¢ for children under 12 with preschoolers admitted free.

'Gone with the Wind' offered

Cinema '84 presents this screen classic Oct. 24 at 7:30 p.m.

"It will be shown the way it was intended, with a 1 to 1.33 screen ratio instead of the wide-screen version released the last several times to theaters where the heads or feet are cut off, or as it is shown on TV, taking several days interrupted by at least a million commercials," said George A. Thomas, chairman of Cinema '84.

The other films in the 12-part series include:

— Nov. 7, "Rebecca," 1940, Laurence Olivier, directed by Alfred Hitchcock;

— Nov. 21, "Pride and Predujice," 1940, Laurence Olivier and Greer Garson;

— Dec. 5, "Friendly Persuasion," 1956, Gary Cooper and Tony Perkins;

— Dec. 19, "Rose Marie," 1936, Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy;

— Jan. 9, "One-Eyed Jacks," 1961, Marlon Brando;

— Jan. 23, "Woman of the Year," 1942, Spencer Tracy and Katherine Hepburn;

— Feb. 6, "Boomerang," 1947, Dana Andrews, Jane Wyatt and Lee J. Cobb;

— Feb. 20, "Playtime," 1968, Jacques Tati plays Mr. Hulot;

— March 5, "Letter to Three Wives," 1948, Jeanne Crain, Linda Darnell and Kirk Douglas;

— March 19, "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo," 1944, Van Johnson and Spencer Tracy; — April 2, "The Great Zeigfeld," 1936, William Powell and Myrna Loy.

Cost this season is $20 for MCT members and $25 for non-members. Full-time students at Midland College or The University of Texas of the Permian Basin may attend the series under special arrangement with their respective school.

With all features except "Gone With the Wind" a vintage newsreel or short will precede the film.

No single admissions are allowed. For more information call MCT's box office.

Museum to host concerts

Because of the overwhelming success of last year's Music in the Galleries series, the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., will host another free three-part musical series — "Notable Notes."

"JP and the Dow Jones Average" will begin the series Sept. 18 at 3 p.m. in the living room at the museum.

This jazz group features song stylist Janet Pollard. Her jazz ensemble includes Jim Ross on the piano, Carvel Mills on the tenor sax, Jess Parish on the trombone, Bill Godwin on bass and Gary Burnett on percussion.

Featured Sept. 25 will be "Just Reminiscin." An opportunity to stroll down a musical memory lane, "Just Reminiscin" features Steve Spain, Elaine Berman, Carol Smickrath and Gloria Steelman.

"Music fort the Merry Heart: Show Tunes and Novelty Songs," featuring the voices of Ty Morris and Linda Morris, will conclude the Notable Notes Series. Mr. and Mrs. Morris will be accompanied by pianist Linda Sellers.

Performance time for all three free concerts is 3 p.m.

Senators outline drug crackdown

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A U.S. Senate subcommittee described plans Saturday for a sophisticated network of aerial surveillance to intercept the increasing traffic of hard drugs from Latin America.

The comments came from several members of Congress as they began a hearing on a stepped-up mood of enforcing laws seeking to cut off the dramatic increase of drugs from south of the border.

An anonymous witness, hooded and speaking through an electronic device designed to disguise his voice, was scheduled for later testimony. Law enforcement officials and members of Congress also appeared.

"Until we have a coordinated (law enforcement) effort, which we never have had, we will not be able to curb this traffic," said Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.

The panel reported that the Army and Navy will be providing aircraft equipped with sophisticated radar able to detect incoming aircraft and maintain a watch. Four Blackhawk planes will be in service by sometime next year to patrol along the East Coast along with radar-equipped balloons.

Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., said a similar strategy is in the works with the Navy.

Mexican couple crawls 300 feet to fulfill vow

SAN JUAN DE LOS LAGOS, Mexico (AP) — Raul and Maria Delores Hernandez drove for two days from their home on the United States border to walk on their knees across a cathedral.

Each carried one of their Siamese twins — separated at a Texas hospital last spring — as they crept across 300 feet of dusty, wooden floor at the cathedral in this mountain city. They knelt before a 3-foot-tall icon of the Virgin of San Juan, who has been credited with numerous miracles since the reported resurrection of a circus performer's child in 1623.

Hernandez, a meat vendor in Ciudad Juarez, vowed to the Virgin Mary he would make the 1,000-mile pilgrimage here if his daughters Miriam and Brenda survived the operation to separate them.

The girls were born joined at the chest, with a common liver and entwined intestines, but sucessfully were parted five months ago by a team of surgeons across the border at Providence Memorial Hospital in El Paso.

Hernandez, glad the pilgrimage was over Friday, couldn't supress a joke.

"They're heavy...I hope I never have to do it again," he said.

Dozens of pilgrims arrive at the cathedral each day from 5:30 a.m. until after 8 p.m. At any one time, as many as 10 to 15 people are walking on their knees through the church's central aisle.

Is mountain home 'open' to the spirits?

EDITOR'S NOTE: In recent months, there has been talk of spirits inhabiting a small house, occupied by a young couple, in the Davis Mountains. Here is their story.

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

JEFF DAVIS COUNTY — She would never forget the image that flooded her mind.

She lay half-asleep in the master bedroom of a house in the Davis Mountains. Suddenly he stood above her: an Indian with squat but powerful body, long black hair, high forehead, oval face, pointed chin. And from his belt hung something long and dark she could not identify; perhaps a shaman's pouch, scalps or a shunken head.

He stood there without emotion, just long enough for the details to be imprinted on her mind — and then she started into full awareness to see nothing.

It was not to be the last time she would experience the Indian's presence during her stay in the isolated bungalow.

Was it hant, spirit, ghost? Or imagination and hallucination?

Karen Keefe may have had doubts then, but now she is convinced she was touched by something from beyond.

Karen and her husband Forrest had moved into the house in February as newlyweds, expecting the bliss of a honeymoon and the serenity of a mountain hideaway. The building, owned by Rod Crowder of Fort Davis, originally stood by the highway through town and catered to aficionados of first Italian food and then Mexican dishes. But the businesses had failed, and after the structure was converted into a house Crowder purchased it and moved it to a five-acre tract amidst pinon-studded peaks 17 miles west. There, in relative seclusion, it overlooked forested Skillman Grove and Bloys Campground and a mountain range once the domain of the Apache.

The yelps of the coyote pack outside the Keefes' window that first night foreshadowed more than five months' of the bizarre.

It began with doors opening and closing. When they first heard such, as they lay in bed at night, they ascribed it to the wind sweeping through the screens.

But wait — hadn't the chill of winter persuaded them to close the windows?

Forrest, 31, checked it out, but found nothing unusual.

The nights to come, however, convinced the couple that something quite unusual was occuring.

The doors continued to open, shut, bang. Karen, 29, became afraid. She even wanted to go to a motel a couple of nights. The first few times Forrest resumed investigation, but he could determine neither a cause for the activity nor even which doors were involved.

They decided to find out.

They placed a bell on the door to one spare bedroom, an antler on the other.

Thereafter, the sounds of night sometimes became accompanied by the noise of horn clashing against wood and they began to pay the small storeroom more attention.

It was then that they discovered evidences of psychokinesis, the moving of objects without the use of physical means. Indian artifacts, a hunting bow, arrows, traps, a rifle, fishing equipment — all were found shuffled around at various times as though someone

Bewitching bungalow

The ridges and bluffs of the Davis Mountains in West Texas sentinel an isolated house in which two former tenants believe the spirit of an Indian walked.

"just played with them and set 'em down wherever," said Forrest.

It made them reassess their interpretations of the house noises.

But eery events were to become more than just auditory and psyokinetic in nature. They went to bed one night, leaving their Doberman pinscher Tonga and their cat inside locked doors and windows. The next morning the house was still locked, but the pets were outside.

The Keefes questioned their own memories, but then it happened a second time.

They began studying the animals, noticing how each would be lying on the floor and simultaneously raise heads as if watching some unseen entity cross the room. On one occasion, the cat was playing in the storeroom closet when it suddenly cried out and bolted from the room. Tonga sometimes would be walking down the hallway toward the room and suddenly stop, refusing to go further. On occasions the animals even appeared to have been scolded, but not at the hand of the Keefes.

"I think," Forrest told his wife, "the dog thinks there's three of us here instead of two."

Psychokinetic activity continued. The seats resting on three kitchen chairs were discovered perfectly in place one morning, only upside down. A vacuum cleaner without a motor belt was found to have one firmly affixed.

But the voice was the clincher.

They were in the kitchen one afternoon when they heard it — a low humming, human-like and melodius. It wasn't an electrical appliance, television or radio, and the nearest neighbors were a quarter-mile away. Forrest described it as "faint," but not as if it came from a great distance. It was almost, the Keefes said, as though it came from within their own minds.

Later, Karen was to hear the beating of drums.

And too, odors began to permeate the storeroom and hallway. They were perfume-like and fleeting: a whiff here and there, and then they would be gone.

While Karen had always been open to the possibility of the spirit world, Forrest had been a skeptic from the start. Now, however, he began to wonder.

"I don't believe in ghosts, never have," he said. "I mean, I just don't. But then this started happening and — something. I can't explain what it is. You try to rationalize it and after a while you can't. All this suddenly is here, and you just accept it."

But what was it they accepted?

They looked at the homeland of the Apache about them, considered the entity's obsession with the outdoor equipment, and made their conclusion: Indian! Spectre!

The greatest confirmation of their theory, they believe, came from the presence itself.

Karen's parents were visiting, and as night fell the Keefes detailed the strange events and noted they believed the entity was an Indian. And then something hit the front door and began scratching.

The cat had since died, and Tonga was in a back bedroom. What other explanation was there?

They went to the door, flipped on the outside light, and saw only blackness.

Forrest, an avid collector of Indian artifacts, had searched the small peak on which their home rested and never uncovered a single archaeological item. It was almost, he said, as if warriors had shunned this ground.

And yet the next morning, Forrest found it at the bottom of the front steps.

An Indian scraper. Perfectly preserved from the last time it had been used to grate a hide.

"I can't figure this out, but it doesn't scare me," said Forrest, who as a boy had been taught falconry and the ways of the wilderness by a Ute Indian. "It likes the dog, it likes my room, it likes my stuff. If it is a spirit of some kind, I'm pretty convinced it's an Indian, a man, just one of 'em. It's like a common interest or something. Indians. I like what they do. It's not a threat. I'd like the thing just to appear, sit there in the chair and talk — maybe it knows something I don't — but it won't do it."

But Karen's fears were mounting. Sometimes she would be in a back bedroom and suddenly be overcome by terror. She would flee screaming. She began to avoid the artifact room, especially at night.

"I don't like to spend any time in there by myself when its dark," she told Forrest. "It scares me. It's fear of the unknown. I keep wondering — since it obviously has the capacity to open doors, turn knobs — whether or not at some point he would pick up a knife, hurt you."

She would joke that the entity resided in a wall hanging of a dragon, but they came to regard the mountain itself as the hant's domain rather than the house specifically.

"It's as if someone's walking up and down through here," said Karen, "as if someone put this house in the way of where 'they' used to walk."

"It doesn't try to run us out," said Forrest. "It's like the house is set down on a pathway. It goes through the house, or sometimes it'll hang out. Sometimes I guess it'll choose to go around the house."

He began paying the grassy slope more attention. He noticed their horse Fury had become especially sensitive to the land, and watched as she pranced about as though being led or ridden. And too, he noticed she began to spook quite often for no apparent reason.

Meanwhile, eerie activity within the house intensified and became corroborated by others. They left on a trip; their friend John Ryan house-sat two and a half weeks. Aware that illegal aliens sometimes enter homes, John always locked the house before going to bed. And yet he would be awakened by doors slamming, and upon investigating, he would discover both front and back doors ajar — and no one around.

Before his stay was over, however, he decided another always was there.

One full moon night he awoke never to sleep again that day.

"Something just walked through that bedroom door and I woke up," he said. "There was some kind of presence or something, some other type of entity. I knew someone was in there, walking through the bedroom. But there wasn't anything there."

Classics among book titles banned in some cities

These are among several books which have been banned in the past.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Doris Day, Anne Frank, Maya Angelou, the Bible. One common thread sews these names together — they've all been banned from various schools and cities in recent years.

Banned Books Week is being recognized by bookstores and libraries across the country until Saturday to alert the public about the action being forced upon them by other groups — that books regarded as classics for years no longer are on bookshelves in some cities.

This is the second time Judy Hubbard has put up a display in her window at Oak Leaf Bookstore in Oak Ridge Square. Last year, she said, a banner attracted the curious to her store and their reaction to the books on the banned list "was dramatic. A lot of people were not aware they had been banned."

Some of the books have been banned for many years; others came under censorship only within the past year.

"We're trying to alert people to what's going on in the book business," said Ms. Hubbard. "That things are changing; our freedom of speech, our freedom to read what we want" is being eroded.

The annual observation is co-sponsored by the American Booksellers Association, American Library Association, National Association of College Stores, Association of American Publishers and American Society of Journalists and Authors.

Banning books isn't a new idea; Adolph Hitler did it more than 40 years ago when he burned books he didn't think belonged in Germany. When he did, the world became upset.

THE MOVEMENT to ban books seemed to take off and spread about three years ago, said Ms. Hubbard. Because of that, the various associations joined forces to inform the public. A list of books that were challenged in the United States from May 1982 to May 1983 has been compiled by Robert P. Doyle of the American Library Association.

"Doris Day: Her Own Story" was removed from two Anniston, Ala., high school libraries in 1982 due to the book's shocking contents particularly "in the light of Miss Day's All-American image." They later were re-instated on a restricted basis.

Four members of the Alabama State Textbook Committee earlier this year called for rejection of Maya Angelou's "I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings," because the book preaches "bitterness and hatred against whites." Another of Angelou's work, "And Still I Rise," was challenged at Northside High School Library in Lafayette, La., in 1982.

In 1982, some parents in Wise County, Va., complained the "Diary of Anne Frank" contains sexually offensive passages. This year, four members of the Alabama State Textbook Committee called for its rejection because the book "is a real downer."

One version of "The Living Bible" was banned, according to Ms. Hubbard, because it referred to Mary only as a young woman and not as a virgin.

THE BANNED BOOKS extend beyond those few. The list includes:

—Several books by Judy Blume, the popular writer for teen-agers. "Are You There God? It's Me, Margaret," was challenged in 1982 in Tuscaloosa, Ala., and Fond due Lac, Wisc., school systems because the book is "sexually offensive and amoral." Other books were opposed in Des Moines, Iowa; Orlando, Fla.; and Scranton, Pa.

—Arthur Miller's "The Crucible." It was criticized at Harrisburg, Pa., in 1982 because the play contains "vulnerable, sick words from the mouths of demon-possessed people. It should be wiped out of the schools or the school board should use them to fuel the fire of hell."

—John Steinbeck, whose books are regarded as classics in American literature, was at the center of controversy in 1982 at Morris, Manitoba, over "East of Eden;" in Anniston, Ala., over "The Grapes of Wrath;" and in Tell City, Ind., over "Of Mice and Men." His books were regarded as obscene, a violation of moral issues and involving sexual scenes.

—Studs Terkel's "Working," which was challenged last year in Girard, Pa., because some parents and students considered the book obscene.

-Kurt Vonnegut Jr.'s "Cat Cradle" and "Slaughterhouse-Five." The former was criticized at the Merrimack, N.H., high school in 1982. The latter was burned in 1973 in Drake, N.D., and banned in 1975 at Levittown, N.Y., in 1979 at North Jackson, Ohio, and at Lakeland, Fla., in 1982 because it contains "explicit sexual scenes, violence and obscene language."

OVER THE YEARS, the list has included Harper Lee's "To Kill a Mockingbird," Margaret Mitchell's "Gone with the Wind" and Nathaniel Hawthorne's "The Scarlet Letter," regarded as a masterpiece in American literature.

And dictionaries haven't escaped the movement. Last year, the Merriam-Webster Collegiate Dictionary was removed from classrooms at Carlsbad, N.M., because the dictionary defines "obscene" words.

"That's the purpose of a dictionary...to define words," said Ms. Hubbard.

One of the organizations supporting the Banned Books Week recalled in a brochure a quote by John F. Kennedy: "For a nation that is afraid to let its people judge the truth and falsehood in an open market is a nation that is afraid of its people."

Ms. Hubbard pointed out the movement for banning books appears to have come from a few groups of people and not the public as a whole.

"You can't turn your freedoms over to a group to watch for you," she said. "You lose your freedoms that way."

GARY OTT

Tourist: Peculiar person last seen wearing sun visor

Perhaps no group of people are more peculiar looking than tourists.

You can spot them a mile away. They jump out at you. They wear silly-looking clothes and usually can be seen clutching road maps in one hand and a bizarre souvenir in the other. That souvenir, of course, is basically worthless and immediately will be stored away in the closet upon their return home. But don't try to tell people that while they are on vacation. Tourists know no logic. They buy now and think later, which does wonders for the American economy, but not necessarily for your closet space.

Still, it is clothes that make tourists so easy to identify. Young children wearing T-shirts with foolish messages on them. Middle-aged men nattily attired in multi-colored shorts accompanied by white socks and sandals. Grown women decked out in flowery dresses they wouldn't — to their credit — be caught dead wearing under normal conditions.

And sun visors. For whatever reason, sun visors have become the latest required apparel for tourists. You simply MUST wear one. And it is even better if the cap bears the name of the resort area you are visiting.

In fact, put that sun visor with Bermuda shorts, white legs, a Hawaiian-type shirt and suntan cream on the nose and you will quickly find a place on the best dressed list for tourists. Of course, if all the colors clash you will fit in even better.

The place where tourists seem to congregate the most is restaurants, particularly those in resort towns. There they show up in droves. Small groups of two and three. Large families. Small families. Young lovers. Old lovers. All kinds.

You name them and you'll find them in the eating establishments of this country.

In addition to clothes, there are other surefire ways to detect a tourist. Foremost, is their behavior.

Take the young lovers, for example. Please take the young lovers. They hold hands in the corner booth and whisper "sweet nothings" to one another. They nibble at their food and have a look in their eyes that says "Let's go back to the motel room and see what happens...."

Old lovers also sit in the corner booth, nibble at their food and have a faraway look in their eyes; only they don't hold hands and their faraway look seems to be saying, "Let's go back to the motel and get some sleep."

All things considered, however, my favorite group of tourists is the big family. And I mean BIG family. Grandma, grandpa, aunts, uncles, grandkids. We're talking the entire clan here.

They wander in off the street, take up three tables (including at least one high chair and in most cases more), order enough food to feed the Chinese army and make so much noise it distracts even the young lovers over in the far corner.

The big family also has distinct members who are easily identified by even the most casual "tourist watcher." For example, there's the "know-it-all," who may, but not necessarily must, be the head of the clan. The important thing is that he has eaten at this particular restaurant before and, therefore, feels compelled to critique the entire menu and make suggestions as to what should or should not be ordered. He does so in a loud and boisterous voice. Apparently he correlates volume with knowledge.

Then there are the teenagers. They, likewise, are easy to spot because they're the ones sporting the bored look that seems to say, "I know it's terribly uncool to be seen with my parents, but I have no choice. They forced me to come. God, I hate being here."

And they proceed to do everything possible to ensure all other family members are equally miserable. Teenagers are so charming at this age.

And, finally, there are the small children. The little babies. The ones who sit in the high chair and look cute. Never mind the fact they are throwing food, clanging silverware and crying simultaneously. They are babies and, therefore, they are cute.

That is, to everyone except the young lovers who were last seen — with matching T-shirts and sun visors — walking in the general direction of their motel.

Maybe they know something even the "know-it-all" doesn't.

In addition to those released on parole, three persons convicted of crimes in West Texas have been released by the TDC on mandatory supervision — an administrative release procedure that does not involve the parole board.

Salvador Perea Jr., convicted of armed robbery in Midland County on Dec. 7, 1979, and convicted of delivery of marijuana in Harris County on Jan. 16, 1980, was released to Anderson County after serving and earning nine years of a nine-year sentence.

Also, the parole of Charles Jackson, convicted in Midland County of theft and in Ector County of credit card abuse, has been revoked.

Jackson was sentenced to four years in prison and began serving his sentence in November 1981. He was paroled a year later.

Couple believes mountain home lies 'open' to spirit of Indian

It may have been a blend of imagination and wrong interpretation, all right, but the most intense encounters with what John and the Keefes had come to regard as an entity were still to come.

The Keefes returned from a trip to be awakened at 3:30 one morning by doors slamming all over the house. Sure, it had happened before, but never never with such force. They slammed and banged and thundered until the walls vibrated.

"We came back and it's like we made it mad," said Forrest. "I'm tired of checking things out — there's just never anything there."

And then the sound of heavy footsteps became a nightly occurrence, as though someone were marching down the hallway. They first thought it was Tonga, but Forrest always found her soundly asleep on a sofa, and no other logical possibility existed.

When Forrest heard the back storm door begin to rattle one evening as he sat writing a letter, he again dismissed it as being the result of Tonga. But when it became a crashing fortissimo, he rushed over to investigate.

The instant his fingers touched the knob of the wooden door, it stopped.

He flung the portal open, shouted for Tonga, heard her answering bark from far up the slope.

He took the storm door in his hands and tried to recreate the quaking he had heard — and it barely gave.

"It had gotten louder and louder and louder," he would describe the scene, "until it was so loud it was crazy. And then I touched the knob — and nothing."

Early summer brought with it rains that blanketed the mountains with greenery, and the Keefes readied to move — not as a result of fear of the hant, but because their own home soon would be finished a few miles south of Alpine. They packed their clothes, boxed up the dragon, prepared to transfer the artifacts.

It had been a bizarre six months, a half-year without explanation. But owner Crowder never had experienced anything unusual at the house, though he was yet to spend a night there. Neither had the previous tenants, Joe and Dorothy Nigrelli, encountered anything preternatural. But they had noticed unusual odors, and from their new home a quarter-mile away, they had seen an inexplicable flickering light crawling along the mountain slope.

Karen and Forrest Keefe pause on the porch to a remote bungalow they believe is the home of an Indian spirit.

Karen had no regrets about moving. Her fears had been evident from the start. But Forrest's relationship with the entity had deepened, reaching a point at which he felt almost a oneness with it.

"It never bothered me," he reflected. "It's not a harmful thing, not a real profound type of haunting. Anything that existed that long ago, lived out its life in the wilderness, would have advanced knowledge. If you could get an Indian back from the 1800s and just have him around and could communicate with him, it would be priceless. The Indians, they believed birds of prey and all of that was part of the spiritual. Here, it was like having a spiritual friend. Why it came here, I don't know. It may have come the day we came."

He glanced about the house and his voice softened. "I hope," he said, "it goes with us."

And from the hallway and storeroom came only silence.

Problems simmer for rice growers

By PAUL RECER
Associated Press Writer

ALTA LOMA, Texas — Combines are stripping fields along the Texas coastal plain in a modern version of a ritual older than the written word — the harvesting of rice.

By the time fall arrives, more than 2 billion pounds of rice worth about $200 million will have come out of the Texas fields, headed for the world's dinner tables.

More than half of the U.S. rice crop — grown only in Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Missouri and California — is exported, providing about 25 percent of the world's supply.

But U.S. rice growers are being threatened by rising costs and low profit.

"Rice farmers in Texas are in critical economic condition now," said Art Gerlow, an economist for the Texas A&M Extension Service. "We are in trouble."

Rice is one of the most expensive crops, with production costs rising rapidly, and one of the most risky as the world market for U.S. rice has been depressed recently, he said.

A typical Texas rice farmer spends $300 to $400 an acre, compared to $175 to $200 an acre for cotton or feed grains. Land must be flooded, and fertilizer has to be applied by airplane.

Texas farmers harvest 4,000 to 5,000 pounds of rice per acre and sell it for $10 to $11 per hundred pounds. A farmer will usually break even. A good year may bring a slight profit, but more and more frequently he will lose money, Gerlow said.

Profits go in cycles, Gerlow said. Farmers will have a series of bad years, going deeply into debt, and then seasons of plenty when crops are good and the market price is high and they can get out of debt.

But since 1967, he said, the poor times have been more frequent than the good.

"For the first time, we're losing more than our cash costs," he said. "When the good times come, they are neither as good or as long as they were once. We're slowly losing ground."

As a result, rice farmers are going to other crops or getting out of agriculture altogether. Some are simply going broke. Fewer young farmers find they can go into rice growing or even want to, and those who do find the going tough.

David LaCompte, 31, son of a rice farmer, is one who says he likes the life well enough to put up with the risks and the hard work.

He says it is one of the last areas in which a person suceeds or fails according to his own labor and decisions.

"I've had jobs," LaCompte said. "With a job, it doesn't make any difference how much you put out. You get the same.

"But with rice farming, you're your own boss. The more you put in, the more you get out of it."

In 1973, his first year as an independent farmer, LaCompte worked rented land and got a rude initiation. His crop failed. There was a second failure in 1974. LaCompte and his wife both had to find jobs and learned "to live cheap."

CAP chapter rated 'excellent'

The Civil Air Patrol in Midland received an "excellent" rating in a recent statewide search-and-rescue mission, according to CAP Lt. Richard Kolas, commander of the Midland CAP squadron.

Kolas, Lt. Bill Robinson and Cadet M.Sgt. Mark Solewin joined 130 other CAP members in 44 aircraft in the 12-hour exercise, which was judged by a six-member U.S. Air Force team. The team of officers evaluated each aspect of the operation — command, administration, air operations and land rescue.

Kolas commanded the land rescue effort. After being directed to the "downed" aircraft, his group located the mock "crash site" and found an emergency-locator transmitter by using hand-held direction-finding equipment. Kolas' group was evaluated on its search effectiveness and the assessment and treatment of "victims."

Robinson received his mission pilot rating after successfully flying an assigned grid and locating the target. Mission pilots must have a minimum of 200 flying hours.

In the Dear Abby column of Sept. 5 I read that if I were born in 1917, 1918, 1919, 1920 or 1921, called "notch years," that I am being unjustly penalized by receiving a lower Social Security benefit than if I had been born prior to or after the above mentioned years.

The example given was that if I worked until I was 65 before starting to receive S.S. benefits, I would be receiving about $100 less per month than if I had been born before 1917 or after 1921.

Is this actually true? I have never heard of it. Abby says she checked into it and that the facts as given (in the column) are true. — L.K.

ANSWER: Joyce Tays, supervisor of the Midland office of the Social Security Administration, provides the following release prepared by the SSA in answer to the Dear Abby column.

The release, in part, states: "The Dear Abby letter writer's claim that the Social Security 'notch' effect is especially unfair to workers born in 1917 through 1921, relative to all other workers, is completely false.

"In fact, workers born in 1917 through 1921 have a benefit computation advantage, not available to workers born in 1922 or later, in order to smooth the transition from the pre-1979 benefit computation method, to the method used for all workers born after 1916. Workers born in 1917 through 1921 receive the higher of (1) benefits computed under the new method, or (2) benefits computed under a special 'transitional guarantee' method. For many workers, this special provision resulted in benefits higher than would have been paid under the method generally required by the 1977 Social Security amendments."

The release continues with information about the 1972 and 1977 Social Security laws and the resulting method of computing benefits.

Ms. Tays says that persons having any questions about their benefits should contact her office at 683-3396 for a fuller explanation of their situation.

I am thinking about taking flying lessons. Will this affect my life insurance coverage? — M.C.

ANSWER: It is highly unlikely that it will affect any life insurance protection you already own, says The American Council of Life Insurance.

Check your policies to see if there is an aviation exclusion clause. However, you may have to pay a slightly higher rate on any new policies you take out, because flying an airplane is inherently riskier than other avocations such as knitting, golfing or even hiking, says the council.

My question is regarding the intersection of Illinois at Midkiff. I was wondering if anything can be done about the inability to turn left onto Midkiff going north? I am all for the two signs forbidding this, but they are obviously not very visible because every time I enter that intersection someone is waiting to turn. This creates an inconvenience for the drivers behind them, because they have to wait for the car turning left to turn before they can go across.

I almost was involved in an accident because I was the car behind the person turning left. Can't something be done about this? — D.M.E.

ANSWER: The acting traffic engineer with the City of Midland, Gary Saunders, reports that due to the construction underway at the intersection of Illinois and Midkiff, the left turn arrow signal has been disconnected and traffic is being restricted to one way. The city has extended the green light time to allow east and west bound traffic more time in crossing the intersection. The signs you mention are to discourage drivers from turning left during the construction period. Mr. Saunders said he would check the intersection again to determine if the green light time can be extended any more.

Killing a vampire

The Texas Supreme Court has agreed to review a state order to build Stacy Dam and reservoir near Ballinger in Runnels County, reviving an issue many people thought was settled three years ago.

But like a vampire from an old horror movie, the issue arose from the dead and began preying on West Texas once again. If you're concerned about the future growth and stability of the Midland-Odessa petroplex and much of this region, you had better be hoping the court resolves this issue in the favor of West Texans.

The Stacy Dam issue affects you directly because it is a vital link in the ability of the Colorado River Municipal Water District to provide water to this area. This year, Midland has received about 65 percent of its water supply from the water district. In fact, "Without Stacy," says Joe Reed of Midland, chairman of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce's Water Development Committee, "there will come a day when there is a water shortage in the district."

That day is not in the distant future, but in the foreseeable one — 20 to 30 years down the road. Groundwater, which Midland and much of the rest of this region must rely on in the absence of adequate surface water, is a depletable resource that's being depleted. Surface water, such as lakes, are a renewable resource, noted Reed. And that fact makes Stacy Dam and reservoir of vital importance to everyone in this region because the Colorado River Municipal Water District would be able to divert and use 113,000 acre-feet of water from Stacy each year.

A lower court had ruled in the district favor, but the Lower Colorado River Authority, Garwood and Lakeside irrigation companies appealed the case to the Supreme Court, contending the lake project would deplete their own water resources. It's understandable that they want the water, but this area needs the water more — at least the last time we visited the beautiful Texas Hill Country it seemed to have more water than the parched Permian Basin area.

Cities without adequate supplies of water dwindle and die — drained of their lifeblood. That's a reality none of us can ignore. Water has been of prime importance to Texas throughout the state's history and will remain a topic of major concern in Texas and much of the rest of the Western United States for years to come. As such, it's a sad fact of life that separate regions of a particular state feel compelled to fight each other for the precious commodity. But we cannot ignore this region's desperate water need.

We hope the Supreme Court doesn't let this vampire suck the lifeblood out of our region.

Another View:

Continue diplomacy

The killing of two more American Marines in Lebanon underscores the importance of congressional sanction for the peace operation. The rising violence is not cause to retreat. It serves, however, as reminder that the peace-keeping force is not a passive spectator to an already agreed armistice but participant in an action that comes under the provisions of the War Powers Act. There is no reason to delay seeking that sanction and with it the appropriate congressional debate that in itself will help clarify what is at stake.

A great deal is at stake in Lebanon. Tragically, the peace-keepers from Italy, France, Britain and the United States may, in the disintegrating circumstances, find that there is nothing they can do. But for this particular moment, they can maintain a modicum of security in a limited area of Beirut itself and lend international sanction to the legitimate government of Amin Gemayel while he struggles with insurrection, brigandage, and the centrifugal forces of partition.

Diplomatic options have not been exhausted. That was evident Tuesday in the initiative of Prime Minister Bettino Craxi in Rome seeking consultations with Walid Jumblatt, whose Druze forces, backed by the Syrians, pose the greatest threat to the central government's survival. And that was evident in the visit of Robert C. McFarlane, President Reagan's peace emissary, to Damascus.

Two elements of a solution are missing. The warring parties still see everything to gain and nothing to lose in continuing the hostilities that daily claim dozens of lives. And outside forces have yet to show restraint in the supplies with which they are fueling this warfare. Two nations, Syria and Israel, Lebanon's only neighbors, hold the keys to peaceful settlement. But their own short-term considerations have consistently led them to consider Lebanon's long-term interests last. McFarlane's task in Damascus, like U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz's earlier mission to Jerusalem, is to bring home to the neighbors the broader security considerations, to remind them that they are playing with fire.

Peace becomes more elusive each day. And an anxious world is discovering that the whole security of a region hangs on battles over towns and crossroads. If Jumblatt's Druzes have in fact conquered Bhamdoun with Syrian assistance, there is a new obstacle to settlement, a new incentive to prolong the violence and postpone the peace. If, as the evidence suggests, there has been another massacre, this one by Christian forces against a Druze village, the expectation can only be for escalation. And that, alas, would be very much in keeping with the troubled history of this land and its divided people.

But when frustrated statesmen talk of leaving Lebanon to the Lebanese, they know full well that the nation has never been left alone. Precipitate withdrawal of the international peace force is prescription only for prolongation of Syrian and Israeli occupations.

The United States can best affirm its commitment to the peace process in two ways, maintaining the pace of diplomacy, and obtaining congressional sanction through the War Powers Act for the Marines' participation in the peace-keeping force.

Soviets build Pacific advantage

WASHINGTON — The downing of a civilian airliner by the Soviets over the Pacific has focused sudden attention on this area of confrontation. In a face-down with the Soviets in the Pacific, the prospects are no better than 50-50 that U.S. forces would triumph.

Jack Anderson

Secret military intelligence estimates show that a nonnuclear war, without China, would be a tossup. Given all available firepower, a standoff now exists in the Pacific between the United States and our allies vs. the Soviet Union and theirs.

Yet the United States came out of World War II with vast fleets that won the Pacific and ruled the oceans. Just a decade ago, America still held a decisive military advantage in the Pacific. But no longer.

This has Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger in a lather. He has been pressing President Reagan to beef up U.S. forces in the Pacific, which is America's single largest area of economic interest in the world. Last year, U.S. trade in the Asia-Pacific region — $136 billion — outpaced even Europe and accounted for 30 percent of all our foreign trade.

Does the aggressive Weinberger want to build a Pax Romana in the Pacific? Or is this just unexceptionable Pentagon boilerplate? I assigned my associate Dale Van Atta to find out.

He studied Weinberger's special report to the president, a 57-page document on "U.S. Interests and Objectives in the Asia-Pacific Area," as well as the latest posture statement prepared by the Joint Chiefs of Staff — documents that are classified "Secret." He also flew to Hawaii for a private briefing from CINCPAC, the U.S. high command in the Pacific.

The command is deeply concerned about Cam Ranh Bay in Vietnam, one of the finest natural harbors in the world, where the United States built a naval bastion that enabled our warships to control the South Pacific. Today this is a Soviet command and intelligence center.

A dozen Soviet ships are usually anchored there, but the number has been as high as two dozen, including the aircraft carrier Minsk. The base brings Soviet naval forces uncomfortably close to the strategic Strait of Malacca and the U.S. base at Subic Bay in the Philippines.

There is only one hopeful tidbit of intelligence about Cam Ranh Bay. The Soviets floated down four or five piers in sections, presumably as a precaution. If they should be ousted from the base, they could haul their piers back with them. This suggests that they may not be fully confident about the enduring loyalty of their Vietnam ally.

CINCPAC is also worried about Soviet underseas strength. The secret report by the Joint Chiefs shows that the Soviets have an ominous 127 submarines prowling the Pacific, compared with only 43 U.S. submarines.

But on the surface at least, the United States still has the edge. Our Pacific fleet has 85 principal ships, one more than the Soviets have deployed in the Pacific. And there are six U.S. aircraft carriers, which can deliver American air power to any point in the area. The Soviets have only the Minsk.

Yet 130 long-range bombers are attached to the Soviet Pacific fleet, some based within easy striking distance of the Philippines and Guam. Just a year ago, Soviet Backfire bombers secretly carried out, for the first time, simulated attacks against two U.S. carrier battle groups in the northern Pacific.

According to one secret estimate, 438 U.S. fighter planes are arrayed against 695 Soviet fighters and 308 bombers are pitted against 423 Soviet bombers. To help overcome this disadvantage, President Reagan will preach defense on his forthcoming trip to Asia. Specifically, he will nail down a deal, already arranged by Weinberger, to station 48 more F-16 planes in Japan by 1985.

On the ground, of course, the Soviets have always had more manpower under arms. Report the Joint Chiefs: "Since the late 1960s, Soviet ground forces in the Soviet Far East military districts have nearly tripled, and presently consist of over 52 divisions."

That leaves the delicate question of nuclear weapons — delicate because in Japan the issue can set off a typhoon of national emotion.

The secret Weinberger report declares tersely that the Soviets have gained nuclear supremacy in the Pacific. They have more than 100 SS-20 nuclear missiles based in the area. Of 12 nuclear weapon types, Weinberger reported to the president, the United States leads in only two — "carrier nuclear fighters" and "nuclear surface-to-air missiles."

The United States has lost the lead in nuclear artillery and short-range surface-to-surface missiles. We also have no nuclear rockets, long-range surface-to-surface missiles, submarine surface-to-surface missiles, naval guns or torpedoes — thus giving the Russians a clear regional advantage in those seven nuclear weapons.

An America conditioned by threatening calamities, inglorious interventions and stalemated conventional wars may have lost its stomach for a war fought with atomic weapons. But there is every evidence that the Soviet Union now has the wherewithal to fight one.

GEORGE F. WILL

In leaving, Tower gives lesson

WASHINGTON — When asked recently why a colleague had voted against a defense program, Sen. John Tower snapped: "He abuses the right to be stupid." When Tower points the Green Bullet (his 1972 Dodge Charger) toward Texas next year, the Senate will lose one of its tartest tongues and sharpest minds.

George F. Will

Tower, whose office is a few yards from what was Sen. Henry Jackson's office, will not quite say so, but he might have reversed his decision to retire if he had not announced it before Jackson died. In the Senate, as in many other institutions, 20 percent of the members do 80 percent of the work. For two decades Tower and Jackson have been two of the consequential 20. Since 1981 they have been, respectively, chairman and ranking Democrat on the Armed Services Committee. So in 1985 the Senate is certain to be without at least 15 percent (counting Howard Baker) of the 20, and even more of the heart of its leadership on military matters.

Tower has been in the Senate 22 years, 20 of them in the minority. In 1965-66 he had just 32 Republican colleagues. No senator, having been a chairman, can stand the thought of returning to the minority.

But there are 19 Republican and only 14 Democratic seats up in 1984, and today at least six Republican seats (Texas, Tennessee, Illinois, Iowa, North Carolina, New Hampshire) look more vulnerable than any Democratic seat. (Savor this, gender-gap scholars: Some Republicans hope three women potential candidates — in Michigan, Rhode Island and Nebraska — can save Republican control of the Senate by defeating Levin, Pell and Exon.)

Tower thinks, probably rightly, he would have been re-elected. Polls show him 20 percent ahead of his nearest rival; his job-approval rating is higher than ever. And he actually likes campaigning across his unreasonably vast and complex state.

However, the Texas electorate is 11 percent black, 18 percent Mexican-American, and as the 1982 defeat of Gov. Clements showed, Texas Democrats have been reading the Republican book on organizing turnouts. Tower would not have needed to spend a nickel to build name-recognition, so his campaign might have cost "only" $7 million. Texas has 19 media markets. Four cover 70 percent of the electorate, but the other 15 can turn an election like the one Tower won in 1978 by 12,227 out of 2.3 million votes cast.

Beyond a desire for a fresh and less draining life, Tower's decision to leave the Senate reflects dismay about the institution. Not long ago, he says, the Senate was more efficient and civil, in part because power was concentrated in a few persons who received considerable deference — persons like Richard Russell, Everett Dirksen, Styles Bridges, Lyndon Johnson, Bob Kerr. There never was a record vote unless the leadership wanted one. That saved time and, even more important, prevented what has become common — the engineering of record votes, often on amendments that are going nowhere, often for grandstanding purposes, or to get responsible incumbents to make themselves vulnerable to irresponsible challengers by casting politically dangerous votes.

Tower thinks the Senate has "lost its corporate memory." Forty-three senators have been there less than six years, and 63 less than 10. Too many of the new members are "media creatures." They are frightened of politically awkward publicity. They increasingly share, or at least are inhibited by, the values of a press corps that sees itself as an adversary of established institutions. Many younger senators assess their success by the media attention they receive. The easiest way to get attention is by challenging the executive on defense and foreign policies. That is one reason why, having awakened to the fact that it has delegated too much discretion to the executive, Congress began asserting itself in the wrong area — in defense and foreign policies, where it is least equipped to cope, and where deference to the executive is proper.

Because President Reagan's defense buildup has been the most important public business since 1981, since 1981 Tower and Jackson have been, with Baker, the most important senators. As Reagan contemplates the likely mixture of pain and pleasure in a second term, he must be imagining how hard it would be for him to deal with a Senate with those three men missing.

When Tower leaves, the Senate will lose half its contingent from the London School of Economics. (Patrick Moynihan is the other alumnus.) Tower, a former professor, wants to do some teaching. That is good news for American education. Some students are going to learn something, and their teacher will not grade on a curve.

ART BUCHWALD

Going home to wash is 'dirty' trick!

What brings the kids back, once they've left the nest? What makes them want to return home, after they have declared their independence? I wish I could say it was love of parents. I even wish I could say it was the dog or cat they left behind. I discovered what finally brings offspring back to their mommies and daddies.

Art Buchwald

There isn't a child who hasn't gone out in the brave new world who eventually doesn't return to the old homestead carrying a bundle of dirty clothes.

"Hi Pop, I'm back."

"It's Ezra. When did you return from the Amazon?"

"A week ago. I just stopped by to throw my laundry in the washing machine."

"How did the jungle look from the interior?"

"Fine, Dad. It's a terrific place. Listen, I can't talk now. When the wash cycle is finished would you put my stuff in the dryer?"

"Of course, son. I'm mighty glad to see you. Would you like to say hello to your mother?"

"Tell her I'll see her when I come back to get my laundry."

"I'll do that. She was a little nervous about your being in the Amazon for two years."

"Goodbye, Dad."

"Who was that downstairs?"

"It was Ezra, Mother. He came back to do his laundry."

"Where is he?"

"He'll be back once his socks are dry."

"I hear someone downstairs."

"I'll go down and look. ... Well if it isn't Lucy from Birmingham. Why didn't you write you were coming?"

"I didn't know I was coming. But my washer broke a week ago and the kids' dirty clothes kept piling up on me, so I just got on an airplane to fly up and do them. Can I stay for a couple of days? I've got four loads."

"Of course you can. You're going to have to wait, though, because Ezra has his clothes in the machine now from his trip to Brazil. Wander up and say hello to your mother. She'll be delighted to see you."

"Sure, Dad, but call me as soon as Ezra's stuff is done, will you?"

"No problem. Now who could that be at the door? Why it's Paul. I thought we said goodbye to you last month when you went off to college."

"I just came home for the weekend to do my laundry."

"Don't they have laundromats at the school?"

"They do, but they won't let you put your tennis sneakers in the washer."

"That sounds like a weird school. Your brother Ezra is back from the Amazon, and your sister Lucy flew up from Birmingham to do four loads. So you might as well stay overnight because I don't think the old Whirlpool will be available until sometime tomorrow."

"Why can't I put my stuff in with Ezra's?"

"Because his has already completed the first cycle and it wouldn't be fair to stop it and start all over again. You want something to eat?"

"No, I'll go out and see the guys. Here's my stuff. Tell Lucy not to get it mixed up with hers."

"I'll keep my eye on it, son. It's good to have you home. I see a car driving up. It looks like your sister Rose, who has her own apartment across town. Why don't you go out and help her in with all those dirty sheets and pillowcases?"

"Hi, Dad. I can't stay long. I have to do these sheets before my roommate gets back. Who's stuff is that in the washer?"

"It's Ezra's. He just got back from two years in South America."

"That's a dirty trick. He knows Friday is my day to use the washer."

"Maybe he forgot. He's on jet lag. You want to put your stuff in the washer with Lucy's, when I put Ezra's in the dryer?"

"What's Lucy doing using our washer when she lives in Birmingham?"

"I guess she's trying to find her roots."

Soviet Union blaming U.S. for their own atrocities

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.

Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — It took the Soviet Union nearly a week after shooting down an unarmed civilian South Korean jetliner to back into an admission that they committed the ghastly act. But the Soviets stubbornly refuse to apologize for wantonly killing all 269 people aboard, among them more than 60 Americans, including a congressman. They keep blaming us instead for having had a reconnaissance aircraft in the area. Our "recon" plane had been back home in Alaska for two hours while Soviet fighters still stalked the ill-fated South Korean jumbo jet.

The latest big name in the Soviet pantheon to assail the U.S. for launching "a wave of slander" is Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko. He spoke to a 35-nation assembly in Madrid primarily concerned with human rights. The Gromyko tirade came after Western nations angrily denounced Moscow for shooting down South Korean Flight 007. Secretary of State Shultz said of Gromyko's speech: "This shows the Soviet Union places no weight on human values."

In a head-to-head session later lasting more than an hour, Secretary Shultz angrily rejected Gromyko's personal explanation to him as "totally unacceptable." The angered secretary added: "Foreign Minister Gromyko's response was even worse than the one he gave a day earlier."

President Reagan was described in Washington as "mad as hell" by a highly-placed administration official following the Gromyko effort to deceive a 35-nation conference. It wasn't the first time Gromyko told a whopper.

MANY OF US remember the photo printed in most papers across the country of Gromyko talking to the late President John F. Kennedy in the latter's Oval Office in 1962. He insisted that the Soviets were not installing missiles in Cuba but had to rescind his lie when the president showed him our aerial photos of the missiles on board the deck of a Soviet freighter.

In a measured TV address to the nation, President Reagan said the Soviet coverup was a tissue of lies. He handled himself in a statesmanlike manner while the Soviet hierarchy -- No. 1 Yuri Andropov still hasn't been heard from - stumbled and fumbled from deceit to outright lying. They have since settled on trying to pin the blame on us, mind you, for their totally uncivilized atrocity.

The president has been hearing many points of view: From those who are fighting mad and want to go to the mat with the Russkies, to counsellors urging step-by-step coordination with our friends and allies that will make the Soviets think twice before killing innocent folks. They should, among other things, be placed beyond the pale: Soviets assigned abroad should be excluded from all receptions as "Ni kulturny," or not cultured, a terrible insult. Make them pariahs while justice and indemnification are sought from the World Court of International Justice.

PRESIDENT REAGAN has taken a sound step in that direction in conjunction with old friends and allies as well as outraged communist nations like the People's Republic of China and Yugoslavia.

International pilots associations, thoroughly alarmed over the grisly South Korean commercial aircraft incident, have already initiated measures in West Germany and France barring Aeroflot landing and refuelling rights. That should put a crimp into Soviet tourism and the accompanying inflow of Western hard currencies. I like the effort of the pilots organizations to boycott Soviet and all other flights headed to and from the U.S.S.R. until the Red regime makes a proper apology and offers compensation to families of the 269 victims.

A hushed and packed U.N. Security Council heard tapes in full (which President Reagan used briefly during his TV talk) of the Soviet pilots stalking the South Korean plane. Then came the dreaded cutoff word from a pilot who finished the job: "Destroyed." The tape, apparently recorded by Japanese monitors, took 11 minutes. The Soviets in the U.S.S.R. delegation didn't challenge the authenticity of the voices. Chief U.S. U.N. delegate Jeane Kirkpatrick targeted the Soviet delegation with a blistering attack for its inhumanity.

Soviet U.N. Ambassador Oleg Troyanovsky, who graduated from Swarthmore College when his father was a pre-World War II diplomat in the U.S., pretended total indifference while the tapes were played. But his urbanity vanished when he heard that the Soviet Union in Moscow conceded that its plane shot down the Korean jumbo jet. When asked to comment, he replied that he would have to study TASS reports.

SOME OF THEM are pretty well known to Troyanovsky by heart. For instance, the U.S.S.R. claims the airliner was flying in Soviet airspace without navigational lights. Yet even the pilots chasing the aircraft say on tape that they saw the 747's lights on.

Next, the Soviets contend the South Korean airliner was flying in bad visibility. President Reagan asserted that it "was a clear night with a half moon." The U.S.S.R. insists that the South Korean crew ignored efforts to establish radio contact. President Reagan asserted that Soviet military planes are not equipped with the radio channel used internationally for distress signals. Why? It would make it easier for Soviet pilots to defect. Quite a few have, flying blind.

What needs doing by the U.N., I believe, is a forceful presentation before the world court for compensation of a million dollars per passenger and the cost of the jet to Korea.

Granted that the South Korean airliner veered somehow off course into Soviet airspace, it's still extraordinary that an SU-15 approached within two kilometers of the jumbo jet for a good visual look. A jumbo jet has a vastly different silhouette from any of our "recon" aircraft that fly high altitude missions. The Soviets shot the South Korean plane down and Gromyko said they'd do it again if any other aircraft "violated" U.S.S.R. airspace.

FROM THE VERY beginning of this macabre episode, I favored a Soviet apology attributing shooting down of the plane to a trigger-happy pilot and for the U.S.S.R. to offer an apology to the world as well as compensation to those who lost their lives. The U.N. should now adopt such a resolution even if the Soviets veto a majority demand. The world will then know, if they really want to.

Their charge that the United States is to blame for the incident is the biggest lie of all and won't be believed by anyone other than dyed-in-the-wool communists because they damn well have to.

Nowadays we have high-flying spy planes and satellites that can pinpoint all kinds of buildups on the ground. The age of post-World War II espionage aircraft went out with the dark ages years ago.

The big lie, the big smear technique is part of the Soviet counter-espionage system of blaming others for their own atrocities. It boomeranged badly as the Soviets dig themselves deeper holes every time top mouthpieces blame others for their own savagery. They won't get away with it.

Reds isolation

To The Editor:

Outrageous! Stupid! From whose point of view? Ours, maybe — not the Reds, certainly!

The Polish Solidarity Movement, the Afghanistan Freedom Fighters, defections by major Communists, the identification of Acga as working for Andropov in the assassination attempt of the pope, appear to show the world (especially the Third World) that the Communist Empire is waning and losing face.

However, the massacre of 269 free-world citizens in a heinous manner, again, draws the world's attention to the fact that the Reds, as Krushchev said in Houston, "spit in your faces and you'll call it dew."

From the Reds' point of view, they know that nothing of consequence will be done. As Lenin said, "They'll sell us the rope we'll use to hang them." The farmers want to sell their grain (most of which the taxpayers will pay for); the multinationals like to work with countries which have slave labor (it's cheaper than American labor); the international bankers like to lend to them. (If they don't pay, the American taxpayers will) and, so on, ad nauseum. When can principle outweigh the dollar?

We (the people) should demand that, at the least, our representatives should stop all aid and trade to the Reds and their minions. (The missile they used, they got from us.) The Red Embassies and consulates should be closed down — they've been identified over and over as KGB spy centers. We should get the U.S. out of the U.N. and the U.N. out of the U.S. It's their tool, not ours. They should be isolated as the power-mad beasts they are.

Such monsters have no right to be accepted as equals by the civilized world.

Tax disputes

To The Editor:

The article by A.J. Betterton in the Aug. 28, 1983, "Speaking Out" column promotes incorrect information. In particular, Mr. Betterton contends that individuals are not required by law to file income tax returns. Title 26, the Internal Revenue Code, Section 6001 through 6091, explicitly detail who must file returns; Section 6653(a) and (b) provides civil penalties for noncompliance; and Section 7203 outlines criminal penalties for failure to file.

Mr. Betterton cites a case in which a jury acquitted a man who claimed not to have understood the legal requirements to file, that he understood filing a tax return as voluntary. To take this as proof that one need not file is to take the single acquittal of an individual indicted for theft as an indication that it's OK to steal. In 1980, five West Texas men received prison terms and fines for failing to file income tax returns.

It would be an injustice to the millions of Americans living up to their obligation to file and pay income taxes if the Internal Revenue Service did not apply the appropriate penalties to those who "choose not to volunteer" to comply with the law.

I do agree with Mr. Bettrton on one point: "'Protestor' or 'rebel' is no certain mark of disgrace." It is only when violation of law is the vehicle of protest that law enforcement agencies become involved. Dissatisfaction with existing laws was anticipated by our Founding Fathers and the Constitution provides the means to change those laws. Working legally within the system is the most effective way to affect change.

Kinderfest fun

To The Editor:

I have been working with Kinderfest for the last four years and have never had so much trouble trying to get the horse ride for the children.

I have talked to several people involved with 4-H and cannot understand their lack of enthusiasm, especially knowing how much money their club could have made. It has made me stop and really appreciate the people who work together to make this fun for our children.

Kenneth Lynch did the horse booth for 4-H for years. You knew when he said he would do it, it would be done. Also, that is true of Gerald Oakes and Rob Piper, teachers at Midland High School who get the FFA members to furnish Kinderfest with the Pet A Zoo.

So my thanks go to these people and many hundreds who work in the booths for nothing. Thank you for helping the museum and for the fun you make for the children.

Doctor support

To The Editor:

I ask the mature majority of the medical staff of Big Bend Memorial Hospital, those veteran physicians who are not among the narrow group of their colleagues bent on destroying the career of Dr. Bill Lockhart, to remember the words of one of England's finest parliamentarians, Edmund Burke: "All that is required for evil to prevail is that good men stand by and do nothing."

Soviet attack

To The Editor:

This is what we should do in the Korean/American plane attack:

1. Cut off all trade of any kind to Russia and all of its slave satellite countries.

2. Send home all Russian personnel stationed in this country.

3. Tell the Russians whenever they are ready, we'll sit down to listen to what they will do for Korea and the U.S. to try to make up for the mass murders.

4. Stop calling the Russians, Soviets. I wonder if anyone noticed how the national news media cleverly changed the name of the Russian Communists to the Russians, then to the Soviet Union and now to just plain Soviets. I don't suppose the objective, nonbiased national news media was trying to change our image of the barbaric Communists, do you?

Finally, continue to pray for the Russian people, while opposing their form of government.

School coverage

To The Editor:

I am somewhat puzzled?, Amazed?, Aggravated — yes! What about? Lack of coverage concerning school starting.

Whether this problem lies with the Midland Independent School District for not getting the information to the Midland Reporter-Telegram or the Midland Reporter-Telegram for not having an efficient enough staff reporter to take the responsibility to print the information, I do not know.

First of all, the paper printed a list of school supplies the day before school started, (as if people wanted to run out at the last minute to purchase these). Also, printed was an article on "How To Make Friends." This is very interesting, however, it would have been a lot more beneficial for parents if there had been information printed on: school zoning, cost of lunches, the school menu, times schools and various grades resume and dismiss classes and the rural bus schedules.

For people with or without school-age children, it would also be beneficial in the future to print the date school starts back, reminding everyone to drive slower and more carefully through and around school zones.

With 18,000 students in the Midland Independent School District, as reported in Tuesday's edition, surely I'm not the only one asking these questions.

SPEAKING OUT

United Way campaign needs support of whole community

By DAN MENDELL

Dan Mendell is campaign chairman of United Way of Midland's 1983 capaign. Division manager of Exxon Co., U.S.A., Mendell came to Midland from New Orleans, La., in 1980.

At 9:55 p.m. today the president of the United States will speak to the nation on network television. His subject: the 1984 United Way Campaign.

On Wednesday at noon more than 500 people will join in kicking off Midland's United Way appeal for $1,712,000. The fact the president would take the opportunity and the networks would provide the prime time underscores the importance of United Way to the fabric of Midland and the country. It is truly impressive that virtually every community in the United States has a United Way, that $1.780 billion was contributed last year, that 35,000 community agencies are supported, that literally millions of people benefit.

But this grand "big" picture is no more than the sum of its parts. The national perspective on United Way is impressive only because of the diligence and dedication of United Way volunteers and the thoughtful generosity of donors in each local community — communities like Midland, Texas.

DURING THE three recent "boom" years Midlanders increased their support of United Way by an average of 14 percent per year. This generosity made it possible for United Way to extend its support to four new agencies: The Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and their Children, the Midland Rape Crisis Center, the West Texas Epilepsy Association and the Midland Chapter, American Cancer Society. This is certainly not a "boom" year in Midland. But the downturn has not meant a corresponding reduction in need for United Way support. Already, the Palmer Drug Abuse program (PDAP) has requested and will receive funding from United Way in 1984. Additionally, two other important youth-serving agencies have approached United Way about funding in 1984. If we are to meet these new needs as well as the requirements of the 22 current member agencies, it will be necessary to raise 17 percent more than was pledged last Fall.

It is well within our reach to grow by 17 percent this year. It will mean an extraordinary effort. It will require a truly community-wide broad base of interest. It will need the participation of each and everyone of us who makes a living in the Midland economy. It will take more than the support of the major oil companies, banks and corporations. For the United Way to be able to meet the needs of Midland in 1984, we must have the support of car dealers, restaurants, insurance agents, brokers, plumbers, motels, geologists, landmen, carpenters, dentists, retailers, airlines, physicians, utilities, drillers, radio and TV stations, truckers, lawyers and accountants. We will need employers to make it possible for their employees to hear the United Way story and decide if they want to pledge.

IN SHORT, IF THE United Way is to fulfill its mission of providing needed human services to the whole community, the whole community must be mobilized in support of United Way this Fall.

Although self-interest should not be the primary motive for supporting United Way, there are few people in Midland who are not touched in some way by the work of the agencies in the United Way family. How many of us as we grew up were in Boy Scouts, Girls Scouts, or Campfire? How many of us have children in scouting today? Speaking of our children, how many of us worry about their exposure to alcohol and drugs in today's society? The Council on Alcoholism and the Palmer Drug Abuse Program work very hard to complement our efforts at home in educating our children about the pitfalls of drink an drugs. If you are concerned about your continued good health and which of us isn't, you have learned many personal techniques for guarding against, or detecting, cancer. The source of much, if not all, of our personal awareness about cancer has been the American Cancer Society. In today's high cost economy, very often both Mom and Dad have to work to make ends meet. Many of us, or many of our most valued employees, can tackle their day's work without worry because the kids are safely in a day-care or after-school program made possible by United Way.

THEN THERE ARE the services we never think about because "it won't happen to me." But sometimes unfortunately, it might "happen to you" or someone you love. Then we are glad such services are there to be used: persons trained in Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR) by Red Cross to care for heart attack victims, the Rape Crisis Center and Battered Women's Center to give counsel and support to women victimized by violence, Family Services to help us mend broken marriages or conflict between parents and children.

If you are not contacted by a United Way volunteer in the next four weeks, contact United Way (if you can't give money, there's an agency that would be glad for a little of your time). If your employer has not arranged for an employee appeal in your workplace, ask him or her if you can do it, then contact United Way. If you are a friend and supporter of United Way, there are many, many Midlanders who have never heard the United Way story. Cut this column out of the newspaper and give it to someone who hasn't heard the story.

The services of the family of United Way agencies are like water and electricity. We take them or granted. Don't take them for granted this Fall, make a decision. Take action. Pledge. Pass this column to someone else. Urge your employer to participate. Contact United Way at 682-4358.

Thanks to you, it works, for all of us!

"Speaking Out" columnists are invited to submit articles on subjects of their choice. They should be limited to 850 words or less.

BILL MODISETT

Soviet attack defined in English

Bill Modisett

Modisett's abridged version of English language words and phrases:

Lie — What the Soviet Union tells the United States and the world it did when it detected a foreign aircraft invading its airspace.

Diplomacy — Action taken when one knows circumstances demand a severe response, but elects a less radical course such as beating one's opponent over the head with a gigantic loaf of wheat bread.

Allies — Staunch friends you can rely on to join you in speaking out harshly to your enemies on all matters — except those involving potential loss of profit, goods, services or will cause the enemy any discomfort whatsoever.

Fairy-tale — A story spun by the Soviet Union after their lie was revealed, purportedly explaining why the United States and Japan would "conspire" to misdirect a civilian airliner into Soviet airspace on an alleged espionage mission, threatening the lives of 269 people on a mission that could easily be conducted in a number of other ways with no threat to human life.

Cockiness — A feeling of extreme self-confidence on the part of the Soviet leadership, directly generated by the promulgation of their lie and their fairy-tale weaving to promote confusion.

Justice — A quality the families of the 269 people aboard the jet are deserving of obtaining, but likely will never realize.

Human rights — An imaginary Western concept that theorizes all people in the world possess certain inalienable privileges because of their mere existence, and that all nations should recognize these privileges — if they are civilized. Iron curtains block out the bright light of this principle.

Excuse — Explanation of why one cannot respond to a situation in a judicious and forthright manner. This cannot be exchanged for votes in a presidential election.

Wooden-nickle — The value that can be attached to all the explanations of why the Korean Air Lines jet was destroyed. (Exchangeable with wooden-ruble in Russia. Denotes the value of human life in the Soviet Union.)

Tragic accident — The result of a Soviet fighter pilot following orders "from the ground" and firing his plane's air-to-air missiles at a civilian aircraft. Leads to creation of a fairy-tale. See fairy-tale.

Remorse — A gnawing distress arising from a sense of guilt for past wrongs. No Soviet leader has ever experienced this feeling.

Stupid — The mental capacity Soviet leaders assign to all Russians, Americans and everyone else in the world, except members of the Politburo.

A joke — Slang expression for what all of the above constitutes.

Crime prevention team to fingerprint children

As part of a nationwide program to protect the thousands of children who disappear annually, the Midland Police Department will be fingerprinting youngsters this coming Saturday at Dellwood Mall, Midkiff Road and Illinois Avenue.

Sgt. Lalo Camarillo of the department's Crime Prevention Unit said the fingerprinting will get under way at 9 a.m. and run through 5 p.m. Only children accompanied by a parent or guardian are eligible to participate in the voluntary project, which is titled "A Touch of Love."

"We feel that it's our responsibility to offer our community a new prevention program for the safety of our children," said Chief of Police Wayne Gideon, adding:

"Parents will be the sole keepers of the children's fingerprint records. Immediately following the fingerprinting process, the record will be handed to the parent or guardian to be filed with other important family documents.

"If a child should disappear, parents who have participated in Midland's Touch of Love program would then be able to aid police in attempts to locate and identify their child."

Camarillo said that in addition to the Sept. 17 project, one is also scheduled for Oct. 1 at Dellwood Mall.

Doctor 'cures' with attitude

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

He once thought happiness was a green Austin-Healey.

As a graduate of Stanford Medical School, he had a successful psychiatric practice and marriage. But the material things Dr. Gerald Jampolsky valued in his life were not making him happy.

Jampolsky

"If something's going wrong in your world, you find someone to blame," he told about 150 people at Lee High School Friday night. "My 21-year marriage went down the drain."

An atheist, he said he thought "anybody who believed in God was a bit soft, intellectually." His worries centered around everyday life — like if the sun was going to shine that day or was it going to rain and ruin his tennis match.

He began drinking heavily and his physical health, of which he had been proud, began deteriorating.

During his internship in Boston, he had developed an interest in — and deep fear of — tuberculosis. One day, after helping a tuberculosis patient, he sat back, drained, and realized that during the hour of working with his patient, he had completely forgotten his own fear of the disease.

Jampolsky said at that point, he realized when you were concerned about what was happening to you, you were experiencing fear. When you're concerned about helping others, you experience love.

When Jampolsky said he finally found faith in God, he based his life on three points: it is possible to have peace of mind and the peace of God as one's only goal in life; one should see one's function as forgiveness and each day as a chance to give; and one should listen to the inner voice of peace rather than the rational voice.

Jampolsky, who later wrote the best-sellers "Love is Letting Go of Fear," "To Give is to Receive," and "A Book of Games," established the Center for Attitutidinal Healing in Timburon, Calif., in 1977.

The center, started for children facing life-threatening diseases, quickly grew to include family members of the children who also were afraid to face the thought of death.

The principles he used at the center for those with catastrophic illnesses can also be applied toward everyday life, he said.

"There must be inner peace before there can be external peace," Jampolsky said.

While many of the families he has counseled have been afraid to discuss their fears of death, he helped them break the glass wall and communicate and love freely. But even families that are not facing tragic circumstances can use the same principles.

He cited situations where a past grievance, unaired for years, is the cause of deep-rooted despair and unhappiness. By getting those differences out and forgiving and forgetting, much as young children do, the pain goes away and only love remains, he said.

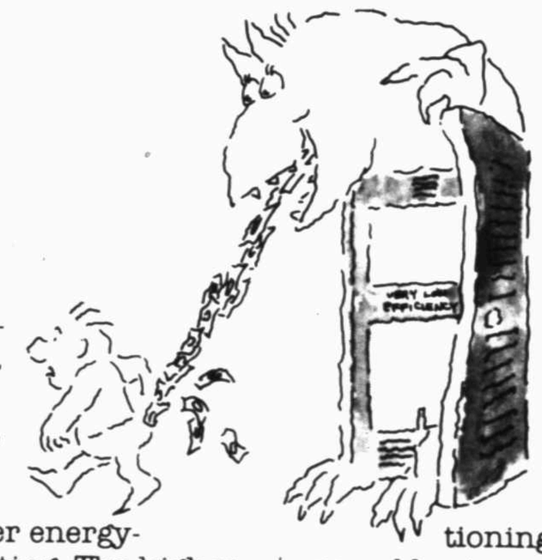
"Think how simple it is to forgive," Jampolsky said, using children who quarrel and quickly forget as an example. "We need to let go of the grievances and bring only loving thoughts into our minds."

His principles will not miraculously cure a disease, he cautioned. But they will help a person come to grips with it and live each moment to the fullest possibilities.

"At the center, we believe nothing is impossible and the mind knows no limits," he said. Too often, a person diagnosed with a terminal condition has been treated as a statistic. Too often, people who were given only so much time to live have lived much longer — and more fully — than expected.

"A person needs to choose to experience peace rather than conflict, choose to experience love rather than fear, choose to be a love-finder rather than a fault-finder, choose to be a love-giver rather than a love-seeker and choose to teach only love for that is what we are," he said.

Is your heating/ cooling system gobbling up too much money?



If electric bills are taking too big a bite out of your budget, consider equipment with a higher energy-efficiency rating. The higher the rating, the less electricity it takes to heat and cool your home. And using less electricity will help hold down your bill.

High-efficiency equipment costs more, but when the equipment qualifies, Texas Electric will give you a bonus check to help pay the difference. So if you're planning to install a room unit, or replace central air conditioning or a year-round heat pump, ask your dealer about equipment that qualifies for a bonus check from Texas Electric.

And put money back in your pocket.

Man dies in mishap

ANDREWS — A 37-year-old Tolar man was killed Friday night when a tractor-trailer pulled out in front of his motorcycle near Andrews, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Phil Hodges was pronounced dead at 10:10 p.m. Friday in an Andrews hospital, the DPS said.

According to reports, the tractor-trailer driver, Freddie Franklin of Enus, was eastbound on Highway 176, 5½ miles west of Andrews. Apparently, Hodges motorcycle was heading west when Franklin turned left in Hodges' path, the DPS said.

The Tolar man was thrown from the motorcycle when it ran between the tandems of the truck and cycle ignited, according to reports. The DPS added Hodges was wearing a helmet.

INTRODUCING THE CAR THAT WILL MAKE ALL CARS PERFORM BETTER.

AutoWeek called it "The finest quality car available." Car and Driver used the seldom-used words "magnificent," "lovely." "New levels of refinement," agrees Autocar.

Just what new car are they referring to? The BMW 318i. A sports sedan whose engineering is so technologically advanced, we fully expect it to inspire the next generation of "technological breakthroughs" in competitive models.

For a thorough evaluation of the sports sedan that will send the automotive community scurrying back to their drawing boards, contact us for a test drive of the BMW 318i.

Simplicity is automatic.

All 1983 Honda Civic Hatchbacks are designed to be simple.

But with the Civic 1500 DX, your driving can be made even simpler. Because a 3-speed automatic transmission is also available. This is the only Civic Hatchback to offer it.

It also offers five-passenger seating.

Naturally, this car has all the other features you've come to expect from a Honda. Like front-wheel drive, rack and pinion steering, a handsome interior and a very simple price.

When it comes to value, it's no wonder Honda automatically comes to mind.

"The quality of the apartment is much better than any others I've seen in Midland."

Mary and Perry Nelson talk about The Clusters:

"The extras included seem like a real bonus. We're former homeowners, so it takes a really nice apartment complex to satisfy us."

"I have a lot more kitchen appliances than I ever did in my own home. Dishwasher, trash compactor, garbage disposal, side-by-side refrigerator, built-in microwave, washer and dryer."

But that's not all. You also get French doors to patios/balconies, mini-blinds, ceiling fans and your choice of wall coverings.

Plus unmatched amenities such as luxurious clubhouse, two pools with Jacuzzis, lighted tennis courts, 4-station jogging trail, aerobics classes and exercise room.

Come and visit and you'll see why the Nelsons' say, "There have been many days we've come home and said, 'They've really done it again, they've gone first class.'"

The Clusters. Midland's finest adult community. Special pricing now available.

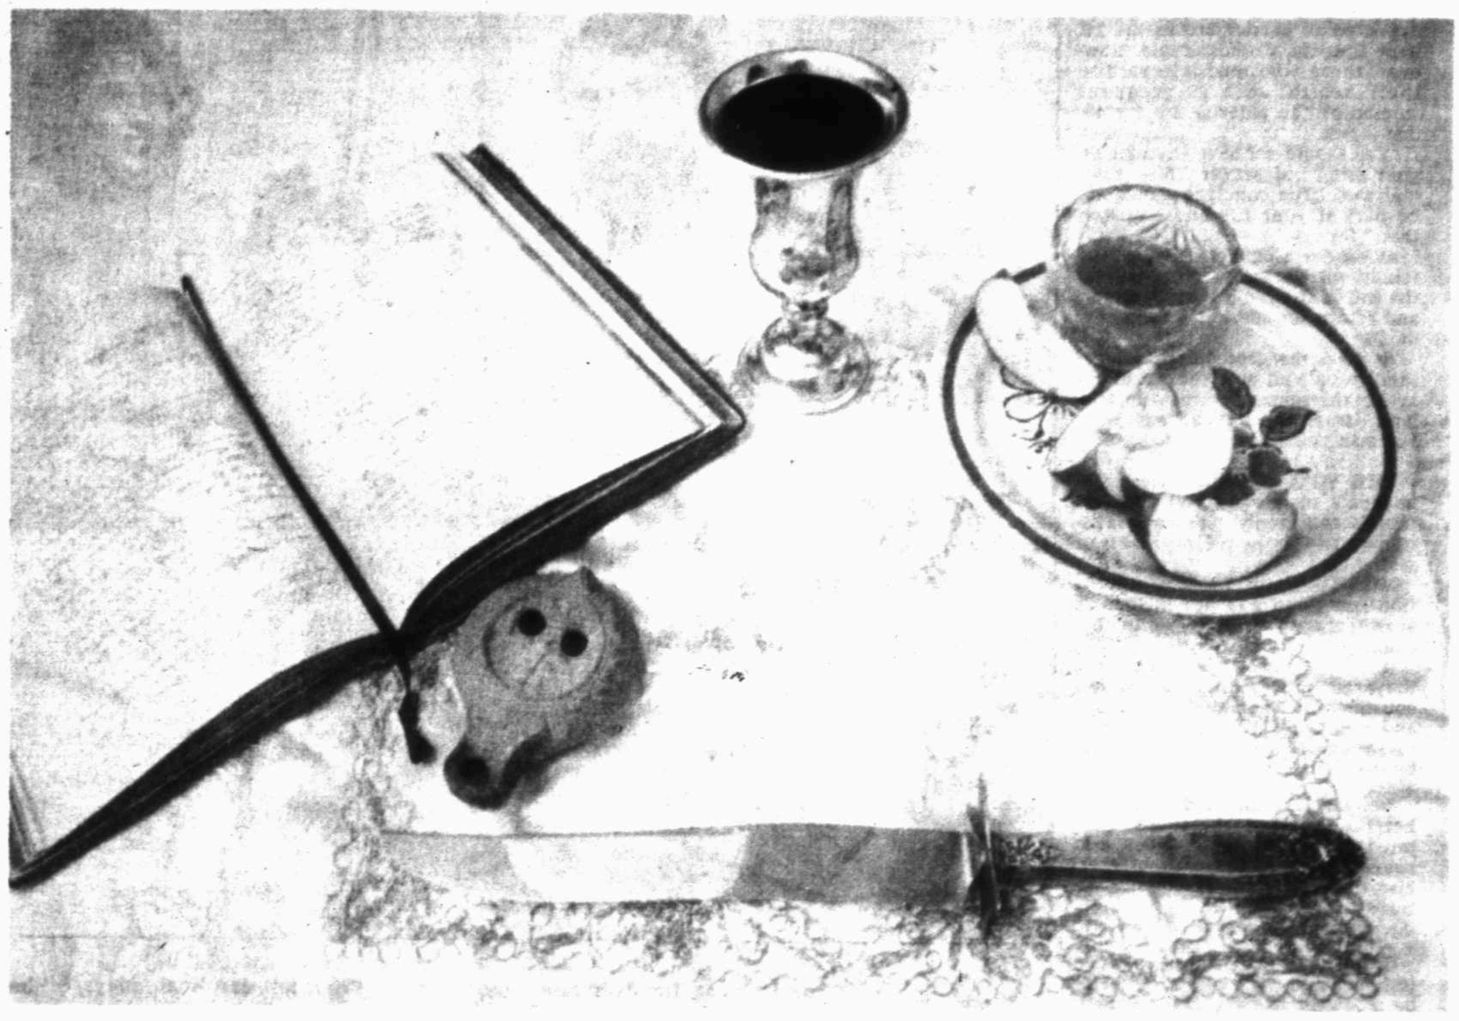
A NEW YEAR

These Hebrew numbers translate into 5744, the Jewish new year.



The Torah, left, the five books of Moses, is the Jewish bible. During Rosh Hashanah, goblets of wine will be blessed before the celebration feast at sundown. The oil lamp is lit during the holiday. Slices of apple are dipped in honey with wishes for a sweet year. A carving knife used to slice a roasted chicken or roast beef for the holiday meal.

Maya Fishman, 6, lights candles for each member of the Fishman family in a ceremony to distinguish the past day and the Jewish New Year, Rosh Hashanah. The holiday commemorates the beginning of the new year, 5744.

Text by Diane Booth

At sundown Maya Fishman covers her blond hair with a white scarf and lights four white candles in silver heirloom candlesticks, a taper for each member of the family.

The glow of the flickering candles illuminates the six-year-old's girl's face as she recites a prayer in Hebrew at the beginning of Rosh Hashanah, the holiday celebrating the Jewish New Year.

The Fishman family — Noah, Sherry, Maya and Seth — welcomed the new year, 5744, at sunset Wednesday in Midland.

The family will spend the days reflecting on the old year until next Saturday, Yom Kippur, a holiday of fasting and atonement.

"IT'S A VERY positive holiday," Fishman said, "but it's a very somber holiday. You run through all the positive and negative things in your life."

"It gets you into a mood to start you reflecting on the old year and repent for sins committed in the last year," Mrs. Fishman said.

Fishman, president of the Permian Basin branch of B'nai Brith, has spoken at several local churches on Judaism. He is president of Beth-el synagogue in Odessa, which has approximately 100 families in its membership.

According to the lunar calendar, Rosh Hashanah falls on the first and second days of Tishri, the seventh month. On the 10th day of Tishri, Yom Kippur is observed. Yom Kippur is the "culmination of Rosh Hashanah," Fishman said.

The first ten days of the new year "is a time of looking into yourself," Fishman said. Sins against God are forgiven, he said, but Jews are responsible to ask forgiveness forsins against man.

If someone has committed a sin against another man, he said, he is compelled to ask that person to forgive him for his wrongs whether they were committed knowingly or not.

JUDAISM IS A monotheistic religion based on the laws and teachings of the Torah (the five books of Moses), and the Talmud (a commentary on the Torah).

The Talmud gives "flexibility" to the laws spelled out in the Torah, Fishman said.

"There are no set or hard and fast rules," Mrs. Fishman said. "It is open to interpretation within limits and the tenets of Judaism."

Although the temple is an integral part of the Jewish religion, Fishman said, "it is really just a shell, the essence of the religion is really the home.

"It's a very family-oriented religion. A lot of traditions are centered around sharing as a family."

Instructing their children in the fundamentals and traditions of Judaism is a high priority with the couple. Seth, 2½, already knows some of the blessings used during holiday rituals.

NO WORK IS permitted once the sun sets and holidays begin.

The table is set with a special white tablecloth and fresh flowers. A blessing is made over silver goblets of kosher grape wine and the candles are lit, making a distinction between the past day and the holiday and bringing light into the special day.

A round loaf of egg bread, challah, which symbolizes the continuity of life and the new year, is covered with a cloth and blessed with a chamotzi (prayer).

Slices of apple and bread are dipped in honey, "so that it should be a sweet year," Mrs. Fishman said.

The meal is begun with an appetizer of chopped liver and crackers. A typically European-inspired menu might consist of a roasted chicken or roast beef, carrot tzimmes, a baked carrot and prune casserole, noodle kugel, a baked noodle casserole, a vegetable, fresh fruit salad and for dessert, the traditional honey cake.

The celebration feast consists of simple food, Mrs. Fishman said, not rich sauces and exotic recipes. "You should not feel stuffed. You should have a good feeling so you are ready to pray."

FOLLOWING THE meal, the family went to the synagogue for a service which lasted about three hours. They returned Thursday for a service in the morning, one in the afternoon and again on Friday.

On Saturday, Yom Kippur, the couple will begin a fast before sundown which will end Sunday with a light meal when "three stars shine in the sky."

(See HOLIDAYS, Page 2E)

Celebration for Rosh Hashanah begins at sundown

All children 13 years and older are expected to participate in the 24-hour fast, the Fishmans said. However, those who might jeopardize their health, such as pregnant women or the elderly, are forbidden to fast.

"You should not have anything on your mind but prayer," Mrs. Fishman said. "The mundane should not be part of your life and eating is that."

At sundown on Yom Kippur, the family will go to the synagogue at the call of the ram's horn, a shofar, and return for services all the next day.

"It gives me goosebumps when I think people all over the world are saying the same prayers — in Midland, Israel and Russia," said Mrs. Fishman.

THE YOM KIPPUR service will include a memorial to all deceased friends and family. "It's an inspiration to the living," Mrs. Fishman said.

Mrs. Fishman is a second generation American and her husband's grandparents immigrated to this country.

It is especially at this time of year they remember aunts, uncles and cousins who remained in Europe and perished during the Holocaust, the destruction of millions of Jews by the Nazis.

Not only is it important to remember the deceased, the couple said, but to remember Jews who live in countries where they cannot exercise their religious freedom. "We have to be thankful for the U.S. government," they said.

Grateful to live in this country, Fishman said, "It's very difficult to be a Jew in the world. We're very insulated here in the states."

"What scares us," Mrs. Fishman said, "is we see a lack of concern about traditions and religion around us. Traditions keep it alive. It worries us that in a certain amount of time the religion won't exist."

THE FISHMANS STRESSED they do not reserve practicing their faith for holidays. "Our religion isn't separate from everyday life," Fishman said. "It is not just something you do once a year, if that. We live a Jewish life."

Other than the family following a kosher diet and having to drive to Odessa to worship, being Jewish in Midland, Mrs. Fishman said, "is as difficult as you want to make it."

Raised in a Jewish home in Waco, Mrs. Fishman finds the holiday celebrations much the same as when she was a child. But her husband, a native of Brooklyn, New York, said, "It's different because we're out here.

"Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur are legal holidays in New York," said the independent geologist. "There is no traffic in the streets because everyone is home celebrating the holidays."

As a boy growing up in a Jewish community, Fishman said he was just like all the other kids. But, he said, his daughter is different from most of her schoolmates. "She knows she is very much different, especially at Christmas time.

"THE ONLY hassle is we have to be even stronger as Jews in Midland."

Married for nearly 10 years, the couple met as counselors at a Zionist summer camp in New York. They have lived in New York, Austin, Jerusalem and Zambia, Africa.

No matter where they have lived, the family has observed the Jewish holidays with traditional rituals.

For Rosh Hashanah and after Yom Kippur fasting, Mrs. Fishman, a high school speech teacher studying for her nursing degree, prepares a simple, but traditional dinner. She lets the children share in the preparation, which must be completed before sundown.

JUDAISM HAS survived for 5,744 years, the couple said. "We're strong people, that's why we survived and will continue to survive. "No other people have been able to maintain themselves for so many years," they said.

"Judaism is not just a religion," Fishman said, "but a civilization and a culture.

The Fishmans said they wish for peace and a good year for themselves, but also for the world. "There's one God in the world. We feel we're praying for the whole world, not just for Jews."

The five-year Midland residents feel if they live their lives "in a proper manner," perhaps other people will "emulate" them. "We don't want to change the world to our point of view."

Proud of her religion and heritage, Mrs. Fishman believes the survival of Judaism "is one of the things worth giving your life for because of it's morals and ethics. To us, it's a way towards peace."

Shyness socially cripples 40 percent of Americans, says psychologist

Hearst Feature Service

Up to 40 percent of Americans have inherited a crippling personality trait from mankind's earliest ancestors, and it may be condemning them to frustrated, second-rate lives, a research psychologist says.

The trait — common shyness — did some good millenia ago, when survival required that man look warily on everything strange in his often-hostile environment, Wellesley College psychologist Jonathan Cheek says, adding that shyness has become excess behavioral baggage in the modern world.

"Shyness is the tendency to be tense, inhibited and awkward in social situations, particularly face-to-face interactions with members of the opposite sex," he says. "Shy people say it's a burden. They say they make negative impressions on strangers and they tend to be lonely and, occupationally, they don't get into management jobs."

Cheek, 31, says recent research interest in the subject stems from a professional appreciation of pressures exerted on shy people by a highly mobile U.S. society. Shy men and women have been deprived of old, protective family ties and placed in constantly changing environments that value gregariousness, he says.

Cheek has concluded that shyness is a genetic hand-me-down, rather than something learned. "Surveys have come up with data showing that a third to 40 percent of the American public is shy — that's a touch high. Israel is substantially lower," he says.

Unable to account for shyness as a cultural phenomenon, Cheek and co-researcher Alan Zonderman of Baltimore's Johns Hopkins University analyzed data on 839 sets of twins who had won National Merit Scholarships, beginning in the late '60s.

"We found that the similarity between identical twins, shy or not, was substantially greater than among fraternal twins. From this — since we knew they had the same genes — we said the genetic factor was there. Other researchers found the same thing, using different methodologies."

Cheek and Zonderman concluded that they had identified a genetic predisposition to shyness — a physiological reaction including high pulse rate, sweating and dilation of the pupils. Moreover, they found that shyness could be suppressed or re-enforced by parents in the early years of a child's life.

Shy people are just as talented as more outgoing people, and equally capable of having positive relationships — once they muster up the courage to get involved with someone else.

"They latch onto the first person who will accept them, and that's often an outgoing person," Cheek says. "One study of married people shows that things turned out good. The shy people got better adjusted, as if their partners served as psychotherapists for them."

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

A trip to the San Francisco Bay Area in August was a doubly joyous occasion for Mary (Mrs. Chris) Allen. She attended a Chinese wedding which united her son Doug Millison, and Alice Yin Er Sun in marriage. It also was a happy family reunion, bringing Mary and her four children (who are scattered from coast to coast) all together for the first time in a couple of years.

Actually, the couple observed both traditional American and Chinese ceremonies. The American vows were exchanged first in the Chinese Hilltop Gospel Center in Richmond with a reception there afterwards. Immediately following the Chinese rites were performed in a restaurant in Oakland's Chinatown and followed by a nine-course banquet, with each course dedicated to a different aspect of the couple's well being, including longevity, beautiful children and abundance. At exactly the same time, Alice's family members, who reside in Peking, and their friends were partaking of an identical meal.

For the American ceremony, the bride's mother sent a traditional American gown of white silk and lace to be worn by her daghter. For the Chinese counterpart, her father sent mauve Chinese-style sheath, heavily embroidered with gold and silver threads. In return, the newlyweds are sending her parents a 16-millimeter film of the wedding and banquet.

The couple is now at home in San Jose, were Alice is continuing a family tradition by studying in the States. She is a nursing student at San Jose State. Doug is in charge of classified advertising sales for The Oakland Tribune.

MYRLENE AND BILL DILLON have returned from a three-week trip to Europe. They visited Germany, Austria, Switzerland, France, Belgium, Holland, Liechtenstein and England, with the last four days spent in London at the Inn on the Park. Salzburg, Austria, was the most beautiful city, and the cruise down the Rhine River in Germany the most memorable part of the trip, according to their reports.

WHATEVER HAPPENED TO ...? Now living in Amarillo, Nathan Pipkin, former Christian education director at First United Methodist Church, owns and operates Pipkin's Palace, a restaurant located in the historic Palace Hotel in nearby Canyon. The Doc Dodson family recently enjoyed a visit with Nathan while in the Panhandle to see the pageant, "Texas," at Palo Duro Canyon.

A WEEK'S STAY at Ghost Ranch in the mountains of Northern New Mexico was a most enjoyable experience for Betty Scott, her daughter Della Burrow, and Della's son Wayne, this summer. The women devoted their week to Yoga classes, with a nationally known authority, Dr. Richard O. Moore of Ohio State, as their instructor. Wayne took part in the youth program, which included an overnight camp out, horseback riding, swimming and hiking.

The ranch, located near Abiquiu, is operated by the United Presbyterian Church as a national adult study center.

A stopover in Santa Fe en route, with time allotted for shopping and sightseeing, was an added highlight of their trip.

NETA AND BILL GILL and their daughter, Susan, had the pleasure of entertaining a foreign student in their home this summer. Mirjam Scheck of Boskoop, Holland, was here under the auspices of the Foundation for Promption of Netherlands and U.S. Friendship.

The Gills enjoyed showing Mirjam places of interest in West Texas and New Mexico, as well as taking her across the border to Juarez, and to the Alamo in San Antonio. The visitor was fascinated by such traditional American pastimes as a baseball game, a barbecue and Fourth of July fireworks. She also was delighted with the use of a neighbor's swimming pool, as private pools are a rarity in Holland.

The Gills and Susan, a former exchange student to Holland, hope to visit Mirjam in her home country soon.

A ROUND OF PARTIES and showers this summer honored Angela and DA Harral, who were united in marriage Saturday evening in the First United Methodist Church. The Harrals will make their home both in Midland, where DA is First United Methodist's youth director, and Fort Stockton, where he is engaged in ranching. Angela, daughter of Priscilla and David Schaefer, will continue her senior year at UTPB.

The rehearsal dinner, hosted by the groom's paerents, Peggy and Alpheus Harral of Fort Stockton, was held Friday evening at Ranchland Hills Country Club. On Saturday, the bridesmaids' luncheon was given at Bah Humbug Tea Room by Aline Collins, Mrs. Brad Wilson and Mrs. W.E. Anthony, and a groomsmen's luncheon was given by Mrs. Marijo Collins, Iva Aline and John Collins and Andy Collins.

Among the other courtesies extended the couple were a "Honey-Do" shower and dinner hosted by Barbara and Larry McIntosh, Maggie Artley and Mary and Ron McFadden; a lingerie shower given by Mrs. Robert Davis and her daughter Khris, and a kitchen shower given by Mrs. William Sumner, Mrs. Gary Thurman, Mrs. Neil Rapp and Mrs. Faye McAdams.

Additional parties included a recipe shower and dinner at the home of Alice and Grady Jones, a dinner in the home of Ruth and Dr. Charles Lutrick, a rice bag and recipe shower given by Mrs. Dale McCarter, Mrs. Randolph Rubin and Diane Schaefer; a dinner party by Dana and Ed Runyan, and a Christmas tree ornament shower by the youth and their sponsors at the church.

The Garden Room of Midland Country Club was the setting for a display shower given by Mrs. Tom Cook, Mrs. Hazel Easter, Mrs. Charles Johnson, Mrs. Eleanor Josting, Mrs. John Harper, Mrs. Roy Jeter, Mrs. Duane Johnson, Mrs. Russ Hall, Mrs. Norman Williams, Mrs. George Davis, Mrs. Don Furgeson, Mrs. Gary Hall and Mrs. Jim Ross.

Several parties were given in Fort Stockton for the couple, including a lovely coffee hostessed by the groom's mother in her home.

YATES-PINKERTON

TARZAN — Judith Ann Yates of Tarzan will become the bride of Wayne Pinkerton of Midland November 5 at 6 p.m. at Belvue Church of Christ in Stanton.

Parents of the bride-to-be are Mr. and Mrs. Sammy Yates of Tarzan. The bridegroom-elect is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Cross of Midland and the late E.D. Pinkerton.

Man stresses local teaching

MOREHEAD, Ky. (AP) — Some boys at Pike County's Outpost School have mixed elements of legend and everyday life in the region to create a fictional character named Thomas Buckskin.

Buckskin, their tale went, once had the strength to lift trucks and move mountains.

But he lost his hair, the source of his strength, when it was caught in the fan of a car he was working on, and the story ended with Buckskin sitting on a mountain and drawing unemployment checks.

The boys had been grade-school dropouts, but a teacher was able to capture their attention and fire their imaginations by letting them write about what they knew, said Appalachian educator and historian Jim Wayne Miller.

As schools grow, that kind of individual attention diminishes, Miller told a Conference on Appalachian Children and Families at the recent Appalachian Celebration at Morehead State University.

And without localized teaching, children tend to become part of a national "pseudoculture ... fueled by the media," said Miller.

The trend can be reversed, Miller said. "A school curriculum can take locality and circumstances into account, paying attention not only to what is taught, but also to where it's taught and to whom."

Top shoe salesman keeps on his toes

SHARON, Pa. (AP) — Larry "Shoes" Joltin has the busiest shoehorn in the United States, an indication of his rank as the nation's top shoe salesman.

"The reason I sell so many shoes is I can wait on three or four people at one time and make them happy. That's the whole trick, waiting on several people at once," said Joltin, 40, a transplanted Brooklynite who sells men's shoes in western Pennsylvania.

"Men don't like to wait around a lot. You got to get shoes on their feet fast. We don't want people walking about here without shoes," said Joltin, who carries a shoehorn in each back pocket and another in his belt — gunslinger style.

Not many men have walked away from Reyers Shoe Store without new footwear bought from Joltin, a former meat truck driver who has been selling shoes for five years.

Last November, the New York-based National Shoe Retailers Association, which has 4,000 members who own 20,000 stores, named him the nation's top shoe salesman for 1982 because he had sold about 900 pairs of shoes worth $360,500 the previous year.

The award is based on sales, number of return customers, training, cooperation and things like setting up displays. Joltin peddled $425,000 worth of shoes last year, and he's currently about $20,000 ahead of that pace.

Joltin, who is paid a salary without a sales commission, manages his feat in a city of 20,000 residents in depressed Mercer County, where the jobless rate is 19.3 percent.

"Most of it is hustle and knowing the stock. You have to know the inventory like the back of your hand," said Joltin, who lives in nearby Youngstown, Ohio.

"Attitude is so important. I'm never down. Nobody likes a sourpuss. You got to keep pumping out the shoes. It's like a fire burning in me. It never goes out," he added.

"You play to win, whether it's playing basketball on the playground or selling shoes. I hate to lose. I can't stand to lose. I go full blast every day."

"He's a pro," said store owner Harry Jubelirer.

Reyers has 100,000 pairs of shoes in stock. There are 800 different men's styles, including Western boots, penny loafers, wing tips, casuals, imports and saddle shoes. They range in sizes from 6 to 15 in widths from AA to EEEEE.

Joltin once sold $5,600 worth of shoes in one day. Earlier this year, he sold three pairs of lizard skin boots trimmed in 14 karat gold. They cost $1,400 a pair.

Turning pro not easy for photographers

By HOLT CONFER
Copley News Service

Fight the system, and the system wins!

If you're one of the folks who has developed a real "feel" for photography, invested considerable hours in study and experimentation, subscribed to the photo newsletters, read all the "how to" books, gleaned bits and pieces of information from numerous columns ... chances are you're toying with the idea of turning your picture-taking hobby into a part-time or a full-time profession.

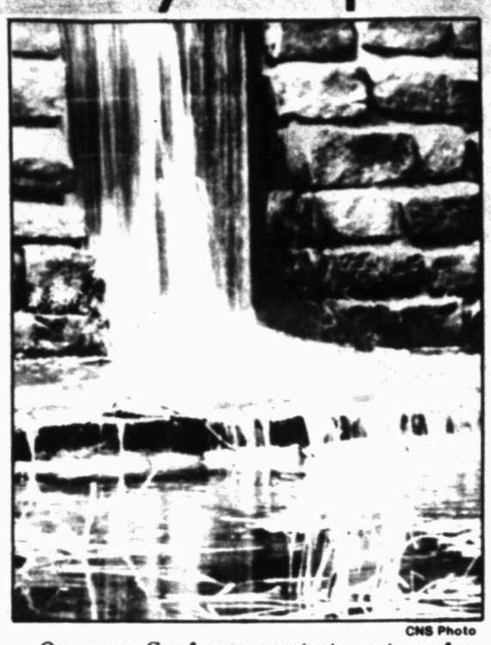
And there's certainly nothing wrong with that idea ... if there was, all the professionals currently practicing as photographers would be making a living in some other endeavor.

But my guess is that when you decide to hang out a sign that you expect to get paid for exposing film, you're going to run into a few problems that were unexpected.

For example, don't expect to get a great deal of help from your fellow professionals. The professional photographer is almost always a small businessman or woman and with the intense competition they face each day, they are not terribly secure in what they're doing. Being insecure, they feel that anything discussed with a competitor is the equivalent of revealing trade secrets — so don't expect a whole lot of conversation.

There are, of course, exceptions to that statement. Photographers who are acknowledged leaders in their profession often feel they would like to "give something back," so they hold clinics for young folks, write "how to" books and articles, and discuss their craft at length with anyone who'll listen. And that's as it should be ... although finding one of these elder statesman may be difficult in a small community.

In all fairness, photographers aren't the only businesspeople who play their cards close to the chest. Every industry has its participants who like to think they're making widgets under a rock where no one can see them.



CNS Photo

One way Confer suggests to get professional photography assignments is to make your presentation relate to your prospect. This shot would be fine for an environmental application, but wrong for a potential industrial client.

On the other hand, about a year ago, I did a story about a manufacturing firm in Indiana that encourages competitors to visit and ask about anything they see. Instead of hiding from the competition, this company's openness seems to have been a factor in their growth from one plant to a vertically integrated corporation with 33 operating divisions.

Another unexpected problem the new professional has to face is acceptance. There is a world of difference between telling you that your work is good and actually giving you an assignment. I know those words will come back to haunt you frequently as you make sales call after sales call showing your portfolio.

If you want to find out just how well you're really doing in the marketplace, keep track of the number of people who praise your work and promise to "keep you in mind" when the next job comes up versus the number of people who actually call you with assignments. I suspect you'll be surprised at the results ... and I know you'll be discouraged.

What you're seeing is "the system" at work. But "the system" does have two weaknesses — persistance and timing. For example, if you call on a prospect just once, chances are the art director or ad manager will never remember you — after all, he or she sees many, many photographers just like you every week.

One lady I spoke to several weeks ago represents several illustrators and one photographer in New York City. Would you be interested in representing another photographer I asked her.

"No way," was her unqualified reply, "there's just too much competition to make it worthwhile."

But even though lots of other photographers are after the same business you are, returning time after time makes you more difficult to forget. Persistance has another advantage, one of these days you'll walk in the door when the art director is looking for a photographer ... and the person standing in front of him will probably get the assignment.

It all may seem like a strange way to run a multimillion-dollar industry, but that's "the system," and you need to learn how to operate within its confines if you intend to make your photographic career successful.

Sex with patients harmful

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Six to 8 percent of psychiatrists and psychologists have sexual relations with their patients even though the practice is unethical and illegal, the American Psychological Association was told Wednesday.

Psychologist Jacqueline Bouhoutsos said that although the percentage is "relatively small," the psychological damage done to patients is apparently very high.

She said reports from therapists indicate that up to 90 percent of the patients involved developed strong fears or distrust of men or therapists, and 11 percent had to be hospitalized. One percent committed suicide.

Bouhoutsos said it is likely that other professions in which there is long, close contact between professionals and clients — such as medicine and social work — have similar rates of unethical sexual intimacy.

The problem of sex in therapy is only now being recognized as serious by the public and the profession, and several new studies are examining the problem from the point of view of both therapist and patient.

Some therapists during the 1970s advocated sex as a possible part of therapy, one expert in the subject said, "but now advocates are extremely rare. There has been a complete retrenchment."

Even though some patients may feel guilty and partly responsible for the incidents of sex, Bouhoutsos said, "the matter is purely the responsiblity of the psychologist or mental health professional."

"Therapy depends on the trust established ... , and sexual intimacy is a violation of that trust in the same way that incest is a violation of the trust in parenthood," she said. "The father or mother has the love and trust of the child, and even if a child is seductive or cute, it is up to the parents not to act. ... "

Bouhoutsos' report at the psychologists' annual convention in Anaheim, Calif., noted other findings about sex between therapists and patients that have come from her data and other studies not yet reported:

— By a 10-to-1 ratio, most of the patients involved are women. About half were not aware that it is unethical, and in many states illegal, for therapists to have sex with their patients.

— Only about 2 percent of the patients report sexual incidents to ethics committees and carry the reporting through all the necessary procedures. Of those who did report the incidents, a disproportionate number, about half, were male.

— Among therapists who had sex with their patients, it appears that 75 to 80 percent are "repeaters," having sex with more than one patient. The number of repeated offenses varies, and in one case Bouhoutsos said a therapist reported having sex with 100 patients.

The study described by Bouhoutsos began in 1978. To avoid having therapists report on themselves or colleagues, Bouhoutsos sent questionnaires to all licensed therapists in California, asking them to report any incidents detailed by patients.

Of 4,300 questionnaires sent out, about 700 were returned, and 380 of those who responded described 560 incidents of sex between patient and therapist.

Though not all sexual incidents might be detected by that method, Bouhoutsos said she believes a large percentage were, because apparently 90 percent of such victims seek help from a second therapist.

Other studies have shown that 6 to 8 percent of therapists and medical doctors have sex with their patients, according to Ivan N. Mensh, head of the division of medical psychology at the UCLA School of Medicine. Though rates up to 12 percent have been reported, that included what was called "non-erotic" intimacy as well, he said.

Study: Older adults consider sex important

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — They were young, just 19 and newlyweds, when they moved into a retirement home owned by her husband's family. Right away, Judy Bretschneider remembered, they began to notice that certain things were not as they had expected.

They observed, for example, "that if we had a man at every table at dinner, the women would get all dolled up, and there would just be a lot more animation." They saw that as the population of their retirement home would shift toward a majority of men, the women would take notice and "all of a sudden the beautician would have to hire an assistant." Between the sexes they saw touching, hand-holding, even discreet closing of doors for very private visits.

SAID BRETSCHNEIDER, shaking her head at her own naivete, "I never thought this would go on. I guess it was just how I was indoctrinated. I guess I just thought sex ended."

But as Bretschneider went on to document in her master's thesis, "Sexual Attitudes and Behavior Among Healthy 80-102-Year-Olds," sex certainly does not stop. On the contrary, 70 percent of the 100 women and 102 men Bretschneider interviewed and to whom she administered anonymous, 117-item questionnaires on sexual attitudes and frequency of sexual activity responded that the sexual part of life was still important to them.

POLLED ON PAST and present sexual activity, 73 percent of Bretschneider's subjects reported that they sometimes engaged in touching and caressing without intercourse. As for intercourse, 47.3 percent responded positively; 58.4 percent said they engaged in masturbation.

Frequency and enjoyment of sexual intercourse, touching and caressing showed no sex differences in the past, Bretschneider found, but present behavior and attitudes showed significant differences, "with men more active and interested than women." While 62 percent of the men in Bretschneider's survey said they were sexually active, only 30 percent of the women said they remained sexually active. For either sex, Bretschneider concluded, past and present sexual activity "were significantly correlated."

OR, AS A 101-YEAR-OLD woman wrote on Bretschneider's 27-page, large-print questionnaire, "Age has no relation to sexual activity." A 98-year-old man commented, "We've been married 78 years and are still very much in love. Sex isn't exactly what it used to be, things don't always go right ... or work right, I should say, but we enjoy each other. Don't know where all the time went, but people should understand we feel the same about many things, including sex."

An 87-year-old woman said, "It makes me feel young." And, said a 90-year-old man, "After my wife died, I had much better sex with my girlfriends."

RESEARCHING AS EARLY as 1978, Bretschneider said, "I started reviewing the literature.... There's all kinds of stuff you can pick up under the heading of 'Sex and Aging' ... And it's just baloney."

Most examinations of "sex and aging," she charged, "are not studies at all. They're just clinical inferences and impressions.

"Last year alone," she said, "there were about 40 studies written called 'Sex and Aging' and none of them, not one, had anything new to say."

Even in the landmark Kinsey studies of human sexuality, Bretschneider said, "Kinsey had less than a dozen men over 80, and no women. Masters and Johnson also had less than a dozen men over 80, and no women." The much-respected Pfeiffer studies at Duke University, said Bretschneider, "again, they had less than a dozen over 80."

AND A FORTHCOMING book on "Love, Sex and Aging," she said, "has 30 women over 80, 70 men — and only three men over 90.

"So you wonder," Bretschneider said. "You really wonder. The assumption seems to be that older people can't be sexual, so why study them?"

Academically, she said, "everybody thinks this is a joke. They wonder, how can you go out and interview people over 80. They're all vegetables in nursing homes."

But Bretschneider knew better. "I knew these people were sexual," she said. "I was really bugged when I saw how these studies were excluding these older people, and women, completely."

DEEPLY INVOLVED IN research in the field of menopause, Bretschneider's San Francisco State University faculty adviser, psychology professor Norma McCoy, attributed the lack of data to the fact that "I guess people just didn't know they were out there. I know it surprised me that there were so many 80- to 100-year-olds around, and that they were so healthy.

"I mean, it's a stereotype," McCoy said, "but you think of people that old either being hidden in some attic or stuffed away in some nursing home."

Viewing the survey's findings, said McCoy, "I think what we are saying is that what you are looking at is human beings. So if you enjoy dressing up for each other, and if you enjoy the company of the opposite sex now, you're not going to stop just because you're 80."

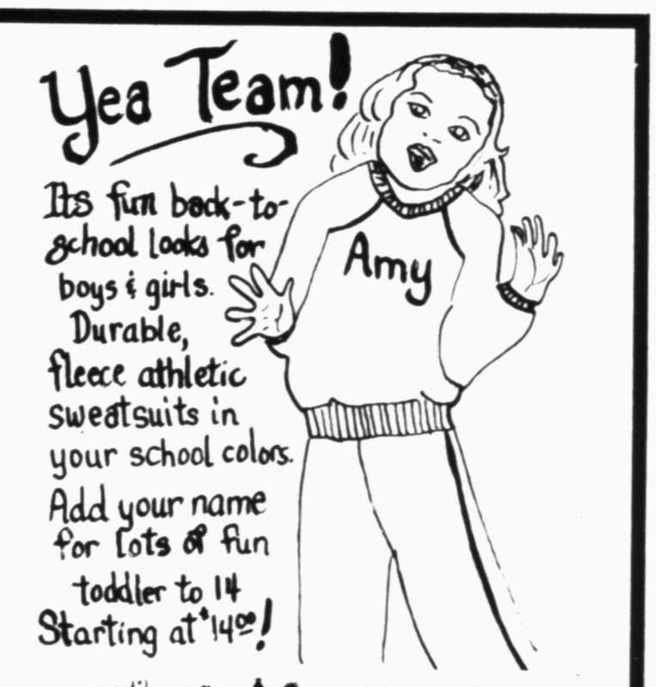
AGREED STANFORD UNIVERSITY physiology professor Julian Davidson, a colleague of McCoy's on other major projects and Bretschneider's collaborator on the questionnaire, "In terms of the common view of aging, the young folks think anybody in their 40s is finished. The common view of over 80 is 'forget it.' Of course, that isn't true, as we're showing."

Conducting the survey, Bretschneider stayed away from the retirement homes owned by her husband's family because "that would have biased the sample." Sometimes, she said, "I met quite a bit of resistance from the administrators of the homes. I think they were uncomfortable with their own sexuality. And then to acknowledge it among their residents — well, they just couldn't do it."

ON THE OTHER HAND, Bretschneider said, "One administrator told me that remaining sexually active made a difference in orientation among the residents." A physician Bretschneider interviewed "told me that of his patients who were sexually active, he thought their feelings of self-worth were greater."

While not everyone Bretschneider approached was overjoyed initially about discussing these most intimate details of their lives, "Most of the people," she said, "felt it was important, and that it needs to come out. Many of them said they had a hard time talking about sex with their families, because they don't understand, or don't want to know."

FOR HER PART Bretschneider said she saw the research as helping to "expel certain myths about aging."



'Chicken Ranch' moved to Nevada

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

After Sebastapol, Calif., high school teacher Russell Reade obtained leave from his job last year "to pursue outside interests," the school district received a call from the Nye County, Nev., Brothel Board.

Reade's job background was the subject. "I didn't know whether I should laugh or cry," Lew Alsobrook, district superintendent, said.

A few days later, Reade resigned to become part-owner and operator of the Chicken Ranch brothel in Pahrump, Nev.

The biology teacher's announcement stunned colleagues and students at Analy High School in Sonoma County.

There were a few jokes also resulted, such as the message on one blackboard:

"Mr. Reade says there are no summer jobs available."

Looking back on his career change the other day, Reade, 41, said, "I've no regrets at all. This thing was blasted all over the papers only because I was a high school teacher."

The teacher-turned-madame (there are no "misters" in the trade) said business is good, though it is always slower in the summer. Winter is the convention season in Las Vegas, 65 miles away. Delegates there can take advantage of a free commuter airline service offered by the ranch, which flies a Cessna 208 from Las Vegas to the brothel's landing strip three times a day.

The Chicken Ranch operated in La Grange, Texas, from 1915-1973, when it was shut amid accusations that it was under the protection of certain state officials. The saga inspired the play and movie, "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas."

Seeking a more hospitable business climate, the ranch resettled in 1975 in Pahrump (pronounced as you would imagine), where brothels are legal.

The less-than-palatial estate consists of four double-trailers, fronted by a sign that proclaims, "Chicken Ranch Brothel 180 Feet," and 15 "girls" work there.

Reade, divorced and the father of a son, originally told friends that he left the school because he could triple his $25,000 salary.

Floral pattern fabrics work in small rooms

By Barbara Hartung
Copley News Service

Q. I am moving into a condominium and must refurbish my upholstered pieces.

Because my new living room is rather small, I'm not certain just how much pattern I should use. However, I do not want all plain fabrics on my furniture because I think that would be boring. I really like some of the new English chintz fabrics.

I have a pair of chairs, an occasional chair and a small sofa and love seat. Also, I need draperies. The carpeting is off-white.

Please advise me about the use of color and prints in this room. — D.R.

A. Since you like English chintz, choose a floral print for your sofa and love seat — something with a touch of off-white so it will tie in with your carpeting.

Then select a striped fabric in many of the same colors taken from your floral print. Use the stripe on the pair of chairs.

For the occasional chair, why not select a solid — one of the accent colors in the floral print? This will give you a beautifully executed room.

This traditional living room combines a blue and rose floral print on sofas with blue, rose and off-white stripe on wing chairs and solid blue on occasional chair at left.

For walls, choose a pleasing light tone taken from the print — an off-white, a pale peach, pale gold, pale green or whatever you like.

Matching draperies at the windows would allow you to blend the windows and walls and cause attention to be focused on the upholstered pieces and other accents you add.

Q. Our kitchen-family room needs some updating and we are finally beginning to plan what we should do to enlarge the room and bring in more light. We have only one small window in the family room section and one small window over the sink in the kitchen area.

I would like to create a sort of country look. We have almond-colored appliances in our kitchen and the cupboards — which I want to refinish — are dark walnut.

Please give us some suggestions. — R.W.

A. To bring more light into your kitchen, a garden-type window would be delightful over your sink.

In the family room area, consider removing the small window by adding French doors to the outside, or sliding glass doors. This can work wonders.

Install a country brick or simulated tile floor covering.

Triplets' parents start group

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — Janet Bleyl and Suzy Bivings, mothers of triplets, who live in the Stockton area 90 miles east of San Francisco, felt like loners during their pregnancies because their doctors and libraries offered little background on triple births.

Now they have formed what they believe is the first group for families with triplets to help spread word of the trials and rewards of births that come in threes.

"There's three times the loving going on in this house," Mrs. Bleyl said in a telephone interview. "It's just unbeatable."

Jeff and Janet Bleyl have 8-month-old triplets — Joseph, Jonathan and Jacob — plus six other children ranging in age from 6 to 15.

The condition of her babies, both 10 weeks premature, was "touch and go for a long time." All were born with lung infections. The last was discharged from the hospital after seven weeks.

"When we finally got them home, it was just absolute constant babies," she said. "You can take care of two. It's that third one that turns life into a total circus."

Without a careful watch, Mrs. Bleyl said it would be easy to feed one baby twice and skip the third, or give medicine to the only one who didn't have an ear infection.

The Bivings' only children are their 2-year-old triplets.

"Having triplets happens to be the best thing that ever happened to us," Mrs. Bivings said. "It's the expense that gets us down most."

For example, a triple stroller sells for about $350. The Bivings bought a twin stroller and modified it to handle three.

Mounds of diapers give way to a need for three sets of the same size clothes. The Bivings have some dress-alike clothes for their daughters, Lindzy, Libby and Lacey, but "the girls are starting to want to choose what to wear."

The girls slept together in a car bed for two months before switching to baby cribs. They played in baby swings during adult meal time "so you could eat dinner once in a while. We'd have them all swinging in the living room."

Convention attended by 400 twins

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Alice and Clarice, the Rainer Twins, are playing shift-the-smile.

The smile is the strangest thing about their strange performance. It is not two smiles, but one. Alice and Clarice are seated at the piano, dressed in long blue lacy gowns, playing lacy trills, while that single girlish brightening oscillates between them. One smile, two women.

More than 200 sets of twins, almost all of them identicals, are cheering for the Rainers, and not only for the Rainers, but for something even grander, for twininity itself.

There is a stutter in the air, a joy in duplication, a rich redoubled weirdness. Two hundred sets of twins, their strangeness here not strange at all, are wallowing in twinship.

Certain rules apply at these annual conventions of the International Twins Association. The rules aren't written down — this is, after all, a friendly, family-type party — but the rules are followed nonetheless: twins must dress identically, male twins must wear exactly the same T-shirts or exactly the same ties; female twins must wear the same earrings, the same dresses. Twins should wear their name tags. Twins should walk in pairs. They should come to meals together, and do their dining side by side.

Alice and Clarice, Gene and Dean, Mildred and Myrtle, Arlene and Ilene, Lollie and Polly, Rudolph and Ralph — all their lives they've had to bear that which-one-of-you-is-which stuff, but here it doesn't matter. All weekend they have wandered two-by-two through the sweltering streets of Charleston, 200 sets of twins happily ignoring — no, actually enjoying — the gawking of the singletons.

No one is making any money out of them. They've all paid their own way. The registration fee is only $15. They have come for one good reason. Here, for once, each pair of twins is a sort of individual. Here, and maybe only here, people locked in twinship can look around and feel, well, just like everybody else.

"I always say we," says Clarice.

The Rainer Twins are standing in the lobby of the Sheraton Charleston waiting for the bus that will take them on the city tour. They are giggling mischievously. At some unspoken signal, they pick up Viva and Vita, their two apricot toy poodles, and shove the uncomplaining dogs into a pair of Velcro-sealed shoulder bags. "We don't want to be individuals," says Alice. "If one runs to the grocery store, we feel strange. We've never been separated. We never seem to argue."

"Isn't this fun?" says Clarice. "It is so nice to be with others who, well, understand."

Don Dotson of Kearney, Neb., is attending the convention — alone for the first time. Dan couldn't make it. Dan's in Colorado. Don and Dan came every year from 1974 to 1977 — and each year won first prize for looking most alike. They came again in 1981, and again they won.

"We have trophies at home this high," says Don. "I kind of feel out of place without him. Why did I come? For friendship. You meet two people at once, and you know they've experienced the same things in life that you have. Lots of people say it's like having a brother — but it's not. Last week we broke up with our girlfriends. We didn't know we were going to, but we did it at the same time. I'm a UPS driver. My brother works on the railroad. We're both in transportation. We never fought. But we wrestled, competitively, in high school. We were good. Because we practiced all the time at home. We were so good we wrestled for the state championship in 1968. He whipped me 6 to nothing. I didn't want to beat him. I really didn't."

Only certain types of hard-core twins regularly attend these annual conventions. Out there in the real world, two-eggs-two-sperm fraternal twins outnumber the identicals perhaps 2-to-1. Not in the International Twins Association. Eight of 10 pairs present appear to be the product of a single fertilized egg

Preventing home accidents important

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

If you fall down in or near your home, the chances are you will be a casualty. It may be hard to believe, but nearly 13,000 Americans were killed last year from falls around the house, while about 2 million others were incapacitated for short or long periods of time.

Since the dictionary defines an accident as "an unfortunate event resulting from carelessness, unawareness, ignorance or unavoidable causes," it can be assumed a large percentage of these casualties could have been averted by intelligent attention to principles of safety.

Many accidents, for instance, occur in the home workshop, with only a comparatively small number due to the misuse of tools, power or otherwise. The greatest number are caused when somebody slips or trips over something on the floor. Home do-it-yourselfers can hardly avoid spilling something on the floor once in a while.

The important safety rule in this case is to stop what you are doing at once — instantly, not a few minutes later when you have finished what you were doing. If it's a liquid, wipe it up. If a non-liquid, pick it up. You can slip on a small piece of paper as easily as you can trip over a screwdriver.

Falls in the shower take place for a number of reasons, but the most common is because of the absence of adhesive strips or suction mats on the floor. There should be bars at two or three locations which a person can hang on to when changing positions. When there are elderly persons in the house — and perhaps even when there aren't — a non-slip sitdown area should be provided, especially if the shower is over a bathtub.

If you are standing on a ladder you are fishing for trouble if you reach out to use a screwdriver, hammer, paint brush, or roller. Every ladder carries a warning on which is the highest step you can use safely. It's usually one or two steps from the top, more if it's a long outside ladder.

Why do people overreach? Simply because they don't want to be bothered getting down and moving the ladder a little. Also, be sure the ladder is solidly set before you get on it and that it is far enough away from the house. An extension ladder should be one-fourth as far from the house foundation as the total length of the ladder. Thus, if you are using a 20-foot ladder, its bottom should be 5 feet from the foundation.

Back in the home workshop, another troublemaker is the failure to concentrate, especially if somebody comes into the area while you are operating a power machine. If you are sawing or sanding or grinding or anything else and somebody comes in, turn off the machine immediately, then look up and reply. Be certain you disengage the plug from the electric outlet before you make any adjustment to the machine. It is a matter of record that accidents with power tools occur more often when you are familiar with a machine than when you first use it. Familiarity often breeds carelessness.

If you have a project which calls for repeated operations of the same task, don't do them all at once. Vary the type of work you are doing every so often. Monotonous chores cause boredom, which causes carelessness. If you feel the least bit tired, stop and rest a while or quit for the day. Fatigue not only can get you into an accident, it can cause you to do poor work.

So many products necessary to home maintenance have chemicals in them that you are wise always to work where there is plenty of ventilation and no open lights. Do this even when you are sure there is no danger of fire or an explosion and you will get into a habit that may save your life someday when you make an error of judgement.

Fortunately, many manufacturers whose products once were dangerous are now making them without flammable and volatile formulas. Read the labels carefully, but no matter what they say, play it safe.

FABRIC SECRETS

BETTY MARTIN

The area from the waist to the hips is crucial in fitting a skirt. If there are any fitting problems below the hip line, you can be fairly certain that the cause is above it. The rest of the skirt is merely an extension of the seams from hips to hem. Consider that, for your figure, this area of the skirt may not be long or short enough. There may also be a problem with width. When skirt seams swing forward or backward, poke out or hike up, look for the origin of the trouble in the waist-to-hip area.

Stitching in style

Text by Diane Booth
Photos by Ron Jaap

Coming Thursday:
The Reporter-Telegram looks at fashions for the fall season. Read about the latest in furs, shoes, handbags, boots, suits, tips on clothing care.

No matter how you cut it, sewing a fall wardrobe will stretch your fashion dollar.

More Midlanders are retrieving their sewing machines from the backs of closets and brushing up on their sewing skills or learning how to sew in order to beat the high cost of dressing, according to local sewing store spokesmen.

"People are returning to sewing to save money," said Betty Martin, owner of Leggett's Fabrics.

She pointed to a blouse, skirt and sash featured in a clothing store ad for $102. Her shop carries a similar pattern style and the same fabric as the ready-to-wear outfit. Mrs. Martin estimated the identical outfit could be made for $32, a $70 savings.

"I have people in the shop now who haven't sewn for years who are interested in sewing again," she said.

George Lyons, Manager of Cloth World, isn't surprised by the renewed interest in sewing. "A lot of people are trying to get back to basics because of the economy."

HIGH PRICES for ready-made clothing and better quality workmanship in home sewn articles are the reasons for the sewing craze, he said. "Sewing was once a hobby but now it's almost a necessity because of high clothing costs."

But Lyons stresses the money saved by making clothes instead of buying them isn't worth it if you don't enjoy sewing. "If you figure in how much your time is worth, you might as well go out and buy clothes."

Leggett's owner said both she and her husband have backgrounds in ready-to-wear clothing and keep abreast of fashion. "We purposely buy fabric which will be in ready-to-wear clothing."

One customer went to the store looking for blouse fabric to match a skirt she had just purchased for more than $100. Mrs. Martin said her daughter made the same skirt displayed at the store for about $27.

Many people avoid sewing because they don't have confidence in their stitching skills, she said. "If you buy ready-to-wear, nine times out of ten there are defects in the clothing."

"I HAD ONE girl here who asked her mother not to match the plaids in a skirt because she said 'Everyone will know you made it.'

Even if a sewer's techniques are not top notch, an attractive garment can be made, said Mrs. Martin.

Many of today's patterns are designed for beginning seamstresses, she said. "They use every shortcut in the book. There are not as many tailoring details in patterns as there used to be," she said.

Although saving money is motive enough for home sewing, she said there are other bonuses.

"A lot of people would rather have something that is uniquely them. There is a desire for individuality," she said. "You won't see yourself coming and going. Women are no longer following fashion trends like cattle."

For example, a person who has a minor figure problem such as a short waist or large hips can obtain a proper fit in the colors most becoming to her.

Mrs. Martin makes "nine-tenths" of the clothes in her closet. She sews her garments because she said it is economical, she knows what looks good on her and she gets a better fit for her tall frame.

MOST OF her customers are women sewing for themselves or for their husbands, boyfriends, children or grandchildren or purchasing a pattern, fabric and notions for a seamstress to sew.

"Our customers are trying to save money but they still want the fashion look."

This season, lightweight wools are popular because of Midland's mild weather. Acetates have returned to the fashion scene and overdyed fabrics, corduroy, georgette and tapestries are also big. Silk noile is in demand for dresses, skirts, blouses, jackets and slacks.

Teal blue and jewel tones are the starring colors this fall, she said. Stripes are the fashion look in almost every fabric imagineable, she said.

Peplins, a ruffle below the waist, are seen in many patterns and the fitted '40s and '50s look is in vogue. The loose look, in chemises for example, is featured this fall.

SKIRTS ARE A little fuller this year except when paired with a jacket. While shorter skirt lengths are back, any length goes this fall. The classic blazer is always a winner but shorter jackets continue to be the rage this fall. The cropped look in jackets without a collar is a hit, Mrs. Martin said.

Suits and full dresses with big bows are two popular fashion looks sought by customers at the Showcase of Fine Fabrics, said Manager Ellen Wefel.

"Whatever you see in ready-to-wear stores is here," said Miss Wefel. But she said a garment can be personalized if you make it yourself.

Interest in home sewing is booming, she said, judging by a surge in sewing machine sales.

More working women and even men are sitting down to sew, she said. "You can make very high fashion outfits at half the price."

Miss Wefel makes nearly all her clothes at a substantial savings, she said. "If you keep track of the sales you can pick up some great bargains."

ALTHOUGH THE STORE manager is an accomplished seamstress, she said anyone can sew. "If you can read instructions, you can sew."

People should think of a fabric store as "another clothing store," Miss Wefel said. Instead of shopping for a blouse to match a skirt at a clothing store, people should consider a fabric store.

Another plus about sewing, she added, "Is when you make your own garment you know how it's made and you take a little bit of pride in it."

DESPITE A TIGHT economy, Chuck Morrow, manager of Fabric Warehouse, said his business isn't feeling the pinch. People are limiting their purchases of ready-to-wear clothing, Morrow said, because "that's where people can cut."

Geneva Walker, assistant manager at Cloth World, who sews an average of three garments a week, said sewers have a wide selection of fabrics to choose from this fall.

Stripes are the predominant fabric design but prints and paisleys are also widely featured, Mrs. Walker said.

Contrasting trims are appearing on collars and cuffs and satin ribbon trims are particularly popular, she said.

A number of the store's customers have been color coded, she said, so they know what colors and shades are flattering. "We sell a little bit of everything because women are style and color conscious."

Pressing key to professional sewing

If you're like many home seamstresses, you regard pressing as one of the most tedious steps in the sewing process — something to be avoided when possible. However, when done correctly, pressing eases the steps it precedes, and can add a finished professional touch to your garments.

To minimize the burden of pressing, M. Grace McMahon Johnson, educational director for White Sewing Machine Company, offers these short cuts and pressing suggestions.

Because maneuverability is often a problem, Ms. Johnson suggests a travel iron instead of a full-size iron. If you have a new home-size pressing machine with vapor-jet-steam capability, there is no maneuvarability problem because you handle only the work - not the iron. The following suggestions apply in either case.

"When pressing open the seam of a collar, before pressing it flat to topstitch place the edge of the seam allowance along the edge of the ironing board. Press the top part of the seam allowance back, turn the collar over, and repeat the same way on the remaining edge. By doing this, she said, "you can avoid having to press the seam allowance flat from the inside of the collar."

To avoid creasing a sleeve by pressing seam allowances simultaneously, Ms. Johnson recommends placing the edge of the seam allowance even with the board and pressing back one half of the seam allowance at a time.

For a crisper, more professional look on ties and belts, Ms. Johnson has this suggestion: "Instead of pressing the seam edge flat exactly opposite the folded edge, center the seam in back, finishing with two folded edges.

"Be sure to use a cooler temperature on polyester and other light-weight fabrics," she cautioned. "Permanent wrinkles can be the result of too hot an iron. Scorching can actually melt the fabric and shorten the fibers, resulting in what will show as a permanent wrinkle.

When a sharp crease is the desired result however, Ms. Johnson said you should let the crease cool and consequently set after pressing. This, she said, will produce the desired crisp crease effect.

One final reminder: The three basic elements of good pressing are steam, heat and pressure. With these provided by the iron, the pressing should be relatively easy.

Tips to get more mileage out of wardrobe

With the high cost of clothing today it's important to make a new wardrobe last as long as possible. The following tips, courtesy of The Singer Co., will help you make the most of your clothes:

— Dry clean those "Dry Clean Only" fashions regularly. Perspiration build-up on clothing causes discoloration and weakens the fabric.

— Don't iron wool clothing directly on the fabric. Place a towel over the garment and iron over that. For a steamlike effect, wet the towel first.

— Clean clothes before storing them. The longer dirt sits, the more difficult it is to remove.

— Don't throw away clothes with tears or moth holes. Use hidden fabric from the cuff or seam to make virtually invisible repairs with the new Match-A-Patch mender. — CNS

Magazine reflects varied concerns

Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO -- When Rep. Patricia Schroeder of Colorado acknowledged that "Good Housekeeping magazine is certainly into more than pots and pans," national affairs editor Margaret Adams took a bow.

Adams began to track the transition of women 10 years ago for the magazine. The job soon acquired international aspects. It has taken her – and Good Housekeeping – into every part of the world to report on every human concern. Adams has just been tapped by the State Department and Nancy Reynolds, the U.S. representative to the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women, to plan this country's participation in the World Conference of Women in Nairobi in 1985.

If all that makes Adams sound like a woman in transit as well as transition, this self-styled "little gray-haired lady from Good Housekeeping" agreed as she outlined her travels of the last two years. She's been in most capitals of Europe, to all the NATO bases and to several Middle East countries, and she has met with an array of leaders from the woman president of Iceland to the queen of England to the presidents of Israel and Egypt.

"I have been on the road 80 percent of the time. One-third of my work is in Washington. On the day the International Federation of Business and Professional Women could not get into the White House, I had been one of its convention speakers. I spoke on world communications and its threat that almost overpowers its promise. It offers the potential for what could be the last dictatorship in 'charistech,' or the rise of a charismatic personality who knows how to use high technology. That kind of control of the world communication system would be more powerful than the bomb."

The editor appeared here before the staff of Ketchum Advertising to discuss "The Woman of the '80s." "There is not one but many. Women are splitting like stocks, to become more profitable and powerful. We must assert that we are the co-captains of history. We want a balance in social, political and economic activity in every aspect of American life."

A small, spirited woman in her 50s, Adams sees herself as a typical woman of the '80s. She was widowed when her two sons, now teen-agers, were toddlers. She has worked since she was 17, putting herself through college, and had a writing-editing-advertising background when she joined Hearst editor John Mack Carter's Good Housekeeping staff.

She immediately began organizing seminars to get a coalition of advice on the changing status of women in this country and around the world. Participants ranged from the first Soviet women cosmonaut to women in Congress, the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Gay Task Force.

Adams went on loan to the State Department to help plan the U.S. role in the 1980 Copenhagen World Conference of the U.N. Decade for Women. Now she is coordinating efforts for the 100th anniversary celebration of Good Housekeeping in 1985, with the U.N. Nairobi conference that year.

"Look at all that has happened since the U.N. Decade of Women opened with the 1975 conference in Mexico City. Our hope is that by 1985 we can help provide a better understanding of what is happening in the world and that we can learn from other cultures. And for this we need a free press.

"I am impressed with the value of women talking one-to-one. We had a remarkable experience recently at the Jerusalem Women's Seminar. Twenty North American women of various backgrounds went to the Middle East to spend time in Jerusalem and Cairo, to meet the political leaders, prominent women and our professional counterparts. In one day, we went from an early morning visit to Golda Meir's tomb to visiting Sadat's grave by moonlight.

"The women of Israel, for example, have the opportunity to serve the country in every way, and they often live in dangerous situations. I met women who have been majors and colonels in the military. It is my belief we should have some kind of universal service – in the military, in the State Department or wherever there is a need – and this should be for women as well as for men. As the mother of sons, I don't want the world safe only for its daughters."

More women seek sports officials jobs

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Women's sports have grown tremendously, but few women officiate — because they didn't prepare for such a role, an Arizona State University faculty associate says.

But if Ed Trexler has his way, all that will be changing, and soon.

"We definitely need women in sports officiating," the health, physical education and recreation associate said. "Those willing to pay the price by attending clinics and workshops are going to move up fast in the profession."

Trexler, a veteran sports official who also serves as commissioner of the Arizona Community College Athletic Conference, says only about 5 percent of today's sports officials are females.

But in the past three years, increasing numbers of young women have been enrolling in Trexler's officiating classes. He's adding an off-campus session this fall.

Trexler sees no reason why women shouldn't officiate men's sports — with two possible exceptions.

"Football is very physically demanding — three hours or more of running around in all kinds of weather," he said. "And many women do not like to officiate baseball because the ball is very small and painful when it nicks you. Even with pads on, it hurts."

However, he added, there are outstanding women basketball, softball, volleyball and tennis officials in all parts of the country.

"Sports officiating is great for students needing extra money," Trexler observed, adding that officials are needed in the mid-Arizona area yearround.

Teresa Cromer, an Arizona State business major from Chandler, says she'd probably do it "even if the money wasn't there.

"I like sports and sports people," she explained. "It's great to be involved."

Ms. Cromer, whose specialty is softball, says the key ingredient in being a good official is confidence in yourself.

"If you question your ability, you'll have a hard time out there," she said. "A lot of fans ride you because you're a woman. As a result, a woman umpire or referee has to prove herself more so than a man."

Mary Beach, a sophomore therapeutic recreation major from La Grange, Ill., specializes in basketball — a sport she played for four years in high school. She says it's "much more difficult than softball mentally and physically."

She also says it's basically a hobby and a way of earning extra money for her.

"However," she added, "I definitely feel there's a place out there for women as officials in both amateur and professional sports."

Sue Green, a sophomore telecommunications major from Phoenix, believes crowds need a bit of educating to women officials.

"I've heard a few comments about 'going back to the kitchen' and stuff like that, but I ignore it," she said. "If you prove you are competent, the crowd won't give you any problems. The big difficulty is that a lot of male coaches see you as a woman, not as a referee."

Ideas to make studying count

By MICKEY FRIEDMAN
Hearst Feature Service

Maybe this is the year you're starting to get concerned about college. Or maybe you just believe you're not getting all you could out of your education. If you've decided to put serious effort into academic matters this year, you'll want to know what the experts say about how to get the most out of the time you spend studying. Here are some ideas on how to make those study hours more worthwhile.

First of all, if you have trouble reading, you'll have trouble studying. If reading for you is a chore that takes a great deal of effort, studying is going to be extra hard. There are, of course, specialized classes to teach reading skills. If your reading problem is serious, you should look into them. If, on the other hand, you're just a bit slower than you'd like to be, you might be able to help yourself. The way you do that is simply to read.

"Basically, good readers read a lot," says Mary Dolin, a learning specialist at the Student Learning Center at University of California-Berkeley. In order to prepare yourself for the more complex academic reading to come, Dolin recommends finding something to read for pure pleasure, whether it be the latest gore-drenched mystery, a hot romance or a book about baseball. "It's like sports," Dolin says. "You have to have active, daily involvement. Keep it up, and you'll be an Olympic reader."

John Laskey teaches speed reading and comprehension training for the Institute of Reading Development in San Francisco. He agrees that reading for pleasure can be valuable practice for study: "Students should read things they enjoy, so they get comfortable with reading," he says.

The day will come, however, when you have to put aside that rock star's biography and pick up a textbook. When you do, Dolin and Laskey urge, don't let boredom and passivity fall over you. The wost thing you can do is plod along, thinking only about how much you wish you were at the end. That way, you won't get anything out of what you're reading, Dolin says, "Most students are able to move through a text line by line. The problem is being passive. To accomplish anything, you have to be an active participant in the reading process."

How to be active? Both Dolin and Laskey recommend that before picking up the book and beginning the first assignment, you do a "preview" of the book, looking it over carefully in its entirety.

"Learn who the author is, what the subject and purpose of the book is," Laskey says. "Often, a book will have an introduction or other preliminary material. Read that, and look at the table of contents. That way, you'll have an idea of a pattern, and have a base to work from in terms of comprehension," he continues.

According to Dolin, "Most students with limited reading experience tend to just begin at the beginning, but it's important to look at the whole – the graphics, the pictures, the chapter headings – see it as a whole, and be aware that it has parts." After this thorough preliminary scanning of the text, Dolin recommends formulating questions that could be answered by the text.

After reading, Dolin says you should be able to rephrase the important points of the assignment in your own language. "You must be able to organize and paraphrase. This is important to any kind of reading. To write a summary or a paraphrase really helps retention."

Neither Laskey nor Dolin recommends extensive note-taking while you're reading. "It has a tendency to slow you down. Outlining and note-taking are too formal," Dolin says. "Students are great high-lighters, too. They'll make a yellow mark on a line, but they aren't really thinking about the idea involved."

What it all boils down to is being actively involved in what you're doing. "Not much leaning takes place unless there's output – unless you're doing something with the information," Dolin says. "Make a map, quiz yourself, or restate the information. When you're doing something like that, it's much harder to daydream."

College students need support not pressure

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Can parents help when college freshmen suddenly find themselves getting lower grades than in high school?

Yes, by being supportive, but not uptight, advises Richard Feldman, associate professor of philosphy at the University of Rochester. Feldman spoke at the University's annual orientation program for parents of freshmen.

"Freshmen need to be reassured by parents that one low grade isn't the end of the world," Feldman said. "Students get enough self-imposed and peer-imposed pressure. They don't need more from home."

Medical workers issued safety tips

ATLANTA (AP) — The national Centers for Disease Control has issued new safety guidelines for dental workers, morticians and medical examiners in dealing with AIDS victims.

Dr. Harold Jaffe, a member of the CDC's AIDS task force, said the list updates precautions issued for all health workers last fall.

Guidelines issued advised dental workers to wear gloves, masks and protective eyewear when treating patients who may have AIDS. Instruments used in the mouths of such patients should be sterilized after use, the CDC said.

Morticians and medical examiners who handle the bodies of AIDS victims should treat such cases as they would victims of hepatitis B, the CDC said. They should wear double gloves, masks, protective eyewear, gowns, waterproof aprons and waterproof shoe coverings, and should sterilize contaminated instruments and surfaces.

DEAR ABBY

Man's buddies upset wife

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Please print this very important message to "The Bachelors in the Office":

I know that you have chosen to remain unmarried, to be free from responsibility. There is no one in your life to whom you must answer or consider in your decisions. But my husband has a wife and family to consider. His wife needs his companionship and his children need a father's influence and love. So, please, stop inviting him to all your drinking parties and "men only" expeditions.

Don't twist his arm to stay for "one more beer." And if he says no, don't make fun of him and accuse him of being "henpecked."

I know he needs his recreation, but three or four nights a week is a bit much. You are welcome in our home anytime, but please, don't involve my husband in activities that keep him from his family. While he is out having fun with you, his wife and kids are alone, and we miss him. — HIS WIFE

DEAR WIFE: The bachelors in the office are not responsible for your husband's decisions. He is. Some arms twist more easily than others. Your message translates, "Don't offer candy to my baby."

Better to direct your message to your husband.

DEAR ABBY: A casual acquaintance, after losing his wife, started calling me and coming to my home. He has never taken me out. (I give him tea, cake, etc.)

He told me he would like to have sex relations. I told him without a license it does not go. He still comes around, hoping to be a winner.

What is your advice to me about him? — FOREST HILLS, N.Y.

DEAR FOREST: He bluntly told you what he had in mind, and you clearly told him "no rice, no dice." If you enjoy his company, bring out the tea and cake, but hold back the "etc." or he will be the winner.

DEAR ABBY: Today my 22-year-old son put two 15-cent stamps on a letter that could have gone for 20 cents, because all he had were 15-cent stamps. Well, his father hit the roof! I am not talking about just being upset, I am talking about violence! He called our son every four-letter name in the book, interspersed with stupid, lazy, no good, etc. Our son is neither stupid nor lazy. He is a good kid who works with his father putting in 9-10 hours a day to earn his college fees.

This goes on all the time with all four of our sons. They are never allowed to defend themselves or talk back to him because that would be "disrespectful," so they just take his bullying.

I say he is abusing the boys verbally; he says he is trying to make "men" of them. Please comment. — THE BULLY'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: They're your sons, too. Writing to me about your husband's abusive behavior won't improve the situation. Why don't you take the bull(y) by the horns and point out the fact that he's confusing "respect" with fear?

I hope he wakes up to reality soon, or he will have a lonely and loveless old age.

DEAR ABBY: I see so many letters in your column from wives who complain because their husbands have retired and are now "underfoot."

Abby, retired husbands do not have to be "underfoot." I know. Mine retired after 30 years, and we moved from a big city to a small town. I have my housework and he has his gardening and workshop. Whenever I need him for something, I call him with a loud bicycle horn and he comes running. — NO PROBLEMS IN TEXAS

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booket, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Office visit fees vary

Fees for initial office visits vary widely by types of physician, according to a survey reviewed by the Health Insurance Association of America. For example, in 1982, the first visit to a nonsurgical specialist was $25 more than to a general practitioner. The fee for the first visit to an obstetrician-gynecologist was $19 more than to a general practitioner, while the charge for an initial visit to an internist was $15 higher. Fees for second visits, however, were considerably lower.

Fighting not impressive to female monkeys

Hearst Feature Service

Despite the best efforts of assertive males, female monkeys are swingers in more ways than one, a University of California-Berkeley researcher reports.

Research shows the dominant male monkey in a troop doesn't have a monopoly on reproductive partners, said zoologist Thelma Rowell. With the monkeys that Rowell studied, the group leader won most of the battles but few of the affections.

Her observations leave primate scientists wondering why troop leaders are aggressive.

Behaviorists have assumed that fighting in animals was like jousting knights — the victor was to win the "right" to a female. But in the forests of western Kenya, female blue monkeys — so called because of their hair tint — commonly slipped off into the bushes and mated with a number of males, some of whom had just been defeated by the dominant male, Rowell said.

"It doesn't fit with the preconceived notion that one big male goes out and wins all the fights, and all the females say, 'Isn't he marvelous?' " Rowell said. "Females were not terribly impressed with the males winning fights. They were rather going on the anything-in-trousers line."

Primate researchers have suspected that a few dominant males are responsible for siring most of the offspring in their troop, Rowell noted, but a growing body of evidence is challenging that belief.

French furniture, accessories popular

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

With a large department store chain planning a month-long tribute to French products and several major introductions of new French furniture appearing on retail sales floors, home furnishings authorities are predicting the 1983-1984 selling season will go down as "the year of the French" in decorating trends and product direction.

But Howard Kaplan, an architect, designer and importer of French antiques and home furnishings, says the French revolution happened here some time ago.

Kaplan whose "French Country Store" in New York's Greenwich Village is full of French things, says he realized he was "sitting on a gold mine" several years ago.

At the time, he noticed the small store was taking in several million dollars a year and that customers came from every one of the 50 states, including Hawaii.

"We got letters from people all over the country, who would see something of ours in a magazine as a prop, asking where they could buy it," he said.

Then, he offered a mail order catalog for $2.50 in one of the home decorating magazines. "It brought 4,000 requests in 10 days," he says.

Kaplan says just the words "country French" are magic. "People come to me and say they love 'country French.' I ask them what they love about it and they can't come up with a single concrete detail. They don't know what it is, but they love it, anyway."

The graduate of Parsons School of Design says people are responding to a romantic fantasy — their idea of a simpler, more rural and more romantic time of innocence.

Since he saw the American appetite for things French could not be satisfied with the number of actual French antiques that exist, Kaplan recently put together a collection of made-in-America and moderate-priced French-style home furnishings designed to appeal to all lovers of the "country French" decorating style.

The collection, which includes more than 400 items designed by Kaplan as well as some imports from France, was introduced to retailers recently during the New York Gift Market. It will become available to consumers this winter.

Boutiques designed to look like Kaplan's store will open at Marshall Field in Chicago and at Hutzler's in Towson, Md., this November. Other stores are also expected to participate.

The merchandise will be available individually at many stores across the country, he said. Some items will be on sale at Bloomingdale's in New York when the store begins its salute to French products and culture Sept. 13.

What type of products say "France" to Americans?

Kaplan enumerated some of them: straw baskets, dishes with French provincial patterns, table linens and bed linens with small figured prints and cheerful colors, ceramic figurines, ashtrays, and bowls and bottles with words describing their contents in French.

Umbrellas, luggage, walking sticks, stationery, desk accessories, woodenware, pots and pans, placemats and napkins and doilies edged in tatting are a few of the additional products that will bear the "French Country Store" label.

First reaction from retailers is apparently very positive. According to a trade publication, many have beat a path to Kaplan's design studio to see the merchandise.

The positive attitude displayed by the general public and retailers towards the French style is also found in the press. According to Kaplan, many of the nation's magazines and newspapers are planning to feature articles and pictures of the merchandise.

Asked to account for the appeal of the country French style, Kaplan said "other countries come and go in the taste of the public, but France never goes out of style, because it embodies every one's most romantic fantasy of what life could or should be."

Furthermore, he says, many of the furnishings that recall rural France of the 18th and 19th centuries fit in with our 20th-century life. He adds:

"Armoires, which are an important piece of furniture in a country French room, add architectural interest to our bland rooms and they provide for multipurpose storage."

Child-stealing by parents common

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — An estimated 150,000 American children disappear from their homes each year. Of that total, as many as 100,000 children are abducted by estranged parents in custody disputes. According to the American Bar Association Family Law Journal, one in every 10 marriages nationwide ends in an illegal child-snatch.

If children are kidnapped by a stranger or by someone demanding ransom, a parent could turn to the police and other law-enforcement agencies for help. But when a parent takes a child from a spouse, the hands of law-enforcement agencies are tied.

Michael Agopian, author of "Parent Child-Stealing," and director of the Child Stealing Research Center in Los Angeles, says that an estimated 50,000 to 75,000 children a year are stolen from one parent by another parent.

"There are, however, no real statistics," said Agopian. "The FBI just started keeping track of parent-child abductions this year. I've worked with this topic for over four years now, and the figures I've quoted seem to be the most careful estimates."

Linda Otto, founder of Los Angeles-based Find the Children, says that at least 100,000 non-custodial parents take their kids each year.

"Nobody has ever kept track of missing children, only missing guns, boats — missing things," Otto said. "Children, it seems, "aren't very important in this country."

In a study conducted by Agopian that used cases from the L.A. County district attorney's office, about 40 percent of child-snatchings occur two or more years after a divorce. And about half of the abducted children are returned to the custodial parent.

"The dominant pattern of parental child-stealing suggests that the crime is carefully planned and spawned by love to maintain a full-time relationship with the child or to influence re-establishment of the ruptured marital relationship," said Agopian, who is also an assistant professor in administration of justice at Claremont College.

Whether the children are taken for love or not, Otto maintains that children who are snatched by their parents are a very low priority in the judicial system. But although "everybody passes the buck," she says that California has the best procedure for determining who has custody rights. In California, it is mandatory that custody and visitation disputes be presided over by a trained mediator, usually a psychologist, who will counsel the parents and children — individually and together — to determine who the child visits and when.

"The law forces divorcing parents to take control of what happens to the kids, and there is a 62 percent to 72 percent success rate," Otto says. "Success," in this case, means that the other parent doesn't try to steal the children because of an unfair decision.

Agopian says that although California is the model state for child-stealing laws, more agencies and legislation are needed to help the ever-increasing rate of missing children.

"When parental snatches occur, they leave the parent that was left behind in a high-and-dry position, both financially and emotionally," said Janette Demenkoff, location coordinator for Child-Find, a New York-based operation that helps locate missing children. "And if no custodial determination has been handed down by the court, they have to hire a lawyer, go to court, obtain some kind of restraining order and then try and find the restraining parent. This whole thing can be horrendous," she added.

Child-Find is the only child-tracking agency with national and international scope. For a $50 fee, the firm compiles the statistics on the missing child. The parent also must supply pictures of both the missing child and suspected abductor. These pictures are then duplicated 40 times and sent throughout a network of agencies, including the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which registers the information into a main computer for missing persons. The fee will keep that file active for one year.

Since Child-Find Inc. was formed two years ago, it has located about 300 of the hundreds of thousands of children missing each year in the United States.

Beautiful carpeting will retain its appearance much longer with simple cleaning.

Preschoolers may learn from 'scripts'

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Preschoolers may have more advanced communication and intellectual abilities than educators and psychologists have believed.

Lucia French, an assistant professor of education at the University of Rochester, has studied young children's "scripts" — their knowledge about repetitive everyday events such as getting dressed or eating dinner.

"When 3- and 4-year-olds talk about behavior that has become 'scripted,' or act out scripts when playing, their language appears more advanced than usual," French says.

Experts give advice on protecting children

From Wire Reports

Experts on child-stealing say there are several steps parents can take to protect their children:

— Keep a record of the other parent's driver's license number, license plate, Social Security number, passport, property addresses and places of employment.

— Have the child's photo taken.

— Get a passport for your child and keep it in a secure place.

— Keep records of your child's fingerprints, dental charts and footprints.

— Teach your child how to make a collect long-distance telephone call.

— Engrave your telephone number on jewelry or sew it into inconspicuous parts of the child's clothing.

— Teach your child that police officers or school personnel are approachable and will help him or her return home.

If your child is abducted, the experts suggest that you take the following steps:

— Notify the police.

— Send a copy of the police report to the district attorney's office.

— Check with credit card companies for new purchases or information. Check with banks to see if accounts have been closed, if inter-bank transfers have been made or checks passed since the abduction.

— Find out from school officials whether records have been transferred to a new school or forwarded to the other parent. You may be entitled to this under the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act.

— Keep a diary of events following the abduction. As time passes, it will be important to have a clear account of the many elements and actions that relate to the case.

— Make sure you are listed in the telephone directory so that friends or interested persons who might have information can contact you.

— Keep your job. It may be a long and costly process to find your child.

— If you think you need a lawyer, retain a local attorney who is a family-law specialist and one who frequently appears in the local courts. The local bar association can refer you to attorneys who specialize in family law.

Red Plum Sauce tops luscious desserts

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

RED PLUM SAUCE

6 large fresh red plums (about 1½ pounds)
1 cup sugar
1 cup dry red wine
¼ cup water
2 tablespoons cornstarch
Pit plums and slice fairly thin.

In a medium saucepan, stir together plums, sugar and wine. Over medium heat, stirring until sugar dissolves, bring to a boil; simmer until plums are soft — about 15 minutes.

Gradually stir water into cornstarch, keeping smooth; stir into plum mixture. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until clear, bubbling and thickened. Chill.

Makes about 3½ cups.

Serve as a dessert sauce over steamed custard, rice pudding, bread pudding or a compote of nectarines and blueberries; over frozen white chocolate mousse or peach upside-down cake; or use as a topping for butter-type sponge cake a la mode.

Enmental: Country only minutes from bustling Bern

CNS Photo

Healthy children and happy cows are two of the finest products of Enmental, near the Swiss capital of Bern.

By KAY JARVIS-PROKOP
Copley News Service

BERN, Switzerland — Two glossy brown cows came galumphing across the wild flower-splashed green pasture, big brass neck bells jangling, and halted at the hand-hewn wooden fence to observe the tourists with benign interest.

We were on a stroll through the countryside of the Emmental, where the finest Swiss cheese is produced and which is, amazingly, only a 20-minute drive from Switzerland's capital, Bern, a bustling city of 145,000.

Cheesemaker Peter Beutler had just given us an early morning capsule demonstration of what it takes to make the golden, nut-flavored cheese (milk only from happy cows who have eaten spring grass, not hay, for one thing).

NOW WE WERE alternately walking along the quiet country roads and riding on an open wagon drawn by two horses as glossy and good-tempered as the cows.

Lest this become a treatise on happy animals, there is a parallel to be drawn. The people of Switzerland like, no, thrive, on an environment which is dazzlingly clean, ultimately comfortable and in order at all times. And since they insist upon this sense of the rightness of things, it carries over to the animals they keep, whether as workers or as pets.

We passed dairy farms along narrow roads, learning that no bureaucrat would dare ask one of the Emmental dairymen for easement to build a superhighway connecting Bern and Lucerne. There is none of this eminent domain nonsense in Switzerland.

We noticed barns and houses were attached by enormous, sloping roofs. "Well, of course," said our guide.

"IT GETS VERY cold here in the winter. This way, the farmer can pass from the family quarters to the cows' quarters to give a good morning to Trudi, Heidi and Frieda. After all, they're considered part of the family and they give some of the finest milk in the world for cheese."

In June the Emmental country was not cold, but warm with the scent of new-mown grass. Flowers bloom on every doorstep and in window boxes; children paddle in crystal-clear streams flanked with watercress and there is always the sound of brass cowbells. Its grassy slopes beg for a picnic of dark bread, cheese and wine.

Gasthof Ferien und Kulturzentrum just outside the village of Zaziwil rambles over a gentle hill and presents a view of farms and valleys below. Here, the Paul Mosimann family has spent decades finding, transporting and renovating centuries-old manor houses. Now floors gleam with tile, rooms are well furnished and boast bright new baths, and the Mosimanns are noted for their fine cuisine and fine wine cellar. At this time the prices in a country known for high ones are unbelieveably low — $30 per person per day including three meals; $15 with breakfast only.

As we sat sipping wine at one of the tables set in the garden and waiting for a luncheon which would include a delicate butter lettuce salad gilded with mustard cream dressing, a veal chop surrounded by fresh garden vegetables and lavished with a pure cream and mushroom sauce, we knew why the Emmental has gone unchanged for centuries. Someone knew enough to leave perfection alone.

WHILE THE PEOPLE of Bern also love the nearby Emmental, they have a delightfully chauvinistic view of their own city. Yes, it is only the fourth-largest city in Switzerland and not noted for its banks a la Zurich or the ski slopes of St. Moritz.

"Our pace is a bit slower, even our accent is a bit slower than that in the rest of Switzerland," said a friend, "but we are justly proud of our museums, our music, the beauty of our city."

He pointed out that Bern's rail service (the depot is within a block or two of excellent hotels) can take any visitor to the Alps, the lake district, the Black Forest or to northern Italy on day excursions.

Trains depart hourly from the Zurich airport for Bern, meaning, he said innocently, "No one really has to be bothered going into Zurich." There is also a small airport bordered by green fields where Crossair, using 18-passenger Fairchild turboprop planes, operates regionally (the flight over the Matterhorn is breathtaking).

IF ONE REALLY must have something international to give the city prestige, Bern is where the world postal rates are set, and it is home to more than 130 embassies.

Much more fun to contemplate are the gracefully arched covered arcades filled with glossy shops offering delectable chocolate concoctions, French pastries and breads, precision watches, Bally shoes, haute couture and art.

The center square is filled with flower and produce vendors, sidewalk cafes and tree-shaded benches. It is a city of comfort and tranquillity, bounded on three sides by the Aare river, still somewhat medieval with its heraldic symbol of the bear.

The bears of Bern are found in everything from chocolate and teddy to thirteen momma, papa and baby versions in a special enclosure. With their penchant for record-keeping, the Bernese say funds for bear food have been chronicled since 1380.

LASTING IMPRESSIONS OF this sparkling city are of flowers, shopping streets filled with people and two old gentlemen sitting under the shade trees in the central square involved in a seemingly never-ending game of chess.

It's a nice way to pass the time, and Bern is a wonderful place in which to do it.

French say special oak wine barrels make cognac

By NEIL MORGAN
Copley News Service

COGNAC, France — The Charente River rises in the uplands of west-central France, where Limousin oak trees are felled so that coopers may make them into wine barrels. Limousin oak is revered by wine-makers around the world. It is unmatched in its capacity to remove harshness from wine and impart a pleasant woodsiness of flavor.

The river meanders westward toward the Bay of Biscay, passing through the department that takes its name from the river. It becomes a wide but gentle stream, its low banks lined with trees and fishermen. Vacationers take to the Charente for barge cruises.

The most remarkable site along the Charente is a company town that does not give the appearance of having much time for tourists. The town of Cognac, with slightly more than 20,000 people, lies in southwestern France, far enough north of Bordeaux that it escapes many wine tours. But it has given its name to brandy distilled in and around Cognac and drunk in most parts of the world.

THE RIVER TWISTS and turns through Cognac, past cooperages where strong men with life spans as short as those of miners take weathered staves of Limousin oak and, using the elemental forces of water and fire, hammer and beat and smooth them into casks.

In this modest town, enough cognac to fill a billion bottles is aging. Here are the distilleries and warehouses for the Big Four, who market almost 90 percent of cognac: Hennessy, Courvoisier, Martell and Remy Martin. All offer visitor tours. Hennessy provides a unique cooperage museum and a small theater where the romance of cognac is enshrined on film with the narration of Peter Ustinov.

It is one of the ingratiating traits of the French that they believe devoutly in the uniqueness of certain geographic regions that produce such staples as wine and cheese. These beliefs have been enacted carefully into law. No champagne may bear the name unless it is made in Champagne; no brandy is Cognac unless it comes from here.

Many visitors find their way from Paris to Reims and Epernay and the heartland of Champagne. Far fewer seek out Cognac, which is more remote from tourist trails, but full of interest and simple charm.

VILLAGES HUNKER AMONG the vineyards that surround the town. Several thousand farmers grow grapes for cognac, and there are more than 300 independent distillers. Most of their output finds its way at some stage into the barrels of the Big Four.

These smaller distilleries are inconspicuous, but each has its shiny copper hardware, varnished with egg yolk: pot-stills, onion-domed vats and graceful swan's necks that lead into the condensers, from which the distillate drips as eau-de-vie, the basis of cognac. It takes about nine liters of this somewhat ordinary wine to produce one liter of 140-proof cognac. (It is reduced in strength as it is blended for final bottling.)

In the town of Cognac, a gray mold colors exterior walls of most buildings. It is the Cognac badge of grace. From storehouses across the town (Hennessy alone maintains 138 warehouses), about 3 percent of the stored cognac evaporates each year through pores of the oak barrels. The people of Cognac call it "the angels' share." But the angel is a humble black mushroom that feeds on the fumes of alcohol that hang over Cognac, and colors it gray.

"The mushroom gives us away," says Yann Fillioux, chief taster at Hennessy. "In Cognac, no one can hide."

THE COOPERAGE MUSEUM at Hennessy, opened recently, is a collection made by Jean Taransaud of primitive tools used in the craft of barrel-making in the Cognac region over three centuries.

This summer, with the dollar strong and franc weak, cooperage firms around Cognac, whose production is normally used mostly within the region, are busy with orders from California winemakers.

At the Taransaud cooperage, about 100 men are working with traditional tools to make barrels up to 12 feet and more in height. It remains totally a handmade process.

Staves of a silvery glow, exposed to sun and rain in lumberyard stacks for five years, are molded, using neither nails nor glue, into barrels. Typically, 30 staves are assembled, with an iron hoop bracing one end. They are moved, loosely cone-shaped, over a brazier of red coals. The outside of the staves is flogged with water as heat builds up inside.

ROPE LOOPS BRING the staves together, and more iron hoops are hammered on to give the barrel its shape. Ends of each barrel are made of short planks, pegged together, made watertight by reed stripping.

The barrel moves on to the steam room, where boiling water is introduced into the barrel and the bung driven into place. A burly cooper rolls and rocks the barrel. If water escapes, he drives a small oak wedge into place.

About 800 of these coopers ply their trade today in France, much as they have for centuries, and more than half of them are in the region of Cognac.

For those who intend to make more than a day trip to Cognac, modest comforts are available.

Airlines look at video games for passengers

By The Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Picture yourself at the airport check-in counter, ticket in hand.

Airline clerk: Good morning. Dallas, eh? Smoking or non-smoking? Fine. Oops! I almost forgot to ask whether you wanted the video or non-video game seating section. I don't mind saying we have a great new version of Donkey Kong. Look, why don't you just upgrade to first class. That way you'll be able to use the video games free and get a fully programmable computer as well. ...

Don't laugh. If Linda Trotter, marketing director for Altus Corporation, a California-based electronics firm, has her way, two or three major American airline companies will begin offering just such service by the beginning of next year.

In fact, a Canadian airline, Canadian Pacific Air, has just completed the first inflight testing of such a system and is poised to make a "go, no-go" decision any minute. According to CP spokesman Peter Golding, "overall passenger response was positive."

Trotter is even more enthusiastic about the CP results: "It was very successful."

The prospect of having to sit near someone engrossed in "Snoopy Tennis" or a solo game of electronic blackjack may be unnerving to some, but to the troubled airline industry, if it means more dollars, stand back.

"You know the airline business these days," says Golding. "It's becoming increasingly competitive ... (and) this looks to be a source of revenue for the airlines."

Actually, those who have visions of being surrounded by flashing lights and electronic whines and growls while trying to doze the hours away between, say, San Francisco and Chicago have the wrong picture, according to Trotter and Golding.

Confidence adds up to good sales

Joan Buzard, a salesperson, has a sense of what makes an office 'tick.'

Salesperson Joan Buzard, of Midland's Monroe Systems for Business, is not a "born salesman" type. Being in office equipment sales and having to prove herself wasn't easy for her to do at first.

She had a marketing degree from Texas Tech, enthusiasm and ambition — but no previous sales experience.

Ms. Buzard got over an initial timidness, however, and became a confident, productive salesperson by learning to dissect an office — and knowing the equipment, how to use it, and how to train its users.

While on a sales call, she tries to make herself inconspicuous for a brief time, chat with the people and quickly scan the overall flow of activity within the office. She notes how the business machines are being used, by how many people, and for what purpose.

She combines these observations with her knowledge of Monroe's line of office equipment, including calculators, accounting machines and copiers, and comes up with — she hopes — a sale.

"YOU HAVE TO talk to (clients) and know enough about your product so you can fit it in with their needs. If it meets their needs, that's great."

During a calculator delivery at Texaco, two accounting-machine procedure updates with clients, a copier demonstration, and some other calls, Ms. Buzard seemed to make friends easily and display confidence. She sells.

She overcomes the stigma of being 'just another salesperson' beating on a business' door by having faith in herself and trusting the products, she said. "We have quality equipment at Monroe."

Her job changes every day and usually differs from hour to hour, as she calls on a wide variety of potential clients. Like any sales job, it is a people business.

"Every office is different, and is run differently," Ms. Buzard said. "You have to be flexible and adjust to the way they are; the people factor. Some (managers) are willing and more than happy to talk. Some are obviously very busy — although many of them call back when they have more time.

"YOU TRY TO talk fast and detail the facts to someone in a hurry," she said. "I can pick out what they need by eye — checking what kinds of calculators or copiers they use now."

Monroe, a Litton company based in Morris Plains, New Jersey, used to be known as Monroe — The Calculator Company. With 70 years in that field, it's hard for the company to shake that moniker.

It's the new products Buzard must work hardest to sell. The new machines are unfamiliar to businessmen and perhaps seem like carbon-copies of what someone else has shown them.

"Some people, you can tell them you have a brand new this or that and they already know what you're talking about and whether they need it. You just always have to be positive," she said, "and say something funny to lighten the mood of someone who's having a bad day."

She works closely with office manager Don Klemcke and service manager Leon Naegele of Midland's Monroe Systems for Business, and all of them make sure customer satisfaction and serviceability of equipment are maintained.

OF SELLING, MS. Buzard stresses the aspect of unending variety, a new experience making each call.

She must compete with others selling similar equipment in Midland by presenting Monroe as having an edge in quality and in support available to clients after-the-sale.

She must still ask for the sale, after an intelligent conversation reaches its end. A businessman may tell her no today, but: "One day they'll say yes, and that's what you're waiting for."

The fact that her customers want to be well-informed and make wise purchasing decisions has not escaped Ms. Buzard.

Ms. Buzard works on a salary plus commission basis. An extra incentive is the fact that the number of machines sold by each salesperson is tallied on a big scoreboard right by the sales desks.

SHE IS NOT only a saleswoman, she is also a teacher of sorts. A big part of her job is education: to let customers know about changes taking place as Monroe updates its equipment.

For example, Monroe's accounting machine - a hybrid between an adding machine, typewriter and computer — was recently updated with a micro-cassette program which allows the operator to fill out paychecks and make payments from company bank accounts.

The machine has been useful in retail sales applications, such as for invoicing, accounts receivables and end-of-month ledgers.

Mary Antonelli, who operates the accounting system at Career Girl, credits Ms. Buzard with teaching her the machine. Ms. Buzard said, "She's a good student."

"I was afraid of it. But it was one of the simplest machines I've ever learned, honestly," said Ms. Antonelli.

Later in her workday, Ms. Buzard is praised by other customers — including Peggy Anderson of Bill Williams Tire, who said "We have had the machine one month, and we still have to ask questions. Joan does things for us when we make errors — she's a good salesperson and a good demonstrator."

Nation's builders start fewer homes on speculation

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

The worst housing recession since World War II was disillusioning for George Matters, president of Houston-based U.S. Home Corp., the nation's largest home builder.

With record interest rates during the past three years, many consumers could not afford to buy homes. Builders, particularly those like U.S. Home with large inventories of homes built on speculation, faced enormous interest costs of their own.

As a result, U.S. Home, which before the recession built 85 percent to 90 percent of its homes on speculation without a buyer in hand, today only builds about 50 percent on speculation. "We will probably never return to being a completely speculative builder as we were before," Matters says.

The decline in speculation is only one of several marks the recession left on residential and non-residential builders alike. They also report a consolidation of companies, smaller homes and intensive cost-cutting. In addition, as the cost of building materials continues to rise, the quality and amount of "frills" found in a house decline.

"Over the years ... the swings of the pendulum have not been that extreme," Matters says. "We now realize that the pendulum can swing more strongly than we thought it could or would, or than we thought the federal government would let it."

Now that the interest-rate pendulum was swung down again, home builders, especially those that produce low-priced housing for first-time buyers, are enjoying the beginnings of a healthy recovery so far this year.

U.S. Home's business is up sharply from last year. In fact, the company, which had laid off one-third of its 3,300 employees, has begun rehiring, Matters said.

But if interest rates continue the recent increase that already has priced some home buyers out of the market, the mounting recovery could be hammered out of existence.

"As interest rates go, so goes the the optimism," says Bob Garland, Los Angeles-based national director of real estate for Touche Ross & Co., a Big Eight accounting firm. "I think the builders are getting real nervous right now."

Many builders and industry analysts add that a go-go buying fever like that of the late 1970s is unlikely to return again, because inflation-adjusted mortgage rates are unlikely to be negative again, as they were during parts of the late 1970s.

Building permits up compared with 1982

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

The number of building permits and their dollar valuation in August surpassed the figures for the same month a year ago, with 242 permits totaling $13,535,371 being issued by the city of Midland.

On a year-to-date basis, the amount of building activity has improved in the commercial sector, with 157 permits issued so far this year versus 149 at the same point a year ago. The city issued 156 through August 1981.

Residential building activity continues to be slower as builders respond cautiously to the abundance of new homes available in Midland. Through August, the city had granted 583 permits for new residential construction compared to 1,077 at the same time last year and 1,030 in 1981.

Residential construction activity may be gathering steam for the last half of 1983, however. New housing permits hovered around 72 for three months in a row, then jumped to 110 in August, which is nearly half of all permits issued that month.

The type of home being built in Midland has changed significantly from the higher-priced, large homes of a year ago. This August, builders received 110 permits for new residences — mostly townhomes or small "starter" homes — worth a total of $6.6 million. In the same month a year ago, the total valuation was only $3.4 million for 44 new residences.

Ramcon and Deter Construction continue to lead the pace. Each firm has a major building project underway on Pueblo, Washita and Hopi Court in 349 Ranch Estates, a new subdivision east of North Big Spring Street.

Ramcon has more than 20 homes under construction there; Deter has about 30. These modest-sized homes (1,100 to 1,250 square feet) range in construction valuation from $30,000 to $43,000.

Kennetex plans 60 homes on zero lot lines in the area bounded by Tampico and Monterey; some of them were permitted in August. Kennetex is also the builder for Delmar Villas, condominiums at 509 Delmar off Illinois Street behind K-Mart. That project was valued at $922,000.

The largest single commercial permits went to HBF Construction for a 30-unit apartment complex and central facilities building which are part of the Trinity Towers/Manor Park retirement village project located on Loop 250 South at Sinclair Street. The construction was valued at $2.35 million.

The corporation is also adding on to the Hillander School for $322,000.

Other significant commercial projects included two new automated banking facilities for First City National Bank, valued at $206,000. They will be located at 901-A Andrews Highway and Midland Park Mall.

The city also issued a permit for a new Burger King restaurant at 4030 W. Wall valued at $200,000.

Tusha Builders received a permit for a $245,000 Avis car rental office and shop at Midland Regional Airport.

Contractors received 89 permits for commercial and residential alterations worth $3.5 million. Many of these permits were for installation of swimming pools.

Construction begun at Lone Star Plaza

Construction has begun on Lone Star Plaza, a new retail shopping center located on the southwest corner of Illinois and Midland Drive.

Groundbreaking ceremonies were held recently by Casbeer & Associates of Midland for the 29,000 square foot neighborhood center.

Lone Star will feature a two-tone gray brick exterior with kelly green canvas awnings. Parking will be available for 138 cars.

Different bay depths with different frontage measurements will be available to meet retailers' needs. A restaurant is planned for the center.

Several tenants have already committed themselves to the $3 million project, said Gary Kerr, leasing agent. Lone Star Plaza is one of seven retail shopping centers under construction around Texas by Casbeer & Associates, which developed Mesa Verde Shopping Center. Other projects are in Austin, Fort Worth, Arlington and Lubbock.

Area Builders is the general contractor for the project and completion is scheduled for March 1984. Interim financing was provided by State Savings and Loan Association of Lubbock. Ron Beard, Austin, is the architect. Robert McLelland is the project manager.

Ford planning to get tougher in ads

From Wire Reports

Ford Motor Co., known for cars and trucks that climb log- and boulder-strewn hills, and for their parachuting ability, has been showing its new advertising and marketing plans to dealers across the country.

Recently the western division dealers got a peek in Los Angeles and found that this model year the company may top its spectacular "tossing-a-truck-from-an-airplane" trick.

This time around, a Ranger pickup truck is shown driving full-speed off a cliff, floating free for a while and landing safely with that trusty old Ford parachute. In another, just to show that the climb up the hill over boulders was not faked, the Ranger is shown making the same run, only this time carrying a Chevrolet pickup. Of course there are some of the more mundane commercials ahead, too, such as a pickup pulling a cable car up some of those dippy San Francisco streets.

What does all this have to do with the average pickup buyer? "It shows the trucks are tough," says Greg McClure, director of advertising for Ford. But no car or truck is tough enough to survive when one of these stunts misses, and Ford does not always get them right the first time. Last year such gimmicks as throwing a truck out of a plane while skydivers followed it down pointing out the features cost the company 12 trucks. This year, the cliff stunt only cost it one extra Ranger.

Most of the rest of Ford's estimated 30 to 40 commercials for the new model year are fairly standard auto advertising fare, featuring performance and looks, including much boasting of the Escort, "The World's Best-Selling Car." There is even a smile here and there in the J. Walter Thompson-created campaign, particularly in the billboards.

McClure says that former champion race-car driver Jackie Stewart will continue to represent the company in performance and technical advertising but that actor Telly Savalas will not be used this year.

This year's campaign is a continuation of the "Have you driven a Ford lately?" theme with the added line "America's best-built cars."

The first dozen Alan Alda commercials for Atari computers have been shot, and the company is expecting to launch the campaign at the end of this month or the beginning of October.

Accountants ready to help

Midland-Odessa area accountants are ready to tell small businessmen how to make a lot of money — for free.

Many of the 150 members of the Permian Basin Chapter of the National Association of Accountants have volunteered to advise small business on financial matters. Their aim is to help small businesses and those who want to be in business to plan for success.

The basic goal of the advisory program is to tell the proprietors of small business about their financial needs and to help them get started in the right direction.

Advice is offered on budgeting, advertising, marketing, credit, account collection, record keeping and all areas of accounting.

The experts' advice is free and confidential.

Those interested in learning more about the program should phone Ron Lentz at 684-8031. He will send interested persons a brochure, or discuss their interest on the phone.

Betting on takeovers has risks

By ARELO SEDERBERG
Hearst Feature Service

Here's a game you can play with your money in this continuing era of corporate takeovers. But be advised to take a hint from its very name — risk arbitrage.

"Risk" means you can lose, yet the gains for the winners are some 30 percent to 40 percent on an annualized basis, says Joel Pollock, who handles risk arbitrage in the Los Angeles office of Oppenheimer & Co. Pollock claims an 80 percent success rate. Nevertheless, risk arbitage is for the sophisticated investor. Pollock doesn't really want to talk with you unless you have $100,000 to put in the pot.

What is risk arbitrage? Its most outstanding example is when one company pulls a surprise raid on another, offering a price sharply above the market for the sought-after company. The raider may offer $75 a share for a raidee whose stock sells at $60. Of course, the stock of the raided company rises on the market, but not to the $75 offer. It may rise to $70. So there is a $5 arbitrage. It is based on the likeliness or unlikeliness that the deal with go through. If it does go through, of course, shareholders will receive the full $75.

What could stop a deal? Many factors. The raided company could successful fight off the raider. Another company could come in as a White Knight. The Justice Department could block matters. Or the companies might change their minds, and divorce each other before marriage.

It's the job of experts like Pollock to determine whether or not the deal will go through. Sometimes that's a gut feeling, but it often develops from experience and knowledge. Also in a merger deal, there often are many decisions to be made.

Oppenheimer's pamphlet on risk arbitrage traces the famous Seagrams-Conoco-DuPont-Mobil caper — six weeks of high level fireworks that made big headlines in 1981.

June 25: Seagram begins a hostile $73-per-share offer for 41 percent of Conoco (then trading at $62).

July 6: Conoco and DuPont agree to a combination in which DuPont will pay $87.50 each for 40 percent of Conoco and will offer 1.6 shares of DuPont for each remaining Conoco share.

July 13: Seagram raises its offer to $85 cash for 51 percent of Conoco.

July 15: DuPont raises its terms to $95 per share in cash for 45 percent of Conoco, and to 1.7 shares of DuPont for remaining shares.

July 17: Mobil enters the picture with a $90-per-share cash tender offer for 50 percent of Conoco, to be followed by merger involving the exchange of $90 per share in value of Mobil preferred stock or debentures.

July 23: Seagram again sweetens its offer, this time to $92 a share.

July 27: Mobil raises its cash offer to $105 per share and drops the value of the proposed securities to $85.

Aug. 1: Seagram begins purchasing Conoco shares at $92.

Aug. 3: Mobil ups its cash offer to $115, leaving the stock or debenture value at $85.

Aug. 4: Mobil raises cash offer to $120; DuPont raises its cash offer to $98.

Aug. 5: DuPont begins purchasing shares at $98.

Aug. 7: Seagrams $92 offer expires, with Seagrams purchasing about 20 percent of Conoco.

Aug. 18: DuPont shareholders approve the merger with Conoco, clearing the way for the exchange of 1.7 DuPont shares for each Conoco share not acquired in the $98-per-share offer. DuPont shares close at $43.875, so that the exchange has a market value of $74.59 per share for the 55 percent of Conoco acquired in the second and final step of the merger.

High-tech stock portfolio 'insurance' available

By JOHN ECKHOUSE
Hearst Feature Service

Investors who favor high-technology stocks, which tend to be extremely volatile, now have a way to purchase "insurance" for their portfolios. Instead of buying and selling individual stocks in anticipation of an industry upswing or downswing, investors can protect their equity holdings by buying options on a new 30-stock Computer Technology Index created recently by the American Stock Exchange.

Paul Stevens, executive vice president of operations for the American Stock Exchange, said use of the computer technology index "absolutely" has met the exchange's expectations since it premiered Aug. 26. First-day volume was 7,479 contracts, and the average for the first four days was 6,200 contracts. Each contract represents 100 "shares" of the index. The American Stock Exchange will introduce an option on an oil and gas industry index beginning Friday.

Basically, an investor profits if he can predict the future value of the 30 stocks that comprise the computer stock index. For example, you anticipate a drop in prices of your own computer stocks, but are not sure enough to sell your holdings. As an alternative, you can purchase a computer index put option that gives you the right to sell the option in the future at its current price.

You might pay $250 for the option with a value of 100 and a late September expiration date. If the market falls, your portfolio will fall in value, too, but you likely will profit from the option.

If the index falls from 100 to 90, for example, the put option gives you the right to sell the index at the value of 100. That provides a profit (excluding brokerage commissions) of $750 ($1,000 minus the $250 cost of the option) and presumably compensates for the reduced value of your own stock portfolio.

Investors also can profit from betting correctly on upturns by buying call options.

Some observers complain that the computer index is dominated by just one of the 30 companies included. Because of the way the index is calculated, IBM Corp. accounts for about 54 percent of its value.

The computer index is market-value weighted, meaning each stock's impact on the overall index is determined by its stock price multiplied by the number of shares outstanding.

Although Ted Costello, a Dean Witter Reynolds vice president who specializes in following high-tech companies, eschews options, he believes the new index will prove popular because of investors' proven interest in computer stocks.

Kent Mastores, president of the San Francisco Options Society, agreed with Costello.

"I wouldn't be a bit surprised to see this catch on because anything high-tech is sexy to investors and it is attractive to a speculator."

Downtown building stalled by suit

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

Construction of the "InterNorth Building" on the northwest corner of Wall and Pecos has been stalled by a rash of unpaid debts, mechanics' liens, threat of a foreclosure sale, and a $2 million civil suit.

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the 11-story office building took place in February, but today, the lot is being used as an unpaved parking lot.

A foreclosure auction was set for Sept. 6 until Midland District Judge Pat Baskin issued a temporary injunction preventing it. A final hearing on the matter will be held Dec. 6.

Officials at Omaha-based InterNorth, meanwhile, have "broken" their lease at the proposed building and are scouting around for a new site, said an Internorth spokesman. The oil and gas company still intends to consolidate operations for its 140 Midland employees of Northern Natural Gas, Nortex Gas and Oil and Northern Liquid Fuels Co. at one site, the spokesman said last week.

He said the company had not decided whether it would build a single-tenant office building or lease space from someone else.

The original developer, Sussex Group, Dallas, and its Wall and Pecos Joint Venture, is in default of a $900,000 loan from the First National Bank and Trust Company, Oklahoma City, documents filed in Midland District Court say.

In addition, Wall and Pecos is being sued for non-payment by the original land owner, Gihls Properties Inc.; and by the architect and construction company which had agreed to build the building.

Both the architectural firm, Shepherd & Boyd, Dallas, and the construction company, Kajima International, Fort Lee, New Jersey, have filed mechanics' liens against the property. They claim Wall and Pecos and its managing venture partner, Patrick J. Haynes, owe them more than $1.3 million in professional fees.

It all began last August, when Gihls Properties Inc, a Florida-based development company with several properties in Midland, sold the land to Wall and Pecos Partners and Haynes.

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the structure were originally scheduled Oct. 15, 1982, shortly after a press conference in Midland where Sussex Group representatives first announced the project.

The lot remained vacant for several more months. Finally, late in January, the developer announced groundbreaking would occur in February, ending speculation the project had been cancelled due to an over-supply of office space in Midland.

At that time, Sussex said it had signed an agreement with Internorth. The energy company's Midland employees, now scattered in several office buildings in the downtown area, were to occupy about half of the new building, estimated to cost $14 million.

When Sussex unveiled plans for the project in October, it had shown an artist's rendering for a 13-story building with a six-story parking garage. In January the developer said it had scaled down to 11 stories.

Midland's Department of Permits and Inspections issued a building permit to Kajima in April for $7.2 million.

The First National Bank and Trust Company of Oklahoma City was the original lender on the deal, with Gihls holding a second lien deed of trust on the property also.

Now, the two parties are arguing over which can foreclose first on the property. If the bank forecloses, Gihls wonders if it will receive the money it is due from the transaction, according to Gihls president Henry Blanton.

In August, Gihls Properties asked for a temporary restraining order to prevent First National Bank and Trust Oklahoma City from foreclosing, fearing if such a sale were held, FNB&T would receive its money, as holder of the first deed of trust, and that Gihls would not receive its money.

Gihls is also suing FNB&T, Wall and Pecos and Haynes, seeking $2 million in damages. In its petition to the court, Gihls claims that by March 1983, its solvency and fiscal health "were in immediate danger" if the foreclosure sale were to take place.

Gihls said in its suit that it was in default of more than $5 million in loans with three banks, led by First National Bank of Midland.

Therefore, Gihls informed the Oklahoma City bank it was going to foreclose on the second lien deed of trust. The bank asked Gihls not to foreclose, as it was trying at the time to help Wall/Pecos Joint Venture obtain construction financing necessary to the project. It said it would buy Gihls' second lien deed of trust.

Relying on this promise, Gihls did not foreclose, and then in May, according to the suit, the Oklahoma Bank reneged on its promise.

In June, Blanton, learned that Kajima International, the original contractor, planned to buy the property for $1.4 million from the Oklahoma City bank.

Afraid it would be shut out of the deal and lose money owed under its second lien deed of trust, Gihls filed suit against the bank, Wall and Pecos Joint Venture, and Haynes.

Congress will study unemployment insurance debt

By VIC OSTROWIDSKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — When Congress returns next week, it will take a hard look at the nation's Unemployment Insurance (UI) system, which provides support for the jobless and which is in deep financial trouble.

The heavily-in-debt UI system has been under continued financial pressure in recent years, a victim of very high unemployment levels and recurrent recessions that have added to its deficits. Currently, over half of the state insurance programs are insolvent. Several have required large loans from the federal government, which, in turn, has also needed loans from the general fund to keep the program afloat.

What to do to shore up the system and whether to extend existing benefits due to expire at the end of this month will be discussed before the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Public Assistance on Sept. 13 and the Senate Finance Committee on Sept. 16.

The Congressional Budget Office (CBO) estimates that the states so far have borrowed $13.7 billion from the federal government to keep up the benefit payments and that the debt will climb to nearly $19 billion at the end of fiscal year 1985 when it will begin to decline.

Unemployment insurance is a federal-state program enacted in 1935 as part of the original Social Security act, established to provide a temporary income to jobless workers and to help stabilize the economy by maintaining their purchasing power.

In fiscal 1981, about 8.6 million people received $15.6 billion in compensation. The figure climbed to $21.1 billion in fiscal 1982 when 10.9 million people wound up on the unemployment rolls and the government spent $7.3 billion more on benefits than it collected in taxes.

Current projections are that in fiscal 1983 the UI will pay out $29.1 billion in benefits and run up a $9.6 billion deficit, while in fiscal 1984 it will pay out $26.2 billion and have a $2.7 billion deficit.

Projections for 1985 show UI paying out $24.9 billion in benefits and running a $3.8 billion surplus. The health of the program is expected to improve even better in 1986 when it will shell out $24.6 billion but raise $33.3 billion in taxes, leaving it with an $8.7 billion surplus.

The cost of the program skyrocketed in the mid-1970s when the benefits paid from 1975 through 1978 amounted to more than the total amount paid into the program during its first 32 years of operation.

The growing cost reflected gradual increases in the duration of benefits, in the number of employees covered and in employees' wages, on which benefit levels are based.

Unemployment insurance covers 97 percent of all workers, not counting those who are self-employed. The states have individual, highly complex methods of determining eligibility for benefits and the amounts to be paid.

At present there are three tiers of benefits. Regular benefits are usually available for up to 26 weeks, financed by state payroll taxes on employers.

Since 1970, there has been an "Extended Benefits" program that provides up to 13 weeks of additional assistance to people who have exhausted their regular benefits in states with high unemployment. The extension is funded equally by state and federal payroll taxes.

A third tier of benefits, Federal Supplemenal Compensation (FSC), which begins after benefits from the first two tiers have been exhausted, runs up to 14 weeks and is paid out of federal general revenues. The program is scheduled to expire at the end of September.

The latter two categories of payments are made available to workers only when certain conditions, called "triggers," are met. The present triggers are based on the insured unemployment rate (IUR), which is the rate of unemployment among workers eligible for regular UC benefits.

One of the first bills to be considered when Congress returns will be the Trade Adjustment Assistance (TAA) program which is also scheduled to expire at the end of September. TAA was established to help workers displaced by imports. The Reagan administration is recommending that TAA be allowed to expire but a House bill would continue the program for three more years.

Several bills have been introduced in both houses to extend FSC. A few would allow states to use alternative triggers based on the total unemployment rate (TUR) rather than the IUR.

RIBBON CUTTINGS

The merger of two of West Texas' leading furniture firms was announced last week.

Robert H. McKelvy Sr. and Charles Knorr said the Knorr Furniture stores in Midland and Odessa will become a division of McKelvy's Furniture, which has operated in Lubbock since 1948 and in Amarillo since 1980.

No personnel changes will be made; the staff of all stores will remain in their present positions, the two men said.

"We will realize substantial savings in fine furniture through our four-store buying power and they will be passed on to the customer," McKelvy said.

Each store will continue to feature Drexel Heritage furniture. "Customers will realize savings on top of the line groups and on individual pieces," he said.

The Midland and Odessa Knorr stores will continue to operate under the Knorr name, McKelvy said.

EVENTS

John Akard, a practicing bankruptcy attorney from El Paso, and Kenneth D. Holt, Trustee for the United States Bankruptcy Court, Western District of Texas, will be featured speakers at the Institute of Real Estate Management (IREM) quarterly luncheon, Greentree Country Club, Sept. 15 at 11:30 a.m.

They will provide a legal overview of Chapter 7, 11, and 13 bankruptcies insofar as they pertain to leasing and managing office buildings, retail centers and other income producing properties.

Anyone involved in leasing or management of residential or commercial real estate is welcome to attend. The cost for the luncheon is $11.50.

The Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of CPAs will hear Thomas J. Wageman, president and chief executive officer of the First National Bank of Midland, at its first meeting of the year. Area CPAs are invited to attend Sept. 15 at Ranchland Hills Country Club. Cocktails will be served at 6:30, dinner at 7:30 p.m. For more information, call Freddie McAnear at 683-4227.

Glass Shack offers customer satisfaction

What are the two most important aspects of any business? Most people who are in need of a product or service look for two main things: quality and price. You can't always look at just the price, as lowest pricing often means poor quality. By the same token, the most expensive product or service is not necessarily the best quality. What you are looking for is the perfect blend of quality and price. The Glass Shack, 2400 W. Front St. in Midland, offers you exactly what you are looking for with that perfect blend of quality and price.

The Glass Shack is dedicated to customer satisfaction. They offer outstanding quality without the price tag that usually goes with top quality. All employees at Glass Shack are well-qualified and experienced. They understand your needs, and are very thorough in their job applications and solutions to difficult problems. Terry Loyd, manager of Glass Shack, feels that "...customers keep us on our toes. Even the most devoted customer will shop around to make sure he is getting the best deal. We have to stay one step ahead of the competition." Keeping the customer satisfied by staying one step ahead is what Glass Shack is all about.

Besides offering window glass for homes, Glass Shack also offers installation of mirrors, mirrored walls, store fronts, and specialty applications such as desk tops, shower doors, and sliding glass patio doors. Being a small company, Glass Shack takes more personal interest in each customer, working closer than a larger company would to keep the customer satisfied. Yet, Glass Shack is able to handle the needs of even larger contractors. With this personal interest and the quality of the work at a reasonable price, you should have no question in your mind where to go next time you have a need for any glass application.

People are definitely shopping around more today, because money is simply tighter than it used to be. Next time you have a need for glass, Glass Shack invites you to compare their quality and service with that of others before you buy. You will see what advantages dedication to customer satisfaction has for you. As a service to the weekend handyman, Glass Shack is open on Saturdays. Come by Glass Shack at 2400 W. Front St. in Midland, or call 683-0811. Customer satisfaction through quality and price is our goal.

Pennyrich Shop bring you natural beauty

Competition is the base of free enterprise. Everyone has the right to make and sell a product, within limits, of course. But competition and the free enterprise system can make things very confusing at times for consumers. How do you know which brand to choose? It is impossible for anyone to know everything about any single product on the market. So how do you make your choice? Well, common sense will tell you which brand is the best for you and your family. Sometimes, looking at the ingredients can be a big help. Nutri-Metics cosmetics was the first in the world to create a line of cosmetics made solely of natural organic ingredients.

Nutri-Metics was developed in 1961 by Mulford J. Nobbs, president of Con-Stan Industries, Inc. after he ahd received an invitation to visit Hunza, high in the Himilayan Mountains. There he found a population that appeared to have found the true secret of the Fountain of Youth. Women of 80 had skin that looked as if they were only 30. He learned that the golden apricot played a big part in their lives, both from eating the fruit and then using an oil from the kernel as their only form of skin care. He also found that there had been no crime in Hunza for over 100 years, that people did not know what sickness was, and that the age of 120 years was not at all uncommon. Why, men of Hunza often fathered children at 90 years old!

But the apricot oil was not the only reason for the remarkable preservation of the people of Hunza. They observe six basic rules: sunshine, fresh air, pure water, proper exercise, sufficient sleep, and natural food.

With this in mind, the company became the first in the world to make a line of cosmetics made of natural organic ingredients. In fact, reading from a list of the ingredients used in the Nutri-Metics line, it appears that the cosmatics could be eaten as well as used externally. In addition to the apricot oil, there are honey, almond, mint, oranges, lemons, limes, papaya extract, special herbs, soy bean, and avocado. The Nutri-Metics line is natural, organic, derma-genic, ph balanced, and hypo-allergenic.

Remember in buying your cosmetics that anything put onto the skin is absorbed into the bloodstream. With this in mind, you should realize that any chemical not safe enough to be put in the mouth is not safe enough to be put on the skin. This is one of the beauties of Nutri-Metics.

Nutri-Metics cosmetics are available locally at the Pennyrich Bra & Lingerie Shop, 311 Dodson in Midland. But besides the Nutri-Metics, the Pennyrich also carries, of course, the Pennyrich bra, beautiful lingerie, swimwear, Danskins, and formal wear. In addition, Jezebel strapless bras, halter bras, French-cut bras, and bras for all types of formal wear are available there. Jobst prosthesis and Camp masectomy bras are also available. If you prefer, special appointments made be made after hours for these items. The Pennyrich Bra & Lingerie Shop gives you the personal attention you deserve to serve your individual needs.

Next time your present bottle of make-up runs out, come by the Pennyrich Bra & Lingerie Shop at 311 Dodson in Midland and try Nutri-Metics. Compare the ingredients with your present cosmetice and decide which is really better for you. Then look at the beauty of Nutri-Metics. Even if you can't wear other cosmetics, remember, the Nutri-Metics cosmetics are all natural and organic. Of course, the Pennyrich is still the place to go for your custom-fitted bras and beautiful lingerie and formal wear. Call Jo Smith, owner of the Pennyrich, at 683-1045. Start today out as the first day of your new-found beauty.

Jo Smith, owner of the Pennyrich Bra & Lingerie Shop, offers Midland the world's first natural organic line of cosmetics: Nutri-Metics. Of Course, the Pennyrich Shop still offers the best in custom-fitted bras, in lingerie, and in formal wear. The Pennyrich is located at 311 Dodson in Midland, or call 683-1045.

Ex-Synfuels man cleared

By SARAH McCLENDON
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Victor Schroeder resigned as President of Synthetic Fuels Corporation after charges were aired in congressional hearings about alleged "unethical conduct". However after investigation by the Department of Justice and the Inspector General, both Schroeder and another board member were cleared.

But the Inspector General's report mentioned "especially bad judgment" that gave rise to a perception that personal business interests may have influenced the corporation's policies and decisions.

The private companies which are partners in the huge Great Plains coal gasification project in Beulah, North Dakota, have been seeking greater financial assistance from the federal government. One possibility that has been suggested is conversion of the current Department of Energy loan guarantee into a price guarantee if oil prices remain low.

The General Accounting Office, in a report entitled, "Economics of the Great Plains Coal Gasification Project" states Great Plains does not need extra help and that its forecast of cost-recovery was unduly pessimistic, due to its failure to take into account tax advantages to the parent companies.

RESERVES: According to the Energy Information Administrtion crude oil reserves declined by 5.3 percent in 1982 as compared with 1981. U.S. crude oil reserveds are estimated at 27.9 billion barrels as of Dec. 31, 1982. Natural gas reserves are estimated at 201.5 trillion cubic feet at end of 1982, aboutthe same as in 1981.

"Hydrogen Sulfide in the Drilling Industry," meeting Wednesday to Friday, Sept. 14-16, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., is offered in cooperation with Prentice & Records Enterprises Inc., Lafayette, La. It is designed for rig crews, service personnel, and operators' representatives — anyone who may be in contact with H2S in the oilfield. Instructor: Cody Miller. Fee: $400.

"Oil and Gas Fields in the Permian Basin, Part I" will be held Wednesdays from Sept. 14 to Oct. 26, from 7 to 10 p.m. The topics and instructors will include: Sept. 14, Tectonic setting of Basin and its control on sedimentation, Dr. Jack Elam; Sept. 21, Delaware-Val Verde Basin, Dr. Elam; Sept. 28, Central Basin Platform, Bob Ward, Gulf Oil; Oct. 5, Midland Basin, Dr. S.J. Mazzullo & Louis Mazullo, consulting geologists.

Other topics will include: Back Shelf Facies of the Eastern Shelf, Carbonate Eastern Shelf, and Horseshoe Atoll. Fee for the series: $200.

"Diagenesis of Sandstone: Factors Affecting Porosity and Permeability" is scheduled Tuesday, Sept. 20, 1:30 - 4:30 and 7 - 10 p.m. The understanding of diagenesis in clastic deposits helps any explorationist. Modern sands and the chemistry of elements like silica and carbonate will be covered in lectures. Dr. Earle F. McBride of UT-Austin will instruct. Fee: $120.

May forms fund

DALLAS (SWN) — May Petroleum Inc. announced Thursday the formation of its second 1983 drilling fund, May Drilling Partnership 1983-2, with subscriptions of $10.6 million.

These funds will be committed to drilling prospects assembled by MAY in its Program Exploration Division which operates primarily in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana.

Conoco makes Gulf find

HOUSTON (SWN) — Conoco Inc. said it has discovered "significant accumulations" of high quality crude oil in Green Canyon Block 184 in the Gulf of Mexico, off the Louisiana coast.

Since May 1981, Conoco has drilled five wells in the area. Drilling of a sixth is planned within two months.

The discovery well, Green Canyon 184-1, was drilled in 1,530 feet of water. It was tested at three depth ranges and flowed from 618 barrels of oil per day (b/d) to 1,346 b/d. Conoco reported the crude was light, high quality oil, ranging from about 35 degree API gravity to about 44 degree API gravity.

Natural gas also was produced at a rate of from 479 thousand cubic feet a day (mcf) to 1,700 mcf a day from the three intervals tested.

The largest flows of gas and oil came from a zone about 8,000 feet below sea level and were produced through an 18/64 (eighteen sixty-fourth) inch choke, the company said.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 11,271 feet and testing was completed in August 1981.

Details of the other wells drilled were not released.

E. J. Grivetti, executive vice president for Conoco's North American exploration and production, said the water depths involved in Block 184 range from about 850 feet to almost 2,000 feet and place development plans in the "frontier" category.

"Bringing deepwater discoveries into commercial production requires a detailed study of the economics and engineering," Grivetti said. "We're reviewing several types of platforms and the techniques with which we could produce oil from Green Canyon 184. We are still evaluating the test data from all of the wells and are awaiting results from the sixth well prior to making a final decision to proceed with development."

Total depths of the Conoco wells range from a little more than 10,000 feet to more than 14,000 feet.

Block 184 lies about 170 miles southwest of New Orleans. The block was acquired in lease sale A-62 in September 1980. Conoco and its partners in the block paid the U.S. government $7,806,000 for the lease.

Conoco is operator for a group of companies consisting of Conoco, Cities Service Oil and Gas Corporation (a wholly owned subsidiary of Occidental Petroleum Corporation) and Getty Oil. Each holds a one-third interest in the block. The group, individually or in various combinations, also has interests in four adjacent blocks, and has a total of 15 blocks in the general area.

EOR forum expects good attendance

More than 200 people from all over the Permian Basin are expected in Odessa Monday for the First Annual "Permian Basin Enhanced Oil Recovery Forum." Sponsored by the Permian Basin Chapter of the Associated Builders and Contractors, the Forum will be held at the Odessa Petroleum Club beginning at 6 p.m.
