AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said Friday he wished Texas had more nuclear power plants under construction and lashed out at President Carter's proposed "windfall profits" tax on oil companies.

"There are four plants under construction. I wish we had six or eight. Sooner or later we are going to be depending on nuclear power to help with our energy requirements," Clements told his weekly news conference.

He took the unusual step of urging Austinites to vote today to keep the city's 16 percent share in the South Texas Nuclear Project.

"We are going to have to use nuclear power and we are going to have to face up to it. ... I hope they do (pass the Austin nuclear referendum)," the governor said.

Opposes Profits Tax

Clements said Carter's recommendation to decontrol oil prices was a "step in the right direction" but taxing half the oil companies' "windfall profits" would be absolutely wrong.

"What we heard last night (from Carter) was primarily political rhetoric, and unfortunately so," Clements said.

Clements, founder of the SEDCO oil drilling company, said oil men were prepared to accept legislation requiring them to "plow back" additional profits from uncontrolled oil prices into the search for new energy.

He said he expected a congressman, unnamed but possibly from Texas, to introduce a mandatory "plowback" bill.

Signs Beer Bottle Bill

On other matters, Clements said:

— He has signed the "little bitty beer bottle bill" that will allow sales of beer in 7-and 8-ounce containers and also prohibit wholesalers and brewers from selling to retail customers.

— He will sign a bill that would double maximum state tuition subsidies for students at private and church colleges.

Clements had recommended the bill and a $44.3 million two-year appropriation for the "tuition equalization grants."

— Sen. Bill Meier's bill making it harder for consumers to win deceptive trade practices suits and collect triple damages from businessmen has his support in its present form.

Provokes Filibuster

The bill provoked a filibuster Tuesday and is expected to come up for final Senate passage next week.

"I think the bill is all right as it is presently constituted," Clements said.

— Migrant workers will have a special "advocate" in the Texas Department of Community Affairs. Clements abolished the Governor's Office of Migrant Affairs this week and assigned its duties to the community affairs agency.

He called the Governor's Office of Migrant Affairs (GOMA), created by former Gov. Dolph Briscoe in 1974, was a "miserable failure" that helped only 500 migrants a year with its $8 million budget.

"All it did was provide some lush jobs for middle management people," Clements said.

— The House and Senate should support the recommendations of the Sunset Advisory Committee to abolish or reshape several state agencies. But he refused to commit himself to veto legislation extending the lives of various agencies without requiring such "reforms" as lay representation on regulatory boards.

Common Cause criticized the Senate on Friday for failing to follow the sunset commission's recommendations when it approved bills extending the State Bar of Texas and the Texas Real Estate Commission.

Clements devoted much of his news conference, held in conjunction with a meeting of the Austin chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists, to a monologue on Carter's energy speech and energy problems in general.

"I do firmly believe we do have a crisis. ... The diatribe put out by the president doesn't do anything to change the attitude of the American public that we do not have an energy crisis," he said.

He predicted Texans will be paying $1 a gallon for gasoline by next year and discounted talk that consumers would revolt by pointing out that gasoline costs as much as $2 a gallon in Europe.

Clements said the nation is living in a "fool's paradise" where 51 percent of its oil comes from abroad and oilmen are accused of "ripping off" consumers.

Texas might pay a higher price than the Northeast for an energy shortage, Clements said, because of its "petroculture," based on cheap and abundant oil and gas for industry.

"If industry becomes energy starved,

Pennsylvania, China 'Syndromes' Cloud Austin Nuclear Vote

AUSTIN (AP) — As pro-nuclear forces see it, the Pennsylvania reactor accident and "The China Syndrome" couldn't have come at a worse time.

Barraged daily with news of the Three Mile Island incident, voters decide today whether to sell Austin's interest in the South Texas Nuclear Project.

"In all the elections I have been in, I've never seen such a rapid attitude change," John Rogers, chairman of a campaign to stay in the $2 billion project, said after the nuclear accident in Pennsylvania.

An anti-nuclear group says it has had 100 volunteers each night at its headquarters, compared with 20 before the Pennsylvania accident.

"Direct Threats"

"We do not need to build power sources which pose direct threats to the health and safety of this and future generations," said a statement issued Friday by dozens of doctors and nurses.

Mayor Carole McLellan tells voters the South Texas project will be completed with or without Austin's participation. She says it will mean cheaper electric bills from the city-owned utility.

Mrs. McLellan said "positive" responses to the nuclear issue dropped from about 47 percent, with 18 percent "negative," to 28 percent after the Pennsylvania incident.

"I really believe Austin needs the energy. ... The ratepayers will get an 18 percent reduction in their electric bills the day the plant becomes operational," Mrs. McLellan said.

Advocates Nervous

Nuclear advocates were nervous even before the Three Mile Island accident because of the popularity of "The China Syndrome" among local movie-goers.

Opponents of the South Texas Nuclear Project capitalized on the film's anti-nuclear message by distributing leaflets outside the theater daily.

To make things livelier, the "nuke" is an issue in city council elections that also take place today. A bare 4-3 majority of the council favors the nuclear project, which is scheduled for completion in 1982.

One candidate, George Thompson, said he was a middle-of-the roader on the nuclear issue before flying to Middletown, Pa., to see for himself.

"After what I have seen and heard in Middletown, nuclear power plants are unsafe," Thompson said, abandoning the "nuke" as an issue with anti-nuclear Councilman Richard Goodman.

The power plant is being built near Bay City, 135 air miles southeast of here, by Austin, San Antonio, Houston Lighting & Power and Central Power & Light of Corpus Christi.

With the project plagued by cost overruns, Austin's original $161 million commitment dropped from a 16 percent interest to about 8 percent.

Today's ballot offers two basic choices:

— Issue $215.8 million in bonds, the

Controversial Proposals Lure Area Voters Today

By ESTHER LONGORIA
Avalanche-Journal Staff

NUMEROUS city council and school board races as well as a bond issue and possible school consolidation will draw South Plains voters to the polls today.

The more important issues include:

—A $750,000 bond issue in Slaton for waterworks improvements.

—A special proposition in Wolfforth calling for pledging a portion of water and sewer utility revenues to subdivision developers in the city.

—A non-binding referendum in Midland proposing the consolidation of the city's two high schools.

The Slaton waterworks issue, divided into two propositions on the ballot, calls for the construction of a 1.5 million gallon ground storage tank at the main pump station; the building of a 300,000 gallon elevated storage tank at 21st Street and Woodrow Road; and the construction of water distribution lines in the northwest corner of the city.

Proposition 1 calls for the issuance of $325,000 in general obligation bonds for improvements and extensions to the waterworks system; proposition 2 would authorize the issuance of $375,000 in revenue bonds for improvements and extensions to the waterworks system.

If voters pass the two propositions, city officials say that water and sewer rates will be raised and the tax rate will be increased from $1.75 per $100 valuation to $1.89 per $100 valuation.

Water rates will jump from the present $4.25 for the first 3,000 gallons to $4.75 for that amount. Also, under the proposed hike, residents would pay $1.20 per 1,000 gallons for over 3,000 gallons. Residents presently are paying 95 cents per 1,000 gallons for the next 7,000 gallons; 85 cents per 1,000 gallons for the next 10,000 gallons; and 70 cents per 1,000 gallons for over 20,000 gallons.

In addition, sewer rates would be raised from $2.50 to $3.25 for residential use while commercial users, who are charged a sewage rate based on usage, also would be charged 75 cents more.

City officials say that if the bond issue is okayed the water and sewer rates must be increased to provide funds to pay the principal and interest on the revenue bonds and that a tax hike is necessary to provide debt service on the waterworks general obligation bonds.

City Secretary Alex Webb said passage of the bond issue would fulfill three basic needs:

—A ground water storage tank at Booster Pump Station No. 3 on U.S. 84 is needed to maximize the use of Canadian River water. By fully utilizing Canadian River water, Webb said, local ground water supplies can be conserved.

—Additional elevated storage capacity is needed to maintain adequate water pressure during peak use on summer days and to provide emergency fire storage.

—Water mains are needed to improve water pressure and to provide adequate flow rates for fire protection.

Wolfforth citizens will decide a special proposition calling for pledging one-half of water and sewer utility revenues as reimbursed to subdivision developers for street paving, curbing, sewer and water lines.

Wolfforth City Administrator Rickie McWhorter explained the proposition by saying "for example, if a developer puts $400,000 into a housing development here, the city would reimburse him with about half of that amount from water and sewer utility revenues for paving, curb-

Air Service Bid Made By Frontier

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

SOUTH PLAINS air travelers may have more choices than ever in the near future should another major airline receive permission to fly into Lubbock.

Frontier Airlines, a Denver-based carrier which now serves 90 cities in 21 states, Canada and Mexico, this week filed with the Civil Aeronautics Board for permission to service Lubbock, said city aviation director Marvin Coffee.

The airline has asked permission to fly nonstop routes between Lubbock and Denver, Houston and Austin, according to Bob Shulman, a spokesman in Frontier's home office.

Frontier's filing is the second this week affecting Lubbock. Ozark Airlines, based in St. Louis, applied for identical routes only days ago.

"I guess the airlines are looking toward Lubbock because of our growth as a market," Coffee said. "I wouldn't be surprised to see another airline file."

Frontier's route system encompasses cities between Sacramento, Guadalajara, Atlanta and Winnipeg and includes Dallas, El Paso and Amarillo.

The carrier merged with Fort Worth-based Central Airlines about 10 years ago, giving it an entry into Texas. Frontier has a fleet of 34 Boeing 737 aircraft, each of which has a passenger capacity of 106, Shulman said.

Before the routes can be flown, the airlines must receive permission from the CAB. As of late Friday, hearings on the requests by Frontier and Ozark had not been scheduled, and a spokesman in the CAB office said it would be at least 10 days before any decision is made.

Lubbock now is served by four major airlines, Continental, Texas International, Braniff International and Southwest, and two regional carriers, Air Midwest and Crown Aviation.

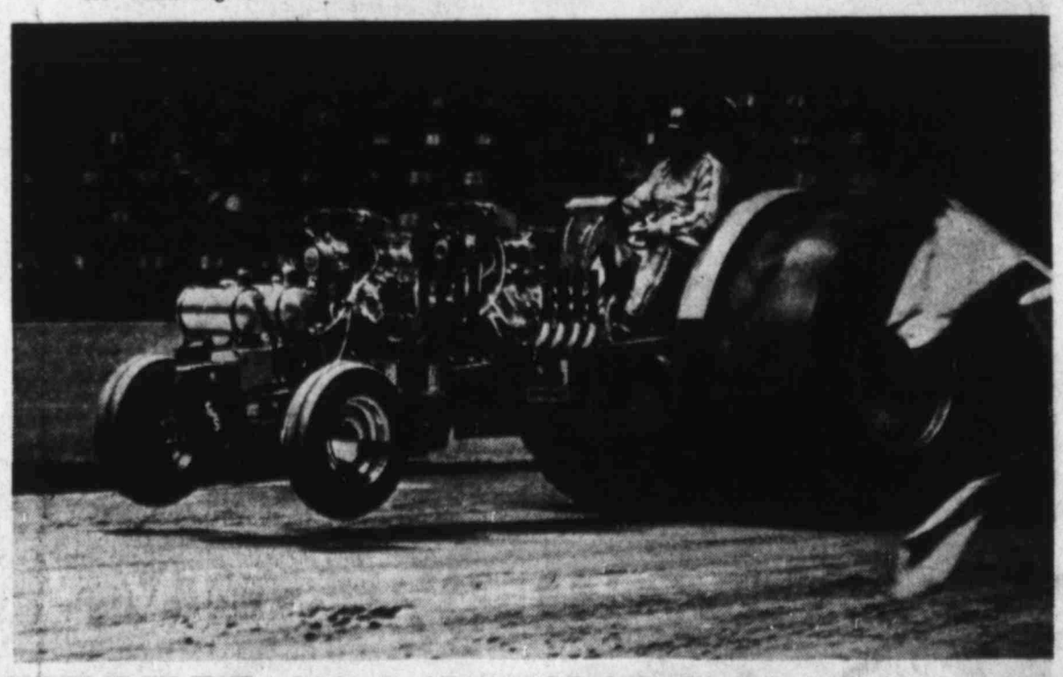

Mexico Hiking Oil Production

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Mexico's state-owned oil monopoly, Petroleos Mexicanos, hopes to boost oil production to 2.25 million barrels a day next year and almost double exports from the present level of about 600,000 barrels a day to 1.1 million barrels a day.

PEMEX director general Jorge Diaz Serrano made the projection in an interview with Mexican reporters Thursday in Acapulco while attending a congress of construction engineers. His comments were carried in the Mexican press Friday.

As Mexico gradually increases oil production, Diaz Serrano said, the proportion of Mexico's export oil that goes to the United States will diminish slightly. Projections for next year are that only 60 percent of the oil will go to the United States — currently it is 80 percent — while 20 percent will go to Japan and another 20 percent to Europe.

In the same interview, Diaz Serrano said that domestic prices for oil and other petroleum products are too low now that Mexico has boosted its external oil prices to $17.10 a barrel, an increase of 21.3 percent over the previous price of $14.10 a barrel and well above the OPEC cartel price for Arabian light crude of $14.54 a barrel.

Severe Snow Storm Kills 19 Across Great Lakes Region

By The Associated Press

A storm driving snows at near hurricane force howled across the Great Lakes region Friday, wrecking homes and businesses, triggering floods and causing widespread blackouts.

At least 19 persons, including eight in Canada, died in the path of the storm, called one of the worst on record for April.

Winds of 65 mph and gusting up to 100 mph in some places ripped down power lines, tore the roofs off buildings and sent ice floes crashing into lakeshore buildings.

The highest wind was reported near Beloit, Wis., where Rock County Airport instruments recorded a gust of 100 mph.

The 325-foot Canadian ore freighter Labradoc broke up and started taking on water after it was lashed by 50-knot winds and 15-foot waves in icy Lake Erie about 18 miles northwest of Ashtabula, Ohio. A U.S. Coast Guard helicopter was sent to pluck the 20 crewmen to safety.

Power was shut off to tens of thousands of homes and businesses in several states, at least temporarily.

"As far as total damage and intensity of a storm of any type, this is probably the worst we have had since the March 1976 ice storm," said Jon Bartel, a spokesman for the Wisconsin Electric Power Co.

Utility companies counted 170,000 customers without electricity in Michigan's Lower Peninsula, 50,000 in the Chicago area, 40,000 in northern Ohio, 17,000 in western New York and 9,000 in western Pennsylvania.

Hundreds of schools were closed.

An estimated $10 million worth of damage was caused by the gale force winds in Illinois, the Illinois Insurance Information Service said.

An April blizzard, labeled one of the worst on record for April by the National Weather Service, left 9 inches of snow in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., a record for the date, and 7.3 inches in the Houghton Lake area.

The winds also brought a record chill to Chicago setting a new record of 18.

At Sunset Bay, N.Y., about 30 miles southwest of Buffalo, huge icy waves from churning Lake Erie crashed ashore and damaged six houses and Mulligan's Beach Club.

Ice floes still lingering on the lake were blown ashore at Hoover Beach, also near Buffalo, damaging several homes.

About 150 persons were evacuated at Hoover Beach and another 75 fled from Sunset Bay, where Cattaraugus Creek flooded about 200 homes.

At Grand Island, in the middle of the Niagara River between Buffalo and Niagara Falls, about 50 families were stranded in their homes. The rising waters had cut off roads to several communities on the island.

In Wisconsin, winds shoved ice into 40-foot piles on the shores of Lake Koshkonong and damaged several summer cottages. One building was left with only one wall standing. A number of families were evacuated from Black Hawk Island in the lake by sheriff's deputies whose boat had to buck waves of five feet.

In the metropolitan New York area, the Coast Guard closed Newark Bay to all ships as gale winds clocked at above 50 knots created hazardous conditions for ships riding high in the water.

The action sealed off the vast Port Elizabeth and Port Newark docks where giant containerships link up with rail heads and trucking terminals. A strike by 2,800 tugboat crewmen contributed to the problem.

The thermometer plunged below zero in North Dakota and Minnesota and freezing weather was spread across Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky and West Virginia.

The deaths of at least 11 Americans were blamed on the storm which roared into the area Thursday night. They included three in Indiana, two in Ohio, two in New York, two in Michigan, and one each in Minnesota and Illinois.

Canadian authorities said eight persons died Friday in weather-related accidents near the Great Lakes.

In Garrett County, Maryland State Police said all 1,000 residents of Grantsville were blacked out for about one hour early Friday morning. State police said some outages were reported and open burning in the county was banned until noon Saturday.

Elsewhere, skies were fair over the much of the South and parts of the eastern Great Lakes into the middle Ohio Valley.

Highs Friday afternoon ranged from 16 degrees in Devils Lake, N.D., and International Falls, Minn., to 83 in Sarasota, Fla.

The forecast for Saturday called for snow along the Canadian border from western New York to northeastern Maine. A few rain showers were expected over most of Utah and portions of southeastern Idaho, southwestern Wyoming, western Colorado and northern Arizona.

Temperatures will be in the 30s along the Canadian border from northwestern North Dakota to Maine. Readings in the 80s are expected over portions of Florida and along most of the Mexican border area.

Here were the highs and weather conditions in key cities around the nation and Canada Friday afternoon:

Bill To Repeal Law Lowering Payments

WASHINGTON (AP) — A move to renew full U.S. payments to the United Nations is a step closer to law following action by the House.

Representatives voted 40-13 Thursday to reject an amendment that would have allowed the United States to make its U.N. contributions voluntary rather than mandatory. The rejected amendment was offered to a $4.2 billion U.S economic aid bill which would repeal a law passed earlier by Congress lowering U.S. contributions to the United Nations.

Through the magic of a great writer, relive the most dramatic and important day in human history
The Day Christ Died
By Jim Bishop

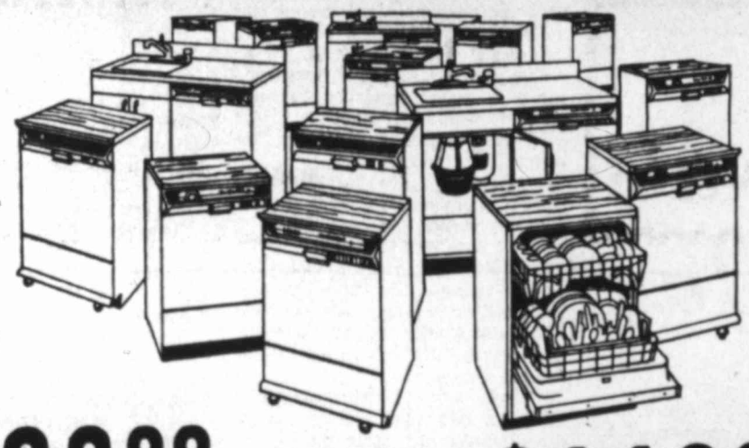

As only author Jim Bishop could recreate it, here is a detailed, accurate, narrative reconstruction of the day on which Jesus of Nazareth died. It opens at 6 p.m. — the beginning of the Hebrew day — with Jesus and ten of the Apostles coming through the pass between the Mount of Olives and the Mount of Offense en route to Jerusalem and the Last Supper. It ends at 4 o'clock the following afternoon, when Jesus was taken down from the cross.

Mild Weather Continues Over Area

Although South Plains residents can expect another near-perfect day today for picnicking and outdoor fun, the Great Lakes and New England regions will continue to suffer the havoc of an early icy spring storm.

At least 19 persons died in the path of the unseasonable storm Friday as it swept the area with devastating winds up to 100 mph.

The weather about the Hub City today will remain virtually unchanged with a temperature high expected in the mid 80s and a low tonight in the mid 50s.

A dissipating cold front across the northeastern Panhandle, however, will allow a flow of moisture from the south this evening. Forecasters are calling for a 20 percent probability of showers and thunderstorms tonight.

Winds will gust 15 to 25 mph with wind warnings in effect for area lakes.

Partly cloudy skies will cover the South Plains Sunday through Wednesday. A few thunderstorms may develop on Wednesday. Temperature highs will continue in the mid 80s and lows in the mid 50s.

Skies across the state were clear Friday, and temperatures were mild except behind the cold front in the northern Panhandle. Readings ranged from 43 at Dalhart to a reading of 84 in Lubbock and El Paso.

Banshee winds howled across the Midwest and into New England Friday, raining debris from battered buildings on unwary passersby and hurling walls of snow and sleet at motorists.

A Canadian freighter was caught in high seas in Lake Erie off Ashtabula, Ohio. Helicopter rescue crews from the Coast Guard and Canadian Air Force braved 57 mph winds to rescue the 20-man crew of the 315-foot Labradoc.

The storm swept into New England "like a tidal wave," snarling traffic and causing at least one traffic death in Vermont.

Winds clocked at up to 70 mph ripped the Chicago area. The winds collapsed the wall of a fire-ravaged building, killing a gas company workman and injuring two firemen.

In Hammond, Ind. savage winds crushed a restaurant chimney and sent the roof crashing down, killing a customer.

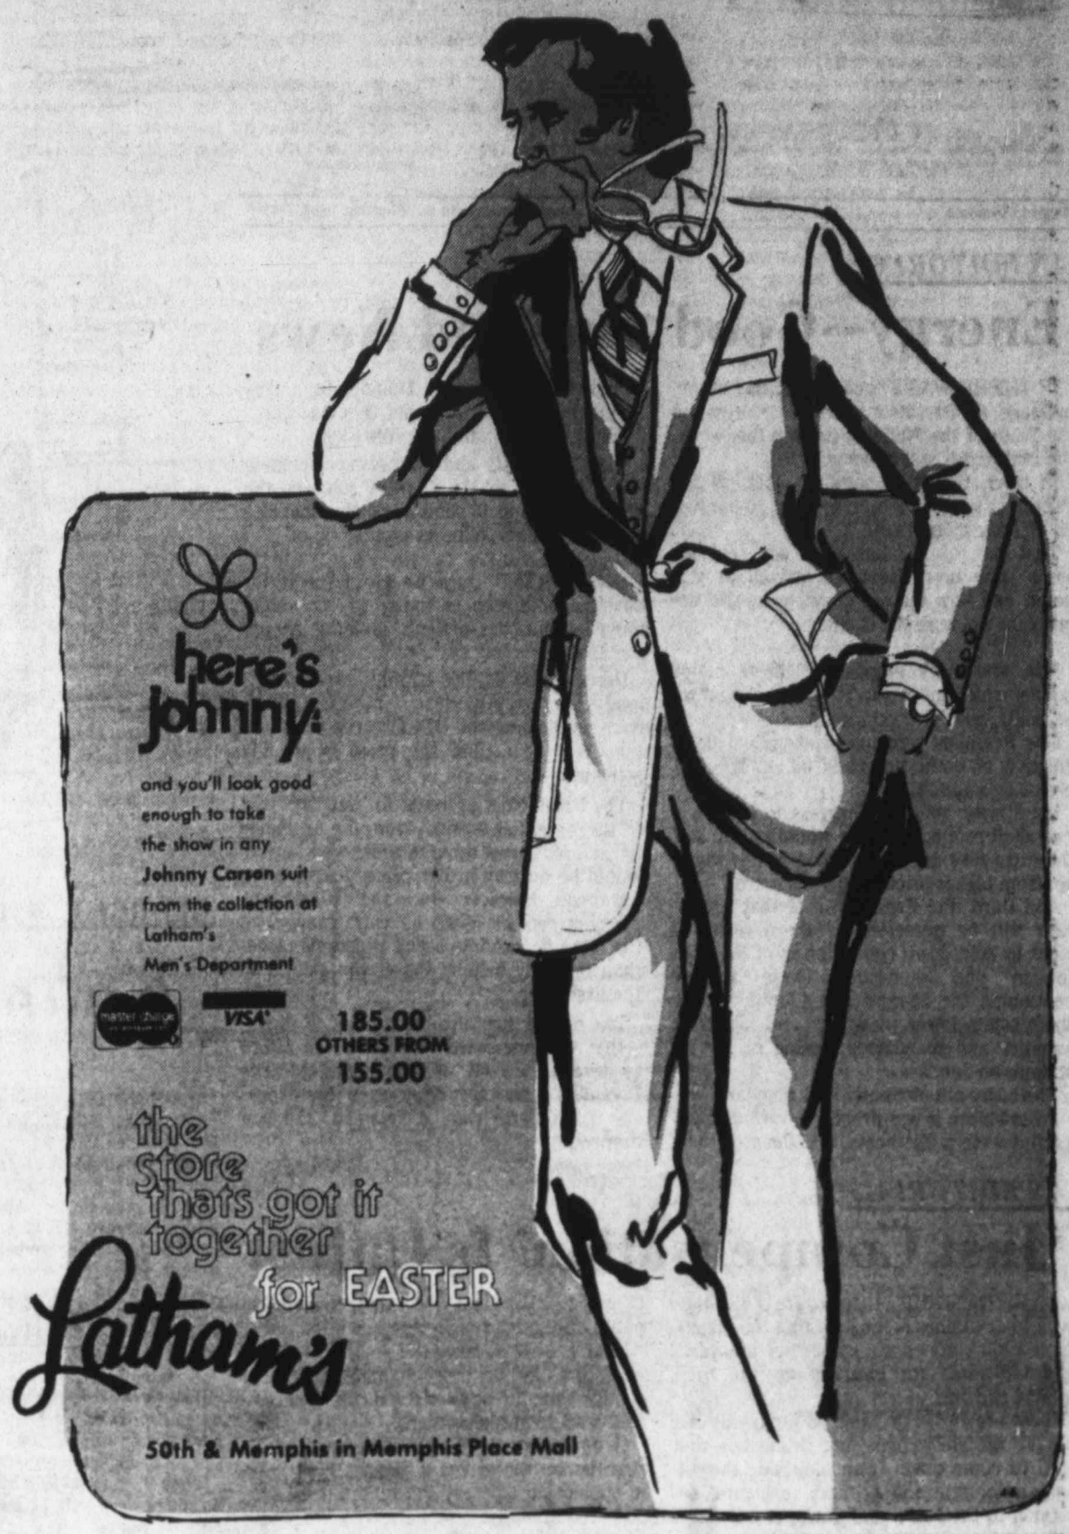

Winds gusting to 50 mph overturned a mobile home in Toledo, Ohio, breaking a gas line and starting a fire that killed an elderly couple.

Energy--Good And Bad News

IF THERE WAS a "good news, bad news" message in President Carter's address on the State of the Nation's Energy this week, the first part is still to come.

In brief, the "bad news" is that, as the President said, each of us is going to use less oil and pay more for it.

That fact of life has been apparent for some time now. How we arrived at this point, and how we are going to handle the problem will pose the challenge.

MR. CARTER emphasized three major points, which he seemed to make almost reluctantly, and for good reason.

Mr. Carter will ask Congress to impose a "windfall profits tax" that would sop up half the extra revenues that oil companies would get from higher prices under decontrol.

And third, the President said that Americans will be expected to take a series of steps to hold down consumption of oil, both foreign and domestic. These include continuing the 55-mph speed limit, setting thermostats lower in winter and higher in summer and mandatory closing of service stations on Sundays.

The bitter pill obviously isn't popular.

Even before it was proposed, various phases of it were under heavy fire. Congressmen, including staunch Democrats and Presidential supporters, said they had grave doubts about the windfall profits tax.

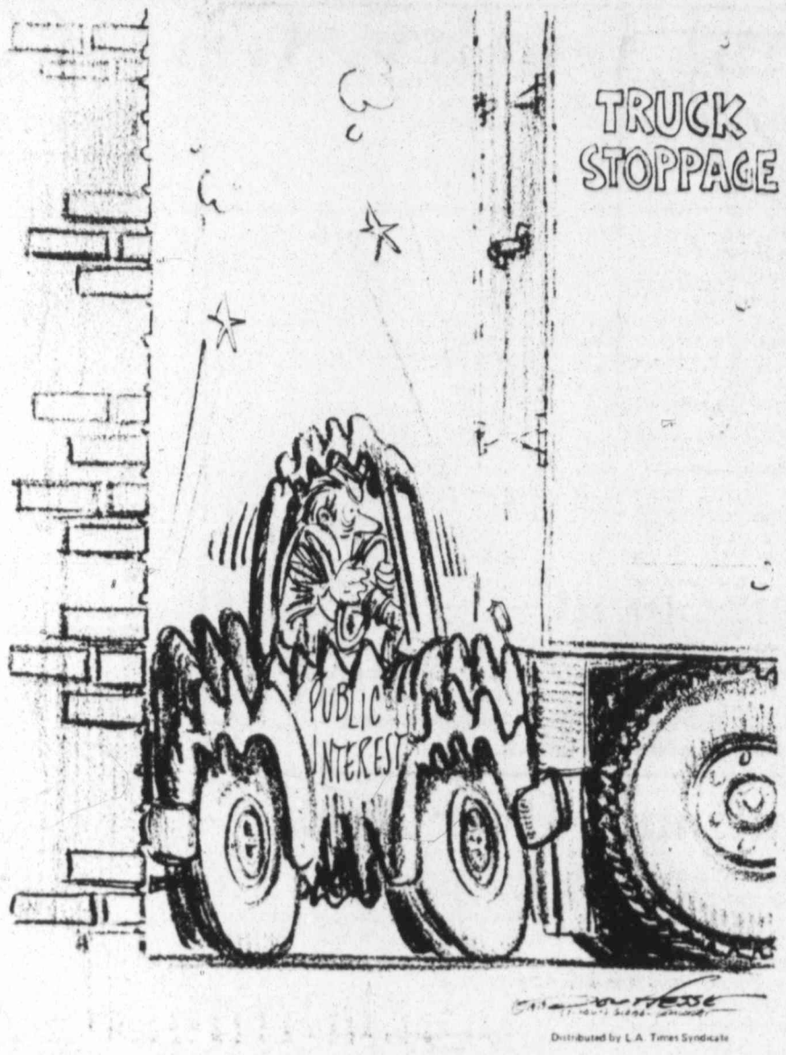

Many motorists and politicians, including some aspiring to Mr. Carter's job, see the projected five to 15 cents per gallon increase in the price of gasoline as another rip-off.

MR. CARTER must be given credit for taking a bold step in trying to "do something" about the nation's growing energy problems.

Deregulation of the nation's crude oil is long overdue. Americans, in effect, have been subsidizing the OPEC cartel for more than five years and the price is steadily going up.

The President's proposal to "sop up" part of the "windfall profits" from the oil industry and rechannel them to those who he says would be hurt by higher prices leaves room for doubt, however. Once the federal government gets its hands on extra money, all too often it goes into social programs rather than in really helping those who gave it in the first place.

The oil industry also has a point to prove—that with increased revenue it can afford to develop new oil, or recoup the old. The President's package deserves a hard look. The good parts can be retained, the bad dropped.

AN EDITORIAL:

'Just Compensation' Is Unjust

ONE "HANG-UP" that Congress would do well to overcome is the idea that the taxpayers should compensate owners of junkyards and billboards for cleaning up the mess they've caused.

There are 10,608 unscreened junkyards and 197,791 unsightly signs and billboards that need to come down from alongside the nation's interstate and primary highways, according to the Federal Highway Administration.

But the 1965 Highway Beautification Act has been largely ineffective because of an unnecessary—and, in the view of many, inane—provision that "just compensation" be paid to those whose signs were removed or whose junkyards were screened.

NOT A PENNY for this "just compensation" was included in President Carter's proposed budget for fiscal 1980.

This means, unless Congress votes the money anyway, that the highway clean-up act will grind to a halt as funds already "in the pipeline" are used up.

The real solution, though, is for Congress to amend the act so as to require owners of junkyards to screen them and to require owners of oversized and poorly located billboards to take them down at their own expense after a reasonable abatement period.

In fact, 14 years since the act first was passed seems to be more than a reasonable enough time already for depreciating investments made in such unsightly facilities.

"We're contemplating a series of public hearings on the program and we hope soon to appoint an advisory committee to analyze and give direction," said Richard W. Moeller of the Federal Highway Administration.

AS MOELLER POINTED out, "just compensation" has been determined "the same as evaluating real estate."

"We appraise the structure, the site, the number of cars which pass by and the fair market value," he said, with the nationwide average payment being about $2,000 for removal of an elaborate billboard.

This expenditure is an outrage. Paying a person to take down a billboard he put up because the taxpayers had built a highway past the site is ridiculous.

Good operators have junkyards that are properly screened and billboards that are not improperly located, unsightly or public hazards; other operators need to clean up at their own expense.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Tax-Funded Campaigns Pour Money In Drain

WASHINGTON—If the congressional leadership has its way, inputs by private citizens into the electoral process will soon be drastically curtailed.

Such would be the effect of H.R. 1, a bill to establish taxpayer-funding on elections to the House and limit political spending by private citizens, political action committees, and independent groups (up to a point).

As usual, the proposal is being touted as a "reform," designed to limit special-interest leverage, but the true effect would be the opposite.

H.R. 1 begins by clamping a $150,000 per candidate spending lid (plus fund-raising costs and a constituent mailing) on general election campaigns for the House, $60,000 of which would be supplied by the taxpayers.

THE LIMIT and the federal funding are tied together, so that only if the spending lid is accepted does the tax money begin to flow.

Conversely, refusal to take the federal funds would mean the candidate doesn't have to accept the limits.

This may sound fair enough, but there is a kicker: If a candidate opts out of the system, his opponent gets a special bonus—up to $60,000 in extra matching funds from the taxpayers, plus permission to raise additional money from donors who have already contributed the sum of $100 to his campaign.

Thus the deck is stacked twice over against the non-participant—up to $120,000 of tax-paid campaign help for his opponent vs. none for himself. Few aspirants for public office are willing to give their opposition that kind of advantage.

STACKING THE deck, however, is what H.R. 1 is all about. Like its predecessor, the Campaign Reform law of 1974, the bill might best be described as an "incumbent's protection act."

It completely ignores the advantage incumbents enjoy from name recognition, staffing, the franking privilege, and access to the media—all of which puts challengers in the hole before the race has even started.

A couple of years ago, the liberal Americans for Democratic Action estimated the total resources available to a sitting lawmaker at $567,000—and some estimates put the figure above $800,000.

While these resources are supposedly not to be used for political purposes, the line between "constituent service" and active politicking is hard to draw.

IT IS noteworthy, for instance, that senators from large states such as New York and California can send out 900,000 newsletters a month—at taxpayers' expense.

Against that backdrop, the idea of putting limits on the sums that can be spent by challengers has obvious appeal—for incumbents.

Consider the fact that, in 1978, 63 percent of the challengers who successfully went against incumbents in House races spent in excess of $200,000—well above the limits set by H.R. 1. This is only one among several features of the law that would rig the election process in favor of the congressional establishment.

Another glaring anomaly of the bill is its failure to count "in-kind" electoral services as contributions.

Phone banks, get-out-the vote drives, mailings, and so on—which are specialties of the labor unions—aren't counted as contributions as long as they are allegedly non-partisan or supposedly directed at group members, rather than the general public.

LABOR'S EXPERTISE in this area is suggested by the '68 election, when AFL-CIO's COPE distributed 55 million pieces of campaign literature, conducted a registration drive that enrolled 46 million votes, did a phone blitz that had 72,225 people manning more than 8,000 phones, and ran a get-out-the vote push with 84,475 volunteers.

If such activities reach a level of $50,000 in any given race, supposedly, they would trigger provisions of the bill releasing the opponent of the favored candidate from the spending limits.

But in the case of last-minute phone banks, mailings, and so on, the values in question would be hard to compute, and countervailing action hard to mount.

It's difficult to see how this provision could be enforced against the unions.

GEORGE F. WILL:

Kahn Con Fanciers

WASHINGTON—Alfred Kahn is the designated hitter against inflation for an administration that has scheduled three minimum wage increases, increased milk support prices twice, added $59 million to the nation's sugar bill, used an acreage set-aside program to limit grain production, ballooned currency and bank reserves 9 percent in one year, expanded the federal budget 25 percent in two years, run a $50 billion deficit in the fourth year of a recovery, and advertised as "austere" a budget that, under optimistic assumptions, calls for a $30 billion deficit—the first budget that calls for spending more than $1 million a minute.

But recently Kahn addressed some Chicago businessmen this way: "You are on the spot. You have a heavy responsibility to help us bring under control the inflation..."

Citing the double-digit figures, he said: "You're not doing very well." Kahn's brass is almost admirable. Almost.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

Hold On To Gold

GOLD'S RUSH to a record high is a warning to President Carter. Gold lasts longer than the pledges of such politicians.

President Carter cannot have it both ways: his announced programs and yet no inflation. Accordingly, the fear of inflation is obvious.

Any monetary system will work for the U.S. if we have a balanced budget and an equilibrium in our international balance of payments. But we have neither.

President Carter has convinced the world that neither will be remedied and that inflation looms, reducing America's standard of living 24 hours a day.

Taxes are too high? A recent Gallup Poll revealed that some 79 percent of the people surveyed agreed.

AND OVERSEAS the U.S. dollar continues weak. Our dollar should be what it always was—the standard of the world.

To speak of an international monetary system is a mere euphemism. You find only monetary disorder.

As a result, world currency speculation reigns supreme and gold hoarding and gold speculation reign with it.

Said 14th-century English poet Geoffrey Chaucer: "If gold rusts, what shall iron do?" But gold does not rust. It remains universally and timelessly accepted and unquestioned.

GOLD IS a commodity. It is subject to violent ups and downs.

But it has mystically and passionately gripped men's minds for at least 6,000 years.

Today, South Africa is overwhelmingly the world's largest gold producer, contributing at least 42 percent of the gold dug throughout the world in this century.

The Soviet Union is the second largest producer, its gold supply climbing to an all-time high. Mining an estimated 410 metric tons, it far exceeds the U.S.

Excluding South Africa, this is about 50 percent more than the entire world combined mined.

The result is due largely to a new and startling series of strikes—which the Kremlin now calls Dalstory (Far North Projects)—in northeast Siberia across the Bering Strait from Alaska.

IN 1919 THE London Gold Market was formally established. Today it trades some 85 percent of all the world's non-monetary gold. Traditionally, it sells 12.5-kilogram (27.5-pound) bars.

For years Amsterdam, Brussels, Hong Kong, New York (kilograms, half kilograms and tiny wafers), London, Paris and Zurich have had gold markets.

Unless the U.S. (first and foremost) and the world's trading nations construct a workable monetary system, President Carter's talk about world prosperity is self-defeating.

"Don't despair, however," he said. "I also have some good news. I refer, of course, to the President's anti-inflation program..."

Of course.

Aside from "austerity," the program (Kahn detects "widespread agreement about its basic fairness and soundness") involves "voluntary" guidelines, use of the government's procurement power to enforce them, and the "wage insurance" plan.

The price guidelines are often unintelligible and the wage guidelines are flexible, depending on whether fringe benefits are counted.

KAHN, WHO says that only big business is complying well, might consider the possibility that only big business has enough lawyers to decipher the program.

The "widespread agreement" about the "fairness and soundness" of the program does not extend to use of the procurement power to punish noncompliance with the guidelines.

A government agency says that use would be illegal, and organized labor is seeking a court ruling to that effect.

The "wage insurance" program (workers who settle for 7 percent increases would get a tax break if inflation runs above 7 percent) may not emerge from Congress.

If it does, and if inflation is 10 percent, it will swell the deficit by at least $15 billion. (The administration estimates a cost of only $2.5 billion, but it dreamily estimates inflation at 7.5 percent.)

KAHN SAYS, "Don't despair." But no less an authority than Hamilton Jordan says corporate profits are "unnecessarily" high and the administration will "take steps" to "deal with" them. The "problem" is that profits rose 9.7 percent in the fourth quarter of 1978, 26 percent in the year.

Aside from Jordan's intuitions about what is "necessary," the administration thinks that high corporate profits will complicate the task of persuading labor to accept a 7 percent ceiling wage increases.

But that ceiling means a real cut in pay, and given that labor settlements did not cause and cannot cure inflation, there is no compelling reason why labor should accept the ceiling.

Besides, the administration should try a little leadership for a change. It should explain to the nation that increased corporate profits are a blessing.

INFLATION DISCOURAGES saving. Americans are increasing their debts 50 percent faster than their incomes are increasing. Since 1975, consumer installment debt has risen 49 percent, residential mortgage debt 54 percent.

Today the average family spends nearly 25 percent of its after tax income on debt service. And government borrowing claims almost 20 percent of the capital market—at the peak of an economic cycle.

Healthy profits enable corporations to perform society's saving and investing functions at a moment when no one else is inclined to do so, and without pressuring the Federal Reserve to retreat from policies of monetary restraint.

But Business Week magazine warns that $42 billion of the $202 billion in profits in 1978 was "an illusion" created by inflation.

Those earnings included phantom "inventory profits," equal to the difference between the inflated selling price of goods and their lower original cost.

THOSE "PROFITS" vanished when corporations replenished their stocks at even higher prices. In addition, some of the reported profits resulted from the underappreciation of plant and equipment.

Corporations generally depreciate equipment at the obsolete prices they paid for the equipment, rather than at the much higher price they will pay to replace it.

Today's profits, although high, are overstated. They follow a long profits slump. And they come when corporate liquidity is essential to the investment that is the key to rising productivity, and hence to rising standards of living. Yet the administration considers today's profits a "problem."

Kahn says, "Don't despair." He is wrong. Again.

Food prices have gotton so high that even the food knows it. A lady strolled by the meat counter at a supermarket yesterday and a beef stuck out its tongue at her.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Clean As A Pigsty

BACK THERE in 1975, when scarcely a candidate was yet alive, Jimmy Carter was scurrying through the boonies, promising to make government so simple even a peanut farmer could understand it.

The commonfolk believed he meant it and they annointed him President. Go forth, they cried, and do battle with that army of federal paper-pushers. And while you're at it, turn off the money faucet, too.

Jimmy smiled and smiled, took Rosalynn's hand, and charged down Pennsylvania Avenue to the White House to crank up his clean-up machine.

So how's he doing?

It's pretty obvious the big ones have gotten away from him. The budget's still going through the ceiling, prices are more impossible than ever and he's running out of gas. Literally.

JIMMY THE crusader has also discovered the "bureaucratic mess" in Washington is so fraught with red tape, rules and regulations that no peanut farmer would ever understand it, even if he's running it.

But has he given up? No, sirree.

He's asking our help, though. Wants us to tighten our belts and support his "austerity" budget. We're going to have to do without a few frills so he can scrape up $35 billion to pay off his bri...er, commitment to Egypt and Israel.

Otherwise they might start fighting again, treaty or no treaty. And any talk of broken treaties reminds Jimmy of Taiwan and that makes him nervous.

As for inflation, well, he wants us not to ask the boss for any raise bigger than seven percent.

AND WE'RE not supposed to know that 36 percent of all his career workers make $25,000 or more a year, compared to only 12 percent of the rest of us.

But he still wants Congress to cut down on its spending. Right after it okays a 25-percent increase in the White House entertainment budget. How else can a poor peanut farmer afford to wine and dine those foreign potentates?

The paper-pushers are still with us, too. Jimmy's White House staff is bigger than when he took office and there are a lot of new bureaucrats around. He has to analyze it, see, and for that he needs an extra 120 new staffers to help Barry Bosworth run the Council on Wage and Price Stability (you should excuse the expression).

So he's just asked Congress for an extra $5.1 million this year to expand the council staff from 110 to 233, half of which will pull down $38,100 a year or more and bring the council budget up to $6.95 million.

BUT THAT'S nothing compared to the way Jimmy plans to provide "equal and quality education for all people." Right off, this calls for a new cabinet officer with a $13.5 billion budget and a work force of more than 15,000.

Another inflation weapon is the White House plan to use Action volunteers to teach the poor and elderly to help themselves, and to give grants to neighborhood groups for small rehabilitation projects.

It's going to cost $170 million, which is 26 percent more than last year, but Jimmy says the extra spending now will actually save money in the long run.

He's also just appointed four new inspectors general to oversee the operations of the various departments of transportation, space and aeronautics, commerce and small business. Plus three other bureaucrats to work with them.

AND HE'S looking for somebody to take the new post of undersecretary of defense policy at the Pentagon. It's one of two new jobs created a while back and it's been tough to fill.

Jimmy says the number of new jobs isn't significant, that he really has put a lid on hiring ceilings to keep the official government work force down. Right now, according to official figures, there are 2.9 million civilian workers on the federal payroll.

That's if you don't count the ones the government doesn't count. Toss in the outside consultants, lawyers, researchers, contractors and the total is more like seven million.

Still, Jimmy's trying. He DID fire Bella Abzug. But that doesn't really count. She worked for free.

THERE ARE two things rarely mentioned in the history books that nonetheless have profoundly affected the course of history. One is jealousy. The other is liquor.

No, I can't give you many specific instances. Nor even can the authentic historians, most probably. But the conviction remains that the shape of nations repeatedly has been changed by men blinded with jealousy or liquor or both.

Vester Found Guilty, Given 50-Year Sentence

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A weary 137th District Court jury filed out of the jury room at 12:45 a.m. Friday after 12 hours of deliberations and announced a 50-year penitentiary sentence for murder defendant Gary Lynn Vester.

The jurors returned with a guilty verdict at 7:30 p.m. Thursday after deliberating since 11:05 a.m.

Then Judge Robert C. Wright continued the week-long trial with the punishment phase, and the jurors went out again at 8:45 a.m. after hearing prosecutors ask a 99-year sentence and defense attorneys ask probation for the 20-year-old defendant.

The case was expected to be a landmark because it is the only state-level case cases in American legal history in which hypnosis was used in the identification of a defendant.

Vester was charged with killing 29-year-old Robert Rios Rivera April 1, 1978, in a field east of Lubbock, and the 23-year-old woman companion of Rivera underwent hypnosis three times last year to enhance her memory of the incident.

The already unusual trial was further distinguished by the selection of Lubbock attorney Dale Jones as a juror and his subsequent election as jury foreman.

Vester originally was charged with capital murder because Rivera was shot twice in the mouth with a .38-caliber pistol in the course of the woman's being taken out of the car and raped on a turnrow southeast of the city.

However, the charge was reduced to murder, prosecutors Richard L. (Rick) Howell and Mark McBride said, because Vester had no previous criminal record and it would have been difficult to prove him a continuing threat to society and sustain the death penalty on appeal.

His half-brother, Charles Walter Hill, 29, of 3604 Zenith Ave., last week was accused of being Vester's companion at the death scene and was charged with murder.

Fought determinedly by court-appointed defense attorneys Grady Terrell and Mackey Hancock, Howell and McBride called deputies to testify that they followed two sets of footprints from where Rivera's car was abandoned north of railroad tracks a quarter-mile west of Loop 289 and south of 19th to East 36th Street and Zenith.

Deputies Dean Bohannon and Sonny Keesee and former Deputy Ed Barclay said they then followed prints from the back of the Green Door Club on Zenith to the murder scene 1 1/4 miles to the east-northeast.

Struggling to keep her composure and breaking down on the stand once Monday morning, the woman said she and Rivera had parked on the turnrow and were sitting in the car when a loud male voice outside said, "Get out, you Mexicans!"

She said Rivera cursed the men he saw outside and that one of them, "the shorter man" she identified in court as Vester, reached in and shot Rivera twice in the head.

She said Vester then took her from the car and raped her under some nearby trees while the other man stripped Rivera and laid him in the field.

The woman said they discussed killing her, too, but finally allowed her to dress and walk stumbling and crying east across a plowed field.

The investigation, which McBride in final arguments called "possibly the most intensely investigated case in the history of this county," started when she called the Lubbock County Sheriff's Office from a farmhouse a mile away at 1:56 a.m. last April Fool's Day.

Terrell and Hancock emphasized that a blood test showed Rivera had a blood alcohol content of .21 percent, or more than half the level of legal intoxication, and they contended that the woman was too intoxicated and the night was too dark for her to make an accurate identification.

Supported by the testimony of psychiatrist Alvin Chronson of Lubbock, they also charged that the hypnosis sessions with Deaf Smith County Sheriff Travis McPherson imbued her with the conviction that Vester was the killer when in fact he might not have been.

Dr. Chronson said the questioning had "too many suggestions" not to be suspect.

Psychologist Matt Strickers testified for the prosecution, however, that McPherson used good technique and that there was nothing wrong with the sessions.

The prosecutors emphasized that the woman identified Vester from mugshots before the first session last May 18, and they said hypnosis was used only to help her remember more details and to lessen the trauma she had suffered so that she could talk about it more calmly.

Wright ruled that the hypnosis-aided identification was not crucial to the case because prior identification had been made when a pre-trial "Martinez hearing" on the issue of identification was conducted last Friday.

Scotland Yard Suspends Detectives

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard announced Friday it has suspended 66 detectives and other officers from its famous ranks pending a lengthy investigation into allegations of longstanding bribery and corruption.

The suspensions are part of a campaign by Sir David McNee, the Metropolitan Police Commissioner, to ensure integrity among the 21,000 London beat cops and investigators the Yard administrates.

McNee, a tough Scot nicknamed "The Hammer" by British criminals, is continuing the purge of "bent" or crooked cops that his predecessor, Sir Robert Mark, launched in 1972.

Under Mark's regime, nearly 100 officers left the force after formal proceedings, nearly 500 resigned, and others were jailed for up to 12 years.

One of the 66 was a detective-superintendent who formerly worked as a detective-sergeant in the Yard's Fraud Squad.

The officer was ordered not to report for duty from Friday until further notice until the Complaints Investigation Bureau looked into his activities in the same way it was investigating other officers suspended from the division, a Yard spokesman said.

It could take up to 18 months to check the mass of allegations that have built up against the suspended officers, informed police sources said.

The sources suggest that for as long as 14 years, some of them, plus officers no longer in the force but who are under investigation, accepted bribes in return for sheltering certain criminals.

The story of corruption among Scotland Yard's elite leadership includes the extraordinary case of Kenneth Drury, a former Police Commander, sentenced to eight years in prison for accepting bribes from a pornography shop owner whom he accompanied on a Mediterranean vacation.

Drury, 56 at the time of his 1977 trial, claimed he had to associate socially with James Humphreys — including a trip to Cyprus that Humphreys paid for — because the man was a police informant.

Humphreys, who ran a chain of sex shops in London's Soho night life center that grossed $500,000 annually, testified he paid out as much as $2,000 a month to police officers for 20 years to prevent police trouble at his shops.

Humphreys was convicted in 1974 of distributing pornography and brought from prison to testify against Drury.

In another trial in 1978, six Scotland Yard detectives were sent to prison for having accepted more than $200,000 a year in bribes from porn merchants. Sentenced to 12 years was former Police Commander Wallace Virgo, then 59, who at one time had been in charge of Scotland Yard's 3,500 detectives.

Bullet 'Fell Through' To Heart

One of the many surprises during the week-long Gary Lynn Vester murder trial was the testimony of Dr. Jose A. Diaz-Esquivel, the Amarillo pathologist who did the autopsy on shooting victim Robert Rios Rivera.

Dr. Díaz-Esquivel said Rivera was killed by two .38-caliber bullets fired at close range through his lips and teeth and into the lower part of his head.

One of Rivera's fingers had a bullet hole through it, he said, evidently from the victim's having been shot while he had his hands over his mouth.

Both bullets severed the big carotid artery in the neck, the pathologist said.

One of them lodged in neck cartilage, and the other deflected off bone and then fell down the severed artery.

The bullet "fell down through" the artery all the way to the heart, the pathologist said, and he found it in the left ventricle of the heart.

Several experienced law enforcement officers at the trial said they had never heard of such an occurrence in a shooting.

Robbery Suspect Returns To Bank

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Employees of a drive-in branch of the Pittsburgh National Bank were victims of a female bandit last Feb. 13.

Thursday, they watched a ski-masked woman approaching their office and one of them said:

"Ah, here she comes again."

The employees ducked behind counters and sounded an alarm. The would-be robber fled.

An FBI spokesman said a woman fitting the same description and armed with a handgun robbed the branch bank in February by demanding $1,500 in $20 bills. She got what she asked for and walked out of the bank.

Sabotage Team Blows Up Nuclear Equipment Bound For Iran

LA SEYNE-SUR-MER, France (AP) — Skillful saboteurs slipped into an industrial plant and blew up nuclear equipment bound for Iraq and two other countries early Friday. An anonymous caller later said the bombers wanted to protect the human race from future "Harrisburg catastrophes."

The sabotage team, using three plastic explosive charges, damaged equipment for loading nuclear fuel into a reactor, and a West German-ordered lid for a container to store radioactive materials at a nuclear plant, informed sources reported.

Damage was estimated in the millions of dollars. Three watchmen in the hangar-like assembly plant at the time of the 3 a.m. blasts escaped injury.

French officials said there was no radioactive material in the plant —owned by the nuclear division of the private Mediterranean Naval and Industrial Construction firm — and no danger to this town on France's Mediterranean coast near Toulon.

The motive for the bombing was unclear. It came amid increasingly vocal protest of the French government's decision not to slow down its nuclear energy program in the wake of the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant outside Harrisburg.

But the French-Iraqi nuclear deal in itself has been the center of international controversy.

The deal reportedly would send weapons-grade enriched uranium to the hardline, anti-Israeli regime in Baghdad and is known to have caused anxiety in Washington and in Jerusalem.

A telephone caller told the Paris newspaper Le Monde a previously unknown "Group of French Ecologists" was responsible for the bombing and that it had "neutralized machines dangerous to human life."

"The Harrisburg catastrophe proved to us once again the dangers of the atomic industry," he said. "We have turned to action and we will do what is necessary to safeguard the French people and the human race from nuclear horrors."

French authorities had no immediate comment on whether they believed the anonymous claim. French investigators remained tight-lipped.

The Iraqi reactors, ordered in 1976, were near completion after 300,000 man-hours of labor, the sources said.

Local Labor Disputes At Standstill

By RHONA SCHWARTZ
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Two labor disputes which hit Lubbock this week appear at a standstill, with parties for both groups waiting for the other side to make a first move toward negotiations.

In Washington, D.C., contract talks Friday were broken off in the Teamsters strike which has idled several Lubbock truck lines and tied up motor freight across the country in the longest truck strike in the history of the United States.

Negotiations also were at a standstill in the laborers union strike which locally has affected 12 contractors.

However, several contractors said they received a second set of complaint letters from the National Labor Relations Board correcting dates stated in letters received earlier this week. The discrepancies concerned dates of the most recent negotiation talks between the individual companies and the union.

H.R. Bundock, spokesman for the contractors, said he received an amended letter which said, in part, "Since on or about March 4 , 1979 and at all times thereafter it, by its agents and representatives, has refused to bargain collectively with the representatives of Laborers International Union of North America of AFL-CIO Local 1253...to represent them for the purpose of collective bargaining..."

"The amended letter doesn't change anything," Bundock said Friday. "It is my opinion that when the union found we had carefully documented every meeting with every contractor they realized they could not sustain the original charge."

The original charge, leveled at Bundock, McMillan Construction Company, Claude Martin and Son, Padgett Construction Company, Page & Wirtz, Burt Masonry Company and Smith and Sweet Masonry Company, charges the firms with "failure to bargain in good faith," which is still the issue, according to John Wallace, internationl representative of the union.

As far as the discrepancies in the amended letters go, "there was just an error in the dates put there," Wallace said. "There are seldom charges filed that aren't amended two, three or four times."

The original charge date of Dec. 11, 1978 was "the date I requested bargaining from each individual contractor. The new dates in the amended charges are the dates of the first meetings I had with each individual contractor."

The six contractors individually had withdrawn their bargaining rights from the Associated General Contractors group on dates ranging from Nov. 10 to Dec. 20. Each of the contractors decided to bargain individually with the union and apparently have done so since the December date.

Wallace acknowledged that he met with some of the contractors on dates after those he listed on the charge, but reiterated that they "just sat down and talked... They did not bargain."

"The dates have no bearing whatsoever," he said. "The charge is just as effective amended."

As far as the contractors are concerned, the amended letters do not have any bearing on the strike.

According to contractor Jack Wirtz, the letter has not changed his attitude "at all." He said he is awaiting the visit from NLRB agent Charles Steere to investigate the charges.

Robert Rorex of Claude Martin and Son said, "We did receive the amended letter and have met with them since the dates they've shown.

"We really don't know what else we can do. We reported the facts as our records show to the NLRB. We had two meetings with the union since December 1978 and we thought everything was friendly."

Several contractors agreed with Rorex' statement that they are in a postiion "just to sit back and wait and see what develops."

According to Bundock, the contractors "have never said anything other than we will sit down with them (the union negotiators) anytime on 24 hours notice."

"With the intervention of Steere, there will quite possibly be no change until he gets here," Bundock said. "I don't anticipate our making a move until he gets here."

Steere said Friday morning he would "try and get out here next week if I can." He added he didn't know at this point how he will approach the case or who he will interview.

Steere will investigate the charges and report to the NLRB director. If he decides the complaints are valid, the issue will be decided by an administrative court.

If either side is unhappy with the decision made, the case will be moved to a Washington, D.C. court and, if need be, to the federal appeals court.

No incidents of violence at the picketed construction sites have been reported in the five days of striking, although police received a call Friday morning that someone had pulled a gun on a striker.

Police had no information as to exactly when or where the incident allegedly occurred, nor was it confirmed.

Abel Gonzalez, representative for Laborers International Union of North America, said he heard the reported threat occurred at a Texas Tech University site on Sixth Street, but did not know any details.

The strikers today "will be out stronger than ever," Gonzalez said, adding that the problem with negotiations is a "lack of communication between the contractors and the union."

The union made the offer to leave the contract as it has been for the last eight years, he said, adding that the union has asked for a 7 percent raise for workers to lessen the costs of living.

Gonzalez said the strike "was going very smooth and is under control," despite the the one alleged violent incident.

Although the union has no funds to pay strikers during the course of the picketing, he said no members have indicated they will leave the picket lines.

The complaints against the seven contractors were filed with the NLRB March 30, one day prior ro expiration of a contract between the union and negotiations between the two sides.

Boys Clubs Host European Guests

Lubbock Boys' Clubs will host a group of 19 senior Boys' Club members from 14 clubs in England, Wales, Ireland, Scotland here Saturday.

During their one-day stay, members of the group will meet the staff and members of the local club, participate in regular Boys' Club activities and visit several local places of interest, including the Museum.

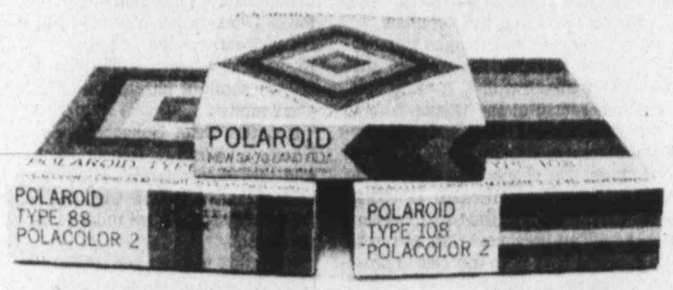

Members of the foreign group have all gained distinction at their respective clubs in Europe, officials here said. The trip is sponsored by the National Association of Boys' Clubs of the United Kingdom by arrangement with Boys' Clubs of America. Each traveler was required to raise $1,000 to offset costs.

The group began its transcontinental journey to California, where they attended the National Keystone Conference in San Diego. The trip includes stop-overs at a total of 15 Boys' Clubs in California, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, Virginia, Washington, D.C., Pennsylvania and New York.

Each Boys' Club has arranged a program geared to its city or area. In the course of the six-week tour, the European Boys' Clubbers will visit the Grand Canyon, Kennedy Museum, NASA Research Center, Smithsonian Institution and the World Trade Center.

The coast-to-coast trip will end April 29 in New York City, where the visitors will depart for London.

Second Pathologist To Investigate Deaths Of Lubbock Firemen

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

With controversy still surrounding exactly what killed three city firemen last month, a second Lubbock pathologist has been hired to conduct a separate investigation into the deaths, the Avalanche-Journal has learned.

The second pathologist, who sources asked not be identified, has been hired by Texas Employers' Insurance, the servicing agent for the Texas Municipal League, to which Lubbock belongs.

His fee reportedly is being paid by the insurance company from monies in TML's workmens' compensation fund.

TML officials could not be reached for comment Friday, but reportedly have told city officials and investigators to "spare no expense" in the second investigation.

In a written report delivered to officials Thursday, Dr. Hugh Paik said the "young, healthy firemen" — Larry Tucker, Eddie Swafford and Kenneth Haggard — "died of a rather acute hypoxia (deficiency of oxygen reaching tissues) due to smoke inhalation and carbon monoxide intoxication."

Some persons, however, have questioned the findings that the trio, the first city firemen to die in the line of duty in more than 20 years, were killed by carbon monoxide poisoning because of the less-than-fatal percentages of the gas found in their bloodstreams.

Paik said in his report that Tucker's bloodstream contained 51.5 percent carbon monoxide; Haggard's, 46.8 percent; and Swafford's, 43.3 percent saturation.

Adding further to speculation on the cause of the deaths was Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy's ruling issued Wednesday. LeCroy ruled the deaths accidental due to "carbon monoxide intoxication, smoke inhalation and possible other toxic chemicals."

While Paik's report does not mention anything about other toxic chemicals, LeCroy said he added the possibility the firemen consumed such chemicals in case future investigations reveal other poisonous gases were emitted during the March 25 blaze at Moris Kitchen and Ice Cream Parlor, 711 34th St.

Authorities still are awaiting final test results on blood and urine samples of the dead firemen. Preliminary autopsy findings revealed that no "violent substances," such as other poisonous gases, were found in the samples.

A Houston pathologist, however, said that even though the saturation percentages in the victims' bloodstreams were below the accepted fatal level, carbon monoxide still could be the killer.

"By the time the tissues were examined by chemists, there may have been some diffusion of the poison," according to Dr. Doyle N. Rogers.

"It is not uncommon that chemical analyses appear to contradict other clinical evidence," Rogers said. "The signs and symptoms (of the bodies) at the time of autopsy will be more important than the fact that chemists didn't agree with accepted findings."

Rogers added, after being told of Paik's other anatomical findings such as congestion of the liver, spleen and kidneys and hemorrhaging of lung air cells, he too would be inclined to rule carbon monoxide poisoning as the cause of the deaths.

"It's just a judgment call on my part since I did not see the bodies, but from what you've told me of his anatomical findings coupled with the fact situation (where the men died), I would agree with the carbon monoxide ruling," Rogers said.

If a definitive ruling on the cause of death is reached, investigators still will be faced with determining how the firemen were killed.

The men were wearing protective pressurized air packs when they were overcome by either toxic fumes or carbon monoxide.

A concentration of carbon monoxide was found in tanks worn by two of the victims by the Dallas office of Micro-Environmental Laboratories Inc. Investigators still are awaiting tests being conducted on the tanks to determine how much of the lethal gas was in the pressurized tanks and how it got inside them.

If investigations reveal another toxic gas also contributed to the deaths, authorities will be faced with finding out how the chemical penetrated the masks on the air packs.

South Africans Protest Hanging Of Black Nationalist Guerrilla

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Students stoned buses Friday in a black township here to protest the hanging of a young black nationalist guerrilla amid sharp criticism of the execution by foreign governments.

Reporters said police, swinging heavy rubber clubs, dispersed about 200 students in the center of Mamamelodi, where they marched to decry the predawn execution of Solomon Mahlangu, 23, by the white minority government.

Mahlangu went to the gallows inside the yellow brick walls of Pretoria central prison along with four other convicted murderers, a prison spokesman said. There were no details of the executions, and only that of Mahlangu was of a political nature.

The official Soviet news agency Tass described his trial as "a mockery of justice" because Mahlangu had not fired the shots that killed two whites in 1977.

"The crime of the authorities showed once more that South Africa constitutes a huge prison...executing Mahlangu, the racists hope to intimidate the African population," Tass said.

The ruling Social Democratic Party of West Germany, in a statement released in Bonn, accused South Africa of carrying out its policy of race segregation "with merciless cruelty" and said the hanging should "unleash shock and bitterness throughout the world..."

In New York, U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim's office issued a statement deploring South Africa's failure to heed appeals from world leaders to spare Mahlangu. He had sent three such appeals.

About noon, four police vehicles arrived and a police officer, using a loudspeaker, requested the crowd to disperse and said "the corpse you are waiting for will not be delivered."

Gun Purchaser Known

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Two high-ranking law enforcement officials Friday confirmed to the Avalanche-Journal that they now know who purchased the gun that murder defendant John Thomas Carter used to kill himself in his Crosby County jail cell in early March.

The officials, one from Lubbock County and the other from Crosby County, said the Department of Public Safety was able to raise the serial number on the "Saturday night special" gun, and by tracing that number, it was determined who bought the weapon, when it was purchased and where.

One of the officials said the .22-caliber pistol was purchased in 1978 at A-Acme Pawn Shop, 715 Broadway, in Lubbock. He added that the person who bought the gun had not been questioned as of early today, nor even told of the new finding.

"That's right; that's very true," the Crosby County official said this morning when asked about the new revelation.

The 34-year-old Carter was found shot to death about 8 a.m. March 7 in his Crosby County Jail cell. Carter had been charged with the Oct. 2, 1978, shooting death of Valton Vernoid Gandy, 73, of Lorenzo and his 68-year-old wife, Cora.

The trial in Crosbyton was in its third day of jury selection when Carter was found dead.

The weapon found near the inmate's body was sent to the DPS lab in Austin for testing. A source told The A-J that by using acid, the pistol's serial number, which had been filed down, was raised Thursday.

Both law officers contacted Friday, neither of whom wanted to be identified, said knowing the purchaser of the weapon doesn't necessarily answer the question of who got the gun to Carter or how.

The defendant, who was charged with the Lorenzo couple's murder along with Paula Bruce, 57, of Lorenzo, was thought to have been given the gun while jailed either in Crosbyton or Lubbock.

Authorities, the day after Carter was discovered dead, revealed the inmate also had 26 live rounds of .22-caliber bullets and $113 cash. The ammunition was found wrapped in tin foil and hidden in a makeshift pouch strapped to his waist and the money was discovered in his sock.

Rosalynn Carter Keynote Speaker

WASHINGTON (AP) — First lady Rosalynn Carter is scheduled to be the keynote speaker here at the National Conference on Mental Health and the Elderly on April 23-24, it was announced Friday by Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla.

Mrs. Carter is the honorary chairperson for the President's Commission on Mental Health.

Pepper, chairman of the House Select Committee on Aging, said the conference, which will be held in a House caucus room, will "take the United States out of the dark ages of discrimination against mental illness."

He said the conference will allow members of Congress, the administration, organizations concerned with mental health and the general public "to develop a unified strategy on how to enact legislation to put an end to this nation's callous disregard for the needs of its mentally ill."

For example, Pepper said in a statement, "Medicare discriminates outrageously" against mental illness.

"Medicare has harsh limits for mental health treatment contrasted to much more extensive coverage for physical illness," he said.

Pepper said that 50 to 75 percent of the elderly in nursing homes have symptoms of mental illness, but he said it is the exception rather than the rule that mental services are provided.

Also scheduled to participate in the conference are former Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., who underwent treatment for alcoholism; Dr. Herbert Pardes, director of the National Institute on Mental Health; and Robert Benedict, the U.S. commissioner on aging.

Theft Investigation Continues

The armed robbery of a local jewelry store, in which the store's owner was assaulted, tied up and apparently drugged, still was being investigated by police late Friday.

According to police, several thousand dollars of jewelry was taken by two men Thursday night from PKM Ltd. Jewels at 4509 50th St.

Owner Ron Lee Morgan, 29, who was found unconscious inside the store by officers, was in satisfactory condition at St. Mary's Hospital late Friday with injuries he suffered during the incident.

Morgan told police that he was locking-up the jewelry store Thursday night when two black men approached him. One man was armed with a knife, and the other with a small handgun, he said.

The two men forced Morgan to give them the combination to the store safe, the jeweler told police. Then the men tied Morgan's hands with rope and his legs with electrical wire.

He received minor cuts on the cheek and neck from a knife, police said. He also told police that the two men forced him to swallow five to eight capsules.

Police said they believed the capsules contained a drug that rendered Morgan unconscious. Before Morgan lost consciousnesses, however, he was able to crawl about 10 feet to reach a phone after the robbers left.

By knocking the telephone off the desk, Morgan was able to set off the store's alarm, police said.

A police dispatcher received an alarm from the business at 10 p.m. Thursday. Several minutes later, a caller said someone was bleeding inside the jewelry store.

When police arrived at the store, they found Morgan, of 4314-B 52 St., unconscious and tied up on the floor.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Don't try to make some drastic or dramatic change today. Be still for a little while and allow yourself to tune in on conditions about you. Thus you can make contact with operating forces and accept conditionns as they actually are.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Study every aspect of your existence and plan how best to improve it in the future. Do not get into arguments with others of power over some existing condition that you do not like.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Don't make radical changes at home, but improve conditions there instead. Be more practical and all turns out well.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Important that you drive with care. Be careful of what you say and avoid trouble. Support those who can further your ambitions.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A good time for you provided you avoid heavy expenditures. Analyze your position in life and know where you are headed.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Avoid making any radical changes in your lifestyle and this becomes a good period for you. Contact those whom you like and have a good time. Avoid newcomers for now.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You feel restricted in some way but can do nothing about it now. Talk over important affairs with others, but take no action as yet. Enjoy social activities.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 21) Get together with friends but don't try to change them to your liking. Being social is fine but stick to whatever is conservative. Avoid taking any regret back home with you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be tactful in stating your ideas to bigwigs. Back bigwigs and gain their favor. Take it easy and relax.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get into a promising new outlet and forget a problem you can do little about as yet. Making new contacts is wise. They can be most helpful in your advancement.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Carry through with a responsibility you have assumed without making any radical changes. Do nothing that could harm the tranquility you now enjoy at home. Show you are loyal.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Leave partnership affairs as is instead of making radical changes you have in mind, and be safe. Take part in a civic matter so you and others can be helped.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) You have work to do so postpone any trip you want to take and keep out of trouble, get much done. Forget any new temptation that could lead you in the wrong direction.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ...he or she will benefit very much if taught early to complete whatever has once been started without deviating, especially at the wrong moment when success is about to happen. Teach to be conservative.

President Of Uganda Blames Own People For Overthrow

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — President Idi Amin blamed his own people for his apparently impending overthrow by Tanzanian and Ugandan-exile invaders Friday, but defiantly declared he is a "true Ugandan and will never run away."

Exile leaders in Dar es Salaam, the Tanzanian capital, said the invasion force had encircled the Ugandan capital of Kampala but was delaying its final assault because "we would like to give as much chance as we can for innocent civilians and foreigners to leave Kampala safely and peacefully."

Amin, self-styled president for life, said in a Uganda radio broadcast, "The people now want to bring shame on themselves by permitting imperialists to come and lead them."

He began his speech by denying that the invaders were near Kampala, but later he began recapping his accomplishments in what sounded like a farewell speech.

He said he had brought his people color television, wealth, businesses and factories — apparently a reference to his controversial ouster of 40,000 Asian entrepreneurs in 1972-73 and the distribution of the spoils among Ugandans.

The chairman of the Ugandan National Liberation Front (UNLF), Yusuf Lule, said from Dar Es Salaam that the exiles were making steady progress in all directions.

His group intends to take charge in Uganda if Amin is ousted. Tanzania has promised to withdraw as soon as Amin is overthrown.

Amin refused to concede defeat despite reports that his army has disintegrated.

He said "we have come to a critical phase in Uganda," but he added, "the enemy is sitting on fire in any area he captures and will not survive in them. We shall continue to fight. We have troops, and we have arms and we have the spirit to defend our country."

He added, "I tell you, brothers and sisters, there is no need to be afraid of the enemy's cowardly bombardment," saying all he wanted was peace, love, unity and reconciliation with all his neighbors.

Later in the speech, given alternately in three languages, Amin switched to the more somber tone.

His impassioned broadcast came after it was reported his Libyan cadre was leaving, pulling the last prop from under his violent, eight-year rule.

Uganda radio, monitored in Nairobi, said Amin — in a typical act of bravado — personally appeared in Nakasero Hill broadcast studios in downtown Kampala to make his speech. The radio station was reportedly one of the few installations still in Amin's hands.

A mile or so away, thousands of the enemy were reported camped within or near the city limits. The rest of the city of 400,000 was no-man's land.

Residents of Kampala said they heard a broadcast, presumably by Tanzanian and Ugandan exile invaders, urging all residents to be off the streets by 4 p.m. apparently in anticipation of a move on Amin's largely deserted and defenseless capital.

But the residents said nothing happened at 4 p.m. and for the third day downtown Kampala was quiet, although occasional bursts of gunfire or mortar thuds heard on the southern and western fringes.

A ranking official of the UNLF had issued and then retracted a statement saying the invasion force of Tanzanians and Ugandan exiles "are in control of most of Kampala."

The statement also said the invaders were mopping up pockets of resistance and using small arms against rear-guard Libyan and Ugandan troops. About two hours after it was issued, the exile group retracted the statement saying it was not "official" and was based on rumor.

Exile sources said the Tanzanians and exiles were massed in the southern and western parts of the city and held positions in the north.

They said the invaders were delaying a final occupation of the capital to give the Libyans and the few remaining Ugandan defenders an opportunity to flee along an escape corridor deliberately left open east to Jinja, 50 miles from Kampala. Well-informed diplomats and exiles said the Libyans were beginning to leave Uganda, presumably to go home. The Libyans were sent by Amin's fellow Moslem, Col. Moammar Khadaffy, leader of Libya.

One diplomat said a convoy of 50 trucks was spotted heading north toward Nakasongolan air base 70 miles from the capital. Another diplomat reported that a large number of caskets with Libyan dead arrived by train at Jinja, apparently in preparation for shipment home.

Amin's troubles began in late October when he sent troops to occupy northern Tanzania. They were quickly pushed back, and by late January, the Tanzanians, allied with exile forces, began a slow and methodical march on Kampala, determined to end Amin's erratic, blood-spattered career.

Bus Driver Listed In Good Condition

David Thompson, driver of one of two TNM&O chartered buses from Lubbock that collided on I30 near Fort Worth Thursday, was listed in satisfactory condition late Friday in Harris Hospital at Fort Worth.

The buses were transporting Monterey High School's Cantores choir to Arlington where they performed about 8 p.m. Friday in the annual Six Flags Invitational Choir Festival.

Fourteen of the 60 students on the buses were treated for minor cuts and bruises and released from Harris Hospital after the accident which occurred along a construction area on the freeway.

Thompson underwent surgery late Thursday for abdominal injuries received when he hit the steering wheel in the collision, according to a hospital spokesman.

The trip marks the first time Monterey's choir has been invited to perform in the Six Flags contest, deemed one of the toughest singing competitions in the state.

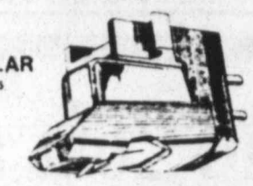

Cantores singers have been planning for the trip, which required special school board permission, for two months, according to Jerrell Snodgrass, Monterey principal.

CENSORSHIP CHARGED

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Two artists whose works were removed from an exhibit at a federal courthouse here are suing the government, charging the General Services Administraton with censorship. Robert Solomon's work includes a device to trickle water down a wall and recirculate it, a lighted sign spelling "Secret Agents," and a lighted text of a government publication on terrorism. U.S. District Court Chief Judge Joseph S. Lord III said it created a "potential for impugning the testimony of agents who testify daily" in the courthouse. Miss Denton said officials wanted to hear a tape recording on environmental issues before allowing its placement near her work.

Unemployment Rate Remains Stable, More Jobs Available

WASHINGTON (AP) — The unemployment rate remained at a 4½-year low of 5.7 percent in March, the government said Friday in a report that revealed growing optimism among Americans that they can find jobs.

The number of people who have abandoned hope of getting work fell to 725,000 in the first three months of 1979, the lowest quarterly total since the third quarter of 1974, the Labor Department said.

The government's so-called "discouraged workers" are those who say they want work, but who have stopped looking because they feel nobody will hire them. These persons are not counted as unemployed because they are no longer considered in the labor force.

The Labor Department said total employment in March increased 200,000 to a new high of 96.8 million. There were 70,000 new jobs in manufacturing, notably in electrical equipment, transportation equipment and machinery.

While enough new jobs were created to keep up with new entries into the labor force — which grew by 190,000 to a total of 102.7 million — there weren't enough to make a dent in the total of 5.9 million unemployed, the same as in February.

March also was the second straight month in which unemployment was 5.7 percent of the labor force, the lowest since August of 1974 when it was 5.4 percent, just prior to the deep 1974-1975 recession.

Unemployment stood at 5.8 percent in January and 5.9 percent in December.

Carter administration economists say it is unlikely unemployment can be reduced any further through normal economic solutions without adding to the nation's already serious problem with inflation.

In fact, they expect unemployment to increase later this year to about 6.2 percent as the result of efforts to slow economic growth to reduce inflationary pressures.

Most of those who are still unemployed are considered to be hardship cases who will need special help, such as job training, to find employment. Inner-city teenagers are a significant share of this number.

But the Labor Department said the number of discouraged workers has declined by 350,000 since mid-1977, to its lowest level since 617,000 discouraged workers were counted in 1974.

If discouraged workers were counted for purposes of compiling unemployment statistics, they would boost the overall rate of joblessness by between two-tenths and three-tenths of 1 percent, according to Sara Levitan, who is heading a commission review of the way employment figures are tabulated.

The department gave the following breakdown for unemployment in March, compared to February, for various population categories:

— Adult men: 4 percent, unchanged.

— Adult women: 5.7 percent, unchanged.

— Teen-agers: 15.5 percent, down from 16.1 percent.

— Whites: 5 percent, up from 4.9 percent.

— White teen-agers: 13.6 percent, unchanged.

— Blacks and other minorities: 11.2 percent, down from 11.9 percent.

— Black and other minority teen-agers: 31.5 percent, down from 35.5.

— Full-time workers: 5.1 percent, down from 5.2 percent.

— White-collar workers: 3.4 percent, unchanged.

— Blue-collar workers: 6.6 percent, up from 6.4 percent.

Total employment has increased by 3.5 million since March 1978 when the unemployment rate was 6.2 percent.

The increase in employment of 200,000 in March compared with gains of 345,000 in February and 450,000 in March and appeared to reflect some slowing of expansion of the economy. The administration is aiming for overall economic growth of 2.2 percent this year, down from 4 percent last year.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

A. In my Navy days during World War II, I bought "War Bonds" through payroll allotment. I still have nine $25 bonds dated from September 1943 through May 1945. Of course, these bonds are worth quite a bit of money, because of the interest accrued on them. I don't want to pay federal income tax on that interest.

Through your column, I have become aware of the new rules on these E bonds — that each one will stop accruing interest 40 years after its issue date. I have decided to convert them either to Series H bonds or the new HH bonds. Which would be more advantageous — to convert now to H bonds, or wait and convert to HH bonds, when those new bonds become available in January 1980?

A. You'll be better off waiting until the HH bonds are available. The HH bonds will pay interest, by check, every six months at a level annual rate of 6 percent. With a $1,000 HH bond, you'll receive a $30 interest check every six months over the 10-year maturity of the bond.

H bonds also pay interest, by check, every six months. But the interest starts off low and then increases in later years. That results in an average annual return of 6 percent only if the bond is held for its 10-year maturity period.

If you swapped your E bonds for a $1,000 H bond now, your first semi-annual interest check would be for $21, your next nine checks for $29 each and your next 10 checks for $32.56 each.

Assuming you're interested in getting more of your interest "up front," wait for the HH bonds to become available.

By exchanging your E bonds for either Hs or HHs, you'll postpone the federal income tax on your accrued E bonds interest until you redeem the Hs or HHs you receive in the exchange. The move you are planning is the only one open for people who don't want to be hit with fat federal income taxes on accrued E bond interest.

Q. The company for which I worked until my retirement had a thrift plan through which employees could purchase company stock. The company supplied me with a record of all those transactions.

But twice during that period, I received "rights" enabling me to buy shares of the stock outside the plan. By exercising my rights, I acquired a certificate for three shares dated Nov. 27, 1957, and a certificate for six shares dated March 5, 1970. I failed to keep a record of the prices I paid for those shares. How can I find out the prices of the company's stock on those two dates?

A. You can go to the public library and look up the microfilm record of newspaper stock market price quotations of that stock on those particular dates.

But that won't do you much good — because a stock certificate is seldom, if ever, issued on the same day you buy the stock. There is usually a time lag of several weeks — often longer.

You have to find out the price at which the "rights offerings" of that stock were made in 1957 and 1970. Write to the company and ask. Address your letter to the office of the corporate secretary. As a stockholder, you're a part owner of the company. The corporate secretary and other officers of the company are your hired hands.

If — in the unlikely circumstance — you get no answer, you can always visit the financial reference section of a big library. There, you can search through the big financial manuals published by Standard & Poor's Corp. and Moody's Investors Services. Those manuals carry the kind of information you seek.

• • •

Q. Can a person put $10,000 in a six-month savings certificate, using her 13-year-old granddaughter's name and Social Security number, so that the grandmother gets the interest and keeps the money without paying income taxes?

A. Not unless that person deliberately sets out to evade taxes. That, as you undoubtedly realize, is a crime — and no way to train a child

OIL SPILL SPREADS

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Oil spilled from a Soviet tanker aground off the Lithuanian coast has reached the Stockholm area, some 200 miles across the Baltic Sea, the Swedish coast guard said Friday. It said thousands of seabirds and seals and some of the area's finest beaches were threatened. Fifteen coast guard patrol boats equipped with skimmers were trying to stem the spread of the oil. Soviet reports said 1.6 million gallons had spilled from the tanker, which went aground Feb. 27.

Governor Has 'Serious Doubts' About Re-Opening Nuclear Plant

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Gov. Dick Thornburgh told Pennsylvania residents Friday he has "deep and serious doubts" about ever re-opening the Three Mile Island nuclear plant.

The governor said in the statewide broadcast via public television he has asked the federal government to inspect four other nuclear reactors in the state "to assure me, if it can, that the accident on Three Mile Island cannot and shall not be repeated."

Thornburgh said he would appoint a recovery committee to deal with the nation's worst commercial nuclear power accident.

"The remainder of my term as governor will be dedicated from this moment to the proposition that it must not happen again. I now have doubts — deep and serious doubts — about opening the plant on Three Mile Island again," he added.

Authorities have said it could take several years to decontaminate the reactor and an auxiliary building filled with radioactive matter.

Engineers on Friday overcame two snags, including a brief failure in the primary cooling system, in their efforts to cool the facility's contaminated reactor, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said.

Authorities said Friday that a week-old advisory that pre-school children and pregnant women remain at least five miles from the plant will continue until the auxiliary building is decontaminated.

A lawsuit was filed seeking to force the plant to close, and three congressmen announced a bill to require improved communications systems for nuclear power plants.

And the White House said federal officials have found "absolutely no danger" from food grown, harvested or produced in the area of the crippled plant.

"As far as it is humanly possible to determine, the food from the Three Mile Island area is as safe to produce, buy, transport, prepare and eat as the food available at any other place in the United States," said a statement issued by the White House press office.

A motor failure at 1:15 p.m. stopped pumping water to the damaged core for two or three minutes before a backup pump kicked on. Harold Denton, NRC chief of operations, said the breakdown was anticipated, and that there were five backup systems.

Earlier, engineers had to fix balky equipment to resume pumping radioactive gas from tanks in an auxiliary building back into the sealed reactor containment housing.

A small amount of radiation was vented from the auxiliary building because of the equipment problem, officials said. However, airborne radiation levels never rose above 0.3 millirems per hour, within the radiation range of the past 24 hours, said James Hanchett, an NRC spokesman.

The pumping operation, used briefly during the morning, was a preliminary step in a plan to reduce the fuel core's temperature to below the boiling point, thus putting it into a safe and dormant state.

Asked Friday if the pump repair would delay the 10-day schedule for a cold shutdown, Hanchett said, "It depends on how long it lasts."

At midmorning, steam whooshed from a non-nuclear boiler on the other end of the island, startling workers and reporters near the site.

"It shook me up, you better believe it shook me up," said a security guard.

Meanwhile, four nearby residents asked a judge to close the crippled facility and force its owners to pay for the medical treatment of over half a million people for the next 20 years.

The class action suit, filed in Dauphin County Court against the plant's owners Thursday, claims the March 28 nuclear accident "caused the release of huge amounts of nuclear energy with attendant risk of explosion, fire and-or nuclear fallout, so huge in magnitude as to be potentially destructive of all human and animal life within at least a 60-mile radius of the Three Mile Island facility."

The action asks medical reimbursement for the treatment of 636,000 residents living within 20 miles of the plant. It claims they should have medical checkups four times a year for the next two decades to detect possible cancers resulting from the radiation.

And three Pennsylvania congressmen, whose districts encircle the plant, announced at a news conference that they had introduced legislation to create a fail-safe communications system in event of another nuclear accident.

Rep. Allen Ertel told reporters that Three Mile Island "was virtually cut off from the outside world" during the first days of the emergency.

"It was cut off," he said, "because a three quarters of a billion dollar facility, with the potential to poison thousands of people, shared a communication system designed to meet the needs of the small towns and farms surrounding it.

"There were serious deficiencies and breakdowns in communications," Ertel said.

The lawmaker said that under the legislation, sophisticated communications systems would be required at every U.S. nuclear power plant to provide an uninterrupted emergency link between the plant, civil defense authorities, Nuclear Regulatory Commission offices, and the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

The NRC also would have the final authority to make decisions during a nuclear emergency.

Hospital Settles With Plaintiff

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Wake Medical Center officials said Thursday they will settle out of court for $1.15 million with a Raleigh woman who suffered permanent brain damage during an operation at the hospital.

The suit, filed by Carolyn B. Gardner and her husband, was against the hospital, three anesthesiologists, a neurologist, two plastic surgeons, and a nurse anesthetist.

Involved in the settlement are the hospital, the anesthesiologists, the nurse anesthetist, Air Products and Chemicals Inc., a Delaware corporation, and the Foregger Company Inc., a New York corporation, the hospital said.

The neurologist and two plastic surgeons were not held liable in the settlement.

In the suit, the Gardners claim that while Mrs. Gardner was being prepared for surgery she received a nitrogen-oxygen anesthestic from an improperly functioning anesthesia machine. Mrs. Gardner alleges she was given 9 percent oxygen in the anesthesia instead of a mixture containing 33 percent oxygen. She claims her heart stopped, she turned blue and her condition went unnoticed for "several minutes." As a result, she contends, she suffered permanent brain damage and is now bedridden, blind and cannot control her bladder.

Youth Assessed Probated Term

An 18-year-old Lubbock youth has been found guilty in 237th District Court of aggravated robbery and has been given a 10-year probated sentence.

He had been denied bond on the basis of already having been charged with aggravated robbery in an Aug. 4, 1978, hold-up of a trucker at 66th Street and Elm.

Booker has yet to be tried on the first charge, and defense attorney Glenn Archer asked probation because Booker had not previously been convicted of a felony.

State law prevents a jury from being told of other pending charges.

Alleged Rapists, Woman Who Reported Rape Elude Lubbock Police

Lubbock County sheriff's deputies were investigating Friday the rape of a young woman by two men who offered her a ride home from a club.

Deputies also were searching Friday for the woman who reported the rape. The sheriff's department had been unable to contact the woman since she had reported the rape Thursday night.

The victim, whose exact age was unknown, told deputies she went with several friends to a club on the Idalou Highway about 1 p.m. Thursday. She said her friends left, and when they had not returned by 4:30 p.m., she accepted a ride from three Mexican-American men.

She said they drove to a house and let one of the men off, and then, after getting some tapes from the house of one of the suspects, all three drove on South Quirt Avenue past the Lubbock International Airport to a cotton gin.

The suspects reportedly threatened the woman that if she didn't do what they wanted her to do she would be tied up and assaulted anyway.

She said that after the driver raped her, she asked if she could go. The men let her out of their black striped gold car, and she began to run, but was caught and dragged back into the car, according to reports.

Deputies were told the second suspect got into the back seat and raped her while his companion drove back into the city. She said she was able to jump out of the car at 35th Street and Avenue A, and ran to a nearby club where she called police.

The woman, who was treated at Health Sciences Center Hospital, described her attackers as young Mexican-Americans. She said the men were both under 6 feet tall, with one of the suspects wearing a blue T-shirt and blue jeans, and the other clad in a beige or light orange T-shirt with a picture of a television actress on the front.

The victim said the assault occurred between 4:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

A Lubbock man told police Friday that someone shot his car twice as he was driving eastbound in the 2400-block of Cornell Street. Faustino Wilson Pena, 18, of 2505 N. Ave. S, reported that a blue Ford LTD pulled over into his lane of traffic and scraped the front left fender of his car.

Faustino said he hollered at the driver of the other car, who then pulled out a pistol and shot Faustino's car twice, once in the door and once in the fender. Faustino said he knew who the driver was, but did not know his last name.

Shallowater Beds Warehouse of 2519 Stanford reported to police Friday that waterbeds and stereo equipment valued at $1,175 was stolen sometime late Thursday night or early Friday morning.

Gary Robertson, 26, co-owner of the store, told police that the store was entered by someone breaking a window and then climbing in to unlock the back door. Robertson said he thought the suspects were driving a reddish-orange van because of some paint straped on a wooden cabinet near the back door.

In another incident being investigated by deputies, Frank Ballato of Slaton said that about 9:55 p.m. Thursday he stopped south of New Deal to help a motorist when a car pulled up behind his wrecker, and one of three Mexican-American men inside the vehicle shot at him several times with a small handgun.

Ballato, who was not injured, said he was traveling on U.S. 87 just south of New Deal when he saw another car pull off the road and stop. He said he pulled up behind the vehicle to see if he could be of any assistance when the other car appeared and shots were fired.

Reports show Ballato was able to drive off, but not before backing into the suspects' Ford Falcon. He said the three men followed him on U.S. 87 for about two miles and then they turned off.

Lubbock police today were investigating a reported assault on a 24-year-old woman at her 35th Street apartment early Friday morning.

The woman, who suffered a bruised cheek and cut lip, said that since Monday she had been receiving threats over the telephone. The caller, she said, would tell her he was going to "cut up your face," and said he was watching her at all times.

And at 12:15 p.m. Friday the woman reportedly was entering her apartment when she was pushed from behind. She said she turned around and was struck and knocked to the ground by a man she described as white, between 18 and 25, with a medium build and blond hair.

She said the man's voice sounded like that of the person who had been threatening her over the phone.

The woman said that when the man hit her a second time she screamed, scaring off the suspect. She said that several hours before the assault, she had received a threat that she was going to be hurt sooner than she thought.

CHICKEN OF A HAWK — Sir Henry the Chicken Hawk recently surprised officials at the Victoria, Texas, Zoo when "he" laid several eggs. That's when the zoo pulled the old switcheroo, swapping hen's eggs for the hawk's eggs. When the chicks pecked out of their shells, Sir Henry was quick to assume motherly duties, although she believed the young chicks' diet should consist of more mouse and less cracked corn. If Sir Henry has her way, her foster children may grow up to be the toughest chickens on the block. (AP Laserphoto)

Silkwood Food Possible Contamination Target

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Someone wanting to contaminate Karen Silkwood's apartment with radioactivity could have put plutonium on her sandwich foods, a Kerr-McGee Corp. official testified Friday.

On cross-examination, Wayne Norwood, 51, of Oklahoma City again discussed his Nov. 7, 1974, investigation of the contamination of Miss Silkwood's Edmond, Okla., apartment. He said the highest readings of radioactivity came from a package of bologna and cheese in the apartment refrigerator. Miss Silkwood usually brought her lunch to work, he said.

"If somebody was going to contaminate Karen Silkwood — if they wanted to — one area she would be sure to touch would be the sandwich foods, isn't that true?" Silkwood attorney Gerry Spence asked.

"Yes," Norwood said, "I think that would be a fair assumption."

Norwood was the health and safety manager at Kerr-McGee's nuclear fuel plant near Crescent, Okla., when Miss Silkwood died in a Nov. 13, 1974, auto crash. She was a lab technician at the plant.

In the past 16 years, Norwood said he hasn't taken any refresher college courses in health physics, mostly because there aren't any available in the Oklahoma City area. He said he never asked company permission to attend out-of-town classes or seminars.

"A degree in raising chickens and four courses were your total college training in the field, isn't that true?" Spence said.

"In college, yes sir," Norwood said.

"Did the college courses qualify you to receive a degree as a health physicist?" Spence asked.

"As far as a college degree, no sir," Norwood said.

Spence asked whether Miss Silkwood may have been checking a rumor when she asked about her "high urine samples" before the urinalysis was complete. Norwood said it was possible.

He testified on direct examination he was suspicious when she asked about the urine samples before the results were complete.

On cross-examination, he said all of the plant's 120 employees had access to Miss Silkwood's urine sample collection kit before she took it home. There has been testimony the urine samples weren't contaminated when they were excreted, but were found to be contaminated when tested.

The $11.5 million lawsuit alleges Kerr-McGee was negligent in connection with the contamination of Miss Silkwood and her apartment.

Kerr-McGee claims she contaminated herself, possibly while spiking her urine samples to dramatize her claims about working conditions.

Norwood said yes when Spence asked if the ultimate control of the plant rested with people interested in production and money-making.

Methodist Church Sets Organ Recital For Today

Forrest Heights United Methodist Church, 3007 33rd St., will present Clark Terrell, assistant church organist, in an organ recital at 4 p.m. today.

The program will include the following compositions: "The Little Fugue in G Minor," by J.S. Bach; "Noel with Variations," by Claude Luis Balbustre; "Swiss Noel with Variations," by Luis Claude Daquin; "Chorale and Chorale Prelude on 'Savior of the Heathen, Come,'" by Dietrich Buxtehude; "Toccata in D Minor (Dorian)," by J.S. Bach; "Sonata No. 2," by Felix Mendelssohn; and "Chorale and Chorale Prelude on 'Now Thank We All Our God,'" by Sigfrid Karg-Elert.

Terrell is a senior pre-medical student at Texas Tech University and has been a member of the Forrest Heights chancel choir and adult handbell choir for three years.

His organ teachers have been Mrs. M.N. Phy of Stamford, Darrell Knapp and C. Roy Wilson, both of Lubbock. He has served as organist at St. John's United Methodist Church in Stamford and at Oakwood United Methodist Church in Lubbock, as well as at Forrest Heights United Methodist Church.

Terrell's musical awards include All-District Band, two years; first chair trombone, Stamford High School, four years. He has received outstanding first division awards on six occasions for his solo and ensemble competition on the trombone. He was bandsman of the year in 1974-75 and played senior piano and organ recitals.

He was listed in Who's Who Among American High School Students from 1973-75, and in the Society of Distinguished American High School Students 1974-75. He was a member of the National Honor Society and the National Latin Honor Society and was a Nuclear Science Symposium delegate in Austin in 1975.

Terrell was the highest honor student each of his four high school years and was valedictorian of the 1975 graduating class at Stamford High School. He has received outstanding recognition in science (four years), mathematics (four years), English (four years), Latin (four years), history (two years), band (two years), health (one year), civics (one year). He was the Science Fair winner in biology in 1972.

At Texas Tech he is a four-year member of the Texas Tech University Pre-Medical Society; a member of the Alpha Epsilon Delta Honorary Pre-Medical Society and an officer; a four-year member of Phi Eta Sigma Honorary Society; a two-year member of the Texas Association of German Students; and the recipient of the Pre-Medical Society's Junior Pre-Medical Award for 1978.

Terrell has been on the Dean's List for seven consecutive semesters at Texas Tech and was on the National Dean's List for 1977-78. He is the recipient of the Texas Tech University Scholarship for four years; the Texas Tech University Tuition Scholarship for 1976-77; the W.B. and Mozelle Rushing Scholarships of the Texas Tech Dad's Association, 1976-77; the Dr. E.W. Jones Pre-Medical Memorial Scholarship, 1977-78; the Frank and Zelma Morrow Memorial Scholarship, 1975-76; an Achievement Rewards for College Scientists Foundation Scholarship, 1978-79; and a chancel choir scholarship of Forrest Heights United Methodist Church.

Passover Observance Begins Wednesday

Members of the Jewish faith begin observing Passover, one of the most ancient, if not the most ancient of Jewish holidays, at sundown Wednesday. Observance of the Jewish holiday continues for eight days.

Members of Congregation Shaareth Israel, 1706 23rd St., will gather for a short prayer service at 6 p.m. Wednesday to begin observance of the Passover. Following the prayer service members of the congregation will return to their homes for a traditional Seder meal.

According to Mrs. Alexander Kline, wife of Dr. Alexander Kline, rabbi of the local congregation, Passover is regarded as a holiday of freedom for the Jewish people. She added that the holiday observance is a family-centered one.

Passover is a time for Jewish families to remember their people's slavery in Egypt, the escape from bondage and their journey in the desert.

The holiday commemorates the Jewish people's Exodus from Egypt. According to tradition, the first Passover was preordained by Moses at the command of God. The Israelites were commanded to select a lamb to kill and to sprinkle with its blood the lintel and side post of the doors of their dwellings so that the Lord should "pass-over" them when he went forth to slay the firstborn of the Egyptians.

During the Seder meal, which begins at sundown Wednesday, the family and people gathered around the table read through an entire prayer book, or "Haggadah."

Placed on the Seder table are three Matzos, or unleavened bread; a roasted shankbone; a roasted egg; bitter herbs; charoses; parsley, lettuce or watercress; dishes of salt water; a wine goblet; and the "Cup of Elijah." each of the foods and items on the Seder table have a special meaning for members of the Jewish faith.

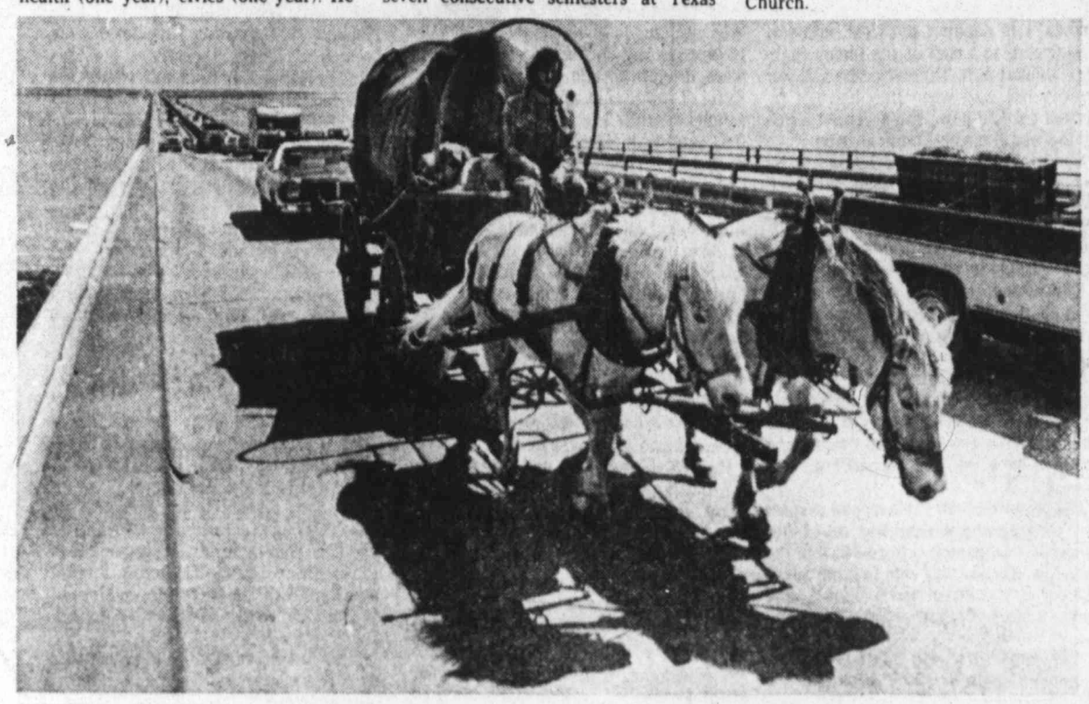

LCC Elections Resume With Runoffs

Student senate and class president elections at Lubbock Christian College produced five new officeholders and a pair of runoff elections for the other two posts.

Pam Key of Spring, David Stewart of Lubbock, and Curtis Parrish of Alamogordo, N.M. will be candidates in a runoff election Tuesday for the office of sophomore class president.

GUATEMALA BOUND — Quebec resident Jonn Lemay stopped -or at least slowed - traffic on Nueces Bay Causeway just inside the Corpus Christi city limits Friday morning in his covered wagon. Lemay is on his way to Guatemala after wintering in Louisiana. The young Canadian has been on the road for nine months with his dog. The wagon is pulled by a pair of Norwegian fjord horses. Emphasis On Hunger To Include Fasting

Some Texas Tech students, faculty and staff will fast from 8 p.m. Monday until 8 p.m. Tuesday as part of "Hunger Emphasis Day" at Tech.

This 24-hour observance will give people at least a slight idea of the problem of hunger, according to organizers.

Sponsors of the event are Texas Tech's campus ministry centers. Co-sponsors of the event are the university's Women's Service Organization, Panhellenic and Alpha Phi Omega. The event is approved by the institution's Office of Student Life.

A hunger issues forum (with no meal) is scheduled to run from noon to 1:15 p.m. Tuesday in the University Center Senate Room on the Texas Tech campus.

Donations of money will be collected Tuesday at tables in the University Center. Volunteers from the sponsoring groups will be at tables near the center's snack bar from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m. Tuesday.

A reception at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the center's Senate Room will mark the end of the fast with light refreshments served. During the reception a preliminary total of money donated will be announced.

Half of the money raised will go to a local hunger relief agency, Neighborhood House, located at 2009 E. 13th St. In 1978 Neighborhood House helped more than 10,000 needy individuals with food, clothing and other emergency relief.

The other half of the proceeds will go to CRO, the Christian Rural Overseas Program, which is a hunger relief agency working around the world on behalf of churches. Its support comes from many denominations and groups, as well as from secular sources.

All money donated during the event will go directly to fight hunger locally and in the world. No donations will be used for administrative or publicity expenses by any sponsoring group.

Further information about the special event may be obtained by contacting the Rev. Roger Loyd, Hunger Emphasis Day coordinator, at 2420 15th St., or by calling 762-8749. A contribution may be mailed to the Rev. Bill Chapman, 2412 13th St., Lubbock, 79401, or by calling 763-4391.

Court Decides Ticket Fight

MINEOLA, N.Y. (UPI) — The judge was not pleased.

The court has more important things to do, he rumbled, than to decide whether Brenda Blinderman is entitled to half of her ex-husband's New York Islanders hockey play-off tickets this season.

"You have compelled this court to take time from its busy and overburdened schedule to referee a frivolous and nonsensical dispute," State Supreme Court Justice Andrew DiPaola told the Blindermans and their attorneys Thursday.

"If it were possible ... this court would assess costs to be paid equally by both parties," DiPaola said.

With that, DiPaola rejected the 33-year-old Cedarhurst divorcee's contention that an earlier court order, issued after she and her husband, Steven, were divorced in 1977, gave her use of playoff seats for alternate games.

Richard T. Sinrod, attorney for the 35-year-old Blinderman, argued that the order applied only to the seats for last year's playoffs.

Singing-Witnessing Revival Scheduled

LAMESA (Special) — Joseph R. Abston and his wife, Carol, will lead a singing-witnessing revival Sunday through Wednesday at the Northridge United Methodist Church in Lamesa.

Services will be at 7:30 p.m. daily and a 10 a.m. worship service is scheduled Monday through Wednesday.

For the past 10 years, Abston has been administrative director of the Christian music ministry of Tyler Street United Methodist Church in Dallas. The couple is now living in Houston.

Abston appears as an organist and tenor soloist. He has conducted music in revivals since the age of 18.

A graduate of Wayland Baptist College in Plainview, Abston has done graduate work at UCLA, San Jose State University, Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary, Orange County State University-Fullteron, Chapman College and Baylor University.

This summer he will study in Austria in specialized areas of vocal conducting and orchestral conducting.

Mrs. Abston will be assisting her husband in singing and playing musical accompaniment and in a morning Bible study during the revival.

An Oklahoma native, she moved to Houston as a teen-ager and graduated from Houston Business College.

The couple has three daughters and a son.

STRERILIZATION INCREASES

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — The number of Indonesians accepting sterilization more than doubled last year, the official Antara news agency said. The agency said the trend was encouraging because nearly 90 percent of this heavily populated nation is Moslem, and many conservative Moslems oppose sterilization.

CHURCH BRIEFS

Shepherd of the Plains Evangelical Lutheran Church, 73rd Street and Frankford Avenue, is holding worship services at 7:30 p.m. Maundy Thursday and Good Friday in the church facility.

• • •

The adult fellowship of Covenant Presbyterian Church is attending a dinner theatre performance of "Star Spangled Girl" by Neil Simon at 6:30 p.m. today on the Lubbock Christian College campus.

Church Of Christ Sets Gospel Meeting

LEVELLAND (Special) — Rick Webb of Austin will conduct a gospel meeting at the 13th Street and Avenue K Church of Christ here Sunday through Wednesday.

Sunday services are at 10:30 a.m. and 6 p.m. and weekday services are at 7:30 p.m.

Webb attended the West Angelo School of Evangelism in San Angelo and was ordained to the ministry in 1971. He is currently the evangelist with the Fairview Church of Christ in Austin.

During the past eight years he has made three missionary tours to India. While in India, he assisted in the establishment of a school for training evangelists in south central India and in the operation of homes for homeless Indian children. He is an adviser to the board of directors of the John Abraham Foundation, which is involved in alleviating hunger and deprivation around the world.

Showing Of Biblical Films Scheduled

The New Testament films on the Book of Luke from the New Media Bible will be shown at 7 p.m. Sunday in the Garden Room of St. John's United Methodist Church, 1501 University Ave.

The New Media Bible, produced by the Genesis Project of New York, reportedly represents the biggest motion picture project ever undertaken. The entire Bible will be translated onto film in an effort that is expected to take more than 30 years and cost hundreds of millions of dollars to complete.

The first 10 parts are now finished and cover the first 22 chapters of the Old Testament Book of Genesis and the first two chapters of the Gospel of Saint Luke. Included in the first series are such well-known Biblical accounts as the Creation, Adam and Eve, Cain and Abel, Noah and the Flood, Sodom and Gomorrah, Abraham and Isaac, as well as the Annunciation and the Nativity of Jesus.

Youths To Lead Baptist Revival

A team of students from Wayland Baptist College will conduct a youth-led revival beginning Wednesday at Slide Baptist Church.

Services will be at 7:30 p.m. daily Wednesday through Saturday and at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Easter Sunday, April 15, at the church, located eight miles south of Loop 289 on Slide Road.

The Rev. Ray Cunningham, pastor of the church, said the theme for the special revival is "Because He Lives," the title of one of the hymns sung by the church's youth choir, led by C.V. Blake.

Team captain of the Wayland group is Kirby Kennedy, a junior from Anton. Leading the preaching during the revival will be Jim Wilson, a sophomore from Fort Worth, and music director will be Kevin Sinclair, a freshman from Amarillo.

The evangelistic team represents the Wayland Baptist Student Union SCOPE program, which means "Students plus Churches equals Opportunity in Participation in Evangelism."

There will be fellowship following each nightly service.

To close out the revival Easter Sunday, members of the Slide Baptist Church youth choir will serve as teachers of all Sunday School classes at the church.

Missionary Holds Gospel Meeting

A longtime missionary to Thailand and now Sunset Church of Christ missionary-in-residence, Parker Henderson, is the evangelist for the church's spring gospel meeting Sunday through Wednesday.

Henderson has been an instructor in the Sunset School of Preaching when he has been on furlough from his work in Thailand. He was the first American evangelist to enter Thailand in February 1958 and was supported by the University Avenue Church of Christ in Austin for more than 21 years.

This summer he and his wife begin working in Trinidad where he will direct a School of Preaching under the oversight of the North 14th Street Church of Christ in Lamesa.

Arkansas Minister Leads Bold Missions Revival

Rev. Bill Lewis from Bryant, Ark., is leading a revival for Bold Missions Sunday through Friday at Memorial Baptist Church, 39th Street and Flint Avenue.

Jimmy Gary of Lubbock is leading the music for the revival and bringing special music each night. He also will be presenting chalk talks during the week of revival at the local church.

Services Sunday are at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Weekday services will be held at 7:30 p.m. daily.

The message of Holy Week is not a sad one. Rather, it is the most joyous news we will ever hear! The glory of the resurrection could not have happened without the stark tragedy of Good Friday . . . and because Christ overcame death, we are assured of eternal life. It is certain that we will live again and forever, in a new way that God has planned for us.

Jesus strove constantly to make this blessed truth plain. Time and time again we are told of God's great love, and of His constant concern for the world and people He created.

The highest point of Christ's ministry was the cross. Because of its tremendous power we, as Christians, have been given a ceaseless source of comfort. Come to the church of your choice.

Tractor Pullers Fill Coliseum With Sound, Fury Of Contest

By RAYNIE HARDESTY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Eardrum-bursting blasts of sound and flames spouting from exhaust pipes filled the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum Friday night as modified tractors and trucks strained to drag tons of dead weight down a 175-foot track.

The powerful machines are competing for cash prizes in the 1979 South Plains Invitational Tractor Pull. The event is Lubbock's first indoor tractor pull.

Custom-built tractor frames bearing Allison airplane engines of World War II vintage or as many as three truck engines screamed under the pressure of the pull, causing the structure to tremble and spectators to hold their ears.

Many of the vehicles never made it to the end before the weight sled buried the back wheels into the dirt or a U-joint, rear end or transmission broke under the strain.

The drivers and owners of the machines will test their vehicles against even more weight tonight, beginning at 7 p.m.

Most of the drivers also are the designers, builders and owners of the machines which cost from $5,000 to $40,000 and burn a combination of airplane fuel and alcohol to drag the mechanized sled down a dirt-packed track.

But Eddie Ray Anderson, who has competed in tractor pulls for about four years, says, "Its the only profitable hobby I've ever had."

Anderson and his partner Billy Hardin, both of Whitewright, began building their airplane engine-powered tractor after seeing the southwest finals in Fort Worth.

Top pullers of the nation, according to R.B. Allen, executive vice president of Southwest Hardware and Implement Association which is sponsoring the power exhibition, are coming from Minnesota, Oklahoma, Colorado, Louisiana, New Mexico and Texas hoping to take home the $1,000 prize for first place in each division.

Tractor pulling events came to the Southwest in 1972 in a Fort Worth show, but were popular in the Midwest and Northeast many years before that. The vehicles are divided into classes by weight.

Joe Wolfe of Whitewright and James Griffin of Tom Bean spend all but two months of the year traveling to tractor pulls across the Southwest. They are self-employed.

Wolfe says the prize money they win pays for both their tractor, powered by an Allison airplane engine obtained as Air Force surplus, and travel expenses for both his and Griffin's family.

The Wolfe-Griffin machine won first place last year in the Fort Worth Southwest Tractor Pull, considered the biggest tractor pull of the area.

The team takes turns driving the vehicle in each event and estimated that their tractor has cost them about $15,000.

Anderson said that even though the powerful machines resemble tractors because of the wheels and seat, only the rear end of his vehicle is originally from a tractor.

Anderson and Hardin designed and built the rest of the powerful machine from the frame to the motor, installing special transmissions and other parts for the heavy duty pulling.

Battle Lines Form On Oil Profits Tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional battle lines began forming Friday around President Carter's proposal for a "windfall profits tax" on oil companies, with his formula for distributing the revenues drawing the most fire.

Leaders in both chambers said the president would have a hard time winning congressional approval for the plan as submitted, especially in the Senate, where oil industry allies constitute a powerful obstacle to any energy tax proposal.

Sources close to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said O'Neill felt the tax plan would squeak through the House in pretty much the form proposed by Carter, but that it would have severe problems in the Senate.

Tax Plan Jeopardized

A Senate move to give proceeds from the tax back to oil companies could result in a drawn-out fight in a House-Senate conference committee that might wind up torpedoing the entire tax plan, various congressional sources said.

Carter proposed the tax to absorb the additional revenues oil companies would reap under his accompanying decision — which does not require congressional approval — to gradually lift price controls on U.S.-produced crude oil by mid-1981.

The president proposed taxing half the additional profits flowing to companies and using the proceeds for mass transit projects, aid to the poor and to develop new sources of energy.

GOP Raps Tax

At a news conference, Republican House leaders criticized Carter's proposal to use the windfall profits tax for anything other than to encourage increased oil production, although they generally agreed with his decision to lift price controls.

"The plan, if it is a plan, is too late and not headed in the right direction," said House Minority Leader John Rhodes of Arizona. "The president is going back to the same old idea, which hasn't worked, of trying to conserve energy by raising prices."

Rhodes reiterated a longstanding GOP contention that any windfall profits tax should have a so-called "plowback" provision allowing oil companies to escape the tax by agreeing to use extra profits to drill for more oil.

The Republican leader predicted Congress would pass some form of windfall profits tax this year — but not the one proposed by the president.

Rep. Clarence J. Brown, R-Ohio, ranking minority member on the House energy and power subcommittee, said Carter's plan does little to either reduce U.S. reliance on oil imports or to enhance U.S. production.

"When someone gets a cartel on apples, you don't cut down your own apple trees," Brown said. "You plant more apples."

And Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill., an announced presidential candidate, argued that the oil companies, if allowed to keep profits resulting from deregulation, would spend the money on exploration. "For the government to spend it would be counterproductive," Crane said at a news conference in South Burlington, Vt.

Rhodes indicated that one part of Carter's plan that may appeal to Republicans is abolition of free parking spaces for thousands of federal employees around the country to save gasoline and encourage car-pooling and more use of mass transit.

Teamster Contract Talks Break Down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Striking Teamsters and trucking industry bargainers broke off contract talks Friday, dashing hopes for a quick end to the longest trucking shutdown in U.S. history.

Chief federal mediator Wayne L. Horvitz said that after two days of talks, bargainers were "no closer (to a settlement) than we were at the time the strike started last Saturday night."

The breakdown in the negotiations made it virtually certain that the six-day nationwide work stoppage would drag into next week and threaten new economic disruptions, particularly in the hard-hit auto industry. The government predicted layoffs of auto workers would climb past the 200,000 mark next week because of parts shortages.

Despite the developments, the Carter administration repeated its decision not to seek a court order to end the shutdown.

"Our stance at this point is that the impact on the nation's health and safety does not warrant" using the Taft-Hartley Act, said one administration official who asked not to be identified by name. The law permits the president to seek a court order to end a work stoppage.

Horvitz said he would remain in contact with representatives of the two sides over the weekend, but added he was not optimistic talks could be resumed that quickly.

He told reporters that bargainers remained at odds over the "total cost package" of a new three-year contract.

J. Curtis Counts, industry's chief bargainer, said the union was demanding a settlement that would violate the Carter administration's anti-inflation guidelines and be "tremendously costly" for employers. Asked how costly, he replied, "Megabucks."

Union President Frank Fitzsimmons said he believed the union's demands would fit the guidelines.

Even so, he added, "We're not negotiating a contract on the basis of the guidelines. We're negotiating on the basis of inflation."

Fitzsimmons also complained that Counts has no experience in the trucking industry and at one point alluded to the industry bargainer's "incompetence."

Fitzsimmons called on the industry to end its lockout of teamster employees and "resume negotiations at any time the industry would show promise of progress." He also called on company owners to come to the bargaining table in person, saying the industry's professional bargainers "lacked an undersanding of the industry ... as well as an appreciation of our members' needs."

Voters Face Controversies

A controversial proposition to combine Midland's two high schools will be put before the voters in a non-binding referendum today.

The proposal to consolidate Robert E. Lee High School and Midland High School has sparked high voter interest in Midland.

Don Ferguson, business manager for the Midland school system, attributed the record number of absentee ballots cast — slightly more than 1,800 — to interest in the proposition.

Proponents say the controversial plan, which would send the city's sophomores to one high school and its juniors and seniors to another, was conceived to offset declining enrollments. Lower enrollments, proponents say, threaten the existence of specialized courses in each of the schools.

Proponents also argue consolidation would provide more efficient use of teachers and do away with superfluous programs.

But Citizens for Two High Schools, a group opposing consolidation, cite their desire for a "two-school" town.

"We feel we have good inter-city rivalry between the two schools, and the plan would destroy that," said Larry McIntosh, a spokesman for the group.

He added that consolidation would cause transportation problems for some students, would reduce the participation of students in extracurricular activities and ultimately would result in greater costs to the taxpayer.

Liquor Lobbyists Said Stalling Gasohol

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The future of commercial production of gasohol in Texas could be wiped out unless a strong lobbying effort by the liquor industry is overcome, say state legislators.

Several bills paving the way for the production of gasohol, a hybrid fuel composed of alcohol and unleaded gasoline, have stalled in the state legislature because of a concentrated effort from the Licensed Liquor Distributors, which oppose changes in state laws affecting alcohol and liquor.

"The net effect is that if the liquor people have their way, the commercial production of gasohol in Texas will be set back at least five years at a time when we're almost desperate for alternative sources of fuel," said State Rep. Bill Keese of Somerville, cosponsor along with Rep. Dan Kubiak of Rockdale of the gasohol bills under study.

"We're all for gasohol," said Butch Sparks, a lobbyist for the liquor group, "but we're in the alcohol business and we want everyone operating under the same provisions."

The liquor lobby has focused its attention on two specific bills — one which allows private ownership of gasohol facilities and another which allows those facilities to make alcohol of a quality pure enough to be used in liquor.

Texas has a law forbidding the manufacture of alcohol in the state. Keese fears that without permission for gasohol plants to make high quality alcohol, major manufacturers will be reluctant to locate plants within the state.

"Unless we can get that bill passed, it's very doubtful Midwest Solvents, which has proposed to build a multimillion dollar pilot plant in the Rio Grande Valley, would come here," he said. "If gasohol ever fails, they'd want to be able to make that pure alcohol as an option on their investment."

"We already have a provision that forbids the sale of that type alcohol in the state," he continued. "I would think that would be enough for the liquor people."

The second major stepping stone concerns a 1937 law which requires that every entity holding an alcohol-liquor license be owned by a majority of Texas citizens. That law, enacted almost immediately after prohibition was lifted, "was designed as a control mechanism to stop organized crime and help collect taxes," said Sparks.

"We have worked under it, and we feel everyone else should too," the lobbyist said.

But, Keese claims, unless that law is overturned, neither Midwest nor Amstar in Dimmitt (also considered a prime location for a major gasohol plant serving West Texas) would be eligible to produce gasohol.

"If we can't repeal the law, the obvious way around this is to grant exemptions to those getting alcohol manufacturers licenses, since no such permits have ever been granted here before," Keese said. "This is a whole new area, and we should be able to operate it on its own."

A bill to exempt gasohol from state motor fuels tax also is being considered and has met no major opposition so far. Should it pass, though, gasohol probably would be taxed under retail sales.

"As the bills are written, they're real wide open," Sparks said. "We just want to tighten them up, so we'll all work under the same provisions."

Meanwhile, gasohol is flowing almost like water in Iowa, which has seen its investment in the fuel "take off like a rocket."

"We started off with five stations last summer as a test market, and now we're selling it in over 400 stations statewide," said Doug Getter, director of the Iowa Development Commission, which pioneered gasohol production there.

"We think it's so popular here because it's giving us relief from gas prices and helping support our corn prices at the same time," he said. "We use our own corn to make the alcohol, and the whole operation comes to us at a retail price of about three cents a gallon more than unleaded gas."

Iowa made such rapid strides in its pursuit of the fuel because it had none of the state laws blocking Texas's involvement to contend with.

Getter is confident the price of gasohol will drop as gasoline prices increase. "Our development is in the embryonic stage now," he said. "We expect prices to fall quite a bit after our facilities and technology improve."

All blending of gasoline and alcohol is done by individual jobbers and station operators, Getter said, adding that his commission is trying to organize several central facilities.

"That would make our gasohol more uniform and efficent," he said. "But so far, we've had nothing but praise from our customers, and we think it's great."

German POW Sees Trees He Planted

DALLAS (AP) — The 500 German prisoners of war didn't have much to do at the small camp in South Texas. Lt. Joseph Draxlbauer planted some trees.

The war ended with capture in northern France for Draxlbauer, an Austrian who served in an anti-tank unit of the Nazi infantry.

After passage on the Mauritania, Draxlbauer and 499 other German officers found themselves at Kenedy, confined to a small camp. They were prohibited from doing manual work by rules of the Geneva Convention since they were officers, unless their government consented.

However, the industrious young man not only obtained a work permit from Berlin, but managed to study language and economics by correspondence.

Thursday, the 59-year-old Draxlbauer saw the trees he planted those few decades ago. They're now in the backyard of Mayor Ruhman Franklin, at whose home Draxlbauer spent the night.

In a telephone interview, Franklin said Draxlbauer is now an executive with Mobil Oil in Vienna.

"He said he had nothing but pleasant memories of the time he spent here," Franklin said. "My home is built on almost the exact site where the hut he slept in was."

Franklin was in the military, stationed in the Phillipines, while Draxlbauer was in Kenedy, but neither man has any trace of animosity left. "I had no idea who was here," Franklin said.

Franklin said his role as host began when Draxlbauer sent a letter to city hall, asking for a map of the city. He wrote that a United States tour could include a visit to South Texas and that he would like to be able to locate the site of the long-gone POW camp.

"We wrote back and said we would like to have him visit," Franklin said. "We're having a little Bluebonnet Days celebration here, and he's going to attend a Chamber of Commerce banquet with us tonight (Friday)."

Franklin said Draxlbauer "has no hard feelings as far as the fighting is concerned. He was amazed at the numbers of men and equipment the Allies had.

"To me, it gives me a good feeling to know that educated people over there hold no animosity toward what happened during the war."

Franklin said Draxlbauer would spend Friday night in Kenedy before resuming the business-pleasure tour, but that he would make no special appearances or speeches.

The sight of his trees was special enough.

we are going to pay an awful price," he said.

He repeated his earlier position that if Texas is going to use nuclear power it has a "responsibility to consider what we are going to do with our wastes."

"We can't create this sort of problem and then look to somebody else to solve this problem for us," he said.

Clements said he definitely was not inviting any other state to bury its nuclear waste in Texas.

Dallas Students Present Program

Students from Dallas Christian College will participate in both the 10:30 a.m. and 6 p.m. worship services Sunday at University Christian Church, 3601 82nd St.

The college students will be bringing special music during the 10:30 a.m. service and Dr. Bruce Smith, Dallas Christian College professor of Bible and homiletics, will be speaking.

A noon basket dinner at the church will be served, honoring the visiting college students.

Brigade Of Inflation Fighters Due To Monitor Price Hikes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government will organize a brigade of union members and consumer groups to monitor retail price increases across the nation, President Carter's chief inflation fighter announced Friday.

Alfred Kahn, chairman of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, said the AFL-CIO, among others, would report to the government on price increases for food, fuel, housing and health care.

The new anti-inflation effort was announced at the White House by Kahn and Esther Peterson, the president's special assistant on consumer issues.

Meanwhile, press secretary Jody Powell asserted that initial response to the president's energy speech of Thursday night showed strong support for Carter's program.

The president was asked about apparent congressional opposition to his proposed tax on excess oil industry profits. Carter, leaving for a weekend visit to Camp David, responded by saying "they'll like it" as he boarded a helicopter.

Kahn said the monitoring program, to be joined by a group known as Citizens Opposed to Inflation in Necessities (COIN), should "very greatly improve the effectiveness of the administration's monitoring."

The president's anti-inflation program is based primarily on voluntary compliance with wage and price increase guidelines.

By bringing in organized groups, the administration evidently hopes to get around a problem it has encountered thus far in its anti-inflation drive.

"As much as everyone dislikes inflation, there is no organized constituency to fight it," Kahn said.

Mrs. Peterson announced the publication of a "National Consumer Buying Alert" manual, intended to give consumers tips on how to save money by adjusting buying habits in changing market conditions.

The first issue, for example, includes suggestions on how consumers can get around the high cost of beef, through use of alternate products that contain protein.

Mrs. Peterson said 5,000 copies would be distributed by White House officials, but other copies would be made available through the Food Marketing Institute, a supermarket industry organization.

Kahn attributed the high beef prices to a shortage of cattle, and not to any monopoly or restraint of trade on the part of cattle raisers.

In a wisecrack to reporters in the press room, not far from the Oval Office, Kahn said he was sensitive to the beef price increases and added: "I have to be sensitive. I'm not running for office, so I can also be intelligent."

Reporting on the reaction Thursday evening and Friday morning to the president's energy speech, Powell said that of 790 telephone calls received by the White House, 87 percent favored Carter's approach and 13 percent opposed it.

He said letters and telegrams received by the White House showed 43 percent supporting Carter and 31 percent opposing. Another 26 percent of the letters and telegrams were classified as offering comments without any opinion.

The press secretary defended Carter's decision to gradually decontrol prices of domestic crude oil without tying the action directly to a tax on excess profits.

Powell said that if Carter linked the two, supporters of controls would have joined opponents of the tax to defeat each proposal.

"Had we done that, absolutely nothing would have happened .. . after a few months of time wasted and sound and fury," he said.

Although a number of key leaders of Congress predict a tough fight — an assessment with which Powell agreed — the press secretary stated that "we will have a windfall profits tax."

John Wayne To Appear

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — John Wayne will present the Academy Award for best picture Monday night, marking the actor's first public appearance since his cancer operation Jan. 12, Oscar telecast producer Jack Haley Jr. confirmed Friday.

Wayne himself won the Oscar as best actor in 1969 for his role in "True Grit."

Wayne appears to be progressing well in his recovery from the surgery that removed his stomach and gallbladder. He told Daily Variety columnist Army Archerd that he had run 60 yards and walked a mile the other day.

Wayne's first outing came last Tuesday when he flew to Mexicali for a visit with Gov. Roberto de la Madrid of Baja California, an old friend.

Fighting Continues Near Cambodian Border

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand (AP) — Heavy fighting raged Friday near the Cambodian border between remnants of ousted Premier Pol Pot's army and troops of the new Vietnamese-backed government.

Associated Press photographer Jeff Robbins reported from the border that the fighting was centered about 10 miles southeast of here and it appeared the Pol Pot forces were encircled in a pocket close to the border.

Robbins said he heard heavy small arms fire at the village of Bang Wang Mon and saw Thai troops and villagers armed with shotguns and dug into ditches beside the road that crosses into Cambodia.

Machine gun fire erupted, Robbins said, and bullets struck near his vehicle.

"The gunfire kept getting louder and louder and it appears the Cambodia troops are moving closer to the border," he said.

Early Friday Pol Pot guerrilla forces surrounded the strategic border town of Poipet and began shelling it with mortars, forcing 187 pro-Vietnamese Cambodian troops of the Heng Samrin to flee into Aranyaprathet and surrender to authorities, Thai border police said.

The Cambodian soldiers told Thai police Vietnamese tanks had managed to break through guerrilla forces along Highway 5 east of the town and link up with reinforcements, but by nightfall, the city was quiet and it was unknown which forces controlled Poipet.

The Vietnam News Agency, reported Heng Samrin forces captured the headquarters of Pol Pot during fighting March 27-30 in the town of Ta Sanh, 6 miles south of Aranyaprathet.

VNA, quoting the official Cambodian SPK news agency, claimed that Pol Pot escaped to Thailand, but Thai Prime Minister Kriangsak Chonaman said Thursday he hadn't received any reports that Pol Pot was in Thai territory.

In southeastern Thailand's border province of Trat, local officials said 690 Pol Pot troops were pushed back into Cambodia. Provincial Governor Phison Sunthorntham said the Pol Pot troops had fled to Thailand to escape pro-Vietnamese Heng Samrin troops.

The voice of Democratic Kampuchea, organ of the ousted Pol Pot regime, Friday claimed that 149 Vietnamese and Heng Samrin troops were killed March 30-April 1 in southwestern Cambodia near Kampong Chanang, about 50 miles north of Phnom Penh, the capital.

Vietnamese troops invaded Cambodia Dec. 25, quickly ousted Pol Pot and installed the Heng Samrin administration. Since then, the former prermier's loyalists have been fighting an uphill guerrilla war against the invaders and new regime.

The fight shaped up as a proxy battle between China, which backed the Pol Pot government and Russia which supports Vietnam.

On Feb. 17, the Chinese invaded northern Vietnam, which some observers interpreted as a reprisal for the Cambodian invasion, but China and Vietnam are now in the process of settling their dispute.

Florida Gets Tough Drug Law

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Florida Gov. Bob Graham, embarrassed over his state's reputation as the drug-smuggling capital of the nation, signed into law Friday a measure designed to crack down on big-time drug traffickers by imposing stiff mandatory prison sentences.

Graham put his signature on the bill just two hours after the Florida House voted 116-0 for the get-tough-on-drugs proposal, which had sailed through the Senate the day before.

"If people want to be involved in the drug traffic, they'd better do it someplace else than Florida," Graham said.

"This is a very visible action in our commitment to fight organized crime."

The new law is designed to cut down on the amount of illegal drugs smuggled into the state from Latin America by making it easier for law enforcement officials to win more convictions of drug-smuggling masterminds. Supporters also have said the law will help to counteract the embarrasing national publicity Florida has received about its estimated $5 billion-a-year drug-trafficking industry.

The law establishes a sliding scale of minimum mandatory prison sentences ranging from three years to 25 years for persons convicted of trafficking in large quantities of marijuana, cocaine or hard drugs, such as heroin.

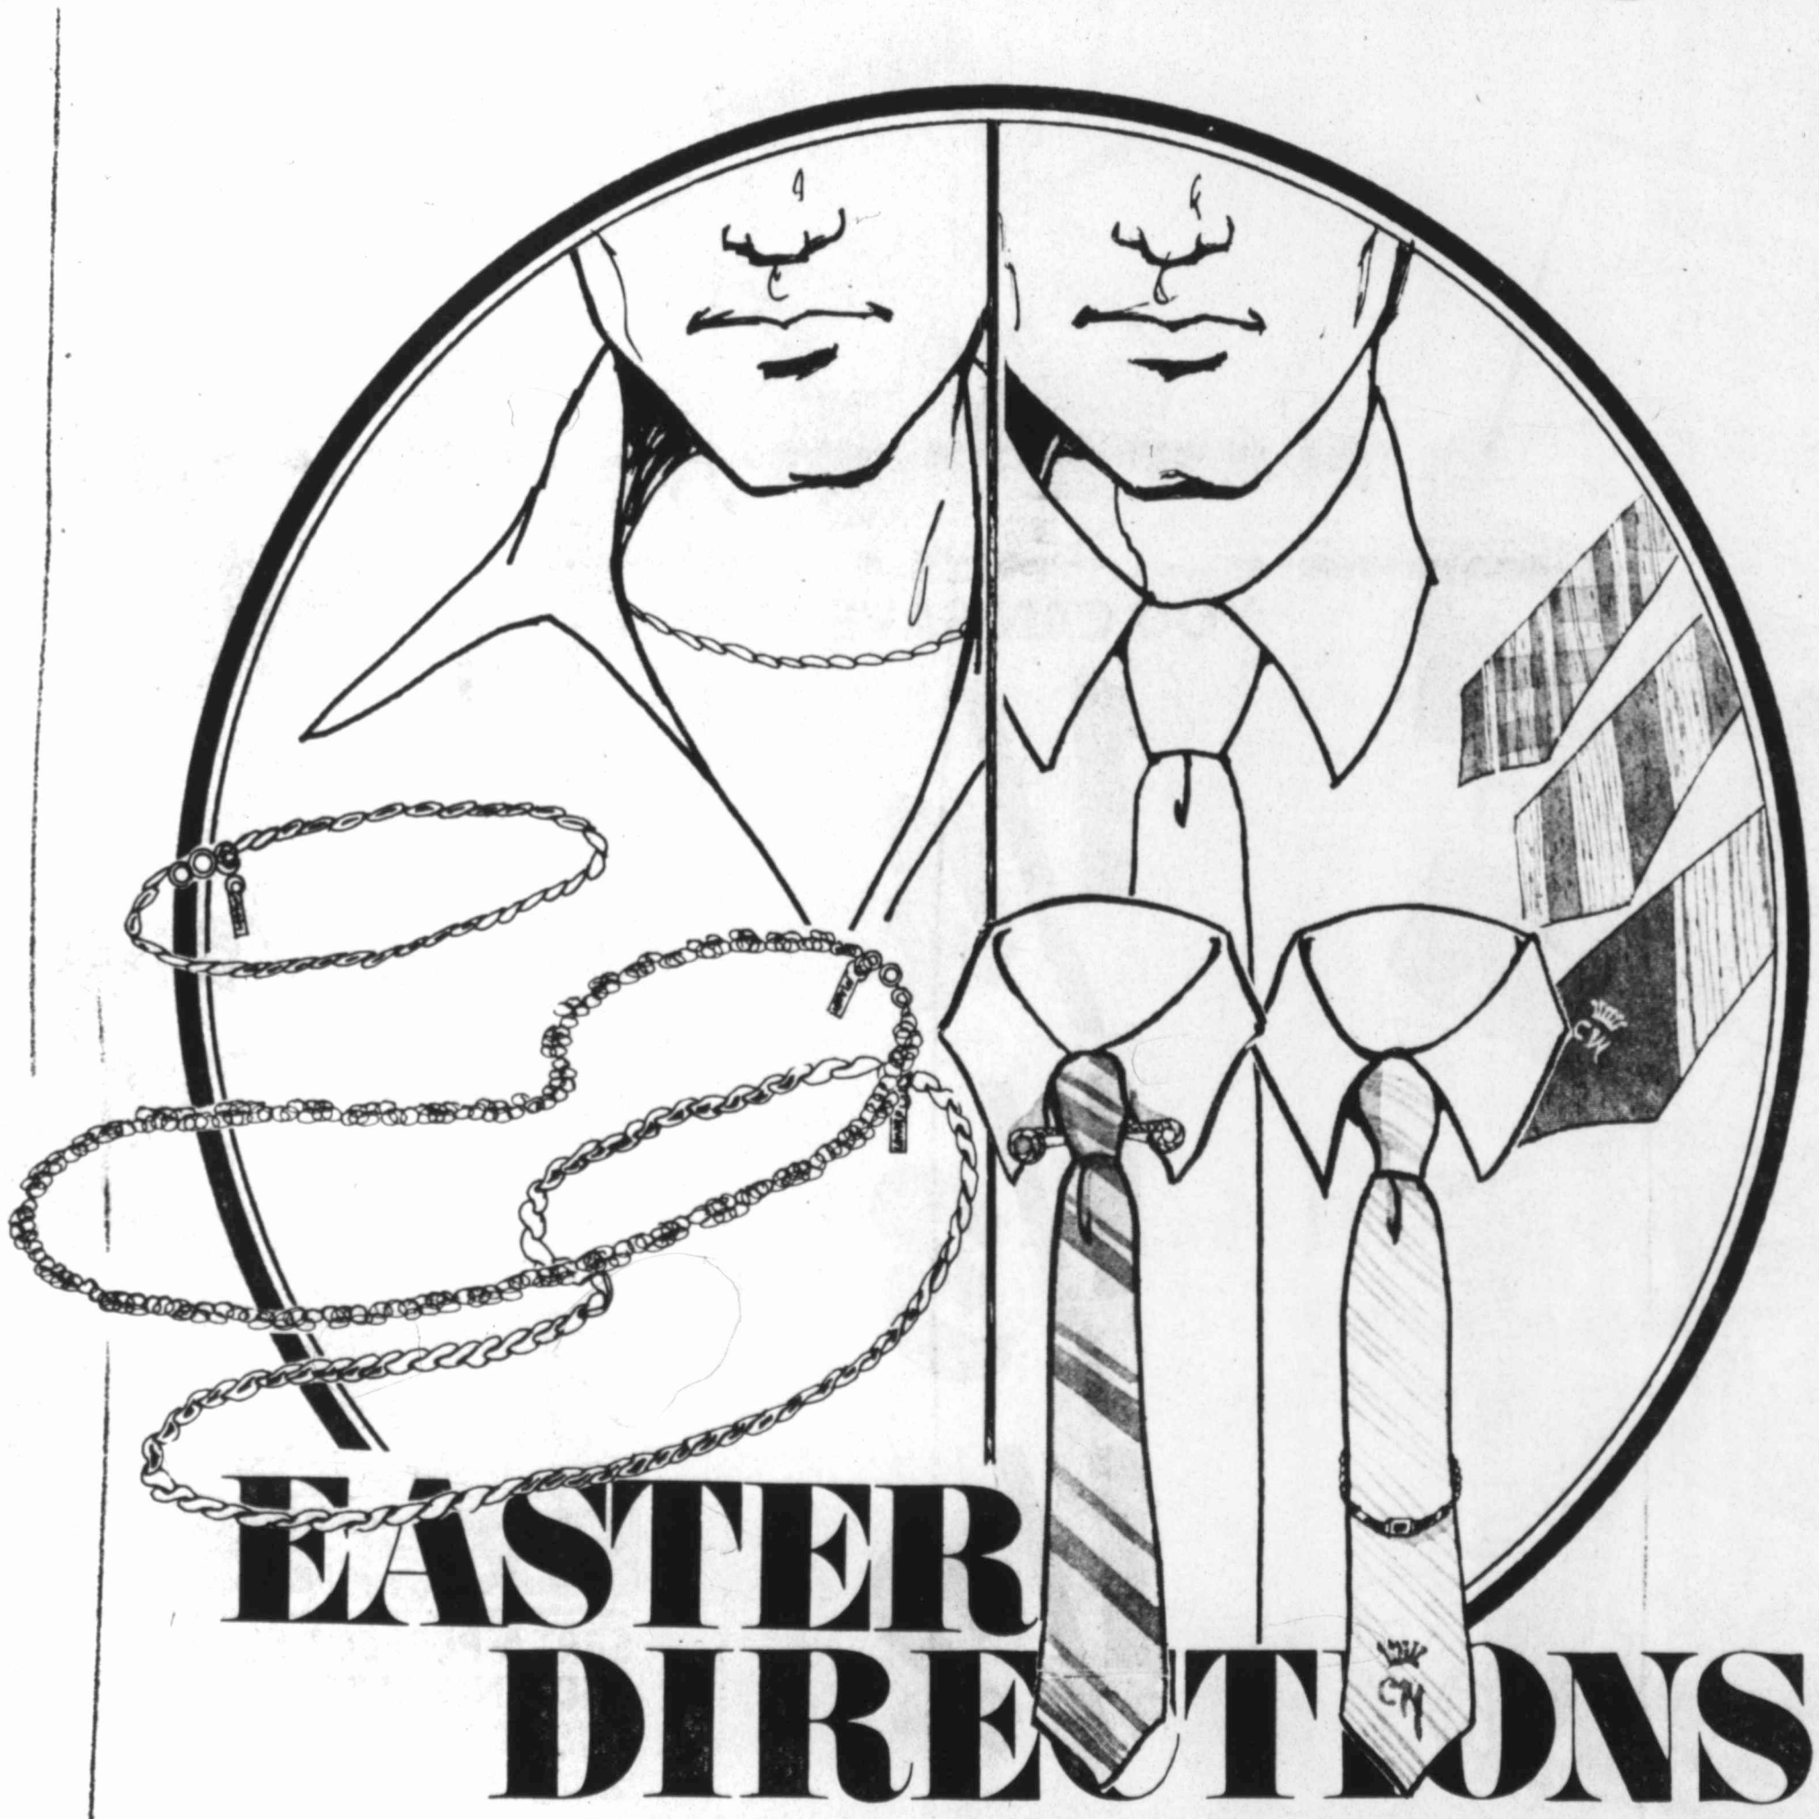

The only way such convicted felons could escape the mandatory sentence would be to "turn state's evidence," or cooperate with law enforcement officials trying to indict higher-ups in the drug-smuggling world.

Group Helps Mastectomy Patients To Recovery

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A surgical procedure that "women dread as much as anything that could happen to them" was performed on Wylene Howard 11 years ago when she was 42 years old.

She had a radical mastectomy after a biopsy revealed that the tissue of a lump she discovered in one of her breasts was malignant.

"It's a very traumatic experience for a woman," said Mrs. Howard. "You just sort of feel less of a woman until you can cope with it."

She said that she "hit sort of an emotional bottom just prior to the surgery, though I'm sure everyone acts a little differently. The aspect that maybe you're going to die is very prominent in your thinking."

Mrs. Howard had a strong will to live, however, and she is now considered cured of the cancer that resulted in the loss of one of her breasts.

She admitted that she "had some bad times" following the surgery, "but I just didn't let it defeat me."

For a while, "with every pain in your toe, it runs through your mind that you have cancer again," said Mrs. Howard. Until about five years ago, she said that she "would get so nervous" every time she went for a checkup for fear that another lump would be discovered.

"Now I don't think that anymore." She said that the support and understanding of her family and friends and her faith has sustained her through the years.

"I think the family attitude is very important to the recovery of the patient," said Mrs. Howard. "I had an understanding husband and three children who never made me feel like I was different in any way."

She said that "being a Christian, my faith in God has been able to sustain and comfort me."

Mrs. Howard had no psychological counseling after her surgery, but said that a recovery program similar to the one in which she is currently involved "would have helped a lot."

She is one of seven women in Lubbock qualified to participate in the Reach to Recovery program which is sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

Women who have had a post-operative history for a mastectomy of two years or more are trained to aid and educate women who have recently had mastectomies. At the request of the patient's surgeon, these volunteers visit the patient, talk with her and provide materials to help hasten her recovery.

The volunteers supply kits furnished by the ACS that consist of a book written by the woman who started the program, instructions for therapeutic exercises, a bra and temporary prosthesis and a letter addressed to the patient's husband that suggests ways to be supportive of his wife during her recovery period.

"It's very rewarding and the ladies are so appreciative," said Mrs. Howard. "We think it's great and we would just like more surgeons to call us.

"I think the ACS has some wonderful help for people if people would just let them help," she said. "They have just begun another service where they take people to the hospital for radiation treatments if they are too ill or don't have a way to go."

She said the ACS also has an abundance of educational programs, including films on breast examination.

WYLENE HOWARD

"I think every woman should learn how to examine her breasts," said Mrs. Howard. "So many women I know have found lumps themselves." She, too, found the lump in her breast through self-examination.

She is wholeheartedly supportive of fund drives sponsored by the ACS because "I firmly believe that research is what has caused the improvement in surgery since mine."

She said that doctors do less radical surgery now and don't always administer the radiation therapy after surgery that she had.

"There still needs to be a lot of education" concerning cancer, according to Mrs. Howard. "Some people ignore this type of thing out of ignorance, superstition and fear more than anything else.

"The secret is getting to it (cancer) early," she added. "If people would really be educated about it, I think a lot of lives would be saved."

Doctor Explains New Theory

Feature Series--Part I
SPOTLIGHT

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This series, written by a medical doctor, examines the practice of behavioral medicine, a unique concept of health care incorporating the principles of medicine, physiology, psychiatry and psychology. It takes a future look at personal health in four parts, running in the "Dimensions" section of your Avalanche-Journal each Saturday during April. It is adapted from Dr. Herbert Benson's book, "The Mind-Body Effect.")

By DR. HERBERT BENSON

For more than a decade, my primary research interests have focused upon bridging the disciplines of medicine, physiology and psychology and psychiatry. As a result, I am convinced that many aspects of the teaching, research and practice of modern medicine can be altered to provide you with better health care.

To facilitate the teaching of these concepts, a Behavioral Medicine course has been initiated at the Harvard Medical School; a Behavioral Medicine Section has been formed at Boston's Beth Israel Hospital to continue collaborative research in this area and to apply these principles to the care of patients.

One of the major tenets of the teaching and practice of Behavioral Medicine is that individuals must assume more responsibility for their own health care. Your health is both your responsibility and that of your physician; it is a two-way proposition.

This series tries to provide a new perspective, which will allow you and members of the medical profession to interact better. My book — "The Mind/Body Effect" — was not written to give specific advice on personal health care. However, you must understand what can reasonably be expected from medicine. You can adopt a more effective approach to health care by taking an historical perspective.

A proper balance between traditional and modern medical practice is necessary so that people can remain well for as long as possible and receive optimal treatment when ill. Without this proper balance, more individuals might become like the woman cited in the Gospel according to St. Mark, "who had suffered much under many physicians, and had spent all that she had, and was no better, but rather grew worse."

We not only live longer than ever before, but also, through the benefits of modern medicine, enjoy healthier lives. Yet many are still not satisfied with their state of health.

Disenchanted with the medical profession, people seek help from various organizations and cults, which promise relief from their problems. People also seek health advice from a myriad of books, which instruct them on what to eat and not to eat, how to exercise, how to relax and how to behave. Why is it that people do not have more faith in the present medical system and turn to it for advice, since medicine has achieved many, truly remarkable advances?

The scientific and medical advances themselves are causing medicine to move away from some of your most basic needs. As our modern technological society developed, time-tested approaches were considered to be unscientific and "old fashioned."

By adopting an historical perspective, I will show that medicine has made use of worthwhile principles that sustained it for centuries. Since these principles are poorly understood within the framework of modern medicine, these have been largely discarded. However, older practices are compatible with our current scientifically based approaches and should be reincorporated into medicine.

We should not replace our recent successful approaches. Rather, the older techniques and approaches would be synthesized with our present practices. Without such a synthesis, medicine will become further removed from what you need. Medicine, as it is evolving, is increasing its potential to do harm.

People shuold not be compartmentalized into organ systems, scientific disciplines or medical specialties. Such compartmentalization and specialization have been convenient both for the acquisition of knowledge and for an efficient approach to illness. However, your being an integrated individual has too often been overlooked. Your mind and body should not be viewed as dissociated. Although this separation is compatible with current medical or scientific thinking, the mind and the body are inseparable.

There is much to be gained by combining the old with the new. This integrated approach to health care is simply the practice of good medicine. These tenets can be taught to doctors and medical students without a radical departure from existing medical standards. Since good health is both the responsibility of the physician and of the patient working together, you must also be made aware of these concepts.

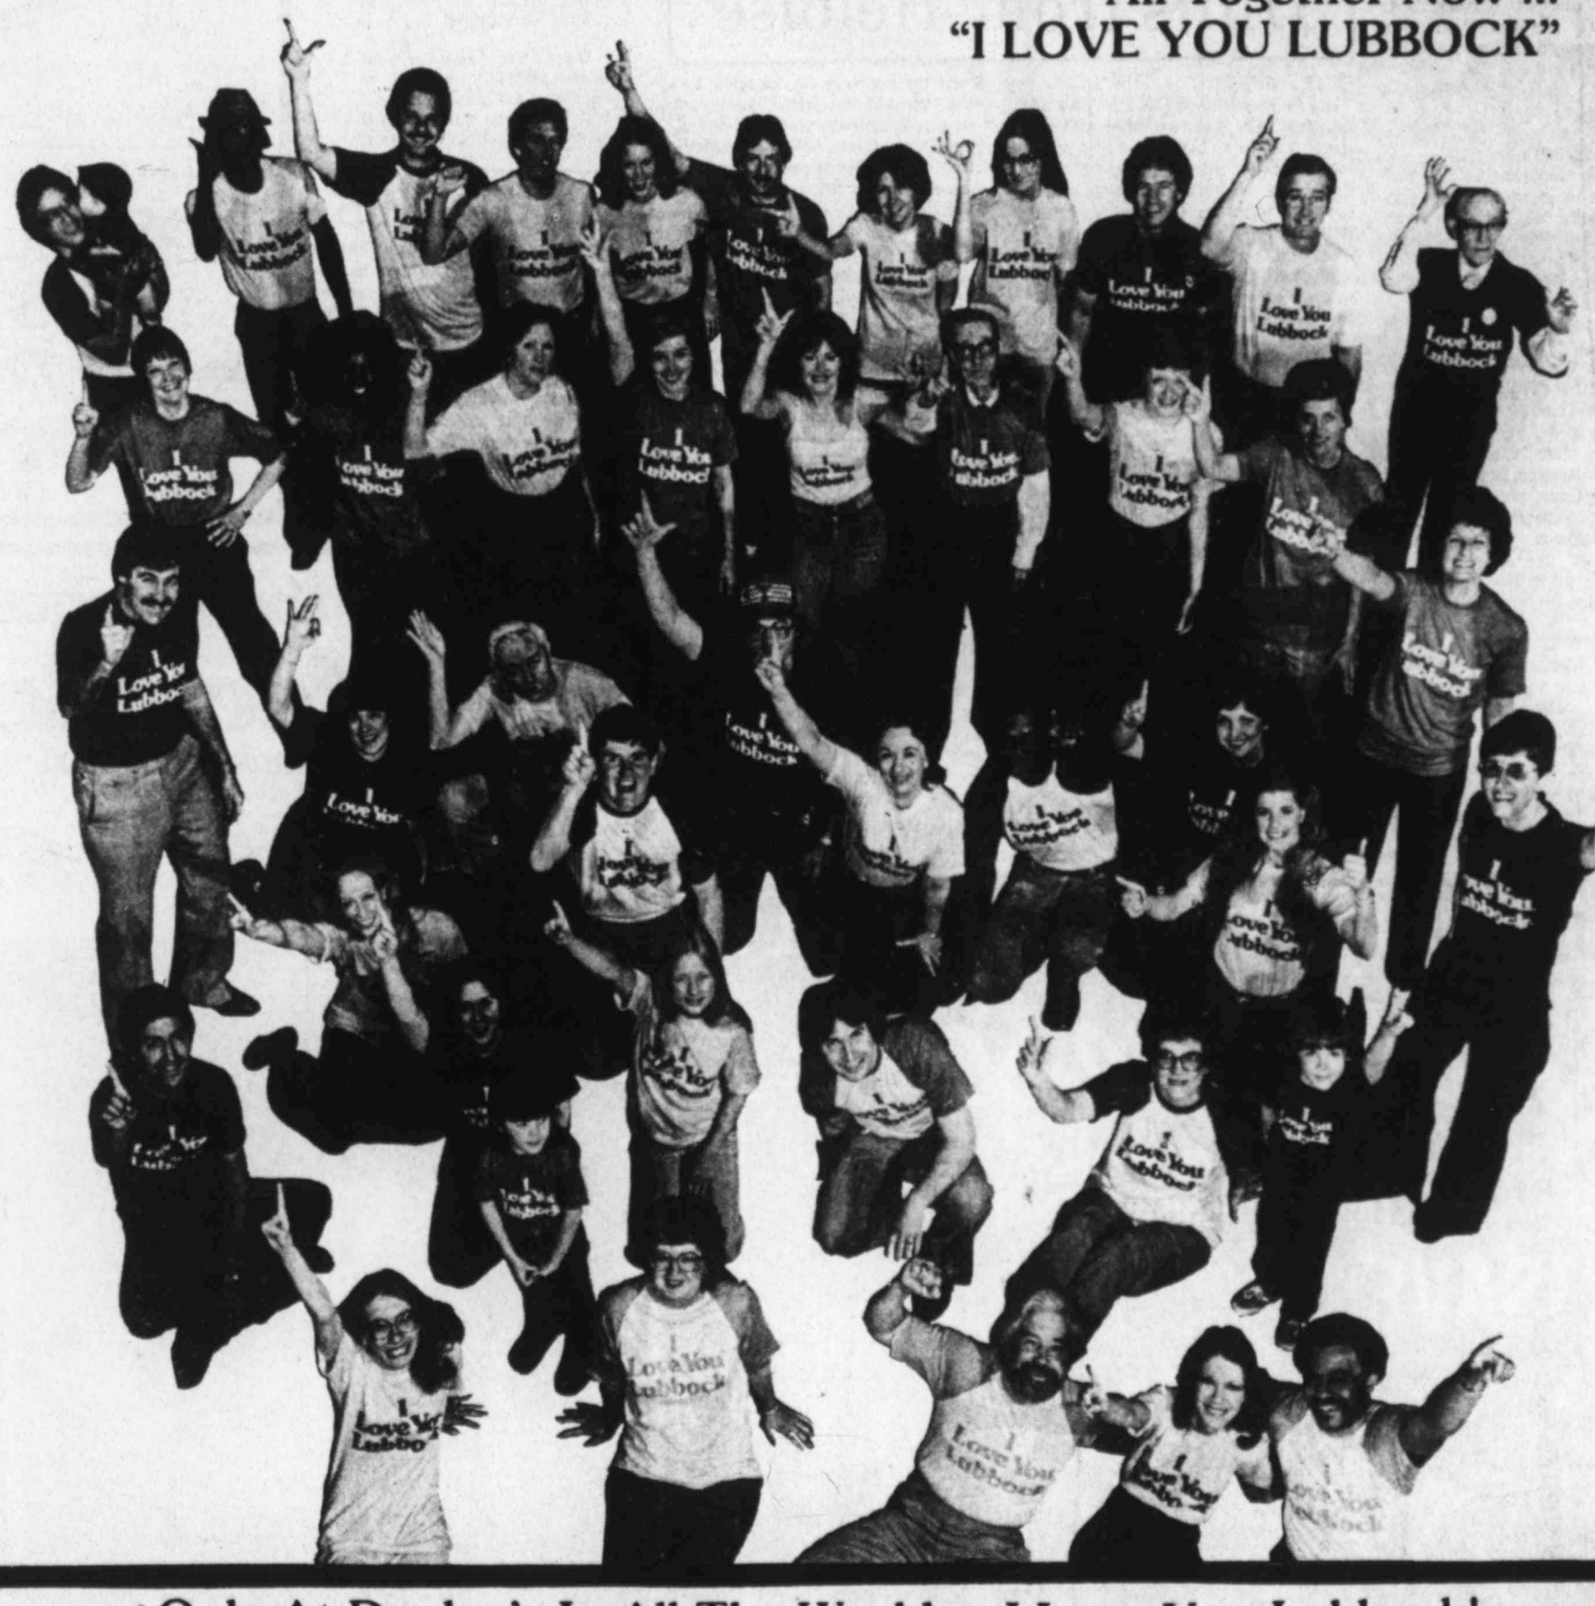

Since the time of Plato, most scholars have believed that the mind and body were of a different nature. The mind could influence the body and was dominant over the body. The 17th-century mathematician and philosopher, Rene Descartes, assigned a much more important role to the body than did others before him. The mind was no longer the master of the two. In giving the body equal influence, the mind and the body were more easily conceived of as being separate.

However, modern scientific knowledge can't ignore the close interrelation between your mind and body. The potenti-

Hints from Heloise

DEAR FRIENDS:

Hopefully, where you live the days are beginning to be warm and filled with sunshine. A lot of us have suffered a pretty cold and bitter winter, but now that the flowers are beginning to bloom, all we can think about are the fun days ahead. Right?

One fun thing you'll be able to do soon with very little effort, but that will lead to great enjoyment later on, is to make an old-fashioned "rose jar" or "potpourri" — so simple and yet so heavenly. Next winter, on some cold, bleak day, you can remove the lid from your rose jar and breathe in all the warmth and fragrance of a pretty day.

So, dear hearts, since many of you have requested a repeat on the making of such a delight, I'm giving you a "sneak preview" before the rose season begins (for some of us, anyway) so you can be sure and have the ingredients ready when the proper time comes.

When the roses begin to bloom, gather some of the petals and dry them on a soreen or piece of cheesecloth, leaving them in the sun for about 24 hours (make sure they are good and dry).

Place the dried petals in a jar with a tight-fitting lid adding five drops of rose or geranium oil (or a combination of these) and five drops of glycerin. Continue adding dried petals to the jar from day to day. When the jar is full, sprinkle the petals with a bit of salt.

Shake the jar every day for about two weeks, then add one-quarter ounce each of orris root, nutmeg, cinnamon and allspice. Other fragrant flowers (dried), such as honeysuckle or orange blossoms, can be added if desired.

Keep the jar tightly covered.

You will find some of these ingredients, such as rose oil and orris root, available through your druggist.

Bouquets to you all. Love, — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

For years I have been using a five-inch square of nylon net over the bristles of my hairbrush to catch the hair while brushing.

It is much easier to remove the hair from the net as the hair can't work its way down into the bristles.

When I get ready to wash the brush, I just remove the net and every hair is then removed, making a much cleaner brush. — Mrs. M. Halliburton

South applied the code word ARCH. Analysis of the lead and review of the bidding indicated that West had led from a long heart suit and that he was likely to hold all the missing high cards.

Count of losers indicated one spade loser (the king), one diamond loser (the ace), one possible heart loser and one possible ruff that would score instead of the heart loser. So, how can the hand be made? Two heart ruffs will find South winding up a day late and a trick short.

South won the heart lead in dummy, so that if East held exactly one heart, he would be ruffing a low heart and not a heart honor.

At trick two, South led dummy's queen of spades, but he went up with his ace. South wanted to play two rounds of trumps, not just one.

West won the second spade and led his jack of hearts. East could use his last trump to ruff a heart loser, not a heart winner, and the ace of diamonds became the third and last trick for the defense.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY

DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: Well, I see you are another of the anti-vitamin people, as was your predecessor in writing the column. What is it with you guys? I can give you an example of vitamins and what they can do for a person. I was having bad leg cramps (I'm 64), and my doctor suggested I take vitamin E every day, and the leg cramps cleared up like magic. Now I am a 100 percent "vitamin freak" as they call us. But I'm a healthy freak. Take that. — Mr. T.S.

I edited your letter because this column is read by families.

Now, to begin with I have to take issue with your use of the phrase "anti-vitamin people." Vitamins, as I've noted, are valuable parts of the nutritional picture. Deficiencies of various vitamins can create severe problems, which I've discussed from time to time. Vitamins will be around long after you and I are gone.

The chief objection I and a lot of colleagues have about vitamins is the misunderstanding promoted by some people trying to sell them as cure-alls. They are not. There was certainly nothing wrong with your doctor suggesting you take the vitamin E. This has been studied and may or may not help leg cramps. It may be worth a try. If he had told you to take vitamin E to improve your sex life (which it wouldn't) I would have to question his information that it helps in that.

Get what I mean? I hope this note answers other readers who seem to think there is a medical conspiracy against vitamins. There isn't. Vitamins are essential in prevention of many diseases.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I'm sure a lot of women would like to know what the various classes mean when you get a Pap test result. — Mrs. T.N.

From my mail you are correct.

Class I means normal cells.

Class II means some abnormal cells, but not cancerous (infection).

Class III means highly suspicious.

Class IV means definitely cancerous.

From Class II up, another test is usually required, and this is what disturbs most women who write me about their anxiety.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: Are nerve block shots given to ease the pain of shingles? Do they work? — Mrs. O.Y.

Yes they do relieve the pain during the effective period of the medicine used. Repeated injections are required in some cases of intolerable pain. In some areas of the country local cortisone injections have been tried and reported successful for relief of the pain. See the booklet, "The Facts About Shingles." For a copy, send 20 cents to cover printing and handling, also stamped, self-addressed envelope to me, P. O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: Is VD still on the increase among teenagers? — Mrs. O.E.

You bet your life it is. I won't bore you with statistics but it has reached very nearly epidemic proportions in some age groups. A lot of my mail is from young girls inquiring about their unfortunate experience with it. Boys don't write simply because VD is so painfully evident quite early in their infection that most get early treatment. Another curious statistic of my own involves two separate booklets offered to readers through this column. One is called "Twelve Methods of Birth Control." The other is "Venereal Disease — How to Avoid It, How to Cure It." I don't have to tell you which one is gathering dust in the warehouse. Ignorance on this subject is staggering. I frankly believe some young men and women actually equate birth control with disease protection. For example, few young girls realize that the birth control pill itself may make the vaginal membrane more susceptible to infection by germs as those for gonorrhea and others.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: You have mentioned frequency of urination as one of the signs of diabetes. My question is can it also (diabetes, that is) be a cause of bedwetting in children, and should tbis be investigated? — S.C.

It can and it should.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: Are pickles out for a person on a salt-restricted diet? — G.G.

Yes. Brine is very salty. Omit sauerkraut, too.

• • •

Dr. Ruble welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer all letters.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: My father-in-law is a heavy drinker, gets physically violent, is obnoxious, vulgar and sometimes, I think, just plain nuts. My mother-in-law stayed with him for the children's sake. She also is not too bright. My husband's youngest brother is on drugs. He's been picked up for burglary, forgery, car theft, and has served time in prison.

Every time my brother-in-law gets into trouble they call Jack. This has gone on for over 10 years.

We get calls every time my father-in-law belts my mother-in-law around. Then we get all the details of how the fight started. We know how she fell, where she fell, how much he drank before he hit her, etc., etc., blah, blah, blah.

I've asked my mother-in-law to keep all that garbage to herself. That was three years ago but she hasn't stopped. I can't reason with her. She's always got some mess going. And then, after not being able to take care of her own business, she tries to tell us what to do.

All I want is a normal home life for us and a good environment for our children. Please comment or advise. — Sign Me Resentful

Dear R.: You will need your husband's cooperation if you want to separate your family from the unfortunate demands of your in-laws and all the dumping they do on you.

I suggest you make an appointment with an unbiased third party (not a relative or social friend). Explain the situation and ask how to go about removing yourselves as referees, fixer-uppers, sounding boards and just plain victims.

I have always said it takes two to create a situation like the one you describe — a party who hooks people into his own personal problems, takes their time and energy (and money), asks for advice (never taking it), and ends up doing one crazy thing after another. On the receiving end is someone who is weak or foolish enough to allow it to happen time and time again. The net of the problem is this: No one can repeatedly take advantage of anyone else without his permission.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing to give encouragement to the young lady who lost her boyfriend in a senseless accident.

She mentioned that when sweethearts end a love affair, there is always the possibility of reconciliation, but not for her. Her friend is dead. I would like to let her know she is very fortunate in one regard — she is not plagued with feelings of guilt because of inattentiveness, irresponsibility, improper behavior and other faults that cause most couples to break up. All this rests on my shoulders, along with the feeling of loss and loneliness.

I'm sure the heartbroken girl has considered suicide. I have. But oh, what a waste! What a cowardly lack of character that would show. There is so much in this life to learn, so many good people to love, so much growing and improving to be done. No, suicide is not the answer.

I hope her pain passes quickly and is replaced with lovely memories. Remember, tomorrow is a new day. Cherish your friendship and good friends will help ease the pain. I promise. — Been There — Almost

Dear Been: Thanks for those encouraging words. I know they helped.

Hospital Needs High School Volunteers

Junior Volunteer orientation for young persons in the 10th, 11th or 12th grades will be held today at 10 a.m. at the Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Jacque Hastings, director of volunteer services at the hospital, said that young persons are neeeded to work in patient care areas and support services. "The goal of the program is to expose young people to hospital-related careers. Volunteering not only provides a learning experience for the young people, but also enables young people to receive the rewards gained from helping others."

Additional information about the Junior Volunteer program my be obtained by calling the Volunteer Services office at 743-3346.

Behavioral Medicine Explained In 'The Mind/Body Effect'

al exists for thought processes to lead both to disease and to good health.

For instance, can psychological events, events of your mind, lead to death? The concept of "voodoo death" is the extreme example of the potential negative effects of the mind on the body.

Voodoo is a set of religious practices thought to have originated in Africa. It is practiced chiefly among the native populations of Africa, Haiti, South America and the West Indies.

Many accounts of death attributed to voodoo have been documented. In 1925 Dr. Herbert Basedown described one such occurrence:

"The man who discovers that he is being bonded by an enemy is, indeed, a pitiable sight. He stands aghast, with his eyes staring at the treacherous pointer, and with his hands lifted as though to ward off the lethal medium, which he imagines is pouring into his body. His cheeks blanch and his eyes become glassy, and the expression of his face becomes horribly distorted . . . He attempts to shriek, but usually the sound chokes in his throat, and all that one might see is froth at his mouth. His body begins to tremble, and the muscles twist involuntarily. He sways backwards and falls on the ground, and after a short time appears to be in a swoon; but soon after he writhes as if in mortal agony, and, covering his face with his hands, begins to moan . . . His death is only a matter of a comparatively short time."

In the Western world, equivalents to voodoo death have been documented in case histories. Systematic laboratory investigations of death in man resulting from emotional factors cannot be conducted for obvious reasons. However, the case histories provide a basis for analysis of the psychological states which are frequently associated with deaths precipitated by emotional factors.

The probable physiological mechanism of sudden death is a disruption of normal heart functioning. When death occurs suddenly or unexpectedly, within a period of several minutes, in a person with apparently good or stable health, it is almost invariably due to cessation of the circulation of blood. Sudden deaths related to very intense psychological states such as hopelessness, helplessness, overwhelming fear and other extreme emotions are almost certainly related to circulatory events.

Stressful psychological events have been linked to diseases with a slow rate of development. Hypertension, or high blood pressure is one such disease. Stressful situations are associated with transient elevations of blood pressure; repeated stressful events may even result in permanent high blood pressure.

Little controversy exists within the medical profession concerning the importance of psychological events in making already existing diseases worse.

Documented case histories abound showing that the concept of the mind as separate from the body is untenable. There is compelling evidence of psychological events aggravating disease and even leading to death.

However, as Erich Menninger von Lerchenthal pointed out in 1936:

"Although death which psychic efforts have helped to bring about is often clear, one sees the psychic influence on the prolongation of life only if one looks for it."

Can understanding the mind-body relation be used to prevent disease and contribute to better health? If so, what are the mechanisms involved?

How you may achieve better health by rejecting the concept of the mind-body dichotomy.)

Strikers Do Kids Favor For Favors

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Striking Teamsters and the management at a Ryder Truck Line terminal called a one-hour truce to unload favors for Friday night's prom at Riverdale High School.

The favors were locked up with the cargo in one of the big trailers idled by the nationwide strike.

Riverdale Principal Dorothy Donnelly called Ed Martin, a reporter at WVUE-TV, and Martin called Ryder's terminal manager and Teamster secretary Mitch Ledet.

After a brief conference Thursday afternoon, the officials asked the pickets to put down their signs and unload the favors. An hour later, with the prom favors delivered, the pickets picked up their signs and resumed pacing outside the company gates.

House Where Lincoln Died Getting Face Lift

By DONALD J. FREDERICK
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — The house where President Abraham Lincoln died after being shot in Ford's Theatre by John Wilkes Booth is undergoing major architectural surgery.

Long a Washington, D.C., tourist attraction, Petersen House has been closed since last November. Workmen, however, are pushing to put the finishing touches on the first floor where the tragic drama of April 14-15, 1865, was played out, so it can be reopened in May or early June, reports the National Geographic News Service.

"We knew modern fire and security systems would have to be installed and some lighthousekeeping was necessary, but then we discovered extensive, hidden water damage in the upper two floors," said Joseph M. Lawler, site manager for Petersen House and neighboring Ford's Theatre.

"It'll be six months to a year before structural repairs are completed upstairs. That shouldn't prove too much of an inconvenience, since the upper floors are normally closed to the public and used mainly for storage."

Working On Reproductions

The room where Lincoln died will appear eventually just as it did on that fateful morning of April 15. The rumpled bed and coverlet on which he was placed, pictures, wallpaper, even toiletries from the period such as soap, combs, brushes, and a toothbrush are being reproduced by Park Service experts and other craftsmen supervised by them. These will be placed in the room as they are completed.

"Through the years, pictures of Lincoln and other memorabilia associated with him appeared in Petersen Houe, turning it into a sort of Lincoln museum intead of a genuine slice of history," explained John H. Demer, a Park Service curator. "Now we're doing our best to give the death room and the entire first floor the same appearance they had on the morning of Lincoln's death."

The house to which the dying president was carried the night of April 14 is a three-story brick dwelling across the street from Ford's Theatre. It was built in 1849 by William Petersen, a Swedish tailor. A man of modest means, he rented his extra rooms to lodgers.

Taken To Rear Room

Lincoln was taken to a small room in the rear of the house. An anguished Mary Todd Lincoln spent most of the long night with her son, Robert, in a front parlor overlooking the street. Secretary of War Edwin M. Stanton began his investigation of the shooting by questioning witnesses and taking notes in a back parlor.

The parlors have perplexed the Park Service, because the years have dimmed the memory of their furnishings. As Demer pointed out, "We know from a contemporary photograph and drawings precisely how the death room was furnished, but as for the parlors, it's largely a matter of conjecture.

"We'll just use authentic pieces from the times — some were in the rooms before the restoration began — and fashion the necessary new items that we think would have belonged there. These will all be designed according to the period, of course."

The original furnishings probably were scattered to the winds when Petersen's heirs sold the house to the Schlade family in 1878. Using the house as both home and office, Louis Schade published the "Washington Sentinel" newspaper in the front room of the basement for many years. The room in which Lincoln died was used as a playroom by the Schade children.

Although it was unmarked on the outside, the house was the constant target of tourists who badgered the residents for permission to view the death room.

In 1880 efforts were made in Congress to memorialize the house, and in 1896 the building was purchased from the Schade family. It was opened to visitors in 1932.

Consumers Oppose Auto Fee

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas auto dealers want to deceive the public into paying fees for handling paperwork in car sales, the Texas Consumer Association said Friday.

"Documentary fees are deceptive because they appear to be an official fee — when in fact, they are just more profit for the dealer," Clarence Johnson of the association told a news conference.

The Senate is considering a bill that would allow dealers to charge $35 for handling registration, license fees and title transfers on new and used motor vehicle purchases.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, threatened to filibuster the bill Thursday but agreed to wait until Monday to blast the legislation.

"This is just another attempt to nickel and dime the public," added Katy Davis of the association.

She said special interest groups want to weaken the state's Consumer Protection Act, raise mortgage interest rates and pass other legislation for their own benefit.

"So far, they seem to have gotten an ear with the Texas Senate," she said.

Auto dealers commonly charged a documentary fee until the Texas Consumer Credit Commissioner declared them improper. A class action suit is pending against seven Fort Worth auto dealers in which consumers want the fees declared illegal and refunded to car owners.

Monterey PTA To Discuss Alcohol

A panel discussion of alcohol abuse among high school students will be featured at a meeting of the Monterey High School Parent-Teachers Association at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the high school auditorium.

Speakers will include Dr. Richard Wall, a clinical psychologist; Wright Carlisle, executive director of the Lubbock Council on Alcoholism; and Robert Schultz, D.D.S., a member of the board of directors of the Lubbock Council on Alcoholism.

Serving as moderator will be Edward Paul, alcohol and drugs rehabilitation planner for South Plains Association of Governments.

The meeting will also feature the annual election of officers and a musical presentation by the Monterey Cantores, a choir group.

All parents of students are invited to attend, PTA officials said.

TV VIEWING CURTAILED

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese government Friday asked private television stations to voluntarily stop late-night broadcasting to help the nation conserve energy. Commercial television stations complied for a short time with a similar request made after the worldwide oil crisis of 1973.

Pilot's Pleas Recorded

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Moments before the plane he was flying crashed in flames, carrying six company executives to their deaths, pilot Howard Bellows coughed over the craft's radio, "Hair and shoe on fire!"

The transcript of radio communications between the plane and an air traffic control center near Minneapolis was recently filed with the National Transportation Safety Board in Washington.

The transcript, and other reports, indicated that Bellows lost control of the twin-engine Beechcraft and battled flames in the cockpit before the crash July 12, 1978, in a wheat field near Kenyon, Minn.

Killed were Bellows, 51, president of Rauenhorst, Bellows & Associates Inc., Olivia, Minn., one of the nation's largest sunflower seed firms; Robert J. Rauenhorst, 49, chairman of the board; Dalton Gandy, 60, director of international and domestic sunflower development; G. Anthony Rauenhorst, 29, director of processing; Jill Kranz, 34, corporate secretary, and Joe Baumgartner, 41, research coordinator.

The men were flying from Olivia to Lafayette, Ind.

The crash occurred three minutes after Bellows, using his code name, radioed "Minneapolis Seven Hotel Hotel's in Trouble."

Bellows: "Minneapolis, Seven Hotel Hotel's in troub..."

Bellows: "Seven Hotel Hotel's gone..."

Bellows: "Hair and shoe on fire!"

The reports also showed Bellows twice adjusted the plane's course to avoid precipitation, on the advice of the Minneapolis control center. The FAA estimates that the plane began its rapid descent at 22,700 feet.

One report said the plane began to break up in the air, and witnesses said both engines were afire before impact.

The NTSB isn't expected to reach a conclusion on the probable cause of the accident for at least several months, a spokesman said.

$70,000 Federal Grant Backs Hitchhiking Plan

SAUSALITO, Calif. (UPI) — The street corners of Marin County north of San Francisco may soon see a new breed of well-dressed hitchhikers, if a scheme, backed by a $70,000 government grant, catches on.

An organization called "Commuter Connection" obtained the $70,000 grant to persuade commuters to use their thumbs instead of their cars to get to downtown San Francisco from the suburban areas north of the Golden Gate.

"We don't use the term 'hitchhiking' because everybody's mother said you should never hitchhike," said Commuter Connection president Ellen Eatough. "We prefer 'flexible ride sharing.'"

By whatever name, the plan involves verifying a commuter's identity, residence and workplace and issuing him or her an identification card and a handheld, coded sign that tells passing motorists the commuter's downtown destination.

The idea is to get commuters to hitchhike at least two or three days a week. On days when they drive, hopefully, they will pick up members who are hitchhiking that morning.

It costs $2 to join the Commuter Connection.

Hitchhikers will be able to save about $1,000 a year in gas costs and by using the bridge's toll-free commuter lane, according to Eatough.

Commuter Connection's pilot program will operate under a $50,000 contract from the state Department of Transportation, and a $20,000 contract from the Bay Area's Metropolitan Transportation Commission.

Durable 727 Scheduled For Repairs After Rollover, Dive

DETROIT (AP) — Tht "strong-as-a-brick" TWA airliner that held up through a rollover and a dive through the speed of sound probably can be repaired, the airline said Friday.

But first, investigators have to find out what happened to the Boeing 727 in the skies over Michigan.

"Obviously, the airframe is as strong as a brick," Langhorne Bond, head of the Federal Aviation Administration, said Thursday after inspecting the damaged jet.

In Seattle, Boeing said it had been asked to send a team of engineers to Detroit to help find out what went wrong. "Obviously, we will do it," a spokesman said.

TWA spokesman Steven Forsyth said in Chicago that analysis of the flight recorder, a device that records on metal pertinent information such as voltages and pressures, should help. It was being studied at the National Transportation Safety Board in Washington.

As for the plane, "We'll have to do something in Detroit. But whether we'll fix it completely there or repair it well enough to be flown to our base in Kansas City for further work, I just can't say."

Repairs, he said, "will take a little bit of time." He did not have a cost estimate.

The airliner was landed by pilot Harvey Gibson, a 16-year veteran of TWA from Las Vegas, Nev., at Detroit Metropolitan Airport around 10 p.m. Wednesday.

Flying from New York to Minneapolis with 80 passengers and a crew of seven, the jet was over Flint, Mich., when it started to vibrate, yawed to the right, did a barrel roll and went into a dive at a 60-degree angle.

Federal investigators said it apparently broke the sound barrier, about 625 mph at that altitude, in its five-mile drop from 39,000 feet before the pilot brought it under control by dropping the landing gear.

It is believed to be the first time a commercial plane not designed for breaking the sound barrier did so.

Sound itself is nothing more than shock waves moving through the air. A moving airplane pushes air in front of it, and close to the speed of sound has trouble breaking through the air mass that, in effect, has not been able to move fast enough to get out of the way.

That air mass buffeted the TWA plane severely, breaking off wing slats and flaps. The plane also was damaged in landing without its full complement of flaps and slats. Four passengers were slightly injured.

Boeing said the plane was the early model 727-100, since surpassed by a longer version with more seats. It carries serial number 160 and was delivered to TWA on July 12, 1965. Serial number 1,482 is about to come off the assembly line, Boeing said.

MONEY ASSURED SAFE

HONG KONG (AP) — Chinese Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping (Teng Hsiaoping) has assured businessmen their money is safe in this British colony despite its uncertain future, Gov. Sir Murray MacLehose said Friday after returning from a 12-day visit to China.

SIMMONS

Teller Knocks Carter Move

PALO ALTO, Calif. (UPI) — Dr. Edward Teller, developer of the hydrogen bomb, said Thursday President Carter's proposal to decontrol domestically produced petroleum over the next 28 months "is two years too late."

"Furthermore, it should be effective immediately," Teller, 71, a senior research fellow at Stanford University's Hoover Institution, said. He said the incentive of higher prices "will accelerate the development of alternative energy sources more effectively than any action government can take.

"Rather than penalize the oil companies for earning higher profits which also means higher taxes for the government, Congress should fashion tax incentives encouraging oil companies to plow back more profits into exploration and research while meeting environmental requirements.

"We should offer world prices for Canadian and Mexican energy and stop the current nonsensical treatment of our very important neighbors."

In an earlier interview with newspaper reporters, Teller called the furor over the nuclear accident at Three Mile Island in Pennsylvania "complete nonsense" and said the press has spread "a perverse horror story" about toubles at the facility.

Area Congressional Members' Roll Call Votes Delineated

HOUSE

FRIVOLOUS RESEARCH? The House voted, 219 for and 174 against, to cut $14 million (from $172 million to $158 million) from the National Science Foundation budget for biological, behavioral and social science research. The vote came during debate on HR 2729, the foundation's fiscal 1980 authorization bill, later passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio, the sponsor, asked: "When we are talking about $50,000 spent for finding somebody who is violating our air space, or $83,000 for studying homosexual couple formation, or $80,000 for a study of the legal profession, does (anybody) honestly believe we can put those grants and studies in the same category as Dr. Jonas Salk?

Rep. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, an opponent, said the House should remember that silly-sounding research projects occasionally produce breakthroughs of great benefit to mankind. "We have a responsibility in this body...to not take titles that may sound to us to be ridiculous and inflame the passions of our constituents."

Members voting "yea" favored the budget cut.

Reps. Bob Eckhardt, D-8, Jack Brooks, D-9, Jake Pickle, D-10, James Wright, D-12, Mickey Leland, D-18, and Henry Gonzalez, D-20, voted "nay."

Reps. Ray Roberts, D-4, Kika de la Garza, D-15, and Harold Runnels, D-2 (N.M.), did not vote.

UP IN ARMS The House passed, 296 for and 100 against, a bill (HR 2774) authorizing a two-year, $40 million budget for the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, the agency that coordinates U.S. weapons-control policy and participates in such international deliberations as the SALT talks.

Rep. Williams Broomfield, R-Mich., a supporter, said that even though the agency budget is up over previous years its approval by the House "is important to our national and international security."

Rep. Marjorie Holt, R-Md., an opponent, objected to a $400,000 item to fund "pubic education" in colleges and other organizations. "This is the year in which we should be appropriating funds only for pressing needs...not appropriating tax dollars for new programs with vaguely defined purposes," she said.

Members voting "yea" favored the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency budget.

Runnels did not vote.

SST REVISITED The House rejected, 137 for and 246 against, an amendment to cut $22.7 million for supersonic transport (SST) research from the $4.76 billion National Aeronautics and Space Administration budget for fiscal 1980. The budget was later approve when the House passed HR 1786 and sent it to the Senate. Although Congress in 1971 terminated the program to develop a commercial SST, it has kept the venture barely alive by appropriating $85 million for SST research over the past eight years. The $22.7 million in dispute here was another of the little-noticed SST outlays.

Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., the sponsor, urged his colleagues to "strike a blow for fighting inflation, for balancing the budget, for bringing to a halt a program which we thought... we had halted some eight or nine years ago..."

Rep. Don Fuqua, D-Fla., said the bill has no funds "to commit this country to build an SST. We are only trying to study ways by which, should that decision ever be made, we would have the best technology available at that time."

Members voting "nay" wanted to keep the SST program alive at a subsistance level.

Runnels, Wilson and Brooks did not vote.

SENATE

OUTSIDE INCOME The Senate defeated, 44 for and 54 against, a motion to hold senators to the $8,625 limit on outside earned income they had agreed to in 1977. The limit, intended to prevent conflicts of interest, is thus delayed until at least 1983. It applies to salaries from outside jobs, speaking fees and honorariums. It does not affect income from dividends, interest, rental properties, and family businesses. As a result of this vote, the limit remains at the previously-legislated $25,000.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., a supporter of the tighter limit, said: "A senator should not appear to be using his office for his own personal financial gain and take undue time away from his job, even though his speeches and public appearances may serve a public good."

Sen. Ted. Stevens, R-Alaska, an opponent, said: "I think it is unconscionable to tell a member of a profession or business that if he runs for the Senate, he must come here with the knowledge that he has to cease doing anything while the Senate is in session that would lead to a gross income from that business in excess of $8,600."

Senators voting "nay" were opposed to the $8,625 limit on outside income.

Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D, and John Tower, R, voted "nay."

RHODESIA The Senate voted, 66 for and 27 against, to send up to 50 private U.S. citizens to Rhodesia as impartial observers of elections scheduled there on April 20. Their report on whether the elections were fair to blacks would help the president and Congress determine whether the U.S. should lift trade sanctions against Rhodesia.

Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., said the move does not endorse the validity of the new Rhodesia constitution to be voted on, but will provide insight into whether it is the product of an honest or fraudulent vote.

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., an opponent, said the sending of an observation team will not sit well with African blacks and will "push the U.S. closer to the doomed regime" of Prime Minister Ian Smith.

Crime Rises Across Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas crime rose 2.7 percent in 1978 over the previous year, the Department of Public Safety said Friday.

"Overall in Texas last year, there was one major crime every 44 seconds," a department release said.

Rape and car theft accounted for the two largest increases of 11.5 percent each, said Wilson E. Speir, DPS director.

Robbery was up 7.9 percent, murder was up 6.8 percent, aggravated robbery rose 4.8 percent, larceny-theft increased 2.4 percent and burglary was up 0.3 percent.

Of the 721,581 estimated crimes, at least 648,704 occurred in urban areas. Rural counties accounted for 72,877 major offenses.

Only 22 percent of crimes reported were cleared by an arrest, Speir said. However, law enforcement agencies cleared 79 percent of the murders, 68 percent of aggravated assaults and 54 percent of the rapes.

Crime increased during the summer months, while January and February had the lowest number of offenses reported.

Eight officers were killed while on duty and four others died in work-related accidents, Speir said.

Local GOP Group To Meet Tonight

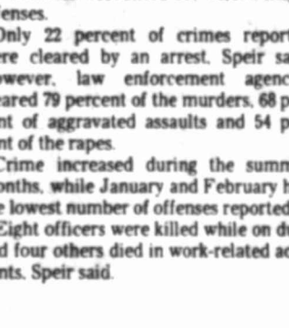

The East Lubbock Republican Committee will hold a general meeting at 7:30 p.m. today at the American Legion Post No. 808 at 4102 E. 61st St.

Jim Granberry, a former Lubbock mayor and the 1974 Republican gubernatorial candidate, will speak at the meeting.

Also attending will be District 75-A state Rep. Nolan "Buzz" Robnett and Lubbock County Republican Chairman Ruth Schiermeyer.

White House Solar System Rated 'Economic Dog' By Experts

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new solar hot water heating system being installed at the White House costs thousands of dollars more than originally estimated and it probably won't pay for itself in energy savings, officials say.

Intended by President Carter as a showcase for non-polluting, energy-saving solar technology, the new system is an economic dog, by official White House estimate.

The president began talking more than a year ago about putting a solar system in at the White House.

After considering and rejecting a number of even less cost-efficient systems, Carter finally selected a relatively modest design for 32 solar panels on the roof of the mansion's West Wing, where they are supposed to be relatively inconspicuous.

The system is designed to supply about 75 percent of the hot water used in the West Wing offices, most of which goes to wash dishes in the White House staff mess.

When the design was announced to reporters last September, the president's cousin, Hugh Carter, who administers the White House payroll and expenses, said it was supposed to cost $24,000 to install and would cut utility bills by $1,000 a year to start.

At that rate, he said, it would fall somewhat short of paying for itself over its expected 20-year life, assuming energy costs go up only 6 percent a year.

"It's a little bit on the negative side," he said. "However, the lowest bid received on the project was $28,099, more than $4,000 higher than projected."

Worse, it was discovered that $7,000-worth of roofing work has to be done before the solar panels can be put in, although White House officials say this work eventually would have been necessary anyway.

On the plus side, administration officials convinced the Fine Arts Commission, which can veto changes to the White House's appearance, that there was no need to install a new balustrade to hide the solar panels. That would have boosted the cost $6,000 more.

Hugh Carter insisted last September that putting the system in at the White House involved special construction problems that make it more expensive than a comparable system at an ordinary business or residential site. But he did not estimate how much of the cost could be ascribed to these special problems.

The White House solar project, however, has one large advantage: no interest.

Post Office Seeks Site For New City Facility

The U.S. Postal Service is currently seeking site offers for a new postal building in the city.

The preferred area for a building site is bounded on the north by Third Street, on the south by 15th Street, on the east by Avenue K and on the west by Avenue R, officials said.

The minimum site size is 290 feet by 420 feet, or approximately 161,000 square feet.

Property owners should submit their site offers not later than April 30 to Ken W. Wood, Realty Management and Acquisition Analyst, Field Real Estate and Buildings Office, U.S. Postal Service, P.O. Box 239, Dallas, Tx., 75221.

WHAT'S UP?

Casting call for baby Blotto

JOSH MOSTEL: Do you have a small version of this face at home?

If you have a tubby, curly-haired, bespectacled 6-year-old at home, you may have a star on your hands.

Matty Simmons, the executive producer of ABC's "Delta House" is combing the country in an effort to find a 6 to 10-year-old Josh Mostel look-alike. The young discovery will be flown with a parent or guardian, to Universal City, Calif., where he'll get $1,000 to stuff in his piggy bank for a day's work.

The story line for the upcoming episode calls for Hoover (Jaimie Widdoes), the Delta's president, to have a dream in which he has a child. The kid turns out to look just like Blotto, Mostel's character. That's where the chubby discovery comes in.

What was up in Hollywood?

Rogers and Astaire in "Swing Time."

How much did the stars of Hollywood's golden years earn to support their glamorous lifestyles? Here are some estimates from "Reel Facts: The Movie Book of Records" by Cobbett Steinberg:

Humphrey Bogart: $114,125 in 1942.
Joan Crawford: $195,673 in 1941.
Bette Davis: $365,000 in 1948.
W.C. Fields: $5,000 a week in 1932.
Clark Gable: $357,000 in 1941.
Greta Garbo: $270,000 in 1938.
Katharine Hepburn: $188,916 in 1941.
Ginger Rogers: $219,500 in 1939.
Mae West: $480,833 in 1935.

'Employing' a con job

Stephen Furst

When Steve Furst, who plays the portly Flounder in "Animal House" and "Delta House," first landed in Hollywood he had to be a better con man than any of the Deltas.

"I was married immediately after graduation to the girl I dated throughout my semior year," the Virginia Commonwealth University graduate says.

The two set off for Hollywood in a rented truck, with Furst's old car in tow, and very little money.

"I figured out that they suddenly were out of vacancies because we were unemployed, admitted it, and even worse, looked so unemployed.

What did he do? "I lied," says Furst, who donned his best suit and invented an entire corporation for which he supposedly worked.

That got them an apartment, but they still had to pay the rent.

Furst finally did land a job delivering pizza. He refuses to say whether the deal included all the wares he could eat.

He recently returned to the pizza place to take the "Delta House" gang out for dinner.

"We all posed as out-of-work actors who were very hungry," he says happily. "Now that was a con I really enjoyed pulling."

Rose in the Series?

CHERYL STOPPELMOOR was born 26 years ago in Huron, S.D. Today, in Hollywood, Calif., Cheryl Ladd is one of the hottest stars in town. TV viewers will get to see another side of Ms. Ladd on Monday, April 9 before the Oscars when she headlines her own ABC special. Says Ladd of her acting and singing careers: "I don't want to be stuck doing just one thing. I want to do it all — serious dramatic roles, musical comedy, farce — everything. And her number one dream? A Broadway musical, it seems.

What's up in booze?

Americans consumed a little more than 148 million three-gallon cases of hard liquor last year — up 2 to 2.5 percent from 1977.

This is how that consumption broke down by category, according to Advertising Age:

Potatoes, Dry Beans Reported Good Buys

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department reports that potatoes and dry beans should be good buys this month. Heavy supplies of both should be available.

When buying potatoes, look for firm, smooth ones with few eyes. Avoid green potatoes and any that smell moldy.

Soviet Man Given Death Sentence

MOSCOW (AP) — A 32-year-old habitual offender has been sentenced to death in connection with a series of attacks against Moscow women, the newspaper Vechernyaya Moskva said Friday.

The evening newspaper said the sentence was meted out against Vladimir Churlyayev, 32, who previously had drawn a four-year term for robbery.

After being released from imprisonment, Churlyayev started drinking heavily, changed jobs often and went back to crime to get money for his drinking habit, Vechernyaya Moscow said.

The story gave few details of his attacks against women, but indicated that in some cases the victims had come close to death.

"I didn't want to kill anybody," Churlyayev told the court during his trial.

But the prosecutor demanded "the exceptional measure of punishment" and Churlyayev was then sentenced to be shot.

The account did not say whether the execution had been carried out.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

GOVERNMENT FARM POLICIES HAVE MADE a "palpable" contribution to inflation of food costs, the Carter administration's chief inflation fighter told a joint House subcommittee this week.

Alfred Kahn, chairman of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, sand an effective anti-inflation program must include re-examination of all government actions, including farm price supports and set-aside programs.

Kahn told a joint meeting of two House agriculture subcommittees that the U. S. Department of Agriculture and CWPS, in monitoring food price inflation, would be particularly attentive to price increases in food processing and retailing.

THERE HAS BEEN NO SERIOUS DISCUSSION among the White House staff about mandatory price controls, Kahn told the subcommittee.

"The best assurance against (controls)," he said, "is to make sure the voluntary standards work, and that is what we are concentrating our efforts on."

As part of those efforts, CWPS is reviewing government farm policies that implement set-asides, build grain reserves, and support sugar at prices that some claim are inflationary, Kahn said.

This does not mean blind opposition to those policies, he said.

"THE TOTALLY FREED MARKET in agricultural commodities does not always work well...but it does mean that our urgent national need to bring inflation under control must add a new consideration, a new dimension to the political and economic balancing process that fashions these governmental interventions," he said.

Kahn said food prices generally have risen more slowly than other components of the consumer price index since 1974, but added that the pattern was reversed in 1978 and will continue in 1979.

Raw food costs, not processed food costs, were the primary catalyst, he said.

Also contributing to food price inflation have been the costs farmers pay for machinery, fuel and fertilizers, as well as the costs of packaging and marketing food, he said.

KAHN REINFORCED THE ADMINISTRATION'S commitment to monitor those increases to insure compliance with the wage and price guidelines.

He claimed the fact that the farm-to-retail spread has increased at a time when farm prices are rising rapidly was an unusual situation and would bear watching.

Kahn said the CWPS also will intensify its scrutiny of food processing and distribution under the anti-trust laws to examine whether exemptions from those laws are exacerbating food-price inflation.

Wholesale Beef Unchanged At Chicago

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 52 points higher to 10 lower on 33,262 cars Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

October was up the most after June gained 105. Only nearby April was lower after losing 30 on continued liquidation.

The commission house with a cash cattle connection was an aggressive buyer on light arrivals and firmness in beef. Late selling was mostly profit taking ahead of the weekend.

There have been 149 deliveries thus far. Wholesale beef was unchanged at 105½ to 106½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were unchanged to up 50 cents with the best top $75 per hundredweight at Illinois Direct. Slaughter was 118,000 head. The major markets are expecting about 14,600 head on Monday.

Feeder cattle futures closed 30 to 77 higher led by September which rose 122 early. Volume was estimated at 5,231 contracts.

The market rebounded after a loss of 30 in November in opening trade.

Prices rose to the higest in more than one week, up three cents from recent lows. Local and commission house buying was triggered by projections for continued beef scarcity in the next three years.

Deliveries total 212 thus far. About 1,300 head are expected at the major terminals on Monday.

Hog futures closed 45 higher to 12 lower in active months. Distant June fell 70 on an offer. Sales numbered 7,156 lots.

The market rose to the highest in more than one week on mostly spillover buying from the cattle pits. Firmness in pork products at noon also brought support. Selling was traced to heavy hog runs and mostly lower prices.

Wholesale hams were up 1½ to 2½ cents at 72 to 83½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were off $2 to up $1 with the best top $46.50. Kill was 320,000 head. Receipts at the major markets are expected to total 31,500 head on Monday.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 15 to 112 higher led by May and July. Exceptionally, thinly-traded distant August slipped 10.

Earlier, August rose 162 and July fell 22. Sales were 5,642 cars.

Prices were lifted to the highest in more than one week, up four cents from lows, on technical support and spillover buying from the cattle pits. Firmer cash bellies tended to offset heavy hog runs and lower prices.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up 2 cents at 43 to 50½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

Tech FFA Members Receive Awards

Six Texas Tech University Collegiate Future Farmers of America members were honored at the chapter's first annual awards banquet Friday at the Country Squire Dinner Theater. Ninety-six members of the 45-year-old organization and their guests attended the ceremonies.

Honored as the club's outstanding freshman was Joe Whitfield of Levelland while Bob McLeroy of Gail was the outstanding sophomore. Outstanding junior was Mark Edens of Clint and Jerry Dillard of Waskom was the outstanding senior.

Two vocational agriculture student teachers were honored. Rodney Warren of Gorman was chosen best student teacher for the fall semester while Butch Willoughby of Melrose, N. M. received the honor for the spring semester.

Honorary members inducted into the chapter at the event were Dr. W. F. Bennett, interim dean of the College of Agriculture, and Mary Lou Nava, agriculture education department secretary.

PCG Director Elections Scheduled Next Week

Producer directors to Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. will be chosen Tuesday and Thursday for Lubbock, Hockley and Terry counties l

According to W. B. Criswell of Idalou, current Lubbock County producer director, and H. L. McPherson of Wolfforth, businessman director, Lubbock County cotton producers and agribusinessmen will elect the director at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The election will take place in the meeting room of South Plains Electric Cooperative, 110 North Amarillo Road in Lubbock.

Joe Bowman of Levelland, current Hockley County producer director, and Sammy Means of Ropesville, businessman director said the Hockley County election will be held at 8 a.m. Thursday at The Spot Restaurant in Levelland. Breakfast will be served courtesy of Means' Flying Service.

Terry County cotton producers and agribusinessmen will select a new director at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Production Credit Association Building, 121 West Broadway, Brownfield. The announcement came from Gerald Caswell of Meadow, current Terry County producer director, and Alvia Calvert of Brownfield, businessman director.

Each of the 25 counties in PCG territory has two directors, one a businessman and the other a cotton producer. They are elected on alternate years for two-year terms. Each is eligible for re-election every second year.

All producers and businessmen are invited to the meeting. However, under new PCG by-laws, only current dues-paying members of PCG will be eligible to be elected a director or to vote in the election. This provision of the by-laws will be fully explained at the meeting.

A PCG staff member will conduct the election, present a short program and answer questions about PCG and its objectives.

Mini Tractors Enter Contest

About 75 entrants from across the state brought buzzing little tractors to Lubbock Friday for the Micro-Mini Tractor Pull state championship competition at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

Winners in the divisions received $30 for first place pulls, $24 for second place and $20 for a third place tug. The top three entrants also received trophies.

The toy tractors equiped with airplane engines are placed on a track and hitched to a weight transfer sled. As the tractor tugs down the track, a chain mechanism moves the 67-pound weight up a rail on the sled putting more weight on the pan.

Each contestant is hopeful his tractor can pull the sled the distance of the 15-foot track and meet certain specifications such as tractor weight and length, hitch heigth and tire softness.

According to Bill Thomas of Morton, president of the Texas Micro-Mini Tractor Association, the key to a winning tractor is fine tuning and attention to details.

The state championship meet will continue today with the six-pound and five-pound stock and six-pound open classes.

Five-pound super stock — 1. Billy Thomas of Morton, pulling 173.5 inches. 2. James Hammett of Hereford, 172.25 inches. 3. Curtis Stipe of Snyder, 149.5 inches.

Three-pound stock — 1. Mike Lewis of Whiteface, two full pulls followed by 155.5 inches. 2. Lin Fisher, two full pulls and 129.75 inches. 3. Billy Thomas, full pull and 155 inches.

Swine Fever Now Global Problem

ROME (AP) — African swine fever, a deadly disease of pigs for which there is no known treatment, continues to threaten the world's estimated total pig population of 666 million, according to the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization.

A spokesman said Friday that a meeting of experts last week concluded that the epidemic must be considered a global problem.

The disease, in its acute form, kills up to 95 percent of pigs in any infected or exposed area, the experts said.

Endemic to southern Africa throughout this century, African swine fever spread to the Mediterranean basin in 1957 when Portugal became affected, followed by Spain three years later. The disease has remained in the Iberian peninsula ever since with only transient spread to other European countries.

Accident Prompts Safety Studies

By G.G. LaBELLE
Associated Press Writer

The accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant has set things stirring at other plants with nuclear reactors built by the same firm — and focused attention on safety problems the plants have had.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has sent inspectors to the plants in California, Arkansas, South Carolina, Ohio and Florida, and some of the utilities that run the plants have sent their own employees to Harrisburg to inspect the Three Mile Island plant.

The Harrisburg accident — in a reactor built by Babcock & Wilcox of Lynchburg, Va. — set off anti-nuclear demonstrations at a plant near Sacramento, Calif., and plans for protests at a plant in Florida.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. has called for a temporary shutdown of the California plant while its safety is re-evaluated, and Cleveland Mayor Dennis Kucinich has urged the closing of an Ohio plant, calling it "a clear and present danger" to his city, about 100 miles east and also on Lake Erie.

However, NRC official Edson Case said earlier this week that the agency feels the plants can continue to operate "without undue risk to health and safety for the public."

Two of the plants — one in Ohio and one in Arkansas — are currently shut down, one for "routine maintenance" and one for refueling.

There have been troubles — though not as serious — in the other Babcock Wilcox reactors, and one NRC inspector warned in a memo last January that the reactors may share some problems.

At the Oconee plant near Clemson, S.C., 1,550 gallons of radioactive water spilled through a stuck valve in 1975, but Duke Power Co. President Bill Lee said "there was no exposure of anybody to anything." Lee said the incident prompted a change in a "pressure relief valve."

The Cleveland Plain Dealer has reported that NRC records show the Davis-Bessie plant at Port Clinton, Ohio, was run for nine months in 1977-78 without two backup diesel generators vital to the plant's safety system. The paper quoted NRC official N.C. Moseley as saying "this violation had the potential for contributing to an occurrence related to health and safety."

A company spokesman would not comment on the Plain Dealer report without seeing the NRC records but said that no equipment failures at the plant had caused a truly dangerous situation.

At the Crystal River plant in Florida, small amounts of radiation were released from a nuclear waste treatment plant adjacent to the reactor on six occasions, according to Albert Gibson of the NRC. He said none of the six releases exceeded federal safety standards.

Between 1976 and 1978, the Rancho Seco plant about 25 miles from Sacramento, Calif., had 55 "reportable occurrences" — things that affect a safety feature of the plant — but Jeff Marx of the Sacramento Municipal Utility District said the utility did not consider any of these dangerous.

Arkansas Power and Light Co. Vice President William Cavanaugh said there have been occasional problems with a valve or pump at the Arkansas No. 1 plant but that none caused danger to the public or to plant workers.

None of the other operating Babcock Wilcox plants is in as populous an area as the Harrisburg facility, but another similar plant, now closed, is about 35 miles upstream from New York City on the Hudson River. It was shut down in 1974 when federal standards were upgraded to require a larger emergency core cooling system than the plant had.

During the days of crisis at Three Mile Island, it was disclosed that an NRC inspector who examined the Davis-Bessie plant in Ohio had filed a memo Jan. 8 noting the possibility of problems in the Babcock Wilcox reactors.

The memo by inspector J.C. Creswell said: "There are some indications that other BW plants may have problems maintaining pressurizer level indications during transients. In addition, under certain conditions such as loss of feedwater at 100 percent power ... the pressurizer may void completely."

The "pressurizer" is a unit designed to maintain a specific level of pressure in the reactor's cooling system. Safety requirements demand that the pressure remain under control during transients, or changes in the system's pressure and temperature.

Engineers for the company that operates the Three Mile Island plant said at first that the dangerous "bubble" of gas that accumulated in the reactor during the accident may have occurred from just such a steam overflow from the pressurizer.

But NRC officials said later that the bubble was generated by an internal chemical reaction between metal and the coolant water.

Creswell's memo urged that the information be turned over to the federal boards that license reactors, but NRC spokesman Frank Ingram said, "The decision was made here that it was not necessary to notify the Atomic Safety and Licensing Boards on the basis of the information."

Ingram added that decision is now being reviewed and he expects the boards to be notified.

An NRC spokeswoman, Sue Gagnon, said after the memo was made public that "if there is a common factor between the report and the problems at Three Mile Island it may be the feed water system, but we really won't know until we get finished with our investigation in Harrisburg."

Later, an NRC preliminary report said human error and technical and possibly design problems contributed to the Harrisburg accident. Darrell Eisenhut, an NRC engineer, said one possible problem may have been a faulty pressure reading and that this may reflect a design problem in the Babcock Wilcox reactors.

Two Policemen Suspended Because Of Tape Recorder

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Two policemen have been suspended because of the story related by a tape recorder.

The suspensions were announced Thursday by Chief Richard Lamunyon. He had recently begun having officers carry tape recorders to protect them from charges of harassment, brutality and discrimination.

On April 1, a patrolman accompanied by a senior officer stopped a car for a traffic violation. The traffic violator verbally assaulted the patrolman and finally issued a challenge to meet barefisted. The patrolman accepted and handed his gun to his senior officer. The two men tangled. No one was injured.

The patrolman later realized that most of what took place had been recorded, and he advised his superiors.

City Campaign Begins For New YWCA Center

A community-wide campaign to raise between $451,000 and $535,000 for a proposed Physical Fitness Center for the Lubbock YWCA is being launched this month.

The campaign for the multi-purpose, standard gym has been approved by the United Way Board for volunteers to solicit contributions for the project through 1982.

Nearly $39,390 already have been received for the construction of the 9,900 square-foot center.

The Lubbock YWCA, the third largest in Texas, is "bursting at the seams and cannot expand the size of present programs nor add any new programs in our present limited facility," said Mrs. Doug Andrews, who spoke for the YWCA at a Community Informati Dinner held Thursday night at the Hillcrest Country Club.

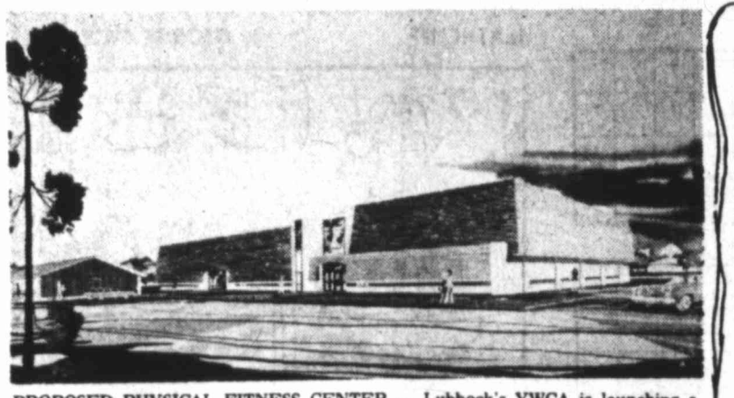

Howard Yandell, chairman of the fund drive, said that YWCA membership now totalling more than 4,000, has tripled since 1973 and annual participation has doubled.

The organization which offers more than 60 programs to persons of all ages is limited to a mini-gym in the basement of O'Neil Center, 3101 35th St., which cannot be used for recreational games. The facility also includes two crafts rooms and an Olympic size swimming pool.

The smaller $451,000 goal would provide for the gym shell and basic equipment of limited use, while the $535,000 goal would allow for complete locker facilities and full-scale programming and use.

New program revenues, new membership dues and rentals will pay for the annual operation of the new facility and will preclude additional subsidby from the United Way.

A Memorial Wall in the gym will honor donors making substantial contributions to the new facility and a Memory Book will contain names of all donors.

PROPOSED PHYSICAL FITNESS CENTER — Lubbock's YWCA is launching a three-year campaign this month to raise funds for a new gymnasium. Campaign officials have set a low goal of $451,000 for a limited-use gymnasium and a goal of $535,000 for a full-scale programming and use facility. Contributions totaling $39,300 already have been donated toward the structure. (Photo by Jim A. Childress Photography)

LCC, Tech Fare Well In Diamond Play

Chaparrals Earn Split With TWC

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

There are a couple of Cubans on the Texas Wesleyan baseball team and when they see a ball hit long, really long, they shout " 'Sta ve, 'Sta ve. 'Sta veo."

That translates roughly to "It's going, it's going, it's gone," and they could have cheered themselves hoarse Friday as the Rams split a doubleheader with Lubbock Christian College at the launching pad they call Chaparral Field.

There were 18 extra-base hits in the pair of games and five of them were homers. LCC took advantage of the long balls in the first game, winning 12-7, but TWC came back with a vengeance, thrashing the Chaps 15-3 in the nightcap.

The teams will try again today in another doubleheader starting at 1 p.m. John Ross and David Hanna will throw for Lubbock Christian while Arcilio Antonio "R.C." Castaigne and Mark Ball oppose for the Rams.

"You had to be a great outfielder to play out there today. If you were average, you looked like a blind dog in a meat house . . . just snapping all over the place," said LCC coach Larry Hays of the gusty conditions that contributed to seven errors and many minuets in the outfield.

That was evident in the first inning of the first game. Trailing 3-0, LCC pounded TWC starter Jon Henke for seven hits and 9 runs.

First, Richard Bowles singled to short. He stole second and Bobby Doe walked. Steve Brigante moved everyone around with a bunt single and then Tim Leslie singled to right, scoring Bowles and Doe and moving Brigante to third.

He needn't have bothered as Kenny Toney then blasted a 345-foot home run to left.

After that, Scott Wolf and Dave Hanna walked and Bob Nottebart lofted a high shot to the outfield. The fielder lost it in the sun and Wolf scored.

Bowles was up again next and he knocked a bad-hop single off the second baseman's glove, scoring Hanna and advancing Karl Mahan (a courtesy runner for Nottebart) to third. Bowles moved to steal second, the TWC catcher threw the ball into the outfield and Mahan scored.

Bowles moved to third on an outfield out by Doe and then Brigante singled to left-center scoring Bowles and ending the scoring for the inning.

Leslie and Toney each finished the opener with 3 RBIs apiece and each got a pair of hits. Kyle Sanford also knocked 3 RBIs and he and Tom Hayes each got two hits.

The Rams jumped on LCC just as quickly in the second game, taking an 11-0 lead after three innings and chasing two Chaparral pitchers.

Combine that with TWC starter Steve Daniels throwing a two-hitter (a six-inning no-hitter) for the Rams' 35th com-

Raiders Throttle Arkansas

It was only fitting that the grounder went to third baseman Kenny Cogdell.

Arkansas was threatening — it had threatened and been successful in four earlier innings — with a runner on first.

But, with two outs, Razorback Kevin McReynolds drilled a ripper to Cogdell. The sophomore bobbled it, but kept the ball in front of him. Then he rifled the throw to Craig Noonan whose stretch just nipped the sprinting McReynolds.

That ended it, with the Red Raiders nipping the visitors 9-8 and ending Arkansas' 14-game winning streak. But, more inportantly, it lifted Tech to 7-6 in the Southwest Conference and kept runner-up Arkansas from improving its 12-3 record.

The two clubs will go at it again today, the first game beginning at 1 p.m.

Not only did Cogdell handle the final out, but he drove in 3 Raider runs, including the winner in the seventh inning.

He came in to relieve starter Jamie Miller, and the ability of the twosome to throttle the Razorbacks left Tech coach Kal Segrist feeling a bit better. Segrist is thin on the mound with two hurlers nursing muscle pulls.

Today, Segrist will start Mark Johnston (4-2) and Robert Bryant (3-0).

"We finally got some pitching," commented the Raider coach, "and the kids just kept battling back. Ibarguen came in and really hung in there (allowing 1 run in five innings). Arkansas is not a good club, it's an outstanding club, and their people really swing the bat.

"But, even though we had some errors (four) we had some outstanding plays defensively. (Shortstop Brooks) Wallace went in the hole to make some great plays."

Tech got all its runs off Arkansas ace Rich Erwin who had not been beaten this year in nine decisions. He gave up nine hits, but only 4 of Tech's runs were earned, as five errors afield — one created by him — hurt.

Tech jumped on Erwin early, picking up 5 runs in the first inning. Erwin helped, however, with three walks. Bobby Kohler got a one-out walk, before Randy Newton unloaded a double.

With two men on, Erwin intentionally walked Raider Larry Selby, the league's leading hitter. But, the move backfired, as Erwin walked — unintentionally — John Keller to force in Kohler.

Brooks Wallace got a nubber out in front of the plate, and Erwin's toss went to the plate. But the home-plate ump ruled Arkansas catcher Ronn Reynolds'

Coronado Opens Loop

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Coronado coach John Dudley pulled out a couple of baseballs from the supply drawer, and broke the tension of beginning the district opener with a spontaneous juggling routine.

"I used to have a DH that could really go into a good juggling routine," said Dudley, while passing the time between questions Friday afternoon. "I really don't know why I'm doing this. I can't juggle."

And the Mustang mentor hopes the players he puts out on the field today against Lubbock High at the CHS field don't juggle the balls hit to them. The doubleheader is slated to get underway at 1 p.m.

"We've got to keep Jaime (Noel) and Walker (Larry) off the bases," said Dudley. "When those two guys get on the base, they can make things happen."

Lubbock High opened the 4-AAAA season Tuesday splitting with Monterey. Overall, the Westerners' record is 11-5. Lubbock High's record was altered last week because the Westerners' first contest of the season with Amarillo Caprock was changed to a loss.

(Lubbock High was ahead in the sixth inning when the game was called, but since Caprock wasn't able to bat in the bottom of the frame, the score reverted back to the last complete inning with Caprock ahead at that time.) While Coronado has yet to play a district contest, it sports a 10-5 overall mark.

Coronado will throw Gene Segrest (4-0) in the first game, with Russell Johnson (2-1) taking over the mound duties in the second game. The Westerners will choose from Andy Vasquez (4-1), Sammy Chavez (3-1) and David Rush (5-2).

In other 4-AAAA action, Monterey will host front-runner Plainview (2-0) at Lowrey Field, while Hereford visits Levelland in a nondistrict game.

"I haven't watched Coronado play yet this year," said Lubbock High coach Bart Hernandez. "But I know of Segrest from last year. Um. . . what a pitcher."

Although Segrest is known as a hard thrower, the Mustang righthander will set up the curve with the fastball.

"I guess we're going to have our players choke up and go to lighter bats," said Hernandez.

Hernandez believes that Coronado's 10-5 record isn't a true indication of the talent on the Mustangs' roster.

"I think that they've lost five games mainly because their pitching hadn't come around at the first of the season," said Hernandez. "Coronado has experience, good power and some speed. I really don't know of any weaknesses."

At the Westerners' practice session Friday, it sure didn't seem that the LHS players were worried that their 4-AAAA title chances could very will be determined today. The Westerners joked through a pepper game and some fly balls to the outfield.

"This really is it for us," said Hernandez. "We have to come out with at least a split. If we drop two, our players know that the first half race is over. However, I feel that being relaxed against Monterey helped us split that series."

Cardinals Collect Win

By The Associated Press

Ken Reitz and Tony Scott each collected three hits and drove in three runs apiece, leading the St. Louis Cardinals to an 8-1 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies behind John Denny's five-hitter.

Reitz' double and two singles, and Scott's single, double and triple highlighted an 11-hit Cardinals' attack off Philadelphia left-hander Steve Carlton and reliever Doug Bird as St. Louis won its opener for the fourth straight year.

Philadelphia took a 1-0 lead on Garry Maddox' two-out homer in the second, but the Cards tied it on Ted Simmons' drive over the left field wall in the bottom of the inning.

Keith Hernandez' scratch single then ignited a two-run rally which included singles by George Hendrick and Scott and was capped by Reitz' double, putting St. Louis ahead 3-1 in the fourth.

ORIOLES 5, WHITE SOX 3

Rich Dauer's two-run single keyed a three-run Baltimore rally in the second inning and the Orioles went on to defeat the Chicago White Sox 5-3 in an American League opener behind the three-hit pitching of Jim Palmer.

It was the 1,000th major league baseball victory for Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver, the 31st in history to reach that plateau, and ruined the managerial debut of Chicago's Don Kessinger.

GIANTS 7, REDS 2

Bill Madlock drove in three runs and scored three and Darrell Evans drove in two more as the San Francisco Giants beat Cincinnati 7-2 for their second straight victory over the Reds.

ASTROS 2, BRAVES 1

Houston third baseman Enos Cabell drove in two runs with a first-inning single off Atlanta's Phil Niekro and the Astros made it stand up for a 2-1 season-opening victory over the Braves.

EXPOS 3, BUCS 2

Tenth-inning errors by Willie Stargell and Dale Berra resulted in an unearned run that gave the visting Montreal Expos a 3-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates in the baseball opener for both teams.

The Pirates, who emphasized defensive improvement in spring training after leading the National League with 167 errors last season, committed a total of five errors as the temperature dropped into the low 30s on the wind-swept field.

Renner Leads At Greensboro

Renner, a 22-year-old who scored the best finish of his career with a runner-up performance in this tournament a year ago, put together a 36-hole total of 139, 5 under par on the wind-raked, 6,984-yard Forest Oaks Country Club course.

The skinny 6-footer managed a third-place performance in the sand-laden winds of Sawgrass at the Tournament Players Championship two weeks ago and found similar conditions here. The winds, if anything were worse than those in Jacksonville, with gusts recorded at 46 mph.

"I'm just very happy to survive with a 71," said Renner, who emerged from a five-way tie for the lead at the end of 18 holes to take sole possession of the top spot halfway through this chase for a $45,000 first prize.

"I'll admit I'm beginning to feel confident about playing under these conditions," he said.

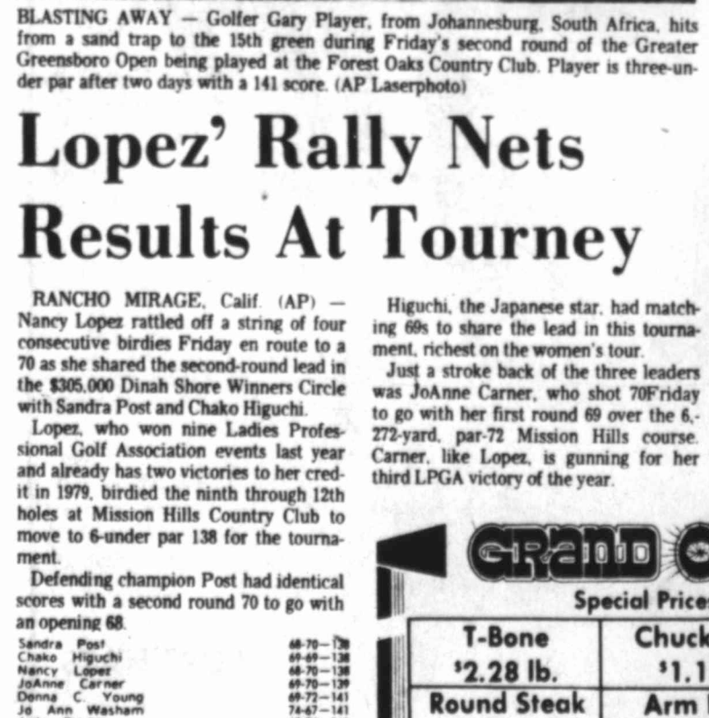

Barney Thompson, a 6-foot-5 career struggler who only has won $54,000 in six years of pro golf tour activity, was alone in second at 140 after a 71.

Gary Player of South Africa warmed up for the defense of his Masters title next week with a 71 that left him 2 strokes off the lead at 141. He was tied with Tom Purtzer, who also had a 71.

"I'm very pleased with the way I'm playing," said Player, who moved into contention despite making bogey on two par-5 holes. He had missed the cut in two previous American appearances this year, and had played on three other times in five months.

"I hadn't expected to be this pleased with my play this early," he said.

Lopez' Rally Nets Results At Tourney

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Nancy Lopez rattled off a string of four consecutive birdies Friday en route to a 70 as she shared the second-round lead in the $305,000 Dinah Shore Winners Circle with Sandra Post and Chako Higuchi.

Lopez, who won nine Ladies Professional Golf Association events last year and already has two victories to her credit in 1979, birdied the ninth through 12th holes at Mission Hills Country Club to move to 6-under par 138 for the tournament.

Just a stroke back of the three leaders was JoAnne Carner, who shot 70Friday to go with her first round 69 over the 6,272-yard, par-72 Mission Hills course. Carner, like Lopez, is gunning for her third LPGA victory of the year.

Players Tee Off On Lopez

NANCY LOPEZ

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — The Ladies Professional Golf Association players have long been one of the tightest-knit groups of rivals in sports, but Nancy Lopez' quick rise to stardom and the attendant publicity afforded her apparently has created some tension on the tour.

The 22-year-old Lopez has been the LPGA's dominant player for the past year, winning 11 tournaments and garnering a majority of the publicity and attention. A measure of resentment appears to be growing among some other players because of what they consider the inordinate amount of publicity she has received, compounded perhaps by the fact she is a self-described "loner."

Tour veteran Sandra Palmer told Fredie Hobledo of the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner: "Nancy Lopez can be beaten, but even when she's not winning, we still hear about her. She can be somewhere in the pack and all the papers will talk about is Lopez being six strokes back. They'll ignore the leaders, who deserve better treatment."

When Lopez missed a long putt on the final regulation hole of last week's LPGA event at Costa Mesa, Calif., to drop back into a five-way tie for the lead, there reportedly were cheers in the ladies' lockerroom, where other players were watching on television.

Lopez' caddy, Roscoe Jones, said, "I heard about the cheering in the lockerroom when Nancy missed that putt. And the leader of the choir was Hollis Stacy."

"I have nothing against Nancy personally," said Stacy. "She's a great player and deserves everything she's won, but ... "

Susie Berning, a two-time U.S. Open champion who now plays part-time on the tour, said she feels no resentment toward Lopez, but understands how others might.

"It's not Nancy's fault," Berning said. "At least I'm not jealous of her, but if I were a JoAnne Carner or a Kathy Whitworth or a Judy Rankin, I might resent it.

"Those are the players who made the LPGA, not Nancy Lopez. Those players who were once great, and some of them still are, deserve a better shake from the press."

Berning said Lopez never is seen in the lockerroom, and that she has not built up a good rapport with the veterans.

Lopez said she has a few close friends on the tour, and added, "Basically, I'm a loner. That's just the way I am."

"There are many great players out here and I do feel they deserve more credit than they're getting. But if they have to win to get it, then they're going to have to play better than I do," Lopez continued. "I'm still going to go out and try to win every time I play in a tournament."

Lopez said she will feel no added pressure because of any resentment toward her.

Patriots Promote Aide

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — New England Patriots owner William H. Sullivan Jr. called it the "end of a nightmare," and the seventh head coach in the National Football League team's history, Ron Erhardt, proclaimed a new, open era Friday as his dream came true.

It was no surprise as Sullivan hired the team's offensive coordinator, the affable 47-year-old Erhardt, to replace Chuck Fairbanks as head coach. He added to the move the assignment of Player Personnel Director Frank "Bucko" Kilroy as general manager.

What may have been a surprise, however, was Erhardt's immediate announcement that he will spice up the offense he ran for Fairbanks and let quarterback Steve Grogan call more of his plays, and declare an official end to the low-key Fairbanks era.

Grogan, immediately hailed the promotion, saying, "It will be the first time as a player I'll be able to sit down and talk to the head coach one-on-one. It will make things a little more fun than in the past."

Defensive captain Steve Nelson, a linebacker, said, "It's a relief. Erhardt's always treated people the right way and I think he'll make us a more emotional ball club."

The comments were all indirect swipes at the low-key Fairbanks, who jumped his New England contract to take over at the University of Colorado.

There were smiles at Schaefer Stadium for the first time in three months Friday, after the long legal battle with Fairbanks and Colorado. Sullivan said, "The dream that was shattered by that unbelievable nightmare ...is behind us. This is a day of ... rejuvenation, renewal and optimism."

Kilroy, 57, said he signed a one-year contract and expressed delight with the fact he will be taking over a front-office that had been working with him.

"I've been trying to get a job like this for a long time," he said, "and I don't have to rebuild."

Said Erhardt, who had a near 90 percent winning record as a coach in high school and at North Dakota State, "It's a coach's dream. It's the happiest day of my life. I have never lost in football and I don't intend to start now."

Tech Blanked By Houston

HOUSTON (Special) — The University of Houston tennis team knocked off Texas Tech 9-0 in a Southwest Conference dual match played here Friday.

Tech, now 0-2 in SWC action and 9-9 for the season, will play the University of Texas in Austin at 1 p.m. today.

Raiders Whip Razorbacks

Arkansas got single runs in the second and third, the initial run coming on a 390-foot homer by Kevin McReynolds.

Tech added a single run in the third on a two-base error and Scott Leimgruber's squeeze bunt.

In the fourth, as Tech scored 2 runs, Erwin got in the way of first baseman Ed Wallace who was chasing a high, fiind-blown pop in the infield.

And, going into the bottom of the seventh with the score knotted at 8 (after Arkansas had tied it in the top of the frame), Leimgruber singled, and Cogdell's double brought in the winner.

Keller and Noonan stretched their consecutive hitting steaks to eight and seven games, respectively, but Selby, who came in with an SWC-leading .447, was hitless in four tries.

Porker Ed Wallace, who was runner-up to Selby in hitting (.436), also went hitless, in three attempts.

plete pitching game and you know it was a long afternoon for the Chaparrals.

"It was one of those days when somebody hit a fly ball it looked like a three-ring circus," said Hays.

One problem Hays and those around Chap baseball have dwelled on for a long time is the thinness of the pitching ranks. LCC was forced to call on five pitchers Friday.

"Well, we've still got Ross and Hanna and we didn't have to go with (relievers Bob) McNicol or (Randy) Vinson."

So you see, LCC isn't hurting that bad. Mickey Crump is also in reserve, ready to throw.

In fact, Hays pointed out Gary Swann's relief performance in the first game as the high point of the day. "He's having another typical Gary Swann year," Hays said. "You give him a starting job early and he gives it right back.

"Then he comes on at the end of the year and beats everybody. I hope this was the start of that part of the season for him."

Ponies Run Away With Title

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Coronado track coach James Gandy stood in the infield after it was all over and talked to well wishers; around his feet were several trophies, scattered like so much chicken feed.

Gandy's Mustangs had just defeated Monterey 249-215 in a dual meet and combined with a lopsided victory his troops picked up in the junior varsity division, it made for a very satisfying night.

In a triangular meet, also ran at the CHS track, Dunbar took a runaway victory over Lubbock High and Levelland.

"Don't worry," assured Gandy. "I'll find room."

But it is getting a little crowded in Gandy's office. Coronado's victory Friday night marked their fourth of the year — not bad for a team that hadn't exactly overpowered the opposition on the track in the past.

Today's track calendar finds the District 4-AAAA girls in a loop meet at Plainview and the 1-AAA girls in action on the Coronado track.

In addition to that, Christ The King will host a match at the Texas Tech track beginning at 9 this morning.

"Naturally I'm pleased to win," said Gandy. "I felt like we should win this one, though. We've run against Monterey enough to know what they can do.

"Of course, if they could have had those other two kids it might have been a different story."

The other two kids Gandy was referring to are Plainsmen high jumper Chuck Perry and distance man Curtis Conaway who are competing in the Texas Relays in Austin.

But the Mustangs did look strong in some other events. They defeated Monterey by 10 seconds in the mile relay, turning in a time of 3:25.3.

"We ran a 3:25.0 down in Hobbs," said Gandy. "But that was running the meters (1600) and so it isn't really quite as long a race. So our showing in the relay had to be the best we've had all year."

In the meet, Dunbar actually won the mile relay with a time of 3:23.6. Anchor man Jerry Isaacs took the baton with only a slight lead over Coronado — all five schools were running together — but DHS really stretched out a gap going around the first turn.

CHS anchor man Archie Moore finally made some ground on Isaacs but couldn't quite make up the yardage.

The field events at the CTK Invitational begin a 9 a.m. and the running preliminaries at 10. The finals start at 1 p.m. in the meet.

MHS Advances In Amarillo Golf

AMARILLO (Special) — After one round of play here at the Amarillo Country Club, only Monterey remains in the running among Lubbock schools for the team title of the Amarillo Relays Invitational Golf Tournament.

The Plainsmen shot a 317 Friday to stand third, 4 strokes behind first place Amarillo High. Only the top six teams were selected to play in the final round today, and both Coronado and Lubbock High failed to make the cut.

B-Team Medalist— John Word, Coronado, 79.

BENEFIT TRACK

Texas Tech is sponsoring a benefit track meet for the Michael Morris Memorial Scholarship Fund Sunday. The preliminaries of the meet are scheduled to begin at 10:30 a.m. and the finals are slated to follow at 2:30.

Dockery Plans Workout Today

Today's workout — the hitting to begin at 10:45 a.m. — will end the third week of practice forthe Red Raiders.

Final game, to end the four weeks of work, will be next Saturday afternoon.

The Raiders have worked but three days this week, taking Monday off. And in Wednesday's scrimmage, the defense again dominated.

Several Raiders have been injured, but most of them are expected to return. Safety Ted Watts was held out of Thursday's workout because of a sore jaw, and his backup, Greg Isarel, was missing Thursday because of a stiff back resulting from an auto accident.

Raiders Set Relay Mark

AUSTIN (Special) — Texas Tech established a meet record in the college-university division 3200-meter relay with an excellent anchor lap by James Mays in the first day of the Texas Relays.

The Red Raiders' time of 7:23.76 replaced the old mark of 7:28.60 by Ouachita Baptist, and it was only the second relay victory for the Raiders.

Tech's time in the relay also set a new school record; the old school mark was 7:30.7.

Robert Lepard ran the first leg for Tech and finished in front with a time of 1:52.1. Greg Lautenslager followed with a 1:53.1 as Tech dropped to fourth.

Ricky McCormick then ran a 1:50.7 to put the Red Raiders back in a tie for first. James Mays ran the anchor leg and registered a 1:47.5 to give Tech the victory over Northern Iowa. Tech finished 7 yards in front.

Texas A&M's powerful Curtis Dickey exploded from the blocks ahead and nipped a driving Bill Collins Friday night to capture an invitational 100-meter dash in the 52nd annual Texas Relays.

The race, won by the Texas Aggie junior running back in 10.42 seconds, was billed as a match between Dickey, the NCAA indoor 60-yard record holder, and Olympian Johnny Lam Jones.

Collins was timed in 10.51 seconds, and Jones was fifth in 10.53 seconds.

In the high school shot, Michael Carter of Dallas Jefferson, who is bound for SMU, broke his own national record with an effort of 74 feet 7½ inches. Carter threw the 12-pound shot 73-10¾ on March 24.

Ozark 'Loose' Despite Pressure

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies' manager Danny Ozark is loose as a goose despite intense pressure to win — or else.

The "or else" is obvious to anyone whoever managed a baseball team. In Ozark's case it would send the genial 55-year-old field boss back to picking grapefruit in Vero Beach, Fla.

No one in the Phillies' orgnization has publicly issued any win or else ultimatum. It's just a strong feeling of veteran writers reporting the activities of the Phillies.

In the off-season, Paul Owens, the club's personnel director, has gone out and obtained Pete Rose, second baseman Manny Trillo, pitchers Nino Espinosa and Doug Bird. The bench has been strengthened with Greg Gross, Dave Rader, Del Unser and rookie Lonnie Smith.

Despite pitching problems, it's obvious the Phillies' brass feel they've given Ozark the tools to win the National League pennant, and carry the club into its first World Series in 29 years.

As they say, if the job doesn't get done, you don't fire 25 players, just the boss on the bench they let down.

Ozark is entering his seventh year as manager of the Phillies. He's the senior manager in the National League. He's probably survived more media criticism in those years than a U.S. president. Yet, for the most part he's managed to maintain his cool.

In a way, Ozark is a throwback to the late Casey Stengel. Ozark is the master of the malaprop. He throws out lines such as, a player's limitations are limitless, and, he hates those cliff dwellers (cliff hangers). He's friendly, rarely refuses to answer a question, abhors lying to the media.

It's ironic that many of the media who at one time or another cut him to ribbons, now consider Ozark the class guy in the Phillies' organization.

Ozark will deny he has to win to hold his job. But he gives the impression that if he doesn't, so what. His attitude seems to be that he'll do the best he can with what he's been given, and if it's not enough, there are worse things than picking grapefruit.

He'll vehemently deny it, but he wasn't too thrilled with the acquisition of Rose. It's not that he doesn't respect Rose and his accomplishments. But the manager of the Phillies can't help but wonder if a 38-year-old Rose can do the job at first base as well as the 31-year-old Richie Hebner, dealt to the New York Mets for Espinosa.

The Phillies have a plethora of pitchers with injuries, or chronic conditions that limit their capabilities. A realist, Ozark wonders if his team can hold off the Pittsburgh Pirates unless the question marks are replaced by positive results.

But Ozark jokes, laughs, walks about as if he hasn't a care in the world. If he's feeling pressure it's carefully locked inside.

Where some managers would flinch at a question, Ozark replies, "Do you wantme to lie or tell you the truth?" He's told, of course, "Tell the truth."

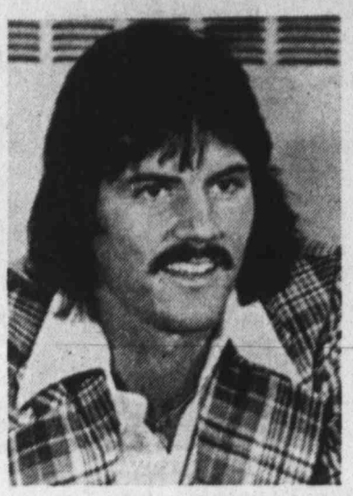

"Then I'd better not tell you," Ozark replies. Then, he tells you, and asks for good judgment in handling it.

Should the Phillies get off to a poor start, and Ozark get the thumb, he's the kind who would leave as unobtrusively as he appeared in 1973.

He lives modestly, has saved his money, and at 55, what's so bad about picking grapefruit in Vero Beach?

His one regret could be that in his tenure with the Phillies, he wasn't always able to sing that Frank Sinatra standard, "I did it my way."

Eckersley Inks Long-Term Pact

DENNIS ECKERSLEY
...New Millionaire

BOSTON (AP) — Dennis Eckersley, saluted by his Boston Red Sox boss as "the premier pitcher in baseball today," joined the "instant millionaire" ranks Friday, signing a five-year contract extension for a reported $2.8 million starting in 1980.

"I guess I can afford to get that Mercedes I've always wanted," the 24-year-old right-hander quipped after signing the agreement negotiated by his agent, Ed Keating, and the Red Sox General Manager Haywood Sullivan.

"We're very happy that Dennis will be with us for the next several years, and hopefully beyond that," Sullivan said. "We consider him the premier pitcher in baseball today and we're happy to have negotiations out of the way so he can get along with his game."

Eckersley, who had threatened to play out his option next year and become a free agent if not signed by opening day this season, was set to sign the new contract Wednesday. However, the signing was delayed because Sullivan was "unhappy with a little bit of the contract."

"It was no big thing," Sullivan said. "Ed and I got together for a couple of hours Thursday evening and met again this morning."

Eckersley shut out the Cleveland Indians on two hits for seven innings before letting Dick Drago finish a 7-1 victory in the American League opener Thursday. However, Sullivan said, "if he had pitched a no-hitter or been beaten by 10 runs it wouldn't have had any bearing on the contract."

By agreement, Keating and Sullivan declined to disclose the terms of the contract extension, effective next year after Eckersley completed a current agreement worth a reported $185,000 a year.

Sullivan chuckled as he said "it probably will be out in a week anyway." Keating said, "It's safe to say he'll be among the highest paid pitchers."

Eckersley, who became a 20-game winner for the first time after being acquired from the Cleveland Indians in a multi-player deal last spring, told a news conference "I'm as happy as can be."

"I'm happy to know I'm going to be in Boston for a while," he added. I'm proud to be with the Red Sox."

The Red Sox dug deep into the vault for the third time this year to avoid the risk of losing one of their stars. In January, they signed slugger Jim Rice to a seven-year contract for a reported $4.8 million. Last month, they kept 39-year-old Carl Yastrzemski happy with a two-year contract extension through 1981 and a big pay hike in his $275,000 contract, possibly to $350,000.

Olympic Fieldhouse Investigated

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Federal and local officials say an independent engineering firm should have a final report ready by the end of the month on allegations of serious structural flaws in the trouble-plagued $16.5 million Olympic Fieldhouse here.

That study has already drawn the interest of a federal prosecutor headquartered in Syracuse.

The 25 allegations, contained in a confidential audit report compiled last December, reportedly center on three alleged deficiencies: a sag of up to six inches in the building's 220-foot roof trusses, faulty welding and weak concrete.

A preliminary review of those charges by the engineering consultant found no cause for immediate concern and "concluded that further study will provide reasonable assurances of structural safety," according to the Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee and the Gilbane Building Co., which the committee hired as construction manager for the 1980 games.

The Fieldhouse, whose construction was delayed by a steel company's bankruptcy and altered after earlier reviews, will serve 8,000 spectators at some events.

The allegations are particularly sensitive because Gilbane, based in Providence, R.I., was the general contractor for the Hartford, Conn. Civic Center, whose roof collapsed two winters ago.

The outside consultant was called in to review the report prepared for the U.S. Commerce Department's inspector general. That report was compiled by auditors with help from the agency's Economic Development Administration, which is funneling roughly $57 million in federal construction dollars to the Olympic Committee.

The Hartford Center's roof was designed to put stress on the roof corners, while the Lake Placid facillity is designed to channel pressure toward vertical columns, according to Ramon Lopez, the man in charge of Gilbane's work here.

Gilbane, which is named as a defendant in a lawsuit filed by Hartford officials, did not work on the roof of the civic center, although it did supervise or perform virtually all of the other work there, he added.

"It's an entirely different type of structure," agreed Robert Fowler, a partner in the New York firm Christiansen and Robertson, hired to review the allegations at a cost of roughly $100,000.

Fowler declined to detail the testing procedures involved, but said his firm's four-member team hoped to have the final phase of its work completed by the end of the month.

But it is not known when or if the firm's report will be made public.

Assistant U.S. Attorney George Lowe, whose Syracuse office covers the Lake Placid area, has asked that all materials first be sent to him for possible criminal prosecution, according to officials in the Commerce Department.

Lowe has refused to confirm his interest in the material, but William Randolf, an acting Assistant Inspector General at the Commerce Department in Washington, confirmed that Lowe had written a letter requesting the data.

"It wasn't anything we referred to him, so much as his request to review," Randolf said. "It's always possible to decline prosecution on something because it isn't heavy enough. On the other hand, he wants at least to have that prerogative."

The Economic Development Administration is paying for the outside study because it lacks the engineering and architectural expertise to check the allegations itself, according to Randolf and David Evans, an EDA project engineer here who is charged with supervising fieldhouse work.

The changes, along with a steel supplier's financial difficulties, delayed completion of the building's steel framework until October. The project's concrete was poured when temperatures had already dropped well below freezing, the federal officials said.

Up to six inches of sag are allowed for in the building design, but the early EDA estimates showed that much sag without the full anticipated snow load, Evans said. Lopez disagreed.

Cauthen Makes English Debut

SALISBURY, England (AP) — Steve Cauthen, the first jockey every to win $6 million in purses in a year, makes his English debut today, and is creating one of the biggest stirs since Red Rum won the Grand National three times.

STEVE CAUTHEN

Cauthen, an 18-year-old who has won over $12 million dollars in the United States since 1976, is booked for three rides Saturday at modest Salisbury race track in the rolling Wiltshire countryside. His appearance was expected to attract a capacity crowd of 9,000 and will be seen by a television audience of millions, including those in the United States who will see him ride on a delayed telecast.

"If things go right, it could be that I ride here regularly for the rest of my career," the Walton, Ky., rider said on his arrival in London earlier this week.

Cauthen needs 56 more victories to chalk up 1,000 winners in a career marred only by a 110-race losing streak in California last winter, which he snapped before crossing the Atlantic.

The 5-foot-2, 112-pound Cauthen, youngest to ride a winner of the Triple Crown, is riding in Britain for millionaire owner Robert Sangster and trainer Barry Hills. Sangster has guaranteed him earnings of $200,000 but he could triple that if he learns to master the ups, downs and twists of English courses.

With former British jockey Jimmy Lindley as his guide, Cauthen has spent much of the week on horseback, getting a crash course on the unpredictability of English riding conditions.

"Steve is a highly intelligent young man and I don't anticipate him having any difficulty coping with this track," said Washy Hibbert, clerk of the Salisbury course.

Cauthen rides first on Marquee Universal, a three-year-old colt and 11-to-4 favorite a handicap.

Pro Golfers Set Sights On Masters' Green Jacket

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — With Jack Nicklaus in perhaps the deepest slump of his career, television ratings on the decline and a wave of new faces sweeping the game, pro golf looks to the Masters to provide a sense of definition to a strange, transitory season.

The annual spring rite — which the game's touring pros regard with almost-religious reverence — could do one of two things this week; either reaffirm the dominant position of the established stars or confirm the trend toward a new look, a shunting aside of the more familiar names and the emergence of another generation.

"I've seen it happen two or three times — the shift from one era to another. It seems to be happening again," said Jack Tuthill, Tournament Director for the PGA Tour.

Four of the first 10 tournaments on the tour this year were won by men scoring their initial pro triumphs. Not only were they winning, they were dominating the top-10 finishers, too. Fully credentialed players won occasionally — Ben Crenshaw, Hubert Green, John Mahaffey — then quietly retreated into the also-rans.

Until the last couple of weeks, there really wasn't a single, clear-cut, outstanding player of the season. Each week, it seemed, there was a new candidate for the role.

But the trend was slowed, perhaps reversed, in the last few tournaments leading up to the Masters. Lanny Wadkins and Tom Watson suddenly moved to the fore and stamped themselves as the two leading candidates for the famed green jacket tha goes to the winner of this, the first of the year's four major tests of golfing greatness.

JACK NICKLAUS

GARY PLAYER

TOM WATSON

"I don't place too much emphasis or importance on favorites," said Watson, "but it looking at the Masters, you have to consider Wadkins."

He's the only two-time winner this year, having scored in Los Angeles and in the howling winds of Sawgrass at the Tournament Players Championship in one of the great performances of recent years.

And Watson, whose spectacular performances and dedicated, single-minded quest for perfection have made him one of the game's most respected performers, has his game nearing a peak. The 1977-78 Player of the Year and the 1977 Masters king, Watson has had three runner-up performances and recently romped to a run-away victory in the prestigious Heritage Classic. He's the season's leading money-winner.

Beyond those two, however, the picture is more muddled than in many years. It is complicated and confused by Nicklaus' slump.

Normally, the his name and that of the Masters are synomymous. The game's greatest player has had his greatest moments on the 7,040 yards of flowered hills and valleys that make up the Augusta National Golf Club course. He's won five times. As always, it's his first big goal of the season.

But he comes into this one with more doubts attached to his game, more nagging questions arising, than ever before. For example, last year at this time he'd won twice and been second twice. This time he hasn't been in the top 10. He's broken par once in his last 12 rounds. He's played his last three tournaments in 294, 294 and 300.

At age 39, he took a long layoff from the game. He contends he's merely in the process of recovering from that break.

"Actually, my game isn't that far off," he said. "There have been times when I played reasonably well. I think I'll be ready."

The defending titleholder, 43-year-old Gary Player of South Africa, agrees.

"For the first time in my life, I took a long break. I played 3 tournaments in five months. You can't stay away that long without paying the price," he said. And he's paid the price, missing the cut in his first two American starts this year.

"Golf is a strange game," he said. "It can come and go so quickly. I certainly haven't played as well as I'd like, but my putting is coming around and I'm going to Augusta with optimism," he said.

Although he hasn't won this season, former champion Ray Floyd has shown marked improvement in the last month and could be a definite threat.

"It's that time of the year," he said. "You'll see the good players playing good at Augusta."

All the leading performers — and the trend of the season — point to some younger players as definite threats in the event that gets under way Thursday. Chief among them are power-hitters Andy Bean and first-timers Lon Hinkle and Fuzzy Zoeller.

Among the others most likely to succeed are Green, Crenshaw, Hale Irwin, Jerry Pate, Tom Kite and Bruce Lietzke.

Other standouts include four-time Masters champ and all-time gallery favorite Arnold Palmer, U.S. Open king Andy North, slump-ridden Tom Weiskopf and Lee Trevino, who needs a victory in the Masters — an event he once refused to enter — in order to join Nicklaus, Player, Ben Hogan and Gene Sarazen as the only men to sweep all of the Big Four tournaments.

The elite, restricted, invitational field is relatively small: 55 American pros, five American amateurs, 12 foreign pros, one foreign amateur.

George Archer withdrew. He's recovering from back surgery. Jerry McGee and John Mahaffey, the current PGA champion, both are listed as starters, but neither has played in two months. Mahaffey has an injured hand and McGee is suffering from torn muscles in the ribcage.

Traditionally, the purse is not announced until late in the tournament week.

While television audiences have been down in many events this year — trailing pro bowling in some cases — the almost-certain drama this tournament seems to generate annually and the spectacular beauty of the site virtually assure a huge viewing public for the Saturday and Sunday telecasts by CBS.

Face Of Olympic Committee Gets Needed Lift

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — Old Avery Brundage would have looked twice. It was seven o'clock on a sunny morning and members of the International Olympic Committee (IOC) were out jogging on the fine beach at Montevideo's Carrasco suburb.

This all-powerful committee is changing. It no longer is the caucus of rich old men Brundage had around him when he was president in the '50s and '60s.

Kevan Gosper of Australia, 45, former 400-meter runner who won a silver medal in a relay at the 1956 Games, was among those jogging before breakfast.

Maj. Gen. Niels Holst-Sorensen, 58, commander-in-chief of the Danish air force, was kicking up the sand further along the shore.

Dr. Eduardo Hay of Mexico, 64, who helped to organize the 1968 Games in Mexico City, plodded along at a slower tempo.

It is not just the morning joggers who give the IOC a new look these days. The group generally is more youthful and aggressive, a result of the recruiting IOC President Lord Killanin has done since he succeeded Brundage in 1972.

He swam in the Rome Olympics in 1960 and helped to plan the Montreal Games in 1976.

David McKenzie, 42 year-old Australian lawyer and a former Olympic fencer, has slightly startled older members by his abrasive way of tackling Olympic problems.

"They tell me my trouble on this committee is that I talk too much," McKenzie said. Right now he is canvassing on behalf of Sydney, which plans to bid for the Olympic Games of 1988.

Killanin has made the Olympic movement more democratic by strengthening the links among the IOC, the national Olympic committees and the 26 international federations that control the Olympic sports. But the IOC itself still is self-electing and self-perpetuating.

Killanin, while keeping this pattern, has used his powers as president to nominate younger men.

Favorites Win In 4-AAAA Tennis

PLAINVIEW (Special) — Things went pretty much as expected in Friday's District 4-AAAA tennis meet.

In the A boys doubles, Greg Wright and Tony Gibbs will meet in the finals today for an all-Coronado championship match. Both the first and second place finishers in each A division will advance to the regional meet.

Top-seeded Kenneth Coulter and Kenneth McFarlin of Monterey have assured themselves of a spot in regionals by advancing to the doubles finals.

Lori Humphreys of Monterey will face Teresa Landry of Plainview in the A girls finals, and in the girls doubles championship, Coronado's Susan Mangum and Beth Nickels will face the Monterey team of Pauline Musil and Lori McClure.

Coronado and Monterey dominated the district meet as they have the entire district.

Several other Division B titles will be decided today but none of those winners will advance to the regional meet.

Champion Fiddler Receives Mail From All Over United States

By JERRIE GARMAN

COOKEVILLE, Tenn. (NEA) — If Frazier Moss weren't known for his fiddling, the man who claims he's "never met a stranger" would be known for his friendliness.

"I get letters from all over the United States," he says, "and I answer every one, even if it's just a postcard. Stamps are breaking me up!"

And letters aren't all he receives.

"I get calls all day — even in the middle of the night — from people who have heard my music and just want to talk to me," he continues. "I always talk to them."

Moss once got a call from a man in Vermont who just wanted to meet him. The man came to Cookeville to fiddle with Moss for two hours.

Another call came from "a real nice lady" in California, who asked if she could pay him a visit.

"Sure, I would be proud to have you — and Zelma would be proud, too," Moss responded. (He and Zelma have been married since 1931.)

"We both entertained her," he adds.

Moss says people who have heard his music in person or on record often stop him on the street just to say hello. Though he often does not remember them, he carries on a lively conversation anyway.

"Life is a give-and-take thing," he philosophizes. "You have to get to know people and do things for people in order for them to do things for you."

One of the people he got to know is Louis Owens, an uncle of singer Dolly Parton.

"He heard me playing and he came up to me and said he would like to cut a record with me," recalls Moss. So, Owens produced Moss's latest album, "Fiddler's Dream."

Moss is happy with the album, which he says is the most professional of the 10 recordings he has made.

Moss's music reflects the best of the tunes of the South, many of them hundreds of years old. He compares his music to early dance forms and knows many hornpipes, reels, jigs, waltzes and polkas.

Moss received his first fiddle at age 8 for selling Ferry's garden seed.

He strung the toy-like instrument with his mother's sewing thread and learned to play "Rocky Mountain Goat" from his great uncle. He has been fiddling ever since that day more than 70 years ago.

Encouraged by one of his teachers, Moss won his first fiddling contest — and a $5 gold piece — when he was 12.

From then on, his fame climbed steadily, peaking when he won the National Old Time Fiddle Championship in Weiser, Idaho, in 1977. But that doesn't mean his life has been easy, Moss adds, explaining that he was a construction worker for 40 years and had to schedule his fiddling around his job and family life.

Moss says he has played in so many fiddling contests that he has lost track of the number.

FRAZIER MOSS

Author Tells Of Lost Year

TORONTO (AP) — Margaret Trudeau says that following her separation from Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau she spent a "lost year ... of anxious days, drug-high nights, phony glamor, botched friendships and betrayals."

One morning after a "truly sleazy evening" at Studio 54 in New York she says she covered sheets of paper with a desperate scrawl: "Help me, please."

"Fast and furious, I searched for freedom at a pace that took me only around in circles," the estranged wife of Trudeau writes in the last of five serialized installments of her autobiography "Beyond Reason," published in newspapers Friday.

She tells of her escapade in Toronto with the Rolling Stones rock group, of appearing in public with a black eye, of being hounded by reporters and of her nights at Studio 54.

"In the eyes of the world my weekend with the Rolling Stones was the freedom trip to end all freedom trips." Mrs. Trudeau says of the March 1977, incident in Toronto.

"Without Yasmin Aga Khan, my great friend in New York, I would certainly have gone mad.

"She took me and did her best to protect me from the battalions of reporters who laid siege all night to our front door."

Although Margaret was branded "a promiscuous irresponsible wife, prepared to go to any lengths to escape her husband," it was worse for her husband, Mrs. Trudeau writes.

"People in Canada yelled 'cuckold' when they saw him pass in the streets.

"Stony-faced, he pretended nothing was wrong. When I got back to Ottawa I was in disgrace, total unredeemable disgrace."

After Margaret and Pierre signed a statement of separation on May 27, 1977, Margaret left for New York, "but not before I had received one letter of genuine support — from Prince Charles," the British crown prince.

In New York she was inundated with job offers, but she says they were from people who wanted to exploit her for an exclusive story.

She says she shared a "warm love" in New York with Bruce Nevins, head of a mineral water company, but realized with some sadness that Nevins was a confirmed bachelor.

May 22 Proclaimed U.S. Merchant Marine Day

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter issued a proclamation Thursday calling on citizens to honor the Merchant Marine on May 22, which has been designated as National Maritime Day by Congress.

May 22 is the anniversary of the departure in 1819 of the SS Savannah from Savannah, Ga., on the first trans-Atlantic voyage by a steamship.

ANNOUNCING AN IBM SEMINAR FOR RETAIL EXECUTIVES

Merchandise assortments seem to be exploding. Customers are demanding a broad spectrum of brands, models, styles, sizes, colors and price lines. Maintaining the right balance of merchandise, especially at all your selling locations, is an awesome record keeping and management task.

But that's only part of it. There are also the problems of rising operating costs, lower profit margins, changing merchandising concepts and the expanding use of credit.

The IBM retail solution offers you a way to meet this challenge. This solution combines: The IBM 5260 Retail System — a combination cash register, high-function point-of-sale terminal and sales-floor, data-collection device.

The IMB Retail Merchandise and Audit System — a series of low-cost, easy-to-use, licensed computer programs designed to make sense of the data you accumulate. And provide you with the information you need to control and run your business more effectively.

If you'd like to attend this free IBM seminar, call your Lubbock-IBM General Systems Division Office ... Ask for Ronna Davis to reserve a seat.

Movie '1941' Still In Production

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — There's always one picture filming in Hollywood that everybody thinks is destined to be a great one. Currently, it's "1941" and, after watching some of the shooting, this time maybe "everybody" is right.

It shapes up as a wild one — the words generally being used to describe it are "zany" and "silly" and "way out."

"The whole movie is a whimsy," says John Milius, using yet another word. Milius is one of the co-writers and the executive producer of the film.

For Spielberg, after such distinctly non-silly films as "Jaws" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," it's pleasant to be involved with something silly, zany, way-out and even whimsical.

"1941" is set in the year 1941 which, already, sets it apart from a lot of other movies. But it is set at the tail-end of 1941 and, if you remember your history, that was when Pearl Harbor happened. And, shortly after Pearl Harbor happened and the war began, the West Coast got panicky.

The movie is mostly about that panic, about the air raids on the coast that people saw or thought they saw, about the submarine attacks on the shore line that people saw or imagined, about the panic and riots and mass nervousness that ensued.

That may not sound like the stuff of whimsy to you, but it does to Milius, Spielberg and company. Milius says the script is compiled from incidents he has read about or heard about or, perhaps, invented, and all of them have been compressed into one day.

"I am a World War II buff," Milius says. "Isn't everybody?"

Spielberg says that he, too, is something of a World War II fan. But he has had little to do with the creation of this picture's script, having merely been hired on as a director. And that, to him, makes a very big difference.

"I probably won't see this picture again, once it's finished," he says. "I never did see 'Jaws' again, after I finished it. The difference is that movies I have written or had a hand in writing — like 'Sugarland Express' and 'Close Encounters' — I like to see again.

"But pictures I just direct, like 'Jaws' and this one, I just direct and that's all."

He is, however, enjoying working on this. It's a complete departure — his first outright comedy. He says he finds comedy hard work.

"I only know two comedians or comedy writers who are happy," Spielberg says. "And I can't think who they are."

Penny Marshall, who is making her movie debut in "1941," was standing next to us. Spielberg turned to her and asked if maybe Rob Reiner, her husband, might be one of those two happy comics.

"Yeah," said Penny. "I guess he's happy."

Spielberg and I reminisced about the first time we met, back in 1971, when he was just a youngster, breaking in, and direting an episode of "Night Gallery" with Joan Crawford. He remembered how nice the big star had been to him, the rookie director.

"Maybe if she'd been worse on the set," he said, "she would have been nicer at home." The reference was to the recent revelations about her mistreating her children, contained in the autobiography of her daughter, Christina, called "Mommie Dearest."

Iran's Courts Resume Dispensing Revolutionary-Style Justice

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Firing squads executed three police officers Friday and six military men went on trial for their lives as Iran's courts went back to work dispensing revolutionary justice after a three-week pause.

It was reported, meanwhile, that a senior Iranian employee of the U.S. Embassy had been arrested. And diplomatic sources said U.S. Ambassador William H. Sullivan, who was closely associated with the ousted Shah of Iran, has left the country, apparently never to return.

The executions took place at 4 a.m. Friday just outside the central Iranian city of Isfahan, state radio reported.

It identified the three executed men as Mahmoud Shaeedi, an interrogator for the Shah's defunct Savak secret police, Kamal Adib, a Savak interrogator and alleged torturer, and Mahmoud Asgarizadeh, a police officer accused of killing an anti-shah guerrilla.

Those put on trial at unknown locations in Tehran included Maj. Gen. Iraj Amini-Afshar, former martial-law administrator of the city of Najafabad, near Isfahan, who was accused of putting down anti-shah demonstrations by force.

Two others on trial, Lt. Col. Moshalah Eftakhar-Manesh and Lt. Bahador Bahadory, were charged with involvement in the "Black Friday" massacre last September at Jaleh square in Tehran, when troops killed more than 100 anti-shah demonstrators.

The flurry of action by revolutionary courts followed the publication of a decree Thursday formalizing the power of the tribunals, which have executed more than 60 persons, including at least 13 generals from the old regime of the exiled Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

The courts' work had been frozen March 16 by the revolution's leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, following complaints by his prime minister, Mehdi Bazargan, that legal norms were not being followed.

The decree still permits secret trials in some cases, and the execution of sentences immediately after the verdict. Judges are appointed by the nation's secret Islamic Revolutionary Council, which Khomeini is belived to control.

The three executed men apparently had been sentenced before the March 16 freeze and then were shot as soon as the new decree came into force.

The decree clears the way for resumption of the trial of former Prime Minister Amir Abbas Hoveida, who is charged with corruption and other offenses. The trial was broken off March 16, shortly after the prosecutor had demanded a sentence of death.

Sources said Friday that Reza Amini, a senior adviser on public affairs at the U.S. Embassy, was arrested Wednesday night by representatives of the Tehran public prosecutor's office.

Further details of the arrest or charges against Amini, who has worked at the embassy for 27 years, were not available.

The diplomatic sources said Sullivan, who is expected to be replaced shortly as the chief American envoy to Iran, left for extended consultations in the United States.

Sullivan, a veteran diplomat who served previously in Laos, the Philippines and as an assistant secretary of state in the Vietnam peace negotiations, was transferred to Iran in June 1977.

In the final months of the shah's rule here, as the United States continued to proclaim support for the monarch, Sullivan was known to have maintained close consultative contact with him.

The Khomeini-led revolution was strongly nationalistic and was aimed in part at eliminating U.S. and other Western influence in Iran.

State television Friday broadcast an interview given by Foreign Minister Karim Sanjabi to the Czechoslovak Communist Party newspaper Rude Pravo in which he said he hoped for better relations with communist countries.

But Khomeini, in a speech to 100,000 supporters Friday in the holy city of Qum where he now resides, declared, "We are still at war with the superpowers."

The negotiators said 304 Turkomans had been exchanged for 400 ethnic Persians, presumably members of the pro-government side. The Turkomans took arms to press their demands for greater local autonomy and less domination by the largely Persian central government.

'Mumbo Jumbo' Greets Diesel Fuel Inquiries

AUSTIN–U.S. congressmen became involved last week in Texas' diesel fuel shortage that threatens to cripple High Plains agriculture and immediately got a strong dose of bureaucratic mumbo jumbo.

State Sen. E.L. Short of Tahoka, chairman of a State Subcommittee on Diesel Fuel Shortages in Agriculture, sought the aid of U.S. Reps. Kent Hance of Lubbock, Jack Hightower of Vernon and Charles Stenholm of Stamford.

Short, in a conference call to the congressmen, asked them to investigate whether the federal government–if Texas is declared a disaster area because of the diesel shortage–could help farmers pick up the transportation costs of moving diesel in from other states.

Hance's office began checking to find out what various governmental agencies knew about the diesel fuel shortage. Marshall Farr, administrative aide to Congressman Hance, got this kind of runaround:

Farr called for a "Mr. Caldwell" with the Deptartment of Petroleum Allocation and Regulations under the U.S. Dept. of Energy. Caldwell being unavailable, Farr was directed to Jim Berry at another number.

Berry referred Farr to Nick Murphy, with Gov. Clements' Dept. of Energy Resources in Austin. Murphy referred Farr to Curtis Carlson with the U.S. Dept of Energy in Dallas.

Farr got nowhere, but did learn in the process rumors were widespread that brokers were counting on the federal regulation of fuel as an effective means for stockpiling diesel or "buying on the future market."

Short, a farmer himself, said dealers began telling Plains and Panhandle farmers a few weeks ago that no diesel fuel was available for them to operate their farms.

"Sometimes, after a rain, farmers have only a few hours to harvest their crops or the entire crop is lost," Short said.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, as chairman of the Texas Energy Advisory council, appointed the Short sub-committee to find out why the diesel fuel shortage came about and what could be done to help the affected farmers.

The sub-committee held its first meeting last week when farmers and oil distributors agreed a shortage of diesel fuel exists in some areas of Texas.

He estimated 15,000 farmers are affected in West Texas.

A 12 per cent shortage in March led to a general shortage throughout West Texas, Glasson said.

The Governor's Office of Energy Allocation requires fuel dealers to set aside 4 per cent of the diesel they get for emergency needs. The office is taking emergency requests for diesel fuel and will notify farmers where they can get the fuel.

However, Glasson said he does not believe the 4 per cent set aside would be enough.

He also said farmers would have to pay up to 8 cents a gallon extra to transport the diesel fuel from points hundreds of miles away.

Short said he has learned that the Oklahoma Panhandle, New Mexico and Arizona are also experiencing shortages of diesel fuel.

Short's sub-committee will meet again at 3 p.m. Monday to hear testimony from six to eight top level refinery management officials.

"The committee will attempt to find out the status of available fuel and get short and long range projections on future supplies," said Short.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

Government Claims Man Misled Judge

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government charged Friday that a Selective Service employee misled a judge when he claimed that the agency was trying to harass him with a psychiatric examination because of his critical views of the agency.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Kenneth M. Raisler said the employee, rather than being forced by the agency to undergo psychiatric examination, actually scheduled the exam himself solely so he could argue in court that he was being harassed.

Raisler asked U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey to withdraw his order of Wednesday night in which the judge halted the psychiatric exam set for Thursday.

Richey, who said Wednesday that he was concerned the agency was trying to stifle internal dissent, took the request under advisement.

The case concerns Robert M.T. Wilson, who has written President Carter, the Secret Service and the FBI that the Selective Service's emergency draft plans are woefully inadequate. His letters also speak of FBI and Secret Service plots against him.

June Kalijarvi, Wilson's attorney, asked Richey on Wednesday for a restraining order, arguing that the agency was harassing her client by demanding the psychiatric exam.

Federal Help For Birds Rated Costly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some expensive federal help is on the way to try to save the fewer than 30 remaining California condors, largest soaring bird in North America, from extinction.

Officials say it eventually will cost $8 million to capture the birds and encourage them to breed in captivity.

"It is a very slow reproductive process," said Lynn Greenwalt, an official of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, at a hearing Friday of the House wildlife conservation subcommittee.

"It may take decades," Greenwalt said. "It is a sound investment, nonetheless."

All of the remaining California condors, who have a wingspan of 9 to 11 feet, live at a wildlife sanctuary in the San Gabriel National Forest near Santa Barbara, Calif. Six years ago, they numbered about 40.

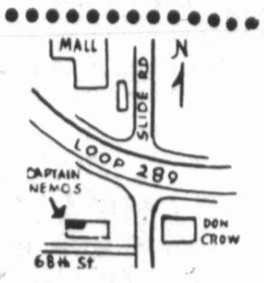

"They really are magnificent," said Frank Kinney, a wildlife service spokesman.

Plans are under way to capture the condors, a type of vulture, perhaps by covering their roosts with nets shot from cannons. They will be placed in a huge aviary to be built in California, where they will be encouraged to breed.

"We might do what they do to chickens, you know, fool them by taking away their eggs in hopes that the female would lay another," Kinney said.

He said there was no chance the giant birds will survive without some artificial method of persuading them to reproduce.

"It's got to start soon or it's too late," Kinney said.

British Labor Party Publishes '1980s' Platform

LONDON (AP) — The ruling Labor Party published an election platform Friday night that, in the words of Prime Minister James Callaghan, has "the look of the 1980s about it."

Carrying the slogan, "The Labor way is the better way," the platform commits Callaghan's party to cutting inflation, nationalizing ports and curbing the power of the House of Lords.
