Neutron bomb alarms Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, quickly breaking ranks with former President Carter's military policies, "very probably" will want to deploy the neutron weapon in Europe, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger says.

Weinberger also said Tuesday the Reagan administration would be sympathetic to requests to station U.S. troops in Israel, Egypt or any other friendly country.

The neutron weapon statement drew strong reaction from the Soviet Union, where Radio Moscow said the possibility of reviving the project shelved by Carter "cannot but cause alarm at the prospects of world peace and the easing of tension."

The new Pentagon chief said Carter's decision to defer deployment of the enhanced radiation weapon was wrong and caused consternation in the governments of West Germany and other European allies.

It was the second time in as many days the new administration had indicated it may dismantle the major defense policies of the Carter years.

On Monday, President Reagan rejected Carter's long-stalled plan to gradually withdraw U.S. troops from South Korea.

In 1978, Carter ordered production of the neutron warheads put off indefinitely and then authorized the Energy Department to manufacture some critical elements in case a decision was made later to deploy the weapons.

Weinberger, speaking at his first Pentagon news conference, said, "I think that the opportunity that this weapon gives to strengthen tactical nuclear forces is one that we very probably would want to make use of.

"Obviously, with the locations involved and other relationships involved, we certainly would want to consult with all of our allies and friends and try to persuade them that we have a greater degree of constancy this time," he added.

Any decision to order production of the neutron warhead, which is designed mostly to offset a Soviet advantage in tank strength, would have to be made by Reagan.

Neutron warheads, which would be placed on Lance missiles and eight-inch artillery guns in Western Europe, are designed to stop attacking Soviet tanks by sickening their crews with intense shafts of radiation.

Proponents say the neutron weapons would limit the areas in which life and property would be destroyed in nuclear explosions. Opponents, however, argue the reduced damage from such weapons would make it easier for leaders of warring nations to order their use without concern about catastrophic civilian causalties.

Weinberger also said he "certainly would consider" an Israeli request that U.S. troops be stationed in that country. But he said he was speaking hypothetically because he doesn't expect any such request.

Israeli officials have said they would not ask for American troops to fight for them but would allow Israeli territory to be used as a staging area for U.S. operations.

"The basic policy is that we don't go where we're not wanted," Weinberger said.

But he added, "We would always examine very carefully and sympathetically requests for the stationing of American troops in countries where they were desired."

Reagan, in an interview Monday, said the United States needs "a presence in the Middle East" to deter Soviet aggression.

"Not the stationing of enough American troops that you say we could stop the Soviet Union if they set out to advance logistically," he said. "We know that we couldn't do that."

Weinberger also said the Reagan administration would make a decision quickly on Saudi Arabia's request for extra fuel tanks and bomb racks for F-15 fighters

Budget cuts painful to Congress, citizens

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government officials on both ends of the federal funnel — giving and receiving — predict the deep budget cuts sought by President Reagan will inflict political pain on Congress and economic suffering on Americans.

Among the targets reported under consideration by Reagan budget-cutters are such politically popular programs as Social Security, food stamps, child nutrition and economic aid to farmers and cities.

"We begin what may well turn out to be the most painful political process through which any of us will ever go," Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., said Tuesday as the House Budget Committee he heads began studying its own list of potential program cutbacks.

At the White House, meanwhile, big-city mayors received the bad news from Reagan about his plans for sharp reductions in urban aid. New York Mayor Edward Koch said the president promised "those who are truly in need will not be asked to suffer, but all others, hopefully, will suffer equally."

Reagan, who must persuade a reticent Congress to support the reductions, was to meet with congressional leaders in the Capitol this afternoon to discuss his economic proposals.

The president also plans to make a televised address to the nation Thursday night to spell out his general view of the economy's problems and why his proposed cures are necessary to lower inflation and unemployment and restore healthy economic growth. He is to submit a package of tax cuts, offsetting budget reductions and regulatory changes to Congress Feb. 18.

Getting Congress to enact the budget cuts, however, will not be easy, Jones said as the Budget Committee reviewed 105 suggestions from congressional economists on how to prune billions of dollars from the budget.

Black leaders in Congress, who met with Reagan Tuesday, emerged from their White House meeting saying they feared Reagan's budget cuts will come down hardest on their constituency.

"We told the president we are gravely concerned that policies devised to rein in inflation do not disproportionately burden the poor, the elderly and moderate income people," said Rep. Walter Fauntroy, D-D.C., chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus.

Even as the administration worked on its spending cut proposals, Reagan's chief economic spokesmen urged Congress Tuesday to raise the national debt limit by $50 billion to finance the current budget deficit.

The House Ways and Means Committee voted to raise the debt ceiling from $935 billion to $985 billion after Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and budget director David A. Stockman said the government would reach the current limit in only a few days. Without an increase, the government then would lose its borrowing authority.

Stockman, who consistently voted against raising the debt limit during his four years as a Republican House member from Michigan, said he had no choice but to seek an increase now because "the bills are coming due and they must be paid."

"I voted against those debt-ceiling bills (in the past) because I had no confidence anybody was developing a plan to control spending," he said. "I have confidence that such a plan is being developed now because I am writing it."

Reagan is setting his sights on reducing the 1981 budget at least 2 percent, or about $13 billion from a total of $663 billion in estimated spending.

For 1982, Reagan's economic advisers are looking to eliminate between $35 billion and $40 billion from a $739 billion budget proposed by the Carter administration, congressional sources said.

A list of potential cuts drawn up by Stockman and circulated through Congress suggests major reductions in a variety of aid programs.

The proposals include eliminating Social Security survivor benefits for college-age students and reducing Social Security disability payments, cutting federal funds for state-run Medicaid programs, tightening rules covering import-related and extended unemployment benefits, phasing out federally subsidized public service jobs and reducing food stamp benefits and child nutrition programs.

Stockman's proposals also include cuts in farmer loan programs, economic development aid for depressed inner cities, billion-dollar grants for synthetic-fuel plant construction and aid for the arts and humanities.

School accepts grant, over Simmons protest

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

The Pampa Independent School District Board of Trustees Tuesday accepted a $91,000 federal energy grant over one member's protests that the board was tying the school district's taxpayers with government strings.

School trustee Paul Simmons moved to reject the $91,685 grant, commenting, "I move we reject the Department of Energy grant on the basis that we don't want or need the federal money. I don't think the community wants the federal intervention."

When his motion died for lack of a second, Paul Simmons warned the board, "You're not going to get any federal money without strings attached."

In a preamble before the motion, Simmons — the local Republican party chairman — said he felt rejection of the grant would follow dictates of President Reagan who has repeatedly advocated local responsibility.

"You should put the responsibility for this back at the local level where it belongs, not taking it from the federal government," Simmons said.

Trustee Kenneth Fields countered Simmons, saying, "From my point of view, taking the grant is like taking the money which has been taken from our own pockets through taxes."

Simmons said that by accepting the grant, earmarked for replacement of windows in Pampa Middle School and Austin Elementary School, the board was failing to take the mandate of the people — made apparent in the sound defeat of a $2.2 million bond election held in August 1977. The money was to be used for major school repairs and improvements.

In September 1977 board meeting, resident Gene Lewis proposed the work be done by the people of Pampa themselves, either on a voluntary or payment basis.

Buddy Epperson questioned assistant superintendent James Trusty whether the grant was causing undue requirements.

Trusty replied a lot of paperwork, research and reports had to be filed in applying for the federal grant.

On the table beside the assistant superintendent, a pile of folders and papers on the grant application stood at least six inches tall.

"We will have to send in several reports on the installation through the completion of the replacement windows," Trusty said.

"Of course, the DOE is interested in what the energy savings will be over the years, and we will be submitting reports on that," he said.

"We will be interested in that from our own standpoint," Trusty added.

The motion to accept the grant was made by Fields and seconded by Phil Vanderpool. It passed, with only Simmons voting "no."

In addition to replacing the windows at Pampa Middle School (PMS) and Austin Elementary School, officials said the grant will be used for additional insulation and more efficient exterior flood lighting at the schools.

Prior to accepting the federal energy grant, board members thumbed down the purchase of installing tinted storm windows on PMS, Austin Elementary School, Travis Elementary School and Lamar Elementary School, favoring instead replacement of the present windows with insulated, slide-raised windows.

Trusty said similar windows were used to replace windows in Pampa High School, Horace Mann Elementary School, Woodrow Wilson Elementary School and Baker Elementary School.

The bid for the project was let to Western Specialties Company of Lubbock for $329,535 for the middle school, Austin Elementary School and Travis Elementary School campuses.

Trusty said Lamar Elementary School's replacement program will have to be postponed until the next budget year.

The board of trustees agreed unanimously to accept the second budget amendment for the 1980 - 1981 budget presented by Jerry Haralson, school district business manager.

The budget change entailed a total revenue adjustment of $262,851.

The additional funds stemmed from $140,000 in current and delinquent tax revenue; $30,833 in interest on investments, an appraisal contract with Gray County and miscellaneous local revenue; $79,416 in amendments to the per capita and foundation funds; $2,252 in state transportation revenue; and $10,350 from a federal criminal justice grant.

Following a closed personnel session, board member reconvened in open session, accepting the resignations of David Martin, Pampa High School tennis coach, and Ward Harbin, science teacher at Pampa Middle School.

Sheliah Babbitt was hired by the board as fourth grade teacher and Woodrow Wilson Elementary and Mary Sims was employed to replace Harbin as science teacher at Pampa Middle School.

Area schools seek new administrators

BY MARILYN POWERS
Staff Writer

Three area school boards currently are seeking new administrative and coaching personnel, while a new superintendent has begun duties in the McLean Independent School District.

Jim B. Rutherford, former school superintendent at Briscoe for eight years, became the new McLean superintendent in mid-January. He replaced Carl Dwyer, who resigned after holding the post for two and one-half years.

Rutherford, who has served as superintendent of the Texline schools and teacher at Stratford, received his Bachelor of Science degree in 1957 and his Master of Science degree in 1962 from Southwestern State University in Oklahoma.

Dwyer, a former Pampa school principal, also was employed as a teacher in McLean.

WHITE DEER

Board members of the White Deer - Skellytown Independent School District are searching for a new superintendent to replace R. J. Standefur, who is to retire June 30 after 11 years as school superintendent.

Prior to coming to White Deer, Standefur was superintendent of the Stratford schools for 17 years and superintendent at Channing for four years. He has also been a teacher, coach and principal at Texline, Bovina and Vega and has a total of 41 years experience in public education.

Standefur received his Bachelor of Science degree from Texas Tech University and his Master of Education Administration degree from West Texas State University. He is a member of the American Association of School Administratiors, Texas Association of School Administrators, White Deer Lions Club and the Channing Masonic Lodge.

CANADIAN

Jim Pollard, assistant superintendent of the Canadian Independent School District, will replace J. R. Cullender as superintendent of that district in July.

Cullender has been superintendent at Canadian for 15 years and previously had served as principal of Canadian High School for seven years. He also has held teaching and coaching positions at Gruver, Stinnett and Adrian.

He received his Bachelor of Naval Science degree from the University of Texas and a Master of Education degree from West Texas State University.

Pollard, who is in his sixth year with the district, came to Canadian from Plainview, where he was athletic director and head football coach. He also has coached at Quanah, Electra and Decatur.

The Tulia native received his Bachelor of Science degree in 1961 from West Texas State University and his Master of School Administration degree in 1972.

Sam Scroggins, Canadian High School principal, will be promoted to administrative assistant, while Pollard's current position as assistant superintendent will be eliminated.

Scroggins has been at Canadian nine years, employed as coach, teacher and middle school principal before becoming high school principal. He also has coached at Lubbock High School, Hale Center, Westbrook and Klondike. He received his Bachelor of Science degree from Hardin - Simmons University in 1960 and his Master of Education degree from Northwestern Oklahoma State University in 1975.

Charles Russell, Canadian High School athletic director and head football coach, will replace Scroggins as high school principal.

Before coming to Canadian three years ago, Scroggins was a teacher at Sweetwater and coached at Rotan and Trent. He received his Bachelor of Science degree in 1968 from McMurry College and his Masters degree in mid-management in 1977 from Sul Ross State University.

Other members of the coaching staff are currently being considered to replace Russell as athletic director and head football coach. If the position is not filled by a member of the coaching staff, it will be opened to outside applicants after Feb. 10.

LEFORS

A high school football coach will be hired at Lefors after the school board's Feb. 12 meeting, said Jerrel Julian, Lefors superintendent of schools.

The coaching position was eliminated three years ago when the school dropped its high school football program because of "lack of interest and lack of boys," Julian said.

The school system plans to reinstate the high school football program for the 1981-82 school year. Three applicants have been interviewed for the position, Julian said.

Reagan defense budget soars to $180 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon's financial chief says the Defense Department wants to end the unrealistically low inflation projections that have caused headaches for military planners in recent years.

Jack R. Borsting, Defense Department comptroller, told the House Armed Services Committee he is working with the Congressional Budget Office and the White House Office of Management and Budget to find a better yardstick to measure future costs.

Borsting's testimony came Tuesday as the panel began hearings on the $180 billion defense budget submitted by former President Carter for the 1982 fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1.

The committee arranged to hear today from the five members of the military Joint Chiefs of Staff about the spending plan, which the Reagan administration has said it plans to increase substantially when it sends amendments to Capitol Hill next month.

Borsting disclosed the effort to get more accurate inflation predictions after Rep. William L. Dickinson of Alabama, ranking Republican on the panel, complained that budget shortages caused by unanticipated cost increases had prompted costly delays in buying new weaponry.

Since 1970, the White House budget office has required all federal agencies to use a measure known as the gross national product price deflator to project inflation in their spending plans.

Borsting agreed this measurement has caused large financial headaches for the Pentagon.

"Defense is really different (from other federal agencies) because we use 95 percent of the fuel, for example, that the federal government uses," Borsting testified. "We are also buying high technology — the aircraft, the submarines — so maybe we should have a separate marketbasket to compute inflation."

U.S. journalist tried in Iran for spying

CYNTHIA DWYER

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — An Iranian Revolutionary Court tried American freelance writer Cynthia B. Dwyer today on espionage charges after holding her in prison for eight months, the Swiss Foreign Office announced.

A Foreign Office spokesman said a Swiss diplomat who attended the trial reported a verdict was expected Monday. The diplomat did not provide details of the one-day trial in Tehran but said Mrs. Dwyer appeared "nervous but in good condition."

Mrs. Dwyer, 49, of Amherst, a suburb of Buffalo, N.Y., was arrested May 5 when she went to Iran to write articles about the revolution and was later accused of spying for the Central Intelligence Agency. The Swiss Embassy, representing U.S. interests in Iran, has been attempting to negotiate her release.

John Dwyer, her husband, said in Buffalo he had been notified of the trial by the State Department but that before commenting, "I'll just wait until I hear a little more officially."

In Washington, U.S. officials had no immediate comment on the trial beyond saying that the American government's position has been to say nothing about allegations of intelligence activity.

Mrs. Dwyer was not included in negotiations between the United States and Iran on release of 52 American hostages freed from 444 days of captivity on Jan. 20.

Two other Americans, both naturalized citizens, remain under arrest in Iran. They are Iranian-born Mohi Sobhani, 44, whose family lives in Los Angeles. The State Department said was arrested Sept. 6. The State Department also lists Afghan-born Zia Nassri as imprisoned, but has no other information on him.

Dwyer said Tuesday that he was hopeful today would bring word on whether his wife would soon be released.

Mrs. Dwyer was not included in negotiations between the United States and Iran on release of 52 American hostages freed from 444 days of captivity on Jan. 20.

Dwyer said Tuesday that he had been in contact with the U.S. State Department and that "apparently her health continues to be good."

Mrs. Dwyer, the mother of three, has been held in Evin Prison in Iran.

The Swiss Foreign Office spokesman did not disclose details of the trial proceedings.

He said he understood that the public was not admitted to the trial. He said the Iranian authorities sent an invitation Tuesday to the Swiss Embassy in Tehran to send an observer to the trial.

He was Wilhelm Schmid, head of the embassy's foreign interests section, who was accompanied by an interpreter and a local Iranian employee of the embassy, the spokesman said.

In other pending cases in Iran, the head of the Iranian Supreme Court said today that the fate of four Britons held captive for several months will be decided "in a few days."

Soviet grain embargo action won't affect American farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's Cabinet is debating whether to keep or lift the Soviet grain embargo amid indications there will be little effect either way on American farmers.

The American Agriculture Movement, meanwhile, is reminding Reagan of his campaign promise to end the embargo.

A White House official, who asked not to be identified, said a decision today is doubtful because it "is so tough."

"There's powerful symbolism on both sides," he said.

Lifting the embargo would be a gesture to farmers, but retaining or expanding it "would also send a strong signal internationally," he explained. "Economically, it doesn't make that much difference to farmers."

Agriculture Department economists say the 1980 decline in grain prices can be blamed largely on a glut of supplies from bumper 1979 crops, rather than the embargo.

Farm commodity prices may be slightly lower because of the embargo, some government experts say, and food prices probably have not increased quite as much as they otherwise would have.

When former President Carter announced the embargo Jan. 4, 1980, in retaliation for Soviet intervention in Afganistan, he had the support of farm groups and their members.

The order blocked delivery of 17 million metric tons of U.S. corn and wheat, plus some soybeans and other products, that the Soviet Union had been expected to take last year. It exempted 8 million metric tons of grain that were specified under a 1975 agreement calling for regular purchases of U.S. corn and wheat by the Soviets.

To help offset the embargo's impact on farmers, the Carter administration spent about $3 billion to buy or otherwise withhold from the market all agricultural exports denied the Soviets.

Within weeks, however, farm support began to crumble as grain prices dropped. That slide occurred, many believed, because Carter had deprived producers of a lucrative foreign market.

The 1980 farm-income figure of $24 billion — for all farm products — represented a drop of more than 22 percent from 1979's $31 billion, but Agriculture Department economists say the tailspin was due mainly to leftover supplies from bumper 1979 harvests.

The department had predicted weeks before Carter announced the embargo that 1980 net farm income would be down sharply, probably about 20 percent, because of inflation.

Farmers' net income this year is expected to rise just as sharply — perhaps to a range of $27 billion to $32 billion — because of higher prices triggered by last fall's drought-reduced harvests of grain, oilseed and cotton and adjustments in livestock production.

Last March 28, however, the American Farm Bureau Federation asked for an "immediate end" to the embargo, contending not enough was being done to offset its effects at home and suggesting it was having little impact on the Soviet Union.

Department analysts dispute that assessment of the embargo's effect.

"Certainly," they said, "the suspension presented Soviet planners with a troublesome element, and even cautious inferences suggest that the impact has been more than trivial. Furthermore, the lower-than-expected grain harvest (in 1980) will magnify the effects of the suspension in 1981."

Polish leaders criss-cross nation attempting to end labor unrest

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Union leader Lech Walesa and government officials criss-crossed southern Poland trying to end continuing labor unrest in four towns.

Walesa, head of the independent nationwide labor federation Solidarity, traveled from Rzeszow to Bielsko-Biala, 130 miles to the west, where a general strike supporting allegations of official corruption was in its ninth today.

Meanwhile, Deputy Agriculture Minister Andrzej Kacala was returning to Rzeszow today to continued negotiations on the demand of private farmers to form an independent union, or Rural Solidarity.

Walesa and Kacala met Monday in Rzeszow. On Tuesday, Kacala went to Ustrzyki Dolne, 50 miles to the southeast on the Soviet border, to meet with disgruntled farmers there.

Another government negotiator, Jan Jablonski, was meeting in Jelenia Gora, 280 miles west of Rzeszow, with workers demanding the removal of Trade Union Affairs Minister Stanislaw Ciosek for alleged misconduct in office.

Bielsko-Biala's provincial governor and three deputy governors resigned Tuesday under pressure from the local chapter of Solidarity, which also wants the mayor and deputy mayor of the provincial capital to quit, Warsaw Television reported.

The union accused the officials of misconduct in office, and the TV report said Premier Josef Pinkowski would consider the resignations today.

Bielsko-Biala is a textile center, and the leader of the Polish Communist Party, Stanislaw Kania, said the first six days of the strike there cost $70 million in lost production.

Kania, speaking to a committee preparing for a party congress next month, accused Solidarity of seeking to become a "political opposition party" and of spreading anarchy.

House has legislative hot potato

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The legislative hot potato o reorganizing the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles Board is in the House now.

Senators passed on voice vote Tuesday the measure aimed at ending bickering among those who recommend clemency for state prison inmates.

"This is the heart of the governor's anti-crime program," said Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, author of the measure.

The administration of the pardons and parole system presently is made up of a three-member board plus six parole commissioners, appointed equally by the governor, the chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court and the chief judge of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

The governor has the final say on all pardons and paroles, after receiving recommendations from the board and parole commissioners.

In recent months there has been a continuing controversy about the large number of parole recommendations turned down by Gov. Bill Clements.

Farabee explained his bill would make the six parole commissioners regular state employees controlled by the board, instead of appointed officials, subject to senate confirmation. The governor would have a new power of selecting the chairman and vice chairman of the three-member board.

He said the bill also provided authorization to spend $4.5 million the next two years for halfway houses where prison inmates nearing the end of their terms could be eased back into civilian life.

"In the past there have been controversies and it was difficult to know who was boss, who was in charge," Farabee said. "This really is an attempt to clarify the responsibilities of the commissioners, it will not take away their power."

He said a special provision retains the parole commissioners' independence with their votes counting equally with those on the board in considering a parole action.

"I wonder if we are just treating the sympton instead of the cause," said Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, in discussing the numerous parole rejections by Clements.

Vickie Daniel enters innocent plea

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — A composed Vickie Daniel, saying she did not intend to shoot her husband, former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr., pleaded innocent today to a murder charge.

The 33-year-old mother of three answered "not guilty" in a soft voice when asked by State District Judge Clarence Cain how she pleaded at her arraignment.

Cain scheduled a March 20 hearing to consider pretrial motions.

Wearing the same Navy blue suit she wore at her husband's funeral Jan. 21, Mrs. Daniel told reporters "I did not intentionally shoot my husband."

She was accompanied by her lawyer, Andrew Lannie of Baytown, Mrs. Lannie, and one of her sisters, who she would not identify.

Mrs. Daniel said she had been staying with relatives since the shooting Jan. 12 at the couple's fashionable Liberty home. Daniel, 39, was shot once in the stomach with a .22 caliber rifle. Another shot went through the ceiling, said Sheriff C.L. Eckols.

Lannie said he wanted a change of venue because of the prominence of the Daniel family in Liberty.

Daniel's father, Price Daniel Sr., is a former speaker of the Texas House, Texas attorney general, governor, U.S. senator, and Texas Supreme Court justice. The elder Daniel resides in Austin but still maintains his home at the Daniel ranch.

Lannie also has said he will waive the right to a speedy trial. Without such action, the trial, under state law, would have to begin within 120 days of the indictment date.

Wilborn maintains Mrs. Daniel, who filed for divorce on Dec. 31, knowingly and intentionally murdered her husband.

However, Lannie said an altercation preceeded the shooting and that part of it was witnessed by 12-year-old Kimberly Moore, Mrs. Daniel's daughter by an earlier marriage.

Mrs. Daniel, who was hospitalized for shock and hysteria immediately after the slaying, was charged with murder on Jan. 24 and indicted four days later.

Daniel's will, filed last week, made no reference to his wife and left all his property in trust for three young children, including one by an earlier marriage.

Informant tip leads to marijuana bust

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — An informant in Brownsville, Texas, told authorities Monday that he smelled marijuana in the suitcases of a Golden Valley woman.

When the woman arrived at Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport Monday night, Hennepin County sheriff's department drug agents searched two trunks and three suitcases that the woman had just picked up from the baggage claim.

Agents said they found 135 pounds of marijuana with a wholesale value of about $60,000. Street value could be considerably higher, they said.

On Tuesday, Glenda Ruth Epstein, 46, was charged in federal court in Minneapolis with possession with intent to distribute the marijuana. She was being held in the Hennepin County jail on $50,000 bail.

Sheryl Hvass, an assistant U.S. attorney in Minneapolis, said agents obtained search warrants for Epstein's luggage after receiving a tip from the informant.

Epstein, a professional film maker, was placed on probation for five years and fined $15,000 in 1978 after she had pleaded guilty in Hennepin County District Court to possession with intent to distribute marijuana.

An affidavit filed yesterday in federal court said that agents searched Epstein's purse and found several papers including "an I.O.U. for $17,000."

The case is expected to be presented this week to a federal grand jury in St. Paul. David Haight, group supervisor for the federal Drug Enforcement Administration in Minneapolis, said several other arrests might be made.

Haight said investigators believe the marijuana came from Mexico.

Former Pampan given deferred sentence

CLOVIS — A former Pampan, Rodney DeFever, has been given a five - year deferred sentence and fined $10,000 by a Clovis, N. M., judge after DeFever was found guilty of three counts of embezzlement, kickback and tax evasion.

According to a Clovis newspaper account, DeFever, 39, was originally indicted on 56 counts of the three charges. However, District Judge Reuben E. Nieves dismissed 53 of the counts.

The sentencing of the Clovis computer consultant was based on counts of conspiracy to commit embezzlement, offering or paying illegal kickback and attempting to evade or defeat the payment of gross receipts tax, all fourth - degree felonies.

In November 1980, DeFever — once owner of Tri - Plains Data Processing in Pampa — pleaded nolo contendere (no contest) to the 56 charges stemming from a business association with the City of Clovis when Mike Taylor served as the city's finance director.

Taylor, terminated by the city and indicted by a Curry County Grand Jury on numerous fourth - degree charges, is awaiting trial. A preliminary hearing has been set for Feb. 9.

At the sentencing, the Clovis newspaper quoted Judge Nieves as reprimanding DeFever for "resorting to something like this.

"It is a rather reprehensible action to do what you did. I have heard people (character witnesses in the trial) say what a capable man you are in your field," the Judge said.

In reply to the judge's query on if he had anything to say, DeFever answered, "I'm really sorry for what I did and regret it."

DeFever was given 18 months probation on the first and third counts and two years probation on the second count, to run consecutively for a total of five years probation.

Also, Nieves ordered DeFever to pay $3,000 of the $10,000 fine by the end of each of the first three years of his probation and the remaining $1,000 by the end of his fourth year of probation.

In the sentencing hearing, it was brought out that DeFever had been cooperative with the district attorney's office during the course of the case.

Nieves reminded DeFever to continue to be helpful to the DA's office, referring to the upcoming Taylor trial.

Pampa attorney Jean Martindale testified as a character witness during the trial. Martindale had served as DeFever's personal attorney when DeFever was a resident of Pampa.

Plea bargain reached in prostitution case

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A woman accused of operating a long-time brothel catering to well known businessmen and politicians has pleaded no contest to a charge of aggravated promotion of prostitution.

Theresa Brown entered the plea Tuesday in a plea bargain arrangement with the district attorney's office in a move that prevented a "trick list" of names found in the raid on the brothel from being made public in court.

In the agreement, Ms. Brown would receive a three-year prison term, but would be eligible for probation.

District Judge James Barlow was to rule later on probation at the time of formal sentencing.

Defense attorney Anthony Ferro predicted Ms. Brown would receive probation or a fine, and prosecutor Elizabeth Taylor told the judge the district attorney's office considered a fine "appropriate."

The plea bargain was announced during the second day of a hearing in 186th District Court on a defense motion to suppress use of the "trick book as evidence."

Controversy arose after vice officers announced they had seized the book containing names of politicians and businessmen when they raided the alleged brothel last Oct. 2 and arrested Ms. Brown and two other women.

Councilman Bernardo Eureste alleged that police protected operation of the alleged prostitution operation for years, but a subsequent investigation concluded there was no wrongdoing by the police department.

Prosecutors say 20 years not enough for child molester

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Dallas policeman has stunned a House committee with accounts of children who became, in effect, sexual playthings of their parents.

One member of the House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee was ready to send to the House floor immediately Gov. Bill Clements' bill raising penalties for rape, sexual abuse and injury of children.

The committee wanted more time to study the bill and voted 8-1 Tuesday to send it to a subcommittee, but with orders to bring the measure back on Feb. 17.

Detective Tom Sewell of the Dallas Police Department's juvenile section said he had investigated a case in which a mother watched as her husband forced their children to drink his semen.

"I didn't know people did this sort of thing to their children. The seven-, eight- and nine-year-olds that we see misused in their homes to an extent you can't believe. We see so much oral sodomy ... it almost becomes commonplace," said Sewell, a 26-year veteran of the police force.

He read aloud the confessions of a Dallas couple who are serving 20-year sentences — the maximum — for sexually abusing the woman's 11-year-old daughter.

The woman said the girl had been compelled to have intercourse with her stepfather and to perform homosexual acts with her.

"When my mother gets tired of having intercourse with my daddy, he makes me have intercourse with him," the girl's statement said.

"Twenty years! With ... early parole and time off for good behavior, this is not enough," Sewell said. "There are cases that deserve punishment. Under the present law, justice cannot be adequately served."

Clements' bill increases the maximum punishment for sexual abuse or rape of a child from 20 years to life and the minimum penalty from two years to five years. It also raises the maximum prison term for indecency with a child from 10 to 20 years and for injury to a child from 20 years to life in aggravated cases.

A KDFW-TV series on child abuse caught the governor's eye, and a videotape was shown to the committee.

"The youngest child raped in Dallas County was two months old," said investigative reporter Tom Steyer, who did the series.

The committee also sent to subcommittee three bills designed to make it easier to obtain aggravated rape convictions. Aggravated rape differs from ordinary rape in the degree of violence and in the punishment — a maximum of life instead of 20 years.

Each bill would enable a jury to convict a defendant of aggravated rape if the evidence established that the victim feared she would be killed, severely injured or kidnapped.

The bills are designed to overcome a Court of Criminal Appeals decision that a rape, no matter how brutal, is not aggravated unless the victim is maimed or the rapist displays a knife or gun.

Dallas village planned

DALLAS (AP) — Plans were announced Tuesday for a 21-acre, $400 million urban village a mile north of downtown Dallas that will include 1,450 luxury condominiums, office buildings, a 225-room hotel, extensive retail space, restaurants and art galleries.

A 24-story luxury condominium high-rise — featuring six 2-story penthouse suites priced at $600,000 apiece — will be the showplace of the new development, "The Vineyard," announced by a Texas subsidiary of the Campeau Corp. of Canada.

Among the 69 properties acquired by the corporation from 64 owners in the past 12 months is the Quadrangle shopping district, which will be revitalized as part of the project. The acquired tracts are located between Cedar Springs Road and McKinney Avenue.

"The location was selected not only because of its proximity to downtown, but also because of the area's natural appeal and charm created by interesting older architecture and existing art galleries, boutiques and restaurants," said Pierre Benoit, senior vice president of housing and land development for Campeau Corp.

"Campeau Corp. will make every effort to preserve and enhance the character of the area," Benoit added.

The development will include 120,000 square feet of new commercial office space and 100,000 square feet of new retail commercial space, Benoit said, in a pedestrian-oriented, cosmopolitan, self-contained village that will complement surrounding shops, restaurants and residential areas.

Special features of The Vineyard will include red brick streets, antique-style lighting, extensive landscaping and a system of pools and waterways.

More than 4,000 parking spaces will be built, all below the surface.

The high-rise, fronting on McKinney at Oak Street, will initiate the residential-business development. Construction is scheduled to begin in late May or early June and be completed by late summer of 1982. The $25 million high-rise will have 130 condominiums starting at $133,500, Benoit said.

Clayton seeks salary boost for officials

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton says statewide elected officials are just as valuable as Texas Supreme Court justices and should get he same pay.

He put such a provision in his version of the 1982-83 state budget bill, which would spend $200 million less than the Legislative Budget Board measure while raising state aid to school districts — particularly rural and suburban ones.

"The agriculture commissioner is just as important to agriculture as a Supreme Court justice is to the legal system," Clayton told reporters Tuesday.

If Supreme Court justices receive the pay recommended by the LBB, the salaries of officials such as Comptroller Bob Bullock would rise from $51,000 to $68,100 on Sept. 1 and to $74,100 a year later.

The House considered putting statewide elected officials on a par with Supreme Court justices last week when it passed a state employee pay raise bill but rejected the idea.

Clayton's proposal would cover railroad commissioners, the treasurer, comptroller, land commissioner, agriculture commissioner and attorney general but not the governor and lieutenant governor.

The speaker is paid the same as other legislators, $600 a month plus a daily expense allowance when the Legislature is in session.

Clayton's measure will be the starting point for the House Appropriations Committee's work on the budget, while the Senate will work from the LBB bill.

Clayton's bill would spend $26.5 billion, compared with the LBB's $26.7 billion and Gov. Bill Clements' $26.2 billion.

Clayton put $150 million more in state aid to public schools in his bill than the LBB included in its version of the budget.

A school district would receive $60 per student, multiplied by the percentage of its tax base that consists of rural acreage and residential property. Big city districts would not receive as much per child as bedroom communities and rural areas.

Debbie Cartwright, the speaker's research assistant, said the extra aid is a way of helping districts whose tax bases were eroded by homestead and agricultural land exemptions granted by the 1979 tax relief bill.

She said it the proposal does not discriminate against urban districts because commercial and industrial property already gives them a stronger tax base.

Clayton was able to hold down the cost of his bill by inserting a state employment freeze at November 1980 levels.

Ms. Cartwright said that would eliminate 6,000 jobs contained in the LBB bill.

Small girl 'too pretty to kill,' kidnapper reports

METAIRIE, La. (AP) — A 17-month-old girl snatched from her home by a gunman who stuffed her into a gift-wrapped box was found unhurt after a man telephoned her anxious parents and said she was too pretty to kill, authorities say.

"He called and told us...she was such a beautiful baby, otherwise he would have wasted her," the toddler's father, Ron Hocum, said late Tuesday.

He and his wife found their daughter, Lori, sobbing and wandering alone at the Lake Forest Shopping Center several hours after Hocum made a televised appeal for her safe return.

No suspect had been apprehended by early today, but Jefferson Parish sheriff's deputies had a composite sketch of the abductor.

The abduction occurred about 1 p.m. Tuesday when a man armed with a pistol broke into the Hocum home in this well-to-do suburb of New Orleans, authorities said.

The Hocum house is a few doors away from the residence of Gov. David Treen. Hocum is a salesman specializing in luxury foreign cars, authorities said.

The girl was at home with a maid at the time, according to Kathleen Landry of the sheriff's department.

"The man forced himself into the house. He tied up the maid and he stole a camera. He had a big box that was wrapped up like a Christmas present. He put the little girl in the box and he took her and left," she said.

Hocum said his daughter probably didn't realize what was happening to her.

"She probably thought that going out in a big box was fun," he said.

But her family was gripped by terror.

"I'm not sure my heart is still beating," Hocum said. "It was such an emotional experience. Everybody says they know how you feel. But they don't."

Federal judge may block U.S. in Iran funds case

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge says he remains unconvinced the government would be harmed by an order that would fly in the face of the U.S.-Iran hostage accords by banning the return of about $20 million in Iranian funds earmarked to pay a court judgment.

U.S. District Judge Robert W. Porter took no action Tuesday on a request for a preliminary injunction by Electronic Data Systems Corp., but he said he would have no problem issuing such an order because he thought the Justice Department's arguments against it were very weak.

To gain the release of 52 American hostages, President Carter approved an agreement before he left office in which all outstanding Iranian assets in the United States would be transferred to the Federal Reserve Bank in New York, and from there returned to Iran.

The agreement includes an interest-bearing certificate of deposit worth $20 million that is being held in a New York bank for payment of the claim by millionaire H. Ross Perot's Dallas-based computer company.

EDS lawyer Thomas W. Luce III told Porter that federal law "allows the president to freeze but not to seize" funds placed aside for payment of Iranian debts.

Luce also challenged the validity of the Algerian hostage accords, maintaining that the president lacks the authority to supercede a ruling by a federal court.

Justice Department Attorney Mark Rutzick says the Reagan administration does not intend to take any final action on the Algerian accords until Feb. 26 or later.

He said an injunction would tie the goverment's hands as it reviews the hostage documents agreed to by the previous administration.

But Porter remained unconvinced.

"I really don't see any real harm to the government if an injunction were issued," said the judge. "The issue is whether the president, by regulation, can countermand the judgment of the federal courts."

Luce argued that EDS was unable to get Marine Midland Bank of New York to agree not to transfer the $20 million to the Federal Reserve at some future date.

Porter gave the U.S. Attorney's office until 5 p.m. Thursday to file additional information on the case.

EDS was the only U.S. corporation to obtain a court-ordered attachment against Iranian assets in 1979, when lawyers for the company discovered the Iranians were attempting to hide the extent of their U.S. assets.

The discovery came as the lawyers were preparing for trial a suit claiming that Iran had defaulted on a $20 million computerized health and social services data program designed and installed by EDS.

Consumer group seeks generic drug legislation

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Pharmacists and consumer activists want the Legislature to approve a law allowing druggists to substitute lower-cost drugs for brand-name products, but they can't agree on what the law should say.

One pharmacists' group says the best law would be no law.

"We'll be concentrating our efforts on getting the anti-substitution provision simply revoked," said Wayne Beisel, spokesman for the Texas Pharmaceutical Association.

Current law forbids druggists to substitute a cheaper medicine for a name brand unless the prescribing doctor gives written permission.

The Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now supports the Drug Product Selection Act sponsored by Rep. Ted Lyons, D-Mesquite, and Sens. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, and Kent Caperton, D-Bryan.

"We will probably be introducing legislation ourselves, getting the anti-substitution provision revoked," Beisel said. He said the association was opposed to the "formulary," a list of approved drugs, included in Lyons' bill.

ACORN spokesman Margot Beutler said the list is a health safeguard, but Beisel said it wasn't needed because a competent pharmacist would not "jeopardize his career by dispensing an inferior drug."

"We are in favor of generic drugs, and we won't oppose Lyons' bill. We just don't like some aspects of it," he said.

Ms. Beutler said only Texas and Indiana ban druggists' substituting generic drugs, and that an ACORN survey of drug prices showed consumers could save 200 percent to 400 percent on medicine costs if generics were routinely prescribed.

Entire earth surface polluted

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Man has now polluted the entire surface of the earth, according to the findings of Texas A&M University researchers who reported traces of a man-made, cancer-causing chemical on a remote Pacific island chain.

Hexachlorobenzene, known as HCB, was found on Enewetak Atoll during tests by the A&M scientists, the first time the chemical has appeared in the isolated region. And those results, published in a recent issue of the journal "Science," mean that man has now polluted the surface of the entire planet, the scientists conclude.

"The chances are there's now no place on earth you can go without finding HCB," said Dr. C.S. Giam, head of chemistry at A&M and leader of the Enewetak expedition, during an interview about his report. "The thing wasn't meant to be dramatic or frightening to people, but it is a scientific fact."

In the report, Giam and Dr. Elliot Atlas, a senior research chemist, wrote, "Presence of HCB at such locations (as Enewetak) indicates widespread contamination of the atmosphere."

"These are the first measurements of HCB in the remote marine atmosphere," Atlas wrote. "The relative constancy of the compound between sites suggests that HCB is very stable and may remain in the atmosphere a long time."

HCB is a byproduct of more than a dozen manufacturing processes, including rubber manufacturing, and is a key ingredient in fungicides. Sea dumping of the compound was banned in the 1970s.

Enewetak, a group of islands about 2,200 miles southwest of Hawaii, was chosen as the site of the first hydrogen-bomb test in 1952 because it was so remote from any populated areas.

Giam said that means any man-made pollution found there had to have originated somewhere else, "such as the United States or Japan — I mention those because they are heavily industrialized nations."

The research by Giam and Atlas was part of Sea-Air Exchange, a National Science Foundation-financed study involving a dozen American and foreign universities.

HCB has given rise to health worries in the past.

"Concern over HCB in the environment was heightened by high levels found in beef cattle in 1972. Since then, it has been identified in many environmental areas including river water, the air, estuaries, soils and sediments, as well as in fish, birds, bird eggs and human fatty tissue," said Atlas.

An Environmental Protection Agency report published a year ago noted that HCB produced cancer in hamsters. It also was believed to be a factor in the deaths of breast-fed babies in Turkey during the 1950s as well as an epidemic there of skin sores and discoloration, the EPA reported.

The chemical also was linked by the EPA to disruptions of enzymes among people living in a small Louisiana town seven years ago.

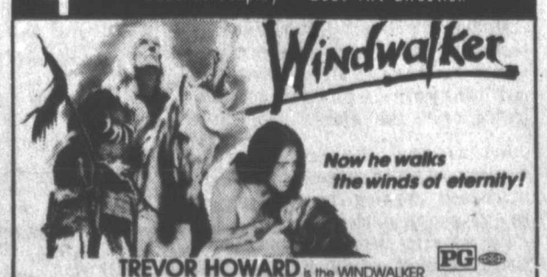

Giam and Atlas also reported finding minute traces of other powerful pollutants, including polychlorobiphenyls — or PCBs — as well as residues from the insecticides DDT, chlordane and dieldrin, during their tests of the air, water and rain at the atoll.

The fading American dream

We are discovering that there is a part of human nature suggesting that we are not as benevolent, not as generous and not as competitive as we Americans like to see ourselves.

Americans are the "good guys" — everybody knows that!

We share our good fortune with the world. Boy do we share!

Let some natural catastrophe strike Pakistan — some remote village not one in a thousand Americans ever heard of — and out come the wallets, food packages, medical supplies and volunteer workers. Anything and everything to help those poor unfortunates.

Let some worldwide project be established, and the American government will release huge sums of taxpayer money to insure that the USA is the most generous of all in support of a "good cause."

It is our culture. We were born to be "good," to be "generous," to have compassion for less fortunate people. And at the same time, it was our nature to be the leader, to win in competitive experiences.

And in this dedication to perpetuating the image of America's greatness, we Americans traveled a lot. We visited the people of the world and we smiled at their quaint customs, bought their trinkets and lavished our coins upon them and we felt so good about it.

And it became a worldwide truism that all Americans were wealthy and the world looked with favor upon the tourists who would pour dollars into their impoverished areas and boost the economy.

It was a great and golden era — for the "good," the "generous," the "noble" American.

In more recent times, the "gold" has proven to be false. We are now aware the American image began to tarnish many years ago. Maybe it began to fade after World War II, victim of the insidious anti - capitalistic propaganda activities of the communist world.

Maybe it never existed anyway.

Maybe the people in foreign lands privately and secretly resented the Americans who came and told them that they were unfortunate people, that they were not doing things correctly, and they should let the great Americans show them how to live better.

America was God, and would remake the world in its image.

And the people of the world would unite and hold out their undernourished hands for the American dollar. And maybe, inside and privately, resentment was born.

Whatever seeds began germinating and for whatever reason will be left for some thoughtful historian ages away ... someone who will write, not the political history of America but the human history ... the story of an idea of how the blessings of freedom failed to find acceptance in the great mass of human existence.

Failed because we were not yet ready.

All of this has to do with the resentment building up in our country because people of less fortunate economic circumstance are coming among us in great numbers.

Our compassion is giving way to uneasiness, doubt, distrust, fear and hatred.

We are learning that many of us do not really believe in freedom, do not really believe in giving opportunity to the less fortunate.

In another area, we are learning that American businessmen and workers do not really believe in competition.

Stop Japanese imports, rob taxpayers to prop up Chrysler.

Ah, the American dream.

What a lovely interlude it was.

Turning bankers loose

This business that the Federal Reserve Board has in mind for New York City could really get out of hand. Imagine, if you will, a place where international bankers could set up shop pretty much as they please, charging whatever interest rates they could get and escaping taxes on their earnings. That's what the Fed has tentatively approved, and the Big Apple is likely to bite.

The scheme is called an "international banking zone," and its object is to lure to the United States many of the financial transactions that occur now in London or Hong Kong, where the climate for that sort of business is freer. New York State, with Wall Street in mind, has been the first to exempt an area so designated from the usual taxes on the money mongers, so Manhattan stands to be the first in line if the Fed's plan goes through.

The thought behind the action is that bringing the bankers to town, even at the cost of letting them have a field day with borrowers, would generate thousands of jobs for the areas that take part. That makes the pill easier to swallow for local officials, because they think the added workers are going to mean more tax revenue, and besides, the taxes they're giving up on the other end are on banking transactions that wouldn't be taking place anyway unless the rules change is made.

There's a dangerous psychology behind all of this, and the bankers are only the start. Ronald Reagan already appears smitten with the idea of "enterprise zones" in depressed urban areas, wherein businesses would escape all sorts of controls and taxes. Before you know it, these "hands off" zones are going to spread all over the country and we'll have people working so hard and money changing hands so fast and competition getting so cutthroat that we're never going to be able to get control over our society, which is what our leaders have been trying so diligently to do for so long.

What do we want, anarchy?

Barriers to trade are ancient evil

"Can America Win the Car War?" is the title of an article on the competition between the automobile makers of the U.S. and those of Japan in the Readers' Digest.

Were you aware there is a "war" raging between Japan and the U.S. over which shall supply cars to the American people? I was not. To call it a war seems a wrong use of words. In wars men deliberately kill, burn, destroy. In this contest no one is destroying. On the contrary, two groups are competing to see which can serve 226 million people most constructively.

The same is true of the competition between foreign steel workers and those of Pittsburgh. It is true of the competition between the foreign producers of any product one can mention, from computers to coffee pots, and the Americans who make and sell similar products. They contend, not to do harm, but to do good to American consumers, at most profit to themselves. It is just as true, in fact, of the competition that goes on between producers of corn in Iowa and producers of corn in Ohio, or Kansas, or Carolina. Consumers are not necessarily served best by producers who are within the country or who are nearest.

It is fairly important that human beings get this ancient truth straight and act accordingly, for the number of consumers in the world is increasing rapidly and their wants even more rapidly. Cities are expanding fast, taking over acres of land that have been used for growing food, and food production is being robbed of land at the very time that more food is needed.

Unless the most efficient production is encouraged, whether in Ohio or in Bechuanaland, somebody is going to go hungry.

Detroit auto makers complain that they cannot make and sell cars as cheaply as the Japanese auto makers because the latter are subsidized in various ways by the government of Japan. But Japan's government, like all others, has no source of money but the Japanese taxpayers. It is they, the Japanese people, who are paying for the tax rebates and write - offs that Japanese car manufacturers receive from the government in Tokyo. Japan has no net advantage because of her system of government subsidies. The American government, too, it should be remembered, gives subsidies and aids to car makers -- and to well - nigh everybody else.

The Japanese relative to the Americans are a poor people. Barely more than one - half of all Japanese households have a car of any sort, while here in the U.S. every household has 1½ cars, on the average. Each Japanese car owner drives his car much less than we drive ours, because the cost of operation is so high. The average price of gasoline in Japan is $3.25 a gallon.

Americans being richer buy many more cars, and this demand bids up the price of cars here and, accordingly, the price or wage of labor to make cars. The average wage rate in the auto factories of Japan is $9 an hour, while in the U.S. it is $17 an hour if we include fringes. With the hourly wage rate here nearly twice what it is over there, is it surprising if Japanese cars are lower in price?

Meanwhile, the Japanese have done a fine job, quality - wise. Their cars are good. Our car buyers are not being deceived; some claim the imports are even superior to American - made cars. That could be debated, but the final answer lies in the market.

It would be a major mistake for the incoming Republican administration to yield to the pleas of American manufacturers and labor groups that are begging for barriers against foreign goods. We already have too many such barriers. Rather than adding more, the new Congress will do well to repeal those we now have.

This country, compared to others, is wealthy. But let Americans not be deceived. The world is getting smaller, thanks to modern transport and communication. People of poorer countries are stirring. As they become more and more awake to the wealth differential, they are copying us, producing more and more goods that compete with ours in the markets. We cannot remain rich by isolating ourselves. Isolation is neither neighborly nor economic. Our economic future, as well as that of the Third World, depends on cooperation.

There is no "car war." There must be no trade war. It would be the kind of war that nobody wins.

Letters

Dear Editor;

JUSTICE seems to have been exiled from our present society and the benevolent philosophy of Human Rights seems to have dissolved the individual right of self, property and family protection. The right of law enforcement entities to properly serve in a capacity, to which they have been duly sworn, has been severely limited. The authority that should be delegated to them for the protection of life, property and public interests, should never be abrogated by irrational laws that tip the scale of justice in favor of the criminal element. Those who would steal, rape, kill or destroy, should pay a penalty so severe that it would be an abstentious deterrent to those who may conteplate acts of violence or destruction. If a respectable and an honorable social stature is to survive in our communities, the courts of justice must deviate from the philosophy of "Leniency" and "Human Rights", and subject malicious criminals to a punishment commensurate with the gravity of their crime. Crime and vandalism are increasingly major problems and we citizens should not place all of the burden of enforcement at the door - step of the courts and the police departments. Possibly some complicated laws should be rescinded and some simpler, less complicated laws instituted. Our institutions of incarceration should not be arranged to provide the comfort and luxury of home to those who must necessarily be confined to these institutions. Let us not allow Justice to be relegated to a false ideology that may actually encourage crime. Let us address our honorable and continuous efforts to the fulfillment of our cherished hope, that Justice will return through the portals of honor and dignity, and once again reactivate the prudent and discreet judicial system that the founders of our constitution intended to provide for the safety and tranquility of all concerned.

I would not condone despotism nor the application of irresponsible punishment to anyone merely to satisfy the vanity of others, but appropriate remedies should be taken to eliminate crime and the compensation that often accompanies it. Habitual criminals should not be prematurely released and returned to society to pursue their unlawful activities. Order should be restored so that honorable people would no longer be "prisoners" in their own homes, with doors locked day and night for self protection. Neither should they entertain fear for the safety of themselves or their children to freely move about in all respectable environments.

Each of us should be cooperative in this effort and be appreciative of the work that the authorities have done in this connection.

New remedies for old age

by Paul Harvey

As recently as 10 years ago "old age" was considered an incurable ill.

Arteries were pronounced "hardening," whether they were or not, and the disoriented patient was doped up like a zombie and allowed to sit out his years in a "warehouse" for old people.

There are exciting new remedies for old age.

There is no more inexact science than psychiatry. This has made psychiatrists a choice target for inevitable jealousies within the medical profession.

However ...

With the increasing respect for "holistic medicine" new breed psychiatrists are earning new respect.

No longer do the shrinks just stretch you out on a couch for an extensive, expensive series of interviews about your parents, your fantasies and your sex life.

Now, with a new spectrum of psychotropic drugs, emotional instability is being stabilized.

Of three million aged Americans who show symptoms of brain failure -- individuals heretofore considered "senile" and left in nursing homes and mental hospitals untreated -- at least 20 percent are now responding to treatment and resuming normal lives.

Far and away the greatest single cause of false senility is drug intoxication. Somebody prescribed the wrong drug or the wrong dosage. The most misused prescription drug is the tranquilizer Valium.

Dr. Robert Butler, director of the National Institute on Aging, confirms that "there are indeed irreversible causes of chronic brain syndrome -- dementia -- such as repeated blood vessel blockages and various brain and nerve diseases." But, he says, "doctors should spend more time examining and testing confused, disoriented or depressed patients for some reversible cause."

He estimates that 10 to 20 percent of supposed senility is not that at all; has a cause that can be remedied.

At Fair Oaks Hospital, Summit, N.J., where they are using the new biochemical approach to diagnosis and treatment, they find at least 7 percent of mental patients have been misdiagnosed -- and subjected to treatment which worsened their condition.

The American Schizophrenia Assn. reports much success in treating schizophrenia with large doses of vitamins, especially niacin.

Dr. Linus Pauling believes we could add 25 years of healthy living to our normal life span with proper ingestion of supplemental vitamins and minerals.

Forty percent of the average physician's office time is now devoted to geriatric patients. Many doctors have tended to accept deterioration fatalistically, assuming there's nothing they can do about it. Very often they can now.

Briefly noted ...

By Don Graff

The sun is an amazing natural resource.

And in more ways that most of us have probably been aware.

It is not only the ultimate source of energy, but also a powerful contributor to eroticism. We have that information from recent research — at Michigan State University, the University of Texas and the Sex Research Institute at Indiana University most notably — as reported in the January issue of Harper's Bazaar.

According to the composite findings, the sun acts as an immense aphrodisiac, arousing the sex drive and stepping up performance of humans throughout the world. It's the light, not the heat that does it, so the effect can be the same from the sultry tropics to the frigid poles.

Darkness, it appears, stimulates the body's production of the substance melatonin which functions as an inhibitor of sexual behavior. Sunlight, conversely, inhibits melatonin production and consequently increases both the human libido and fertility.

To be more specific, as proper research should be, it increases energy and vitality, raises hormone levels, quickens reaction time to stimulation, enlarges both male and female sexual glands and enhances responsiveness to sensual pleasure.

There's even more, but there may be a question as to its suitability for publication. And besides, at this point it begins to sound less like a description of solar power than an advertisement for a perfume.

Still researching, the news appears to be improving for working women.

They are beginning to narrow the discrepancy, which has been to their great disadvantage, between their salaries and those of men in comparable positions. That is, for the woman who has the right education and is taking advantage of the right job opportunities.

The information comes from the second annual survey of pay scales conducted by Working Woman Magazine. The study covered professional positions from the high end of the pay scale - lawyers, at up to $33,000 a year - on down to executive retail trainees - at a bottom of $10,000. Particulary promising for the woman professional was the rapidly expanding computer field where a beginning specialist can expect a salary of from $19,100 to $20,700 and a woman with an MBA can virtually write her own ticket.

All this comes as doubly good news because the earnings gap between men and women has been greater at professional and management levels than in lower - paying, lower - status jobs.

Not so good, however, is another development which suggests that women's increased earning bpower may be hazardous to their independence.

The magazine detects an upturn in the numbers of men on the hunt for successful, high - salaried mates. Professional women are being married for their incomes.

Well, you can't have everything.

On the other hand, considering the situation from the viewpoint of some of the parties involved, maybe you can.

Names in the news

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Helen Reddy has filed for a divorce from her husband of 13 years, manager-producer Jeff Wald, who says he's trying to kick the cocaine habit.

Miss Reddy said in a Superior Court petition filed Monday that she had "irreconcilable differences" with her husband.

After the couple separated in early January, Wald said he was under a doctor's care in an effort to stop using cocaine, a habit he said did not cause the separation "but it certainly was a factor."

"I'm getting treatment for a problem that a lot of other people in this town have, to say the least," Wald said in an interview last month. "Outside of maybe Lima, Peru, this is the cocaine capital of the world."

Wald also said he would continue to manage Miss Reddy's show business career.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Bob Hope, the Grand Kabuki Theater of Japan and flamenco guitarist Carlos Montoya will be on hand to lend their energy to Expo '82, a six-month World's Fair with energy as its theme, officials say.

David Haber, director of the fair's World Festival arts and sports activities, says others who have signed performance commitments include comedian Red Skelton, pop singers Debby Boone and Stephanie Mills and comedian and pianist Victor Borge.

The fair is to run from May through October 1982 on a 70-acre site between the University of Tennessee's campus and the downtown business district.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jerry Rubin — a 37-year-old Santa Monica College student, not the Yippie activist of the 1960s — has been sentenced to community-service work for pushing a piece of cake into the face of physicist Edward Teller.

Rubin's jail time was suspended when a municipal judge pronounced sentence Tuesday for the attack on the atomic-energy advocate.

Municipal Judge Harry Mock ordered Rubin to 150 hours doing community-service work at the Israel Levin Senior Adult Center in Venice. Mock denied a city attorney's request to bar Rubin from future meetings at which the 73-year-old physicist is present.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Society columnist Robin Orr, who was fired as Nancy Reagan's press secretary after less than a month on the job, will once again be mixing with dignitaries.

She's taken over as director of the U.S. International Communication Agency's San Francisco office. The agency makes arrangements for foreign visitors who come to San Francisco on government-sponsored tours.

Ms. Orr has denied she was fired for her handling of newspaper reports that the first lady, anxious to redecorate the White House, had suggested that President Carter move out before Inauguration Day.

Garwood trial going to jury

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — The court-martial of Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood — the only trial to involve alleged collaboration by a prisoner of war in Vietnam — was going to the jury today for a decision on whether Garwood helped the Viet Cong or was driven insane by captivity.

Before the jurors began deliberations, military judge Col. R.E. Switzer was to give his final instructions on the remaining two of four original charges: collaboration with the enemy and maltreatment of a fellow American prisoner of war.

Garwood, 34, could face life imprisonment if he is convicted.

Under military regulations, only one vote need be taken during deliberations, and four of the five Marine officers on the jury must agree in order to return a guilty verdict.

Garwood, an Indianapolis native, was a teen-age jeep driver when he was captured in 1965 near Da Nang. He returned home in 1979 after passing a note to a Finnish businessman in Hanoi.

Charges of desertion and verbally abusing a fellow POW were dismissed last week.

The 11-week court-martial — the only one to involve alleged collaboration by a POW in Vietnam — was widely regarded as a test of the U.S. military's code of conduct requiring captives to resist.

It also relied heavily on testimony of psychiatrists. Those for the prosecution argued Garwood was sane and knew what he was doing, and those for the defense contended imprisonment pushed the young man over the edge of insanity.

Defense lawyers argued the case was "one of a kind" and would not set any precedents for the Marine Corps.

"The code of conduct has a new bounce-back provision that in fact allows soldiers to go ahead and do something, to cooperate and then bounce back," chief defense counsel John C. Lowe said Tuesday. "The Department of Defense recognizes that things happen in POW camps."

Lowe said torture and brainwashing drove Garwood mad during 14 years of captivity.

The prosecution based its case on the testimony of eight fellow captives who portrayed Garwood as a survivor who put personal well-being ahead of other considerations.

But Lowe said Garwood was isolated early in his capture, suffered deprivation and saw executions of Vietnamese prisoners, all of which drove him insane.

"All five psychiatrists who testified here agreed that Garwood was credible during examination...(and that he) gave vivid descriptions that were historically inaccurate in that they differed from testimony of his fellow POWs," he said.

Administration studies U.S. Middle East policy

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is taking advantage of a period of relative calm in the Middle East to re-evaluate U.S. policy in that part of the world.

With the war between Iran and Iraq in low gear, and no other crises looming, the administration has the luxury of time to deliberate its approach to the Arab-Israeli dispute.

Marked by more sympathy toward Israel and appreciation of its security value, the Reagan policy discussions could foreshadow a sharp departure from the hyperactivity — shuttle diplomacy and Camp David's public summitry — of the Carter, Ford and Nixon administrations.

Already there are clear signals of a shift from President Reagan and his two principal Cabinet officers, Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger.

Reagan, in an interview Monday, broke ranks with his predecessor, Jimmy Carter, on the status of the 77 Israeli outposts on the West Bank of the Jordan River.

Carter said the settlements were "inconsistent with international law" and "an obstacle to peace." Clearly, he saw them as standing in the way of a Palestinian homeland in the territory occupied by Israel since the 1967 war.

Reagan disagrees.

"They're not illegal," he said, "not under the U.N. resolution that leaves the West Bank open to all people — Arab and Israeli alike, Christian alike."

The thorniest element in dealing with the Middle East is the future of the Palestinians, more than 1 million of whom live under Israeli jurisdiction. Reagan acknowledged "that's got to be part of any settlement," but he stood by his campaign criticism of the Palestine Liberation Organization's terrorist activities.

Even so, he suggested — as Carter had — that if the PLO dropped its "outspoken utterance that Israel doesn't have a right to exist," his administration might be prepared to give PLO leader Yassar Arafat a role in peace talks.

Meanwhile, Reagan and Weinberger are leaving the door open to a larger U.S. military presence in the region, including possibly in Israel.

Drugs, money found in old music building

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — How a $20 gold certificate dated 1922 ended up in the basement of an old Austin music hang-out, along with $250 in a envelope marked, "For Rent," is anybody's guess.

A wrecking crew demolishing what used to be the Armadillo World Headquarters has been engaged in a kind of treasure hunt, finding small amounts of marijuana, hashish, cocaine, drug paraphernalia and money in various places all over the old music hall.

Workers have stumbled across stashes of drugs, "roaches, clips, cokespoons," syringes, a plastic bottle of pills and money, said Phillip Hogan, a partner in the demolition with Q.S. "Peewee" Franks.

"The dope was stepped on and dirty," he said, emphasizing that it was not usable and was thrown away.

Franks said Monday he was a week away from leveling the building, which served as nightclub for the past 10 years. The 'Dillo is being destroyed to make way for a high-rise hotel.

Franks says he found the $20 gold certificate when he spotted an old Playboy magazine as he was walking behind a bulldozer Monday morning.

"I want to keep this to give to my grandkids," Franks said.

Two Southeast Texas cities plagued by gas leaks

By The Associated Press

Gas leak problems continued to plague the Southeast Texas cities of Mont Belvieu and Daisetta today, but residents of nearby Baytown returned to their homes after a pipeline rupture forced an evacuation.

About 65 families were evacuated Monday when a propane-filled industrial pipeline ruptured about 200 feet from a Baytown subdivision. However, there were no injuries and the evacuees went back to their houses after sewer lines were flushed and each home in the three-block area was inspected.

Meanwhile in Mont Belvieu, some 15 miles north of Baytown, 70 families evacuated in October were told to stay out of their homes until all traces of gas are gone.

A section of Mont Belvieu, which sits atop a salt dome several companies use to store gas, was evacuated last fall after gas seeped into yards and homes.

Purging operations have been underway since October and four families returned home, with city council permission, when there were no traces of gas to be found within 200 feet of their home.

However, council members turned down a proposal which would have let families return if only trace amounts of gas were found within 200 feet of a house.

Officials in Daisetta, about 40 miles northeast of Baytown, reported tentative federal approval of a $380,000 grant for use in replacing the town's leaky gas system.

The Texas Railroad Commission ordered a Jan. 2 shutdown of the Daisetta system that serves 340 customers but city officials blocked that action by obtaining a court order that was extended Monday for another 10 days.

Growers worried about short moisture supply

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vast areas of the country are still short of precipitation, raising fears about the winter wheat crop and conditions for planting corn and other crops this spring.

The government said Tuesday that winter wheat was "generally rated fair to good in major production areas" during the week of Jan. 26-Feb. 1, with snow reported in some parts.

"Most precipitation came at the end of the week in the form of snow in northern areas and rain in southern areas," the Joint Agricultural Weather Facility said.

"Snow covered the Corn Belt and Plains states, extending down to the middle of Kansas, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio."

But many fields were "exposed and vulnerable" to wind and freeze damage prior to the snow, it said.

"Some areas of Montana, North Dakota and Kansas were experiencing light to moderate amounts of wind damage earlier in the week," the report said. "Warm weather continued to promote insect activity in many fields in Kansas, Oklahoma and the High Plains of Texas."

The winter wheat crop was planted last fall and will be ready for harvest beginning in May in southern areas. It is the only major grain crop for 1981 that has been planted.

Corn, the biggest U.S. crop, will be planted in the spring, along with most other feed grains, other spring-type wheat, cotton, soybeans and the remaining crops for the 1981 harvest.

The facility, which is operated jointly by the departments of Commerce and Agriculture, said warmer-than-usual weather last week continued in the Corn Belt and extended into the South where some farmers began preparing fields for spring planting.

In a related report, the Agriculture Department noted an earlier statistic showing farmers planted a record 63.9 million acres of winter wheat last fall and that producers of spring-planted wheat also may opt for "some increase" in acreage.

"So far, moisture conditions in some areas have not been favorable," the department said. "However, weather in coming months will determine final production."

The weekly review by the Joint Agricultural Weather Facility said pastures going into February were "generally rated poor to fair across the South" because of short moisture supplies, forcing producers into the supplemental feeding of livestock.

Looking at some of the situations abroad, the report said further snow helped provide additional protection for parts of the winter grainbelt in the western region of the Soviet Union.

Snow covered most of Eastern Europe last week, but "conditions for winter grain growth remain too dry in northern Italy and much of Spain," it said.

The week brought "adequate moisture supplies and moderate temperatures" for crops of soybeans and corn in Brazil and Argentina, two leading competitors of U.S. farmers in world markets, the report said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists will begin a project this spring to provide a commercial supply of seed for a bushy desert plant that many authorities believe can help make the United States self-sufficient in natural rubber.

The plant, which is native to northcentral Mexico and southwest Texas, is called guayule (pronounced wy-oo-lee). During World War II it was a source of natural rubber when U.S. sources were cut off.

Anson R. Bertrand, director of science and education in the Agriculture Department, said Tuesday the program is aimed at producing enough seed so large acreages of guayule can be produced for commercial production of natural rubber.

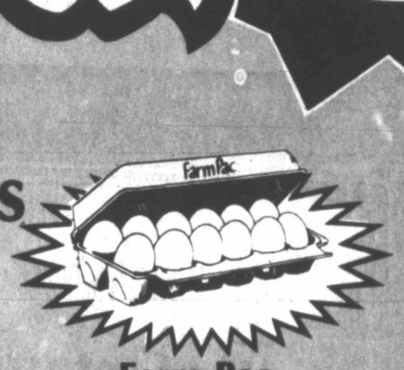

Seed production will be centered in Arizona, California, New Mexico and Texas where weather and climate are suitable for guayule and where an estimated 5 million acres of land could support production, he said.

Some 120 acres will be planted this spring and an additional 80 acres next fall, said Bertrand, who also is chairman of the Joint Commission on Guayule Research and Commercialization.

Former hostage says escape chance shunned by some Americans

HOUSTON (AP) — Four Americans shunned a chance to escape from militants who overran the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and barricaded themselves inside a nearby building to relay information about the takeover to Washington, former hostage William B. Royer Jr. said.

Royer, Katheryn Koob and two other International Communications Agency employees established a telephone link with the State Department and forwarded information gleaned from a Swiss diplomat until they were forced to surrender a day later, Royer said Tuesday.

"We perhaps hung on too long," said Royer, 49.

He said about 25 militants surrounded the cultural center 24 hours after the Nov. 4, 1979 takeover and "We had no recourse to surrender."

Recuperating from a virus he called "the departing gift of the Ayatollah Khomeini," Royer met with reporters "for the first and last time" Tuesday to discuss his 443 days of captivity.

Royer said the hostages usually received news of significant events, such as efforts to negotiate their release, through coded messages in letters from home.

It was that way, he said, that the hostages learned about the aborted rescue mission that cost eight American lives.

"One roommate wrote home and said that what he really wanted to see was Curtis LeMay stoneware (bombs)," Royer said. "He later received a letter from his family that they attempted to buy some LeMay stoneware but that eight place settings were destroyed in the process."

Royer said other tidbits of news came from the few publications the Iranians allowed them to read.

He said the hostages learned last September of the death of the Shah of Iran through a small insert in an edition of The Sporting News.

"It was in the Aug. 12 issue, I believe, that had an insert about a televised game being cancelled to allow a special to be aired. And in parentheses was the name of program — 'The Death of the Shah,'" Royer said.

"That was the first knowledge that the shah was dead and we knew that bargaining ploy was no longer valid," he said.

Royer said he tried to ignore the psycological games the students played.

At the same time, he said, the hostages tried to play "mind games" on the militants.

"We hoped to achieve the same psychological affect they hoped to have," he said. "We'd tell them that they weren't doing their country any good, that they weren't going to get what they wanted and they were only hurting their country," he said.

"As we got word about the country's economic troubles and the war with Iraq, we felt sure the students were begining to sense this," he said.

Royer said unlike other hostages he was not physically harmed by his captors, but he said his anger and frustration briefly surfaced in the form of a back pain that often made breathing difficult.

Royer, a Pennsylvania native who grew up in Texas, served as former deputy assistant director for Iran-America society. He arrived in Tehran as a teacher about six weeks before militant students stormed the embassy.

He said he is sure the Iranians stepped up efforts to solve the crisis after Ronald Reagan defeated President Carter, who during the 14-month vigil became a "scapegoat for all Iranian ills."

"They wanted him (Carter) out," he said. "But there was less than joy in their hearts about Reagan's election. I believe that they were frightened about the policies he might initiate."

Royer said he has no desire for revenge but hoped the Reagan administration will have a "firm policy" with Iran.

"I'm convinced the whole Iranian population was not totally behind this fanatical revolution."

Royer said the government's decompression program in Weisbaden, West Germany, "made all the difference to me in adjusting to the whole sitution."

Telephones provided "the initial feedback of how the people at home were thinking. There were times when we would think some things and draw conclusions not properly founded, but the voices of loved ones and friends immediately helped us place it all in perspective."

Auschwitz survivor revisits death camp

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Kitty Felix was a youngster in Poland around 1940, she was fascinated by the occupying German troops, drawn by their shining black boots and splendid uniforms. Although her family warned her about the Nazis, she often sneaked out to watch the military parades.

Then one day she was walking down the street with a friend. When her friend failed to leave the sidewalk at the approach of a German officer, the officer drew his service revolver and shot him dead.

Kitty Felix Hart, now a radiographer in England, was soon to learn more of the Nazi horror first hand: She and her mother became prisoners at the Auschwitz-Birkenau death camp. In a remarkable documentary tonight on PBS, she returns to Auschwitz to recount her life in hell.

Against the many recent TV dramas dealing with Nazi Germany and the Holocaust, "Return to Auschwitz" is quietly reflective, unadorned; and in its way, it is more devastating.

"I don't know what it will do to me to see it," Kitty says at the beginning of the documentary. But intent that the memory of Auschwitz and its two million victims not die with Auschwitz survivors, she determines to visit the grim memorial with her son David, a doctor living in Canada.

She is an articulate guide, leading her son through those hellish acres, spilling forth welled-up remembrances of unthinkable crimes against humanity. Here is the road on which she arrived; there is the barracks she stayed in; and there are some of the open pits in which bodies were burned.

"There are people in this world who say this never happened," she tells David. "Thirty members of your family died here... everybody's ashes are here."

She sees the gates through which she entered Auschwitz and recalled her first thoughts:

"The whole place was lit up when I came here and there was the smell of roasting meat... I wondered why there should be the smell of roasting meat."

The incomprehensibility of such a place and such deeds are reflected in David's innocent curiosity. How did you wash? Did you have toilet paper? Newspapers?

Kitty tells him that each prisoner had a bowl attached to his body. "And if you didn't have your bowl, you didn't have your soup; if you didn't have your bowl, you didn't have your toilet."

"It was very easy to lose the desire to live, let me tell you."

It is a shock to come face to face with Auschwitz itself. That is precisely what Kitty Felix Hart wanted it to be.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Nearly three years ago, I saw a letter in your column from a man who was tormented and frustrated because he had always felt that he should have been a woman. He said he was not a homosexual, but he felt like a woman with a man's body.

You advised him to contact the Janus Information Facility for legitimate, enlightening literature concerning this condition.

Abby, since I also had those feelings, I wrote for the literature, and was put in touch with doctors who studied my case. After much soul-searching, I know now that I am a transsexual.

I am now living happily as a woman. I was scheduled for a sex-change operation at Johns Hopkins, but that type of operation is no longer performed there because the surgeons who specialized in it left for other hospitals, so I am going to Cleveland.

Abby, had it not been for your column, I wouldn't have known where to turn. I was so miserable I was on the verge of suicide!

Please advise others with this problem to get help through a legitimate source as I did. And make it plain that not everyone who thinks he wants to be of the other sex is a candidate for a sex-change operation. Before surgery is permitted, the doctors make sure the person is a true transsexual for whom surgery is the only answer.

Thank you for saving my life.

GERI

DEAR GERI: I'm glad you wrote. Anyone interested in up-to-date literature concerning transsexualism may write to Dr. Paul Walker, 1952 Union St., San Francisco, Calif. 94123. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed long envelope for a reply.

DEAR ABBY: Isn't it a pity that wigs for men aren't as acceptable to society as wigs for women? Women today can wear wigs without encountering any snide remarks. Not so for men.

If society were to wholeheartedly endorse wigs for men, it would not only be a bonanza for the economy, it would be a big boost for the balding man's ego. I would appreciate your comments.

MOTHER OF A BALDING SON

DEAR MOTHER: Hairpieces or toupees (please, not "wigs") are big business today. There are any number of men who wear them and joke about it publicly. Of course, there are many who wear them quietly. (Some hairpieces look so natural they aren't detectable.)

How a man feels about himself is far more important than how "society" perceives him. There are a lot of men out there who have lost no sleep over lost hair. A pox on "society."

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from NO COMPLIMENTS, I just had to write.

For 40 years I was married to a man very much like her husband. He was not a giver of compliments either, but if I had a new dress or hairdo, or did something special for him, all I had to do was look at him, and the things he couldn't say were written on his face.

So many men are full of baloney; they find it easy to dish out compliments but can't wait to get out from under their wives' eyes to try their charms somewhere else.

So I hope NO COMPLIMENTS will be content and appreciate the good and faithful man she has. Why worry about the tinsel topping when you know there's pure gold underneath?

WIDOW OF A GOOD MAN

DEAR WIDOW: Well said.

Arts commission seeks artists

The Texas Commission on the Arts is on the lookout for talented, experienced and creative artists interested in teaching young Texans.

Artists interested in participating in the 1981-82 Artist-in-Residence Program may apply to the commission by March 1, announced Allan Longacre, Executive Director.

Residencies on this program range from one week to nine months. Professional artists are placed in elementary and secondary classrooms to enable school children to learn creative self-expression and skills.

Artists work with children of varied background and different ages in areas including music, creative writing, visual arts, film, dance, drama,architecture and environmental arts.

Applicants are selected by a panel based on their artistic excellence and compatability with the residency concept.

Selected artists will participate in public arts programs in the community by giving lectures and demonstrations.

The program is sponsored by the Texas Commission on the Arts, the National Endowment for the Arts and the U.S. Ofice of Education; about fifty area schools and arts organizations participate in it, in cities as well as rural communities.

For information and applications, write to Education Programs, Texas Commission on the Arts, P.O. Box 13406, 78711 or call, toll free Capitol Station,Austin, Texas 1-800-252-9415.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS
Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebras in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others.
Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.
(1) Paresthesias (see above) (2) Headaches (3) Painful joints (4) Numbness in the arms or hands (5) Loss of sleep (6) Stiffness in the neck (7) Pain between the shoulders (8) Stiffness or pain in lower back (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.
These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals . . . call for in depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

February 5, 1981

This coming year can be a most fruitful one if you continue to use your ideas responsibly. Your fertile imagination can produce a healthy harvest when the seeds are given time to germinate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Ideas which work for you may not necessarily do the job for another. Make allowances for personality differences and talents when giving advice today. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Uncertainty could cause a setback if you begin to question something you were only recently shown to be right. Let yesterday's insights take precedence over today's.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Move cautiously and slowly today, lest you bring someone into your confidence or plans who'll blab exactly what you don't want told.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your chances for success are high today, so long as you stick to your original game plan. Switching horses in midstream could ruin everything.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Having many good ideas and all the enthusiasm in the world won't get things done today unless you discipline yourself to finish what you begin.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) That sentimental you could let someone's sob story cause you to desert your better judgment and take a gamble you normally wouldn't. You may have regrets if you do.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Just when you should be sticking to your guns, as you normally do, today you could be swayed by someone who really doesn't have all the facts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Continue to check each and every detail as you work along today. Don't let someone who would rush your job have his or her way. Something important will be overlooked.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Avoid mixing business with pleasure today, if at all possible. Having a good time may cloud your reasoning and you could agree to costly concessions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'd better stay right on top of something being handled for you by another today, because this person, thinking he is doing right, may do exactly the opposite.

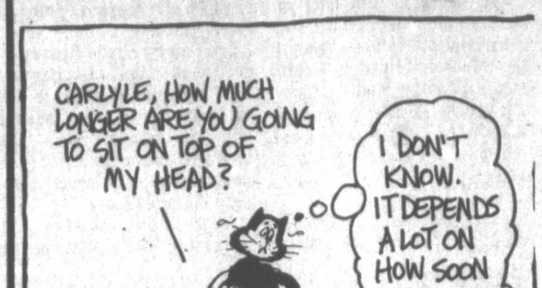

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be careful today. You are not too adept at keeping secrets at this time. With a minimum of coaxing, nosey person could have you spilling the beans.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be satisfied with a small profit today, rather than holding out because you hear about a better deal. To expect too much from unconfirmed sources could prove to be disappointing.

Tascosa uses foul line to upset Harvesters

AMARILLO—Tascosa hit 25 of 38 free throws and held off a Pampa comeback bid in the fourth quarter for a 69-62 upset of the defending District 3-5A champions Tuesday night.

The win gave Tascosa sole possession of first place in the district standings with a 2-0 record. Overall, the Rebels are 10-13.

Pampa, 15-10 overall, drops to 1-1 in district play after opening with a hard-fought 54-50 win over Caprock last week.

Pat Farrell led Tascosa in scoring with 24 points and damaged the Harvesters the most from the foul line. The 6-5 junior canned eight of eight from the line in the second quarter to help the Rebels break away to 34-28 lead.

Pampa tallied the next four points, including a 30-foot shot by Terry Faggins at the buzzer to pull the Harvesters within two, 34-32, at intermission.

Pampa knotted the score at 36-all early in the third quarter on Mike Nelson's short-range jumper, but the Harvesters hit only two their next seven shots while Tascosa expanded its lead to 10, 50-40, going into the final period.

Nelson, who had a game-high 25 markers, led a Pampa rally with 10 fourth-quarter points, including a layup that cut the gap to two, 58-56, with 2:51 to go.

Tascosa scored the next five points, three from the foul line, and Pampa wasn't able to pull any closer than three points.

With the Harvesters trailing, 65-62, Mike Nelson fouled out with 12 seconds to go and coach Garland Nichols drew a double technical when he protested the call.

Tascosa then hit four of the next six foul shots to close out the Harvesters.

Pampa outshot Tascosa from both the floor and foul line, but the Rebels went to the foul line 20 more times than the Harvesters. That wide margin proved to the difference in the game as Pampa was charged with 23 fouls and Tascosa was whistled just 13 times.

Pampa hit 25 of 55 shots from the floor for 46.9 percent and 14 of 18 tries from the foul line for 77.6 percent.

Tascosa shot 43.1 percent (22-51) from the floor, but hit 50.5 percent (12-23) in the second half.

Nelson, who possessed most of Pampa's scoring punch, hit nine of 13 field goal attempts and was a perfect seven of seven from the line.

Faggins with 11 points was Pampa's only other double-figure scorer. Kirt Crouch and Charles Nelson contributed eight points each. Romerly Dowdy and Ray Condo had four points each. Jay Henson and Ricky Smith had two each.

Jay Cleveland tossed in 13 and Marvin Jones 10 for the Rebels.

Tascosa also won the JV game, 58-51.

James Dawn had 14 points for the winners and Phillip Jeffrey also scored 14 for Pampa.

The Harvesters host Palo Duro at 7:30 p.m. Friday night with the junior varsity game scheduled to start at 6 p.m.

Kings blast Mavericks, 121-100

DALLAS (AP) — Dick Motta thought that just perhaps somebody had mixed up the uniforms, the way his Dallas Mavericks were running up and down the court and outscoring the Kansas City Kings in the first quarter.

"We really looked good in the first quarter. The way we started, I thought we had mixed up the jerseys. We were fast breaking on them," said Motta of his team's early 13-point lead in Tuesday night's National Basketball Association game.

But then things returned to normal. Phil Ford and Scott Wedman caught fire for the Kings, the Mavericks committed 10 second-quarter turnovers and Kansas City, 25-30, rolled to a 121-100 victory, breaking a two-game losing skid.

Ford had only two points in the first quarter, but led the Kings as they hit 11 of their first 12 shots in the second quarter and 12 of their first 14 in the third quarter.

"Phil Ford is a one-in-a-lifetime player, a great competitor, a pleasure to watch," said Kansas City coach Cotton Fitzsimmons. "It's like having a coach on the floor. He's a very unselfish player. He has one thing in mind, and that's helping the team to win."

On the damage Ford did to the Mavericks, Motta said: "He did it to us the last time he played here. And the time before that. And the time before that. We tried to block his shots, tried to block him, but we just couldn't stop him."

For the game, Kansas City hit 53 of 81 from the floor for 65 percent, while Dallas was 40 of 81 for 49 percent. Neither team shined at the charity line, Kansas City converting 14 of 24 and Dallas 19 of 31.

Wedman hit 13 of 17, Ford 14 off 21, Reggie King 8 of 13, Sam Lacey 6 of 8 and Ernie Grunfeld 6 of 10 for Kansas City.

"After we looked so good in the first quarter, we gave up four missed free throws and had 15 turnovers in the first half that led to 19 points. You can't win playing like that," said Motta, whose expansion club dropped its sixth straight.

Kansas City trailed 33-22 early in the second quarter.

Caprock rallies past Pampa girls

Pampa's Lady Harvesters had their first District 3-5A win within reach, but Caprock rallied in the final quarter to post a 74-69 victory Tuesday night in Harvester Fieldhouse.

The Harvesters, behind the scoring punch of Bobbie Skaggs and Jeanette Britt, built up a seven-point bulge, 34-27, at halftime and led most of three quarters.

Caprock, however, poured in 29 points in the fourth quarter to hand the Lady Harvesters their nineteenth setback compared to three wins.

Skaggs was Pampa's top scorer with 24 points while Britt contributed 17.

Also scoring for Pampa were Sharolyn Salisbury and Deanna Porter with seven points apiece, Jeanna Porter, six; Trecia George, two, and Lena Young, one.

Melanie Mixon topped Caprock with 18 points, followed by Rhonda Breeding with 13.

Britt led Pampa on the boards with 18 rebounds. Debbie Young collected 10.

Pampa did win the junior varsity game, 43-41, after trailing most of three quarters.

Pampa JVs fell behind by 10, 16-6, when the first quarter ended, but closed within two, 18-17, at halftime and 31-29 after three quarters.

Valencia Ellison paced Pampa with 12 points while Stacy Blacksheir scored 13 for the losers.

Virginia outlasts Tar Heels for 80-79 overtime victory

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Despite his many years of success as a college basketball coach, North Carolina's Dean Smith has often been accused of going to his patented four-corners offense too often and too early.

On Tuesday night, he might have gone to it too late.

Winning by 16 points over Virginia midway through the second half, Smith opted to keep on moving, instead of slowing it down, and it might have cost him an 80-79 overtime loss to the top-ranked Cavaliers.

At least he thinks so.

"It was my mistake for not going to the four corners earlier than we did," he said. "We scored or got fouled everytime we were in it."

The Cavaliers finally caught up with the Tar Heels and sent the game into overtime tied at 64. Then they beat their tough Atlantic Coast Conference rivals, ranked 11th in the country, on a foul shot by reserve Terry Gates with six seconds left.

"There's really not too much I can say," noted Virginia Coach Terry Holland. "Our kids just refused to lose. They certainly had every chance to quit out there.

"In the first half, a couple of times, we got our heads down. Carolina was kicking us on the offensive boards after we were turning the ball over. But in the second half, I got no complaints. We came out and played just as hard as we could."

The game, the only one involving ranked teams Tuesday night, had everything it in—including a fight between North Carolina's Al Wood and Virginia's Jeff Lamp. Police had to finally escort the teams off the frenzied Chapel Hill court.

In the overtime period, Virginia got the tap and Lamp hit a short jump shot giving Virginia its first lead of the game. The Cavaliers extended their lead to six points with 3:06 left and never lost it.

Ralph Sampson led Virginia with 32 points and 13 rebounds while Lamp had 21 points. Wood had a game-high 33 points for the Tar Heels.

The Cavaliers kept their unbeaten streak alive, extending it to 19 games this season and 24 in a row dating to last year. It was only the second time ever that Virginia has beaten the Tar Heels in Carmichael Auditorium. The last time was 1973.

Elsewhere, U.S. Reed led Arkansas with 16 points and had three steals and four free throws in the final frantic minutes as the Razorbacks avenged an earlier defeat by Texas in beating the Longhorns 54-48. Texas had defeated Arkansas 62-60 earlier in the season.

"We missed a lot of free throws and that was the difference in the game," said Texas Coach Abe Lemons. "You can really cut out talking about anything else. We made a lot of mental errors and our shooting was terrible. That about says it. We took a lot of bad shots in the first half that were unaccountable.

"We just wore out," Lemons added. "I really don't know now whether to let them off some or work them harder."

Rob Williams scored 29 points and befuddled Southern Methodist with his ball-handling wizardry to lead Houston to a 79-64 victory. Williams, the Southwest Conference's leading scorer, got 16 of his game-high 29 points in the second half when the Cougars pulled away from the Mustangs.

"Some guy was hitting me on the elbow and that threw me off somewhat," said Williams. "So I tried to go to the basket a little bit more. We knew we had to come back in here and get back on the winning track. The thing we didn't do in Dallas was execute like we did tonight."

Wilbur Montgomery scored 20 points to lead Stetson over Jacksonville 64-51; Jim Mercer scored a career-high 29 points to lead Maine over Boston University 73-58; Gary Witts' 17 points led Holy Cross over Army 68-60; Rhode Island defeated Brown 64-52 behind Jimmy Wright's 17 points; Monroe Trout's 21 points paced Harvard over Yale 107-94; Joe Copeland's layup with one second left gave Baylor a 60-59 decision over Rice; Doc Holden's field goal with eight seconds remaining provided Cincinnati with a 78-76 decision over Loyola of Chicago and Texas Tech whipped TCU 70-60 behind Bubba Jennings' 22 points, including eight in overtime.

Wheeler splits with Shamrock

SHAMROCK—Wheeler girls hit 29 of 39 free throws enroute to a 57-36 rout of Shamrock in a District 2-2A game Tuesday night.

Beth Brown paced Wheeler with 15 points, followed by Missy Wiggins and Elise Christner with 13 points each. Mona Jennings added 11, Twyla Collings, three, and Lori Lee, two.

Jennings and Lee pulled down 12 and 11 rebounds respectively while Wiggins had six.

Brenda Campbell was Shamrock's top scorer with 11 points.

Wheeler is now 15-9 overall and 1-0 in the second half of district play. The Lady Mustangs closed the first half of district with a 3-2 record.

Shamrock edged Wheeler, 63-62, in the boys' contest.

Ezell Clarkley led the winners with 17 points.

Boyd Waldo canned 24 points for Wheeler. Bennie Baker and Mike Gallager had 10 points each.

Southwest Conference roundup

By GARY GARRISON
Associated Press Writer

Surprise, surprise, surprise. There were no surprises in Tuesday night's Southwest Conference basketball.

On one of the few nights in a season of upsets and strange goings-on, all four games went just about as expected.

But the Arkansas Razorbacks served notice that they are on their way to mounting a serious challenge to Houston's first place spot.

Arkansas beat Texas, 54-48; Houston held on to first place by whipping Southern Methodist, 79-64; Baylor edged Rice, 60-59, and Texas Tech had to go into overtime to beat Texas Christian, 70-60.

With the conference season past the halfway point, Houston holds a two-game edge over the Razorbacks and Baylor and Rice are tied in third place, four games off the pace.

"As long as we can continue to put heat on Houston, we're in the race," the coach said.

"Anytime you beat Texas, it's a great victory. Our fans put a premium on victories over Texas," Sutton said after Arkansas avenged an earlier 62-60 loss to Texas at home.

U.S. Reed had 16 points and grabbed three steals and hit four important free throws in the final frantic minutes of the game. Scott Hastings had 14 for Arkansas.

LaSalle Thompson led all scorers, hitting 17 for Texas.

Texas coach Abe Lemons blamed the loss on the failure to hit free throws, mental errors and said the Longhorns shooting was "terrible."

"We just wore out. I really don't know whether to let them off some or work them harder," Lemons said.

Rob Williams provided the points and Larry Micheaux the inspiration as the Houston Cougars pounded Southern Methodist, 79-64.

Williams had 29 points and Micheaux shaved his head after last Saturday's 81-70 loss to Texas Tech. He finished Tuesday night's game against the Mustangs with 19 points and 10 rebounds.

Houston coach Guy Lewis had high praise for Micheaux's performance.

"This was Larry's finest game, we finally got the ball to him," Lewis said.

The Cougars got off to a fast start, building leads of 10-0 and 15-2 as they got even with the Mustangs for a triple overtime loss to SMU in Dallas earlier in the season.

That fast start made the difference, according to SMU coach Dave Bliss.

"Once again early in the game we had one of those cold streaks where we just couldn't get a basket and that contributed to our getting so far down in the first half," Bliss said.

"We just wore out," Lemons added. "I really don't know now whether to let them off some or work them harder."

Rob Williams scored 29 points and befuddled Southern Methodist with his ball-handling wizardry to lead Houston to a 79-64 victory. Williams, the Southwest Conference's leading scorer, got 16 of his game-high 29 points in the second half when the Cougars pulled away from the Mustangs.

"Some guy was hitting me on the elbow and that threw me off somewhat," said Williams. "So I tried to go to the basket a little bit more. We knew we had to come back in here and get back on the winning track. The thing we didn't do in Dallas was execute like we did tonight."

Williams referred to a loss to the Mustangs earlier in the season.

Wilbur Montgomery scored 20 points to lead Stetson over Jacksonville 64-51; Jim Mercer scored a career-high 29 points to lead Maine over Boston University 73-58; Gary Witts' 17 points led Holy Cross over Army 68-60; Rhode Island defeated Brown 64-52 behind Jimmy Wright's 17 points; Monroe Trout's 21 points paced Harvard over Yale 107-94; Joe Copeland's layup with one second left gave Baylor a 60-59 decision over Rice; Doc Holden's field goal with eight seconds remaining provided Cincinnati with a 78-76 decision over Loyola of Chicago and Texas Tech whipped TCU 70-60 behind Bubba Jennings' 22 points, including eight in overtime.

Spurs win final seconds

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — When Detroit holds its opponents to below 100 points, its National Basketball Association record is 9-8. When foes score above 100, the Pistons are 4-35.

The century mark haunted Coach Scotty Robertson's Pistons again Tuesday night and San Antonio won the game in the last 25 seconds, 102-99.

"Scotty has them playing hard basketball," a relieved San Antonio Coach Stan Albeck said later. "They've lost a lot of close games and they are not as bad as their record (13-43) indicates. They've beaten Philly and New York."

San Antonio came into the game needing a victory to run its homecourt winning streak to 13, a club record, and its 35th win of the year, triggering a unique bonus clause that awards each player on the team extra money for each additional victory through 56.

But the fired-up Pistons came within two baskets of spoiling those hopes, sparked by a brilliant shooting exhibition by John Long who poured in a career-high 40 points on 17 of 30 field goal attempts and all five of his free throws.

"I knew Long was cooking when he came across the lane and literally threw one up over (Dave) Corzine," Albeck said. "I thought for sure we had the rebound but the shot banked in. That's one of the finest shooting exhibitions you'll see this year. He carried them throughout the first half (with 21 points)."

"What hurt us was the turnovers down the stretch," lamented Long, who also grabbed 6 rebounds and dealt off 5 assists. "That put a lot of pressure on us."

Detroit scored five more field goals than did San Antonio, 45-40, but in the final analysis was beaten at the free throw line where the Spurs canned 22 of 29 and Detroit managed only 8 of 19.

San Antonio's Paul Griffin stole a Detroit pass with 25 seconds left and laid it in to put the Spurs ahead 100-99 after the scored changed hands 9 times and was tied 5 times through the final period.

"We were fortunate tonight to come away with a win," Albeck said. "We need to get back to that fluidness that we had early in the season. But you can't knock the effort of tonight's game."

George Gervin led San Antonio scoring with 25 points as the Spurs ran their Midwest Division-leading record to 35-20.

Ken Landreaux of the Minnesota Twins quarterbacked a Little League football team in Compton, Calif., which included two future National Football League players, Robin Cole and Eric Hurt.

Ireland's a good place to visit, despite weather

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — The rain, no doubt, was spilling out of a black sky, and a wind that would shave you was blowing in off Dublin Bay. The praties at lunch probably were cold, and the beer warm and a taxi wouldn't stop if you were the Cardinal-Archbishop of Armagh.

You do get an occasional day like that in Ireland.

It was probably on just such a day that Robin Berrington, the cultural affairs and press officer at the U.S. Embassy in Dublin, poured out his rain-sodden soul to a friend in a private letter.

Ireland, he sobbed into his typewriter, "is pretty small potatoes" compared to the rest of Europe, "a great place to visit ..." but "the high cost of goods, their unavailability, the dreary landscapes, the constant strikes and the long, dark and damp winters combine to gnaw away at one's enthusiasm for being here."

The amazing thing, he wrote, was that "the Irish manage to muddle through with such good humor, pluck and inventiveness," even if the most gripping issue among them seemed to be whether President Reagan's ancestors really came from Tipperary.

A copy of the letter was mistakenly put in a packet of press releases and wound up in the hands of the Irish Times.

Ah well, not to worry. The Irish are a tolerant people. Berrington (which sounds like an English name) was already on his way to a new assignment in Japan before the Provos could hasten him on his way by adding a touch of realism to that old Celtic blessing about the road rising with you and God holding you in the palm of His hand.

Your man, as they say there, may have spoken the truth. One or two days out of 365 may be a trifle on the beastly side in the Auld Sod.

I remember the day I got married. In Ireland. I was standing in the doorway of a Dublin rooming house waiting for the taxi to take me to the railroad station for the journey north into the green hills of Armagh. The skies emptied out like opening day at Boulder Dam.

Small potatoes? I suppose so. Those small fields on that tiny island may not produce your jumbo Idahos.

But those same fields in that sometimes dreary landscape managed to nurture a William Butler Yeats, a Sean O'Casey, a James Joyce, a George Bernard Shaw, a Brendan Behan, an Oscar Wilde, a John Millington Synge, a Lord Sunsany, a Lady Gregory, a Frank O'Connor, a Samuel Beckett, an Oliver Goldsmith, a Laurence Sterne, a Richard Brinsley Sheridan, a Liam O'Flaherty, a Sean O'Faolain ...

These small potatoes nourished the forebears of Daniel Boone, Davy Crockett, Edgar Allen Poe, Stonewall Jackson, Sam Houston, Horace Greeley, Robert Fulton, Fulton Sheen, Stephen Foster ...

Anyhow, diplomat Berrington should find Tokyo to his liking: the smog, the traffic, the prices, the raw fish, the crowded subways, the lilting language, the courteous people, the cultural richess of Sumo wrestling and Geisha houses, the bowing and kow-towing.

After that, there's always Reykjavik. For the weather.

Airlines seek fare increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The major U.S. airlines are requesting emergency fare increases because of higher fuel prices, including those expected from President Reagan's order lifting the remaining price controls on domestic oil.

The Civil Aeronautics Board is expected to review the request quickly, CAB spokesman Ted Lopatkiewicz said Monday.

The Air Transportation Association, which represents the nation's major airlines and other carriers, asked the CAB to increase the standard fare level to reflect the higher fuel costs the airlines must pay, said Bill Jackman, spokesman for the association.

Noise not symphony, it was burglars

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Employees in the tax appraisal office in the San Angelo city hall thought they heard strange noises Saturday, but attributed them to a symphony playing next door.

But officials discovered when they opened the tax office's locked vault on Monday morning that someone had taken $4,467 in cash.

The burglary occurred between Friday afternoon and Monday morning, officials said. Police said someone entered the building through air conditioning ducts.
