Minority rights groups vow to sue MCHD

Hospital directors' support of redistricting bill questioned

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Following unanimous action by hospital district directors Thursday, Midland minority rights groups vowed to sue the Midland County Hospital District over a proposed voter redistricting plan that they say fails to address their wish for greater board representation.

"Our attorneys will be contacting you," said League of United Latin American Citizens past president Edia Hernandez, whose organization — along with the Black Advisory Council — believes that the hospital district board should be expanded to seven members all elected from single-member districts.

"These have been empty meetings," Dorothy Smith, a Black Advisory Council member, told the board. "I think you've already made your decision. It's a waste of time, energy...you're just making us wait longer."

"We feel that your board should have considered the consequences of your actions," said Ms. Hernandez.

The actions to which Ms. Hernandez referred was a 5-0 vote supporting a state bill that would clear the way for expansion of the board from five to seven members, but did not clearly address the single-member district issue.

Board members contended that the bill is no more than the first step to enlarging and diversifying the board.

By law, a change in the board's election procedures cannot occur without authorization by the Legislature in bill form.

The board in March voted to support a redistricting effort based on a bill — filed March 13 — that called for a 4-3 election plan. Under that measure, four members would be elected from single member districts and three members would be elected at large.

But the board Thursday changed positions on what bill to support as the way to implement the redistricting plan. Thursday's vote was in support of a second bill that new director Barry Williamson said "doesn't fix us in any single position."

Rather than the initial bill's wording that stated a concrete four single-member and three at-large position system of election, wording on the substitute bill states: "The board, on its own motion, may order that the directors are to be elected from single-member districts or that not fewer than 50 percent of the directors are to be elected from single-member districts with the remaining directors to be elected from the district at large."

If everything past the "or" in that wording has been omitted, LULAC and other concerned attendees at the meeting would have been happy.

But the phrasing after the word "or" leaves the door open for hospital directors to revert back to their original, and much-opposed, 4-3 plan.

Currently the board's five members all are elected on an at-large basis.

Board members stressed the bill calls for a public hearing to be held before the board made any election decisions.

Sponsor may drop his fight for Texaco bill

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The sponsor of a bill that would save Texaco from posting a $12 billion bond to continue its legal battle with Pennzoil said Thursday he will probably give up trying to push it through the Legislature.

"The biggest issue now is whether or not, based on what's happening in (Texaco's) bankruptcy, whether it'd do any good," said Sen. Carl Parker, who spent most of Tuesday shepherding the bill through a Senate committee. "I'm not inclined to wage a major war unless I am satisfied that it will do major good."

If the bill becomes law, Texaco would have to put up no more than $1 billion to maintain its appeals. Company spokesman Paul Weeditz said Texaco officials "absolutely" want Parker to continue working on the bill that they see as their only chance to escape bankruptcy.

"Our position is unchanged at this point," Weeditz said. "We cannot come out of Chapter 11 (bankruptcy) without this legislation. We certainly want to come out as soon as possible."

Texaco filed for protection from the bankruptcy court April 12, three days after the bill was introduced in the Legislature and one day before a state appeals court hearing to determine what security it must post to continue its appeals.

A Houston jury in 1985 awarded Pennzoil a record $10.53 billion judgment against Texaco, ruling that Texaco had wrongfully persuaded Getty Oil to break a merger contract with Pennzoil and instead merge with Texaco. A state appeals court reduced the award to $8.53 billion, but the judgment has grown to about $12 billion with interest.

Under current Texas law, Texaco must put up a bond equal to the amount of the judgment while it appeals the decision. Alfred E. DeCrane, Texaco chairman of the board, said posting a $12 billion bond would "dismember the company."

Texans among 20 honored for heroism

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Rev. Erwin H. Babb says heroism is something just done, not thought about in advance.

"It's not something like, 'Oh, there's something I can do and I'll be a hero.' In the situation, the need comes to your mind rather than the cost to you at the time," says Babb, a Baptist minister from Edinburg, Texas.

For helping save an 8-month-old boy from a burning car, Babb was one of 17 Americans and three Canadians honored Thursday by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission for risking their lives trying to save others.

Four people died in their rescue efforts. Among them was Kelli Lea Brooks, 13, of Seminole, Texas, who died after successfully saving a 3-year-old boy from being hit by an approaching tractor-trailer truck on Dec. 17, 1985.

The Carnegie heroes or their survivors each received a medal and a $2,500 cash award. The commission, founded in 1904 by industrialist Andrew Carnegie, has honored 7,105 people for heroism in the United States and Canada.

Babb was one of two men honored for the rescue of Jarred F. Preston, who was trapped inside a burning car at an intersection in Tyler, Texas, on March 27, 1986. The other man, the late Richard W. Stork, 35, of Tyler, also helped to free the boy.

Babb, 37, said Thursday he was stopped at a traffic light when the car in which the boy was riding with his mother and a sibling was struck from behind by another car.

As gasoline from the car's fuel tank spilled onto the highway, the mother and child escaped and Babb opened the passenger door and moved to grab the boy.

Budget effort may require July special session

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Claiming that lawmakers are moving too slowly toward balancing the state budget by June 1, Gov. Bill Clements Thursday indicated he would have to call a special legislative session in July.

But Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby called July 1 a "drop-dead date for having a balanced budget in place" to keep the state from shutting down in September. The current regular session ends, by law, at midnight June 1.

"I think we can solve these problems in the next 30 days," Clements said. "But it's going to take some real head knocking, some real honest-to-God, get-down-to-brass-tacks to get that done. I haven't seen any evidence of that yet. I really haven't."

House Speaker Gib Lewis called Clements' warnings premature. "If the governor will cooperate with the Legislature, we will finish in the next four weeks," he said.

The Senate on April 13 passed a $40 billion state budget for the 1988-1989 fiscal cycle. On Monday, the House is scheduled to debate the $39.4 billion spending plan the Appropriations Committee approved earlier this week. Clements says he will veto any budget that exceeds $36.9 billion.

The governor told reporters he probably wouldn't call a special session in June because he has 20 days after the regular session ends to sign or veto bills. "I'm going to be hard at work, and I want them to go home, and I want them to listen to their constituency and see what's going on back there," he said.

Waiting until July, Hobby said, would put the onus of a major fiscal crisis in Clements' lap. "If a balanced budget — meaning a tax bill and an appropriations bill — is not in place by July the first, the treasurer does not have time to arrange for the interim financing...necessary to keep state government operating after Sept. 1," Hobby said.

"So were the governor to not call a timely special session, if in fact he precipitates one, he would cause a shutdown of state services including public schools, prisons, hospitals, all the other functions of state government."

Clements disagreed, saying: "As long as we get a budget certified by Aug. 1, I think we can handle our problems all right."

"He's wrong, trust me," Hobby said.

Clements, who has been touring the state in support of his spending restraints, asked how Hobby would finance his $40 billion budget. "Who are you going to tax to get that $3 billion?" he asked. "Are you going to raise the sales tax to 10 percent."

Two more Texas banks close; '87 casualties number 23

Associated Press

Texas is teetering on the brink of another record-setting year for bank failures now that two more have collapsed from overwhelming loan losses, officials say.

One of those banks that failed Thursday — Unitedbank-Houston, with $218 million in assets — was the largest to be shut down in the nation this year, state banking officials said.

With the additional closing of Peoples State Bank in the Panhandle town of Turkey, the state's depressed economy has claimed 23 banks this year in Texas and edged the national total to 71. The state set a national record of 26 failures last year, breaking its 1985 mark of 12.

State Banking Commissioner Kenneth W. Littlefield closed Peoples State Bank and Unitedbank-Houston and turned both over to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. for sale or liquidation.

The collapse of Unitedbank-Houston is the largest this year and second-largest in Texas behind the October 1983 failure of the $1.4 billion First National Bank in Midland, FDIC spokesman Alan Whitney said.

The Houston bank — in no way connected to Midland's United Bank — had $161.1 million in 13,400 insured accounts, said Frank D. Norris, FDIC closing manager. About $3 million was not insured, most of it interest on jumbo certificates of deposits.

A recent bank examination revealed the bank was "insolvent by the tune of about $7 million," Littlefield told a press conference Thursday afternoon at the downtown Houston bank.

The examination also showed severe deterioration in the bank's loan portfolio, he said. Efforts to recapitalize were not successful.

"Huge loan losses, coupled with a mounting deficit from bank operations, rendered the institution insolvent," Littlefield said. "Loan concentrations for purposes of residential and commercial real estate development and construction and bank stock financing are major investment losses."

Whitney said officials were working to find another bank to assume Unitedbank-Houston. The negotiations included several banks, but he declined to provide any specifics.

"There's no way to predict what success we're going to have," Whitney said, adding that officials expect to make an announcment on their efforts later today.

Council considering private prison plans

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Midland City Council members are considering bringing a private federal prison to the Midland Regional Airport area in hopes of boosting the local economy, Mayor Carroll Thomas said today.

The council met in executive session Thursday to discuss a proposal by a Brady contractor, Ed Davenport, who would construct a maximum security jail, Thomas said.

The prison would house up to 512 prisoners and employ up to 125 people, Thomas said.

The jail would cost between $8 and $10 million to construct and generate an annual operating budget of about $4 million, he said.

Part of the agreement calls for the city to donate 15 acres of land about eight city blocks northwest of Midland Regional Airport, near Windecker Hangar.

The U.S. Department of Justice would pay the city to house prisoners and the city would retain up to $170,000 a year and funnel the rest of the funds to the private contractor," Thomas said.

The city was offered the proposal about a month ago and considered operating the prison jointly with the county, but county officials declined to participate, Thomas said.

County Judge William Ahders and Commissioner Durward Wright told Thomas they have no problems with the federal detention center that would house sentenced prisoners, Thomas said.

Ahders and Wright were unavailable for comment this morning. The county is also considering building a federal detention center that would house pre-trial prisoners, Thomas said.

Two council members reached this morning said they are in favor of the proposal.

Councilman Gordon Marcum said, "It's an excellent industry for our community. It's a clean industry. You basically will not even know it's there."

Panel favors 65 mph speed limit

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texans should be allowed to drive 65 mph on rural interstates in Texas, the highway commission decided this morning, and the higher speed limit should be in effect by next weekend.

The State Highway and Public Transportation Commission, responding to a new federal law allowing states to increase speed limits, voted unanimously to raise the limit to 65 mph on 2,400 miles of the the state's 75,000 miles of interstates.

Gov. Bill Clements, who has said he supports the higher speed limit, must agree with the commission's decision before the law takes effect. If Clements signs a proclamation within a week, the 65 mph law will take effect next Saturday.

Tractor trailers will be allowed to travel at 60 mph under the new rules. Highway Commission Chairman Robert Dedman said crews will begin installing 65 mph signs next week.

Although some groups argued that the higher speed limit will result in more traffic deaths, highway department staff said statistics show that during the last several years, Texans have been driving faster while the death rate on highways has decreased.

Abortion-regulation bill clears Senate committee

Lyon

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislation attempting to regulate late-term abortions has cleared a Senate committee, but the original bill's sponsor says the amended version may violate the U.S. Constitution.

The Senate Committee on Health and Human Services Thursday approved a bill that says a physician's medical license can be revoked if he performs an abortion during the third trimester of pregnancy.

Sen. Ted Lyon's original bill made it a felony for doctors to perform abortions on a fetus capable of living outside the mother's womb, except when necessary to preserve the mental or physical health of the mother.

An amendment from Sen. Hugh Parmer Thursday dropped the criminal penalties and inserted a provision that would allow the Texas Board of Medical Examiners to revoke the medical license of a physician if the abortion was performed during the third trimester.

But Lyon, D-Rockwall, argues that the provision defines when a fetus is viable, and "the Supreme Court says you can't define viability."

Parmer, D-Fort Worth, defended his amendment, saying it is "a backdoor approach to reaching the third trimester issue, and it's an approach never ruled on. Any statements that it's unconstitutional are clearly just crystal ball-gazing and not reality."

Despite the constitutional question, Lyon called the committee approval of the bill a victory for anti-abortion groups.

"Carrying this bill was like wrestling with an 800-pound gorilla. Every time I grabbed hold of it, it has thrown me up against the wall," Lyon said.

The bill was approved 7-1 with Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, voting no. The amendment — cosponsored by Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville; Sen. Eddie Bernice Johnson, D-Dallas; and Washington — was approved 5-3.

The deletion of a provision that would have assessed up to a year in prison and a $200 fine weakens the original bill, Lyon said.

"Do we want to pass a tremendously weakened bill, which would then give members of the House and Senate the ability not to have to vote on abortion again or do we want to stick with a bill that makes it a crime?" Lyon asked.

Parmer's amendment provides that medical licenses could be revoked, suspended or canceled.

"Instead of making it a criminal act, it places it where it more appropriately belongs; it makes it a violation of the Medical Practices Act," Parmer said.

The Texas Abortion Rights Action League said recently in a news conference that doctors would stop performing abortions because of the threat of criminal penalties.

"I think it is more appropriate to deal with the medical practice in the Medical Practices Act and not the penal code," said Pam Fridrich, the league's executive director.

But one anti-abortionist said Parmer's punishment is "not a penalty that fits the crime."

Funds' diversion doesn't bother Channell's contributors

DALLAS (AP) — Texans who donated to an endowment fund and two political action committees led by fund-raiser Carl Channell said they aren't upset that money from the fund provided military help to the Nicaraguan Contras.

"I just believed and had confidence in that man (Channell), and still do, and knew he would use it to help those people," said Mary Jo Pentecost, a rancher in the West Texas town of Robert Lee.

She contributed $3,500 to the PACs and an undisclosed sum to the endowment fund.

Channell pleaded guilty Wednesday in Washington to one count of conspiracy to defraud the federal government by using money from his tax-exempt National Endowment for the Preservation of Liberty to provide military help to the Nicaraguan rebels.

The money was supposed to be used to promote conservative foreign policy goals through public education.

The fund was also an umbrella for two political action committees: the American Conservative Trust and the Anti-Terrorism American Committee. The charge against Channell did not mention either committee.

"I didn't know if anything I ever gave went for arms or not," Ms. Pentecost said. "I would have been glad for it to."

Some contributors to the endowment fund said they support the Contras, and they didn't ask how their donations were spent.

"You know, it didn't matter," said John Ramsey Jr., a Wichita Falls geologist who said he gave more than $100,000 to the endowment fund and another, unrelated fund.

"They needed the money," said Ramsey, who says he knows Channell and has gone to the White House for a briefing on Central America. "There were a lot of things to use it for, and I didn't care...If I could have done it legally, I would have given it for military weapons. That doesn't bother me."

Maxwell Clampitt, president of Dallas-based Clampitt Paper Co., said he contributed to several conservative organizations. Federal Election Commission reports as of January show Clampitt gave $200 to the American Conservative Trust in 1985 and $1,000 to the PAC in 1986.

"I've got so many people coming in here for donations I don't remember them all," Clampitt said. "At the time I know I was convinced it was a good cause."

Students won't be punished for using Spanish

TORNILLO (AP) — Authorities have junked a plan to punish children for speaking Spanish at school after state and federal agencies said it violated civil rights.

The local Board of Trustees also scrapped a requirement that teachers in the Tornillo Independent School District speak only English to students, school superintendent Francis Brooks said Thursday.

"The Justice Department just said there was a chance it could violate civil rights, but they recommended we withdrew that action," Brooks said.

Two TEA officials from the accreditation unit were in Tornillo Wednesday and spoke to Brooks before the board held a special session Wednesday night. Brooks also presented recommendations from the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division.

"This thing has been blown out of proportion," Brooks said. "We didn't intend for publicity to get out like it did."

Brooks said he received a scathing telegram from Ruben Bonilla Jr., chairman of the Corpus Christi-based Mexican-American Democrats of Texas.

"I filed that complaint" with the Justice Department, Bonilla said. "They (Tornillo school district officials) like their accreditation more than they like their prejudices."

Since the board's action became known last week, Cable News Network, ABC-TV and area news media have descended on Tornillo, an agricultural community of 1,100 residents some 40 miles from El Paso.

With the local board's blessing, Brooks sent 370 letters April 22, one for each child in the school district, asking parents to discipline children reported speaking Spanish at school.

The letter, which parents were asked to sign, also said the agreement was voluntary and that parents or children who did not take part in the plan would not suffer negative consequences.

In his telegram to Brooks last week, Bonilla said he was "shocked by your intimidating letter to parents" and demanded the plan be scrapped.

"Extend your campaign of English reform by changing the name of the city Tornillo to Screwdriver, which more aptly describes your efforts at driving a wedge between" Mexican-Americans and their fellow Texans, the telegram read. Tornillo means "screw" in Spanish.

Brooks said the letter was intended to make Tornillo children learn English faster and improve grades. About 95 percent of Tornillo children are Hispanic, and 40 percent speak only Spanish and do poorly in standardized tests, Brooks said.

"I...personally apologize to all of the Hispanic community that I have offended," Brooks said. "I also thank all those persons nationwide who understood what we were trying to do and called or wrote."

Out of 167 Tornillo families with children in school, 52 had signed the letter by Wednesday. Brooks said he received calls of support from people in Oregon, Washington and Illinois.

Mexican-American children in Texas once were paddled for speaking Spanish in school.

The TEA's guidelines prescribe that the agency look into similar actions by school districts, said TEA spokeswoman Terri Anderson.

'Trashman' big supporter of recycling

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — Trashman, the clownishly costumed hero of this northern Illinois city's recycling program, rides around in a polka-dot garbage truck and pays at least $1,000 for garbage without the right stuff.

Folks elsewhere want to know more about the sneakered crusader, according to Trashman's alter ego, adman Todd Cratty.

"I get calls constantly," Cratty said Monday. "New Orleans may be doing something like it and we even had the Japanese interested in it. They sent out a television crew to do a story."

Cratty, 23, said he created Trashman last May to personalize Rockford's call for voluntary recycling of newspapers and aluminum cans.

The weekly $1,000 prize is awarded when garbage from an address picked by computer contains neither item. If the household picked that week loses, the money is added to the next week's pot.

Since the program began, 15 households have won a total of $39,000, said city sanitation superintendent Tom Tullock.

About half the households in this city of 150,000 now regularly separate items that can be recycled from the rest of the trash, said Cratty.

Fungi drawing attention, essential to woodlands

MEDFORD, Ore. (AP) — For years they were ignored or considered a threat, but these days life is jolly for mycorrhizae.

The microscopic soil fungi have become champions of the forest, hailed by scientists and forest managers as essential to healthy woodlands. Forestry practices are being altered to accommodate the fungi, which have been shown to link tree roots in a complex interdependent web.

Without mycorrhizae (pronounced mike-o-rise-ee), seedlings turn sick and pale, reforestation fails and clearcuts stay bare.

"Mycorrhizae are one of the hottest topics in forestry," says Mike Amaranthus, a soil scientist for the Siskiyou National Forest in southern Oregon. Amaranthus and others at Oregon State University in Corvallis are among the leaders in mycorrhizal research, regularly presenting talks on their latest findings.

They have drawn the attention of forest managers throughout the world, who have traveled to southern Oregon and Oregon State to see for themselves the latest mycorrhizal experiments.

For Amaranthus, who is doing his doctoral research on the importance of mycorrhizae on managed forest lands, spreading the word about the tiny fungi has become something of a crusade. He talks to colleges, high schools and international symposiums.

Although the fungi's existence has been known for the past century, for much of that time there was little research into them. Some even thought they caused disease, Amaranthus says.

Only in recent years have scientists discovered their vital role in the forest. Mycorrhizae are tiny fungal caps, 3 to 20 millimeters long, that cover the ends of roots like socks. Minuscule hyphae radiate like hair from the caps and through the soil, commonly extending up to 50 feet from a tree.

Occasionally these hyphae bear "fruit," known as mushrooms and truffles. Woody forests in the Pacific Northwest are particularly dependent on mycorrhizae, which help feed water and nutrients to trees, and allow them to better resist drought and disease.

In turn, the trees provide the fungi with sugars that help them survive. The important symbiotic relationship has been more fully understood in recent years, as soil has come to be viewed as a crucial element of forest ecology.

"Soil is really a tremendous living, breathing thing," Amaranthus says.

With some of their new-found knowledge, scientists have gone back to old forest clearcuts where reforestation has failed, and where "biological activity in the soil was almost nil," Amaranthus says.

In one recent case in the Siskiyou National Forest, scientists combined seedlings with new soil rich in mycorrhizae. Seedling survival doubled and growth tripled.

Private timber companies and public agencies have begun including mycorrhizae spores in the water fed to greenhouse nurseries. Forest managers have learned that forests are complex, that once the ecology has been disturbed "you can't just plant a tree and expect it to survive," Amaranthus says.

Logging techniques that involve machine piling — where soil in clearcut areas is scraped aside — severe burning of brush and soil compaction all have helped cut vital mycorrhizae populations, Amaranthus says.

In response, the Forest Service has tried to minimize severe burning, encourage skyline logging to avoid disturbing the earth, and has placed more emphasis on mycorrhizae inoculations, Amaranthus says.

Stiff trade sanctions not likely to sail through Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stiff sanctions against "excessive and unwarranted" foreign trade surpluses, fresh from winning approval as part of a sweeping House trade bill, appear headed for a cooler reception in the Senate.

"I don't think anybody in this House today believes this bill will go through the Senate and be signed by the president in its current form," Rep. John J. Duncan, R-Tenn., said Thursday. "I hope all of you realize that this bill isn't going anywhere."

Despite the warning, the House voted 290-137 in favor of the bill and its sanctions; 247 Democrats and 43 Republicans voted for the measure while six Democrats and 131 Republicans voted against it.

The vote came after House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, a major supporter of the sanctions, urged lawmakers to put aside whatever doubts they might have, at least for the time being.

"Although you may not like parts of the bill, let's move it along, let's get it into the process," Wright said. Looking ahead to the Senate, he conceded that "surely the other body will make modifications."

Among the most heavily debated provisions of the bill is an amendment sponsored by Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., that would impose sanctions to enforce 10 percent rollbacks in trade surpluses by Japan and other nations if talks fail.

President Reagan told visiting Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone he would veto any bill containing such sanctions. Noting the close 218-214 House vote adopting the Gephardt amendment, Reagan expressed confidence his veto could be sustained.

Nakasone, in a statement, said that while he shared "the serious concern of the U.S. Congress over the trade imbalances, I am apprehensive that the bill, if legislated, may lead to a contraction of world trade. I sincerely hope that the current bill will not be legislated in its current form."

There were widespread forecasts among lawmakers that the Gephardt provision would not get anywhere near the president's desk.

The 900-page trade bill, drafted over two months by 12 House committees, would furnish the administration with authority to make agreements under the newly started Uruguay Round of talks aimed at revising the 92-nation General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Reagan threatens veto, offers little hope of ending existing sanctions

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is threatening to veto a tough trade-retaliation bill, but without offering much hope that existing sanctions that Japanese Prime Minister calls a "sore thorn" will be lifted quickly.

Nakasone had sought an end to the penalty tariffs on $300 million in Japanese televisions, computers and power tools. But the Reagan administration is insisting first on proof that Japan has complied with an agreement on computer chip pricing.

Nakasone called the sanctions "a very sore thorn sticking in our small finger. We have to remove that thorn as soon as possible."

U.S. officials hailed the goodwill announcement by Nakasone that he had ordered Japanese banks to lower interest rates.

The administration long has pressed Japan to take steps to stimulate domestic growth, including a lowering of key interest rates, in hopes that it would help boost demand there for U.S. goods.

In Tokyo today, the dollar closed at 140.30 yen, up .65 yen from Thursday's close. Analysts said most of the strength was the result of comments Thursday by Nakasone and Paul A. Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, who said the dollar had "absolutely and fundamentally" fallen far enough.

The board, facing up to the continuing fall of the dollar, moved to tighten federal monetary policy.

In another development, the Japanese Finance Ministry announced that Japan's trade surplus soared to a record $101.4 billion in the fiscal year that ended March 31.

The surplus had been $61.1 billion in the previous fiscal year.

On Thursday, Reagan promised Nakasone he would veto a major trade bill if it reaches his desk in the form it passed the House. The measure calls for stiff retaliation against Japan and other countries that maintain large trade surpluses with the United States.

The House-passed bill would force Japan and other countries that maintain huge trade surpluses with the United States through unfair trading practices to reduce those imbalances by 10 percent annually — or face stiff sanctions.

North questioned status of FBI investigations

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top FBI official said today that fired White House aide Oliver L. North called him three times to ask about the status of FBI investigations, but that nothing came of North's attempts to influence the probes.

Oliver B. Revell, the FBI's director of investigations, said North told him the FBI investigations could interfere with "the ongoing operation," which Revell assumed was simply an attempt to free U.S. hostages held in Lebanon. Revell said he did not know at the time about the sale of U.S. arms to Iran nor about the possible diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

North's contacts with the FBI, which occurred during a two-year congressional ban on U.S. military assistance to the Contras, were first detailed Thursday at a Senate Intelligence Committee confirmation hearing for FBI Director William Webster to head the CIA.

Revell, who spoke publicly on the matter for the first time today, said he met with North on a routine basis about once a week for about a year beginning in mid-1985 because North had been designated by the president as coordinator of "all terrorism and hostage issues."

"I never saw Oliver North doing anything illegal," Revell said, although he added that he was concerned about North's "zeal."

"He was young, brash, somewhat immature," Revell said, "but he seemed to sincerely want to do what he thought was right."

Meanwhile, The Washington Post reported today that Carl R. "Spitz" Channell, who pleaded guilty Wednesday to tax conspiracy charges surrounding his Contra fund-raising activities, paid former presidential assistant David Fischer $20,000 a month in late 1985 to arrange meetings between Contra contributors and President Reagan.

The original arrangement was for Fischer, who retained access to the White House after he quit on April 7, 1985, to receive $50,000 for each meeting arranged with the president, the Post reported, quoting sources close to Channell.

Fischer finally gave up his White House pass on Nov. 24, 1986, the day before Attorney General Edwin Meese III disclosed that funds from the Iran arms sales had been diverted to the U.S.-backed Contra rebels fighting Nicaragua's government, the newspaper said. The Post said Fisher arranged seven meetings of major Channell contributors with the president.

In other developments:

— The AP learned that the telephone number of a secret U.S. intelligence operation in Honduras was discovered in papers confiscated by federal drug agents from a plane they seized in Florida last month.

Lawrence E. Walsh, the independent counsel investigating the Iran-Contra affair, has expressed interest in the papers, and House and Senate investigators are examining them as part of a wider inquiry into allegations that crews who ferried supplies to the Nicaraguan rebels brought planeloads of drugs into the United States while U.S. intelligence officials looked the other way.

— One of Channell's contributors, Inman Brandon, an Atlanta lawyer, said in an interview with the Atlanta Constitution that he agreed to give $100,000 to the Contra effort after being assured by a Channell assistant the money would be used for humanitarian purposes.

Israeli, Jordanian officials reach guidelines for talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — A government official said today Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and Jordan's King Hussein have agreed on guidelines for Arab-Israeli peace talks, including the issue of Palestinian representation.

He said Peres was to discuss the issue Sunday with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and the proposal would likely be put before the Israeli Cabinet next week.

Rejection by Shamir, who has consistently opposed an international peace conference, could bring down the coalition government.

Shamir, of the right-wing Likud bloc, has vowed his opposition to an international conference if it comes up for Cabinet debate. He has said Israel would be outnumbered and isolated in such talks and forced to make territorial concessions.

The senior official said Peres and Hussein agreed the talks would begin with an international conference on Middle East peace intended to lead to direct negotiations between Israel and Jordan.

"It's not a contract that's been signed. We're still in the process of shaping it up," the Israeli government official said, speaking on condition of anonymity. "But there is agreement on these issues."

He said an outstanding issue was whether the Soviet Union would participate, but that would be resolved between Jerusalem and Moscow. The Soviet Union broke ties with Israel in 1967.

The official declined to say how the issue of Palestinian representation, which has been a key obstacle to peace talks, would be handled. He said to disclose details would jeopardize progress.

Israel refuses to negotiate with the Palestine Liberation Organization, which it views as a terrorist group bent on destroying Israel. The Arabs have traditionally seen the PLO as the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinians.

The official also did not say how or when the agreement between Israel and Jordan was reached.

He said the parties to the agreement were Israel, Jordan, Egypt and the United States. The United States has been mediating efforts to open peace talks.

In book outline, Reagan's son reveals childhood molestation

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Reagan, son of President Reagan, says as a boy he was molested and photographed in the nude by a day-camp leader, and feared decades later that the pictures would surface and cost his father the White House.

In an outline of an autobiography circulating in New York publishing houses and obtained by The Associated Press on Thursday, Reagan described a lonely and neglected childhood in which he was emotionally unable to resist the molestation at age 7.

The president and Nancy Reagan only learned of the molestation when Michael Reagan and his family visited them on Palm Sunday in California.

The president, asked about incident, said: "I'm sorry. When he was a little boy, he didn't let us know at the time."

"They told us at the ranch for the first time," he said. Speaking with reporters at a state dinner for Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, Reagan said he hoped the book would help people.

The younger Reagan, 41, of Los Angeles, could not be reached for comment, but his publicist, Dale C. Olson, confirmed in a telephone interview that Reagan was working on the book, "On the Outside Looking In."

Penthouse magazine revealed the existence of the outline on Thursday when it released an article prepared for its June edition.

The outline presents the story of a confused and neglected little boy, adopted to please another child — Maureen Reagan, who had asked for a brother.

After the divorce of his father and actress Jane Wyman, the youth saw them only on alternate weekends, the outline said. As a result, from the ages of 3 to 10, he believed a black family cook was his mother, he wrote in the outline.

He also wrote that a day-camp leader he idolized as a "father-figure" molested him "for almost a year" and once took photographs of him posing nude. He said he was afraid to tell anyone about the molestation.

"When Dad ran for president I had visions of him losing because those pictures taken 34 years ago might turn up," Reagan wrote.

Maureen Reagan said at the Nakasone dinner, "I think it is just horrible. If I could find him (the day camp leader) there'd be a whole lot of physical trouble."

Calling herself Michael's "staunchest defender," the president's daughter said, "He's unlocking his doors right now and is going through something very constructive. He said he lived with this for 35 years. He wants it to end."

BOARD

Addressing the uncertainty of what districting method would eventually win approval, Gene Abbott, newly elected board vice president, called for additional study on the matter.

Frank Kell Cahoon, newly elected president of the board, told attendees he appreciated their presence. "We can't control their actions," said Cahoon of the looming lawsuit.

HEROES

But the fuel ignited and Babb's clothing caught fire. As Babb rolled on the ground to extinguish the flames, Stork pulled the boy free without injury.

Babb suffered second- and third-degree burns on his legs, forearms and face and spent three weeks in a hospital.

"It came to me that the suffering I had was minor compared to the suffering the family would have had with the baby in the car. In a few seconds after the baby got out, the whole thing exploded. It was like an incinerator," Babb said.

"I was very blessed. I healed a lot faster than the hospital expected. Certainly the Lord was working out all the details," he said.

Among the others honored Thursday are:

— The late Gershom McCaleb, 15, of Clarence, La., who drowned after successfully saving a 6-year-old girl from drowning in the Red River at St. Maurice, La., on July 10, 1986.

— Danh Van Le, 25, of Oklahoma City, Okla., who rescued police officer James E. Williams from an assault by a man with a gun on Oct. 19, 1985.

— Douglas G. Bent, 30, of Hobe Sound, Fla., and Robert B. Washam, 30, of Jensen Beach, Fla., who saved two teen-age boys from drowning in the Indian River at Stuart, Fla., on Sept. 6, 1986.

— David C. Parker Jr., 16, of Montgomery, Ala., who saved a man from drowning in the Gulf of Mexico at Fort Walton Beach, Fla., on March 11, 1986.

— Gail Mazzetti, 28, of Charlotte, N.C., and Joy Bellamy, 28, of Houston, who helped save a Houston police officer from an attack by two prisoners on April 20, 1986.

PRISON

Councilwoman Oralia Corrales said, unlike a state prison, the federal detention center would mainly house "white collar" prisoners.

However Councilmen Robert Rendall and Kelly Fish say they want to take a harder look at the proposal.

Rendall said he supports bringing more jobs to the area, but he has some concerns about the proposal.

"I'm still looking at the information that's been provided to us. It has some attractive features as far as employment, but it's something we need to look at very carefully as to whether it's the type of industry we want to encourage," Rendall said.

Fish agreed saying, "It obviously would provide some construction and some new jobs for the area. However prisons do have their downside too."

Contractor Davenport reached in Brady this morning said he would have no problems filling up the 512-cell detention center.

"There's enough (federal prisoners) to fill up 40 like that," Brady claimed.

Davenport built the Eden Detention Center, which has been in operation for two years, he said.

Eden Detention Center Administrator Glenn Weatherman said his 200-cell facility has been a success.

"We stay about 90 percent full all the time," Weatherman said.

The City Council will consider the federal detention center proposal at its next meeting May 12.

BILL

But Parker, D-Port Arthur, said Thursday that the bankruptcy filing — and Pennzoil's strong position on the bankruptcy court's creditors' committee — could make the bill useless.

"With that impediment, I'm afraid it's not going to make any difference," he said. "That hasn't been finally decided, but that is a concern right now."

Austin lawyer Bob Strauser, who heads up Pennzoil's lobbying team at the Capitol, agreed with Parker. "I don't see particularly what the gain is," Strauser said.

"If (the bill) fails, it's kind of a victory for the legislative process, because you shouldn't be able to pass a bill for a single litigant."

Parker also said the "full plate" of other legislation he is carrying and uncertainty over the bill's fate in the House add to his concern. Rep. Charles Evans, R-Hurst and the bill's House sponsor, could not be reached for comment, but House Judiciary Committee Chairman Mike Toomey, R-Houston, said he is one vote shy of the five he needs to pass the bill on to the House floor for debate.

Rep. Larry Warner, D-Port Isabel and identified as one of two possible swing votes, said he remains undecided even after a visit from Texaco Chairman DeCrane Tuesday. "I have not made up my mind," Warner said.

BANKS

If no buyer is found for the failed Houston bank, the FDIC will pay off the insured accounts, Whitney said. A team of 180 liquidators went to the bank Thursday to prepare it for a takeover.

The FDIC has already found a buyer for the Peoples State Bank, FDIC spokeswoman Julie Amberson said.

Memphis State Bank in Memphis, Texas, was to open the collapsed bank's only office today as one of its branches. Peoples' depositors automatically will become depositors of the assuming bank.

"Substantial losses on loans to various out-of-territory borrowers as well as to local agricultural customers were cited by Commissioner Littlefield as a primary cause of the bank's failure," state banking spokeswoman Heidi Cottingham said.

"Liberal and ill-advised lending practices, coupled with lax collection efforts, contributed significantly to overall poor loan quality," she added. "Efforts to recapitalize the bank

U.S. embassy shut-down becomming likely

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sentiment is mounting on Capitol Hill to order demolition of the new U.S. Embassy in Moscow because of Soviet bugging and to force the Russians to vacate their hilltop embassy complex in Washington.

The probability of damaging intelligence losses at the old Moscow embassy rose with the revelation by U.S. sources that Marine guards were given combinations for all secure rooms and safes for use in case of fire.

Having those combinations would allow KGB agents, allegedly permitted by two Marine guards to prowl the building at night, to gain access to the embassy's innermost secrets, government sources said Thursday.

Rooms in which CIA and Defense Intelligence Agency operatives worked, as well as the communications vault, were closed at night by steel doors with combination locks, said one intelligence source who is familiar with the Moscow operation and spoke on condition of anonymity.

A State Department source also said that until 1983, a code expert was stationed in the communications vault 24 hours a day, but that after that, no one was assigned to the room between midnight and 6 a.m., another development which would have made it easier for the KGB to penetrate the area.

Among other developments Thursday:

— Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said he would cosponsor legislation introduced by Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, to move the Soviets off Mount Alto in Washington. Intelligence experts say the high vantage point allows the Soviets to eavesdrop on sensitive U.S. government communications.

— The Senate Appropriations Committee tentatively approved language that would prohibit any further spending on the new U.S. Embassy in Moscow "except as necessary to demolish the building." The structure is 65 percent complete.

— The State Department said Secretary of State George P. Shultz has rejected a House subcommittee subpoena seeking documents concerning security problems at the Moscow embassy. Spokesman Charles Redman said Shultz had returned the subpoena to Dante Fascell, D-Fla., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee. Redman denied that any documents were being withheld and said "there was absolutely no justification for the subpoena."

— Attorney General Edwin Meese III said the Justice Department is looking into whether State Department personnel could be prosecuted for negligence in the embassy scandal, although there was not a full-scale criminal investigation into the matter.

— A pre-trial hearing was held at the Marine base in Quantico, Va., for one of the guards accused of allowing the KGB into the embassy; Cpt. Arnold Bracy, 21. Attorneys for the other accused Marine, Sgt. Clayton Lonetree, 25, say Bracy signed an incriminating statement at the behest of investigators, but later withdrew it. They say that left prosecutors without any hard evidence against Lonetree, who has denied allowing agents inside the embassy.

— Ronald Spiers, undersecretary of state for management, told the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee that rather than tear down the new office building in Moscow, the government might erect a separate structure nearby in which to conduct classified work.

The State Department, he said, would withhold final recommendation pending a report from James Schlesinger, the former defense secretary and CIA chief, who is studying the problem. Spiers said Soviet workers had incorporated electronic eavesdropping devices into concrete beams, precast offsite away from U.S. supervision and then welded into the structure.

The measure approved by the Senate Appropriations Committee followed a recommendation Wednesday by the Senate Intelligence Committee for the demolition of the new embassy office building.

The government, the committee said, has spent $23 million out of $65 million earmarked for the building in the $191 million project. U.S. diplomats already are using the eight other buildings in the complex, including a school and recreational facilities, Spiers said.

Two of the most important intelligence losses from the alleged penetration of the old U.S. Embassy in Moscow would have been the identities of Soviet citizens cooperating with the United States and the codes and design of coding machines used for classifed communications with Washington, according to administration officials.

States urged to expand airports now

WASHINGTON (AP) — State and local governments must move immediately to expand busy airports and build new ones or air travelers will face routine and dramatic delays by the mid-1990s, the chief of the Federal Aviation Administration says.

FAA Administrator Donald Engen said Thursday that he has sent letters to the governors of 10 states with the most congested airports, urging them to begin searching for sites for new airports or runway expansion as soon as possible.

He called the search for additional airport capacity "the single greatest challenge facing the nation's aviation system."

The letters were sent to the governors of Georgia, Massachusetts, Illinois, Texas, California, Florida, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and Missouri.

Engen elaborated on his concerns about future airport congestion in a speech Thursday to the American Institute for Aeronautics and Astronautics in which he warned of serious and chronic delay problems in the next decade if new runways and airports are not found.

"Even under the best circumstances we can anticipate arrival delays at some airports during peak periods reaching two hours. ...In some cases, by the mid-'90s, more than 90 percent of all flights arriving will be delayed more than 15 minutes," he told the group.

It takes five years to 10 years and sometimes longer to build a new airport "and we're running out of time," declared Engen, noting that no new major airport has been built in the last 15 years and that Denver is the only city that has one in the planning stage.

While impending airport congestion has been "discussed, debated and seminared" for years, state and local officials have failed to develop adequate airport programs for the future and "precious little concrete has been poured," he complained.

The federal government has no authority to direct airport construction, although federal money theoretically could be withheld on some projects.

The FAA estimates that by 1994 the number of takeoffs and landings at the 16 busiest airports will more than double the airports' theoretical capacity limits.

Engen's remarks came two days after airport executives from around the country criticized Congress and the Reagan administration for not providing enough federal money for airport construction.

The airport executives said they needed at least $1.8 billion a year from the federal aviation trust fund, which contains money collected through airline ticket and aviation fuel taxes, but the Transportation Department has asked for about $1 billion next fiscal year.

Indications are that Congress is likely to go along with the lower figure. Engen said he supported the $1 billion funding level.

A sharp increase in flight delays has prompted an outpouring of outrage in recent months from air travelers. The airlines and Transportation Department agree delays have become a serious problem but have pointed the blame at each other.

The department says airline scheduling, which bunches too many flights into a small time period, is a major reason for delays, while the airlines have complained that shortcomings in the air traffic control system are often to blame.

"We at the FAA would be less than honest if we didn't acknowledge that sometimes we are part of the problem," Engen acknowledged.

Engen maintained that as the air traffic control system is modernized under a $12 billion program that will stretch into the 1990s, the chief culprit for non-weather related delays will be the shortage of runways.

By 1994 these 16 airports will face the most severe capacity and delay problems, according to the FAA:

Atlanta (Hartsfield), Boston (Logan), Chicago (O'Hare), Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston (Intercontinental), Los Angeles, Miami, Newark, New York (John F. Kennedy and LaGuardia), Washington (Dulles and National), Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, San Francisco and St. Louis (Lambert).

Stiff trade sanctions not likely to sail through Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stiff sanctions against "excessive and unwarranted" foreign trade surpluses, fresh from winning approval as part of a sweeping House trade bill, appear headed for a cooler reception in the Senate.

"I don't think anybody in this House today believes this bill will go through the Senate and be signed by the president in its current form," Rep. John J. Duncan, R-Tenn., said Thursday. "I hope all of you realize that this bill isn't going anywhere."

Despite the warning, the House voted 290-137 in favor of the bill and its sanctions, 247 Democrats and 43 Republicans voted for the measure while six Democrats and 131 Republicans voted against it.

The vote came after House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, a major supporter of the sanctions, urged lawmakers to put aside whatever doubts they might have, at least for the time being.

"Although you may not like parts of the bill, let's move it along, let's get it into the process," Wright said. Looking ahead to the Senate, he conceded that "surely the other body will make modifications."

Among the most heavily debated provisions of the bill is an amendment sponsored by Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., that would impose sanctions to enforce 10 percent rollbacks in trade surpluses by Japan and other nations if talks fail.

President Reagan told visiting Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone he would veto any bill containing such sanctions. Noting the close 218-214 House vote adopting the Gephardt amendment, Reagan expressed confidence his veto could be sustained.

Nakasone, in a statement, said that while he shared "the serious concern of the U.S. Congress over the trade imbalances, I am apprehensive that the bill, if legislated, may lead to a contraction of world trade. I sincerely hope that the current bill will not be legislated in its current form."

There were widespread forecasts among lawmakers that the Gephardt provision would not get anywhere near the president's desk.

The 900-page trade bill, drafted over two months by 12 House committees, would furnish the administration with authority to make agreements under the newly started Uruguay Round of talks aimed at revising the 92-nation General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Reagan threatens veto, offers little hope of ending existing sanctions

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is threatening to veto a tough trade-retaliation bill, but without offering much hope that existing sanctions that Japanese Prime Minister calls a "sore thorn" will be lifted quickly.

Nakasone had sought an end to the penalty tariffs on $300 million in Japanese televisions, computers and power tools. But the Reagan administration is insisting first on proof that Japan has complied with an agreement on computer chip pricing.

Nakasone called the sanctions "a very sore thorn sticking in our small finger. We have to remove that thorn as soon as possible."

U.S. officials hailed the goodwill announcement by Nakasone that he had ordered Japanese banks to lower interest rates.

The administration long has pressed Japan to take steps to stimulate domestic growth, including a lowering of key interest rates, in hopes that it would help boost demand there for U.S. goods.

In Tokyo today, the dollar closed at 140.30 yen, up .65 yen from Thursday's close. Analysts said most of the strength was the result of comments Thursday by Nakasone and Paul A. Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, who said the dollar had "absolutely and fundamentally" fallen far enough.

The board, facing up to the continuing fall of the dollar, moved to tighten federal monetary policy.

In another development, the Japanese Finance Ministry announced that Japan's trade surplus soared to a record $101.4 billion in the fiscal year that ended March 31.

The surplus had been $61.1 billion in the previous fiscal year.

On Thursday, Reagan promised Nakasone he would veto a major trade bill if it reaches his desk in the form it passed the House. The measure calls for stiff retaliation against Japan and other countries that maintain large trade surpluses with the United States.

The House-passed bill would force Japan and other countries that maintain huge trade surpluses with the United States through unfair trading practices to reduce those imbalances by 10 percent annually — or face stiff sanctions.

North questioned status of FBI investigations

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top FBI official said today that fired White House aide Oliver L. North called him three times to ask about the status of FBI investigations, but that nothing came of North's attempts to influence the probes.

Oliver B. Revell, the FBI's director of investigations, said North told him the FBI investigations could interfere with "the ongoing operation," which Revell assumed was simply an attempt to free U.S. hostages held in Lebanon. Revell said he did not know at the time about the sale of U.S. arms to Iran nor about the possible diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

North's contacts with the FBI, which occurred during a two-year congressional ban on U.S. military assistance to the Contras, were first detailed Thursday at a Senate Intelligence Committee confirmation hearing for FBI Director William Webster to head the CIA.

Revell, who spoke publicly on the matter for the first time today, said he met with North on a routine basis about once a week for about a year beginning in mid-1985 because North had been designated by the president as coordinator of "all terrorism and hostage issues."

"I never saw Oliver North doing anything illegal," Revell said, although he added that he was concerned about North's "zeal."

"He was young, brash, somewhat immature," Revell said, "but he seemed to sincerely want to do what he thought was right."

Meanwhile, The Washington Post reported today that Carl R. "Spitz" Channell, who pleaded guilty Wednesday to tax conspiracy charges surrounding his Contra fund-raising activities, paid former presidential assistant David Fischer $20,000 a month in late 1985 to arrange meetings between Contra contributors and President Reagan.

The original arrangement was for Fischer, who retained access to the White House after he quit on April 7, 1985, to receive $50,000 for each meeting arranged with the president, the Post reported, quoting sources close to Channell.

Fischer finally gave up his White House pass on Nov. 24, 1986, the day before Attorney General Edwin Meese III disclosed that funds from the Iran arms sales had been diverted to the U.S.-backed Contra rebels fighting Nicaragua's government, the newspaper said. The Post said Fisher arranged seven meetings of major Channell contributors with the president.

In other developments:

— The AP learned that the telephone number of a secret U.S. intelligence operation in Honduras was discovered in papers confiscated by federal drug agents from a plane they seized in Florida last month.

Lawrence E. Walsh, the independent counsel investigating the Iran-Contra affair, has expressed interest in the papers, and House and Senate investigators are examining them as part of a wider inquiry into allegations that crews who ferried supplies to the Nicaraguan rebels brought planeloads of drugs into the United States while U.S. intelligence officials looked the other way.

— One of Channell's contributors, Inman Brandon, an Atlanta lawyer, said in an interview with the Atlanta Constitution that he agreed to give $100,000 to the Contra effort after being assured by a Channell assistant the money would be used for humanitarian purposes.

Israeli, Jordanian officials reach guidelines for talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — A government official said today Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and Jordan's King Hussein have agreed on guidelines for Arab-Israeli peace talks, including the issue of Palestinian representation.

He said Peres was to discuss the issue Sunday with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and the proposal would likely be put before the Israeli Cabinet next week.

Rejection by Shamir, who has consistently opposed an international peace conference, could bring down the coalition government.

Shamir, of the right-wing Likud bloc, has vowed his opposition to an international conference if it comes up for Cabinet debate. He has said Israel would be outnumbered and isolated in such talks and forced to make territorial concessions.

The senior official said Peres and Hussein agreed the talks would begin with an international conference on Middle East peace intended to lead to direct negotiations between Israel and Jordan.

"It's not a contract that's been signed. We're still in the process of shaping it up," the Israeli government official said, speaking on condition of anonymity. "But there is agreement on these issues."

He said an outstanding issue was whether the Soviet Union would participate, but that would be resolved between Jerusalem and Moscow. The Soviet Union broke ties with Israel in 1967.

The official declined to say how the issue of Palestinian representation, which has been a key obstacle to peace talks, would be handled. He said to disclose details would jeopardize progress.

Israel refuses to negotiate with the Palestine Liberation Organization, which it views as a terrorist group bent on destroying Israel. The Arabs have traditionally seen the PLO as the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinians.

The official also did not say how or when the agreement between Israel and Jordan was reached.

He said the parties to the agreement were Israel, Jordan, Egypt and the United States. The United States has been mediating efforts to open peace talks.

In book outline, Reagan's son reveals childhood molestation

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Reagan, son of President Reagan, says as a boy he was molested and photographed in the nude by a day-camp leader, and feared decades later that the pictures would surface and cost his father the White House.

In an outline of an autobiography circulating in New York publishing houses and obtained by The Associated Press on Thursday, Reagan described a lonely and neglected childhood in which he was emotionally unable to resist the molestation at age 7.

The president and Nancy Reagan only learned of the molestation when Michael Reagan and his family visited them on Palm Sunday in California.

The president, asked about incident, said: "I'm sorry. When he was a little boy, he didn't let us know at the time."

"They told us at the ranch for the first time," he said. Speaking with reporters at a state dinner for Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, Reagan said he hoped the book would help people.

The younger Reagan, 41, of Los Angeles, could not be reached for comment, but his publicist, Dale C. Olson, confirmed in a telephone interview that Reagan was working on the book, "On the Outside Looking In."

Penthouse magazine revealed the existence of the outline on Thursday when it released an article prepared for its June edition.

The outline presents the story of a confused and neglected little boy, adopted to please another child — Maureen Reagan, who had asked for a brother.

After the divorce of his father and actress Jane Wyman, the youth saw them only on alternate weekends, the outline said. As a result, from the ages of 3 to 10, he believed a black family cook was his mother, he wrote in the outline.

He also wrote that a day-camp leader he idolized as a "father-figure" molested him "for almost a year" and once took photographs of him posing nude. He said he was afraid to tell anyone about the molestation.

"When Dad ran for president I had visions of him losing because those pictures taken 34 years ago might turn up," Reagan wrote.

Maureen Reagan said at the Nakasone dinner, "I think it is just horrible. If I could find him (the day camp leader) there'd be a whole lot of physical trouble."

Calling herself Michael's "staunchest defender," the president's daughter said, "He's unlocking his doors right now and is going through something very constructive. He said he lived with this for 35 years. He wants it to end."

BOARD

Addressing the uncertainty of what districting method would eventually win approval, Gene Abbott, newly elected board vice president, called for additional study on the matter.

Frank Kell Cahoon, newly elected president of the board, told attendees he appreciated their presence. "We can't control their actions," said Cahoon of the looming lawsuit.

HEROES

But the fuel ignited and Babb's clothing caught fire. As Babb rolled on the ground to extinguish the flames, Stork pulled the boy free without injury.

Babb suffered second- and third-degree burns on his legs, forearms and face and spent three weeks in a hospital.

"It came to me that the suffering I had was minor compared to the suffering the family would have had with the baby in the car. In a few seconds after the baby got out, the whole thing exploded. It was like an incinerator," Babb said.

"I was very blessed. I healed a lot faster than the hospital expected. Certainly the Lord was working out all the details," he said.

Among the others honored Thursday are:

— The late Gershom McCaleb, 15, of Clarence, La., who drowned after successfully saving a 6-year-old girl from drowning in the Red River at St. Maurice, La., on July 10, 1986.

— Danh Van Le, 25, of Oklahoma City, Okla., who rescued police officer James E. Williams from an assault by a man with a gun on Oct. 19, 1985.

— Douglas G. Bent, 30, of Hobe Sound, Fla., and Robert B. Washam, 30, of Jensen Beach, Fla., who saved two teen-age boys from drowning in the Indian River at Stuart, Fla., on Sept. 6, 1986.

— David C. Parker Jr., 16, of Montgomery, Ala., who saved a man from drowning in the Gulf of Mexico at Fort Walton Beach, Fla., on March 11, 1986.

— Gail Mazzetti, 28, of Charlotte, N.C., and Joy Bellamy, 28, of Houston, who helped save a Houston police officer from an attack by two prisoners on April 20, 1986.

PRISON

Councilwoman Oralia Corrales said, unlike a state prison, the federal detention center would mainly house "white collar" prisoners.

However Councilmen Robert Rendall and Kelly Fish say they want to take a harder look at the proposal.

Rendall said he supports bringing more jobs to the area, but he has some concerns about the proposal.

"I'm still looking at the information that's been provided to us. It has some attractive features as far as employment, but it's something we need to look at very carefully as to whether it's the type of industry we want to encourage," Rendall said.

Fish agreed saying, "It obviously would provide some construction and some new jobs for the area. However prisons do have their downside too."

Contractor Davenport reached in Brady this morning said he would have no problems filling up the 512-cell detention center.

"There's enough (federal prisoners) to fill up 40 like that," Brady claimed.

Davenport built the Eden Detention Center, which has been in operation for two years, he said.

Eden Detention Center Administrator Glenn Weatherman said his 200-cell facility has been a success.

"We stay about 90 percent full all the time," Weatherman said.

The City Council will consider the federal detention center proposal at its next meeting May 12.

BILL

But Parker, D-Port Arthur, said Thursday that the bankruptcy filing — and Pennzoil's strong position on the bankruptcy court's creditors' committee — could make the bill useless.

"With that impediment, I'm afraid it's not going to make any difference," he said. "That hasn't been finally decided, but that is a concern right now."

Austin lawyer Bob Strauser, who heads up Pennzoil's lobbying team at the Capitol, agreed with Parker. "I don't see particularly what the gain is," Strauser said.

"If (the bill) fails, it's kind of a victory for the legislative process, because you shouldn't be able to pass a bill for a single litigant."

Parker also said the "full plate" of other legislation he is carrying and uncertainty over the bill's fate in the House add to his concern. Rep. Charles Evans, R-Hurst and the bill's House sponsor, could not be reached for comment, but House Judiciary Committee Chairman Mike Toomey, R-Houston, said he is one vote shy of the five he needs to pass the bill on to the House floor for debate.

Rep. Larry Warner, D-Port Isabel and identified as one of two possible swing votes, said he remains undecided even after a visit from Texaco Chairman DeCrane Tuesday. "I have not made up my mind," Warner said.

If no buyer is found for the failed Houston bank, the FDIC will pay off the insured accounts, Whitney said. A team of 150 liquidators went to the bank Thursday to prepare it for a takeover.

The FDIC has already found a buyer for the Peoples State Bank, FDIC spokeswoman Julie Amberson said.

Memphis State Bank in Memphis, Texas, was to open the collapsed bank's only office today as one of its branches. Peoples' depositors automatically will become depositors of the assuming bank.

"Substantial losses on loans to various out-of-territory borrowers as well as to local agricultural customers were cited by Commissioner Littlefield as a primary cause of the bank's failure," state banking spokeswoman Heidi Cottingham said.

"Liberal and ill-advised lending practices, coupled with lax collection efforts, contributed significantly to overall poor loan quality," she added. "Efforts to recapitalize the bank

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sentiment is mounting on Capitol Hill to order demolition of the new U.S. Embassy in Moscow because of Soviet bugging and to force the Russians to vacate their hilltop embassy complex in Washington.

The probability of damaging intelligence losses at the old Moscow embassy rose with the revelation by U.S. sources that Marine guards were given combinations for all secure rooms and safes for use in case of fire.

Having those combinations would allow KGB agents, allegedly permitted by two Marine guards to prowl the building at night, to gain access to the embassy's innermost secrets, government sources said Thursday.

Rooms in which CIA and Defense Intelligence Agency operatives worked, as well as the communications vault, were closed at night by steel doors with combination locks, said one intelligence source who is familiar with the Moscow operation and spoke on condition of anonymity.

A State Department source also said that until 1983, a code expert was stationed in the communications vault 24 hours a day, but that after that, no one was assigned to the room between midnight and 6 a.m., another development which would have made it easier for the KGB to penetrate the area.

Among other developments Thursday:

— Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said he would cosponsor legislation introduced by Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, to move the Soviets off Mount Alto in Washington. Intelligence experts say the high vantage point allows the Soviets to eavesdrop on sensitive U.S. government communications.

— The Senate Appropriations Committee tentatively approved language that would prohibit any further spending on the new U.S. Embassy in Moscow 'except as necessary to demolish the building." The structure is 65 percent complete.

— The State Department said Secretary of State George P. Shultz has rejected a House subcommittee subpoena seeking documents concerning security problems at the Moscow embassy. Spokesman Charles Redman said Shultz had returned the subpoena to Dante Fascell, D-Fla., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee. Redman denied that any documents were being withheld and said "there was absolutely no justification for the subpoena."

— Attorney General Edwin Meese III said the Justice Department is looking into whether State Department personnel could be prosecuted for negligence in the embassy scandal, although there was not a full-scale criminal investigation into the matter.

— A pre-trial hearing was held at the Marine base in Quantico, Va., for one of the guards accused of allowing the KGB into the embassy, Cpt. Arnold Bracy, 21. Attorneys for the other accused Marine, Sgt. Clayton Lonetree, 25, say Bracy signed an incriminating statement at the behest of investigators, but later withdrew it. They say that left prosecutors without any hard evidence against Lonetree, who has denied allowing agents inside the embassy.

— Ronald Spiers, undersecretary of state for management, told the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee that rather than tear down the new office building in Moscow, the government might erect a separate structure nearby in which to conduct classified work.

The State Department, he said, would withhold final recommendation pending a report from James Schlesinger, the former defense secretary and CIA chief, who is studying the problem. Spiers said Soviet workers had incorporated electronic eavesdropping devices into concrete beams, precast offsite away from U.S. supervision and then welded into the structure.

The measure approved by the Senate Appropriations Committee followed a recommendation Wednesday by the Senate Intelligence Committee for the demolition of the new embassy office building.

The government, the committee said, has spent $23 million out of $65 million earmarked for the building in the $191 million project. U.S. diplomats already are using the eight other buildings in the complex, including a school and recreational facilities, Spiers said.

Two of the most important intelligence losses from the alleged penetration of the old U.S. Embassy in Moscow would have been the identities of Soviet citizens cooperating with the United States and the codes and design of coding machines used for classifed communications with Washington, according to administration officials.

States urged to expand airports now

WASHINGTON (AP) — State and local governments must move immediately to expand busy airports and build new ones or air travelers will face routine and dramatic delays by the mid-1990s, the chief of the Federal Aviation Administration says.

FAA Administrator Donald Engen said Thursday that he has sent letters to the governors of 10 states with the most congested airports, urging them to begin searching for sites for new airports or runway expansion as soon as possible.

He called the search for additional airport capacity "the single greatest challenge facing the nation's aviation system."

The letters were sent to the governors of Georgia, Massachusetts, Illinois, Texas, California, Florida, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and Missouri.

Engen elaborated on his concerns about future airport congestion in a speech Thursday to the American Institute for Aeronautics and Astronautics in which he warned of serious and chronic delay problems in the next decade if new runways and airports are not found.

"Even under the best circumstances we can anticipate arrival delays at some airports during peak periods reaching two hours. ...In some cases, by the mid-'90s, more than 90 percent of all flights arriving will be delayed more than 15 minutes," he told the group.

It takes five years to 10 years and sometimes longer to build a new airport "and we're running out of time," declared Engen, noting that no new major airport has been built in the last 15 years and that Denver is the only city that has one in the planning stage.

While impending airport congestion has been "discussed, debated and seminared" for years, state and local officials have failed to develop adequate airport programs for the future and "precious little concrete has been poured," he complained.

The federal government has no authority to direct airport construction, although federal money theoretically could be withheld on some projects.

The FAA estimates that by 1994 the number of takeoffs and landings at the 16 busiest airports will more than double the airports' theoretical capacity limits.

Engen's remarks came two days after airport executives from around the country criticized Congress and the Reagan administration for not providing enough federal money for airport construction.

The airport executives said they needed at least $1.8 billion a year from the federal aviation trust fund, which contains money collected through airline ticket and aviation fuel taxes, but the Transportation Department has asked for about $1 billion next fiscal year.

Indications are that Congress is likely to go along with the lower figure, Engen said he supported the $1 billion funding level.

A sharp increase in flight delays has prompted an outpouring of outrage in recent months from air travelers. The airlines and Transportation Department agree delays have become a serious problem but have pointed the blame at each other.

The department says airline scheduling, which bunches too many flights into a small time period, is a major reason for delays, while the airlines have complained that shortcomings in the air traffic control system are often to blame.

"We at the FAA would be less than honest if we didn't acknowledge that sometimes we are part of the problem," Engen acknowledged.

Engen maintained that as the air traffic control system is modernized under a $12 billion program that will stretch into the 1990s, the chief culprit for non-weather related delays will be the shortage of runways.

By 1994 these 16 airports will face the most severe capacity and delay problems, according to the FAA:

Atlanta (Hartsfield), Boston (Logan), Chicago (O'Hare), Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston (Intercontinental), Los Angeles, Miami, Newark, New York (John F. Kennedy and LaGuardia), Washington (Dulles and National), Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, San Francisco and St. Louis (Lambert).

Capital punishment debate alive, well

In one sense, the Supreme Court ruling the other day in the Warren McCleskey capital punishment case should effectively bring to a close constitutional challenges to the death penalty. In another, though, the debate over use of the punishment, particularly on moral and religious grounds, will rage on endlessly.

Opponents of the death penalty had claimed that the challenge to the law in the McCleskey case would be their last sweeping constitutional challenge to capital punishment. But with the high court's 5-4 decision in the case — that the penalty is constitutional even though killers of white people are far more frequently sentenced to die than killers of blacks — no final chapter has yet been written in the debate over capital punishment.

The McCleskey ruling came 15 years after the Supreme Court had ruled — also in a 5-4 decision — that the death penalty was "cruel and unusual punishment" in the manner it was applied at that time and, thus, in violation of the constitution. That ruling had invalidated most death penalty statutes existing at the time, but since then 37 states and the Congress had enacted statutes conforming to standards the court had set. In effect, the public mandate was that the death penalty serves the public good and at least should remain an option for the courts in some violent crimes.

Writing for the majority in the McCleskey case, Justice Lewis Powell said McCleskey's arguments "basically challenge the validity of capital punishment in our multiracial society" and the "principles that underlie our entire criminal justice system," particularly the discretion of juries in deciding when to impose the death penalty.

But the statistical evidence provided in the McCleskey case, Powell said, was "clearly insufficient to support an inference that any of the decision-makers in McCleskey's case acted with discriminatory purpose."

The ruling, of course, does not change the basic premise that society needs the death penalty — that certain crimes indeed justify the taking of a criminal's life. Nor does it alter the objection of opponents to the death penalty — that the taking of a human life for a crime is wrong. As long as that objection continues to be embraced by a segment of the American public, it remains likely the death penalty will be emotionally debated in numerous regards.

The Supreme Court's ruling in the McCleskey case seems well-grounded. In this particular instance, the penalty was justified. The finality of the punishment, though — the opportunity that judicial errors can be made and innocent people might be put to death — ensures that the debate over this form of punishment will continue for years into the future.

CIA blunders cost Afghans arms, lives

WASHINGTON — The CIA has been overcharged, undercut and just plain robbed to the tune of at least $1 billion during its slovenly, seven-year effort to supply weapons to the anti-Soviet guerrillas in Afghanistan.

Jack Anderson

The incredible waste of more than one-third of the $3 billion in covert funds (half of it contributed by Saudi Arabia) is a direct result of the agency's perverse refusal to adopt even the most elementary accounting procedures — and a cavalier, "hang-the-expense" attitude not seen since the last big covert arms program, in Vietnam. Arms merchants, corrupt officials and even, reportedly, CIA agents have grown fat on the Afghan arms trade, while the freedom fighters have been starved for modern weaponry to use against Soviet tanks and aircraft.

The CIA has admitted substantial losses. Behind closed doors, agency officials have acknowledged to Congress that at least 20 percent has been skimmed from the program. In a patronizing echo of the old colonial mentality, they shrugged this off as merely the typical cost of doing business in that part of the world, suggesting that greedy Pakistani officials were largely responsible.

Even if this were true, it would still amount to a whopping $600 million loss. But the CIA has boldly misled Congress. Our own conservative estimate is that the diversion of Afghan arms is around 60 percent, or $1.8 billion. One resistance leader told Dale Van Atta on a recent visit to the Pakistani-Afghan border that he doubted that even 25 percent of the CIA's promised arms got through.

To understand how such a well-intended, congressionally supported program could go so far astray, it's necessary to look at the CIA's clandestine weapons supply line to Afghanistan. The wonder is that the Afghan rebels have received so much as a Saturday Night Special from the CIA.

One source for weapons was Cairo, where Soviet weapons left over from Egypt's days as a Kremlin satellite could be bought, disguising the American involvement. Another source was Peking, where Chinese copies of Soviet weapons were readily available.

Tens of millions of dollars were lost at the point of purchase, because the CIA didn't deign to haggle over price. "These are secret, non-market arrangements," an intelligence source explained. "So there is no set price for the weapons. They can charge whatever they want to, and the CIA will pay it."

The next great, gaping hole in the pipeline is at the port of shipment. Incredible as it seems, our sources say the CIA never has a person at the dock or airport to make sure the weapons paid for are actually put aboard. If the arms dealer chooses to send only half the order, the CIA will never know.

The next flaw is at the port of arrival, usually Karachi, Pakistan. The CIA has no one there either, to check shipments against manifests from Cairo, Peking or elsewhere. As a result, many shipments are "lost at sea" — meaning they are re-routed to arms-hungry nations like Iran, which pay the arms dealers handsomely for the diverted weapons.

The CIA doesn't even have a rudimentary tracking system for its shipments — like numbering the lots so they can be matched up on arrival. There's no way of telling whether an arriving shipment was purchased weeks, months or even years earlier.

Finally, the weapons must pass through Pakistani intermediaries, and the last skimming occurs. But this is probably the least serious, mainly because the pickings by that time are so slim. The best weapons have been stolen long since.

"The biggest problem is not Pakistan," an auditor of the CIA's Afghan arms program told us. "It's Egypt, China and the CIA."

The Afghan arms scandal has been deliberately hidden under security classifications, and overlooked in the hue and cry over the Iran/contra mess.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Consistency is often overrated, but it does give a comforting dependability to government decisions. We wish the Federal Communications Commission would make up its mind about freedom of speech vs. official interference on the airwaves. The FCC thinks it's OK to step in and keep children from being exposed to suggestive talk, but it doesn't want to step in and keep adults from being exposed to only one side of important public policy arguments. We don't like the smarmy sexual innuendo of the radio talk shows, but we also worry about the demise of the Fairness Doctrine on TV. The FCC should get its stories straight.

Jack Anderson is a syndicated columnist who along with Joseph Spear and Dale Van Atta writes this column for United Feature Syndicate.

Another View:

Arms talk snags

Nuclear arms reduction proposals seem headed for snags in West Germany and Congress.

In West Germany, Volker Ruehe, Chancellor Helmut Kohl's arms policy expert, opposed serious consideration of Soviet proposals to eliminate short-range missiles without first moving toward reduction of the Soviet superiority in tanks, troops and other conventional forces in central Europe.

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev has proposed both sides eliminate medium-range missiles from Europe and maintain 100 warheads each in their own territory. The Soviet missiles would be deployed in Asia.

Gorbachev also has proposed eliminating short-range missiles, with a 300- to 600-mile range. The West estimates Russia has about 130 short-range missiles deployed in Czechoslovakia and East Germany. West Germany has 72 Pershing I short-range missiles on its territory.

Elimination of both short-range and medium-range missiles would drastically reduce NATO capacity to resist an invasion by numerically superior Soviet conventional forces. It would also greatly increase West Germany's vulnerability to the political pressure exerted by public and official awareness of this disparity.

Meanwhile, in Washington, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, said the arms deal now under consideration would get rid of the weapons the United States should keep and keep the nuclear weapons that should be removed.

Aspin said in any conventional conflict in Europe, battlefield commanders would be under heavy pressure to use tactical nuclear weapons, which would not be eliminated by the proposed arms deal. U.S. forces would retain about 4,600 nuclear artillery shells, land mines and battlefield-range missiles near potential front lines.

It is "widely conceded," Aspin said, that use of nuclear weapons in tactical situations could quickly escalate into all-out nuclear war.

"We should really be withdrawing battlefield weapons unilaterally," he said. "We should move out the battlefield nuclear weapons and put in longer-range missiles, which with current accuracies, can do all the things that battlefield weapons can do, but are far enough away from the front not to come under 'use it or lose it' pressures."

Aspin's analysis should be weighed in formulating any Washington-Moscow arms deal. So should the West German proposal to reduce Warsaw Pact conventional forces near the border. It is not unreasonable to seek Soviet concessions on this point, considering the size of Soviet conventional forces. Bilateral withdrawals creating a demilitarized corridor might hasten a reasonable agreement on nuclear force reduction.

Washington returning to reason on Japan

WASHINGTON — U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter's transformation on the Japanese seaside from raging bull to cooing dove shows that the Reagan administration is pulling back from the protectionist abyss.

Whether or not Yeutter's flaming anti-Japanese rhetoric was cooled on direct orders of Washington, the change fits the new White House mood. Japan-bashing is out. So is excessive praise for Democratic leaders putting together trade legislation that is either outright protectionist or protectionist-tainted. So on this issue at least, the restructured White House staff under former senator Howard Baker is less than conciliatory with Congress.

Specifically, the administration now makes clear the House trade bill is excessively protectionist and thus a prime candidate for President Reagan's veto even if Rep. Richard Gephardt's now celebrated amendment is defeated. That was the purpose of the president's radio message last Saturday and his speech Monday to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

This hardly means the Reagan White House has straightened itself out on trade. Deputy chief of staff Ken Duberstein is taking hold of this preeminent issue. But like Baker, Duberstein is essentially a Capitol Hill man, unequipped to weave the multiple threads of trade policy. Indeed, so thin is the White House in financial-monetary-trade management that the crisis in financial markets caused by the plunging dollar is not fully understood there.

Without a coordinator, trade policy is set by the Economic Policy Council chaired by Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III. But he must cope with Cabinet equals — Yeutter and Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, whose hard-line views have gained currency as protectionist fire spread on Capitol Hill. Yeutter was unleashed when Donald T. Regan's authoritarian regime at the White House ended.

As the architect of tariff retaliation against alleged Japanese dumping of semiconductors, Yeutter was talking tough when he left for Japan April 18. In a speech prepared for a conference at the seaside resort of Oiso April 20, he had intended to warn the Japanese of future retaliation. Instead, the prepared text was dumped for off-the-cuff platitudes.

Was Yeutter ordered to lighten up? "No order, whatsoever," he replied. But senior White House aides made clear to us that the word to "ease up" had been put out. Indeed, although there are no signs that he won any concessions from the Japanese last week, the trade ambassador was conciliatory on NBC's "Meet the Press" Sunday. "I am convinced that some things of a very positive vein are beginning to happen in Japan on the trade front," he said.

Nevertheless, Yeutter's peformance did not entirely please the White House. There was grumbling there over his praise of Rep. Dan Rostenkowski's "magnificent job" for the trade bill that emerged from his House Ways and Means Committee and Yeutter's refusal to label it unacceptable even without the Gephardt amendment attached.

This attitude reflects dismay by senior aides that the president might be perceived as ploughing the ground for Gephardt's nearly automatic applications of sanctions to any country running a trade surplus against the U.S. Beyond that, Yeutter's own associates worried that his rhetoric was creating a widening belief in Washington that the president definitely would sign a Gephardtless trade bill.

The new White House line is partly to avoid open insult to Japan's Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone on his visit here. But it is more than that. The president's men are coming to learn that appeasement of protectionism only fans the fire.

The semiconductor retaliation built, rather than discouraged, congressional support for the Gephardt amendment, even while helping trigger the uproar in world financial markets. The protectionist boom, possibly encouraging a pre-quota surge of imports, certainly was a major factor in the free fall of the dollar. That now figures to mandate tighter money in the U.S.

There is no sign that the Congress-oriented White House staff has come to grips with two paramount questions posed by the trade-dollar crisis: Should the Federal Reserve Board raise the discount rate? Should the U.S. move faster toward establishing a new global monetary regimen?

Nevertheless, Howard Baker and his crew of politicians recognize that nothing is accomplished by bashing the Japanese and encouraging Congress to think the president will sign the lesser of two evils in trade legislation. As reflected in Ambassador Yeutter's cooler language, that looks like a return from the abyss back to reason.

CHARLEY REESE

Cuban fiasco showed U.S. needs leaders

Twenty-six years ago a playboy president and a band of arrogant Ivy Leaguers killed a lot of Cubans, wrecked American prestige, and buried forever the Monroe Doctrine. It is called the Bay of Pigs. It marks the beginning of the postwar decline of America.

Charley Reese

The Iran-Contra affair compares to the Bay of Pigs as a toothpick does to a redwood, as a ripple to a tidal wave.

The Bay of Pigs was a betrayed invasion force of Cuban exiles who had been doomed by men in Washington before they ever reached shore.

In retrospect the blunders seem too obvious to be accidental. What had begun in the Eisenhower administration as a plan to infiltrate some guerrillas into Cuba became under Kennedy's men a military invasion — but a military invasion from which the American military men were excluded from the planning. It hinged on complete control of the air and Kennedy cut the exile strike force's planes and then, incredibly, cancelled the final air strike. The CIA misread aerial photos of the beachead so the boats ran aground on reefs the CIA had said were seaweed. All the ammunition and fuel were put on one ship. Plans to arouse the Cuban people by dropping pamphlets were cancelled. Castro's military strength was grossly underestimated. Plans for the invasion were leaked and published. Finally, American pilots were not allowed to assist while the Cubans were being slaughtered and captured on the beach. Kennedy had to bribe Castro with large shipments of drugs and other materials to win their release.

Today, Cuba, is as much a Soviet satellite as Lithuania, and the Monroe Doctrine, which pledged the United States to preventing any European power from re-establishing colonies in the Western Hemisphere, is as dead as Kennedy himself.

We now know that contrary to being a valiant King Arthur as his courtiers tried to paint him, Kennedy was in fact not a serious man. He was a playboy who spent a great deal of his time partying. Handsome and witty on the stump, he was the first of our cardboard presidents, all image and no substance.

He blundered in Cuba, he blundered in Berlin, he blundered in Laos, and he blundered in Vietnam, but he and his crowd were masters at calling blunders victories.

Some Americans learned well what Kennedy taught them — how to accept defeat, retreat, and humiliation with verve and grace.

Now, whenever we agree to do what some communist thug wants us to do, we hail it as a great diplomatic victory such as agreeing to finance the industrialization of China.

We have come to the point where a couple of brief, though ineffective raids against Libya are called successfully fighting terrorism. Overwhelming a comic opera regime on an island 10 miles wide and 20 miles long is considered rolling back communism.

We have to ask ourselves if we are a serious country anymore. Do we have the will or the competence to survive? Can't we do even the simple tasks, like keeping our secrets or preventing the Soviets from openly establishing a satellite in Nicaragua?

I don't mean to drown you in pessimism but as we all learned in junior high school math, the first step in solving a problem is to define it. If, every time we shoot ourselves in the foot, we award ourselves the Distinguished Service Cross that is more of a problem than the bleeding foot.

I'm sick of public figures surrounded by public relations men, media experts, and public opinion pollsters. It's hard to be a leader when your ear is glued to the ground and your wet finger is stuck up in the air along with your rear end.

This may seem far removed from the gloomy Bay of Pigs but it is not. It was precisely because Kennedy was concerned with appearance and popularity and not with substance and leadership that the tragedy of the Bay of Pigs occurred.

The need is for leaders, not images; for accomplishments, not claims; and for honesty, not public relations.

Pope beatifies nun killed in Auschwitz

WORLD

COLOGNE, West Germany (AP) — Pope John Paul II today beatified a Jewish-born nun who perished in the Auschwitz Nazi death camp, and in a major gesture of solidarity with the Jews called her an "outstanding daughter of Israel."

Less than four hours earlier, a fire of unknown origin destroyed a Roman Catholic church just over a mile from the stadium where the pontiff beatified Carmelite nun Edith Stein. Police reported graffiti spray-painted on another Catholic church said: "We love to see churches burn."

More than 1,200 leftists and Greens, including naked women and at least one naked man, marched through downtown streets today to Cologne Cathedral chanting "Pope get lost!," police said. Marchers included homosexuals, lesbians and women's activists. No incidents were reported.

The Greens said before the pope arrived in West Germany on Thursday that they would protest the pontiff's traditional stances on divorce, birth control and other issues.

The beatification of Edith Stein — a major step toward possible sainthood — drew criticism from some Jewish leaders, who said she was killed because she was born a Jew, not because she became a Roman Catholic.

John Paul referred several times to the ties between Christian and Jews, and acknowledged the "deadly threat to the Jewish people gathered like a dark cloud" over Edith Stein as well. The Nazis killed the nun in an Auschwitz gas chamber in 1942.

Meeting with West Germany's Jewish leaders later in Cologne, the pope called for a joint effort to guard against a possible resurgence of anti-Semitism and racism.

Ortega helps carry American's coffin

MATAGALPA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Daniel Ortega helped carry the coffin of an American volunteer killed in an attack by U.S.-backed Contra rebels and said his death should move the Reagan administration to negotiate for peace.

Benjamin Linder, an engineer working without pay on a rural electrification project, was "assassinated by mercenaries following orders from the CIA," Ortega said in a speech at Linder's funeral Thursday.

Linder's slaying Tuesday "should move the conscience of those in the U.S. government so that (funeral) bells should toll no more, so that aggression ends and they accept to dialogue with Nicaragua," he said.

The Contras said Linder was killed in a clash between their forces and Sandinista militiamen accompanying him, and blamed the Nicaraguan government for the American's death because it allowed him into a war zone.

"For whom the bell tolls? Hemingway would ask," Ortega said. He answered that it tolled for Linder and seven European volunteers slain in Contra attacks since the rebels, with support from the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, began their guerrilla war against the leftist Sandinista government five years ago. About 40,000 Nicaraguans have died in the conflict.

The Reagan administration considers Ortega's government a threat to regional security because of its close ties to the Soviet Union and Cuba.

Sandinista officials have claimed the rebels singled out Linder and killed him along with two Nicaraguan militiamen near the hamlet of La Camaleona, 20 miles north of this provincial capital.

Unconfirmed reports said Linder was carrying a weapon when he was killed.

In a protest note to Secretary of State George Shultz, Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto said Linder was "kidnapped and later murdered...by a counter-revolutionary group under contract to the U.S. government."

South Africa allows holiday, bans 20 rallies

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — May Day is a workers' holiday in South Africa for the first time today, but authorities banned 20 black union rallies and alleged that a union headquarters was used as a torture chamber.

In Cape Town, Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu issued his first major statement on Wednesday's election for the white chamber of Parliament, calling it "racist and totally undemocratic."

But Tutu said whites could justify participating if their votes "help bring about the downfall of apartheid and its perpetrators."

Under apartheid, South Africa's system of racial separation, the 24 million blacks have no vote in national affairs, while the 5 million whites control the economy and maintain separate neighborhoods and schools.

In a hearing Thursday night in Johannesburg, a police officer testified that four employees of the state transport company were beaten at the headquarters of the largest black labor federation, then forced to wash their own blood from the floor and walls before being taken away to be killed because they defied a strike call.

Officials of the 600,000-member Congress of South African Trade Unions told the court they opposed violence and would seek to investigate whether the police allegations were true.

The trade union congress held some outdoor rallies today, but city council magistrates banned most demonstrations planned for major cities.

WORLD in brief

New Korean party formed

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Opposition leaders formed a new party today to resist what one called the dictatorship of President Chun Doo-Hwan, and more than 100 supporters were arrested in clashes with police.

Kim Young-sam, president of the new Reunification Democratic Party, said the organization would mount a nationwide resistance campaign if the government does not agree to talks on political reform.

"Our people are languishing under a brutal dictatorial rule without precedent in our history," Kim said in a speech to hundreds of supporters jammed into a downtown lecture hall.

Many more were packed into hallways or gathered outside and it appeared that about 3,000 people attended the party's inauguration, although many appeared to be plainclothes police.

Japan's surplus soars

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's trade surplus, the source of increasing friction with its partners in commerce, soared to a record $101.4 billion in the fiscal year that ended March 31, the Finance Ministry announced today.

The surplus had been $61.1 billion in the previous fiscal year.

The ministry said in an annual report that the current account surplus rose to a record $93.8 billion in the past fiscal year, up from $55 billion dollars in the previous 12-month period.

The trade surplus means Japan exported $101.4 billion more in goods than it imported. The current account is a broader measure that incudes goods, services and capital transfers. The report did not give a breakdown by countries.

The announcement came as Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone visited Washington amid growing trade tensions between Japan and the United States.

Captain's plea rejected

LONDON (AP) — Operators of a ferry that capsized off Belgium had rejected a plea from the captain of its sister ship for indicator lights that would show whether car-loading doors were closed, a government official said Thursday.

Townsend Thoresen, operators of the British ferry, has installed such warning lights on the bridges of all its vessels since the March 6 disaster, investigating commissioner David Steel said.

The Herald of Free Enterprise capsized after tons of water rushed into the lower decks, apparently through loading doors that had been left open. Nearly 200 people were killed.

Steel produced internal company messages about the lights on the fourth day of the inquiry into the sinking of the 7,951-ton ship, which capsized minutes after the Belgian port of Zeebrugge for Dover.

Bill would allow doubling of tuition

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas public universities could double tuition to $32 per credit hour in September under a comprehensive higher education reform bill the House tentatively approved and the governor endorsed Thursday.

Speaker Gib Lewis' bill, based on recommendations from the Select Committee on Higher Education, would give colleges more flexibility in handling fiscal matters but subject their actions to greater accountability by the state. The measure also strengthens funding for basic and applied research and boosts the power of the renamed Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board.

Much of the debate, however, focused on a provision that would allow boards of regents to set tuition anywhere between the rates set by the Legislature and a figure twice as high.

The speaker defended the proposal, saying it takes tuition setting "out of the political arena" in the Legislature. House Higher Education Committee Chairwoman Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, said it would allow individual schools to establish tuition rates that better reflect the varying costs of educating students.

Rep. Al Luna, D-Houston and a member of the Select Committee, complained that schools such as the University of Texas at Austin and Texas A&M would be the first to boost their rates. "A&M, where you've got right now less than 3 or 4 percent black enrollment, where you've got a pitiful Hispanic enrollment, we're just going to make those institutions less accessible than to the people who aren't getting into them now," Luna said.

"Education is the way out for poor people."

Delco sponsored an amendment that would require the colleges to set aside 20 percent of their tuition income for financial aid to needy students. "If we're going to provide quality education for the young people in our state, we have to pay for that quality education," she said.

"I'm comfortable with the tuition being higher as long as there's a set aside to meet the needs of the students who are impacted by any tuition increase."

In 1985, lawmakers increased tuition for undergraduate Texas residents — for the first time since 1957 — from $4 per credit hour to the current $16. That law slowly increases the rate, which would become the minimum if Lewis' plan passes, up to $22 per credit hour in the 1993-1994 school year.

A motion to delete the tuition doubling measure failed on an informal 79-41 vote. However Senate Education Committee Chairman Carl Parker, sponsor of the reform bill in the senior chamber, said he opposes the tuition option for undergraduate students and doesn't think Lewis' power will hurt attempts to remove that section in the Senate.

"They're not going to bring it over here on stone tablets," Parker, D-Port Arthur, said.

Gov. Bill Clements said he favors giving regents some flexibility in tuition rates as a move "away from what I would call 'micro-management' of higher education and public education through the legislative process." He called the bill "a step in the right direction."

Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, was one of 10 lawmakers to vote against the speaker's bill. "We're giving to much authority to the Coordinating Board," Craddick said, "we're taking away the individual colleges' rights."

The House Thursday also tentatively approved another Select Committee-endorsed bill that would require all incoming freshman to take and pass basic skills tests in reading, writing and mathematics before they could begin taking junior-level courses. Universities would have to provide remedial courses to help those students who fail any of the exams hone their skills.

"The object is not to punish the student," Delco said. "The intent of the bill is to help the student."

ODESSA — A 70th District Court jury Thursday deliberated about five hours to sentence an 18-year-old man to 50 years in prison for the murder of his 7-month-old son.

Wednesday, the jury of eight men and four women took nearly three and a half hours to find Orlando Hernandez Banuelos guilty of killing his son by stuffing a sock down the baby's throat, placing a clothespin on his nose, then disposing of the body in a city Dumpster.

Jurors began deliberations about 1:40 p.m. Thursday.

Prosecutor Roger Jones, in final arguments, asked jurors to look at the evidence, "see how cold this was," and sentence Banuelos to 99 years in prison.

Defense attorney Richard Alvarado did not ask jurors to give Banuelos the minimum sentence, five years of probation, but rather suggested jurors consider Banuelos had lived "an exemplary life," with no history of trouble in his 17 years and then consider the full range of punishment available to them.

Reliable sources say jurors did exactly that. As deliberations began, one group of jurors favored a 99-year sentence, while the remainder held out for a five year probated sentence.

After about four hours of deliberation, jurors reportedly had moved closer together, with one group holding out for a 45-year sentence and the rest wanting a 75-year sentence.

Following about an hour and a half supper break, jurors returned to deliberations and about 25 minutes later arrived at a compromise.

Banuelos stood without emotion and heard Judge Gene Ater read the jury's sentence of 50 years in prison.

Ater denied Alvarado's motion to delay sentencing of Banuelos for 10 days until an appeal could be filed. The judge pronounced sentence and ordered Banuelos remanded to the custody of sheriff's deputies to be turned over to the Texas Department of Corrections.

Alvarado later said Banuelos' appeal will ask the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals to find that the confession admitted into evidence during the trial was obtained illegally by police.

Banuelos was questioned by Odessa police Detective Fred Price after his Banuelos' son's body was found in a Dumpster. During the course of questioning, Banuelos told Price he wanted an attorney and Price broke off his interview with him. A short time later, after being informed of Banuelos' request for an attorney, Sgt. John McGee talked to Banuelos, then informed Price that Banuelos wanted to waive his right to have an attorney present during questioning.

Alvarado contends police coerced Banuelos into confessing to the murder of his son and therefore violated his rights.

Questions raised by Alvarado concerning the validity of the Banuelos confession during the course of the more than three day trial reportedly delayed jurors' decision for some time during guilt-innocence deliberations. Six jurors held out for a verdict of involuntary manslaughter and six wanted a guilty of murder verdict until they resolved questions and unanimously agreed to find Banuelos guilty of murder.

Testimony during the trial revealed Banuelos and the 17-year-old mother of the baby were not married, but the child was named Orlando Banuelos Jr. when he was born in August, 1985.

Banuelos and the mother continued to live in their respective homes with their parents following the birth of the baby.

On March 31, 1986, according to trial testimony, Banuelos was spending the night with the mother and his son. Sometime during the night, the baby began crying and the 17-year-old mother said she was going to get up and give him a bottle. Banuelos, in his statement to police, said he told her he'd do it.

He said he gave the baby a bottle, but the baby spit it out and continued to cry. According to the Banuelos confession read into evidence by Jones, Banuelos took the sock and stuffed it farther down the baby's throat, then put a clothespin on the baby's nose.

However, a portion of the confession not presented to jurors by Jones was introduced by Alvarado. It indicated Banuelos became concerned when the baby started having trouble breathing; he tried to retrieve the sock but couldn't reach it. He placed the clothespin on the baby's nose, Alvarado said, thinking it would force the baby to regurgitate the sock, but it didn't work.

Garden City SSC panel heartened by DOE hearing

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

Officials of the Garden City SSC Commission were encouraged by developments at this week's pre-proposal hearing with the Department of Energy in Washington.

The conference was held Wednesday to allow groups preparing site proposals for the multibillion-dollar superconducting super collider to get answers to questions and concerns.

"The questions asked give us some insight into the problems and perceived weaknesses of other sites," Garden City site project manager Thane Akins told attendees of the monthly Business Forum, sponsored by the Business Journal of the Permian Basin.

The Garden City group's questions were about procedural details while many others asked about basic requirements for the project site, Akins said. "We are still confident of the quality of the qualifications and advance preparation work done for the Garden City site."

More than 500 questions were submitted to the DOE, with only a half-day briefing allocated for answering them verbally, so the majority of the answers will arrive at the local SSC office in written form next week, Akins said.

Concerns addressed by the Garden City commission in its questions included potential restriction on existing oil wells or future oil and gas development in the area of the SSC ring.

Akins explained that although the DOE did not address the local group's question specifically Wednesday morning, staffers answered similar questions from other groups and outlined restrictions.

"The DOE realizes that wells and mineral deposits are likely to exist at the project site and has made provisions for licensing and authorizing them.

More stringent restrictions will apply to wells less than 300 feet from the 10-foot diameter tunnel's walls. Less restrictive rules will be enforced for wells between 300 feet and 1,000 feet from the tunnel, but DOE authorization will be required for such wells.

Clarified tunneling criteria and environmental impact studies were other areas of prime concern for other areas considering proposals, Akins said.

"The work we have already done goes beyond the DOE's requirements," he added.

Other site groups are apparently concerned with getting an environmental study — with the degree of detail required — completed in time for the DOE's Aug. 3 deadline. The department will perform its own "full-blown" environmental impact study for the chosen site.

Akins Angelo

More than 500 questions were submitted to the DOE, with only a half-day briefing allocated for answering them verbally, so the majority of the answers will arrive at the local SSC office in written form next week, Thane Akins said.

Ernest Angelo of Midland, a member of the 13-member High Energy Research Facility Advisory Council to the Texas National Laboratory Commission, told those on hand for the forum of his continued support for more than one site being nominated by Texas.

"We (the council and commission) should not pre-judge what is going to be most important to the national science groups and the DOE," he said.

There is historic precedence for submitting more than one state site without diluting their competitive stance, Angelo said. "As a matter of fact, the Batavia, Ill., site where Fermilab was eventually positioned was initially the second-place site in the state, 25 years ago."

But the primary site in Southern Illinois proved unsuitable and Illinois was still able to attract the project because of the second site, he explained. "For the Navy's Home Port program, which ultimately netted a major facility for Corpus Christi, the state had two or three competitive sites which were proposed, without jeopardizing the chances of any one site."

Angelo also noted that the ability of an individual local commission to move ahead with proposing a site independently — as allowed under the DOE proposal guidelines — will hinge on the state lab commission's approval of extending any state-provided incentives to attract the project to independent sites within the state.

Midland man spends weekends up in the air

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

For a gentle man who is explosive on the ground, Pat Day does delicate, but difficult wonders in the air.

On weekends, he's a championship aerobatic pilot.

But in working to support his flying fancy, Day is vice president of Southwestern Explosives Inc. in Midland. He travels around the country to sell his product and services and to set up explosive charges in the mining and construction industries.

His true flair is for flying.

"I enjoy flying competition," said Day, who recently won his fourth sportsman-class International Aerobatic Club championship in the Copperstate aerobatic competition in Arizona.

Theoretically, Day should be more tame about his flying. He's winning contests in a 150-horsepower biplane, The Starduster, that wasn't designed for aerobatic maneuvers.

And he's competing against pilots flying aircraft, such as the Pitts S1-T and Christen Eagle biplanes and the mid-wing French Cap-10, which specifically are designed for aerobatic competition.

Day's Starduster was designed by Lou Stolp and was built in 1975 by Norm Weis, a retired physics professor in Casper, Wyo. "He built it, wrecked it, and rebuilt it," Day said.

"He (Weis) had informed me that it would never be competitive — that he had tried it for two years," said Day, who has been flying since the late 1960s. "After flying competition for two years, he told me in no uncertain terms that the plane would not be competitive," Day recalled. Even The Starduster's plans note that the fabric-covered biplane is a "sports biplane not intended for aerobatics."

Today, Weis is eating crow.

"He's done more with that airplane than I could ever do," Weis today said of Day. "And I thought I was pretty heavy into aerobatics. The Starduster would not do a decent snap roll, which is an important aerobatic maneuver in competition flying, for me," Weis said. "Somehow, he (Day) tamed that wild airplane."

Day's Starduster has an alias, "Second Sweetheart," painted on its tail.

His wife, Connie, snickers at that.

"That's a joke," she laughed. "I'm the second sweetheart. Any fool knows that."

His wife, who stays out of the cockpit, morally supports her husband's flying and is in training as an aerobatic judge. Otherwise, she figures that aerobatic pilots "are all crazy."

Appropriately, Day calls his airplane the "Pitts killer," since the Pitts biplane is popular among aerobatic pilots, including world-class aerobatic pilot Gene Beggs of Midland-Odessa. And Day has outmatched many Pitts pilots in sportsman-class flying. But the plane is underpowered, Day said, for competing in more advanced competition, such as the ultimate aerobatic class, unlimited.

Though he revels in flying, Day finds practising aerobatic maneuvers taxing and exhausting in its intensity.

"In practice, I'm very critical of myself," Day said. "I find little pleasure in practice, because it's work, and I have to force myself to practice."

But on competition day, "I enjoy flying competition," he said. "I really do. I'm going to do as good as I can do."

As does Day, Weis views aerobatic flying as an "art form — an aerial ballet — a three-dimensional dance deserving of the finest symphonic accompaniment. Even when less than perfect, aerobatic flying is rare freedom and rarer privilege," Weis wrote in his book, "The Starduster."

And in just plain flying for pleasure, said Day, "You don't get away from your problems. But you do have the ability to make the Earth and the Sun change places. And that's a neat feat."

YMCAs top others in United Way funds

From Staff Reports

Midland YMCAs topped all other agencies that receive United Way funding, netting monies totaling $378,000 this year, the organization reported.

Total United Way allocations represent about an 11 percent increase from the amount that was distributed last year, officials said.

The 1986-87 Fall Campaign was highlighted by a $250,000 donation from the Midland independent oil and gas partnership of Wagner and Brown to underwrite the organization's administrative costs. The gift meant that total monies raised went directly to the 15 agencies served.

The campaign raised nearly $2.3 million and about $1.9 million was allocated to agencies it supports.

The following agencies received funding:

American Cancer Society, $82,170; American Red Cross, $130,000, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, $70,000; Boy Scouts of America, Buffalo Trail Council, $128,000; Boys' Club of Midland, $116,000; Petro-Plains Camp Fire, $39,000; Casa de Amigos, $108,000; Council on Alcoholism, $38,000; Family Services, $175,000; Midland Rape Crisis Center, $34,000; Palmer Drug Abuse Program, $147,284; Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, $96,000; Permian Basin Girl Scouts, $83,000; Salvation Army-Corps Program, $144,000; Salvation Army-Day Care, $113,000; YMCA Day Care, $143,000; YMCA Afterschool Child Care-Alamo, $50,000; YMCA Afterschool Child Care-Central, $55,000; YMCA Afterschool Child Care-Washington, $30,000; Washington YMCA Youth Sports and Services, $62,000; Washington YMCA, $18,000; YMCA Summer Child Care-Alamo, $11,500; and YMCA Summer Child Care-Washington, $8,500.

Additional money was given out to the American Cancer Society, United Way of Texas, United Way of America, a contingency fund, a Venture Grant Fund and a Pledge Loss Reserve of five percent of the amount raised.

Four grants totaling $51,000 were give to the following agencies: Midland Youth Centers, $10,000; Community and Senior Services, $20,000; Citywide Community Services, $11,000; and Family Services (for development of a child abuse program), $10,000.

Grants are provided year-round by United Way to organizations who may or may not be agencies of United Way. Grants may be requested for various purposes including expansion of an existing service or creation of a new service in the community.

Sealed indictment returned in Gilkerson case, source says

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A Midland grand jury has returned a sealed indictment in the case of a 24-year-old Midland woman missing since November, an anonymous source told the Reporter-Telegram this morning.

Ralph Petty, assistant Midland county district attorney, said this morning a grand jury of the 238th district court returned the indictment Wednesday, but he declined comment when asked if the indictment was returned in connection with the Nov. 8 disappearance of June Carpenter Gilkerson.

Ms. Gilkerson was reported missing by her husband 12 hours after her disappearance. Her car was found at a local motel, her purse, sneakers and car keys still inside.

A grand jury has heard evidence in the case once before, but failed to return an indictment. Among the witnesses that appeared was a 40-year-old Midland man police said was linked to the woman's car by "independent physical evidence."

But Petty said the indictment was not returned against the man, who police said was considered a prime suspect in the disappearance.

June C. Gilkerson

Top officials at the Midland Police Department and Midland County Sheriff's office declined to comment on the case.

Texas Treasurer Ann Richards holds up a necklace, one of many items the state will auction off in May, at an Austin press conference Thursday. It is among the 30,000 unclaimed items from safe deposit boxes which will be for sale.

State treasury readies to clear out its 'attic'

AUSTIN (AP) — Treasurer Ann Richards is having a big attic sale this month to raise money for the treasury.

But she hopes the second state auction of items abandoned in bank safety deposit boxes and vaults may find the owner of a family treasure that Aunt Bessie put in a safety deposit box and forgot.

"That would be wonderful," Ms. Richards said Thursday at a preview of some of the 30,000 unclaimed objects that will be on sale May 9-10 at the Austin City Coliseum.

At the first auction in 1985, which produced $188,000 for the state treasury, a couple identified items that once belonged to a relative.

"We're particularly interested in these two valuable rings," Ms. Richards said, displaying a five-carat pear-shaped diamond and a two-carat diamond surrounded by other stones.

"They were owned by a San Antonio woman who put them in a San Antonio bank deposit box. We know she went to Mexico City, but we don't know where from there. She just disappeared. Vanished."

State law says if a bank is forced to open a safety deposit box because of unpaid rental, the bank must keep the contents for five years. Then the bank turns the items over to the treasury.

"We are always looking for the owners, but there reaches a point when we really have to get rid of contents," Ms. Richards said. "If the owner turns up after the auction, we give them what we received."

The treasury advertises the unclaimed items once a year in newspapers statewide. A professional locator firm is hired, on a commission basis, to attempt to find owners of some of the most valuable items.

Program hurts rural doctors, lawmaker says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Rep. Ralph Hall angrily accused Health and Human Services officials of running a medical watchdog program that discriminates against doctors from rural areas.

Nearly 40 doctors have been barred from collecting Medicare payments from patients because peer review organizations, or PROs, reported that they were providing poor medical care.

Seventy-five percent of those doctors are from rural areas, and two-thirds practice in rural Texas.

Hall, a member of the subcommittee on health and the environment, said at a hearing Thursday the sanction decisions are made without giving the doctors adequate chance to defend themselves in closed sessions.

In some states, physicians can't bring an attorney or expert witnesses to the PRO review sessions in their behalf.

"This total lack of due process has created a very serious concern among the physicians, hospitals and the Medicare patients of our country," said Hall, a three-term Democrat from Rockwall.

Several Texas doctors testifying before the subcommittee echoed Hall's sentiments, saying that in addition to the lack of an appeal process, they fear being judged by big-city doctors who don't know the idiosyncracies of country medicine.

"I can say unequivocably that doctors in rural Texas are confused and are scared about the process of peer review by the PRO," said Billy Bob Brame, a doctor from the West Texas town of Eldorado and president of the Texas Medical Association.

"I know that there are doctors in West Texas who are afraid to admit patients to the hospital because of the excessive scrutiny of their records by urban physicians with a very high-tech practice perspective," Brame testified.

Inspector General Richard P. Kusserow told the committee that sanctioning a doctor was the last resort under the PRO system, and comes only after attempts to educate the doctor in question.

Kusserow said that of the 30 million Medicare hospital discharges since the PRO program began in 1983, only 6,500 cases involving 2,500 doctors or hospitals have been identified by PROs as involving poor medical care.

"Yet through 1987, only 104 cases were referred by PROs to the office of the inspector general for review and further action," Kusserow said. "Of this number, 40 resulted in the department's exclusion of a provider or practitioner — 39 doctors and one hospital."

In another 22 cases, fines were levied, and in 16 cases the inspector general threw out the PRO's recommendation. There are currently 26 cases pending.

But Hall said the system needs more flexibility. He has introduced a bill that would give any doctor recommended for sanctions by a PRO the chance to appeal the decision in their local district court.

"We only want to be sure that some computer program or group of non-peer, big-city physicians — without the benefit of site visits or consultations — does not have the life or death hold over our rural physicians and their practice of medicine."

Reps. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, and Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo, told the subcommittee that they agree with the concept of peer review but that Congress has to do something to ensure doctors get their day in court.

Shuttle lands safely in simulated spaceflight

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Space Shuttle Discovery landed safely in a simulated spaceflight that had all the cliff-hanging tension and sweaty palms of the real thing, officials say.

The 56-hour pretend spaceflight ended Thursday with a mock landing at Edwards Air Force Base in California after astronauts and flight controllers found correct solutions to 180 problems created in computer simulation.

Discovery experienced a simulated rocket malfunction just as it was to return to Earth. The astronauts and engineers had to reprogram computers in just 90 minutes to make the successful landing.

Stokes McMillian, the simulation supervisor, said the mock mission had all the stomach-knotting feeling of the real thing. To heighten the effect, films of an actual launch and landing were projected in Mission Control.

"I've never gone through emotions like that before in a simulation," McMillian said. "My palms were sweaty and you could cut the tension with a knife."

Officials said the object of the pretend spaceflight was to train flight controllers who will have a key role in future shuttle missions.

Mission flight director Charles Shaw said the exercise was "an unqualified success, showing that we are ready to start flying."

More than 600 engineers took part in the exercise, with Mission Control flight team shifts working around the clock at the Johnson Space Center.

An astronaut crew of five, led by commander Michael L. Coats, worked in a shuttle mission simulator that is identical to a spacecraft cockpit. They communicated with Mission Control, just as they would in orbit.

Computers ran the displays in both the mock cockpit and in Mission Control, and caused the spacecraft controls to respond just as the would in space.

In a separate room, a team of simulation experts continually created problems that forced the Mission Control team and the astronauts to find solutions.

In a portion of the Banuelos confession not mentioned by the prosecutor, Banuelos stated that when he realized the baby was dead "he felt so bad he wanted to commit suicide, that he wanted to tell about it, he was sorry and wanted to die."

During presentation of his argument in the guilt-innocence phase, Alvarado questioned why the young mother, Modesta Gomez, was not aware of what was happening, since the baby's crib was located at the foot of the bed in the small room. Prosecutors did not call the young mother to testify during the trail. Reportedly, this point too caused jurors some consternation during deliberations.

Two Midland men arrested soon after alleged burglary

Police Roundup

Two Midland men are in city jail this morning after they were arrested Thursday afternoon shortly after police responded to a burglary in progress call.

According to reports, police received a report two men were seen crawling over a fence near a residence in the 1700 block of East Oak Avenue. When police arrived, they found a back door leading to a storage area opened, and found the kitchen door of a residence kicked open. A videocassette recorder valued at $800 that had been reported stolen from the residence, was found in an alley, police said.

Officer Paul Stroope, who was the first officer at the scene, saw two men running from the residence. The men, ages 17 and 19, were found sitting in a pickup truck and were arrested.

Police are also investigating the burglary of a residence in the 1600 block of North Weatherford that netted burglars jewelry valued at about $18,000.

According to reports, 25 cross pendants valued at $12,000, five watches valued at $1,475, a set of diamond jewelry valued at $900, a jade bracelet valued at $700, almost $900 cash in a bank bag, and several other items were reported stolen.

Police said the burglary occurred between 11 a.m. and 4:20 p.m. Thursday.

According to police, the residence had been ransacked. Reports said someone entered the residence through a back door that was apparently forced open.

In other reports, a videocassette recorder, valued at $300 and a 21-inch color television set valued at $299, were reported stolen from a residence in the 2400 block of North Pecos Street. Police said the burglary occurred between 8 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. Thursday.

A 12-gauge shotgun, valued at $800 and a set of gold-plated earrings valued at $150, were reported stolen from a residence in the 2200 block of Bedford Drive. Reports said the burglary occurred between 8 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Thursday.

STATE IN BRIEF

Sims' hunting-license legislation clears Senate

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate created a new five-day non-resident hunting license Thursday for the benefit of out-of-state deer hunters.

The bill, by Rep. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, goes to the House.

Sims told the Senate that the $200 non-resident hunting license set by the 1985 Legislature had resulted in a heavy dropoff of deer hunters coming to Texas from adjoining states.

Sims' measure would create a special five-day non-resident license for $100 that could be issued only one time each season.

The bill was amended by Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, to provide a special $10 license for non-residents who want to hunt on a game bird preserve.

The vote on Sims' bill was 29-0.

Witness recants testimony

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A witness says he testified falsely against a man who was sentenced to 1,000 years in prison for killing a policeman.

The inmate, Eugene Spencer, 43, was in federal court Wednesday, arguing that police, prosecutors and a probation officer coerced the witness, Samuel Walker, to lie during Spencer's 1973 trial.

State District Judge Archie Lee Brown initially sentenced Spencer to 10,000 years in prison in a gas-station robbery during which patrolman Antonio Canales was shot to death. Brown later reduced the sentence to 1,000 years.

Spencer has been having problems in prison, officials said. Last year, after serving almost 14 years, he was passed over for parole consideration after losing 1,100 days of earned good time.

Walker on Wednesday told U.S. Magistrate Robert B. O'Connor that he lied at Spencer's trial.

Fire sets off explosion

EL PASO (AP) — Sparks from wires in an underground vault set off an explosion that blew off manhole covers, caused a fire and snarled traffic downtown, officials say.

The fire was contained to a vault in an alley between two busy streets, and no one was injured, fire Chief Joe Wilson said.

"Because of the rains, water may have gotten in" the vault, said Henry Quintana, spokesman for El Paso Electric Co. "Diesel fuel had seeped into the vault, maybe washed down by rain."

El Paso Electric was looking into the incident, but Quintana speculated that worn insulation in two 125-volt wires may have come in contact with the rainwater, setting off sparks that in turn made the fuel explode and burn.

The explosions occurred at about 7:45 a.m. Thursday, when many workers were arriving downtown. Police blocked off several streets around the area and traffic was backed up for 30 minutes, said police spokesman Lt. J.R. Grijalva.

Principal's son disciplined

THE WOODLANDS (AP) — A junior high school principal's son was among 50 male students who chose to be paddled rather than run 100 yards on their hands and feet as punishment for unsatisfactory conduct, the principal says.

"It was either do bear crawls or get a pop," Knox Junior High School Principal Thomas Randle said Wednesday.

Randle said 63 pupils, all seventh-graders and part of a 120-student athletics class, were given the choice of punishment for unsatisfactory conduct marks in academic classes. Six-week report cards came out Monday.

"It's just something our school does to reinforce academics and show the students they can't always cut up in class," Randle said.

But Kristi Kitchens, whose 13-year-old son, Scott was among the 50 who chose to be paddled, said she signed a paper at the beginning of the school year indicating her opposition to corporal punishment.

Randle, however, said her opposition "was never reflected in our files." He said students who receive bad conduct marks are usually kept from competing in sports events, but there are no athletics so near the end of school.

Elderly face bleak future

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A Texas sociologist says the number of elderly Hispanics in Arizona will more than double by the year 2000, creating a cataclysmic problem of long-term care in the Hispanic community.

Rumaldo Z. Juarez, a sociology professor at Pan American University at Edinburg, Texas, told an audience at the University of Arizona College of Nursing Wednesday night that Hispanics face different long-term care needs because they were less able financially and educationally to plan for their retirement.

Citing a Pan American University study of three counties in Texas, Juarez said two-thirds of elderly Hispanics considered themselves in fair to poor health.

Hispanic women also are widowed at a high rate and are often left without means of providing for themselves after the death of their spouse, Juarez said.

The outlook for Hispanics is bleak because of the high rate of Hispanic students who do not complete high school Juarez said.

Loan litter ranger roams

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — It doesn't pay to mess with Texas, but if you do in Bexar County the chances of getting caught will soon increase.

Bexar County will soon have the only litter ranger in Texas.

His sole job will be to ticket people who throw bottles, cans and candy wrappers on state roadways.

The Texas Highway Commission decided Thursday to begin the pilot program in 30 to 60 days.

Money from the state's $1 million "Don't Mess With Texas" anti-litter campaign, $37,846.11, was given to the Keep Texas Beautiful council to fund the 18-month project.

The money will be used for a salary, car and uniforms, Carolyn Goodall, state Highway and Public Transportation Department spokeswoman, said.

"We want to see if the program will pay for itself," Goodall said.

Dystocia is the scientific word for describing a difficult delivery during the birthing process. This most frequently occurs in first-calf heifers — 50 percent — while about 25 percent of the dystocias occur in second-calf heifers.

Entry of a fetus into the birth canal is described by three terms — presentation, position and posture. Presentation refers to whether the fetus is coming forwards, backwards or sideways. Position refers to whether the fetus is right side up or upside down. Posture refers to whether the head and neck are in proper position or perhaps if the feet and legs are in proper relationship to the body for delivery. Improper presentation, position or posture can result in dystocia.

Calving difficulty, however, is most frequently due to disproportionate size; in other words, the calf being delivered is too big for the birth canal.

Delivery of a live calf is a critical factor in the success of any cattle operation. Cows that are calving should be observed at intervals of no greater than 2-3 hours, coupled with proper attempts at intervention. Once intervention is attempted, though, professional help should be obtained, if progress has not been made within half an hour.

A farm and ranch business management seminar for women will be conducted at four locations in Texas this year to accommodate the response of women landowners to a similar program last year.

The three-day seminar is provided by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and will be led by Wayne Hayenga, an Extension economist and attorney.

Young crops, pastures needing some moisture

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Hot, dry conditions over the eastern two-thirds of the state accelerated planting activities this week, but moisture is needed in many areas to complete planting operations and boost young crops and pastures.

Although some good rains were recorded in western areas, record-high daytime temperatures of 90 or above in eastern sections continued to stress many crops and pastures as April ended with extremely limited rainfall over much of the state, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

April was a month of extremes for Texas farmers and ranchers, with damaging record cold and frost reported on April 3 and 4, limited rainfall for most of the state and record high temperatures on a number of dates near the end of the month, he said.

While wheat losses vary across the state as a result of the late season freezes, estimates range from 30 to 70 percent in many counties, and damages are becoming more apparent as dry weather persists. Many wheat fields are being grazed or baled and some has been plowed up as producers prepare the land for other plantings, Carpenter said.

In South Texas, much of the corn crop is outgrowing the frost damage it suffered earlier this month, and the melon crop also is recovering from earlier cold damage, Carpenter noted.

The sugar cane harvest is expected to wind down in the next week in the Rio Grande Valley, where the onion harvest is in full swing. The onion crop also is progressing in the Winter Garden area, where harvests of early vegetables are nearing completion. Citrus groves are under heavy irrigation schedules in the Valley, and the early peach harvest there is active with demand strong, Carpenter said.

Replanting of some cotton and vegetable crops continues in southwest Texas as a result of freeze damage.

Across the state, the fruit crop will be short, with most peaches in upper areas wiped out by the late freeze. Lamar County also lost half of its apple crop due to the freeze.

Planting or replanting of home gardens continues active in many areas and gardens are doing well where they are being watered.

Although ranges and pastures need rain, most livestock continue in good condition with marketing normal and demand strong. Sheep shearing is winding down in west central areas and still active in far western counties.

Sterile screwworms to be released in states

WASHINGTON (AP) — A voracious parasite, the screwworm, is posing a threat to livestock, pets and wildlife in two widely separated target areas where the Agriculture Department has launched an emergency eradication program.

Millions of sexually sterile screwworm flies, which are about twice the size of an ordinary housefly, will be released this weekend in Miami, Fla., and Albuquerque, N.M., to head off a buildup in the fly population, officials announced Wednesday.

According to the plan, the sterile male flies will mate with natural female screwworm flies that might be present. The females will then lay unfertilized eggs that will not hatch. Such programs have been used for years to keep screwworms in check along the U.S.-Mexico border.

The emergency action was ordered after laboratory tests confirmed April 21 that screwworm larvae were found in a hunting dog which passed through airports at Miami and Albuquerque while being returned to the United States from Venezuela, said Bert W. Hawkins, administrator of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

"Sterile flies will be released twice a week for six weeks," Hawkins said.

Early removal of ticks vital to resist disease

Minzenmayer

Because tick movements and bites are seldom felt, careful and frequent examination for ticks on the body and clothing is imperative. Early removal is important since many disease organisms are not transferred until the tick has fed 2 to 8 hours. Always remove the tick with its mouthparts intact. Hasty removal of an attached tick can break off the mouthparts. Mouthparts left in the skin may cause secondary infection. To relax tick mouthparts for easy removel, touch the tick with a hot needle or a few drops of camphor, alcohol, turpentine, kerosene or chloroform. The best method is to grasp the tick firmly with tweezers and remove it with a slow, steady pull.

To obtain some degree of protection against ticks, keep clothing buttoned, shirt tails inside trousers and trouser legs inside tops of socks. A ring of masking tape with the sticky side out placed around the top of boots will trap ticks that are ascending to look for a site to attack. Do not sit on the ground or on logs in brushy areas.

Repellents containing diethyl-m-tolumide, di-methyl phthalate, dimethyl carbate or ethyl hexandiol will protect exposed skin but will not stop ticks from crawling under clothing to reach untreated portions of the body. Permanone, a tick repellent containing a synthetic pyrethrin, may be applied to clothing (do not allow skin contact). Treatment with this product may provide protection for a day or longer.

If a tick infestation occurs, treat the home, yard and pets at the same time. Examine dogs and cats frequently for ticks. Continue treatmnts for as long as needed. Heavy infestations on pets should be handled by a veterinarian.

Light infestations in buildings usually can be controlled with a household residual spray. Apply the insecticides only as light, spot treatments to areas where ticks are found or suspected to be hiding. Do not use these chemicals for treating pets. Treatment around baseboards, window and door casings, wallcracks and in pet sleeping quarters is necessary. To control severe infestations in the home, remove the pet from the house and make repeated applications of approved insecticides at 2- to 4-week intervals. Select a spray that does not have an objectionable odor and will not stain paints, wall paper, tile or rugs.

Tick control in home lawns and other vegetated areas usually can be obtained with residual sprays or dusts. Some suggested insecticides include; carbaryl, Diazinon, Dursban, and synergized pyrethrins.

The insecticide user always is responsible for the effects of pesticide residues on his own premises, as well as problems caused by drift from his property to that of othrs. Always read and follow carefully all instructions on the product label.

Old South romance sold in antebellum homes

EDITOR'S NOTE — In historic Natchez, Miss., the oldest surviving city on the Mississippi River, some 600 homes built before the Civil War are still standing. Now those old antebellum mansions are attracting wealthy buyers from out of the state. As one Californian said, "My wife has always had a Scarlett O'Hara complex."

By KATHY EYRE

NATCHEZ, Miss. (AP) — Westerners and other outsiders with a yen for the romance of the Old South are buying antebellum mansions in this historic old river town at prices that native sons of Dixie would never pay.

The would-be Rhett Butlers and Scarlett O'Haras are renovating estates that often had been kept in the same Mississippi families for generations. And like money-strapped English aristocrats, many have opened their mansions to the public to make a buck.

"I'd estimate about a quarter of the antebellum homes in Natchez are owned by people from out of the state," says Bob Haltom, a Natchez real estate broker who specializes in the sale of homes built before the Civil War, or the War Between the States as it's called around here. "That's something that's come in just the past 10 years."

It also seems to be a local trend. Real estate brokers in other Old South cities such as Mobile, Ala., Charleston, S.C., and Atlanta report little turnover in antebellum homes in recent years.

Part of the reason may be the rich history of Natchez, a town of about 22,000 residents, and the availability of old homes. Founded in 1716, Natchez is promoted as the oldest surviving community on the Mississippi River — predating New Orleans by two years — and the Natchez Heritage Foundation says 600 antebellum homes are still standing.

It also may be due in part to the salesmanship of Haltom, the Mississippi agent for Sotheby Parke Bernet Realty Corp. Haltom has been buying mailing lists from antique and history magazines and sending color brochures of the homes to prospective clients.

For years, he says, many Southerners have wanted to get rid of their old family mansions, which have either fallen into disrepair or have drained their pocketbooks. But not until recently have they found many buyers interested in paying more than "a pittance" for the old homes, he says.

Haltom says there always have been a handful of out-of-state antebellum homeowners in Natchez. But the number has increased as prices have taken "a quantum leap," he says, with some homes now selling for more than three times what buyers paid for them just a couple of years before.

World Health says AIDS epidemic 'underestimated'

GENEVA (AP) — The World Health Organization said Tuesday the AIDS epidemic has been seriously underestimated and preventing the spread of the virus is mandatory because a treatment is unlikely during the next five years.

"The global progression of HIV mandates preventive action while waiting for technological advances," said a report by the WHO released Tuesday. HIV is an abbreviation for Human Immunodeficiency Virus, which causes AIDS.

"Despite impressive technical and scientific advances it is unlikely that either a vaccine or treatment will become available to assist in controlling the pandemic during the next five years," it said.

"The magnitude of the HIV pandemic and its broad impact have been seriously underestimated and underappreciated," said the report, prepared for a 31-nation meeting on AIDS — Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

AIDS is a fatal affliction in which the body's immune system becomes unable to resist disease. There is no cure.

AIDS is most often transmitted through sexual contact, transfusions of tainted blood and the sharing of contaminated hypodermic needles.

A blood test can determine if a person has developed AIDS antibodies, meaning they have been exposed to the virus and could be carriers of the disease. Not all those exposed develop AIDS.

The WHO report said 46,628 AIDS cases have been reported to the organization by 101 countries, but many nations have not reported since last December.

Pope's move to beatify converted Jew stirs controversy

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Controversy is swirling around Pope John Paul II's beatification of a woman who was born a Jew, became a Carmelite nun and died in a Nazi gas chamber at Auschwitz in 1942.

The pope performed the rite of beatification Thursday, a step toward sainthood, during his five-day visit to West Germany.

The dispute over Edith Stein centers on whether the Nazis killed her because she was a Roman Catholic or because they still viewed her as a Jew.

Another aspect of the dispute is whether the beatification is an insult to Jews and their religion.

During his visit, the pope also will beatify a Jesuit priest who was persecuted by the Nazis but survived.

Born of Jewish parents in what is now Wroclaw, Poland, Miss Stein was an outspoken atheist in her student years. But she was shocked by her experiences as a battlefield nurse in World War I, turned to religion and was baptized a Catholic in 1922 at age 31.

She became a Carmelite nun 11 years later, taking the name Teresia Benedicta a Cruce.

Some maintain she wasn't even a convert to Catholicism in a strict sense, because she previously had professed there was no God.

Still more difficult is her relation to Judaism, because in her 1942 last will and testament she wrote of "the sins of the unbelieving Jewish people."

A MEMBER of Israel's parliament, Shulamit Aloni of the leftist Citizens Rights Movement opposition party, told The Associated Press in Tel Aviv that beatification of Miss Stein is an insult to the Jews.

"We interpret it as a provocation and an insult because 1 million children died in Auschwitz, and they take a woman and beatify her because she became a Catholic. It's ironic to say the least, and it's clearly degrading and humiliating to Jews," she said.

James Baaden, a Jewish author who has written a biography of Miss Stein, told the AP in London the controversy in large part was about why the Nazis killed her.

Baaden said the Nazis killed her because they still viewed her as a Jew.

He maintained that it is not correct to say she converted to Catholicism, because that "suggests she turned away from something that was in some way wrong or base, to embrace something essentially superior."

He added that the Nazis were out to eliminate all Jews, regardless of whether they later embraced other religions. The number of Jews killed by the Nazis is put at 6 million.

Tullia Zevi, president of Italian Jewish Communities, agrees with Baaden that Miss Stein was killed because of her Jewsh origins.

"While beatification is an internal church affair, this particular case has caused concern in Jewish circles because of its implications," Ms. Zevi said in Rome.

She added that the beatification might be interpreted as an act of "Christian triumphalism," which she called inconsistent with the Vatican's expressed desire to have a dialogue with Jews and other religions.

"A DIALOGUE between two religions should be conducted among partners having equal dignity and legitimacy in mutual respect."

Ms. Zevi said she is disturbed because the beatification is taking place in West Germany, "at a time when there is a revisionist trend among some historians aimed at rewriting the history of Nazism in a way that would deny the unique character of the tragedy of the Holocaust and the extermination of millions of (Nazi) opponents and innocent people."

Cardinal Joseph Hoeffner of Cologne, where Miss Stein was beatified, said in a recent pastoral letter the Nazis killed Miss Stein because she was a Catholic.

"The Protestant-baptized Jews were not deported. Edith Stein died because the Nazis in power wanted to take revenge on the Catholic bishops who publicly spoke out for the rights of all people, also the Jews. She is a martyr."

Hoeffner is president of the West German Bishops' Conference, and one of the most influential Catholic voices in the country.

Ulrich von Hehl, head of the Bonn-based Historical Commission Office, described Miss Stein as a victim because she was both Jewish and Catholic.

"Edith Stein was a martyr of Nazi racism because she was a Jew, but also because the Nazis wanted to hit back at Catholic leaders in the Netherlands who had complained about their methods," he wrote in a March 30 article in the Frankfurter Allgemeine newspaper.

MISS STEIN and other Catholic Jews were rounded up after Catholic leaders in the Netherlands, where she had been sent to avoid the Nazis, complained about Dutch Jews and others being sent to concentration camps.

"She was murdered because she was a Jew," Hehl wrote. "Her conversion to Catholicism changes nothing about that. But it cannot be overlooked that her arrest and deportation was part of a quick move for revenge against Catholic Jews in the Netherlands."

She died in the Auschwitz gas chamber Aug. 9, 1942, at age 50.

West German Catholics say Miss Stein's entire life, including her piety and religious writings, are the reasons she is being beatified, not only because she was killed at Auschwitz.

Wolfgang Zengerling, a lay spokesman for the Catholic Bishops Conference in Bonn, told the AP: "Of course we call her a martyr because she died at Auschwitz, but that was just the last phase of her life."

In addition to Jews, several hundred thousand Gypsies, homosexuals and other so-called "undesirables" were killed by the Nazis.

Nun's will cites 'unbelieving' Jews

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — The following is an excerpt from Edith Stein's last will and testament written before she died in a Nazi gas chamber Aug. 9, 1942, translated from the German in which it appeared in a 1983 biography by Romaeus Leuven:

I already accept the death God has planned for me in happiness and full subjugation to his holy will. I ask the Lord that he accept my life and death in his honor and glorification, for all sorrow in the holy heart of Jesus and Mary and the Holy Church, especially for the preservation and fulfillment of our holy order, namely the Cologne and Echt Carmelites, for the sins of the unbelieveing Jewish people so the Lord will be accepted by his own for the magnificence of his kingdom, for the deliverance of Germany and peace in the world, and finally for my relatives, dead and alive, and all those God gave me, that none of them are lost.

Sandinistas relocating civilians to cut Contra support

By ANDREW SELSKY

NUEVA GUINEA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Sandinista government is relocating thousands of civilians in south-central Nicaragua in an attempt to eliminate support for the Contra rebels in the area.

Saturnino Mendoza, a regional director of the Union of Farmers and Cattlemen, said more than 1,800 people have been relocated since the program started April 8 in the sparsely populated zone.

Mendoza claimed many of those being relocated are firm supporters of the U.S.-backed Contras, who have had a steady presence in this area, 120 miles southeast of Managua, the capital.

"The civilians are being removed to take away the social base of the Contras. This will be a big blow to the Contras," he said.

He added that the civilians must leave, whether they want to or not, because their homeland "has become a militarized zone — a no man's land."

The union is helping the government in the program, Mendoza said, in which at least 4,000 people will be moved by the time it is over.

The area being evacuated is remote and extends southeasterly from Nueva Guinea. It was not clear exactly how much territory is covered by the program, authorized under the state of emergency in effect almost continuously since March 1982.

This program is the largest undertaken by the government since it moved thousands of Miskito Indians away from their homelands along the Coco River in northeastern Nicaragua in 1982. That program later was rescinded because of widespread opposition.

(The Associated Press submitted a request last week to the Defense Ministry in Managua for further details of government policy on such evacuations and also sought official comment on the Nueva Guinea relocations, but it did not receive a response. During the weekend, the AP was told no Defense Ministry officials were available to answer the questions or to comment.

(A Western diplomat in Managua, speaking on condition of aponymity, said the Sandinista government evacuates civilians "when it is going to mine certain areas, or establish a free-fire zone or when they think the peasants are pro-Contra.")

Residents of villages strung along a dirt road leading from Nueva Guinea, the region's largest town, to the south say they have seen groups of hundreds of evacuees walking along the road during the past two weeks.

"Yesterday, it took an hour for a group of people to pass by here," Rafael Romero Fonseca said as he lounged outside his rough-hewn shop in Colonia Serrano. "They were carrying hammocks, and had their children, pigs and cows with them. They were escorted by soldiers."

Clemente Duarte, a farmer passing the time of day outside Romero Fonseca's shop, said that since the evacuations began, he has become afraid to tend his fields, which are an hour's ride on horseback in the direction the people were being evacuated from.

"I am afraid to go out there now, because that land has become a free-fire zone," Duarte said. "There are no campesinos out there anymore, just abandoned farms."

About half the evacuees have been taken to a relocation camp called Cascal, about 20 miles north of Nueva Guinea. Three relocation camps in all are being created to take in the flood of evacuees, Mendoza said.

Plots of land within the camps will be assigned to each family in compensation for having to leave their homes, Mendoza added.

The evacuees came from farms hacked out of the jungle. Some said their fields were brimming with beans, corn and rice when government soldiers ordered them to leave earlier this month.

"I was out in the fields cutting corn when I saw the soldiers come," said Santiago Ruiz Rivera, a 62-year-old, one-legged man, "By the time I got to my house it was surrounded by solders. They told me, 'Prepare to leave.' "

Demons Begone 5-2 Derby pick

From Wire Reports

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Demons Begone, unbeaten in three starts this year, is a 5-2 favorite to outleg a field of 16 three-year-olds in the 113th Kentucky Derby Saturday.

Phil Hauswal, 28-year-old trainer, says, "He thinks he's king of the world right now. He thinks he can beat anybody."

The last favorite to win the 1¼-mile Derby at Churchill Downs was Spectacular Bid, who went off at 3-5.

This year's Derby is a wide open affair, judging by the early odds. The entry of Gulch and Leo Castelli, trained by LeRoy Jolley, was made 4-1, while Cryptoclearance was listed at 5-1 and Alysheba, Masterful Advocate and Bet Twice each were rated 6-1. Trainer D. Wayne Lukas' entry of Capote, War and On The Line was made 8-1.

Demons Begone can earn a $1 million bonus offered by Oaklawn Park to any horse who sweeps the Rebel and Arkansas Derby at Oaklawn and the Kentucky Derby.

Saturday's winner also will take a first step toward one of two bonuses.

Triple Crown Productions, Inc., is guaranteeing $5 million, including winners' purses in the three races, to any 3-year-old who sweeps the Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes.

Any 3-year-old competing in all three races also can earn a $1 million bonus by amassing the most points, which will be awarded on a basis of 5 for a win, 3 for second, and 1 for third.

If 17 start, the Derby will be worth a record $793,600, with a record $618,600 to the winner.

ABC will televise from 3:30 to 5 p.m.

Demons Begone, Pat Day aboard, will start from the No. 10 post.

"I didn't care for the one hole and I didn't want to be outside the (main starting) gate," Hauswald said.

The main starting gate holds 14 horses, meaning the three outside horses will break from an auxiliary gate.

"That's one that I didn't want," trainer Scotty Shulhofer said of the No. 1 post drawn for the stretch-running Cryptoclearance, the Florida Derby winner and Flamingo runnerup.

Ferdinand broke from the No. 1 post and came from far back to win the 1986 Derby.

Alysheba, owned by Midland's Dorothy and Pam Scharbauer, drew the No. 3 post and will be ridden by Chris McCarron. Alysheba, is winless in three starts this year after finishing 1986 with a third-place finish in $1 million Breeders' Cup Juvenile won by Capote Nov. 1 at Santa Anita.

He finished first in the Blue Grass April 23 at Keeneland, but was disqualified and placed third. That was his first start since surgery for entrapped epiglottis (a flap that keeps food and water from going down the windpipe.

Day worked Demons Begone three-eighths of a mile in 48 seconds after a quarter in 35 3-5 Thursday morning. "He went super," Day said.

Abilene High's Trey Forkerway lunges backwards trying to make a tag on Jamie Surat, Midland, Thursday's at Zachery Field.

Roused Bulldogs go 8 to beat Abilene, 6-5

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Midland High finally received its District 4-5A wake-up call as the Bulldogs captured a 6-5 eight-inning decision over Abilene High in Thursday's rain make up.

The Bulldogs held their playoff fortunes in their own hands two weeks ago, but fell out of the chase with three straight losses. Against the Eagles, MHS regained some of that lost momentum with the extra inning win.

"We've been on such a mental low since losing to Permian because we weren't playing for anything anymore," MHS coach Tim Whalen said of the Bulldogs' attitude. "These kids had their hopes set so long on going to the playoffs that we've just been dragging around and moping for a while. Hopefully, this will get us going to play (Abilene) Cooper on Saturday."

MHS, 6-5, 13-13, concludes the season Saturday at 2 p.m. in Angels Stadium against Cooper, still undefeated in league play.

Against AHS, the 'Dogs finally showed the spark that will be needed to handle the state's No. 2 ranked Cougars. Despite blowing three leads, MHS rallied each time and finally put the Eagles away.

CRAIG CRAWFORD collected the game-winning RBI with a 380-foot game-ending single to the center field fence to score Jim Werner with the winning run. Crawford has a team-leading 21 RBI, but he remembers the men he left on base in the final inning of the Odessa Permian game more than the ones he's knocked in.

"I was glad I had a chance to make up for the Permian game," said Crawford. "After getting called out on strikes then, I was determined not to let one get by me. I just wanted to put it in play and give it a chance."

Crawford did more than that, he nearly cleared the fence in straightaway center on the two-out hit.

The Bulldog rally made a winner of Eric Boyt, who went the whole way in his final start of the 1987 district season. Boyt struck out 11 Eagles and allowed just four hits. His teammates pitched in for five errors however, leading to four unearned runs and helping send the game into overtime.

Midland High held leads of 1-0, 3-1 and 5-3, but each time the Eagles clawed their way back into a tie — and each time Bulldog fielding miscues keyed the rallies.

IT WAS the second time in as many outings that Boyt had taken a two-run lead into the final inning but could not hold on. But this time, Boyt was able to pitch through and around enough jams to earn the win. The junior finishes the season 4-3, 2-2 in district.

"My stuff was working well for me today. This is the best I've thrown my split-finger fastball," said Boyt, who struck out seven in the first three innings. "(Catcher) Tommy (Yorkman) and coach called a great game. I got a lot of strikeouts on 3-and-2 pitches when they called the split finger."

With Boyt hurling an outstanding game and Crawford stealing the late inning thunder, sophomore Tony Perez' performance was overshadowed. But it was Perez who was critical in giving MHS the lead each time the Eagles tied it up.

He doubled twice, scoring the first time and driving in two on the second one. Then in the decisive eighth, Perez lined a two-out single to set up Crawford's heroics.

Sonics lower boom on Mavs; Rockets soar over Portland

NBA

The state of Texas and the Pacific Northwest each have something to celebrate and something to bemoan from the NBA playoffs.

Basketball fans in Houston rejoiced Thursday as the Rockets eliminated Portland 113-101. But Dallas, which owned the second-best record in the Western Conference, was eliminated 124-98 by Seattle.

The Rockets, who lost in the NBA finals to Boston last year, easily won Game 4 of their series with the Trail Blazers, whose 49-33 record was third in the West and seven games better than Houston's mark. Their Twin Towers were too much for Portland to handle.

Akeem Olajuwon scored 27 points, grabbed nine rebounds and blocked five shots as the Rockets clinched a playoff at home for the first time. RalphSampson scored 18 points and grabbed 10 rebounds.

"They were playing so well I wanted to run for cover," Portland forward Kiki Vandeweghe said. "I wanted to find a foxhole."

The Mavericks probably felt the same way after being bombed by Seattle in Game 4. The SuperSonics lost all five regular-season meetings with Dallas this season by an average of 18½ points.

But it was Seattle which dominated the postseason series. On Thursday night, Tom Chambers scored 31 points and Xavier McDaniel added 29.

"If we played these guys for 10 years, we wouldn't be able to beat them," Dallas Coach Dick Motta said.

Houston hosts Seattle in the next round's opening game on Saturday.

In games tonight, Milwaukee is at Philadelphia, with the Bucks leading 2-1; Atlanta, ahead 2-1, visits Indiana; and Utah tries to end its series, which it leads 2-1, at Golden State.

Rockets 113, Trail Blazers 101

Houston staged a 20-4 surge over the final 4:23 of the third quarter to take command. Robert Reid hit for 22 points, including 10 in the fourth quarter, to keep the Rockets in control.

"Now was a good time for us to come together as a team," Reid said. "The other team's coach knows that if Akeem breaks out and you get on him, Ralph will hurt you. It's nice to have that Triple Tower effect with Jim Petersen coming off the bench."

Blazers Coach Mike Schuler said the matchup disadvantage finally caught up with his team.

"The Rockets are so much bigger than we are, we played absolutely the worst team for us to play in the playoffs because of the matchups," Schuler said.

SuperSonics 124, Mavericks 98

Dallas couldn't overcome the absence of 7-foot-2 center James Donaldson, who was out with a sore right leg. Seattle barely missed injured center Alton Lister as its high-scoring trio of Chambers, McDaniel and especially guard Dale Ellis were unstoppable. It was Ellis, who had 21 points Thursday, who led the Mavericks in their other two victories. The former Maverick had 118 points in the series, including 43 in Game 3.

"We wanted this series badder than anything," said Ellis, who pointed to the Mavericks' bench as he left the court late in the game. "I might look back in a few years and regret that but I got caught up in the moment.

Rod Booker fills flush for Cards

NL

It shouldn't come as any great surprise that Rod Booker has come out of nowhere to do the job at second base for the St. Louis Cardinals. After all, his wife is a cousin of the late Hall of Famer Jackie Robinson.

Actually, Booker came out of Louisville in the American Association earlier this week after Tom Herr went on the disabled list and his stand-in, Jose Oquendo, suffered a muscle strain.

In his first two major-league games he has three hits in six at-bats, including Thursday's 2-for-3, two-RBI performance that helped the Cardinals defeat the San Diego Padres 5-4.

"I feel like I'm still on a cloud. I spent seven years in the minor leagues. I've always wondered what it would be like to be here, and now I know," said the 28-year-old Booker, who spent three years in the Minnesota Twins' organization and was purchased by the Cardinals in April 1983.

An RBI single by the Cardinals' Jack Clark in the third inning broke a 1-1 tie and Booker drew a bases-loaded walk off loser Storm Davis to make it 3-1.

Davis was replaced by Ed Wojna after Terry Pendleton doubled and Clark walked to start the fifth. Pendleton scored on a balk and Booker's two-out single scored Clark with what proved to be the decisive run.

Mets 11, Expos 3

Rick Aguilera pitched hitless ball over the final eight innings and Keith Hernandez, Kevin McReynolds, Howard Johnson and Dave Magadan homered. Aguilera fell behind 3-0 in the first inning on Tim Wallach's RBI single and John Stefero's two-run homer, Montreal's third and last hit. He allowed only two baserunners over the final eight innings, both on walks.

Loser Jay Tibbs gave up six runs in six innings, including a game-tying three-run homer by Hernandez in the bottom of the first and McReynolds' two-run shot in the fifth. Hernandez's homer was his third in as many games and extended his hitting streak to 13 games, his longest as a Met.

Johnson hit a three-run homer off Bob McClure in the seventh and Magadan followed with a solo shot.

Giants 5, Cubs 4

Jeffrey Leonard singled home the tying run in the eighth inning and pinch hitter Harry Spilman singled home the winner in the ninth, both against Chicago relief ace Lee Smith. Chris Speier doubled with one out in the ninth, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on Spilman's single.

The Giants, trailing 2-0, took a 3-2 lead in the sixth when Jose Uribe drew a bases-loaded walk and Bob Melvin hit a two-run single. The Cubs regained the lead in the bottom of the inning on an RBI single by Dave Martinez and Chico Walker's sacrifice fly.

"I don't know where we'd be without him," San Francisco Manager Roger Craig said of Speier, who signed with the Giants after playing out his option with the Cubs last season. "Because of all our injuries he has played second, short and third."

Reds 9, Braves 8

Buddy Bell scored from second base with the winning run on Atlanta shortstop Rafael Ramirez's throwing error after Cincinnati came back from a six-run deficit. The Brayes appeared headed for a sweep of the three-game series after pitcher David Palmer's three-run homer capped a five-run fourth and Ozzie Virgil added a solo homer in the sixth to give Atlanta an 8-2 lead.

But rookie Lloyd McClendon's two-run double in the seventh cut it to 8-4 and the Reds scored four times in the ninth, highlighted by Eric Davis' three-run homer.

Pirates 5, Dodgers 4

Pittsburgh scored the tying and winning runs when Los Angeles failed to turn inning-ending double plays and R.J. Reynolds hit a two-run double.

With the score tied 4-4 in the seventh inning, Reynolds drew a one-out walk. Johnny Ray's high hopper was fielded by first baseman Franklin Stubbs, but as pitcher Orel Hershiser took the throw and turned to make the tag, Ray knocked the ball out of his glove for a two-base error. The runners continued to second and third and Hershiser was charged with a two-base error.

After Sid Bream was walked intentionally, Jim Morrison hit an apparent double play grounder to short, but Bream's slide took out second baseman Steve Sax, allowing Reynolds to score the winning run.

The Pirates tied the score in similar fashion in the sixth inning when shortstop Mariano Duncan mishandled pinch hitter Bobby Bonilla's grounder and settled for a forceout at second instead of a double play.

Stubbs and Duncan homered for the Dodgers against Dorn Taylor, a 28-year-old right-hander making his major-league debut. Taylor, a former janitor who spent three years in semi-pro ball before signing a minor-league contract, allowed three runs and five hits in four innings.

Oakland's Reggie Jackson resumes his old Brewer-battering ways

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Reggie Jackson has battered Milwaukee pitching throughout his career and there was no letting up against the hottest Brewers' club in history.

Jackson's two-run homer Thursday wiped out a 1-0 lead held by the Brewers, who were trying for their 19th victory in April, and the Oakland Athletics won 4-1. Jackson's 420-foot drive in the third inning was the 552nd homer of his career; 61 have been against Milwaukee.

"I seem to play well against them. Who knows why?" said the 40-year-old slugger, whose other career marks against Milwaukee include 157 RBIs and a .285 average.

"I gave him a pitch he could hit, a slider up, but I didn't think the homer would beat me," said loser Bill Wegman, 2-1.

The Brewers came from behind several times in their 18-3 April and they had a team batting average of .304 before running into Oakland's Dave Stewart and Jay Howell.

The Brewers' April record was the second best in baseball history behind the 18-2 start of the 1984 Detroit Tigers. Milwaukee starts May with a four-game lead in the American League East.

Jackson has four homers, the last two coming in Oakland victories, and 11 RBIs, including seven in his last six games.

"Reggie puts a charge into about anything he does. As he's said, he's not here to have fun, he's here to win." Oakland Manager Tony LaRussa said.

AL

Mariners 11, Red Sox 2

Jim Presley hit two home runs and Scott Bankhead held Boston to five hits in a game that featured two bench-clearing incidents and a full-scale brawl.

Bankhead struck out seven and walked one. Loser Bruce Hurst was roughed up for seven runs in 3 2-3 innings as the Red Sox lost for the sixth time in their last seven games.

In the fourth inning, Bankhead hit Mike Greenwell on the wrist. Greenwell, who homered in the second inning, charged the mound but no punches were thrown. In the seventh, Boston's Steve Crawford hit Presley in the ankle. Presley started for the mound but was wrestled down by catcher Marc Sullivan. Many individual fights broke out and Crawford and Red Sox Manager John McNamara were ejected.

Greenwell's home run gave the Red Sox a 1-0 lead. Seattle went ahead 2-1 in the bottom of the second on Presley's first home run and an RBI single by Rey Quinones. The Mariners put the game out of reach with six unearned runs in the fourth. John Christensen's two-run double chased Hurst and Presley followed with a three-run homer off Crawford.

Seattle's John Moses and Boston's Dwight Evans also homered.

Tigers 12, Angels 4

Rookie Matt Nokes hit a grand slam in the seventh inning to break open a close game, and Jack Morris recovered from a shaky start. Nokes' fourth homer of the season and first career grand slam gave the Tigers an 8-3 lead.

"Fast" Photo

Fast Photo Service is Midland's original fast photo lab. It has built it's reputation on quality work. How have they done that?

One very important element is the lab's quality equipment. Salton explains that their modern equipment streamlines the work. Each negative is printed and viewed individually. The entire process is computer controlled.

Thus, each customer's film gets the individual attention it needs. Color balancing is done for each kind of film, as well as under and over exposure. Each negative can be checked.

In keeping with their tradition of quality service, Fast Photo Service gives you personal attention when you pick up your film.

Fast Photo Service is excellent with color prints, in lab processing, black and white film, E6 slides, color and black and white enlargements, copy work for old photos, portraits and instant passports.

Color film is processed in just one hour, while disc film, black and white film and slides require only one day. Enlargements from 5x7 to 20x24 prints are made in-house, and usually require only three days.

In addition to offering a wide variety of quality services on a timely basis, Fast Photo Service has some kind of special going just about all the time. Film processing, cameras, frames and albums are items you may find at reduced prices at various times. Be sure to check these specials out.

How to photograph children

There's nothing like a picture of a child. You've seen it, the sparkling in the eye, the funny pose, wearing dad's shoes, playing with pots and pans. But, while children are natural photographic subjects, there are several techniques to make pictures of children even better.

•Close Ups—it's usually the face that counts, so get as close as you can. Remember, when they grow up you won't care about the shoes they wore. It's the face in the picture you'll cherish.

•Their Eye's View—with toddlers it's critical to get on your hands and knees and photograph them at their level. You'll be amazed how much more interesting your pictures will be—and how much more interested your child will be in being photographed.

•Psychological Tethers—something interesting, a toy or a keychain, is ideal to hold your child's attention so you can focus and get a better picture. The child's interest in the object will give the picture more impact.

You can have the patience of Job and still not get the results you want if you don't know your camera. Nothing encourages a child to hightail it faster than a couple refrains of "Hold it right there while I figure out how this works." Know your camera ahead of time. Does it have automatic focus? If not, do you know how to focus it? Does it advance the film for you? If not, do you know how to do it? Will you need a flash? Answer these questions before you bring on the youngster.

After you get those treasured pictures, don't hide them. What's the use of a great picture hidden in a drawer? Save your pictures in a photo album for protection and handy reference. Have enlargements made. Have your favorite pictures matted and framed to be displayed proudly at home or the office. Ask your film processor about wallet-sized copies. The joy of photographing children is in the end result. Display your pictures so you can enjoy them more.

Reasons to use professionals

This month being National Photography Month is a good time to go over some mis-conceptions about the professional studio, and the methods of pricing the work done by the professional photographer. One of the main concerns and drawbacks to the individual who is in the market for portraits is the professional's sitting fee. This sitting fee is a necessity due to the expenses of the photographer for creating the previews. The sitting alone can cost the photographer twenty-five or thirty dollars in actual expenses, not to mention the cost of countless seminars and training sessions.

The professional portrait is treated with ultra-violet sprays to retard fading so they will remain color-brilliant far longer than most color prints. Granted, the professional will be more expensive, but like the old addage, "The bitterness of poor quality remains long after the sweetness of low price is forgotten."

Professional photography is truly an art form, and as with all art, the cost may be a bit more, but the end result is a treasure for a lifetime.

Transferring to video

One of the nice things about video recording is its flexibility. If you can see it, you can probably capture it on videotape and playback on your television set at your convenience.

Like what, for instance? Well, if your tired of sorting through album after album of photographic prints whenever you want to show off, why not transfer them to videotape. You can store a lot of prints on a video cassette and have access to them electronically. Use your video camera's macro lens for taking nice tight shots of your prints. About ten seconds apiece should be long enough for average viewing. If you want to view a particular scene longer, simply press the pause button on your VCR to hold the image for as long as you wish.

As you tape each print, add a descriptive entry to an index and include the video tape counter number so you can quickly access the print when you want it. When you want to view a particular print, a quick search through the index will tell you what counter number to go to. If you'd like to have your slides or movies transfered to videotape, your photo dealer should be able to help. More and more dealers offer video transfer services or can recommend a transfer service to you.

A partner strengthens your hand when it comes to improving profits and productivity. Your pace is more deliberate than in the past. You know where you want to go and how to get there. A new love starts off slowly but gains momentum in the fall.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Child care expert Dr. Benjamin Spock, Chicago Cubs slugger Keith Moreland, actor Brian Aherne, actor-singer Theodore "Bikel, crooner Bing Crosby, Jordan's King Hussein, music's Lorenz Hart, Russian Empress Catherine the Great, singer Larry Gatlin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The soothing vibrations between you and the love of your life makes this a weekend to remember. Being outdoors adds to your joy and helps you relax. Travel enjoys highly favorable influences.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may have to get in some extra licks at work. Your family will be tolerant if your plans do not come as a surprise. Write important letters without further delay. Contact your allies.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are full of brilliant ideas, but may not have an audience to share them with today. Save them for next week. Look for ways to stretch your dollars or earn extra income.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are making it difficult for someone to help you. Get over the idea that you have to do everything by yourself. Life is smoother when everyone works together. Welcome a helping hand.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Put work aside and get out and play. You benefit from a change of pace. Relax and do what you want to do for a change. Make summer travel plans now to avoid being disappointed.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your family has a great need for your company this weekend. Meet your responsibilities and you will benefit in a variety of ways. Fate favors your efforts to get ahead. Show perseverance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Fitting in with a partner's plan is the best way to go today. Pushing a relationship too fast could leave you with a heavy heart and not much else. Slow down a bit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): People will seem more superficial than they really are. Go ahead and find projects you can handle alone. An outdoor job could have powerful appeal right now. Try to take minor setbacks less seriously.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do not get left out. Go to the party. Politics are changing some priorities. It is important that you get a chance to represent yourself. Two romantic relationships at one time mean trouble.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are sure about what you want and your partner is willing to support you. Go for it now rather than later. Short trips prove useful. A sense of humor revives an idea.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A chance meeting could help you finalize a business deal. A charming interloper is looking for romance and companionship. Set your sights on winning a competition. Hard work makes all possible. Persevere!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Shyness works in your favor when building a romantic relationship, but hard-nosed business people won't fall for it. Avoid nitpicking. Too much criticism can kill romance. Focus on loved one's good points.

Opening lead: Six of ♠

When you have no legitimate play for your contract, run your long suit. You would be surprised at the strange things that might happen, even against expert opposition.

Even at this vulnerability, we are not sure we would raise to six clubs with the North hand. There is just too great a risk that your side has two fast diamond losers.

That was indeed the case here, but South was lucky to escape immediate demise when West chose to lead a spade. The bad news was that the lead removed an entry to dummy prematurely, so there was no legitimate line for the contract. Declarer, Dorothy Hayden Truscott of Riverdale, NY, won the ace, ruffed a spade and, stranding the ace of hearts on the table, proceeded to run off seven club tricks. Both defenders felt they had to retain three hearts to guard against dummy's long suit, so each came down to one diamond. Declarer led the ten of diamonds at trick 10, and scored the last three tricks with her last trump and the 3-2 of diamonds.

Was there any justification for East-West's defense at rubber bridge? At duplicate?

At rubber bridge it would be inexcusable. If declarer held the king of hearts, she had 12 tricks—nine trumps, the ace of spades and ace-king of hearts. But what about at duplicate, where the heart suit might be the key to an overtrick?

At tournament play, you must judge the likelihood of the other pairs in your direction having to defend against six clubs. Since North-South barely have half the deck (you should be aware of that by the time declarer plays her eighth trump), few pairs are apt to get to slam. Since you are destined for a bad score if the opponents make their contract, you should presume declarer does not have the king of hearts and hold only two cards in the suit and at least two diamonds.

Creation of fire companies marked Philadelphia's growth

Associated Press

Tuesday, May 1, 1787
PHILADELPHIA TODAY

Weather: 75, wind west southwest, cloudy, thunder and rain

Alarm Fire Company was founded this day. This brought to 19 the number of fire companies in the city.

The Street Commissioners today ordered five citizens to repair walks and grates in front of their property.

In the year ending this date, Pennsylvania Hospital reported that it treated 179 poor, diseased persons. Of that number, 50 were lunatics.

CONFEDERATION TODAY

DELEGATES TODAY

William Samuel Johnson of Connecticut attended the continuing session of the Confederation Court of Appeals.

George Washington rode to all his plantations, where he observed that the first corn planting was being eaten by birds as fast as it came up.

1787 Constitution Daybook

Gosrunus Erkelens, a recent Dutch emigre, sent a sample of cobalt to Benjamin Franklin. Erkelens' mine was near Middletown, Conn. He asked Franklin's assistance in protecting his discovery and in marketing the ore.

LOOKING BACK
Philadelphia Fire Companies

Alarm Fire was Philadelphia's 19th company, but that number was somewhat misleading as it only represented those companies active in 1787. Three companies, Britannia, King George III, and Queen Charlotte, disbanded during the Revolution when their names became unacceptable. Six companies were also established by 1787 in what were then separate villages in Philadelphia County. Today those areas are all incorporated into the city of Philadelphia.

This proliferation of fire companies was a certain indication of the city's growth. Philadelphia was only 36 years old when the first fire engine was put in service in 1718. Twelve years later, in 1730, Benjamin Franklin and his friends organized the first fire company, the Union Fire Company.

By 1803, the Philadelphia City Council contributed regularly to the fire companies' operating budgets. In 1870 they became a regularly paid city service.

In modern day Philadelphia, fire service is provided by 121 companies. This includes 24 rescue units and two marine fire companies.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Debra Winger and her actor husband, Timothy Hutton, have a new co-production — a baby boy named Emanuel Noah.

Mother and child, the couple's first, were doing fine Thursday, said spokeswoman Pat Kingsley.

The new parents waited more than 24 hours to pick a name for the 8-pound, 11-ounce boy, who was born at 6:35 a.m. Wednesday, Ms. Kingsley said.

The couple didn't "want to rush it and decide prematurely. He (Emanuel) has to live with it the rest of his life," the spokeswoman said.

Miss Winger, 31, and Hutton, 26, were married March 16, 1986.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kathleen Turner is expecting her first child sometime this year, but the pregnancy will not affect filming of her latest movie, a spokeswoman says.

"I don't know anything else," publicist Susan Geller said Thursday.

The movie, "Switching Channels," is an updated version of the classic "His Girl Friday," a 1940 comedy about the newspaper business.

Miss Turner, who was nominated for a Best Actress Oscar this year for her performance in "Peggy Sue Got Married," will play the Rosalind Russell part and Michael Caine portrays the character originated by Cary Grant.

Miss Turner, 32, is married to real estate agent Jay Weiss.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) — Bill Cosby will have some words of encouragement for his daughter, Erika — and about 680 other Wesleyan University seniors graduating this month.

The 40-year-old star of "The Cosby Show" will give the 1987 commencement address and receive an honorary doctor of humane letters degree on May 31, the school announced Thursday.

Erika Cosby is to receive a bachelor's degree.

Her father, who is also a best-selling author on fatherhood, holds a doctorate in education from the University of Massachusetts.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — James Caan says he ended his five-year absence from the movies after director Francis Ford Coppola made him an offer he couldn't refuse.

Caan stars with Anjelica Huston and James Earl Jones in "Gardens of Stone," which is set for release this month. He plays an Army sergeant who served in Vietnam.

"Of course, the circumstances were terrific with Francis Coppola, who is to me the best, and a great piece of material," Caan said in a recent interview.

Caan, who was nominated for an Academy Award for his performance in Coppola's 1972 movie "The Godfather," said he took a hiatus from the movies after making "Kiss Me Goodbye" in 1982 to spend time with his son, now 10.

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Wallace, NBC's chief White House correspondent, is leaving as anchorman of the network's Sunday night newscast to become moderator of "Meet the Press" Sunday mornings.

The change takes effect May 10, NBC said. Wallace will succeed Marvin Kalb, moderator of "Meet the Press" since 1983, who is leaving NBC to join the faculty of Harvard University.

Dollar mixed

LONDON (AP) — The dollar edged up against the Japanese yen but declined against other major currencies in early European trading today.

Most markets on the European continent were closed for May Day, contributing to thin trading in London.

The dollar's improvement in Tokyo was linked in part to trade talks in Washington between President Reagan and Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone.

Midmorning dollar rates in London compared with late Thursday:

—1.4655 Swiss francs, down from 1.4690.

—5.9685 French francs, down from 5.9763.

The dollar fell marginally in relation to the British pound, which traded at $1.6665, compared with $1.6645 late Thursday.

Gold bullion fell in Hong Kong but rose in London. A trader here said the metal was getting firm support at the $450 level. Bullion trading was described as light.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $452.15 a troy ounce, up from $450.50 late Thursday. Zurich markets were closed.

Earlier, gold closed in Hong Kong at a bid of $451.43, down from $454.18.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid of $7.88 an ounce, down 2 cents from late Thursday.

STOCKS

Dow advances

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market staged a broad advance Thursday, following through on Wednesday's rally amid hopes for an improvement in the dollar's performance in foreign exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 32.10 to 2,286.36, adding to its 22.36-point gain Wednesday.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 183.06 million shares, against 173.59 million in the previous session.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 2 to 1 in the overall tally on the NYSE, with 1,108 up, 499 down and 354 unchanged. The exchange's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained 1.92 to 162.90.

Alaska frontier tempts budget-plagued Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, launching its quest for a new oil frontier in Alaska, is dangling some very big bait in front of a Congress struggling with huge budget and foreign trade deficits.

By opening up the coastal plain of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to oil rigs, Congress can reduce the need to buy foreign oil, produce royalties for the Treasury and give the nation a net economic benefit as high as $325 billion, says William Horn, an assistant Interior secretary.

That figure is based on the 1.5 million-acre plain yielding 9.2 billion barrels of oil, the maximum amount possible under Interior Department projections that acknowledge the prediction is a long shot.

Horn, who began the Capitol Hill selling job Thursday, said that even under the mean recoverable estimate of 3.2 billion barrels, the nation would enjoy net economic benefits of $79.4 billion, with federal revenues totaling $38 billion.

He offered the numbers to the House interior water and power subcommittee, telling the panel the economy and national security must take priority over a herd of caribou and other environmental questions.

The coastal plain on the northern end of the 19-million-acre refuge represents the nation's biggest chance to boost its sagging oil production significantly, according to Horn.

"It is rated by geologists as the most outstanding petroleum exploration target in the onshore United States," he said, adding that 10 years of drilling 70 miles away at the huge Prudhoe Bay complex have caused no environmental problems for Alaska's vast North Slope area.

The department says petroleum reserves below the coastal plain could rival those at Prudhoe Bay, which accounts for nearly 20 percent of U.S. production. With Prudhoe's output expected to decline significantly by 2000, it is imperative for Congress to lift its ban on drilling on the coastal plain, Horn said.

"If we delay, our inaction would serve to blindfold America to its ability to increase domestic production," he testified. "It would also send a dangerous signal to the world oil market that America is not willing to help itself avoid increased dependence on the Middle East's substantial concentration of world oil supply."

Not tapping the coastal plain poses "potentially serious implications for our national security," Horn warned.

So far, the debate over the coastal plain has centered on what risk oil production there poses to what an Interior Department report has called "the most biologically productive part of the Arctic Refuge for wildlife."

Drilling foes and the department agree that the biggest threat would be faced by the 180,000-head Porcupine caribou herd, which migrates between Alaska and Canada and uses the plain for calving and relief from insects.

Conservationists have seized on a preliminary Interior estimate made last November that up to 40 percent of the herd could be displaced from important terrain, resulting in "a major population decline." The estimate was not included in Interior's final report on the effects of oil production.

Horn said the original estimate was an error. "We don't expect displacement will have mortal consequences, but there is a risk," he testified. "The expectation is that the herd is unlikely to diminish."

He said Congress should be guided by the experience at Prudhoe Bay: a 5,000-head caribou herd has grown to 15,000 animals during petroleum activities there.

Pennzoil: Texaco bankruptcy filing bad move

HOUSTON (AP) — Texaco Inc.'s war of words over the multibillion-dollar judgment awarded to Pennzoil Co. is failing in the arena that matters the most, Pennzoil Chairman J. Hugh Liedtke says.

"I think it is fair to remember that Pennzoil has won every point where it counts — in the courts," Liedtke told Pennzoil shareholders at the company's annual meeting Thursday.

A jury in 1985 found that Texaco wrongfully interfered with a planned merger between Pennzoil and Getty Oil Co. and ordered Texaco to pay Pennzoil $10.53 billion.

A Texas appeals court unanimously upheld most of the judgment in February, but reduced punitive damages to make the total $8.5 billion — now about $11 with interest. The appeals court later denied Texaco's motion for rehearing.

In addition, the U.S. Supreme Court voted 9-0 to throw out a federal judge's ruling that had reduced the required $11 billion bond to $1 billion. The decision opened the way for Texaco to challenge the bond in Texas courts.

"No wonder Texaco is waging a war of words," Liedtke said. "It has lost on the facts every single time."

Liedtke said Texaco officials have tried to put the blame on Pennzoil for Texaco's bankruptcy filing and called Pennzoil greedy, among other things. But Liedtke said Texaco's bankruptcy filing was an irresponsible move made to avoid paying the landmark judgment.

"They like it there (in bankruptcy) at the moment. They perceive they have some advantage, but the euphoria will evaporate in about 30 days," he predicted.

White Plains, N.Y.-based Texaco issued a statement Thursday in response to Lietdke's remarks, reiterating earlier statements that Houston-based Pennzoil had rejected security proposals and forced Texaco into Chapter 11.

AP LaserPhoto

Pennzoil chairman J. Hugh Liedkte checking with corporate secretary Mark Malinski at the shareholders meeting in Houston. Liedkte told the gathering Texaco's bankruptcy filing was an irresponsible move to avoid paying a multi-billion dollar judgment to Pennzoil.

Liedtke said Texaco's own announcement April 12 that it was filing for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code indicated it was a partial filing, with only the holding company and two smaller holding companies involved.

"Texaco's own announcement emphasized that the company is solvent and that 96 percent of its consolidated revenues and 79 percent of its property, plant and equipment are in subsidiaries not involved in the bankruptcy," he said.

"If it is possible to be a little bit bankrupt, like a little bit pregnant, that's Texaco," Liedtke said to a roar of laughter from about 900 stockholders who later gave him a standing ovation.

Liedtke said Pennzoil's position on one of two creditors committees will be to protect the interest of Pennzoil stockholders.

"It will not be our objective to be in any way obstructive with the process," he said. But if necessary, Pennzoil would ask for a probe of unusual expenditures such as the hiring of lobbyists in Austin to push a bill that would put a $1 billion cap on the amount Texaco must post to appeal, he said.

During a news conference following the 45-minute meeting, Liedtke repeatedly declined to comment on questions about possible settlement talks. He also dismissed as rumors speculation that Pennzoil was considering a $3 billion settlement that included a combination of securities, cash and oil properties from Getty.

"Again, I'm not in a position to discuss offers and counter-offers. I don't think it's constructive. I do think that a lot of these rumors about negotiations are brought about by people wanting to have people believe that Texaco may settle in order to keep its stock pumped up," Liedtke said.

Texaco's statement said the company "has consistently stated that a reasonable, sane and economic settlement would be in the interests of everyone, notwithstanding our conviction that the Texas judgment is wholly unjustified and legally indefensible."

Liedtke said Pennzoil always has been open to settle, but that "Texaco has never made us an offer without knowing in advance it would be refused."

Reserve board tightening monetary policy

Less money could mean higher interest rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board, facing up to the continuing fall of the dollar on world money markets, has moved to tighten federal monetary policy, and some economists predict more drastic intervention by the board may come soon.

Chairman Paul A. Volcker told a House subcommittee on Thursday that the board has engaged in "a somewhat less accommodative policy ... a slight snugging" in response to economic conditions.

In market jargon, a "slight snugging" is a way of describing policies under which the Fed becomes more cautious in releasing its money to banks.

Volcker did not define the exact extent of the Fed's action, which is aimed at affecting the money supply and, thus, the amount of money banks have to lend.

The tighter monetary policy has contributed to the recent increase in interest rates, Volcker said. He encouraged foreign central banks, particularly in Japan, to lower their interest rates in response.

Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, in Washington for talks with President Reagan and members of Congress, announced about the same time that he was directing the Bank of Japan to move toward lower short-term interest rates.

But Volcker declined to comment on speculation that the Fed also will move soon to raise the discount rate, the fee the Fed charges to make loans to U.S. financial institutions, in an even more drastic step to bolster the dollar in the world economy.

Economists have predicted that an announcement of a discount rate increase could come as early as today.

If the Fed does move to raise the lending rate, it would be the first increase in three years and follow seven consecutive cuts.

Increasing the discount rate would increase the cost of money to banks, pushing up interest rates. That makes the dollar stronger on world markets by making U.S. debt more attractive to foreign investors. But it carries the risk of slowing the economy and perhaps tipping the nation toward recession.

Michael Evans of Evans Economics Inc., a Washington economic forecasting firm, predicted quick action by the Fed to raise the discount rate.

But Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Brothers in New York, suggested any action may be delayed while the board evaluates the changing conditions.

"The Fed will want to have a good look at this," he said.

Sinai said the Japanese move to lower interest rates, "at least in the near-term, relieves the pressure in the currency markets and the pressure on the Fed to tighten the dollar. But in the longer run, it's not clear the lower (Japanese) interest rates and the slight snugging up here will be sufficient."

There has been speculation that Fed action was involved in the rising interest rates of recent weeks, but Volcker's comments were the first public confirmation that the central bank had stepped in.

Volcker, while acknowledging that the Fed was in part responsible for rising rates, also said he expects the policy to help stabilize the markets and, over the long run, to lower interest rates.

The fact that someone is "minding the store" on inflation should help ease market fears. Those fears, along with uncertainty about the trade bill being debated by Congress, have fueled volatility in interest rates, he said.

The Fed chairman also said the dollar has "absolutely and fundamentally" fallen far enough on world money exchanges. The dollar stands at a post-war low against the Japanese yen.

Volcker

"In recent days, we have been more cautious in the Federal Reserve in providing reserves to the market," Volcker told the oversight subcommittee.

Blackburn takes helm at Maxus

DALLAS (AP) — Officials believe the splitting of Diamond Shamrock Corp. into Maxus Energy Corp. and Diamond Shamrock R&M Inc. will be a break with the recently troubled past of the corporation.

At the annual shareholders meeting, Charles Blackburn Thursday formally became chairman of Maxus Energy, the company's new name unveiled only the day before.

Diamond Shamrock in the past six months has weathered a hostile takeover attempt from Amarillo oilman T. Boone Pickens Jr. that forced it to adopt a drastic restructuring plan, spin off a principal part of its business and retire its longtime chairman.

MAXUS

The name change represented "a break with the past," Blackburn said.

Part of that past is an image of big-spending.

Blackburn noted that his salary as chief executive will be about $200,000 less than predecessor William Bricker, who agreed to resign as part of the restructuring plan after almost 11 years as chief executive officer.

Industry observers say Bricker, who did not attend Thursday's meeting, in many ways fit the stereotype of the free-wheeling oilman, enjoying a salary of almost $700,000 and many corporate perks.

Several former Diamond Shamrock employees and stockholders sharply criticized the board of directors and the former chairman at the shareholders meeting.

Under the restructuring plan announced in February, Diamond Shamrock's refining and marketing arm was spun off into a separate public company based in San Antonio, while the Dallas-based exploration and production company got a new name and Blackburn as its chairman.

Blackburn would not say how many employees Maxus will lay off, but he indicated there would be some.

He expressed optimism for the future, but said that despite cost-cutting steps, he doesn't expect the company to post a profit for 1987.

"The jolt (from lower oil prices) has created exceptional opportunities as the industry recovers," he said. "Energy prices are firming, and I believe they will continue to recover."

Blackburn, who joined Diamond Shamrock in August after being executive vice president and a director of Shell Oil Co., stressed efficient exploration and reduced overhead as keys to the company's further profitability, indicating that under his leadership the company would take a different direction from the days of Bricker.

The company will cut its overhead by $20 million this year and has hired a consulting firm to compare its staff size and salaries with companies of similar size, he said.

Also adding to Diamond Shamrock's image as a big-spending company was a lavish hunting ranch used to entertain board members and clients. Blackburn said the ranch will be used as an employee training and conference center and will be leased to other companies that want to use it.

The company jet purchased by Bricker has been sold.

Blackburn said the final word on whether the restructuring marks a change for the better will depend on the company's success as an oil and natural gas producer and explorer.

"If we succeed in what we set about doing, we won't have an image problem," he said.

The corporation posted a first-quarter loss of $49.6 million, or 56 cents a share.

Western lawmakers protest Interior's offshore program

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Sixty-seven members of Congress from 10 coastal states Thursday urged Interior Secretary Donald Hodel to reconsider his five-year plan for oil and gas exploration.

Sixty House members and seven senators signed a letter to Hodel saying "the proposed plan does not provide sufficient protection for coastal and marine resources that support economically important industries in our states."

While they offered to work with Hodel to "improve" the plan, they also said "we want to make it clear that we intend to use both administrative and legislative strategies to ensure that a balanced policy is achieved."

Those signing the letter were from California, Florida, Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Washington, Oregon, Rhode Island and Maine.

The coalition has not decided yet how it will fight the 5-year plan, said Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Monterey, one of the letter's authors. The plan will go into effect July 1 unless Congress takes action. But opponents of the plan have acknowledged there is little chance of Congress rejecting it.

The coalition may focus on passage of pending legislation which would protect large ocean areas by designating them ocean sanctuaries and toughen offshore air quality standards. Also, the coalition may try to block leasing by congressional moratoria, a method used to protect the coasts of California and Massachusetts in the past, Panetta said.

Hodel is in California this week meeting with the Gov. George Deukmejian, the Chamber of Commerce and the Independent Oil Producers Association.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Louisiana oil and gas discovery completed

HOUSTON (SWN) — Anadarko Petroleum Corp. has made an oil and natural gas discovery in Union Parish, La.

The Albritton No. 1, located near the northern Louisiana town of Bernice, has been tested at a rate of 739 bopd and 2.9 Mmcfd of natural gas from 48 feet of Smackover limestone perforations below 10,300 feet. Anadarko owns a 100 percent working interest in the well.

Currently, Anadarko controls about 1,300 lease acres that surround the Albritton discovery, and is evaluating the offset potential.

American National shows improved earnings

HOUSTON (SWN) — American National Petroleum Co. reported net income of $406,000 ($.09 per common share) for its fiscal year ended December 31, 1986 as compared to a net loss of $2,878,000 ($.63 per common share) for the fiscal year ended December 31, 1985. The 1985 loss resulted from a non-cash charge to operations of $5,556,000, reduced by deferred income tax benefits of $2,429,000, to write-down oil and gas properties due to the severe decrease in oil prices experienced after December 31, 1985. Revenues for 1986 were $7,782,000 as compared to $10,428,000 for the 1985 period. The decrease in revenues from 1985 to 1986 is principally due to reduced sales prices received for crude oil and reduced levels of natural gas sales resulting from curtailed pipeline demand.

Williams Companies report quarterly results

TULSA (SWN) — The Williams Companies reported results for the first quarter ended March 31. Unaudited net income rose to $51.7 million or $1.50 per share from $14.2 million or $.41 per share in the first quarter of 1986.

First quarter 1987 net income included a gain of $29.7 million or $.86 per share from the sale of the company's 30.7 percent interest in Peabody Holding Company, Inc. That sale was completed in January as part of Williams' major financial restructuring program which is now essentially complete.

Income from continuing operations in the first quarter amounted to $22 million or $.64 per share compared with restated income from continuing operations of $20.7 million or $.60 per share in the same period a year ago.

First quarter revenues were $544 million vs. $678 million in the first quarter last year, and operating profit was $106.1 million compared with $117.2 million in the same quarter of 1986.

Noble Affiliates net income rises 27 percent

ARDMORE, Ok. (SWN) — Noble Affiliates, Inc. has reported that net income and revenues during the first quarter of 1987 increased 27 percent and 18 percent, respectively, over the amount for the same period a year ago.

Net income for the first quarter was $2,639,000, or six cents per share, on revenues of $50,889,000, compared with net income of $2,084,000, or five cents per share, on revenues of $43,167,000 for the 1986 first quarter.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Fund management expertise key in protecting investment

By BILL DOYLE

Q. In order to reduce our federal income tax, my husband and I purchased AAA- and AA-rated municipal bonds. We also invested $80,000 in a well-regarded no-load municipal bond mutual fund. Now, a broker informs me that, if interest rates go up, we will lose a greater amount of principal in the fund than in the individual bonds.

How will that happen?

Doyle

A. It shouldn't happen, if that mutual fund's managers are on the ball.

As the term indicates, a municipal bond mutual fund has an investment portfolio of municipal bonds. The fund collects the tax-free interest those bonds pay and, after deducting its operating expenses, passes that money along to fund shareholders.

The investment portfolio is diversified among many different bonds and is "managed." That means the people running the fund make investment changes from time to time — selling some bonds and buying others. The managers collect fat salaries for that chore.

Assuming those managers do their jobs well, the fund's share value — and the value of your holdings in the fund — should not drop as far and as fast as general bond market price when interest rates go higher, as they occasionally do.

It stands to reason that the market prices of previously issued bonds will fall when interest rates rise. Let's say interest rates edge up and newly issued AAA-rated bonds pay 9 percent interest. Bonds issued earlier with lower interest rates will command lower prices in the marketplace.

It follows that the share values of mutual funds holding bonds with low interest rates will also decline during periods of rising interest. But, if a fund's managers make the right portfolio moves, the decline shouldn't be as severe.

If the municipal bond mutual fund is a true no-load fund — with no salescharge at the time of purchase, no rear-end load when you redeem shares and no 12b-1 plan — that broker might be bad-mouthing it because he didn't get any commission.

Q. A broker suggests we sell our municipal bonds and our shares of a municipal bond mutual fund, all of which have appreciated in value. If we sell, we will have to pay capital gains tax on our profit and then purchase other bonds to replace them. Would this be a wise move?

A. Unless there are other — and unusual — factors involved, it would be a dumb move. After paying the tax bite, you would have less money to reinvest. As a result, you would receive lower interest on the same quality of investment.

Keep in mind that a broker's main source of income is from the commissions and/or markups you pay when you buy securities and from the commissions and/or markdowns you pay when you sell.

It's an understandable inclination for a broker to recommend purchases and sales. That's how he or she makes a living. But, as a customer, you don't have to go along with those recommendations.

Q. I'm 64 and my husband is 67. We are still working but may retire before too long. We invest a little each month in a mutual fund. The broker told us that, because we plan to retire, we should have a growth mutual fund. Is that true?

A. Not for most people. When retirement time approaches, the normal thing to do is to reduce investments with growth potential — for the simple reason that they also have risk — and to increase investments in income-producing things.

This doesn't mean that, in preparation for retirement, everyone should unload all stocks and mutual funds holding stocks and load up on fixed-income investments such as bonds and certificates of deposit. As a general rule, however, it's wise to move gradually in that direction.

That broker might know something about your overall financial situation that makes a growth mutual fund a sensible investment for you. But if you are a typical nearing-retirement couple, the broker's advice flies in the face of normal reasoning.

FAMILY MATTERS

Name, focus of weekly job-loss column changed

By JIM MAY

May

DEAR READERS: The name and focus of this column has been changed in order to expand its format! Formerly, I delt only with "Coping with Job Loss." The column will continue to deal with job loss problems, but will also include issues associated with all aspects of family life.

The format will remain the same. You ask the questions, and I'll grapple with the answers, or at least an answer. I hope that you will agree that the family does matter, and write and share your questions, concerns, insights and experiences on family matters with us.

Because of the change, it is too soon to have any letters, so I would like to start by sharing some questions I have been asked at various seminars and workshops.

PARENT: Our 7-year-old constantly refuses to do what we ask him to do. Everything is a fight. What should we do about it?

DEAR PARENT: Children may believe that the only time they have power over the parent is when they refuse to do what is asked. I imagine you have experienced the frustration of "losing" such discussions. Many children are very clever at finding ways to get what they want. If they cannot get their way by arguing, they may throw a temper tantrum or engage the parent in a fight.

I try to start the process by looking at what has already been tried. What actions have been taken? Try writing those down. How did they work? What results did you observe? Children are very smart. They do not keep trying things that do not work. They have not learned the saying: "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again." They just do something different until they find something that works.

A possible reason children refuse to cooperate is that they feel they must "win" the confrontation. A parent's normal response of anger to the child's refusal mirrors the child's feelings, making the child even more determined to win — but no one really does.

Use some "child-smart" and do something else. A possibility would be to not react the way children expect us to react. For example, consider neither fighting nor giving in.

A goal might be to disengage yourself from the situation. An argument cannot continue when one side leaves. However it is important how you leave. In a calm, friendly, but firm voice, give children two simple alternatives and then leave while they make a choice.

For example: "Jimmy, either pick up your toys, or I will put them away for the day. I'll be back in 10 minutes to learn of your decision." When you return, if the toys are picked up, thank your child, for being so responsible. If the toys are not picked up, you pick them up and put them up for the day, NO exceptions. You may explain to Jimmy that you are sorry he that he decided on that alternative, end of conversation. Do not let yourself be engaged in battle.

This approach tends to help change children's views of the process from one of rebellion to one of independence. You let them decide.

It is, of course, very important to never give children an option that you will be unwilling to follow if they choose it. For example, "Kathy, if you don't clean up your room, I'm going to put up your toys for a month." Now a month is a very long time, and you might be very tempted to give in. When you do give in, or do not follow through on the selected option with its logical consequences, you reinforce the children's power seeking goal.

On the other hand, by letting children choose, they develop a sense of responsibility for their life. They feel they are able to influence what happens to them, therefore rebellion is no longer necessary. It is very important that we as parents give our children options and encouragement at a very young age so they will learn to make choices. When they leave home, we do not want their first real practice at making choices by themselves to be about something like using drugs.

Start small and get lots of practice.

DEAR ABBY

Widow's heart, not calendar, determines mourning period

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: When a wife has lost her mate through death, how long should the mourning period be? Also, how long must she wait before dating members of the opposite sex so people won't talk? Then, how soon after she has started to date must she wait before accepting an engagement ring?

And finally, what is the proper waiting period before she remarries without having people think she has no respect for her first husband's memory? — JUST ASKING IN CANADA

DEAR JUST: The mourning period is traditionally one year. After that, she may start dating. From six months to a year following the mourning period, she may accept an engagement ring. And remarriage can take place any time after that.

None of this is written in concrete, however. What is in one's heart is far more important than what others say. Play it by ear, and don't worry about people's mouths.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem that has been bothering me for a long time, but I haven't seen a doctor about it because I'm too embarrassed. I am a 15-year-old girl, and the nipple on one of my breasts is "ingrown." It looks funny because it doesn't match the other one. Also, I am worried that when I get older and have a baby, I won't be able to breast-feed it.

Will I grow out of this and have normal-looking breasts like other girls? Am I the only girl with this problem? — CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: You have what is known as an "inverted nipple." It is not uncommon. First, you should discuss it with your mother — and then with your family physician. If necessary, he can refer you to a specialist who can surgically correct it.

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago, my son left Ohio to take an executive position in Denver. While there he met "Sue." To make a long story short, he divorced his wife of 16 years to make Sue his new bride. I flew to Denver, checked into a hotel and attended the wedding. I bought my son and Sue several wedding gifts and wished them love and happiness in their new life together. I never did receive a thank-you note, but at the time I wrote it off as simply an oversight.

Sue recently had a baby. I splurged on clothes for the new arrival. (You know how grandmothers can be.) It's been four months and I have not received an acknowledgment from Sue. Finally I mentioned to Sue that I was waiting for an acknowledgment from her. Her reply, "I have a perfect card for you; I just haven't had the time to send it." Abby, I know she's written thank-you notes to close friends and family.

How do you size this up? — HURT IN OHIO

DEAR HURT: Obviously, Sue's manners leave much to be desired, but where is your son in all of this? He is equally guilty of ignoring the receipt of "several" wedding gifts as well as gifts for their baby.

Were I in your shoes I would feel more disappointed than "hurt" to learn that my son had married a woman who is either sadly lacking in the social graces or doesn't give a hoot about what you think of her.

(For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

AT WIT'S END

Car commercials leave viewers breathless

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

The other night, I saw a commercial for a razor blade. The theme music was from "2001" and I half expected an invasion of aliens when the shaver opened and the light from the blade blinded me. A Shakespearean voice said softly, "When quality counts."

The product cost two bucks and lasted through one shave before being discarded. It was so tony it made me want to go right out and grow a beard.

Minutes later, I saw a series of commercials for new cars. One guy appeared in a fright wig and his partner ended up throwing water down his pants. Another one had his kids and dogs lined up, offering free balloons, ice cream and rain bonnets for Mommy for the first 5,000 to visit the showroom. Another pitchman dressed like Superman crashed into a phone booth and gasped, "From here on in, I'm traveling in my new truck. It's safer and it's more fun."

Cars ranged in price from $6,000 to $16,000.

Fun is the key word here. These fast-talking salesmen who regard every potential car buyer as deaf are trying to rank the purchase of a new car right up there with hot tubs and riding a dune buggy naked.

You don't have a down payment? Here's seltzer in your eye.

You don't have a car to trade? Here's a wad of funny money.

You don't have a credit rating? Hey, we're here to have a good time.

Buying a new car is a mixed emotion. It's like a man reading Playboy while his wife turns the pages. There are a few raindrops on the parade of happiness, mainly the fact that for the next five years, most car buyers cannot get sick, leave the city, marry, eat, give a party, have a child, change jobs or repair anything. That's enough to deflate anyone's balloon and make their ice cream melt.

No one expects John Houseman to stand there and kick the tires, but there should be some things a little more subtle than a 300-pound sumo wrestler bashing in a window with a mallet saying, "We're smashing prices!"

I pass one car lot that looks like a circus in progress. A clown stands in the street beckoning you into the lot where there's a canopy of blue and yellow fringe and wheels that spin with the wind. A car is hoisted on a rack 20 feet off the ground with lights playing about it like a Hollywood premiere. The TV commercials are done by a ringmaster who snaps his whip and another truck whips by him.

Not everyone can get into the spirit of giddiness. My husband goes to bed for three days after he has bought a car, trying to live with the pain of what he has done. His idea of buying a new car is somewhere between a pay cut and gum surgery.

Small wonder the credibility of some car dealers is questioned. The only one I believe is the Isuzu commercial where the subtitle says, "He's lying."

He is not.

'Disgusting' toys trendy

New York Times News Service

ATLANTA — Cliff Cantrell, 13, thinks Sammy Stop Sign is better than a Garbage Pail Kid, even though his initial reaction to the SkateBoard Smack-Up was: "That's sick!"

"Garbage Pail Kids are boring," his buddy Jason Currie explained, "and they don't roll."

The newest wave of toys intended to be disgusting, SkateBoard Smack-Ups by Playtime Products, has crashed into the Atlanta toy market. And like Madballs and Breath Blasters before them, the $5 SkateBoard Smack-Ups probably will be a big hit.

Sammy Stop Sign is a three-dimensional plastic figure on a skateboard with a stop sign wrapped around his neck. His tongue hangs out and his eyes bulge.

Then there's Patty Plate Glass with big gashes in her body and glass sticking out of her arms and legs. Carrie Car Door is plastered against a car door. Tammy Tailpipe has an exhaust pipe down her throat and is bloated from the fumes.

There are 13 3-inch-tall accident-victim skateboarders in the Playtime catalog, which bears the slogan "How to profit from somebody else's mishaps."

Dr. Eugene Emory, a professor of psychology at Emory University in Atlanta, said toys of this kind can lead a child to become desensitized to mutilations, accidents, victims and suffering.

"To regard (mutilated characters) as comical may contribute to a disregard, a blunting, of feelings for real people who might be injured," Emory said, adding that the bright colors and the novelty of the toys aren't the only attraction. "There is a certain thrill from flirting with danger, and kids can realize that thrill somewhat by identifying with the character on the skateboard."

Playtime officials counter that the toys don't pose a threat to kids because they are obviously fantasy items.

Art shows anguish of alcoholics' children

WASHINGTON (AP) — In poignant words and pictures, the children of alcoholics reveal their private world of fear, anger, guilt, loneliness and shame.

An exhibition of their original art — more than 500 crayon drawings, watercolor paintings, poems and letters scrawled in pencil — stirred emotions among visitors to the marbled rotunda of the Cannon House Office Building on Capitol Hill.

"I'm sad but I pretend I'm happy," an 8-year-old girl wrote. Another girl, aged 5, titled her drawing, "My Mom taking a drink and me crying." Using angry brush strokes, a 12-year-old boy portrayed a blurred face in browns and blacks with a gaping, shark-like mouth, and writes: "My dad is a jerk, jerk!"

In their crude pictures sometimes captioned with misspelled words, parents are fighting, passing out, driving cars into trees, chasing and striking their children, drowning in monstrous bottles of booze, trapped in cans of beer.

A 16-year-old girl with two alcoholic parents painted a red and blue heart, severed down the middle, and wrote: "Alcohol ruins pretty things." Another child, pictured hiding during a parental fight, says, "Alcohol is harmfull. Stay out of the way, Posibly keep out of sight."

A smiling little girl was pictured disclosing her furtive ploy: "Pore out Mom's drink's and filled in the cans with water!" An adult child of an alcoholic wrote, "I was but 3 and daddy always beat on me. He smelt of beer and wine and the next day he kissed me and said things were fine."

THERE WAS hope in 8-year-old Jaime's inscription for a cartoon of his father: "My Dad is doing real good at stoping alcohol. My dad is going to special meedings. We had to moive out because my dad got to carried away with drinking. Now he is geting better at stoping. My dad is nicer to us. We have moived back."

The exhibit, organized by the privately financed Children of Alcoholics Foundation Inc. of New York, ended its national tour on Capitol Hill, after traveling through Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Texas and California since its October 1983 beginning in New York.

Mrs. Migs Woodside, founder and president of the foundation, said the art exhibit was part of her organization's effort to make the public aware of a "huge but hidden" minority in America, the 28 million children of alcoholics.

Sons of alcoholics are four times more likely to become alcoholics than other children, the foundation says. The 7 million youngsters of alcoholic parents may suffer emotional detachment, dependency and low self-esteem, and have physical problems ranging from tiredness to asthma and unusual sensitivity to heat and cold.

Some are overly aggressive, perform poorly in school and have trouble forming trusting relationships. Others become exceedingly responsible, serving as substitute parents for their brothers and sisters and growing up to be fast-track "superstars" susceptible to heart attacks, ulcers and depression.

BESIDES PROMOTING public education and research into the problems of children of alcoholics, Mrs. Woodside said, the foundation is embarking on a privately financed program to package the art exhibit as a classroom teaching tool to alert school children to the dangers of alcohol and drug abuse.

Therapists encourage these children to express their hidden emotions in drawings, poems and stories, letting their art reveal what they dare not verbalize. Mrs. Woodside said their art has become an excellent tool to inform others about the effects of alcoholism.

Education has 'embarrassing gap'

Associated Press

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — An embarrassing gap persists in this country between the best and worst public schools, according to Guilbert Hentschke, dean of the University of Rochester's Graduate School of Education and Human Development.

He says this "gap" is because the wealthiest districts (usually suburban) attract the best teachers with top pay and working conditions.

In the Soviet Union, he adds, the situation is different. Quality from one school to the next is much more constant due to the fact that the Soviets compensate teachers willing to take less attractive assignments with higher pay.

Feeding family hazardous to health

By ANNA QUINDLEN
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — I was doing the family grocery shopping accompanied by two children, an event I hope to see included in the Olympics in the near future. Not until we were putting the food on the little treadmill at the checkout counter did I realize I had not personally picked but many of the items in the cart.

There was shoestring licorice, a small jar of macadamia nuts that was more expensive than the earrings I was wearing and a box of Mallomars. There were also two more boxes of breakfast cereal than I had bargained for: one kind of cereal shaped like tiny ice cream cones filled with chocolate-chip ice cream, and another called Cocoa Puffs, which I remember fondly from my childhood chiefly because they turned the milk brown.

I took all this stuff back amid wild wailing and picked up the mouthful of yogurt raisins my younger child had spit all over the checkout line in his anger and distress. "I shall not be moved," I said in the car, looking at them both in the rearview mirror. "I wanted the ice cream cereal," screamed the elder.

I'M UNDER a lot of pressure to shop like a mom. My mom shopped like a mom, too, but in her day it was easier. Those were the days when people believed that fats were what God put in food to make it taste good. When my mom went shopping, she bought cookies with ingredients that sounded like a science fair experiment, fruit drinks with no fruit and huge loaves of bread that could be compressed to the size of a handball with one squeeze. It was never enough. There were still the fights with the kids, the incredible outrage we could summon at the suggestion that a four-pound Almond Joy bar was an unreasonable purchase.

Now that I am on the other side, I can understand why a civilized woman who knows the difference between emulsifiers and real food would nonetheless shop like a mom. You want to minimize the fights and you want some appropriate food on hand if by chance you sink to the lowest levels of human degradation and start watching "The Colbys."

I SWORE it would never come to this. On the subject of feeding my first child, I was what you might call a real pain. For the first six months of his life he got nothing but breast milk, accompanied by the occasional rhapsody about nourishing him from my own body. When I put him on solids, I carried a little food mill everywhere; it became traditional at family gatherings to see me hunched over a plate of steamed carrots, grinding them and mixing them with yogurt.

I knew those days were gone forever when I found myself recently splitting a bag of Cheez Doodles with my kids. (You know everything about Cheez Doodles by the way Cheez is spelled. I mean, would you buy a sauce for your asparagus called Holl-N-Daze?) It was not companionable; none of us were talking, just scarfing down those little curlicues like attack dogs at feeding time. Finally my first child, he of the breast milk and pur'eed carrots, looked up and grinned, a salty orange grin. "Mommy, I like this stuff," he said.

THE FATHER of the children is disturbed by these lapses. He does not like to come home and, reading the hieroglyphics on their dinner plates, discover that the children ate takeout Chinese food instead of roast chicken and steamed string beans. But the father of the children is not home to hear the pleading: "Please can we have dumplings? Please can we have choo choo pork? Please can we have fortune cookies?" The younger one — who takes after Sylvester Stallone and tends to confine himself to one-word sentences that sound like depth charges detonating — stomps about and shouts, "Spareribs!"

The father of the children remembers a time when I was a careful shopper and a devoted cook. He forgets that at the time, my Tupperware was not being used as bathtub toys, my vegetable steamer basket had not become a pond for the plastic dinosaurs and nobody was using the garlic press as a gun. (It was also a time when I sublimated my true nature and pretended that I thought Ring Dings were revolting, which is a lie.)

THE ELDEST child came home the other day begging, pleading, whining for some fabulous, delicious, absolutely transcendent food he'd had at a friend's house. It was red, he said. It had bananas; you could hold it in your hand and see through to your finger, you could make it dance. We had to have it. With horror I realized what he was saying. He wanted Jell-O.

Do you know that I once had a theory that if you fed children nothing but nutritious foods, with no additives, preservatives or sugar, they would learn to prefer those foods? I should have recognized the reality at the first birthday party, when tradition triumphed over nutrition and I made chocolate cake for the guest of honor. He put one fistful in his mouth and gave me a look I would not see again until I brought a baby home from the hospital and told him the baby was going to stay. The cake look, roughly translated, said, "You've been holding out on me." He set about catching up. The barber gave him lollipops, the dry cleaner a Tootsie Roll. At the circus he had cotton candy, which is the part of the balance of nature designed to offset the wheat germ.

The other night for dinner he was having vegetable lasagna and garlic bread, picking out the zucchini, the spinach, even the parsley — "all the green stuff," — and eating only the parts of the bread that had butter. "Know what my favorite food is, Mom?" he said. "Sugar."

Parents warned against fighting children's battles

Copley News Service

Parents can be as protective as mother tigers when their kids get beat up by bullies. But fighting your kids' battles for them may not be the best bet.

Psychologist Bill Coulson says kids can learn a lot about negotiating by handling their own conflicts.

He says partents dealing with bully trouble should act as consultants to their kids, instead of as their avengers.

Here's his advice: Lend your child a listening ear, get all the details and support your child by helping them handle the problem.

Coulson says parents should act as referees, setting up a time for the kids in conflict to meet and discuss their differences.

But, if talking doesn't solve things, a stiff poke in the nose, may still be in order.

Psychologist describes parenting methods

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are various kinds of parenting styles, and experience and research have indicated which kinds are the most effective in raising children, says Cynthia Baum, a psychology professor at The Catholic University of America.

The styles fall into three broad categories: permissive, authoritarian and authoritative, she explains, adding that the authoritative style is the one to aim for.

"Permissive parents are non-punitive, accept the child's impulses and don't encourage the child to obey externally defined standards. They treat adolescents in ways that make them feel guilty. For example, if a mother wants her teen-age son to clean his room she might say, 'If you really were a good son and loved your mother, you would clean up your room.'"

Ms. Baum maintains that the outcome of this style is teen-agers with less positive social behavior and lower achievements. These teens don't react well to external frustrations because they haven't had to respond to demands in the past, she says.

"At the other end of the continuum are authoritarian parents, who demand rigid adherence to rules, set absolute standards, value respect for authority and don't encourage verbal give-and-take. They tend to favor more punitive measures to obtain obedience, such as 'Keep your room clean or stay in for a week.'"

Outcome of the authoritarian style is that teen-agers tend to be more rebellious — a vicious cycle is created, with parents demanding adherence to rules, children rebelling, parents tightening up more, and children rebelling more.

"And these teen-agers tend to rank higher in peer conformity and rely more on peer group pressures," adds Ms. Baum, who believes that the ideal parenting style is the authoritative.

"These parents recognize that both they and their teen-agers have rights in the relationship and are willing to share decision-making with each other. A reward rather than a punishment system operates here," she says. "Teen-agers might get the use of the family car and time with parents when they abide by the guidelines.

"Teen-agers who are more influenced by parents than their peer group take more responsibility in the family and develop positive independence from the family," Ms. Baum says.

NATION IN BRIEF

Wiretapping costs doubled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average cost of a wiretap used by federal and state prosecutors last year was $35,508, more than double the expense just seven years ago, according to a new report to Congress.

Judges approved 754 uses of electronic eavesdropping last year, according to the report issued this week by the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts.

New York had the most court-approved wiretaps, at 193, while Michigan had the most costly bugging campaign: $459,689 for wiretaps on a private home and an insurance company office.

Station says FCC violates rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pacifica Foundation Inc. says a radio program that has drawn criticism from the Federal Communications Commission was an attempt to deal with the issue of AIDS "in an artistic way."

The FCC says the program on Pacifica station KPFK-FM in Los Angeles contained graphic depictions of homosexual sex acts, was clearly indecent and "may have crossed the line" to obscenity.

Pacifica filed an appeal Thursday in the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia to block an April 16 decision by the FCC to refer the program to the Justice Department for possible prosecution on obscenity charges.

Pacifica contends the FCC action violates the station's First Amendment right to free speech.

Fraud report hotline success

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than a thousand anonymous tips on government fraud and waste have been substantiated following calls to the General Accounting Office's Fraud Hotline, according to an eight-year study.

The report, released Thursday, said millions of dollars have been saved as a result of the program. It said more than 87,000 calls have been received on the toll-free hotline since January 1979, resulting in 13,019 cases that warranted further review and substantiation of 1,468 allegations.

The study, which did not itemize the financial savings, was released Thursday by Sen. Jim Sasser, D-Tenn.

Retiree benefit extension OK'd

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has approved and sent to the White House a temporary measure requiring companies in bankruptcy proceedings to continue paying health benefits to their retired workers.

The bill, which had already cleared the Senate and was passed Thursday by the House, would extend by four months legislation scheduled to expire May 15.

The measure stems from a decision last year by LTV Corp. to suspend medical and life insurance benefits to its retirees when it filed for protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code. The payments were restored two weeks later after a federal bankruptcy court in New York authorized their restoration.

Agencies now have AIDS test

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Red Cross and other agencies that collect blood now have access to a commercial test for AIDS, under a decision by the Food and Drug Administration.

The FDA on Thursday licensed the "Western blot test," which officials said is as close to 100 percent accurate as a lab test can be.

Physicians have been free to rely on the Western blot procedure, even without formal FDA approval, because the government agency does not oversee the practice of medicine.
