To Hear Media Case

AUSTIN (AP)—The Texas Supreme Court agreed today to decide whether newspapers, radio stations and television stations have the right to file suits to open up meetings of governmental bodies.

It set a June 13 hearing on an appeal filed by the Abilene Reporter-News, KRBC-TV and television reporter Jerry Shackelford.

Meanwhile, the Legislature has passed and sent to Gov. Bill Clements a bill that specifically gives the news media the right to sue for enforcement of the Texas Open Meetings Act.

The Eastland Court of Civil Appeals had ruled that reporters and news-gathering firms have no standing to file suits against government bodies for allegedly meeting in secret.

Shackelford, KRBC-TV and the Reporter-News sued after the Abilene Equal Employment Opportunity Board held a closed meeting on Nov. 30, 1977, and refused to make its decision known by filing minutes for scrutiny by the public.

Ignoring Law

WASHINGTON (AP)—Supreme Court Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justice William H. Rehnquist are, in effect, ignoring a new federal financial disclosure law thanks to a ruling by a lower federal judge in New Orleans. Before U.S. District Judge Robert Collins could issue his order Tuesday afternoon, however, six Supreme Court justices complied with the Ethics in Government Act by making public detailed financial statements for the first time in the court's history.

Loses Appeal

AUSTIN (AP)—David Owen Brooks, accused in the 1973 Houston mass murders, lost an appeal today of his murder conviction in the strangulation death of a 15-year-old boy.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals rejected Brooks' argument that there was insufficient evidence to tie him to the slaying. The court upheld his life sentence.

Brooks and Elmer Wayne Henley Jr., both 18 at the time, were charged in the bizarre sex-torture slayings that were directed by Dean Corll. Henley recently won a new trial on charges he killed six youths.

The country is getting its first admiral with Snyder ties. Roy L. Dunlap, former Snyder City Manager, is one of eight Naval Reserve officers selected for promotion to the rank of Rear Admiral. He is pictured in the May issue of the Naval Reserve Association News, which Roy McCloseky, a commander in the Naval Reserve, brought by the SDN office.

Dunlap was diligent in attending meetings and training sessions of the Naval Reserve while he was city manager here back in the late 50s and early 60s. He got back into active duty in 1968 when he was recalled to command a mobile construction battalion in Vietnam, which led to a rapid advancement in rank.

Happiness while driving on a highway is the sight of a Highway Patrol car's flashing lights on the shoulder of the road as the patrolman writes a speeding ticket for that driver who passed you as if you were "standing still" a few miles back.

A thought while driving on a highway: If all of the cars you see, including your own, could get two or three more miles per gallon of gasoline, there wouldn't be any shortage, no matter what the Arabs do.

President Says Energy Problem Sapping Nation

By Charlotte Porter
Associated Press Writer

Energy problems are "sapping away the strength of our nation," and Americans have been unwilling or too timid to deal with the problem, says President Jimmy Carter.

Carter's remarks came as some California drivers lined up for 12 blocks to buy gasoline at 99.9 cents a gallon, and New York Gov. Hugh Carey asked motorists to reduce their driving this month by 100 miles and ordered state agencies to cut their mileage by 5 percent.

Meanwhile, there are indications the government is partially to blame for the gasoline crunch in California, a federal official says. And there were signs of new pressure for a world oil price increase.

These and other energy worries add up to what Carter on Tuesday termed "one of the most serious threats to our nation in peacetime that I have seen."

Carter was to meet today with California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. who Tuesday signed a law to keep gas stations open on weekends in an effort to make an even-odd rationing plan for the nation's most populous state workable.

Brown said state police would enforce his order, but added it would be hard to tell if a station was closed or simply out of gas. And he said he would be "totally inapproprate" for dealers to close their stations in a four-day protest against federal price controls.

"They misread the temper of the people if they think they can close down with impunity," Brown said.

City Sales Tax Rebates Increase Here

Snyder's city sales tax rebate for the period ending April 24 amounted to $15,970, an increase of more than $2,500 over the $13,228 for the corresponding period last year, State Comptroller Bob Bullock has announced.

Bullock said that statewide the rebates were about 10 percent higher than last year.

Figures for other area cities and towns, with the 1979 and 1978 figures, in order: Levelland $19,405 and $8,353; Sweetwater $13,482 and $13,672; Monahans $11,311 and $10,090; Brownfield $10,345 and $8,792; Pecos $9,703 and $7,624; Colorado City $4,971 and $3,245; Rotan none and $591. Neither Roscoe nor Roby received rebates for this period in 1978 or 1979.

Ask Us

Q—Are Snyder filling stations going to close for the so-called "gasless weekend" May 17-20?

A—Apparently the "gasless weekend" will have no effect on hours of filling stations here. Reports at mid-week indicated that regular schedules will be followed. Some stations regularly close on Sundays. There could be a few others who run short of supplies, but distributors reported that they had heard of no stations planning to close because of the "gasless weekend" campaign. "If a station is closed, it will mean he usually is closed at that time, or else he has run out of gas," said one distributor.

795 Names Are Needed On Petition

Petitions seeking an election to legalize the sale of wine and beer in the City of Snyder will need 795 signatures.

The county commissioners court arrived at this figure after studying voting records and considering other factors. The state law requires that petitions must have 35 percent of the number of voters who cast balltos in the last governor's election to mandate an alcoholic beverage election.

Figures from last November's general election showed that 2,764 persons voted in the governor's race in the five boxes in Snyder. However, some voters who cast their ballots in the Snyder boxes live outside the city limits, and only those who reside within the city boundaries are eligible to sign the petition for the wine and beer election as requested by the applicants. The petitions went into circulation several days ago and any qualified voter who lives in the city is eligible to sign.

C-C Board Gets Progress Reports

Plans for a year-round membership effort were outlined last night for directors of the Snyder Chamber of Commerce.

Mike Graves, who has been named chairman of the chamber's membership committee, discussed the committee's program of work with the board at its regular meeting.

In addition to keeping the membership work up to date on a continuing basis, the committee is making plans to conduct a membership campaign late this summer, probably from mid-August into September.

Charlie Henderson was named chairman of the chamber's budget committee and three others will be named to that panel. Plans are to have a proposed budget for 1980 ready for consideration in October.

Bill Wilson III, chairman of the July 4th celebration committee this year, reported that plans for the annual event this year are moving along on schedule. Plans are virtually complete for the tractor pull, and a meeting has been set for Thursday night by Bill Boles, director of the July 4 tennis tournament, to complete plans for that event.

Filibuster Endures On Interest Hike

AUSTIN (AP)—Sen. Bill Patman talked all night and into the morning trying to defeat what he called "the midnight express," a bill that would raise the legal interest rate on home loans from 10 to 12 percent.

"This midnight express is running over the people of Texas," Patman mumbled as he passed the eighth hour in the longest filibuster of his 18 years in the Senate. "This midnight express should have never been presented to the Senate. It is nothing but a goodie for the lobby."

Near mid-morning, Patman began to show apparent signs of fatigue. He was watched closely by Mrs. Patman and aides who sat just behind him.

He alternately sucked lemon wedges and "honey-candy drops." At times his voice was barely audible.

He switched from blue and white jogging shoes to a pair of black leather shoes with thick rippled rubber soles.

"That's better. That gives heel support," he sighed.

Patman's solo effort, aided infrequently by questions from friends, was punctuated by a pre-dawn debate with bill sponsor, Sen. Bill Meier, D-Euless, before a virtually empty Senate chamber.

"A person who could track an elephant in the snow could see a conspiracy in this case," insisted Patman.

Patman noted Gov. Bill Clements had backed down on his pledge to veto the loan bill after the Federal National Mortgage Association - "Fannie Mae" - said it would no longer buy loans from the Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration that exceed 10 percent.

Texas mortgage bankers then halted use of FHA and VA home loans.

"Don't you see a conspiracy?" Patman asked Meier.

"No, sir," replied Meier.

Meier said Senate records showed Patman, a longtime crusader against higher interest rates, actually had voted in 1975 for a bill allowing credit unions to charge 12 percent interest on loans. Patman said he couldn't believe he had cast such a vote, but added:

"This is a different situation. We're talking about home mortgages.... You're distorting my position."

Highway Talks Set At Austin

A Snyder delegation will join representatives of several other cities and towns Monday in a session with the Texas Highway Commission in Austin to discuss a "Port-to Plains" highway.

Bill Warner, Snyder Chamber of Commerce manager, said this morning that an appointment for the group had been put on the commission's agenda for May 21.

Delegations from Houston, Austin, Abilene and Snyder have been assured for the session, and several other towns are expected to be represented. The group is seeking a route from the Panhandle of Texas to the Gulf Coast following U.S. Highway 84 from Lubbock through Snyder to Abilene, and on through Austin to Houston. Warner said that the major cities involved in the proposal which would include Snyder on the route have expressed renewed interest in the project and that a strong push will be made to develop the route.

Some had been concerned over reports several weeks ago that legislation in Washington had designated another route as a "primary connecting" segment to link Interstate 27 and Interstate 10. However, it has since been learned that actual designation of a route will be left up to the state. Interests along the Snyder - Abilene - Austin - Houston route have indicated for some time that they favored a "Port-to-Plains" designation.

return to basics

In a small way, with large initial results, Citibank of New York is going back to square one in the history of paper as a medium of exchange. We dare not call it currency or money since the feds are touchy about their monopoly on the production of money, no matter how low it falls in general esteem.

Citibank is offering to sell gold certificates of $1,000 or more and for a small fee will store the gold. The certificate is an investor's receipt for a specific quantity of gold bullion. The bank buys the gold from bullion dealers and stores it for the customers.

Citibank charges a three percent fee on a $1,000 certificate and the fee declines as purchase amounts increase. There also are fees for storage after the first year and for delivery of the gold on demand.

When we say this is a return to square one, we refer to the beginning of paper receipts for gold which was used as money in the exchange of goods and services. Gold was heavy and it was dangerous to transport large amounts. Someone who had a safe place to keep it and was trusted by others would store gold and issue receipts for it. Those receipts (certificates) became acceptable as money for transactions.

As long as the gold was available on demand of the certificate, those certificates met the criteria of good money: They held their value and were readily acceptable in trade. Coins of gold and silver were used for smaller transactions. Such coins and such certificates backed by both silver and gold were in general use in this nation until the early thirties.

Gold then was dropped, (in fact prohibited) for use in exchanges in this nation. Then in the early sixties, silver was eliminated from our coinage and the silver certificates were declared non-exchangeable for silver. We now have only base metal coinage and currency backed by neither gold nor silver.

We can acquire gold coins of foreign issue and gold discs of stated amount and purity minted in the United States. However, such gold pieces cannot be termed money or coins. And we doubt that the Citibank issue of gold certificates can be transferred as a means or normal exchange.

However, if we should face a monetary collapse of our paper dollar, government financial "experts" might welcome a private means of keeping exchanges of goods and services going. It would not be the first time that a private sector has stepped in to bail out a government which went too far in the debasement of money.

We hope that some sanity can be returned to our government's fiscal affairs before its custodial role, in the matter of providing a sound money, is eroded completely. As matters stand now, there is not great hope for an overdue change.

While we wait, some of us can protect our substance by owning gold and silver either in the metal itself or certificates of deposit in a safe storage.

major breakthrough

The subject is sex, so if you offend easily don't say that at least you haven't been warned.

Specifically, it's the sex life of the cockroach and it happens to be of intense interest to Dutch and American ratings. They have achieved a major research breakthrough, as reported by "Chemical and Engineering News", publication of the American Chemical Society, that could turn out to be bad news for the cockroach but very good news for all human city dwellers.

The story begins at laboratories in the Dutch city of Delft where no less than 75,000 females, virgins all, gave their all so that researchers could isolate a substance called periplanone B, a sex stimulant that subsequently has been reproduced artificially at Columbia University.

To give you an idea of how stimulating periplanone B can be when a lady roach dabs a bit behind an antenna or wherever, a mere hundredth of a gram is sufficient to turn on 100 billion males weighing in at a total 10,000 metric tons.

Successful synthesis means that it may now be possible to use periplanone B to trap male roaches and to interfere with normal breeding process, reducing the population and infestations that afflict urban concentration of humans.

Well, we can certainly hope so. But the durability of the cockroach over so many millions of years and its success in evading human efforts at extermination over so many hundreds suggest a little hedging on bets against the natural cockroach and on synthetic periplanone B might be prudent - at least until we've had further authoritative word on the subject from, say, Masters and Johnson.

at wits end

by erma bombeck

The next Civil War in this country will be between roller skaters, bicyclists and joggers.

The problem is there isn't enough room for the three of them on the same bike paths. As the summer approaches, they are forming less than perfect union.

Roller skaters say that bikers ride side by side and fill up all the paths. The joggers say the roller skaters line up in packs of six or seven and run them off the road, and the bikers say the joggers think they own the road.

Before it reaches violent proportions, I think we should all sit down and work something out before the leisurers become militant.

The solution seems relatively simple. The bicyclists could use the bike paths on the odd days and the odd joggers on the even days with the exception of full days on Wednesdays when the skaters could hold forth.

The mornings, however, would have to be set aside for the skateboarders and the late evenings for the trail bikers except on windy days.

On windy days the paths would play host to the kite flyers. This schedule will apply in all areas with the exception of the bike paths routed around water. In this case, weekends would be reserved for the boat and canoe people who would have to use the facilities as a portage to put their boats in and out of the water.

This would also apply to snorkelers, water skiers and fishermen who are casting from the banks.

Thursday mornings of alternating weeks would, of course, be set aside for hula hoopers and baton twirlers, as anyone could see the logic of not having them on the same day.

In the event the bike path is adjacent to a golf course, right-of-way would have to go to the golf carts en route to the greens.

This is the basic summer schedule and would of course change during the winter months with cross-country skiers, ice skaters (on the bike paths near the pond) and snowmobilers (those near golf courses).

There, now, I think we've taken care of everyone who shares the out-of-doors for leisure with the exception of the walkers with biting dogs. When can they use the bike paths? Do you want to tell 'em?

buying continues

By FLOYD NORRIS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Those plastic credit cards in your pocket have done more this year than simply make it easier to buy things. They have played a major role - some would say the key role - in keeping the economy out of a recession.

At the beginning of the year, many economists thought a recession would have developed by now. A key reason was that consumer debt, already at record levels, was considered unlikely to keep expanding.

But it has. And that has kept the economy growing, faster than many economists expected, thereby at least postponing the recession.

Inflation, and fears it will continue, are playing a role in the expansion of consumer debt. Consumers are buying now on the theory that prices will be higher next month.

"They are turning their worthless paper money into durable assets," said Michael K. Evans of Chase Econometrics, one of the economists who had expected consumer spending to slow.

But another reason for the decline is that, despite higher interest rates charged to businesses, credit is not harder to get for consumers. Nor, in many cases, is it more expensive.

Much consumer borrowing is through credit cards, on which the interest rate has long been 12 percent to 18 percent, mostly the higher figure. The prime rate charged to corporate borrowers has risen from 7¼ percent to 11¾ percent since the beginning of 1978, but consumers are paying the same rate they always were.

What is more, credit is easier to get now than it was during the last tight money spell. Many more banks allow consumers to automatically get loans by overdrawing their checking accounts. They might have given loans in the past, but now the consumer doesn't even have to face the trauma of walking into the bank to fill out an application.

Unfortunately, most economists see a continuing boom in the economy as a bad thing, arguing that it will eventually lead to a more serious recession. The Carter administration is hoping for a "soft landing," in which the economy slows but does not go into recession.

WASHINGTON (NEA) - The results of a recent national survey suggest that the manufacturers and marketers of consumers goods may not be getting much value for their money when they purchase high-priced television advertising time.

Only 13 percent of those polled said "most television advertising makes them feel more like buying the product advertised," while 16 percent said the commercials actually made them less inclined to buy and 69 percent said the ads "don't affect their buying decisions much at all."

Those surprising statistics are known only to a few insiders, however, because they were suppressed when the results of the survey were made public by one of the nation's most influential polling organizations, Louis Harris and Associates.

Other material highly critical of the commercial sponsorship of television programs also was removed or weakened before public release of the survey, commissioned and cosponsored by a unit of a major television network - the news division of the American Broadcasting Co.

Harris insists that ABC never intervened at any stage of the survey. "If there had been any pressure," he says, "I damned well wouldn't have yielded to it."

But the handling of the survey poses anew the problems of the dominant role of network television in shaping public opinion and the reluctance of that industry to provide a forum for ideas and opinions that reflect unfavorably upon commercial broadcasting.

The results of the "ABC News-Harris Survey" on viewer attitudes toward video advertising were made public in March. But we obtained - to the discomfort of the Harris organization - a copy of a confidential draft prepared one month earlier.

Notwithstanding the numerous disparities between the initial and final versions, Harris claims that he personally wrote both.

The original draft said: "When asked directly about TV advertising, the American people were downright hostile." The final version said: "When asked directly about TV advertising, Americans are skeptical."

The original draft said: "The best the public can say about TV advertising is that it is a necessary evil that pays for TV, a view held by a 62-29 percent majority."

Although the question asked by Harris' pollsters specifically referred to a "necessary evil," that phrase was eliminated in the final text, which incorporated a subtle but significant shift in meaning: "A 64-29 percent majority believes that TV advertising is necessary to pay for the programs they see."

The initial draft contained a prominent and comprehensive description of the arguments against television advertising aimed at children.

"The Federal Trade Commission has been holding hearings on banning advertising for children, and a decision should be forthcoming in the near future.

"Those who favor a ban claim that manufacturers are taking unfair advantage of young people who are not able to distinguish between products that are good or harmful to them.

"They also charge that these ads can turn children against their parents and undermine parental authority."

All of the critical language was removed before the survey results were made public in a press release distributed to hundreds of daily newspapers that subscribe to the "ABC News-Harris Survey" results.

Although fees from those newspapers pay for a significant share of the costs of conducting national surveys on various subjects every three weeks, the largest financial supporter by far is ABC News.

In the case of the poll on television advertising, "I didn't suggest the topic to them (ABC News)," says Harris. "They suggested it to me. I thought it was quite an act of courage."

Somewhere along the line, however, there was a crucial loss of nerve. What originally was characterized as the public's "downright hostility" toward television commercials finally emerged as "some skepticism about TV advertising."

my turn

by jo ann nunley

Have you ever really listened to statements we make in our day-to-day conversations with our friends and family?

I wonder how some of these came about and how they ever caught on.

As right as rain-on rare occasions when it comes after a four-month drought or instead of a forecast blizzard, rain is right as right can be. On the contrary, it infuriates golfers, enranges baseball fans and agitates mothers-of-the-bride or weekend sun-bathers.

Warm as toast-strange that warmth could be associated with toast. A warm toast is such a short-lived object, it's cool by the time you get it to a plate to spread butter on it.

As white as a sheet-it's obvious this expression was used before the time of brightly colored sheets with everything from flowers to psychedelic designs on them. But, these are still purchased at merchants annual "white sales."

As brown as a berry-although I'm no horticulture expert, I'd say off-hand that berries come in every color but brown. Even in their ripening stages, I've never seen a brown berry.

Easy as taking candy from a baby, or easy as falling off a log backwards-well, unlike the white sheet changing with time, these "easy as" expressions speak for themselves, definitely getting over a negative point.

As cute as a bug-now snug as a bug in a rug I'd believe, but a cute bug? Judging from the insecticides purchased annually, many share my anti-bug sentiment. The lady-bug is the only species of crawling critters that would come anywhere near cute in my books.

Easy as pie-this was used long before a pie could be bought frozen and popped into the microwave. Who's kidding whom? A pie made from scratch includes mixing, flouring, rolling and fitting then crimping, not to mention preparing filling and cleaning up.

Quick as a wink, or three shakes of a drake's tail-these expressions I can buy.

As plain as day-whatever this means, it's too vague to argue about. I prefer plain as the nose on your face.

Sound as a dollar-a non-inflationary dollar, I'm sure.

Such as the latter figure of speech, some of the expressions make no sense at all. But they serve the purpose of catching the listener's attention and getting an idea across. It's as American as apple pie.

Churches Honor Seniors

East Side and 37th Street Churches of Christ congregations hosted a banquet honoring graduating seniors Friday in the Western Texas College cafeteria.

Master of ceremonies for the evening was Arlie Eicke and the invocation was led by Perry Westmoreland. Welcome from the junior students was given by Brantley Kitching and the response for the seniors was given by Sidney Smith.

Bob Burgess, minister of the 4th and Elm Street Church of Christ in Sweetwater was the speaker for the banquet. He presented thoughts on positive attitudes, love and self-esteem as the seniors graduate and go into changing world.

After the seniors were introduced by Milton Ham, they were "bragged" on by their fellow students. Then, in turn, the seniors passed on various "bits of heritage" to the students who were remaining in high school. The New International Version of the Bible was given as a gift to each graduate from the elders of the two congregations and a charge was given to use the scriptures as a guide to their lives.

A musical singing group, the Mountaintop Singers, from the Broadway Church of Christ Bible Chair in Lubbock composed of Bob Massey, Diane Massey, Terry Taylor, Carolyn Gaither, and Kelly Prude, sang contemporary Christian songs as entertainment. Preachers, their wives, and youth workers from the two congregations were guests at the banquet, as well as parents of the graduating seniors.

Those attending were Sidney Smith, Tracey Westmoreland, Perry Westmoreland, Melinda Masters, Lori Watlington, Terry Thames, Doug Huddleston, Lana Bruns, Jay Wesson, Nena Melton, Sheryl Neeley, Patricia Velez, Gary Martin, Sherry Musick, Kenny Crow, Mark Scott, Debra Combest, Brent Taylor, Janna Combest, Lloyd Wayne Benson, Karen Preston, Mitch Stone, Rebecca Musick, Brantley Kitching, Charlotte Masters, John Smiley, Cindy McCormick, Stephen Ham, Carla Jones and Pam Chaney. Also Anne Kitching, Valerie Bryant, Arlie and Barbara Eicke, Gary Lowe, Pat and Maylan Abbananto, Maurice and Sammie Scott, Milton and Jo Ann Ham, Bob and Liz Burgess, Gordon and Betty Musick, Willie and Irene Masters, James and Janet Wesson, Foy and Mary Westmoreland, Joe and Peggy Martin, Bob and Marida Watlington, and the Mountaintop Singers.

Consumer Food News

COLLEGE STATION--Best buys this week include poultry, canned produce, several dairy items and fresh produce, according to Gwendolyne Clyatt. Mrs. Clyatt is a consumer marketing information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

This week's price-quality trends are the following:

POULTRY--Due to the high cost of red meats, poultry makes an attractive buy, even at moderate prices.

Look for features on whole fryers and parts, especially breasts, drumsticks and mixed parts. Also, eggs are an economical meat substitute, offering high-quality protein at reasonable prices.

GROCERY MARKET AISLES--Expect bargains on canned fruits and vegetables, especially tomato products. Other specials include dry beans, peanut butter, applesauce and tuna fish.

DAIRY--Cheese at this week's feature prices also means high-quality protein with economy in mind. Only two ounces of cheddar or processed cheese equals the protein in an average serving of meat. Other dairy features are milk, yogurt and cottage cheese.

FRESH VEGETABLES--Best buys include potatoes, onions, squash, carrots, cooking greens and cucumbers. Also watch for lower priced head lettuce and corn.

South decides not to make any slam try and is mighty glad when he sees the dummy. There is an almost sure club loser and three potential spade losers. Of course, if East has the spade ace all South's worries are over.

He wins the diamond and draws trumps with three leads stopping in dummy. Then he leads a club to his 10. West wins and leads a second diamond. South wins and plays his king of clubs, leads a club to his ace and notes that East still holds a high club.

If clubs had been 3-3, South would be able to discard a spade. If West held the fourth club South could have led dummy's last club and discarded one of his three spades. West would have been caught in an end play.

As it was, South still could do something better than lead a spade to his king. He ruffed dummy's last club and led a low spade from his hand. If West won the trick, South's worries would have been over, but East won and led the queen of spades.

South rises with his king of spades just in case East has underled the ace, but West produces that fine high card.

At this point West is end played. He has no spade left. He must give South a ruff and discard and the contract still makes.

Conservation Awards Presented At Luncheon

Two men were recognized Tuesday for wise use of soil, water and plants in their farming and ranching operations in this area.

Don Wills of Fluvanna was named Outstanding Conservation Farmer and Kenneth Gibson was named outstanding absentee farmer-rancher in the Upper Colorado Soil and Water Conservation District.

They were presented awards at a luncheon meeting Tuesday at The Shack.

Wills owns and operates a 537-acre farm a mile west of Fluvanna, a 320-acre farm about six miles west of Fluvanna, and leases 550 acres southwest of Gail for a combined total of 1,179 acres of cropland, 221 acres of rangeland, a five-acre Waterway and a two-acre farmstead. A native of Fluvanna, he attended school there, graduating in 1956. He is a member of the ASCS county committee in Borden County, is president of the Fluvanna Gin board, a director of the Borden County Livestock Association, is a deacon in the Fluvanna Baptist Church and is active in 4H activities as an adult leader. He is married to the former Jacqueline Martin and they have two children, Ty 14, and Kim 12.

Wills has been a cooperator with the Upper Colorado Soil and Water Conservation District since 1960. Through assistance with the Great Plains Conservation Program, he has installed 25,263 feet of parallel terraces, 2,025 feet of diversion terraces, a five-acre waterway, 2,461 feet of permanent fence, 1,412 feet of livestock water pipeline and a water storage facility for livestock. These completed conservation measures on the 537-acre farm, and in 1978 a water well and storage facility were installed on the 320 acre farm to facilitate grazing. A parallel terrace system is planned for cropland on the 320-acre farm.

He has a diversified farming operation including 90 ewes for lamb and wool production, a steer operation, cotton, small grains and sudan. He believes in crop rotation, planting small grains on 100 acres for fall, winter and spring grazing. The grain land then is fallowed in the summer. Sudan is planted on 50 to 60 acres for summer grazing. A row crop rotation of cotton and grain sorghum is carried out on the 550 acres of leased land.

Gibson, a native of Scurry county, assisted his father, the late Dan Gibson, with a farming and ranch operation. He now has another ranch near Sidney in Comanche County. After graduating from Snyder High School, he attended Texas A&M University, receiving a degree in electrical engineering in 1953. He served in the Army until 1956.

Gibson began the ranching operation shortly after leaving the Army. He bought 80 Gibson Beefmasters from his father in 1956 and operated under the name of K.E. Beefmasters. He and a brother then formed a partnership in 1957 and ranched near Ballinger. The partnership was dissolved in 1961 and he then moved his family to Sidney where he now runs a herd of approximately 200 Beefmasters. Following his father's death in 1965, he leased the Snyder ranch from his mother.

Gibson and his wife, Sue, have four children, Kenneth II, Windy Nikolauk, Clay and Leigh Deigh. He is president of the Sidney School Board and secretary of the Comanche County Hospital District. He and his wife are active in First Baptist Church in Comanche.

He also is involved in the Foundation Beefmaster Association, which he serves as a director and is a past president. He is a member of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association and the National Cattlemen's Association. He became a member of the Upper Colorado Soil and Water Conservation District in 1970. When he took over the Scurry County Ranch, it was not over-grazed, but some of the pastures were infested with brush, and it needed some cross fences and watering facilities. Through cost share assistance from the Great Plains Conservation Program and proper grazing management, Gibson has been able to increase the carrying capacity of the ranch considerably. He has done abut 2,100 acres of brush control, reseeding some 800 acres to rangeland using improved varities of adapted range grasses. He also converted 170 acres of cropland into lovegrass pastures.

In 1973, he started a short duration grazing system with the technical assistance from the SCS. He installed about 4,400 feet of fence, two concrete water storage facilities and two ponds. He is convinced that this system is the most worthwhile effort he has made in his ranching operations.

Wiretapping Bill Being Considered

AUSTIN (AP) — Prosecutors could use evidence obtained from telephone wiretaps in drug cases under a Senate-approved measure nicknamed the "Nixon Memorial Bill" by critics.

Senators gave tentative approval, 20-11, Tuesday to the bill by Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texarkana. A final vote is needed to send the proposal to the House.

"This is aimed primarily at those involved in drug trafficking in this state," Howard said. Listening devices could not be used in marijuana cases.

State law prohibits wiretapping.

District attorneys or the attorney general would request wiretapping authorization under the bill. The presiding judge of the Court of Criminal Appeals would authorize wiretapping on a case-by-case basis, Howard said.

"Is this the same bill we buried the other day, the Nixon Memorial Bill?" asked Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur. Howard switched two votes from last week, when he failed to bring the measure up for debate.

Parker argued that it would be unfair to let the criminal appellate judge authorize wiretapping.

"Suppose a person got wiretapped, got convicted, and appeals to the Court of Criminal Appeals," he said. "Then the appellate judge would be called on to decide if he had done something illegal."

Howard said the nine-member court sits in panels of three and could avoid Parker's scenario.

District attorneys or the attorney general would have to include in their wiretapping request the name of the investigating officer, other methods used to gain information sought in the tap, the specific time for the tap and whether phone taps had been requested earlier for the same case.

Federal Policy May Be Adding To Gas Crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal policy decisions contributed to the West Coast gasoline shortage and may soon trigger a more severe, nationwide gas crunch, a Federal Trade Commission official is contending.

Alred F. Dougherty, director of the FTC's bureau of competition, said Energy Department actions seem to be making the shortages worse instead of easing them.

In a letter to Rep. Benjamin Resenthal, D-N.Y., Dougherty said:

"We are seriously concerned that DOE regulations and informal directives to the oil companies may be partially responsible for the present shortages."

Resenthal, chairman of a Coast fuel shortages, said allegations by the FTC official, if accurate, "constitute a shocking indictment of DOE policies and practices."

Energy Department spokesman Jim Bishop said the agency would withhold comment until it had obtained a copy of Dougherty's letter.

Dougherty said the FTC is beginning a full-fledged investigation into whether the three-month loss of oil from Iran is the real cause of the shortage or whether oil compainies are "using it as an excuse" to cut supplies to their dealers.

He said the FTC is concerned because U.S. refineries have cut back gasoline production far in excess of the reduction of curde oil imports to the United States during the turmoil in Iran earlier this year.

"If this cutback in production of refined products was not justified by a scarcity of crude oil or other legitimate business reasons, the current gasoline shortage may be contrived," Dougherty said.

Hives and allergies

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I would appreciate it if you could tell me something about hives. When I went in for my complete physical which I have every year I bloomed all over. My doctor changed my blood pressure medicine but he said he felt sure that wasn't the cause. He gave me a prescription for Librium but I still get hives. He told me I had to go to a dermatologist and recommended one but I haven't gone. I can't understand why I should go to a dermatologist.

I've heard there were places that could test you for allergies in one visit. I called him and asked him about it and he said it would be a waste of time and money — that my problem was not caused by an allergy.

I do enjoy a cocktail before dinner and that's why I don't take but one Librium in the morning. Believe me the cocktail works better.

This doctor and two others before him have said I am tense and need to relax but I don't know how. What do you suggest?

DEAR READER — You probably have a communications problem with your doctor since he's told you that you have hives and your description certainly sounds like it. He probably knows full well that most hives are caused by an allergy.

The most likely reason that he didn't want you to have allergy testing is that most causes for hives are related to food allergies and the way you identify them is from an elimination diet. All the foods that are thought to be related to allergic reaction are eliminated and then different foods are added one at a time to see if any reaction occurs.

In general, if hives are related to something you've eaten, they will appear within minutes. They're not caused by something you ate one or two days before they occur.

In addition to food there are some allergens which can cause hives including simple contact with the substance that a person is allergic to.

Some people who are sensitive to animal dander can have contact with fur or any product from that animal and develop hives immediately. As a good example, an individual who is truly allergic to bees may develop hives simply by eating honey and the swelling of the lips will occur immediately. You can also develop hives in relationship to heat, cold and sun rays. They can also occur in response to certain drugs and chemicals that a person takes.

The Librium may make you less tense and help you to relax but other than that it won't do anything to relieve the allergic response producing hives.

Friends though not spouses

By Karen Blaker, Ph.D.

This is the second of two columns of advice from readers on how to remain friends with an ex-spouse after divorce. Here are more excerpts from the deluge of letters I received insisting on the basis of personal experience that a friendly divorce is possible.

DEAR DR. BLAKER — It was very important for me to remain friends with my husband after our divorce.

Toward that end, I decided not to ask him for alimony. It is hard for a man to feel friendly if he has to write out a check every week.

I didn't exactly have my pick of jobs, either. So this was no easy decision. It was either sink or swim.

I let him decide how much child support he could afford. That worked out well. The checks are never late, and I feel perfectly free to ask him for more when there are special things our son wants to do.

Also, I never restricted visitation privileges. My son and my ex can see each other whenever they want.

They talk on the phone almost every night, have dinner together several times a week and spend longer times together on a regular basis. We even alternate celebrating the major holidays with our son.

It has been a struggle at times, but I basically feel my ex never owed me anything for being married to him. We both worked hard in our marriage. And I really believe that all the money in the world wouldn't be worth losing a good friend.

DEAR DR. BLAKER — I have a successful divorce.

We were married for more than seven years. The end was mutual.

However, we accepted the fact that we were going to have a lifelong relationship because of our 3-year-old son and decided to make it as pleasant as possible.

Another reason why we remain friends is that we are hundreds of miles from both families. We need each other for support. I'll never forget how he supported me for four months until I found a job.

There is one other bit of advice we would give to those wishing to keep their friendship: Do not confess infidelities or other indiscretions to each other during the divorce process.

I think we realized all that was only a symptom of the problems in our marriage and not the cause of the break-up. Because it was such an emotional time anyway, confessions would have only cemented the hard feelings and made it impossible for us to have any kind of future relationship.

DEAR DR. BLAKER — When my son and his ex-wife were separating and divorcing, I sent them this verse from the Bible:

"If you forgive others the wrongs they have done to you, your Father in heaven will also forgive you." (Matthew 6:14)

They now seem to have a friendly relationship.

DEAR READERS — This outpouring of advice from people who want to help others is truly a reaffirmation of man's humanity to man. Let's do it again and again and again.

Shy people, assert yourselves. Send for Dr. Blaker's "Shyness" hotline. Send 50 cents plus a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Blaker in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 475, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Send your questions and comments to Dr. Blaker at the above address. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies, but questions of general interest will be discussed in future columns.

Energy Problem

Los Angeles pummeled two station attendants when the station ran out of fuel. And four persons were injured when an 80-year-old man waiting in a gas line in North Hollywood suffered a seizure and lost control of his car.

Jim Campbell, the California Service Station Association official who spearheaded the protest movement, asked his members Tuesday to postpone the shutdown for 30 days "and listen to what the Energy Department has to say."

Department officials are considering whether to relax controls on gas dealers' markups. Currently dealers are allowed an average markup of 7.3 cents per gallon — the 1973 rate — plus a three-cent allowance for costs.

Meanwhile, other dealer associations worried that a shutdown would spark customer reprisals — or prompt the Justice Department to seek antitrust action.

"This would not hurt the Department of Energy or the oil companies and it would hurt the consumer and in turn would hurt the service stations," said Maurice Langelier, executive director of Massachusetts' Bay State Gasoline Retailers Association.

"If stations are closed down it will be because they're out of gas," said James Cresente.

Head For Burk Friday

Cats Win First One!

By BILL McCLELLAN

It's been said the third time is the charm, but Mitch Mackey could tell you different.

The senior slugger came to bat four times during yesterday's schoolboy playoff game here. He lined out to short and left field his first and second times up, and grounded to the second baseman the third. But he wasn't finished yet.

With the score tied 2-2 in the bottom of the seventh inning, the left-hander squeezed a hard shot between second and third base to drive in the winning run, and give Snyder High School a one-game edge over the Burkburnett Bulldogs in their bi-district playoff series, 3-2.

The best-of-three series moves to Burkburnett 2 p.m. Friday. A third game, if necessary, would follow immediately, at about 4:30.

Mackey's heroics were only one aspect of the all-important contest here yesterday. Some gravy-gathering pitching by Sid Everton and near-disaster shades of 1978 were other highlights.

Everton, now 9-2 for the season, hurled a near-perfect game for the Tigers. The veteran right-hander fanned a dozen batters and allowed only two hits - both of them in the seventh inning.

Snyder cleaned off the Burk batting box in quick fashion to open the game. Everton struck out the first two 'Dogs, and second baseman Kyle Short took care of the third on a high fly ball.

Back-to-back singles by Bryan Vincent and Sid Everton got Snyder going in the bottom of the stanza. Vincent was picked off trying to take second base, but with two outs Scott Crenwelge slammed a basehit that scored Everton and put the Tigers on the board.

The Tigers got into light trouble in the second inning after Robertson drew a walk and stole second base. Everton fanned the next two batters, but the second of the pair reached first base fater the pitch got by catcher Toby Neves. Snyder got out of the problem as Everton fanned Hanks, and Varmoski grounded out to first baseman Crenwelge.

Crenwelge, 2 for 3 for the afternoon and batting 362 for the season, keyed another Snyder attack in the fourth inning with a single. Designated hitter Sammy Willis slapped into a fielder's choice, and Neve's put him in scoring position with help from an error charged to the Burk third sacker. Richard Crayton drew a walk to load the bases, and an error by the 'Dogs shortstop brought Willis home form a second Snyder score.

Bobby Degrate then pounded an infield shot to the shortstop, who hurled it home in time to nab Wes Partain - running for Neves - with the force out.

The Tigers held on until the top of the seventh inning, needing only three outs to clinch the victory. But visions of a 1978 bi-district game - when Snyder jumpedout to a strong lead early, only to lose the first game on a number of errors - kept cropping up.

First-up L. King reached the first sack when an Everton pitch caught him flatfooted. Hanks struck out, but King, who stole second base and reached third on a Tiger error, raced home moments later when Varmoski slapped the first Burkburnett hit of the game.

Varmoski's hit was picked up between second and first base by Crayton, who raced from his shortstop position to get it. His off-balance throw caught Crenwelge helpless at first base, and King raced to third on the passed ball. Crenwelge found the sphere near the Burk dugout and hurled it home as King was speeding towards the plate, but the toss was in the dirt and Neves was unable to handle it.

Pitcher Smoky Burgess grounded out to Crenwelge for the second out of the inning, but Baber slammed a hit as next-up to drive in Varmoski and the tying score. Snyder got the final out when Park slapped a shot straight back to Everton on the hill.

With the score 2-2, and Tiger batter Short grounding out in the bottom of the seventh, it appeared it might be a long afternoon for playoff fans. But Bobby Degrate popped a sinble and Vincent drew a walk to put the Tigers in scoring position moments later.

Everton slapped into a fielder's chioce which tagged Vincent, while Ricky Gambol - running for Degrate - made it to third base safely and set up Mackey's game-winning single.

"I'm very elated over the win," smiled Coach Albert Lewis. "I thought the kids held up real well under pressure. The kids showed a lot of character."

"The pressure past," Lewis was able to laugh about the game, espcially Mackey's misfires early in the game.

"Boy! I thought that was going to be a double," he said immediately after Mackey's third-inning blast which was snared by the left fielder. "That guy made a sensational catch."

And after the game, "He (Mackey) was overdue, but the hit he got was timely. You knew the way he was hitting the ball, he had to get one through sooner or later."

All of which sets Snyder in good standing going into Friday's game.

"Well, I think you're able to tell, Burk will rise to the occassion. They'll lull you to sleep and then they'll make something happen. Our kids have been there before, they've played at Burkburnett and they know what it takes."

Mackey, 7-3, will mount the mound for Snyder Friday, with relief help if needed, from Tony Degrate. Everton will start the third playoff game, if the series gets that far.

"All three will be ready to go. We'll use everything we have to. We want to win the first one," smiled Lewis. "The pressure is on them. They have to win two. But we don't want to give them that chance. We're going for the first one with everything we've got."

Umps Expected Back To Work

NEW YORK (AP) — Major league baseball umpires are expected to return to work this weekend under terms of an agreement that The Associated Press learned was reached between their union and the two leagues Tuesday.

Details of the agreement ending the dispute that has kept the regular umpires on the sidelines since spring training were presented to a joint meeting of the major leagues in Chicago today. The settlement was expected to be announced officially Thursday.

Both sides have been pressing for an end to the work stoppage and meeting almost daily for the last week. It was a marathon bargaining session that started Monday afternoon and lasted into the early morning hours of Tuesday that apparently signaled the breakthrough of the final issues.

Giants Jump On Houston

HOUSTON (AP)—On the surface, Houston appeared to have the upper hand entering the first game of its three-game series with San Francisco.

Rookie left-hander Phil Nastu, 0-3 in his six previous major league appearances, was paired against Houston's J.R. Richard, the winningest right hander in the National League during the past three seasons.

Nastu, however, defied the odds as he picked up his first major-league hit and RBI, and hurled a five-hitter for his first victory as the Giants blitzed Richard and the Astros, [illegible] Tuesday night.

San Francisco greeted Richard with six hits and five runs over the first two and two-thirds innings to provide Nastu with all the support he needed.

Richard, 4-3, suffered his third straight loss this month after finishing runner-up to teammate Ken Forsch in the balloting for the National League's April pitcher of the month.

A first-inning double by Terry Whitfield and two passed balls charged to Houston catcher Alan Ashby provided the Giants with their first run of the game.

San Francisco came back with three runs in the second on Whitfield's run-producing fielder's choice and Jack Clark's two-run double.

Rangers Win Another, 9-8

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP)—The Texas Rangers refused to take no for an answer again Tuesday night and scratched back from deficits of 3-0 and 8-4 to pull within 2½ games of the division-leading Minnesota Twins.

"There was a feeling on the bench that we were gonna come back and win this game," said Al Oliver, who swatted his fourth home run of the year in the Rangers' 9-8 triumph over the Twins.

"It's hard to predict the outcome of baseball games," Oliver said. "To me, the great thing about baseball is that it's all unrehearsed. It's different every day."

But the scenario's been the same for the Twins the last two nights - a lead and Mike Marshall on the mound. Both situations resulted in losses.

Home runs by Oliver and John Grubb tied the game 4-4 after the Twins had taken a 3-0 lead in the second, thanks in part to Willie Norwood's two-run blast off Dock Ellis.

But then Ron Johnson doubled in two runs in the Twins' sixth to make it 6-4 and Minnesota appeared to seal the verdict in the seventh with two home runs off reliever Sparky Lyle, the eventual winner.

Rookie John Castino hit a sinking liner past the diving Oliver for an inside-the-park homer, the first of his career, and one out later Roy Smalley capped a four-hit night with his ninth home run as the Twins grabbed a four-run advantage.

"We could have easily given up after that inside the park home run and Smalley's homer," Oliver noted.

But if the Twins had treated Lyle with disrespect, the Rangers were downright rude to Marshall, whom they beat for the second straight night.

Minnesota's Mike Bacsik gave up three hits and a walk, allowing Texas to climb within 8-6, when Marshall entered the game in the eighth. Jim Sundberg dumped a ground-rule double into the right field stands, making it 8-7, and pinch-hitter John Ellis, a former teammate of Marshall's with the Rangers, singled to right for two more runs, capping the five-run rally.

Hope Accepts Rehab Center Benefit Date

ABILENE—Bob Hope, America's "King of Comedy" and ambassador to the world, announced Tuesday that he would come to Abilene on Aug. 3 to headline a $100-a-plate benefit dinner to benefit the West Texas Rehabilitation Center.

The announcement was made through a telephone conference call between Hope and members of the WTRC Executive Committee, who extended the invitation.

John Hamil, president of WTRC Board of Directors, and A. D. (Dick) Bowen, new chairman of the Joint Venture for Crippled Children, jointly announced that the Hope benefit performance would kick off the second annual Joint Venture project.

The event will be held at 8 p.m. Friday, Aug. 3, at a place to be announced.

The gala evening with Hope will be spearheaded by petroleum industry leaders who conceived and organized the first Joint Venture for Crippled Children last year. Approximately $75,000 was raised to assist the handicapped in the first effort.

Tables at the Hope benefit dinner (accommodating 10 persons) will "sell" for $1,000, and individual tickets will be $100 per person.

Dr. Sun Yat-sen was elected president of the Republic of China in 1921.

Say 3 U.S. Psychiatrists...

Soviet Dissident Perfectly Sane

CHICAGO (AP)—Three American psychiatrists have decided that Pyotr Grigorievich Grigorenko, the Soviet general exiled after he became one of the Soviet Union's leading dissidents, is perfectly sane despite what Soviet doctors said about him.

The American doctors reported Tuesday, at the annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association, that they had reached their conclusion after examining the former general and military theorist at Harvard University and in New York City.

The psychiatrists are Dr. Alan A. Stone of Harvard, president-elect of the APA, Dr. Walter Reich of Washington, D.C., and Dr. Lawrence C. Kolb of Albany, N.Y., professor emeritus at Columbia University.

Speaking at a special session at the APA meeting Stone said the Grigorenko case confirms some of the accusations that psychiatry is sometimes used as a tool of political repression in the Soviet Union.

He emphasized, however, that not all psychiatrists cooperate with the Soviet secret police, citing one psychiatric commission at Tashkent which disagreed with the diagnosis of psychiatrists at the Serbsky Institute of Forensic Psychiatry in Moscow.

According to the doctors, Grigorenko had asked for the examinations and given permission for the results to be publicized. The psychiatrists were aided by an interpreter, a Soviet immigrant who is a resident in psychiatry at Columbia, and they said their findings were backed up by other specialists and by psychological tests.

Stone said Andrei Sneznevsky, considered the Soviet Union's leading psychiatrist, was advised that the Americans had found no evidence of mental illness. Stone said he responded that the Americans were unfamiliar with some aspects of Soviet life and that there are as many forms of paranoia as there are persons suffering from it.

According to the doctors, in his homeland the general had been deemed to suffer from chronic paranoia which at times reached psychotic proportions, and had twice been placed in prison mental hospitals for the criminally insane.

In late 1977, he came to the United States on a six-month visa to get a prostate operation and visit a stepson living in New York.

In March 1978, while he was in the United States, the Soviet Union revoked his citizenship.

Dear Abby

Time Doesn't Heal All Old Wounds

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I was adopted as an infant. All my life I have wanted to know my natural mother. About two years ago I began my search. Fortunately, my adoptive parents willingly gave me what little information they had. With that, plus what I gathered from various other sources, I located my mother in Iowa. I was so thrilled and excited that I couldn't wait to phone her! I didn't realize what a shock it would be for her to hear from the child she had given away 32 years before.

After a brief conversation she suggested that I write to her, so I wrote immediately telling her all about myself, my life, and how I was ready to fly to Iowa to meet her as soon as she gave the word.

A week later I received this reply—no date, no salutation and no signature:

> "You now have a life that adoption made possible so count your blessings. I don't understand how you could believe that contacting me would not make trouble. I have had guilt and shame all my days—and now this whole mess has been reopened.
> "Count your blessings. No need for further communication."

Abby, I can understand her shame, guilt, suffering and sorrow. The entire episode involving me is like an open wound that has been festering for 32 years. Obviously she has never learned to deal with those feelings. But what about MY feelings?

Abby, my mother wasn't an innocent teenager who got caught. She was a 27-year-old Navy nurse in World War II. I want to know who my natural father was, and all about the relationship between him and my mother. I can find out only through her.

I don't want to disrupt anybody's life. I just want the facts that I feel I have a right to know. Am I asking too much?

I am not a bored, neurotic housewife. I've been happily married for 14 years and have an 11-year-old daughter and 7-year-old son. I'm active in volunteer work and have returned to college, so I'm no kook out to make trouble.

Your advice and the opinions of others who have been through this would be deeply appreciated.

MRS. G. IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR MRS. G.: I understand your feelings and appreciate your "right" to know your natural parents, but they, too, have rights. And one of those rights is the right to be left alone if they so choose. (Many girls gave up their babies for adoption only because they were assured their identities would never be revealed.) Many natural parents would be thrilled to reunite with their children, but we cannot assure that ALL are.

I fully approve of searching for one's natural parents, but I think a go-between should make the contact and the reunion should be effected only if all parties want it.

DEAR ABBY: I have read many letters in your column from the family of the bride resenting bitterly the family of the groom paying off their social obligations by inviting all their shirt tail relatives, friends, neighbors and business acquaintances to a wedding paid for by the bride's parents.

I recently returned from the Orient where I attended a wedding, and was informed of their solution to the wedding guest problem. Each family invites as many guests as they wish and each family PAYS for its own guests. Clever?
