Senate unanimously favors budget cuts

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Chiding House members for "hypocrisy" and calling on them to swallow "the bitter pill" of a tax increase, the Senate Tuesday unanimously approved $410 million in budget cuts.

A House-Senate conference committee could begin work as early as today ironing out the differences between the Senate plan and the $740 million the House sliced from the fiscal 1987 budget Aug. 15.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, however, said the Senate will take no final action on any compromise package of cuts until the House agrees to raise taxes.

Senators included in the bill a provision that could force the House to accept a tax increase by requiring that it would not take effect without passage of another bill the Senate passed Tuesday. That bill requires Comptroller Bob Bullock to certify that any combination of budget cuts or tax increases would eliminate the entire $3.5 billion deficit.

The special session ends at midnight Sept. 4. Without significant cuts and/or a tax increase, the Treasury will begin bouncing checks by December.

House Speaker Gib Lewis said he would continue to oppose a tax bill during the special session and reinforced that by naming four, hardline anti-taxers to the conference committee. When asked if he would hold that position if Gov. Mark White calls lawmakers back for a second session, Lewis said, "I don't know, you're talking about some time periods there that I can't even see."

The largest dollar difference between the two versions of the budget cutting bill comes for higher education. The Senate plan cuts $122.9 from universities, medical schools and junior colleges — including $463,000 from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. The House version chops $282.2 million from higher education — $1.2 million from UTPB.

The Senate cemented its position a little by adopting a non-binding resolution that instructs its conference committee members to accept to further reductions for higher education.

In a fiery speech before the final 28-0 vote, Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, accused the House members of placing political consideration above the needs of the state. "Now while I understand a little hypocrisy is the foundation of many political careers, enough's enough," Parker said.

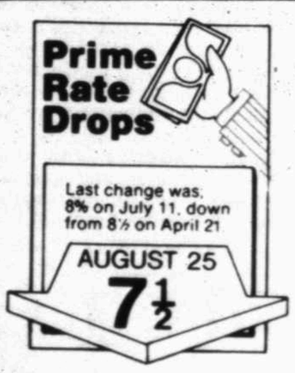

"We need to be honest with the people and the House needs to be honest with the people. This bill doesn't balance the budget. The bill passed by the House, that makes deep cuts into the muscle and bone of higher education in this state and seriously diminishes critical, humane services to the under-represented in this state, does not balance the budget either."

Lee-Permian play may be telecast

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

KTPX-TV, the first station to broadcast live a District 4-5A football game last year, is currently looking into the possibility of telecasting this year's match between Midland Lee and Odessa Permian at Memorial Stadium.

"We did meet with some people in Midland Monday to discuss the possibility of televising the Lee-Permian game again this year," said KTPX sports director Jay Hendricks. "We made no proposals and didn't discuss money. We just really wanted to find out where we stood on the matter. We wanted to know if we had the right of first refusal or what."

Dr. Joseph Baressi, superintendent of the Midland Independent School District; Gil Bartosh, Midland athletic director; and Earl Miller, head coach at Midland Lee attended the meeting with KTPX officials.

Bartosh and Miller would not comment on the meeting Tuesday and Dr. Baressi could not be reached for comment.

However, Miller last week said he would be in favor of televising the game again if the subject ever came up. "When you have a game that's sold out and you can't get everyone in to see the game, it's a great service to the two communities."

For all practical purposes, the game is a sellout. Lee has sold virtually all of its season tickets available, leaving approximately 3,000 tickets for Odessa fans. Permian alone has more than 5,000 season ticket holders.

"I think the game is going to be televised by someone. The need is certainly there," said Hendricks. "As a sports anchor at KTPX, I'd be a fool not to say that I would like to have it again.

"We had heard rumors that Permian might not be in favor of televising the game, so we want to touch all the bases. We want to know basically if the game is going up for bid again or just what our position is in all of this.

"No decisions have been made and I don't think the (school) boards in either city have discussed it. The school boards would have to make the final decision. We plan to talk with some people in Odessa Wednesday (today)."

University Interscholastic League rules prohibit any game being televised that would conflict with the regular Friday night schedules. If the game is televised, it would have to be played on Thursday, Oct. 23, or Saturday, Oct. 25.

"It would be another problem for us. We televised on Thursday last year and Thursday this year would be the fifth game of the World Series," said Hendricks. "Still, we're willing to preempt the World Series to show the game."

Hendricks said KTPX drew around a 60 share last year when the station preempted a National League Championship Series game between the St. Louis Cardinals and Los Angeles Dodgers for the Lee-Permian football matchup.

In fact, KTPX received national media coverage because of its decision to preempt the National League playoffs last year for a high school football game. Time magazine even sent a correspondent to cover the game.

"When you have around 60 per cent of the televisions tuned into your station, you have a good audience, considering the fact some 12,000 people interested in the game are there watching it in person. And when it's a local event, you get even greater benefit," said Hendricks.

Permian won last year's televised game by a 13-7 margin, but might not be quite as willing to play on Thursday this year. Lee has an open date on Oct. 17 while Permian plays Abilene Cooper. That would give Lee almost two weeks to prepare for the game while Permian would be forced into a short week of preparation.

Emergency teams clean up the scene at Barton Creek Mall in Austin after a woman suspected of shoplifting ran down security guards and struck numerous vehicles with a rented truck while attempting to flee the scene.

Austin woman faces murder charge after mall incident

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin woman suspected of shoplifting faces murder charges today in the death of a security guard after she went amok in a shopping mall parking lot, striking two guards and more than a dozen vehicles as she fled in a rental truck.

The woman, whose name was not released, was being held in Austin City Jail pending charges. She was arrested in East Austin about four hours after she tried to flee in a U-Haul truck at Barton Creek Square, then limped away on foot after the truck crashed into another vehicle about 3 p.m., said police spokeswoman Kellye Norris.

Another woman who had been with the suspect at the mall turned herself in to police, authorities said. She was released after questioning.

"It's kind of hard to imagine something like this happening out in a mall," said Jeannette Fuchs, of Blanco, one of numerous bewildered shoppers who found their cars smashed amid police barricades and ambulances.

"It was just crazy when we came out," said Norma Picacio of Fort Hood, whose car was knocked about 10 feet from its parking spot. "There were paramedics working on a person lying in the street, and there was another one on the ground in the other lane.

"It was mass confusion."

Elsa D. Ramirez, 21, a security guard at J.C. Penney, was pronounced dead at the scene after being struck by the truck, said Linda Aronovsky, Emergency Medical Services spokeswoman.

At least 12 killed in overnight clashes in Soweto

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police shot 12 blacks to death and at least 69 other people were injured in overnight clashes in Soweto, the government said today. A newspaper said a mob hacked one Soweto councilor to death.

Unconfirmed reports said 20 people were killed and more than 80 injured. The violence was the worst reported since a nationwide state of emergency was declared June 12.

Residents said the clashes were linked to efforts by Soweto council police to evict tenants conducting a rent boycott.

The state Bureau for Information said eight of the deaths and most of the injuries occurred Tuesday night when police shot into a crowd from which a hand grenade had been thrown. The grenade injured four police officers, three of them black and one white.

The bureau said the crowd of about 300 people had gathered at about 10 p.m. Tuesday at a flaming barricade outside a liquor store in the black township.

The other four deaths and one injury, occurred early today when police fired at a group of about 80 people at another barricade, the bureau said.

"The council police are shooting left and right. They are shooting at everyone, everything," the Sowetan newspaper quoted an unidentified resident as saying.

The Sowetan said a mob hacked Soweto city councilor Sydenham Mkhwanazi to death, and that the house of another councilor, Sigfriend Manthata, was burned down.

A third councilor, Silas Tshabalala, was shot in the leg when his own guard apparently fired in panic, the newspaper said.

The state Bureau for Information said it could not confirm the Sowetan's reports. Asked whether unrest was continuing today in Soweto, the bureau said: "The situation there is not abnormal."

Sources at Soweto's Baragwanath Hospital told the South African Press Association that more than 80 people, most of them in their teens and early 20s, were treated for injuries.

The shootings by police took place in one of Soweto's poorest neighborhoods, White City. Soweto, outside Johannesburg, is home to about 1.5 million blacks.

Black reporters who were in contact with Soweto by telephone said violence was continuing at midmorning and spreading to other parts of Soweto. They said schools were closed, and pupils who showed up were told to come back next month.

Witnesses said youths set up barricades of horse carts and trash cans, hurled stones at police and went house to house asking other residents to join the conflict.

Some reporters said about 500 people tried to march today on the town council office to protest eviction of residents who were refusing to pay their rents. They said security forces fired tear gas to disperse the marchers.

Several army helicopters were flying over the township this morning, one reporter said.

The Sowetan said the shootings began late Tuesday as town council police started evicting some families.

Another resident told the South African Press Association that the trouble started when police broke up a rent boycott meeting at about 7:30 p.m.

The town clerk, Nico Malan, said police evicted four Soweto familes Tuesday but not in the areas where the violence occurred.

MISD approves tighter budget

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The 1986-87 budget for the Midland Independent School District will be about $53,000 less than in the current fiscal year.

Meeting in regular session Tuesday, MISD trustees unanimously approved a budget of $58,071,125, — a decrease of .09 percent from the prior year's budget.

Trustees postponed setting a 1986-87 tax rate until after the special legislative session ends Sept. 4.

Trustees in June tentatively approved setting a tax rate 3.1 cents or 4 percent higher than the previous year. The rate would bring in $32.9 million — $2.9 million less than in 1985-86.

MISD officials said 85 percent of Midland homeowners would pay the same or less taxes than in 1985-86 under the proposed tax rate of 79.9 cents per $100 valuation.

The proposed rate represents a 10.2 percent decrease in the effective tax rate which, as required by law, was printed on every property owner's tax statement.

City's new budget to utilize surplus fund

By DOUG DRUMMOND
Assistant City Editor

The city will use nearly $1.3 million from its surplus fund to help balance its general fund budget — about $500,000 more than planned under previous estimates.

The move was announced Tuesday as the City Council formally approved the 1986-1987 fiscal year budget.

The budget, which begins Oct. 1, includes no tax hike and represents an 8 percent decrease in spending from this year.

In the budget, the council also approved $3,000 for a city newsletter and did not grant funding to the Human Relations Council, despite a last-ditch effort by the agency.

"I want to commend the staff and the council for their work on the budget," said Mayor Carroll Thomas during the council meeting.

"I want to emphasize that this does not include an increase in taxes."

Deputy City Manager Fred Poe said the reason the additional money is being taken from surplus is an overestimate of the city's share of property taxes and earned interest from other funds.

City officials had earlier projected $10,264,920 in ad valorem (property) taxes. That estimate was decreased to $9,967,925 in the budget approved Tuesday.

Also, Finance Director Troy Gifford earlier told the council some $1 million would be earned via interest from the surplus fund.

Poe said that figure is now being projected at $850,000.

In addition, $3,000 was added to the general fund budget for a monthly city newsletter.

Poe said the newsletter also was issued last year, but city officials overlooked budgeting it until now.

The newsletter is used as an informational tool for city employees, officials said.

Looking over her $25,000 winnings at Six Flags in 11-year-old Mendie Purdum of Longview.

Six Flags 'splurge' wins girl $25,000

The Bright Side

ARLINGTON (AP) — An 11-year-old Longview girl almost didn't make it to the Six Flags Over Texas amusement park because her father had just lost his job after the family had moved into a new house.

There was little money to spare, but Verna Purdum said that since her daughter Mendie had been looking forward to the trip all summer, she gave her $25 and told her to have fun.

When Mendie was handed a Six Flags 25th Anniversary Giveaway card Monday, she also had good luck. Of 700,000 cards distributed, hers revealed the $25,000 grand prize that she collected Tuesday.

"I couldn't believe it," Mendie said Tuesday. "It was kind of weird."

Mendie, her parents and two brothers were at the Arlington amusement park Tuesday for the presentation, where Bugs Bunny gave them a cart loaded with 25,000 $1 bills. A less unwieldy check was substituted later.

"We'll put some in the bank for her," said her father, Ray Purdum. "She said she wants a new car when she is old enough. And she's talking about going to school (college).

"But I was laid off from Cabell's Dairy on Aug. 14, and we can use the money to take care of a few bills," he added.

Cameroon fights fear of epidemic

SOUBOUM, Cameroon (AP) — Many of the more than 1,500 people killed when a deadly bubble of gas burst from Lake Nios now lie in shallow graves, but thousands of unburied, rotting animal carcasses fueled fears of a possible epidemic.

Lt. Gen. James Tataw, who is heading clean-up efforts in the isolated northwest area of this tropical African nation, said Tuesday he was worried rains could spread disease because there had been no time to bury the dead livestock.

He said bulldozers were en route to dispose of the carcasses, but added, "The cows have no relatives. Their burial will be the last. Priorities are for people."

Soldiers, working in stifling heat, shoveled the human casualties into shallow graves near where they had fallen.

"Some of them were in such a state that it was difficult to touch them," Tataw said.

Scientists speculated that steam laced with toxic gases wafted over a 10-square-mile area, burning and smothering victims, after a huge bubble of gas burst through the surface of Lake Nios at about 9 p.m. Thursday.

The lemon-shaped lake lies in a basin with steep rock walls on three sides. Viewed from a helicopter Tuesday, it had the reddish-brown color of clay churned up from the bottom.

No sign of life could be seen in a lakeside village of clay brick huts.

The lush green mountains and tropical forests appeared untouched.

Gideon Taka, one of the first government officials to reach the stricken area, said he found most of the victims lying dead in their front yards with their clothing ripped.

"They tore their dresses off because of the heat. They were mostly naked or half naked," he said in an interview. He said the eruption occurred when many people were eating dinner.

"I opened one of the rooms and saw there was food in the dishes," he said.

Soldiers arrive at the village of Souboum, Cameroon, Tuesday to search for victims of a cloud of toxic gas. Many breath through handkerchiefs to protect themselves from the smell of rotting animal carcasses.

Tataw took reporters to a two-room shack with a mound of freshly turned earth near the door and a single chicken strutting through the house.

"In this grave, I buried eight people yesterday," he said. "All the people, the goats, the pigs and the cows died. What surprises me is how that chicken survived."

Chai David Wambong, a farmer in his 30s, said he lost all feeling on one side of his body.

"I felt warm and as if I was drunk," he said. "The smell was like cooking with kitchen gas. Everyone started coughing and spitting up blood."

In Geneva, Switzerland, the United Nations Disaster Relief Organization on Tuesday reported 1,543 bodies had been counted and others were still being discovered.

Israeli army medical teams dispatched to the disaster scene to help in relief efforts said the fumes also killed more than 7,000 cattle.

In the village of Nios, a half-mile down the slope from the lake, officials said 1,000 people were killed. To their knowledge, only one woman and her child survived.

In Souboum, on the floor of the valley and about five miles from the lake, roughly 300 people died, while those living on higher ground survived, said Taka, chief of staff of Cameroon's ground forces.

"Most of the people who died were killed instantaneously," said Michael Wiener, a colonel in the Israeli Army medical corps who led the 17-member team that accompanied Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres on a state visit to Cameroon.

Interviewed in the provincial capital of Bamenda, Wiener said his team had not managed to reach the disaster area, 70 miles to the north.

But from talking with local authorities, he said the survivors "appeared to be minimally affected," suffering only burns or shock.

However, Wiener said another wave of casualties could emerge among people who breathed small amounts of toxic gas and who could develop pneumonia.

A Cameroon army transport plane ferried 16 tons of combat rations from the capital Yaounde to Bamenda Tuesday to distribute among refugees who were evacuated.

A chain of schoolchildren unloaded the plane and transferred the rations onto army trucks for the trip over a rough dirt road.

Around the world, nations began responding to the appeal Monday by President Paul Biya for international assistance to cope with the disaster.

France sent a medical team backed by scientists on Tuesday, while two American teams were expected today or Thursday, according to the U.S. Embassy. Yaounde Radio said the United States also "gave a large sum of money" toward relief efforts.

In London, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher pledged her country's help. Cameroon was formed in 1961 from territories once controlled by Britain and France.

In Washington, the Peace Corps said Tuesday it is confident that the 274 American volunteers and trainees in Cameroon were safe.

Alixe Glen, a spokewoman for the agency, said 100 trainees and most of the volunteers were at the Peace Corps training base at Bamenda.

Gadhafi appears at factory opening

BREGA, Libya (AP) — Cheered by Bedouin tribesmen on horseback, Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi appeared in public but made no speeches at the opening of a factory that will make pipes for a huge underground water project.

He cut the ribbon at dusk Tuesday as a crowd of several hundred people at the entrance to the plant deep in the Libyan desert shouted "Victory for Islam," and "May a storm destroy America."

Gadhafi said very little to the officials who guided him on a tour of the plant and nothing to to the public.

It was the first time Western journalists had seen the Libyan leader at a public gathering since the U.S. bombing raids on Tripoli and Benghazi April 15, which the Reagan administration said were intended to punish Libya for allegedly backing international terrorism.

Apparently for security reasons, there was no prior announcement whether Gadhafi would attend the plant opening. Western reporters were brought to the plant by Libyan officials, who had said Gadhafi might also come.

As diplomats and officials waited, Gadhafi arrived in a dusty Range Rover, accompanied by a 10-car convoy followed by about 300 Bedouin horsemen and other Libyans on horseback and on foot.

He was accompanied by Abdel Salam Jalloud, the No. 2 man in Libya who is thought by some to have been in day-to-day control of the country since the April bombing raids, which some observers speculated may have shaken Gadhafi's position.

Gadhafi, bareheaded and wearing a blue-striped, dark-gray jumpsuit and workboots, appeared fit. He did not appear to have any bags under his eyes as pictures taken since the bombing raid have shown.

The Libyan leader is not believed to have delivered any addresses in Tripoli or Benghazi since the U.S. attack, but made some public appearances last month during a two-week tour of southern Libya.

Gadhafi spent one hour touring the factory, located 160 miles from the eastern city of Benghazi. The plant was designed by Price Bros. of Dayton, Ohio, and built by the South Korean construction giant Dong-Ah.

Mohammed Mangoush, head of the people's committee local government organization overseeing the pipeline called the Great Manmade River Project, said Gadhafi thanked the South Koreans for seeing the project through, but "this wasn't an occasion for speechs."

The Libyan leader shook hands with the Dong-Ah delegation, jumped into the Range Rover and sped away flanked by motorcycle escorts armed with Kalashnikov rifles.

No one seemed to know where he was heading. Plant officials said they were disappointed by the crowd's chaotic behavior at Gadhafi's appearance.

The ambitious project, launched two years ago, calls for twin pipelines to carry 2 million cubic meters of water daily from an underground reservoir in southern Libya to irrigate parched lands around the Gulf of Sidra.

Plant officials said the departure of 300 American workers from Brega earlier this year when the U.S. government ordered American companies to stop doing business in Libya had not delayed the project.

"We're only a few weeks behind schedule on starting up the plant. The U.S. withdrawal didn't cause any real problems," said Osman Jaouda, the plant manager.

Next month, engineers will begin drilling 270 artesian wells in the desert to tap a huge aquifer discovered 15 years ago.

"By the early 1990s Libya will be self-sufficient in wheat, vegetables and fruit and their will be thousands of sheep and cattle on new farms," Mangoush said.

Despite a staggering drop in oil revenues, Gadhafi has pushed ahead with the irrigation scheme, which he promises will transform Libya, 95 percent desert, into a "Garden of Eden."

Libyan oil exports will earn less than $5 billion this year down from $22 billion in 1981.

Officials at Brega said Libya has kept up payments to the South Korean contractors despite its financial problems. They declined to go into detail.

Carrier denied port call, sent to patrol Mediterranean

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States, adding muscle to a recent warning to Libya's Col. Moammar Gadhafi, is canceling a port call for the aircraft carrier Forrestal and ordering it to patrol the Mediterranean north of Libya, administration sources say.

The carrier will bypass a port call in Haifa, Israel, that had been scheduled to start today after the ship finished a series of exercises with Egypt, the sources said Tuesday.

The decision by the Pentagon came after President Reagan's chief spokesman, Larry Speakes, and other administration officials warned Gadhafi on Monday against launching new terrorist attacks against Americans.

"We have reason to believe that the Libyan state headed by Colonel Gadhafi has not forsaken the desire to create terrorist activities worldwide, and the capability is still there to do so," Speakes said in California, where he is with the vacationing president.

"The United States is prepared to take whatever action is necessary to prevent terrorist activity and could continue to do so," Speakes said.

Last April 15, U.S. warplanes flying from carriers in the Mediterranean and American bases in Great Britain bombed suspected terrorist facilities inside Libya.

While the Pentagon has not been told to specifically prepare for a new attack, the sources said, the administration wants to make sure Gadhafi gets the message that the United States is willing to use military action in retaliation for terrorist attacks.

One source, who like the others spoke only on condition of anonymity, said, "You could say this amounts to a bit of saber rattling. We're sending a signal that we're ready and we could be right back in there (Libya) real quickly.

"You could also say we're playing some head games," the source continued. "There have been suggestions that Gadhafi's government might be vulnerable internally. We're working to scare his people too."

Lewis said he "strongly disagreed" with Parker's assessment. "I assure you we're not being hypocritcal about anything," he said. "We're trying to get out of here by addressing the shortfalls in revenues for this current biennium and that's our goal."

Parker said "a panel of knowledgeable people would laugh" at the House's argument that a tax increase must wait until the regular session begins in January, when lawmakers will have a firmer grasp on the severity of the budget crisis.

"What it amounts to is a sick person telling the doctor: 'I will not take any medicine now, I don't know how much I'm going to need, I don't know how sick I'm gonna' get, wait 'till I get well and get to feelin' better, then give me some medicine,'" he said. "It is a bitter pill."

The House plan, known as the Band Aid, would cut enough state spending now to keep the state solvent until next year. "Nobody has ever seen a Band Aid that will stop a hemorrhage," Parker said. "And that's what they're trying to sell to the people, that we have placed a Band Aid that will get us by the political pain of voting (on higher taxes) before we face the voters in November."

Lewis said a Band Aid, "properly applied," will do the trick.

The 1986-87 budget includes cuts of more than $1 million in payroll costs and fringe benefits to compensate for an average 4 percent increase in teacher salaries.

Capital outlay expenditures also are down $388,242 and MISD will spend $55,521 less on supplies and materials in 1986-87 despite an anticipated –increase in student enrollment.

Officials said the actual amount of funds MISD coffers this year will not be known until state legilators meeting in special session decide how state speding will be appropriated.

In other business, trustees voted 5-1 to crack down on athletes, band students and other extracurricular participats who use drugs, alcohol and tobacco.

Trustees approved on first reading the policy forbidding the use or possession of tobacco products, alcohol and/or mood altering drugs by extra-curricular participants on and off campus.

Trustee Joe Golding voted against the policy.

The policy — part of the MISD's stance against chemical abuse by students — defines the period of participation at the "time between the first and last practice, game or meeting of the activity" and includes out-of-school as well as in-school hours.

Students caught under the influence or in possession of drugs or alcohol will be suspended from extracurricular activities for two weeks on the first offense.

A second violation would result in the student's loss of extracurricular privileges for the remainder of the school year.

If after the second violation the student and family successfully complete an approved chemical dependency program for a minimum of six weeks, the student may be reinstated in MISD activities.

Students caught using or posessing tobacco products off campus would be required to serve a three-hour work detail on the first offense.

A second violation would result in the student being suspended from extracurricular activities for five days. On the third offense, a student would be suspended from all activites for the remainder of the season or term of office.

Officials said the penalties are in addition to those imposed by MISD's general chemical abuse policy.

He focused the request, which was for $25,000, around a proposed volunteer center.

Several council members said they did not think the center would work, and no funding was given to the agency.

WORLD in brief

Cancers may kill 25,000

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Up to 25,000 people in the western Soviet Union may die of cancers caused by the Chernobyl nuclear disaster during the next 70 years, a top official of the International Atomic Energy Agency said.

Morris Rosen, the agency's director of nuclear safety, gave the estimate at a Tuesday news briefing, but stressed that it was a theoretical figure based on Soviet calculations disclosed in private meetings.

The actual number of cancer deaths linked to the April 26 reactor accident at the Ukrainian power station could be much lower, he said.

About 500 nuclear power experts from 50 countries, including the Soviet Union, are meeting in Vienna under the auspices of the atomic energy agency to draw conclusions from the Chernobyl accident, the worst in the history of nuclear power.

The disaster killed 31 people and sent an invisible cloud of radioactivity around the world.

Jalisco officers charged

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Attorney General's office has charged 11 Jalisco state policemen with injuring an American narcotics agent while he was in police custody.

A statement from the attorney's office said charges of abuse of authority and inflicting injury on Victor Cortez Jr., 34, on Tuesday were filed in 1st district criminal court in Guadalajara, 360 miles northwest of Mexico City. But it made no mention of claims by U.S. officials that the Drug Enforcement Administration agent was tortured while he was in police hands Aug. 13.

The policemen acknowledge detaining Cortez, "but do not recognize having inflicted bad treatment on those detained," the statement said.

Quake proved designs

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — When a major earthquake that measured at 8.1 on the Richter scale rumbled beneath Mexico City last summer, it destroyed 210 buildings and claimed an estimated 20,000 lives.

Despite the death toll and the estimated $4 billion damage from the Sept. 19 quake, scientists and engineers attending the U.S. National Conference on Earthquake Engineering said Tuesday it proved the value of recent advances in seismic design.

Most of the buildings which failed in Mexico City were constructed before the city instituted tougher seismic standards in the mid 1970s, said Mete Sozen, of the Civil Engineering Department at the University of Illinois-Urbana.

The structures most vulnerable to the quake's shaking were buildings between five and 18 stories high. But only about 20 percent of the earthquake damage was sustained by buildings constructed under the 1976 code, he said.

Despite U.S. opposition, Nicaragua seeks non-aligned role

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Nicaragua, whose dispute with the United States is expected to be a key issue at the non-aligned summit in Zimbabwe, hopes to become the movement's next leader despite alleged opposition from the Reagan administration.

The role as leader of the 101-nation group could give the leftist Sandinista government increased international visibility and a forum for condemning U.S. aid to the Contra rebels fighting here for the last four years.

Deputy Foreign Minister Victor Hugo Tinoco has said Nicaragua "has the best chances" to become the non-aligned movement's next leader, and as a result play host to the group's 1989 summit.

Tinoco is now in Harare, Zimbabwe, site of the current summit, which opens Monday. The week-long encounter is held every three years.

In comments published Tuesday by the official Sandinista newspaper Barricada, Tinoco said there is no opposition to Nicaragua for the presidency despite what he called pressure by U.S. "agents...to orchestrate a campaign against the Sandinista revolution."

Only two other nations, Indonesia and Peru, have been mentioned as possible successors to Zimbabwe.

At a news conference Tuesday in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, his first stop on an extended foreign tour, he accused the United States of trying to block Nicaraguan efforts to lead the non-aligned movement.

"Evidently, this candidacy does not count with the support for the United States, which is exerting pressure on Latin America to obstruct the plans of Nicaragua," he said, adding that Nicaragua wants to host the 1989 summit because it "considers important strengthening the principles, the global unity of the non-aligned countries and the defense of Latin American and Central American countries."

A draft declaration being debated by officials in closed sessions in Harare expresses "outrage" over the $100 million in U.S. aid approved by both houses of Congress for the Contras.

Chinese air force doctors, background, check in on Xie Xiaoli after an operation to revive her from unconsciousness. Xiaoli, now 12, was injured about 11 years ago.

After decade, 12-year-old girl revived by surgery

SHIJIAZHUANG, CHINA (AP) — A 12-year-old girl, unconscious for more than a decade after doctors misdiagnosed her in infancy, has been revived after brain surgery, her doctors say.

Xie Xiaoli's condition has improved since brain surgery July 21. She smiled for the first time a few days ago, but doctors say they do not yet know if she will ever speak or if she can see.

During a visit this week to her room at the People's Liberation Army Air Force Hospital in Shijiazhuang, 170 miles southwest of Peking, Xiaoli appeared weak. But her bright eyes moved around the room, she responded to music, yawned and smiled.

"They have given her a second life," her mother, Yang Xuqing, 38, said of the doctors.

"Since the operation, her condition has steadily changed for the better," said surgeon Zhang Yunzheng. "It's hard to know how much the body function will improve. She will certainly make some progress. We're hopeful."

Xiaoli's problems began 11 years ago when she fell from a bed and landed on her head, said her father, Xie Jingchen, a 39-year-old Shijiazhuang policeman.

A lump on her scalp soon went away, but she began to fall down, have spasms and run a temperature. After several months, she was largely unconscious: her eyes were crossed and motionless, her limbs were drawn tightly to her body, her teeth were clenched.

Recent official press reports saying Xiaoli had been in a coma were incorrect, surgeon Tian Li said, because she could open her eyes, cry, and swallow. However, those functions were unconscious, he said, adding she had been motionless and apparently blind and deaf.

Xiaoli's parents recalled her fall, but they dismissed its importance when doctors diagnosed her condition as epilepsy and said they could only prescribe medication.

The couple took Xiaoli to hospitals in Shanghai, Peking and other cities in search of help. Some hospitals refused to admit Xiaoli, her mother said.

The couple finally contacted the army hospital.Doctors there initially concurred with the previous diagnosis, but then they ordered a CAT scan.

It showed Xiaoli had bled internally from the fall and that the blood had hardened, creating a mass that was pressing on her brain.

Gurkhas' cry for statehood echoes through Himalayas

By SEEMA SIROHI

DARJEELING, India (AP) — The legendary eternal peace of the mighty Himalayas is shattered these days by a cry for statehood for the Gurkhas, whose warriors are famed for bravery in the British and Indian armies.

Thousands of Gurkhas, Indian citizens of Nepali descent, are brandishing traditional kukri knives and swearing by Lord Shiva, the Hindu god of destruction, to fight unto death to create Gurkhaland, India's 24th state.

The Gurkhas live mainly around Darjeeling, known worldwide for its tea, in a bulge in the northern part of West Bengal at the head of what is called the "chicken neck" corridor from the main part of the state in the south.

West Bengal's state government in Calcutta is controlled by the Communist Party.

An underground Gurkha movement, said by officials to be gaining substantial support, is vowing to take up arms for Gurkha statehood in this West Bengal area surrounded in the west, north and northeast by the Himalayan nations of Nepal, Sikkim and Bhutan.

The kukri knife, it is said, once taken from its sheath must draw blood or its wielder must spill his own in battle.

Since May, 25 people have been killed and about 50 injured during Gurkhaland demonstrations and other incidents.

"The fire in us will not be doused. We will either be finished or achieve Gurkhaland," maintains Subash Ghising, underground president of the Gurkha National Liberation Front (GNLF). "We will unsheath our kukris and behead all paramilitary troops," he told a rally of several thousand people in July. That was before police tried to arrest him on 17 charges, including inciting to riot.

Ghising, 50, is a former Indian army corporal, schoolteacher, bantamweight boxer and author of 18 racy, Nepali-language potboilers, one of which is titled "The Blue Blouse."

He also writes poetry, delves in philosophy, believes in astrology and says he and his trained ex-army fighters will wage guerrilla war if necessary.

He claims 40,000 retired Gurkha soldiers in Darjeeling support the cause. West Bengal state officials maintain that the Gurkha movement is seditious and potentially terrorist but they acknowledge that it is attracting wide support.

The Indian army has been called out in economically depressed Darjeeling, which in addition to tea is dependent on tourism and rapidly diminishing timber.

Darjeeling tea, considered the world's finest, is withering on bushes as Gurkha pickers respond to strike calls. This year's harvest is down by 10 percent.

Foreign tourists have fled this hill station of the former British Raj and many have been evacuated. Indian Troops patrol the picture postcard resort, an ancient stop on the India-Tibet trade route.

Quaint houses are covered with Gurkhaland slogans — among them, "Hill people have only one demand, Gurkhaland, Gurkhaland" — and death threats to opponents. Green-colored flags with kukri knife emblems flutter from rooftops in the Darjeeling area, which has a population of about 900,000 and is about the size of Delaware.

Some officials worry that statehood could eventually lead to demands for an independent Gurkha nation, adding one more threat to India's fragile unity.

India already is torn by demands by Sikhs in Punjab state for a nation called Khalistan and by anti-government protests by pro-Pakistani Moslems in Kashmir. In the nation's northeast, where more than one-fifth of the Indian army is deployed, the government struggles with tribal insurgencies and guerrilla warfares in several states. Religious, linguistic and ethnic disputes are erupting nationwide.

But Gurkhaland's strategic frontier location and the key role of Gurkhas in the Indian army make this problem especially sensitive.

Gurkhas have a reputation as being the most implacable and ferocious fighters of the Indian army which has more than 9,000 Gurkhas in elite combat regiments and more in other units.

The British first recruited Gurkhas in 1815 and sent them to fight the Japanese in Burma in World War II. More recently, the British used some Gurkhas in the 1982 Falklands War against Argentina.

Gurkhas were in the vanguard of the Indian army's assault to oust holdout Sikh fighters from the Golden Temple, the Sikh holy place, in Amritsar in June, 1984, an act that still has repercussions today in Punjab.

In July, Gurkhas were deployed by the Indian army in New Delhi to stop Hindu attacks on Sikhs and ugly sectarian riots. In an ironic twist, Sikh soldiers, also renowned for valor, are patrolling Darjeeling to keep the Gurkhas down.

The Gurkha activists say they want a state where 1.4 million Gurkhas can assert their identity, Nepali culture and earn a living.

They demand more government jobs for Gurkhas, better education and more industry and work in their region.

Gurkhas, who started settling in India around 1850, complain they are equated with poor Nepali transients and laborers who freely cross the border and have reciprocal rights of property ownership and trade.

They demand scrapping part of the India-Nepal treaty of 1950 which provides equal treatment for Indian and Nepali citizens.

Gurkhas claim that the status of 6 million Nepali settlers throughout India is precarious. They cite an anti-Nepali agitation this past spring in northeast Meghalaya state where 4,000 immigrants were deported to Nepal.

Reagan plans day of seclusion, private meetings with friends

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan, looking tanned and fit after a 10-day stay at his mountain-top ranch, is planning a day of seclusion and private meetings with friends in his old home town.

The president and his wife Nancy traveled Tuesday by helicopter from their ranch high in the Santa Ynez Mountains near Santa Barbara to Los Angeles, 90 miles to the south.

The couple had no public events on their agenda during their three-day stay in Los Angeles and were scheduled to attend private dinners today and Thursday with old friends.

During the first night of their visit, the Reagans remained in their $3,000-per night penthouse suite at the Century Plaza Hotel.

The hotel is located on the former back lot of Twentieth Century Fox. Reagan, a former Hollywood actor, is able to look out the windows of his 30th-floor room and see the Santa Monica Mountains to the north of the city, where he once owned property.

The president, wearing a blue and white checkered Western-style sports shirt, casual trousers and a Western belt, waved and smiled at reporters who viewed his arrival at Santa Monica Airport.

Reagan did not respond when reporters shouted questions about Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi, as well as the new ducks, rabbits and cats that have found a home at his 688-acre ranch.

White House officials warned Monday that Gadhafi might be preparing a new round of terrorist acts, and Tuesday it was announced that the U.S. aircraft carrier Forrestal would cancel a port call in Israel and begin patrolling in the Mediterranean north of Libya.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the president customarily takes care of private business while in his hotel, seeing lawyers, accountants and friends. The president also usually sees his allergist or ear doctor while in Los Angeles, but Speakes said he did not know of plans for such visits.

On Thursday, Reagan was to attend a private reception in the hotel for supporters of the Reagan presidential library.

The president and his wife are to return to the ranch on Friday for the Labor Day weekend.

They are scheduled to stay at the ranch until Sept. 7, when they return to Los Angeles to attend a political rally. After another campaign stop in Denver, the couple returns to Washington on Sept. 8.

Man could get 54 years for drug tampering

By IKE FLORES

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A guilty plea to the nation's first drug-tampering charges could mean 54 years in prison and a $2.25 million fine for a man who poisoned capsules in a scheme to make a fortune in the stock market.

Edward Arlen Marks, 24, pleaded guilty Tuesday to nine counts of a 27-count indictment charging him with spiking Contac, Teldrin and Dietac capsules with a blood thinner found in rat poison.

The cold, allergy and diet medicines were taken off store shelves in Orlando and Houston last March after a nationwide check of more than 35,000 capsules.

Prosecutors said Marks held options on the stock of the manufacturer, SmithKline Beckman Corp., of Philadelphia, which issued a recall costing $8 million. Marks' options would have allowed him to make a six-figure profit if shares had dropped in value, prosecutors said.

Marks, a former stock brokerage employee from Temple City, Calif., told U.S. District Judge Patricia Fawsett he didn't intend to hurt people.

Marks pleaded guilty to three counts of tampering, three of wire fraud and three of communicating false information.

In return, the government agreed to drop the remaining charges and promised not to prosecute Marks in any other jurisdiction, court officials said.

There was no agreement on a sentence, which U.S. Attorney Robert W. Merkle said could amount to 54 years imprisonment and a $2.25 million fine.

Fawsett, who will announce the sentence Oct. 10, reserved judgment on the plea bargain until a presentence investigation is completed.

"It could be a substantial penalty, but the important thing is that he told the judge he didn't want anybody to be hurt," said defense attorney Jay Stevens.

Marks was accused of calling law enforcement agencies and news media around the country claiming he had placed cyanide in the capsules.

A nationwide check of more than 35,000 capsules showed traces of warfarin in six pills from Orlando stores and three from Houston, the FBI said. The amount of warfarin was enough to sicken but not kill a person.

Marks, who worked briefly last year as a trainee at the Merrill Lynch stock brokerage office in San Marino, Calif., was arrested May 29 in Los Angeles.

A federal grand jury in Orlando in June indicted him on 12 counts of tampering with a consumer product, 10 of wire fraud and five of communicating false information to police and news agencies.

Marks, who faced up to 153 years in prison if convicted on the 27 counts, had been scheduled for trial next week. He remains jailed in Seminole County.

According to court documents, one of Marks' fingerprints was found on one poisoned capsule, tapes of the telephone caller were identified as his voice by former co-workers and records showed Marks bought the stock options about the time the calls started.

The person who placed cyanide in Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules in the Chicago area has not been found. Seven people died in 1982 after consuming the capsules. A man was convicted and imprisoned for trying to extort $1 million from manufacturer Johnson & Johnson in that case.

Last February, a New York woman died of cyanide poisoning after taking Extra-Strength Tylenol. The case remains unsolved.

In Austin, Texas, bottles of Anacin-3 capsules were pulled off drugstore shelves in May after a college senior died of cyanide poisoning linked to a bottle of Anacin-3.

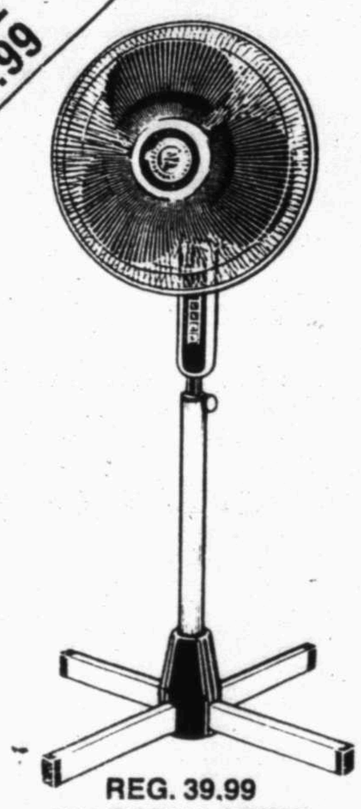

In Auburn, Wash., two people died in June of cyanide poisoning after taking Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules. Bristol-Meyers recalled the product.

Nation's working poor among most significant beneficiaries of tax bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's working poor, increasingly battered by the federal tax system in recent years, are among the most significant but least heralded beneficiaries of the new tax overhaul bill.

The impact on the working poor is so dramatic and far reaching that liberals and conservatives say it is among the tax bill's most significant but least remarked upon aspects.

Tax experts say about 6 million people will be dropped from the tax rolls entirely under the tax rewrite, which awaits congressional approval. They no longer will be obliged to pay taxes because of increases in the standard deduction, the personal exemption and the earned income tax credit.

"It's probably the most important anti-poverty bill of the last 15 years," said Doug Besharov of the American Enterprise Institute, a conservative-oriented think tank. "It lifts hundreds of thousands of people above the technical poverty line....

"(President) Reagan has not gotten a heck of a lot of credit on this one," Besharov said, "but it's a major giveback to the working poor, and it's 100 percent consistent with his philosophy.

"It's just sort of been buried in with all this stuff on capital gains and IRAs and all," he said.

That opinion is shared, without quite the sweeping enthusiasm, by Mary Bourdette of the liberal-oriented Children's Defense Fund, who said the bill was "certainly an extremely important piece of legislation" in the fight against poverty.

But its benefits fall to the working poor, she noted, not to people who are out of work. And the money does not replace federal benefits that have been reduced or abolished by the Reagan administration, she said.

Still, the bill addresses one of the more aggravating aspects of tax policy of recent years — the growing burden on the poor as inflation brought poverty-level income into taxable brackets and tax burdens at all levels increased.

According to the Joint Committee on Taxation, a family of four in 1975 was considered poor if its income was $5,500 or less.

In 1979, a two-parent family of four with poverty-level income of $7,412 paid federal tax of $134, including income and Social Security. Still, that worked out to only 1.8 percent of income, according to calculations by the Children's Defense Fund.

But the same family with 1986 poverty-level income of $11,500 will pay $1,221 in taxes — or about 10.6 percent of income.

If current law wasn't changed along the lines proposed by the pending bill, the poverty-level family of four in 1988 would be making about $12,351 and would owe income and Social Security taxes of $1,341.

Under the proposed tax rewrite, however, the same family will get an income tax refund sufficient to erase its income tax obligation and offset much of its Social Security tax. Its total federal tax burden would be about $310.

The tax bill accomplishes the changes through three mechanisms:

— The personal exemption now is $1,080 per person. But under the bill that will rise to $1,900 next year, to $1,950 in 1988 and to $2,000 in 1989. Thus, a family of four that would have exemptions totaling $4,320 under current law would have exemptions totaling $8,000 under the new one.

— The standard deduction, used by those who do not itemize, also rises. It now is $3,670 for a couple filing jointly. It will rise to $5,000 in 1988 and will be adjusted afterwards for inflation.

— The earned income tax credit is the mechanism in the tax code that gets money back to the working poor. It is a direct tax credit for poor people who work. If the credit exceeds their tax, they get it as a cash refund.

It was first enacted in 1975 to provide some relief from Social Security taxes for the working poor; at the time, most were below income tax levels.

The earned income credit rises gradually, peaks at a maximum benefit of $550 for people with incomes between $5,000 and $6,500, then declines gradually to zero at an income of $11,000 — below today's poverty level.

Under the tax overhaul bill, however, the $550 maximum benefit will rise to $800. And the $11,000 top cutoff rises to $17,000.

Ms. Bourdette said the changes mean that about 10.2 million families will qualify for the credit in 1988, compared with the estimated 5.2 million that would have qualified under the old law.

Ruling: Anti-abortion center must advertise it provides alternative

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An anti-abortion center that attracts customers by offering free pregnancy tests must specify in advertisements that it provides an alternative to abortion, a judge has ruled.

Superior Court Judge Lucy Kelly McCabe also ordered Tuesday that a free pregnancy center stop sending out misleading letters to pregnant teen-agers and their parents, and to stop implying or stating it provides abortions.

The injunction is to remain in effect until lawsuits against the center can be heard. No trial date has been set.

The Committee to Defend Reproductive Rights, the district attorney's fraud unit and customer Carla Abbotts filed two suits against the center, the Lourdes Foundation and the St. Louis-based Pearson Foundation. The foundations provided materials and training for the center.

McCabe dropped the Pearson Foundation as a defendant, ruling that it had no control over the center.

"I think what happened today is basically a victory," said attorney Ann Menasche, who represented the Committee to Defend Reproductive Rights. "I also think that when we come to trial, we will get a much more far-reaching order."

Menasche said the center advertised free pregnancy tests, which were used to lure pregnant women, who were bombarded with anti-abortion material while they awaited their test results. She said the center also tried to arrange private, unlicensed adoptions.

Attorneys for the center said the anti-abortion materials were medically accurate and that the center does encourage adoptions.

Singling out anti-abortion groups for such "corrective" advertising is like "a yellow star stuck on the Jews" by the Nazis during World War II, an attorney for the center, Daniel J. Grimm, said.

"We should not be put under special orders to brand our advertising," said Michael Imfeld, another attorney for the center. "Once you start labeling a controversial side...that doesn't lead to good things."

Discouraging poll

A new Newsweek magazine poll really lays it on the line as to what Americans expect from the tax bill just approved by a House-Senate conference committee.

And in so doing, the poll reflects a major problem confronting government.

Of those questioned, 29% said they believe their taxes will stay the same under the highly-touted tax reform President Reagan called for. Thirty-six percent said they believe they will pay more in taxes and only 25% of the people questioned said they believe their taxes will be lower. Ten percent offered no opinion.

In fact, if there was a positive note in the poll results at all it was that 33% of the people polled believe the new distribution of the tax load will be more fair while another 30% believe it will not be much different.

Those results denote a resounding lack of confidence in the determination of public officials in Washington to bring down taxes. Heck, the results even smack of a lack of desire to bring down taxes and anyone even vaguely familiar with the method of operation in the nation's capital knows that it's much easier for politicians to find a way to spend more tax money — thus increasing taxes — than to cut taxes.

It's that lack of confidence in the integrity of politicians to strive for financially prudent government that threatens the very roots of the republic. The reason is simple. If the American people do not have that degree of trust in their elected officials, they'll grow increasingly disenchanted with the government and, as a result, the government will be robbed of the talents of many who might otherwise have been willing to serve in elective office.

That's a problem of major proportions, but as the results of the Newsweek poll indicate, the symptoms are widespread.

President Reagan has talked for years about getting government off the backs of the American people. He's found a wide following in the electorate. But only the members of Congress can bring back the confidence of the American people in our system of government to be fair and financially responsible.

Another View: Caution best course

Historians may record the Soviet Union's bid for participation in GATT, the free world's major forum for trade negotiation, as one of the major events of the late 20th century. But that is a long shot. Realistically, members of the 92-nation General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade are justified in reacting with caution and skepticism.

GATT was created in 1948 to promote higher living standards and world economic growth through the orderly liberalization of world trade, with emphasis on dismantling tariffs and quotas. The going has been rough, but on balance the agreement has been successful.

The eighth round of GATT negotiations will get under way next month in Punta del Este, Uruguay. The focal point of the talks, which may last four or five years, will be the U.S. demand for fair-play rules governing trade in such services as banking, insurance, shipping and telecommunications.

The Soviets have been testing the waters for three years. Last week Moscow went public. The Soviet Union said that it wanted to participate in next month's GATT meeting as a first step toward membership. The United States and other Western governments are understandably dubious.

The whole idea of GATT is to promote multilateral liberalization of trade. But tariffs and conventional quotas are not the problem in conducting trade with the Soviet Union, which pursues the ultimate in protectionist policies.

In essence, the Soviets maintain a zero-access quota on imports of everything; all purchases abroad result from authorized exceptions. Under the system of central planning, no Soviet enterprise can buy so much as a paper clip from the West unless the purchase falls within the framework of transactions approved by the authorities.

Thanks to a bending of GATT rules, several communist countries already are members of the organization. Because of its greater size and potential effect on the world trading system, the Soviet Union would be more difficult to accommodate in the absence of fundamental changes in the way it does business.

According to GATT officials contacted by the Soviets, Moscow says that its interest in GATT membership is prompted by "prospective changes in Soviet foreign-trade mechanisms" and a desire to broaden trade between the Soviet Union and GATT members.

There are also hints that the Soviet initiative toward the trade negotiating organization may be tied to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's widely advertised interest in reform of the rigid, tightly controlled Soviet economy. If the Soviet bid to join GATT is a signal that the Soviet Union wants to join the real world, it is an initiative of historic potential importance — one that should be welcomed by the outside world.

But while the idea of ultimate Soviet membership should not be foreclosed, the cautious reaction of the United States and other Western governments is appropriate. There is concern that Soviet membership would politicize GATT, as other U.N. agencies have been politicized, by bringing in a destructive element of East-West confrontation that so far has been missing.

It is really up to Moscow to demonstrate first that changes in "Soviet foreign-trade mechanisms" are real, not just prospective. Until that happens, anything going beyond a passive Soviet role in GATT would be inappropriate.

Haiti's new leader 'driven by duty'

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — On a small, dusty farm beside a gravel road on the outskirts of the city, I discovered the rarest of all political animals: a leader who doesn't want to lead, a ruler without political ambition, a military strongman who wants to hand his power over to civilians.

Jack Anderson

State Department officials told me about this unique person; they said Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy didn't seek political power, doesn't want it and assumed it only out of a sense of duty. Our outgoing ambassador to Haiti, Clayton McManaway, confirmed that the chairman of Haiti's military junta is driven by duty, not ambition. Without exception, people who know Namphy describe him as a patriot of uncommon integrity, who is as honest as he is blunt.

Still, I didn't believe them until I met Namphy for myself. I found him still living on the modest farm he owned before he took over the Haitian government. He declined to move into the presidential palace; the opulence of its former occupant, ousted dictator Jean-Claude "Baby Doc" Duvalier, disgusted him. "I was aware of Duvalier's excesses," Namphy told me, "but it was much worse than I had imagined."

Face to face, the military strongman is disarming. Of medium physical proportions and stocky build, he seems through some knack of carriage to be larger and more powerful than he is. He has an arresting face, with pleasant, amiable lines yet an intimation of ruggedness. His whole personality lights up every time he smiles. He displays an athletic conditioning, yet he talks enthusiastically about books and asked knowledgeable questions about my own latest book.

I spent an evening with Namphy, three informal hours, while his small daughter tugged at him, struggled into his lap, hugged his neck and begged for snacks.

I questioned him 10 different ways about his political ambitions. The answer was always the same; he had none. At last he became exasperated with the subject. "I am a military man, and I have no interest in civilian office," he said in his native French, speaking through an interpreter. "But even if I were a civilian and burned with political ambition, I would not want to be president of Haiti." The nation's problems, he explained, are too overwhelming.

He spoke gravely about Haiti's terrible misery. The treasury has been drained; the economy is close to collapse; the land has been sapped; the population is impoverished. He has made repeated trips into the hinterlands to visit with the people and find out for himself what their needs are. Once he drove a pickup truck, unaccompanied by aides, bodyguards and presidential trappings. He asked questions, without revealing his identity, until someone recognized him.

Clearly, Namphy is tormented by what he learned. As he talked about the needs of the people, he broke into English. "These are good people," he said. Then he turned to me, his eyes moist. "Yes," he repeated, "they are good people." Associates told me he anguishes over the plight of the people. Said Foreign Minister Jean-Baptist Hilaire: "I know this man. I know how he has suffered."

The United States seems preoccupied, Namphy said, with elections. "Washington is in a hurry for us to become a democracy," he said. "The people don't want democracy. They want jobs."

He is eager, nevertheless, to turn the country over to civilian rule, but he is worried about the presidential candidates. Some are demagogues who might become dictators if they gain power; others are crooks who want to strip the treasury of what little is left, Namphy fears. He said most Haitians are naive, trusting people who can be fooled by a demagogue.

He has scheduled presidential elections in 1987. During the interim, he hopes to educate the people by introducing democracy at the local level. But he is willing to rush the process and hold earlier elections — if the United States will take responsibility for the consequences.

I never thought I would ever advocate keeping a military junta in power. But in my opinion, the longer Namphy can be persuaded to remain at the Haitian helm, the better off Haiti will be and the more likely he will be succeeded by a true democracy.

CASTRO CONNECTION: Across the waters in neighboring Cuba, Fidel Castro is watching Haiti with a hungry eye. Intelligence sources say he hopes to exploit Haiti's deepening poverty. Haitian revolutionaries have been trained in Cuba to sabotage the economy, hasten Haiti's economic collapse and form a communist state out of the wreckage.

• • •

BABY DOC'S LEGACY: Before ex-dictator Jean-Claude "Baby Doc" Duvalier fled Haiti a few steps ahead of an angry mob, he turned over the government's bank account to his successor, Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy. According to one report, there was less than $2 million left in the national treasury. After the bookkeeping was straightened out, a source said, Namphy had only $500,000 to run the government. Duvalier and his cronies absconded with billions. Namphy has retained lawyers and accountants to figure out exactly how much, to trace where it has gone and to try to get it back.

TOM WICKER

How about an alternative to 'Meese test'?

NEW YORK — The Department of Justice is pushing the White House to order narcotics testing for more than half of all the government's civilian employees — about 1.5 million people, most of them innocent of any connection with illicit drugs.

Tom Wicker

This is the most grandiose manifestation of the current drug hysteria, a condition brought on partly by the recent discovery that a cheap form of cocaine called crack is in wide use, partly by an epidemic of high-pitched press reports on this and other drug matters, and not least by politics.

Police in New York the other day raided more than 200 stores and confiscated — under an obscure public health law — about 39,000 pipes of the kind often used for smoking crack.

"These things usually happen around election time," a store owner remarked, with an eye to New York's Sept. 9 primary.

Yes, and so do predictable events like Gov. Mario M. Cuomo's call for harsher penalties, up to life imprisonment, for crack dealers. Nelson Rockefeller! Wouldst thou wert alive to see that the more things change, the more they stay the same.

On Capitol Hill, House Democrats are readying their own anti-drug program, to be passed before the November elections. Downtown, President Reagan has submitted to a urine analysis; the betting is that he tested negatively for crack-smoking.

Now Attorney General Edwin Meese is pushing his proposal for testing all government workers who have access to classified material. If nothing else, this lends new support to those who have argued for years, with no more effect than a leaf falling on the White House lawn, that too many people are authorized both to classify documents and to have access to the material so stamped. What kind of secrets are those that 1.5 million people can share?

But that's another story. Meese's proposition — about which the White House appears properly cautious — would be too controversial, too costly, too ineffective, too unfair and too likely to cost government employees who may need help — of which not enough is available even now — their jobs.

Clearly, such a widespread dragnet check on the innocent and the guilty alike would raise a storm of protests, and properly so, from those to be tested and from those declining numbers of Americans who still think civil liberties are worth maintaining.

As for costs, an enlightening article in The New York Times by Toby Cohen, formerly a project director for the New York State Assembly's Medical Practice Task Force, estimated that urine tests for drugs cost "from $15 to $250 apiece, depending on the accuracy demanded." That range alone suggests how misleading and ineffective such testing can be; would you rather lose your job because of a $15 or a $250 test? Which is your employer, including Uncle Sam, most likely to provide?

But assuming a midrange price for the Meese Test of $120 per paper cup, simple arithmetic provides a one-time cost of $180 million. Impose the Meese Test on 1.5 million government employees three times a year — surely not too often to keep the bureaucracy clean — and we are up to $540 million the first year, and not getting top-of-the-line tests at that.

Random sampling? That's not the Meese way; and besides, as Cohen pointed out, if you tested fewer people per round, you'd have to have more rounds, and might save very little money.

Drug tests, on the one hand, are not always accurate or effective. But anyone who refused to be tested, or even argued against it, would come under suspicion of having something to hide. Anyone who tested positively, even though he or she might never have ingested anything stronger than aspirin, would have a hard time proving innocence — which Americans aren't supposed to have to do anyway.

On the other hand, drug tests can be evaded or foiled — which is why each provision of a sample would have to be closely observed and verified, raising a further invasion-of-privacy question. For whatever deterrent effect the Meese Tests might have, these costs, and not just those payable in dollars, seem far too high.

Besides, 85 percent of the federal anti-drug budget now goes to law enforcement, which is up by 70 percent while spending for prevention and rehabilitation has dropped by 5 percent in the Reagan years. Isn't it about time some real federal money — at least as much as the Meese Tests would cost — was invested in research on why so many Americans want to use illicit drugs, and on educating them about the consequences?

Island crowd typically 'weights' for summer!

A very interesting thing happened on Martha's Vineyard this summer. Scientists discovered that although the natives lived exclusively on broiled lobsters, grilled steaks, French bread, scalloped potatoes, fresh pasta, homemade pies, and double-dip ice-cream cones, they still gained weight.

Art Buchwald

Even when they went off the diets and ate fried chicken, hamburgers, corn-on-the-cob, doughnuts and an assortment of cheesecakes, they kept putting on extra pounds. So alarmed was Washington that they sent inspectors from the National Bureau of Weights and Measures to find out what was causing the problem.

As soon as they got off the boat, the inspectors fanned out. One headed for an ice-cream parlor on Main Street where several hundred vacationers were sitting on wooden benches in almost comatose positions licking their cones. The inspector interviewed a middle-aged man named Freddie who was eating a black-raspberry-flavored ice cream. "I'm doing an investigation into why the people on Martha's Vineyard are gaining weight."

The man replied, "Every one is worried about it. I don't believe there are less than three people on the island who aren't on a diet."

"What kind of diet are you people on?"

"You name it, and we're on it. We're on the Scarsdale Diet, the Beverly Hills Diet, the Bloomingdale's Diet, and the Dr. Atkins Diet. A friend of mine even invented the 'Martha's Vineyard Diet.' What you do for that is take all the diet books you bought in the last few years, lie down on a bed and put the books on your stomach. Their combined weight is supposed to take off half a pound a night."

The government man said, "If you had to hazard a guess, why do you think people on the island are gaining weight?"

"We cheat a lot," the man replied, "but it's justified cheating. We'll go to somebody's house and if it's a buffet we'll eat everything on the sideboard. If it's sit-down, we observe an old island custom of always taking seconds so we don't offend the hostess."

"What is your favorite meal?"

"A clambake. The thing that makes vacations so great is that no one can tell you what you can or cannot eat at a clambake. Everybody is free to take all that they want. And that includes buttered corn-on-the-cob, which I'm crazy about."

The inspector said, "This is a nutritional puzzle. From what you've told me, it doesn't matter how much you eat, you still gain weight."

"We've been studied before. We present a serious biological phenomenon."

Another inspector came back and said to his partner, "I spoke to some people up island who claim that although they are stuffing themselves, their waists keep expanding."

"Did you find out what they were eating?"

"Clams with drawn butter, Camembert cheese, strawberry shortcake, brownies and salt-free taffy."

"No clues there," replied the inspector.

The other man referred to his clipboard. "This may just be a coincidence, but all the people I interviewed told the same story. They had come to the island weighing 10 pounds less than they weigh now, and they hadn't done anything different from what they did at home, except to stuff themselves with red meat, dairy products, cakes and pies."

The first inspector was puzzled. "Well it can't be their diet. We better check the water."

Soviets viewed as expanding their territory, influence

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly three of four Americans polled by a private conservative group think the Soviet Union is trying to expand its territory and influence, while an even larger proportion believes the Soviets are at least somewhat involved in world terrorism.

These were among the principal findings of a poll released today by the private Committee on the Present Danger.

The telephone sampling of 1,004 Americans by Penn and Schoen Associates July 21-23 generally supported the Reagan administration's military buildup and stance toward Moscow, although only 27 percent favored an increase in defense spending.

The U.S. "Star Wars" program that seeks a defense against Soviet nuclear missiles drew strong backing. Development of the Strategic Defense Initiative, as Stars Wars is known formally, was approved by 81 percent and opposed by only 13 percent.

Suspicions of Moscow were reflected by 72 percent who said they thought the Soviets were trying to expand their territory. Queried about terrorism, 57 percent said the Soviets were somewhat involved, and another 23 percent said they were heavily involved.

Nearly half — 48 percent — said the United States had a stronger military, while 36 percent thought the Soviets were ahead.

On a related question, 44 percent said the importance of a strong military had increased over the last year, and 48 percent said it had stayed the same.

However, 27 percent would increase defense spending, 22 percent would reduce it and 48 percent favor a continuation of spending at current levels.

This appeared to coincide with the Reagan administration's view and conflicts with Congress, which has voted for deep cuts in the Pentagon budget.

Western Americans were slightly more inclined than those from other regions to brand the Soviets as expansionists but registered the lowest percentage accusing Moscow of heavy involvement in terrorism — 19 percent.

Of those polled, 26 percent were college graduates, 85 percent whites, 40 percent considered themselves politically moderate, 35 percent conservative and 25 percent liberal.

Democrats accounted for 38 percent of the total polled, Republicans for 24 percent and independents for 21 percent.

The poll results had a percentage of error of plus or minus 3 points, the polling company said.

NATION IN BRIEF

Peace Corps 'virtually certain' volunteers safe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Peace Corps volunteers and trainees, most of them headquartered 70 miles south of the area of the volcanic-gas disaster in Cameroon, are presumed safe, the agency says.

The disaster near Lake Nios in the West African nation killed more than 1,500 people last week.

Peace Corp spokeswoman Alixe Glen said Tuesday that most of the 174 volunteers and 100 trainees were safe at Bamenda, the agency's headquarters in the country.

Five of the volunteers were stationed at villages in the "general region" of the disaster, Ms. Glen said, but the Peace Corps is virtually certain they are safe.

Scientists to probe disaster

WASHINGTON (AP) — A team of three U.S. Geological Survey scientists hope to determine what caused the deadly gas fumes that killed more than 1,500 people in the West African nation of Cameroon.

Named to the team heading for Cameroon were Bill Evans of Menlo Park, Calif., a chemist who helped analyze chemicals in lake water from a similar disaster two years ago; Michele Tuttle of Denver, Colo., and Jack Lockwood of the Hawaii Volcano Observatory.

The deaths occurred following a release of gas fumes from a remote mountain lake.

Scientists have speculated that gases become dissolved in the water under high pressure deep in the lake, and then are released suddenly when the water is disturbed, perhaps by an earthquake or landslide.

Alcoholism inherited?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Heredity, in addition to environmental factors, appears to play a part in determining whether a person becomes an alcoholic or drug addict, according to research presented to the American Psychological Association.

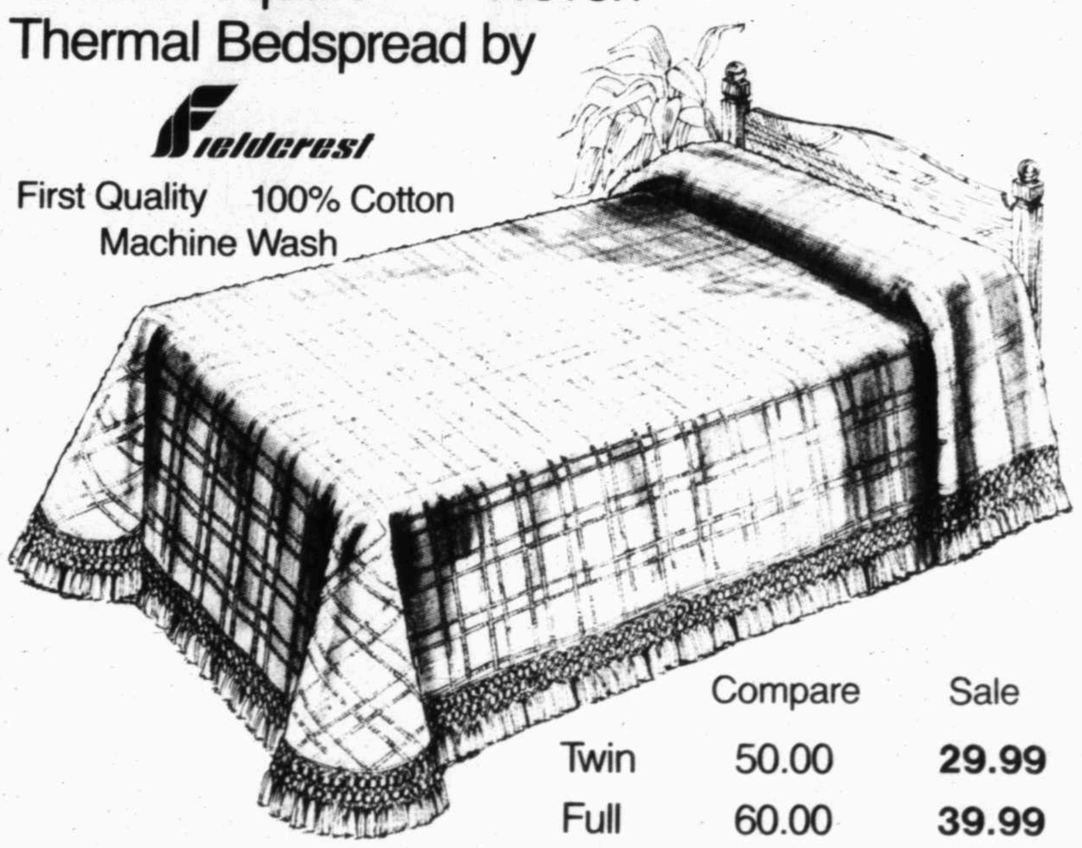

Roy W. Pickens of the National Institute on Drug Abuse in Rockville, Md., said Tuesday that his research reaffirmed conclusions of previous studies which found that children of alcoholics have a greater chance of becoming alcoholics than children of non-alcoholic parents.

Further, Victor and Michie Hesselbrock, psychologists at the University of Connecticut Health Center in Farmington, Conn., said their research suggests that children of alcoholic parents also are at increased risk for becoming drug dependent.

The NWS warns that some rains tonight may be heavy.

STATE

Showers and thunderstorms triggered by a weak cold front and moist air from the Gulf of Mexico were expected to spread across most of Texas tonight and Thursday.

Forecasters said most of the state can expect partly cloudy to mostly cloudy skies and scattered showers and thunderstorms through Thursday.

Showers and thunderstorms were reported early today along and ahead of a weak cold front that stretched from Central Oklahoma into northern sections of the Texas South Plains.

And other showers and thunderstorms were reported just before dawn in an area from near Del Rio through the Hill Country to north of Abilene.

Thunderstorms produced some very heavy rain during the night and early today from east of Lubbock to near Marfa in Southwest Texas.

NATION

Rain was scattered from the New York to the Rockies today while unseasonably low temperatures that prevailed across the North combined with blustery gusts to produce wind chills in the low 30s.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered from New York across the Ohio Valley and the southern Plains to the southern Rockies; and across the Tennessee Valley and central Gulf Coast.

Temperatures were low from the Dakotas to the upper Great Lakes, with early-morning readings in the 30s in a few spots in northeast Minnesota and mainly in the 40s to low 50s elsewhere.

Dejected John McEnroe
...first round failure

McEnroe back, and gone

NEW YORK (AP) — Right now, John McEnroe is a loser. He knows it and he's not sure how to handle it.

McEnroe, until a year ago the world's premier men's tennis player, was eliminated by fellow New Yorker Paul Annacone 1-6, 6-1, 6-3, 6-3 in the first round of the U.S. Open Tuesday. The defeat culminated McEnroe's first month back after a nearly seven-month sabbatical from the sport. He has lost to Boris Becker, Robert Seguso, Ivan Lendl and now Annacone in his four tournaments since returning.

AS A result, McEnroe is certain to drop out of the Top 20.

"As you grow up, you're used to winning your share or something," McEnroe said after being eliminated in the first round of a Grand Slam tournament for the first time since Wimbledon in 1978, when he lost to Erik van Dillen. "And you get to another level and suddenly you're not winning anymore. It's all relative to your position, but sooner or later it's going to hit you where you're not used to it, and it's not an easy thing to handle.

"I suppose it's harder when you feel you are not completely ready. It's a reality that you have to deal with. It's not something that I'm used to."

While he clearly was the biggest star shot down on opening day, McEnroe was not the only seeded player who lost Tuesday. Thierry Tulasne of France, seeded 12th, was beaten by David Pate 3-6, 6-3, 6-1, 5-7, 6-4; No. 14 Tim Mayotte blew a triple match point and fell to Jonathan Canter 6-7, 4-6, 7-6, 6-1, 6-3; Kathy Rinaldi, the 10th-rated woman, fell 6-1, 6-4 to Michelle Torres; and Alycia Moulton beat 16th-seeded Carling Bassett 6-4, 4-6, 6-0.

The winners on opening day included top-seeded defending titlist Ivan Lendl; No. 5 Yannick Noah; No. 8 Henri Leconte of France and No. 15 Brad Gilbert among the men.

Women's winners included No. 1 Martina Navratilova and defending champion Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia.

In today's featured matches, No. 2 Chris Evert Lloyd played Barbara Gerken; sixth-seeded Jimmy Connors took on Henrik Sundstrom of Sweden; Mats Wilander of Sweden, the men's second seed, played Todd Nelson; and both of the third-seeded West Germans, Steffi Graf and Boris Becker, took on Susan Mascarin, and Glen Michibata of Canada, respectively.

U.S. Open Tennis

MCENROE REFUSED to look too far into the future — "I'm going to take my drug test," he said when asked about his plans — because he's just not sure where he is headed.

"I really don't know," McEnroe said when asked if he might sit out some more tournaments. "You know, it changes things because I didn't really expect this."

McEnroe seemed listless against Annacone, who was overpowering after the first set. Annacone had 23 aces, while McEnroe made more unforced errors in the match than he used to make in an entire tournament.

"I wish I knew why it's like this," McEnroe said. "I've realized from working physically that most of it is mental. I don't know if it's something you can just turn on and off like a switch. It was on for eight or nine years and then the switch was flickering and I decided to step away from the game at that point.

"My tennis wasn't really that bad. But this year, it's just that I'm not into the matches as much as I was.

"It's a question of whether or not I truly want to do it or not."

Annacone, who lost to McEnroe 6-3, 6-2 last Friday in a tournament on Long Island, hopes McEnroe isn't thinking about quitting permanently.

"I'm sorry he lost," Annacone admitted. "It feels awkward beating him. I want to see him come back because I think he's great for tennis.

"I'm not sorry that I won. Beating John McEnroe at center court of the U.S. Open is quite a thrill. That's the tops for me so far.

Lendl, who blitzed Glenn Layendecker 6-3, 6-2, 6-0, hoped McEnroe's failure was not an omen for him.

"It doesn't affect me at all," Lendl said. "I mean I have to play (Robert) Seguso in the second round. Eventually, I could have played McEnroe in the quarters but it's a long way there for me and him. For him, it proved to be too long. I hope it doesn't prove to be too long for me."

Mandlikova also was not tested as she began defense of her crown. She downed Maria Calleja of France 6-2, 6-2.

"I do feel at home here," she said. "I really love to play here. We were driving up and I saw the stadium and I had a great feeling."

NAVRATILOVA HAD a slightly tougher time with Andrea Holikova of Czechoslovakia in a 6-4, 6-2 victory.

"It was a good first-round win as far as getting the work on shots in," said Navratilova, a two-time winner here. "You want to be tested as long as you're playing well. You don't want an opponent to hand it to you."

Noah, who has played in only one tournament since withdrawing from the French Open last May with a burned foot, routed Scott Davis 6-3, 6-3, 6-1.

Gilbert was a 2-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-3 winner over Tomm Warneke.

Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, the 1977 Open winner when the tournament was played on clay, lost to Paul McNamee of Australia 7-5, 5-7, 2-6, 6-1, 6-3.

Dodgers survive Angels' eighth

From Staff Reports

SAN ANTONIO — Three pitchers combined to limit the Midland Angels to five hits and the San Antonio Dodgers played errorless baseball to take a 2-1 Texas League victory over Midland here Tuesday night.

The game took only one hour and 57 minutes to complete, one of the shortest of the year for the Angels, who generated no offensive punch.

San Antonio scored two unearned runs in the fifth inning for the victory, handing Midland its sixth loss in the last seven outings.

Jeff Edwards gave up two hits in pitching the first four innings, but left with a sore arm before pitching enough innings for the victory. Kevin Devine and Phil Torres finished the game. Devin, 5-3, was the winning pitcher.

The loser was Rafael Pimentel, 9-8, who allowed only five hits, struck out five and didn't issue a walk. Pimentel has pitched pretty well down the stretch, but this marked his fourth straight start that he has failed to notch win No. 10.

Midland scored once in the eighth and had a runner at second when Torres struck out Midland home run leader Kevin King. Brian Brady scored Midland's run from third base when Pete Coachman grounded to short on what looked like a double play ball, but the Dodgers couldn't turn it. Coachman then stole second, but King couldn't pick him up.

The Angels are playing without two key players. James Randall has a chipped bone in his right knee and is out the rest of the series. Relief pitcher Terry Clark didn't make the road trip after breaking a hand by hitting a wall on the last night of the homestand in Midland.

The two teams have four more games before the end of the Texas League season. The series ends with a game Saturday night.

In other Texas League action Tuesday night, Arkansas defeated Shreveport, 5-3, El Paso beat Beaumont, 4-1, and Tulsa's game at Jackson was postponed because of rain.

Dave Clements had a solo homer to lead the Arkansas Travelers to a 5-3 victory over the Shreveport Captains.

Marty Pevey doubled home John Murphy with Arkansas' first run in the third inning. Clements then homered to increase the lead to 2-0. Arkansas scored two more runs in the sixth when Pevey scored on an error and Mike Robinson stole home.

Alan Cockrell had a three-run double for Shrevport.

The winning pitcher was Scott Arnold, 4-1. Jeff Keener, 2-6, was the loser.

John Gibbons and Alan Cartwright each had doubles to lead the El Paso Diablso to a 4-1 victory.

Midland Lee's senior feature twirler Gina Adams, who was recently named 'World Best' in a national competition, helped kickoff the 1986 football season Tuesday night as Lee held its first pre-season rally.

First the twirler, then the hitting

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland Lee feature twirler Gina Adams, along with band members, pep squads, drill teams and cheerleaders, did their best Tuesday night at the Lee Fieldhouse to put some fire in the blood of the 1986 football Rebels.

Lee held its annual kickoff-barbeque rally before a throng of Lee supporters in an effort to send the Rebels off to two scrimmage dates Thursday and Friday with a little emotion.

Things went quite well, despite the fact that annual MC Scotty Alcorn was unable to attend this year. Lee senior principal Bobby Dunn filled in quite nicely and it is rumored that Alcorn is looking for a new job.

Adams, however, was the highlight of the event. If the Rebels can play football as well as she can sling that baton around, Lee is headed back to the state's Big Top in 1986. In fact, the Rebels may not even have to play that well.

It was a chance for Lee boosters to meet new head coach Earl Miller first hand. Miller is really no stranger to Lee fans since he has been at the school eight years, but this is his first year as head coach, a fact he said "is the highlight of my life."

Now with blood flowing from the rousing rally, Lee players and coaches turn thoughts to scrimmage sessions with Del Rio and Kermit Thursday and Friday.

Miller will take his first team varsity and a few junior varsity backups to Ozona Thursday for a 6 p.m. scrimmage with coach Don Neuse's 5A Del Rio team. Then at 5 p.m. Friday at the Lee Field, the Rebel sophomores will host the Kermit JV in a scrimmage session prior to the 6 p.m. session that features Kermit's 3A varsity of Coach Randy Hicks against Lee's second team and all other players who didn't make the trip to Ozona.

Class 5A players are not allowed by the University Interscholastic League to play in more than one scrimmage, so those going to Ozona will not be allowed to play again Friday against Kermit.

This unique format will allow Miller and his coaches to see many more of his players under fire against good football teams, and that's what he wants at this stage.

"Our first team is going to get a full 35 plays on offense and 35 plays on defense against Del Rio and that's going to really benefit us," says Miller. "We get to see our first team a full scrimmage and you can't do that any other way.

"On the other hand, we're also going to get to see the rest of our players against one of the best 3A teams in West Texas, probably in the state, in Kermit. We may get massacred because our JV played Kermit's varsity last year and got murdered. Kermit has had two weeks in pads and they've been to the playoffs about seven years in a row.

"But that's not really important because the object is to see who can play and we need to find out who on the second team can play for us. And we'll find out in a hurry against Kermit."

Early this week, Miller planned on taking starting quarterback Rodney Johnson and backup Danny Elliott to Ozona while quarterbacks Geoff Rich and Dudley would play against Kermit on Friday. Elliott and Rich are two of the Rebels who are also being sought on for help on defense.

"There will be several things that we will be looking for, but we would really like to see some crisp execution on offense and check our defensive alignments," said Miller. "Also we would like to see just how physical we'll be on defense. That's something we don't know about this year. We've been a pretty physical team the past two or three years, but we weren't too physical in our scrimmage last Saturday.

"And it'll be the same old story. We'll be looking closely at the offensive line and the defensive linebackers. We think those areas are coming around, but that's where we don't have a lot of experience and I would like to see those people get out there and perform."

Both scrimmages are open to the public at no charge.

Lee travels to Lubbock Coronado on Friday, Sept. 5, to open the 1986 season.

In five appearances against the Chicago White Sox this season, Texas Rangers reliever Mitch Williams has allowed no runs on one hit with 11 strikeouts in 8⅔ innings.

STREAKS

Rickey Henderson continues to lead the major leagues in runs scored despite suffering through a 2-for-35 slump.

SWINGS

San Francisco's 63 victories in its first 124 games was one more win than the Giants managed all of last season.

SEASONS

1937 — Brooklyn's Fred Frankhouse hurled a rain-shortened no-hitter against the Cincinnati Reds.

Thurman released as Cowboys pare to 50

IRVING, Texas (AP) — In what Coach Tom Landry says is one of the most unpleasant parts of the job, the Dallas Cowboys cut veteran defensive back Dennis Thurman and seven other players to pare the NFL team's roster to the required 50 players.

Thurman, an eight-year veteran and the NFC's leading active interceptor, said Landry told him Monday he would be included in the round of cuts made Tuesday.

"Coach Landry just said he wanted to go with younger players. He said he tried everything he could do to keep me, but felt at this time that this was the direction he needed to go," Thurman said.

"This is one of the most unpleasant parts of our business," Landry said. "Of course, the veterans who have contributed a great deal are the most difficult to let go. You have to become fairly calloused to keep your emotions from showing."

The Cowboys, by waiving Thurman, an 11th-round pick in 1978, will keep a fourth cornerback or an extra safety among seven defensive backs. Landry said Thurman was limited to the 4-0 (pass defense).

Also waived Tuesday were three other veterans, offensive tackle Chris Schultz, tight end Fred Cornwell and guard Broderick Thompson.

Linebacker Russ Swan, defensive back Manuel Hendrix, tight end Jeff Spek and wide receiver Perry Kemp were also released.

Placed on injured reserve, Cowboys spokesman David Pelletier said, were defensive back Tommy Haynes, who has a thumb injury, and rookie defensive tackle Mark Walen.

Giant offense robs Blue

Reds begin late push on Astros

Associated Press

The San Francisco Giants know Vida Blue is pitching well this season. They wish they could reward him with a few victories along the way.

Blue shut out Montreal on one hit for nine innings Tuesday night, but did not get a decision because it took the Giants 12 innings to beat the Expos 1-0 Tuesday night.

"It's amazing how good he's pitched this year. You can't pitch much better than he has," San Francisco Manager Roger Craig said. "We just can't score runs for him."

Blue's record remained at 9-8 while he lowered his earned run average to 2.96. In his last seven starts, he has allowed just eight earned runs but has won only two of those games and lost three.

Blue, who struck out six and walked three, gave up only a one-out single in the fourth to Andre Dawson. Had the Giants been able to score for Blue, the effort would have been recorded as his first shutout since 1982 and his fifth career one-hitter, along with a no-hitter.

Instead, it took pinch-hitter Harry Spilman's bases-loaded single with one out in the bottom of the 12th for San Francisco to win. Blue left the clubhouse quickly after the game.

Scott Garrelts, 11-9, relieved Blue and gave up just one hit, another single by Dawson, in the final three innings. The victory kept the Giants tied with Cincinnati for second place in the NL West, seven games behind Houston.

Garrelts also contributed a key hit in San Francisco's winning 12th. Will Clark led off with a single and then Garrelts, after faking a bunt, slapped a single that sent Clark to third.

Bert Roberge, 0-3, intentionally walked Chili Davis to load the bases and Bob Brenly grounded into a forceout at home. Spilman followed with his single to right.

Dennis Martinez pitched seven shutout innings for the Expos, yielding only four hits. Bob McClure gave up two hits in the next three innings before Roberge took over to start the 11th.

NL Roundup

Cubs 5, Astros 3

Terry Francona's solo homer capped a three-run sixth inning and Ron Cey hit his first career pinch-home run in the seventh, leading Chicago past Houston.

The loss cut the Astros' lead in the NL West to seven games over Cincinnati and San Francisco.

Ed Lynch, 4-3, pitched six innings for the victory and Lee Smith worked the ninth for his 25th save. Danny Darwin, 0-1, took the loss in his first start for Houston since being acquired Aug. 15 in a trade with Milwaukee.

A bizarre play enabled the visiting Cubs to break a 1-1 tie in the sixth. After Manny Trillo singled, Gary Matthews hit a grounder to shortstop Craig Reynolds, who threw late to second. Second baseman Bill Doran tried to get Matthews at first, but his throw hit Trillo in the head and flew into the stands, allowing Trillo to score and Matthews to reach second. Trillo was not hurt.

Mets 11, Padres 6

Tim Teufel and Ray Knight both drove in three runs with four hits and Rafael Santana homered for the first time in more than a year as New York rapped a season-high 21 hits in beating San Diego.

Teufel homered in the first inning and Santana lined a two-run shot in the second, his first homer since April 17, 1985. Both blows came against Dave Dravecky, 9-11.

Sid Fernandez, 15-4, pitched seven innings for the victory, allowing six runs on 12 hits. He is tied with Houston's Bob Knepper for second in the league in victories, one behind Los Angeles' Fernando Valenzuela.

The host Padres got 14 hits, four by Tony Gwynn. Bruce Bochy hit a three-run homer and Jerry Royster hit a two-run homer in the San Diego seventh.

Knight's two-run single capped a four-run fourth that made it 7-0.

Reds 5, Pirates 4

Dave Parker hit an RBI double in the first inning, a two-run homer in the fifth and a tiebreaking sacrifice fly in the ninth that led Cincinnati over Pittsburgh.

Kal Daniels opened the ninth with a single against Ray Krawczyk, 0-1. Daniels stole second and went to third on catcher Tony Pena's throwing error before Parker hit his fly ball on Pat Clements' first pitch.

Parker's 25th homer broke a 1-1 tie in the fifth.

John Franco, 5-4, got the victory despite allowing two runs in the eighth that allowed the host Pirates to tie the score.

Cardinals 7, Braves 1

Greg Mathews and Pat Perry teamed on a three-hitter and John Morris drove in three runs as St. Louis beat Atlanta in a rain-delayed game.

Mathews, 10-4, shut out the Braves on two hits for eight innings, and then left after a 1-hour, 25-minute rain delay. Mathews, who retired the first 12 Atlanta batters, became the first St. Louis rookie to win 10 games in a season since John Fulgham went 10-6 in 1979.

Morris had an RBI single during a three-run fifth against Jim Acker, 3-3, and added a two-run single in a three-run eighth.

Vince Coleman of the Cardinals had his successful stolen-base streak ended at 28 when he was thrown out at second base by Ozzie Virgil in the first inning. Coleman, who had three hits, stole his major league-leading 87th base in the third.

The game at Busch Stadium was delayed three times by rain. It was halted for 25 minutes in the fifth, four minutes in the seventh and 85 minutes in the eighth.

Phillies 6, Dodgers 4

Glenn Wilson's three-run homer capped a four-run eighth inning as Philadelphia won in Los Angeles.

Von Hayes' third hit of the game, an RBI single, broke a 2-2 tie in the eighth against Ed VandeBerg, 1-5. One out later, Wilson connected off Ken Howell for his 14th homer.

Kevin Gross, 9-10, got the victory, allowing two runs on 11 hits in seven innings.

Franklin Stubbs hit his 21st homer for the host Dodgers and John Russell hit his 10th for the Phillies.

Alabama, Ohio St. kickoff college season

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Although fifth-ranked Alabama and No. 9 Ohio State have been described as having many similarities, the concerns of the coaches were different as they prepared for tonight's Chase Kickoff Classic.

Ohio State's Earle Bruce was worried about his offense. Alabama's Ray Perkins had defense on his mind.

"When you look at starting early and trying to get ready for a game, if you're trying to build an offensive line, that's a tremendous challenge in itself because if there's any one thing that's built the tradition at Ohio State it's been the really great offensive lines," Bruce said.

"When you try to build one in two weeks, that's not enough time, I'm afraid. It's very tough to get an offense ready to play that quickly. We're trying to put together an offensive football team that has a lot of problems right now because of that and because of our defense. When you play against your defense and they're ahead of your offense, it makes for a lot of trouble on the practice field. Good trouble, I guess, if you like defensive football.

"Basically, that's probably what I see in this game — a lot of good defense."

The preseason has been something of a nightmare for Alabama, especially since defensive tackle Willie Ryles, projected as a starter at a position hit hard by graduation, died last Saturday of an acute subdural hematoma, five days after he collapsed on the practice field.

After 26-134 record, UTEP hopes for better

UTEP's Bob Stull

EL PASO (AP) — The University of Texas at El Paso, with nowhere to go but up in college football, opens the season with a coach hired for his knack at turning around dismal teams.

The Miners hope Coach Bob Stull will be the answer to their miserable 26-134 record since 1970. The team's stunning upset of Brigham Young last year was its only win. After Texas-El Paso finished the year at 1-10, Bill Yung was fired and Stull was brought in.

Stull spent spring training getting acquainted with his players.

"We don't know where we are as a football team," he said. "It'll be interesting to see how we come out."

Stull, 40, has plenty of experience helping teams chart more succesful courses in his 16 years of college coaching.

He joined Don James' staff at Kent State as an assistant in 1971 and also served as recruiting coordinator. The team had put together a 9-21 record the three previous years.

Three years later, the Golden Flashes had a 9-2 record and went 7-4 the following year, won the school's first Mid-American Conference championship and played in the Tangerine Bowl.

Stull left with James for the University of Washington, again as offensive line coach and recruiting coordinator, later moving up to offensive coordinator. During his five years there, the Huskies put together a 47-12 record.

He left Washington to head his own program at the University of Massachusetts, taking the team from last place to second in the Yankee Conference in two years. The improvement, from 3-8 in 1984 to 7-4 the following year, was the third-best nationally in Division 1-AA.

Stull is counting on several talented players, including quarterback Sammy Garza and running back John Harvey.

Garza, a senior, set a school pass completion record last year by hitting 120 of 200 passes, or 60 percent, for 1,654 yards and six touchdowns.

Last year, Harvey gained 777 yards on 147 carries for a 5.3 average, despite missing three games with injuries. Now a sophomore, Harvey rushed for 108 yards in last season's win over BYU.

"Our weaknesses are lack of depth in offense and defense" and a lack of experience, said Stull.

Former starters see NFL careers end as cuts come

Associated Press

Cutdown day, a weekly occurence this time of the year in the NFL, leaves some its of victims to cry foul, others to accept what they knew was coming and a third group that just doesn't want to go.

Among the former was offensive guard Steve Kenney of the Philadelphia Eagles, who was cut Tuesday as the league's player limit reached 50.

"He took the bat out of my hand," Kenney, a five-year starter, said of Eagles Coach Buddy Ryan. "I never got up to the plate ... He thinks other guys are better than me, and I don't."

Kenney had been in and out of camp but never out of Ryan's doghouse.

Among those who just didn't want to go was Miami Dolphins nickel back and kick returner Mike Kozlowski.

"There's a country song with the title 'My Best Friend Just Ran Off With My Wife, And I Miss Him,' " Kozlowski said. "That's kind of how I feel right now. My wife is football and my best friends, or most of them, are still here."

Kozlowski was the only cut Miami had to make to reach the 50-player limit, which had been met on Monday by the New York Jets and Los Angeles Rams. The final cut, to 45 players, must be made next Monday.

Oilers

Houston cut tight end Mike McCloskey and linebacker Eric Fairs. Kick return specialist Mike Akiu went on injured reserve.

Cardinals

The big news in St. Louis was not subtraction, but addition in the form of defensive end Al "Bubba" Baker, a former Pro Bowl player, who ended his holdout.

"We would have liked to have him here six weeks ago, but he looks like he's in shape to play," Coach Gene Stallings said of the 6-foot-6, 270-pound Baker. "He'll have some catching up to do."

Cut were quarterback Scott Brunner and wide receiver Earnest Gray, a former playoff passing combination with the Giants.

Bengals

The release of rookie linebacker Tom Flaherty, who had been snapping the ball for punts, didn't get the wholehearted endorsement of veteran guard Max Montoya, who inherits that task.

"I'm only doing it because they asked me to try it," Montoya said, adding that fans never notice offensive linemen unless they make a mistake, such as a bad snap on a punt."

Giants

Kicker Bob Thomas had a short life as a Giant. He got the ax despite kicking two field goals in as many tries against the New York Jets Saturday after being picked up last week. The Giants said their regular kicker, Ali Haji-Sheikh, had recovered from a pulled groin muscle.

The Giants also released tackle Gordon King, their top draft pick in 1978.

Bills

The signing of quarterback Jim Kelly spelled the end for Bruce Mathison, who spent two years with San Diego, then last year at Buffalo, where he started seven games. The Bills cut six other players and placed four more on injured reserve.

Seahawks

Quarterback Paul McDonald, a one-time starter with Cleveland, was cut by the Seattle Seahawks along with cornerback Terry Jackson, fullback David Hughes and five others. Hughes was a starter with the Seahawks, while Jackson had his best years with the New York Giants.

Eagles

In addition to cutting Kenney, Philadelphia placed offensive tackle Kevin Allen, its first-round draft pick last season, on the reserve-non-football injury list.

Chiefs

Punter Jim Arnold, who led the league with a 44.9-yard average in 1984 but slipped to 41.2 last year, was axed by Kansas City. He wasn't alone. The Chiefs also waived punter Louis Colbert, an eighth-round pick, and veteran offensive lineman Bob Olderman and fullback Bruce King.

Lions

Detroit waived linebacker Kurt Allerman, a 10-year veteran who formerly played with St. Louis. Three other veterans, safety William Frizzell, tight end Mark Brammer and running back Booker Moore, were axed.

Broncos

Running back Tony Boddie, whose greatest claim to fame came as a member of the USFL's Los Angeles Express when he outgained Herschel Walker in the league's first nationally televised game, was cut.

Vikings

Defensive back John Turner, a nine-year veteran, was one of 10 players released by Minnesota.

Steelers

Pittsburgh waived five-year veteran linebacker Bob Kohrs and four others. The Steelers placed veteran defensive back Dwayne Woodruff and three others on injured reserve.

49ers

Dana McLemore, who needed just 58 yards to become the team's all-time leader in punt return yardage, was one of six players cut by San Francisco.

Bucs

Tampa Bay cut third-year tight end Mark Witte and third-string quarterback Alan Risher, who played two years in the USFL before joining the Bucs last year.

Browns

Cleveland axed fullback Johnny Davis, an eight-year veteran, along with kick returner Glen Young, who led the AFC last season with an average of 25.7 yards per return. The Browns also released defensive end Casey Merrill, acquired last week in a conditional trade with the Giants.

Redskins

The in-and-out odyssey of quarterback Babe Laufenberg ended when he and six other players were cut by Washington. Laufenberg had been cut and re-signed last season, before returning to camp this summer.

Falcons

Former San Diego backup quarterback Ed Luther and tight end Cliff Benson, who started 14 games last season, were among six players cut by Atlanta.

Detroit rallies to beat Chisox

Associated Press

They hit four homers and came back from a 7-2 deficit with six runs in the sixth. Alan Trammell doubled in the winning run, and Willie Hernandez got the save with three innings of one-hit ball. For the Detroit Tigers, it felt like a championship year again. It felt like 1984.

"It used to be our forte a few years ago, coming back like that," Trammell said after his RBI double capped a six-run sixth-inning Tueday as the Tigers overhauled the Oakland A's for an 8-7 victory.

"I don't know what it means, today. Baseball's a funny game."

Enter Hernandez, who had pitched only 3⅔ innings since giving up a grand slam in Boston on Aug. 10.

"I was anxious to get some work because I was losing my velocity," he said. "I haven't pitched in a long time. To get my rhythm going, I've got to pitch more consistently.

"It's like 1984. When you've got people cheering for you, you feel more confident."

Two of the newer Tigers, Darnell Coles and Mike Heath, homered in the sixth inning. Darrell Evans and John Grubb had homered earlier for Detroit.

The game was delayed over two hours by rain.

Trammell knows well that in 1986, the Tigers are running away with nothing. "We're not throwing in the towel, that's for sure," he said. "But, we know we have a big hill to climb." Boston, which has a 6½-game lead in the East, is seven in front of Detroit.

Carney Lansford and Dave Kingman homered as Oakland built its 7-2 lead. Lansford hit his fourth homer in five games, and Kingman hit his 29th this year.

Joaquin Andujar started for the A's, but it was Oakland pitcher No. 4, Dave Von Ohlen, 0-1, who took the loss. Detroit pitcher No. 2, Mark Thurmond, 4-1, won in relief of Jack Morris.

"It was a tough game to lose," Oakland Manager Tony LaRussa said. "This is a tough ballpark, but the Tigers held a one-run lead for three innings."

Red Sox 8, Rangers 1

Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 13-9, pitched a four-hitter with a season high of 10 strikeouts and only one walk, ending Boston's three-game losing streak and Texas' four-game winning streak.

Dwight Evans and Don Baylor homered for Boston. Evans' 19th homer of the season was a two-run shot in the fifth that gave the Red Sox a 7-1 lead. Baylor hit his 25th in the seventh.

"The 'Can' is back," said pitching coach Bill Fisher. Boyd did not talk to the press.

"Dennis is throwing the way he did several years ago, and we're going to need that down the stretch," said Wade Boggs, who hit two doubles among Boston's 12 hits, one breaking a 1-1 tie in the second inning.

Texas rookie Mike Loynd, 1-2, allowed seven runs in 4⅓ innings. Toby Harrah homered for the Rangers' only run.

Royals 6, White Sox 1

George Brett hit a pair of solo home runs, giving him 15 homers this year and nine career two-homer games.

"Baseball is still fun but not as much fun as it was last year," said Brett, remembering Kansas City's championship season. "The season isn't over yet and we've had some comeback wins. Teams that consider themselves out of the race don't do that."

AL Roundup

Steve Balboni hit his 28th homer of the year, the Royals had 15 hits and they won their second straight game and seventh of 11. The White Sox have lost five straight.

Brett said his shoulder, which he injured this year, is OK. "It hasn't bothered me at all except for the two and a-half weeks I missed," he said.

Charlie Leibrandt, 11-10, allowed seven hits, did not walk a batter and struck out six in his seventh complete game of the season. Richard Dotson, 8-13, took the loss.

Angels 2, Yankees 0

Mike Witt allowed only four singles and no walks as he extended his winning streak to a career high of seven, and took the league lead with a 2.52 earned run average. Witt, 16-7, threw his third shutout and league-leading 12th complete game in blanking New York at Yankee Stadium. He retired the last 14 Yankees.

The Angels won their third straight game and the Yankees lost their fourth straight.

After the game, as the Angels were leaving the field, Wally Joyner was hit in the arm by a knife thrown from the stands, but escaped injury, the club said.

Indians 6, Blue Jays 6

Toronto scored three runs in the ninth inning to tie Cleveland. The Indians didn't score in the bottom of the inning, rain washed out the rest of the evening and the game wound up a tie. It will be replayed today from the start. The statistics count in the record books, but there's no win or loss.

That is good news for Cleveland's Pat Tabler and Cory Snyder, who went 4-for-4, and for Toronto's Ron Shepherd, who homered.

The Indians took a 5-0 lead, but the Blue Jays eventually capped a comeback by scoring the tying run on shortstop Julio Franco's error.

Brewers 6, Twins 5

Milwaukee's Paul Molitor, who tied the game in the eighth inning with a sacrifice fly, won it with a single in the 10th. Minnesota Right fielder Tom Brunansky tried to catch Molitor's liner, but couldn't, and Jim Gantner scored from second.

Kent Hrbek hit his 27th homer as Minnesota took a 4-1 lead. Back-to-back homers by Cecil Cooper and Rob Deer highlighted Milwaukee's comeback. Deer's homer was his 30th, tying him for the league lead.

Mark Clear, 5-4, has won Milwaukee's last two games. Keith Atherton, 5-9, has lost the last two for the Twins.

Mariners 5, Orioles 2

Seattle scored four runs in the fifth inning, two on a double by Mickey Brantley, one on a double by Phil Bradley, one when Baltimore right fielder Lee Lacy dropped a fly ball.

Mike Moore, 8-11, gave up nine hits but no walks over 7 1-3 innings. Matt Young retired all five battters he faced for his 12th save. Ken Dixon, 10-10, lost.

Jim Presley homered for Seattle. Cal Ripken homered for Baltimore.

Moore became the Mariners' all-time win leader with his 45th career triumph, moving past Glen Abbott.

Dollar stronger

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose against the Japanese yen and was stronger on European markets today in expectation of a cut in West German interest rates. Gold was down.

A Frankfurt dealer said the market was increasingly expectant of a reduction in the West German Bundesbank's discount rate of 3.5 percent. Policymakers of the central bank meet Thursday to decide whether to cut the rate in response to the U.S. Federal Reserve Board's interest rate reductions.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a closing 155.25 yen from Tuesday's 153.94. Later, in London, it was quoted at 155.10 yen.

On Thursday the dollar hit 153.03 yen, its lowest closing rate in Tokyo since the late 1940s.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Tuesday:

—2.0585 West German marks, up from 2.0480

—1.6605 Swiss francs, up from 1.6507

—6.7415 French francs, up from 6.7050

—2.3217 Dutch guilders, up from 2.3115

—1,417.50 Italian lire, up from 1,410.375

—1.39475 Canadian dollars, unchanged

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.4820, compared with $1.4880 Tuesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $378.50 a troy ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $382. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $377.80.

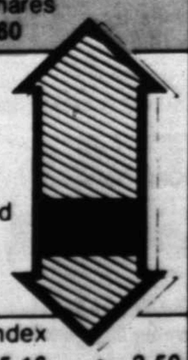

In Zurich, the bid price was $377.80, down from $381 late Tuesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell 0.96 to close at a bid $377.10.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.10 a troy ounce, down from Tuesday's $5.145.

Prime lending rate now at lowest level since 1977

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Banks across America lowered their prime lending rate Tuesday to 7.5 percent from 8 percent, following the lead of the Wells Fargo Bank on Monday and the cut in the Federal Reserve's discount rate last week.

The prime rate is now at its lowest level since late 1977.

Although the drop is expected to have little effect on the nation's largest corporations — which borrow mainly by selling bonds or another type of iou called commercial paper — it could be of significant benefit to consumers and business.

Small and medium-size companies borrow at the prime rate or a rate tied to it. These companies' interest costs will go down immediately, tending to give them higher profits.

Consumers, meanwhile, can benefit by paying lower interest rates on home-equity and automobile loans.

To the extent that falling interest rates stimulate stock prices, investors also will find themselves better off. The market surged Tuesday, helped by the prime rate reduction, with the Dow Jones industrial average rising 32.48 points, to 1,904.25.

"If you have stocks, and suddenly your portfolio goes up 32 points you feel wealthier," said F. Gordon Bitter, chief financial officer of the Singer Co. "You may then go out and spend."

But whether consumer spending will be enough to lift the economy out of its doldrums is hotly debated.

Financial officers and economists who were interviewed Tuesday seemed to reinforce the prevailing view that corporations plan to invest little in new plant and equipment.

Jay E. Dittus, treasurer of the Inland Steel Corp., said Tuesday's lowering of the prime rate would be of some benefit to companies such as his because it would let them finance their accounts receivable and inventories more cheaply. But he said it would have no impact on Inland's long-range planning.

"You don't go out and do a 30-year project based on what has happened (Tuesday)," Dittus said. "If money gets tight again, the rate will go back up. The fact that the prime is adjustable leaves you with a big chunk of uncertainty."

At Ryder System Inc., Charles F. Wilson, treasurer of the big trucking, insurance and aviation company, said: "The prime alone does not affect our borrowing costs at all. The Fed discount rate cut last week probably had more of an impact."

He said the lower prime rate would help Ryder indirectly, however, by increasing the demand for products that are moved by truck.

But the key to invigorating the nation's economy, business analysts said, is a drop in long-term interest rates, which affect corporations' capital spending plans the most.

So far, at least, long-term rates have stubbornly resisted going lower, perplexing economists and investors.

Pickens forms shareholders group

WASHINGTON (AP) — T. Boone Pickens Jr. says his new nationwide shareholder-rights organization is not a self-dealing vehicle to support takeover battles he might pursue in the future.

Pickens, the Texas oilman who gained fame by trying to acquire such oil giants as Phillips Petroleum Co. and Gulf Oil Corp. in the early 1980s, said his new group, the United Shareholders Association, will work to protect shareholders' rights largely by fighting the barrage of takeover defenses being adopted by corporate America.

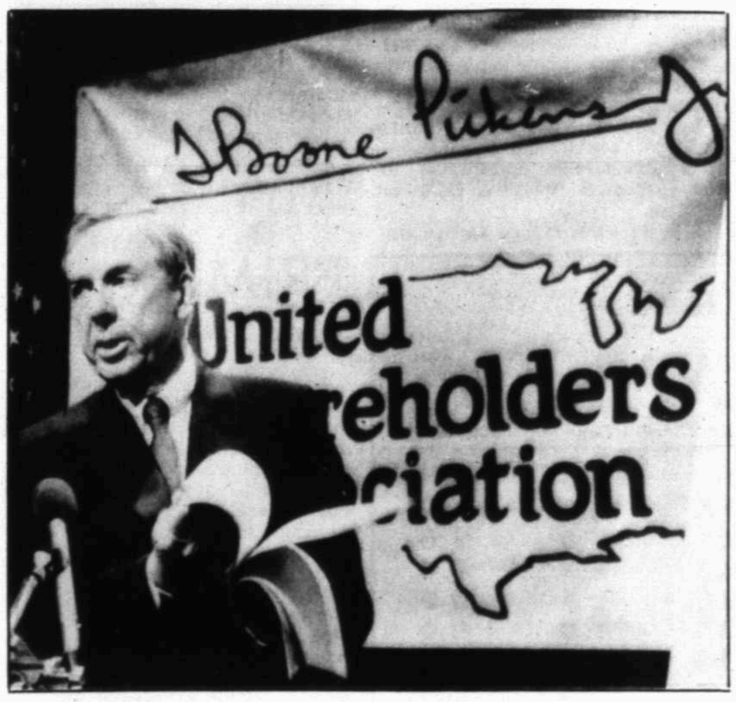

But he dismissed suggestions that the group, in trying to remove takeover barriers, was simply a way to foster more takeover targets for Pickens.

"It is not an organization to further my efforts," Pickens said in unveiling the organization at a news conference Tuesday. "I'm not angling toward more corporate mergers. I see no conflict between the United Shareholders Association and what Boone Pickens does in his business life."

Pickens said he decided to form the group because "executives and managers are no longer accountable," and because the 47 million Americans who own stock are the "most under-represented group in Washington."

"Owners, and that means shareholders, are unorganized, intimidated and treated like second-class citizens," he said.

Specifically, he asserted that companies are adopting takeover defenses and taking other steps that primarily serve to entrench management, thus stripping stockholders of a voice in corporate affairs that their ownership in the company should represent.

Mesa Petroleum chief T. Boone Pickens Jr. announces the formation of the United Shareholders Association during a news conference in Washington.

"Stockholders have had their rights taken away in wholesale amounts recently," he said.

United Shareholders' goal, he said, will lobby before companies, Congress, the Securities and Exchange Commission and others to insist that "stockholders own companies and managers are employees."

Pickens said he would pay all of the $1.3 million needed to launch United Shareholders if needed, but that he expected much of the cost to be paid by new members to the group.

Pickens, 58, is general partner of Amarillo-based Mesa Limited Partnership, an energy concern that is the successor to Mesa Petroleum Co., which he founded.

'Oil field undertaker' waits on next boom

STROUD, Okla. (AP) — A couple of times a week, John Cassidy makes his rounds — Houston; Morgan City, La.; Tyler, Texas; Hobbs, N.M.; and other hard-hit oil towns. After each visit, his trucks roll in and cart away his booty. Each time, some wonder whether he's a genius or a fool.

John Cassidy is buying oil field equipment like it's going out of style. And, of course, it may very well be.

At auctions all over, this oil field vulture sometimes pays less than a penny on the dollar for 152-foot drilling rigs, 4,000 horsepower draw works, 40-pound gears and everything else needed to sink a well.

Cassidy has covered 160 acres of hilly pasture here along Highway 99 with an inventory of oil drilling equipment larger than that of the eight largest drilling supply manufacturers combined, an inventory that once would have been worth $600 million to $800 million.

"I'm the oil field undertaker," he confesses.

Cassidy's cemetery is an epitaph to the industry decline and a gamble on the future based on a belief that prices will rebound and drillers will be lining up to buy his cache.

"I go to all these auctions and it's like going to a funeral home," he said. "I don't say I don't feel sorry for these people. ... I don't have the greed that's implied here. I'm just trying to stay in business."

Today, with a barrel of oil priced at about $15, or barely half what it was last fall, the U.S. rig count is near its record low. Banks have foreclosed on drillers and suppliers, and equipment prices have become so depressed that Cassidy pays more to truck some items home than he pays for them at auction.

Some rigs come so cheap they are worth more in scrap iron than Cassidy paid for them.

Cassidy, a wily, graying 61-year-old millionaire who also did well in the drilling and the oil field service businesses, has the cash to play the auctions now because of the killing he made in the last bust-to-boom cycle.

In the 1970s, when the supply of oil field equipment outpaced demand, Cassidy filled part of his yard with gear. Then, when the price of oil rose in the late '70s and early '80s, and drillers were falling over one another for equipment, Cassidy cashed in.

"We're reinvesting the money made in the last boom," Cassidy said. "There is going to be pent-up demand, and the traditional supply sources aren't there anymore," Cassidy said.

Global Marine Inc., one of the largest drilling companies, and Smith International Inc., a major oil field service company, have already filed for protection from creditors in bankruptcy court, and dozens of smaller suppliers and drillers, have gone bust.

Gas stocks post gain

NEW YORK (UPI) — The nation's gasoline stocks rose modestly last week as production shot up and fuel imports plunged, the American Petroleum Institute reported Tuesday.

Some analysts had calculated U.S. gasoline demand was running at high levels during the first half of August, the peak driving month. But energy specialists said the latest API data for the week ending Aug. 21 did not give a clear picture of what has happened to demand since the middle of August.

Gasoline inventories traditionally decline during the summer driving season and had dropped substantially during the first two weeks of August.

Last week gasoline supplies inched up to 214.7 million barrels from 213.6 million barrels in the previous week but still were below the 227.6 million barrels in storage in the same 1985 week, the oil industry trade group said.

Stocks of unleaded fuel, which accounts for more than 65 percent of the domestic gasoline market, slipped to 112.3 million barrels from 112.7 million barrels in the preceding week but were higher than the 109.7 million barrels on hand in the year-ago week.

Gasoline production jumped to 7.15 million barrels a day from 6.94 million barrels a day the week before and 6.83 million barrels a day in the same week last year.

Indicators show city economy stabilizing

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

Indicators from various segments of the community point to a slowing of economic downturn in Midland during July as oil prices continued to climb slowly and the Permian Basin rig count rebounded. The recently released indicators are compiled monthly by the Economic Development Department of the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

The employment picture brightened as a drop in the total number of unemployed Midlanders was seen. Out of a total labor force of 54,400 there were 47,600 working during July.

The construction industry continued to struggle as only 17 residential permits and no commercial permits were issued. Year-to-date figures represent a drop of 52.47 percent in residential permits issued and a decline of 44.44 percent in the number of commerical permits issued.

The number of air traffic boardings were down slightly during the month, due to the decreased number of business travellers.

The financial sector remained flat as deposits are down just over 4 percent from 1985. Savings & loans, however, are still showing healthy growth — thrift deposits are up 5.64 percent.

Shoe store opens in La Villita shopping center

By MELLA McEWEN

La Villita Shopping Center, Wadley and Midkiff, has a new tenant.

Midlander Mary Wooldridge has opened FOOTLOOSE, a ladies' shoe store, next to Zack's Frozen Yogurt.

The store, which has been open five days, offers ladies' shoes and accessories, including handbags, jewelry and belts. Response so far has been excellent, Wooldridge reports. Because the store is so new and she's still accumulating inventory, Wooldridge notes that shoppers should stop in frequently to check her progress.

The SANDPIPER INN, 3838 W. Wall, is under new ownership as of Aug. 1.

Owners Lee and Jerri Parks sold the 103 unit hotel, built in the early 1960s, to an investor from San Antonio. Manager Ron Moss reports that the Sandpiper will undergo some major renovations in the near future.

The hotel, originally built as a Holiday Inn, was sold to Affordable Inns, who later sold it to the Parks, according to Moss.

Midlander Doris Zepeda has opened ZEP SAK-SAV, a locally-owned convenience store located at 3415 Thomason Drive.

The store will sell items such as cold drinks, cigarettes, hot sandwiches, fountain drinks and other convenience items.

ADIA TEMPORARY SERVICES has introduced tuition reimbursement for its temporary employees.

All Adia temporaries are eligible to participate in the program. Each Adia office maintains a course catalog of classes ranging from new word processing applications to shorthand brush-up. After a temporary successfully completes a selected course and works 150 hours for Adia, the company will reimburse 50 percent of the course fee, up to $100.

Pattie Knighton, Midland office supervisor, explains, "In an increasingly complex and technical office environment, we are faced with the challenge of providing temporary employees who are adept at a wide range of skills. In order to meet this challenge, we recognize that training is a necessity - but we do not believe our role is to function as professional trainers."

Responding to President Reagan's "national crusade against drugs" which calls for widespread drug testing, REVCO announces that parents will soon be able to purchase the first confidential home drug test in its 2,000 discount stores in 30 states. Revco is the first chain to carry this product, called "AWARE" nationally.

"We see this test kit as a valuable tool for parents to check for possible drug use in the home," says Revco divisional merchandise director Ellis Jones. "At the very least it can open lines of communication on the topic of drug use withing the family."

The AWARE kit includes a mailing tube for a urine specimen which is sent back to the manufacturer's lab. According to the manufacturer, American Drug Screens, Inc., of Dallas, the test is 98 percent accurate in detecting traces of marijuana, cocaine or crack, Valium, Librium, amphetamines, barbituates and PCP.

Revco has 254 stores in Texas, including two in Midland.

GE executive named new NBC president

Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — General Electric tapped a respected executive in its financial ranks Tuesday to succeed Grant Tinker as chief executive of National Broadcasting Co.

Robert C. Wright, 43, officially takes the reins Monday from the 60-year-old Tinker, whose programming prowess was instrumental in catapulting NBC from the network ratings cellar to first place in less than five years.

Wright, now president and chief executive of General Electric Financial Services, which oversees a brokerage, finance company and reinsurance concern, also will assume the network's presidency. That position has been vacant since the departure of Robert Mulholland in 1984.

The chairman's job at NBC, a position Tinker occupied, will be assumed by John F. Welch Jr., General Electric's chief executive and chairman. General Electric acquired NBC through a $6.3 billion merger with RCA earlier this year.

Wright's appointment was no surprise, having been presaged weeks ago. No less surprising is his mandate from Welch, with whom the veteran GE executive has close ties.

"My job is to see that the momentum of quality programming and quality performance (fashioned by Tinker) is maintained and accelerated," Wright told reporters at a news conference here that also was beamed by satellite to NBC's 200 affiliate stations nationwide. "General Electric simply wants me to take the best and make it better."

But given the mandate for sustained programming excellence, NBC staffers have registered both surprise and concern over GE's decision to choose a trained lawyer and veteran corporate executive as the network's top official rather than a broadcaster.

Wright does have experience in cable television, having left General Electric in 1980 for a three-year stint as president of Cox Cable Communications in Atlanta. And, Welch noted Tuesday, he is accustomed to supervising creative people in his capacity as head of GE's $20.2 billion (assets) financial services operation.

But his expertise is in running businesses unrelated to broadcasting — notably plastics, housewares, audio and, most recently, financial services.

It is his track record and reputation for financial innovation in the latter job that earned him the NBC nod and, some analysts believe, the inside track for the top job at General Electric.

"He is an innovator and has fostered an environment that has (persuaded) some of the brightest minds in finance to come work for GE of all places," said Nicholas P. Heymann, a securities analyst at the Wall Street brokerage of Drexel Burnham Lambert.

Heymann and other analysts who have followed Wright's career at General Electric look for him to make only modest belt-tightening measures at NBC. His focus, they believe, will be on fashioning solutions to what Tinker calls one of the industry's "thorniest problem": the rising cost of producing television programs.

Wright would not address the issue of production cost-cutting except to say that he has no "preconceived notions" about the need for such cuts.

He did, however, say he plans no staff cutbacks, a subject much on the minds of NBC staffers — and indeed, all broadcasting employees — these days.

Waves of layoffs and other cost-cutting measures at NBC rivals CBS and ABC, as well as a formal department-by-department review of NBC's operations begun earlier this summer — the results of which Tinker said are due out shortly — have only heightened apprehension.

Commenting on his strategy, Wright said that he has no plans "to make any structural changes for the time being."

According to the Petroleum Equipment Suppliers Association, Cassidy has a bigger stock of major drilling equipment than the top eight manufacturers together; by some estimates there's enough equipment to put 3,000 people to work.

In the past year, some 1,000 truckloads have unloaded at his Stroud junkyard. Some have carried a collection of $15 million worth of drilling gears, which Cassidy bought for about $28,000. Some have carried draw works, the machines that raise and lower pipe on the rig, bought for $10,000 to $20,000. Each originally cost about $400,000.

There's an 8-foot-tall blowout preventer bought in Hobbs for $3,750. In 1981, Cassidy said, it sold for $261,000. And he has $435,000 mud pumps, some brand new, bought for an average price of $7,000.

The used equipment is reassembled and repainted, and workers keep the grounds mowed and tidy. One derrick even sports a sign, "Come on America," left over by its original operator.

"John is going to make a killing, no question," said Mansel Holmes of Murco Drilling Corp. in Shreveport, La., who travels to some of the auctions on the lookout for spare parts to refurbish his company's rigs more cheaply than repairing damaged parts.

"What it comes down to is a case of survival of the fittest," Holmes said.

Cassidy, in a way, has already lost on some of his equipment, the stuff he bought a few months ago for 30 cents on the dollar and now is selling for less than 10. And he's concentrating on expensive deep-drilling rigs, the kind of rigs for which the price of oil would have to double, to more than $30 a barrel, before they'd be of use.

"I believe the price of oil is political, and in three to seven years, it will be back up," he said. "The faster it goes down, the faster it will come back."

For now, Cassidy said, he's hustling to survive the cycles and come out on top.

"As long as I can take advantage of opportunity, whatever it will be, I will. Maybe I'm like the poor farmer that won the lottery and said he'd just keep on farming until he lost it all," Cassidy said.

"But if you're a survivor, then the profits will take care of themselves."

PRIME

Steven A. Ludsin, president of S.A. Ludsin & Co., a New York investment firm, said in an interview Tuesday that long-term rates are kept up by a combination of investors' concern over renewed inflation, the huge federal budget deficit and the weakness of the economy.

"What you are still looking at are some of the old ghosts," he said.

Nearly all analysts agree that high long-term rates are a barrier to robust expansion. More and more, economists say, executives are using not only long-term rates in making their investment decisions but also real, or inflation-adjusted, rates.

"When real rates are as high as they are now, that is truly a high hurdle that investment decisions have to clear," said Nicholas H. Perna, an economist at the General Electric Co. "Either prices have to rise more than you otherwise would attain or sales growth has to be incredibly rapid."

On Tuesday the prime rate was reduced by virtually all major banks, including the Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust Co. in Chicago and the Bank of America in San Francisco.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Lost savings bonds can be replaced

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Can anything be done about lost U.S. Savings Bonds? I believe an envelope in which I had a bunch of E bonds went off in the garbage when I cleaned out a drawer. I can't believe I was so careless. I've combed the house every day and even gotten up at night to recheck. But I can't find the bonds.

I do have a sheet of paper on which I wrote the serial number of each bond and the year I bought it. Is that of any use?

Doyle

A. Your record sheet will be a big help. Even without it, however, your problem can be solved.

Every lost, stolen, mutilated or destroyed U.S. Savings Bond can be replaced by a duplicate bond with the same issue date. Or, if you prefer, you can get cash for those bonds.

Write to Bureau of the Public Debt, 200 Third Street, Parkerburg, West Va. 26101. Explain what happened. You'll receive Form PD 1048. Fill out that form and send it back. You'll get either duplicate bonds or the redemption value of the bonds you lost, whichever is your choice.

The process will be expedited because you'll be able to provide details about the bonds — particulary the serial numbers and issue dates — from your record sheet. Your Social Security will also help, for bonds issued after Oct. 1, 1973. Before that date, Savings Bond buyers were not required to provide their SS numbers.

Without that information, the replacement might take a long time. Nonetheless, it's the proud boast of the U.S. Treasury Department that all lost, stolen, mutilated or destroyed Savings Bonds are replaced — upon proof of ownership.

Q. After my husband's death, I found a letter written to him by his mother. The letter said she was holding for him 26 $100 and three $25 U.S. Savings Bonds he purchased while in the Navy during World War II.

When I asked by mother-in-law about this, she said my husband had cashed the bonds. I know he did not do so during the 40 years we were married. I suspect my mother-in-law cashed the bonds.

You once wrote that the Bureau of the Public Debt has microfilm records of every Savings Bond ever issued. Can I find out if my husband's bond were cashed and, if so, by whom?

A. Yes, by contacting the bureau's Parkersburg, West Va., office. Besides microfilms of all Savings Bonds, there are records there of bonds that have been cashed and what bonds are still outstanding.

If the bonds were in co-ownership form — in your husband's name "or" his mother's name, she had the right to redeem them before or after your husband's death.

If the bond's were in beneficiary form — in your husband's name, payable on death to his mother — she had the right to redeem them after he died, by providing a certified copy of his death certificate.

However, if the bonds were not redeemed and are in single ownership form — in your husband's name alone — and you are his only heir, those bonds belong to you.

Q. Going through some old papers, I came across an incomplete book of 25-cent stamps for the "Postal Savings Plan for the purchase of U.S. Savings Bonds." I bought the stamps more than 45 years ago. They total $9.

Is there any way these stamps can be redeemed?

A. Banks and all other Savings Bond issuing agents are required to accept those old savings stamps in full or partial payment for the Series EE bonds now being sold. And Treasury Department regulations stipulate that issuing agent "may" but "are not required to" redeem those stamps for cash.

Take that savings stamp booklet to your bank and ask if you can get $9. If the bank refuses to give you cash, add $16 and buy the lowest denomination EE bond for $25.

The sale of those savings stamps — in denominations of 10, 25, 50 cents, $1 and $5 — was discontinued way back on July 1, 1970.

Portlanders to dress casual

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Portlanders will go casual today in their second annual observance of Mayor Bud Clark's "Dress As You Please Day."

Clark said the informality that was such a hit last year prompted him to make the event an August ritual.

Dress As You Please Day is aimed at confirming Portland's reputation as "America's most comfortable city," Clark said. Residents are encouraged to shed business suits, ties and dresses and go to work in whatever is comfortable.

Clark, who wore his trademark lederhosen on last year's Dress As You Please Day, won't be in town to observe this year's event. He plans to be spending the day casually, however, on vacation on the East Coast.

Frontier future up in the air, planes grounded

DENVER (AP) — Frontier Airlines, grounded since Sunday morning, remained on the sale block today despite its $1 million-a-day losses and bankruptcy court loomed as the operation's final option.

"We are talking with certain parties who have expressed an interest in Frontier Airlines," Donald C. Burr, chairman of the parent firm People Express, said in a statement. "Pending the outcome of these discussions, Frontier is refraining from making its bankruptcy filing. We regret the continuing uncertainty for everyone involved, but we are anxious to explore fully all possible alternatives to bankruptcy."

Marilyn Mishkin, a spokeswoman for Frontier, said the carrier is losing $1 million a day with its planes out of service.

"That's what it costs for leases and a whole combination of other things," she said. "Absolutely no revenue is coming in to offset those costs. It's not a situation that can continue for very long."

United Airlines reached agreement with People Express last month to buy Frontier for $146 million contingent on reaching agreement with Frontier's five labor unions.

Negotiations between the pilots' union and United have been fruitless.

Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm on Tuesday telephoned officials at United, Frontier and ALPA urging them to continue trying to resolve the problem.

Lamm also offered any services that might help find a solution to prevent bankruptcy proceedings.

"He encouraged them to try and stick with it and get a mutually acceptable agreement that will keep the planes flying," said Jennifer Gavin, a spokeswoman for the governor.

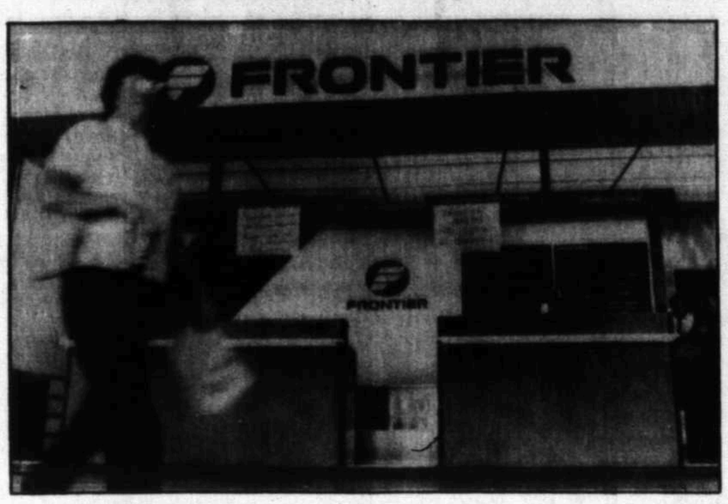

Jamie Lindsay, vice chairman of the Air Lines Pilot Association, said he has heard that United and People were close to an agreement at a lower price. United already has paid People Express $58 million for some of Frontier's assets.

People Express bought Frontier last November for $307 million and reported losses of $10 million a month for the first half of the year.

Mishkin said last Friday's payroll was met but added that she didn't know whether Frontier's 4,700 employees will be paid on Sept. 12.

"If we were to file for bankruptcy, we will ask the court to honor that (last Friday's) payroll," Mishkin said.

Frontier, formed nearly 40 years ago and based in Denver, served 55 cities, including four in Canada, when it was grounded by People Express. It was the nation's 15th largest air carrier.

Frontier shutdown shows holding ticket no guarantee

WASHINGTON (AP) — The shutdown of Frontier Airlines, stranding 17,000 travelers and leaving hundreds more with seats on future flights that may never be, shows that having an airline ticket does not necessarily mean a guaranteed flight.

"When a company files bankruptcy, travelers are pretty much left to their own devices," said Hoyte Decker, chief of the Transportation Department's consumer office. "It's going to depend almost entirely on what other carriers are willing to do on a voluntary basis."

While several air carriers — United, Continental and Western — have honored Frontier tickets on standby since it halted operations last weekend, the airlines were not required to do so and acted largely out of a desire to woo customers in the hotly contested Denver market.

American Airlines, which is not as dependent on the Denver business as the other three carriers, argued that Frontier already owes it more than $1 million and refused to honor the tickets.

Government and industry sources said even if Frontier survives or is absorbed by another airline, travelers likely will have to accept future travel vouchers instead of refunds. And if the airline goes bankrupt it may be years before a ticket holder will get even a partial reimbursement since customers are far down the list of creditors in bankruptcy proceedings.

Last week, the American Society of Travel Agents called on Congress to create a $100 million revolving fund to protect air travelers against financial losses because of airline bankruptcies.

Travelers would be able to get reimbursed for tickets that were never used. The fund also would prompt competing airlines to provide alternate transportation because the airlines would be assured of full payment.

Similar proposals have been seen before but the travel agents' idea has yet to find a sponsor in Congress for legislation creating the fund, which would be financed through a 25-cent ticket surcharge.

Several Transportation Department sources said the proposal isn't even being discussed within the department.

"If this plan isn't implemented, there will be no plan at all," said Chris Witkowski, executive director of the Aviation Consumer Action Project, an advocacy group founded by consumer activist Ralph Nader. He said there's no indication the airlines want to put together a travelers' protection plan of their own.

Until a few years ago the airlines had a government-sanctioned travelers protection plan, which required that all participating airlines accept the ticket of a failed airline on a standby basis as long as the ticket was sold through a travel agent.

The system, approved by the Civil Aeronautics Board, provided help to thousands of travelers stranded after the failure of Braniff Airways in 1982. But two years later when Continental Airlines shut down only to reemerge as a low-cost airline under bankruptcy protection, the industry's traveler protection plan fell apart.

"The financially strong airlines didn't want to support the weak airlines," recalls Conrad Blomberg of Regatta Travel in the Denver suburb of Aurora.

Texas Air confident of merger approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Air Corp. says it remains "absolutely confident" its proposed $676 million purchase of Eastern Airlines will win federal approval, despite government rejection of the deal because of concerns about competition.

"We are studying ... a number of options available to Texas Air and we are still confident that the merger with Eastern will be completed quickly," said Bruce Hicks, spokesman for Texas Air.

DOT rejects Texas Air acquisition bid

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The Transportation Department Tuesday rejected Texas Air Corp.'s $600 million bid to acquire Eastern Airlines, but indicated it might approve the merger if further steps are taken to strengthen competition on the busy Washington-New York-Boston shuttle routes.

The proposed merger would unite Eastern and Texas Air's New York Air unit, the two dominant shuttle competitors, in the biggest combination in the airline industry. To meet the government's concerns about a loss of competition, Texas Air agreed to limit its flights on those routes and to sell some of its landing rights at Washington's National Airport and LaGuardia Airport in New York to Pan American World Airways for $65 million. Pan Am plans to launch a new Washington-New York-Boston shuttle service on Oct. 1 whether or not the merger is approved.

But the Transportation Department concluded that Pan American would not have enough landing rights and facilities to offer effective competition to Eastern's shuttle. The government turned down the merger on those grounds.

Landing rights, or "slots," at National and LaGuardia are limited by the Federal Aviation Administration because of congestion at those airports. The number of slots Pan Am bought would leave gaps in its shuttle services at times of peak travel.

The gaps "would preclude (Pan Am) from offering a service competitive with the Eastern shuttle, which has flights at every hour and which guarantees that seats will be available to all passengers at all times," the Transportation Department ruled. The gaps in Pan Am's service would be a fatal handicap to its hopes of attracting the business customers.

Turn Summer's Sunny Bounty Into Delicious Supper Dishes

There they are, popping out all over the vegetable garden, overflowing from the bushel baskets at the farm stand . . . the delicious harvest of summer. Plump scarlet tomatoes, brilliant red and green peppers, polished purple eggplant and squash galore – emerald zucchini and yellow crooknecks, in sizes from midget to giant. The herbs are there, too – basil, chives, dillweed, parsley and more – shooting up in carefully tended garden plots or window boxes, thriving in pots at roadside stands and tied up in generous bundles at the supermarket produce section.

Chef Kathleen Sanderson, anticipating all this plenty, has put her creative talents to work to come up with dishes that use these wonderful vegetables to best advantage. Her recipes are innovative and delicious, combining summer vegetables in wonderful ways with herbs and cereals to bring out all their goodness. Here, her versatile quintet of summer vegetable dishes.

Curried Stuffed Zucchini

Summer's plentiful zucchini becomes a favorite, done this simple but spectacular way.

2 large (or 3 medium) zucchini
3 tablespoons olive oil
1 medium onion, diced
2 medium tomatoes, cored and diced
1 cup whole wheat and bran cereal with raisins, pineapple, peanuts and coconut
1-1/2 teaspoons curry powder
1/4 cup chopped parsley*
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper

*Or use 4 teaspoons parsley flakes.

- Halve zucchini lengthwise and remove seeds; brush with a little olive oil and place on a 15x10x1-inch baking pan.
- Saute onion in remaining olive oil until tender; add tomatoes and cook until mixture is dry. Crush cereal and add with curry powder, parsley, salt and pepper; mix well and cool.
- Divide stuffing among zucchini halves. Pour 1/4 cup water into pan around zucchini; cover tightly with foil. (This will help steam the zucchini.) Bake at 375° for 10 to 12 minutes; then remove foil and bake 10 minutes longer.
- Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Herb Stuffed Mushrooms

(Not shown)

An elegant first course or a flavorful side dish for summer meals, mushrooms with a savory cereal-wine-and-herb stuffing.

16 large mushrooms
1 medium onion, diced
4 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/4 cup sherry or Madeira wine
1 cup whole wheat and bran cereal, any variety
1/4 cup chopped parsley*
2 tablespoons chopped chives*
1 tablespoon chopped dillweed*
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese

*Or use 4 teaspoons parsley flakes, 2 teaspoons freeze-dried chives and 1 teaspoon dried dillweed.

- Remove stems from mushrooms and chop finely. Saute onion and mushroom stems in 2 tablespoons butter for 2 to 3 minutes. Add sherry and cook until wine is absorbed and mixture is dry. Crush cereal and combine with herbs, pepper and cheese. Add to mushroom stems and mix well.
- Melt remaining 2 tablespoons butter; brush over mushroom caps. Place 1-1/2 to 2 tablespoons of mixture in each mushroom and place on baking sheet. Bake at 375° for 10 to 12 minutes; then broil 1 minute or until browned.
- Makes 16 mushrooms or 4 servings.

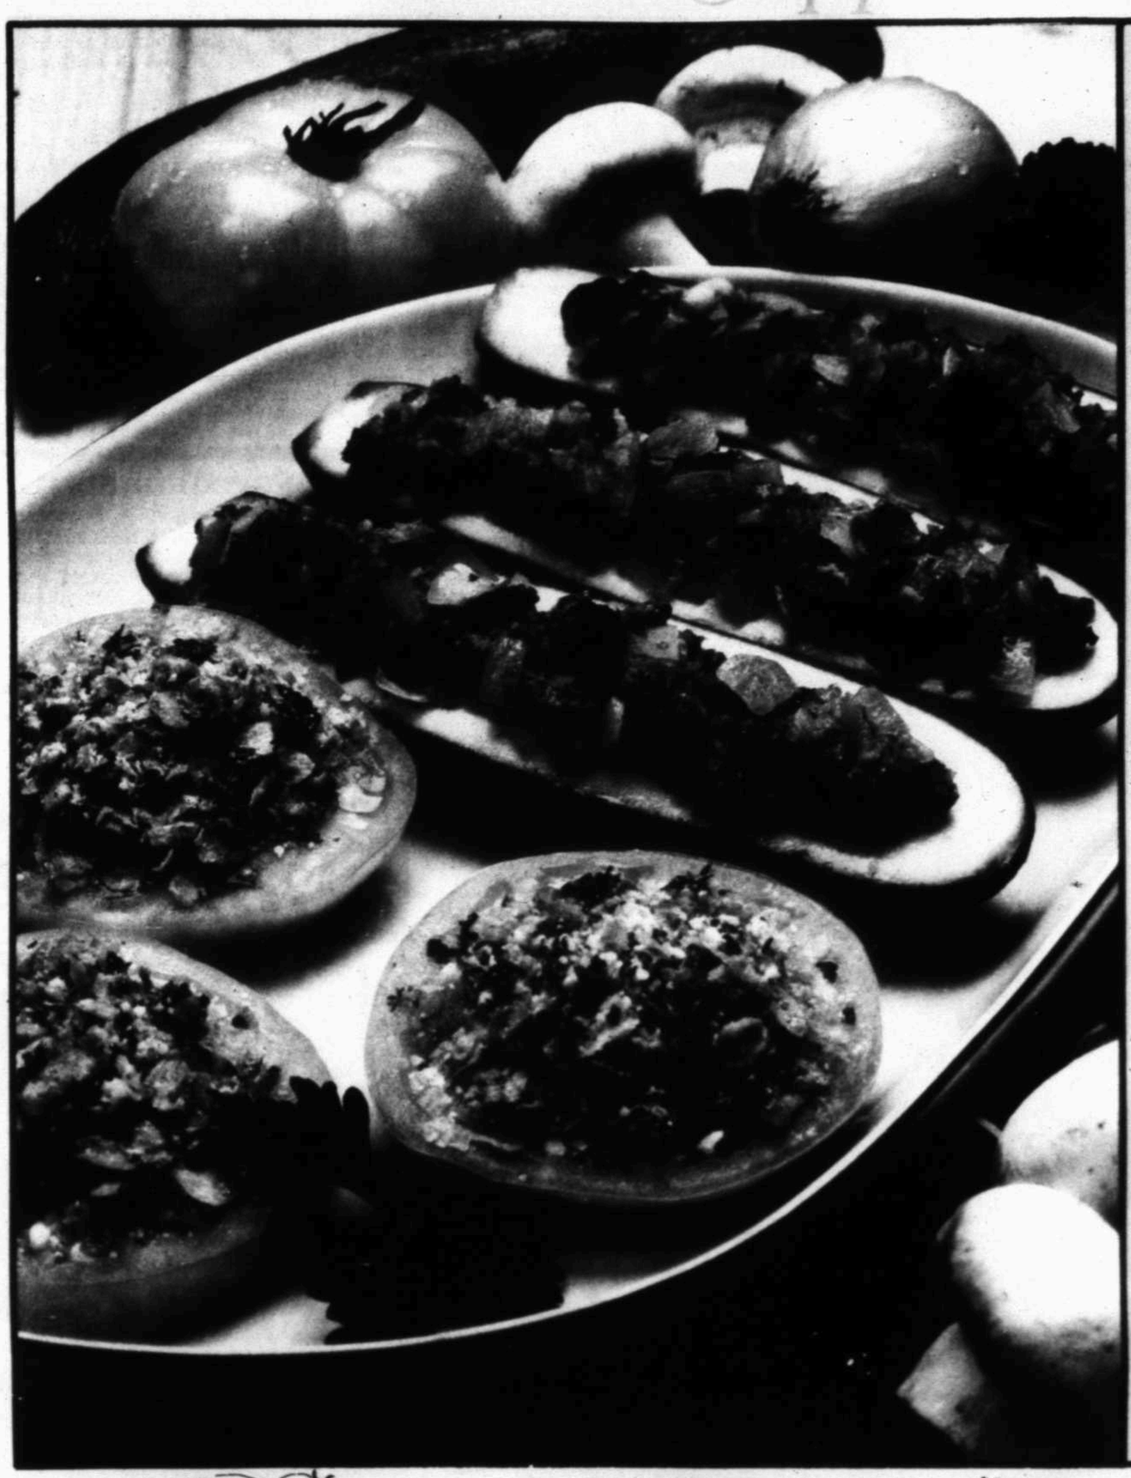

Summer Bounty Notes

Bigger is not necessarily better . . . when it comes to summer vegetables, and herbs, as well. The mammoth zucchini, the outsized tomato, may look impressive but will probably not have as delicious a flavor as smaller varieties. Herbs, too, may thrive and have luxuriant foliage, but may have less flavor than scrawnier specimens. Herbs, in fact, need just average, not rich, soil, but lots of sun; highly fertilized soil produces herbs with lush leaves, but scant flavor.

About olive oil . . . Note that Chef Sanderson uses olive oil in most of these recipes, because of the special mellow flavor it imparts to these particular summer vegetables. But, olive oil, though a monounsaturated oil and better for you than most fats, is still a fat; she uses it judiciously, since hers is a light approach to food preparation. In the Ratatouille recipe, for example, she uses olive oil for sauteing the eggplant (a notorious absorber of oil), but then suggests adding water rather than more oil to continue cooking the eggplant after the first oil is absorbed. In the Stuffed Zucchini recipe, the zucchini halves are brushed with oil, rather than sauteed in it, then steamed in the pan with water to make them tender.

Out-of-season alternatives . . . If fresh herbs are not available, Chef Sanderson has suggested dried alternatives. Note, that whenever substituting dry herbs for fresh, you should use considerably less, about one-third the amount, as the dried variety has more intense flavor.

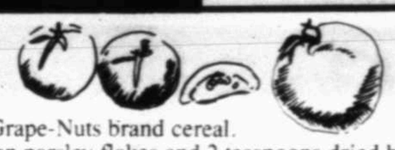

Two flavorful ways with the bountiful vegetables of summer: Tomatoes Persile, thick juicy slices with an herb-and-cereal topping; and Curried Stuffed Zucchini, as delicious as they are colorful.

Tomatoes Persile

When the thought of another tomato salad calls, try tomatoes this way, topped with cereal, herbs and cheese and lightly baked.

1 cup Grape-Nuts flakes or natural bran flakes*
1/4 cup chopped parsley
2 tablespoons chopped fresh basil
1/3 cup grated Parmesan cheese
4 or 5 large tomatoes
3 tablespoons olive oil
Black pepper to taste

*Or use 1/2 cup Grape-Nuts brand cereal.
Or use 1 tablespoon parsley flakes and 2 teaspoons dried basil.

- Crush cereal and combine with parsley, basil and cheese.
- Slice tomatoes 1/2 inch thick and arrange in a 13x9-inch casserole. Pour olive oil evenly over tomatoes and season with pepper. Top with cereal mixture. Bake at 400° for 12 to 15 minutes.
- Makes 6 servings.

Ratatouille Au Gratin

(Not shown)

A new way with the traditional Mediterranean medley . . . the vegetables are baked in a crunchy cereal topping.

1 cup Grape-Nuts flakes or natural bran flakes*
1/4 cup chopped parsley
1 tablespoon fresh chopped basil
1 teaspoon fresh oregano

1 small eggplant, cut into 1-inch cubes
5 tablespoons olive oil
3 tablespoons water

1 small onion, sliced
1 large green pepper, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
2 medium zucchini, sliced 1/4 inch thick
1/4 teaspoon black pepper
1 can (15 oz.) tomato sauce
4 ounces grated provolone cheese

*Or use 1/2 cup Grape-Nuts brand cereal.
Or use 4 teaspoons parsley flakes, 1 teaspoon dried basil or 1/4 teaspoon dried oregano.

- Crush cereal and combine with herbs, mixing well. Set aside.
- Saute eggplant in 2 tablespoons of oil. When oil has been absorbed, add water and continue to cook until eggplant is tender. Remove from pan.
- In remaining 3 tablespoons oil, saute onion and green pepper for 2 to 3 minutes. Add zucchini and cook until tender. Add eggplant, pepper and tomato sauce.
- Pour into 2-1/2- to 3-quart casserole. Sprinkle with cereal mixture and top with grated cheese. Bake at 375° for 20 to 25 minutes, or until browned and bubbly.
- Makes 6 servings.

Herbed Garden Tart

(Not shown)

Fresh dillweed adds a distinctive flavor note to this quiche-like tart; crushed cereal makes an easy and delicious crust.

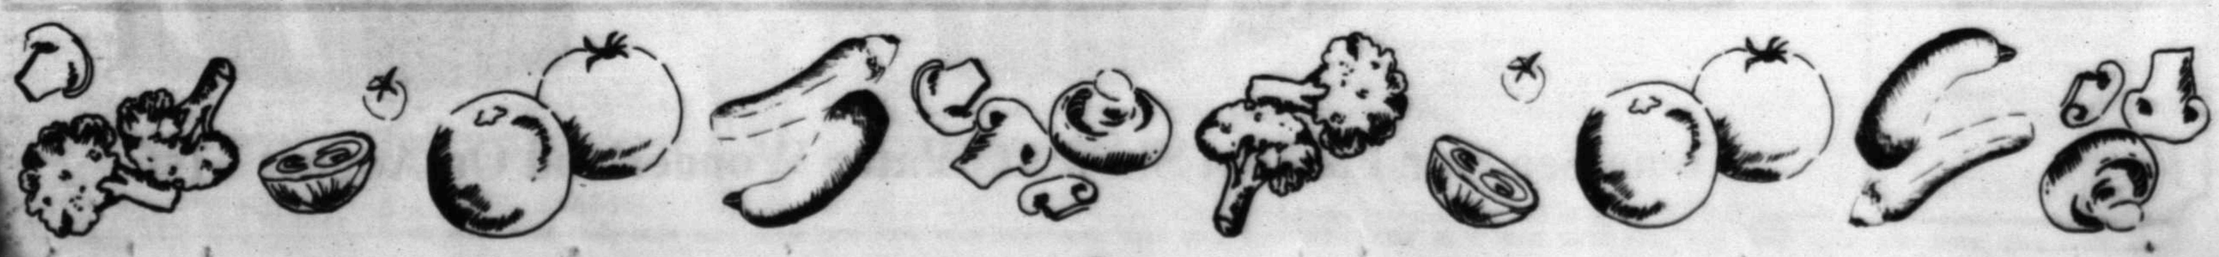

2 cups Grape-Nuts flakes or natural bran flakes*
6 tablespoons unsalted butter or margarine, melted
4 tablespoons fresh chopped dillweed

1 medium onion, diced
1 tablespoon olive oil
2 cups broccoli florets
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper

5 eggs
1-1/2 cups half and half
1/8 teaspoon nutmeg
1 cup grated cheddar cheese

*Or use 1-1/2 cups Grape-Nuts brand cereal.
Or use 4 teaspoons dried dillweed.

- Crush cereal and combine with 5 tablespoons melted butter and 2 tablespoons dillweed. Mix well and press into bottom and halfway up the side of a 9-inch springform pan or a 9-inch square pan.
- Saute onion in remaining 1 tablespoon butter and the olive oil for 2 to 3 minutes. Add broccoli and continue to saute until tender, 3 to 4 minutes. Season with salt, pepper and remaining dillweed. Cool slightly.
- Combine eggs, half and half and nutmeg; mix well.
- Layer vegetables and grated cheese in pan; pour in egg mixture and place pan on baking sheet. Bake at 350° for 1 hour. Remove from oven and let stand 5 to 10 minutes. Run knife around the edge of pan before removing side.
- Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Bagels developing new popularity in Japan

New York Times News Service

TOKYO — Often, first-time customers do not approach the counter so much as circle it, their faces scrunched in a tentative, what-is-this look. "How garlicky is the garlic?" they ask. "What does the onion taste like? Is the poppy seed better than the plain?"

From behind her counter in the Seibu department store just off the Ginza, Junko Sassamoto fields questions with the assurance of someone telling newcomers for perhaps the thousandth time that the round items with the big holes in the middle are not what they suspect. "Some of them think it's a doughnut," she said. "I have to tell them it's bread."

What it really is, as might have been guessed, is a bagel, and it joins the many Western transplants that have secured a niche in Japan in the last few years. Not that bagels are going to replace rice or noodles as a Japanese carbohydrate staple. But a growing number of people here find that smoked fish tastes as good on a slice of round bread as on a bed of rice. In the process, they have turned a bearded 36-year-old Chicagoan named Lyle Fox from a struggling student in search of a profession into Japan's pre-eminent bagel man.

FOX, WHO STARTED his business four years ago, did not introduce the bagel to Japan. Several large bread companies did that before him. But no one has done more than he to popularize it, and he suspects "the sky's the limit" for future growth.

"Strangely enough," he said, "I see more potential in Japan than in the States."

His customers are young Japanese, most of them women who see the bagel as vaguely trendy, reasonably upscale and not bad to eat, at that. They are people like Miyuki Okazato, a college student who wandered into Seibu one recent day and bought several of the plain and sesame seed varieties.

Okazato could not hold forth on the relative merits of belly lox and Scotch salmon, but she knew what she liked about bagels. "They go well with cheese and ham," she said.

Purists may blanch, but the point is that bagels have arrived.

Fox produces 6,000 bagels a day: plain, whole-wheat, onion, garlic, poppy, sesame seed and cinnamon-raisin — the big favorite here. When he began, customers tended to be expatriates in need of a bagel-and-shmeer fix. Now, the overwhelming majority are Japanese, he said.

His shop on the western edge of Tokyo's popular Roppongi district is, like many stores in Japan, about the size of a decent walk-in closet. But his main outlets are in two large Tokyo department stores, Seibu and Takashimaya, and in shops in the central Japanese cities of Osaka, Kobe and Kyoto.

FOX SUPPLIES three coffee shops in Nagasaki, in addition to more predictable customers such as the American Club. (Tokyo's Jewish community center makes its own.) By September, when he will expand to a Takashimaya branch in Yokohama, he expects to sell 8,000 a day.

At 50 cents a bagel, he makes a living. It is augmented by sales of more expensive items such as several cream cheese spreads, including one with soy sauce and dried bonito shavings.

Why would a bagel appeal in Japan?

The question is best answered perhaps with another question.

Why not?

Despite a tendency of Americans to marvel when they see Japanese and other Asians enjoying things associated in the United States with European ethnic groups, there is almost nothing that cannot be found in Tokyo. That is especially true of food.

Of the bagel's appeal, Fox said he finds that "Japanese associate it with New York, and they associate New York with fashion. A lot of our customers are these young women who consider the bagel as sort of another accessory."

For the Japanese palate and eye, he makes bagels smaller, softer and more uniformly even in shape than the outsized, frequently uneven varieties sold in the United States.

FOX DID NOT set out to become bagel man to Japan. He arrived in 1979 as a student of Japanese language and culture, worked unhappily at an English-language newspaper, then decided to shift careers. Plans to open a restaurant with a Japanese partner fell through, and Fox then set his sights on bagel-making as a relatively easy and inexpensive endeavor for someone with little start-up money.

But Japanese immigration authorities could not understand why he would want to alter his life so dramatically, and they repeatedly refused to give him the necessary change in visa status to begin a business. Permission did not come until he married a Japanese woman in 1982, and, through her, acquired the status that enabled him to enter the bagel business.

Broccoli puff perfect for brunch

Weekend brunch is a comfortable, laid-back way to entertain. The late morning timing works well for families as well as all-adult groups. Plan an easy menu so you can manage preparations without a predawn wake-up call. A bowl of luscious fresh fruit can double as centerpiece and first course. Make and freeze a coffee cake, rolls or muffins the weekend before and reheat in the microwave oven.

BROCCOLI EGG PUFF

1 pound broccoli
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
5 beaten eggs
1 cup cream-style cottage cheese
4 slices bacon, crisp-cooked, drained and crumbled

In a small mixing bowl stir together flour and baking powder; set aside. In a medium mixing bowl beat eggs. With a wire whisk or rotary beater, beat in flour mixture. Stir in cottage cheese and bacon.

Evenly spread broccoli in the bottom of a greased 10 x 6 x 2-inch baking dish. Pour egg mixture evenly over broccoli. Bake, uncovered, in a 350-degree oven for 20 minutes. Sprinkle with cheddar or Swiss cheese. Bake 3 minutes more or until center is almost set and cheese is melted. Let stand 5 minutes before serving. Makes 6 servings.

Professor: Crop caused slower development

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Civilization got off to a slow start in Mexico, lagging some 5,000 years behind civilization in the fertile crescent of the Middle East. A University of Wisconsin professor of botany thinks the delay can be blamed on differences in plants.

Speaking at a recent international symposium, Hugh Iltis said New World civilization developed slowly because the basic food crop first cultivated in Mexico was corn.

He said the process of deriving corn from wild plants was "maybe 50 times more complex" than the development of wheat and other crops in the Middle East.

Iltis said agriculture in the Old World started 10,000 years ago with the sowing and reaping of wild plant seeds. Over the years, farmers selected grains with seed pods that didn't shatter and that could be easily gathered and stored.

He said the early Old World farmers may have taken a few agricultural lessons from golden hamsters and other seed-gathering mammals that lived in the area, learning to hoard seeds over the winter.

"They may even have dug out some of the hamsters' seed stashes, and taken those seeds," Iltis said.

By contrast, the New World farmers did not have it so easy. There were no plants well suited to agriculture, and no seed-hoarding mammals to learn from.

The only potential grain the New World people had to work with was an unpromising mutant derived from a plant called teosinte.

"It took five, six, maybe seven thousand years for this plant to evolve into an integrated, food-producing plant," Iltis said.

The original teosinte plant can still be found today, but only in one three-acre area in the Jalisco region of Mexico. Iltis called the plant "absolutely useless — teosinte seeds have a steel-hard outer covering." He said the seeds were virtually inedible except when green.

In addition, the teosinte plant had only six or twelve grains on each tiny ear.

Iltis said the first step in the development of corn as we know it today involved a "catastrophic sexual transmutation" that converted the tip of some male tassels into "the uniquely monstrous, many-ranked ears" that are now the edible female ears of corn.

After this complex transformation, it was up to the early farmers to select mutant teosinte plants that were more edible and easier to cultivate. Iltis said these changes were much more complex than the changes that made Old World plants useful.

Modern agriculture continues to tinker with corn and teosinte. Iltis said plant breeders are crossing the two plants to derive perennial corn that would not have to be planted each year, and that would be resistant to viruses.

Baking soda, baking powder common leavening ingredients

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

If you're a baker, you've probably got baking soda and baking powder in your cupboard.

Like yeast, these are used for leavening — but unlike yeast, they require no rising time. Baking soda and baking powder are the most commonly used leavening for quick breads, muffins, cookies, hot cakes, etc.

What's the difference between the two? Baking soda is generally used in recipes with acid ingredients, and with more alkaline ingredients, baking powder is called for.

In the oven, heat and moisture cause baking soda (also known as sodium bicarbonate or bicarbonate of soda) to release a gas, carbon dioxide, which "raises" the batter. Baking soda is alkaline, and must be balanced by some acidic ingredient (such as buttermilk, molasses or fruit juice) to avoid a soapy-tasting product.

Baking powder often contains baking soda (which provides the essential carbon dioxide) but adds its own acid component. Three main types of acid are used: tartrate, phosphate and double-acting.

The first contains acidic cream of tartar, which releases lots of gas quickly, before the batter reaches the oven. Recipes using tartrate-based baking powder usually call for more of it, and the batter must be hurried to the oven for adequate leavening.

To make your own tartrate-type baking powder, combine one teaspoon cream of tartar with one-half teaspoon each baking soda and cornstarch or arrowroot. Mix only as much as you need for immediate use, as the mixture loses its "umph" with storage.

The phosphate-based version releases about two-thirds of its gases at room temperature, and the remaining third during the baking process, so there's not quite the same rush to get the batter into the oven.

Double-acting baking powder contains two acid ingredients: sodium aluminum sulphate and calcium acid phosphate. "Double-acting" means that it releases a small part of its gases at room temperature, but the majority on a second rising at oven temperature. With this type, you can even refrigerate the batter and bake later in the day, and it will still rise.

The double-acting type produces better and more consistent leavening, but it has its own drawbacks, as its aluminum compounds can irritate the stomach.

Baking soda contains a great deal of sodium (1,360 milligrams to the teaspoon). Commercially mixed baking powders vary: tartrate-based contains about 200 milligrams to the teaspoon, while the double-acting type is about 100 milligrams higher.

If you want to limit your sodium intake (and avoid the aluminum compounds in some commercial brands), you can prepare your own saltless baking powder: combine two teaspoons arrowroot, two teaspoons cream of tartar, and one teaspoon potassium bicarbonate. Use in an amount equivalent to normal baking powder.

BAKING POWDER BISCUITS

1½ cups whole wheat flour
1½ cups unbleached white flour
1½ tablespoons tartrate-type baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt (optional)
¾ cup butter or margarine
¾ cup milk or buttermilk
3 eggs, lightly beaten

Preheat oven to 450 F.

Sift together flours, baking powder and salt into medium mixing bowl, adding any bran that remains in sifter.

With pastry cutter or fork, cut in butter until mixture resembles fine meal.

In small bowl, combine milk or buttermilk and eggs. Add to flour mixture, tossing well to moisten.

Shape dough into ball and knead gently for about 30 seconds. Place on floured board and roll out to ½-inch thickness.

Cut dough into rounds with biscuit cutter or edge of glass. Place on ungreased cookie sheet and bake 8 to 10 minutes, until tops are lightly browned.

Makes about 2 dozen biscuits.

IRISH SODA BREAD

8 cups whole wheat flour
1 tablespoon baking soda
1 teaspoon salt (optional)
1 quart buttermilk

Preheat oven to 400 F.

Sift dry ingredients into large mixing bowl. Make well in center; pour buttermilk into well and stir gently to make a smooth, slightly sticky dough.

Divide dough in half and place on floured board. Shape each half into round loaf and transfer to oiled baking sheet.

With lightly floured hands, flatten each loaf to about 2 inches thick. Score a deep "X" on each loaf with sharp knife.

Bake bread 30 to 35 minutes, until bread sounds hollow when tapped.

Makes 2 (8-inch) round loaves. (These are best eaten warm.)

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Seeking a fun collector's item in observance of the Statue of Liberty's 100th birthday, the J.C. Penney Co. came up with something quite outside its usual business endeavors.

The firm surveyed the entire nation, gathering recipes from a host of celebrities ranging from entertainers to sports figures, politicians to fashion designers.

The result is the "Salute to American Celebrity Cookbook," which the department store chain is currently marketing.

Here is Georgia boy Burt Reynolds' recipe for Blackened Swordfish With Chardonnay and Lime Butter, served at his dinner theater in Florida.

BURT REYNOLDS' BLACKENED SWORDFISH

1 8-ounce swordfish fillet per person
Lime twist for garnish
MARINADE (Per Fillet):
2 tablespoons olive oil
½ tablespoon wine vinegar
¼ ounce chardonnay
¼ teaspoon coarse salt
1 clove garlic, minced
Seasoning Mix (Per Fillet):
¾ teaspoon oregano
¾ teaspoon thyme
¾ teaspoon marjoram
¼ teaspoon cayenne pepper
½ teaspoon black pepper
½ teaspoon salt
Lime Butter (For 8 Fillets):
1 cup whipped butter
2 limes, zest and juice
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon black pepper
½ ounce chardonnay

Mix the marinade and the seasonings separately, then blend Lime Butter ingredients in a food processor. Marinate the fish in the marinade for about 1 hour, then coat it with the seasoning mix.

Get a large, cast iron skillet very hot and lay the seasoned fish inside. After 5 minutes, check it with your finger to see whether the flesh is firm.

Turn fillet over in pan — 1 to 2 minutes more should be enough. Be careful not to overcook. Top with Lime Butter and garnish with a twist of lime.

WHAT'S COOKING

Family's favorite foods flavorful

Ron Jaap/Reporter-Telegram
Mary Beth Soto

Mary Beth Soto, fitness instructor and fitness coordinator with Central YMCA in Midland, recently had her duties increased — she gave birth to her son Aug. 18.

She is now the mother of three children and oversees "all prenatal and post partum classes" at Central and trains instructors of these classes, she said. "Before I had the baby I was doing five classes a week, up to the Friday before he was born on Monday."

Mrs. Soto has worked with the YMCA for about six years, she said. "I've taught almost everything." She concentrates now on the prenatal and postpartum classes, which are good "beginning classes for people who have never exercised. It's a good class to start in. They were designed for pregnant women and (those) recovering" from childbirth, but are not limited to this group. Her average class consists of 15-20 students, Mrs. Soto said, with about 10 class members being pregnant or post-delivery.

Because she is a working wife and mother, quick and easy dishes are a must — but she must also try to please the children's tastes. The following recipe for Chicken Enchilada Pie is one of the family's favorites.

"It's pretty fast," Mrs. Soto said. "You can even make them and freeze them, then take them out later and throw them in the oven.

"I go for lower calories; instead of frying the tortillas I steam them. I guess the most fattening thing is the cheese, but you gotta have cheese..."

The dish is a versatile one, too — it can be prepared with turkey, hamburger or other meats. It also can be prepared meatless using cheese, sour cream, onions or more spices added to it.

CHICKEN ENCHILADA PIE
4 tablespoons vegetable oil
⅓ cup flour
1 tablespoon chili powder
4 cups water
Salt and pepper to taste
1 pound Monterey Jack cheese, shredded
1 small chicken, boiled and boned
20 to 24 corn tortillas

ENCHILADA SAUCE: In 10-inch skillet, add flour to oil; cook and stir constantly until thickened and bubbly. Add chili powder to flour and oil, cook until completely mixed. Add water, bring to boil; simmer until desired consistency. Salt and pepper to taste.

PREPARATION: Steam corn tortillas and allow to sit, one at a time, in hot enchilada sauce for a few seconds. In 8x12-inch round cake pan, sprayed with non-stick spray, place two tortillas to partially cover bottom. Repeat in second cake pan.

Layer chicken and cheese. Continue with layering tortillas, chicken, then cheese, ending with layer of cheese.

Pour remaining sauce over the two pies. Place in 350 degree oven for 15 minutes. Remove and let stand a few minutes before serving.

Serve with wedge of lettuce and pinto beans.

Makes two pies.

DEAR ABBY

'Lassie' story is tale that wags

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the questions a reader posed about Lassie, the famous collie who starred in the television series "Lassie":

I wrote for the show from its earliest years (1955 until 1971), and was occasionally required to be on the set during the filming.

You are correct.

There were many Lassies over the years. And not only were there many "look-alikes," but several were used at the same time. Some were better for long shots (running through woods) and others were better for close-ups.

Perhaps the most interesting fact is that all the Lassies were males — "in drag," so to speak.

I don't know why, but I believe their trainer, Rudd Weatherwax, who died a few years ago, felt males were easier to train and handle, and, of course, they didn't suffer from PMS.

Anyway, the gender problem was well covered by the collies' luxurious coats. — JOAN SCOTT, LOS ANGELES

DEAR JOAN: Thanks for the interesting input. The Lassie letter created quite a stir.

One Jean Dolezal, who writes "Canine Corner" in the Bloomington, Ind., Herald Times, consigned me to the doghouse when her daughter, on reading my column, blurted out, "Mom, can this be true? Abby says Lassie was a mixed breed!"

Dolezal wrote: "It was hard to tell who was more surprised, mother or daughter.

"Abigail Van Buren, whose information came from the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, wrote: 'While the original Lassie was not a purebred collie, she certainly looked like one.' She states that the six collies who later portrayed Lassie were all purebred collies and looked so much like the original that they could not be told apart.

"Considering the fact that each Lassie has been a son of the previous one, it is difficult to figure out how the original was not purebred but the next six were, as Abby stated.

"Would some of the area's collie breeders know more about Lassie's pedigree?

I have never seen an AKC registered collie advertised as descended from any of these famous collies. Could Lassie and all the offspring have been pedigreed, purebred collies but not AKC registered?"

Well, readers, fearful that I had been barking up the wrong tree, I again contacted Mr. Craig Campbell, my canine connection at the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences — all set to pick a bone with him.

He repeated that although the original Lassie certainly "looked like" a purebred collie, it had never been registered, so although it may have been a purebred pedigreed collie, it cannot be accepted as one.

So, dear readers, since the original Lassie is not a bona fide purebreed, then it follows that all subsequent descendants were not.

If you are still reading and want to learn more about Lassie, trot down to your public libary and fetch "The Story of Lassie" by Rudd Weatherwax.

DEAR ABBY: I was very much interested in how one female reader warned a male that his zipper was open.

She said she was brought up on Shakespeare, so the code signal she used was, "Woe is me, for I am undone."

She must have been exposed to the Bible as well. The text she cites is Isaiah 6:5. — ROBERT S. BRIGHTMAN, PASTOR, UNITED METHODIST CHURCH, MYSTIC, CONN.

Tips, contest given for trout

By Merle Ellis

Ray Cooper is a sportsman. There are some who would call him one of the country's leading sportsmen in the areas of hunting and fishing. He writes a newspaper for hunters and fishermen in Arkansas called "Ray Cooper's Outdoors." He does a nationally syndicated TV show titled "It's People Who Fish." He is also a darn good cook.

I've gone hunting and fishing with Ray, and one of the greatest meals in my memory was grilled trout that he cooked over the coals after a fine day on the Little Red River at Heber Springs, Ark. Ray simply seasoned the fish with salt and pepper, spread a special fresh mint mixture inside, wrapped each in a slice of bacon and tossed 'em on the grill over hot coals. Trout, or any other fish, must not be overcooked. It should be moist and fork-tender. Overcooking makes the fish dry and tough. Trout is done when it flakes easily when probed with a fork. Ray figures about one minute per ounce of trout when you cook it in its natural (but cleaned) form, which is the way he recommends even when grilling it boneless.

Ray, in addition to all those other things I've told you of, is executive director of the United States Trout Farmers Association, sponsor of the upcoming second annual National Rainbow Trout Cooking Contest. This year's winner will receive $1,500 and an all-expense-paid vacation in Asheville, North Carolina.

Recipes do not have to be for grilled trout; they may be for any category or type so long as rainbow trout is the main ingredient. Judging will be based on simplicity, appearance, flavor and availability of ingredients. All recipe entries must be submitted by October 15, 1986.

For information on entering the Second Annual National Rainbow Trout Cooking Contest, write to: Ray Cooper, 515 Tock Street, Little Rock, Arkansas 72202.

Here are a couple of Ray's trout recipes to inspire you.

RAY'S MINTED TROUT

4 dressed whole trout about 10 ounces each
2 cups fresh mint leaves
2 teaspoons salt, preferably coarse sea salt
4 tablespoon vegetable oil
4 strips bacon

Rinse trout and dry well. Brush each with some of the vegetable oil. Mash the fresh mint along with the salt in a mortar to release the intensity of the mint; or use a food processor. Add what's left of the vegetable oil and mix well. Spread the mint mixture on the inside of the trout; wrap each with a strip of bacon. Grill over hot coals, 4 to 6 inches from the heat for 4 to 5 minutes. Roll the trout over with a spatula and grill for an additional 4 to 5 minutes or until the trout flakes when tested with a fork. Serves 4.

RAY COOPER'S CAJUN RAINBEAUX TROUT

6-8 boneless trout filets
1 16-ounces package crawfish tails
2 cups fresh mushrooms, sliced thin
½ pounds butter (approx.)
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup heavy cream
1 cup white wine (approx.)
½ teaspoon salt (or to taste)
¼ teaspoon each red pepper, white pepper and black pepper

Pat the filets dry with paper towels. Thaw and pat dry the crawfish tails. Slice the mushrooms.

Melt two or three tablespoons of the butter in a heavy skillet. Saute the trout filets two or three at a time adding more butter as necessary. Set aside in a warm oven.

Saute the mushrooms, set aside.

Add enough butter to the drippings in the pan to make approximately three tablespoons. Stir in three tablespoons of flour to make a roux. Cook, stirring until the roux is a soft golden color. Stir in the cream. Add as much of the white wine as it takes to make a sauce of the desired consistency. It should be as smooth as velvet, not too thick or too thin. Season with salt and the three peppers.

Add the crawfish tails and mushrooms to the sauce and cook, stirring to warm through. Spread a layer of sauce on a large, warm serving platter. Arrange the sauteed trout filets on top of the sauce. Drizzle a bit more sauce over the trout and serve. Serve any extra sauce alongside. Serves 6.

Ray serves this with fried sweet potatoes. "Just peel two or three sweet potatoes like you would regular 'spuds.' Slice 'em thin and fry 'em in butter till they're nice and tender. When they're almost done, sprinkle on a good two or three tablespoons of brown sugar. Let that make a nice coating along with the butter." Delicious.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	3 ♡	Pass	6 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♠

The Vienna Coup is really a simple squeeze. However, before it can operate, declarer must play off a winner or winners in a suit to set up a lower-ranking card in the correct position as a threat.

After South's weak jump overcall, North could count 10 or 11 tricks with the help of a spade ruff. Since where there are 11 sure tricks a 12th can frequently be developed, North wasted no time in getting to slam.

West led a spade, East won and, for want of anything better, shifted to the queen of diamonds. There were only 11 top tricks — the 12th would have to come either from ruffing out the king-jack of clubs or a squeeze. Since East almost surely had the king of clubs and the defense virtually marked him with the jack of diamonds, declarer chose the squeeze as the surer line. However, East would be discarding after dummy, so a threat card had to be set up in the South hand.

Declarer won the diamond in dummy, came to hand with a trump and ruffed a spade. After drawing the last trump, declarer cashed his remaining high diamond and then started to run trumps. When he led his last heart, the table was down to a diamond and the ace-10 of clubs, and East held the jack of diamonds and king-jack of clubs. Dummy parted with its diamond, but East was caught in a vice. As the cards lie, he had to hold onto both of his clubs or else dummy's 10 would be the fulfilling trick, and his jack of diamonds was needed to prevent declarer's 10 from scoring. No matter what he chose to discard, he would be presenting declarer with his slam.

'Pompous, bumbling' newscaster of 'Mary Tyler Moore Show' dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ted Knight, an actor who won two Emmy awards for his portrayal of newscaster Ted Baxter on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," died Tuesday of cancer. He was 62.

Knight was hospitalized last fall for removal of a cancerous growth from his urinary tract. Earlier this year, he returned to the hospital for treatment of complications from that surgery.

The nation laughed at the antics of Knight's portrayal of a pompous, bumbling anchor Ted Baxter for seven years on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

Baxter had his foot in his mouth so often, you wonder how he ever managed to walk.

News director Lou Grant, played by Ed Asner, tore his hair out fretting over his anchorman's goofs. News writer Murray Slaughter, played by Gavin MacLeod, made Baxter the butt of countless newsroom jokes at WJM-TV.

Knight created the character of Ted Baxter before he auditioned for the part. At that time, the producers weren't quite sure what the WJM-TV anchor would be like. Knight settled that question forever and created an indelible character that lampooned the news reader who seldom understands events he's reading about.

Nobody had ever heard of Knight before "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" made its debut in 1970. It had taken him a long time to achieve stardom.

He was nearly 47 when the show made its debut and he once kidded that he was 47 for seven years, the duration of the antics in the mythical newsroom.

Hollywood producers, who ought to know better, couldn't separate Knight from his acting. He was dismayed that some people expected him to be a loud-mouthed buffoon in real life.

He found it difficult to believe that producers and casting directors had forgotten he had been a versatile actor appearing on shows like "Gunsmoke" and "The FBI" before the Moore show brought him fame.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie says he can't get over America's fascination with the wedding of Prince Andrew and Sarah Ferguson.

Runcie, who is in Milwaukee for the Lutheran Church in America's meeting, told a news conference Tuesday that while he was at Independence Hall in Philadelphia, a fellow tourist asked him about the July 23 wedding.

"You speak like an Englishman," the man said.

"I am," said Runcie.

"Did you see the royal wedding?" the man asked.

"Yes, I had a real good view of the royal wedding," said Runcie, who conducted the ceremony at Westminster Abbey.

"Boy, you guys certainly put on a real good show," the man said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Stacy Keach, who served six months in a British prison for cocaine possession, will launch a nationally televised campaign against drug abuse, CBS says.

Stacy Keach

Beginning Sept. 22, CBS stars will broadcast 10-second messages against drug abuse in a network campaign called "Stop the Madness." The messages will be broadcast during prime time, CBS said Tuesday.

Keach will be joined in the first week by Michele Lee, Bob Newhart, Pat Summerall, Kate Jackson, Gerald McRaney and Linda Gray.

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — The Brazilian government has censored parts of the movie "Cobra," starring Sylvester Stallone, because it considered it too violent, a federal official said.

"We're cutting five of the most violent scenes, and raising the minimum age for viewing the film from 14 to 18," Coriolano Fagundes, director of the federal censorship department, said Tuesday.

Fagundes said the scenes included a station wagon crushing a man against a wall, a knifing in a supermarket, and Stallone setting a man on fire.

Justice Minister Paulo Brossard on Monday ordered censors to reconsider permission for showing "Cobra." Ministry spokesman Ademir Malavazi said Brossard made his decision after a retired policeman shot and wounded three people after watching the movie last week in the northeastern city of Salvador.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Forrest Tucker, who collapsed moments before his star was to be placed in the Hollywood Walk of Fame last week, has been transferred to Valley Presbyterian Hospital.

The 67-year-old Tucker, who was transferred from Hollywood Presbyterian Medical Center, was in satisfactory condition Tuesday, Valley spokesman Tim Bradley said.

He was unsure when the actor might be released and said he could not reveal details of the actor"s illness.

'Indian twist' added to Mexican food

EL PASO, Texas (UPI) — Mexican food with an extra "Indian twist" has earned a tribal restaurant the praise of magazine writers and food critics from throughout the United States, say Tigua leaders.

Unlike many Indian foods described by critics as "bland," the Tigua version of green chile stew could melt an iceberg in Alaska, cooks say.

"Most of the appealing aspects of Mexican food had their origins with the Indians of North America," said Juan Lopez, special events coordinator for the Tigua Indian Reservation.

"The Tiguas were farmers and hunters," he said. "Long before anyone ever heard of enchiladas, the Tiguas were preparing spicy, delicious food, the results of their crops of corn. There was always meat on the table because they were good hunters, too."

Green chile stew, served piping hot, is a favorite among the more than 1,000 Tiguas who live in the shadow of the Ysleta Mission built by their ancestors in 1681 and the oldest building in Texas.

But in the tribal restaurant, in the heart of the Tigua Cultural Center 12 miles east of El Paso, the favorite among customers is a dish called "fajitas." "Some people say 'fajitas' originated in San Antonio," Lopez said. "Maybe the modern version developed there, but the idea of cooking strips of meat marinated in spices is just as Tigua Indian as the ground we walk on," Lopez said.

At the Tigua restaurant, Lopez said, the strips of beef and chicken are marinated in a special sauce, with ample servings of Indian spices, to make the dish unique in West Texas.

The recipe for the marinating sauce, said restaurant manager Vince Munoz, "is a highly-guarded Tigua Indian tribal secret, one of many that has made the restaurant famous throughout the Southwest."

"We call it the 'Indian twist,' to what has now become known as Mexican food," Lopez said. "And what a great difference it makes."

Lopez said many Indian tribes in the United States are noted for their specialties, crafts, turquoise, tribal dances or blankets.

"The Tiguas are fast becoming known throughout the United States for our food," he said. "And justifiably so. We've had an influence on cooking in El Paso for 300 years."

Modern-day Tiguas are descended from the Tiguas who came downstream from Isleta, New Mexico during the revolt of the rebel chief Pope (pronounced Poh-PAY') which began on Aug. 10, 1680.

Historians say the Tigua Indians remained faithful to the Spanish Franciscan priests and fled south along the Rio Grande until they reached what is now the community of Ysleta, part of the city of El Paso.

Lopez said one of the restaurant's main attractions is the making of bread in adobe ovens, using mesquite wood.

Indian bread, cooked the same way for the past 300 years, is a specialty of the restaurant. One item on the menu includes an "Indian burger," a hamburger made with bread cooked in the Tigua "hornos," or ovens.

Lopez said the bread is prepared the night before, left overnight to rise and is placed in the oven around 8 a.m., each day. After three hours in the outdoor ovens, adjacent to the restaurant in the adjoining cultural center, the bread is finally ready about 11 a.m., "just in time for the noon meal," he said.

Other Mexican-Tigua specialities, all made with the "Indian twist," are "gorditas" (little fat ones), and three varieties of Indian nachos, a popular snack made with corn tortillas.

"The San Antonio nachos are made with beans and avocados and named after our patron saint," Lopez said. "The Santa Fe nachos, named after our original homeland in New Mexico, are made with meat, chili and cheese. The Tiwa (an older spelling of the tribe's name) nachos are made with beef, chicken, cheese and chili."

The restaurant's red chile, a hefty serving of meat chunks and spices, drew raves from People Magazine, Lopez said.

"We're located in our cultural center," he said. "Luncheon guests can browse in our arts and crafts center or take in one of the periodic Indian dances held at 11 a.m., 1 p.m., and 3 p.m., Wednesday through Sunday."

Turkey not just for holidays

Associated Press

Today there are dozen ways to buy turkey in addition to the Thanksgiving-style whole bird. Smaller cuts such as half-breasts, steaks, fillets, hindquarters, drumsticks and thighs are available.

You'll find ground turkey, turkey bologna and smoked turkey link sausage in many supermarkets. These quick-cooking low-fat turkey cuts are made to order for light, cool summer meals.

PEPPER-UPPER TURKEY SALAD

½ cup oil and vinegar salad dressing
2 boneless turkey breast tenderloin steaks (8 ounces total), cut into ½-inch strips
2 red, green or yellow sweet peppers, cut into strips
2 cups torn lettuce or mixed greens

In a 10-inch skillet heat half the salad dressing. Add turkey strips. Stir-fry over medium-high heat for 3 to 4 minutes or until tender. Cool slightly.

In a medium mixing bowl combine undrained turkey and pepper strips.

Pour remaining salad dressing over turkey-pepper mixture; toss to coat. Cover and chill several hours or overnight.

To serve, spoon over lettuce on individual plates. Makes 2 main-dish servings.

Fresh corn combined with tomatoes, other vegetables, spices

Associated Press

FRESH CORN AND TOMATOES

6 fresh ears of corn
3 large tomatoes, peeled and chopped
¾ cup finely chopped onion
½ cup finely chopped green pepper
1 teaspoon sugar
¾ teaspoon dried basil, crushed
⅛ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

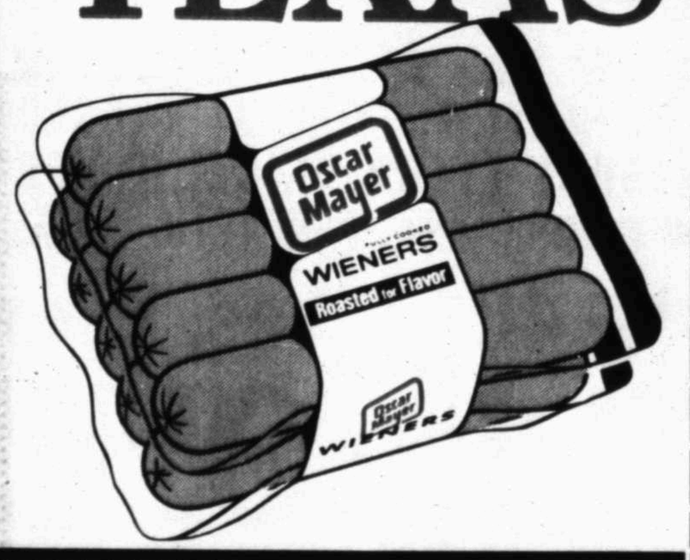

Score corn down each row of kernels. Cut corn off cob. Scrape cob to remove corn liquid (about 3 cups total). In a large saucepan combine corn, tomatoes, onion, green pepper, sugar, basil, salt and pepper. Bring to boiling; reduce heat, cover and simmer 15 to 20 minutes or until vegetables are tender; stir occasionally. Makes 8 servings.

MISD will allow children with AIDS to attend classes

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Under normal circumstances, a child with AIDS would not threaten the lives of healthy children in public schools, a Midland physician and a microbiologist with the Texas Department of Health said Tuesday.

Given the present knowledge about Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, a child who has contracted the disease "is as much at risk from his environment as he is to his environment," said Midland oncologist Dr. David Snyder.

Midland Independent School District trustees agreed and voted unanimously on first reading to allow children with AIDS to attend school with their healthy classmates.

The policy — created under the guidance of the Texas Education Agency and the Texas Department of Health — was not designed to alarm the public, but rather prepare students, parents and staff for the "inevitable," MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi Jr. has said.

Two weeks ago, the board postponed action on the policy for further investigation.

MISD board president Bill Jackson has said there have been no reported cases of AIDS or AIDS-related diseases among Midland school children.

Baressi said, however, "We need to approach and have a well thought-out policy before we're confronted with the situation."

Snyder told trustees that the medical community has yet to prove that persons with AIDS, AIDS-related conditions or Human T-Lymphrotropic Virus Type III infection pose a health risk to others.

"Although there is certainly an amount of apprehension, a child with AIDS would not pose a threat to other school children," he said.

Jim Davis, microbiologist with the Texas Department of Public Health, said nine AIDS cases have been reported to date in the 17-county region that includes Midland and Ector Counties.

However, the number of AIDS cases cannot be reported per county until a minimum of 10 victims have been identified in each county, he said.

Under the school policy, children diagnosed as having AIDS would be allowed to attend school in a regular classroom with the approval of the superintendent and a committee comprised of the child's physician, the MISD medical advisor, director of elementary and secondary education, coordinator of health and a physician who has experience treating AIDS patients.

The school district would confine knowledge of the child's identity to school principal, nurse and child's teacher.

In the event that child is diagnosed as having AIDS, the school principal will notify in writing all staff members and parents of children in the particular school that a a child with AIDS was in the school.

Baressi said a child with AIDS may be removed from the regular classroom for his or her own protection when cases of childhood diseases are occurring in the schools.

He said court judges generally have ruled in favor the children with AIDS in their fight to remain in school.

To automatically exclude a child with AIDS would be a "no-win situation," he said.

However, Baressi said the policy offers him the latitude to remove a child with AIDS if officials determine he or she "might pose a risk of transmission to others."

MISD approves rules for teacher appraisals

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Local procedures for implementing the Texas Teacher Appraisal System were approved on first reading Tuesday by Midland Independent School District trustees.

The policy, issued as a supplement to the TTAS Teacher Orientation Manual provided by the Texas Education Agency, is designed to explain the specific procedures and guidelines MISD will utilize in scheduling the two required appraisals this year.

Maridell Fryar, director of secondary education, said the general provisions of the policy specify that "all formal observations" must be 45 consecutive minutes long.

However, the teacher and appraiser may request a waiver on the time requirement. The observations may be broken into no more than three segments of no less than 15 minutes each. Once the first segment is over, all subsequent segments must be completed within seven working days.

Teachers will be informed of the identity of those individuals who will serve as their supervisor and other appraisers.

If, during the course of any appraisal period, the teacher's supervisor believes that other appraisers in addition to those assigned are appropriate for a teacher, the supervisor may make arrangements with the director of elementary or secondary education and then notify the teacher.

Mrs. Fryar said MISD continues to place a priority on the on-going supervision and assistance of teachers by administrative and support personnel.

Although formal observations will serve as data collection activities for the TTAS, they also will allow the appraiser and the teacher to engage in a dialogue of teaching practices and to identify both strengths and areas of improvement for teachers, she said.

At the secondary level, all departmental chairman will continue to observe teachers and to work with them on instructional improvement and curriculum implementation.

Every teacher will be allowed one "wave-off" for the first unscheduled formal obervation. A wave-off is a verbal request by the teacher asking the appraiser to return at another time.

If an appraiser chooses or is required to leave the classroom before the required 45 minutes has elapsed, the visit cannot be used as a formal appraisal observation and must be repeated.

Any additional formal observations by appraisers during either appraisal period may be scheduled or unscheduled at the discretion of the appraiser.

All observations for the first appraisal period are to be completed by Dec. 17. The second appraisal period deadline is the second Friday in May.

Cooler temperatures stir daydreams of autumn

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

Temperatures the past several days in Midland have created daydreams of fall weather, football season and relief from scorching steering wheels and seat belt buckles.

Although last Wednesday's high of 105 tied a 1964 record temperature for that day, Midland temperatures since then have risen above 90 just once, National Weather Service reports show.

Have the gods gone crazy? This isn't the August in West Texas most are accustomed to.

The decreased temperatures are due most likely to the increased cloud coverage over Midland the past few days, said John Wright, meteorologist-in-charge at the NWS, as well as the simple fact that fall is just around the corner and the days are getting shorter.

The increased cloud cover, Wright said, is a result of an "easterly wave," an area of unsettled weather which develops in the sub-tropics and moves from the east to the west.

The easterly wave affecting Midland skies gathered moisture in the Gulf of Mexico, blew into West Texas and created an unstable atmosphere. Then a denser cloud cover grew which increased chances of rain and cooled temperatures off, Wright said.

September will continue in the cooling trend as fall approaches and Wright said he predicts temperatures will be a bit cooler and chances of rain a bit higher than normal. These go hand-in-hand, he added.

Location stunting market's growth?

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

They're making money, but some growers at the Midland Farmers Market say they need a new location.

About two months into its operation, some members of the Permian Basin Farmer's Market say selling fresh vegetables is a success, but it would be more popular if it were at a centrally located building.

Twice a week shoppers seeking fresh vegetables crowd into a northwest Midland parking lot starting at 10 a.m.

But three hours later, the heat and sun drives some vendors away, while others leave after selling out, some growers say.

At 1:30 p.m. Tuesday, three vendors were left.

"We need a roof," says Bennie McChristian, one of the three sellers left Tuesday afternoon.

By early afternoon, McChristian of Big Spring must move his vegetables into the scant shade cast by his pickup.

Although some vendors still have vegetables left, many must leave by 1 p.m. or their vegetables will ruin in the sun, says Betty Hoelscher of Midkiff.

"Most people left because they didn't have any shade," she says.

Mrs. Hoelscher says a wooden trailer built by her husband allows her to stay until 6 p.m.

Odessa's farmer's market has more vendors staying longer because they are inside a building at the Ector County Coliseum, says Mrs. Hoelscher, who goes to both markets.

However, Midland County Extension Agent Earnest Kiker says few growers are left by the afternoon at the Midland market because most have sold out.

"Most of them are selling out. It's not related to the heat.

"I think the location has definitely served the need for the beginning of the farmer's market. I'm not saying we won't change it because we may change it," Kiker said.

Also the market needs to be at a more central location instead of at Loop 250 and Princeton, some growers say.

"It's terrible. It's way off in the corner of town. I'd think we'd have twice as much traffic if we were in a central location," McChristian said.

The board of directors will decide on moving the market in November or December after results from a recent survey are reviewed, Kiker says.

"Really right now we're pretty happy with where we're at," says Guy Richards, Midland director of the farmer's market. "We'd like to have a building eventually, but for this year we plan to stay where we are."

While the market may move in a year, zoning ordinances will probably prevent it from being located centrally, he says.

"We've had lots of trouble from the City Council on where we can be. They haven't been very helpful. As far as the City Council is concerned, we're going to be on the outskirts of town. We tried to have it at Dellwood Mall and they wouldn't let us," Richards said.

The market started June 20 and is open from 10 a.m. on Tuesday and Friday in Midland and on Thursday and Saturday at Building D at the Ector County Coliseum in Odessa.

The market was formed to help farmers suffering from the depressed agricultural economy, Kiker says.

"It's developed an opportunity for agriculturists to add income to their farm operation as well as serve a need to the consumers in providing fresh produce," Kiker says.

While they would like a different location, the growers say they have made money off the market.

Mrs. Hoelscher and her husband, who have been farming cotton, maize, wheat and vegetables since 1958 in Midkiff, says she has made about $8,000 since the market opened and has used it to help pay off a $500,000 debt.

"It's keeping the banker happy because we send every little bit of this to the banker," Mrs. Hoelscher says.

McChristian says, "I'm making more money here than when I was working."

B.E. Russell says he sold about $3,500 worth of tomatoes since the opening of the farmer's market.

"This is a hobby for us. We just love to grow tomatoes. As a hobby you don't want it to cost you money. And being able to sell these, it's not costing us any money," Russell says.

Ector County could lose $4 million in suit

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Ector County stands to lose $4 million to an Odessa women who claims she was fired for reporting wrongdoings in a county office.

A jury trial in the case began here Tuesday.

Tana Perry, formerly a data processor for Ector County, told county officials last year that Mike Holden, her office supervisor, had used county equipment for his personal business.

Ms. Perry thought she was protected by the Texas Whistleblowers Act, her suit contends, and cronyism within county government led to her dismissal.

The county, however, argues that Ms. Perry had marks against her record before she reported on Holden and that she was part of the illegal use of county computers.

A person fired by a local government may file a lawsuit in Travis County under the Whistleblowers Act.

Steve Spurgin, Ms. Perry's attorney, told the Austin jury that Ms. Perry simply wanted to help the county and thought she was protected.

"She blew the whistle on self-dealing, on corruption, on the rip-off of tax taxpayers," he said in the first day of the trial, which could continue into next week.

But Jerri Lynn Ward, an Austin lawyer and one of several attorneys representing Ector County, argued that Ms. Perry was not fired for reporting wrongdoings. Ms. Perry lost her job, Ms. Ward said, because of "an attitude problem."

Ms. Perry searched to find misconduct on Molden's part, Ms. Ward said, by following him around, going through his desk and keeping a complete diary of all of his activities. When the commissioners court tried to investigate Ms. Perry's allegations, she refused to cooperate, Ms. Ward told the nine-woman, three-man jury.

Part of the $4 million Ms. Perry is asking for includes lost wages, mental anguish and punitive damages. Spurgin said Ector County officials have continued to "discriminate" against Ms. Perry since her firing, making it hard for her to find work.

But Ms. Ward blamed Ms. Perry's current unemployment on "the notoriety attached to this lawsuit" and the poor economy in the area.

In a television report filmed in November 1985, Ector County Judge Jan Fisher said that Ms. Perry should not keep her job just because she was "the first guilty bird to chirp."

Judge Fisher testified Tuesday that Ms. Perry's lawsuit misinterpreted the Whistleblowers Act.

Judge Fisher also said she did not refer to Perry as "the first guilty bird to chirp" but merely told the television reporter that Ms. Perry's lawyer had misconstrued the law.

She used the word "guilty" in a "hypothetical" sense and the "chirping bird" was Spurgin, who also appeared on the broadcast.

"I never referred to Tana Perry or any other individual as 'a guilty chirping bird,'" Judge Fisher said.

Grand jury indicts ex-banker for fraud

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Rick Lan Jumper, former vice president of the defunct National Bank of Odessa, has been indicted by a federal grand jury in Midland on 11 counts of bank fraud.

The indictment of the 37-year-old Midlander is reflective of continuing investigations by the Federal Bureau of Investigation into illegal banking practices in the Permian Basin.

"Obviously, white-collar crime is a priority investigative project with the FBI," said Ron Butler, special agent-in-charge of the Midland FBI Office. The FBI here has nine special agents and a support staff, said Butler. Those special agents' background and experience includes law, accounting, banking, and computer technology.

If he is convicted on all 11 counts, Jumper could be sentenced to 49 years in prison and fined $80,000. Court-appointed attorney Clifford Hardwick of Odessa is Jumper's defense counsel. Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Blankinship is to prosecute the case.

Since 1985, Jumper became the seventh former Midland-Odessa banker to be indicted as a result of FBI probes into banking procedures in the Midland-Odessa area. Four ex-bankers, including three former bank presidents, have been tried and convicted. Indictments against one former banker were dismissed.

In the 11-count indictment, Jumper is charged with:

— Making false statements and reports to State National Bank of Odessa in 1981 to secure a $200,000 loan. The government charged that Jumper represented that the loan was to purchase an oil field blow-out preventer. Instead Jumper intended to use the loan to participate with NBO customers in an investment with John W. Colgin, the government claims.

— Making false writing and document on Federal Reserve System statement on that $200,000 loan.

— Benefiting from $500,000 in loans to Terry Lawson, David Pearson, Forest Gillham and to a Lawson and Pearson partnership.

— Causing false statements to be made in reports to the NBO board of directors. The government claims that Jumper did not disclose the nature of the $200,000 loan from State National Bank.

— Making false statements to State National Bank of Odessa to secure a $250,000 loan.

— Making false statements to the Federal Reserve System on the purpose of the $250,000 loan.

— Sharing in loans of $300,000 to Gillham, Pearson, Lawson and Pearson.

— Sharing in loans of $700,000 to Lawson, Pearson, and Gillham.

— Making false statements to the Federal Reserve System on the purpose of a $260,000 credit from State National Bank of Odessa.

Senior Citizens Center will be run by non-profit agency

By DOUG DRUMMOND
Assistant City Editor

The city will turn over duties of running the Senior Citizens Center to a non-profit agency by 1987 in a contract approved Tuesday by the City Council.

In exchange, the city will maintain a 2.7 acre tract of land for the agency until 1989.

"I think it's a good idea," said George Logan, director of the city's community service. "We think it will eliminate the duplication of services."

The City Council also approved placing meters in a VIP lot at Midland Regional Airport.

The agreement with the Community and Senior Service Inc., Logan said, will cost the city $17,000 per year to maintain the Furman Estate House at the corner of Sinclair Avenue and Midkiff Road.

The house likely will be used to house several senior citizens' agencies.

In addition, the city will pay $122,000 annually for the senior center's budget for the next two years. It now pays about $108,000 a year.

The non-profit agency will then serve as a management consultant until January 1987 before it will take over the operations of the center, Logan said.

That agreement will last until January 1989.

Odessa City Council hires city secretary, OKs budget

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The City Council Tuesday hired a new city secretary and approved the city's 1986-87 $44.95 million budget.

Council members voted unanimously to hire Jerri Fielding, formerly an administrative assistant with a Midland law firm, to succeed Deputy City Secretary Cindy Weir, 24, who resigned to devote more time to college studies.

Mayor Don Carter said the 54-year-old Mrs. Fielding was chosen from an initial field of 93 "highly qualified" applicants that was finally reduced to only 10. The mayor said council members spent two days and "many long hard hours" of deliberation before deciding to appoint the 24-year Odessa resident to the city secretary post.

Mrs. Fielding said she had spent 3½ years with the Midland law firm of Stubbeman, McRae, Sealy, Laughlin and Browder. She said she is "excited about the opportunity to work as city secretary."

Mrs. Fielding, who earned her bachelor's degree in business management from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin in 1980, says she is looking forward to the challenge of her new position, which includes overseeing city elections. In addition to working with the Midland law firm, Mrs. Fielding spent nearly three years working with independent oil and gas producers.

Council members also held the final public hearing on the proposed budget for the coming fiscal year. No one showed up to comment on the budget, which was approved without discussion.

The $44.95 million budget is 4.3 percent lower than last year's budget. Council members also voted to keep the tax rate this year at last year's level, which was 48.65 cents per $100 of assessed valuation.

This session's HB 72 would relax regulations

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Like a veteran Celtic whose jersey will someday hang from the Boston Gardens rafters, House Bill 72 is poised to take another slam dunk at high school athletics.

During the summer 1984 special session, House Bill 72 was the massive public school reform package that included the controversial no-pass, no-play rule on participation in extracurricular activities. The rule prohibits students who fail any course during one six-week grading period from joining in any after-school activity during the next six weeks.

With the bill number literally about to be retired, House Public Education Committee Chairman Bill Haley, D-Center, has decided to use the old warhorse to tackle the eligibility question.

HB 72 during this summer's special session would change the six-week suspension to three weeks for the first violation.

COUNCIL

"I don't know if it will save the city money," Logan said, "but it will give us a bigger bang for the buck."

Logan said the agency has more expertise in the area of the elderly and should be able to help.

"They can take those dollars (the $122,000) and expand upon what the city is offering," he said.

The deal was officially proposed Aug. 12 when the non-profit agency's director, Steve Edwards, asked the City Council for help in a briefing session.

The council then asked the city staff to look into the possibility of such a deal.

The staff and Edwards met and then hammered out details of the contract.

The council also approved placing meters in the VIP lot — where City Council members and other officials park for free — to allow easier access to the airport.

The meters will allow airport users a maximum of 15 minutes for 25 cents.

The idea is to allow time for loading and unloading at the airport without having to park in the bigger parking lots.

Aviation Director Victor White told the Council there was a "public relations" problem with the 60-second curb parking.

"Last March, the police wrote 100 tickets," White said. "That has increased to about 2,000 a month.

"I have people coming up to my office waving the ticket and cussing me out. They ask me why 'you bloodsuckers' are trying to get my money.'"

Council members said they hope the move of putting meters in the VIP lot will alleviate some of the problems.

ECISD approves 1986-87 budget

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Ector County school trustees Tuesday night approved the district's more than $83.4 million 1986-87 budget but deferred setting the tax rate until Sept. 9.

Superintendent Hugh Hayes said the reason for the delay in setting the tax rate is to wait and see what funding cuts, if any, come out of the special session of the Texas Legislature. Once the tax rate is set, he said, it can't be changed, which could leave the district in trouble should legislators approve cuts in funding for education.

The proposed tax rate of 83.8 cents per $100 of assessed valuation, which includes a 7/10ths of a cent increase over last year's rate, will raise 3.1 percent less revenue this year than last.

The decrease in tax revenue, according to Dr. Bill Walker, deputy superintendent for instructional services and business manager, is due to a slightly more than 13 percent decrease in the district's tax base. The slight increase was necessary to cover repayment of bond principal and interest, he said.

In other action, board members voted to seek waivers from the state commissioner of education for two teachers who twice failed the TECAT. According to Gordon Madison, ECISD personnel director, both of the individuals are vocational education teachers who have been teaching with permits issued by the TEA on the basis of experience in their fields, rather than on the basis of educational background.

Madison noted that nine ECISD teachers had failed the TECAT both times it was offered. The two vocational education teachers were the only ones for whom waivers are being sought because no other qualified individuals are available to teach the automotive or building construction classes.

Madison said both teachers will be allowed to take the TECAT again. If the commissioner of education grants the waivers sought, both teachers would be allowed to continue teaching for only six months if they fail the TECAT again, he said.

Two stores robbed in Odessa

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Two armed robberies early today netted one gunman more than $3,000 and another an undetermined amount of money.

According to Ector County Sheriff's Capt. Gene Kloss, a man armed with a handgun entered the Franco Liquor Store, 10412 W. University Blvd. just before 3 a.m. today and demanded owner Sylvia Rizek give him all the money she had. Ms. Rizek described the gunman as being about 5 feet 8 inches to 5 feet 10 inches tall with a slim build, wearing a white T-shirt and blue jeans. The man fled on foot, she said.

Just before 5:30 this morning, Kloss said deputies responded to a robbery call from the Mr. Dee Short Stop Food and Deli, 800 W. 87th St.

Owner Carl Davis told investigators he had just arrived to open up shortly after 5 a.m. when a man with a small handgun entered and demanded money.

Davis said he gave the gunman "more than $3,000" and the man forced him into a back storeroom and locked him in it.

Employees arriving for work freed him, Davis told sheriff's deputies.

Davis described the gunman as being about 5 feet 7 inches to 5 feet 8 inches tall, with a slender build and wearing a blue ski mask.

Kloss said Davis didn't know if the man fled on foot or was in a vehicle.

McFadden faces 25-year sentence for taking cans of beer at gunpoint

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Jerry "Animal" McFadden, who drew nationwide attention when he abducted a deputy and escaped from jail, faces up to life in prison for stealing two cans of beer at gunpoint.

A district court jury deliberated just two hours Tuesday before finding McFadden guilty of aggravated robbery for taking the beer from a Tyler couple.

McFadden, 38, faces at least 25 years and as much as life in prison on the conviction because of his indictment as a habitual criminal, prosecutors said.

He is also awaiting trial on an unrelated capital murder charge arising from the rape and strangulation of an 18-year-old Hawkins woman.

The six-man, six-woman jury is scheduled to deliberate the robbery punishment today. On Tuesday, members of his family asked for leniency.

"He is a husband and father and a son, and we do love him," testified Sharon McFadden, the defendant's wife, during the punishment phase of the trial. "I'd like you to remember that in making your decision."

McFadden was convicted of robbing Clifton and Denise Phillips at gunpoint May 4 at Lake Hawkins.

Phillips testified Monday that he and his then-fiancee were about to leave after a park outing when McFadden pointed a snub-nosed .38-caliber revolver at them as they sat in their car and demanded money.

Phillips said when he told McFadden he spent his money on beer, McFadden demanded the beer. Phillips said he was so terrified that he complied.

Jurors hear tape of dead woman's voice

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman whose body was found stuffed in the trunk of her car once begged a judge not to release her husband because she was afraid of him, according to testimony tape-recorded several weeks before her death.

The tape was played Tuesday for federal jurors in the murder trial of Gary Arthur Huggard.

The 38-year-old unemployed electrician from Katy is on trial in U.S. District Judge Ross Sterling's court on a charge that he killed his wife in retaliation for testimony she gave against him in a federal firearms case.

"I get flashbacks every time he beats me up that he might bring that gun out," Christine Huggard told the judge as she sobbed during a November court hearing. "I fear for my life and fear that my baby could get in the way."

Testimony in Huggard's trial was scheduled to resume today.

Banker offers emotional testimony

VICTORIA (AP) — In a voice often choked by emotion and tears, Castle Hills National Bank President Frank Patton Jr. told jurors about the final morning he spent with his wife Rebecca before an alleged extortion attempt ended her life.

The testimony came in the opening day of the capital murder trial of Lesley Lee Gosch, 31, accused of killing the Alamo Heights woman Sept. 18, 1985.

Patton described his relationship with his wife as "the closest."

"She was my best friend," Patton said.

He told jurors Tuesday that he and his wife went jogging the morning of Sept. 18, and about how he spoke to Mrs. Patton on the telephone from his office about plans to attend Bible study that evening.

Patton said his wife called back about 10 minutes later — shortly after 2:30 p.m. The second call, forwarded to him by his secretary, seemed puzzling, he said.

"When I picked up the phone Becky said, 'There's someone here who has to talk to you,'" Patton said as he began to cry. "And I knew right away that something was wrong."

Patton said a male voice came on the line demanding all the $50 and $100 bills he could put in a briefcase and for him to bring it to a pay phone at North Star Mall.

"He said, 'You have 45 minutes to get the money or it'll all be over,'" Patton said. The bank president said he began jotting on a piece of paper that it was an extortion threat and the information and then tossed a pen at his secretary, Jo Ann Galindo, to get her attention while he remained on the phone.

Ms. Galindo, who testified Tuesday that FBI and other authorities were notified immediately, recalled that bank personnel underwent an FBI seminar only weeks earlier on what to do during an attempted extortion.

Patton told jurors it was "several precious minutes" before it occurred to him to notify Alamo Heights Police. When he did, he said, he stayed on the line with the dispatcher who he said relayed to him what police were doing as they arrived on the scene of his home.

"They said they thought they could see somebody on the floor, and they asked me if I had a maid," Patton said, breaking down again, "and I said no."

House tentatively OKs interstate banking

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The House Tuesday tentatively approved an interstate banking bill that supporters say will inject life-giving capital to Texas banks suffering from an ailing economy.

The House also gave tentative approval to a bill that would legalize limited branch banking in all counties and passed a proposed constitutional amendment to put the issue before voters in November.

"The immediate effect of interstate banking will be an immediate infusion of capital into the state of Texas," said Rep. Bruce Gibson, D-Godley, author of the bill.

"This source of capital will strengthen Texas banks, and that means more loans, that means more jobs and that means we will turn the economy around again," Gibson told House members shortly before they voted 116-24 to give tentative approval to the bill.

The House is expected to formally approve the banking package today. The Senate has approved similar banking measures.

The interstate banking bill will allow out-of-state financial groups that meet certain conditions to acquire Texas banks.

But opponents say out-of-state holding companies do not have the interests of Texans in mind and would drain local deposits to make loans elsewhere, including in unstable Third World countries. This would especially hurt small community banks, they say, and would make it difficult for Texans to receive loans.

Some House members, including Rep. Al Price, D-Beaumont, thought legislators moved too quickly on the bill and should have waited until the regular session in January to debate it.

"A major concern of Texans is the local control of banks and we in our haste here will undo all that," said Price, who voted against the bill. "We need careful deliberations to address this problem more fully."

Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, voted for the banking legislation.

"What passed here today is progressive legislation," Shaw said. "It will prevent the argument being made by businesses coming into the state that we don't have a modern banking system or the financial capital or backing to make those new industries happen in Texas."

As lawmakers debated the issues inside the House, lobbyists in support of the banking measures swarmed the hallway just outside the chamber's doors. The banking package has received the endorsement of the three major banking groups in Texas, one of which represents large holding companies and the other small independent bankers.

"It was one of the most massive lobbying efforts I have ever seen," said Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Salado.

House members defeated several amendments to the interstate banking bill, including one by Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center, that required 75 percent of all deposits in an acquired Texas bank to be spent in Texas.

The bill does require out-of-state holding companies to meet federal Community Reinvestment Act guidelines, which force banks to loan money to local projects. It also requires that no out-of-state financial group can control more than 25 percent of all deposits held by Texas banks, and stipulates that a majority of a bank's board of directors be Texans.

Branch banking would become law only if voters on Nov. 4 approve the proposed constitutional amendment that the House passed. The bill allows a bank to operate up to three branches in the same city or county.

Gibson, the bill's sponsor, said branch banking would "bring low-cost banking to Texas" and enable banks to stay competitive with savings and loans.

SOME PEOPLE BUY AIR CONDITIONERS LIKE THERE'S NO TOMORROW.
When it's time to replace your old air conditioner, it'll probably only take you a little while to find a new one that looks pretty good and doesn't cost much. But it'll take a lot longer to realize a quick bargain is likely to cause a slow burn on your wallet every month.
A high-efficiency air conditioner could make a difference in your cooling costs this summer and every summer. A high-efficiency choice means steady savings because you're getting the same amount of cooling using less electricity than with a low-efficiency unit. On top of this, you'll get a valuable rebate from your electric company if your central air conditioner or window unit meets our Energy Action standards.
See your recognized Energy Action air conditioning contractor or dealer for help in choosing a high-efficiency air conditioner or heat pump. Tomorrow, you'll be way ahead of the game.
It pays to choose an Energy Action Unit.

NTSB suggests improvements for relaying data

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government needs to improve methods for detecting hazardous weather near airports and relaying that information more promptly to pilots, the National Transportation Safety Board says.

The NTSB findings were included Tuesday in its final 164-page report on the weather-related crash a year ago of a Delta Air Lines Lockheed L-1011 as it approached the Dallas-Forth Worth airport.

The Delta accident killed 137 people, including a motorist traveling along a road near the airport. There were 27 survivors.

The crash was caused by wind shear, a violent downdraft of air, but the NTSB concluded last month that the flight crew's decision to proceed with the landing despite indications of a thunderstorm was largely to blame.

Among the board's recommendations outlined in the final report, however, were many that raised questions about the way weather information is relayed to pilots.

The board urged the Federal Aviation Administration to improve its weather communications methods, saying the agency should:

— Station a full-time meteorologist at major airport control towers to analyze potentially hazardous weather conditions and promptly make the information available to air traffic controllers.

— Require that recorded weather advisories for pilots be kept more current and be updated whenever thunderstorms or serious wind shears are observed.

— Require controllers to promptly forward hazardous weather information to pilots whenever such reports are received from pilots or other sources.

FAA procedures stipulate that controllers should relay adverse weather conditions to pilots only as time permits because the controllers' primary duty should be the control of air traffic.

The final report makes no change in the probable cause for the Aug. 2, 1985, accident, saying that the flight crew should not have proceeded with the landing attempt after lightning was seen along the approach path.

In Atlanta, Delta spokesman Bill Berry said the airline agreed with the board's recommendation that improved weather communications is needed. But he said the airline still believes the board "flawed greatly in their finding" that the flight crew was at fault.

"What they say here, that weather information should be relayed, is exactly what should have been given our pilots, that there was severe weather in their path. They had cleared to come into that weather," Berry said in a telephone interview.

The safety board in its final report noted, as it did last month, that the pilot of the ill-fated jet, who had 29,300 hours of flight experience, had virtually no warning that the multiple microburst — a violent downdraft of air — was in his path.

Many of the NTSB's recommendations involved the development of improved wind shear training by airlines or urged the FAA to hasten the development and deployment of improved wind shear detection equipment.

The safety board noted that the FAA last April circulated proposals aimed at reducing the danger of wind shear, and said the FAA plan addresses nearly all of the concerns that the board had raised about wind shear during the past dozen years.

Safety caravan buckles up border-to-border

LAREDO (AP) — Claudia Carroll was crossing an intersection when a car ran a red light and smashed into the front end of her vehicle. She says a seat belt stopped her from rocketing through the windshield.

She and six other Texans who credit safety belts for their survival left here Tuesday as another group departed from Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., on a nationwide caravan to promote the use of safety belts.

"America Buckles Up Border-To-Border Campaign" will rendezvous Monday in St. Louis, where they'll buckle two halves of a 300-foot seat belt.

"We feel that people need to be encouraged to buckle up for their own safety and the safety of other drivers," Michael Cull, Ohio spokesman for the caravan, said Tuesday.

"In effect, we are trying to get people to adopt a new health habit — to buckle up their belts."

In Laredo, Mayor Aldo Tatangelo and a crowd of enthusiastic supporters gave a sendoff to the caravan of eight cars carrying Texas survivors of wrecks who credit safety belts for their lives.

"No doubt about it. I would have been hurt badly if I had not been buckled into my safety belt. My face was heading straight for the dash when my seatbelt caught me," said Ms. Carroll, 30, of Tyler.

Before the two caravans meet in Missouri, they will be joined by cars of wreck survivors from 26 states. Some will be flown from distant areas to the caravan route, officials said.

Texas participants include Derrick Ruth, 22, of San Augustine, who said he was driving on a freeway when a car suddenly changed lanes and pulled in front of him. Derrick's vehicle collided with the car, but he escaped with cuts and bruises because he was wearing a belt, he told the Laredo Times.

Officer Donald Martin, 29, of Tyler was driving on a six-lane highway when a vehicle cut across three lanes of traffic and crashed into his patrol car.

Carolyn and Creston Minter were in a van that was stuck by a pickup truck that failed to yield the right of way at an intersection. The van flipped over, but they escaped because of seat belts, they said.

San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros welcomed the caravan Tuesday afternoon, and today the travelers were to be honored guests at the Texas Capitol. Rep. Bill Carter and Sen. Ted Lyon, who sponsored passage of seat belt legislation in Texas, are scheduled to speak.

STATE IN BRIEF

Petroleum company's offer unacceptable, mayor says

MONT BELVIEU (AP) — Warren Petroleum Co.'s offer to buy out 21 property owners near the company's plant is unfair and unacceptable, the mayor of this petrochemical community says.

During the weekend, residents on Pablo Street got earnest money contracts and were given 30 days to decide whether to accept the offers. Under the plan, all must sell and relocate at least two miles away.

Mont Belvieu, a community of about 1,800 people, sits a few miles north of Interstate 10, about 25 miles east of Houston.

"You make a reasonable offer to some to get lower-priced people to agree," Mayor Fred Miller told Warren officials Monday. "You give them $20,000 and tell them to get out. They would like to go, but they can't go on what you've offered them."

The plan is similar but separate from the Mont Belvieu Project, a program supported by a consortium of 13 industries, which store more than 120 million barrels of hydrocarbon gases in caverns located under the homes.

Abductors stab truck driver

DEER PARK, N.Y. (AP) — A Texas man remained in stable condition today while detectives searched for the men who stabbed him in the throat, hijacked his meat truck and stole its cargo, police said.

The victim, Jack Phillips, 51, of Bridgeport, Texas, was taken to Good Samaritan Hospital in West Islip following the 10½-hour ordeal, police said.

A nursing supervisor said he was listed in stable condition today.

Phillips staggered into a lumber company in Deer Park at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday and said his truck had been hijacked at 3 a.m. Tuesday in Brooklyn at an unknown location, said Suffolk County police spokesman Bill McKean.

He had a gash in his neck and a puncture wound in his upper body which prevented him from giving police any details about the assault or hijacking, McKean said.

Phillips was delivering 44,000 pounds of meat in a tractor-trailer owned by Lisa Motor Inc. of Fort Worth, Texas, to Feinkoff Meats on Knickerbocker Ave., Brooklyn, McKean said.

Man held in wife's death

HOUSTON (AP) — A 35-year-old man accused of fatally shooting his wife while she was working at Jefferson Davis hospital remained in jail pending charges, police say.

The victim, a 27-year-old woman, was shot Tuesday about 5 p.m., and was pronounced dead at 6:03 p.m., Jefferson Davis hospital administrator Lois Moore said.

Shortly after the shooting, the victim's husband was arrested at his mother's house, police Sgt. John Bermester said.

"They were separated," Bermester said. "It's a domestic-type thing."

A man armed with a handgun walked into the hospital and fired several shots at the woman, Ms. Moore said.
