MILK FLOWS ON STREETS IN DAIRY PRICE WAR

Japs Mass Largest Army To Break Determined Hold Of Chinese On Woosung

MAJOR BATTLE OF WAR LOOMS AS CERTAINTY

Nippon Forces Will Employ Armaments of Big-Scale Warfare in Attack

AMERICAN ATTACKED

Ultimatum Will Be Served On Chinese to Abandon Chapei-Woosung Area

SHANGHAI, Feb. 15. (Monday) (AP)—American and British members of the international settlement volunteer corps patrolling the northern boundaries of the settlement received a baptism of fire today when a number of Japanese shells fell within their positions.

(By The Associated Press)

Japanese forces at Shanghai grew to great numbers Monday as every development in the battle zone pointed toward an imminent major engagement involving perhaps 50,000 troops and instruments of big-scale modern warfare.

The League of Nations was told by its Shanghai commission that a state of war already existed there. It called a private meeting of its council for today to consider China's appeal for an extraordinary session of the league's full assembly under article XV of the covenant.

Failure of China to obtain redress under article XV and a formal acknowledgement of a state of war would open the way to application of article XVI, with its provisions for an economic boycott and military sanctions against an aggressor nation.

Inhabitants of Nantao, densely populated Chinese quarter of Shanghai, feared it might suffer the fate of Chapei, the other native section which was laid waste by bombs, shells and fires.

Ten thousand more Japanese soldiers were said by Japanese officials to be on the way up the Whangpoo river to join at least 25,000 Nipponese fighting men already landed.

All efforts by neutral negotiators to find some loophole whereby the terrors of a far-flung battle might be averted, met with failure, but were continued throughout the night and on into Monday despite the hopeless outlook.

To Issue Ultimatum

Tokyo advices said the Japanese military commander, Lieut. Gen. Kenkichi Uyeda, was prepared to serve an ultimatum on the Chinese that they must withdraw from the Chapei-Woonsung battle line, or suffer the consequences of a Japanese attack. The general who arrived at Shanghai with thousands of soldiers over the week-end, said he had not yet served such an ultimatum.

The Kuomintang called on the military council of China to give no ground to the Japanese. This was backed up by a similar appeal from Wang Ching-Wei, the youthful president of the Nationalist government executive department.

State of War Exists

The League of Nations was told by its Shanghai commission that a "state of war exists at Shanghai."

Japanese sources said an independent state in Manchuria was being formed by various Chinese leaders who were expected to meet soon in Mukden.

Two Japanese destroyers went to Swatow Sunday, their presence drawing immediate protest from the mayor of the city who charged they alarmed the populace.

Reports from Shanghai said Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek, outstanding military leader of China, was in Nanking on his way to Shanghai to direct the defense of the city.

The state department at Washington awaited a complete report on the attack made by Japanese soldiers on a United States vice consul and a Chinese woman who was said to be a citizen of this country. They were attempting to rescue the woman's child from a danger zone.

CHINESE GOVERNMENT URGES "NO YIELDING"

HONAN FU (TEMPORARY capital of China), (Monday), Feb. 15. (AP)—The Kuomintang, nationalist party of China today urged "no grounds to be yielded to the Japanese."

The central committee of the party sent an urgent telegram to the executive Yuan and the military council declaring the Japanese proposal to demilitarize the "principal

Chiang Kai-Shek, China's 'Man Of The Hour,' Was Trained In Japanese Army

GENERAL CHIANG KAI-SHEK

Military Leader Goes To Shanghai To Direct Battle

(By The Associated Press)

Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek, the outstanding military figure of China, has arrived in Nanking and indicated he would hasten to Shanghai to take charge of the defensive warfare.

The ironies of war again would be exampled should the famous general lead his countrymen in a major battle against Japan, for he received his early military training in the Japanese military academy at Tokyo.

Becomes Man of the Hour

Chiang Kai-Shek, who may yet become the Bismarck of a unified China, is again the man of the hour in his country. His position now is parallel to that he occupied just four years ago. At that time he was recalled as generalissimo of the nationalist armies a few months after he had gone to Japan following a quarrel with the Russian communists who had helped him to win the 1926 civil war.

Today he is coming back from a six weeks' retirement forced on him by the temporary ascendancy of Eugene Chen, Sun Fo and other leaders of the Cantonese faction of the kuomintang, the nationalist political organization.

Chiang, 43 years old, is an oriental inbued with second-hand Occidental ideas. His wife graduated from Wellesley and his brother-in-law, T. V. Soong, ex-finance minister, went to Harvard.

School at Tokyo

But Chiang studied the Chinese classics by way of preparation for a military career under the old empire. He won a four-year scholarship at Tokyo military academy and in Japan met Sun Yat Sen, who converted him to the revolutionary cause.

Except for a few months in Moscow, whither Sun sent him to study Soviet military methods, Chiang has never been away from the Orient.

He has led a dozen major campaigns in the civil wars which have devastated China almost annually since 1911.

Under the influence of his wife and his mother-in-law, Mme. K. T. Soong, he became a Christian.

25,000 Return to Work In Cleveland Industries

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 14. (US)—Over 25,000 men and women, starting tomorrow, have been recalled to work, after lay-offs since before Christmas. The New York Central railroad added 1,200 men to the railroad shops here. Nickel Plate railroad also sent out a recall order.

The Pharis Rubber company, at Newark, Ohio, went back to a full time basis for 750 men, with the Mahoning Valley steel mills reopening, and upwards to 1,000 ordered to work in the clay products industry.

Anti-Hoarding Drive Dislodges Guarded Savings of Humble Folk

CHICAGO, Feb. 14. (AP)—Dead dollars are responding already to the government's war on hoarding, calling them from their hiding places.

Thousands of letters, radiating confidence and promising support, pour daily into the office of Frank Knox, chairman of President Hoover's anti-hoarding committee and publisher of the Chicago Daily News.

Yet the plan of battle is only three days old.

Another point, which Mr. Knox considers almost as important, is that many letters are written by hand on blue-ruled tablet paper suggesting origins in humble homes.

It is to them, Knox said, the idea of putting hoarded cash back into circulation has appealed most strongly.

These penciled notes encourage the committee more than bond stationery and imposing letterheads. Mr. Knox says they indicated the backbone of the country has been stiffened with optimism from the smallest consumers up.

The committee was given an idea of the enormity of its task when a federal bank examiner reported the condition of a bank in a small west-

Boy Scouts Do Good Turns In War Zone

SHANGHAI, Feb. 14. (AP)—The Boy Scout motto "Do a Good Turn Daily," might as well be "Do a Hundred Good Turns Daily," so far as Boy Scouts of Shanghai are concerned during the present emergency.

When the Sino-Japanese hostilities began some three weeks ago the scouts were among the first to volunteer their services to the Shanghai volunteer corps.

Since then they have been busy day and night serving as messengers, guides, clerks, telephone operators and orderlies, and doing light patrol duty. They also have assisted in relief of suffering refugees.

The local scout council consisting of 150 boys is unique inasmuch as it includes 20 nationalities. The 25 American scouts are in the midst of activities, being concentrated in the municipal building where they are provided with living quarters.

GARNER HOLDS INTEREST WITH F. D. ROOSEVELT

New Yorker and Texan Share Spotlight Jointly In Discussions Now

CANDIDACIES DIFFER

F. D. Is Actively in Race While 'Jack' Keeps On Sawing Wood

By FRASER EDWARDS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14. (US)—Back any Washington politician into a quiet corner to discuss the Democratic presidential situation stripped of persiflage and camouflage and he will say that only two men are considered seriously for the nomination—Roosevelt and Garner.

All other candidates are discounted on mere mention. The politicians count out such men as Al Smith, Newton Baker, Owen Young, George White, Jim Reed, Bill Murray—all of them. They only want to talk of the chances of two men—Roosevelt and Garner. And they want to talk endlessly.

Not Actual Rivals

Strangely enough the New York governor and the speaker of the house are not regarded as rivals in the strictest sense by the politicians. They apparently draw their strength from much the same sources despite their utter differences in character and political theories. Any Democrat moved solely by the will to win speaks almost as highly of the one as of the other.

There is a great contrast in the campaigns being conducted for the two men. Roosevelt is an avowed candidate. He has an organized movement for him. He has campaign managers. There are others who would like to horn in as assistants to the assistants. They are the bandwagon jumpers.

Garner Saws Wood

No matter what his would-be managers would say Garner is no more of a candidate than the humblest member of the house. He is just the speaker. He has his job cut out for him. He saws wood and says nothing. Asked about it, Garner has one answer:

"I know nothing about it. I've had more responsibility heaped on me than I ever had before in my

Cattle Make Winter In Good Condition

AUSTIN, Feb. 14. (AP)—Range cattle are coming through the winter in an unusually strong condition and are expected to fatten early and rapidly after spring grass comes, the federal-state crop and live stock reporting service said here today in releasing its Feb. 1 survey of results.

In the southern district reports indicated that steers are putting on flesh now and a fairly large number are expected to be available early this spring, the report said.

The condition of ranges was rated at 78 per cent of normal, compared with 78 per cent a month ago, 78 per cent a year ago and 79.4 per cent the five-year average condition on Feb. 1.

Sheep and goat ranges continued good, the report stated.

Workers Tunnel Snow to Rescue Buried Miners

KELLOGG, Idaho, Feb. 14. (AP)—Scores of weary men, half blinded by glittering snow, tunnelled on into a giant snowdrift today, still hoping to rescue two miners buried in a giant avalanche, though they did not expect to reach them until tomorrow morning.

Carl Areander and Henry Lund, on property of the Silver Dale Mining company, were overwhelmed by a 50-foot slide, which toppled over a bluff Saturday night and hit their little cabin, carrying it away. Unless they managed to reach one of the tunnels honeycombing Big Creek gulch, rescuers said, they probably are dead.

Troops Called to Halt Miners' Demonstration

BARBOURVILLE, Ky., Feb. 14. (AP)—Fifty special policemen were sworn today, a company of national guardsmen will arrive tonight from Harlan, and the Barbourville national guard unit will stand by for use if needed in halting a scheduled national miners union demonstration here tomorrow.

The state troops were requested by County Judge Frank Baker after the town was flooded with circulars calling upon union members to make a mass protest here tomorrow against the killing of Harry Simms, alias Symes, who was fatally wounded by a mine guard last week.

TEXARKANA, Texas, Feb. 14. (AP)—Johnny Bryant, 20, was convicted of robbery with firearms here last night and given 25 years in the penitentiary. He was charged in connection with the attempted holdup of an oil company office Christmas eve. The state asked the death penalty. Bryant pleaded temporary insanity.

State Awakes To Find John Garner Boom Taking Hold

DALLAS, Feb. 14. (UP)—Texans awoke today to find that a weekend of rapid political developments had made a formidable thing of the boom to nominate log cabin-born Speaker John N. Garner for president.

Two leading independent Democratic newspapers, the Dallas News and the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, put their approval on Garner, native, lifelong Texan, as Democratic nominee.

At San Antonio, central headquarters for the unauthorized Garner boom, it was announced that Bascom N. Timmons, president of the National Press club and a former Texan, has been chosen publicity director of the campaign to nominate and elect Garner.

At Houston, it was learned that Lynch Davidson, party leader in the state and a former lieutenant governor, had declared his preference for Garner and declined to serve on a Franklin D. Roosevelt-for-President campaign committee.

BUSINESS SEES CHEERING SIGNS

Government Credit Plan Given Attention

By FRANK H. M'CONNELL
Associated Press Financial Writer

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—American business peered into a kaleidoscope of many changes in the week just ended and it was indicated that a little more time may be required for business to adjust its conclusions as to the early future.

Leading industrial executives showed keen interest in trying to calculate the benefits that should grow out of the governmental plan to loosen up credit by relaxing some of the more rigid restrictions of the federal reserve act. They also recounted the benefits already derived from early operations of the new Reconstruction Finance corporation and studied with keen interest the Ford announcement that production of that company would be stepped up immediately.

Good Results Noted

Encouraging results were seen in several directions. While trade barometers failed to show any material change in the low levels of carloadings, electrical output and steel production figures, sharp reductions were noted in both business failures and bank closings.

The automobile industry, rated as one of the three major foundations, on which the American business structure rests, expressed relief over announcement by the Ford Motor company that it would begin active production of new models. Sizable orders for accessories, it was announced, have already been placed. Automobile company executives showed no hesitation in predicting an important stimulus to all business, including their own, as a direct result.

Steel More Cheerful

Importance of the Ford action was also reflected in the cheerier atmosphere that immediately pervaded the steel industry. With steel production down to 28 per cent and unfilled orders of U. S. Steel corporation declining 87,000 tons in January to the lowest figure of which there is any record, the prospect of an increase in automobile manufacturing was regarded by steel executives as a boon of major importance.

Continued decline of commodity prices caused further uneasiness during the week which was not entirely offset by Washington's latest efforts to revive industry. Led by sugar and rubber, several commodities reacted to their lowest levels on record.

Misting Rain Falls Over Wichita Area

Mists of rain fell over the entire Wichita section during Sunday and Sunday night. Although skies were heavily clouded, at no point did precipitation amount to more than a drizzle.

Weather conditions similar to those existing in Wichita Falls prevailed over all of Northwest Texas and Southern Oklahoma. Temperatures were somewhat lower to the north, but freezing weather was reported only at Forgan and points farther north in Oklahoma.

Maximum temperature here for the day was 56 degrees. The lowest registered was 45 degrees. Rainfall for the 24 hours ending at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon amounted to .37 of an inch.

DALLAS ORDERS UTILITIES TO PAY INTEREST

$100,000 Due Customers of Four Companies, Says City Attorney

STATE LAW CITED

Interest on Deposits Here Payable on Demand, Managers Say

Special to The Record News.

DALLAS, Feb. 14.—Dallas citizens, customers of various utilities will receive within the next few weeks, interest payments on service deposits aggregating nearly $100,000, according to a ruling made Saturday from the city attorney's office and from J. W. Everman, supervisor of utilities.

Bills Credited

Those two officials found that only the Southwest Bell Telephone company had actually been paying interest to its Dallas patrons on their service deposits, although other companies had credited interest to a general account on their books.

Management of the telephone company said that that company had been crediting interest on January bills each year, and therefore had been complying with the state law which requires the annual payment of 6 per cent simple interest.

All of the utilities, including the city water department, admitted the validity of claims for interest on customers' deposits. It was explained that in most cases the earned annual interest would amount to but a few cents and that it would cost more to make out and mail checks for such amounts than the aggregate due the individual consumers. Since the law requires it however, the companies will pay, officials said. It was further pointed out that where service has been discontinued, or where the customer asked for it, interest has been either paid or credited on current bills.

Big Sum Due

The Dallas Power and Light company, it was shown, has $217,555.69 in customers' deposits, and its officials estimated that about $52,850 is due in interests, to be distributed over thousands of accounts.

The city of Dallas will meet its interest payments on water department deposits in accordance with the law, it was stated, although that requirement heretofore has not been observed.

PAYMENTS HERE MADE ON DEMAND

That Wichita Falls patrons of utilities have available several thousand dollars in interest, despite numerous withdrawals in recent months, seemed apparent Sunday from information obtained from representatives of local utilities concerns.

So far as could be learned Sunday, none of the four utilities serv-

Flowers May Bloom In Death Valley

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 14. (US)—Death Valley, grim furnace where many a grizzled prospector perished of thirst, may blossom with a carpet of wild flowers again as the result of the recent heavy rains.

The arid sink at the center of the valley hundreds of feet below sea level, has been converted into a lake, 50 miles long.

The valley is expected to reproduce the phenomen of June, 1930, when heavy rains caused dormant seeds to sprout and the valley became a wilderness of wild flowers.

Missouri Dean Defends Marriage of Students

COLUMBIA, Mo., Feb. 14. (US)—Dr. Albert K. Heckel, dean at the University of Missouri, today defended student marriages as "settling influences." He explained:

"They cut down the number of students mooning around with that far-away look in their eyes. Why, in a remarkably short time after marriage, these students lose all their lovesickness, and settle down to real work."

Bodies Of Eskimos Freeze In Ice As Floods Lay Waste

NOME Alaska, Feb. 14. (AP)—Frozen fastnesses near the mouth of the Muskokwim held secret today a "ghastly tragedy," in which floods were reported to have wiped out seven Eskimo villages, many lives were lost, and the bodies of numerous victims were found later encased in sheathes of ice.

Only the barest details reached here saying the floods occurred just before Christmas and a great stretch of country, possibly several hundred square miles in extent, had been hit. The report was brought overland to the mouth of the Yukon and mailed here in a letter.

After the waters from numerous streams and added to by high tides, had subsided, the message said, severe freezing weather set in and the bodies of the victims were frozen.

OIL ATTORNEY URGES TARIFF

Millions Want Protective Levies, Brown Declares

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14. (AP)—Support from millions of Americans for protective levies upon imported petroleum was claimed today in a statement issued by Russell B. Brown, counsel for the Independent Petroleum association.

Brown asserted "that President Hoover will not veto an oil tariff bill has been unequivocably stated on the floor of the house of representatives without challenge or denial," and added:

"Every phase of American life is represented in the formal support of this measure which has already been filed with the proper congressional committees. Labor unions with a membership of 5,500,000, most whom are citizens, have officially requested congress to take proper action for the revival of this industry either through an excise tax or a tariff.

Labor Heads March

"Over a hundred presidents of labor unions, on another occasion, marched in a body to the White House and to the offices of the vice president and of the speaker, presenting the demands of organized labor for the reconstruction of the nation's prosperity and including an oil tariff among these demands.

"American business interests, aside from a few groups who have been misled into believing that a tariff would unduly increase their fuel oil costs, are supporting this tariff.

"Patriotic organizations which are opposing the Communist menace have repeatedly adduced the dangers to our economic life through the duty-free importation of Soviet oil in the absence of any proper tariff for the protection of American labor from competition with the serf labor of Russia.

"Outstanding private citizens have made public statements in regard to the imperative necessity for such a tariff, the most recent such statement being that issued by William G. McAdoo who urges a tax on oil imports among his other proposals for increasing the federal revenue."

Kidnapers Of Wealthy Sportsman Fail To Keep Tryst For Ransom

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Feb. 14. (AP)—The kidnapers of Harry H. Blagden, wealthy sportsman, did not keep a tryst they had named for shortly after noon today at Tupper lake.

The family of the man, held since Thursday night, believed the publicity given the case had frightened the kidnapers. Tonight his relatives were waiting for further word from them. They said they were ready to pay the $1,000 demanded at any time and place appointed.

Police Busy

State police were not idle, but Capt. Charles J. Broadfield, of B troop, at Malone, whose men are working on the case, said there had been no developments today.

It developed today the family had tried to keep the kidnaping a secret, believing quick payment of the $1,000 demanded was the best way out.

The state police and conservation officers who for two days tramped through the wooded Adirondack mountains in search of the sportsman and his captors were driven in today by a biting snowstorm.

Blagden, one of five brothers, and socially prominent, was kid-

POLICE GUARD DELIVERY OF 'IMPORT' FLUID

Large Distributors Slash Price to Producers To Open Fight

RETAIL WAR BOOMS

Independents to Bottle Milk And Sell It 5c Per Quart

HOUSTON, Feb. 14. (AP)—Milk was delivered to major Houston distributors tonight under police guard.

Members of the South Texas Producers association, angered at a reduction in wholesale milk prices, posted by four major distributors, poured some 1,500 gallons into the city sewers in front of three distributing plants, today rather than accept the cut.

Several of the dairies then ordered milk shipped in and requested a police guard at the railroad station, claiming members of the producers association had threatened to prevent unloading of the milk.

Producers Jeer

The police squadron was on hand at the station. Sympathizers with the producers association occasionally shouted jeers as distributors' trucks backed in for loading, but there were no arrests. Police escorted the trucks after they were loaded.

Four major distributors posted reductions in wholesale prices from 20 cents per gallon, to 16.6 cents per gallon.

Two others announced no reduction in prices so far as could be learned but the producers association claimed no milk was delivered to them and that they were in sympathy with the four leaders. A seventh distributor sided with the producers and tendered its facilities.

Producers Determined

J. J. Stallones, manager of the producers association, said selling milk at the posted price was like giving it away.

"If we have to give it away we won't give it to distributors. The pouring will continue. As soon as we can manage it we'll bottle our own milk and retail it for five cents a quart."

The new price offered producers is 40 cents per 100 pounds lower than the old, or about 3½ cents per gallon.

10 Cents a Quart

The price to housewives for standard grades of milk is now 10 cents per quart. Distributor officials did not say whether the reduction to producers means a cut will be made in the retail price.

Producers charged that the distributors are banding together to beat down prices and making plans to bring in huge quantities of milk from other Texas cities to supply Houston markets.

Father Slays Three Children With Axe

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Feb. 14. (AP)—Bolton E. White, 46, automobile salesman, hacked three of his six children to death with a hatchet, critically injured three others and killed himself with a shotgun today.

The dead and injured were found scattered about a large living room in White's home when relatives became worried after failing to hear from White or the children since yesterday.

White and two children, Louise, 13, and Joan 4, were dead. Hilda, 2, died in a hospital.

The other children, unconscious, their bodies stiff with cold, lay about the room. Their heads were badly slashed. They are Kathleen, 9, who is expected to die; James, 11, and Malcolm, 7. All suffered fractured skulls.

life. It's going to take all my time to meet that responsibility."

Just now the Roosevelt managers are conducting a rather furious campaign against Al Smith. Smith says he is not a candidate but will run if drafted. In that the Roosevelt supporters see the greatest menace to his nomination. They believe that Smith must be checked before he gets started.

Cummings Called In

Homer Cummings of Connecticut, former chairman of the Democratic national committee and former advocate of William G. McAdoo, has been called into the situation for Roosevelt. He is busy interviewing Democratic members of congress for the New York governor. So is Chairman James A. Farley of the New York Democratic state committee.

The chief argument presented is that Roosevelt as the governor of New York occupies a position of power and prestige because of his populous state has more electoral votes than any other. Therefore, he is in "front" for the nomination. Anything done to injure his chances would injure the chances of the Democratic party.

Party's Record Garner's

The arguments made on behalf of Garner concern largely his leadership in the house. The record of the house will not only be Garner's record but that of every other Democratic member. If it is one of which Democrats can boast, every boast will boost Garner. When Democratic members return to their districts to point with pride to their own records, they point with pride to the record of Garner.

And so the Democratic presidential situation stands. Over and over again it is argued. Each one because of his own personal slant or politically expedient standpoint presents his own case. But every time they all come back to two names—Roosevelt and Garner.

naped from a cottage at the exclusive Lake Placid club on Mirror lake.

Blagden, 45, a bachelor, lived on upper Saranac lake where he operated a camp for boys. He also was interested with Cady in a sporting goods store at Saranac lake.

A letter in Blagden's handwriting, received by one of his brother's revealed the kidnaping. It had been mailed in Utica and demanded $1,000. The captive said he was forced to write the missive with one of the kidnapers holding a pistol at his head.

The seizure of the man was daring. The cottage assigned to him, "Midknoll," is surrounded by other cottages and day and night during the Olympic games people have been passing to and from their quarters in the club grounds. Near "Midknoll" were the quarters of Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, wife of the former governor; Mayor James J. Walker of New York, and Mrs. D. W. Dupont.

Houston Boy Held for Motiveless Shooting of Friend With Pistol

HOUSTON, Feb. 14. (AP)—Homer Harris, 14-year-old school boy, admitted in a statement to police he shot his chum, Edward Jones, 16, but could not or would not assign any reason for his act.

Neither could the wounded boy or members of his family explain the shooting, which occurred late yesterday.

Homer was charged this afternoon with assault to murder. His case will be transferred to the probation court for trial, officers said. The Jones youth, hospital attaches said, had but a slight chance to recover.

"I did not have control of my mind when I shot him," the lad repeatedly told R. R. Myers, investigator for the district attorney's office.

"I didn't even realize I had shot him until after I had done it."

The boy, weary from a quick motor trip to Brenham and back last night following the shooting, was brought into a police sub-station by his father early today.

The boy told police in his statement he had placed a small pistol in his automobile at 5:45 p. m. yesterday when he started to his father's office.

"I had driven part way to town when I decided to go back to Edward Jones' house. I drove up in front of the house and called for him to come out. His mother came to the door and I told her I wanted to talk with Edward," said Homer.

"He came out. I was sitting in the car in front of the house. I did not say anything to him as he walked out the front door.

"When he got within 20 feet of me I shot him three times with the pistol I had in the car.

"I did not say anything to him after I shot him. I just started up the car and began driving off down the street. Edward ran after me.

"Edward and I have not had any trouble. He was not trying to hurt me in any way when I shot him. He was too far away to have tried to hurt me. I didn't see a pistol or a knife or a weapon of any kind in his hands."

Valentine Poem Of Poe Is Uncovered

NEW YORK, Feb. 14. (AP)—A poem of despair Edgar Allen Poe wrote to a woman friend on lace-edged valentine paper 16 days after the death of his wife 85 years ago, has been found by Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, the latter said today.

Nothing is known about the woman except her name inscribed on the valentine "Miss Louisa Olivia Hunter."

The poem, dated Feb. 14, 1847:

"Though I turn, I fly not—
I cannot depart;
I would try, but try not
To release my heart.
And my hopes are dying
While, on dreams relying,
I am spelled by art.

Thus the bright snake coiling
Neath the forest tree
Wins the bird, beguiling,
To come down and see.
Like that bird the lover
Round his fate will hover
Till the blow is over
And he sinks—like me."

JAPANESE MASSING 40,000 SOLDIERS

(Copyr., 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.)

SHANGHAI, Feb. 15. (Monday)—Thirty-five thousand Japanese soldiers, marines and bluejackets manned the firing stoops of the 16-mile battlefront between Chapei and Woosung today, and 10,000 more fresh infantrymen from Tokyo were steaming on transports to a secret landing place on the Whangpoo river.

Under cover of the ninth day of grim, deliberate, systematic naval, land and air bombardment of the Woosung forts, where Chinese forces still held strong, the new troops will land east of the international settlement and be moved to the lines to bolster the seasoned forces.

"Nervous Ninth" Arrives

The "nervous ninth" Japanese regiment, nicknamed by Shanghai because they disembarked from seven transports yesterday with their gunbutts under arms and right hands clutching the trigger guards, marched through the settlement for five hours to the Japanese area.

The second division, due today, will be landed from six other transports, and rushed immediately to the Kiangwan area in a rumored attempt to outflank the Chinese at Chapei, cut them off from the Woosung forces, and drive them out of the region toward Nanking along the railway.

While the Japanese bombing planes, land artillery and the guns kept up their rain of fire and high explosives on old Woosung, Japanese troops advanced toward the fort were held up by the Chinese defenders, whose machine guns drenched the banks of Woosung creek with deadly fire. Chinese anti-aircraft guns batted away at the Japanese planes in vain.

Japs Deny Capture

Chinese sources reported the capture of a large number of Japanese troops, but the spokesman at Japanese military headquarters declared:

"Japanese are never taken prisoner by Chinese."

Admiral Shimada, chief of staff to Admiral Kichisuburo Nomura, said:

"The quietness on the Chapei front today seems to be the result of lost morale among the Chinese. They failed even to make a night attack, which heretofore was regular. In the past 24 hours, our casualties have been only four lightly wounded and one seriously wounded.

"As to our naval activities before Woosung, we are now staging a preparatory action. Three naval planes effectively bombed the Chinese positions, while a landing party engaged the Chinese, with a few of our sailors being killed and wounded. We did not suffer losses of 1,000 as reported by Chinese.

Wants Action

"Personally, I do not hold with the wisdom of waiting a diplomatic settlement of the Shanghai danger. A swift blow, struck immediately, seems to me to be what is necessary for us as well as the defense of other nationalities."

Foreign observers do not believe that the big Japanese assault will get underway before Wednesday, when today's and Sunday's newly arrived troops are acclimated.

Japanese operations near Woosung, save for slight brushes and the lost charge, were limited to reconnoitering. Official reports state the Japanese army lost 14 killed including an officer, and 53 wounded including three officers, while Japanese said at least 34 Chinese had been slain.

American consular authorities continued the probe into the assault of Japanese sailors on A. R. Ringwalt, American vice consul from Omaha, Neb., who was allegedly beaten while searching for a lost Chinese child of American citizenship in Hongkew. Four shells fell yesterday in the American marine defense sector of the international settlement.

JAPS ACCUSED OF ABUSING AMERICANS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15. (AP)—The beginning of Japan's long expected offensive against entrenched Chinese in the Shanghai area was awaited anxiously today by Washington officals.

Code clerks and officials of the state, navy and war departments were on duty in full force watching results of the probable fight to a finish, but more closely concerned with effects of the battle on Americans in the international settlement.

Edwin S. Cunningham, consul general at Shanghai, advised the state department no reply has been received to a protest he made to the Japanese consulate against an attack by Japanese plainclothes men upon Arthur Ringwalt, American vice consul, and Mrs. L. Young, an American citizen of Chinese parentage.

Ringwalt, who comes from Omaha, accompanied the woman into the Hongkew area to rescue her child. Although Ringwalt displayed his American consular credentials, they were roughly handled. Neither was seriously hurt and Mrs. Young later recovered her child.

Both Japanese and the Chinese are in an awkward situation and in well-informed foreign circles in Shanghai the opinion prevails it will be difficult for them to avoid a fight to a finish, which would mean grave danger for those in the settlement.

It is believed doubtful whether the Chinese can win, but the 19th army has achieved so much glory through its stubborn defense of Chapei and the Woosung forts, that it cannot refuse to continue the struggle. This army largely is Cantonese, and domestic politics enters into the situation very largely. Northern military leaders and armies would be harshly critical were the Cantonese to refuse a decisive battle.

LEAGUE INQUIRY FINDS STATE OF WAR EXISTS

(Copyr., 1932, by The Associated Press)

GENEVA, Switzerland, Feb. 14. (AP)—The League of Nations was informed by its Shanghai commission today "a state of open war exists" at Shanghai.

The report picked up the thread of its recital of events where it left off last week. At that time the commission reported all of the earlier events and hostilities between Chinese and Japanese, including an ineffective truce.

Today the commission said a reign of terror resulted in the Hongkew district of Shanghai after Japanese occupation.

"The offensive is entirely in the hands of the Japanese," the report said, "whose declared object is to capture the Woosung forts and drive all Chinese troops a considerable distance from Shanghai."

The league commission said almost the entire non-Japanese population had fled from the Hongkew area. (Hongkew is a native section of Shanghai where thousands of Japanese had their homes before present hostilities were begun).

"The Japanese consul has admitted excesses have been committed by his nationals at a time when feeling was running high and chaotic conditions prevailed, but the situation is greatly improved," the report said. "A considerable number of undesirable Japanese have been deported to Japan."

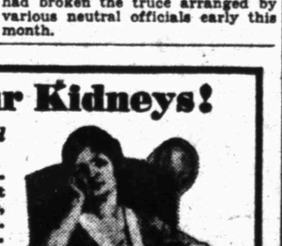

The commission added it was impossible to determine which side had broken the truce arranged by various neutral officials early this month.

Utility Patrons To Draw Interest

ing Wichita Falls residents is making an annual return of the 6 per cent interest to all individual depositors, but at least three of them are paying all earned interest on demand. Officials of the Municipal Gas company, the Texas Electric Service company, and the city water department stated that the interest earned by customers' deposits is set aside into a separate account regularly, and is payable at the request of customers. No information was available Sunday from local officials of the telephone company as to how the customers' interest credit is being applied.

Electric Payments Advertised

The Texas Electric Service company advertised in all established newspapers in their service territor about Jan. 1 that 6 per cent simple interest was due customers on service deposits, and it was said that payment of interest has been made to perhaps 15 per cent of local patrons.

During recent months, there have been many requests by patrons of the Municipal Gas company for interest payments, it was said, and it was estimated that at least 12 per cent of depositors have withdrawn earned interest. The same report was given by officials of the city water department, who stated that most of those who have drawn their due interest have had their meter deposits posted for several years.

The news dispatch from Dallas indicates that utilities concerns will be required not only to allow the six per cent interest credit on all service deposits, but to make some definite return of that earning to the depositor. A complete analysis of the state law covering the matter was not available Sunday, but two local attorneys expressed their opinion that the law requires annual payment of the stipulated 6 per cent interest.

Deposits Required Here

Deposits required by utilities here on the usual domestic meter, it was said, are as follows: gas, $10; electricity, $5; telephone, $5; and water, $2.50. The customer holding receipts for all four deposits of that value is entitled to $1.35 in interest annually, under the state law. None of the deposit contracts allows more than simple interest on such deposits; earned interest not withdrawn by the depositor remains static, earning no further interest additions regardless of the number of years through which it may be carried subject to demand.

WOMAN LOSES $1,500 RING

Burglaries Show Decrease After Police Drive

A liberal reward was offered Sunday by Mrs. Frank Cullum, 1909 Speedway, for recovery of a diamond ring valued at $1,500. Mrs. Cullum believed the ring was lost from her purse somewhere near the Y. W. C. A., police said.

With few reports of prowlers or burglars received during the last few days, members of the police department are continuing a strict lookout for suspicious characters. One man was being held in the city jail Sunday night for investigation in connection with what officers believe to have been an attempted burglary. An automobile and burglars tools were taken by Assistant Jailer L. M. McKelvey in the arrest near the Sears, Roebuck & Co. building late Saturday night.

Other activities reported to police Sunday included the loss of four chickens from 3107 Hollywood, reported by Mrs. W. S. Denton; loss of grocery supplies and a tuxedo suit with a total value of $40 from 511 Fort Worth, reported by E. W. Avery. Ed Riley, 2100 Jones, said automobile tools were taken from his car parked on a downtown street about midnight Saturday.

Officers Sunday night located the third of three cars stolen during the past week here, when a coupe reported missing Friday by Bob McCorkle was found at Vernon.

Smith Supporters To Back Roosevelt

BOSTON, Feb. 14. (AP)—Two former supporters of Alfred E. Smith for president today grouped themselves beneath the banner of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York. They are Strabo V. Claggett, unsuccessful Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor of Massachusetts in the last election and a presidential elector pledged to Smith in 1928, and Mayor John J. Murphy of Somerville.

In a statement Claggett said "It is my opinion that the majority of Democratic voters in Massachusetts feel that the nomination this year should go to Franklin D. Roosevelt because he will be the standard bearer who will bring victory to the Democratic party."

Mayor Murphy, in a radio address, said he had organized the first "Al Smith for President" club in New England and was a loyal Smith man but that due to a recent statement of Smith in which the former governor said he "had not announced himself as a definite candidate" the friends of Governor Roosevelt in Massachusetts would campaign to send Roosevelt pledged delegates to the convention.

Miss Kathlyn Randle Is Wed To Wm. A. Sheley

One of the prettiest weddings of the season was solemnized in a simple ceremony at Floral Heights Presbyterian church Sunday at high noon when Miss Kathlyn Randle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Randle, became the bride of William Arthur Sheley of Tyler, Texas. Dr. Nat F. Grafton, pastor, reading the impressive ring ceremony in the presence of relatives and close friends. A beautiful improvised altar was formed by a background of ferns and southern smilax, with exquisite shades of gladioli, acacia and calendula forming a vivid setting for the ceremony.

The prenuptial music was "I Love You Truly," sung by R. E. Shepherd, with Mrs. Shepherd at the organ. Mrs. Shepherd also played the lovely wedding music, using the bridal chorus from Lohengrin as a processional and Mendelssohn's wedding march as the recessional. All through the ceremony, she played soft music.

The bride was radiantly lovely in a Norman & Norman gown of rose chiffon, cut on slender lines but with a sweeping bouffant skirt. She carried a shower bouquet of pink sweet peas and blue roses and her only jewelry was an antique bracelet set with diamonds, the gift of the groom. She entered on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage.

Miss Lillian Randle, the bride's sister, was maid of honor and was beautiful in a charming frock of deep rose crepe, made in the quaint style most admired in this period and with a long bouffant skirt. She wore a shoulder corsage of orchid sweet peas and Talisman roses.

Mr. Sheley was attended by his half brother, Ross Turner. Both wore gardenias as bouttonieres.

A reception honoring the wedding party was held directly after the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Randle on Eleventh street when the beautifully decorated wedding cake was first cut by the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Sheley left immediately after the reception for Dallas, where they will spend a short wedding trip before going to Tyler where Mr. Sheley is a prominent young business man. Mrs. Sheley's going away gown was a charming blue and white ensemble with accessories to harmonize.

Mrs. Sheley is one of the most popular young girls of Wichita Falls. She is a graduate of junior college and completed her education at the University of Texas. Her sorority is Chi Omega. Mr. Sheley, who is the son of Mrs. R. L. Turner, is a graduate of S. M. U. and his fraternity is Kappa Sigma.

Out of town guests were Ross Turner and R. Henderson of Tyler and Miss Francine Turner of Oklahoma City.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

It is nice to say a part of what you think in a column, but this writer's columns have been acting something like boomerangs of late; they return with vigor—sometimes unpleasantly, but we will confess most often pleasantly.

It was a surprising thing to me when, on a morning of late on which I spoke briefly (by request) on gossip, I was called by three different women who had read the column who wished to know if I was speaking of a person each knew (three separate persons by the way) and by another who had been called about the column.

But I had written the few paragraphs on the general theme, and do not know yet who wrote the letter asking me to talk on that subject. It seemed however, that the same shoe fit in different places.

There is the might of gossip! A little whisper drops like a snowflake; then come winds of conjecture like blowing snow, adding more and more until an avalanche thunders down to swallow every lovely thing in its path and spread destruction.

I do not even wish to think of gossip any more. It hurts both the giver and the receiver.

Quite different was the effect of another column; quite pleasant also. A young man came rushing up to us with a radiant face the other day, exclaiming, "Let me shake hands with you." "Well I don't mind a bit," I told him, "but I would like to know the occasion of all this genial greeting." "It's because you put that recipe for peach cobbler in your column," he said. "My wife has tried it and umph! umph!"

"At's boy," I remarked with my usual dignity. "I will put some more old fashioned recipes in the column," and I mentioned sweet potato grated pudding and spoonbread, etc., etc.

But the strange thing was that the column on gossip was written because I was asked to write it and my motives were of the purest. And the column on cookery was written after I had been served a wad of tough pastry covered with a flavorless sirup and adorned with a portion or two of peach—called by courtesy "peach cobbler." With a dyspeptic tummy and a disgruntled mind, I sat down and wrote of the proper way to make cobbler.

So it doesn't seem to matter so much what your motive may be in writing. It just depends on how it hits the person who reads it. And the moral is, it would seem for the columnist, to feel sure you are right and then go ahead.

I've lived a good many years and resisted the temptation to throw things when I was furiously angry. And it's a star in my crown, because I have at times really wanted to throw them—even dishes for instance, and resisted because I wanted to appear more ladylike than I felt.

So with all this time back of me, I shall not throw any brick in a column. This mind of mine may be small, but it is at least an honest one.

Showgirls Turn Demure—Long Hair Shows It

Bobbed Hair, Once Mark of Women's 'Emancipation' Now Supplanted by Flowing Tresses

Bobbed hair may once have been a gesture of women's "emancipation," but now many Broadway showgirls are letting their tresses grow long, feeling—now that the first thrill of this gesture has gone—that such a declaration of independence no longer is necessary.

Alice Faye, (left), Renee Johnson (center) and May Slattery (right) are among others who believe that the coiffure should match personality and that bobbed hair is a style suited only to certain types of beauty. They prefer the mode of the simple and demure.

Mrs. Thos. Korn Honoree At Beautiful Morning Coffee

A charming honoree was the recipient of a beautiful courtesy when Mesdames W. H. Caldwell and Norman Downing entertained Saturday morning at Mrs. Caldwell's home on Lucile street with a morning coffee, honoring Mrs. Thomas Korn, who is leaving the latter part of the week for Joplin, Mo., to make her home. In the surprise miscellaneous shower, Mrs. Korn was the recipient of a number of beautiful gifts.

The valentine motif was noted in the pretty decorations used in the home. The dining room was colorful with the table covered with a handsome cloth of Italian cutwork and filet, centered with a Dresden bowl filled with pastel spring flowers and crimson hearts and pretty cupids peeping forth from the dainty colors. Hearts and cupid and fluffy bows of red added their picturesqueness to the tall red candles in pretty Dresden holders. Mrs. P. P. Langford presided at the handsome silver coffee service and Miss Mary Virginia Barron assisted in the dining room.

Mrs. Guy Raley greeted the numerous guests at the door and presented them to the two charming hostesses, Mesdames Downing and Caldwell and their lovely honoree, Mrs. Korn, who were in the receiving line.

Among the callers were Mesdames Dick Moore, P. P. Langford, T. A. Hicks, C. E. Mangum, W. Ray Thompson, A. L. Whitt, W. P. Glade, Ray Hirschi, J. Chandler Crump, Renfro Lesley, James P. Bowen, Guy Raley, E. J. Killeles, Tom P. Coleman, H. E. Terrell, J. T. Yeargin, Ray Patton, Wilburn Page, J. J. Fite, Ben G. Oneal, C. J. Greene, Claude Woods, T. D. Moore, Ernest M. Robertson, John Boswell, Misses Marietta Hunt, Roberta Wolford, Mary Louise Yeargin, Cecelia Terrell, Marguerite Peery, Mary Virginia Barron, Loraine Hambrick and Jessie Lucile Raley.

Our Children

CREATING TROUBLE

Much of the trouble we have with children is of our own making. We stir up ill feeling, foster it as carefully as though we were doing a better deed, and then wonder why such things happen. This is particularly true where the children are in question. The less emphasis you put on their tales of woe, the better for everybody. Listen. Do your own thinking. Investigate every complaint and get first hand information about it. Don't, if you value a quiet life, begin asking all the children in the neighborhood, or in the class, what happened and who said what. That has created more trouble than a little, and trouble consumes precious energy.

Peter went home with traces of tears on his face. Now and then he would sniff, the corner of his eye following his mother as if to say, "Don't you see your little boy is in trouble?"

"What's wrong, Peter?"

"The teacher is mean to me. I don't like her. She picks on me all the time. Everybody knows it. They'll tell you. She says if I don't pass this week I have to go back. And it's all because she has a grudge on me. Just ask the fellows."

Rage and grief took possession of Peter's gentle mother and she went out with Peter to question the boys in his class about how the teacher treated him.

"O-oo, Mrs. Seely you ought to see how mean she is to him. Gives him a bad mark for nothing."

"Yea. She's always picking on him."

"Yes, Mrs. Seely, I saw her tear up his paper just for nothing and then she gave him a failure. She's awful mean to him."

By this time Mrs. Seely was wraught up to such a pitch that nothing could hold her and she charged upon the teacher in the class room. "What do you mean by treating my Peter like this. You ought to be ashamed of yourself, that's what. If you were any kind of a teacher you would try to help my boy. Instead of that you tear up his papers, you call him names in front of the class, you scare him to death and he cannot do his work. Then you want to put him back. I'll see about this."

When the dust of battle cleared it was found that Peter had handed in no papers for some time. He had destroyed his report cards. He had watched for the mailman and taken the letters sent home. He had delivered none of the notes the teacher had sent by him. He had done nothing he should have done and much that he should not have done.

The teacher was angry by this time and stoutly maintained that before Peter entered the classroom again he would have to apologize for all the trouble he had made. That meant more time, more trouble. It was term end and Peter was left back, before the matter was settled and Peter at work once more.

Wouldn't it be easier to listen with one ear open for the other side? Trouble would sleep better if it were not stirred up so often.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE SIMPSON

WASHINGTON.—It could have caused the administration or the army high command no surprise whatever to hear that the house sub-committee on army appropriations planned to raid budget estimates heavily this year.

ROSS COLLINS

With Ross Collins, Mississippi Democrat, heading that committee, all that he has been saying for years about army folk has an entirely new significance.

By all accounts, the Collins committee plans to take a crack at about every aspect of army life except aviation. Particularly it proposes to lop 10,000 men and 2,000 officers off the army pay rolls, to slash cavalry appropriations and to put skids under a lot of the summer training camp activities.

Collins' Creed

"I believe," Collins said in the house just a year ago, "that much of the money carried in this bill (the last army appropriation measure) is wasted on obsolete equipment, obsolete methods and upon activities intended solely for propaganda purposes, and that more military protection could be afforded by smaller expenditures for a more modernly equipped army of much smaller personnel."

It is under that creed the Mississippian took over the job of trimming up the army budget.

Collins' official biography discloses no military service. The activities he notes are scholastic or political, except for the practice of law.

"Military training produces the type of mind that fits into old ruts and stays there," he once said. "This always means that much of our peace-time training and preparedness is waste."

Last year Collins figured out that some 20 millions of army appropriations went for "hoss soldiers," while of $1,252,000 for chemical warfare, only about one-fifth was for anything but defensive measures.

"Our army is more interested in good, old-fashioned horses than in fighting with the most modern weapons," he said, adding that these "faithful old servants of the horse-and-buggy age" were kept only that "old fashioned soldiers might also be kept."

Challenge

Now, advance notices of impending action by the Collins subcommittee indicate that he is putting his ideas into practice.

Do the score of world-war army veterans in the house agree with Lawyer Collins?

Have Pershing's men, who took over the war department from the civilian secretary down after the war, merely squandered millions on outworn military ideas and failed to write from the lessons of that war a sound policy to guide development of national defense means ashore?

That is what Collins bluntly charges.

Dean of Women Takes Office at Wellington

Special to The Record News.

WELLINGTON, Texas, Feb. 14.—In outlining her program, Miss Mildred Hulsey, recently elected dean of women at Wellington High school, stated that she would base her activities along the lines of personal hygiene, social activities, character improvement, and scholastic improvement.

The movement to create the chair for a dean of women in Wellington was sponsored by the city federation and the parent-teacher association after many parents of the city found reason to believe such an office might improve the moral, social and scholastic backgrounds of the children.

The movement has been received warmly by the students. The senior class donated $24 toward furnishing a room for the dean.

Speaker Garner rode to that brilliant White House reception in a "twenty-cent taxicab." Wonder if he told Mrs. Hoover he was glad to meter?

Soviet Daring

PRESENT day maneuvers of governments, financiers, industrial leaders, and hosts of unemployed to rid the world of "depression" reveal more and more plainly the fact that "political economy," commonly phrased as a reality in Europe and America, exists only in Russia.

Regardless of what attitude citizens of other nations may hold toward the vast political-social experiment now under way in Russia, it remains true that among the established nations, that country alone has an economic system determined by, and subordinate to, the political organization by which it is governed.

To make clear the difference between the economic system of modern Russia and those of other nations generally, the latter may be characterized as "competitive economic systems." That of Russia appropriates the fruit of individual effort for the benefit of the state; that of the United States, as a typical illustration, grants to the individual the full fruits of his individual enterprise so far as the possession of wealth is concerned.

"The state" in Russia means the entire citizenship. Since all wealth produced by those citizens accrues to the ownership of the entire body, Russia has an economic system which is purely political. Frantic efforts of legislatures and congress in our own country to correct distressing economic inequalities point clearly the dependence of political policy upon economic control.

Contemplation of the fundamental differences in those two plans will reveal how amazingly advanced is the theory of Soviet Russia. It reaches far into the future, appropriates at one stroke a social-economic principle toward which the world has made steady but snail-like progress during the past century, and boldly puts it into practice.

Whether Russia has the leadership, the enlightened genius, to build successfully upon the astounding pattern which it has drawn remains to be seen. One thing is evident: Its revised economic system goes straight to the heart of the world's present trouble—unequal distribution of goods. Furthermore, if "competition" is to be "the life of trade" under this truly political economy, the competition must be in service to the entire citizenship, rather in the individual acquisition of wealth.

The Russian experiment can not be dismissed as "a wild dream of bewhiskered Bolshevists" by any save unthinking people. Its methods are direct, its purpose outspoken. Its theory declares openly much that has been espoused in America, in polite and polished speeches, as "enlightened business policy" and "altruism." The new scheme of things economic beyond the Ural mountains will bear watching.

Get Civilized or Perish!

THE authorities in British East Africa, who have ordered the execution of 60 natives for the murder of an old woman who was supposed to be a witch, evidently believe that untutored tribesmen can be civilized by sheer force.

Sixty scaffolds in a row ought to make an imposing spectacle. The surviving natives, whatever their private emotions about the affair may be, will at least be impressed by the fact that the old custom of killing witches is not approved by the government.

So, in the course of time, it will happen that no more witches are killed in British East Africa. And the natives—whose mental processes will still find nothing wrong in the idea of killing witches—will, in spite of themselves, take on one more attribute of civilization.

This is all rather interesting to meditate upon, especially since all the rest of us are more or less in the same boat.

We have managed, without intending to, to get ourselves into a spot in which we must very speedily take on the customs of a higher civilization or perish.

First, we mechanized the world. We made possible the production of goods on a scale infinitely greater than anything previously dreamed of. We improved transportation, so that all distances shrank to a fiftieth of their old length. We improved communication systems, so that every man had the world for a neighbor. We erected an enormously intricate and complicated finahcial-industrial system, so that the whole world has to stand or fall together.

Having done this, we failed to understand that a civilization of that sort could not be conducted by men and women whose mental outlook was just about what the mental outlook of their great-grandparents had been.

Our troubles today come chiefly from the fact that we have not yet been able to live up to this glittering new civilization. Our minds, for instance, still accept such things as ignorance, poverty, prejudice, international rivalry and war as natural features of human society—although our new civilization must inevitably go to pot unless such things are eliminated.

We stand pretty much where the African natives stand. We must get civilized or perish.

SO THEY SAY!

We spend billions for harbors so ships can get in, then pass stupid laws to keep them out. This is done by a bunch of ignorant, cheap, selfish, economic morons, the interests who pay congress to pass the laws!—Clarence Darrow, attorney.

Ballad of Youth

When I am old, I shall look back to this:
The breath of purple lilacs in the spring,
The frail remembrance of your gentle kiss,
The rosy glow of youth in everything.

But time will take its old relentless way.
And rob me of my bits of happiness,
And leave me nothing but a yesterday
Wrapped in a little shroud of loneliness.

Though I shall count each moment that I knew,
Like some sad miser fingering his gold,
Perhaps I'll be content to think of you
As just a memory . . . when I am old.

But now, my dear, love's sweet and I am young,
And life, without you is a song . . . half sung.

—Kathleen Lamb.

Rebuttal

Encountering Rudy Vallee in one of the stay-up-late places the other ante-meridiah, I asked him what he thought of Cardinal O'Connell's recent explosion on radio crooners. The good man of the cloth (you've probably forgotten already) landed on the front page by saying that all the radio crooners were not men!

Mr. Vallee asked me to quote him as follows: "I only wish that the Cardinal would remember that nobody can tell a man by the pitch of his voice."

Well, that was a pretty good retort, but a better one, I thought, would have been for Vallee to have reminded the Cardinal that Jack Dempsey, the heavyweight champ for years, still talks in a falsetto, and Jean Malin (whoops!) talks bass!

Overheard

"I just heard that Jack Osterman got hit, again."

"Yeah? What do they suspect—fair play?"

Pleasant Dreams

A group of local yokels turned to the Yellow Peril subject and one of the crowd tried to distress Marc Lachmann, Chevalier's publicity ace.

"Ain't you worried about going to war if we have to?" queried one of the mob.

"Nope," nope'd Marc, "they didn't draft me the last time—because I look lousy in a uniform."

"Things have changed," said a Frankenstein, "they use guys like you now to count bodies."

Form of Criticism

The Meanest Man in Town to hear Mac Benoff describe him:

He even drove the idle actors in front of the Palace crazy by having some riveters work nearby so that the hambos couldn't hear themselves talk . . . And then he lost a bet. It bothered him so much—he ate his heart out—and died of indigestion!

The Squelch Proper

Take it from Jim Niles, who finally found a way to stifle those outoftowners who always say: "So you've lived in New York for years and haven't seen Grant's Tomb, eh?"

Niles always snaps: "Neither has Grant, buddy, neither has Grant!"

O, Mr. Wilstach

Recommended for the Dictionary of Similes: Homer Croy: The word spread like water spilled on linoleum . . . Anthony Abbott: He talked steadily and freely, as if his thoughts had been wired for sound . . . Harry B. Smith: Dark as the prospect of prohibition repeal . . . Arthur "Bugs" Baer: Sure as a gun's iron, straw is hay and a beetle is a bug . . . V. R. Cornford: As intimate as a goodnight kiss . . . I. M. Paterson: About as helpful as pouring soup in the carburetor . . . Helen Rowland: A man's heart is like a ferryboat—always going back and forth, and never docking anywhere for long . . . Anne O'Hare McCormick: Different as Boston and Bagdad . . . H. I. Phillips: As amateurish as a bridge tournament between experts . . . Ted Cook: Happy as a circulating library with a new banned novel, also: Charming as the manager of an apartment house before you move in.

O, Mr. Mencken!

"Add ridiculous lines," memos Paul Yawitz: "When Edward G. Robinson in 'The Hatchet Man' attempts to kill his unfaithful bodyguard, the gunman chirps in serious tones: 'You can't take the law in your own hands, this is America!'"

Gag

The other night, backstage of the Apollo Theater, Willie Howard, chief funmaker in George White's "Scandals," was showing White a magnet that he claimed was worth millions of dollars.

"What do you mean, millions?" asked George.

"Well," explained Willie, "this magnet is a miniature replica of a large one a German inventor is building. He plans to take it out in the ocean at spots where steamships laden with valuables are sunk He will put it into operation there and the magnet will draw the ship up, and presto, we'll be rich."

"The only trouble with that," said George, "is with your luck the only thing that magnet will bring up will be herrings."

Boff! And How-ard!

Willie was the guest of some friends, with Mrs. Howard, a few days before last Christmas. The talk revolved about expenditures and presents.

"Oh, by the way," said Mrs. Howard to Willie, "I think you should get me a new ermine coat for my birthday next week."

"Yeah?" said Willie. "After buying you that diamond bracelet for Christmas! Where do you think I'll get the money?"

"Say, listen," snapped Mrs. H. "I'm no banker. I didn't marry you to give you financial advice."

Evening Matters

"Whatever became of that nifty that this Dept. pulled with Harry Richman at the Palace, you know—the one that ends: 'Well, it is physically impossible to hiss and yawn—at the same!'?"

"It's now in the Three Little Girls' movie."

Sotto Voce

Marian Lampe: Your rhymes don't jell, Marian. Try again.

Theresa Marcus: He is commercially booked up on an exclusive contract. Perhaps some day it may be arranged.

A. D. (Taxi Driver) Thanks. He has hurt taxi drivers a lot, I know. He can't last much longer, don't worry.

Haw!

The Peter Arnos (Lois Long) who were divorced recently still are pals. That is, they share their only child now and then. The other week-end Mr. Arno had the child, and when he sent it back to his ex-wife, he sent a new doggie with the baby.

The hound, however, distresses Lois, because it whines all night. So she has named it: "Aron's Revenge."

She keeps waiting all day to hear from Bruce, and when she gets home that night Arlene tells her that he has called to say he would be too busy to come down tonight. Lois and Margaret go to a movie, and return just in time to see Bruce drive away, with Arlene on the seat beside him.

When Bruce arrives at the apartment he fully expects to see Lois, but Arlene has arranged things to suit herself. She tells him that Lois has gone out with another man. Bruce becomes angry, and asks Arlene if she would like to go out with him. They go to the Edgemere hotel to dance, because Arlene tells Bruce that is where Lois is going to spend the evening.

Arlene orders a big dinner, but Bruce only drinks a mint julep. He keeps watching the door for some signs of Lois, but she does not show up. When Bruce takes Arlene home he is so jealous that he makes another date with her for the following Friday.

Lois is awake when Arlene comes in. Lois tells her that she isn't putting anything over on her, that she and Bruce are not engaged any longer anyway. Everything is progressing better than Arlene has anticipated, but Lois goes to sleep in tears.

Lois mails the ring back to Bruce the following morning. He calls her in the afternoon, but Lois is tempted to disconnect him and not talk to him at all. Her heart is broken.

She does talk to him, however. But nothing comes of it. They are caught in their own stupid misunderstanding of each other. Lois decides that she will not live any longer with Arlene.

Now Go on With the Story

CHAPTER XXIV

Lois and Margaret found a little room down on Rush street near the center of the city, where Margaret said it would be "just fine" because Lois could walk to work and save car fare that way. Lois was so weary from walking and from worry that she was willing to take most anything. What did it matter?

The room was in an old, rambling house that the landlady said had at one time belonged to the wealthy Morton family, who of course everyone who lived in Chicago knew about. The house had been converted into a tea room downstairs and rooms upstairs where, as the landlady put it, she kept only respectable roomers. Margaret wondered vaguely how she knew whether or not they were respectable and what she termed respectable. She, herself was carelessly attired, who from the appearance of the hallways did not care whether people had cleanliness or not.

"You can fix this up real cute," Margaret told Lois. "Put some drapes up at the windows and buy a pillow or two for the couch."

"Yes, indeed," the landlady joined in. "The girls who had this room before had it fixed up like a little library. They were very fond of books and magazines and things like that."

Lois didn't care. She doubted whether she would ever have any one up to see her. It made no difference to her what the place looked like. She desired a place merely to sleep because one had to have a place to sleep.

"Leaving us?" Arlene inquired without interest.

"Can I move in tonight?" Lois asked the lady.

"Sure," was the quick answer, "the sooner the better. It's all ready for you."

Lois turned to Margaret. "I guess I'll go back out and get my things then and stay here."

"Why not wait until morning?" Margaret urged her.

Lois shook her head. "I don't want to, Margaret. That's all."

Margaret understood. "I'll come back down with you and stay tonight if you want me to," she said.

Lois paid a week's room rent and the landlady's face lighted in a smile. She closed her fingers over the money with the air of one who has just come into a large fortune. It was indeed somewhat of a fortune to Mrs. Mahoney, for although she insisted that all of her roomers were respectable she did not say how far they were behind on their rent. As a matter of fact the reason that she had this room to rent to Lois was because the two girls who had been so fond of books and magazines had not been so fond of working and after weeks of promise which had never materialized into pay, Mrs. Mahoney had been forced to eject them.

"Thank you, Miss," Mrs. Mahoney said. She was thinking that now she would be able to make the payment on her radio, which had been worrying her considerably the past two days.

Arlene was home when Lois and Margaret arrived. Lois didn't want to go in at first. Margaret told her that if she didn't it would only make Arlene think that Arlene was getting away with something. That was true, of course. Lois entered with her head held high and her chin as firm as she could manage to keep it.

Arlene was alone. She was propped up on the davenport filing her fingernails. Lois had never seen her look so beautiful. She had gotten a new finger wave and her eyebrows were arched perfectly. Her lips were two little red Cupid's bows that pursed themselves in an effective smile as Lois and Margaret entered the room.

"Oh, hello," Arlene said carelessly. "You're home early aren't you?" Margaret ventured.

Lois walked on into the dressing room but she could hear Arlene's lazy answer.

"Sorta." We just went for a short ride, Bruce had to get home early tonight."

Lois wanted to scream out. She would be relieved when she would not have to hear things about Bruce any longer. She couldn't have stood it here in this atmosphere. Good thing she had made arrangements to go when she did. She picked up the suitcase, took a look around the apartment and started out.

"Leaving us?" Arlene inquired without interest.

Lois turned around and faced her. "Yes, I am," she said. "You didn't think I'd stay at a place where you can't trust people, did you?"

"I think you're mistaken, Lois if you're directing that statement to me," Arlene responded. "A girl can't help it if she's pretty, you know. It isn't my fault that all the fellows like me."

Margaret was standing at the cabinet eating an orange. She burst out laughing. "It must be tough," she said. "Why don't you carry a club with you? I imagine you have to simply fight them off, don't you?"

Arlene never talked back to Margaret. She couldn't think of comebacks that were fitting enough.

"I manage to get around," she said lamely.

"Do you want me to come with you, Lois?" Margaret asked.

Lois thought of the chilly, dark room in the lonesome, old rooming house, thought of lying there through a sleepless night, or if she did go to sleep to waken fitfully, thought of getting up in the morning, going through the motions of getting ready to go to work, alone. She believed it would be easier probably if she had some one with her for the first night.

Q.—Can people other than the imperial family use the chrysanthemum as a badge?—N. N.

A.—They may, but not the 16 petalled chrysanthemum. The badge or flag bearing this design is reserved for royalty. More or fewer petals must be used by all others.

Q.—Is there a portrait of Roger Williams in existence?—B. P.

A.—There is not. When the state of Rhode Island presented a statue of her founder to the nation to be placed in the capitol, the artist had to make the memorial from an ideal conception.

Q.—Does the alligator make any other noise besides hissing?—D. B.

A.—The alligator is noted for the pronounced roaring or bellowing noise which it makes when angered or disturbed. This is remarkable since it is the only saurian or reptile of the alligator group which is known to make a distinctive noise.

Q.—What kind of targets are used in archery tournaments?—J. J. R.

A.—Regulation archer targets are the only ones used in the large tournaments. They are four feet in diameter and weigh from 50 to 60 pounds. They are made of light straw, carefully sewn with bright painted faces.

Q.—What is the meaning of the word, Yoga?—J. F.

A.—Its meaning in Sanskrit is concentration. The essence of this school of philosophy is meditation. Theoretically, at least, its devotees can acquire even in this world entire command over elementary matter by certain ascetic practices.

Q.—How many vessels go through the locks at Sault Ste. Marie in a season?—L. J.

A.—From the opening of navigation on April 10, 1931, to the end of November, 12,812 vessels passed through the Canadian and United States locks at Sault Ste. Marie. That means a vessel locked through every 26 minutes, on the average, day and night, during this period of seven and two-thirds months.

Q.—How is cereal water prepared for an invalid?—A. S. C.

A.—Barley water is made most frequently, but rice, oatmeal, and wheat are all good. One tablespoon cereal, two tablespoons cold water, two cups boiling water. Mix cereal to smooth paste with the cold water, add boiling water, cook in double boiler 30 minutes. Strain, add an equal quantity of water (about equal).

Q.—What are quicksands?—W. S.

A.—Quicksands usually occur on flat shores underlain by stiff clay or other impervious materials. They appear to be formed by the continued collection of water within the sand bank which is prevented from running off by the underlying impervious layer. The grains of quicksand have rounded surfaces. Quicksand is of very light weight. The infiltrated water separates and lubricates the particles, rendering them unable to support heavy weight.

Q.—Give the dates of the founding of the oldest chain stores in this country.—S. W. T.

A.—The credit for founding the first large chain of stores belongs to George H. Hartford, the originator and until his death the president of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company. It was founded in 1859. The Jones Tea company was founded in 1872; and F. W. Woolworth company in 1879.

Q.—What were the Mulligan letters?—S. T. W.

A.—Certain letters written by James G. Blaine to his private business partner, Warren Fisher. They were obtained in some way by James Mulligan, a clerk of Fisher's, and the insinuation made that they showed corruption on Blaine's part in the legislation affecting certain western railroads. Mulligan appeared before a congressional committee investigating Blaine, but Blaine himself regained possession of the letters and read them to congress in June 1876. The letters were the subject of much campaign controversy.

Q.—Please give some facts about the Ferris wheel at the Chicago World's fair.—G. G. P.

A.—The Ferris wheel which operated at the world's fair in Chicago was designed and built by George W. Ferris of Pittsburgh, Pa. It had a diameter of 250 feet; a circumference of 825 feet; and a width of 30 feet. The ends rested upon two skeleton iron towers supported upon concrete foundation. Two wheels in combination formed the revolving structure which depended for strength upon the bicycle wheel principle. Iron rods 2½ inches in diameter were substituted for wires. It had 36 carriages with a seating capacity of 40 each. The total weight with passengers was estimated at 1,200 tons.

Stomach Ulcers

Many people who notice a gnawing feeling when the stomach is empty suffer from an inflammation of the stomach. Such an inflammation often results in an ulceration of the stomach lining. Stomach ulcers are more common than is generally realized. Inflammation, indigestion and excessive acidity are quite ordinary symptoms which are usually present for a long time before the ulcers develop. Those who are neglecting apparently simple digestive troubles should take warning and try to cure the comparatively mild complaint before such a serious condition as ulcers of the stomach has time to develop.

The normal stomach lining is protected in some way, not yet fully known, from being eaten by the digestive juices which readily attack other kinds of flesh, such as the meat which you eat. It seems that when this lining is in a continual state of inflammation the protective power is lessened and a little point of erosion may occur which is attacked by the powerful digestive juices of the stomach. Once an ulcer forms it tends to work in deeper and the body tries to keep the ulcer from eating through the stomach wall by building up and thickening the tissue around the outside of the ulcer. Should the inside of the ulcer be eaten away faster than the outside thickens, a hole is made which necessitates an immediate operation, but even this will not save many cases because of the infection which develops as the stomach's contents are squeezed into the delicate membranes of the abdomen.

Patients who have a severe gastritis or the beginning of stomach ulcers may notice a sharp burning pain after eating due to the irritation produced by the hydrochloric acid in the stomach secretion. In many cases the pain may be relieved by taking an alkali, such as soda or milk of magnesia, which temporarily neutralizes the acid condition and stops the pain. This is a logical temporary treatment and does no harm in spite of reports which you may read to the contrary. The great danger, however, is that one may be deluded by this relief into thinking he is getting well and take no steps to really correct the trouble, which may continue to become worse until it finally reaches an incurable stage. Indeed, long continued stomach ulcers are believed to be one of the principle causes of cancer of the stomach.

Two types of ulcer are found. In one the ulcer is in the stomach, the most common place being near the outlet, an ulcer of this type being called a gastric ulcer; in the second, it is located immediately below the stomach in the upper part of the small intestine and is called duodenal ulcer. The treatment is the same for both. Gastric ulcers are thought to be found more frequently in women and duodenal ulcers more often in men. The duodenal is the more easily diagnosed and frequently shows up well under the x-ray. Ulcers may be acute or chronic, the acute being the more likely to hemorrhage badly and the chronic taking the longer to cure. One ulcer or several may be present. While in some cases an acute single ulcer has healed itself, the general trend of stomach ulcers is not to heal and they often remain unhealed for many years, where no treatment is used. One of the extraordinary facts about ulcers is that, although they may be present for a long time, there are periods when the patient may be remarkably free from any symptoms arising from this grave condition.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Kidney Stones and Oxalic Acid

Question—L. writes: "Please explain the difference, if any between kidney stones and gravel stones. What is the cause of their formation and what should a person subject to kidney attacks do?"

Answer—Kidney stones and renal gravel are caused by the same condition, gravel usually applying to the smaller particles. There is usually a lowered alkalinity of the blood and possibly an excess of oxalic acid in the diet. Avoid the following foods: Rhubarb, sorrel, tea, coffee, pepper, chocolate, spinach and cranberries. No other foods contain sufficient oxalic acid to be injurious. Oxalic acid can only accumulate when the metabolism of the body is faulty. Proper fasting and dieting will almost always correct the metabolism.

Oleomargarine

Question—Mrs. A. C. T. asks: "Would you recommend oleomargarine as being healthful?"

Answer — In the experiments which I have conducted with oleomargarine I have found it to be quite a wholesome substitute for butter if used in an otherwise balanced diet.

When to Use Iodine

Question—Miss Lilly Q writes: "I have been told that iodine is good for the blood. Is this right? If so, should I take it before or after meals?"

Answer—A very small amount of iodine is required by the blood, but there is some evidence to indicate that iodine should not be used without a doctor's prescription, since in some cases it has proved injurious and has actually increased the size of some goiters. I believe that the best form of iodine is that which is obtained in sea foods, fruits and vegetables.

she admitted, "I'd be terribly glad to have you."

Margaret said all right then, that she would go with Lois and the two of them picked up the heavy suitcase and started out. Arlene could not resist flinging a parting thrust.

"What do you want me to tell Bruce, if he asks for you?" Lois looked at her steadily. Arlene did not look up. She continued to file her finger nails as though she had asked the most casual question instead of one which had gone through a person's heart.

"He won't ask for me," Lois said calmly. "All that is over, thanks to you."

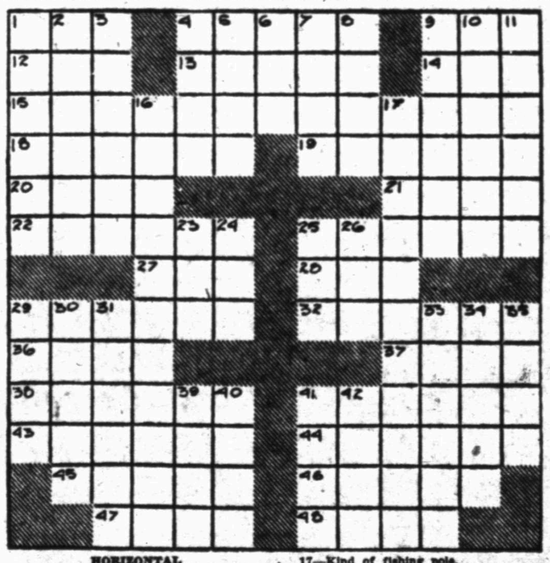

"I'm sure he'll always be interested. He told me as much tonight."

"People are never interested in another person when they hurt them as Bruce Durand has hurt me," Lois replied coolly. She was sorry she had said it after she had got outside. She had intended to leave the impression with Arlene that she hadn't cared at all. But what did it matter? She didn't seem to care if the whole world knew it. When one was hurt, one couldn't very well keep covering up one's feelings forever.

Lois was glad that Margaret was with her when she climbed into bed that night. Having some one near kept her from weeping loudly. She settled herself in the big feather pillow. She could not keep a few tears from falling because her heart was aching dreadfully, but things were easier than if she had been alone.

Such riding and such stroking had never been seen before on this field. A crowd of about 3,000 attended.

CHILDRESS, Texas, Feb. 14.—After trailing for more than three quarters of the game, Coach C. V. Ballard's Childress Bobcats staged a sensational last quarter to crash out a 26 to 23 victory over the Kirkland Eagle cagers here Saturday night to capture the Childress county championship. The Cat victory gave them the right to compete in the district tournament here next week.

Taylor of Kirkland led the scoring parade for his crew with nine markers. "Unk" Johnson led the Cats with nine and later hung up three field goals.

TIGERS PLAN FOR TOURNEY

Special to The Record News.

ELECTRA, Texas, Feb. 14.—Coach E. M. Tampke's Tiger charges have several days of stiff workouts ahead of them in preparation for the district basket ball tournament at Wichita Falls Friday. The Tigers earned the right to play in the district by defeating the Cashion Cats Friday night, 28 to 27, to win the county championship. The Cats were favored to win and led the scoring in the first three quarters. The Tigers rallied and managed to get within one point of the Cats a few seconds before the game was over. "Dobbin" Cloniger, Tiger guard, received credit for winning the game by throwing a long field goal just before the final whistle.

Parr, Smith, Foy, McDannald, Cloniger, Keltz, and Lane are among the Tigers who are expected to battle against Wichita Falls' Coyotes Friday morning. Although advance dope has the Coyotes as heavy favorites, the Tigers are expected to play a great game. Electra's hopefuls have been playing better basket ball recently than they have this season.

Hollis Only Unbeaten Team in Conference

Special to The Record News.

HOLLIS, Okla., Feb. 14.—The only undefeated basket ball team in the Southwestern conference seems to be no other than Hollis and as dope comes in from all sections of the country it seems that whoever captures the state flag must face the powerful Wildcats from Hollis.

Coach Dickerson of Vinson predicts that Hollis will cause the favorites a lot of trouble and goes on to say that "According to dope, Cushing, Okla., (recognized as one of the best teams in Oklahoma) has only a seven-point better team than Vinson's youngsters, and Vinson, like all teams in southwestern Oklahoma, with one exception, has a crop of first year men."

That one exception is Hollis, with Vanderford and Chapman, rangy veterans, showing the way. Chapman is outstanding center of this section and is taking the place of Gowers, Gould, Okla., center of last year as the tip-in specialist of this section.

The Wildcat basket ball team meets their opponents with the same fighting spirit of the Wildcat football eleven that carried off the flag past season.

Low Blow Law Should Be Enforced Or Dropped, Avers Squire Runyon

(Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.)

By DAMON RUNYON

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—What puzzles me no little is this:

If a low punch (i. e., a punch below the belt line) isn't a foul under the rules of the New York Boxing commission, what right has a referee to admonish a fighter when one of his punches drops low?

Answer me that one, judge!

If a punch isn't a foul, it must be fair.

All right, then, why should a referee bother about it one way or the other?

The New York commission holds that with the new-fangled doo-dads worn by boxers in this state, punches once supposed to be disabling are now harmless.

Yet it also says that a boxer whose punches happen to drop low, shall be penalized by the loss of the round in which the low punches occur.

Why penalize a boxer for a punch that isn't foul?

Suppose, for example, that a fighter in this state kept punching an opponent low for nine consecutive rounds.

Under the rules of the commission, he would be penalized by the judges and referee scoring every round against him, but the referee couldn't disqualify him for the low blows.

Suppose that in the ninth round he knocks his opponent as dead as a mackerel with a low swat. What happens?

Why, under the commission rules, though said opponent has won every round on the low-blow score, he must nevertheless be counted out on the low blow by the time keeper, and the low-puncher gets credit for a knockout.

It doesn't make sense, that all.

As the no-foul system of the New York commission now works out, we frequently have the spectacle of a referee gesturing at a fighter for punches that are not supposed to hurt, and are not illegal if they produce a knockout.

The New York ringworms, who do not seem to be familiar with the rule to this day, though it has been in vogue since about June, 1930, bawl in fury at the offending gladiator, and the referee increases his gestures.

Yet if one of those low punches brought a gladiator to the deck, the referee would have to count him out, so what the dickens is he gesturing about? Either the no-foul rule is all wrong, or it is all right, and if it is all right, the commission should instruct its referees to stop making a fuss about low punches, unless, of course, they are palpably intended to be low.

And even in that case, under the rule of the commission, they can not be called foul, though they knock a gladiator cold. If the rule is wrong, do away with it. But if it is right, let's have no shilly-shallying about it.

So far in this state, the rule seems to have worked out well. I have heard of no disabled gladiators since they were required to wear the foul-armor, and we no longer have our fistic contests ruined by fighters falling to the canvas bawling foul.

But we have 'em marred by referees making too much of minor technicalities.

It seems to me the referees ought to be encouraging the boys to hurl that leather, rather than trying to cramp their style. And if one of these referees will kindly explain to me their furious gesticulations over punches that are not foul in this state, I will be greatly obliged.

On the Sidelines

By BRIAN BELL

Steve Hamas, up and coming heavyweight, enjoys one distinction not far from unique in the boxing game. He does not think he is the best fighter in the world—yet.

STEVE HAMAS

The former collegian realizes that while he made a long stride forward in his career by knocking out Tommy Loughran, nevertheless Tommy had seen better boxing days when he tagged him.

The 66-year-old Charlie Harvey, manager of the Penn Stater, is as modest as his protege. He thinks that Steve will be quite a boxer some day, but he is not claiming the heavyweight championship—yet.

In the opinion of the veteran Harvey, Ernie Schaaf is the outstanding heavyweight in the game today.

"Possibly he could take his stable-mate, Jack Sharkey," says Harvey, "although I wouldn't make a promise.

"I will say this about the heavyweight division—with the exception of Schmeling, the champion, and Schaaf, the present topnotchers have all passed their peak.

"They may go smash all of a sudden, their slipping may be slow, but they are definitely on the down grade.

"Now is the time for a good, young heavyweight to step into the picture. There are only two obstacles—Schmeling and Schaaf—the others are ready to be taken."

Hamas, the boxer, and Hamas, the football player, are two different figures. Training has disposed of the "football legs" and the Hamas of today seems much faster than the green boy who went from college and the amateur ranks into the professional ring.

He may get somewhere at that. The fact that he knows he still has a lot to learn will help.

Ring Mercy

Baseball is full of plays "for the book," but in a boxing bout the other night a referee, who through charity will be unidentified, pulled one for the boxing "book."

Two fighters were going at each other hammer and tongs when one stopped a punch with his eye. Blood flowed freely and it was not immediately apparent to what extent the boy was injured. The referee halted the bout and led the half blinded boxer to the corner the official thought belonged to him.

"What about it?" he asked the manager, who climbed up to the ring. "Shall I stop it?"

"Sure, stop it," said the manager, and the referee walked over and held up the hand of the boy whose manager had said to "stop it."

The referee had asked advice from the wrong manager.

Giddy Golf

Two unusual golf tournaments are being played in the Far West. One, to which only players connected with the lettuce and cantaloupe industry are eligible, will be played over the Del Rio course in the Imperial Valley of California, 115 feet below sea level.

The other competition is designed to bring together players who have scored holes in one since Jan. 1, 1929.

At first blush, one would think there would be comparatively few eligibles, but there seems to have been a bear market for holes in one in southern California for the last two years and the entries are numerous.

BUCS READY TO OPEN SEASON

Manager Pratt Has 16 Vets Returning

By BILL PARKER
Associated Press Sports Writer

GALVESTON, Feb. 14.—Manager Del Pratt of the Galveston Buccaneers can start the 1932 Texas league season today with a substantial baseball lineup.

When Pratt calls in his help for spring training there will be 16 holdovers around whom he will erect his 1932 team, and it promises to be a good one.

Pratt is not a youngster in baseball. Years in the majors and minors have taught him anything can happen during a season, and he believes this is his year to be among the leaders if he can get half of the good breaks that all pennant winning teams must have.

The Galveston playing roster lists 30 Buccaneers. Of the present crop, some will walk the gang plank after spring training, but not one of the 16 holdovers if all come through as expected.

Six Veteran Pitchers

Six veteran pitchers are listed—Edgar Carroll, Russell Cromer, Art Seydler, James J. Ryan, C. O. Thurman and Henry Thormahlen. All are right-hand chunkers with the exception of Thormahlen.

Here's what these six pitchers accomplished last year:

Carroll won 2 and lost 12; Cromer won 6 and lost 5; Seydler won 8 and lost 6; Thurman won 11 and lost 11; Thormahlen won 9 and lost 9 and Ryan worked in less than five games, winning none and losing one.

Pratt has signed a flock of new pitchers. Outstanding among them is George Oliver Darrow from Pueblo of the Western league. He worked in 32 games last season, won 18 and lost 9. Frank Tubbs from Oklahoma City of the Western league is another veteran pitcher who is expected to help Galveston.

Pratt admits his problem is finding a catcher to replace Ben April who will be with Scranton of the New York-Penn league this year. Edgar C. Skelton of Shawnee, Okla., and E. L. Hoffman from Kingsville, Texas, are the only prospects lined up so far.

First Sack Unfilled

It is apparent that Sidney Cohen, a southpaw first baseman of several years minor league experience, has an inside track for the initial sack. Pratt is just about set on the rest of his infield. Harvey Ballew at second, Keith Molesworth at shortstop and Jake Wilson at third is the current outlay.

A battle looms for outfield berths. Veterans returning are Ed Speed, R. C. Bell, Larmon Cox, John Rizzo and Gene Rye. Speer has been with Pratt several years. He is one of the best ball hawks in the league but his .232 batting average last year wasn't pleasing. Bell can be ranked as a fixture. He played 104 games last year, batted .273 and fielded .952.

Rye and Cox are hard hitters. Rye experienced a bad year in 1931 after returning from a major league tryout. Cox finished last season with a batting average of .276. If Cox proves a holdout, John Rizzo will compete with Rye for one of the outfield jobs. Rizzo batted .278 last year.

Pratt has the material. He believes his outfielders will hit harder and more often this season. He hopes to pick three or four outstanding rookies from his spring training material.

Wilbarger Title to Be Decided Tuesday Night

Special to The Record News

VERNON, Texas, Feb. 14.—At a meeting held at the Vernon High school Saturday morning it was decided that the Harrold and Odell basket ball squads, champions of classes A and B respectively, will meet Tuesday evening, Feb. 16, at Harrold, to determine the county championship.

The right to meet the Hornets was won by Odell when they defeated Fargo 40 to 28 in a game played at the Vernon gymnasium Friday evening, Feb. 10.

SLED RIDERS ARE DISGUSTED

U. S. Team Leads but Turns In Poor Time

By EDWARD J. NEIL
Associated Press Sports Writer

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Feb. 14.—Seven teams of disgusted bob sled riders, led by Billy Fiske and Hank Homburger, battled a sluggish Olympic slide today, turned in embarrassingly slow times for two heats, and then openly rebelled at the idea of humiliatnig both themselves and the bob run further before a crowd of 25,000 in the final two heats of the deferred four-man Olympic championships.

"If you insist on making us race under these conditions," Paul Stevens, giant pivotman on the world record holding Homburger sled, told Erwin Hachmann, one of the two Europeans in charge of the course, you'll go on without us. We're through for today. It's a travesty on bob racing."

The major part of an immense crowd, lining the mile and a half chute down Mt. Van Hoevenberg, thought so, too, as Billy Fiske, defending the Olympic championship for the United States, turned in ambling runs of 2 minutes, 52-100 seconds, and 1:59.16 to lead the sledders of five nations after the first two heats.

Homburger, pilot of the Lake Placid "Red Devils," favorites to win the last of the championships in the winter Olympics that closed officially yesterday, could push his sled down the usually lightning slope in only 2:01.77 and 2:01.00 to trail Fiske's crew by 3.18 seconds in total time.

Hans Kilian, German pilot who has seen two sets of his countrymen rocket down the chute and crash through the awesome curves, sending six to the hospital, two still in plaster casts, led the five foreign teams with runs of 2:03.11 and 2:01.34 and put him 1.59 seconds behind Homburger in total time.

The big crowd, drawn by the lure of the breath-taking thrills and spills of the run up to today, was just as disgusted as the riders, as the sleds, plowing through slush and soft snow, came down the slide in times that did not even approach those made last week by the two-man bobiets in the Olympic championships.

Originally the drivers had agreed to race all four heats of the championship today, but their wholesale protests, when ordered to take the track for the start of the third heat, forced the judges to postpone the third and final heats until tomorrow morning.

Missouri Soph Paces Big Six

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 14. (UP)—A sophomore forward, Johnny Cooper, is leading Missouri down the home stretch to the Big Six conference basket ball championship.

Shamrock Irishmen Defeat Miami, 25-18

Special to The Record News.

SHAMROCK, Texas, Feb. 14.—With the return of Cherry to the lineup the Shamrock Irishmen rallied Friday night and took a fast and rough game from the Miami High school quintet to the tune of 25-18.

The entire Irish cage squad worked well and a smooth offensive motion placed the Shamrock boys in the lead throughout most of the clash.

This game was one of a series of three to be played Friday night. Only two were played as the Miami invaders failed to bring a junior boys' team. The Irish Lassies ran away from the Miami sextet to take the game by a score of 32-8. Smooth and efficient work on the offense and defense combined to carry the Lassies over their opponents in the manner they have gone through most of their games so far this season. Boys and girls teams played return games at Miami Saturday night.

Coach FRANCIS SCHMIDT

DALLAS, Feb. 14. (AP)—Francis A. Schmidt may be just another name elsewhere in the United States, but in the Southwest conference it means the "miracle man" of basket ball.

Schmidt's remarkable run of basket ball titles started in 1925 while he was coaching at the University of Arkansas. That year—and for the next four—his loopers won.

Then Schmidt left the Razorbacks to become athletic director at Texas Christian university, Fort Worth, Texas, and proceeded to pick up where he left off at Arkansas.

One of the greatest of Southwest conference players, developed last year by Schmidt, is back on the team this season — Adolph (Too Tall) Dietzel, elongated center. Dietzel established a new conference scoring record last season with 168 points and tied the individual mark for one game with 26.

Sitting on the players' bench, squinting at his players as they dribble, pass and shoot, Coach Schmidt is confident his boys will successfully defend their title.

When they lost their opening conference game to Baylor, Schmidt told his Frogs to jump and jump quick if they were to play for him.

In their second game they jumped into a 47 to 22 victory over Rice, one of the strongest bidders for this year's title.

Schmidt has no pet plays. He drills his men to handle the ball fast and with accuracy. He says that's the sole secret of six conference championships in a row.

THREE INDOOR MEETS PLANNED

Record Breakers on This Week's Program

NEW YORK, Feb. 14. (AP)—Featuring the same array of stars who set a record breaking pace in the Millrose and Boston A. A. meets, the indoor track and field season goes into high again this week with three meets on the program.

The entire collection of record breakers, headed by Gene Venzke, whose mile running feats have given rise to reports that he commutes on foot from his home at Pottstown, Pa., to the meets in New York, is slated to appear at the annual New York Athletic club games in Madison Square garden Wednesday.

The Seton Hall college meet at Newark Friday and the Meadowbrook club games at Philadelphia carry the runners through to the climax of their preparations for the national indoor championships the following Monday.

On the same fast eleven-lap track there he ran the mile in 44:11 1-5 for a world's indoor record, Venzke will face his leading rival, Leo Lermond of the New York A. C., and a field which includes Carl Coan of Pennsylvania, Glenn Dawon of the University of Oklahoma and Frank Crowley of Manhattan college.

George Spitz, the ineligible New York university star who was the other record breaker of the Millrose meet, will take another crack at the world's indoor high jump record of 6 feet, 8⅛ inches he set Saturday. Among his rivals is Ben Hedges, 1928 Olympic jumper who is returning to competition for another Olympic year.

Dempsey Must Quit Barnstorming Tour And Train Steadily, Vets Argue

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
United Press Staff Correspondent

DETROIT, Feb. 14.—Jack Dempsey has a better chance to win back the heavyweight title this year than he did when he fought Gene Tunney the second time in 1927, according to Johnny Kilbane, former featherweight champion, and Matt Hinkel, veteran referee.

But Kilbane and Hinkel believe Dempsey must quit his barnstorming and adopt a new training program. They agree that Dempsey's punch is a s good as the day he beat Jess Willard.

"Dempsey must avoid sleeping in hotels, making sleeper jumps and keeping irregular hours if he wants to come back," said Kilbane, who held the featherweight title from 1912 to 1923.

"He should retire to a training camp and begin a long siege of conditioning. He needs steady work over a long period to build his strength back to the maximum. He needs the proper rest, and he needs to concentrate on the task before him. He can't continue his present program and hope to make a real bid for the title."

Kilbane has been a training camp operator.

Hinkel referred the Dempsey-Christner bout at Cleveland Thursday night. He suggests the following program for the champion:

1—Pick a camp with pure air and favorable climate.

2—Forget speed. Build up the legs, body and reserve strength.

3—Train slowly but steadily for five or six months before fighting.

Since resuming the second phase of his tour, Dempsey has done little training. He looks tired and drawn about the face when he does not get his proper rest.

Hinkel thinks Dempsey can win back the title in two bouts—by beating Primo Carnera and Max Schmeling.

'BIG FOUR' ON WEEK'S CARD

Dempsey, Hamas, Canzoneri, Rosenbloom to Scrap

NEW YORK, Feb. 14. (AP)—From the standpoint of general interest, the big national boxing schedule this week resolves itself into a "big four" with Jack Dempsey, Steve Hamas, Tony Canzoneri and Maxie Rosenbloom the component parts.

Dempsey's exhibition tour brings him into Chicago at the stadium Thursday night when he will clash with King Levinsky, slugging Chicago heavyweight, in a four-round match. On the same card, Billy Jones, Philadelphia negro, will meet George Nichols of Buffalo in one of the semifinals of the National Boxing association's light heavyweight tournaments.

Rosenbloom, still regarded as the light heavyweight champion in most quarters, tackles Bob Godwin of Atlanta in a 10-round match, billed as for the title, at Daytona Beach, Fla., Wednesday night.

Canzoneri, lightweight champion of the world, faces Lew Massey of Philadelphia in a 10-round non-title bout at Philadelphia tomorrow night.

Hamas, fresh from a sensational knockout victory over Tommy Loughran here, will tackle Armand Emanuel of San Francisco in a 10-round heavyweight duel at Los Angeles Tuesday night.

Madison Square garden's card here Friday night is topped by a 10-round struggle between young Terry, Trenton, N. J., middleweight and Charley (Chick) Devlin, Vancouver.

Tardy Blizzards Find States Set For Bird Relief

Special to The Record News

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Falling snow puts more men to work, but throws wild birds out of "jobs," says a bulletin of the American Game association. Winter feeding activities in practically every northern state were prepared to get under way with the approach of the snowy season, when the birds' work of foraging for food may be brought to a standstill in heavily blanketed countryside.

State game officials have organized bird feeding programs, which they say is necessary under modern conditions to keep many species of birds, and especially bob-white quail and other ground-feeding varieties, from being depleted because of insufficient nourishment during periods of snow and ice. The practice of cutting away brush and weed patches, grazing woodlots and replacing hedgerows with modern fencing has reduced the natural winter food supply.

The Wisconsin conservation department, in addition to providing 80 central food stations for prairie chickens, grouse, quail, pheasants, partridges and wild turkeys in various concentration and experimental areas, has recruited nearly 200 sportsmen's clubs in a feeding program. The state is contributing $11.50 to each club that furnishes a like amount for establishing and operating feeding stations in its territory.

Missouri officials have enlisted the aid of Boy Scouts, rural postmen, railroads and organizations in feeding the birds. Other states are prepared to carry on local programs through field men. Many clubs have employed jobless men to gather wild seeds during the abnormally warm weather for distribution later, and many have taken advantage of the low price of wheat to obtain a supply for birds.

Game experts are suggesting wheat, buckwheat, millet, kaffir corn and cracked corn for game birds. One of the most effective feeding stations for game birds is said to be shocks of unhusked corn left near brush patches. Every feeding shelter should be arranged so that the birds may escape in any direction if attacked by enemies.

Jap Mat Wonder To Tackle Russian

Failing in his quest last week to bring to Wichita Falls a man to best Russian George Ligosky, Promotor Whitey Grovo announced Sunday he had signed Higami, the Wonder Jap, to meet the Russian this week in the feature event of the weekly wrestling show. After failing himself to throw the bearded Russian in a grudge battle of fists, Grovo brought in Paul Orth last week. Orth lost to the Russian when he "threw himself" by diving out of the ring. This week Higami with his ju-jitsu wrestling will attempt to turn the trick.

The Russian with his black beard and blacker disposition in the ring, has at last seemed to find his stride after a poor start when the well-known "Dempsey hold" would catch him unprepared and put him to sleep. With both the beard and the well-known "buttons" for Higami to work on one of the fastest and best matches of the year is promised, according to Promotor Grovo.

Bob Taylor, the Terre Haute flash who worked here a couple of weeks ago with Silent Condell, will be back again this week on the semifinal. As his opponent Taylor takes on Jack Calahan, a newcomer in the Wichita Falls ring. There will also be another preliminary added to the card.

TOY SHOW ON IN NEW YORK

Child's Paradise Viewed By Nation's Buyers

By DOROTHY ROE

NEW YORK, Feb. 14. (US)—The gingham dog and the calico cat are disporting themselves these days at the New York toy fair.

Thousands of dollars of teddy bears, stacks of lead soldiers and mechanical gadgets that go round and round—there's every known toy on exhibit at the annual convention and show of the toy manufacturers of the U. S. A., now in session on three floors of the Hotel McAlpin.

Any little boy or girl, wandering inadvertantly into the midst of the endless displays would leap into dervishes of joy.

Child's Paradise

For it's a child's dream of paradise, a modern and businesslike model of Santa Claus land.

These are the toys that will bulge Christmas stockings next December, and the toy buyers are looking them over with critical eyes, going calmly about their business of pinch-hitting for Santa Claus.

Almost 500 leading toy manufacturers are exhibiting their wares at the toy fair, which is in progress at the McAlpin, at the toy center on Fifth avenue and in the individual offices around Madison and Union square.

Dolls Well-Dressed

Dolls must be well-dressed this season, according to the dictum of the dollmakers.

No longer can a self-respecting doll be dressed in the cast-off garments of her mother. She must have a wardrobe all her own, and it must follow the newest fashions in children's clothes.

Every up-to-the-minute doll these days carries her own wardrobe trunk, which contains a dozen changes of costume and includes everything from bathing suit and beach pajamas to party dresses and strictly tailored street frocks.

Animal Toys Favored

Washable animal toys of oilcloth, gingham and calico are in high favor, and a new addition to the toy zoo is an elephant made of tufted chenille, of the bath-mat variety.

Every imaginable gymnastic contrivance is on display, for those children who are athletically inclined. No longer does the young son of the house have to chin himself on an old piece of gas pipe in the back yard. He has a complete gymnasium outfit, all gaily painted and compact enough to fit into any odd corner.

Motor boats with real engines, scooters that you don't have to scoot, elaborate railroad trains with complex systems of tracks and switches, airplanes that fly and zeppelins that whiz—they're all there, as carefully constructed as their mansize models, for the amusement and education of young America.

Belle Livingston Is 'Washed Up' On Reno And Yearns For New York

RENO, Nev., Feb. 14. (US)—Belle Livingston, former New York night club hostess, today announced definitely she was all "washed up" with Reno.

"Back to the big city I'm going, boys and girls," she told the crowd in one of the elite gambling halls. "This life in the wide open spaces of the golden west—where you got to bring your own gold—doesn't agree with me."

But before Belle shakes the dust of Reno from her heels she's going to give a swanky farewell party next Sunday night.

"I'm inviting the governor, the mayor and all the 'big shots' of Nevada," she proclaimed. "We're going to whoop 'er up."

Prohis Are Rough

"No, prohibition agents are not on my invitation list. They've made things too miserable for me. They are nice boys but they play too rough for me."

Belle came out to Reno last July amid a lot of noise and hilarity and subsequently opened a night club she called the Cow Shed.

When the day raiders ruined business for her she went to Texas for a while but returned and opened a smart luncheon club in connection with a popular downtown bar.

She had the place decorated like a school room with the latest Reno divorce gossip chalked on blackboards. She called the club "The Alimony School" but it didn't last long.

Idea for New York

Belle has some grand ideas for starting a real wild west Reno club in New York City with an "advice-for-divorce-seekers" bureau on the side.

"I could advise my clients about attorneys in Reno," she remarked, "and I could warn them about all the pitfalls of the divorce colony.

"I could have a large map of Reno on the wall of the club and point all the strategic places and tell 'em all what to see and how to get there.

"I could give 'em the real low-down on everything."

But just where the finances are coming for the club Belle isn't certain as yet.

"Maybe I'll find a millionaire," she smiled. "Who knows!"

Wellington Boy Scouts Will Clean Up City

Special to The Record News

WELLINGTON, Texas, Feb. 14.—Boy Scouts of Wellington will stage a clean up week to rid the city of undesirable rubbish, which not only hinders the appearance of the town, but encourages the spread of disease in the community, it was announced Friday by J. L. Anderson, assistant scoutmaster.

The campaign will begin on March 1, and will include the yard, streets, and alleys of the city, Mr. Anderson said. Through this means the scouts hope to eliminate much of the diseases that usually occur at this time of year, it was said.

Quanah Tax Payments Assure Full School Term

Special to The Record News.

QUANAH, Texas, Feb. 14.—Sixty-three per cent of the taxes of Quanah independent school district have been paid, according to Tax Assessor Frank Womack. This, coupled with the state funds, insures enough money for a nine-month term for Quanah schools.

A ready response to an appeal made some few weeks ago for every one to pay their school taxes to enable the schools to retain credits through nine months term brought the sum total paid to date to 63 per cent.

WALTERS JOINS IN GAS FIGHT

City Officials Back People In Asking Rate Cut

Special to The Record News.

WALTERS, Okla., Feb. 14.—City commissioners here have joined the people of Walters in a fight against the Lone Star Gas company, and its local subsidiary, the Community Natural Gas company, for a reduction in rates.

City commissioners took up the fight in behalf of the citizens after an appeal had been filed by patrons of the gas company asking the commissioners to intercede. Responding to the appeal, they voted to employ counsel and commence immediately to press the litigation to an early, favorable conclusion.

Joining of the commissioners with citizens grew out of a fight which has raged for more than a year with the gas company. More than 400 patrons filed a petition asking for relief.

City Attorney J. C. Norman and Toby Harris have been employed to represent the city of Walters in the case. Citizens are now paying 75 cents per thousand cubic feet for gas.

SPEAKER PAYS LEE TRIBUTE

Kay Bible Class Hears Talk By Marrs

Elements in the personality of Robert E. Lee which made him one of "the greatest military commanders of all time" and a "most lovable Christian character" were reviewed by Judge John P. Marrs in an address Sunday morning before members of the Kay Bible class of the First Methodist church.

Filling the place of Roy J. Daniel, regular teacher of the class who was absent Sunday, Judge Marrs urged the value of studying the lives of three great Americans whose birthdays are grouped closely together at this period—Washington, Lincoln and Lee.

Thoroughness in the performance of any task, a principle espoused and practiced conspicuously by General Lee, was urged by the speaker as an admirable rule for work in any field.

Judge Marrs spoke as follows:

"I regret that you are going to have to put up with a poor substitute today, since your teacher, Mr. Roy Daniel, cannot be present. The president of your class called me at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon and said that our teacher would not be present and that I must get up something to say to you myself. So, gentlemen, I am sure you will not expect much out of me, with so little time in which to try to get something together worth saying.

Three Great Men

This day falls right in between the birthdays of three of America's greatest men, Washington, Lincoln and Lee, men differing widely in many respects, and yet in some ways very similar. They were all men of great courage, patience and love of their fellowmen. All of these men seem to have inherited from their parents clean healthy bodies and minds, and received at the hands of their wonderful mothers the best possible discipline and training in their early childhood. They all stand out in character and disposition like mountain peaks. It is said that nearly all great men had great mothers, and that they generally inherit more strongly from their mothers than their fathers, and the same is true of great women who inherit more strongly from their fathers. This is natural and as it should be to balance up their characters. We may mention only one woman, a recent visitor to our city—Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen—who is certainly very much like her noble father, and who is building for herself a reputation for true greatness second to no woman in America.

"One hundred and twenty-five years ago in old Virginia, Robert Edward Lee was born. He came of good parents. His father was Lieut. Col. Henry Lee of Revolutionary fame, sometimes called "Light Horse' Harry Lee, who was a distinguished cavalry leader under General Washington and who was afterwards governor of Virginia, serving his state three terms, and served several terms in congress. Col. Henry Lee was also a brilliant public speaker, and was selected by congress, upon the death of Washington, to deliver the principal address at his memorial services. It was he who coined the well known phrase about the father of his country, 'First in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen.'

"Robert E. Lee was well educated, well trained and well disciplined, receiving the major portion of his training in the splendid private schools of the day, and the finishing touches in the United States Military academy at West Point, where he graduated second in his class, and did not receive a single demerit during his entire four-year course. He distinguished himself as one of the most thorough and painstaking students who ever attended West Point. He excelled in the perfection of his finished work. No task, however difficult, was ever abandoned by him until it was absolutely the best his skill and ability could make it.

"Oh! If more of our boys and girls of today in our splendid public schools would only realize the great importance of thoroughness in their work. We learn a little about a great many different subjects, but really master few or none.

"It was Lincoln who said: 'I am not bound to win, but I am bound to be true. I am not bound to succeed, but I am bound to live up to what light I have. I must stand by anybody that stands right, stand with him while he is right and part with him when he goes wrong.'

Mother's Training

"It takes a strong man to live up to that. None but a man of character long-disciplined can do it. So few of us really do the best we can. We are not willing to go through with the long hours of hard work, to train and discipline our natures or talents. We call some of these great men geniuses. We say Edison was a genius, and Edison said that genius consists of 10 per cent ability and 90 per cent industry—hard work. Too many of us quit studying, quit growing or learning when we graduate from school. This should be just the beginning of our education, our improvement.

"This distinguished father of Robert E. Lee died when the boy was only 11 years of age, and his mother being an invalid, heavy burdens rested upon his young shoulders. His talented mother was reputed to be most methodical, systematic and perfect in her housekeeping and training of her boy. She was a splendid disciplinarian, and above all things she taught her noble son the important lesson of self-denial and self control.

"So that by both nature and training he possessed great poise and an equitable disposition.

"At the breaking out of the Mexican war in 1844, Gen. Winfield Scott selected young Lieutenant Lee as one of his assistants and counselors in military tactics and engineering, and pronounced him a young man of all kinds of merit. And at the end of the Mexican war, General Scott said: "My success in Mexico was largely due to the skill, valor and undaunted energy of Robert E. Lee," and more than once was heard to say that, 'Lee is the greatest military genius of America.'

"A few years ago when Marshall Foch was in America and visiting the tomb of Lee, he said that Lee was one of the greatest military commanders of all time, and that his French military experts have so pronounced him.

"How strange it is that a military chieftain like Lee should also be looked upon as one of the kindest, humblest and most lovable Christian characters of modern times!

"In the late fifties, Lee was stationed in the West to fight back the Indians, and he spent many months in this part of Texas, at Fort Chadbourn, Fort Griffin and perhaps at Fort Belknap in Young county, and often traversed Wichita, Clay and Archer counties.

"It seems well established now that when war broke out between the states, General Lee was offered by President Lincoln the leadership of the Union army, and it is known that Gen. Winfield Scott said that Lee was worth 50,000 men to the union.

Vanquished Honored

"It is also well known that Lee did not believe in slavery, nor in any state seceding from the union, but that the matters could be better settled in council chambers than on the battle field, but when his own state of Virginia left the union, he did not hesitate to go with his home state.

"Among the highest tributes every paid Lee was one by the son of a Union soldier, Hon. Gutzon Borglum, the famous sculptor. It was he who secured the passage through a Republican congress of the law providing for the coining of the Stone mountain half dollars, on which are embossed the likeness of Lee and Jackson, and with which the work on Stone mountain in commemoration of the valor of the South was to be paid for. He first secured the recommendation of President Calvin Coolidge, a Republican president, and it passed both houses of congress, strongly Republican, without a dissenting vote. This is the first time in the history of the world when a vanquished foe was thus honored by the victors. What a tribute to the fairness, tolerance and justice of our Americanism.

"How appropriate it was for dear old Virginia to bring forth the statues of Washington and Lee for the national hall of fame, as the best loved and most representative sons of the grand old state.

"In closing I must quote to you the tribute of the famous Ben Hill of Georgia to Lee's character:

"'He was a foe without hate, a friend without treachery, a soldier without cruelty, a victim without murmuring. He was a public officer without vices, a private citizen without wrong, a neighbor without reproach, a Christian without hypocracy, and a man without guilt. He was Caeser without his ambition, Frederick without his tyranny, Napoleon without his selfishness, and Washington without his reward. He was as obedient to authority as a servant and royal in authority as a king. He was as gentle as a woman in life, pure and modest as a virgin in thought, watchful as a Roman vestal, submissive to law as Socrates, and grand in battle as Achilles.'"

Modern Civilization Would Perish Without Christianity, Says Martin

"Infidelity can not meet human experience; it may answer arguments of historians and learned theologians; but when tested by human experience, it goes down in defeat," declared Judge P. A. Martin Sunday morning in his talk before the Men's Bible class of the Floral Heights Methodist church.

The experience of individual Christians, but of the world generally, also answers the arguments of infidels, the speaker said.

"Were it not for the savor of the salt that we have left in the world in these troubled days," he urged, "civilization would soon break down, and pass into history with a page written in blood."

Judge Martin's address in part was as follows:

"In all the ministry of Jesus, he saw no more pathetic figure than that of the man born blind who sat and begged his living from the passers-by in the city of Jerusalem. He was 'of age' more than 30 years old. No one was liable for his support and no public institution was open for him. That he was a child of sin and that his blindness was sent upon him as punishment for sin, either of himself or of his parents, was the current belief of all who passed by. Through the dragging years he sat and begged. He never looked upon the face of his mother or his father; never beheld the wonders of the temple. Night and day were all the same to him; all was darkness and despair and hunger and thirst. Unmindful of the rising sun and the changing moon and of the shining stars above, he sat and begged his meager existence from an unfriendly and uncharitable generation whose religion taught them that his infirmity was the direct result of sin. Can you imagine a more pitable condition than his?

Blind Man Sees

"But as is generally the case with the blind, his sense of hearing was doubtless very acute. And it came to pass one day that the poor blind man heard a religious colloquy between some passing people. Someone said 'Master, who did sin, this man or his parents, that he was born blind?' And he heard the sweetest, gentlest voice he had ever heard answer 'neither has this man sinned nor his parents; but that the works of God should be made manifest in him.' Of course the blind man did not understand how the works of God should be made manifest in him; but the voice continued 'as long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world' and then the stranger, with deft and tender hands annointed his sightless eyes with soft clay and said, 'now go, wash in the pool of Siloam.' The wondering blind man did as he was bidden and came away from the pool seeing for the first time in his life.

"Reading 'between the lines' of the text, we can easily imagine how he gazed in wonder upon the beauties of old Jerusalem; how he hastened to meet his parents, his brothers and sisters, his neighbors and friends, to tell them the glad news that the windows of his soul were at last open and he could look the world in the face, free from his awful infirmity. And the neighbors seeing him gathered round him and questioned him as to how this miracle was performed and doubtless to hundreds he related the simple story:

"'A man called Jesus made clay and annointed my eyes and said unto me, go to the pool of Siloam and wash; and I went and washed and received sight.'

"This was all he knew about it at the time. The news reached the high class Jews of the synagogue and they called him before them for questioning. They also called his parents and heard from them that he had been blind from birth. They demanded that he give God the praise and told him that this Jesus was a sinner and then the poor fellow, borne down by their aggressive arguments gave voice to the most unanswerable argument in the world in these words:

"'Whether he be a sinner or no, I know not; one thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see.'

"And then the Jews of the synagogue reviled him and finally cast him out of the synagogue as an heretic and an infidel. And it was then that Jesus sought him out and told him that he, Jesus, was the Christ and he confessed his faith and worshipped Him.

"I said that the man gave utterance to the most convincing and most unanswerable argument in the world when he said 'whereas I was blind, now I see.' It was a matter of human experience; and experience is not only the greatest teacher, but is the greatest witness in the whole world. Infidelity cannot meet human experience. It may be able to answer the arguments of historians and learned theologians; it may be able to tear the Bible to pieces from the standpoint of science and human reason. It may appeal to immature or even mature minds with the suggestion of doubt and consequent agnosticism. But when tested by human experience it inevitably goes down in defeat. When a man says 'whereas I was blind, now I see' that is the end of the matter. When a man says 'I know my Redeemer liveth' then let Hume, Russeau, Payne, Voltaire, Ingersoll and their more modern followers let him alone or cast him out of their synagogue, for the matter is settled in his mind. All the infidel lecturers and writers in the world cannot answer the most ignorant and unlettered Christian when he relates his experience.

World Influenced

"And the experience of the world under the influence of Christianity more than answers all their arguments. The influence of the man of Galilee is to be seen in the world's greatest literature, its greatest architecture, its finest art, its most useful institutions of learnings, its charitable organizations, its social and fraternal orders and societies, its churches, and, above all in the personal character of his followers everywhere.

"Were it not for the savor of the salt that we have left in the world in these days of wars and rumors of wars, of rampant materialism, of 'crime waves,' of poverty and distress and unemployment, civilization would soon break down under the load, and the sacred rights of a democracy like ours would pass into history with a page written in blood. Were it not for that 'leaven which leaveneth the whole lump' not one of us could confidently go to our peaceful slumbers tonight with any assurance that we would have anything left in the family larder tomorrow morning.

"And yet we have men and women speaking and writing that Christianity is losing its grip on the hearts of men; that the church is losing membership and that the people are losing interest in sacred things. On the contrary, this suffering world, has grown sick and tired of materialism. Like the prodigal son, it has wandered into a far country and indulged in riotous living until it is now reduced to the eating of the husks. And like the blind man of the lesson, it is sitting and begging for light to see its way out of the darkness and despair of the moment. And oh what an opportunity it is for those who have seen the light to point others to Him who said 'I am the light of the world.'"

Dancers Give Program For Shriners at Vernon

Wichita Falls Shriners who attended a dance sponsored by the local organization at the Hillcrest country club at Vernon Saturday night were entertained with a novelty program preceding the dance. Doctor: Yes, but you called me at odd hours, you know.—Answers.

'Soul' Subject Of Science Sermon

"Soul" was the lesson sermon subject in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday.

The golden text was from Lamentations 3:25,26. "The Lord is good unto them that wait for him, to the soul that seeketh him. It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord."

Passages from the Bible included these from Psalms 63:1,2: "O God, thou art my God; early will I seek thee: my soul thirsteth for thee, my flesh longeth for thee in a dry and thirsty land, where no water is; to see thy power and thy glory, so as I have seen thee in the sanctuary."

The service also included the following from "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy (page 390):

"It is our ignorance of God, of divine Principle, which produces apparent discord, and the right understanding of Him restores harmony. Truth will at length compel us all to exchange the pleasures and pains of sense for the joys of Soul."

Wichitans Leave for Meeting of Shriners

Potentate Sidney A. Gaines of Maskat temple left Sunday for Nashville, Tenn., to attend the annual meeting of the Shrine Directors association. Mr. Gaines was accompanied by Mrs. Gaines, Al Ellis, Maskat recorder, and Mr. and Mrs. Kindel Paulk. The trip is being made by automobile and the party plans to be gone one week.

A 90 million dollar reason

A SECTION OF A LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO WAREHOUSE WHERE TOBACCOS ARE STORED TO AGE AND MELLOW

why Chesterfields are Better!

Just think what this means for Chesterfield smokers. It means that the larger part of 90 million dollars is invested in Domestic and Turkish tobaccos that are being properly aged in Nature's way, and cured so as to make them sweeter and milder.

CHESTERFIELD tobacco is packed in wooden casks, each containing about 1,000 pounds and stored for two years in modern, up-to-date warehouses.

These warehouses, if placed end-to-end, would be about four miles in length. From floor to ceiling they are filled with these casks of fine tobacco, ageing in Nature's slow but sure way.

It takes a lot of money to make a good cigarette—money to buy good tobaccos and money to age them properly.

CHESTERFIELDS are milder, and taste better . . . there's a 90 million dollar reason why! Just try them!
