WILLIAM N. DOAK NAMED SECRETARY OF LABOR

Planes Search Stormy Seas For Woman Flier Long Overdue From Havana

AUSTRALIAN PILOT DEFIES BAD WEATHER

Fears Grow When Little Ship Fails to Land At Miami

AVIATRIX 'WORRIED'

Craft Poorly Equipped For Rough Waters Or Blind Flying

HAVANA, Nov. 28. (AP)—Reports of a high wind and a rough sea tonight caused Pan-American Airways and Curtiss airport officials to fear for the safety of Mrs. J. M. Keith-Miller, Australian flier who left this morning for Miami and was hours overdue late this afternoon.

Two planes, one a tri-motored transport ship and the other a single-motored amphibian, left this afternoon for a search of the waterways, equipped with life crafts and emergency kits, but the roughness of the seas caused doubts that Mrs. Keith-Miller's plane could survive long had it landed on the gulf.

Carried Raft

She carried a raft when she left this morning, but expressed doubt she would be able to use it in case of a landing on the water, since it was a rubber affair and would have to be pumped up. Her little two-place cabin machine was not equipped either with radio or with instruments for flying blind.

Mrs. Keith-Miller took off this morning in the face of unfavorable weather despite warnings from veteran fliers, but she already had waited in Havana three days and was eager to return to Pittsburgh. She was advised to go yesterday and follow in the wake of a Pan-American passenger plane flying the regular course, but refused because she prefererd to start early of a morning and thus avoid an overnight stop in Miami.

Admits Worry

Another thing that caused concern was the fact that before the takeoff Mrs. Miller admitted she was worried, and it was feared this might have constituted a "mental hazard" in case she were forced down at sea. Her worry was because she had no instruments for blind flying, radio or bank dials, and was uncertain of her ability to use the rubber raft.

MIAMI SHIPS JOIN SEARCH

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 28. (AP)—Airplanes searched windswept Coral keys and the water of the gulf of Mexico today for the airplane of Mrs. J. M. Keith-Miller, hours overdue on a flight from Havana to Miami.

SOVIETS NAME FRANCE AGAIN

Nation Slipped Into Trial Despite Ruling

By CHARMION VON WIEGAND

MOSCOW, Nov. 28. (US)—While accusations against foreign powers in connection with the trial of eight defendants for counter-revolution were ruled out yesterday, the trial of Soviet Russia's latest conspiracy leaders heard the name of France mentioned again today.

Britain, Poland, Rumania and Bulgaria had all been accused of having a hand in the plot to overthrow Russia's Red regime, and the mention of circles in the United States and constant recurrance of anti-French charges prompted the court to rule out the mention of foreign powers. These charges were to be heard in secret.

Nevertheless, Prof. Leonid Ramzin, as first of the defendants to come to cross-examination today after reading a confession that extended over seven hours of two days, again brought the name of France into the court records.

Professor Ramzin and Victor Larichev were questioned today by Nikolai V. Krilenko, Societ attorney general and prosecutor of all important political cases. Ramzin, in his testimony said:

"It is an established fact now that the conspirators aimed at the establishment of a military dictatorship which would have been superseded by a democracy with freedom of speech and press."

"Would such counter-revolution as yours be possible now?" was M. Krilenko's question, referring to "now" as meaning since the international charges have been broadcast during the trial. Ramzin responded:

"No; because all Russians now know they would be slaves of France."

Ramzin was silenced, and cautioned about the mentioning of foreign powers, but Krilenko was obviously pleased that the word had slipped out.

Poisonous Liquor Blamed For Widow's Death After Fraternity House Party

AUSTIN, Nov. 28. (UP)—The Lambda Chi Alpha chapter house, one of the finest at the University of Texas, and former home here of E. M. House, was the scene of death of Mrs. Mildred Woodruff, a 33-year-old San Antonio widow, officials who concluded an investigation here tonight said.

County Judge George Mathews said his verdict was death from acute alcoholic poisoning.

A few couples were celebrating the Texas university Thanksgiving day victory over A. & M. college with an informal dance in the basement of the fraternity house, Sheriff Coley White said.

The investigation indicated that the young widow, being overcome, was given a pallet on which to lie down, the sheriff said. Later her escort discovered she was unconscious and had her taken to a hospital. When she arrived there she was dead.

Relatives of the young woman said she had suffered from heart trouble.

Immediately after the verdict, charges of possession and sale of liquor were filed against Joe Golightly, cafe operator in the University of Texas district, and a negro, arrested with him earlier in the day.

Arrests were made by Sheriff Coley White who had talked to Dr. Joe Gilbert, called to attend Mrs. Woodruff early this morning, and to a student said to have been with Mrs. Woodruff after the Texas-Texas Aggie football game yesterday.

V. I. Moore, dean of men, said he was continuing his investigation into the matter, and would recommend proper disciplinary action against students involved and against the fraternity in which the events leading to Mrs. Woodruff's death were said to have occurred.

He was sentenced to prison terms of three and 12 years, to run concurrently. H. A. Stanley, of Fort Worth, and returned to Arkansas yesterday, pleaded guilty to identical charges this morning and will be sentenced later. Noah Shoop of Van Buren, went on trial tonight.

Stanley was released to Texas officers after his arrest earlier this fall and was taken to Fort Worth where he is under indictment for the "torch slaying" of Roy Hawthorne.

Three others are held as accessories but they have not been arraigned. They are W. P. Spradley Jr., Buster Jack and Jack Spradley.

Held as Breckenridge officers for investigation in connection with the shooting, Butler and Stanley were accused of the Silver's theft when a money sack was found in their car. Butler was acquitted, however, when he testified that he had won the money in a dice game, and charges against Stanley were dismissed.

Hoover Replies to Green's Objections in Brief Statement

ENDORSED BY UNIONS

Senate Expected to Affirm Virginian to Break Precedent

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28. (AP)—William N. Doak, McLean, Va., who has been opposed by the American Federation of Labor, today was named secretary of labor by President Hoover.

Doak is legislative representative of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, which is not affiliated with the federation. William Green, federation president, has announced he thought a federation member should be named to the post which James J. Davis will quit next Monday. President Hoover replied to Green in making the appointment.

Reply to Green

"I have the highest respect for Mr. Green and the American Federation of Labor," Mr. Hoover said, "but Mr. Green's enunciation that appointments must come from one organization in fact imposes upon me the duty to maintain the principle of open and equal opportunity and freedom in appointments to public office."

Doak was suggested as secretary of labor when Mr. Hoover formed his cabinet two years ago, but the Federation was against the Brotherhood representative. William B. Wilson, the first labor secretary, was a Federation member, as was Davis and the Federation took the attitude that these had set a precedent. The result of that controversy was the retention of Davis but he was elected senator from Pennsylvania in November and a new labor secretary had to be found.

Confirmation Expected

Doak will have to be confirmed by the senate, but it was a question tonight whether the Federation would continue active opposition to him. There has been no indication from any senate members that they were against Doak.

In naming Doak, the president said several score labor unions, including members of the Labor Federation, had endorsed the new cabinet member. He added he knew Doak would represent all labor while in office and that Green himself had said he had the highest personal regard for the new appointee.

But such an agreement was not in sight tonight. Chairman Borah of the senate foreign relations committee who is personally opposed to American entry into the court announced he would put it before the committee promptly. Place each apple on a bed of shredded lettuce and top with a tablespoonful of mayonnaise. Serves five.

Hot Honey Muffins

Mix together a quarter of a cupful of honey, three-quarters of a cupful of sour milk and one tablespoonful of melted shortening. Sift together half a cupful of whole wheat flour, a quarter of a teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of baking powder, half a teaspoonful of salt and one cupful of bran. Add to the liquid mixture, fold in one well-beaten egg and half a cupful of chopped pecans. Beat for a few minutes, then bake in tiny buttered muffin pans. The batter for these muffins may be prepared in advance and kept in a very cold place until needed. If it is allowed to stand before baking beat a moment before placing in the muffin pans.

Fruit Cakes

With the passing of Thanksgiving the thoughts of home makers center on preparations for Christmas as it is the busiest and happiest social season of the year. Even the mothers who have long since entirely relinquished direct responsibility for food preparation in their own homes go into the kitchen at this season to lend their personal touch to the foods which in their youth they labored over in order to reach professional and artistic perfection.

Of all the foods of which this is true fruit cake is one of the most popular. In most households it is prepared only once a year and then in a quantity, as it keeps well, if it is wrapped carefully in oil paper and placed in a cake box.

It is the first holiday food to be considered as it must be prepared long enough in advance for it to ripen to that delicious, moist, spicy lusciousness for which there is no substitute either in flavor or suitability of service. Daintily sliced fruit cake makes a perfect accompaniment to the tea tray which is always kept in readiness by the hospitable hostess during the holiday season and may be served with coffee as dessert for lunch, dinner or supper.

In England no Christmas celebration is complete without specially decorated cakes. These are often used as centerpieces for dining tables and buffets.

Then, fruit cakes may be beautifully wrapped and used for holiday gifts. They may be baked in square pans and decorated to resemble a Christmas package—tissue paper, ribbons, seals and even warning "Please Do Not Open Till Christmas!" Any good recipe might be used for the cake. After it has been baked and cooled, frost the top and sides with quick frosting, which is made as follows:

Three tablespoonfuls water.
Two tablespoonfuls corn syrup.
One-half teaspoonful vanilla.
Three cupfuls confectioner's sugar.
One tablespoonful uncolored margarine.

Pour water, corn syrup and margarine in a saucepan. Bring to the boiling point, remove from the fire and add vanilla, then add a little at a time enough confectioners' sugar to make of the right consistency to spread. Beat after each addition and place frequently over boiling water to keep warm.

Then make a butter frosting by creaming two tablespoonfuls of butter with enough confectioners' sugar to spread easily. Flavor with bit of peppermint. Color this green or red with color paste; place in a pastry bag and with a wide tube make ribbons up the four sides of the cake and across the top, having them meet under a splashing big frosting bow. Then take a smaller tube and print the words "Please do not open till Christmas" across the top of the cake. While the frosting ribbons are still soft press in painted wintergreen wafer seals so that the cake will look like a real Christmas package.

The wintergreen wafers are easily painted with a tiny new paint brush and food colors. Dip the brush in water, then in the jar of color paste and paint designs on the wafers, copying, if you are not original from regular Christmas seals. (If too much liquid is used the design will run.) Christmas trees, candles, holly wreaths, bells and stars make attractive seals.

To weigh, cut and thoroughly mix the many ingredients for fruit cake requires time but the men of the family might be drafted into service. There is no one that can so well blend the fruit and batter of heavy fruit cake mixtures than a strong boy or man, and fitting the lining to the pan is a job that the average half grown boy will do with much precision and great joy.

The easiest way to manage in making fruit cake is to prepare the ingredients a few at a time until all are ready. If this is done only a short time will be required for combining them. The pans may be lined the day before they are to be used.

Because of the large amount of sugar in the fruits used in even an ordinary fruit cake, it is difficult to cook the cake through without scorching it or having a deep thick crust, which prevents the cake from keeping moist and causes it to fall apart when cut into very thin dainty slices.

There are two ways in which this can be very easily prevented. First, properly line the pans in which the fruit cake is to be cooked and second cook it by the method best adapted for the recipe.

If the bread pan is used, line it as follows:

1.—Cut the lining about three inches larger than the pan on all sides if it is to be used after baking for wrapping up the cake.

2.—Place a sheet of firm wrapping paper and a sheet of good quality oil paper on a table and put the pan on it. Slit the linings diagonally to the corners of the pan. (This allows double protection to the corners of the cake).

3.—Place the pan on another sheet of firm wrapping paper and another sheet of oil paper. Crease the linings against the pan to mark its shape; cut on creases. This set of linings exactly meet when used inside the pan. Put both sets of

The Rambler's Corner

By FRED THOMPSON

I felt sorry for Weatherford's girl pep squad down at Nocona Thursday night. They came from the field weeping copiously. By the time they reached the hotel tears were forming great streams down their cheeks. They gathered in the lobby, and as each Kangaroo player came in, he received pathetic cheers from the boosters of a losing team.

It seemed about 50-50. During the first half there were sobs aplenty audible in the ranks of the Nocona girls' pep squad. After the game, however, Nocona girls were happy, and Weatherford girls were sad.

Some people scoff at tears in relation to football. When Weatherford's team came off the field with eyes just as dripping as the orbs of their girl boosters, cynics might have scoffed, but I felt drawn towards those manly devils. And the sound of the girls' sobs nearly drove old Rambler hisself to tears.

When I got back to the office I caught a section of the lower regions for being late filing the lead of my story from Nocona. The reason was obvious. The Western Union office at Nocona is in the hotel lobby. Those weeping girls just took my mind off my business, I guess.

Without tears there would be no sport in football. When a team and its rooters weep after a loss, it's a derned good sign they know they've lost something worth fighting for. The team that will weep at a defeat will be the team to be merrier when it is victorious. Both tears and laughter have their meaning in football as, alas! in love. They signify striving with might and main for definite goal.

Pardon My Error

Damon Runyon invented, or stole, a phrase "phonus bollonus." It's a fine expression. It describes exactly my prognostication a few days back on the outcome of the Nocona-Weatherford game.

The Rambler fared fairly well on his other excursions in the prophetic realm, but he hit a snag in telling the boys to wager on Weatherford. Power to the Indians!

Now gather around and let's see who's going to win the bi-district clash between Olney and Nocona. Here's my prediction:

Grapefruit, they tell us, should not be eaten with sugar, because the placing of sugar on grapefruit is about as logical as mixing vinegar with nectar. Indeed, there is no justification for it whatever. One eats grapefruit to startle the glands into more production of digestive fluids. The grapefruit does this handily, by itself, even though it tastes indubitably sour. Sugar dissipates the sourness, but hinders the grapefruit's efforts to startle said glands, therefore the placing of sugar on said fruit is illogical and contrary to the thought of our best minds.

Train Hard, Boys

The Cubs are a hard pack of guys. They eat nails for dinner each night, I am told. They can run from Olney to Amarillo and back, and then beat a college freshman team. They are never tired. Theyy call for time out merely to give their under-nourished opponents a little rest.

Train hard, Indians! You showed wonderful power Thursday. You outlasted the Weatherford boys. You played a harder game than they in the last half, and that proves your physical fitness.

But Weatherford was not Olney. Olney can do the same thing you did.

So lay off the sweets, Indians—sweets of all kinds, what I mean.

The night before you play Olney you'd better chew up a barrel of nails.

A Protest and Its Fate

The Rambler learned at Nocona that efforts had been made the last week or so, indeed, on the eve of Thursday's game—to prove two of Nocona's star backfield men were ineligible on the grounds that once in their athletic careers they played professional baseball.

Happily to relate, the protest ended in nothing.

We learned that after Nocona had plastered Graham, Graham officials came forth with the declaration that the two players in question were probably violators of the code, and that a protest probably would be made. For some reason it never was.

Then Weatherford plucked up its ears at the rumor and a conference at Decatur Wednesday between officials of Nocona and Weatherford High schools was necessary to clear up the eligibility of the two players.

The process was orderly and justifiable. If there are doubts about the eligibility of players, school officials are perfectly right in bringing the matter up for discussion.

We are glad the protest ended in nothing, for this reason: because it was brought up so late in the season. Protests are not only made at the beginning of the season, they are expected. Players' rights are questioned, and they have to be cleared up. But to wait until a team has won a title of some kind, and begins planning for another title—and then bring up a protest seems that the latter is brought up merely as a grudge of a losing team.

Title in Doubt After Walters Beats Temple

Special to The Record News.

WALTERS, Okla., Nov. 28.—Walters Blue Devils roundly trounced the Temple Tigers in the last game of the season here Thursday, winning the game by the score of 20 to 2. Temple won their two points when Walters recovered a fumble behind the goal line on the first kick-off of the game. After that time the Tigers did not seriously threaten. The Blue Devils, drilled by Coach Paul Kratz during the past week in aerial attack, were able to complete 13 of 27 passes attempted for a gain of 190 yards which with gains in line plays made a total of 354 yards. The Tigers made 105 yards from scrimmage. First downs for Walters were 15, Temple 7. Walters passing combination, Kolar, Musgrove and Richardson, was working almost to perfection. While broken field running of Richardson was an outstanding feature of the game. Taylor and Schupp, Temple, made several good gains through the Walters line. Temple and Walters have lost only one game in the South Central conference this year and the championship is yet in doubt.

TEAMS OFFERED USE OF PARK

School Officials to Decide On Site Monday

By FRED D. THOMPSON

The Nocona-Olney football battle for bi-district honors may be staged at Athletic park in Wichita Falls.

Nocona school officials, it was said, have already agreed to the plan, and there remains only the consent of the Olney school.

The use of probably the best stadium in Northwest Texas was placed at the disposal of the two schools free of charge Friday by the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce, which further agreed to handle all advertising of the game, and promised teams and fans of the two neighboring cities the best of treatment and attention while here.

Decision Expected Monday

Final decision on whether the game will be played here was expected Monday, when Nocona and Olney school officials are scheduled to meet here with chamber of commerce officials. An agreement Friday was impossible owing to the absence of B. C. Shulkey, Olney superintendent of schools. Mr. Schulkey was attending a teachers' meeting at Galveston.

Should the bi-district clash be waged at Spudder park, it would be certain to draw one of the largest football crowds ever to assemble in Wichita Falls, it is confidently believed here. Both the Nocona and Olney teams have received widespread publicity for their impressive marches to the championship of their respective districts. Nocona, coming to fame of late by whipping Graham for the half-district, and then Weatherford for the district title, has excited the interest and admiration of fans all over Northwest Texas, who would be certain to flock to Athletic park to watch the Tribe's success against Olney's Cubs. The latter team is well known as one of the outstanding class B teams of the entire state, if not the Southwest, and the promise of a show staged by the Olney Cubs always starts Wichita Falls fans, and fans from all nearby cities, in a scramble for tickets.

The proximity of both towns to Wichita Falls was pointed out as an advantage in staging the game here. Olney is connected with Wichita Falls by perfect concrete highways. Nocona is not so fortunate, but the roads between Wichita Falls and the home of the Indians are far from bad.

Fine Races Decided

The Nocona Indians won the championship of district 4 Thursday by defeating Weatherford, 20 to 13. Four other class B district championships were decided the same day in games played all over this section of the state. Olney won its final game of the season from Seymour, 26 to 0, and thereby won its fourth consecutive district championship. The teams are now rearin' in their traces, awaiting the bi-district game, the semi-final in the regional play.

Memphis lost out in its chase of the district No. 1 crown, losing to Dalhart's Wolves, 26 to 0. Dalhart thereby kept intact its record of an uncrossed goal line during the 1930 season. Meanwhile Slaton was victorious over Littlefield, 14 to 7, to cinch the district No. 2 title. Dalhart and Slaton will meet in the bi-district round at a place and time to be decided within the next few days.

The winner of the Nocona-Olney game, and the winner of the Dalhart-Slaton game will meet for the regional championship, the highest honor available for class B elevens.

Snyder won the district No. 9 championship Turkey day by defeating Haskell, 21 to 0. The winner in this district is not included in the regional championship sought by the four teams mentioned above, but will compete in a regional championship embracing its territory.

Indians Baffle Experts

All of the district championship games of Thursday went off about as expected with one grand and glorious exception, to-wit, Nocona's daring victory over a heavier Weatherford team. To whip Weatherford the Indians staged one of the greatest last-half finishes ever seen in Northwest Texas football. Trailing at the half, 6 to 13, the Noconans summoned all the pluck and vigor at their command and registered two touchdowns in the third quarter to establish a lead the Kangaroos could not overcome. Nocona's defensive tactics in the last quarter were perfect. Weatherford threatened to tie the score for the second time in the last quarter, having the ball well within Nocona's 10-yard stripe, but the alacrity of a Nocona player in recovering a Weatherford fumble behind his own goal line, saved the day.

Nocona entered the game distinct under-dogs, and came out with tattered, but triumphant colors.

It was the only upset in all the district championship games, and was just as much a surprise to coaches of the district as it was to forecasters of less ability. Sports editors of the region had been pleased to see their prediction that Weatherford would win backed up by the opinions of some of the leading coaches in the district.

It is known that Coach Albert Acker of the Olney Cubs in person scouted the recent Weatherford-Masonic Home game at great length, expecting the Kangaroos to be the rivals of his Cubs in the bi-district round.

Wichita Youngsters Bag Deer Near Kerrville

Two Wichita Falls youngsters have been far more successful than many grown-ups on deer hunts this season. Word was received Friday by L. T. Burns Sr., 2025 Clarinda, that his nine-year-old son, L. T. Jr., had brought down a big buck while hunting with his grandfather, W. M. McGregor, near Kerrville, Texas. Carter McGregor Jr., 13, also on the holiday hunting party, brought down a deer a day or so previous, it was learned.

Second Place Honors at Stake In Final Two Southwest Games Today

By GAYLE TALBOT JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

DALLAS, Nov. 28.—The Texas Longhorns having carried off the big plum by swamping the Aggies, 26 to 0, in the Thanksgiving tussle at Austin, less fortunate members of the Southwest conference will fight it out for the "leavings" tomorrow.

The distinction, such as it is, of finishing second in the 1930 grid scramble will be at stake in the two contests scheduled, with three teams in the running. Both Southern Methodist and Texas Christian, who clash in their 13th annual duel here, will be gunning for runner-up honors, and the Baylor Bears can assure themselves no worse than a tie for second by defeating the Rice Owls at Waco.

Fireworks Promised

Although Texas' decisive victory removed any last, lingering hopes entertained by the pursuing pack and took the edge off tomorrow's battles, prospects were that the concluding tilts would be crammed with fine football. The red-hot rivalry between the ex-champion Horned Frogs and Mustangs assures plenty of fireworks in the game here, while the young Rice eleven figures to give the veteran Baylor Bears a hard skirmish at Waco.

With the exception of Rice's post-season engagement with Iowa State next week at Houston, tomorrow's contests will close the conference books. The Longhorns and Aggies already have turned in their work clothes, as have also the Arkansas Razorbacks, who closed an unsuccessful season in losing to the Centenary Gentlemen, 7 to 6, yesterday at Shreveport. The Porkers won only three out of nine games played but two of those were within the conference.

Leland Closes Career

One of the Southwest's outstanding athletes will colse his football career in the game here. Cy Leland, recognized as the fastest back in the country, will don the moleskins for the last time to quarterback the Christian eleven against the Mustangs. While Cy has not done as well as last season, when his deeds of valor played a big part in winning the championship for T. C. U. and earned him the title of the conference's "most valuable player," he still is a colorful gridster. Other members of the Frog eleven who will call it quits after tomorrow are Roberson, end; Griffith, fullback; Butler, guard; Cox, tackle, and Eury, guard.

Several valuable cogs in the Mustang team that takes the field tomorrow will be absent next fall. They include Louie Long, great end; Ira Hopper, fullback; Malcolm Powell, center; Bill Skeeters, tackle; Butler, tackle, and Tarrance, guard. Beaten out of last year's title when they were held to a 7-7 tie by the Horned Frogs, these Pony veterans hope to finish with a victory over their old rivals.

Last of 1930 Bruins

The struggle at Waco will see the last of the present Baylor machine. Graduation will wreck it, taking the entire backfield and most of the line. Captain Bochey Koch, Wilson, Paradeaux, Witcher, Morris, Kathkart, McElreath, Lewter and Furl are among the regulars who will hear their final gun tomorrow. The Rice squad, on the other hand, will be back almost intact. Captain Bill Morgan, guard, and McCable, center, are the only serious losses.

Southern Methodist and Baylor will be the favored duo in the grand finale. The Mustangs have gone great guns in their last two bouts, crushing Navy and Rice with comparative ease, while the Christians have suffered disastrous losses to Texas and Baylor. The Baylor eleven looked like a world-beater in trouncing the Christians, 35 to 14, a week ago. If both Southern Methodist and Baylor win, they will tie for second place. Texas Christian's only hope for the position lies in its ability to lick the Mustangs while Rice stops Baylor.

The standing:

	W	L	T	Pct.
Texas	4	1	0	.800
Southern Methodist	2	1	1	.625
Baylor	2	1	1	.625
Texas Christian	3	2	0	.600
Arkansas	2	2	0	.500
Rice	2	3	0	.400
Texas A. & M.	0	5	0	.000

ONLY 3 TEAMS SCORE ON CUBS

Opponents Get Only 18 Points Off Olney

Chillicothe, Burkburnett and Megargel today were in possession of consolation trophies in the class B, district No. 3 football race, which closed Thursday with Olney winning the championship by a 26 to 0 decision over Seymour.

The trophies in question were simply the record books, which show that these three teams, of all in the league, were the only ones good enough to register a touchdown against Acker's plunging Cubs.

Each of the three clubs scored six points against Olney during the season, making Olney's opponents' scoring record for the season a total of 18 points. Meanwhile, unbeaten and challenged only once, by Chillicothe, the Cubs kept the scorekeepers busy by chalking up 276 points.

The Cubs now face the bi-district game with the Nocona Indians, champions of district No. 4.

Eagles Are Second

Chillicothe finished the race in second place, being defeated only once, that at the hands of the Cubs, 36 to 6.

Archer City registered a brilliant 12 to 0 victory over Burkburnett Thursday to cinch third place in the standings with four victories and three defeats. Megargel and Seymour, both highly touted during the first half of the season, wound up in a tie for fourth place, both with three victories and four defeats. Burkburnett, Henrietta and Fairview occupy the cellar in the order named.

One of Megargel's losses was a decision in favor of Henrietta after the teams had battled to a scoreless tie at the beginning of the season. Henrietta had the edge in first downs.

The final district standing and team records follow:

TWO FACE CHARGES

Preliminary hearings will be held before Justice R. V. Gwinn Saturday morning at 10 o'clock for Jake Stout and Fred Holmes, charged with theft of merchandise worth more than $50 from the M-K-T supply warehouse, according to Sam B. Spence, district attorney. The alleged offense occurred several days ago, Mr. Spence said.

BURGLARY CHARGE

A Burkburnett youth was charged in a complaint filed in the office of District Attorney Sam B. Spence Friday with burglary of the Bivens Cigar and Confectionery store at Burkburnett on Oct. 23, according to Mr. Spence.

The accused had not yet been arrested Friday evening, according to Sheriff W. G. Bralley.

Crowd of 125,000 Expected Today At Traditional Irish-Army Game

CHICAGO, Nov. 28. (AP) — The Rough Riders from Notre Dame, riding the tide of 17 straight conquests, tomorrow will attempt to tame the unbroken Army Mule before perhaps the largest assemblage to witness a football game in America.

One hundred and twenty-five thousand spectators—2,000 more than the record crowd established at the Notre Dame-University of Southern California game a year ago—were expected to crowd into Chicago's gigantic lake front stadium, Soldier field, to witness the battle between the two undefeated teams.

It will be the 17th gridiron battle in 18 years between the two rivals, but more than football tradition will be behind it. The victor will remain in the waning struggle for mythical championship honors for 1930; the lower will experience the first blot of the campaign on its record and join the ranks of the defeated.

As the zero hour for the struggle approached, both teams anxiously studied the weather man's bulletins, the Army hoping for almost any kind of weather except a perfect football day and Notre Dame hoping for at least a hard field.

The last prediction of the day, however, promised a day about 30 degrees above zero and at least a light snowfall. If the prediction is correct, the teams will fight it out on a muddy field as the turf for the past two days has been frozen with the near zero weather. Such a playing condition would favor the heavy Army line and the heavy, ploughing Cadet backs and handicap the fast charging Notre Dame ball carriers, on whose speed Coach Knute Rockne depends.

From past performances and the type of opponents the two teams have met so far this season, Notre Dame rightfully ranked as the favorite.

Both teams went through spirited, final workouts today. Down at South Bend, Rockne drilled his squad indoors on signals, blocking, passing and kicking. All the regulars reported they were in good physical condition again and ready to go. The Cadets went through a secret drill on Soldier field, brushing up on the game's fundamentals.

Ranger Wins

RANGER, Texas, Nov. 28. (AP)—Ranger High school upset the champion Breckenridge Buckaroos here, 12 to 7, this afternoon to throw the Oil Belt football race into confusion. "Dangerous Dan" McCarty, Ranger ace, loped 70 yards with an intercepted pass for the first score and he took a lateral pass for a 14-yard voyage around end and the other counter.

The Cisco Loboes, who have lost only one game, will play Mineral Wells in Cisco tomorrow afternoon, and if a Cisco victory results, the Loboes will meet Breckenridge, probably next Tuesday, for the district title. In a former clash, Breckenridge defeated Cisco 35 to 6.

PACK CLOSES IN GRAND MANNER

District 1 Race Ends With Sandies Again Champs

The race in class A, district No. 1 for the year 1930 is past history. Coaches over the district, subject to praise or criticism of their efforts, in all likelihood paid attention to neither, but starting repeating in their minds the names of likely prospects around which to build their 1931 teams.

Graduation will take its usual toll from every team in the district, and last Thursday, in the closing games of the season, many were the seniors playing their last game of high school football.

The Coyotes were hard hit. All of 15 players will graduate at the end of this school year, including six first string men. The days of Chick Holden, Danny Cox, Harlan Ray, Johnny White, and many others, are no more.

The Final Games

Victories for Amarillo, Electra, Pampa and Lubbock in relatively easy fashion, closed the season last Thursday. The Coyotes, throwing caution to the winds, cluttered up the air with forward passes and scored 18 points, more than any other team in the district had been able to put over, against the champion Amarillo Sandies. Bennett Withrow was the running and passing star of the game. He made every counter. Amarillo ran up 85 points, many of them resulting from intercepted Coyote passes, and thereby took full possession of the district title. The Sandies now face the Oil Belt champions in the bi-district round.

The closest game of the four last Thursday was Electra's 18 to 7 victory over Vernon. Pampa wound up the season by scoring 58 points to Quanah's 20, and Lubbock closed with a 38 to 12 victory over Plainview.

Under-Dogs Good

All things considered, the under-dogs did right well in the season's final. The Coyotes found consolation in scoring three touchdowns against the Sandies. Quanah did nobly in scoring 20 points against the strong Pampa crew; and Plainview did the unexpected in scoring two touchdowns against Lubbock.

The final district standing and team records follow:

All-Americans Are 'Phonus Bollonus,' Agrees Runyon in Attack on Coach

By DAMON RUNYON
(Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Mr. Chick Meehan, football coach at New York university, and a very good coach, at that, pains me no little by the following crack:

"The all-American selections soon will be made, and it will not be surprising to see Yale, Harvard and Princeton represented on such teams. This will prove conclusively that all-American teams are the 'bunk.'"

My pain is not due to the apparently fretful Mr. Meehan's statement that the all-Americans are the "bunk," nor is it due to finding a representative of a high class educational instituiton like N. Y. U., resorting to such inelegancy of English.

I rather agree with Mr. Meehan that the all-Americans are the phonus bolinous, which is not good English, but very good latin. In fact, I have said as much long, long before Mr. Meehan. I said it when at least one of Mr. Meehan's players was being named all-American by a lot of all-American pickers, of which, I am happy to say, I am not one.

My agony over Mr. Meehan's statement is due to the fact that I feel in it a deep dig at the erstwhile big three. If Mr. Meehan had said that it will not be surprising to see Yale, Harvard, Princeton and New York university represented on all-American teams, thus proving conclusively that such teams are the "bunk," I might have put it down as constructive criticism.

Under the circumstances, however, I must judge that Mr. Meehan is not only mad at Yale, Harvard and Princeton, but that he has never seen Harvard play.

If he had, I am quite sure that Mr. Meehan would freely admit that while any all-American team is the "bunk," the one that fails to name Ben Ticknor, of Harvard, as its center, is two "bunks," and maybe three "bunks."

Now Ben Ticknor, of Harvard, is a haughty young man, I am told, of rich family, and with all that chill of manner once characteristic of your true Harvardian, but he can play center to who-laid-the-chunk, and if he isn't the best center in the football world today, he'll do until the best comes along.

He gave a great exhibition against Yale Saturday. He gave a great exhibition in every game he played, not only this year, but last year, too, when he was nominated all-American by every football critic that counts a darn.

Mr. Meehan errs in an old-fashioned way when he intimates that membership on a Yale, Harvard or Princeton team gives a man all-American entre over and above other teams. That was perhaps true in the time of the late Walter Camp, when Yale, Harvard and Princeton played most of the football that was played in this country.

But in these piping times, the very fact that a player is a member of a team of the former big three is against him, the all-American pickers being chary of picking him for fear of being accused of that old partisanship that was attributed to Camp, and his contemporaries.

In other words, a Yale, Harvard or Princeton player has to be just about twice as good as any other player to get any general recognition on all-American teams, "bunk" though they may be, and that's how good Ben Ticknor, of Harvard, is as a center.

You might discount the testimony of Mr. Adam Walsh, the former Notre Dame center, who now coaches the Yale line, on the ground of partisanship if Mr. Walsh sang the praises of Loeser, of Yale, a mighty good center, at that. But when Mr. Walsh, who was all-American himself, and perhaps one of the all-time great centers, remarks that Ticknor, or Harvard is truly a great center, you must give ear to his chatter. And that's what Mr. Walsh remarked the night of the game between the Harvards and the Yales.

Speaking of Mr. Adam Walsh, his Yale line displayed a Walsh-coached right guard this season who may well be rated all-American in anyone's selection, as long as they are going to make all-American selections. I have reference to Mr. Fred J. Linehan, of Westfield, Mass.

Six-feet-two, and weighing 205 pounds, Linehan was a tremendous guard throughout the season. I am not one who goes about peering at guards as a profession, or for any ulterior purpose, and I do not pose as an expert on guards, right or left, but I am willing to go on record as saying that Linehan can out-guard any guard you know.

But I am willing to waive Linehan, if you don't try to give me an argument on Ticknor. I am really somewhat Ticknor-minded. This fellow is another big chap, standing six-feet-two, and weighing 193 pounds. He is extremely fast, and extremely rough, as little Mr. Albie Booth, of Yale, can testify, since it was Ticknor who jerked Albie around quite some last Saturday—unjustly, I thought.

Despite his essentially Bostonian manner, Ben Ticknor comes from New York City. He wound up his football career Saturday, and will probably become one of those big Wall street brokers, or even just a little Wall street broker. Ticknor is 21 years old, and prepped for fair Harvard at Milton, where most Harvard guys prep.

Siano, of Fordham, is a great center, no doubt of that. I have never seen him play, but all football observers who have viewed this young man in action, agree on his ability. There are other centers also accounted great. But I think Ticknor is a stand-out center, comparable with the best the game has ever produced.

Mr. Andy Kerr, coach of the mighty Colgate club, champions of the East, is a fair judge of football players, and Mr. Kerr, too, testified the other night that Ticknor was about as good a center as he had ever seen, and Mr. Kerr has seen a lot of centers.

Mr. Kerr has a couple of all-Americanos himself for 1930 in Maculuso and Hart, of the Colgate backfield. From what I hear of these pigskin huggers, I judge they will get a lot of nominations. I also hear much chatter of one Frank Dodd, of somewhere down South, as a potential all-American quarterback.

But I'd better stop right here. The first thing I know I'll be picking all-Americans myself, after agreeing with Mr. Meehan that they are apple sauce. That is all but Ben Ticknor, of Harvard, who is practically an all-American team in himself.

BEG YOUR PARDON

Through an error in Friday's issue of The Record News, it was stated that the three children of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stanfield were rescued from their burning home on the old Petrolia road by two Boy Scouts while the parents were attending the air show. It has since been learned that Mrs. Stanfield left the home only for a short time in the company of Mrs. Walter Touchstone, a neighbor, to leave instructions with relatives in town who were preparing to depart to the bedside of Mr. Stanfield's sister who was critically ill in another city. Mrs. Stanfield had received a message of the illness of the sister during the day while Mr. Stanfield was at work.

particular importance to Wichita Falls, according to a statement made Friday by John Boswell, manager of the chamber of commerce here.

Highway 114, Mr. Boswell said, is a short cut from Dallas to Rhome where it connects with highway 2, leading into Wichita Falls. Highway 114 does not go through Fort Worth as does the old route, but cuts directly across from Dallas to Rhome, eliminating 17 miles of travel. The entire project is to cost in the neighborhood of $2,500,000, and the Wichita Falls interests contributed greatly to the work making the shorter route possible, Mr. Boswell said.

Mrs. R. R. Fisk and Mrs. F. C. Rochon, two of the city's best women golfers, advanced to the finals Friday in the annual Weeks Park Ladies Golf association tournament. Mrs. Fisk defeated Mrs. W. W. Haney, 8 and 7, and Mrs. Rochon turned in a 5 and 3 victory over Mrs. Phil Hessler.

'Hackberry' Injured In Chasing Coyotes

Providing coyotes for a wolf and dog rodeo is no easy undertaking, according to "Hackberry Slim" Johnson, who returned to Wichita Falls Friday afternoon with an injured shoulder and four freshly captured coyotes from a ranch near Byers.

"Hackberry" was giving chase on a horse to a coyote when his mount stumbled and fell, injuring the promotor's shoulder. However, the injured shoulder failed to keep "Hackberry" from getting his coyotes.

Several Archer City dog fanciers have entered dogs for the rabbit races, it was announced.

ATWELL HEARS CIVIL SUITS

Court May Sentence Tyson And Logsdon Today

Trial of civil suits was opened before Judge William H. Atwell when the current session of federal court was resumed at 10 o'clock Friday morning following a Thanksgiving recess of one day.

Two jury cases were completed during the day. The suit of Evelyn Taylor, brought by Leon Taylor as her close friend, against the Midland Life Insurance company seeking payment of a life insurance policy under which the plaintiff was beneficiary, resulted in an instructed verdict for the defendant.

In the suit of the Jacksboro Stone Products company against Froemming Brothers, a contracting concern, charging breach of contract, the plaintiff was awarded a judgment of $1,333.33, it was said. A contract alleged to have been made for supplying stone for certain road construction in Baylor county, was the basis of the action.

Judge Atwell is expected to call Jont G. Tyson and William R. Logsdon, former prohibition agents for the federal government, before the court for sentences Saturday. Following their conviction Wednesday on charges of bribery and conspiracy, Judge Atwell announced that sentence would be pronounced Friday or Saturday.

A Professor's Worry Afraid of Geniuses Not Too Many Yet Newton Baker's Medal

By EMILE GAUVREAU

"If I were commissioner of immigration," says Prof. M. Osman, psychologist of the School of Social Science, "I should prefer to admit a million high-grade morons to a million geniuses to the United States, because morons could be put to useful work which none of us wants to do, while to support a million geniuses would be an impossible task."

The good professor should not worry about the possibility of a million geniuses coming over.

In the first place, geniuses do not spring up overnight like mushrooms; one may count them on the five fingers of one's hand and have half of the fingers left for near-geniuses. In the second place, if morons do useful work, it is work directed by men of intelligence, who, in turn, derive their initiative and activity from the original impulse of some thinker's creation or invention.

The whole structure of our civilization is built on the pioneering vision of a genius. Shaw, for instance, mentions eight geniuses and calls them "builders of the universe." It is not we who support geniuses, but rather geniuses who support us. The average man would be a dead weight to society, unless he carried out efficiently the thousand and one tasks that a single thought of a genius creates for him.

In time, machines will displace the moronic type. Nothing will ever displace the genius. Professor Osman should not be afraid to admit as many as apply for admission. There will never be too many of them.

A red-headed parrot, whose billingsgate was so comprehensive that the authorities at the St. Louis Zoo were forced to cut short its career there as lecturer on profanity, has been purchased by a New Yorker for $140. There were 619 bids for this outspoken bird—which shows that frankness sometimes pays. Well-behaved parrots fetch generally no more than $100. Parrots that swear with a hearty contempt for minors are always at a premium.

Perhaps no tribute that has come to Newton D. Baker, ex-secretary of war, will be so gratifying to him as the award by a committee of notables for his "Promotion of Better Understanding Between Christian and Jew in America." Baker is the winner of the first American Hebrew medal to be awarded for such service.

The medal portrays two figures personifying Jew and Christian climbing together the mountain of misunderstanding toward mutuality.

The Nobel awards honor men for literary achievements, for important work in physics, chemistry, medicine or physiology, and service in the interest of peace. Service in the promotion of better understanding between races, which is always the prelude to peace, should appeal toh the committee of awards in Sweden as an amendment to the provisions of the inventor of dynamite.

Millions of dollars can be put into general circulation by promptness in Washington in cashing soldiers' bonuses. These bonuses were issued to army and navy men after the war and, in most cases, are not negotiable for another 15 years. The present distress among those who did service in the rank and file, here and abroad, warrants consideration. The release of so much money would benefit the country at large, also.

Civil-War Planes

WARSAW.—During peace and war-times, civil airplanes in Poland will be commandeered by the government for use in urgent military transportation, according to a recent official decree. Owners of private planes will be paid for the use of their aircraft, and wages will be paid crews operating them if supplied by the owners.

Hambone's Meditations

Copyright, 1930, by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.

The Interborough Rapid Transit system in New York announced it carried 54,000,000 more passengers last year than the year before. What they might well call a crushing business.

A writer, just returned from Africa, says he prefers cannibals to the people he meets on Broadway. Apparently he has had a close escape from the scalpers on the great White Way.

A famous opera singer who was jeered in Vienna was recently cheered to the echo in London. This may be another instance of the slowness of the English to grasp a joke.

The old-timers who said the world was flat may not have been so much in error at that. Who knows but what there was a depression in those times, too?

"There's no point in that," said the end curtly as he blocked the kick after touchdown.

An End of Pessimism

THE universe is on its way to extinction, and there is no remote possibility that the process can be halted. So says Sir James Jeans, secretary of the British Royal society, in the recently issued annual report of the Smithsonian institution.

This, of course, is far from being the first time that a scientist of international reputation has made this statement. The thing has been said, now and again, for a full century, and most literate people are thoroughly familiar with the fact. The interesting thing in this case is the way it serves to underline the profound shift in intellectual attitudes that is taking place in the world.

When scientists first began to analyze the material world, to estimate its age and to make speculations about the length of time that remained to it, they engendered a great wave of pessimism. It was felt, by thoughtful people, that these speculations and analyses had banished God from the skies and hope from the human breast. The concept of a soulless mechanistic universe, far from being new, came into popularity a generation or two ago; and it was chiefly the work of the scientists that was responsible.

That attitude has colored human activities for a considerable time. It has been especially important in literature. Our highest honors are reserved for men who assure us that man is an unimportant accident, beset by inscrutable natural forces that frustrate his every desire. It has been fashionable, in the intellectual world, to be a deep-dyed pessimist.

But consider, now, this fact: Sir James Jeans, quoted above, is not only one of the world's ranking men of science; he is also one of the leaders in a spirited revolt against this dark-hued mechanistic theory. He sees the material world gong down to decay and death, as did his predecessors; but he does not draw the same lesson from the spectacle.

Probably a new set of values is being brought into the world. The set under which we have lived during the last few decades has proven woefully inadequate. Our pessimism has not sustained us. Sir James is only one of a number of men who are pointing the way to a new and less gloomy outlook.

Employers Asked to Dismiss

GOV. CLYDE M. REED of Kansas will return to private life in the coming month of January. His latest is that maximum use by railroads in Kansas of American laborers as now are employed as a means toward relieving unemployment. His suggestion was made in a letter to the presidents of six railroads and while definite figures are lacking it was estimated in official circles that approximately 7,000 Mexican laborers are employed by railroads in Kansas. It is said that Capt. J. F. Lucey of Dallas, a member of President Hoover's employment commission, had the ear of Governor Reed and whispered this message:

"I am informed you have a large number of transient Mexican labor. This class of labor was brought into Kansas for railroad construction and other work. In some cases they are now a charge upon the city in large numbers. In any event it occurs to me that citizens of our own country should receive preference to employment as against those of a foreign nation."

Captain Lucey was with Herbert Hoover in Belgium. He advises the heads of six railroads to return their Mexican employes to Mexico "in such a manner that would not render offense to our neighbor on the south and would materially help the unemployment situation."

Now if President Rubio of Mexico would advise the deportation of all Americans who hold jobs in the republic south of the Rio Grande it would provoke "a storm of indignation and then a roar of protest." Wise is the alien who comes to this country and takes immediate steps to become a naturalized citizen. Now it is announced from Washington that drastic legislation will be enacted to shut out all Mexican laborers and then there will be a roar of protest from Texans from the Gulf of Mexico to the New Mexican border line.

A Cop and His Horse

IT IS not at all hard to understand the attitude of that New York mounted policeman who, called to the office of his superiors to be informed that he had been promoted to the rank of detective, tried to decline the honor and protested that he would much prefer to remain a mounted patrolman.

Being a detective is very fine, and it brings in a bigger salary, but the mounted policeman is one of the few remaining majestic, romantic and awe-inspiring figures in metropolitan life today. The man on horseback has always had an appeal. Nowadays, however, the mounted policeman is the only man on horseback that many people see in their whole lives. He cuts a gay figure in the world, does the mounted cop; he is a Somebody, and it must make his days brighter.

Of course, the detective is quite a man, too. But the mounted policeman is in a class by himself. It is easy to see why this New Yorker wanted to decline his promotion.

WALTER WINCHELL

On Broadway

(Copyright, 1930, Daily Mirror, Inc.)

Portrait of Man Talking to Himself

That Palmer guy finally found out that there was something else besides Broadway, which is what I wish I could do. . . . He heard my radio gab, he writes, from some lonely sector in Maryland. . . . "I listen to your remarks about this one and that one on Broadway every Tuesday night and the other events that have shaken the Main Stem. How Carry Chorine has phffft with Johnny Juppenheimer and is now ankling with Tommy Smith. Who is having a baby and who isn't. Who is having it Renovated or Paris'd, and I listen with fascinated attention. Then when you have finished and your orchestra plays 'Give My Regards to Broadway,' I ease back in my chair near the pleasant log fire and thank God I am 300 miles away. I recall the days when not so very long ago, I used to haunt the Canyon of What? Every night, all night, from Tony's at cocktail time to Guinan's at breakfast. I try to figure out why such an utterly stupid crowd of utterly colorless people tramped all through the sticky nights to Florence's, the Madrid, the Dizzy Club, the Furnace, Hot Feet's, Helen Morgan's, Hymie's place, and the rest. As far as I can remember there was only one person who had any sound excuse at all for being there and that was you. You weren't playing—you were working. Maybe fresh air has gone to my head, or perhaps I am just getting old. Whatever it is, I am quite definitely beyond the charms of Broadway. And nothing makes me quite so happy in my quiet existence here as to listen to your reports over the air of that same tawdry life going on in the same old tiresome way."

But that isn't what I want at all. . . . Palmer is tired of Park Row, too. . . . Where he was fouled. . . . I couldn't stand the quiet existence, at all. . . . I mean, do not think I could stand it. . . . But I do know I would welcome a change of scenery. . . . Only the other night when I happened to motor down past the Italian Quarter on 1st Avenue, a scene I had never witnessed, my eyes opened wide! . . . It was something different! . . . Different types. . . . Different smells. . . . Different noises. . . . It was fascinating for the few moments it took to speed by the place. . . . When I go to Camden for that Unemployed Benefit next week I know I'll be thrilled. . . . I'll look out the train window and see billboards or something. . . . And moo cows. . . . And trees and grass and tiny railroad depots and sky. . . . The only thing about the sky that gets me around here is that part of the sky between 42nd and 59th Streets at night. . . . When the bulbs on the Stem light up the heavens. . . That hasn't wearied me yet. . . . It is a scene even Belasco or Urban couldn't imitate. . . . So H. I. Phillips fell for that article I wrote and took it seriously. . . . Heheheh. . . The mags next week will give the Street something to titter about with their exposes about it. . . . Which will be another thrill.

Milt Gross was groaning a little, too. . . . "I've never had a vacation," Milt said. . . . He's never had a vacation! . . . Gee, I thought I was alone with that squawk. . . . "What makes me feel rotten," I said to Milt, "is staying up all night trying to get a day in advance and leaving the office sometimes around nine or ten in the morning. . . . And as I exit from the building I see all those cartoonists coming in attired in their golf pants. . . . They look so refreshed and they haven't any lines in their pans. . . They tell me that they are going to play golf all day and are just coming to the office to get their bags and sticks." . . . So Milt said: "Have you noticed what's become of some of those guys?" . . . I didn't know what became of them until Milt told me. . . . Five of them, at least, are now looking for jobs. . . . They found time to play! . . . And their cartoon strips got unfunny or something. . . . And when your stuff begins to wilt the heads of the syndication outfit or your paper start looking for fellers who are more interested in their work than they are in golf. . . . But what made me think was this: I wouldn't have known that those guys were fired or that their stuff wasn't appearing in the rag until my attention was called to the fact. . . . Proving an old theory. . . . That you are never missed. You are never, never, never, never, never missed.

It must be grand to be adolescent like those schoolboys who hold an annual dinner. . . . And manage to entice what they prefer calling celebrities to their dais. . . . The so-called celebs are bored to death and things unfold at a snail's pace and the speeches are dull and nothing happens. . . . I suppose when they get back to the campus they tell those who couldn't crash the affair that they met so-and-so, and whos-this and what's-his-name. . . That excites them, the little hero-worshipers, who some day will awaken and have their itty-bitty illusions melted, poor things. . . . It was all so dreary. . . . I felt that I was in a cage in a zoo. . . . And that they were saving to themselves: "So that's Winchell? So what?" . . . Well, I got even with them. . . . I told them jokes I had printed at least twice and it served them right. . . . It must be nice to be a boy again, though. . . . I didn't mean to snap at that kid who said that the lads at The Spectator would like to have me at their affair. . . . When will they ever understand that when you have to have over 1,000 different words a day you haven't the time to go to dinners or play or anything? . . . Dinners! . . . They want a free show. . . . When I was struggling ten years ago I wish some of those booking men were that anxious to see me perform. . . . I feel like a trained seal.

Mary Boland is so funny in "The Vinegar Tree," but what a title for a show! . . . None of us seemed to know the connection at the premiere—until the press agent explained it. . . . If the producer is smart, he will shelve that title for something that will attract shekels to the box office. . . . Yet there were many of us who thought "Strictly Dishonorable" was a stupid name. . . . That hit is in its 60-something or other week! . . . Izzy Elinson is amusing. . . . He says that he has been looking around corners for that promised prosperity and all he can find is an apple peddler.

LITTLE MISS NOBODY

By VIDA HURST

"I never want to see you again."

SYNOPSIS

Celeste Graham, a beautiful girl of 19 years, employed as a telephone operator in Los Angeles, is the daughter of Dolores Graham, a highly attractive matron of 35 years, who acts as the secretary and assistant to a doctor. They meet and, as is their custom, go home together to their modest apartment to prepare the evening meal for themselves and Russell Graham, Celeste's father, an amiable though shiftless man, whose chief interest in life is the possession of plenty of smoking tobacco and a copy of the latest sports edition of his favorite newspaper. Celeste goes to a dance with Norman Jackson, an ambitious employe of a bank. Wee Kiki, Celeste to be his wife. She is so excited about her engagement that she immediately goes to her friend, Annette Grower, to repeat all the details. On the way home from the dance Celeste receives her first kiss. Norman purchases a newspaper which announces in screaming headline: "Prominent Los Angeles Doctor Murdered in Arms of Beautiful Office Girl." "It's my mother and Dr. Fenton," Celeste cries, and then faints.

CHAPTER III

To the end of her life Celeste would bear the marks of those hours which followed. The newspapers omitted no single detail of that colorful tragedy. The body of Dolores Graham had been found in the arms of her lover by a scrubwoman who had been asked by Dr. Fenton not to come in before 11 o'clock.

Shot through the heart, they had both been instantly killed. Dr. Fenton's own automatic lay on the floor beside them, although experts argued it would have been impossible for either of the victims to have fired the fatal shots. There were no fingerprints. No incriminating evidence of any kind save a green chiffon handkerchief which Celeste insisted had not belonged to her mother. Detectives thought she might have been mistaken, but Celeste knew her mother, whose color sense was stronger than her religion, would never have carried a green handkerchief with the maroon satin dress she had donned presumably to go to a "movie."

The wife of Dr. Fenton had been playing bridge with friends in San Francisco at the time of the long-distance call which informed her of the tragedy. Marcia Fenton collapsed when asked if she had been having any "trouble" with her husband. He was irritable sometimes. Nervous and high-strung, but she had blamed his occasional lapses on worry and overwork. They "had been happy," she sobbed. She had seen Dolores many times, but had no suspicion of any affair between them.

Russell Graham, dazed by the undeniable fact of his wife's infidelity no less than the murder, admitted his wife often went out alone. He had understood that she was going to the corner "movie." She was very fond of dancing and liked to go places and have a good time, but she had been, he insisted, "a good wife and mother."

He had been home reading all evening except for about half an hour when a neighbor named Rembold had called to borrow a box of matches. Rembold, twitching with nervousness, testified to only a speaking acquaintance with Mrs. Graham and corroborated Mr. Graham's story. He had dropped in to borrow the box of matches his wife had asked him to bring home that evening and found Mr. Graham reading the Evening Herald. He had stayed for probably half an hour discussing baseball.

In the end, after harrowing accusations, humiliating questions and grilling cross-examination, Russell Graham's story had been believed. Then, since neither husband nor wife could be accused, every patient who had been in Dr. Fenton's office for the previous month had been examined. Some of them whose semi-weekly calls invited suspicion waxed indignant at being compelled to testify regarding their relations with the fascinating doctor, but with one and all only a most professional relationship could be proved.

There remained as clues the frail wisp of green chiffon which only Celeste believed was not her mother's and the telephone conversation Annette Grower had overheard, which was considered the hysterical evidence of an overwrought girl.

When asked if she were certain it had been a woman with whom Dr. Fentress had refused to talk, Annette admitted she couldn't be sure. It might have been a man.

Before the attempt at a solution ceased Celeste felt that she had been dragged through the Los Angeles streets. The picture of her mother in Dr. Fenton's arms haunted her dreams. Nothing could erase the degrading knowledge that they had been illicit lovers from her innocent mind. Ashamed to face the curiosity and comments of fellow-workers, she did not return to the Los Angeles telephone exchange.

The fact that she was engaged to Norman and would soon bear his name instead of her own was her only comfort. Sympathy for her father fought with her desire to escape every reminder of her previous existence. She could not leave him to the tragic emptiness of the apartment. She decided to ask Norman if he would object to her father living with them.

"Norman had been awfully considerate," Celeste admitted, looking back on those long, gruesome weeks. He had not mentioned his own affairs nor the wedding he had insisted take place as soon as possible.

Sitting in the living room one afternoon the first of October, over a month after the murder, Celeste decided it would be better for them to go on with their original plans. She knew Dolores would not have wished her daughter's marriage delayed. It seemed to the heart-broken girl her only chance for peace. In the little bungalow in Hollywood she might find surcease from the memories which tortured her.

She had to force herself to go out—even to the corner to purchase groceries. She had changed markets, preferring to deal with strangers who did not know of her connection with the unsolved murder, which seemed to her sensitive mind to be the chief topic of conversation on every street car, in every shop, even in department-store elevators. Often with a coarse or flippant jest.

"That ought to be a lesson to you office wives," one heedless soul had contributed in Celeste's hearing.

She had left the elevator blind with tears, seeking the rest room with an insane desire to hide herself from the unkind comments which had pursued here even there.

A middle-aged woman washing ring-bedecked hands chattered shrilly: "Served her right, I say. Women who try to vamp other women's husbands ought to get shot."

Miserably, Celeste had wondered if she would ever be able to go downtown without the agony of hearing her mother's name upon mocking lips. She had learned by now even an unsolved murder mystery remains a sensation for only a brief period. Mercifully, a new scandal broke upon the front pages of the papers she dreaded seeing on the street. They would forget

In scope it corresponds to such English schools as Harrow and Rugby and has about 400 pupils and about 36 masters. There are 13 masters' houses, with an upper house and the Hamill house for the boys of the upper form, managed by boards of directors appointed by the boys themselves.

Q.—What is the derivation of the word tragedy?—L. S.

A.—It is from Greek words meaning goat songs. There are many explanations of the reason for this. Possibly "goat songs" was applied to the chants used by the men, clothed in goatskins, who represented the satyrs in the festival of Bacchus. Tragedy took its rise from these songs. The Greeks developed it to a high point especially in the dramas of Aeschylus, Sophocles, and Euripides. Aristotle gave as the reason for the existance of tragedy "the purification of the passions through the arousing of fear and pity.

The result is a thick creamy mixture resembling a pudding. Serve hot, with a generous lump of butter to each portion.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Asthma and Tuberculosis

Question—C. A. M. writes: "I am a boy 14 years old. Have had asthma ever since I was three months old. Do you think it will ever run into tuberculosis?"

Answer—We do see a few cases of asthma which are complicated with tuberculosis, but it is by no means a rule that asthma turns into tuberculosis. Why not cure up the asthma, develop strong lungs and avoid tuberculosis? Send a large self-addressed stamped envelope for special articles on the cure of asthma and the development of a strong chest.

Currants

Question—Mrs. E. asks: "May currants be used in place of raisins in your menus?"

Answer—Yes, especially the sweet

Answer—Yes, especially the sweeter varieties.

Acid in System

Question—Mrs. N. F. P. asks: "What causes a numb, scorched-like feeling on my tongue, my gums and the top of my mouth? If it is acid in the system, kindly tell me if oranges and lemons are counteracters of acid. Also, does acid in the system affect one's eyes so that it makes on feel as though she were going around in circles?"

Answer — The condition often called "an acid system" is really due to a reduction of the blood's alkalinity. The use of citrus fruits will help to correct this condition, principally through stimulating the flow of more bile, which is an alkali. This may also get rid of the dizziness, especially if it is caused by biliousness.

Plenty of Material

"Hello, Jack! What are you doing?"

"I've built a shed out of my own head."

"Out of your own head?"

"Yes, and there's plenty of wood left for a dog kennel."—Tit-Bits.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Nov. 28. (AP)—Cotton was lower in the market here today under increased selling which was attributed to southern heding and partly to liquidation, or scattering pressure through commission houses. March contracts sold off to 10.76, or 22 points net lower, and closed at 10.80 with the general market closing steady at net declines of 10 to 18 points.

May contracts, selling at 11.03 today, showed a decline of 118 points, or approximately $5.90 per bale from the high price touched on the late October advance, and were within 38 points of the low record for the season established on Oct. 8. The slight closing rally was attributed to covering and smaller late offerings from the South.

A private report based on replies from southern correspondents was published during the day estimating the crop at 14,-210,000 running bales, which was considered not far out of line with the last government indication of 14,398,000 bales or 500 pounds gross weight, and appeared to be without immediate effect on the market. Liverpool cables said hedging in that market had been absorbed by continental buying and trade calling. Exports today 5,678, making 3,112,958 so far this season. Port receipts 50,063. U. S. port stocks 4,160,623.

Futures closed steady, 10 to 18 points lower; spot quiet; middling, 10.55.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 28. (AP)—The cotton market developed a downward trend here today. Although cables were some better than due the market opened irregular 1 point down to 3 points up. After a slight rally after the start, prices turned easier on persistent long liquidation and continued on the downgrade all day, reaching the low points in the early afternoon, 20 to 21 points below the previous close except for December which at the lowest was only 14 points down. Lack of support and withdrawal of buying orders under the market with easier stocks caused weakness. The close was at or near the bottom showing net losses for the day of 14 to 21 points.

Liverpool cables came in 4 penny points better than due and private cables stated the trade called and the continent bought. The opening here was irregular 1 point down to 3 up. There was a slight rally after the start on the cables but it did not hold and prices eased off slowly but steadily on continued liquidation, some easiness in stocks and lack of support. Ring reports had it that trade buying orders under the market were being withdrawn. Some liquidation in advance of the approaching final crop estimate of the government also was reported.

December eased off to 10.49, down 12 points from the previous close but later months lost 19 to 21 points with March down to 10.75.

The market continued to rule easy in the late trading keeping at or near the previous lows while December made a new low at 10.47, down 14 points. The close was steady and a single point above the lowest on all active months but December which closed at the bottom and 14 points net lower for the day. The later months showed net losses of 19 to 21 points.

Port receipts 67,729, for week 317,797, for season 5,970,689, last season 5,696,903. Exports 8,508, for week 140,623, for season 3,026,097, last season 3,061,791. Port stocks 4,228,443, last year 2,635,756. Combined shipboard stock at New Orleans, Galveston and Houston 136,682, last year 178,897. Spot sales at southern markets 26,235, last year 36,392.

Futures closed steady at net declines of 14 to 21 points.

Persistent, Light Pressure Brings Stock Averages Down Once More

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Nov. 28. (US)—Light, but very persistent, pressure against the stock market today brought about a general reaction of a few points.

In all, only one and three-quarter million shares changed hands, but the price setback, on the average, was more substantial than usual in such comparatively small turnover.

The net result reflected more than anything else a lack of concentrated buying demand, although the reaction occurred without any drastic declines.

It was the very persistence of the price setback that represented the most disheartening feature of the day's market. The railroad shares in particular were under pressure and their weakness could be attributed to outright liquidation in greater extent than in other sections of the list, where bear raiding was more noticeable.

Selling of the Rails, to a substantial degree, resulted from public announcement of the systems' program for appealing to congress from relief of conditions forced by the competition of bus lines, motor coaches and pipe lines. The railroads' frank admission of the new and disturbing influences of this competition was unfavorably interpreted by the market.

A somewhat more favorable view of the situation was taken in certain prominent banking quarters, where it was pointed out that the railroads' program represented inauguration of an aggressive campaign by the carriers, with some hopes at least of alleviating the situation. There is no attempt, however, to belittle the far-reaching influences of the competition which already has affected the carriers' earnings.

The entire Railroad list sold off to close at a level, on the average for the leading carriers' stocks, only a point above their Nov. 10 lows, the lowest for several years. Illinois Central, for example, declined to 76, the first time in several decades, certainly the first time in the present century, that the stock has sold below 80. A further decline in New York Central, to a new low for the year and for the past few years, likewise evidences the extent of the setback in the Rail group.

On its last dip to around current prices, New York Central attracted sufficient investment buying to rally it over 10 points. Other Railroad shares, investment and speculative, all were in supply, some of the eastern carriers being sold on knowledge that the consolidation meetings among their executives have not produced the hoped-for harmony.

With the Rails selling down virtually to their former lows this year, it was natural that the Industrials and Utilities yield in sympathy.

Steel common broke through 144, but it appeared to yield very stubbornly, closing off little over a point, while American Can likewise sold down just over a point. American Telephone also yielded only stubbornly as it approached a 5 per cent yield basis. In the more speculative issues, bears were more successful, yet even in such issues the reactions were comparatively moderate. Fox Film was heavily pounded by a bear clique which succeeded in forcing the issue to a new low on the present setback, yet the stock rallied from its low to close off only one-half point.

The buying of this stock was for the account of directors of the company, who recognize that most of the selling is for bear account. Other motion picture issues were affected by the selling of Fox. Public utility stocks sold on further disclosure of the nationwide movement for lower rates, latest evidence of which was presented in California.

Auburn Motors proved an exception to the general trend, rallying strongly to close up over a point and almost five points from the low. This stock recently has witnessed considerable speculative activity, the character of trading being indicated by the sharp fluctuations. Bethlehem Steel was heavily sold and the entire Steel group was affected by omission of the Otis Steel dividend.

Grain

TEXAS CASH GRAIN

FORT WORTH, Nov. 28. (AP)—Demand continued slow on the cash grain market today. While receipts were fairly heavy over the holiday, offerings for sale were light and some grains were not available. Prices quoted are largely nominal. No. 1 hard wheat was probably worth 81½@82½c, basis delivered Texas common points.

Estimated receipts: Wheat, 15 cars; corn, 12; oats, 3; barley, 1; and sorghums, 5.

Nominal prices on coarse grains, basis carloads delivered Texas common points, freight paid, ranged as follows:

Corn—No. 2 mixed 84@85c; No. 3 white 90@91c; No. 2 yellow 89@90c.

Oats—No. 2 red 47½@48½c; No. 3 white, delivered Texas group one, 45½@46½c, to which add one cent for delivery group three.

Sorghums — No. 2 milo, per 100 pounds, $1.30@1.32; No. 2 kaffir $1.24@1.25.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Nov. 28. (AP)—Successive downward jolts to wheat prices today ended with word that the week's North American breadstuff exports were the smallest witnessed for a long while. Other shocks came from British trade estimates greatly enlarging figures on the probable Argentine exportable wheat surplus. Wheat values here also were shaken by indications that United States government sponsored agencies were on both sides of the market from time to time, with uncertainties likewise prevalent regarding wheat stabilization plans in Canada.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, ⅝@2½c a bushel lower than Wednesday's finish. Corn closed 1¼@1⅝c down, oats 1¼@1¾c off, and provisions at 2@20c decline.

From the start, Chicago wheat market showed a decided trend toward lower levels. Unofficial but authoritative British forecasts of the amount of wheat Argentina would be able to export this season placed the total at 205,000,000 bushels whereas latest previous estimates here said 165,-000,000 bushels despite direct advices from Buenos Aires that the British estimate was 500,000 tons too high, sellers here increased in number, and prices steadily sagged.

Buying support for corn and oats proved to be less aggressive than has been the rule of late.

Nothwithstanding higher prices on hogs, provisions reflected downturns in cereals.

Closing indemnities: Wheat, Dec. 74¼, 75⅜@½; March 76⅜, 78¾; May 78⅜, 80⅛@¼; July 73⅜@½, 75⅝. Corn, Dec. 72⅞, 75¼; March 75¼, 77½; May 77⅜@½, 79¼; July 78⅛, 79⅞.

PIT NOTES

CHICAGO, Nov. 28. (US) — Announcement of appointment of John McFarland as head of the selling agency of the Canadian pool was looked upon as a constructive development. The announcement was made shortly before the close and was credited, along with reports of improved export demand, for the recovery which took place in the Winnipeg market.

While speculative selling was largely absent from the wheat pit, observers today believed there was considerable short selling in corn. The latter market, without support of stabilizing purchases, is more readily depressed by selling pressure of any kind. It was noticeable, however, that cash corn failed to reflect the full decline in the futures.

Farm Board buying was credited with supporting the May futures in the Minneapolis market.

Numerous private canvasses of country dealers in Illinois and Iowa tend to indicate that the farm holder of corn is not interested in prevailing prices as a marketing point.

Dudley B. Foy, chamber of commerce traffic manager, and D. G. C. Mytinger, vice chairman of the traffic committee, which held a joint meeting with representatives of Wichita Falls refineries here Friday.

The proposal being submitted by the Oklahoma interests provides for a reduction of rates from Tulsa to Kansas City from 25½c to 18c, from 30c to 22c to St. Louis and from 36c to 27½c to Chicago.

Little Miss Nobody

eventually. She, too, must do her best as Norman's wife to rise above the searing ordeal through which, due to no fault of her own, she had been compelled to pass.

She greeted her father cheerfully that evening, but he was cloaked in a melancholy even the prospect of chops seemed unable to pierce.

"Tired, daddy?"

"All in. I'm going to have to quit my job, I guess."

"Haven't they stopped talking about it yet?"

"When I'm around—yes. But what kind of a man do you suppose they think I am? A poor sap whose wife"—

"Please don't talk about it any more, daddy. It doesn't do any good."

He pushed away from the table complaining, "It's made nothing but a fool out of me. If it weren't for you I wouldn't stay here another day."

"I wanted to ask you, Celeste said, timidly, "if you mind if Norman and I get married.

He stared at her in surprise.

"Does he want to marry you?"

"We've been engaged ever since that night."

"Well, I think that's fine. It's the best thing you can possibly do," he said, obviously relieved. "Then I can clear out and leave the whole thing behind me."

"I'm going to ask Norman if you can't live with us, daddy."

"Not me. I'm going to go as far as possible from Los Angeles."

How he must have suffered, she thought, pityingly. Not until her mother's death had she realized how pathetically weak he was. But that was all the more reason why he needed her.

"We'll both feel better to get away from this apartment," she soothed almost as her mother would have done. "Norman's coming tonight and I'm going to suggest we get married right away."

"That will suit me," he agreed, reaching for his pipe.

"Can you let me have some money, daddy?"

"I gave you $5."

"Almost a week ago. I've spent it for food."

Because she knew Dolores had never asked him to pay for the groceries they bought every evening coming home from work, she flushed as if she were ashamed.

He gave it to her reluctantly.

"You'll have to either get married or go back to work. I don't make enough for both of us."

"I know. I will," she promised.

That night when Norman suggested that they take a ride she agreed, anxious to get away long enough to make her suggestions.

He kissed her affectionately in the darkened hall, and, reassured by the caress, which was the first since the night they had become engaged, she said, "I've something to tell you, Norman."

"Found a new job?" he inquired, turning the auto toward Hollywood.

She should have known then. But, being inexperienced in the evasions of men and a little stupid from the enormity of the blow fate had so recently dealt, she continued: "No, I've decided I won't work any more. That is, if you still want to be married."

Norman was silent. His eyes were glued on the traffic ahead. She had not known before how hard and uncompromising his swarthy face could be.

"I want to marry you, of course," he said at last, after she felt that she could bear his silence no longer. "My feelings toward you have not changed a bit, Celeste."

"I was sure they hadn't. It's all that's kept me alive, I think. To know you still cared."

"I do, of course," he repeated, gravely. "I always shall — even though I feel that perhaps I spoke too hastily. I'm afraid our marriage will have to be postponed."

What was he saying? Celeste gripped her hands about his arm, crying, "You mean you didn't get your raise?"

"It isn't a question of finances. You remember I told you Matthews is a funny old duffer. I have to be careful, Celeste. Anything smacking of scandal or disgrace—"

Her hands dropped.

"I see. In other words, you can't afford to take a chance on marrying the daughter of a woman who was murdered."

"It isn't only the fact that she was murdered," he said.

So then at last she knew why he had neither kissed her nor mentioned marriage since that terrible night.

"Some time later on," he continued, relieved to see that she was evidently not going to become hysterical about it. "When it has all blown over, perhaps—"

"No, thanks," Celeste said, proudly.

Through a blur of tears she saw that he had unwittingly driven into the very heart of the district where the bungalow she had dreamed of was located. Dear little empty houses waiting for enthusiastic young lovers to turn them into homes—

"Don't be upset about it, dear. It's nothing whatever against you."

"Don't!" she said. "I never want to see you again."

Texas Youth Wins 4-H Club Honor

Special to The Record News.

OLD GLORY, Texas, Nov. 28.—Eugene D. Vanderworth, 17, of Old Glory, is one of the 26 Texas 4-H Farm club boys who will attend the 4-H national encampment in Chicago Nov. 28 to Dec. 5, and one of 19 to merit the free educational trip offered annually to this encampment by the Santa Fe railroad.

Recipients of the Santa Fe trips are boys who excel in club work in counties touched by the Santa Fe road. Vanderworth is a member of the Stonewall county 4-H club directed by Fred S. Reynolds who served as county agent until Sept. 16, 1930.

Vanderworth won the award through his accomplishments with a poultry project. On Nov. 1, 1929, he began with 16 White Leghorn pullets in full production. These pullets averaged 100 eggs each during the following year, netting a profit of $203.

Vanderworth has written a history on poultry. His numerous poultry demonstrations have resulted in the building of 20 modern poultry houses in the county, and in the stocking of poultry farms with standard purebred foundation flocks.

SANTA LOSES LITTLE QUEEN

Wichita Children Asked To Join Search

LOVE GARDENS, Land of Dreams.—To Everybody in Wichita Falls: Today finds us pretty near ready to start on our trip and the Spirit of Love has just brought me another message from Wichita Falls telling me that the day my party and I arrive there you are going to have a wonderful parade. We will all be so happy to meet everybody and we do hope that people from all over that section of the country will come to see us. You will be surprised at the many surprises which will be in the parade. Just read The Times and Record News every day and watch my messages and I will tell you some of the things that you can expect to see while we are marching down the street, with bands playing and little children laughing and grown people smiling.

The Land of the Midnight Sun

Yesterday I told you about reindeer so today I will tell you something about the country on top of the world where I live. Do you know that up here near the North Pole we have six months of days and six months of nights. That is why they sometimes call it the "Land of the Midnight Sun." Of course the sun doesn't shine brightly with a burst all during the six months, like it does there where you live, but there is a glow from it at all hours during the six months of night. During the winter months it gets dark about 3 o'clock in the afternoon and does not get light until 10 o'clock in the morning. In the summer months during the six months of days the process is reversed, with the nights very short.

Well, during the past few weeks it has been night-time and my heart has been very heavy. You remember that yesterday I promised to tell you a secret. Well, that secret is part of the reason for my feeling so lonely and blue in this period of night.

Sometimes Feels Sad

Most people think that because I devote my life to spreading love and happiness through the world that my life must be a very happy one. Of course my life is happy when I know that I am doing good deeds. That is why I prefer to think of nothing but "good." And you, too, will be happy if you think always of good things and try to make other people happy. I really think that there is no happiness in the world such as is derived from trying to make other people happy. But I, too, have to expect disappointments just like you do, and when they come I try to be brave and not sigh or cry. But one heartache I am suffering hurts me so much that I just have to tell you, and ask you to help me. It is about "Little Queen," whom I mentioned in my message yesterday.

Little Queen was my playmate. She and I used to have our own little toys and goodies and sweets, and would play together by the hour, when she did not have studies to do, or I was through with my work.

One of Santa's Playmates Lost

We were so very, very happy, we Little Queen and I, and I never thought for one minute that I would lose her or that she would lose me. But one day I took her out in my airplane. "Mary" Christmas went along that day and we traveled in the clouds over the big world and landed near a city. It was in the woods right near the edge of town and "Mary" Christmas and I went to get some things for our toy shop and left Little Queen playing with some friends who were having a corn roast. When "Mary" and I returned we could not find "Little Queen." She had gone. We were so excited and worried and asked everybody to help us find her. We were near a city called "Sunglory" and all the people helped us hunt and search for Little Queen, but to no avail. She could not be found.

Of course you know how sad I have been ever since when I have not been busy making happiness and joy. Every evening when I get through with my work I walk out under the stars and moon and sing and whistle and sigh and sing and call and call and call for "Little Queen." Oh, I must find her for I will need her to play with when my Christmas work is over. Maybe she is right there in Wichita Falls. Please do help me hunt and find Little Queen so my heart will always be happy again.

She is so sweet and I am sure you will know her as soon as you see her. She is a tiny little girl and has the most wonderful blue eyes. Her smile is like sunshine and her laughter like music. When she sings her voice sounds just like the music of angels.

Now please look all over your neighborhood and see if you can find her and if you do we will have her ride in a beautiful automobile in our parade on Dec. 10 in Wichita Falls. I will have more news for you tomorrow so be sure to read my message.

Good night and pleasant dreams.

HEARTBREAK GIRL

By ROB EDEN

Gail Stuart, befriended by Nick Walther after hiking to Hollywood, fails in pictures. She becomes secretary to Carla Cross, the star, and gets Ross Hardy, her fiance, a job as Carla's leading man. He fails for Carla and Gail ends their engagement. Carla fires Gail for dining with Walther, whom the star hopes to wed. Walther knowing that Gail still loves Ross, stages a house party, hoping to throw the two together. Norman Frame, discarded lover of Carla, brings the party to a tragic close by committing suicide. His note, published by the papers, ruins Carla and following the scandal, her contract is canceled. Ross, in the midst of his first starring picture, disappears. Gail frantically seeks him in San Diego, whither he has been traced. She gets track of him at a pool hall.

CHAPTER XLVI

Gail looked several times at the figure slouching up the street. Something familiar about it, and yet not so familiar. Dirty white trousers, a wrinkled dark coat, a soiled, tieless shirt, open at the front. Unshaven face, covered with a brown, week-old stubble, eyes staring hollowly out of red sunken sockets.

It couldn't be Ross . . .

A quick pain caught her heart, as she started weakly up the street. It was Ross. But a Ross she didn't know. How awful he looked, as if he had been suffering, as if he didn't care about anything in the world. She had never seen him untidy before. Even in his days of poverty, his linen had been immaculate, his clothes beautifully pressed, his shoes shined. She knew at times when he had no money at all, that he had washed his own shirts and ironed them. He had told her this.

Poor Ross.

It was nearly eleven and Gail had been waiting since nine o'clock at the ice cream parlor. The clerk had given her a gay greeting when she entered. For nearly two hours she hadn't taken her eyes off the Lion door. The pool hall had opened at ten.

Sitting there on the uncomfortable chair, she had seen the minutes slip by. Not slowly today. Swiftly. When she wanted them to be everlasting. Each one as it went seemed to cut into her flesh. So much depended on getting Ross to the studio . . .

"Ross!" she cried, half sobbing as she caught at his sleeve. He didn't look at her. Doubtful that he even heard her. He was walking on, oblivious to her presence.

Gail Pleads

"Ross! You've got to go back with me to Hollywood!" Her voice broke pitifully. She could hardly control herself. These days of anxiety here, and now she had found Ross. Was talking to him. He had to listen. "Ross!"

He seemed to hear her for the first time, for he paused, and glanced at her, then started on his way, into the door of the Lion. Again she seized his hand.

"Listen to me just a minute, Ross," she pleaded. He was so strong, she was so weak. There seemed to be no strength left in her body. His foot was half in the door. "I've been hunting for you since Saturday—Max wants you at the studio right away. By 2 o'clock. We can barely make it—"

"I won't go back to Hollywood—" Petulance in his voice. A small boy refusing to obey.

"You'll come with me, won't you?" she saw that she had to change her tactics. She couldn't compel him to go back. Appeal to his honor. She had to persuade him.

"Don't want to go back. Never want to see the place again—"

"Arthur Fox is to have your part if you don't get back by 2 o'clock—"

"I don't care—"

He didn't care!

She hadn't expected to have to urge him. She had thought that when she told him about Max, and young Fox that he would be eager to go. What she had said hadn't moved him at all. Precious minutes were passing.

If there was only something she could say, do, to make him go back!

Then he gave her the cue. "I'm hungry—didn't have a bite to eat yesterday—"

People Stared

"I'll get you some breakfast!" She could trick him into going with her. His eyes brightened, and he seemed to realize for the first time who she was. A flash of recognition passed over his face. "You're a good scout, Gail—" She took his hand as she would have a child's and led him down the street. He stumbled along beside her, walking so slowly that she grew hot and cold all over. Time was so—valuable. The garage was blocks away, and she had to get him there.

People stared at her as she passed them, wondering at the peculiar sight. This pretty girl, leading the unkept, unshaven, slovenly youth. She didn't see their glances, however. She had Ross. That was all that mattered. If she hurried she could get him to Hollywood on time.

Finally they came to the garage, and Gail called to Mason to get the big car out. She didn't trust Ross by himself, and there was a restaurant next door.

Ross soon was wolfing a plate of hot cakes, and a cup of coffee. She knew that he couldn't have had much to eat for the past few days to eat as he did. He acted half starved. Another plate of hot cakes he wanted, and patiently she ordered it, hating to do it because they were losing time. When he had had enough she paid the bill—Ross evidently had nothing in his pockets—and led him out to his car. He came docilely, and she gave him a gentle push into the seat. His head fell on his chest, and his eyes closed.

She stood uncertainly on the sidewalk. She had counted on Ross driving to Hollywood. He wouldn't now. She knew that.

"Six dollars, Miss, for the storage, and five for the gas and oil. That makes eleven in all," Mason was reminding her.

She didn't have the money, and Mason kindly offered to send a bill to Ross. She had used up the last of her capital, checking out of the hotel this morning. Her bag was under the rumble seat.

"That guy's in no condition to drive. He acts funny," Mason said, pointing his thumb at Ross.

Gail admitted Ross did act queer.

"You'd better drive," Mason suggested.

She drive? She couldn't—not after what Judge Latham had said to her in court. That she never could get a driver's license in the state of California; that she must never again drive a car. Carla's prank, but it had been blamed on her. Besides she had never driven much. She didn't know how to handle a car like Ross'.

Ross had to get to Hollywood—somehow. It was after eleven-thirty by the clock on the dash. One hundred and thirty-eight miles to make by two o'clock. Impossible.

It was the clock more than anything else that forced her into the driver's seat, and made her grip the wheel. Mason told her how to start the car, and she followed his instructions. Ross was sitting at her side, paying no attention to anything. He didn't seem to realize that he was in a car, that he was riding.

Gail Carries on

She had secured quick directions about how to leave San Diego from Mason. And after she was on the highway, she recovered a little from her fright. She had only to keep on the road and she was all right. She was breaking her word to Judge Latham, for she had promised him she would never drive again. Breaking the law . . .

The car was easy to handle. She was getting more accustomed to it. Now and then her eyes sought the clock, and her foot automatically pressed the gas down nearer the floor. There was not much traffic on the road. Once she spied a speed cop at the side of the highway, and slowed down instantly. She had been going too fast. She didn't dare get into trouble. The consequences to herself would be too terrible.

What if a police man would stop her and ask her for her driver's license?

San Clemente. A highway sign told her the beach city was half way to Los Angeles. One o'clock. She couldn't make it by two. And Max had said the absolute deadline was two o'clock. Fifty miles, sixty. She held her breath as she looked at the speedometer, yet the road was clear ahead. She had to go fast. A car sped past her. Someone else hurrying along the road. She was afraid when she saw it go by that it might contain policemen . . . .

"Where are we?" Ross speaking. He seemed alarmed. Without taking her eyes off the road, she told him they were going to Hollywood. There was no refusal this time. A silence. She wanted to look into his face, but dared not. She was going too fast . . . .

It was after two when they came to Whittier, and Gail had to slow down for city traffic. She had done her best—and failed. It would take her another hour or more to reach the studio in Hollywood. When she stopped on Western avenue for a signal, she took her first look at Ross, since she had started. He was humped over in the seat, his eyes on the floor of the car. If he'd only drive the remainder of the trip! Her legs were cramped from driving, the arch of her right foot ached painfully. Torture to go on. But Ross made no move. He appeared to think he was alone in the car.

"My God! I Forgot"

She started again, only to stop three blocks further up Western.

"Why are you taking me to Hollywood?" he asked, touching her arm with his grimy hand.

"Your's picture—"

"My God! I forgot!" Ross was alert. He straightened up and felt his face, moving his fingers uncertainly over the stubble. "Gail, I forgot."

"It may be too late now, Ross. I had an awful time finding you—Max said to have you there by two today. It's nearly three now. I'm afraid Max has given your part to Arthur Fox." He hadn't understood her at the door of the Lion when she had talked with him!

"What time did you say it was?"

"Nearly three. Will you drive the rest of the way?"

They changed seats and Ross took the wheel. Gail fell wearily into the place Ross had vacated. At the next corner Ross drew up to the curb. "I'm going to call Max. It'll be quicker."

She watched him through burning, hot eyes run into a drug store. She couldn't have driven any longer. She was trembling all over, her body limp with nervous exhaustion. The strain of the last few days . . . .

All so futile when it was nearly three o'clock, and Max would have signed young Fox shortly after two . . . .

linings in the pan, placing one of oil paper between the wrapping paper and one on top; fill the pans two-thirds full of cake mixture after oiling the papers with cooking oil.

4.—Slit the linings down to the edge of the pan and crease them back firmly.

5.—Cover the cake with a piece of cheesecloth and a piece of oiled paper cut to fit over the top, and tie all down firmly over the edge of the pan. The cheesecloth and oiled paper coverings over the top of the pan prevent any extra moisture getting into the cake during the cooking and also prevents any from escaping, thus avoiding hard and thick crusts.

If a round tube pan is selected, papers should be cut to fit the bottom of the pan and separate strips of paper put around the sides and tube. Crease the paper firmly at the edges so that it will stay in place and do not have any pleats in the paper. Oil the paper with cooking oil or unsalted fat using a pastry brush.

A thick cake cuts into more attractive slices than a thin one. Baking powder cans and coffee cans may be used for the cooking of fruit cake as well as regular cake pans.

There are several possible methods of cooking fruit cakes, but the theory is the same in all. The cakes must be cooked at a low temperature, yet not be allowed to dry out. For this reason steaming proves to be the ideal method of cooking. If no regular steamer is at hand one may easily be improvised. Baking powder cans or a coffee can may be placed in a teakettle for cooking. The average fruit cake requires from three to four hours for steaming and may or may not have to be dried out in the oven afterwards.

There is no better method of cooking fruit cake than by means of a pressure cooker. Cooking the cake under pressure of steam assures thoroughness of cooking and requires very much less time for this part of the process than any other method. Ordinarily a fruit cake is cooked 15 minutes while the steam freely escapes and then at a pressure of 15 pounds for 45 minutes but the best plan is to follow the directions prescribed by the manufacturer of the specific cooker in use.

Excellent results may also be obtained in baking some varieties of fruit cakes in ordinary ovens, provided that the temperature is kept even and very low—about 300 degrees F. The length of time required for baking depends somewhat on the size of the cake, but it is usually from one and a half to three hours.

It is possible for inexperienced cooks to make and bake a rich fruit cake that is equally moist throughout, that has no hard, dry crust on it and that will keep almost indefinitely if directions are followed. The following favorite recipes represent a variety of tastes and costs with directions for cooking each.

English Fruit Cake

One pound butter.
One pound light brown sugar.
Nine eggs.
One pound flour.
Two teaspoonfuls mace.
Two teaspoonfuls cinnamon.
One teaspoonful cloves.
One teaspoonful allspice.
One teaspoonful soda.
Two tablespoonfuls milk.
Two pounds currants, cleaned.
One pound raisins, seeded and finely chopped.
One-half pound candied orange peel.
One-fourth pound candied lemon peel.
One pound candied cherries.
One-half pound candied pineapple.
Three-fourths pound citron, thinly sliced.
One-half pound almonds, blanched and shredded.

Cream the butter, add sugar gradually, and beat thoroughly. Add the well-beaten egg yolks; then the whites which are beaten until stiff and dry. Sift together the flour, soda and spices. Reserve one cup for dredging the fruit. Add the remaining flour mixture to the egg mixture. Mix the prepared fruits and dredge with the cup of flour and add to the cake mixture; add nuts and milk. Pour into deep pans which have been lined with buttered paper, cover with buttered paper, steam three hours, and bake one and one-half hours in a slow oven—275 degrees F. Rich fruit cake is always more satisfactory when done if the cooking is accomplished by steaming. (Cover the cakes closely to keep moisture out). When baked remove from the tins and allow to cool. Wrap closely with oil paper and ripen several weeks before using in a cake box. Fruit juices may be sprinkled on the wrappings as needed.

Japanese Fruit Cake

One cup butter.
Two cups sugar.
Four cups flour.
Four teaspoonfuls baking powder.
Four eggs.
One-half pound raisins, cut.
One-half pound currants, cleaned.
One-fourth pound citron, finely sliced.
One-fourth pound candied pineapple, sliced.
One-fourth pound candied cherries, cut.
One-half pound dates, finely cut.
One cup chopped nuts.
One teaspoonful each of cinnamon, allspice and cloves.

Mix according to directions given for English fruit cake and bake in a slow oven—275 to 300 degrees F. either in layers or a loaf. Put together and cover with the following filling:

Three cups sugar.
One cup pineapple juice.
One No. 2 can of crushed pineapple.
Two lemons, juice and rind.
One orange, juice and rind.
Two cups cocoanut, fresh or dried.
One cup nuts.
One package dates.
Two tablespoonfuls cornstarch, if needed.

Make a syrup of sugar and pineapple juice, cook syrup with the remainder of the ingredients until clear and thick like jelly, using the cornstarch which has been made into a paste with a little cold water if necessary. Spread on cake and garnish with candied cherries and pineapple.

White Fruit Cake

One pound butter.
One pound sugar.
Ten eggs.
One pound flour.
One and one-half pounds nuts, almonds and pecans.
One pound dates.
One teaspoonful baking powder.
One pound cherries, candied.
One-half pound citron.
One-half pound candied pineapple.
One pound currants.
One pound raisins.
One-half pound candied orange peel.
One-half pound candied lemon peel.

Mix according to directions given for English fruit cake and bake in a slow oven in loaf pans.

'Geniuses' at Work On Satirical Skits For Banquet

Claude Stewart's orchestra has been engaged to play dinner music at the annual banquet of the Junior chamber of commerce at the Woman's Forum on Dec. 9, according to Walter Nelson Jr., program chairman.

Other features of entertainment which have been added to the program include a skit to be given by F. C. McClung, director of the Little Theater here. Several "literary geniuses" are hard at work planning satirical skits, it was said.

F. J. Patterson, manager of the Strand theater, has offered the courtesy of the Strand during the day to out-of-town guests who may see the first showing of "Morocco" during the afternoon of the banquet free of charge.

Clarendon Man Named On Fair Commission

Special to The Record News.

CLARENDON, Texas, Nov. 28.—Announcement was made here this week of the appointment of Holman Kennedy, cashier of the Donley County bank of this city to the advisory board of the World's Fair commission. The creation of the commission by Governor Moody asked for an advisory council from the various parts of Texas. Mr. Kennedy was appointed by the local chamber of commerce and has accepted the appointment. The commission and council will have to do with the representation from Texas to the World's fair in Chicago in 1932.

Pryor Working In Shop at Kirkland

The Record News Wednesday morning erroneously reported that Ed Pryor, former Electra constable under indictment for robbery with firearms, is serving a sentence in the state penitentiary. The verdict which last year sentenced Pryor to an eight-year term was reversed several months ago by the court of criminal appeals and Pryor has been free on bond and working in a barber shop at Kirkland. The indictment against him has not been dismissed, but the date for the new trial has not been set. The Record News is glad to make the correction.

TREE PRUNING

Persons who prune their trees are requested by Dr. J. M. Farrell, chief city sanitary inspector, to have the timber hauled off instead of piling it in the alleys. The alleys become so congested that the trash haulers cannot get through and it has been necessary to have several of them cleared during the past week, Dr. Farrell said.

Donley Farmers Maintain Record For Production

Special to The Record News.

CLARENDON, Texas, Nov. 28.—Ginning reports to date for Donley county places this county's total at 8,356, only 878 bales below the report for the same time last season. The total to date last year was 9,234. The comparatively small decrease is negligible compared with nearby counties who are falling behind in greater percentage than 50 of their normal production. Donley county is holding to its 40 year record of no crop failures with a vengeance this year in the face of the most adverse conditions the farmer has faced from lack of moisture in many seasons.

Many calves and beeves have been canned in the county this fall and more demands are being made each week on local county agents for instruction in this line of home production. Donley county farmers in the face of destructive prices are taking care of themselves in a way that promises a satisfactory stability for this county in the years to come. Only a few cattle have been moved to grass and feed bought outside of the county will be small compared with neighboring counties.
