Standoff

Five-hour standoff ends with arrest

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

A tense standoff between police and an armed man who had barricaded himself in a relative's eastside home Friday ended without incident when the man finally emerged from the house and was caught off guard by officers who had spent five hours in 100-degree temperatures getting him to come out and talk to them.

Police said the incident began when 31-year-old Army veteran David Lewis Smith picked up a .38-caliber handgun in his uncle's house, which is located at the northeast corner of Jackson Street and Parker Avenue, and ordered the uncle, 44-year-old L.V. Lee, to leave about 1:30 a.m. Friday.

Officers initially spent an hour on the scene, then left at the uncle's suggestion. "We felt the best thing to do was leave him alone because he wasn't hurting anyone," one officer said later.

Police were called back to the house shortly after 1 p.m. Friday. This time, they surrounded the house and — along with his mother — used a public address system to urge him out.

"David, this is your mother," Margie Baker Lee pleaded over the microphone as neighbors and curious passersby gathered across the street. "The police want to help you. If you come to the door we can help you. Throw out the gun."

When that failed, police had the gas, water and electricity to the air-conditioned house shut off in hopes the afternoon heat would drive him out.

That didn't work either.

Not wanting to rush the house for fear of having to kill Smith if he opened fire, and knowing he would eventually have to come out, three officers remained behind while the others departed.

As the afternoon wore on, another uncle arrived from Lamesa, where Smith reportedly had been living. The uncle's attempts to talk him out also failed, but Smith finally let his relatives and a friend into the house through a side door at 4:20 p.m.

Shortly before 5 p.m., Smith partially opened the front door and began talking to police and a sheriff's deputy who had been summoned to the scene at Smith's request.

It isn't clear why Smith asked for a deputy, but it's thought he somehow didn't believe the uniformed officers were actually police officers.

Friends and relatives could offer no concrete explanation for Smith's behavior, but said he had been acting strangely since getting out of the Army about two years ago, following several years of military service, part of it in Germany.

"Ain't nobody here gonna hurt you," said one officer, his hands gesturing in a conciliatory fashion as he and the others stood talking to Smith through the front door.

With his friend and family members still inside, Smith eventually allowed two officers to enter the house at 5:05 p.m. The deputy and the other officer shifted their feet and waited in the wilting heat until everyone suddenly emerged 20 minutes later.

Smith, with the .38-caliber pistol stuck in the waistband of his pants, stood alongside the open porch and talked to the circle of police and relatives in front of him. As they talked, another officer crept up and flattened himself against the west side of the house, his hand on his holster.

Fifteen minutes went by before police got the opening

Reagan move opens door for increased Soviet grain sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan paved the way Friday for a probable record grain sale to the Soviet Union in coming months, a move certain to aggravate European allies, but he ruled out any long-term pact "as long as repression continues in Poland."

Technically, Reagan merely authorized his lieutenants to explore a one-year extension — with expanded sales — of the existing grain pact with the Soviets. But there is little doubt that Moscow's representatives will come knocking at the door.

Agriculture Secretary John Block said that under the agreement which otherwise will expire Sept. 30, it already is "likely that we will sell more grain to the Soviet Union this year than in any previous year." The White House put the projected amount at 17.8 million metric tons, topping the 1979 record of 15.3 million. A metric ton is 2,205 pounds.

Reagan's decision allows the Soviets to buy even more in the coming year. Still, any such deal likely would barely dent America's huge grain inventories, expected to exceed 400 million metric tons in the 1982-83 "agreement year." Americans themselves will consume less than half that.

Rep. Pat Roberts, R-Kan., said Treasury Secretary Donald Regan had privately assured him and other farm-state Republicans that "There is no ceiling. We'll sell the Russians all they want to buy." Rep. Tom Coleman, R-Mo., confirmed Roberts' account.

In Moscow, there was no official comment, but Western diplomats said they expect the Soviets will quietly accept a one-year extension.

A U.S. diplomat who asked not to be identified said, "They have given us a very positive feeling that they would accept a new long-term agreement."

The Soviet Union, according to the Agriculture department, will need to buy an overall 46 million metric tons of grain from other nations in the coming year. But much of that is certain to be purchased from other longtime suppliers, including Argentina and Canada.

Thus, any new deal with the United States likely would keep the Soviet Union far down the list among foreign customers of U.S. farm products. Japan, for example, imported a whopping $6.7 billion worth of agricultural goods from America last year, including 22.8 million metric tons of feed grain, wheat and soybeans. The Soviets imported an overall $1.57-billion worth of U.S. farm products, ranking eighth.

The president effectively tipped his decision at his news conference Wednesday night, infuriating European leaders already agitated by his attempt to bar their U.S.-licensed industries from selling equipment to the Soviets for a pipeline that would bring Siberian natural gas to their nations.

The president's argument is that grain sales are for cash, which drains the Soviet Union of resources it could devote to arms, while the pipeline deal depends on financing at below-market interest rates subsidized by Western European governments.

Almost down the line, the allies have asked why American farmers can profit by selling their vast surpluses to the Soviets but their own hard-pressed industries are expected to carry the burden for punishing Kremlin misconduct.

France has ordered its companies to honor their contracts with the Soviet Union despite Reagan's pipeline sanctions, while Italy and West Germany have claimed they are powerless to intervene in such contracts.

Pilgrimage to East would have fulfilled Smalleys' dream

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

John and Dedre "DeDe" Smalley and their six children left Simi Valley, Calif., July 22 bound for their new home in central Connecticut with a station wagon and a Volkswagen Beetle crammed full of anticipation.

John, 37, and DeDe, 32, looked forward to starting their own Bible study group near Wethersfield, John's mother's home. The children, Chet Allen Hysel, DeDe's 12-year-old son by a previous marriage; the 7-year-old twins, James David and John Daniel; Daniel Henry, 4; Timothy Neill, 3; and Katherine Elizabeth, 2, wondered about the snow New England winters would bring.

Their family pilgrimage reached Midland Sunday morning, too late to take part in the annual Moore family reunion. But they spent three days with DeDe's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin "Neil" Moore, 2413 Flare Court. DeDe grew up in Midland and graduated in the Lee High School class of 1968.

The travelers left early Wednesday for Lindale to visit gospel singer Keith Gordon Green, head of the Last Day Ministries religious community, who John had befriended when they both were members of an international denomination congregation in California.

About 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, the Smalleys, Green and his two children and pilot Don A. Burmeister boarded a twin-engine Cessna 414 airplane for a picturesque spin above the rolling, green acreage east of Dallas.

Authorities suspect the plane was overloaded, unable to gain altitude as it lifted off from the ministry's private airstrip at Garden Valley. Tree tops scraped the plane's bottom moments before it careened into a heavily wooded ravine about a quarter mile from the runway. The crash took the lives of all 12 people aboard.

The Smalley family's journey, born of hope and excitement, ended in tragedy.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore quickly flew to the scene, according to Terry Browning, DeDe's cousin, from Odessa. He described the Smalley's as "strong Christians" and "loving parents."

Browning grew up with DeDe and her twin sister, Debbie Martinez, who lives in Tucson, Ariz., where the Smalleys spent two days enroute to Midland.

John and DeDe had done some marriage counseling in California and they hoped their Bible study group might someday become a congregation, Ms. Martinez said. "They were fulfilling their dreams," she said.

Another sister, Kathy Carsey, lives in Colorado. A third sister, Karen Meyers, resides in Midland.

"DeDe was likable because she was intelligent and talented," Browning said. His mother, Joretta Browning of Andrews, returned home after the weekend-long family reunion to find evidence of her niece's strong faith and talent — a card bearing drawings and a verse composed by DeDe to mark their departure for Connecticut. Her card read as follows:

"Dad's got his annointing, and hand filled by the Lord, a brand new kit for building tents, and a sharp, two-edged Sword.

"Mom's got her portfolio and paints tucked in one hand. And we can bring the bed along, cuz no more kids are planned.

"Chet's got all his airplanes, and books about the same. He's hoping when he gets back East, they'll let him pitch the game.

"James and John are walking proud: their team was Number One! But now they're thinking sleds and snow. Good-

Israel breaks cease-fire by bombing West Beirut

By The Associated Press

Israeli jets and gunboats bombarded guerrilla-held west Beirut Friday, shattering the U.S.-mediated cease-fire after presidential envoy Philip C. Habib apparently failed to get a commitment from the PLO to leave Lebanon.

Habib arranged an eighth cease-fire, and the the guns fell silent at 9:05 p.m. (3:05 p.m. EDT).

Lebanese state and privately owned radios said at least 1,300 shells and bombs struck west Beirut during the three-hour bombardment.

The barrages started at about 4 p.m. (10 a.m.EDT), and the Tel Aviv command said: "The Israel Defense Forces does not see itself committed to keeping a one-sided cease-fire."

It said the guerrillas had breached the cease-fire that went into effect Wednesday by launching mortars at Israeli positions Thursday and firing Katyusha rockets and small arms today.

The bombardment followed a 20-minute artillery duel between Israeli forces and the PLO fighters near Beirut's paralyzed international airport. Palestinian gunners opened fire at the divebombing Israeli jets but none was seen hit.

Israel's prime minister was quoted as saying earlier today that Habib had not received a commitment from the PLO to leave Lebanon.

Bank president looking up

First National Bank president and chief officer Charles Fraser is looking up — not just because of the bank's planned Eagle Plaza tower, or the fact it now ranks as the 6th largest bank in Texas, but also because of Midland's unique link to the country's economic future. Read about Fraser's assessment of the bank and its role in Midland in Sunday's "FOCUS," a regular feature of the Energy-Business section.

Also in Sunday's paper, Sgt. Lalo Camarillo, coordinator of the Midland Police Department's Crime Prevention is featured in the "Speaking Out" column, found on the Viewpoint Page, opposite the Editorial Page. Sgt. Camarillo addresses home security — the ways in which Midlanders and others can make their residences safer from burglaries.

Sgt. Camarillo came to Midland in 1955 from Santa Rosa. He is a 20-year veteran of the police department and has headed the Crime Prevention Unit the past five years.

Witness says ice machine was his haven

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Levity akin to the Summer Mummers' melodramatic antics broke out in the Booker T. "Billy" Green Jr. manslaughter trial Friday afternoon when a witness to the gambling-room scuffle between Green and Robert James "R.J." Morris Sr. told how he avoided the potentially hazardous situation.

"When the fight started," said the defense witness, Mack Jones Jr., "I wound up in the ice machine. When the fight ended, I came out. I wasn't taking no chances."

The jurors, who had been sternly attentive to the testimony by some 30 witnesses in the trial, instantly broke into laughter in the otherwise staid trial in Midland's 238th State District Courtroom.

Laughter enveloped the courtroom: from the jurors to Judge Vann Culp, to the lawyers and the defendant, and to several spectators in the gallery.

Jones, 31, said he watched Green, 42, and Morris, 50, toss dicé and then get into fisticuffs in the amusement parlor of King's Sandwich Shop in The Flats on Midland's east side on the night of Nov. 14 after Green and Morris got into a dispute. Green suspected Morris of stealing $200 of his gambling money and Morris insulted Green by calling him a "boy," Green said.

Jones said that 30 to 40 people were in the parlor when the fight broke out but that only three were hanging around when he emerged from the ice machine.

"I guess they were running because they didn't know what the outcome would be," he said of the fight. That's also why he jumped into the ice machine and hid, Jones said.

MINUTES AFTER the Green-Morris scuffle, Morris lay dying on the floor of his M&M Liquor Store on the same block as the gambling parlor. One of five rifle slugs fired through the liquor store's glass show-window struck Morris in the heart. Green, who confessed to shooting Morris, claimed he did so in self-defense: He alleged that Morris was wielding a pistol in the liquor store and was lunging at him while he (Green) was getting a rifle out of the trunk of his car for "protection;" Green said he was preparing to drive off his car, which, he said, was parked almost in front of the liquor store.

State witnesses, including Morris' son, Bubba; his daughter-in-law, Helen; his daughter, Carol; and his liquor clerk, Marzella Weber, claimed the contrary. They said Morris, who moments earlier had entered the store following the scuffle, was talking with his 5-year-old grandchild when he was struck down.

Jones, one of 16 witnesses called by defense attorney Tom Hirsch, characterized Morris as a gambling man of intimidating ways.

He cited an incident: Long before the Nov. 14 slaying, Jones said he had borrowed $80 from Morris to continue playing in a dice game at Morris' RJ Real Pit Bar-B-Q restaurant-bar on East Kentucky Avenue. Jones said he didn't voluntarily pay off the loan because, he alleged, Morris and his son Bubba had contrived to cheat him out out the money; Jones said he ended up losing $120 "on account of what he (R.J. Morris) said" about the dice game.

Weeks later, Jones said he paid off the loan after Morris paid him a visit.

"He (Morris) told me he was going to shoot me if I didn't pay him," Jones testified.

Jones paid up.

"I don't take no chances with nobody," he said of the threat on his life, "and I wasn't going to change."

Prosecutor Marian Bentley asked Jones if Morris had held a firearm on him.

"I didn't see one," he said, "but he was talking about blowing my brains out."

Moments later, Hirsch acted somewhat surprised that gambling took place in R.J.'s barbecue restaurant.

"I'm sorry," the attorney said, "I thought all they served was ribs."

"They serve dice, too," said Jones.

Smiles, more than laughter, pervaded the courtroom.

TESTIMONY by defense and state witnesses was in sharp contrast. Green claimed that Morris was wielding a handgun after the scuffle in Marshall King's gambling hall. So did defense witness Johnny Robinson, who said he ducked into the women's restroom for safety, as others were fleeing the gambling parlor. He said he saw Morris holding a pistol. "I went into the ladies' room," he said.

Another witness, Sam King, who was sitting in as the "sack man" in keeping tabs on bets and taking the house's fees when the Green-Morris scuffle broke out, said he heard someone shout, "'He's got a gun'" but didn't know who "he" was.

"I got up and ran," he said.

YANCY BATIE, a prime witness for the state, said under cross-examination by Hirsch that Green could have been provoked into striking Morris "by what he (Morris) said."

What Morris had said, according to Batie, was "general winner's talk" in enticing Green into another roll of dice. Morris had called Green "boy" as in " 'I buy boys like you,' " Green had testified in his own defense.

"Yes, it's insulting," Green had said. "First of all, slavery has been abolished, and I'm not a boy...He (Morris) said, 'I buy niggers like you.' "

In responding to Hirsch's questions on whether or not Morris packed a gun, Batie said Morris did not carry a firearm.

"I've never known R.J. to carry a gun...a weapon," he said. "I've never known him (Green) to carry a gun."

But, Batie conceded that he was shot in the abdomen in 1952 or 1953 by Morris following a "misunderstanding" but that they soon made amends and became fast friends. Batie, 58, said he was not sporting a firearm at that time.

"So, he shot an unarmed man — you?" asked Hirsch.

"Yes," said Batie. "Practically everybody knew that in Midland — black folks."

Batie assured Hirsch that, contrary to Green's testimony, Morris was unarmed on the night of his death.

"I DID NOT see a gun in R.J.'s hand," Batie said. "I've only seen a gun in his hand once in his life.

"He contacted me later," Batie said of the shooting incident in the 1950s. "Said he regretted it happened. Offered to pay my hospital bill, but I refused."

The trial was to resume at 8 a.m. today, when Judge Culp is to read the charge to the five-man, seven-woman jury, and the prosecutors, District Attorney Vern Martin and Ms. Bentley, and defense counsel Hirsch are to give their closing arguments.

Just before the judge recessed the case Friday afternoon, he gave the jurors the option of resuming the case today or Monday.

After a five- to 10-minute closed-door session and some shouting and table banging, the jurors returned to the courtroom. Their decision was an 8-4 split choice for an early Saturday session to get the lawsuit resolved.

For her part, DeDe closed the card with her own special copyright: "When you care enough to make your very own."

Funeral services for the Smalley family will be at 2 p.m. Sunday at Foster Brown Funeral Home in Athens.

Lightning apparently hits Odessa man

ODESSA — A 30-year-old Odessa man apparently was struck by lightning here about 9 p.m. Friday.

According to June Conway, nursing supervisor at Medical Center Hospital, David Boatright, 5204 McKnight Drive, was admitted in guarded condition into the intensive care unit of the hospital.

Ms. Conway said that although no burns, which normally appear at the point where the bolt exits the body, were detected, Boatright was admitted for observation.

Details of the incidentwere not available at press time. According to a spokesman at the Ector County Sheriff's Department and one at the Odessa Police Department, no officers were sent to investigate.

Safety departments have slow days

Midland police, sheriff and fire departments had a relatively slow morning and early afternoon Friday as they responded to only a few reports of major thefts.

Dave Navarette, 3301 Neely, reported the theft of 98 sheets of sheathing from his residence at 9:09 a.m., according to police reports. Total value was set at $300.

Jeff Anderson, of 2914 McDonald, reported the theft of a wallet containing $200 at 600 Kent. The theft was reported at 1:36 p.m.

Three stabbed in SMU Iranian-related rioting

UNIVERSITY PARK, Texas (AP) — Three people were stabbed and 29 others were arrested Friday night when pro- and anti-Khomeini Iranian factions clashed at the Southern Methodist University student center, authorities said.

University Park Police Capt. Ray Fletcher said about 50 to 75 Iranians supporting the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini stormed into the student center and clashed with police and some of the 100 to 150 Iranians holding a school-approved anti-Khomeini assembly.

Police from University Park, Highland Park, Dallas and the university were pelted with rocks and bottles when they tried to break up the disturbance that spilled outside the student center building, said Fletcher.

Three Iranians were stabbed in the chest and rushed to Parkland Memorial Hospital. Nursing Coordinator Kay Scott said two were in serious but stable condition and the third was in fair condition. She declined to identify them.

Fletcher said he suffered a minor injury when he was hit in the head with a 20-inch box fan thrown by one of the rioters. He said another police officer was hit in the chest with a rock.

Only three of those arrested in the 10-minute melee that started about 7 p.m. were students, said Fletcher.

He said police made most of the arrests at a nearby shopping center in this Dallas suburb where the pro-Khomeini Iranians gathered after the disturbance.

A spokesman for the Moslem Iranian Student Society, a University of Texas at Dallas student who would identify himself only as Hossein, said the group's program consisted of slides and speeches about the alleged atrocities of the Khomeini regime.

He said they had told police in advance there could be trouble.

Police turned back the pro-Khomeini group the first time they showed up shouting at the student center, said Hossein. But he said the group came back and clashed in the hallway with police and about 10 to 15 members of his group.

He said police shut the doors and told the rest of his group to remain inside the assembly room. He said an hour later police told the group inside the room to go back to their dorms.

Fletcher said all of those arrested were being transferred to the Dallas County jail.

Senators urge ratification

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirty-one senators called upon President Reagan Friday to seek ratification of two test ban treaties from the last decade and try to negotiate a total ban on nuclear testing.

The 23 Democrats and eight Republicans introduced a resolution urging the president to submit the long-pending treaties to the Senate "at the earliest possible date."

Governor wasn't gone

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — At last it can be told: Washington Gov. John Spellman has been at home all week.

For days, the state capitol press corps has been inquiring about the whereabouts of the freshman Republican governor, last seen in Olympia, 60 miles south of Seattle, on July 16. He left strict word to his staffers not to divulge his plans.

"I'm not allowed to say anything," Assistant Press Secretary Kate Heimbach said repeatedly when queried.

Is he on vacation? "Can't say."

Is he out of state? "Can't say."

Reporters at least figured out that he had to be in state, because he hadn't notified Lt. Gov. John Cherberg to take over — and that wouldn't be cricket.

TESCO charging methods subject of Friday ruling

Texas Electric Service Company has reached a settlement with cities represented by the Texas Municipal League and wholesale electric customers on a procedure for obtaining regulatory approval of certain fuel-related charges.

The procedure agreed to was approved Friday by the Public Utility Commission.

Unlike the current procedure, which does not require prior approval, TESCO now will obtain PUC approval of the estimated cost of fuel-related services provided by an affiliated company before the costs are billed to customers.

The agreement also involves Texas Power & Light and Dallas Power & Light, which are subsidiaries, along with TESCO, of the Texas Utility Company.

Two other TU company subsidiaries — Texas Utilities Fuel Company and Texas Utilities Generating Company — provide fuel and fuel-related services at cost to TESCO, DP&L and TP&L.

The new procedure will not change the total amount customers pay for electricity. "We only charge customers what we must pay for fuel used to make electricity," said TESCO President Bill Marquardt. "This revision cannot be expected to raise or lower the customer's monthly fuel charges."

Under the procedure:

—TESCO will file an estimate of its upcoming affiliate fuel-related costs with the PUC before charging those costs to customers.

—Customers and cities served by the company may participate in the proceeding.

—Even with the approval under this procedure, the company will be required to prove during its next rate case that all of its payments and subsequent charges to customers have been reasonable and appropriate.

—Each calendar quarter, the company will make adjustment for any over- and under-estimate it made in the previous quarter.

Approval of the agreement brings to an end litigation that began in 1979 after a special hearing before the PUC into transactions among TU company system subsidiaries.

State District Judge Herman Jones of Austin, acting on appeals of the PUC decision in that case, overturned the PUC's ruling that Texas Electric, Dallas Power & Light and Texas Power & Light are not affiliates as defined by the Public Utility Regulatory Act. Also, in his decision the judge ruled the PURA required prior approval of costs from affiliates before they are charged to customers.

The PUC, in issuing a final order Friday, gave approval to several other issues that had been agreed upon by all parties involved in the court appeals. The more significant of these issues in controversy and now settled are:

1. The PUC's order concerning a transaction dating back to 1976 between TP&L and TESCO, whereby TESCO, in exchange for additional interest in two lignite generating units, sold TP&L a quantity of electricity generated by its low-cost gas. The settlement agreed to let the transaction stand as was ordered by the PUC after the 1979 hearing.

2. Straight-line depreciation methods will be used by Texas Utilities Generating Company and Texas Utilities Fuel Company instead of accelerated depreciation methods.

3. TESCO will drop its appeal of an interest refund ordered and made in 1979.

4. TESCO, TP&L and DP&L have agreed that they are affiliated companies as defined by the PURA.

Clements' drug war plays to enthusiastic crowd of builders

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements took his re-election campaign before an enthusiastic audience of builders and contractors Friday, telling them he has kept Texas' economy healthy and chased drug pushers out of the state.

Clements said his "war on drugs" has been so successful that Gov. Lamar Alexander of Tennessee complained at the Southern Governors Conference earlier this week that drug dealers are moving from Texas into his state.

"I told him, 'just because you have easy laws on drug pushers, it's not my problem,' " Clements said. "If they go to Tennessee or Timbuktu, I couldn't care less. We just want them out of Texas."

The "war on drugs" legislative package backed by Clements spawned enactment of a controversial wiretapping bill and a ban on "head shops" that sell drug paraphernalia.

Kentucky Gov. John Y. Brown is planning a legislative program similar to Texas' "war on drugs," Clements said.

Clements drew repeated applause from Texas Associated Builders and Contractors conventioneers as he took credit for cutting the number of state employees, reducing the crime rate, axing taxes, battling to protect right-to-work laws and fending off state income taxes.

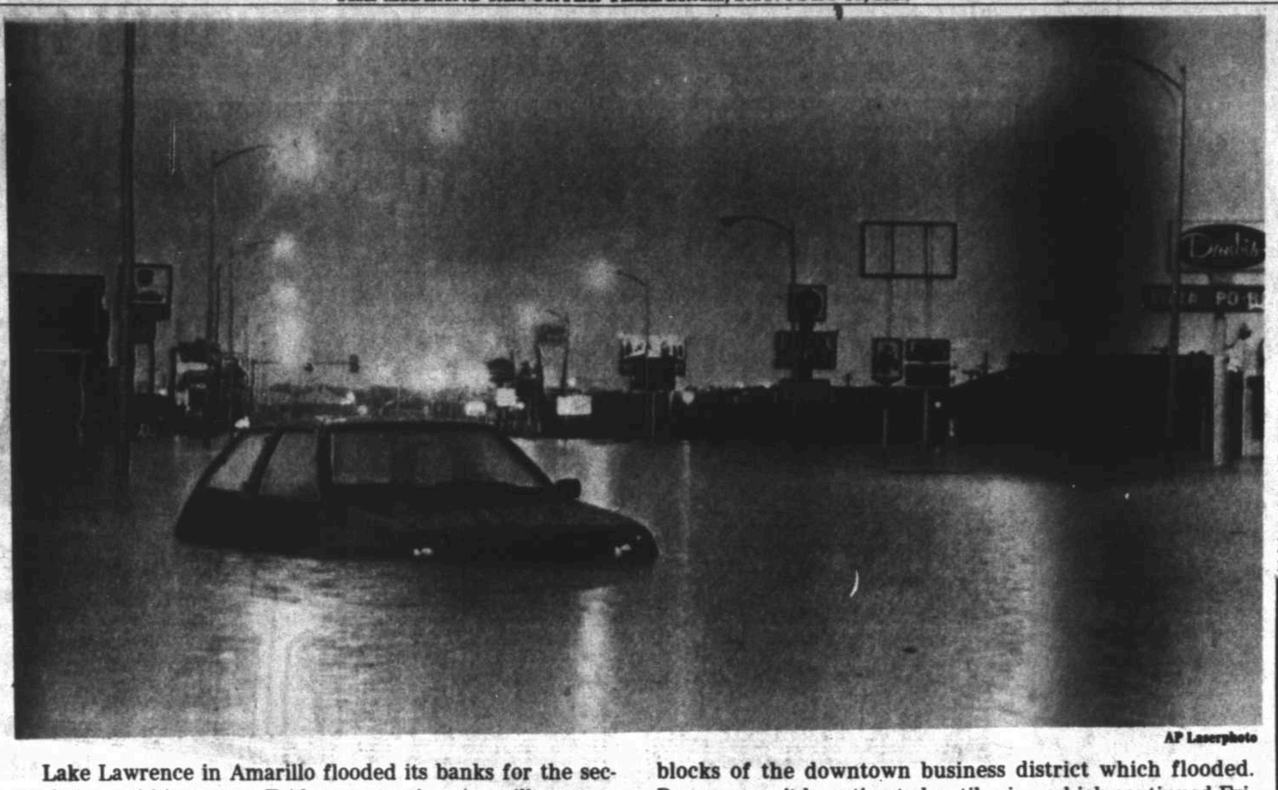

He called Texas' June unemployment rate of 7.7 percent "higher than acceptable," but said there are more Texans working than ever before.

The Texas Employment Commission has projected an 8.4 percent jobless rate for July, the highest in 12 years.

The unemployment figures were the subject of a press release skirmish earlier in the week between Republican Clements and his Democratic challenger, Attorney General Mark White.

White complained in a press release Wednesday that Clements was "trying to pretend Texas' growing unemployment isn't a serious problem."

In a Thursday release, which obviously responded to but did not mention White, Clements touted Comptroller Bob Bullock's figures projecting record state revenues and accused unnamed persons of "making irresponsible and alarmist statements suggesting calamity is upon us."

Lake Lawrence in Amarillo flooded its banks for the second time within a year Friday, prompting Amarillo mayor Rick Klein to request National Guard troops, which Gov. Bill Clements supplied. This picture shows part of the 10 square blocks of the downtown business district which flooded. Damage won't be estimated until rains, which continued Friday, stop, an Amarillo police officer said.

Amarillo lake floods, forces evacuations

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — The National Guard was called out Friday as rising floodwaters from a lake in the heart of a business district once again poured into streets and homes, forcing the evacuation of about 120 people.

"The lake has overflowed its banks, the water's rising again," said Police Sgt. H.R. Kelly. "The damage is probably going to be as bad as last year, when they estimated $21 million to the businesses out there."

It was the second time in less than a year that water from the manmade lake — called Dunivan or Lawrence Lake — inundated the neighborhood, an area of businesses and homes encircling the lake on the south side of this West Texas city.

Elderly people living on the lake shore in Olsen Manor nursing home and residents of two apartment complexes about one-half mile away, were evacuated by National Guardsmen in troop trucks that could withstand the flood, said Amarillo police officer Dianne Bosch.

She said about 120 people had been evacuated by early afternoon, but others were being moved if they requested it.

By Friday afternoon, the city had gotten more than 4.4 inches of rain. The blinding rainstorm Thursday night broke the new pump the city had installed to pull 6,000 gallons of water a minute from the lake, which has no natural drainage.

"It was Mother Nature vs. the city pump last night. It was just like a football game," said Amarillo Mayor Rick Klein. "Mother Nature won."

Department of Public Safety Capt. Bob Russell said part of the problem was that many of the buildings in the area were on an old lakebed.

"The lake didn't start out as a manmade lake, but they built up around it and filled in, until there's just not enough space for the water," he said. "It used to be a great big lake, but now it's a little bitty lake with a lot of businesses around it. Last night the pump broke and the water just kept a-coming."

Klein said about a 10-square-block area of the city was flooded.

Gov. Bill Clements, acting on a request by Klein, authorized use of National Guard troops to help evacuate residents from flooded areas.

"The damage estimate is not done yet because it's still raining," Ms. Bosch said. "It's going to get very wet before it gets dry again."

She said that the major concern was that "quite a few elderly people who have retired live in the area, and we needed to get them out."

Water flowed into the home, and into basement and first-floor apartments, she said. No injuries were reported, however.

"The people are just being terrific," Ms. Bosch said. "Officers are out there in boats, and people are saying, 'Come on in and have a sandwich.'

"And people here still have a sense of humor. Some have signs up in the front yard: 'Home for Sale. Lakefront Property.' "

Lawyer says wife begged him for poison

HOUSTON (AP) — The prominent lawyer accused of plotting to kill his paralyzed wife testified at his trial Friday that he contacted a self-proclaimed assassin called "Dr. Death" after she begged him to put her out of her misery.

"It became a constant thing," William Chanslor Jr. said of his wife's pleadings for death.

In his first appearance on the witness stand, he said his 42-year-old wife Sue had been increasingly despondent after she realized "she wasn't going to get any better."

Mrs. Chanslor has been confined to a wheelchair since a 1979 stroke caused brain damage and paralyzed the left side of her body.

He said he tried to talk his wife out of suicide when she proposed it in the spring of 1981, but said he agreed to buy poison for her after she repeatedly asked him to.

"I never planned to kill Sue at all," Chanslor said. He contended he had agreed only to make the poison available to her.

Chanslor testified that between the time he received two capsules he believed were the poison ricin and his arrest on April 21, he thought, "I don't even know if I'm going to take this home."

After Chanslor's testimony the defense rested and the case was expected to go to the jury Monday afternoon.

Chanslor said he contacted John Minnery after seeing an advertisement in Soldier of Fortune magazine for the Canadian author's book, "How to Kill." He said Minnery called himself a professional assassin and referred to himself at least once as "Dr. Death."

Chanslor, 58, is charged with plotting to buy the lethal poison ricin, a castor oil seed derivative which is supposed to leave no traces of poisoning in its victims.

He is charged with solicitation of murder and conspiracy to commit murder. Chanslor's defense is that he was planning a mercy killing and not a murder. If convicted, he could be sentenced to 20 years in prison and fined $10,000.

Chanslor testified that he called Minnery seven or eight times after writing the publisher to get the address of the author.

"He sent me his card and said, 'At your service,' " Chanslor said.

Chanslor, the former president of the Houston Trial Lawyers Association, testified that he also placed ads in Soldier of Fortune and similar publications after his wife's request.

Minnery tipped authorities that Chanslor had called him and asked advice on obtaining the poison.

A videotape played for the jury earlier in the trial showed an April 21 meeting between Chanslor and an undercover agent in which the lawyer bought two capsules of what he thought was ricin but was actually vitamin C. They were found in Chanslor's luggage when he was arrested upon returning to Houston.

"She would look up at me and say, 'Please, for God's sake, don't let me go on like this,' " Chanslor said. He said his wife had twice told their 9-year-old son, Brandon, that she "wished she could go to sleep and not wake up."

Mrs. Chanslor testified Thursday that she had "nagged" her husband to help her kill herself. She disavowed a statement to the contrary that she gave authorities immediately after her husband's arrest, saying she was trying to protect her husband in case police searched for her life insurance policy.

Court rules man given too much money

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A lower court awarded at least $10,000 too much to a Beaumont, Texas mechanic who was injured while trying to locate a troublesome noise in a truck brought to him for repairs, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Friday.

The mechanic, Sidney A. McLaughlin, was injured when he decided to take a precarious ride in the back of the truck, which collided with another vehicle at a highway intersection, the appeals court said in reviewing the case.

It said McLaughlin and the insurance company for Beaumont White Truck & Trailer sued the truck's owner, Midwestern Distribution Inc., and its driver, Michael D. George, who the appeals court said was negligent.

In order to listen for the noise, the appeals court said, McLaughlin "had to stand on a 3-inch-wide beam and hold on to a rack attached to the truck's cab." The collision knocked McLaughlin "to the truck frame and its driveshaft, thereby seriously injuring his knees," said the court.

It did not say when the accident happened.

Hearing the case without a jury, a U.S. District judge in Beaumont later awarded McLaughlin $12,028 for past medical expenses, $20,140 in past lost earnings, future medical expenses of $26,788, another $100,000 for future lost earnings and $100,000 more for total pain and suffering.

Midwestern Distribution did not contest the awards for past medical expenses and lost earnings, but appealed the other aspects of the award.

Snyder Daily News editor leaves paper

SNYDER, Texas (AP) — Wacil McNair has retired Friday after 28 years as editor of The Snyder Daily News and 40 years in Texas journalism.

Snyder citizens honored McNair Friday night with a roast and a toast.

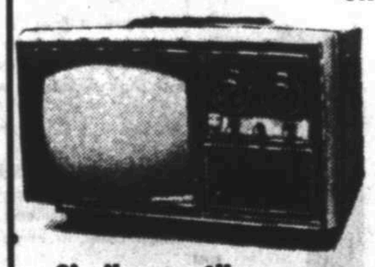

He has been active in civic affairs, helping organize the Scurry County Industrial Foundation. He currently is a trustee of Western Texas College here.

Donny Brown, a 34-year-old West Texas native, succeeds McNair, said The Snyder Daily News Publisher Roy McQueen.

Whalers from Norway to Japan protest proposed ban

By CHARLES J. HANLEY

The dogged conservationists who fought to "save the whales" are celebrating the new worldwide ban on whaling as a historic victory. But in a few coastal villages from Norway's fjords to Japan's Pacific harbors, the news hit like a tidal wave.

Because of over-hunting, whaling today is only a remnant of what it was in the "Moby Dick" era, when 700 American whaling ships crisscrossed the oceans. But in three countries — Japan, the Soviet Union and Norway — the industry still directly employs 1,000 to 1,500 workers and indirectly supports thousands of others.

Conservationists say centuries of large-scale hunting have brought five of the 10 great whales species to the brink of extinction. Last Friday the International Whaling Commission decided by a vote of 25 nations to seven to ban commercial hunting of the great sea mammals after 1985, climaxing a campaign by conservationist nations led by the United States.

THE COMMISSION also decided to reduce the annual quota of whales to be taken worldwide to 11,331, down from 14,553 in 1981.

The ban, though debated for years, stunned many whalers.

"We're all in a state of shock," said Ulf Ellingsen, a manager of a whale meat processing plant at Skrova, above the Arctic Circle in Norway.

Ellingsen said he hoped the Oslo government will file a formal appeal of the decision, which could delay its implementation, or pull out of the commission.

The key question is whether the major whaling nations will defy the commission ban and continue the age-old hunt after 1985.

Japan and the Soviet Union each accounts for 39 percent of the world whale catch, and Norway for 12 percent. The rest is taken by Brazil, Chile, Peru, South Korea and Spain.

After the vote, Norwegian and Japanese delegates to the commission conference in Brighton, England, vowed that their whalers would continue to put out to sea after 1985. But their governments have since pulled back, saying the issue is under study.

THE SOVIET UNION, although it voted against the ban, has made no official pronouncements on the decision.

The commission has no power to enforce the ban, but member nations can try to back it up with punitive actions against violating nations.

The United States, for example, has threatened to restrict such countries' other fishing rights in its 200-mile offshore zone. U.S. law also allows the government to prohibit fish imports from an offending nation.

The Norwegians do not fish in American waters but restrictions on imports could hurt them — they sell $50 million a year in fish products to the United States.

The Japanese are doubly vulnerable — they rely heavily on U.S. offshore fisheries and they export $185 million in fish products to the United States.

Japan has the greatest appetite for whale meat, and much of the rest of the world's catch is processed for the Japanese market. At $4.50 a pound, whale meat is less common now in the Japanese diet, but it is still prized as a delicacy.

THE JAPANESE industry has been in a steep slide for years, because of catch limits, the declining whale population and rising costs. Its take last year of 5,205 whales, producing 20,000 tons of meat, was only 5 percent of the production in 1961.

Although only 1,500 people are directly employed in Japanese whaling, Tokyo's national Fishery Agency contends the repercussions of an industry shutdown would throw 65,000 Japanese out of work.

In Norway, whaling is ingrained in the seafaring culture. Viking sagas mention it, and one far northern port is named Smeerenbergen — "Blubber Town."

The whaling ban, if observed by Norway, would cut the economic lifeline of Skrova and other villages in the Lofoten islands, 600 miles north of Oslo.

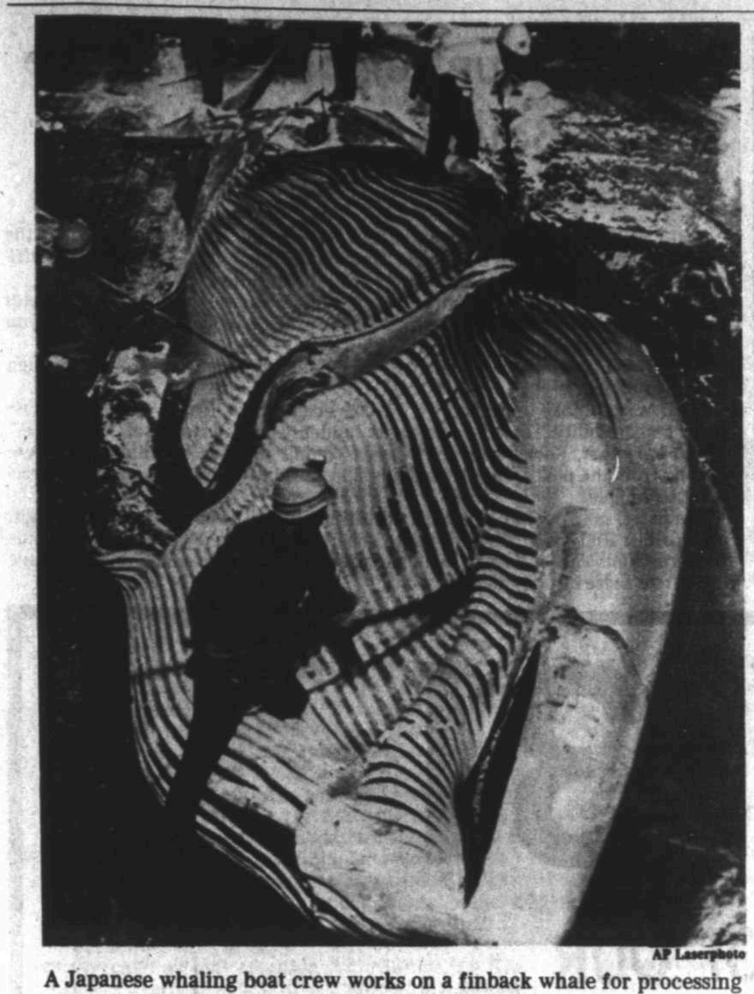

Across the Barents Sea in the Soviet Union, an estimated 1,000 people work in a whaling industry that reportedly has been pared down in recent years.

THE OTHER WHALING countries' operations are smaller, generally concentrated in a single company, in some cases Japanese-owned and shipping most products back to Japan.

The Norwegians and Japanese complain the whale conservationists' arguments are not based in fact.

"The regulations and quotas...have worked well, and the stock is not threatened," contended Johan J. Toft, Norwegian Fishermen's Association chairman.

Chuichi Ohmura, vice secretary of the Japan Whaling Association, said the conservationists act out of "sheer sympathy with the whales."

'Sin taxes' easy source of revenue

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Around state legislatures, tobacco and liquor taxes often are called sin taxes, which helps to explain why they are such inviting sources when governments need more revenue.

Taxing people who smoke and drink can be an easy way out of a budget bind.

In Congress, the terminology is more refined. At least it usually is.

"I think we act like state legislators when we sit around here trying to find the easiest thing to tax in order to raise money," said Sen. David F. Durenberger, R-Minn., as the Senate debated the $99 billion, three-year tax increase that now awaits House action.

An Analysis

He noted that excise taxes, such as those on cigarettes, are among the revenue sources President Reagan envisions leaving to state and local governments as part of his program to shift some federal programs to them.

One of the things that would be taxed more under the Senate bill is cigarettes, 16 cents a package instead of the 8 cents that has been the federal take for 30 years now. But raising it wasn't easy. The cigarette tax, which is supposed to bring in an additional $5 billion over the three-year period, could have been the undoing of the whole bill.

The tax bill passed 50-47 after two tobacco state senators who had said no on the first call of the roll switched their votes to support the big package of tax increases. Without those reversals, the bill would have been rejected, 49-48, cigarette tax and all.

So the tobacco industry is not at all pleased with Republican Sens. Jesse Helms and John East of North Carolina, normally two of its leading allies in Congress.

They are both conservatives, troubled by the big budget deficits the tax bill is supposed to curb. They both had struggled to get the cigarette tax out of the bill.

But Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., the Finance Committee chairman who guided the bill to approval, said Helms had told him that if his vote turned out to be essential for passage, he'd go along. He did, and East did, too.

Horace Kornegay, chairman of The Tobacco Institute and a former North Carolina congressman, said their votes were a disappointment. There were suggestions from the tobacco lobby that the tax votes wouldn't play well with the voters back home.

But Helms can point to the amendment he engineered to put a Sept. 30, 1985, cutoff date on the increase — unless Congress renews it. That was either an adroit compromise or a piece of political window dressing; nobody will know which for three years.

That didn't placate the industry, whose lobbyists figure that once the tax is increased it will stay that way.

Liquor apparently was quicker to put its Washington lobby on guard against an increase in the federal excise tax on alcoholic beverages. There was no increase in liquor taxes, which added to the rancor of the debate.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., proposed an amendment that would have held the cigarette tax increase to 4 cents a pack, and made up the difference by increasing alcohol taxes. "Now somebody says that cigarettes cause cancer," said Thurmond. "Well, that is a matter to be gone into. But alcohol causes more diseases...it has caused drunken driving, it has killed people, it has done more harm to humanity than any other one thing I can think of." His amendment was ruled out of order.

Tobacco state senators argued that the states would lose millions of dollars, $358 million by one estimate, because the federal tax increase would reduce consumption and the proceeds of their own cigarette taxes.

They lost every vote until Helms proposed his compromise, allowing the tax to revert to the current 8-cent level on Oct. 1, 1985.

That was approved, although Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., said the modificiation was from outright greed to petty thievery.

East took offense at such rhetoric, and said he was sometimes tempted to launch "a vendetta against the beer industry," which is big in St. Louis.

Universities facing drastic budget cuts

By the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

HAMBURG, West Germany (DPA) — West Germany's universities are facing drastic cutbacks in government monetary subsidies as a result of a general tightening of the budget.

The recession has hit most sectors of the economy and the federal government is looking for ways to retrench, with the academic community about to face some retrenchment among other areas.

For the 70,000 academics at the nation's 67 universities, more is at stake than their research and instructional budgets, which are funded partly by the federal and partly by the state governments. The current and future economies also pose a threat to West Germany's reputation as a world leader in culture and research.

This impact is felt because the 70,000 include all scientists teaching or doing research at universities or scientific institutions such as the private Max Planck Society, and reduction in their funds or numbers would lower their contributions to the country's progress.

For instance, in North Rhine-Westphalia, the most populous region with a third of the nation's 1.1 million student enrollment, admission to professional and specialized courses is being trimmed by 30 percent.

Seeking to explain the economies, Prof. Ralf Dahrendorf of the London School of Economics notes that a West German university student's education costs a comparatively high $49,000. It costs less than half that for a French student and about $39,000 for a British student. And Dahrendorf feels German education is no better than the French or British. He adds that if West Germans pay more for education, it is because their university system is wasteful and inefficient. And above all, he says, West German students stay in school too long.

Waste and inefficiency include excessive bureaucracy, while the motivation to teach or do research at universities is lessened by smaller incomes. Those who can, switch to private industry to do funded research for better pay. This, in turn, lessens, scholarly achievement. For instance, 44 Germans won Nobel prizes for scientific achievements between 1901 and 1944, but only 16 won Nobels since the end of World War II.

Students stay in school too long because it takes a minimum of three years to become a high school teacher, four to five years to graduate as a lawyer, and six years to practice general medicine (excluding specialization).

Students generally stay overly long at universities otherwise because overcrowding forces them to stretch out their course of study and not because they get so much money that remaining in school is more attractive than entering the working world. The most a student normally can get from the state is about $250 a month.

Yet, West Germany may be the world's most generous country when it comes to financial and material support for scholarly and scientific endeavor.

More than 2 percent of the gross national product is spent on research and development outside the universities. The government spends an additional $7 billion annually. Despite these efforts, experts say, West German research is losing more and more of its once-splendid reputation.

For example, until recently it was the rule throughout the world that any natural scientist who wanted to stay abreast of developments in his field was compelled to learn the German language. And an innovation in chemistry or physics was as likely as not to come from a German laboratory.

That this is no longer the case was attested to recently by the West German magazine "Capital," which noted that West German research continued to set the pace ony in isolated instances.

Budget cutbacks at the universities, experts say, can only promote the apparent trend towards mediocrity.

German scholarship and scientific research have not kept pace with the country's overall postwar upsurge. Supporting this view, the giant Hoechst organization bypassed German scientists to grant a $49 million genetic research project to Harvard University.

Thus, Prof. Eugen Seibold, president of the German Researchers Association, feels that the outlook for producing first-rate research scienists is as limited as the funds available for their education.

Cows may produce more if milked before calving

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — A dairy farmer might find that Elsie produces more milk if milking begins before her calf is born instead of after, research at Southern Illinois University suggests.

She also might be healthier, get pregnant easier and remain productive longer.

SIU dairy specialist David Harmon and graduate student Dawn Hamilton milked 45 Holsteins for two years to determine the effect of early milking.

The production of one group increased 26 percent when milking began during pregnancy, compared with the year when milking began with the birth of calves, said Harmon. Production increased from an annual average of 6,595 kilograms per cow to 8,313 kilograms.

Production was about the same each year for the cows that were milked only after their calves were born — 7,235 kilograms the first year and 7,535 the second, he said.

Harmon believes milk production suffers when a dairy cow has to deal with several stresses at the same time — the beginning of milking and the birth of a calf, for example.

"If you can start that milking early, she gets used to it before she has the calf," he said. "She can get acquainted with new situations at a more gradual pace."

Milking began as early as 21 days before the expected birth of a calf, said Harmon, but the timing did not seem to be important.

"It didn't matter if it was three days before or 13 days," said Harmon.

The scientists also found that it took fewer artificial inseminations to get the early milked cows pregnant again — an average of 1.71 injections, compared with 2.36 the year they were not milked during pregnancy.

The group that was milked after birth both years required about the same number of services to get pregnant — 2.75 and 2.66.

Harmon said he was not certain why early milking seemed to make it easier for cows to get pregnant again.

He stressed that the SIU research has involved a small number of cows in a single herd, and said more work should be done before firm conclusions are drawn.

However, his results suggest also these possible benefits:

—The early milking relieves pressure on the cows' udders, and might reduce the incidence of mammary gland inflammation.

—Cows milked during pregnancy might produce milk for an extra year before being retired from the herd.

He said he knew of only one problem with early milking. Cows produce a substance called colostrum during the first few days they are milked. It contains antibodies essential to calves, born with no natural disease resistance. When cows are milked during pregnancy, the colostrum must be frozen and saved for the calves, he said.

Alcoholics' offspring may have weird brain waves

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Alcoholics' offspring have brain waves dramatically different from those of other children, according to doctors at the Salk Institute who believe they may find hereditary clues to alcoholism.

Although research has shown a strong correlation between alcoholism and family drinking history, the new study is one of the first to unearth possible biological evidence, according to Dr. Floyd Bloom, director of the La Jolla, Calif., institute's Alcohol Research Center.

Dr. Helen Neville of the institute and Dr. Marc Schuckit of San Diego Veteran's Hospital observed brain waves in 30 male college students, 15 of whom had an alcoholic parent. All were themselves normal social drinkers, Neville said.

The subjects performed tasks while under the influence of alcohol. Their responses – relayed to a computer by electrodes attached to their scalps – varied widely, according to Neville. She said she also noted brain differences when the subjects hadn't consumed any alcohol.

In subsequent interviews with the subjects, researchers realized they had accurately predicted 80 percent of the time which were sons of alcoholics, Bloom said.

Neville said statistical research has shown that people with a family history of alcoholism are four times more likely to become alcoholics than people in the general population. If more extensive follow-ups to the new study confirm preliminary findings, Neville and Bloom said the work could be valuable in identifying and helping potential alcoholics.

Results of the study have been submitted to the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, Neville said. The study was funded by the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism.

Police mount effort to remove Sunset Boulevard prostitutes

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Sixteen mounted Los Angeles police officers rode into the wilds of Sunset Boulevard here again Thursday night, hoping to repeat what officials said was a successful initial effort to rout prostitutes from the area.

Reporting on the horse patrol's first foray Wednesday night, Los Angeles Police Department spokesman Lt. Dan Cooke said, "After a couple of hours you couldn't find a prostitute on the streets."

Why would ladies of the night shy from horses any more than from policemen in cars or on foot?

"This way," Cooke explained, "it's a concerted effort. These officers have no other responsibility. They're not going to suddenly get calls to go someplace else."

Not only that, Cooke said, the women "didn't like the attention they were getting from the police, citizens and news people" drawn by the unusual enforcement technique.

The patrol may not have made any prostitution arrests on its Wednesday night outings but Hollywood Division Capt. Robert Smitson said he was getting calls from residents and business people pleased with the results and anxious to have the horses there on a regular basis.

Indian tribe finds chili packing fine

FABENS, Texas (AP) — Hundreds of years ago, a quiet Indian tribe called the Tiguas grew chili peppers in the lushness of the Rio Grande Valley near El Paso.

Today, the Tiguas are back in the chili business, but primitive tools have given way to dehydraters, huge grinding mills and cardboard drums.

The tribe is operating a chili processing plant with a farmers' consortium near Fabens — reducing the wrinkled red peppers to a fine carmine powder used to season everything from bologna to soup.

"IT'S UNUSUAL because you have Indians going into the food industry," said tribal superintendent Ray Apodaca. "We're moving off the reservation, in essence, to work with private industry. It's established a bond between non-Indians and Indians in the valley because we're all in business together."

The Tiguas' plant began operation in December and plans already have been made to expand. The federal Housing and Urban Development department has approved a grant of $330,000 for the tribe to add cold-storage and packaging facilities.

The current plant was funded by a $300,000 HUD grant, said tribal business manager Larry Trussell.

"The federal government is very, very hesitant to fund economic development projects by local governments or Indian tribes because they historically have not been successful," Trussell said. "But the Tiguas have been successful, so HUD is able to look at our grant applications favorably."

The plant also provides employment for members of the tribe. Presently, 11 Tiguas work at the plant and the number could reach as many as 35 after the expansion, Apodaca said. The tribe numbers 687.

For years, the Tiguas have funded tribal needs and provided employment through a museum and tourist attraction in east El Paso. A couple of years ago, the tribal council began searching for a new venture.

"The idea came from just looking around and seeing what is happening in business," Apodaca said. "Regardless of what happens to everything else, there's always going to be a food business. You've got to eat."

The consortium, called Paso-Pak, buys chili from area farmers, cleans it, dehydrates it and sells the resulting chili powder. The Tiguas work on a contract with Paso-Pak to grind the dehydrated peppers into powder and blend it to order.

CURRENTLY, THE powdered chilis are stored in warehouses in El Paso until they are needed to fill an order. Then, the drums are returned to the Tiguas' plant where the proper blend is reached and the chili powder is prepared for shipping.

When the plant addition is completed in September, all of the storage and packaging will be done on site, Apodaca said. The Tiguas' plant and the Paso-Pak facility are joined by a large door, making one long, metal building.

"There is chili coming in one end and going out the other all year long," Apodaca said. "Optimistically, we're looking at this plant processing three or four million pounds a year. That's a lot of dehydrated chili."

Trussell said about 1.5 million pounds of chili will be processed this year.

Currently, the chili powder and paprika produced at the plant are sold to industrial customers who use the spices in prepared foods, plant manager Gary Phillips said.

"You look at the ingredients of almost anything in the store and it will have some chili or paprika in it," he said. "And the advent of fast food, Taco Bells and that sort of things, has really boosted it up. They're eating Mexican food in places now where they never had it before."

When the plant addition is complete, the tribe will begin selling chili powder in smaller quantities than the current 220-pound drums.

"When you're dealing with industrial packaging, your customers are limited," Apodaca said. "We got the idea of opening another market and selling them in five-, 10-, 15- and 25-pound packages that can be used in cafeterias, PXes, maybe even in chain stores.

"One of these days, you could see a Paso-Pak label or a Tigua Indian label on the shelf at the Safeway."

Louisiana shipyard blast wrecks barge, kills three

BELLE CHASSE, La. (AP) — An explosion peeled open a barge under repair at a shipyard's floating dry dock, killing three workers and injuring 15 others, authorities said.

State police Sgt. Paul Hamburger said three men were killed instantly in the explosion shortly before 10 a.m. at the Thomas Jordan Inc. shipyard.

"It peeled the top of the barge back and sank the dry dock it was on," Hamburger said.

Carolyn Donahoo, a spokeswoman at West Jefferson Hospital, said 15 workers were treated there, most for minor injuries. She said two of the injured were admitted.

Border Patrol says 75 aliens caught in Laredo-area raids

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — U.S. Border Patrol agents said they picked up 75 illegal aliens Friday in Laredo-area raids and caught an additional 44 crossing the border in Laredo.

The raids at businesses, construction sites and restaurants were designed to open up jobs for unemployed South Texans, agents said. Sixty-five were taken into custody in Laredo and 10 in Zapata.

On Thursday in Falfurrias, agents found 36 illegal aliens from Mexico inside a tank truck. Less than 24 hours before that, agents stopping a rented vehicle crammed with 45 Salvadorans in Harlingen.

Four women were unconscious when agents opened the tank truck Thursday at a routine checkpoint and discovered its human cargo. The women were taken to Brooks County Hospital and treated for dehydration before they were released Friday morning.

David Daniel Salazar, 40, of Brownsville, was arrested and charged with transporting illegal aliens.

In another case, Joel Reyes, 31, of Brownsville was charged with conspiring to smuggle the Salvadorans after Border Patrol agents stopped a rental truck in Harlingen.

Chief Border Patrol Agent Larry Richardson of McAllen said the Salvadorans apparently had been taken to a motel where they were loaded into the truck.

Two Texas men die in small plane crash

NEOSHO, Mo. (AP) — A homebuilt plane carrying a Texas man and his son to an experimental aircraft convention crashed during a landing approach at the Neosho Airport Friday, killing both of the plane's occupants, authorities reported.

Airport officials said the pilot radioed for permission to land and refuel shortly before 9 a.m. and crashed about one-fourth of a mile from the end of the runway. The plane — a Thorpe Homebuilt T18 built from a kit — was demolished but did not burn.

Bill Bell, son of the airport manager, said he watched from the airport operations office as the plane turned toward the runway, went into a steep bank and stalled. The plane crashed in a small valley behind a line of trees.

Newton County Coroner Henry Freund identified the victims as Francis A. Richardson, 52, of Denison, Texas, the pilot, and his son, Danny P. Richardson, 25, of Fort Worth, Texas.

The pilot "gave no indication of problems" when he radioed for permission to land, said Joe Frets of the Federal Aviation Agency in Kansas City.

Representative will run unopposed

ANGLETON, Texas (AP) — The Democratic Party has decided not to name a candidate to run against Republican incumbent U.S. Rep. Ron Paul.

Democrats were left without a nominee when James R. "Randy" Smith of Houston announced June 28 he was withdrawing from the race. Smith said he quit because he was having trouble raising money and the recession was hurting his petrochemical pump supply business.

A three-man committee of Democrats from Harris, Brazoria and Fort Bend counties met early in the week and decided not to name a replacement for Smith.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Sunday, August 1, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Tennis star Jack Kramer, composer Lionel Bart and fashion designer Yves Saint Laurent celebrate birthdays today. Because you bring new knowledge to your job and are good at adapting to change, the coming year will be a banner one for you. A romantic adventure will be both fun-filled and successful. Let loved ones know how you feel. Travel enjoys particularly favorable influences in September and December, and again next April. Family members require more of your time and attention than in the past. Arrange your schedule so that you can meet their needs as fully as possible. Artistic projects flourish.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Extreme positions must be softened or progress will come to a halt in labor negotiations. Substantiate need and others will be easier to deal with.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Apologize to a loved one early in the day. It will save you time and frustration and pave the way for a happy afternoon. Trim entertainment costs.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be sure to get guarantees in writing if looking for real estate. Changes are in your future. Keep your assets liquid. Seize a chance to play peacemaker between good friends.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your feelings should not be ignored. Have a candid conversation with a selfish family member. Accept the gifts and praise. Then share both with those who support you full time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Seek spiritual guidance. It could show you the best way to resolve the differences between you and loved one. Travel is great now—especially one-day short trips.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You sometimes become too intense and make others uncomfortable. Be more relaxed in your relationships. Mate will be much happier if you try harder to understand his or her needs.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A teen-ager resents being left out of family secrets. Level with him or her. Delays will cause you losses. A financial plan worked out by loved one is worth pursuing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Get away from the pressures of work and relax. Do not mix business with pleasure. Socialize only with people you enjoy. A home improvement project is a good investment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Act less inhibited in social situations and your popularity will rise. Guard against overreacting to a temporary crisis.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A family dispute is finally settled. You are attracted to a member of the opposite sex partially because of his or her financial assets.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A dream involving romance could come true today. Your fortunes get a boost from a former flame who still treasures you as a friend. Heed young person's advice.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may be asked to expand your role in the management of a family trust. Imaginative projects are slowed by a lack of money. Establish your credibility before asking for a loan.

Ex-pro quarterback hits the skids

By RICK REILLY
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

DENVER — You probably never even looked him in the eye. Maybe you turned an icy shoulder and glanced the other way. Or maybe you slowed your pace long enough to flip him a quarter. Maybe you didn't even notice.

But he was there. Like so many other bums in downtown Denver, George Herring was there, trying to talk you out of ome loose change — something that would buy him some sleep; something to get him through one more night, to buy him a way to forget, a way to stop the aching and steady the hand.

George Herring had a strong, even hand once. He walked easily, graceful and tall, and those eyes ... those steel blue eyes of his seemed somehow regal.

Things had come easy for him. He was a quarterback for the Denver Broncos. And for a time, he was the toast of this town.

In 1961, he beat Frank Tripucka out to become a starter. In one game against the New York Titans, he threw four touchdown passes and ran for another. In an exhibition against Oakland that same year, he threw five TD passes to beat the Raiders 49-20. In the first three exhibition games that year, he led Tripucka in touchdown passes seven to one.

NOBODY WAS all that surprised. He had been a Little All-America selection at Southern Mississippi and a draft choice of the San Francisco 49ers. The military draft took him away from the 49ers, but eventually, Herring was back in football with Denver and his elegant brand of athletics still shone.

Today, George Herring's voice cracks, his lips are dry and torn, his eyes burnt red from too much wind and booze and sadness.

He is an alcoholic now. He lives by the railroad tracks, and the shattered glass and the stench west of downtown Denver, less than a long punt from Mile High Stadium.

"This is no life for me," he says. "I gotta get out." Still, he sits here and he is a part of this nightmare. It is his — all of it. The abandoned semi-truck trailer he lives in. The dirty spoons and the bent cans of tomato paste and applesauce the man at the supermarket leaves out for him. The broken alarm clock and the stinking sleeping bag he falls on every night when he is too drunk to stand or care anymore; when he has finally had enough and can sleep and forget about the yesterdays and the tomorrows.

What happened to George Herring?

What happened to the tall, handsome Southerner who could throw the football 60 yards and make it nestle in a receiver's arms? What happened to the man who punted a football 70 yards in 1960? What happened to the man could make you laugh until you cried; to the gentle, smiling man who loved kids; the one who never turned down an autograph?

George knows. "Drinkin'," he says.

"Drinkin's been the cause of all my problems."

TOO MANY interceptions (his name is still in the record books for most interceptions thrown in one game — six — along with Joe Namath, Kenny Stabler, Don Horn and others) sent Herring packing. He finished the 1962 season with Calgary and then quit. He moved back to Denver.

For 10 years, he worked at Chuck Ruart Chevrolet as a service adviser. "I was making real good money then ... I had a truck and a big Cadillac. But pretty soon, I started spending more money than I was bringing in. I was spending it all at the bar before I got home. One day, the boss called me in and said 'George, we've got to let you go. You've got too many customer complaints.' But I knew it wasn't customer complaints. It was the drinkin'."

He found a job at another car dealership and thought he had his alcoholism under control. But one day he showed up to work with alcohol on his breath. His boss gave him two weeks off to either get help or quit.

He quit.

And the slide began.

"I feel bad about that now. He was a nice man and I treated him dirty."

IN 1978, Herring's wife, who still lives in Denver, filed for separation. She had a restraining order put on her husband to stay away from his three kids. "I'm not a violent person," Herring says. "I've never laid a hand on my wife or my kids. I guess she just didn't trust me with them."

Since the divorce, Herring's life has unraveled like a cheap sweater. He has been on one long skid, until he landed here, at the bottom, in a dark, squalid trailer the sunlight never seems to reach.

"I've screwed up," he says. "And I just keep on screwing up."

In the past four years, Herring has lived in exile from his family and his friends. His only pleasure comes when he can come up with a spare 20 cents. "I call my kids and have them meet at the shopping center," he says. "I love kids. Any kind of kids, I love 'em. I meet 'em there and they don't question me much. I tell 'em I'm living downtown. If they knew where I really was, they wouldn't be too proud."

He has spent the last year getting fired from one spot job to the next. Mostly, he's a dishwasher.

Occasionally, glorious past meets stark present. Old die-hard Bronco fans will recognize him, then perhaps wish they hadn't said anything. "I was working at the Eggshell in Larimer Square," he says. "And I got to talking with this guy. He was a big Bronco fan. After awhile, he said, 'Don't I know you?' And I told him about the Broncos."

HERRING QUIT a week later.

He always comes back to the tracks, where he is a hero to the men who try to sleep the day away until they fail, forced to get up and work the streets, hoping three hours work will buy them a bottle of wine and a cigarette, if they're lucky.

"George?" says one of them, Doug, a former Southern Airlines pilot who tells stories of his days as a Vietnam P.O.W. and the woman who drove him to drink. "George is a big, big man. He's a good man, too. He loves the glory. He loves the old days.

"George shouldn't be here," Doug says with a sullen face. "This is —."

And Herring knows it. He wants out of this land of The Great Detached. "I know this life is terrible," he says, and he has tried to leave it.

Raleigh Hills alcoholic treatment hospital didn't work. A half dozen visits to Denver General Hospital's Detoxification Center didn't work. Moving into the Mile-Hi halfway house two weeks ago didn't work.

"I'VW GOT TO make it work," he says. "I've got to do it for George. I can't do it for my friends, or my family. Got to do it for George. That's the only way it's going to work."

Last weekend, George Herring checked into Denver General's detoxification center — again. He thinks it's working.

"I think I can do it this time," he says. "I've got to climb out of this life. I'm determined to conquer it."

If it works this time, he would like to start over. He would like to live a simple life again: a job in the car business, a roof over his head, a chance to see his family.

"Someday, you'll see, I'm going to gain back respect from everybody. I'm going to make my kids proud of me again."

At this writing, George Herring might have the hardest part behind him.

Or he might have failed — again.

If you see him, you will know.

Train operates solely to deliver coal

LAKE POWELL, Ariz. (AP) — Old Engine 6006 blew yet another tune into the serene and pastoral setting.

She would do so 66 times on this run, two long and two short blasts at every road crossing on the Black Mesa & Lake Powell line.

There's not much here but sand and sage, buttes and blue sky, and, stretching beyond vision, the ribbon rails of the BM & LP hypnotically narrowing to nothing.

Bob Sears has been riding this line for six years. He's the engineer, or train operator as they're known on the only railroad on the Navajo Reservation.

His assistant, Judy Begay, has been on the line for six months. She'll soon qualify as an assistant train operator, and when an opening for an operator comes, she'll be the first woman operator on the line.

The all-electric railroad was built in the early 1970s to provide 24,000 tons of coal daily for the Navajo Generating Station.

Sears pointed out the aging wreckage of a pickup truck, slowly rusting down into the red sand. It was left across the tracks, awaiting doom.

"When we're hauling 5,000 tons of coal and 3,000 tons of train, you're figuring a lot of weight to try to stop," Sears says. "There's just nothing we can do to stop from hitting something."

The BM & LP is unusual among train lines in several ways. To power itself it does not use the plentiful resource of coal it was built to haul.

Instead, the 78-mile line is energized with electricity. The train receives 50,000 volts from the system running above that parallels the tracks like a halo. Only one other train in the world, a South African coal train, is supplied with as much juice.

Ironically, the BM & LP gets its power not from the Navajo Generating Station, but from Glen Canyon Dam and Power Plant.

The five daily runs go to only one place: the Peabody Coal Company's twin silos at the Klethla Valley Near Kayenta.

The 50- to 100-car train glides under the silos at ½ mile per hour. Coal is received dustlessly from chutes suspended from within the silo.

The coal is delivered to the 200-foot-tall silos by a conveyor belt that snakes down the 7½ miles from the Black Mesa coal mine.

It takes about an hour and a half to load up, depending on the length of the train. Then the train must wait for the next train to arrive, freeing the tracks for its return trip.

Going home Sears can take the train up to its maximum loaded speed of 55 mph. The limit is 40 mph when riding empty because the airfoil design of the cars tends to make them lighter on the rails.

Dairy board turns down Alex

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The Wisconsin agriculture board did not think much of a proposal to hire an "Alex in Dairyland" to promote the state's milk products along with the woman it chooses annually to be "Alice in Dairyland."

"His muscles and torso would appeal to us women — Alice doesn't do a thing for me," said board member Betty Roe, a dairy farmer from Maple, who made the suggestion.

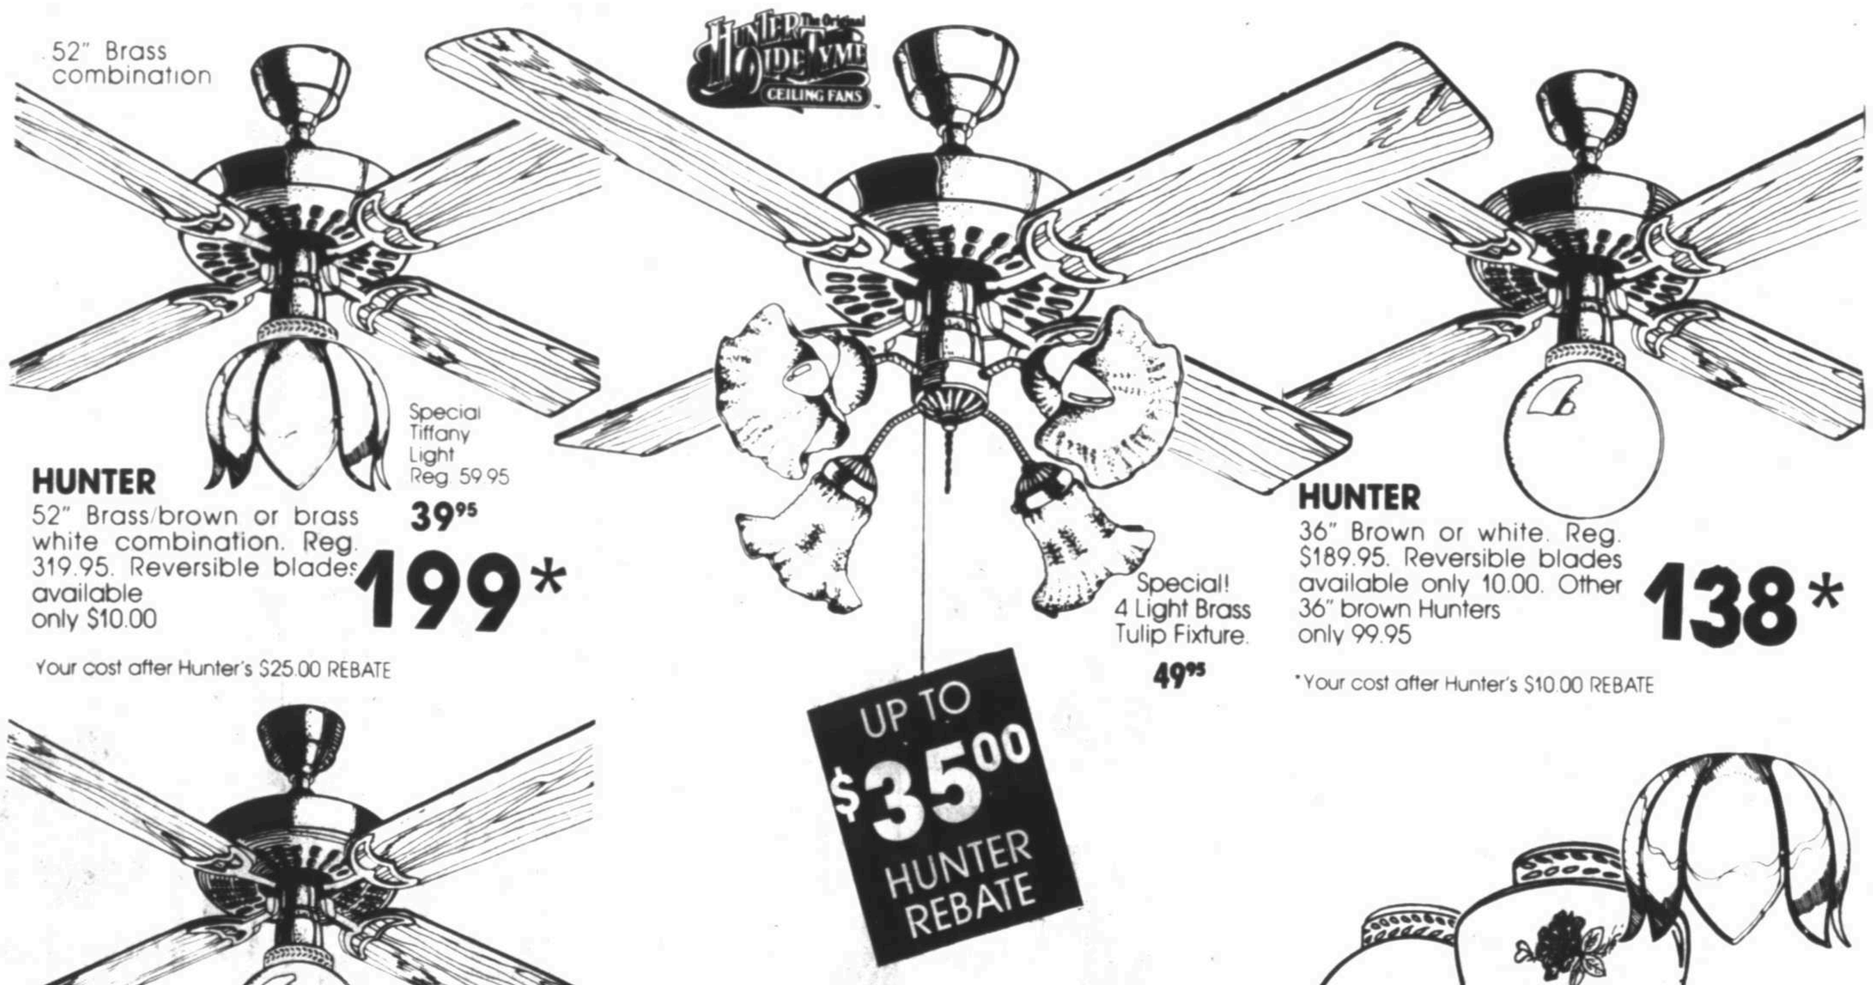

"The clean-cut, articulate American male will sell milk to girls before Alice will sell it to girls," she added, but no action was taken on her idea.

Alice is chosen in an annual competition and spends one year as an employee of the state.

At a meeting last week board members were concerned that Alice would not be able to make all the appearances scheduled for her both in Wisconsin and outside the state.

"The suggestion prompted Ms. Roe to raise the possibility of hiring an "Alex."

MMH midwife program gets an official OK

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Midland Memorial Hospital officials and medical staff announced Friday the official approval of a certified nurse-midwife program.

The program is designed exclusively for patients who are admitted to MMH's obstetrical department and are not under the care of a private physician.

In a news conference Friday, Dr. James M. Humphreys, obstetrician/gynecologist and director of the city/county health department; Dr. Robert Hardy, obstetrician/gynecologist and chief of the MMH obstetric department; Maudie Rains, director of maternal and infant care at MMH; Dr. Walter S. Parks Jr., gynecologist and MMH trustee; and Ray Branson, MMH president, explained the details of the program.

"We've been dreaming about this for several years," Parks said, adding that each month there have been as many as 30 drop-ins (those who have not seen a doctor) and those who have had some prenatal care. The obstetricians in the community have been on a rotation call to care for these patients, but at a time when the community has been experiencing rapid growth and a "baby boom" the situation has become a problem.

It is the consensus of the obstetricians that with the onset of this program there will be a high quality of care.

"The entire obstetrics committee voted and agreed on this program," Hardy said.

"For a community hospital this size, MMH is probably the first (to start such a program)," Ms. Rains said.

And physicians will be able to spend more time with their own practices.

But, according to Hardy, the doctors are completely responsible for the patients.

An obstetrician on staff at MMH will be the patient's primary physician. The physician will assign the nurse-midwife to the women in the program if there are no complications and the patients are determined to be in good health.

Although there is no certification procedure in Texas for midwives, MMH will follow the national standard of certified nurse-midwives.

"A certified nurse-midwife is a registered nurse who has gone through post graduate program to be a nurse midwife," Ms. Rains said. "They are certified through the American College of nurse-midwives."

Patients who will be accepted for the program include those who are not under the care of private physicians and those who attend the city/county health department clinic for pre-natal care. Also, patients who attend the pre-natal clinic are eligible for a full range of care during the length of their pregnancies. All patients who are accepted into the program will deliver their babies at MMH and can participate in all of the educational programs. The mothers also will have all the options provided to other obstetrical patients, including rooming-in (mothers and babies).

Humphreys said he hopes the program will encourage more mothers-to-be to seek pre-natal care through the clinic.

"We have more patients applying to the clinic than we have room," Humphreys said, adding that since the two midwives employed by MMH will also work at the clinic, the continuity and quality of care will be greater than if the patient was seen by several doctors.

USA Today printing announced

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Tribune will print the Chicago-area edition of the Gannett group's new national newspaper, USA Today, scheduled to begin publication Sept. 15, officials of both newspapers announced Friday.

USA Today initially is expected to serve a five-state region in the Baltimore-Washington D.C. area.

Anger prompts shooting

HAMTRAMCK, Mich. (AP) — A man who killed three people in a medical clinic and then turned his stolen pistol on himself was angry because his family had been notified he was receiving treatment there, police said Friday.

Pjetar Gjokaj, 33, walked into the Hamtramck Family Medical Clinic on Thursday afternoon and asked to see a doctor. He then fatally shot Dr. Mahman Moraffah, 35, a receptionist, the clinic's owner and himself with a 9mm automatic pistol.

"It is the conclusion of the department that the patient, prior to being treated, asked that his family not be notified of the treatments or the reason for the treatment," said Police Lt. Andrew Kozinski.

Kozinski would say only that Gjokaj was being treated for a urinary tract infection.

According to police, Gjokaj fired several shots and then told a medical assistant who fled the scene of the shootings that "the doctor has disturbed my family."

Disaster loans requested for West Texas counties

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements Friday asked the Small Business Administration to make available economic disaster loans in Midland and other counties in the High Plains-West Texas area because of weather-related problems in May and June.

Clements, in a letter to SBA Regional Administrator Reynaldo Lopez, Dallas, noted that on July 15, Secretary of Agriculture John Block designated 75 counties as eligible for disaster payments.

The losses in those counties, Clements said, "have created an economic emergency for many agricultural producers as well as other small businesses."

"I have received numerous reports concerning the losses and problems which many of the small independent businesses are facing in the wake of the poor crops this year.

"Because so much of the economy of the Texas High Plains is highly dependent on agriculture, this latest disaster may mean that many businesses will close," Clements reported.

British Museum updates with 20th century items

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE

LONDON (AP) — A Tiffany 1850 silver tray from America, a set of turn-of-the-century English brass fire irons and a 1905 German washbowl have joined the treasures of civilization in the British Museum.

The famous repository of scholarship and art is updating, though cautiously so far, with seven modest glass cases in a small room. It's called the Modern Gallery.

The objects in Room 48 are hardly likely to make visitors goggle. They cannot compare with the Egyptian mummy cases, the Assyrian Colossi, the Chinese porcelain or the Greek vases.

But the electroplated kettle, brass oil lamp, cutlery, coffee pot and a couple of toast racks, chosen for their tasteful design and good workmanship, are a sign that the great British Museum is breaking new ground.

One official, buttonholed on preview day recently, said wryly: "This is really quite a step forward. There are people here who believe that 'modern' starts with the end of the Roman occupation," in 406 A.D.

As if to underline the points, the modern gallery has been firmly placed in MLA, the Department of Medieval and Later Antiquities.

Michael Collins, assistant keeper in the department, is in charge of the modern gallery and said in an interview that he had been buying for it for two and a half years, discreetly at auction at home and abroad and from private sellers.

"What we are showing represents 90 percent of what we've got. In even 50 years we will be very grateful that we bought things like these now, before they became too expensive," Collins said.

"The Louvre (in Paris) made it before us and the French, Germans and Americans are strong leaders in this period," Collins said.

The Department of Prints and Drawings seized the opportunity to show that it has the same idea, showing to the press some of its acquisitions dating from 1890 to the present day.

Frances Carey, assistant keeper there, said they had been buying for five years after starting out with "virtually no 20th-century material of any distinction."

Collins said it had been a "struggle" to persuade certain important people that the museum "must represent the modern age — our century should buy into modern artifacts."

He said that when the buy-modern move began the museum had nothing later than Josiah Wedgwood, the English potter who died in 1795.

Collins, an art historian, was appointed to build up the modern collection. He is seeking more material from the Bauhaus modern movement in Germany in the 1920s, and from the 1950s, and 1960s, when Scandinavian, Italian and German design was better than British.

Collins put the decline of British design around 1914, "when it was at its peak, like we were as a nation."

He has the backing of his departmental keeper, Neil Stratford, who said: "We would be behaving in a very strange way if we accepted a long tradition that the British Museum did not buy anything after 1800. What would it look like in 100 years if we did not?"

Grocery coupons come under attack

By LOUISE COOK

Almost everyone is clipping coupons to trim grocery bills these days, but a new study shows that the cents-off promotions vary widely in value and type.

The study was conducted by the Economic Research Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Preliminary findings were published in the latest issue of "National Food Review," a quarterly journal put out by the agency.

Anthony Gallo, author of the article, says that cents-off coupons have been the fastest-growing form of food promotion and advertising since the mid 1970s. In 1974, coupons represented about 6 percent of total food advertising and promotion; by 1980, they accounted for 11 percent. Coupons still lag behind broadcast and print advertising as a means of promotion, but studies have shown they are used by four households in five.

The coupons also have come under attack, however. Some consumer activists says coupons encourage people to buy products they don't really need. They say the money spent on coupons would better be used to lower prices in general. And they point out that coupon usage is lowest among poor families who need the savings most. (The Bureau of Labor Statistics says lower-income families spend significantly less for reading materials than more affluent consumers and 90 percent of all coupons are distributed through newspapers or magazines.)

The USDA study says that people who do not use coupons subsidize those who do. "Non-users (of coupons) pay the printing, distributing and handling costs of coupons without benefiting from their discounts," the USDA says. It also concludes, however, that "there is no hard evidence that food prices would drop in the absence of coupons, because manufacturers could shift to other types of advertising."

Gallo and the other USDA researchers noted that up until now there has been little concrete information about coupon redemption on specific products: Are consumers using coupons for basic food items? For luxuries? For non-food items?

One phase of their study centered on 16,329 manufacturers' coupons received by a large grocery chain with stores in the Washington, D.C., and Baltimore areas during the week beginning Nov. 2, 1980.

Among the findings:

—About three out of five coupons redeemed were for food items, although they were rarely for staples like fresh meats, poultry, eggs and produce. Only about two-tenths of the coupons redeemed were for meat, fish, poultry or eggs; an equally small number were for fresh fruits or vegetables. Leading the list of foods for which coupons were used were coffee, prepared foods, cereals and cake mixes.

—Non-food items accounted for about two out five coupons redeemed. These products included household supplies, pet food, tobacco and what's known as general merchandise — health and beauty aids, school supplies, etc. These items represent about 15 percent of all grocery stores sales on a national basis — but they accounted for about 40 percent of the coupon redemptions.

Employees ordered to clip coupons

HAUPPAUGE, N.Y. (AP) — The thrifty comptroller of Suffolk County wants employees to clip grocery coupons from their county-purchased newspapers — but affected officials call it the unkindest cut of all.

"It's going to cost more to implement it than to pay for the blankety-blank papers," said Peter Buckingham, county director of fire safety.

The order is "the height of ridiculousness," said county Legislator Donald Allgrove. He refused to order his secretary to cut coupons. "She's too busy doing county work," he said.

But Comptroller Joseph Caputo, who wants the coupons clipped to help the county welfare department save money on its shopping, is standing firm. He says officials in this county on New York's Long Island will lose their newspaper subscriptions if they don't comply.

"These newspapers belong to the county," he said. The county pays $300 for newspapers for 150 officials each week.

Caputo and his wife saved $5.87 with coupons when they did their grocery shopping; the county could save as much as $1,500 a week by using coupons from the newspapers it bought, Caputo said.

Caputo is a frugal man. He once noted that a local newspaper spells his post "controller" instead of "comptroller," and suggested that it saved a lot of money on ink by dispensing with one letter.

His latest campaign started in April, when he tried to stop paying for weekend papers.

"We don't come into work on Saturday or Sunday. I couldn't see any justification for paying for them," he said.

There were many complaints. Some offices are indeed open on Saturday and Sunday; other department heads said they use the papers for files.

So Caputo modified his decision. He agreed to reimburse officials if they filed a written justification for getting weekend newspapers, and sent the coupons to his office. He, in turn, would relay them to the Department of Social Services, which likes the idea.

"It will be very helpful," said Jerome Linder, a special assistant to the welfare department's commissioner.

Caputo suggested some departments could use citizen volunteers to clip the coupons. In others, secretaries already cut articles from the newspapers and could easily cut coupons, he said.

Legislator Anthony Noto said he thought coupon-clipping was "an excellent idea...just to throw them away doesn't make sense." But Noto was in the minority, in and out of the county.

Brian Sheehan, spokesman for the National Association of Counties in Washington, D.C., said coupon clipping by employees was "utter nonsense" and was practiced nowhere else as far as he knew.

And Travis Boggs, counsel for the state controller, said newspapers are considered "actual and necessary expenses."

"If the payment is judged to be proper, I don't see how (Caputo) can impose these Mickey Mouse conditions," Boggs said.

Convent has action-filled history

By INGE MARTIN

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Convents are supposed to be places of religious repose, but this city's San Francisco complex has also seen enough action to convince the visitor he'd just missed witnessing the Crusades.

Now the convent has passed to a more stately stage, where history and meditation walk hand-in-hand in near silence. So much so that Peru recently asked the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) to bestow a world heritage designation on the convent, thus enshrining San Francisco's artistic and architectural merits under the staid rubric of an international monument.

More than a place of worship, San Francisco has been a bellwether of earlier, more tumultuous times. Its history is filled with tales of devout and not-so-holy friars, revolutions, miracles, pirates and earthquakes, but also of artisans, masterpieces, and faith.

The convent was founded in 1546 by a group of Spanish monks who accompanied Francisco Pizarro on his conquest of the Inca empire. In 1557, Viceroy Hurtado de Mendoza allowed the Franciscans to augment their land grant by adding all the land they could rope off in one night. The convent's land grew, overnight, to six blocks deep and three blocks wide, the largest in Latin America.

The buildings were erected with the expertise of well-known Spanish and Peruvian artists. The convent's first big church, said by chroniclers of the era to have been a fabulous creation, was demolished by an earthquake in 1656. The present church was built by Manuel Escobar, a Lima resident, from plans drawn up by the Portuguese architect, Constantino de Vasconcelos — a fantasy structure of towers, walkways and baroque facade.

Today the complex consists of three churches and four cloisters situated on five acres of land.

One of the churches, the Chapel of the Miracle, is named after a miracle-producing statue of the Virgin of Conception, a gift from Emperor Charles V.

The statue is believed to be the first religious image brought to Peru by the conquistadors and is said to have saved the lives of conquerers and friars alike during a fierce battle with Manco Inca and his followers in Cuzco. In the height of battle the Spaniards had taken refuge in a shed, which the Incas set afire with flaming arrows. The men thought themselves doomed, when the warring Incas saw the statue the friars had brought with them and stopped fighting. Miraculously, the fire abated.

The statue was then brought to Lima, where it attracted crowds and enriched the convent.

Some of San Francisco's riches are now on display at the convent museum, which houses a 40-inch-high jewel-encrusted gold and silver monstrance, keeper of the consecrated host. The monstrance was the work of Cuzco artisans.

The balcony from Pizarro's palace has been moved to the convent and lines the back wall of the museum. Sitting behind its carved panels, Pizarro used to listen to mass from his palace in what was then called Plaza Mayor, today's Plaza de Armas.

The convent's Sala Capitular was the site of many historical events, the most important of which was probably the signing of the Act of Independence in 1821.

Today the convent is the center of Franciscan activity in Peru. The Rev. Jose Lobaton Heredia is the convent's current superior and, at 34, is the youngest head of the order.

About 300 people visit the convent each day, many drawn by the mysteries of its catacombs. The underground chambers are as extensive as the above-ground structures. Tunnels leading to various strategic points around the city have been bricked up for safety.

Until 1810 the catacombs served as Lima's general cemetery, in death obliterating the sharp distinctions between the social classes of the day. Today, some of the 14,000 to 20,000 skulls and bones have been set into neat alternating circles in what one Lima newspaper has called "a beautiful arrangement."

Over the years the underground chambers were also used to hide relics and treasures from pirates and government officials in times of strife. They also served as shelter for crowds frightened by earthquakes and fires.

Bush drops liberal image, quiets right-wing's qualms

By JAY PERKINS

WASHINGTON (AP) — He's the angel of Republican fund-raisers, a man able to empty pockets while filling newspapers, and if George Bush hasn't quite overcome all of the reservations conservatives once had, he's come a long, long way.

In just over 18 months in office, Bush has visited 42 states, appeared at dozens of fund-raisers for conservative and moderate Republican candidates, and raised at least $12 million for GOP candidates.

And he certainly hasn't hurt himself in the process. Conservatives who once ridiculed and distrusted him are now lining up to ask him to speak at hometown campaign dinners.

John Nance Garner once said the vice presidency wasn't "worth a bucket of warm spit." Garner, under FDR, chafed under the lack of decision-making in the job — a problem Bush acknowledges.

The vice president is as important as the president lets him be. Bush began his partnership with President Reagan as Reagan's second choice for the job and their relationship took time to jell. By all accounts, it has.

DESPITE HIS PAST as a moderate Republican, Bush now is an unwavering Reaganist. He has never sought to upstage the president and apparently he has won Reagan's trust. The president has appointed Bush to highly-visible positions as chairman of various task forces such as one aimed at curbing drug infiltration in South Florida and head of foreign crisis management. He sent Bush on a sensitive mission to China.

But Reagan hasn't burdened Bush with so much responsibility that he hasn't had time for campaigning and fundraising.

Bush's campaign work gives him a chance to gain the confidence of conservatives who have wondered if Bush and his people aren't a moderate cabal trying to undermine Reagan policies.

While Bush won't describe his lingering presidential ambitions, his support for Reagan and his eagerness to campaign for conservatives are helping him broaden his base within the GOP.

"If he has ambitions to be president after President Reagan's second term, he is definitely going into territory that wasn't so hospitable to him earlier," said Rep. Mickey Edwards, R-Okla., head of the American Conservative Union and one who recently benefitted from Bush's fund-raising efforts.

"HE'S MEETING PEOPLE, he's getting up and giving a speech that can't be faulted from a conservative standpoint," Edwards said.

"I can't say he's won any converts but he has given them reason to see him as a credible conservative."

Rep. C.W. Bill Young, R-Fla., said his crowd "loved him. People loved the vice president and what he had to say and the way he said it."

Asked if Bush had mended some fences with conservatives, he replied "There's no question." Young recalled a recent Florida event in which Tommy Thomas, Reagan's campaign chairman and the man who led the Florida battle against Bush in the 1980 presidential contest, gave the vice president a strong endorsement.

"I was with Tommy. He announced there that when Reagan's term in office was completed (Bush) could count on Tommy Thomas for his support. He's (Thomas) a real ultraconservative."

This has been an unusual two years for George Bush, son of a former Connecticut senator, product of the East Coast's top schools, a self-made oil millionaire from Houston, a man conservatives once considered a blasphemy to their 1980 presidential ticket.

SOME OF HIS most faithful allies have won top jobs with Reagan. Former campaign manager James Baker is Reagan's chief of staff. Another former aide, Richard Bond, is deputy director of the Republican National Committee.

In his 18 months of office, Bush has traveled 220,814 miles to 42 states, three U.S. possessions and 18 foreign countries.

He's raised $6.5 million in personal appearances on behalf of Republican candidates. And in 1981 alone he raised another $5 million from fund-raising letters sent out over his signature.

He expects to spend much of the next few months on the road, supplementing the carefully-placed appearances of Reagan.

A source who declined to be identified says Reagan will concentrate on Senate races. But Reagan will forgo fund-raising, the source says, explaining: "There's no question that if the only time grass-roots people get to see the president is at a $1,000-a-plate dinner, that does not help."

THAT LEAVES the burden of raising money to Bush and the computerized apparatus of the GOP.

His recent swing through Tennessee, Louisiana, Nebraska and Illinois grossed an estimated $290,000. While in Nebraska, for example, he helped raise $11,000 for Gov. Charles Thone. He also made appearances on behalf of Senate Republican candidate Jim Keck and Rep. Hal Daub.

The candidates must pay the cost of Bush's travel, but the take is high.

Young noted that Bush's appearance on his behalf grossed $90,000. But even after expenses, Young's campaign was $64,000 to the better.

His appearance for Rep. Robin Beard, R-Tenn., grossed $50,000 — half from a $25-a-plate picnic, the other from a $250-a-person evening reception.

Under law, candidates can receive only $5,000 in direct contributions from the Republican National Committee. In contrast, there is no limit on the amount that a candidate can raise from a fund raiser in which the vice president or any other official speaks.

In addition, some states allow contributions from corporations for state and local party affairs although such donations are not allowed for federal races. Bush long has had good relations with the business community.

"HE'S VERY WELL received," said Edwards of oil-rich Oklahoma. "He made his living in the oil business. He brings with him a credibility economically that even the president can't bring. He's one of us."

"If you're a candidate and Bush is available, my recommendation is get him. He's good at it," Young said.

Bush is upbeat about Republican chances in the House, but then, he points out, "I'm basically an optimist so you have to discount that." Yet he acknowledges the economy may be the key.

"It's too early to say," he says of the 1982 elections. "But I am not one who is real on the negative side or who feels those Democrats who think they're going to pick up a ton of seats are correct. I just don't see it."

"You've got to know exactly what the mood of the people is when they vote with relation to the economy," he said. "It's a little too early to say. If it gets worse, then I would think, as is always the case, that the party in power would have difficulty."

ONE REASON Republicans have a better-than-average chance to avoid the traditional 30 or so House losses of off-year elections is money. Bush, with his ability to bring funds directly into crucial districts, is a key.

But he brings more than an ability to draw money to fund-raisers. He also brings publicity.

Said Edwards. "We probably could have raised the same amount of money with more effort but we could not have got a fourth as much publicity.

"Every television station in the state of Oklahoma was there."

Kansas City recruits VIPs to spruce up parks

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kansas City is putting VIPs to work manicuring its 168 parks and sprucing up the broad boulevards that are the city's hallmark.

The VIPs are not visiting ambassadors but Volunteers in Parks responding to cutbacks in government funding for parks maintenance. More than 200 Kansas City residents signed on as VIPs in the initial week of the program, believed to be the first of its kind in the nation.

"The loss of federal support for park maintenance will be translated into dandelions and peeling paint unless we can muster an army of volunteers," says Jerry John, the park superintendent who invented the program. "The initial response to our VIP recruitment shows Kansas Citians share a personal interest in maintaining the beauty of their parks and boulevards."

The volunteers are "paid" for their time with free passes to such attractions as the Kansas City Zoo, the city's stables, and its public golf courses. Other prizes are being donated by four corporate sponsors.

The park superintendent said the VIPs range from youth groups earning badges for civic projects to retired persons lured by golf course passes.

"We've also got a number of professional people in their 30s and 40s who say they're willing to give a couple of hours on Saturdays," John said.

'Little people' of U.S. think big at anniversary

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Engineers, actors, attorneys and hundreds of others who stand no higher than a hotel reception desk gathered here to celebrate the 25th year of an organization that teaches little people they too can think big.

Harrah's hotel-casino built a platform at one of its crap tables and provided rubber-tipped wands so the 650 people who came from all over the nation to the Little People of America convention could reach the elevator buttons.

There was dancing for teen-agers, softball, a basketball game and time for sightseeing at the anniversary meeting this week. And there were workshops on genetics, jobs, schools and clothing.

"The purpose of the organization is to let little people and their parents come to grips with their short stature," said Lee Kitchens, a 52-year-old engineering manager with Texas Instruments in Lubbock, Texas, and a past president of the Little People of America.

He said that by helping them accept themselves as they are, the organization seeks to let little people "move out into society and become productive, useful citizens."

A quarter of a century ago, dwarfs were rejected by public schools and opportunities for jobs were limited outside circuses.

Today they are doctors and lawyers and members of other professions, but they are still struggling to be accepted by "average" people — a word they prefer to "normal."

"Short stature does not automatically mean that we are short on brain power," Kitchens said. "It's a genetic snafu. It's no different fron red hair or blue eyes."

The organization was born in Reno, the invention of actor Billy Barty, and began with about 20 members. It now has more than 3,000.

"The most significant thing that a little person has to do is to be able to accept himself for his own net worth and to consider in context the statements and comments made by others," Kitchen said.

"Most of the comments you get right now as you walk down the street are from children, who are very honest; old people who are uninhibited; and the stupid and insensitive," Kitchens said.

Harrah's sought to avoid being insensitive. The hotel-casino installed ramps to the registration desk and lowered shower heads. Bob Martin, the vice president and general manager, said, "We're keeping an eye on the incidental things, like providing stools in the casino area whenever needed."

Members of the Little People come from all ethnic backgrounds and range in age from babies to people in their 70s. All are under 4-foot-10. Barty is 3-foot-9; Kitchens is 4-foot-1.

Proportioned dwarfs, incorrectly called midgets, usually are victims of malfunctioning pituitary glands, said Dr. Clair Francomano, a medical resident at Johns Hopkins Hospital training in genetics. Most disproportioned dwarfs, who have short limbs but average-sized trunks, have achondroplasia, a failure of cartilage to form properly.

A score of medical specialists are here to counsel the little people and to study them. A medical advisory board hopes to develop centers in various parts of the country to treat little people.

"If we can make the general public aware that little people are no different from anyone else, in their wants and their hopes and their desires..." Kitchens said, "we will have overcome most barriers — barriers actually in the observer."

Possible blindness-causing dyes result in makeup recall

WASHINGTON (AP) — An imported eyelash and eyebrow dye containing ingredients which may cause blindness is being voluntarily recalled by a California cosmetic distributor and beauty salon, the Food and Drug Administration said Friday.

The FDA said Odette De Paris of Tarzana, Calif., is recalling tubes of the Refecto Cil permanent cream dyes which contain coal tar ingredients — outlawed for use around the eyes more than 40 years ago because it can cause permanent eye injuriues, including blindness.

Dyes containing coal tar ingredients "have been cited repeadtedly in the scientific literature as strong contact sensitizers and have been shown to cause blindness," the FDA said in a statement. "As a result the Food Drug and Costmetic Act requires that hair dye products containing coal tar dyes bear a cautionary statement that they must not be used for dying the eyelashes or eyebrows and that such usage may cause blindness.

"Consumers should not confuse these products with temporary colorings used around the eyes such as mascara, eyeshadow, eyebrow pencils and eyeliners,"

The recalled product is labeled "Refecto Cil Gschwentner Wien Haarkosmet." It comes in one-half and one-sixth ounce metal tubes and shades of black, blue-black, gray and brown, the FDA said. The agency said about 1,140 tubes were sold in California, Pennsylvania and Michigan, primarily to beauty salons. Some also may have been sold to some consumsers for home use, the FDA said.

The agency said the dyes were manufactured by Gschwentner-Haarkosmetik, Vienna, Austria.

Willie Nelson's on road this time for free concert

LIMA, Ohio (AP) — Willie Nelson is on the road again, this time to give a free concert in an economically ailing city that lost 7,000 jobs in two years and faces rising foreclosure and repossession rates.

The bearded bard of honky-tonk music, whose "Always on My Mind" is a current hit, was to perform Friday night for an estimated 30,000 people who had been given free tickets.

Nelson agreed to give the concert after reading a Wall Street Journal story outlining the industrial city's problems.

NEW YORK (AP) — Comedian Andy Kaufman, injured by heavyweight wrestling champion Jerry Lawler in a match last April, got into an altercation with the wrestler again on a television talk show this week.

During taping Wednesday of the hour-long "Late Night With David Letterman" show, Kaufman and Lawler began trading insults.

As a result, Lawler stood up and slapped Kaufman across the face, knocking him out of his seat and off the stage. The comedian, in return, repeatedly cursed Lawler before dumping a cup of coffee on him.

After the show was broadcast Wednesday night, NBC officials said they received telephone calls from more than 100 viewers wanting to know if the incident was staged or real.

Josh Kane, vice president of NBC on the East Coast, said that the two men and the show's producers were interviewed by a network lawyer.

"We satisfied ourselves that the producers of the show were not a party to planning or staging what happened in any way," Kane said.

Allegedly angered that Kaufman had made fun of his sport on several talk shows earlier this year, Lawler challenged the comedian to an exhibition match in which Kaufman sustained back and neck injuries.

MIAMI (AP) — Al Pacino, star of "The Godfather," "Serpico" and "Dog Day Afternoon," will portray a refugee who leaves a Cuban prison and finds his fortune as a Miami drug smuggler in the upcoming movie "Scarface."

The original "Scarface" was a potent picture about organized crime in Chicago. But the new film with the same name tells a completely different story, said screenplay author Olive Stone.

"A year ago, producer Martin Bregman and I heard about the...refugee situation in Miami," said Stone, who won an Oscar for "Midnight Express."

"We felt there was a very interesting story in it, so I came down to Miami and then to Bimini to research it."

Filming is scheduled to begin Oct. 4.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Kate Smith, who recently received the Presidential Medal of Freedom after a singing career spanning 50 years, is to be recognized by the city of Raleigh on Tuesday.

"Each time she sang 'God Bless America,' she brought our nation to its feet, warming the hearts of us all to the spirit of nationalism," Mayor Smedes York said in a proclamation designating Aug. 3 Kate Smith Day. "She is a great humanitarian who inspired and motivated the people of our nation to even greater heights during World War II as she entertained our armed forces, spearheaded fund-raising drives for the American Red Cross and encouraged the sale of war bonds."

HENDERSONVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A house owned by country music star Johnny Cash was destroyed by fire this week, and his sister and her teenage son were accused by witnesses of scuffling with onlookers.

Authorities said the Tuesday night fire caused an estimated $60,000 damage.

Hendersonville Fire Chief Jerry Goodman said the fire apparently started in the basement and efforts to extinguish it were hampered when a fight broke out among the spectators.

Child actors' deaths result in $5,000 fines

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Warner Bros. and three individuals were fined $5,000 each Friday for exposing children danger and violating child labor laws because of a movie helicopter crash that killed actor Vic Morrow and two children.

The action came as attorneys reported they also were studying a possible lawsuit in connection with the 2:30 a.m. crash that occurred July 23 as crews filmed a Vietnam war battle scene for a movie remake of "The Twilight Zone."

"This horror is a direct result of neglect on the part of those responsible for the protection of children," state Labor Commissioner Patrick Henning said in a statement. "The obscene tragedy...would never have occurred if the child labor laws of the state had been followed.

"After a complete and thorough investigation, the office of the state labor commissioner hereby charges one corporation and three individuals with civil penalties for exposing minors to a hazardous situation and (to) explosives...and for violating our state's strict prohibition at working children of this age after 6:30 p.m.," the statement said.

Henning said the $5,000 citations had been issued against Warner Bros., which was producing the four-part film; the segment director, John Landis; the associate producer, George Folsey Jr., and the unit production manager, Dan Allingham.

The fines can be appealed, but it was not known if appeals would be filed.

"Really, we haven't been served with the actual citation so we haven't had a chance to review it, but as soon as we do, we probably will have a statement to make," said Warner spokesman Robert Friedman.

Henning also could have asked the district attorney to seek criminal charges, which are limited by law to $250 or six months in jail per violation.

Los Angeles County Deputy District Attorney Sheldon Brown declined to speculate on the possible filing of criminal charges but said all findings were being turned over to the district attorney from the labor commissioner's office. He said charges could range from child neglect to involuntary manslaughter.

Henning said the investigation concluded that producer Steven Spielberg "was not a responsible party" in the tragedy but noted, "The industry is undergoing important changes now with the advent of independent producers. This is part of the problem."

He said his office did not intend to file any charges against the children's parents, explaining, "State labor law is clear on what must be done to protect chidren. But our office feels the price already has been paid by the parents."

San Francisco attorney Melvin Belli said earlier he had been approached by the family of one of the victims to prepare a lawsuit in the case, but he declined to give their name.

WHICH CHURCH DID PAUL JOIN?

But, dear brothers, I beg you in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ to stop arguing among yourselves. Let there be real harmony so that there won't be splits in the church. I plead with you to be of one mind united in thought and purpose. For some of those who live in Chloe's house have told me of your arguments and quarrels, dear brothers. Some of you are saying, "I am a follower of Paul", and others say that they are for Apollos or for Peter; and some that they alone are the true followers of Christ. And so, in effect, you have broken Christ into many pieces.

But did I, Paul, die for your sins? Were any of you baptized in my name? I am so thankful now that I didn't baptize any of you except Crispus and Gaius. For now no one can think that I have been trying to start something new, beginning a "Church of Paul." Oh, yes, and I baptized the family of Stephanas. I don't remember ever baptizing anyone else. For Christ didn't send me to baptize, but to preach the Gospel; and even my preaching sounds poor, for I do not fill my sermons with profound words and high sounding ideas, for fear of diluting the mighty power there is in the simple message of the cross of Christ. (I Corinthians 1:10-17)

"And so I am giving a new commandment to you now--love each other just as much as I love you. Your strong love for each other will prove to the world that you are my disciples." (John 13:34-35)

Drive on to save English churches

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

LONDON (AP) — It is fervently hoped that Alan Jay Lerner, like Alfred P. Doolittle of the undeserving poor, has got himself to the church on time.

The famed lyricist of "My Fair Lady" is patron of a drive to raise $510,000 to save St. Paul's Church in Covent Garden, the Inigo Jones masterpiece where Eliza Doolittle is seen peddling her flowers in the portico as the first act curtain rises.

Lerner has grown accustomed to its face: "I went to school in London and can remember the church from those days. It does have special significance for me because of the part it plays in 'My Fair Lady' and I hope people will respond."

Even in these materialistic times, church spires and steeples and squat Norman towers dominate the British landscape, brooding down beneficently on the High Street of every town, looming across the fields as the leading landmark of the picturesque villages. But many churches are abandoned, neglected, besieged by vandals and falling into ruins or the hands of developers, and a number of organizations like the Friends of Friendless Churches, the Historic Church Preservation Trust Fund and the Fund for Redundant Churches are crusading to preserve them.

Britain still boasts about 10,000 medieval churches and chapels, but nearly 1,000 are threatened with demolition, about as many as Henry VIII sacked and destroyed following his break with Rome over the annulment of his marriage to

Mulligan's Stew

Catherine of Aragon. Then the problem was royal vs. papal power. Now the agents of demolition are changing times, population shifts from the rural areas and inner cities to the suburbs, unrepaired wartime bomb damage and rising stipends for the clergy. Many small congregations can no longer afford a vicar, and the church falls into disuse and decay.

"A main problem at the present time is raising money to pay the higher stipends to the clergy brought about by inflation," lamented Ivor Bulmer-Thomas, a former United Nations delegate from Britain who is honorary director of the Friends of Friendless Churches. "Enough vocations to holy orders have come forward in the past 10 years — regrettably not always of the right quality — but the funds are often lacking to meet their stipends."

WE CHATTED in the vestry of St. Andrew-by-the-Wardrobe, a lovely Wren church in the old city where the Friends hold their meeting. "We had to fight to save this from demolition in 1959," said the honorable director. "It was gutted during the war with only one wall left standing."

With voluntary donations, pledges, legacies left in wills, even according to the annual report "whip arounds in public houses" and 10 from the compensation received "by a member hit on the head by a golf ball," the Friends rescue neglected churches of architectural and historical interest by instituting repairs, leasing them to other congregations finding alternate acceptable uses such as libraries, theaters and community halls for youth and the elderly.

Thus St. Dunstan-in-the-West, that jewel of a church in Fleet Street where the two stone chaps in tutus belt on the bells with clubs to sound the hour and where a stained glass window memorializes Izaak Walton, the angler "and overseer of the poor, a sidesman and a vestryman of this parish," now doubles as the Romanian Orthodox Patriarchal Church. A number of Church of England parishes share their facilities with Russian, Greek and Cypriot Orthodox churches.

In the town of Oxford, St. Peter's in the East and All Saints have become college libraries. St. Michael's in Cambridge is used as a theater by Caius College. St. Peter's Winchester also has become a theater. In Norwich, St. Andrew's Plain, founded as a Dominican Friary in the 15th century, is now a public hall and St. Peter Hungate, built in the same century by a manorial family, has been turned into an ecclesiastical museum.

"There are about 18,000 Church of England houses of worship still standing," Bulmer-Thomas said. "Sometimes two in the same churchyard, built by rival rich families for the glory of God and to insure their souls. Only in modern times do we think a church has to be crowded to the doors to justify its existence."

A few medieval churches have reverted to Rome by lease or default, like the tiny 13th century St. Edmund's Chapel in Dover, which was used as a forge after Henry VIII dissolved the monasteries. It was scheduled for demolition in 1965 to make way for a road before being restored and reconsecrated as a Catholic chapel.

ST. ETHELDREDA'S Church in the heart of London, built in 1290 on old Roman foundations, was the first pre-Reformation church to return to Catholic hands when sold a century ago by its Welsh Protestant congregation. Its courtyard is still a place of sanctuary, where police may not enter and no one can be arrested.

One would think after 450 years that the pope might be winning back all his real estate losses, but a number of Catholic churches, like St. George's in Wolverhampton, are under threat of demolition. The Friends of Friendless Churches tries to help churches of any denomination in danger of disappearing, but unlike the Historic Church Preservation Fund, its sole interest is in buildings that already have fallen into disuse and lost their congregations.

"We're the long stop," as Bulmer-Thomas put it, "the term for the cricket player behind the wicket who is the last resort. Of course we are delighted when a church finds a new congregation and comes back into use after it is saved, like the beautiful Norman church at Monnington-on-Wye."

The Friends have just managed to save Wickham Bishops Old Church in Essex, part of which stood in Saxon times before the conquest, by taking a 999-year-lease on the premises. The church salvaging organization will celebrate its 25th anniversary with "Evensong and a picnic" at Boveney on the banks of the Thames, site of another salvaged church, and then go on to East Shefford for tea at another restoration.

The "struggle to keep St. George's, Brandon Hill, Bristol, in use continues," but the "future looks bleak" for St. Edward, Holbeck in Leeds, and St. Alban in Teddington "is threatened with conversion into squash courts and a restaurant," the society's annual report notes.

Because of the housing shortage, there is great pressure to convert old churches to private homes, which the society resists, although the battle has been lost indeed never waged to save vicarages and parsonages from developers.
way, not the book way."

Electric chair first used in 1890

EDITOR'S NOTE: Things didn't go very smoothly on the day 90 years ago when William Kemmler became the first person ever put to death by electricity. But in time, the electric chair became the accepted method of execution the United States. Here is a look back at the first time the chair was used.

By JOEL STASHENKO

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — William Kemmler, judging from the few facts which survive 92 years later, did little in life to merit the notoriety he gained as the first person in the world to die in the electric chair.

A newspaper of the day described him as "a man of low intelligence at best, a man of animal instincts and tastes, he has simply developed a little under kindly discipline and that is all."

In 1888, the illiterate Kemmler killed Tillie Zeigler with an ax in Buffalo. The next year, he was convicted of first-degree murder and sentenced to die.

Memories of him would have faded quickly had it not been for a state law requiring that the newly harnessed power of electricity be used for all executions in New York starting in 1889.

ACCORDING TO Watt Espy of the Capital Punishment Resource Project at the University of Alabama Law School, Kemmler's was the first of 4,310 electric chair executions in the United States — 695 of which were carried out in New York.

Since the U.S. Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty six years ago, only four people have been executed: Gary Gilmore, who voluntarily went before a Utah firing squad on Jan. 17, 1977; John Spenkelink, electrocuted in Florida on May 25, 1979; Jesse Bishop, who died in the Nevada gas chamber on Oct. 22, 1979,and Stephen Judy who died in Indiana's electric chair on March 9, 1981 for raping and strangling a mother and her three small children. Like Gilmore, Judy resisted all efforts to avert execution.

Judy was the last person to be executed in the United States. The NAACP Legal Defense Fund reports that as of June, there are 1,038 prisoners under sentence of death in 31 states. Thirteen states use the electric chair as the official method of execution.

Despite public support for the death penalty, pleas by law enforcement officials and legislative efforts, no one has been executed in New York in 19 years. Most existing death penalty statutes have been ruled unconstitutional by courts — and for six straight years Gov. Hugh Carey has vetoed bills re-establishing capital punishment in New York.

BUT CAREY is not seeking re-election and only Lt. Gov. Mario Cuomo among the four major candidates for his job is against capital punishment. That leads advocates to predict that by this time next year, a death penalty law will be on the books.

There may also be a prisoner on death row. Lemuel Smith, a prison inmate, has been charged with strangling guard Donna Payant at Green Haven State Prison in Stormville, N.Y. An existing statute allows the death penalty for prison inmates who murder guards, and if convicted, Smith could become the first to die in the state's electric chair since 1963.

Of no less interest was Kemmler's execution on Aug. 6, 1890, which caused a sensation on two continents.

Scientists and humanitarians squeamish about hanging looked with enthusiasm to the efficient killing potential of electricity. As the New York Herald put it, the hopes were high for developing "machinery of death" able to "in an instant rend soul from body."

When the go-ahead was given for the Kemmler execution, delayed twice by the courts, the upstate city of Auburn swelled with the morbid and the curious. Competition among doctors was keen over who would perform the autopsy.

"ALL THE medical fraternity of Buffalo has clamored for admission and made the soul of the warden sick within him by the wire-pulling and persistence," the Herald reported. "But he has chosen those whom he thinks most suitable for the work and the others will have to suck their thumbs and stay at home."

Outside Auburn State Prison on the eve of the execution, police continuously chased people from the gates. Inside, Kemmler's cellmate — a man described only as "murderer Fish" — was moved to another part of the facility and the bearded Kemmler is said to have spent his last night restlessly.

August 6, 1890, dawned hot and cloudless in Auburn, and all was ready in the crowded room set aside for the execution. Wires connected the electric chair to a dynamo — capable of producing 1,700 volts — in an adjoining room.

Kemmler, wearing a new white shirt, vest and pants supplied by prison officials, was composed as he was strapped into the chair.

"Well, I wish everybody good luck," he said and, after a wired cap was placed over his head and an electrode attached to his spine, the prison superintendent, chaplain and doctor stepped away from the chair. It was 6:43 a.m. and the first slanting rays of the sun had begun to creep across the floor.

WHAT HAPPENED then caused an international furor, and nearly a century later the events of the next five minutes remain unclear.

The executioner, Edwin Davis, turned on the power and Kemmler's body lurched forward against the chair's restraints. One witness remembered that at the moment the power was turned off "a fly lighted on his nose and walked about unconcernedly." Seventeen seconds had passed.

Doctors removed the electrodes and began examining the body. At that moment, Kemmler began to breathe — or at least his chest muscles contracted in a way to make it look as if he was not dead. Aghast, prison officials and doctors quickly put the electrodes back on the body and called for more electricity.

"Those who held watches were too much horrified to follow them," noted the New York Times. The Times reporter said the second charge of electricity could have lasted anywhere from one minute to four and a half.

"Strong men fainted and fell like logs upon the floor" at the sight, the Herald reported.

Finally, the power was cut off, but not until some of Kemmler's hair and his flesh near the electrodes started to burn. This time he was certainly dead.

"Well, there's one thing about this," exclaimed Dr. George Fell of Buffalo as the body was being removed. "The man never suffered a bit of pain."

MANY NEWSPAPERS weren't so sure. The next day the Herald headlined "Kemmler's Death By Torture." "The killing of Kemmler today marks, I fear, the beginning of the end of electrocution, and it wreathes in shame the agents of the great Empire State," the paper declared.

"Probably no convicted murderer of modern times has been made to suffer as Kemmler suffered," said the Times, electrical executions would be irrevocably discredited.

Comments were equally harsh elsewhere.

"I do not care to talk about it," said George Westinghouse in Pittsburgh. "It has been a brutal affair. They could have done better with an ax."

The London Times huffed: "It is impossible to imagine a more revolting exhibition." The London Standard termed it "a disgrace to humanity. We cannot believe that Americans will allow the electrical execution act to stand."

Kemmler's body was divided into parts after the execution and several doctors got to poke, probe and weigh the remains. Then, in accordance with state law, the body was covered with quicklime and later buried at an Auburn cemetery.

DESPITE THE criticism, many of the doctors and scientists on hand considered this use of electricity a success. With a little refinement, they felt, it could be a useful killing tool.

"The better way is to place their hands in jars of water in which there is a little potash to eliminate oil grease from the hands, and let the current be turned on there," said Thomas Edison, ever concerned with technical aspects of power.

And a "General Butler of Boston," another electrical expert, said the concept was right but the execution faulty.

"If he had been put into my hands I would have had him insulated, or I would have put a conductor in each ear," one dispatch quoted him as saying. "It might have stove his head to pieces...but he would have been killed instantly."

Doctors research senses of taste, smell

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Over a 30-year period Thomas F. Curry gradually lost his sense of smell and taste, but to avoid embarrassment, he pretended his physical condition was normal.

"It's just not a handicap you talk about very much. I was afraid people would think I was crazy," said Curry, a 53-year-old television producer at the University of Connecticut.

Curry was among the estimated 2 million Americans who are believed to have lost their ability to taste and smell. Up to 14 million are believed to have lost some portion of taste and smell senses.

To cure his problem he turned to a group of experts from Yale University and UConn currently working on smell and taste disorders. The researchers are participating in a three-year, $2.3 million project funded by a federal grant.

Distortion or loss of the two senses can be the first indication of serious medical problems, such as strokes or brain tumors. Temporary or permanent loss of taste and smell also can follow head injuries or radiation therapy for head or neck cancer. Some elderly people also report the gradual loss of smell and taste.

Curry's problem turned out to be a typical case. Doctors found small growths called polyps in his nose just below this eye sockets. After two operations, he recovered the senses.

Curry's case also was typical in that he couldn't clearly distinguish between smell and taste.

"It's hard to make patients understand the differences between what we call taste and smell," said Dr. Frank A. Catalanotto, the UConn pediatric dentist in charge of the project. "People assign the sensation of taste to what really are odors."

To assist in their work, the researchers are studying patients and volunteers in an effort to define tastes, odors and flavors, and to explain how the appetite functions.

Researchers also are working with animals to understand how the senses function mechanically.

Marion E. Frank, a neurophysiologist in the UConn dental school, is working with hamsters to define the mechanics of taste. How the taste buds work and how the brain translates their signals remains unclear.

Bottle found after 50 years

TAYLOR, Texas (AP) — "Please let me know when this was found," said the message Ray Steelhammer put in a bottle and plopped into the San Gabriel River on July 7, 1936.

An 11-year-old Taylor girl did just that — but 46 years later and much to the surprise of the now-70-year-old retired engineer.

Penny Artieschoufsky said she found the curious-looking bottle with the faded note inside during a family outing near Taylor last weekend.

"I saw this bottle lying partially buried in the sand, and I could see a little piece of paper in it, so I picked it up," Penny said. The cap disintegrated when she opened the bottle, which was under a bridge about 20 miles from the spot where Steelhammer tossed it into the river.

"I was a young whippersnapper in those days, and I had just recovered from a ruptured appendix, so I had a lot of time on my hands," Steelhammer said. "I got it into my head one day to write the note, because it was something to do. I never thought I'd get a reply, and I never thought they'd have so little trouble tracking me down."

The message-in-a-bottle mentioned Steelhammer's hometown of Brady, so Penny and her mother called information. Steelhammer had moved to Cleburne, but an aunt living in Brady helped the Artieschoufsky's get in touch with him.

"I was pleasantly surprised, to say the least," said Steelhammer. "This is something that happens just once in a lifetime."

Steelhammer said he would give the bottle to his 10-year-old grandson, Adam.

RIPPLES DON'T CHANGE A THING

Ripples do not move water—they are only the marks of a momentary disturbance. Neat, orderly, symetrical as they appear—they're just the remains of a splash.

How often we've tried to make waves . . . and they turned out to be merely ripples. Our efforts brought no new flow of thought or action. We simply interrupted the tranquility. Or was it the stagnation?

There are new currents stirring today—positive, refreshing, hopeful currents. There are reverent, responsive people who believe it can become a better world.

Why don't you join the folks who are tired of making ripples who when they see a need or a problem plunge in to help?

You'll find many such people exploring the spiritual wells and springs. Their earnestness and enthusiasm is giving renewed energy to our churches. They would like to share with you their Christian opportunities and challenges.

High attendance hurts church, state relations, says U.S. expert on China

By The Associated Press

The scope of religious revival in China has astonished both the government and religious communities there, says a U.S. authority on that country, but he also sees potential dangers to the trend.

Paradoxically, a main threat cited is also a big gain — the rising stream of young people into the churches.

It "poses the greatest potential danger to the church's relations with the state," says Paul Richard Bohr, a China expert and executive director of the Midwest China Center in St. Paul, Minn.

With an estimated 1 million young people now publicly attending worship services, he says, government organs have stepped up warnings that "religion must not be allowed to become too attractive to disillusioned youth."

Should it be seen as doing so, he adds, toleration of it could be reversed.

"Already, at least in rural areas, officials are skeptical of 'modernization,' saying it's not a good thing and religion is not a good thing," Bohr said on return last week from his latest trip to China.

Nevertheless, in a 20-page summation of recent religious developments in China, issued by the China Council of the Asia Society in Washington, Bohr says religion in the communist-run country has made a stunning comeback.

"Nowhere is the resurgence of religious life more dramatic than in China's Christian community," he says, adding that it now surpasses the 4 million total members of 1949 when the communists came to power.

In the years of varied restraints and virtual eradication of visible religious life in the "cultural revolution" of 1966-1976, Bohr says Chinese Christians attained "psychological maturity."

During that period, he says, "both Protestants and Catholics claim that they acquired a deep understanding of poverty and suffering, patience and faithfulness, which they associated with the original New Testament experience...

"They have emerged with self-confidence and vitality — and with their numbers expanded... Clergy and lay leaders have been returned from factories, labor camps and prison cells...

"Thousands of Christians are emerging from private worship to profess the faith in the open."

In a telephone conversation after his recent trip, he estimated a total of 500 churches are open, including at least 400 Protestant churches and more than 100 Catholic churches, including about a dozen cathedrals in major cities.

About a third of the worshippers are young people, his report says, while another third are new believers.

Publication of catechisms, devotional tracts and hymnals has resumed, he says, along with printing of Bibles, with enough of them for all who want them projected in the near future.

Nanking Union Theological Seminary, reopened last year with an entering class of 41, projects an enrolment of 150 this year.

However, Bohr says there "is no guarantee that the current climate will continue" as it depends largely on the present reform-minded leadership staying in control.

Also, he says, stiffer restrictions could be placed on religion if it shows signs of coming under foreign influence.

Authors: Fundamentalists seek control

By ELAINE WOO
Hearst Feature Service

"The fundamentalists are coming, the fundamentalists are coming!" That was the cry of alarm sounded by the media back in 1980, when it was apparent that Ronald Reagan would ride on the crest of a foaming born-again conservative wave to the presidency.

Fundamentalist preachers, it was reported, were politicizing their congregations, raising treasure troves of campaign money and creating a potent army of foot soldiers for the Republican Party.

When Jerry Falwell talked, people listened.

But, as rapidly as the New Right coalition rose to prominence, so it seemed to sink; within weeks after the election, political pundits were saying the Moral Majority's influence had subsided and probably wasn't all it was hyped up to be in the first place.

Well. Flo Conway and Jim Siegelman are here to tell us that, in 1982, the fundamentalists have arrived.Their tale is called "Holy Terror" (Doubleday, $17.95), a frightening account of the organization and strategies of the new religious right.

IN THEIR VIEW, the network of fundamentalist and conservative political groups that coalesced in 1980 is employing a "broad program of intimidation, manipulation and control in the name of religion."

"A lot of the people from the cradle of this movement have now been installed in some of the highest positions in this government," said Siegelman. "They're running the social service agencies, the education department. The very places they were aiming for, they've won."

He was referring specifically to four individuals named to government posts by Reagan: Surgeon General Dr. C. Everett Koop, an outspoken fundamentalist and anti-abortion crusader; Marjorie Mecklenburg, head of the Office of Adolescent Pregnancy Programs, who was president of one of the largest anti-abortion organizations; the Rev. Robert Billings, consultant to the secretary of education and special "Christian school liaison officer," who was formerly executive director of Moral Majority; and Morton C. Blackwell, White House religious affairs adviser, a former chairman of a major conservative political-action committee.

The fundamentalists have made important inroads into Republican Party hierarchy, as well, Siegelman said.

Most notable, he continued, was the naming of Richard DeVos to be finance director of the Republican National Committee. DeVos, founder and president of Amway Corp., was an early contributor to both the California-based Campus Crusade for Christ, one of the largest and richest missionary organizations in the country, and the Christian Freedom Foundation, a politically active religious and educational foundation.

THE AUTHORS were troubled by the born-again movement when they were researching cults in the '70s. Their most vocal criticism came from an unexpected source. "It was not the cults who really harassed us in the audiences we spoke to," Conway recalled. "It was Campus Crusade for Christ and Navigators."

The latter is an evangelical organization that began in the U.S. military in the 1930s and later spread to college campuses.

When Conway and Siegelman appeared on Johnny Carson's "Tonight Show" to promote "Snapping," their book on cults, they were besieged by threatening phone calls warning them, "If you say anything about born-again Christians, you'll be sorry." On campuses where they were invited to speak, similar messages were often plastered on walls and bulletin boards.

Though no physical harm resulted from the threats, it was enough to convince the researchers that they had to investigate the born-again phenomenon, especally in light of its political blossoming.

What they claim to have uncovered is a complex and sophisticated communication system which, whether deliberately or not, is effecting a form of control over its constituents that is more destructive than the mind control inflicted by cults.

The long-term effects they said were suffered by members of Christian sects they interviewed included depression, suicidal tendencies and feelings of guilt, fear and humiliation, in addition to mental disorders such as disorientaton, amnesia, nightmares, hallucinations and illusions.

"WHAT WE'VE got here is people engineering emotion in people," Conway said, "using basic symbols and images and language to manipulate people indirectly through their emotions. It's not just a case of the silent majority acting up."

Siegelman concurred. "They have legitimate complaints and gripes about the media, the liberalization of cultures, the changes from the '60s. But what we hear when we're on the road is something else. People on our speaking tours are so outraged."

The emotional control the fundamentalists are accused of asserting may not even be intentional, which Conway and Siegelman believe may make matters even worse. What is clear to them, however, are the instruments of control; most notably, the "electronic church" composed of 3,500 television and cable systems and 1,400 radio stations (including Pat Robertson's Christian Broadcasting Network, the largest private broadcasting network in the world, which syndicates Robertson's program, the "700 club"); and the sophisticated direct-mail operation headed up by New Right strategist Richard Viguerie which was effective in targeting several liberal congressmen for defeat in 1980.

"What we call pre-propaganda, or misinformation, is going out on the avenues of the electronic church and the direct mails to the point where yow you have people who are sincere Christians being fed a very distorted version of what is going on in America," said Conway. "They are being told, for instance that there is a move to persecute Christians in this country. They really believe there is a move to shut down all churches.

"The secular world here in the United States is not familiar with what's going on in the airwaves of the electronic church," Conway continued. "What has really amazed us is, if you really want to know what is happening in the government, what kind of meetings are going on and who Reagan is going to be seeing, you watch Pat Robertson and you watch Falwell (on his show, the "Old-Time Gospel Hour"). You'll find out more of what is going on than if you read the New York Times."

THE TRUE test of the fundamentalist movement's power will come none too soon, the theorists predicted. That time is this fall's election.

"They're standing there with these well-organized PAC's (political action committees) and foundations, the electronic church, and all these Christian foot soldiers, if they need them again," said Siegelman,. "The whole election is going to be told in the last six to eight weeks when all the money they've raised is going to go into a media blitz like nothing this country has ever seen."

Conway and Siegelman said they regret that they sound like prophets of doom, but their fears, they believe, are well-grounded. "We're just out here asking questions," Siegelman said. And hoping they're not alone.

Local church supports Braille Foundation

During recent services, members of the Midland Seventh Day Adventist Church gave support to the work of the Christian Record Braille Foundation, an international publishing house that produces materials for the blind and deaf.

The foundation is operated by the church for the benefit of the general public. Christian Record began supplying services to the sight-impaired in 1899. Today the foundation, with headquarters in Lincoln, Neb., sends its materials to approximately 89 countries.

Services provided by Christian Record include braille, large-print and recorded magazines and books, a lending library, full-vision books (books which combine braille, ink print and pictures so blind parents can read to their sighted children), personal visitations to the blind, national camps for blind children and glaucoma screening clinics to help save sight. The deaf are provided simplified reading materials as well.

Although much of the foundation's support comes from the general public, Adventist churches take up a yearly offering to help support this work. Support is also given monthly by interested persons.

Those with a blind relative or friend, who may be interested in receiving these services free, may write to Christian Record, 4444 S. 52nd St., Lincoln, Neb., 68506, or call 1-402-488-0891.

THE NEW HOME OF THE

North Midland Drive Church of Christ

5206 N. MIDLAND DRIVE

The North Midland Drive Church of Christ was organized in March of 1981.

The new group met at the Newnie Ellis Funeral Home Chapel for several months as it made its plans to build its permanent church home in the rapidly growing area of north Midland.

Within a few weeks a three-acre site was purchased on Midland Drive north of Loop 250. In ensuing months the church built the first stage of its facilities including an auditorium to seat over 200, six classrooms, and a large foyer-fellowship area.

Second stage plans call for additional classrooms and an office complex. The final stage will be a large auditorium and more Bible classrooms.

The congregation is served by several ministers with a combined experience of 60 years in full-time church work.

The young church already has been involved in mission work in several areas of the United States plus numerous fellowship and service activities. Members of the congregation cordially invite the public to attend their services:

Scandal ended attorney's career

By ANDREW M. WILLIAMS

HOUSTON (AP) — Anthony J.P. Farris started out wearing the white hat in the Sharpstown stock fraud case — he was chief prosecutor, the man sworn to bring crooked politicians and financiers to justice in what was called "Texas' Watergate."

But the scandal cost Farris a career, much as it did many of the figures he faced in the courtroom.

Four years after the investigation of Frank Sharp's business dealings began, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Houston, blocked Farris' appointment to a second term as U.S. attorney in the Southern District of Texas.

"Senator Bentsen in effect canned him because he just did such a terribly poor job in prosecuting the Sharpstown case," said Jack DeVore, Bentsen's press secretary. "And specifically, because he let Sharp off so lightly and got nothing in return for it."

FARRIS ADMITS that several people, most of them politicians, escaped indictments that they deserved.

"Including the governor (then Preston Smith), I'd say about six," said Farris, now a state district judge in Harris County.

But he blames that on prosecutors sent from Washington to take over the investigative phase of the case when Deputy Attorney General Richard Kleindienst removed him. He complained that he had no say in who would be indicted after leading a major portion of the investigation.

His exclusion also left him with the difficult job of prosecuting a case whose final details he had not been privy to, Farris said.

"After they decided who would be indicted, what do you think they did?" Farris asked. "They said, 'Here are the indictments. You prosecute 'em. We're going back to Washington.'"

DEVORE — AND BENTSEN — say that's just an alibi. They say a weak plea-bargain agreement took the pressure off Sharp to deliver high-octane testimony to power indictments and convictions.

Mountains of evidence suggested that Sharp, a Houston banker and real estate magnate, bribed Texas officials in 1969, trying to ensure that two banking bills would pass the Legislature.

But Farris recommended a plea-bargain arrangement under which Sharp was allowed to plead guilty to two counts of an 84-count indictment. He defends that decision to this day.

"After all, Frank Sharp was not elected by anybody," he said. "He had not taken an oath to defend the constitution of the United States and or the state of Texas.

"If I had it to do over again, I would again seek immunity for a snitch who would sing about public officials who are supposed to be in a state of trust," Farris said.

THE PROBLEM, DeVore contends, is that Sharp sang very quietly.

"He (Farris) did not get one conviction — not one conviction — on the basis of testimony from Sharp," DeVore said. "Once Sharp got immunity, he didn't give him any testimony he could use."

Ten men pleaded guilty or were convicted in federal court in the southern district. They included Sharp; Joseph Novotny, president of the Sharpstown State Bank; and other bank officials and banking examiners.

But politicians are conspicuous by their absence from the list.

Sharp did testify in the single case — tried in an Abilene state court in 1972 — in which legislators were prosecuted. But, DeVore contends, he did not give incriminating information.

Sharp told the court he discussed the progress of the bills "at least twice a week" with Gus Mutscher, D-Brenham, who had been speaker of the House of Representatives.

BUT HE WAS NOT asked whether there was a link between the bills and state officials' unsecured loans from the Sharpstown State Bank, which they used to buy stock from Sharp's National Bankers Life insurance company.

Mutscher; Rep. Tommy Shannon, D-Fort Worth, the bills' sponsor; and Mutscher aide Rush McGinty were found guilty of conspiring to accept a bribe. All were sentenced to five years of probation.

DeVore contends Farris was more a hindrance than a help in getting those convictions and all others springing from the case. And he says Farris' failings in the case comes down to a single, simple mistake in the plea bargain negotiations.

"He made a very basic screwup," DeVore said. "You get an idea of the testimony before you grant immunity. Or you make the immunity contingent upon the testimony."

IT IS NOT CLEAR what agreement Sharp and Farris had. Farris says that when he first proposed the idea of immunity, he sent an outline of Sharp's proffered testimony to Kleindienst.

He says he doesn't remember what it contained and no longer has a copy.

But Kleindienst told a 1973 federal court hearing in Dallas that he removed Farris from the Sharpstown investigation when he found the prosecutor had not met conditions laid down for immunity after Sharp had agreed to the plea bargain.

The major violation of those conditions, he said, was that Sharp did not give sworn testimony before his immunity was approved in June 1972. Kleindienst sent a three-attorney team of Washington prosecutors to Houston to take over from Farris shortly after.

That immunity took away the prosecution's leverage over Sharp, DeVore said.

FARRIS ADMITS he had less to threaten Sharp with than he might have wished, but says that was the fault of Justice Department officials. Farris would have preferred for Sharp to plead guilty and testify before all juries and grand juries interested in him before he was sentenced.

But Henry Petersen, deputy assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division of the Justice Department, chose to favor court rulings which said that in cases of plea bargaining, a complaint — including sentencing — must be concluded before a defendant appears before juries and grand juries.

"Petersen just outflanked me," Farris said. "Being as he's up there in Disneyland Northeast, he prevailed."

U.S. District Judge John V. Singleton's sentence was not a heavy blow. Singleton still angrily refuses to discuss the five years of probation and $5,000 fine he gave Sharp.

Partisan IRS investigated Texas democrats

By ALAN SAYRE

DALLAS (AP) — Encouraged by the number of Democrats whose political careers were scuttled by the Sharpstown scandal, the Nixon administration had the Internal Revenue Service investigate numerous politically active Texans, documents obtained by The Associated Press show.

The investigation, which the IRS dubbed "Southwest Project," apparently was born after a top IRS official read an article about financier Frank Sharp in the December 1971 edition of Fortune, entitled "The Texas Banker Who Bought Politicians."

Sharp was the key figure in the "Sharpstown Bank Scandal" of the early 1970s in Texas, which brought numerous charges against several top state political leaders.

The scandal also ended the careers of several prominent Democrats of the time, including Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes, once considered a cinch for the governor's chair.

AP News Special

The Southwest Project was carried out during a two-year period and involved investigations of numerous political figures and contributors, documents show.

ATTEMPTS BY The Associated Press to contact various IRS agents named in the documents were unsuccessful.

In a 1977 letter to attorneys representing one of the targets of the Southwest Project, then Commissioner of Internal Revenue Johnnie M. Walters said the probe "probably" originated from the article, although he did not remember who suggested reading it.

Walters said he had been a subscriber to the magazine since the 1940s.

Documents show the project was organized during a meeting of IRS agents in Dallas on Feb. 15, 1972.

The use of IRS investigations for political gain was one of the accusations lodged against President Nixon in an impeachment move in 1974. Article II of the Resolution of Impeachment accused the chief executive of using IRS tax audits to torment his political opponents.

In a memo, Albert Brisbin of the national IRS office said, "Our aim is to learn as much as we can about Texas political relationships, influence and possible corruption."

A check of past tax returns was the key to the investigation, documents show.

THE WORDS of an IRS agent who filed a "visitation report" concerning one meeting of the project's task force: "This project involves the examination and/or investigation of the tax returns of public officials in the Texas state government, their associates, business entities and lobbyists."

Another 1972 memo listed the 10 main areas of Southwest Project: the state power structure, vending industry, issuance of bank charters, political payoff, creation of water districts and related bond issues, state land purchases, industrial accident board, "Sharp Project," and Duval County.

The documents show the "Sharp Project" referred to Sharp and alleged political payoffs connected with the financier. However, since the material was obtained under a Freedom of Information petition, the names of the contacts were blacked out.

Duval County, located in South Texas, was the target of a widespread federal and state investigation into corruption during the early 1970s. That probe resulted in numerous convictions against key leaders in the county and the dismantling of a decades-old political machine headed by George Parr.

PARR, KNOWN as the "Duke of Duval," committed suicide after he was sentenced to five years in prison on an income tax evasion conviction. His nephew Archer Parr was convicted of perjury.

Archer Parr was not available for comment. But in December 1973, he alleged he was on a "Texas list" compiled by Republican leaders to diminish the ranks of prominent state Democrats.

"Eventually, they'll get all of us," Archer Parr said then. "It's political. When the Republicans get in, we have this. It happened in the 1950s. The Republicans are in. It's a Republican vendetta."

U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions of San Antonio, who assisted in the prosecution of Archer Parr while serving as U.S. attorney, said he was not aware of "any project that would encompass that sort of thing (Southwest Project.)"

John Clark, who helped prosecute both Parrs, said he had heard of the Southwest Project.

"I heard allegations about the Southwest Project...And from time to time somebody has alleged that the Southwest Project had something to do with George Parr. I never heard of it from any government source," he said.

CLARK IS NOW an associate justice of the Fourth Court of Appeals in San Antonio.

Documents show Southwest Project also had a category dubbed "miscellaneous areas," which included "a state senator involved in an isolated transaction, several representatives participating in nepotism, payroll padding and persons who give large political contributions which are not in line with their financial conditions per their tax returns."

By January 1973, the "state power structure" was the most active area of the probe with 73 cases being considered by IRS agents.

Not only were IRS agents involved in Southwest Project. FBI agents were used to interview some witnesses. Another document said the IRS obtained information about a Galveston bank through the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Sharp, who didn't give any major testimony in the Sharpstown scandal after being granted immunity from prosecution, proved to be a frustration for the IRS agents.

In a memo written on Sept. 17, 1973, an IRS agent said, "This case is ready to close. However, Mr. Sharp has steadfastly refused to give any information pertaining to certain transactions. I am...to find out if there is any recourse we might have in trying to get the immunity he received revoked since he will not cooperate in any way."

BUT THE AGENTS claimed to have learned much about alleged corruption in Texas government.

Jerry L. Stamps, intelligence supervisor for the project, listed the four main ways agents felt political payoffs had been made during the Sharpstown era: fees paid for services rendered by attorneys, political contributions not given for a specific purpose, "good deals" in profitable stock and land transactions and loans made to politicians which were never repaid.

By May 1973, an IRS memo said the agents were looking into 446 tax returns involving 232 taxpayers.

TEA official charges auditors waste money

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government auditors are costing bilingual education programs in school districts enormous sums by charging that they violate federal guidelines, then ordering that tax funds be repaid, officials said.

A Texas education group told Congress earlier this week that a federal law setting up inspector general investigations of how districts use funds for bilingual education should be changed.

W.N. Kirby, deputy commissioner of the Texas Education Agency, said the law "has hurt the situation, rather than helping out." He said the procedures it establishes for review should be changed.

The Edgewood school district near San Antonio, one of the poorest in the nation, has been threatened with bankruptcy, said Rep. Carl Perkins, D-Ky., chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee.

Seven Texas districts have been charged by Education Department auditors with gross neglect and asked to pay back funds already used.

The programs are aimed at teaching language skills to school children whose primary language is not English.

The findings were attacked by officials of Edgewood, San Antonio, Dallas and Pharr-San Juan-Alamo school districts.

"The people who came in didn't even know what bilingual education is supposed to be," William Elizondo of San Antonio said of his visit by Education Department auditors.

Inspector General James B. Thomas defended the work of the auditors, saying they "concluded that the federally funded programs had not achieved the expected program results."

He said they found "substantial non-compliance" with the law and regulations in each case.

Perkins left the room during part of Thomas' testimony.

"We have to teach the inspector general not to shoot from the hip. Your auditors don't care how many people's money they waste," Perkins said.

Scientists reclaim prairie, woodlands

EDITOR'S NOTE — Restoring a simple horse pasture may teach scientists how to unlock the secrets of the richest farmland in the world, and eventually may help clean up polluted waterways and halt the disappearance of animal species. It's part of the work of a place called simply The Arboretum.

By ELLEN PORATH

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A half-dozen scientists are struggling to reclaim a two-square-mile oasis in the middle of Madison, learning how to undo centuries of environmental damage in America.

They are professional descendants of the ecological pioneers who set out 50 years ago to heal the scars that the settlers' plowshares left where the woodlands of the East once met the prairies of the West.

Aldo Leopold, the father of modern ecology, predicted the land could be healed in a half-century when he dedicated the first 245 acres of rundown farmland as the University of Wisconsin Arboretum in 1934.

After all, the slag heaps and the strip mines, the eroded and exhausted fields and the drained and silted wetlands had developed across America in only a few decades.

But in the years since the first acres were bought in 1932, hardly more than a blueprint for restoration has emerged, and even that is still being smudged with erasures and substitutions.

THE ARBORETUM'S first project is still unfinished, but as scientists restore a horse pasture in the 60-acre Curtis Prairie, they are unlocking secrets of the richest farmland in the world. Learning how prairie soils were created could be the key to rejuvenating tired agricultural land and prove invaluable to park mangers, landscape architects and wildlife preservers.

The latest project — repair of a 200-acre wetland spoiled by a land development scheme in the early 1900s — could demonstrate how to clean up America's polluted waterways and halt the disappearance of species whose troubles may presage problems for humanity itself.

It is not an easy task.

"It's like putting Humpty Dumpty together again," says William Jordan III, Arboretum spokesman. "You can tke apart a clock even if you're pretty dumb. But try to put it back together."

"What a miracle of preservation it really is, right in the middle of Madison," says Arboretum Director Katharine Bradley.

WHEN PIONEERS came to Dane County about a century-and-a-half ago, they looked out over some of the richest agricultural soil in the world. Prairie plants extended their roots some 15 feet into the ground and vegetation stretched about as high into the air.

The area was a mixture of tallgrass prairie and savannah — or what the settlers called "oak openings."

Technically, a prairie has at most one mature tree per acre, a savannah slightly more, but the pioneers said they knew they were in a savannah when the gaps between the oaks were wide enough to drive a wagon through.

After centuries of growing seasons, the soil fairly exploded with organic matter. Nearly 400 species of plants returned to the soil as many nutrients as they removed. Erosion was virtually nonexistent because the tangled mat of roots gripped the soil with a tenacity that defied ordinary plows.

But the invention of the steel-bladed plow gave settlers the edge they needed.

IN A FEW YEARS, the rich prairie soil was gone.

Decades of one-crop farming depleted its nutrients, and tilling exposed it to wind and rain. The rich topsoil of the Midwest was washed downstream and blown into the air in duststorms that in the 1930s gave parts of the region the nickname "the Dust Bowl."

The devastation was repeated miles to the north, as loggers tore through the pine forests that towered 200 feet above them. Another evironmental community was hurled into a tailspin, another balanced ecological system destroyed in ignorance for the sake of expediency.

And in the middle of all that, a small group of scientists in Madison created the Arboretum.

"This is the place where a couple of imaginative, far-sighted people sid, 'Let's try to reverse that process,'" Jordan says. "That's a bold idea."

"One of the most important contributions of the Arboretum has been in creating a foundation of knowledge of disappearing landscapes," says UW-Madison graduate botany Prof. John Thomson, chairman of the Arboretum Committee.

THOMSON WAS a graduate student in the 1930s when Leopold enlisted the Civilian Conservation Corps to help "reconstruct, primarily for the university, a sample of original Wisconsin."

"I was there...I did some of the original plantings," Thomson says now, with no small pride.

The Arboretum grew rapidly from the 245 acres acquired in 1932.

Today it boasts some 120 acres of deciduous forest, 73 acres of conifers, 250 acres of wetlands, a 50-acre horticultural garden and 105 acres of prairie, including the 60-acre Curtis Prairie, the site of John Curtis' experiments on the use of fire in managing vegetation.

In Smokey the Bear advertisements, fire was seen as all bad, a destroyer of forests and prairie.

Curtis showed fire is necessary to the life cycle of certain species and valuable in the control of others. His experiments became the basis for later, more sophisticated research on prairie restoration.

"FIRE IS NOW a major ecological tool," Jordan says.

Curtis Prairie, the world's oldest restored prairie, is the Arboretum's premier project. Prairies are often preferable to artificial landscapes because they require less fertilizer and water, control erosion and provide a "living classroom" on plant succession, ecologists say.

Jordan says early scientists thought it might take 300 years to reconstruct Curtis Prairie.

"I don't know how they knew that," he says. "No one had ever done it."

CCC crews planted vegetation from along the Wisconsin River 30 miles away in the bare soil of an old horse pasture, to get it started.

The prairie is slowly coming to resemble the prairies that blanketed the area a century ago.

Curtis' early experiments now seem primitive, compared with the sophisticated studies directed by Arboretum ecologist Virginia Kline.

FIRE WAS a normal part of the prairie life cycle, and was used by Indians to preserve grasslands. Because central Wisconsin was on the boundary between the forests and the prairies, its prairie would have soon become wooded without regular burning, Jordan says.

Curtis Prairie, Jordan says, will take a long time to recover from its stint as a farm, but in the process could provide valuable insight into the workings of nature.

Agriculture reduces the number of plant species growing in an area, at the same time increasing the chance that pests or disease will be able to take over a field. Land restorers, Jordan says, try to restore diversity.

"Diversity is an index of environmental health," he says. "Diversity is a sign you have all the pieces there working. It's the law of nature."

In a prairie, different plants' roots pick up nutrients at different levels in the soil. Some plants manufacture what others need, and no single nutrient is depleted.

LIKE THE PRAIRIE project, later Arboretum projects have sprung up in response to environmental abuse.

The Arboretum's conifer forests are an echo of northern Wisconsin's pine forests, leveled by uncontrolled logging in the late 1800s, about the same time farmers were breaking up the sod of the prairie farther south.

A system of desilting ponds near 345-acre Lake Wingra along the Arboretum's northern border was created in response to heavy loads of silt from Madison's storm sewers. The first pond, built 10 years ago, looked "like a bomb crater," but ecologists and engineers put their heads together to devise a more pleasing design, Jordan says.

The newest project — restoration of a marsh at the east end of Arboretum — mirrors an environmental concern that grows as the nation's supply of wetlands dwindles.

GARDNER MARSH had faced a fate common to Wisconsin wetlands when it was dredged in 1905 and again a decade later as a land development company sought to build a road across it. The effort nearly destroyed the marsh, from which native Americans gathered wild rice as recently as the 1920s, Jordan says.

"We have a degraded wetland," he says. "That's really an opportunity. There's some wonderful vegetation still in there."

'Pot' plants popular in Southern California

By ANDY FURILLO
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — He calls it "killer purple." His crop of high-potency sinsemilla marijuana with the funny-looking buds supplements his regular income by $20,000 a year.

And this 28-year-old Southern California marijuana grower is not alone, according to narcotics officers who say they have seen a steady increase over the past five years in the amount of sinsemilla raised by bootleg farmers.

"Cultivation here has increased, obviously, with the increase in the price of the weed," said Lt. Richard Bryce of the Ventura County Sheriff's Department. 'Some weed plants are going for $2,000. With that economic enticement, it's caused a lot of people to invest in greenhouses."

With the illicit flowering tops selling for $150 to $200 an ounce, sinsemilla plants are popping up all over Southern California these days — and the law is doing what it can to keep up with the growers.

Last year in Los Angeles, Orange, San Diego and San Bernardino counties, narcotics officers arrested 155 people growing 21,666 plants carrying 54,584 pounds of marijuana — most of which was sinsemilla, according to state Department of Justice figures.

Sometimes the growers become a little nasty. "We've had people shoot at our helicopters," said San Bernardino County's Sgt. Felix D'Amico. "We're seizing machine guns, semi-automatic rifles and AR-180s from the growers. There was one guy in Twentynine Palms who chased our undercover officers away from his 200 plants with a machine gun."

The 28-year-old grower mentioned earlier doesn't fit that description. He has a wife and baby boy, a nice home in a semirural area 45 miles from downtown Los Angeles and a regular job that pays good money. Only the sunken greenhouse in his back yard with eight flowering sinsemilla plants separates him from most young men in his income bracket.

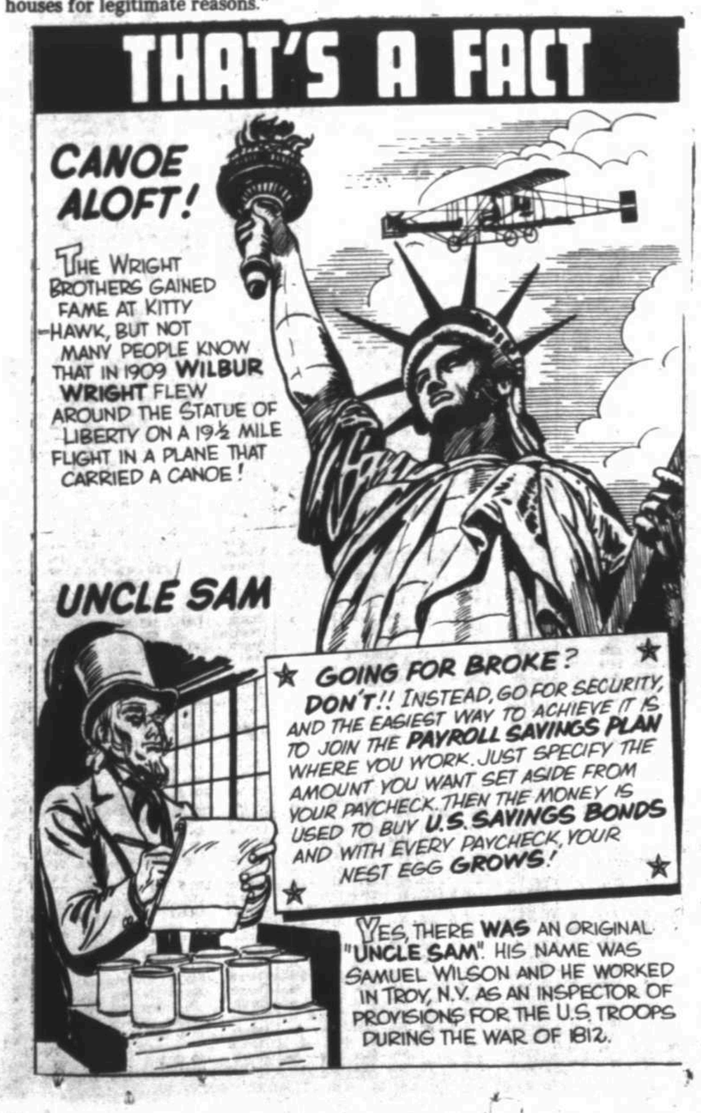

Now in his ninth season as a grower, he thanks the federal government for his expertise in the matter.

"They spent the taxpayers' money growing marijuana in Tennessee for experimental purposes, and under the Freedom of Information Act they had to release all their information," the grower said. "They tell you exactly how to grow and which seeds to use in which parts of the country. It's all courtesy of Uncle Sam. You can get the information out of any public library and it's better information than you get from any dope book in a headshop."

This grower — who charges a $500 consultant fee to friends interested in the intricacies of sinsemilla production — transplants his crop three times to stunt the growth because "I don't want 13- to 15-foot monsters. I just want 6- to 7-foot monsters. I've only got a 9-foot roof."

He gets the "killer purple" color in the sinsemilla flower by eliminating iron from the soil mixture. The purple tops are no more powerful than the regular reddish-brown, "but people pay more for the purple so they can show it off," he says.

The grower has two fences surrounding his back yard, which is patrolled by two German shepherds. He doesn't worry about getting ripped off or arrested. "They have to have a search warrant, because I've got 'No Trespassing' signs posted," he said. "So in order to get in, they have to have a specific complaint and they don't have a specific complaint because I've never been arrested for anything. My greenhouse isn't obvious from the air; millions of people have greenhouses for legitimate reasons."

WEEKLY COMMODITY MARKET REVIEW

Uncertainty as to the future direction of interest rates, the size of our budget deficit and the reception to the record quarterly treasury sales caused many markets to trade erratically this week.

Precious metals prices declined sharply after a significant move upward under the influence of a strong dollar. The U.S. economy remained bogged down by the recession despite easier interest rates and bearish supply/demand outlook pressured the copper market.

Soybeans and products weakened as farmers stepped up cash sales in view of good soybean crop development and overseas demand was curbed by a strong U.S. dollar.

Corn market action tended to mirror the soybean action. Wheat futures attempted some increase in price on weather and harvest condition but late last week selling on the announcement of the U.S./U.S.S.R. grain agreement closed the market down for the week.

Slow beef movement kept cattle futures advances in check despite a constructive inventory report. A strong demand for pork products against light receipts of hogs furnished a higher market for hog and belly futures.

Senate to OK amendment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. said Friday that Senate passage of a proposed constitutional amendment to balance the federal budget now seems assured.

"Our count shows a fair margin above the constitutional two-thirds necessary," Baker, R-Tenn., told reporters.

A final vote on the long-debated proposal is scheduled for noon Wednesday.

Baker said passage could come even earlier if backers of about two dozen remaining proposed amendments to the legislation — none of which are given much chance of success — would withdraw them.

Sen. Alan J. Dixon, D-Ill., was the first to accomodate Baker, dropping his effort to modify the balanced budget measure to give the president veto-power over individual spending items.

Although many state governors have this power, the president may only veto an entire piece of spending legislation, not individual components.

Adrian Zmed immersed in era of 'Grease'

By CAROL OLTEN
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Adrian Zmed spent only the first six years of his life in the fabulous '50s, but he has been immersed in the era of souped-up cars and rock 'n' roll since the early '70s.

His medium has been "Grease."

Zmed, 28, played Danny Zuko, leader of the T-Birds at Rydell

ENTERTAINMENT

High School, in both the Broadway and national touring company shows of "Grease." He missed out on the first "Grease" movie when John Travolta was cast as Danny. But in the current "Grease 2," with Danny graduated and a whole new group of seniors at Rydell, Zmed takes on the role of the new T-Bird leader named Johnny Nogerilli — a tough, leather-jacketed con man with a soft side.

The '50s has greatly influenced Zmed's personal life, as witnessed by his collection of cars of that decade. He's currently in the market for a vintage Corvette.

Why does Zmed hold onto the '50s, and what keeps the "Grease" phenomenon alive 10 years after its stage opening?

"It's the whole James Dean thing — Dean and the birth of rock 'n' roll and saying hell to the establishment," he said.

"There's a wealth of entertainment to be drawn from that era. Also, high school's such an emotional time for everyone, whatever period it's in, that people respond to movies about it. Everybody went through the first date and fights with girlfriends and boyfriends."

Zmed was a young actor in his native Chicago cutting his teeth on Shakespeare, Strindberg and Ibsen when "Grease" took over his life. He had planned to continue serious dramatic acting with the Milwaukee Repertory Company and Guthrie Theater in Minneapolis. But when "Grease" came to town, he followed the line of many young thespians and answered a cattle call.

"You could say that 'Grease' tore me away from that whole thing," Zmed says of his early training, "because I went with the touring company and to New York and, then, got with a manager to go to Los Angeles and work. But so far I'm happy with this, since there are 60,000 actors in SAG (Screen Actors Guild) and only 500 of us are working as tops in the profession."

Besides his involvement with "Grease," Zmed has had starring roles in the television series "Angie" and in the short-lived "Flatbush." He also played a supporting role in TV's "The Goodtime Girls" and has been a guest star on "Starsky and Hutch" and "Bosom Buddies."

He recently won a starring role with William Shatner in the TV series, "T.J. Hooker," which is on ABC's fall schedule. With that and "Grease 2," his first big-budget studio feature, Zmed falls easily into the bracket of up-and-coming new actor.

"I had really, really wanted this movie part," Zmed said, "because I felt that if I got it, I'd make it. Pat ("Grease 2" director Patricia Birch) knew of my work from the Broadway show and wanted me for the role. But for (movie producers) Allan Carr and Robert Stigwood and the Paramount executives, I auditioned and auditioned."

Once cast, Zmed found another set of problems. "I thought, my God, I can't do Danny Zuko — and Danny Zuko is all I know. So I had to make some acting choices and I think that Johnny, finally, in the movie, is a guy who tries harder than Danny ever did but is constantly losing his kingdom. His girl, Stef (another 'Grease 2' newcomer, Michelle Pfeiffer), tells him it's over. The Cycle Lords threaten him."

Zmed, darkly handsome with jet-black hair, is fighting the stigma of being a "substitute Travolta" (reportedly, Travolta and the studio, Paramount Pictures, reached a mutual agreement that he'd stay out of the sequel).

"If people look at me at all that way, I'm flattered," he said. "But I have qualities of my own and no intention of trying to look like Travolta. My hope is to have a lucrative career working in film and on stage. I respect the profession and want to be around for a long time."

Documentary author from 'separate country'

By DON FREEMAN
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The South, that separate country, that wounded land, yielded the special soil that nurtured Marshall Frady, a nomadic Baptist minister's son who has lived always by the grace, the strength and the musical metaphor of his words.

Frady started out writing for the newspapers and moved on to the magazines such as the old Saturday Evening Post and Life and Harper's. Then he went on to writing books. And now, at ABC, he is enchanted by a demanding but not always recognized craft — the authorship of the television documentary. In the last two years, since entering the ABC fold, Frady has written some corking good ones — the recent "ABC Closeup" on J. Edgar Hoover, for one, and "Soldiers of the Twilight," a study of mercenaries, and "The Apocalypse Game" on nuclear war, and so on.

Frady is a man blessed with a deft and lilting touch, this soft-voiced Southerner born in Georgia and schooled in South Carolina where he picked up a degree from Furman University, which is in Greenville. Later, he attended the esteemed University of Iowa Writers Workshop. He wrote a biography of George Wallace which The New York Times called "one of the finest pieces of political reporting published in years — a sensitive, informed and funny feat of high journalism that is a classic of the kind."

Frady's biography of Billy Graham was equally well received. And "Southerners: A Journalistic Odyssey," a collection of Frady pieces previously published about the South and its people, was nominated for a Pulitzer.

This man whose roots lie deep in the region of his birth, connected to them still with Faulknernian persistence, would like now to turn out a television commentary on the South of truth and legend, if the two can be wholly separated. It is a project, one assumes, that Frady would delight in and be consumed by, and from which we would learn.

"Not for nothing," says Marshall Frady, "is the South the only part of the country to experience invasion and defeat. The South is like America's Ireland, always aware of being outsiders. And yet it is a changing South. The pockets are diminishing. The South is getting into a corporate, suburban coma. All too rapidly it's becoming the new shopping-center South, the television South, the indistinguishable South.

"But," Frady says, "there is still the feeling of the aboriginal outback, still, from Birmingham right through Alabama and Mississippi and into Louisiana the new views are not digested."

Frady talks as he writes, with an awareness of the value, the weight, the rhythm and poetry of the language.

What is there, I asked Marshall, about the South that creates such a uniqueness of expression? I suppose you could call Mark Twain a Southern writer and then go on, adding the illustrious names, and they will be distinctive for their rhythms and locutions, a peculiarly Southern flavor. Why is that?

"There's a robust storytelling tradition in the South," Frady says. "Always has been. We know that words matter and not in a perfunctory way. The South lingered closer to the earth than other parts of the country and, inevitably, there's a nerve touched in that kind of closeness to the soil. There is, I think, too, a tradition of memory where the fact is as real as the moment, almost."

Frady moved from writing for print, which is for the eye, to writing for television and the ear. To this transition, although accomplished with apparent ease, he has given due study.

"Writing began with recitation around campfires, as an oral tradition," Frady says. "The best writing really is for the ear. Writing is at its best when, as you read it, it's like a voice talking. You hear it clearly. When that voice is absent that usually indicates writing that does not strike the match.

"Writing isn't just word stuntsmanship. Writing has to come out of perceptions. Those same perceptions should come into play in television documentaries, a highly compressed theater in terms of time.

"I think of Robert Frost's line, that the difference between writing poetry and merely writing free verse is that writing poetry is like playing tennis with the net up. That's the best of TV documentary writing. The net's up."

Marshall Frady said: "When it works, this writing for TV documentary, it really sings. When it doesn't work, it really clunks. It's forgettable and for the writer that is purgatory, having a story pass in the wind. It is a lean style of writing. Hemingway would have made a not negligible writer of TV documentaries. He had that tip-of-the-iceberg tautness just as Ed Murrow's TV documentary writing still sticks to the ribs of the spirit."

Frady elected to enter television when he was working in Atlanta and James Whooten, once of The New York Times but now of ABC, came down to do a piece on Billy Graham for "20-20."

"It struck me that Whooten's work for TV carried such freights of meaning," Frady said. "The prospect began to fetch and I looked into television documentary work as nourishing. I saw the documentary in terms of bank shots, the amplifications or shadings that you don't have in the silhouette journalism of the newscasts. Documentary writing is an ultra journalism, getting behind the day's commotions with a form of writing that has its own language of time, of pictures, of movement. Learning it for me was a terribly scrappy course."

Star of 'Greatest American Hero' plays in 'Pippin'

Hearst Feature Service

HOLLYWOOD — "The only thing I like more than work is more work," says William Katt. The actor returns to ABC-TV this fall as "The Greatest American Hero" and as the star of the movie "Pippin," which will be seen on Home Box Office and other video outlets.

While school teacher Ralph Hinkley in "Hero" is reluctant to assume the role of super-hero after receiving a suit endowed with unearthly powers, Katt says the challenge of playing the title character suits him just fine.

Katt, the second of three children born to actress Barbara Hale and actor Bill Williams, comes by his craft naturally.

"When I was young, I enjoyed helping my parents rehearse their lines, but I really had no idea I was going into the business," he grins. "That decision evolved when I began working behind the scenes at the South Coast Repertory Theater, where I eventually landed a role in Joseph Heller's 'We Bombed in New Haven.' Apparently I didn't 'bomb,' and this led to other roles. It was then that I decided to take my father's real name — Katt — professionally. I didn't like the idea of being called William Williams, Jr."

Katt's skills in musical comedy won him a scholarship at the Los Angeles Civic Light Opera workshop and a national tour as Rolf in "The Sound of Music." A succession of stage roles included Michael Christofer's Pulitzer Prize-winning play, "The Shadow Box."

"I made my film debut in Brian De Palma's 'Carrie,' with Sissy Spacek, and then appeared in the controversial 'First Love,'" he says. The tall, blond, curly-haired actor also appeared in John Milius' surfing saga, "Big Wednesday" and as the young Sundance Kid in "Butch and Sundance, the Early Years."

MHS senior spends summer vacation racing cars

Hillin continues family tradition

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

While most high school students are spending the summer on some thankless job trying to earn a little money, Midland High senior Bobby Hillin is driving stock cars.

But he's not out at some small city track or even at state circuit trying to make the grade. Instead Hillin is alongside the NASCAR racing elite including peole like Richard Petty, Cale Yarborough and Buddy Baker.

And by all accounts, the 18-year-old is doing just fine. He has never finshed lower than 21st place and feels he is improving each time he gets on the track. "I have finished 16th and 20th, and that's okay," he said. "I'm not disappointed with finishing there."

Hillin's father, Bobby Sr., is owner of Longhorn Racing, which does its racing in the Indy world of CART racing with Al Unser behind the wheel. But the senior Hillin didn't push his son into the race car business.

"I had to beg on my knees to get started in this business," Bobby Jr. said. But once the decision was made, the father offered all the advice and guidance that his several years in racing experience had to offer. "My dad would ask me if I was sure I wanted to do this," he said. "He helps me keep my head on straight."

THE JUNIOR Hillin reached back another generation to get his financial support. "My grandfather put up the money this year but I'm on my own after this," he said. Hillin hopes that this summer's showing will net him a big sponsor for next year.

This do or die situation may be the answer to his early success which Bobby hinself is at a loss to explain, "I don't know (why I've been so successful)," he said.

On Friday, Hillin qualified 22nd at Taladega, Fla., the last of his five races this summer. If history repeats itself Hillin maybe in for an upset victory in the 500-mile race. Only two racers have won Taladega and not started in the top ten. Both came in from the 22nd starting position.

Hillin's worse finish came in Wilks Barre, Penn., on April 18, in the Northwest Bank 400. He qualified 25th in a 30-car field and finished the race in 21st position. That was his first race and his realtive success was good enough to create a small change in strategy.

BOBBY WAS originally going to race only on the short tracks this year, but after consulting his mechanic and his father, the decision was made to try some of the longer courses. "Next year my first race will be at Daytona and I figured I'd better learn how to run on the big tracks," he said.

So it was on to Pocono, Penn., for the Van Scoy 500. It was a disppointing attempt as the 1982 Buick Regal he was driving burned a piston in the second lap. Hillin is allowing himself to enter only five races this year and the shortened race cost him some much needed experience.

Hillin's decision to compete in only five races this summer allows him to retain his rookie eligiblity until next year. "I'll compete in all 31 NASCAR races next year and I'm shooting for Rookie of the Year honors," he said.

His long term goals in racing expand far beyond the oval tracks on the Grand National Tour. "I want to do it all," he said. "I eventually want to race in Formula One and Indy-type cars as well as the Championship auto racing circuit.

(See HILLIN, Page 6c)

Bobby Hillin Jr., Midland High Senior, is shown in a composite photograph with the car he is running on the NASCAR race circuit this summer. Hillin's qualifying speed for Sunday's Taladega 500 was over 190 mph, good enough for the 22nd position.

Joke along with SWC coaches

For some, '81 was nothing to laugh at

By HARRY KING
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Six weeks before the college football season starts, coaches tell jokes.

At least, that's what the Southwest Conference coaches did Friday during a luncheon sponsored by the Major Sports Association.

As Baylor's Grant Teaff explained, the league outlook depends on your viewpoint — much like the young man who wanted desparately to serve the church.

Finally, an archbishop promised the man a spot in a monastery where he was allowed to speak two words every 10 years. After 10 years, the young man reported to the archbishop.

"Food. Bad."

Ten years later.

"Bed. Hard."

And, 10 years later.

"I quit."

"I'm not the least bit surprised," the archbishop said. "Ever since you've been here, it's been gripe, gripe, gripe."

JACKIE SHERRILL, who reportedly became the highest paid coach in college football when he left the University of Pittsburgh for Texas A&M, followed Teaff.

"When I started talking to A&M, I told them all I want is half of what Lou Holtz makes." Holtz, the Arkansas coach, has taken some heat because of his salary.

Sherrill also said he remembered being in a Pittsburgh airport after his Panther team was tied by Florida. He didn't have a dime for the telephone and asked a man if he had change for a dollar. Instead, the man gave him a dime and then recognized Sherrill.

"Aren't you Jackie Sherrill?"

"Yes, sir."

"Didn't you let Florida tie you tonight."

"Yes, sir."

The man then reached in his pocket and pulled out another dime. "Here, call all your friends."

Holtz said he and Sherrill recently teamed against Houston's Bill Yeoman and Texas' Fred Akers on the golf course.

"How should I putt this," Holtz said he asked his partner. "Sherrill said, 'Try to keep it low.'"

YEOMAN COMPLIMENTED the Methodist preacher who gave the invocation and said Methodist ministers are different in Texas. "You give one a micropohone and an audience and in 30 seconds, he'll ask for money."

Yeoman said he was worried about his defense, particularly after the secondary took out group insurance. "It's fortunate they're not at A&M, they're so green, they would have been eaten."

Dean Slayton, defensive coordinator at Texas Tech, stood in for Tech Coach Jerry Moore, the only one of the nine head coaches who was absent. "Coach Moore told me to tell 'em something funny. After our season, I haven't thought of anything funny." Tech did not win a league game last year.

Texas Christian University, under F.A. Dry, rallied in the final minutes to beat Arkansas 28-24 last year, ending the Razorbacks' 22-year domination of the Horned Frogs.

"It is great to be in Arkansas ... in July," Dry said.

He also admitted TCU used an illegal player against Arkansas. Dry said the Frogs blitzed and an Arkansas receiver was wide open. He asked a defensive coach who was covering the Razorback player.

"God, coach."

"About that time I saw some lightning in the east. I said, 'Don't substitute and don't leave him in single coverage again."

Rice Coach Ray Alborn said the Rice program had reached a new plateau, that a team was trying to get out of a 1984-85 series. "I won't say who the school is, but they just got men in school last year," he said.

Oilers' Gray still unsigned

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) - Houston Oiler veterans completed their second day of workouts Friday with starting offensive tackle Leon Gray still stymied in contract negotiations.

"All we can do is try to convince Leon that the offer we have on the table is a fair one," Herzeg said. "There is nothing new to report."

Gray is one of 28 unsigned National Football League veterans who have few options because the NFL Players Association is negotiating a new contract with the NFL Management Council.

Gray can accept the Oilers' latest offer, sign a contract for 110 percent of last year's pay, or wait until the NFLPA negotiates his contract.

He also could sit out the season or hope for a trade.

Gray earned about $130,000 last season and the Oilers reportedly have offered to at least double his contract.

Meanwhile, the Oilers went through a fast-paced drill with Coach Ed Biles scheduling a brief scrimmage session.

"I just feel we've got to do a little more contact work," Biles said. "We didn't do that much hitting last year and we got away from being a hitting team. Teams on he coast have a chance to scrimmage each other. We don't have that option."

Several players were slowed by minor injuries, Biles said, but he added "if they don't have something minor wrong, they're not working hard. It's all part of getting prepared for the regular season."

Linebacker Robert Abraham, a third round draft choice from North Carolina State, missed the Friday afternoon workout with a groin injury. No. 1 draft choice Mike Munchak of Penn State worked out with a slightly pulled leg muscle.

Biles said offensive tackle Mark Koncar, obtained in a trade with Green Bay, would report Friday night and possibly work out Saturday.

Lietzke, Sutton lead Canadian

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP) - Bruce Lietzke survived some adventures on spiked up greens and, with a 3-under-par 68, tied Hal Sutton for the lead Friday in the second round of the $425,000 Canadian Open Golf Tournament.

Lietzke, a former winner of this national championship, and Sutton, a former U.S. amateur champ in his first full year of pro competition, each completed two rounds in 136, six shots under par on the 7,060-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course. Each had a pair of 68s.

Lietzke had a chance to take the lead alone, missing a 3-foot birdie putt on the spiked-up 18th green.

"I played very well, and I putted well. Missing that putt on the last hole doesn't take anything away from it. Having the lead alone after 36 holes means nothing at all," he said.

Sutton, who tied for third last week, played in the morning half of the field and Lietzke in the afternoon, when the greens were at their worst.

"The most spiked-up greens I've ever seen," Lietzke said. "I played with Johnny Miller and he said that if he had to putt these greens every week he'd quit the tour."

BUT IT wasn't the greens that shot down Australian Greg Norman.

Norman came to the par-5 18th at six under par, tied for the lead and looking for the birdie that would put him in front.

He boldly went for the green with a wood club for his second shot, and paid the price. The ball plopped into the lake that fronts the green. He played his fourth shot into a bunker and eventually staggered off with a double-bogey 7 that completed a round of par 71 and dropped him back into a tie for third at 138.

Also at that figure were veteran Lou Graham, Tommy Valentine, Wayne Levi and Nick Faldo of England, a 3-time British PGA champion.

Valentine had a 68 in the mild, cloudy weather. Graham, Faldo any Levi matched 70's.

Pat Lindsey, Mike Nicolette and Tommy Armour III, grandson of the famed Silver Scot, were at 139. Nicolette and Armour shot 68s, Lindsey 71.

JACK NICKLAUS, the course architect and a 5-time runner-up in this national championship, shot another 73 and failed to qualify for the final two rounds with a 146 total. It was the third time this season Nicklaus had missed the cut.

"I'm just not playing well. I thought I was until I got here. I just played too many bad holes," Nicklaus said.

Tom Kite also missed with a 75-148. It was the first time he'd failed to qualify for the final 36 holes on the PGA Tour in 54 tournaments, a string that went back to the 1980 U.S. Open.

Brad Bryant and Bruce Douglass, who shared the first round lead with Norman, also dropped back. Douglass shot 74-141, Bryant 75-142. Defending title-holder Peter Oosterhuis was 73-142.

Sutton birdied two of his first three holes, each with a putt of about 8-10 feet, matched three more birdies with as many bogeys and then got his share of the lead with an 8-footer on the 17th hole.

The long-hitting Lietzke, seeking his first title of the year, made the turn in 34, one under par, 2-putted for birdie-4 on the 13th, tied for the lead with an 8-iron shot to six feet on the 17th, and then let sole control slip away on the little putt that missed on the final hole.

Lendl defeats Gildemeister quickly

NORTH CONWAY, N.H. (AP) — Second-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, looking for his second straight Grand Prix title, needed just 50 minutes to defeat Hans Gildemeister of Chile 6-2, 6-1 Friday to reach the quarterfinals of the $200,000 Volvo Tennis Tournament.

Third-seeded Jose Luis Clerc of Argentina easily won his third round match, while sixth-seeded Peter McNamara of Australia and 10th-seeded Balazs Taroczy of Hungary struggled through their matches.

Unseeded Victor Pecci of Paraguay, who eliminated top-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina in a first-round match Thursday, advanced past Freddie Sauer of South Africa, who retired with leg cramps with Pecci leading 7-6, 3-2.

Ninth-seeded Mel Purcell upset the fourth seed, Eliot Teltscher, 6-3, 6-4.

Lendl, 22, was awsome against Gildemeister, seeded 16th. The right-hander had 10 aces on the clay courts, including three in the fifth game of the second set. He lost only seven points in eight service games in the match.

"If I play well and hit the ball hard and deep, there is not much he can do," said Lendl, ranked fourth in the world. "I am now playing better and better each day."

Clerc, the defending champion, ousted No.12 John Alexander of Australia 6-2, 6-2.

McNamara, 27, wasted a match point in the second set and was forced to struggle for 2¼ hours before defeating unseeded Henri Leconte, 19, of France 6-4, 6-7, 7-5.

Taroczy, 28, winner of two Volvo Grand Prix tournaments this year, scored a mild upset with a 6-3, 4-6, 6-4 victory over seventh-seeded Andres Gomez of Equador.

McNamara's victory was his third straight three-set match in the Volvo tournament, and he didn't make it any easier by losing 1-0 and 4-3 leads in the final set on his serve.

Leconte held a 5-4 lead, but McNamara evened the set by holding serve. Leconte was broken in the 11th game and McNamara served out the match at 40-30.

Sutton, Garner team up to give Astros win over Giants, 3-1

HOUSTON (AP) — Don Sutton fired a four-hitter and Phil Garner drove in all the Houston runs with a fourth-inning homer as the Astros blanked the San Francisco Giants 3-1 Friday night for their fourth consecutive victory.

Sutton, 10-7, pitched 5⅓ innings of no-hit ball before Joe Morgan singled. The 37-year-old right-hander also gave up singles to Reggie Smith in the seventh inning and Tom O'Malley in the eighth and lost his shutout bid when Smith hit his eighth home run with two out in the ninth.

Sutton, who has pitched 55 shutouts, needs one more to tie Hall of Famer Bob Gibson for ninth place on the all-time list. He struck out a season-high 10 and walked three.

Jose Cruz singled off loser Rich Gale, 5-10, to lead off the Houston fourth. After Danny Heep waked, Garner drove a 1-1 pitch into the left field seats for his 10th home run of the season. It was the first home run of his career against the Giants in 234 at-bats.

The Astros' winning streak equals their longest of the season.

Reds 4, Padres 2

CINCINNATI (AP) — Bruce Berenyi pitched a five-hitter and drove in Cincinnati's first two runs and Larry Biittner singled home the winning run as the Reds defeated the slumping San Diego Padres 4-2 Friday night.

Biittner singled home Eddie Milner to snap a 2-2 tie in the fifth inning as the Reds sent the Padres to their fifth consecutive defeat.

Berenyi, 8-10, singled with the bases loaded in the second inning for a 1-0 lead and added a sacrifice fly in the fourth.

Berenyi walked four and struck out five in posting his second straight complete game and his third in 22 starts. He benefited from four double plays by the Cincinnati infield.

Pirates 5, Mets 1

NEW YORK (AP) — Rookie Johnny Ray had four hits and Bill Madlock drove in three runs, two with his 10th homer, to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 5-1 victory over the New York Mets Friday night.

Ray delivered two doubles and two singles and scored three times while John Candelaria and Manny Sarmiento scattered nine hits in sending the Mets to their fifth consecutive setback. Candelaria, 8-4, had to leave after five innings when his back stiffened and Sarmiento notched his first save of the season.

Craig Swan, 6-4, was the loser as the Mets lost for the 26th time in their last 36 games.

The Pirates took a 1-0 lead in the first inning. Omar Moreno drew a leadoff walk, but was caught stealing. Ray singled and took second on an attempted pickoff when first baseman Dave Kingman let the ball get by him for an error. Ray went to third on Madlock's single and scored on Jason Thompson's sacrifice fly.

The Mets tied the score in the second inning on doubles by Joel Youngblood and Hubie Brooks, but the Pirates regained the lead with a run in the third. Ray doubled with two out and scored on Madlock's single.

The Pirates made it 3-1 in the fourth. Mike Easler singled and was forced by Lee Lacy, who stole second. With two out, Dale Berra was intentionally walked, but Candelaria delivered an RBI single. In the fifth, Ray singled and Madlock homered.

Phillies 3, Cubs 1

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Steve Carlton became the major leagues' first 14-game winner with a six-hitter and Mike Schmidt hit a two-run homer as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Chicago Cubs 3-1 Friday night.

It was the third straight victory for the Phillies, who began play one percentage point ahead of second-place St. Louis in the National League East, and the seventh loss in a row for the Cubs. Schmidt hs homered in each of the last three games, giving him 18 for the season.

Carlton, who dropped his first four decisions this season and didn't win his first game until April 30, boosted his record to 14-8. The veteran left-hander has won eight of his last nine decisions. Carlton struck out 10 and walked two in besting Ferguson Jenkins, 6-12. The 10 strikeouts gave him the National League lead at 178, two ahead of Cincinnati's Mario Soto.

Philadelphia scored twice in the third inning when Gary Matthews singled with two out and Schmidt followed with an opposite-field home run, his eighth in the last 13 games.

The Phillies made it 3-0 in the fourth on a double by Manny Trillo, who advanced to third on an infield out and scored when second baseman Bump Wills booted Pete Rose's two-out grounder for an error.

Chicago's only run came in the eighth on a double by pinch hitter Steve Henderson and a single by Gary Woods.

Expos 5, Cardinals 4

MONTREAL (AP) — Andre Dawson blooped a one-out opposite-field double down the right field line in the 11th inning to drive in Tim Raines from second base and give the Montreal Expos a 5-4 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Friday night.

Raines drew a one-out walk off reliever Doug Bair, 3-3, and stole second base before racing home with the winning run. Montreal reliever Woodie Fryman, 6-2, who retired all six batters he faced, gained his second victory in as many nights.

Dodgers 10-8, Braves 9-2

ATLANTA (AP) — Ron Cey and Steve Sax smacked two-run homers as the Los Angeles Dodgers completed a sweep of Friday's twi-night doubleheader over Atlanta 8-2 and cooled off the front-running Braves.

Ron Roenicke's two-run single with two out in the seventh inning capped a five-run rally that included Ken Landreaux's second two-run homer of the game as the Dodgers won the opener 10-9, snapping the Braves' four-game winning streak.

The sweep moved the Dodgers within 8½ games of the Braves and into a virtual second-place tie, one percentage point behind the San Diego Padres, who lost to Cincinnati for their fifth straight setback.

A crowd of 47,787, including former President Jimmy Carter, saw Cey give the Dodgers a 2-0 lead with his 14th homer in the fourth inning of the nightcap following a single by Dusty Baker. Sax got his first homer of the year, also off starter Joe Cowley, 1-2, in the fifth with Bill Russell on base via a double.

Los Angeles' Bob Welch, 11-7, allowed a sacrifice fly by Chris Chambliss in the sixth inning and a solo homer to Claudell Washington in the eighth. Welch allowed six hits, walked three and fanned six.

Steve Garvey singled two runs home in the Dodgers' sixth and added a bad-hop run-scoring single in the seventh after Cey drove in his third run with a sacrifice fly.

Rain postpones Cubs-Mets game

JACKSON, Miss. — Friday night's game between the Midland Cubs and Jackson Mets after one-half of an inning.

Rain and winds up to 40 mph started in the bottom of the first inning forcing the postponement.

The rainout forces the Cubs and Mets to play a doubleheader tonight with the first game scheduled for 6 p.m. Mike King, 6-10, will start on the mound for the Cubs against Jackson's John Violette, 1-3.

In the nightcap, Doug Welenc, 10-9, will face Doug Sisk, 8-4.

Mike king, 6-10 doug welenc, 10-9.

On Sunday, the two teams will conclude the series which is currently tied at one game apiece. The Cubs will then have Monday as a travel day before starting a five-game home stand against league leading San Antonio on Tuesday.

Midland fights way to UGSA title game

ODESSA — The United Girls Softball Association Division I championship series has been a story of a real dog fight for the Midland squad. After losing their opening round game to Dennison 16-10 the Midland representatives managed to win two games against Odessa teams in the losers bracket, either of which would have eliminated them from the tournament.

The two victories puts Midland in the championship game today at 10:30 a.m. It will be a chance for revenge as they will face Dennison for the UGSA Division I title.

Midland's pitching was the difference against the 1-20 rivals as they held them to three runs in the two contest.

First, Midland squared off against the Odessa Blue squad and came away with a 7-1 victory. Then they turned on the offense to eliminate the Odessa Red squad 17-3.

The news was not as pleasant for Midland's Division II squad. They were eliminated when they lost their loser's bracket game to Abilene North 12-6. Midland got in the losers bracket by virtue of their opening game loss to Odessa in a squeeker 7-6.

The double elimination, fast-pitch softball tournament features the top UGSA teams from West Texas, East Texas and New Mexico.

Walton will play in charity game between alumni from UCLA, UNLV

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Injury-plagued center Bill Walton of the San Diego Clippers, who last played for the National Basketball Association team in 1980, said Friday that he will appear in a charity game Saturday night in Las Vegas.

Walton, 29, trying to overcome a chronically injured left foot, said at a press conference that he had reached an agreement with the Clippers that would allow him to play in the contest between alumni from UCLA and Nevada-Las Vegas.

"I was always planning on playing," said the former UCLA star who led the Portland Blazers to an NBA title in 1977 and went to the Clippers in 1979. "The only question was over my release form with the Clippers, and we reached an amenable agreement..."

The 6-foot-11 Walton, who had the last of a string of operations on the foot in August of last year, would not divulge the particulars of his release form with the Clippers. The club initially had told him that, if he got hurt, he would waive the rest of his contract, which calls for some $700,000 a year for the next two years.

Walton said he was approaching Saturday's game, to be played in the sports pavilion at Caesars Palace, intending to go all out.

"Mine will not be a token appearance. We came to play and to win," he said. "I'll play as much as it takes to accomplish that."

Asked if the game could mark the beginning of his climb back toward NBA stardom, Walton replied: "I feel good right now, but I can't really speak directly about an NBA comeback. It would be premature. But this is a start.

"I've come a long way since my major surgery, but I still have a long way to go. Whether I make it back or not, only time will tell."

Walton, who starting working out again four months ago, said he doesn't feel any pain in his left foot when he's on the court, just when he's warming up with exercises designed to put pressure on the foot. He recently completed his first year of law school at Stanford, and said he played in some intramural games there.

Lucas hopes NBA will develop better way of informing players of trades

By WALTER BERRY
Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Maurice Lucas, acquired earlier this month by the Phoenix Suns from the New York Knicks, said Friday that he hopes National Basketball Association teams will develop a better system of informing players of trades.

Lucas learned of the July 7 deal from a fellow airline passenger.

"I was on a plane to San Francisco from Portland (on the way to an NBA goodwill tour in China) when this guy sitting across the aisle toasted a drink to me and my wife, saying 'Here's to Phoenix,'" Lucas recalled. "I said: 'What do you mean?' The guy said he had just heard on the news that I'd been traded to Phoenix for Truck Robinson.

"My wife started crying. I took it hard, too," Lucas said. "It's always a shock when you get traded, but it's part of the profession. I was just disappointed that the Knicks didn't inform me before the information was released. Hopefully in the future, NBA teams will notify you by any means so a player can prepare."

Phoenix is the fourth stop on the NBA trail for the 30-year-old Lucas. And although he spent most of Friday afternoon searching for a new house here, Lucas has apparently found a home with the Suns.

"Maurice epitomized the true power forward — a strong player with a strong inside game. He's all the things we have not had at that position," said Phoenix General Manager Jerry Colangelo. "I think he's going to fit in like a glove."

Ironically, when Lucas was being shopped around by the Portland Traail Blazers two years ago, Phoenix reportedly wanted no part of him because of his reputation as a fighter and an alleged troublemaker.

"That depends on what you call a troublemaker. I don't know what a troublemaker is," said the 6-foot-9, 218-pound Lucas. "I play a very physical, very aggressive game and I play with a great amount of emotion.

"But I don't make the mistakes I made six years ago. You learn and you grow and you have to get a little wiser in this league. Two years ago, you don't fit in a program and two years later, you do. It's strange but people change and needs change."

Last year in New York, Lucas averaged 15.8 points and 11.3 rebounds per game — fifth-best in the league. But his most productive seasons were at Portland from 1976-79 when he averaged 20.2, 16.4 and 20.4 points per game, respectively, under Coach Jack Ramsay.

Yanks post 4-0 victory over Rangers

Shutout spoils Johnson's debut as Texas manager

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Graig Nettles drove in a pair of runs with a home run and a sacrifice fly and Ron Guidry and Rudy May combined on a five-hitter as the New York Yankees spoiled Darrell Johnson's debut as the Rangers new manager by beating Texas 4-0 Friday night.

Johnson, who also managed at Boston and Seattle, was named the Texas' interim manager for the remainder of the season after Don Zimmer was fired on Wednesday.

New York took a 2-0 lead in the second off Doc Medich on just one hit. Oscar Gamble walked and scored Dave Winfield's triple. Nettles then plated Winfield with his fly ball to the warning track in right field.

Nettles and Dave Collins rapped consecutive solo homers with two out in the eighth. It was Nettles ninth and Collins second of the season.

Guidry, 10-5, allowed four hits, walked two, and struck out two, posting his ninth career victory in 10 decisions against the Rangers. He left the game after his back stiffened in the fifth. May allowed one hit over the final four innings to collect his second save of the season.

Medich, 7-9, walked six and struck out two in eighth innings plus of work. His career record against the Yankees fell to 0-6.

White Sox 9, Red Sox 5

CHICAGO (AP) — LaMarr Hoyt pitched eight-hit ball for 81-3 innings to become the American League's first 13-game winner and Carlton Fisk drove in five runs to lead the Chicago White Sox to a 9-5 victory over the Boston Red Sox Friday night.

Hoyt, 13-9, walked three and struck out two before being replaced by Salome Barojas in the ninth when Boston added their final run.

Fisk keyed the Chicago attack with run-scoring singles in the first and third innings and capped his night with his eighth home run of the season, a three-run blast in the fourth.

Boston took a 1-0 lead in the first on an RBI double by Jim Rice, who extended his hitting streak to 11 games. Chicago got three runs in the bottom of the inning on run-scoring singles by Fisk, Steve Kemp and Mike Squires, all off Boston starter Mike Torrez, 7-6.

The White Sox got three more in the third on a Fisk's single and a two-run single by Aurelio Rodriguez.

Fisk's homer in the fourth scored Harold Baines and Kemp to give the White Sox a 9-1 lead.

Boston reached Hoyt for three runs in the sixth. Jerry Remy led off with a walk and Rice reached base on an error by shortstop Vance Law. Carl Yastrzemski followed with a double to right to score Remy, and Rice came home on Carney Lansford's sacrifice fly. Wade Boggs' single to center field scored Yastrzemski with Boston's final run of the inning.

Royals 4, Orioles 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Larry Gura and Dan Quisenberry combined on a six hitter and George Brett collected three hits, knocked in a run and scored another Friday night as the Kansas City Royals edged the Baltimore Orioles 4-3.

Gura, 12-7, struck out five before being replaced by Quisenberry after walking Cal Ripken Jr. with one out in the ninth inning. Quisenberry got the final two outs to record his 24th save of the season.

The Royals took a 2-0 lead off Sammy Stewart, 7-6, with four singles in the second. Cesar Geronimo singled leading off, but was forced at second on Don Slaught's grounder. Slaught went to second on Willie Wilson's single and scored when U.L. Washington singled off the glove of shortstop Cal Ripken Jr. Wilson stopped at second on the play and scored on Brett's single.

Steve Hammond singled leading off the Kansas City fourth, took third on Frank White's single and scored on Geronimo's sacrifice fly.

The Orioles closed the gap to 3-2 in the eighth. Lenn Sakata singled leading off for Baltimore's fourth hit and Rick Dempsey followed with an RBI double. Dempsey went to third on Benny Ayala's deep fly ball and scored on Rich Dauer's sacrifice fly.

The Royals added a run in the eighth as Brett doubled leading off, moved to third on a Hal McRae's sacrifice and scored on May's sacrifice fly.

Baltimore closed out the scoring in the ninth as Ripken walked, went to third on pinch hitter John Lowenstein's single and scored on Ken Singleton's sacrifice fly.

Indians 7, Brewers 2

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Rick Manning slammed a two-run homer and Toby Harrah and Andre Thornton hit bases-empty shots leading the Cleveland Indians to a 7-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Friday night.

Winner Larry Sorensen, 9-7, scattered nine hits as the Indians won for their third straight game.

The Indians took a 1-0 lead in the first inning against Randy Lerch, 7-7, on a single by Larry Milbourne, a hit batsman and an RBI single by Mike Hargrove.

Leadoff walks to Manning and Carmelo Castillo in the second chased Lerch, and Jerry Augustine walked Milbourne to load the bases one later. Manning scored on Harrah's sacrifice fly to left field, but Castillo, who was running on the play and had rounded third when the ball was caught, easily was doubled off second to retire the side.

Castillo walked, took second on a passed ball, reached third on a groundout and scored on a sacrifice fly by Milbourne as the Indians built their lead to 3-0 in the fourth.

The Brewers, retired in order through the first three innings by Sorensen, closed to within 3-2 in their half of the fourth on singles by Paul Molitor and Robin Yount, an RBI single by Cecil Cooper and a sacrifice fly by Gorman Thomas.

However, the Indians made it 5-2 in the fifth when Rodney Craig singled and Manning lined an 0-2 pitch from Augustine into the right-center field bleachers, his fifth homer of the year.

Harrah slammed his 20th homer and Thornton his 24th in the sixth to extend the Indians' lead to 7-2.

Blue Jays 6, Tigers 5

TORONTO (AP) — Rance Mulliniks singled home Damaso Garcia from second to drive in the winning run in the bottom of the 12th inning as the Toronto Blue Jays rallied from a five-run deficit to defeat the Detroit Tigers 6-5 Friday night.

Alfredo Griffin opened the inning with a single to right but was forced at second on Garcia'a attempted sacrifice. Garcia then stole his 33rd base of the season and raced on Mulliniks' single to center off Bob James, 0-2, the fifth Detroit pitcher.

Dale Murray, the fourth Toronto pitcher, picked up his seventh win against three losses with one inning of relief work.

Alan Trammell's second grand slam of his career highlighted the Tigers' five-run fourth inning off Jim Clancy. With one out, Lance Parrish singled and, one out later, Rick Leach reached on a walk. Chet Lemon's single to left drove in the first run and Glenn Wilson's infield hit loaded the bases. Trammell then cleared the bases with his sixth homer of the season on the first pitch from Clancy.

The Blue Jays came back with three runs in the bottom of the fourth. Garcia led off with an infield hit and, Willie Upshaw singled two outs later. Hoskin Powell's infield hit loaded the bases and Glenn Adams, called up earlier in the day from Syracuse, drove in two runs with a single to right-center. Al Woods' infield hit delivered Powell with the third run.

Woods' bloop double drove in Toronto's fourth run in the sixth and the Jays tied it in the seventh on Upshaw's RBI single.

Navratilova wins despite injury to hip

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Wimbledon winner Martina Navratilova may be forced to drop out of the McDonald's women's indoor tennis competition here because of a hip injury.

Navratilova pulled a muscle Friday night in the final set of her slugging 6-4, 3-6, 6-3 victory over West German Bettina Bunge.

After the match, Navratilova said she would not make a final decision until further treatment Saturday morning.

"At this stage, I'm only playing it by ear. I want to play. I'm a fast healer and it's not as if it is a serious injury," Navratilova said.

Ironically, it will be Friday night's victim who may provide a remedy for the injury. Bunge has given Navratilova an ointment she has used successfully on swmilar injuries.

Navratilova had to struggle to take the match, the first of the second night's play.

She took the first set despite numerous service errors, but in the second second set, she appeared to lose concentration and allowed Bunge to break her in the fourth game to give the West German a 3-1 lead.

Navratilova rallied in the third set and took a commanding 3-0 lead after breaking Bunge in the second game.

Wimbledon runnerup Chris Evert Lloyd produced a polished performance in downing Australia's Evonne Cawley 6-3, 6-1 later in the night.

Evert Lloyd, gearing towards defending her U.S. Open crown for the sixth time this September, took 70 minutes to beat her longtime rival of 38 matches.

"I was happy with that win, extremely happy," she said. "To beat a player of Evonne's caliber like that is great for my confidence."

American teen-ager Andrea Jaegar decisively beat England's Sue Barker 6-0, 6-0.

Jaegar, who lost Thursday night to Bunge, put Barker under pressure with wide, deep returns and waited for her opponent to make mistakes.

Montana, Wersching resign from NFL Players Association

ROCKLIN, Calif. (AP) — Quarterback Joe Montana of the Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers and teammate place-kicker Ray Wersching have resigned from the NFL Players Association, which is threatening to call a strike this fall against team owners.

Montana and Wersching have sent letters to the players' union headquarters, notifying it of their decisions, it was reported today.

By dropping out of the association, currently deadlocked with owners on a new collective bargaining agreement, the players are protected from legal reprisals should they ignore a threatened NFLPA strike later this year. Under U.S. labor law, union members can be sued to recover salaries paid them if they work during a sanctioned strike by the union.

Montana confirmed his resignation here Thursday where the 49ers have opened training camp. Wersching, who will not report until Saturday, confirmed his resignation at San Diego, saying he objected to the association's issues.

Montana has said in the past that he could not strike over NFLPA's percentage of gross receipts issue. He said Thursday his decision would depend on "final issues."

Hornung files suit

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Former college and pro football star Paul Hornung filed a $3 million lawsuit Friday against the National Collegiate Athletic Association, charging it has interfered with his right to make a living as a sports announcer.

The complaint arose from the NCAA's refusal to hire Hornung as an announcer for 19 college football games to be broadcast this season over cable outlets by station WTBS of Atlanta.

Little has bigger lead in LPGA

DENVER (AP) — Sally Little, confidently turning back bids from five challengers, retained the lead with a 3-under-par 69 Friday in the second round of the $200,000 Columbia Savings LPGA Classic.

Little, who started the day with a 2-stroke lead over Patty Sheehan, extended her margin to three shots with a 36-hole total of 7-under-par 137.

Sheehan, Beth Daniel, Shelley Hamlin and Lenore Muraoka were tied at 140. Sheehan had a steady 70, Daniel a 68 which included seven birdies, Hamlin a wildly erratic 69 in which she had an eagle but only six pars, and Muraoka a scrambling 69.

All four runners-up, along with Donna White, were 5-under at one point in the round.

Hamlin, winner of only one tournament in 11 years on the tour, got it to 6-under with the eagle-2 on the ninth hole, wresting the lead momentarily from Little. After birdies on the sixth, seventh and eighth holes, she holed out a 5-iron from 165 yards away on No.9. It gave her a 31 on the front side, but she bogeyed four holes on the back and slid down the leaderboard. "I came back to reality," she said.

White was 5-under through 15 holes, but suffered a disastrous double bogey on the par-3 16th hole, encountering sand trouble. Then she bogeyed 17 to finish with a 2-under 70 and a 142 total. Beverly Klass and Chris Johnson also were at that figure.

Meanwhile, Little, the tour's leading money winner this season with $199,010 and four victories, went about her work with the poise of one who is accustomed to setting the pace. After a bogey on the first hole, she birdied three of the next four holes, then 3-putted No. 8 for a bogey and a 35 on the front side that left her 5-under for the tournament.

A model of consistency on the second nine, she birdied 13 and 18, with the remainder pars.

"I played really well," said the native of South Africa who lives in Mulberry, Fla. "I was very consistent. I missed some good birdie opportunities, but I felt I made some good attempts at them. You're not going to make all of those putts."

Sheehan said she has "never been so disappointed with a 70 in my life. I hit the ball super, closer than I can remember without making a putt all day. I hit 16 greens and the longest putt I made was from 6 feet. That's pathetic."

Daniel said she was afflicted by a similar ailment. "I'm hitting it real good, but I'm not scoring like I should be, especially with as many birdies as I've had the last two rounds (12)," she said.

Hamlin said her round was a departure from her normal style, which she described as "consistent but dull. I occasionally flash into the lead, then flash out. I hope I can stay up there."

Odessa's Watkins conquers the Blues

DOUGLAS, Wyo. (AP) — Todd Watkins, a high school sophomore from Odessa, Texas, was matched against a bull called Moody Blues at the National High School Finals Rodeo here Friday and came away with the rodeo's top score of 86.

The score moved Watkins, 15, into the lead in bull riding for both the second go-round and average standings.

Watkins also holds the 1981 American Junior Rodeo Association all-around title and was the 1982 Texas High School Rodeo Association state bull-riding champion.

The points enabled Texas to maintain its lead on the team standings.

Rayel Call, a cowgirl from British Columbia, Canada, also continued to hold her lead in pole bending with the only 19-second run of the rodeo.

However, Janet Reece of Valentine, Neb., moved ahead of Call in the all-around race by placing fourth in the second go-round of the pole bending and second in the average. Reece also is second in the second go-round of barrel racing.

Bruce Kostelansky of Lethbridge, Alberta, moved into the lead in the boys all-around with his first-place ride in saddle bronc. His 70-point ride Friday morning moved him to the top in both the go-round and average results.

The 1,137 contestants entered in the rodeo are competing morning and night each day through Saturday night. The finals, for the top 20 contestants in each event, are scheduled Sunday.

Shin splints don't keep Garrison from winning

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Despite painful shin splints, Kelly Garrison won two more women's gymnastics medals Friday night, running her National Sports Festival total to four.

The 15-year-old high school sophomore from Altus, Okla., earned a silver medal in the uneven bars and picked up a bronze in the balance beam before an Indiana Convention Center sellout crowd of 6,400.

Women's gymnastics was one of nine Olympic sports in this 33-sport carnival that set Festival attendance records, according to announcement made during the women's gymnastics event. Details were not available.

Meanwhile, a disappointing turnout of 5,000 fans in 17,000-seat Market Square Arena watched the North blitz the West early en route to a 7-3 decision for the ice hockey gold medal.

Gregg Moore, a Minnesota-Duluth student from Edina, Minn., and Yale's Bob Brooke, from Acton, Mass., scored two goals apiece as the North blew into a 7-0 lead early in the third quarter.

Moore's five Festival goals tied a record shared previously by Mike Eruzione, the captain of America's gold medal-winning 1980 Olympic ice hockey squad, Neal Broten and Phil Verchota. They all had five goals in the 1979 event.

Friday afternoon, Ted Speers of Ann Arbor, Mich., scored two goals and had one assist to lead the South to a 7-3 victory over the East for the ice hockey bronze medal.

Garrison, who retired from gymnastics when she was 13 years old, had captured gold medals in the all-around and team compeition Wednesday night.

Only Sandy Dulaney, 17, from Buena Park, Calif., and Lydia Stephans, a 21-year-old speed skater from Northbrook, Ill., won more medals in this Olympic-style competition for 2,600 of America's athletes.

Dulaney tied a Festival record with six gold medals in women's roller speed skating. Stephans won four golds and one silver in ice speed skating. Steve Merrifeld, a men's speed skater from Canoga Park, Calif., won four golds.

Garrison's 19.05-point total in the uneven bars placed her second behind winner Lucy Wener, 15, of Memphis, Tenn., who collected the gold with 19.45 points.

Becky Rashoff, 16, of Walnut Creek, Calif., was the bronze medalist in the uneven bars with 19.0 points.

Garrison, both of her legs taped because of her month-old injury, had 18.70 points on the balance beam for the bronze medal.

In that event, Jessica Armstrong, 14, 4-foot-9 and 84 pounds, of Allentown, Pa., won the gold with 18.90 points while silver medalist Kerin Aderente, 14, of Edison, N.J., had 18.85 points.

In the women's vaulting, Barrie Muzbeck, 15, of Novi, Mich., was first with 19.00 points, Karli Urban, 14, of Omaha, Neb., second with 18.95 and Shari Mann, 17, of Potomac, Md., third at 18.70.

The women's floor exercise gold medal went to Kym Fishler, 17, of Center Valley, Pa., with 18.85 points, the silver to Kum Hillner, 16, of Reading Pa., with 18.80, and Lisa Zeiss, 17, of Cheektowaga, N.Y., and Aderente tied for third with 18.75. Each won bronze medals.

Eagles cut UT's Shankle

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia wide receiver Jerry Apodaca, who had a 53-yard touchdown pass play in the Eagles' scrimmage against the Baltimore Colts Wednesday, was among eight free agents released Friday by the NFL club.

The Eagles trimmed their preseason roster to 108 players by cutting Apodaca, a New Mexico product; running back Rick Beauvais of Pennsylvania; linebacker Doug Shankle from Texas; tight end Jack Schneider of Glassboro State, and four defensive backs.

The backs who were released are Jeff Krejci of Nebraska, Richard Carter of North Carolina State, David Zielinski of Lock Haven State and Joe Tumpich of Kansas.

Head Coach Dick Vermeil, getting his first look at the condition of 36 veterans who reported Thursday, said, "The condition of the football team, both physical and mental, is the best I've ever seen.

Boros, Whitworth chosen for Golf Hall of Fame

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Julius Boros and Kathy Whitworth have been selected to the World Golf Hall of Fame, officials said this week.

The inductees were selected by the Golf Writers Association of America. The addition of Boros and Whitworth bring to 42 the number of famous golfers honored by the writers' group since the hall of fame was established in 1974.

"We welcome these fine additions to the World Golf Hall of Fame," hall president Paul Bannock said Tuesday. "Their golf accomplishments are truly outstanding, and it is an honor to have them enshrined with the other great names of golf."

The induction ceremony Sept. 14 will be a homecoming for Boros, who spent several years as a professional at nearby Mid-Pines Club in Southern Pines.

A native of Fairfield, Conn., the 63-year-old Boros turned professional in 1950 and joined the tour the same year. During his career he won 18 tour events, including the U.S. Open in 1962 and 1963 and the PGA title in 1968.

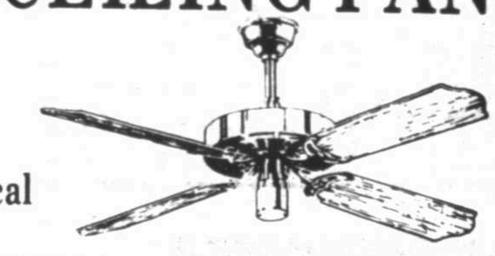

Now a resident of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and a frequent player in senior events, Boros has earned more than $1 million during his career.

Six of top 10 starters have shot at Talladega 500 victory

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Six of the top 10 starters in Sunday's 14th annual Talladega 500 are prime candidates to win if the stock car race maintains its tradition of never having the same victor twice.

During its first 13 runnings, the 500-mile race at the Alabama International Motor Speedway had a different driver take the checkered flag each time. And only two winners in the history of the race have started outside the top 10.

So, the six non-winners who qualified in the top 10 have a good chance of becoming champions, if the tradition holds. The six are pole-sitter Geoff Bodine, who turned the 2.66-mile trioval at 199.400 mph in his Pontiac; Cale Yarborough, who starts fourth; Terry Labonte, fifth; Ricky Rudd, sixth; Bill Elliott, seventh; and Morgan Shepherd, eighth.

Last year's winner, Ron Bouchard, is starting 19th. Other former winners and their positions in the 40-car field are: Darrell Waltrip, second; Buddy Baker, third; Bobby Allison, ninth; Dave Marcis, 10th; Richard Petty, 13th; Neil Bonnett, 15th; Lennie Pond, 29th; and Names Hylton, 38th.

The odds of someone starting farther back than 10th and winning the race are against most of the former winners. The only two drivers who didn't start in the top 10 and won the race were Hylton in 1972 and Dick Brooks in 1973. Ironically, both started 22nd—a spot won by teen-ager Bobby Hillin Jr., of Midland, Texas, during qualifying Friday for the second 20 cars in the field.

The first 20 spots were locked up Thursday. Friday's second round of qualifying was led by Connie Saylor, of Johnson City, Tenn., in an Oldsmobile. He turned a lap at 193.174 mph.

Following Hillin in the 22nd spot were: Buddy Arrington, Jimmy Means, Mark Martin, J.D. McDuffie, Jody Ridley, Delma Cowart, Pond, Lowell Cowell, Al Loquasto, Jim Hurlbert, Travis Tiller, Slick Johnson, Tommy Gale, Charlie Baker, Bobby Wawak, Hylton, Bob Slawinski, and Philip Duffie.

The $376,725 race gets the green flag at 1:30 p.m. CDT Sunday. But the racing action starts at 1 p.m. CDT Saturday with the 10th annual ARCA 200 Talladega Super Car Series race for late-model stock cars.

Hillin apprehensive on 190 mph tracks

Undaunted by the car failure at Pocono, Hillin went to Michigan on June 20, for the Gabriel 400. It was his best effort to date as he finished 16th in the 36-car field after qualifying 26th.

Pocono came a long time after Bobby first chose to race cars. His destiny seemed to be determined at the impressionable age of 11. "That's when I saw my father drive in a sprint car race," he said. "I decided right then I wanted to be a race car driver."

His last race was July 4th, in the Firecracker 400 on the famous "Big Daddy", Daytona. Previously, Hillin's fastest qualifying time was 157 mph at Michigan. But the Florida track called for higher speeds.

"I was anxious at Daytona," he said, "I thought I was going to be a little scared going 190 miles per hour." But after 400 miles of practice Bobby finally felt comfortable at the faster speeds.

HILLIN STARTED out at 170 mph his first day of practice, then creeped up until he hit 185 mph. "I was stuck at 185 mph for a full day of practice." he said. "Then I finally got over the hump."

But with the increase in speed came the fear of pushing ones self too far. "I hoped I hadn't gone over my limit." Hillin said.

His 188 mph qualifying speed was good enough to qualify in 24th position and beat out the likes of David Marcus, Benny Parsons and Neil Bonnet.

Hillin had come the realization that the big tracks were made for the higher speeds. "Going 190 on a big track is the same as going 140 on a small one," he said.

Hillin almost didn't finish the Firecracker 400 when a bolt came lose in his rear axle. "I spent 11 laps in the pits," he said. After checking the lap results at the end of the race Hillin and his crew figure he would have finished as high as 15th if the axle problem had not occurred.

HILLIN BEGAN his driving carreer at the Odessa Speed Bowl when he was 15. He raced there 1½ seasons and held the track record.

From there Bobby went to a North Carolina driving school. Although he learned what to do in a skid or crash, it wasn't what he had hoped for. "They taught us what to do in emergency situations but they didn't show us how to make a car go faster," he said.

Despite his disapointment the school provided Hillin with the opportunity to meet people in the world of racing. One of those persons was Harry Hyde, a top mechanic in the stock car circuit.

It was a relationship that jelled and Hyde is now Hillin's chief mechanic. "Hyde is an all-time great mechanic and I'm lucky to get him," Hillin said.

Luck and guts have played an important role in Hillin's climb to the top of the stock car world. Most drivers suffer years at their local track and are lucky to get on the Outlaw or ASA circuits, the proving grounds for most drivers.

Hillin admits his jump from a small local track to the Grand National circuit is an unusual route to take. "I went from the bottom to the top," he said.

After the high speed turns and deafening sounds of the racing world Bobby will return to Midland this year to participate in Texas No.1 sport, football. Bobby will be playing defensive tackle for the Midland High Bulldogs.

Johncock seeking fourth victory in last five races

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Suddenly, Gordon Johncock is the hottest thing in Indy-car racing.

Going into Sunday's Provimi Veal-Tony Bettenhausen 200 at Wisconsin State Fairgrounds Park, Johncock has won three of his last four races, including the Indianapolis 500 and the Norton Michigan 500, the first two rounds of the new Indy-car Triple Crown.

The other victory in that string came right here in June on Milwaukee's tough one-mile oval in the Rex Mays 150.

The 45-year-old resident of Coldwater, Mich., won the pole for that race with a qualifying record lap of 142.484 mph, then outran A.J. Foyt and Rick Mears to gain an easy victory.

This time Foyt won't be around. The 47-year-old Texan, a four-time Indy winner and still the biggest name in Indy-car racing, was banged up in a crash during the Michigan race two weeks ago.

Foyt, who was running with the leaders, was walloped into the wall by Indy-car rookie Hector Rebaque, who lost control after coming up fast on a stalled car. Foyt came out of the frightening wreck with a puncture wound in his left leg, a sore right ankle and an aching lower backbone — enough to keep him out of his backup racing March until the Pocono 500 on August 15.

"It's too bad A.J. won't be in Milwaukee," Johncock said. "But I've still got enough to think about with people like Mears and Mario (Patrick teammate Mario Andretti). Our team would like to keep things going so that we can go to Pocono with the same momentum."

MEARS, THE defending CART-PPG series national champion, is still a bit puzzled by the turnaround that this season has taken since he opened it by setting track qualifying records and winning consecutive races at Phoenix and Atlanta, then dominating qualifying at Indianapolis.

Johncock held on to beat Mears by just 1.6 seconds in the most dramatic Montrealors used any means possible to get around the city Friday during the first day of the second transit strike in the last six months. Pierre Mailloux hitchhikes in front of idle city buses while another man rides past on his bicycle in east-end Montreal.

Montreal transit drivers strike

MONTREAL (AP) — Montreal bus drivers and subway motormen went on strike Friday and voted to stay off their jobs until they get a new contract, forcing some 600,000 commuters to find others ways of getting around.

"There is no way we're going to listen to the hypocrisy of the (transit) commission again," Jim Flynn, vice president of the Independent Brotherhood of Bus Drivers and Metro Operators, told reporters after meeting with the membership. "We're not going back to work just to be told the same thing at the table all over again."

At the urging of union leaders, the 4,200 drivers walked out early Friday morning, one day after contract talks with Montreal Urban Community Transit Commission broke down after two weeks. Their contract expired Jan. 11.

Negotiations stalled on the commission's demand that it be allowed to hire about 400 part-time drivers to work rush hours. The commission says the move will save money, but the full-time drivers, who work long split shifts, fear losing overtime income.

Sunny, warm weather greeted commuters forced to use car pools, bicycles, walking shoes and hitchiking thumbs for the third time this year because of a transit shutdown. Traffic was relatively light, partly because many workers are on vacation this week.

Union leaders warned cheering members gathered at a sports arena that the strike could be "a long one," because of what they called the obsession of commission negotiators with the part-time issue.

The 33 major shutdowns the transit network has suffered since 1965 have lasted anywhere from a day to 38 days, with the average between 10 days and two weeks.

The commission has refused to continue talks until the part-time issue is settled, and the union has refused to submit the question to arbitration.

Only three items, including the type of sweaters drivers would wear, were settled before talks broke down, with such issues as salaries and scheduling still unresolved.

The drivers earn an average $20,000 a year and are seeking increases totaling 25 per cent over two years. The commission has offered 20 percent over three years.

There has been some speculation union might be ordered back to work under terms of a provincial law that assures essential services during labor conflicts if the public's health or safety is threatened.

But a spokesman for the Quebec Labor Department said the relevant sections of the new law have not yet been officially proclaimed.

Even if they were, the law requires the labor minister to act on the dispute before the union acquires the legal right to strike. The drivers have had the right to strike since May.

Relations between the city and its employees have been stormy for a while. In January, drivers, 2,200 maintenance and 400 office workers staged a six-day strike that was ended by provincial back-to-work legislation. Drivers in June went on a week-long campaign of alternating bus and subway strikes.

Woman encouraged in fight for adoption

NEW YORK (AP) — A 63-year-old widow battling to keep the foster child she weaned from heroin addiction said Friday she has filed adoption papers after an order forcing her to surrender the little girl was withdrawn.

Gussie Alexis' fight to adopt 2½-year-old Tyechia Reid "is being reviewed and things look favorable," said Anita Delaney of the city's special services for children division. "But no decision has been reached."

Mrs. Alexis, of Queens, received a letter last month from the private Graham-Windham adoption agency telling her she had to surrender Tyechia despite her wish to adopt the girl. The Queens woman said she was told she is too old to adopt a child.

But Mrs. Alexis asked the city's Human Resources Administration, which oversees the private foster care agencies, for an independent review, and she won a postponement on the surrender order until a hearing could be held.

That hearing, scheduled for Friday, was canceled when the order was withdrawn, said Jack Deacy, a spokesman for Human Resources.

"They dropped their removal order and Gussie Alexis dropped her request for an independent review," Deacy said. "I'm not saying she'll adopt the child, but I'd say it was encouraging."

If Graham-Windham, which contracts with the administration for foster care, rejects Mrs. Alexis' adoption application, the woman could again ask for an independent review, Deacy said.

Tyechia, born in St. Vincent's Hospital in Manhattan to a young heroin addict and turned over to Graham-Windham, was two weeks old when she came to Mrs. Alexis' care. Because an unborn child is nourished by the mother's blood supply, the baby was addicted to herion at birth.

"For the first year, she had the shakes, the trembles, all the time," said Mrs. Alexis, who gave the baby special care. "She hasn't had an attack since November."

Her lawyer, John Halpin, said Friday he plans to file a formal adoption petition in Queens Surrogate Court next week, the routine procedure followed when someone wants to adopt a child.

Mrs. Alexis said she filled out the adoption forms provided by Graham-Windham, but is not ready to celebrate.

"It's a long, drawn out process. We'll have to wait and see," she said.

Last month, Mrs. Alexis said she would fight to keep the child because "it's like giving up your own flesh and blood. We all have to get old, but she gets loving care, she has a loving family here."

Mrs. Alexis said she has been a foster mother for 13 years, and successfully adopted a 1-year-old girl, Nicole, 10 years ago. She said she has cared for "quite a few" foster children and surrendered all but Nicole. But the other foster children were returned to their families, she said, and Tyechia "has no one."

The mother, her adopted child and her foster child share a three-bedroom house in the East Elmhurst section of Queens with Mrs. Alexis' 25-year-old son, her niece, and her niece's husband. A city official who asked not to be identified said the other relatives — who could care for the child if Mrs. Alexis could not — might have contributed to the decision allowing Mrs. Alexis to apply for adoption.

Last month, a city official said Mrs. Alexis was considered too old because "the agency has to think of the child. What's going to happen in 10 years? Is she going to be alive? And if she is, can she care for a child who is 10 or 11 years old?"

Mrs. Alexis said she received dozens of letters from around the country from people who read news stories about her plight and "every one was in sympathy and wanted to know what they could do to help.

"God bless each and every one of them," she said. "I needed help, and all of you helped me."

Soviets announce tightened literary control

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist Party announced Friday it will tighten control over Soviet literary journals so they will "better educate" the masses about party goals such as correcting national food shortages.

A Central Committee decree on the front page of the party's daily newspaper, Pravda, ordered editors of literary magazines to publish more works with "socially significant themes" to counter "apolitical positions and the consumer mentality."

Western diplomats said the decree seemed aimed at expanding the role of government-sanctioned "socialist art" — art that serves a political goal — as a tool for publicizing party policy and ideology.

The decree charged that some Soviet journals have published literature distorting the party's view of Soviet history.

"One cannot tolerate the fact that some magazines have published works in which the events of our history, the socialist revolution and (agricultural) collectivization are depicted with serious deviation from life's truth," it said without specifying the publications.

Other journals, it contended, contained "prejudiced and superficial judgments about contemporary life" — apparently a reference to works that criticized some aspects of Soviet society.

Special efforts also must be made to publicize the national program aimed at correcting the nation's food shortages, the decree asserted. The program was announced by Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev at a party Central Committee meeting in May.

Soviet newspapers and television have stressed the need for a mass popular movement to guarantee success for the food program, which calls for a 5-to-6 percent increase in capital investment in agriculture through 1990 to solve what Brezhnev and others have called the "food problem."

Meat and dairy products were rationed in most of the Soviet Union last winter, and fruits and vegetables are perennially in short supply in northern regions.

There are about a dozen major literary magazines published in the Soviet Union, and many more at regional levels. Although all are already strictly controlled, some occasionally have managed to slip an article or two past the Communist Party censors.

In one example, the Leningrad journal "Aurora" published a satirical article in an issue commemorating Brezhnev's 75th birthday.

"Jubilee Speech," by author Victor Golyavkin, predicted the impending death of a "wonderful writer." Soviet and Western observers interpreted the speech as a crack at the ailing Brezhnev, who won the Lenin prize for literature for his autobiography.

"It is difficult to imagine that this wonderful writer is alive," the satire said. "It is hard to believe he walks the same streets we do. He seems to be dead. For he has written so many books!"

Soviet sources said Golyavkin was reprimanded and at least one senior "Aurora" editor was fired for publishing the unusual satire.

The decree, which stressed that Soviet writers should "foster confidence in the socialist system," singled out Brezhnev's memoirs as an "inspiring example for our literature." The autobiography recounts Brezhnev's rise from a worker's family to the top job in the party hierarchy.

Giving Soviets grain wouldn't hurt reserves

WASHINGTON (AP) — For all the international furor and political handwringing over President Reagan's decision to extend grain sales to the Soviet Union for another year, the action would barely dent America's huge inventories.

Last year's record harvests and indications of another bumper crop in 1982 point to bulging U.S. granaries at least for another season and possibly for several years hence.

According to the latest Agriculture Department projections, the total U.S. grain supply — counting this year's harvests plus inventories carried over from previous crops — will be about 407 million metric tons in 1982-83, compared to 393.6 million in 1981-82.

Americans themselves will consume less than half that. The Soviets, meanwhile, are said by the Agriculture Department to need 46 million metric tons of grain from outside nations in the coming year — and they're certain to stick with regular suppliers like Argentina and Canada for a healty chunk of that, even if they should top a 1982 order from the United States that is expected to exceed a record 17 million metric tons.

The projected U.S. harvest includes 312 million metric tons of wheat, corn, sorghum, oats, barley and rice, and a carryover of nearly 95 million tons from previous harvests.

A metric ton, the standard in world trade, is about 2,205 pounds and varies by commodity when translated into bushels. A ton of wheat, for example, is equivalent to about 36.7 bushels. A ton of corn is 39.4 bushels.

Knowing ropes can aid chances of college grants

By The Associated Press

Cutbacks in federal aid to college students mean more of a scramble than ever for the dollars that are left and you have a better chance of getting your fair share of help if you know how to apply.

There are five basic aid programs for the 1982-83 academic year, including grants which do not have to be repaid and loans which do. (Note: The government usually defines the academic year as running from July 1 to June 30 — not from the beginning of the fall semester to the end of the spring semester.)

YOU SHOULD apply for help as early as possible, but it is still not too late to seek aid for the coming semester. Some awards are even retroactive; you can be reimbursed for money you have spent.

There are general eligibility guidelines for all the programs. As a rule, you are eligible for aid if:

—You are enrolled at least half-time as a regular student in an eligible program at one of the more than 7,000 colleges, vocational or technical schools or hospital schools of nursing that take part in Department of Education financial aid programs.

—You are a U.S. citizen or an eligible non-citizen. An eligible non-citizen includes someone who is a U.S. national, but is not a citizen; a U.S. permanent resident who has an Alien Registration Receipt Card; or a permanent resident of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands or the Northern Mariana Islands.

—You can show that you have a need for help. The definition of need varies according to the program involved, your family's financial picture and the school you are attending. Need is generally defined as the difference between the amount your education will cost and the amount your family can reasonably be expected to contribute.

THE DEPARTMENT of Education has a 16-page pamphlet explaining the aid programs available and the steps you must take to qualify. Copies are available, at no charge, from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 512K, Pueblo, Colo., 81009. Ask for: "The Student Guide: Five Federal Financial Aid Programs 1982-83."

To apply for help, you will have to fill out one of several standard forms, including the U.S. Department of Education's Application for Federal Student Aid, known as AFSA; the College Scholarship Service's Financial Aid Form, called FAF; and the American College Testing Program's Family Financial Statement, dubbed FFS.

If you use any of the forms except the government's AFSA, you will have to check a separate box to make sure that the appropriate information is sent to the Department of Education. The government form is free; you will have to pay a processing fee for most of the other forms. To find out which is best for you, contact the financial aid officer at the school you are planning to attend.

If you are seeking aid for the 1982-83 academic year, you must submit your federal student aid application in time for it to be received by March 15, 1983 at the latest.

About four to six weeks after you apply for federal student aid, you should receive a Student Aid Report, or SAR. This report will show you whether you are eligible for a basic Pell Grant. (The Pell Grant program is the largest of the federal student aid programs; awards generally are closely linked to income.) The financial aid officer at your college also may use the SAR to decide whether you are eligible for other types of help, including work-study and loan programs.

Aid from the federal government does not automatically continue from one year to the next, even if you attend the same school. You must reapply every year. If you transfer from one school to the other, you must have your old school send a financial aid transcript to your new school. If you have a Pell Grant, you must get a duplicate copy of your Student Aid Report to submit to the new school's financial aid administrator.

Economic gauge flat in June, officials say

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main economic forecasting gauge stayed flat in June, officials said Friday in a report reinforcing the lukewarm recovery predictions of most government and private analysts.

After 11 straight monthly declines, the Commerce Department's Index of Leading Indicators had risen in April and May, encouraging hopes of recovery from the long 1981-82 recession.

Economists pointed to some good signs in the June index — especially a big drop in claims for jobless benefits — but the overall figures caused no celebrations or talk of booming recovery.

"The initial pace of the recovery seems likely to be moderate," Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said.

Nonetheless, the Reagan administration predicted in a separate report Friday that there will be a "significant economic recovery" this year with both unemployment and interest rates declining.

"The recession appears to have bottomed out, and the economy is beginning to display the early signs of improvement that are characteristic of the turning zone of recovery," the administration said in a mid-year budget review.

The review said unemployment "is expected to decline from its current rate of about 9.5 percent to 8 percent" by the end of next year. It predicted federal deficits of nearly $109 billion for this fiscal year ending Sept. 30 and $115 billion for fiscal 1983.

Privately, some senior administration officials conceded that the mid-year report, an annual requirement of Congress, was overly optimistic. The called it more of a political exercise than an economic one.

In its June budget resolution, Congress projected a 1983 deficit of $104 billion, but the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office this week estimated that the likely red ink will be $141 billion to $151 billion in 1983, and up to $160 billion a year in both 1984 and 1985.

The administration budget review said the year-long recession will give way to a second-half recovery with the economy growing at a 4.5 percent annual rate.

Otto Eckstein, chairman of Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass., said the the Commerce Department's June index of leading indicators "tells you the economy is no longer sinking and is poised for recovery."

But he also said the recovery, depending in the short run on Americans' willingness to quickly spend their tax-cut money, will not be robust.

The leading indicators report showed just three of 10 separate economic categories improving in June, but those three balanced the others, according to Commerce economists who assign various weights to index components.

Both Baldrige and Eckstein pointed to the drop in initial claims for unemployment benefits as an especially encouraging development.

Gandhi steers middle path, avoids tension

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a redeclaration of India's non-aligned status, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi said Friday her country will continue to steer a middle course between the Soviet Union and the United States to avoid being "squashed between two giants."

Mrs. Gandhi told the National Press Club that India is trying to find new sources of military hardware previously obtained primarily from the Soviet Union but has no plans to buy arms from the United States.

India is "really not buying at the monment," she said. The 64-year-old Indian prime minister had said before her arrival here that she was not carrying a shopping list for military hardware.

The State Department said Friday that the U.S. government "is prepared to approve sales of military equipment to India to meet its legitimate defensive needs."

Carolyn Johnson, a department spokeswoman, said the Reagan administration has asked Congress for authorization to sell component parts from U.S. arsenals to private American firms for assembly and private commercial sale of military equipment "to India and other governments."

And earlier this year, she said, an American company was issued a license to demonstrate howitzers to the Indian government "for a possible sale."

It also was announced earlier that the Northrop Aviation Corp. has been granted permission to explore the possibility with India of co-production of the F-5G fighter.

Mrs. Gandhi stressed that India does not accept military aid from any country but buys what it needs or produces it itself.

But once again Friday, she sharply criticized the U.S. decision to priovide $3 billion in military hardware to Pakistan with whom India has fought three wars in 30 years.

U.S. officials have said the military equipment is being provided to Pakistant to offset the perceived threat of the 100,000-man Soviet occupation force in Afghanistan.

"Against whom is Pakistan going to use this hardware?" Mrs. Gandhi said. "They have told the Soviets they are not going to use it against them. So who else is going to be the target?"

Asked which way India "tilts," in world affairs, she replied: "I think we stand upright."

Peruvian mummy unwrapped at fair

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Careful study of the 700-year-old mummy of a Peruvian child that was unwrapped at the World's Fair may yield new insights into pre-Incan civilization, scientists said Friday.

Despite protests from an American Indian group, a team of 13 white-robed scientists opened the large funeral bundle Thursday night and showed an amphitheater audience of about 800 people the skeletal remains of the 2½-year-old child.

The child, wrapped with hundreds of yards of wool and wads of cotton, had a jewel affixed to his forehead and a slingshot around his head. Also found in the bundle was a silver ingot, two small whistles, sea shells, a mother-of-pearl necklace and several small carved figures, including one of a two-headed snake.

Before the mummy was unwrapped, Peruvian officials speculated that it contained the remains of an Incan chieftain because X-rays had revealed the valuable objects.

"This may tell us that this was the child of a family that was fairly affluent at that time," said Dr. William Bass, head of the University of Tennesseee's anthropology department, who helped with the unwrapping. "That little child was well thought of."

The mummy was found a few months ago in a dig near Lima, and Peruvian officials agreed to stage the opening in conjunction with the fair.

Dr. Arturo Jimenez, a Peruvian archaeologist who directed the unwrapping, said the child probably lived between 1200 and 1400 A.D. near what is now Lima, Peru's capital city. That date would place it before the Incan Empire, which began about 1476 and ended soon after the Spanish conquistador Francisco Pizarro invaded Peru in 1531.

He said shells found in the bundle weren't native to Peru, and must have been brought from Panama or Ecuador.

Swedish navy hunts foreign submarine

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Swedish navy and coast guard patrols hunted Friday for a foreign submarine reported lurking in the waters 70 miles north of Stockholm, the Defense Staff said.

It was Sweden's second search for intruder submarines in as many days. Foreign vessels violated Swedish territorial waters a dozen times last year, according to Defense Staff statistics.

Sweden's defense chief-of-staff, Vice Adm. Bengt Schuback, was quoted Friday as saying the military regards the recent incidents as serious.

He told the Stockholm daily newspaper Svenska Dagbladet in an interview that "the theory of a foreign power preparing military operations against Sweden" is growing stronger among Defense Staff members.

"Guesses have grown into relatively strong convictions. The regularity of the violations contributes to strengthen this theory," he said.

The state radio said the latest hunt was launched after authorities received three separate reports of "a sea-moving object resembling a submarine periscope" off the Oeregrund archipelago.

Authorities abandoned a search north of Stockholm on Thursday afternoon after police said three youngsters who reported spotting two submarine conning towers just north of Furusund on the east coast apparently had seen two buoys.

Last month, navy vessels and helicopters used depth charges to chase off two unidentified foreign submarines inside Swedish territorial waters along the east coast.

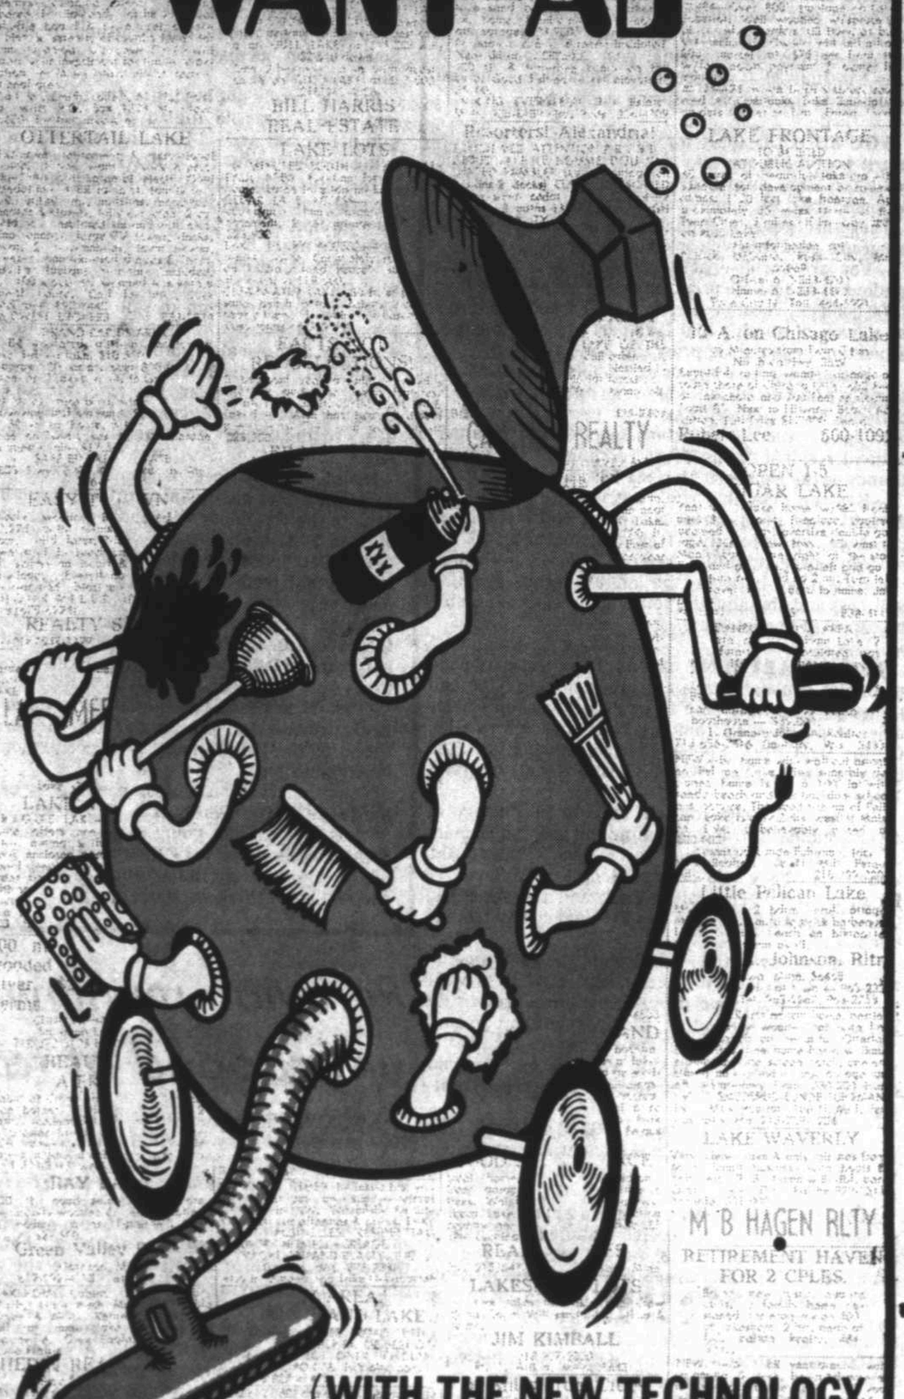

"Certain nations are willing to take the risk of carrying out military operations within other nations' territory and are quite ready to take on the political drawbacks of detection," Schuback was quoted as saying Friday.

He cited the most serious intrusion as an example — that of a Soviet Whiskey-class sub that ran aground last Oct. 27 in a restricted military area well inside Swedish territorial waters in the southern Baltic Sea.

The sub, which possibly was nuclear-armed, was stranded on rocks just off Sweden's main Baltic defense base for 10 days, until Swedish vessels towed it out to international waters.

BMW OFFERS THE ONLY LOGICAL REASON FOR NOT BUYING A BMW.

The joys of driving a BMW 320i are well documented.

But while these joys are the exclusive province of 320i drivers, they are not limited to 320i owners.

You can lease a 320i. Along with the usual tax and business advantages, you'll enjoy the emotional advantages of driving "the sort of car enthusiasts turn into legend" (Car and Driver).

If you're interested in leasing a car that will please the driver in you as well as the accountant in you, contact us and we'll explain it in detail.

THE ULTIMATE DRIVING MACHINE.

When you've arrived... Meadowpark

A planned unit development of exquisite patio garden homes. Each home is custom designed for the individual lot and is never duplicated.

Meadowpark residents will enjoy a great deal of room and privacy because of the very low density of the development. The cluster arrangement of Meadowpark restricts traffic flow on residential streets. On-Street parking is prohibited, so that streets become areas for family activities.

Recreation facilities include park area, playgrounds, tennis courts and swimming pool with cabana, bath house and deck area.
