FASHIONS

By REVILLE, Ltd.
Dressmakers to H. M. Queen Mary (Written for the United Press)
LONDON—Following the lead of brighter colors in royal court gowns, Milady's Evening Gown this season has taken on a brighter and more colorful aspect.

The introduction of new, delicate shades has been overshadowed by the craftsmanship of the embroidery needle in working it exotic designs in crystals, pearls, diamante and colored beads.

Pale cyclamen georgette, entirely covered with falling petals of silver and gold embroidery, or other natural designs, has proved popular. Lime green satin beaute with minute pink beads introduced into the crystal design, likewise makes a very attractive creation for evening wear.

Another popular mode is a low waisted white crepe gown embroidered with diamante in a bow effect across the front. In fact, almost any gown embroidered with crystals, pearls or colored beads, to add a touch of distinction, is fashionable this season.

This was well demonstrated recently in an exclusive London creation of ivory crepe gown, heavily trimmed with crystals, pearls and green beads in a floral design.

A heavily embroidered panel, hanging towards the waistline, hung from the centre of the back, while a panel of pistache green tulle was suspended from each shoulder and drape gracefully at the back.

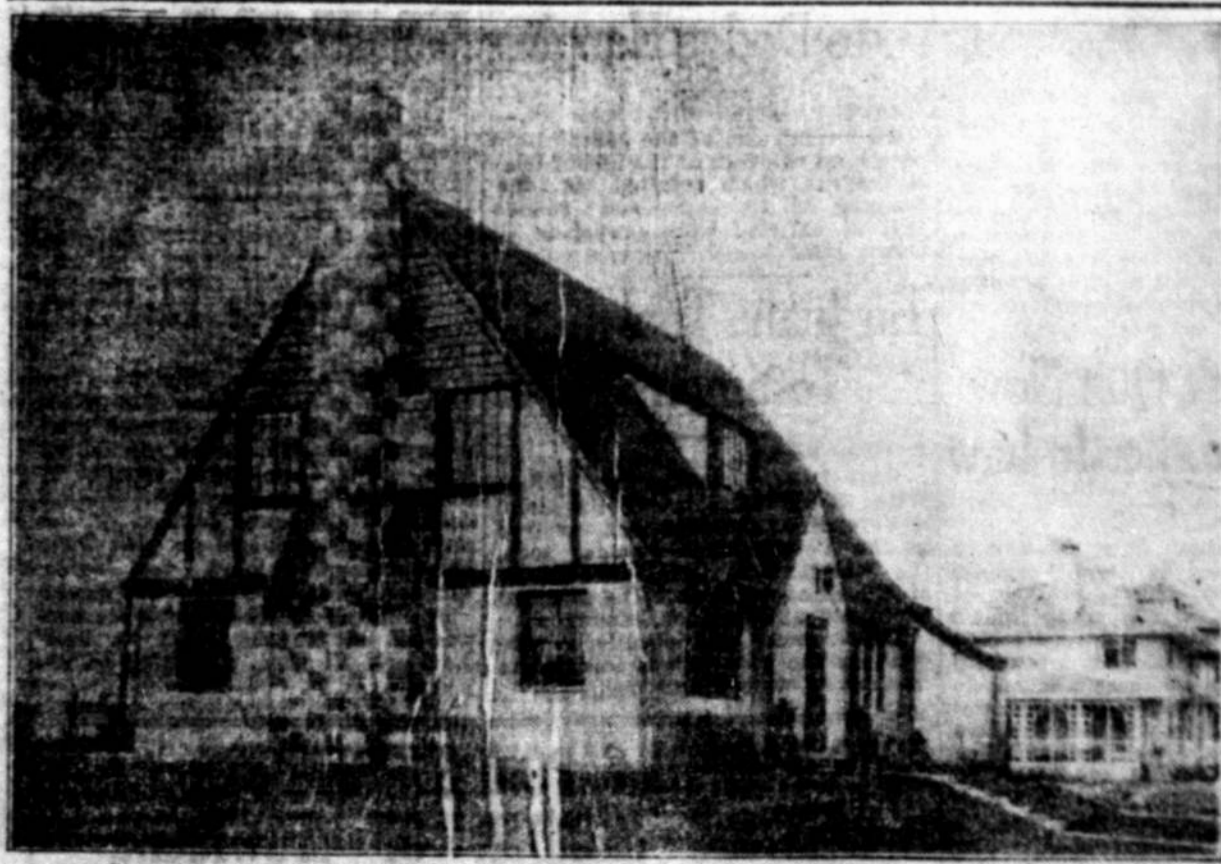

An ivory colored gown of satin beaute, heavily embroidered with crystals and lightly spudded with corals to give a soft, colorful touch, was seen here recently at a very fashionable function.

A malmesian pink elvet triangular sash, was suspended by diamante fringes from the left shoulder. A large white ostrich feather fan added to the distinctive background.

Charming Combination of French and English

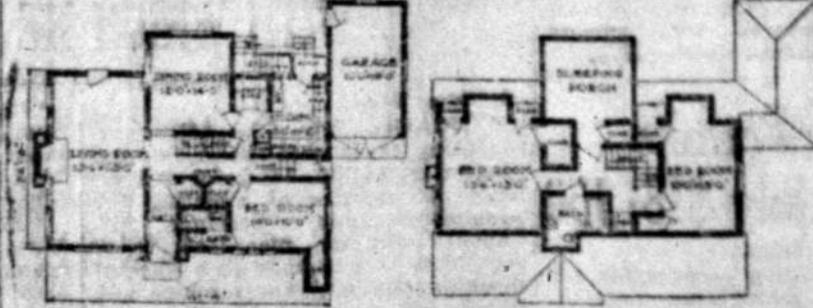

SIX ROOMS AND SLEEPING PORCH

Home builders who want as much as possible for their money will find the attractive house pictured above an excellent example to follow.

Erected at La Grange, Illinois this "homey" dwelling combines both French and English features with sturdy construction that will endure throughout the years.

Concrete masonry was chosen for the outer wall construction and covered with a pleasing texture of portland cement stucco. Much care and attention was given to the finish of the stucco, because it is through this medium that the home achieves an individuality rarely found.

In the interior the living room commands attention because of its size, 12 1/2 feet by 25 feet. It excludes entirely across one end of the first floor. Of easy access in the living room, the dining room, breakfast room and kitchen. The latter, with its built-in conveniences that save so many steps during the busy day, will delight every housekeeper. To the front of the first floor is a large bedroom, furnished with a bath and two closets.

Two additional bedrooms, a sleeping porch, and another bath are located on the second floor. These, with six convenient closets, complete a room arrangement that is ideal from any point of view. Both inside and outside, this compact, and yet roomy, house possesses an individuality that makes it outstanding wherever built.

That Child of Yours

By Ruth Matthews

A problem which has caused great tumult and anguish among average mothers is that of proper companions for their boys and girls.

Democracy is a great theory, many mothers tell me, but it spalls a lot of trouble when applied too freely to children.

There is Gladys, the janitor's daughter, who is a soiled little rowdy with destructive tendencies. She commits horrifying acts with a calm naturalness.

Gladyses have caused consternation and dismay throughout the realm of motherhood. One can't get away from them.

And there is Johnnie, the ice boy, who has a passion for expectorating and whose vocabulary has a sophistication and a choiceness which fascinates your own boy.

They Can't Be Avoided

Johnnies, too, are almost inescapable, no matter where you may. And since the Gladyses and the Johnnies can not be removed, the matter must be treated from your side, as it were. While you can not mend the ways of Gladys, yet you can set up a strong protection within your own child if you have the patience.

And as for Donald, and your problem with Johnnie, follow the same trend. In a casual conversation let him see that you regard Johnnie as a poor sport—that he lives up to none of Donald's real ideals.

ALVORD WILL SPEAK AT A. M.

EXTENSION LEADER WILL TALK TO FARMERS AT SHORT COURSE

COLLEGE STATION, Tex., July 28.—The marketing of his products is an important problem confronting the farmer in East Texas, in the opinion of C. H. Alvord, director of the Extension Service of the A. & M. College of Texas, who attended the recent district short course at Grand Saline and the Farm Bureau district meeting at Mt. Pleasant.

Mr. Alvord addressed both meetings, stressing the safe farming program proposed by the Extension Service as a solution of many of the farmers' problems. Many of the farmers and the country agents attending these meetings reported great damage in the North and Northeastern parts of the State by the cotton flea hopper.

In East Texas an over-production of tomatoes and watermelons was evident, which was attributed to the lack of proper organization among the growers. Another problem affecting the farmer in this region was the necessary stock for profitable utilization of the large feed and forage crop.

Interest displayed in the annual Farmers' Short Course, which will be held at the A. & M. College the week of August 2-7, among the people in Northeast Texas indicates that section will be well represented, Mr. Alvord said.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—The commission appointed by the Government of Northern Ireland to investigate the possibilities of electrical development recently submitted a report in which it advocated development of electrical supply in that part of Ireland, according to advice from Vice Consul Russell M. Railway electrification was discussed but found to be undesirable at the present time. Additional powers were recommended for the Electricity Commissioners and the appointment of a public board to supervise construction was suggested.

GERM AFFINITY DEVELOPS ACID IN SWEET MILK

Milk sours because of the affection for it of tiny germs, called lactic acid bacteria.

Lactose, which is milk sugar, is converted by these bacteria into lactic acid. When development of this acid has gone far enough, the milk sours.

Lactic acid bacteria are everywhere and their numbers multiply fast in ordinary market milk if the milk be warm, while at a cooler temperature their multiplication is slower.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—The Department of Justice has authorized the purchase of about 600,000 pounds of white cotton yarn to be used in connection with the operation of the textile mill at the Atlanta penitentiary, it was announced July 22. This yarn is to be used in the manufacture of canvas to be furnished the Post Office Department and the Navy Department for the fiscal year 1927, it was stated.

The department also announced that it had been advised by the United States Marine Corps Depot at Philadelphia of complete satisfaction with an order of 120,000 yards of khaki canvas of different widths. This order gave such results under tests applied that the material has been adopted as a standard sample for canvas of this grade.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAYS—"Thy shoes shall be iron and brass; and as thy days, so shall thy strength be." Deut. 33:25

WHEN IN ROME, DO AS THE ROMANS DO.

No law is so deadly as the law of fatal average. He who is content to be "as good as the rest" has ceased to grow. He has doomed himself to mediocrity.

Progress and redemption depend upon those who are better than the rest.

Conformity is the easiest thing in the world. It requires nothing but the imitative instinct. Originality is the most difficult and dangerous. He who dares to be different and original is certain to be a Moses leading a society out of wilderness or a martyr to his originality.

There is a desperate need in Rome for someone to assume the leadership of the Romans. Life's important prizes and places are reserved for those who are able to live among the Romans like sons of God.

Cervantes lived in a day when Spanish literature was cursed by a maudlin and sentimental chivalry. For the period of a few years, he wrote novels and plays according to the contemptible and silly standards of his time. Then his soul revolted and he wrote "Don Quixote," a book that transformed all the established literary formulae of the period and placed the name of its author among the first ten authors of all history.

Richard Wagner could have been a popular composer and received some important commissions from royalty in his generation if he had been willing to be bound by the operatic standards then current. Instead he preferred to blaze new trails, suffer calumny and humiliation and almost defeat, but in the end he became the father of the modern opera.

Rembrandt nearly starved while he was battling the artistic standards of his time, but no name stands higher in painting today than the Dutch artist who, living among aristocratic Romans, repudiated their standards and made his own.

Tolstoy was rich, noble learned and powerful. According to the standards of the Russians he should have been satisfied. But his soul overleaped the bounds of conventions and by defying the traditions of his kind became the greatest of all the Russians and one of the formidable immortals.

The power of creation which each individual possesses is his mark of divinity. To be different

No man in history like the lowly Nazirite was more different from his mockers and abusers. If he had not been perhaps he would have ended his career as a carpenter or sheep herder on the plains about Jerusalem. It seems God's plan that if one gets the best out of life he must not run behind those who would be first but to branch off and create a universe of individuality if one desires to crown among those who would make for themselves a crown.

EDUCATION AND AGITATION

Every now and then someone of more or less prominence rises to tell us we have too much education. The burden of the lament of such worthy persons usually is that the country as a whole and many individuals would be better off if more young men eschewed college degrees and learned a good trade, say that of plumber, carpenter or brick-layer. And it must be admitted there often is a basis of truth in this argument, desirable as education may be, considered academically.

But if the complaint against excessive distribution of the college sheepskin in some instances is well founded in Continental United States where industry, commerce and almost every other form of human activity is highly developed, there would seem to be even more ground for it in the so-called "dependencies" or "possessions." A case in point is the agitation for independence which has been going on in the Philippines virtually without interruption since the American occupation and which has just resulted in the sending of Col. Carmi Thompson as personal representative of President Coolidge to investigate conditions in the islands.

Whether one takes the attitude that full and immediate independence should be granted the Philippines, or that such action should be delayed until the Filipinos "are better prepared to administer their own affairs," there apparently is no disputing the fact that the campaign for freedom is being carried on by a relatively small group of more highly educated men who would have difficulty finding employment for their talents in any field. One may look upon such persons as Quezon and Camena as opportunists and professional agitators, or as patriots and fearless leaders, but one also may imagine the ranks of the agitators would be considerably thinned if opportunities for proportionate distinction were offered in the various professions or even in commercial life.

A clever, well-educated young Filipino drifts neutrally to politics because with his training and environment, he is unwilling to embark upon what seems to him a menial career, in the absence of dignified and remunerative professional and commercial positions such as are abundant in the United States.

Nor is it in the Philippines alone that observers have remarked similar phenomena. Fen of wisdom and long experience in affairs in Porto Rico have noted that with schools turning out native graduates more rapidly than commercial and professional opportunities for the display of their talents are developed, the tendency is for the well educated young man to go into politics, and to agitate against the government in power, often without much regard for the merits of the agitation. Indeed, this criticism would seem to hold for political agitators of many Latin American countries as well.

And to take an example farther from home, it is the young Chinese often educated in the United States through the remission of the Boxer indemnity, who is the bulwark of the present anti-foreign agitation in China at the present time. Such agitations often are justified, no doubt, but one can't help wondering if needed changes couldn't be accomplished more gradually and more effectively, if a modest amount of attention were given to education along some more practical lines of business or professional work.

NO MAN QUARRELS UNTO HIMSELF

A fine piece of cement road was being built through a small down state town. The State Highway Commission and the town council could not agree on the route that was to be followed through the town and the paving has been held up for almost three years.

In the meantime traffic has been sent over a mile detour which has become almost impassable. Day after day the tourists jolted across the ruts and gullies breaking springs, straining motors and losing the joy out of the trip paying for the quarrel between the town council and the Highway Commission.

No quarrel ever affects the quarrelers alone.

The sin of divorce is not in the effect on the divorcees, but in the long and tragic detour that the children have to take. Juvenile courts are crowded with youngsters who have run afoul of the law because they came from broken homes. Some authorities declare that as high as fifty per cent of the juvenile delinquents come from homes wrecked by divorce.

The public pays for the support of the juvenile courts and other machinery of the law, the children pay with heartaches, trouble, moral breakdowns and ethical bankruptcy. A divorce would be a simple matter except for the fact that a lot of people have to take the detour it involves.

The war for power in the Congress of the United States has sent the whole nation over rough detours on scores of occasions. While the politicians sparred for advantageous positions or filibustered for spite the country has waded through business depression and moral morasses paying the cost of partisan quarrels.

A quarrel between law enforcement officers will delay justice, breed disrespect for law, allow criminals to go free and break down all the forces of orderly government—the public meanwhile taking a rough and tortuous detour.

A quarrel between two church leaders can disrupt the work of years.

A quarrel between a husband and wife will blast the life of a little child.

A quarrel in a town council will drive out industries, discourage business and stagnate a town.

THE CURE FOR PATERNALISM

The American citizen today is bartering his individual liberties and rights for government bounties and bonuses. He demands government interference in everything and surrenders his individuality in return for it. The American citizen is being pauperized by government alms. If he supports the government, he asks the government in return, "to support him." This sweeping denunciation of federal paternalism comes from the American Bar Association and is part of a resolution which criticizes drastically the increasing tendency toward centralization in government. There is no denying the fact that called forth this expression, and it is easy enough to agree that the trend is not altogether wholesome. But the lawyers should remember that, in most instances, the extension of federal activities has been the logical result of the inability or unwillingness of the states and their smaller political subdivisions to function satisfactorily. As the chairman of the criminal law section puts it, "The remedy lies more in administration than in statutes." The one course for a growing paternalism is more efficiency and vision in local government—and no one is in better position to contribute to it than are the nation's lawyers.

SMART-ALEC SIGNS

The commissioner of the New Jersey Motor Vehicle Department threatens to revoke the licenses of drivers who display offensive signs on their cars. He objects especially to the ubiquitous "no iniquitous sign." "If you can read this, you are too damn close." He doesn't want any profanity or vulgarity at all displayed on automobiles. The driving and walking public will be with him in that. The "too damn close" sign has got by because it seemed witty, the first time it appeared. But it was a Smart-Alecky stunt; any such stunt grows very, very tiresome after the thousandth time, whether its language is objectionable or not.

The highways of the land are filled with cars, often pestilential wrecks, all cluttered up with legends and wise-cracks which the perpetrators edifyingly think are screamingly funny. Most of them make other people want to scream, but not because they are funny.

People do not go into a public hall with their person decked out in such outlandish ways. Why should they inflict such things on the public on the streets and highways? It isn't a question of morals, but of taste, sense and common social decency.

"PLEASED 'T MEETCHA!"

So Think We

We think it one of the fine moves of the nation to begin a campaign against offensive signs on automobiles. This move started in New Jersey, and we are in hopes that it will have the effect of making it a violation of anyone driving an automobile to have such signs on the vehicles. Smart Alects are one of the most obnoxious animals that the general public has to put up with, and we hope that they will be sat upon hard in regard to displaying many of the signs that we have seen on some of the cars in Lubbock and elsewhere.

It Is Reported

That several fellows wanted to know in a round about way if we referred to them when we said something about folks drinking booze and owing grocery bills. The guilty conscience needs no accuser, and if we got on somebody's toes, we are not going to even ask them to excuse us, for we have no apologies to offer.

WET AND DRY

A news dispatch from Germany reports an orgy of drunkenness costing the lives of five persons, when a steamer crashed into a bridge on the Rhine, throwing a number of wine casks into the river. The people recovered them and drank freely. When the excitement subsided, it is said two persons had died of alcoholic poisoning, two had fallen into the river and been drowned and one had been killed in a brawl, while twenty others were in the hospital. This is a strange fairy story; wine is not intoxicating, as the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment can inform anyone.

It Is Reported

Brothers Under the Skin Game

A burg-u-lar there lived one time Who burguled most efficiently, And plotted all his acts of crime Quite, as it were, omnisciently, And yet he was most discontent And ever aimed ambitiously To utilize his innate bent And burgule more nutritiously.

And so he took a course by mail, Which guaranteed to train a man In arson, mayhem, jumping bail, And when and how to brain a man, He finished with a high degree, For he had been laborious, As all bright boys should strive to be If they would be notorious.

And then one night he started out To do some second-story work, But suddenly received a clout; Then followed bloody, gory work, "Darn you!" he cried, A voice re-plied: "Pray spare me all invec-a-tive, For I'm, I may well confide, A Sapp Mail School detec-a-tive."

"From Dear Old Sapp?" Why, so am I!" The burg-u-lar cried, snickering, "We Sapp School men must unify, And cease unseemly hickering." And so they strolled off arm in arm Like brothers, fond and dutiful, Each shielding each from any harm, And thus all things were beautiful.

Many business concerns in Brazil are failing in the worst business depression felt there in many years.

This sweeping denunciation of federal paternalism comes from the American Bar Association and is part of a resolution which criticizes drastically the increasing tendency toward centralization in government. There is no denying the fact that called forth this expression, and it is easy enough to agree that the trend is not altogether wholesome. But the lawyers should remember that, in most instances, the extension of federal activities has been the logical result of the inability or unwillingness of the states and their smaller political subdivisions to function satisfactorily. As the chairman of the criminal law section puts it, "The remedy lies more in administration than in statutes." The one course for a growing paternalism is more efficiency and vision in local government—and no one is in better position to contribute to it than are the nation's lawyers.

SMART-ALEC SIGNS

The commissioner of the New Jersey Motor Vehicle Department threatens to revoke the licenses of drivers who display offensive signs on their cars. He objects especially to the ubiquitous "no iniquitous sign." "If you can read this, you are too damn close." He doesn't want any profanity or vulgarity at all displayed on automobiles. The driving and walking public will be with him in that. The "too damn close" sign has got by because it seemed witty, the first time it appeared. But it was a Smart-Alecky stunt; any such stunt grows very, very tiresome after the thousandth time, whether its language is objectionable or not.

Heavy Rains Are Helpful to Alpine

ALPINE, Texas, July 28.—Heavy rains Sunday and Monday have been beneficial to all crops in this section, however, the cotton crops are not dependent on the rains, as the cotton plantations are irrigated from the Rio Grande. The cotton stalks are growing prolifically, some being more than waist high. All stalks are putting on bolls heavily, and the outlook right now is real good for more than an average crop. A few more scattering bolls are opening, but actual picking will not begin before the middle or latter part of August.

Helen Wills Back On Courts Again

By FRANK GETTY United News Staff Correspondent MAIDSTONE, TENNIS CLUB, EAST HAMPTON, N. Y., July 28.—

A Helen Wills who was not quite the flashing, smashing Helen Wills of old, but who stroked with graceful accuracy and speed lightfootedly over the green lawn courts of the Maidstone tennis club in her first tournament match since her operation, has returned to American tennis with the promise of soon displaying all her former invincibility.

Pitted against Mrs. Edward Raymond of New York, an indifferent player in the first round of the Maidstone club's invitation tournament, the national woman's singles champion had little trouble winning in straight sets, 6-1, 6-4. Had Helen felt it necessary to extend herself, Mrs. Raymond would not have scored a game.

SLUSH FUND IN ILLINOIS PLACED AT $971,595 BY REED COMMITTEE; NEGRO WARD BOSS DEFIES PROBERS

BY EARL J. JOHNSON United News Staff Correspondent CHICAGO, July 28.—The senate committee investigating expenditures in the Illinois primary delving into Chicago politics was defied by a negro ward boss, who declared that his word was law among the colored people and ended its session by placing the latest "slush" figure at $971,595.

Edward H. Wright, negro member of the Illinois commerce commission, which regulates public utilities, caused the first disturbance of the inquiry by refusing to tell Chairman Reed how much he collected and spent in the second ward to nominate Colonel Frank L. Smith, the republican senatorial candidate and the Crowe-Barrett county ticket.

Reed "Riled" Reed was obviously riled by the negro, who lolled back in the witness chair and tapped on the table top with a large diamond ring glistering on the middle finger of his left hand.

"Well, we'll see later whether you will answer or not," Reed said, after he had declined to tell the committee anything about the finances of his ward. "Meantime please try to refresh your memory on these other matters."

Reed had questioned Wright about the work of the commerce commission and whether it had ever given any rate or fare increases to Samuel Insull's public utility companies. Wright couldn't remember, and Reed said:

"I rather thought some of these facts might have stuck in your head." Insull, the "man who could not lose," because he gave large sums of money to all the leading candidates in the primary, is to be recalled by the committee tomorrow. Insull's contributions to date total $193,735.17.

Insull Contributes Colonel Smith, who is chairman of the commerce commission, received more than $125,000 from Insull for his senatorial campaign, but in questioning Wright, Chairman Reed failed to connect this contribution with a pro-Insull decision of the state commerce commission.

Wright got a big laugh from the spectators when he described his work as a ward boss. "Did you have meetings at which you asked the people to vote a certain way?" Reed asked. "I didn't ask them, I told them," Wright said. "They do what I say in the second ward."

Charles B. Barrett, treasurer of the Crowe-Barrett faction of the local republicans added the first new "slush" figures of the day when he testified that his organization collected and spent $175,000. Not all of this went to the support of Colonel Smith. Some of it was used in campaigning for the county ticket.

Barrett said his group favored Senator William B. McKinley for re-nomination at first but had to switch when McKinley voted against American adherence to the world court. The group already had adopted an "America first" platform before the world court came up in the senate.

Reed drew from Barrett that his action had received $10,000 from Insull, thus devastating the utilities magnate in his attempt to withhold from the committee his contributions to the county campaign.

Primary expenditures as disclosed by the committee are now as follows: For McKinley $358,616.72; for Smith $287,282.70; for Deneen county ticket $129,865.67; for Crowe-Barrett county ticket and Smith $175,000.

George Brennan, the democratic senatorial nominee $20,841.42. Totals $971,605.91. All of the above items do not have direct bearing on the senatorial contests but Chairman Reed has insisted in learning even the amounts in the county campaigns.

During the morning session Senator Reed and LaFollette devoted their attention to Senator McKinley's unsuccessful campaign for re-nomination. From Henry I. Green, McKinley's personal attorney, they learned that the senator financed his own campaign and that it cost approximately $350,000. Green charged that the Crowe-Barrett group in Chicago deserted McKinley because of a lack of financial support and went over to Smith.

He also denied that McKinley's huge contributions to small universities had been an attempt to "buy" their presidents as campaign speakers. Andrew Russell, who was McKinley's campaign manager, told of receiving money from Green and of the work he did. Russell's testimony added little to the investigation except that he gave the names of other workers who are to be called later by the committee.

Reed intimated that the investigation might adjourn this week when he asked several of the witnesses to mail him records at his home in Kansas City, so that he would get them Monday. Senator King of Utah, another member of the committee, is to join Reed and LaFollette at the inquiry tomorrow.

HYPHEN COSTS $100,000

LEIPZIG, Germany, July 28.—A legal battle over a hyphen has cost approximately $100,000. Steinway & Sons, piano manufacturers of New York, London and Hamburg sought to enjoin a rival firm of piano manufacturers, the Grottrian-Steinweg Co. of Brunswick, from dropping the hyphen from its name. The court supported Steinway & Son's contention that Grottrian-Steinweg Co. must always insert the missing hyphen between its two names.

REED BECOMES BORAH OF DEMOS

FIERY MISSOURIAN MENTIONED FOR PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATION

By RAYMOND CLAPPER United News Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON, July 28.—Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, who is the principal figure in the senate primary investigation at Chicago, is rapidly becoming the Borah of the democratic party.

He is receiving presidential mention to an extent that would have seemed preposterous a few years ago when he was denounced by Woodrow Wilson and was thrown out of the democratic convention at San Francisco because of his opposition to Wilson.

Although he has been in the senate for 15 years, and conspicuous most of that time, Reed is just now doing his first big piece of constructive work in directing the primary campaign investigation. He has been a brilliant debater and has made strong men cringe from the withering fire of his tongue. But he has done little else. He has been as lonely a fighter on the democratic side as Borah has been among the republicans. From the early period of war when he began attacking Herbert Hoover, food administrator, until now Reed has been usually in the minority, fighting woman suffrage, the league of nations, the world court, the clause in a few years ago the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill.

Reed's big act will come in the session beginning in December, 1927, when William S. Vare of Pennsylvania appears to take his seat. On the basis of evidence obtained during the recent investigation, Reed will direct the fight to exclude Vare. That will place him in a conspicuous role in the spring of 1928 when the democratic party will be casting about for a sizeable person to be its presidential candidate. He may be in the same position a swas Senator Walsh of Montana, just before the 1924 convention when his work in uncovering the Teapot Dome scandal would have inevitably made him the party's candidate except for the fact that he was a Roman catholic. Walsh could have had the vice presidential nomination by acclamation but he refused to be considered.

Farm leaders working for the McNary-Haugen farm bill brought pressure on Reed seeking to win him because of his power as a debater. Reed excused himself from the Pennsylvania primary fund investigation one afternoon just as the bill was about to be voted on and went on the senate floor. He sent his secretary out for several statistical reports explaining that he was going to speak on the farm bill in 15 minutes. The secretary did not know which side Reed would take. Within a few minutes he delivered one of the severest arraignments of the bill that was heard during the whole debate. To the democrats who asked him to support the bill so that Coolidge would be put to the embarrassment of having to veto it, Reed scornfully replied: "When my opponent has a bad case the most effective thing I can do is to expose it, not to assist him in realizing his dangerous ends."

"Sylvia"

By NINON ROMAINE

CHAPTER VI

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

Sylvia Wood, young bride and art student of Greenwich Village, begins the narrative of her first year of married life. She must set down every emotional detail, her physician tells her, as a form of psycho-analysis to lift a "traumatic shock" suffered in an automobile accident. She tells of meeting Bob Wood, of painter father plays the role of matchmaker. One day six of the girl's paintings disappear. She is heartbroken until a month later word comes that she has been awarded a $2,500 scholarship to study art. Her father had secretly sent her pictures to an art exhibition. Although it will mean a postponement of their marriage, Bob bids his sweetheart go to New York to study.

At dawn on a May morning Sylvia Reed lifted the shade in her sleeping car window and had her first glimpse of the Hudson river. In two or three hours she would be in New York, and the thought sent a thrill through the girl. She dressed as quickly as she could in the restricted quarters of her berth. She didn't intend to miss a single detail of her first journey to the metropolis. At Harmon, where the train stopped to exchange its locomotive for the electric tractor that was to take her into the city the girl felt a slight sickness from excitement. "I wonder if Mr. Hutchens will be at the station," she said to herself, "and what he will be like?" Henry Hutchens was a friend of her father's. They had first known each other during their college days in Paris, and when the opportunity came that would take Sylvia to New York to study painting it was to Henry Hutchens that Ivan Reed sent his daughter. Sylvia suddenly felt and overwhelmed sadness. There had been something in Bob Wood's eyes when he had said goodbye at the Phillipsburg which his assumption of cheer failed to mask. "It will be only for a little while, Bob, dear," she had said, trying to control a quivering of her lips. "Just a little while, and I won't stay if I can't stand to be away from you."

"You'll be a brave girl and learn everything they can teach you about painting," Sylvia's Bob had replied. "And I'll come on to New York during my vacation." And then suddenly Sylvia was brought out of her reverie by the knowledge that she was in New York. She saw the high cliffs with big buildings on the heights, and in another moment she was looking down little canyons of streets filled with dwellers abstruse with the job of getting to work. "New York!" breathed Sylvia. A few minutes later and she was whisked underground and almost before she knew it the train had stopped at the Grand Central station. The girl gave her two bags to a red cap porter and threaded her way with the crowd to the gates opening into the concourse of that cathedral of transportation. She scanned the faces of those waiting but saw no one who could possibly be Mr. Hutchens. She felt strangely athrill in the great concourse as she gazed up at the high vaulted dome of the terminal building, lit with the glowing stars. "I'll wait a few minutes. Perhaps Mr. Hutchens has been delayed," the girl decided, and she directed the porter to place her bags near the information kiosk in the center of the concourse. "Or perhaps he was away and didn't get daddy's telegram," she added, because Ivan Reed with characteristic impracticability had telegraphed his old friend only the day before asking him to meet his daughter at the station. While Sylvia was trying to decide whether to telephone the art school or go to a hotel at once, she heard someone calling her name. "I reckon that's your party, Miss," he said. A tall, dark girl, approached. "Are you Sylvia Reed?" she asked. "Yes," Sylvia answered. "I'm Nell Hutchens. Father is in Washington, but mother telephoned me to meet you. She couldn't come. There you things? We'll get a porter and you are to come to my studio if you haven't any other plans. Have you?" "No," Sylvia admitted. "I haven't. It's awfully good of you to bother. If you'll just tell me of a good hotel I'll go there. But thanks a lot."

"Hotel your grandpa," Nell Hutchens retorted. "You're to come with me. Had your breakfast? It doesn't matter. We can have another unless you're dieting. Are you?" "No," Sylvia smiled. "On the way down Fifth avenue in a taxicab the girl from Ohio felt transported into a new world, a world of bustle and speed and complexity. And today she was a part of it, one of the units making up the throbbing metropolis. "That's the Public Library," Miss Hutchens pointed out as they took the corner at 42nd street, and a minute later, she pointed out one of the big stores. "It's a great place for clothes," she said. "Dad lets me have a charge account there. And that's the Waldorf-Astoria. When they built it they thought it was the last word in hotels."

Nell Hutchens rattled on. "Up there ahead of us is the Arch. That's Washington square. Right here one the left is the Salamangundi club. I'll ask dad to take you to an exhibition there some day. Artists' club you know." The taxi swung round the park and up a narrow street. "There next to the corner," the young New Yorker called to the taxi driver, and to Sylvia she said, "We are home. Let me take one of your bags."

Sylvia writing in Memorial hospital nearly a year later lived that day it over gain. She was in Greenwich Village at last, but she did not know it until Nell Hutchens told her. And it was in Nell Hutchens's little studio apartment on the fourth floor that she passed most of the next year of her life. (To be Continued.)

SICKLY, PEEVISH CHILDREN

Children suffering from intestinal worms are cross, restless and unhealthy. There are other symptoms, however. If the child is pale, has dark rings under the eyes, bad breath and takes no interest in play, it is almost a certainty that worms are eating away its vitality. The surest remedy for worms is White's Cream Vermifuge. It is positive destruction to the worms but harmless to the child. Price 35c. Sold by HALSEY HALL DRUG CO.

Are You a Nervous, Irritable Woman?

AMBITIOUS AMBROSE "I wonder if Mr. Hutchens will be at the station," she said to herself, "and what he will be like?" Henry Hutchens was a friend of her father's. They had first known each other during their college days in Paris, and when the opportunity came that would take Sylvia to New York to study painting it was to Henry Hutchens that Ivan Reed sent his daughter. Sylvia suddenly felt and overwhelmed sadness. There had been something in Bob Wood's eyes when he had said goodbye at the Phillipsburg which his assumption of cheer failed to mask. "It will be only for a little while, Bob, dear," she had said, trying to control a quivering of her lips. "Just a little while, and I won't stay if I can't stand to be away from you."

PEOPLE AVOID YOU IF YOU ARE PIMPLY

A boy or girl may have ever so perfect a face, neck and pose, but if even one little pimple, blotch, bump or red spot shows, it ruins their whole appearance. You know how true this is, because you just naturally avoid people whose appearance is not pleasing. These things are no longer to be endured, however, because thousands of people are getting rid of the worst and most stubborn cases of such skin diseases easily and quickly by using Black and White Ointment, and Skin Soap. It acts like magic on eczema, ringworm, lice, "breaking-out," etc. Dealers everywhere are recommending Black and White Ointment and Skin Soap, now they are economically priced in liberal size packages. The 50c size Ointment contains three times as much as the liberal 25c size.

D. 1926, in a suit numbered on the docket of said court as No. 2685, wherein Bryan Ford is Plaintiff, and Lela Ford is Defendant, and said petition alleging and for cause of action plaintiff respects to the court that he is married and has been for a period of more than twelve months prior to exhibiting the petition herein and actual bona fide inhabitant of the State of Texas, and has resided in said County of Lubbock for at least six months next preceding the filing of this suit; that on or about the 28th day of February, A. D. 1925, in Callahan County, Texas, plaintiff was according to the forms of law lawfully married to defendant then a single woman about sixteen years of age by the name of Lela Wriston; that plaintiff at once, defrauded said marriage as a fraud perpetrated by defendant, mutual or otherwise, and her step-father, and her mother against his will, and they never lived together as husband and wife and never cohabited together as husband and wife, sexually or otherwise; that plaintiff was never in the company of this young woman, when other people were not present, but twice in his life prior to the above alleged date, and that was on one occasion at a social gathering of young people in the city of Baird, Texas, where plaintiff and defendant both resided at that time, and both were in attendance at this social gathering, and when the purposes of the occasion had terminated, and the attendees were leaving for their homes, some friend asked this plaintiff if he would see this defendant to her home in his automobile and it being agreeable she was carried to within about one block of her home she told him to stop which he did and she signaled from the car and he drove away; and on another

DAILY MARKETS

New York Finance

By United News.
NEW YORK, July 28.—This morning's news on Steel and General Motors gave the market the needed background and operations for background and operations for the advance went forward aggressively. Steel earned more than enough during the first six months to cover the full year's dividend on the common.

General Motors howed $17.33 per share for the first six months as against $9.02 for the same period last year.

This morning's power dissipated ideas regarding the inability of the country to absorb automobiles at the rate maintained last year.

Mack, Hudson, Pierce Arrow and other leading motor stocks rose in response to General Motors but the big rise, as usual, was made by General Motors itself. This issue broke through all previous high records and added more than seven points to the previous closing basis.

In addition to the net of more than $8 per share on steel common, the street was well satisfied with the weekly trade reviews. Steel operations have risen from 85 to 85 per cent on the part of the leading interests, according to the Iron Age, while the undertone, is good.

While there is no indication of any immediate trend toward higher prices occasion thereafter plaintiff and defendant incidentally met on the street in the city of Baird, and after a brief conversation she told him that she was on her way to the home of some friend in the city some distance away and he proposed to take her to this place in his car and she accepted and he drove her to this place, she alighted and he drove away; that plaintiff met the defendant on many other occasions at social gatherings of the young people of their neighborhood and often talked and conversed with her as he did with other young women on such occasions, and they were social friends, but absolutely nothing more; that he never did at any time or place broach the subject of marriage to her directly or indirectly, nor she to him; that the subject of marriage was never talked or discussed in any of those gatherings, when plaintiff and defendant were both present, except in a jocular fun making way for the amusement and jollity of those present, and never was the subject of the marriage, or probable marriage, of this plaintiff with defendant, mentioned or suggested, in fun or otherwise, in any of those social gatherings, or by groups of friends outside of such gatherings, when plaintiff was present, or in his hearing; that plaintiff never had improper relations with defendant before said marriage other than as herebefore said marriage other than as herebefore alleged, and has had no relations with her since said marriage except at one time they incidentally met several months after said marriage, passed a few words in which he told her plainly and emphatically that he would not be her husband; that there never was any contract or agreement by and between the plaintiff and defendant, mutual or otherwise, that they would get married to each other and become husband and wife; that on or about the said 28th day of February, A. D. 1925, the plaintiff was forced into said marriage against his will and was compelled to assent thereto at the time it was consummated by the combined force of defendant, her mother and her stepfather, brought to bear upon him in such a manner that he feared for his own life and personal safety if he refused to assent thereto; that plaintiff never ratified or confirmed said marriage in any manner or form, and did immediately and does now denounce said marriage as a fraud perpetrated and imposed on him against his own will.

The pryer of said petition is that plaintiff on final hearings has judgment dissolving said marriage relations and for special and general relief.

Herein fail not, and have you before said court, at its aforesaid next regular term, this writ with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same.

Given under my hand and the Seal of said court, at office in Lubbock, Texas, this 14 day of July, A. D. 1926.

NAME FORD NOT SOLE PROPERTY OF MOTOR CO.
WASHINGTON, July 28.—The United States Patent Office, in a decision just made public, has declined the application of the Ford Motor Company to cancel the registration by John A. McAdoo, of Charlotte, North Carolina, of the word "Ford" as a trade mark for cigars, cigarettes and tobacco.

The decision held that a corporate name may be registered as a trade mark when used on goods of different descriptive properties from those of the corporation, and that while the mark "Ford" may not be the exclusive property of the registrant, yet he has the right to use it upon the goods specified in his registration.

ASK REGULATION OF NITROGLYCERINE

ROTARY, HEARING OF ITS DANGERS, SUGGESTS TRAFFIC BE CONTROLLED

Nitroglycerine was the chief item on the program of the Rotary club yesterday noon. Dr. J. T. Hutchinson, illustrating his lecture with a two-ounce phial of liquid which he declared was the powerful explosive, told how dangerous it was, explained how it was made and to what use it was put, and pointed out the necessity for regulating traffic in nitroglycerine through towns. He gave instances of fatal explosions of nitroglycerine trucks.

While his address was serious, he played a practical joke on the lunchers to impress on them how dangerous the "soup" is. After telling them that the liquid in the phial was enough to blow them all to bits, he tossed it to S. E. Cone, who was in charge of the meeting. Cone dropped it, and another Rotarian who was in one of the deal fired a pistol. The explosion of the gun as the bottle of harmless water broke sent the Rotary club scattering to all parts of the room.

Roscoe Wilson then suggested that the attention of the city commission be called to the passage of nitroglycerine trucks through Lubbock, and asked to take some regulatory measures to protect the citizens of Lubbock from possible fatal explosions. In addition to the discussion of the above matters, the club heard Dean Dutton of Oklahoma predict universal peace through the medium of Rotarianism, and the work of similar luncheon clubs, in the spirit of brotherhood.

Presidio Cotton Crop Looks Good

MARFA, Texas, July 28.—There continues to be a splendid outlook for a fair harvest of Presidio county cotton, according to James E. Casner, who owns one of the largest irrigated cotton farms in southern Presidio county. Mr. Casner said this morning that there were no insects to speak of and that the grasshoppers had disappeared, and he anticipated a fair crop, averaging not less than three-quarters of a bale to the acre. He thinks picking will be under way in Presidio county the latter part of August or the first of September.

14-Year Old Boy Arrested; Forges Check On Hankins

Cold check artists are not all grown-up—some of them are mere boys.

Police officers arrested a 14-year-old boy Tuesday afternoon and lodged him in the city jail. The boy did not make any effort to clear himself, but admitted signing the name of J. H. Hankins to a check. Of course the signature was of a very doubtful looking nature and the boy was unable to cash it. However, that was no fault of his.

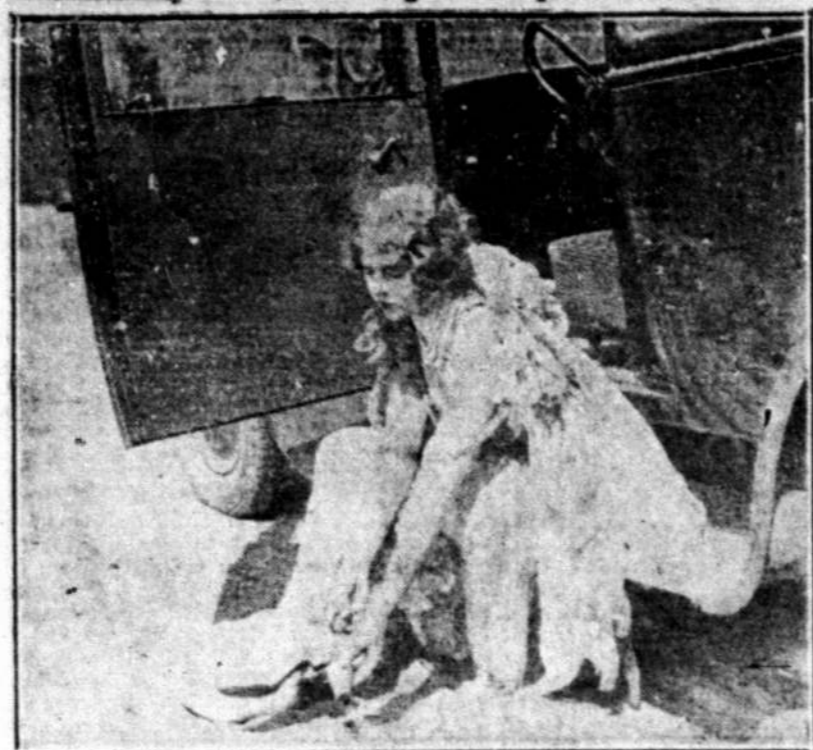

Officers were called and the boy was arrested. After spending the night in jail he was given a talk by members of the force and told to go back to his home in Cochran county. This he did.

Court House Lawn Advertising City

While there are many Lubbock citizens who scarcely know there is a court house lawn in this city, others prize it as a beauty spot. So far as is known there is no other lawn on the Plains that is more beautiful and well kept.

Trees are green, well trimmed and cared for, and the grass evenly mowed is a wonderful sight to gaze upon. Trees and grass cost money, but they are worth it. More than one visitor has spoken words of praise concerning the court house lawn.

ENGLISH MAIL CARRIERS DEMAND LIGHTER HAT

LONDON, July 28.—English postmen are demanding a new style of hat.

The present official headgear of the Post Office Department, a medium between a fireman's helmet and the cap of an ancient piece of armor, has become antiquated, the postmen's union declares.

The union is petitioning the Department to adopt a hat similar to that worn by mailmen in the United States.

The bone in his right arm was broken in two places and fragments of the crushed bone were driven through his arm.

Physicians say it is one of the most extraordinary fractures they have ever seen, though the patient is resting well at this time.
