Free at last

David, a 12-year-old victim of severe combined immune deficiency who underwent a bone marrow transplant, is at last free of the plastic bubble in which he has spent his life. But is he free from fear and infection?

Boy bursts bubble

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON — David, a 12-year-old boy who has lived longer than anyone without immunity from disease, removed the seals from the germ-free plastic bubble which had protected him since birth, crawled into the dirty world and kissed his mother for the first time.

His first request was for a drink of Coca-Cola, which he'd never tasted, his mother said.

But doctors at Texas Children's Hospital still don't know whether an experimental bone marrow transplant performed more than three months ago will help David develop the disease-fighting cells he needs to survive.

David, whose last name remains a secret to protect his privacy, was taken out of his "bubble" home Tuesday because doctors feared he would become dehydrated from recurring fever, diarrhea and vomiting he has suffered since the transplant, said spokeswoman Claire Bassett. He will never return to the bubble now that he has been contaminated by the outside world, she said.

Until Tuesday, he had never touched another human. After helping doctors remove the protective seals and emerging from the bubble, he kissed his mother and touched his father and 15-year-old sister, Katherine, said spokeswoman Susannah Griffin.

"His voice sounds different outside the bubble," Katherine said.

David's mother said his hair was much thicker than she imagined, Ms. Griffin said. David also was given the Coke he asked for.

"They were elated and very optimistic. I'm sure it is overwhelming to be able to touch your son for the first time in 12 years," the spokeswoman said.

David is receiving powerful doses of antibiotics to prevent infection, and fluids are being replenished intravenously, Ms. Bassett said. She said his condition has improved.

"He's better today (Wednesday) than he was yesterday," she said.

David is the world's oldest survivor of severe combined immune deficiency. Pre-natal tests showed that he had the same rare genetic disorder that killed an older brother, so doctors were prepared to treat him even before he entered the world.

He was born by Caesarean section and was immediately put in a sterile environment, a giant plastic bubble that enclosed a portion of the family home. He also had a portable bubble to use when being taken to and from the hospital.

Everything touched by other humans — food, clothing, toys, book — had to be sterilized by chemicals or heat and passed to him through a double airlock. Even a common cold could have been fatal.

Marines await move to ships off Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Opposition militiamen and Lebanese soldiers traded shots across the green line dividing east and west Beirut today, but order was restored in the Moslem, western sector of the city.

The 1,400 U.S. Marines at Beirut airport, buoyed by President Reagan's announcement earlier this week that they will gradually be redeployed to American ships offshore, remained at their posts.

"We're hanging in here, awaiting orders," Marine spokesman Maj. Dennis Brooks said.

The 115-man British contingent in the multinational force was transferred from its suburban Beirut base to a Royal Navy ship off the coast.

Italy ordered a gradual withdrawal of its 1,400 troops assigned to the multinational force, while the 1,240 French soldiers in Lebanon dug in at their positions and halted patrols of their area.

President Amin Gemayel maintained public silence, as he has since the latest flareup in the Lebanese civil war began last week. The fighting culminated Monday with the seizure of west Beirut by Druse and Shiite Moslem rebels.

The Canadian government reported in Ottawa that its ambassador to Lebanon had been confronted by two gunmen at his Beirut apartment on Wednesday, but was not injured. It said a two-way radio was takn from Ambassasdor David Jackson and an identity card from his driver.

Pope John Paul II spoke by telephone with Gemayel for about 20 minutes Wedsnesday night in an effort to calm tensions in Lebanon, a Lebanese government official said.

The official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said the pope also called King Fahd of Saudi Arabia, the secretary general of the Arab League, Chedli Klibi, and the secretary general of the Islamic League, Habib Chatti.

In Beirut, militiamen obeyed Shiite leader Nabih Berri's order to stay off the streets and allow pro-Shiite Lebanese soldiers and police take over security.Nearly all groceries and pharmarcies were open, and the streets were full of civilians restocking after four days of turmoil.

Sporadic small arms and shell fire was heard all along the green line, the belt that divided Beirut from the 1975-76 civil war until after the 1982 Israeli invasion of Lebanon.

U.S. Navy jets flew reconnaissance runs over the capital and neighboring hills at daybreak, apparently to survey damage from Wednesday's shelling — the heaviest American naval bombardment of targets in Lebanon — Beirut radio stations said.

A Pentagon spokesman in Washington said the battleship New Jersey and destroyer Caron hurled more than 550 shells into the mountains on Wednesday. A Marine spokesman here said at least some of the fire was in support of and at the request of the Lebanese army.

Druse leader Walid Jumblatt threatened retaliation for American naval bombardment of Lebanon's central mountains, where many of the Druse live.

A spokesman for Jumblatt's Progressive Socialist Party said he protested to the U.S. ambassador's office in Damascus, Syria, about the "savage bombardment ... without any motive" of areas in Lebanon's mountains.

Probe of bombing complete

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon has closed its investigation of the Oct. 23 suicide attack on Marine headquarters in Beirut without strong criticism of any military commanders, although some officers will receive mild disciplinary letters.

"Non-punitive letters of instruction" will go to an unspecified number of officers whose names won't be made public because of the federal Privacy Act, Navy Secretary John Lehman said in a statement issued Wednesday.

A special Defense Department commission that investigated the attack issued a report on Dec. 28 that singled out two Marine officers — Col. Timothy Geraghty and Lt. Col. Larry Gerlach.

Geraghty commanded the Marine unit which was bombed and Gerlach was its battalion landing team commander. A total of 241 U.S. servicemen died in the massacre.

No officers in the higher levels of the command chain will be punished, according to the Pentagon statement issued Wednesday evening. The earlier commission report had faulted the entire chain of command in addition to singling out the two Marines.

The Pentagon statement also promised to study ways to better protect troops against terrorists, improve intelligence and review medical care. All three steps also had been urged by the commission.

The non-punitive letters are among the mildest options open to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger after President Reagan ruled out legal action Dec. 27.

"I do not believe...men who have already suffered quite enough should be punished for not fully" being aware of the threat from terrorists, Reagan said.

The letters will not remain permanently in the career files of the men who receive them, said Pentagon officials who spoke only on condition they remain anonymous. Stern disciplinary letters could have damaged, or ended, the careers of their recipients.

The October attack prompted widespread calls for withdrawal of the Marines from the Beirut airport, where they were part of a multinational peacekeeping force to support the Lebanese government. A phased withdrawal of the Marines was announced Tuesday by Reagan.

The earlier commission, headed by retired Adm. Robert L.J. Long, had strongly criticized the entire U.S. chain of command, which it said "shares in the responsibility" for security lapses that it said opened the way for the attack.

The Pentagon statement said Weinberger ordered Lehman "to issue appropriate administrative letters to bring the conclusions of the commission to the attention of the commanders" responsible for U.S. servicemen.

In its statement, the Pentagon said Weinberger concluded that the Long commission's criticism of the command chain "does not represent a determination that specific commanders ... were negligent in their duties."

Instead, Weinberger ordered commanders "to ensure that lessons learned from this experience will be used to protect better our service members in the future."

Congressmen still fear escalation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite President Reagan's decision to move the U.S. Marines from Beirut to Navy ships offshore, congressional skeptics, many of them Republicans, believe there is still a risk of deeper American involvement in Lebanon.

"I hope that Congress and the American people have not been lulled into complacency by the relief we all feel today," said Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore.

"The risk of direct superpower confrontation remains dangerously high," he said.

And Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said, "the situation is still very fluid and very dangerous."

Because of those fears, there is a possibility that Reagan may face another congressional battle on a War Powers Resolution testing his authority to use American military forces without approval from Capitol Hill.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger were expected to be questioned about that during separate appearances today before the House Foreign Affairs panel.

Last September, Congress approved a resolution giving Reagan authority to keep the Marines in Lebanon through April 1985, but requiring additional approval for any wider U.S. military role.

In announcing the gradual withdrawal of the troops on Tuesday, Reagan also disclosed that military commanders were given new authority to unleash American warships and fighter planes to respond to attacks against the forces of Lebanese President Amin Gemayel.

Democratic House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said Wednesday that raids by the U.S. 6th Fleet against Moslem religious factions were not covered by the original War Powers Resolution.

Recession warnings follow budget forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recession warnings are suddenly being sounded by the government's top economic officials, scarcely a week after President Reagan presented his new budget forecasting years of prosperity.

No imminent dangers, the officials said in congressional testimony on Wednesday. But their talk of deficits and a new national downturn was a far cry from the words of revival the administration had been emphasizing only days earlier.

The new talk, coupled with renewed strife in Lebanon, was scary enough to wrench the stock market to its steepest dive in 15 months.

The day's first alarm came from Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker, who told the Senate Banking Committee that failing to reduce government red ink from the $180 billion or more a year forecast by the administration was like playing "Russian roulette."

"You are talking about further pressure on interest rates that could eventually produce a new recession," he said.

Then Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, a staunch defender of the president's new program, told the Senate Appropriations Committee that if the deficits stayed high and proper monetary and fiscal policies were not followed, he could foresee the "possibility of our slipping back into recession again in the United States."

That from the man who last week was taking chief White House economist Martin Feldstein to task for being too negative about the president's budget and the economic situation.

In other statements and developments, none very encouraging:

—Feldstein himself, appearing with Regan, didn't use the word "recession" or predict a return of the 1981-82 downturn n which national output sank and unemployment soared to the highest level in four decades. But he did say "there is clearly a risk of harm if something isn't done" to reduce the deficits.

—Budget Director David Stockman, no more cheerful than his colleagues, said, "It's pretty clear to everybody here as to the diagnosis." He added, "I hope that in our talks of collapse we do not get overly pessimistic about what we can do if we put our minds to it."

Midland's sales tax rebate picture improving

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

The checks may have looked smaller but the real impact was written between the lines. Sales tax rebates for December were smaller than the previous year's but higher than the low point in July.

But State Comptroller Bob Bullock noted the checks couldn't be compared with those from the same time last year because of a change in reporting procedures. Businesses which had been sending in their sales tax once a quarter now are required to do it once a month. Therefore, firms which would have held three months of sales taxes until December only sent in that one month's.

Sales taxes for December are collected in January and the cities' one-cent tax is mailed back in February.

Midland's check was for $1,001,890.15, compared to $1,226,367.81 for the same month last year.

For the year to date, which includes checks mailed in January and February, Midland's sales tax rebates total $1,422,800.20, a 10.63 percent drop from last year's $1,592,003.18.

Odessa encountered the same problem as Midland with its December sales amounting to a rebate check of $929,294.81. Last year the check was for $1,296,525.78. For the year to date that city has received $1,398,563, a 17 percent drop from last year's $1,685,864.

Pleasant weekend weather forecast for West Texas

From Staff and Wire Reports

A pleasant weekend seems to be shaping up for West Texas, according to the National Weather Service.

Partly cloudy skies should reign during the period as afternoon highs may reach the mid 60s and even the 70 degree mark.

Tonight, meanwhile, should see a low in the mid 30s with southerly winds 5-10 miles per hour. On Friday, the NWS expects a high in the middle 70s and southerly winds 5-15 miles per hour.

The high Wednesday of 66 was 14 degrees off the record for the date set in 1963, while the low of 35 was mild in comparison with the frigid 12 of 1936.

No precipitation is forecast. The month's total remains at 0.00 inch and the year's at 0.41 inch.

STATE

Light rain and drizzle dampened portions of South, South Central and North Central Texas before dawn today as heavy fog descended across the middle of the state.

The haze was formed by a combination of warm, moist air from the Gulf of Mexico and an area of high pressure that moved into Northwest Texas.

A thick veil of low clouds covered the eastern half of the state, while mostly clear skies were the rule over West Texas. Fair to partly cloudy skies were noted over the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Pre-dawn temperatures dropped in the upper 20s across the High Plains and the Trans Pecos, while readings in the lower to middle 50s were the rule across the rest of Texas.

Fur Rondy still doing same job

By HAL SPENCER
Associated Press Writer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — It began in 1936 when this city was a small cluster of people huddled a snowball's throw from Cook Inlet. The purpose was to combat the cabin fever that visits the north country during the long dark days of winter.

And through the petroleum-fueled growth of what is now Alaska's biggest city, the Anchorage Fur Rendezvous has survived, a carnival that features everything from snowshoe softball to an Eskimo blanket-toss and, appropriately, a fur auction.

However big a business the 10-day event becomes, "it's still an antidote for cabin fever," says Steve Smith, a lawyer who with his wife and two children looks forward to the "carnival atmosphere."

"Fur Rondy," as it is affectionately called, begins Friday and runs through Feb. 19. Its centerpiece is a two-day auction of an estimated $60,000 to $80,000 worth of furs from Alaska, Canada and states as far away as Minnesota.

The celebration takes its name from the days when fur trappers roamed America's frontiers, making rendezvous at prearranged locations to sell their furs and to forget for a while the hard, lonely months in the wilds.

Today the auction draws professional buyers and a slew of tourists from New York, California and others of the lower 48 states. They come to buy the pelts of beaver, wolves, bears, caribou, woverines, otters, foxes, coyotes and other animals, said Jim Hess, who with his father, Andy, has conducted the Rondy auctions for the past 24 years.

"It's a big business now. The first year we did it, we made $50," said Hess. This year, he said, the auction will be worth thousands to the family, which gets a percentage of the sales.

Hess and his sisters, Melinda Dewey and Karen Parks, were busy this week sorting and tagging 8,000 pelts in a midtown warehouse.

The pelts are worth anywhere from $10 for a beaver skin to $1,000 for a bear hide, and the buyer should beware because there is no guarantee of getting a quality skin. "It helps to know what you're doing," he said.

Some of the events in Fur Rondy, which draws bumper-to-bumper traffic to the already crowded downtown in this city of 260,000, bear little resemblance to the celebrations of old.

There are tennis and racquetball tournaments, reflecting the city's growing population of young urban professionals.

Heavy snow this month has paved the way for three days of dog sled races through the streets of downtown Anchorage.

Family fights for young man's life; Doctor says death only delayed

LIBERTYVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Alan Supergan's doctor does not believe he will recover and that his death is only delayed. His sister believes that what Alan has accomplished so far is impossible and that God is responsible for his present state.

Alan Supergan

Despite the gray forecast surrounding Supergan's life, his family is hoping for a miracle.

Supergan, 20, a young traffic accident victim who was clinically dead for more than nine hours, was responding to stimuli, coughing and swallowing, his family said Wednesday.

"He was dead. His body was a corpse," said his sister, Jean Dorothy Erickson, a surgical nurse from Laramie, Wyo.

"He's improving all the time," said Ms. Erickson. "I hope my brother will be a functional person again. What he's accomplished so far was not possible....it was not possible for anyone."

Dr. Meneleo Avila was not as optimistic in his reading of Supergan's condition.

"It looks like he's responding a little bit more to pain, but this may be all reflex in the brain-stem area," he said Wednesday afternoon. "He's a little bit better. He hasn't gotten worse, but he hasn't improved significantly."

Supergan suffered massive brain injury in a traffic accident Feb. 2.

Early Tuesday, nine hours after he had been declared brain dead, Supergan coughed while nurses prepared him for surgical removal of his kidneys, according to Avila.

"I talked to the family and told them the chances were hopeless," Avila said. The family decided to take Supergan off life-support systems and donate his kidneys.

Hospital nurses preparing Supergan for the organ donation were suctioning his trachea when "he started to have evidence of some cough reflex. They stopped everything and called me," Avila said. Supergan also began taking "very small amounts of breath," the doctor said.

Avila said when he had arrived at the hospital, he had "tested him (Supergan) and irrigated his ears with ice water. (His brain) started to respond partially on one side only, showing that the brain was not completely dead."

There was some activity on the left side of the brain stem, he said.

It is possible that Supergan was in a barbiturate coma so deep that the light brain function had not been evident earlier, Avila said, adding that the man now has been taken off all barbiturates.

A hospital spokeswoman said Supergan remained in critical condition.

Genevieve Supergan praised Avila's efforts to save her son: "I don't think Alan could have done as good without him."

The family, five sisters and a brother, is keeping a constant vigil. "We go in every once in a while and talk to him, hold his hand, give him all the courage we can," said Mrs. Supergan.

Supergan was injured in a one-car accident near Wauconda. Police said he drove through a stop sign and lost control of his car, which struck a tree.

Democrats to shun budget talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Declaring that they are calling President Reagan's bluff, congressional Democrats say they will shun talks on reducing federal budget deficits until Reagan gives ground on military spending.

Following the first round of bipartisan talks Wednesday between administration officials and members of Congress, Democratic leaders huddled and decided that a three-year, $90.3 billion package of deficit reductions put on the table by White House aides was not enough.

Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, who represented House Democrats at the nearly two-hour session initiated by Reagan, said the administration package was "a shopping list of little things." He added "we'd be wasting time" to concentrate on it.

"I would not want to be a party to a nickel and dime affair," said Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, who represented Senate Democrats.

Democrats have said they feared an election year trap was being set ever since Reagan issued his call two weeks ago for the bipartisan talks aimed at finding a $100 billion "down payment" on eliminating federal red ink.

After the first set of talks ended, Wright, Inouye, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., and Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia met privately.

Byrd said the Democrats "agreed that the next meeting of the president's deficits reduction group can happen only after two things occur:

"First, we have in hand the CBO (Congressional Budget Office) analysis of the president's budget, scheduled for on or about Feb. 22. Second, the administration submits to us 48 hours in advance specific areas of the Pentagon budget which it is willing to cut."

Wright said that during the discussions with administration officials he made a recommendation for $100 billion worth of savings by "stretching out" military spending. For example, taking four years to pay for projects now contemplated to be finished in three.

Wright said the idea originated with former President Gerald R. Ford.

According to sources familiar with the substance of the bipartisan discussions, White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III, who led the administration delegation, replied, "That would mean wiping out the B-1 (bomber), forget it."

Reagan, too, is adamantly opposed to cuts in defense spending.

But, said the sources who asked not to be quoted by name, budget director David A. Stockman interjected that he would "cost out" the proposal.

O'Neill insisted "this kind of $100 billion saving should be the starting point of any serious approach to deficit reduction."

Christopher Matthews, a spokesman for O'Neill, said that by calling for discussions on military spending, "we're calling their bluff."

"If they're serious, let's talk about their sacred cow first," Matthews said.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes replied Wednesday night that "during two hours of meetings today, no such request was made.

"We would hope if they have suggestions on the deficit down payment they would make them privately and directly."

He added, "So far, we are the only ones to put anything on the table."

At the meeting in Blair House, the government's official guest residence across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House, administration officials showed congressional Democrats a sheet that outlined $90.3 billion worth of proposed deficit reductions over three years.

The largest proposal was a three-year, $25 billion item labeled "target for defense and non-defense appropriations savings via Grace Commission," the panel appointed by Reagan to recommend cuts in government spending. Other proposals for reducing the deficit included the closing of various tax loopholes.

The fiscal 1985 budget that Reagan sent to Congress included a projected deficit of $180.4 billion. Also included was a request for defense spending authority of $305 billion.

City sales tax rebate check picture better than it looks

Troy Gifford said to more accurately compare the figures he adds up the three months of a quarter and obtains an average. That average for the last quarter of 1983 is slightly lower than the 1982 fourth quarter. "But at this time last year we were still headed down sharply. Our three-month average has been moving up since the summer."

The low point on his chart stands at July and August and he expects this summer's figures to rank higher than last year.

"I'm cautiously optimistic. It's not a downward trend at all," he said.

The City Council budgeted $6.5 million in sales tax rebates for this fiscal year, and Gifford said if the upward trend continues the year may end with $7.3 million.

But that doesn't mean the city will have money left over at the end of the fiscal year in September. Instead, it will mean the council won't have to take as much out of surplus to cover expenses as planned.

Gifford said this year's city budget will take $2.5 million from the unappropriated surplus to cover expenditures. If the city receives more in rebates, the council won't have to dip as deep into the surplus.

Although the December figures seem contrary to reports that Midland and Odessa experienced excellent sales for Christmas, Gifford said the sales tax covers all sectors of the economy. The high point in the city's previous sales tax rebates came during the 1981 boom when large amounts of oilfield equipment were being sold.

Since that aspect of the economy isn't back to the 1981 level, total sales figures might appear low to some persons. But, Gifford said in a joking manner, "I don't think there were Christmas specials on drilling rigs or mud pumps. The mall (Midland Park Mall) could have had its best year on record."

Two killed in Mount Katahdin avalanche

MILLINOCKET, Maine (AP) — One of five climbers buried in an avalanche on Maine's highest mountain managed to dig himself out and free two companions, who were seriously injured, but the remaining two men perished in the snow, authorities said.

The avalanche at the South Basin of Mount Katahdin, in northern Maine, occurred Wednesday as the five mountaineers from New York were engaged in a technical climb, requiring special equipment and skills, said Irvin "Buzz" Caverly, director of Baxter State Park.

"They were all buried. One of them dug his way out," said Barry MacArthur, a park ranger.

The uninjured climber, identifed as Peter Cochetti of Albany, N.Y., dug one of his companions out of the snow, which park officials said was five feet deep before the avalanche, but was unable to help the others.

Cochetti then hiked half a mile to a ranger station and returned with ranger Charlie Kenney to free a second man, who was "barely breathing" but responded to cardiopulmonary resuscitation, Caverly said.

Killed were Ken Levanway and Steve Hilt, both of Troy, N.Y., Caverly said. The injured men, who were admitted to Millinocket Hospital, were identified as Bob Esser of Troy, the leader of the climbing party, and Rick Cumm of Ravena, N.Y.

Caverly said all five were believed to be in their 20s. Hospital officials were withholding all information about the two injured men at their families' request.

The accident was reported to park officials at about 10 a.m., and rescue teams were at the site by afternoon. The injured were flown by helicopter to Millinocket and then transferred by ambulance to a local hospital.

Cochetti was treated and released, but relayed word through hospital officials that he would not comment on the accident.

State trooper's killer sentenced to death

Eliseo Moreno

RICHMOND (AP) — Eliseo Moreno, sentenced to death for killing a state trooper, will have the decision appealed as a matter of routine and still may face capital murder charges for the slaying of a College Station couple, the prosecutor who won the conviction says.

Moreno, 24, from Donna in the Rio Grande Valley, was sent to the Texas death row on Wednesday by a Fort Bend County jury which deliberated less than 90 minutes. The same jury took 2¼ hours Monday before finding him guilty of capital murder in the Oct. 11 slaying of rookie Department of Public Safety Officer Russell Boyd.

Boyd, 25, was one of six people allegedly killed by Moreno in a 160-mile crime spree that night across southeast Texas.

The former lawn mower mechanic stood expressionless, with his hands in front of him, as Judge Oliver Kitzman announced the verdict. Afterwards, he signed an affidavit indicating he was indigent and would need a court-appointed attorney for his appeal.

District Attorney Jim Keeshan said Brazos County authorities would have to decide within a few weeks whether Moreno should face capital murder charges in the slayings of Juan and Esther Garza, Moreno family friends who were the first of the six people to die in the Oct. 11 rampage.

Fingerprint and ballistics evidence has tied Moreno to each of the slayings.

Keeshan said he was "gratified" and "vindicated" with the death sentence and felt the decision would stand the test of a mandatory appeal.

The six-man, six-woman jury had to decide between death by lethal injection or life imprisonment.

"We hope the family members of the victims will have some degree of satisfaction that he will pay a heavy penalty," Keeshan said.

Defense attorney Robert Scardino Jr. said he was not surprised at the speed of the decision but "would have felt better if it had taken them two days.

"The system Russell gave his life for didn't let him down," said the trooper's father, Ralph Boyd, of Weatherford, a former DPS officer himself.

Boyd, with his wife, another son, and the slain trooper's widow, sobbed briefly during the closing arguments and as the death sentence was announced.

"The jury's findings were consistent with the evidence," Kitzman said later. The judge said he was "not aware of anything at this point" which could trigger a reversal on appeal.

Moreno was convicted of shooting the trooper six times with a .357-caliber Magnum pistol after he was pulled over for speeding on Texas Highway 6 north of Hempstead.

That shooting occurred shortly after the Garzas were slain at their apartment in College Station and just before three elderly Hempstead residents were slain in their home.

Moreno, who also is accused of abducting several people during his flight from Hempstead, was arrested at a roadblock in Wharton County. Police recovered from him the trooper's service revolver and the gun which experts testified was used in the Boyd slaying.

Keeshan said the convicted killer would be taken into custody by the Texas Department of Corrections within a few days and then assigned a cell on death row at the TDC Ellis Unit near Huntsville.

Testimony indicated the shootings were triggered by marital problems between Moreno and his estranged wife, Blanca. Authorities said following his arrest that he blamed the Garzas for the couple's difficulties.

Prosecutors don't have any new evidence against Geter

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas County prosecutors say they have found no substantial new evidence against Lenell Geter, a black engineer facing an April 9 retrial on a controversial armed robbery charge.

But Assistant District Attorney Gerald Banks said Wednesday that prosecutors still have a strong case because five victims of a 1982 heist at a fried chicken restaurant in suburban Balch Springs can identify Geter as the gunman.

The witnesses' testimony was the key to the state's earlier case against Geter, who was convicted in October 1982 and sentenced to life in prison. Geter was freed from prison last December after prosecutors agreed to a new trial following extensive publicity about the case.

The retrial was scheduled after Geter refused to take a polygraph test. District Attorney Henry Wade had offered to dismiss the charge if Geter, 26, passed the test.

"We haven't come up with anything, other than what you come up with in a case where the person isn't caught in the act," Banks said. "We've come up with five eyewitnesses who say it's him...I don't know how much stronger a case you'd have in a robbery unless you caught the guy in the act."

Geter says he was at work at the E-Systems Inc. plant in Greenville when the robbery took place on Aug. 23, 1982. Several of Geter's coworkers testified that he was the work on the afternoon of the robbery, but none could account for his whereabouts at the hour of the crime.

Some E-Systems employees, who did not testify at the first trial, now say they have stronger evidence that Geter was at work when the robbery took place.

Astronaut fails to hook up to rotating box, but links with stationary object

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronaut Bruce McCandless, again floating free and turning somersaults in space, abandoned a plan to dock with a large slow-spinning box today because of trouble with the shuttle's robot arm. But he successfully linked with a stationary object in a test of human ability to capture a disabled satellite.

"I've completed a hard dock here," he reported as he clamped a tube-like device on his jet-pack onto a docking pin at a work station. He did it several times.

The cancellation of the rotating hookup was a disappointment, because it had been the major goal of the excursion for Challenger's daredevil spacewalkers.

McCandless and Robert Stewart glided outside the shuttle at 5:40 a.m. EST for a second tetherless trip in open space to test techniques for grappling, repairing and refueling crippled payloads. Eager to repeat their exhilarating experience of Tuesday when they became the first humans to fly free in space, they began 35 minutes ahead of schedule.

The excursion was a dress rehearsal for the next shuttle mission in April, when another crew is to retrieve and repair a crippled scientific satellite named Solar Max.

"IT LOOKS SUNNY AGAIN OUT here," McCandless commented as he emerged into the bay. He repositioned a loose bracket and then donned his rocket-powered jet pack, discarded his 50-foot safety life and scooted about in the bay.

He turned slow somersaults as he tested several of the 24 jet thrusters.

"Looks like you're performing victory rolls up there," mission control commented.

"It's easy, really easy; it works a lot easier than Tuesday," McCandless reported.

He moved to a work station where he completed several dockings with the metal pin, just as another astronaut is to do in April to secure the Solar Max satellite.

McCandless earlier maneuvered straight up, about 10 feet above the Challenger, and did a slow roll. Televised pictures showed a stiff-legged man, upside down, in a white suit, silhouetted against a brilliant blue background of sky and Earth.

"The view isn't quite as exciting from this point," he said, upside down.

"THIS IS REALLY NEAT," he said. Over the United States, he said he could "see cities passing by like a great, great constellation."

Minutes later, with the world slipping past at four miles a second, he said he saw Florida and Cuba.

Bundled in white pressure suits and wearing bubble helmets, the spacewalkers unlatched an airlock door and floated with ease into the open, 60-foot-long cargo bay. They were attached to a shuttle guidewire by 50-foot cords, which they were to wear as a safety measure when not using the backpack.

McCandless noticed that a bracket that held one of the slide wires was loose and he put it back in place.

"That was a little startling," he commented. Mission control said that in the loose position the bracket could have interfered with the closing of the cargo doors just before the end of the mission. Officials said the slide wire itself was not loose.

McCandless then moved to a station where his jet-pack called a Manned Maneuvering Unit was stored. He began checking it out for the day's work. While McCandless prepared to take the first spin, Stewart reinstalled a television camera the crew had carried into the cabin on Tuesday for repair.

The main task for each had been to try to clamp a "capture device" onto a large payload rotating slowly above the cargo bay on the end of the shuttle's mechanical robot arm. The payload was to have been turning at the same rate as Solar Max, one rotation every six minutes.

BUT DURING A CHECK OF THE robot, pilot Robert Gibson reported the "wrist" joint" would not move properly.

Mission control radioed several possible solutions, but none worked, and less than an hour before the space walk was to begin, controllers told Gibson to cradle the arm. He was operating it remotely from inside the cabin.

"Okay, we'll cradle the arm," commander Vance Brand responded, "That's what we were expecting to hear, I'm afraid."

Decision on Jackson's eligibility for taxpayers' funds coming

Jesse Jackson

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson's presidential campaign was looking for a shot in the arm today from a Federal Election Commission vote on whether he is eligible for matching funds.

FEC approval would mean the Treasury would send Jackson his first $100,000 in matching funds.

Six of his rivals for the Democratic presidential nomination already have shared more than $11 million in taxpayers' funds, including $634,694 that the FEC approved on Wednesday.

Jackson declared himself a candidate on Nov. 3, the last of the eight major candidates to enter the Democratic race and the only black. On Jan. 13 he submitted documents to the FEC listing $111,425 in contributions.

FEC auditors reported Wednesday that they have verified that $110,410 of Jackson's contributions are matchable.

The high level of verifiable contributions will stand Jackson in good stead once he is certified. Under the FEC's rules, his campaign will automatically get paid 99 percent of its future matching fund submissions without having to wait for FEC auditors to check them.

To qualify, a candidate must raise $100,000 in individual contributions, with at least $5,000 raised in 20 different states in contributions of no more than $250. Once certified eligible, a candidate gets federal matching funds for every contribution of up to $250.

The FEC has not yet determined whether George McGovern is eligible for matching funds. He submitted records on Jan. 18 showing $190,351 in contributions. FEC auditors normally take about three weeks to comb through those records.

In the latest batch of matching funds, Walter F. Mondale, the leader of the Democratic pack, continued to get the largest share: $275,946, boosting his total to $4.6 million. Sen. John Glenn of Ohio got $157,962, raising his total to $2.5 million.

Sen. Alan Cranston of California got $82,343 for a total of $1.6 million; Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado $64,932 for a total of $746,021; Sen. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina $37,653 for a total of $719,768, and former Florida Gov. Reuben Askew $15,855 for a total of $879,429.

President Reagan's campaign organization has not yet decided whether to seek matching funds for the primaries. The candidates who do so must agree to abide by spending limits, keep certain records and submit the records for audit.

By law, the general election campaign is entirely funded by taxpayers.

Fierce fires gut homes killing 18 persons

By The Associated Press

A "wall of flames" swept through a three-story Philadelphia row house, killing eight people and critically injuring three others as a man trapped on the roof screamed "Help me, help me! My babies are on the second floor," authorities said.

And in suburban New York, a family of seven perished today when a fierce blaze gutted their home. Earlier, in Iowa, a mother and two teen-age sons died when a space heater ignited their sofa.

In the fire Wednesday night in the Kensington section of Philadelphia, northeast of downtown, four of those killed and two of the injured were children, authorities said.

"My son came to me and said 'Mommy, it's a fire,'" said Susan Clardy, who lives down the street from the brick-and-wood house.

"All of a sudden we heard the sound of glass breaking. It sounded like a boom or something, and the front of the house was suddenly in flames. Then I heard a man hollering "Help me, help me! My babies are on the second floor!" Mrs. Clardy said.

"It didn't even look like a house. It looked like a wall of fire. The whole house was a wall of flames," she said.

The blaze apparently began just before 9:30 p.m. on the first floor and spread up a stairwell. Authorities were still working this morning to identify the dead and determine how the blaze began.

Police said two families — possibly related — and a visitor were inside the building when the blaze began.

Neighbors got a ladder to rescue the screaming man who was trapped on a roof, but he was too heavy to lift. Firefighters then arrived to take over the rescue effort.

"A fireman ... came running with this hose, but everybody started yelling, 'There's babies in there,' and he ran to get a ladder," said Bill McComb, another neighbor.

The fire was declared under control in about 30 minutes, but not before it charred the building and caused smoke damage to the adjoining homes, said Deputy Fire Commissioner Frank J. Scipioni.

"All of a sudden we heard the sound of glass breaking. It sounded like a boom or something, and the front of the house was suddenly in flames. Then I heard a man hollering "Help me, help me! My babies are on the second floor!"

Scipioni said some victims apparently died from heat, smoke and toxic fumes.

Two children were listed in critical condition this morning at St. Christopher's Hospital, according to hospital spokeswoman Susan Church. Their identities were not released.

The dead included two men, ages 50 and 44, a woman believed to be in her 40s, one female child and two male children, according to fire department spokeswoman Veronica Taylor.

Detective Barbara Smith said police believe the residents of the home were a husband and wife and their three children, the woman's grandfather and uncle, and a woman and her three children.

The visitor, John Nagle, 43, of Philadelphia, was hospitalized in critical condition at Episcopal Hospital, suffering from smoke inhalation, said nursing supervisor May Waldron.

In New York, a fire that raged out of control for three hours today killed a couple and their five children in suburban Bellmore, on Long Island, authorities said. The names of the dead were not immediately released.

Lawsuit alleges girl seduced by priests

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Roman Catholic church will wait for the "true facts" before deciding whether to take any action against seven priests accused by a woman of seducing her, a diocesan spokesman says.

Rita Milla, 22, filed a $21 million suit Wednesday with her mother, naming the priests and the archdiocese as defendants. The suit also claims one of the priests is the father of her daughter.

She told a news conference she had been vulnerable to seduction at age 16 because "It was mostly like I understood their authority and I felt they would know ... what is a sin."

The Rev. Joseph Battaglia, spokesman for the archdiocese, said he couldn't comment "because the matter is under litigation and it would not be fair to comment one way or the other."

However, Battaglia said the archdiocese had put no restrictions on the priests and was not investigating the allegations. The church "will let this take its course in a court of law ... (and) will wait until the court makes a decision of the true facts" before taking any action, he said.

He described the priests as "hard-working, good men."

None of the priests named in the suit could immediately be reached for comment.

Miss Milla, who has a 16-month-old daughter, claims the sexual advances began in 1978 when she wanted to become a nun. She said she was told sex was natural and that priests "got lonely too."

Information Agency blacklists liberals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Information Agency recruited conservative Republicans for its overseas speaking program while excluding people perceived as liberal Democrats, The Washington Post reports in today's editions.

The newspaper, quoting unnamed USIA officials, said the list was compiled after speakers suggested by staffers were rejected for ideological or personal reasons.

The 84-name list included former CBS News anchorman Walter Cronkite, ABC News broadcaster David Brinkley, Washington Post executive editor Benjamin C. Bradlee, New York Times columnist Tom Wicker, consumer advocate Ralph Nader and feminist Betty Friedan, the newspaper said.

Politicians included Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., Reps. Robert Garcia, D-N.Y., Thomas J. Doney, D-N.Y., and Jack Brooks, D-Texas.

Character too young for sex

NEW YORK (AP) — The Gary David Goldberg of the 1960s would probably picket the Gary David Goldberg of the 1980s for his more conservative convictions, including his position on teen-age sex, the subject of tonight's episode of "Family Ties."

The NBC comedy, about a flower-generation couple from the '60s now raising three young Republicans, mirrors the executive producer's real life. A former University of California-Berkeley radical and self-described "outlaw," Goldberg says his new outlook was shaped by his family and the responsibility he feels as a broadcaster.

"It's a surprise how, on many of today's issues, I've done a complete 180 (degree turn) and now find myself the strongest proponent of the other side," said Goldberg. "In the old days, I advocated free sexual expression for everyone."

Tonight, 16-year-old Mallory Keaton (Justine Bateman) is debating with herself whether to make love with her 18-year-old college boyfriend, Rick (Tom Byrd). They've been dating four months.

Not satisfied with kissing sessions on the Keatons' living room couch, Rick wants to expand their relationship and "discover the wonders of nature." She kids him, asking if that means they should "go camping," but then admits she has had the same thoughts.

Later, though, she says: "I'm scared. I don't know if I'm ready yet."

Goldberg said Mallory's dilemma proved volatile for the show's writers and producers. "It radically split us," he said. "We're normally a very harmonious group, but this time there were threats of taking names off the script and finding other jobs."

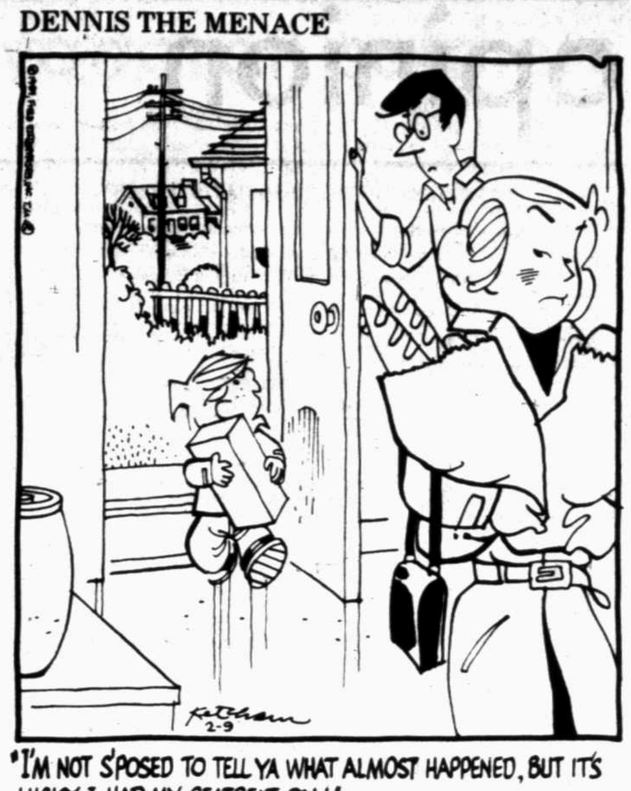

Writers Michael Weithorn and Ruth Bennett, the only ones in the group without children, were determined to keep intact their script, which had Mallory and Rick sleeping together. "They thought it would be beneficial, but I thought that would be too dangerous a message," said Goldberg.

Goldberg said some girls could be influenced by Mallory's decision. "Teenage pregnacy is up in epidemic proportions," he said. "My opinion is that 16 is too young to add sexuality to your life. I'm talking emotional health, not moralistic judgments. ... Kids are growing up so fast. My daughter is 11, and she knows so much."

The other executive producer, Lloyd Garver, agreed with Goldberg, while executive script consultant, Alan Uger, took a more moderate position.

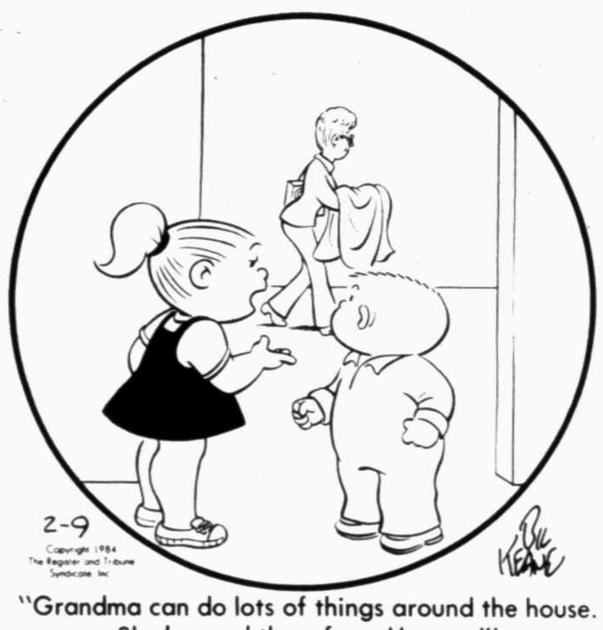

"I got most of what I wanted. It's my show," said Goldberg. "But I think I was able to convince them that whatever was gained by Mallory sleeping with him wasn't worth the risks."

British author Victor Mollo has delighted us over the years with his mythical Griffins Club and the characters who inhabit it. They are lorded over by the Hideous Hog, a very fine technical player who is not above taking every advantage he can of the less fortunate members.

Their exploits have been described in two books and hundreds of magazine articles. And a third book will soon be available in the United States — "You Need Never Lose At Bridge." Here is a typical example of the Hog in action.

The Hog, sitting West, heard Papa the Greek become declarer at four spades after the Walrus had opened the bidding with one heart. North's jump raise to three spades was about a king light. The opening lead was routine.

When two rounds of hearts went through, the Hog realized that to defeat the contract the defenders would need a trump trick and a diamond. The danger was that East, afraid of yielding a ruff and sluff, would shift to a diamond, which would allow declarer to pick up the suit.

Declarer ruffed the third heart, cashed the king of clubs and crossed to the ace. He led a trump to the ace and continued with the jack. To these two trump tricks West followed with the eight first and then the three. The Walrus won the second trump and led a fourth heart. Eventually, declarer had to yield a diamond for down one.

"Fortunately," explained the Hog, "that Walrus is eminently bamboozable, for though he knows precious little about bridge, he knows all about points, peters, echoes and signals of every sort. So all I had to do was play the eight of spades before the three, proclaiming three trumps and a desire to ruff. Thereupon, to promote my mythical nine of spades, he duly led a heart and all was well."

Beirut decision

President Reagan's decision to begin withdrawal of the 1,600 Marines from positions in Beirut, Lebanon, left a number of unanswered questions. The crumbling state of Lebanese President Amin Gemayel's government made the withdrawal decision virtually unavoidable.

A number of administration officials agreed Wednesday that determining the United States' future course in Lebanon will be crucial, but that for the time being the resignation of the Gemayel government's Moslem members and gains by Moslem militias in West Beirut at least afforded the opportunity for Reagan to begin pulling the Marines out.

A Senate Foreign Relations Committee aide reduced the Lebanese situation to understandable proportions when he said, "An earthquake's occurred, and you're trying to rebuild, but first you've got to assess the damage."

That assessment probably won't please administration officials, but it should give them at least a perspective on what the next step or two should be. And the importance of those steps can't be overemphasized.

It's obvious the Reagan administration wants a stable government in Lebanon and it's also obvious that the loss of West Beirut and the Moslem members in Gemayel's government crippled that cause.

Determining the course of the United States in Lebanon is vital. To a large extent that is true because the strategic importance of the Middle East can't be overemphasized. But in this context, choosing how to remain in Lebanon became more important than merely remaining like ducks in a shooting gallery.

Without a doubt Americans feel relieved that the withdrawal has begun, even though it will take time to get all of them out. The situation has been growing more precarious with every passing week and it obviously was time for a reassessment, some would say past time.

The influence of the United States should be maintained in the volatile Middle East because the Soviet Union is continuing to exert its influence there. But it must be done cautiously, not foolishly.

Once the Marines are fully withdrawn, perhaps this nation can better assess what its role in Lebanon should be in order to foster a stable government.

Another View:

Moral eligibility

In an interview with The Wall Street Journal last week, President Reagan invoked a new standard for deciding who should or should not receive preferential treatment from the government. "If there are individuals who suffer from our economic program," he said, "they are people who have been dropped from various things like food stamps because they weren't morally eligible for them."

Morally eligible? What can the president mean by that? We asked the White House press office, which responded that it had no further information and that it "wouldn't interpret the president on these things .... He meant what he said and he said what he meant." Since we don't share the press office's reticence, we'll hazard an interpretation.

The president is probably not talking about people who actually cheat, who claim they meet program guidelines, say, when they, in fact, don't. That's suggested by the transcript of the president's remarks in which he goes on to say that some of these moral ineligibles "weren't even technically eligible for those programs." So he's making a distinction here, applying some other test to recipients of government benefits, some measure of their worthiness for assistance.

You could spend all day arguing about whether this loser of government aid or that one was really worthy of being helped. It is easy enough to find real-life cases — of women, for example, working at low-wage jobs to help support their children — that easily meet most people's idea of worthiness. And there are doubtless many whose circumstances don't inspire so much sympathy, who are taking advantage of the law, availing themselves under its provisions of benefits to which they are legally entitled but which they don't desperately need. But where does that distinction lead?

Is the president perhaps suggesting that no one should take advantage of the benefits that the law allows unless that person meets some additional test of moral worth or character or desperate need? If so, what would happen to the corporate income tax? Would every corporation that reaps big tax benefits by consummating a merger of dubious value to the society be required by some higher court of equity to return its gains?

What about the millionaires who pay little or no income taxes thanks to the various tax preferences built into the income tax code? Are they disqualified from these benefits on moral grounds, never mind what the law allows?

Perhaps it would be efficient, and even edifying, if the society could measure out its benefits in strict proportion to the moral worth of the recipients. (We expect that a good deal of redistribution would ensue.) But in the distribution of government benefits, a distinction between legal and moral requirements is one that no wise government wants to attempt. For these particular purposes, the law is the definition of the morality of grants — or at least it ought to be. When they drift apart, the moral requirements always seem to be most rigorously applied at the bottom of the income ladder.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Spirit of Nazism lives on

WASHINGTON — The jackboot and the swastika lurk behind the continuing slaughter of tens of thousands of Latin Americans by right-wing death squads. This is the inescapable conclusion of a year-long investigation by my staff.

Jack Anderson

Hitler's "1,000-year Reich" collapsed in smoking ruins nearly 40 years ago. But the Nazis' ugly concepts of anti-Semitism and racial purity have survived among right-wing elements in Latin American countries. Some of them gave refuge to Nazi war criminals.

Sources close to President Reagan tell me he is growing increasingly concerned at U.S. support for governments that condone these right-wing murderers. He has told intimates that he wants to take a tougher position against the death squads' activities. I agree.

I sent my associate Jon Lee Anderson to Guatemala and Honduras and my associate Dale Van Atta to Argentina, Paraguay and Chile to investigate reported links among the Latin American death squads. They found persuasive evidence that the Latin American Anti-Communist Confederation, an affiliate of the once-respected World Anti-Communist League, has been used as a front for the region's assassination groups.

Here are some additional frightening details:

— The men who run CAL out of Guadalajara, Mexico, and appear to give several death squads their marching orders, belong to a secret society run by powerful anti-Semitic businessmen and lawyers. They call their group "Los Tecos" (The Owls), a reference to their nocturnal activities.

— Sources in WACL say the Guadalajara group uses its anti-Semitic credentials to solicit money from wealthy Arabs, whom they refer to as "turcos" (Turks). One WACL letter in my possession discloces that these Middle East sources pledged at least $50,000 to the league's 1978 conference in Washington.

— Convincing evidence that the death squads' front groups are more enthusiastic in their anti-Semitism than in their anti-communism is the WACL's willingness to have representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization speak at its meetings. The PLO is Soviet-backed.

— One former top official of WACL is a notorious proponent of the Nazis' super-race theories. In fact, some of his moderate WACL colleagues wrote in an internal document that any group he supports gives them "immediate cause for alarm and suspicion that the organization recommended is an anti-Semitic, racist, neo-Nazi or pro-Nazi organization working under tne label of 'national' or 'nationalist.'"

This WACL official has been known to measure a person's skull and ascertain his "Aryan" features as a measure of acceptability. He once confided to an associate during a drinking bout that he had personally hidden Dr. Joseph Mengele, the Auschwitz "Angel of Death," on his exodus to Paraguay.

— Ever since World War II, right-wing militarists in Latin America have idealized the Nazi war machine. Germans of the Hitler era are still depicted as supermen in certain Latin American magazines. This attitude helps explain why Mengele was honored with Paraguayan citizenship. Adolf Eichmann and others found refuge in Argentina, and Klaus Barbie became an adviser to the Bolivian equivalent of the Gestapo. When death squads gather, they speak with awe of their Nazi prototypes, and some even wear swastikas.

— Any sincere American conservative is deluding himself if he thinks that every Latin American anti-communist is necessarily a friend of the United States. The right-wing extremists who support the death squads are not. This includes Roberto D'Aubuisson, who may be El Salvador's next president.

In fact, it is a tenet of neo-Nazi doctrine that the U.S. Congress long ago sold out to the "international Marxist conspiracy." And Marx, they will quickly remind you, was a Jew.

FEUD OF THE WEEK: Whoops! The General Accounting Office's quality assurance branch has stepped on the toes of two members of Congress, Reps. James Scheuer, D-N.Y., and Pat Schroeder, D-Colo. And since Congress is the GAO's boss, the two offended members were quick to point out the indignity.

Asked to investigate charges that the inspector general's office of the Environmental Protection Agency had become politicized, the GAO in its draft report included the complaint and charges of a coverup. But, according to a Scheuer-Schroeder letter to GAO Comptroller General Charles Bowsher, "the final report ... not only failed to address these issues, but also deleted the ... summary of our request."

The letter continues: "It is clear that the revision ... occurred in Mr. Ira Goldstein's Office of Quality Assurance. Mr. Goldstein unilaterally and improperly revised our request and substituted his judgment for ours as to the needs of Congress ...."

A chastened Goldstein said the gaffe was the result of a "serious misunderstanding."

GEORGE F. WILL

Reagan files bankruptcy budget

WASHINGTON — Imagine Herman Melville sending to his publisher the manuscript for "Moby Dick" and enclosing a letter saying that he really did not like the stuff he had written about the whale. Today we have splendid cabaret, the Treasury secretary disdaining the report of the chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors, who says the President's budget is not what the administration wants. In recent years, the problem has been that Congress could not write a budget and would not respect a President's budget. Now the problem is a President who, in effect, declines to submit a budget.

George F. Will

When someone asked Max Beerbohm if a particular person ever told the truth, Beerbohm said: "Occasionally. When his invention flags." The unflagging imagination behind the budget document foresees interest rates declining while deficits remain huge. If the President fired all his aides who think his budget is preposterous, he would solve a perennial problem of government: White House parking.

If is fine for economic policy to be made in the Oval Office, but not in blithe disregard of the analysis of the Council of Economic Advisors, the numbers from the Office of Management and Budget (and the even scarier numbers from the Congressional Budget Office), and the pleadings of the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. Governing without reference to such instrumentalities of government may be a natural consequence of conservatism that is understood, perversely, as hostility to government. But it looks like radicalism.

Democrats say Reagan has a "secret plan" for balancing the budget by a post-election assault on domestic spending. Democrats credit Reagan with too much planning. Reagan's experience to date proves that there can be no serious plan. Disregard administration talk about vast savings from "structural reforms." Consider the numbers, beginning with this: The deficits forecast for the foreseeable future are to be 4-5 percent of GNP.

In 1981, Reagan proposed Social Security savings. The plan died in a week because it was politically impossible. It involved savings of just one-third of one percent of GNP. At Thanksgiving, 1982, the idea was floated for fully taxing unemployment compensation. The idea was cold before the turkey was. It would have raised just one-fifteenth of one percent of GNP. In 1983, Reagan proposed sweeping Medicare reforms. The proposal, which was politically impossible and is not included in this year's budget, would have saved just one-fifth of one percent of GNP. Today there is talk about huge savings from farm programs — although in Reagan's first five years (fiscal 1982-86) farm programs will have cost almost twice as much as farm programs in any other five-year period.

Under Reagan, discretionary non-defense spending has contracted from 6.3 percent of GNP to 4 percent. The budget document envisions it contracting to 2.7 percent by 1989. You thought Marx was the fellow who envisioned "the withering away of the state"? Reagan's budget document speaks of "the steady withering" of discretionary non-defense spending.

Highways, parks, the customs office, education grants ... Let's wither: let's fire everyone on the non-defense civilian payroll — all FBI agents, forest rangers, Veterans Administration doctors, the folks at NASA working on Reagan's space station — everyone. The saving? Just $33 billion. That "down payment" would leave a deficit of about $170 billion. (The administration's $180 billion deficit projection assumes action Congress will not take. Under current law and policy the deficit will be $200 billion.)

Reagan's two-year budget request is for $1.92 trillion. The two-year budget resolution passed by the "over-spending Congress" is for ... $1.92 trillion. The priorities are different concerning defense and domestic programs, but the irresponsibility is similiar.

Supporters of the Reagan budget (one can barely use the plural: the supporters are Reagan and Regan) have elevated Micawberism to fiscal policy: Something will turn up. Or: Bold things will be done in 1985, when the election is over. But the 1986 election will not be over. We are never more than two years away from an election involving 468 (435 representatives, 33 senators) of the 537 persons sent to Washington by elections.

Reagan's budget may shatter three Reagan achievements — the defense buildup, low inflation and the revitalized Republican Party. Congress will use the deficits as an excuse for doing what every fiber of its being cries out to do — retreat from defense spending. The deficits cannot be financed without inflation.

Republican strength is related to the belief that the party may not be nice but is sensible — that it is hardhearted but also hardheaded. The new budget is the Republicans' "Chapter 11," a declaration of bankruptcy of political will and intellectual integrity.

ART BUCHWALD

It's choice between talk or firepower

The rumor in Washington is that Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger and Secretary of State George Shultz can't get together on foreign policy. There is a further rumor that Weinberger is influencing foreign policy more than Shultz.

Art Buchwald

"This shouldn't surprise anyone," Miguel, my friend at one of the embassies in Washington, told me. "Everyone in this town knows the Pentagon is in, and Foggy Bottom is out."

"Why is that?" I wanted to know.

"Because when a country has a foreign policy based on military strength, the secretary of defense is going to have a lot more to say than the secretary of state."

"That's how much you know. The secretary of defense only carries out the policies set by the State Department," I said.

"It used to be that way, but it isn't anymore. Look at it from our point of view. When Weinberger goes globe-trotting he carries photos of new tanks, classy fighter planes, sleek ground-to-air missiles and sexy helicopters. When George Shultz travels around the world he has nothing to show world leaders except pictures of his grandchildren.

"When Shultz talks to my colonel-president, all he tells him is that if he wants continued U.S. support, he has to get his financial house in order, hold free elections and stop beating up on the people. That's not the kind of stuff my leader wants to hear.

"Weinberger doesn't give lectures. As long as my colonel-president certifies we're anti-communist, we can have all the ground-to-air missiles and tear gas we want. If you were running my country would you rather have a visit from Shultz or Weinberger?"

"Weinberger, of course."

"Our foreign minister is going to make a visit to Washington this spring and I have been setting up his itinerary. He just cabled me and wanted to know why he had to visit the State Department.

"I told him it was tradition, so he agreed to a 10-minute stop there on the condition he could spend the rest of the day at the Pentagon."

"That's not very diplomatic."

"The Defense Department has offered the foreign minister a ride on a nuclear aircraft carrier, a flight in a B-52 bomber and a military parade in his honor at West Point. All the State Department could come up with was a visit to Disney World."

"Don't your people realize the secretary of state is the second most important position in our government?"

"Not under Reagan it isn't. Rumor has it that when George Shultz starts briefing the president on some intricate diplomatic problem, Reagan dozes off in his chair. But when Weinberger comes in with his bagful of military contingency plans, the president really perks up. Mr. Reagan loves simplistic solutions to world affairs."

"No wonder you people are tilting toward Weinberger."

"It's no contest when you have to choose between a Cabinet officer who has a $2.5 billion budget and one who has $305 billion to toss around."

"Do you have any word on the morale of the State Department?"

"The rumor is that they're not too happy over there. The president still lets them write nasty diplomatic notes to Nicaragua, Cuba and Canada. And every once in awhile they can call in a foreign ambassador and read the riot act to him for shipping computers to Bulgaria. But it's hard to sell the foreign country leaders on a peaceful solution to a crisis situation when Weinberger will offer to solve the same problem with 100 helicopter gunships."

"I guess what you're saying has validity, because every time you see George Shultz on television he looks very nervous, and every time Caspar Weinberger comes on the screen he doesn't seem to have a worry in the world."

"It shouldn't surprise you. Shultz deals in soft talk and Weinberger deals in hardware."

West German toy fair has almost everything

By TAMARA JONES
Associated Press Writer

NUREMBERG, West Germany — Even with stuffed rabbits quaffing beer, eight-inch dolls bent on ruling the galaxies and miniature burning buildings, something seems to be missing from the world's biggest toy fair.

Kids. Not a tyke in sight. The irony hits at the same time and with about the same impact as a Road Ripper launched by a zealous salesman.

Nuremberg's week-long 35th International Toy Fair, boasting 1,780 exhibitors from 40 nations and 40,000 buyers from 83 countries, is serious business — millions of dollars worth by the time the fair closed Wednesday, organizers estimate.

And in the vernacular of the German hosts, children are strictly verboten.

"It's a major trade fair. People are here to do business and we can't have kids running all over the place, playing with everything," explained a woman at one of the information counters.

Instead, you see suited businessmen and women patting the nose of a huge stuffed dromedary from Ghana, or cheering on their favorite toy race car whizzing along a loop-de-loop track.

Or fingering cats eyes and blue bombers from the British firm that claims to be the world's biggest marble maker.

Or talking back to a gregarious knee-high robot roaming the halls as a promotional gimmick from a German firm.

Buyers wooed with free drinks and sample toys dicker in a multilingual din over the price of Lego bricks or Barbie dolls in a dozen sprawling halls.

Salesmen from the Danish-based Lego company conducted free tours of Legoland, where futuristic space stations and skyscrapers built from snap-together plastic bricks are on display in a stall the size of a football field.

The centerpiece was a medieval castle (complete with an anachronistic electrical fireplace) and snap-together knights taking up most of a wall.

Asked how many bricks it took to make, a Lego man blanched. "Thousands," he replied. "Thousands and thousands."

The Lego displays were built by anonymous toilers "in our model department in Denmark" who spent weeks gluing together the little pieces "so they wouldn't fall apart at the fair," said Lego representative Rudolf Raehlert.

Another Danish firm, Scanglobes, offers globes in 24 languages, including Swahili, Tamil, Farsi and Singhalese.

It becomes something of a diplomatic juggling act, said representative Rolf Herdes.

Rebels execute 29 Salvadoran soldiers

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist rebels executed 29 soldiers who surrendered after heavy fighting in northeastern El Salvador, a Salvadoran army spokesman said.

There was no immediate reaction to the report Wednesday from guerrilla forces fighting the U.S.-backed Salvadoran government.

Army spokesman Col. Richard Cienfuegos said leftist rebels shot 23 soldiers and six civil defense patrolmen in the head Wednesday after they had given themselves up to guerrillas at a military post, 35 miles northeast of San Salvador.

Reporters who traveled to the area said six were shot in the head and the others were shot in the torso. The reporters quoted a resident as saying the rebels executed "some of the troops, but not all."

Civilian sources, requesting anonymity for fear of reprisals, said about five helicopters and two air force planes machine-gunned and bombed suspected rebel positions. They said civilians in the area were fleeing.

"Those who have fled said the situation is hard and that there are many civilians killed," one civilian source said in a telephone interview.

The civilian sources said the rebels on Wednesday morning also attacked a national guard post in Talcualuya, located about six miles south of the military post.

In Nicaragua, the state radio quoted a captured Honduran army sergeant as saying the Honduran armed forces chief and other high-ranking officers have participated in rebel attacks on Nicaraguans.

The Voice of Nicaragua also quoted Sgt. Donald Carcamo Ramos as saying the anti-Nicaraguan attacks are "coordinated by high level Honduran, American and Argentine officials."

Turkish airline office raided

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Masked gunmen today stormed the main offices of Turkey's national airline in central Athens, trapping employees inside, police said.

There was no immediate word of how many gunmen or employees were in the offices of the airline Turk Hava Yolari, nor was it known what the gunmen wanted.

Earlier, three bombs shook downtown Athens and a nearby suburb, destroying a public telephone booth and a newspaper stand. Police said two people were injured by flying debris.

Angolan cease-fire announced

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Foreign Minister Roelof F. Botha says a cease-fire has begun in southern Angola, which South Africa invaded in December in an attack on black nationalist guerrillas.

"We have in practice at this moment a cease-fire," Botha told foreign reporters on Wednesday. He added, "a very promising climate" for an extended halt to bush warfare has existed for "more than a week."

Peppard injured during filming of 'The A-Team'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — George Peppard needed eight stitches when he cut his back in a fall from a truck during filming of "The A-Team," but the 55-year-old actor got right back on the job, a series spokeswoman says.

The fall occurred Feb. 2 when the Stephen Cannell Productions team was shooting a scene in Valencia, spokeswoman Cheryl Kagan said Wednesday.

Peppard was standing on some oil drums as the truck was being positioned for shooting and fell when the truck came too close to a building, she said.

Irish rebelled during World War I

King George V signed the Irish Home Rule Act in 1914, but its implementation was suspended during World War I. By the end of the war, the Easter Rising of 1916 had hardened opinion on both sides making orderly progression to dominion status for Ireland impossible. Civil war followed — first between the British and Irish and then between the Irish moderates and Irish extremists.

Producer wins cash for features

NEW YORK (AP) — An independent producer whose portraits of Americans struggling for survival was broadcast on NBC's "Today" was awarded $10,000 in recognition of his work during presentation of 1982-83 Alfred I. duPont-Columbia University Awards in broadcast journalism.

The highest cash prize was presented Wednesday night to Jon Alpert, whose "American Survival" was described by duPont-Columbia jurors as "television journalism at its most immediate and compelling."

Another independent filmmaker, Meg Switzgable, received a citation and $7,500 for "In Our Water," an investigative documentary on the chemical degradation of one person's drinking water, presented by WGBH-TV in Boston.

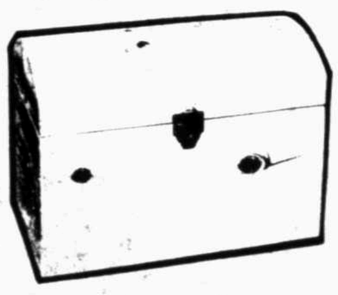

Eleven news and public affairs programs were honored with duPont-Columbia awards during the nationally televised ceremonies, and 18 others received citations.

John Camp of WBRZ-TV in Baton Rouge, La., won an award for investigative reporting. Camp's award was for his handling of "demanding and complex stories ... treated incisively and with even-handed intelligence."

Johnson holds U.S. downhill gold hopes

Hockey teams needs even bigger miracle this year

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — The hopes for a United States medal in the men's downhill, one of Winter Olympics' glamor events, rode with a young Californian who stepped into the spotlight of the XIV Games with outstanding practice runs.

But the U.S. ice hockey team's dream of defending the gold medal the 1980 squad won in the "Miracle at Lake Placid" did not appear as bright.

Team USA, losers to Canada on Tuesday, faced powerhouse Czechoslovakia, second-seeded in the tournament, as the winter sports carnival turned today from the splendor of the opening ceremonies to the business of crowning the 1984 champions.

"We feel like a rat backed into a corner with a bunch of cats after us," Coach Lou Vairo said of the 1:30 p.m. contest. "It's either get your head scratched off or fight. I respect the Czechs, but I don't think they're as good as the Soviets."

BILL JOHNSON, a 23-year-old from Van Nuys, Calif., was the focus of the U.S. downhill squad in the first medal event of the Games following the lavish festivities Wednesday.

Johnson, who a month ago became the first American to win a men's World Cup downhill race, established himself as a factor in the medal chase with one first-place and two second-place finishes in four training runs.

One of those second-place practices came just before the opening ceremonies. Johnson's time of 1:49.18 over the 3,070-meter Bjelasnica course was only .02 seconds behind Anton Steiner of Austria.

Ohter medal events scheduled today were the women's 10-kilometer cross-country and 1,500-meter speedskating races. The first men's and women's luge runs also were on tap.

IN 1980, the U.S. ice hockey team performed a miracle of sorts in the small upstate New York village of Lake Placid.

On a wet, chilly Friday night, Team USA stunned the mighty Soviets 4-3, then beat Finland 4-2 on the following Sunday afternoon to win the gold medal.

The Olympic arena and the streets of Lake Placid reverberated with the chant, "USA! ' USA!" The town, and much of America, boiled with euphoria.

"Do you believe in miracles?" TV announcer Al Michaels asked as the Russians went down to defeat. Four years ago, America did.

Now, even a miracle might be too late. Another loss, or even a tie, would virtually kill any chance of Team USA's advancing to the medal round. The final four are determined by round-robin competition among two groups of teams. The top two teams from each group advance.

Pat LaFontaine, leading scorer for the Americans, said he had been bothered by a virus and hadn't felt 100 percent until Wednesday. After Tuesday's 4-2 loss, he said he didn't feel well at all.

"We'd like to forget that game," LaFontaine said. "Canada won, but they have to keep going, just like we do. The Czechs are a must game, but this team is ready for that. As a team, we're hungry, and we want it."

RISKING A conflict with the opening ceremony, the men downhillere waited for a snow storm to move through Sarajevo Wednesday morning before making their final downhill trial runs. The women, whose downhill race is scheduled for Saturday, cancelled their training at Mount Jahorina.

A brief morning squall left about an inch of wet, heavy snow in the city, but the storm was more severe in the higher elevations, where the ski courses are located.

THERE HAD been no snowfall in the town for two weeks, so on Tuesday, workers trucked in snow to prepare a track for a cross-country skier who brought the Olympic flame into Kosevo Stadium.

At the base of an arching set of 94 steps, the flame was turned over to 19-year-old Yugoslav figure skater Sanda Dubravcic. She trotted to the top of the staircase as violet-clad dancers performed below.

As Dubravcic lit the Olympic torch, actually a huge metal bowl, the 50,000 spectators roared and the dancers waved their hands in unison.

The 124 members of the U.S. team, wearing cowboy hats and sheepskin jackets, were greeted warmly by the predominantly Yugoslav crowd, which also contained pockets of flag-waving Americans, as they marched in the traditional parade of athletes into the Stadium.

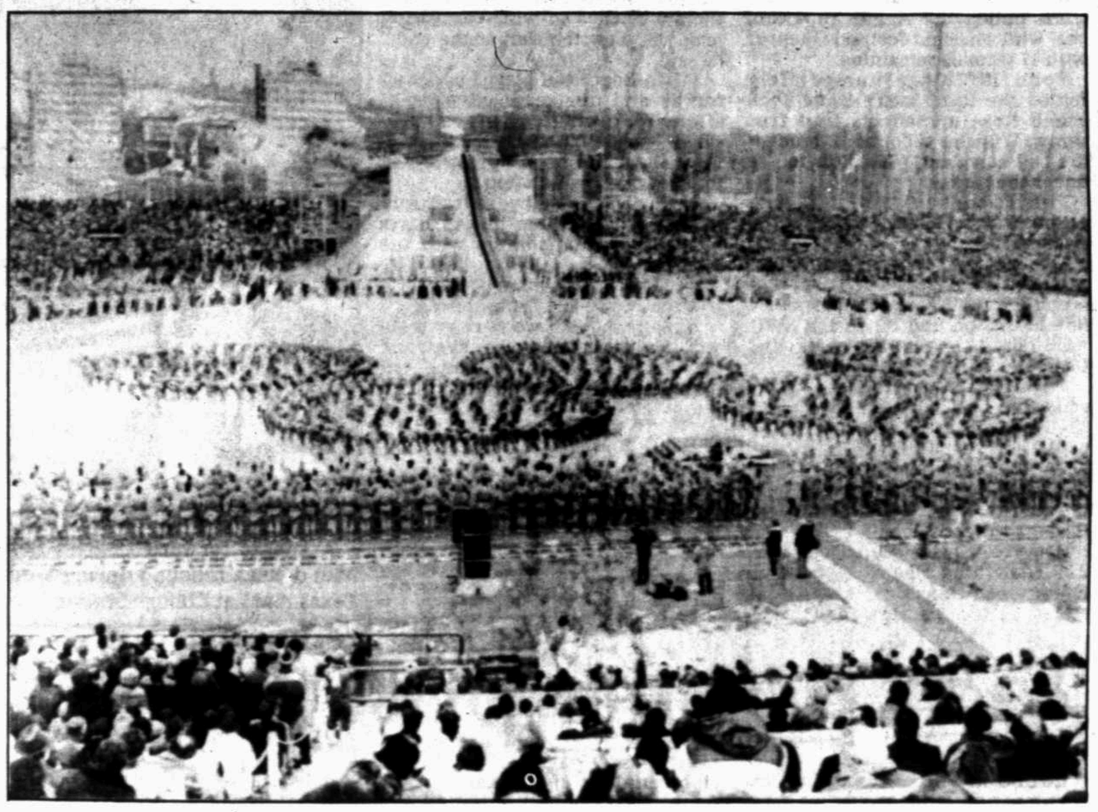

Frank Masley, a 23-year-old luger from Newark, Del., carried the U.S. flag.

DURING THE ceremony, there were performances by 1,200 folk dancers, the Yugoslav army band and 800 gymnasts dressed in red, white, blue, turquoise, and yellow jump suits. Lake Placid Mayor Robert Peacock, accompanied by a 24-piece band from the Norwood fire department near Lake Placid, delivered the Olympic flag to Sarajevo Mayor Ugljesa Uzelac.

"We are convinced that once again we shall demonstrate to the entire world the true meaning of sport as an expression of friendship and fraternity, with the Olympic flag which is their symbol," International Olympic Committee President Juan Antonio Samaranch said in his address, delivered in English.

"Havla Sarajevo. Havla Yugoslavia," Samaranch added. "Thank you Sarajevo. Thank you Yugoslavia."

Yugoslavian skier Bojan Krizaj and ski referee Dr. Miodrag Perovic took the Olympic oath to end the official ceremony.

Chaps in Levelland against South Plains

From Staff Reports

Midland College, battling to hold its ground until the wave of flu subsides, travels to Levelland tonight to face South Plains College at 8 p.m., in Western Junior College Conference action.

The 7-4 Chaps are in third place in the WJCC after defeating Clarendon 68-53 Monday night.

Howard College and Odessa College are running one-two and as matters now stand will earn the automatic berths to the Region V tournament at Langford Chaparral Center in early March. The other two berths will be filled by a tournament for the other eight teams.

MC defeated South Plains, 95-84, in the earlier meeting.

"There are seven games left in conference play and four of those are on the road, so that's where we have to win to keep our chances alive," says Coach Jerry Stone.

"We didn't play too well in the first half against Clarendon, but finally came alive in the second half. Clarendon was tough and we made a lot of mistakes and missed a lot of shots that we usually make. We'll have to cut down on our mistakes against South Plains."

South Plains defeated Western Texas Monday, 59-55. WTC beat Midland 71-69 last Thursday.

Midland College gets two of its final three games at home next week when New Mexico Junior College invades the Center Monday and NMMI follows Thursday.

Great moment turns into nightmare

Trouble erupts at home after Stewart opts for TCU

By WHIT CANNING
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH (AP) — For many high school athletes, the period during which they are recruited is the greatest moment of their lives.

They are celebrated for their achievements, for their unique talents, often for their status as leading young citizens; they are congratulated, catered to, and rewarded with a free college education. Traditionally, it is regarded as the first step into a bright new world.

This week, for Midland Lee star Coy Stewart, it became a nightmare.

Stewart, a 6-foot-5, 240-pound tackle, signed a letter of intent with TCU Wednesday. It may have been an act that severed forever the bond between a father and son.

Normally, such occasions are recorded for the family scrapbook in a news photo that endures for decades ... a picture of the son flanked by two proud, beaming parents.

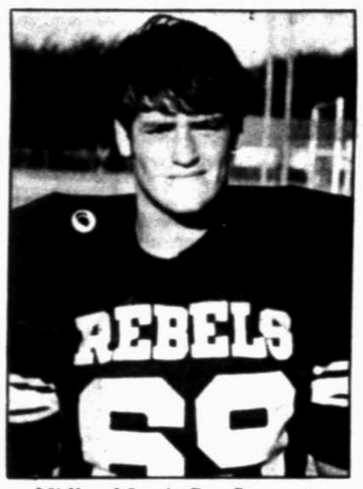

But there will be no such memento for Coy Stewart. Tuesday, the conflict in his home became such that he left and spent the night elsewhere.

He was back Wednesday, saying bravely, "it'll be all right," and he even tried to laugh as he said it. It was a laugh with tears behind it.

STEWART, SPEARHEAD of the line that carried the Rebels to the 5A state finals, was recruited by so many schools that he "narrowed" his visits down to four major ones, including TCU, Texas and Oklahoma.

And Arkansas.

Arkansas is where his father, Randy, had been a teammate of present Hog coach Ken Hatfield on the 1964 national championship team. It's where his parents first met, as students. It's where his grandparents live. It's where his father's heart is.

Midland Lee's Coy Stewart

Coy Stewart was raised on Arkansas lore, and would proudly recount to interviewers details of the 1964 Arkansas-Texas game, which ultimately decided the national championship in the Razorbacks' favor.

"My father played in that game," he would say, proudly. "Maybe not as many people remember him as they do Coach Hatfield, but he was there, too. He was the center."

IN ADDITION to being generally considered the state's best offensive lineman outside of Highland Park's David Richards, Stewart is also an outstanding student who searched carefully for a school that offered exactly what he wanted. He is articulate, outgoing, and sure of his goals. Everyone who talked to him was impressed.

"It's my life and my decision to make," he said, early in the game. "My parents respect that, and they're staying out of it."

Last week, he took his last visit — to Arkansas — and decided late Sunday to go to TCU.

He committed Monday, and said, "I never realized until last night just how much my father wanted me to go to Arkansas. We were up till 2 a.m. talking about it."

After that, the situation grew steadily worse.

"There's no doubt," he said Wednesday, "that I'd have been much better off going the other way. It would have been so easy to go to Arkansas, but TCU is where I want to go to school."

He said he left "of my own volition," Tuesday, but there was a strain in the voice.

"Tonight," he said Wednesday, "will be the really bad night. For now, I'm back home ... if this is still home ... .

"I guess it'll all depend on how everything goes. I hope we can work things out. Maybe we can take some time and relax and forget this, I don't know. But if not, I've got a home for the next four years."

AND HOW does he feel now, about his commitment?

"I never considered changing it," he said. "I'm sorry about the reaction here, but it was a choice I needed to make, not someone else. Not anyone else.

"Just say I made the right choice — and so did everyone else who committed to TCU today. I have no doubts. It's where I want to go to school, and someday, I'll play for TCU in the Cotton Bowl.

"I just hope everything else works out. I hope everyone adjusts. Things aren't too good around here right now, but it'll be okay ... ."

TCU recruiting coordinator Ray Sewalt said the whole affair had left him nonplussed.

"I've been doing this a long time, and until today, I guess I thought I'd seen everything," he said. "But I don't really understand this.

"This is a matter of a young man's education — maybe the most important choice he'll ever make. It doesn't matter where he plays football, because that ends, in time. But it matters what he does with his life. And, Good Lord, it's not as if this young man was unsure of what he was doing. He looked every school over very carefully. He turned down Texas and Oklahoma.

"Someday, I would hope my daughter would want to go to TCU ... but wherever she decides to go, it's her choice, and I'll do everything I can to see that she gets into that school.

"I just don't understand this."

Neither does Coy Stewart.

"It's not the greatest way to start off, is it?" he says. "I wasn't expecting this to become a conflict between my school and my family. I never expected to choose between them. But I've made my choice."

He says he hopes that, in time, his father "will get used to it." To the point perhaps, of coming to see him play?

"No," he says, slowly, "I don't think so. He's for the Razorbacks ... all the way."

Title only 4-5A item left to decide

Girls Basketball

Midland Lee and San Angelo are in the girls state basketball playoffs. The only questions remaining are which team will win the District 4-5A title and which will be the runner-up?

The Rebels and Bobcats are tied for the league lead with 11-2 records. Should the two remian tied after tonight's games, then they'll meet at a neutral site for a one-game playoff to determine champion and runner-up status for the playoffs.

Lee, with a 22-6 overall record, will host Big Spring at Chaparral Center tonight while Midland High, third and eliminated at 9-4, 18-9, travels to San Angelo. The Bobcats are 17-8 overall. Both games are scheduled for an 8 p.m. tipoff.

Elsewhere around the district, Odessa Permian will wrap up its season at Abilene Cooper while Abilene High finishes up at Odessa High.

THE REBELS are the 4-5A defending champions and Coach Shirley Stephenson would like to repeat that honor. In the six previous years of girls basketball at Lee, her teams have either won or shared the crown in each, earning four trips to the playoffs. Twice Lee teams were eliminated from a state berth in district playoff games when only one team from each district qualified.

"We sure would (like to win district)," said Stephenson. "Right now we just want to play and beat Big Spring and then hope things turn out all right."

When Lee and San Angelo start play in the state playoffs, they will go up against District 3-5A. The Amarillo High Sandies and Palo Duro Lady Dons have each clinched a berth but are in the same boat as 4-5A: They're tied for first place at 14-1. AHS is 18-4 overall while Palo Duro has a 20-2 record.

FOR NOW, Big Spring is the team to contend with and the Steers have been a team that has caused others some problems all year. They have only a 5-8 record, but have lost several close games.

"Big Spring's got a good team," said Stephenson. "They've got some good shooters and they're quick so we'll have to be on our toes and take care of business. I consider Big Spring to be a pretty good team."

One area that has affected all teams this season has been the fight against the current bugs going around. Lee is no exception.

"We're getting better," said Stephenson. "We've had some kids down but they managed to hand in there and not be totally incapacitated."

The Rebels are led in scoring by Felicia Farias who has an 18.5 average for the season and an even hotter 19.2 in 4-5A play.

Tunya Mayberry is a distant second at 12.0 and Stacy Harmon third at 10.8

The Lee junior varisty is scheduled to play tonight 6:15 p.m.

SHOULD LEE defeat Big Spring, then all Rebel eyes will be turned to cross-town rival Midland High. The Bulldogs could eliminate any need for a district playoff game with a victory over San Angelo.

Midland High was eliminated from the playoffs Monday night despite defeating Odessa High 74-49. The Bulldogs were two games off the pace going into the game and needed a San Angelo loss to Abilene High or a Lee loss to Odessa Permian to remain in the hunt.

Neither happened and the Bulldogs have been reduced to a title-spoiling role.

There is another reason Midland High would like to defeat San Angelo: revenge. In the first meeting between the two teams, the Bobcats pulled out a 40-38 victory at Chap Center.

The Bulldogs, runners-up in last year's race and winners of one playoff game before being eliminated, are led by Denise Lanz with a 13.2 average, 14.9 in district games. Orvetta Johnson is the only other double-figure scorer with a 12.5 average.

Junior varsity action is also scheduled for 6:15 p.m.

Hogs fight off A&M rally, 59-58

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Alvin Robertson scored 18 points for Arkansas and the Razorbacks outlasted a late Texas A&M surge to beat the Aggies 59-58 in a Southwest Conference basketball game Wednesday night.

Texas A&M sophomore Doug Lee's left-handed layup rolled across the rim and fell off with two seconds left.

Arkansas led by eight points with four minutes to go, but Darnell Williams pulled the Aggies to within one with an eight-foot side jumper with 17 seconds remaining.

Todd Holloway immediately fouled the Razorback's Scott Rose. When Rose missed his first free throw, Williams rebounded, brought the ball down and passed off to Lee under the basket.

The Razorback's Joe Kleine grabbed the rebound to end the Aggie threat.

The win was Arkansas's eighth-straight over Texas A&M and it raised the Razorbacks' record to 17-4 for the season and 8-1 in the SWC. A&M fell to 11-11 for the season and 4-7 in the conference.

Arkansas never trailed in the game and was only tied once, at 22-22 late in the first half. The Razorbacks led 30-28 at the half and, behind the shooting of Kleine, Robertson and Ricky Norton, built the lead to eight points by midway through the second half.

Robertson, who fouled out with 2:30 remaining, shared game-high honors with his 18 points, Kleine added 14 for Arkansas and Leroy Sutton had 10.

Holloway had 18 points for the Aggies, Williams and Kenny Brown each scored 12.

ARKANSAS COACH Eddie Sutton said he felt fortunate to win the game.

"At the end of the season we'll look back and it will still count as a win," said a relieved Sutton.

"We made a lot of mistakes, and our inability to hit free throws gave them a chance to win. The young man just blew the shot at the end," he said.

"Alvin Robertson played real well for us and our team gave great effort. We're still making too many silly mistakes, but as difficult as this week figures to be, it's great to win the first one," said Sutton.

Aggie Coach Shelby Metcalf said he thought his team played hard, but he was disappointed with the close loss.

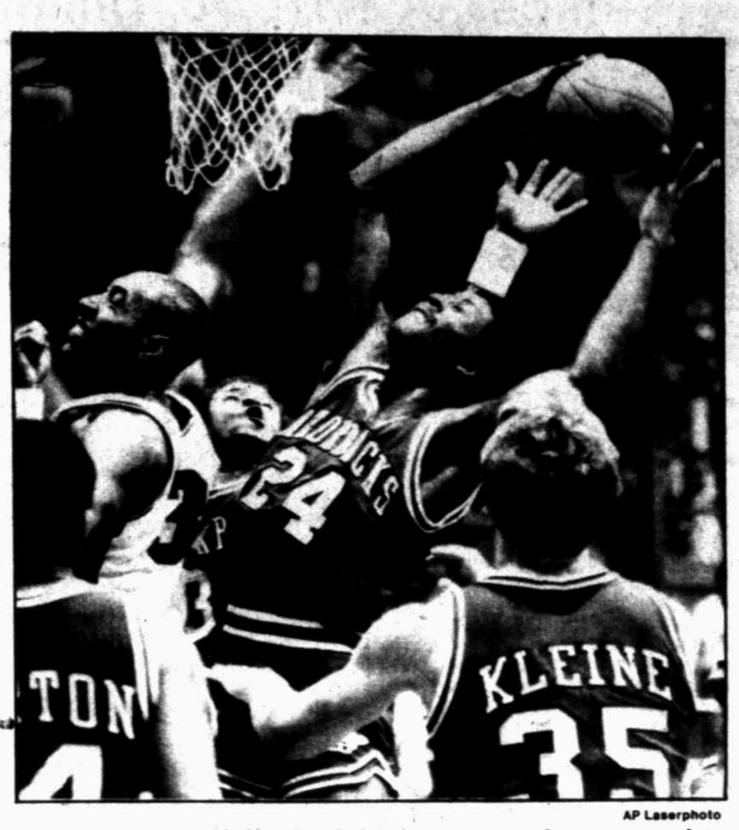

"That's two one-point games in a row that we've lost," said Metcalf.

"I really thought we were going to win the ball game. ... One shot, and we would have won the game, but unfortunately for us, it didn't drop.

Gullikson stuns No. 2 Noah

MEMPHIS (AP) — Tim Gullikson continued a string of upsets at the $315,000 U.S. National Indoor Tennis Championships Wednesday night as he stunned No. 2 seed Yannick Noah 7-6, 6-4.

Gullikson's victory continued a series of surprises that saw fifth-seeded Bill Scanlon, No. 10 Vitas Gerulaitis, No. 13 Henrik Sundstrom and No. 14 Mel Purcell eliminated by a quartet of unseeded players during the afternoon session at the Racquet Club of Memphis.

Top-seeded Jimmy Connors was to see his first action of the tournament against Italy's Gianni Ocleppo in a late match.

Gullikson found himself trailing 6-4 in the first set tie-breaker but was given a second chance when the Frenchman double-faulted. Gullikson later went ahead 8-7 when Noah netted a return and won the opening set with a passing shot to the 1983 French Open champion's forehand side.

Earlier, Scanlon fell to Peter Fleming, 6-4, 6-4.

Tech powers past Texas, 94-65

LUBBOCK (AP) — Junior forward Quinton Anderson paced five players in double figures with 14 points to power Texas Tech past Texas 94-65 in Southwest Conference basketball action Wednesday night.

Anderson, a 6-9 junior, scored 12 of his points in the second half as the Red Raiders extended a 10-point halftime lead to a 31-pont bulge over the young Longhorns.

The victory keeps the Raiders tied for third place in the conference with Southern Methodist at 7-3. Overall, Tech is now 13-8. Texas falls to 1-8 and 5-15.

The Longhorns stayed even with the Raiders throughout the first eight minutes of the game. A 16-footer by David Seitz notted the scored at 14-14 with 11:48 left in the opening half.

Tech then outscored Texas 11-3 over the next three minutes to build a 25-17 lead. Tech increased that margin to 41-31. Tech outscored Texas 19-5 in the first eight minutes of the second half to pad its cushion to 60-36 and put the game out of reach.

Joining Anderson in double figures for the Raiders were Bubba Jennings with 13 points and Vince Taylor, Dwight Phillips and Phil Wallace, each with 11.

Texas junior forward Carlton Cooper led all scorers with 19 points. Dennis Perryman added 16 for the Longhorns.

TEXAS COACH Bob Weltlich said Texas Tech has too much balance for the Longhorns.

"They have 10 guys of equal ability ... . It seems like every time there was a dead ball, they would run three more guys in. When you have 10 of equal ability, it makes everyone better," said Weltlich.

Tech coach Gerald Myers said he was pround that his team came out and played with intensity and respect for the Longhorns.

"They didn't approach it like it was an easy game," said Myers.

"Texas is a very young team. They are playing several freshmen. Its tough when you have to play that young game in and game out. Maybe they've lost the confidence, but they're improved," said Myers.

Koncak sets pace for Ponies win over Owls

HOUSTON (AP) — Jon Koncak scored 16 points and pulled down 12 rebounds to lead the Southern Methodist Mustangs to a 58-54 Southwest Conference basketball victory over the Rice Owls Wednesday night.

Koncak, a 7-0 junior center, connected on 7 of 9 field goals and was 2-2 from the free throw line as the Ponies improved their SWC record to 7-3 and their overall record to 19-5.

Rice took a 36-33 halftime lead before dropping to a 4-6 league record and 8-12 overall. SMU used a pressure defense to wrestle the lead away from the Owls mid-way through the second half.

With the Owls leading 44-37, and 13:58 to play, the Mustangs went into a full court press. Rice, suffering from poor shot selection and ball handling errors, fell behind 51-50 with 3:58 left.

SMU then produced six unanswered points and edged to to 57-50 lead with 25 seconds to play.

Guard Carl Wright sparked the Ponies' press and contributed 14 points. Tracy Steele scored a seaso high 20 points to lead the Owls followed by Tony Barnett with 12 points.

Barnett was the top Rice rebounder with seven.

SMU COACH Dave Bliss said the Ponies' pressing defense was the key to their victory.

"The biggest thing for us was the press in the second half," Bliss said. "That really slowed down their offense and gave our offense some flow.

"It just changed the entire complexion of the game."

Rice Coach Tommy Suitts praised Koncak and Wright.

"Jon Koncak is a great player," Suitts said. "He must love me because he owns us. He probably shot 75 percent from the field tonight and in the second half it seemed like he got every defensive rebound.

"We never got a second shot."

The defensive play of Wright, Suitts said, "was a real key for them. He was forcing turnovers all over the court. He's just a great athlete."

Steele sparked the Owls in the first half connecting on his first six shots from the field and finishing the game with six of eight shots.

Jabbar breaks field goal mark

By The Associated Press

He is known for his sky-hook, a sweeping arc shot that has been deadly accurate over his 15 years in the National Basketball Association. Yet it was an unusual baseline drive with a reverse layup that made Kareem Abdul-Jabbar the NBA's all-time leader in field goals.

It was the Abdul-Jabbar's 12,682nd basket, moving the 37-year-old Los Angeles Laker star ahead of Wilt Chamberlain.

And, if he can average about 19.7 points a game for the remainder of the season, he can surpass Chamberlain's league mark of 31,419 points.

"There's really no signifcance for me in the Chamberlain matchup," Abdul-Jabbar said following Wednesday night's 111-109 victory over the Boston Celtics. "I used to emulate him a bit when I was in high school, but I have my own goals to achieve in the NBA, and if I play long enough I'll probably achieve them.

"I was not really aware of this field goal mark. It popped up today for the first time."

The 7-foot-2 Abdul-Jabbar finished with 27 points as the Lakers extended their winning streak to eight games, while snapping Boston's 11-game unbeaten home string. Jamaal Wilkes scored 25 points, Magic Johnson 20 and James Worthy 17.

76ers 118, Rockets 107

Philadelphia, behind a 42-point performance by Julius Erving, snapped a three-game losing streak by handing Houston its fourth consecutive defeat. Houston rookie center Ralph Sampson scored a career-high 41 points.

Erving scored 16 points in the third period as the defending NBA champions twice built 17-point leads. But Sampson scored 18 points in the third quarter, then added 14 in the final period as Houston sliced the 76ers lead to eight points, the closest the Rockets could get.

Houston's Elvin Hayes broke the NBA record by playing in his 1,271st regular-season game. That erased the mark of 1,270 set by John Havlicek of Boston from 1963 through 1978. Hayes has missed only eight games in his 16-year career.

Demon Deacons use double OT to beat Terrapins

College Basketball

By The Associated Press

Overtime work has really paid off for the Wake Forest basketball team this season.

Playing in their third straight overtime game and fifth of the season, the 14th-ranked Demon Deacons emerged with a 90-87 victory Wednesday night over the 13th-ranked Maryland Terrapins.

This time it took two overtimes for the Demon Deacons to win, as Danny Young and Chuck Kepley came through with clutch free throws at the end.

"This is the most overtime games I can remember being involved in," Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy said the Deacons won for the 16th time in 20 outings. "Our offense struggled all night, but we came through with the big play when we needed it."

In other action involving the Top Twenty, No. 8 Illinois crushed Northwestern 73-49; No. 10 Oklahoma whipped Nebraska 78-67, and No. 15 Louisville stopped Southern Mississippi 63-56.

Top Twenty

Young hit a crucial layup to give Wake Forest the lead in the second overtime. He later added two free throws, and Kepley chipped in four more from the line.

"Danny Young did a great job taking charge in overtime," Tacy said. "He was there when we needed the points and leadership. Chuck Kepley is a good shooter. I am glad we had him on the line when we did."

As for Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell, it was a matter of "missed chances."

"We had the game won five or six times but still lost," Driesell said. "We have got to learn to win these close games."

Ben Coleman's running one-hand shot with six seconds left in regulation tied the score at 73. Wake Forest trailed by as many as six points in the first extra period, but Kenny Green's tap-in with 11 seconds left forced the second overtime.

Efrem Winters tossed in 18 points and Bruce Douglas added 17 as Illinois crushed Northwestern and took a half-game lead over Purdue in the battle for first place in the Big Ten. The victory also was the seventh in a row for Illinois, now 9-1 in the conference and 18-2 overall.

Wayman Tisdale hit his first seven shots and finished with 33 points to lift Oklahoma over Nebraska. Tisdale scored 25 of his points in the second half to help the Sooners lead by as many as 15 points, 65-50, with about 7:30 to go in the game.

Dave Hoppen led Nebraska's scoring with a career-matching best of 27 points.

Milt Wagner and Lancaster Gordon each scored 14 points and Louisville hit 11 of 12 free throws down the stretch to defeat Southern Mississippi. The Cardinals erased a four-point deficit by outscoring the Golden Eagles 9-2 to go up 54-49 with 1:26 to go. Gordon had six points during the run.

A jumper by Curtis Green pulled Southern Mississippi within 54-51 with 1:06 to go, but Wagner hit six of Louisville's 11 free throws in the waning minutes to keep the Golden Eagles at bay.

"I thought we really worked hard on the defense," Louisville Coach Denny Crum said. "We kept a lot of pressure on them, and that's a hard kind of team for us to play because they do such a good job controlling the ball and keeping the tempo down."

Others

Elsewhere, Ralph Lewis and Larry Koretz each scored 23 points as La Salle routed Fairfield 94-76; Earl Jones scored 31 points to lead the University of the District of Columbia past Wright State 89-84 in a rematch of last year's NCAA Division II finalists; Tim Dillon scored 27 points, including 13 of 13 from the free-throw line in the second half, to pace Northern Illinois over Eastern Michigan 60-53; Lorenzo Charles' 23 points led North Carolina State to a 69-59 victory over Clemson and Greg Beckwith hit two free throws with eight seconds left to lift Richmond over Navy 69-66.

Also, Central Michigan's Jeff Heide scored a game-high 26 points to trigger the Chippewas to a 78-68 victory over Ball State; Patrick Elmore scored 20 as The Citadel held off VMI 65-61.

Texas, A&M, SMU gain best SWC hauls

By The Associated Press

Texas, Texas A&M, and Southern Methodist made the best Southwest Conference bluechip hauls of state schoolboy football talent on national signing day, but Texas Tech welcomed perhaps the best running back.

Notre Dame, Alabama, and Oklahoma State stole away with three of the best 15 players in Texas in a heavier than usual defection of local stars on Wednesday.

The three escapees, all members of the SWC Coaches' bluechip list, were running back Tim Brown of Dallas Wilson who decided on the Fighting Irish; running back Thurman Thomas of Fort Bend Willowridge who signed with Oklahoma State; and defensive back John Norwood of West Brook, who joined Alabama.

Thomas was a Parade Magazine All-American who decided on OSU instead of Texas A&M.

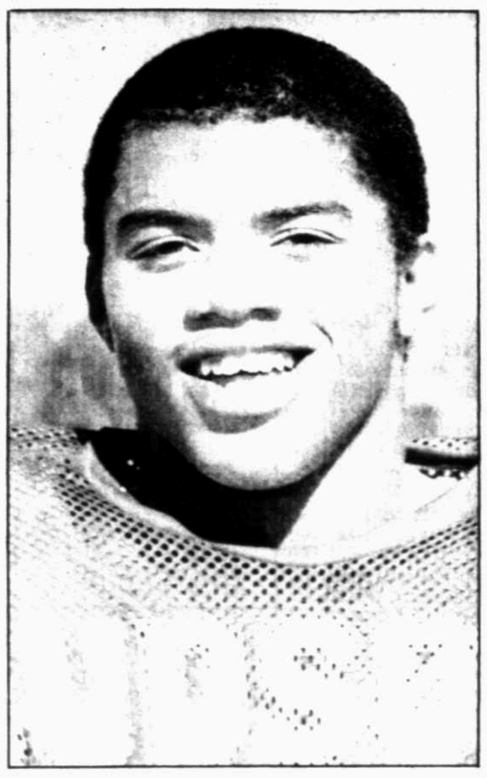

Brown turned down SMU and Nebraska.

Texas Tech landed the leading rusher in Class 5A history in Converse Judson running back Chris Pryor plus teammate wide receiver Chip Lambert.

The 5-10, 195-pound Pryor scored four touchdowns and rushed for 203 yards in the Rockets' 25-21 State Class 5A championship victory over Midland Lee.

Pyror's 2,804 yards in his senior season broke the Class 5A record held by Craig James, who later played at SMU.

Tech Coach Jerry Moore said,"It excites us to get a player with the talents of Chris Pryor. He's accustomed to winning and we're looking for him to have a great future at Texas Tech."

Converse Judson's Chris Pryor signs with Texas Tech's Red Raiders

SMU, STUNG by a bogus letter mailed to some recruits that said the school had been placed on NCAA probation, did well anyway.

SMU signed Parade Magazine's No. 1 player in the nation.

The Mustangs inked bluechip 6-5, 300-pound offensive tackle Dave Richards of Highland Park, who was on every bluechip list in the nation.

SMU also collected the signature of bluechip Galveston Ball linebacker Reginald Ballard, who almost went to Texas Christian but changed his mind.

"I'm very proud of this year's class," said SMU Coach Bobby Collins. "It was very good especially considering the circumstances we had to recruit under. It shows the strength of our program that quality kids continue to sign."

THE AGGIES did well, signing Tony Jones, a wide receiver from Houston Sam Houston, a dynamite receiver with near 10-second speed in the 100 meters, and bluechip defensive lineman Shane Dybala of Van Vleck, and Tony Thompson, a slick wide receiver from Houston Lamar, who was a member of Texas Football Magazine's Top Thirty.

Also, later in the day Coach Jackie Sherrill welcomed bluechip offensive lineman Calvin Whitfield of Dickinson, one of the top 15 players in the state.

The Aggies also got highly regarded defensive back Tim Landrum of Plano, and running back Melvin Collins of Temple.

"We recruited to our needs better this year than last," said Sherrill. "We have put together two excellent recruiting years back-to-back."

SWC champion Texas scored with blue chip center Bill Roden of Cleburne, All-American defensive back Charles Washington of Dallas Spruce, and Illinois All-State lineman Carter Hill of Naperville.

The Longhorn signing of bluechip offensive lineman Steve Llewellyn of Fort Worth Eastern Hills was to be a mere formality later Wednesday.

TEXAS CHRISTIAN and Baylor did well, signing speed and skill players to fit their needs.

TCU Coach Jim Wacker was particularly proud of San Antonio Jay quarterback Scott Ankrom, one of the most highly sought players in the state at his position.

Houston Yates quarterback Charlie Lewis and Lake Highlands defensive back Rod Duffy made Baylor Coach Grant Teaff beam.

"Our priorties were speed and overall athletic ability and no group could have made me happier," Teaff said.

NEW ARKANSAS Coach Ken Hatfield recruited two quarterbacks from St. Louis, including highly sought Steve Atwater of Lutheran North.

Arkansas also got a pair of Texas running backs, Wayne Stewart, from Irving and Samuel Van Dyke III, from Lake Highlands.

Also, the Razorbacks signed wide receiver Gregg Allen of Dallas Roosevelt, and tight end Kirk Whillock, of Arlington, Texas.

New Rice Coach Watson Brown went out of state to get defensive lineman Joel Giddens of Valdosta, Ga., and tight end Ted Humphreys of Albuquerque.

Houston signed such talented players as lineman Charles Diaz of Midland Lee, and defensive end David Bearden of Baytown Sterling.

Moriarty loses basketball, football coach

MORIARTY (AP) — Ted Hern, Moriarty football and basketball coach, has resigned to go into private business in Thoreau.

"I guess it was an opportunity that had been there for some time," said Robert Pavia, an assistant principal at Moriarty High School, who has taken over Hern's duties as athletic director.

Frank Ortiz, an assistant basketball coach, was selected to run the basketball program after Hern resigned Friday.

Hern had been the head basketball coach for the past two seasons.

Mercantile to purchase UnitedBank preferred stock

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy Writer

UnitedBank has signed a letter of intent with Mercantile Texas Corp., of Dallas, for the purchase of a new class of UnitedBank's non-voting preferred stock totaling almost $4 million.

In Wednesday's announcement, UnitedBank president Wayne Merritt said the actual letter signing was Jan. 21.

"We're just delighted that they're willing to invest this money in not only UnitedBank but also in Midland. It shows their support for the bank and for the area."

In addition, Merrit said, the transaction will accomplish several goals for both parties.

"WE KNEW THAT for us to have the competitive position we wanted, we were going to need what's commonly referred to as an 'upstream bank' and we knew that Mercantile was actively calling in the market. So we got together and discovered we had several mutual goals."

Mercantile Texas Corp., with year end assets of $11.9 billion, is the fifth largest bank holding company in Texas. With its lead bank in Dallas, Mercantile has 29 member banks in the state and is negotiating a merger with Southwest Bancshares of Houston. Upon completion of the merger, Mercantile will become the second largest bank holding company in the state.

With its prospective financial backing, Merritt believes UnitedBank can better service the Permian Basin's financial needs.

"We will have the ability to lend on the order of $1.5 million to any one customer. That doesn't necessarily mean that we'll choose to do that but we will have that ability.

"AS FAR AS WE are concerned, to be active in oil and gas lending, you need to be able to lend somewhere close to that amount to handle the middle market type customers. And for the larger customers we will have the back up of Mercantile Bank to take overlines — the amount of a loan which exceeds the bank's legal lending limit."

In a second announcement, Merritt said UnitedBank has requested approval to issue an additional 500,000 shares of common stock.

Currently, UnitedBank has 300,000 shares of common stock outstanding. The new issuance will bring the total to about 800,000.

According to Merritt, Mercantile also will receive warrants which will permit it to acquire up to 24 percent, or about 200,000 shares, of UnitedBank's outstanding common stock.

A STOCK PURCHASING warrant entitles its owner to purchase a specified amount of authorized but unissued stock at a set price during a specific time period — usually several years.

According to Merritt, UnitedBank plans only to issue this block of preferred stock. Preferred and common stocks will be redeemable at the option of UnitedBank, Merritt said.

"If for any reason, in a year or two from now, we feel the deal is not working out, we can then redeem the warrants — essentially giving them their money back."

The proposed transaction, he said, is subject to approval by federal banking authorities and will not alter the bank's management.

"AT THIS POINT they (Mercantile) will be another investor in the bank. The board of directors will control the bank and make the decisions here in Midland. Mercantile will not have any kind of a vote as far as management is concerned, so UnitedBank will still be a Midland bank," he said.

With the issuance of additional shares of common stock, UnitedBank's goal is to have most, if not all, of its stock purchased in the Midland area. While Mercantile can purchase up to 24 percent, more than 75 percent of the common stock will be owned by investors from the Permian Basin, according to Merritt.

"The current stockholders believe that the best way for UnitedBank to prosper is to have most of the stock owned by Midland people. This was the feeling they had when they opened the bank."

UnitedBank, formerly known as Mid-Cities National Bank, opened Aug. 1, 1983, at Midland Regional Air Terminal, in place of Metro Bank which failed July 29. In November, Mid-Cities announced it would move from the Air Terminal to downtown and change its name to UnitedBank National Association.

UNITEDBANK'S TEMPORARY location is at 511 W. Missouri. Later this year, the bank plans to move to its permanent location in the UnitedBank Building under construction at 500 W. Illinois St.

UnitedBank's loan portfolio is about $9 million to date. When UnitedBank opened in August, it had about $24.5 million in deposits and about $7 million in loans. Of those deposits, Merritt said, about 75 percent were "hot deposits" which have been replaced by "core deposits."

"The former bank had deposits which were placed by brokers from across the country. A hot deposit has absolutely no loyalty to the bank; it is just looking for a rate (interest)," he explained.

"We did not consider these hot deposits to be core deposits so we let them run off as they matured. We have since replaced those deposits with local core deposits which provide the foundation for our funding source."

MERRITT EMPHASIZED he was pleased with the proposed transactions.

"I feel just great. I think that it is a super indication from an institution (Mercantile) which is respected in the market, about what we're trying to do and how we're going about it. They (Mercantile) just don't walk up and put almost $4 million dollars in non-voting stock in a bank without having a good feeling that things are being done right. And that's what is really encouraging to us."

Merritt believes UnitedBank will become more competitive as a result of the proposed transactions.

"When these transactions are complete we will have a very substantial capital base which, I think, enhances our competitive position.

"I THINK IN a market that has been volatile, like ours, people should look at the capital accounts of banks as one assessment of their relative strength."

Merritt said the transaction developed in stages.

"It would be difficult to put a date on it because one of our current customers was involved in the very beginning. I didn't know how serious it was for some time so I didn't really follow up on it for awhile. However, for the past 30 days we have been intensively negotiating this letter of intent."

Before the transaction can be approved, he added, UnitedBank must file its request documents with the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency in Dallas. The comptroller will then review the documents and make a decision, he said.

Once the comptroller has approved the transaction, the matter will be formally presented to the bank's shareholders for their approval. Following their approval, the stock will then be registered and sold and the formal purchase agreement will be negotiated, he said.

Midas president retires to his own muffler shop

CHICAGO (AP) — As president of Midas International, Richard de Camara earned $200,000 a year running the nation's largest chain of muffler shops.

Like many executives, he wasn't looking forward to retirement. So two years ago, when de Camara turned 65, he decided to go into business for himself with — what else? — a Midas franchise.

"Why ... would I go with someone else when this is what I knew the best?" asked the affable de Camara. If nothing else, "It's a good endorsement of the product," he added.

De Camara was barely a day into retirement when he bought a Midas shop on a busy corner in Rolling Meadows, a suburb northwest of Chicago. Since then, he has bought three more stores in the Chicago area and one in Phoenix, Ariz. Next week, he will open another in Phoenix, and more are likely.

For de Camara, a retired Army colonel who's been working since he was 10, the transition from a $240 million company with more than 400 employees to a small business with 35 employees and annual sales of about $2.5 million has been smooth.

Yet he echoes the sentiments of many small-business owners: "It's tough to run a small business," in particular dealing with "an amazing amount of paperwork" and other matters more trivial than he's used to.

Born in New York and raised in Philadelphia, de Camara's colorful and varied career began with his first job, shining shoes at a repair shop.

He later joined the National Guard and was called to active duty in the Army before World War II. After the war he stayed in the Army, specializing in logistics.

After leaving the Army, he was hired by Koppers Co. Inc. in Pittsburgh, where he was groomed for an international post. Within months, however, he switched to the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway Co. in St. Louis as a vice president in charge of computers.

Several years later, de Camara was hired by the Illinois Central Gulf Railroad in Chicago to oversee the installation of a computer system. He later became vice president for administration at the railroad. When parent company IC Industries acquired Midas in 1972, he was shifted to Midas as vice president of administration. Six years later, he became president.

While at Midas, he got to know most of the dealers and visited more than half of the company's 1,500 shops worldwide — giving him a glimpse of why some shops are more successful than others.

He's now trying to put some of what he learned into practice.

With his 30-year-old son, Bob, a partner in the business, de Camara visits most of his Chicago-area stores daily. An early riser by habit from his days in the Army, he often starts his rounds by 7 a.m.

Richard de Camara, retired president of Midas International, talks with his son, Bob, in their Tolling Meadows, Ill., Midas muffler shop which they purchased shortly after the elder de Camara retired. Making the transition from chief of an international firm to a small business owner calls for new talents. "It's tough to run a small business," he said, "there's an amazing amount of paperwork."

Mexico warned to capitalize on liquidity of oil resources

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Mexico needs to start capitalizing on the "liquidity" of its lucrative oil resources if the country is to survive its long-term economic crisis, an economist says.

Continued sacrifices by the country's working class and an infusion of foreign capital also could straighten out Mexico's financial tailspin, said Dr. Edmundo Flores.

"Having oil means liquidity, credit and a chance for recovery," said Flores, who served as economic adviser to former Mexico president Luis Echeverria.

"In our case, there is hope," he said Wednesday. "I don't think there is hope for some other countries."

Flores addressed a special seminar of the Texas Daily Newspaper Association that concerned relations between Mexico and the United States.

The second half of the session is set for Mexico City, including private meetings with the country's president, Miguel de la Madrid, and the U.S. ambassador to Mexico, John Gavin.

"The working class of Mexico is paying a very high price for getting out of the crisis, for without that, there would be no solution," Flores said.

But, he said, the average Mexican doesn't have an "oil mentality" and mistrusts the idea of the country dealing with foreign capital.

"No Mexican president can say, 'We want foreign capital' without jeopardizing his image, but somehow he has to say it," Flores said. "There is in Mexico a great fear of opening the door for foreign capital."

Before the economic crisis, Mexico had been lulled into a sense of unseeing security, Flores said.

The country had almost full employment and was in the process of expanding and industrializing.

"The crisis of 1929 was predicted by a number of distinguished economists," Flores said. "We knew how to handle it. We knew it was coming.

"But no economist came out and said, 'There is going to be an economic crisis in 1980.' We simply weren't prepared," he said. "The crisis hit the countries that were in the process of industrializing very hard."

Flores reeled off a list of grim statistics resulting from Mexico's crisis — unemployment up by 50 percent, the cost of living increasing by 150 percent, inflation running over 100 percent, the value of the peso plummeting at an alarming rate.

Another casualty of the crisis was the reputation of former President Jose Lopez-Portillo, the economist said.

"If it came two years later, Lopez-Portillo would now be a hero," he said. "Because of Lopez-Portillo, everywhere we were expanding. It was like the captain of a boat that sinks because no one told him the big storm was coming."

Flores said there are some bright spots in Mexico's economic picture — tourism is up because of the battered peso and some U.S. industry has been settling in Mexico.

"I have a beautiful definition of a crisis," he said. "If your neighbor is unemployed, we have a recession. If you are unemployed, we have a crisis."

News unfair to nuclear power?

NEW YORK (AP) — The news media have painted an unfair and unbalanced picture of the nuclear power industry in recent weeks, "almost to the point of hysteria," according to the president of the Edison Electric Institute.

Nuclear power has proved itself to be safe in 700 years of operating experience, and to be a necessary option along with coal in the energy mix for America's future power needs, William McCollam Jr., told the New York Society of Security Analysts on Wednesday.

He said that the institute, which is an association of investor-owned electric utilities, has embarked on a "media blitz" to show reporters and editors the positive aspects of nuclear power.

"The handling of the nuclear power news of the past weeks has done a grave disservice not only to electric utilities, but to their shareholders and customers by painting the entire nuclear industry with the same broad brush," McCollam said.

"Let me say that the nuclear option is not dead, despite what you may gather from the recent news stories. Little effort has been evident to distinguish among the few companies with serious problems and the many which are successfully operating and building nuclear plants."

He said that last year about 13 percent of the nation's electricity was generated by nuclear power plants, and the nuclear share of electricity production is expected to rise to 20 percent in the next decade.

The institute chief said he found it heartening that America's newspapers were supporting nuclear power editorially. "In the midst of all the headlines, there seems to be editorial acceptance of the fact that nuclear is necessary. The emphasis on bad news on the front page tends to overshadow the good sense that often appears on the editorial page."

Within the past several weeks, a plant in Illinois was denied outright an operating license — an unprecedented move by federal regulators; a project in Indiana, where $2.5 billion has already been spent, was abandoned; a nuclear project in Ohio will be converted to coal-fired, a transition said to be difficult at best; and Wall Street bond rating services have dropped their gradings of several public utilities involved in nuclear projects saddled with major cost overruns.

But McCollam said those situations are separate, local incidents that constitute the minority, not the majority. "Our best projection is that there is not going to be a snowball effect," McCollam told the analysts.

Coal leasing again targeted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leasing of federal coal reserves may be investigated yet again, for a fourth time, according to Interior Secretary William Clark.

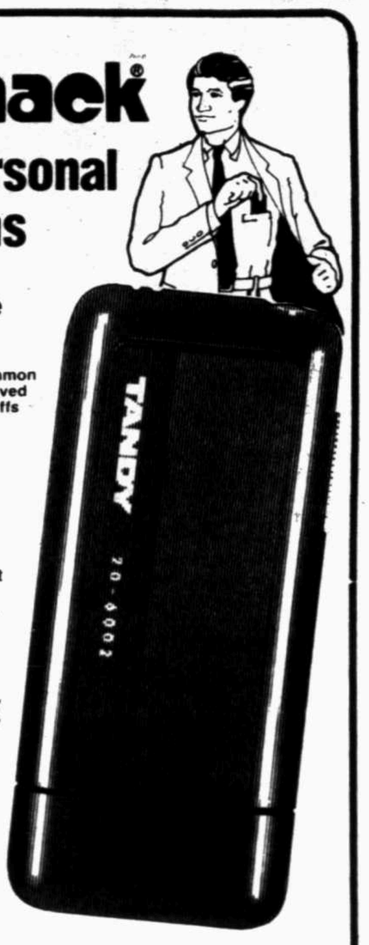

The Commission on Fair Market Value Policy for Federal Coal leasing met for the last time Wednesday and approved a report saying the Interior Department probably failed to get fair market value from the sale of rights to mine 1.6 billion tons of coal in the Powder River Basin in Montana and Wyoming in 1982.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., asked the commission to join him in asking the Justice Department to pursue a criminal investigation, but the commission declined.

Commission Chairman David Linowes instead pointed out that the report says the Justice Department "perhaps" should take a look.

Proxmire wrote Linowes that he was disturbed that Interior Department inspector general reports had not been made available to the commission for several months. Based on what he had read, "I have concluded there are grounds for a criminal investigation by the Justice Department," Proxmire wrote.

The public integrity section of the Justice Department concluded "the facts would not support criminal prosecution" of anyone involved.

House rejects 'pay-as-you-go' bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — In another blow to the nuclear and electric industries, the House is rejecting a notion that consumers should be billed on a pay-as-you-go basis to help pay for uncompleted new power plants.

With $100 million in higher electric rates already at stake and billions of dollars more looming over the horizon, the House voted 288-113 Wednesday night to overturn recent government regulations allowing the increases.

Whether the Republican-controlled Senate will go along is doubtful. Two similar bills have been introduced there but both have languished for months in the Energy Committee and not even a hearing has been scheduled.

The new regulations, adopted last June by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and endorsed by the Reagan administration, allow utilities to bill consumers for half of the financing costs of a new power plant as it is being built.

That change, long sought by the nuclear and electric industries, reversed two traditional government regulatory principles:

—Consumers should not have to pay for a new power plant until they are actually getting electricity from it.

—Stockholders, rather than consumers, should bear the risks of building new power plants.

With 100 nuclear plant cancellations the past decade, high interest rates, construction times of seven to 14 years and much more vigorous enforcement of safety regulations, utilities contended those risks have become just too great for them to bear alone.

Rep. Carlos Moorhead, R-Calif., who unsuccessfully led the opposition to the House-passed bill, called the FERC-approved changes "a necessary response to some very real problems in the utility industry."

Without such help, he said, utilities will be unable to raise the capital to build new plants to meet future electric needs.

"We should not be basing any law that precludes growth," said Rep. Dan Coates, R-Ind. "That might not be the intent of this bill, but it could be the effect."

Supporters, however, called their bill "the most important piece of consumer legislation we'll handle this year" and said the FERC policy would only encourage utilities to build more unneeded power plants.

"It makes it much easier to finance a plant that in fact may be imprudent," Rep. Richard Ottinger, R-N.Y., said of the commission's decision to include part of the cost of "construction work in progress" — CWIP — in electric rates. "Consumers could end up bearing the burden for a canceled plant."

"If you look at recent history, in each instance the utilities and the government have over-estimated the need for new generating capacity," said Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn.

The House-approved bill and the FERC regulations apply to only about 10 percent of the nation's utilities — those with wholesale rates set by the federal government.

Removal of nursing care proposed for Trinity Towers

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A request to discontinue nursing care services at Trinity Towers and add them to Trinity Towers Manor Park will be heard by the Texas Health Facilities Commission in Austin April 4.

"We're looking for a continuing care type arrangement (at Manor Park)..."
— Bill Saxton

Operated by Midland Presbyterian Homes, a non-profit organization, the retirement facilities would swap nursing services and custodial care if approved.

The application seeks to remove 31 skilled nursing beds from the health care floor at Trinity Towers, according to Bill Saxton, Midland Presbyterian Homes chief executive officer.

Also, custodial care services, provided on the third floor of the south tower for residents who need assistance in bathing, dressing and taking medicine would be eliminated from the 14-year-old facility, located at 2800 W. Illinois, he said.

Plans for Manor Park include the construction of a 60-bed personal/health care unit in the first phase of building on 40 acres of donated land at 2208 N. Loop 250 West. If the project is approved construction should take about a year.

"When Trinity Towers was built, the idea was for it to be a retirement center," he said, explaining as residents grew older and required nursing services, they were added.

"So we're converting it back," he said.

"We're looking for a continuing care type arrangement (at Manor Park). People enter retirement, they're looking for that security, and if they have an emergency situtation, it will be provided for them."

Construction of Manor Park began with $6 million in donations. The final stages, expected to be completed in seven to nine years, will result in a $40 million project with 416 retirment homes and a 150-unit apartment complex, Saxton said.

A couple of clusters of townhouses and garden homes have been completed, with the majority already housing residents. At this time, a central facility and the first wing of the mid-rise apartment complex are under construction.

The central facility, expected to be finished in December, will include a non-denominational chapel, activities room, living room, exercise room, 12-person jacuzzi, private and central dining rooms, snack bar, commissary, gift shop, library, atrium, barber and beauty shops and the administrative offices.

The beginning, three-story 30-unit Wallace Apartments, expected to be completed next fall, are included in the first phase with a total of 56 town houses and 42 garden houses.

"We're building based on needs, not speculation," Saxton said. As homes are occupied, more are constructed.

While the first building phase calls for 31 nursing care beds and 19 custodial care beds in the combined personal/health care unit, the master plan calls for the construction of two separate facilities.

A 60-bed health care center will provide full nursing service and infirmary care for residents and a 60-bed personal care center will provide supportive assistance for residents.

Residents of Manor Park now are equipped with a temporary infirmary. Those needing more health care can be transferred to Trinity Towers, Saxton said.

If the application is approved by the health facilities commission, residents of Trinity Towers could receive their skilled nursing care at Manor Park.

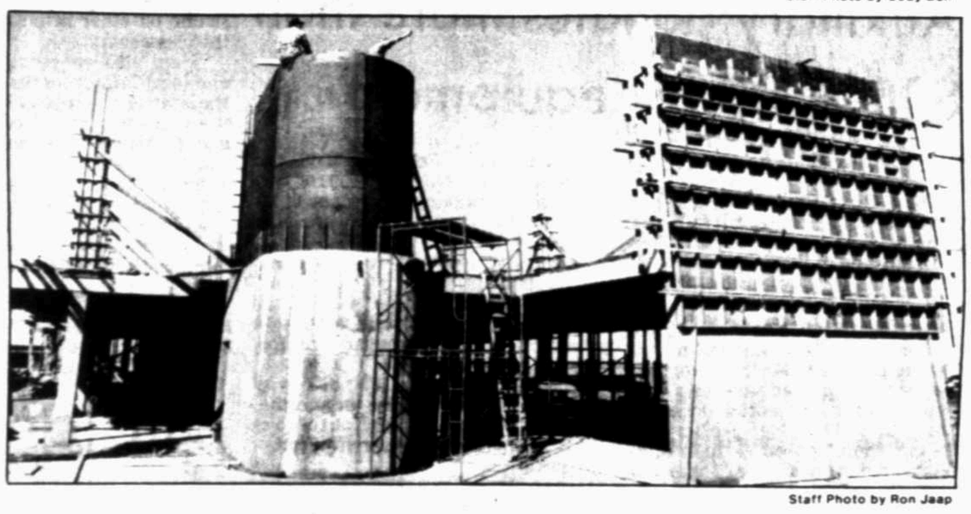

Opposition to the request must be filed with the THFC by 5 p.m. March 14.

Videotape outlines High Frontier plan

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Midland Republican women are looking to the skies for defense.

An eight-minute videotape on the proposed High Frontier project was shown by Fran Hillin at the Wednesday luncheon of the Midland County Republican Women's Club.

The videotape explains the defense concept that would be based in space and not involve nuclear weapons. In March 1983, President Reagan called for development of a space-based weapons systems as a potential deterrent to nuclear attack. Labeled "Star Wars" by some critics, many of the ideas Reagan recommended were based on the High Frontier project.

The short videotapes include a 30-second commercial and will be used in the Republican campaign this year, she said.

Mrs. Hillin purchased the videotape and plans to show it to anyone interested in the defense plan. She has joined the grassroots effort in promoting the concept across the country.

Using former congressman Robert Dornan as narrator, the videotape shows shots of the Pentagon, White House, U.S. Capitol and a family home. Dornan comments that those locations are totally without defense of strikes by intercontinental missiles.

High Frontier is designed with a three-stage system of defending the United States against missile attacks. The first one is a system of satellites in space, referred to as space trucks, that detect when a missile has been shot off toward the U.S. Sensors in these satellites can detect the missile within the first seven minutes after it has left the ground.

These space trucks are equipped with heat-seeking interceptor missiles that destroy the enemy's warheads.

Ex-deputy to fight for right to run

By ED TODD

Gary Painter

Gary Painter's thwarted plans to campaign for sheriff of Midland County may be resurging.

"I do feel I've got a pretty good court case," the 36-year-old former sheriff's patrol lieutenant said Wednesday. He said he is seeking a lawyer knowledgeable in Texas election laws to help him fight for his candidacy.

Painter, deputy under Sheriff Dallas Smith for 1½ years, resigned his $29,712-a-year job Monday afternoon. "I didn't think it was right to work for Dallas and campaign against him at the same time," he said.

His plans were to challenge the 41-year-old Smith for the Republican Party nomination for sheriff. Winner of that race would be contested by Democrat Joe Carr, 44, a Midland police detective sergeant who four years ago lost to Smith in the sheriff's race by a ratio to 2 to 1 — 21,823 to 9,334 votes.

Painter said he was encouraged to run, since "a lot of people" in Midland and in the rural areas were "dissatisfied with the current administration."

But by the time he located William T. "Bill" Shaner, the Midland County Republican Party chairman, to file his application for candidacy, the 6 p.m. Monday filing deadline was almost 2½ hours into the past. Filing began Jan. 7. Shaner, a geological engineer who said he didn't foresee any late filings, was on an oilwell site north of Plains.

SHANER ACCEPTED Painter's application and filing fee on the condition that the Texas Secretary of State would sanction the late filing. It was rejected.

"I'm really sorry," Shaner said Wednesday night. He noted that Karen C. Gladney, director of the Secretary of State's Elections Division, told him that "6 o'clock is 6 o'clock" and that that Texas Election Code rule would "stand up in any court in the country. That's the letter of the law." Painter said Ms. Gladney told him that Painter had had a full month in which to file with Shaner, who said he had been available 80 percent of the time to accept filings.

However, Shaner said that Painter could enter the sheriff's race as a write-in candidate in the Nov. 6 general election.

Painter said he might consider that avenue or running as an independent in the general election if he doesn't get on the May 5 primary ballot.

"I don't see how a person can win as a write-in," he said. "I don't think it would be very practical."

Justice Sprayberry defendant in civil suit

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

When Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry enters court today, he won't be sitting as a judge.

Instead, he's the defendant in a civil suit brought by a woman who claims he humilitated and verbally abused her during an argument over a traffic incident two years ago.

The plaintiff, 56-year-old Dorthy Robinson of Midland, says Sprayberry announced that he was a justice of the peace, pointed his finger in her face and threatened to have her arrested after she allegedly cut in front of him near the intersection of Garfield and Front on Dec. 9, 1981.

Filed in January of 1982 by attorney Bob Evans, the suit alleges that Mrs. Robinson's civil rights were violated when Sprayberry detained her "without probable cause and threatened her with dire consequences."

Sprayberry admits rebuking the woman while waiting for the light to change and that he talked to her on the phone later that day. But he maintains he had to take evasive action to avoid an accident and did not abuse his authority as a justice of the peace.

Computers just introduce another way of doing things

What have computers wrought?

Chaos, loads of busywork and the same old thing done faster — if at all.

The proof is in the evidence.

The revolution which the computer age is causing is no more than change but for what? For naught? Could be, but not really. It simply introduces another way of doing things. In its developmental stages, it gives technology something to mull over: electronic gremlins.

Gremlins, you know, are those unseen troublemakers. They are old-timers who have been around ever since man started tinkering. When something goes wrong, the perpetrators invariably are the gremlins carrying out Murphy's Laws.

Grelims came into prominence with the advent of the mechanical age. When something went wrong with a piece of machinery, be it washing machine, airplane, Linotype or dynamo, the troubleshooters turned on the lights and began looking for those elusive little critters.

Eventually, they were ferreted out, and the machinery began working again. But like cockroaches, boll weevils and locusts, they always returned. The redeeming thing was that the troubleshooter knew where to look to snarl the menace.

That hardly seems to be the case with electronic breed of gremlins. Today's technicians, who are replacing the old-line troubleshooters, are throwing darts in the dark. Occasionally they score. Eventually, however, they may find the switch of knowledge and turn the lights on.

Meanwhile, chaos brews.

Take this newspaper enterprise. In most instances, the old mechanical marvel, the Linotype, and other machinery in the printer's backshop were dumped with the advent of the computer age. Rarely would lines of types be cast from molten lead. There would be no more chases to lock up and no more spilled galleys of type to pick up.

Instead, when something goes wrong with the computer, there are unidentified electronic gremlins to find. It's a game of pinning the tail on the donkey in the dark.

The upbeat world is turning to computers in the name of convenience, efficiency, speed and big bucks. But if there is any time being saved (however that might be done), it's not evident.

If it's making the world a better place or people more humane, smarter and wiser, that, too, is not plain.

Do computers magically turn mediocre students into Rhodes scholars? Does the calculator make the student a better mathematician than did the sliderule, the abacus or pencil and paper?

Despite its notriety, the computer does have its wonders. It can do amazing things, which, like the feats accomplished by the Linotype, airplane, automobile, radio and television, eventually will be taken for granted. Those feats merely reflect the genius, ingenuity and industry of man.

The computer age offers only one product: a different way of doing the same old things. Nothing, after all, has really changed.

Former deputy to fight for right to run

Meanwhile, Painter said he would try to take his case to court, since the "extenuating circumstances" — Shaner's unavailability at the deadline — might be a valid reason to make him a candidate in the May 5 Republican Party primary elections.

"THE LAW GIVES me the right to file up to 6 p.m. on the first Monday in February," Painter said. "But you can't do that if the man (Shaner) is not here...It looked like this was a fix by the Republican Party." He said Shaner had "made a mistake."

"I feel that he had violated his public office by not being there."

By a party chairman not being available to accept filings, an election can be controlled," Painter said. "If there's a loophole that can allow this sort of thing, it ought to be stopped."

The would-be candidate noted that the Democratic Party chairman, Janet Massey, was available for late filings and accepted an application for candidacy 15 minutes prior to the 6 p.m. Monday deadline.

Shaner said if he had any inkling of any late filing, he would have been available. He said he had not designated a surrogate in his absence, since the Texas Election Code only allows the party chairman to accept filings.

Painter said Wednesday that some of his supporters surmised that a conspiracy had been afoot to discourage anyone from running against the sheriff.

Shaner dismissed that notion.

"I'M NOT TRYING to protect Dallas or to protect any candidate," Shaner said. "If I was going to protect anybody, why would I have three or four contested races? I'm not trying to hide...I did the best I could for him" in petitioning the Secretary of State to allow his candidacy. He said he wished Painter had not been so "reticent" about his intentions to run for sheriff. "I don't know why he hid the fact until the last minute."

Painter said his choice to run was a family decision reached through prayer.

Shaner said he would be pleased were Painter to win his case and become a candidate for sheriff.

"I would love to have him on the ballot...if he can figure a way to be put on the ballot."

Earlier Wednesday, the sheriff said he had "no objection" to Painter's candidacy.

After he found out mid-morning Wednesday that his candidacy was disallowed, Painter initially said, "I imagine he (the sheriff) is pretty elated about it." He said it is "a very, very sad day for Midland politics,...and it hurts the citizens of Midland County more than anyone else....The people need a choice."

ON TUESDAY, however, Painter had said he was "even more firmly convinced that the decision I made was right. I feel that the Lord is with me on this decision, and I am going full speed ahead. I firmly believe in God, and I believe the Lord directed me in this. I haven't felt bad at all about this since day one."

He said that "a lot of people are offering me support and already are campaigning" for him.

Painter said Smith, a former corporate pilot and a former trooper in the Texas Department of Public Safety, was beatable in the election "and I'm going to prove that."

Painter, who grew up on a farm in Hale County, north of Lubbock, served four years in the U.S. Marine Corps, was a DPS trooper for 2½ years in the early 1970s, for 5½ years was chief deputy for the Presidio County Sheriff's Office in Marfa, and for a year in the late 1970s was a Midland city police officer. Afterward, when the oil boom returned to the Permian Basin, he left law enforcement for a 2½-year period during which he was a mud engineer. When that job played out, Painter said he returned to law enforcement and was hired by the Midland County sheriff.

Painter holds the bachelor's degree in police administration from Sul Ross State University in Alpine.

Sprayberry being sued over argument two years ago

He claims the suit is a "bum charge" brought by Evans because of a "personal vendetta." He also accuses Evans of violating State Bar standards by notifying the news media of the lawsuit, which does not seek a specified amount of monetary damages.

In a letter to County Judge Bill Ahders prior to the filing of the suit, however, Evans said Mrs. Robinson suffered damages of "at least $15,000."

Sprayberry said Wednesday that Evans had offered to postpone the trial until after the November elections — in which Sprayeberry is seeking a second term in office — but that he declined the offer.

"I don't want this dangling over my head," said the judge. "I want people to see that it's a frivolous lawsuit."

The trial is scheduled to get under way at 1 p.m. today in State District Judge Pat Baskin's courtroom. Baskin has disqualified himself, however, and retired Odessa Judge C.V. Milburn will try the case.

Sprayberry said he, not the county, is paying his legal expenses.

A second line of defense farther out in space would act like a net to destroy those missiles missed by the first system. And a third net would exist on the ground in the U.S. to destroy any remaining missiles as they closed in on the United States.

"Most technology for this already exists," the narrator said. Phasing-in of the system could start in five to seven years at a lower cost than current plans for building more nuclear weapons.

And if adopted by Congress, High Frontier would not mean the country would abandon other defense means, according to Mrs. Hillin.

To promote the idea, the American Space Frontier Committee has been established to fund activities. Falling under the category of a political action committee, contributions are sought from $500 and up.

This money will fund congressional district voter education drives, campaigns of candidates who support High Frontier and congressional and staff briefings to familiarize congressmen with the program.

Lab manager running for board of trustees

From Staff Reports

Don. R. McCarty, 3207 Apperson, has announced he is a candidate for Place 4, Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees, in the April 7 election.

"Midland has been known statewide for its excellent school system," he said. "I would like the opportunity to be a part of seeing that it continues to improve. Our students face new challenges upon graduation. Our schools must prepare them for those challenges. I am a firm believer that we should strive to offer our students an education that is strong on the basics and strong on other activities outside of the classroom.

"I am also concerned that state and local influences threaten to take the control of our schools away from the local districts," McCarty continued. "I believe that the local school districts should remain independent, as our name implies. I don't mean to suggest that they should not offer guidelines. But I think the local districts should be able to make their own decisions as to how to implement those plans."

Employed as general manager of Rotary Engineers Laboratories Inc. of Midland and Oklahoma City, McCarty has been involved in many school activities since moving to Midland in 1962.

Don R. McCarty

He has broadcasted high school football and basketball games for many years for a local radio station.

"My only qualification for seeking this office is a sincere desire to serve," he said.

He and his wife, Carla, have two daughters.

Planning deductions

This is the 12th in a series of "tax tip" articles provided by the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants.

Q. I am an injured oil field roughneck. Can I exclude from income the worker's compensation I received during the year?

A. Yes, worker's compensation received by you or your beneficiaries for your injury is fully tax exempt. If you turn your payments over to your employer and all or part of your regular wages or salary continues, the excess of your wages or salary over the amount of worker's compensation is taxable income. If you resume work, continuation of an employer's payments to you will be fully taxable, even though your work may be restricted by your injury.

Q. What about other amounts I receive as compensation for injury or illness?

A. Most other compensations received for injury or illness are not taxed. This includes damages received or benefits received under an accident or health insurance policy attributable to premiums you paid. Disability benefits received for loss of earning capacity as a result of injuries after a no-fault automobile policy is not taxable. Compensation received for permanent loss, or loss of use of a part or function of your body or for disfigurement is also not taxable.

These and other tax questions will be answered during the Taxpayer Education Program to be held at 9 a.m. Saturday at Midland College in the Allison Fine Arts Building. Members of the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants will help individuals who plan to complete their own tax return for 1983. Program content will concentrate on questions relating to the 1040 and 1040A tax returns. To register, send $1 with your name and address to Permian Basin Taxpayer Education, % Donald S. Auxiliary donates more than $100,000 for equipment

From Staff Reports

More than $100,000 worth of patient care equipment was obtained by Midland Memorial Hospital through funds donated by the MMH Auxiliary during the 1983 calendar year.

The 250 active male and female members and 140 contributing volunteers earned $109,515.01 from gift shop, vending machine and baby pictures sales, memorial donations and yearly dues. Net profits from the gift shop, housed in the hospital lobby, amount to a third of the auxiliary's yearly funds available for equipment purchases.

The auxiliary began donating funds for the purchase of equipment in 1950. Since then, they have donated more than half a million dollars to MMH to help fund patient care equipment.

Beginning in February 1983, the auxiliary contributed $40,000 for two neo-natal ventilators and a neo-natal monitor for the intensive care nursery.

A cardiac monitor, two warming blankets, four blood warmers and four infusion pumps were purchased for surgery with a $27,900 donation from the auxiliary the following June.

Late in October, $30,597 was turned over to purchase an anesthesia machine and four continuous passive motion exercisers for orthopedics.

At the last hospital board meeting of the calendar year, Auxiliary President Doris Tompkins presented a check for $11,018 for a new operating table for the surgery. The December gift brought the auxiliary's year-end total to $109,000 figure.

Midland ACS starts speaker's bureau

From Staff Reports

With thousands of lives each year lost to cancer because of a deficiency in preventative and early detection knowledge, the Midland Unit of the American Cancer Society is beginning a new phase of its cancer control program.

A speaker's bureau has been formed to present lifesaving information to Midlanders, according to Susan Lindgren, public education chairman.

Last year in Midland, cancer education programs were presented by volunteers to more than 28,000 adults and youth. The society reinforces its public education messages with a variety of free films, pamphlets and posters.

Adults are reached through the workplace, clubs and organizations, home and neighborhood, and through programs with other health agencies. Youth programs are organized according to school grade and teach young people good health habits, help them make lifestyle decisions and understand health behavior as it relates to cancer.

A speaker's bureau training course will be conducted from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Saturday at the Memorial Christian Church, 1001 Andrews Highway. The training is open to anyone interested in receiving specialized instruction and willing to become a program presentor.

Basic orientation will be followed by sessions on specific cancer topics. Six local physicians will assist in the training.

Participating will be Dr. Roger Belizaire, breast cancer; Dr. William G. deSocarraz, lung cancer and smoking; Dr. J.E. Mendez, uterine and cervical cancer; Dr. Shelton Viney, skin cancer; Dr. Guillermo Brachetta, colon and rectum cancer; and Dr. Christine D. deSocarraz, cancer risk assessment.

Anyone interested in becoming an ACS speaker or volunteer may contact Carmen Edwards at the district office, 683-6374.

More to peanut butter than just peanuts

By LINDA ANDERSON

I couldn't stand it any longer — I had to find out if JIF peanut butter really DOES "taste more like fresh peanuts." Do "choosy mothers" really choose JIF?

With four kids in our house, peanut butter is a necessity of life. They have been known to eat peanut butter at all three meals and as a snack. I buy it in gallon jugs. Maybe it's hereditary — I ate a lot of peanut butter in college. It helped many of us survive dorm cafeteria cooking.

We chose Skippy, Peter Pan and of course JIF for this test of advertising accuracy and taste. Testers were adults, teenagers and a child.

All three brands cost about the same. JIF and Peter Pan peanut butters in 8-oz. jars cost $1.17 each. Cost of the 12-oz. jar of Skippy was $1.55. (Prices are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

The 3-year-old tester loved all three brands. (Advertising persuasiveness has enabled the 3-year-old to "read" labels of the brands tested — she recognizes them from commercials. These three brands are not the ones I usually buy.)

The teenagers chose Skippy as their favorite, followed by Peter Pan. One described JIF as "too sweet." The other teenager chose Peter Pan for her favorite, and said Skippy was sweet.

Both adults said Peter Pan tastes most like peanuts. They agreed with the teenagers who said Skippy was not as sweet as the JIF.

I guess none of the testers were choosy enough because none of us chose JIF.

Skippy has been advertised as having less sugar than other brands of peanut butter (although why peanut butter should have any sugar is beyond me), and, of course, sugar is the last ingredient listed on the label. But dextrose, defined in Webster's New World Dictionary of the American Language (Second Concise Edition) as "a glucose...found in plants and animals," (glucose is defined in the same dictionary as "a crystalline sugar...occurring naturally in fruits, honey, etc.") is the second ingredient on the list. FTC regulations require ingredients be listed on food labels in descending order according to the greatest amount.

JIF label lists sugar and molasses in its ingredients (sugar listed second, molasses listed fifth), which explains why most of the testers thought JIF tasted "sweet."

Second on the list of ingredients in Peter Pan peanut butter is sucrose, which is defined in Webster's as "pure crystalline sugar...extracted from sugar cane or sugar beets."

All three brands' nutrition information says a two-tablespoon, 190-calorie serving supplies 15 percent of the minimum daily requirement of protein.

Results of this test show:

— JIF doesn't taste "more like fresh peanuts," though its advertisements claim it does.

— Making peanut butter sweet doesn't necessarily improve its flavor. And while some sugars occur naturally and some are refined, sugar by any other name still tastes sweet.

— Peanut butter seems to have a respectable amount of protein for a sandwich spread and really does have a place in a well-balanced diet. But don't try to base every meal on it. Even poor, starving college students need more.

— By reading food labels carefully, all kinds of information may be revealed — especially if read with the help of a dictionary.

— There is more to peanut butter than just peanuts.

DEAR ABBY

Prescription drug-users addressed in straight talk

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: If you are not taking any kind of prescription drug and don't plan to — skip this column. It's not for you.

The Food and Drug Administration, in cooperation with the National Council on Patient Information and Education, has embarked on a program to inform and educate people about the medication they use.

Most people are unaware that there can be an interaction between the prescribed drugs they are taking and certain foods they eat. This interaction can cause some drugs to work faster or slower, or to become totally ineffective.

For example, people who are taking certain prescribed drugs for severe depression or high blood pressure should avoid aged cheese, Chianti wine, pickled herring, yogurt, chicken liver, bananas, avocados, sour cream, and all foods prepared with meat tenderizers.

Persons taking anti-coagulants (blood thinners) should avoid large amounts of leafy vegetables and liver because the vitamin K in those foods promotes blood clotting.

People on thyroid medication should avoid brussels sprouts, turnips, cabbage, soybeans and kale.

Dairy products should not be eaten by a person who is taking a specific kind of antibiotic.

Alcohol and even aspirin should not be combined with certain other drugs. Mixing alcohol with a high dosage of Valium or Darvon can be fatal.

The next time your doctor gives you a prescription, don't hesitate to ask him — or your pharmacist — the following questions:

1. What is the name of the drug and what is it supposed to do? (Write it down so you won't forget.)

2. When do I take it, and for how long? (Does "three times a day" mean morning, noon and night? Should it be taken before meals, with meals or after? If the directions say "every four hours," should I get up during the night to take it? Do I stop taking the medicine when I feel better? Or should I keep taking it until it's all gone?)

3. Are there any foods, beverages, medications or activities I should avoid while taking this drug? (Is alcohol allowed? Aspirin? Antacids?)

4. Are there any side effects? And what should I do if they occur?

5. Is there any written information you can give me about the drug you have prescribed for me?

6. Is there an approved generic version of this drug?

What you should tell your doctor:

1. If you have ever had any allergic reactions or side effects to certain drugs in the past.

2. If you are taking any medication on a regular basis

3. If you are being treated for a different condition by another doctor.

4. If you are pregnant, or a heavy smoker, or a heavy drinker.

5. If you are on a special diet or are taking vitamins and mineral supplements.

AT WORK

Job hunter's alma mater now gone

By Dr. ADELE SCHEELE

Q. I am an avid reader of your column and need your advice. I am a 1975 graduate of a small liberal arts college now shut down due to a "lack of funds and diminishing enrollments." I feel desperate since I never went on for a master's degree from a reputable school to fall back on. I worked hard to pay my own way through school and now I feel like an orphan.

Recently I got laid off from my job of seven years and am once again in the job market. Will my degree from a now defunct institution affect my chances of finding work?

A. If misery loves company, know you are not alone. Many private colleges have been or will be forced to close. Your diploma, however, isn't tied to the college's existence. A degree earned is a degree earned, so don't feel defensive about it. If the issue should arise, tell of your experiences of working your way through, why you chose a small liberal arts college, its benefits, and how sorry you are that it couldn't have continued. Period.

Now look ahead. Think of the magic in the number seven — a great end to cycles. Remember the Biblical seven lean years and seven fat ones, or even the seven-year itch. Whether you're counting cows, courtships or careers, it's time for a positive change.

Think of what you enjoyed most doing on your job and go, aggressively, after other business where you can do more. Find them by using old college research skills — looking up which businesses do what — and finding contacts to help refer you.

Q. I have a major in French and am now taking a business minor. Is it difficult finding employment with only a French degree? What suggestions do you have to help me get a job after I graduate?

A. It's good thinking to combine degrees, but don't wait until graduation to find work. Look closely at college itself and find a French club that might develop some management skills as well as contact to French-related firms.

Comb the alumni directory to discover graduates working in French-related companies whom you might interview and maybe intern for. In the meantime, also look for work in a French bookstore, restaurant or import shop. Immerse yourself.

All these involvements create two vital factors — self confidence and opportunity. Degrees simply don't work without them.

Q. I have been incarcerated for the last three years. I have an associate's degree in drafting, and most of my schooling has been concentrated in architectural drafting, mathematics, and history.

I'd like to go into engineering later this year when I go to a four-year college. My two main interests are the solar field and robotics. In seeking a career for myself, my chief concern is not being tied down to a desk, drawing table, or computer terminal. I know that most engineers spend a good deal of time designing, which I don't mind, as long as it's not stationary work.

What is your opinion of the two fields I have mentioned? Which field has the brighter prospects?

A. I'd recommend engineering over architecture because you will find more opportunities. Both robotics and energy are expanding fields. You'll have a more difficult time, however, because you have been in prison.

Therefore, you need to find a few professors whose work you admire to guide you.

Dr. Scheele is a columnist for King Features Syndicate.

Test used to rate marriage prospects

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — If you're overly concerned about your partner's smoking, drinking, tidiness or tardiness, the marriage you're planning might be heading for trouble. David Olson, a sociologist at the University of Minnesota, says such concerns may point the way to bliss or bust.

According to Olson, a premarital compatibility test he developed can predict with 87 percent accuracy which couples will divorce or separate within three years of their weddings, and can predict with 76 percent accuracy who will remain together. Since 1978, Olson has surveyed more than 30,000 couples who were involved in premarital counseling throughout the U.S.

According to Olson, a 'yes' answer to any of the following questions may indicate a problem:

—"Do you and your partner think your problems will go away with time?"

—"Are you concerned with your partner's drinking, smoking, being messy, being late to things, or being too dependent on you?"

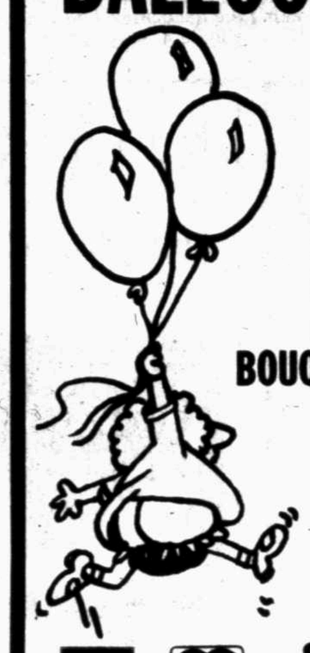

—"Do you avoid talking about things that might be upsetting?"

—"Do the two of you argue over little things too much?"

Olson said financial management, sexual relationship, leisure activities, roles within marriage, children, and family and friends were not as important in predicting the outcome of marriages.

Olson said there were no right or wrong answers to the 125 questions in the test, called PREPARE. "The purpose is not to add up all the points and then say you should or shouldn't get married," he said, but to understand the strengths and weaknesses in a relationship.

Three newspaper editors change mediums

Top-notch men bring experience to TV

ENTERTAINMENT

NEW YORK (AP) — They once sweated over front-page stories, Dear Abby and comic strips. Now they're bringing their ink-stained hands and experience in the newspaper trenches to another medium — television.

After years as top-line newspaper editors, Jonathan Katz, Stephen Isaacs and James Bellows find themselves in the glorified world of live newscasts, satellite transmissions and three-minute interviews.

Katz, formerly managing editor of The Dallas Times Herald and, before that, editor of The Baltimore News-American, is senior producer of the "CBS Morning News."

"My only job is to worry about stories, look for stories and get them told," Katz said.

ISAACS, WHO was senior vice president and editor of The Minneapolis Star, began his TV career as manager of news planning for the "CBS Morning News" and now produces pieces for CBS' "Sunday Morning."

Bellows, who ran The Washington Star and The Los Angeles Herald Examiner, started his TV career as executive producer of "Entertainment Tonight." ABC News hired him last summer to develop a newsmagazine show.

Van Gordon Sauter, vice president of the CBS Broadcast Group, hired Katz and Isaacs in early 1983. "On an ongoing basis I think we should salt the organization with new perspectives," he said. "Print people come in with an entirely different mind-set. They don't think in two-minute bursts and 22-minute lengths.

"One of their biggest assets is that they didn't know what couldn't be done on TV."

FOR KATZ, however, that was an initial liability. "I was making all sorts of birdbrain suggestions," he said. "I never watched TV news and knew nothing about it. If a great story popped in Iceland, I'd want to cover it, even though we had no correspondent there. I would suggest elaborate world-wide packages at a cost of zillions of dollars.

"At a newspaper, I could assign a story and the next day it would be in the paper. Here, there's no solo flying. It's more of a collegial atmosphere with the anchor, producer and correspondent also involved in the assigning process. It forces you to listen more."

As a managing editor who concerned himself with hard news, horoscopes and Heloise, Katz' ideology was compatible with the restructuring of the "CBS Morning News," which Sauter and executive producer Bob Ferrante saw as an electronic newspaper with the softer sections in the back.

With two morning hours, there's greater opportunity and inclination for entertainment, weather and sports than on the "CBS Evening News." The audiences for the 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. broadcasts also differ, with more women watching the morning shows, particularly the last hour.

Major criticisms against TV news are that its judgment depends on what pictures are available, and that its reporting is superficial and pretty. Analysis and follow-ups are left to newspapers.

Not anymore, said Katz.

"WE'RE VERY conscious of how things look," he said. "But we're no longer slaves to pictures. If you add pictures to important stories, they're just being told better."

Bellows said his background in newspaper layout is still useful. "TV is motion, and our job is to put the pictures together with the words to make the story," he said.

"Newspapers can't have the emotional impact that TV does," said Isaacs. "But TV can't do the same job as newspapers for depth and analysis. They're different animals. To compare TV and newspapers do both a disservice."

More news broadcasts, all-news radio and Ted Turner's 24-hour Cable News Network have provoked the networks to find fresh information and new story angles. Then there's the intense competition for ratings.

"Newspapers take 20-30 years to die," said Katz. "If we're sinking here for 10-12 weeks, there will be changes. In TV, you have to do well."

WITH SURVEYS showing that TV is the primary source of news for more than half the public, the networks finally seem to be looking for news in non-photogenic places.

"Before I came here I had the standard biases about TV, that they only took pictures of things," said Katz. "To me, a good story is a good story. More and more, we're setting our own agenda. A lot of stories we're telling now, we weren't telling before."

Diane Sawyer, co-anchor of the "CBS Morning News," said Katz had infused the broadcast with a you-can-do-that-on-TV philosophy. When Bob Jones, president of a university that practiced racial discrimination, said his ideology came from the Bible, Katz had a theologian booked the next day. "That's not the usual thing for TV," said Ms. Sawyer. "It's a bit abstract."

Other examples of stories, once found only in newspapers, that are getting on the "CBS Morning News":

—Katz made air time for the de-regulation of the airline, trucking and telephone industries.

—After Marc Rich, the gold speculator, committed suicide, Katz ordered a personality profile for the next day's broadcast.

—As a follow-up to one space shuttle, the "Morning News" did a piece on how boring the space program is.

THE "CBS Morning News" relies heavily on officials from universities and institutes who aren't plugged into the government bureaucracy. Katz criticized NBC's "Today" show for giving certain government officials unlimited access.

Steve Friedman, executive producer of "Today," acknowledged CBS' different approach. "But my feeling is that names make news," said Friedman. "CBS doesn't like to put on government officials, but they end up putting on people who have no way of influencing the events they're talking about.

Sculptures on display at Museum of Southwest

Lincoln Fox

Currently on display at the Museum of the Southwest in the Stables Gallery is the exhibition "Lincoln Fox — Sculptor: Ten Years of His Work."

Born in 1942 in Morrilton, Ark., Fox was raised in San Angelo, where his lifelong fascination and affinity with Native American philosophy began. At The University of Texas at Austin, he began his career as an artist. Initially he worked as a painter, but soon discovered that through sculpture he could better express himself and his philosophy.

He continued to sculpt while enrolled in the masters program at the University of Dallas. However, it was not until he pursued his master of fine arts degree at the University of Kansas that he learned to cast bronze, a technique which changed his artistic career.

An important inspiration for his work is the dream world and its images. One of Fox's best known and most critically acclaimed sculptures, "Victorio's Dream," on display at the Museum, is one of a series of seven pieces dedicated to the subject of dreams. Fox has become fascinated with the freedom afforded by dreams as opposed to traditional themes and subjects. He repeatedly concentrates on the dream world because he believes the symbols of dreams are universal in significance and timeless in duration, thereby reaching and affecting a greater audience.

Since the late 1960s, Fox has participated in almost 70 exhibitions across the United States and Canada. He has been honored with one man shows at the Smithsonian Institution, the Kennedy Galleries, New York City and numerous museums and galleries throughout the Southwest. Prince Charles is among those who collect his work.

In 1978, 1980 and 1981, Fox was included in invitational shows at Midland College. The Permian Basin Petroleum Museum has commissioned several sculptures for its permanent collection.

A member of the National Sculpture Society and the National Western Artists Association, Fox was a founding partner in the Shidoni Foundry, Tesuque, N.M.

The exhibit will be on display through March 11. All works are for sale and proceeds go to the Museum. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Musician's 'chat' enhanced performance

THOUVENEL String Quartet

"We want to give you some program notes to help you through the Bartok," Eugene Purdue told Saturday's Thouvenel String Quartet audience.

Although the works by Haydn, Beethoven and Bartok being performed that night came complete with written program notes, Purdue's were in their own way more informative and, it turned out, beneficial to the successful playing of Bartok's Fourth String Quartet.

Purdue discovered an oversight as he explained what the listeners were about to hear. The error was his.

"The second movement strives for some very unusual effects; it is played with a mute." Then, very calm, with a hint of slight amusement in his voice, Purdue said, "And I see I forgot to get mine."

This time the audience's laughter filled the hall at the Allison Fine Arts auditorium. While Edmund Stein went to get the mute, Purdue continued by alerting the audience to listen for the sound of bees (Bartok was a great lover of bees). Stein returned as Purdue closed with a description of the fourth movement, "Out of the seeming chaos, you will hear half-steps."

Then he added that he didn't want to be the one to talk to the audience, but the others made him. "I'm glad they made me do it."

He wasn't alone. It would have been out of character for the Thouvenel to have a noticeable problem onstage. For the four not to have sounded close to perfect would have been totally outside the tradition this quartet brings to each performance.

But, no doubt, it would have been interesting to have seen how they would have handled the difficulty.

Purdue's dry humor "chat" about the Fourth String Quartet greatly enhanced the audience's appreciation of Bartok's intent. During the third movement, Jeff Levenson's solo work was hauntingly lovely, his expressive face perfectly matching the music's melancholy.

Other works performed included Haydn's Quartet in g minor, Opus 20, No. 3 and Beethoven's Quartet in e minor, Opus 59, No. 2.

Known as the father of the symphony, Haydn (1732-1809) wrote more than 80 quartets. The one performed is from the "Sun" Quartets (so named because the title page of the original score has a picture of a rising sun).

Beethoven's three quartets of Opus 59 are characterized by their dedication to Andrey Razumovsky, the last chief of state of Little Russia and a Viennese statesman, and by their grand scope. The Theme Russe from the Allegretto Movement can be found in operas by Rimsky-Korsakoff and Moussorgsky.

Haydn influenced Beethoven as the compositions of Beethoven during the last period of his life, which roughly began in 1815, influenced Bartok. Combining the opportunity to hear works by all three with a little humor, made for a most exceptional evening.

The Thouvenel String Quartet's next performance is set for March 17 at Midland College's Allison Fine Arts Building at 8 p.m. Funded by the Midland Symphony and Chorale Association, quartet members are Purdue, violin; Stein, violin; Levenson, cello; and Sally Chisholm, viola. Single admission tickets will be sold at the door.

Screenwriter working on film about Lennon, Ono

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Screenwriter Edward Hume, who wrote this season's highest-rated TV movie, "The Day After," is now working at his home in Rockport, Mass., on a three-hour movie on the life of John Lennon and Yoko Ono.

Hume has been researching the life of the former Beatle, who was shot to death in December 1980, and is talking to Miss Ono.

The movie will be made for NBC by Johnny Carson Productions. John McMahon, who heads Carson's company, declined to say what he had paid for the film rights.

McMahon said Miss Ono had no veto over the script or casting. The budget for the movie reportedly is $4 million.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The television series, "Fame," is taking a line from its theme song to heart: "We're gonna live forever!"

The show has been renewed for a second season of original episodes in syndication.

"Fame," which was canceled by NBC, is the most expensive first-run hour series ever produced for a syndicated network, according to Lawrence E. Gershman, president of MGM-UA Television Group.

The show has been nominated again by the Golden Globes as best series and Debbie Allen was nominated as best lead actress. Both won last year. Miss Allen also won two Emmy Awards for outstanding choreography.

Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale to perform

The Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale, directed by Dr. Stanley Engebretson, will perform a free "Chorale Music of our Heritage" concert Saturday in Odessa and Sunday in Midland.

The program includes contemporary and traditional choral works by American composers. "Canticles of Praise," composed by Gregg Smith will be featured. Premiered at St. Andrews Presbyterian Church, Laurenberg, N.C., in the late 1960s, the Chorale will be presenting the first performance of this work in the Southwest.

Written in seven parts, the canticles are songs of praise which, in the composer's words, "Reflect medieval man's awe of a loving God and a loving nature." The composition's text represents a combination of original and translated forms of medieval Latin poetry.

Also on the program will be many traditional choral favorites, including, Stephen Foster's "Oh, Susanna" and "Nelly Bly;" "Shenandoah" arranged by James Erb; and "Great Day" arranged by Warren Martin.

Saturday's performance will be at First United Methodist Church, Odessa, at 8 p.m. Sunday's will be held at First Baptist Church, Midland, at 2:30 p.m. For more information call the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale Association, Inc., 563-0921.
