Lotto drawing

AUSTIN — The state comptroller's office predicted more than $20 million in Lotto Texas tickets would be sold Saturday alone for the second most lucrative drawing since last year's legalization of the lottery in the state. Saturday night's drawing, with its jackpot of $30 million, offered the biggest payoff since 13 winning tickets were purchased in the May 1 drawing for $50 million. "We did $4.69 million worth of sales (Friday) alone, which is pretty good for a Friday, since Friday is a non-drawing day," said Carmen Luevanos, spokeswoman for the comptroller's office. She predicted "that we will have several hours today in which sales hit $2 million an hour."

Aristide signs accord

Haitian leader withdraws earlier demands

■ Agreement calls for him to return to office by Oct. 30.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Ousted Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide backed down from earlier demands and signed an accord late Saturday that would return him to office by Oct. 30.

Aristide signed the accord on Governors Island, where U.N.-mediated talks on ending Haiti's 21-month-old political crisis were held for a week.

Haiti's military chief, Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, signed the plan earlier in the day, then left immediately without comment to return to Haiti.

The agreement would end a political crisis that has battered the country since Aristide's overthrow in a bloody coup in September 1991. Cedras agreed to come here and discuss Aristide's reinstatement after the United Nations late last month imposed a punishing oil embargo on the Caribbean nation to pressure for Aristide's return.

Diplomats at the talks said Aristide earlier demand-

Poll: Americans oppose U.S. playing policeman

■ Most respondents approve of U.N.'s interventionist role.

By Howard Goldberg
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Independence Day is traditionally a time to take pride in this country's strength and vitality. But how much should the 217-year-old, undisputed heavyweight champion of the world throw its weight around?

An Associated Press poll finds that when it comes to intervening with crumbling states like Bosnia and Somalia, Americans approve a role for the United Nations, but not for the United States alone.

Americans are split almost evenly in evaluating the way their country is responding to world problems, with 45 percent satisfied, 46 percent dissatisfied, the rest not sure.

Beneath those figures, several conflicts are tugging at American public opinion: uncertainty about the proper role of the dominant superpower in a post-Cold War world, domestic and foreign interests clamoring for President Clinton's attention, and a gender gap.

Fifty-two percent of men are satisfied with the current U.S. response to world problems, but 52 percent of women are dissatisfied, according to the poll. The dissatisfied men and women are much more likely to doubt U.S. ability to play "world policeman" and discount a U.S. responsibility in the former Yugoslavia.

The telephone poll of 1,008 adults was taken June 25-29 by ICR Survey Research Group of Media, Pa., part of AUS Consultants. Results have an overall margin of sampling error of 3 percentage points, plus or minus.

Most of those polled, 59 percent, said the United States has no responsibility to do something about the fighting between Serbs and Bosnian Muslims, which has left 138,000 people dead or missing.

An even higher 76 percent said the United States has no right to determine who holds power in another country even if that country has

Cult members' friends, relatives attend memorial at compound

By Pauline Arrillaga
Associated Press writer

WACO — It's been more than two months since the world watched in horror as shimmering wind-whipped flames engulfed the Branch Davidian compound outside Waco.

Friends and relatives of those who died in the April 19 inferno have tried to block the images, the memories of watching the home of their loved ones burn as their sisters, brothers, daughters and sons remained inside.

But on Saturday, thy gathered at the charred site of the former compound — to remember, to honor and to grieve.

For many, it was their first time ever at the sight. For others it was a chance to return to the only home they had known.

Gladys Ottman's eyes swelled up in tears as she looked out over the sprawling 77-acre prairie. Where once stood a series of fortified buildings now were piles of garbage and rubble.

"This place was beautiful before. Now it's a mess." Ms. Ottman said.

Ms. Ottman and her daughter, Ruth, left the compound shortly after the standoff between the Branch Davidians and federal agents began in a Feb. 28 firefight that killed six Davidians and four agents.

It was Ms. Ottman's first time back.

They came to mourn the relatives and friends who died in fire and gunfire at the compound, which was besieged for 51 days. "We were a family," Ms. Ottman said.

MPD exceeds goal, plans to buy 130 vests

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Local police officers should feel more secure on the streets while sporting their new top-of-the-line, state-of-the-art bullet-proof vests.

An extensive citywide campaign to "Invest in a Vest" has exceeded the original departmental goal of $80,000 by nearly $60,000, allowing the police department to purchase vests for 130 uniformed officers.

The vests — made with Spectrashield, a material that cannot be harmed by the elements, according to its designers — are warranted for five years under constant use. Police officials plan to use the extra money for a vest replacement fund.

The City Council last week pledged $40,000 toward the campaign.

Seniors leave their mark on 'The Wall'

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

LAMESA — "The Wall" in Lamesa is a block-long wall of red brick that each year becomes a canvas for graduating high-school seniors to paint in celebration of their graduation.

It's a pre-World War II tradition for seniors to paint their names, their loves, and most anything that comes to mind on a brick mural that lasts until the next batch of seniors comes along.

"You just put your mark on the wall until the next class comes and paints over it," said Elise Guajardo, a 1991 La-

Former Vietnam POWs gather for Colorado reunion

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo (AP) — On this Independence Day weekend, 178 Americans are celebrating another kind of freedom — the 20th anniversary of their release from torturous prisoner of war camps in Vietnam.

On Saturday, many of the former POWs, their wives and children visited nearby Pikes Peak, where a young schoolteacher Katharine Lee Bates, was inspired by the view to write "America the Beautiful" a century ago.

The reunion will be marked Sunday by a memorial service at the Air Force Academy chapel, honoring their nearly 60,000 fallen comrades.

For the most part, the POWs and their families were enjoying getting together and reminiscing amid activities that included ballooning, golf, gambling, barbecue, a concert and a fireworks display.

"We like to get back together again because we lived some pretty tramautic experiences together," said Ross Terry, a Navy pilot from Pensacola, Fla., and a POW for nearly seven years. "We jell back together in our hearts and our minds thinking of the things we went through and how we had to help one another to keep our minds right."

What they went through was torture, including "rope tricks."

Recalled Terry, 56 and retired from the Navy: "They tie your arms up behind you, and tie your elbows together and pull them back over the top of your head."

The ex-POWs expressed little support for establishing normal relations with Vietnam until more than 2,200 Americans still listed as missing in action in Southeast Asia are fully accounted for.

President Clinton announced Friday that the United States will stop opposing international loans to Vietnam, but normal relations with the Hanoi government will depend on further progress in accounting for the MIAs.

It was the most significant step toward normalization since the end of U.S. military intervention in the Vietnam War in 1973 when the POWs were released.

"Clinton has done a lot of wild things, as far as I'm concerned," said Terry. "I wouldn't put anything past him. I don't really have a problem with the Vietnamese people themselves. The government is the thing that I hated.

"They need to come clean with where everybody is. I don't think there's anybody alive over there anymore but they need to tell us where they are so they can be brought home."

"They're lying and cheating just like they did before," said Cole Black of Escondido, Calif. "They smile and show their pearly teeth and give these (American) delegations that go over there a cup of coffee and a cookie and tell us what they're going to do."

Black, 60, said he spent "2,428 days and 18 hours and 35 minutes, six years and nine months." in captivity.

Clinton to name 1st ever woman Air Force chief

WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Clinton has said he will nominate an aeronautics professor, Sheila E. Widnall, to become secretary of the Air Force, a choice that would make her the first woman to head one of the military services.

Dr. Widnall, 54, is associate provost at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where she is also is professor of aeronautics and mathematics. In a statement on Friday, Clinton praised her as "a woman of high achievement, a respected scientist, a skilled administrator and a dedicated citizen."

"I am confident that she will do an outstanding job of guiding the Air Force through this period of post-Cold War change," Clinton said.

As the head of the Air Force, Dr. Widnall would oversee a budget of billions of dollars and more than a half-million civilian and military personnel.

The post requires confirmation by the Senate.

The White House also announced that Clinton would nominate the president of Emory University, James T. Laney, to be ambassador to South Korea. Two Foreign Service career officers, Edward Perkins and Victor Tomseth, will be named Ambassadors to Australia and Laos respectively, the White House said.

A past president of the American Association for the Advancement of Sciences, Dr. Widnall is one of the world's leading experts in fluid dynamics. She is best known for her research on aircraft turbulence and the spiraling air flows called vortexes created by helicopters.

Fighting rages in Mogadishu as troops clash

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Mortars and machine-gun fire blasted the capital after dark Saturday as U.N. troops and Somali gunmen resumed battles a day after three Italian soldiers were killed.

Tracer bullets flew and flares lit up the sky around the busy Kilometer Four traffic circle, where Pakistani troops of the United Nations-led contingent are stationed.

It was not possible to determine exactly where the fighting began or who was involved, but it appeared to come from the direction of the Pakistani-controlled airport.

Until the firing broke out, the day had been quite but tense. The Somali gunmen who had driven Italian troops out of a Mogadishu neighborhood in Friday's firefight set up roadblocks while U.N. forces kept an eye on them from the air.

The well-planned ambush in which the three Italian soldiers died left an area of several square miles in northeast Mogadishu essentially under militia control.

It was the second such ambush in a month and brought to 34 the number of foreign troops killed since the United Nations took control of the Somalia salvation mission May 4. Under U.S. command from Dec. 9 to May 4, 17 soldiers died in combat.

Some of the Italian soldiers wounded in the ambush returned to Rome on Saturday, and the bodies of the three dead were expected later in the evening, news reports said. State funerals were set for Monday.

The Vatican's official newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, on Saturday called the killings a "cowardly murder."

Despite the losses, America's U.N. ambassador, Madeleine K. Albright, defended the U.N. leadership. "What the United Nations is trying to do is restore a failed society. That is a lot of work," she said.

Albright paid a short and well-fortified visit to Somalia, meeting with clan elders in an airport hangar in the southern city of Kismayu before briskly touring the city in an armored column. She limited her time in Mogadishu to meetings and appearances with soldiers in the walled and sandbagged U.N. headquarters.

Albright accused news media of focusing too much on Mogadishu's problems and ignoring the success of U.N. efforts.

Sixteen inches of snow was reported Saturday in parts of Grand Teton National Park in northwestern Wyoming. Three to four inches of snow forced the closure of a section of U.S. 212 in the mountains between Wyoming and Montana.

Most Haitians skeptical of accord

By Larry Rohter
N.Y. Times News Service

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — As details of an accord intended to restore the Rev. Jean-Bertrand Aristide to power emerged here Saturday, the cautious optimism that met the announcement on Friday that an agreement was near quickly turned to suspicion and skepticism.

In the gas lines that have sprung up as a result of a U.N. embargo against Haiti, and in the markets where poor residents of the capital lined up for rice or to try to sell charcoal, mangoes and empty bottles, there were doubts that Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, the military commander, and his officers would keep their word. And among the nation's business and political elite, some expressed fear that the country could see a return to politics based on class divisions if Aristide returns to the presidency on Oct. 30, as called for in the agreement.

The apparent shift in the balance of power also raised questions that kept anxiety high. Though soldiers and police officers were absent from the streets Saturday, both sides were waiting for assurances from Col. Michel Francois, the chief of police, that he and his men also support and will abide by the agreement Cedras signed before returning to Port-Au-Prince from New York Saturday afternoon.

A few supporters of Aristide said they were relieved that a compromise had been reached after a week of arduous negotiations in New York.

"Thank God the general went to confession," the Rev. Gerard Jean-Juste, one of the deposed president's associates, said. "We may give him some penance," he added, jokingly.

"What I've heard is good news," Jean-Juste said of the agreement. "If all the component forces respect the words, then this is deliverance day and democracy is coming back to Haiti."

The people in poor neighborhoods here, who voted overwhelmingly for Aristide in the December 1990 election and have remained loyal to him since his overthrow in September 1991, were clearly not as pleased with the agreement. They argued that Aristide had made too many concessions to Cedras and has not received enough guarantees in return.

"The wrong guy is coming back," one man in Cite Soleil, a pro-Aristide stronghold that has been the scene of several recent demonstrations, said as he kept an eye out for plainclothes policemen. "It is Aristide who should be returning, and Cedras the one having to remain behind in exile."

Other people in the neighborhood said they were unhappy that they must wait four more months for Aristide to return to power. result of the agreement, international aid to Haiti will be resumed and that the U.N. oil and arms embargo will be lifted before Aristide actually regains office.

"We want that embargo to remain until the moment Titid comes home," one supporter said, referring to Aristide by his nickname. "I think we can hold out for a few months more. But even if we have to die hungry, this is the only way to force the soldiers to keep their word."

HAITI: Aristide to name new prime mininster

ed that all the officers who overthrew him be drummed out of the army.

Under the U.N. plan, only Cedras would resign, then Aristide would appoint a new military commander, who would reassign those involved in the coup. After Parliament accepts Aristide's choice of prime minister, the embargo would be lifted and Aristide would return.

Cedras had insisted on retaining a role for the military, at least during a transition period. He finally agreed he would step down.

Col. Joseph Michel Francois, the chief of police, would lose his post under a U.N.-reorganization of Haiti's repressive police force. Aristide had demanded his immediate resignation along with that of Cedras.

Aristide, a Roman Catholic priest, spoke briefly as he left the signing ceremony.

"Peace and love to the Haitian people," he said. He thanked President Clinton and Vice President Al Gore, the U.N. and OAS mediators, and the four countries that pushed the process to its conclusion — the United States, Canada, Venezuela and France.

Aristide, accompanied by his delegation, signed the agreement late Saturday in a conference room in the U.S. Coast Guard Officers' Club.

U.N. and OAS delegates, Aristide's delegation and about two dozen other diplomats and witnesses applauded after the ceremony.

A copy of the side agreement was not available. Diplomats said it asks the United Nations to monitor and verify the implementation of the agreement.

Diplomats said a key test would be whether the military allows Aristide to address Haiti on national television to explain the accords. They said he would like to make the address in the next few days.

They also said another key test would come later after a new prime minister has been appointed by Aristide and confirmed by Parliament, which is hostile to him.

The U.N. plan called for the following:

- Haitian political parties would meet, perhaps in Washington, to lay the groundwork for the new government.
- Aristide would then nominate a new prime minister.
- Parliament would accept the new prime minister.

Parliament would adopt an amnesty law for the soldiers who overthrew Aristide, Haiti's first democratically elected president, in September 1991.

- Cedras would then resign.
- Aristide would appoint a new military commander in chief, who would decide the fate of the high command — they could be retired or reassigned.
- An international advisory group would arrive in Haiti to help form an independent police force.

CULT: Koresh's mother, grandmother attend service

vid Koresh, as she peered through the chain-link fence surrounding the scorched site.

Her voice shook with grief as she recalled how David had promised to bring her to his home, the home he had been so proud of. "Now, look at what's been done, and who's done it."

For Koresh's mother, the service was a chance to share her grief with others, who, too, had cherished her son.

"It was time for us to be able to come out here and do this memorial," Bonnie Haldeman said.

Though she says she will never accept the government's reasoning for the raid on the complex — the federal government claimed firearm violations and possible child abuse was behind the raid — Mrs. Haldeman said she believes her son and his followers died for a reason.

"They did not die in vain. I believe I'll see them again. I know I'll see them again," she said. "So, that's my hope. That's what I try to dwell on."

About 150 people attended the service. Many carried wreaths and Bibles, symbols of their faith and support for the Davidians.

Dallas radio announcer Ron Engelman, who organized the service, read the names of the more than 80 Branch Davidians who perished. Also named were the four bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents who were killed in the initial raid.

Verses of "Amazing Grace" swirled between howls of the wind as it swept through the long, unmowed grass.

"It's time for us to heal, and I hope this is a step that will help us in that direction," Engelman said.

But for Sheila Martin, healing will not come easily. Martin lost her husband and four of her children in the siege.

Ms. Martin was watching television when the compound erupted in flames, forever etching the horror in her mind.

Still, she said she isn't bitter.

"We're not going to forget, but we're looking forward to something better," Ms. Martin said. "We know it's going to work out eventually. It's going to work out because the Bible is true. God is true.

"We will see our families again."

LAMESA: Brick wall is canvas for graduating seniors

(From 1A)

mesa High School graduate.

The brick wall is the backside of Higginbotham-Bartlett Building Materials' lumberyard and runs east-to-west on South Street between Main and Austin avenues.

The seniors on graduation week "have a ball out there doing" the mural, said Bob Baker, manager of the lumber company that allows the seniors to keep up their tradition.

Each year, the graduating class paints over the previous class' mural.

"They have a good time," Baker said.

He said "it's not a sanctioned-school function," but they get permission from the lumber company to continue the wall-painting tradition.

"There's a little bit of everything" on the wall, said Randy Shaw, who works for the lumber company.

Aubrey Davis, who graduated from Lamesa High School in 1939, recalled two facing brick walls of murals on which seniors celebrated their graduation by brushing paint in some sort of artistic fashion.

"That's been going on for 60 years, I guess," said Davis, who back in high school worked for Cicro Smith Lumber Co. across the street.

"I was just a general flunky, putting windmills together, hauling cement and sheet iron," recalled Davis.

Sometime ago, the Cicro Smith Lumber Co. went out of business, and its painted wall and buildings were razed.

For some reason, Davis never got around to putting his name on either wall.

"That's still called Wall Street," said Davis, a retired schoolteacher. "The seniors painted their names and such on the walls."

And, as teen-agers in love are wont to do, they painted names and told who loves who.

"It's just a lot of fun," he said.

A year following one painting, the next class would "completely wipe it out," Davis said, "and start a'fresh the next year."

More than 50 years later, Loretta Gonzales, Class of '92, participated in the brush-and-spray paint brick artwork.

Aside from names in a maze of colors, the mural this years features the enlarged likeness of the black eight ball and the peace sign.

"We just paint our names and whatever we want," Ms. Gonzales said.

"It's an experience," she said. "It's something different."

MPD: 130 more officers to soon have vests

(From 1A)

Lt. Jerry Compton said the vests are made of a light-weight, flexible material allowing for easier maneuverability.

"It's the best bullet-stopping material around. And just to be sure we'll send four in for independent testing," Compton said.

Currently, about 25 to 30 officers have bulletproof vests that they purchased with their own money.

The vests that the department plans to purchase cost $500 a piece. Typically, bullet-proof vests cost between $300 to $700.

"You get what you pay for with these things," Compton said. "But nothing we looked at in the high dollar range could beat what we're getting."

Among the donors who supported the vest program were Travis Elementary School children who, instead of exchanging $2 gifts among themselves at Christmas, donated cash to buy a $500 vest for an officer, said Penny Angelo, president of Neighbors Against Burglary and Drugs.

Other school children held similar campaigns. Scharbauer Elementary School children collected and sold aluminum cans to raise money for vests and paid tribute to a Drug Awareness Resistance Education (DARE) officer with candlelight music and a 16-piece orchestra.

St. Ann's School children raised $1,000 for two vests.

POLL: U.S. has no right to intervene, people say

problems as grave as those in Bosnia.

Only 17 percent said the United States, which has called the Serb leaders of the former Yugoslavia war criminals, has a right to intervene in that country's ethnic, religious and nationalistic power struggles.

As an experiment, the name Somalia was substituted for Bosnia in half the poll interviews. In that African country where anarchy wrought a cruel famine eased only by a U.S.-led multinational intervention, 69 percent said the United States has no right to determine who holds power. Just 24 percent supported a U.S. right to play kingmaker in Somalia.

Of course, U.S. military muscle has been flexed in Somalia under the insignia of the United Nations, which also has handled the bulk of the "peacekeeping" in Bosnia. The American people seem enthusiastic about this growing U.N. involvement.

By 61 percent to 31 percent, those polled said the United Nations has the right to apportion power in Bosnia. Support for that type of U.N. role in Somalia was an even higher 69 percent, to 25 percent opposed.

"Clearly the public sees the U.N. as having global legitimacy and authority to intervene where the U.S. lacks a legal basis to do so," said Ed Luck of the United Nations Association of the USA, a private support group.

"While many people are still critical of the U.N., a rapidly increasing majority feels that the U.N. has a right to intervene in places where the U.S. may not," Luck said.

But since the United Nations relies heavily on U.S. firepower to make its demands stick, the debate tends to shift back to questions about whether the United States should serve as "world policeman" or even has the ability to.

Half those polled — a majority of the men but not of the women — said the United States can fight violations of international law and aggression wherever they occur. But a substantial 46 percent said the United States does not have that ability.

That split has been found in polls before. But it highlights a tension in Washington that became apparent recently when a senior State Department official suggested that the nation's limited resources could diminish the U.S. role abroad. Secretary of State Warren Christopher quickly disavowed the comment.

Clinton, elected on his promise to focus on domestic issues, has tried to avoid sending a message to adversaries abroad that they have free rein.

"The United States cannot be the world's policeman but also cannot turn a blind eye to the world's problems," he said in a speech June 12, "for they affect our own security, our own interests, and our own ideals."

Puerto Rican governor to authorize plebiscite

■ In November, residents are to decide on the island's political status: statehood, independence or remaining as a commonwealth.

By Kevin Noblet
Associated Press writer

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Old Glory, the Fourth of July — who knows, even apple pie may enter the campaign to have Puerto Ricans declare themselves in favor of statehood.

Pedro Rossello, the pro-statehood governor, is evoking all-American symbolism by choosing Independence Day to sign a bill authorizing a plebiscite Nov. 14 on the island's political status.

The ceremony in a hall dating to Spanish colonial days precedes a traditional day of speeches, fireworks and marching bands with baton-twirling majorettes — all in a sea of American flags, just like on the mainland.

"It's the favorite date for statehooders" even if, unlike the independence movement, "they don't have many local dates or heroes," said Aaron Ramos, a political science professor at the University of Puerto Rico.

In November, Puerto Ricans will choose among three options: statehood, independence or remaining a U.S. commonwealth with some autonomy.

Congress must approve any change in the island's status.

Symbols are important in the plebiscite. Rossello's New Progressive Party and the small Independence Party, for example, each claimed a five-pointed star for its line on the ballot — signifying the 51st state for one, the lone star of freedom for the other.

The conflict was resolved by using politically neutral symbols — circle, square and triangle — assigned by lot.

Puerto Rico, the largest U.S. territory, was taken as booty in 1898 when the United States won the Spanish-American War. Congress has never been eager to make it a state.

Some members of congress doubt that the Spanish-rooted culture could mesh with the mainland. Republicans may not want a new state likely to be full of Democrats.

Rossello and other statehood advocates argue that Congress has never acted because Puerto Rico has never expressed a clear desire for statehood.

"To break down the colonial wall, we must first affirm the will of the people," declared Roberto Rexach Benitez, president of the Puerto Rican Senate.

In the only other plebiscite on the subject, in 1967, nearly 60 percent favored continuing as a commonwealth. Elections and social surveys since have indicated a shift toward statehood.

Rossello's party won the November elections convincingly, capturing majorities in both legislative chambers as well as the governorship. Its main opposition, the pro-commonwealth Popular Democratic Party, is in the midst of a leadership crisis and tried to get the plebiscite put off until 1994.

Polls show Puerto Ricans gradually becoming more Americanized through frequent travel to the mainland and easy access to U.S. television and consumer goods. The change appears especially prevalent among those now becoming old enough to vote.

Advocates of statehood feel they may he helped by Washington's plans to reduce tax breaks for mainland businesses with plants in Puerto Rico. The tax program has been an integral part of development efforts for nearly two decades and is a pillar of commonwealth status.

Statehooders say Puerto Rico's difficulties in defending the program revealed the need for real representation in Congress.

Their opponents reverse the argument. Rossello's ardent defense of the tax break in lobbying trips to Washington and New York, they say, contradicts his advocacy of statehood, which would end special tax privileges for the island.

Puerto Rico collects its own taxes and duties. Residents are not subject to U.S. taxes and cannot vote in federal elections, but are subject to military draft.

Summer snow storm hits northern Wyoming

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — Meteorologists had a snowball's chance in July of predicting the weather that hit northern Wyoming on Saturday.

Most Wyoming residents began the holiday weekend with sunny skies and warm weather, but people in northern Wyoming scrambled for their snowsuits.

One foot of new snow was reported in parts of Grand Teton National Park and heavy snow also fell at lower elevations of the park.

The National Weather Service had predicted thunderstorms across northern Wyoming for Saturday. But heavy rains combined with a cold front over the Tetons to produce snow.

Rangers in the park's backcountry, at an elevation of about 11,600 feet, reported 12 inches of new snow on Saturday, accompanied by winds of 65 mph, park spokeswoman Linda Olson said.

"So we've got full winter conditions," she said. "It's pretty crazy. I wish it were 98 degrees up here."

Belfast reels during worst civil unrest in years

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Pro-British militants rampaged Saturday, hurling gasoline bombs at police, firing guns and looting shops in the worst civil unrest in Northern Ireland in years.

In one incident, armed men seized a fire engine while its crew was dousing a burning vehicle, drove it away and burned it.

Several police officers were injured — none seriously — and 14 people were arrested, the Royal Ulster Constabulary said.

The rioting began late Friday after the funeral of Brian McCallum, a member of the Ulster Volunteer Force, a Protestant paramilitary group. McCallum was killed when a grenade he was carrying went off prematurely on June 26 as police clashed with loyalists.

The violence occurred in response to the RUC's "jackboot tactics" against members of illegal pro-British paramilitary groups and their families, a man who claimed to represent the Ulster Freedom Fighters, one of the paramilitary groups, said in a call to a radio station.

Loyalists object to police plans to reroute annual Protestant parades around mostly Roman Catholic neighborhoods. Past parades have led to clashes between Protestants who support British rule in Northern Ireland and Roman Catholics who oppose it.

The worst of the rioting occurred in north Belfast, where dozens of trucks, vans and cars were hijacked and set on fire between Friday afternoon and dawn Saturday, an RUC spokesman said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Police fired plastic bullets at rioters in two areas of Belfast, possibly injuring at least one person, the RUC said. No details were available.

Rescuers find at least 315 bodies on barge

BOCAUE, Philippines (AP) — Rescuers gave up their search late Saturday for more bodies of people who were aboard a floating shrine that capsized in a fast-moving river and killed at least 315 people.

Officials were unsure how many people were aboard the shrine, which was made up of three barges with a three-tiered altar and a huge crucifix. The shrine was part of the nine-day "Crucifix at the River" festival that celebrates a local legend of people seeing a miraculous cross.

Serafin dela Cruz, the mayor of this town about 20 miles north of Manila, said 36 people were known to have survived the accident on the Bocaue River. He estimated another 30 were unaccounted for.

Authorities took most of the bodies to a makeshift morgue at the town's basketball court, where they were covered with ice as protection against the fierce tropical heat.

"We are doing everything possible under the situation," Dela Cruz said in a telephone interview. "We are assisting families of the dead in finding caskets."

Interior and Local Government Secretary Rafael Alunan, who visited the site, said the incident was "tragic, unnecessary and sad."

Volunteer searchers, using a huge improvised iron rake, had combed the river for bodies. Others threw fish nets.

The accident occurred as the shrine glided down the river. Many people swam to the vessel and climbed aboard. Marshals tossed some back in the river, but others managed to scramble aboard, overloading it.

Egyptian government asks U.S. to extradite radical sheik

CAIRO — The Egyptian government, in an abrupt shift in policy, has asked the United States to extradite Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman, the blind cleric who is under detention in New York on immigration charges, to Egypt, senior government officials said.

"The United States and Egypt have decided to work together to deliver this criminal to Egypt to stand trial," said an Egyptian official. "He is just one man. We can handle him."

The government made the request in a meeting Saturday between the Egyptian foreign minister, Amr Mousa, and Ambassador Robert H. Pelletreau of the United States, Egyptian officials said.

Pelletreau, while conceding that the discussion centered on the fate of the cleric, refused to confirm or deny that the Egyptians asked for the cleric's extradition.

"We discussed recent actions in the United States with respect to the detention of Omar Abdel-Rahman," he said. "That is all I would say on that."

The decision to extradite the cleric is a dramatic reversal in Egyptian policy. The Egyptian government, although angered by the presence of the cleric in the United States, steadfastly refused to demand his return, fearing that his imprisonment could unleash a wave of attacks by his followers.

'The U.S. and Egypt have decided to work together to deliever this criminal to Egypt.'

— Egyptian official

"The belief was always that he could do less harm abroad than he could sitting in a jail cell in Egypt," said a Western diplomat familiar with the case, "but when faced with the prospect of deportation from the United States, and flight to another country where he would be free to operate, the Egyptians decided it would be best to have him under their control."

The Fayoum Higher State Security Court ordered Abdel-Rahman's arrest Saturday as part of the move to establish a legal framework for his detention upon his return to Egypt, these officials said. The sheik, although he has been tried three times in Egypt, has been acquitted of all charges and has never been convicted of any serious crimes here.

Judge Ahmed Izzat Ashmawi, however, announced in a heavily guarded courtroom in the city of Fayoum Saturday that the cleric and 48 other defendants should be immediately arrested and imprisoned.

The warrants, issued in connection with the attempted murder of two police officers and charges of inciting violence, stemmed from a 1989 riot outside a mosque in Fayoum, 55 miles southwest of Cairo. Abdel-Rahman and his followers were acquitted of the charges in 1989, but the government ordered a retrial in April.

Suspects claim innocence in plot to kill Bush

KUWAIT (AP) — A frail, white-bearded man accused of complicity in an alleged Iraqi plot to assassinate George Bush limped into court Saturday, declared his innocence and said he had been beaten while in custody.

Aly Khdair Badai, who is among 14 Iraqis and Kuwaitis charged in the case, testified he was unaware of any assassination plot against the former president.

In all, six defendants testified Saturday, all declaring their innocence. The trial was adjourned until Monday.

Badai recanted an earlier statement to interrogators that he had smuggled drugs into Kuwait from Iraq.

"I didn't know what I was saying, because I hadn't eaten for three days and I was beaten," Badai told the State Security Court.

Badai said Kuwaiti policemen kicked him in the stomach and slammed him against a large piece of metal shortly after he was arrested.

He admitted entering Kuwait illegally with the other defendants, but he said he just wanted to borrow money from in-laws living in Kuwait.

One Iraqi has pleaded guilty in the trial that started June 5. He testified a week ago that he had been ordered by Iraqi intelligence agents to smuggle an explosives-laden jeep into Kuwait to kill Bush when the former president visited the emirate in April.

Troops patrol streets as Muslim rampage rocks Turkey

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Officials vowed Saturday that Turkey would not be diverted from its secular course by Islamic extremist violence such as the riot that killed 35 people a day earlier.

Troops patrolled the streets of Sivas, 275 miles east of Ankara, enforcing a 24-hour curfew in the city of 800,000. It was imposed after extremists torched a hotel there that was hosting a conference of writers and leftist intellectuals, killing the 35 and injuring 60.

Officials said the extremists were enraged by the comments of one of the guests, a newspaper editor who had reportedly told the conference that the age of the Koran had passed.

The attack was the worst case of Muslim extremist violence in modern Turkish history and showed that the nation that straddles Europe and the Near East is not immune from the fundamentalist violence that has hit Egypt, Algeria and other countries.

Turkish minister vows Muslim violence won't change 'secular state structure.'

On Saturday, the eve of a confidence vote sought by new Premier Tansu Ciller on her Westernization program, officials said violence would not convert Turkey into an Islamic state.

"With such fundamentalist outbursts, they will never be able to change the secular state structure," said Deputy Prime Minister Erdal Inonu as he toured the charred hotel with military officials.

Ciller, a U.S.-trained economist, is one of the few women to lead a Muslim country and the first in Turkey.

She favors integration with the European Community and has called for privatization and economic reform.

Islamic fundamentalists have 40 of the 450 seats in Parliament.

Fundamentalist violence had been limited mainly to the murders of secular writers or professors by members of extremist groups. Turkish officials have blamed Iran for training and guiding Turkish militants.

Mexico, Canada, U.S. to resume NAFTA talks

MEXICO CITY (AP) — U.S., Canadian and Mexican officials will meet here next week to conclude agreements on jobs and the environment, the last obstacles to turning North America into a huge free trade zone, a Mexican official said.

The high-level talks are to resume despite a U.S. judge's order threatening to delay the treaty on the grounds that before Congress approves it, U.S. laws require a study on the treaty's environmental effect.

Commerce Secretary Jaime Serra Puche on Friday announced the fifth round of talks on the North American Free Trade Agreement would be July 8-10.

He said important progress had been made on the side accords to protect American jobs and the environment that the Clinton administration has demanded as requisite to approving NAFTA. Next week's meeting will be to resolve the remaining differences.

Industrial leaders hope trade summit helps many overall

TOKYO (AP) — Leaders of the seven richest industrial countries hope to pump up their nations' sagging economies — and spruce up their own tattered political images — this week at their 19th annual economic summit.

Four of the seven summit countries — Japan, Germany, France and Italy — are suffering their worst recessions in years.

And the other three countries — the United States, Britain and Canada — are sputtering through stop-and-go recoveries that have done little to ease high unemployment.

President Clinton, eager for a foreign policy success to bolster his standing at home, heads for his first economic summit with an agenda ranging from increased financial support for Russian President Boris Yeltsin to a strategy for finally concluding long stalled world trade talks.

But the other leaders are in worse political shape than Clinton and have been unwilling to be seen as knuckling under to the United States.

That is particularly true for this year's host, Japanese Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa, who has been viewed as a "dead body," the Japanese term for lame duck, since he lost a parliamentary no-confidence vote in mid-June.

French President Francois Mitterrand heard calls to resign after his party's embarrassing defeat in April elections, British Prime Minister John Major's approval ratings are at a record low and Canada's first woman prime minister, Kim Campbell, comes to the summit amid doubts that her Conservative Party can survive fall elections.

"What we will have in Tokyo is a meeting of the world's strongest countries and perhaps the world's weakest leaders," said Michael Mandelbaum, a foreign policy expert at Johns Hopkins University.

Clinton, however, is trying to shake off his own low poll ratings and claim the leadership of the Group of Seven. He has said the United States will go to the summit in its strongest position in years because his administration is tackling the federal deficit.

U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor warned Saturday against expecting any breakthrough agreements.

"I believe we can look to some good results from Tokyo, but I don't think we should have our hopes too high," Kantor said on CNN. The talks' outcome could be affected by the recent change in Japanese politics and the lack of European unity on market access and lowering tariffs, he said.

But Japanese Ambassador Takakazu Kuriyama, also interviewed on CNN, said that changes in Japanese politics should not be an obstacle because there is a solid consensus among all political factions in Japan on foreign economic policy.

Flood-weary residents eye Mississippi about to crest

By Mike Glover
Associated Press writer

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) — Residents who three times rejected flood control measures watched the swollen Mississippi River lap through their streets and rise higher than its predicted crest Saturday.

"It's depressing," said Scott Cortez, as he took a break from piling sandbags around his home. "You wonder what's going to happen."

Downstream, residents of small towns evacuated or battled to strengthen levees against the pressure of the rushing water.

Upstream, still more heavy rain fell on the river's tributaries in water-logged Minnesota, and more was forecast elsewhere across the upper Midwest.

A flood crest of 22 feet had been forecast at Davenport, but the National Weather Service said Saturday the river would continue rising, cresting at 22.2 feet during the night. Flood stage is 15 feet and the record is 22.5 feet.

Fatigue from days of sandbagging was showing.

"The first couple of days, everybody was up 24 hours a day," said Phil Hoover, who lives in tiny Buffalo, just downstream."

Buffalo resident Corine Armentrout tried to put the best face on the situation as she looked at her back yard, which was under as much as a foot of water.

President Clinton promised federal assistance and scheduled a tour on Sunday.

The worst flooding on the upper Mississippi since 1965 has swamped low-lying homes and businesses, blocked vital roads and bridges, and halted commercial shipping and recreational boating on most of the navigable river above St. Louis.

Gunman's letter complains about food additives, law firm

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A rambling letter found on Gian Luigi Ferri's body reveals a frustrated businessman railing against prejudice, food additives and the law firm where his deadly rampage began, a newspaper reported Saturday.

The San Francisco Chronicle published excerpts from the single-spaced, four-page letter and police confirmed it had been discovered on Ferri, who killed eight people and wounded six others Thursday before committing suicide.

Included in the letter is a string of names, phones numbers and grievances under the heading "LIST OF CRIMINALS, RAPISTS, RACKETEERES, LOBBYISTS," according to the Chronicle. The document, typed in capital letters, is sprinkled with misspellings and grammatical errors.

None of those killed or wounded was named in the letter, which listed more than 30 names, the Chronicle said.

The rampage began when Ferri walked into the 34th-floor offices of the Pettit & Martin law firm. He carried three semiautomatic weapons and hundreds of rounds of ammunition hidden in a legal briefcase strapped to a dolly.

Lawyers, secretaries and visitors fled for cover as the shooting began. It continued for roughly 15 minutes on five floors and ended when Ferri shot himself in a stairwell as police closed in.

Ferri, 55, was seen in the office earlier in the day giving a deposition, but it remained unknown Saturday what it was about.

One source told the San Francisco Examiner that Ferri was party to a lawsuit and believed he was about to be cheated out of $300,000.

Police refused to discuss a possible motive.

In the letter, Ferri said: "There is this condiscending attitude in business that when you get emotionally and mentally raped, well 'you got screwed' and the accepted results is the victim is now supposed to go to work at 7-11 or become homeless and the rapist is admired and enveied as a 'winner.'"

IBM wants recognition for 'quietest place on earth'

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — IBM wants a little credit for a room of quiet.

The computer giant has applied to the Guinness Book of Records to get its echoless test chamber that eliminates 99.99 percent of noise listed as the quietest place on Earth.

"With the door closed, this place is quieter than a morgue," said Bob Waters, an IBM acoustical engineer.

Sound-absorbing fiberglass wedges cover the room's concrete walls, door and ceiling. The room sits on its own foundation to eliminate vibrations, and has its own air conditioning system.

International Business Machines Corp. uses its chamber in Boca Raton for testing computer equipment.

Sinful cities now target families; children's games hot at casinos

By Niko Price
Associated Press writer

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Like any 12-year-old on any carnival midway in America, Jesse Bryce is tossing a softball into a milk jug. But this is not just any midway.

This is Circus Circus, and the Bryce family — Jay and Linda, and their kids Jesse and Nicole, 10 — have come to this hotel from their home in Los Gatos, Calif., to see Linda's brother get married.

And, of course, to gamble.

"As far as having kids, if you don't have something like this, you can't bring them here," says Jay, surveying the mezzanine level filled with children's games and overlooking the casino floor.

Nevada's casinos, faced with tougher competition from legalized gambling elsewhere, are cleaning up their acts and trying to lure families. Other less-than-G-rated destinations around the world are following suit, trying to make room for Barney amid the Sybarites.

When William Bennett bought the original Circus Circus in 1974, the casino featured a game in which players threw a ball at a target. Hit it, and a near-nude woman dropped out of a bed.

Reno's Circus Circus features children's games on mezzanine level which overlooks casino floor.

Two decades later, the atmosphere is more wholesome, with activities long monopolized by county fairs clearly separated from betting areas. And Circus Circus, with properties in Las Vegas and Reno, is big business.

The company, together with the Eldorado hotel-casino, recently announced a new 2,000-room Reno hotel-casino with a Lost City of Gold theme. "Families are good business," says Bennett, Circus Circus Enterprises chairman and chief executive officer.

That's not all. Las Vegas, for decades in the forefont of the nation's "sin cities," seems to be undergoing a citywide childproofing.

Construction is now under way on a 33-acre theme park, part of the $1 billion MGM Grand hotel-casino. And this year the $430 million Treasure Island resort is scheduled to open. Circus Circus is also building an $80 million indoor water theme park called Grand Slam Canyon.

"Atlantic City is just not competition to Las Vegas as much as Disneyland or Orlando," says Las Vegas publicist Don Payne.

The casinos are capitalizing on a growing number of travellers who don't leave their children with their mother-in-laws. This year, almost half of America's 99 million travelers will take their children, says Peter Mason, travel marketing director for Better Homes and Gardens.

"People from the boomer generation are taking their kids with them more than ever," he says.

The trend has startled more than casinos — throughout the world, locations not known for their wholesomeness are re-thinking their marketing strategies.

Club Med has traditionally marketed its vacations as wild singles' get-aways, where people can count on a week of hedonistic release.

Authorities await backlash following sheik's imprisonment

NEW YORK (AP) — Authorities braced for the possibility that Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman's imprisonment could trigger a violent backlash by angry followers.

He surrendered to U.S. Immigration and Naturalization officials at a mosque Friday and was taken to a maximum-security lockup 75 miles northwest of the city.

INS officials didn't indicate how long the 55-year-old Abdel-Rahman might remain there, or how quickly his deportation case might be processed.

In a surprise move, an Egyptian judge on Saturday issued an arrest order for Abdel-Rahman — prompting speculation that Cairo was preparing to seek his extradition from the United States. Chief Judge Ahmed Ezzedine el-Ashmawy already was retrying the blind sheik in absentia — along with 48 others — for participating in an anti-government riot there in 1989. They were acquitted in the first trial.

Egypt and the United States have an extradition treaty but President Hosni Mubarak's government has been described as reluctant to risk returning the sheik, who has been blamed for inciting violence against government officials and tourists.

Friday's detention was ordered by U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno after weeks of government uncertainty about how to deal with Abdel-Rahman, who was linked to suspects in the World Trade Center bombing and in the plot to blow up the United Nations building, a federal building, two tunnels and a bridge.

Abdel-Rahman has not been charged in any terrorist plot but the Justice Department said it was revoking his status as a permanent resident alien on grounds he posed a "danger to the community" and might flee.

He entered the United States illegally in July 1990, despite being on a "watch list" of undesirables, and was able to come and go several times since because of what officials called bureaucratic blunders.

U.S. sanctions against S. Africa could be lifted soon

Nelson Mandela joined President F.W. de Klerk by urging end of sanctions.

WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Clinton met Friday with South African President F.W. de Klerk and African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela, signaling that remaining U.S. sanctions against South Africa could be lifted soon.

The separate meetings took place shortly after a historic agreement was reached in South Africa's capital of Johannesburg to hold the first-ever one-person, one-vote elections in the country's 350-year history of white rule.

The elections, in which de Klerk and Mandela almost certainly will face off as political opponents for the presidency, will be held on April 27, a day that will officially mark the end of the country's apartheid government.

But on Friday, de Klerk and Mandela continued the uneasy but cooperative partnership developed in hopes of smoothing the country's transition to a new government.

Although they met separately with Clinton, their agendas were virtually identical, with each making the case for lifting economic sanctions imposed by Congress in 1986 to help force an end to the apartheid policy of racial separation.

In a statement released by the White House, presidential spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers said Clinton assured both leaders that he would "press for a commitment" at the economic summit in Tokyo next week for the resumption of normal trade ties to South Africa once the country establishes a "non-racial democracy."

She said the president indicated his willingness to help end sanctions, once all parties in South Africa agree that they should be lifted.

"He looks forward to the day when all South Africans can call for the lifting of remaining economic and financial sanctions, including state and local government sanctions, and hopes that day will come soon," Myers said.

Officially, Mandela's ANC is still opposed to the end of sanctions, but he acknowledged Friday that he had discussed it with Clinton.

Mandela suggested that the South African agreement to hold elections and the possibility of some "fresh" developments would allow the ANC to end its opposition. He predicted that an announcement on that score could come in about three weeks.

He also said he would try to persuade "all political parties" to support the elections next April.

"We are not prepared to let any political party hold the peace process in ransom," he said, referring to the Zulu-based Inkatha Freedom Party that walked out of the Johannesburg election talks Friday in protest.

Emerging from the White House, de Klerk told reporters he is hopeful that Clinton will take the lead on ending sanctions against South Africa.

"I have no doubt that we will — within the next six weeks to two months — make the progress that is necessary to finally get the total international community, including America, to remove the last vestiges of the few remaining sanctions," de Klerk said.

Famous scientist says disability sharpened his world interest

By Tom Paulson
Seattle Post-Intelligencer

SEATTLE — Stephen W. Hawking, the famous theoretical physicist widely recognized for his work on black holes and most recently for his role playing himself on television's "Star Trek: The Next Generation," met with disabled students in Seattle this week.

Hawking told some 25 students gathered at Seattle University of his own disability, how he refused to let it hinder him and how the knowledge of his growing physical limitations only sharpened his interest in the world. He was in town to speak at the first evening of a science lecture series.

Hawking, 51, was told 30 years ago that he had ALS, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis. The progressive and degenerative nerve disease primarily affects the muscles and has rendered him incapable of speech or much independent movement.

"Before my condition was diagnosed, I had been very bored with life," he said, speaking from his wheelchair through a computerized voice synthesizer.

Hawking told the students that doctors had predicted decades ago that he had only a few years to live, based on the typical rapid progression of the disease.

"As a result, I became more determined to get more from a life that I had previously taken for granted," he said.

"I didn't die," Hawking added.

Instead, as his condition worsened, his reputation in scientific circles continued to grow, as if to show the mind's repudiation of the body's limitations.

'Before my condition was diagnosed, I had been very bored with life. As a result (of the disease), I became more determined to get more from a life that I had previously taken for granted.'

— Stephen Hawking, theoretical physicist

Later Thursday, the world-renowned cosmologist and author of "A Brief History of Time" spoke on "Black Holes and Baby Universes" at the Seattle Opera House. The topic is also the subject of his next book and an argument against the standard Big Bang theory.

After British physicist Roger Penrose in the mid-1960s came up with the theory of black holes resulting from the gravitational collapse of stars, Hawking showed that by mathematically reversing this event one could explain the expansion of the universe.

He noted with irony that he was now working to disprove a good part of the work that first made his name in science.

Hawking, who now believes there was no single Big Bang beginning to the universe, said his focus these days is to see if he can show whether the collapse of black holes results in the elimination of "information" — meaning the energy and matter taken in by the gravitational sink hole.

"Other physicists don't like the idea," he told his student audience.

But the disabled students, participants of a collaborative program with the University of Washington, appeared to be more interested in Hawking's short bout as an actor on an episode of "Star Trek" and with his experience as a disabled person.

Hawking's responses were delayed by the time it took him to manipulate a clicking device that constructed sentences vocalized by a sound synthesizer, a critical tool for those whose voices are disabled, he noted.

"The only trouble is it gives me an American accent," Hawking joked.

Mike Gallagher, a Seattle University student with cerebral palsy and a slight speech impediment, kidded the "smartest man in the world" by arguing a point.

"I think your synthesizer has a Norwegian accent," Gallagher said, prompting peals of laughter.

Aleysa Reed, an 11-year-old Seattle girl also with cerebral palsy, asked how Hawking could help her get on TV and how he manages to sign legal documents. Sally Reed said her daughter became enamored with Hawking years ago after seeing him featured on a public television show.

Health officials combat deadly desert disease

TUCSON (AP) — Officials at the Veterans Administration hospital here are optimistic about a new drug treatment for a deadly form of valley fever.

An anti-fungal agent known as fluconazole would replace the need for painful injections needed by those who contract the most serious form of the common desert ailment.

"This is very encouraging, and these results are definitely leading us to recommend this as the new treatment of choice for valley fever meningitis — no question," said Dr. John Galgiani, an internist at the Tucson VA Medical Center.

Valley fever is a respiratory illness common to the Southwest that leads to coughs and fatigue.

But the fungal infection can spread through the body, including the lining of the brain, causing severe meningitis.

Patients can die within two years unless they receive repeated and painful drug injections to the brain. The injections also can lead to abscesses or strokes.

Galgiani is hopeful of the expensive treatment reported this week in the journal Annals of Internal Medicine after a study at medical centers in Texas, California and Arizona, including the Tucson hospital.

"Compared to what we've had to do in the past to keep these people alive, this is a very exciting therapy," Galgiani said.

More than 100 young participants turned out for the annual children's parade at the Midland County Courthouse Saturday morning. Flags of all sizes are a commonplace sight this weekend. ReMax of Midland provided flags in many front yards in neighborhoods around the city to show their patriotic spirit.

Melodrama stays same, yet changes

■ Revision was needed since today's younger audience may not be familiar with some of the original characters and situations.

By Mary Frances Beverley

With an evil smirk, the villainous U. Horace Ashe clutches the lovely Priscilla Pointer in his arms. She beats his chest with her arms and cries plaintively, "Oh sir! Would you bend a reluctant maiden to your will?"

Ashe snarls. "You better believe I would!"

For most of 45 years, Midland authors of the Summer Mummers melodrama have closed one of their acts with this curtain line, always followed by a chorus of "Boo! Hiss!" from the audience, then volleys of popcorn aimed at the villain.

This year's melodrama authors are Bill and Liz Adam, who have updated Bill's 1962 script of "Roguery On the River or The Great Boober Grab." After its initial performance in Midland, it was staged in San Angelo, Corpus Christi and Lubbock.

Midland melodramas are unique. With the exception of such early classics as "The Drunkard," "Gold in the Hills," and "Ten Nights in a Bar Room," the shows beginning in the early '50s, have been written by Midlanders. They include the late Bill Davis, Randy Hicks, Mac Jones, Harry Harrison, Mark Eels and Nancy Calhoun.

Like most of the past authors, the Adams bring to their script a feel for melodrama from their own onstage experiences in Mummers. Bill, a geologist, appeared in the first 21 productions, beginning in 1949; Liz appeared in six during the '60s and '70s.

In his original production of "Roguery," Bill played Sylvester, the W.C. Fieldsian character. Liz has played Carrie Consternation, Milicent Militant

Neighbors express outrage over convicted killer in area

SAN ANTONIO — Small children used to carelessly play outside in the 1700 block of Hays Street. But on Saturday, when the noon sun begged them to leave their homes to run and play with other children, they stayed inside.

They have mostly remained indoors since Thursday, when a man convicted of raping and murdering an 8-year-old girl in 1982 was released from prison and moved into a house on their block.

Despite fear and outrage expressed by neighbors, Raul Meza, 32, will remain in his mother's east side home until Texas prison officials find another placement for him.

Hays Street residents say Meza should not be allowed to stay in an area where there are many young children. Two elementary schools and a middle school are within blocks of his mother's house.

And neighbors say they are convinced it's just a matter of time until Meza commits another crime.

"I don't like the idea of him living here," said Casey Arce, who lives across the street from Meza's house. "There's just too many kids around this neighborhood that you see every day running down the streets and they don't have any parents with them.

"There's no telling what he can do. Right now my husband's little cousins are scared to go to store because they're afraid that something might happen," said Ms. Arce, 18, the mother of a 1-year-old boy.

"I used to bring my son out here to play but we don't come out as much," Ms. Arce said. "No one really does, now. Everybody's scared, you know."

Great vacations are usually spoiled by returning home

Ott

OK, sure, vacations are fun. You get away from the office for a few days, you travel to some fancy resort area and, if you are lucky, ou return home in one piece with at least a modest amount of money in your back pocket.

But what then?

What happens on that dreadful day that you actually step foot back on home turf? The vacation is over and all you have to look forward to is getting back into — and I quote — " the swing of things."

Or worse, how about that first day back at work?

It can be rather painful, can't it? Of course it can. That's God's way of getting even with you for all the sinning you did on your days off. Now it's time to pay the fiddler. The vacation is over and here's a quick look at what awaits you.

10:30 p.m. Airplane arrives at the airport. You are hot, tired and miserable. You're sick of airplanes, noise and, most of all, people.

10:32 p.m. Pilot announces you can leave your seat. As people rush past, trying to be the first one off the plane, you are briefly overcome with the peculiar temptation to trip the fat lady who kept bumping the back of your seat with her knee during the last hour of the flight.

MELODRAMA: Mummers' writers make minor revisions to script and Lusitania Titanic in earlier shows.

Bill and Liz describe their revision of the old script as a "cut and paste" approach. Bill says, "We took scenes and lines from the original show, rewrote and inserted them in different places in the new script."

One of the changes in "Roguery" includes the setting. Originally, it was "The South." Now the story takes place in Arkansas.

Both agree that today's audiences are younger and may be unfamilar with the people and situations that made the original lines funny. Thus, the humor in "Roguery" is fresh with references to present-day personalities and situations. This year's hero, for example, is named Dash Limbeau after the popular radio/TV talk show host.

How did they know the lines would play funny? Each of the two playwrights has different kinds of humor. Bill admits to a preference for slapstick, visual humor, while he says, "Liz has more of a thinking person's sense of humor. Her lines often require a second or two longer for the audience to appreciate them."

Names of the characters in this year's script, as in most melodramas, bear names that identify their roles. This year's villain is U. Horace Ashe, the heroine, Priscilla Pointer, daughter of the sheriff, U. Fanger Pointer. Nell Ann Void is the tavern owner with her assistants, Sweet Patootie and Sauer Braten — often referred to as Sweet and Sauer. Two other names need to be spoken quickly to catch the humor. The hero's buddy is G. Willie Ker, Willie's sister, Patty K. Ker.

One character seems to have been created around a single line of dialogue, perhaps the best in the show. Tipper Airey, "an environmentally correct mud engineer," enters and announced "Sir I just arrived from Austin," to which another character observes, "Gosh, that's a long way, Tipper Airey."

Another line sure to evoke audience response in each performance is the first entrance of heroine Priscilla Pointer, who is being attacked by an alligator. When Dash gets rid of him, Priscilla says, "I truly thank you, sir, for the gator aid."

Courtesy: Rubin's Studio

To help the audience hear the dialogue, Mummers director John Meyer says, "We're using eleven body mikes onstage this year to improve the sound throughout the theater. Tables in the pit and seats in the lower balcony are probably the best places to sit in order to hear."

While audience involvement is still a large part of the fun, alert house managers keep an eye on the tables lest someone get too involved. A Mummers spokesman suggests that those who want only to entertain each other with popcorn and conversation should know they may be asked to leave the theater if they become too loud.

Some of the Adams' best lines come in Act II when the W.C. Fieldsian character, Sylvester, is talking with "Samuel Clemens." Clemens says, "I'm working on a story now. It's about this boy who lives along the river. He spends his time fishing, fighting Indians and looking for buried treasure. I think I'll call him "Blueberry Bruce."

In another scene, Sylvester describes his efforts to succeed in 7-Up. " . . . but my timing was bad. When I took control, the company was called 1-Up. I changed it to 2-Up. It didn't sell . . . changed it again to 3-Up. No market. I kept changing the name. When I got to 6-Up, I gave up."

Mummers humor at its best.

Unexpected responses from backstage and throughout the theater often catch audience newcomers by surprise. Authors of each script always include the hero lamenting, "What have I done? . . . Oh, tragedy! Oh, heartbreak!"

Out front and backstage comes a chorus of, "Oh, shut up!"

Have either Bill or Liz ever invented lines onstage? Bill says he and the late Walt Gusky once reached a point in the script when an actress was supposed to enter. Her cue was given. No actress. Her cue was given again. No actress. Looking out into the audience, Bill saw her talking with friends at the back of the hall. Seizing what seemed the best solution, he announced "I believe I see her now. I think I'll go get her." Exit Adam.

What is responsible for the Mummers' long-standing popularity? Liz says "It changes with the times and yet stays the same."

Bill adds, "It's a way of life during the summer in Midland."

VEGAS: Paws cause benefits SPCA

(From 1B)

Southwest Airlines is sponsoring two round-trip tickets to Las Vegas, while the Mirage is donating accommodations and Siegfried & Roy are giving the show tickets.

"Everyone attending will be eligible for the drawing," Mrs. McCommon said.

For those who are not familiar with the Siegfried & Roy Show, the illusionists are well-known for their white tigers which they use in their show. The duo breeds the white tigers as part of their continuing effort to preserve the endangered species for future generations. Their latest spectacle at the Mirage has grossed over $125 million during the first three years of a scheduled five-year engagement.

In addition to a chance to win the trip, those attending "Cause for Paws" will be treated to the sounds of The TFC Band from Norfolk, Va., produced by Wemus Entertainment. Some Midlanders will be familiar with the trio's sound, as they have performed in Midland before.

Proceeds from "Cause for Paws" go directly to the SPCA. This is the only fund-raiser the shelter has. All other operating funds come from donations. Previous "Cause for Paws" events have earned approximately $25,000 for the shelter, and organizers are hoping to do as well again this year.

"It takes the SPCA about $5,000 a month to keep its doors open," Mrs. McCommon said. "Of course, our goal is to raise as much as possible."

The shelter accommodates about 20 to 30 dogs and 20-30 cats a month and keeps animals that are adoptable for as long as possible, Mrs. McCommon said.

"They hate to have to turn any animal away," she said.

The Midland SPCA provides services in cruelty prevention for 18 counties, and is the humane organization between Dallas and El Paso, a distance of over 600 miles. The shelter's programs include a 24-hour Animal Rescue Service, cruelty complaint investigations and animal cruelty prevention educational films and other materials.

The eighth annual "Cause for Paws" charity dinner and dance will be 8 p.m.-1 a.m. July 16 on the grounds of the Racquet Club in Midland. Invitations for the event may be obtained by calling chairman Jeanette Probandt at 694-7287. Tickets are $50 per person.

3 area Girl Scouts earn God and Church award

Three Cadette Girl Scouts from Midland have earned their God and Church Award in the God and Country series. They are Hallie Brink, daughter of Gary and Sharon Brink, Troop 219, Susan Morse, daughter of Robert and Kay Morse, Troop 266 and Mary Elizabeth Prentice, daughter of Richard and Betty Ann Prentice, Troop 88.

These girls, while belonging to three different Girl Scout troops, belong to the same church, Grace Presbyterian Church in Midland. The girls worked together to earn the award with the guidance of their pastor, the Rev. Bill Clark, counselor Sharon Brink, and several members of the congregation, who taught various lessons to the girls.

All three girls are working on their Girl Scout Silver Awards, serve as Girl Scout Program Aides, are active in Grace Presbyterian Youth Fellowship, and are Honor Roll students in their Junior High Schools.

Miss Brink plays in the Goddard Orchestra and is a City of Midland Swim Team member.

Miss Morse is also a City of Midland Swim Team member.

Miss Prentice plays in the San Jacinto Band and is active in soccer.

To earn this award the girls studied their church, its beliefs, organization, and mission, and had to contribute hours of service to the church and also to the community. The girls gave community service hours by coordinating their church's Dress-A-Life-Doll effort for the Salvation Army and by helping at Christmas in April.

They received their pins and certificates June 20 during worship services at Grace Presbyterian Church.

Reenactment to feature living history camp of Buffalo Soldiers

Staff report

The public today can visit with African-American soldiers in historical period uniforms and learn about their little-known contributions to the settlement of the America West.

From 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Angels Stadium, the first annual Midland July 4 celebration will feature a living history military camp that will include the Buffalo Soldiers, Army of the Republic of Texas, Sons of Confederate Veterans, Texas National Guard demonstrating the Vietnam War era and a local Boy Scouts of America Explorers Post demonstrating a Plains Indian encampment.

Called "Buffalo Soldiers" by Plains Indians because of the ferocity of the soldiers' fighting spirit and the way the Indians thought the soldiers' hair resembled a buffalo's mane, the U.S. Ninth and Tenth Cavalry Divisions were all-black regiments organized by congress after the Civil War. They were stationed at frontier forts from Texas to the Dakota Territories to help clear the way for the nation's westward expansion.

Many of the frontier forts where Buffalo Soldiers were stationed are now Texas state historical parks — including Fort McKavett, Fort Griffin and Fort Richardson.

"The response has been overwhelming from communities where we have made presentations," said Ken Pollard, a Buffalo Soldier reenactor who is operations and maintenance supervisor for the state park region that includes Abilene. "The story of the Buffalo Soldiers is a powerful way for young African-Americans to experience a sense of connection and participation in Texas history. It enriches the historical experience for all Texans by broadening our understanding of frontier history."

competitions.

But will he have what it takes to get in front of thousands of fans at MGM Studios in Orlando, admist the pageantry of world-class wrestling, and announce wrestlers?

"Hopefully I will stay cool," Scott said, noting that it is the behind-the-scenes production of wrestling matches and Turner Broadcasting Station events which fascinates him.

"I have always wanted to be involved in World Championship Wrestling and with TBS productions. I realize that some of the wrestling is fake, but I still enjoy it," Scott said. "I am really interested in the play-by-play announcing and interviewing the wrestlers."

Knowing about his dreams of getting into broadcasting, Midland Independent School District Insight Counselor Alex Rose applied to the Starlight Foundation in Atlanta to grant Scott's wish.

"She deserves much of the credit for contacting the Starlight Foundation," Scott said.

Although Scott does not have a terminal illness, he has cerebral palsy, a chronic illness, which has never stood in the way of his achievements.

"Nothing can deter Scott from his goals," Ms. Rose said. "He has a real positive attitude and has made videotapes about dealing with physical challenges for Region 18 Education Service Center."

Jim Crawford, a therapist at Midland Cerebral Palsy Center — who has worked with Scott since the high school student was two years old — said he expects Scott to wow wrestling fans in Orlando.

"I think he'll do great," Crawford said. "Scott is very verbal and likes to communicate. This will be a great opportunity for him to express himself and will also be a good learning experience. He has he got grandiose ideas, and this might spark some kind of match for him."

Scott said he hopes his few moments at the microphone will lead to a broadcasting career.

WCW producers have also mentioned, if time allows, that the teen-ager may have a chance to interview a wrestler. He will get to hobnob with wrestlers and their families at a reception for the celebrities.

"I'm looking forward to the reception because it will be a chance to see the wrestlers without fans mobbing them," he said. "The popularity of professional wrestling has really grown over the past decade. And one side of the wrestlers people don't often see is seeing them with their wives and children."

The Orlando trip will include a visit to Disney World with his family, which includes his three sisters. After all the excitement dies down, Scott will continue to focus on his high school studies, and later, majoring in communications in college.

"I really would love a broadcasting job with CNN (Cable News Network). It's amazing that WCW has a suite of offices off of CNN Center," Scott noted.

Both of his parents are educators. Scott's mother, Nancy Dunlap, is a Reading Recovery teacher at DeZavala Elementary School. His father, Alamo Junior High School coach and teacher Spencer Dunlap, said that Scott is definitely a wrestling fan, but not a fanatic.

"He keeps his grades up and has a very good attitude," Dunlap said. "A lot of people are turned off by the showmanship of wrestling, but Scott keeps it in perspective."

"I'm very informed. I try to keep it cool," Scott said. "There is a line."

Dunlap said his son has "a great amount of self discipline."

"He is charismatic and involved. He has attended dances at Lee Youth Center," he said. "He has lonely times and wants to be the same as everyone else."

"And why not?" asked Scott, who has insisted on taking the TAAS (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) test — a serious academic challenge for all students — even though he is exempt from taking the exam.

Scott, who uses a laptop computer and a motorized scooter, attends regular classes, and has given speeches to several education service centers on how physically challenged students are able to adapt to the regular environment in public schools.

"Parents come in and listen to how they might be able to adapt their children," Dunlap said, noting it was former Midlander Sarah Greggs — Scott's eighth grade social studies teacher at Alamo — who came up with the idea of getting her student a laptop computer.

"She saw Scott was going to have a problem in class and got the ball rolling to help him," Dunlap said.

Growing up in the small towm of McCamey (while commuting to Midland's CP Center) and moving to Midland four years ago, Scott said he has not had to "fight the battles" other physically challenged students have fought to be allowed to succeed in school.

Scott said it was the caring attitudes of his teachers, therapists and former Lee Freshman High School Principal George Cooper (the newly-appointed Lee High principal) who encouraged him to follow his dreams.

CPC therapist Crawford said the center's goal is to get clients "able to compete by age 21."

"Scott will always be a competitive individual," he said.

"And, if he's going to reach, why shouldn't he reach for the stars?" his father asked.

"I'm ready," Scott said, beaming.

Jury to decide American Airlines lawsuit

HOUSTON (AP) — A judge refused to throw out a price-fixing lawsuit brought by Continental and Northwest airlines against their competitor, American Airlines.

U.S. District Judge Samuel B. Kent on Friday denied a request by American to have the lawsuit dismissed, opening the way for a jury to decide whether American tried to monopolize the industry through a fare war last year.

A jury is scheduled to begin hearing the case July 12 in Galveston. The trial is expected to last about three weeks.

"We're obviously pleased with the judge's decision and prepared to go to trial and make our case," said Jon Austin, a spokesman for Northwest Airlines.

Houston-based Continental and Northwest filed suit against American in June 1992, accusing the Fort Worth-based carrier of trying to drive it out of business by drastically cutting prices, then hiking the prices back up to recoup its losses.

DO YOU KNOW, Y'ALL??
Experts agree that My life began at conception.

• My Sex can be determined easily at 5-9 days.
• My Heart started beating 18 days after conception.
• The Foundations of my brain, spinal cord and nervous system were laid at 20 days.
• At 30 days my blood flowed in veins but stayed separate from mother's blood.
• At 43 days my brain waves could be recorded.

In 1981 the United States Senate conducted a hearing to answer -- "When does life begin?"

Scientists from around the world appeared before the Senate judiciary subcommittee. The "Human Life Bill" hearings lasted eight days and included 57 witnesses. Only one scientist disagreed with the majority conclusion and did so on philosophical grounds -- not scientific grounds.

Abortion advocates were invited to offer testimony but failed to produce even one expert witness who would testify that life begins at any point other than conception.

The senate report concluded: "Physicians, biologists and other scientists agree that conception marks the beginning of the life of a human being -- a being that is alive and is a member of the human species. There is overwhelming agreement on this point in countless medical and scientific writings.

Support Life . . . It's the human thing to do.

One wing of the Occupational-Technical Building has been brightened with some wonderful, large signs and graphic designs. The designs include symbols for Air Conditioning, Heating and Refrigeration, for Petroleum Technology, and for Electronics. Dan Buckley and Steve Welch from the Media Department designed and painted the signs and graphics.

Those who are familiar with the Allison Fine Arts Building, but haven't seen it this summer, also may be surprised by some changes. The beige walls in the office-practice room areas and the art wings have been painted bright white and some of the carpet has been changed.

The 1993-94 Midland College basketball schedule has been finalized. Action begins Nov. 5-6 with the Chaparral Classic. Competing this year in the two-night doubleheader will be Midland College and Howard College playing Ranger Junior College and Angelina College.

There are some interesting changes in this season's schedule. The Western Junior College Athletic Conference is presenting a two-day Classic on Dec. 3-4. This year's event is being held at Odessa and will be rotated among the conference schools in coming years. Each WJCAC team will play two games against other WJCAC opponents with the Chaps going against New Mexico Junior College and New Mexico Military Institute. Midland also has scheduled home-and-home games with Bacone College of Muskogee, Oklahoma, the first time MC has faced a team from this college.

Two long roads trips are on the agenda. In November, the Chaps travel to Arizona, where the Chaps play Pima College in Tucson and then compete in a two-night doubleheader at Yavapai College, Prescott. They also have a Jan. 5 trip to Seward College in Liberal, Kan. The Chaps were scheduled to play at Seward last January, but got turned back by ice and snow in the Texas Panhandle with even more snow in Kansas.

WJCAC action doesn't begin until January, with all seven colleges playing 12 home-and-games between Jan. 10 and Feb. 24. The Region V Tournament is being held in Waco again this season.

If you'd like to know more about season tickets or the Chaparral Booster Club, call 685-4582.

Due to confusion with the Chaparral Center, the large meeting room in the Student Center now will be known as "The Roadrunner Room." Especially for visitors from off-campus there always was a lot of confusion between the Al G. Langford Chaparral Center and what had been referred to as the Chaparral Hall. So the meeting room is "The Roadrunner Room" and the large, multi-purpose arena is Chaparral Center.

Police: Woman, 3-year-old son die from shooting during family struggle

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A Corpus Christi man faces charges of aggravated assault after his wife and 3-year-old son were killed by a single bullet discharged during a family disturbance, police said.

Simon F. Talamantes, 36, was being held Friday night in Nueces County Jail in lieu of $100,000 bond, said Capt. J.D. Brewer.

Talamantes' wife, 37-year-old Kathy C. Pritchett, and their son, Scott, died earlier Friday after a pistol discharged during a struggle between the two adults.

Ms. Pritchett and the boy were killed from the same bullet, which went through her skull and struck her son in the stomach as he lay on a bed, Brewer said.

Officers found a .45-caliber semi-automatic pistol in a bucket near the front door of the apartment, according to a police report.

An investigation is underway to determine whether the shooting was accidental or intentional, Brewer said.

"We are going to try to determine what happened as much as we can, and will submit our findings to the district attorney's office," he said. "Depending on what we find, they may or may not submit the case to the grand jury for indictment."

America's birthday brings challenge

French historian and political philosopher Alexis de Tocqueville, well remembered for his revealing look at this nation during the early part of the 19th century titled "Democracy in America," observed in one passage of that book:

"America is a land of wonders, in which everything is in constant motion and every novelty is there indissolubly connected with the idea of amelioration. No natural boundary seems to be set to the efforts of man; and in his eyes what is not yet done is only what he has not yet attempted to do."

What is not yet done is only what he has not yet attempted to do. What perception, what insight de Tocqueville possessed! In America he found evolving and changing, in a constant state of motion, exactly the kind of government and social order he knew a democracy would foment. "America is great," he observed elsewhere in the book, "because America is good" and he went on to note that if this great nation ever ceases to be good, it will also stop being great.

Yes, the French historian even envisioned some of the problems America is beset with today, the observance of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence by the Continental Congress in 1776. For like other political philosophers, de Tocqueville knew that the real challenge of maintaining the constitutional republic form of government created by the Founding Fathers lay with the people of America, not with the institutional government itself.

Today America is beset with ethnic factionalism, divisiveness, bitter social disputes, and a compelling lack of unity of purpose. Americans need to recapture the spirit of America painted so beautifully by de Tocqueville. We are all Americans, all one people, and as the historian asserted what is not done here is that way because it has not yet been attempted.

America's strength was evident to de Tocqueville in its churches because it was there that the basis for the social order of the nation was grounded. And, he observed, if America ever stopped being good, she would cease to be a great nation.

There is a message in de Tocqueville's words for all Americans who love this land of liberty and who realize that America's most ominous challenge may only now be approaching.

God bless and preserve this land of liberty.

Government restraint means economic might

As the U.S. Congress churns through the seemingly endless hours of debate over the federal budget, millions of Americans across the land are trying to figure out how they'll pay the new taxes . . .

Sealed off on Capital Hill, isolated from the people they claim to serve, representatives and senators only can see one thing: More cash will be taken from the productive private sector of the economy to be wasted on the anti-productive special interests that pay for campaigns . . .

And some Republicans apparently have not even learned the lesson of (former President) Bush's defeat. In 1993, they are trying to work out a deal with the same Democratic congressional leadership that passed the Bush tax increases in 1990. Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole and other "moderate" Republicans have signed on to some of the Clinton tax increases.

No, no, no, Sen. Dole. Taxes are the problem, not the solution. Tax increases are economic and political suicide.

Wasting more taxpayers' money can never cut government waste and deficits. Only by restraining government — cutting taxes and waste — will government be returned to fiscal solvency and the U.S. economy be unshackled to grow again.

Chicago's rioting exhibits tremendous price of terror

Shooting guns does indeed kill people. In Chicago, so does shooting basketballs.

After the Chicago Bulls won their third consecutive professional basketball title, celebration was in order. Murders, rioting, looting were not. Yet three persons were slain, random gunfire filled the night air, 700 people were arrested, and Chicagoans paid an enormous price for damages and extra police protection.

It was even worse after the Bulls won in 1992. Yet as riots flared and random gunshots terrorized his town, Mayor Richard Daley was preeningly praising citizens for their restraint. How disgusting.

Sports are fun. Winning is great. But never at the cost of lives, rioting, and a loss of property.

Veterans who seek truth find friendship

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Senate can be the theater of the staged and the stilted, but sometimes spontaneous and sincere events steal the spotlight.

On this Fourth of July, a poignant example is playing out in the unlikely friendship between two U.S. senators whose politics and personalities couldn't clash more: Arizona Republican John McCain and Massachusetts Democrat John Kerry.

Anderson

Both men served as Navy officers during the Vietnam War and displayed uncommon valor — McCain defied his captors during six years as a prisoner of war, and Kerry commanded patrol boats in the Mekong Delta. They share the virtue of valor, but McCain and Kerry embody starkly opposing visions of American involvement in that undeclared war.

By 1971, Kerry had left the Navy after winning the Silver Star, the Bronze Star and three Purple Hearts and assumed command of the Vietnam Veterans Against the War. The high point of one protest was also one of the low points for McCain and his fellow POWs. On April 23, 1971, the 27-year-old Kerry took part in a demonstration in which he and 700 other vets defiantly threw their ribbons and medals over a 6-foot-high fence erected along the west front of the Capitol.

"I was very torn by it," Kerry told us during an interview last week. "I spent about a half-hour sitting in tears on the Capitol lawn with my then-wife.

"One of my very best friends at Yale had been killed the year before at Tet. Dick Pershing (grandson of Gen. John J. Pershing) was one of my best buddies. And he was killed — blown away — and all that was left was his Silver Star given to his family, and it meant something to them.

Pictures of the protests traveled with lightening speed from Capitol Hill to the Hanoi Hilton, the notorious prison camp, where morale often was as important as food and water.

"The most startling image that I have is pictures that the Vietnamese showed us of (American vets) throwing their medals on the steps of the Capitol," McCain recalls. "It was almost incomprehensible to us as members of the military." In his 12-by-12-foot unventilated cell, McCain was in what he describes as a "time warp," because he had been captured in 1967 before the anti-war movement began in earnest.

These conflicts were among the emotional baggage that encumbered the political and personal relationship between McCain and Kerry until they were thrust together in January 1992 for one final tour of duty to resolve the festering question of soliders missing in action.

"When I first came to the Senate, my relations with John Kerry were correct and pleasant as they are with any of my colleagues, but certainly not in any way close," McCain recalls. "Then, working with him in the course of the year on the (Senate Select Committee on POW/MIA Affairs) convinced me without a doubt that John Kerry's primary motivation is to heal the wounds of the Vietnam War finally in our nation, and I respect and admire him for that."

Both men soon found themselves fending off attacks from right-wing extremists who were convinced that there was a Rambo-style conspiracy keeping Americans in captivity. The feuding reached into the ranks of the select committee.

Jersey mayor proves death of liberalism

JERSEY CITY, N.J. — Bret Schundler, 34, mayor of this ring-around-the-frayed-blue-collar city in the shadow of the Statue of Liberty, says, "I'm not a conservative, I'm a revolutionary."

Here at the foot of Ellis Island, in a city where 25 percent of the people are foreign born and 41 percent speak a language other than English in their homes, Schundler is the first Republican mayor since the year when America's hero was General Pershing: 1917. Last November, the previous mayor being in jail, Schundler won the right to complete that mayor's term, receiving 16 percent of the vote in a 19-candidate congestion.

Will

Before this May's election for a full term, national Democrats arrived to help oust the usurper. Practicing the politics of envy, they made much of the fact that Schundler once worked on Wall Street and, worse, did well there.

Finally, Democrats brought in their low-rent itinerant demagogue, Jesse Jackson, to suggest that Schundler is a racist. Then the city, which is 55 percent minorities and only 6 percent Republican, gave Schundler a 68 percent landslide.

A former all-state high school tackle, he came here from Harvard and investment banking and with experience as director of Gary Hart's 1984 New Jersey campaign. He became a Republican in 1991 and his thinking has a convert's clarity.

He once considered becoming an urban minister and actually has become one, of sorts, because he believes that statecraft can be soulcraft. Modern liberalism has, he thinks, corrupted the nation's soul.

This century's dominant thesis, he says,held that modern marvels of productivity would enable government to hand salvation to the disadvantaged. "America," he says, "made the right to pursue happiness into an entitlement to happiness itself." This made some traditional values — thrift, industriousness, discipline, deferral of gratification — seem anachronistic. If you seek monuments to this thesis, see the vast tracts of cities where the spirits of an enervated population are "weighed down by litter and graffiti, by weeds growing where flowers should be planted.

For New York, Schundler's administration has some lessons.

He has cut taxes, paying for this, in part, by privatizing some property tax collection. The city has bundled liens against delinquent taxpayers and sold them at a discount to private investors who will hire private collectors.

In a creative exercise of fiscal gerrymandering, he has drawn most of the city's commercially developable land into a low-tax enterprise zone. This job-creation strategy backs up his doctrine that "all able-bodied people have a responsibility to work" so that the working poor are not taxed to provide benefits to those "who will not work."

He favors "voucher-driven" provision of government services "to get politicians out of the loop." Seventy percent of his constituents favor his school choice plan to offer vouchers redeemable at public or private schools.

The National Education Association, the public education lobby that is the Democratic Party's most muscular client and America's most retrograde force, is waging a national campaign to stamp out free choice here. The NEA must wish the boss were back.

From 1917 to 1949 Jersey City's boss was Mayor Frank "I am the Law" Hague, who governed from a desk that is still in city hall. It has a drawer which the mayor could shove open in front of the person seated opposite, and then could close after that person made a cash deposit. Hague, an immigrant, never had a job that paid more than $8,000 a year, but he died worth at least $10 million.

Choosing right doctor involves lots of luck

Like everybody else in America, I want the right to choose my own doctor. What I'd like from the government, however, is some good advice on how to do it.

When I was fresh out of school it was easy. Having attended college with several people who went on to medical school, I simply phoned one or two and asked them which doctors to take my troubles to and which ones to avoid. Being young, therefore gossipy and indifferent to the discipline of the medical lodge, they told me.

Baker

Life separated us. After 10 years practicing in the Texas Panhandle and points west, old school pals were no longer much help when you had to choose a doctor in New York. Moreover, they were succumbing to the mystic code of the medicine men.

The fractious intern who had once warned you not to let a certain surgeon work on your appendix because incisions left him too confused to tell kidneys from the islets of Langerhans was becoming suspiciously discreet. After allowing that Mengele was a disgrace to the profession, he never spoke ill of another doctor.

As a matter of fact, how often do you hear a patient speak ill of his doctor? When my old medical-school pals became too gray and calcified to divulge the straight dope on which doctors to choose and not choose, I turned to friends and colleagues who were sick a lot.

Would they recommend their own doctors? They would, and they did. And with what glowing praise! Listening to these frequently treated patients, you would have thought we were in a golden age of competence.

These people, always ready to denounce their fellow workers and colleagues as too incompetent to pour bilge water out of a boot, were almost universally awed by the high quality of their own doctors. Since none of them knew any more medicine than you can learn by subscribing to the Reader's Digest, I was puzzled about the enthusiasm with which they recommended their doctors.

Surely incompetence must be distributed in the medical profession at much the same rate as among other workers — carpenters, say, or journalists. Statistics would demand it, wouldn't they?

The medical field might even have a higher percentage of incompetents than most because of all the money and time it takes to become a doctor. When you've made an investment that big, discovering that you're not very good at your job isn't likely to make you throw it all up and try a new line of work.

Yet, when trying to choose a doctor from among those treating your friends, it seemed you couldn't go wrong picking one at random. All apparently were in a class with Welch, Osler, Halsted and Kelly.

Gradually I realized that the friends dispensing this praise all had one thing in common: They were alive. Being habitues of doctors' offices, I reasoned, they worry excessively about being told their time is up.

Something about going to the doctor promotes this particular worry. It is why I never go near a doctor's office until it's obvious I have only a few minutes left to live. At these times, blessedly, I don't have to grapple with the insuperable problem of deciding whether the doctor is competent enough for me to choose him as my own. For pronouncing me officially dead, any boob will do.

Leaving a doctor's office alive always makes my day. I assume my friends who can't get enough of doctors' offices come to believe it is medical genius that keeps them available to sunlight and bill collectors.

The truth, I fear, is that most of their doctors are only moderately competent while two or three may be highly dangerous bunglers.

These hair raisings no longer seem hilarious, now that I have to exercise that great American right to choose my own doctor without anyone reliable to guide me.

The walk-in vault where Hague kept his swag (city employees had to kick in 3 percent of their pay) now holds office supplies.

True educators know that respect is earned

I read with interest the graduation comments in your Sunday, June 20, edition.

There are many dedicated educators who cultivate respect by helping young people value learning. Most of the true educators seem to be found in the classroom and not in administrative positions. They teach students about values at the same time they teach reading, writing, and arithmetic. They understand that respect is not commanded. It is earned.

Young people frequently do foolish things. The school administrators, however, appear even more foolish and childlike. They hire police, have kids hauled off during graduation and waste their time and our money trying to outmaneuver a bunch of teen-agers with time to burn and plenty of youthful imagination. The secret to this problem is really very simple. Do not expect to demand respect and decorum the last day you have a school-student relationship. The students' actions are the results of 13 years of behavioral training in our schools.

School system robs students of chances

For three weeks your newspaper has published numerous letters in your letters column concerning the problems associated with the Lee and Midland High Schools graduation.

I would like to remind these "protesters" that at least some of the seniors DID get to graduate and receive their long-awaited diplomas. My senior did not. I would have gladly sat through that ceremony, whether it was a "formal" or "joyous" celebration, but did not get the chance to enjoy what was supposed to be one of the happiest days of our daughter's life. Instead, she "dropped out" of school just days before graduation. Her cap and gown, unused and still in the package, have been put away. Her "memories" book is empty. There were no graduation presents, no pictures.

I feel sorry for myself — I didn't get to participate in this event that I had looked so forward to for the past 18 years. But "sorry" does not begin to describe how I feel for her. How does a child feel that is brought up to look forward to graduation, a "new beginning," an end to being a child and beginning to becoming an adult, and have that dream snatched away just weeks before graduation? Crushed would describe it best. Embarrassed because everyone else is walking across the state while she just sits in the audience and looks on. Hurt because she had to go to Midland College and get her G.E.D. after attending school for 12 years.

What can parents do to stop this? Why should seniors have to take a test to graduate if they have passed their courses and have the required credits? Testing before college entrance I can understand. This TAAS test I cannot. It is unfair to our children, it is unfair to us. And, it is not just the less intelligent students that fail this test. National Honor Society seniors failed the test. My senior took the test four times. Try as we do to keep kids in school, constantly telling them the hazards of life if they "drop out," we are not giving them an incentive to stay in school.

We parents need all the help we can get to keep our children on the right path, as it is. We don't just have to fight the alcohol and drugs situation but now we have the school system, as well. We can't undo this past graduation, but maybe we can make a difference in the next one.

Cable TV companies aren't above the law

Congress passed Public Law 102-385 on Oct. 5, 1992, the "Cable Television Consumer Protection Act."

In the West Texas Area, the cable TV monopoly changed the services offered so that you are forced to take the preferred service to obtain what was previously available on the basic cable services. Example: ESPN Sports Channel. They have instead inserted programs that the majority of the people do not care for. The object of this law was to protect the consumer from unreasonable rates which could be charged by a monopoly and to force the cable TV operator to provide programs that appeal to the majority of subscribers. The law also required that the greedy cable monopolies reduce their rates by June 21, 1993, or the FCC would force them to comply. The FCC has currently stated they are too busy and have given the cable companies another 90 days to comply. Apparently this extension could go on indefinitely.

You can do something about this if you write to the Federal Communication Commission, Washington, D.C., 20554. Register with them your desire to be protected from the present high rates charged by the cable companies and the changing of programming to force you to subscribe to a more expensive service.

Also, contact your congressman and ask him for his help to force the cable companies to comply with the intent of Public Law 102-385, which was to protect cable television consumers.

Crime of choice beats development drilling

With only 276 out of 1,741 (less than 16 percent) reported burglaries for 1992 having been cleared by arrest and with only 746 out of 3,531 (less than 21 percent) reported thefts for 1992 having been cleared by arrest, lack of prosecution or for other reasons, is it any wonder that burglaries and thefts are still youths' (and adults') crimes of choice in Midland? The criminals' success ratios beat the heck out of all wildcatting and most development drilling.

It's just great that our Midland police are devoting their time to the heinous crime of failure to buckle your seat belt and overtinting your car windows, especially since this means that there is now a much better chance that someone who burglarizes your home may be apprehended — if he forgets to buckle up during his getaway.

I would like to read in your paper how Midland's 1992 ratio of burglaries to total number of residences compares with other Texas communities' ratios.

Church needs help to beautify Midland

This message is in regards to the article "Keep Midland Beautiful," from the March 25 edition. I commend Pastor Hadley Edwards for the work he's doing to help the precious people who frequent the "Tree of Knowledge" in southeast Midland. Those people are our brothers, sisters, aunts, uncles, husbands, wives, children and friends. Although this is a step in the right direction, we must not overlook the fact that the removal of trash from around the premises will be futile if the people are not rehabilitated or given hope. We must offer them hope by exchanging their place of recreation and social gathering to place of restoration. It is a whole lot easier to minister to someone if their stomach is not growling. We need to be "the repairer of the breach and the restorer of paths to dwell in," as described in Isaiah 58. We must come to grips with reality. Proverbes 29:18 says, "where there is no vision, the people perish."

There is a man in Midland whom the Lord has given a vision. His name is William C. Palmer, pastor of the Greater Mount Rose Baptist Church, 211 N. Tyler, in the area of the Flats. Pastor Palmer also has a business in the Flats, and I have heard him say many times, "I go to work with money, and I come back home with less than I had when I went to work." The reason being, many of his oppressed brothers and sisters come to him for help, and he doesn't have the heart to turn them away. He's not a materialistic person, for he drives an old church van and his soul desire is to help others. Pastor Palmer's vision is to build an activities center as an annex to our church. The expansion will include an outreach ministry to help the needy, education facilities, a gymnasium, counseling services, a day care center for our young mothers who can't afford high day care prices, a "working towards independence program" — the prospects are boundless. We have a membership at our church of approximately 200 people from all ages and all walks of life. The only problem is that our weekly income does not match up with our vision.

If Pastor Palmer's vision becomes a reality, not only would it help the "Tree People," but the community as a whole would benefit from it. If the center were built, it would enhance the southeast area, build up the people's morale and take away some of the feeling of hopelessness that hovers over the neighborhood.

We are counting on those of you who can and will help to make a difference in our community to come forward now. Please mail correspondences or donations to: Mt. Rose Baptist Church Building Fund, P.O. Box 10103, Midland, Texas 79702-7103.

SPEAKING OUT

Service members appreciate mail

By Rayburn H. Williams

Rayburn H. Williams is a retired safety engineer who came to Midland in 1958. He is active in the Confederate Air Force, the Boy Scouts and church work.

Since the early days of "Desert Shield" I have written letters to "Any Servicemember" personnel of the U.S. military stationed in Saudi Arabia and ships at sea relative to Desert Shield, Desert Storm, etc. Later, letters were sent to such personnel in or about Somalia.

Having been a GI in a foreign land, with action a possibility, I know how nice it is to get mail, even if it is "general" and not specifically for you.

I prepared a general letter to personnel in the Middle East, learned what "zip codes" to use, and let fly. My letters expressed our appreciation for what our armed forces are doing, gave them words of encouragement, etc. I enclosed two pages of humorous material and some Christian tracts. Many of these letters were sent.

Shown below are (just several of many) comments received from some of the recipients of such letters:

"Your letter was a ray of light," Security Policeman, Saudi Arabia.

"Mail time is always a festive time with us. We all gather around to see who got what." Sgt., U.S. Army, S. Arabia.

"Greetings from the low plains of Somalia or the flat top of my ship, the U.S.S. Tripoli. Thank you for your wonderful letter, it was terrific!" Gunnery Sgt., USMC, Somalia.

Also, I send them tourist information about the area and invite them to come visit the CAF and "God's Country" when they get back to the U.S. of A. I think I have enjoyed the GI's letters as much, if not more, than they have enjoyed my letters.

You, too, can write "Any Servicemember" letters to help "our boys over there," except that today a lot of "the boys" are girls, and I hear from them too.

The "zip codes" I presently use include APO AE NYNY 09466 for letters to Army personnel in Saudi Arabia, and APO AE NYNY 09803-2000 for USAF personnel in Saudi Arabia. For Navy and Marine personnel, use FPO number from zip code directory.

In each U.S. Post Office is a "National Five-Digit Zip Code and Post Office Directory," in two volumes. On pages 12-3 to 12-13 of Vol. II are zip code listings, as of October 1, 1992, of U.S. military and Naval locations in the U.S. and all over the world.

The cost of sending "Any Servicemember" letters is not great. The cost of the "letter" part will vary according to what is sent. The postage cost is the same as first class postage in the U.S., 29 cents for up to one ounce, then 23 cents for each additional ounce. My basic letter with a letter sheet, two humor sheets and four tracts goes for 29 cents postage. My second letter, with CAF or other material, usually costs 29 plus 23 or 52 cents postage.

Dear Abby says: The preferred "goody" is still chocolate chip cookies. They travel very well when packed with popcorn (already popped). Homemade fudge, hard candies and gum are also much appreciated. But the numero uno treat is mail, mail and more mail.

Finally, I estimate that sending out five "Any Servicemember" letters might cost $5 or less and take maybe two hours. Please give it a try. Our "GIs" will appreciate it and I bet you'll enjoy reply letters. I certainly have.

County employees offer courteous help

I recently read a letter entitled "Tax office employees treat public like dogs," wherein one Robert L. Peets complained bout the 30-minute delay in a line at the tax office and the attitude of the employees.

Obviously, Peets did not deal with the same employees that our office regularly sees. We have experienced nothing but friendly, courteous help from the very same county employees of which he complained.

His desire to cut off his leg rather than deal with county employees in the future seems out of proportion. I fear he would really cause himself injury if he ever had to deal with federal agencies.

Tax office workers wear different hats

In response to the letter on June 27, I would like to address the issue of conduct of the Midland County Tax Office.

Due to the cutback of employees, we have six individuals who service the public on Motor Vehicle transactions and two individuals who service all car dealers and fleets. Let me share some facts with you. We process over 28,000 titles a year and register approximately 98,000 vehicles. Not only do these women wait on the public, but answer inquiries and render assistance, at the same time. As a part of their job — between customers — they must review booklets on the latest legislative changes on motor vehicle laws, which change on a weekly basis. What worked yesterday may not work today.

The office hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., however, each employee must complete the day's transactions before leaving. Our main objective is to serve and comply with all laws to insure completion of your transactions.

People should choose doctor who values life

Sixty-two physicians publicly took their stand in the fight against abortion in signing a pro-life petition that was printed in the Reporter-Telegram on June 27. This was a truly commendable act. It shows that they have a real concern and interest in the welfare of their patients and the community of Midland.

I urge my neighbors to choose their physicians from this group who have declared their commitment to human life and the standards that help make Midland a family-oriented city.

'Law of land' doesn't make abortion right

Special thanks to staff writer Tonie Miller-Uzzel on her journalistic integrity on covering the ProLife Task Force, with all of its diversity. Also a special thanks to the physicians who had the courage to sign the open letter to the mayor (June 27, 1993).

The pro-life movement is similar to the human body. Each area has a function and purpose, with one not being greater than the other.

There are those involved in the educational, political, philosophical, literary, medical and yes, even the peaceful, non-violent civil disobedient areas.

This social movement is like another human life issue in our history. Slavery.

The anti-slavery movement permeated into all areas of society, causing division in economic, social and even religious circles. Some religious leaders felt they could justify slavery by using the Bible.

Now, even as then, there are those, professional and non-professional, who realize that just being "legal" doesn't make it "right."

The biologically defined human being is a human being, no matter what religion, philosophy or the "law of the land" may say.

Contrary to what some are saying, the pro-life movement is not full of militants and terrorists.

Not one prominent national or state pro-life leader advocates violence, whether inside or outside an abortion clinic (National Right to Life, Feminists for Life, American Life League, Americans United for Life, Operation Rescue, Texans United for Life, etc.).

The diversely composed pro-life movement is a non-violent humanitarian social reformation trying to bring respect for innocent human life back into our culture.

Abortion disputes oath of Hippocrates

My gratitude to the 61 signers of the excellent ad (June 27, 1993) endorsing pro life — nor am I overlooking those doctors who would have joined, had they been reachable.

My story begins a few decades ago, following the birth of my first son. Two years later I gave birth to a daughter who died shortly afterward as a "blue baby." This was followed by a pregnancy with a series of problems which my doctor finally aborted.

In due course we adopted a son, and six years later I had another healthy son. Today I have three fine sons who bring joy and pride to my life. So I have been through the entire gamut of emotions.

Being able to adopt a baby to fill the aching void (after our daughter died and then the medical abortion) was of great comfort to me and the father of my children. Currently there are not enough babies available for adoption to fill the empty arms of would-be adoptive families — for numerous reasons that are different from our desire to provide a sibling for our firstborn — despite the increasing number of pregnancies by women who do not keep their babies.

When you and I consider that to become a doctor, it is customary to take the ethical oath of Hippocrates to do all in their power to keep the patient alive and well, how is it possible for any doctor to feel free to murder (by abortion) the live baby within a patient?

Puzzlers memorize certain standard clues

A reader, Carole M. Oglesby, in a letter to the editor of my home newspaper, said, "Crossword puzzles should be fun, stimulating and challenging. Your crossword puzzle is a joke and an insult to my intellect."

Grizzard

Carole M. Oglesby, in other words, thinks the crossword puzzle is too easy.

I became a worker of crossword puzzles just two years ago. I had avoided them earlier in my life because I thought I always had something better to do than work crossword puzzles.

But upon entering my mid-to-late 40s some of the zip, alas, has come off my fast ball.

And whereas at an earlier age I would be in a hurry to gulp down my coffee in the mornings and rush out to start a new day of adventures, I've begun to savor my mornings, taking time to read more than just the sports section, and, yes, working the crossword puzzle.

I have gotten better at this endeavor. When I started I didn't know that the answer to the clue, "q.e.d. word," is "erat," for instance.

I still don't have any idea what it means, but I've worked puzzles long enough now to know there are certain clues that are going to appear often and one must memorize them to be successful.

When I first began working the crossword I might get half of it done in the one hour I devoted to it. Now I'm able to complete the puzzle about 90 percent of the time.

I still get thwarted on clues concerning goddesses of all sorts of things like night, dawn, the forest, Pepsi-Cola and pulpwood trucks and all those bird clues.

There's a wading bird, a sea eagle, and all sorts of ducks. Teal is an answer to one of those duck clues, and crane often works, but that's about all I know. They kicked me out of the Audubon Society when it was learned I shot a blue jay sitting on a power line the Christmas morning of 1957 when I received an air rifle.

I'm not trying to defend the crossword puzzle because my newspaper gives me a paycheck, but I guess I'm just not as smart as Carole M. Oglesby.

I still find the puzzle a challenge, with the aforementioned problems I have, not to mention the fact that I haven't memorized everything T. S. Eliot wrote. There often are open T. S. Eliot quotes in the puzzle that asks the solver to fill in missing words. They stump me every time.

LIBERTY BELL

This month, as we all celebrate the special blessings of liberty, Southwestern Bell Mobile Systems would like to pay special tribute to the American dreamer. Dreamers like Alexander Graham Bell, a Scotsman who came to the United States in 1871. Bell was a teacher of the deaf in Boston. At night he experimented with a device for sending several telegraphic messages at once over one wire, a harmonic telegraph. Bell developed the idea of the telephone in 1874, but continued his experiments with the harmonic telegraph.

On March 10, 1876, Bell finally succeeded in speaking words over a telephone. He was about to test a new transmitter. In another room his assistant, Watson, waited for the test message. Suddenly, Bell spilled some acid from a battery on his clothes. He cried out: "Mr. Watson, come here. I want you!"

Watson rushed into the room shouting: "Mr. Bell, I heard every word you said--distinctly!"

In June 1876, Bell exhibited his telephone at the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia.

In August 1876, Bell received the first one-way long distance call. This call came over an 8-mile (13-kilometer) line he had built between Brantford, Ont., and Paris, Ont. In October 1876 Bell and Watson held the first two-way long distance telephone conversation. They spoke between Boston and Cambridge, Mass., a distance of 2 miles (3 kilometers). In 1877, Roswell C. Downer, a banker, installed the first commercial telephone line. It extended 3 miles (5 kilometers) between Downer's home in Somerville, Mass., and his bank in Boston.

In 1877, E.T. Holmes, the owner of a burglar alarm system, began operating the first switchboard. It connected four banks and a factory in Boston. At night, the switchboard served as a burglar alarm. The first telephones used no switchboards. A pair of iron wires connected each pair of phones. One person called another by pushing a knob on the telephone. This caused a hammer to make a thumping sound that went over the telephone line to the other phone. As more telephones came into use, each was connected to all the other phones. More than 1,000 connections were required to link only 50 telephones. Switchboards solved this problem by bringing together the wires from all telephones in an area.

In 1891, an automatic step-by-step switching system was patented by American inventor Almon B. Strowger. And in 1892 telephone service began between New York City and Chicago. In 1896 the first dial telephone went into operation in Milwaukee, followed by transcontinental telephone service between New York City and San Francisco in 1915. In 1927, a transatlantic radio-telephone service between New York and London marked an even newer era in communications. Bell Laboratories, the research and development organization of the Bell System, developed the transistor in 1947.

Since then, with the advent of laser technology, satellite communications and fiber optics, our world has become even closer through the ability to communicate in so many different ways. And in 1983, when Bell introduced radio cellular technology to Chicago, a new era was born, in which a computer would transfer a call from one transmitter and receiver to another within individual areas or cells.

During the late 1980's, Southwestern Bell Mobile Systems brought this revolutionary cellular technology to the Permian Basin. Proud to continue the tradition of vision established by Bell himself, Southwestern Bell Mobile Systems now offers a complete nationwide cellular communications system backed by more than a hundred years of excellence and leadership in telecommunictions technology.

And what does that mean to you today? Cellular Service offers you complete control over your communications needs. It's like picking up your office or home phone and taking it with you throughout the nation. And with cell sites established throughout our United States, combined with the ability to use your cellular phone automatically, you can place and receive calls virtually anywhere at any time. Out of town, not out of touch. Southwestern Bell Mobile Systems lets you cell-abrate your independence while...

keeping you close to your American dream.

Drysdale found dead

Associated Press

MONTREAL — Hall of Fame pitcher Don Drysdale, who teamed with Sandy Koufax in baseball's best 1-2 punch for the Los Angeles Dodgers of the 1960s, was found dead Saturday in his hotel room, the team announced.

Drysdale was 56.

Drysdale is the second Dodger Hall of Famer to die in the last week. Catcher Roy Campanella died of heart attack on June 26.

"I was just with him at Campy's funeral," former Dodgers reliever Clem Labine said from Vero Beach, Fla. "Holy Toledo! Of all the things to happen. It's just hard to believe. ... My God, one on top of the other."

Drysdale's death was confirmed by the Dodgers during Saturday night's game with the Montreal Expos. A team spokesman said further details would be released after the game.

Lt. Rick Rizzetto of the Montreal police said the body was found Saturday afternoon, but that a medical examiner estimated the time of death as shortly after midnight Friday.

Drysdale, who won the 1962 Cy Young Award as baseball's best pitcher, had been a broadcaster with the Dodgers since 1988.

One of his partners in the booth, Vin Scully, called Saturday night's program "the toughest broadcast in my life. I am stunned and brokenhearted for Ann and the children. Don was not only a Hall of Fame player and a fine broadcaster, but a dear friend and a joy to be with. I pray for the Drysdales."

Among Drysdale's survivors is his widow, Ann Meyers, a Hall of Fame basketball player at UCLA.

Best known as a fierce competitor with a hard sidearm delivery particularly tough on right-handed hitters, the 6-foot-6, 200-pound Drysdale compiled a 209-166 record with a 2.95 career earned-run average in 14 seasons with the Brooklyn and Los Angeles Dodgers.

Perhaps his most impressive achievement was a string of 58 shutout innings in 1968, a major league record that stood for 20 years until broken by current Dodgers pitcher Orel Hershiser.

"When you're around fans and they start talking baseball, that seems to be the thing they associate with me ... that and my reputation for being mean, or the fact that I was durable and never missed a turn," Drysdale wrote in his 1990 book "Once a Bum, Always a Dodger." "Maybe that's what I'm proudest of, that I took the ball."

Citing arm problems, Drysdale retired during the 1969 season.

Drysdale, Koufax, Campanella, Pee Wee Reese, Duke Snider and Jackie Robinson all made the Hall of Fame from that team along with manager Walter Alston and coach Billy Herman.

A native of Van Nuys, Calif., Drysdale broke in as a 20-year-old with the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1956. He went 5-5 that season.

In 1957, the Dodgers' final season in Brooklyn, Drysdale became the ace of the staff with a 17-9 record.

His finest season was 1962, when he was 25-9 and led the National League with 41 starts, 314 1-3 innings and 287 strikeouts.

He also was 23-12 in 1965.

Lathon wants trade

HOUSTON — Houston linebacker Lamar Lathon, who accuses new defensive coordinator Buddy Ryan of not giving him a fair chance to compete for a starting job, wants to be traded.

Lathon says he asked his agent, Tom Williams, to demand a trade Friday morning, hours before the Oilers' acquisition of All-Pro Wilber Marshall dropped him to fourth on the depth chart.

"I don't want to be traded if I'm going to be involved in a fair fight for my job, but if it's not going to be a fair fight, I want to get out and start over," Lathon said. "I don't really feel wanted here."

The Oilers have issued no comment on Lathon's demand.

Ryan has criticized Lathon, 25, several times since arriving in January. Marshall, All-Pro Al Smith and Eddie Robinson are expected to be listed as starters going into training camp.

Lathon said he doesn't think Ryan will give him a fair shot.

"I'm upset because you have a great coach like Buddy Ryan, and people respect everything he says," Lathon said. "The first thing he says after he gets here is that he's going to make me a Pro Bowl player, but then he demotes me."

Lathon said his unhappiness has nothing to do with Marshall's arrival. In fact, he believes that, given a chance, he would beat out Robinson and play next to Marshall and Smith this season.

"It would be a hellacious trio," he said.

LEMONT, Ill. — There was a little lapse at the end, but Nick Price's visit to what he called "a purple patch," kept intact his two-shot lead over Greg Norman in the Western Open.

"It's royal and it's gaudy and it's that zone you sometimes get into," Price said.

■ Western Open

He got into it Saturday in suffocating heat during the middle of the third round, hitting his irons with crisp efficiency and draining the putts with his newly acquired Zebra putter.

At one point, Price, the current PGA champion and the winner last week at Hartford, appeared on the brink of a runaway.

But the 90-degree heat and high humidity took a toll on Price and Norman. Both complained of fatigue toward the end.

And Price said the heat could have been a factor in what he called "a disappointing finish" that cost him a couple of strokes and kept Norman in hot pursuit.

After a magnificent 6-iron shot from the rough and an awkward stance on the lip of a fairway bunker, Price missed a 4-foot birdie putt on the 17th hole.

Graf rarely required more help than she did Saturday, when she drifted aimlessly through the second set, and she never got more at a crucial time than when Novotna caved in at the end of the third set to lose 7-6 (8-6), 1-6, 6-4.

"There were a few matches when I've choked, too," Graf said, though she never did it so badly for so prestigious a title.

Take it, Novotna said with a double fault as she served needing one point for a 5-1 lead in that final set.

Take it, please, Novotna said with an easy forehand volley she whacked long and an overhead she knocked into the net on the next two points for a break that made it 4-2.

Here, it's all yours, Novotna offered again when she blew two break points in Graf's next service game.

Earnhardt wins the right one

AP Motorsports Writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Dale Earnhardt got the win and Ken Schrader earned a moral victory Saturday in the Pepsi 400 at Daytona International Speedway.

■ Pepsi 400

Earnhardt led 110 of 160 laps on the 2½-mile oval as he raced to his fourth victory of the season and the 57th of his NASCAR Winston Cup career.

It wasn't that easy, though, as Schrader and Sterling Marlin both came after his Chevrolet Lumina in the closing laps.

At the end, with 32 of the 41 cars still running and 19 of them on the lead lap, Earnhardt crossed the finish line only two car lengths ahead of Marlin, who barely beat Schrader for second.

"My car was getting loose at the end, and on the last lap I had to crack the throttle a little and wobbled and Schrader got into my backside at the end of the backstretch," Earnhardt said. "I about wrecked in doing that and I almost wrecked Schrader.

"That's when Sterling got up alongside of him and those two got to racing behind me. We were just lucky. I'm glad we didn't tear this race car up."

Pritchett delivers game winning hit once again

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

Three seasons ago, first baseman Mark Howie made a name for himself in a Midland Angels uniform for the way he repeatedly cranked out game-winning hits. Howie went on to become one of the most popular players in club history before being dropped by the California organization.

In the last two nights at Angels Stadium, Chris Pritchett, also a first baseman, has done an admirable impression of Howie.

Just one night after Pritchett parked a Jurassic home run over the right field wall in the bottom of the ninth that led the Angels to a 3-1 win over Wichita, Pritchett delivered a game-winning double in the bottom of the ninth Friday night as Midland defeated the Wranglers, 5-4.

The win was Midland's fourth straight, matching its longest streak of the season.

Pritchett, who had a 2-for-4 night at the plate with two RBI, has hit safely of 24 of his last 32 games for a .376 average during that span.

"He's hot," Wichita manager Dave Trembley said. "When a guy's hot it doesn't matter what you throw him, he's going to hit it. I'll try something different tomorrow."

Pritchett's double, which allowed P.J. Forbes to score from first, was his 19th of the season, a team high.

"I was just trying to do what I did (Thursday) night. I'd never seen that pitcher (reliever Tom Paskievitch) before, but I talked to Todd (Claus, Midland's newest infielder) because he'd faced him in the Cal League. We were sitting there watching him, and saw that he was trying to get ahead with his fastball. I just went with the first pitch."

"He's a good hitter," Angel manager Don Long said of Pritchett. "He seems to always find a way when there's a run that needs to be driven in. He's really good at concentrating in those situations."

The Angels ripped Wichita starter Andres Berumen for four runs on four hits in the first inning. Berumen, who lasted only the first inning, broke down early after being hit on the right chin by an Orlando Palmeiro come-backer four pitches into the game.

After Palmeiro's pop, Midland strung up three consecutive hits, followed by a walk, a single and another walk. The inning ended oddly enough on a double play, when a sacrifice fly by Jeff Kipila scored Forbes. Pritchett, who had reached earlier on a single, tried to advance to third but was thrown out after Forbes scored.

"In my own personal opinion,"

ADAMS: Midlander in third place

(From 1C)

He got into it Saturday in suffocating heat during the middle of the third round, hitting his irons with crisp efficiency and draining the putts with his newly acquired Zebra putter.

At one point, Price, the current PGA champion and the winner last week at Hartford, appeared on the brink of a runaway.

But the 90-degree heat and high humidity took a toll on Price and Norman. Both complained of fatigue toward the end.

And Price said the heat could have been a factor in what he called "a disappointing finish" that cost him a couple of strokes and kept Norman in hot pursuit.

After a magnificent 6-iron shot from the rough and an awkward stance on the lip of a fairway bunker, Price missed a 4-foot birdie putt on the 17th hole.

And, for the third day in a row, he bogeyed the 18th, this time missing the green and failing to get up and down.

Still, he and Norman matched 5-under-par 67s on the Dubsdread course at Cog Hill and are separated by only two strokes, 202 to 204, going into today's final round of the chase for a $216,000 first prize. They'll be paired together in the final twosome.

In looking ahead to that matchup, they sounded like a mutual admiration society.

"Greg is one of those guys who can just overpowers a golf course," Price said. "He's capable of putting up any kind of a number.

"I know what I have to do," Price said. "I have to go out and play well. Because I know Greg will."

Norman, runnerup in this event the last two years and four times overall, was equally complimentary.

"Nickie is on a roll," he said of Price, who has six victories around the world in the last 12 months.

"He's playing with a lot of confidence after winning last week," Norman said. "He's an emotional player and he's carrying that emotion over to this week.

"But he's not infallible," Norman warned.

Norman, however, may be the only one within reach of him at this stage.

Midlander John Adams, who matched the course record with a 63, and Curtis Strange shared third at 206, four behind the leader.

Veterans Larry Nelson, with a 67, and Doug Tewell, 68, were next at 207.

The group at 208, eight under par but six strokes off the pace, included Chip Beck, Bob Lohr, Greg Kraft, Dudley Hart and Loren Roberts.

Price said it was "the purple patch" between the sixth and 14th holes, where he scored five birdies, that was the key to his effort.

"I was just playing so well, and I'm getting more and more confidence with this putter."

He dropped putts of 40 and 20 feet on the sixth and ninth, got a sand wedge to six feet on the 11th, hit an 8-iron to tap-in distance on the 12th and made a 15-footer on the 14th.

Perhaps his best shot of the day came on the 16th, where he lofted the 8-iron to within an inch of the cup.

Geddes' 64 claims Farr Classic lead

SYLVANIA, Ohio (AP) — Jane Geddes, a 10-time winner on the LPGA Tour, has never led going into the final round in any of her victories.

She hopes to change that in the Jamie Farr Toledo Classic.

■ LPGA Toledo

"I've always come from behind," Geddes said after matching the course record with a 7-under-par 64 Saturday on the 6,295-yard Highland Meadows Golf Club. Chris Johnson had a 64 in the 1989 tournament.

Geddes has a two-round total of 132 and holds a two-stroke lead over Brandie Burton and Hollis Stacy entering Sunday's final round.

"I played absolutely as solid I think as I could play," said Geddes. "The last two days, my ball striking has been very, very good."

Geddes, who won the tournament in 1987 when it was played at Glengarry Country Club, finished with seven birdies, including four on the back nine. After a poor drive on the 532-yard, par-5 18th hole, Geddes saved par to tie the record.

"It seemed like every shot I hit today was going right at the stick. That's a fun way to play golf," she said. "I feel real good about my game."

Burton had a 66 Saturday to go with a first-round 68. She finished with birdies on the final two holes.

"I felt good about coming in on 17 and 18 and making two strong birdies there," she said. "I just tried to stay close to Jane. She was tearing it up. She made a lot of great putts, a lot of 10-to 12-footers for birdies."

Stacy, one of six players tied for the lead at 67 after the first round, matched that score with birdies on two of the final three holes.

Defending champion Patty Sheehan is four strokes behind Geddes at 136, including a 66 Saturday.

Suzanne Strudwick, another of the first round leaders and the tour's top rookie, had a 70 Saturday and is at 137, and Amy Benz followed her opening 67 with a 71 to finish 36 holes with a 138 total.

Cherokee runs away with Dwyer

NEW YORK (AP) — Trainer Frank Alexander had predicted 1⅛ miles would be a distance that would suit Cherokee Run.

Well, it fit the colt like a custom-made suit on a movie star Saturday at Belmont Park.

In his first start since a sixth-place finish in the 1½-mile Belmont Stakes, Cherokee Run ran away from five 3-year-old rivals and won the Dwyer.

"He was galloping away from them at the wire," jockey Pat Day said after the colt won by six lengths over Miner's Mark, who was 1¼ lengths ahead of Silver of Silver.

Cherokee Run carried 123 pounds on a good track and was timed in 1:47 3-5. He paid $5.50, $2.80 and $2.10.

"He's a gritty little horse," Alexander said. "I think the Belmont distance was probably just a little too far for him.

"I don't think a mile and quarter will be too much, so we'll shoot for the Travers (Aug. 21 at Saratoga) or maybe the Haskell (July 24 at Monmouth Park."

Cherokee Run skipped the 1¼-mile Kentucky Derby, finished second in the 1 3-16-mile Preakness before the Belmont.

In the race preceding the $200,000 Dwyer, Dr. Kiernan won the 1⅛-mile Bowling Green Handicap on the grass in what was the first stakes start of his 21-race career.

Charles, Reith share lead in Kroger Classic

MASON, Ohio (AP) — The unlikely couple of Bob Charles and Bob Reith took over the lead Saturday with 8-under-par 134 totals after the second round of the $850,000 Kroger Senior Classic.

■ Kroger Classic

Charles, the leading money-winner on the Senior Tour, had a 66 and Reith, who has never won on the PGA or Senior Tour, shot 67.

Four players were one stroke back, including 67-year-old Joe Jimenez, who shot his age to win the Vantage Classics event for players 60 and over.

Three others, including Lee Trevino, were within two strokes.

Crowd favorite Chi Chi Rodriguez was 5-under-par, defending U.S. Senior Open champion Larry Laoretti was 4-under, Gary Player was 3-under and Jim Colbert, winner of last week's Ford Senior Players Championship, was 1-under.

"The course was playing pretty easy, if you didn't get bad lies with mud on your ball," said Charles. "We don't often play in these conditions with a lot of mud. You just hit and hope it stays on line."

The 6,628-yard Grizzly Course at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center remained soggy from a week of rain, and it turned steamy Saturday when the temperature reached the low 90s.

"I love hot weather. The hotter the better," Charles said.

Rodriguez said the forecast of 95 degrees for Sunday's final round was fine with him. He shot 66 Saturday to get into contention.

John Lynch, Rodriguez' caddy, estimated that Chi Chi has won $213,000 using a beat-up putter Lynch salvaged four weeks ago from a barrel of discards at the NYNEX Commemorative tournament.

"It was saying 'Chi Chi, take me out of here,'" Rodriguez said. Lynch said he got it for the price of a souvenir visor, which Chi Chi autographed for the club pro.

Reith, who hasn't been in the lead going into the final round since the Grand Rapids, Mich., event two years ago, said he didn't expect to sleep well Saturday night.

"But if I can just keep myself calmed down and think about my swing, I think I can hang in there," said Reith, who will be paired in Sunday's final group with Charles and Tommy Aycock.

The rain held off until play was finished Saturday, then thunderstorms soaked the course again, as they have for four straight days.

Investors set race track timetable

HOUSTON (AP) — Investors in a $70 million Houston-area horse race track have set an ambitious timetable that could have the state's first Class I parimutuel windows opening next April.

The groundbreaking on Sam Houston Race Park, set for as early as this month, would come only about three months after Maxxam Inc. president and chief operating officer Charles Hurwitz took control of the project.

The Houston Chronicle, citing unidentified sources, reported that Hurwitz and other investors expect to complete land and financing deals next week and hope to finish the state's first Class I track in 10 months.

"I think this is a comment of the ability of someone like Charles Hurwitz to put together major business deals because of his standing in the New York financial circles," said Texas Racing Commission executive director David Freeman.

"The racing commission couldn't be happier, either. Somethow, it seems fitting that the first track to receive a Class I license would be the first to open."

Maxxam spokesman Scott Lamb refused to confirm the timetable.

"I'm not in a position to confirm this," Lamb said. "All I can say is that we are on course with our plans. When we reach the next milestone, there will be an announcement."

The track, planned for a 300-acre tract in northwest Harris County, is expected to accommodate crowds of about 25,000 and employ up to 1,000 people. It received its Class I license nearly two years ago but has been bogged down in financing and land acquisition problems.

Sources told the Chronicle that Salomon Bros. of Chicago, which is handling placement of construction bonds, has set up $75 million in financing for the track.

Astros' Kile throws first shutout against Cards

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Darryl Kile won his seventh straight decision with his first major-league shutout, and homered and doubled for his first extra-base hits to lead the Houston Astros to a 6-0 victory Saturday night over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Kile (9-1) pitched his second complete game of the season, giving up six hits while striking out five and walking one.

Houston took a 2-0 lead in the second against Rheal Cormier (5-5). Ken Caminiti led off with a single and Eric Anthony hit his sixth home run.

Mets 6, Giants 3

NEW YORK — Eddie Murray's remarkable success with the bases loaded continued when he hit a tie-breaking two-run single in the seventh inning as the New York Mets beat the San Francisco Giants.

It was only the Mets' fifth victory in their last 24 games. The first-place Giants have lost only seven of their last 25 games.

It also was a big game for Mets rookie Jeromy Burnitz, who had three hits — including a two-run homer — and drove in four runs.

Mets rookie right-hander Dave Telgheder (3-0) gave up three runs and nine hits in eight innings for the victory. John Franco got the last three outs for his third save.

With the score 3-3, pinch-hitter Joe Orsulak led off the seventh with a double off Billy Swift (10-5), and one out later Vince Coleman walked. The Mets loaded the bases when first baseman Will Clark's throw to second on Howard Johnson's grounder was high for an error.

Murray followed with a single to right field to put the Mets ahead and Burnitz delivered an RBI single off reliever Jeff Brantley. Murray is 82-for-192 (.427) with 252 RBIs lifetime when batting with the bases loaded.

Padres 6, Phillies 4

PHILADELPHIA — Fred McGriff homered and drove in four runs in support of Greg Harris as the San Diego Padres defeated the slump-ridden Philadelphia Phillies.

McGriff also had a single and double, and is 15-for-38 (.395) in his last 12 games. The home run, his 18th, was his second in two days.

Harris (8-8) allowed four runs — three earned — on eight hits, struck out one and walked one in 7 1-3 innings. He defeated the Phillies for only the second time in seven career decisions.

Gene Harris pitched the ninth to earn his 14th save, striking out Dave Hollins to end the game after the Phillies loaded the bases with two outs.

Braves 11, Marlins 2

ATLANTA — David Justice and Damon Berryhill hit three-run homers, and Pete Smith won his first game in 10 weeks as the Atlanta Braves beat the Florida Marlins.

Smith (3-7) had not won since April 24, losing six games with three no-decisions. The right-hander pitched six innings, giving up seven hits, two runs, walking two and striking out three.

Justice, who had three hits, got his 17th homer of the season in a five-run sixth inning following a run-scoring triple by Deion Sanders, one of his four hits, and Jeff Blauser's RBI bunt single.

Justice also had an RBI double in the first, scoring Sanders, who had doubled, off Luis Aquino (4-6).

Reds 5, Pirates 3

CINCINNATI — Right-hander Larry Luebbers, making his major-league debut, held Pittsburgh to three runs on six hits and got a hit of his own to lead the Cincinnati Reds over the Pirates.

The rookie right-hander (1-0) was in command until the sixth inning, when he gave up a single to Al Martin before Orlando Merced hit his sixth homer of the season off the facing of the second deck in right-center, making it 4-3.

The Reds came back with an insurance run in their half of the sixth when Sabo led off with a single, moved to third on Reggie Sanders' single and scored on Joe Oliver's sacrifice fly.

Expos 6, Dodgers 4

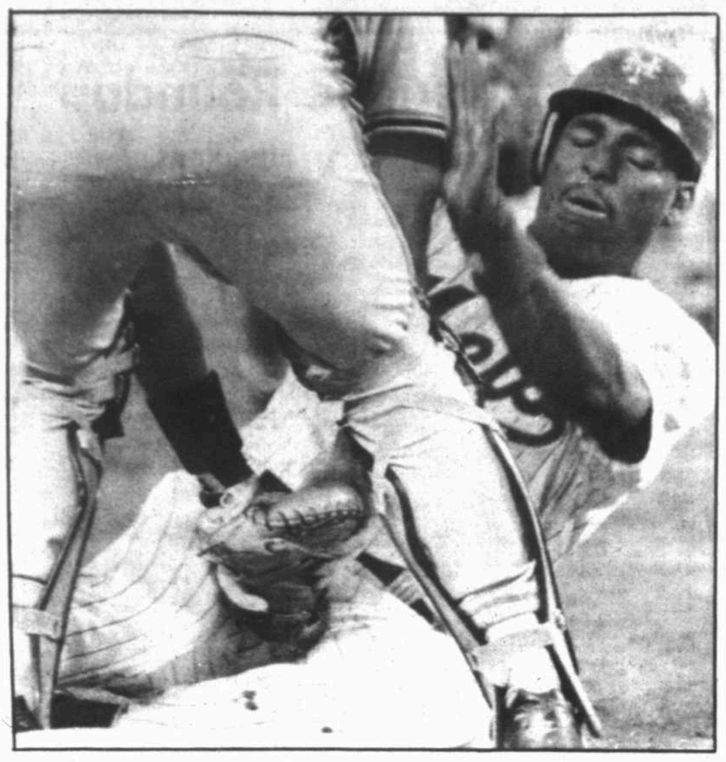
MONTREAL — Dennis Martinez won his seventh straight game as the Montreal Expos defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Martinez (9-5) went 6 1-3 innings, allowing five hits and three runs. He struck out three and walked none before leaving the game with a strained lower back.

John Wetteland got the final four outs for his 18th save.

Wil Cordero and Darrin Fletcher hit solo home runs for the Expos, who have won seven of their last 11 games.

Trailing 1-0 in the first, the Expos came back with three quick runs. Delino DeShields singled and took third on Lou Frazier's single, Frazier went to third on Marquis Grissom's groundout and Larry Walker was walked intentionally to load the bases.



New York Mets Bobby Bonilla slides into third base under San Francisco catcher Kirk Manwaring's tag in the fourth inning of Saturday's game.

Franco's grand slam lift Rangers, 11-5

Associated Press

DETROIT — Julio Franco's grand slam am capped a six-run seventh inning, leading the Texas Rangers to an 11-5 victory Saturday over the tattered Detroit Tigers.

■ AL Roundup

Texas, winning for the sixth time in eight games, led 5-0 after one inning. Detroit forged a tie in the fifth, but the bullpen failed, sending the Tigers to its 11th loss in 12 games.

Kurt Knudsen (0-1), the third Detroit pitcher, walked Geno Petralli to start the seventh, then gave up consecutive singles to Butch Davis and Dean Palmer.

That loaded the bases, and brought Bob MacDonald out of the Tiger bullpen. He gave up a tie-breaking sacrifice fly to Doug Strange, and an RBI single to Mario Diaz. A walk to Gary Redus preceded Franco's seventh homer.

Mike Schooler (2-0) pitched 1 2-3 shutout innings of relief.

Detroit's comeback — which included three RBIs along with Cecil Fielder's major-league-leading 22nd homer — got starter Mike Moore off the hook. He lasted just one inning, allowing five runs on six hits.

Dave Hulse started the game with a single, and Franco walked before Rafael Palmiero hit an RBI double and Juan Gonzalez a run-scoring groundout. Petralli had an RBI single and Palmer added a two-run homer — his 18th — high off the foul pole in left.

Chad Kreuter made it 5-2 with a second-inning homer, and Fielder doubled in Travis Fryman in the third.

Fryman reached with one out in the fifth on an errant throw by shortstop Mario Diaz before Fielder homered off Kenny Rogers.

Brewers 3, Twins 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Resurgent Ricky Bones pitched a strong game, leading Milwaukee to a victory over run-starved Minnesota.

After struggling for most of the season, Bones (5-5) is 2-0 with a 2.08 ERA in his last three starts. He allowed five hits in 7 2-3 innings, outpitching Kevin Tapani (3-10), who lost his fourth straight decision.

Tapani received no support from the Twins, whose offensive woes continued. In losing 14 of its last 18 games to fall into last place in the AL West, Minnesota has been outscored 94-49. The Twins rank last in the league with 322 runs.

Bones took a 3-0 lead and a two-hitter into the eighth inning before pitching into some bad luck. Shane Mack led off with a bloop double and Mike Pagliarulo chopped one off the plate for an infield hit.

Athletics 5, Yankees 4

OAKLAND, Calif. — Ruben Sierra and Dave Henderson hit two-run homers in the fifth inning to lead Oakland to its fifth straight victory.

After Melido Perez (5-7) walked Brent Gates, Sierra put the A's ahead 3-2 with his 12th homer. Troy Neel followed with a double, and with two out, Henderson hit his ninth homer — first since returning Tuesday from a rehab assignment.

Henderson also had a double in the fourth, ending a 1-for-33 slump.

New York came back to make it 5-4 in the seventh on Mike Gallego's two-run single off reliever Goose Gossage.

The Yankees opened the fourth with three straight doubles, chasing Oakland starter Mike Mohler after the first two. Don Mattingly led off with his second double of the game and scored on Danny Tartabull's hit. Mike Stanley gave New York a 2-1 lead with a double off reliever Joe Boever.

Boever (3-2) pitched 3 1-3 innings, allowing one run on four hits. Dennis Eckersley worked a perfect ninth for his 17th save.

Royals 3, Blue Jays 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Gary Gaetti's tie-breaking home run off Jack Morris with two out in the eighth inning gave David Cone and Kansas City a victory over Toronto.

The victory moved the Royals into a first-place tie with Chicago in the AL West.

Cone (6-8) held the Blue Jays hitless until John Olerud, the AL's leading batter, led off the seventh with a line single over the head of second baseman Rico Rossy. Cone wound up with a three-hitter through eight innings, giving up five walks and striking out six.

Jeff Montgomery pitched the ninth for his 24th save.

Tony Fernandez followed Olerud's hit with a single, then Pat Borders doubled into right to tie the score at 2. Olerud was 2-for-4 and raised his average to .407.

Indians 5, Angels 3

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Glenallen Hill homered twice and drove in three runs as Cleveland held off California.

Jose Mesa (8-5) allowed three runs on seven hits and three walks in 6 1-3 innings before being replaced by Jeremy Hernandez when California rallied for three runs in the seventh.

Eric Plunk got the final two outs for his ninth save, sending California to its sixth straight loss.

Orioles 9, White Sox 6

CHICAGO — Mike Devereaux's two-run homer in the first inning and a three-run shot by rookie Jeffrey Hammonds in the second inning Saturday night powered Baltimore to a victory over Chicago.

It was the fifth loss in the last six games for the slumping Sox.

Harold Reynolds led off the first with a walk, went to third on a pair of passed balls and scored as Mark McLemore grounded out. Harold Baines drew a two-out walk and scored ahead of Devereaux' fifth homer off loser Jason Bere (3-3).

Frank Thomas hit his 17th homer in the bottom of the first but the Orioles came back with three more runs in the second on a walk, a hit batsman and Hammonds' second homer off reliever Kirk McCaskill.

Gregg Olson got the final three outs for his 23rd save.

Red Sox 6, Mariners 5

SEATTLE — Andre Dawson hit a home run in the ninth inning to give Boston a 6-5 victory over Seattle, putting the Red Sox (40-39) over .500 for the first time since June 8.

Dawson, who also had an RBI single in the seventh, hit his fifth homer off Norm Charlton (1-2) as Boston won its third straight and 10th in 11 games. It was the second homer in two nights for Dawson.

Greg Harris (4-3) got Seattle pinch-hitter Mike Felder to hit into a bases-loaded double play to end a rally in the eighth inning. Jeff Russell pitched the ninth for his 18th save.

The Mariners had tied the score at 5-5 in the eighth on Tino Martinez's RBI ground-rule double. Jay Buhner, running from first base, was sent back to third when the ball lodged under a bench in the Mariners bullpen. He had crossed the plate with what would have been Seattle's sixth run.

ANGELS: Wichita starter injured

(From 1C)

Trembley said of Berumen, "he was favoring his leg and in his best interest I had to get him out. We just recently acquired him and precautionary measures were the best way to go."

Berumen came to the Wranglers, a member of the San Diego Padres' system, as part of the trade that sent Gary Sheffield from the Padres to the Florida Marlins.

Reliever Bobby Gamez (5-2) earned the victory while Jose Musset pitched the ninth for his 17th save of the year.

NOTE: Pritchett not only leads the Angels in doubles, but also in hits (96), RBI (42) and triples (6).

DRYSDALE: Dodger dies at the age of 56

(From 1C)

Fame in 1984, led the league in games started four times, in strikeouts three times and innings pitched twice.

No pitcher was more feared by hitters than the whip-armed Drysdale, whose easy smile off the field was replaced by a snear when he was on the mound.

"Once the manager came out to the mound," Drysdale said, "and instructed me to walk a batter. I wound up hitting him instead. Why waste four pitches when one will do?

"Sooner or later you have to say it's my ball and half the plate is mine. Only I never let on which half of the plate I wanted."

Koufax and Drysdale were mates on another kind of team in the days before free agency and player agents became part of the game. They held out in tandem in 1966, missing spring training before settling for more than $100,000 each, the first pitchers to reach six figures.

Drysdale was in his fifth season as a Dodgers broadcaster and his 22nd overall in the booth. His career included 10 years with ABC.

Drysdale pitched in five World Series, helping the Dodgers win three, and took part in 10 All-Star games.

He was 3-3 with a 2.95 ERA in World Series play. He pitched a 1-0 shutout in Game 3 in 1963 as the Dodgers swept the New York Yankees.

A powerfully built right-handed hitter, Drysdale batted .300 with seven home runs in 1965. He also hit seven homers in 1958 and had 29 for his career.

In recent years, Drysdale had become a critic of modern-day players.

"You have to wonder when two players of different teams have the same agent," he said. "Who are these players really loyal to, the agent or their teams?

Sampras, Courier prepare for fireworks in final

By Robin Finn
N.Y. Times News Service

WIMBLEDON, England — Back when they were rookies exploring life on the professional tennis circuit and occasionally playing hooky from it on the golf course, back when neither their handicaps nor their rankings were in the single digits and they hadn't yet made their first million, Pete Sampras and Jim Courier were buddies.

But time, talent, and tennis titles have changed all that, and when the No. 1-ranked Sampras squares off against No. 2-ranked Courier in the final round of Wimbledon this morning, friendship will be the last thing on their minds.

"It's going to be great for one of us," said Courier, 22, who has now reached the final of all three 1993 Grand Slam tournaments and compiled a 19-1 Slam record this year. He can reclaim the top-ranking Sampras snatched away from him in April by winning the Wimbledon title. But Courier's game, with its hammer-like efficiency and blunt power, has never fared particularly well against the silky serve-and-volley classicism of Sampras. He is 2-7 against his 21-year-old Davis Cup teammate, and Sampras has been victorious in all three past finals they have contested.

Since falling to Stefan Edberg, and a stomach virus, in the 1992 U.S. Open final, Sampras has reached five finals and won them all. His confidence, said his coach, Tim Gullikson, is at its pinnacle, and his tendinitis-plagued serving shoulder seems to be in a state of remission that's made it possible for him to ignore it for at least one more match.

"Ever since he was a little kid, he's thought about winning Wimbledon," said Gullikson, who has worked for the last two years on trimming the excess swing from Sampras' ground strokes in order to produce a feline finesse and quickness on grass. "This is the one title he wants really badly."

Advantage Sampras

Pete Sampras has a 7-2 advantage over Jim Courier in head-to-head matchups:

Sampras has always aspired to capture the Grand Slam title that a tennis lifetime's worth of mentors — ranging from his very first coach to the 84-year-old former Wimbledon champion Fred Perry — have envisioned as his destiny. But until this year, his first as a Wimbledon finalist, he seemed overwhelmed by his obligation to fulfill that destiny. This year Sampras is performing at Wimbledon like the grass-court shaman his sinewy strokes and portrait-perfect serve always portended he would become.

"I'm one match away from winning the biggest tournament in the world," he said after defeating three-time champion Boris Becker in the semifinals with the same determination that helped him dethrone defending champion Andre Agassi in the quarterfinals.

"I don't know how I'm going to feel because I haven't been in this situation before," said Sampras, who was in what he calls a serving "zone" when he aced a path to the 1990 U.S. Open title.

But chances are, Sampras will be feeling the same invincibilty that has brought him a match record of 50-8 this year.

Sampras has been moving stealthily around the court, observed Perry, "like oil, just like Pancho Gonzalez used to. You don't hear him.

Whatever the outcome, this final will mark the first occasion of an All-American final since top-seeded John McEnroe downed Jimmy Connors in 1984, which also happens to be the last year the top-seeded man prevailed on the Center Court's balding lawn. It is the eighth All-American finale in tournament history and marks the third time Sampras and Courier have tangled under Grand Slam conditions.

Sunday's contest will also give Sampras and Courier a chance to fight each other, and not the computer, for the world's premier ranking.

Courier later said he was sorry if the remark sounded like a criticism of Sampras, but he also said he felt that if any apologies were in order, they should come from Sampras "because of the way he keeps on beating me every time we play."

PEPSI: Schrader grabs NASCAR win

(From 1C)

Schrader said, "All hell broke loose on the last lap. Dale pushed and I got up there, then he cut over and we barely bumped. That let Sterling get on the inside and after that, it was all over."

It looked for a while like Schrader, who faces a four-race suspension, along with his car owner Joe Hendrick, for using an illegal carburetor in the opening round of qualifying at Daytona, was going to be the one to beat.

After trying and failing to qualify for the race on Friday in the second round of time trials, Schrader used one of his two allowable provisional starts to begin the 400-mile race from the last spot in the 41-car field.

His white Chevy sliced through the thick traffic in the early going and quickly made its presence felt as Schrader, who now has four top-five finishes in his last five starts, was ninth by lap 27, moved to fourth on lap 44, got to second on lap 51 and led lap 64.

But Earnhardt's black Lumina was the class of the field as he held the lead for the final 29 laps.

Three of the six caution flags in the fast race came out in the 39 laps, keeping the leaders bunched.

"We could run good on the longer runs, but I hated to see that last caution (on lap 148)," Marlin said. "On the longer runs, it looked like Earnhardt would get loose."

Earnhardt, who leads runner-up Dale Jarrett by 251 points in the standings at the halfway point of the 30-race season, earned $75,940. He averaged 151.755 mph in the race slowed by caution for 23 laps.

There was one multi-car crash and several other single-car incidents but no injuries were reported.

Schrader's Hendrick Motorsports teammates Ricky Rudd and rookie Jeff Gordon finished fourth and fifth, followed by Mark Martin, 1992 race winner Ernie Irvan and Jarrett.

Earnhardt said that he was happy to see Schrader run so well with the possible suspension hanging over his head.

"You need to get all you can when you're fixing to go on a vacation," Earnhardt said, joking. "But I think and hope he'll get that thing turned around next week."

A hearing on the suspension is scheduled for Tuesday at Daytona Beach, before an unnamed panel of three members of the National Stock Car Commission.

WIMBLEDON: Graf wins fifth championship

(From 1C)

Anything else you need, Steffi? Three more double faults? You've got it. And now the score was 4-4.

Graf, lucky not to have Monica Seles in the tournament or Martina Navratilova in the final, could scarcely believe Novotna was showering her with so many presents. Graf had tried so hard, herself, to give away the match in the second set and through the first five games of the third. But why not take it if Novotna didn't want it?

So Graf served again and, boom, three Novotna errors made it 40-love, and a Graf volley gave her a 5-4 lead.

Would Novotna, in her first Wimbledon final, now stop throwing away the biggest opportunity of her life? A chance to be the 100th Ladies Champion and winner of $400,000?

No. She slapped an easy backhand volley wide on the first point of her service game and shrugged her shoulders and shook her head in resignation. She clubbed an easy backhand 10 feet long and looked ready to cry. Two points later, she netted a backhand approach to set up double match point.

Graf only needed one as she drilled an overhead into an open court, tossed her racket behind her and raised her arms as she did in triumph in four of the past five years. At 24, it was her third straight on Centre Court and her 13th Grand Slam title. Since 1982, no one woman has won Wimbledon other than Graf and Navratilova.

Graf exchanged kisses on both cheeks at the net with a tearful Novotna, sat for a moment to cry a little, too, with a towel over her head, then darted up into the stands to embrace her mother, father and coach.

Novotna was still sobbing minutes later when the Duchess of Kent presented the runner-up plate. Novotna leaned her head on the shoulder of the Duchess' white suit, and the Duchess consoled her by draping her arm around her.

"When she came to me, she started to smile," Novotna said. "And when she said, 'Jana, I believe that you will do it. I know that you will do it. Don't worry,' I just let go. And it was very emotional."

Novotna composed herself a few minutes later and put on an exhibition of incredible denial that she had blown the match.

"I don't think it's a horrible experience," she began. "I just feel it's very disappointing being really so close. It was very unfortunate in the third set."

"Did you feel mentally fragile out there?"

"No, not at all. Because at that stage for two hours already, I felt a little tired. When I'm a little tired, then I don't get that sensitive or nervous. So I just don't think it was nerves at all. I just went for it and it didn't work at all today."

"Do you think you gave it to her?"

"I don't think so at all. I think when I lost that game for 4-2, she lifted her game a lot and she started to play much better, and at the end she won it herself."

The match began in 104-degree heat on court, but a slight breeze and pale gray clouds arrived midway through the first set and cooled things down.

If Novotna was tired, she could not blame the weather. Graf made her run, but Novotna was still scampering around at the end. The only trouble was Novotna missed almost everything she hit.

Indurain wins prologue to Tour de France

PUY-DU-FOU, France (AP) — Miguel Indurain of Spain started this year's Tour de France the way he ended last year's — in the leader's yellow jersey.

Indurain powered through the opening prologue Saturday, winning by eight seconds in 8:12 over the short 4.2-mile circuit.

Switzerland's Alex Zulle, who was expected to give Indurain a close battle in the short prologue, finished second.

"I didn't think about taking the yellow jersey in the prologue," Indurain said. "But I found myself doing well, especially in the climb. I finished very strong."

Gianni Bugno of Italy was third, 11 seconds behind Indurain, an unexpectedly strong finish for the two-time world champion over the short distance.

Thierry Marie of France, a prologue specialist, was fourth, 13 seconds back.

The tough racing begins Sunday with the first leg of 134 miles. The Tour, a 2,312-mile clockwise journey around France, ends in Paris July 25.

Indurain won the opening prologue last year and went on to a second straight Tour de France title.

The top Americans are veteran Andy Hampsten and rookie Lance Armstrong. Hampsten, who was fourth overall last year, finished 36th, 36 seconds behind Indurain, while Armstrong was 81st, 47 seconds back.

JACK SHERMAN Says "YOU'D BETTER GET THERE EARLY, AND STAY LATE!!

GATES OPEN 4:00 P.M.

(SUGGESTION) GET THERE EARLY & AVOID THE RUSH!

The Experimental Aircraft Association (EAA) is one of the largest organizations of pilots and aircraft enthusiasts with world wide members. Their museum in Oshkosh, wisconsin is world famous. There are several divisions of the E.A.A., the Warbirds of America, Antique/Classic and International Aerobatic Clubs. The Midland/Odesa area has both an EAA Chapter and an International Aerobatic Club. Chapter 71 of the IAC and Chapter 123 of the EAA have jointly given airshows at Midland International Airport over a period of years, the last one in 1990 featuring the United States Air Force Thunderbirds. The clubs have also been responsible for the restoration of the Pliska Aeroplane now on display at the airport terminal.

Both clubs support all aviation activities in the Permian Basin. While promoting an interest in aviation through air shows, the chapters also support various charities in the area. This year the Permian Basin Food Bank will benefit from the clubs endeavors. The Permian Basin Food Bank provides food to 194 charitable organizations. In 1992 over 49,832 families were helped.

Chapter 71 of the IAC and Chapter 123 sincerely hope everyone will enjoy the 1st Annual Midland 4th of July Celebration.

Sense Of Luxury

Text by Kes Gilhome

Design by Mark Stroker

Italian terra-cotta meets Southwestern art when a multitude of different styles come together in this truly magnificent home, the likes of which are very rarely seen on this side of the Atlantic. Attention to detail has been lavished upon the building and it's grounds, which conspire to give one a sense of luxury and elegance not usually found outside of a stately home in Europe. With its marble set pieces and specially designed fabrics this is home with an unusually cosmopolitan flavor.

The main entrance to this large 4-bedroom house is through the marble floored main hall, which spills out into the formal living room. 1 1/2 stories high, this is an extremely elegant room which has been designed with entertaining large groups in mind. A formal bar in green marble compliments the decor of the main room whilst providing plenty of space for cooking, as well as masses of storage for glasses and other requirements.

The east side of the formal living room borders the flagstone courtyard which adds its beautiful view to the already impressive internal decor. The Italian fountain, and cooling trees create a shady pathway to the rest of the sumptuous grounds. Nestling within the flowering hedges and surrounded by a polished flagstone apron is an enormous cabana and 46' swimming pool. With amenities such as a wet bar and it's own bath it is perfect for both formal and informal entertaining.

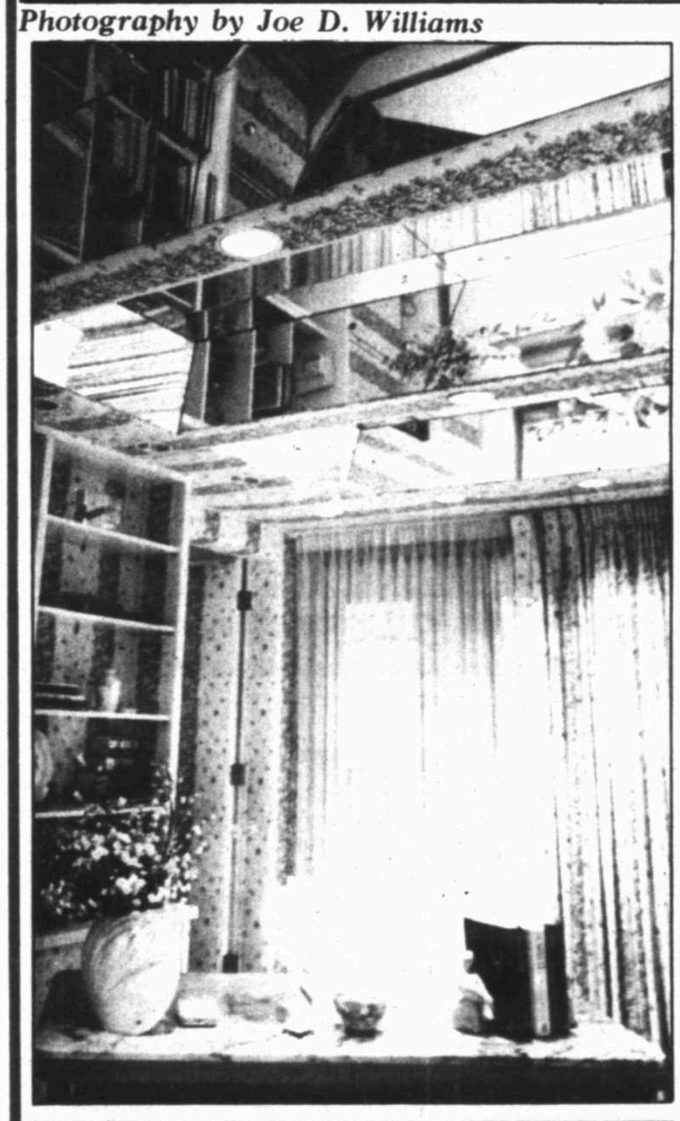
The master suite is no less magnificent and contains a dazzling array of practical and luxurious features; his and hers bathrooms lead off from the bedroom and converge in a light, high ceilinged atrium which contains a sauna and jacuzzi and features very large skylights. A quiet library and accompanying office (which could be converted back into a kitchen), which has a view over the central courtyard, completes the picture and helps make the master suite into a very private retreat.

The impressive range of amenities such as the six burner stove in the kitchen will help a gourmet cook to create dishes for any number of guests, but it still retains a family feel with many pretty decorative touches and a view over the front garden.

Sandy Scott of Remax who is offering the property, describes this home as being, "one of the best constructed homes in Midland." The quality of construction, both in the main building and in the extra features such as the professional tennis court and the large, comfortable guest house in the grounds is obvious.

Although this is an extremely big and luxurious home, it has been designed with comfortable family living in mind, not just large formal functions. The design helps in other ways as well as making life more pleasant: utilities are very low for a house of this size due to a stone veneer outer wall and a cedar roof as well as high efficiency insulation throughout the house.

For more information about this stunning house, please call Sandy Scott on 697-8820.



Mirrored beams in the library (above), and mirrored walls in the guest bath (below), add elegance and size to these rooms.

Energy saving tips help you save money

Utility bills, like death and taxes, are one of life's few certainties. "Homeowners can reduce their utility bills, however, with a few simple steps," says Kay Sutton, President of the Midland Association of REALTORS. "Saving money is a priority for most of us, but reducing our energy needs is also good for the environment," Sutton added. The following energy saving tips are brought to you by the Midland Association of REALTORS.

Kay Sutton
President/Midland Board of REALTORS

Water bills: Your shower is one of the easiest places to cut down on water use. Install a low-flow nozzle to save up to 50 percent usage. A shower head with its own on/off switch makes it easy to conserve water while soaping up.

Leaky faucets and toilets are some of the biggest water wasters. A leaking faucet can waste up to 25 gallons daily!

There are dozens of other ways to conserve water; you just need to think about them. Before beginning any household chore that requires water, stop and consider how you could use less or combine tasks. For example, don't leave the water running when washing your car.

Electric Bills: Simply turning out the lights will make a difference. Also, replace high wattage bulbs with energy conserving bulbs. Set appliances, such as your dishwasher, on low-energy settings.

Don't locate heat-producing appliances, like a stove or dishwasher, next to a refrigerator or freezer. Heat will cause cooling equipment to work harder.

Install electric water heaters as close as possible to the kitchen and bathrooms. This will mean shorter pipes and less heat lost as water travels through them. If long pipes are necessary wrap them in insulation. Use cold water whenever you can--it requires no energy.

Check your home's insulation. Do you need weather stripping around your windows and doors? If you can feel air coming in, the answer is yes. Keep fireplace dampers closed when not in use so heated or cooled air can't escape.

Keep vents and doors closed in infrequently used rooms. Heating or cooling unused rooms is a waste of energy and money.

Gas bills: Many of the tips provided for saving on electric bills also apply to gas appliances. In addition, gas heat is nearly immediate; when cooking, don't waste energy with lengthy preheating. Regularly clean and adjust your gas heater so that the flame is blue.

"Homeowners who truly are committed to saving on their energy bills should consider an energy audit," says Sutton. "A complete energy audit will show you many ways to conserve energy and money."

"Call your utility company to find out if they offer free audits," continued Sutton. "To get the most out of a free inspection, prepare a list of questions in advance. Private firms can conduct a more in-depth audit, but can cost around $100. Check the Yellow Pages under "energy conservation services" for a listing of private firms."

"Saving energy is important," said Sutton. "Saving money, however, is a great side benefit."

Langston Realtors talk about . . .

Home mortgage loans in England

Joanne Langston

The past 2 weeks we've talked about the process of purchasing a home in Great Britain. As promised, this week we'll discuss another area of real estate in the U.K., the home mortgage loan.

As a basis, I know of no other country that offers the variety of home financing options as found in the United States. Our mortgages extend for a greater number of years, interest rates are lower, required downpayments are significantly less, and an extensive array of government backed loans are offered to meet the special needs of first time home buyers, veterans, and buyers earning lower incomes or with less cash resources for closing. Our mortgage companies are also most responsive to difficult market conditions, designing programs that can make mortgage financing available for the greatest number of persons. We have become a country that views home ownership not as a privilege but as a right for its citizens and everyone works toward that goal.

However, it is quite a different story in the U.K. For instance, required downpayments are significantly higher, as much as 20% to 50% of the purchase price, interest rates are higher and mortgage terms are shorter. When we were in England last month an article in the London Times announced the first fixed rate mortgage ever offered for as long as 15 years the the rate for it was 9.75%. A monthly p and i payment for this mortgage would be $1,059.36, 44% higher than the $733.76 necessary to amortize a $100,000 on the 30 year, 8% home loans widely available in our own country.

The article also stated that in January of 1992, the first fixed rate mortgage for as long as 10 years had been offered at 11.25%. Only 500-600 home buyers had signed up for it prior to this offering, "fixed rate mortgages" in the U.K. described loans of 10 to 15 years with a rate "fixed" for only the first year of the loan. During the balance of the mortgage, rates adjusted EVERY MONTH to a predetermined factor.

Compare this with the mortgages available for over 50 years in our country - 20 to 30 year loans with interest rates fixed for the entire period of the loan. Or since the late 70's, 30 year loans where the interest rate does adjust to a market factor but the adjustment is made annually and is usually "capped" at 2% per year and 5% to 6% for the life of the loan.

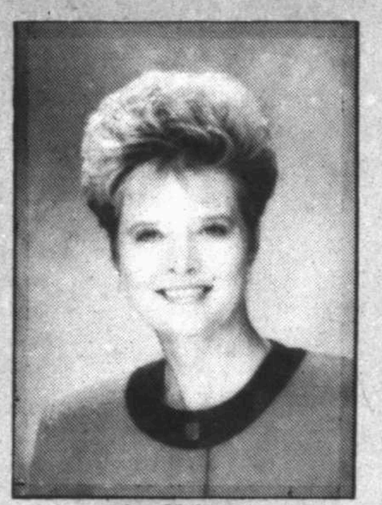
The reality of this is that homes in the U.S. are more affordable for a greater number of buyers than in the U.K.

Next week I'll try to tell you about the market in England.

Joanne Langston is owner-broker of the Langston Realtors. / As president in 1985 of a national relocation referral network, she worked to finalize an association of the network with similar organizations in England, Scotland, Ireland, Australia, New Zealand and Canada and served as the first chairman of that affiliation.

Deed restrictions merrit consideration; living conditions, quality of life affected

Probably the least studied in the mountain of documents that come across the table at home sale closing time are deed restrictions, yet they can have a large impact on the living conditions and quality of life in your chosen neighborhood.



Jan Melton
Owner/Broker
Re/Max of Midland

Deed restrictions are basically written agreements you make about how you'll use the land you are purchasing. They usually begin with a developer when the subdivision is first created.

The "Declarations of Covenants, Conditions and Restrictions" are filed with the county before any property is sold. They stay with the property regardless of the terms of sale.

Even if you've never seen a copy or don't know about their existence, you're bound to abide by them once the property is yours. Although there are exceptions, it's a general rule that the more expensive the subdivision is, the more involved the deed restrictions will be.

Some mature neighborhoods may not have deed restrictions or may have let them lapse with time. Active civic associations generally make a point of renewing and enforcing restrictions because they help retain property values.

Sometimes this leads to conflict. In the past session, the Texas legislature argued without conclusion the question of whether deed restrictions against home businesses can restrict home child care operations.

The perception the developer had of a neighborhood may not match your lifestyle, or the current demographics of the neighborhood you are entering, but they do stamp the community with shared values. Courts have consistently upheld the enforcement of reasonable restrictions.

They can quash your plans for a garage conversion as well as your neighbors ostrich ranch operation. Sometimes such seemingly innocuous items as changing the color of the paint on your home or building a backyard deck are regulated.

It's important to know the deed restrictions involved before investing in a neighborhood. If the seller or community association can not provide you with a copy, go to the County Clerk's office or a local title company to purchase copies.

These are the "laws" of your neighborhood. Being a satisfied homeowner will require that you read and understand the law of the land.

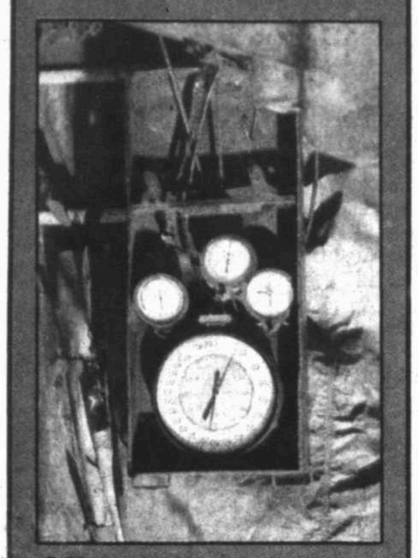
Serving 54 counties in West Texas and New Mexico

BRIEFING



Mixed rig count

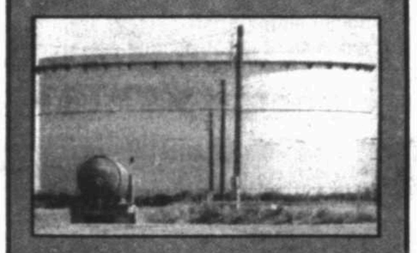
A weight indicator for a drilling rig, though there were fewer rigs in the Basin this past week.

Baker Hughes Inc. reported that for the week ended June 25, the Basin rig count fell seven to 107 from 114 the previous week. It remains above the year-ago level of 92.

Eddy and Lea counties, New Mexico were the most active in the basin with 22 and 19 rigs respectively, followed by Andrews County with 10 rigs and Midland County with eight rigs.

Nationwide, the rig count rebounded from the previous week's sharp decline. Nationwide, the rig count jumped 21 to 702, well above the year-ago level of 645.

Among major oil producing states, North Dakota showed the sharpest increase, six rigs, followed by Louisiana with five. Texas gained three.



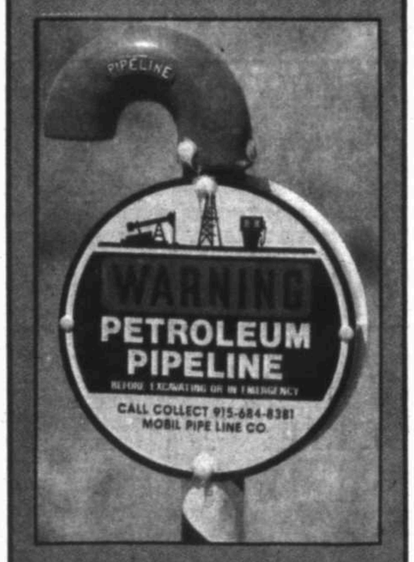
Weakened prices

Another load of oil heads for the storage tanks as oil prices fell this week.

Last weekend's attack on Iraq's intelligence headquarters had little impact on energy prices early in the week, though crude futures rose just above the $19 barrel early.

Late in the week, prices tumbled when traders interpreted remarks by America's U.N. ambassador that the U.S. would be willing to lift the ban on Iraqi oil. Late in the week, August contracts tumbled to $18.45 per barrel, posted prices to $16.75 per barrel.

Natural gas prices were lower, with August delivery closing at $2.12 per thousand cubic feet late in the week.



Canadian oil

TULSA — Williams Pipe Line Co. is evaluating a 100,000 barrel-a-day, pipeline project to bring Canadian crude oil into markets in the midwestern United States.

The proposed system would connect a pipeline near Chicago operated by Lakehead Pipe Line Partners, to a pipeline distribution hub 200 miles south at Patoka, Ill.

The proposed pipeline would give additional outlets to Canadian crude which is is generally cheaper than U.S. crude in the Midwest, partly because of its limited market access.

Williams Pipe Line, a subsidiary of Tulsa-based The Williams Companies Inc., operates 8,500 miles of petroleum liquids pipelines in the Midwest.

New fields reach five year low

■ Discoveries down, but natural gas prices could result in turnaround says Arthur Andersen study

By Anne Pearson
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Oil and gas discoveries in the United States fell in 1992 to the lowest level in five years, according to an annual study by Arthur Andersen & Co.

But rebounding natural gas prices could turn things around this year.

The amount of natural gas companies found in the United States was equal to only 55 percent of the gas produced in 1992. That figure rose to 60 percent when the accounting firm added in reserves purchased, and revisions of estimated reserves.

Companies replaced just 47 percent of their U.S. oil reserves through drilling. That rose to 53 percent when reserve acquisitions and revisions were included, according to the study.

Energy companies continued their flight overseas last year, although they plowed fewer dollars into international projects than in 1991, Andersen's oil and gas group managing director, Victor A. Burk, said Tuesday.

Overseas spending dropped by 7 percent in 1992, while U.S. spending dropped by 27 percent to about $13 billion, the lowest level of investment in more than a decade.

Enron forms partnership to buy assets

■ Enron will team with retirement pension fund to purchase natural gas properties.

HOUSTON (AP) — Enron Corp. and the California Public Employee Retirement System — the nation's largest pension fund — have announced a partnership to buy natural gas assets.

Enron Capital Corp. and the retirement system, known as Calpers, will each contribute up to $250 million over a three-year period to invest in or purchase natural gas operations like pipelines and storage facilities.

The partners plan to leverage their contributions with bank loans, creating an investment pool of more than $1 billion, said Enron spokesman Hardie Davis.

The announcement comes at a time when relatively clean-burning natural gas is suddenly in favor among investors. Shares of Enron hit a record high before closing at 68¼ Tuesday.

The new partnership, named Joint Energy Development Investments L.P., is unlike most energy partnerships, which often fund exploration and production projects, said Larry Crowley, analyst with Rauscher Pierce Refsnes in Houston.

Calpers, which owns 600,000 shares of Enron, approached the Houston company about forming the partnership.

Ellenburger gets second look

■ New geological knowledge is causing operators to take a second look at the evasive Ellenburger of the Eastern Shelf

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

The Ellenburger on the Eastern Shelf, for the most part, has the reputation of being a costly tease, but that could be changing.

As one operator put it: "The Ellenburger promises a lot, makes you spend a lot of money, but seldom delivers."

Many operators have found the fickle nature of the Eastern Shelf Ellenburger so disappointing that they would not even drill into it.

But now, in light of recent successes and a better understanding of this fickle formation, some are saying that it's probably time to give Eastern Shelf Ellenburger a second look.

One of those that has become a vocal promoter of the Ellenburger is JVA Operating Co. of Midland.

"It's a hard play," says Jerry Atkinson, president of JVA Operating Co. "The Ellenburger is a complex formation — hard to find and hard to produce, but for those who understand its complexities it can be rewarding."

Atkinson says that one of the rewards is that there are so few people who understand the Ellenburger and so many more who just don't want to mess with it that competition is light for those who do.

JVA became involved in the Ellenburger when it purchased a small waterflood in Nolan county.

Originally discovered by Tucker Drilling Co. in 1986, the Bloodworth NE Canyon Unit was later sold to Sun who in turn sold the properties to Montero Operating. From the time it was discovered until the time it was sold to Sun, 27 well bores were made in the unit,

Despite its fickle reputation, the Ellenburger has been the object of renewed interest in recent months.

Is the oilfield service industry headed for massive integration, in which only a handful of companies will dominate?

In the past two months, two of the largest service companies in the industry have announced massive integration plans to meet a changing market. Will it be just another passing management fad that appears on the horizon for a brief period of time or does it mark the beginning of a fundamental change in the oilfield service industry?

A prevailing theory in the industry today is that challenges to changing rela-

Incentive: Just a little dab will do you

Pitts

Tax incentive is a wonderful economic lubricant. A little dab here, a little dab there and the wheels of commerce on the bus of free enterprise turn much easier and faster, giving its passengers (you and me) a smoother ride through life.

It's an economic axiom: Tax incentives increase jobs and revenues — tax penalties decrease the creation of both.

Anyone who doubts that tax incentives work would do well to remember what tight sand and coal seam incentives did for drilling in 1992. Regardless of whether one approved or disapproved of them, the rig count in 1992 would have fallen off the charts, had it not been for these incentives.

If economic stimulus is the goal, logic dictates that the task should be to identify the job-producers and the revenue-producers in a society and make their job easier.

You don't penalize producers, rather you search for creative tax incentives to stimulate them, lighten their regulatory load, then step back and watch them produce jobs and revenues. It's that simple. It's "free" enterprise.

The Clinton Administration, which now seeks to penalize the job-making sector of this economy (the rich and corporations) with more taxes and excessive environmental regulation, may not understand that self-evident truth, but Texans understand it very well, and a package of incentives recently signed into law by Governor Ann Richards, is expected to help the Texas oil industry get more active, make more money and create more jobs.

Not drilling for oil and gas or producing oil and gas is the most costly inactivity in Texas, says Texas Railroad Commissioner Jim Nugent, who notes that the trick is to come up with incentives to stimulate operators drill more oil and gas wells. "Any fool can tear down a barn, but it takes a carpenter to build one." He describes new incentives as tools to help the oil industry rebuild its barn.

Nugent, in a position paper on incentives, estimates that each new oil or gas field discovered in the state averages $15 million in economic activity over the life of the field, and that no new fields means no economic stimulus. Between 1985 and 1992, he said the number of field discoveries dropped from 1502 to 421, costing the state a whopping $98 billion.

"That's enough to employ more than a half million Texans for seven years at an annual salary of $25,000."

Nugent notes that the package which includes nominal state tax breaks for: wildcatting, and reactivation of old wells can go a long way toward reviving the Texas oil industry that was nearly destroyed in the mid-1980s, by a "glutted market, over zealous speculators and misguided federal mandates."

Taken separately, he said that each of the incentives is just a small step in the right direction, but as a package they represent a giant step toward repairing our economic barn and putting Texans back to work.

The bills follow on the success of the Enhanced Oil Recovery Program of 1989, since passage the Commission has approved 526 EOR projects which will qualify operators for a 50 percent severance tax credit. Each one of these EOR projects will produce as much or more as a new field discovery.

LOOK: Shelf Ellenburger gets second look

but only one penetrated the Ellenburger, and was not completed. That was the Foster-Price No. 1, drilled in 1986.

In 1991, when the well depleted in the Canyon Sand, the new owners, JVA, acting on new geological advice, decided to look at the Ellenburger. What they found was an entirely new ballgame.

After being completed in the Ellenburger, the well kicked off on the fifth swab and flowed for a year as a top allowable. JVA now has three top allowable wells in the unit and is looking to recomplete several more. The Midland company is also looking at several Ellenburger drilling prospects in the area.

It costs about $300,000 to drill and complete a well in the Ellenburger and a top allowable can pay out in about eight months, according to Atkinson.

"I think the Ellenburger deserves a second look," said Atkinson. "It may not be that exciting, and it may not result in a big new play, but the opportunities are there."

Another company that has had success in the Eastern Shelf Ellenburger and will vouch for the opportunities is Enrich Oil Corp. of Abilene.

Drilling on a lease block on the Stewman Ranch in Nolan County, Enrich has completed three wells, drilled one dry hole and has a fourth well being completed. Currently the company is producing 350 bopd and 300 mcfd from three wells, and has produced 30,000 barrels since January. The tract was acquired from former Oryx partners who had joined to drill five horizontal wells in the fractured Ellenburger.

"After Oryx experienced disappointments from their horizontal wells, we were able to take their leases and seismic and drill the present producers," said Allan Frizzell, vice president of Enrich.

He said horizontal drilling in the Ellenburger was probably unsuccessful because of the difficulty of following the formation, which, unlike the Austin Chalk, is very heterogeneous from location to location. "There are vertical fractures," said Frizzell "but they are very random and simply act as conduits for oil migration. The real accumulations are in the porosity of vugular dolomite."

Frizzell said Ellenburger traps on the Eastern Shelf were very subtle, local in nature, hard to find and as tricky to develop as they are to find, yet he is convinced the pursuit can be worthwhile.

"We intend to pursue all the Ellenburger we can and we think it is probably time other operators gave it a second look, especially in light of new geological knowledge of the formation."

He added that three years of intense stratigraphic and lithology work preceded Enrich's Ellenburger drilling, and said the company uses some proprietary geology and conventional 2-D seismic to drill Eastern Shelf Ellenburger.

"Three-D would be helpful, but not absolutely necessary. We think high density 2-D is sufficient," he said.

Jerry Atkinson notes that a problem with 3-D is the rough terrain that is full of canyons and plateaus.

He also notes that, compared to Pennsylvanian, there is a very low density of Ellenburger penetrations on the Eastern Shelf. "There is no better place to look for new oil than below old oil."

Frizzell points out that the Ellenburger may have wrongfully received a bad rap over the years.

"Old time geologists on the Eastern Shelf, such as Louis Franklin, point out that over the long run, Ellenburger reservoirs are probably the most prolific."

SERVICE: Oil service companies integrate

tionships and changing conditions in the oilpatch can best be met by combining individual specialty companies into a larger multi-disciplined service company, able to bring together a wide range of technology and expertise to solve a specific problem.

Halliburton recently announced that it would combine 10 individual subsidiaries with 26,000 workers into a single, Houston-based division named Halliburton Energy Services.

In March, Baker Hughes Inc. combined five of its oilfield service companies to launch Inteq, a new company which Baker Hughes said was designed to meet the needs of the market in the 1990s.

Other major service companies such as Schlumberger and Baroid are also working with integrated solutions to meet the changing market.

Inteq officials say the company was formed, after a six-month worldwide market study by a strategic task force identified three future customer relations for the oilfield service industry. They are:

- An arms-length purchase transaction where the customer merely purchases a service from the service company;
- An integrated solution where the company is approached by an operator and asked to provide the best technical solution to a specific application; and,
- An alliance or partnership with the customer to try to find better ways to do business and improve the processes all companies go through in business transactions.

Officials say it was the new opportunities associated with these new alliances that prompted Baker Hughes to combine five of its 14 service companies — Milpark Drilling Fluids, Baker Sand Control, Develco, Eastman Teleco and Exlog — into Baker Hughes Inteq.

"Integrated solutions are developing even more quickly than we anticipated when we put Inteq together," said Richard Giffhorn, vice president of worldwide operations for Baker Hughes Inteq, noting that a number of North American companies are rapidly moving to this approach.

Halliburton is one of those companies. Thomas Cruikshank, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Halliburton Co., noted that the combination of 10 Halliburton companies into one was done to provide opportunity for integrated service and solutions.

"The purpose of the reorganization is to improve responsiveness to the needs of customers while reducing operating costs," Cruikshank said.

"The new organization will permit the provision of all services and products by a single company operating under a single, simplified management. This will facilitate the sales of multiple lines of services and products, as well as the provision of a full range of integrated services and products for a single well or a multiple-well program," he said.

The units that will make up Halliburton Energy Services include a heafty lineup of technology: Halliburton Services Division; Halliburton Logging Services Inc.; Otis Engineering Corp.; Halliburton Geophysical Services Inc.; Halliburton Reservoir Services Inc.; Halliburton Drilling Systems; Halliburton Resource Management Division; Sierra Geophysics Inc.; Halliburton Geodata Ltd.; and Jet Research Center.

It is this ability to concentrate technology and the growing gap in technical competence due to massive staff reductions of oil companies over the past 10 years that has changed the service industry.

Major oil companies once provided a strong lineup of technical expertise and research and development teams now service companies are being asked to step in and fill those gaps.

"The market of the 1990s," said Giffhorn, "is clearly that big oil is going to be thin oil. The oil industry has lost probably 60 percent of its workforce from the early 1980s and major oil companies are still slimming down across the board, as they focus on financial returns."

He said oil companies are doing a lot of continuous improvement projects and expect the service industry to provide products, services and technical support.

"We see oil companies starting to move gradually away from buying strictly on price to buying on perceived value," said Giffhorn, a native Midlander.

One result of the integration, according to the Inteq vice president is a natural synergy that has developed within organizations to solve drilling and completion problems.

"In the past, a company would develop products in isolation. Now, products are developed and linked with other products to drill and complete a wellbore more efficiently. For example, today's technology allows a company to drill a short-radius horizontal well from vertical to horizontal in the space of 100 feet. The problem is completion technology has not caught up with drilling technology."

He said that in the future as the company moves forward it will continue to push the envelope from the drilling side, but in concert with the completion side, in order to bring the two technologies to the market simultaneously so that as wells are drilled they can be completed.

Inteq is now in the midst of a planning cycle, and forecasts moderate growth in North American activity — which is primarily gas driven. Also seen are weakness in the international market, particularly Europe, and a continued boom in the Asian-Pacific market.

Moves by the major service companies to accommodate the changing market, Giffhorn said, threaten the smaller companies, because they see the market evolving into four or five major players, relegating them to niche companies.

But, he said, the key to success in the 1990s is if a company can create value, demonstrate that value and convince the client it can deliver on that value.

"We have to be more responsive to doing business in a different way. Business as usual no longer applies. The oil industry has not changed much over the last 50 years, but starting with this decade, we see changes coming. Oil companies are going to be nimble on their feet, they'll be financially in good shape and won't allow themselves to become bureaucracies," he said.

"As I tell my customers, this is the beginning of a journey. We're not at the end, and we don't have all the pieces of the puzzle in place yet. This whole market is evolving and moving very rapidly," he said.

PITTS: Dab of incentive would pay

as much or more as a new field discovery.

The TRC estimates that the projects will mean an extra 849 million barrels of oil and at current estimated market prices of $20 will produce $17 billion in wellhead value, which when circulated through the economy will amount to $49 billion in economic activity with another $1.2 billion in added sales tax.

Bill Johnson, division manager of Texaco's Midland Producing Area, recently remarked: "Had it not been for this incentive (EOR severance tax credit) we would have never launched the $103 million Mabee Field tertiary project."

While incentive to start new EOR projects will generate hundreds of millions, incentives to operators to reactivate old wells could result in millions more.

There are 80,000 inactive wells in Texas, and the Texas Railroad Commission has proposed a 10-year exemption on severance tax for each well that has been active for over three years and is brought back into production. If this recently passed incentive works, and it is expected it will, returning only five percent, or 4,000 of those wells to production, at a rate of 5 barrels per day it could result in an additional 7.3 million barrels of domestic production each year. Multiply that by $18 to $20 per barrel and you can see how it improves cash flow in Texas.

One of the most clever incentives devised by TRC, could result in the discovery of 100 more new fields next year.

Remember getting a dollar for each "A" on your report card. Here is the Texas version of that incentive. When the drilling report card comes out each year wildcat discoveries will be treated as an "A."

There were 421 new field discoveries in 1992, but if that number is exceeded by 100 (521 new fields) this year, a $10,000 severance tax credit per well will be granted to each producer making a discovery.

If 721 new discoveries are made the credit is increased to $25,000 per well, and if the rate of new discoveries doubles to 842, each operator who discovers a new field will receive an additional $25,000 credit for each new well drilled in the reservoir over the next ten years.

Having $10,000 - 25,000 taken off the drilling bill for each well in a field is an added drilling incentive that should encourage more drillers to put wildcats (A's) on their report cards.

While the Clinton administration might decry such a "give-away" that hands large tax breaks to the rich oil companies, don't look for Texas taxpayers to get upset about paying for these good marks. Texans understand the economics of incentive. If 842 new oil or gas fields are found, it will mean $6.3 billion to the Texas economy.

Texas, which has only the severance tax to work with, cannot hand out the big tax incentives like the Washington politicians, who hold the strings to the big purse. But if they could, they could probably teach the folks in the White House and Congress a thing or two about creating jobs and economic stimulus.

Flow Products signs agreement

Flow Products subsidiary signed a marketing agreement with MTI Analytical Instruments to distribute MTI's high-speed laboratory and portable BTU Analyzers (MBTU and PBTU) to the natural gas market.

BTU analyzers are used by gas producers, gas transmission companies, and natural gas purchasers to measure the heat content of natural gas. The heat content is then used to determine the market value of natural gas. Increasing emphasis is being placed on the BTU content of natural gas by virtue of F.E.R.C. Rule 636 requirements and taxation considerations by the U.S. and other governments.

Mitchell adds four gas wells

Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. has reported the completion of four natural gas development wells in Limestone Country, East Central Texas. Three of the wells extend the known producing limits of the North Personville Field.

The largest of the gas producers was the Mae Vance No. 2. which test flowed 3.2 million cubic feet per day on a 9/64-inch choke with 2,500 pounds per square inch (psi) of flowing tubing pressure. Perforations were between 10,788 feet and 10,944 feet in the Cotton Valley Lime formation of the North Personville Field.

Plains unit designated delivery point

Plains Terminal & Transfer Corp., a unit of Plains Resources Inc. says that it had been designated by the New York Mercantile Exchange as an approved delivery location for crude oil delivered under the NYMEX "light" sweet crude oil futures contract.

The NYMEX certification was effective July 1, 1993, and NYMEX contract deliveries following such date may be designated at Plains' facility.

Plains has recently placed six 100,000 barrel storage tanks into service and has established deliveries through the ARCO Pipe Line Cushing interchange. The company expects it will place 12 additional storage tanks in service by September, representing 1.4 million barrels of storage capacity.

The company also said it has completed interconnects with substantially all major crude pipelines at the Cushing interchange and is currently installing a multifunctional manifold and pumping system. Upon final completion, Plains will be the only terminal and transfer facility in Cushing capable of simultaneously receiving and delivering crude oil at the maximum throughput rates of the connecting carriers.

Plains Terminal and Transfer president, Mark F. Shires, noted that the company's new, state of the art terminal and transfer facility will be the only facility within the Cushing interchange equipped with secondary containment, early leak detection devices and an above ground pipeline infrastructure. Shires stated that if legislation which is currently pending in both the U.S. House of Representatives and the U.S. Senate is enacted, facilities that are not equipped with these features will be required to be updated or taken out of service over the next five to ten years.

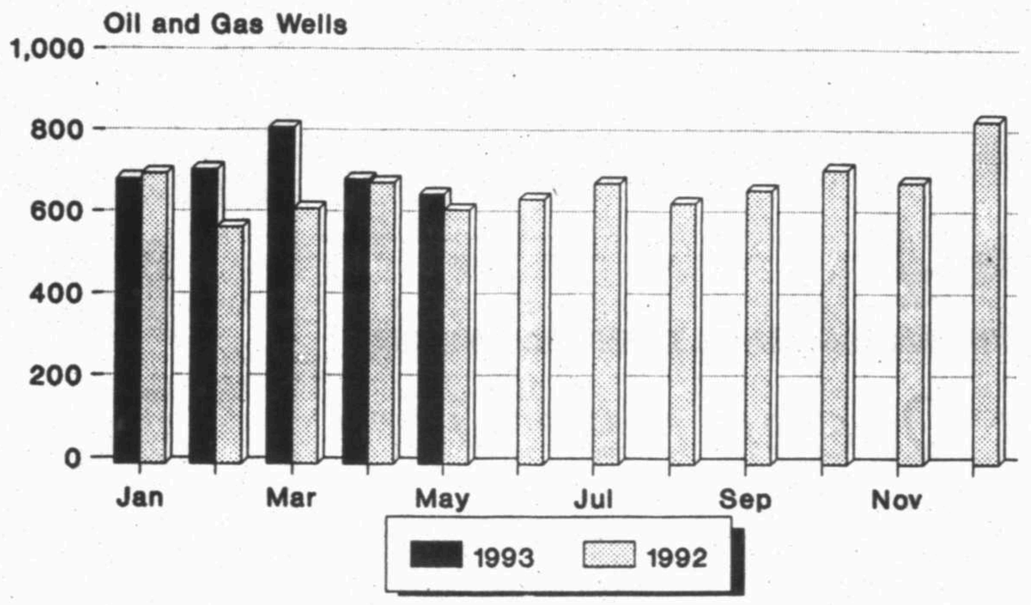
Texas Well Completions
Monthly, 1992-1993



Texas activity

The Texas Railroad Commission issued a total of 1,124 drilling permits in May, compared to 964 in May 1992. The total included 657 permits to drill new oil and gas tests, 43 to re-enter existing wellbores, 57 to deepen existing holes, 155 to plugback existing holes and 61 for other wells. There were 94 permits issued in the Midland district, District 8. Total permits issued in1993 year-to-date is 4,862, a 2 percent increase over the 4,766 issued in the same period of 1992. In addition, operators reported 305 gas, 323 oil and 28 services completions in May, compared to 153 gas, 416 oil and 50 service completions in May last year. There were 71 oil and 5 gas completions in the Midland district. For 1993 to date, there have been a total 3,581 wells completed, up 11 percent from the 3,207 recorded in 1992 year-to-date.

Venture to serve gas users

Jefferson Gas Systems, Inc. and EUA Congenex Corp. are joining forces to develop, fund, and operate a Demand Side Management ("DSM") joint venture in California and the Mid-Atlantic

The joint venture, which commenced operations on July 1, will serve small and niche natural gas consumers. These consumers are either already customers of Sunrise Energy Services, Inc. (an affiliate of JGS) or are marketing prospects with characteristics similar to the existing customers

JGS is the managing shareholder of SES and with Pentzer Corp. (the non-regulated subsidiary of Washington Water Power) owns a controlling interest in SES.

JGS is a closely held private, unregulated gas/electric company based in Washington, D.C. with offices in San Francisco and Houston.

SES is a large, publicly traded, independent merchant of natural gas product and services. It serves over 1,500 end users in 36 states. Its customer base consists of industrial, commercial, cogeneration, healthcare, education and government consumers.

Most of SES' customer spend a substantial portion of their energy budget on electricity and several have requested help in this area from SES.

EUA Cogenex Corp., an Eastern Utilities Associates subsidiary, is one of the nation's leading energy services firms conducting business in New England, the New York/New Jersey/Philadelphia area, California and over 25 other states across the country.

Its services range from helping utilities administer their demand side management programs, to increasing the energy independence of industrial firms.

French oil company leads rush to former Soviet Union

■ French oil company is pied piper to rush to Eastern Bloc.

N.Y. Times News Service

Loik le Floch-Prigent, the chairman of Elf Aquitaine, discussing the French oil company's bold exploratory drilling in the former Soviet Union, spread his hands in a gesture of incredulity and asked: "Where is there no risk? Qatar is risky, Mexico is risky, California is risky."

The companies that invested heavily to explore in California, for example, he said, his eyes widening for emphasis, are now prevented from further drilling because of the strong environmental movement, he said.

Spurred by his company's need to find more oil, he has bet early and heavily on drilling in Russia and Kazakhstan. Elf, which some analysts consider an up-and-coming mid-sized player on its way to becoming one of the majors, is also positioning itself to have a dominant position to sell gasoline in what was East Germany.

Some analysts and peers were taken aback initially, feeling that le Floch-Prigent and his management moved too fast and recklessly in putting so much of Elf's future on the line in areas rife with ethnic strife and political uncertainty, he has recently found company.

Earlier this month, Mobil and six other major international oil companies signed an early agreement to develop fields in the Caspian Sea, which could hold some of the richest reserves in the world.

And the Chevron Corp., after five years' work in Kazakhstan, is now moving oil out. Moreover, it has announced plans to scale back its American operations to free more money to invest in Kazakhstan, possibly for a new pipeline.

Weighing the political risks against the potential for finding oil, le Floch-Prigent judges his course sounder than drilling in perhaps more stable areas and coming up dry.

Oil drilling by nature is risky. Mobil, for example, spent $35 million drilling a wildcat well in the Huallaga Valley in Peru, which its exploration group believed showed great promise. It was plugged and abandoned in February 1992.

Still, few in the industry feel as venturesome as Elf.

"We're not going to be part of the first wave," said W. Wayne Allen, the president and chief operating officer of the Phillips Petroleum Co., which prefers to develop fields in politically safer areas, including Alaska, Norway and even China.

"We want to know what the deal is," he said, before moving into Russia and other oil-rich former Soviet republics. One worrisome development was Moscow's decision not to allow joint ventures operating in Russia to export oil in July.

Also voicing doubts was C.N. Davidson, the head of corporate development of Lasmo, a medium-sized British oil company. He said that even if the political situation remained stable there was still the question of "whether one can get the oil out at prices where one can make a profit."

He added, "That is still an unknown. It's very risky."

Elf, however, believes the opportunity to gain a toehold in a region where reserves may prove almost as great as the Middle East may not last long and makes the risk worth taking. Russia and neighboring republics are forming strategies for developing their oil.

Thus, after more than a decade of sinking wells in such countries as Indonesia, Malaysia and Australia and spending about $1 billion for modest results, Elf has retreated to its proven fields in Africa and the North Sea and shifted its new ventures to Russia, Kazakhstan and Venezuela.

"We don't want to be in the more exotic areas," le Floch-Prigent said, citing the high costs and difficulties of exploration. Offshore areas, for example, generally call for expensive deep drilling, and workers' wages and benefits have become more costly in hazardous areas.

Russia and the new rebublics, by comparison, he said, are much closer to home for the French company, and both France and Germany have been linked to the Russian oil and gas fields by pipelines for decades.

But the clincher is the oil. There is little doubt it is there, he believes, and thus the risk of coming up with dry holes is relatively small.

That is why in May 1990 Elf was the first to sign agreements with Russia and Kazakhstan to explore for oil. Chevron's earlier work in Kazakhstan was to develop existing fields under joint ventures.

Le Floch-Prigent said that in return for taking the more expensive and speculative move of exploration, Elf would control its own drilling efforts, largely using Soviet workers but without local partners. Its long-term contracts have been approved by the new parliamentary bodies.

Most of the other Western oil companies in the area have signed agreements with local oil-producing groups. That has enabled them to get oil out faster, but Elf prefers the long-term guarantees and independence of its agreements.

Elf's agreement in Russia covers 20,000 square kilometers, located east of the Volga River between the cities of Saratov and Volgograd, an area slightly less than twice the size of New Jersey.

The company will begin drilling in an area similar in size near Temir in Kazakhstan by end of the year. So far, it has a permanent staff of 20 in Kazakhstan doing seismic surveys. Elf estimates that the effort, which will cost several hundred million dollars, could lead to production in 1995 and could add about 20 percent its proven reserves.

Elf has long been a profitable ward of the French government, which has played a major role in its growth. The government still owns 50.79 percent of its shares, although it began to divest some of its holdings in 1986.

The present conservative government wants to sell Elf along with 21 other big companies including Air France and Renault in a sweeping privatization move. The step, intended to strengthen state finances, is expected to have little effect on Elf. Its management has been making its own decisions for many years — including its journey to the East — with little supervision by the state.

Elf has the first what is called a production agreement with Russia under which it controls its venture and shares its output with the government, but whether the contract will remain in effect as written remains uncertain.

It took Elf about a year to get the deal approved by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, but whether this gives the contract any legal force is still murky, given the struggle between President Boris Yeltsin and some of the leaders of the Supreme Soviet.

Yeltsin, who had originally supported article 25 of the law on foreign investment, which guarantees that a partner with more than 30 percent of a joint venture can export all its share to sell at higher world prices, now favors stricter procedures.

Opposition leaders in the Supreme Soviet fear that adopting stricter procedures would not only make existing partners in joint ventures reluctant to keep going but also frighten away potential ones.

Moreover, policy on how Russia wants to develop its reserves is still evolving. Oil Minister Yuri Shafranik had encouraged the course taken with Elf —that new fields be developed mostly through production contracts with foreign companies.

Recently, however, local production groups have gained influence. A high official in one of the production councils in the Tyumen Region, Russia's largest oil area, said that there was a continuing tug of war between local officials and the ministers in Moscow over control of new ventures.

The official, who was on a visit to the United States and did not want to be identified, said that heads of local oil councils often go ahead and make their own deals, presenting the central government with a fait accompli.

In such an atmosphere, Elf's straighforward contract could be bent out of shape.

According to Petroleum Intelligence Weekly, Elf would have a 30-year production period under which the state would receive 12.5 percent of the oil as a royalty, and Elf would get 55 percent to recover its expenses. The remaining oil would be split on a sliding scale, with the Russian government initially getting 60 percent of the remainder and eventually getting 85 percent.

The payoff for Elf could be big. It could move its new oil from Russia through pipelines to feed a huge new $3 billion refinery at Leuna, Germany, that it plans to start building at the end of this year with its German partner Thyssen. It would replace an outdated refinery and start production about 1996. Elf said, however, that although there could be some links between the two projects, one does not depend on the other.

Elf also agreed to take over and expand a network of 950 Minol gas stations, catapulting itself from being a small refiner in Germany into the top ranks of a growing market.

Le Floch-Prigent believes that at this point he is well ahead of the pack, and he intends to stay in the lead. So far, he has been able to operate largely without a Russian oil man looking over his shoulder. "I'm the boss," he said.

Hadson Energy tests offshore Australia well

Hadson Energy Resources Corp. has announced the preliminary results of an offshore test drilled in Permit WA-209-P, in the Carnarvon Basin of Western Australia.

The company-operated Stag-1 tested oil from a Cretaceous-aged sandstone at a depth of approximately 2,340 feet. Preliminary log analysis and pressure data indicate a potential oil column of approximately 41 feet.

Oil was recovered in wireline formation tester samples. Due to operational constraints, the well will not be flow tested and will be abandoned. Further evaluation is required to fully appraise the discovery.

The Stag-1 is located approximately 14 miles from, and on trend with, Ampolex Ltd.'s Wandoo oil discovery.

Hadson Energy, through its wholly-owned subsidiary, Hadson Dampier Pty. Ltd., holds a 25 percent interest in Permit WA-209-P.

Other participants include Globex Far East (25 percent), Santos Limited (25 percent), BHP Petroleum (Australia) Pty. Ltd. (10 percent), Norcen International Limited (8.75 percent) and Philips Australian Oil Company (6.25 percent).

Hadson Energy Resources Corporation is an energy company engaged in domestic and international crude oil and natural gas acquisition, exploration, development and production.

Arkla sells gas unit

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Louisiana Interstate Gas Co. has been sold by Arkla Inc. to a subsidiary of Equitable Resources Inc. for $191 million in cash, Arkla announced.

Houston-based LIG owns a major intrastate natural gas transmission system and four large natural gas processing plants in Louisiana.

Arkla put the company up for sale last November as part of a restructuring plan designed to reduce long-term debt. The sale will provide about $700 million in debt reduction, said Arkla Chairman Milt Honea.

Equitable, a Pittsburgh-based company, has gas producing and marketing operations in the Gulf of Mexico region. The company said LIG would be used to establish a new market center for natural gas sales.

In a news release, Equitable said it would keep intact LIG's pipeline and liquids processing headquarters in Alexandria, La. The company also said it would retain most LIG employees.

LIG's office probably will stay in Houston, although it will be moved to an Equitable office in that city.

NOWSCO INTERNATIONAL NOWSCO WELL SERVICE, INC.

New Acid System Can Handle In Excess of 20,000 mg/L of Ferric Iron

International Nowsco's Exclusive Cost Effective New Formula Solves Common Acidizing Problems

International Nowsco has undertaken major studies into the mechanism of how iron causes sludging problems to provide a cost effective answer addressing all aspects of the problem including corrosion and dispersibility.

The result of this research is the NOWFERR Acid System. The system is capable of handling in excess of 20,000 mg/L of ferric iron while maintaining cost levels proportionate to the concentration of iron tolerable. A 5,000 mg/L iron tolerance is recommended if a tubing wash is possible and 20,000 mg/L if it is not.

International Nowsco has undertaken major studies into the mechanism of how iron causes sludging problems to provide a cost effective answer addressing all aspects of the problem including corrosion and dispersibility.

The result of this research is the NOWFERR Acid System. The system is capable of handling in excess of 20,000 mg/L of ferric iron while maintaining cost levels proportionate to the concentration of iron tolerable. A 5,000 mg/L iron tolerance is recommended if a tubing wash is possible and 20,000 mg/L if it is not.

Texas production

The Texas Railroad Commission reports that Texas preliminary March crude oil production averaged 1,574,971 barrels daily, down from the 1,675,284 barrels daily averaged in March 1992. Preliminary Texas oil production figure for March is 48,824,102, down from 51,933,810 barrels reorted a year ago. Texas oil and gas wells produced 471,775,245 thousand cubic feet in preliminary production in March, up 7.9 percent compared to March 1992's gas production total of 436,956,089 Mcf.

Atmos Energy agrees to buy Greeley Gas

DENVER (AP) — Atmos Energy Corp. stands to increase its customer base by nearly 20 percent after reaching a definitive agreement to acquire Greeley Gas Co. of Denver, Atmos announced.

Under the agreement, the Dallas-based Atmos will exchange 2.33 million shares of its stock for all of the outstanding stock of Greeley. The deal must still be approved by Greeley and Atmos shareholders.

Greeley, a privately held company, provides natural gas service to nearly 100,000 customers in 109 towns in Colorado, Kansas and Missouri.

Atmos provides natural gas service to more 500,000 customers in Texas, Louisiana and Kentucky.

Gas expert details role of Canadian gas

BOSTON — Natural gas from Canada will play an increasingly important role for U.S. markets as more efficient transportation, product availability and competitive rates make it easier to import gas, Jofree Principal Carol Freedenthal told the Association of Energy Engineers.

"Natural gas imports from Canada accounted for approximately 11 percent of U.S. gas supplies in 1992, a three-fold increase from 1986 levels," Freedenthal said. "With new pipelines built on both sides of the border, Canadian gas can now move into U.S. markets almost as easily as American gas. No matter where you're located, gas buyers can find good deals for Canadian gas, and with the changes in transportation as well as backhaul and special rates, buyers now have a tremendous amount of flexibility."

Freedenthal noted that the Canadian gas pipeline industry is ahead of the U.S. in making the transition from merchant to transporter. "U.S. pipelines are only now completing the transition that the Canadians went through in 1985," he said. "The beauty is that the U.S. can utilize the availability of Canadian gas as we complete our transition."

Freedenthal said Canadian gas should complement, not threaten, the U.S. industry. "I don't see Canadian supplies as a serious threat, but I do believe that Canadian gas fits well into the new market push for U.S. gas operations," he said.

Permian Production-increasing production on existing wells

In the present economic climate, more and more producers are putting a greater emphasis on increasing production and productivity on existing wells. With the rising cost of exploration and lease operating becoming forever more expensive, increasing production without risk or a substantial cash outlay becomes very attractive. Permian Production Equipment, Inc. was founded in 1979 by Charlie McCoy, in order to supply the industry with innovative equipment designed to do just that.

McCoy, Educated at Louisiana Tech in Engineering and Business holds patents in oil and gas production equipment and at present is a director for the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and a member of both the Society of Petroleum Engineers and the American Petroleum Institute.

Unlike many local companies PPEI survived the "de-boom" in the mid-eighties, primarily because the products which they invented, manufactured and distributed here in the Permian Basin were used mainly to increase production on older existing wells. PPEI now services most domestic as well as some international oil fields.

Their forte is taking existing, marginally to medium performing wells and increasing production with a very acceptable pay out frame of, in most cases, 30 to 90 days. Potential returns are very high, with an average cash return of about 8 times the initial investment over the first 12 months.

PPEI's products include casing pressure reduction equipment such as the Beam Gas Compressor (BGC); operators of rod pumping wells are finding that by using the BGC they can relieve restricting back pressure on the producing formation and dramatically increase production and cash flow on producing wells which respond to this technique.

Back pressure has several different causes: line friction due to long flow lines from the separator back to the well head; a result of sales line pressure or the pressure required to operate the separator. All of these things inhibit the producing formation's ability to give up it's oil and gas. By mounting a BGC on the walking beam of a pumpjack, wells with a good productivity index and well head back pressure can dramatically increase their production as the wellhead pressure is reduced toward O PSI.

Apart from the increase in productivity there are many other benefits in installing a BGC. It utilizes the energy generated by the pump jack without the need for an additional prime mover. It can be operated in high as well as low pressure applications. It will help sell low pressure gas by pushing it into the sales line and relieve gas interference in the down hole pump which increases production and reduces equipment repair cost.

Permian Production Equipment has the personnel and expertise to keep wells producing at their optimum. For more information on the Beam Gas Compressor and PPEI's other products call Charlie McCoy at (915) 563-1266.

RRC research efforts may boost propane

Research efforts now under way will make the use of propane an attractive choice as Americans look to alternative fuels to power more and more vehicles, Texas Railroad Commissioner Barry Williamson said.

"I believe alternative fueled vehicles will one day be such a part of our everyday lives that we consider it amusing that it required a great effort to develop, educate and market the product," he said.

Williamson addressed a national research summit of key automotive and industry leaders on alternative fuels. The summit was sponsored by the Railroad Commission to develop a national research agenda on propane as an alternative fuel.

Expanded uses of propane will have a significant impact in Texas and the nation that will be felt in employment and the economy, Williamson said.

"One third of the U.S. supply of propane comes right out of Texas. We have half the underground LPG storage capacity in the entire country. Propane also has 70 percent of the mandated alternative fuel fleet market, and there are more vehicles operating on propane in Texas than on all other alternative fuels combined," he said.

The propane industry is an economic generator for Texas and the nation, Williamson said. In Texas, the industry has a $3 billion investment and one million customers.

Williamson said that investment and customer base will grow substantially and new jobs will be created as propane enters new markets throughout the United States.

"Propane is the most accessible alternative fuel in the nation," he said. "The infrastructure is in place in all 50 states."

Research is the key to developing new technologies that will lead to new markets for propane, Williamson said.

"Propane research has improved the operating range, distribution and refueling infrastructure. But the industry needs greater resources for R&D money," he said.

With enhanced technology, propane will be poised to complete in a number of alternative fuels markets in Texas and the nation, Williamson said.

One avenue to emerging technologies, Williamson said, is the Railroad Commission's pioneering program in which the state regulatory agency uses industry funds to promote, educate, and conduct research on propane and other alternative fuels. In 1991 the Texas Legislature created the Commission's Alternative Fuels Research and Education Division (AFRED), which operates through a half-cent-a-gallon checkoff fee on propane.

"The idea is to help private industry by having the Commission assume some of the research and development risk for projects that have good potential for expanding propane use, increasing U.S. energy security, and helping reduce air pollution," Williamson said. "We are looking for new approaches and new ways of thinking."

Williamson said a current example of the industry-Commission research partnership involves VIA, the municipal bus system of the city of San Antonio, Southwest Research Institute, and the Railroad Commission. Under Texas law, VIA must convert half of its municipal bus fleet to alternative fuels.

VIA began to examine ways to convert 370 transit buses that use a two-stroke diesel engine to run on propane, he said. The problem, Williamson said, is that no technology exists to convert engines to run entirely on propane.

Southwest approached VIA with the idea of direct liquid injection of propane in their diesel engines. The VIA board of directors voted recently to proceed with research on the new technology, he said.

It is too soon to know if this potential new technology is feasible, Williamson said.

But if the technology succeeds, "VIA and many other North American transit companies would have a practical, less-polluting alternative to diesel. And the Texas propane industry would have an important new market," Williamson said.

Argentina government sells off 45 percent of state oil company

N.Y. Times News Service

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — In the largest privatization on record in Latin America and one of the largest public offerings of stock in any industrial concern, the government of Argentina on Monday sold more than $3 billion worth of shares, or 45 percent, in its state oil company, YPF S.A.

The sale, completed by a syndicate led by First Boston and Merrill Lynch & Co., was much larger than expected by market analysts. As recently as a month ago, investment bankers were predicting it would be difficult for the sale to generate $2 billion.

"Every major institution in the United States that is anything has placed orders for YPF stock," said Bob de Veers, a managing director at First Boston. "I have never seen such a universal, around-the-world, high-quality order book for an offering."

The YPF offering is by far the largest privatization through the sale of stock to the public in Latin America, bigger than the May 1991 sale of stock in Telmex, Mexico's state telephone company, that brought in $2.2 billion.

Investment bankers said the YPF sale was still smaller than the Britain privatizations of British Telecom, British Gas and the country's electricity and water industry. Those deals, however, were in large part distributed to the British retail investor and not to the international investment community.

Just as Telmex has been a bellwether stock for the Mexican securities market — drawing international investors to the Mexican Stock Exchange — YPF is expected to enhance the image of the Argentine capital markets and the Buenos Aires Stock Exchange. YPF will account for one-third of the capitalization of the Buenos Aires Stock Exchange.

The final price for the shares of YPF, formerly known as Yacimientos Petroliferos Fiscales, was $19 a share. The underwriters sold 160 million shares, for a total market value of $3.04 billion.

The government is planning to use 60 percent of the cash to pay off debts to retirees. The other 40 percent in cash goes to six Argentine provinces that had ownership in the oil concern and well as some YPF creditors.

In Washington, where he is on an official visit, President Carlos Saul Menem of Argentina said the sale "exceeded all our expectations in terms of the demand."

The company is one of the 20 largest oil concerns in the world and has been drastically revamped in the last three years. Its president, Jose A. Estenssoro, has predicted earnings of more than $600 million this year. The company lost more than $6 billion in the 1980s.

Hadson Energy stock bought

Staff report

Hadson Energy Resources Corp. has announced that it has received notification from Apache Corp. that Apache has negotiated the private acquisition of approximately 4.2 million shares, or 68 percent, of the common stock of Hadson Energy for $14 per share in cash.

The acquisition is subject to increase to $15 per share in the event that Apache acquires over 80 percent of Hadson Energy's outstanding voting securities during the next year.

Apache indicated that the agreements were privately negotiated with Hadson Corp., which holds 48.9 percent of Hadson Energy, and several large institutional and other shareholders.

Apache also indicated that it intended to establish proportionate representation on Hadson Energy's board of directors and to propose a merger offer to all remaining Hadson Energy shareholders on substantially the same terms as those offered Hadson.

Nabers gives Washington officials tips to boost domestic industry

TULSA, Okla — Texas Railroad Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers and others gave some straight talk to Washington energy officials in Oklahoma this week:

■ Provide tax incentives for domestic oil and gas exploration and production.

■ Remove government and regulatory barriers that are driving production costs up.

■ Establish a non-partisan presidential commission on energy.

■ Help average citizens understand the economic importance of the energy industry in America.

■ Be more pro-active.

These were just a few of the messages delivered at a two-day Department of Energy meeting in Tulsa, Oklahoma June 28-29. The meeting was part of the mid-year conference of the Interstate Oil and Gas Compact Commission.

In an attempt to find ways to increase domestic oil and gas exploration, Deputy Secretary of Energy Bill White and other Washington officials were on hand to receive input from invited industry leaders.

White told IOGCC members that it is costing Americans $55 billion annually to purchase foreign oil. "That amount alone constitutes over 50 percent of our trade deficit," Nabers said. "Everyone in attendance agreed that this trend must be reversed because the nation is entirely too dependent on foreign energy products."

Nabers, who was appointed by Governor Ann Richards as the official Texas representative on the IOGCC, made a presentation to the group. She urged the Department of Energy to promote advanced technology so that drilling risks can be reduced for producers. "Every new rig in Texas represents 200 to 300 new jobs," she said.

Nabers focused her comments on the need to reduce regulatory barriers. "The Department of Energy must play an active role in pushing regulatory oversight from the federal level down to the state level," Nabers said. "There is no one regulatory guide that works at the national level. The problems in Texas are not the same as those in California or Alaska and we can provide oversight much more efficiently at the state level."

Nabers urged the Department of Energy to make the promotion of alternative fuels a number one priority. "The economic potential and environmental impact of a nationwide alternative fuel campaign would be absolutely enormous," she said.

Members making presentations praised the Department of Energy for soliciting input and urged the agency to keep the lines of communication open.

FORT DAVIS

THEN AND NOW

Text by Linda Anderson

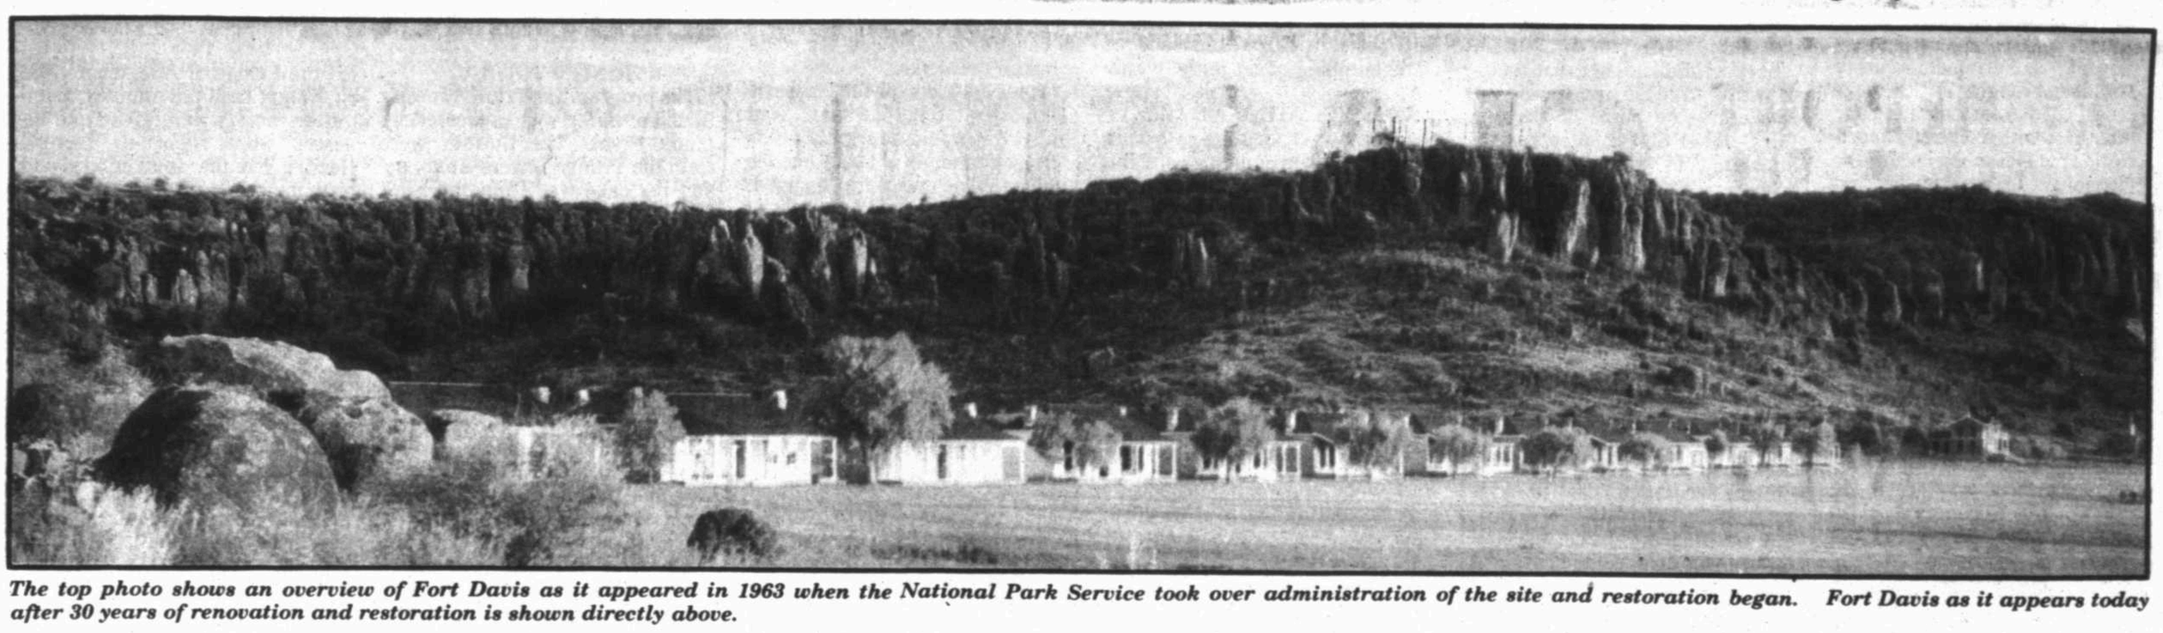
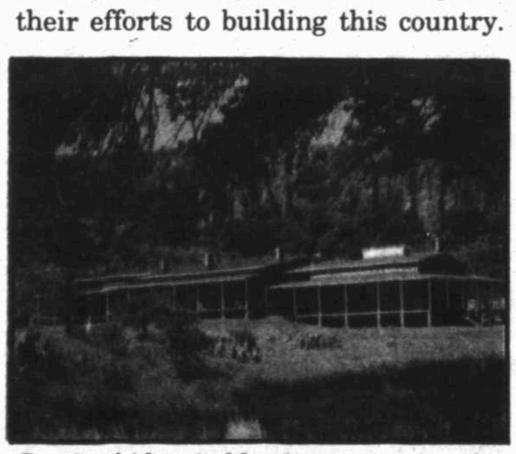
Design by Elizabeth Edwin



The top photo shows an overview of Fort Davis as it appeared in 1963 when the National Park Service took over administration of the site and restoration began. Fort Davis as it appears today after 30 years of renovation and restoration is shown directly above.

Today we celebrate the 217th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. For the past two centuries plus, our country has been growing and changing from the original 13 colonies to a world power of 50 states.

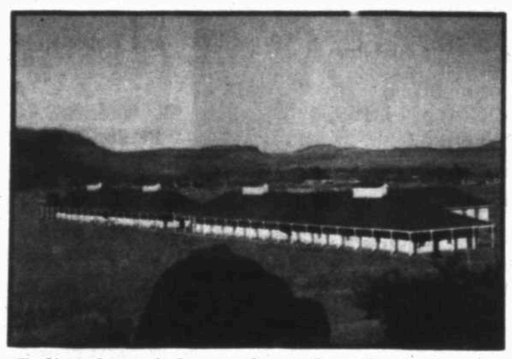
Generations of Americans from a variety of backgrounds have given their efforts to building this country.



Fort Davis' hospital has been restored on the outside.

So it's only fitting that on this July Fourth, we also celebrate the 30th anniversary of Fort Davis National Historic Site, where more than 100 years ago a lot of the history of West Texas was made.

Fort Davis, nestled in the Davis



Enlisted men's barracks at Fort Davis is one of the favorite sites of visitors to the fort.

Mountains, was established the first time in 1854 to help protect settlers against raids by Apaches. Although it was occupied for a short time by Confederate troops during the War Between the States (1861-65), the site was basically abandoned during those years. In fact, when the Confederate soldiers left, the Apaches burned the buildings.

The fort was re-established and rebuilt following the war. This time the fort was manned by the famous "Buffalo Soldiers" — black troops who joined the Army after the Civil War.

According to an article in Texas Highways' February 1989 issue, in 1866 Congress voted to add four regiments of all-black infantry and two regiments of all-black cavalry — the 9th and 10th — to the Army. In 1869, the infantry regiments were reorganized into the 24th and 25th regiments.

The black troops proved to be exceptional soldiers and fighters. The Indians themselves were so impressed with the troops' fighting skills that they began calling the black troopers "Buffalo Soldiers." These are the men who served at Fort Davis.

The article went on: "Presumably, the soldiers' curly hair reminded the Indians of their sacred buffalo, an animal they admired for its strength and stamina. The men of the 10th took that name as a compliment, and later included a buffalo on their regimental crest."

Fort Davis' Commanding Officer's quarters are restored and refurbished inside and out to the way they appeared in the 1880s.

The Buffalo Soldiers also proved themselves to be loyal and honorable. They had a lower rate of desertion, sick leave, drunkenness and suicide than their white counterparts, the article said. "General James Parker wrote that white officers said the Buffalo Soldiers 'were superior to white soldiers in discipline, fidelity, neatness, sobriety, and equal in bravery.' "

The bachelor officers' quarters is a two-story residence that housed unmarried officers at Fort Davis.

But a soldier's life is more than fighting. The men of Fort Davis also spent many hours building and improving forts, tending their horses, drilling, escorting travelers, scouting

Midlanders enjoy Caribbean cruise

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

MONARCH OF THE SEAS was home base for seven Midland couples, who cruised the Caribbean in June. The luxurious ship provided continuous activity for those who wanted to stay aboard and also allowed opportunity to tour the islands of Martinique, Barbados, Antiqua, St. Maarten and St. Thomas.

McKnight-Harrison

The trip was sponsored by Central Methodist College of Fayette, Mo., with president Joe A. Howell and his staff conducting seminars on education, investments and politics.

The Midland travelers were Edith and Bob Garst, Brittie and Russell Holster, Joyce and Gordon Leach, Mary and Tom Mann, Dilly and Shorty Nance, Edie and Frank Stahl and Vera and Paul Wecker. They were joined by Shirley and Jack Anderson of Wimberley, relatives of Mrs. Garst.

The cruise embarked from San Juan, Puerto Rico. The group flew down a day early to take a tour of San Juan, which included the rain forest and a flat tire on one of the rented vans. However, that gave the Puerto Ricans a chance to show their hospitality by helping change the tire.

Aboard ship, the Midland contingent tried their luck at the casino, attended shows and seminars and enjoyed the fabulous meals. They also had some unexpected shipboard fun one evening when the Weckers and the Garsts were awarded prizes for having been married the longest and for having the most great-grandchildren, respectively, and the Andersons participated in a passenger talent show.

Their trip ended with a last day shopping spree in St. Thomas.

THE RETURN ENGAGEMENT of jazz pianist/vocalist Lillette Jenkins at a recent evening at the Petroleum Club of Midland brought out a huge crowd of Ms. Jenkins' fans and also those with a love and appreciation for jazz music, who were introduced to her for the first time.

Sponsored by the West Texas Jazz Society, the concert featured the internationally renown artist in a cabaret setting.

In addition to concert appearances in Europe, across the United States and on cruise lines, Ms. Jenkins has appeared in theatre, on television and film, and has several musical recordings to her credit.

Among those spotted in the crowd were Elizabeth Locker, Jim Cox, Alice Moxey, Jess Ann Thomason, Suzanne Martin, Sancy and Roy Harris and Max Howard.

FOUR MIDLAND WOMEN recently attended the state convention of the Texas Association of Hospital Auxiliaries at the Grand Kempenski Hotel in Dallas. They were Annelle (Mrs. Jim) Mack, TAHA treasurer; Verneta (Mrs. Dedric) Baxter, state finance committee chairman; Cinda (Mrs. Charles) Polk, who assisted with a workshop on gift shops, and Joan (Mrs. Bill) Henry, who conducted a workshop at the Dallas Market for hospital gift shop workers.

The conventiongoers enjoyed some outstanding speakers, among them author Liz Carpenter of Austin and Father Morgan Rowsome of St. John of the Cross Church at Orange Grove, both of whom discussed healing and humor, and Larry Mathis, CEO of Methodist Hospital in Houston, who spoke on "Tough Choices on the Health Care Horizon."

It was not "all work and no play" for the Midlanders. They managed to find time to do some shopping and to try out a couple of Dallas's premier restaurants.

WHEN CATHY CUNNINGHAM became the bride of Tony McCollum recently, she was wearing the gown worn by her mother, Jackie (Mrs. Mike) Cunningham, in her wedding 33 years ago.

The dress was originally designed by Cathy's grandmother, Juanita Garrett, and then was redesigned by Jackie as a gown of the '90s for her daughter. The rose flower adorning Cathy's hat had been Jackie's wedding headpiece. Pictures of both brides were displayed at the registry table at the June 12 wedding in Memorial Christian Church.

The bride's sister, Nancy Cunningham of Nashville, Tenn., was soloist for the wedding and performed an original song for the bride and groom at the reception in the church's Fellowship Hall.

Parties for the couple, who became engaged last Christmas, began in March with a miscellaneous shower at The Lakes Apartments Club Room. Hostesses were Kim (Mrs. Terry) Anderson and Carolyn (Mrs. Don) Deramus.

Cathy was honored at two parties in Houston, where she teaches. One was a "Stock the Pantry" Party given by Diane Spear and the other, a bachelorette party.

Back in Midland, she was feted with a "Teddys and Towels" Shower at the home of Carol (Mrs. John) Slyker. Also hosting were Ann (Mrs. Jim) Chilcoat, her daughter, Kathy Chilcoat, and Martha McTeer. Among those attending were several of the bride's former colleagues from Lamar Elementary School, where she taught before moving to Houston.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents, Louise and Dwayne McCollum of Greenwood, at Cattleman's Steak House. Along with childhood pictures of the bride and groom, decorations carried out a cruise theme.

A wedding day bridesmaids' brunch was held at the home of Gigi Carlisle, with Dorothy (Mrs. Roy) Blair as co-hostess.

After a week's Caribbean cruise, the newlyweds are now at home in Houston.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Landscaping can be made less expensive

By Deborah A. Benge

It's unfortunate but true that if you don't know much about landscaping, you can spend many needless dollars on the home landscape. Now don't get me wrong. Money spent on a landscape is money well spent because you reap great rewards from a well-planned, well-maintained landscape. But armed with a little basic information about home landscaping, you could be making wise decision about dollars spent on your home landscape.

Benge

Here's a few pointers on how you might save on some unnecessarily spent dollars and put them into some annual color, new tree, shredded bark mulch or some other item you've been wanting to invest in:

■ Purchasing the biggest trees is not always a wise investment when landscaping your home. Very large trees are often set back drastically during digging and transplanting, and it may take years to recover from the move.

■ On the other hand, a smaller tree will establish much quicker, grow at a faster rate and produce a nicer, healthier tree in a shorter period of time. Money saved by buying a smaller tree will give you money to spend on more trees or some other aspect of your landscape.

■ Purchasing high quality trees is a good investment. Although there is a time and place for fast growers, do not overlook the dependable Chinese pistache, cedar elm, lacebark elm, burr oak and golden rain tree. They will last longer and you will have fewer insect, disease and pruning headaches in the meantime.

■ Select plants well adapted to the Permian Basin. There are excellent choices available, including many interesting native varieties. Many of our home landscapes are made up of the same kinds of trees. Instead, branch out with some little-known but well adapted trees. Ask for the Recommended Landscape Plants for the Permian Basin list from the Midland or Ector County Extension offices.

■ When using chemicals, read and follow label directions carefully to avoid mistakes and save money. You can ruin quality plants by spraying before reading. Using the wrong pesticides incorrectly could result in the loss of one of your valuable landscape trees or, worse yet, cause the loss of one of your neighbor's trees. Using the wrong insecticide on your vegetable garden may make it unsafe for the dinner table.

■ Save money by making and using compost as a soil conditioner. Any home landscape has an out-of-the-way spot where composting could take place. This not only saves money spent on peat moss, but it gives you an easy way to dispose of grass clippings, young green weeds, kitchen peelings and leaves.

■ Beware of door-to-door tree trimmers who want to top your trees. Always use people with a proven record. Ask the tree trimmer for references and check them out. Remember there is no good reason for topping a tree — it causes large wounds, leaving trees vulnerable to insects and diseases and certainly decay.

■ Beware of "miracle" products that may or may not aid your landscape or garden. Every year dozens of deceptive products hit the market. If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is. Read labels carefully and use common sense with regard to unbelievable claims. Remember there is no substitute for good old fashioned horticultural practices.

■ Choose your fertilizer carefully. The three numbers on the bag (for example, 16-4-8 or 15-5-10) represent the three major plant nutrients. Without soil tests you may need to rely on fertilizer recommendations. Lawns and other areas of the landscape can use fertilizers with a 3-1-2 ratio fertilizer. If you have soil samples run you may find out that nitrogen is the only nutrient needed. Our soils are almost always high in potassium (the third number), so don't spend money on that nutrient. Other items you'll not want to spend money on is bone meal, lime, microbe-containing products — we don't need these.

■ Shop and compare. While many nursery and garden suppliers' prices are competitive for many products, prices do vary for nursery stock and plant materials. Check several nurseries before buying to be certain you are getting the best price for quality merchandise.

For more information call your county extension office.

Boarders can be of benefit to elderly

By Thom Marshall
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — The 85-year-old mother of a friend of mine shares her house with a 21-year-old college student from Japan, and it seems an ideal arrangement from several different points of view.

This woman lives in another city a good day's drive away from her son in Houston, so he is pleased she has someone in her home who can help look out for her. Someone to do certain little chores that he would be doing for his mother himself, if he lived close enough. Things like standing up on a chair to change a light bulb, maybe, or lifting something, or running an errand.

Having the student's company — someone to talk to and share some meals with — is worth a lot to the woman. There also is the matter of security. She can rest better knowing someone is there to help out if a crisis happened to come bumping along in the night.

AND THE STUDENT told my friend the arrangement is a vast improvement over living on campus for a number of reasons. He said his dorm room was small and cramped, the cafeteria food did not suit him, "and there I had no grandmother to look after me."

It is a temporary arrangement, of course. The student is working hard to master English and his other subjects and, when his schooling is done, he will move along. It may be a couple of years, at the most.

But, my friend said, however long it lasts, everyone concerned is pleased with this modern-day relationship.

And my friend's wife said that after she told her aunt, who also lives alone, about the arrangement, Auntie now is hoping to find a Japanese college student to share her home.

This could become a trend. All over the United States, elderly women are living alone in houses with plenty of spare room. Some would appreciate having college students board with them.

BUT RICE University sociology Professor Bill Martin said that while this type of relationship has its benefits, he also can see some potential problems.

"It leaves older people vulnerable to exploitation," he said. "And I'm sure it would happen."

He said that if a large enough number of people were involved, there doubtless would be a case of physical abuse, or someone getting flim-flammed out of her life's savings. Then other elderly women who might have wanted to try the arrangement would become too apprehensive.

Kay Ziemba of Homestay Houston, who finds host families for foreign students who come to study English in intensive programs, said she encountered one problem involving a telephone bill.

A Saudi Arabian student stayed in a home with a woman who is in her mid-70s and her 97-year-old mother. While there, he made long-distance calls to the tune of $3,000 and left without paying for them. Ziemba said she finally managed to exert enough pressure through international organizations to get the man's family to pay up, but it was a real hassle.

DESPITE THAT experience, Ziemba said the two women are among her most successful host families.

"The Japanese and Koreans really like staying with them," she said, "and I think it's partly because of the mother, who is quite amazing."

Overall, however, Ziemba said fewer than 10 percent of her host homes are provided by elderly women. And, by the way, she said she has found that many people, whatever their ages, live alone because they prefer it that way.

Martin said that all things considered, he can see housing suitable college students — whether domestic or foreign — with elderly women as a viable arrangement that might become more popular.

He said it might be something for university housing offices and for churches to look into.

HISTORIC: Site's 30th anniversary marked and opening roads and telegraph lines.

The late 1800s were a time of great changes in this country, and in only a few decades the Buffalo Soldiers' work on the frontier was done. In 1891, Fort Davis was abandoned by the Army again — this time for good.

Three months after the Army abandoned the fort, according to information from Fort Davis, the property reverted back to its owners, the James family of San Antonio, who hired Robert Fair, an ex-soldier, constable and occasional preacher, to be the property's first caretaker.

During the next 50 or so years, the fort's buildings were occupied by many residents — some who had come to the area in hopes of a better climate for respiratory ailments, some who were looking for land to raise cattle and crops, and, in the late 1920s, some who were even seeking a site for a new movie colony.

Through the years many individuals and organizations had many ideas for using the site, from a school to a resort to a summer camp. Through the efforts of many concerned people — including Barry Scobb and the Fort Davis Historical Society — the site became part of the National Park Service and part of the country's preservation of its past.

In 1961, the National Park Service took over administration of the site. Surveys were conducted to determine which buildings needed immediate attention to help stop their deterioration.

On July 4, 1963, Fort Davis was officially named a National Historic Site. According to information from Fort Davis, "It was on July 4, 1963, that the 'notice of designation' was published in the Federal Register. In the notice, Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall verified 'that approximately 447.36 acres of land had been acquired on behalf of the United States pursuant to the Act of September 8, 1961' (the act that authorized Fort Davis National Historic Site). In view of this, Udall designated 'such area as the Fort Davis National Historic Site to compromise all those lands ... conveyed to the United States by deed dated December 28, 1962.'"

Presently, the Friends of Fort Davis (a support group founded in 1982), the National Park Service, some of the descendants of the men who served at the fort a century ago, and other interested individuals are working to preserve and restore the site — and preserve some of West Texas' most cherished history.

Time, money and the state of the buildings makes the preservation of the fort a delicate and on-going effort. According to information from Fort Davis, "Through a continuing program of restoration, half of the more than 50 original structures have been saved." Those restored include the commanding officer's quarters, post commissary, lieutenant's quarters, enlisted men's barracks and the officers' kitchen/servants' quarters, which are restored and refurnished to the way they were in the 1880s. The post hospital and unmarried officers' quarters, which are not restored on the inside, and ruins and foundations of dozens of other buildings are also of historical significance on the site.

The preservation of the country's past — at places such as Fort Davis — is important to us as a people.

Isn't that why we celebrate the Fourth of July in the first place?

Fort Davis National Historic Site is located about 150 miles from Midland in the town of Fort Davis, about 40 miles south of Interstate 10. For more information about visiting the site, call (915) 426-3224 or write to Box 1456, Fort Davis, Texas 79734.

Attractiveness' effect studied

NEW YORK (AP) — Physically attractive employees may have a tougher time pleading hard luck when they make a mistake than unattractive workers do, a new study suggests.

Researchers asked 200 bank supervisors to judge an infraction of a no-smoking policy by hypothetical employees who had previously been judged attractive, unattractive or average.

The supervisors received a picture of each employee and a memo about the case. They were asked to pick from a number of reasons why the employee might have broken the rule.

For attractive employees, the supervisors chose bad luck only 9.5 percent of the time and lack of effort 88 percent. For unattractive employees, bad luck was cited 25 percent of the time, and lack of effort 69 percent.

The effect appeared regardless of the gender of the supervisor or the employee, said Comila Shahani, assistant psychology professor at Hofstra University in Hempstead, N.Y.

However, when it came to recommended punishment, attractive and unattractive employees were dealt with equally, she said. "I was reassured by that," she said.

Prior work had found that attractive people are perceived as having more freedom from external influence than less attractive people have, Shahani and co-author Dawn Plumitallo wrote in the study. The study was based on Plumitallo's doctoral dissertation, which was supervised by Shahani.

Shahani spoke in an interview before presenting the work in Chicago recently at the annual meeting of the American Psychological Society.

'Zappers' have 40-year history

N.Y. Times News Service

Were remote controls always so complicated? No, says the inventor of the first practical unit, Dr. Robert Adler.

Adler, 79, retired as vice president for research at the Zenith Electronics Corp. in Glenview, Ill., and is a technical consultant to Zenith. "People accuse me of creating the Couch Potato, and I say, 'You're right!' " Adler said. "Remote controls are just logical. Since we do not watch TV at arm's length, something to switch channels has always been desirable."

From the beginning of the television age, Zenith had pushed for remote controls because the company's founder, Eugene F. McDonald Jr., hated television commercials and wanted, in modern parlance, to zap them.

In the early 1950s, his engineers developed a wired remote control called Lazy Bones, but families kept complaining about tripping over the ungainly cable. A similarly ill-starred Zenith device called Flashmatic used a flashlight and four photo cells, one in each corner of the television cabinet. But ordinary sunlight set off the device, and viewers kept forgetting which corner meant what.

After Zenith engineers rejected the use of radio waves (they might set off a neighbor's set) as well as audible sound (household noise could be a problem), Adler suggested inaudible sound from rods, resembling tuning forks, that were struck by small hammers.

In 1956, Adler's ultrasonic remote, the Zenith Space Commander, made its debut and immediately became an industry sensation.

But variations of Adler's idea persisted until 1982, when infrared remote controls and electronic circuitry using fast and cheap computer chips gained dominance in the industry.

By the way: Adler didn't even get a raise for his invention.

Marriage seminar offers singles help finding a partner

By Carey Kinsolving
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Members of Kenwood Country Club in Bethesda, Md., may still be talking about a sight that greeted them on a Saturday morning. A smartly attired, single woman advertised her marital intentions with a button that read like a campaign slogan: "Say I Do In 92."

The occasion was a five-part seminar taught by author Blaine Smith entitled, "The Marriage Decision: A Seminar in Choosing a Marriage Partner — and Finding One."

Emily Post might call such sloganeering "shocking," but 43-year-old grandmother Janice Wilkerson calls it "pro-active."

That's what Smith calls it, too. In November, he taught the Ambassadors, the singles class at Fourth Presbyterian Church in Bethesda. He encouraged a pro-active approach to finding a marriage partner. Wilkerson took his advice to heart.

She threw a pro-active party. As her 80 guests arrived at the door, she pinned the button on them. "Immediately there were some dates that were set that evening," Wilkerson said. "Some relationships have resulted from that party."

Smith, an ordained Presbyterian minister and former pastor, said only a handful of churches in the country offer guidance on how to choose a marriage partner. "Why can't there be a matchmaker on the church staff?" Smith asked.

Singles fending for themselves in choosing a marriage partner is a modern phenomenon, he said. In past generations, parents often played an active role in finding a mate for their son or daughter, and in other cultures this custom still prevails. He commended the Jewish tradition of the "Yenta" — typically an elderly Jewish woman who specializes in matchmaking.

Smith devoted the first session to debunking shoddy thinking about finding a marriage partner. Christians often "spiritualize" in their marital search and harbor unrealistic expectations about the measure of God's guidance in finding a partner.

"Expecting God to guide in a mystical fashion leaves some Christians uneasy about taking any personal initiative in finding a marriage partner," Smith said.

Similar problems are caused by "idealizing." Unrealistic expectations about romantic love or the perfect mate can stymie potential in a good relationship.

Another roadblock is "catastrophizing" or "excessive worrying about the future." "Without some willingness to risk, indeed without a proper sense of adventure, you will never take the plunge into marriage," Smith said.

Smith continued his marital myth-breaking with a look at the first marriage as recorded in Genesis. The only reason given by God for bringing Eve to Adam, Smith said, was Adam's need for companionship.

"Nothing is said about Adam deserving a wife," Smith noted. "The Genesis record teaches that marriage, like salvation itself, is an unmerited gift from God."

Lauren Lane, 23, comes from a family in which her parents have been married for 30 years. For her, the seminar reinforced the importance of the husband's leadership role in marriage. But Lane added that men have responsibility in that role.

"The Bible talks about the man being the spiritual leader," Lane said. "I think that is something a lot of people have lost, and a lot of women maybe don't choose to respect their husbands. You can't have two leaders in a household. It's not going to work.

"I do have rights, but I believe God has a different role for me. I don't think that being submissive is being stupid or being like a robot, especially if my husband is following biblical principles and fulfilling his duty."

Lane said the seminar challenged her to think about areas of compatibility with a potential mate, which Smith discusses at length in his book, "Should I Get Married?" The area that impressed Lane most is the importance of friendship and compassion in seeking a mate.

By the last week of the seminar, the effectiveness of the pro-active approach had certainly been validated. Will Townshend, 45, took Smith's advice for those experiencing difficulty deciding whether to pop the question. He took a weekend off to seek God's will.

"I went back over all the compatibility issues, prayed about it and made my decision," Townshend said.

The 43-year-old pro-active grandmother will have to change her button to "I Said I Do In 92." Wilkerson and Townshend are planning a July wedding in Texas.

DEAR ABBY

Joyful reunion for birth mother, son includes whole family

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: On March 27, I read a letter in your column that really got my attention. It was from a birth mother expressing her feelings for the 23-year-old daughter she had given up at birth. What a coincidence! While reading that column, I was on my way to Prosser, Wash., to meet my birth son and his parents for the first time! The last time I saw him — 23 years ago — he was three days old.

Van Buren

That same morning, my son and his family had also read that column in their local newspaper.

What a wonderful reunion that was. We shared pictures, hugs, tears and stories. I will be eternally grateful to Kathy and Lloyd Waite for opening their hearts and their home to me and my family. If only all adoptive families could be so secure in their relationship with their adopted child that they are willing to share that child with his/her birth mother.

We have just begun our journey together, and if I could make a prediction based on last weekend, we are headed for some wonderful times in the future.

What a beautiful coincidence to have that column appear on that day. Thank you, Abby, from the bottom of my heart. — CAROL IN OREGON CITY, ORE.

DEAR CAROL: Don't thank me. That's what I'm here for.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, I clipped your column on forgiveness, and now I would like to tell you what it has meant to me.

As I write this letter, my husband of 18 years is living with his girlfriend and her children from a former marriage.

I endured the pain, but chose to be forgiving. In doing so, I was able to smell the fragrance of the violet that clung to the heel of the person who had crushed it.

The real victory is not that I was able to forgive those who had betrayed me, but I was finally able to forgive myself — for, you see, 20 years ago I was the "other woman" in a married man's life. — FORGIVEN IN ILLINOIS

DEAR FORGIVEN: What goes around, comes around?

DEAR ABBY: You were right to tell "North Texas Librarian" that parents who do their children's homework do them a serious disservice. And thanks for adding, "The teacher will not be fooled."

That reminded me of the time our 13-year-old son, Jimmy, had to write a report on a subject of his choosing. He chose the atomic bomb as his subject because his father was considered an expert in that field.

When Jimmy got his paper back, the teacher had written across the top, "A C-minus for you ... and an A-plus for your father." — NO NAME, PLEASE, LA JOLLA, CALIF.

NOT CONFIDENTIAL TO MY TWIN SISTER IN CHICAGO: HAPPY BIRTHDAY, AND LOVE FROM YOUR WOMBMATE IN CALIFORNIA!

To receive a collection of Abby's most memorable — and most frequently requested — poems and essays, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's "Keepers," P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

AT WIT'S END

Not every memory is 'a keeper'

By Erma Bombeck

I don't pretend to know how the human mind works. My theory is that brain capacity is limited. You can store just so many phone listings, addresses, credit card numbers, names of former classmates, allergies and the date and year you bought the sofa and you go on overload. You have to get rid of one statistic before you can add a new one.

Bombeck

Whenever anyone tries to tell me something, I weigh the odds. Is that something I will ever need to know again unless I am chosen to appear on "Jeopardy"? Can I use it to impress someone? Or in a week, will anyone care?

My husband seems to have a lot of useless information rattling around in his head. Things that when he works them into a conversation cause people to stare at him like he's overmedicated. He files away every fact he reads in his brain.

I, on the other hand, never remember the ages of our children. They're always changing anyway. I don't clutter up my mind with recipes, the dates of my surgeries, the names of people who spell my name with an "I."

There was a time when I stored the spelling of a lot of words. I've stopped doing that, too. What's the point of knowing how to spell "inauguration" when you only use it every four years?

I never record the addresses of our kids in ink in the Rolodex, let alone commit them to memory. They move too often and I'd go crazy reprogramming my brain.

I don't need to know my ring size, license numbers, the words to the old school fight song or how much pressure I use in my tires.

It's not important for me to retain how many years Burt and Loni were married or the names of all the Jacksons/Osmonds/Seven Dwarfs.

The point is you can't go around year after year stuffing information into your brain that you rarely use. That's why, from time to time I clean house. I get rid of all those excess dates and phone numbers. I may get halfway through a book before I realize I've already read it or watch a TV show that I have seen before, but in the long run I actually save a lot of time.

When you get right down to it, there are only three things worth remembering: your Social Security number, the formula for your hair dye and how many hours you were in labor with your children.

Erma Bombeck's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Pickwicks' production of

'Cinderella'

In the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical, "Cinderella," Prince Christopher Rupert Windemere Vladimir (Shaun Skipper) and Cinderella (Charlotte Martin) are instantly drawn to one another, above. "I know it belongs to her," the Prince (Skipper), right in top photo, tells his parents, Queen Maisie (Haley Dalgliesh) and the King (Justin Merritt). The musical will be presented at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., by the Pickwick Players.

Bedlam surrounds Pickwick rehearsal

"For the world is full of zanies and fools
Who don't believe in sensible rules
And won't believe what sensible people say.
And because these daft and dewy-eyed dopes
Keep building up impossible hopes,
Impossible things are happening every day!"

— "It's Possible" from "Cinderella"

Quiet-seeking sane and sensible folks who happened to wander into Theatre Midland's main stage area these days may most likely shake their heads and exit. The bedlam and confusion that goes with staging a musical production with around 40 youth ranging in age from 13 to 18 is only for the most hardy.

The scene inside Davis Theatre One one day last week looked somewhat like this: Couples waltzed on stage while groups of youth chattered around them and one foursome, sitting in front of the stage, played cards. Suddenly, out of the din came a disembodied voice requesting four benches. Four youth vanished from the stage.

Surprisingly, the voice had a body after all. It was Rene Brister Chambers, Midland Community Theatre's educational theater director and director for the Pickwick Players production of Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Cinderella," which opens on Theatre Midland's main stage Thursday.

Ms. Chambers wasn't alone. Another adult, choreographer Lisa Vaughn, was directing the waltzing couples.

The noise level intensified as Ms. Chambers asked all Pickwicks to take their places on stage.

When the lights go out this week on the Pickwick Players' production of Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Cinderella," the moment will be bittersweet for three members of the cast.

For Charlotte Martin, Cinderella; Justin Merritt, the King; and Kendra Alvey, the wicked Stepmother; "Cinderella," — which is being performed at Theatre Midland Thursday through Saturday — marks their last performances as members of the youth performing troupe. (Membership ends when a student graduates from high school.)

"I'd rather act than eat," said Miss Martin, who will attend Midland College this year and plans to major in theater and minor in business. "That's all there is to it. And I don't get very nervous until after I'm off stage."

Miss Martin, who is originally from Muleshoe, has been in drama since she was a child.

"For a long a time I've known that I wanted to do this," said Miss Martin, who hopes to become a director or even start her own youth performing troupe. "I think my first anything near acting was about fouth or fifth grade."

The daughter of Barbara and Darrell Martin, Miss Martin was homeschooled and received her diploma through Living Heritage Academy in Lewisville. She has two younger sisters, twins Cynthia and Cheryl, and an older brother, Jeremy. Cheryl also is a member of the Pickwick troupe.

For her, Cinderella is a dream role.

"It's lots of hard work and very time-consuming, but it's a dream role. Every little girl wants to be Cinderella at least once in her life, and I get to be her. I get to portray her on stage, and it's fun."

Miss Martin said the most difficult aspect of the role is "living up to everybody's expectations of Cinderella. They've seen the cartoon and they've seen the movie."

Like Miss Martin, Miss Alvey also plans to pursue a career in theater.

"I used to come see the plays when I was little and I told my mother — I guess I was like 3 and I saw 'Snoopy' — 'I'm going to be in Pickwicks someday,'" said Miss Alvey. "So I guess it was always like an obsession with me to be in Pickwicks."

Miss Alvey, the daughter of Jean and Larry Alvey, has been a Pickwick for 6½ years. She has a sister, Crystal, who also is a Pickwick. A graduate of Lee High School, Miss Alvey will attend Southwest Texas at San Marcus this year on a theater scholarship.

"I plan to get a master of fine arts degree. I would like to pursue a career in acting."

She hopes to do a bit of stage and film acting, but acknowledged that she has no experience in film.

Miss Martin, who is vice president of Pickwicks, prefers stage acting.

"I want to act on stage more than screen because I like playing for the audience more than a camera or someone who's not there."

Unlike Miss Alvey or Miss Martin, Merritt is not planning to pursue a career in acting.

"If I had my choice, I would like to write music for Broadway musicals," said Merritt, who will be attending Trinity University this fall where he will major in music composition. He plays the piano, French horn and guitar.

"I'm probably going to double major, but I am going to give music a chance no matter what."

A graduate of Midland High School, the 18-year-old is the son of Eddie Ray and Wayne Merrit. He has a younger

Pickwicks' production of 'Cinderella' begins Thursday

REHEARSAL: Days are noisy, long

(From 1G)

Suddenly, out of the din came a disembodied voice requesting four benches. Four youth vanished from the stage.

Surprisingly, the voice turned out to have a body after all. It was Rene Brister Chambers, Midland Community Theatre's educational theater director and director for the Pickwick Players production of Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Cinderella," which opens on Theatre Midland's main stage Thursday.

Ms. Chambers wasn't alone. Another adult, choreographer Lisa Vaughn, was directing the waltzing couples.

The noise level intensified as Ms. Chambers asked all Pickwicks to take their places on stage. Suddenly, the stage was alive with motion.

"This is a long act for you. You are on stage in freeze longer than action," Ms. Chambers said.

"Can we sit down?" came the request from someone on stage.

"Nope. You just stand up for a whole act and get tired. That's just part of it."

A few disgruntled sounds intermixed with the laughter and chatter which kept getting louder and louder.

"This is the waltz scene," Ms. Chambers said, projecting her voice more or less above the din. "Quiet. Remember, everybody is fascinated. This is beautiful."

The noise level remained almost the same.

" If I am not talking to you during the waltz, you are watching the waltz," Ms. Chambers added. "Raise your hands if you heard me."

Almost everyone raised their hands. And, when the music started, the chatter and laughter almost disappeared.

After running through the scene for around 45 minutes, rehearsal was dismissed for the day. It was, after all, 5 p.m. and the Pickwicks had been working since 9 a.m.

But, before they walked out the door, Ms. Chambers had some director's advice to give them.

"You are doing great. Remember you open in a week and a half. You don't have time to pull an over-nighter. If you get too tired, your voice will get hoarse. Please, no slumber parties this weekend. Take care of yourselves. See you at 9 in the morning. Not 9:30 or 10 a.m."

TROUPE: 3 actors to be taking their final bows

(From 1G)

sister, Morgan, and a younger brother, Reid, who is in Pickwicks.

A relative latecomer to the stage when compared with Miss Alvey and Miss Martin, Merrit has only been acting for two years.

"One day, my mom saw in the paper people were trying out for 'Fiddler on the Roof,'" Merritt said. "I tried out for it, and I got in as a dancer. I had so much fun doing it that I decided to keep trying out for the adult shows and also get into Pickwicks and try out for Pickwick shows."

Merrit has been in "Fiddler on the Roof," My Fair Lady," "A Few Good Men," "A Christmas Carol," as well as Pickwick productions.

"I like the chance to see what it feels like to be someone totally different than myself and to see how someone like that would interact with other people," said Merrit, who added he would "love to" act in community theater when he is older.

He said the role of the King is challenging.

"For me, it's very different than most of the parts I have had. I'm used to playing more serious roles. This King, he's a really nice guy, but kind of a fool. It's pretty much the queen who gets anything done and knows what's going on, so it's kind of a stretch for me doing the comedy thing."

Miss Alvey and Miss Martin also have performed in MCT productions, with Miss Alvey playing the role of Rosannah Deluce in the two-member cast of "Brilliant Traces" in her first MCT production.

"I think my favorite was 'Brilliant Traces,'" Miss Alvey said. "It was a lot of fun. It wasn't as hard as it would have been because Rene was directing it. The guy in it, John Bourke, was very supportive. Everybody helped me out a lot."

'It not only gives you a good reputation to be a Pickwick, but you also get the kind of training you will need later on in life if you are going to pursue a career in theater.'

— Kendra Alvey

The role was demanding.

"We didn't leave stage the whole play. I was sick several times during the run because so much energy went into it. It was emotionally demanding. By the end of each night, I was emotionally and physically exhausted. I think it was worth it, though."

She also is enjoying playing the wicked Stepmother.

"It's really fun," said Miss Alvey, who is president of Pickwicks. "It's a blast. Charlotte is a good friend of mine. I get to boss her around, and we get to fight. It's really fun."

Unlike many young actresses, Miss Alvey has no desire to play Cinderella and is playing the role she most "definitely" wanted.

She realizes that pursuing a career as an actress will not be easy.

All three Pickwicks feel that the youth performing troupe has given them invaluable experience.

"Pickwick is really unique in that it's the only youth theater company in the nation that's internationally as well as nationally known because we've been to two festivals and represented the United States," Miss Alvey said.

"It not only gives you a good reputation to be a Pickwick, but you also get the kind of training you will need later on in life if you are going to pursue a career in theater."

"Even with the adult shows, you don't really get a chance to learn the skills," Merritt said. "You get thrown into it. With Pickwicks, lots and lots of time is spent learning to act and not just doing the part you're in.

"It's given me a place to be when I am not in school, and it's given me a group of people to be with," he said.

Miss Alvey finds that being a Pickwick helps increase a person's self-confidence.

"It teaches you to deal with other people and to work with other people as a group. You learn to not only depend on other people, but to let them depend on you and come through for them."

All three find "Cinderella" a good choice for their closing Pickwick show.

"It's really a neat family show and one of the most solid musicals we've done in a long time," Miss Alvey said. "Personally, if I could pick a last play to be in, 'Cinderella' would be it. Everybody's been great, and I think it's the perfect farewell to MCT."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Make important financial decisions as a family. Form a partnership with someone who has a background that complements yours. A thrilling romance will last only if it has a solid foundation. Early in 1994, your high ideals draw you to someone special. Invest in your future by getting the best education you can afford. Next spring, prominent people are impressed by your dedication to duty. Investigate all job offers.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: jazzman Louis Armstrong, playwright Neil Simon, advice columnists Ann Landers and Abigail Van Buren.

ARIES (March 31-April 19): Baseball may be No. 1 on your priority list this weekend. If puzzled by the sudden breakdown of a relationship, take a closer look. There is more to life than making money.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Find a way to put across good ideas with your family. Better communication is the key to a happy day. Renew old ties. If you owe too much money, clamp down on spending.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A happy face or upbeat phone message will put you in a positive frame of mind. You have worked hard for your success, so enjoy it. Celebrate in a unique way later today.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Discovering new facts about a relationship makes you spring into action. Vary your work routine, but do not neglect paperwork. Travel only if you must.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A golden opportunity could appear from out of the blue. Be ready to take command in an emergency. Money may be interfering with a relationship. Do something constructive to help a friend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A sudden financial turn-around gives you an opportunity to launch a new project. Success comes when you team up with the right people. Adopt a different strategy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not waver once you have made an important decision. Loyal friends will be there if you need them. Tell someone who does not measure up to take a hike!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Get in touch with your deepest feelings. You deserve a partner who shares your emotional courage. Give up on a member of the opposite sex who is incapable of making a commitment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stop scattering your energies. Slow down and do more things for yourself. Children and parents find common ground for a serious discussion. A talented young person could change your life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Participating in athletics lifts your spirits today. Time spent nurturing romance will pay big dividends. Family support aids you in your pursuit of an important goal.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Take your friends' financial tips with a grain of salt. Evening hours feature fun and games. Be on your best behavior; an indiscretion could lead to embarrassment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A small thing could inspire you to work at getting a relationship back on track. You dislike exercise but recognize its importance. An acquaintanceship gradually warms up.

Opening lead: Three of ♡

Don't throw in the towel when the going gets tough. It's time to raise the flag and look for a way out of your predicament.

South's one-spade bid over the double was exactly the same as if there had been no double and, in the modern style, was a one-round force. West, trading on the vulnerability, made a valiant effort to keep the enemy at bay with a full-blooded preempt, but South was too good to be shut out of the auction. East felt four spades was a bit high and expressed that view forcibly.

Had West led a minor suit there would have been no tale to tell. Unfortunately, a heart lead on the auction was most attractive. Since West might have been leading from a four-card suit, East could not afford to insert the ten, instead rising with the ace and returning the six of hearts.

Declarer won the continuation and learned the bad news on crossing to dummy with the king of trumps. A heart was ruffed in the closed hand and West's queen was a welcome sight. Since East surely held both minor-suit kings, declarer scorned all finesses in favor of a far prettier line.

Dummy was entered with the ace of diamonds and a club was discarded on the jack of hearts. South returned to hand with a trump to the ace and then threw East on lead with a trump. East could take a high trump, but then was endplayed in the minor suits. A club away from the king would be won in hand with the queen; a low diamond would be run to the queen as declarer discarded a club; and the king of diamonds would be ruffed. Since the ace of clubs remained as an entry to the table, declarer would discard the remaining club loser on the queen of diamonds and the doubled game was home free.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Bar sets concert

Ron Piazza and the Mighty Flyers are to perform Saturday at The Bar, 606 W. Missouri Ave.

Piazza and his big-toned harmonica have been a force in West Coast blues circles since the early 1960s. He first recorded for ABC-/Paramount in 1967 as leader of the Dirty Blues band for two album releases.

He subsequently formed a double harmonica band with his mentor and harmonica legend, George "Harmonica" Smith, in 1969, recording two albums under the name Bacon Fat. Their musical lives were intertwined until Smith's death in 1984.

Through the years, Piazza has recorded more than a dozen solo and group albums and has worked with such blues legends as T-Bone Walker, Pee Wee Craton, Jimmy Rodgers, Shakey Jake and Big Mama Thornton.

Members of the Mighty Flyers are Miss Honey, keyboards; Alex Schultz, guitar; Bill Stuve, bass; and Jimi Bott, drums.

Doors open at The Bar at 6 p.m. Opening act will be Skeleton Crew.

■ Couple to perform

Rebecca Holden and Steve Culver are to perform at Midland Center, 105 N. Main St., at 7 p.m. July 16.

The Country Close Up event is sponsored by the Texas Highway Patrol Association. Tickets will be available at the door. Suggested donation is $12.50.

Ms. Holden is known for her television roles, including the evil nurse Elena on "General Hospital" and her co-starring role on "Knight Rider" as the professor's brainy assistant.

She has toured the country in support of her first country album, "Holden On."

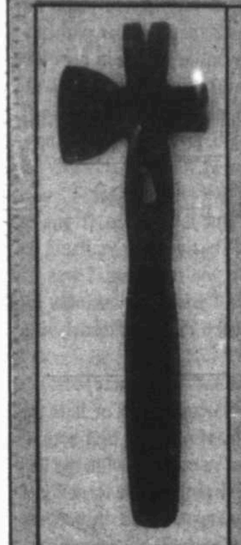
NUEVA VISTA ...a new generation

A Biweekly Bilingual Section / Una Sección Quincenal Bilingüe

Hablamos Claro



Puede Usted Identificar esta Herramienta?

En esta edición del artículo principal, nosotros le decimos acerca de la familia de Don Agustin Hernandez y su notable historia. Quizá ustedes, nuestros lectores, pueden agregar un renglón a esta historia.

Comienza con relatos, anticuados de una generación a la siguiente, del tesoro que Hernandez trajo con sigo mismo, hace 120 años. En el curso de la investigación dentro de la historia de la familia Hernandez, Nancy Ontiveros ha encontrado muchos de estos relatos . . . y una extraña herramienta.

"Y como, de todos modos, yo me compre este pequeño 'tesoro cazador', pero no he tomado el tiempo para ir y de veras buscar," dice Ontiveros, mientras ella detenía la herramienta el detector de metales lo hallo.

"Yo no se exactamente que es. Es alguna clase de herramienta. Yo la he enseñado a mucha gente que trabaja con implementos agrícolas, y ellos no han visto nada como esto. Yo se que es una muy antigua herramienta, desde los 1800's. Así es que yo estoy sujeta a esto. Tal vez alguien pueda ayudarme a identificarlo, diciéndome que clase de herramienta es actualmente."

La herramienta es aproximadamente 8 pies de largo y esta hecha de una sola pieza de fierro o acero. No trae señalado ningún logo o nombre de fabricante. Si usted tiene alguna idea como que es la herramienta y que clase de trabajo desarrolla, porque no nos escribe a nosotros aquí, a aquí, a NuevaVista? Nuestra dirección es 201 E. Straight Talk

Can you identify this tool?

In this issue's main article, we told you about the family of Don Augustin Hernandez, and their remarkable story. Perhaps you, our readers, can add a line to that story.

It begins with tales, passed from one generation to the next, of a treasure that Hernandez brought with him, 120 years ago. In the course of her research into the Hernandez family history, Nancy Ontiveros has encountered many of these tales . . . and one strange tool.

"I bought myself this little 'treasure hunter', but I haven't taken the time to go and really look," said Ontiveros, as she held up a tool the metal detector did locate. "I don't know exactly what it is. It is some kind of a tool. I've shown it to many people that work with farm implements, and they haven't seen anything like this. I know it's a very old implement, from the 1600's. So I'm holding onto it. Maybe somebody can help me identify it, say what kind of tool it actually is."

The tool is approximately 8' long, and is made of a single piece of iron or steel. It bears no logo or manufacturer's name. If you have an idea as to what the tool is, and what kind of jobs it performed, why not write to us here, at NuevaVista? Our address is 201 E. Illinois, Midland, Texas, 79701.

Una Contribución Hispana a la Historia de Pecos

Por Jeffrey McDonald

'Ellos establecieron la fundación ' Es una figura de lenguaje que es usado frecuentemente cuando se discute el impacto que individuos tienen sobre la creación, o el crecimiento, de algunos aspectos de la comunidad. Pero cuando usted discute la historia del Condado Reeves, usted encuentra que Don Agustin Hernandez literariamente estableció la fundación por Pecos y otras comunidades del Oeste de Tejas

"Hasta ahora, yo he podido investigar la historia de mi familia aquí, en el Condado Reeves, retrocediendo a los 1870's," dice Nancy Ontiveros, de Pecos, historiadora de la familia Hernandez. "El antepasado al que yo he retrocedido es mi 'tatarabuelo', y ese seria Agustin Hernandez y su esposa, Josefa Hernandez. "Ellos tuvieron seis hijos y ellos se instalaron aquí con sus seis hijos."

"Yo he dicho muchas historias orales con gente de edad que recuerdan haber oído de Agustin Hernandez, o que sus padres usualmente hablaban de el. Y segun todos y el actual trabajo que yo he sido capaz de reunir, el fue constructor. El construyo muchas casas en las áreas que ahora son conocidas como Balmorhea, Toyahvale, y Brogado. El también trabajo para Daniel Murphy y construyo el canal Murphy, que es muy conocido."

Adicionalmente de recolectar historias verbales, la investigación de Ontiveros también envuelve una gran cantidad de investigación por medio de las bibliotecas y los registros de la casa corte. Ella admite que esta pasión por la historia de su familia le sorprende, algunas veces.

"Usted tiene que retroceder, y leer una historia que es lo que estaba pasando en un cierto lugar en ese tiempo, el cual es muy interesante porque a mi nunca me gusto la historia," dice Ontiveros, quien es la Directora del Programa de Desarrollo y Servicios a la Comunidad por el Hospital del Condado Reeves, en Pecos. "Ahora, estoy tan fascinada, constantemente yo retrocedo, usted sabe, a empaparme de información."

Esta información puede venir de cualquier lugar. Una carta de una sobrina de Agustin Hernandez, por ejemplo, que estaba asistiendo a la escuela en Las Cruces, Nuevo México, es suplemento de un libro que dice de la historia del sur de Nuevo México y de las instituciones educacionales que estaban ahí. Luego están las historias que los Daltons, una notoria pandilla de bandidos, que tal vez encontraron refugio en los graneros del rancho de Hernandez, quienes son comparados con libros que investigaron los movimientos de la pandilla en el siglo diez y nueve.

Lo que ha salido, después de años de investigación, es la historia de la temprana presencia de los Hispanos en el Oeste de Tejas. Una historia que tal vez contradice muchos conceptos que la gente tiene acerca de la presencia de la naturaleza. Ontiveros compartió muchos de estos conceptos erróneos, hasta que su investigación revelo una muy diferente historia.

"Cuando yo pensaba de mi familia, antes yo comenzaba preguntando a mi abuela acerca de cosas, yo pensaba, 'Bueno, mi abuela nació en el Condado Reeves, todos los demás probablemente nacieron en México.' Yo siempre supuse que los Mexicanos no llegaron aquí hasta, usted sabe, recientemente," dice Ontiveros. "Un día, yo le pregunte a mi abuela, 'Bueno, donde usted nació?' Ella nació allí, en Brogado y su madre nació allí. Y yo pensé, 'Eso fue hace mucho tiempo atrás!'"

Otros conceptos erróneos incluyen a la educación y a la salud, de las primeras familias Hispanas en el Oeste de Tejas y el estado legal en la comunidad.

"Personalmente, esto a sido muy grato para mi, porque he encontrado que mi impresión de los Mexicanos de antaño, era absolutamente incorrecta. Yo he comprobado mi equivocación con mis propios estudios," dice Ontiveros. "Algunos de ellos fueron bien educados, alguno de ellos fueron

Augustin Hernandez Early Pecos builder and community leader.

It has made me come to think that there's no reason why anybody - Hispanic or otherwise, but particularly Hispanic, because that's what I am - is not able to go on and achieve, and do things!" Nancy Ontiveros

A Hispanic Contribution to Pecos History

By Jeffrey McDonald

'They laid the foundation.' It is a figure of speech that is often used when discussing the impact individuals had upon the creation, or the growth, of some aspect of the community. But when you discuss the history of Reeves County, you find that Don Augustin Hernandez literally laid the foundations for Pecos and other West Texas communities.

"So far, I've been able to trace my family history here, in Reeves County, back to the 1870's," said Nancy Ontiveros, of Pecos, a Hernandez family historian. "The ancestor that I have gone back to is my great-great-grandfather, and that would be Augustin Hernandez, and his wife, Josefa Hernández. They had six children, and they came over with their six children."

"I've done many oral histories with elderly people that remember having heard of Augustin Hernandez, or their parents used to speak of him. And according to everyone, and the actual paperwork that I have been able to gather, he was a builder. He built many homes in the area that is now known as Balmorhea, Toyahvale, Brogado, that area. He also worked for Daniel Murphy, and built Murphy's Canal, which is very well known."

In addition to collecting the oral histories, Ontiveros' research also involves a great deal of searching through libraries and courthouse records. She admits that this passion for her family's story surprises her, sometimes.

"You have to go back, and read up in history what was going on in certain areas at that time, which is very interesting because I never used to like history," said Ontiveros, who is Director of Program Development and Community Services for Reeves County Hospital, in Pecos. "Now, I'm so fascinated, I constantly go back, you know, to brush up on information."

That information may come from anywhere. A letter from a niece of Augustin Hernandez, for example, who was attending school in Las Cruces, New Mexico, is supplemented by a book that tells of the history of southern New Mexico, and the educational institutions that were there. Then there are the stories that the Daltons, a notorious gang of outlaws, may have found shelter in a barn on the Hernandez ranch, which are compared with books that trace the movements of the gang in the nineteenth century.

What has emerged, after years of research, is a story of the early Hispanic presence in West Texas. A story that may contradict many preconceptions that people have about the nature of the presence. Ontiveros herself shared many of these misconceptions, until her research revealed a very different story.

"When I used to think of my family, before I started questioning my grandmother about things, I thought, 'Well, my grandmother was born in Reeves County, everybody else was probably born in Mexico.' I always assumed that Mexicans didn't get here until, you know, just recently," said Ontiveros. "One day, I asked my grandmother, 'Well, where were you born?' She was born there, in Brogado, and her mother was born there. And I thought, 'That's a long time ago!'

Other misconceptions included the education, and the wealth, of Hispanic families in early West Texas, and their status in the community.

"Personally, this has been very gratifying to me, because I have found out that my impression of Mexicans in the olden days, was absolutely wrong. I have been proven wrong by my own studies," said Ontiveros. "Some of them were well-educated, some of them were good financial managers. Not all of them were indentured servants, not all of them were farm laborers struggling to survive."

But it is also a story that has had more than it's share of sadness. While enjoying great success and achievement, the family of Augustin Hernandez would also experience great loss.

"One son, Victoriano Hernandez, he died at the age of 85. He never married, he did not have children," recalled Ontiveros. "When he was about 20 years old, he disobeyed his father. His father had told him that, no, he could not go out and ride the horse that night. He wanted to go to a dance in Brogado, several miles away. And he disobeyed his father and rode into town anyway."

"And, as the story goes, it was in the early morning hours, he was riding home, and somehow lost control of his horse. He fell off and was injured. From that day on, he was left mentally incompetent and disabled, and had to be cared for, for the rest of his life, for 65 years. My grandmother says that everyone recalls talking about Victoriano, because they all cared for him."

Sickness was another serious threat in West Texas, in the nineteenth century, that touched the family of Augustin Hernandez.

"As I've been told stories about the different circumstances of death with these people, and as I've confirmed some of the information at Pecos Funeral Home, many of them died right around the same time," explained Ontiveros. "All of them say that there was, like, a fever, or a plague, and that many people died. Whole families would disappear."

"Augustin had six children, Isabel, Genoveva, Rafael, Mauro, Victoriano, and Guadalupe. Guadalupe and Genoveva, both daughters, died at the same time. Guadalupe had one daughter, and her daughter died at the same time, as well, just leaving the husband. He remarried and left the area. But they all referred 'the plague'. So I don't

No Easy Answers for Hispanic Preschoolers

By Jonathan J. Higuera

Children should enter kindergarten ready to learn. That's the current preachment in education circles. Now comes a federal study that says Hispanic preschoolers are less likely than other children to participate in early education programs — or to receive any nonparental child care.

Only 59 percent of Hispanic children participate in nonparental care or early education programs, the U.S. Department of Education has found, while 75 percent of black children and 69 percent of white children take advantage of such opportunities. The national average is 68 percent.

The report goes on to say that only 39 percent of Hispanic preschoolers attend a center-based program such as a day.care center or nursery school, contrasted with 58 percent of black children and 54 percent of white children.

Such disparities should send signals of alarm to Hispanic and bilingual education experts, right?

Not necessarily.

Lily Wong Fillmore, an early education professor at the University of California at Berkeley and national authority on language use, says the lower participation rate of Hispanic children in center-based programs may not necessarily be unhealthy, particularly if such programs do not offer services in the language the child speaks at home.

"You run the possibility of alienating children from their parents," she explains. "Parents who speak a little English may think it's wonderful that their kids are learning English, but it won't take long for them to figure out that's the only language they will speak."

No Hay Respuestas Fáciles Para los Alumnos Hispanos de Pre-Escolar

Por Jonathan J. Higuera

Los niños deberían entrar al kindergarten listos para aprender. Ese es el sermón actual en los círculos de la enseñanza.

Ahora llega un estudio federal que dice que los alumnos Hispanos de pre-escolar tienen menores probabilidades que otros niños de participar en los programas de enseñanza temprana — o de recibir cualquier atención infantil que no sea por parte de sus padres.

Solo el 59% de los niños Hispanos participan en programas de atención o enseñanza temprana que no sean dados por sus padres, segun ha determinado el Departamento de Instrucción Publica del gobierno federal, mientras que el 75% de los niños negros y el 69% de los niños blancos se aprovechan de dichas oportunidades. El promedio nacional es del 68%.

El informe continua diciendo que solo el 39% de los alumnos Hispanos de pre-escolar asisten a un programa basado en un centro tal como una guardaría infantil o escuela de crianza, contrastando con el 58% de los niños negros y el 54% de los niños blancos.

Tales disparidades deberian enviar señales de alarma a los expertos Hispanos y de la enseñanza bilingüe, ¿No es así?

No necesariamente.

Lily Wong Fillmore, profesora de enseñanza temprana en la Universidad de California, recinto de Berkeley, y autoridad nacional en materia del uso del idioma, dice que la tasa inferior de participación de los niños Hispanos en los programas basados en un centro puede no necesariamente ser insalubre, especialmente si dichos programas no ofrecen servicios en el idioma que los niños hablan en sus casas.

"Se corre el riesgo de enajenar a los niños de sus

"Pecos being so small, you had to be a Jack-of-all-trades. If you lost one job, you had to get another one. A working man's got to work!" Fred Dominquez, Pecos Businessman

Hispanic Business.... is Good Business

By Amarante Cordova

Owning and operating your own business, being your own boss. It has it's benefit, but it could also have it's headaches. Just ask Fred Dominguez, who owns, not one, not two, but three businesses that serve Pecos and Reeves County.

"I am a bondsman, a certified bail bondsman. I have this Greyhound agency. And I'm a CIA, a certified insecticide applicator," said Dominguez, who first went into business for himself in 1968, when he opened Pecos Pest Control.

"Well, to tell you the truth, I had a rival company, that came over to my house," recalled Dominguez. "I had roaches, and they couldn't get rid of them. So I went to school, learned how, came back, and set up business."

"I was so good, you know, my neighbors wanted it, and all that. And before you knew it, I had a business."

Ownership of the Greyhound Bus Lines agency in Pecos came four years later. Dominguez built upon his experience, and his knowledge of the business, to set it up, and to keep it, even as the corporation itself changed hands.

"The Greyhound agency? I used to work part-time for Greyhound. Trailways [another bus line] used to have a schedule that stopped at the Greyhound stations, so the passengers could have breakfast," said Dominguez. "And I've never met a stranger! I started talking to the drivers, and got to know them pretty well. Finally, one of them suggested, 'Hey, why don't you get your own agency?'"

And, heck, I was working for a dollar-and-a-quarter an hour. How in the world was I going to get an agency? So, the DSM, that's the district sales manager, he came over to talk to me and we set up shop over at the old Brandon Hotel. From there, we moved here, 202 West Third, in 1975. Greyhound bought us out in 1988."

Of his three businesses, Dominguez admits that the most challenging is certainly the pest control, which requires constant study, and updates on new developments in his field.

"We are required to have three CEU's, continuing education units, for every category that we are in, and I'm in three," explained Dominguez. "There's five categories. I do pest control, I do termite work, and I do lawn and ornamental, which is yards and trees. I don't do fumigation, and I don't do weed control."

Perhaps you've noticed that Dominguez operates a variety of businesses, each requiring it's own special knowledge and expertise. Dominguez has found that this is an important key to success in business.

"Well I started out shining shoes, during the war, and I was a pin-setter out at the air base. We had one, at one time, a training center for pilots," recalled Dominguez, who is a native of Pecos. "And I took care of the bowling alley, and I shined shoes, cleaned windows."

"Pecos being so small, you had to be a jack-of- all-trades. If you lost one job, you had to get another one, you know. A working man's got to work! So I have been a grocer, I have been a master printer, I have been an insurance salesman, I ran Western Auto here for a long time, and I've worked for Greyhound. This was all in my younger days!"

Not that his 'older' days are less busy. In addition to running his businesses, Dominguez finds the time to share his knowledge, and his experiences, with others who may want to follow in his footsteps, and go into business for themselves.

"Well, like I tell them on 'Career Day', if you have a job, and you're not happy, you can go to work for yourself - and you inherit all the headaches," said Dominguez. "But my advice, if you're going to go into business for yourself, do it! Do it while you're young. I was 35 years old when I went into business for myself. Had I been 25, it would have been easier."

"I've always had two or three jobs. It's the 'wanting to', and some of it is the 'having to'. But if you can find both of them, then you've come up with the formula. But there's nothing like work," said Fred Dominguez, certified insecticide applicator, certified bail bondsman, Greyhound agency operator, and hard-working citizen of Pecos, Texas.

Negocio Hispano... es Buen Negocio

Siendo dueño y operando su propio negocio, siendo su propio patrón. Tiene sus beneficios, pero también puede tener sus propios dolores de cabeza. Nomas pregúntele a Fred Dominguez, quien posee, no uno, ni dos, pero tres negocios que sirven a los Condados de Pecos y Reeves.

"Yo soy un fiador, un fiador de fianzas certificado. Yo tengo esta agencia Greyhound. Y yo soy un CIA, aplicador de insecticidas certificado," dice Dominguez, quien primeramente entro al mundo de los negocios por el mismo en 1968, cuando el abrió Pecos Pest Control.

"Bueno, para decir verdad, yo tuve una compañía de rival, que vino a mi casa," recuerda Dominguez. "Yo tenia cucarachas y ellos no pudieron exterminarlas. Entonces fui a la escuela, aprendí como, regrese, e instale el negocio."

"Yo fui tan bueno, usted sabe, mis vecinos lo querían y todo eso. Y cuando menos pensé, yo tenia un negocio."

Propietario de la agencia de la Línea de Autobuses Greyhound vino cuatro años mas tarde. Dominguez construyo sobre su experiencia y sus conocimientos de los negocios, para establecerlos y retenerlos, aun como la corporación misma cambiara de manos.

"¿La Agencia Greyhound? Yo trabaje para Greyhound. Trailways (otra línea de autobuses) acostumbraba tener un horario que paraba en las estaciones de Greyhound, entonces los pasajeros podía tomar su desayuno," dice Dominguez. "¡Y yo nunca conocí a un extraño! Yo comencé a platicar con los choferes, y empecé a conocerlos muy bien. Finalmente, uno de ellos me sugirió, 'Olles, ¿porque no pones tu propia agencia?'"

Y, porque no, yo estaba trabajando por un dólar y una peseta la hora. ¿Como le iba a hacer para instalar una agencia? Entonces, el DSM, que es el manejador de ventas del distrito, vino hacia mi para platicar y nosotros instalamos una oficina en el antiguo Hotel Brandon. Desde ahí, nos cambiamos hacia acá, 202 West Third, en 1975. Greyhound nos compro finalmente en 1988."

De sus tres negocios, Dominguez admite que el mas desafiante es seguramente el de control de plagas, el cual requiere de constante estudio, y actualización en nuevos desarrollos en su campo.

"Nosotros somos requeridos de tener tres CEUs, continuando unidades educacionales, por cada categoría que estamos y yo estoy en tres," explica Dominguez. "Ahí hay cinco categorías. Yo hago control de plagas, yo hago trabajo de termitas, y yo hago césped y ornamentales, los cuales son jardines y arboles. Yo no hago fumigaciones y tampoco hago control de maleza."

Tal vez usted a notado que Dominguez opera una variedad de negocios, que cada uno requiere de su propio conocimiento y experiencia especial. Dominguez a encontrado que esto es una llave importante para el éxito en el negocio.

"Bueno yo comencé dando grasa a los zapatos, durante la guerra y yo fui colocador de clavijas en la base aérea. Nosotros tuvimos una, en un tiempo, un centro de entrenamientos para pilotos," recuerda Dominguez, quien es nativo de Pecos. "Yo me encargue del boliche y daba grasa a los zapatos, limpiaba ventanas . ."

"Pecos siendo tan pequeño, usted tenia que ser un mil usos y hacerla de todo. Si usted perdía un trabajo, usted tenis que buscar otro, usted sabe. Un hombre trabajador tiene que trabajar! Así es que yo he sido tendero, he sido maestro de imprenta, he sido vendedor de seguros yo maneje Western Auto por mucho tiempo y trabaje para Greyhound. Esto fue todo en mis días de juventud!"

No quiere decir que sus días de 'edad madura' han sido menos ocupadas. Adicionalmente de manejar sus negocios, Dominguez encuentra tiempo para compartir sus conocimientos y sus experiencias, con otros que tal vez quieran seguir sus pasos, y penetrar en el mundo de los negocios por ellos mismos.

"Bueno, como les dije a ellos en el 'Día Carrera', si usted tiene un trabajo, y no esta contento, usted puede ir a trabajar para si mismo — y usted heredar los dolores de cabeza," dice Dominguez. "Pero mi consejo, si usted va a entrar al mundo de los negocios por usted mismo, hagalo! Hagalo mientras este joven. Yo tenia 35 años de edad cuando entre dentro de los negocios Yo solo. Si hubiera tenido 25, hubiera sido mas fácil."

"Yo siempre tuve dos o tres trábajos. Es el 'querer hacer' y algo de esto es el 'tener que'. Pero si usted puede encontrar las dos cosas, entonces usted a obtenido la formula. Pero no hay nada como el trabajo," dice Fred Dominguez, certificado como aplicador de insecticidas, certificado como fiador de fianzas, operador de la agencia Greyhound, y un duro trabajador ciudadano de Pecos, Texas.

buenos administradores financieros. No todos ellos fueron contratados sirvientes, no todos ellos fueron trabajadores campesinos que luchaban para sobrevivir "

Pero es también una historia que tiene mas que compartir sus tristezas. Mientras que disfrutan el gran éxito y la realización, la familia de Agustin Hernandez también experimento gran perdida.

"Un hijo, Victoriano Hernandez, el murió a la edad de 85. El nunca se caso, el nunca tuvo hijos," recuerda Ontiveros. "Cuando el tenia como 20 años de edad, el desobedeció a su padre. Su padre le dijo que, no, que no podía ir afuera y montar el caballo esa noche. El quería ir a un baile en Brogado, algunas millas lejos. Y el desobedeció a su padre y monto hacia el pueblo de todas maneras."

"Y, como la historia continua, fue en las tempranas horas de la mañana, que el montaba para la casa y de alguna manera perdió el control de su caballo. El tuvo una caída y se lastimo. Desde ese día, el fue dejado mentalmente incompetente e incapacitado y tuvo que ser atendido por, el resto de su vida, por 65 años. Mi abuela dice que todos recuerdan hablar acerca de Victoriano, porque todos ellos cuidaban de el."

Enfermedad fue otro serio problema en el Oeste de Tejas, en el siglo diez y nueve, que toco a la familia de Agustin Hernandez.

"Como a mi me han dicho las historias acerca de las diferentes circunstancias de las muertes de estas gentes y como yo he confirmado alguna de esta información en la Funeraria de Pecos, muchos de ellos murieron casi al mismo tiempo," explica Ontiveros. "Todos ellos dicen que allí había, como, una fiebre, o una peste, y que mucha gente moría. Familias enteras desaparecían "

"Agustin tenia seis hijos, Isabel, Genoveva, Rafael, Mauro, Victoriano, y Guadalupe. Guadalupe y Genoveva, las dos hijas, murieron al mismo tiempo Guadalupe tenia una hija, y su hija murió al mismo tiempo, también, dejando al esposo. El se volvió a casar y se fue del lugar pero todos ellos murieron de alguna cosa que fue referida como la peste'. Entonces yo no supe si eso fue la peste bubonica, o que clase de peste."

Don Agustin Hernandez, el mismo, murió el 11 de Enero de 1912. Un inventario de sus propiedades, condujeron al tiempo de su muerte, incluyendo a 2500 acres de tierra de rancho y 150 acres de tierra de irrigación, mas de 200 cabezas de ganado, mas caballos y mulas, toda la herramienta e implementos que son parte del éxito de un rancho, mas efectivo en un banco local — todo sumando un total de bienes valuados en $27,833.38 (que era una suma substanciosa en la primera parte del siglo veinte). Pero había otras muchas maneras en las cuales el y Josefa dejaron ricos y legaron a la gente del Oeste de Tejas, herencia que continua creciendo hasta estos días.

Ahí esta una herencia de una familia por ejemplo. Sus descendientes pueden ser encontrados en muchas prominentes familias, no nomas en Balmorhea y Pecos, pero en comunidades por todo el Oeste de Tejas. Entonces ahí esta la herencia de su trabajo, las casas y los proyectos que todavía se ven en el Condado Reeves.

Ahí esta la herencia de su fe y servicio a la comunidad, la tierra que el dono para la construcción de la Iglesia Católica Cristo Rey y la colección de santos que el y Josefa comisionaron por artesanos locales.

Pero tal vez lo mas importante de todo, es la herencia de orgullo que el dejo a su familia y a todos esos que vinieron a estudiar la historia del Oeste de Tejas.

"Como yo dije, yo actualmente tropiezo a través de todo esto, tanto como por accidente, y fue nomas haciendo preguntas," dice Ontiveros. "Pero yo nomas comencé a preguntar, yo tuve esta necesidad de saber. Yo también tuve la impresión básica que todos los Mexicanos eran pobres, y sin educación. Toda la información que yo descubrí, era realmente lo opuesto, cuando menos con mi familia."

"Pero teniendo la oportunidad de rastrear cosas anteriores de alguien que la gente respetaba tanto y que poseía tanto, y que era capaz de estar al cuidado por cosas y tener una impresión en la gente. Me a hecho pensar que no hay razón porque cualquier — Hispano o de otra manera, pero particularmente Hispano, porque eso es lo que soy — no es capaz de seguir y de lograr y hacer cosas!"

know if that was the bubonic plague, or what kind of plague."

Don Augustin Hernandez, himself, died on January 11th, 1912. An inventory of his property, conducted at the time of his death, included 2500 acres of ranch land and 150 acres of irrigated land, more than 200 head of cattle, plus horses and mules, all the tools and implements that are part of a successful ranch, plus cash in the local bank - all adding up to an estate valued at $27,883.38 (which was a substantial sum in the early part of the twentieth century). But there were many other ways in which he and Josefa left a rich and enduring legacy to the people of West Texas, a legacy that continues to grow to this day.

There is the legacy of family for example. His descendants can be found in many prominent families, not only in Balmorhea and Pecos, but in communities throughout west Texas. Then there is the legacy of his work, the homes and the projects that can still be seen in Reeves County.

There is the legacy of his faith and his service to the community, the land he donated for the construction of Christ the King Catholic Church, and the collection of santos he and Josefa commissioned from local artisans.

But perhaps most important of all, is the legacy of pride he has left for his family, and all those who come to study the history of West Texas.

"As I said, I actually stumbled across all of this, much by accident, and it was just by asking questions," said Ontiveros. "But once I started asking questions, I had this need to know. I also had the basic impression that all Mexicans were poor, and uneducated. All the information that I have found, it has been the opposite, at least with my family."

"But being able to trace things back to someone that people respected so much, and that owned so much, and was able to care for things, and made such an impression on people. It has made me come to think that there's no reason why anybody - Hispanic or otherwise, but particularly Hispanic, because that's what I am - is not able to go on and achieve, and do things!"

Comité '88 Hacen de la Educación Colegial una Realidad Para los Jovenes del Condado de Reeves

Por Amarante Cordova

Quien alguna vez dijo que el '13' era un numero de mala suerte, tendrá un tiempo muy difícil para convencer a las trece socias del Comité '88, una organización de Pecos que esta haciendo un sueno de la educación colegial en realidad, para los jovenes del Condado Reeves.

"La misión es para ayudar a los estudiantes de las escuelas secundarias para que continúen yendo al Colegio, para tener una educación," explica Socorro Rubio, quien es la Presidenta del Comité '88.

El nombre del grupo vino del año 1988, ese año iniciaron trece socias únicamente y dedicaron ellas solas la manera para ayudar económicamente a gente joven, para que continuara sus estudios de colegio.

Fue en aquel tiempo que se formo el grupo, que decidió limitar a las socias activas a trece damas, con nuevas socias viniendo para rellenar los lugares vacantes que dejaban las antiguas socias.

"Nosotras tenemos trece socias. Algunas de nosotras nos pudiéramos salir, por cambiarnos de ciudad," dice Berta Garcia, Vice Presidenta del Comité '88. "Por consiguiente, nosotras buscaríamos otra persona interesada para reemplazar a la que saliera "

Las socias vienen de una extensa variedad de antecedentes, aunque todas comparten el compromiso a la educación y las oportunidades que la educación provee.

"Nosotras tenemos a trece damas. Algunas de ellas, dos o tres, son solteras El resto de nosotras somos casadas y tenemos hijos," dice Garcia. "Dos damas son mujeres de negocios, y Socorro y yo amas de casa, y yo era anteriormente maestra. Como seis, yo diría, son maestras (educadoras) y una es enfermera."

"Nosotras estamos muy comprometidas para ayudar a estos estudiantes, y esto es nuestro único propósito. Nuestro único propósito es para dar becas escolares a el área, no solamente a los estudiantes de la escuela secundaria Pecos, pero a el área, como Balmorhea."

El Comité '88 saluda al Año Nuevo con un tradicional baile 'negro y blanco' y a hecho esto desde el mero principio. Procede del baile a beneficio, los fondos para las becas escolares y mas adelante se levantan fondos con actividades, como el concierto anual, cual esta en este momento en su tercer año.

Con el incremento de actividades a venido un incremento en las becas escolares, que están disponibles para los estudiantes de las escuelas secundarias en el Condado Reeves, para los que quieran ir a colegio. En 1989, el Comité '88 entrego dos becas escolares de $250.00 cada una. Esto a continuado creciendo durante los años y en 1992, El Comité '88 entrego veinte becas escolares, de $750.00 cada una, y cuatro becas escolares mas, de $500 00 cada una, a estudiantes en Pecos y Balmorhea.

Socias de la organización están también atentas del hecho que, como formas tradicionales de asistencia para estudiantes jovenes de colegio se hacen mas difíciles de obtener, los esfuerzos de grupos tal como El Comité '88 han venido a ser mas y mas importantes. Y ellas admiten el apoyo de la comunidad entera como un factor importante en hacer estos esfuerzos un éxito.

"Oh, es importante. Yo pienso que es la razón que, yo siento que nosotras somos exitosas. Porque todo el mundo son muy cooperativos," dice Garcia. "Nosotras vamos afuera y pedimos por una contribución y donacion y nosotras prosperamos cada año."

"Y yo pienso es por el apoyo de la comunidad, y no nomas en Pecos, pero en los pueblos de los alrededores. Y porque nosotras también traemos buena música a Pecos, usted sabe, los grupos Tejanos mas famosos. Nosotras estamos muy agradecidas a la comunidad por todo esto!"

Committee 88 Making a College Education a Reality for the Youth of Reeves County

By Amarante Cordova

Whoever said that '13' was an unlucky number, would have a hard time convincing the thirteen members of The Committee 88, a Pecos organization that is making the dream of a college education a reality for the youth of Reeves County.

"The mission is to help students in high school to go to college, to have an education," explained Socorro Rubio, who is President of The Committee 88.

The group's name comes from the year 1988, the year the thirteen initial members came together and dedicated themselves to finding a way to help young people with a financial need, to attend college.

It was at the time the group was formed, that it was decided to restrict the active membership to thirteen women, with new members coming in to fill vacancies as old members leave.

"We have thirteen members. Some of us will be leaving, like moving out of town," said Berta Garcia, Vice President of The Committee 88. "Therefore, we'll seek another interested person to replace them."

The members come from a wide variety of backgrounds, though all share a commitment to education, and the opportunities an education provides.

"We have thirteen ladies. Some of them, two or three, are single. The rest of us are married and have children," said Garcia. "Two ladies are businesswomen, and Socorro and I are housewives, and I'm a former teacher. About six, I'd say, are teachers, and one's a nurse."

We are all very committed to helping these students, and this is our only purpose. Our sole purpose is to give out scholarships to the area, not only Pecos High School seniors, but to the area, like Balmorhea."

The Committee 88 greets the New Year with a traditional 'black and white' dance, and has done so from the very beginning. Proceeds from the dance benefit their scholarship fund, and further fund-raising activities, such as their annual concert, which is now in it's third year.

With the increased activity has come an increase in the scholarships available to high school seniors in Reeves County, who wish to go on to college. In 1989, The Committee 88 awarded two scholarships of $250.00 each. That has continued to grow through the years, and in 1992, The Committee 88 awarded twenty scholarships, of $750.00 each, and four more scholarships, of $500.00 each, to students in Pecos and Balmorhea.

Members of the organization are also mindful of the fact that, as traditional forms of assistance for young college students become more difficult to obtain, the efforts of groups such as The Committee 88 become more and more important. Any they acknowledge the support of the entire community as an important factor in making those efforts successful.

"Oh, it's important. I think that's the reason I feel like we're successful. Because everybody's very cooperative," said Garcia. "We go out and ask for contributions, and donations, and we succeed every year."

"And I think it's because of the support of the community - and not only in Pecos, but the surrounding towns. And because we also bring good music to Pecos, you know, the top Tejano bands. We're very grateful, and very appreciative to the community for that!"

Grand Jury III:

Drug Awareness, a Big Concern in Small Communities

By Jeffrey McDonald

Editor's Note: This is the third in a series of articles dealing with the results of investigations into drug use in the schools, by special grand juries of Midland and Ector Counties. These articles will deal not only with the problems revealed by those investigations, but also with the solutions offered by schools, law enforcement agencies, and concerned citizens.

When we examine the problems that confront our community, we often regard the size of that community in relative terms. Many were surprised by the findings of two special grand jury investigations (the first in Ector County, in 1990, the second in Midland County, in 1993) into alcohol and drug use in the public schools. They thought that such problems as those revealed by the investigations were found only in the 'big city', where the population is measured in the hundreds-of-thousands, even millions.

But, from the perspective of West Texas, Odessa and Midland are the 'big' cities. With that in mind, are the problems confronting these communities, these big cities, found only there, and nowhere else? Are such problems found in the smaller towns?

Michael Barrandey, Coordinator of Drug Education for the Balmorhea Independent School District, in southern Reeves County, has found that, while drug use may be low among the youth of his community, drug awareness is certainly high.

"I think so. You know, in this area, we're kind of between Odessa and Mexico. I know that the traffic for drugs goes through here," said Barrandey. "It has an impact on them. cocaine, and all that stuff, is everywhere."

Barrandey believes that all communities, regardless of their size, share this. He also believes that in all communities — again, regardless of their size — it is a minority of the young people that actually use drugs. Just as the parents who don't take a more active role in raising, and teaching, their children, are in the minority.

"Now, it's just like a large city, where we're going to have a mixture. There's always going to be a few parents that really don't care a whole lot what their kids do," explained Barrandey. "those are the kids that usually end up with problems, in trouble, and in any city. Some parents don't know where their kids are at, and what time they get home and so forth."

"The biggest thing is, the skills of parenting have gone by the wayside. The values, and all, are not there — not the whole, but the few. But the think is, with one 'bad apple', the whole thing can just spread."

280 children were registered in grades kindergarten through twelfth, in the Balmorhea Independent School District, in 1992. A small school system in a small community, but also a very close one. This provides the school system with an advantage it may not share with it's larger counterparts.

"Well, one of the biggest advantages is, being a small town, you pretty well know who's doing drugs, and who's not, and what's going on," said Barrandey. "We're smaller, and we can pinpoint where we have some problems. So that's kind of an advantage for us, that we're able to get help to kids on a faster, more personal basis."

That same advantage applies when contacting parents, no matter what the problem might be.

"As an example, if I hear a kid has been hot-rodding around town, or gets into some kind of small problem, I can always go see the parents and say, 'Hey, I heard this, and I'm concerned about it,'" explained Barrandey. "And that gets results pretty quick. Because a lot of time, in the big cities, the parents never find out until it's too late."

Barrandey is proud of the efforts of Balmorhea, and it's school system, to educate their young people on the dangers of alcohol and drug abuse, to provide a sympathetic ear during times of crisis, when they may positive activities, to keep them off the streets, and out of trouble.

There is the Peer Assistance Leadership (PAL) Program, for example, which makes the students active participants, as they help their peers with tutoring and support.

"It's been a good program. We're going on our third year, this year, and it makes a difference," said Barrandey, who added that the PAL members are selected by both teachers and students. "They identified the students that were willing to help. In some programs, the kids that help should be straight-A students. Well, we have students that have a C-average, they don't participate in anything. But they have the personality. And they do have the respect and the trust of those kids. And that's what we need, the trust."

And like his students, Barrandey also takes an active role, and does what he can. "I pretty well contest drugs to the max. I do everything that I can," he said. "We have a little summer program, in the evenings, where we get kids into the gym, and play and so forth. Kind of keeps them off the streets a little bit. Gives them something to do. It's all anti-drug, anti-drinking. I've been doing it for eight years."

It's a commitment we must find in ourselves, and in all communities, regardless of size, if we want our children to grow up drug-free.

"I pretty well know the kids, and the families, the backgrounds. And myself, being Hispanic, coming from the same type of growing up, it gives me an insight into how kids are, and how you approach them, explained Barrandey. "You know, a lot of times, you'll see the wonders you can do with a kid, just by knowing how to communicate with them on their level. I try to treat them as individuals, as young adults. I mean, you treat them like a little kid, they're going to act like a little kid. But I'm pretty fortunate. I'm real happy with the kids we have here."

"It's a nice community, and I like to keep it as clean as possible!"

Gran Jurado III:

El Conocimiento de las Drogas, Una Gran Preocupación en las Comunidades Pequeñas

Por Jeffrey McDonald

Redactor Apunta: Esta es la tercera vez en serie de artículos negociando con los resultados de las investigaciones dentro de el uso de drogas en las escuelas, por un gran jurado de los condados de Midland y Ector. Estos artículos negocian no nomas con los problemas revelados por esas investigaciones, pero también con las soluciones ofrecidas por las escuelas, agencias de la ley y ciudadanos interesados.

Cuando nosotros examinamos los Problemas que confronta la comunidad, nosotros a menudo considerando el tamaño de esa comunidad en términos relativos. Muchas se sorprenden de las investigaciones encontradas por dos grandes jurados especiales (el Primero en el Condado Ector, en 1990, el segundo en el Condado de Midland, en 1993), en el uso de alcohol y drogas en las escuelas publicas. Ellos pensaban que tales problemas como esos revelados por las investigaciones eran encontrados únicamente en las 'grandes ciudades', donde la población es medida en cientos de miles, hasta en millones.

Pero, de la perspectiva del Oeste de Tejas, Odessa y Midland son las 'Grandes Ciudades'. Con eso en el pensamiento, los problemas son confrontados por estas comunidades, estas grandes ciudades, encontraron solamente eso, y en ninguna parte mas? Son tales problemas encontrados en las ciudades pequeñas?

Michael Barrandey, Coordinador de Educación de Drogas por el Distrito Independiente Escolar de Balmorhea, en el sur del Condado Reeves, a encontrado que, mientras que el uso de drogas tal vez sea bajo en los jovenes de su comunidad, conciencia sobre drogas es ciertamente alto.

"Yo pienso. Usted sabe, en este lugar, nosotros somos un poco entre Odessa y México. Yo se que el trafico de drogas pasa por aquí," dice Barrandey. Tiene un impacto en ellos. Cocaína, y todas esas cosas, esta en todos lados."

Barrandey cree que todas las comunidades, sin importar el tamaño, comparten esto. El también cree que en todas las comunidades — devuelta sin importar tamaño — es la minoría de la juventud que actualmente usa drogas. Solo como los padres que no toman mas un papel activo en criar y enseñar, a sus hijos, están en la minoría.

"Ahora es como una gran ciudad, donde nosotros vamos a tener una mezcla. Vamos a tener siempre algunos padres que realmente no les importa absolutamente nada lo que sus hijos hagan," explica Barrandey. Esos son los muchachos que usualmente acaban con problemas, en apuros, y en cualquier ciudad. Algunos padres no saben donde se encuentran sus hijos, y a que horas llegan a casa y así sucesivamente."

La gran cosa es que, las habilidades de ser padre se a ido por el camino. Los valores, y todo no están ahí — no los todos, pero si los pocos. Pero la cosa es que, con una 'manzana podrida' todo se propaga completamente."

280 niños fueron registrados en las escuelas en los grados de párvulos hasta el doce, en el Distrito Independiente Escolar de Balmorhea, en 1992. Un sistema en una escuela pequeña en una comunidad pequeña, pero también muy cercana. Esto provee el sistema escolar con una ventaja que tal vez no comparte con una contraparte de gran tamaño.

"Bueno una de las mas grandes ventajas son, ser un pueblo pequeño, usted sabe muy bien quien esta usando drogas, y quien no esta usando, y que esta pasando," dice Barrandey. "Nosotros somos mas pequeños y podemos apuntar donde tenemos problemas. Entonces esto es una clase de ventaja para nosotros, que nosotros tenemos la capacidad de conseguir ayuda para los muchachos mas rápidamente, y con bases mas personales."

Esta misma ventaja se aplica cuando contactando a los padres, no importando cual sea el problema.

"Como un ejemplo, si yo escucho que algún muchacho esta en peligro, o se mete dentro de algún pequeño problema, yo usualmente voy a ver a sus padres y les digo, 'Oigan, oí esto, y estoy preocupado por esto,'" explica Barrandey. "Y eso tiene resultados rápidamente. Porque muchas de las veces, en las grandes ciudades, los padres se dan cuenta cuando es demasiado tarde "

Barrandey esta orgulloso de los esfuerzos de Balmorhea y el sistema de las escuelas, para educar a la gente joven en los peligros del abuso del alcohol y drogas, para escucharlos durante tiempo de crisis, cuando ellos estén tal vez en riesgo, y para proveer a ellos con salud, actividades positivas, retenerlos fuera de las calles y fuera de problemas.

Ahí esta el Peer Assistance Leadership (PAL), Programa que por ejemplo, el cual hace que los estudiantes sean activos participantes, así como ayudan a sus parejas enseñando y apoyando.

"A sido un buen programa. Nosotros vamos en nuestro tercer año, este año, y hace la diferencia," dice Barrandey, quien añade que los socios de PAL son seleccionados por maestros y estudiantes. "Ellos identificaron a los alumnos que estaban dispuestos para ayudar. En algunos programas, los muchachos que ayudan tienen que ser alumnos estrictamente A. Bueno, nosotros tenemos alumnos que tienen promedios de C, ellos no participan en nada. Pero ellos tienen la personalidad. Y ellos tienen el respeto y la confianza de esos muchachos. Y esos es lo que necesitamos, la confianza."

Y como sus alumnos, Barrandey también toma un papel activo Y hace lo que el puede.

"Yo impugno las drogas a lo máximo. Yo hago todo lo que puedo," dice el. "Nosotros tenemos un pequeño programa en el verano, en las tardes, donde llevamos a los muchachos al gimnasio, y jugamos y así etcétera. Mas o menos como alejándolos de las calles un poquito. Dándoles algo que hacer. Todo esto es anti-drogas, anti-alcohol. Yo lo he estado haciendo por ocho años."

Es un compromiso que nosotros tenemos que encontrar en nosotros mismos, y en todas las comunidades, sin importar el tamaño, si queremos que nuestros hijos crezcan sanos y salvos de las drogas.

"Yo conozco muy bien a los muchachos y las familias, los antecedentes. Y yo mismo, siendo Hispano, viniendo de el mismo tipo de cultura, me da una comprensión de como los muchachos son y como uno puedo acercarse a ellos," explica Barrandey. "Usted sabe, muchas de las veces, usted ve las maravillas que puede hacer con los muchachos, únicamente sabiendo la manera de como comunicarse con ellos a su nivel. Yo los trato como personas jovenes adultas. Yo pienso que, usted los trata como pequeños niños, ellos van a actuar como pequeños chicos. Pero yo soy muy afortunado. Yo estoy muy contento de los muchachos que tenemos aquí."

"Es una comunidad muy agradable, y a mi me gustaría preservarla tan limpia como sea posible!"

U.S. Department of Education Awards W.T.S.S. $175,000 Grant

By The Two Thousand Times

A grant worth $175,000 the first year has been awarded by. the United States Department of Education to the West Texas State School ISD, Johnny B. Williams, WTSS Superintendent, reported this week.

The grant, to run from three to five years beginning July l, 1993, funds a program which will help WTSS students of limited English proficiency to improve skills in math and science.

Dr. Jerry Trevino, Principle, WTSS ISD, identified the program as A.I.M.S. (Applying Initiatives in Math and Science).

"A.I.M.S. will beam live math, science, and language programming from studios in San Antonio to students in Pyote classrooms. Teachers and students will interact, thanks to satellite technology", the Principle said.

In preparation, Trevino will join leaders of the TI-IN Network and educators from the Region Service Center, San Antonio, in developing what he calls "learning opportunities."

"The San Antonio-based TI-IN Network is a national leader in Distance Learning using satellite technology as a major component of A.I.M.S.," Trevino said.

"Our. experience with A.I.M.S. will have implications for providing instruction for remote, rural, and small school districts," he believes.

An earlier grant, awarded initially in 1988 and renewed annually for five years' brought over $1,000,000 to Bi-Lingual instruction at the Pyote campus of the Texas Youth Commission. Trevino will serve as Project Director of the newest Title 7 grant as he has the previous ones.

Dr. James Lockhart of the Office of Bi-Lingual Education and Minority Language Affairs for the United States Department of Education will continue as Program Officer and Dr. Jane Irons of the Texas Youth Commission, Austin, will continue to provide technical assistance support.

El WTSS Recibe una Beca de $175,000 dado por el Departamento de Educación de los E.E.

Una beca que vale $175,000 el primer año, fue dado por el Departamento de Educación de los Estados Unidos al Distrito Independiente Escolar de la Escuela del Estado del Oeste de Tejas, reporto Johnny B. Williams, el Superintendente de WTSS. ISD.

La beca, que va hacer valida por 3 a 5 años comenzando el primero de Julio, le provee fondos a un programa lo cual ayuda a estudiantes de WTSS con capacidad limitado de Ingles a mejorar sus destrezas en matemáticas y en las ciencias.

El Dr. Jerry Trevino, director del WTSS ISD, identifico el programa como A.I.M.S. (Aplicando iniciativas en matemáticas y las ciencias).

"A.I.M.S. mandara, en vivo, la programación de matemáticas, las ciencias, y lenguaje desde los estudios en Los Angeles a los estudiantes en los aulas de Pyote. Los maestros y estudiantes se pueden influirse, gracias al tecnológico de satélite," dijo el director.

En preparación, Trevino se encontrara con los líderes del TI-IN Network y educadores del Región Service Center, de San Antonio, en desarrollando lo que el le llama "oportunidades para conocimientos."

"El TI-IN Network basado en San Antonio es un líder nacional en Conocimientos de Lejos usando tecnológico de satélite como un componente mayor de A.I.M.S.," dijo Trevino.

"Nuestra experiencia con A.I.M.S. tendra implicaciones para proveer instrucción para distritos escolares pequeños, en lugares rurales lejanos," el cree.

Una beca de temprano, al principio en 1988 y renovado anualmente por 5 años, trajo mas que $1,000,000 a la instrucción bilingüe al campo de Texas Youth Commission en Pyote. Trevino serviría como Director de Proyecto de la nueva beca Titulo 7 como lo a sido por otros de antes.

El Dr. James Lockhart de la Oficina de la Educación Bilingüe y los Asuntos de Lenguaje Minoría de el departamento de la Educación de los Estados Unidos, continuara como Oficial del Programa y la Dr. Jane Irons de Texas Youth Commission, en Austin, continuara previendo apoyo de asistencia tecnológico.

padres," explica ella. "Los padres que hablan un poco de ingles pueden pensar que es maravilloso el que sus chicos estén aprendiendo el ingles, pero no se necesitara mucho tiempo para que ellos se den cuenta de que ese es el único idioma que hablaran."

Ella y otros partidarios del mantenimiento idiomatico en el hogar argumentan que los programas que enseñan a los niños en su idioma nativo dan resultados educativos mas sólidos a largo plazo.

"Nos preocupamos de que los padres no sean capaces de dar a sus hijos el apoyo diario que necesitan," explica Antonia Lopez, directora de enseñanza de The Foundation Center, un programa no lucrativo de guardaría infantil de California que enseña a los niños en su idioma nativo. "Esa clase de interrupción es horripilante."

Jim Lyons, director ejecutivo de la Asociación Nacional para la Enseñanza Bilingüe, atribuye las tasas bajas de participación Hispana encontradas por el estudio a la falta de programas bilingües.

"Para muchos padres y madres Hispanos, la idea de colocar a su hijo(a) de 3 o 4 años al cuidado de alguien que no pueda comunicarse con el (o ella) es inconcebible," dice ella. Lyons hace notar que ni siquiera Head Start, un programa federal para niños pre-escolares, continua ofreciendo el programa bilingüe vibrante que una vez brindo.

Gloria Rodriguez, directora ejecutiva de AVANCE, un grupo no lucrativo de San Antonio que ofrece apoyo familiar completo, especula que la falta de participación Hispana se debe a la falta de acceso.

"Podría ser la falta de transporte, del conocimiento de los servicios disponibles o de los fondos para pagar los servicios," dice ella. Cualquiera que sea la razón, ella mantiene que necesita haber mejor comunicación al exterior.

Ella hace énfasis en que, en muchos casos, los padres Hispanos pueden no sentirse cómodos con el ambiente del centro. "Si sus hijos hablan primordialmente español, ¿tiene el programa o servicio personal disponible para comunicarse con el (la) niño(a) o con los padres?

El estudio muestra que el tiempo promedio que un niño pasa semanalmente en los programas de enseñanza temprana o al cuidado de personas que no sean sus padres es de 19 horas :. 17 para los Hispanos, 18 para los blancos y 25 para los negros.

Aunque el estudio no entro a considerar la calidad del programa ni la capacidad idiomatica, ni trato de evaluar las razones para la falta de participación, si hallo que las familias que tienen ingresos y niveles de enseñanza mas elevados reciben mas atención complementaria y enseñanza de los programas basados en los centros.

"No es sorprendente el que los niños latinos estén faltos de representación para cualquier cosa que necesite de recursos adicionales," dice Lourdes Diaz-Soto, profesora de enseñanza para la niñez temprana en la Universidad Lehigh.

Una constante de todas las olas interminables de teorías sobre la reforma de la enseñanza es el concepto de que los padres son todavía los mejores maestros para los niños. Antes de pasar demasiado tiempo en debatir como otros deberian hacer el trabajo, podríamos ser juiciosos al invertir unos cuantos dólares mas de investigación en el modo de que podamos ayudar a los padres a hacer un trabajo mejor, en cualquier idioma que hablen, y asegurarnos de que nuestras escuelas estén preparadas para enseñar a todos los niños en cualquier idioma que traigan al aula de clase.

She and other home language maintenance advocates argue that programs that teach children in their native language result in stronger educational outcomes in the long run. "We worry about parents not being able to give their kids the day-to-day support they need," explains Antonia Lopez, education director of The Foundation Center, a nonprofit child care program in California that teaches children in their native language. "That kind of breakdown is horrific."

Jim Lyons, executive director of the National Association for Bilingual Education, attributes the low Hispanic participation rates found by the study on the lack of bilingual programs.

"For many Hispanic parents, the thought of placing their 3- or 4-year-old in the custody of someone who cannot communicate with them is unimaginable," he says. He notes that even Head Start, a federal preschool program, no longer offers the vibrant bilingual program it once did.

Gloria Rodriguez, who holds a doctorate degree in education, executive director of AVANCE, a San Antonio nonprofit group offering comorehensive family support, speculates that Hispanic nonparticipation results from lack of access.

"It could be lack of transportation, knowledge of available services or funds to pay for the services," she says. Whatever the cause, she maintains there needs to be better outreach.

Rodriguez stresses that in many instances, Hispanic parents may not feel comfortable with the center's environment. "If their children are primarily Spanish.speaking, does the program or service have personnel available to communicate with the child or parent?"

The survey shows the mean average time a child spends per week in early education programs or nonparental child care is 19 hours — 17 for Hispanics, 18 for whites and 25 for blacks.

While the study didn,t delve into program quality or language capability or try to assess reasons for lack of participation, it did find that households with higher income and education levels receive more supplemental care and schooling from center-based programs.

It's not surprising that Latino children are underrepresented for anything that requires additional resources," says Lourdes Diaz.Soto, an early childhood education professor at Lehigh University in Bethlehem, Pa. Constant through the endless waves of education reform theory is the concept that parents are still children's best teachers.

Before spending too much time debating how others should do the job, it might be wise to invest a few more research dollars on how we can help parents do a better job, in whatever language they speak, and make sure that our schools are prepared to educate all children in whatever language they bring to the classroom.

El Primer Bombero Voluntario Hispano de Pecos

Por Amarante Cordova

La siguiente vez que usted vea a Jesse Silvas yendo en el camino a toda prisa, no lo pare y pregunte, 'Hey, donde esta el fuego?'. Las probabilidades es que el exactamente es a donde vaya!

Seguramente, Silvas a estado a toda prisa desde Diciembre de 1975, cuando el se hizo el primer Hispano que se unió al Departamento de Bomberos Voluntarios de Pecos. Su presentación como bombero vino a través del desaparecido Vaughn Sandell, quien fue el dueño de Sandell's Wrecker Service, donde Silvas sigue trabajando.

"Bueno, mi patrón, el pregunto que si yo quería ser bombero, y yo dije si," recuerda Silvas. "Y el fue un bombero, si, el claro que lo fue."

Silvas puntualizo que los deberes y responsabilidades de un bombero, tal vez varían de un incendio al siguiente, dependiendo sobre el tipo de incendio que ellos sean llamados para apagar.

"Bueno, realmente, es para salvar a gente, usted sabe? Como el de una casa," el dice.

Pero mas común que eso, especialmente en la primavera y verano, cuando las temperaturas aumentan y el soplar de los vientos secando la tierra, es el incendio de las hierbas secas.

"Nosotros tenemos bastantes de estos," esta de acuerdo Silvas. "Como cuarenta al mes! Nosotros tuvimos doce en una semana, diez la siguiente semana."

"Nosotros tuvimos uno, déjeme ver, hace como tres semanas, pienso yo. Tomo casi todo el día. Fue incendio de zacate que tuvimos como a veinte millas de aquí, en la carretera 17."

En extremados casos, bomberos se tienen que quedar en el lugar de los hechos por algunos días y noches, hasta que el incendio este bajo control. Esto les paso a los Departamentos de Bomberos por todo el Oeste de Tejas, a principios de este año, cuando ellos fueron llamados para apagar incendios grandes en el Condado Brewster, cerca de Marathon y en las Montañas Davis. En cada caso, fueron días después de que regresaron los bomberos a sus casas, con sus familias, y a sus trabajos.

Pero segun con Silvas, apagando ese incendio — aunque tome una hora, un día, o una semana — trae una satisfacción muy especial y sentido de un logro real.

"Bueno, se siente muy bien," el dice. "Usted puso el incendio fuera de acción y usted a hecho un buen trabajo, y usted regresa a trabajar."

El rápidamente añade, sin embargo, el éxito de un voluntario depende del departamento de bomberos, en parte, hasta el apoyo que recibe de la comunidad. No solamente el apoyo activo proveido por esos, como Silvas, que actualmente es voluntario para apagar fuegos, pero también el apoyo emocional de parte de los miembros de la familia y el apoyo material de la comunidad entera. Solo el apoyo amable que el departamento de bomberos recibe del Condado de Pecos y Reeves.

"Si, nosotros hacemos," dice Silvas. "Yo pienso, hay mucha gente que ayuda. Ellas nos da realmente un buen apoyo "

Silvas admite que apagando incendios tienen sus momentos peligrosos, y eso viviendo con un beeper que se pueda prender en cualquier momento y llamarlo al incendio, le toma algún tiempo para que se acostumbren los dos, uno mismo y su esposa.

Pero el a continuado haciéndolo, porque es un modo para servir a la comunidad. Y eso es algo que tiene siempre dándole placer.

"A habido unos cuantos que han sido mas o menos peligrosos, usted sabe," el dice. "Pero, bueno, yo los disfruto. A mi me gusta, usted sabe?"

"There,s been a few that got kind of scary but, well, I enjoy it. I like it, you know?" Jesse Silvas, Pecos Volunteer Fire Department

Pecos First Hispanic Volunteer Fire Fighter

By Amarante Cordova

Thenext time you see Jesse Silvas going down the road in a big hurry, don't stop him and ask, 'Hey, where's the fire?' Chances are that's exactly where he's going!

In fact, Silvas has been in a hurry ever since December of 1975, when he became the first Hispanic to join the Pecos Volunteer Fire Department. His introduction to fire fighting came through the late Vaughn Sandell, who was owner of Sandell's Wrecker Service, of Pecos, where Silvas still works.

"Well, my boss, he asked if I wanted to be a fireman, and I said yes," recalled Silvas. "And he was a fireman, yes, he sure was."

Silvas pointed out that the duties and responsibilities of a fire fighter, may vary from one fire to the next, depending upon the type of fire they are called to suppress.

"Well, really, it's to save people, you know? Like from a house fire," he said.

But more common than that, especially in the spring and summer, when rising temperatures and gusting winds dry the land, is the grass fire.

"We got quite a few of them," agreed Silvas. "About forty a month! we had twelve one week, ten the next week."

"We had one, let me see, it's been about three weeks, I think. Took almost a whole day. It was a grass fire we had about twenty miles from here, on Highway 17."

In extreme cases, fire fighters may have to stay on the scene for several days and nights, until the fire is finally under control. This happened to fire departments throughout West Texas, earlier this year, when they were called to suppress large fires in Brewster County, near Marathon, and in the Davis Mountains. In both cases, it would be days before volunteer fire fighters were able to return to their homes, their families, and their jobs.

But according to Silvas, putting out that fire - whether it takes an hour, a day, or a week - brings a very special satisfaction, and a sense of real accomplishment.

"Well, it feels real good," he said. "You've put it out, and you've done a good job, and you come back to work."

He's quick to add, however, that the success of a volunteer fire department depends, in part, upon the support it receives from the community. Not just the active support provided by those, like Silvas, who volunteer to actually fight the fires, but also the emotional support from family members, and the material support of the entire community. Just the kind of support the fire department receives from Pecos, and Reeves County.

"Yes, we do," said Silvas. "I mean, there's a lot of people that help. They give us good support really."

Silvas admits that fighting fires does have it's scary moments, and that living with a beeper, that may go off at any time and summon him to a fire, takes some getting used to - by both himself and his wife.

But he has continued to do it, because it is a way to serve his community. And that is something that has always given him pleasure.

"There's been a few that got kind of scary, you know," he said. "But, well, I enjoy it. I like it, you know?"

Tomando un Paseo por los Condados de Pecos y Reeves

Tantas de las imágenes que el mundo asocia con Tejas, pueden ser encontradas en la porción Oeste de ese Estado Entonces no es una sorpresa que muchos de los intereses y de las industrias de Lone Star State pueden ser encontradas en Pecos, Balmorhea y por todo el Condado Reeves.

Ahora, mas de 12,000 gentes llaman a Pecos hogar, cerca de 16,000 por todo el condado. Aunque el pueblo original de Pecos se remonta hasta 1873, actividad humana va hacia atrás sobre muchos milenios, al tiempo cuando antiguo cazadores e individuos que vivían de las plantas y animales salvajes.

La agricultura es una de las industrias principales en esta área, con mas de 34,000 acres de tierra irrigable. Algodón, cebollas y chiles son especialmente importantes. Otras cosechas incluyen sandía, alfalfa, y nueces — cuales han aumentado de popularidad por todo Tejas en años recientes.

Pero tal vez la cosecha mas famosa que a venido del Condado Reeves es el Melón Dulce de Pecos, que a sido cultivado aquí por mas de un siglo. Nativos dicen que el sol y la tierra del área dieron a estos melones un muy especial sabor. Aficionados meloneros de Pecos incluyendo a los anteriores Presidentes de los Estados Unidos y nativos de Tejas — Dwight Eisenhower, y Lyndon Johnson. Un Festival Melonero anual es celebrado en Pecos, la primera semana de Agosto.

Sin sorprendernos, el hogar del "Primer Rodeo del Mundo" continua siendo el centro de la industria ganadera del Oeste de Tejas y a sido desde el siglo diez y nueve. Ganadería en el área incluye mas de 87,000 cabezas de ganado.

Todavía otra industria, una de las que a sido vital a los Condados de Pecos y Reeves desde el mero principio, es el ferrocarril. Pecos fue una de las series de comunidades que comenzaron como pueblos ferroviarios que crecieron al lado del ferrocarril que vincula la nación de Este a Oeste. Fue el ferrocarril Texas & Pacific que conectaba ranchos ganaderos del Oeste de Tejas a mercados por todo el país. Y los Melones de Pecos, se vendían a los coches - comedor de ferrocarriles en los comienzos del siglo veinte, rápidamente gano reconocimiento nacional. La región todavía es servida diariamente por la Union-Pacific, y ferrocarriles del Pecos Valley Southern.

Un crecimiento genuino en Tejas a sido el turismo. En realidad, sitios en el Lone Star State han sido algunos de los mas populares en la nación. Muchos visitantes del Oeste de Tejas han venido a Pecos, quien sirve como un cruce por la región.

Entre los lugares que ellos visitan es la comunidad de Balmorhea, en el Sur del Condado Reeves. La primavera natural a sido siempre un atractivo para los visitantes en el Oeste de Tejas y hoy día no es diferente. Además de ser una fuente valuable de aguas para irrigación, Sandía Creek a sido rebalsada para formar el Lago Balmorhea, el cual ofrece pesca, paseo en barco y recreación general. San Solomon Springs es ahora el sitio del parque Balmorhea State Cada día, 25 millones de galones de agua fluyen de esos manantiales dentro de la alberca del parque de 62,000 pies cuadrados, uno de los mas grandes del mundo.

Quizás la primer presentación a la región, es la gente y su historia, puede ser encontrada en El Museo del Oeste de Pecos, en el centro de Pecos. Una vez el Hotel Oriente, el museo y alrededor del parque tomaba a los visitantes hacia los tiempos pasados cuando el 'salvaje Oeste' era realmente salvaje y nos presentaba gente que se establecía en las tierras y construía sus hogares.

Claro que, esto es solamente una breve presentación de la gente y lugares del Condado Reeves. Ahí hay bastante mas que compartir y una invitación calurosa al Oeste de Tejas es extendida para todos, para visitar y tal vez, para quedarse. Para mas información acerca de las comunidades, sus gentes y sus actividades, usted puede llamar a la Cámara de Comercio de Pecos, al 445-2406 y a la Cámara de Comercio de Balmorhea, al 375-2307.

Taking A Tour of Pecos and Reeves County

So many of the images that the world associates with Texas, can be found in the western portion of that state. So it's not surprising that many of the interests and the industries of the Lone Star State can be found in Pecos, Balmorhea, and throughout Reeves County.

Today, more than 12,000 people call Pecos home, nearly 16,000 throughout the county. Although the original town of Pecos goes back to 1873, human activity actually goes back over many millenia, to the time when ancient hunters and gatherers lived off wild plants and animals.

Agriculture is one of the major industries of this area, with more than 34,000 acres of irrigated land. Cotton, onions, and bell peppers are especially important. Other crops include watermelons, alfalfa, and pecans - which have been gaining popularity throughout Texas in recent years.

But perhaps the most famous crop to come from Reeves County is the Pecos Sweet Cantaloupe, which has been cultivated here for more than a century. Natives say the sun and the soil of the area gave these melons a very special flavor. Fans of Pecos Cantaloupes have included former United States Presidents - and Texas natives - Dwight Eisenhower, and Lyndon Johnson. An annual Canteloupe Festival is held is held in Pecos, the first weekend of August.

Not surprisingly, the home of the "World's First Rodeo" continues to be the center of the West Texas cattle industry, and has been since the nineteenth century. Livestock in the area includes more than 87,000 head of cattle.

Still another industry, one that has been vital to Pecos and Reeves County from the very beginning, is the railroad. Pecos was one of a series of communities that began as railroad towns that grew alongside that rails that linked the nation east-to-west. It was the Texas & Pacific Railway that connected West Texas cattle ranches to markets throughout the country. And Pecos Cantaloupes, sold to dining cars of that railway in the early twentieth-century, soon gained national recognition. The region is still served daily by the Union-Pacific, and Pecos Valley Southern railroads.

A genuine growth industry in Texas has been tourism. In fact, sites in the Lone Star State are becoming some of the most popular in the nation. Many visitors to West Texas will come to Pecos, which serves as a crossroads for the region.

Among the places they will visit is the community of Balmorhea, in southern Reeves County. The natural springs have always been an attraction to travellers in West Texas, and today is no different. In addition to being a source of valuable irrigation water, Sandia Creek has been impounded to form Balmorhea Lake, which offers fishing, boating, and general recreation. San Solomon Springs is now the site of Balmorhea State Park. Each day, 25-million gallons of water flow from those springs into the park's 62,000-square-foot pool, one of the largest in the world.

Perhaps the best introduction to the region, it's people, and it's history, can be found at the West Of The Pecos Museum, in downtown Pecos. Once the Orient Hotel, the museum and surrounding park takes visitors back to a time when the 'wild west' was truly wild, and introduces us to the people who settled the land, and made it their home.

Of course, this is just a brief introduction to the the people and places of Reeves County. There's plenty more to share, and a warm West Texas invitation is extended to all, to visit and, perhaps, to stay. For more information about the communities, their people, and their activities, you can call the Pecos Chamber of Commerce, at 445-2406, and the Balmorhea Chamber of Commerce, at 375-2307.
