SLAUGHTER IN EDMOND!

SHOOTING VICTIM—Medical personnel rush a wounded man to a waiting ambulance early Wednesday following a shooting spree by a postal employee in Edmond, Okla. Police say the gunman killed 14 people and himself. (AP Laserphoto)

Part-time worker kills 14 people in post office

EDMOND, Okla. (AP) — A part-time postal worker facing dismissal opened fire in a post office this morning, killing 14 people and wounding at least four before taking his own life, police said.

The gunman, identified by police as Pat Sherrill, 44, was hired last year and was about to be fired, said postal officials in Washington.

Sherrill's body and those of 14 others were found inside the post office and in the back parking lot of the post office after police moved into the one-story brick building about 9 a.m.

It was the nation's worst attack by a lone gunman since a rampage at a McDonald's restaurant in San Ysidro, Calif., on July 18, 1984, left 21 people dead.

Four of the injured were taken to hospitals, where two were listed in critical condition and undergoing surgery.

Police said Sherrill was carrying at least three handguns when he entered the post office through an employees entrance around 6:45 a.m. and opened fire.

Normally, there would be 90 postal workers in the building at that hour, officials said.

Vince Furlong, an eight-year employee of the post office, said he was working at a postal tray at his station when he heard a noise like a firecracker.

"I looked down under my tray and saw one of my good friends hit the floor with blood coming out of him," Furlong said.

Furlong said the gunman had locked some of the doors to the post office.

Ron Blackwell, a carrier, said the shots sounded like postal trays falling.

"My first thought was that someone had dropped a tray. Then somebody said, 'He's got a gun' and everyone started running out," Blackwell said.

Blackwell said there were about 80 people in the Post Office when the shooting began and people "just started running."

Hostage negotiators tried to talk to the gunman, but he refused to answer the telephone.

District Attorney Bob Macy said bodies, spent cartridges and empty bullet clips were scattered throughout the building. "I've never seen a crime scene like this. I've never seen this volume," he said.

Macy, who described Sherrill as an expert marksman, said the man used at least two guns, but could not say what kind they were.

"There were people shot all through that building," Macy said, "which would indicate that he was going through the entire area."

He said most of the dead were found close to what appeared to be their work stations.

Mercy Health Center spokeswoman Jill McDonald identified the two critically wounded men as Gene Bray, 54, of Oklahoma City, and Steve Vick, 24, of Edmond. Ms. McDonald said Bray was shot in the left flank and Vick has been shot in the abdomen. Michael Bigler, 36, of Choctaw suffered superficial wounds but was being kept at the hospital for observation, she said.

Edmond is a city of 34,000 people about 15 miles north of Oklahoma City.

School budget action delayed for one week

By PAUL PINKHAM

The standing-room-only crowd which attended Tuesday's Pampa School Board meeting to learn what the district's 1986-87 budget will include found that they'll have to wait another week to learn anything.

Although adoption of the budget, which the board has been discussing for weeks, was on the agenda, Board President Robert Lyle prefaced the meeting by saying there would be no action on the budget because of legal advice he received from the district's attorneys. He said the earliest possible time the board could act would be Friday, but trustees later decided to set a special meeting for 6 p.m. Monday.

Lyle later told reporters the advice concerned the legal ramifications of a possible reduction in the district work force, also a scheduled agenda item Tuesday, as a possible means of solving a nearly $900,000 budget shortfall.

Trustees are considering several budget proposals that include a combination of cuts in the local teacher salary supplement to offset a state-mandated pay raise, tax increases and budget cuts.

Under one budget-cutting proposal, the board has discussed eliminating the elementary Spanish program and Supt. James Trusty responded to a question by trustee Charles Loeffler by saying the administration has not found any open positions for which the three current elementary Spanish teachers are certified.

Trustee Joe VanZandt began to ask a question about the elementary Spanish program, but Lyle asked him not to say anything about the program until he could consult further with district's legal counsel.

Lyle also said the decision to delay adopting a budget will not affect the state's local district budget deadline, which is today. He said he consulted the Texas Education Agency in Austin and was told the district must submit a prepared budget that can be pending approval by the board.

In a separate budget-related item, trustee Wallace Birkes publicly apologized to the district's employees for remarks made during a meeting Aug. 12. He apparently referred to a statement in which he quoted a teacher as saying teachers would be "immoral" to accept a pay raise when the district faces a budget crunch.

Birkes said he intended only to show that some teachers are not opposed to a cut in their local supplement.

"I wanted to apologize to the staff; I wanted to apologize to the board for any embarrassment," he said.

In other action the board accepted bids on health care insurance, motor vehicle insurance, and bread and milk products.

The bid for health insurance went to Horace Mann Insurance Co., which offered a $250 deductible policy costing $57 per employee. Assistant Supt. Tommy Cathey noted several other companies submitted lower bids that contained higher costs for dependents or a termination liability clause.

The current policy, with the Texas School Services Foundation, costs $52.72 per employee with a $200 deductible.

Pampa Insurance Agency Inc., the low bidder at $7,255 with no deductible, received the motor vehicle insurance bid, while low-bidder Meads Fine Bread received the bread product bid at 60 cents a loaf and 65 cents a dozen for buns. Cathey noted the cost of bread is down from last year.

Kelly Farms was the only milk bidder at 15.9 cents for regular milk and 16.4 cents for chocolate. Cathey said the bid marks a .2-cent increase over last year.

The board also: — refused participation in the National Association of School Boards direct affiliate program, which would have cost $750.

— approved temporary re-organization of the curriculum department, addressing duties of various coordinators and department heads and saved the district about $30,000 by eliminating the position of elementary math coordinator.

— approved procedures for the 1986-87 Texas teacher appraisal system.

— accepted the employment of: Berdena Neef, half-time kindergarten at Mann Elementary; Carol Allen, high school science; Gloria Williams, high school homebound; John Charles, middle school physical education and coach; Pam Harris, high school special education; Steve James, middle school science and coach; and Pat Barnett and Eileen Strong, middle school reading.

Wagoneers won't forget McLean

McLEAN — They're traveling through Texas in covered wagons and travel trailers; seeing the state at a speed of four miles per hour.

McLean was one of 125 stops for the Lone Star Wagon Train. And, thanks to the community residents who greeted the wagoneers with a pot luck feast and concert, it will be remembered fondly.

Some 35 wagons and travel trailers set up camp Tuesday at the Country Corner stop on Interstate 40 south of McLean. They were supposed to go on to open camp near Hedley, but they decided to stay an extra night to repair their heavy wooden wagon wheels and reshoe their mules who aren't used to the pavement.

Leta Mae Hess, owner of the Country Corner, welcomed the team by setting up a community pot-luck supper and local band concert at the wagon train's camp site. Most of the communities so far have greeted the wagon train with catered barbecue beef, but not the McLean residents who, within 24 hours, whipped up homemade pies, cakes, beans, salads, meat loaf and casseroles.

"Nothing can beat this real home cooking," train spokesman Ken Sheffield said with gratitude.

After the meal, the wagoneers were treated to a concert by the local band, Country Comfort. They set out toward Hedley early this morning.

"We're trying to join in as many community celebrations as we can," Sheffield said of the Lone Star train, which is a sanctioned Texas Sesquicentennial event.

To honor the republic's 150th Anniversary, the wagon train is winding its way through the small towns and big cities of Texas. It is now about one fourth of the way on its serpentine route from Weatherford to Austin. This is the second wagon train to travel through the state this year and Shef-

Official thinks illegal license plates obtained through county office

By PAUL PINKHAM

The owner of Elliott's Glass and Home Center testified Tuesday he realized a year too late that license plates former Pampa car dealer Jerry Don Mackie placed on his new van were invalid.

And an investigator with the Texas Department of Public Safety motor vehicle theft division said he suspects Mackie had help from someone inside the Gray County Tax Office in illegally obtaining the tags.

Testimony began Tuesday in Mackie's trial on charges that he misapplied funds given him by Kenneth Elliott of Elliott's Glass and Home Center for tags, taxes and title fees on a new van Elliott purchased in September, 1985, from Mackie's former car dealership, Jerry Don's Motor Co. on South Cuyler. Mackie has since declared bankruptcy.

He also faces three other indictments, one of them several counts long, and all alleging some form of deception in connection with the dealership.

Elliott testified Tuesday that he paid Mackie about $9,500 for a new van, after receiving a loan for that amount from Citizens Bank and Trust. Of that, he said, he and Mackie agreed that about $400 was to have gone for license plates, motor vehicle taxes and title transfer fees.

"Jerry Don said he would pick up the tags and let us know or bring them by," Elliott said, adding, that after some delay, Mackie furnished the tags.

However, Elliott testified, a field, a former soldier, has been on both of them.

"It's a different world going down the highway at four miles an hour," Sheffield said.

"When we rode out of Childress early in the morning, within the first quarter of a mile, I saw a coyote, quail and a whole mess of wild turkeys. I've seen the seasons change and I've met so many great people."

To Sheffield, a paramedic who drives a bright red stagecoach to lead the train, a wagon train is a "state of mind."

"It's where a handshake means something," he observed.

Although Sheffield drives a stagecoach, he spends the night in a comfortable travel trailer which he shares with Aggie, a friendly white cat who's big enough to pull a small wagon herself.

Leroy Finn, a retired person from Hamlin, said the train will travel 2,265 miles. So far, he said, it's been hot on the road.

"It's gotten up to 114 degrees," he said. "And the only rain so far was just a drizzle."

Sheffield said that just because the Wagon train is sanctioned by the state of Texas it doesn't mean it's funded. Money for the trip comes from corporate sponsorship, concessions and drawings for boots, hot tubs and bicycles. One-fourth of the proceeds from the boot raffle go to local projects. In McLean, the proceeds went to the Volunteer Ambulance.

Deficit forecast expected to trigger extensive cuts

WASHINGTON — Federal managers are sharpening their pencils today to figure out how much each of their programs stands to lose if a Gramm-Rudman automatic cut of $19.4 billion comes to pass for fiscal 1987.

Two federal budget agencies today published in the Federal Register the official forecast of a $163.4 billion deficit for next year — nearly $20 billion over the deficit target called for in the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law.

The agencies — the White House Office of Management and Budget and the Congressional Budget Office — said that if Congress fails to find other ways to curb spending, across-the-board cuts of 7.6 percent in many domestic programs and 5.6 percent in military spending would be necessary to meet the 1987 deficit target of $144 billion.

That is up from the $11.7 billion cut — 4.9 percent in defense and 4.3 percent in non-defense programs — that Gramm-Rudman inflicted on many federal programs last March for fiscal 1986.

Mackie trial

year later, when his wife attempted to renew the tags at the tax office, a check on the tags revealed they were not registered. He said he was told to park the van.

Eventually, he said, he received a copy of the car title from Citizens vice-president Jim Olsen, after which he paid the tax office about $500 for the fees plus a penalty.

Olsen said he didn't obtain the title until October, 1984, when he visited Mackie at home and Mackie retrieved the manufacturer's statement of origin from a file cabinet. He said he does not know how the absence of a title escaped the bank's notice for a year.

But Larry Kuceruk formerly of the DPS office in Amarillo, who investigated the case at the request of the Pampa Police Department, said the statement of origin serves as a new car title for dealers until a car is sold, at which time it is supposed to be surrendered to the county. The statement gives the possessor full control over the vehicle, Kuceruk said.

Kuceruk said the invalid plates on Elliott's van definitely came from the Gray County tax office but were not registered, meaning the state had no record of the van's existence for a year. He added he suspected someone in the tax office of collaborating with Mackie but, under DPS policy, he could not investigate the office of an elected county official without a request for assistance from another government official.

County Tax Assessor-Collector Margie Gray was to have testified today.

Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton later told The Pampa News that the tax office was investigated but nothing meriting indictment could be found because Mackie, an alleged co-conspirator, would have been the only witness. He said he believes the individual alleged to have collaborated with Mackie has resigned.

In opening statements to the jury, Mackie's attorney, Qlo Crum of Amarillo, said his evidence in the trial will show that Mackie paid tag, title and license fees in other transactions and could not pay this one after he declared bankruptcy. He said Elliott's name was mistakenly omitted from bankruptcy papers.

"I suggest it's an attempt by Citizens Bank to get their money," Crum said. "They didn't get it in bankruptcy court; they're going to try to get it in criminal court."

Crum and Hamilton took nearly four hours to select a jury. Only about 52 prospective jurors, about one third of the amount called, showed up for jury duty but 223rd District Judge Don Cain said many of those absent called in legitimate excuses.

White clears way for tax bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White today opened the Legislature's special session to consider his proposal for a temporary increase in the state sales tax rate.

White also agreed to allow lawmakers to debate bills that would permit out-of-state banks to purchase Texas banking institutions and to impose a constitutional prohibition against a corporate or personal income tax.

In Texas, special legislative sessions can only consider those topics permitted by the governor.

During a brief news conference, White said his order will be specifically limited to his proposal to increase the sales tax rate from 4 1/2 percent to 5 1/2 percent for one year, beginning Sept. 1.

White said he has no plans to open the call to bills to legalize parimutuel wagering on horse racing or creation of a state lottery.

The governor said he doesn't believe that either horse racing or a lottery would generate sufficient money quickly enough to help solve the state's estimated $3.5 billion deficit.

"I want to focus the attention of the Legislature on the very serious problem we have for additional revenues that will be effective in dealing with our problem," he said.

Aides to White said the one-year sales tax increase would raise about $810 million. Combined with $1.4 billion in spending cuts he has recommended, White said that would balance the state's budget.

Comptroller Bob Bullock estimates that the state faces a $3.5 billion deficit, but White has said that total includes some contingencies, such as the outcome of various lawsuits, which aren't in effect now.

Asked whether he would veto any other tax bill should the House and Senate send him one, White replied, "I'll just have to wait and see."

Certification bill filed

AUSTIN (AP)—A state senator has introduced a bill that could force the House to tackle a tax bill during the current special session.

The measure filed Tuesday by Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, would require the state comptroller to certify that any appropriation bill approved by the Legislature is balanced.

The House, working to avoid a tax hike, has approved budget cuts it believes will get the state through the current cash crisis, but would not balance the 1986-87 budget.

Many senators prefer a tax hike which, in conjunction with budget cuts, could balance the two-year budget.

Farabee said his bill would force the Legislature to make the "tough decisions" on taxes now.

Also Tuesday, the House voted preliminary approval for two bills that Speaker Gib Lewis said could save $250 million by offering incentives for state workers to retire early and change state pay day from the last day of the month to the first working day of the next month.

Both bills face another vote in the House, which already has approved $750 million in spending cuts.

House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, said of Farabee's bill, "I understand brinksmanship and gamesmanship and all those kinds of things."

"They just don't want to deal with the budget as it is, and we are going to wait until they deal with it," he said of senators.

The Farabee plan would require a constitutional amendment, according to Schlueter.

Farabee told reporters his proposal "strengthens the position of those of us who believe we shouldn't be passing a major appropriation bill like House Bill 1 without it being certified by the comptroller that the funds are available."

Asked if his measure represented a Senate move to get the House talking about taxes, Farabee replied, "I would hope that this would cause greater consideration for a balanced budget and meeting any shortfalls now rather than six months from now when the problem will be far more critical."

"House Bill 1 would not be certifiable under this law but through a combination of other budget cuts and revenue increases it could be certified," Farabee said.

Lewis said the Farabee proposal would not help the House and Senate work toward a compromise.

"I never have found that you can pressure people into doing too much. When you try to pressure people into doing something, they somewhat resent that and they respond the other way," Lewis said.

City swelters in record heat

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP)—For a German tourist used to the chilly climate in Bavaria, the record-setting heat that seared residents in the Alamo City was simply a nice change of pace.

"It's not too hot — it's nice," Volker Lautenschlager said Tuesday as he celebrated his 19th birthday under the sweltering

108-degree sunshine. "In Bavaria it's always cold."

But that stoicism didn't stop Lautenschlager or anybody else in San Antonio from sweating through a heat wave that broke a 77-year-old record for the hottest day the city ever registered.

The old record of 107 degrees was set Aug. 20, 1909, and the previous mark of 105 degrees for Tuesday, Aug. 19, was set back in the same year.

The stifling temperature prompted city officials to call a heat emergency and extended the hours of 14 city recreation sites and two service centers to accommodate people suffering from the heat in their uncooled homes.

The mercury had climbed to 101 degrees by 1:15 p.m., and the all-time record of 107 was tied at 3:15 p.m. As the mercury edged to 108 degrees at 5 p.m., the record was shattered, and it began to rain.

"It was quite strange that thunderstorms came at almost the same time," National Weather Service meteorologist Tom Hicks said. "It cooled down real quick when we had a few drops of rain."

Celebrating his birthday by touring the Alamo and the River Walk, Lautenschlager found he didn't have to compete with the usual crowds.

UT gets 15th, 16th century works

AUSTIN (AP)—An Italian collector was so impressed by the University of Texas when he visited it four years ago that he has left the passion of his life — a prized library of books as old as five centuries.

The 287 books, valued at about $2 million, were published in Venice between 1495 and 1588 and bear the imprint of the noted Aldine Press, Dechard Turner, director of UT's Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center, said Tuesday.

Turner described the collection as "one of the major book gifts of any time" and said it comes from the estate of Giorgio Uzielli, a New York stock broker and book collector who died in Florence, Italy, in 1984.

"Collecting Aldines was a passionate chase for Mr. Uzielli, and the condition of each item in the collection is a testament to his great connoisseurship in collecting," Turner said.

While trying to find a place to leave his collection, Uzielli visited the UT humanities center in 1982. Turner said Uzielli was so impressed with what he saw that when he returned to New York, he specified in his will that the collection go to the University of Texas.

Aldus Manutius, described as the first scholar-printer, founded the Aldine Press in 1495 to print the ancient Greek and Roman classics in editions noted for their scrupulous accuracy, university experts said.

The logo of the Aldine Press — a dolphin and anchor — became a familiar mark in the printing world at the turn of the 16th century because about 75 percent of all the classics had their first printing under that imprint.

Turner said Aldine books were not only beautiful examples of printing but also practical, as they were small and made scholarship "portable."

"Aldus Manutius was the first printer who seriously applied the rules of textual scholarship to the materials he published. He sought manuscripts from as many sources as possible and used the finest scholars he could hire to assist in the comparison of texts," Turner said. "At one time, even (Dutch humanist) Erasmus worked for Aldus," he said.

The Uzielli collection contains the most widely known of all Aldine editions, a five-volume set of Aristotle's works, published from 1495 to 1498. That was the first major Greek text to be reintroduced to the Western world by the invention of the printing press.

The collection also includes the first major work printed by Aldus, a 1495 Greek grammar text; a 1501 edition of Virgil's writings; a two-volume set of Homer's "Odyssey"; two volumes of Plato, printed in 1513, and a 1514 collection of essays by Cato.

Turner said the collection will be of interest both to classics scholars and to historians of typography and book-binding.

Divorces cause heartache

...was there a voice heard, lamentation and weeping, and great mourning, Rachel weeping for her children and would not be comforted... — Matthew 2:18, KJV

This Bible verse comes from a story much more tragic than what we're seeing in the United States today, for Matthew was telling of the sorrow of women whose children were killed in King Herod's search for the Messiah sometime after Jesus was born. Yet, for some reason, Saturday, the verse kept coming to my mind.

Once again, I watched my two children depart on a trip to see their father. I wouldn't deny them this opportunity for anything, but, believe me, it is not easy to let an eight-year-old and an 11-year-old board a jet plane by themselves to a destination hundreds of miles away. As that jet lifted into the air, I felt like my heart was wrenched from me. Like Rachel, I was weeping for my children and would not be comforted.

What I saw in this was not just my own sorrow and, yes, feelings of insecurity. My children arrived safely and will soon be home safely. What struck me about this event was the fact that Davy and Angel were not the only ones traveling alone that day. At least four other children I know of were on that plane, unaccompanied by an adult. I suspect they were all visiting either their father or mother or perhaps their grandparents.

So this is an indication of what the world is today. Half of the marriages today will end in divorce, if current trends hold. That means that more children, like Davy and Angel and the others on that plane, will be products of broken homes.

They will have to live with the separation of their parents, the strained relationships and fights over custody and child support. They will probably have to deal with remarriages of one or both of their parents, and somehow formulate a new family from the myriad "steps" who will become a part of their lives.

Most often, mothers receive custody of the children. Studies show that immediately after a divorce, women are plunged into poverty status. Therefore, the children will find their standard of living drastically reduced.

Yes, mothers are weeping for their children. They're heartbroken because they find it almost impossible to provide for them without some kind of outside help. Worn out from trying to earn enough to live on, find decent childcare that they can afford, plus be both mother and father to their children, they often cry simply out of exhaustion.

And though I can most strongly sympathize with these women, I know, too, that the fathers are weeping, as well. These men are frustrated because they know they're missing out on much of their children's growth and development, yet their time with them is strictly limited by court orders. They're angry, damn angry, because it seems that no one — their former spouses and courts alike — seem to see them as living, breathing humans with emotions and parental feelings. It often seems to the fathers that all anyone wants from them is their cash.

Grandparents are weeping, too. They're the forgotten ones. The ones who love their children so much and are lost, hurt and resentful when they see their family unit break up. They feel guilty, angry and ashamed when their children divorce. And how they sorrow for their grandchildren, the innocent victims, wanting to take them and protect them from the hurts that come with the dissolution of their family.

Yet, the grandparents are pushed aside when divorce comes. Their feelings and needs are generally not considered in the divorce proceedings. Some never see their grandchildren again, or if they do, it may be years between visits.

Children are the hope of this world, yet out of our own selfishness, we have given them the short shrift.

Divorce is inevitable, yet what has led us to changing marriage partners like underwear? Are we going to continue raising our children, by our example, showing them that if the going gets tough, running away is the answer?

Perhaps they will learn, rather, from our mistakes. Maybe they will see that marriage is a commitment that must not be taken lightly. Having lived through the results of failing to stand up to that commitment, I hope that our children will try even harder to make their marriages successful ones.

I hope Davy and Angel never have to stand and watch their children fly away, alone.

Hance defends Clements

AUSTIN (AP)—In apparently softening his pledge to veto any tax increase, former Gov. Bill Clements is only being realistic, says Kent Hance, who lost the GOP gubernatorial nomination to Clements.

"You're being picky on him," Hance told a news conference Tuesday.

"Bill Clements is trying to take the responsible position. He's against taxes, he doesn't want a tax bill. He's leaving that opening just in case something happens (economically) that would be extremely difficult," said Hance, now honorary chairman of Clements' campaign.

Hance, touring the state to boost Clements' bid against Democratic incumbent Mark White, said he thought all the attention being given Clements' recent tax comments was unnecessary.

"I think it's a big to-do about, really, nothing," Hance said. In an interview published Monday, Clements appeared to back away from his oft-made pledge to veto any new taxes if elected. In the interview, he said it would be "nonsense" to make such a promise now.

Aides said Clements still opposes taxes, but that the state's financial situation now is precarious and that must be taken into account. On Tuesday, Clements' staff distributed buttons saying, "We're for Texas, not for taxes."

Hance said that in making the comment, Clements faced both economic reality and what he called White's delay in acting on the current $3.5 billion state budget deficit.

"It points out, one, that White let things go so long that he got it so messed up," Hance said. "Gov. Clements is still against a tax increase and will remain against a tax increase. But with circumstances like they are, you never get in a position of saying never."

Hance said a big problem is that no one knows how large the state deficit will be when the Legislature convenes in January for its regular session.

"I think he (Clements) is better off having those options available," Hance said.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP 'O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Don't rejoice when our enemies agree

Close observers of news coverage of the recent OPEC meetings, which resulted in a tentative agreement by OPEC members to cut production in an effort to drive up oil prices, may have noted a curious phenomenon. Some radio and TV newscasters in particular could almost be heard heaving a silent sigh of relief when reporting that the negotiations were on the verge of success, that it seemed likely that an agreement would ensue. What was going on?

Most people who would prefer to live in a civilized and relatively peaceful world have an understandable bias in favor of successful negotiations among disputing parties. If people who disagree can sit down and resolve their differences around a table rather than pulling out guns, knives or bombs and going at it until the most ruthless or brutal party emerges the winner, that's usually a good thing.

Usually, But the OPEC cartel is not a group such that disagreements among them threaten innocent outside parties. It is an open conspiracy against the interests of all users of energy in the rest of the world. Insofar as its members agree among themselves, the normal functioning of the marketplace is defeated and the rest of us lose.

Some commentators seem to have bought into the notion that agreement among OPEC nations is important to some will-o'-the-wisp thing called "stability" in international energy markets. This is nonsense. Not only is such "stability" obtained at the cost of artificially high energy prices, but in the long run more reliable stability results from the interplay of market forces than from artificially high, administered prices.

A general tendency to believe that negotiations and agreements are, in some ethereal or existential sense, a "good thing," should not prevent some intelligent discrimination. When those who seek to do us harm agree among themselves, we would not be well-advised to rejoice.

Bad motives can backfire

The campaign to repeal the 22nd Amendment, which limits any president to two terms, is a good idea with a bad motive. As a matter of democratic principle, it makes perfect sense to let the voters decide any chief executive's fitness for a third (or four, or fifth) term. But of those Republicans who trumpet the cause as a vehicle for re-electing Ronald Reagan, some are guilty of cynicism and some of naivete.

The Republicans are the victims of poetic justice. It was they, back in 1951, who exacted posthumous revenge on Franklin Roosevelt by making it illegal for anyone to do what he had done—win four presidential terms. Their action came back to haunt them when it blocked Dwight Eisenhower from running again in 1960, and it now stands in Ronald Reagan's way. So say Republicans, though it is difficult to imagine the oldest president in American history volunteering in 1988, at the age of 77, for another four years.

No matter. The architect of this campaign, Rep. Guy Vander Jagt of Michigan, also happens to be chairman of the National Republican Campaign Committee, with the responsibility of raising funds for GOP candidates. His committee has sent out a million letters urging recipients to support the repeal effort so Americans can keep Ronald Reagan in the White House. Vander Jagt, who has limited use for moral support prefers the kind that can be deposited in the bank.

Republican financial contributors, like

Democratic ones, have been known to let their political passions cloud their better judgment. The GOP hierarchy hopes potential donors devoted to Ronald Reagan will overlook the inconvenient obstacles to scrapping the 22nd Amendment in time for him to run in 1988. Gullibility, as is often the case, is a Republican asset. It showed up recently among several hundred people staging a rally, across the street from the White House, which featured "Reagan 88" buttons and such chants as "Sorry, George. Sorry Jack. We'll be bringing Ronnie back." One especially nervy GOP congressman said, "Why just four more years? Why not eight?"

One obstacle to these fantasies is that the Democrats hold most of the seats in the House of Representatives and 45 in the Senate. A constitutional amendment requires two-thirds of the votes in both houses. The chance that the Democrats willingly will expose themselves to another presidential race by the same man who in the past two elections captured 94 percent of the electoral votes is roughly equal to the chance that Daniel Ortega will join the contras. Even if congressional Democrats are gripped by mass insanity—I know, I know, it has happened before—there is the small matter of getting the approval of three-quarters of the state legislatures in time for the next election. That would be difficult even if Democrats didn't control at least one house of the legislature in 38 states.

The Republicans got their way back in 1951 only because they were willing to exclude the Democratic incumbent, Harry Truman, from the new rule. The only hope of getting the amendment repealed is to make Ronald Reagan ineligible. Then the decision might be considered on its long-term merits, not on its short-term political effect.

On that basis, the repeal effort should win easily. If a twice-elected president wants another term and the people agree, why should the Constitution stop them? The prospect of another term would strengthen the chief executive, who is now something of a lame duck from the day of his re-election. It also would make him more careful about using his enhanced power, because he would have to answer to the voters. It also would eliminate the possibility—a chilling one for most Americans back in 1944—that a United States in the midst of a crisis that threatens its very existence could be forced to change presidents. Sometimes, as a Texas football coach used to say, you have to dance with the one that brung you.

The Republicans probably haven't considered such weighty dangers posed by the 22nd Amendment. Their real motives now are to raise money for the GOP and keep the incumbent in the White House, in that order. Democratic principle has little to do with it.

They should have learned by now that bad motives can backfire. Repeal, after all, may produce more poetic justice. But on Jan. 20, 1997, when President Mario Cuomo is taking his third oath of office, it will be too late for Republicans to reconsider.

The modern lawbreakers

The men who had come to my office were from a respected corporation. They had a new product, they said, which they were hoping I would help them advertise.

I have never advertised any product which has not first proved itself to me. I cannot be enthusiastic about something I don't even use.

But this new product of theirs was such that they were sure if I would try it I would surely discover it to be the best of all such devices.

I listened to their proposition, examined their product's claims and was incredulous.

They wanted me to advertise burglar tools!

Now, that is not quite the truth.

But they did want me to advertise - to try to sell you - an electronic device for lawbreaking.

I'm talking about the so-called "fuzz-buster." This is the electronic gizmo which you install in your car to warn you when you are on police radar.

This way you can exceed the speed law and slow down only when this fuzz-buster warns you that you are being watched.

They are illegal in only three states. Nowhere else but in America would merchants be allowed legally to sell a device for purposely breaking the law.

Only a few publications are refusing to carry their ads. I refused.

I did not throw those fellows out of my office. After all, I had publicly expresses disenchantment with the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit which I considered - and still do - unrealistic.

But I did let them know that I would certainly not help them contribute to the delinquency of those American motorists who would rather flout the law than change it.

I'm told that 4 million American motorists have already bought these devices. Nearly half of those were sold last year.

One manufacturer sold 400,000 last year at $300 each.

The technology is simple. A radar detector, mounted with a clear view through the windshield, can "hear" a police radar beam from as far as 5 miles away. Then, with a warning buzzer, it tells the driver to slow down.

Letting a driver know when he is being watched by radar is like letting a suspect gangster know when his phone is being tapped. And we wouldn't think of doing that.

Will old mule unleash one last kick?

By William A. Rusher

SEOUL, South Korea — What's going on in North Korea? Communism's longest-surviving and most despotic dictator, Kim Il Sung, who did his deadly but unsuccessful best 35 years ago to incorporate South Korea in his domain, is approaching the end of his career with that consuming ambition still unfulfilled. But recent disturbing developments north of the 38th parallel suggest that there may be one more kick left in the old mule, and that it may be administered in connection with the 1988 Olympics, which are being hosted by South Korea.

I'm here at the invitation of the World Media Association to be its guest on a fact-finding tour of northeast Asia — an offer that was too tempting to turn down. Readers should know that the association is linked to Reverend Sun Myung Moon; but the number and distinction of the participants in this trip ought to set to rest any concern that their critical faculties have been subverted.

Such redoubtable journalists as Arnold Beichman, Tom Bethell and Richard Grenier, not to mention scholars like Dr. Maria Hsia Chang, Berkeley Professor A. James Gregor, the Hoover Institution's Alvin Rabushka and supply-sider Jude Wanniski, are scarcely the glassy-eyed type. All 26 or so of us are under the leadership of former U.S. Ambassador Douglas MacArthur II, who is as easy to fool as a Mississippi river-boat gambler. So come with us, and let's take a look at northeast Asia today.

Seoul is our first stop. This capital city and crown jewel of South Korea can never forget that it is a mere 25 miles from the Demilitarized Zone that marks the border with North Korea — a statistic that (as with West Berlin) gives life the special zest that comes from being lived on the edge.

But Seoul, like the rest of South Korea, is, foremost, a stunning economic success story. In the past 25 years, despite recurrent political instability and the real and growing threat from the north, per capita income in South Korea has risen by an incredible 2,600 percent. The distribution of this new wealth is the second evenest (after Taiwan) in East Asia.

Politically, the picture has had more shadows. Since 1961 South Korea has been governed by a succession of authoritarian military regimes, which have flirted with full democracy without ever making it to the altar. Now President Chun Doo Hwan has promised constitutional reform and national elections by 1988, and even his foes are beginning to believe his vow that he will not be a candidate in them.

Meanwhile, there are ominous developments to the north. During the 1970s, North Korea increased its armed forces to levels incompatible with anything but offensive use. Recently, there has been a massive "forward redeployment" of highly mobile strike forces to within some 35 miles of the DMZ, together with heightened readiness in the areas from which an attack southward would be launched.

Will an attack come? If so, when? Observers note that South Korea is hosting the 1988 Olympics, and has already spent hundreds of millions of dollars on a huge new stadium, other athletic facilities and residences for upward of 13,000 athletes. (Some 10,000 journalists and 270,000 visiting spectators are also expected.) The event will be an enormous feather in South Korea's cap — and a corresponding humiliation for Kim Il Sung.

Will the old megalomaniac choose to disrupt the Olympics with blood-curdling rattles of his saber or even an actual invasion? America wants to know, because there's a U.S. infantry division on the DMZ. Much may depend on whether the U.S.S.R. (which doesn't recognize South Korea diplomatically) decides to repeat its Los Angeles performance and boycott the games. But nobody here is betting very heavily that Kim will elect to behave.

WALKED OUT OF WORK — Dennis Richard, a city garbage truck driver in Houston, was forced to join the wildcat strike after his crew didn't show up for work. This is the third day of the "sick-out" held by the garbage workers. (AP Laserphoto)

Mayor fires 150 trash collectors, police will escort garbage trucks

HOUSTON (AP) — Police were called in to escort garbage trucks on their rounds today after city officials warned that more trash collectors could be fired if they continue to stay off the job in a wildcat strike.

Mayor Kathy Whitmire fired about 150 workers who returned to their jobs Tuesday but refused to work, said spokeswoman Joanne Adams. Others who continue to call in sick or fail to report to work also could be fired, she said.

Tuesday's terminations were the first in the protest that began Monday and concerns increased workloads caused by worker layoffs.

Police escorts for garbage trucks were ordered today in an effort to prevent possible confrontations between workers and those participating in the wildcat strike, Ms. Adams said.

"We'll see how many (workers) we can get out that way," she said.

Sanitation department officials also are scheduled to meet today with workers' representatives to discuss their complaints, Ms. Adams said.

Mrs. Whitmire had asked some 900 sanitation workers who called in sick Monday to return to their jobs. But only 54 out of 402 garbage workers scheduled to work left a city service center Tuesday to retrieve trash, Solid Waste Management Department spokeswoman Juanita Howard said.

Only 18 of 32 garbage trucks were on the streets, she said.

Idled workers milled about outside the yard and police were summoned, but no trouble was reported.

"Right now it's just a wait-and-see situation," Ms. Howard said.

Of 1,100 people working for the solid waste department, 159 were dismissed and routes were lengthened by 20 percent on Aug. 1 in a second round of planned layoffs.

State law forbids public employees from striking, said Richard Timmons, business manager for a local American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees. He added, however, that the law does not restrict individual action on job problems.

Ms. Adams said workers who call in sick will eventually be asked to show proof of their illness, and those who do not report to work for three days without calling in at all could be dismissed.

Third hearing scheduled for medical examiners

AUSTIN (AP) — Because of "unanswered questions," the Senate Nominations Committee has scheduled an unusual third hearing for eight appointees to the State Board of Medical Examiners.

Five members of the 15-member medical examiners board appeared Tuesday to answer probing committee questions about what kind of job the board has done to police Texas physicians.

But after almost five hours of testimony, committee chairman Chet Edwards said, "There are still unanswered questions."

"I think we have heard a confession today that malpractice cases are not being prosecuted properly in Texas," said Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville. "I would like to see more than verbal commitment to tougher tasks."

Two of the nominees named by Gov. Mark White appeared before the committee on Aug. 12 and the eighth is due to appear Thursday, the day the committee is also scheduled to vote.

Committee members took turns Tuesday probing a backlog of malpractice cases before the board, some several years old. They also asked why most disciplinary action against doctors is behind closed doors.

"Bad doctors are hurting us all. They are ruining the profession," said Dr. Philip Sanger, a Waco physician who appeared as a public witness. "Policing of physicians is being done very poorly."

Board chairman Dr. Carlos Godinez, however, told the committee that "we want to get the bad doctors out of practice just as much as you do."

"We've got three lawsuits filed against the board now because we are trying to do something about bad doctors," said Dr. Charles Dryden, who was appointed to the board a year ago.

But Edwards, D-Duncanville, referred several times to a national TV program recently that said a Texas doctor who made a $119 million settlement over the 1980 death of a patient was still licensed to practice in Texas.

Dr. James Lively, a Corpus Christi osteopath reappointed to the board, said he understood the case Edwards spoke about would be presented to the board within two months.

"What kind of staff would have to go for six years before taking action on a $119 million malpractice case?" Edwards asked.

Godinez said board attorneys do not give them details on a case until it is actually before the board.

"I think this must raise the question of whether there are other cases like this out there that the staff has handled this way," Edwards said.

Sen. Bob McFarland, R-Dallas, said the board proposed to the Legislature two years ago the hiring of hearing examiners who could clear up the backlog of malpractice cases.

"Here it is two years later, and you are even further behind," McFarland said. "We have a crisis in the liability insurance industry, and one reason may be that malpractice is high in this state."

Godinez replied, however, that "I don't think you can blame us for malpractice insurance in the state."

The board handled 669 complaints in 1985 and 271 disciplinary actions were taken, he said, adding that there were 34 cancellations of medical licenses and administrative sanctions handed out in 125 cases.

Godinez said if the full board takes any action it is made public, although if a doctor voluntarily agrees to a suspension or other administrative sanction, the action is not made public.

He also said the board is trying to hire more investigators with medical knowledge to replace some current investigators, most of whom are former law enforcement officers.

Also appearing before the committee as nominees were Dr. N.E. Dudley of Galveston and Dr. Arthur Jansa of Houston. Two nominees, Cindy Jenkins of Winnie and Dr. John C. Bagwell of Dallas, were heard earlier.

Bomb explodes in East Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A bomb exploded near an automobile showroom in Christian east Beirut today, damaging several vehicles and injuring three people, police said.

A plastic bag containing the 22 pounds of explosives went off near the Mercedes-Benz showroom in the Dora district at 11:15 a.m., authorities said.

Several privately owned cars and a bus parked nearby were damaged by the blast, but none of the sedans on display was hit, according to police.

It was the eighth bombing attack in the Lebanese capital in 24 days. A total of 96 people have been killed and 540 wounded.

Mexico man says he was lured to woman's home

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — A 22-year-old defendant in an aggravated sexual assault trial testified that a Terlingua woman lured him to her home and seduced him with alcohol and drugs.

Refugio Gardea Gonzalez of Jimenez, Mexico, is standing trial on charges that he abducted the woman, robbed her at knifepoint and repeatedly raped her during an eight-hour period in late October 1985.

He denied the charges in court Tuesday, saying instead that the woman had lured him to her home and offered him drugs, sex, alcohol and money.

"At her house she invited me to drink a beer and smoke marijuana, but I didn't want to," Gonzalez said through an interpreter.

"She said I could be an expert and I took a puff and it stuck in my throat and I felt hot and dizzy. Then she came to me and she told me she had what I needed and I had what she needed."

Gonzalez also said the 39-year-old woman consented to sexual intercourse with him numerous times during the evening.

The 39-year-old woman, however, denies Gonzalez' claim that she forced him to smoke marijuana. She also told jurors she was forced to walk over desolate desert canyons for several hours before she was robbed at knifepoint and raped repeatedly over an eight-hour period.

She said she escaped by jumping from her pickup truck after tricking the man into believing she could get him additional money from her office.

Jim Smith, a Terlingua businessman, told jurors Tuesday that the woman showed up at his house Oct. 27, 1985, screaming hysterically that she had been held prisoner, the San Angelo Standard-Times reported.

At the time of the incident, Brewster County authorities had chased a suspect to the Mexican border, where he abandoned the woman's pickup truck and escaped across the Rio Grande.

Mexican authorities later captured Gonzalez about four miles inside Mexico, but refused to surrender him to Texas authorities.

Unidentified kidnapers abducted Gonzalez from the Ojinaga jail in Mexico, however, and spirited him back into Texas in January. American authorities say an anonymous caller led them to an isolated roadside park in Alpine, where they found Gonzalez nude and tied to a tree.

Testimony was scheduled to resume today.

Convicted killer helps executioners with lethal injection

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Convicted killer Randy Lynn Woolls helped executioners find veins in his drug-scarred arms as he was put to death early today for the brutal 1979 robbery-slaying of a mother of four at a drive-in movie theater where she worked.

"I'd like to tell the people fighting against the death penalty to continue their work," he said in a final statement. "I'd like to say I'm sorry for the victim and family and I wish I could make it all right."

He choked, heaved slightly and quickly lay still less than 10 seconds after the deadly drugs began pumping into his arms.

He was pronounced dead at 12:23 a.m. Woolls, 36, contended he never knew he killed Betty Stotts, 44, of Kerrville, because he was high on liquid Valium he had stolen during a burglary of a veterinary clinic.

Woolls, who said he began using drugs at age 13, assisted prison technicians finding veins in his arms, telling them some veins had collapsed long ago.

"He was helpful in flexing his fist in attempting to make his veins come out," said Attorney General Jim Mattox, who watched the preparations for Woolls' death. "He said because he was a heavy drug user, people would have a difficult time finding his veins."

Woolls' final appeals had been rejected earlier Tuesday by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Woolls was the 16th Texas inmate executed since the state resumed the death penalty in 1982. He was the sixth this year.

One of two lethal needles was inserted into his right arm just below a tattoo of a buzzard grasping a syringe. The second needle was placed in veins on a left arm tattooed with images of the Grim Reaper and a large swastika.

Prison officials said Woolls appeared nervous during the day. His final meal consisted of a cheeseburger, french fries, chocolate cake and iced tea. He also asked to buy a Tootsie Roll Pop but did not have enough money, so prison guards chipped in the 7 cents to buy him one.

Woolls, a ninth-grade dropout, blamed drugs for each of his three prison sentences.

"I don't know what's supposed to be done with me," he said in a final death row interview a week ago. "I don't know whether I deserve a life sentence. I feel death is a little severe for something that was a mistake."

Mrs. Stotts was collecting ticket money the evening of June 16, 1979, when she was killed. She was beaten with a tire tool, had her throat slashed and then was set on fire.

Testimony at Woolls' trial indicated he took $600 from the woman, took her car and drove into the Kerrville theater, where police found him.

"It's obvious I was out of my mind," Woolls said.

Kerr County District Attorney Ron Sutton, who prosecuted Woolls, said an autopsy showed Mrs. Stotts was still alive when Woolls set her on fire.

"We had him in the theater in her car. Her blood was on money in the car," Sutton said. "There was no question about guilt or innocence. The punishment was well deserved for the crime he did."

Mrs. Stotts' daughter, Deborah Coonfield, 27, said her mother was a deeply religious person who had such a premonition of death that she left her husband and four children letters written just a few days before her slaying. In the notes, found after her death, Mrs. Stotts told her family she would not always be with them in body, but would be in spirit.

"Everybody seems to expect me to hate him, but I don't," Mrs. Coonfield says of Woolls.

Two more Texas death row inmates face execution within the next week. Larry Smith, convicted of the 1978 slaying of a Dallas convenience store manager, is scheduled to die early Friday. Chester Lee Wicker, convicted of abducting a Beaumont woman, trying to rape her and then burying her alive, faces injection Aug. 26.

DRAFT ROBERTSON AD — Political consultant Dick Minard views a commercial to draft Pat Robertson for president featuring cowboy and fast-food restaurateur Roy Rogers and his wife Dale Evans. Minard, who until recently worked for Robertson, told reporters in Washington Tuesday that the commercials were "just the beginning" in the campaign to draft the television evangelist. (AP Laserphoto)

Draft Pat Robertson television ads feature Roy Rogers, Dale Evans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Roy Rogers, the cowboy hero and fast-food restaurateur, is urging Americans to "Join Dale and me as members of the National Committee to Draft Pat Robertson for President."

Rogers and his wife, Dale Evans, are starring in a television commercial Robertson supporters are running in seven states in an effort to drum up support for the television evangelist.

Political consultant Dick Minard, who until recently worked for Robertson, previewed the commercial Tuesday and said, "Our goal is to convince the American public Pat Robertson is a legitimate candidate."

Minard resigned June 27 as national director of Robertson's Freedom Council.

He described the commercial as "just the beginning" of an effort to convince Robertson to run for president, but there appeared no need to urge him to seek the 1988 Republican presidential nomination.

"There is a fabulous groundswell of enthusiasm for my getting into the race," Robertson said Sunday on the CBS show "Face the Nation."

He has formed a committee called Americans for Pat Robertson that is accepting contributions to finance his preliminary activities as he explores the prospect of a presidential candidacy.

At the same time, Robertson has conceded there is "an antipathy in this country against ministers, as such, a clergyman, a parish priest, if you will, getting involved in politics."

To counter that, he has said he will stress his background as a businessman and broadcaster, with degrees in law and economics.

Minard said the Rogers commercial will run in Alabama, California, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas.

The committee also plans to promote a Robertson candidacy with billboards in Tennessee, Indiana, South Carolina and Oklahoma.

He said the committee was spending about $20,000 on the initial round of advertising. He said Rogers and Miss Evans had donated their services and that the committee was talking to other entertainment and sports figures about appearing in subsequent ads.

In the commercial, the 73-year-old stars of Hollywood westerns of four decades ago urge people to join the draft committee.

"America needs Pat Robertson," Rogers says. "He's capable, he's qualified and he cares."

"Please write today," adds Miss Evans. "Let's draft Pat."

The couple supported President Reagan in his presidential campaigns.

Population is growing despite low fertility

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's population will continue growing for several decades despite more than a dozen years of fertility rates that are resulting in fewer children than parents, a Census report indicates.

Not since 1971 has U.S. fertility been at a level which would produce the long-term result of each couple leaving two children behind.

Nonetheless, births exceeded deaths by 1.67 million last year, and immigration brought population growth to 2,246,000 in 1985.

The result was a national population estimated at 240,468,000 as of Jan. 1 this year, the Census Bureau reported in its new study, "Estimates of the Population of the United States and Components of Change."

The 1.67 million more births than deaths is known as the natural increase in the population, and it took place despite a continuing low total fertility rate.

Fertility was up slightly in 1985, although nowhere near the levels recorded during the post World War II Baby Boom era, the report showed.

But even with the increase, it was the 14th consecutive fertility rate is an estimate of the number of children that would be born to 1,000 women in their lifetimes if birth rates for the year remained constant.

A rate of 2,100 is considered replacement level. That allows for two children to replace the mother and father, plus an extra 100 to account for children who fail to survive to adulthood.

For 1985, the nation's total fertility rate was 1,837, according to the new report, meaning that over their lifetimes each 2,000 parents would have 1,837 children.

In the long run that results in 163 fewer people per 2,000 parents.

But in the short term the result is an apparent increase. That's because during the period when both parents and offspring are alive the 2,000 parents and 1,837 children means a total population of 3,837.

The country's natural population increase doesn't include immigration, which also adds to the population — and in a far different manner than in the past.

The 1985 immigration estimate of 577,000 was down slightly from 1984, and well below the 1980 level, in which Census officials say Cuban and Haitian arrivals pushed incoming totals to the highest since the era of World War I and the Great Depression.

"Gradually ... the proportion of immigrants from Europe has declined from 41.8 percent of all alien immigrants in the year ending June 30, 1964, to 31.1 percent in the year ending June 30, 1970, to just 10.5 percent in the year ending Sept. 30, 1983," the report said.

"Immigrants from Asia increased from 7.5 percent of the total in 1964 to 25.4 percent in 1970 and to 49.6 percent in 1983," it added.

The result is that the population segment listed as "other races" is the nation's fastest growing, increasing by 5 percent in 1985. The other races category includes Asians, Pacific Islander, American Indians and Alaska natives.

By comparison the white population grew by 0.7 percent during the year, and blacks were up 1.5 percent.

New law means headaches for income tax preparers

BOSTON (AP) — Accountant Larry Ardito has a name for the tax overhaul plan before Congress: "We call it the Accountants and Lawyers Retirement Act of 1986."

Leonard Linsky, who prepares income tax returns for low and moderate income clients in Boston, takes a dimmer view of the proposal.

"I figure we'll probably lose about 25 percent of all the returns we do," he says. "It will cost the business $4,000 to $5,000."

Just as the law would affect taxpayers differently, so would its impact vary on the divergent industry that prepares 44 percent of the 99.6 million personal tax returns filed last year.

The new law would mean more work and higher fees for certified public accountants who will shepherd monied clients through the dizzying variety of changes in depreciation allowances and capital gains tax schedules.

But the law, which may eventually eliminate the need to file returns for 30 million Americans, would likely hurt storefront accountants and seasonal tax preparers.

For the next few years, however, those in the field expect more taxpayers to seek professional help to explain the new rules of the tax game.

And they can expect to pay for that help.

Linsky plans to raise the price of his service from $65 to $75 to pay for the additional work the tax forms will involve. Those with more complex finances can expect even higher costs.

"There are going to be quite a number of more hours involved in preparing someone's taxes and that's going to increase our business," said Gerry Padwe, national director of tax practice for the Washington accounting firm Touche Ross.

The immediate problem for tax preparers is to keep up with the changes being considered by Congress.

Accountants speak with awe about the 1,000 pages of legislation they must pore through and the even longer regulations that the Internal Revenue Service will write to explain the law.

Ardito, a CPA in suburban Andover, has spent 25 hours in seminars trying to keep up with the twists and turns

Kiddie tax and other little changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — There's a little something for the kids in the big tax-overhaul bill, and it isn't good news for their parents.

It's being called the kiddie tax — an effort by Congress to keep parents from trying to dodge taxes by transferring income-producing property to their minor children.

Basically, the proposal would require the parents to pay tax — at their higher rate — on interest and other income earned on assets they turn over to their children.

The bill also would require that every person 5 and older have a Social Security number that would have to be written on the parent's tax return.

The aim is to make sure that when parents separate, only one of them claims the child as an exemption; a recent IRS study found this to be the fastest-growing area of individual tax cheating.

The kiddie provisions are among several that are assured of being in the compromise bill because they have been passed by both the House and Senate.

Another such provision in the compromise, awaiting final action in Congress next month, calls on the Internal Revenue Service to study the feasibility of allowing people with simple tax situations to forego filing returns in the future.

By the early 1990s, the IRS says, as many as 30 million couples and returns could be a part of the return-free system.

The IRS would calculate their taxes on the basis of wage and interest reports filed by employers and banks.

Here are some of the other provisions in both the House and Senate bills which, therefore, will be in the final package:

—Repeal income averaging, a tax-saving device used by about 5.4 million taxpayers whose incomes fluctuate sharply from year to year. The Senate wanted to save it for farmers, but the House refused.

—Tax all unemployment compensation. Under present law, benefits of single people with total incomes under $12,000 and couples under $18,000 are tax-free and a share of benefits for people with higher earnings can be exempt.

—End the $100-a-person exclusion for dividends, affecting more than 14 million taxpayers.

—Tax scientific and literary awards, such as the Pulitzer and Nobel prizes, unless they are given to charity.

—Require any person who must file a tax return to list any tax-exempt interest received.

—Require that a person whose income is not subject to withholding make quarterly estimated tax payments totaling at least last year's tax liability or 90 percent of the current year liability, up from 80 percent under present law.

—Raise to 1 percent a month the penalty for not paying taxes when due.

Car bomb terror grips Iran

By The Associated Press

A siege of car-bomb terror has gripped Iran's cities as terrorists plant explosives in busy plazas, outside mosques and near bazaars in an apparent campaign to undermine Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's rule.

Two explosions the last four days in the Iranian capital of Tehran and the Shiite Moslem holy city of Qom have killed 33 people and wounded at least 100.

They were the latest in a series of at least 16 bombings — mostly the explosions of dynamite-laden automobiles — that have killed at least 55 people and wounded more than 300 the last 15 months.

Khomeini's 7-year-old revolutionary government, speaking through the Islamic Republic News Agency, in most cases has blamed "U.S. agents," Iraq, which has been at war with Iran since 1980, or the leftist Iranian guerrilla group Mujahedeen Khalq for the bombings.

American officials dismiss the allegations of U.S. involvement. The Mujahedeen Khalq, based the past 2½ months in Iraq, also reject the charges and contend that agents of Khomeini's own government are planting the bombs.

By attributing them to the anti-Khomeini underground, the bombings are designed to "blemish the image of the Iranian people's just resistance" the Moslem socialist group said in a statement issued Tuesday in Paris.

The Mujahedeen Khalq, which in the early 1980s claimed responsibility for devastating bomb attacks that killed revolutionary President Mohammad Ali Rajai and Prime Minister Mohammad Javad Bahonar, maintain they do not engage in indiscriminate attacks that injure innocent civilians.

They have kept up their assaults on government targets, however. In a recent news bulletin, they claimed to have killed or wounded 12 Revolutionary Guardsmen and other "agents of torture and execution" in clashes involving small arms or grenades in four Iranian cities.

After moving their headquarters from Paris to Baghdad in June, reportedly under French pressure, the Mujahedeen Khalq, led by Massoud Rajavi, said the shift closer to Iran's border would enable them to open a new phase in their struggle against Khomeini's Moslem fundamentalist rule.

Retiree says he enjoys providing the personal service of a hand-dug grave

By MARK AUGUST
Dallas Times Herald

WAXAHACHIE, Texas (AP)—Most people retire to a life of leisure or the pursuit of some hobby for which there was never enough time.

Not 72-year-old Carnell Polk. He digs graves — by hand. Polk flips the last shovel of dirt out of a grave, wipes the early morning sweat from his forehead and chuckles: "I don't even consider retiring. I've already retired twice in my lifetime, and I'm in no hurry to retire again. "We live in a different time where it takes a whole lot to live. I've a wife and home to support. So I guess I'll be digging graves for a whole lot longer. I just ain't going nowhere."

He took up grave digging about seven years ago, mostly for the exercise and the extra money. He digs about two graves a week. During the heat of the summer, he gets started about 5 a.m. and quits about four hours later.

He takes on a helper on rare weeks when he gets five or more orders.

On a typical morning, Polk will start and finish a typical grave, measuring 8-by-3½ feet and 4½ feet deep.

He's dug more than 600 graves, most of them around here. He's dug graves as far as 30 miles away in Milford and neighboring Italy and Red Oak.

"I took on this job because I was concerned, that in my retirement, my physical condition would get bad," says Polk, who also owns a vegetable store that he has been running near his home in east Waxahachie for about three years. "I wanted to keep in shape. For me this is just another job. But it's a job I really enjoy."

He's accustomed to hard work. He laid track for the Southern Pacific railroad for 20 years before he tried retirement the first time. After running out of patience with idle time and little money, he went back to work, this time as a long haul driver for Southwestern Church Furniture Company.

"I did that for another 20 years," Polk says. "We had to work on those heavy pews and if you've ever sat on a church pew, you know how heavy those things are."

"So you see, I've always done hard jobs, and digging graves is something I really enjoy. I don't like the idea of having graves dug with machines. I feel they should be done the old fashioned way because one can give special care."

His equipment consists of two old shovels, a wooden frame for measuring the grave and a metal rod that comes in handy when he wants to make sure he's not digging down over another grave.

Polk charges $100 a grave. Most graves are dug today by back-hoe at a cost of about $250, says John Beckwith, owner of the Golden Gate Funeral home on East Main Street.

"He's worked for me for the past five years, and all his work has been top notch," says Beckwith, who also owns a funeral home in Oak Cliff. "I've yet to see someone who does a better job at digging graves. I know what I'm talking about: I've spent 33 years in the funeral home business."

Elymas Tatum got Polk started digging graves. Tatum, who owns the Wakefield Cemetery in east Waxahachie, says he once found Polk tending to his mother's grave in the cemetery.

"That was seven years ago. I asked him if he'd mind digging graves at the cemetery," Tatum recalls. "He said: 'I'll give it a try.' What followed was nothing but good work from him. I don't know what we'd have done without his services in this area because we're in no shape to have the back hoe machines dig the graves for us. It's just too expensive."

Polk lives in a modest two-bedroom frame house with his second wife, Norma, 60. They've been married eight years. When he's not digging graves, Polk is in the vegetable shop behind the Golden Gate Funeral home.

"The grave digging business has been good to me, and it's kept me quite occupied even though it's somewhat slow right now," says Polk. "While things are far from the good things I'd like to have one day, I'm able to pick up a little change from my grave-digging. And you know that helps to keep the homefront going. And as for the vegetable business, well, let's just say it helps to bring in some money."

Clements sells Schlumberger stock

DALLAS (AP)—Governatorial candidate Bill Clements has sold stock he owned in an oil-well servicing firm that has come under fire for continuing business dealings with Libya through its subsidiaries, officials say.

Reggie Bashur, Clements' campaign press secretary, told The Dallas Morning News the Republican candidate sold 961,080 shares of stock in Schlumberger Ltd. for an average $34 a share, a total of $32.68 million.

Bashur, contacted at home by

The Associated Press, would not say why Clements sold the stock in the Netherland Antilles firm.

He said Clements believes the stock ownership and transaction are private matters, and also declined comment on how Clements used the money made from the sale.

Clements, who is on the campaign trail line and could not be reached for comment, acquired the stock in 1984 when Schlumberger merged with Sedco Inc., an oil-well drilling firm he founded.

As of last Friday, Clements still held 816,879 shares of Schlumberger stock worth $26.45 million, the newspaper said.

Schlumberger has headquarters in New York and Paris and is the world's largest oil-well service company.

President Reagan ordered all Americans and U.S. businesses out of Libya earlier this year because of the African country's terrorist activity targeted against Americans.

For any special occasion

Dessert buffet makes grand finale

A special meal deserves an elaborate ending. Whether it's an elegant sit-down dinner or a casual backyard barbecue, a sumptuous selection of show-off desserts makes any menu memorable.

When the occasion calls for something more than a favorite dessert standby, a serve-yourself buffet of homemade sweet treats is ideal. The keys to success for this grand finale are to look to recipes that can be made well in advance, and to include a special something for every taste.

Three or four desserts will fill the bill. At least one should boast America's favorite flavor — chocolate. Another might showcase the season's finest fresh fruits. And, for those people to whom dessert can mean only one thing, be sure to include a cheesecake.

For this summer's most memorable get-togethers, here's a special new selection of dessert sensations. These tempting treats team grandly when served together, and when the crowd is small, each is just as impressive presented solo.

A chocolate conclusion to a meal is always welcome, and Orange-Filled Chocolate Cups are sure to rate rave reviews. Far simpler to prepare than their fancy appearance indicates, the cups are prepared by coating the inside of paper-lined muffin cups with a mixture of melted chocolate pieces and margarine. The light-as-a-cloud orange flavored filling boasts a rich cheesecake-like flavor and texture.

Rising impressively, four layers high, Banana-Strawberry Cream Torte is a show-stopper. The cake boasts the rich flavor of cream cheese and mashed banana for tender, extra-moist texture, and the whipped cream-cream cheese filling is layered delectably with fresh fruit.

Cocoa Cheesecake Supreme is a chocolate lover's dream come true. The chocolate crumb crust boasts a smooth, rich cocoa filling, and an easy raspberry topping sauces it smartly.

For those who favor fresh fruit, Lemon Dream Dessert will be a favorite. The light and airy lemon flavored base is made ahead and topped impressively with the cook's choice of colorful seasonal fruit.

ORANGE-FILLED CHOCOLATE CUPS

- 1 1/4 c. semi-sweet chocolate pieces
- 1/4 c. margarine

Soften gelatin in water; stir over low heat until dissolved. Combine cream cheese and sugar, mixing at medium speed on electric mixer until well blended. Gradually add gelatin and juice, mixing until blended. Chill until thickened but not set.

Beat with electric mixer or wire whisk until light and fluffy; fold in whipped topping. Carefully removed chocolate cups from paper liners. Fill each cup with approximately 1/4 cup cream cheese mixture. Chill.

- 2 c. strawberry slices
- 1 c. banana slices
- 1/4 c. chopped pecans, toasted

Beat margarine and granulated sugar until light and fluffy. Add cream cheese; mix well. Blend in eggs and vanilla. Add combined dry ingredients alternately with milk, mixing well after each addition. Stir in bananas. Pour into two greased and floured 8-inch layer pans. Bake at 350 degrees, 35 minutes or until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool 10 minutes; remove from pans. Cool; split each layer into two layers.

Combine cream cheese and vanilla, mixing at medium speed on electric mixer until well blended. Gradually add powdered sugar, mixing well after each addition. Fold in whipped cream. Spread each of three cake layers with 1/4 cup cream cheese mixture. Cover two layers with strawberries; cover third layer with bananas. Alternately stack strawberry and banana layers; top with remaining layer. Spread top with remaining cream cheese mixture. Chill. Sprinkle with pecans just before serving. Makes 12 servings.

COCOA CHEESECAKE SUPREME

Butter up fresh corn: serve with spicy wings

By AILEEN CLAIRE
NEA Food Editor

With apologies to corn-on-the-cob purists, here's a delicious blend of oregano, Parmesan cheese, butter and pepper sauce to spread on your corn.

Serve with chicken wings and a platter of fresh mixed vegetables for a finger-food meal.

SAVORY CORN ON THE COB

- 8 ears fresh corn on the cob, husks and silk removed, or frozen corn on the cob
- 2-3rd c. butter or margarine, softened
- 1 1/2 T. grated Parmesan cheese
- 1/4 t. dried leaf oregano, crumbled
- 1/2 t. Tabasco pepper sauce
- 1/4 t. salt

In a small bowl, stir together butter, Parmesan cheese, oregano, pepper sauce and salt until combined. Cook fresh corn, covered, in boiling, salted water to cover for five to seven minutes (or prepare frozen corn according to package directions); drain and spread with mixture. This kitchen-tested recipe makes eight servings.

HOT 'N' SPICY CHICKEN WINGS

- 12 chicken wings
- Vegetable oil for frying
- 1/2 c. butter or margarine, melted
- 1 T. ketchup
- 1 t. Tabasco pepper sauce
- 1/2 t. garlic powder

Remove tips from wings and discard. Separate first and second joints of wings with a sharp knife. Pat wings dry with a paper towel. Heat about two inches of oil in a heavy saucepot to 350 degrees on a deep-fat frying thermometer. Fry wings, a few at a time, about six minutes until golden; drain on paper towels.

In small bowl, combine butter, ketchup, pepper sauce and garlic powder; mix well. Toss wing pieces in butter mixture to coat thoroughly. Serve hot or at room temperature. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 24 pieces (eight appetizer servings; four main dish servings).

SPECIAL sauces add to flavor of corn on the cob and chicken wings.

Student achievement tests gather increasing criticism

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — This fall, more than a million high school students will, as is customary, lose sleep, chew their nails, sharpen their No. 2 pencils, and spend three hours taking the dreaded SAT.

They know all too well the Ivy-covered rewards of a high score. Thousands will spend $500 or more to improve their scores with SAT coaching.

This year marks the SAT's 60th anniversary. It also marks the retirement of the president of The College Board, George H. Hanford, a pillar of educational testing for three decades. But if a recent College Board-sponsored gathering of about 100 of the nation's top testing experts is any indication, Hanford's successor, as yet unnamed, will bear the brunt of increasing criticism against the SAT.

"The time has come to replace the SAT," said James Crouse, education professor at the University of Delaware, who argued that the SAT "adds little to the predictions of college success based solely on the high school record."

University of Maryland education professor William E. Sedlacek raised the possibility that the SAT is inherently biased against minority students. Since the exam is designed to predict freshman-year college success, Sedlacek suggests it is unfair to minorities, many of whom do not hit their academic stride until later in their college careers, he said.

Short-answer tests like the SAT are profoundly affecting school curricula and the way youngsters think, said Gerald W. Bracey of the Virginia Department of Education. Multiple-choice testing encourages the view that learning consists of bits and fragments of "right" answers, rather than an understanding and appreciation of a coherent body of knowledge.

The stress on test scores, the SATs included, means teachers, principals and other educators ignore the content of tests at their peril.

"There is too much public pressure on test scores for administrators or teachers to ignore them. The media, the legislature, the general public, the people who call my office wanting to know where to live when moving to Virginia, and especially real estate agents and apartment managers, take test scores as the principal tool by which to evaluate schools," Bracey said.

The criticism of the SAT from some quarters has not, however, meant any rush by selective colleges to abandon the exam as an entrance requirement.

One of the few that has is tiny Bates College in Lewiston, Me., which made the SAT optional two years ago.

William C. Hiss, Bates' dean of admissions, in a report on the school's experiences since dropping the SAT requirement, concluded that achievement tests were slightly better predictors of college success than SATs.

Bates was also concerned about what the report called "the current mania among students for coaching." If coaching does improve scores, Bates objected to it as one more advantage for the wealthy SAT test-taker. If it doesn't work, students are wasting time and money.

The overall conclusion: Making the SAT optional has not hurt the quality or size of Bates' application pool.

And the school believes it is making just as good admissions decisions without the SAT as when they required it.

Still, for every Bates College, there are hundreds of other schools clinging loyally to the SAT as a useful admissions tool.

"I am convinced the SAT does what I want it to do in our admissions process," said Richard G. Cashwell, director of undergraduate admissions at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. "Simply stated, the SAT improves my decisions about students."

Higher SAT scores appear to be a trend

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — True or false: the Reagan administration's education policies have helped end the long decline in scholastic standards in America?

There is no doubt how the man in the White House would answer that quiz.

President Reagan often takes credit for helping spark a turnaround in high school students' Scholastic Aptitude Test scores since he took office. Scores on the college entrance exam have risen 16 points since 1981 after plummeting 90 points over two decades.

The president believes that the fall in test scores was linked to the rise in federal aid and influence over the schools in the 1960s and 1970s. "Looking to Washington for easy answers and free money did nothing to improve the quality of our children's education," he says.

"Instead, we set out to mobilize the people. We focused their attention on the issues that mattered, and we called for higher standards, for merit pay, for more discipline and for more parental involvement and choice. And the results have been spectacular," he said recently. He cited tougher graduation standards in many states and the proliferation of teacher competency tests as well as the rising SAT scores.

But some educators are skeptical of giving Reagan credit for score improvements.

Most would agree that a Reagan advisory panel helped galvanize public concern about scholastic standards with the caustic "A Nation At Risk" report in 1983.

But there is evidence that students' scores on tests other than the SAT actually started turning around long before Reagan took office.

A recent Congressional Budget Office report concluded that the about face started with children born in 1962 and 1963. Progress was evident on the achievement tests those children were taking in elementary schools in the mid-1970s, the study said.

The upward trend "moved into the higher grades at a rate of roughly a grade per year ... reaching the senior high school grades in the late 1970s," said the CBO report, "Trends in Educational Achievement."

"There has been a widespread misconception that the decline ended only within the past few years," it said.

"The declines of the 1960s and 1970s ended some time ago — as much as a decade ago in the early grades — and have since been superseded by a sizable upturn in test scores."

By some measures, the report said, American children now are performing at their highest level in 30 years.

But the report also cautioned that the progress could be evanescent. It noted that the National Assessment of Educational Progress found no change in the reading ability of 9-year-olds between 1979 and 1983. That "suggests that the upturn is, for the moment, over in the youngest age groups and that it will end fairly soon in the higher grades," it said.

However, University of Michigan psychologist Robert B. Zajonc believes SAT scores will keep rising until the year 2000, then level off and fall again.

The reason? Family sizes have gotten smaller in recent years, and Zajonc says children who are the first-born or only child usually fare better on tests of intellectual ability.

High school seniors who took the SAT in 1963, the peak year for scores, came from families that had, on the average, only 1.5 older children. In 1980, when scores were at their nadir, the average test-taker was a third-born child.

Post-vacation depression is common

By JOANN BRAAM
The Arizona Republic

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Back from vacation and feeling blue? Can't sleep at night? Short-tempered? Can't seem to get going in the morning? Just want to do NOTHING?

Chances are you have a case of "post-vacation depression."

It's not a bona fide mental illness. And it's not listed in the diagnostic manuals of the American Psychiatric Association or the American Psychological Association. But psychologists claim that the condition exists and that thousands of Americans returning from their vacations suffer from it each year.

"I think it's a pervasive problem," said Michael Brad Bayless, a Phoenix psychologist. "It affects all areas of society."

The good news is that psychologists say it doesn't last very long — generally one to three weeks. Psychologists say most people can get out of the depression by eating well, resting and exercising.

There are many theories about the depression.

Stuart Litvak, a Phoenix psychologist-author, speculates that many people feel a little down because they had such a good time vacationing, then suddenly find themselves doing something they don't like at their jobs.

"There's a big problem with (work) burnout as it is," said Litvak, whose books include "Unstress Yourself," "Use Your Head" and "More Ways to Use Your Head."

B. Joy, a psychologist with Holistic Foundation Counseling Industrial & Alcohol in Tempe, says that "what it looks to me, is a lack of completing things before leaving."

In the same vein, Scottsdale psychologist Don Muilenberg says he thinks many people assume incorrectly that vacation periods will resolve problems. "They can refresh you and improve one's outlook on life, but seldom do vacations resolve problems you had before you left on vacation," he said.

Muilenberg says that when a vacationer with this expectation returns, he becomes depressed as he realizes that "not only are his problems still there, but that it will be an extended period of time before he can get away again."

To prevent the "post-vacation blues," he said, people "should resolve their problems and get their lives in order before they go on vacation and use their vacation as a reward or a celebration."

Bayless said people feel down after a vacation because they did not set out to do what they wanted to do on it: relax.

Sometimes, there's overplanning and people follow a rigid schedule and don't have fun. Bayless said that when these vacationers return, they're tired and upset with themselves because the vacation didn't turn out to be a true vacation.

He said people react differently to the depression, which he defines as "anger turned inward toward yourself."

Symptoms may include lethargy, melancholy, neck pain, insomnia, irritability, diarrhea, hives and heart palpitations.

Depression hits "people who have been driving themselves for a long period of time," said Phoenix psychologist Ken Olson. "When they begin to slow down, they realize they are literally addicted to their adrenalin glands, and they go through withdrawal, which can cause headaches, depression, a hard time sleeping and finally a feeling of how really exhausted they are."

To prevent the depression, Olson said, people should "allow themselves to be weird for a while" on vacation.

Dear Abby

Patrons who don't speak out can't be mad if others shout

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: What can you do for those of us who find ourselves being "robbed" in a new way? In the last two weeks, I've been to a concert, a movie, a Protestant wedding and to my own place of worship — a Catholic Mass. I was robbed.

The worst was in church, where I found it necessary to pray fervently the entire time to keep from behaving in an uncharitable manner that would have been at odds with the very purpose of attending church. In each instance, I was seated near people who whispered, talked and giggled with an utter disregard for those around them.

I protested once in the movies and once at a concert to the noisemakers who robbed me of my concentration. My complaints were rudely ignored. Now, rather than complain, I have given up with the passive majority who find it impossible to deal with that kind of robbery.

Smokers who used to rob nonsmokers of clean air have been stopped for the most part, Abby. Will you please speak up for those of us who have paid good money to attend a movie but are not allowed to enjoy it? Or worse yet, those who wish to worship in peace without becoming angry with a brother?

Dear, Dear Abby, speak up, please. So many of us need you.
SILENCE, PLEASE!

DEAR SILENCE: Sorry, each of us who feels "robbed" must do his own speaking up. At a theater or concert, report the offenders to an usher or the manager. And if no action is taken, demand that your money be refunded.

In church, complain to church authorities. Obviously, parents should teach their children in the cradle respect and consideration for others.

Failure to do so breeds selfish, inconsiderate people who create disturbances in public places. Then, because people like you give up and accept that kind of behavior as something that must be tolerated, the meek shall inherit the earth populated with rude and inconsiderate people.

DEAR ABBY: I am worried about how to handle a situation that is coming up soon. My uncle is coming to visit us, and although he is a nice, older gentleman, he has some very bad grooming habits. He does not bathe often enough, and he uses no deodorant.

How do you suggest I handle this? He always reads my column. Will you please spell it out?
SMELLBOUND

DEAR SMELLBOUND: Tell your uncle, lovingly, that a daily shower or bath and a fresh change of clothes is the rule in your house. And if he argues — show him this letter.

Treat guests to Broccoli Tarts

A broccoli puff tart can be a small-portion main course for someone who is dieting, an appetizer for a party or a take-along side dish for an outing such as tailgating before a football game.

Serve while hot or make ahead and keep in the refrigerator. Reheat, if desired.

DEVILED BROCCOLI PUFFS
1 pkg. ready-crust tarts (6)
1 (10 oz.) pkg. chopped broccoli
1 T. butter, melted
2 t. Dijon mustard (prepared)
4 egg whites, room temperature

1/4 t. salt
1/2 t. white pepper
Paprika

Cook broccoli according to package directions. Drain well in colander, using back of spoon to press out all water. Cool slightly. Beat egg whites with salt until stiff peaks form, but not dry. Stir mustard into melted butter. Then toss broccoli with butter and add white pepper. Fold in egg whites and bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes. Garnish with paprika. This kitchen-tested recipe makes six.

Royals' White a one-man show

By JONATHAN VITTI
AP Sports Writer

It will likely be a long, long time before another pitcher yells at Frank White.

The veteran of 12 outstanding seasons put on probably the best performance of his career Tuesday, driving in seven runs and winning the game in the 11th inning with his second homer of the night as the Kansas City Royals defeated the Texas Rangers 9-8.

"If I had a better game, I can't remember when," White said.

White singled in a run in the first inning, but it all really started in the second against Rangers starter Mike Loynd.

"The second time out, when he struck me out, he started yelling at me," White said. "I don't know what he was yelling at, I guess he wanted to show me up. I started to shout back at him, but I didn't."

"I just believe in the old-fashioned approach."

So White gave the Texas pitchers an old-fashioned whipping. The Rangers took a 7-1 lead, but White doubled in two runs in the fifth and hit a three-run homer in the sixth, giving the Royals an 8-7 lead.

Texas tied it up in the seventh, but White led off the 11th with a line drive over the left-field wall.

In other American League games, Minnesota beat Boston 5-1 and Seattle beat New York 7-3, leaving the Red Sox lead in the East at 5 1-2 games. Milwaukee beat Cleveland 5-3, Oakland downed Baltimore 4-1, and Toronto stopped Chicago 5-1. Detroit split a doubleheader with California, losing the opener 5-2 and winning the nightcap 8-3.

Twins 5, Red Sox 1
The Twins, leading the majors with 154 homers, are now the only team with three 25-homer men. Kirby Puckett and Kent Hrbek hit back-to-back homers in the third inning and Gary Gaetti added a two-run homer in the sixth. For each, it was home run No. 25.

Brewers 5, Indians 3
Milwaukee's Paul Molitor hit two home runs and two doubles. He was 4-for-4, scored three times and drove in three runs, extending his hitting streak to 12 games, as the Brewers dumped Cleveland.

Angels 5, Tigers 2
Tigers 8, Angels 3

Lou Whitaker homered for Detroit's two runs in the first game, then drove in five runs in the second-game victory, three with a bases-loaded double.

Bob Boone hit a two-run homer and run-scoring double and Doug DeCinces had a single, double and run-scoring triple in the first game as the Angels ruined the return of Dan Petry, 4-6, from the ranks of the injured.

A's 4, Orioles 1
Dave Stewart, 6-1, allowed only an unearned run on four hits and a walk in 7 2-3 innings, winning for the fifth time in six starts. Jay Howell finished for his 11th save.

The Orioles lost their fourth straight game. Storm Davis, 9-10, allowed single runs in the second, fourth and seventh innings before being relieved in the eighth. He extended Oakland slugger Jose Canseco's hitless streak to 33 at-bats.

Blue Jays 5, White Sox 1

Toronto's Lloyd Moseby had the sixth four-hit game of his career. He went 4-for-4 with two RBIs, and twice scored on singles by George Bell.

Mariners 7, Yankees 3

Seattle's Mark Langston, who was 0-5 in his last 10 starts, pitched a five-hitter and struck out 14 batters. Seattle won its fourth straight game. The loss was the third straight for the Yankees, who had won nine of their 10 previous games against Seattle.

The loss kept the Yankees 5½ games behind Boston in the AL East.

Pampa downs PD in volleyball opener

Pampa got the volleyball season off to a rousing start, taking care of Palo Duro, 15-9, 15-1, Tuesday night at McNeely Fieldhouse.

Going into the opener, Lady Harvesters coach Phil Hall felt a victory was very much needed since Pampa had won only four games last season and failed to win a match on the homecourt.

"I was extremely pleased. I looked at the match as a must-win situation and the girls did exactly what they needed to do. We won only four games last year and we lifted the monkey off the seniors backs," said Hall.

Key players for Pampa were Jackie Oglesby, Stephanie Jeffery and Susan Gross, Hall said.

"Jackie came off the bench in the second bench in the second game and served two aces. Jeffery and Gross were outstanding as far as leadership goes and handling their situation," Hall added.

Hall said it was a team effort all the way.

"We played everybody and we didn't lose a thing when we substituted. If nothing else, we got stronger," he said.

Pampa hosts Amarillo High at 6:30 p.m. Thursday night.

"I thought the crowd last night was a big factor in our victory. If we can maintain that attendance for every home match, it would really be a big help to the girls," Hall said.

Pampa lost the junior varsity match, 14-16, 5-15.

"I was really pleased with our enthusiasm. It's the best I've seen in the time I've been here," Hall said. "The girls were really excited about what they were doing."

Ex-cage standout switches to gridiron at Southern Methodist

NORTH PLATTE, Neb. (AP)—When Dick Anderson was a senior at North Platte High School, he stood 6-5, weighed 195 pounds and was a star basketball player.

That was three years ago. On Tuesday, Anderson reported to football practice at Southern Methodist University in Dallas as a solid 6-6, 280-pound defensive tackle.

Anderson has made a transition to a sport he didn't play in high school.

"I concentrated on basketball in high school because I thought that was where my future was going to be," Anderson said. "I never dreamed that someday I would be playing major-college football."

After averaging 19 points per game his senior year at North Platte High, Anderson accepted a basketball scholarship to Denver University. He lettered as a freshman and was kept out of action his sophomore year with a broken ankle.

Anderson decided he wanted to transfer to a larger school and play major college basketball.

"I told my brother about it and he contacted the Southern Methodist coaching staff," Anderson said. His brother, Chuck, also starred at North Platte High and was a three-year basketball letterman at Southern Methodist.

"One of the assistant football coaches had watched me play basketball and liked my size and frame," Anderson said. "He called and asked me to visit the school. When I went up there (in Dallas), they had a scholarship open so they decided to take a chance and offer it to me."

Anderson reported for practice last fall as a 210-pound tight end.

"I wasn't scared, but I was apprehensive when I first reported for practice. I knew I could play football if I put my mind to it. I also knew I had to spend a lot of time in the weight room and build myself up. I put on 50 pounds the first 4½ months."

Anderson's welcome to college football was a painful one.

"The first two weeks I got my nose broken," he said. "The fourth week of practice I got knocked out. I knew football wasn't going to be anything like basketball, but I didn't expect it to be that rough. I really got a rude awakening."

Anderson said he could've played and lettered last year, but the coaches talked him into sitting out the year and switching to defensive tackle. He enters two-a-day fall workouts as the No. 2 defensive tackle.

"I liked being a tight end, but I'll get to play a lot more as a defensive tackle," he said. "A lot of guys start out as tight ends and then get switched to other positions. If things go okay, I should be a started next year. The two guys ahead of me are seniors."

"We're picked to finish fifth in the conference, but we should have a good year," he said. "Being on probation won't bother the players that much this time. We should be good, but we could be great."

"We're not eligible for the conference title, but we can beat Texas."

Bills trade Cribbs to 49ers

By the Associated Press

Running back Joe Cribbs, who equated his second tenure with the Bills to a stretch in "Buffalo Prison," has been pardoned through a trade to the San Francisco 49ers.

But the 28-year-old Cribbs, the AFC's Rookie of the Year for Buffalo in 1981, who later jumped to the USFL before returning to the NFL last season, won't be given any guarantees by the 49ers.

"He could be all the way from a special substitute to a full-time starter," San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh said Tuesday in announcing that the 49ers had sent the Bills a third-round draft pick for 1987 and a fifth-round selection the following year.

Walsh said the Cribbs trade was not based on the 49ers' fears that running back Wendell Tyler would not fully recover from off-season knee surgery.

"Our conversations with Buffalo go back a lot farther than any questions about Wendell's condition," he said. "Naturally, we're concerned about Tyler going 16 games at the pace he's been going, but that isn't related directly to this trade."

The trade of Cribbs came on the heels of the Bills' signing Monday of former USFL quarterback Jim Kelly to a five-year, $8-million contract.

The 5-11, 190-pound Cribbs had starred in Buffalo, rushing for more than 1,000 yards and catching more than 40 passes in three of his NFL seasons. But the development of running back Greg Bell and the drafting of Ronnie Harmon of Iowa opened the way to a trade.

Although he returned to the Bills near the end of last season, Cribbs made no secret of his differences with Buffalo management, whom he had beaten in a suit filed when he jumped to the USFL's Birmingham Stallions in 1984. He taped the words "Buffalo Prison" above his locker.

Dolphins
Miami placed veteran tight end Joe Rose on the injured list and cut defensive lineman Bill Barnett, a six-year reserve.

Cowboys
Seven-year guard Kurt Petersen, who has a knee injury, was one of six players placed on injured reserve by Dallas, which also waived defensive end Charles Bennett.

Giants
New York put defensive end Curtis McGriff, a seven-year veteran, on injured reserve, and obtained a roster exemption for former USFL running back Kirby Warren.

Chargers

San Diego waived linebacker Tommy Taylor a fourth-round draft choice from UCLA, and announced it had reached agreement with Andy Hawkins, a former linebacker with the USFL Houston Gamblers and was awaiting clearance to sign him.

Steelers
Pittsburgh placed 14 players on waivers, 14 — including starting guard Craig Woffley — on injured reserve, and cut three-year nose tackle Mark Catano.

Saints
New Orleans waived wide receiver Jerry Wheeler and quarterback John Fourcade and put eight players on injured reserve, including veteran wide receiver Guido Merken.

Colts
Indianapolis cut five-year veteran linebacker Roosevelt Barnes, who had been obtained in a trade with Detroit. The deal was contingent on Barnes making the team.

Bengals
Cincinnati signed former USFL linebacker Kiki DeAyala, a sixth-round draft choice in 1983 who had signed with the USFL's Houston Gamblers.

Alabama players stunned by tragedies

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Crimson Tide football players, still hurting over a wreck that killed one teammate and injured another, are stunned over the condition of Willie Ryles, who remains in a coma following brain surgery.

"This is another challenge," said Alabama nose guard Curt Jarvis, who had planned on playing on the same side of the ball this season with Ryles, a starting defensive tackle. "The Lord is testing us again."

Ryles remained in critical condition at University Hospital late Tuesday following surgery Monday to relieve pressure from a blood clot on his brain. A doctor said no new bleeding or clots were found in tests Tuesday.

"Things like this make you realize you take things for granted sometimes," said quarterback Mike Shula. "You have to rely on the friendship of your teammates to get through something like this."

On April 26, running back George Scruggs was killed in a automobile accident that injured Alabama cornerback Vernon Wilkinson, who is recovering.

Alabama opens its season Aug. 27 against Ohio State in the Kick-off Classic.

Ryles, 19, underwent nearly three hours of surgery after he collapsed during practice and was taken first to a Tuscaloosa hospital and then to University Hospital.

Coach Ray Perkins said the 6-foot-4, 240-pound sophomore from Phenix City took "a normal blow" and rolled over.

"His roommate said he had been complaining of headaches the last couple of days," Perkins said.

He said Ryles might have been injured unknowingly during a weekend scrimmage.

Players to receive grid equipment

Football equipment will be given out to Pampa Middle School players this week, school officials announced over the weekend. Athletes planning to play football for the middle school this year are asked to attend.

Eighth-graders receive their equipment beginning Thursday at 1 p.m. Seventh-graders get their equipment Friday, also beginning at 1 p.m.

Workouts for both grades begin the first day of school.

Red Raiders set charity scrimmage

LUBBOCK — New head coach David McWilliams will have his Texas Tech football team on public display for the first time Saturday night in the Khiva Shrine-sponsored Raider Bowl. Kickoff is 7 p.m. at Jones Stadium in Lubbock.

All proceeds from the full-scale scrimmage will go to finance the Shriners' burns and orthopedic hospitals in Texas. Tickets are $5 for adults, $2.50 for schoolchildren and Tech students are free with an ID.

The game will mark only the team's third day in pads, but McWilliams was optimistic the Red Raiders will begin to reach a peak for their season opener Sept. 6 against Kansas State.

"It will be a good chance to see everybody in game-like conditions for the first time this fall," said McWilliams. "We will split the squad so that the No. 1 offense will go against the No. 1 defense, the No. 2s against each other and on down the line."

All members from last spring's two-deep depth chart returned this fall, including I-back Timmy Smith, middle linebacker Brad Hastings and offensive tackle Jesse Smith. The trio sat out the spring while recovering from off-season surgeries, but has returned 100 percent recovered.

The quarterback battle between Billy Joe Tolliver, Aaron Keese and Monte McGuire has been renewed. Timmy Smith has returned in the best shape of his career to contend with Bouvier Dale and Ervin Farris for the I-back job. Wide receivers Wayne Walker, Tyrone Thurman, Eddy Anderson and Bruce Perkins will add excitement to the receiving corps in 1986.

A number of Raiders checked in in top condition. Brad Hastings has added eight pounds to a total 243, but coaches say he is moving better than ever. Redshirt freshman Scott Wilson was the largest Raider at 6-6 and 320 pounds while starting defensive tackle Artis Jackson reported at 6-5 and 309. Freshman offensive tackle Charles Odiome was the biggest gainer during the summer. He added 25 pounds and is now 6-4 and 269 pounds.

Tickets for all six Red Raider home games currently are on sale at the Texas Tech Ticket Office, located at the north end of Jones Stadium. Besides Kansas State, Tech plays New Mexico, Baylor, Texas, SMU and Houston in Jones Stadium this season.

Royals series title fading into memory

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — After losing their manager to illness and the 1985 Cy Young Award winner to arm troubles, the Kansas City Royals head into the final six weeks of the season with thoughts of last year's World Championship now a fading memory.

The Royals will join five other teams in the 1980s who have failed to repeat as champions, but the Royals demise was compounded with tragedy in 1986.

A brain tumor discovered two days after the All-Star Game left Manager Dick Howser fighting for his life. The career of 22-year-old Bret Saberhagen, last year's American League Cy Young Award winner, is on hold while doctors determine what ails his talented right arm.

The Royals have not just fallen from power in the AL West, but they are attempting to avoid their lowest finish ever in the division and they will post their poorest won-loss record since 1970 at their present pace.

The arrival of many young stars on other teams in the division adds to the appearance the Royals may be sinking in the west.

In recent years, division opponents have drafted and developed new stars like Kirby Puckett, Kent Hrbek, Jose Canseco, Wally Joyner, Danny Tartabull, Oddibe McDowell and Pete Incaviglia. The Royals have not produced an everyday player since center fielder Willie Wilson's arrival in 1977.

On the positive side, several factors have remained constant, giving Kansas City fans hope for the future. Frank White, 35, continues to shine defensively at second base while improving offensively. First baseman Steve Balboni continues to be the club's only consistent home run threat. Relief pitcher Steve Farr established himself as a quality finisher and hard-throwing Mark Gubicza may finish the year as the No. 1 starter instead of trade bait.

Most importantly to the Kansas City brass, the crowds are pouring into Royals' Stadium. Over 2,000,000 fans will see the Royals play at home for the second straight year and the sixth time in the history of the franchise.

And it's likely the club will draw well after Sept. 1, if nothing else, as the fans flock to see Bo Jackson when he returns from Memphis to get his first look at major-league pitching.

In their final 44 games, the Royals have to play at a .636 clip to avoid just their second sub-.500 season since 1974. The other came in the strike-shortened 1981 season.

Dorsett still wants to be traded

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys running back Tony Dorsett says he has repeated a request that he be traded, saying it isn't economically feasible for him to remain on the team with Herschel Walker.

Dorsett reiterated his request Wednesday to Cowboys president Tex Schramm, who had received a similar phone call on Monday from Witt Stewart, Dorsett's agent.

"Economically, I think it would be impossible to keep both Herschel and myself," said Dorsett. "Pretty soon, the Cowboys are going to wonder if they're going to get their money's worth."

"I just think that a trade would be the right thing to do," he said. "That doesn't mean I want to leave Dallas. But I've got to be realistic about all of this. In reality, it's not a decision based on talent. It will be a decision based on economics."

Stewart asked Schramm to arrange a trade with either

Miami or Pittsburgh. But Schramm said Dorsett would not be traded this season.

"He (Stewart) said Tony would like to be traded," said Schramm. "I said I didn't intend to trade him. That was about it. I'm not considering a trade at this point."

Coach Tom Landry, asked about the likelihood of trading the club's leading career rusher, said, "Who says anything isn't a possibility? But I don't intend for that to happen. He's got a job. He's got to play tailback for me as long as he can carry the ball."

"It won't be long before the press and the fans get involved," said Dorsett. "The first time I fumble, people are going to say that it's time for Herschel to play."

Cowboys majority owner "Bum" Bright is going to start asking questions," Dorsett said. "People are going to start nipping me. If I make any mistakes, they're going to want Walker to play."

ANTI-TANK WEAPON REMOVED — Agents from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms load a 30mm anti-tank weapon into a van at an Arlington, Va., gas station Tuesday evening. According to police, Robert Delgir of Xenia, Ohio, was showing the weapon to Joseph Donahue when it discharged and hit a nearby gas tank, injuring three people. Both men were arrested. Rebel chief has corn belt education

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The Sudanese rebel chief whose troops shot down a civilian airliner with 60 people aboard last weekend received U.S. Army training and has a doctorate from Iowa State University.

American diplomats who knew John Garang as an army officer before he joined the insurgents in 1983 remember him as articulate and energetic, the latter an exceptional trait in a military more reputed for lethargy.

His Sudan Peoples Liberation Movement, and its military wing, the Sudan Peoples Liberation Army, have called for liberating Sudan from "the oppressive, corrupt and reactionary bourgeois system."

They are seeking to unite the disadvantaged tribes of Sudan's south, east and west against Arabic-speaking, Moslem northerners, who have controlled political and economic life in the nation of 19 major ethnic groups and 115 languages since independence in 1956.

Most Sudanese and foreign observers doubt Garang, a Christian from the southern Dinka tribe, can ever take power in a land where 70 percent of the 20 million inhabitants are Moslems and consider themselves Arabs.

After three years of fighting, tribal jealousies have prevented the Dinka-dominated SPLA from winning universal support even in the south, especially among tribes in Equatoria province.

Still, the tall, balding and bearded Garang has proven a formidable foe, a tactician whose moves have stymied the government.

Garang learned his military tactics as a guerrilla during an earlier southern rebellion, which ended in 1972. Later, he received company commander training at the U.S. Army's Fort Benning in Georgia.

It is common for foreign officers to undergo U.S. military training under the sponsorship of their government.

Garang, born in 1943 to a poor family in the southern province of Jonglei, was quoted as telling an Egyptian magazine in a recent interview that as a boy, his family moved to Tanzania.

He eventually won a scholarship to Grinnell College in Iowa, graduated in 1969, and returned to Sudan, where he joined the southern sece rebellion.

The rebellion over, Garang joined Sudan's army and returned to United States in the 1970s to earn a doctorate in agricultural economics from Iowa State University in Ames.

Garang moved quickly through the ranks and became deputy chief of the Military Research Center in Khartoum with the rank of lieutenant colonel.

By late 1982, the south was again in turmoil over Nimeiri's decisions to divide the region into three provinces and send in more northern troops.

Tax law's many heroes — and no political losers?

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan proclaimed that the tax bill poised for approval by Congress is "good for the taxpayer" and his fellow Republicans are hoping that means it also will be good for the GOP.

But this sweeping revision of the tax code stands as a tribute to bipartisanship and it may end up as an issue in which there are no political losers.

Certainly, Reagan comes out of the long tax debate a big winner. He fought hard for tax simplification. The revised tax code, with its lower rates for individuals, is sure to be a centerpiece of the speeches the president will deliver this fall as he stumps for Republican candidates.

But Reagan won't be running again. Not even the move to repeal the two-term limit for presidents is likely to lead to the 75-year-old chief executive deciding to go for a third term.

And sharing a lot of the credit with Reagan was Democratic Rep. Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee. Rostenkowski and Republican Sen. Bob Packwood of Oregon, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, dominated the conference committee that worked out the final compromise which appears certain to pass Congress next month.

At the House and Senate Republican campaign committees there is hope the bill will provide some immediate political fallout.

Rep. Guy Vander Jagt of Michigan, chairman of the House Republican Campaign Committee, said the new bill would cut taxes for about three-quarters of the people and "it will be the vehicle we ride to the best election showing in history for a party in the sixth year of controlling the presidency."

Normally, that sixth-year election is disastrous for the party in power.

Democrats counter by pointing to polling results that indicated the party benefited from the public perception of the House bill as providing greater relief for middle-class taxpayers.

In the longer term, no one can tell yet who will benefit politically.

When Reagan started his drive for tax simplification, Republicans believed it was an issue that could boost party fortunes for the remainder of this century.

That may prove true. But no one knows yet whether the bill will be seen as a boon or a bust a few years from now.

The public maintained a skeptical attitude to the whole process while it was being debated. One of the frustrations faced by the president was his inability to generate much public pressure on Congress.

That was one reason why when the bill cleared the conference committee, it seemed nothing short of a political miracle, a tribute to bipartisan leadership.

Anyone looking for evidence of that need only recall the dark winter days of 1985, when tax simplification was being prepared for burial. It was terminal; the obituaries were being written.

Politicians were prepared to describe it as a nice idea but one whose time had not come. No one out in America cared and without the pressure of overwhelming public demand Congress wouldn't act.

But tax simplification proved to be an idea that wouldn't die.

It was a Republican revolt in the winter of 1985 that nearly killed the bill.

"I'm becoming convinced that true tax reform and true tax simplification cannot come out of this Congress the way I envision them," declared Rep. Bob Michel of Illinois, the House Republican leader.

He was talking about the tax bill drafted by the Democratic majority on the House Ways and Means Committee.

President Reagan tried a political gambit that seemed shaky at the time but ended up saving the day. He urged Republicans to support the Democratic bill even while saying he was depending on the GOP Senate to come up with a version he could accept.

The reaction was outrage.

"It is not reasonable for the president to expect me to vote for a tax bill that he himself would not sign," said Rep. Richard Cheney of Wyoming, chairman of the House Republican Policy Committee.

Companies gearing up for satellite launch business

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — "Have Rockets — Will Launch" is the message from companies gearing up to grab their share of an estimated $6 billion space launch business created by the government's decision to remove commercial satellites from NASA's shuttle.

Companies that manufacture or are planning to launch space rockets said their phones started ringing earlier this month when rumors circulated about the change in government policy.

President Reagan confirmed the rumors Friday by announcing that only 14 of 44 satellites scheduled for the shuttle would be carried into orbit once the craft resumes flights in 1988.

And on Tuesday, Martin Marietta announced that it is offering its Titan III to launch commercial satellites.

"We've had enough inquiries and market analysis to believe that there is a market there. Until the president made the announcement the other day, we weren't sure it was a viable business," said spokesman Jack Boyd. "We examined it and have now decided it is, so we will go back to the people who made the inquiries and other companies."

Denver-based Martin Marietta said it is the only company in the nation currently operating a production line for space launch vehicles and the first launch could be as soon as early 1989. Titans have had 129 successful flights in 134 launches; the last two failed.

Reagan's announcement "was a green light for the ELV (expendable launch vehicle) industry. We anticipate a very strong investor response," said Mark Daniels of Space Services Inc.

Daniels said Space Services has signed two customers to launch a total of eight satellites on its Conestoga II, capable of putting only 300 pounds into a high orbit. The first launch is expected late next year.

Rick Endres, corporate vice president of Transpace Carriers Inc. which owns the marketing rights to the Delta rocket, said his company believes there is a need for 120 satellite launches, both military and commercial, over the next six years.

Endres estimates that satellite launch service from now until 1992 represents about a $6 billion business, and other companies confirm the estimate.

Transpace already has signed two customers, said Endres, and received "about 20" expressions of serious interest.

Jack Isabel of General Dynamics, which makes the Atlas Centaur, said seven companies have made inquiries. He said his firm expects a need for 15 to 16 launches a year in the long term.

Commercial services would use government launch facilities.

Most of the companies are waiting for decisions by the Air Force before making major commitments.

Endres said there are only three completed Delta rockets, and one of those will be used by NASA to launch an Indonesian satellite. The Air Force has first claim on the other two complete Deltas and on eight that were mothballed before they were finished. Transpace cannot make final launch plans until the Air Force releases its claim, he said. He expects, though, to launch a private Delta by the fall of 1987.

The Air Force is expected to make a decision on Feb. 8 about a new medium-sized launch vehicle. Martin Marietta, General Dynamics and a partnership of Hughes Aircraft and Boeing Aerospace are all bidding for the contract.
