World watches as France votes on treaty

Americans hope for stability in Europe

By Donald M. Rothberg

WASHINGTON — Economic and political chaos in Western Europe is even more unsettling to Americans than the prospect of a unified continent that would challenge U.S. leadership in the world.

PARIS — The world watched Saturday as the French prepared to have their say on a European treaty in a vote that could boost or bury aspirations for a mighty new Europe.

Last-minute charges of "lies" and "blackmail" underscored the divisions the issues of European union and the so-called Maastricht treaty have created in France. Polls indicated that today's vote

Plea bargain

LUBBOCK — Prosecutors and attorneys for West Texas pathologist Ralph Erdmann, indicted in two counties on charges of theft by a public servant and falsifying autopsy reports, are negotiating a plea bargain. Authorities across West Texas have said they suspect wrongdoing in dozens of other cases. Erdmann has denied the accusations. Dickens County District Attorney Becky McPherson on Friday told the Lubbock Avalanche Journal that she and prosecutors from Hockley County and the state attorney general's office will meet Monday with defense attorney Travis Shelton. /3C

The first day of fall is Sept. 22, but some ducks at the Wadley-Barron Park pond don't seem to know it. Reminiscent of spring, this clutch of new ducklings probably will be the last one of the year at the popular Midland outdoor spot.

Ducks fly past city ordinance on animals

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

The ducks of Wadley-Barron Park have long been a source of serenity within the city limits.

Neighborhood residents and other Midlanders regularly flock to the park to feed the ducks. Others simply lie on the grass and watch and listen as the flying fowl talk amongst themselves.

But in the aftermath of recent Midland City Council decisions limiting animals from the city, several people have questioned if the ducks are in violation of city ordinances.

Well, apparently they are not.

Last month, the council voted to ban pot-bellied pigs from the city, minutes before refusing to make an exception allowing a local goat to reside within the city limits.

But, according to Animal Control Director Coy Willis, the ducks — including those at Wadley-Barron — are safe.

"You can have four ducks (in the city) as long as they are not a nuisance ... as far as odor and sound," he said. "They fall under the fowl portion of the animal ordinance, as do chickens, guineas and others." All are limited to four per residence.

Top finance leaders vow cooperation to ease furor

■ Group of Seven statement gives no indication that Germany might relent on interest rates.

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Top finance officials of the seven largest industrial countries pledged Saturday to cooperate closely in world currency markets to resolve the worst crisis in two decades. But they received no commitment that Germany will lower its interest rates further.

In a joint statement, finance officials of the United States, Japan, Germany, Britain, France, Canada and Italy expressed concerns about the recent turmoil that has battered the British pound and other European currencies.

The statement gave no indication that Germany had relented on the key question of interest rates and various participants in the meeting indicated that Germany had not budged.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady noted that Germany had already made one small reduction in interest rates, but he sidestepped questions on whether Germany had given any assurances that it was prepared to do more.

German officials before the meeting had been adamant that inflation concerns in their own country made it impossible to cut rates as quickly as was being urged by the United States and Britain.

Helmut Schlesinger, the head of Germany's central bank, told reporters that

Williamson to Guerrero: Resign from commission

Barry Williamson, Republican candidate for the Texas Railroad Commission, called on his Democratic opponent Lena Guerrero, chairman of the commission, to resign Saturday.

Williamson, who stopped in Midland as part of a statewide campaign tour, said Guerrero, by being dishonest about her academic record, had violated the public trust and trashed the Texas Railroad Commission.

"Trust is the basic virtue of a public official, and the only honorable thing for Lena Guerrero to do is resign," Williamson said. He said her veracity would be a lingering question

Former social worker Rachelle Burk says there is no "quick fix" to find happiness.

Industry caters to peace hunters

EDITOR'S NOTE — Since the time of Plato, people have yearned for self-improvement, striven to make the best possible life for themselves and their children. But over the last three decades of plenty, the tide of promises has steadily pushed expectations to a high-water mark. The second part of a three-part series, "Are We Happier?," examines the megaindustry that caters to — and promotes — the search.

Happiness is not a hot, new commodity on display down at the mall. And yet it is routinely packaged, marketed and sold to the tune of billions of dollars, a consumer banquet of options our grandparents never imagined.

"Don't Worry, Be Happy" advised the popular 1980s song.

If only it were that simple.

Billboards, some obvious and others quite subtle, are everywhere, flashing "Salvation." Fitness gurus, New Age visionaries, televangelists, talk show hosts and self-proclaimed experts on everything add to the noise.

UNITY: France's decision on Maastricht treaty is too close to call was too close to call, with a large number of voters undecided.

The treaty is designed to unite the 12 nations of the European Community with common economic, foreign and defense policies and a common currency by 1999.

The nation had a respite Saturday from three weeks of often acrimonious debate because of a ban on politicking the day before the vote.

But extreme-right militants held up signs spelling "NON" at an esplanade at Trocadero, overlooking the Eiffel Tower. Across town, about 20 royalist militants surrounded the obelisk at Place de la Bastille and burned the blue European Community flag before police broke up the illegal demonstration.

Backers say the Maastricht treaty will help transform the trading bloc into a political and economic superpower that can better compete with the United States and Japan. Opponents say France would lose control over economic and immigration policies at a time when the country is struggling with a recessiom.

The divisiveness has spilled over the borders to France's European partners as citizens push for their own referendums amid a currency crisis that has raised the stakes.

The single question being asked is: "Do you approve the bill submitted to the French people by the president of the republic authorizing the ratification of the treaty on European union?"

Polling stations were to open at 8 a.m. (1 a.m. CDT) and close by 8 p.m. (1 p.m. CDT). Projections from French TV stations were expected almost immediately after polls close. Final official results will not be announced until Tuesday.

Premier Pierre Beregovoy held his final rally Friday in Reims, the eastern city where France's kings were once annointed and which now is a stronghold of the "no" vote.

"Thirty-eight million French will decide for 350 million Europeans," he said.

The independent Le Monde newspaper echoed the same message in a banner headline Saturday.

Beregovoy also tried to scare the naysayers, repeating the comments of the rightist National Front of Jean-Marie Le Pen: "The victory of the 'nos' will be that of the National Front."

In a final appeal, centrist politician Philippe de Villiers, a leading treaty opponent, said European union amounted to a "monstrously anti-democratic system." Le Pen called it a "mortal danger to France."

President Francois Mitterrand has kept a low profile in hopes that his dwindling popularity won't affect the voting negatively.

Industrialists and bankers generally favor Maastricht. Farmers are opposed, joined by some workers and small-business men.

Even foreign leaders have been counseling the French on how to vote.

"If we don't consolidate Europe now, we'll be pushed around by world interests and be subjected to foreign domination," German Chancellor Helmut Kohl told a meeting Saturday in Suhl, eastern Germany.

The British tabloid, the Daily Star, urged a "no" vote in an editorial written in French. France has "the future of Europe in its hands," it said.

Rejection could prove a disastrous, maybe irreparable, setback for the treaty. France, along with Germany, has been the driving force behind European unity since World War II.

Danish voters rejected the treaty in a referendum in June, and that has complicated prospects for its enactment. The Irish voted for the treaty.

All 12 EC members must ratify the Maastricht treaty, named after the Dutch town where EC leaders signed it in December. The other nine have or plan to ratify it in their parliaments.

MEETING: World's top financial ministers pledge cooperation in crisis

other ministers put no pressure on Germany to cut interest rates further. In fact, he said, the issue was discussed only briefly during the 7½ hours of discussions.

Despite the apparent lack of agreement on interest rates, Brady insisted that America's allies were committed to following polices that will calm currency markets and lift the global economy out of its pronounced slump.

"This meeting was calm. It was quiet. There wasn't a lot of finger pointing," Brady said. "This gives me confidence to feel the markets will make (the proper) adjustments."

U.S. and British officials have argued that German interest rates must come down further to relieve pressure on weak European currencies and boost worldwide growth.

In an effort to restore order, the finance officials said they "will take appropriate additional actions as needed to achieve sustained growth and greater currency stability."

The three-paragraph statement did not specify just what actions the countries would take. But in past periods of instability, the United States has joined with its major economic allies to buy massive amounts of weak currencies on the open market to prop up their price.

The real test of the Group of Seven's newly stated resolve will likely come Monday when financial markets open for business.

Investors are braced for further market turmoil, especially if French voters today reject a treaty calling for closer political and economic cooperation in Europe.

Finance officials of the 12-nation European Community have scheduled an emergency meeting in Washington in the late this afternoon after the results of the French vote are known to consider what further actions they can take to calm currency markets.

Brady told reporters that since the market turmoil involved European currencies, the appropriate place to look first for action was among the Europeans. The European officials are all in Washington to participate in the annual meetings of the International Monetary Fund and World Bank.

Japanese Finance Minister Tsutoma Hata said the European currencies were now at "an important and very delicate moment." He said that while the currency crisis has so far been contained in Europe, further instability could "very well affect world foreign exchange matters as well as the world economy."

Canadian Finance Minister Donald Mazankowski told reporters that the joint statement by the Group of Seven countries proved that "we are taking the steps necessary to continue cooperation."

Also on the agenda for Saturday's meeting was the issue of Russian aid. The finance ministers met with officials of Russian President Boris Yeltsin's government to discuss a request for debt relief.

The meeting of the Group of Seven finance officials was held at the 200-year-old Dumbarton House in the historic Georgetown section of Washington.

While the United States and Britain had both aimed pointed remarks at Germany before the meeting, German Finance Minister Theo Waigel had brushed off the comments. "Blaming one side doesn't advance matter, it just leads to mistakes," he said.

ANALYSIS: U.S. hopes for European stability

bles and guidelines for the planned union.

Americans watch uncomfortably from a distance uncertain whether the United States can be a positive influence for stability. The Bush administration supported European unity even while lobbying unsuccessfully to beat back any challenge to NATO's dominant role in security matters.

But the immediate issue is economic. What would be the impact on the United States if the French reject the treaty?

Weakness in European economies already had cut the markets for U.S. business on the Continent. Add to that the unpredictable fluctuations in currency markets and the situation is made worse.

"The U.S. economic and financial situation is not so stable that Americans want to have too much turbulence," said Jacqueline Grapin, president of the European Institute.

"It introduces uncertainty in the markets, which is not good for business," said Arthur Hartman, a former U.S. ambassador to France.

Weakness in European economies already had cut the markets for U.S. business on the Continent. Add to that the unpredictable fluctuations in currency markets and the situation is made worse.

"If confidence evaporates, all sorts of things could go wrong in European economies; and that's not going to help ours," said Jennonne Walker, an expert on U.S.-European relations at the Woodrow Wilson Center.

But Hartman and other supporters of unity predict rejection would be only a temporary setback to the unity goal.

"They have to go back and open it up and start fresh and find some political will because a major country will have rejected it, and some time will have to pass before they can come in with something else," said Robert Hunter, a former member of the White House National Security Council.

Whether the optimism is based on reality or wishful thinking won't be known for some time.

The appeal of unity and stability in Western Europe lies in the contrast with the disintegration and factional warfare in Eastern and Southern Europe.

The United States once hoped, for example, that a strong European Community could impose a peaceful solution on Yugoslavia and play a lead role in rebuilding the former communist economies. Peace in Yugoslavia proved beyond the capacity of the EC.

Opinion surveys taken in Europe find mixed feelings about European unity.

On the one hand, a Times Mirror survey taken a year ago, found general support for the concept of unity. But the same survey also found a reluctance to surrender many of the symbols of sovereignty.

Temperatures continue climb

Staff report

Today's forecast is partly cloudy with a high in the mid-90s and southwest winds 10-15 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight is predicted to be partly cloudy with a low in the mid-60s.

Monday's forecast is fair with a high in the low 90s, the NWS said.

Yesterday's high was 89, compared to the record high of 105, set in 1930. The record low for today's date is 42, set in 1971.

STATE

Scattered rain and thunderstorms struck much of west and coastal south Texas Saturday, while a cold front remained stationary across the northern half of the state.

The front stretched along a line from Abilene to Fort Worth to Texarkana, keeping temperatures in the 80s behind the air mass. Ahead of the front temperatures were in the 90s.

Skies were partly cloudy across north Texas.

Showers and storms were widely scattered from the western south plains northward into the Panhandle. Skies elsewhere were partly to mostly cloudy with temperatures in the 70s and 80s with variable winds.

Tropical showers and thunderstorms continued along the immediate coast and offshore in the Gulf of Mexico. An upper-level ridge of high pressure kept the rain from moving inland, where skies were partly cloudy with temperatures in the 80s and 90s.

The south Texas forecast calls for partly to mostly cloudy skies through Monday with widely scattered thunderstorms and highs in the 80s and 90s.

NATION

Thunderstorms scattered rain from Arizona to the Atlantic Coast on Saturday. Winds buffeted the Northeast and the South, and skies were clear in the West.

Hurricane Bonnie, the second storm of the Atlantic season, was hundreds of miles northeast of Bermuda and posed no immediate threat to land, the National Hurricane Center said. Its sustained winds of 85 mph were expected to increase to 100 mph over the next two days.

By afternoon, showers and thunderstorms were scattered from Arizona to Kansas and from Texas and Oklahoma to the southern Atlantic Coast.

Heavier rainfall for the six hours ending at 1 p.m. CDT included 1.03 inches at Lafayette, La.

McAlester, Okla., was drenched with 2.77 inches of rain between 1 a.m. and 7 a.m. CDT.

Brisk northwesterly winds brought cool air into the Northeast.

The low of 27 degrees at International Falls, Minn., broke the 1956 record for the date by 1 degree.

Warm winds caused temperatures to rise in the northern Plains. Temperatures there were in the 70s and 80s Saturday, about 20 degrees higher than the day before.

Strong winds also swept across parts of Texas and the Mississippi Valley, where temperatures were in the 80s and 90s.

Dry weather prevailed across the rest of the nation. Skies were fair over California and southern Nevada.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

WILLIAMSON: Candidate urges Guerrero to resign

that would affect her performance on the commission.

Guerrero has been in the media hot seat since last week when records revealed that she did not graduate from the University of Texas as she had claimed nor had she been a Phi Beta Kappa scholar.

"It's not about having a degree or not having a Phi Beta Kappa key, it's about being honest," said Williamson, adding that on various occassions she publicly claimed degrees in six separate fields.

He noted that Gov. Bill Clements did not have a college degree but was very up front about it.

Williamson, a former Midland lawyer and independent oilman, said the two critical issues in any campaign are honesty and experience. "She has confessed that she has no experience in oil and gas regulation, and now she has demonstrated that she is not honest."

'She has confessed that she has no experience in oil and gas regulation, and now she has demonstrated that she is not honest.'

— Barry Williamson

He contended that Guerrero's dishonesty about her academic achievement is cause to look more closely at her relationship with the Texas truckers and the backers of Texas high-speed rail project. Williamson accused Guerrero, who favors continued regulation of Texas trucking, of "being in the hip pocket" of the powerful trucking lobby. "They have contributed in excess of $100,000 to her campaign," he said.

Guerrero has said she supports trucking regulation because deregulation would cost Texas jobs, but Williamson said 20,000 jobs would be added in Texas with trucking deregulation.

He also criticized her performance on the High Speed Rail Authority and questioned a $15,000 campaign contribution from Morrison-Knudsen, the corporation for which she voted to award a $6 billion contract.

Williamson served as director of the Minerals Management Service of the U.S. Department of Interior, where he managed the nation's offshore drilling operations, until leaving that job to run for a seat on the Texas Railroad Commission.

Williamson, who left Midland for meetings in the Panhandle and East Texas, said he could provide the honesty and experience to get the Texas oil industry on its feet again. He has proposed a tax break for the first well drilled in a field to encourage new field exploration, increased use of natural gas and additional incentives for marginal wells.

CITY: Ducks fly past animal ordinance restrictions

(From 1A)

If the ducks do become a nuisance, residents will be required to build a facility to contain them.

The Wadley-Barron ducks, however, are homeless. Some have been dumped at the park by disgruntled duck owners and are, in turn, collected by animal control workers and sold to people living in the country.

"The ducks at the pond don't belong to anybody. People bring them in, and we're stuck with picking them up," Willis said.

But despite city efforts, overcrowding at the duck pond — especially during the fall and spring — remains a problem.

"We had an expert come in and evaluate the pond around the mid-'80s. Since it's a stagnant body of water there are definite problems with salmonella," Willis said. "It's been recommended that we keep no more than 25 ducks here at a time."

During the fall — as the ducks fly south for the winter — and when they return north at springtime, there are usually about 100 ducks at the pond. Most of those are migratory "wild" ducks — the others are domestic, according to Willis.

"There aren't many bodies of water in these parts — so where there is water, you will usually find a lot of ducks," Willis said.

But while ducks are allowed throughout town. Other animals — including goats, horses and cows — are allowed only in Agricultural Estate (AE) zones.

"The number is limited however, by the size of the property. The larger the property the more animals," Willis said.

Pigs — including the pot-bellied variety — because of their odor and tendency to attract flies are not allowed anywhere within the city limits.

HAPPY: Industry targets contentment seekers

session — born of the 1960s no longer is a fringe phenomenon. Mass marketing has put self-actualization, counseling, recovery, self-help, alternative religion, health, beauty and the notion of "quality living" squarely in the mainstream.

"The ridiculous thing about all these choices is that people who have problems don't have time to solve them," says Tony Rodeghier, 43, of Orlando, Fla. "It's the rich people who go do therapy together. It's Betty Ford and Liza and Liz."

For those who pass the day job hunting or on an assembly line, for those who spend evenings chasing children, juggling bills or nursing one too many drinks, self-analysis may not be a priority.

AND YET, talk to Rodeghier a while longer. He had some group therapy after an angry and explosive marriage. "Yeah, OK," the tanned and macho auto salvage dealer admits. "I guess when I have another relationship, I'll know more about how to be, what to do."

Many have been helped, even saved, by this new awareness. But as many have bought into so much hucksterism, fallen for the latest fad diet or way-out promise made on late-night TV.

"I have this book on my nightstand entitled 'How to Make Love to the Same Person for the Rest of Your Life and Still Love It,' " says Rachelle Burk, 33, a mother of two who met her husband through a personal ad.

She's barely glanced at the book during six years of marriage. Perhaps it would have been helpful to a friend who called late last night, a woman whose husband left her. His reason: "Too little sex," says Ms. Burk.

More likely, she says, it would have been no more a solution that a bevy of others that guarantee thin thighs in 30 days, a glamorous career overnight and easy remedies for any character flaw. Few trust the simple "how-to" promises. And yet the road to Utopia is hard to resist.

"I'VE BEEN up there with the best of them," says Ms. Burk, a social worker who for now is home full time with her children in East Brunswick, N.J. "When I was single. I tried every diet there was: Weight Watchers, the Diet Center, the grapefruit diet, the F-Plan diet, the Scarsdale diet ...

"Like a lot of people, I wanted a quick fix," she says. "Even with my background in therapy, I can see the same thing there. Most people just pick up the phone book and assume therapists are all alike and can deal with whatever the problem. They don't realize that anybody can call themself a psychotherapist, and that there are many types and methods of treatment."

'You have to remember there is no quick out. It's a neverending path. You never get what you want. At some level, you've got to laugh at yourself.'

— Jeffrey Isbrandtsen

About 11 million adults seek professional help during any six-month period, accoring to federal studies. At their disposal is a surfeit of disciplines from which to choose: some 450 therapies, including subdivisions of cognitive, psychodynamic, transpersonal, humanistic ...

More than 200,000 licensed psychotherapists (including social workers, psychiatrists and psychologists), as well as countless thousands of unlicensed counselors, clergy and alternative mental health practitioners, offer help today, more than triple the number estimated in the early 1960s.

FOR THOSE who find more or less traditional therapy an uncomfortable or unaffordable option, a truckload of alternatives exist. An estimated one in three Americans have turned to some 500,000 self-help, support and recovery groups for a sense of community and strength.

Many find within these groups the "quality of love, guidance and other nurturing" that Dr. Charles Whitfield, a popular recovery writer, says only 5 percent to 20 percent of Americans knew growing up.

"Some of these problems you have, you think you're the only one. Then you find out you're not," says Joyce Beckmann, 45, a divorced waitress in New Orleans. "I think talking about things can help. Like for a person who comes from an abusive childhood, that person can break the cycle of anger. If you can get it out, talk it out, you might be a happier person."

"Come on," says her boss, Frank Billeaudeau, 60. "We're obviously not any happier. Just look at all the booze and drugs people use. The American public is being brainwashed to think they need counseling from people who are as messed up as anyone."

Billeaudeau isn't alone is this opinion. The 12-step and recovery movement has exploded over the last decade to such an extent that a backlash has emerged. Dysfunctionalism and evangelistic recovery rhetoric have cowed the masses, say critics such as Wendy Kaminer, author of the new book "I'm Dysfunctional, You're Dysfunctional."

OTHERS ARE skeptical of the rush to label every relationship, detail every dysfunction, chronicle every codependency, from "Toxic Parents" to "The Cinderella Complex" to "Contagious Emotions."

"We're constantly pointing somewhere outside the present moment, saying, 'This, THIS is the reason I feel so bad,' " says Barry Kaufman, an unlicensed therapist and founder of the Option Institute in Sheffield, Mass. "People are getting stuck in the past."

For $395, Kaufman conducts four-day weekend seminars that promise the true secret of happiness — "the 13th and final step, which is liberation." Sounds good, but who's to say the program outlined in his book, "Happiness is a Choice," is better than those sketched in any $12.95 self-help manual?

Certainly there are plenty to choose from. An estimated 4,000-plus self-help titles on psychology, health and beauty, women's issues and other such topics are published each year, according to Books in Print.

Then there are the motivational audio and videotapes, an estimated $50 million of which are sold annually. Many are distributed through some 3,000 New Age stores — more of which are springing up all the time.

"IT'S A HUGE market and it's getting bigger," says Fran Holt-Underwood of New Leaf Distributing in Atlanta, which wholesales $25 million a year in books, audio and videotapes, periodicals, calendars and music.

"Phil Jackson has the Chicago Bulls meditating and visualizing before big games. That's a long way from what Red Holtzman — the quintessential coach of 20 years ago — had the New York Knicks doing. Those words weren't even in his vocabulary," says editor Jeffrey Isbrandtsen of the Bellingham, Wash.-based "New Age Retailer."

"It's great, but it's not easy keeping a spiritual center in the world. You can get get hyper-critical," says Isbrandtsen, 41. "You have to remember there is no quick out. It's a neverending path. You never get what you want. At some level, you've got to laugh at yourself."

Somewhere, rationally, most people know this. But standing in the supermarket checkout line on an ungodly hot afternoon, the glossy covers on the magazine rack beckon, as they are meant to do. Twenty-two of the top 100 are geared toward women. The cover blurbs are recycled from one to the next, dangling guarantees of a better lover, better job, better therapist.

"WE BELIEVE there's an answer to every question, provided we find the right expert," says Dr. Joyce Brothers, a longtime staple of the how-to happiness biz. "And if we work hard enough, anything is doable."

Onto this stage strode Phil Donahue, who 20 years ago was nothing more than a Dayton, Ohio, guy who introduced his audience to intimate topics and the microphone. Even the most wacked-out guests felt closer to home than the idealized sitcom families an estimated half of Americans inhale along with their dinner each night.

Today, Donahue is a sort of Jupiter in the ever-expanding pantheon of talk-show gods who traffic in human frailty. "Seek counseling" is common advice on these shows, and millions of Americans are doing just that.

"It's funny, isn't it? All this racing around full speed ahead, trying this, then trying that," chuckles J.L. Shilling, who lives on a nice chunk of property in rural Louisiana. "Come back to earth."

A full moon dangles between the naked branches of a pecan tree. Shilling, 53, and a buddy have been out hunting rabbit all day. They had barbecue ribs for dinner, and now settle in for a smoke and some aimless conversation.

IN LOUISIANA, there is one psychologist for every 345 people; in New York, the ratio is 1-to-19. Shilling believes there's a simple explanation for this: Americans spend only 3 percent of their lives outdoors.

"Pressure. Stress. If I had to go home every night to a tenth-story apartment, I'd smash my head against the wall," he says. "Space is so important. Grass. Trees. We've lost touch with reality, with nature, with the things that bring happiness. Simple things, like family."

Basically, J.L. Schilling is saying, "Don't Worry, Be Happy." Stop the feverish pursuit.

"Happiness is simple," he says. "Why do so many people make it so hard?"

NEXT SUNDAY: British playwright George Bernard Shaw wrote nearly a century ago that a lifetime of happiness "would be hell on Earth." Perhaps, but few can resist the pursuit. The last of a three-part series, "Are We Happier?," explores how a handful of Americans have searched for — and found — some measure of happiness.

Numbers show American priorities

Here's a random glimpse of the dollars Americans spend, hours they devote and lengths to which they go in the pursuit of happiness and all manner of things related:

■ Number of counselors in the American Counseling Association in 1967: 45,000. Number in 1992: 208,000.
■ Number of mental disorders recognized by the American Psychiatric Association: 220. Number recognized in 1952: 110.
■ Number of therapeutic disciplines estimated in 1970s: 130. Number estimated in 1980s: 450.
■ Number of prescriptions for anti-depressants in 1965: 7 million. Number of prescriptions in 1989: 32 million.
■ Number of health clubs advertised in the Yellow Pages in 1982: 6,211. Number listed in 1991: 12,146.
■ Number of people who say they worked out in 1991: 20.2 million.
■ Percentage of Americans who go on a diet each year: 44.
■ Percent increase since 1987 in the number of tanning salons listed in the Yellow Pages: 180.
■ Dollars spent on hair-styling products in 1991: $207 million, up 113 percent from 1985. Dollars spent on face creams and lotions in 1991: $166 million, up 83 percent from 1985. Dollars spent on weight-reduction aids in 1991: $423 million, up 307 percent over 1985.
■ Estimated number of cosmetic surgeries performed in 1990: 643,910, up 67 percent over 1981.
■ Rank of TV viewing, eating and shopping as activities Americans spend the most leisure time engaged in: 1, 2, 3.
■ Total amount of land in the United States occupied by shopping centers and malls, in acres: 96,738.
■ Number of brands of bottled water sold in the United States: 575.
■ Chances an American has appeared on TV: 1 in 4.
■ Number of people who graduated Dale Carnegie courses in the 1980s: 1,320,000.
■ Percentage of Americans who dream of being rich: 49.
■ Percentage of households with an income of $1 million or more a year: less than 1.
■ Revenue at Career Track, a leader in personal development audio and video seminars in 1982: $212,000. Revenue projected for 1992: $80 million.
■ Percentage of Americans who regularly attend religious services: 43.

MEMOIR: Schwarzkopf's book criticizes administration 'hawks'

ter Moscow mounted a last-ditch diplomatic effort that would have enabled Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to withdraw his forces from Kuwait.

Schwarzkopf, the commander of Western forces in the war, does not identify the administration "hawks," nor address whether they were merely reflecting the wishes of President Bush, for whom he had only praise.

But he says the dispute over the starting date led to an emotional shouting match between himself and Gen. Colin L. Powell, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The dispute was eventually settled to Schwarzkopf's satisfaction, and the ground offensive began on Feb. 24, 1991.

The announcement last year that Schwarzkopf planned to write his autobiography created a stir when Bantam Books agreed to pay him $5 million for the work.

Called "It Doesn't Take a Hero" and written with Peter Petre, the 530-page book provides new disclosures about the planning and execution of the war and seems intended to establish the general's place in history by providing an inside account of his role in key decisions.

Excerpts from the book, which is expected to be published next month, are circulating among military officials, and the text has been obtained by The New York Times. It is stirring controversy among officials who dispute some of the accounts and say the general is too quick to take credit for the war's successes while assigning blame to subordinates for the shortcomings.

The book also is notable for the charges it does not make about the most sharply debated aspect of the war — whether the ground offensive ended too soon.

A month after the war ended, when it had become apparent that a significant part of the elite Republican Guard had escaped, Schwarzkopf asserted in a television interview with David Frost that he had recommended that American forces "continue the march" but that Bush had instead ordered a cease-fire.

Bush and Defense Secretary Dick Cheney publicly rebuked the general, saying there was total agreement on when the war should be ended.

In his book, Schwarzkopf asserts that he had no objection to ending the ground war at 100 hours. The 100-hour figure, he writes, was picked by administration officials in Washington, who "really knew how to package an historic event."

Reacting to Schwarzkopf's complaint about the rush to the land war, top administration officials acknowledged in interviews that they pressed him to speed up his military preparations, which had fallen behind schedule. But they say the general was not sufficiently sensitive to the pressure they faced in trying to hold the anti-Iraq coalition together and that he naively put too much stock in Moscow's negotiating efforts.

Among the other disclosures in the book are:

■ Though generally supportive of the American decision to confront Iraq, some Saudi officials became "ambivalent" about opening an attack against Iraqi forces as war approached. After the top Saudi commander, Prince Khalid bin Sultan Saud, said it might be better to stage the offensive from bases in Turkey; Schwarzkopf had an angry confrontation with him.

■ Schwarzkopf severely criticized one of his senior officers, Gen. Fred Franks, the commander of the Army's VII Corps, which was assigned the mission of attacking the Republican Guard, accusing him of conducting a plodding attack.

He charges that Franks' command misinformed him about the progress of Army forces by suggesting that American ground troops had taken a road junction at the Iraqi town of Safwan. Schwarzkopf's complaints were vigorously disputed by a senior officer who worked for Franks, who asserted that Schwarzkopf was looking for a scapegoat because much of the Republican Guard was able to escape.

■ After the Iraqis seized the Saudi town of Khafji, King Fahd wanted the military to send bombers to destroy the city, preferring to sacrifice it rather than allow Iraqi forces to remain overnight. Schwarzkopf talked him out of it.

■ In an effort to keep Israel out of the war, the administration let Israel submit a list of targets in Iraq for American aircraft to strike.

Schwarzkopf's acerbic criticism of National Security Council and White House "hawks" who repeatedly pressed for early military action challenges the administration's assertion that it took a hands-off approach toward the military's conduct of the war.

The general does not name the "White House hawks" who often provoked his anger. But it is clear from his account of administration deliberations that he is referring to Brent Scowcroft, the national security adviser, and Robert M. Gates, the former deputy national security adviser who now heads the CIA.

"The increasing pressure to launch the ground war early was making me crazy," Schwarzkopf wrote. "There had to be a contingent of hawks in Washington who did not want to stop until we'd punished Saddam. We'd been bombing Iraq for more than a month, but that wasn't good enough. These were guys who had seen John Wayne in 'The Green Berets,' they'd seen 'Rambo,' they'd seen 'Patton,' and it was very easy for them to pound their desks and say: 'By God, we've got to go in there. ... Gotta punish that son of a bitch!' Of course, none of them was going to get shot at."

Administration officials acknowledged that White House officials wanted the military to speed up its war preparations. But some officials asserted that the book indicated that the general had an overly benign view of Moscow's motivations in its diplomatic efforts and did not fully appreciate the difficulty of holding the coalition together while the American military completed its laborious preparations for a land offensive.

"There was a broader perspective at work," said a top administration official who spoke on condition of anonymity. "There were certain questions about some of the coalition members. I think that was why we wanted to move forward as soon as possible."

Another top administration official who disputed the general's analysis said, alluding to the Soviet Union's diplomatic efforts, "To have allowed Saddam an orderly retreat would have enabled him to preserve his army and assert the invincibility of his forces.

"The implication of Gen. Schwarzkopf's remarks is that only people who go into combat can make the decisions. He does not seem to understand that in our system the burden of decision is placed on civilians."

U.N. Security Council calls for Yugoslavia's suspension

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council voted Saturday to recommend Serb-led Yugoslavia's suspension from the United Nations, despite warnings that the move might wreck the Bosnian peace talks underway in Geneva.

The decision — if ratified by the General Assembly in a session that resumes Monday — would send a strong signal to the Belgrade government that it must make good on peace pledges and cease aiding attacks on Bosnia's Muslims.

It also would be the world body's harshest censure of a member nation — exceeding even resolutions punishing Iraq for its August 1990 invasion of Kuwait. The Persian Gulf War was waged by U.S.-led forces not specifically under U.N. command.

In Belgrade, Federal Premier Milan Panic expressed "sadness" at the unprecedented move by the Security Council, saying Yugoslavia was now a "force of peace in the Balkans" whose removal "is eliminating a factor of stability." Yugoslavia is a founding member of the United Nations.

The United Nations already has condemned the Serbs' "ethnic cleansing" of Muslims in Bosnia; and clamped an arms embargo, trade embargo and oil import and air transport ban on Yugoslavia — now comprised only of Serbia and Montenegro.

The republic of Serbia has armed and encouraged ethnic Serb fighters in Bosnia, where Muslims and Croats voted Feb. 29 for independence. Since fighting began in April, at least 10,000 people have been killed.

All sides have been accused of "ethnic cleansing" and other atrocities, but a U.N. investigator reported the worst abuses had been committed by Bosnian Serbs.

The vague resolution, passed by a 12-0 vote in the 15-member council with three abstentions, says that federal Yugoslavia "has ceased to exist."

It bars Yugoslavia from participating in the 47th General Assembly session, which began Tuesday, but invites Serbia and Montenegro to apply as new U.N. members.

Saturday's decision, despite its political message, raises serious legal questions and leaves Yugoslavia's status at the United Nations unclear.

"They have a very strange status now," said Russian Ambassador Yuli Vorontsov.

Yugoslavia's ambassador, Dragomir Djokic, fuming after the council prevented him from speaking against the resolution, called the decision "illegal" and "without any political or legal foundation."

Weak economy forces Yeltsin to seek compromise with Western opposition

MOSCOW (NYT) — With the Russian government weakened and the economy slipping out of control, an important session of the legislature opens this week amid signs that President Boris N. Yeltsin is seeking further compromise with forces opposed to Western-style economic reform.

This summer, the Russian economy has borne the brunt of an unresolved political and constitutional struggle over the money supply.

The executive branch, under Acting Prime Minister Yegor T. Gaidar, has been trying to limit the granting of new credits to former Soviet industrial enterprises so it can keep inflation down and encourage structural changes in the the economy. But the central bank, which is responsible to the legislature, has opened the credit spigot wide in the hope of reviving production and avoiding high levels of unemployment.

The clash, which the central bank and its acting director, Viktor V. Gerashchenko, have lately been winning, is in essence about the size of the state's role in controlling the economy. In even broader terms, it is a deeply political struggle about the future direction of Russia. But in narrower terms, as always here, it is an intensely personal struggle for power and perquisites.

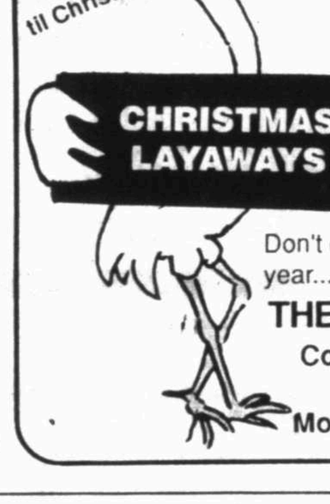

"Russian politicians always get their priorities mixed up," a senior Western diplomat said. "They're so involved in their power struggles, which have a lot to do with access to the dacha, the car, trips abroad, and access to hard currency, that they really don't see that the economy is on the verge of collapse."

For Gaidar and his team of Western-oriented ministers, this is a moment of some despair. Gerashchenko, who took over the central bank in mid-July, issued more than a trillion rubles, or some $5 billion, in credit in July and August alone. He did so, Gaidar's aides say, without consulting the executive branch, and one result will be an inflation rate close to 30 percent this month. They see the possibility of hyperinflation, or a 50 percent monthly rate, in October or November.

Gerashchenko's policies have also led Gaidar to acknowledge publicly that the Russian government cannot meet the financial targets that it negotiated earlier this year with the International Monetary Fund. Russia had originally agreed to aim for a domestically financed budget deficit of 5 percent of gross national product and a monthly inflation rate in single digits by the end of the year.

Gaidar has only admitted what everyone already knew. But, despite the air of calm at briefings by IMF officials during the annual meeting of the fund and the World Bank in Washington last week, senior Western diplomats here say that fund officials are "extremely nervous" about the current direction of the Russian economy.

A senior adviser to Gaidar, Sergei A. Vasilyev, director of the Government Working Center for Economic Reform, went so far as to accuse Gerashchenko and his allies of "working to discredit the government and the entire course of the reforms." Some diplomats agree, suggesting that Gerashchenko is aware of the inflationary implications of his policies and hopes to sink Gaidar.

Famine victim wonders if he will follow family in death

BUR ACABA, Somalia (AP) — Hussein Hasam Ali struggled to his feet, his hand outstretched to a stranger, but he was so weak from hunger he collapsed after a few feeble steps.

For three days, he had eaten nothing. He feared he would soon die of starvation, as the other 20 members of his family have.

"I am very hungry. I have only drunk water for three days. Can you help me?" the 20-year-old man pleaded, peering through his one good eye. His arms and legs were like twigs.

Dozens of other starving Somalis sat or slept under the tamarind trees in this refugee-swollen village of 30,000 people just off the main paved road from Mogadishu, the capital, to Baidoa.

Many were too weak to walk. Some had not eaten for five days.

In this Horn of Africa nation, drought and civil war have killed more than 100,000 people and threaten 2 million more with starvation. Armed attacks and widespread looting have severely hobbled international efforts to feed Somalia's starving.

In Bur Acaba, there were sacks of sorghum and maize in the market, but for refugees like Ali — whose farm is a wasteland and whose camels were looted — there was no money to buy anything.

And there were no relief supplies being given out, even with a massive international humanitarian under way. Two food trucks from the International Committee of the Red Cross, destined for Bur Acaba, were hijacked by bandits on the road from Baidoa. One got through, but that was more than 10 days ago, and the refugees under tamarinds did not get any of the rice, beans, or oil.

"The situation is very tense — no food is coming at all," said Abdule Ibrahim Haidar, 52, the district commissioner for the Bur Acaba region, which includes 376 villages and has a population of almost 500,000.

"Those people who said they haven't for five days are very lucky. There are some who have not eaten for eight or 10 days. They go around looking for animal skins and try to cook them," he said.

In a small mud-baked building near the center of town, the bodies of six Somalis who lost the battle against famine were lying on the floor, little more than skin and bones.

Haidar said between 30 and 40 people were dying every day. When the Red Cross brought food, he said, the death toll dropped to 18 to 20 per day.

At the edge of town, overlooking the massive rock formation that gives Bur Acaba its name — "Peace Rock" — Ali and a group of refugees were wondering whether they, too, would soon be dead.

"There were 21 members of my family," Ali recalled, barely whispering. "Twenty passed away ... all my brothers and sisters, and my father. I am the only one left."

He clutched a cup of water. When it was finished, he crawled into the back seat of a wrecked orange-and-green taxi to escape the baking sun and scorching heat.

Later, he settled under one of the tamarind trees, where other refugees barely clinging to life told stories similar to his.

Kadija Mohammed Ali, 50, had traveled 75 miles from her home in Fulai in search of food after her three children had died of hunger.

"Bring us food and clothing and drugs," she pleaded as she sat on the dusty ground, her toothpick legs unable to carry her further. "I can't walk — food, I only sit."

Muslima Hussein Ali and her sister Fatimah Mohammed Hasan, both in their 50s, lost all their children and left their home in Helede, about 19 miles away, because there was no food.

Germany to step up riot police

BONN, Germany (AP) — The government said Saturday it will step up police presence in eastern states in an effort to stop attacks on foreigners.

Rightist attacks on refugee centers continued early Saturday, including the fifth straight night of violence in Wismar in northeastern Germany. No injuries were reported.

The Interior Ministry's plans include dispatching border patrol officers to help local police departments, spokesman Roland Bachmeier said.

The Welt am Sonntag newspaper, which reported the measures, said they also included setting up a special hotline for reporting neo-Nazi attacks and speeding up trials for accused attackers.

German police have been criticized for failing to halt the violence, which began to escalate last month. Much of the violence has been in economically depressed areas of eastern Germany.

A record 280,000 foreigners have sought asylum in Germany so far this year. The government contends most come for economic reasons. But the constitution allows them to remain in Germany — housed and fed by the government — until their applications are ruled on. The process can take years.

The Social Democrats are demanding the country adopt an immigration law, which is opposes by Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

In Wismar, police said 50 young vandals threw stones at a home for refugees. But police intervened quickly. Similar attacks were reported overnight Friday in a half-dozen other eastern cities, and several arrests were made.

In Saarlouis, on the border with France, 1,000 people marched Saturday to protest neo-Nazi attacks in Germany.

German teens are dangerous neo-Nazi threat

DRESDEN, Germany (AP) — His name is Maik Jacob but his friends call him Leiche, the German word for corpse. With his sunken eyes, bony frame and shaved skull, he looks very much like his nickname.

Last year, Jacob and his friends cornered a Vietnamese man on a dark Dresden street and pounded him senseless with clubs. Jacob tells this story with some embarrassment, because he got caught.

"Severe bodily injury," he says, almost whispering the juvenile court charge brought against him. "Six months in jail."

Jacob is 16 years old. After he wakes up at noon and until he goes to bed at 4 a.m., he spends most of his day in the drafty Dresden train station, drinking beer with his friends and harassing people with swarthy skin.

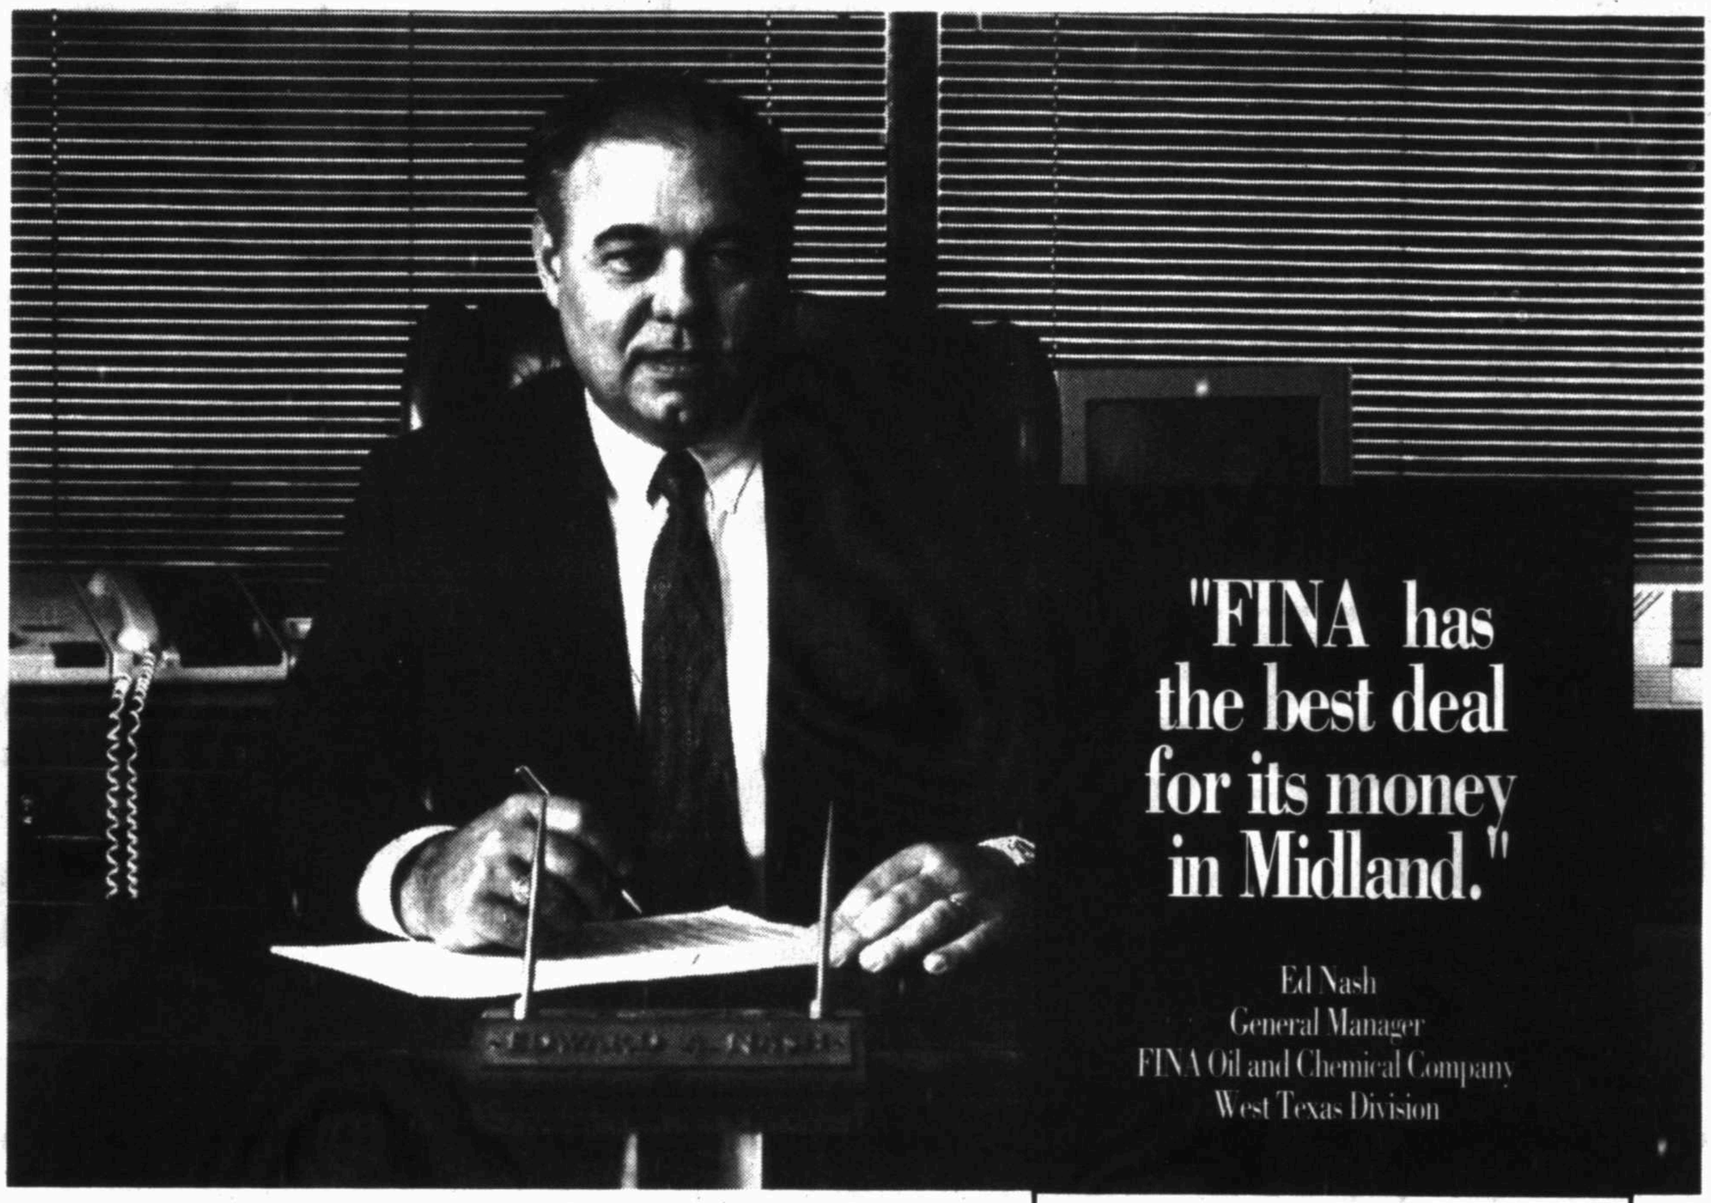

He is part of a social circle of about 25 young men and women who sit on train station benches and stare at people with places to go. They are part of eastern Germany's neo-Nazi scene, a subculture of rightist radical hate and teen-age rootlessness.

They get drunk, try to scrape up money for a movie, exchange secret handshakes and spout fascist slogans from wrinkled pamphlets. They are mostly penniless offspring of jobless parents living in tiny apartments in suffocating socialist-era housing complexes.

They are also the shock troops of a growing yet extremely disorganized, emotion-driven rightist movement that has rattled the united Germany and confronted the government with a problem it cannot seem to solve.

Since Aug. 22, mobs of young people have staged daily attacks on homes for foreigners seeking asylum in Germany.

Accusations of MIAs in Vietnam still haunt Pentagon official

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Nearly 20 years after American troops came home from Vietnam, Roger E. Shields, the Pentagon official in charge of accounting for those who did not return, is still haunted by accusations that the Nixon administration knowingly left servicemen behind. He is also pained, he says, to see himself quoted as the official who in effect wrote off all the missing as dead.

Shields, who was deputy assistant secretary of defense for POW-MIA affairs in 1973, when U.S. forces were withdrawn from Vietnam, says that Americans will probably never know how many soldiers were alive in Indochina when a prisoner exchange with Hanoi ended that year.

Next week, he will join an array of high-level Nixon administration officials called to testify before the Senate Select Committee on POW-MIA Affairs about what they knew at the time of Americans reported as missing in southeast Asia.

On Monday, the committee will question, among others, Melvin R. Laird, secretary of defense from 1969-1973; William P. Rogers, secretary of state in the same years; Vernon A. Walters, deputy director of central intelligence, 1972-76; and Alexander M. Haig, Jr., White House chief of staff in 1973-74.

On Tuesday, the committee will devote a full day to Henry A. Kissinger, who was President Richard M. Nixon's national security adviser in 1973. On Thursday, Shields is due to appear, along with others.

In two recent interviews, Shields said that the Pentagon, contrary to popular belief, never declared that all Americans unaccounted for in prisoner exchanges were dead. He asserted that the Senate committee has used a statement he made on April 12, 1973, out of context.

On that day, Shields stated in the course of a lengthy news conference: "We have no indications at this time that there are any Americans alive in Indochina."

Two weeks earlier, President Nixon had said in a television address to the nation that "all our American POWs are on their way home." Shields said neither he nor the Pentagon were making that claim, nor were they saying that any Americans who did not return must have perished.

"What the Defense Department was saying in '73 is not that they were all dead, but that we don't have specific information that they were alive," Shields said in New York, where he now works in banking. He left government service in 1977.

"I've spent a large part of my life and put a lot of emotion into this," he said. "It was such an enormous issue and we were dealing with human beings. I knew their wives; I knew their sisters; I knew their brothers." Though he is years away from direct involvement, Shields said that he is still invited to weddings and other family events by relatives of the missing.

Journalists report some fraud in voting

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Turnout was heavy as voters in 10 states cast ballots in the second round of presidential primaries Saturday. There were no reports of violence, but journalists observed vote buying in several precincts.

The military government has said it will hold presidential elections in December and turn power over to civilians if the primaries are successfully carried out.

In August, the government annulled primary results when both parties, the Social Democrats and National Republican Convention, claimed widespread fraud. President Ibrahim Babangida threatened to ban any presidential candidates from politics for 10 years if they or their supporters were caught cheating.

Babangida's government created the two parties and wrote their charters.

The primaries were rescheduled for three weekends this month, with the first 10 states voting Sept. 12. The last 10 states are scheduled to vote Sept. 26.

Twelve candidates were competing for the Social Democrats' nomination while 11 sought the Republican nomination.

Peru's future seems cloudy despite lead rebel's capture

LIMA, Peru (AP) — The capture of the mastermind behind Latin America's most dangerous insurgency has brought hope to many Peruvians, but storm clouds still hang over the nation's future.

Political violence, economic instability and authoritarian rule will mark the coming years, a wide range of analysts predict.

The arrest a week ago of Abimael Guzman, known as "President Gonzalo" to his fanatical followers in the Shining Path, ended a 12-year manhunt.

Most analysts believe that with the capture of Guzman, the Shining Path rebellion will eventually run out of steam. But they say that could take as long as 10 years.

In the immediate future they see revenge attacks by the rebels, perhaps of a ferocity unseen in this war-scarred nation.

"They need to do two things," said military expert Enrique Obando. "First, demonstrate they have not been hurt, and to do that they must do something spectacular in Lima. Second, try to liberate Abimael Guzman, perhaps with an attack on the prison."

More than 25,000 Peruvians have been killed on both sides since the Shining Path launched its armed rebellion in May 1980, seeking to impose a hardline Maoist utopia in this impoverished nation of 22 million people.

The rebels have also caused an estimated $22 billion in damage — equivalent to Peru's foreign debt — in a bid to sabotage the economy and drive off local and foreign investment.

The fear of a murderous guerrillas offensive in the near future is not the only concern that Peruvians have. They are worried about whether the nation can recover economically.

After Guzman's capture, Economy Minister Carlos Bolona predicted an upswing in Peru's economy, including new foreign investment. But analysts call that wishful thinking.

"I doubt very much that the state has the capacity to end the violence in coming years," said Fernando Rospigliosi, a political scientist. "We are going to have to live with it for many years and it will continue to be an obstacle to economic recovery and investment."

Experts say the rebel movement most likely will splinter into regional commands strong enough to cause death and destruction for years. But without national direction, the competing bands wouldn't represent a threat to the government's security, the analysts say.

"Most likely the Shining Path will split apart. It was Guzman who gave it cohesion," said Carlos Tapia, a leading expert on the rebellion.

Even if the Shining Path dissolves, the social and economic injustices and the racism in Peruvian society that have fed its growth could generate new insurgencies in coming years.

"The Shining Path is the natural violent expression of a social explosion," said Luis Lumbreras, a renowned archaeologist who once taught with Guzman at the state university in the Andean city of Ayacucho, the birthplace of the rebellion.

"If the Shining Path had not existed, another vanguard group would have appeared," Lumbreras said.

Analysts say one danger stemming from Guzman's capture is that President Alberto Fujimori and the military command backing him may no longer feel it necessary to carry out social reforms to alleviate conditions that gave birth to the Shining Path.

"The armed forces think they were right all along, that to finish off subversion all that was needed was to put an end to Congress, human rights organizations and an independent judiciary," Rospigliosi said.

Spassky, Fischer play to draw

SVETI STEFAN, Yugoslavia (AP) — Boris Spassky and Bobby Fischer battled to a draw Saturday after 7½ hours of play in the longest game of their $5 million chess rematch.

The 10th game went 68 moves before a draw was accepted by Fischer, who leads the series 4-2 after winning three games in a row.

The game originally was scheduled for Thursday, but was postponed after Spassky complained of kidney problems.

Spassky opened with a pawn to d4, as he has in previous games when he had white. Fischer chose the Nimzo-Indian Defense for the first time in the match.

Experts observing the game predicted a draw early on, although there was a flurry of excitement between moves 48 and 60 when it appeared Spassky might have erred during an exchange of pieces and each player promoted a pawn to a queen.

Afterward Fischer said he was not certain the game would end in a draw. "I had some chances," he said, but conceded the final position was "quite dead."

Spassky termed the game "interesting" with "many adventures."

Spassky, 55, lost the previous three games through a series of blunders that some experts speculated could be health-related.

Although Spassky started play Saturday looking relaxed, he appeared visibly weary by the end of the marathon game.

The Russian-born French citizen told an earlier news conference he was suffering from recurring kidney trouble that had forced him to abandon the latest French championships. He appeared to be suffering no discomfort Saturday.

Fischer, 49, who beat Spassky to take the world title in 1972, is returning to chess after a 20-year absence.

The first player to win 10 games clinches the $3.35 million top prize. The loser gets the balance.

The prize money has been put up by Yugoslav businessman Jedzimir Vasiljevic.

Canadian pact faces opposition

TORONTO (NYT) — With early polls giving opponents of a new national unity accord an edge in Quebec and British Columbia, the federal government has warned that Canada faces economic setbacks if all 10 provinces do not ratify the pact.

Even though the leaders of the federal, provincial, and territorial governments, the three main political parties, and groups representing more than 1 million indigenous people are all in favor of the accord, opponents have capitalized on a multitude of deep resentments and gained early support.

Ministers of the Progressive Conservative government insist they are not trying to frighten the public into voting yes in the Oct. 26 referendum. But lately they have been seeking to stress the link between financial and constitutional issues, raising the specter of fleeing investors, a sinking Canadian dollar, and soaring interest rates if the accord is not approved.

Harvie Andre, leader of the House of Commons, said: "It would be horribly disrupting, once you unleash those forces. Look what's happening in Europe."

The so-called Charlottetown accord, named after the historic capital of Prince Edward Island where it was signed on Aug. 28, represents the broadest changes in Canada's constitution in its 125 years of independence.

It is a result of a series of crises and compromises that have dominated Canadian political life for years, especially since June 1990, when a more narrowly focused unity agreement collapsed.

The earlier accord, which was aimed chiefly at keeping Quebec from bolting, was rejected in the provinces of Manitoba and Newfoundland.

The earlier pact made concessions to Quebec, such as recognition of its distinct status, to curb the appeal of the separatists who represent about half the province's French speakers. But analysts said it was doomed by the absence of counterweights or balances.

The Charlottetown accord also recognizes Quebec's distinctiveness, but tries to satisfy demands from other parts of the country. It offers, for example, a reformed Senate, whose members would be elected and not appointed as now, and establishes a process of self-government for indigenous peoples.

74-year-old pistol-packing mayor aims to clean up town

EDWARDS, MISS. (NYT) — Patience and tact are two traits Nerissa Gray Smith has happily done without in her personal life and doesn't believe she'll cultivate in her public life. She bosses her minister and played the church organ with a pistol in her bra until perspiration rusted the weapon and inspired her to find a new hiding place.

She bullies drug dealers, bar owners and back-talking teenage boys.

She sets curfews and cuts off people's water, two reasons why she carries a .38 in her car and keeps a .357 Magnum under a couch at home.

"I have to protect myself," says Ms. Smith, who looks a decade younger than her 74 years. "I say what I feel and do what I have to do to get this town in shape. I may be the most hated mayor in Mississippi."

Some adult residents hate her because she enforces a law that requires people to pay their water bills by the 25th day of the month, or service is cut. The money is needed to pay more than $60,000 annually on three bond issues.

"I saw one woman I know send her little girl in here trying to get water started in the child's name rather than pay the old water bill," says Ms. Smith, whose City Hall office houses the four-member police force and food stamp distribution center.

"I sent her back out to tell her mama, forget it," she says. "Look, they know they gotta pay. If they can't pay the first month, how they gonna pay two and three months' back bills?"

Sandwiched between Vicksburg and Jackson, this is a hilly town of 1,279 people, 80 percent black, where some cotton is still grown and cattle grazed, but where most people now commute to office and factory jobs in nearby cities. A rustic wooden bridge and 19th century homes mix with newer brick bungalows built with farmers' loan money, plentiful two decades ago.

When the trains rumble through downtown, the bridge shakes and the town clerk must shout into the phone and raise the volume on the mayor's favorite soap, "The Young and the Restless."

But behind City Hall, Main Street, once the town's center with bustling mom-and-pop stores, has become a dangerous block of seedy nightclubs, open drug deals and drive-by shootings. There are also pockets of shacks and dilapidated trailers throughout the town.

"It's like a tiny South Bronx," says Alderman Dave Montgomery, a native who returned to his hometown in 1988 after 30 years. "Another indication that the city is spreading to the country."

Ms. Smith, who supplements her mayoral income of $300 a month by managing an apartment building and working as a school crossing guard, was a two-term alderwoman when she ran and was elected mayor by 11 votes in 1989.

"It's a hard job and she's done it very well," says Mr. Montgomery, 56, an insurance salesman in Jackson. "She's concerned about improving this town and cleaning it up literally and figuratively for both black and white citizens.

"Nerissa's problem isn't substance, it's, ah, style. She has a sharp tongue and a temper that sometimes hides how fair she is and that her heart is in the right place."

Some tough young teens, accustomed to ruling the streets, are enraged because the mayor and five-member town board imposed a curfew that allows police to pick up those under 18 who are out after 10 p.m. weekdays, and past 11 p.m. on weekends.

"I hate that woman," says Shonn Davis, 19. "She thinks she's it, and I think she's too old to be acting like she's something. 'Cause she don't understand what she's messing with. She ain't the only one carrying a gun and she's the target of plenty people who do."

Economic unrest in Missouri may influence votes

CLAYTON, Mo. (AP) — Laurie Walker confesses paying little attention to this year's campaign but says she's clamoring to vote against President Bush anyway. With a shrug, she acknowledges that means voting for Bill Clinton.

"I'm not at all excited about Clinton but we need to get Bush out of there," says the 29-year-old mortgage company worker. "I'm part of a generation that will be lucky to own a home, lucky to be able to afford two kids. Knowing that you're not going to do better than your parents is hard. I resent it."

In the suburbs surrounding St. Louis, Walker's is a familiar tale of economic uncertainty and anguish — and an ominous warning to Bush in one of November's battleground states.

Since Bush won Missouri four years ago, unemployment has increased from 5.6 percent to 6.5 percent, General Dynamics has moved its headquarters elsewhere, and Zenith, Brown Shoes and other factories have shipped jobs out of state to Mexico.

"Bush has been there four years and look at all the lost jobs," said Richard Bostic, a 75-year-old retiree who works part time as a parking lot attendant. "We've got to get the economy back so people can go back to work."

Recent interviews with nearly 100 Missouri residents leave no doubt the economy is the overriding issue in a tossup state that has just 11 electoral votes yet is coveted by both campaigns. The fight here mirrors the battle for other Midwestern and border states that both campaigns predict will decide the election.

Democrats bank on winning big margins in the cities of Kansas City and St. Louis, while Republican votes come from affluent suburbs and conservative pockets in southern Missouri.

The 1988 results show vividly why voters like Walker are so important: Bush won the two suburban counties surrounding St. Louis by 66,000 votes — and the entire state by just 80,000 votes out of 2.1 million cast.

So, as a symbolic gesture, Clinton's state headquarters is in Clayton, a well-to-do suburb in St. Louis County just outside the city of St. Louis.

"This is where the fight is," said Clinton state director Julie Gibson.

So far, Clinton is ahead. Polls show him leading Bush statewide by roughly 10 percent and out front by a similar margin in suburbs critical to the Republicans.

In Clayton and neighboring suburbs, it's easy to find 1988 Bush supporters who are planning to vote for Clinton or leaning that way. As much as they blame Bush for economic anemia, they also talk of a less tangible sense of a country standing still.

"We need a change and I'm willing to see if a Democrat can do something different for us," said Joy Morr, a 26-year-old who voted for Bush last time. The best she can say about Clinton: "He's OK. Like all politicians, I think he promises more than he can do. But he's OK."

That assessment was fairly typical among 1988 Bush supporters now planning to vote for Clinton.

Also typical was her reasoning: "I know things aren't going to get better with Bush so it's a chance worth taking."

For all their differences, a lack of enthusiasm for their candidate is a sentiment shared by many Bush and Clinton supporters.

"I hate to say the lesser of two evils but that's how I feel about it," said Gregory Miller, a 29-year-old lawyer who works in Clayton. "I just feel more comfortable with Bush and his positions. Clinton is too unknown."

Echoed Secretary Bea Haley, 46: "There's a lot of room for improvement with Bush, but I'd rather go with someone who has done it."

The 1988 Bush supporters backing Clinton see things differently. To them, more of the same — "treading water," in Walker's words.

Nation in brief

■ Newspaper: Man shoots couple because of race

SPOKANE, Wash. — A man who says he believes in racial separation told a newspaper that he shot a mixed-race couple at a bus terminal because of the color of their skin.

"I wasn't mad at them or anything," Chris Alan Lindholm told The Spokesman-Review in a story published Saturday. "I just knew they should die because of what they had done.

"I think he put his arm around her or something."

Lindholm, 23, was interviewed Friday night at the Spokane County Jail. He is being held on a first-degree robbery charge stemming from the theft of a rental car that authorities believe he used to flee Spokane after the Sept. 8 shootings.

Spokane police Sgt. Al Odenthal said detectives plan to ask prosecutors to charge Lindholm in the shootings. Police are investigating whether the incident was a racially motivated "hate crime."

Miguel Legrada, 29, who is black, and Tracy Raider, 19, who is white, were wounded when a man walked into a Greyhound bus station, whipped a handgun from his belt and fired five shots without warning.

■ Boy goes to court next week to divorce parents

ORLANDO, Fla. — A 12-year-old boy is due in court next week for a trial on his unprecedented lawsuit seeking to 'divorce' his parents so he can be adopted.

Known only as Gregory K. in court documents, the boy appeared on ABC's "20-20" on Friday and reiterated his resolve.

"I just want a place where I feel safe and that I'm happy, and that I know people will always be there for me," he told Barbara Walters.

Circuit Judge Thomas S. Kirk ruled in July that the boy can sue his parents and seek his freedom. The child wants the judge to authorize his adoption by a family in central Florida that he has been living with since October 1991.

Gregory said he lived with his mother, Rachel K., for only seven months in the past eight years and didn't remember what she looked like during a recent reunion.

The mother is fighting Gregory's effort. His father, Ralph K., has agreed to sever legal ties after changing his mind but finally signing the necessary papers.

The case is scheduled for court Thursday and Friday.

■ Hurricane experts expect Bonnie to strengthen

MIAMI — Hurricane Bonnie, already packing winds of 85 mph, was expected to get stronger in the days ahead but posed no immediate danger to land, a hurricane expert said Saturday.

Bonnie, the second hurricane of the Atlantic season, was about 490 miles east-northeast of Bermuda and moving northeast at about 2 mph Saturday. Its winds could increase to 100 mph over the next two days, said National Hurricane Center forecaster Miles Lawrence.

"Eventually it should move into the far north Atlantic," Lawrence said.

Tropical storms sometimes die there, losing energy as they move over colder waters. But others combine with ocean storms to menace Canada and Europe.

The center's hurricane forecasts only cover three days, and Lawrence said it was too early to speculate on what Bonnie might do after picking up strength and moving into the far north Atlantic.

■ Forest blaze kills five firefighters in Madrid

MADRID, Spain — Five firefighters died Saturday as they tried to extinguish a blaze that destroyed more than 600 acres of forest northeast of Madrid, news reports said.

The fire began Friday afternoon along the border of Guadalajara province, then spread to the Sierra Del Rincon range, an environmental official told the Spanish news agency EFE.

The firefighters were part of the Madrid Environmental Agency reserve corps, which spent 15 hours bringing the blaze under control.

A magistrate was appointed to determine the cause of the fire.

Five firefighters also were killed on Sept. 7 in a blaze in Grazalema, 56 miles south of Seville.

Retired admiral thinks draft is no issue

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The admiral who led the Joint Chiefs of Staff under presidents Reagan and Bush endorsed Bill Clinton on Saturday, giving the Democrat a boost at the same time Republicans were pressing their attack on his draft record.

Retired Adm. William Crowe said the draft was a "peripheral issue" that should not distract attention from critical domestic problems. "The press may be obsessed with this particular issue. I am not," he declared.

"My discussions and contacts with Gov. Clinton have led me to believe that he is the most qualified man to set us on a successful course for the future," Crowe said at a news conference with Clinton outside the Arkansas governor's mansion.

Separately, the nation's most recent military hero, retired Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf, suggested Clinton's draft avoidance could come back to haunt him if he ever had to prosecute an unpopular war as president. Schwarzkopf, commenting in an interview with AP Network News and Newsweek, made no endorsement.

Clinton, responding to questions about a story in Saturday's New York Times, said he had talked with the office of then-Sen. J. William Fulbright about his military situation in 1969, a time when he was trying to continue his draft deferment. Clinton had been an intern in Fulbright's office.

'How does a person who admits that he deliberately did not agree with the war, and therefore did not want to go to that war, how does he handle it when he has to send other people to war? What's he going to do about the people who don't want to go to that particular war?'

—Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf

But when asked if he thought he had received special treatment in avoiding the draft, he said: "In the way you mean it, I don't."

What he did take advantage of, Clinton acknowledged, was special treatment in the form of the deferments that he and other college students received.

"If we ever have to return to a draft, there probably should be fewer exceptions than there were then," he said.

Fulbright said in an interview from his office in Washington that he didn't remember being approached by Clinton.

The former Arkansas senator, a fierce critic of the Vietnam War, said he would have told Clinton to avoid the draft if he had been asked. The former senator, now 87, said it was "disgraceful" for the issue to be used against Clinton.

The Senate's current Republican leader, Bob Dole of Kansas, was indeed trying to use the issue Saturday, calling a news conference to declare the draft controversy for Clinton would prove to be "the Achilles heel that will end his political ambitions."

Dole said he called the news conference at the request of the Bush campaign, hours after publication of the Times story, which cited a memo from a former Fulbright aide as an indication that Clinton had talked with Fulbright's staff about his military situation.

Meanwhile, Schwarzkopf, the general who directed military operations in the Persian Gulf War, said Clinton's draft record could be a problem if he wins the presidency.

"How does a person who admits that he deliberately did not agree with the war, and therefore did not want to go to that war, how does he handle it when he has to send other people to war?" Schwarzkopf said.

"What's he going to do about the people who don't want to go to that particular war? This is a question that I think needs to be answered by the candidate himself. And there's a lot of other questions along those lines that are in my mind," he said.

Crowe, clearly unconcerned about such questions, said he had worked in the past "with many others who didn't serve in uniform, including a number of key national security figures in the Bush administration." That was an apparent reference to Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, among others.

Elsewhere on Saturday:

— A Chicago Tribune poll to be published Sunday said Clinton was holding his lead in Illinois, an important Midwestern battleground state. Clinton received 51 percent to Bush's 32 percent among likely voters who were questioned, the same 19-point margin as in a previous Tribune poll three weeks ago.

— One state to the west, The St. Louis Post-Dispatch endorsed Clinton, saying "he would use the presidency to bring out the best in America and its people."

AIDS outreach team sandbags tidal wave of epidemic

By Mitchell Landsberg
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA — Something keeps Richard Liu going, bounding like a bird dog from hooker to hustler, car to club.

"Come here!" he shouts to a transvestite ambling along a downtown sidewalk. Eighteen-year-old Mercedes, dressed this night in a low-cut blue satin blouse, tight jeans and low heels, smiles warmly and crosses the street toward Liu, who presses condoms wrapped in safe-sex brochures into his hand.

"Oh thanks, I needed those," Mercedes says. Then he gestures to Liu and his partners in an AIDS outreach team. "They're a lifesaver."

So they hope.

Seven nights a week, in twos or threes, the AIDS outreach team from Philadelphia Community Health Alternatives prowls the streets, the alleys, the clubs, the bathhouses and the parks of the central city, dispensing condoms, information and advice to the people who are at highest risk of being infected by the AIDS virus.

In the enormity of the AIDS epidemic, it is a small thing they do. They are sandbagging a tidal wave.

But in the small world of Philadelphia's "gay ghetto" and in the sex markets — gay and straight — nearby, what they do accounts for a story of quiet heroism.

By comparison to some cities — even smaller ones, such as San Francisco and Washington — Philadelphia's outreach efforts are modest.

Philadelphia Community Health Alternatives (the largest AIDS organization in the city, although not the only one) has a $1.1 million annual budget and a staff of 28, including the eight members of its outreach squad.

But that $1.1 million buys a lot — AIDS testing, services for AIDS patients, a myriad of educational programs, and the work of the street team.

No one can say how successful these efforts have been. There are 4,800 Philadelphians diagnosed with AIDS, according to the federal Centers for Disease Control, and the number grows inevitably.

Richard Liu is 22, a college student who grew up in the suburbs outside Philadelphia. He is an "AIDS baby," a gay man who has never known a world of sex without AIDS. In lieu of a cure or vaccine, he and his fellow members of the PCHA street team are doing all they can to save lives.

At a time when younger gay men are spurning safer sexual practices and some older gay men are abandoning them, when more people are dying from the disease than ever, there is a growing sense of urgency to the mission of these young men.

"We're celebrities around here," Liu says as he and 21-year-old Jamal Weaver stroll up 13th Street around midnight, past an adult bookshop, a leather sex-toys shop, an all-male porn theater; past transvestite hookers, teen-age hustlers, gay couples and cruising suburbanites.

They are a diverse group, these members of the AIDS team. The five out tonight are black, white and Asian; gay, straight and bisexual; from the suburbs and the inner city.

And this is their village. They patrol these streets from roughly 10 p.m. to 2 a.m., sometimes later. They are out on this balmy summer night, and they will be out when it snows in January.

They have been working the same streets for nearly a year now, and have so far avoided danger. "We know pretty much where to go and where not to go," says Ahmid Hiller, the youngest member of the team at 20.

That means ignoring some of the areas that offer the highest risk of exposure to AIDS, but also violence — such as drug shooting galleries.

Liu and Weaver have split off from the rest of the team. They walk up 13th Street like cops on patrol, handing condoms and information to virtually everyone they see. Most people take the handout, some sullenly, some greedily, some with a smile or a joke. The idea, Weaver says, is not to supply condoms. It is to supply reminders. To be the conscience of the community. To be a nag.

Two men come toward them, and Liu and Weaver hand them the kits. One of the men, Preston Hart, gratefully takes a condom and stuffs it in his sock. Then he says he won't need it.

"Most of my friends have already died of AIDS," Hart says. "I don't try to do nothing with nobody anymore."

Promising young teacher vanishes amid web of lies

SEATTLE (AP) — Everyone at Sumner Junior High School thought J. Gregory Ware had the makings of an outstanding young teacher. He was bright, charming and had impeccable academic credentials.

"The principal was delighted to have him on the staff because he almost seemed to be too good," said Assistant Superintendent Bill Nolan.

He was.

Ware vanished Sept. 3 — two days into the school year — leaving behind a hot 1992 Cadillac, a stack of skillfully forged documents, and a note saying he was resigning immediately "due to TRAGIC extenuating circumstances."

The note asked that his pay be donated to a church in Norcross, Ga., and was signed "Sorrowfully yours."

Ware, who turned 24 the week after he disappeared, also left a lot of people feeling strangely violated.

"The kids are sort of very surprised and some of them have said things like, 'You know, I'm really mad at Mr. Ware because I really liked him and he let us down,'" Nolan said.

"The teachers are kind of feeling like we've been had," he said.

The U.S. Secret Service has entered the case because of the possibility of federal counterfeiting charges and appealed to the public for help Friday in locating the mysterious stranger.

Sumner is a blue-collar town of 6,000 located 40 miles south of Seattle.

Ware's application arrived by mail in December 1991. When a job opened up last spring, the district invited him to fly out for an interview.

Ware, who listed a post office box in Atlanta and an address in Lilburn, Ga., was invited back for a teaching demonstration in a classroom setting.

After more interviews and reference checks, he was hired as a seventh-grade English teacher at $27,600 a year and moved to Washington over the summer.

"I thought we had a blue-chipper," said Terry Beckstead, Sumner Junior High principal.

Ware's credentials included a valid Washington state teaching certificate and glowing references from a retired teacher and a college professor in Georgia. The Sumner district also received college transcripts, stamped and embossed with Georgia State University seals, showing he had earned a bachelor's in education and a master's degree in English education.

"Everything checked," Nolan said. "He was the embodiment of a good, wholesome, young, professional teacher."

Texas A&M's Greg Hill (27) picks his way through the Missouri defense during the Aggies' 26-13 win.

■ Aggies rally in the second half for a 26-13 victory over the Tigers.

Associated Press

COLUMBIA, Mo. — It was all or nothing for Texas A&M quarterback Jeff Granger.

Granger completed only two passes in the second half Saturday, but both went for touchdowns as fifth-ranked Texas A&M overcame a sluggish start to beat Missouri 26-13.

"If I don't grip the ball correctly, it looks ugly," said Granger, who completed two of nine in the second half and only eight of 23 overall for 148 yards. "I'll short-hop them or I'll throw a slider."

Indeed, most of the misses didn't even come close. For the season he's connected on just 43 of 102 passes.

"But when I drop back there and have a little bit of time and can adjust the ball, I feel like I can throw a strike," Granger said. "Fortunately, I had two strikes when the time was needed."

Granger hooked up with Tony Harrison for a 73-yard touchdown on the third play of the second half as Harrison broke free of the grasp of Jason Oliver at midfield and outran Oliver and another defender down the sideline.

He also threw a 6-yard touchdown pass to Greg Hill on a rollout. The play was set up by Patrick Bates' interception of Jeff Handy's pass and 13-yard return to the Missouri 16.

Hill, a sophomore, added his eighth career 100-yard rushing day as Texas A&M rallied from a halftime deficit for the second straight game. The Aggies were

Dallas gets safety

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys acquired safety Thomas Everett from the Pittsburgh Steelers for a draft choice Saturday.

Everett, who lives in Dallas and played high school and college football in Texas, will sign following Dallas' game Sunday against Phoenix, the Cowboys said.

The draft pick and contract terms for Everett were not announced.

Everett, a five-year starter with the Steelers following a standout career at Baylor, has missed the first two games of the 1992 season because of a contract holdout.

The Dallas Morning News reported Saturday that the Cowboys had agreed to send Pittsburgh a middle-round pick in the 1993 draft.

Everett was twice named Southwest Conference defensive player of the year at Baylor. His senior season, he was awarded the Jim Thorpe Award as the nation's outstanding defensive back.

Everett was drafted by Pittsburgh in the fourth round in 1987. He has 16 career interceptions.

Everett's brother, Eric, also a defensive back, was drafted by Philadelphia in 1988 and now plays for Minnesota.

Everett's agent, Scott Casterline, spent Friday negotiating with the Cowboys, and Everett was expected to sign a three-year deal. Everett made $214,300 last season. He had rejected a three-year offer from Pittsburgh for about $1.75 million.

Lady Rebels secure first loop victory

■ Lee takes a narrow three-game match from Odessa High.

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

Midland Lee's Lady Rebels got into the District 4-5A win column for the first time this year at the Lee gym Saturday, but it wasn't easy.

The Lee girls dug themselves a hole a climbed out of it in dramatic fashion, beating a vastly improved Odessa High team, 7-15, 15-10, 17-15.

"Boy, that was a real confidence builder," said Anita Corder, Lee volleyball coach. "With the last game tied at 15, it doesn't get any better than that.

"And our girls really needed this one after losing our first two district games. Had we lost this one, we would have been 0-3, and it would have been a tough thing to overcome. This was like a shot in the arm of vitamin B-12."

Trailing 15-14 in the deciding game following an ace serve by OHS' Lori Valles, Lee reeled off three straight points to win the contest.

Heather Huff turned in a spike to knot the game at 15-15. Kelly Erl produced a scoring dink and then OHS hit a return out of bounds to hand Lee the match.

Ducks dunk Red Raiders

Associated Press

EUGENE, Ore. — Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes had a decision to make.

Trailing Oregon by three points Saturday with 27 seconds to play, the Red Raiders faced fourth-and-10 at the Ducks' 25-yard line.

"I thought about a field goal for a second, but we came here to win a ballgame," Dykes said after Oregon's Paul Rodriquez batted away Robert Hall's pass inside the Oregon 5, preserving a 16-13 victory for the Ducks.

Tommy Thompson kicked three field goals barefoot to help Oregon (1-2) break its eight-game losing streak, which had been the longest losing streak in NCAA Division I.

Texas Tech (1-2) lost in its first road game. The Red Raiders missed a chance to avenge last year's 28-13 loss to Oregon at Lubbock, Texas.

Texas Tech forced Oregon to punt with 1:59 left to play. Ernest Jones sacked Hall twice, giving Texas Tech third-and-23 at its own 26-yard line.

Hall stepped up and hit Derrell Mitchell for 28 yards to the Oregon 46. But of his last seven passes, Hall hit just one, for 21 yards over the middle to running back Byron "Bam" Morris.

On the last pass over the middle, Rodriquez smothered Mitchell, who had to reach behind in an attempt to snare the ball.

"I think this team finally stood up and made some plays when they had to," said Oregon coach Rich Brooks.

Thompson kicked the 47-yard winning field goal with 12:32 left in the third quarter. Ronnie Harris set up the score with a 23-yard punt return that gave Oregon the ball on Texas Tech's 31-yard line.

Morris, who ran for 103 yards in a loss to Oklahoma and for 107 yards in a win over Wyoming, was held by Oregon to just 41 yards on 13 carries.

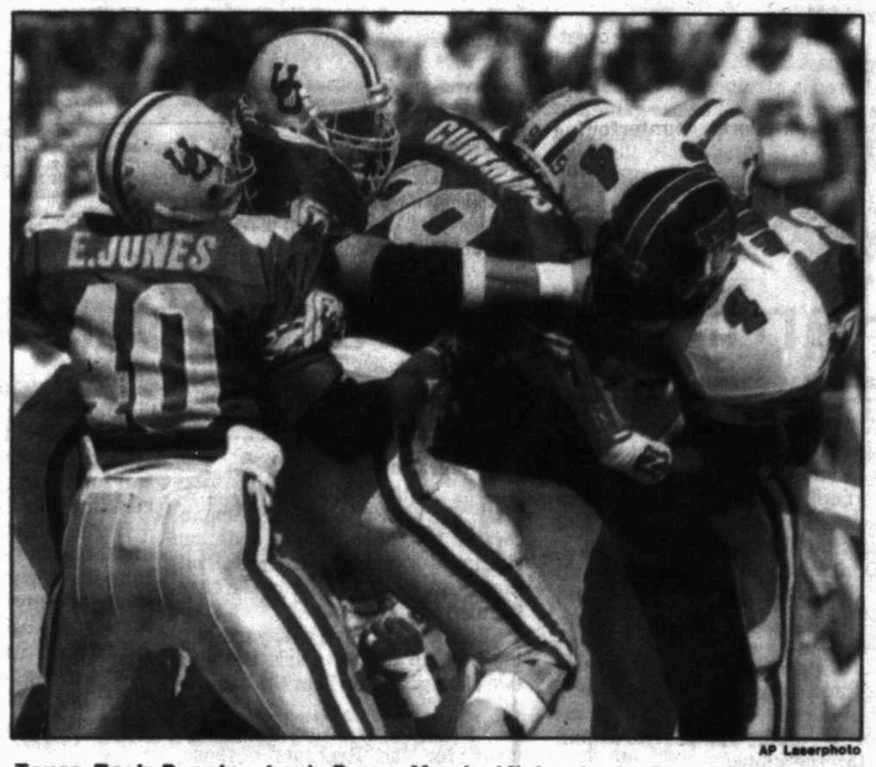

Hall passed for 255 yards, completing 16 of 37 passes, including five to Lloyd Hill for 132 yards and a touchdown.

But Hall lost 19 yards rushing and the Red Raiders ran for just 40 yards overall. Oregon bettered Texas Tech in total offense 375 yards to 295 yards.

"They took the run away from us and it makes it tough to win if you can't run," Dykes said.

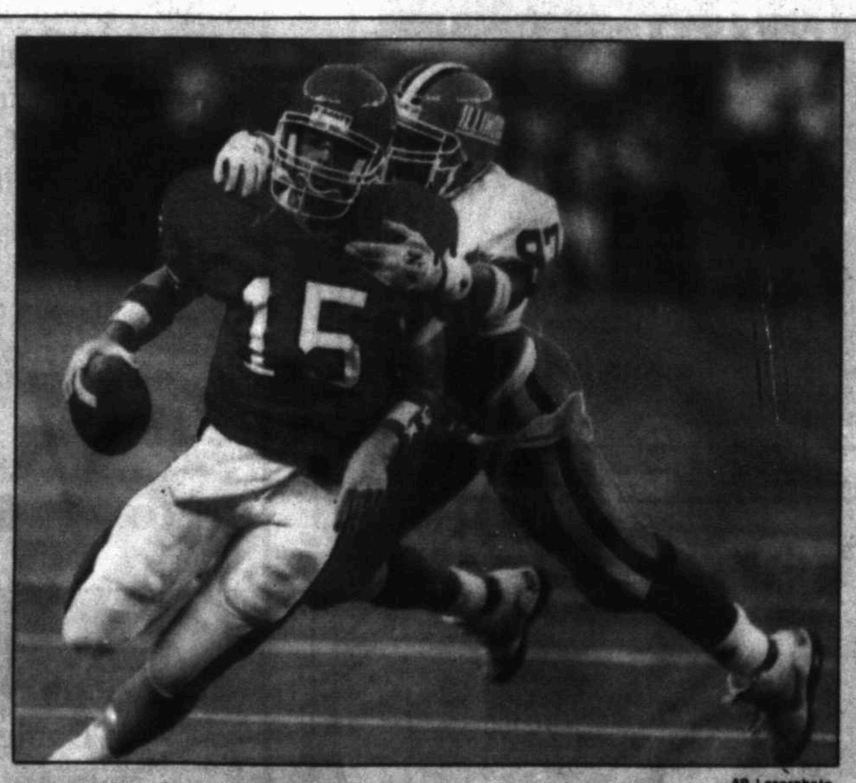

Both teams missed opportunities to score in the second half after playing to a 13-13 tie at halftime.

Houston quarterback Jimmy Klingler (15) drags Illinois linebacker Simeon Rice for an extra yard during the Cougars' 45-10 win on Saturday.

Cougar defense shines in 31-13 win over Illinois

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Houston didn't solve its quarterback dilemma, but the Cougar defense answered enough questions Saturday to satisfy coach John Jenkins.

Houston sacked Illinois' Jason Verduzco eight times while quarterbacks Donald Douglas and Jimmy Klingler ignited the offense and walk-on Trace Craft kicked three field goals, leading the Cougars to a 31-13 victory.

"I am really pleased with our defense," Jenkins said. "I really believe that our team will be more balanced this year in that we don't ahve to score a lot of points to win games."

The Cougars sacked Verduzco once in last year's game, but totaled 97 yards in losses before 25,931 fans in the Astrodome, avenging a 51-10 loss in 1991.

"We didn't say much about last year. We just wanted to play a physical game with a lot of emotion," Houston super back TiAndre Sanders said. "This is a big confidence builder for us."

The Cougars (1-1) snapped a three-game losing streak. Illinois is 2-1.

Klingler, younger brother of former Houston quarterback David Klingler, started the game in Jenkins' dual-quarterback system. He completed 12 of 18 in the first half and helped the Cougars to a 9-7 lead on Craft's kicks of 37, 42 and 38 yards.

Douglas came on and dazzled the Illini with his running ability and finished the game on an elecrtifying note. He completed a 70-yard touchdown pass to Ron Peters, who caught the ball running down the sidelines and circled the field in a victory lap after time expired.

"That wasn't a slap at Illinois although they did try to embarrass us last year," Douglas said. "I read their cornerback coming up so I checked

Volunteers knock off Florida; Miami rolls

Associated Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Heath Shuler ran for two touchdowns and passed for another Saturday to lead No. 14 Tennessee to a 31-14 upset of No. 4 Florida.

The Vols (3-0 overall, 2-0 Southeastern Conference) got scoring runs of 11 and 8 yards from Shuler, one of 15 yards from James "Little Man" Stewart, and a 66-yard touchdown pass from Shuler to Mose Phillips to end Florida's SEC winning streak at 11.

The Gators (1-1 overall and SEC) lost for only the second time in 16 league games since Steve Spurrier became the coach. The other defeat was a 45-3 thrashing at the hands of Tennessee, also in Knoxville.

Florida's famed Fun 'n Gun offense was effective mostly for shooting itself in the foot most of the day. The Gators were penalized 12 times, punted nine times, and managed what is for them an anemic 278 total yards of offense.

Florida was hampered by the loss of star runner Errict Rhett for most of the game with an injury. He carried 11 times for 34 yards, half of the Gators' total for the game.

No. 1 Miami 38, Florida A&M 0

MIAMI — Even with Gino Torretta and Kevin Williams sidelined before halftime, the top-ranked Miami Hurricanes eased past Florida A&M.

Torretta was hit while completing a pass late in the first half and suffered a strained left shoulder. He sat out the rest of the game but could have returned if needed, a team trainer said.

Williams, Miami's explosive receiver and kick returner, traded punches with Florida A&M tight end George Terrell on a second-quarter kickoff, and both were ejected.

RALEIGH, N.C. — Charlie Ward shook off a slow start and yet another interception to pass for three long touchdowns and Florida State continued its early-season roll through the ACC.

The Seminoles (3-0 overall and in the Atlantic Coast Conference) had 13 yards of offense with about six minutes left in the opening half as the Wolfpack (3-1, 1-1) dominated early and led 3-0.

But Ward, who threw his ninth interception of the season in the first quarter and missed on his first five passes, recovered in Florida State's final two drives of the half.

No. 6 Michigan 35, Oklahoma St. 3

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Todd Collins was no ordinary Elvis impersonator. Collins, filling in for injured Elvis Grbac, threw two touchdown passes and set a school record for completions as Michigan defeated Oklahoma State.

It was the first start for Collins, a redshirt sophomore, who completed 29 of 42 passes for 285 yards with one interception. His only previous action was mop-up duty in parts of six games last season when he completed 16 of 26 passes for 138 yards.

Bob Ptacek had held the Michigan completion record since 1958 when he completed 24 against Ohio State.

Collins threw touchdown passes of 4 and 44 yards to Derrick Alexander, Ricky Powers scored on runs of 23 and 5 yards, and Ed Davis had a 1-yard TD run for Michigan (1-0-1).

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Ohio State's aroused defense intercepted four passes and sacked Marvin Graves, the nation's passing-efficiency leader, six times as the Buckeyes beat Syracuse.

Graves, limited to 12 completions in 25 attempts for 158 yards, spent much of the game trying to avoid a pass rush led by 260-pound end Derrick Foster, who was credited with 2½ sacks. Tim Walton, Chico Nelson, Steve Tovar and Brent Johnson each had interceptions for Ohio State (3-0), which took charge early in stopping an eight-game winning streak by Syracuse (2-1).

Kirk Herbstreit, still not fully recovered from an ankle injury sustained last week, took Ohio State on three sustained first-half scoring drives, two covering 80 yards.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Derrick Lassic shook loose for 33 yards and a touchdown on Alabama's first play and Chris Anderson turned a shovel pass into a 22-yard score as the Crimson Tide beat Arkansas.

Alabama scored touchdowns on three of its first four possessions and led 21-0 with less than six minutes gone in the second quarter.

At that point, the Crimson Tide (3-0, 2-0 in the Southeastern Conference) had 214 yards and 11 first downs, while the Razorbacks (1-2, 1-1), had just 8 yards one first down — that coming on a penalty.

Alabama went 99 yards in 15 plays for its second touchdown and 89 yards in eight plays for its third touchdown and missed a field goal in between.

The crowd of 55,912 at War Memorial Stadium was the largest in-state crowd ever, topping the previous record of 55,838 set in 1979.

STATE COLLEGE — Richie Anderson scored twice as Penn State put four touchdowns on the board in the first 11 minutes to defeat outclassed Eastern Michigan.

Coach Joe Paterno switched from freshman quarterback Wally Richardson, who led the Lions to victory in the first two games, to John Sacca and the offense didn't miss a beat. Sacca missed the season opener with a severely bruised shoulder and was replaced by Richardson.

Sacca, whose brother, Tony, quarterbacked Penn State last year, completed 10 of 17 passes for 153 yards and his first two college touchdowns. O.J. McDuffie caught four passes, scored two touchdowns and returned five punts for 94 yards. Anderson gained 65 yards on 10 carries.

No. 2 Washington 29, No. 12 Nebraska 14

SEATTLE — Second-ranked Washington scored two touchdowns in 42 seconds just before halftime and the Huskies capitalized on three Nebraska turnovers to beat the No. 12 Cornhuskers.

The victory extended Washington's winning streak to 17 games and continued Nebraska's drought against top teams. The Cornhuskers have lost 10 consecutive games to teams ranked in the Top Five and eight straight to Top 10 teams.

Nebraska closed to 9-7 on a 73-yard touchdown run by Calvin Jones in the second quarter, but Washington struck back with two quick scores to break the game open. But Washington struck back with two quick scores to break open the first-ever night game at Husky Stadium.

After Napolean Kaufman scored on a 1-yard run with 1:29 left in the half, Washington got the ball right back on an interception by Walter Bailey at the Nebraska 47. Three plays later, Billy Joe Hobert threw a 29-yard touchdown pass to Joe Kralik to give the Huskies a 23-7 lead and control of the game.

Replays indicated that Kralik may have been out of bounds and may not have held onto the ball as he dove in the back of the end zone, but Nebraska didn't protest the call.

Nebraska (2-1) made it 23-14 on a 1-yard TD run by quarterback Mike Grant in the third quarter, but Travis Hanson kicked two field goals to put the game away for the Huskies (3-0).

Hardin-Simmons powers past Sul Ross

Associated Press

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Tom Enloe threw three touchdowns and Richard Krentz returned an interception 31 yards for a score in Hardin-Simmons' 38-7 rout of Sul Ross State Saturday afternoon.

Donnie Miller's 7-yard TD run put Sul Ross State (0-2) up 7-0, and the Lobos led 7-3 after one quarter.

But Enloe threw touchdowns of 4, 24 and 19 yards as Hardin-Simmons improved to 2-0. Enloe was 11-of-19 passing for 134 yards and no interceptions.

Howard Payne 34, McMurry 19

BROWNWOOD — Scott Lichner threw for four touchdowns and ran for another as 14th-ranked TIAA Howard Payne defeated McMurry University.

Lichner, a sophomore, tossed three touchdowns to wide receiver Keith Crawford, who tied a conference record with the three scoring catches. Crawford caught eight passes for 197 yards in the game.

The Yellow Jackets (3-1) never trailed in the ballgame, and led the Indians (1-2) 21-13 at halftime.

Lichner completed 23 of 37 passes for 352 yards. Kevin Hill, who entered the game as the fourth-leading receiver in the country, caught a 10-yard pass for a touchdown. He caught nine passes for 88 yards in the game.

E. Texas State 31, S. Arkansas 16

COMMERCE — Michael Hightower rushed for 151 yards and scored two touchdowns as East Texas State extended its home winning streak to 12 games.

Hightower, a junior, caught two passes for 64 yards for the Lions. His touchdowns came on runs of 44 and 30 yards. The Lions (2-1) dominated Southern Arkansas (0-4), gaining 464 yards to 227 for the Muleriders.

Southern Arkansas scored a touchdown in the first quarter on a 7-yard pass from Cory Scarborough to Val Morris, but missed the extra point.

The Lions answered with two touchdowns in the first quarter and a field goal in the second quarter, which put them ahead for good.

Texas Colleges

Sam Houston State 20, Angelo State 0

HUNTSVILLE — Dana Sherman carried six times for 95 yards, including a 26-yard touchdown, and the Sam Houston State defense stymied Angelo State.

Sherman also had a 45-yard run that set up one of Chris Batten's two field goals for Sam Houston (2-0).

The shutout was the first in two years for the Bearkats defense, their last being a 12-0 shutout of the Rams (2-1) in Huntsville in 1990.

Charles Harris scored on a 1-yard run in the second quarter after a 31-yard interception return by Alvin Haynes to make it 14-0 at the half.

Batten kicked field goals of 32 and 39 yards in the fourth quarter to increase the Bearkats' lead 20-0.

Tarleton State 31, Panhandle State (Okla.) 7

STEPHENVILLE — Jimmy Hering threw two touchdowns and ran for 123 yards as Tarleton State remained undefeated.

Hering's two touchdown passes of 36 and 20 yards, both to Steve Pinnell, helped the Texans to a 3-0 start for only the fifth time in 32 seasons.

Tarleton State took a 7-0 lead over the Aggies (0-2) after Steve Sikes blocked a punt and Kevin Benjamin returned it 42 yards. Lonzo Anderson made it 14-0 with a 1-yard run on the Texans' next possession.

The Aggies answered with a 1-yard touchdown run by Anthony Wells in the second quarter.

Stephen F. Austin 41, Jackson State 26

NACOGDOCHES — Quarterback Mike Goddard accounted for three touchdowns as Stephen F. Austin outlasted Jackson State.

The teams combined for 34 points in the game's first five minutes.

Wade Booker's 1-yard run put Stephen F. Austin (2-1) on top 6-0 with one minute gone.

Forty-seven seconds later, Rickey Jordan hit Isiah Bliss with a 14-yard scoring strike, and 12 seconds after that, Jackson State's Eric Austin intercepted a Goddard pass and ran it back 17 yards for a 14-6 lead.

New Mexico State 30, Texas-El Paso 24

EL PASO — Cornerback David Barela made two game-saving plays, including an interception with 51 seconds left, as New Mexico State edged Texas-El Paso for the Aggies' first 3-0 start since 1975.

Barela's pickoff of a Mike Perez pass killed the Miners' final drive at the NMSU 22, ending a last-chance UTEP drive that started at its own 3 with 4:50 remaining.

Sooners upset by Southern Cal, 20-10

Associated Press

NORMAN, Okla. — The Southern Cal team that showed up Saturday didn't look anything like a team that hadn't won in nearly a year.

The Trojans, winless since Oct. 12, 1991, overcame a 10-0 deficit in the final quarter to upset No. 13 Oklahoma 20-10 and finally give coach Larry Smith reason to smile.

"This was a big, big, big win for our football team," said Smith, who saw the Trojans (1-0-1) lose their final six games of last year and tie San Diego State two weeks ago.

"I told them after the tie that we were a better football team than we showed; all we needed was a big win. We got it today against a good Oklahoma football team."

They did it with big fourth-quarter plays by Curtis Conway on offense and Stephon Pace on defense. Conway caught a 51-yard touchdown pass early in the fourth quarter to bring the Trojans within 10-7, and Pace returned a fumble 19 yards for the go-ahead score later on.

"Nobody gave us any respect. We were 11-point underdogs," said Conway, whose nine catches for 115 yards were career highs. "They had the game won in the fourth quarter, so we had to show them we were a great football team."

The Sooners (2-1) had averaged 504 yards and 47½ points in the first two games, but Southern Cal's defense was too much. Oklahoma had only 56 yards rushing and 201 overall.

No. 15 UCLA 17, BYU 10

PROVO, Utah — Daron Washington ran for two touchdowns and Marvin Goodwin intercepted a Brigham Young pass in the UCLA end zone with 1:13 to play to preserve the victory.

Cougar reserve quarterback Steve Clements, who replaced starter John Walsh after he separated his shoulder early in the fourth quarter, had driven to a first down at the UCLA 10 yard line when Goodwin snuffed BYU's hopes of avoiding its second straight home loss.

Bruin quarterback Rob Walker, a redshirt freshman making his first start, finished hitting 18 of 26 passes for 198 yards as UCLA improved to 2-0 overall. BYU fell to 1-2.

STANFORD, Calif. — Northwestern's best offensive showing of the season still wasn't quite enough to keep up with Stanford.

Steve Stenstrom threw for two touchdowns and 297 yards, completing 21 of 29 throws, as Stanford earned a victory.

The Cardinal (2-1) also got two rushing touchdowns from Glyn Milburn and one from Ellery Roberts for their second win in as many weeks. Milburn finished with 111 yards on 19 carries.

The Wildcats (0-3), beaten 42-7 by Notre Dame and 49-0 by Boston College last week, had their biggest scoring outburst of the season.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Virginia's Bobby Goodman responded to Georgia Tech's trick-play score by directing three consecutive first-half touchdown drives that sent the Cavaliers over the 22 Yellow Jackets.

Terry Kirby ran for 135 yards and a touchdown and caught a 7-yard pass for another score, and Chris Slade became the Atlantic Coast Conference career sacks leader as the Cavaliers (3-0 overall, 2-0 ACC) defeated Georgia Tech for the first time since 1989.

No. 11 Colorado 21, Minnesota 20

MINNEAPOLIS — Freshman Koy Detmer tore off his redshirt and tore apart Minnesota's defense, playing like his Heisman Trophy-winning brother as Colorado rallied from a 17-point second-half deficit.

Colorado (3-0) hoped to keep Detmer on the bench all season, but injured starting quarterback Kordell Stewart didn't play, and second-stringer Duke Tobin had a horrendous first half.

Coach Bill McCartney turned to Ty Detmer's little brother, and he responded by completing 11 of 18 passes for 184 yards and two touchdowns.

Sampras feels the pain of his defeat at U.S. Open

By Marc Stein
N.Y. Times News Serivce

Tennis

LOS ANGELES — Every post-Open morning has begun the same for Pete Sampras, who rises from his bed in a state of moderate hurt.

It's not those blasted stomach cramps. A different pain has been slow to leave him.

"I look at this as a great chance I let slip by," Sampras said Friday, his fifth day of reflection on a four-set loss to Stefan Edberg in the U.S. Open singles final.

"A great opportunity basically just slipped through my hands. You don't appreciate how important the title is until it's over. I think about it even today, and I get very upset about losing."

Sampras didn't show any anger when he met with reporters after falling to Edberg. He also refused to blame the dehydration-induced cramps from the night before — Sampras could barely walk at the end of his semifinal victory over Jim Courier — for sapping his energy.

He didn't say a lot of things in the minutes immediately following the near-miss.

"I think a good time to talk to me is right now," said Sampras, who did make it clear last Sunday that a title in 1992 would have meant more to him than the Open crown he won in 1990 as a 19-year-old.

"It still hurts to lose. It hurts even more when you're not playing that well or feeling that well."

Sadly for Sampras, there's no time to locate a tonic. He leaves today for Minnesota, land of lakes and Davis Cup.

There — though he's likely to hear some anti-Edberg sentiment during the United States' semifinal tie against Sweden — Sampras' stomach again will be tested.

He's scheduled to play doubles with John McEnroe, and as almost every one of Mac's partners since Peter Fleming has learned, the pressure is always on the guy standing next to the fiery left-hander.

"Hopefully, we'll kind of mix like he and Fleming did," Sampras said. "I don't know how I'm going to feel.

"Maybe I'll feel a little uncomfortable playing with him. I feel comfortable off the court around him. Hopefully, I'll be nice and relaxed like I'm playing with Jim (Courier)."

After the Sweden match, Sampras, who grew up in Palos Verdes before moving to Florida, arrives in Southern California for a few days of visiting and an Oct. 1 exhibition against Michael Chang at UC Irvine's Bren Center.

Mac attack: The chief cheerleader for the Americans follows no party line. He doesn't hand out empty praise.

McEnroe gives the Swedes little chance of competing with the Americans on the Target Center's indoor clay, with he and Sampras in doubles after Courier and Andre Agassi open in singles matches.

The Swedes, who are relying on Edberg to win both of his singles matches and the deciding doubles point with longtime partner Anders Jarryd, haven't decided on a No. 2 man in singles. An ankle injury suffered by Magnus Gustafsson leaves that role to either Christian Bergstrom of French Open quarterfinalist Nicklas Kulti, not that it matters to McEnroe.

In Mac's estimation, the United States would beat Team Edberg in "95 out of 100 chances."

"I see a very slim chance that we're going to lose to them," McEnroe said. "I don't see it on clay, the way Jim and Andre are playing."

Having long clamored for a break in policy and a chance to play with Sampras, McEnroe is especially primed for the weekend. Usually, U.S. captain Tom Gorman picks an established team (like Ken Flach-Robert Seguso) or, when McEnroe is playing, a doubles specialist (such as Rick Leach) to join him.

If form holds, McEnroe-Sampras would take the court with a chance to clinch a spot in the Dec. 4-6 final, which will be held in Ft. Worth, Tex., should the Americans win. That scenario is based on Courier or Agassi — regardless of who is drawn to play Edberg first — sweeping the first day.

"I think the frame of mind that we're in is a lot of overconfidence," McEnroe admits. "It's just got to be tempered by Edberg winning the U.S. Open."

More Mac: As for a forecast on his personal situation, McEnroe offered another indication that his time as a full-bore singles player has passed.

Speaking before his Forum exhibition Friday against Agassi, McEnroe said: "I don't want the top players to play a little worse for me to win. I want the top players to play their best and for me to play my best and still come out on top.

"There's always pluses about doing something else. ... It's a great job. It's probably the best job in the world. But at the same time, you can't stay a child forever."

Ground bound: It would be a mistake to say with no-turning-back conviction that Edberg can't lead the Swedes to a victory. After his Open performance — he recovered from a fifth-set deficit to win three straight matches, then beat Sampras — Edberg seems capable of anything.

The thing you probably won't see more of from Edberg is that net-jumping he did in New York. Twice after Open victories, in the quarterfinals against Ivan Lendl and in the final, Edberg celebrated match point by hurdling the net.

"No, I've got to find something else," Edberg said.

MIDLAND CHAMBER NEWS

Economist to address Chamber annual meeting

Perryman

Dr. Ray Perryman will be the keynote speaker for the 1992 Midland Chamber of Commerce Annual Meeting and Luncheon, scheduled for 11:30 a.m. Tuesday, October 6, at Midland Center.

Perryman is president of Perryman Consultants, a large national economic research organization. He authors the Texas Economic Forecast and The Perryman Report, newsletters offering forecasts and commentary on state, national and international economic activity. He is also the University Professor and Economist-in-Residence at Baylor University.

Perryman will discuss economic prospects and opportunities for the Midland-Odessa area during his presentation.

Tickets are $11 in advance and $12 at the door. Corporate tables are also available. Seating will be limited. Tickets may be purchased in advance at the Chamber office, 109 N. Main.

Midland, Odessa work together on I-27 project

Midland and Odessa are working together to route an extension of Interstate 27 between the two cities.

The formation of the Midland Odessa Transportation Alliance was announced in August by representatives of both Chambers of Commerce, the cities of Midland and Odessa and Ector and Midland Counties. The Alliance will focus efforts on the extension of I-27 from Lubbock south to Interstate 20. The group is monitoring the routing process conducted by the Texas Department of Transportation (TDOT). TDOT recently received $2.9 million in planning funds from the federal government for the proposed project.

The Midland Chamber and Odessa Chamber support a route coming in at FM 1788 near Midland International Airport. This route would serve about 235,000 people and connect multiple transportation modes - air and highway.

Charles Perry will chair the Alliance. Also serving are Midland Chamber volunteer Kyle Womack, Odessa Chamber volunteer Drew Crutcher, Midland Mayor J.D. Faircloth, Odessa City Manager Jerry McGuire, Ector County Fiscal Services Director Tom Pace and Midland County Commissioner Guy McCrary.

Chamber active in California marketing

Chamber Economic Development Manager Tom Stinson recently visited for three days with California manufacturers who have expressed interest in Midland. The prospect companies' interest is the result of an intensive direct mail campaign being conducted by the Chamber.

For more information about the Chamber, please call Bruce Partain, 683-3381

Duke downs Rice in lightning affair

Associated Press

DURHAM, N.C. — Steve Prince threw a touchdown pass and Robert Baldwin ran for another score as Duke endured a one-hour delay because of lightning and knocked off Rice 17-12 Saturday night.

The contest was halted just three minutes into action because of a strong thunderstorm. Officials nearly delayed the 7 p.m. kickoff to allow the storm to pass, but when conditions worsened, referees herded both teams into a tunnel at the north end of Wallace Wade Stadium.

Once the skies cleared, the teams struggled to regenerate their offense and finished the first half scoreless. The Blue Devils (1-2) emerged from the doldrums and scored on their first possession of the second half on Prince's 4-yard scoring pass to Stanley Dorsey with 12:03 left in the third period.

The Owls (0-2) retaliated on the ensuing kickoff, marching 65 yards and getting to within 7-6 on Josh LaRocca's 1-yard dive with 9:27 remaining. Scott Youmans blocked Darrell Richardson's point-after kick.

Randy Gardner added a 35-yard field goal at 5:02, and the Blue Devils capped a 59-yard march on Baldwin's 3-yard run with 13:14 left to play.

Reserve quarterback Bert Emanuel made it close for Rice on a 57-yard dash for a touchdown with 7:21 to play, but he missed on a two-point conversion run.

Rice got two more chances at victory. A fumble after a 19-yard catch by Stanley Dorsey was recovered by Dana Hogan, but the Owls stalled at the Duke 37. The Owls got the ball in the final minute and got to Duke's 41, but Manuel's desperation pass toward the end zone was batted away as time ran out.

Duke tailback Randy Cuthbert rushed 29 times for 149 yards, giving him 2,047 for his career and fourth place on Duke's all-time list.

Once the first half got going, Duke held the edge offensively and twice marched into Rice territory. Both times, it came up empty. The Blue Devils reached the Owl 33, but Gardner's 50-yard field goal attempt was short.

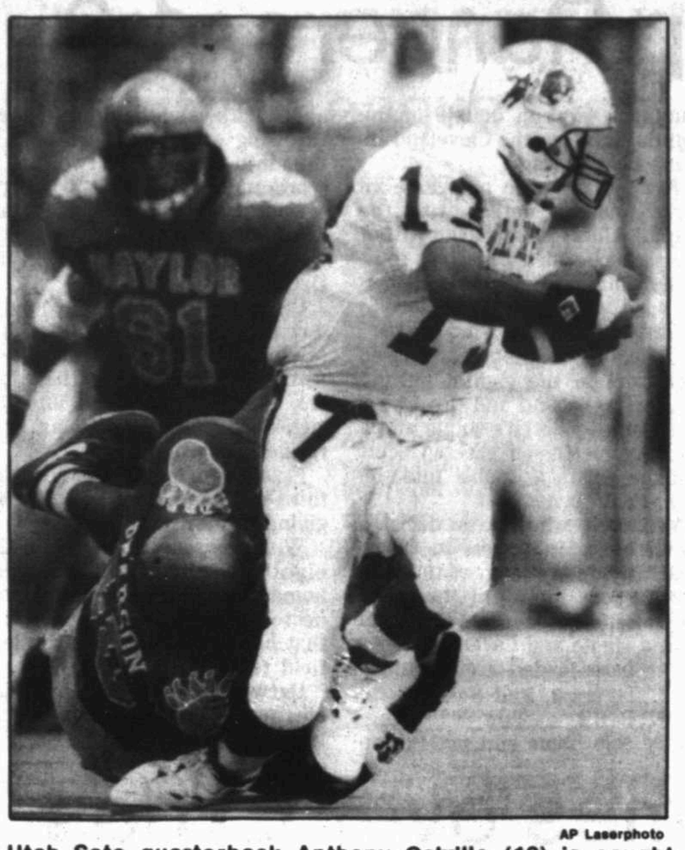

The Blue Devils went from their own 6 to the Rice 15 on their final possession of the first half.

Utah Sate quarterback Anthony Calvillo (13) is caught behind the line by Baylor defender Matthew Pearson for a loss during the Bears' big win Saturday afternoon.

Baylor rolls over Utah St., 45-10

Associated Press

WACO — Baylor responded to a challenge Saturday from coach Grant Teaff to get back on the winning trail and save his last season as coach.

Teaff told the Bears: "This is an absolute must win. It's the most important game of the year."

J.J. Joe answered with three touchdown passes to Melvin Bonner and Keith Caldwell returned an interception 42 yards for a score as the Bears rolled over the Utah State Aggies 45-10 in a meeting of winless teams.

"It was a tremendous effort and I told the players that this is what we needed going into conference play against Texas Tech next week," Teaff said. "We're improving, getting better every week. We'll have to if we have a chance against those ol' Red Raiders."

Baylor of the Southwest Conference is 1-2 while the Aggies of the Big West Conference dropped to 0-3. In the only previous meeting between the two schools, Baylor defeated Utah State 24-9 in the 1961 Gotham Bowl.

Bonner tied a school record with his three TD receptions. Lawrence Elkins had three touchdown catches in 1963 against Texas A&M for the Bears.

"It's great to have a part of the record," Bonner said. "J.J. did a great job of finding me all day. I was lucky on one of them because the defensive back tipped the ball."

With the field thermometer registering 104 degrees, the Bears quickly overwhelmed the western visitors.

Joe hit Bonner with touchdown passes of 20, 37, and 51 yards as the Aggies got caught in man-for-man coverage and couldn't stay up with the Bears speedy wide receiver.

Utah State coach Charlie Weatherbie said the Joe-Bonner combination was too much for the Aggies.

"We had a tough time covering Bonner and Joe made some perfect throws," Weatherbie said. "Baylor scored 38 points against Colorado last week so we knew they could move the ball. We just couldn't stop them."

Joe took Baylor on an 84-yard scoring drive the Bears' first possession to set the tone for the day. Bonner's first scoring reception gave the Bears a quick 7-0 lead.

After a 29-yard field goal by Trey Weir, Caldwell picked off a Greg Angelovic pass and returned it 42 yards for a touchdown.

An interception by Shawn Cravens set up another Joe touchdown pass, 37 yards to Bonner.

Robert Strait scored on a 2-yard run as Baylor built a 31-0 halftime lead before 28,737 fans.

TECH: Hall-to-Hill combo nets 132 yards, TD

(From 1B)

Thompson had a 37-yard field goal attempt blocked in the fourth quarter, and Oregon's Danny O'Neil was intercepted by Tracy Saul with 6:20 left.

But Texas Tech failed to take advantage after a punt bounced off Oregon's Rich Ruhl, giving the Red Raiders a second wind near midfield after their first drive of the second half sputtered.

With 1:59 left, the Raiders had Thompson pinned on a punt. But he slipped away, getting off a 26-yarder from his own 36-yard line that gave the defense breathing room.

O'Neil completed 14 of 23 passes for 153 yards after passing for a career-high 312 yards in the opener against Hawaii and 125 yards against Stanford.

Sean Burwell led all rushers with 124 yards on 22 carries. Ricky Whittle gained 85 yards in 18 attempts as the Ducks racked up 222 yards on the ground.

"I've believed we could run the football the first two games," Brooks said. "We chose in the first two games to throw it a little bit more. Today we felt it important that we tried to keep Texas Tech's offense off the field."

Burwell moved into seventh place on Oregon's all-time rushing list with 1,711 yards. Saul, Texas Tech's all-time interception leader, now has 22, placing him in a tie for seventh on the NCAA career list.

Oregon took a 3-0 lead with 11:19 left in the first quarter on Thompson's 20-yard field goal.

Jon Davis' second field goal on the first play of the second quarter gave Texas Tech a 6-3 lead.

Oregon regained the lead on a 5-yard run by Burwell with 5:23 left in the first half.

Hall responded on the next play, hitting Hill across the middle with a 65-yard pass to make it 13-10.

Oregon turned the ball over on downs, but got the ball back when Alex Molden intercepted Hall's pass at the Oregon 13-yard line and returned it 19 yards.

But O'Neil stumbled taking the snap and Oregon had to settle for a field goal with 1 second left in the half.

A&M: Granger tosses two second-half TDs behind 10-3 to Missouri and 6-3 to Tulsa last week before winning 19-9.

Texas A&M also benefited from two of Missouri's three turnovers in the second half.

"I'd say we needed some good things to happen," Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum said. "In the first half, we had a lot of things happen to us that were all bad."

Missouri, a heavy underdog, led 10-0 in the first quarter. The Aggies (4-0) didn't take the lead until Granger's 6-yard touchdown pass to Hill with 1:22 to go in the third quarter made it 17-13. Texas A&M has won its first four games for the first time since 1978.

It was the seventh straight loss for Missouri (0-2) and its second loss in its last seven home openers.

Coach Bob Stull wasn't satisfied with just giving Texas A&M a good game.

"We're not happy with losing," Stull said. "We had every opportunity to win. We just made too many mistakes."

Stull said a missed field goal attempt from 35 yards by Jeff Jacke at the beginning of the fourth quarter with Missouri trailing 17-13, was the end of Missouri's upset bid.

"Once we missed the field goal, they jammed it down our throat," Stull said.

Hill ran for 104 yards on 20 carries, including a 1-yard scoring run with 7:47 remaining in the fourth quarter. He was held to 30 yards on eight carries in the first half.

Terry Venetoulias wrapped up the scoring with a 25-yard field goal with 1:47 to play.

Missouri used a quarterback tandem for the second straight game, and both Phil Johnson and Handy had some success. Johnson directed the team to one touchdown before leaving with a sprained right index finger, and Jacke had two field goals on drives led by Handy.

Johnson, who started all of last season, was injured when his hand struck Marcus Buckley's helmet on a pass. He was taken to a hospital for X-rays.

Missouri's first quarter was a complete change from its opening game against Illinois, when it fell behind 21-0. Against Texas A&M, which didn't allow a touchdown last week against Tulsa, the Tigers had 100 yards rushing in the first quarter to move ahead 10-0.

Ryan Lyons scored on a 1-yard run to cap a 13-play, 80-yard drive as Missouri took the lead with 5:36 to go.

Handy drove the Tigers 47 yards on his first series, setting up Jacke's 21-yard field goal that made it 10-0 with 13:13 left in the second quarter.

The only turnover of the first half, an interception by Aaron Glenn of Johnson, helped Texas A&M get on the scoreboard. Glenn's third interception of the season gave the Aggies the ball at the Missouri 47. Hill then dragged several would-be tacklers on a 21-yard gain that set up a 38-yard field goal by Venetoulias with 2:49 to go in the half.

Jacke made his second field goal of the game, also from 21 yards, to put Missouri back ahead 13-10 with 4:07 left in the third quarter. An interference call on Texas A&M on a third-down pass intended for Victor Bailey gave Missouri a first down at the A&M 18 and Joe Freeman had a 9-yard run to the Texas A&M 7 before the drive stalled.

COUGARS: Houston halts skid

(From 1B)

Houston's defense converted Verduzco's fumble into a touchdown on the first play of the fourth quarter and sacked him eight times for 97 yards, including a 10-yard loss for a safety with 1:09 to play.

Verduzco was sacked for an 11-yard loss by Kevin LaBay and fumbled into the end zone where Stephen Dixon recovered for a touchdown with 14:53 left in the game.

Houston committed five turnovers, but Illinois was unable to capitalize until Klingler's fumble at the Cougars 27 set up a 1-yard touchdown run by Darren Boyer with 4:04 left in the game.

Despite their rally, Illinois coach Lou Tepper said his team's performance in the second half wasn't good enough.

"I was sorely disappointed in the second half that we didn't score more," Tepper said. "Our defense played well in terms of getting us the ball and forcing errors, but we just lacked the discipline on both sides of the ball."

The Cougars had to overcome their own miscues in the first half.

Houston's Lawrence McPherson fumbled away the opening kickoff to Illinois' Mike Russell at the 24. John Brown spoiled the scoring chance by blocking Chris Richardson's 35-yard field goal try.

Houston drove to the Illinois 19 after the block, setting up Craft's 37-yarder.

The Illini took a 7-3 lead on a 1-yard run by Wagner Lester set up by Verduzco's pass to Boyer on the preceding play.

Klingler completed 15 of 21 passes for 133 yards and was sacked five times. Douglas had 66 yards on nine rushes and completed 10 of 13 passes for 129 yards.

Verduzco completed 10 of 23 passes for 136 yards before being replaced late in the game by senior Jeff Kinney.

Tepper returned to the team earlier this week following the death of his mother in Florida.

SMU stings New Mexico on Shepard's 156-yards

Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE — Kevin Shepard ran for 156 yards, and defensive end Chad Patton blocked a punt that set up a second quarter touchdown in SMU's 20-13 win Saturday over New Mexico.

It was the second straight victory for the Mustangs (2-1) and equals the most wins in a season for SMU since it came off the NCAA-imposed two-year death penalty in 1989. SMU had back-to-back 1-10 seasons the past two years.

New Mexico (1-2) got a pair of 31-yard field goals from David Margolis and a fourth quarter 43-yard touchdown pass from Stoney Case to Joey Kowalczyk with 5:06 left in the game.

Patton blocked a punt by New Mexico's Mike Nesbitt late in the first quarter, and the Mustangs recovered at Lobo 31. That set up a 16-yard touchdown pass from Dan Freiburger to Jason Wolf with 14:49 left in the second quarter.

Patton also sacked Case three times and led a Mustang defense that pressured Case all night and allowed him to complete just 17 of 44 passes.

Freiburger also beat New Mexico defensive back Eric Jack with a 53-yard touchdown pass to Brian Berry in the third quarter and killed New Mexico's final bid for the win by completing a pair of clock-killing, third-down passes to wide receiver Corey Beard in the final three minutes.

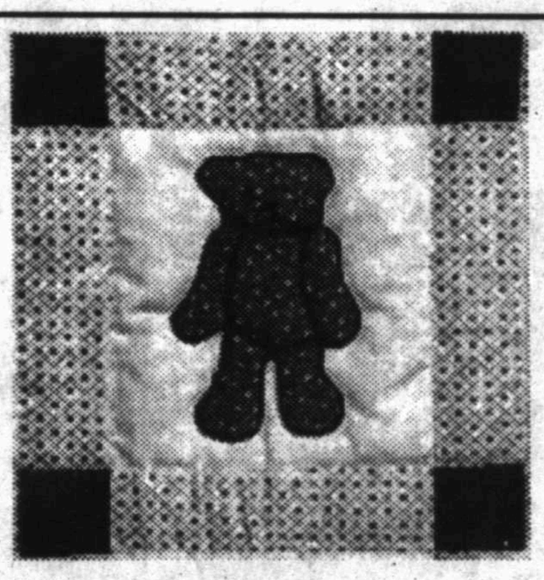

Russell Anderson added field goals of 32 and 22 yards for the Mustangs, who were playing on a natural grass field for the first time in three years.

Cone wins pitchers' duel as 'Jays nip Rangers, 1-0

Associated Press

TORONTO — David Cone combined with a pair of relievers on a four-hitter and the Toronto Blue Jays blanked Texas for the second straight game, beating the Rangers 1-0 Saturday.

A day after they trounced Texas 13-0, the Blue Jays managed only Roberto Alomar's RBI groundout in the sixth inning. But that was enough for Toronto to win for the 15th time in 20 games and hold its lead in the AL East.

Cone (3-2) gave up four hits in seven innings. He struck out five and walked three. Duane Ward and Tom Henke each followed with a hitless inning, with Henke getting his 30th save.

Scott Chiamparino (0-3) did not allow a hit until Dave Winfield singled to start the fifth. Chiamparino allowed one run on four hits in seven innings, striking out six and walking one.

American

Alfredo Griffin blooped a one-out double in the Toronto sixth and Devon White followed with a single. White made a wide turn around first and got caught in a rundown, and when Griffin took a few quick step towards the plate, second baseman Jeff Frye threw home. Griffin dove back into third ahead of catcher Ivan Rodriguez's throw, allowing White to trot safely into second.

Alomar then hit a slow bouncer to second, scoring Griffin.

Brewers 4, Orioles 1

MILWAUKEE — Chris Bosio won his team-record ninth straight game and the Milwaukee Brewers moved past Baltimore into second place in the AL East.

The Brewers, with 14 games remaining, trail first-place Toronto by five games. The Blue Jays beat Texas 1-0 Saturday.

The loss marked the first time since April 28 the Orioles have not been in either first or second place. At 5½ games back, they are farther behind the Blue Jays than they have been all season.

Bosio (15-5), who has not lost since July 9 in a span of 13 starts, broke the club record that rookie Cal Eldred had tied Friday night with his eighth straight victory. Pete Vuckovich, Moose Haas and Mike Caldwell also won eight straight with the Brewers.

Bosio tied a career high for victories. He gave up six hits in seven innings with one walk and two strikeouts. Darren Holmes pitched the ninth for his fourth save.

Royals 7, Yankees 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — George Brett doubled and tripled to raise his career hits total to 2,987 as Kansas City handed the Yankees to their sixth straight loss.

Brett tied Hall of Famer Sam Rice for 18th place on the career list. He has 15 games to join Milwaukee's Robin Yount as the second player to reach 3,000 hits this season.

Brian McRae singled, doubled and added a two-run triple in the eighth.

Dennis Rasmussen, who beat New York last week for his first AL victory since 1987, made it two straight over his former teammates. Rasmussen (2-0), who had no record and a 10.80 ERA in three appearances with the Chicago Cubs earlier this year, gave up six hits in 7 2-3 innings, struck out three and walked two. Jeff Montgomery got three outs for his 36th save in 41 chances.

Indians 5, White Sox 4

CLEVELAND — Reggie Jefferson, recalled from the minors two days earlier, had three hits, including a two-run double in the eighth inning, as the Cleveland Indians beat Chicago.

The Indians, who overcame an early four-run deficit with the help of Albert Belle's 100th RBI of the season, ended Chicago's four-game winning streak. They denied Jack McDowell (20-8) in his second attempt at his 21st win.

Cleveland, trailing 4-3, chased McDowell in the eighth, putting runners at second and third on a walk, Mark Whiten's single and a sacrifice. Jefferson greeted Scott Radinsky with a double into the right-field corner.

McDowell, who got no decision in an extra-inning loss to Cleveland last Sunday, blanked the Indians on four hits until the sixth, when Belle drove in his 100th run with a single and Carlos Martinez had a bases-loaded groundout.

Tigers 3, Red Sox 2

DETROIT — Tim Naehring, whose solo home run put Boston ahead in the eighth inning, made a throwing error with two outs in the ninth that enabled two runs to score and gave Detroit a victory.

Scott Livingstone doubled and pinch hitter Dave Bergman drew a walk from Greg Harris (3-9) in the Detroit ninth.

Chad Kreuter hit a grounder down the third base line that Naehring charged, but his high throw skipped off first baseman Mo Vaughn's glove and into the right-field bullpen, allowing both runners to score.

Frank Tanana (13-9) pitched his third complete game of the year, giving up four hits.

With the score tied at 1 in the eighth, Naehring hit his third home run of the season. He connected with one out for a drive that barely made it over the left-field fence.

Darwin gave up just three singles and an unearned run in eight innings.

Pirates extend NL East lead to five games over Expos

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Doug Drabek continued his strong second half, winning his fourth straight start Saturday night and leading the the Pittsburgh Pirates over the Philadelphia Phillies 3-0.

Barry Bonds went 3 for 3 for the Pirates, who increased their NL East lead to five games over the second-place Montreal Expos. Pittsburgh, trying to become the first team since Philadelphia in 1976-78 to win three straight NL East championships, haswon five of six, 15 of 20 and is 34-13 since July 30.

Drabek (14-10) improved to 7-3 over the second half and is 60-29 after the All-Star break in his career. He scattered eight hits in his ninth complete game, matched a career high with 11 strikeouts and walked one. Drabek is 13-5 against the Phillies, including 3-1 this season, and has won five straight at home.

National

Mets 7, Expos 5

NEW YORK (AP) — Chico Walker singled with the bases loaded to snap an eighth-inning tie and dropping the Expos five games behind Pittsburgh in the NL East.

Pinch-hitter Kevin Bass led off the eighth with a triple off Jeff Fassero (7-6). The Mets then loaded the bases on Mel Rojas' walk to pinch-hitter Darryl Boston and Mackey Sasser's fielder's choice grounder.

Walker then broke the 3-3 tie with a single to right, scoring pinch-runner Pat Howell. Eddie Murray followed with an RBI single, making him 10 for 14 with the bases loaded this season.

Astros 3, Braves 2

ATLANTA — Ernest Riles led off the 12th inning with his first home run of the season, leading Houston to its their fifth straight victory.

Atlanta has lost three straight, and its NL West lead over second-place Cincinnati was cut to 7½ games.

Doug Jones (10-8) pitched three scoreless innings. The game ended when left fielder Luis Gonzalez threw out pinch-runner Brian Hunter at home plate as Hunter attempted to score on Mark Lemke's single.

Riles, who had three hits, homered off Marvin Freeman (6-5) as the Astros won for the 15th time in 22 extra-inning games and matched their longest winning streak of the season. His last home run was on Sept. 24, 1991, for Oakland against Jeff Montgomery of Kansas City.

Reds 5, Padres 2

CINCINNATI — Bobby Ayala pitched seven shutout innings to get his first Major League victory and Barry Larkin drove in three runs, leading the Reds over San Diego.

Ayala (1-1) scattered eight hits and struck out six in seven-plus innings in his third major league start. He left in the eighth after giving up a walk and a double to Tony Fernandez, and the Padres scored twice off reliever Steve Foster on Jim Vatcher's groundout and Fred McGriff's double.

Rob Dibble pitched the ninth for his 22nd save.

Larkin had a sacrifice fly and a two-run homer off Frank Seminara (8-4) to raise his RBI total to a career-high 70. Joe Oliver doubled home a run, and Cincinnati scored its fifth when Larkin hit into a double play.

Giants 3, Dodgers 0

SAN FRANCISCO — Jeff Brantley and Bill Swift switched roles and stopped Los Angeles on five hits.

Brantley (5-7), making his second start of the season and the fourth of his major league career, went six innings. He gave up four hits, struck out four and walked one.

Brantley has made both of his starts this year against the Dodgers. He has allowed one run in 10 innings.

Swift, moved to the bullpen because of shoulder problems, pitched three innings for his first save of the season. He lowered his league-leading ERA from 2.12 to 2.08.

Swift pitched in 71 games last year for Seattle, all in relief. He has made four relief appearances this season, giving up one run in 11 innings.

Cubs 6, Cardinals 5
Cardinals 11, Cubs 10

CHICAGO — Stan Royer singled home the go-ahead run in the 10th inning as the St. Louis Cardinals beat Chicago for a doubleheader split.

Ryne Sandberg went 5 for 5 in the doubleheader with four walks and three RBIs. Sandberg, who went 3 for 4 Friday, had three hits as the Cubs won the opener 6-5 for their fourth consecutive victory. He tied the second-game with a two-run homer in the ninth off Lee Smith (4-7), who blew a save for the eighth time in 47 chances.

Ray Lankford singled off Paul Assenmacher (4-3) in the 10th, Felix Jose reached on an error by third baseman Luis Salazer, Andres Galarraga grounded into a double play and Royer singled to left.

Philippine newspapers urge protest after Little League team loses crown

Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — Manila newspapers today denounced the decision to strip a Philippine Little League team of the world series title as American racism and urged the government to protest the move.

The action by Little League Baseball International opened old wounds in perenially sensitive U.S.-Philippine relations, which date back to the American takeover of the islands in 1898.

"It's like the Vietnam War all over again," wrote the daily Malaya. "The Americans couldn't prevail over the ... North Vietnamese and Viet Cong on the battlefield ... but proclaimed themselves ... press release winners."

On Thursday, Little League officials voided the title won by a team from the southern Philippine city of Zamboanga and gave it to Long Beach, Calif.

Zamboanga beat Long Beach 15-4 last month in the final at Williamsport, Pa., but officials acknowledged later that only six of 14 players were from Zamboanga. Others came from teams more than 500 miles away.

District administrator Armando Andaya said he authorized the replacements for "justifiable reasons," but did not elaborate.

Most Philippine newspapers accepted Andaya's explanation that his move was made according to the rules, although Little League officials claimed it was not.

"U.S. officials ... stripped our little boys of the title without asking for our side of the controversy," wrote the Philippine Daily Globe in a front page editorial.

■ More Sports/ 10B

Max Soliven, publisher of The Philippine Star, urged President Fidel Ramos to issue a strong statement in support of the Philippine Little League program.

The nationalistic tone of media reaction reflects the mixed feelings which Filipinos hold for Americans. Any issue which places Americans and Filipinos on opposite sides revives grievances nearly a century old.

"It's pathetic the way we continue to be treated abroad for the simple reason that we are too patient and polite," Soliven wrote in his newspaper. "In the case of the Little League doublecross, let's raise a howl."

Irvan needs backup car for Peak 500

Associated Press

NASCAR

DOVER, Del. — Ernie Irvan crashed his primary car in practice for today's Peak 500 and will have to start a backup from the rear of the field. That means Irvan's got 'em right where he wants 'em.

"When you put us behind the eight ball, we seem to do better," said Irvan, who crashed Saturday and had to switch to his other Chevrolet Lumina.

"We have a lot to do to get the backup ready, so we're just going to take our time and do it right. The fuel pump broke when we wrecked, so we won't race the motor that was in the car I wrecked."

Irvan qualified 19th in the 36-car lineup but will drop to the back of the field before taking the green flag for the 500-lap event on the one-mile Dover Downs International Speedway oval.

Team owner Larry McClure said, "Most good teams perform well under pressure and we're under pressure now. ... Ernie does perform well when his back's against the wall.

"Look at him at Darlington (Sept. 6)," McClure said. "We had a broken transmission and he was running like crazy. He was on a mission. Look at Sears Point (June 7). He got a lap down early and won the race. That's the way he is. ... He knows he can still win this race.

"Starting at the rear of the field here won't be any tougher than anywhere else. The track is wide enough to pass if your car is handling good."

McClure also pointed out that Alan Kulwicki won the pole for Sunday's race in a backup car after crashing on Friday, and Harry Gant won the May race here after crashing in practice.

"Maybe that's what it takes to win here," McClure said. "Maybe we can win in a backup car, too."

After finishing 28th, 25th (at Darlington) and 11th in his last three starts, and slipping to 11th in the Winston Cup points, Irvan needs a good finish.

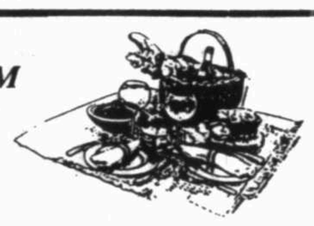

"We want to get back into the top 10," said Irvan, who has won a career-high three races this season. "We're just trying to win races, but you can't afford to make bad mistakes like I did today. It sets everything behind, but we've got plenty of good race cars, so we're not going to roll over and play dead."

Kulwicki and Mark Martin will start a pair of Fords from the front row, with the Pontiac of Rusty Wallace, the winner last Saturday night at Richmond, Va., and the Oldsmobile of Terry Labonte right behind.

Series point leader Bill Elliott starts 13th, with Gant, who has won two straight Winston Cup events at Dover, 22nd, and points runner-up Davey Allison in nearly the same position as Irvan, starting 29th after struggling through both rounds of qualifying.

Elliott, the 1988 Winston Cup champion, leads Allison by 134 points, with Kulwicki 30 points behind in third going into the 23rd of 29 events.

Lindros scores in NHL debut

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Eric Lindros scored a goal and had an assist in his NHL debut as the Philadelphia Flyers beat the Quebec Nordiques 4-3 in an exhibition opener Saturday.

The 19-year-old Lindros — who refused to sign last year after being drafted by Quebec, forcing a trade — scored his first goal with the Flyers with 1:43 left in the second period.

Rod Brind'Amour tied it 57 seconds later, redirecting a shot by Gord Hynes.

Lindros then fed Recchi 8:12 into the final period with a pass from the left circle for the winning goal.

Lindros — for whom the Flyers gave up five players, a top draft pick, $15 million and future considerations — showed Flyers fans his aggressiveness with a physical first period.

None of the ex-Flyers in the deal played for Quebec.

Lindros came in after a Quebec goal by Owen Nolan 38 seconds into the game, and 23 seconds later he was in the penalty box for two minutes for kneeing Tim Hunter.

When he returned, he drew another penalty for roughing when he put down Valeri Kamensky in the corner as they battled for a loose puck.

With Quebec leading 2-0 on a goal by Bill Lindsay, the Flyers' Dan Kordic showed Lindros that his teammates will look out for him when he fought Chris Simon in retaliation for a hit on Lindros.

Lindros then brought the fans — many of whom wore $88 jerseys with Lindros' name and number, 88 — to their feet with a near score. Lindros shook off Kamensky at center ice, broke around two defenders with the puck but overshot the goal.

United Way Shining Stars

NAME: Patricia de Little
OCCUPATION: President of Temporary Resources
VOLUNTEER POSITION: United Way Panel 3 Board Member

Although Patricia had been involved in United Way by distributing flyers and encouraging clients to contribute, her real commitment followed a friend's comment that there was a board opening. She has now served as a panel member for five years.

Patricia and other Panel 3 members join in working with the leadership of four agencies to discern their needs and ultimately the donated amount from UNITED WAY. These agencies are: Community Senior Services of Midland, Palmer Drug Abuse Program, Midland Need to Read, and Freewill Foster Home.

"By serving on a panel, I became aware of how the contributions benefit this community," says Patricia. "We go to the agency location to see how it works -- meet the people involved, tour the facility, and ask lots of questions. I see first-hand, for example, how these dollars are feeding people and providing them with electricity.

"When donations are sent 3,000 miles away, it's too easy to become detached," says Patricia, "but by contributing time and money to Midland's United Way, I know I am making a difference."

"The United Way Of Midland serves 36,000 Midlanders through the following agencies and programs: American Red Cross, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Boy Scouts of America, Boys' and Girls" Club of Midland, Camp Fire, Casa de Amigos, Citywide Community services, Community and Senior Services of Midland, Family Services, Permian Basin Child Abuse Prevention Program, Freewill Foster Home, Midland/Lee Youth Centers, Midland Rape Crises Center, Midland Need To Read, Palmer Drug Abuse Program, Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and their Children, Permian Basin Girl Scouts, Salvation Army Corps and Day Care Center, YMCA's

Our Constitution will remain vital as ever

Average Americans go about their daily lives giving little thought or concern to the United States Constitution, the document that a majority of delegates to the constitutional convention in Philadelphia completed and signed on Sept. 17, 1787 — 205 years ago.

Yet few documents have so much import in the daily lives of so many people as the Constitution. Writing for the National Society of Daughters of the American Revolution, Mary Barclay Erb noted, "It has been said, 'To understand the Constitution of the United States is the clarion call of the hour, a call as dynamic as when Moses wrote the Ten Commandments.' " And so it is.

Daniel Webster, the outstanding orator and U.S. senator best known for his defense of a single, unified nation in 1830, asserted, "It is the people's Constitution, the people's government; made for the people; made by the people; and answerable to the people."

That is why the United States Constitution is as vital as it ever has been and always will remain. Furthermore, it is a "living" Constitution that can be adapted to this era's needs, although, historically, adaptation through amendment is seldom used. The point remains that the Constitution gives Americans the foundation for free, prosperous and independent lives. We control the state; the state does not control us.

The founders knew of the failings of government. In the words of Ms. Erb: "They had studied the ancient civilizations and the methods of government employed therein. They had studied the medieval systems and the various governments of their day. They were well acquainted with the great classical writings on the subject, therefore came to their tasks very thoroughly equipped. They knew the results of the experiments in government through the ages."

Through their awareness of the history of government and its rights-usurping tendency, the founders of this nation made the three separate branches of government — executive, legislative and judicial — subordinate to the Constitution. The power to effect changes in the Constitution was left in the hands of the people, not the government. So it is crucial that each individual know he has been endowed with particular rights and responsibilities. Only in that way can the magnificent document known as the Constitution be properly utilized, respected and protected.

As Webster noted, the Constitution is our Constitution. This government is our government. It's answerable to us. On this Constitution Week, each of us should vow to become more knowledgeable of this marvelous document that has given us so much — our very liberty.

Free Trade Agreement's minuses need closer look

At a conference on the proposed North American Free Trade Agreement . . ., consumer advocate Ralph Nader and representatives of the Sierra Club, the National Farmers Union and other groups voiced their reservations about the trade pact.

Their assertions about the potential problems raised by the plan . . . cannot be dismissed as easily as the knee-jerk opposition from some special interests that simply oppose change.

Carl Pope, head of the national Sierra Club, said the proposed agreement really amounts to a plan for U.S. investment in Mexico by companies more interested in escaping U.S. environmental regulations than in helping Mexico.

Multinational corporations will use money and political clout to circumvent Mexico's tough but largely unenforced environmental rules, he said. And U.S. consumers will face unknown hazards from imported farm and manufactured products.

Even those who view the North American Free Trade Agreement as a necessity in the growing global economy should perhaps look beyond the economic advantages offered by the pact. The full details of the agreement soon will be out, and it is time to set aside precast positions and give the terms a close look in the hard light of day.

Guerrero puts too much faith in power of wishful thinking

Although the myth of Texas Railroad Commission Chairwoman Lena Guerrero's degree from the University of Texas has been perpetuated in her own campaign material as well as in biographies and in public discourse, the Democrat maintains that she actually believed herself to be a UT graduate.

Apparently, Guerrero has put a trifle too much faith in the power of wishful thinking.

Not only did Guerrero wish herself into a degree from the university, but also into the exclusive Phi Beta Kappa academic honors society. While Texans are often inclined to give even politicians the benefit of the doubt, it would strain the faculties of even the most gullible to believe that Guerrero has been too busy to read her own campaign material and biographies and thus discover the utter falsehoods contained therein.

'Investor beware' of Mexico business

WASHINGTON — Two key words were omitted from the 2,000-page draft of the North American Free Trade Agreement: Investor beware. Doing business in Mexico can be a harrowing experience.

NAFTA is being sold as the gold rush of the '90s. New jobs, markets, sales and opportunities all beckon for American business. It all may be true — but so is the fact that south of the border, the court of last resort can often be a corrupt cop or a graft-seeking judge.

Anderson

Jack Andrews has some advice for the small and medium-size firms that will rush south if NAFTA is passed: "Anyone smaller than Chevron or G.M. is going to have to fight a 10-year (legal) battle" to resolve financial disputes. Without a battalion of lawyers and friends in high places, mastering the Mexican system of official corruption is treacherous.

It's been a long haul for Andrews, whose odyssey grew out of a contract dispute eight years ago. His small exporting company had signed a contract to deliver agricultural products to Andsa, the Mexican government's food storage monopoly. In a court complaint Andrews charged that Andsa officials conspired with the New York office of the Mexican Coffee Institute to underbid his company by $75. His losses were $1.5 million.

Andrews won default judgments in California and New York courts for $2 million, but still hasn't collected a nickel.

Last June, Andrew's case prompted Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, to write the Mexican ambassador to the United States, with a veiled warning: "I am concerned that there is real potential in cases like this to jeopardize the successful conclusion to a North American Free Trade Agreement."

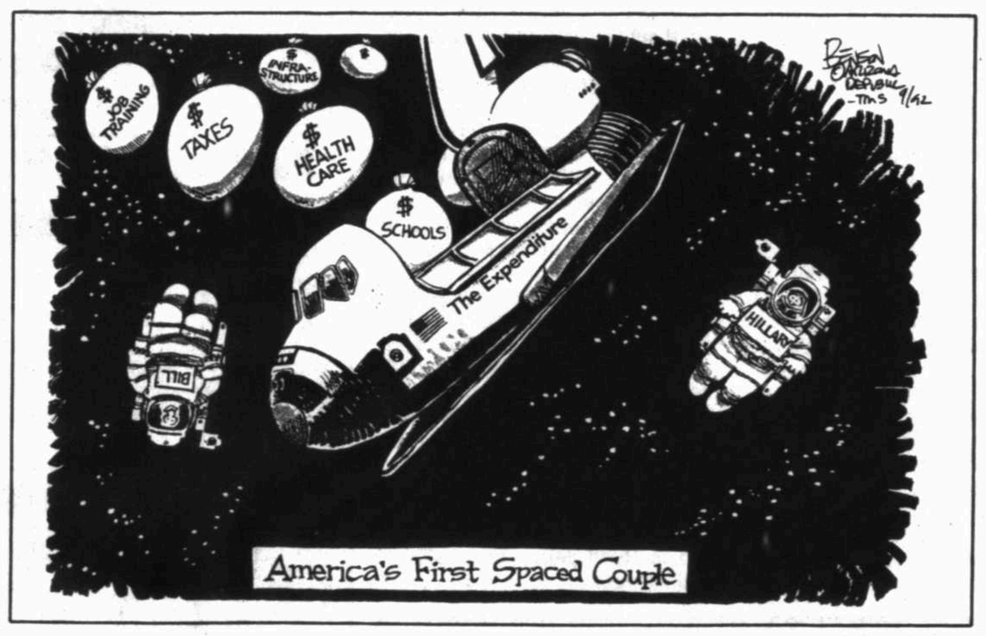

A second case involves the plight of a Texas-based oil trading company owned by Bill Flanigan. Flanigan had a 1984 contract to buy residual oil from the Mexican Petroleum Workers Union and its Commission of Contracts, which both reneged after Flanigan refused to pay kickbacks. Two default judgments later, Flanigan is owed $420 million awarded by a U.S. court, but has yet to collect a cent. He has also had a brush with death, when a Mexican guide put a .38 pistol against his temple after Flanigan toured a Mexican oil refinery.

The larger point underscored by both cases, according to trade experts, is the lack of an effective and enforceable arbitration mechanism for disputes between private American companies and the government-sponsored monopolies in Mexico. Under current law, U.S. businesses feeling swindled by Mexican authorities have few means of reliably recouping their losses.

After winning a default judgment worth $92 million, which he was unable to collect, Flanigan seized, through a court order, a safe deposit box in a Texas bank containing jewelry and gold belonging to a Mexican official. After the Mexicans proposed and then failed to live up to another agreement, Flanigan won yet another default judgment — this one worth $273 million — and later seized three union aircraft being held in the United States.

Though some trade officials believe NAFTA will make it simpler for U.S. companies to press claims against Mexico, others see new problems being spawned. Disputes between the two governments will be handled by new trilateral trade commissions. For big companies with deep pockets, that's no problem.

GEORGE WILL

Senate seat race disturbs Williamson

WASHINGTON — If Rich Williamson seems somewhat flummoxed, forgive him. His race for a Senate seat was supposed to be against the incumbent, Democrat Alan Dixon, an ideologically shapeless career politician vulnerable to today's anti-incumbent fever. Too vulnerable, it turned out.

Will

In a three-person primary in March, Dixon got bushwacked by the Cook County Recorder of Deeds — a political consultant's dream candidate for 1992 — a black woman incumbent-slayer. Since then Carol Moseley Braun has been surfing on a wave of friendly (sometimes swooning) media attention. Williamson, noting that her name is now better known than the governor's, knows he must change the contest from a choice between "a 43-year-old white guy and a 44-year-old black woman with a nice smile."

Sitting in her county building office, smiling serenely, she seems to know what he says he knows: Other things being equal, in a contest today between a man and a woman, 50 percent of voters are indifferent, 10 percent prefer voting for the man and 40 percent prefer voting for the woman. Furthermore, as Williamson says, voting for "a non-threatening African-American makes many people feel good."

So what does a 43-year-old white guy (and businessman, and former Reagan White House aide) have to do? He has to make her (a University of Chicago law graduate and former state legislator) seem threatening. Williamson's attacks include some GOP golden oldies. He says she has voted 11 times to raise taxes, and to raise welfare and her pay, and has voted against the death penalty and against reciting the Pledge of Allegiance in schools, and was a 1988 Jesse Jackson delegate.

But to Williamson's charge that she is a "far-out left-wing liberal" from "the Chicago machine," she replies, smiling, that the charge is "an oxymoron" because the machine is inhospitable to far-out left-wing liberals.

Actually, neither candidate's politics plows any new intellectual ground. If Braun winds up sitting in Everett Dirksen's chair, she will be as conventional a Democrat as he was a Republican. She wants to raise taxes on the reptilian rich, "to invest" in this and that, and to siphon off more federal dollars for Illinois, which she says ranks 48th among the states in the ratio of dollars sent to Washington and dollars returned.

She expects to get to the Senate partly because "the Senate demystified itself" in the Clarence Thomas-Anita Hill debacle. She does not mean, as some journalists have suggested, that most women are, or were, inflamed with sympathy for Hill. They weren't. Rather, she means that the Judiciary Committee convinced people that you could not throw rice in a restaurant without hitting half a dozen people who would be better senators.

Fewer than three in 10 of the state's votes are cast in Chicago and Williamson hopes that downstate voters are still Chicagophobic. But they do not dislike Democrats. Today most downstaters are represented by Democratic congressmen, and Illinois has two Democratic senators and Democratic majorities in both houses of the state legislature.

Williamson believes Braun wasted her post-primary glow, much as Bush wasted his after Desert Storm. Williamson says she failed to produce an agenda beyond her persona. But her persona is much of her agenda, which is to "open the Senate to working-class people." On those terms, all she has to do to succeed in the Senate is get there.

Strange, the way political events echo and ricochet. If, as many political soothsayers believe, the presidential election will be settled in the Middle West, the decision may be shaped by what happened in Illinois' Senate primary last March.

George Will's column is distributed by Washington Post Writers Group.

RUSSELL BAKER

Perot frees Bush, Clinton from economy

When Ross Perot quit he freed President Bush and Governor NotBush to avoid the subject, and they have since been avoiding it with zest. The subject, of course, is: "What's it going to take to haul The economy out of the pit?"

Baker

Perot decided the answer was, "Sacrifice." The word gives off noble vibration, but everybody knows that, after we enjoy the pleasure of being called to sacrifice, pain cometh swiftly to all but the canny and the well connected. That's why seasoned politicians handle sacrifice gingerly.

Thus after President Kennedy's splendid summons — "Ask not what your country can do for you . . ." — people who asked what they could do for their country discovered that accepting the benefits of substantial tax reductions would be sufficient.

As a businessman, Perot was probably aware of the advertising campaign for aspirin featuring the cry, "I haven't got time for the pain!" In any event, he concluded that the national demand for pain was too small to justify a $100 million campaign to sell it.

Well, talk about media furioso! (Or is it media furiosa?) He was roundly abused and accused of wimpishness and poltroonery. The assault was led by media people, who tend to be youngish, self-righteous, high-salaried and, to judge by their effusions against Perot, masochistic.

Their case against Perot was the patriot's against the shirker: a nation in desperate straits needed him and he had let it down. All right, but what now has become of this hunger for a candidate who trumpets the call to sacrifice in these critical times, if you will forgive the bromidic prose so essential, alas, to political journalism?

President Bush and Governor NotBush are getting away with the same wimpish poltroonery that incensed media parsons in the Perot affair. I scarcely dare mention their free pass on the pain issue for fear colleagues will say, "So what?" or, "They all do it," or some other media-talk equivalent of "Grow up."

Messrs. Bush and NotBush both concede the existence of economic distress, but neither suggests that getting out of it may require a bit of pain for you, me and the whole darn family. If the economic plight is so desperate that Perot failed a patriotic duty by abandoning his campaign, surely Messrs. Bush and NotBush are equally derelict since they act as if the plight is not plight enough to call for remedies stronger than aspirin.

("We know you haven't got time for the pain, folks, so just take two of these photo ops every day and don't worry until this silly election is out of the way.")

True, Governor NotBush has warned the over-$200,000 crowd that he will put them to the tax rack to dispel the multitrillion-dollar deficit. And President Bush says he will stop pork-barrel spending if Congress will just be reasonable, surrender its historic "power of the purse" and give him veto power over every item in the federal budget.

If the economy's plight is as dire as the Perot diagnosis suggested, the Bush-NotBush proposals amount to applying a mustard plaster to a ruptured appendix. I keep having this fantasy of President Roosevelt on the radio for one of his "fireside chats," and he is telling us not to worry about sacrificing to meet the stupendous cost of raising mighty armies, because the Wehrmacht can readily be defeated by the Boy Scouts of America.

The charm of the present campaign's approach to economics, of course, is obvious: "Look, folks! No pain!" Except for the plutocratic minority, of course, who not only deserve to suffer for being plutocratic, but are also heavily lawyered, hence abler than most of us to confound the tax cops.

If President Bush and Governor NotBush are to get a free pass on the economic issue, they should at least be badgered to address a few aspects of our end-of-century predicament that are safer for politicians to discuss. There is, for instance, the vital question of the national morale and the agents destroying it.

I refer to implacable health forces that keep 250 million people in a constant listless state of terror and depression. Iron, for example. Causes heart attacks. That was last week's bulletin. Wake up, Bush! Get with it, NotBush! Psychic depression can kill too.

Teacher desires more than average schools

The article in the Sunday Reporter-Telegram (Sept. 13) on page 1, section A headlined "Midland students surpass national SAT average" is somewhat misleading. I am quite sure the data concerning the averages is correct, but the emphasis on how good the Midland Independent School District (MISD) is doing while spending $1,000 less per student than the state average is becoming overused.

As an educator in the system, I feel we are misleading the public into a sense of false security that the children within the system are getting more for less. I know of several instances where another teacher or more supplies could mean the difference between passing and failing for many children. We must look at some of this information and really try to understand it.

We are in the business of educating children. Frankly, as a parent and teacher, average is just not good enough for my children and your children.

Some tire of hearing Vietnam draft issue

As one voting American citizen, I'm tired of hearing President Bush rant and rave about Gov. Bill Clinton's Vietnam draft status. We all realize that Gov. Clinton never put on any military uniform. Amen!

I believe President Bush's sons must have been of "military age" during this time period. I'd like to hear what they were doing — I don't believe any of them ever served in the military. Did George Bush use his money and/or political connections to harbor his sons through the safety net of the Vietnam War?

My husband served in Vietnam.

I'd like to challenge President Bush to try to get treatment at the Veterans Administration hospital in Big Spring. We'd gladly let him be treated there and we'd take treatment at his VA hospital in Washington, D.C. After all, aren't my husband's military credentials equal to Lt. George Bush's?

Big Spring's VA hospital is more interested in nice new furniture for the non-medical staff. Every time we go there for service there are fewer medical people. Oh well, furniture does cost money.

Woman appreciates help with her seminar

I love it when a plan comes together! I want to thank everyone who helped with the "Networking in the 90's Seminar," created and hosted by the Uptown Business & Professional Women's Club and held Sept. 12. This was our organization's major fundraiser for the year and thanks to the many merchants who donated prizes and services, the communications community who donated a fantastic amount of publicity, wonderful speakers who donated their time and expertise, the attendees, and of course, all the people who made it happen from BPW, it was a huge success.

Our funds are used for a variety of excellent causes; primary among them are scholarships for women who need and want to return to school to improve their job marketability. Our organization is dedicated to helping women become more successful and continue to grow professionally.

We are particularly grateful to the Reporter-Telegram for the excellent coverage they gave us; to the various radio stations who ran press releases for us; and to Max Howard of KMND 1510 AM for a wonderfully enjoyable and informative interview.

Man wonders about money going abroad

After yard work, recently I stored my Honda lawn mower in the garage next to my top-of-the-line 1992 American brand car (assembled in Canada).

While washing my hands in my American brand lavatory (made in Mexico), I decided to take a bath in my Mexican-made tub instead. I took off my well-worn tan colored American Rockport shoes (made in Yugoslavia). I then took of my Sears tan leisure trousers (made in China) and proceeded with my bath. With a clean, dry epidermis, I put my legs in my Wal-Mart's blue leisure trousers (made in Pakistan). My choice of shoes was between a pair of black and brown Rockports (both made in Taiwan).

Quickly I calculated my leisure dress had cost me about $140. What bothered me was that about $110 of it had gone for foreign-made clothes. A message is there for all except those who would completely deny reality. Have we passed the economic point of no return? If nothing else, we had better think about it.

Many run into problems with Mexican Consulate

After three or four fruitless visits to the Mexican Consulate by some people trying to obtain information and the address of the General Office of Tourism in Mexico City, I was asked to go with them to help. I was explaining to them all the excuses and problems people run into with the office at the border point of entry; you can bet they will find some way, to skin you alive before they let you continue to your destination.

In describing those individuals, I used the word "cabron." This word is used in speeches by politicians referring to crooks and dishonest characters, in movies and songs, and anywhere the Spanish language is spoken. I was told by the consul that I would not get any information from them and to find another consulate because I used a "BAD" word. I did not need his assistance: I am an American citizen; I was just trying to assist these people.

The consul and his staff are Mexican Government Foreign Service employees and are getting paid to do this job. He does not need to act like an almighty God with those people seeking information. He claims to speak three or four languages, but I think he needs a refresher course in Spanish. I hope he comes out with his Mexican dictionary and proves to me that "cabron" IS a bad word. "Cabrito" is a kid goat; "cabron" is an old goat.

Columnist's hatred for Bush surprises reader

On Sept. 8th you published an article written by Charley Reese. I've never read one so full of hate for an American president. It brings back unpleasant memories for me.

In the early 1940's I read articles of hate about President Franklin Roosevelt in the "Volkischer Beobachter" (official newspaper of the National Socialist Party) written by Dr. Josef Goebbels and his henchmen. Charley Reese has topped them all on hate for an American president. Dr. Goebbels would have been proud and awarded him the Iron Cross.

READERS' VIEWS on: Police officers' vests

Midland should use tax dollars to protect police

I think it is shameful and an embarrassment to our community that a city such as Midland does not provide our peace officers with body armor. Let's make the firemen buy their own hoses or the street crews their own buckets of tar.

When my brother became an officer in another town in Texas, the very first point of business was to measure him for his body armor. Midland's police men and women wake up each morning, get ready for work, eat breakfast, kiss their families goodbye, and leave for a job not knowing whether or not they will return. If our city cannot be responsible enough to find funds sufficient to help protect the lives of those men and women protecting ours, then maybe we should re-evaluate our priorities.

As a community, we spend perhaps tens of thousands of dollars to send football teams around the state and high school bands around the world. I've participated in every fundraiser!

If it's necessary for me, as a private citizen, to pitch in to help save an officer's life, well, I'm all for it, but shouldn't my tax dollars help cover this expense?

I for one appreciate all that our officers do for me and my loved ones.

Thank you, Midland's finest.

Officers' vests can be paid for with city funds

I'm really "teed-off!"

First, about asking businesses and private citizens to buy vests for the police officers. Sure every officer should have one. He should be issued one with his gun. They should be paid for out of city funds. Our taxes are high enough. Retirees have about been taxed out of our city.

Second, sending people to Russia to get them to buy our goods and the city paying the bill is the dumbest thing I've ever heard of. This $300,000 would pay for quite a few policemen's vests. I believe in a free enterprise system. Let the companies with something to sell work out their own deals, being very careful that they get paid and that their goods are not bought on credit. We have had enough government in our businesses already and look where we are — almost "down the drain."

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Language influences presidential race

America is back up on wedgies. Remember those triangulated, high-soled shoes of the 40s that incorporated the heel and turned the fashionable woman into an endangered species? They're back — not merely in the form of platform soles, but planks in political platforms.

Safire

In 1990, as Bush White House aides fought over the degree to which affirmative action guidelines became quotas, the former Carter adviser Stuart E. Eizenstat said with some prescience that the Republicans had "a need to give the Reagan Democrats red meat at a time when the economy is going into the tank, and they see civil rights and quotas as a wedge issue."

Recalling this early usage and perhaps coinage, Eizenstat tells me: "I was looking for a phrase to illustrate the attempt to split the coalition of working-class whites and blacks, the two constituencies Roosevelt unified on economic grounds. The image came to mind of a wedge being driven."

It filled a political-linguistic need for fresh labels. Another Democrat, the Clinton strategist James Carville, charged two years later that President Bush's advisers, bereft of an agenda, had to "dust off the Republican manual, which is to go to wedge issues: 'We can't lead the country so maybe we can divide it.'"

As a phrase, wedge issue is related to the 80s hot-button issue, which was an updating of the 70s polarization. Wedge, with earthy Indo-European roots as both verb and noun, strikes me as an improvement over the Latinate polarize and polarization.

Wedge issue is a political attack locution, usually used by liberals and moderates, aimed at politicians on the right who bring up sensitive cultural and social subjects during political campaigns. The dividing wedge, however, need not be racial: free trade is seen by the right as a wedge issue to use to divide workers and environmentalists on the left.

Here is a synonymy of the issues issue: a switcher issue — like gun control or abortion — is a single subject that will cause a minority of voters to change their vote regardless of other patterns, urges or habits (resulting in a bullet vote).

A hot-button issue — like perks for big shots or global warming — will cause a potential voter to become agitated, but not necessarily to the point of switching allegiance; touching this button causes audiences to roar or hoot, and is synonymous with red meat, the figure of speech drawn from the excited reaction of carnivorous animals when food is thrown into their cage.

A gut issue has a wider visceral appeal: the intestinal matter on this year's agenda is the slow growth of the economy, expressed in the single word "jobs." This bread-and-butter issue can also be the burning issue if it is dramatized, but if the opposition fails to ignite it, the subject is better described as the paramount issue.

■ PEROTIAN ALERT

I miss Ross Perot. Not only did he apply the traffic term gridlock to divided-party government, but also the jug-eared, thin-skinned executive generated the most derisive sobriquet of the current campaign, as his betrayed supporters called him "the yellow Ross of Texas."

In Forbes magazine's 75th anniversary issue, Peggy Noonan, the former Reagan-Bush speechwriter who has developed the art of impressionism in political prose, summarized the voters' view of the horseless head man in a poetic trope: "They looked at him and saw a hand grenade with a bad haircut."

■ THE WAY THE POLL BOUNCES

"It's partly a convention bounce," Gov. Bill Clinton said after his poll ratings shot up in July.

As August ended and the Republicans had convened in Houston, the Bush-Quayle ratings improved somewhat and The Christian Science Monitor wrote, "It represents a routine convention bounce." Newsweek, in its Conventional Wisdom Watch, asked, "Why does the CW worry about the 'convention bounce' if the CW also says the bounce dissipates within two weeks?"

The much-discussed convention bounce is a temporary rise in the opinion polls caused by the television exposure and print commentary during a party's national convention. As The Associated Press reported in 1988, "The convention bounce usually settles down as voters focus on the issues of the race."

Bounce has triumphed over the variant bump. Who coined the phrase? In 1980, the Carter presidential spokesman, Jody Powell, used the term to mean a psychological lift.

■ WORDS OF WISDOM

Phrase junkies are always on the lookout for political axioms, adages and proverbs.

Bert Lance's "If it ain't broke, don't fix it" has become a source of inspiration to anti-activists. Dwight Morrow's "Any party which takes credit for the rain must not be surprised if its opponents blame it for the drought" is being ruefully repeated by supporters of George Bush. Economists eager to fine-tune the economy turn to the wisdom attributed to the gangster Al Capone: "You can get a lot more done with a kind word and a gun, than with a kind word alone."

A subcategory in this field is "forgiveness, political," headed by the quotation attributed to the Kennedy brothers: "Forgive but don't forget." An addition to this store of sophisticated sagacity has been provided by the newscaster Jim Lehrer, in his new, breezily profound memoir, "A Bus of My Own" (Putnam). He notes in passing that some former associates tried to do him in, and then forgives them, but not completely: "As a prominent Oklahoma politician says a lot," Lehrer writes, "'Show me somebody who can't tell his friends from his enemies and I'll show you somebody who's going to end up with no friends.'"

Congress, president should slash unneeded spending

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NORTH SALEM, N.Y. — A critical time has come for far more drastic cuts in federal spending.

It is apparent the electioneering proposals of the Republican and Democratic presidential candidates and congressional leaders for spending cuts is not going to make much, if any dent, in the $4.035 trillion national debt. As Dan Rather reported a few evenings ago on the CBS-TV news program, "The red ink is growing at the rate of $13,000 a second."

Hearst

If we are going to bring about economic recovery in this last decade of the 20th century, Congress and whoever is president next year, and I hope it will be George Bush, must slash unnecessary spending during the critical period ahead.

The primary target of those like Rear Adm. Eugene J. Carroll, Jr. (Ret.), former deputy chief of naval operations for plans, policy and operations, is the national security budget, which includes the Pentagon and the nuclear weapons programs of the Department of Energy. President Bush has requested $281 billion for the security budget in the 1993 fiscal year, which starts Oct. 1.

Adm. Carroll contends that President Bush and Gov. Bill Clinton are committed, in effect, to continuing the Cold War military program. On the MacNeil/Lehrer TV program last Wednesday evening, Carroll said both presidential candidates "favor all the same weapons systems that were built and introduced during the Cold War. The enemy has disappeared, but we are going on building the same missiles, airplanes, tanks, ships and submarines that we built to defeat the Soviet Union. We certainly ought to be knowing who the enemy is and why it dictates building 20 new B-2 bombers at a cost of $2 billion a piece. Why in the world do we need this gold-plated monster that was designed to sneak into the Soviet Union and destroy it in a nuclear war now that the Soviet Union is already gone."

Bush was originally opposed to building the 20 new B-2s, but he was finally persuaded they would be a good deterrent against Saddam Hussein-type aggressors. They can be equipped with conventional instead of nuclear weapons.

We are spending about $15 billion on foreign aid. I have been and remain a strong supporter of Israel, which is our most reliable ally in the Middle East. Nevertheless, I think that the $3 billion we give Israel in military and economic aid as well as the $2.1 billion we give similarly to Egypt should be scaled down. I hope the new Israeli government of Yitzhak Rabin as well as the Egyptian government of Hosni Mubarak will understand that we must cut back, especially in a time of recession.

I also hope the Israelis will be patient if the United States decides to delay giving them a new $10 billion loan guarantee to help them resettle about 400,000 Jews emigrating from the former Soviet Union. While a guarantee would not necessarily affect the budget deficit, it could if Israel were to default on the loans.

Regular readers of this column may remember how enthusiastic I have been about the Strategic Defense (Star Wars) on which we have spent $27 billion over the past nine years. However, a General Accounting Office report published Sept. 16 said tests were not successful so far, particularly for the "Brilliant Pebble" antimissile interceptor. It failed to track its target accurately, and key parts of the missile were prematurely separated 81 seconds after launch from Wallops Island, Va.

The Bush administration wanted to spend $575 million on interceptors, including $449 million for "Brilliant Pebbles" next year, but the interceptors are not scheduled to be orbited for defense purposes until the year 2001. The Senate approved $350 million for interceptors last week. Earlier the House had cut all funding for them. A conference between the two houses will decide whether the program lives or dies. I certainly think research should continue but be slowed down so that we don't spend half a billion dollars in 1993 when we may be experiencing the worst recession since the 1930s' Great Depression.

The views I have expressed in this column are based on a report to me from Joe Kingsbury-Smith, our Washington-based national editor. Now he will relate to you an example of ridiculously unnecessary spending of the taxpayers money by the federal government:

There is a government regulation on the sale of cabbage that contains 26,911 words. The Lord's Prayer contains 66 words. The Gettysburg Address has 286 words, and there are only 1,322 words in the Declaration of Independence.

Floyd approaches golf history with stroke advantage at GTE

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Raymond Floyd moved within one round of golf history by shooting a 5-under-par 67 on Saturday to take a one-shot lead after two rounds of the GTE North Seniors tournament.

Seniors

Floyd, playing in his second Senior Tour event, is bidding to become the first player to win events on the PGA and Senior Tours in the same year. He won the Doral Open on the PGA Tour earlier this year and ranks ninth on the PGA money list.

Floyd was at 11-under 133 after 36 holes, one stroke better than Kermit Zarley, who had a 69.

First-round leader Walter Morgan, playing with Floyd and Zarley, bogeyed two of the last three holes en route to a 1-over 73 and headed a group of five players tied for third at 136. The group also includes brothers Mike and Dave Hill, Bruce Crampton and Isao Aoki of Japan.

Mike Hill fired a tournament-record 63, matching the mark established Friday by Morgan. But Hill's effort was overshadowed when Floyd turned around a so-so day with a late charge.

"Again I struggled on the greens," Floyd said. "I had a difficult time making any putts. I feel real fortunate to be in the lead putting the way I am."

Floyd took the lead with a birdie on No. 17, a 482-yard par-5.

"I hit a terrible drive and had to hit a wedge from behind the trees in the rough," he said. "But I hit a 9-iron to 10 feet and made the putt for birdie."

He finished his round by sticking his wedge shot on No. 18 within 6 feet and rolling in his sixth birdie of the day.

Frost extends Hardee's lead

Associated Press

COAL VALLEY, Ill. — David Frost breezed through the Oakwood Country Club on Saturday, firing a 6-under-par 64 to extend his lead to five strokes in the Hardee's Golf Classic.

PGA

Frost, who won the Buick Classic in June, had six birdies to finish the third round with a 16-under 194 total on 6,751-yard Oakwood Country Club course.

"It's his tournament," said Jay Delsing, who was eight strokes back at 202 after a 65. "Frost is so far ahead, it's going to be tough for anyone to catch him. He's going to have to shoot above par and somebody else is really going to have to catch fire."

After playing under adverse weather for two days, Frost feasted on the perfect conditions that greeted the 73 players who made the cut.

His five-stroke lead after 54 holes is a tournament record. The largest lead after three rounds this year was six strokes by Fred Couples in the Nestle Invitational in March.

For the third straight day, Frost seemed to inspire his playing partner as Loren Roberts shot a 66 for an 11-under 199 total.

Tom Lehman also stayed in the hunt with a roller-coaster round of 66 which left him tied for second with Roberts.

Lehman had a rocky start with two bogeys and three birdies in the first seven holes. He then settled down and posted three birdies on the back nine. But he still was five strokes behind Frost.

"He shot lights out," Lehman said of the leader.

Walker trots to front at LPGA Safeco Classic

Associated Press

KENT, Wash. — Colleen Walker shot a 4-under-par 68 to take a two-stroke lead over Dottie Mochrie, Patty Sheehan and Helen Alfredsson after the third round of the LPGA Safeco Classic on Saturday.

Walker, who won the season-opening Oldmobile Classic in February and the Corning Classic in May, had a 9-under 207 total on the 6,222-yard Meridian Valley Country Club course.

"I got myself into position yesterday," said Walker, who shot a 67 on Friday. "Now I'm looking forward to enjoying myself."

Mochrie, a four-time winner this season and the tour's leading money winner with $678,161, also shot a 68. Sheehan, a three-time winner who's a victory away from entering the LPGA Hall of Fame, had a 69 and Alfredsson shot a 70.

Walker, who was 4-over after 12 holes Thursday, opened the third round with a 10-foot birdie putt. She drove into trees and bogeyed No. 4, but rebounded with a 4-foot birdie putt on No. 5.

She missed a 3-footer to bogey No. 6 and birdied Nos. 8 and 10. Walker hit 5-iron to a foot on the par-3 eighth and an 8-iron approach to 5 feet on No. 10 to set up the birdies.

She birdied No. 13 after hitting her 9-iron third shot to 5 feet and hit a 5-iron appraoch to 2 feet on No. 16 to set up another birdie.

Mochrie was alone in second place until she three-putted from the back fringe for a bogey on No. 15. Alfredsson closed with a 30-foot birdie putt on No. 18.

Betsy King, Vicki Fergon and Rosie Jones were three back at 210. King shot a 66, the best score of the round.

Eubank keeps WBO crown

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP) — Unbeaten Chris Eubank drained the punching power from challenger Tony Thornton on Saturday and won a unanimous decision to retain his World Boxing Organization super-middleweight title.

Almost a year after winning the title in a fight against still hospitalized Michael Watson, Eubank soaked up some early punches from the American challenger before opening up a clear advantage late in the 12-round fight at the Scottish Exhibition Center.

There were no knockdowns but Thornton, from Glassboro, N.J. ended the fight with a bloody nose and Eubank had swelling above his left eye.

A sellout crowd of 10,000 saw Thornton, 32, enter the ring in a kilt to gain some support from the Scottish crowd. He soon won their admiration also with crisp punches that found Eubank's face, but the champion stayed in control and began to move ahead in the ninth.

He won 116-113, 117-112, 115-113 on the judges' scorecards to gain his 33rd straight victory.

Staff report

SAN ANTONIO — Gunsmoke Shooting Team of Midland, composed of 4H participants ages 10-15, recently finished its 1992 season by winning the High Overall State Championship Team Award here.

Since the beginning of the season in June, nine Midlanders won 135 trophies, as well as the District VI and District II regional titles in five shoots in Texas.

In the state shoot, Gunsmoke won state titles in sporting clays, American trap and skeet, and international trap and skeet.

Mustangs win nailbiter, 35-30

LORAINE — Midland Christian pulled out a dramatic comeback here Friday night, as Andy Awtry connected with Lathan Houghton on a 22-yard touchdown pass with 1:41 to play, defeating Loraine 35-30 in six-man high school football play.

The Mustangs (3-0) had to stop Loraine deep in their territory before the go-ahead TD could be scored, though, as Kyle Jackson made a game-saving tackle at the MCS 5-yard line on fourth down to give MCS possession.

The Mustangs then drove the length of the field for the Houghton's catch from Awtry, their second TD in the final seven minutes. Brian Fairchild sealed the win with an interception with 57 seconds left, allowing MCS to run out the clock.

MCS returns to play next Friday, when it plays at Three Way.

Junior Varsity Girls: Anna Burley, Lee, time n/a.

MFHS splits

Midland Freshman's Gold team fell to Odessa Bonham 23-6 Saturday, while MFHS' Purple squad downed Odessa Crockett 9-6 Thursday in ninth grade football play.

In Purple's win, Jerome Terry scored on the team's only touchdown on a quarterback sneak up the middle, while Demetruis Lee took the ball over for Gold's TD after Ryan Elder's circus catch.

Junior high football play continued Saturday, as San Jacinto beat Odessa Crockett 20-6 in the Eighth Grade Midland-Odessa League.

In seventh grade play, Alamoe Gray downed San Jacinto Green 14-6 and Goddard White took a 22-8 win from San Jacinto White in the American Conference. In the National Conference, Goddard White defeated San Jacinto White 12-0 and San Jacinto Green won over Alamo Gray 24-0.

(From 1B)

The Lady Rebs started slow, losing the first game 7-15 as Odessa High's Amy Trent did the major damage with some well placed spikes. Lee came back to force the third game by winning the second in 15-10 fashion as Tera Mander and Phyllis Turner turned in some key blocks down the stretch.

The deciding game was tied was tied nine times before Lee pulled it out of the fire.

Lee's Carrie Zamora, playing sick, was a big help defensively for the Lady Rebels. Roxanne Furrow didn't play while nursing injuries received in a car accident.

OHS coach Diane Sandoval was not disappointed with the showing of her Bronchos.

"I'm pleased with the team," Sandavol said. "We didn't give up. We haven't won a district game, but we've taken every team we've played to three games. This was the kind of game you like to watch, but hate to coach."

Meanwhile, Midland High failed in its opportunity to climb to the top of the league standings, falling to Odessa Permian, 5-15, 16-14, 15-10. MHS is now 1-1 while Permian climbed into a second place tie with Abilene Cooper at 2-1. Cooper defeated San Angelo, 15-11, 15-11. Abilene High owns sole possession of first by virtue of not playing to protect its 2-0 mark.

Midland High will host Cooper at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday while Lee travels to Abilene High. Those are critical games for the locals if they hope to stay in serious playoff position.

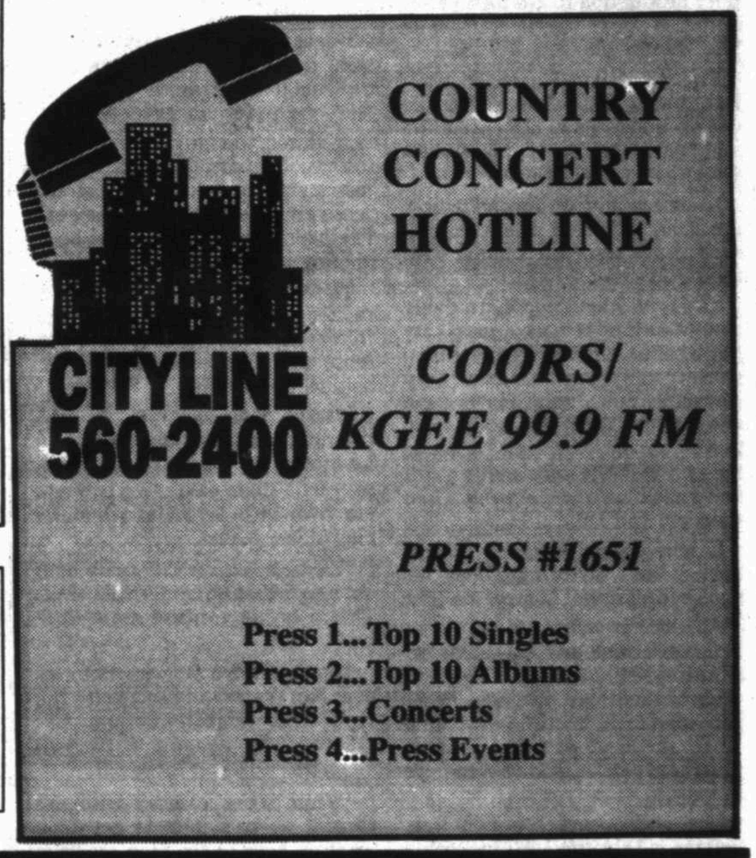

Braves place Greg Olson on DL

Associated Press

ATLANTA — The Atlanta Braves placed catcher Greg Olson on the 15-day disabled list and recalled left-hander Pat Gomez on Saturday.

Olson sustained a fractured right fibula, torn ligaments and dislocated ankle in Friday night's 13-3 loss to Houston and will be lost for the season.

Gomez was 3-5 with a 5.45 ERA at Richmond of the International League and 7-0 with a 1.13 ERA at Greenville of the Southern League.

Belcher has food delivered to writer barred from Riverfront dining room

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Cincinnati Reds pitcher Tim Belcher sent food to the Riverfront Stadium press box Saturday after his criticism of the team mascot got a writer barred from the stadium dining room.

Belcher had pizza and sandwiches delivered to writers, then stood up in the dugout and tipped his cap towards the press box during the Reds' game against the San Diego Padres.

Cincinnati Post writer Jerry Crasnick was barred from the dining room by controlling partner Marge Schott before the game for a story critical of her dog, Schottzie 02.

The dog runs loose on the field before games, chasing players and stealing their equipment. The grounds crew also has to clean up after the dog.

"It's a nice thing to have a mascot," Belcher told the Post. "She loves her dog and her ballteam. But if you took a poll in this clubhouse, I don't thnk you'd find many guys who see the same entertainment value in Schottzie running around the field."

When Crasnick showed up for the game Saturday, he was told that Schott had barred him from the dining room. He's the second writer to get barred this year. Hal McCoy of the Dayton Daily News was the first, but he has since had his privileges reinstated.

Midway through the game, a delivery man arrived in the press box with three pizzas, a bag of submarine sandwiches and a handwritten note from Belcher on Reds' stationery.

"Your article represented my thoughts very well," the note said. "I would hate to see you 'waste away' without something to eat during the game. Therefore, please accept this food and share it with your 'scooped' friends. Belch."

Next to his name was a pawprint and "02."

When the food arrived, Belcher stood up in the Reds' dugout, looked up to the press box and tipped his cap.

Faulk applies for $1.8 million insurance policy

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — San Diego State sophomore running back Marshall Faulk has applied for a $1.8 million disability insurance policy through the NCAA, Aztecs coach Al Luginbill said.

Faulk, who led the nation in rushing as a freshman, would be the first sophomore insured through the NCAA Exceptional Student-Athlete Disability Insurance Program. The program allows elite collegiate athletes to purchase insurance without paying premiums until they turn pro or until the coverage is terminated.

"Right now, there's an application through the NCAA," Luginbill said earlier this week. "We would like to think it will all be taken care of before the UCLA game (next Saturday). It's been a long process and we've been working on it through the summer."

The NCAA program, started in 1990, is open to football players projected as first- or second-round draft picks. Baseball and basketball players projected as first-round picks also are eligible.

Faulk has rushed for 519 yards in two games this season, leading to speculation that he may turn pro early. Last season, he set records for the most touchdowns (23) and points (140) by a freshman.

Miami Says

"We Will Rebuild."

Will You Help?

In the early morning hours of Monday, August 24, Hurricane Andrew devastated a huge swath of Dade County, Florida, in the region just south of Miami.

The catastrophic result: 63,000 homes destroyed, close to 300,000 left homeless, losses of more than $20 billion.

It was the costliest natural disaster in American history.

Now, the people of Miami and Dade County are digging out, caring for each other, rebuilding their shattered community.

It will be a Herculean effort. No American community has ever faced physical destruction on such an epic scale. And we are determined to build a better, more just and promising community than before, not just restore the world that Andrew's ferocious winds swept away.

The civic and business leaders of Miami and Dade County have come together to get this job done. We have formed a new organization called WE WILL REBUILD, led by many of our most committed citizens, drawn from all sectors of our wonderfully diverse community.

This broad-based effort has the full and active support of President George Bush, Governor Lawton Chiles and many, many Miamians dedicated to binding the wounds of today and building a better tomorrow for all our citizens.

WE WILL REBUILD needs your help. Now.

KC defense tries to solve Oiler run-and-shoot

Associated Press

■ Kansas City at Houston, noon, NBC (cable channel 9.

HOUSTON — Few teams have put the Houston Oilers' run-and-shoot offense in the experimental crucible with more success — and failure — than the Kansas City Chiefs.

In 1990, the Chiefs tried to play man-to-man defense with the Oilers and Warren Moon had his greatest statistical day as a pro, passing for 527 yards, the second-highest single-game total in NFL history. The Oilers won 27-10.

Kansas City took a soft zone approach last year, pounded the Oilers' inside receivers and cut Houston's production to 275 total yards, with 233 yards passing for Moon. The Oilers still won 17-7.

The Chiefs try to finally get it right today in the Astrodome. The Oilers hope their new wrinkles will be enough for a third straight victory in the series.

Moon has noticed a trend in how opponents defend the run-and-shoot since last year's game with the Chiefs.

"A lot of what people are doing against us now is what Kansas City did against us last year," Moon said. "They saw Kansas City slowed us down and they've been doing it, too. What they want to do is rely on the pass rush to get to me and play the zone underneath and knock our receivers out when they get the ball."

Chiefs coach Marty Schottenheimer isn't strutting about his team's defensive control in last year's game.

"I don't think anybody stops it," Schottenheimer said. "They always make their yardage, What you hope to do is keep the scoring down the best you can to give yourself a chance to be successful."

The scary part for Schottenheimer is that the 1990 loss came against a good Chiefs defense.

"We don't have to look far back to see what happened here in 1990," Schottenheimer said. "We're a pretty good defensive football team and Warren had a day that in my mind surpassed any day any quarterback ever had."

Defensive interest in Houston's high-tech inside receivers has caused another adjustment for the run-and-shoot. Moon is going more to his outside receivers, especially Curtis Duncan, the NFL receiving leader with 16 catches.

"They're doubling our inside guys mainly because they've been catching the majority of the balls," Duncan said. "They're playing games with us. Lately, they've given the outside players more lead room."

Duncan is off to a fast start despite missing training camp as a contract holdout, but he refuses to take credit for his success.

"I think you guys are making too much of it," he said. "We're just trying to take what the defense gives us. Right now the guys I've been playing over have been playing a lot of zone."

The Oilers will face the No. 3-ranked defense in the NFL. The Oilers lead the AFC in total offense and rank second in the NFL behind San Francisco.

"We've been able to see the trends around the league now and we now how teams are going to play us," Moon said. "We can add our own little wrinkles when we play those teams.

"I expect Kansas City to do both (man-to-man and zone) this time. They'll try to confuse me a little bit."

The Chiefs are 2-0, with victories over San Diego and Seattle. It's the first time Schottenheimer has started the season with two victories.

"While we're pleased with the record, we recognize to get done what we have to get done, we have to play much better," Schottenheimer said. "I wasn't aware of that record. My feeling is that the only time it's important to be in front is at the end."

Elway battles tenacious Eagle D

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

Now we know why the Philadelphia Eagles really got Herschel Walker.

To keep John Elway off the field, of course.

"Elway gives everyone fits, and I think you have to control the ball and keep him on the sideline," says coach Rich Kotite of the Eagles, who meet Elway and the Denver Broncos at Veterans Stadium today.

"You put a little urgency into their offense because of a lack of time."

Aside from Elway, Denver doesn't have much offense these days, although the Broncos have managed to beat the Raiders and Chargers. They're next-to-last in rushing and Gaston Green, their leading ballcarrier, has just 51 yards for a 2.2 average.

The Eagles are executing, thanks to Walker, who's tied for the NFC rushing lead with 229 yards in two games and on pace to easily become Philadelphia's first 1,000-yard rusher since Wilbert Montgomery more than a decade ago.

Walker has also taken pressure off quarterback Randall Cunningham, who led the team in rushing for four straight seasons until missing all of last year with a knee injury. Cunningham, who's completed 75 percent of his passes, has run just 12 times for 37 yards in wins over New Orleans and Phoenix, so the anticipated scrambling duel may not materialize.

Detroit (1-1) at Washington (1-1)

Another replay of a big game — in this case, last year's NFC championship game.

The Redskins won that one 41-10 and also beat the Lions 45-0 at RFK during the regular season, a combined total of 86-10.

It should be closer this time.

Washington lost Darrell Green for the regular season with a broken arm against Atlanta last Sunday, making their corners even more vulnerable than they looked against Dallas.

New Orleans (1-1) at Atlanta (1-1)

Yes, these guys do play each other all the time — the Falcons won two of three last year, including one in the playoffs. But this is the first time the Saints go to the Georgia Dome.

New Orleans finally woke up in the second half against Chicago last week, scoring on passes of 52 and 72 yards by Bobby Hebert. Normally, it takes the Saints 10 minutes to go that far.

Tampa Bay (2-0) at Minnesota (1-1)

The last time the Bucs started 2-0 was 1979, when they reached the NFC title game.

Sam Wyche seems to have totally resurrected Vinny Testaverde, who looks like he did at the University of Miami a half-dozen years ago — he was 22 of 25 for 363 yards in a 31-3 win over Green Bay last week. Maybe that's because he's wearing orange pants for the first time since then.

NFL This Week

Dennis Green's Vikings, who outscored their opposition 140-6 in four exhibition wins, came down to earth last week in their 31-17 loss to the Lions.

Cincinnati (2-0) at Green Bay (0-2)

More new coaches, going in opposite directions.

To everyone's surprise, Dave Shula is staying ahead of his dad — beating the Raiders in overtime last week. A lot of credit goes to defensive coordinator Ron Lynn, who's making up for personnel deficiencies on defense with his gambling and blitzing.

Mike Holmgren, who came from San Francisco, has encountered culture shock in Green Bay, where he's discovered that he may have to tear down before he rebuilds.

New York Giants (0-2) at Chicago (1-1) (Monday night)

Did the Giants' season turn around in the second half against Dallas, when they came within six points of the greatest comeback ever — turning a 34-0 deficit into a 34-28 loss?

Maybe — if Carl Banks and Pepper Johnson, who led a locker room revolt against Ray Handley at halftime, stay as head coaches. Handley says the Giants will go back to their old defense rather than the complicated schemes installed by Rod Rust.

But they'll do it without their two best linemen — Erik Howard and Leonard Marshall, both injured against the Cowboys.

San Francisco (1-1) at New York Jets (0-2)

The Jets, who had hoped to be 2-0 going into this game are now on the verge of 0-3 and Jeff Lageman, their best defensive player, is out for the year with a knee injury. Ken O'Brien will start for Browning Nagle, out with a bruised index finger and all O'Brien did in relief last week was complete all four of his passes — three to the Steelers.

The 49ers are unhappy with their defense following the 34-31 shootout with Buffalo last week, although it's hard to see what they could have done to avoid matchups like linebacker Bill Romanowski covering Thurman Thomas.

Los Angeles Rams (1-1) at Miami (1-0)

Two worlds: the Rams go to Buffalo and allow 40 points, then come home and shut out New England.

Now they continue their AFC East schedule (they get the Jets next week) in Joe Robbie Stadium against the last team to play a game this season. In fact, Miami looked so bored in taking a 20-3 lead over the Browns Monday night that they almost blew the game, leaving Dan Marino to pull out the 27-23 win.

The Rams' 14-0 win over the Patriots was their first in 11 months, their first in 11 games and their first since 1977 with Chuck Knox as head coach.

Pittsburgh (2-0) at San Diego (0-2)

Two new coaches whose NFL careers have started out in opposite directions.

Is Bill Cowher's enthusiasm that contagious or are the Steelers that good? This can be a good reality check against the Chargers, who outplayed Denver in a 21-13 loss on the road last week and can bang people around.

Bobby Ross, meanwhile, has had another week to install his offense into quarterback Stan Humphries, who joined the Chargers just a month ago. A lot of it is handing off to Marion Butts and Rod Bernstine, probably the best rushing tandem on a winless team in the NFL.

Barry Foster, on the other hand, may be the best running back on an unbeaten team — he had 190 yards against the Jets last week.

Cleveland (0-2) at Los Angeles Raiders (0-2)

Then there are Eric Dickerson and Marcus Allen, perhaps the only two future Hall of Famers at running back on a winless team. The Raiders are 0-2 for only the third time in 28 years, ensuring that Al Davis scowling from the press box gets on all the highlight films and leading coach Art Shell to say:

"The ball just isn't bouncing for us."

Last week it didn't bounce in the 24-21 overtime loss in Cincinnati — fumbles by Tim Brown going in for a touchdown and Dan Land on the opening kickoff of overtime killed the Raiders. So Shell, will replace Jay Schroeder, whose 380 yards were the third best total in team history, by Todd Marinovich.

Indianapolis (1-1) at Buffalo (2-0) (Sunday night)

Ted Marchibroda, who ran the no-huddle offense for the Bills, now runs into it as the Colts' new head coach. He may know how to defense it, but that doesn't mean he has the manpower to stop Jim Kelly, Andre Reed, Thurman Thomas and friends.

Marchibroda would just like to have Frank Reich, Kelly's backup. With Jeff George out and Jack Trudeau a question mark, he's down to Tom Tupa.

The Bills, meanwhile, may have the AFC East locked away before Thanksgiving — their schedule doesn't get very tough until the final three games, when it probably won't matter.

Seattle (0-2) at New England (0-1)

Seattle looks like one of those teams that could be in the race for the first pick in next year's draft — if there is one.

So far they've scored 10 points and allowed 47 in two games, although the 10 points are 10 more than New England has — its played only once and lost 14-0 to the Rams last week, largely because of offensive line problems.

Bugel not mute about Cowboys

Associated Press

■ Phoenix at Dallas, 3 p.m., CBS (cable channel 8).

IRVING — The key for the Dallas Cowboys as the Phoenix Cardinals come to town today is avoiding a big head.

Listen to Phoenix coach Joe Bugel:

"The teams playing the best football in the NFC East are the Dallas Cowboys and the Philadelphia Eagles. They'll take it right down to the final day.

"We'll have to play nearly perfect in all three phases (offense, defense, kicking game) to compete. The Cowboys have as good a front four as anybody in the NFL. They also have the best punt-blocking team in the NFL."

Phoenix will be without starting quarterback Timm Rosenbach, out with an injured shoulder sustained last week. Chris Chandler will start.

The Cowboys aced the Cardinals last year, winning 27-9 and 27-7.

"Everything about Dallas bothers me," Bugel said. "But (defensive end) Charles Haley is playing the best football I've seen him play in a long time. He gives Dallas a pass rush it has been missing."

Dallas is 2-0, with victories over defending Super Bowl champion Washington and the New York Giants, while Phoenix is 0-2, with losses to Tampa Bay and Philadelphia. The Cowboys can open 3-0 for the first time since 1983.

The Cowboys' seven consecutive victories in regular-season games is the longest current streak in the NFL. The Cardinals have lost 10 in a row, the longest losing streak.

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said the Cowboys shouldn't have a problem with overconfidence because of what happened in New York last week, when his team almost blew a 34-0 lead before winning 34-28.

"If we had finished that game at halftime, then getting the team up for the Cardinals might have been a chore," Johnson said. "I think that experience will allow us to get the team ready."

"The Giants game will serve as a good lesson for us," said Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman. "It shows you can never lose your intensity in an NFL game. I think we lost it against the Giants. We sort of thought the game was over."

The Cowboys' Emmitt Smith, leading NFL rusher in 1991, is tied with Philadelphia's Herschel Walker with 229 yards going into the third week of the season.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

When Kuwaiti oil wells were set on fire, Texans were soon on the scene. Oil firefighters battled intense heat, soaring desert temperatures, spewing oil and billowing smoke.

All the drama of their fight to cap 649 wells — burning or blowing out of control — is captured in "Fire and Smoke: The Kuwait Oil Well Fires."

"Fire and Smoke," an exhibit of 32 photographs, went on display Saturday at the Petroleum Museum.

The photographs in the exhibit depict some of the wells that

Marshal seeks posse at United Way kickoff

■ The United Way kickoff will be led by Jess Parrish at 11:30 a.m. Wednesday at the Midland Center.

Staff report

"Marshal" Jess Parrish will be coming to town to round up members for his posse to go after "the Hopeless Gang" on Wednesday as the United Way of Midland kicks off its 1992-93 campaign. The goal is to raise $2,755,000.

This year's theme is "How the West is Won . . . The United Way," and Parrish is serving as campaign chairman.

Wednesday's kickoff will be from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Midland Center. It is open to the public, and the lunch is $7 per person, paid in advance, and $9 at the door. Reservations may be made by calling Barbra Phillip at United Way, 682-4358.

Assisting Parrish at the kickoff will be emcee Bill "Billy the Kidder" Dinges of Exxon Co., USA.

The kickoff will feature skits by the 32 pilot companies that have already conducted their campaigns and have been scouting Midland County for sight of the Hopeless Gang. During pilot kickoff, Hunger and Abuse kidnapped Tesa Truehart in their effort to wipe out United Way and whisked her away to their headquarters, the location of which is unknown. Other members of the gang include Hopelessness, Drugs and Illiteracy.

Giving Parrish an extra boost in his search for the Hopeless Gang is a $100,000 challenge match grant. Each new dollar or additional amount over last year's contribution will be matched. Money raised in the campaign goes to the 17 United Way agencies.

The amount raised by the following pilot companies will be announced at Wednesday's kickoff: Carriage Co. Police nab man in shooting spree

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Squealing tires, gunshots and an explosion of glass — during an attempted murder in progress — shattered an otherwise peaceful evening for residents in the 1700 block of Pine and Oak streets.

One suspect pursued another vehicle and fired numerous times on the occupants of the vehicle, which was filled with children and adults.

The altercations ended at Tilden and Scharbauer Streets, near Viola Coleman High School, when police arrested Larry Barber, 30, and charged him with attempted murder.

"It was just another peaceful Saturday night. We were out in the backyard cooking barbecue. Our kids and other kids in the neighborhood were playing on the sidewalks. Then we heard gunshots, screams and all hell broke loose," said one resident of the 1700 block of Pine Street.

The woman declined to identify herself, saying, "This is a retaliation kind of thing."

About 8 p.m. several residents on Lincoln, Oak and Pine Streets, said they ran out into their front yards after hearing gunshots to see a four-door late '70s model blue Chevrolet pursuing a maroon late-model import.

Some young boys saw a hail of glass fly from one of the cars and another witness said it appeared a 4-year-old boy had been

Heart Association hosts Heart Walk

Staff report

Hundreds of Midlanders will be participating in the American Heart Association's Heart Walk Saturday at Angel Stadium beginning at 9:30 a.m.

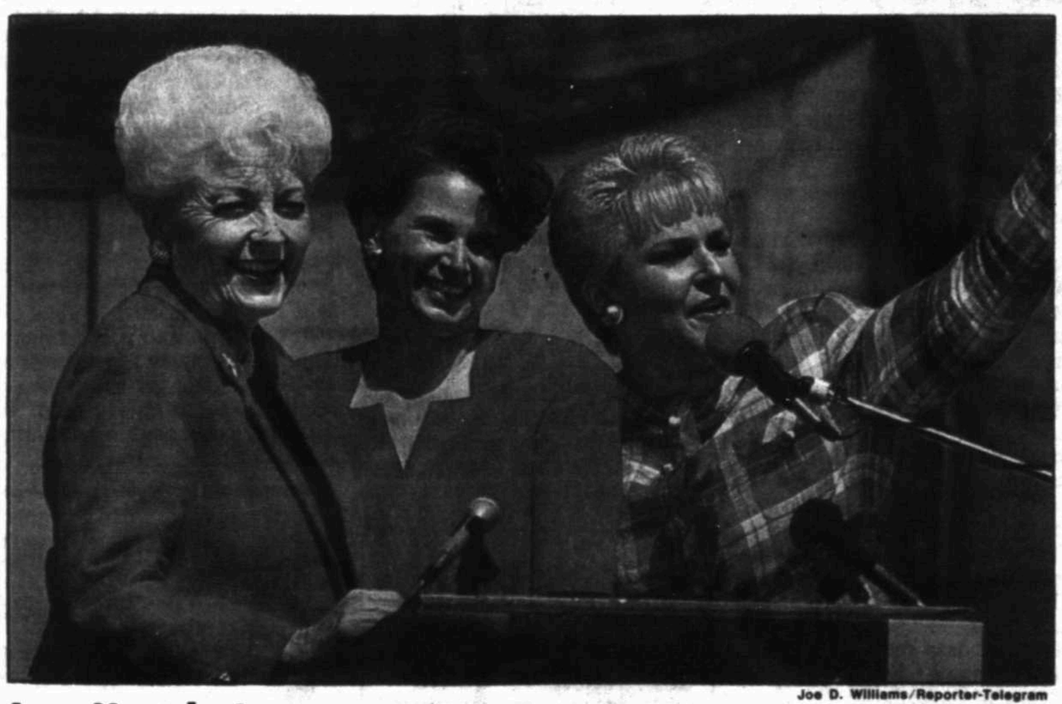

The walk is one of hundreds nationwide to help fund cardiovascular research and community education programs. The walk culminates a week of activities by the Midland chapter of the AHA.

Monday, the 8th Annual American Heart Association Food Festival will be kicked off with a heart healthy luncheon to be held at the Plaza Club. Heart healthy food will be prepared by Chef Andre. Dr. Brian Mohr will also speak. Approximately 100 people are expected at the luncheon, according to Sue Stainbrook, regional director of the AHA.

Midland schools will feature heart-healthy menus during the week, and groups from two Midland senior centers, who have developed a skit on eating healthy, will perform at Midland elementary schools.

Approximately 400 Midlanders will participate in the Heart Walk, a five-kilometer (3.1-mile) walk that begins and ends at Angel Stadium.

Stainbrook said this is the first year the walk has been nationwide. The local walk will be led by Lisa Barker of KODM-FM, one of the local sponsors. Nationally, the walk has been underwritten by Lederle Laboratories.

GARY OTT

The sensitive man takes back seat to angry fist

The headline screamed: "Era of Sensitive Man is Dead."

I did a doubletake. Then I showed the article to a friend who normally knows about stuff like this.

He looked at it, smiled ever so slightly and said, "It's about time."

Ott

"What do you mean?" I said. "Weren't you a sensitive man?"

"For about three years," he said. "Then I had to give it up."

"Why? I thought that's what women wanted . . . and needed."

"Perhaps," he said. "But, frankly, it got to be too much work. In the end, it wore me out."

"Explain yourself."

"Well, if you must know, it all started with Alan Alda," my friend sighed. "For some reason, women took a liking to him because he would sit around with them for hours, listening to their problems and career plans. Sometimes — and this is really difficult to comprehend — he would even act interested in their ideas for redecorating the den. This behavior, quite naturally, led women to believe that he actually cared about what they were saying."

"Didn't he?"

"Who knows? But the point is, they thought he did. One thing led to another, and before you knew it, women everywhere were expecting their man to be interested in their feelings. Thus, began the dreaded Era of the Sensitive Man."

"Gee, I didn't know any of this," I said.

"That's because you're not a student of human nature," he said.

Maybe he had a point. I continued my questioning.

"Besides acting interested in different shades of wallpaper, what else did the sensitive man have to do?"

"Whine," he said. "No doubt about it, whining became an integral part of the male makeup. Suddenly, it was OK for him to whine about his job, whine about his past failures, even whine about his inadequacies in bed."

"Good heavens!" I exclaimed.

"It's true. There was a time, and it wasn't that long ago, when women actually enjoyed seeing the vulnerable side of a man. It meant he had feelings."

I was speechless.

"In fact," my friend continued, "feelings became something of a code word during the sensitive era. Women would constantly say things like, 'What are you feeling right now?' Or 'When I say you are cramping my ability to grow, how does that make you feel?' "

He had hit a nerve. Flashbacks began dancing across my brain.

"I do remember those questions," I said. "Especially the last one."

He smiled knowingly and asked, "And, what did you do when she said you were restricting her ability to grow?"

I put my fist through the wall and cursed loudly.

"A-ha," he said, leaning back in the chair and crossing his legs. "That proves you weren't sensitive. You were supposed to apologize for smothering her. Then you should have encouraged her to leave you so she could experience the personal growth needed to become a well-rounded woman."

"But I didn't want her to leave."

"Doesn't matter," he said. "As a sensitive man, your only concern should have been for her to reach her full potential as a human being. That's what Alan Alda would have done."

"In other words," I said, "I should have put my personal desires aside and supported her decision, no matter how much pain it caused me?"

"Precisely," he said. "Then when she left, you would have been free to mope around your apartment and whine about the unfairness of life. Better yet, when you met someone new, you could have whined to her about how much you had been hurt when the first woman left you, and how, despite that pain, you were able to use the loss to get better in touch with your true feelings."

There was a brief silence. Then, watching as my mind slowly began to click, he said, "So, as you can plainly see, had you played your cards right, you could have used your earlier loss to impress the second woman. It would have been a double-whammy of sorts."

"But it seems so cheap."

"Perhaps," he said. "But that's the way the game was played back then. I didn't make the rules; Alan Alda did."

"Let me see if I have this straight," I said. "In order to be a successful sensitive male I would have had to talk about wallpaper, whine a lot and encourage my best girl to leave me."

"That pretty much sums it up."

"But the article says that the era is over and done with."

"That's right."

"Now what do I have to do?"

"Put a fist through the wall and curse loudly."

"I can do that."

Perot costs Bush votes, Brown says

FORT WORTH (NYT) — Stumping for state candidates and trying to energize the party's voter registration efforts, National Democratic Party Chairman Ron Brown said yesterday that Ross Perot's mercurial presidential candidacy steals more votes from President Bush in Texas than it does from Democratic candidate Bill Clinton.

"The Clinton-Gore message has been resonating well with those supporters because those who supported Ross Perot don't like the status quo," Brown said. "There is no way in the world that they can support George Bush."

On Friday, Perot's name was on the ballot in all 50 states when Arizona became the last state to submit his name for the ballot. The Dallas billionaire also continues to do well in state and national polls.

Perot has held out the possibility he might get back into the race if the candidates don't address the national debt issue to his satisfaction.

Political analysts have said any kind of presence by Perot, who has been an outspoken critic of the Bush administration, will be as a spoiler candidate who will drain from the president's support in Texas and elsewhere.

Texas Republican Party officials have said that most of the undecided Perot voters probably were more likely to support Bush than Clinton.

As a result, the state GOP earlier this month announced it was sending 200,000 pieces of direct mail to Perot supporters in Fort Worth and Dallas. A second installment aimed at everyone who signed his petitions will come after that.

Not to be outdone, Democratic officials said they have actively reached out to Perot's backers and would soon target them in television, radio and direct mail efforts.

"Obviously, we are not going to sit on our hands," Brown said. "We are going to continue with some radio and some television and some mail pieces specifically targeted to them. We are going to continue to reach out to Perot supporters, not only in Texas but all over this country."

Brown and House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt also campaigned for the Democratic ticket in what is the heart of Perot country on Saturday.

"Texas is always one of the big battleground states," Gephardt said. "It is one of the big four — California, New York, Florida and Texas. Obviously, both campaigns want to win as many of those big states as they can.

"I think it is a very competitive race in Texas. I think Bill Clinton is a little bit ahead, but it is tight. Texas is a very important state to the Democrats."

In defending Clinton's economic blueprint for the country from Perot's criticism, Brown said it is a specific and realistic deficit reduction plan that would turn the nation's economy around.

He said Clinton's plan, which calls for increased taxation on the wealthy coupled with budget cuts, would reduce the nation's massive deficit by one-half in the first four years. Severe budget cuts and tax increases are in Perot's prescription for repairing the nation's economy.

"It is not as bitter a pill for the American people as the Perot plan," Brown said. "I think it is a more realistic pill for the American to accept. It does attack the deficit ... it is much closer to the Perot plan than the George Bush non-plan."

Texas, and particularly Tarrant County with its hard hit defense industry and sagging economy, is increasingly playing a crucial role in the presidential strategies of the Democrats and Republicans.

Woman says pair tricked her, took her baby

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A 25-year-old woman says her newborn boy was kidnapped by two women who tricked her into having a delivery by Caesarean section at a clinic in Matamoros, Mexico.

U.S. authorities haven't confirmed that the crime occurred, however.

Larua Lugo said the two women, who are sisters, befriended her about six months ago. On Sept. 1, when Lugo was 8½ months pregnant, the three women went shopping together, she said.

The sisters, who claimed to be pregnant, suggested that they go to a clinic in Matamoros for checkups, she said.

Lugo said when she arrived at the clinic, nurses started giving her tranquilizers. She asked why she was being tranquilized, and one of the sisters told her it was necessary for a routine checkup, she said.

No one said anything about surgery, Lugo said.

"Next thing I knew they were cutting me up ... they were doing a cesarian section and I had a baby boy," she said.

About an hour later, a nurse who had gone to bring her the boy said one of the sisters had taken him away.

The case is difficult for U.S. authorities to investigate because the alleged kidnapping took place in Mexico, said Lt. Randy Dunn, the head of the Criminal Investigations Division of the Brownsville Police Department.

Brownsville detectives are helping the FBI to investigate, he said.

Lugo told The Brownsville Herald that Dunn had told her he had trouble believing her story. But Dunn declined to comment on Lugo's credibility.

"Obviously, she was pregnant. Obviously there was a baby born," Dunn said.

One of the sisters and another woman were arrested Wednesday night on robbery charges, stemming from an incident in which the two women allegedly assaulted Lugo's sister over the lost baby.

FIRES: Amateurs, professionals took photos

(From 1C)

Texas and Canadian blowout specialists faced in Kuwait following Saddam Hussein's sabotage.

Hussein and the Iraqi Army sabotaged the wells on the heels of the 1990-91 Persian Gulf War; 649 of Kuwait's 930 oil wells were set on fire or were blowing out of control.

It was a sight Odessan Ace Barnes of Boots & Coots will never forget. "Five blowouts at once were the most anyone had ever seen up to that point — nothing like what was in Kuwait," Barnes said as he viewed the exhibit.

"I spent 25 days working on the biggest well — which was producing 40-55 barrels a day — before I was relieved by a crew who worked another 13 days to get it under control," Barnes said.

He said that as much time was spent on trying to put out acres of grass fires surrounding the wells, just to get to the wells. "One well was surrounded by a 200-acre ground fire," he said.

Barnes noted that some of the photos — which appeared to be taken at night — were taken at midday.

"Some friends who were in Kuwait said they drove around with their headlights in midday since the smoke made it pitch dark," said Mike Shellman of San Marcos, an independent oil and gas producer who owns the collection of photos on display.

The photos were taken by some men on the scene as well as by professional photographers on assignment from various magazines.

"I've been involved in a number of blowouts and these pictures show the extent of the devastation," Shellman said. He said the collection is unique for having some photographs taken by amateurs and oil firefighters.

Also on exhibit are the tin hardhats and a pair of long-sleeved overalls the firefighters wore. The display includes descriptions of the items and tidbits such as "in spite of intense desert heat, oil well fighters wore long flannel underwear, several T-shirts, long-sleeve cotton overalls and a cotton sweater ... the more clothing a firefighter can place between his skin and the well fire, the closer he can get to the fire."

The display also informs viewers that a typical plastic hardhat "would melt in a matter of minutes" at a well fire.

One photo depicts dual images of a burning well and its reflection in a pristine lake. Some onlookers were amazed to find out that the lake was a lake of oil.

"What a waste," one grade-school student said while looking on.

In fact, one display at the exhibit estimates that more than 100 million barrels of oil are "waiting to be vacuumed up" — a hazardous job since some of oil lakes are resting on unexploded Iraqi mines.

Another display — which intrigued several young science buffs — explains the process of using dynamite to quench oil fires.

One woman said some of the photos had a real surreal quality about them. "They are beautiful, but frightening," she said.

"Fire and Smoke" will be on display through October at the Petroleum Museum, 1500 Interstate 20 West.

Exhibit owner Mike Shellman and David Thompson, a firefighter with Boots & Coots Inc., will present an evening lecture Oct. 21. It will be open to the public. For information, call 683-4403.

Parents settle civil suit over son's death

COLORADO CITY (AP) — Parents of a 27-year-old man who was fatally shot by a part-time policeman four years ago apparently have settled their civil suit against Colorado City.

Macario Gomez and Minerva Gomez had sought damages "in excess of $10,000," alleging a violation of their son's civil rights.

Officer Billy Ray Williamson shot and killed Sammy Gomez on May 13, 1988, while attempting to arrest him on a sexual assault charge.

U.S. District Judge Sam R. Cummings signed an order in Abilene's federal court Sept. 11 stating that "the parties have indicated to the court that they have settled this case."

Terms of the reported settlement were not disclosed.

The judge's order came only one week after he had set a Jan. 4, 1993, trial date for the civil lawsuit. Attorneys have 30 days from the date of the order to file papers necessary to dismiss the case.

Williamson insisted he shot Gomez in self defense. He said he shot Gomez three times as he lunged at the officer with a knife, and a Mitchell County grand jury refused to indict him.

Representatives of the League of United Latin American Citizens sought a federal grand jury investigation, alleging that the Gomez family was being harassed and that justice would not be served by Mitchell County grand juries and investigators.

LULAC also hired El Paso County Medical Examiner Juan Contin to give his opinion of an autopsy performed by Dr. Patrick-Besant Matthews, deputy chief of the Southwest Institute of Forensic Science in Dallas.

After studying the autopsy report, Contin concluded that when the first two bullets were fired, Gomez was not holding a knife and was in the process of turning away from the officer.

Contin concluded that the third and fatal shot was inflicted when Gomez was "on or near the floor, face down."

shot in the arm.

But according to police reports, Able Sosa sustained injuries from shattering glass and was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital. He was in good condition late Saturday evening and was expected to be treated and released, according to a nurse supervisor.

Barber is suspected of shooting at the car Able and other children occupied. Victor Lopez, 30, of 1703 E. Pine, was riding in the car with Able, and was slightly injured, but not transported to the hospital.

Following the altercation at Lincoln and Oak, the victims pursued Barber and were shot at again on Tilden Street.

After Barber was apprehended, police officers announced on the radio they were tracing the route to pinpoint where the last round had been fired to try and locate a weapon.

Barber was not expected to appear before a justice of the peace to have bond set on the attempted murder charges until this morning.

Re-employment seminar scheduled for Thursday

Staff report

U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, in conjunction with the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission and the Texas Employment Commission, is sponsoring a Re-Employment Assistance Information seminar from 10 a.m. to noon Thursday.

It will be held at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification, located at the intersection of State Highway 191 and Farm-to-Market Road 1788.

Guest speakers will be Preston Murray and Eloy Rodriquez from the Department of Labor in Dallas. Also, Harry Crawford, the state coordinator of the Texas Employment Commission, will be a featured speaker.

The seminar is in response to numerous inquiries displaced workers have directed to Smith, a Smith aide said. "The objective is to inform constituents about re-employment programs and allowances that are available to the displaced worker due to imports of foreign goods or products."

Local representatives from the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, Texas Employment Commission and J.T.P.A. will be in attendance to assist participants with their individual needs.

Consultant: Opponent waits to release Guerrero's record

DALLAS (AP) — A political consultant for Texas Railroad Commission candidate Barry Williamson says the campaign carefully timed the release of information saying opponent Lena Guerrero's academic record had been misrepresented.

The Railroad Commission chairwoman has spent the past week answering questions about revelations that she didn't graduate from the University of Texas as some campaign literature had claimed.

This week, she made public grade transcripts showing a C-plus average and that she was 19 hours of class work short of the 120 needed for a degree in journalism.

Karl Rove, a consultant for Williamson, told The Dallas Morning News in Saturday's editions that the campaign had the information months ago.

Ms. Guerrero also had amassed a $1 million campaign war chest — almost five times what Williamson had to spend. That's when the Williamson decided to spread the word about Guerrero's education.

"So our sense was that we were getting to a crucial juncture where we needed to do something to cut off her money and to do something before the editorials got locked in. And to do something to elevate our fundraising," Rove said.

"These things are deadly. Some people will forgive you your policy view, no matter what it is; few people will forgive faking your resume or lying about who you are or what you've accomplished."

The information was passed to the Morning News last week. The newspaper, along with others around the state, broke the story.

According to the Morning News, the bombshell was primed to explode 18 months ago, when Ms. Guerrero was named by the University of Texas-Exes Association as one of its outstanding young alumna.

Before the awards ceremony in May 1991, the association ran a check of her degree status and learned that she hadn't earned one.

Attorneys negotiate plea bargain for pathologist accused of theft

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors and attorneys for West Texas pathologist Ralph Erdmann, indicted in two counties on charges of theft by a public servant and falsifying autopsy reports, are negotiating a plea bargain.

Authorities across West Texas have said they suspect wrongdoing in dozens of other cases. Erdmann has denied the accusations.

Dickens County District Attorney Becky McPherson on Friday told the Lubbock Avalanche Journal that she and prosecutors from Hockley County and the state attorney general's office will meet Monday with defense attorney Travis Shelton.

"We don't have anything definite yet," Ms. McPherson said. "We'll get together with the other counties and try to figure something out. We'll meet Monday, but I don't know if we'll get it wrapped up then."

Another Erdmann attorney, John Montford, said he couldn't comment on the negotiations, saying only "just be ready for something to happen on Monday."

Rod Hobson, president of Lubbock Criminal Defense Lawyers Association, said he objects to what he called "secret" plea bargaining.

"We're not opposed to probation in a case like this because of his age and his knowledge of wrongdoing by others," Hobson said. "But before probation should be considered, Erdmann should agree to a complete disclosure of his perjured testimony and relationships with prosecutors in West Texas.

"We feel like the integrity of the judicial system is at stake, and the public has a right to know the details of why and how this plea bargain is being done," Hobson said.

Family shares story of lost daughter

■ Parents of an AIDS victim share their daughter's death with a university paper in hopes of saving other lives.

Associated Press

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas — Douglas and Mary Juanita Griffin are sharing their story of loss, hoping it will spare someone else from the agony of AIDS.

The couple's 24-year-old daughter, Shana Ann, died in July of meningitis due to the acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which she was diagnosed as having only seven days before her death.

Their daughter's death moved the Griffins to write a letter to students at Texas A&I University, where Shana Griffin had been a student, telling them of the family's misfortune and urging them to be tested for AIDS.

The letter was published last week in the school newspaper, The South Texan.

"As naive as I was about the HIV-AIDS disease, I was sure that other people were, too," Douglas Griffin told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

"If I could get it across to other students, or anybody who reads the paper — if they take precautions, maybe we'll save somebody," he said. "It's a great loss to my family. But — and I'm sure Shana would feel the same way — if we can help somebody, it will be worth the little bit of extra effort."

The Griffins particularly want to warn people who are sexually active to take precautions and get tested for HIV, the virus that causes AIDS.

Shana Griffin was ill for several months before she was ever tested.

In March, she began complaining of weight loss and a lack of appetite. When she did eat, she had diarrhea and vomiting.

By the end of June, she was emaciated, said her sister, Linda Mason.

"She didn't have any muscles, nothing," said Ms. Mason. " 'I said, Mom, the girl's dying. Take her to the hospital.' "

Shana Griffin's physical condition worsened and despite visits to doctors in Corpus Christi, Kingsville and Aransas Pass, her illness remained undiagnosed.

It wasn't until July 6 that doctors learned the young woman had AIDS.

Seven days later she was dead.

Her story illustrates society's resistance to moving past stereotypes about who is vulnerable to AIDS, said Judy Hales, director of the Coastal Bend AIDS Foundation.

"I think it says a lot that a white, heterosexual female was having medical problems for more than a year and saw several different doctors and was never tested for the HIV virus," said Ms. Hales.

Shana Griffin's death may be altering that. The foundation's AIDS hotline received an increase in calls from Texas A&I students immediately after her death, said Ms. Hales.

Lamar's chancellor to resign in scandal

HOUSTON (AP) — Lamar University Chancellor George McLaughlin, who has been under fire from students and teachers in recent weeks, will resign by the end of the year, but he will keep his $124,000 salary in another job.

McLaughlin, 57, announced his resignation plans at a campus news conference Friday.

Although he didn't answer questions, he did say that "unlike that solider in Gen. (Douglas) MacArthur's ballad, I will not just fade away."

Shortly after his announcement, the board of regents met and unanimously approved a deal to make McLaughlin director of the school's John Gray Institute with the same annual salary he received as chancellor through August 1993. The previous director's salary was $105,000.

McLaughlin, who has worked at Lamar for 33 years, has been under attack for firing an interim university president who claimed McLaughlin ordered him to make an illegal payment to a college coach. The chancellor has denied that claim.

John Idoux, former Lamar-Beaumont vice president and interim president, filed a lawsuit Sept. 1, against McLaughlin and the university's regents. Idoux claimed he was forced to illegally pay $10,100 to former women's basketball coach Al Barbre.

Barbre left Lamar in May 1991 amid a National Collegiate Athletics Association investigation that some players received illegal benefits. McLaughlin said the payment was part of a settlement with Barbre.

Faculty members at the Beaumont and Orange campuses, academic deans, directors of the Lamar Alumni Association and representatives of the student government association all have passed resolutions of no confidence in McLaughlin and the regents, and they have asked McLaughlin to resign.

5th U.S. Circuit Court upholds death sentence

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal appeals court has upheld the death sentence of a Houston man convicted of the 1975 murder-for-hire of his adoptive mother.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Thursday let stand the conviction and death sentence for Markham Duff-Smith.

Duff-Smith, 45, a former investor, hired two men to kill his parents to inherit their $800,000 estate. Gertrude Zabolio, his adoptive mother, was strangled with her pantyhose. His father was out of town at the time of the attack.

The appeals court rejected defense claims that a key witness, Jerry Sol Eikenhorst, had been "an agent of the state" when he testified Duff-Smith had scripted testimony he wanted Harris County jail inmates to give at the trial.

Court records said Duff-Smith was unhappy because his mother would not give him more money to maintain his lavish lifestyle. Her death originally was thought to have been a suicide after two notes were found at the scene.

Last April, Allen Wayne Janecka, 42, was indicted on a capital murder charge in Mrs. Zabolio's death.

Janecka also had been sentenced to die for the 1979 murder of Duff-Smith's 14-month-old adoptive nephew, Kevin Wanstrath. The child and his parents, Diana and John Wanstrath, all were killed in the incident.

Janecka's conviction was overturned in 1987, after he spent six years on death row.

Rising star of Richards' 'New Texas' picks up tarnish

By Joe Cutbirth
N.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN — Texas Railroad Commissioner Lena Guerrero's meteoric rise came to a crashing end last week, leaving the brightest star in Gov. Ann Richards' "New Texas" tarnished and teetering on political burnout.

Throughout her career, Guerrero has relished the spotlight. The light got a little too bright recently, however, when her acknowledgment that she did not graduate from the University of Texas at Austin set off a series of potentially devastating revelations.

As last week unfolded, Texans learned that not only had Guerrero not graduated, as her biographies said, she also was not a member of the prestigious Phi Beta Kappa society as some of her literature had stated. In addition, she was not four hours short of graduation as she had told reporters. She was, in fact, 19 hours short. A college transcript that she released also showed she had flunked five courses, one of them twice.

But the most telling blow may have been videotapes of Guerrero speaking at recent college commencements, reminiscing about an event that never took place: her own college commencement.

This is not the way it was supposed to be for the Mission native. As a young state lawmaker, she fought for open government, billing herself as a champion of ethics. Most recently, she has been crisscrossing the state as Richards' hand-picked protege.

FOR 10 YEARS, Guerrero paid her political dues. This year, she was supposed to reap the rewards.

"What I've achieved isn't just about being female or Hispanic. It's about working hard and coming a long way to attain one's goals," she wrote in a letter to supporters this spring.

Democrats hoping for a Bill Clinton victory in the Lone Star State had counted on Guerrero as an Election Day lure for the heavy turnout they need to win in South Texas. Along the way, Guerrero had been handed a prime-time speaking assignment at the Democratic National Convention. If she were to win her race against Republican Barry Williamson, Guerrero would make history by becoming the first Hispanic woman elected to statewide office.

Her candidacy is, at the very least, a midterm referendum on Richards' administration. In some circles it has been viewed as the unofficial starting point for Guerrero's own 1998 gubernatorial bid.

"She does represent hope for the future ... (and) basically, it's a setback," said Hilbert Ocanas, voter registration director for the Democratic National Committee.

"I think what we have to do and what she has to do is hunker down and look at these last 45 days and go through this hard time with her and her family."

THE RELEASE OF the college transcripts and commencement videos has stunned friends and longtime supporters. It has also cast a shadow on the Democratic Party's chances for winning Texas in November.

"She is one of the brightest people I've ever known. I think she just deluded herself," said former state Rep. Mary Jane Bode, a Democrat who gave Guerrero a job in 1977. Guerrero was then a freshman at the University of Texas.

Bode, one of Guerrero's early mentors, said she was like a daughter. The news that Guerrero might have embellished her resume has made her heartsick, Bode said.

"She was always scrambling to get her education, but she didn't have any family backup," Bode said. "She felt robbed of her father, who died when she was young, and always like she missed out. He evidently was a man she felt was a cut above and she wanted him to see her succeed."

Some who saw Guerrero as a role model — for women, Hispanics or both — are taking the events even harder.

"I think my reaction is hurt, not only for Lena but for the Hispanic community.... I'm not sure what to make of it (her statements)," said Gracie Saenz, elected in November to an at-large position on the Houston City Council.

"I LOOKED UP to Lena, (and) most of us in the community had felt she was doing an exemplary job and was a positive role model. Now her credibility has been questioned. ... It hurts," Saenz said.

How the revelations will affect Hispanic and female voters has become a hot topic in some state political circles. Democratic Party leaders, however, say the developments will have virtually no effect on their efforts to reach groups vital to their statewide coalition.

"Our efforts to expand our base ... is not limited to any one person," said Ed Martin, executive director of the Texas Democratic Party. "A lot of that is because of our record in dealing with issues that impact women and Hispanics, and the fact is, our efforts are far bigger than any one candidate."

Republicans see things quite differently.

"I am sure women and Hispanics both feel somewhat hurt by this and disappointed, because she was a role model," said Karen Hughes, executive director of the Texas GOP. "It's never a happy situation to have a role model turn out not to be what she represented herself to be."

Hughes said the largest potential benefit for Republicans is the possibility that disenchantment with Guerrero will break the traditional Democratic pattern of straight-ticket voting.

THE RAILROAD COMMISSION race is the first state office on the ballot, coming after president and U.S. representative.

"If Democrats get to the third place on the ballot and decide to vote for Barry Williamson as many are now saying they will, then it starts to split your ballot choices, and once you have gone over it makes it easier to pick the candidate down-ballot," Hughes said.

Guerrero's gaffes may convince some Hispanics to vote for Republican Williamson.

"(Hispanics) already are moving to us on issues like free trade, family values, and Clinton's further defense cut proposals," Hughes said. "This may help us make an even stronger appeal to Hispanic voters."

Ocanas, of the Democratic National Committee, said he believes the Hispanic community in South Texas will stand behind Guerrero. If that happens, he said, the Democrats will be in a good position to win Texas.

"If someone had told us we'd be this close in Texas a year ago, we would have said you're crazy, but part of that depends on a strong showing by Lena Guerrero," he said. "There are 45 days left, and in politics that will be a lifetime."

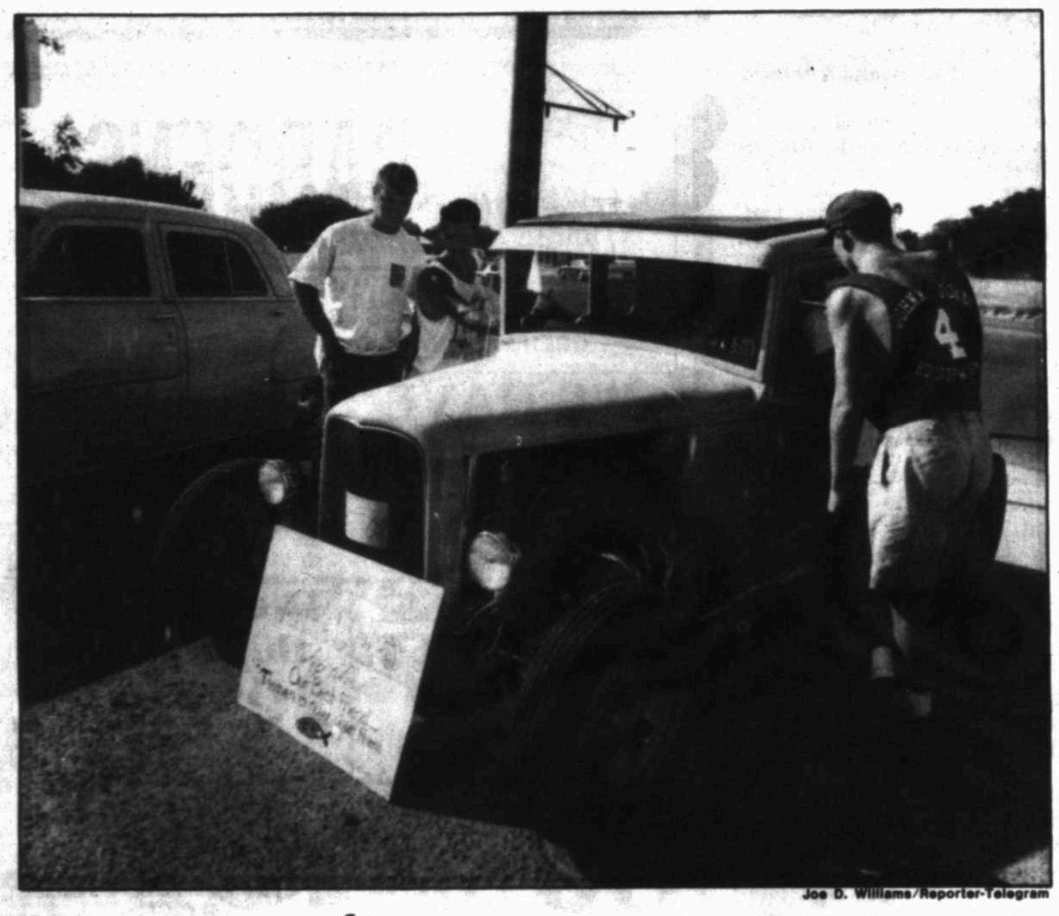

With six weeks remaining in the campaign and $1 million in the bank, Democratic stalwarts aren't ready to concede the commission race.

"THE EROSIVE EFFECT has been tough, but I think the real question is whether she is going to gut it out and how she is going about doing it," said Democratic consultant George Christian.

"There is no other option except to get out (among the voters), ask for forgiveness and run a very aggressive campaign," he said. "I think that is what she will do. That is her M.O. — the way she operates — and it's hard for me to believe that she will capitulate. That is not Lena, and it never has been."

Associates say that Guerrero has a history of weathering campaign attacks — as a candidate and campaign manager — by calling on her deep belief that government is a tool for bettering society.

"I think what is going to get Lena through all this is her faith in trying to make government do things to help people," said Richard Hamner, a longtime friend and former business associate.

College to offer classes for G.E.D. preparation

Staff report

Not being able to read or write is a tragedy. Midland College can cure illiteracy, language difficulties and the problems that come from not holding a high school diploma.

Classes both on-campus and off-campus start this week for those wishing to earn skills to pass the G.E.D. (General Equivalency Development) tests that equate to a high school diploma, along with English classes for those unable to read, write, or speak the language.

All the classes are free and have open admission.

"While some people are able to pass the five G.E.D. exams without preparation, most need some practice," said Cindy Turland, director of the MC Learning Skills Lab.

The Abell-Hanger Foundation of Midland annually provides scholarships to attend Midland College for a number of students with the highest pass rates after studying at the Skills Center.

Individualized instruction for G.E.D. students is available in Room 132 of the Occupational-Technical Building, Monday and Wednesday from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. and Tuesday and Thursday from 8 a.m.- 9 p.m.

Locales for other G.E.D. instruction are: Casa de Amigos, Monday and Wednesday, 6:30 - 9 p.m.; Bunche Elementary School, Tuesday and Thursday, noon - 2 p.m.; West Elementary School, Tuesday and Thursday, 9 a.m.- 11 a.m.; and Southeast Senior Citizens Center, Tuesday and Thursday, 9 - 11 a.m.

English As A Second Language classes are available at Casa de Amigos and Midland College.

For details about those classes, call Midland College, 685-4566.

Additional adult classes are scheduled to start in October at Midland College's new south campus, located at 200 W. Florida.

Counseling center to host Dave Dravecky

Staff report

Samaritan Counseling Center of West Texas will host an "Evening with Dave Dravecky" on Oct. 17 at the Confederate Air Force Hangar. Dravecky, a former major league baseball pitcher for the San Francisco Giants, will share his story on his battle with cancer.

Dravecky

Author of the Gold Medallion Award-winning book, "Comeback," Dravecky made an emotional return to baseball following his 1988 surgery to remove a malignant tumor from his left arm.

In August 1989, Dravecky pitched a one-hitter for seven innings of his first appearance back on the mound following the surgery. He led the Giants to a 4-3 win in that game.

Earlier, doctors had said he would never pitch again.

Dravecky served as an inspiration to millions of fans. Then tragedy struck again.

In the sixth inning of his next start, a bone snapped in his arm, forcing his retirement from baseball. Within a year, he learned that the cancer was back. A short time later, doctors removed his arm, shoulder and shoulder blade, as well as part of his collarbone.

But he continues to inspire others.

In his new book, "When You Can't Come Back," due out this month, he tells of his struggle to cope with retirement from baseball and living as an amputee.

Recognized for his continuing commitment to many Christian endeavors, especially the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, Dravecky has received the 1990 American Cancer Society's Courage Award, given by President Bush. He also received the Silvio O. Conte Award for Courage from the Vince Lombardi Foundation.

Proceeds from an "Evening with Dave Dravecky" will benefit the Samaritan Counseling Center of West Texas.

The evening will begin at 7:30 p.m. on Oct. 17 with a buffet dinner. Tickets for the event are $25 per person, or sponsorships with additional benefits are available.

Reservations can be made my mailing a check to Samaritan, P.O. Box 60312, Midland, Texas, 79711.

For additional information regarding sponsorships, call 563-4144.

Samaritan provides more than 6,000 hours of pastoral counseling to men, women and children in the Permian Basin each year.

At Samaritan, charges for counseling are negotiated with each new client, and are based on his or her ability to pay.

They are your family, your neighbors, your friends. They put their lives on the line to protect your life. Will you do as much?

College to make splash at United Way Bash

By H.A. Tuck

At least 14 Midland College employees are hoping for warm weather (and warm water) on Thursday for the second annual Midland College United Way Bash. Those 14 are the lucky persons selected by employees to sit on dunking booth boards for 30-minute periods. They'll be targets of other employees, students, and any others who wish to invest $1 for two throws at the target.

Tuck

Last year's targets included such notables as President David Daniel, VPs Bob Phillips and Camal Dakil, plus assorted other folks. But last year's event was held in November, when the hot water pumped into the tub made being dunked much preferable to sitting on the board in a wet suit.

There's been a lot of speculation about whether former president Jess Parrish would be a suitable target, since he's chairing this year's United Way campaign.

Session I of the 1992 College Classics series begins the week of Sept. 28, so persons interested have just one week to register.

College Classics was designed especially for mature students who want to stretch their brains with some short classes. The age limit for College Classics this year has been lowered from 55 to 50 years of age.

There are two sessions this fall, the first from Sept. 28 through Oct. 23, with 10 classes, and Session II from Oct. 26-Nov. 20, with 13 classes.

All the classes this fall are held in the afternoon, usually for an hour, although some meet for 90 minutes and some for two hours.

Registration is simple. Just come by the Continuing Education Office in the Administration Building or call 685-4518.

You can even register at the same time for Session I and Session II classes. During the spring, College Classics plans to offer three sessions, but the cost still will be just $25.

The second of seven Small Business Seminars is scheduled for 7-8:30 p.m. Tuesday in Meeting Room "A" of the Student Center.

Since each seminar is self-contained, you may attend each as a separate event.

This week's topic is Bookkeeping, to be presented by Mary E. Glenn, CPA. Cost of attending the remaining six programs will be $25 or you may attend any one of them for $5 each, payable at the door.

Topics for coming weeks are: Financial Statements, Financing Your Business, Worker's Compensation Issues, Payroll Issues, and Income Tax Topics. Call 685-4518 for more information or to reserve a spot in the seminar.

For the thousands of Midlanders who don't have high school diplomas, Midland College's Adult Education Classes in G.E.D. (General Educational Development) test preparation are open now ... and they are free. Students may receive individualized attention in the college's Adult Skills Center, Room 132 of the Occupational-Technical Building, from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday and Wednesday and 8 a.m.-9 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday. G.E.D. classes also are offered at Casa de Amigos on Monday and Wednesday from 6:30-9 p.m., at Bunche Elementary School from noon-2 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, and West Elementary School from 9 a.m.-11 a.m. Tuesday and Thursday, and at the Southeast Senior Citizens Center from 9 a.m.-11 a.m. on Tuesday and Thursday.

English As A Second Language classes at both Casa de Amigos and the MC Adult Skills Center start tomorrow.

In the near future, GED and ESL classes will be offered at the new MC facility at 200 W. Florida. Call 685-4566 for more information about any of these classes.

Outdoor enthusiasts should be especially interested in the Continuing Education courses starting this week. There are two sections on Hunter Safety, a class on Fly-fishing, and one on CPR and First Aid. Other classes include: Bookkeeping for Small Businesses, Travel Career Training, T-Shirt Painting, and Medical Spanish.

Register for any, or several, of these classes in the Continuing Education Department, Administration Building. Call 685-4518 for more information.

Oh yes, it's now possible for you to begin registration or seek special information for Continuing Education courses through Midland College's Cityline. Just call 560-2400, extension 1835, then line three and listen to the instructions.

Auditions set for MISD honor choir

Staff report

Auditions have been scheduled for the Midland Independent School District Honor Choir for fifth and sixth grade students.

"The goal of the MISD Honor Choir is to recognize musically outstanding fifth- and sixth-grade students, and to give these students an opportunity to develop their special talents through rehearsals and performances for the Midland community," said Grace Osadchuk, coordinator of fine arts.

New to this group will be an All Boys Select Choir and an All Girls Select Choir.

Auditioning students will sing "Are You Sleeping, Brother John?" for one of the secondary choir directors. No audience will be present at the auditions.

The auditions, to be held at Midland High School, are as follows:

Tuesday:
3:30 p.m.: DeZavala and South students.
4:30 p.m.: Milam and Pease students.
6:30 p.m.: Travis students.

Wednesday:
4 p.m.: Santa Rita and Houston students.
4:45 p.m.: Washington and Crockett students.

Thursday:
4 p.m.: Bowie, Emerson and Fannin students.
5:30 p.m.: Scharbauer and Rusk students.

The first rehearsal for the selected students will be at 4:15 p.m. Oct. 6, followed by a parents' meeting at 5:30 p.m. All rehearsals are scheduled for Tuesdays at 4:15 p.m. Rehearsal locations will be announced.

Paula Edwards of Lee High School and Kay Miller of Midland High School will direct the Elementary Honor Choir.

Officials seize $3.5 million in heroin

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — A Mexican national was ordered held without bond Saturday after his arrest in connection with the seizure of about $3.5 million worth of heroin, officials said.

Jose Cereceres-Loya, 37, who was living in Tyrone, N.M., was arrested Friday after U.S. Customs agents allegedly found 3½ pounds of heroin in a car he was driving at the Columbus port of entry.

The heroin was discovered inside aluminum tubes hidden in the gasoline tank.

Cereceres-Loya, during the arraignment Saturday before U.S. Magistrate Joe H. Galvan, was remanded to the custody of the U.S. Marshals Service to await a detention hearing, said Customs Service spokesman Roger Maier.

Bond set for man who terrorized elementary school

HOUSTON (AP) — A man accused of wounding two police officers in a shooting spree at his son's elementary school was ordered held on $90,000 bond Saturday.

Calvin Charles Bell, 44, was arraigned on two charges of attempted capital murder and three aggravated assault charges following the Friday morning shootings at Piney Point Elementary School.

Police said Bell, armed with two semiautomatic guns, four clips of ammunition, a combat knife and a can of Mace, opened fire at the southwest Houston school.

Terror-stricken children and teachers hid in classrooms, and some ran from the campus as the gunman walked through the school firing shots, but none was injured.

School officials said Bell was upset that his son, who is in the second grade, was not doing well in school. Family members also said Bell, an unemployed artist with no criminal record, recently stopped taking medication for depression.

"You can't know how bad we feel," Bell's brother, Benjamin, said.

His sister Evelyn told KTRK-TV that her brother was "one of the nicest persons," but she also said he was "a sick man and he has not slept in maybe a week."

During his court appearance Saturday morning, Bell said he had not slept for four years.

Meanwhile, David E. Dungan, 36, one of the Houston police officers wounded in the shootings was released Saturday afternoon from Ben Taub Hospital, said spokesman Roger Widmeyer.

Officer Lowell Neinast, 29, remained in fair condition at the hospital, but was declining all interviews, Widmeyer said.

"He's sitting up and doing quite well," Widmeyer said.

Neinast happened to be at the school to participate in a drug education program.

He usually conducted his drug awareness classes at the school on Wednesdays, working into the late afternoon. But school was dismissed at noon Wednesday for a teacher workshop, and Neinast returned Friday morning to finish.

Neinast was shot when he confronted the gunman. He then protected some children from a volley of bullets, suffering another gunshot wound in the process.

"Instead of firing back at the suspect he tried to get the kids to safety. He made himself a human shield," said Houston Police Department homicide Sgt. Larry Webber.

The gunman made his way to an outdoor building, where he shot Dungan before surrendering to police.

The shooting was the second at a Texas school in a week.

Midland College offers two sessions of College Classics

Staff report

Midland College is offering classes designed especially for those at least 50 years of age available through College Classics. The first of two sessions of College Classics for the fall term begins Sept. 28.

Session I offers 10 classes, while Session II has 13. Each class meets in the afternoon, usually for an hour during each of the four weeks. Some of the classes last up to two hours and a few meet twice weekly.

A single $25 enrollment fee allows attendance for one class or all classes in each session. Instructors volunteer their time to teach.

"We arranged the classes so it's possible to attend all 10 of them in the first session and all 13 in the second session without a conflict," said Donna Hewett, College Classics coordinator.

Session I begins the week of Sept. 28 and ends Oct. 23.

Session II is scheduled Oct. 26-Nov. 20. After the initial enrollment, additional classes may be added by calling the Continuing Education office.

Classes scheduled for Session I, with their meeting times, are: The Enjoyment of Music, Monday 1-3 p.m.; Piano, Monday 3-4 p.m., Country-Western Dance, Monday and Wednesday, 4-5 p.m.; Campaign Promises and the Economy, Tuesday, 1-2 p.m.; Opera, Tuesday and Thursday, 2-4 p.m.; Annie's Entertaining/Tea Parties, Tuesday, 4-5:30 p.m. World History Continues II, Wednesday, 1-3 p.m.; Traveling On Your Own, Thursday, 1-2 p.m.; Poetry Can Be Fun, Thursday, 4-5 p.m.; Introduction to Word Processing with Computers, Friday, 2-3:30 p.m.

Walter Osadchuk teaches the music class. He is director of instrumental ensembles and string instructor at Midland College.

Ona Burns has taught piano all her adult life. Bill Barnett, a retired clothing salesman and teacher for country-western dance, is a member of two dance clubs and recently opened a dance studio. Tom Vannaman, who will talk about the economy and the campaign, is a business and economics instructor for the college.

Jane Ward helps everyone understand opera. She is a vocalist. Karen McIntosh owns and operates Annie's Gingerbread House, where the tea party will be held. Will Morris, chair of the MC Social and Behavioral Sciences Division, continues to teach world history.

Travel professionals Dortha Agnew and Leila Seal explain how singles can travel with little worry. Judy Matthews Craig holds a Ph.D. in English from Rice University, teaches part-time for Midland College and has a special love for Poetry.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

Do you know a teacher or principal who is a hero to children? If so, you may want to nominate him or her for the Reader's Digest Association's "American Heroes in Education Awards."

The national program honors teachers and principals who are making a difference in school across America. Educators from 15 schools will share about $225,000.

Teachers, principals and administrators may nominate fellow educators. Deadline to enter is Nov. 30.

Last year's winners were recognized for boosting student attendance and academic performance, motivating students to help solve community challenges, and rallying community support for the schools.

Nomination packages are available from The Reader's Digest Association, Inc., American Heroes in Education Awards, c/o Mary Terry, Reader's Digest Road, Pleasantville, N.Y., 10572.

Winners will be announced in April.

The TAAS (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) exit-level test will be offered for students who completed their high school coursework, but still failed the test.

State law dictates that Texas students must pass the TAAS test in order to graduate.

The test will be offered, free of charge, Oct. 27-29. The TEAMS (Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills) test will be offered Oct. 28 and 29. All tests offered will begin at 8:30 a.m.

Registration materials are available at Coleman High School, LHS and Midland High School.

Test administrators in Iowa City, Iowa, must have registration materials no later than 5 p.m. Oct. 6. Forms received after this date will not be processed.

For more information call Joe Cummins at 689-1062.

Board names 15 students as AP Scholars

Staff report

A total of 15 former and present Midland Independent School District students, eight from Lee High School and seven from Midland High School, have been named AP Scholars by the College Board "in recognition of their exceptional achievement on the May, 1992, college-level Advanced Placement Examinations."

Only 11 percent of the 388,000 participants nationwide garnered the award.

The College Board recognizes three levels of achievement: AP Scholar with Distinction; AP Scholar with Honor; and AP Scholar.

The AP Scholar with Distinction designation requires earning a grade point average of three or above on five or more advanced placement examinations with a minimum average grade of 3.5. Local AP Scholars with Distinction are Amit Agrawal and Marc Bruner, both of Lee High School.

The AP Scholar with Honor designation requires earning a grade of three or above on four or more advanced placement examinations with a minimum average grade of 3.25. Local AP Scholars with Honor are Caryn Kelly of Lee High; and Danielle Brune, Stephanie Brunson, Laurie Covington and Robert McKinney, all of Midland High School.

The AP Scholar designation requires earning a grade of three or above on three or more advanced placement examinations with minimum grades of three. Local AP Scholars are Phillip Barron, Thomas Fleming, Paul Mansour, Michael Rubin and Kim Wong, all of Lee High; and Sean Eckerty, Amy Lewis and Justin Merritt, all of Midland High.

St. Ann's Fair, carnival set to open

Staff report

"A Tradition of Teamwork" is the theme for the 44th annual St. Ann's Fair, set for the grounds of St. Ann's School, Illinois Avenue and N Street, Saturday from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

See ya later alligator

Everglades Alligator Farm owner Charles Thibos, above, keeps newly born alligators warm and wet in the farm bath tub in Florida City, Fla., Saturday. Because Hurricane Andrew damaged the usual facility, Thibos has to keep the newborns in the farm's tub for about two weeks. Thibos, right carries the newly hatched alligators from the incubator, Saturday, at the farm's Florida facility. The farm sustained moderate structural damage and lost about 25 small (2-foot) alligators during the huricane.

Scholars seek lessons from Andrew

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Andrew's path of destruction is providing weather scholars with a stunning classroom.

"All I can tell you is this is the worst damage I've seen," Ted Fujita, University of Chicago professor emeritus of meteorology, said recently after returning to Chicago from a survey of southern Dade County.

His experience includes study of hurricanes and tornadoes that date to Hurricane Camille two decades ago and, before that, typhoons in his native Japan.

National Hurricane Center director Bob Sheets said Fujita was shocked by the destruction he saw in the community of Naranja Lakes. Sheets led a team of meteorologists last week that discovered blocklong wreckage he said was caused by wind gusts near 200 mph.

The Coral Gables-based Hurricane Center initially estimated Andrew hit south Dade with gusts of 140 to 175 mph. Forecaster Hal Gerrish said field surveys will continue for a week and experts will then try to come up with a consensus estimate to rank the hurricane historically.

Fujita, who also toured the path of Hurricane Hugo in 1989, is among many weather experts who have come here to learn.

"Anything this big probably will tell you something you didn't know," said Fujita, who said he would defer to Sheets to make findings public.

Fujita said they toured the area by helicopter and by car. Sheets, who has flown over the hurricane-hit area several times, was doing more surveying.

Physician: 'We all got so much and they got so little'

HOMESTEAD, Fla. (AP) — Hundreds of unsung heroes north, south, east and west are rallying around Hurricane Andrew's victims with a benevolent embrace.

"We all got so much and they got so little," said one of the hurricane heroes, Milton Mintz, an Atlantic City, N.J., casino doctor who normally tends to high-stakes gamblers.

In its fury, Andrew also unleashed America's generosity of spirit, that instinctiveness to help people in need, to do the right thing. Andrew was the worst natural disaster in American history, but it brought out the best in people.

Americans said they couldn't believe the devastation. And no wonder. More than 100,000 homes were destroyed or damaged, a quarter of a million people left homeless. One moment, Americans were watching this on television. The next, they were here pitching in for Operation Florida Mercy, the recovery.

Whatever their motives, be it guilt, sympathy, adventure or Christian belief, Americans sacrificed the comforts of their own homes for the mud, mosquitoes and heat of tent cities. They came by car, truck and plane. Many paid their own way. Some gave up their vacations.

They were as merciful and as selfless as Andrew was cruel, sheltering the homeless, feeding the hungry, tending the sick, lifting the darkness and keeping the survivors out of harm's way.

"I was watching it on TV," said Mintz, 65. "I couldn't believe what I was seeing. I felt so bad. These people are in such need. They're living in mud. It's heart-rending and I felt I had to do something."

Mintz hastened to Homestead's 1,500-bed tent city to care for the homeless children. He hired another doctor to take his place in Atlantic City for five days and paid him out of his own pocket.

John Flatman left his home in Davenport, Iowa, with $11.85 in his pocket. It took him five days to hitchhike the 2,000 miles to Florida City to cook for the homeless in a shelter at the First Baptist Church.

Flatman, a 23-year-old cook by trade, slept in television rooms at truck stops and in a lawn chair beside a motel pool. He ate wisely, he said, filling up on donuts. People gave him a few dollars along the way. He arrived here penniless.

"I thought it was a good cause," he said. "I never hitchhiked before in my life. I thought about it before I left and decided this place needed help. I knew I had to get down here. It feels good. I know my being down here makes a difference."

Cheryl Bartholomew left her husband and 9-year-old daughter in Newburgh, N.Y., for the first time in her 13-year marriage to help the Salvation Army deliver chicken, soda and ice to the hungry and the thirsty.

"They needed help," she said. "You could tell that from the news."

What she saw on her first day in Homestead was "like a war zone," and she couldn't believe more people weren't hurt. Thirty-nine deaths in Florida were linked to the hurricane. Damage was estimated at $20 billion.

"It's very sad that all these peoples' lives are wrecked," said Mrs. Bartholomew, 32. "It gives you a feeling that at least you are doing something for them."

Liz Willard, a 35-year-old office manager for Kessler & Co. Inc., a steel company in King of Prussia, Pa., had planned a long Labor Day weekend of antique hunting before Andrew hit.

But when Andrew struck, her boss, Stanley Kessler, told her he felt so terrible that he pledged $1,000 to the Red Cross.

"I said, 'I can't afford that, but since I'm going down for a long Labor Day weekend, I'll work instead of going antique hunting.' He said, 'If you'd like to stay longer, I'll pay your salary for two weeks.' "

She signed on to run the food distribution center for the homeless at the Homestead First United Methodist Church.

Comic books draw on real-life stories of serial killers

By Julie Bonnin
Associated Press

AUSTIN — If Karen Herman were a comic book character, she'd be the picture of innocence with her auburn curls, flowered sun dress and Veronica-sweet voice.

So what is she doing with a brightly colored self-portrait of John Wayne Gacy as Pogo the clown, which, incidentally, gives her the creeps?

Karen and her husband Jack Herman are the primary writers of a line of adult comic books that chronicle the lives of real-life serial killers in graphic detail.

The comic books in the "Psycho Killers" series, produced by an independent New Jersey-based publisher called Comic Zone, bear a "mature readers" stamp on the cover and tales of real-life blood and gore on the inside.

The books' controversial content has kicked up a nationwide debate: a New York assemblyman has called for a ban on the comics and on trading cards that depict serial killers. Relatives of victims of crimes detailed in the books have sued a rival "true crime" comic book publisher, Boneyard Press, based in Illinois.

And angry relatives of Jeffrey Dahmer's victims faced Comic Zone publishers Rich and Patricia Rankin on NBC's "A Closer Look."

In Austin, both BookSource and Europa Bookstore have ordered the "Psycho Killer" comic books but are not currently carrying them. BookSource, a bookstore that specializes in comic books, sold the "Psycho Killer" comic books to buyers of true crime paperbacks, not to comic book buying kids, says Phillip Anderson, a co-owner of the store.

But Europa's Jason Frangos says gory, violent reading is "incredibly popular" among the book store's comic book buying customers.

Some other local comic book sellers say distribution roadblocks, not concerns about the comic books' content, have kept them from being sold here.

Still, Gene Bell, assistant manger of Funny Papers, says he was "glad we didn't get our copies," after seeing the comics at a convention in Dallas. "I thought they were pretty sick."

But to some comic book collectors, the "Psycho Killer" line is an investment that pays off. Copies of the first in the series (which retails for $2.95) are now going for $30, Jack Herman says.

And Comic Zone, a small and independent comic book distributor, is successfully carving out a niche for itself in the true-crime genre.

More than a dozen of its comic books focus on murder and mayhem; the publishers also offer a serial killer board game that comes with 25 plastic baby figures, four serial killer figures and other pieces enclosed "in their own body bag."

The Rankins currently are touting an upcoming Gacy edition that will include an unedited letter from the convicted killer as well as his chilling self-portrait.

That edition has been written by the Hermans, who came to Austin from their hometown of Chicago more than a year ago so that Jack, 30, a computer game designer, could take a job with a local company.

The couple, who receive royalties from the comic books that are sold, are unapologetic about what Karen calls "this odd little job that we do." They say their narratives — culled from information they gather from books, magazines and newspaper articles about their subjects — are designed to read like cold, fact-based journalism.

"We knew there would be a right way and a wrong way to do it," says Karen Herman, 29, a former English literature student who has always wanted to write.

"We try not to be too graphic or exploitive of the victims. We try to look at why he (the killer) became this way. We go back and explore the psychology of what led up to this."

But readers will find many details of the killers' histories are related in gruesome, albeit cartoonish, detail. Story narratives are illustrated in typical comic book fashion. Gunshots go BLAM! and a dark sense of humor emerges between cartoon frames: Jeffrey Dahmer pictured in front of a television set watching "The Frugal Gourmet."

The black-and-white artwork, along with the mature readers warning, are tipoffs that the comic books are not meant for children, the Hermans say.

Professional bowler would not have it any other way

By George Vondracek
Associated Press

CORPUS CHRISTI — It's midweek and Riviera Lanes is nearly empty except for a few who seek refuge inside from the afternoon heat.

A radio behind the front desk is tuned to country and western. The selection playing is Aaron Tippin's "I Wouldn't Have It Any Other Way," which serves as a pretty good theme song for the tall man in the white shirt and khaki shorts bowling on Lane 16.

Pause. Approach. Deliver. Follow though. Watch. Sixty feet away, Mark Turney's red bowling ball shreds the rack of pins, overriding the sound of the radio. It's a strike, but Turney doesn't record it. This is practice and practice is, well, practice.

"It's usually like this every day but Sunday," Turney said. "I practice anywhere from two, three hours depending on how much work I think I need. Sometimes it's eight hours."

The Corpus Christi bowler has come back to his home to sharpen those skills he needs on the Professional Bowlers Association tour. The 6-foot-5 Turney — only the 6-7 Steve Cook is taller on the PBA tour — also is helping a friend by providing some guidance in Riviera's youth and learning-to-bowl leagues during weekends.

"Mark and I go back far enough where he's a personal friend," Riviera's Doug Patton said. "So it was easy for me to get him to come down here. Plus, I've let him beat me at tennis a few times ... For the kids' sake and for learning how to bowl, it's good to have a pro come in here."

Said Turney:"I don't think it's necessarily the technique of teaching, but they seem to listen better."

There are no juniors or wannabe Dick Webers around to listen on this day, however. It's back to the practice grind, whether it is two hours or eight.

"If you've got to do it, you've got to do it," Turney said, smiling wryly.

"You're not gonna' make any money throwing the ball bad."

Since the objective of a professional bowler is to make money, Turney practices. And slowly, he is emerging as one of the newer — though at 34, not one of the younger — stars on the PBA tour.

'That's the whole game: lanes and the balls out there, 'cause everybody on the national tour can bowl. It comes down to the mental game, equipment and who can bowl in the crunch.'

— Mark Turney

"It's been going up every year," Turney said of the 211 average he carries. When he started on the PBA tour 2½ years ago, it was 205. He improved to 208 last year.

"But with the way bowling has gone anymore, 211 is not that impressive," Turney said.

"I'm learning how to be more versatile, so I have an opportunity to bowl well every week on the (lane) conditions they put out," Turney said.

"That's the whole game: lanes and the balls out there, 'cause everybody on the national tour can bowl. It comes down to the mental game, equipment and who can bowl in the crunch."

Turney is not there yet, and admits he is still learning. He ranks himself anywhere from a 4 to a 7 on a 1-to-10 scale as far as coping with the tour on a weekly basis. It could be a frustrating existence, as it was early on for the Dallas native.

He battled for more than two years on the Southwest Regional PBA circuit. That came after a stint in the Navy at NAS Chase Field in Beeville (1980-82), a sojourn back to Denver, where he had been raised, and a move back to Corpus Christi in 1986.

"I quit a pretty good (civil service) job to do this," Turney said, "so I'm gonna' give it as good a shot as I can until I can't make any money at it."

Turney has earned $20,710 this season. His career total sits at $125,325. Those totals probably would have been greater had he not experienced a bit of bad luck in Dublin, Calif., at the spring tour opener in May.

Turney had qualified third for the televised finals of the Earl Anthony Open. He actually was leading Dave Traber when the ninth frame arrived. Turney stood a good shot at moving onto the semifinals.

On Turney's approach, however, the cameraman shooting the event on the lanes for ESPN simply got up and walked off. Distracted, Turney threw a horrible shot. How many pins he left didn't matter.

He was so rattled that he lost the match, 227-221, and went home with a fourth-place finish and $5,500 paycheck. Traber advanced to the final, where he was beaten by Mike Shady.

Crunch time had arrived and Turney crumbled.

"I still could've put some pressure on him by striking out in the 10th," Turney said. "I threw some awful shots. I was so mad at the cameraman.

"But I shouldn't have let it bother me. That was my fault. I still could've won the match by striking out."

Still, it was the best Turney had bowled since March, when he won $7,500 for placing third at the Cleveland Open, his biggest payday and best finish on the PBA tour.

And Dublin reminded him of the mental aspect to bowling. Lane conditions, always a key factor in bowling, change weekly. But a pro's game, everything from equipment to mental approach, has to be a constant for success. that can make the difference in a $1,000 paycheck — considered by a Turney as the minimum one must earn weekly to survive on the pro tour — and $50 for playing well in the pro-amateur event that kicks off each PBA event.

New test tries to foil insanity fakers

DENTON (AP) — Don't try to convince Dr. Richard Rogers you're crazy.

The University of North Texas psychology professor has devised a test to tell if you're faking.

Essentially, fakers try to act too crazy, Rogers says, and his test lays traps to catch 'em.

The test offers strategies to foil the faker. One strategy looks for a large number of "unbearable symptoms," like the inability to pronounce difficult words.

"Someone who's really schizophrenic would not say everything is unbearable because after awhile the person tends to accept his symptoms as normal," Rogers said.

Another strategy looks for frequent occurrences of "rare symptoms." It's suspicious if a client claims to suffer from several such symptoms sprinkled throughout the test, Rogers said.

For example, the test asks: "Do you ever believe that your thoughts are broadcasted, so that people know what you're thinking?"

He says the 180-question test, dubbed a Structured Interview of Reported Symptoms, is the first standardized way to determine the accuracy of mental illness claims.

He sees this work's greatest potential in the courtroom. As many as 10 percent of defendants who claim insanity are faking, he said.

"For individuals facing a capital offense, it's literally a life-or-death issue," Rogers said. "Sometimes the fabrication of symptoms is the only alternative."

The test works like this: The interviewer asks the questions, marking the answers on a three-point scale. The test is scored and then interpreted based on patterns of response, rather than on particular answers.

Some faked mental illnesses are obvious, he said.

"I once evaluated a patient who reported having a fight with a 60-foot devil with a chain saw, squirting green neon blood," Rogers said. "That's bad."

Not even an insane person would believe that, he said.

Rogers, 42, came to UNT in August 1991 from the University of Toronto. He began working in 1984 on the problem of feigned insanity.

Rogers tested SIRS through participants — including university students and jail inmates — paid to lie. He also tested it on people whose clinicians doubted their insanity claims.

'I once evaluated a patient who reported having a fight with a 60-foot devil with a chain saw, squirting green neon blood. That's bad.'

— Dr. Richard Rogers

Richard Bonnie, director of the Institute of Law Psychiatry and Public Policy at the University of Virginia, says successful fabrication of a mental disorder is rare.

But a supplemental tool such as the SIRS might help make that distinction in clinical assessment, he said.

More difficult, Bonnie said, is deciding whether a mentally disturbed defendant meets the court's standard of insanity.

Texas courts say a defendant is insane if, "as a result of a severe mental disease or defect, (he) did not know that his conduct was wrong."

Balloonists will try again to circle globe

N.Y. Times News Service

Larry Newman, captain of a team of aeronauts who hope to make the first non-stop balloon flight around the world, announced that their Earthwinds balloon would be ready to launch from Reno Stead Airport in Nevada on Nov. 15.

A previous attempt by the group to launch Earthwinds from Akron, Ohio, was abandoned last February when surface winds became too strong to handle the huge balloon on the ground.

Winds at the Nevada site are expected to be much milder for a longer period, and Newman said weather would be favorable from Nov. 15 until the end of February.

Newman, an airline pilot, will be accompanied by Maj. Gen. Vladimir Djanibekov of the Russian air force, commmander of his country's astronaut training program, and Don Moses, a balloonist based in Hawaii.

Newman has made two historic balloon flights in the past. He was a crew member of the Double Eagle II in 1978 — the first successful balloon flight across the Atlantic Ocean — and of the Double Eagle V in 1981 — the first balloon to cross the Pacific.

The pressurized crew capsule of the Earthwinds project has been moved to Reno, and its novel balloon system will be rigged in October. The lifting part of the rig consists of a helium-filled balloon made of reinforced plastic that will be 140 feet in diameter when it reaches its cruising altitude of about 33,000 feet.

Coasting along the eastward jet stream, Newman hopes to complete the trip in 10 days, but the capsule will hold sufficient food and supplies to last a month.

A second balloon, called an "anchor balloon," will hang beneath the crew capsule and serve as ballast. When extra weight is needed to counteract the lift produced by solar heating, compressed air will be pumped into the anchor to increase its weight by as much as 2,000 pounds.

Coasting along the eastward jet stream, Newman hopes to complete the trip in 10 days, but the capsule will hold sufficient food and supplies to last a month.

The Earthwinds project is supported by a group of sponsors, with a major contribution from the Hilton Hotels Corporation.

Henderson mayor has his own 'Field of Dreams'

By Bill Hornaday
Associated Press

HENDERSON — When voices in the wind convinced Kevin Costner's character in the movie "Field of Dreams" to clear part of his corn field and build a baseball diamond in the middle of Iowa, skeptics feared the young farmer was a couple tacos short of a combination plate.

Whether Henderson residents have the same thoughts about their newly elected mayor is debatable, but Brad Holmes freely admits his approach toward life is somewhat less than orthodox.

After all, not every city leader builds a nine-hole golf course around his house, refers to imaginary water traps as "wazards" and has a canine caddy to gather the balls scattered about his home-grown links.

"A lot of people out there have swimming pools, tennis courts, volleyball nets and what have you in their yards. I just happen to have a golf course," said Holmes, who took office in May following a runoff election. "It beats a regular driving range in all sorts of ways. And I really have a lot of fun with it."

The unusual seems commonplace for Holmes, a 65-year-old retired bank officer who campaigned for office by pulling a waving, life-size likeness of Sherlock Holmes in a trailer through the streets.

The tactic worked, but townsfolk were not taken completely by surprise. For it was 2½ years prior, three years after Holmes moved from Tyler, that he began work on what eventually became his par-36 Urban Club Golf Course "out of sheer boredom."

Despite being bitten by the golf bug "during all those years in the rat race," Holmes says his workload only allowed him to hit the fairways every one to three months.

But upon retirement, he discovered plenty of leisure time to pursue his passion and found the front yard of his 26-acre spread in northern Henderson beckoning.

"At first, I decided to clear out just enough underbrush in the front yard to make a 100-yard fairway where I could hit some iron shots ... and it worked," Holmes said. "So I got with it and cleared out three more fairways — three par-3s and par-4 hole.

"We then discovered the trees made for some real difficult handicaps, so I got into the back yard and made my five main holes, including a pair of mean par-5s and three pretty tough par-4s."

The result was Holmes' par-36 "field of dreams," designed largely in a zigzag fashion. So far the ghosts of Bobby Jones and Tommy Armour have yet to emerge from the surrounding woods, but friends and relatives hack away as they please.

"I have an old '66 Buick I use as a 'staff car' and for my birthday my children got me a ball washer from the old Austin Country Club. But we're not exclusive here," Holmes said. "If you come out and shoot all nine holes you get a membership card. We've got 24 so far."

Fancier courses with sprinkler systems and other amenities would cost about $10,000 to build, says Holmes, who invested less than $300 for construction, including PVC pipe for the holes and plastic for the flags.

As a substitute for putting greens usually composed of special turf, Holmes initially used a sand and clay mixture — a trick he learned while playing golf in New Mexico. Over time, he said, finer blades of grass slowly, but surely, began to take root.

Holmes himself used mostly saws and a bush hog to clear space not only for the fairways, but to create the Urban Club's own unique idiosyncrasies.

Among the front four holes is a V-shaped dog leg which forces players to drop their shots within a 60-foot diameter before reversing direction to the hole. Balls overshooting the zone often fly into a nearby street, Holmes said, risking a two-stroke penalty and "any additional liabilities.

Then there is the back five, where both sides of the fairway to hole No. 7 are guarded by the dreaded North and South Wazards — imaginary water hazards marked by waist high grass where the shoreline would be. Still further ahead between No. 7 and No. 8 is Faux Pond, the largest of the three "wazards."

"I've always had a problem with water hazards, so that's why I have wazards. No matter what happens, you don't have to wade into a 30-foot-deep pond to get your ball," Holmes said. "As balls go, this is Pebble Beach for all they know. All you have to do is talk to them and they'll head to the hole ... usually."

Even green fees are nonexistent, unless one happens to lose their ball, Holmes said. In that event he or his faithful dog Mutt, an aptly-named mixed breed, is likely to recover it and add it to the club's growing collection.

"When there's more than just me playing out there, we have to keep Mutt in the yard because he likes to catch the ball with his mouth just before it rolls into the hole," Holmes said.

"But when I go out just to drive a few balls, he'll go out to where the first one lands, then retrieve the others and set them by the first one and many times he winds up with more balls than I hit."

Playing his home course has benefited Holmes' game somewhat, cutting scores by nearly 10 strokes on regulation courses, he said. Still he shoots in the mid- to high 80s "on a good day," he says, and like life itself, he tries not to take the game too seriously.

"I may be a better maintenance man than a golfer. A lot of times I just like to get on my riding mower to mow the greens and make up my mind about some of the problems down at City Hall," Holmes said. "A lot of times I'm called upon to make speeches and I use my time on the tractor to put them together."

Clash of continents may have produced big chill

By Tom Abate
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — About 40 million years ago, scientists think, Earth was hit by a blast of air conditioning that lowered atmospheric temperatures some 20 degrees Fahrenheit. Now a Berkeley geologist has advanced a novel explanation for this big chill.

In an article published in the journal Nature, Professor Maureen Raymo argued that the "air conditioning" began when the Indian land mass slammed into Asia about 50 million years ago, raising the Himalayan-Tibetan plateau thousands of feet into the clouds.

With co-author William Ruddiman of the University of Virginia, Raymo theorized that the plateau acted like a huge sponge to soak up rainwater that contained carbon dioxide, the ancient and natural equivalent of today's acid rain.

When this acid rain hit the fresh rock of the rising plateau, it caused a reaction that scientists call chemical erosion. Essentially, the rain ate away at the rock, and formed carbon-rich compounds. As the runoff washed down the eight rivers that drain the plateau, the carbon compounds were eventually deposited in the sea.

To make a 10-million-year-long story short, Raymo said that as this carbon dioxide was removed from the atmosphere, temperatures dropped — a reverse of the greenhouse effect that some scientists think is warming the planet today.

Weight Loss Mystery Baffles Scientists

WASHINGTON -- Scientists are baffled by a natural food ingredient that caused people to lose weight even though they were instructed not to alter normal eating patterns.

Although other scientists and studies may not agree, a study published in The British Journal of Nutrition found that the ingredient, a natural plant colloid, can cause significant weight loss. Several explanations for the weight loss are suggested, but the most likely according to scientists in a Finnish study, is that colloids seem to decrease the intestinal absorption of calories. However, universal acceptance of this theory will depend on further study.

National Dietary Research, an organization committed to the research and development of nutritional solutions to world-wide health problems, has successfully isolated and incorporated a series of colloids into a unique food tablet called Food Source One. A significant breakthrough in nutritional weight control, Food Source One provides a scientifically designed method for weight loss. When used as directed, Food Source One replaces high calorie fats with lower calorie nutrients, thereby providing optimum nutrition with a minimum number of fat calories. According to a study in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition, you do not need to restrict the amount of food you eat to lose weight, just the fat.

Food Source One is unlike any other product on the market and is available immediately because it is not a drug and only contains natural ingredients already known to be safe. Physicians and pharmacists are praising Food Source One as a natural, drug free alternative for confronting obesity.

160 Money, Loans Wanted

★☆★☆★☆★☆★☆

Before signing a contract or sending money to an "Advance Fee Loan Broker" we recommend that you check with the Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin. Be wary of any broker claiming the easy availability of thousands of dollars for loans at reasonable rates or the availability of "foreign" money.

Magnificent Manor

By Sonja Merrick

Envision a vast sweep of beautifully manicured lawn, exquisite shrubbery and flowering plants gently swaying in the breeze. A gracious circular drive arches across the front of a magnificent home that is flanked by stately oaks and dramatic white columns.

Open the door to a wide foyer that leads straight to an exquisite living area. The ceiling rises two full stories in height and is lighted by a double row of windows. To the right find a floor-to-ceiling flagstone fireplace, flanked by oak built-ins. Polished, wide-planked hardwood gleam from the floor. To the left, a gracious oaken stairway turns and curves, then flows into an indoor balcony that wraps around two walls and ultimately leads to a spacious study.

On the left of the entry, find a gloriously large, exquisitely appointed formal dining area. The walls are covered in an Oriental-inspired fabric with a rich-blue background. Windows rise from floor to ceiling. Two built-in, lighted china cabinets flank a door that leads to the kitchen. The dining area also boasts a fully equipped wet bar — complete with mirrored wall, glass shelves and lots of storage.

To the right of the formal dining area, a door positioned between the china cabinets opens to a huge kitchen. Amenities abound. There are lots of cabinets and much counter space, an over-sized island with electrical outlets and a large walk-in pantry provides even more storage space. A roll-top kitchen desk adds a paperwork area as well as an exquisite decorative touch.

The kitchen also encompasses a spacious informal dining area. One wall boasts a flagstone fireplace — just perfect for cozy family meals. Multi-pane windows go from floor to ceiling. A glass door to the right of the informal dining area opens to a covered, lighted patio.

To the left of the kitchen is a staircase. It leads to the second floor, on which four bedrooms, each with a full bath, and an informal living area are located. The informal living area is separated by leaded-glass doors from the balcony and a view of the two-story formal living area.

To the right of the entry is a luxurious master-bedroom suite. A sitting area complete with flagstone fireplace enhances the ambiance of this room. A private, fenced courtyard with fountain extends the livability and enjoyment of the already spacious area. A delightful spiral staircase winds its way up to study loft — which can also be approached by the entry stairs and wraparound balcony.

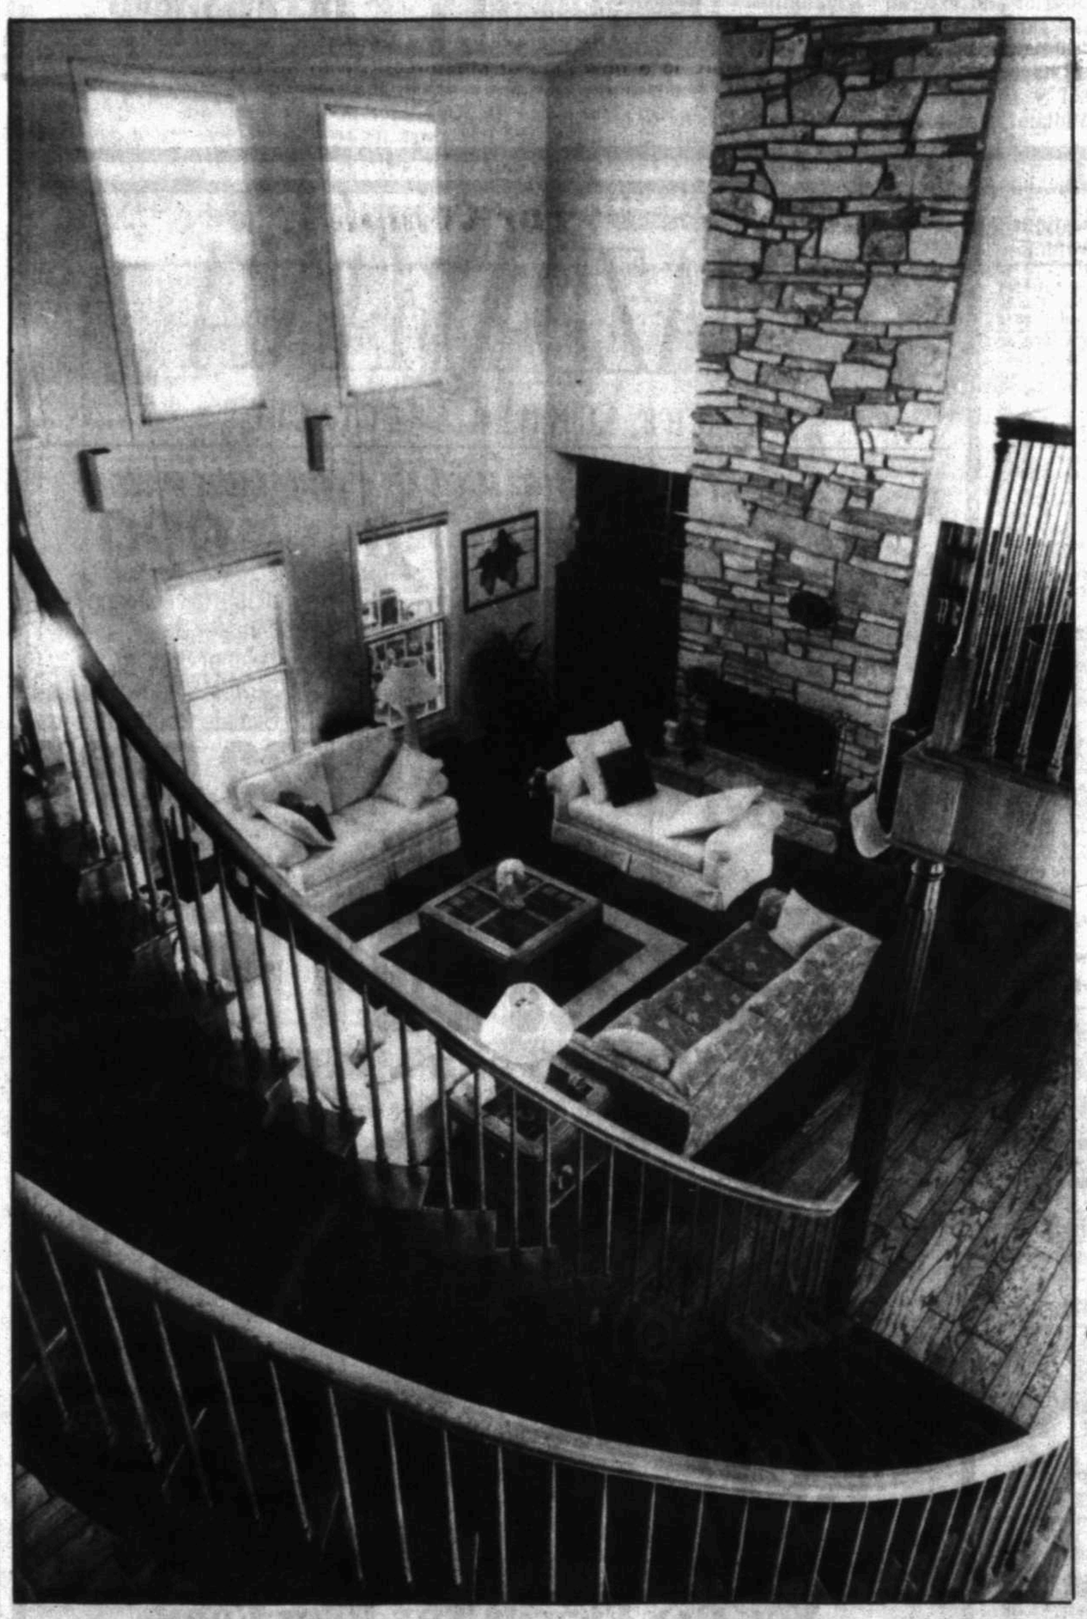

The master bath is splendid. It boasts a Jacuzzi tub, linen storage closet, two walk-in closets with built-ins, an oversized tile shower and a double vanity.

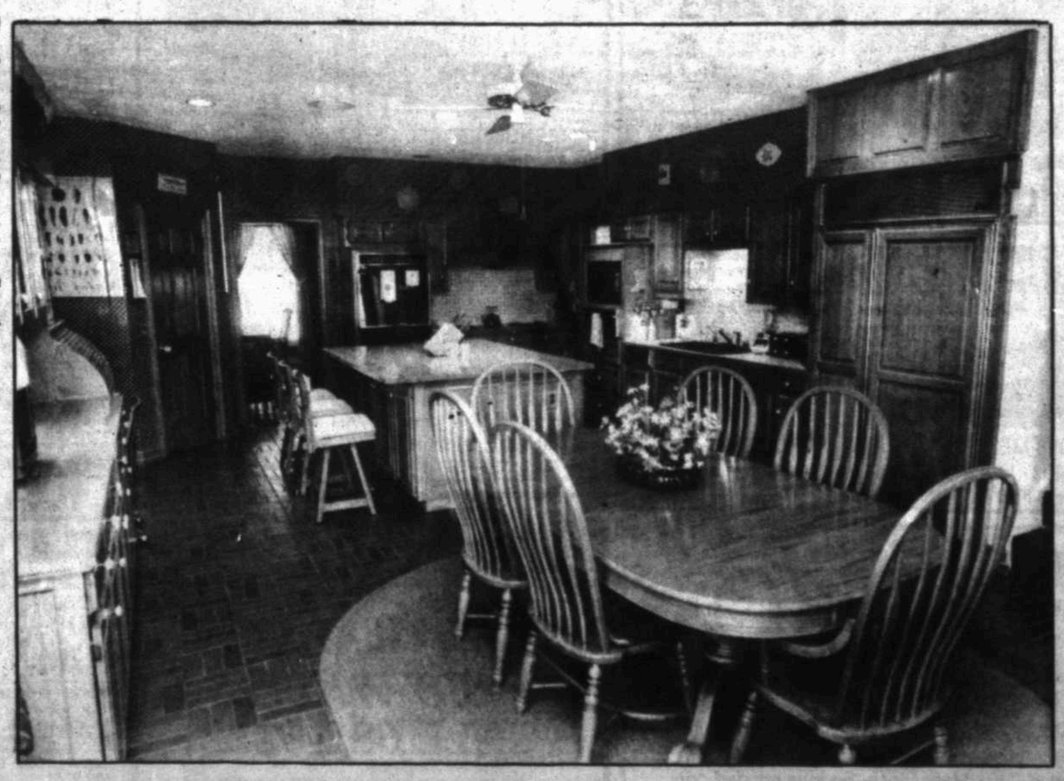

Still, there's more.

The home also boasts an exercise room, fully carpeted and heated and cooled for year-round comfort. It has a fully mirrored wall complete with ballet bar.

Other amenities in this five-bedroom, seven-bath home include large utility room, oversize three-car garage with built-in storage and upstairs covered brick veranda. Also a brick patio with overhead fans and stereo speakers, four outside storage closets, large storage building, fenced dog run and climate-controlled cat/dog house. Sub-zero refrigerator, double oven and RO unit offer still more comfort and convenience.

The home is offered by Carriage Co. Realtors for $499,000. Shown by appointment only. Call 684-5881.

Langston Realtors Talk About. . .

Townhouses, patio homes and condos

By Joanne Langston

Some 26-27 years ago, when Harvey Langston Realtors was the newest name on the block in Real Estate, competitor Realtor-/Builder Charlie Wallace introduced a startling concept of housing to Midland, and, indeed, to Texas when he built the Oaklawn Condominiums. And the development was nearly a financial disaster. Midlanders, used to Texas' wide-open spaces, had a difficult time accepting the idea of "someone living right on the other side of the walls and sharing yards and roofs," especially at the "high price" of $32,500!

But then long-time residents like Dollie Ballinger and FNB President John Butler and his wife Alva began to appreciate the benefits of having someone else be responsible for yard and exterior maintenance, the security and privacy of the behind-the-wall development and the freedom offered by this new way of living. Following the acceptance of Oaklawn, Charlie started construction on the Highland Park townhomes, another "new" concept with patio entries, zero lot lines and no common area ownership.

In only a few years, Oaklawn became recognized as one of Midland's most prestigious addresses and the "Wallace Townhomes" of Highland Park became synonymous with quality, privacy, security and ease-of-maintenance. As more and more young families, professionals, empty nesters, singles and retirees began to want this "new" way of living, many other Midland builders developed their own plans and concepts. Among these were Harvey Langston, as he turned the Real Estate Company over to me and became one of Midland's most prolific builders; also Paul Noel and Gilbert Bates in Goddard Heights, Skyline, Plantation Hills and other residential areas; Bill Hickey in Hundle Heights and Crescent Place and currently in Racquet Club South; Magnatex in the Saddle Club Townhomes area and Saddle Club Lakes; Bill Thomason in the unique Lafayette Townhome area, and, of course, other builders in other sections of the city.

Today, our market offers many fine patio homes, townhomes and condominiums in a wide range of prices.

Many people ask about the difference in a townhome, patio home and condominium. If one considers the developments in our own community, it seems to me we can describe townhomes as units designed for common yard maintenance (the Saddle Club developments) or minimum maintenance (Crescent Plaza, Winchester Court). These units may be located on lots with easements on each side, on lots with zero lot lines, or built with common walls.

Pictured is the interior of one of the many lovely townhomes on the market today.

Patio homes to me are more of a type of architecture — "U" shaped homes built on single family lots with normal 5-foot side easements and courtyard entries.

Condominiums have common walls and offer ownership of an individual units plus a pro rata ownership of common elements that could include carports, pools, lawn areas.

Recycling programs now dot the country

Cities, schools, subdivisions and local organizations across the United States are initiating recycling programs. You probably have already received information on programs in your area. Here is some basic information and the "dos" and "don'ts" of recycling.

In everyday terms, recycling programs provide the homeowner with a recycling bin. All newspapers, glass, aluminum and plastic products should be placed in the bin.

The next step is returning these items to a place where they can re-enter the manufacturing cycle at a collection center. Some city programs offer curbside service and generate thousands of revenue dollars from recycling. Schools usually set aside one day a week for collection of aluminum cans to earn money for extra school equipment.

As you may have heard in the news, landfill space in the United States is a dwindling commodity. More and more people are realizing that all of us are using up our land and resources a lot faster than nature can replace them. Some of these resources are irreplaceable. Recycling is one way each of us can participate in relieving the strain we're putting on the planet.

Here is a list of "dos and don'ts" to help you start recycling:

- Do recycle newspapers. Don't recycle magazines, junk mail, phone books, etc.
- Do recycle clear plastic soft drink bottles and milk jugs. Don't recycle plastic detergent, bleach, cooking oil or antifreeze bottles.
- Do recycle glass beverage containers of all colors. Don't recycle light bulbs, mirrors, drinking glasses.

Make careful home quality inspection

The purchase of a quality-built home can mean big savings in maintenance, while at the same time providing homeowners and their families with an attractive setting, says Norma Pine, owner-/broker of Chaparral Realtors. "Some less experienced consumers are drawn to the price, decor and setting of a home, but neglect to give the home a thorough checkup before purchase," Ms. Pine said.

"The best protection prospective homeowners can provide themselves with is the knowledge of what to look for in the construction, function and maintenance of a home," she said.

Chaparral Realtors is a member of the RELO/The International Relocation Network, headquartered in Chicago. The RELO network is the oldest broker-owned and directed referral service representing independent real estate companies. The RELO network has 3,000 offices in the U.S. and overseas and more than 50,000 sales agents who serve 14,000 communities.

RELO members reported more than $70 billion in total residential sales for 1991 which places the RELO network among the elite leaders in total dollar sales volume, in comparison with the major national real estate franchise, and makes RELO the largest network of independent real estate brokers in the country with worldwide marketing capabilities.

"Some basic things to look for in the construction of a home are the use of quality materials — such as solid wood as opposed to laminated products and plasterboard. Although all homes settle, the prospective buyers should keep an eye out for cracks in wall and ceiling plaster as well as in the concrete used in the foundation," Ms. Pine said.

"Poorly constructed homes made with cost-cutting materials never save the homeowner money and often result in high-cost solutions to correct the problems," Ms. Pine said. "However, all well-constructed homes do not necessarily have to be the most expensive."

Prospective homebuyers should also examine the heating and cooling systems, built-in appliances and faucets to see that they are in good working order. Buyers should not be bashful about flushing the toilets or running water in the bathtub. If the home is in need of updating or repairs, prospective buyers need to anticipate and realistically consider the cost involved, Ms. Pine said.

Exterior maintenance is another important factor to consider. Ms. Pine said, "Take a look at neighboring homes, particularly those of similar construction. Have the exterior materials used held up to the elements, or are some of the homes ready for major exterior repair? Then, using what you have observed, take another look at the home you are considering purchasing and compare its condition.

Pine

She also said that overall home maintenance, not just the exterior, should be considered. "A well-informed consumer will make a checklist of things to look for and test. Taking your list to each home will ensure that each part of the interior and exterior — including the garage — has been inspected from top to bottom," Ms. Pine said.

Chaparral Realtors is located at 911 N. Midkiff and has served the Midland area for 15 years.

KENT OIL, INC.

KENT KWIK CONVENIENCE STORES

WHY KENT OIL COMPANY?

Kent Oil (operating Kent Kwik convenience stores) is a West Texas-based company, thirty five years old and still growing. We offer many benefits to our employees. These benefits include:

- Company-assisted medical, dental and life insurance
- Paid vacations
- Sick pay program
- Tuition reimbursement program
- Special incentive programs for all employees
- Profit-sharing and retirement plan
- Intensive new hire training
- Structured continual management training
- Flexible scheduling
- Full and part time hours available
- Work close to home
- Affiliation with Odessa 66 credit union

We attempt whenever possible to promote from within. All of our current store managers, middle and upper management started with the company at the entry level. It is possible to move up quickly based on your experience and level of education.

Working in a convenience store is both exciting and challenging. You have to be outgoing and enjoy serving the public, while at the same time be a self-starter, as you receive very little on the job supervision.

If you are considering a career in the retail industry, give Kent Oil your consideration. Please apply (and be ready for interview) at the Kent Oil office Monday-Friday 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. 3314 N. Loop 250 in Midland.

Serving 54 counties in West Texas and New Mexico

BRIEFING

Prices rise

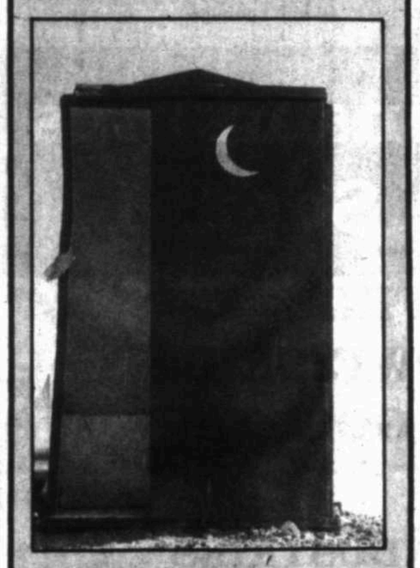

Above a vessel stands ready to treat oil. News that OPEC intends to keep production steady during the winter gave oil prices a boost during the week. Futures prices for West Texas Intermediate held in the $22.30 range much of the week. The posted price was around $21.

Members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries this week agreed to keep production steady in an effort to raise their oil prices to the target price of $21. Their current production level is estimated at about 1 million barrels below projected demand this winter.

IPAA meeting

The 63rd Annual Meeting of the Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA) will be held November 12-15 at the Reno Hilton, Reno/Lake Tahoe, Nevada.

The gathering of the membership of the nation's only national trade association representing U.S. independent crude oil and natural gas producers and explorers will feature a presentation by Edward J. Rollins, political strategist to H. Ross Perot, Ronald Reagan, Gerald Ford and Richard Nixon.

Drilling slows

An outhouse at a FWA rig provides almost the comforts of home. Both the U.S. and Permian Basin rig counts were lower during the week ended September 11, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

In the Permian Basin, the tally fell five to 87 during the week; a year ago it was 90.

Nationwide, the count was 687, down 19 from the previous week; a year ago it was 758.

Oklahoma and Texas both recorded sharp drops during the week, with Oklahoma losing 14 rigs during the week and Texas 13.

EPA blasted

Congressman Larry Combest has sent a Environmental Protection Agency head William Reilly requesting that he reconsider EPA fines of $4 million against 38 operators accused to disposal of produced waters into New Mexico playa lakes.

Critical of EPA actions, Combest said it was time to stop penalizing prudent operators who are trying to to produce oil despite all the regulatory and legal roadblocks put in their way.

Combest called EPA's claim on the normally dry plays as "waters of the U.S." unfounded and said their evidence of dumping toxic and radioactive pollutants was unscientific.

A sunset view of Christie Gas Corp. plant near Jal. Moderate increases are expected to make for new efficiencies in the natural gas industry.

Leaner, tighter gas industry predicted

■ Moderate prices and consumption will make for tighter, more competitive and astute gas industry.

HOUSTON — While the outlook for natural gas is the best it has been in many years, short term increases in consumption and price will be moderate says a natural gas consultant.

"Even though consumption has reached its highest level since the early 1980s, short-term increases in consumption and prices will be only moderate," Jofree Corporation Principal Carol Freedenthal told the Gas Compressor Association recently.

He called the situation a real anomaly in the natural gas industry: "At a time when the industry is downsizing, the prospects for continued growth and moderately improving prices are excellent."

Freedenthal said he believes today's lower natural gas prices are not only due to oversupply and competition in gas marketing but are also the result of low costs for natural gas exploration and production.

"Producers have learned to produce more efficiently and at lower prices," he said, "but the market won't allow them to keep the additional margin. While wellhead prices have fallen significantly, burnertip prices have not dropped much. This loss of the 'economic rent' is something that has happened in many industries, but people in the gas business didn't realize it could happen to them."

A highly competitive, more financially astute industry that operates closely in proportion with demand is now Freedenthal sees the future. "There's no room in this industry to be wasteful or extravagant," he said. "We're going to see increased efficiency and more ways of saving money.

Companies will turn increasingly to outsourcing such business elements as marketing, accounting and information systems, and you will not see companies drilling for the sake of having reserves on the books. They'll wait until there's demand for gas before they go out and develop it."

Freedenthal forecasted moderate but steady growth for both natural gas consumption and prices.

Keystone field gets final field rules order

■ The Railroad Commission has issued final orders allowing a new production method to be tried in the Keystone Ellenburger field.

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

The Texas Railroad Commission has given permission for a production experiment in the Keystone Ellenburger field that could raise oil and gas production in the Winkler County field.

And if engineers for Bass Enterprises Production Co. and Chevron U.S.A. are correct, their production theory could result in the additional recovery of 450 to 480 billion cubic feet of natural gas and six to 42 million barrels of oil from the field.

Throughout much of this year, the commission has held hearings on the field, preparing to issue a final order amending the field rules in the field, an order that was issued earlier this month.

Both Bass and Chevron appeared before the commission to ask for permission to produce large quantities of formation water, which would decrease reservoir pressure and increase the ultimate recovery of oil and gas from the reservoir.

The final order establishes a bonus above the existing oil and gas allowables of one-half Mcf of natural gas per barrel of water produced from the Ellenburger formation.

The field is an old field comprised of a large gas cap and oil column and partial water drive. As the field has been produced, the water has updipped to the top and there is a thin oil column and large gas cap. The producers asked the commission for, and have received, permission to produce the water rapidly, allowing the gas cap to expand and re-establish contact with and mobilize the oil and gas trapped below the water.

Appearing alongside Bass and Chevron was Arch Petroleum, which holds an aggregate interest of between 20 and 25 percent of the total field.

Arch Vice President Randall Scroggins emphasized that it is too early to tell what the results of this new method will be, and there is no guarantee it will be as successful as estimated.

HORIZONTAL DRILLING

Horizontal drilling slips

■ Horizontal drilling permits decline, but the drilling application continues to spread.

Staff report

The number of permits granted for horizontal wells in the state continue on a slow decline, according to the Texas Railroad Commission.

In August the Commission granted a total of 43 permits statewide for horizontal wells. This was down from 51 in July, 56 in June and 62 in May.

Altogether, the Railroad Commission has issued a grand total of 2,686 permits for horizontal wells in Texas since 1984.

Five new horizontal permits were granted to operators in the Pearsall (Austin Chalk) Field during August, while nineteen permits wee issued to those drilling horizontal wells in the Giddings (Austin Chalk) Field last month. Fayette County chalked up 9 of the total.

Overall, 1170 horizontal permits have now been granted to operators in the Pearsall Field. Frio County continues to lead all others, accounting for 633 of that total.

Meantime, Zavala County ranks second in the Pearsall field with 186 horizontal permits issued through Aug. 31, followed by Dimmit County with 185 and LaSalle County with 166.

Above a Penrod rig drilling for Clayton Williams in 1990 when the Austin Chalk horizontal play was at its zenith.

Likewise, the Commission has issued 711 permits for horizontal wells in the Giddings (Austin Chalk) Field through Aug. 31. Burleson County leads the horizontal race there with 335, Fayette County is close behind with 284, followed by Lee County with 75, and Washington County with 17.

No-pay, no-promote puts TRC in new light

Pitts

The Texas Railroad Commissioners deny it, but an awkward situation has arisen in which the Commission must sing the praises of propane louder than those of natural gas.

It is the result of a new TRC division called the Alternative Fuels Research and Education Division, (AFRED or "Alfred"). Established by the legislature in 1991, without a single negative vote, it was created to be an industry-supported division to promote alternative fuels in Texas.

Basically it was a good idea, but funding of the new division has made for hard-feelings and a complicated, sensitive and awkward situation, despite TRC claims to the contrary.

Supposedly all alternative fuel producers who pay into the fund would be able to be researched and promoted. But for whatever reason, the propane people are the only ones so far to have paid into the fund, and that puts TRC in the awkward position of having to give propane stronger promotion than natural gas at a time when both fuels are emerging as a transportation fuels.

Said Commissioner Bob Krueger: "Any alternative fuel that pays into the fund can enjoy the benefit of research, public education and media effort." But the propane industry, which is taxing itself half a cent per gallon for the fund, is the only one to pay into it.

Press releases from TRC these days show Bob Krueger in the valley looking at a propane school bus and Lena Guerrero having her pizza delivered by a Schwan's propane powered truck.

It is a condition that has raised the ire of the CNG industry, which claims it cannot be taxed in the same manner as propane and that its 50 refilling stations cannot match the thousands of propane dealers in the state. The natural gas fuel proponents also point out that natural gas already pays the state a ton of money in severance tax and should not have to bargain for promotion.

"It doesn't make us back off CNG, it just means more resources are available for propane. We just don't have the funding to do as much for CNG. If CNG doesn't pay in, we certainly can't do as much for them. Anyone who understands marketing knows this," said Krueger.

He noted, however, that the alternative fuels promotion program didn't put TRC in an awkward position: "It just shows that some care enough about their product to levy a tax on it. The CNG people might want to look at paying in."

Krueger, who noted that he personally drove a natural gas vehicle, says he supported both fuels, because both are domestically produced and both offer distinct advantages.

"When we visit a school district, we explain both propane and CNG in general terms. But if the district wants a specific study, the only fuel that has paid for a specific study so far is propane." He said propane dealers were paying one-half cent per gallon on the first sale of odorized propane for customer use. The self-imposed levy brings approximately $2 million per year to AFRED, and brings up the question of how much money for how much promotion.

If propane pays in the most money, Do they get the most promotion? If natural gas decides to pay 90 percent of Energy publisher expands

Staff report

Hart Publications, Inc. announced today it has added Pacific Oil World magazine and the Pacific Coast Oil Directory to its growing group of energy industry publications. The two publications had been operated by Petroleum Publishers, Inc. of Brea, California.

Pacific Oil World, published monthly since 1908, covers all phases of oil industry operations on the Pacific Coast, Alaska, and the international operations of Far Western-based companies. For the last decade, Pacific Oil World has been a key member of Hart's OIL WORLD NETWORK of regional petroleum industry business publications.

Pacific Oil World Publisher Jack Rider, who acquired the two publications in 1967, will continue to serve as publisher and executive editor, representing the OIL WORLD NETWORK on the West Coast. Rider will also continue to coordinate activities of the publication' editorial staff.

Hart publishes Western Oil World, Southwest Oil World, Gulf Coast Oil World, MidContinent Oil World and Northeast Oil World magazines along with their respective directories and two national directories. It also publishes Oil and Gas Investor, the Oil and Gas Finance Sourcebook, the Russian Oil and Gas Sourcebook, Petroleum Engineer International and Pipeline Digest.

Hart is a subsidiary of Phillips Publishing International, Inc. Phillips, with annual sales of more than $95 million, is a privately held publishing firm based in Potomac, Maryland. The company publishes eight of the largest circulation consumer newsletters in the areas of investments and health, plus more than 60 trade publications in the fields of telecommunications, media, data communications, banking, defense, aviation and energy.

Imports over 50 percent

Imports continue to climb while U.S. production shrinks and dependence on Persian Gulf oil slows. Following are production facts according to the American Petroleum Institute:

- U.S. Petroleum imports (crude & products) in July were 8,515,000 barrels per day (b/d); imports same month in 1991 were 7,756,000 b/d.
- Total imports in July as a percentage of total U.S. domestic petroleum deliveries 50.9%; imports as a percentage same month in 1991 were 45.7%.
- Persian Gulf petroleum represented 22.9% of total U.S. petroleum imports in May; 26.5% same month in 1991.
- Average price for barrel OPEC crude oil $18.58 (8/7/92) (DOE).
- Average refiner acquisition cost for barrel U.S. crude oil $18.86 (May 1992) (DOE).
- U.S. crude oil production in July was 7,147,000 b/d (of which 1,657,000 b/d was Alaskan); total U.S. production same month 1991 was 7,347,000 b/d. Same month in 1991 was 1,622,000 b/d.
- U.S. natural gas marketed production 51.6 billion cubic feet daily (cf/d) in April; marketed natural gas liquids production in July 1,673,000 b/d. Same month in 1991 was 1,622,000 b/d.
- U.S. natural gas marketed production 51.6 billion cubic feet daily (cf/d) in April; marketed natural gas production same month in 1991 was 50.9 billion cf/d.
- U.S. deliveries from primary storage of motor gasoline in July 7,503,000 b/d; deliveries of motor gasoline same month in 1991 were 7,561,000 b/d.
- U.S. deliveries from primary storage of distillte fuels oil (home heating and diesel) in July 2,748,000 b/d; deliveries of distillate same month 1991 were 2,648,000 b/d.
- Percentage of U.S. crude oil from offshore wells 15.8% in 1991; percentage of natural gas from offshore 26.5% in 1990.
- Count of active rotary drilling rigs in U.S. as announced 8/14/92 was 678; average for 1991 was 860; all-time high of 4,530 announced 12/28/81. Record low announced 6/12/92 (Baker Hughes Inc., Houston).

Argentina deal blocked

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Entergy Corp.'s proposed $95 million purchase of a government-owned power plant and electric distribution system in Argentina should be blocked by federal regulators, a consumer group contended Wednesday.

If Entergy loses money on the deal, customers of its U.S. electric subsidiaries would wind up paying higher rates, a spokesman for Louisiana-based Alliance for Affordable Energy said.

But an Entergy spokesman said the investment would "not affect our retail customers at all," regardless of profit or loss. Entergy is the holding company of Louisiana Power and Light Co., New Orleans Public Service Inc., Mississippi Power and Light Co. and Arkansas Power and Light Co.

The four companies serve about 1.7 million electric customers. Entergy also is attempting to obtain state and federal approval for the acquisition of Gulf States Utilities Co., which serves Louisiana and Texas.

"We did this for investment purposes," said Harry Wadsworth, an Entergy spokesman. "We felt like it was something we couldn't pass up. It was a great opportunity."

According to Wadsworth, Entergy has a 10 percent share of two consortiums that are involved in two projects: the $90.1 million purchase of Costanera natural gas and oil-fired power plant, and the $511 million purchase of half of the electric distribution system in Buenos Aires.

Argentina's government sought foreign investors for both projects as part of a national privatization plan, Wadsworth said.

If the SEC approves Entergy's involvement, the company's share would be about $95 million, Wadsworth said.

Gary L. Groesch, executive director of the Alliance, contends that the investment violates a 1935 federal law concerning ownership of foreign utilities by U.S. holding companies. Wadsworth said the purchase is legal.

The potential hazard to ratepayers is the mixture of regulated and unregulated aspects of a utility holding company, Groesch said. The electric service companies owned by Entergy answer to state public utility commissions. Foreign investment is virtually unregulated, he said.

"If this Argentinean situation goes into bankruptcy, that may affect the financial standing of Entergy, which may have to be reflected on the rate of return in its core business," Groesch said.

PITTS: Pay for promo

the cost of AFRED does it get 90 percent of the resources. Those are questions to be answered.

Krueger says it is not a matter of limits. "If CNG pays into the fund, they can do whatever they want to. We have never set limits. The propane people came up with that amount for the fund."

Asked if TRC should not be promoting all alternative fuels without a fund to cloud the picture, Commission Chairman Lena Guerrero said it was a matter of resources: "Sure if we had the resources to do that, it would be ideal, but AFRED is just a resource base. It provices propane with a marketing campaign they would not have had before, and that has to be good for Texas."

Like Krueger she doesn't feel the Commission has been backed into a corner on alternative fuels. "The legislature set up the fund so that any alternative fuel that pays into it can be promoted. It just happened that the first guys to beat everyone else (natural gas) to the punch was propane."

Said Gurerro: "We can't get into a competitive spirit on alternative fuels. We don't need to fight each other. We have to promote all Texas fuels."

It's a dream scheme, but the reality of the situation is that propane and natural gas are locked in a vigorous, head-on competitive battle for fleet conversions, at a time when Texas is moving closer to the mandates of the Texas Clean Air Bill. To have the Texas Railroad Commission, at this critical time, come down heavier on one side over the other is awkward to say the least.

Previously the Commission could support oil, gas, propane, CNG or anything else it saw fit to promote without controversy, because money was not a factor. But the new pay-for-promotion aspect of AFRED has cast TRC in an entirely new role. One can only hope the situation is resolved to everyone's satisfaction.

Texas Mid-Continent Oil to honor two

Staff report

AUSTIN — Two Houstonians, Goerge P. Mitchell, an independent operator, and Frank H. Richardson, the president and chief executive officer of Shell Oil Company, have received the Texas petroleum industry's highest honor - the Distinguished Service Award of Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association.

Mitchell, chairman, chief executive officer, and president of Mitchell Energy & Development Corporation, one of the nation's largest independent natural gas and crude oil producers, and Richardson, who was elected to his present position in 1988, were selected by a committee comprised exclusively of former recipients of the award.

Formal presentations and plaques signifying the award here made at a noon luncheon on Thursday, September 17, at the Hotel Crescent Court in Dallas during the Association's 73rd Annual Meeting.

The 1992 presentations will mark the 57th consecutive year that the award has been presented to petroleum industry leaders in recognition of extraordinary service to the industry during their business careers.

The presentation to Mitchell was made by James D. Woods of Houston, chairman of the board, president, chief executive officer, and director of Baker Hughes Incorporated, while the presentation to Richardson was made by Ray L. Hunt of Dallas, chairman, chief executive officer, and director of Hunt Oil Company.

Mitchell, a native of Galveston, is a graduate of Texas A&M University where he received a degree in petroleum engineering with additional emphasis in geology. During his career, Mitchell has been active in the drilling of approximately 8,000 wells, including more than 1,000 wildcats, and he and his company have made upwards of 200 crude oil and 350 natural gas discoveries.

Mitchell's company also is a major real estate developer in the Houston-Galveston area. Its largest single developmental undertaking is The Woodlands, a 25,000-acre new community located 27 miles north of downtown Houston.

He is a member of the National Petroleum Council, the Society of Petroleum Engineers, the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, and the All-American Wildcatters. Mitchell served as a member of Texas' Select Committee on Higher Education and the Texas Governor's Science and Technology Council.

Honors accorded Mitchell include Texas A&M University's distinguished alumni award in 1977; the medal for distinguished achievement from the Texas A&M Geosciences and Earth Resources Advisory Council in 1980; the Horatio Alger award, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers' first award for distinguished service to the petroleum industry, and an honorary doctoral degree from the University of Houston in 1984.

Richardson, a native of South Dakota, holds a B.S. degree in engineering from the South Dakota School of Mines and Technology. He joined Shell Oil as a engineer in Midland in 1955. Following two years of military service, he held various assignments in exploration and production operations. He was elected vice-president, corporate planning, in 1978. He moved to senior vice-president, adminstrtion, in 1980, and became executive vice-president, products, in 1983.

Richardson serves on the board of directors of the American Petroleum Institute and is a member of the National Petroleum Council and chairman of its Natural Gas Committee. He is a member of the Conference Board, the Business Roundtable, the Society of Petroleum Engineers, and serves on the board of directors of the Science Engineering Fair. He is a trustee of the U.S. Council for International Business and a member of the Business-Higher Education Forum.

(From 1E)

"At this point, we don't know what the impact will be on our company. We'll be implementing the producing technique but we don't know what the results will be, and we don't know what the cost will be," he said.

"We've reworked wells in the field," he added during a phone interview from his Fort Worth office. Arch holds 100 percent interest in and operates 14 wells in the field and holds a stake in the unit Chevron operates.

The company acquired its first stake in the field in 1989 and since, then, Scroggins said, " We've been reworking the wells, testing up and down the wells. We asked the commission for allowables to incorporate our testing procedures. After testimony, they withheld permission and held a general hearing in February. A second larger hearing was held in April."

Arch, according to Scroggins, is in the process of installing the pumps and implementing the infrastructure necessary to follow the order and has established an initial goal of producing 20,000 to 30,000 barrels of water per day, allowing the company to produce 10,000 to 15,000 Mcf in addition to the crude and above existing allowables.

He said "this is a big issue for Arch because our holdings in the field are a relatively big property for the company. And, being a public company, our shareholders are interested. But until we find out what the cost to produce the associated water is, the impact on the bottom line is undetermined."

He said that if Bass and Chevron prove to be correct in this production method, it could mean a considerable increase in Arch's reserves.

HORIZONTAL: Slips

(From 1E)

Meanwhile, drilling was completed on some 74 horizontal wells during the month of August, raising to 1,950 the number of horizontal wells completed in Texas since 1984.

While the number of permits have continued to slide, the horizontal application which was originally confined to South Texas is spreading. Overall, operators in 79 Texas counties have now received Railroad Commission permits to drill horizontal wells. Besides the counties previously noted, 205 permits for horizontal wells have been granted to operators in Brazos County, 195 horizontal permits have been issued for projects in Gonzales County, while 70 permits have been granted to operators drilling horizontal holes in Wilson County.

Martin yields Fusselman discovery

Staff report

A Fusselman discovery has been completed in Martin County, a half-mile south of 8,000 ft. Spraberry production in the Spraberry (Trend Area), 1-3/4 miles northeast of 10,787 ft. Fusselman production in the Caprock East field, nine miles northeast of Stanton.

BARBARA FASKEN, Midland, completed the No. 1 Jewell Hopper "36" to flow 261 barrels of 48 gravity crude, 64 Mcfd and 31 barrels of water on an 8/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 870 psi. The well flowed from perforations 10,620 to 10,626 ft., with no treatment reported.

Permitted as an 11,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 10,647 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 10,634 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,491 ft., include the Dean at 7,76 ft., Strawn at 9,680, Lower Mississippian at 10,210, Woodford Shale at 10,442 and Fusselman at 10,628 ft.

Location is 1,800 ft. from south and 853 ft. from west lines of Section 36, Block 35, T-1-N, T&P survey, Abst. 718.

Dual oil producer tested in King County

PACIFIC ENTERPRISES OIL CO. U.S.A. has completed a dual producer in King County, 17 miles southeast of Guthrie.

The No. 48-U S.B. Burnett Estate "GG" was completed as a Twin Peaks (Strawn) producer, pumping 87 barrels of 35 gravity crude and 14 barrels of water from perforations 5,270 to 5,286 ft. The interval was acidized with 750 gallons of 7.5 percent acid and fractured with 15,500 lbs. sand and 10,500 gallons of gel.

The other completed, the No. 47-L "GG", was completed in the GG (Strawn 5400) field, with details to follow.

On ground elevation of 1,798 ft., formation tops include the Coleman Junction at 2,451 ft., Cisco Reef at 3,607, Twin Peaks Sandstone at 5,268, Strawn 5400 Sandstone at 5,490, and Strawn Limestone at 5,640 ft.

Location is 2,068 ft. from south and 208 ft. from east lines of S.B. Burnett Survey, SF 15570, Abst. 1283.

King County field gets new producer

New Tannehill production has been added to the NA field of King County.

PACIFIC ENTERPRISES OIL CO. U.S.A. potentialed the No. 22 S.B. Burnett Estate "UUU" to pump 13 barrels of 35 gravity crude from perforations 2,768 to 2,775 ft. The interval was acidized with 500 gallons acid.

Permitted as a 3,300 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 2,910 ft. and plugged back to 2,873 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 2,909 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 1,729 ft., include the Coleman Junction at 2,322 ft., Stockwether Limestone at 2,736, Tannehill B Sandstone at 2,769, and Basal Tannehill Sandstone at 2,836 ft.

Location is 860 ft. from southwest and 50 ft. from northwest lines of Section 7, Block X, R.M. Thompson survey, 17 miles southeast of Guthrie.

Meet Our "Elite"

Nancy Estes is congratulated by Vickey Banks, Manager of Temporary Resources.

It pays to work for Temporary Resources in more ways than one! Donna Robertson, account executive for Temporary Resources, recently visited the office where Nancy Estes was on assignment. Nancy was showing her "Temporary Resources Pride" by wearing her "Elite Temp" pin which earned her another bonus.

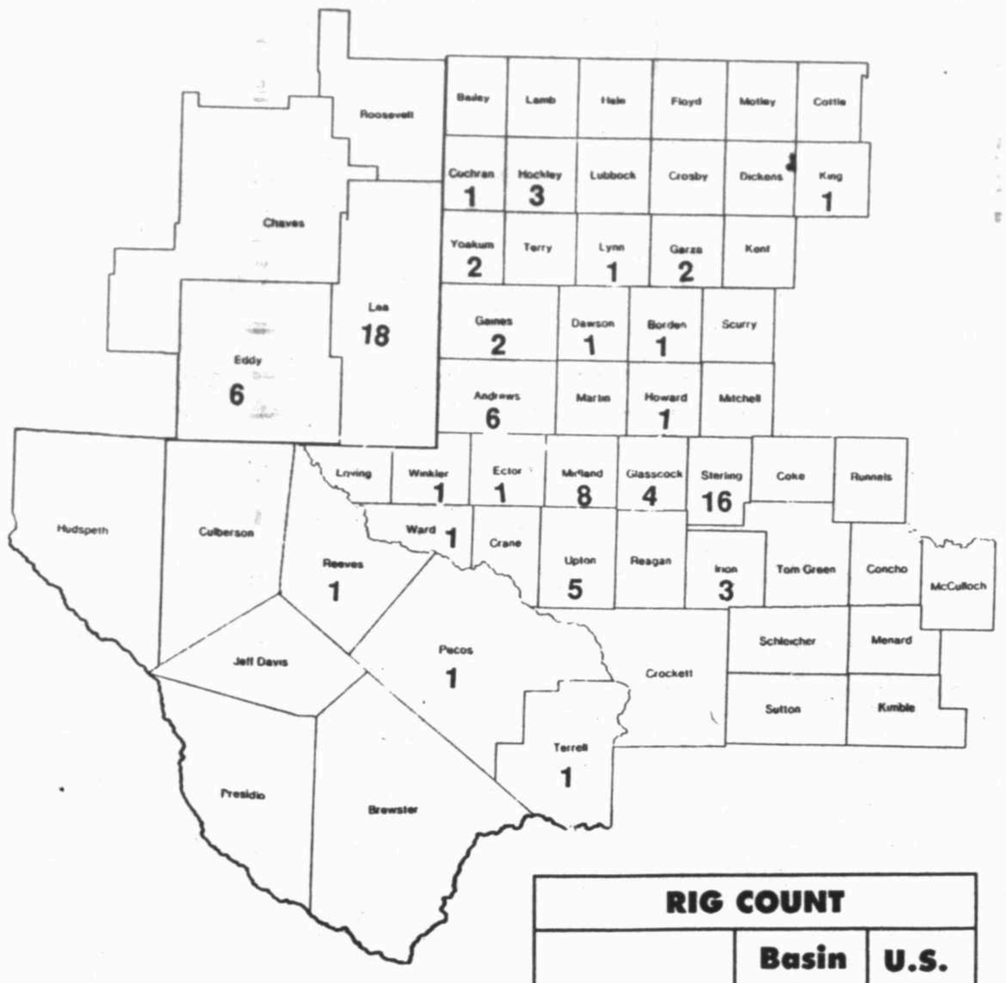

Temporary Resources is the exclusive home of Midland's "Elite Temps". They earn this distinction by receiving superior ratings from the companies for which they work. Why settle for less when you can have the best and at no extra charge!

Let Temporary Resources Be Your Human Resources Support Staff. Put our years of experience in the personnel field to work for you!

We stack the deck in your favor.

By developing and patenting our Continuous Mix Gel (CMG) System, Smith Energy Services created the industry standard for liquid fracturing gel systems.

This saves you time and money by improving well performance and delivering high quality gel "on-the-fly" with no wasted materrials or disposal problems.

And there is no tank-to-tank viscosity or pH variance as with batch-mixed gels.

We have a full range of products including refined guar, HPG and CMHPG which have been formulated to yield maximum hydration in a minimum amount of time, even at lower temperatures.

The dynamics of our system allow tapered gel loadings with flexible viscosity at the highest rate in the industry. And with the in-line viscometer and mass flowmeter for exact measurements, it is the best monitored and most easily controlled fracturing gel system.

So when you want uniform, high quality gel mixed "on-the'fly," without paying for unused materials, try our CMG System. It's all part of our commitment to excellence.

And you'll have the ace in the hole.

Smith Energy Services. We work best under pressure.

Arco selling pipeline, wells in Texas

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Atlantic Richfield Co. has agreed to sell 77 miles of natural gas pipeline and interest in gas and oil wells in Texas to a Pennsylvania company, officials said Thursday.

Castle Energy Corp. of Blue Bell, Pa. also will buy several ARCO gas contracts, Castle and ARCO officials said. The net closing price will be about $94 million, Castle officials said. The deal should be completed by the end of the year.

"It's part of an overall strategy of a company to evaluate where its strengths lie and what its needs are," ARCO spokesman Albert Greenstein said Thursday. "This particular pipeline system and wells were not central to our operation."

ARCO is based in Los Angeles. The approximately 100 wells and pipeline are located in Rusk County, Texas, north of Henderson. The pipeline is used to move natural gas from wells and other pipelines to sales points.

The gas contracts include agreements between producers and the pipeline.

BRIEFS

American Gas Association names officers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — David R. Jones, president and CEO of Atlanta Gas Light Co., Atlanta, Ga., leads the slate of new officer nominees for the American Gas Association's 1992-93 year. Jones is nominated to serve as chairman of the association. Robert L. Ridgley, president and CEO of Northwest Natural Gas Co., Porland, Ore., has been nominated as A.G.A. first vice chairman and Robert B. Catell, president and CEO of The Brooklyn Union Co., as second vice chairman.

Hadson chairman, CEO announces retirement

The Board of Directors of Hadson Energy Resources Corp. today announced the retirement of T.K. Hendrick as Chairman, Chief Executive Officer and President of the Company, effective September 10, 1992. Mr. Hendrick, who is 69, has served in such capacity with the Company and its predecessor since 1970. He has agreed to serve as a consultant for the Company for a five year period and to continue as a director until February 1993.

American Exploration, Prudential reach accord

HOUSTON — American Exploration Company today announced that it has reached an agreement in principle with The Prudential Insurance Company of America to acquire Prudential's equity stake in Canadian Conquest Exploration Company, a majority owned subsidiary of American. Prudential will transfer its 40 percent stake in Canadian Conquest to American and pay $6.5 million to acquire 2.0 million shares of American common stock and warrants to purchase ann additional 2.1 million shares at $3.38 per share.

In addition, Canadian Conquest has agreed to prepay a portion of its outstanding note to Prudential. In connection with the $6.5 million prepayment that reduces the Canadian Conquest note from $18.5 million to $12.0 million, Prudential has agreed to reduce the interest rate on the balance of the indebtedness to 10 percent from the current rate of 12.76 percent. The agreement is subject to final documentation and is expected to close in early September.

NYMEX raises premium on West Texas Sour

NEW YORK — The New York Mercantile Exchange will increase the premium buyers must pay for delivery of West Texas Sour crude oil against the NYMEX sour crude oil futures contract from $.50 per barrel to $.90 per barrel beginning with December deliveries.

At the same time, the Missouri City Junction will be added as a designated pipeline connection point in the Houston area for delivery of the contract.

Information provided by Dwight's Energydata, Inc.

The hardest-working contractor in the nation is the pace-setting contractor in the Permian Basin: Grace Drilling Company.
We've drilled thousands of wells from Alaska to Florida - put our experience to work for you today.
Working hard is how we acquired some of the best rigs in the oil patch - and the talent to run them right. And we'll be around next year, working for you, because we're backed by the strength of Grace Energy Corporation. So when you're ready to go to work with the best crews in the business, give us a call - we'll be there.
Grace sets the pace in the Permian Basin.

MEETINGS

Petroleum accountants hold monthly meeting

The Petroleum Accountants Society of the Permian Basin will meet Tuesday at the Petroleum Club.

The technical session will begin at 5:30 p.m. and be presented by Mark Leaverton of Leaverton & Atnipp. His topic will be "Environmental Liabilities."

Social hour will begin at 6 p.m., followed by dinner at 6:45 p.m. The guest speaker will be Roy C. Williamson Jr. of Williamson Petroleum Consultants, who will speak on "The Petroleum Industry in the Commonwealth of Independent States."

Horizontal recompletions topic for SPE group

The Trans-Pecos section, Society of Petroleum Engineers, will meet Wednesday at the Odessa Country Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Guest speaker will be Warren J. Winters, who will speak on "Developments in Horizontal Recompletions." Recent developments in horizontal drilling technology are enabling operators to economically recomplete existing wells as horizontal producers and injectors.

Winters is a staff research engineer in the drilling mechanics and hydraulics group at the Amoco Production Research Center in Tulsa.

Cost is $14 per person.

WTGS host Sandia Laboratories representative

John C. Lorenz of Sandia National Laboratories in Albuquerque will be the guest speaker at Tuesday's meeting of the West Texas Geological Society. The meeting will be at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Lorenz will speak on "Well-Bore Geometries for Optimum Fracture Characterization and Drainage."

He received his doctorate from Princeton University in 1981. He worked for the U.S. Geological Survey from 1975 to 1977 and joined Sandia in 1981, where he remains.

SPE section to sponsor fracture seminar

The Trans-Pecos Section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers Production Study Group will hold a three-hour seminar on Oct. 1 at the Odessa Country Club from 11:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Dr. S.A. Holditch of S.A. Holditch and Associates Inc. will present "Hydraulic Fracture Treatment Design and Implementation: The Benefits of Applying New Technology." He will explain how companies can apply 3-D fracture design models, in-situ stress profiling techniques, and fracture treatment quality control to improve gas production and profit. It will be based on research results generated during a decade of Gas Research Institute research into hydraulic fracture treament, design and execution.

Lunch will be served at 11:30. Cost is $14 including lunch and text. Reservations should be made by Sept. 29 by calling 368-1618.

OSHA training course planned by area AGC

The West Texas chapter of the Associated General Contractors of America will sponsor an OSHA Training Course for Midland-Odessa employers Sept. 28-29 and Oct. 26-17 at the Best Western Motel at Midland International Airport.

The course will be presented by Construction Safety & Health Inc. of Austin, represented by Del Tally and Gary Douthit.

The 10-hour course meets requirements of the Department of Labor for safety training and education of employees in the recognition and avoidance of unsafe conditions on the jobsite.

The course will be held from 4 to 6:30 p.m. both days. Cost is $95 for AGC members, $175 for non-members. Registration can be made by calling 915/698-1000 by Thursday.

Harken wins Colombian exploration

N.Y. Times News Service

GRAND PRAIRIE — Harken Energy Corp. said it has been awarded rights to explore for oil and natural gas in the petroleum-rich Llanos Basin of Colombia.

This represents the third foreign venture for the little Grand Prairie-based company, which is drilling for oil in the Persian Gulf emirate of Bahrain and pursuing energy opportunities in Venezuela.

Harken said it has been awarded the exclusive right to explore for, develop and produce oil and gas throughout 350,000 acres within the Alcaravan area of Colombia.

Alcaravan is located in the Llanos Basin, which includes the giant Cano Limon and Cusiana fields. Alcaravan is 140 miles east of the Colombian capital of Bogota and 35 miles southeast of the Cusiana field, which analysts say might contain anywhere from 1 to 10 billion barrels of oil.

Triton Energy of Dallas, a modest-sized independent, holds a significant stake in the Cusiana field.

Harken said it has reached a contractual agreement with Ecopetrol, the Colombian national oil company, that gives each a 50 percent working interest in Alcaravan. Harken would receive 40 percent of the production revenues from successful oil and gas wells after royalty payments were made to Ecopetrol.

The agreement calls for Harken to conduct a seismic and exploratory drilling program over the next six years. At the end of each of the six years, Harken has the option to withdraw from the contract or commit to another year.

The term of the contract would extend 22 years from the date of any commercial discovery of oil and gas, Harken said.

The agreement represents "a very exciting exploration opportunity for Harken and another milestone in our plan to solidify a significant international presence in the oil and gas industry," said company chairman Mikel Faulkner.

He also emphasized that two Llanos Basin discoveries — the Cano Limon and Cusiana fields — represent two of the biggest oil finds in the Western Hemisphere in the past 20 years.

The billion-barrel Cano Limon field was discovered in 1984. Analysts say the Cusiana field, in which additional exploratory wells are now being drilled, could prove to be the largest oil discovery in the hemisphere since the mid-1970s.

However, the Alcaravan area in which Harken has exploration rights doesn't appear to be on the same geological trend with the Cusiana discovery, said Paul Ashton, a Houston oil consultant and geologist familiar with Colombia.

"You're still in the same basin (the Llanos), but you're not looking at giant-sized prospects," Ashton said. "I think you're looking at smaller prospects."

Nevertheless, the Alcaravan area still offers the potential for finding substantial oil and gas reserves that could be economically developed, Ashton said. And with the Cusiana field being developed nearby, much of the costly infrastructure such as pipelines already will be in place in the region, he said.

Alcaravan's proximity to the much-ballyhooed Cusiana discovery should make it easier for Harken to find exploration partners who would help pay drilling costs in exchange for a share of production revenues, Ashton said.

Harken said it is premature for the company to comment on how it might finance drilling in Colombia. But company spokesman Dale Brooks said it is "certainly a possibility" that Harken would seek partners to help absorb the exploration costs.

Harken is receiving funding from Bass Enterprises Production Co., the oil and gas unit of the billionaire Bass family of Fort Worth, for its exploration project in Bahrain. Harken drilled one dry hole in Bahrain and plans to drill a second well later this year or early next year.

A single Llanos Basin exploration well in the Cusiana field, located in the rugged foothills of the Andes Mountains, costs as much as $20 million to drill and may be as much as three miles deep.

Maxus announces test on Bolivian producer

Staff report

DALLAS — Maxus Energy Corp. announced test results of the Surubi #2 well on its Monroe Block in Bolivia. The well tested at a combined rate of 1,530 barrels of oil per day (bpd) and 920 thousand cubic feet of gas per day (mcfpd) from two zones. Maxus previously announced that multiple zones were found in the well.

The upper zone tested 450 bpd and 450 mcfpd at perforation between 11,050 and 11,088 feet (true vertical depth) with a flowing tubing pressure of 1,150 pounds per square inch and a 14/64-inch choke.

The lower zone, which was gravel packed, tested 1,080 bpd and 470 mcfpd at perforations between 11,161 and 11,203 (true vertical depth). The zone had a flowing tubing pressure of 450 pounds per square inch and a 24/64-inch choke. Shut-in pressure at the surface was 1,150 pounds per square inch. The oil gravity is 44 degrees API for both zones.

Maxus previously announced the successful drilling of the Surubi #2 and the drilling and completion of the discovery well, Surubi #1.

"We're encouraged by the oil flow rates encountered so far," said George Pasley, senior vice president of operations for the southern hemisphere. "We will continue testing to determine the extent of the field and will be evaluating the additional seismic, which is currently being acquired."

Maxus is operator and hold 100% working interest in the 3.4-million-acre block, which is located about 155 miles northwest of Santa Cruz. Under terms of the contract, Maxus will receive, after tax and royalty, 55% of the production during the first three years, while YPFB, the Bolivian state oil company, will receive the remaining 45%.

USX, Armco to sell oil machinery firm

PITTSBURGH (AP) — USX Corp. and Armco Inc. have agreed to sell their 50-50 partnership in a manufacturer of oil-field equipment to Empresas Lanzagorta, a Mexican company.

USX will receive $120 million in cash and notes for its interest in National-Oilwell, the Houston-based manufacturer. Armco, based in Parsippany, N.J., will receive $70 million in cash as well as subordinated notes and a 15 percent equity interest in the new enterprise formed by Empresas.

Armco said the transaction is expected to result in a loss to Armco of $25 million to $35 million. USX spokesman William Keslar said the company has not determined the financial impact of the sale.

National-Oilwell employs about 3,000 people at plants around the world.

Empresas, based in Mexico City, will combine National-Oilwell and some of its own businesses in a new enterprise that will be based in Houston.

Pittsburgh-based USX, the nation's largest steelmaker, and Armco formed the joint venture in 1986. USX said the sale was part of the company's effort to shed assets unrelated to its core businesses, oil exploration and production and steelmaking.

The parties hope to close the sale by the end of 1992. The definitive agreement is subject to a variety of conditions, including financing and approvals by the boards of directors.

Texas Permits to Drill
Monthly Totals, 1991-1992

Texas Well Completions
Monthly, 1991-1992

Texas oil statistics

The Texas Railroad Commission issued 1,097 drilling permits in August, down from 1,114 in August 1991. The total included 689 permits to drill new oil and gas tests. There were 157 permits issued in the Midland district. Total drilling permits in 1992 to-date is 8,069, a 15 percent decrease from 9,511 during the same period of 1991. The commission also reported 181 gas, 427 oil and 27 service completions in August, compared to 211 gas, 472 oil and 75 service completions during August last year. There were 86 oil and seven gas completions in the Midland district. Total well completions for 1992 to-date is 5,170, down 24 percent from the 6,811 recorded for the same period in 1991.

Union Texas producing two Pakistani fields

Staff report

HOUSTON — Union Texas Petroleum Holdings, Inc. reported that its subsidiary, Union Texas Pakistan, Inc., has begun production from two additional natural gas fields on the Badin I block in southeastern Pakistan. With the new fields onstream, the Union Texas Pakistan-operated joint venture's gross gas production capacity has increased from 130 million cubic feet a day to approximately 200 million cubic feet.

Union Texas Pakistan, with a 30% working interest, serves as operator of a joint venture group which includes Occidental Petroleum (Pakistan) Inc., also with a 30% interest, and Oil and Gas Development Corporation, a Pakistan government-owned company, with a 40% working interest.

"The addition of the Nari and Bukhari fields to our gas production system is an important milestone in our 15 years of operations in Pakistan," said William M. Krips, Union Texas' Senior Vice President-Exploration and Production. "Union Texas Pakistan is committed to increasing its gas production, and these new field swill help us achieve this important goal."

The Nari field is capable of producing at a daily rate of about 20 million cubic feet of gas and 100 barrels of condensate. The Bukhari field is capable of producing at a daily rate of approximately 50 million cubic feet of gas and 1,500 barrels of condensate.

With the two new fields, Union Texas Pakistan now produces natural gas from five gas fields on the Badin block. The Union Texas group commenced gas production in February 1989 at a rate of 30 million cubic feet a day. The company estimates that gas production will average approximately 150 million cubic feet a day in 1992. The gas is transported via a pipeline operated by Sui Southern Gas Company and enters Sui Southern's main transmission gas line near Hyderabad, which serves industrial and utility customers.

Frontier buys properties from Arco

Staff report

Frontier Acquisition Corp. a wholly owned subsidiary of Frontier Natural Gas Corporation (an Oklahoma City based acquisition and production company) has recently added billions of cubic feet of natural gas to its reserve banks. The purchase of Oklahoma and Kansas properties from ARCO Oil & Gas was made in conjunction with Frontier's joint venture partner Centran Corporation, a Minnesota based natural gas marketing firm. The acquisition consisted of two separate purchases which closed very close together and had a combined price in excess of $3.5 million.

The properties purchased include the Northeast Cedardale Field, which has 16 wells in Northwest Oklahoma's Major County and 8 wells in Stephens County, Kansas, which together equal approximately 6 bcf (billion cubic feet) of proved development reserves and an additional 1 bcf (approx.) of proved undeveloped reserves. Frontier will operate the Northeast Cedardale wells.

Russians seek aid for oil chemicals

HOUSTON (AP) — Russians are looking in Texas for foreign investors and expertise to help modernize their country's refineries and petrochemical plants, executives told Houston businessmen.

"The oil refining industry in Russia has not kept up with world standards," said Valeri Kuzmin, president of Neftechimexport, the trading company for the industry.

The Russians need to improve refinery efficiency, refine more heavy crude, produce more unleaded gasoline and lessen environmental damage, said Nikolai Diurik, chairman of the oil refining committee with the Russian Federation Ministry of Fuels and Energy. "About 30 percent of what we refine now is heavy fuel oil."

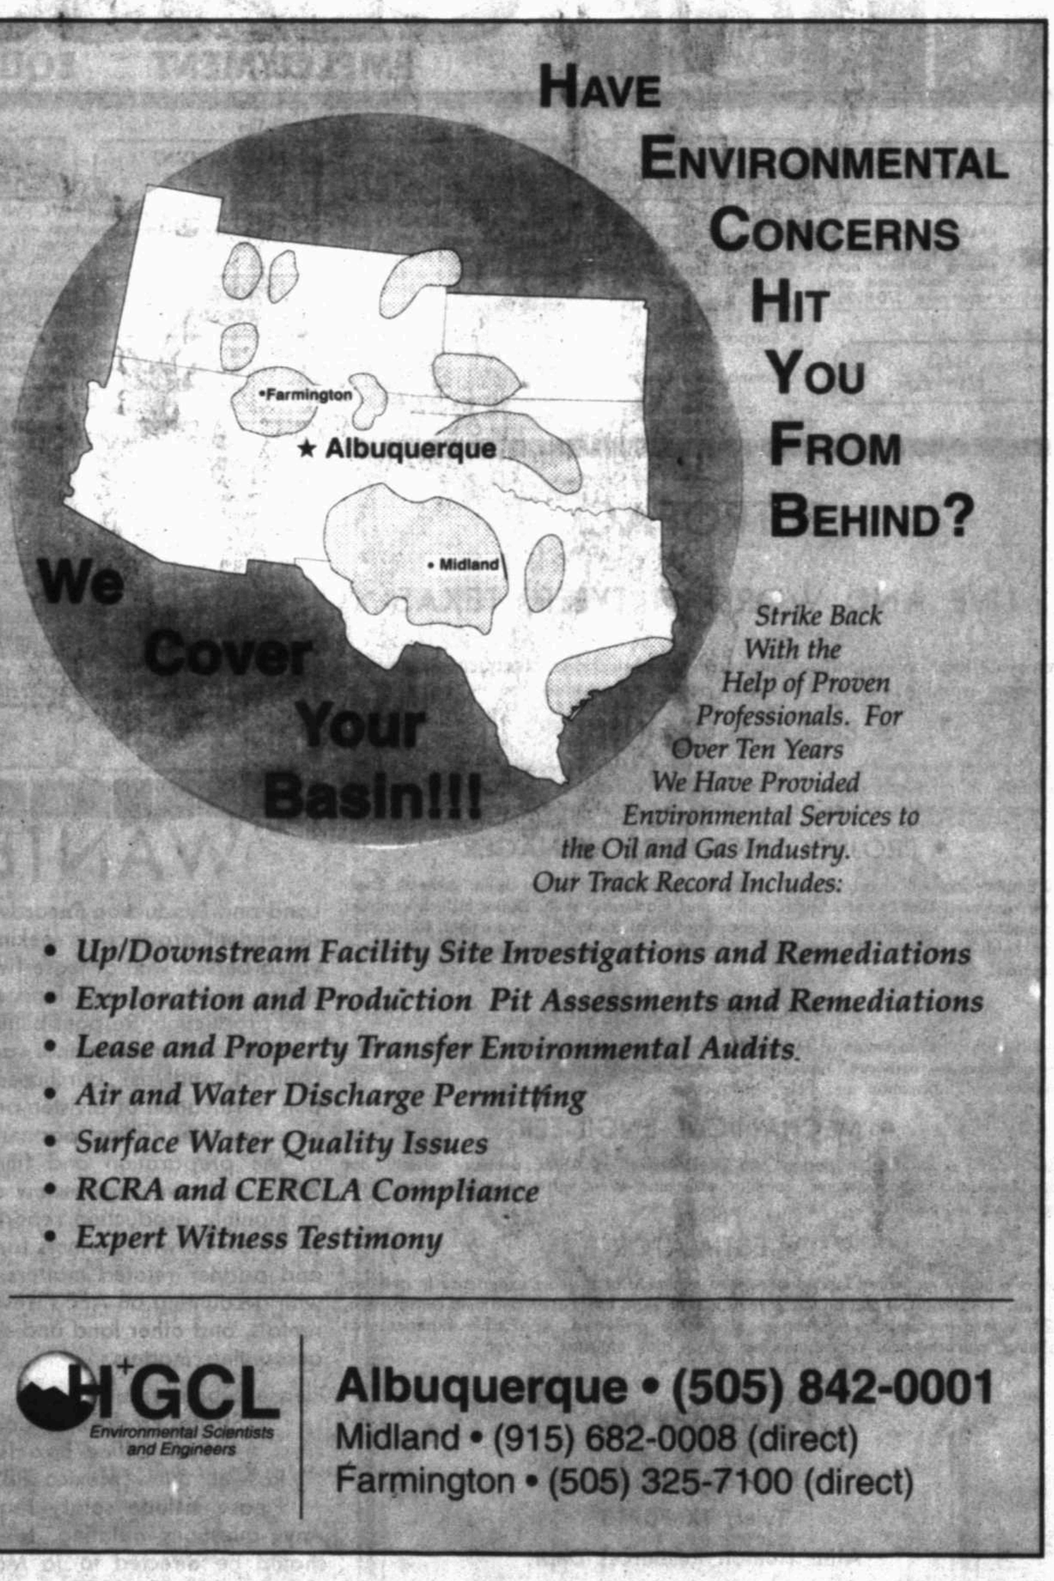

About 25 representatives from Russia's largest refineries visited Houston-based energy companies this month, seeking technology and money to upgrade their plants by 1995.

East bloc refiners need mostly money and knowledge of how to conduct business in a free market environment from foreign investors, said Peter Killen, executive vice president with the Wright Killen & Co. consulting firm.

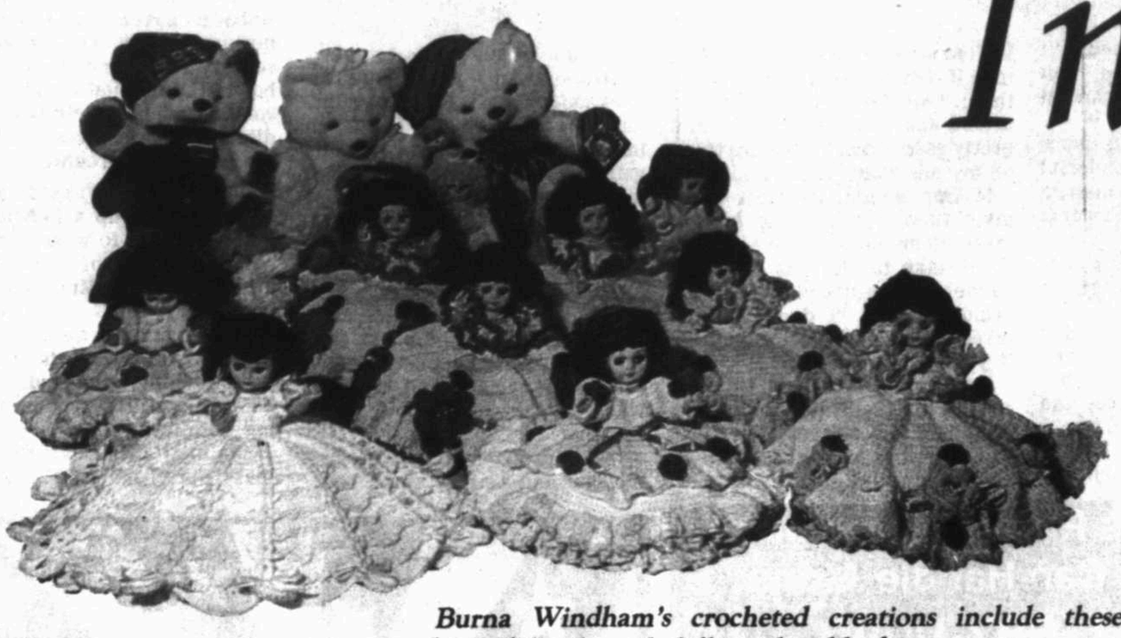

Kuzmin said the Russians initially are seeking investors who are willing to take refined products as repayment.

Kuzmin said Russian refiners also hope to attract U.S. partners who will "help work out technical aspects" through joint ventures. Eventually, he said, Russia plans to privatize its refining industry, creating stockholder companies that are open to foreign investors.

Still, Russia is not able to export gasoline and products now available for export tend to be heavier crudes such as fuel oil.

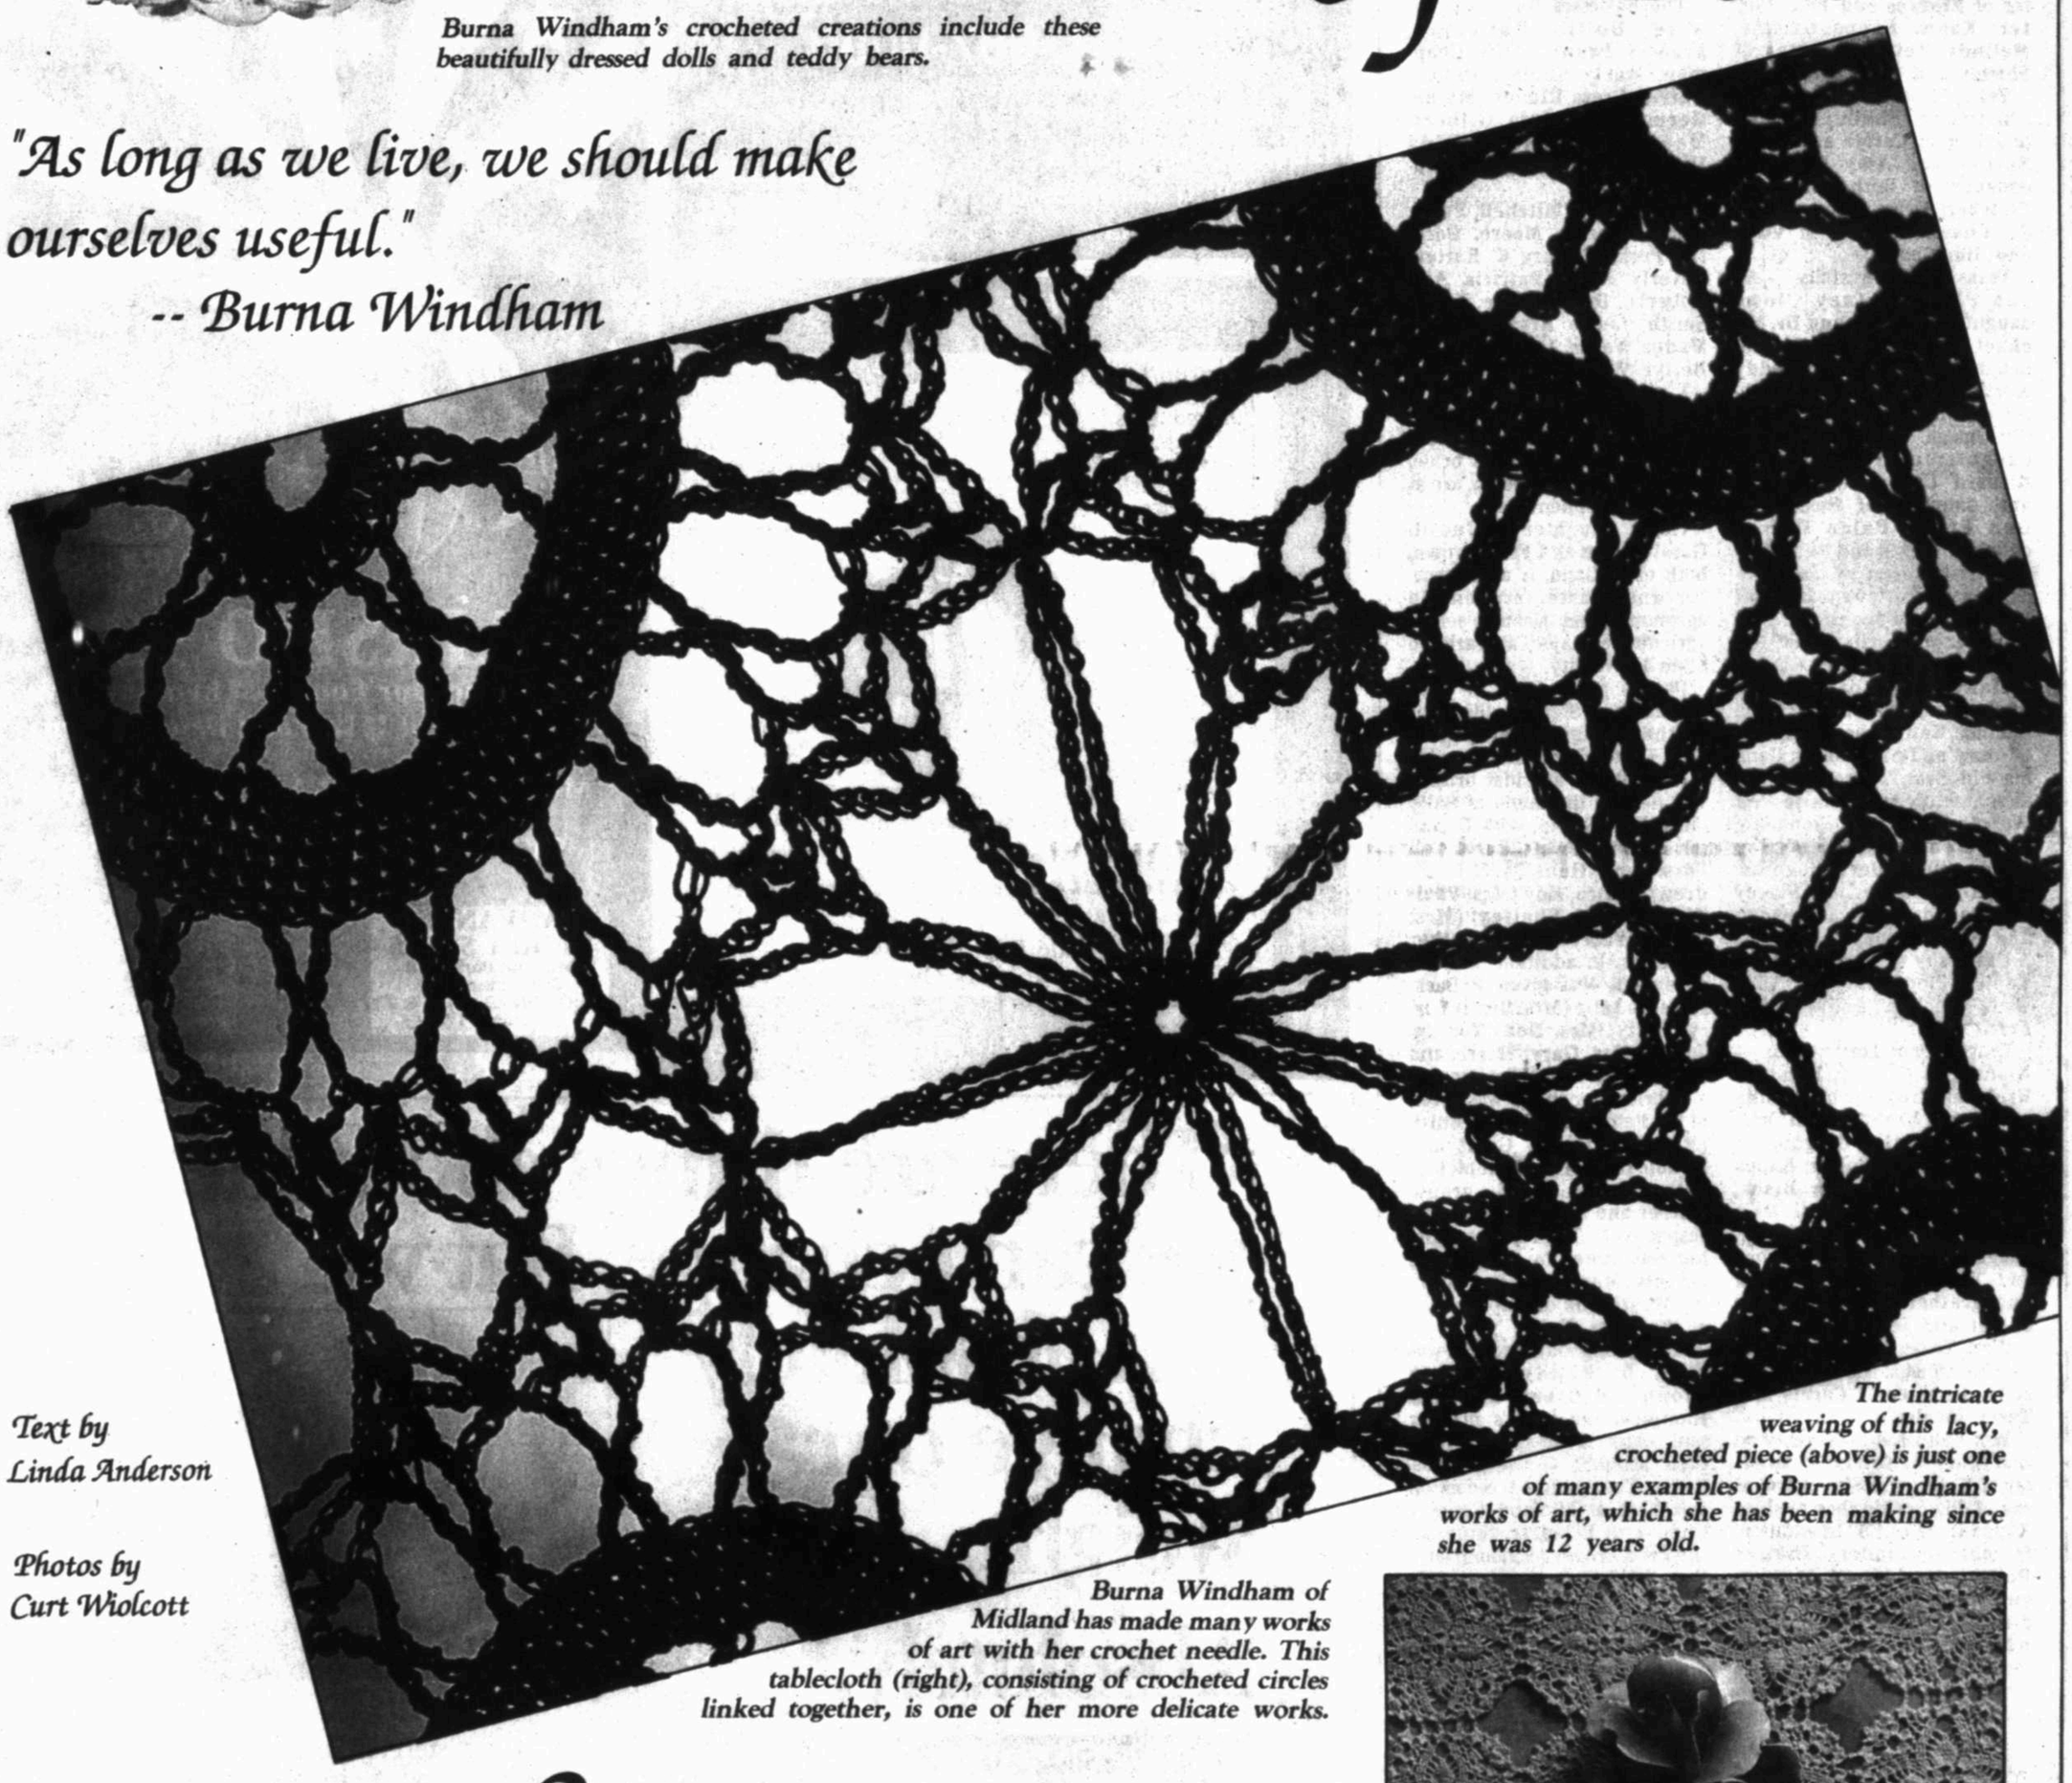

Interwoven Treasures of Love

"As long as we live, we should make ourselves useful."

The intricate weaving of this lacy, crocheted piece (above) is just one of many examples of Burna Windham's works of art, which she has been making since she was 12 years old.

Burna Windham of Midland has made many works of art with her crochet needle. This tablecloth (right), consisting of crocheted circles linked together, is one of her more delicate works.

Some artists work in oils or watercolors or clay. Some work with brushes or easels.

Burna Windham of Midland is an artist in yarn. Her tools are a crochet hook and a crochet hoop, plus plenty of skill, desire and the willingness to take the time to create a masterpiece.

Mrs. Windham learned to crochet when she was 12, she said, thanks to an elderly next-door neighbor. "Back then there wasn't much for kids to do, and I was bored," she laughed.

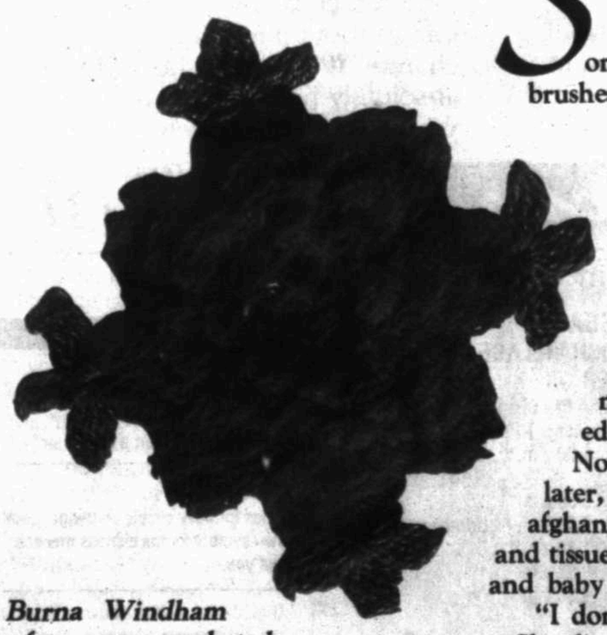

The neighbor's husband made a crochet hoop, and the neighbor started saving twine for her, "and that's what I learned on," Mrs. Windham said. "You advance as you go."

Now, six children, 23 grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren later, Mrs. Windham still loves her craft. She has made such items as afghans, tablecloths, lace collars, doll clothes, covers for hair spray cans and tissue boxes, crochet and embroidered pillow cases, beaded handbags, and baby afghans, but her current favorite is beaded doilies.

"I don't know why, because it's tedious," she said with a laugh.

She displays and sells her handiwork in as many crafts fairs as she can,

SOME 250 WOMEN gathered at the Midland Woman's Club last weekend for a lovely fall tea.

The party decor featured an autumn harvest of flowers, ranging from sunflowers to Weeping Rose.

Delicious tea-time refreshments included finger sandwiches, an assortment of cookies, mints, nuts, spiced tea, coffee and Strawberry-Banana Punch.

While enjoying their visits with one another after the summer hiatus, guests browsed at the current display of art on the walls of the Great Hall. Featured throughout the month of September are the water colors of Midlander Max Perry and well worth the drive out to the clubhouse in Hogan Park to view.

The hostesses for the event were Dollie Ballenger, Frances Brown, Allis Chapman, Marty Conine, Dimple Currie, Greta Elmore, Minnie German, Virginia Gilbert, Mae Hendrickson, Hilda Hinds, Mable Humphrey, Lucile McCree.

Also Gladys Mitchell, Ferne Moore, Martha Moore, Dorothy Perkins, Mary K. Rattan, Beverly Riley, Patricia Ann Roberts, Dell Shettle, Hazel Smith, Leona Bryant Smith, Madge Wallis, Jane Ward and Bettye Windham.

AFTER A HONEYMOON to St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, Jason Westbrook and his bride, the former Heidi Brown, are at home in Stephenville.

Heidi, daughter of Judith Garst-Brown and Fred Brown, both of Midland, is an instructor and master student in agronomy, and Jason, a senior agriculture major, at Tarleton State University.

Parties were held in both Midland and Stephenville prior to their August wedding in First United Methodist Church.

In Midland, a bridal brunch was held at the home of Sally (Mrs. Bill) Stella, with Donna (Mrs. Don) Hewett, Carol Ann (Mrs. Lynn) Hunt, Jo (Mrs. Andrew) Stanco, Kay (Mrs. Paul) Thorpe and Shelley (Mrs. Alan) Warren as the other hostesses. In addition, a manicure party was given at Backstage by Julie (Mrs. Dean) Berry, Betty (Mrs. Don) Tomlin, Joetta (Mrs. Gary) Harris and Joely (Mrs. Nick) Tomlin.

A bridal luncheon was given at the Petroleum Club by Edith (Mrs. Robert M.) Garst and Debbie (Mrs. Kim) Rampick of Solana Beach, Calif., grandmother and sister of the bride, respectively. The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents, Mary Ann and Stanley Westbrook of Stephenville, at the Plaza Club.

A wedding day brunch was given by Randy and Lyn Brown and Debbie and Kim Rampick, the bride's brother and sister, respectively, and their spouses, at the Browns' home. The wedding reception was held at Midland Country Club, with a buffet dinner at the Fred Brown residence later that evening.

CROCHET: Crafts take time, patience and is planning on having a display in a seniors' crafts fair in November.

(From 1F)

"I make everything by hand," she said. "Now they have machines (to make crafted items) but that's not for me. Everything now is done by machine, and to me it takes away" from the quality of the item.

Of course, she admitted, "it takes a lot longer by hand," but when made by a loving hand it means that much more.

Because these handmade items are so special, they are wonderful to give as gifts, Mrs. Windham said. "My family always has works of mine.

"I raised six children, and I gave each one a crochet bedspread when they married."

Time and patience are needed to make large items by hand, such as afghans and bedspreads, but the rewards are great too, she said. "It takes me about two weeks to make an afghan, but I work steady. I don't get out much and I'm too nervous to sit and do nothing. If I'm worried about something, I sit down with a piece of thread and a crochet needle, and pretty soon I don't have anything on my mind but what I'm doing."

"If I'm worried about something, I sit down with a piece of thread and a crochet needle, and pretty soon I don't have anything on my mind but what I'm doing.'

— Burna Windham

Making handmade craft items takes time, but learning how to make them doesn't have too. "I didn't take too long to learn because I was interested," Mrs. Windham said. "I don't think it takes too long to learn something if you're interested."

And sometimes this interest runs in the family. Although Mrs. Windham said neither of her two daughters has learned to crochet, "one granddaughter wants to learn and I have hopes for her."

Although this granddaughter lives too far away for Mrs. Windham to be able to give her much instruction, when the two are together, they crochet. "She visited me this summer, and I taught her how to make the roses in the afghans, and she was so happy."

Mrs. Windham — and soon, her granddaughter — practice a skill and an art that most people can't do. "It's getting to be a lost art," she said. "Not too many people can do it anymore, and the ones who do, don't do roses and things like that.

"Some people know the basics," she said, but not the more elaborate details.

While her daughters don't crochet, they do help in other ways, their mother said. "My girls are always giving me ideas (for things to make). They come up with some weird ones, too!"

Throughout her life Mrs. Windham has been creating art with needle and yarn, and even major setbacks haven't kept her from her art. Cancer and the resultant surgery about nine years ago kept her in the hospital for about nine weeks, and have left her with a disability that makes it difficult for her to get around.

In spite of that, "as soon as I was able, I picked up a needle again and went back to work," she said.

The concept of "just sitting around" isn't in Mrs. Windham's vocabulary. She's never too far from her crochet needle or doily beads. "I think everybody should do something," she said. "I don't believe in sitting around and doing nothing.

"As long as we live we should make ourselves useful."

Smash Fiesta planned for Oct. 3

Staff report

It's Fiesta time again — Smash Fiesta that is, the annual fund-raiser benefiting the Bynum School, formerly the Developmental Disabilities Center.

The event will be Oct. 3 beginning with a doubles tennis tournament with a breakfast and lunch for all players.

The Fiesta begins at 7 p.m. Oct. 3 at the Midland Holiday Inn Convention Center. There will be a Mexican buffet dinner, along with a live and silent auction. The funky sounds of the TFC Band from Virginia Beach, Va., will be produced by Wemus Entertainment.

Smash Fiesta is organized by the Special Children's League. It benefits the Bynum School, named after founder and executive director Kay Bynum.

Since its inception eight years ago, the school has grown from eight students to almost 40.

This privately-funded, non-profit school provides special teaching needs to children in the Permian Basin through three programs. The basic skills program for children 18 months to 25 years of age is geared toward disabled children and centers on helping the students enter the mainstream of society. The vocational program is the greenhouse where flowering plants are grown by the students throughout the year, enabling them to earn money while accomplishing a skill. The learning different or academic achievement program is for pre-kindergarten children through high school students and focuses on helping students with special learning needs.

All of the proceeds from Smash Fiesta stay in the Permian Basin supporting the Bynum School programs. Currently there is a major building campaign drive for a new and larger structure which would encompass all three programs.

The event is sponsored by KOSA-TV Channel 7, Midland Reporter-Telegram, American Airlines, Radisson Hotels International, Doubletree and Outback Steakhouse.

For more information on the school or for ticket information, call 520-0075.

DEAR ABBY

Giver looks into past of unfamiliar charity

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Last spring I received a telephone call requesting a donation to the National Children's Cancer Society Inc. Since my father died of leukemia, I was more than willing to make a donation, and I asked the person on the telephone to mail the information to me because I had never heard of their organization.

Van Buren

Within a few days, I received the information and a "contract" to fill out pledging to contribute a specified amount. I put the letter and contract aside until I had time to check the organization out.

First, I contacted the Better Business Bureau and inquired about this "society." I was told they had no record of any National Children's Cancer Society Inc.

I continued trying to learn something about the charity and discovered that the National Children's Cancer Society was under investigation for fraud. I returned my pledge notice with a letter informing them that I had decided not to make a donation after learning that they were under investigation.

Abby, please warn your readers. I am signing my name, but please don't publish it. Sign me ... CHARITABLE BUT CAUTIOUS

DEAR CHARITABLE: You are to be commended for your intelligent handling of a questionable charity. Sadly, almost every city is plagued by fraudulent "charities" that rip off the public.

Readers, it pays to check out every organization that solicits you for money if you are not already familiar with it. Your Better Business Bureau is listed in your telephone directory.

Other sources of information about charities are the Council of Better Business Bureaus, Charities Division, 4200 Wilson Blvd., Suite 800, Arlington, Va. 22203, and the National Charities Information Bureau, 19 Union Square West, New York, N.Y. 10003-3395. Please enclose a long (business-size), self-addressed, stamped envelope when you write for information.

DEAR ABBY: My 10-year high school reunion is coming up, and I am wondering if I should go.

I didn't graduate with my class because I got pregnant and missed the last three months of school. However, I made up the work, and my diploma was mailed to me. (I graduated with honors.)

Would it be in poor taste if I attended the 10th reunion even if I didn't graduate with my class? I would love to see my schoolmates again. I live in another state now, but it would be well worth the trip. What do you say, Abby? — WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: I say, by all means go to the reunion. Hold your head high, and look your classmates in the eye! You may find them every bit as happy to see you as you are to see them. If you attend, please write again and tell me if the reunion was everything you hoped it would be.

DEAR ABBY: The limerick "There was an old maid from Duluth" tickled me because I had five old maid aunts, glued to the house, although the last of them (my favorite) had me wondering after she died.

A man none of us had ever seen before showed up at Auntie's funeral and hovered over her casket, bawling.

My brother-in-law nudged me and whispered, "I wonder if maybe there was something Ida didn't tell us." — HELEN IN OLD TOWN, MAINE

LIFESTYLE POLICIES

Policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle section of the Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Monday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographes will be published for winners only, not runners-up. These annoucements are published Thursdays. Deadline is 5 p.m. Monday.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

We cannot mail forms to persons in Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication. To have a photo returned by mail, include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Unclaimed photos are discarded after one month.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required. A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Portraits of the bride only or of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements. A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted. The MRT reserves the right to deny publication of any photo due to quality or content.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

Larissa Cherkasov prepares for her upcoming concert with the Midland- Odessa Symphony.

When pianist Larissa Cherkasov performs as guest artist with the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale this week, she will not be playing a selection by a Russian composer. Yet, Beethoven's Concerto No. 4 will remind her of her days at the conservatory in the former Soviet Union.

'It was a favorite piece of my professor," Mrs. Cherkasov said. "When I was in the conservatory, I played this concert. I also like this piece. I like second move ment. It's short, just 70 bars, but it's very deep feeling and beautiful music."

As a young child growing up in her hometown of Baku on the Caspian Sea in the former Soviet Union, Mrs. Cherkasov was fascinated by music.

"In my home, sometimes I played without music," Mrs. Cherkasov said, recalling her childhood, before the age of 6. "I played for myself. I played songs for children. I played piano without music books, with my memory, by ear."

Her parents weren't musicians. Her mother is an economist, her father, a military man.

"My mother liked music very much, and her child hood was very difficult because it was the second world war, and she would have liked to started music, but she couldn't," Mrs. Cherkasov said. "So, when I was 6 years old, we went to music school and I had tests. So I started to learn music when I was 6."

For the next 11 years, Mrs. Cherkasov was a student at a special music school in Baku, founded by G. Sharoyev, a professor of music at the Baku State Conservatory who had come to the city from St. Petersburg.

"We also had regular school. So I had two schools— regular school and after regular school, I had musical school. It was a very serious and professional music education in our school. We learned different musical subjects such as theory, history of music, harmony and others.

"It wasn't just Russian music. We also learned European music because music of famous composers such as Bach, Beethoven, Chopin belongs to the whole world like art of Leonardo, Rafael, Goya."

While a student at the music school, Mrs. Cherkasov had numerous opportunities to perform. Every year the best students, of which Mrs. Cherkasov was chosen, played with the State Symphony Orchestra.

In 1976, Mrs. Cherkasov was admitted as a student at the Baku State Conservatory where she studied for the next five years.

"Before you enter to Conservatory, you pass nine tests where you can be asked about painting, history, architecture, literature and, of course, music," said Mrs. Cherkasov, who now teaches private lessons here.

Only a perfect score allowed a student to study piano at the conservatory. While there, Mrs. Cherkasov studied under E. Nazirova, "a very talented pianist and composer." She spent her time at the conservatory improving her skills and performing as a soloist with chamber and symphony orchestras and performing solo recitals.

It was while she was a student at the conservatory that Mrs. Cherkasov met her future husband, Eugene Cherkasov. Cherkasov was hired in 1991 by the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale Inc. as first violin of the Thouvenel String Quartet and first chair and concertmaster of the symphony.

The TEMPEST

When "The Tempest" opens Thursday at Odessa's Globe Theatre, Shakespeare's most famous line in the drama will be said by a Midlander.

"Chyree LeMaster has the most famous line in the play," said Shawn Watson, UTPB professor of British literature who lives in Midland. " 'Oh brave New World that has such people in it,' the title of 'Brave New World' is taken from it. She's marvelous, a much decorated winner of speech events for her high school."

Ms. LeMaster is not the only Midlander in the Odessa production.

other as musicians and people," Mrs. Cherkasov said.

After graduating from the Baku State Conservatory, Mrs. Cherkasov was offered a job at the conservatory. She taught there for the next 10 years.

Life for the Cherkasovs was pleasurable and revolved around music and their two children, Helene and Vadim.

"I played solo recitals. The state symphony in Baku invited me to play as guest artists at some musical festivals and I played with a quartet of modern music. And we (Eugene and Larissa) always played with other teachers of the conservatory in some ensembles. So I always tried to play because I loved it. It is my life."

Then, as communism began to falter in Moscow, life changed for the Cherkasov family.

"In 1989, the situation began to deteriorate," said Mrs. Cherkasov, who was a Russian married to an Armenian who didn't even speak Armenian.

"Baku was a very international city and we always lived very well together with other nations. We didn't feel as Armenian, Russian, Azerbaijan. We didn't think about it, and we had a lot of friends — Armenian, Russian — it didn't matter."

Trouble began on the border between Armenia and Azerbaijan, then moved to Baku. Since she was Russian and not in danger, Mrs. Cherkasov was able to continue working at the conservatory until her family left the city.

"When I left, people who worked with me they cried and they told me that it's very hard and we don't know what's happened. It wasn't their fault. They told me anytime if I would like to come back, they wouldkeep a place for me."

Because her husband was Armenian, her children also were in danger.

"In the U.S., you have a passport. For citizens of the U.S. it doesn't matter who are your parents are, or where they are from. But in Russia, in our passports, we have nations. I have Russian, and he (Eugene) has Armenian. So it was dangerous because on the streets some people they could check your passports and kill you just because you are Armenian."

At this time, Mrs. Cherkasov said, the U.S. government offered refugee status to those who were in danger. They applied and received this status but were held back from leaving by rules and regulations within the former Soviet Union. The situation continued to deteriorate in Baku, and the Cherkasovs were advised by friends to leave Baku.

"We left my parents. They still live there. When you leave everything — where you were born and your favorite things, your home — it's very hard, of course. We just took our clothes and no more. We moved to Moscow. We left on time. After one week probably it was worse because they killed Armenian people, so it was really, really war."

The Cherkasovs moved to Moscow, where they waited half a year for their documents to be able to leave the country. Times were not easy.

"In Russia we have a rule, if you are not residents of this city, you can't get job, you can't have an apartment. Nothing. We were like strangers in Moscow."

Then, Cherkasov had the opportunity to audition for a symphony in Mexico. He was accepted. Mrs. Cherkasov spent a shaky additional three months after her husband left waiting to get clearance to leave Russia.

"We had to start from the beginning, but we were happy in Mexico because we saved our lives, we were together.

"I was happy because we were together," she said. "Eugene worked, and we could rent a house. Nobody said, 'You are not residents of Mexico,' so we could live quiet. We lived well in Mexico. For us it was very interesting because it was a different culture, and we had to learn Spanish."

The Cherkasovs were in Mexico 18 months before moving to the United States.

"People were very friendly," Mrs. Cherkasov said, remembering her first impression of Midland. "In the beginning, I felt sad because I left friends in Mexico. It's very hard. First, we left in Russian my friends, then we left in Mexico my friends. It was very hard to leave your friends."

Also, Mrs. Cherkasov did not speak English. She had studied English in school, but had never spoken the language until she arrived here. Thus, this summer, in addition to rehearsing for the September performances, she has studied the English language and its culture with her children.

When she first arrived here, Mrs. Cherkasov was disappointed because she didn't have a piano at home. However, friends and other players came to her rescue allowing her to practice on their piano. She did this until they purchased a piano this summer.

"People always tried to help. From the beginning, we didn't feel alone," she said.

Mrs. Cherkasov said she feels that their children, who spoke Spanish not English when they arrived here last year, have adapted well to living in the United States.

"They do very well. They are happy. They have friends. Their friends come to our house, or they go to their friend's house so they are happy."

After moving in November, Mrs. Cherkasov has had the opportunity to perform twice with her husband. The last performance was a recital this spring at Midland College. It was following this concert that Philip West, MOSC manager, asked Mrs. Cherkasov to perform as guest artist with the symphony in September.

The letters she received following the recital touched her deeply.

"After the recital I got some letters from people I didn't know before then. They sent me letters and told me 'Thank you very much for your concert,' and they sent me flowers. I cried."

This past summer during a trip to the library, a local resident said to Mrs. Cherkasov, "I can't imagine how you can leave without your favorite things." Mrs. Cherkasov replied, "It's life. Life is hard. We had to leave. I couldn't leave my husband and my family. I had to be with them. Of course I miss my world, but I will keep it in my mind."

Auditions set for ballet production

Staff report

Auditions for children interested in performing in Tulsa Ballet Theatre's production of "The Nutcracker" will be from 2 to 8 p.m. Sept. 27 at Cherry Jones Dance Studio, 3320 N. Big Spring St.

Pre-registration is required.

Some 37 children will be needed for the performances of the fairy tale ballet scheduled for Nov. 20 and 21 and sponsored by Texaco Foundation.

To be eligible children must have had two years of ballet or gymnastic training. Girls need to be 6 to 13 years old. Boys need to be 7 to 13 years old.

Girls need to wear tights, leotards and ballet shoes, not toe shoes, to the audition. Boys need to wear T-shirts with tights or shorts.

All children are to bring a stamped, self-addressed envelope and an index card for the names of their parents and other information.

To pre-register call 683-5210. Performances will be staged at Lee High School.

Perry to display art work at club

Staff report

The works of Max Perry are on display this month at the Women's Club.

Perry

Perry is a member of the Midland Arts Association, Arts Assembly of Midland, Museum of the Southwest, Odessa Art Association, Midland Palette Club, West Texas Watercolor Society, Midland County Library Advisory Board, Friends of the Midland Public Library and a charter member of the Midland Optimist Club.

"Painting has been a hobby for several years as well as having an interest in promoting the arts in this area," Perry said.

He has attended workshops presented by such artists as Judi Betts, Betty Lynch, Dr. Charles Stewart, Woody Gwyn, Warren Taylor and Leo Smith.

In 1990 he attended a master watercolor workshop at Scottsdale Art School directed by Tom Hill. Only 12 artists were selected for the workshop.

Pery's work may be seen from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Give very specific instructions to your associates. Although teamwork is the key to greater success, you cannot afford to leave important details to chance. Becoming better organized early in 1993 will make you more productive. Next March is the best time to seek suggestions from someone you admire. A relative could try to interfere with your child-rearing efforts in late spring. Be courteous but firm. By late summer of 1993, your career is on the fast track.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Sophia Loren, fashion designer James Galanos, comedian Anne Meara, actress Rachel Roberts.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The unknown holds special appeal now. A little travel off the beaten track sounds like a great idea. Have fun with old friends without breaking the bank.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You could be socializing with a rather exclusive group of people. Expand your circle of acquaintances. Your take-charge attitude may interfere with domestic harmony.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Try to reach a better understanding about shared resources. A willingness to compromise works wonders! Concentrate on the more spiritual aspects of your life.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Persistence pays off when trying to get to the bottom of a muddled situation. Do not lose patience. You cannot afford to take anyone or anything for granted.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may not attract a lot of attention at a party, but you will not be a wallflower either. Follow partner's lead if unsure of what to do next. Romance sizzles!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your creative talents surge to the fore. If you want to impress someone with your technique, now is the time to make your move. Meditation and quiet studies are favored this evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You could become more deeply involved with a business transaction than you planned. Try not to get in over your head. Emphasize your love when urging someone to change course.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The spotlight shifts to a partnership — business or marital. Loved one could have a great idea you should follow up on. Jump in with both feet. Shop for bargains at a favorite store.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You enjoy the give-and-take in your relationship with someone who can be funny as well as serious. You complement each other exceptionally well.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): There is no limit on how far your creative talents can take you. You will have widespread support if you stick to the rules. A new relationship has you humming a merry tune.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A subtle change of direction is indicated. You feel confident and sure of your decisions. Go with your first impression for the best results.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Financial pressures ease. You and a partner are finally able to make some long-range plans. Be sure to keep them practical. The love boat sails under clear skies.

Since all his friends were at the Summer North American Championships in Toronto, Trump Coup Tommy decided that it was time for his annual foray into the world of duplicate only an hour's plane ride away. Despite the fact that there were no testing hands in the Open Pairs qualifying rounds, Tommy was able to do little damage, and qualified for the final. There he soon had the opportunity to display his bent for playing brilliantly on those hands where trumps broke badly.

North's double was negative, i.e., for takeout. It was an effort to locate a possible 4-4 heart fit. When Tommy bid the "wrong" red suit, North jumped in spades to show a limit raise with only three trumps—with four-card spade support North would have shown limit-raise values immediately.

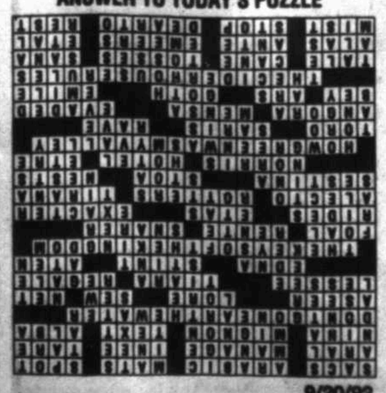

West led the ace of clubs and continued the suit. Tommy shed a heart on dummy's king of clubs and, with the hand looking like a laydown, led a trump to the ace and returned a trump. East's heart discard on West's queen of spades brought a beam of delight to Tommy's eyes.

Declarer ruffed the club continuation, cashed the ace of hearts to fell the king, and then reeled off three rounds of diamonds. When West followed, all was well. Tommy simply continued leading diamonds. With the jack of trumps on the table poised behind West's K 9, the defender could score only the high trump and the game was secure.

Ruidoso mountain volksmarch slated

Staff report

RUIDOSO — The 15th annual Ruidoso Mountain Marschers volksmarch will be held Saturday and Sept. 27 at the South Forks Campground above Bonito Lake.

The volksmarch is a non-competitive walk for the entire family. The event will be held on a 6.2 mile marked trail and hikers can begin anytime between 8 a.m. and 1 p.m. either day and must finish by 5 p.m.

Participants travel at their own pace, walk, run or jog. The free event is sponsored by East New Mexico University, Ruidoso, and the Ruidoso Women's Club. For more information call 1-505-257-2120.

TEMPEST: Play to begin Thursday

(From 1G)

"About 50 percent plus the director are from Midland," said Ms. Watson, who is pleased with the talent she has discovered in Midland-Odessa.

"There are some very good actors that have been fostered and brought up through the ranks of Permian Playhouse and Midland Community Theatre. It's very exciting to work with them and give them an opportunity to do something a bit different."

Other Midlanders include Stephen Cole, an ex-professor of theater who once ran the master of fine arts acting program at Cornell, as Prospero; Christopher Olsen, Texas Tech graduate in theater arts employed by The Midlander and as educational director at Permian Playhouse, as Sebastian; Marvin LeMaster as the drunken butler, Stephano; John Gerdel, first time in a serious role on stage, as Alonzo the King of Naples; Norman Styers, a UTPB graduate student and part-time teacher at Midland College, as the aged councellor, Gonzalo; and Kathy Kleine, employed by Adventure Travel, as Ariel.

Also in the cast from Midland are Scott Lunsford, seen often in productions at Midland Community Theatre and Odessa's Permian Playhouse, as Caliban; David Thomas, a recent UTPB graduate who has moved to Midland, as Trinculo; Nicole Wiley, a junior at Lee High School, member of Midland Community Theatre's Pickwick Players and secretary/treasurer of Lee speech team; Cheryl Steen, the Permian Basin Art Institute; Janna Gerdel, secretary Midland County Courthouse; and Becky Gerdel, third grader at Bush Elementary, as the littlest spirit. Becky, who is John and Janna Gerdel's daughter, is also the youngest member of the cast.

Production times and dates are 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday and Oct. 1-3. The Juliet Society will honor the Globe patrons with a reception on opening night before the performance.

Tickets, priced at $8 for adults, $6 for students and senior citizens and $5 group rate for 15 or more, may be reserved by calling 1-332-1586 Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The box office opens performance days at 7 p.m.

Actors soon discover the first obstacle to overcome in performing Shakespeare's work is the language.

"It's hard to read. It's hard to understand," said Ms. Watson, whose doctorate from Cornell is in dramatic literature.

"The first thing that has to happen when you sit down to do a Shakespeare play is that the actors have to understand what they are saying. If they don't understand, the audience certainly isn't going to....

"The actors end up just reciting lines and that drives me up the wall. I can't stand to see plays like that, and I think most audiences can't. So when we sit down to do Shakespeare we make sure we understand every word of the text."

Thus, understanding the script takes longer than most plays. Once the actors understand the meaning of the words, Ms. Watson said, "The plays become much easier for the actors to do and for an audience to understand as well, and something very magical, at least magical for me, happens.

"It becomes clear that Shakespeare is writing about real people and his characters behave as real people do. That's not always clear from a reading of the text. Sometimes it's only clear from a performance. And it's glorious to see a real person take shape from what can be a very intimidating text in the process of rehearsal."

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Gorman to give concert

Harpist Kim Gorman will play a free concert at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave., at 3 p.m. today.

Gorman

Mrs. Gorman has a bachelor of music degree in harp performance from the University of Texas and has been associated with the Austin Symphony, the Abilene Symphony, the San Antonio Symphony and currently the Midland-Odessa Symphony.

She has performed solo recitals in many West Texas churches, including several in Snyder where she lives.

Gloria Steelman will play violin and Lester Ackerman will be the organist.

A reception will follow in the church parlor.

■ Auditions to be held

Auditions for Neil Simon's comedy "Rumors" are set for 7:30 p.m. Monday and Tuesday in the Redfern Room at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Parts are available for five men and five women ranging in ages from mid-20s to mid-50s. Scripts are available in the theater's business office. For more information call 682-2544.

■ Eddie Raven to perform

Eddie Raven performs at Cactus Moon Friday.

Raven has had such No. 1 songs as "Bayou Boys," "I Got Mexico," "Shine, Shine, Shine," "I'm Gonna Get You," "Joe Knows How To Live," "Til You Cry" and "In A Letter To You." Some of his songs which did not hit No. 1 have gone on to become familiar numbers including "Who Do You Know In California" and "Sooner or Later."

His latest Capitol Nashville release is "Right for the Flight."

■ Warfields to display art

Art work of Bob and Gloria Warfield is on display at First City Band this month.

The exhibit is sponsored by the Midland Arts Association. After retiring from a long standing career in the Permian Basin as a geologist, Warfield studied at Midland College under John Harmon and Warren Taylor.

In the fall of 1990, Mrs. Warfield also has studied at MC.

The exhibit may be viewed during banking hours.

■ Arts, craft fair set

RANKIN — The Rankin Chamber of Commerce's Arts and Crafts Fair is scheduled for Saturday.

The fair will be held at the Rankin Swimming Pool Park, south of the junction of highways 67 and 349.

Activities planned for the day include a parade, volleyball, a dance featuring music from the 1950s, games for the children and homecoming meetings for Rankin former students. The classes of 1942-43, 1952-23 and 1972-73 will be recognized.
