Fearing for safety, Gromyko cancels trip

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin on Saturday canceled Andrei Gromyko's trip to the U.N. General Assembly, accusing U.S. officials of "refusing" to ensure his safe passage. It was the first time the foreign minister had canceled in more than 25 years.

The move was in response to a decision by New York and New Jersey authorities to ban the Soviet U.N. delegation from landing at New York area airports — to protest the Soviets' downing of a South Korean jumbo jet Sept. 1. All 269 people aboard, including 61 Americans, were killed.

Gromyko's cancellation was announced by the official news agency Tass in a three-paragraph statement that was also the first official confirmation that Gromyko had planned to make his customary trip to the annual General Assembly meeting, beginning Tuesday.

Gromyko, who became foreign minister in 1957 and had attended every General Assembly session since, used the visits to make major policy speeches and to meet with the secretary of state.

Tass did not say when Gromyko had planned to go to New York, but if he had followed past practice he would have flown in Sept. 25 — the Sunday following the opening of the General Assembly session. A spokesman for the Soviet mission in New York said other members of the delegation would attend.

The State Department had no immediate comment on Gromyko's cancellation, but it said previously that the foreign minister's plane would have been allowed to land at a military airfield in the New York area. Tass did not say why that option was rejected.

The agency said, "U.S. authorities do not give guarantees that the safety of the head of the U.S.S.R.'s delegation ... will be ensured and that normal conditions in this respect will be created. They do not guarantee the adequate ensurance of the arrival and servicing of a special Soviet plane either."

"In this connection," Tass said, "a decision has been taken on the impossiblity of a trip to New York by Andrei Gromyko ... who was appointed to lead the Soviet delegation to the 38th session of the U.N. General Assembly."

In a later dispatch, Tass charged "the United States has flagrantly flouted its international commitments by refusing to ensure safety for" Gromyko.

Tass also said, "The question arises in general whether a country which does not fulfill its obligations and does not ensure the necessary conditions for foreign representatives to take part in the work of the United Nations organization, is suited for the U.N. headquarters to be situated there."

U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani said in New York previously that the 1947 agreement between the United Nations and the U.S. government stipulates that federal, state and local authorities may not impede diplomats' travel to and from the U.N. headquarters on Manhattan's east side.

Giuliani added that a representative of U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar had gone to the U.S. mission to the United Nations to discuss the decision not to allow Soviet planes to land at Newark and John F. Kennedy airports.

After Gromyko's cancellation was announced, a spokesman for Perez de Cuellar said in New York, "the secretary-general very much hopes than an early and satisfactory solution can be worked out in the interests of the international community as a whole."

The visit to New York was to have been Gromyko's second trip abroad since a Soviet fighter shot down the South Korean Boeing 747 with an air-to-air missile over the Soviet Sakhalin Island, north of Japan.

Gromyko, who helped draft the U.N. Charter and was the first Soviet U.N. envoy, went last week to Madrid and Paris, where he repeated the Soviet contention that the Korean plane was spying for the CIA and had refused to obey signals to land.

Lack of U.S. 'guarantees' cited

MOSCOW — Following is the text of a statement Saturday by the official Soviet news agency Tass on the cancellation of Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko's trip to the United Nations. The statement was distributed by Tass in English:

In violation of generally recognized international norms, the U.S. authorities do not give the guarantees that the safety of the head of the U.S.S.R.'s delegation to a session of the U.N. General Assembly will be ensured and that normal conditions in this respect will be created. They do not guarantee the adequate ensurance of the arrival and servicing of a special Soviet plane either.

In this connection, a decision has been taken on the impossibility of a trip to New York by Andrei Gromyko ... who was appointed to lead the Soviet delegation to the 38th session of the U.N. General Assembly.

The question arises in general whether a country, which does not fulfill its obligations and does not ensure the necessary conditions for foreign representatives to take part in the work of the United Nations organization, suits for the U.N. headquarters to be situated there.

Navy helicopter crashes as search for jet continues

By The Associated Press

A U.S. Navy helicopter crashed in the Sea of Japan Saturday while hunting for the downed South Korean airliner but all four crewmen were rescued. The Soviets recovered another part of the jumbo jet they shot down and canceled Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko's trip to the United Nations.

Lt. Cmdr. Mark Neuhart, a Navy spokesman at the Pentagon, said the helicopter was operating from the frigate Badger and that it ditched while conducting a search for the jet shot down by a Soviet interceptor in Soviet airspace Sept. 1. All 269 people aboard the jet, including 61 Americans, died.

Neuhart said the chopper sank in "about 500 fathoms of water (3,000 feet). The four crew members were picked up by the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Munro and were suffering only from exposure."

Identities were not immediately available, and Neuhart would not be more specific about the crash site, saying only it was in international waters west of Sakhalin, a militarily strategic Soviet island. Japanese officials had said waters in the area were 600-900 feet deep.

"Apparently we have confirmed there was no hostile action against the helicopter. It is premature to speculate but equipment failure could have been a factor. The accident is still under investigation. As far as we know, the sea state was good and the weather was good," Neuhart said.

The helicopter was a twin turbine, four-seat helicopter. Its mission was to extend the sensors and weapons systems capabilities of the surface vessel. In other words, it was using its sensors to detect underwater objects, Neuhart said.

The helicopter that ditched was a Seahawk. It was 64 feet long, weighed about 2,000 pounds, flew at 150 mph and was equipped with torpedoes. It had sonar capabilities, which were used to look for underwater targets, Neuhart said.

Japanese officials had no further information on the chopper, but they said a Soviet ship hoisted two signal flags Saturday to warn Japanese vessels to steer clear of the Soviet search zone 20 miles north Moneron, a Soviet island about 30 miles west of Sakhalin's southern tip.

Rear Adm. Masayoshi Kato of Japan's Maritime Safety Agency told reporters in northern Wakkanai, just south of Sakhalin, that the Soviets put a 20-foot yellow submarine into the water, then retrieved it and marked the area with a red buoy.

He said one of the 26 Soviet ships in the area, the oil driller Mikhail Mirchinsk, then winched up an unidentifiable object from another Soviet vessel. Asked whether the object could have been the jumbo jet's "black box" flight recorder, he said, "I refuse to speculate."

Kato said that during the operation a Soviet patrol vessel near the 12,000-ton rescue ship Georgi Kozumin hoisted two signals declaring that the rescue ship was "conducting undersea surveillance" and that it was "dangerous to come near the ship."

U.S. ships shell Druse artillery positions

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two U.S. Navy ships shelled Druse artillery position Saturday and Lebanon's air force rocketed and strafed a mountain ridge where the army fought to drive insurgents back from a key route to the capital.

Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat slipped back into northern Lebanon and immediately accused the United States of complicity in the massacre of Palestinians in Beirut last year.

The destroyer John Rodgers and frigate Bowen fired their five-inch guns after Druse artillery blasts from positions in the Syrian-controlled hills east of Beirut "endangered American lives" late Friday and early Saturday, said U.S Marine Warrant Officer Charles Rowe.

The residence of U.S. Ambassador Robert Dillon, and the Lebanese Defense Ministry where American officers work with the Lebanese army, had come under fire, Rowe said.

No U.S. casualties were reported, and Rowe said the artillery fire was "very much diminished" after the shelling from the ships, anchored offshore.

Rowe would not say how many rounds the ship fired, but U.S. Embassy sources said it involved "multiple salvos" and sources in the multinational peacekeeping force said 30 to 70 rounds were fired — one of the fiercest responses yet by the American military in Lebanon.

It was the second time the Navy has used its firepower since the Marine peacekeeping forces arrived last year. On Sept. 8, the Bowen fired at militia artillery positions in the Druse-occupied mountain areas after the Marine compound at Beirut Internatioanl Airport was shelled.

Syria's government radio station in Damascus said some of the shells from the U.S. warships hit in Syrian-controlled territory and quoted a military spokesman as saying, "We stress that any firing from land, air or sea that hits areas where our troops are present will be returned."

Nine miles southeast of Beirut, Lebanese soldiers faced sniper and artillery fire as they tried to flush Druse and Palestinian guerrillas from Souk el-Gharb and nearby strongholds on the ridge of the Chouf mountains.

Lebanon's aging British-made Hawker Hunter jets flew rocket and strafing sorties along the ridge, which provides a strategic route to Beirut.

U.S. Middle East envoy Robert C. McFarlane met in Beirut with President Amin Gemayel, his security adviser Wadi Haddad and Foreign Minister Elie Salem.

The state radio quoted McFarlane as saying he and assistant Richard Fairbanks planned to leave immediately for "a trip to several Arab capitals" in a continuing effort to achieve a cease-fire.

Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, slipped into Lebanon Friday night to visit his military headquarters near the northern port of Tripoli.

In Tripoli, he marked the first anniversary of the massacres in the Sabra and Chatilla Palestinian refugee camps outside Beirut by accusing the United States of "flagrant and grave complicity" in the slayings.

Summer of '83 both long, hot

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

It was over the Fourth of July weekend, when 3 million chickens perished in their coops, that the Drought of 1983 started firing up its stove in earnest.

After farmers and gardeners in much of the East were stung by an unusually wet and cold spring, the mercury shot as high as 107 as far north as Williston, N.D., on July 16 and 110 in the rural community of Cheraw, S.C., on July 21.

It jumped up to 108 on Aug. 17 at Des Moines, Iowa, where it was Senior Citizens Day at the state fair. More than 50 people were treated for heat exhaustion.

The 110 degrees in Fayetteville, N.C., on Aug. 21 was an all-time record for the state and the hottest reading in the country on that day.

When summer comes to an official end at 10:42 a.m. EDT on Friday, Sept. 23, it will go into the record books as one of the hottest and driest ever seen, producing the worst drought in the Midwest and Ohio Valley since the Dust Bowl days of the 1930s.

At least 231 people died and losses to farmers are estimated by the U.S. Department of Agriculture at $7 billion, with the corn crop expected to yield the smallest harvest in 13 years, just over half of last year's record 8.4 billion bushels.

Thousands of farmers have gone broke, with many losing their farms, and the cost of food at the grocery counter is expected to increase about 6.5 percent next year.

"It was something that we wouldn't expect to happen more than once in a generation," said Phil Shideler of the National Weather Service in Topeka, Kan. He said that although there were more days in 1934 and 1936 when temperatures climbed above 100 degrees, this year "the combination of heat and dryness probably made it worse."

Near Bowman, S.C., Hugh Weathers rigged up fans and water hoses to drip on the tin roof of his barn to try to keep his family's 850 dairy cows from keeling over. Some died anyway.

Under the blazing sunshine, farmlands dried out and cracked open in giant checkerboard patterns.

"It would take three days of rain just to fill up the cracks around here," Nolan Duke of the National Weather Service in Kansas City, Mo., said in early September.

St. Louis, practically in the dead center of the country, was typical. It had one of the wettest springs on record, with 17.16 inches from March through May, as flash floods drove thousands from their homes along the bloated Mississippi and Missouri rivers.

But with the change of season, St. Louis was brought to a boil, with 58 days above 90 degrees, including 14 days with temperatures above 100.

St. Louis officials opened cooling shelters for the poor and elderly as more than 40 people died from the heat in the area.

The drought was unmerciful across the vast corn and soybean fields of the Midwest. It shriveled crops from the tomato fields of New Jersey and the tobacco fields of Kentucky to the peanut fields of Georgia and the cotton fields of Alabama.

Millions of chickens died in Maryland, Virginia, Georgia and across to Arkansas.

Catfish farmers in Mississippi and elsewhere in Dixie said hundreds of thousands of commercial fish died because the heat cooked the oxygen out of the ponds. Mississippi produces about 100 million pounds of catish a year.

Across the Southeast from South Carolina to Alabama, which was also hit by droughts in 1977, 1978 and 1980, farmers were losing their farms.

In Georgia, Tal C. DuVall, state director of the Agricultural Extension Service, estimated that 6,000 Georgia farmers were "insolvent."

Many of the hardest hit were among the 16,000 growers of the state's $370 million peanut crop, which provides 40 percent of the nation's supply.

"The situation is unprecedented in Georgia," said Jimmy Jackson, the assistant director of the extension service. "It's a crisis of the greatest magnitude."

Many farmers are expected to be unable to repay their loans this year. The Farm Credit Administration doesn't yet have figures for late summer, but the agency reported last week that as of June 30, even before the drought set in, there were 20,537 delinquent loans to farmers. That was about 3.1 percent of the total $50.9 billion in outstanding loans, as against 2.5 percent that were delinquent at the same time last year.

The Agriculture Department reports that corn prices are expected to average $3.50 to $3.75 per bushel in 1983-84, compared to an average $2.65 last season. The price of soybeans, another staple in the food chain, is expected to reach from $8.50 to $9.50 a bushel, as compared with $5.65 last season.

Indiana was the first state to get disaster relief from the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Gov. Robert D. Orr has estimated losses to the state's farmers at $1 billion.

This is how hot it was this summer in some cities around the country:

ASHEVILLE, N.C. — The temperature hit 100 on Aug. 21, the first time ever in triple-digits in the Smoky Mountain city.

ATLANTA — It was 101 on Aug. 21, 100 on Aug. 22 and 97 on Aug. 23, all records for the date.

AUGUSTA, Ga. — The hottest day was Aug. 21 when it reached 108, followed by 107 the next day.

BALTIMORE — The mercury climbed to 105 on Aug. 20 as the city recorded its third hottest August on the books. Temperatures were above 90 for 35 days during July and August.

Reagan says 'case far from closed'

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, continuing his drumbeat of criticism of the Soviet Union in the wake of the attack on a Korean jetliner, said Saturday that "this case is far from closed."

The State Department, meanwhile, readied a response to a statement by the official Soviet news agency Tass that Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko had called off a trip to the United Nations because of U.S. restrictions on air travel from his country.

Reagan's sharp words aimed at the Soviets came just hours after it was announced in Moscow that Gromyko would not visit the United Nations next week for the annual meeting of the General Assembly. The Tass statement the trip was canceled because "U.S. authorities do not give the guarantees that the safety of the head of the U.S.S.R's delegation ... will be ensured."

In the wake of the Soviet attack that downed Korean Air Lines Flight 007 on Sept. 1, Reagan canceled the right of the Soviet airline, Aeroflot, to land in the United States. The administration had said Gromyko could fly to a military air base in a non-civilian aircraft.

Reagan made no mention of Gromyko in his weekly radio address to the nation, delivered from Camp David, Md.

He responded, however, to critics who have said the limited sanctions he has taken against the Soviet Union do not go far enough, referring to those who "would have us lash out ... by cancelling our grain shipments" to the Soviet Union.

"That would punish American farmers, not the Soviet aggressors," the president said.

"The most effective, lasting action against their violence and intimidation, and it's the one action the Soviets would welcome least, will be to go forward with America's program to remain strong," he said. "We may not be able to change the Soviets' ways, but we can change our attitude toward them. We can stop pretending they share the same dreams and aspirations we do."

The president pointed to the resolution passed by the International Civil Aviation Organization calling for an international investigation of the attack, in which 269 people were killed when the Boeing 747 was downed by a Soviet missile as the aircraft emerged yrom restricted Soviet airspace.

"The Soviets have not budged," the president said. "Apparently, theiir contempt for the truth and for the opinion of the civilized world is equaled only by their disdain for helpless people like the passengers aboard KAL Flight 007."

He added:

"They reserve for themselves the right to live by one set of rules, insisting everyone else live by another. They're supremely confident their crime and covery-up will soon by forgotten and we'll all be back to business as usual."

Radio show becomes forum

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said today the case of Korean Air Lines flight 007, shot down by a Soviet missile on Sept. 1, is "far from closed."

"The Soviet Union stands virtually alone against the world," he said. "The world's outrage is not diminished. The Soviets have not budged."

Reagan, using his weekly radio address to the nation to keep up his drumbeat of criticism of the Soviet Union, listed progress in getting other nations to cooperate in the U.S.-led civil aviation boycott of the Soviet Union in the wake of the catastrophe that cost 269 lives.

Reagan said that the Soviets have "reserved for themselves the right to live by one set of rules" while demanding other conduct from the rest of the world.

"They are supremely confident their coverup" of the attack on the Boeing 747 jetliner "will soon be forgotten."

But Reagan said, "This case is far from closed."

The president pointed out that every member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, with the exception of France, Greece and Turkey, had joined to boycott of civil aviation contacts with the Soviet Union.

At the same time, the president noted that "some would have us lash out" by cutting off current grain sale agreements with the Kremlin. This, he said, would only hurt the U.S. farmers.

Thunderstorms hit Iowa; Heat punishes Great Plains

By The Associated Press

Thunderstorms packing strong winds and hail pounded northern Iowa on Saturday. Winds reached 60 mph in the town of Mason City and more than 4 inches of rain fell at Gillett.

Elsewhere, it was hot in the central Plains, with temperatures in the 90s in Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri.

Winter weather developed over the northern Rockies, with temperatures in the 40s across Montana. Rain was mixed with snow in the morning in Cutbank, Mont.

Rain fell again in the Northeast and thunderstorms were scattered along the Gulf Coast.

It was sunny in the West.

Temperature in the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from was 42 in Lewiston, Mont., to 98 in Garden City, Kan., and Needles, Calif.

The National Weather Service forecast for Sunday called for thunderstorms in the Mississippi Valley and into the Ohio Valley and the Gulf Coast states. A few thunderstorms also will develop in the southern Plateau.

First Democratic delegates will be chosen in Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than a month before Iowa's precinct caucuses and New Hampshire's premier presidential primary, the first delegates to the 1984 Democratic National Convention will be elected by one small group — the Democratic members of the House.

The House Democratic Caucus will meet in January to name 164 delegates, the first time the representatives have been guaranteed seats at the convention that chooses the party's presidential nominee.

Up to 28 Democratic members of the Senate also will be guaranteed delegate slots under the latest version of the Democratic Party's rules, which were adopted last year. The Senate has not yet set the rules or timing for choosing its delegates, although the selection must take place by May 1, 1984.

These congressional delegates are part of the 566 delegates added to the convention roster for 1984 to increase the participation of the party's elected officials in the presidential nomination process. A total of 3,931 delegates will attend the convention.

All the congressional delegates will be officially uncommitted to any candidate and thus free to vote as they wish at the convention, set for July 1984 in San Francisco.

In contrast, most convention delegates selected at the state level or below will be pledged to vote for one candidate.

Despite the unpledged status of congressional delegates, Democratic presidential hopefuls — particularly former Vice President Walter Mondale and Sen. John Glenn of Ohio — are already thinking of how to make certain that as many of their congressional supporters as possible are selected.

"We're looking at what we can do," said one campaign staffer who would not be quoted by name. "After all, we're talking about 164 votes."

The House rules call for the entire caucus — made up of all the Democratic representatives — to elect their delegates at the first caucus meeting in 1984. Jan. 18 has been tentatively set as the date for that session.

Under those rules, the seven top Democratic leaders in the House will be nominated for delegate if they want to be, including Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas and Majority Whip Thomas Foley of Washington.

Each of the twelve geographic regions set up by the caucus will nominate eight or nine of its members as delegates, for a total of 110. The remaining 47 delegates will be nominated at-large.

With only 13 female Democratic representatives, there is no way the congressional delegates can be split equally between men and women, as all the state delegations are required to be. Similarly, there are not enough blacks and Hispanics in Congress to fairly reflect those groups' numbers within the party nationally, and thus meet the requirements of the national party rules.

But the congressional delegates elected by the House and Senate automatically become part of their individual state's delegations. Thus, any imbalances in the number of women or minorities in specific state delegations can be dealt with by choosing more female or minority delegates at the state level.

The Republican Party has no formal mechanism for including members of Congress as convention delegates.

Israel observes holy day with empty streets

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, turned Israel into a land of empty streets and shuttered stores Saturday, as though the entire country had briefly stepped back from the precipice where it seems to spend the rest of the year.

Yom Kippur froze critical talks on forming a new government, and blotted out thoughts of the Lebanon war. The stock market was closed and suddenly inflation didn't seem to matter.

Israel is used to jarring surprises — an outbreak of war, the resignation of a prime minister, a sudden economic slump. But even in the event of bad news on Yom Kippur, it won't spread fast. There are no newspapers and the state radio and television are off the air throughout the 25-hour holy day.

Although stores and the stock market always close on the Sabbath, Yom Kippur is a day of special silence and reflection in Israel. Airports are shut, and for one day a year Tel Avivians are spared the roar of jetliners overhead.

Under religious laws the driving of automobiles is not permitted and nobody drives lest his car be stoned by religious zealots. Major highways are taken over by children on bicycles and families pushing baby carriages.

From the synagogues comes the chant of prayer. Repentant Jews, asking God's forgiveness for the sins of the past year, fast and beat their chests, intoning: "We were guilty, we sinned..."

Prime Minister Menachem Begin remained in seclusion in his Jerusalem residence. He has mostly stayed away from the public's eye since his decision to resign on Aug. 28, and has not been seen for the past 10 days.

Begin's resignation was the kind of bombshell that keeps this country constantly on edge. It came on a Sunday, a normal working day, without advance notice, and threw Israel into political turmoil.

Other major events can be equally unexpected, like the bombing of the Iraqi nuclear reactor in 1981, or the Palestinian assassination attempt on Israel's ambassador to Britain, which sparked Israel's invasion of Lebanon.

Jews fill Moscow synagogue to mark Day of Atonement

MOSCOW (AP) — Hundreds of Jews streamed into Moscow's only open synagogue on Saturday and filled the steep, narrow street outside to celebrate Yom Kippur, proclaiming their faith in an officially atheistic society.

Between sundown Friday and sundown Saturday, thousands of Jews came to the synagogue at Ulitsa Arkhipova, whose walls reverberated with the polyglot conversations and rhythmic chanting of the faithful. The crowd stretched 100 yards along the street outside the building.

Old women rushed to embrace each other while their husbands gathered in intimate circles to chat in Russian, Yiddish and Hebrew. Worshipers streamed through the doors of the temple, reverently covering their heads as they entered.

Yom Kippur, or the Day of Atonement, is one of Judaism's holiest days.

But for Moscow's estimated 100,000 Jews, it also is a chance to gather with friends, to proclaim their heritage and to work to keep their faith alive in a society that regulates religion and forbids its teaching to children.

Militiamen mingled with the crowd, making the official presence felt.

The services began with the prayer: "Heavenly Father, bless the government of the Soviet Union, stronghold of world peace."

Prayers were conducted under the temple's 30-foot, ornately frescoed ceiling. At the head of the room a circle of bearded and white-hatted men stood with the synagogue's youthful rabbi chanting ancient prayers.

While women hung over the balcony rail deep in prayer, old men on the ground floor muttered the barely heard prayers that ripple through any Orthodox Jewish service. Many read from prayer books whose pages were brown and crumbling with age.

Throughout the prayer services — late into Friday night and all day Saturday — the street pulsed with life.

"The holy days are the most important days of our year and not just for the services," said a man in his 60s, his chest covered with ribbons and medals and his shoulders draped with an embroidered prayer shawl.

"I come here to pray, but also to see my close people," he said. Gesturing to his ribbons, he added proudly: "I am Soviet. But I am more, I am a Jew."

A young taxi driver, his eyes red from the fatigue of a recently completed shift, said he came to pray after work Friday night. "I am very tired," he said. "But I must come. Today and tomorrow I am a Jew. On Sunday, I'll be just a Soviet again."

On the edge of the crowd Saturday afternoon, a man in his 20s strode silently and alone toward the temple. As he walked, he covered his head and let a prayer book slide into his palm from his sleeve.

Occasionally a foreigner — usually an American — wandered into the crowd. As soon as the strangers struck up a conversation, they would be surrounded by Soviets.

Catholic meets Marcos

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Vatican Secretary of State Agostino Casaroli, second-highest official in the Holy See, met Saturday with President Ferdinand E. Marcos whose regime has been sharply criticized by leading Catholic churchmen.

Outspoken Marcos opponent Cardinal Jaime L. Sin, as well as other church leaders, joined the meeting but it was not known if they discussed mounting calls for the president's resignation following the assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino.

The latest anti-Marcos protest broke out Friday in the usually staid financial center, and Aquino's brother Agapito told The Associated Press in an interview Saturday that the demonstration showed opposition to the regime had now spread to "the group that buys."

He also said at least 1 million Filipinos would demonstrate if President Reagan visited the Philippines in November as scheduled.

Casaroli and the other Catholic churchmen met with Marcos for an hour, but a government news release gave no substantive details of the talks.

The release quoted Marcos only as saying that in this time of global stress, "We need faith and we need the church and more spirituality." The cardinal replied that the world "has so many problems" and that "what we need is faith and wisdom," the release said.

None of the church officials who met with Marcos could be reached immediately for further comment. Sin, archbishop of Manila and head of the church in the Philippines, has called for church bells to be rung at noon daily starting Monday to protest nearly 18 years of authoritarian government by Marcos.

Casaroli arrived Thursday for a five-day visit to take part in festivities honoring the Rev. Matteo Ricci, a 16th century Philippine missionary who lived and died in China.

Aquino was assassinated at Manila airport Aug. 21 after arriving from three years' self-imposed exile in the United States. Government troops immediately killed his alleged assassin, but the opposition claims the murderer was working for the government, a charge Marcos vehemently denies.

Aquino's brother said the protest in the financial district Friday showed there were middle class, white-collar workers willing openly to oppose the government, and that economic boycotts and other measures will be more effective.

White South Africans to decide fate of 'coloreds,' Indians

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Prime Minister P.W. Botha has launched a high-stakes battle for the hearts of white voters in his campaign to give limited political power to South Africa's mixed-race and Indian minorities.

A referendum Nov. 2, for white voters only, will determine the fate of a new constitution proposed by Botha's right-wing National Party, which has run the white-minority government for 35 years.

The Nationalists, who hold two-thirds of the seats in the all-white Parliament, won an expected endorsement of the constitution by a vote of 119-35 Sept. 9 after 127 days of debate. Then the chamber adjourned for the referendum campaign, where the outcome is less certain.

For different reasons, far-right conservatives who reject any dilution of white control have joined anti-apartheid (race segregation) campaigners in opposing the new constitution, which ignores the black majority.

Opinion polls suggest the National Party will win a majority of "yes" votes in the referendum for which 2.7 million whites are eligible to cast ballots. The party draws support from the Dutch-and German-descended Afrikaners who make up 60 percent of the nation's 4.7 million whites.

In the event of a "no" majority, Botha might be forced to resign, and South Africa's political order could change dramatically.

The plan would create two new chambers of Parliament, one for the 2.7 million "coloreds" (people of mixed race) and another for the 800,000 Indians. A powerful state president, likely to be Botha himself, would replace the prime minister.

Botha's party says the nation must recognize coloreds and Indians as citizens of South Africa with the right to "self-determination." He seeks to justify the exclusion of the black majority from the plan by saying blacks have citizenship rights in 10 tribal homelands, not in "white" South Africa.

Opposition comes from two fronts.

The ultra-right opposes any concession of power to other races, and calls the new constitution a first step toward integration and a one-man, one-vote system that would swamp the whites.

The two right-wing voices, the Conservative Party and the Herstigte Nasionale Party (Reformed National Party), squabble over personalities but they agree on rejecting the constitution. In the referendum, they could exceed the 13-percent vote they gained in the 1981 general elections.

On the other side are apartheid foes who say the plan sidesteps the denial of rights to the black majority of 21 million by continuing to embrace the homeland concept. Opponents also say the constitution would give no effective power to coloreds and Indians, and would entrench white rule through a weighted system favoring whites in the three-chamber Parliament.

The white chamber would continue to have 166 seats. The new coloreds chamber would have 80 seats and the Indian chamber 40. A President's Council, arbiter of disputes, would be similarly weighted with a white majority. An Electoral College responsible for choosing the president would have 50 white members, 25 coloreds and 13 Indians, ensuring a white national leader.

Frederik van Zyl Slabbert, leader of the opposition Progressive Federal Party, called the constitution "the 1983 model of apartheid." He said in debate that, instead of moving away from white domination, "this new Nationalist constitution is simply a more sophisticated way of maintaining domination."

Slabbert acknowledged that whites, especially English speakers who are the backbone of his party, face a dilemma — whether to vote yes for a plan they consider flawed or vote no and block any change. He said a "no" would be a clear message to the government "that it should stop wasting time for reform by messing with useless and artificial constitutional experiments which lead to racial conflict and tension."

But Vause Raw, leader of the small, English-oriented New Republic Party, endorsed the constitution, saying the choice was "between change now and some never-never dream."

Chari River divides more than countries

KOUSSERI, Cameroon (AP) — The gaunt ruins of N'Djamena look even worse from a distance, when seen across the broad Chari River, which forms the border between Cameroon and war-ravaged Chad.

The skeleton of what was one of Africa's largest Roman Catholic cathedrals dominates the skyline of the Chadian capital. The debris of the presidential palace, the main army barracks, the customs house and the gutted factories and warehouses dominates the N'Djamena waterfront.

The inhabitants of Kousseri, Cameroon, used to flock to the riverside night after night and stand silently, watching N'Djamena burn.

There is no bridge across the Chari here. All of N'Djamena's supplies, whether legal imports or contraband, have to be taken across the Chari river from Kousseri by dugout or on one of the two ramshackle ferries. The N'Djamena brewery was destroyed, and the capital's beer supplies now come from the Chadian town of Moundou, 300 miles south of N'Djamena.

But the direct road through Chad has long been washed out and unusable, and the beer trucks have to come up on the Cameroon side and cross by ferry back into Chad, which has been torn for years by civil war. Renewed warfare between President Hissene Habre and the Libyan-backed forces of former President Goukouni Oueddei has reached a stalemate with rebel forces in the north, and French-backed government forces in the south.

THE FERRIES take only one truck each at a time. Long lines of trucks covered with the red African mud wait for days on both sides of the river for their turn on the ferries. The drivers sleep on straw mats under their trucks.

Customs tariffs and other fees are a major part of Chad's revenues, and the authorities take no chances. A driver taking his car across the river has three sets of forms to fill out, get them signed, stamped, numbered and registered. The process takes two hours.

The ferries are crowded with foot passengers, mostly women carrying bundles and packages carefully balanced on their heads. Cameroon is relatively prosperous and its market is filled with fresh meat, fruit, vegetables and Western consumer goods that are all in short supply and more expensive in N'Djamena. A single load on a woman's head can bring her enough profit to live on for a week.

The Chad war has brought a certain prosperity to Kousseri, but there are drawbacks, too. Armed men from across the river in Chad are blamed for most of the robberies and cattle stealing in the neighborhood.

The stolen cattle are driven westward into Nigeria, where the price is high and authorities ask no questions, he said.

To the traveler arriving in Kousseri from N'Djamena, the first startling impression is the absence of ruins.

"PEACE HAS no price," said local tribal leader Sultan Mahamat Moussa, an imposing figure nearly seven feet tall who receives visitors on Persian rugs spread out in his palace. The building is made of hard-baked, straw-mixed mud and rivals the governor's office as the largest building in town.

Moussa has no time for the upstart city across the river.

"My great-grandfather sent hundreds of slaves to clear the bush so the French could build a town over there," he said.

Kousseri has been the center of a sultanate for centuries. Before World War I, it was part of the German colony of Kamerun, and the Chari was the French-German border.

German inscriptions in gothic characters can still be found on old buildings. The Germans kept few troops in this remote corner of their empire, and the French came across the Chari to hunt down Rabah Zubayr, an infamous slaver and robber baron who carved out a huge empire in the heart of Africa a century ago and threatened French colonial rule in Chad.

At the battle of Kousseri, on April 22, 1900, both Rabah and the French commander, Maj. Francois Lamy, were killed. A monument still marks the spot in the flat steppe on the edge of Kousseri where Lamy was mortally wounded. A monument to Rabah has been dismantled.

In honor of their fallen commander, the French named N'Djamena Fort Lamy, a name it retained until after French colonial rule ended in 1960.

N'Djamena is Arabic for "place of rest."

Nine Poles find freedom in Berlin

BERLIN (AP) — Nine Poles seeking political asylum flew a rented, single-engine plane over Communist East Germany Saturday and landed at a U.S. Air Force base in West Berlin, authorities said.

An Air Force spokesman said the five Polish adults and four children touched down at the Templehof airport at 5:10 p.m., and asked for political asylum as they stepped out of their Soviet-made Antonov-2 aircraft.

The biplane was taken from a recreational aircraft club near Zielona Gora, in western Poland, and flown some 100 miles over Polish and East German territory before landing in West Berlin, Air Force spokesman Brian McConnell told The Associated Press.

He said the nine Poles included two couples, their children and a single man, but declined to further identify them. He said they were turned over to West German police.

Lebanese war springs from ethnic conflicts

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The latest round of fighting in Lebanon's civil warfare is marked by a jumble of alliances and animosities that are rooted in long-running religious and ethnic conflicts.

Sporadic fighting has been going on for 120 years in this tiny and troubled country, spurred on by an array of alliances that form, shift, fall apart and re-form.

To make matters more confusing, there are factional fights within some religious and political sects.

Most of the fighting now raging around the beleaguered capital of Beirut is between Druse militia and Maronite Christians, two groups that have fought and feared one another for more than a century.

The Druse are now allied with left-wing Moslem factions, including the Amal, a Shiite Moselm militia, and units of the Palestine Liberation Organization. Most of their material support comes from Syria and, by extension, the Soviet Union.

The Maronites have an off-again, on-again alliance with Israel. They are now fighting alongside the Lebanese army, which has been trained and equipped by the United States, but must still prove it is a cohesive and effective fighting force.

The Druse are a mystical offshot of Islam, having split from the main tenets of the Moslem faith before the 11th century. It is virtually impossible to define Druse religious beliefs because only about 10 percent of the sect's followers — the "Uqqal," or wise ones — are allowed to read the religion's full scriptures.

THE DRUSE BELIEVE in reincarnation, and this contributes to their reputation as fierce and unyielding warriors.

There are about 200,000 Druse among Lebanon's estimated population of 4 million people. Their battle operations are being directed by Walid Jumblatt, head of a leftist Druse clan and the Progressive Socialist Party.

Jumblatt's Syrian-backed party is aided by right-wing Druse from a rival clan. Local militias of the two clans are fighting side by side in the Chouf mountains, an area marked by clashes between the Druse and Maronites since the mid-1800s.

Jumblatt's party claims it has about 2,000 regular fighters, but can arm and field between 6,000 and 10,000 irregulars.

The Maronites are a sect named after St. Maron, a 5th century Syrian hermit. In the 7th century, sect leaders adopted a doctrine considered heretical by other Christians, and were forced to flee to strongholds in the central mountains of Lebanon to escape persecution. The Druse later took refugee in the same mountains, also to avoid persecution.

Although both groups joined in a 17th-century alliance to fight the Ottoman Empire of what is now Turkey, they began clashing in the 1800s as each fought to gain control of the mountain homeland. Thousands of Maronites are said to have been massacred by the Druse in the 1860s.

THE MARONITES' political power is centered on the Phalange Party of President Amin Gemayel. But the Gemayel family has been involved in long-term feuds with Maronite clans headed by former Presidents Camille Chamoun and Suleiman Franjieh.

Up to 30 percent of the Lebanese may be Maronites. But that's uncertain because current population estimates are extrapolated from the last census, which was held while the country was under French mandate in 1932.

The Lebanese Forces, or the Phalangist militia, is said to have an estimated 2,500 fighters supplied with tanks and artillery from Israel. The Israelis allied with the Phalangists to fight Palestinians and other leftist factions.

But Western military observers say the Christian forces are smaller than claimed and have been taking a beating from the Druse in the central mountains.

Another prominent leftist group are the Shia Moslems. The Shiites split from the mainstream Sunni branch of Islam soon after the death of the prophet Mohammed in A.D. 632. The disagreement was over who would succeed Mohammed as the Caliph, or leader, of Islam.

The Shiites are a minority in the Moslem world, but are believed to comprise a majority of the Moslems in Lebanon — as they do in Iran. They are generally poor, and are represented in the fighting by the Amal militia. The name means hope in Arabic.

THE AMAL have aligned themselves with the Druse, and some of the sniper fire directed at U.S. Marines in Beirut in recent weeks is thought to have come from Amal militiamen.

The Lebanese government claims that factions of the PLO and Syrian forces are also fighting with the Druse. Some Palestinians have been seen in the fighting, but the Druse maintain they are largely on their own.

Syria has 50,000 soldiers deployed in eastern Lebanon. The Syrian soldiers have been in Lebanon since the end of the 1975-76 civil war between Christians and an alliance of Moslems and Palestinians.

Damascus is supplying the Druse with weapons and artillery backing.

The renewal of civil war started after Israel pulled its forces out of the Chouf mountains earlier this month. Israeli defense forces remain in southern Lebanon.

Other foreign forces now in Lebanon include the 5,400 troops of the U.S., French, Italian and British peacekeeping forces stationed in Beirut. A U.N. peacekeeping force, with soldiers from 10 countries, is stationed in southern Lebanon, intended as a buffer between Israeli and Arab forces.

Chinese say primitive life existed 1.8 billion years ago

PEKING (AP) — Chinese geologists say they have discovered that tiny forms of life with a nucleus and membrane existed 1.8 billion years ago — 400 million years earlier than previously thought.

Chen Jinbiao of the Tianjin Institute of Geology and Minerals Research announced the discovery at an international symposium, the official Xinhua news agency said Friday. The symposium on Pre-Cambrian geology ended Thursday in Tianjin.

Xinhua said Chinese scientists based their findings on the discovery of fusimorphs, a kind of algae, in the 1.8 billion-year-old shale in Jixian county, near Tianjin.

Xinhua said geologists from Australia, Canada, France, West Germany, Britain, and the United States attended the symposium.

Greeks permit nude swimming

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Parliament unanimously passed legislation Saturday that permits people to swim and sunbathe nude on Greek beaches without fear of immediate arrest, a parliamentary spokesman said.

Under the new law, a bare swimmer or sunbather will be prosecuted "only if a citizen is really upset by the appearance of a nudist and files suit against him," the spokesman said.

The act also provides for the establishment of nudist hotels and campsites in isolated areas around Greece.

The British president of the International Nudist Federation, Alan MacCobbe, last week threatened a boycott of Greece by the 22 million members of the federation after the arrest of a Swedish woman for swimming nude on the holiday islet of Angistri.

Korean protesters arrested

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Six Seoul National University students have been arrested on charges of leading a campus anti-government demonstration, police said Saturday.

Police said the six were accused of instigating the protest, which took place last Tuesday, and of distributing leaflets criticizing the government and President Chun Doo-hwan. They were arrested Friday.

Unauthorized demonstrations and rallies are banned by law in South Korea.

British find surrender document

LONDON (AP) — The Falklands surrender document, apparently missing for more than a year, has been found in Plymouth, according to a spokesman for the Defense Ministry.

The document ending the 74-day war in the South Atlantic was signed on June 14, 1982 by Argentine Brig. Gen. Mario Menendez and British Maj. Gen. Jeremy Moore in the Falklands Islands capital of Port Stanley.

Its whereabouts since that date were uncertain. The Defense Ministry, without actually saying it was lost, two weeks ago acknowledged that a search had been launched for it.

On Friday, the spokesman said the document was found in Plymouth, in an envelope with other papers shipped back from the islands "still waiting to be collated and sorted."

"I think you can assume it is (now) in safekeeping," he said.

Italian premier chips away at welfare state

ROME (AP) — Socialist Premier Bettino Craxi risking a confrontation with powerful unions has begun to chip away at the Italian welfare state taking aim at pensions, workers' absenteeism, public health programs and tens of thousands of unproductive jobs.

Six weeks after entering office, Craxi's coalition government has taken the first steps to reduce chronic inflation and a runaway state deficit now estimated at more than $56 billion.

Faced with a dismal economic outlook, the country's first-ever Socialist-led government has had to come up with some tough plans, but experts say Craxi will have a rough time putting them into effect over labor union opposition.

"Craxi has inevitably learned from (French President Francois) Mitterrand's experience that even a Socialist-led government must adopt certain unpopular economic and social measures," said Ettore Lolli, an international financial consultant. "But despite all good will and efforts Craxi will run into tremendous difficulty."

Unions are nervous about more job cutbacks at a time when unemployment is running at more than 10 percent of the workforce of 22 million. And the Communist Party expressed alarm that the measures cutting back funding of health care and pensions threatened "the fundamental victories of the social security system."

Thousands of workers went on a general strike in the Genoa area Friday to protest plans by Istituto per la Ricostruzione, the giant state holding company, to eliminate 25,000 jobs in the depressed steel industry.

The state energy group ENI also is reported to be planning massive layoffs.

The 49-year-old Craxi heads a coalition of Socialists, Christian Democrats, Social Democrats, Republicans and Liberals that has the necessary votes to push measures through Parliament.

But there are high political risks for Craxi's economic plans. With more than 60 percent of Italian industry in state hands, political parties have traditionally dispensed patronage to ensure votes and kept their hands off the pension system, which is one of the most attractive in the industrialized world.

Newspapers estimated that up to 300,000 state workers have recently filed for early retirement because of concern that the government plans across-the-board reductions in benefits.

Craxi's government last week cut back on pensions for people holding second jobs after retirement, toughened requirements for disability pensions and halted sick leave payments to workers who are not found at home when they claimed to be ill.

More than 5 million Italians receive disability pensions. In the southern city of Potenza authorities discovered that 120,000 of the region's 400,000 residents — more than a quarter of the population — had retired on disability.

Craxi has also pledged to move against inflation, now running at 13.7 percent, but economists agree it won't be contained until Italy's wage indexing system is modified and the public-sector deficit is reduced. Wage indexing ties pay increases to inflation rates, protecting wage earners from the rising cost of living.

Courtney Purdy, the daughter of Kennesaw, Ga., Mayor Darvin Purdy, awaits the start of the 51st Annual North Georgia State Fair parade on Saturday in Marietta, Ga. Courtney and her mother were part of a contingent of some 400 people carrying flags and placards that marched behind a riderless horse carrying boots backwards in the stirrups in McDonald's honor.

Birchers march; McDonald's son criticizes Reagan's sanctions

From Wire Reports

Hundreds of John Birch Society members, wearing black arm bands and leading a riderless horse, paraded in Marietta, Ga., on Saturday in memory of their late leader, U.S. Rep. Larry McDonald, who was one of 269 people aboard the Soviet-downed airliner.

Meanwhile, scattered protests continued in the United States to the downing of the Korean Air Lines jet nearly three weeks ago.

A foot surgeons' group canceled a trip to the Soviet Union, a score of Key West, Fla., restaurants set up a trust fund for victims' families, and, in Pittsburg, Kan., a local culinary favorite, the Russian salad at Harry's Cafe, was renamed the American salad.

In Marietta, McDonald's home town, the John Birch Society members marched in the annual North Georgia Fair parade.

Aides to the late Democratic congressman estimated that 400 members took part, toting American flags and carrying banners and posters with anti-communist slogans.

Former Gov. Lester Maddox rode in a convertible in front of the group. Maddox, who has cancer, has said he will run for the seat Oct. 18 if McDonald's widow, Kathryn, does not. She said she will announce her plans Wednesday.

McDonald's son, Tryggvi McDonald, 23, said Friday that President Reagan's sanctions against the Soviets for downing the plane "are basically a lot of talk, meaningless."

Fire marks fourth attack on Jewish community

By The Associated Press

WEST HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — An arsonist acting on the holiest day of the Jewish calendar torched the home of a state legislator Saturday, the fourth attack on the local Jewish community in the past two months, police said.

The home of state Rep. Joan Kemler and her husband, Dr. Leonard Kemler, a surgeon, was set ablaze before 6 a.m. The Jewish couple and their two adult children escaped safely and firefighters contained damage to one outer wall of the two-story house.

Mrs. Kemler had spoken out against the arson attacks on two synagogues and a rabbi's home since Aug. 11. The Kemlers are active in West Hartford's conservative Emanuel Synagogue, one of the buildings set afire last month.

"It definitely was a case of arson," West Hartford Police Chief Francis Reynolds said as he stood on the Kemlers' front lawn. "We found a bottle containing accelerants."

Reynolds said the fire fit the pattern of those at the previous arson fires. The four buildings are in an affluent section of West Hartford.

Soon after the fire was out, the Kemlers went to Emanuel Synagogue to observe Yom Kippur, the Jewish day of atonement.

"It's a pattern," Mrs. Kemler said as she walked past reporters. "It fits into some troubled person's pattern. Obviously, there is someone very close in the area who has targeted a few places and a few people in the area."

Reynolds said that, because of the holiday, his department "had stepped up patrols of the neighborhoods, giving special attention to the synagogues."

Mrs. Kemler said she awoke smelling smoke and went downstairs to discover flames burning the living room walls.

"I realized we had a problem and got the rest of the family up and out," she said.

Mayor Charles Matties was among those huddled outside the Kemler home as fire inspectors began looking for clues.

"An incident like this gets everyone wary," Matties said. "We're trying to find the common thread. We're trying to get into that person's mind, really."

Reynolds said footprints had been discovered outside the home, but he didn't know if they had been made by the person responsible for the fire. He said there were no other leads.

On Aug. 11, fire destroyed the chapel area of the orthodox Young Israel of West Hartford Synagogue. Emanuel Synagogue was set afire Aug. 15. The following day, an arsonist torched a library in the home of Rabbi Solomon Krupka, leader of Young Israel.

The militant Jewish Defense League said earlier this month an anti-Semitic group was behind the fire and the JDL began armed patrols.

Judges orders feuding officials to courtroom

CHICAGO (AP) — A judge has called for representatives of the feuding City Council and administration to appear in court Monday to discuss a compromise that could free what he called "734 employees being held hostage."

Circuit Judge James C. Murray issued the order Friday after city Budget Director David Schulz testified about a compromise tax plan that had been offered by Mayor Harold Washington but rejected by the council.

Schulz testified in the second day of a hearing on a suit by anti-administration aldermen seeking to reinstate the jobs of the 734 employees whose positions were terminated Thursday in a cost-cutting move.

Schulz said Washington had offered a plan for the city to levy an additional $5.9 million in property taxes, but rebate the tax money in 1984 if revenues were than expected. The council, Schulz said, torpedoed the idea.

Murray, who has mediated the feud in several court actions since last spring, called for representatives of the council majority and the Washington administration to appear in court to explain their opposition to the plan.

"Here we have 734 employees being held hostage. ... The solution lies in the willingness to pass this tax and make it subject to rebates. I can't understand why they (the council) wouldn't do this," the judge said.

"If the mayor can agree to this and we can get some aldermen here who speak for the majority, maybe we can do somethng about this (deadlock)," Murray said.

A lawyer for the anti-administration aldermen suggested that Schulz manipulated figures to back up a claim that there would be a $76.2 million budget shortfall and justify the firings.

Schulz stuck by his estimate, which the mayor believes can be whittled by $6 million if the layoffs remain in effect. Washington has dismissed 1,300 city employees in an effort to balance the budget.

The 29-member City Council bloc opposing Washington sought Thursday to suspend council rules and allow a hearing on an employee furlough proposal to replace the layoffs.

Counselor to help families

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A counselor in the attorney general's office is trying to contact families of the victims of Death Row inmates to look for ways to help them through the turbulent aftermath of murder.

"They feel that they are unheard, that no one listens to them," says Mary Ann Morris, recently appointed victims rights coordinator by state Attorney General Travis Medlock. "The criminal seems to get all the attention."

In one case that made national headlines, a bricklayer named Tony Cimo plotted the South Carolina Death Row slaying of the killer of his parents.

Cimo, now serving an eight-year prison term, said he was frustated by four years of trials, retrials and appeals.

Whether counseling and more information about the appeals process could have averted the 1982 bombing death of Rudolph Tyner is "speculation," Mrs. Morris said.

"But I think if he had been notified of developments all along the way, maybe he would have understood it better," she said.

"If he had been more closely involved in the system, this somehow might have prevented that tragedy from occurring," agreed Medlock, who made victims' rights a theme of his 1982 election campaign.

Although Mrs. Morris is starting with capital murder cases, she eventually will be dealing with victims of all of the about 500 criminal cases each year which reach the appeals level.

She thinks the biggest need her new "clients" have is for prompt, reliable updates on the status of the cases that concern them.

"They need someone they can call and see what's happening," she said. "They want to know before they read it in the papers."

"Sometimes they misinterpret what they see in the media," said Medlock. "Now when they see the article, they will already have been advised in detail of the legal implications of that action."

But Mrs. Morris, 55, who has 13 years of counseling experience in state prisons and mental hospitals, is also trained to spot emotional problems or other needs and find agencies which can help.

Medlock said she'll also make sure they get any cash benefits they're entitled to under the state Victims Compensation Act.

"I think she has a full-time job, day and night," the attorney general said, adding he expects one result to be new proposals soon for laws favoring crime victims.

Cranston forms minority group to aid campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Alan Cranston of California announced Saturday the formation of a coalition of black and Hispanic leaders to help his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1984.

Cranston said he expects the group to provide support in some unexpected areas of the nation, including a straw poll among Iowa Democrats next month.

Cranston said he would not predict victory for himself in the Iowa contest on Oct. 8. But, he added, "we will demonstrate we are competitive with the so-called front-runners," former Vice President Walter Mondale and Sen. John Glenn of Ohio.

Cranston was accompanied by 12 black and Hispanic leaders in announcing the group.

Cranston said President Reagan has lately been pressing for Hispanic support "while ignoring the blacks."

Cranston dismissed the impact of former Sen. George McGovern on the race for the Democratic nomination. McGovern entered the race last week.

'Dead' woman found alive

ALVIN (AP) — A woman who authorities believed had been murdered by her husband and buried in the backyard of their home is living in the northern part of the country, detectives said Saturday.

Jackie Lucas Bennett, 40, was reported missing three days after she and Herman E. "Cowboy" Bennett, 48, were married in September 1982.

Brazoria County sheriff's investigators said they contacted Mrs. Bennett on Wednesday after relatives notified them of her whereabouts. She said she was not aware authorities were looking for her, but asked that her new residence remain secret, said Sgt. Glyn Gibbs.

Investigators refused to disclose other details of the case.

In January, a family friend told authorities that Bennett may have killed his bride and buried her under a dead horse in the backyard of their mobile home.

For three weeks, investigators dug up the backyard to try to find the body. But all they found was the carcass of a horse, one of three Bennett said he had buried in the yard.

Bennett, an oilfield worker, was arrested in January and charged with murder after authorities noticed he was acting nervous. The charge was dropped three weeks later because authorities were unable to find a body.

Cardinal dies of heart failure after surgery

Medeiros

BOSTON (AP) — Cardinal Humberto Medeiros, who led Boston's 2 million Roman Catholics for 13 years in a quiet search for racial harmony and social justice, died of heart failure Saturday at the age of 67.

The death of the gentle theological conservative stunned doctors who operated on him a day earlier for heart problems.

Medeiros, who opposed the nuclear arms race and backed integration as cardinal of the nation's second-largest archdiocese, was a "humble giant of a peace," said Gov. Michael S. Dukakis.

Medeiros underwent six hours of surgery Friday at St. Elizabeth Hospital to bypass clogged arteries and replace a leaky valve. Doctors said he regained consciousness briefly after midnight but did not speak.

At 6:35 a.m. Saturday, his heart stopped, and after efforts to revive him, including heart massage, Medeiros was pronounced dead at 7:46 a.m. by Dr. Richard H. Cleveland.

"I personally have no good explanation for why it happened with such suddenness," said Dr. John Pastore, a cardiologist and the cardinal's personal physician. "I was stunned."

Medeiros' death was the second of a major U.S. Catholic figure in 17 months. Cardinal John Cody of Chicago, the nation's largest archdiocese, died April 25, 1982. Cardinal Terence Cooke of New York is dying of leukemia.

An 11-member Board of Consultants of the Boston Archdiocese was to meet later Saturday to name an administrator to run church affairs until a successor is named by the Vatican.

Daily said the archdiocese would make funeral arrangements after church officials had read Medeiros' will, which Daily said probably would contain instructions about where the cardinal desired to be buried. Medeiros is survived by two brothers and a sister.

He was born Oct. 6, 1915, in the Portuguese Azores village of Arrifes, and was ordained a priest in 1946, 15 years after his family emigrated to Fall River.

He served in Fall River before becoming bishop in the diocese of Brownsville, Texas, where he became known for concern about the plight of farmworkers.

He was named Archbishop of Boston on Sept. 8, 1970, replacing the retiring Cardinal Richard Cushing at a time of turmoil. He was elevated to the College of Cardinals in 1973.

Medeiros had been hospitalized six times in 18 months for diabetes, high blood pressure and inner ear problems. On Sept. 6, he suffered a mild heart attack.

Dukakis praised Medeiros' role in opposing the violence that greeted school busing to achieve racial desegregation.

The soft-spoken cardinal was known for his firm opposition to abortion — once criticizing lawmakers who made it possible — and for his efforts to find shelter for the homeless and food for the hungry.

He used his position to speak out against drug abuse and racial conflict, and backed federal and state aid to parochial schools while making it clear that he supported integration.

Food writer commits suicide

NEW YORK (AP) — Syndicated food writer Roy Andries de Groot has died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound at the age of 72.

De Groot, author of several cookbooks and contributor to Esquire, House Beautiful and Gourmet magazines, had been despondent over failing health, including heart trouble, said his daughter, Fiona Rhodes of Aspen, Colo.

Police said de Groot shot himself in the right temple with a .32-caliber pistol Friday afternoon in his apartment.

Blacks urge school protest

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A call by black ministers for a one-day boycott of Milwaukee schools was unheeded by most students, the school superintendent says.

Lee R. McMurrin said said no teachers and "very few" students apparently participated in the boycott. No attendance figures were immediately available because schools do not report daily, he said.

The Wisconsin Ministers Fellowship Conference, representing 60 black churches, urged students to boycott classes, charging black teachers were being laid off and black students treated poorly. They also charged the system had a poor record of hiring blacks.

McMurrin denied the allegations.

Imposter banned from hospital

DENVER (AP) — An unemployed construction worker who admitted posing as a doctor so he could sleep in hospital waiting rooms has been barred from visiting one hospital.

Denver District Judge Clifton Flowers issued a temporary restraining order on Friday barring Luther Ervin Boyd from Rose Medical Center. Boyd, 24, said last week he slept in the expectant father's waiting room there for two weeks because he didn't have a job or a place to stay.

Rose Medical Center President Joel Edelman said in seeking the order that Boyd's presence would damage the center's reputation.

Boyd, who says he never treated patients while living at area hospitals, is being held in lieu of a $1,500 bond for investigation of criminal impersonation.

Death sentence overturned

ATLANTA (AP) — A federal appeals court panel has overturned the death sentenced of a convicted killer, ending his nine years on Florida's death row.

The panel of the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ordered Johnny Paul Witt resentenced on grounds the trial court erred in dismissing a prospective juror who failed to indicate she would be absolutely unable to vote for the death penalty.

No juror can be dismissed, the court said, unless he makes it clear he would vote against the death penalty under any circumstances or that his opposition to the punishment would prevent him from making an impartial decision about the defendant's guilt.

Witt, 50, was condemned for the 1973, slaying of an 11-year-old boy who was abducted and gagged so tightly he suffocated.

Sergeant to appeal demotion

OSCODA, Mich. (AP) — An Air Force sergeant plans to appeal the fine and demotion given him by a military tribunal that found him guilty of disobeying an order that he said violated his religious beliefs.

Billy Brawley, demoted from technical sergeant to staff sergeant and fined $100 per month for three months, said "I've served my country for 18½ years ... but I have to obey God rather than man."

Brawley, a member of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, was convicted Thursday at Wurtsmith Air Force base, said Maj. Gerald Taft, base spokesman. The court said Brawley should have obeyed an officer who told him to work past sunset one Friday. Brawley says his religion forbids him to work on Friday nights and Saturdays.

Young stops bid to change name

ATLANTA (AP) — Mayor Andrew Young says he decided to drop his effort to change the name of Atlanta's Rhodesia Avenue to Zimbabwe Avenue because it was such an "emotional issue."

The mayor had asked the City Council to approve the name change in conjunction with a visit last weekend by Robert Mugabe, prime minister of Zimbabwe. The African country changed its name from Rhodesia to Zimbabwe three years ago.

Attorney General Jim Mattox insists he will win acquittal on commerical bribery charges, but the fact that he has been indicted may already have cost Mattox a future in public life. These three former top Texas politicians, John Connaly, Bill Clayton, and Waggoner Carr were once indicted, then acquitted, but despite their courtroom victories, none has ever held elective office since.

Indictment clouds Mattox's career

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox insists he will "fight to the last breath" and win acquittal on charges of commercial bribery. But even if he wins in court, the mere fact that he has been indicted may already have cost Mattox a future career in public life.

"Regardless who you are, indictments are not good. But they're always more damaging to a public official," said former House Speaker Bill Clayton.

Clayton is one of three top Texas politicians indicted and then acquitted in the past decade. The other two are former Texas Attorney General Waggoner Carr and former Gov. John Connally, and despite their courtroom victories, none has won elective office since.

Clayton and Carr did not seek public office after their successful trials, although Clayton did win an unprecedented fourth straight term as House speaker in a post decided by a vote of House members. Connally sought the presidency and failed.

MATTOX SAID DURING A NEWS CONFERENCE Thursday he was not worried. "I don't know what all this good publicity is going to manage to do for me politically. I'm frankly not concerned about it."

Clayton said the law presumes you innocent until you are proven guilty. But if you are a well known public official, the law doesn't say people have to vote for you after the trial, even if you were acquitted, as Connally found out in 1980.

He spent $11 million in a bid for the GOP presidential nomination and won only a single delegate at the Republican convention. Other factors were involved, but press accounts of Connally's campaign reminded readers again and again of the 1974 indictment.

Connally declined to discuss the topic when approached by a reporter at the conclusion of a special ceremony for the University of Texas' 100th anniversary on Thursday. But for Carr, who has written a book on his ordeal, it has become a personal crusade.

"IF A CHARGE OF WRONGDOING is made against you when you're in politics, there is always a certain element of people who believe it. The fact that you were indicted means 'guilty' to a lot of people, and they will say you got out on some trick or a lawyer got you out," Carr said in 1974 after the second of his two trials on federal charges of bribery, conspiracy and fraud. He was found innocent of all charges after both trials.

"It's not right, but it's a fact of political life," said Carr, who served 10 years in the Texas House including four as speaker, before becoming attorney general. He is now a private attorney in Austin.

Carr spent three years and more than $1.5 million fighting the charges against him, which were an outgrowth of the Sharpstown Bank scandal that shook state government 10 years ago.

For Connally, a popular three-term Texas governor who also served as treasury secretary under President Nixon, the indictment and trial fueled his critics' characterization of him as a big-time wheeler-dealer too closely linked to corporate interests.

THE FEDERAL CHARGE, which stemmed from the Watergate investigation, accused him of accepting $10,000 from dairy lobbyists in exchange for persuading Nixon to raise milk price supports.

Five years after the indictment, a 1979 Time magazine article about Connally's presidential bid referred to it as "the case that continues to haunt John Connally — despite his acquittal...."

To this day, Clayton insists that the Brilab indictment was not the main reason he changed his mind about seeking statewide office last year, although he acknowledged it was a factor.

He was acquitted on charges he accepted a $5,000 bribe in exchange for his influence in awarding a state insurance contract.

"It didn't bother me so much, but the family has to go through it every time a (newspaper) story comes for the next year or two — you know, Billy Clayton, who had been charged and was acquitted in Brilab — you had to repeat that every-time before you go on with the story," said Clayton, who had considered running for land commissioner.

"YOU PUT YOUR FAMILY THROUGH that over and over and over — it weighs pretty heavy on you. It just takes a lapse of time." He said he would reconsider running for public office, either governor or lieutenant governor, after two more years.

Clayton, now a successful Austin lobbyist, said he had this advice for any public figure who is indicted — "Expedite in every way a trial.

Oil wells provide schools with quality education

WHITE OAK (AP) — School buses making daily rounds roll past oil wells that pump the wealth from below Gregg County's dense woods and send a measure of it to the passengers in the yellow and black coach.

It is here, where U.S highway 80 widens slightly just east of Longview, that the generous land pays for a quality of public education that the children's mostly blue-collar parents never could afford.

"Per child, we have about as much money as any school district in the state of Texas," said school board member Tommy Fogle.

WHILE SCHOOL boards across Texas ponder budget cuts and tax hikes, trustees in this district of 1,130 students have $6,543,664 to spend, and the option of expanding programs and raising teacher salaries should the Legislature fail to during a hinted special session.

"The magic of the White Oak School District is the Castleberry Survey of the East Texas oil field. Most of the deepest part lies right under our school district. It should be the last to run out," said Fogle.

The bounty from that field, which includes six oil wells on the school campus, means better facilities, educational aides, a quality of education far surpassing state and national norms and higher pay for teachers, said Fogle.

"You have a chance to get better quality teachers and you don't have a lot of trouble keeping really good teachers," said Fogle.

ABOUT 80 PERCENT of White Oak's teachers have masters degrees, said Mike Crossland, the district's director of curriculum.

On the Texas Education Agency's test of basic skills, required in all public schools in the state, White Oak ninth graders scored 24 percent above the state average in reading, 13 percent higher in math and 19 percent higher in writing.

But Crossland contends the TABS test scores is not an accurate reflection of the district's overall performance and instead says something significant only about the lower 10 percent of the students.

"It doesn't tell us how good we are, just how bad we are not," said Crossland.

HE SAID THE district has administered the Stanford Test to its students for the last two years and has scored in the upper 10 percent of the students taking the exam nationwide.

Crossland said the district believes it is essential to test students to measure the district's progress and to make sure students are being taught what is important to test.

"It is important to test what you teach and teach what you test," said Crossland.

The principal difference between the White Oak Indpendent School District and others spread along Texas super highways or back dusty roads is the enormous value of the oil in the Castleberry Survey.

WHITE OAKS IS a town of about 5,000 to 6,000 people, but Bill Carroll, head of the Gregg County Appraisal District, said the district has an after-exemption tax base of about $1.4 billion.

Longview, a nearby city of 65,000 people with a school district of 8,400 students, has a tax base after exemptions of about $1.6 billion.

"Our tax rate probably is the lowest around," said Fogle, who estimated that oil companies pay well ovear 90 percent of the school taxes in the district. The tax rate, he said, is 32 cents for ever $100 valuation, or $160 a year on a $50,000 house.

BUT BECAUSE of a world-wide oil glut and a drop in the international price of crude, Crossland and Fogle say things are not as good as they were and the future is not assured.

"Our situation financially probably is not as good as it has been in the past," said Crossland. He said the city has no tax base other than oil, and if the price of oil continues to drop the district could be forced to rely on federal subsidies — something it shuns but most districts rely on.

Still, when asked if the district has any problems it cannot solve by throwing money at them, Fogle pauses only momentarily before shaking his head and saying "No."

CROSSLAND SAID he would welcome a visit by H. Ross Perot and the governor's select committee on education and the opportunity to show them the things a rural school district can accomplish with more money.

"We would like to invite him here. We would show him anything he wanted to see. We also have got some things working we would like to improve and am very sure we would be delighted to have him visit," said Crossland.

United helping

The united concept of giving offered through United Way of Midland makes good, common sense. Most people prefer being contacted only once by fund-soliciting groups or organizations. There are less headaches that way. The doorbells ring less.

But the convenience of the umbrella approach of giving — while being one of United Way's biggest selling points — certainly isn't the only one. Oh, it has enjoyed considerable success since it was launched in Midand in 1947. In fact, last year's goal was $1,612,000 and the campaign exceeded that — ending at $1,612,925. That's impressive, but even more is needed this year just in order for the local United Way agencies to keep providing their valuable services to Midlanders from all walks of life.

That is what United Way is really all about — people. Before you respond to the United Way volunteer's request for a tax-deductible contribution, consider these facts:

— In Midland, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and Campfire, Inc. enrich the lives of 5,800 children each and every year.

— The Council on Alcoholism has provided education to 2,500 people here and information and referrals to nearly 1,700 others during the year.

— The Center for Battered Women and Their Children has sheltered 444 people and counselled 1,448.

— The American Red Cross office has provided health and safety services to 3,930 individuals.

— Community Day Nursery provides care for 110 children.

— Midland's Rape Crisis Center assisted 68 individuals who suffered sexual assaults.

— The Tape Lending Library provided its services to 258 people.

— Casa de Amigos has given emergency food, clothing and financial assistance to needy individuals while providing a daily lunch, a health clinic and social activities to 175 senior citizens.

— The Salvation Army's transient assistance program has served more than 5,000; their Christmas food baskets and toys reached many others.

— Family Services counselled 279 people, with additional services provided to almost 500 others through workshops, support groups and speaker presentations.

— The Boys' Club reaches and serves 325 boys.

— The YMCA's youth membership numbers 2,709 with youth sports involvement standing at 1,050; the Summer Recreation program serves 160 others and the after-school program has 300 enrolled.

— West Texas Epilepsy Association has provided information and referral services to 50 people, while reaching 175 others through public education.

As you can see, United Way is people. And it's your dollars that make it work. This year the goal is $1,712,000 — a 6 percent increase over last year's goal. Without your contributions, valuable services will be lost or cutback. Give this year so that we can say proudly, once again, thanks to you the United Way works in Midland.

Another coonskin

Enough pussy-footing. Fred C. Ikle, the third-ranking official in the Defense Department, has come clean about just what the president wants down in Central America. He wants military victory, Mr. Ikle said in remarks prepared for the Baltimore Foreign Affairs Council: Victory, that is, over the foes of "democracy."

Phooey on negotiations, he said. The hard-core leftists trying to knock off the Salvadoran government never will settle for the democratic process. Special Envoy Richard Stone came close to saying the same thing a week or so ago, leading one to wonder why Americans are being asked to pay Mr. Stone's airfare to widening rounds of foredoomed negotiations.

If the guerillas won't talk, they need to be vanquished, so the Ikle reasoning goes. And to defeat the Salvadoran rebels, the reasoning goes, the spiritual and military fountainhead that is Nicaragua must be dried up. The House vote to cut off covert aid to the "democratic resistance forces" in Nicaragua — composed to a large extent of loyalists to the deposed regime of dictator Anastasio Somoza — is to invite failure in that effort, Mr. Ikle said.

There must be no strong and unthreatened Nicaragua, he said. It must be contained by its transition to Ikle-style democracy. Unless and until that golden age arrives, he said, the United States will be forced to cut up Central America like Korea and West Germany have been cut up — a piece for the East, a piece for the West.

The United States, of course, would prefer not to put troops in neighboring countries "as in Korea and West Germany," he said.

But U.S. advisers are creeping ever upward in El Salvador. Marines are landing by the thousands in Honduras. Guatemalan troops are soon to be trained by the Green Berets. And, says Mr. Ikle, America will be buying a policy of "protracted failure" unless Congress gets on the ball with more aid to the Nicaraguan insurgents.

The partitioning is, in fact, already in progress. And should the president's scenario unfold as Mr. Ikle envisions, self-determination in Central America will have an emptiness at its core. On an occupied isthmus, those "democrats" who best serve U.S. interests will be maintained. Others may well find themselves undermined, sabotaged or muscled aside. Such has been the tradition of "democracy" in America's back yard. Such is the prospect should the Ikle option prevail.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND
Use of remote planes urged

WASHINGTON — There's a valuable lesson for Pentagon planners in the shooting down of the South Korean airliner. It's a lesson that could save lives and money in the continuing Cold War intelligence gathering — if the Air Force brass will only heed it.

Jack Anderson

The incident has given an additional arguing point to those in government who advocate the use of remotely-piloted vehicles to carry out vital but dangerous flights over Soviet territory. These low-flying, unmanned drone planes are not only far cheaper to build than heavier, manned aircraft but burn so little fuel they can stay aloft many times longer. They are also nearly impossible to shoot down.

Actually, it shouldn't have taken the Korean airline massacre to hammer home to the Air Force the lesson that manned planes are dangerously vulnerable. If it had been the U.S. reconnaissance plane that had strayed into Soviet air space, it too would have been a sitting duck for the Russian fighter pilots.

A top-secret report, prepared by an inter-agency group that included CIA experts, has urged President Reagan to consider greater use of RPVs. My associate Dale Van Atta has seen a copy of the report.

Along with more and better spy satellites, the group wrote, "remotely-piloted vehicles, possibly using stealth technology, should be reviewed for possible tactical intelligence-collecting value and for strategic intelligence collection ..." The drones could be launched from larger reconnaissance planes.

Besides their intelligence-gathering advantages, the pilotless planes have a proven combat value. This was dramatically and convincingly demonstrated last year by the Israelis in the early stages of their attack into Lebanon.

The Israeli military's biggest fear was the devastating potential of the Russian surface-to-air missile batteries the Syrians had deployed near the strategic Bekaa Valley. Most were SA-6 missiles, the kind that wreaked such terrible destruction on the Israeli air force in the 1973 Yom Kippur war.

But 1982 was a different story. To the astonishment of the Syrians and the Soviets (and the Pentagon, too), the Israelis in two days destroyed all 19 SA-6 missile batteries without the loss of a single plane. One key to their success was the use of RPVs. They not only gathered intelligence but acted as decoys to lure the Syrians into firing on them and giving away the position of their batteries — which the Israeli air force then wiped out.

Ironically, the Israeli RPVs were based on technology developed by the United States and tried out during the Vietnam War. Yet the American RPV program has been under-planned, under-prioritized and under-funded. There is no American RPV in operation today; a drone being developed by the Army won't be ready until 1988.

Even in their Vietnam heyday, our RPVs were never exploited to full advantage, though their record was impressive. They flew more than 3,000 highly-classified missions, photographing targets for manned bombers, recording post-strike damage, dropping propaganda leaflets and discovering unsuspected targets.

Essentially, the RPVs are highly sophisticated model airplanes, controlled from the ground with far greater speed and maneuverability than piloted aircraft. The little planes were more than a match for North Vietnamese anti-aircraft gunners: The "casualty" rate was only 10 percent.

So glittering were the prospects of the RPVs that even the hard-eyed auditors of the General Accounting Office were impressed. The GAO's traditional role is to uncover wasteful programs, but in 1981 the agency issued a report that actually urged more funding for RPVs.

Though the unmanned craft are extremely hard to shoot down because of their small size, speed and maneuverability (their remote controllers don't have to worry about the G-force factors that cause a pilot to black out), the big point about them is that if they do get shot down, nobody dies. The GAO stressed this.

"Of the American prisoners of war held in Southeast Asia, almost 90 percent were downed pilots and crewmen, and over 5,000 Americans lost their lives in ... aircraft incidents during the war," the GAO pointed out. "Increased employment of RPVs in high-risk and political situations could greatly reduce losses in future conflicts."

The RPVs are also much cheaper: Their costs range from $25,000 to a possible $3 million, compared to $9 million to $20 million for a fighter plane or $30 million for a reconnaissance aircraft. And the cost of training a ground controller is peanuts compared to the $1 million or more to train a pilot.

"Because of its lower cost," the GAO concluded, "an RPV can be employed in great numbers to increase air power ... an important factor, for example, in a European theater war against the numerical superiority of the Warsaw Pact forces."

GEORGE F. WILL
Reagan misses hot opportunity

WASHINGTON — The public mind, like wax, is easiest to shape when heated. President Reagan has not just missed an opportunity to shape it, he has labored to minimize the opportunity.

George F. Will

The Korean airliner atrocity raised the public's temperature to a healthy degree. But Reagan has squandered the moment, using it to solve what he evidently thinks is one of his political problems — a perception that he is not as peaceloving as the editors of the New York Times. In the process he has dissipated a national asset: the Kremlin's anxiety that he just might mean what he says.

It would be one thing — unconvincing and unbecoming but at least intelligible — for him to cite reasons why he should not do any of the many things he could do to strengthen U.S. policy toward the Soviet Union. It is something else for him to deny the existence of options other than rhetoric or war.

Sen. William Armstrong (R-Colo.) and others have made him a list. It includes declaring Poland in default on debts owed to the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Last summer, saying there must be "deeds not just words" in Poland, Reagan said: "The Soviets should not be afforded the additional security of a new long-term (grain) agreement as long as repression continues in Poland." Evidently he thinks repression no longer continues in Poland — perhaps because the regime, using words to disguise deeds, took features of martial law and put them in the normal law. Anyway, Reagan also said the Soviet Union would not be guaranteed minimum grain sales if it engaged in "heinous" acts.

Reagan obviously did not mean what he said. He has made a serious case against the usefulness of grain embargoes. But why are we subsidizing Poland?

Armstrong and others want Reagan to report on Soviet violations of existing arms-control agreements. Reagan has talked not at all to the American people and only flaccidly to the Soviet Union about violations.

The Wall Street Journal predicts that when Pershing missiles are deployed in Europe, Moscow will deploy antiballistic missiles (some necessary radars are already deployed, in violation of SALT I) and will say it is not violating the ABM ban because these ABMs are for use against theater, not strategic, weapons. The Journal asks: "What will we do then?" Well, what are we doing about violations of other agreements? Consider.

The Soviet Union has in excess of four million persons (including half-a-million Vietnamese) in 2,000 forced labor camps. In at least 40 extermination camps, the work inevitably causes leukemia or other fatal effects as a result of such things as exposure to radioactivity in uranium mining, or cleaning exhaust tubes of nuclear submarines, or polishing glass without ventilation. According to Mikhail Makarenko, who spent eight years in Soviet camps, the diet for "heavy labor" prisoners is 2,000 calories a day. For "strict regime" prisoners, it is 1,300. In Auschwitz it was 2,050.

The Soviet Union has subscribed to and is violating the U.N. Charter, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Anti-Slavery Convention of 1926, and the Forced Labor Convention of 1930. Furthermore, U.S. law forbids the importing of goods "manufactured wholly or in part by convict labor or and forced labor." The law has never been enforced. The Customs Service has no enforcement mechanism. Armstrong has a list of the goods that would be barred. Reagan should read it. Armstrong has a corrective bill. Reagan should demand it.

Here is an option Armstrong has overlooked: revising U.S. relations with the United Nations.

After wasting her valuable energies wheedling and cajoling, Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, U.S. Representative to the U.N., rounded up just enough votes to get the Security Council to "deplore" (it refused to condemn) the airline massacre. There are 157 "nations" (counting, of course, Ukrania and Byelorussia) in the United Nations. We pay approximately one-quarter of the U.N.'s bills. If we paid one-eighth, we would pay more than the Soviet Union which, unlike the United States, benefits from the U.N.'s existence. We should radically reduce our payments. The savings should be invested in substantially more — and more technologically sophisticated — broadcasting into the "evil empire" (a.k.a. "world's most lucrative grain market").

The airline atrocity is not the reason for such measures. Rather, it is an occasion that, properly handled by a leader, would make clear why such measures are reasonable, and overdo. If Reagan continues to say that he has done all that he can do, short of going to war, he will vindicate those who say that American conservatives care more about containing the Occupational Safety and Health Administration than containing the Soviet Union.

ART BUCHWALD
No bargains at Pentagon garage sale

The Pentagon was having a spare parts garage sale the other day, and I went over to see if I could pick up any bargains. There were spare parts spread all over the parking lot.

Art Buchwald

I picked up a Phillips screwdriver, and a colonel came over and warned me, "If you break it you pay for it."

"How much is it?"

The colonel looked in a book. "I'll let you have it for $760."

"Seven hundred and sixty dollars for a screwdriver?"

"We paid $990 for it. It's a heckuva bargain. This is not an ordinary screwdriver. It was made to screw bolts in F-16s."

"Let me think it over. What else have you got?"

"Here's a chief petty officer's flashlight that you can't pass up. It's yours for $230, without batteries."

"How much are the batteries?"

The colonel referred to his book. "We paid $140 for two. I'll throw in the batteries for $50 if you take the flashlight for $220."

"You'll be losing a lot of money on the deal."

"This is a garage sale, and we've been told to get rid of our spare parts before Congress finds out how much we've been paying for them," the colonel said.

"What are these little black squares?"

"They're silicon chips for our night fighters. The aviation company who made the fighters sold them to us for $1,500 apiece. But you can have a dozen for $999."

"You can buy these chips in any Radio Shack for $4.95," I said.

"We just found that out," he replied. "That's why we're selling them so cheap."

"What are these tires over here?"

"They're for mobile missile launchers. They're a steal. The defense contractor charged us $1,200 for each tire, but we've reduced them to $600."

"How can you afford a 50 percent markdown?"

"We're suing the contractor for overcharging us $900 a tire, and if we win we'll come out ahead."

"And if you lose?"

"It doesn't matter because every time we fire a missile all the tires on the launcher blow out."

"I really don't need any tires."

"If you want a good buy you ought to take one of these M-1 tank transmissions. We paid $400,000 for each one, but we're letting them go for $50,000."

"Do they work?"

"If they worked do you think we'd be selling them for $50,000?"

"Are those Army pup tents over there?"

"You better believe it. They've never been used. The list price was $6,000 for each one, but because it's General Patton's birthday, we're giving them away for $4,000 today. You'll never get to buy a pup tent at that price again."

"I've been to garage sales before," I said, "but this one beats them all."

The colonel said, "The way we look at it is the taxpayer paid for these things, so he should get first crack at buying them at a discount. It's our way of thanking him for supporting the military buildup."

"There are so many bargains, I'd like to buy everything in the parking lot."

"I wish you would. It would get me off the hook."

"Why?"

"I was the chief purchasing officer for the Pentagon until they found out this $5,000 walkie-talkie could be bought at Sears Roebuck for $18.95."

Debate on peacekeeping forces stirs up Congress

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — President Reagan widened the defensive role of our Marines in Lebanon by authorizing them to call on air and naval power to defend themselves. British, French and Italian units, assigned with the Americans as peacekeepers, can also request assistance as may the embattled fledgling army in certain circumstances.

Hearst

The move was taken by the administration as conflict in and around the shattered capital of Beirut threatened to plunge the divided little nation into a new civil war. Last year we sent the first units of 1,200 Marines into Beirut. But they couldn't fire at snipers hidden in the hills above them. We lost four Marines killed and 23 wounded. France mourns 15 slain and Italy, one. Britain, so far, is luckier to be unscathed.

In keeping additional Marine enforcements aboard battleships offshore, we also send stern signals to Druse Moslems backed by Syria which occupies the Bekaa Valley of Lebanon, refusing to budge. Like Castro, the Syrian regime is a client state of the Soviet Union which rushed in fresh weapons and planes Syria lost to Israel a year ago. American arms used by Israel in that conflict proved vastly superior to anything the U.S.S.R. supplied.

The self-defense help President Reagan extended to the Marines has already provoked lively debate in Congress, dealing with the War Powers Act. Only a handful of legislators at this juncture want our forces withdrawn and they're arguing fine legalistic points. The debate is good democratic procedure and certainly emphasizes the difference between an open and a closed society like that in the U.S.S.R.

The first order of business before our Congress, I'm pleased to note, was a joint resolution that sailed through, comdemning the Soviet Union for shooting down the unarmed South Korean commercial plane killing all 269 aboard. Both Senate and House adopted the resolution unanimously which also demanded compensation for all the victims. Next on the foreign policy level was our role in Lebanon which sparked debate while the administration called for bipartisan endorsement of the president's decision for self-defense by our Marines and allies.

EDITOR'S REPORT

It's interesting that the brutal Soviet attack strengthened the president's hand on defense matters and a huge military budget was just approved. Funds for the MX are certain to pass now and defeat for a freezenik-type resolution appears certain. Moreover, despite differences of present opinion nobody in the Senate or House wants to withdraw the Marines. They keep a watching brief to see how long and how deeply embroiled our boys become. Personally, I didn't like the idea of getting involved out there. But I'm sure the president doesn't either. Since we are, though, I don't believe that we can turn tail and run. That would make us paper tigers and poor allies on whom to rely.

Before President Reagan allowed wider defensive leeway for the Marines, our peacekeeping allies and we absolutely rejected a call from the beleaguered Lebanese government of President Amin Gemayel to enter the combat. We support President Gemayel but we won't send troops to help him fight his battles. So the Lebanese government just ordered jet fighters into the air to knock out leftist positions.

In an area smaller than that of Connecticut, Lebanon has at least five armies fighting each other. The government force, barely reorganized, has Druse leftist Moslems fighting for supremacy against Christian militias run by President Gemayel's father. The PLO sneaked back into some areas; Ayatollah Khomeini's "volunteers" are in league with Syria; U.N. squads wander around helplessly and Israel pulled back to a defensible border position. The place is a bucket of worms, to use an elegant expression.

Speaking of a mess, I was appalled to see how much trouble we had even getting a "quorum" together for a resolution that was certain to be vetoed by the U.S.S.R. in the Security Council of the U.N. You'd think that world outrage was enough to bring together enough votes but many Third World and small countries won't risk U.S.S.R. wrath even on so clear-cut an issue as the downed plane last Sept. 1.

Well, we nearly were confronted with a major embarrassment right down to the wire. First, I'll explain the Security Council set-up. Originally, five nations, the U.S., Britain, France, the Soviet Union and China sat on the council. They were supposed to see that no more tyrannies like Hitler's stalked the world. Together, the five could act to quell tinpot dictators wherever they loomed.

The "Big Five" of the council didn't cooperate very long. Soon after the U.N. was created by imaginative personalities like FDR and Winston Churchill, the Soviets doused the lights of Eastern Europe and set about forging the world's greatest military empire under the aegis of Stalin. His successors expanded the Soviet program.

About 20 years ago, Third World countries began getting restless. They demanded a say in international affairs. By this time China had become The People's Republic of China, a communist state but bitterly anti-Soviet. The "new China" believed it could influence small nations. So the Security Council found itself trebled to 15 members although only the five sitting members could cast vetoes. The others was elected for two-year terms. Trouble really begins here.

Small countries and lesser developed states practiced the politics of envy and greed. They also indulged in rampant anti-Americanism in rhetoric and action. Most of all, they remain scared stiff of the U.S.S.R., finding it easy to sneer at us but not at Moscow.

We were three shy of the minimum nine votes needed for a resolution that the U.S.S.R. was certain to veto. Our delegation lobbied intensely. Pakistan, Jordan and tiny Malta hung back. After frequent consultations Pakistan and Jordan reluctantly agreed to join. Malta diddled.

In World War II, Malta was saved by Britain from becoming a Nazi outpost in the Mediterranean. But its prime minister, Dom Mintoff, hails Libyan tyrant Col. Muammar Qaddafi as a world hero. Getting Malta to agree was a real sweat. Its delegate finally caved in although he said the plane incident was none of Malta's affair.

Abstention, of course, was the easiest cop-out. We tried to make it more palatable by only referring once to the Soviets and just "deplored" the horrible episode. Still, The People's Republic of China led the way in abstaining as a no-show.

I firmly believe that even in this windbag institution known as the U.N. there can be resolutions obtained from a single member of the Security Council to be acted upon by all — or vetoed. Peacekeeping should not be synonymous with only hot air.

'Scabs' still waiting for healing friendship

By SHIRLY DOSSEY

Shirly Dossey, a native Midlander, returned to the Tall City 11 years ago after living for awhile in Memphis, Tenn. She is employed as a switching equipment technician with Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.

A few weeks ago, you printed an article about Greg and T.L. Newman. In this article Greg said they made a decision to honor the Communications Workers of America strike. Let me tell you about another group of people who also made a decision. Up until a month ago, we were called friends; now, however, we are called scabs.

According to Webster's Dictionary, a scab is a slang word to describe a union or non-union person that crosses a picket line.

We are the people that until a month ago you had breaks and lunch with. We are the people who know you better than your parents, your spouse and your kids. We are the people you confided in. We are the ones that kept your time reports straight so you would get paid. The ones who went to the hospital and gave blood when you needed it. The ones who let you cry on their shoulders when you were troubled. The ones who gave the loan company the correct information so that your loan would go through. The ones who co-signed when you couldn't get the loan by yourself. Remember us?

We are the ones that were there when the babies came. We prayed for your family when they were ill. Then prayed for you, when they didn't get well. We are the ones who were there when your marriage went sour.

We are the ones who bought all the stuff your kids were selling. All those boxes of cookies, when we already had a dozen in the freezer. The candles, the candy, the chances, the pledges, all the things needed to make your kids' quota.

To me these are a sign of a friend. A friend is someone you can disagree with, then sit down and talk it out. When did you start letting someone else te"l you who you could talk to? When did the devil crawl into your body and cause you to cut someone's tires? What could possibly possess you to put syrup and raw eggs on a person's car? Have you really enjoyed saying all those ugly things to us? As slow as our elevators are, don't you think it's childish to refuse to ride with us?

But the most important question I have to ask is the simplest to answer. When in all the times you needed a friend did you ever once ask us if we were going to be scabs?

Yes we are the scabs and you were a friend.

"Speaking Out" columnists are invited to submit articles on subjects of their choice. They should be limited to 850 words or less.

In terms of health, you're own enemy

Bill Modisett

You may be killing yourself.

In this age of modern medical wonders, easy-does-it lifestyles and fitness awareness, you'd probably be surprised if someone told you that you are your own worst enemy. Well, do you believe it?

If you said no, you're deluding yourself, according to an official with the Bureau of State Health Planning and Resource Development.

If you said yes but fail to do anything to alter your course, you're plain stupid.

Medical technology has moved mankind to the point at which most of our potential health problems can be either avoided altogether or medically controlled to some degree. Life is easy; maybe too easy.

"Most health problems now are what people do to themselves," said the bureau's Harrold Patterson recently.

The one "medical" problem that is completely controllable by every one of us is our lifestyle. But that doesn't mean we will learn to live our lives to our benefit. There's ample evidence to the contrary, in fact.

Texas men are overweight and Texas women are too skinny. Texans smoke too much and, yes, they drink too much, even though not as much as people in some other parts of the country. We don't exercise enough and when we do, it usually isn't the right kind of exercise. Just basically, we're not leading healthy lives.

But here's the "real" problem: Who's going to tell that unshaven, beer-guzzlin', cigar-chompin' cowboy at Billy Bob's that he really shouldn't drink another Lone Star or smoke another cigar and that, if he knew what was good for him, he'd spend his evenings doing calisthenics or some other exercise deemed socially unacceptable in the Texas culture?

Here's how I imagine the scenario would progress:

"Excuse me, Jerry Mack. Are you Jerry Mack Parsons?"

"You found me. Plant it. What'dya need?

"I'm a state health specialist and the Bureau of State Health Planning has just informed me that your lifestyle is incompatible with future good health.

"What ju talkin' 'bout? You some sorta cop?"

"No sir, but our computer readout indicates that you drink too much, smoke too much, stay up late too frequently and hardly ever exercise to an acceptable level."

"Heh, heh. That's right, but what business you got tryin' to run my life?"

"No, no, my good man. I'm just trying to tell you that you are your own worst enemy. Making the decision to lead a healthier life still rests with the individual, but it would certainly increase your chances for a longer life." I'm only giving you statistics.

"That right, huh? Well, let me tell you how you can have a L-O-N-G-E-R life, little buddy."

"And how is that, sir?"

"Get out of Billy Bob's as fast as you can before one of us decides to turn you into a statistic.

Taking chances

To the Editor:

There has been a whole lot written about the recent oil and gas drilling slump in this country.

Sure, there was some greed involved as there is in any industry where there's big money to be made.

I choose to believe, however, that most of those in the petroleum and banking industries were honestly trying to gear up to meet a perceived need in the months and years ahead. After all, prices for everything were going up and there was no way they were going to level off, much less drop.

So, I say hats off to the people who were willing to take chances to meet our energy needs while making some money the American way.

We're glad that many of them are still around as we are beginning to pull out of the slump.

Toeing the line

To the Editor:

I would like to thank Mrs. Lang for coming forward and viewing her feelings about the tax problems and lost funds at the Greenwood School. She has said what a lot of the rest of the community would like to say. She has the right as a taxpayer to view her feelings as anyone else has, be it good or bad.

I talked with Mrs. Lang the day after her letter came out in the paper. She told me that one of our members of their community called her and was quite rude. This man said that if she did not like what was going on out here at this school to sell her land and get out of this community. I am ashamed there are people out here like him and I apologize for his actions.

Six years ago I was told to get out of Greenwood. That happens if you don't go along with what goes on out here. I was told that because I was against the archaic discipline code of the school. I took my child out of the school due to severe harassment. There are some problems in the school. We can't ignore them and hope they'll go away.

I have, though, stayed in the community. I am seeing it grow and for the betterment. Many good people are coming in and helping this school be a better place for the children of this community. We do, however, still have a little way to go.

It's just too bad we still have a few old soreheads that believe Greenwood is only for the old folk that have lived out here all their lives.

Good schooling

To the Editor:

Recently, I had the opportunity to spend parts of three days in Midland, Texas, schools. I worked closely with the principals and with the top administrators in the system, and I had a chance to get to know and visit with people in and around the school system.

I want you to know that, over the past several years, I have traveled broadly across the United States visiting schools. I can honestly say that I have not been in a system where I felt more positive or felt more confident in what the schools were doing than I did in Midland.

You have every right in your community to be proud of the educational system that exists there. I am sure, like any system, it has room for improvement, but let me please emphasize that, based on my observations, this system is one of the most positive, productive school systems in the United States. In fact, I was so impressed personally that I have submitted your school system to be considered for a national project that is looking at effective schools, particularly as they relate to building public confidence. A fundamental part of any school system building confidence is the job that it does with students. Your school system does an excellent job.

I was personally impressed with the leadership style and success of Dr. Baressi, the superintendent, and all of those who were associated with him.

My purpose in sending this letter is simply to provide an outside observer's view of your schools. I hope this letter helps your community appreciate even more the fine school system that is available for your students in Midland, Texas.

Poison control

To the Editor:

Try this one on for size. At approximately 9:30 p.m. on Aug. 25, 1983, my husband called one of the minor emergency clinics here in Midland and asked for the "toll free" number of the nearest poison control center. Their response, "I'm sorry sir, that number is a private number and we are not allowed to give it out." She didn't even bother to ask if she could assist us in any way.

Isn't this great? Then I called the Physician Exchange and asked for the poison control center number again. She suggested calling the minor emergency clinics. When I told her what response the clinic gave us, she responded as I did, "You've got to be kidding! Let me call them and get a number for you." So she put me on "Hold."

When she returned to the phone she told me the minor emergency clinic would not give her a number either except a number she was not to give out to the public. So she told them to forget it. She then called Midland Memorial Emergency and asked for the poison control center number there. Ah — success at last. She got a toll free number for me.

I wish to commend the Physicians Exchange for being prompt and courteous. I also want to thank the Lord that I was not in an emergency situation because it took nearly 10 minutes to get the number.

By the way, the number is not in the white pages nor the yellow pages of the telephone directory. Nor does the 1-800 Operator have a number for the poison control center.

Isn't this super? So folks, if you ever are in an emergency, please call Midland Memorial or the Physicians Exchange because they are the only ones with this toll free 800 number for the poison control center.

All I was trying to do was get the number for my baby sitter in case of an emergency. For those interested, the number is 1-800-392-8548.

Wording error

To the Editor:

Not being the letter writer in my family, this missive is a notable chore for me. Calling your attention to an article dated Sunday, Sept. 4, 1983, entitled "Speaking Out" written by Walter C. Cremin Jr.

Mr. Cremin states he was impressed as a child by a book depicting children of different homelands in Europe. He also states, "I recall wondering as a child what must have happened to my book friends during the terrors from 1939 to 1945. I know now that many of them died on the Russian front before American guns."

On seeing the above statement I couldn't believe my eyes, so I reread the statement. I ask you, sir, if this was a typographical error and the word "American" should have been "German?"

Also, how could any proof-reader have let this statement be printed? If this is the way it was submitted to you by Mr. Cremin, I wonder why he would make such a statment as this knowing it is false. Perhaps he can show some proof of what he says. What a slap in the face to the people of this country.

Again, sir, I am aghast! I, too, remember the geography book before World War II that showed young people from various parts of Europe, but I never knew "many of them died on the Russian front before American guns."

Francis W. Groessel
Midland

EDITOR'S NOTE: There was a typographical error in the statement. As submitted, the statement should have read "I know now that many of them died on the Russian front and before American guns." Unfortunately, when the statement was typed into the Reporter-Telegram computer system, the word "and" was unintentionally omitted.

Crossing safely

To the Editor:

I am the mother of a child in the Rusk Elementary School. This is the fifth year she has been crossing with the same guard, Betty Holland. While I am sure the Midland Police Department employs many fine guards, Mrs. Holland is truly exceptional.

Despite being the object of an occasional obscene gesture from some of those Lee High School students who have yet to learn to observe the school zone speed limit, she manages to greet the children with a smile and kind word, and most of them by name.

I have been forced to pick up my child late in the afternoon on occasion and Mrs. Holland has always known exactly where she was. Quite often, she receives the same measure of cooperation from parents as she does from general traffic ignoring school zone regulations.

I am sure crossing guards are often taken for granted. They should not be, especially those of Mrs. Holland's dedication. Few people can face a couple of hundred children, adolescent drivers and hurried parents each morning with such a friendly attitude.

Let's respect and support those people working for our children's safety. The Midland Police Department is to be commended for their choice of Mrs. Holland. The children love and enjoy her and I am one satisfied parent, secure in my daughter's safety.

World waits

To the Editor:

When will we act — the world waits!

When will we close down the Soviet missions in this country?

When will we deny their scientists access to our data?

When will we deny them our dollars for their trade goods?

When will we refuse their company in the World Community?

When will we act?

Additional funds needed to maintain state highways

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — By itself, it's an impressive enough figure: $1,364,439,908.

That's the amount the State of Texas will spend on highway construction, including maintenance work, for fiscal 1984.

The problem, according to the Department of Highways and Public Transportation, is that $1.3 billion isn't nearly enough to meet the state's needs for highways.

DHPT Program Engineer Richard Vander Straten notes the department requested more — lots more — from the Legislature during its regular session.

That request was echoed by a number of groups, such as Texas Good Roads/Transportation Association, who contend Texas can't afford to wait much longer before dealing with its deteriorating road system and need for new facilities.

Highway commission members and other supporters of highway construction have urged that the Legislature look at increasing the state's five-cent per gallon gasoline tax to provide additional funding.

But efforts to have the 1983 Legislature increase the tax, and increasing any tax isn't ever a popular thing to suggest, were stymied by the action of Congress in raising the Federal gasoline tax.

Vander Straten notes that the highway department's situation was both helped and hurt by the federal action.

Federal funding to Texas increased (with federal funds this fiscal year making up some $841 million of the department's budget) but with the doubling of federal aid funds, the state has had to increase its funds for matching.

That change also has shifted emphasis in some funding categories and the department has had to take money from maintenance programs to provide funding in other areas.

Commission Chairman Robert Lanier, Houston, says the problem is going to get worse unless action is taken quickly.

"I don't think crisis is too strong a word," Lanier comments.

Speaker Gib Lewis, in his interim charges to House committees, has told the Transportation Committee to look at highway funding before the 1985 Legislature convenes, and to recommend legislation in that area.

The panel is charged with studying, specifically, how county road needs fit into the overall highway network, and funding for roads in urban and rural areas.

However, neither the Transportation Committee, nor the House Ways and Means Committee, which would handle taxation measures, has a specific instruction to look at increasing gasoline taxes.

Ways and Means is charged with making a "comparative analysis" of taxes in Texas and other states.

That could, a committee source says, include a look at increasing the gasoline tax for highway construction, but no decision on that has been made.

Gov. Mark White has been asked to include highway funding in any special legislative session, but his office indicates no decision has been made on whether the governor would support increasing the gasoline tax, part of which goes to education.

"That possibility, an aide says, is "something that's been look at," but apparently without any great enthusiasm.

Lawmakers were understandably reluctant to impose a state gasoline tax increase on top of a federal gasoline increase, although the public outcry over the federal tax hike proved muted.

But members were convinced that any increase would mean trouble for them at home.

"My people would be up here to hunt me down with dogs," one member confided.

Dr. Frank McCullough, director of the Center for Transportation Research at the University of Texas at Austin, says "unexpected increased in traffic volumes and truck weights" are shortening the lives of many of Texas' roads.

And as population increase, and truck weights increase, the design life of roads will drop from an average 20 years to an average 14 years, he concludes.

Texas' highway problems, he says, reflect "an aging system nearing the end of its intended design life and the Sunbelt explosion resulting in pavement deterioration rates much greater than originally conceived."

But some lawmakers aren't convinced that pumping massive amounts of money into the highway system ultimately will solve the problems of transportation in Texas, and they fear that a sudden increase in funds would simply drive up the cost of construction, by creating a shortage of highway contractors instead of a surplus.

Still, there's general agreement that something needs to be done to help the highway situation and Texans who are forced to travel ever-more crowded, frequently dangerous and sometimes deadly roads, are hoping there will be agreement on what that something is.

Attack reaffirms need for more defense spending

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — U.S. Sen. John Tower, serving his fourth and final term in Congress, says the Soviets' recent downing of a Korean jetliner bolsters this country's need for increased military spending.

Tower, R-Texas, reaffirmed during a Friday visit to Kelly Air Force Base that he would not seek re-election. He had traveled here to help celebrate Hispanic Heritage Week.

The senator said the Soviets shot down the Korean Air Lines plane, killing 269 people, with an attitude "so heartless, so unconcerned for humanity."

"This is the kind of barbarity that should give you some kind of idea why we should spend a great deal of money on our national defenses," Tower told a receptive — and mostly military — audience.

"There are a lot of people who say we're a little heartless to spend so much on defense when there's still so much human suffering out there, but nothing is more important to our people than our national security," he said. "Without national security, we have nothing."

Tower, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said military spending helped lift the country out of a recessionary tailspin by creating jobs — most notably in automotives, shipbuilding and the aircraft industry.

"Spending by the Department of Defense kept that recession from being as bad as it could be," he said.

Tower denied that his trip was part of a continuing effort by President Reagan and other Republicans to snare the Hispanic vote.

Kelly has 9,800 Hispanics on its payroll, about 52 percent of the total number of Mexican-Americans employed by the Air Force.

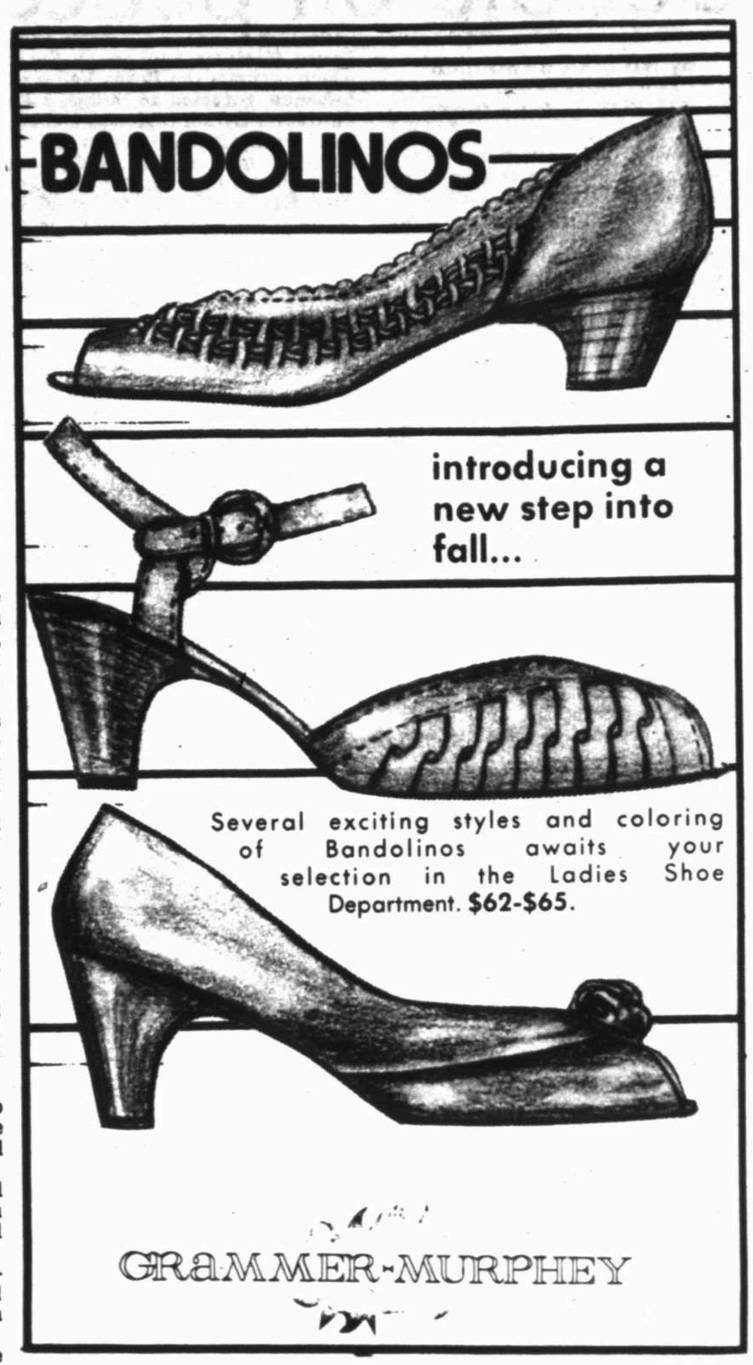
Candidates began announcing for Tower's seat immediately after he jolted political observers less than a month ago by stating that he wouldn't run in 1984.

Tower said Friday that he had no plans to endorse any of the candidates currently in the race, but wouldn't speculate whether he would change his mind later.

"I feel confident that a Republican can hold onto my seat," he said, predicting that a Reagan candidacy, along with a healthier economy, could pave the way for a GOP candidate.

Meanwhile, he said, he's "continuing to function in the Senate" and enjoying the political hubbub surrounding his decision not to run for a fifth term.

"Few people have the experience of being able to view their own obituaries," he said. "Why, even my Democratic colleagues have been telling me how sorry they are to see me go."



Golden Triangle hurt by job losses

BEAUMONT (AP) — More than 10,000 people have lost their jobs at the 43 largest industrial companies in the Golden Triangle in the past 18 months, and researchers say most won't get them back in the next three years.

Offshore services, ship repair and rig fabrication companies have suffered more than a 75 percent loss of jobs because of the current oil glut.

The Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange area, known as the Golden Triangle, has been plagued by double-digit unemployment. A report by the John Gray Institute says the area's heavy dependence on oil and ship-building industries probably means the unemployment outlook will remain grim for some time.

The institute is a privately financed research facility at Lamar University that studies business, labor, technology and education along the Texas and Louisiana coasts.

Art Adamson, co-author of the report, said refineries and petrochemical plants in the area are operating at about 70 percent capacity. But even if demand for petrochemical products increases, plants won't need to hire more workers, he said.

"You can operate a plant at 70 percent capacity or 100 percent capacity with no increase in personnel," Adamson said.

Adamson, a retired manager of the Firestone Petrochemical Center in Orange, said researchers believe that, at most, 3,500 of the 10,385 jobs lost at the area's industrial facilities in 1982 and the first half of 1983 will return in the next three years.

Shipbuilding and rig fabrication industries were the hardest hit by the decline in oil drilling, with 4,386 jobs being lost.

Offshore services suffered the highest rate with 2,434, or 79.2 percent, of all jobs being lost.

Despite success, Kite still reaching

Sports Special

By Bruce Castleberry

At age 33, it would appear that Tom Kite doesn't have many mountains left to climb.

The world of professional golf is challenging and ever-changing. New pros join the PGA tour ranks every year in hopes of dislodging the old guard. Guys like Tom Kite are supposed to be fading to make way for the young lions, but Kite is still plugging along.

Plugging along may be a poor phrase. Kite at 33 has still accomplished more than most, and shows no signs of letting up. Kite, the PGA tour representative for Green Tree Country Club, is expecting to round into form for the LaJet Tournament in Abilene by being the lead figure in GTCC's first Invitational Pro-Am.

"My goal mainly is winning some more," said Kite. "I want to do what I've been doing, but do it better."

Those are hardly words that would indicate a letdown or a career in its twilight. Kite is conceding nothing to age or to any other tour golfer.

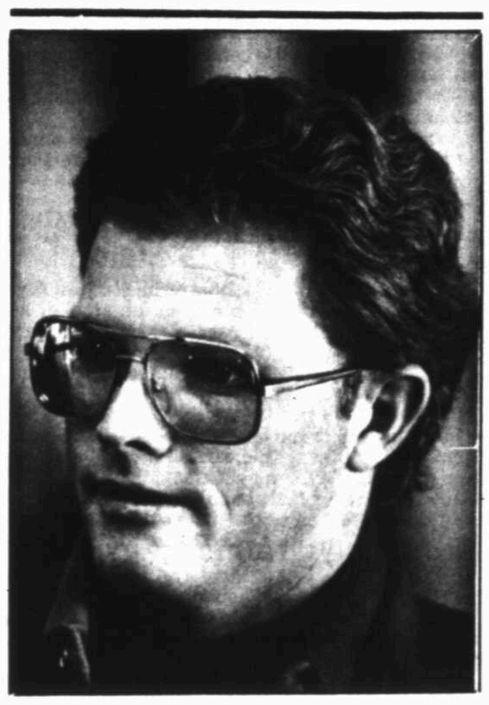
And rightly so. Kite now stands in seventh place on the 1983 PGA money list, and through the years has proven to be one of the most consistent pros around.

Kite has earned almost $2 million playing golf. That kind of competitive drive is evidenced in that figure. Kite in 1982 won money in 24 tournaments.

He entered 25.

"I stay after my game," Kite said of his continued success. "I don't enjoy playing poorly. If I get in a slump, I work hard to get out of it. A lot of other golfers will just try to play their way out of one. I may be more impatient."

Whatever one calls it, there is no denying that Kite is the biggest name in Green Tree's debut tourney. Others, like Charles Coody or Dave Marr, have seen plenty of ink, but none of the 24 other golfers entered have played as well over the long haul as the diminutive Kite.



Tom Kite...more mountains

"Warren (Chancellor, GTCC pro) has got an outstanding field," Kite said of Monday's competition. "There are a lot of good golfers there."

Kite has never won a major tour event, but has always been up near the leaders. He won this year's Bing Crosby, but has been slowed in recent months. After a fast start, Kite faded a bit in the spring, and missed this weekend's PGA stop in Las Vegas. Tendinitis in his left arm has slowed him somewhat.

"It feels much better," Kite said. "It hurt me at the World Series of Golf, but I'll be ready to go Monday."

Kite welcomed the break, and the Invitational may be just the remedy for his fall run. After the Pro-Am, he'll set out to conquer the LaJet field.

Kite's sister and brother-in-law are Midlanders, and that was the basis for his joining GTCC. Consequently, Green Tree is very well represented in the PGA and Kite gets the chance to pick up some pocket cash Monday.

"My game is turning around, but the tendinitis didn't help it," said Kite. "I'm about seventh or eighth on the money list, so I can't complain, but it's not as good as I'd like."

The University of Texas product and former NCAA champ has got plenty of mountains to climb, after all. "I can't get enough competition. I enjoy playing, and there's a lot of things I still want to do. I plan on winning some more.

"I'm very pleased with how my career has gone. Even if it ended tomorrow I'd be satisfied with it."

Kite's PGA competition should be so lucky to not have to worry about him. After finishing in the top 10 of 51 tourneys in 81-82, the loss of Kite from the tour could only mean more money left over for others.

Horns gore Auburn, 20-7

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Third-ranked Texas came prepared for a war that never developed as the Longhorns manhandled No. 5 Auburn 20-7 Saturday in a regionally televised college football game that was never in doubt after the first half.

"We absolutely knew we were going to win this game, just knew it," Texas tailback John Walker said after the Steers rolled to a 20-0 halftime lead and seemed content to play out the string the final 30 minutes.

Two big plays and one long scoring drive set the tone.

Rick McIvor connected with Kelvin Epps on a scoring pass that covered 80 yards and Jitter Fields set up a field goal with a 66-yard punt return.

"Auburn is a good football team," Coach Fred Akers of Texas said. "We just played very well today.

"The Wishbone (Auburn's offense) is a tough offense to stop, and we were fortunate," Akers added. "But it doesn't matter what offense you are in, or what defense, people play the game of football."

It was a case of too many Texas people for the Tigers.

"I would have bet my life we were going to go out there and fight Texas tooth and nail," Auburn Coach Pat Dye said. "The first half was an embarrassment. We weren't ready to play.

"I don't know if we were scared or what," Dye said. "They controlled all areas of the game."

The Longhorns, opening their season later than most major college teams, took control of the game with an 84-yard scoring drive on their second possession and overpowered Auburn the rest of the way.

The Longhorn offense scored on three consecutive possessions to take a 17-0 lead and the defense stopped Auburn's wishbone offense cold, holding the Tigers to only two first downs and 51 net yards while building a 20-0 halftime lead.

Auburn, 1-1, which had crossed midfield only twice earlier in the second half, finally scored with 1:33 left in the game on a 1-yard run by Bo Jackson. The run capped a 95-yard drive on which sophomore Pat Washington completed passes of 20, 18 and 11 yards and also had two carries for 10 yards.

Rob Moerschell put the Longhorns ahead to stay on a one-yard keeper with 3:20 left in the opening quarter.

Tomczak passes spill OU, 24-14

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Earle Bruce has coached 50 games since coming to Ohio State in 1979 and the Buckeyes have won 40. Saturday's, however, was the best.

"By far the best team game — both offensively and defensively — that we've played since I've been here," Bruce said following sixth-ranked Ohio State's 24-14 triumph over No. 2 Oklahoma.

"All of our hard work — our two-a-days in the hot weather — really paid off. Offensively, we controlled the game. I'll bet we had the ball the big percentage of the time."

The Buckeyes did — 35:50 to 24:10 for Oklahoma.

The game was over in effect when sharpshooting Mike Tomczak fired his fifth and sixth touchdown passes of the season, both to tight end John Frank in the first 22 minutes.

Tomczak, who was the nation's No. 1-rated passer after completing 21 of 25 passes for 273 yards and four touchdowns in the Buckeyes' opener against Oregon, whipped a 16-yarder to Frank to cap an 80-yard drive following the opening kickoff. He made it 14-0 with a 15-yarder to the senior tight end early in the second period.

That came on the first play after a fumble by Oklahoma's Marcus Dupree was recovered by Ohio State linebacker Rowland Tatum.

Less than a minute earlier, a superb goal-line stand by Oklahoma thwarted the Buckeyes without a point when cornerback Dwight Drane threw Ohio State tailback Keith Byars for a short loss from inside the 1-yard line on fourth down.

Oklahoma matched that less than two minutes later, going 85 yards in four plays. Redshirt freshman Spencer Tillman raced 37 yards for the touchdown after a 39-yard pass from Danny Bradley to Buster Rhymes — Oklahoma completed only two of nine passes in the first half — and a 9-yard run by Dupree.

The game was played in 93-degree weather — it was a reported 135 degrees on the artificial turf — and left Ohio State at 2-0 and Oklahoma 1-1. The setback also prevented Oklahoma's Barry Switzer, in his 11th year as head coach of the Sooners, from achieving his 100th career victory.

"Mike Tomczak did an excellent job. He made some great reads of the defense," Bruce said. "They were cutting off our passes deep, but we had a lot of success to the halfbacks over the middle.

"The defense did an outstanding job. How many yards rushing did Oklahoma have?"

Told that that the Sooners had managed 177, one less than Ohio State, Bruce grinned and said, "When you can do that to a team like Ohiahoma, when you can do what we did today against Oklahoma, it's a great victory. That was just overall the best game we've played since I've been at Ohio State."

Switzer said the key was that "we couldn't stop them, especially on first down. They had too many first-and-fives on us. And they had too many good drives. We just couldn't get the football.

"They hit those curls and they hit their tight end (Frank had seven catches for 108 yards). They didn't hit (flanker) Cedric Anderson for any long ones, but we couldn't stop those curls."

En route to Ohio State's first touchdown, a drive which took 13 plays and ate up 6:16, Tomczak completed four of five passes for 40 yards. The 6-foot-1 junior, who completed his last 10 passes against Oregon, connected on his first two Saturday, tying the school record of 12 consecutive completions set by Bill Mrukowski in 1961.

Tomczak finished with 15 of 25 for 234 yards, including 3-of-4 for 47 yards during a 57-yard march in the third period. Roman Bates' 2-yard run at the 6:30 mark gave the Buckeyes a 21-7 lead.

The Sooners made it 21-14 on a 22-yard fourth-down pass from Bradley to wingback Derrick Shepard with 1:01 left in the third period. The drive covered 62 yards in eight plays following Buster Rhymes' 24-yard punt return and included a 27-yard pass from Bradley to Shepard and an eight-yarder which tailback Earl Johnson caught after it was tipped by Ohio State cornerback Garcia Lane.

But Tomczak directed a time-consuming drive of 6:44 which culminated in Rich Spangler's 22-yard field goal with 9:15 left in the game. The Buckeyes converted three third-down attempts along the way, including a 2-yard sneak by Tomczak and a 19-yard pass to Keith Byars.

Dupree, the sensational Oklahoma freshman of a year ago, bruised a knee in the second period and gained only 30 yards on six carries. It was the first time in 10 games he failed to reel off a run of at least 30 yards.

Zoeller blitzes to 6-stroke lead

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Front-running Fuzzy Zoeller blitzed the Las Vegas Country Club with a 64 and established a commanding 6-stroke lead Saturday in the fourth round of the new PGA Tour event billed as the world's richest golf tournament.

Zoeller, who has led or shared the lead all the way in the inaugural Las Vegas Pro Celebrity Classic, completed one round over each of four courses in this desert resort at 267, a distant 20 shots under par.

The total is, by one stroke, the low 72-hole score on the tour this season. But, in this case, there's another 18 holes to go in the chase for a $135,000 first prize.

PRO AM A BEGINNING

Green Tree eyes future

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

When 25 Professional Golf Association pros tee off Monday at noon at Green Tree Country Club's first Invitational Pro-Am, some lofty aspirations will be realized.

The Midland area fascination with the game of golf is about to advance to a new plateau. Pro golf has dabbled in the area before, but never on the scale of Green Tree's ambitious Invitational.

The fact that the Invitational is coming off at all is a surprise to many. GTCC pro Warren Chancellor is in that group. "It's amazing we're doing it on as a short a notice as we've had to do it," said Chancellor. "At first we considered it for 1984, but our Board said 'Let's try to do it this year.' In spite of a five day tourney in Las Vegas, and the distances here from there and the tourney in Abilene, we've put it together."

Indeed, the logistics alone were enough to kill the Invitational. The PGA stop in Las Vegas ends today, and the golfers there will fly back to Midland for the Pro-Am late tonight. After the short stay, most will go to Abilene for the LaJet Classic.

LaJet has served as a sort of role model for Green Tree. Just a few years ago, LaJet was doing the same thing as GTCC. Now, Abilene is a tour stop.

GREEN TREE envisions itself as a future stop on a split PGA tour. The Invitational, besides bringing top quality golf to the area, is making a subtle pitch to the PGA bigwigs. Should the PGA go to a split format, Green Tree will be ready for the quantum leap into big-time tournament status.

The last question to be answered as far as the Green Tree management is concerned now is attendance.

GTCC officials have been hoping for gallery sales of around 5000. By late last week, nearly 80 percent of that figure had been reached. In an impulse buying market such as Midland, these figures can expect to grow the nearer the event gets.

As far as golf goes, Green Tree was disappointed that some of the pros couldn't schedule the Pro-Am. Craig Stadler, Fuzzy Zoeller and Ben Crenshaw are some of the bigger names to decline, but the Invitational field sports several name veterans and a few young turks that could be in for big futures on the PGA circuit.

Tom Kite, one of the all-time top money winners in the game, is Green Tree's tour representative. Kite, former PGA champion Dave Marr, and Dr. Gil Morgan were the Pro-Am's initial commitments.

Chancellor called in a few markers to fill out the field. In the process, he acheived a healthy mix of a few seasoned pros, and some of the best young players available.

Indeed, names like Mike Nicolette and Chip Beck and Mark O'Meara may not be quickly recognized, but they present some of the hottest new talent on the tour.

BECK HAS already earned over $130,000 this year, as has Keith Fergus and Larry Mize.

O'Meara, Nicolette and David Edwards have also been big winners in 1983. The field itself has nabbed over $2 million in earnings this year alone, and there are several tourneys left on the '83 campaign.

Chancellor, living a rather harried existence the last two months, is even more optimistic about the future of the Pro-Am. "Perhaps in the future we may expand to a two-day event or bring in other people to create a Pro-Celebrity type event. If we went to more days we could expand the field.

MHS wins WT State tourney

CANYON — Midland High won the West Texas State Invitational Volleyball tournament here Saturday — the hard way.

The Bulldogs, now 11-6 on the season, lost its first game Friday to Borger, 4-15, 12-15, leaving their backs to the wall. But they rallied for four straight victories to win the championship.

MHS came back with a 15-11, 15-10 win over Lubbock High and then won three times Saturday, first beating Dumas, 15-3, 15-9. Then got revenge against Borger, 16-14, 15-17, 15-12, in a close match.

It was even rougher in the finals when the Bulldogs took a 15-12, 17-19, 15-12 win over Perryton, who suffered their only loss in the tournament.

MHS travels to Abilene Cooper Tuesday for a District 4-5A match. MHS, the defending 4-5A champs, are 2-0 in loop play. Midland Lee, 1-1 in district, hosts Abilene High Tuesday.

Three share 1st in Frosh league

Lee White, Nimitz and Bonham moved into a three-way tie for the ninth grade Midland-Odessa football conference lead this week.

On Thursday, White defeated Ector 27-14 and Nimits shutout Bowie, 28-0. Lee Maroon and Hood tied, 6-6.

Bonham picked up a 30-0 victory over Midland Gold Saturday to join the tie. The game between Midland Purple and Crockett wasn't played because officials didn't show up.

In the eighth grade, Goddard and Alamo are tied for the lead with 2-0 records while Nimitz and Bonham are at 1-0. Alamo posted a 49-0 rout over Hood Saturday while Bonham edged San Jacinto 24-20, Ector defeated Bowie 26-8 and Goddard blitzed Crockett 20-0. Nimitz was open this week.

San Jacinto and Trinity opened the eighth grade Midland City Conference with victories Saturday, San Jac winning 12-0 over Alamo and Trinity beating Goddard Red 14-0. Goddard White had the open date.

Both seventh grade conferences also got underway Saturday. In the American Conference, Goddard White defeated San Jacinto 8-2 and Goddard Red and Alamo Scarlet played to a scoreless tie. The game between Alamo Grey and San Jacinto Green also didn't play because official no-show.

In the National Conference, which used to play its games on Tuesday, Goddard Red opened with an 8-0 win over Alamo Scarlet; San Jacinto Green defeated Alamo Grey, 8-0 and Goddard White downed San Jacinto White, 21-0.

Orioles move in on flag in AL East

By The Associated Press

Mike Flanagan won his fifth straight game and Al Bumbry went 3-for-3 and scored three runs as the Baltimore Orioles beat the Milwaukee Brewers 5-4 and moved closer to the East title. The win increased the Orioles' lead in the AL East to seven games and cut their magic number to nine.

In NL night action, Dale Berra's double with two out in the 13th inning scored Brian Harper with the winning run as the Pittsburgh Pirates edged the Montreal Expos 5-4 to stay tie for the National League East lead.

The victory, Pittsburgh's sixth in a row, kept the Pirates and Philadelphia Phillies tied for the NL East lead with 14 games remaining for each, while Montreal dropped 2½ games back.

Jose Cruz's two-run homer overshadowed a night honoring Johnny Bench's retirement as the Houston Astros defeated the Cincinnati Reds 4-3.

In afternoon NL action, John Denny gave up seven hits over eight innings and Gary Matthews homered and singled twice to lead the Philadelphia Phillies past the St. Louis Cardinals 4-1.

Ags' Smith ties FG record in 38-0 romp

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas A&M's Alan Smith almost didn't get to attempt his NCAA record-tying sixth field goal Saturday night because time nearly ran out.

However, Texas A&M coach Jackie Sherrill finally called time out with 7 seconds to play and the barefooted Smith booted a 57-yarder with the wind in the Aggies 38-0 victory over Arkansas State.

"I would not have kicked the field goal if it hadn't been for the Southwest Conference (and NCAA) record," said Sherrill. "I think it is important to do those type of things for your football team. It helps give the players some encouragement and some things to shoot for."

Smith's six field goals not only broke Tony Franklin's SWC record at A&M of five but also tied the NCAA mark held by four other players: Al del Greco of Auburn in 1982, Vince Fusco of Duke in 1976, Frank Nector of West Virginia in 1972 and Charlie Gogalak of Princeton in 1965.

Fumbles sabotage Owls for Bengals

HOUSTON (AP) — Louisiana State finally cracked a surprisingly tough Rice defense with touchdown runs by Jeff Wickersham and Garry James over a 35-second span of the third quarter after fumble recoveries as the Tigers beat the Owls, 24-10.

The Owls, winless in 15 straight games, battled the heavily favored Tigers to a 3-3 halftime deadlock on an exchange of field goals of 29 yards by Rice freshman Mark Shupak and 37 yards by LSU's Juan Betanzos.

The Owls' bubble finally burst in the third quarter. Fumbles by Rice's Larry Collins and Melvin Robinson set up touchdown runs of five yards by Wickersham and two yards by James for a 17-3 lead.

Freshman fullback Craig Rathjen made it a 21-point third quarter for the Tigers with a 43-yard touchdown run.

A fourth-quarter pass interception by Rice's Joe Heikkinen set up a 9-yard touchdown pass from Phillip Money to Collins with 53 seconds to play.

The Owl defense, ranked eighth overall in the Southwest Conference, kept LSU at bay with several first-half defensive gems including two by defensive end Darryl Duffie. The Owls also stopped the Tigers at the Rice one in the second quarter.

Baines fly in ninth gives Chisox AL West flag

CHICAGO (AP) — Harold Baines knocked in the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the bottom of the ninth inning, his third RBI of the game, as the Chicago White Sox beat the Seattle Mariners 4-3 Saturday night and clinched their first American League West Division championship.

The White Sox entered the bottom of the ninth locked in a 3-3 tie with the Mariners when Julio Cruz drew a walk from reliever Bill Caudill, 2-8. Cruz then stole second and Rudy Law got to first on another walk. Both runners then advanced when Carlton Fisk drew yet another walk that chased Caudill.

Reliever Ed VandeBerg came in to pitch to Baines and gave up the game-winning RBI.

Losing 3-1, Seattle had come back in the top of the ninth when Tony Bernazard led off with a single. Harold Reynolds came in to pinch-run after Bernazard twisted his ankle on the way to first.

Chicago starter Jerry Koosman was then replaced by one-time Midland Cub Dennis Lamp, who gave up a single to Al Cowens that advanced Reynolds to second. Both runners moved up on a groundout by Steve Henderson and scored on a pinch-hit double by Ricky Nelson, who was batting for Dave Henderson.

The victory assured the White Sox of a berth in the American League playoffs against the winners of the East Division. It marks the first appearance by the White Sox in a league playoff since the playoffs were instituted in 1969.

The division championship gives the White Sox a chance to capture their first American League pennant since 1959, when they went on to lose the World Series in six games to the Los Angeles Dodgers. The last time that the White Sox won the World Series was in 1917 when they took the New York Giants in six games.

Seattle opened the scoring when Phil Bradley drew a walk from Koosman took second on a single by Bernazard and scored on an error by Cruz at second base. Cruz was attempting to throw Al Cowens out at first but hit the onrushing Bernazard with the throw.

Chicago came back with run in the third when Cruz drew a walk from Jim Beattie took third on a single by Fisk and scored on an RBI fielder's choice by Baines.

Chicago took the lead in the fourth when Tom Paciorek doubled, took third when Ron Kittle grounded out to the pitcher, and scored on a suicide squeeze bunt by Vance Law.

The White Sox made it 3-1 in the eighth inning when Baines hit his 18th homer of the year.

A sellout crowd of 45,646 sent the White Sox home attendance over the 2 million mark for the season, the first time that any pro franchise in Chicago has hit that level.

McMurry nips Kangaroos

SHERMAN (AP) — McMurry College took over at the Austin College 35 after a seven-yard punt, scored two plays later on Clyde McKenzie's 33-yard pass to Bobby Campbell and held on to beat the Kangaroos 6-3 Saturday.

Austin College took the ensuing kickoff in the third quarter and marched to the Indians' 13 but had to settle for Jeff Timmons' 30-yard field goal.

Panthers roll to easy win over O.D. Wyatt

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

ODESSA—Odessa Permian was nearly unstoppable in the second quarter Saturday night as the Panthers piled up 326 total yards while handing Fort Worth's O.D. Wyatt a 38-0 thrashing at Ratliff Stadium.

The Panthers used a balanced offensive attack of 177 yards rushing and 149 passing to totally dominate the Chaparrels in Permian's final non-district ball game of the season.

The 3-0 Panthers got off to a quick start, taking the opeing kickoff 80 yards in 10 plays for all the points they would need. Quarterback Rex Lamberti hit Shane Easley from 12 yards out for the score. Kicker Kirk Strahan booted the first of four extra points in the game.

Near the end of the first quarter, Permian mounted its second scoring drive, this time covering 81 yards in nine plays for the score. Lamberti got the TD on a one-yard quarterback keeper and then hit Donnie McNatt for the two-point conversion.

In the drive, fullback Britt Hager was lost to the Panthers with an ankle injury after making a 15-yard catch. According to Permian head coach John Wilkins, the injury is of the "wait-and-see" variety. It isn't know if the 195-pounder will be ready for Friday's District 4-5A opener against Midland High at Memorial Stadium.

Three minutes after Permian's second score, Lamberti threw his second TD strike of the game, a 20-yard pass to Strahan. The Mojo defense followed with a safety when Jerry Burelson and Collins King caught O.D. Wyatt quarterback Daniel Simmons in the end zone on the first play after the kickoff.

The free kick led to the fourth Mojo touchdown on a 26-yard pass from Lamberti to Easley followed by Strahan's third PAT for a 31-0 lead.

John Hamilton came up with the final score of the game one a one-yard run in the fourth quarter with 1:40 left

Run For Health scheduled Oct. 1

The third annual Run For Your Health, sponsored by Midland Memorial Hospital, will be held Oct. 1 (Saturday).

A one miler for children 12-and-under will begin at 8 a.m. and will be followed by two-mile and 10 kilometer runs.

The course begins at the entrance to the Midlander Health and Racquet Club, continues across Air Park Drive to A and winds through north Midland.

An Aston Martin Volante convertible, courtesy Regency Motor Cars, will escort the runners.

The MMH event is one of the few in the area that offers a mile run for children. Parents are welcome to accompany their children along the course that takes them out and back across Air Park Drive. Prizes and finishing times will be available for boys and girls who finish in the top three.

The two-miler and 10K will be run simultaneously. Runners of all ages may participate in either run.

Entry fee is $6 pre-registration and $8 for those registering the day of the race. Ribboned medallions will be awarded the top three finishers in each age category, with a trophy going to the top male and female in the 10K.

An MMH surgical scrub top—popular clothing for relaxation and recreation—imprinted with the RUN insignia, will be given to all entrants. The scrub top is 50 per cent cotton and 50 polyester.

Registration forms are available at the Midlander or by calling the MMH Public Relations Office (685 1540).

UH Cougars outlast Lamar, 42-35

HOUSTON (AP) — Quarterback Lionel Wilson ran for two touchdowns and passed for a third Saturday night as Houston wore down stubborn Lamar 42-35 in a non-conference college football game.

Wilson scored on runs of 15 and 2 yards and hit tight end Carl Hilton with a 27-yards scoring toss for the Cougars, who bounced back from a 14-7 halftime deficit to post their second victory in three games.

Lamar, which got three touchdown passes from quarterback Greg Campbell and touchdown runs of 2 and 12 yards from George Landry, fell to 1-2 this season.

Houston broke the contest open with 21 points in the fourth quarter on Wilson's second touchdown run, a 22-yard interception return for a score by Orsby Crenshaw and a 12-yard scoring jaunt by Donald Jordan, who rushed for 203 yards in 31 carries.

Houston also got a 1-yard scoring run by Dwyane Love, who added 116 yards rushing on 21 carries.

LP-gas tanks and cylinders are pressurized vessels that must conform to national standards. These standards require that they be able to withstand pressures far in excess of normal use. Larger RV units have two LP containers but only one pressure regulator. It may automatically switch from one tank to the other or it may have to be manually operated. An indicator points to the container being used. Both containers should be turned on, even though gas will only be burned from one. If both are not turned on, gas can not be obtained from the full tank when the regulator automatically switches over.

When it comes to national standards, you can be sure we more than meet them here at Billy Sims Trailer Town, 520 E. 2nd, in Odessa (337-6635, from Midland call 683-4800) When you are in the market for a recreational vehicle, keep in mind to beware of the "gypsy dealer" who sells NEW travel trailers from motel, home, vacant lot, without service facilities, and is selling a product that is that old "too Good to be True" type deal. Many an unsuspecting Texan has been the sad owner of one of these Gypsy Trailers.* To be safe, choose your RV only from a reputable dealer. We invite your family to see our quality products 6 days a week. That's Billy Sims Trailer Town: member of Texas Recreational Vehicle Association. *Be sure you really get what you thought you paid for.....the "Gypsy Trailer" is without warranty.

In A two-container LP-gas system, the empty bottle can be removed and filled.

Spartans shock 4th-ranked Irish

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Free safety Phil Parker's second interception of the game set up Dave Yarema's third touchdown pass Saturday to lead Michigan State to a 28-23 upset over fourth-ranked Notre Dame.

Parker, whose interception set up a first-half Spartan touchdown, picked off a Blair Kiel pass midway in the fourth quarter and returned it 42 yards to the Irish 3-yard line. After a 2-yard loss, Yarema hit Butch Rolle with a 5-yard scoring pass to break a 21-21 tie.

With four seconds left, Yarema ran the ball out of the Michigan State end zone to give Notre Dame the safety.

The victory gave Michigan State a 2-0 record and dropped Notre Dame to 1-1.

The Irish put together a pair of impressive drives to take a 14-7 lead in the first quarter, but had to battle from behind to gain a 21-21 halftime tie.

Early in the second quarter, Parker intercepted a Kiel pass and returned 15 yards to the Notre Dame 34. Carl Butler followed with a 34-yard touchdown run to make it 14-14.

MSU then stopped the Irish and the Spartans put together a 70-yard drive that included a 34-yard pass to Bobby Morse. It was capped by a 14-yard touchdown toss from Yarema to Turner.

Michigan loses, 25-24

SEATTLE (AP) — Poised senior quarterback Steve Pelluer passed 7 yards to Mark Pattison for a touchdown with 34 seconds to go and then completed a dramatic two-point conversion pass to Larry Michael as 16th-ranked Washington overcame a two-touchdown deficit in the final quarter to edge eighth-rated Michigan 25-24 in a college football thriller Saturday.

The Huskies, 2-0, drove 80 yards in 11 plays for their last-minute touchdown after the Wolverines' Todd Schlopy misfired on a 32-yard field goal attempt with 3:40 remaining.

A two-point conversion pass by by Neuheisel had failed, but ASU was called for defensive holding and the Bruins succeeded on their second try.

Apparently content to settle for the tie, Arizona State then ran out the clock.

The defending Pac-10 champion Bruins moved 53 yards for their final touchdown after Joe Gasser intercepted a pass by Arizona State's Todd Hons at the UCLA 47-yard line with 5:07 remaining.

ASU 26, UCLA 26

PASADENA, Calif. — Rick Neuheisel fired a 19-yard touchdown pass to Mike Young with 1:36 remaining and Kevin Nelson then ran for a two-point conversion as UCLA rallied for a 26-26 tie with Arizona State in a Pacific-10 game.

Cal 30, San Jose 9

BERKELEY, Calif. — Scott Smith sent the California Bears ahead with a 4-yard touchdown run in the closing seconds of the third period and defensive back Clemont Williams scored on a 50-yard interception return in the final quarter to clinch a 30-9 nonconference win over San Jose State.

California, 2-1, came up with four pass interceptions, including two by Williams.

Susan shoots for 12th in row

A suggestion to rename the Midland City Golf Tournament the Susan Britton Instructional Invitational was tabled as a lone voice in the back of the room timidly challenged, "Someone else will win it this year. I, uh, guarantee it."

Although Susan has won the annual event for 11 straight years, this year's field has some women capable of matching Mrs. Britton's game almost stroke-for-stroke. And if one of them starts running in those long putts, this may, indeed, be the Year that Susan Didn't win the Pennant...City Golf Tournament.

Among the low handicap golfers who could give the perennial champion a run for it are Nancy Coalter, who recently won the Green Tree CC women's title; Dede Plank, Margaret Vann, all also from GTCC. From Ranchland Hills, Mary Robinson, Jane Thomas, Sandy Wilkerson, Nina Colter and Jo Dickson are at the top of their games. Sue Campbell and Sylvia Roberts are strong entrees from Midland CC.

The field will tee off at Hogan Park Golf Course Tuesday and will be divided into flights, based on qualifying scores or handicap plus par, after the first day of play.

The format this year is medal play instead of match play in the past, which adds a touch of additional suspense to the defending champion's quest for a 12th straight.

Golfers may obtain their tee times by calling the Hogan Park golf shop Monday. All women who have lived in Midland 30 days or more are eligible to play. A club membership is not necessary.

Special prizes will be awarded for nearest to the pin, long drive, chipping and putting and for hole-in-one on a specified hole. Medalist prize will be awarded for the low round the first day.

Pups' aerial antics pay off in win

The arm of quarterback Matt Marcum and the receiving of Robert Malacara led Midland High's junior varsity to a 28-26 come-from-behind victory over the Midland Lee JV Saturday morning at Memorial Stadium.

Both teams are now 2-1 on the year, but Lee went into the game having not lost a game in two years.

Lee had some good news, however, from the sophomore team as the Rebs posted a 12-0 verdict over Odessa Permian's sophomores.

In the JV contest, MHS' Marcum hit Sam Cessna with a 27-yard scoring toss to tie Lee at 26-26 with one minute left in the game. Marcum then hit Malacara with the two-point conversion for the victory.

Marcum also tossed TD passes of 60 and 8 yards to Malacara earlier in the game and Jake Madrid had a 1-yard scoring run.

Lee, who once led by 55-yard pass from Todd Sparks late in the fourth period to pad the margin.

The Lee sophomores beat Permian with 12 second half points. Tony Brown gave Lee the victory with a 1-yard run late in the third period and Anthony Dickens caught a a 20-6 margin, was led by quarterback Tuey Rankin, who scored on a 60-yard romp and hit Dexter Trailer with a 60-yard scoring pass. Rankin also converted a two-point run. Lee's Bruce Medlock scored on a 4-yard run and Danny Gonzales gave Lee a 26-20 lead in the fourth period with a 25-yard run.

WVU rallies to nip Terps

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Jeff Hostetler tossed two second-half touchdown passes and set up another after recovering from a ragged start, leading 20th-ranked West Virginia to a 31-21 victory over 17th-ranked Maryland Saturday night.

West Virginia, 3-0, which has beaten Maryland in three of its last seven home openers, took charge after the Terps went ahead 10-0 following two early interceptions of Hostelter passes by Terps defensive back Clarence Baldwin.

Hostetler, who completed 11 of 22 passes for 218 yards, completed a 44-yarder to split end Rich Hill to set up a 17-yard touchdown run by Tom Gray, snapping a 10-10 halftime tie.

— Mike Jones kicked an 18-yard field goal with 18 seconds remaining in the game to lift Howard Payne to a 10-9 win over Texas Lutheran.

Oilers still seek first win

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers offense has been through all the gears in its first two NFL games this season, including reverse.

The Oilers accelerated with 38 points against Green Bay and broke down with only six against the Los Angeles Raiders en route to an 0-2 start.

Now Houston's rebuilt, but inexperienced, offensive line must try to regroup against Pittsburgh and its rebuilt and inexperienced defense.

The two opposing forces clash today at noon.

The Steelers are 1-1 following last week's 25-21 victory over the Packers and rank second in the NFL with 11 quarterback sacks.

It's the same results the Steelers used to get with names like Mean Joe Greene, Dwight White and L.C. Greenwood. Now the names of promise are Gabe "Senor Sack" Rivera, Tom Beasley ,Gary Dunn and Keith Gary.

Rivera, a rookie from Texas Tech, could be the best of the group but he's been slowed by injuries.

"I haven't played much," Rivera said. "That's got me bugged. I really want to play. I think most of the fans are waiting to see what I can do. I don't blame them."

Houston invested heavily in its offensive line, which had shown vast improvement until last week's effort against the Raiders.

"What we didn't have was that sharp crispness, coming off the ball and staying with our block," Oiler offensive line coach Bill Walsh said.

Wary Giants invade Irving

IRVING (AP) — The New York Giants visit their own personal Bermuda Triangle today in Texas Stadium where they've turned up lost seven consecutive times.

Not since 1974 when former Coach Bill Arnsparger earned his first NFL victory have the Giants prevailed in the home stadium of the Dallas Cowboys.

The Giants didn't have to visit the stadium with a hole in the roof last year because the strike canceled both Giants-Cowboys games.

Bill Parcells, the new Giants coach, notched his initial NFL victory last week with a 16-13 triumph over Atlanta in overtime.

While the Giants boast a 1-1 ledger, the Cowboys are 2-0 with come-from-behind victories over the Washington Redskins and St. Louis Cardinals.

"Dallas has been impressive with its big play offense," said Parcells, who took over after Ray Perkins went to Alabama. "Tony Hill and Tony Dorsett can beat you on any given play. You have to constantly be alert. That team has a lot of firepower."

Dallas Coach Tom Landry, who is 28-11-2 against his old club, said "The Giants are still the same basic team, rugged and they play hard. They have as good a defense as we will face."

Dallas was rated an eight-point favorite over the Giants in the 3 p.m. game.

Dorsett needs 73 yards against the Giants to tie Leroy Kelly for ninth place among the NFL'S all-time leading rushers with 7,274 yards. Dorsett needs 799 more yards to become only the ninth player in NFL history to rush for 8,000 yards.

Giants running back Rob Carpenter has two consecutive 100-yard-plus games while Scott Brunner has entrenched himself at quarterback. He was 18 of 30 for 194 yards against the Falcons.

Sure winner Australia II foiled again

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Australia II proved Saturday that she could beat U.S. defender Liberty in the America's Cup. But she couldn't beat the dying wind and her own incredibly bad luck.

The challenger, looking like the super boat she was supposed to be, had an insurmountable six-minute lead when the third race of the best-of-seven series for sailing's most prized trophy was abandoned because the 5 hour, 15 minute time limit had expired.

The feeble wind had done what Liberty couldn't do: deny the Aussies their first victory.

The two boats will try again Sunday, when more even southwesterly winds of 10-15 knots are forecast on Rhode Island Sound.

Iowa turns Lions' errors into victory

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Quarterback Chuck Long passed for an Iowa record of 345 yards as the 13th-ranked Hawkeyes capitalized on second-half errors to hand defending NCAA champion Penn State its third straight loss Saturday, 42-34.

The setback marked the first time the Nittany Lions had dropped three games in a row since 1976 and the first time they lost their first three games of the season since 1964.

Trailing 21-14, Iowa scored four times after halftime, three of the touchdowns coming after Penn State fumbles.

With the score tied 28-28, Iowa took the lead for good in the final quarter after Mike Yacullo recovered quarterback Doug Strang's fumble at the Iowa 38. Long and Owen Gill connected on a 39-yard pass play, then Norm Granger scored from the 23, making it 35-28.

Iowa scored again with 8:30 left on a 77-yard pass and run from Long to Ronnie Harmon, making it 42-28.

Georgia ties Clemson, 16-16

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Tenth-ranked Georgia's Kevin Butler kicked a last-minute, 31-yard field goal to tie Clemson 16-16. Butler's with 38 seconds left.

But the Tigers did not give up. With seven seconds left on the clock, Clemson tried to snap the tie with a 68-yard field goal attempt by Donald Igwebuike. But the kick fell short. The ball changed hands and Butler tried a field goal from the same spot, failing on a 66-yard attempt.

'Class' focuses on neurotic love

A Review

One way to know if a cause has "arrived" is to see it presented on a Merv Griffin theme show. So, it was no surprise when Hollywood's most eligible ladies showed up recently to tout the joys of love with younger men. After all, wasn't that the subject of some of the most titillating scenes in Jacqueline Bisset's 1981 movie "Rich and Famous?"

And what she did for renewing awareness in that area, she does again in the Martin Ransohoff production "Class." Only what was a search for love as a fuel for creative inspiration in "Rich and Famous," is now full blown neurosis in "Class."

Either way, the question of should a woman align herself romantically with a younger man never gets an impartial hearing. In both movies, the older woman is portrayed adrift on a sea of unresolved sexual conflict, with love for love's sake missing the boat.

In "Class," Miss Bisset portrays a married woman (Ellen Burroughs) who has an affair with her son's prep school roommate. It begins innocuously enough, when Ellen rescues Johnathan (Andrew McCarthy) from some single's bar harassment, but quickly escalates into weekends in Chicago. Unknown to either is their respective relationship to Ellen's son, Skip (played by Bob Lowe, "The Outsiders").

When the inevitable unraveling takes place, Ellen goes off to seek psychiatric help and the two boys struggle silently through the semester unsure of what to say or feel. How they resolve the untenable situation is to the movie's credit (and the actors'), but we are left with the feeling once again this summer that "father no longer knows best" — the kids do.

It is for that reason this season's big push to idolize youthful highjinks has worn dangerously thin. And though "Class," written by Jim Kouf and David Greenwalt, tries for more than just another "good times" movie, the possibilities are lost in the aimlessness of the adult-child relationships.

Using a stereotypical roommate arrangement, Kouf and Greenwalt assign poverty and academic brilliance to Johnathan and privilege and casualness to Skip, but they do manage to inject a controversial note into the story when the subject of cheating on the S.A.T. test is investigated by a state review board.

Johnathan, who cheated on the test for fear of failing to make the entrance requirements to Harvard, denies his culpability when questioned by the reviewer (Stuart Margolin). But Skip refuses to answer any questions and receives the applause and approval of fellow students and some faculty at Vernon Academy. This implies that given the societal demands to succeed, anything is fair game. And though we hope Johnathan will have the integrity to admit his action, that hope is frustrated.

"Class" has some lighter moments when the boys pull pranks on each other at the start of the new year, and when they dump their marijuana plants and paraphernalia down the toilet in an imagined raid on the dorm. But "Class" obviously was intended to make a statement about two young men at one of the transitional periods of their lives. The point about the affair is never clearly made (with the suggestion of "boys will be boys" lingering in the air) and Miss Bisset fails to bring any new dimensions to the now familiar movie role of a woman in mid-life crisis.

Rated R, "Class" has a good supporting cast in the prep school pals. McCarthy and especially Lowe bring to life young men on the verge of manhood.

Actor goes from playing un-jolly green giant to ambulance driver

ENTERTAINMENT

By MICHAEL HILL
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Even when Lou Ferrigno was playing the Incredible Hulk, the un-jolly green giant who bashed walls and thrashed villains for years in prime time and forever in syndication, even when he was growling that awful growl, you always knew that under all that muscle and fury there beat the heart of a gentle giant.

Maybe it was the way he cradled fallen heroines or the near-tear that sometimes came to his eye. At heart, you always knew he was a nice guy.

Ferrigno, 31, is back in prime time, as big as ever, playing a whole, 6-foot-4, 255-pound person rather than the angry half of a split personality.

His name will be Sixkiller ("Six" for short), and he's a powerful yet gentle ambulance driver, a member of a team of doctors, nurses and paramedics who will scurry across your TV set saving lives on "Trauma Center" Thursday nights (on ABC, channel 2). (This week's premiere episode runs two hours; starting next week, the show will be an hour long).

The series stars James Naughton, Dorian Harewood and Bill Randolph as doctors, Jayne Modean as a nurse and Alfie Wise as Ferrigno's fellow paramedic.

Before rushing out the door of his Southern California home to return to the studio, Ferrigno said, "The show is very similar to 'M*A*S*H' and 'Hill Street Blues.'"

Those who have seen it say it's a Xerox copy of "Emergency," a popular 1972-77 series focusing on a paramedic rescue service.

One of the show's nice touches centers on Sixkiller, who is partly deaf. So is Ferrigno.

McLure plays not for faint-hearted

A Review

The scene onstage: Roy Caulder's description of his virgin look at the pristine wilderness of "the Grand Canyon" from the backseat of his '59 pink Thunderbird convertible.

The concurrent scene in the Theatre One audience: Two members of the audience walk out.

And so went Midland Community Theatre's opening night showing of James McLure's two one-act comedies, "Lone Star/Laundry and Bourbon." The production closes Oct. 1.

Those who weren't offended by the profanity and explicit subject matter, stayed. Those who were, left (a few others left during intermission).

"Lone Star" takes place behind Angel's Bar in Maynard, Texas, where Roy (Michael Huslage) is doing what he normally does on Friday nights — drinking Lone Star. He is joined by his little brother, Ray (Daren Taylor), and Roy's least favorite person, Cleetus Fullernoy (Corby Considine).

Although Roy and Ray talk of many things, the subject is always the same, yesterday. "When you're trying to come back to a place in your mind you want it to be the way you remember it, not the way it is," Roy tells Ray.

Roy can't loosen the bonds of his "cock of the walk" past, which is intricately tied to his '59 pink Thunderbird convertible. Yet, this night becomes a turning point for him.

Huslage, Taylor and Considine do an excellent job of working as an ensemble. Considine, complete with white socks and pants that are too short, plays the stereotypical dry goods salesman to the hilt. Huslage captures Roy, and Taylor's Gomer Pyle-Chester ("Gunsmoke") portrayal of Ray works beautifully most of the time.

Amy Lee (Chrysti Scoville), left, verbally blasts Hatti (Renee Yarborough), while Elizabeth (Bonnie Chambers) tries to calm the two in this scene from Midland Community Theatre's production of "Lone Star/Laundry and Bourbon." For reservations call 682-4111.

Nice touches include:

—Ray's one jean tucked into his boot.

—Roy's downing a beer and there being liquid in the bottle.

—Roy and Ray's can openers.

—Cleetus' clothes, complete with a chest pocket full of pens.

However, there weren't enough capped beer bottles. And too often, when the tops were popped, it was obvious the cap wasn't on tight enough.

"Laundry and Bourbon" takes place in Roy's backyard, where his wife, Elizabeth (Bonnie Chambers), and her friend, Hattie (Renee Yarborough), are folding the laundry and drinking bourbon. When the two are joined by Cleetus' wife, Amy Lee (Chrysti Scoville), the cat fight begins.

Ms. Yarborough does an excellent job of portraying the harried, married for security, mother of three angel-devils who has just left the kids with their grandmother (his mother, not hers). Now Hattie wants to sip a little bourbon.

This production drags, however, because Ms. Chambers and Ms. Scoville have not mastered their respective roles. Ms. Chambers doesn't seem to quite know what to do with her hands (an apron? a necklace? might help) and Ms. Scoville's portrayal isn't broad enough (more vocal exaggeration might solve much of the problem).

The tempo does pick up when Amy Lee arrives. The three actually work as an ensemble once the cat fight begins to reach its peak. From then on, the audience is just as captive as Hattie, who, after promising her mother-in-law to pick up the kids by 5 p.m., wrangles till the summer sun sets.

Each set seemed to come right out of the West Texas landscape. The blocking (movement around the stage), particularly in "Lone Star," allows the characters to appear right at home. Director for this production is Michael Spicer.

Both are funny plays. Perhaps their appeal lies in the fact that they are about people we all know. So, if profanity and explicit talk aren't offensive, see "Lone Star/Laundry and Bourbon."

Peking Opera will perform at Theatre Midland Oct. 3

The Peking Opera will perform at Theatre Midland Oct. 3. The opera makes its United States debut in Houston Sept. 27.

Members of the company include China's leading performers of classical Chinese opera, the 5,000-year-old art form that combines music, dance, theater, martial arts and acrobatics.

The costumes and makeup, influenced by the wardrobes of the ancient imperial court, are a mix of brilliant colors, each symbolic of the moral character and temperament of the role. For instance, black signifies a good, vigorous character; red indicates loyalty, sincerity and bravery; and blue symbolizes savageness and fierceness.

The U.S. tour repertoire includes "The Magic Herb" and "The Broken Bridge" from the fairy tale "Romance of the White Snake;" "Finding the Jade Bracelet" from the traditional play "Famen Temple;" "The Conqueror Bids Farewell to his Concubine" from the classical play "Records of the Historian;" "The Crossroads Inn" from the folk legend "Generals of the Yang Family;" and "Autumn River" from the traditional play "Story of the Jade Hairpin."

All the leading performers were trained at the China School (now Academy) of Dramatic Arts located in Beijing, People's Republic of China.

This U.S. tour has been arranged by the China Cultural Society of Texas and Louisiana, Inc., in cooperation with the consulate general of the People's Republic of China in Houston and the Beijing-based Chinese People's Association for Friendship with Foreign Countries.

Tickets, priced at $25, may be purchased by writing Midland College Opera, c/o Nancy Anguish, P.O. Box 4763, Midland, Texas, 79704. Tickets will go on sale at Theatre Midland's box office Sept. 26.

Actress doesn't wonder 'Why me, Lord?'

By BILL HAGEN
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Penelope Milford definitely is not one to sit around during sporadic periods of unemployment, indigenous to the profession, and wonder, "Why me, Lord?"

No, not Miss Milford. Personally and professionally, she's rather content with the way her life is going. Well, maybe not content. She's too effervescent for that.

Miss Milford is out plumping for her latest movie, "The Golden Seal," but not exclusively. She has too many other things to talk about, such as her husband, Michael Lally, whom she married about 18 months ago and with whom she is now working on stage in Los Angeles.

The show is called "Hollywood Magic," which she describes an "an iconoclastic fantasy based on Michael's poetry" and is now at the Stages Theater.

"My friends always ask, 'Where is that theater?' " she said. "And I just tell them it's not far from the unemployment office. Oh, yes, now I know which one it is.' "

That Miss Milford should be so knowledgeable about such things is a surprise, considering the way she fairly exploded on screen a few years ago as Jane Fonda's good friend in "Coming Home," for which Miss Milford was nominated for an Academy Award as best supporting actress. There was a widespread belief then that here was a career about to skyrocket. She's a very talented actress.

"My expectations for myself were never as great as those of some others," she said. "I wasn't in any rush. I'm still not. I'm quite satisfied with where my career is now. In fact, I'm not sure I want the responsibility of 'stardom,' of having to carry a movie and be responsible for its success or failure. I think I'm still too emotionally immature for that.

"I'm in a good position, I think. I'm working at things I want to do."

Miss Milford, after zestfully disposing of a lunch of salad, steak and onion rings — "I talk a good game when it comes to calories," she said almost apologetically, although she's quite slender — is basically unassuming.

Music written within months

Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart (1756-91) wrote his last three symphonies, generally considered his best — No. 39 in E flat, No. 40 in G minor and No. 41 (called the Jupiter) in C — in 1788 in the space of three months.

Coal miner's daughter returns to her past

Lynn

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — The coal miner's daughter who turned country singer has revisited a crucial point on her trek from Butcher Hollow, Ky., to stardom — a radio station that took a chance on an unknown more than 20 years ago.

Loretta Lynn and her husband, O.V. Doolittle "Mooney" Lynn, whom she married when she was 13, had set out by car in 1961 to promote her home-produced record "Honky Tonk Girl."

Along the way, they stopped at Wheeling's country music station WWVA and got the record on the air.

"Then we heard that they had a live (weekly) Jamboree show," she said Friday before a concert in Wheeling. "We tried to get me on stage."

"About three years later they asked us," Mooney added.

Miss Lynn arrived in Wheeling last week to start recording an album due for release before the end of the year.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The widow of folk singer Jim Croce has been victimized by a burglar who escaped from her home with about $20,000 worth of property, mostly jewelry.

Police Sgt. Fred England said Friday that a youth aged between 14 and 16 was seen leaving the home of Ingrid Croce about the time the theft occurred Thursday.

Mrs. Croce moved to San Diego in 1974 after the death of her husband in a plane crash in September 1973.

Croce, a popular balladeer, is remembered for such hits as "Bad, Bad Leroy Brown," "Time In A Bottle" and "You Don't Mess Around With Jim."

Croce, 30, and five others died when a chartered plane crashed seconds after takeoff from an airfield in Natchitoches, La.

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Country singer George Jones drew more than 6,000 fans to a concert born of his troubles with the law.

Friday night's concert originally was planned as part of a proposed plea bargain after he was arrested on cocaine possession charges in Jackson. It went on even though the charges were dropped.

Jones' car was stopped by a state Highway Patrol officer who charged the driver with speeding. A search of the car allegedly turned up traces of cocaine.

However, a judge dismissed the charge when statements Jones made after the arrest were ruled inadmissible.

The crowd cheered every song in the concert that ran an hour and a quarter. He had drawn criticism in some previous appearances for cutting his performances short, or not showing up at all. His staff said he had donated $18,000 of the proceeds to charities in the Jackson area.

"We don't want to go into the past," he said at the concert. "I love this state, that comes from the heart."

PRINCETON N.J. (AP) — Although Princeton University officials have tried to play down the presence of actress Brooke Shields on campus, students and alumni are being kept aware of her enrollment at the Ivy League school.

Shields

"It doesn't make any difference to me, except when people find out I'm going to Princeton that's all they ask about," said freshman Stefanie Tompkins.

The Princeton Alumni Weekly is still printing letters responding to one written by Barbara Dash, class of 1973, that appeared in the magazine in June musing: "Who, one wonders, is the talented and intellectually superior student who has not been admitted to Princeton this year so that Brooke Shields might be?"

Jeffrey Wood, a 1966 graduate, called that letter "sexist" because it assumes that "great beauty" precludes intelligence.

University spokesman George Eager said children of famous people, such as Gregory Peck and Ferdinand Marcos of the Philippines, have attended Princeton and blended in.

Miss Shields, 18, is different because she arrives a celebrity, Eager said.

The actress, who appeared in "Pretty Baby," "Blue Lagoon," and "Endless Love," and models Calvin Klein jeans, told Interview magazine that after a few weeks at Princeton, "I won't be any big deal."

"The first few weeks, everyone will be so involved with their own problems academically and socially," she said.

Autopsy report on Lewis' wife released

HERNANDO, Miss. (AP) — The amount of methadone in the body of Shawn Michelle Lewis, wife of singer Jerry Lee Lewis, was "10 times the starting therapeutic dose" of the synthetic drug, a prosecutor said.

The number was in an autopsy report given county authorities Friday, DeSoto County Prosecutor Bill Ballard said.

Mrs. Lewis, 25, was found dead in bed Aug. 24 in the couple's home in Nesbitt.

Ballard quoted from the report, which he said would not be made public immediately. It was written by Dr. Jerry Francisco, who performed the autopsy.

The report will be presented to a grand jury Wednesday, Ballard said. It contains no new disclosures, only more details, he said.

Methadone is a pain killer and muscle relaxer often used as a substitute for heroin in the treatment of narcotics addiction.

Pirates seized slaves

From the 16th century the Barbary pirates of Africa's Mediterranean coast made a living by capturing Christian countries' ships and enslaving the sailors. At one time they held as many as 25,000 European slaves.

First black woman named Miss America

Williams

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Miss New York, Vanessa Williams, was crowned Miss America 1984 on Saturday night, and became the first black woman to win the title in the 62-year history of the pageant.

Miss Williams, 20, of Millwood, N.Y., won preliminary talent and swimming suit competitions earlier in the week of the pageant, which barred minority participation during its first three decades.

Miss New Jersey, Suzette Charles, the other black finalist in the pageant, was first runner-up. Miss Alabama, Pam Battles, 21, of Muscle Shoals, was second runner-up, while the third runner-up was Miss Mississippi, Wanda Gayle Geddie, 24, of Hattiesburg. Miss Ohio, Pamela Helean Rigas, 22, of Canfield, was fourth runner-up.

Miss Williams cried when she was selected the 57th winner of the pageant before millions of worldwide television viewers and a capacity crowd of 25,000 at Convention Hall.

The outgoing Miss America, Debra Sue Maffett, 26, of Anaheim, Calif., who also won talent and swimsuit preliminaries last year, crowned her successor.

Miss Williams entered her state contest earlier this year only after she was recruited by New York pageant officials who had seen her perform in Syracuse.

A junior at Syracuse University majoring in musical theater, Miss Williams sang a highly-charged rendition of "Happy Days Are Here Again" in Saturday's talent competition and has said she hopes one day to perform on a Broadway stage.

Miss Williams said she admires singer Lena Horne and considers herself to have the same "stylistic" singing voice as the veteran entertainer.

Her parents, Milton and Helen Williams, both are music teachers and taught their daughter French horn and melophone as well as singing.

As Miss America, Miss Williams will receive a $25,000 scholarship and can expect to earn more than $100,000 in personal appearances during her reign. She also may take her scholarship in cash.

The first runner-up wins a $15,000 scholarship and the next three highest finishers get $10,000, $7,000 and $5,000 scholarships. The other top 10 finalists receive $3,000 scholarships, and all contestants get at least $1,000 in scholarship money.

Television talk show host Gary Collins, husband of 1959 Miss America Mary Ann Mobley, was this year's master of ceremonies. Collins last year replaced actor Ron Ely, who served for two years after longtime host Bert Parks was fired.

The pageant's centerpiece song was new this year. Pageant officials said the author of the song "There She Is," traditionally sung as the newly crowned queen walks the 134-foot runway, demanded too much money for the rights to its use, and it was replaced with "Look At Her."

Black women were not permitted to enter the pageant in the early years. Blacks portrayed slaves in crowning ceremonies during early years of the pageant.

French flag replaced

In a New Orleans ceremony Dec. 20, 1803, France's flag was replaced by the U.S. flag, symbolizing the official transfer of the Louisiana Purchase lands — more than a million square miles for a price of about $20 per square mile.

Film collectors: Heroes or villains?

By DALE POLLOCK
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Richard Sand was 8 years old when he found some old, cracked 9.5mm films in his grandmother's musty closet. When he held the brittle celluloid up to the light, he saw scenes of Harold Lloyd hanging from the hands of a clock, an Eskimo stalking a polar bear, and a beekeeper surrounded by hives.

Sand was soon hooked on movies. When he was 9, his grandfather bought him a home projector, and Sand began collecting 8mm films of his own.

Now 36, Sand has seen his collection grow to include several hundred films, and his Hollywood home is equipped with theater-quality 35mm and 16mm projectors. Some of Sand's movies have been donated to the Library of Congress because of their historic value.

Richard Sand is not this collector's real name, however. He begged a reporter not to disclose his identity because of fears that the major movie studios and law enforcement agencies would seize his collection and accuse him of being a film pirate.

Sand has cause for worry. Last month, investigators from the district attorney's Entertainment Industry Task Force seized more than 1,000 cans of film from Merle Ray Harlin, a movie vault librarian who has worked for MGM, Warner Bros. and Columbia Pictures.

Included in Harlin's collection were 4½ minutes of the missing footage from the recently restored version of Judy Garland's 1954 classic, "A Star is Born." Investigators also found two rare, 35mm early color pictures from the 1930s, "Dr. X" and "Mystery of the Wax Museum," that film scholars had considered lost.

HARLIN'S CASE remains under investigation, but Sand's concerns that his own collection could similarly end up under lock and key are shared by many of the estimated 30,000 to 50,000 movie collectors across the country.

While crediting themselves with preserving movies that otherwise would have been destroyed, the collectors realize that the film companies that hold the copyrights to most feature-length motion pictures often do not appreciate their efforts.

"Anybody can call themselves a collector," said Helen Ganz, a lawyer for 20th Century-Fox Film Corp. who has helped prosecute several film pirates, individuals who illegally duplicate and sell movies. "I can rob a jewelry store and say I collect diamonds, but that doesn't make what I do legal."

Actor Roddy McDowall was one of the most prominent Hollywood performers to have his collection seized in a series of FBI raids in 1975, although he claimed at the time that all his films were legally obtained. Charges were never pressed against McDowall, and his films were eventually returned to him.

"I happen to be an archivist by nature," McDowall said in a recent interview. "I don't care whether they are films or whatever, I don't think that things should be destroyed. My blood curdles every time I hear about films being burned. How do we know where we're going unless we know where we've been?"

FILM ARCHIVISTS at the American Film Institute, the University of California, Los Angeles, and the Directors Guild of America often side with McDowall's point of view rather than that of Ganz and other studio executives who see collectors as villains. To these scholars, movie buffs are more often heroes.

"Thousands of films that are the most beloved by archivists and film scholars have been found only in the collections of private individuals," said Audrey Kupferberg, assistant director for the National Center for Film and Video Preservation at the American Film Institute headquarters in Washington, D.C.

Kupferberg adds: "These film documents are very important to our cultural heritage. They just don't coincide with profits for the studios."

The debate over whether film collectors are preservationists or pirates has accelerated in recent years. Hollywood has increased its security efforts in an attempt to stem the growing tide of illegal movie duplication, which costs the major movie studios an estimated $750 million a year.

Drought makes Dust Bowl sound soggy

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Farmers and ranchers dread it, but a drought seems to hit every two or three decades. Not even modern science and high technology can ease the devastation and heartache it causes.

If weather conditions don't change — and a weatherman says they won't — West Texas may be entering the Drought Age. Scenes from the '50s drought are being replayed, and the Dust Bowl of the '30s may be sweeping through here this winter.

Until this year, farmers and ranchers who lived through one or both of those droughts used to recall the bad times. Now, they're saying those years looked good compared to 1983. And bankers are getting anxious for their loan payments, advising farmers and ranchers to look for paying jobs.

Summer officially ends Friday, but the growing season never came this year. West Texans suffered through an endless stream of blistering hot, cloudless days. No spring rains, no summer rains, probably no fall rains.

Deadly drought

Felled by the drought, this cow slowly deteriorates under the blazing sun at the Slash Hook Ranch seven miles north of McCamey. Longtime farmers and ranchers are calling this drought worse than those in the 1930s and 1950s.

"THIS YEAR'S been dryer than any of those other years," said Hoot Leonard who manages the Midland County Co-op. "We had some rain along" back in the 1950s unlike this year where the sprinkles have been few and far between. "Some crops were planted later. Most of those years, there was some production. But there's virtually no dryland crops this year."

B.T. Graham moved to Midland County in 1925 and he weathered it through both major droughts.

"There was some hard times," he said, "but not as bad as it is now. We did have some late feed crop. The worst part of that drought in the '50s is it rained late. It didn't do that now. It's too late for any kind of crop."

There may not have been enough rain for a good crop, but there was always enough to grow something to feed the livestock, the men recalled. And that's what has been missing this time — no feed.

When he was a child, Tom Loeffler would look at the sky every morning and see maybe one small floating cloud. He was 6 years old and living on the family ranch in Mason County when the drought started. He remembers the hot summers and watching the cattle herds dry up. Today, as the congressman from the 21st District, he's working to get drought aid for farmers and ranchers.

"That drought left a deep scar in me," he said. It began about 1952 and began to break about 1958. But it took several more years for the cattle herd to recover.

"The herds my father and grandfather had built over the years began to decrease," he said of those years as the drought continued its grip.

Each Thursday was selling day in Mason County, and the Loefflers began to weed out more and more of what had once been considered good cattle. "They were skin and bones," Loeffler said.

SUPPLEMENTAL FEED came in the form of prickly pear. Loeffler, whose congressional district includes Midland, recalled taking butane and propane burners, burning all the stickers off the pears and tossing them to the cattle to eat. One year toward the end of the drought, after getting the neighbor's permission, they resorted to going across the fence onto other property to get prickly pear, he said.

When the rains began to come, it took two to four years to see the grass coming up again. And it was even longer for the herd to rebuild, he said.

Thirty years later, Loeffler is reliving those days but not on the ranch. "Every day I get up in Washington, I wonder if it rained. When I get off a plane in Texas I look up and see the cloudless sky and get that sick feeling," he said.

With only 3.13 inches of precipitation in the Midland-Odessa area since Jan. 1, 1983 could break the record for being the driest year in recent history.

Roger Mallory, forecaster with the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, pulled out records from the '30s and '50s. The driest year to date, he said is 1951 when 4.24 inches of moisture dribbled over the area. That was the start of the drought which began to break about 1957. That year the area felt 15.58 inches of rain. And the next two years were floods by comparison as 20.3 inches were recorded each time.

Mallory explained the average amount is 13.70 inches a year.

"This drought has been going on for about a year, but it's not over," he said. "There's no indication of a lot of rain."

Early last week, purple clouds gathered over the two cities, but very little rain came. Mild cold fronts are expected to wander through the area over the next two weeks, decreasing further chances for rain, according to Mallory.

Although the cold fronts will keep the temperatures down to the 80s and is a relief from the blistering summer heat, Mallory said it also means the chances of thunderstorms building in the evening are dying. Normally, moist air from the Gulf reacts with the high temperatures to form thirst-quenching thunderstorms.

THROUGH THE END of August, the NWS office had recorded 2.79 inches of rain, which is 6.73 inches below the norm of 9.16 inches for that same period.

"If we keep going the way we are now, we could break the record of 1951," he said.

And if rain does come, it won't be enough to help, Mallory noted. He explained the rain often comes down hard in a short period of time. On this baked land, that rain will run off into the draws, being of no benefit to farmers and ranchers.

"We need a gradual soaking rain for 12 to 24 hours" to do any good, he added.

Those Dust Bowl days weren't as bad in West Texas as for the nation's mid-section, according to Mallory. In fact, he said, the 1930s weren't "as consistently dry as the '50s." The least amount of rainfall was 6.76 inches in 1933, and that came on the heels of 27.42 inches in 1932.

The fall often has brought last-minute rains, noted Mallory, as tropical storms develop off a southern coast and move inland. But there's not even a slight chance of that happening soon. The most recent storm off Baja has died.

Parched land. No rain. Plowed fields. Dying scrub. That will mix up into some good dust storms this winter and spring, predicted Mallory.

With the plowed land stretching from Midland north to Lubbock, "once we get the strong winds from the north, we'll have more dust storms than we've had in 20 years. Even if we get extensive rains now, it won't be enough to grow vegetation" that holds down the dirt, he said.

Graham, now retired, remembered those dust storms of the '30s. And, he said, "We're going to have some more of those. When the winds start blowing, it's going to be 'Goodby, Katie, shut the door.' "

Leonard was "just a button" during the '30s, and he can recall the dry years and short crops, although not too clearly. Some of the old-timers who do remember those '30s are saying 1983 is worse than that, he said.

THIS YEAR WILL see virtually no dryland crops coming out of Midland County, he noted. He's expecting to see only 2,000 bales of cotton ginned this year. During the 1950s, it was 3,000 to 3,500 bales. Four years ago the county gin set a record with 22,500 bales. Last year was supposed to be a bad year and the gin processed 12,600 bales.

"As far as the ginning process is concerned, it's a money-losing thing this year," said Leonard.

Most of that cotton is coming from land that was irrigated. But irrigation won't solve the drought problem.

Graham noted he got into irrigation back in 1955. But the electricity costs to operate those pumps drink in any profit the farmer may have made on the cotton or other crops, he said.

The farmers are in a worse shape today than in the '50s, according to Leonard. With no crop yields this year, farmers won't be able to pay off loans at the bank and get more money to plant next year. They'll be going out of business by next spring.

"THE DISASTER programs are going," he said, mentioning the loan assistance from the federal government. "But it doesn't look like it will assist us much."

Some farmers start now to prepare for next year, and if rains don't come in the fall to prepare the land for spring they don't expect a good year. "We depend on September for a rain," said Leonard, a former farmer. "It tells us whether we're going to have a crop next year. We have to depend on moisture stored in the soil."

Cattlemen, too, are facing severe money problems, he noted. "Most of them have had to lighten their herds. Many of the big ranchers are cutting way down. The price of cattle has dropped drastically in the last three weeks. There's no feed left."

And bankers are getting impatient for their loan payments.

"I've talked to a good many folks who've been told by their bankers to get a job and pay their expenses. These people won't be able to stay in business," Leonard said.

Cystic fibrosis confuses, frightens Midland family

Care could cost $30,000 per year

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The reactions of Denise and Bobby Burns were similar to those of many new parents. The feelings of shock, confusion and fright are shared every day by many couples who are unknowing carriers of a disease of which they've probably never heard.

Cystic fibrosis. A disease that usually results in death for children and young adults.

Ten years ago, a child diagnosed with CF had a life span of six years.

Blond 19-month-old Tyler Burns, standing on chubby legs in a striped jumpsuit with toy car in hand, may live to the age of 19.

"Cystic fibrosis is like a death sentence, with no date of execution," Mrs. Burns said a CF specialist told them.

"There are no words to describe the sinking feeling in your heart when they tell you he has it," she said. "Now, it's just a part of life. But that initial shock — we couldn't talk."

When Tyler was 3 months old, he weighed 12 pounds. He then began losing weight. He was having bowel movements about 10 times a day.

When he was 5½ months old, his pediatrician, Dr. W.C. Watson, began testing for CF.

NEITHER OF TYLER'S parents had ever heard of it. Figures from the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation (CFF) indicate one in every 20 persons, or 10 million Americans, are "unknowing and symptomless carriers of the gene for CF."

When both parents carry a CF gene, there is a 25 percent chance that the child will inherit CF, a 75 percent chance he will not, and a 50 percent chance that he, too, will be a carrier.

"We didn't know it was in the family at all," Mrs. Burns said. However, checking through the family history, some infant deaths and respiratory problems were noted.

Burns had two uncles who died before they were 6 months old. But because that was in the 1920's, the deaths could have been caused by a number of diseases.

CF, the number one killer of children and young adults, affects the exocrine, or externally secreting, glands of the body, according to CFF literature. The majority of exocrine glands produce mucous, a normal, free-flowing fluid. In a CF patient, the mucous is thick and sticky and tends to block ducts and other passageways in the body.

The lungs and intestines are usually affected.

ONE METHOD of detecting CF is the sweat test. Because there is an abnormally high amount of salt in the sweat, many are alerted to the possibility of CF by kissing the child's forehead. Tyler's skin tastes salty.

Other clues are respiratory infections, such as asthma and pneumonia; malnutrition or failure to grow; frequent, bulky bowel movements; rectal prolapse, or protrusion of the rectal mucous membrane through the anus; and nasal polyps, overgrowths from the mucous membranes in the nasal cavity or sinuses.

"Tyler's only outward symptom is he's small," Mrs. Burns said. "He'll always be small."

He weighs 25 pounds, but he can down two large orders of french fries and a cheeseburger — and want more.

"He eats like a horse," Burns said, adding it was expensive feeding him.

"You're worth every penny, though," he said, giving his son a hug.

Rolling his car over the furniture, 19-month-old Tyler Burns looks like most children. But he has cystic fibrosis, a disease that could cost his parents, Denise and Bobby Burns, as much as $30,000 a year.

With help of Lions, Midland forming satellite CF chapter

In Texas, there are cystic fibrosis chapters in Dallas, Houston and San Antonio that are affiliated with the national chapter. The Permian Basin is developing a satellite chapter out of San Antonio's Lone Star Chapter.

"We're the first city in Texas to decide to form a chapter here without a paid professional," Denise Burns, mother of a CF patient, said.

Mrs. Burns has been working with the San Antonio chapter and Dr. John Bray, Midland pediatrician who also operates the new Cystic Fibrosis Clinic at Odessa Women's and Children's Hospital.

The clinic was established to accommodate local CF patients and their parents, who before were forced to seek specialized medical care in Dallas or Houston or wait for the semi-annual clinic conducted by doctors from Dallas.

Although National Cystic Fibrosis Week runs today through Saturday, the Midland volunteer group won't sponsor a fund-raising event until November, Mrs. Burns said.

Members of the new Midland Northside Lions Club, who have adopted the local cystic fibrosis group as their project, are meeting soon to determine a date for the Movin' On-A-Thon. Participants will sign up sponsors, who pledge to pay a certain amount of money for every mile completed during the event.

"They're new and we're new and they want to support something and grow with it," Ms. Burns said. "We're excited because they're willing to take us on completely."

The local CF effort is being done to provide increased public education about the disease, which strikes young children and adults.

Ninety-nine percent of those diagnosed as having CF, an inherited disease that affects sweat glands and the respiratory and digestive system, die from CF.

Ten years ago, an infant born with CF lived until the age of six. Today, treatment has prolonged the lives of many victims.

"There is no cure," Mrs. Burns said. "And it will be a long time before there is one. It's genetic, and working with the genes is still beyond the technology we have right now."

Tyler, the 19-month-old son of Mrs. Burns and her husband, Bobby, is expected to live until he reaches 19. As results take place in research, his life expectancy may increase. But it may not.

"There is a lot of research going on," Burns said. "But even if they did achieve a cure in 10 years — he'd be 12 — but his lungs may be so damaged by then that it wouldn't help him."

But it may help others.

Diagnosis confusing, frightening

"It's very, very costly," Mrs. Burns said of feeding and providing medicine for a child with CF.

Afflicted children eat more than normal because they don't utilize the food — it slips right through them; their lungs are working harder, so they burn up more calories than normal children; and the protein most children take in for growth is used by CF children just to live, she said.

WHEN TYLER was smaller, he went through a bottle of enzymes a week. Each bottle cost $18. Predigestive formula, which lasted about three days, cost $10. CF children often are put in the hospital, with stays averaging 10 to 21 days.

Tyler, who now has about three bowel movements a day, is given three times the number of vitamins a child would take normally.

According to CFF literature, some patients take as many as 40 to 60 pills a day. The annual cost of an individual's treatment and care can range from $6,000 to $12,000.

The Burnses told medical and nutritional costs for Tyler could run as much as $30,000 a year.

"In one year's time, we've seen how much it has damaged us finanicially," Mrs. Burns said.

"We're doing OK," Burns said. "But there have got to be a lot of CF parents that don't have enough money. I know we're better off than some."

Last year, legislation was passed which covers insurance for CF patients indefinitely, Mrs. Burns said. Previously, CF patients weren't covered if they lived to be adults.

CF adult patients have a hard time, Mrs. Burns pointed out. College is expensive with the medical burden and often many days of education and work are lost when a CF patient requires hospitalization.

Because Tyler's CF is related primarily to digestive problems, many expenses associated with respiratory problems were eliminated.

Besides the extra enzymes, vitamins and salt added to each meal and snack, Tyler is given physical therapy twice a day when he's healthy; four times a day when he is ill.

In the percussion exercises, the child is placed in six positions for two minutes each, with his head lower than his body. His parents deliver firm pats on the back to dislodge mucous in his lungs. He then spits it up.

Also, he uses a breathing machine for respiratory therapy, which replaces the "mist tent" used in the past.

The respiratory and physical therapy are referred to in the Burns family as "breathing and beating," Burns said, with a grin.

WHEN TYLER was diagnosed and treated in Houston, his parents went with him.

"I think his hospital stay there was as much for Deni and me as it was for him," Burns said.

"We had a week to ourselves alone there that we had to come to grips with it," Mrs. Burns said. "We had a week before we had to come back and face family and friends — a week to get it together. After we got over the shock and the crying, parents (of CF patients) came in to offer little tidbits (about feeding and therapy)."

"It's normal for us now," Burns said. "We're just taking an extra hour or two out of the day for treatments."

The decision to have more children is difficult for parents who carry the CF gene. The Burnses think about it daily.

"We argue about it," Burns said.

"I want one," Mrs. Burns said.

"I want to adopt," he said. "I can understand why she wants to carry it — but I'm not ready to take another gamble.

"It's a very big chance," he said. "But you better be ready to lose if you're going to play the game."

"It is a big question in our lives," his wife agreed.

East Texas minister's probation revoked

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A judge has revoked the probation of an East Texas minister convicted of insurance fraud, saying the man had set up another "con operation."

Louis Z. Houston, a 57-year-old minister and retired schoolteacher, was sentenced to one year in prison Friday after his probation was revoked.

U.S. District Judge Eldon Mahon said his action was based on evidence that Houston borrowed money from Waco banks and took out credit disability insurance to pay back the loans in case he became disabled.

Authorities said he then told the Fort Worth insurance company he was disabled and the company made about $5,000 in loan payments over six months.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Gerhard Kleinschmidt said that at the same time, Houston was working as a minister for a church in Marshall, being paid $540 a month.

"You've just been involved in so many schemes. And this was a designed, planned scheme to get you money you were not entitled to receive," Mahon said.

Houston pleaded guilty to four counts of a 14-count mail fraud indictment in 1978. Evidence at the trial showed Houston had taken out insurance policies on elderly people, including his own parishioners. Prosecutors said he falsified the ages of those covered — showing one 87-year-old woman to be 18, for example — named himself as beneficiary and then collected the awards when they died.

Mahon sentenced Houston to two concurrent two-year sentences and two concurrent four-year sentences.

Houston served 13 months of the two-year term, then was placed on probation for the four-year term.

Mahon said various delays and complications prevented him from ruling until this week on the probation revocation, even though the evidence against Houston was presented in May.

According to that evidence, Houston began to open accounts in Waco two months after he was placed on probation. Prosecutors said Houston then took out loans totaling $10,400, using the cash as collateral, and took out credit disability policies on the loans with Transport Life Insurance Co. of Fort Worth.

Houston had been working as a minister at a Waco church, but in August 1981 told his probation officer he had been transferred to the Miles Chapel Methodist Church in Marshall.

At the same time, authorities say, he told the insurance company he had become disabled by a bone and joint degenerative disease and the company could begin making the loan payments.

Houston also has been collecting disability payments from a teachers retirement fund. He retired in December 1978.

When Mahon had finished hearing the evidence at the probation revocation hearing in May, the judge said: "It's a con operation. That's what it appears to be ... And of all people to be doing that — a retired schoolteacher and minister."

Midland couple reports burglary; Vandals sought

Burglars entered a Midland couple's house while they slept Friday night and made off with cash and jewelry worth $10,500.

James McNeal of 906 Douglas told police he and his wife were awakened by their kitchen light about 5:30 a.m. Saturday and discovered someone had gone through her purse.

The purse had been left on a kitchen counter and contained several credit cards — which were also stolen along with the money and jewelry.

McNeal said all the lights had been turned off before he and his wife retired for the night. Entry was apparently gained through the garage.

In other police activity, four youths were held for juvenile authorities after two officers on patrol Friday said they stopped to investigate when they noticed one of the juveniles carrying a large cloth sack.

The sack contained 31 rolls of toilet paper valued at $13.10. Police said the youths admitted taking the toilet paper from Alamo Junior High at 3800 W. Storey.

Thirty-one westside residents reported that windows were broken out of their parked vehicles Friday night. Most of the damage was done with BB or pellet guns. No total damage estimate was immediately available.

According to the DPS, Hudson was driving a 1980 Ford eastbound in the westbound lane of 80 when Ms. Hudson's vehicle collided with Batie's car at a crossover.

Couple has no complaints with American neighbors

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

No one should complain about their neighbors until they've lived next door to former Ugandan dictator Idi Amin — like Sadru and Gulshan Pirani once did in Kampala, the capital of Uganda.

Midlander in Profile

Now safely ensconced in Midland, where they own and operate Zenith Cleaners on West Illinois Avenue, the couple can relax and reflect on the years they lived next door to a man whose soldiers almost gunned down their 2-year-old son. He had pointed a toy rifle at them one day in 1967.

"They were about to shoot him when our maid intervened," said the 44-year-old Mrs. Pirani, who watched in horror from a window in her house. "The maid said, 'He is only a boy and it is only a toy.'

"Like Amin, his guards were dumb and trigger-happy. He was huge — like a gorilla. When he stood in front of you, it was like a screen. He was an uncouth, ignorant man who burped all the time, even on TV.

"HE WAS MOST unpleasant, most uncultured. People only talked to him because he was president."

Of East Indian ancestry, the Piranis — both of whom are multi-lingual — were born and raised in Uganda, have been married 25 years and are the parents of three children.

Their grandparents settled in Uganda around the turn of the century and established themselves in various business activities, including import-export firms.

Amin was a high-ranking officer in the Ugandan army before he rose to power and declared himself "president for life," said Pirani.

Like his grandfather, the 46-year-old Pirani was involved in numerous business activities in the East African country, which is about the size of Texas and lies south of Zaire and Sudan.

"It's one of the most beautiful countries on earth," said Mrs. Pirani. "The mountains. Waterfalls. Lake Victoria. The beginnings of the Nile River."

Midlanders Sadru Pirani and his wife, Gulshan, recall the traumatic years they spent living next door to former Ugandan dictator Idi Amin, whose soldiers almost gunned down the couple's 2-year-old son because he pointed a toy rifle at them.

ANOTHER HARROWING experience suffered under the influence of Amin came as Mrs. Pirani was driving home one afternoon.

"The car in front of me was going slow. It was like any other car. There was no identification. I didn't notice who was inside. So I passed it and it followed me and forced me off the road.

"The driver, who was alone, got out and cocked a pistol right in my face. He was an army officer who got insulted because someone had passed him.

"I was very humble. I said, 'I'm very sorry, officer. I didn't know who you were.' He had on a uniform, but no hat. That's why I couldn't tell who he was when he was in the car.

"The apology must have made him feel good," she reflected. "He didn't shoot. But it was not uncommon to see bodies lying on the streets before dawn. Who killed them or what happened to the bodies, nobody ever knew."

Still another indication of life under Amin — who allegedly murdered four of his wives — occurred to some of Piranis' friends when a Ugandan officer came to the door of their friends' house and told them to shut off the music on the radio.

The woman protested, saying, "Why? No crime has been committed."

With that, the officer beat her so badly she had to be hospitalized, said Mrs. Pirani. "Afterward, our friends left the country. They decided it was no place to live."

THE PIRANIS left, too — but not of their own volition. They, along with 60,000 other people of East Indian ancestry, were expelled in August 1972.

"Amin claimed that the reason for the expulsion was because he had a vision from God," said Pirani. "The real reason was that he had overspent on defense programs and had huge personal expenses from the treasury.

"We were scapegoats to draw people's attention away from the economic conditions."

Mrs. Pirani added, "He promised his people they would get all the property and businesses left behind. But only the army people got the property. The people became even more desperate. With the expulsion, there was no one to operate the businesses. There were no jobs. There was no security."

No one was allowed to take anything with them when they were forced out of Uganda, according to Pirani, whose wife said, "Our daughter was 4 months old, and they opened her diaper at the airport to see if we were carrying any money or valuables out of the country."

From Uganda, the Piranis went back to England — where they had done their university work. They then moved to Vancouver, British Columbia.

Everything they had worked for and accumulated was gone — including a newly constructed, multi-million-dollar razor blade factory that was about to go into production for a large American firm.

"We were branded as refugees when we landed in Canada," said Pirani.

The couple worked at various jobs, saved money (one means of saving money was to go without coffee at work because it cost 20 cents a cup), and came to Midland 13 months ago.

THEIR SAVINGS — coupled with a loan from a local bank — made it possible for them to purchase Zenith Cleaners.

As a measure of their success here, they'll be opening a branch on Big Spring Street Monday, and another branch at Wadley and Midkiff next month.

The Piranis probably still would be in Uganda if it weren't for Amin — who himself is now in exile in Saudi Arabia because of the Entebbe incident, according to Pirani.

"We were very happy there (Uganda)," said Mrs. Pirani. "The climate, the greenery, the down-to-earth lifestyle."

But they're not at all sorry they left. "The U.S. has afforded our children the opportunity for a good education in a corruption-free, fear-free society," said Pirani. "Also, the human rights. That is most important."

Mrs Pirani nodded in agreement: "There, you couldn't even play a radio in your own home."

Answer Line

I have two questions: (1) Where can I obtain a catalog containing the description and approximate value of Carnival Glass? and (2) What are the addresses for our Senator and State Representative for this area? — E.D.

ANSWER: Answer Line checked with antique dealers in Midland and was informed that the best source for information concerning antiques, including glass, and prices is "Kovel's Antiques and Collectibles Price Guide." This book is available in the Reference Department at the Midland County Public Library, which also has a copy available for checking out by library cardholders.

The book also can be obtained at Walden books in Midland Park Mall.

It probably would be a good idea to check the copy at the library before deciding to purchase one, in the event the publication does not contain the information you need.

In answer to your second question: State Sen. Bill Sims of the 25th Senatorial District, P.O. Box 2290, San Angelo, Texas 76902, and State Rep. Tom Craddick of the 68th Representative District, 3108 Stanolind St., Midland, Texas 79701.

I would like to know why weather-worn and torn American flags are being flown at the Hogan Park Golf Course? — B.L.

ANSWER: According to George Logan, director of the City Parks and Recreation Department, employees at the Hogan Park Golf Course have "been so busy taking care of the average 300 golfers who play daily from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. they haven't had a chance to look up and notice the condition of the flags."

Mr. Logan also thanks you for informing the department of the situation, and that the flags are being changed out as soon as possible.

I keep hearing the word furlong used in horse racing. What is a furlong? — N.G.

ANSWER: A furlong, according to the dictionary, is a unit of distance equal to 220 yards.

I am a senior citizen and have a nice home that I take pride in and work very hard to keep up. What I want to know is what can be done about neighborhood teen-agers who constantly harass me?

They constantly ride their bikes through my yard, causing big bare paths where they cut through. They play kick football and baseball in my yard even though they have yards of their own. I have had a window broken from the shooting of sling shots, and the teenagers get under my window and make all kinds of loud noises and unpleasant vulgar remarks, as well as breaking off my flowers and bushes. This goes on day and night. I have raised three children of my own so it isn't that I don't know or understand them. I have tried to teach my children to be considerate of other people, especially older people as some day they will be old, too.

I have asked them nicely not to do these things, but they just laugh at me. I have even tried talking to the parents, but that hasn't done any good either. I cannot think much of a parent who will not do anything about this. It is a pity people cannot learn to be considerate.

I only hope that when these parents and their children become senior citizens they do not have to go through anything like this.

Please tell me what can be done or whom I can talk to? — N.R.

ANSWER: Since you state in your letter that you already have tried the alternatives of talking to the offenders and their parents to no avail, contact the Midland Police Department about the offenses and a patrolman will be sent to talk to the children and their parents. The department's number is 683-4281.

Senioritis: Mixture of confidence, confusion reigns in students' veins

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

"Senioritis is alive and well and living in me," Lee High senior Celeste Elig declared.

The feeling of being a senior is like no other — a combination of elation, sadness, fear, pressure and confusion. For some it's the end of the tunnel, for others the end of life as they know it.

Senioritis may manifest itself in skipped classes and unfinished homework assignments. Others dedicate themselves even more to studies and activities — whether it's to further future plans or bury themselves in work to avoid having to face the dreaded unknown.

"It does really feel different to be a senior," Celeste said.

"The first day of school I felt I was on top of everything. I was a big senior," Jada Parker, another LHS senior, agreed.

BUT EVEN FOR students like Celeste, who has very definite post-graduation plans, senioritis can be frightening and overwhelming at times.

"There's so many things going through your mind, and most of them are in direct opposition to each other. In some ways it's your best year and in some ways it's your worst. I mean, I don't want to be an adult — how many happy adults do you know?

Celeste said senioritis is usually accompanied by "major motivational problems. In a way you're pushing, because what you're doing is really important. But you're also thinking, 'Hey, I'm a senior and this is the last year I can really goof off.' You feel like this is your last chance to be totally irresponsible. But it's not, because by your senior year it's too late.

"If I was a junior and felt this way I don't know if I could stick it out," she said. "Still, I really like being a senior. Just with the title you almost acquire a certain self-assurance you didn't have before. I wouldn't give this year up for anything in the world. You've got to enjoy it while you can because next year you will start all over again at the bottom."

Celeste plans to attend Stanford University, major in premedicine and eventually become an obstetrician.

"MOST OF MY friends aren't so positive. I have a friend who is good in drama and likes to dance, but to say 'I'm going to New York' is terrifying. The thought of going out and getting a job that I'd have to do every day of my life — that's scary. To go to Stanford almost seems safe."

But even the best-laid plans come with some apprehensions. "If I don't get accepted into Stanford, I don't know what I'm going to do," she said. Even being at the head of her class with a 4.5 grade point average does not guarantee success.

"It's scary thinking about not being sheltered by Mom and Dad," Jada admitted. "The longest I've ever been away from my parents is three days.

"A lot of my friends aren't sure about what they want to do," she continued. "If, by the time you're a senior, you don't know what you want, it's pretty scary."

Although Jada plans to go to college after graduation, she isn't sure which one she will attend or what she will study.

One of the reasons graduation is frightening is because a large part of a student's life revolves around school — not only academically, but most friends and outside activities also are school-related. For some, fear of the unknown and an unwillingness to move on are difficult to overcome.

"I have a few good friends I'll miss when I go," Celeste said, "but it's not like I'm totally separated. A lot of people who graduated last year, the really popular types, are still hanging around. They still go to every game. You wouldn't think they'd have any problems at college, but they just can't let go."

"It's kind of sad," Jada said.

Lee senior counselor Margaret Williams feels students can avoid being overwhelmed by graduation by making plans as undergraduates.

"WE HAVE PLANS now of making a written, four-year plan that starts in eighth grade," she explained. "I think it'll make them think about what they have to do. So many of them just float along and take what we tell them to take and don't think about college and the future. I think it'll make them think about where they're going and courses they should be taking."

She also said students are encouraged to take a challenging class load their senior year. "I think part of the problem is most seniors only have senior English as a required course their senior year and the rest are electives. We try to impress on them not to fool around their senior year. If they take it easy their senior year it's harder to get used to college.

"We have fewer students dropping out the senior year," she continued. "If you can keep them through the junior year they usually stay with it." However, she added, problems such as drug and alcohol abuse often increase once students reach their senior year, and she speculated this may their way of coping with fears and pressures associated with graduation.

The high schools have several programs and staff people available to make the transition from high school to college a little less traumatic.

"Countdown to College" is a guide to college planning and selection. The Guidance Information System is a computer program which can answer virtually any question a student has about any college in the U.S., its requirements and programs or various occupations. College Forum brings together students, parents and about 200 representatives of post-secondary institutions across the nation.

Video cassettes and college handbooks are also available, as well as general information on survival after graduation.

"I think the more familiar they are with the campus and the people and the more they know what to expect, the better they'll make the adjustment," Ms. Williams said.

Verbal skills stutter; Math adding up

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

NEW YORK — High school seniors scored slightly lower on the verbal half of the Scholastic Aptitude Test in 1982-83 but improved their math scores for the second consecutive year, sending mixed signals on whether public schools were really recovering.

SAT math scores for the 1 million students taking the college entrance exam averaged 468, one point higher than the year before. Verbal scores fell one point, to an average of 425. The SAT, scored on a scale of 200 to 800, is designed to be of equal difficulty each year.

The scores gave educators less to cheer about than last year's results, when math and verbal SAT scores both rose for the first time in 19 years. Those gains had been cited frequently as evidence that the decades-long slide in the quality of public schooling was reversing.

But the latest SATs raised doubts about such a reversal. Indeed, math and verbal scores haven't changed by more than a handful of points, up or down, in the past six years. And the scores are a far cry from 1963 averages of 502 in math and 478 in verbal before those scores began their downward spiral.

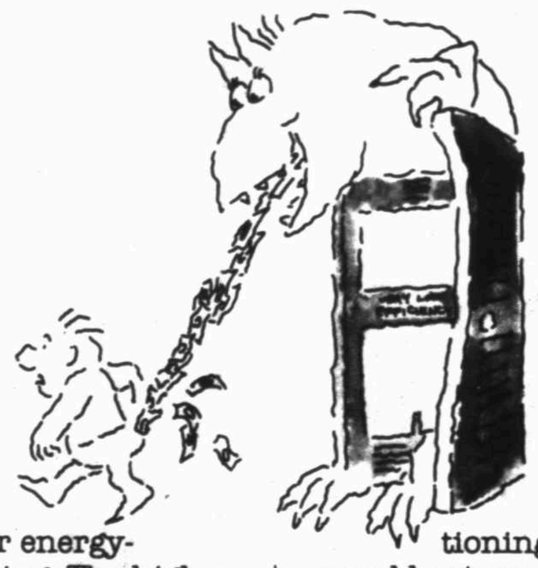
"The rise in this year's mathematics score, coupled with last year's increase, seems to imply that positive things are happening in the nation's schools," said College Board president George H. Hanford. "However, as this year's flurry of reports on the state of American education suggests, it is equally obvious that much more remains to be done if we are to raise the level of secondary school performance of our students."

Robert G. Cameron, the board's executive director of research and development, attributed improvement in the math section to better classroom instruction.

The drop in verbal scores was harder to explain, he said, because language skills, more than math, are shaped by outside influences.

"This year's slight drop in verbal scores, plus the implications of the long-term decline, may mean that schools need to pay closer attention to developing such skills as reading comprehension and other verbal reasoning abilities."

Is your heating/ cooling system gobbling up too much money?



If electric bills are taking too big a bite out of your budget, consider equipment with a higher energy-efficiency rating. The higher the rating, the less electricity it takes to heat and cool your home. And using less electricity will help hold down your bill.

High-efficiency equipment costs more, but when the equipment qualifies, Texas Electric will give you a bonus check to help pay the difference. So if you're planning to install a room unit, or replace central air conditioning or a year-round heat pump, ask your dealer about equipment that qualifies for a bonus check from Texas Electric.

And put money back in your pocket.

Debate to open UTPB series

A debate between ultra conservative G. Gordon Liddy and ultra liberal Timothy Leary will open a series of lectures on "The Power of the State/The Freedom of the Individual" at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Leary was, in the turbulent years of the 1960s the nation's leading drug advocate. Liddy is a former FBI agent who served as General Counsel to the Committee to Re-Elect President Nixon and was imprisoned for his part in the Watergate conspiracy. The two will debate each other Nov. 3 and afteward hold a question and answer session with the audience.

The theme for the lecture series comes from public interest in George Orwell's predictions in his book "1984." He predicted by that year the world would see widespread warfare, and governments, even in the U.S., would exercise almost total control over the people.

A lecture Feb. 16 will feature nuclear physicist Stanton T. Friedman, and political scientist and futurist Leon C. Martel will lecture in March. Further information on the series is available from the Office of Student Life at UTPB.

Ranch to honor couple

SAN ANGELO — West Texas Boys Ranch invites the public to today's dedication ceremonies of the facility's newest cottage, which is named after Evelyn and Roy Minear of Midland.

The Midland couple is being honored in recognition of their 30 years of service to Boys Ranch.

"Through the years, the Minears have shown an undying dedication to the Ranch and have always been the first to rise to the challenging needs of the boys and the Ranch," said a WTBR spokesman.

The Minear Cottage will house 16 boys and two sets of houseparents. Like the Ruby Mabee Cottage, built in 1982, Minear Cottage gets away from the old dormitory-style living style and provides an atmosphere more congenial to family life.

Fund-raising efforts are under way for construction of a third new cottage. About $300,000 is still needed for that project.

WTBR is a non-profit ranch home caring for homeless, dependent and neglected boys. It is supported entirely by tax-deductible donations.

It is located 18 miles west of San Angelo on U.S. Highway 67. Today's ceremonies start at 2 p.m.

"DISTINCTIVE APARTMENT LIVING"
5101 North Avenue A

"It's good to have a place where you really like to live."

Debbie Allen talks about living at The Clusters:

"There's a lot of activity around here. Like this aerobics class.

"I can swim, play tennis, aerobics, jog. I can stay in good physical shape just living at my own house.

"I've lived here 8 months and I've been an apartment dweller for several years. I looked at several other complexes, but they were all the same...just four walls, a bathroom and a kitchen. This one is quite different. It has all the other luxuries."

No other Midland apartment community combines a multitude of activities with truly luxurious living. Featuring your choice of decorator wall coverings, side-by-side icemaker refrigerators, built-in micro-waves, ceiling fans, dishwashers, washers and dryers, trash compactors, mini-blinds and French doors to patios/balconies.

Come and visit and you'll see why Debbie Allen says, "I would really hate to move from here...I love it."

BETTER THAN A REPO

Because its a local HOW Builder's home in Wydewood and not an out of town banker's. Before you write that check to solve the bankers problems, take a look at this beautiful, 3 bedroom, 2 bath, 2 living areas, wet bar, all masonry fireplace, whirlpool appliances, fenced backyard, and a builder that stands behind what he builds. $88,500 and builder says, "I'll pay the points and the buy-down."

Call Dan Ellington at Regency Realtors for details.

Writer searches for best home-owned restaurants in Texas

Text by Diane Booth

Mary Frances Beverley has savored steaks in San Marcos, buttered biscuits in Bryan, sampled sausages in New Braunfels, enjoyed enchiladas in El Paso and feasted on fritters in Fredericksburg.

The Midland freelance writer is eating her way around the state to research her book, "Home-Town Restaurants of Texas."

The guidebook will detail 100 restaurants which Mrs. Beverley believes are some of the best in the state.

"I wanted to put a book together that proved there are 100 restaurants in the state that do all the right things."

The book will be geared to travelers and newcomers, she said. No restaurants in the interiors of large cities will be included in the directory. Each restaurant description will include brief directions. "I wanted to make it easy for them to find these places."

Although the quality and taste of meals served at restaurants is vital, she said, food is not the only consideration.

Mrs. Beverley's book will feature established, home-owned restaurants throughout the state. The type of food does not matter, she said, but the decor must be attractive, the employees friendly and courteous and the service exceptional.

The author said she is particularly looking for "consistent, visible evidence of the owners' personal interest in their customers' dining pleasure.

"A good restaurant owner has got to care about people," she said. Three local examples, she said, are Luigi's, La Bodega and Robert's Copper Pot.

"Their secret of success if so obvious," she said, "they care about their guests."

Mrs. Beverley weighs all the factors before deciding whether to include a restaurant in her book. But she added, "A restaurant's surroundings, decor, lighting, noise level, music, all contribute as much to enjoyable dining as the food."

The Midlander has used publications such as Texas Highways, Southern Living and Texas Monthly in some of her research. Friends and acquaintances have provided her with names of dozens of eating places throughout the state. "Everyone has a favorite restaurant," she said.

The Texas Restaurant Association is a source and she sent letters to about 50 state chambers of commerce requesting names of their best restaurants.

"I purposely tried to get a good mixture of food so people will have a choice," Mrs. Beverley said. Aside from trying to avoid gaining weight, she said, maintaining a balance of food types is the only difficult part of her research.

Restaurants range from Allen's in Sweetwater, which serves family- style cooking at moderate prices to Jeffrey's in Austin, which specializes in expensive continental cuisine.

The writer divided the state map into five sections, the Panhandle and High Plains, West Texas and Rio Grande Valley, Northcentral Texas and the coast.

Mary Frances Beverley is most comfortable working in her home when she takes a break from her travels. She is researching a book "Home-Town Restaurants of Texas," to be published next year by Gulf Publishing Company.

A state map hangs on the wall to the left of her stove in her bright green kitchen at 107 Club Drive. The sections are determined by different colored felt marking pens. The yellow dots mark restaurants she plans to visit.

Her culinary travels began in her new black and white four-wheel-drive station wagon in June. Mrs. Beverley targeted the Panhandle region first since it was the smallest of the five areas. "I wanted to establish a pattern."

To date she has selected 50 of the restaurants she will include in her book. "Almost all restaurants have met my expectations," she said.

Her deadline to choose 50 more is January 31, 1984. The guidebook is scheduled to be published by Gulf Publishing Company of Houston sometime next year. She starts a two-week tour of the Dallas-Ft. Worth area this week.

Before she hits the road, the writer plans her itinerary, based on the recommendations she receives. But sometimes she discovers a restaurant which isn't on her list.

"I can't allow myself the indulgence of too much exploring," she said, "Even though I have found some of my best restaurants that way."

Her typical work day starts with lunch. Mrs. Beverley requests a table against a wall so she can view other customers and the service they receive and take notes inconspicuously. "I'm not just reviewing how they treat me," she said. "I watch how other guests are treated."

After dining and observing long enough to assess the restaurant's food, decor, employees and service, she takes notes in her red plastic notebook.

She sends questionnaires to prospective restaurants and requests the owners complete and return them. She reviews the forms prior to her visits.

She returns to her hotel room and writes a report on the restaurant. She repeats the same steps for dinner. She usually compiles her findings the following morning.

"I'm not in the position of passing judgment on the restaurant," she said. "When I go I always know to expect the best. Each restaurant is already highly recommended by at least one source as being a superior restaurant."

Restaurants listed in her book will be accompanied by her own black and white photographs and illustrations provided by the publisher. The book format will be similar to another book in the Lone Star guidebook series, "A Guide to Historic Texas Inns and Hotels," by Ann Ruff.

Some of the restaurants to expect in Mrs. Beverley's guidebook are The Alpine Cottage in Roundrock, The Yellow Ribbon in Kerrville, The Settlement Inn in Leon Springs, The Grist Mill Restaurant in Gruene and the Country Barn Steakhouse in Amarillo.

The Amarillo steakhouse, which resembles a big red barn, wasn't on Mrs. Beverley's list of restaurants to investigate but she decided to try one of their steaks and loved every bite, she said.

Not only is the food, decor and atmosphere wonderful, she said, the owner is a colorful woman who has a dress code that forbids women from wearing rollers and men must remove their hats.

Mrs. Beverley asked the restauranteur how she enforces the hat rule in the Panhandle city, and was told Beverley was told, 'Real Cowboys don't wear hats indoors."

The Alpine Cottage in Roundrock, north of Austin, is a German restaurant run by a woman from Munich, Germany. Mrs. Beverley praised the eatery for its authentic food and weekend entertainment that includes a tenor who plays piano and leads sing-a-longs with "a full beer stein."

The Settlement Inn has the tastiest barbecue she has found, she said, and The Grist Mill Restaurant serves the best chicken-fried steak she has ever eaten.

But the restaurant at the top of her list is The Yellow Ribbon. "If there's one perfect restaurant in the state," she said, "This has got to be it." The restaurant is located in an 1800s vintage Victorian home in Kerrville.

Mrs. Beverley has concentrated on her writing career for the past five years, since her retirement from 23 years of teaching English and speech in Midland schools.

She began her career writing plays and articles for teenagers and a textbook on conversation for teens for a speech class she taught.

Last year the Midland author published a cookbook and guide to entertaining, "The Entertaining Woman."

She has written articles for state and national publications incuding Texas Highways and New Mexico magazine and local and regional magazines in the Permian Basin including The Midlander, Towns West and Midland, the chamber of commerce publication.

Meeting new people is a bonus in her work, she said, not to mention story ideas she discovers for future articles. Asked why she has undertaken such an ambitious project, Mrs. Beverley said, "I'm a little like the mountain and the mountain climber. It hadn't been done. I felt there was a need for it."

Group says some drugs bad

By The Associated Press

A consumer health group says many of the over-the-counter drugs on the market today have unsafe or ineffective ingredients, and claims Americans waste billions of dollars a year on these medicines.

The charge — which is disputed by the manufacturers — comes from the Public Citizen Health Research Group, founded by Ralph Nader, in a new book, "Over The Counter Pills That Don't Work." It is based on reports from advisory panels established by the Food and Drug Administration as part of a still-unfinished drug review that began in 1972 and on additional information obtained by the Health Research Group.

Dr. Sidney Wolfe, head of the organization, said in a telephone interview that one-third of the 466 best-selling over-the-counter drugs have ingredients which the FDA has found "lacking in safety and effectiveness." Another one-third, he said, contain ingredients which the Health Research Group claims have not been proved safe or effective.

John T. Walden, a spokesman for The Proprietary Association, which represents manufacturers of over-the-counter drugs, said Wolfe was distorting the figures, although he conceded that some medicines do have ingredients that the FDA has found unsafe or ineffective. But he said there are no "serious" questions about the safety of the products.

Several ingredients found to be unsafe by the FDA have been removed from the OTC market since the drug review was started in 1972. They include hexachlorophene, zirconium and methapyrilene.

No Dieting — Eat All You Want

BEVERLY HILLS, CA. (Special) — An amazing new "super" grapefruit pill has recently been developed and perfected that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose at least 10 pounds in 10 days. Best of all, it allows you to "eat as much as you want of your favorite foods and still lose a pound a day or more starting from the very first day until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

This "super" grapefruit pill is a dramatically improved version of the world famous grapefruit diet. It is far more effective than the original and eliminates "the mess, fuss, and high cost of eating half a fresh grapefruit at every meal."

No Dieting—"Pill Does All the Work"

According to the manufacturer, "the pill itself does all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation "diet menus" to follow, NO calorie counting, NO exercise, and NO hunger pangs." It is 100% safe. You simply take the pill with a glass of water before each meal and the amazing combination of powerful ingredients are so effective they take over and you start losing weight immediately.

Pill Contains ALL U.S. Daily Vitamin Requirements

The powerful and unique combination of ingredients are what make this a "super-pill". It contains highly potent grapefruit concentrate and a diuretic to help eliminate bloat and puffiness. No need to take any vitamins to maintain your good health and energy. The pill is fortified with ALL (100%) of the U.S. Government daily vitamin requirements.

Contains Japanese 'Glucomannan'

Each pill also contains an amazingly effective amount of "glucomannan", the remarkable natural dietary fiber discovery from Japan (used successfully for over 1500 years) that expands in your stomach and gives you a full and satisfied feeling all day long.

The super-pill is already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

FABRIC SECRETS

Buttons can be used to accent and enhance a garment. Although they are available in a wide variety of shapes, materials and colors, buttons are made basically in two shapes. A "sew-through" button has two to four holes for attaching the button to the garment. A "shank button", on the other hand, has a shank behind the button through which the attaching thread is sewn. This latter button allows room for the overlapping fabric enabling the button to rest on top of the button-hole. Button size is determined by "lines". There are forty lines to the inch and a chart is usually provided to determine actual sizing.

At LEGGETTS FABRICS you will find everything you need to complete your garment in a professional manner including a wide selection of buttons. Many times the finishing touches such as your choice of buttons make the difference between an ordinary garment and one that is truly outstanding. We are located at 1541 Parkway, Odessa, 362-8255 and No.9 Plaza Shopping Center, Garfield at Wadley in Midland, 683-3101. Hours: Mon.-Sat. 1-6. "Quality, Your Only Real Bargain".

DIET CENTER®

"The Natural Way to Lose Weight!"

When you decide to lose weight,

COMPARE!

There are hundreds of ways to lose weight. Diet Center suggests that before you start any reducing program, you compare. Consult your doctor. Talk to people who have been on the programs you are considering. Ask yourself if this is a plan you can live with, one that will enable you to keep weight off once you have lost it. If you will do this, we are confident that you will select Diet Center. The following is a basic introduction to the Diet Center Program.

we don't:	we do:
Use shots or drugs to stimulate weight loss. This would not conform to our totally natural approach.	Employ a 100% natural food supplement that stabilizes the blood sugar level and eliminates hunger.
Use prepackaged foods. We know that in order to maintain your weight loss, you must learn to plan your own meals.	Provide a comprehensive education in food selection and preparation techniques from natural sources.
Rely upon ketosis or any other unhealthful, physical state to promote weight loss.	Provide 100% of the daily nutrient requirements as outlined by the U.S. RDA and the 7 U.S. Dietary goals.
Make unrealistic claims as to the speed or effectiveness of our weight-loss program.	Achieve an average weight loss of 17 to 25 pounds in 6 weeks, a rate that can be sustained as needed.
Use computers or group therapy to overcome the uniquely personal problem of excess weight.	Meet daily, in private, with each dieter to determine and solve individual problems and chart progress.
Employ celebrities to present Diet Center in our advertising messages.	Publish unsolicited testimonials from real people who have overcome real weight problems at Diet Center.
Charge for any additional services beyond our basic reducing phase of the program.	Provide weekly classes in nutrition and behavior modification and a lifetime maintenance program, free of charge.
Require contracts or charge more than a fair price for the honest service that is rendered.	Encourage dieters to remain on the program only as long as they feel they are receiving their money's worth.
Employ high-pressure sales tactics to "sign you up" on our program. When you are ready, we are ready.	Offer a free, introductory consultation to supply you with the information needed to make your own decision.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Begonia leaves mimic calla flowers

By ELVIN McDONALD

When the new leaves of a begonia unfurl partly or entirely white, so as to resemble a small white calla lily, we say it is a calla lily begonia. Another name for this attractive house plant, which appeared as a mutation sometime before 1920 in the U.S.A., is youth-and-old-age.

If you should be looking for a small challenge to improve your indoor gardening game this coming fall and winter, I suggest a calla lily begonia, any or all these cultivars of the wax or everblooming Begonia semperflorens:

'Calla Queen' is extra strong-growing, with large green leaves at the base and new ones of pure white that form a perfect calla lily in miniature. The flowers are large, single and rose-pink.

'Cherry Sundae' is another vigorous plant having pure white and green laves. Large cherry-red flowers appear in profusion.

'Ruby Jewel' has small bright red semidouble flowers above white "calla" leaves. It too grows thriftily.

There are numerous other cultivars in this class of begonia, best known of which is 'Charm,' which has leopard-like patches of cream and gold on a bright green leaf. The pale pink blossoms appear constantly in great profusion on a plant that adapts well to a variety of light conditions, from sun to shade. One mail source for all is Logee's Greenhouses, 55 North St., Danielson, Conn. 06239 (catalog $2.50).

Success with calla lily begonias depends on giving them enough sun to bring out compact growth and, in most forms, rosy or red edging on the white leaves. Soggy soil will rot the juicy stems. I recommend potting in pure unmilled sphagnum moss or in a mixture of two parts well-rotted leaf mold to one each of sand (or perlite) and garden soil.

New leaves on the calla lily begonia resemble calla blooms.

Keep between nicely moist and on the dry side. Enjoy!

Q. About three years ago I bought a small croton plant. It has thrived in my sunny apartment, outgrown three pots and is nearly 7 feet tall. Why do the leaves keep dropping, one every month or so, despite general good health? I water about twice a week as the leaves droop if neglected.

A. If croton gets dry enough to droop, older leaves will drop prematurely. Encourage a bushier habit by cutting or pinching out the main growing tip. Air-layering is another way to reduce the amount of leafless stem.

(Details are in my newsletter: Send 50 cents coin and a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope with "Air Layer" written on the back flap to Elvin McDonald Reader Service, Box R, Niagara Falls, N.Y. 14305).

I hate to bring up the subject, but red spider-mites often attack croton. For this reason, keep the plant extra clean indoors; shower well with tepid water in sink or tub once a week, being sure to direct the spray strongly toward the leaf undersides.

Q. What care does the dwarf pomegranate need?

A. At least a half day of direct sun, warmth (60-80F.), and soil kept between evenly moist and slightly on the dry side. Dwarf pomegranate needs frequent pruning to encourage shapely habit. White flies are also likely to invade; spray every three days with Safer's Insecticidal Soap. Two or three times yearly scratch a teaspoon or two or dolomitic limestone around the plant in order to keep the soil suitably "sweet" or alkaline.

Q. I live in a high-rise apartment; will a ladsyslipper orchid grow for me?

A. Yes, if you have a bright window where African violets thrive and flower. Select a mottleleaf paphiopedilum, the botanical way of saying "ladyslipper orchid."

Q.T.: Armstrong also notes deep planting discourages daffodil increase, shallow encourages it. For rapid inrease from an expensive cultivar, plant shallowly in loose, friable soil and divide every year or two.

DEAR ABBY

Claim needs proof

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm sure this is not a unique problem, but I can't sleep because of it. Are there any civil laws that prohibit an ex-wife from shacking up with a boyfriend in front of her 10-year-old child?

My daughter is being forced to live like this, and it seems that by Florida state law, I can do nothing about it. Is there no sanity even with our civil laws?

I love my daughter and can give her a better life, but her mother got custody of her simply because she is her mother. Thanks for listening. — HEARTSICK IN FLORIDA

DEAR HEARTSICK: I'm no lawyer, but it seems reasonable to assume that in order to gain custody of your daughter, you would be required to prove that your ex-wife is an unfit mother, or that your daughter is suffering from some kind of child abuse or neglect.

Since the deleterious effect of living with a mother who is "shacking up with her boyfriend" cannot be easily assessed at this point, other aspects of child-rearing, such as attention to the child's health, upbringing, education, discipline and how much love she's getting, are probably the determining factors.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 17-year-old girl. I have always wanted a car and have been saving up for one for a long time. I already have a driver's license, and I'm now finally able to get a car. The problem: My boyfriend, who has his own car, told me if I got a car he would break up with me. We've been going together for two years and I really do love him.

He says if I get a car he would probably never find me at home. I don't think he trusts me. He thinks I might mess around behind his back.

What should I tell him? — WANTS WHEELS

DEAR WANTS: Tell him that when he gives up HIS wheels, you will give up all thoughts of having your own.

DEAR ABBY: For the first time in my life I can afford to have a cleaning woman, but there are a few things I need to know. I pay her by the hour.

She arrives at 8 a.m., and as soon as she gets here she prepares an elaborate breakfast for herself. She doesn't really start doing any work until 9 a.m.

Her luncheon routine takes another hour. She leaves my house at 4 p.m. Should she be paid for the two hours she takes to prepare and consume her breakfast and lunch? She's a nice woman and a good worker, but I feel as if I am being taken advantage of. Am I? Also, should I give her a Christmas present? — ELIZABETH, N.J., READER

DEAR READER: A person who is paid by the hour should arrive ready to work — not to prepare breakfast for herself. She should be given half an hour for lunch (on your time). A present of any kind is never imperative — it's optional.

Sources of first impressions vary

Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — What do you notice first about a person you've just met?

Obviously, if a gorgeous woman made her way across the room, a good number of observers would turn their heads. A particularly luxurious moustache, a billiard-ball head, a decolletage bordering on the dangerous or diamond-studded eyeglass frames would have the same effect.

The reason? The eye is drawn not only to the pleasing and aesthetic but also by the incongruous, the outrageous or by physical attributes deliberately overplayed or overemphasized.

Most people, however, aren't bald and don't resemble the likes of a Joan Collins or Bo Derek. There is no one specific thing about them that bowls over someone meeting them for the first time. The initial impression they make has, in a sense, nothing to do with their own best, or worst, characteristics. It depends, rather, on what the beholder looks for first.

YOUNG MEN AND WOMEN are, apparently and unsurprisingly, more apt to look first at the cliches of popular fiction — legs, bosoms, shoulders and hair, but as time goes by, sometimes as short a period as between the teens and the 20s, even the young become more sophisticated. This doesn't mean that legs and shoulders cease to register; it simply means that other things may take precedence.

What takes precedence varies, but very often it will be something that particularly relates to the person doing the viewing. And because human nature is somewhat perverse, the feature that is noticed first is frequently one that the viewer is most unhappy with in him or herself. Women whose heads and shoulders almost meet, and who yearn for a swanlike neck, are apt to focus their eyes immediately there on first meeting someone; a chinless man often looks at chins.

"I probably couldn't tell you what I notice first," says Lynne Coleman, 32, an artist.

BUT, AFTER GIVING IT a bit more serious thought, she says the first thing she notices when introductions are made is "the color of a person's hair and how the light plays on it, whether it's curly or straight, and I look to see what style it is."

For Coleman, the most obvious facial feature "is whether a person has freckles," she said. "I've always liked freckles."

But most important, she added, is the voice, which in telephone introductions is the only clue to a person's character.

"Lots of people have these great voices. There is a great fat guy; he's really obese, but he has the most wonderful voice."

EYE CONTACT, on the other hand, is important to Sgt. Richard Johncola, 40, of the Santa Monica Police Department. "I look at the eyes first. Whether a person looks you in the eye or looks away tells you a lot about his character."

He said he also tends to observe what a person is wearing as a clue to his personality. "I look at people and size them up, check them out for different things. I look at their type of clothing — it it's a hot, sunny day, why the guy is wearing a long-sleeved shirt. I do this even when I'm off duty. It's the kind of thing you can't turn on and off at will."

Bruce Furness, 26, is another who looks at eyes first, but for a different reason.

"I'm inclined to say the eyes are what I notice first because for most people the eyes tell a lot — whether you're sad, happy, confident, secretive, dynamic," he said.

ALTHOUGH FURNESS SAID he notices the eyes first in both sexes, when dealing with men in business he tends to take in other details.

"With men in business their posture is important, the firmness of their handshake, whether they're poised and well kept."

Marcia Nasatir is another who looks at eyes first.

"Actually, what I look for is to see whether they have crinkle lines around their eyes," said Nasatir, senior vice president, production, for 20th Century-Fox on the East Coast and in London. "It indicates whether they have a sense of humor, a sense of amusement about life."

Isandrea Loeb, 50, a psychologist, believes the eyes are truly the windows of the soul but that mouths are equally as important.

"I look at a person's smile and when I say smile, I mean the total expression — the way the eyes light up, the way a person shows you himself," she said.

THE SMILE CAN BE misleading, however, she said.

"Some people who smile are not really smiling. They don't mean what their smile is supposed to mean."

Author's small best seller reaps big profits

Copley News Service

Spencer Johnson, M.D., and author, likes things spelled out, stated with economy in writing, clearly understood.

Thus, when he decided to write a book on management, he and his co-author, Kenneth Blanchard, kept it to a spare 111 pages, appropriate to a book called "The One-Minute Manager."

He carries with him a checklist of 60 precise steps leading to the best-seller list.

Johnson follows his own advice.

The first two points on the list exhort the author to work out his or her goals, both literary and personal, and then to write out the goals. After several points involving evaluation of the need for a book and analysis of the market, the author is told to recheck the goals, then post them on the top of the typewriter.

In Johnson's case, the cards listing goals for his most recently written books, "The One-Minute Mother" and "The One-Minute Father," are posted on the top of his word processor.

His goals, according to the neatly typed business-size cards, include the desire to enjoy the benefits of really helping parents — and "to realize over $1 million in personal royalties."

A look at his new studio, offices with a view, perched high over La Jolla Cove in seaside Southern California, would indicate he is well on his way to the royalties goal.

He was whirling about, conferring with decorators on last-minute touches and unabashedly delighting in his new work environment, all made possible by the rousing success of the "One-Minute Manager," which has been No. 2 on The New York Times best-seller list for 44 weeks, is being translated into 14 languages, has been published in 650,000 hardback editions, will be marketed in audio and video cassettes, is due for softcover publication in October and already has two parodies, "The One-Minute Relationship" and the "One-Minute Lover."

CNS Photo

'One-Minute Manager' author Spencer Johnson: 'If there is a strong need and your book can give an answer that works, then you can make it a best seller.'

The visible signs of success are the sofa and love seat covered in a deep-rose pigskin; the very contemporary, off-white dramatic round conference table covered in laminated goat skin. Then there are the period pieces — desks and breakfront — and the unusual touches, such as a small chest embossed with a mosaic, an ancient cave painting — symbolic for him, Johnson says, because they were "one of the earliest forms of communication" — and a lamp covered with pieces of horn to remind him of Africa, although he has not yet been there.

"I wanted to combine high-tech and things with more life to them," he explained, walking about and showing things off.

He takes a visitor to see the wallpaper in the bathroom, a silver-on-black repeating pattern of mountains.

"Peaks and valleys," he says with delight.

It very nicely represents his theory that life is perpetually made up of peaks and valleys, but that the individual is a constant and can learn not to be destroyed by the ups and downs if he or she can learn to appreciate the present moment, all of which is expounded allegorically in another slim volume he wrote, "The Precious Present," which will be republished this year by Doubleday.

Johnson professes no surprise that his "One-Minute Manager" book was a best-seller, in spite of the fact that the market is flooded with books on managing.

"I planned it to be a best-seller," he said. "If there is a strong need and your book can give an answer that works, then you can make it a best-seller."

Simple. But a lot of work. The "Manager" was rewritten over and over, and the ideas run by people from all parts of life, he said.

His checklist includes four points under "consumer review:"

— Write a questionnaire for readers.

— Xerox 100 copies of the first draft.

— Have 100 of the book's likely buyers read the first draft and complete the questionnaire.

— Review the questionnaire, being honest with oneself, before going on to the next draft.

After the second draft, he tells his authors to run another review, this time with people whose opinion influences other people's opinions.

None of these ideas sprang up overnight. Johnson's been in the writing game, on and off, since his first effort as an undergraduate at the University of Southern California, where he got his bachelor's degree in psychology.

"It was called 'Fraternity Row,' and it was a tour through the fraternities for those thinking about joining. Most of those who bought it, though, were girls."

Then there were years out for medical school at the College of Surgeons in Dublin, Ireland.

"I thought I was going to the one in London, but found out that wasn't a teaching hospital, and that you had to go to either Ireland or Scotland."

He ended up not only with his medical degree, but with an Irish wife, Mary Donagan from Galway, who was to become his collaborator in a later major writing endeavor, "The Value Tales," a series of books on famous people, for children. The couple was divorced several years ago, and she has continued writing books for the series.

Johnson did an internship in Canada and had done clerkships in hospitals in this country during his medical school years, but ended up not practicing medicine.

"The more I saw of sick people, the more I saw of stress. I think my books can do more to help people," he says.

AT WIT'S END

Mother changes

By ERMA BOMBECK

Throughout my married life the most startling change that has occurred has been the relationship between my mother and my husband.

The man at the wedding who was "not good enough for my daughter" is now worth two of me.

Frankly, I never thought she'd turn on me. Mothers aren't supposed to. They never did in those B-movies where a mother would tell the warden, "I don't care what he's done, he's my son," and the kid would yell, "Get the old bat out of here and let's get on with it."

And remember Stella Dallas standing in the rain peeking in the window for a glimpse of her daughter who was ashamed of her? That's what I thought it was going to be like. Right or wrong, she's my daughter and she's always right.

The change was barely noticeable at first. He'd bring mother a bouquet of fresh flowers for some occasion and she'd say, "Erma never got me flowers that you don't have to dust before." Or when we'd climb into a car she'd say, "I never got to ride in the front seat before. Erma always said if I rolled down the windows, I wouldn't get so sick back there."

After the children came, she really put her longevity in the family to the test. I was pitching out uneaten food from the kids' plates one night when my husband said, "Aren't you going to save any of that?"

I looked to Mother for support. She looked at me like I was something that had just missed the trap for me set under the sink and said, "Waste not, want not. Lord knows that's not how she was raised. We never could get her to see the value of money. Maybe if she were out there like you earning it, she'd be more frugal."

Throughout the years my husband has been treated to the history of my stubbornness, my dedication to spending more money that I have, my bad temper, lack of patience, inability to finish anything, short interest span, irritability when things don't work out, reluctance to face reality, lack of consistency, basic shallowness, refusal to set goals, refusal to listen to anyone with experience, back-talking to elders, and taking more naps than a woman my age needs.

Psychologists and marriage counselors say that a good family relationship makes for a happier marriage. There is no doubt in my mind it makes longer ones. I would have left my husband and gone home to Mother years ago, but what for? He'd be there.

Sewing requires planning

Copley News Service

As I sit here moaning over a hot spell of fall weather, I find it difficult to visualize wintertime and coats. But winter will be upon us and we will be wishing for a little bit of this heat.

If you are planning on making a new coat, begin now to study patterns and fabrics.

Select your best basic color, whether it be navy, black, gray, brown or rust — a color that will go with everything in your wardrobe.

Select a durable fabric. A good wool fabric is expensive, but think how long you will be wearing your coat and how important it is that it looks its best. Lining, buttons, interfacing that goes into your coat should be of good quality.

Negotiation can settle differences

By DR. ADELE SCHEELE

This is a special column to all of us who value niceness, politeness, civility above all things. These are great and positive qualities I wouldn't want to live without. I myself wouldn't want to associate with colleagues, friends and family who didn't share these values. But in many situations one has to be able to deal with people who live by other codes — namely, being right at your expense.

Recently a situation really bothered me, and instead of dealing with it, since it was a three-party business meeting in a social setting, I played nice. I tried to console and soothe, and left knowing I was very angry.

Later, when I tried to deal with the second party, my good friend, and explain how I felt, he turned against me. He tried to justify the behavior of the third party — also his friend. He went on and on, telling me how great, brilliant, important his friend is. He said that I was too judgmental and wrong to be angry. I felt worse, hurt in addition to angry.

The next morning I awoke wondering why I didn't have thicker skin. So I asked another friend, who has a hide second only to that of a rhinoceros, how he grew it.

"Racquetball," he said. At first I thought his answer was glib, and was ready to dismiss it, but instead I asked him to explain what he meant.

In playing a competitive sport, he said, all you learn to do is win. You learn to judge your opponent and to adjust your game so that you beat him.

"You know that one of you is going to win," he said. "Therefore, it might as well be you."

And you can win even if you are the physically weaker player, he explained. You can call up strategy to challenge your opponent's strength by making him play a different kind of game. If he plays to the wall, make him fall back or slow down, or speed up, he said. "The critical thing is to manipulate and dominate."

It's not hard to see how this translates to his career. He makes a lot of money and feels successful, though many call him aggressive and arrogant and childish.

It seems to me there's a much needed middle ground: between being a bully or a patsy. Sometimes letting things go for the sake of the meeting, even for the sake of friendship, is the better part of valor. But at the same time, we each need to have ourselves acknowledged.

Why can't we say, one to another, "I can see that this bothers you a lot. Is there any way we can settle it right now so that we can both feel good?"

Bone disease may be prevented by diet, habits

Text by David Lee Forrest

At least a million older Americans — including Midland's growing population of senior citizens — face having bones that can break from the smallest movement because of a disease which probably could have been prevented by a better diet and a few good health habits, according to health authorities.

This condition, osteoporosis, is responsible for a million or more broken bones among women annually, according to research by doctors at Creighton University in Omaha, Nebraska. This "brittle bone" disease's main victims are postmenopausal Caucasian women.

However, it is also believed to be responsible for almost 90 percent of all fractures in both sexes over the age of 60.

"It's one of the major problems as far as older persons go," said Dr. Henry Page, a Midland physician who is the former head of the Department of Research on Aging at Lankenau Hospital in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. "It's one of the curses of aging."

Although Midland is a young person's city, Page said, the number of parents who have followed their children here to retire has increased the number of osteoporosis cases in Midland.

"It is a major problem in Midland," he said.

Osteoporosis — the name means "porous bones" — is caused by a calcium deficit. Most of the calcium in the body is concentrated in the bones and teeth. Other small amounts help maintain the normal functioning of muscles and nerves and assist in the clotting of blood to seal wounds.

A person's bones are constantly being broken down and built up, but as a person gets older calcium loss from bone can overtake the amount being deposited. The bones lose calcium, weaken and become more likely to break.

"Almost everybody suffers from osteoporosis to some extent in old age," said Miriam Curry, a registered dietitian with Associated Milk Producers Inc. and former head of Midland Memorial Hospital's dietary department.

In serious cases bones can virtually break by themselves.

"They become very thin and porous," said Mrs. Curry. "The bones are just like eggshells."

Many fractures among elderly people that were once thought to be the result of a fall are now known to be spontaneous fractures related to osteoporosis, Mrs. Curry said.

"I think it's reasonable to say that in 50 percent of the hip fractures, the hip breaks before they hit the ground," Page said.

Page said a common injury among older persons at this time of year is a bone broken when they tug at a closed window to get some fresh air.

He has seen one instance in which a woman broke her leg by turning slightly in bed to reach something on a nearby nightstand.

Osteoporosis can cause vertebrae — the bones that form the spine — to compress and crumble under the body's weight. The compression of vertebrae is the reason why persons actually lose height as they grow older.

"Thirty years from now you'll be an inch shorter," said Page.

The curvature of the spine that follows vertebrae compression puts extra pressure on the heart and lungs which can cause circulatory and pulmonary problems, as well as serious back problems, Page said.

Osteoporosis is difficult to detect before it has become serious. There are no special tests for it, Page said, although it can be spotted on X-rays. There may be no warning signs other than a loss of height or pains when the bones are bumped.

Men are not struck as hard by osteoporosis because they usually have a greater bone mass than women, tend to be more physically active than women and, according to a study by the United States Department of Health and Human Services, get enough calcium in their diets up to age 35.

The dairy products that are the major source of calcium in American diets are not consumed as much as they should be by women, said Mrs. Curry.

"Women as a group don't drink much milk because they think it makes them put on weight," she said.

The DHHS study found that two-thirds of all women between the ages of 18 and 30 and more than three-fourths of all women over 35 don't get enough calcium in their diets. This deficit starts as early as age 11, according to the study.

Menopause is also believed by many researchers to be related to osteoporosis in women, although Mrs. Curry said, "The connection is not clear."

"Just what role menopause plays is debatable," said Page. While he believes there may be a link between the disease and menopause, the doctor said, "That's been very difficult to prove."

There is no cure for osteoporosis; only treatment to slow bone loss is available. Prevention, Page said, is the best solution.

A healthy lifestyle with good nutrition and good health habits may help prevent a serious case of osteoporosis.

"Many people who are well-fed in their amount of calories are malnourished because they don't get enough of the right nutrients," said Mrs. Curry.

Page recommended 1,000 to 1,500 milligrams of calcium a day in a healthy diet. The current Recommended Dietiary Allowance of calcium for most adults is 800 milligrams a day. One cup of whole milk has 291 milligrams of calcium.

Researchers at Creighton University suggested that the RDA for older women should be raised to 1,200 to 1,500 milligrams a day.

Mrs. Curry advised that calcium supplements "should not be taken without the counsel of a physician."

She also recommended that dieters who wish to avoid whole milk drink lowfat or skim milk. Lowfat yogurt is also rich in calcium.

"You've got to have adequate protein in your diet," Page added. "Adequate amounts of vitamin D are also needed for the absorption of calcium."

Cigarettes appear to adversely affect bones and should be stopped.

"Smoking is bad, period," said Page.

Daily exercise is also important.

"You have to bear weight and use those bones," Page said. "The way to get a fractured hip is to not walk."

"Walking is probably the best form of daily exercise available to the average person," Mrs. Curry said.

Good health habits should be learned young for a person to be a healthy senior citizen later on, according to Page and Mrs. Curry.

"The earlier the better," said Page. "You have to get on the ball in your 30s, at least."

Daily Calcium Intake (mg) for Females U.S. Population, 1976 - 1980

Women, who face the highest risk of suffering from osteoporosis, often do not get enough calcium in their diet.

A study by the United States Department of Health and Human Services shows that beginning at age 11, females tend to fall below the Recommended Dietary Allowance of calcium. Two-thirds of all women between the ages of 18 to 30 do not get enough calcium on any given day.

The statistics get even worse as women grow older. More than 75 percent of American females over the age of 35 fail to meet the RDA. It is estimated that by age 65, one in four women will have a fracture related to osteoporosis.

A vertebra — one of the bones which forms the spine — ravaged by osteoporosis, left, compared to a healthy vertebra, right, shows the damage the "brittle bone" disease can do. The vertebra has lost much of its calcium and is weak. The weakening has allowed it to compress under gravity, causing the person to lose height. Photo courtesy National Dairy Council.

Below is a listing of ages and the Recommended Dietary Allowance of calcium each day for healthy individuals.

Some researchers, such as Dr. Robert Recker and Dr. Robert P. Heaney, both of Creighton University in Omaha, Nebraska, who have studied osteoporosis, recommend raising the RDA.

Dr. Recker has said that postmenopausal women need as much as 1,500 milligram of calcium a day to help prevent the "brittle bone" disease.

The current 800 mg. RDA for most adults is equal to drinking approximately 2¾ cups of milk each day.

AGE	DAILY RDA OF CALCIUM (in milligrams)
Birth to 6 months	360 mg.
6 months to 1 year	540 mg.
1 to 10 years	800 mg.
11 to 18 years	1200 mg.
19 years and up	800 mg.
Pregnant women	1200 mg.
Nursing mothers	1200 mg.

Several foods rich in calcium

Calcium is a mineral essential to the strength of teeth and bones. Adequate amounts of the mineral are important in preventing osteoporosis and other possible health problems, according to physicians.

Although the majority of the body's calcium is found in the skeleton and teeth, a small amount is also vital to regulatory functions throughout the body.

Calcium helps muscles contract and relax, keeps the heart beating rhythmically and helps blood clot to seal wounds.

Calcium is readily available in many foods. Dairy products, such as milk, cheese and yogurt, contribute more than 70 percent of the calcium in the American food supply, according to the National Dairy Council. Other sources of calcium are salmon packed with bones, sardines and dark green, leafy vegetables, such as collards or spinach.

The Recommended Dietary Allowance of calcium for most adults is is 800 milligrams. The RDA for pregnant or nursing mothers is 1200 mg.

The following is a list of calcium-rich foods compiled by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Dr. says elderly should be serviced, not tossed

Hearst Feature Service

"Any person who makes it to age 70 is a Rolls-Royce. You don't toss out that kind of machine — you service it. The person who reaches 70 has left the rest behind, is basically made of good stuff and likely to live a long time."

Those are the words of Dr. Michael Gordon, a geriatric specialist from Toronto, talking about his favorite patient: "Someone who is 75 going on 20."

The latest Census Bureau figures report there are 27.4 million Americans 65 and over — 11.7 percent of the population. By 2030, the 65-plus group will be at 64.3 million — more than 21 percent. Their No. 1 concern, according to polls, is their health and the quality of health care available to them.

Gordon is making a North America-wide effort to demystify aging, speaking and writing as well as conducting a busy practice and teaching schedule in Toronto. He is the author of the book, "Old Enough To Feel Better: A Medical Guide for Seniors" (Chilton), available in both hardcover and paperback.

One of his projects is trying to remove the word senility from everyday vocabularies. "I want to substitute the term 'memory impairment' for senility, which is pejorative."

When does the term "senior" apply? "You can't give it a number, because aging affects each person differently. Medically, an individual is a senior when a number of problems occur together that interfere with independent functioning. Geriatic problems commonly are concerned with those 70 and older, because when they do become ill, their problems are not simple. I loosely classify the young older person as 65 to 75, the middle older person as 75 to 85 and the elderly as above 85."

Gordon, 42, a native of New York, is a senior consultant at the innovative Baycrest Center for Geriatric Care in Toronto, a University of Toronto medical school teacher and a frequent speaker on health care on Canadian television, where he had a regular show for a year.

"The aging population demographics in Canada are very similar to those of the United States, but there is a big difference in medical expenses. Canada operates on the principle that access to health care should be universal. Each province has its own program, but there is a federal subsidy. Health premiums for the person over 65 are paid by the government. Drug charges are waived, and there is an open end on medical treatment and hospital care."

In Toronto, many persons live at home and come to the Baycrest Center during the day to participate in everything from folk dancing to publishing a poetry magazine. "Every day I see people who could have been written off, who instead are actively involved in education programs, who are alert mentally and who are stimulated by these challenges. Every day someone proves how great the human potential is." The average age at the center is in the 80s.

One of the physician's favorites is a 97-year-old woman. "I met her when she was 93. She is one of the many immigrants in Canada, arriving at age 70 from Romania. She is a native of Poland and she speaks Polish, Russian, German and French as well as Romanian, and she is learning English. She was quite agitated about the staff as she spoke to me in German. 'I am not an old senile lady. I speak all these other languages even though I am not fluent in English. These people speak only English. They are stupid, not me. Tell them that.' "

Another woman, 85, is a volunteer who works every day in a home for the aged, proudly wearing a pin awarded after she had completed 10,000 hours as a volunteer. "Whenever she sees me, she comments how she loves helping the 'old folks,' and regrets she can't stop to chat because she is too busy."

Gordon constantly combats the "I'm too old" mentality and the family decisions that someone is "too old."

"As a geriatrician, a new but growing specialty, I can integrate treatment for the individual with an accumulation of health problems. These can include the psychological components of depression and memory impairment that can exist in addition to heart disease, for example, and make it more difficult for a person to cope. Or someone taking several drugs can feel cumulative effects that have to be re-evaluated. Becoming dependent on tranquilizers and sedatives is a real danger."

Gordon, a persuasive, fast-talking, fervently gesturing advocate of the older citizen, stressed, "You are never too old to reverse the effects of poor health habits or to diminish the effects of the aging process. Or too young to start. But you have to become a more intelligent, informed partner in your own health care."

Cigar smokers offered tips

NEW YORK (AP) — Cigar users can show consideration for others by observing several simple rules.

The Cigar Association of America says:

— Do not smoke in a confined space such as an elevator (where it is illegal to smoke) or an anteroom.

— Use a fresh cigar to avoid any stale aroma.

— To make the cigar burn evenly, rotate it slowly when lighting it.

— A half inch or so of ash at the end of the cigar is a signal to flick it into an ash tray.

Sculpture show planned in '84

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The exhibition "German Expressionist Sculpture" will be shown at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art Nov. 1 through Jan. 22, 1984.

Council given project grant

The Council on Adoptable Children Inc. of Midland has been awarded a grant of $3,846 by Health and Human Services' Office of Human Development Services to develop a project to increase adoptions of minority and special needs children.

The grantee will videotape a seminar on special needs adoptions and develop information booklets from it. The seminar will be sponsored by the Permian Basin Council on Adoptable Children and will involve the Lutheran Social Services of Texas, the regional office of the Texas Department of Human Resources and other local agencies involved in adoptions.

According to Acting Commissioner Lucy Biggs of HDS' Administration for Children Youth and Families, the project is among some 200 being awarded by HDS to private and public organizations that have indicated they can provide innovative approaches that support state and local human services delivery, foster individual self-sufficiency and economic self-support, promote family stability, promote independent living, and stimulate improved use of private and public monies through better practices and better management.

Total funding may reach $27 million by September 30, the end of the Federal fiscal year, according to HHS Assistant Secretary Dorcas R. Hardy, who said approximately 3,000 concept papers were submitted to HDS, ranked by field reviewers and reviewed by HDS program officials based on the project's ability to meet Reagan Administration priorities in social services.

"This is in keeping with the principle that human services are more effectively administered through private and public organizations at the level closest to the people, the local and state level," Miss Hardy said.

United Way: Helping to support Midland's youth

Albert Lozano, George Ann Powers, Shannon Casebeer and Ellie Boundy don't know each other abut Midland knows them.

They are all involved in the four major youth groups that Midland and the United Way support each year for a common reason: to help youth realize their potential and grow into the kind of youngsters of whom Midland can be proud.

ALBERT IS a typical 17-year-old who likes his classes at Midland High but thrives on athletics like baseball and basketball.

These days, however, he is reserving most of his time and talent for track and field, soccer and cross country. He hopes to turn his skill in these events into a ticket to college.

He is quick to talk about one of his favorite places to train — the Boys' Club of Midland. For a $2 annual membership fee, Albert has access to supervised sports, instruction in arts and crafts and cooking, and most important, a family of friends. A United Way agency for several years, the club is able to subsidize memberships and rarely turns away a child without the $2.

Albert has been coming to the club since 1978. He still remembers being an impressionable 12-year-old following after the older guys imitating whatever they did. "I'm just glad I had a safe place to go as a kid," said Albert. "It kept me off the streets and gave me a whole lot of big brothers to look up to."

Nick Sanchez, director of the Boys' Club, said Albert received the organization's "Boy of the Year" award for excelling in both club and school activities.

"He is a positive influence on the kids here. We're real proud of Albert," said Sanchez.

GEORGE ANN is involved with the Girl Scouts both professionally and as a volunteer. She is a special education teacher at Jane Long Elementary School and works with Brownie Troop No. 467.

During 1982, 22 girls enrolled in her special education class when through the "special" Brownie program. Her girls, ages 6 — 10, meet once a week during class time to carry out the regular Brownie activities right down to the patches and beads they earn.

"Troop No. 467 is like any other group of Brownies except we meet during school hours to avoid transportation problems," said George Ann. Many benefit from this innovative approach to scouting, including the schools and the teachers.

"However, the big winners are the kids," she said. "They get such a sense of fitting in with others." The Permian Basin Girl Scouts are working to integrate handicapped children into their programs and this appears to be a good starting point, George Ann said.

SHANNON, 15, also known in Camp Fire circles as Ah-Ki-Mu, has been a member of Jerry Woolard's group for the last 10 years.

A sophomore at Lee High School, Shannon admits her original motive for joining the organization wasn't necessrily to earn lasting friendships while paddling a canoe. "I wanted to have a Camp Fire ceremonial gown," she said, commenting on the elaborate special occasion attire.

It didn't take too many meetings and outings for her to discover that Camp Fire was more than a pretty uniform. "Camp Fire lets me be myself," said Shannon, "and it gives me a chance to meet friends I'll have forever."

Shannon is already thinking about her future, which includes working for Camp Fire as a volunteer leader. "I want other kids to have the same chance to experience what I did," she said.

Funding from the United Way of Midland since 1976 has helped extend the Camp Fire opportunity to more girls and boys in Midland.

THE BOY SCOUTS of America have been working in Midland though the Buffalo Trail Council for years. Hundreds of scouts have graduated from learning the basics of camp site safety as Cubs, to planning and executing long-distance bicycle trips to fill the requirements for Boy Scout advancement badges. Others have gone into the explorer program to specialize in a particular career area such as aviation, medicine or computer science.

Ellie is a participant in the Scout's Medical Explorer Post No. 68, sponsored by Midland Memorial Hospital. She also is president of the organization and an aspiriing pediatrician or child psychologist.

"The program gives you the chance to meet medical professionals while helping people," Ellie said.

She said the explorers gain career experience in the program. "For example, we helped the physicians that gave pre-camp physical exams this year by taking blood pressures. It's a great way to prepare for medical school."

"Kids like Ellie are prime examples of the results one can expect from a good scouting program," said Doug Palmer, District Scout Executive. "They build character and good citizenship while working for overall personal fitness." Palmer feels this works for children in Tiger Cubs, Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts as well as those in the Explorer program.

SINCE ITS inception in 1947 the United Way of Midland has been supporting programs specializing in youth development. According to Mary Whiteman, communications director of United Way, in 1949 the campaign raised $32,000 and distributed it among six different organizations including the Girl Scouts and the Boy Scouts.

The United Way Campaign for 1984 seeks to raise $1,712,000 for 23 human service organizations that serve a variety of community needs and those serving Midland's youth.

Midland's support of the United Way will allow individuals like Albert, George Ann, Shannon and Ellie to continue working to improve the quality of life for young people in Midland, said Ms. Whiteman.

South Street Seaport city's latest tourist attraction

By MICHAEL CARLTON
By The Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — Forget the Statue of Liberty. Can the tour of Soho. Do not bother with Chinatown. Skip the Empire State Building. When you are next in New York, rush instead to the city's newest — and some say best — tourist attraction, the South Street Seaport.

The Seaport, which opened July 28, will cost nearly $400 million when all of its vast variety of facilities are completed sometime next year. Enough has already been finished, however, to give visitors a unique glimpse at the seafaring history of New York — while enjoying the smart shops and slick restaurants of today. The 11-block historic district is an evocation of the 19th century, a time when New York was the cradle of commerce for the fledgling United States of America.

Most of the birth of the great city took place along the East River, a perfect location for the graceful China clippers to tie up and unload their exotic cargoes. Lower Manhattan became the hub of the frantic activity that shaped New York into the busiest seaport in the world, and South Street was its focus.

EVEN THOUGH THE South Street Seaport lost much of its commercial importance and slowly slipped into a genteel decline in the late 19th century, the Fulton Fish Market continued to flourish here, and restaurants like Sweet's, which was established in 1842, still fed New Yorkers and tourists. But, for the most part, the South Street Seaport area atrophied, seemingly awaiting the inevitable high-rise rush toward the East River from Wall Street.

But, in 1967, the Friends of the South Street Seaport was chartered and undertook an ambitious program of acquisition and preservation. The city, state and federal governments joined with the association and the Rouse Company, developers of Boston's Faneuil Hall and Baltimore's Harborplace, to preserve, construct, and form what may be New York's most charming attraction for visitors.

The South Street Seaport has neither the literalness of Williamsburg nor the cuteness of Disney World. It is, rather, a blending of old buildings with new, history with chocolate chip cookies, outdoor stalls with indoor drama.

Scattered along the streets are 75 stores and 37 food shops and restaurants. The cobblestones, special lampposts, and a series of unique signs all create a feeling of community in these few blocks without being too precious. It is as though you have, for a moment at least, stepped into the boisterous days of the early 19th century when New York was brawling its way into dominance as a commercial and political center for the nation.

The Seaport's Fulton Market is the Seaport's centerpiece, one of two new buildings carefully designed to blend comfortably with the 18th and 19th century structures. The Market holds a wonderful variety of shops and restaurants: places like Gus's Pickles, Ice Cream Extravaganza, Merchants Coffee Tea & Spices, Pasta Cuisine, Nutcracker Treats, New York Fries, Seaport Flowers, South Street Sausage Company, Zaro's Bread Basket, Beekman Market and David's Cookies.

The stores are contained in a full-block structure of three stories with a high-gabled roof. The handsome, deep-red brick is adorned with granite trim and canopies and is a smashing adornment for the South Street Seaport.

Next to the Market is a row of buildings built in 1811 by Peter Schermerhorn. The buildings have been totally restored and offer a variety of stores: Laura Ashley (women's fashions), Captain Hook's (nautical souvenirs), Complete Athlete (gym shorts and such). Happily, Sweet's will reopen here in October after a masterful refurbishment and another old time restaurant, Sloppy Louie's, also remains to serve South Street regulars and others.

BUT SHOPPING and dining should be but ancillary activities to visitors to the South Street Seaport. The primary reason why one should come here is to sniff out the history of the place.

You should visit the collection of fine old sailing ships owned by the South Street Seaport Museum: the 1911 four-masted bark Peking; the sleek schooner Pioneer (you can take two-hour sail on her for $15, $10 for children); the Ambrose Lightship, which guarded New York's entrance from 1908 to 1963; the Wavertree, an 1885 iron full-rigged ship; the 1893 wood fishing schooner Lettie G. Howard. Climbing on board these ships, you go back a century in time.

Also at the South Street Seaport is an extraordinarily entertaining and educational multimedia show called the "South Street Venture" which shows you everything from the storms of Cape Horn to the fireworks bursting over the Brooklyn Bridge when it opened in 1883.

At the nearby Seaport Gallery, in a building completed in 1868, an exhibition using ship models, artifacts, lithographs and photographs traces the story of South Street, its people, and its fish market.

Signs throughout tell the history of individual buildings — some going back to 1771 — their stones aching with the watery history of New York even as they are bathed in the shadows of the monstrous glass skyscrapers of the financial district.

Just down the street the Fulton Fish Market continues to exude its unique bouquet of business along the waterfront, giving the entire area a nasal authencity that will remain, since an agreement between the developers and the city places it there for perpetuity. The market's vendors continue to sell their barrels of fish, and the scale-flecked salt water continues to drain along the curb.

JUST ACROSS the way from the market is the Brooklyn Bridge, celebrating its 100th birthday this year, while City Hall, Wall Street, Chinatown and Little Italy are but short walks away. It is a rare combination.

Quiet swamp lovely

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

A swamp may not sound like the most attractive of places to visit, but there is a quiet loveliness in the forests of tupelo gum and cypress draped with Spanish moss found in the Great Dismal Swamp on the eastern border of Virginia and North Carolina, about an hour south of Norfolk.

For $1 an hour, travelers passing through the area can rent a canoe at Merchants Millpond State Park, just off U.S. 158 a few miles north of Gatesville, N.C., and explore a wildlife sanctuary and garden little changed in the years since George Washington visited the area.

Switzerland: Ideal location for 'getting away from it all'

By JERRY HULSE
The Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

SACHSELN, Switzerland — This has been my base for three days now and, confidentially, I am tempted to stick it out to life's zero hour.

Although less than two hours from Zurich by train, Sachseln pops up like a snapshot from another century, one of those Alpine villages only Hollywood's film makers seem able to stumble upon.

On the other hand, I suppose it could get boring. It wouldn't seem natural not breathing dirty air, now would it? Or hearing police sirens in the middle of the night. Or getting snarled in traffic. Or any of the other plagues city dwellers must endure — or else go mad.

Instead of clogged freeways and skyscrapers, Sachseln features meadows yellow with buttercups and waterfalls that spill furiously to the shores of Lake Sarnen. This along with hiking trails and forests where the world seems fresh and unthreatened.

Well, why not risk it? Boredom, I mean.

I've taken up residence at Herr Eugen Bucher's marvelous home with its music boxes, antique clocks and collection of Gothic, baroque and Renaissance figurines.

The four-story mansion rises on a grassy slope with a sweeping view of the village, the lake and lofty peaks facing the valley on the opposite shore. Eugen Bucher with his white hair and mustache and aristocratic features takes in boarders for a song. What's more, the nights are as silent as a falling star, the eiderdowns warmer than an electric blanket set full throttle. He'll rent you one room or an entire floor. What's more, it's all as spic and span as only a Swiss home can be.

BEFORE RETIRING to this new life, Bucher managed the slick Hotel Kreuz at the bottom of a hill that's provided shelter for dozens of well-known figures. Pope Paul VI for one. Konrad Adenauer and Pablo Casals among others.

Hotel Kreuz features a dining room with a beamed ceiling, red roses and heavy oak columns. Amber lamps glow above tables and the ticking of an old-fashioned clock sets the mood for relaxation and romance. Indeed, one half-expects to find Farrah Fawcett huddled in a secluded corner with her latest love.

A few doors away, Ingrid and Kurt Geiger-Koller operate Gasthaus Schlussel with its sidewalk cafe and four-stool bar. When winter comes, guests gather inside beneath cowbells that hang from the ceiling and wrought-iron chandeliers that shed their light.

A narrow park with benches and trees and a stream rushing through it separates Gasthaus Schlussel from a tearoom on the opposite side of the street where the proprietor turns out hot chocolate and wonderful home-baked pastries.

Sachseln's vacationers stroll along lakeside paths and hike into high meadows. Others use Sachseln to travel by train to the Bernese Oberland and Alpine villages that look down on Switzerland from the top of the world.

And some come to Sachseln on pilgrimages to the final resting place of Switzerland's famous saint, Nicholas von der Flue.

For legions of travelers, Switzerland is a drug. I'm one of the faithful. It was only last autumn that I visited Hohfluh, a small Alpine village not far from Sachseln. Blink and you'll miss it, whether driving your own car or passing through on the bus. There is only a bakery, one restaurant, a couple of gift shops and little else — this in the midst of nowhere. But this is its charm: the seclusion. In Hohfluh, the harassed city dweller switches life styles, taking up housekeeping in chalets surrounded by peaceful meadows, Alpine peaks and waterfalls that spill, it appears, from heaven itself.

AFTER REVISITING Hohfluh the other morning, I took the bus to Grindelwald and wished afterward that I'd let the storied village remain a dream. For me, Grindelwald was a bitter disappointment. For years I'd read reports extolling the charms of this mountain village with its glaciers and awesome peaks. But there was nary a word about the wall-to-wall souvenir shops lining the main street from beginning to end, or the tawdry signs and fast-food joints.

Still, the bus ride over the mountain from Meiringen made the trip worthwhile, every hairpin turn being an adventure as the bus stopped only inches from the hereafter to permit cows to pass, for in Switzerland the dairy herds have the right of way. At every twist, the driver sounded an Alpine horn that sent waves of thunder rolling through the valleys, ricocheting off towering peaks.

Passengers filled their souls (and camera lenses) with scenes of waterfalls, sunlit peaks, verdant meadows and forests that collided with the sky overhead. The bus inched past Reichenbach Falls and Rosenlaui Glacier, the road turning, twisting, moving higher until the valley below appeared like a child's scroll on a classroom blackboard.

Snow still covered the ground as the bus made a pit stop at a restaurant near the top. Passengers filed inside and behind the counter Heidy Dye became vexed by someone's remark. "Whaddya mean, I speak like a Yank?" she bawled. "I am a Yank!" Then, smoothing her apron, she explained: "Used to run bars in St. Petersburg, Florida!"

So what's she doing in Switzerland, at the top of the world?

She shrugged. "Breathing fresh air and regaining my sanity, what else?"

LATER, AS THE BUS inched over the mountaintop, Grindelwald took shape in a distant valley. Behind the village rose the awesome peaks that make Grindelwald famous: the Wetterhorn, the Eiger with its notorious North Face and the Jungfrau that boasts the highest railroad station in Europe.

From this elevation, the picture seemed flawless. Meadows bright with wildflowers flowed toward the valley while herds of cattle grazed contentedly, their bells ringing in symphony. Hikers labored up the mountain slopes and others waved on their return trip to the village. It was only after entering Grindelwald that disappointment set in, that the tasteless, tacky souvenir shops came into focus along with crowds and tour buses and snarled traffic.

Two museums stand out in midst of London's whirl

Yesterday's story told with flair to today's public

The once-famous Covent Garden theater in mid-London is now a flower-filled shopping mall with shops and restaurants. The London Transport Museum is now located in a building in Covent Garden that formerly was used by wholesale flower merchants.

By DEAN STAHL
Copley News Service

Do you sometimes think you need a compass for London, that fascinating maze of a city? Carry one if you must, then let the needle point you to two museums somewhat off the beaten track.

THE LONDON TRANSPORT Museum occupies an airy Victorian building in Covent Garden that used to house wholesale flower merchants and their colorful wares.

Try to taxi fairly close in and walk the rest of the distance, or walk the neighborhood on your way from the tube stop. You'll find a pleasant urban scene: houses personalized by windowsill blooms if the season is kind, tidy stores and antsy traffic, until, all at once, you are in a restored area of shops and re-cobbled streets around a pedestrian-only square — a neighborhood once condemned and nearly left to the wreckers.

Your walking here, to a place that enshrines movement, is very appropriate; you'll feel the surge of the human tide and be reminded that London is very much a city on the move. It bustles, shakes and rumbles with a fluidity made possible by a fine transportation system, one that dates to the 1830s.

THE LONDON Transport Museum, in its present location since 1980, is crammed with examples of workable and beautifully restored horse buses (yes, even in their day advertisers used them as mobile sign boards for the products one couldn't live without); the double-decker motor buses from the turn of the century, with their kindly flivver demeanor, electric tramcars; wonderful locomotives.

And there is a fascinating display that leaves you marveling over the problems of burrowing under a city to create a labyrinth underground railway system.

You can walk through, in, up and over many of the cars and put a hand to their controls, if you like.

Should you take a breather on one of the curlicue-iron and slat-wood benches, you may be joined by a transport-line retiree who enlightens those of us unfortunate enough to have missed the golden age of transportation.

If you are at all attuned to the marvels of trains and their cousins, this is the place for you.

Open seven days a week, the museum charges about $3, a cheap fare for passing through a time warp. Even if you don't care about wheeled things, poke your head in the door and take a look at the reproductions of old posters.

OF ALL THE MUSEUMS you can visit in London, none comes closer to the city's essence than the Museum of London, located in London Wall near St. Paul's Cathedral. The combined collections of the former London Museum and Guildhall Museum are its heart.

What is one of the city's newest museums — open only since 1976 — is also one of the most interesting, as rich with diverse cultural treasure as a miniature Smithsonian Institution.

This is a spacious structure, and the development of the city is traced in chronological order: One ambles down a hallway, past exhibits, and follows a model of the river Thames like a time line from prehistory to the present.

Much of what is known of London's ancient past has come from the Thames, a waterway that by 8,000 B.C. had carved its modern course.

Romans, the Londiniums of A.D. 43 are represented by scores of artifacts, both practical and aesthetic.

In the center of the Roman display area is a greenhouse window that bulges outward from foot to eye over the remains of a gatehouse and wall built by these intruders (or civilizers, depending upon your point of view) in A.D. 200.

HERE ONE CAN STARE at a magnifying device to puzzle out the nuances of an incised urn and then look up and out, taking time to refocus, and watch workers attend to the restoration work on a wall running alongside the museum that may have been built by the potter's brother.

The more typical museum fare — intricately crafted Saxon brooches, wicked battle pikes, a plague bell carried by a corpse collector in 1665, Oliver Cromwell's death mask — is fitted to an outstanding diorama of the Great Fire of 1666, and to reassembled drugstores, reconstructed prison cells and so forth.

Then there is the lord mayor of London's state coach, a highly decorated rig ready to be pulled through special doors for use in official functions. It squats like an enormous, baroque carousel frog, all golden in the center of its own Lilliputian moat — for the humidity, curators say — and you can toss a penny in the pool for luck. Your simple coin could wind up behind glass as part of today's story for tomorrow's public. No telling.

Thames cleaner

Until midway in this century, the lower Thames River in England was one of the most polluted bodies of water in the world. But the imposition of tough water standards has resulted in a 90 percent drop in pollution in the last 30 years, with the return of much bird and marine life.

Travel by train offers bargain look at India

By WILLIAM J. EATON
From Wire Reports

NEW DELHI, India — "What's wrong, no plane ticket?" the taxi driver asked his American passenger, heading to Bombay Central Station to start a 1,400-mile train ride to New Delhi. "If I were going to Delhi, I would rather fly."

But most Indians who travel between the two cities ride the rails rather than take the two-hour flight, and one reason is obvious. The fares on India's rail network, the fourth largest in the world, are remarkably cheap.

And for a foreigner making the Bombay-New Delhi run, the train provides a colorful vista of India's countryside and a good look at its society as well.

WHILE THE lowest airline fare between Bombay and New Delhi is about $83, it is possible to go by train for as little as $9.80. The rates for second-class rail passengers are among the lowest in Asia, less than three-quarters of a cent per mile, according to the Indian government. (Third-class railroad cars, which Mohandas K. Gandhi once rode to identify with India's poorest people, no longer exist.)

For those who can afford it, there are air-conditioned sleeper accommodations on the Bombay-Delhi line — $37.50 in second-class cars and $670 in first-class.

The daily morning train is described as a "superfast express," but it makes 14 stops and takes nearly 24 hours to complete the journey, at an average speed of 58 mph. There is a faster, extra-fare train, the "Capital Express," which stops only twice and makes the trip in 18 hours. But it runs only five days a week and is still slower than the Japanese "bullet" trains.

Mainline trains usually are jammed, with scarcely a seat or berth to spare. The food and drink, while inexpensive, will never get a five-star rating in the Michelin guide. In second-class cars, toilets are little more than a hole in the floor.

BOMBAY CENTRAL is a vast place with high, vaulted ceilings. A century ago, a traveler described it as a whirlpool of shoving, shouting people amid a jumble of cases, valises and sacks.

The disorder has endured. Today, red-shirted bearers compete to haul luggage, scrambling among passengers on the platform, balancing two or more heavy suitcases on their heads with little apparent effort. The standard tip is 20 cents for a 44-pound bag.

The only Westerner to board second-class sleeping car No. 6556 on a recent run to New Delhi received friendly stares from the Indians, who had already kicked off their shoes and were sitting, most of them cross-legged, on the padded blue seats.

They were literally a colorful group. The women, in flowing saris of rose, yellow and chartreuse pastels, wore gold earrings, nose jewelry and silver toe rings. Some of the men wore loose-fitting white dhotis, although most preferred slacks and short-sleeved shirts.

Each year, India's railways carry an amazing 3.5 billion passengers, according to the latest available government statistics. They run about 11,000 trains a day and employ nearly 2 million workers.

THE RAILROAD employees are a privileged lot. They have their own hospitals, health care centers and housing. And they can spend their vacations at special Himalayan hill stations, once the exclusive resorts of India's British overlords.

Once the Bombay-Delhi train slid away from the station, the train crew went into action. The conductor, a turbaned Sikh who wore a purple armband with gold lettering to denote his superior rank, quietly checked tickets.

Other blue-uniformed employees sold soft drinks, soup, tea, chocolate and sweet wafers, threading their way through luggage and bodies in the narrow aisle. Later, they served simple meals on metal trays — roast chicken, omelets, vegetarian plates with rice, lentils and chapatis, thin wheat pancakes that Indians use to mop up their food. For breakfast, lunch and dinner, the bill was $3.20.

Some passengers, skeptical of the sanitary standards, produced their own cups and drinking water, spurning the well-worn plastic thermos jugs offered by the railroad. At each stop, more food was available at trainside. At the first station outside Bombay, in the palm-ringed city of Danaku, farmers offered coconuts for 20 cents each, chopping them open so that the passengers could drink the cool milk and eat the sweet, bone-white meat.

THE CONVERSATION in one compartment sounded like club-car talk on any American train in the nearly forgotten days when business travelers gathered to pass the hours. But on this train there was no club car. Alcoholic beverages are banned on India's railroads and smoking is forbidden except in the vestibules.

As the train raced along, the passengers could see timeless pastoral scenes through the windows: cattle wading knee-deep in a flooding river, gleaners bending to their harvest tasks. The business executives, however, preferred to talk about a familiar complaint — big government.

Focus: Robert A. 'Bob' Dean

Independent oilman independent thinker

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

Independent oil operators are a different breed of cat. Like all oilmen, they search for the best deals, cagily eyeing the prospects. But, unlike the others, they do not justify their decisions to anyone on a higher rung of the corporate ladder. (Forget for a moment the role of an independent's banker).

If the deal fits, they pick up the phone, ask 'How soon can we do it?' and get to work.

"When you drill a well and see that oil coming to the top, it's just an elation you can't get anywhere else," declares Robert A. "Bob" Dean, one of Midland's well known independents. "And, it's a good inner feeling when you find oil and gas. You know you're helping the country."

Dean has long been a spokesman for independent oil operators' rights. He is currently finishing a two-year term on the executive committee of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, and also is the secretary of Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association. He is a past president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

He came to Midland from Texas Tech in 1948 to work for Standard Oil Company of California as a geologist. Not a company man, he "went independent" as soon as possible, in 1950.

A HALLMARK OF being independent is that a person can create and dissolve companies or partnerships almost at will, allowing considerable flexibility to meet changes in the energy industry. Dean is no exception. For 20 years, he and various industry friends formed partnerships amd companies that changed as one person dropped out and another came on board. Mitchell County wells drilled in 1959 by Bob Dean Ltd. are still producing, although they have long since been sold to someone else.

Dean then operated in the 1960s with a friend under the name of Dean and Windham until that, too, changed.

Dean, Reed Albritton and Hugh Meyer started Remuda Oil Company in October 1970. The trio got to the point where they had borrowed as much as they could, so they sold the company in 1974 to a New York firm, Power Test, the second largest independent gasoline marketer in the country.

But, what Dean calls "some of those crazy state laws" intervened in the free enterprise system, causing another change. A law forbidding gasoline retailers from owning their own exploration and production or refining companies forced Power Test to divest itself of Remuda.

Was Dean interested in buying it back? He was, and in March 1979, he and three investors purchased the company, renaming it Remuda Oil and Gas Corp.

"It was disconcerting," Dean said of the transaction, "but frankly, in looking back, I could've made a big mistake in not trying to buy the company back by myself. But I thought we (the investors) would be compatible."

CHANGE AND transformation continued. Through the wishes of the four individuals, Remuda was broken up just three years later, with most of its assets sold to Petro-Lewis Company, Denver, in April 1982.

Dean and the others sold most of their production — interest in 160 wells on about 50,000 acres in south and east Texas and northwest Louisiana — for about $7 million. One reason was to retire some debt owed at a local bank, but for Dean, the timing seemed right.

Oil prices were on an upward spiral; most oilmen were gleefully taking advantage, but a warning light flashed in Dean's mind.

"We just thought it was a good time to sell," Dean explains matter-of-factly. "We thought the price of oil at $38 a barrel had a good chance of going down. The price of oil got up there way too high. I want to re-iterate, we were not smarter than anybody else, we were just lucky," to make a decision to sell.

Today, Dean is truly an independent again, surrounded by maps, logs and the other tools of his trade.

ALTHOUGH HE WORKS out of the same office, from the same desk, everything has changed. The former employees of Remuda Oil and Gas formed Remuda Operating Company in order to operate its remaining properties and any new ones acquired. Dean has no part in it officially, nor does he own any interest in it. He merely shares office space and consults with Remuda Operating.

"One of the main reasons I got out of operating was that it's not so much fun anymore," Dean said. "With all the government regulations, the Railroad Commission — they've taken all the fun out of it. You have to be so staffed up," to handle the paperwork.

But, a deal's still a deal. If he and Remuda can participate together in a prospect, that's fine with Dean. For the more things change, the more they stay the same.

"I'm just looking — trying to invest in good prospects," Dean said with a smile. "Remuda Oil and Gas was a $10 million company. I'd like to build myself back up to that point, as Robert Dean, independent."

One way to do it is to acquire a small oil company which is in trouble financially. Deans is on the lookout, but most companies or production he has heard about lately turned out to be overpriced upon closer inspection.

"I've seen some (possibilities) but they were just beyond salvage — timing is so very important in this business."

IN TYPICAL West Texas fashion, Dean vows he will remain an independent oilman until the day he dies. "I enjoy coming to the office every day and trying to stir things up. I want to be trying to make a deal the day I go."

Like most independents, Dean wants to preserve the old order, where free-wheeling business deals could be made neatly, quickly, and on a man's word, without a lot of paperwork and without the government looking over one's shoulder. That's why he is so active in various petroleum organizations.

"I believe in associations — they do a good job," he said. "I would frankly hate to see where we would be if, back in the Arab embargo days (1973), we hadn't had any representation in Washington. We would have been badly hurt."

Dean's mission now is to prevent the industry from being hurt again while Congress struggles with natural gas deregulation. His gut feeling, born of many years' experience lobbying in Washington, is that the decontrol bill sponsored by President Reagan won't get anywhere before the 1984 election.

DOING NOTHING about deregulation may turn out to be better than doing something, the way Dean figures it. "Some of those provisions are nothing but back door re-regulation," he said. "Pipeline purchasers are changing their contracts and we can't do anything about it.

"There are some provisions in both the Senate and House bills that, if we can't change them, we'd be better off to stay right where we are."

The natural gas industry is currently a "mixed up jumble" in Dean's view. Complex regulations have pitted independents with mostly "new" gas against major producers who own most of the old. Similarly, some independents have deep gas which is already decontrolled — they don't want regulations tampered with.

"The only way is to have total decontrol," Dean said. "That way, everybody would be happy, and I guarantee, prices would go down." Spoken like a true independent.

RRC sets allowable, reports gas production down

ABILENE (AP) — The Railroad Commission Friday set the statewide oil allowable for October at 100 percent of potential.

As usual, however, the East Texas field was among a few fields where production was held below maximum. The East Texas allowable was set at 86 percent to avoid possible waste.

The commission first went to the 100 percent ceiling on oil production in April 1972, and it has remained at 100 percent each month with three exceptions.

Commissioners Buddy Temple and Jim Nugent noted that major oil companies had submitted requests to buy 2,425,894 barrels a day in October, a decrease of 19,054 barrels daily from this month.

Temple also reported that crude oil and petroleum products imported into the United States averaged 6,076,000 barrels a day for the four weeks ending Sept. 2, up 1.4 million barrels from the same period a year ago.

AUSTIN — Texas gas production for the first half of 1983 decreased by approximately 11.7 percent when compared to the same period last year, according to Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace.

Total production for 1983 through June was 2,717,754,853 Mcf (thousand cubic feet) of gas as compared to 3,077,643,721 Mcf of gas for the first six months of 1982.

Marketed gas production, which is gas that is actually sold by producers, was down by 13.2 percent. Through June of this year, marketed production totaled 2,236,247,602 Mcf. In the first half of 1982, it reached 2,576,791,044 Mcf.

Marketed production is the gas left after liquid hydrocarbons have been separated on the lease from the "wet" gas that is usually produced at the wellhead. It does not include gas that is reinjected into the producing reservoir to maintain gas pressure, gas that is used to fuel production-related equipment on the lease site, or gas that is otherwise not marketed.

In June, Texas gas production came from 235,618 oil and gas wells.

Total production in June reached 448,878,428 Mcf, down 8.59 percent from June 1982 production. Marketed production in June 1983 totaled 362,837,690 Mcf, down 10.5 percent from the year-earlier month.

In May 1983, total production reached 446,439,498 Mcf, and marketed production totaled 369,820,700 Mcf.

Exports of Texas-produced gas in June totaled 133,710,721 Mcf, and reflected a 16.38 percent decrease from June of 1982. May exports of Texas-produced gas totaled 147,683,606 Mcf.

Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallce has announced that 20 permits to operate new pipelines in Texas were granted by the RRC in August. In July, the Commission approved 45 permits, and 12 were granted in August 1982.

Eleven of the new permits were for gathering pipelines, four were for trunk transmission lines, one was for a gas plant line, and four were for multi-purpose lines. Gathering lines bring oil and gas from production leases, while a trunk transmission line is a larger diameter line into wich smaller lines connect. At gas plants, gas is stripped of the liquid hydrocarbons usually present in wellhead gas.

In August, five permits were granted to operate pipelines in Southeast Texas (District 3), three in East Central Texas (District 5), two each in deep South Texas (District 4), East Texas (District 6) and the Refugio (District 2) and Midland (District 8) areas, and one each in West Central Texas (District 7B) and the Panhandle (District 10) and the San Antonio (District 1) and San Angelo (District 7C) areas.

After a year of prodding by the Railroad Commission, the federal Office of Surface Mining has approved a $312,000 grant to seal some 81 abandoned mercury mine shafts near Terlingua.

Commission officials said a bid package which asks for proposals on the work to be done would be mailed to contractors within the next two weeks.

The 81 open, vertical shafts thus far identified by inspectors of the Commission's Surface Mining and Reclamation Division are remains of mercury or mining operations decades ago in the Terlingua area. Some of the shafts are 900 feet deep.

Chairman Mack Wallace and Commissioners Buddy Temple and James E. (Jim) Nugent first requested federal funds to plug the shafts in the fall of 1982. They told the Office of Surface Mining that the shafts pose a hazard to tourists exploring the area along Farm Road 170 between Presidio and the north-ern entrance to Big Bend National Park. Since then, the lengthy federal approval process has delayed sealing the shafts.

Under a plan developed by the Surface Mining and Reclamation Division, the federal funds will be used to backfill 70 shafts. Each of the remaining 11, which are too deep to backfill, will be sealed with a steel grate.

The grant money comes from a federal abandoned mine land fund set up by the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation act of 1977. States with safety or environmental problems caused by abandoned mines may apply for federal funds if they have an approved mine program. The Texas program, developed and administered by the Railroad Commission was the first in the nation to be certified by the Office of Surface Mining.

The Railroad Commission has adopted a new rule that requires oil tank trucks to carry indentification papers for the oil they are transporting.

The new rule requires a cargo manifest for each load of liquid hydrocarbons transported by an oil tanker vehicle. The manifest must include an identification of the lease, or facility from which the oil was removed, the name of the lease operator, the amount of oil removed, the date and hour of the removal, identification of the transporter, and the intended destination.

Golden Triangle's recovery a long way off

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — The petrochemicals industry in the Beaumont-Port Arthur area ultimately will become more cost-effective because of the current economic slump, a new report says.

However, the petroleum and petrochemical industries in the "Golden Triangle" of Beaumont, Port Arthur and Orange — which lost more than 10,000 jobs in the 18-month period ending in June — won't recover economically for at least a decade, according to a John Gray Institute report titled "Energy Industry Outlook."

"The petroleum and petrochemical industries are probably not going to be significantly increasing in employment for the rest of this decade," said Art Adamson, editor and co-author of the report.

"And we also have found that there probably will not be a large amount of new construction in those industries for the rest of the decade," Adamson told the Port Arthur News in a copyright story published Thursday.

Construction employment in the "Golden Triangle" of Beaumont, Port Arthur and Orange dropped 39 percent in 5½ years, accounting for the loss of 6,500 jobs, Adamson said.

Currently, a problem in the petrochemicals industry is that some plants in the area are too large and costly to produce a small amount of a product at a competitive price, according to the report.

The report says the Golden Triangle petrochemicals industry has a third more capacity than it needs to meet current demand.

To adapt to new demands, the industry will restructure itself in order to become more cost-effective, the report predicts.

"This restructuring will take time," the report says. "Across the industry, development of cost-efficient processes, operations and products will be emphasized."

Adamson said the downturn in the oil industry — the root cause of declines in petrochemicals, construction and shipbuilding — may be leveling off.

The report says the outlook for the industry is "stable to declining" and noted that world situations could change the regional outlook.

The ports in the Golden Triangle remain a bright spot, Adamson said.

"With the formation of the foreign trade zone later this year, we do have something to look forward to there," he said.

Texas American Oil begins Wyoming natural gas sales

Texas American Energy Corporation said its oil and gas exploration and production subsidiary, Texas American Oil Corporation, has begun to produce and sell natural gas from its Park County, Wyoming wells.

The field was first discovered in late 1980. The announcement was made by William F. Judd, president of the energy-related parent corporation.

The production potential (deliverability) as agreed to by purchaser, Tennessee Gas Pipeline, from the four wells that have been connected to the long awaited pipeline, is in excess of 9 million cubic feet of gas per day and in excess of 130 barrels of condensate per day.

Because of the temporary nationwide surplus of natural gas, the purchaser has curtailed delivery from these wells. The four have been restricted to a maximum allowable rate of 4.2 million cubic feet of gas per day. At this controlled flow rate, 48 barrels of condensate per day are being produced.

A fifth well is awaiting pipeline connection. A portion of the gas sales, 30 percent, from these wells will be applied to the repayment of approximately $2 million, which was received by Texas American Oil under the "take-or-pay" provision of the contract with Tennessee Gas Pipeline.

In the fourth quarter of this year, Texas American Oil plans to drill an 11,700 foot well in the Meeteetse Field in search of oil reserves beneath the current gas producing horizons at 7,900 and 9,000 feet.

Drilling plans are to first penetrate the Frontier and Muddy formations, the two existing gas-producing zones, and to continue drilling approximately 2,700 feet below the Muddy formation to test the Tensleep and Phosphoria formations.

The Phosphoria formation has produced in excess of 250,000 barrels of oil on this structure from a location approximately 2 miles south of the proposed test. The Tensleep formation has had significant oil shows in core samples from an older, non-operated well located approximately three quarters of a mile south of the proposed drillsite.

The company has also recently completed additional seismic research in the Meeteetse area. Preliminary evaluation of these data indicate the existence of a separate and deeper structure than that which is currently producing.

Texas American Oil plans to drill a wildcat well on this newly defined structural feature during early 1984 if continued seismic mapping deliniates a hydrocarbon trap.

Texas American Oil Corporation has an average 32.5 percent working interest in approximately 10,820 acres in Park County. With the expected improvement in the market for natural gas, the company will finalize its plans for drilling two to three additional development wells in the Meeteetse Field in 1984 to add additional producing gas reserves to those already established.

ARC adds windshield repair for full service

Those of you who have had the unfortunate occasion to need either a tow truck or need body work on your automobile are probably familiar with the need for something more than just an average body shop. Your car is one of your prime investments, and you must protect that investment. Those of you who have been around Midland for a couple of years are probably familiar with the largest independent body shop in town and are aware of the service it took to make it that. Those of you who do not know, or have not been in town long enough to know, here it is: ARC Truck & Auto Body is the largest independent body shop in town because they are more than just an average body shop.

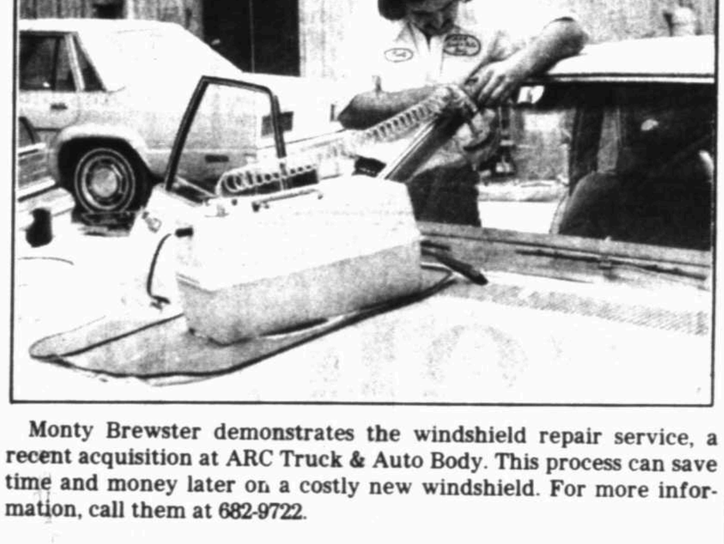
In only five years, ARC has grown to be the largest independent body shop in town due to service and quality. ARC will give each and every car the special care and attention as if it were the personal property of owner Allen Frasier. They pride themselves on doing the highest quality repair work around, and are always striving to find better ways to serve the customer.

A recent acquisition at ARC is the Sav-a-Shield windshield repair, pictured above. Sav-a-Shield will fill chips and cracks in your windshield up to 6 inches to keep it from "running" across your windshield the rest of the way. It works by forcing liquid glass into the crack or chip in your windshield and allowing it to harden at several different pressures. In only one short hour, and for only a few dollars, you can put your mind at ease about your windshield. Initial fee for one crack or chip is $45., and only $10. per crack or chip after that. Compare that to the cost of replacing your windshield, and you will see that ARC has come up with one more way to satisfy the customer.

Painting and pinstriping your car is no problem at ARC. Again, during these services, your car is treated as if it were the personal property of Allen Frasier. The paint room is large enough to even accomodate a diesel! Give them a try next time you feel like adding a little class to your car. Your car will come out looking at least as good as it did when it left the factory.

In addition to the paint and body shop, ARC also operates a 24-hour wrecker service. Next time your car breaks down, let them show you that there truly is a difference in wrecker services. And if you should be involved in an accident, give them a call and they can bring your car in to begin immediate repairs.

Quality and service make the difference at ARC Truck & Auto Body. Satisfied customers are why they are in business. So if it has been a long time since you have been satisfied with automobile repairs, give ARC Truck & Auto Body a call. They are located 2700 W. Francis. Or call 682-9722. You deserve the best. You deserve ARC.



Monty Brewster demonstrates the windshield repair service, a recent acquisition at ARC Truck & Auto Body. This process can save time and money later on a costly new windshield. For more information, call them at 682-9722.

Helping children to learn by experience

Children learn through experience. The teaching methods at Airline Child Care Center utilize many activities which involve the child in creative experimentation. Young children experiment with sounds, words, writing, drawing, singing, moving, and playing. Learning is a full-time job for the young children, and is an exciting endeavor as well.

Teachers search for ways to introduce themes and experiences. Activities include games, questions, work-jobs, songs, stories, and art projects that introduce stimulating themes such as Soace and Solar Systems, Dinosaurs and Other Prehistoric creatures, Reptiles and Amphibians, and many other fantastic topics. Books and puppets are used to allow children to relate and express their feelings and ideas. Discussions and "talk times" provide a relaxed atmosphere for problem solving and expansion of imagination. Games and experiments allow children to practice newly acquired skills.

The Four Year Old children often incorporate cooking with concepts of mathematics, measurement and reading. The Three Year Old children in the picture are using corn meal in a water-sand table to take part in experimentation with weight and volume and space. Everyday kitchen equipment such as measuring spoons and cups, sifters, sieves, and funnels are the tools used to promote active participation and experimentation.

Play is a child's work and outside play is no exception. Airline Child Care Center provides equipment that is interesting and innovative. The outside play area is spacious with equipment geared to the age and development of the children. A unique feature at Airline Child Care Center is two playgrounds— one area is for Two Years and under, and a larger play area is for children Three Years and older.

The coming fall program will provide themes that are both interesting and fun. "International Cultures and Customs" will review houses, clothing, food, and family life of countries throughout the world. A unit on "Natural Resources and Energy" will provide children with information about energy use and conservation as well as local industries. Older children will study "Cold Regions in the World" while younger children will study "Day and Night." Many occupations will be studied during "Families at Work." The children will study weather conditions when the Seasonal Units on "Fall and Winter" are presented.

BUSINESS/INDUSTRY NOTES
An introduction to the page

The Business/Industry Notes are published by the Midland Reporter-Telegram as a service to the businesses of the Permian Basin and beyond.

Three pages are devoted each week to the Business/Industry Notes (B&I pages): a double page spread on Sunday and one page on Tuesday.

The advertisements seen on these pages are directly related to the stories and photographs. Through a six month contract (26 weeks), businesses are given constant exposure to the literate public.

The stories and photos compliment the advertisements, giving the reader an in-depth view of the business. The reader is exposed to specific details and pertinent information not otherwise found on a small advertisement.

Midland houses between 3,500 and 4,000 businesses, reports the Midland Chamber of Commerce. With this amount of competition, constant exposure each week, for 26 consecutive weeks, can only promote interest to help a perspective business.

The businesses of the Permian Basin are as fascinating as they are numerous. Currently, teh B/I notes are graced with businesses such as an executive charter service, lingerie shops, numerous restaurants, auto and truck shops, camera shops and a behavioral hypnotist.

Any and all businesses are encouraged to join the Midland Reporter-Telegram's Business and Industry Notes, regardless of the nature of the business. All businesses, corporate or independent, are invited to consider this opportunity.

For further information contact the advertising department of the Reporter-Telegram at (915) 682-5311. The staff would be happy to quote prices and discuss potential story material. Call 682-5311 and let the Business/Industry Notes work for you.

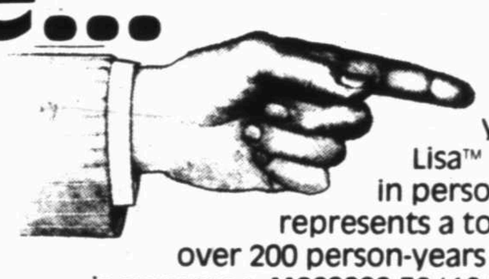
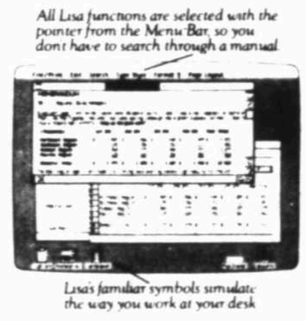
See Apple®'s Revolutionary New Personal Computer for the Office... Only at CTA!



Introducing Lisa.™ So advanced, you already know how to use it. Lisa™ is nothing short of a revolution in personal computing for the office. It represents a totally new software technology, over 200 person-years in development. The hardware is awesome: MC68000 32/16-bit processor, 1-Megabyte RAM, 364 lines X 720 dots bit-map display, dual 860K disk drives (1.4-Megabytes unformatted), 5-Megabyte ProFile hard disk. But the real revolution is in Lisa™'s totally new approach to software.

Lisa™ works the way you do

To use conventional personal computers, you first have to program yourself by studying the manual and learning computer commands. Lisa™ replaces those commands with pictures that let you work in the same familiar way you've always worked at your desk. File folders look like file folders. There's a calculator, stationery, even a wastebasket. To tell Lisa™ what you want, all you have to do is point to the appropriate picture using a clever device called a "mouse." With more software on the way, Lisa™'s integrated software packages now cover every major business application: LisaCalc electronic spreadsheet, LisaList electronic personal database, LisaWrite executive word processing, LisaGraph business graphics, LisaDraw design graphics, LisaProject electronic project management and LisaTerminal data communications.



All Lisa functions are selected with the pointer from the Menu Bar, so you don't have to search through a manual.

Lisa's familiar symbols simulate the way you work at your desk.

Come in to CTA this week for a "hands-on" demonstration

Of course, the only way to appreciate everything Lisa™ can bring to your office is to experience Lisa™ for yourself. So every day we're open this week CTA will provide a free Lisa™ demonstration and seminar at 10:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m. at our San Miguel Square store. Please call for an appointment to make sure our trained, qualified instructor can answer all of your questions. Computer Technology Associates was selected to be the only authorized Lisa™ dealer in the Permian Basin because we're the only ones that sell and support the full line of Apple® products. And, as in the past, we will provide the best selection of hardware and software and the authorized, factory-trained service and support you deserve for your computer investment.

Small business forum coming

LUBBOCK — State legislators and officials will share ideas on how to help small businesses at the Fifth Annual National Conference on the States and Small Business to be held in Minneapolis on October 12-14.

The Conference, titled 'The States and Small Business: Issues, Initiatives and Innovations, "is being sponsored by the U. S. Small Business Administration's Office of Advocacy.

"The conference will provide a forum for state legislators and officials to discuss what is being done at the state level to foster a healthy economic climate for small business," said Frank S. Swain, SBA's chief counsel for advocacy.

"State programs and legislation which are especially innovative will be highlighted. That's what this conference is all about — getting state legislators and administrators to share ideas with each other."

SBA Administrator James C. Sanders said, "The conference also will highlight the fact that more and more state policymakers — in addition to an increasing num ber of policy makers at the federal level — are realizing the important role small businesses play in national and state economies. Small businesses create most of the new jobs in our country. This fact alone reflects the importance of a healthy and prosperous small business community in each state."

Conference workshops will focus on small business policies and programs, capital formation, innovation, high technology, exporting and reducing government regulation.

As a result of previous SBA conferences, states are rapidly increasing their assistance to small businesses through the:

— Establishment of small business committees in the legislatures;

— Introduction of small business legislation modeled from other states and the U. S. Congress; and — Development of executives and lgislative small business agendas.

According to Philip O'Jibway, district director of Lubbock's SBA office, conference brochures and registration forms can be obtained by calling (806) 743—7462 or by visiting the Lubbock SBA office at 1611 — 10th Street, Suite 200.

September total retail building brisk

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

Growth in the retail business sector of Midland's economy continues as evidenced by new projects underway in the city and by the types of building permits being issued by the city's Department of Inspections and Permits.

Last week that department approved plans for a new strip shopping center and finishing work for new tenants at Mission Square, Agora III and Oak Ridge Square. Total construction valuation for these projects is $547,000.

Work is underway for Market Manor, a condominium strip shopping center located at the corner of Sinclair Street and Midland Drive. The city of Midland issued a $500,000 building permit to Cliff Rowe last week for the project, which is scheduled for completion by January 1984.

Market Manor will be a one-story shopping center with 20,000 square feet of space. Dunkles, a convenience store which also sells gasoline, is the anchor tenant. This will be the second Dunkles outlet in Midland; the first opened a few months ago at the corner of Garfield and Wadley.

Rowe's retail project brings the total value of construction permits to $2,062,463 for the month of September. For 1983 to date, that total is now $121.8 million.

Market Manor is the second new shopping center announced here in two weeks. Last week, Casbeer & Associates announced the beginning of construction at Lone Star Plaza, a new shopping center at the corner of Illinois and Midland Drive.

The city issued 22 permits last week. Other commercial activity focused on retail expansion in Midland. New permits included one issued to McBryde Construction which will build a beauty shop in Mission Square on North Big Spring Street, $2,000.

Larry Lumpkin & Associates received three permits totaling $47,000 for additions to Agora III Shopping Center on North Garfield near Loop 250. Lumpkin will be adding a dry cleaning store, convenience store and public restrooms to the new center.

Reeder & Reeder will do some interior remodeling at No. 6 Oak Ridge Square for $10,000.

7-Eleven bribery case postponed

NEW YORK (AP) — The bribery case against the operators of the 7-Eleven convenience store chain has been put off for two months at government request amid indications that others may be charged.

"There may be additional persons whom the grand jury may decide to return indictments against," said Assistant U. S. Attorney James Harmon Jr., Wednesday in successfully arguing for the delay.

Originally charged with conspiracy to bribe a New York state tax official were the Dallas-based Southland Corp., operators of the chain, and Southland Vice President Eugene DeFalco.

DeFalco pleaded guilty Tuesday, a day after he testified before a grand jury.

Court papers have revealed that the grand jury also was investigating John P. Thompson, chairman of Southland, and possibly other high company officials.

In seeking the delay, the prosecution said DeFalco's testimony had changed the case substantially.

Prosecutors also asked U. S. District Judge Charles Sifton to combine the trial of Southland with that of former City Councilman Eugene Mastropieri, also indicted on a conspiracy charge.

The government charges that Southland and DeFalco conspired with Mastropieri to bribe an unidentified tax official in 1977, and the councilman was paid $96,500 for "legal services" which he never performed.

Actually, according to the May 5 indictment, Mastropieri and DeFalco then conspired to cheat Southland, with the councilman agreeing to kick back $50,000 to DeFalco and keep $25,000 for himself.

The grand jury said it could not determine whether a bribe was ever paid to a tax official or who was to have been approached in Southland's effort to get a favorable ruling on a sales tax matter.

On Wednesday, which was to have been the start of Southland's trial, the prosecution sought to block a request by Southland's lawyers for transcripts of DeFalco's grand jury testimony.

Sifton took this motion and the request to combine the Southland and Mastropieri trials under advisement, set Sept. 27 for a hearing on the motions and set a new trial date of Nov. 14.

The 43-year-old DeFalco, who lives in Dallas, could get up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine when he is sentenced on Nov. 4.

Investment tax credit

By DONALD J. MASSOGLIA

The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA) requires taxpayers to reduce the basis of assets by 50 percent of the amount of regular, energy, and certified historic structure investment tax credits earned with respect to the property.

The basis adjustment generally applies to all depreciable assets placed in service after December 31, 1982, regardless of whether they are eligible for Accelerated Cost Recovery System (ACRS).

The lower basis will be used to compute cost recovery dedications and gain or loss when the asset is disposed of.

The following example illustrates the change in tax results as a result of the basis adjustment required by TEFRA.

Date Acquired	Asset Cost	Recovery Period	Investment Tax Credit	Basis Eligible For ACRS
1/1/82	$100,000	Five years	$10,000	$100,000
1/1/83	$100,000	Five Years	$10,000	$95,000

Taxpayers are given an opportunity to forego basis adjustment on the regular investment credit on recovery property, if they elect a 2-percentage point reduction in the credit instead. If the taxpayer in the above example made this election the tax results would be as follows:

Date Acquired	Asset Cost	Recovery Period	Investment Tax Credit	Basis Eligible For ACRS
1/1/83	$100,000	Five Years	$8,000	$100,000

The election is made on a property-by-property basis. In the case of partnerships, the election is made at the partnership level.

When should a taxpayer consider making the election to reduce the credit? A taxpyer should consider electing the reduced credit if, because of the tax liability limitation, he can't use the full credit in the year he placed the property into service and the only way he can claim the excess credit is by carrying it forward.

Banking Board continues its struggle with ATM rules

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State Banking Board members — who have already gone to court over their rules on automated teller machine (ATM) operations — have delayed adoption of proposed rules dealing with ATMs and point-of-sale terminals.

Board members have been struggling for over a year in their attempt to deal with the question of sharing of ATMs by banks, required by Texas law, although the board has changed members completely since it first considered the issue.

State Treasurer Ann Richards said she remains unsure of the ATM rules as they address the "market advantage" question; the rules as drafted speak to the "relative size" of the institutions.

Richards urged the board to consider penalties for violation of its ATM requirements.

The board decided to consider point-of-sale terminals as a separate issue. These machines transfer funds between the bank account of a purchaser and the seller of goods involved.

Friday, Sept. 23 will be the board's next meeting.

The Department of Water Resources is preparing to publish its final rules on wastewater discharge permit fees. The fees were considered at a public hearing last month — and were opposed by some industry and municipality representatives.

Adoption of the rules is expected later this fall.

Texas Credit Union Commission members are continuing to review all existing regulations relating to state-charter credit unions. Meetings, updates, and revisionary work is planned during the next few months.

Changes have been made at the urging of the attorney general's office, in a rule on credit union service organizations. The rule referred to data processing requests and the Credit Union Department code. Attorneys said the rules must be amended to remove reference to the code, or the code must be published along with the rule.

Rules on credit unions' issuance of securities have been delayed.

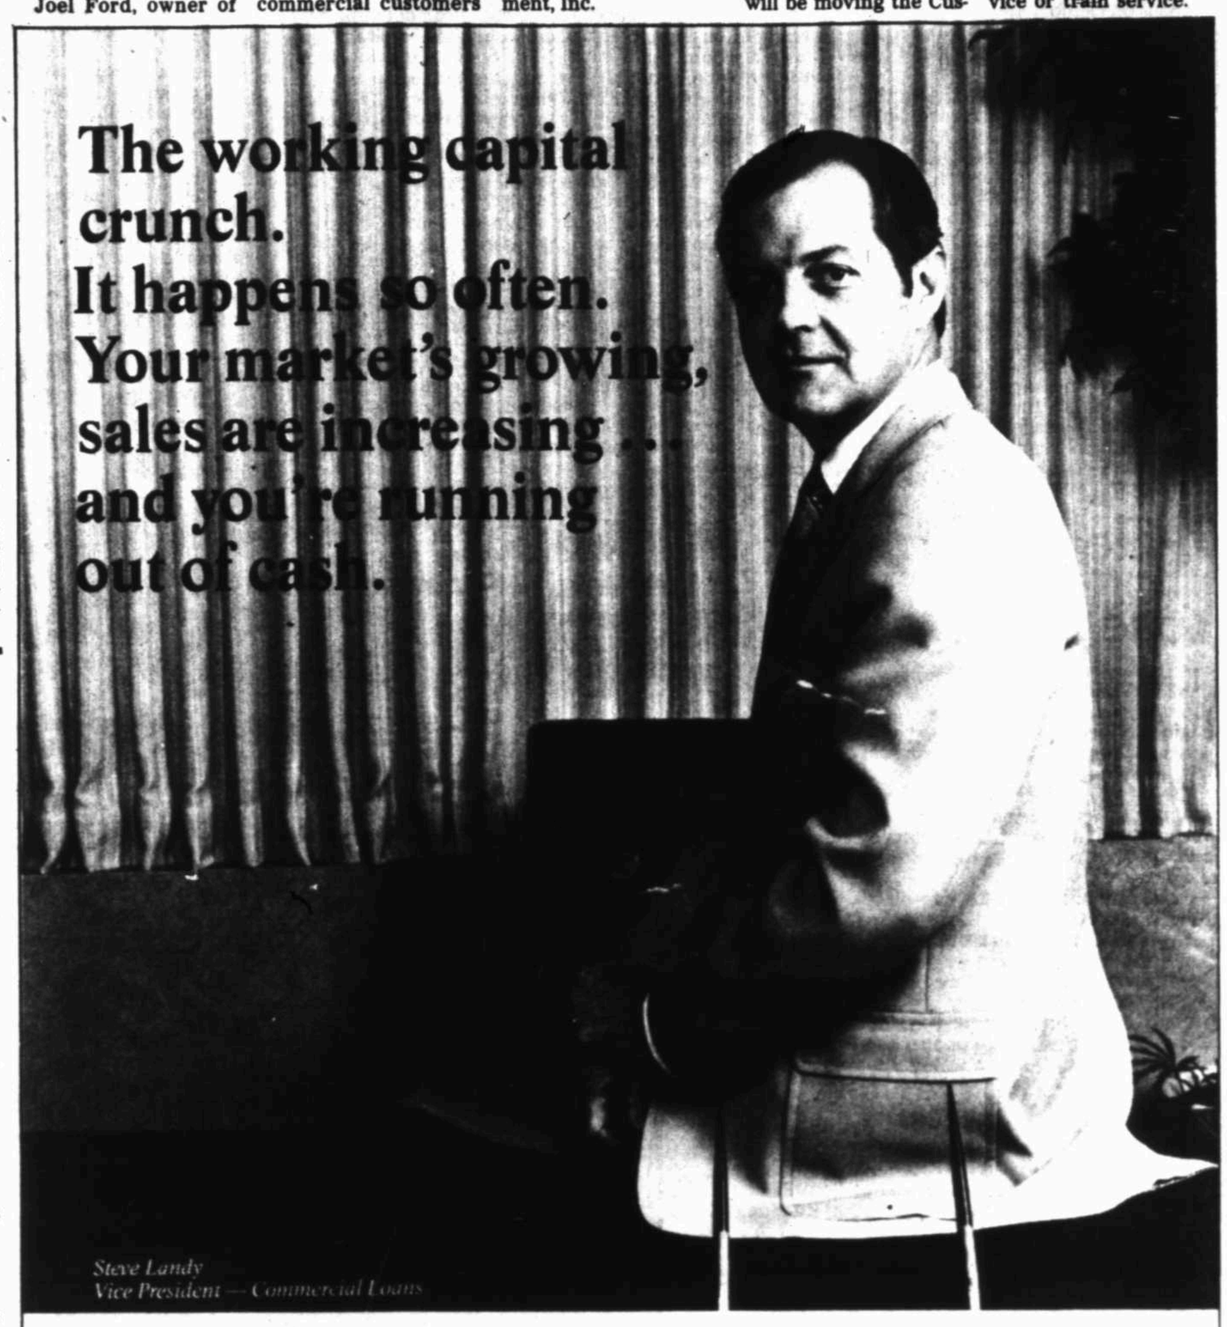
The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has approved interim use in Texas of a federal program for land disposal of hazardous wastes. The program is under the aegis of the Federal Resource Conservation and Recovery Act.

Duties will be shared under the program by the Dept. of Water Resources and the Texas Department of Health. Texas is seeking permanent use of the program to avoid double-permitting for industries' waste requirements, under state and federal laws.

EPA Region 6 administrator Dick Whittington, of Dallas, notes the delegation was based on review of the Texas agencies' programs showing they were "substantially equivalent" to the federal program.



Maybe you should talk to Steve Landy about Growth Financing and get control of your receivables, cash flow and working capital. He'll talk your business.

Let's talk business.
