Reagan might extend life of SALT II treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although President Reagan says he might decide to violate the SALT II arms control treaty later this year, administration officials said Friday there is a chance the unratified accord will be extended beyond its scheduled expiration in December.

The officials said the decision depends in large part on Soviet willingness to negotiate reasonably when a new round of arms talks begins in Geneva on March 12.

"It has to do with the Soviet attitude in Geneva," said one arms control expert at the State Department. "Surely, if the Soviets are not forthcoming in the Geneva negotiations, if they show no indication of flexibility and compromise, we would be...fools to hold to something they are not showing any respect for."

But this official and others said if the Soviets do show a willingness to negotiate seriously, and if Moscow doesn't take any new actions of its own that would violate the accord, the administration might "continue its no-undercut policy" toward SALT II.

condition they not be identified, also said Reagan misspoke in declaring at his news conference Thursday night that the Soviets had violated the SALT II treaty by converting ballistic-missile firing submarines into cruise-missile firing submarines to circumvent treaty limits on ballistic missiles.

The officials said the conversion was a violation of the "spirit" of the agreement, but not technically a violation. Cruise missiles are not covered by the SALT accords.

Ed Djerejian, the State Department's deputy spokesman, said "the president was using this as an example of how the Soviets build up their forces in spite of existing agreements."

Reagan said at his news conference he might have to join Moscow "in violating" the SALT II agreement when a new Trident-missile firing submarine, the USS Alaska, begins maneuvers in October. It could cause the United States to go over the 1,200 limit on multi-warhead strategic missiles, which is fixed by SALT II.

It's tough time for Texas millionaires, economist says

DALLAS (AP) — Legend has it that H.L. Hunt, the Texas oil wildcat who left his children one of the nation's great fortunes, was so frugal he took his lunch to work in a brown paper bag.

Frugality may again be coming in vogue at Hunt headquarters.

The high-stakes wheeling and dealings of Hunt's heirs appears to be catching up to this generation.

Some family members have a cash crunch, and observers say one of America's richest families may not be as wealthy as it was thought.

Two other famous Texas multimillionaires, T. Cullen Davis and Clint Murchison Jr., found themselves in bankruptcy court this week — far from penniless, but facing the demands of creditors.

"It seems to be a tough time for Texas millionaires, or rather a tough time for Texas billionaires," said William E. Gibson, chief economist at RepublicBank Corp. here.

"The downturn in energy business may have been the basic factor, plus at the same time, these people got into real estate projects that seem to have downturned as well," Gibson said Friday.

The Hunt family was stung earlier this month by a government order to pay more than $200 million in back taxes — an order the family contests.

Then on Wednesday, Hunt International Resources Inc., a major holding company of brothers Nelson Bunker Hunt and W. Herbert Hunt, told the Securities and Exchange Commission it is in default on $295 million and is unlikely to be able to repay it all.

Fired economics professor files suit against MC officials

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A Midland College economics professor, who was fired for using profanity in the classroom, filed suit Friday against MC officials in Federal District Court.

The suit claims MC trustees and administrators violated Dr. Jay Dee Martin's constitutional rights to due process and freedom of speech when they terminated his contract in September 1984.

The civil suit asks that the court award Martin an unspecified amount in regular and exemplary damages. It also requests that the court grant an injunction to reinstate Martin to his former faculty position at the college pending a final hearing.

"We're not in it (the suit) for the money, we're in it for the principle of the thing and also for my reputation," Martin said.

Martin, who taught at MC for eight years, is fighting the termination claiming the punishment was too severe for what he termed a "misdemeanor."

Administrative action against Martin stems back to a June 1983 memo — issued by Dr. Don Hunt — warning Martin that his continued use of profanity in the classroom would result in disciplinary action. The memo — which was the result of a student complaint — read, in part, "Should the use of profanity in your instruction continue, disciplinary action requiring suspension, termination, or both will be recommended."

Last year, two students filed a second complaint with the school administration complaining of Martin's use of the words "bullshit" and "sucks" during a June 19 economics class. Martin was terminated as the result of that second complaint.

In September 1984, Martin appealed the administrative decision to the college board of trustees, who — following a public hearing — voted unanimously to uphold the termination.

Martin contends in the suit that his "reputation in the academic community has been severely, if not irreparably, damaged" as the result of the termination. He also claims he "is presently unemployed despite diligent and persistent efforts to obtain employment.

Kenneth A. Peeler, president of the MC Board of Trustees, said "Midland College made its position clear when Dr. Jay Dee Martin was afforded all due process and an open hearing before the board of trustees regarding the decision to terminate his contract."

Ex-president of failed bank indicted again

From Staff Reports

The former president of the failed Metro Bank on Friday again was indicted by a federal grand jury in Midland for embezzling and misapplying bank funds.

This time, the banker, John Edward "Eddie" Thomas Jr., was charged with pilfering and misapplying more than $550,000 and making false entries on almost $1 million in 1981, 1982 and 1983.

Thomas, 42, of Odessa, was charged under a 14-count indictment. A month ago, he was indicted for embezzling more than $750,000 of the bank's money.

In addition, he was charged with three additional counts of misapplying approximately $100,000 in Metro Bank funds for the operation of Santa Fe Crossing, a corporation which operated the Santa Fe Crossing Restaurant and Saloon in Odessa, according to Ronald A. Hoverson, special agent in charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation's El Paso Division.

The cafe later became Cafe Milan.

Hoverson said Thomas, president of Metro Bank at Midland Regional Airport from its inception in 1978 until he resigned on July 14, 1983, could be sentenced up to 70 years in prison and fined up to $70,000 should he be convicted of the charges. The bank failed on July 29, 1983.

Following the earlier indictment, Thomas was arrested by FBI agents on Jan. 22 in Arlington, was released under a personal recognizance bond and pleaded "not guilty" at his arraignment in federal court in Midland.

Agency refuses to OK McMullen County as waste disposal site

AUSTIN (AP) — A state agency board searching for a place to dump low-level nuclear waste refused Friday to approve a "100 percent" staff recommendation that the disposal site be located in McMullen County in South Texas.

Instead, the board of the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority voted 6-0 to hold up site selection and look for state-owned lands that might be suitable for a nuclear dump.

The board on another 6-0 vote authorized spending up to $200,000 from the authority's current budget to hire an engineering firm to evaluate state lands for a possible disposal site.

Gov. Mark White, who has appointed four of the six board members, and legislators apparently influenced the board's decision. Chairman John Simek said he had visited recently with White, who expressed interest in looking for a site on state lands and also at using a disposal method other than bury material in the ground.

The authority staff narrowed its 1½-year search to a 365-acre site in

McMullen County and a 465-acre site in Dimmit County, also in South Texas, then designated the McMullen County site Friday as the "most suitable."

The staff search had concentrated on a place to bury low-level nuclear wastes, which include gloves, clothing, syringes and paper that have come into contact with radioactive materials.

After large portions of the state were eliminated for various reasons, the search started with 35 million square miles in 105 of Texas' 254 counties. On Friday, authority general manager Rick Jacobi said the staff was "100 percent" behind the McMullen County site.

Simek told of his meeting with the governor, and also read a letter from White to the General Land Office and the University of Texas System asking them to assist the authority in inspecting state lands. The governor also said he was urging the authority to delay its site selection.

White's letter noted pending legislative proposals, including a measure by Rep. Hugo Berlianga, D-Corpus Christi, calling for a moratorium on licensing a nuclear disposal site. Berlianga's bill also provides for examining state lands and new disposal techniques.

Berlianga told the board his bill would be debated early next week on the House floor.

Rep. Ted Roberts, R-Corpus Christi, said the McMullen County site is 12 miles from the headwaters of the Choke Canyon reservoir, which supplies water for 21 communities and 500,000 people.

Corpus Christi Mayor Luther Jones said, "We believe there is a better solution," and that would be to delay the site selection.

Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, testified, "It seems to me we're on a course leading directly to shallow land burial, which I am opposed to."

Board member William Fisher of the University of Texas asked Shaw, "Is the agency doing its best to follow the act you (the Legislature) created for them?" Shaw replied, "In all fairness, I would say so."

MIDLAND
CENTENNIAL 1885-1985

WEATHER SUMMARY

The National Weather Service forecasts snow for today for parts of Montana, the Dakotas, New Mexico, Texas and Colorado, and rain for parts of Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska and Louisiana.

Cold front brings cooler cooler temperatures to area

From Staff and Wire Reports

A cold front, which caused cooler temperatures and a brief thunderstorm Friday evening will be over the area during the weekend, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

The skies will be partly cloudy today with a high in the low 60s and winds from the north at 10 to 15 mph. Tonight's low will be in the low 30s with continued cloudy skies.

Sunday will be mostly cloudy with highs in the mid-50s.

Friday's high was 74 degrees, much cooler than the record high of 86 degrees set in 1977. The low Friday was 60 degrees as compared to 14 degrees in 1966.

STATE

Late afternoon showers and heavy thunderstorms put the western two-thirds of North Texas under a flood watch Friday and doused East Texas with rain.

The strongest thunderstorm activity was located in a line from west of Wichita Falls to near San Angelo Friday evening, the National Weather Service reported.

Elsewhere, scattered showers and light rain fell over portions of East Texas, the lower Rio Grande Valley and South Central Texas.

Moisture-laden air streaming northward from the Gulf brought the rain and generally cloudy skies across the state.

Winds shifted to the west and southwest in the Trans Pecos region at speeds of 15 to 25 mph, with strong southeasterly winds up to 40 mph reported along the coast.

Despite cloudy skies, temperatures climbed into the low to mid-70s across much of Texas. El Paso reported the coolest afternoon temperature of 53 degrees, and Brownsville the warmest at 79.

The flash flood watch over most of North Texas was to remain in effect overnight, with rain and thunderstorms continuing through today. Highs on today from the mid-60s to the mid-70s, with lows tonight in the 40s and 50s. Cooler temperatures expected Sunday, dropping as low as the mid-50s.

In West Texas, scattered showers and thunderstorms were also expected through today. Rain mixed with snow is possible in northern sections. Cooler temperatures today and Sunday, dropping to the mid-40s in the Panhandle during the day and to near 30 at night.

Rain will continue in South Texas, with today and Sunday temperatures in the upper 60s in extreme South Texas and overnight lows in the lower 40s.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms across the nation's midsection swelled rivers and threatened flooding in the central and southern Plains and in the Mississippi Valley on Friday, while coastal areas basked in spring-like temperatures.

Heavy rains already caused flash flooding in Oklahoma City and street floods were reported in the Oklahoma communities of Norman and Shawnee and along Deer Creek.

Flash flood watches were posted for parts of Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas, and Oklahoma, and flooding was likely along 10 Michigan rivers. Rains combined with melting snow prompted a flood watch in western New York state through Saturday.

Green Angels offer help on highways

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Vacation scenario: This summer, you and the family are driving on a desolate stretch of Highway 53 in Mexico. It's nearing high noon and the sun is burning relentlessly.

Suddenly a fan belt snaps and your car overheats. Not a soul to be seen for miles, except for a curious green truck approaching. Written on the truck are the words "Free Service."

That's not a midsummer mirage — Mexico's Green Angels have helped many American tourists on the highways of that country. The Mexican government operates the Green Angels, a service designed especially for tourists in trouble.

"It was formed with the spirit of friendship, because Mexico and the United States are neighbors," said Trinidad Chavez, who has been a Green Angel for nearly 25 years. Chavez and other representatives of the organization are touring the state in anticipation of this year's tourist season.

American travel to Mexico has suffered after some tourists returned with all sorts of horror stories and tales of trouble, from being hopelessly lost without a guide or translator to being waylaid by gun-toting bandits. By sending Green Angels representatives into the United States before tourist season, the Mexican government hopes to show the country is still a safe place for tourists.

"We want people, not just Americans, to feel at home in Mexico," said Chavez.

The Green Angels operate 223 radio-equipped trucks throughout Mexico. The trucks, which patrol the nation's roadways during daylight driving hours, are equipped with tools and spare parts to make emergency repairs on tourists' automobiles. Over 1,000 federal employees man the Green Angels' trucks and 42 radio communications outposts.

"The Angels are trained to make repairs, but we are also educated in first aid," said Chavez. "We travel all day and when we see a car in distress, we offer help. Sometimes they try to offer a tip, but we explain to them that we are a free service."

This year, the Angels will be on call 24 hours a day through a special hotline telephone number. "The hotline will make it possible to get help if you are lost or stranded in the middle of the night, no matter where you are," Chavez said. "We hope to expand soon to have trucks patrolling around the clock. But there are 48,000 kilometers of roads in Mexico — that would be a big job."

The hotline telephone number is (51) 250-01-23. Telephone operators can assist in dialing the number.

The Green Angels service is part of an improved tourist assistance program, initiated by Mexico's newly-created Ministry of Tourism. Other elements of the program include new measures to improve tourist services by evaluating hotels, restaurants, vehicle parks and camp areas and setting standards of quality for these services to follow. The program also expands information and tourist centers in major Mexican cities.

Chavez is a former Presidential guard who joined the Green Angels when the group was started in 1960 with only 10 trucks and 40 drivers.

He says he has seen many tourists who were extremely grateful for the Angels' help.

He offers these tips for traveling in Mexico this summer: "You must make a plan of your trip. That means you must obtain a map and be sure to stay on the main roads. If your automobile breaks down, raise the hood."

Budget freeze hinders funding of foster home

WASHINGTON (AP) — Clara Hale, the founder of a New York City foster home for children whose mothers are drug addicts, says she sees no irony in President Reagan praising her efforts while proposing to cap the federal program that helps support her work.

Mrs. Hale, 79, was called "an American hero" by Reagan in his State of the Union speech last week as she sat in the gallery of the Capitol near Nancy Reagan.

"I can't say if I feel anything," she said in a telephone interview Wednesday from Hale House in New York's Harlem section. "I don't know what he (Reagan) is doing. I only know what I'm doing."

The president's proposed 1986 budget for the Health and Human Services program that pays for foster care would be the same $485.4 million that is projected to be spent this year.

Foster care was not singled out for cutting, federal officials say.

"We've got a $200 billion deficit," said Ed Dale, spokesman for the White House Office of Management and Budget. "This program, like a lot of other social programs, is not slated for a reduction, but a freeze."

Marlin Fitzwater, a White House spokesman, added, "These are programs that have worked, but with that kind of a deficit, you have to make some decisions about what government can do."

Federal funds for foster care go to all 50 states, where the money is combined with state and local outlays for local programs. If a cap were approved by Congress, states could diminish the effects of a shortfall by reallocating the federal money that is available.

The president's 1986 budget proposes $40 billion in domestic spending cuts and $30 billion in increased military spending.

Federal funds for Hale House come from Title 4E of the Social Security Act, according to Hal Eldlin, spokesman for the HHS human development services division, which administers the program.

The HHS covers about a third of Hale House's costs to care for about a dozen infants and small children, said Jack Deacy, a spokesman for New York City's Human Resources Administration.

Most of the children are returned to their mothers after they, too, have undergone rehabilitation. Of approximately 500 children who have passed through Hale House, only a handful have been placed in foster homes.

"The mothers take them and are very glad to have them," Mrs. Hale said.

The public share — by far the largest — of Hale House's budget this year is about $189,000, of which the federal portion is approximately $64,000, Deacy said.

Private donations often are clothes or supplies, said Mrs. Hale, who started the center in her home in 1969 when she took in the infant child of a young woman who was a drug addict.

She would like to expand Hale House by moving to a larger home nearby, but lack of money is a problem.

"We don't have any," she said. The house she has in mind would allow her to take in "maybe 50" infants and children.

The federal foster care program has grown sharply since it was taken over by HHS in 1982, according to Silvia Wise, an HHS budget analyst. Program costs in 1984 were about $440.5 million, she said.

About 100,000 children are supported by the federal money.

If expenses at Hale House go up and the federal share remains the same, "someone at the agency (Human Resources Administration) then has to determine whether this is worth spending more money on," said Suzanne Trazoff, an assistant to Deacy.

The answer almost certainly would be affirmative, she said.

Tourists disrupt solitude of monks, nuns in Sinai

By DALIA BALIGH

ST. CATHERINE'S MONASTERY, Egypt (AP) — At the peak of one of the highest mountains in the biblical land of the Sinai, overlooking this 1,450-year-old monastery, a Greek Orthodox monk has lived in solitude for 20 years in a cave.

The only evidence he is there, praying and meditating in the quiet beauty of the desert peninsula, is a white cross on the mountaintop. His 17 Christian brothers at St. Catherine's Monastery never see him except when he descends the steep granite slope every few months for supplies.

He is the only one of them not disturbed by the tourists coming here by the thousands since the Israelis built an airstrip nearby and the Egyptians laid down a road to the monastery's door.

When the monk first went up to live in his cave, the nearest paved road ran along the Red Sea coast about 60 miles away.

The Israelis put down the airstrip after they seized the Sinai in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. The Egyptians paved the road after the Israelis withdrew.

So now St. Catherine's is a tourist site.

Tens of thousands from across the world annually roam through the monastery's 6th-century chapel and its surrounding compound.

The tourists are attracted by a handful of historic monasteries and nunneries scattered around the Sinai's craggy mountains and deep valleys, close to Mount Sinai where the Bible says God handed Moses the 10 Commandments.

From the 3rd century, Christian monks and nuns fled religious persecution and came to the Sinai.

St. Catherine's Monastery was built in 532 by the Byzantine Emperor Justinian. To keep out marauding nomads, the only means of entry was in a basket lowered down its wall.

It kept marauders out but it has not held back the 20th-century intruders, who opt for a more conventional entrance, a door beside the paved parking lot.

During religious seasons, as many as 1,000 tourists throng to St. Catherine's in a day. Generally, the number is in the low hundreds.

The monks put up with the interruption for a very worldly reason — money. Other than tourism, the monastery's only income comes from an annual stipend from the Culture Ministry of Greece, contributions from pilgrims and revenue from its 150-bed guest hostel.

Nevertheless, the brothers don't like it.

"If I wanted this, I would go to the Hilton and be a receptionist," said one monk. Like others interviewed, he would talk to a reporter only on condition that his name not be used.

Tourists are allowed to walk through the narrow winding paths of the monastery and compound. Inside the chapel, built in 1934 with stones of the original church, a marble sarcophagus holds the remains of St. Catherine.

The monastery library, which according to the monks is second in importance only to that of the Vatican, includes 3,000 items in Greek, Arabic, Syriac, Georgian, Armenian, Coptic, Ethiopian and Slavonic. Like the icons and mosaics, the library manuscripts have been collected from all over the world.

"We are 17, but we need 17 for the library duties alone," said another monk. "Nobody wants to come here. It's hard to live in the desert."

St. Catherine lived in the early 4th century in the ancient Egyptian port of Alexandria, then under control of the Romans.

According to the monastery's guide book Emperor Maximianus ordered her executed because she had converted to Christianity. The method of execution was to be by wheel with sharp-edged iron spikes. But the guidebook, published by the Egyptian Information Service, adds that "she was snatched by an invisible hand before the wheel killed her and her torturers were killed in her place."

The book says she finally was beheaded.

Slidell post office moves residence

SLIDELL, Texas (AP) — After 20 years behind bars, Velma Pruett is getting out.

The Slidell postmistress is moving her stamps, her safe and all the other accoutrements of handling the U.S. mail from the picturesque, but drafty old building she's occupied her entire career to a new home next door. But the barred window, from which she's watched the townspeople retrieve a parcel of parcels, letters and cards, will remain.

Mrs. Pruett's new workplace has a large, open window onto the lobby that closes and locks after hours. She'll still be able to be a part of the social scene that takes place daily.

"I get the mail in here by 9:30 in the morning," she said. "This is the big event of the day. Sometimes there are 15 to 20 people in here at one time while I'm trying to put up my mail. You hear all kinds of things. Sometimes you hear things you don't want to know."

Mrs. Pruett became postmistress of this northwest Denton County town of about 150 people 20 years ago. She and three other women applied for the job. It doesn't pay enough to support a family, she said. But it was just right for the mother of four children; she could leave after getting the kids off to school and get home about the same time they did. And she was handy in case anyone needed her.

Some things about the job weren't so handy, she said. For instance, the tiny two-room building she is leaving doesn't have a bathroom. And when the winds blows, the papers on the wall move in the breeze, she said.

"It's pretty uncomfortable. My air conditioner works in the winter, too. The wind comes in all around it."

Nothing much out-of-the-ordinary happens in the drowsy little village. The post office was burgled once, Mrs. Pruett recalls, but the thieves weren't able to get into the safe. About the only excitement comes when someone orders chickens through the mail and a noisy, cheeping box with air holes arrives on her porch. The chicken company mails them C.O.D., Mrs. Pruett said.

"If the people don't pick them up, I have chickens. So then I call up everyone I know who raises chickens and tell them to turn in sealed bids for the chicks. Then I send whatever money I get to the chicken company."

People complain about the mail, Mrs. Pruett said, but she thinks the government does a good job. In fact, the only piece of mail she can remember being late in 20 years was her own. In May 1970 she sent in two rolls of film to be developed. One arrived in short order, but the other one didn't appear.

"I wrote to the company and they said they mailed them both at the same time. I didn't get the second package until December."

But one out of hundreds of thousands of pieces of mail isn't bad, she said. "People don't take into account all the letters that get there on time. They only think of the one that didn't. I think we have a good mail service."

Sale of Conrail has intrigue of corporate takeover

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two years after the government set out to sell Conrail, disposing of the freight railroad has taken on the intrigue and bloodletting of a nasty corporate takeover fight.

The Transportation Department, which owns 85 percent of the railroad's shares, is close to a decision on a purchaser for the rail line that stretches across 15 states as far as Missouri and dominates rail transportation in the Northeast.

An announcement is expected before the end of the month, perhaps within days.

But the decision is likely to set off heated debate in Congress, which must approve the sale, and several hearings are promised.

L. Stanley Crane, Conrail's chief executive and a staunch opponent of the three buyers being considered by Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, already has set the groundwork for an intense lobbying effort on Capitol Hill.

At the same time, shippers and members of Congress who fear a possible loss of Conrail jobs in their home states also have voiced concern about the prospective buyers, especially the reported front-runner, Norfolk Southern Railroad.

"It's going to be a real donnybrook," said one railroad insider who has kept close watch on the saga, which stretches back to late 1982 when Mrs. Dole first said she was ready to consider offers for Conrail.

Conrail was created by the government in 1976 after the Penn Central Railroad and a number of smaller lines went bankrupt, leaving the Northeast without major rail service.

Crane, 69, and a retired chief executive of the Southern Railway, wants the railroad sold through a public stock offering, instead of to a single bidder, assuring retention of the railroad's management team and its structure.

Crane's views are expected to carry weight on Capitol Hill, since it was under his leadership that Conrail was turned into a money-maker, with $800 million in cash reserves and an anticipated 1984 profit of $500 million, after draining $7 billion from the federal Treasury during its first five years.

But Mrs. Dole repeatedly has rejected the idea of a public stock offering approach and wants to sell the rail line to one of the three remaining bidders, each of whom has offered $12 billion in cash and other considerations.

In addition to Norfolk Southern, a major and rich eastern railroad, the remaining contenders on Mrs. Dole's list are the Allegheny Corp., a New York-based holding company, and a financing group headed by hotel executive J. Willard Marriott.

Increasingly, the sale process has become a battle of wits, occasionally erupting into open warfare, between Mrs. Dole in Washington and Crane in Philadelphia, where Conrail has its headquarters.

The dueling intensified after Mrs. Dole announced last September that she had narrowed the potential buyers from 15 to three.

Crane suggested that two of the bidders just wanted to make a quick profit and had no interest in railroading. His sharpest criticism was directed at Norfolk Southern, saying a purchase by that railroad would result in layoffs and service cuts.

He sent letters to 19,000 shippers urging them to lobby Congress and Mrs. Dole against the three bidders and in support of his public offering proposal.

Crane also hired a Washington public relations firm with close ties to the White House to push the public offering proposal, and personally visited Capitol Hill a number of times to enlist congressional support.

When Mrs. Dole reminded congressmen and state officials that a quick sale would mean earlier collection of state taxes from Conrail, Crane offered to begin paying the taxes — more than $25 million — immediately even though under government ownership he is not required to do so.

Then, Mrs. Dole launched her counterattack.

In a sharply written letter to the Conrail board of directors she questioned whether Crane was acting on behalf of the board, the railroad and Conrail employees or just himself, implying the Conrail executive might be looking out for his own job with what she termed "the Crane proposal."

The Allegheny and Marriott bidders have said they would retain Crane, but Norfolk Southern has made it clear it would not. Crane once headed the Southern Railway and, according to industry sources, was eased into retirement when it merged with the Norfolk & Western to create the Norfolk Southern.

Conrail's board of directors agreed to reign in Crane somewhat, but not completely. Recently he formally submitted to Mrs. Dole his proposal for a sale through a public offering and the board asked her to give it equal consideration.

Conrail officials deny Crane has any personal motives in his opposition to Mrs. Dole.

"He perceives this is the right course to be taken in the long term on behalf of the transportation infrastructure, the shippers, the Conrail employees and preservation of competition," said Conrail spokesman Saul Resnick.

The sale process has involved a number of players in addition to

Mrs. Dole and Crane. Each of the bidders has hired Wall Street consultants and brokerage houses to give their proposals support and, in many cases, shoot down the public offering proposal.

Labor, through a special task force, has been negotiating with each of the bidders to try to get the best deal for Conrail workers and met during the past week to review each of the bids for a final time.

Solid opposition by the labor groups to the buyer chosen by Mrs. Dole would further trouble for the bidder in Congress.

With the railroad holding $800 million in cash reserves, its total assets estimated at nearly $6 billion and its net worth (assets minus debts) estimated at $3.5 billion to $4 billion, some congressmen have questioned whether the $12 billion cash offering is reasonable.

Library will be built despite protests

ATLANTA (AP) — The road to Jimmy Carter's presidential library and policy center is strewn with roadblocks, including opponents chaining themselves to trees and a lawsuit that claims the road would destroy city neighborhoods.

Although construction of the $25 million library has not halted, the battle over the 2.4-mile, four-lane parkway, which Carter has said is "closely tied" to his complex, has escalated in recent weeks.

At least nine people have been arrested on unlawful assembly, disorderly conduct and other charges for attempting to disrupt construction of the limited-access road stretching northeastward from Atlanta's downtown expressway.

The battle has been going on since the parkway — dubbed the "Ex-Freeway" by opponents — was first proposed in late 1981.

The major portion of the parkway would follow a right-of-way acquired during the 1960s and early 1970s for construction of a freeway spur that was later abandoned. Only one residence stands in the parkway's path, which goes through the Druid Hill Historic District and several other neighborhoods popular with young people who have returned to the city.

Carter has tried to remain detached from the road controversy. In a deposition for one of the lawsuits against the road, the former president said he originally took no position, but eventually supported the road because it was a "feasible approach that protected the quality of the neighborhoods as best it could and still meet our needs for access from the east and west."

Even now, despite Carter's oft-repeated belief that the road and library are inseparable, his spokesmen refer questions about the road to the state Department of Transportation.

The two principal organizations opposing the parkway are CAUTION Inc. — Citizens Against Unnecessary Thoroughfares in Older Neighborhoods — and a newly created group called The Road Busters.

In the words of Road Busters' spokeswoman Sharran Colosetti: "We do the direct action; they (CAUTION) do the legal work. We're training people in civil disobedience."

Last month The Road Busters began a series of demonstrations designed to prevent construction of the road. After climbing a tree and unfurling a banner which said "Save Our Parks," four people were arrested when they refused to leave.

Last week, five more people were arrested, and construction on the road temporarily was halted, after protesters chained themselves to trees in a park that would be affected by the parkway.

Four of those arrested had trespassing charges against them dismissed because the judge said it wasn't clear who owned the land they were on.

The major legal challenges are lawsuits filed by the National Trust for Historic Preservation and CAUTION, which also took out full-page ads in Atlanta newspapers urging Carter to abandon his support of the parkway.

In a lawsuit filed last year, CAUTION, made up largely of professional people who live near the road, claimed the road was the product of a deal between Carter and state Transportation Commissioner Tom Moreland.

The lawsuit claimed statistics were juggled to make it appear the road was needed to relieve traffic congestion, environmental effects were ignored or glossed over and opponents did not receive sufficient opportunity to register complaints.

The suit claims the road would do irreparable damage to several small, neighborhood parks designed by Frederick Law Olmstead, the landscape architect who also designed New York's Central Park and the U.S. Capitol grounds.

Following a hearing in October, U.S. District Judge William C. O'Kelley dismissed the lawsuit, saying the federal and state agencies "acted reasonably and in good faith objectively, even though at times certain conduct may have been less than praiseworthy."

CAUTION appealed O'Kelley's decision to the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals which will hear arguments today. CAUTION asked the 11th Circuit to change the panel scheduled to hear arguments because Carter appointed two of the three judges, but the court refused.

City politics also became involved in the controversy when it was revealed that Atlanta City Council President Marvin Arrington was a subcontractor on the $22 million road project when the council voted last November to complete a needed transfer of land between the city and the state.

Arrington withdrew as a subcontractor in December after Georgia Attorney General Michael Bowers issued an opinion saying Arrington's participation was a conflict of interest. But the opinion said that did not invalidate the council action.

According to parkway plans, the east- and west-bound lanes of the limited-access road would divide about a mile from downtown; the Carter complex would be located in the middle on a 31-acre tract. Jogging and bicycle paths would follow the road along most of its length; parks and picnic areas would also be included.

Casino proposed to save depressed town

ELY, Minn. (AP) — A plan to turn this financially troubled town into a gambling mecca on the edge of a vast wilderness worries some residents and religious leaders, who fear an influx of mobsters and sin.

"We're in need of tourism, there's no doubt," said the Rev. Vince Gallinatti, associate pastor of St. Anthony's Catholic Church in this isolated town 240 miles north of Minneapolis.

"But we have a lot of resources we can tap into besides gambling," Gallinatti said. (What will our children think by our saying, 'Let's try anything we can to get money up here?')"

The town is a key entry point to the state's 1.75-million-acre Boundary Waters Canoe Area, but has been hit hard by declining tourism and a depressed economy on north-eastern Minnesota's Iron Range.

Gallinatti said church officials are concerned the town's needy might lose their savings at the craps tables and that prostitution or organized crime would follow gambling into the town.

Minnesota permits only "charitable gambling," such as church bingo games.

Bills introduced in the Minnesota Legislature last week would designate Ely the site of a European-style casino offering slot machines, roulette wheels, poker, blackjack and other games of chance.

AP Laserphoto

Residents and religious leaders in Ely, Minn., are worried by plans of casino promoters to turn the lake resort town into a gambling mecca.

Supporters argue the casino would revitalize the town of 4,820.

"When you come up here for a week of fishing and the fishing is slow, you can come into Ely and spend $10 on blackjack," said Mayor Joe Baltich Jr., who has not taken a position yet on the gambling issue.

Gov. Rudy Perpich, who personally opposes gambling, is pushing the proposed casino as a way to stimulate Ely's economy.

"You pass this legislation or look for millions and millions and millions in state support," Perpich said.

Perpich's chief of staff, Terry Montgomery, said that if the legislation is approved by lawmakers and ratified by Ely residents, there would be no gambling "of this magnitude outside of Nevada or New Jersey." Nevada and Atlantic City, N.J., are the only sites in the country with legalized casino gambling.

No casino site has been designated and the logistics haven't been worked out to bring flocks of gamblers to a town less than 20 miles from the Canadian border. The nearest city is Duluth, 102 miles away by road. There are no direct roads from Ely into Canada.

Casino promoters say Ely's tourism has been hurt by restrictions on motorboats in the canoe area. The economy also has been devastated by logging controls and by high unemployment on the nearby Iron Range, where taconite mining and processing have been curtailed by low demand for steel.

"We are a very depressed area, and we are losing our population fast. We're probably going to attract anything we can to provide employment and a tax base," said City Council member Mathew L. Marolt.

Casino supporters argue that townspeople probably will not gamble often and that strict regulation would prevent mobsters from moving in.

"I don't think we're going to change our lifestyle" because of gambling, said Craig Kronholm, a member of the Ely Economic Development Council.

Lucas gets life sentence

PLAINVIEW (AP) — Confessed serial murderer Henry Lee Lucas received another life sentence Friday after pleading guilty to the Dec. 19, 1982, stabbing death of Petersburg widow Glenna Fay Biggers.

In return for Lucas' guilty plea, Hale County District Attorney Ron Felty dropped an indictment against Lucas charging him with the murder of another woman. The decomposed and headless body of the still-identified victim was found in a ditch six miles east of Plainview three years ago. Her skull was later discovered near Scottsdale, Ariz.

State District Judge Marvin Marshall sentenced Lucas to life in prison during a half-hour hearing at noon. Lucas waived his right to appeal the plea-bargained case, the Plainview Daily Herald reported.

Charles White, court-appointed defense attorney, noted for the record that Lucas, 48, denied the headless corpse murder. Felty said after the hearing, "as far as I'm concerned, it's cleared."

STATE

Local authorities said Lucas was flown to Plainview Friday morning from Georgetown, where he has been held since his conviction in several other Texas murder cases — including one that brought the death sentence.

Lucas, clean-shaven and wearing blue jeans and a blue jacket, admitted stabbing Mrs. Biggers, 66, with a butcher knife while accomplice Otis Toole, 38, held her from behind.

Her body was found with the knife in her abdomen and a steak fork in her neck.

Lucas said he and Toole broke into the widow's home looking for guns. They found none, and killed Mrs. Biggers when she found them in the house upon returning from church.

In a 1984 statement to Hale County authorities, Lucas described the house — including presents under a Christmas tree — and the slaying in detail. He also showed officers the bedroom in which she was killed, and said both he and Toole wore gloves.

Toole is being held in a Florida prison after conviction in an unrelated case.

Lucas, a drifter who once served time for killing his mother, has claimed responsibility for at least 300 murders across 17 states since the 1950s. Some of the slayings involve Toole, and many of the victims were female hitchhikers.

Lucas suspect in Tennessee deaths

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Confessed killer Henry Lee Lucas has given Tennessee authorities information that has made him and another confessed murderer "solid suspects" in at least two murders in the state, a Tennessee Bureau of Investigation agent said Friday.

Agent Steve Watson said a TBI agent and District Attorney General Jerry Estes of Athens traveled to Georgetown, Texas, last week to question Lucas, who has claimed to have killed more than 150 people, mostly women.

"We believe some information he provided...has possibilities of being connected with at least two murders," Watson said.

Lucas, 48, and Otis Toole, 37, have been linked to more than 200 slayings during a nationwide crime spree from 1970 to 1983.

Estes has scheduled a news conference Monday morning to discuss the possibility that Lucas may have been involved in the death of a young woman whose body was discovered in a Monroe County rock quarry in August 1983.

Watson said Tennessee authorities also questioned Lucas about the death of a girl, believed to have been about 16 years old, whose skeletal remains were found near the Cheatham County dump west of Nashville Oct. 21, 1981.

Neither victim has been identified.

"These particular cases fit the modus operandi of Lucas and his partner, Toole," Watson said.

"We are looking at any other unsolved murders during that time that fit the modus operandi of these two people," he said.

Watson said agents hope soon to question Toole, who was sentenced to death in May 1984 for a boarding house arson in Jacksonville, Fla., in which one man died. He is in custody at Florida State Prison at Raiford.

Watson would not comment on a published report that Lucas drew a map for TBI officials which led officials to believe he abducted a young woman in Arkansas and dumped her body off Interstate 40 west of Nashville.

Lucas, who has been convicted of seven killings in Texas, has said his killing spree spanned 20 states. He was convicted in 1960 of killing his mother.

Tapes reveal Mattox accuses lawyer of waging 'vendetta'

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox, accusing a Houston lawyer of waging a "personal vendetta" against him, vowed that his staff would check the Houston law firm's lucrative bond work "awful carefully," tape recordings revealed Friday.

The jury in Mattox's commercial bribery trial also heard Mattox and an aide say on tape that "no general embargo" had been placed on public bonds the Fulbright & Jaworski firm had pending in Mattox's office.

The jurors listened to recordings of five telephone conversations. The tapes were made by Fulbright & Jaworski lawyer Thomas McDade on June 20, 1983 — three days after Mattox allegedly told another Fulbright & Jaworski lawyer he would withhold his legally required approval of their bonds.

McDade said he recorded three conversations between himself and Arthur Mitchell, who at the time was special counsel to Mattox. He also recorded conversations involving himself, Mitchell, Mattox and Wiley Caldwell, chief of Fulbright & Jaworski's bond work.

Texas law permits recording phone calls without telling the other party.

The more than two hours of tapes revealed sometimes heated arguing between McDade and Mattox.

"You've gone off into your own little personal vendetta," Mattox told McDade. "You've all of a sudden got an attack on the attorney general, his staff and his family."

McDade responded, "All I want is the records and the information... I'm not out trying to pick on your family."

And Mattox said, "I want the attacks stopped. I want you to treat us in a professional-type fashion."

In June 1983, Mattox was accusing McDade of being unprofessional in handling a lawsuit that wealthy South Texas rancher Clinton Manges and the state had brought against McDade's client, Mobil Oil.

McDade wanted to question Mattox's sister, Dallas lawyer Janice Mattox. McDade said he was hunting connections between Mattox, Manges, Ms. Mattox and Judge Reuben Garcia of Larado, who McDade wanted removed from the Manges-Mobil case.

Mattox criticized McDade for seeking to take depositions from his sister, his administrative assistant, his secretary and his pilot.

Throughout their talk, Mattox repeatedly told McDade such conduct was improper.

"McDade...you have treated this office in an unethical and unprofessional-type manner," Mattox said, later adding, "You've put your case beyond compromise, beyond reasonable action."

Mattox said that because of McDade's conduct in the Mobil case, he would have his staff consider that when looking at other Fulbright & Jaworski legal work.

As for the bonds, Mattox said, "They're going to have to check them out awful carefully."

While Mattox told the Fulbright & Jaworski lawyers his office would "check all your work to the highest degree we're capable of," the attorney general also told them, "Your bonds are going to be approved in due time."

'Evergreen' series rags to riches saga

NEW YORK (AP) — "Evergreen" is one of those purposefully fuzzy titles that sounds alluring and can mean anything to anybody, but ends up delivering much less than meets the eye.

Since NBC's three-part miniseries is about a beautiful immigrant whose dreams of trading her rags for riches do come true, does "Evergreen" refer to the constant lure of the great American greenback?

Since our heroine ages about 60 years in the six-hour multigenerational tale but never wrinkles, is "Evergreen" a metaphor for a forever young sapling?

Or, since the miniseries is, for the most part, slow and stilted, could it be a reference to a tree that just sits there, year after year, without change?

Based on the best-selling first novel by Belva Plain, the New Jersey grandmother who wrote it in 1978, at the age of 59, "Evergreen" is not as intellectually insulting as last week's "Hollywood Wives," but it offers no compelling reason to watch.

The miniseries, which was filmed in Toronto (the stand-in for New York) and Israel, will be broadcast Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Its broad premise is enticing: a Polish Jew, fresh off the boat in 1909, raises an upwardly mobile family while 20th century America goes through wars, depression, prosperity and social changes.

But, except for some tender family moments and some effective scenes about pig-headed prejudice by Christians and Jews in Part 2, the production doesn't move in that direction enough. As an introspective look at growing up Jewish in America, or as social commentary, "Evergreen" falls flatter than a matzoh.

"Roots" Goldberg, this isn't.

So, what is it? It's mostly an unconvincing triangular love story. Lesley Ann Warren stars as Anna, the poor Jewish housekeeper who marries Joseph Friedman (Armand Assante) but is hopelessly in love (through wars, depression and prosperity) with Paul Lerner (Ian McShane), the wealthy son of her first employer.

Paul is a woefully underdeveloped character, and their secret love, the least interesting storyline, weaves in and out like an annoying drunk. Near the end of Sunday's installment, she agonizes whether to stay with her solid family man or leave for a passionate love with Paul.

That artificial conflict aside, the most poignant and believable dilemmas are the Friedmans' internal ones.

Joseph has more of an Old-World concept of his religion than Anna or their children, and when their son, Maury (Tony Soper), marries a blue-blooded Protestant (Kate Burton), Joseph disowns him and even refuses to see his grandson.

In another affecting scene, Joseph has a heart-to-heart talk with his grandson — Joseph isn't stubborn forever — about Jewish identification and discrimination, while they're polishing the family's fancy car in their suburban driveway.

Assante plays Joseph, the virtuous family man, as if he were an Italian godfather, and the portrayal works marvelously. He has more impact than Miss Warren. Although she has a high-voltage smile and is an appealing actress, her accent and overpronunciations would fit better on a "Saturday Night Live" parody.

Miss Burton gives a breezy, natural performance as the Friedman's estranged daughter-in-law. Brian Dennehy is quite good as Matthew Malone, Joseph's salt-of-the-earth Irish-Catholic friend and business partner.

This production can evoke some heart-felt emotion around the dinner table, but the tragedies that beset the family every generation seem more like the prerequisite soap-opera mishaps. The family suffers, seems barely affected and moves on. There's little reflection or growth.

Students pretend flour, oregano are drugs

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — Using flour for cocaine, oregano for marijuana and Monopoly money, some fifth- and sixth-graders in this affluent suburb have been playing a game that lets them pretend to be big-time drug dealers.

"They also substituted some Tic-Tac candy as uppers and downers. Then a school teacher found out about it and had a long talk with the kids and put a stop to it," Police Chief William F. Quinn said Friday.

The game was dreamed up by seven or eight students at Williams Elementary School who at first used the bogus drugs to buy property while playing the board game Monopoly, Quinn said.

Neither police nor school officials knew how many students eventually participated in the game. The game came to light when the 10-year-old son of police Officer Robert FitzPatrick spoke about it to his father, who filed a complaint with the police department.

According to that complaint, one cafeteria employee at the school knew the game was being played, but failed to stop it. The children continued to play it until a teacher intervened.

Larry Annett, assistant school superintendent, said he and other school officials were unaware of the game until Friday, but were attempting to find out more.

The school's principal, Nan Cochran, could not be reached for comment because she was away this week on winter break, as were the students, Annett said.

Quinn expressed little surprise that kids so young could concoct so sophisticated a drug game.

"Drugs are so well known, and there's so much written about them. The students all can read and write.

This is an affluent community, and their intellect is quite high. We underestimate kids when they're 10 or 11," he said.

In a statement, Quinn said the game was "not what I would consider a totally harmless child's game, (but) I want to make it clear that there was never any report of real drugs being involved."

Robert Stutman, head of the Boston office of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency, said he spoke to Newton students about drugs during recent visit to the two high schools in the city.

Nutritionist Pritikin kills himself in hospital

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Nutritionist Nathan Pritikin, who pioneered a controversial low-cholesterol diet to fight heart disease, killed himself in a hospital after treatment for terminal leukemia left him in "intense suffering," a spokeswoman said Friday. He was 69.

Pritikin died Thursday night at Albany Medical Center where he had been a patient under the assumed name Howard Malmuth for 10 days, according to Albany County Coroner John J. Marra.

"I think he used a razor to cut his elbows — the arteries in his elbows," Marra said. "He bled to death."

"He wanted to be left alone at night — in the evening," Marra said, adding that Pritikin particularly asked to be left alone "between 7 and 8 every evening." The body was found after 8 p.m.

Medical personnel "worked on him, and he was pronounced dead at 8:30," Marra said.

Marra, an undertaker by profession, said Pritikin had "terminal cancer" and was "a very sick man... a very thin man."

Pritikin popularized his diet, with its emphasis on fruits, vegetables, whole grains, avoidance of red meat and insistence on regular exercise, through several books. The best-selling of them, the "Pritikin Program for Diet & Exercise" in 1979, sold more than 1.8 million copies. His last book, "The Pritikin Promise," was published in 1983.

Marra said he learned Pritikin's identity when an undertaker contacted "by the people in California" called him and told him who Howard Malmuth really was.

Eugenia Killoran, public information director at the Pritikin Longevity Center in Santa Monica, Calif., said Pritikin had been in Albany for treatment of leukemia, a form of blood cancer.

She said he and his wife, Ilene, who have five adult children, lived in Santa Barbara, Calif.

Bob Levine of Levine Memorial Chapel Inc. in Albany said he received a telephone call about 1 p.m. Friday from Mrs. Pritikin. He said no funeral arrangements had been made as of late Friday afternoon, but he added, "We are going to ship him back to Santa Barbara."

"His leukemia had been diagnosed many years ago (in 1958), but it had been in remission until a few months ago," Ms. Killoran said. "As a result of the advancement of the leukemia, he began a treatment program that subsequently produced a chain reaction of side effects — anemia, kidney failure, impending liver failure. This was all within the last three months."

"It did produce a situation where Nathan simply succumbed to the intense suffering he was feeling," Ms. Killoran said. "He did take his own life."

Pritikin, a former electronics manufacturer who was born in Chicago on Aug. 25, 1915, founded and directed Pritikin Longevity Centers in Santa Monica, Downingtown, Pa., and Surfside, Fla. Patients were placed on the controversial, low-cholesterol Pritikin diet and underwent stringent exercise.

The diet consists mainly of fresh and cooked fruits and vegetables, whole grains and small amounts of fish and poultry. It is coupled with walking and jogging exercises.

Nathan Pritikin

"He was a pioneer in nutrition research for the prevention and treatment of heart disease, diabetes and high blood pressure," Ms. Killoran said. "In the 1960s, his diet was severely challenged by the medical establishment. They weren't ready at that point to accept the fact that diet played a role in the control of heart disease."

Even recently, however, heart specialists have criticized the Pritikin diet as being far more stringent than necessary, she acknowledged. But it attracted many followers, including California's former governor, Edmund G. Brown Jr.

Nutritionist Wahida Karmally of Mount Sinai Medical Center in New York said the Pritikin diet's extremely low fat content "makes food unpalatable and (the diet) difficult to adhere to."

Proposed farm bill 'disaster' for farmers

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Reagan administration plans for a 1985 farm bill are a "disaster for American farmers," Iowa officials said Friday.

"This administration has still got its head in the sand on this crisis," said David Ostendorf of Prairiefire, a non-profit group that works on rural issues. "I don't know why they will not respond more decisively."

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, rejected the 15-year farm bill proposed by Agriculture Secretary John Block, charging the plan would "prove disaster for American farmers."

The Reagan administration's plan would slice about $39 billion from current farm program spending, which Grassley equated with "taking from farms to give to arms."

Federal price supports, acreage controls and subsidy packages would be reduced steadily if lawmakers go along. In all, the administration says the plan could save taxpayers $40 billion to $60 billion in the five years it would take to make the transition.

The plan would affect major crops such as wheat, corn, cotton and rice, and other programs for dairy products and sugar.

"Reducing price supports at this time would be a step backwards," Gov. Terry Branstad said. "I think it's pretty obvious they don't understand."

"Just when they're facing an economic tragedy of Great Depression intensity, losing lifelong investments with failed banks dragging down entire communities, we absolutely will not allow this government to sock surviving farmers with another knock-out blow," Grassley said.

Grassley also laid much of the blame for the current farm crisis on the federal government, "including Congress and more than one administration."

"When this government does its job with the deficit, they can talk about cutting many programs, including agriculture, but we're not going to allow the farm sector to absorb any more critical repercussions from politicians at this critical time," Grassley said.

"We've got a depression out here in the Midwest," said Pete Croghan, president of the Iowa Farmers Union. "I visited, this morning, at the motel with a salesman from Red Oak that has 34 buildings empty that has no business. We got a depression. If we don't get some help from Washington it's going to be a disaster."

Boys' punishment is to walk to school

CONWAY, Ark. (AP) — Two brothers suspended from riding the school bus for rowdiness learned just how far their parents would go to teach them a lesson — they ordered the boys to walk the 14-mile round trip to school for five days.

"Whipping them didn't help. Grounding them didn't help. Taking away their toys didn't help. This is the only thing we know to do," said the boys' mother, Holly Schnebelen. "We want them to understand that they caused this, and they have to stand up to the consequences."

David Schnebelen, 9, and his brother Harry, 11, were suspended this week from riding the school bus after they ignored two warnings to stay in their seats. They will be allowed back on the bus Tuesday.

"We're responsible for them on the school bus, and suspending them for five days was the only way we felt we could handle the situation," Bobby Acklin, principal of Conway Middle School where Harry is enrolled, said in a telephone interview Friday.

"We've talked with the parents, but they feel that they're just trying to teach those kids to behave whenever they are," Acklin said, "and they feel that if they drive them to school, they'd be complimenting their behavior."

Eddie Hawkins, principal of David's school, Sallie Cone Elementary, said he had asked the parents to consider other forms of punishment. "The parents are just trying to be super-supportive of the school district, and they always have," Hawkins said. He added that two older brothers also were suspended from riding the bus a year ago and had to walk.

Hawkins said David is hyperactive and must take medicine to help control his behavior. "I guess it takes about an hour and a half to get here, but he doesn't seem tired at all," he said.

Police Chief Vonnie Taylor said Friday that an officer picked up David along a four-lane highway and drove him near his home Tuesday, but the boy refused help from another officer the next day because he had been punished for accepting the first ride. He told the officer he had left home at 6:30 a.m. School begins at 8:30 a.m.

"That area gets quite a bit of traffic that time of day, you know, the morning and afternoon when people are going to work and going home," Taylor said. "That road is all muddy. The first few miles are real muddy."

David told police his parents were making the brothers walk different routes so they wouldn't goof off.

"Everyone seems to be saying we're bad parents," Mrs. Schnebelen said in an interview Thursday. "But is it wrong to try to teach your children?"

Mrs. Schnebelen said the boys didn't know that her husband sometimes followed them to make sure they were safe.

The boys' stepfather, Frank Schnebelen, hung up the telephone on a reporter Friday after saying that the publicity "is outrageous and that's all I'm saying. Bye."

NATION IN BRIEF

Club to admit women

MIAMI (AP) — A University of Miami honor club, banished for being males-only, has voted to admit women, ending more than a decade of controversy and opening the door for it to return to campus.

The Iron Arrow Honor Society was kicked out of school after the U.S. government warned the university in 1973 that it violated sex-discrimination regulations for federally financed programs.

UM President Edward T. Foote II said the club now will be welcomed back.

Members of the club — a male bastion for 58 years — voted 71-25 Thursday to admit women.

Women activists for years complained that they were forbidden membership in a group that brought business clout after graduation.

Lagoons to be drained

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Lagoons holding chemicals blamed for contaminating soil and water at Dover Air Force Base will be drained into sewers if environmental agencies approve, officials said.

Once most of the lagoons have been drained, officials said, sludge would be removed to a contaminated waste disposal site and the lagoons would be capped.

The cleanup plan, filed late last month with state and federal environmental agencies, is now open to public comment.

The base was placed on the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's priority list of hazardous waste sites last October because organic solvents and hydrocarbons were found in soil and water samples.

Student falls through ice

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A 26-year-old Canadian student died early Friday after falling through thin ice into the Charles River, officials said.

Police pulled Randall Chipperfield, of Calgary, Alberta, a student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, from the river about 400 yards offshore late Thursday night.

He died four hours later in the emergency room at Massachusetts General Hospital, spokesman Chris Lynch said.

Mrs. Schroeder: Patients may be prisoners of notoriety

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Artificial heart patients Murray Haydon and William Schroeder are doing well and "happy to be alive," but Schroeder's wife fears they may always be "prisoners" of their notoriety, artificial heart surgeon Dr. William C. DeVries said Friday.

In his first meeting with reporters since Haydon's surgery Sunday, DeVries said Schroeder could be ready to leave the hospital "any time after the weekend."

Haydon is "recovering very nicely," and doctors are "regulating him to fit his new heart" by fine-tuning the heart and adjusting his blood-pressure medication, DeVries said.

"That's something that we've had the opportunity to practice two times before, with William Schroeder and Barney Clark," he said. "The experience has been a fantastic help."

"When the two patients get together and you see both these patients that would have been dead, and they're alive and they're happy to be alive, that's exciting," DeVries said.

Haydon, who had become malnourished before surgery, is now getting sufficient nourishment from his intravenous feedings, DeVries said.

Later Friday, the hospital said in a written update that Haydon's vital signs continued normal and that he was sucking on flavored ice to increase his intake of fluids.

It also said Haydon continued his "passive exercises" in bed, flexing all his joints, and "has sat up in bed with the assistance of hospital staff members on several occasions in order to dangle his legs over the side of the bed."

DeVries said the enormous publicity surrounding the artificial heart program is beginning to harm the patients.

Doctors are watching Schroeder to be certain that the unexplained fever that delayed his release does not return, but they have no other medical reason for keeping him in the hospital, DeVries said.

What remains is educating Schroeder's family to life with an artificial heart, he said.

Protesters try to block DOE train

BANGOR, Wash. (AP) — More than 120 protesters were arrested Friday for trying to block a heavily guarded Department of Energy train that arrived at the Trident submarine base here. The demonstrators said the train carried nuclear warheads.

The train entered the base at 5:30 p.m. after Burlington Northern security officers dragged and led away protesters who sat on the tracks, while another 200 to 300 demonstrators sang softly while the train went past.

About 20 protesters were arrested in Bangor, and 106 people were arrested earlier Friday after they blocked the train for more than 1½ hours in Vancouver.

Another four people were cited for trespassing and released as the train rolled north through Centralia, said Centralia police Sgt. Robert Berg, but the train was not stopped there despite a crowd of more than 200 protesters.

Demonstrators who have dogged the train's path from Amarillo, Texas, say the train carries nuclear warheads.

Energy Department officials refused to comment on the cargo aboard the 27-car train, which was headed for the Trident nuclear submarine base at Bangor from the Pantex plant in Amarillo, Texas. The Pantex plant is where the government assembles nuclear weapons.

Friday's protests began after the train rumbled into the Burlington Northern yard in Vancouver, across the Columbia River from Portland, Ore., and came to a halt about 9:10 a.m.

An estimated 300 demonstrators stepped onto the tracks, chanting and singing peace songs, and within seconds dozens of Washington State Patrol troopers clad in riot gear formed ranks.

After repeated warnings, 106 people were arrested and taken to the Clark County Jail, where they were charged with criminal trespassing and released, said Dan Jones of the Vancouver police.

Utah Sen. Jake Garn shows off a fluid mixing experiment he will be doing during his four days in space aboard the space shuttle Challenger which is scheduled for launch on March 4.

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Computers will scrutinize the brain, heart and stomach of Sen. Jake Garn during his four-day space shuttle flight next month, conducting what one engineer on Friday called "an electronic autopsy" on the Utah lawmaker.

Garn, a 52-year-old Republican, will be attached to a series of sensors measuring his body functions as he is launched aboard the shuttle Challenger on March 4 and then as he adapts to the weightlessness of orbit.

The "electronic autopsy" on Garn, according to a NASA engineer who asked not to be named, means "there are not many body changes that we will not know about."

The senator will wear five sensors on his head, four on his stomach and three on his chest, plus two microphones to pick up the growling of his intestines.

Many of the tests are aimed at providing data on space motion sickness, seizures of nausea that strike about half of all astronauts in space.

Garn, showing off his medical equipment to reporters on Friday, said he doesn't know if he will get sick in orbit.

"Even if I don't, the test will gather data on why I didn't," he said.

Dr. Jim Vanderploeg, a NASA flight surgeon, said Garn's contribution will be particularly valuable because some of the tests cannot be done on astronauts who are concentrating on other duties.

One test will pay particular attention to the senator's stomach. Two microphones will record his bowel sounds and four sensors will record the electric activity of the intestines. Both of these elements change in orbit in subjects who experience space sickness.

In tests concentrating on the senator's brain, sensors will pick up cerebral electrical activity as he adapts to weightlessness. Other tests will check the size of the pupils of his eyes, the pallor of his skin and his temperature.

In addition, sensors on his chest will detect his heartbeat and how it changes during launch and orbit.

Weightlessness causes fluids in the body to shift, flowing from the legs to the face and head. Often, this causes a puffiness about the face and a shrinkage of leg size. Garn will wear stockings containing tape measures and the size changes will be noted as they occur.

Samples of the senator's saliva will be collected during the flight and be tested to determine changes in total body water. He also will take Tylenol and follow that with another saliva test to evaluate the effects of weightlessness on a normal dose of medication.

Also, the senator's eye, hand and brain coordination will be tested with devices that Garn called "insidious."

In an eye-hand tracking test, he will be required to follow a series of blinking lights with his hand. And a hand-held computer test requires him to respond quickly to numbers as they flash on a screen. Results of these tests will be compared with his performance on the ground before launch.

Garn is chairman of the senate subcommittee that oversees the NASA budget and is making the flight as a part of his senatorial duty in monitoring the space agency.

The major activity of the four-day flight is the launch of two satellites, one of which will be used for NASA communications on future space missions. The other is a commercial communications satellite, Telesat-I.

Garn will have six crewmates on the mission, including a Frenchman, Patrick Baudry, the first of his country to fly on a U.S. spaceship.

STATE in brief

Mother put on probation in death of daughter

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston woman was sentenced to one year's probation in the death of her 1-year-old daughter, who died after being left alone in a car on a hot day.

Patsy Lopez, 33, was sentenced Thursday by county Court-at-Law Judge Sherman Ross.

Ms. Lopez's baby, Korina, was left unattended in a car May 8 in 92-degree weather as her mother visited with a friend. The baby died one day later.

The judge told Ms. Lopez he hopes the case will remind parents not to leave their children unattended in cars.

Sheriff's deputies indicted

BEAUMONT (AP) — A federal grand jury indicted three Jefferson County sheriff's deputies on charges of beating two county jail inmates.

Indicted Thursday were deputies Douglas Berry Bledsoe Jr., 31; James David Matlock, 36; and John Allen Gowling, 36. If convicted on all counts, the deputies each face up to 12 years in prison and $12,000 in fines.

Each was charged with one count of conspiring to violate the prisoners' civil rights and two counts of violating civil rights.

The indictments allege the three took two inmates from their jail holding cells to an interview room and beat them. Assistant U.S. Attorney Paul Naman said one inmate was treated by a doctor, but neither was hospitalized.

Man sentenced in slaying

ROCKWALL (AP) — Marshall Dewayne "Dodie" Williams, convicted of killing his stepfather with a bomb rigged in a newspaper rack, has been sentenced to 50 years in prison for the slaying of a Rockwall woman.

Williams pleaded guilty Thursday in state district court to a murder charge in the January 1984 killing of Beverly Fawn Miranda, 28.

Ms. Miranda was found strangled in a Rockwall condominium two days before Williams' stepfather, Ward Keeton, was killed by a pipe bomb that had been rigged to a newspaper rack in north Dallas.

Williams was convicted on Oct. 18 by a Dallas federal court jury of building and detonating the bomb. He was sentenced to life in prison.

Ice cream maker files lawsuit

DALLAS (AP) — Baskin-Robbins Inc., in a bid to protect one of its 31 flavors of ice cream, won a temporary restraining order Friday against The Pillsbury Co.

U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer ordered Pillsbury, which markets ice cream under the Hagen-Dazs brand, to stop using the name Pralines 'N Cream or any similar derivation on one of its ice cream flavors.

In its complaint, Baskin-Robbins accused Pillsbury of trademark infringement. Baskin-Robbins was issued a trademark for the Pralines 'N Cream name by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office in Sept. 1979, court records show.

Baskin-Robbins alleged in its court papers that the use of a similar name by Hagen-Dazs presented "the likelihood of confusion, deception and mistaken identity."

Buchmeyer's order cited the irreparable injury, loss and damage that Baskin-Robbins would suffer, if Pillsbury were allowed to continue using the description.

Baskin-Robbins also is seeking payment for all of Pillsbury's "gains, profits and advantages" from the use of the trademark, along with treble damages.

In the civil suit, Baskin-Robbins also accuses its competitor of using advertising that misleads consumers into thinking the Pillsbury subsidiary invented the combination of ice cream and pecan pralines.

Additionally, Baskin-Robbins claims Hagen-Dazs containers — printed with a map of Scandinavia — leave consumers with the impression that the product is made in Europe.

Nightmare finish knocks Lee out of playoffs

Empty cylinder costs Rebels' Dickens winning bucket

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — Midland Lee's Rebels tasted bi-district basketball victory and defeat in the space of 30 seconds here Friday night at the Coronado Gym, but the lasting taste of bitterness was all that was left from the smoke of a faulty gun.

Amarillo Palo Duro was awarded a 62-61 overtime victory, pushing into the coldness of Class 5A playoff elimination — and awarded has to be the correct word.

No one is completely sure if Lee won or lost this nightmare finish that has to go down as the most bizarre defeat in the Lee basketball history.

The scenario itself is almost unbelievable. Trailing 62-61 with less than 10 seconds left on the scoreboard clock, Lee's Brian Marczynski took a 20-foot shot that missed. Anthony Dickens came up with the rebound, turned and laced the net with what looked like the winning basket as a hand-held gun sounded in the background. One referee signaled the shot good.

Lee fans erupted onto the playing surface in wild celebration, but suddenly, Palo Duro fans came pouring onto the court with a celebration of their own. The victory had been given to the Dons in a turnaround decision.

The ruling was Dickens' shot was not taken before time had expired in the overtime period. The clock keeper, Lubbock's Don Coleman, said there was an empty cylinder in the gun and he had to re-cock and fire again.

"When I told the refs what had happened, they asked if the shot was taken in time and I said 'No,'" said Coleman. "When they brought the gun to me they said it had been used in another game and there was an empty cylinder. This was a heck of a time to find out which one it was."

Dickens said, "I didn't see the clock, but I know the shot left my hand before the buzzer." When asked if it was a buzzer or a gun, Dickens said, "it sounded like a gun."

Stunned Lee fans just stood court-side waiting for another decision that never came. The loss left Lee coach Paul Stueckler in a state of shock.

At first he said, "I have no comment, you saw what happened," but he quickly added, "I've been coaching 31 years and I've never in my life lost one like that. They let us have our victory celebration and then they come back and change the decision you."

Lee assistant Bill Jordan said, "it would take a long time to get over this loss. I can't believe the ineptitude I saw tonight. How could they use a gun when they knew there was an empty cylinder in it?" Palo Duro coach Ed Smith said, "I don't know if the shot was good or not, but the scorekeeper is supposed to watch for that and I'm glad he did his job."

Palo Duro outscored Lee by a 5-4 margin in the overtime and it was 6-foot-2 Glenn Hayes' 15-footer with 10 seconds left that gave the Dons the one-point lead. The rest can only live in nightmares.

Hayes, who led all scorers with 22 points, was the key to victory for the Dons. Lee held a 33-20 lead at the half and the 13-point margin was the zenith of the Lee attack.

But Hayes hit 16 of his points in the second half, including four of the five Dons points in overtime.

Lee let Palo Duro back in the game in a faulty third period when the Rebels hit only 3-of-10 shots for a meager six-point period. Palo Duro staged a run, outscoring Lee by a 15-4 margin in one stretch.

Hayes eventually sent the game into overtime with another long bomb at the 10-second mark of regulation, tying the score at 57. Lee was unable to get a shot off after that, much to the displeasure of Stueckler. Lee ended the night hitting a respectable 25-of-56 shots, but hit 16-of-33 in the first half while Palo Duro couldn't find the range with a 10-of-27 effort. But this story was not over at the half and Lee would just as soon forget the rest of it.

Raymond Morney led Lee with 15 points, including 7-of-7 from the charity line while Marczynski had 14 to go with 12 each from Derek Westbrook and Dickens. Dickens and any Lee fan would like to add two more points to his totals.

Baseball season drawing near for 'Dogs, Rebs

on the field for the senior years in Bulldog and Rebel uniforms.

Whalen combines old, new players

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Midland High baseball coach Tim Whalen has a favorite saying about several positions for the 1985 baseball season. "We have question marks."

Though he has some experienced lettermen to call upon, he's also building this year's team from last year's junior varsity squad.

Some positions have been pretty well established like second base where Darren Thorpe is back for his third season in a starting role. Thorpe is the leading hitter back from last year's team when he was a second team All-District pick with a .333 average. Thorpe is the only returning MHS player to make last year's elite list.

Three other Bulldogs saw heavy playing time a year ago led by left-handed pitcher/center fielder Mike Stanton. Last year Stanton saw only three innings on the mound, posting a 2.33 earned run average but was used in every District 4-5A game in the outfield. At the plate he hit .302, collected four doubles, three triples and nine RBI.

"Stanton is probably our only long ball threat this year," said Whalen who is hoping to see singles stretched into doubles or more because of improved team speed which he sees as the strong point this year.

"I think we have three or four guys who can run," said Whalen. "None of them are real hummers but they'll be stealing some bases."

Thorpe and Stanton are two players Whalen expects to come up with some thefts along with shortstop/pitcher Kenny De La Garza, outfielder Keith Byrd and utility infielder Robert Malacara.

De La Garza and Malacara, both juniors, are two players up from junior varsity while Byrd is out for baseball for the first time since his sophomore year when he opted to concentrate on football.

Also back this year are Evan Poer, senior left fielder, and Greg Hatcher, senior catcher. Hatcher was a 241 hitter a year ago while Poer hit .222.

Three positions fell under Whalen's "question mark" category: first and third base and right field.

Johnson loaded with returning vets

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

It is said that strength up the middle wins ball games, and Tuesday, Midland Lee baseball coach Ernie Johnson will open the 1985 baseball season with intentions of proving just that.

In its twinbill opener at Lubbock Coronado, Lee will field an outstanding defensive unit behind a capable pitching staff and hope the Rebel bats can push across enough runs to make a repeat trip to the state playoffs.

Last year the Rebels finished second in District 4-5A to Abilene Cooper and went into bi-district as runnerup where they were eliminated by Lubbock Monterey.

"We'll be a good defensive ball club, our whole infield, except our third baseman, is back," Johnson said. "Our pitching is not bad, but average. But you never know, maybe someone will come through big for us."

"We're not a power hitting team — we coach contact hitting so much, power becomes secondary. But we've got five guys with true base-stealing speed. They're not hummers, but they're going to steal some bases."

"And I think we're going to hit the ball harder than they know. I think we'll score some runs."

Anchoring Johnson's 25th squad at Lee is catcher Jimmy Phillips, a district honorable mention as a junior. Phillips' .375 district average and 10 runs batted in (RBI) show that the senior can hit. Johnson would just like to see his strong-armed backstop put the reigns on his sometimes erratic throwing arm.

"He's a good defensive catcher with a strong arm," Johnson said. "It's just a little wild sometimes. He could get that under control yet. He could be all-district for us this season."

Continuing the strength up the middle for the Rebs is slick-fielding shortstop Keith McDonald. McDonald, a two-year letter winner at Lee, is the backbone of the veteran infield.

Just a .277 hitter last spring, Johnson expects great strides at the plate from McDonald this season thanks to off-season improvements in his upper-body strength.

On the right side of the Rebel infield, a pair of light-hitting seniors return to their slots from last year.

Antelopes end Rangers' year

Fouls hurt Greenwood in fourth quarter

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — Abernathy's Antelopes wiped out a 13-point third quarter lead here at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum Friday afternoon and went on to upset the Greenwood Rangerettes, 66-62, in the semi-finals of the region 1 Girls 2-A basketball tournament.

Greenwood went into the game as the No. 2 ranked team in the state, but Abernathy, the runnerup of District 3-2A, took advantage of Greenwood's foul trouble as the game drew to a close.

Senior Marla Morgette, Greenwood's leading scorer on the season, finished her career by sitting on the bench the last 5:16 of play after a chargin' foul gave her five for the game.

At that point, the Rangerettes led by a narrow 54-52 margin but things were to get worse as sophomore Stephanie Smirh was called for her fourth foul just four seconds later. Smith had to leave the game on fouls with 1:21 left and Greenwood leading 58-57. Smith took her game-high 23 points to the bench and that was a blow that Greenwood was not able to overcome.

The 24-7 Antelopes didn't put the cap on the victory until the last stages of the game and victory came from an almost unlikely spot.

Liz Lopez, averaging just 5.3 points per game this year, scored four of her six points in the last 14 seconds. Lopez produced a steal and a layup with 14 seconds left to give Abernathy a 63-62 lead, its first since the 2:10 mark of the first quarter. She came back with two free throws to ice the win with 10 seconds left.

Abernathy is scheduled to meet Morton at 9 a.m. today in the Region I finals with the winner moving to Austin's state tournament next weekend.

MORTON 25-6, upset 24-7 Hale Center in the other semi-final Friday by a narrow 53-51 margin, coming back from a nine-point deficit. Greenwood leaves the playoffs with a 29-2 record.

Phoebe Dunn led the Antelopes with 22 points, but hit only nine of 23 from the field. Teammate Johnna Harrell added 17 before fouling out and Mikki Webb, a long-range bomber, hit for 11.

Greenwood's 5-foot-10 Smith was awesome, hitting 11-of-16 shots through the heart of the Antelope defense. She hit 12 first quarter points to erase a five-point Abernathy lead as Greenwood got off to a slow start before tying the game at 12.

A Morgette free throw with 1:56 left in the first period gave the Rangerettes a 13-12 lead, one they never relinquished until the final 14 seconds.

AT THE 3:56 mark of the third period, Greenwood held a 49-36 lead, looking more and more like Morton's next opponent. Deonna Dean, who hit eight points including six of six free throws in the second period, helped build that lead.

However, Abernathy outscored Greenwood in a 12-1 run over the next 4:04 of play and the race to the finish was on.

Greenwood hit 24-of-42 shots from the field for an amazing 59 percent, but they got few extra shots. Abernathy didn't hit a good percentage with a 25-of-67 shooting eye "37 percent" but usually got two or three cracks at a basket by dominating the offensive boards.

Today's final pits Rebel size against Plainsmen speed

Monterey rips Sam Houston; Southwest downs Amarillo High

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

It'll be the classic match-up of speed against size today at Chaparral Center when Fort Worth Southwest and Lubbock Monterey square off for the Region I Girls Basketball title at 2 p.m.

A devastating performance of quickness and deception by the Plainsmen of Monterey over the Arlington Sam Houston Lady Texans, 70-48, in Friday's nightcap assured that.

The Rebels from Southwest staged off a second-half surge by Amarillo High by getting the ball inside to their pair of intimidating post players to conquer the Sandies, 57-49, in the opener and set the stage for the "David and Goliath" meeting.

"They sure are quick," Southwest coach Denise Smith said after witnessing Monterey's downing of a large Sam Houston squad. "We are definitely slower, but we're bigger."

The obvious strategy for the Rebels then, would be to take some of the air out of the ball and set a slow-paced tempo for today's championship game. Smith admits her strategy.

"We slow the game down whether we try to or not," Smith claimed.

SLOW CERTAINLY would not be the word for the Plainsmen of Lubbock in the nightcap.

Region I Girls Basketball

After a turnover-filled first quarter by both sides, Monterey got back into its game plan and pressed the taller, stronger Sam Houston squad into submission.

"I don't know how to explain it (the poor first quarter)," Monterey coach Tim Tasker said. "I think we were in awe of them, they were so big. But then we pressed them, forced them into a few turnovers and we saw they were human and started to play our game."

Monterey "played their game" all right, and outscored the Lady Texans 28-13 in the second period to take a commanding 38-22 lead into the locker room. Sam Houston clawed itself into foul trouble and listed two starters with four fouls before halftime.

In the second half, the Plainsmen (26-3) refused to let up and kept the regrouped Lady Texans chasing them all night.

Laura Supak led the charge for Monterey with 22 points on the night and forward Allison Taylor came off the bench to add 16 points to lead the Plainsmen.

"That Allison Taylor amazes me," Tasker exclaimed. "She's not tall, she's not big and she's not quick. But she gets all the rebounds and makes all the tough shots. She had a great game."

IN THE opening game, Southwest threatened to turn the game into a rout, taking a 10-point lead, 29-19, midway through the second quarter. But the Sandies, led by 6-foot-2 junior Amy Tollefson's six straight points, pulled within six, 31-25, at the half. Twelve consecutive points to open the third quarter — again paced by Tollefson with six points, and Lisa Watson with four — put Amarillo ahead, 37-31, just 2:45 into the half.

The Rebels then mounted their Goliath assault.

Led by four points from 6-0 post Lisa Remauldo, Southwest tied the game, 41-41, on a jumper from Shelly Peel from the corner less than a minute later.

A 13-0 spurt to open the final quarter salted the game away for Southwest (31-5).

The Rebels made their run by going inside to Remauldo, who scored 21 on the night, with an occasional pass thrown inside to 6-2 Beth Naughton — who scored 15 points.

With only one six-footer Amarillo just couldn't counter the one-two inside punch of the Rebels, although Tollefson tossed in a game-high 27 points.

Remauldo and Naughton should give the Plainsmen a tough test in today's championship — if they are able to set the tempo. Guards Michelle Henry, eight points, Peel, nine points, and Kim Thompson, two points, will be assigned the unenviable task of moving the ball up the floor on the crushing Monterey press.

"We're too small to do anything else," Monterey's Tasker said. "We just have to go out and pressure them. They're awfully big, not just tall, but big. They're so big they play behind you on the post and say 'You're going to have to shoot over me.' Then they're in the position for the rebound."

Fort Worth Southwest (57): Michelle Henry 4-11 0-0 8, Shelly Peel 3-5 3-4 9, Kim Thompson 1-3 0-0 2, Beth Naughton 5-9 5-8 15, Lisa Remauldo 6-13 9-10 21, Erin O'Kallay 1-1 0-1 2, Melissa Moore 0-0 0-0 0. Totals 20-42 17-23 57.

Bulldog tennis starts great

From Staff Reports

SAN ANGELO — Midland High came up with what tennis coach Pete Barizon calls "Probably the best showing for us overall in at least three years." Friday in the West Texas High School Tennis Championships here.

The A Division Bulldogs — boys and girls, singles and doubles — have yet to lose a match.

"This is excellent," said Barizon. "We're in the semifinals in every division. It's a great team effort. This is our first tournament of the year. We're a young team, mainly dominated by sophomores and it's a great way to start out the season."

Among the matches the Bulldogs won in quarterfinal play was a A Boys Doubles victory by Tim Thomas and Chris Jauz over Midland Lee's Ben Nunez and Jeff Probandt, 7-6, 7-6.

The 15-tournament will conclude play today.

Following are the results of all A Division matches with MHS players listed first:

Quarterfinals
A Boys Singles: Kevin Moore del Travis Lougarier, Tascosa, 6-1, 6-1.
A Boys Doubles: Tim Thomas-Chris Jauz del Ben Nunez-Jeff Probandt, Lee, 7-6, 7-6.
A Girls Singles: Jill Bramlett del Kelly Mason, Lubbock High, 6-0, 6-0; Laura Legg del Kim Jeff, San Angelo, 6-1, 6-1.
A Girls Doubles: Shauna Fuller-Laure Schneider del Sandra McDonald-Rebecca Kinchelow, San Antonio Madison, 6-3, 6-4.

Connors, Krickstein lose at Pen Classic

LA QUINTA, Calif. (AP) — Top-seeded Jimmy Connors and third-seeded Aaron Krickstein were both upset in quarterfinal matches of the $375,000 Pilot Pen Classic men's tennis tournament Friday, meaning that none of the top eight seeds will compete in the semifinals.

Connors was overwhelmed by 14th-seeded Greg Holmes 6-0, 6-3 while Krickstein fell to unseeded David Pate 6-2, 6-1.

Ninth-seeded Libor Pimek of Czechoslovakia will be the highest seed in the semifinals. Pimek advanced to Saturday's action by eliminating unseeded John Lloyd of Great Britain 6-1, 1-6, 6-4.

In the other quarterfinal match Friday, Larry Stefanki, a wild-card entry in the tournament, defeated Tarik Benhabiles of France 7-5, 7-6.

In the semifinals at the La Quinta Hotel Tennis Club, Pimek will face Pate and Holmes will meet the Stefanki-Benhabiles winner.

The finals are scheduled for Sunday. The singles champion will earn $51,000, while the runnerup will collect $25,500.

Holmes, 21, is ranked 25th in the world. He needed only 62 minutes to dispose of Connors, ranked second in the world behind John McEnroe and the defending singles champion of this tournament.

"He won, I lost," Connors said. "It was one of those days. He played well. I'm sure I could have played better. There's no sense worrying about it now."

Connors has said repeatedly this week that he remains uncomfortable with a new racket he began using about three months ago.

Holmes was the NCAA singles champion while attending the University of Utah in 1983 and reached the round of 16 at the U.S. Open in both 1983 and 1984. He had never played the 32-year-old Connors before Friday.

"I knew I had to serve well, which I did," he said. "I played to his forehand. I was playing very well, very consistent, and he was making a lot of errors. I don't know if I could ground-stroke better than what I did."

JCC's Bunch sole survivor against referee's whistles

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — After all but one player on one team fouled out, referees awarded a premature 90-82 victory to Texas College in an Interregional Athletic Conference matchup against Jarvis Christian College.

Five Steers players were left on the court with 1:58 on the clock, facing a lone Jarvis player, Terrance Bunch. All of Bunch's teammates were watching the contest from the bench in Thursday's game.

But referees said Bunch had a problem. There was no one for him to inbound the ball to following a Texas College score or court violation.

Jarvis had suited up eight players for the game. And out of a possible 40 fouls that could be called against the school, 39 were whistled.

Bunch had collected four fouls himself, one away from making it a clean sweep.

Texas College had 24 fouls called, and lost three players. That meant a total of 63 fouls were called in the game.

Bandits, Renegades open third season

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The third United States Football League season begins tonight with one team looking to erase a somewhat embarrassing past.

The opening-night contest matches the Tampa Bay Bandits, a playoff team from last year, against the totally reworked Orlando Renegades, who compiled a 7-29 record as the Washington Federals the past two seasons.

Ten other teams open on Sunday. One of them, the New Jersey Generals, will be looking toward a bright future with a pair of Heisman Trophy winners, running back Herschel Walker and rookie quarterback Doug Flutie, in the backfield.

Sunday's games have the Generals at Birmingham, Baltimore at Jacksonville, Portland at Arizona, Denver at Oakland and Houston at Los Angeles. A game Monday night between Memphis and San Antonio completes the USFL's opening weekend.

Tampa Bay, 14-4 and a playoff qualifier a year ago, is a solid favorite to beat Orlando, but Bandits Coach Steve Spurrier says he's not taking anything for granted, especially in the season opener.

"Our guys have worked hard and I think they're ready to play," Spurrier said. "Now what we have to do is just get out there and see what happens."

Orlando Coach Lee Corso spent most of training camp stripping the Renegades of the old Federals look. The facelift is complete, but he says the club is a long way from becoming a title contender.

Corso, in fact, admits his team "is not really that good" in comparison with the rest of the USFL. General Manager Buzzy Engelberg agreed that Orlando certainly isn't in a class with Tampa Bay at this stage.

"It's a difficult conference and the Bandits are a tough team to open with," said Engelberg, who spent the past two years helping Spurrier and Tampa Bay owner John Bassett mold the Bandits into one of the most successful franchises in the league.

"Look at them, they've been together for three years. Our kids are still meeting each other," he added.

"Tampa is a model franchise and I'm including the National Football League," Engelberg said. "The Bandits are the Utopian franchise in all of professional football."

Engelberg, who moved to Orlando after businessman Don Dizney purchased the struggling Federals, believes the Renegades are on the right track.

"I'd like to think that what we have in Orlando will parallel the success they have in Tampa," he said.

Fifty-four players were included in Dizney's purchase last fall, 12 of whom were waived before training camp opened earlier this month. Only 13 ex-Federals are on the roster as the Renegades head into the regular season.

Tampa Bay, on the other hand, has made few changes.

Arkansas can't rest; Rice has too much to play for FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Normally, a basketball game between a Southwest Conference contender and a cellar dweller would be a mismatch. On Sunday, in Houston, both Arkansas and Rice have incentive.

The Razorbacks are 18-10 and 9-5 in the SWC. SMU and Texas Tech are tied for the top spot at 9-4 and play each other so Arkansas is in the chase.

Rice is 10-14 and 2-11 and must win at least one of its last three league games to have a chance to qualify for the eighth and final spot in the SWC tournament.

"Without the league tournament, it might not be a difficult to go down there and beat them, but they're fighting for a trip to Dallas," said Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton. "I'm sure Tommy Suits is telling his team, it's a must win for them. Of course, it's a must win for us if we're going to stay in the hunt."

"These aren't normal circumstances for a game against a team at the bottom of the league," Sutton said. "It'll be a gut check."

Arkansas appeared out of the league race after losing to Texas Tech a week ago in Fayetteville. But the Razorbacks beat Houston 73-59 Wednesday night and SMU lost to TCU.

"Rice has a good ballclub," Sutton said. "When you look at the films, you can see they have lost many close games. They might be as good as some of the teams in the middle of our league."

He said Arkansas played well when it beat the Owls 67-56 in Fayetteville.

"I hope our plays understand how difficult this game will be, the coaches do," Sutton said. "Rice can really shoot the ball and they're very well coached."

"They run a flex offense similar to TCU. They're patient and I don't expect them to run up and down the floor like they did against Houston. They'll play some man defense, some 2-3 and maybe a 1-1-3 to keep the ball away from Joe."

He was referring to Arkansas' 6-foot-11 center Joe Kleine, who scored 27 against the Owls in Fayetteville.

"They knocked us out of a chance to share the title last

JIM MURRAY

What? 'Rites of Fall' upon us in February?

Well, it's that time of year again. Frost is on the pumpkin, days are getting shorter, leaves are turning red. The chill of winter is in the air.

It must be. There's a football game at the L.A. Coliseum Sunday. An opening game. Season kickoff.

But the calendar says — what? February 24?

Even for California's unclimate, this is ridiculous. Man and boy, I've been going to football-season openers for more years than I care to tell you about. The Yale Bowl, Trinity Field, the Polo Grounds, Yankee Stadium. Raccoon coat, hip-flask weather, tuba-frozen-to-the-lips weather. That's what football is all about. I never went to a one at the end of February.

Pro football has never abided by the rules. Even in the early days, it was a kind of traveling medicine show in which they took the reigning college sensation — Jim Thorpe, Red Grange, the Four Horsemen — surrounded them with 10 guys from the roundhouse and sold tickets.

They were gypsies, innovators. They took the archaic, flying-wedge college game and opened it up to give it some of the Perils-of-Pauline Saturday matinee suspense and thrills. They took the game away from Bronko Nagurski and gave it to Sammy Baugh. You could throw the ball anytime, anywhere, and as often as you wanted to.

But, most of all, they played their game when the colleges didn't. This included Sundays — and December.

They said you couldn't play that late in the year because the ground was frozen and so was the air. So, the pros put on rubber-soled shoes, bought some handwarmers and played their championship games clear up to Christmas.

But no one ever thought of July before. Until the USFL came along. These guys will not only play anytime but anywhere. One team has gone clear from Boston to New Orleans to Portland in one 12-month period. They go through more towns than a road company doing "The Count Of Monte Cristo." No one knows for sure where the Chicago Blitz is.

The Los Angeles Express know where they are. They're just not sure who they are. Many years ago, John Lardner, describing the sale of the St. Louis Browns, wrote: "Many people were surprised the St. Louis Browns could be sold because they didn't think the St. Louis Browns were owned."

Well, the L.A. Express really isn't owned. It's kind of a public trust or the embarrassing ward of a prominent family — the kind they would lock up in the attic of the family castle in the old days, or tie to the bed, or pack off to India with the stipulation he never tell anybody his real name.

The Express was originally owned by two guys from Colorado who made their poke in cable television. As soon as they realized putting on football in summer was like putting on chamber music in Perth Amboy, they put the club in the window with a tag on it. It said: "Make offer."

In lots of leagues, you can't tell the players without a number. In the USFL, you can't keep track of the owners without a number. J. William Oldenburg was a lot more interesting than anybody who worked for him. Most guys who have a billion dollars are at great pains to conceal that fact from the working population. Bill Oldenburg was not shy at all about his billion. Particularly since he didn't have it.

Pretty soon, he didn't have the Express, either. So, the club went looking for any other at-large billionaires, preferably real ones, who thought owning a football team was like owning a coal mine with cheerleaders. They finally offered the club around to anybody who had an unexpired American Express card, but these guys had briefer career spans than World War I machine-guns.

The one thing that used to distinguish the old pro football was continuity of ownership. George Halas owned the Chicago Bears from inception till his death. So it was with George Preston Marshall and the Washington Redskins. Art Rooney is the only owner the Pittsburgh Steelers ever had, and the Mara family is in the third generation of ownership of the New York Giants.

The Express has had more owners than a 1949 De Soto. To paraphrase the old saying, "Success has many owners, failure is an orphan." The league found the Express on its doorstep with a note pinned to it. The league sighed and took it in. Not to have L.A. and New York in your league is not to have a league.

to have L.A. and New York in your league is not to have a league.

It is the hope of every new league to be swallowed up, in whole or in part, by the existing league. It happened to the entire AFL. It happened to key franchises in the old All-America Football Conference — Cleveland, San Francisco and Baltimore.

It did not happen to any entrants in the old World Football League. And it is not likely to happen to any in the USFL. What is more likely is that the old league will cannibalize players, not franchises. As the French say, in another context, "Why buy the cow when you can get the milk?"

Still, summer football is a nice novelty. Like six-day bicycle races, bunion derbies, Hula-Hoops, it has its moment. The USFL is the only league in which the owners are more interesting than the athletes, and the boys of summer in this sport wear three-piece suits, carry briefcases and tell people that they're billionaires and know Wayne Newton personally.

Kite shares Doral lead despite penalizing himself

Gary Hallberg watches his tee shot Friday during the second round of play in the Doral-Eastern Open golf tournament in Miami. Hallberg is in a three-way tie for first place at 141.

MIAMI (AP) — Despite a self-imposed penalty shot, Tom Kite managed to coax a hard-won 70 from difficult winds and moved into a tie for the lead Friday in the second round of the $400,000 Doral-Eastern Open golf tournament.

Jack Nicklaus, who had an opening 76, turned his tournament around with a 68 — the best round of the day — and moved into contention at 144, even par and only three off the pace.

"I hit the ball very well," Nicklaus said. "I've improved with every tournament this year. I just need to play several good rounds in one tournament, have a good tournament and get a little more confidence."

Kite reached the tournament halfway point with a 141 total, three shots under par on Doral's Blue Monster course which was raked by 25 mph winds that gusting up to 35 mph.

"It was at least a two-club wind, maybe a three-club wind at times," Kite said. "I won last year at 17 under (par). That score could win by 12 or 13 shots in winds like this."

He shared the 36-hole lead with former Doral winner Mark McCumber and Gary Hallberg. McCumber had a second-round 71 and Hallberg shot 70.

While not in contention, U.S. Open champ Fuzzy Zoeller achieved his goal of making the cut. Zoeller, making his first start since major back surgery last year, said before the tournament that he hoped only to qualify for the final two rounds of play. He did that with a 73 and a 147 total.

A single shot off the lead at 142 were Gibby Gilbert, Morris Hatafsky and Peter Oosterhuis. Gilbert and Hatafsky closed up with a 69.

Bill Kratzert, with a 73 that included a double-bogey on the 18th hole, was at 143. So was rookie Greg Twigg, the first-round leader. Twigg, who bogeyed four holes in a row at one stretch, finished with a 75.

PGA champion Lee Trevino, a single stroke off the pace after the first 18 holes, went to a 75 and finished 36 holes at 144.

And British Open champ Seve Ballesteros of Spain opened his 1985 season in frustrating fashion. Ballesteros, who represents Doral on the American tour, had a 76 and a 154 total. He failed to qualify for the final two rounds.

Kite would have had the lead alone but for the penalty on his 13th hole. He missed the green on the par-3, removed a leaf from behind his ball, addressed it, then saw the ball move a fraction of an inch. He called the penalty.

"I'd just bogeyed two holes in a row and now I get a penalty. I'm going from 4-under par to what looks like oblivion," Kite said.

"Then I chipped it in for a par." That saved kept him close, and he regained a share of the lead with a 15-foot birdie putt on his 18th.

King, Palli share second round Tucson Open lead

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Betsy King, the top money winner on the 1984 LPGA tour, and Anne-Marie Palli shot 2-under par 70s, each getting an eagle, to share the lead after Friday's second round of the $175,000 Tucson Open.

After matching their first-round scores, the leaders were at 4-under 140 after 36 holes over the 6,212-yard Randolph Golf Course.

Judy Clark and Lisa Young also carded 70s Friday and were one stroke behind the leaders at 141. Deadlocked at 142 were Hall of Famer Kathy Whitworth; Japan's Ayako Okamoto, who won here in 1982; and Hollis Stacy, whose 69 matched the lowest round shot Friday.

Palli, 29, a native of France, tied King, one of the early finishers, by driving her second shot 221 yards to within 18 inches of the cup on her final hole. She sank the putt for an eagle-3.

King made four par-saving putts.

"I had the kind of round that you can deal with after you've had experience out here on the tour," said King, an eight-year pro who spent most of the day scrambling. "If you're a first year player and play like I did today, you'd have a hard time handling it. This round was a lot of work."

At first, Whalen listed four players as still in contention for the full-time job with senior letterman John Cox leading the way. The other three are juniors from the JV and one a transfer student from Grand Prairie. Matt Sears, who just finished basketball and Toby Keel are up from JV and Ben Grimes is the transfer.

At third base, Ricky Castaneda, a junior promoted from JV, and Mark Torres, a senior letterman from last year are still fighting for the position. In right, Jamie Salazar, JV, junior, and Paul "Bullet" Neatherlin, letterman, senior, are in the running.

Neatherlin is also among four pitchers Whalen expects to see a lot of time on the mound this year, especially since none have really come forward yet. The others are Stanton, the only lefty; Michael Gonzales and De La Garza.

"I don't see, right now, anybody that can go out and pitch seven innings," said Whalen. "They're either not strong enough to go the distance or don't have the control for seven. The most consistent so far has been De La Garza (the only junior pitcher). The other three can all be good."

Whalen isn't looking at the '85 season as a high-scoring one for the Bulldogs. "I don't think we'll put a lot of runs on the board so we'll have to rely on good defense and consistent pitching to keep the runners off the bases. On offense, we'll have to move our runners around, a lot of bunting and a lot of stealing."

About the defense, Whalen has seen both sides of the story so far in scrimmage play.

"In our first scrimmage (against Lee) it was horrendous but got better against Andrews and was good against Lee when we played them again. The second time we only had one error in the infield.

"The outfield is a question mark," said Whalen. "Our defense in the outfield is suspect. I don't know how we'll do."

Today, the Bulldog coaches will have a chance to answer a few of their questions when they host Andrews in an 11 a.m. scrimmage at Doggie Diamond. On March 1 and 2 they'll be able to see what the rest of the league has to offer when they compete in the Pre-District tournament in Abilene.

Before seeing what the others have to offer, Whalen is picking defending 4-5A champion Abilene Cooper as the team to beat this year.

"Cooper has all those hard throwers back and their coach says they have three up from the JV with good arms. Lee will be up there if their pitching comes through and I think San Angelo will be pretty good. Permian might be good, but you never know about Permian."

Permian's just another of Whalen's "question marks."

First baseman Donny Rivas (.138) and second baseman Dirk Bergoon (.042) both field their positions well, but must chip in with the bats for the Rebs to be successful.

Third base will be manned by senior Paul Colwell (.071 in 14 at bats) with capable back up provided by Cary Brown (.130 in 23 at bats). Neither hit with authority last season in reserve roles, but Johnson expects improvement with more frequent use.

The outfield should also be stingy on opposing hitters, and with Dan Gonzales (.400, 5 RBI) expecting to see full time duty for the entire season, it should pack some punch at the plate, too.

The left-hand hitting Gonzales will open the season in left field and will be expected to take some of the RBI load from Phillips' shoulders. Gonzales was one of Lee's most consistent hitters after inheriting the right field spot the final five games of last season.

Junior Tuey Rankin steps into the leadership role in centerfield this season for Lee. Rankin was one of JV coach Ronnie Stephens' top players last season, and Johnson hopes he can do the same on the varsity level.

The final outfield position is still unsettled for the Rebs. Johnson will test injured senior Terry Ullom in rightfield, but others could get a look.

The pitching staff returns three right-handers, but the big loss is all-district performer Bryan Willis. Willis carried the yeoman's share of the load for Lee last season, sporting a fine 7-2 record and 1.68 earned run average in district play.

Making up for the loss of Willis will be seniors Mike Small and Mike Rittenberry and junior George Matta.

Small (1-0 in district play last season) should open Tuesday's double header at Lubbock Coronado and may be ready to go the distance, depending on circumstances.

Rittenberry (0-1) is likely to get the call in the nightcap, while Matta (2-1) will be saved for relief on Tuesday, but will see a good deal of starting duty as the season progresses.

"Our philosophy on pitching is to start the best one that is ready, then if he gets in trouble, we'll relieve with the next best," Johnson said.

March 1 and 2 Lee travels to Abilene for the Pre-District tournament before returning to open the home season March 5 at Angels Stadium. The Rebs host a twinbill with Regional champion Lubbock Monterey starting at 5 p.m.

AFL-CIO council dealing with union problems

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (AP) — The AFL-CIO executive council Friday ended a winter meeting that focused on how to deal with organized labor's problems, most notably a slide in membership that has affected all aspects of the labor movement.

"We may have carried 60 or 62 percent of the union households in the 1964 presidential election; the fact is we don't have enough of them," Gerald McEntee, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, said in reflecting on the AFL-CIO's endorsement of Democrat Walter F. Mondale.

McEntee's union has exceeded the 1 million mark in membership and continues to grow, but many other unions are in trouble.

Union membership in the 1980s has declined, reaching 17.8 million last year compared with 19.6 million in 1962 and 22.2 million in 1980. The 1964 figure represented less than 19 percent of the workforce, down from 35 percent in 1954, according to Labor Department statistics.

Economic recession in recent years has hit hardest in the heavily unionized manufacturing sector, depleting the ranks of many unions, concludes an AFL-CIO report, an unusually critical self-analysis.

"Unions find themselves behind the pace of change," with, for example, 50 percent of the AFL-CIO's current membership in manufacturing and construction, the report says. Less than 10 percent of the service sector is organized, the report says, while in the 1970s, 90 percent of all new jobs were added in the that segment of the economy.

Despite its stern assessment, the report finds what it calls "the seeds for a resurgence of the labor movement."

Unions are increasingly successful in enrolling the types of workers who are forming an increasingly large share of the workforce, it said. Thirty-nine percent of union members have some college education or received a degree.

The report also concludes that among non-organized service workers, unskilled workers and professionals, all of which are expected to grow, 60 percent accept the premise of the trade union movement—that workers are more effective in obtaining redress for grievances when they act in concert.

"Survival is like Darwin, I guess," AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland told a news conference Thursday. "It's a constant adaptation to change. It's been that way since the beginning of time. I think it's been our history, and I think it'll always be our history. I can walk you through the pages of labor history and you know what's been our story."

Army boxers could be best amateur group in nation

By KARL KUNKEL

FORT HOOD (AP) — Loren Ross could have been in a Fort Hood mess hall fixing dinner. But instead, he was at the Abrams Physical Fitness Center training for upcoming national and international boxing matches and proudly carrying knowledge that he is the best amateur light heavyweight in the United States.

A nice trade-off, yes?
"For real ... anytime," he quickly responded, allowing his usually stern and military-like posture slip into an animated frame of mind where words flow easily — almost rhythmically — and lively gestures are a natural part of communication. After all, we're talking his language.

Ross is just one of several boxers who train religiously and rigorously full-time to be a member of the Fort Hood boxing team. And the 20-year-old boxing veteran of nine years is in pretty good company — the crew of boxers Coach Ken Adams has quietly assembled could easily be the best in the nation.

Ross, whose weight class keeps him below 178 pounds, is ranked No. 1 in the U.S. by the Amateur Boxing Federation and teammate Ronnie Hughes is No. 2 in that very same class.

Brian London, a light flyweight (to 106 pounds), is also ranked No. 2 in the nation by the ABF. Bruce Baldwin accounts for another No. 2 ranking, with this one in the heavy-weight division. Alfred Fuller is the fourth-ranked middleweight and Jesus Gonzalez is the eighth-ranked light flyweight.

"We'll take on any club in the U.S. — military or civilian — and beat them," Adams said with a calm confidence that leaves room for little doubt that he's probably right. "We have the best team in the nation ... and we are probably the only amateur team in Texas that is well known internationally. Over the past three or four years, we've had more boxers ranked nationally than any other club. Period."

Adams, while taking a break from a recent afternoon of pushing sweat-soaked athletes through more training, attempting to set up future matches and handling the likes of several other boxing issues, wasn't bragging — just telling it like it is, as one boxing fan would put it.

Fort Hood, although not so recognized by the people of Central Texas, could be considered one of the world's powerhouses in amateur boxing. In fact, two of Adams' boxers — Ross and London — have been chosen to compete as a part of U.S.A.'s international team during recent months.

Ross, who is considered No. 2 in the world by "Amateur Boxer" magazine — the most respected, if not the only, international amateur boxing publication — defeated Young-Su Ann of South Korea while to help the U.S.A. to a 7-5 win in Las Vegas February 9. London found international fighting a little rougher, though, losing a split decision to Kwang-Sun Kim.

Despite the different outcomes, Ross and London have a lot in common: Both represent a method which thousands of young boxers use to better their skills at a time in their life when hours of hard work and mental conditioning can be hard to accrue — or afford. Simply put, these boxers have gone through basic military training and have been assigned boxing as their military "job," or Military Occupational Specialty (MOS) in Army terms.

"That's something we (the Army) have to offer," Adams said while glancing around at the top-notch training facilities. "We can't guarantee a guy a place on the team if he enlists or anything of that nature, but we can go around in our recruiting efforts to high schools and places like that and say, 'Hey, we have this program and if you're good enough, you might get to be a part of this.'"

Perhaps a pulled string here or there and what you have is a situation that offers a young man room and board and a chance to work under one of the most respected coaches in the nation. Not to mention help his nation in international competition. But don't think the boxers have lost their sense of respect for what has put them where they are today.

"I enlisted hoping that I could make the team, but I had to be prepared to do whatever was necessary as a soldier until my chance came," Ross explained. Indeed. Until a few months ago, Ross was cooking vittles at the Freeman Dining Facility.

Ross began boxing in 1976 but later gave it up in 1978 "because my heart just wasn't in it," he said. "I was young, a little immature and had a lot of running around to do. And there was some girl-chasing, too."

But by the time he had made his last trip from his ghetto-stricken home to his neighborhood high school in the poorer part of Nashville, Ross realized he may hold the ticket out of his predicament in his hands. Literally.

"When you grow up in a situation like that, you have no choice but to fall in with the crowd and learn what it takes to survive, let alone win," Ross said. "Coming to the Army gave me a chance to get in a place where people have discipline and respect for the things you have to go through to succeed."

A "normal" day for Ross and most of his teammates starts with a four-mile jog at 6:30 a.m. before breakfast. That's followed with time to take care of cleaning up the barracks and other detail jobs. Of course, there are all sorts of hidden responsibilities, too.

"I have to really watch what I eat," remarked London, who, at 5-3, seems more suited for riding thoroughbreds to the wire than riding opponents to the ropes. "I sure can't go to any buffets during training," he added with a mock frown.

London, a native of Arlington and graduate of Sam Houston High, who was once a member of the Gorman Masonry Boxing Club in Fort Worth — the same club that produced Donald Curry and Gene Hatcher, began his military career as an administrative specialist.

"I knew (after enlisting) if they gave me a chance, I'd be very competitive and probably make the (boxing) squad," London said. "But I went through basic and all of that with the attitude that I'd have to be a soldier first. I was ready to do what I had to do." "Doing what one has to do to succeed" is an unspoken yet recurring philosophy that permeates the fieldhouse atmosphere.

the reins at Fort Hood seven years ago. His disposition and personality seems well suited for his job — outspoken when he feels the genuine need, modest when it counts and fiery enough to handle a whole handful of young boxers. Most of this comes from respect for the men who go through "what it takes to succeed."

"I don't suppose there have been any statistics or anything written on this recently, but about 1 1/2 years ago Sports Illustrated did a story on the toughest sports to master," Adams said. "And boxing was considered the most demanding sport. 'Think about it. A boxer has to work to build power, speed, quickness and don't forget all the conditioning work. Plus, he has to regulate his weight and give up a lot. I mean a WHOLE lot," he added with a trace of a grin hinting around his lips. "I have a 10 p.m. bedcheck. And they know not to miss bedcheck."

Because of the continual contact with the athletes, Adams and his assistants have formulated an intriguing chemistry. Should an athlete step out of line, rest assured the coaches will be all over him; let an athlete perform well or receive undue criticism and they're still the first ones by his side. Take for example, the animosity or jealousy some servicemen must feel toward the boxers as they train and compete as their "job."

"Now and then," Adams said, "there will be some commander or first sergeant who might have never excelled in any sport whatsoever and he'll say he can't release an athlete because his job is so important to the unit. When, in reality, it isn't true."

"Besides, if a guy has a talent isn't it our job to see that he is given the chance to improve? ... And I'll tell you something else, a good athlete is going to be a good soldier. Anytime."

Mavs pull away, tip Bullets by nine

Associated Press

DALLAS — Dallas forward Mark Aguirre scored 45 points and the Mavericks broke a 101-101 tie with 3:32 left with nine straight points to take a 110-101 over the Washington Bullets Friday night in National Basketball Association play.

Washington's final basket was a layup by Cliff Robinson that tied the score at 101-101. Rookie forward Sam Perkins completed a three-point play that put Dallas up 104-101 with three minutes to play.

Rolando Blackman, Brad Davis and Jay Vincent each hit a field goal down the stretch while the Bullets were held scoreless.

The Mavericks, 31-25, won their third straight and moved six games above .500 for the first time this year.

Houston 117, Portland 103
HOUSTON — Akeem Olajuwon scored 35 points Friday night to lead the Houston Rockets to a victory over the Portland Trail Blazers.

Houston held a narrow 56-50 lead at intermission, but charged back in the third period and outscored the Trail Blazers 36-26. Olajuwon and Rodney McCray each scored 12 points to lead the Rockets' surge.

Houston, 33-22, started slowly, hitting only one basket in the first 3 minutes of play. Portland took an 8-3 lead, but the Rockets outscored the Blazers 12-2 with 3:50 left in the first period to take a 27-22 advantage.

The loss was the third straight for Portland, 25-31.

Houston guard John Lucas played his first game Friday night after a two-month suspension. Lucas, who was dismissed after tests detected cocaine in his system, played about 2 minutes and scored 2 points.

Rockets Coach Bill Fitch also returned to the sidelines after a two-game suspension for a technical foul against a referee last week.

Pacers 122, Lakers 113

INDIANAPOLIS — Herb Williams scored 31 points and rookie Vern Fleming added a career-high 27 Friday night, leading Indiana over Los Angeles, snapping the Lakers' nine-game winning streak.

Beating the Lakers for just the fourth time in 24 meetings since they joined the NBA in 1976, the Pacers three times turned back Los Angeles rallies that erased big Indiana leads.

Warriors 131, Nets 127

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Mickey Johnson scored 10 of his 22 points in the final 3:26 as the Golden State Warriors rallied from a 15-point second half deficit and defeated the New Jersey Nets, snapping a 13-game road losing streak.

Purvis Short topped the Warriors with 35 points and Eric Floyd added a season-high 32 as Golden State posted its first road victory since a 101-98 victory over Seattle on December 27.

Johnson hit a three-point play with 3:26 left to give Golden State a 119-117 lead, and after Buck Williams tied the game with two free throws, Johnson canned two free throws to give the Warriors a 121-119 lead.

NBA Roundup

Celtics 115, Bulls 105

HARTFORD, Conn. — Larry Bird scored a game-high 34 points, Kevin McHale had 24 and Robert Parish added 23 as the Boston Celtics held off Chicago in the fourth quarter and sent the Bulls to their 11th straight road defeat.

The Celtics, who held onto their half-game lead over the Philadelphia 76ers in the Atlantic Division, led by 16 entering the fourth quarter. But, with rookie sensation Michael Jordan scoring 15 of his 26 points in the period, Chicago cut the lead to four with 1:25 remaining.

The Celtics, who have not lost this season when they've gone into the fourth quarter with a lead, did not tarnish their record.

McHale, who is starting in place of the injured Cedric Maxwell, and Parish each scored and added a foul shot in the final minute to seal the victory.

76ers 110, Pistons 99

PHILADELPHIA — Charles Barkley scored a career-high 29 points and collected 17 rebounds as the Philadelphia 76ers beat the injury-riddled Detroit Pistons.

Moses Malone scored 22 points and Julius Erving celebrated his 35th birthday with 19 as the Sixers won their seventh in their last nine games.

Vinnie Johnson scored 19 points and collected 15 assists, while John Long and Tony Campbell had 17 points each for the Pistons, who have lost seven of their last nine games.

Detroit played without guard Isiah Thomas, who has a bruised thigh, and Kelly Tripucka, who has strained ligaments in his left ankle.

Knicks 113, Hawks 105

ATLANTA — Bernard King scored 35 points and Pat Cummings added 22 as the New York Knicks defeated the Atlanta Hawks.

The victory broke a five-game losing streak for New York.

Spurs 118, Suns 111

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Mike Mitchell scored six of his 30 points in the final period, including two crucial free throws with 27 seconds left Friday night, as San Antonio beat the Phoenix Suns for the Spurs' first victory here in seven years.

George Gervin added a game-high 32 points for San Antonio to become the ninth player in NBA history to reach the 25,000 plateau.

The lead see-sawed throughout the second half with the score tied five times in the final quarter — the last at 111-111 when Phoenix's Alvin Adams sank two free throws with 37 seconds left.

Mitchell's foul shots 10 seconds later put the Spurs ahead for good at 118-111, and San Antonio's Alvin Robertson hit two more with 12 seconds left for a 115-111 bulge.

Jazz 102, Cavaliers 98

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Thurl Bailey scored 27 points and Darrell Griffith had 21 as the Utah Jazz held off the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Baylor head basketball coach Jim Haller leaves the Baylor administration building after submitting his resignation Friday, effective at the end of the Bears' season.

Baylor head coach turns in resignation

WACO (AP) — Baylor University head basketball Coach Jim Haller turned in his resignation Friday, the day after public disclosure of a taped conversation about payments to a player and steroid drugs.

University President Herbert Reynolds, who had been investigating the basketball program since last week, said he had accepted the resignation but that Haller would coach through the Southwest Conference tournament, March 8-10.

Haller was at a team practice and did not attend the news conference. "I was not pressured into resigning. I truthfully decided I just needed to do something else," he told The Associated Press.

"It hurts when you know you're not going to do something the rest of your life that you love doing," the coach said.

"I've always said I probably wouldn't last at Baylor past 40," said Haller, 39, who became coach here eight years ago.

No replacement was named. The team is 9-15 overall this season and 2-11 in the conference.

A secretly recorded conversation in which Haller talks of steroids and giving money to a player was broadcast Thursday night on television station WFAA in Dallas.

Former reserve center John Wheeler said he made the tape within the last three weeks when he went to talk with Haller about getting money for car payments, WFAA reported.

WFAA said it had obtained a copy of the tape from a confidential source outside the university. A station employee said that Wheeler did not disclose why he made the recording.

Haller told Wheeler on the tape that "I had a check processed for you. So I want you to take this check to the bank, you give it to the bank, and you tell them this is for January, February and March. Give it to them right now and you won't have to worry about it until April."

Haller told the AP that during the Christmas break, when the dorm is closed on campus, it is normal practice to give all the players on the team a check for meals.

"I gave him a check for $172, which would cover quite a few meals. But then I found out that he was not there during the entire period. But I elected to give him the check anyway," Haller said.

"It was wrong. I admit it was wrong. But I felt sorry for the kid and I feel sorry for him now," the coach said.

He said Wheeler had some car payments for $50 a month and "I suggested that he use it for something like his car payments. It is a nitpicky situation, but it is still a violation of the rules. I knew better. I have to listen to the music."

Also on the tape, Haller told Wheeler he knew the player had been using steroids, a substance used to improve athletes' performance, for about seven months.

Haller told the player that the deaths of two Clemson University athletes were attributed to steroids, which are illegal without a doctor's prescription.

In October, traces of the anti-inflammatory drug were found in just one Clemson athlete who died of congenital heart disease.

"I wished I didn't even know you were taking them," Haller said on the tape. "I'm out of that. Not because I don't want to help you, because I'm scared to death of it."

Oilers skate by Nordiques, 6-3

Associated Press

EDMONTON, Alberta — Jari Kurri and Mark Napier scored 26 seconds apart midway through the first period to send the Edmonton Oilers on their way to a 6-3 National Hockey League victory over the Quebec Nordiques Friday night.

Lee Fogolin, Paul Coffey, Wayne Gretzky, with his 61th of the season, and Pat Hughes, who scored into an empty net, added other the Edmonton goals.

Brent Ashton, on a power play late in the second period, and Alain Lemieux and Brad Maxwell in the third period, scored for Quebec.

The Nordiques dominated the first 10 minutes of the game and only three outstanding saves by Edmonton goaltender Andy Moog kept them scoreless.

And it was Moog again in the final 10 minutes of the game who frustrated the Nordiques' offense. Moog made several acrobatic saves in the late stages to preserve Edmonton's lead.

The Oilers didn't get a shot on net the first nine minutes but Kurri scored on their second one at 10:50.

Napier scored on their next shot and suddenly the Oilers were in control.

Kurri's goal was his 58th of the season and came on a set-up by Mike Krushelnyski, who scored his 200th NHL point.

Before the Nordiques could get settled, Napier's centering pass bounced in off Quebec's Mario Marois.

Fogolin scored into the open top half of the net with goaltender Mario Gosselin and defenseman Normand Rochefort tangled up on the ice.

Blues 4, Sabres 1

BUFFALO, N.Y. — St. Louis parlayed a tight-checking defense and goals by Greg Paslawski, Pat Hickey, Bernie Federko and Rik Wilson to defeat the Buffalo Sabres.

Dave Andreychuk scored the lone goal for Buffalo.

NHL Roundup

The Blues never let the Sabres get into an offensive flow as they lined up at their own blue line and refused entrance into their zone. When the Sabres did manage to break in, St. Louis goalie Rick Wamsley was spectacular.

Wamsley faced only 11 shots through the first two periods and 23 overall; but, when he was tested, he came up with some acrobatic saves. After a scoreless first period, Paslawski put the Blues ahead just 24 seconds into the middle period.

Brian Sutter dug the puck out of the corner and passed in front to Paslawski who beat Buffalo goalie Bob Sauve from 10 feet.

Three minutes later, the Blues thought they had a goal when Perry Anderson sent a backhand towards a vacant Sabre net. However, Craig Ramsay deflected the puck away as it reached the goal line, and the goal judge ruled no goal.

The Blues argued that the puck had crossed the line but to no avail.

Rangers 8, Penguins 3

PITTSBURGH — Peter Sundstrom scored three goals to lead the New York Rangers to a victory over the Pittsburgh Penguins.

It marked the third victory in the past 11 games for the Rangers, who were without center Pierre Larouche.

The loss was Pittsburgh's ninth in the past 10 games.

Sundstrom opened the scoring with a short-handed goal at 7:14. Thirty-eight seconds later, teammate Reijo Ruotsalainen added a goal.

New York's Steve Patrick took a pass from James Patrick at 12:51 for his 10th goal of the year. With 37 seconds left in the period, Bob Brooke had a short goal off a pass from George McPhee.

Pittsburgh's Doug Shedden converted a shot from the blue line at 1:12 in the second period to narrow the gap.

'Bubble boy's' parents miss 'music of motors'

By PAUL RECER
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON — David, the "boy in a bubble," has been dead for a year now, but his parents still miss the "music of the motors" that was the symphony of life for their son.

For 12 years, the constant, unwavering hum of motors pumping germ-free air into David's plastic bubble was the sound of hope, a droning promise that medical science would find for him a way to live in the outside world.

The motors fell silent forever on Feb. 22, 1984 when David died. An experimental treatment failed to provide him the immunity he needed for a normal life.

"I miss the music of the motors," said Carol Ann, David's mother. "It was the last thing I heard at night and the motors would lull me to sleep. They were the first thing I listened for in the morning."

After David died, she said, "the house was so quiet it was eerie. We would cry ourselves to sleep."

David's plight attracted international attention. A year after his death, he is remembered by thousands who still write letters, often delivered with addresses of only "David's Parents" or "Family of Bubble Boy."

David was born with severe combined immune deficiency syndrome, a condition in which there is no immune protection from disease. He was defenseless against the dirty world.

Prenatal tests, taken because an older brother died of SCIDS, showed that David had the immune deficiency. He was delivered in 1972 by Caesarean section and placed immediately into a germ-free plastic bubble.

The bubbles grew in size as he did, and David lived in transparent isolation, untouched by a bare human hand or by a mother's kiss. His food was sterilized and limited. All his life he yearned for a Coke. He never got it.

His parents, Carol Ann and David Sr., who agreed to be interviewed by The Associated Press on condition their last name not be used, viewed David's life in the bubble as only temporary, just a safe place for their son to wait until a cure could be found.

But as the wait stretched from months into years, they tried to create for David a real boyhood, with friends, schooling and a warm family life.

A series of bubble chambers was constructed in the living and dining rooms of the family home.

Airtight, black rubber gloves extended into the bubble, permitting David to reach out, or the family to reach in. Those gloves were used to deliver both hugs and, when needed, spankings, said Carol Ann.

David attended school by telephone and participated in classroom activities, even competing in a spelling bee. His grades were above average.

Only rarely was there a moment when a family member was not with David. Each night, his parents or his sister slept on a pallet beside the bubble. Except for times when he was in the hospital, Carol Ann and David Sr. were away from their son together only five times in 12 years.

"The times we did go out, we were not complete," his mother said. "We were complete as a family, here, together, in this house."

"David missed picnics, sailing and skiing," she said. "But he did enjoy many, many things. It was a good life, a quality life. He developed quite normally and quite naturally."

David's memory is bright at the Texas Children's Hospital where he was a patient periodically all his life, and where he died.

The David Fund, started at the hospital after his death, has received 1,442 donations, at least one from every state, Canada and France, and totals $204,147. The money has been used by the hospital to treat 160 children, all with immune difficulties. Two with SCIDS have been cured with the treatment that failed for David.

"He stands out as the clearest example of immune deficiency," said Dr. William T. Shearer, David's principal physician. "There is no other person who is so well known. I travel to other countries and they know instantly who David is. No other explanation is needed."

Ordinary people remember David, too. Bundles of letters arrive daily at the hospital.

"There are boxes and boxes of letters at the hospital," Carol Ann said. "I go there often and work all day processing them."

Shearer believes David will be the last child ever to be placed in such isolation. At the time he was born, there was no cure for SCIDS. Children with it died. It was that simple.

"David was put into isolation to await a development that might save his life," Shearer said. "Medicine had the ability to prolong his life, but not the technology to cure the problem. New technology is now here. It is still experimental, but at least you can offer survival."

When he was born, nobody expected David would be isolated for 12 years, becoming the longest surviving victim of untreated SCIDS.

The snowshoe rabbit is brown and gray the majority of the year but a certain time he turns white to blend with the winter snow in order to be less conspicuous to his predators. Sometimes he changes too soon. He turns white before the snow falls and instead of becoming less noticeable he becomes more noticeable. There are times in our lives when change is necessary. Discover those times with us and how to change properly.

SKY HIGH

The girders go higher and higher. It seems as if eventually they will snap and break like sticks. The workers seem small and vulnerable from a distance. Passersby marvel at their ability to work at such heights. "Too much for me," a man mutters, and a woman says, "I'd get dizzy and fall."

Still, the girders go higher and the work goes on until one day the building is finished. It stands tall, shinning new, waiting for the history that will be written between its walls. Then people will forget about the steel girders beneath its surface, forget its hidden strength. But this is no structure that will collapse in the wind.

In all of us there are reservoirs of unsuspected hidden strength. Do you really know yourself and your own potential?

Just as the steel in a building needs tempering, so we need to fortify our inner strength. In our churches we learn to know what we are and what we can be. Worship every week—you will be the stronger for it.

POSITIVE THINKING

It's all in the vocabulary

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

At Saranac Lake, New York, there is a bronze statue of a man who sits wrapped in thought, gazing into the distance of the Adirondacks. On its pedestal is inscribed the word Acquiescence. The statue commemorates a noble man. The inscription is a tribute to the force of an idea embodied in a single word.

The man was Edward Livingston Trudeau, a great pioneer in the treatment of tuberculosis. He had contracted the disease himself at an early age, scarcely two years after obtaining his degree as a medical doctor. He was obliged to give up his practice in the city and move to Saranac for his health's sake. There he founded a laboratory for the study of TB and a sanitarium for tubercular patients who could not afford the cost of treatment. He lived and worked at Saranac the rest of his days.

The word Acquiescence on the bronze statue stands for the realization which grew upon Trudeau across the years, that some things in life are inevitable and a person must learn to yield to the will of God. In his autobiography he wrote of having witnessed at Saranac Lake many instances of "the victory of the spirit over the body," but referred with special admiration to those victories "that demand acquiescence in worldly failure and in the supreme sacrifice of life...." What a mighty role a word can play in the shaping of a man's philosophy.

A word spoken and savored mentally can change and dispel a negative condition of the heart of mind. Some psychiatrists even prescribe for certain patients the daily repetition of appropriate health-giving words as part of the therapy for their emotional disturbances. And I remember reading of how a well-known professor of neuropathology, being personally afflicted with inferiority feelings, developed more self-confidence by pronouncing to himself 25 or 30 times a day the word invulnerability.

A certain man with whom I was acquainted used to combat a chronic tendency to acute nervousness by saying over and over various brief phrases from the Bible which to him suggested peace. For example, "the waters of Shiloh." This is a place I myself have visited — the biblical Shiloh. The waters there are just waters — no more beautiful or peaceful than dozens of lakes and streams anywhere in the United States. But the phrase "the waters of Shiloh" has something mellifluous about it, musical, gentle, evocative of peace.

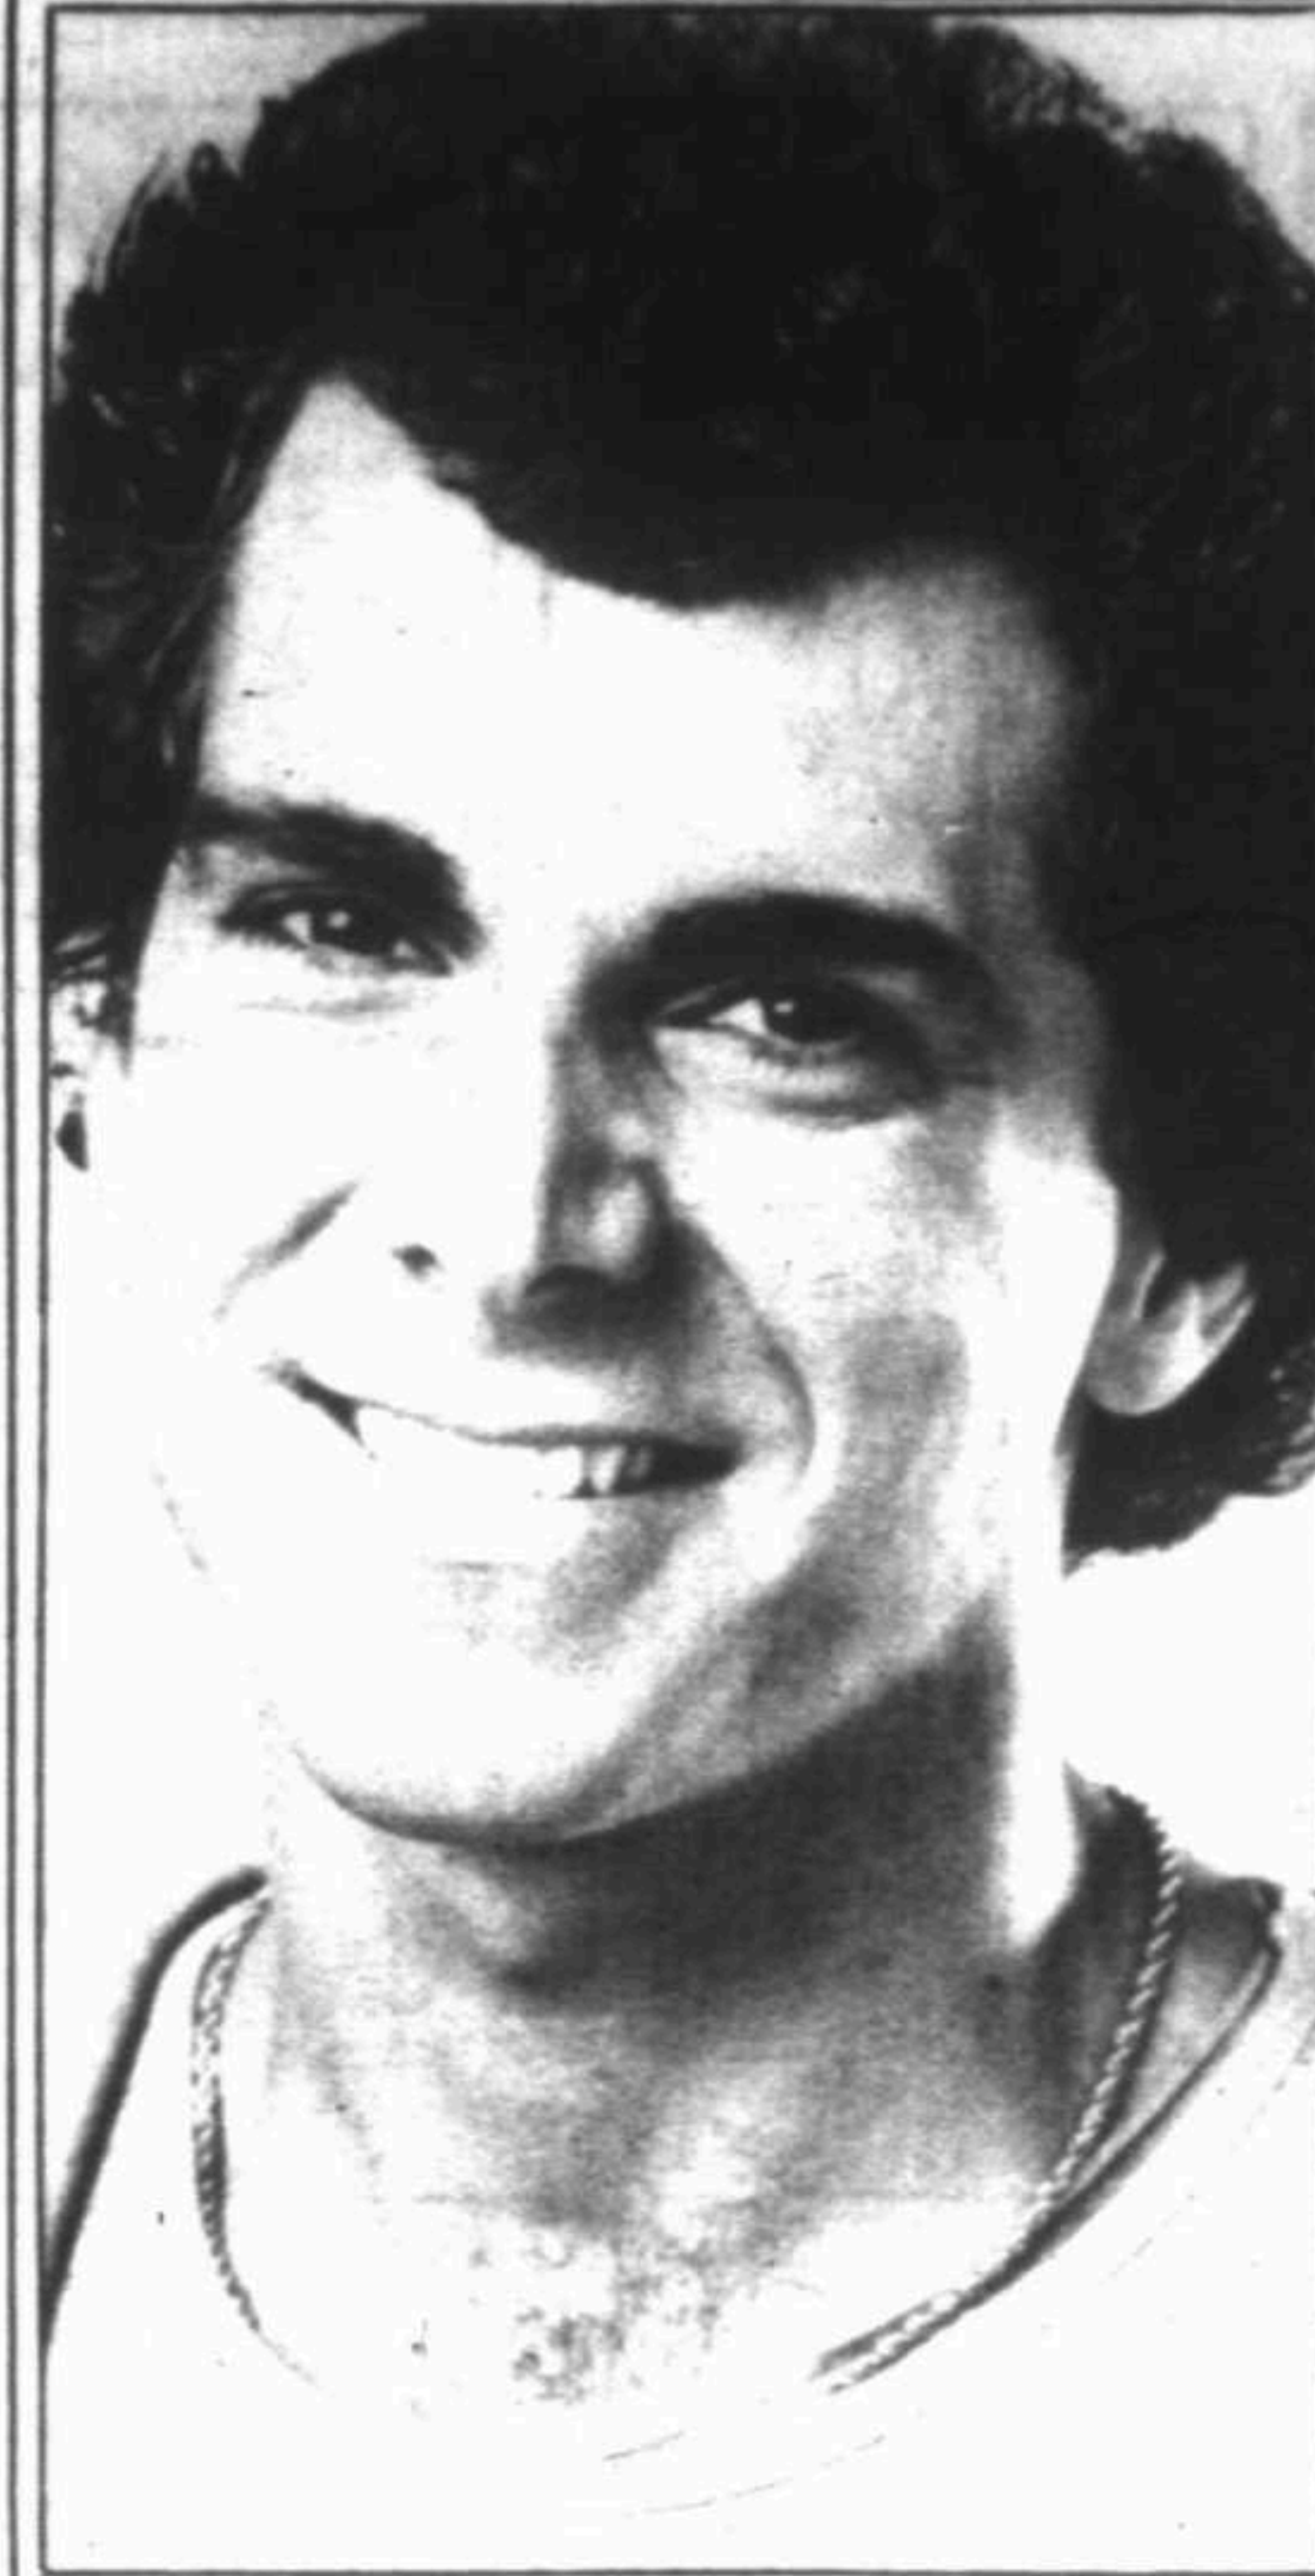

Personally I have three favorite words with which I like to fill my mind. They are: tranquility; urbanity; imperturbability. I have gone all around the country in speeches advocating these favorite words of mine. And I sincerely believe that a person would profit from standing each morning for two or three minutes at his window quietly saying, "Tranquility — or urbanity — or imperturbability." He would gradually become a person of greater calm and composure. Since a statement is the externalization of a thought, the saying of such words can help develop healthy attitudes.

It is said that we are what we think. It is also true that we become what we say. Think of an excitable, nervous person whom you may know. Isn't he or she always using nervously excitable words? Consider some calm and controlled acquaintance. What are their words like. They are calm and controlled words, of course. Listen to a person talk for a while and you will have a pretty accurate idea of what he is. The word pattern reveals the thought pattern.

One sound reason for a daily reading of the Bible is that this practice tends to fill your thoughts with strong, healthy words. And if you form the habit, not only of reading these words, but of saying them as well, you will find yourself becoming what the words picture.

Aid to Aghans planned

NEW YORK (AP) — Material aid to Afghans in territories outside and under control of the Soviet-supported Afghanistan government is planned by Church World Service, relief arm of the National Council of Churches.

The Rev. R. Lawrence Turnipseed, CWS Southern Asia director, says Afghans face a "very real threat of famine and starvation" because of the prolonged fighting and disruption of civil life resulting from the Soviet invasion.

"There is evidence of conscious disruption of the food supply system by the Soviets," he says.

CWS is seeking at least $100,000 from member denominations to provide food, medicine and blankets to be channeled through Pakistan's InterAid Committee to people in areas not controlled by the Soviet-backed government.

The agency says it also will seek to aid people in areas under government control. Turnipseed, citing a 1984 report, says the fighting in Afghanistan has caused decreased agricultural production and inadequate nutrition for children.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY:

Plunge enthusiastically into a new business relationship if you intend to win big. Your associates need to know your goals in order to give you the kind of support you must have. Power is worthless if you refuse to use it. Go where you have never been before and you learn an important lesson. It is time to revise a financial arrangement. Express your true feelings and loved one will come around. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Baltimore Orioles super star Eddie Murray, the Detroit Tigers' Brian Kelly, Italian-born soprano Renata Scott, the Cincinnati Reds' Nick Esasky, character actor Abe Vigoda.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A short trip adds to your family's enjoyment. You feel more positive towards someone who complains of being neglected. Make any amends for any real or imagined slight. Be attentive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take advantage of this low-keyed day to pursue a favorite outside interest. Music, art or literature holds special appeal. Take the first step to improve communication with loved one.

Leo who has been in your thoughts shows up unexpectedly. At-home activities can provide great pleasure. You realize that someone important is in your corner! Show your appreciation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A long-distance call means a lot to an elderly friend or relative. A family situation begins to improve. Emphasize the benefits of a reconciliation. Visit someone you haven't seen lately.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A sermon or talk inspires you to turn over a new leaf. Your optimism is contagious. Encourage others to do their best. A revised family budget allows you to do more things.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Keep any diet or exercise resolutions. A friend proves unusually supportive. Return the favor. Spontaneous entertainment is more fun than planned activities. Be sure to keep any promises you make.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A friend could throw you a romantic curve. Be gentle if you are not interested. Set aside time to think about the best way to showcase your creative and artistic talents.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You adapt easily to other people's wishes. Keep entertainment plans simple. Small groups hold more appeal than large ones now. Someone proves his/her friendship or loyalty in a unique way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Let mate or another family member set the pace today. You sense that someone is undecided about a major issue. Avoid pressing. Keep your relationships with others on an even keel.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Domestic matters or family affairs capture your attention. You may be spending more time on your career than on home life. Try to strike a better balance. Your instincts about people are excellent.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A good day to handle confidential matters, secret transactions. Your finances are in the spotlight. Keep your personal possessions in a safe place. A romance with a Leo could work out great.

Bandits steal Parmesan cheese

PARMA, Italy (AP) — Police said bandits broke into a dairy plant Friday, held five people at gunpoint and fled with $250,000 worth of this northern city's most famous product — parmesan cheese.

"There's no trace of the thieves or the cheese," a police officer said in a telephone interview. He said investigators searched nearby warehouses and farms to no avail.

There were at least 10 people in the gang, he said, and it was believed to be the largest cheese raid ever. The officer quoted witnesses as saying the thieves entered the factory just before dawn and some of them held guns on the plant owner and four employees while the others loaded about 1,000 wheels of parmesan onto two trucks.

"It took them at least two hours to load all that cheese," he said. "Things went smoothly for the bandits, largely because there was no alarm system in the factory."

He said estimates put the loss at half a billion lire — about $250,000.

Telephone calls to the factory, Caseificio Tavignani, were not answered Friday night.

The sharp-flavored cheese is an important ingredient in Italian cooking. It also is grated over pasta or eaten with fruit as dessert.

Czars' baubles on display

LONDON (AP) — Priceless baubles made for the czars of Russia by jeweler Carl Faberge have been put on public exhibition by Queen Elizabeth II.

The 341 exhibits of jeweled eggs, clocks, inkwells and other glittering items, also include a timepiece valued at more than $1 million that was made by a contemporary of Faberge's.

It was made to mark the birth of the last czar's only son in 1904. The boy was killed by the Bolsheviks in 1918 along with his father, Nicholas II, his mother, Czarina Alexandra, and his four sisters.

The exhibition at the Queen's Gallery at Buckingham Palace, will be open for at least six months, palace officials said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Z. De Lorean's public appeal for money to pay his legal bills has more or less fizzled out, its trustee says.

Retired Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Harry Shafer said the appeal's bank account has "a few thousand dollars," which might go to charity.

Shafer said he became trustee of the John De Lorean Defense Fund after "some guy recommended me — I should shoot him."

The former judge presided over the divorces of Farrah Fawcett and Lee Majors and other celebrities.

De Lorean's legal bills were estimated at $1 million in his successful court fight against federal cocaine conspiracy charges in August.

FOREST GROVE, Ore. (AP) — Political opposites they may be, but George McGovern and James Watt have at least one thing in common, McGovern says.

"We both tend to say exactly what we believe on public issues, and perhaps that's why neither of us are in public office," he said.

McGovern, former Democratic senator and presidential candidate, and Watt, President Reagan's first interior secretary, debated Thursday night before 2,000 people at Pacific University in this town west of Portland.

"If I would have believed what I read in the national press, I would have hated Jim Watt," said Watt, who blamed the press for misstating his record.

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A judge on Friday dismissed a breach-of-contract suit filed against Miss Africa, Khadija Adam, filed by her agent after she returned home after a modeling job in Paris for Yves St. Laurent.

Judge S.K. Sachdeva dismissed the action by Marketing Matters Ltd.

Marketing Matters said Miss Adam, 24, took modeling assignments in Britain and France without its consent.

She said the firm "fixed" the earlier Miss Kenya competition she won, didn't give her clothes for the Miss World contest in London in November and failed to find any modeling assignments. During the Miss Africa contest, she had to sleep on the floor, she complained.

Miss Adam has a small part in the film "Out of Africa," now being shot here with Robert Redford and Meryl Streep.

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Conductor Herbert von Karajan will lead the Vienna Philharmonic in a Mozart Mass in June in St. Peter's Basilica, a Vatican spokesman said Friday.

The orchestra will present Mozart's Coronation Mass, written in 1779-80, during a Mass celebrated by Pope John Paul II on June 29, the feast day of Sts. Peter and Paul, said Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro.

Von Karajan, 76, has not performed in Italy for a number of years because of a feud with Italian television over broadcasting at Milan's La Scala opera house.

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Concert violinist and composer Efrim Zimbalist Sr., the father of actor Efrim Zimbalist Jr. and grandfather of actress Stephanie Zimbalist, died Friday after a long bout with cancer. He was 95.

Zimbalist, who had moved to Reno in 1970, died at his home, said Washoe County coroner's transcriber Judy Kohler.

As his illness worsened recently, the elder Zimbalist received frequent visits from his son and granddaughter, said Pat Kingsley, publicist for Miss Zimbalist.

The Russian-born musician earned a reputation as a violin soloist in Europe before he emigrated to the United States in 1911. He made his American debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra that year, playing the first American performance of Glazunov's Violin Concerto.

In 1941, he was appointed director of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, serving in that post until 1968.

He was also a composer of operas, musical comedy and concertos.

Born April 21, 1889, in Rostov, Russia, he studied violin with his father, an orchestral musician, and at the St. Petersburg Conservatory.

He married singer Alma Gluck in 1914. She died in 1938, and in 1943, he married Mary Louise Curtis Bok, founder of the Philadelphia Curtis Institute. She died in 1970.

Efrim Zimbalist Jr. was the star of television's long-running series "The FBI," and "77 Sunset Strip" and has also appeared in movies and other television programs. Miss Zimbalist, his daughter, stars on the NBC-TV mystery series, "Remington Steele."

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Actress Ina Claire, one of the theater's most popular practitioners of high comedy, died Friday at the age of 89.

Miss Claire, who appeared in such Broadway hits as "Biography" in 1932 and "End of Summer" in 1936, both by S.N. Behrman, died of a heart attack at her home here, according to Ben Ackerman of the San Francisco Coroner's Office.

She had been scheduled to appear last Sunday in New York at "Night of 100 Stars II," the $5 million benefit for the Actors' Fund of America, but had canceled because of poor health.

She was born in Washington on Oct. 15, 1895 and made her vaudeville debut ten years later as a singing mimic. She first appeared in New York in 1909, doing imitations of Harry Lauder, a well-known actor of the day.

Miss Claire made her musical comedy debut two years later in "Jumping Jupiter" and later appeared in the 1915 and 1916 editions of the "Ziegfeld Follies."

She won further recognition in 1919 as a money-chasing chorus girl in "The Gold Diggers" and followed that with a string of successes including "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" in 1921.

Aquino's alleged killers' trial starts

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Three judges heard opening testimony Friday in the trial of the armed forces chief of staff and 25 other men accused in the assassination of Benigno Aquino.

The defendants also are accused in the killing of Rolando Galman, the man the military accused of shooting Aquino.

Aquino, once the chief voice of opposition to the authoritarian government of President Ferdinand Marcos, was shot to death at Manila airport when he returned from three years of self-imposed exile in the United States. Galman was shot down by soldiers immediately afterward.

Gen. Fabian C. Ver, the chief of staff, sat silently on a second-row bench during the six-hour session as nine witnesses took their turns on the stand.

The other defendants are two more generals, a civilian and 22 other military men.

The soldiers charged stood and saluted as Ver entered the room, and he smartly returned the military greeting. All wore the white civilian shirts that are standard dress in this tropical country.

The charges say both Aquino and Galman were murdered in a conspiracy involving Ver, who is a confidant of Marcos.

Marcos' rule has been shaken by the killing and by the investigations, charges and public unrest it created.

Nine witnesses were called on the first day of the trial, during which defense attorneys and Presiding Judge Manuel Pamaran asked most of the questions and the judge rapped his gavel repeatedly to quiet the courtroom.

Two dozen people with placards marched outside the heavily guarded court building to protest the military custody of the defendants. The marchers contended the accused were getting better treatment than student leaders arrested in demonstrations.

Maj. Gen. Prospero Olivas, who is a lawyer and represented himself, grilled several of the witnesses, all medical experts. He was attempting to vindicate his own early investigation of the case, which concluded that Aquino was killed by Galman.

Olivas, Ver and six other military men are accused of a coverup in the double killing. Seventeen other soldiers, including Air Force Brig. Gen. Luther Custodio, are accused of conspiring to murder both Aquino and Galman. The lone civilian, businessman Hermilio Gosuico, is charged as an accomplice.

Prosecutors did little Friday to support accusations of a broad military conspiracy, relying almost entirely on testimony given in a 10-month independent probe of the killing.

Five of Friday's witnesses were dismissed without questions after prosecutors said they would accept the testimony they gave to the commission.

Pamaran later advised Olivas, who had not left his seat, to rise as he addressed the court. He also told Olivas not to give orders to witnesses, after the general demanded a "yes or no" answer from a government chemist.

The chief judge threatened to order contempt charges against two medical experts who failed to appear in the morning session. Both took the stand in the afternoon.

Pamaran has pledged to hold daily sessions. Weekly sessions are customary in the Philippines, and trials often drag on for years.

The government chemist, Leonora C. Vallado, acknowledged that she did not tell Olivas about a mixup in ballistics reports of bullet fragments taken from Aquino's skull.

"I was not aware that the board would use it against him," she said.

"I was not aware also," Olivas said.

The investigative commission had accused Olivas of trying to mislead it about the murder weapon by citing a chemical report involving a lead fragment not actually taken from Aquino's skull.

Prosecutors have adopted the board's conclusion that Aquino was killed by one of two military escorts on a stairway leading from the airliner.

Dr. Bienvenido Munoz, the government doctor who performed the autopsy, repeated his finding that Aquino was killed by a single bullet in the back of the head that moved on an upward trajectory.

Munoz said his investigation did not show whether Aquino was shot from the ground or a stairway, but the bullet could have come from someone on a stairway behind Aquino who pointed the gun upward.

Police hunt for killers of newspaper publisher

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Police mounted a manhunt Friday for three gunmen from a left-wing terrorist group that said it killed a conservative newspaper publisher because he worked for the CIA.

The U.S. Embassy dismissed as "nonsense" charges that Nicholas Momferratos, 60-year-old publisher of Apogevmatini, received cash from the CIA to buy the conservative afternoon daily.

In Washington, CIA spokeswoman Kathy Pherson said, "We wouldn't have any comment on something like that. It really doesn't serve any purpose."

The accusations were made by the group November 17, which has claimed five political assassinations in the past decade, including the 1975 killing of Richard Welch, CIA station chief in Athens.

Momferratos, the major Apogevmatini shareholder, was killed in his limousine Thursday evening in the fashionable Kolonaki district of Athens.

Witnesses said a swarthy, bearded man in his mid-twenties, dressed in jeans, stepped out of a parked Fiat and fired at least six shots through the limousine's side window. They said more shots were fired from inside the parked car.

A spokesman for the Red Cross hospital said the publisher's driver, Panagiotis Rousetis, was "in critical but slightly improved condition." Rousetis, 42, was shot in the stomach and arm.

In a four-page typewritten document found near the scene of the shooting, the terrorist group attacked Greece's political leaders and claimed Momferratos was killed because "he served the interests of American imperialism" and his newspaper "mocks and poisons the Greek people daily."

"He became the newspaper's owner with money from the CIA," the statement said.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman who declined to be identified said: "The charges are nonsense. We deplore this killing."

Public Order Minister Yiannis Skoularikis told Greek reporters Friday the investigation was making little progress.

He said police had determined that three guns were used — two 45-caliber Magnums and a 7.65mm revolver.

Skoularikis said the November 17 document was typed on the same machine as two other statements issued by the group after attacks on American servicemen.

"The investigation has made no other progress," Skoularikis said.

Coroner Dimitris Poalos, who carried out an autopsy Friday, said Momferratos was hit by six bullets, four in the chest and two in the back.

No arrests have been made in any of the shootings claimed by November 17.

reverse some of Europe's worst environmental pollution by the turn of the century.

The government in recent years has placed emphasis on industrial growth, and has rarely commented on pollution problems.

A report drawn up for the government last year by the Czechoslovak Academy of Sciences described environmental damage in the Soviet bloc country as "very serious."

"By the end of the century 45 to 60 percent of the forest area, up to one million hectares (2.47 million acres) will be directly damaged," by acid rain and other forms of pollution, said the academy. A copy of its confidential report had been smuggled out of the country.

Railway workers on strike

MADRID, Spain (AP) — All Spanish trains to the rest of Europe were cancelled Friday when the estimated 65,000 employees of Spain's government-controlled railway network went on strike, union officials said.

They said about 7,000 workers were legally obliged to maintain minimum services, and local trains in some areas were running during rush hours.

The workers are seeking a 7.5 percent across-the-board hike in their salaries. Railroad management has offered them a 4 percent increase.

Greek election changed

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Parliament will elect a new Greek president on March 15, two months ahead of schedule, incumbent President Constantine Caramanlis announced Friday.

Caramanlis, 77, is expected to run unopposed for a second five-year term, but has not yet announced his candidacy.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Men sought in connection with customs agent's death

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Police in this border city were searching Friday for two men in connection with the shooting death of a Mexican Customs inspector.

A spokesman with the Chihuahua State Judicial Police, Jose Luis Ramirez, identified the inspector as Luis Jordan, 48.

Ramirez said Jordan was walking from his home to his car about 9 a.m. Friday when two men with automatic rifles shot at him.

"He was shot to death," Ramirez said. "We do not know the reason behind it."

Ramirez said police in Juarez, a city of 1 million across the Rio Grande from El Paso, Texas, were conducting a citywide search for a car in which the gunmen were believed to be riding. The vehicle had Texas license plates, he said.

Chinese prisoners paroled

PEKING (AP) — More than 1,600 prison inmates in Shaanxi province in central China were paroled to join their families for Chinese New Year, the official Xinhua news agency reported Friday.

The inmates had committed crimes ranging from harboring criminals to murder, Xinhua said. It quoted a local judicial official as saying the amnesty was aimed at encouraging the prisoners to reform themselves.

The lunar New Year, a time when families traditionally gather for holiday feasting, was celebrated nationwide on Wednesday.

BERLIN (AP) — A cocker spaniel that jumped off a Berlin Wall lookout platform into communist territory was returned to West Berlin Friday and could become the pet of a woman who thought it was her lost dog.

After East German guards handed the international stray to a West Berlin official at the Bornholmer Street border crossing, the dog was taken to a city government building and was shown to Gertrud Wuerfel, 60.

She had heard how an East German guard was lowered by crane between two sections of the wall to rescue the howling dog from the cold Wednesday night, and thought it might be her missing "Cocky."

But on seeing the black dog, Mrs. Wuerfel burst into tears and said that her "Cocky" had a white spot on his head. The dog returned by East Germany had a white spot on its chest.

The West German diplomatic mission in East Berlin arranged the dog's return in talks with communist officials.

West Berlin city Sen. Heinrich Lummer told reporters the spaniel would be cared for by the office employee who picked it up at the border until authorities figure out what to do.

However, he said, if the owner is not found, Mrs. Wuerfel will get the dog.

The spaniel, which appeared well groomed and friendly, was to be taken to a veterinarian for a checkup, and officials planned to publish its picture to alert the owner, Lummer said.

A city Senate official, speaking on condition that he not be identified by name, said it was believed to be the first time East Germany returned, without demands, a pet that became trapped between sections of the heavily fortified Berlin Wall.

The official recalled one case in which the East Germans demanded payment to return a parrot that flew across the wall.

Earlier Friday, West Berlin city spokesman Hans F. Birkenbeul said there was "little doubt" that Mrs. Wuerfel was the owner of the spaniel because her description of "Cocky" matched that of the dog rescued by the East Germans.

She told authorities that her year-old cocker spaniel, a gift from her son, had escaped from her car some time ago in West Berlin.

Before Mrs. Wuerfel came forward, West Berlin's central information office was swamped with phone calls from people offering to "adopt" the dog after the case drew headlines in the West Berlin media Thursday.

The spaniel jumped off the platform in West Berlin on Tuesday and became wedged between the old and new sections of the 10-foot barrier, which was built to prevent East Germans from fleeing to the West.

West Berlin apartment dwellers near the wall alerted police after hearing the trapped dog howling in the cold.

Police first used a megaphone to alert East German guards about the dog's predicament. French military police were called in and finally a telex was sent to East Berlin officials advising them of the animal's plight.

Two East German border guards tried in vain to reach the trapped dog.

On Wednesday night, they returned with a mobile crane, removed an old section of the wall and lowered a guard on a steel cable. He grabbed the cocker spaniel and both were hauled out.

The East German guards then wrapped the dog in a blanket and took it into East Berlin.

East German border guards freed this cocker spaniel from between the old and new sections of the Berlin Wall and returned him to West Berlin. But it wasn't the dog which a West Berlin woman reported missing.

Bell plans to seek rate increase

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., which was awarded an $816 million rate increase last March, has informally advised the Public Utility Commission that it will seek an increase in local rates next month.

"It will be a broadly based case," said Richard Harris, the company's vice president for revenue and public affairs. "Our interest has been in making sure in this case we're talking about a few dollars on local rates and not a major hit on local rates."

The proposed increase would be between $3 and $4 for basic telephone service, Harris said Thursday. Harris said the company had privately informed the PUC and consumer lawyers of its plans to seek a rate increase similar to "the cases we use to file which were, in the range of $400 million."

The company also will ask to raise charges for the "litany of services we provide" including touch-tone dialing, custom calling and short-haul long distance.

Public Counsel Jim Boyle, who represents ratepayers before the PUC, said the rate request is coming at a time when the company is telling stockholders that its 1984 profits had exceeded projections by $13.5 million.

"If you have more than a $3 increase on local bills you're talking about at least a 30 percent hike and that's not small potatoes," Boyle said.

"It's hard to imagine with interest rates and inflation being as low as it is now that the company is in a position to need additional revenue," he said.
