White urges stand on oil

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

MIAMI — Gov. Mark White asked the governors of oil-producing states and petroleum industry representatives Tuesday to lecture his colleagues on the security dangers of foreign oil imports.

The speakers said that without help — some of White's "faculty" called for import taxes, others for tax incentives — the domestic petroleum exploration and refining industries are in trouble and so is the nation's security. The Southern Governors' Association members from non-producing states listened and politely asked questions, but refused White's call for help in fighting proposed Reagan Administration tax changes the Texas governor says would hurt the industry.

Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards warned that creeping increases in foreign-oil dependence, declining incentives to explore for new domestic petroleum reserves and reduced U.S. refinery capacity are bringing the country back toward the days before the first Arab oil embargo.

"The countries that own the major oil reserves in the Mideast are setting us up for another 1973," Edwards said. "They're going to stick it to us again, and you're going to see $40 (per barrel) oil simply because we do not have the capacity to respond to the demand."

Execution draws international fire

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Charles Rumbaugh, convicted of a murder he committed during a robbery at age 17, was put to death today in an execution a human rights group said violated international agreements.

Two physicians pronounced Rumbaugh dead at 12:27 a.m. He was the first person in more than two decades to be put to death for a crime committed while under the age of 18.

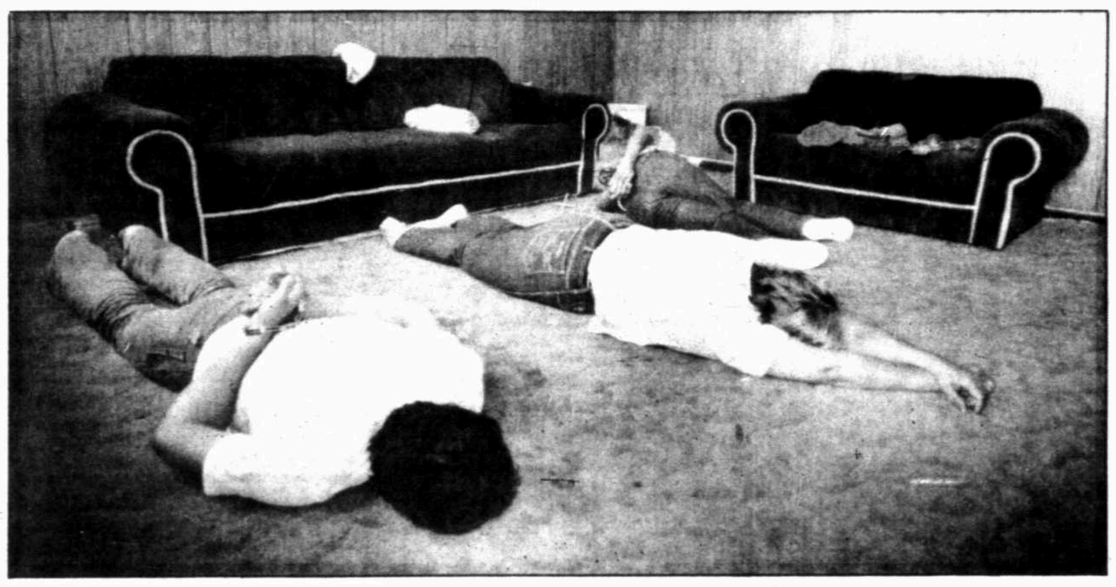

Rumbaugh left instructions that his body be cremated and the remains be placed in a tiny coffin he constructed himself of matchsticks, lined with velvet and a red bandana, said D.J. Stubben, who wrote a book about the convict.

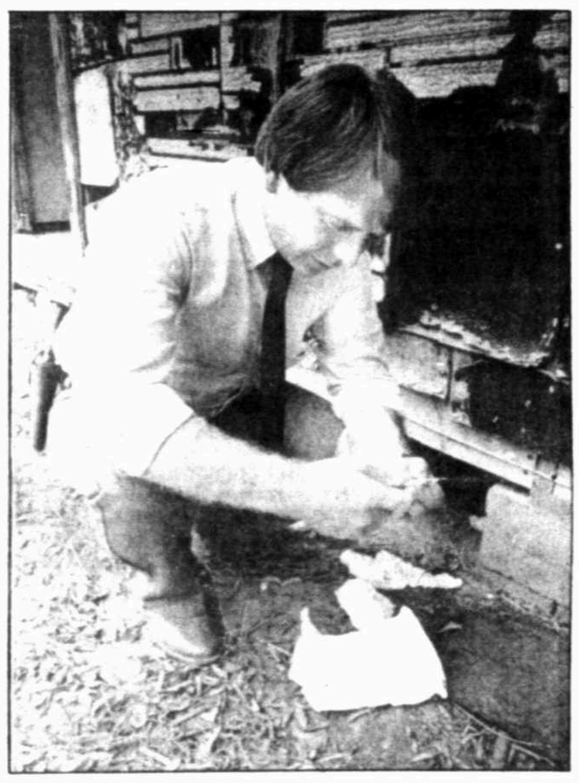

Attorney General Jim Mattox, asked whether such crimes by juveniles should merit the death penalty, noted that the case went before two juries and "each determined he should be punished by death."

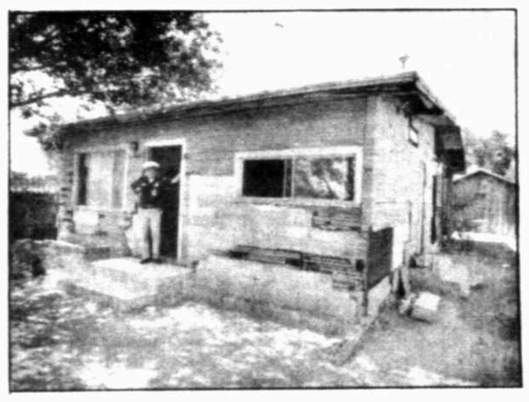

Amnesty International argued that Rumbaugh's death violated international agreements — never confirmed by the U.S. Senate — that bar execution of people convicted of crimes committed when they were under 18.

Across the country, 32 juvenile criminals are on death row, according to Victor L. Streib, a professor of the Cleveland Marshall College of Law at Cleveland State University.

Texas had the last such execution May 7, 1964, when James Andrew Echols was executed for rape committed when he was 17.

Six held on heroin possession

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Midland police arrested six people for possession of heroin Tuesday after raiding a "shooting gallery" in a ramshackle house on North Marshall Street.

The four men and two women were expected to be charged today, and police expect more arrests as a result of stolen property found in the house at 403 N. Marshall St., three blocks south of the DeZavala Annex.

"All this is is a meeting house where folks come to shoot up," said Det. Sgt. Ken Moten, who posed as a heroin buyer to help set up the bust. Police found a small quantity of heroin, some syringes and other drug paraphernalia, and several televisions and other allegedly stolen items.

After the 12:37 p.m. raid, the six suspects lay handcuffed on the floor as police searched the rooms of the delapidated house, which had no electricity or running water. One female suspect, her hands secured behind her, asked an undercover officer to slip her purse over her neck.

"You don't trust us?" he asked.

"Hell, no," she replied, laughing.

A small gray-and-white kitten nosed through a pile of used tin-foil heroin packets behind the house, looking for food while the officers searched for evidence. They may have moved in too early, according to one detective; a delivery of heroin was apparently due from Odessa within an hour.

"Two people were shooting up as they stepped in the door," he said, but the three papers of heroin seized don't add up to a major bust. Of more importance may be the stolen property seized, since the house was apparently a place where local burglars exchanged stolen goods for heroin, he said.

Appraiser says contesting value among owner's duties

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland County taxpayers have "rights and remedies, but they also have responsibilities," says Roland Wilkinson, chief appraiser with the Midland Central Appraisal District.

The first such responsibility, he says, is to contest the current market value of their property if, in fact, they uncover a discrepancy in the property value.

Wilkinson responded to charges made earlier this week by a group of Midland County taxpayers who reportedly are disturbed over the alleged "sight unseen" values placed on land by the Midland Central Appraisal District.

The group asked Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman to request the Texas Attorney General investigate the appraiser's office and its procedures for assessing values on county lands. The Attorney General has not responded to the request, Dettman reported.

The group claims evidence collected from public records show "discrepancies" in assessed land values. The most obvious appears north of Midland in the Saddle Club Estates area, according to spokeswoman Midge Erskine.

Data indicated land values in Saddle Club Estates are assessed at $1.50 per square foot while property in the less exclusive Saddle Club Lakes, Saddle Club North and Saddle Club South are assessed at $6, $4 and $2.25 respectively.

But Wilkinson said those figures "don't tell the whole story."

State law mandates all property must be valued according to market value and must be equal and uniform. No property can be appraised above its market value.

An investigation into Midland Central Appraisal District files revealed property values did, in fact, vary from $1.50 per square foot in the Saddle Club Estates area to $4 per square foot in Saddle Club North.

However, other variables are taken into consideration when determining the value of property, Wilkinson said.

Many residential subdivisions, resembling the Saddle Club edition, are developed on the basis of a nonprofit cooporation or association which maintains nominal ownership such as swimming pools, parks, meeting halls, parking lots, tennis courts or other similar property that is developed for the use, benefit and enjoyment of its members, Wilkinson said. That nominally owned property is to be appraised on the basis of a nominal value to avoid double taxation that would result if it were appraised on the basis of market value of both the property and the organization, he added.

Small-town residents erect final gift for victim in bitter abuse case

POPE, Miss. (AP) — A marble tombstone is all that this small town can do now for Paula Houston, a 14-year-old honor student whose death has embroiled the state in controversy over its response to child abuse cases.

"The tombstone she's going to have will be the nicest one out there," said Sandra Martindale of Pope, who helped raise nearly $500 for the monument which will be placed on the grave Thursday.

The marker is inscribed "In God's Care," with the girl's name and a verse from Ecclesiastes: "To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under Heaven."

"We're not looking for a star in our crowns, but we're proud we did it," Ms. Martindale said. "We don't want a big to-do about it."

The ninth-grader's nude body was found June 3 in a dump near her home — two days before she was to receive top honors in English, science and history at her junior high graduation.

The body was found hours after her mother, Judy Houston, 37, had reported her missing.

An autopsy determined the child had been strangled with a belt, and Panola County Sheriff David Bryan said at the time, "This looks like a long history of child abuse. There were prior beatings of this child."

Mrs. Houston was charged with murder and later indicted by a county grand jury for capital murder.

Although Bryan said in June that she had confessed, Mrs. Houston has pleaded innocent. She remains in jail in nearby Oxford, being held without bond, and is scheduled for trial Dec. 2.

Circuit Judge Andy Baker has imposed a gag order on all parties in the case.

The death outraged many of the 200 residents of this northwestern Mississippi community. School authorities said in June that they had made five reports to the Panola County Welfare Department over nine years that the girl was being abused.

Carlock Broome, principal of Pope School, and Martha Lynn Johnson, the girl's guidance counselor for five years, said Paula sometimes showed up with bruises and other ailments.

Ms. Johnson said she first reported that Paula was being abused when she was in first grade.

"I followed up with the social worker and she told me the mother had assured her it would not occur again," said Ms. Johnson.

Welfare Department records, however, showed only two reports, neither of which was substantiated.

Government spending 'unbridled,' consultant says

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Federal government spending is unbridled.

And the deficit, the difference between what the government brings in and what it spends, is out of bounds.

Left unchecked, the over spending could throw the nation into a deep depression, and its people could lose their economic freedom and basic freedoms, said George Goldberger. A 38-year-old New York financial consultant, he is a project director for the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control (PPSSCC), commonly known as the Grace Commission.

Today, the government is spending $1.25 for every $1 it takes in.

By the year 2000, federal spending may reach $5.5 trillion — seven times what the government spent in 1983. The deficit could soar to $2 trillion, and the federal debt could rise to $13 trillion. Federal, state and local spending could consume about half of the country's gross national produce (GNP), Goldberger said.

"Some people call it 'inter-generation rape,'" Goldberger said. "Others call it a form of economic child abuse."

"No people of finite minds ... can relate to a trillion," Goldberger told a gathering of Midland-Odessa members of the Texas Association of Business (TAB) Tuesday night in Midland Center. "Back in Washington, they don't call it a trillion any more. They call it a 'trill.'"

To project how much a trillion is, Goldberger said if someone could stack dollar bills on a table at a rate of one per second since the birth of Christ almost 2000 years ago, the dollars would amount to $62 billion. "You're dishing out as fast as you can."

"WHAT TOOK you almost 2000 years to amass, the federal government will spend in about 15 days," he said.

While Goldberger lamented federal spending, State Sen. John T. Montford of Lubbock noted that Texas does not have deficit spending. It is outlawed.

"I certainly invite the federal government to follow that example," Montford said. "It's something quite strange to them — making the budget balance. It is a requirement that we balance our (state) budget," he said.

In addition, Montford noted that Texas has its Sunset Commission which periodically reviews "every state agency."

"That takes the partisan attitude out of this the pork barrel," Montford said, "because we very carefully examine each agency as it comes up in periodic review."

Mattox rules TV cameras not covered by Open Meetings Act

STATE

AUSTIN (AP) — Television cameras are not covered by the Texas Open Meetings Act and can be tossed out of public meetings, according to Attorney General Jim Mattox.

In a legal opinion made public Tuesday, Mattox upheld the right of Titus County commissioners to bar TV cameras from their meetings. The 1973 Open Meetings Act covers "sonic" recordings, but does not guarantee video cameras access to public meetings, the attorney general said.

The law says: "All or any part of the proceedings in any public meeting of any governmental body... may be recorded by any person in attendance by means of a tape recorder or any other means of sonic reproduction."

Mattox said this provision of the law does not give members of the public a right to videotape meetings.

"In the absence of a specific provision permitting a member of the public to record its meetings by videotape, the commissioners court may prevent the videotaping of its meetings held pursuant to the Open Meetings Act," he said.

The Texas Association of Broadcasters said the Mattox ruling could affect television coverage of public meetings throughout the state. The TAB and the Society of Professional Journalists said the ruling highlights the need for the 1987 Legislature to revise the Open Meetings Act.

The Titus County camera battle began earlier this year when the commissioners in the northeast Texas county voted 4-0 to bar television coverage.

The only camera that had been covering the commissioners was owned by FVP Network, a Mt. Pleasant station that leases time on the local cable channel.

County Judge Bill Harper, in an effort to give constituents a look at their commissioners in action, had invited the small television station to record the meetings.

"I thought they were doing a service for the community," Harper said Tuesday. "We meet at a time of day when a lot of people cannot be in the courtroom. This was an opportunity to see how the commission functions. I can't see anything wrong with that."

But the commissioners did, and they approved the rule that barred cameras as of April 8.

Commissioner Loyd Clark, who pushed for the ban, did not answer calls to either his office or home Tuesday. Asked about Mattox's opinion, Clark told told the Mt. Pleasant Daily Tribune, "It says the same thing that it said before."

The commissioners court proceedings were broadcast in their entirety after the local news on the local station.

"When things got sticky or issues got hot it was videotaped. Things were being shown that the commissioners didn't like," said Gale Johnson, FVP's office manager.

The videotaping was done with a single camera, mounted on a tripod near a wall. It was not interfering with the proceedings, she said.

FVP plans to challenge the camera ban in court, she said.

"We're very small, but we've got rights," Ms. Johnson said.

Texas Association of Broadcasters lawyers have reviewed the law and see no way Mattox's opinion can be challenged, said Bonner McLane, TAB executive vice president.

"He has precedent on his side, unfortunately. Our attorneys said, 'Don't bother,'" McLane said.

Under the "sonic reproduction" law, "You can carry a microphone in but you can't carry a camera in," McLane added.

"This (controversy) was just a localized situation. How far it will get carried I don't know.

TDC immates remain confined to their cells

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Some 17,000 inmates at 13 Texas prisons remained confined to their cells Tuesday as corrections officials hoped the lockdown would quiet a war among rival prison gangs.

The emergency lockdown order, the second in recent weeks, came Monday from Department of Corrections Director O.L. McCotter after four inmates were stabbed to death within a 24-hour period.

Eight slayings were recorded in eight days, bringing the number of homicides this year in the nation's second-largest prison system to 26, one more than the record set in 1984.

McCotter's lockdown order was indefinite. Prison system spokesman Charles Brown said some previous lockdowns had lasted for a couple of weeks before the security precautions were eased.

"It's been pretty quiet," Brown said Tuesday.

A lone incident overnight Monday occurred between two cellmates at the Ellis I Unit but was not gang related, he said. In that altercation, one inmate suffered minor lacerations when his cellmate slashed him with a razor blade during an argument, according to Brown.

Prison officials, however, have labeled the entire system, which includes some 37,000 inmates, as very tense.

Most of the recent violence has been attributed to a recruiting war between two Hispanic gangs known as the Texas Syndicate and the Texas Mafia.

"Part of the initiation rite is that you beat someone or stab someone," said Phil Guthrie, an assistant director.

Officials estimate about 750 inmates are participants in gangs, although Guthrie termed that number very conservative.

"It's the ones we don't know about that scare the hell out of me," McCotter said. "We've got to put a stop to this now. And I'll lock down every unit if I have to."

"I'm not going to let them (gangs) dictate how this unit operates," Darrington Unit Warden Michael Moore said.

Three inmates were stabbed to death Sunday night at Darrington, south of Houston, in an attack that lasted no more than 45 seconds, Guthrie said.

Then on Monday, another gang slaying occurred at the nearby Ramsey II Unit.

"In open dormitories, the only thing we can do is increase our vigilance, make our presence known," Ramsey Warden Lepher Jenkins said.

The Ramsey slaying, which took the life of convicted burglar Leonel Perez, 31, occurred in a minimum security dormitory. Perez, serving an 8-year term, was stabbed 15 times with a metal rod, officials said.

Sunday night's victims included Lloyd Jacquez, 24, serving a seven-year sentence for three burglary convictions; Jose Arturo Garcia, 24, serving a 12-year sentence for aggravated robbery; and Albert Carrillo Jr., 28, who was serving a 12-year sentence for burglary.

Two inmates were in custody in connection with the Darrington stabbings. One inmate was held in connection with the Ramsey Unit killing.

Officials declined to give the gang affiliations of individual victims and attackers.

Dallas mayor urges Japan to invest

TOKYO (AP) — Dallas Mayor Starke Taylor Jr. briefed Japanese businessmen Tuesday on the benefits of doing business in Dallas and called for more investment in the Texas city, an official of the powerful Federation of Economic Organizations said.

The official, Kazuyuki Kinbara, said Taylor explained Dallas' attractions for business, such as high quality labor and convenient distribution centers, for more than 80 Japanese businessmen at a seminar.

Asked about reaction at the seminar, Kinbara said, "No one would decide his investment in Dallas immediately, but individual detailed talks will follow later."

Tom Lewis, vice president of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce, told The Associated Press that Dallas welcomes Japanese companies "in any category," but is interested in manufacturing and technology-related industries.

Fingerprints may identify hand found in plastic bag, officials say

HOUSTON (AP) — Authorities say the fingerprints from a hand found in a trash bag over the weekend may help them determine the identities of the victims.

Harris County sheriff's Lt. Joe Seckler said investigators will take fingerprints from the hand found to see if it matches with fingerprints on file.

Two human heads, two legs, a torso and a hand were found Sunday in three trash bags in rural northeast Harris County by a passer-by, he said. The body parts belonged to a man in his 30s and a woman who was about six months pregnant, authorities said.

Though medical examiners have not determined a cause of death, the man appeared to have been shot at least once in the right eye and the woman three times in the head, apparently with a small-caliber weapon, Detective Ronnie Phillips Sr. said Monday.

Investigators said the two appeared to have been dead at least 48 hours when the bodies were found. Because there was no blood at the scene, detectives believe the bodies were dismembered somewhere else and dumped in the rural area.

Thirty Salvadoran refugees arrested

PORTLAND (AP) — Police said Tuesday they have arrested 30 Salvadoran refugees who paid from $1,000 to $4,000 each to be smuggled into the United States.

The arrests were made Monday morning by Portland police detectives investigating a burglary.

Detective J.A. Cano said the refugees, which included three small girls, several teenage boys and a number of adults, were rounded up during a two-hour sweep of the Sunset Lake area.

Officers also said they arrested a U.S. citizen whose wallet was found in a four-wheel-drive vehicle at the site.

Later that night, police arrested a man suspected of being a coyote, or smuggler of undocumented aliens. Cano said the man had a Salvadoran passport and a list of clients and the price they paid for being smuggled into the U.S.

Cancer victim: Procedure working

VICTORIA (AP) — A leukemia patient who was reunited with a long-lost brother and sister in a futile search for a life-saving bone marrow transplant says an experimental procedure using his own marrow is apparently working.

But Steven Akin said the 42 days he spent in a germ-free isolation room at the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston left him hooked on television soap operas.

Akin said his immune system is producing white blood cells he needs to fight infection and disease.

However, while in isolation at the hospital, Akin said he contracted a fungus infection. He received transfusions of white blood cells from his sister, Winna Miller of Clear Lake, and John Davis, of Schiller Park, Ill.

Davis and another sister, Barbara Davis of Green Bay, Wis., were found in March during a nationwide search for Akin's long-lost siblings and a possible bone marrow donor. Tests eventually showed neither was compatable for a transplant.

In July, Akin received an injection of his own bone marrow, which had been removed last year, frozen and stored until doctors were ready to try the transplant.

Man arrested in copter robbery

HOUSTON (AP) — A 44-year-old Houston man has been arrested on charges alleging he and four others used a stolen helicopter to swoop down and rob a rural Texas bank of $20,000, authorities said.

William J. Gross, of Houston, was accused of participating in a July 20, 1984, heist at the Valley View National Bank in the North Texas community of Valley View, FBI agents said.

U.S. Magistrate George Kelt temporarily denied bond and set a detention hearing for Friday.

Gross, who is unemployed, was arrested after his name was found in an address book allegedly belonging to Marvin Rodgers, accused of engineering helicopter robberies in Texas, Louisiana and Nevada, agents said.

Rodgers was arrested in Houston last month and later transferred to Las Vegas, Nev., to be tried in an Overton, Nev., holdup.

Gross was charged Tuesday in a federal complaint with armed bank robbery, conspiracy to commit bank robbery and with aiding and abetting and transporting a stolen helicopter across state lines, agents said.

Fired Houston employee sues

HOUSTON (AP) — A 10-year employee of the city of Houston who was fired in March says his dismissal was a result of discrimination against older, white males and because of Civil Service Commission grievance procedures.

In a federal lawsuit filed Monday, J. Bryant Young, 56, claims his right to privacy was violated by the open Civil Service Commission hearing on his case.

Young is seeking re-instatement to his $33,600-a-year job, back pay and unspecified damages. He claims the city has a policy of "deliberately eliminating older, white male employees from the work force."

Named as defendants in the lawsuit are Mayor Kathy Whitmire, Affirmative Action Director Lee Elliot Brown, and three members of the commission — Douglas E. Hamel, Percy Creuzot and Dorothy Caram.

Young, a former contract compliance officer, was responsible for seeing that private contractors paid their employees according to city wage regulations and that minority businesses participated in city projects.

State senator running for TRC seat

Sharp

AUSTIN (AP) — State Sen. John Sharp of Victoria has declared his candidacy for the Texas Railroad Commission, saying the commission's business is vital to the state's future.

"The sound regulation of oil and gas and the assurance of adequate transportation for all areas of Texas are matters of critical concern at this point in our history," Sharp said Tuesday.

The legislator, who served two terms in the Texas House and has been in the Senate since 1982, becomes the second Democrat to declare his candidacy for the seat being vacated by fellow Democrat Buddy Temple. Houston lawyer William MacNaughton entered the race last February.

Two Republicans also have announced. They are state Rep. Ed Emmett of Kingwood and John T. Henderson of Austin, who narrowly lost to Commissioner Mack Wallace in 1984.

While describing the retiring Temple as "a dear friend," Sharp said he hadn't asked for or received Temple's endorsement.

He also estimated the primary race will cost from $500,000 to $900,000.

"While I have no industry ties related to the commission's regulatory authority, I have a good working knowledge of the agency's work and of state government in general," he said.

Sharp said the most important area of oil and gas regulation the Railroad Commission can become involved in is "conservation...doing those things that are necessary to get the most oil and gas production over the longest sustained period of time."

He also said public officials have "a sacred trust" to protect water supplies from pollution.

Any well operators who consistently pollute underground supplies or above-ground water such as rivers and streams "should not be permitted to do business in the state of Texas," he said.

While Sharp said he believes in a free-market transportation system, he said he also recognizes the need for regulations that assure service to rural areas.

Some shipping for small town businesses "probably would not be there if the state of Texas, through the Railroad Commission, did not require carriers to stop at those places," he said.

As for his philosophy on gas rates, Sharp said, "You ought to set the lowest possible rate that you believe will not disrupt the current and future supplies."

Duarte's daughter kidnapped from Salvadoran university

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Six heavily armed kidnappers seized the eldest daughter of President Jose Napoleon Duarte as she arrived for classes at a private university, wounding a bodyguard and killing her driver.

The kidnappers, dressed in civilian clothes, opened fire on the bodyguards of Ines Guadelupe Duarte Duran, 35, dragged her from her car and forced her into a van Tuesday, a presidential adviser said. She was unharmed when last seen.

A somber Julio Adolfo Rey Prendes, Duarte's closest adviser and secretary of culture and communications, told reporters Tuesday night that there had been no contact with the kidnappers.

No one claimed responsibility, but a presidential security captain at the scene said "certainly it was the guerrillas" who have been fighting the U.S.-backed government for the past six years.

The evening broadcast of the leftist guerrillas' Radio Venceremos, five hours after the incident, made no mention of it.

Mrs. Duarte Duran, a divorced mother of three, was taking courses in advertising and public relations at the New San Salvador University on the west edge of the city. The director of her father's successful 1984 presidential campaign, she also directs San Salvador's Radio Liberty.

Rey Prendes, sometimes blinking back tears, said President Duarte, who had been working at home for the past few days due to illness, was "very shaken but very firm." He refused to speculate on negotiations that might lead to the release of the oldest of Duarte's six children.

Guerrillas have held 13 small-town mayors in eastern El Salvador since spring, demanding an accounting for rebels they say were picked up by the government.

If the guerrillas were responsible for the kidnapping, it would be their most spectacular urban action since rebel gunmen killed 13 people, including four off-duty U.S. Marines, at two outdoor restaurants in San Salvador on June 19.

Witnesses said early today that the military took unusual security precautions after the abduction, quickly setting up several checkpoints on roads leading out of the capital.

Mrs. Duarte Duran was divorced a year ago from Alfredo Navas, who heads the government agency that oversees low-cost distribution of basic foods to the poor.

Rey Prendes said Duarte, of the moderate Christian Democratic Party, has for now cancelled his overseas appointments, including a scheduled visit to Boston University to receive an honorary degree Sept. 20 and an appearance at the United Nations.

He said the wounded guard was in serious condition at a private hospital and that another guard escaped unharmed. The dead man was identified as Mauricio Alfredo Elena Palomares.

It was not clear if the bodyguards returned fire.

Rey Prendes said a trail of blood near the attack site was from the wounded guard and not, as speculated earlier, from an injured kidnapper trying to escape.

Soldiers and presidential security guards swarmed over the area minutes after the abduction, surrounding Mrs. Duarte Duran's gray Toyota sedan, which was not hit by gunfire. Her schoolbooks could be seen scattered in the front seat.

A statement read to reporters and over national radio Tuesday night said: "The government of the republic condemns this abominable act which shows once again the absolute disregard of human rights in the kidnapping of a woman and the murder of a public servant."

"The government ratifies its will to keep fighting through rational and humane means for peace and the eradication of the use of violence and death," the statement said.

Rey Prendes said the communique had been personally approved by Duarte.

Roberto d'Aubuisson, head of the ultra-conservative Republican Nationalist Alliance and Duarte's bitterest political enemy, said in a radio interview Tuesday night that he "lamented" the act and that "all Salvadorans must condemn this type of action."

Botha believes South African leaders should control racial reform

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President P.W. Botha today said South Africa's white-minority government would set its own pace toward racial reform, and not be swayed by pressure from the United States or the Soviet Union.

Botha called for "all well-meaning, reasonable and honest South Africans" to "take the road of renewal, reform and freedom as South Africans determine it and not as Russia or America wish to determine it."

In an address to the Orange Free State provincial congrss of his ruling National Party, Botha also suggested some blacks might be able to regain the South African citizenship they lost when the white government created four independent black homelands

As rioting against apartheid persisted, a funeral crowd near Cape Town mobbed a man thought to be a policeman, then kicked and stabbed him to death this morning, witnesses said. Police said he was of mixed racial ancestry but witnesses said he was white.

■ Related stories — Page 5D

Police also said today that they shot and killed a 4-year-old black girl who was playing inside her house during township rioting.

In a separate development, Zenani Mandela, daughter of imprisoned black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela, said today her father has an enlarged prostate gland and cysts on his liver and right kidney, and doctors say he needs surgery.

She made the announcement after visiting the 67-year-old Mandela at Cape Town's Pollsmoor Prison. Mandela, president of the outlawed African National Congress, has been in prison for 23 years on charges of high treason, sabotage and conspiracy to overthrow the government.

The prison service announced last week that Mandela had been seen by a urologist. His daughter did not give any indication today when Mandela might undergo surgery.

The 4-year-old girl, Mita Ngobeni, was killed in Atteridgeville, west of Pretoria, where a police spokesman said a rubber bullet fired by officers to disperse rioters apparently killed her.

Residents and family members were quoted by the black Sowetan newspaper as saying the rubber bullet tore away half the girl's head.

Botha's party has for years argued that the Soviet Union wants to control South Africa's mineral wealth.

The president said Americans should resolve their own racial problems, "And they can begin with the red Indians who are living in squalor in their own reserves, and with their (American) ghettos."

He termed the Sunset Commission — the 15-member Commission on the Economy and Efficiency in State Government — as the state's own Grace Commission.

"We are already seeing signs in Texas of creeping bureaucracy," he said.

For example, he noted that some state commissioners have abused state airplanes by running up "substantial costs" instead of flying Southwest Airlines.

He said state government is "essentially a post-Reconstruction-era type" of organization.

"WE ARE GOING to have to re-do it from the ground up to make it more efficient in terms of service to the people and delivery of service and optimum return on the tax-dollar investment."

Further, Montford said the Texas Constitution has "become cumbersome. It's out-moded. It's out-dated."

On the federal level, "the problem is indeed one of mismanagement."

That seemed to be Goldberger's message.

The prime hope for reducing government spending, cutting out the deficit and chipping away at the $1.3 trillion national debt is putting "grassroots pressure" on Congress by one congressman at a time.

"The only thing that works is to go out to the people and generate grassroots pressure" by writing congressmen and petitioning them to cut back on wasteful government spending.

Under the leadership of J. Peter Grace, chief executive officer and chairman of W.R. Grace & Co., an international investment company, the PPSSCC — Grace Commission — came up with 2,478 ways to cut government waste, enhance federal revenues and reduce the federal deficit. If implemented, those ideas could save the government and the taxpayers $424.4 billion in three years. The cuts would not impair national defense and would not harm the country's welfare programs. The privately-funded study was made by 160 top executives and more than 2,000 volunteers.

GOLDBERGER noted the U.S. government employs 4.9 million civilian and military people — one out of 20 Americans — and has a payroll of $103 billion.

"And the federal government doesn't know what they are doing or where they are located."

He cited the bigness of big government: It has 2.6 billion square feet of office space. "That's all the office space in the 10 largest cities in America times four." And as the country's largest landowner, the government owns one third of the total land mass equivalent to the states east of the Mississippi River plus Texas.

He cited other government extravaganzas:

• The government provides 95 million meals a days. That's enough food to feed people in the nation's 31 largest cities three meals a day.

• It has 332 "mostly incompatible" accounting systems. "If you had these accounting systems in the private sector, you would either go bankrupt or you would go to jail." But that "doesn't happen to the federal government, because they have unlimited borrowing power."

• The government has an $850 billion loan portfolio. "The government doesn't know what's current and what's delinquent or when any of this money is supposed to come in." As a result, the government borrows "needlessly" and incurs "needless interest expenses." Of those loans, $25 billion is in outstanding student loans. Of those, $2.5 billion is in default. Among those who have defaulted are 41,000 government workers. "They (the government) don't exactly know — the computers don't work — who they are."

• The U.S. Army spends $4.20 to prepare each payroll check, while private business does it for $1 a check. The Army's check-preparation cost: $40 million.

• The government has 963 social programs. "And you can get on 17 different programs at the same time." Those subsidized programs cost $400 billion annually.

• The government could "wipe out poverty" in American by doling out $50 billion in paychecks to the nation's poor. As it is, the government is spending on poverty programs 2½ times that amount, and "70 percent of the money is going to the non-poor."

• "Camelot (President John F. Kennedy) spent $37 billion on social programs"in the 1960s, and today the government is spending $413 billion on social programs. "Kennedy was called Camelot, and Reagan was called Scrooge, so you figure that out."

• Government social programs have been "formularized. These formulas don't bear any relationship to what money is available."

• The government's pension plans, which Goldberger variously called "double-dipper," "triple-dipper," "big dipper," "double-scooper," and "dead dipper" depending on the size and make-up of pensions and other income, are a drain on the government's economy. The federal pension system is three times better for civil service workers and six times better for military personnel than "anything we have in the private sector." A double-dipper would be a government retiree who draws a pension plus salary from another job. A triple-dipper would be the retiree who draws Social Security payments in addition to a pension and a salary.

• Fifty percent of the government's 17,000 computers are obsolete.

• The nation has 4,000 military bases and installations but only needs 312 "for the strategic defense of the country. ... Most of the others are of strategic importance to local congressmen who successfully blocked the closure of any defense installation since 1976." Goldberger noted there are 6,000 McDonald's restaurants in the country, "so we have roughly two military bases to defend every three McDonald's."

• The government has spent $91 for three-cent screws, $436 for $7 hammers, and $7,000 for a coffeemaker. The government needs "competitive bidding," he said.

• "Soaking the rich" with taxes won't solve the government's revenue problems, he said. And the largest segment of taxpayers, the lower middle income taxpayers, can ill afford to pay more taxes.

"You can't fix the situation by raising taxes," Goldberger said. "You have to cut expenses."

OIL

That could not only mean a return to long lines at the gas station, White said, it also threatens the nation's defenses. As an example, he pointed to the effects the Allies' bombing of German refineries had on the outcome of the North African desert battle in World War II.

"The difference between our tanks and their tanks is ours had gas in 'em and theirs didn't — and there went World War II," he said. "Right now, without dropping a single bomb, there went 30 percent of our refining equipment."

Walter Piontek, vice president for planning with Mobil Oil Corp., said the oil companies followed good economic principles when they closed refineries in response to dropping world petroleum prices.

"Refinery closures are unpleasant, but they are an inevitable consequence of overcapacity and stagnant demand in a free market," Piontek said. "When supply exceeds demand by the volume levels we're experiencing today, inefficient plants become uneconomical. This is precisely how the American system of free enterprise is supposed to work."

He predicted further plant shutdowns, but disputed White's argument that that poses a security risk.

Texas Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace took a tougher stand, advocating a $5-per-barrel tax on imported oil. Such a tax, he said, would help balance the federal budget, allow domestic producers to "play on an even field" with their government-subsidized foreign competitors and reduce the security risks White predicted.

"Seventy-five percent of the crude oil produced in the world today is produced by governments and not companies," Wallace told the governors. "Therefore the production of that oil is an instrument of foreign policy."

Pointek disagreed with Wallace's proposed import tax.

"In the oil industry, protectionism makes the least sense of all," the Mobil executive said. "Rather than using import quotas to solve that problem, let's do it with fiscal incentives to increase efficiency in the refinery sector."

In a business meeting after the discussion, the association adopted what some called a watered-down version of a White-proposed resolution calling on Congress to maintain current federal income tax deductions that provide incentives for oil exploration. White said President Reagan's proposed elimination of those incentives would even further U.S. dependence on foreign oil.

But the governor's stuck with the milder version of the resolution, which simply asks Congress to "recognize the need to continue the development of these resources." A White aide said the Texas governor knew he would be outvoted and so didn't press the issue to a formal vote.

Outcry predicted over prayer bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms says the evangelical movement will publicize the names of senators who defeated a school prayer bill, but one of those lawmakers contends the public doesn't want government deciding religious matters.

By a 62-36 vote Tuesday, the Senate tabled the Helms-sponsored bill that would have prohibited the Supreme Court and lower federal courts from deciding cases on voluntary prayer, Bible reading or religious meetings in public schools.

Prior to the vote, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., one of the Senate's leading conservatives, told Helms, R-N.C.: "If I would have written it (the bill), I would be ashamed of it."

The vote most likely killed the legislation. However, a proposed constitutional amendment to allow voluntary silent prayer in public schools is before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

VALUE

He said the Midland Central Appraisal District uses the "Market Approach Method" which simply asks, "For what price are properties similar to this selling?"

By making a comparison between the property being valued and other similar properties which recently have been sold, the appraiser can estimate what property would sell for if placed on the market.

After making such comparisons, the appraiser can estimate the property's value and then use it for the market value of the property on the tax rolls.

Wilkinson noted in May 1984, a lot located in the Saddle Club South edition sold for a reported $20,000 and was valued on the tax roll at $18,620 or 93.1 percent of the total market value. Appraisers assessed the value of the 8,276-square-foot lot at $2.25 per square foot.

In addition, a lot located in the Saddle Club Estates edition sold in May for a reported $275,000. The 48,482-square-foot lot was valued on the tax roll at $274,480 or 99.8 percent of the total market value. Appraisers assessed the value of the land at $1.50 per square foot.

Wilkenson noted, "The general theory and principle of appraisal dictates the larger a lot is the less value per square foot."

For example, lots in Saddle Club Estates go from a low of 23,000 square feet to a high of 114,000 square feet. "We have those lots valued at $1.50 per square foot," he said. "So although there appears to be discrepancies, I think you'll see that the total valuation of properties, even vacant properties, are close."

Wilkenson admitted, however, not all property is assessed at 100 percent of its market value.

A lot located in the Saddle Club South edition, for example, sold in December 1984 for $95,000 and was valued on the tax roll at $103,000 or 108 percent of the total market value. Another sold in April for a reported $99,900 and was valued on the tax roll at $119,830 or 120 percent of the actual sale price, he said.

Wilkinson attributed the varying degrees in land values to the "roller-coaster effect" of the Midland market.

He said he "welcomes any and all investigations" into the Midland County Appraisal district which reported over 500 sales in the first six months of 1985 and an average ratio of assessment of 96 percent.

"The State Property Tax Board, which is a state agency annually audits each appraisal district in the State of Texas for ratios of assessments and market value sales.

"The most recent audit in July of 1985 indicated that this appraisal district had an average of 94 percent on homes, apartments and vacant land. That's why I have no apologies. Though personally upset, professionally I feel very confident of the fact that we are doing a good job," Wilkinson said.

"I think the thing that upsets me the most is the blatant attack on our morality," he added.

Wilkinson said he has asked Mrs. Erskine to talk with him personally and also gave her "written letters of protest forms to appear before the Appraisal Review Board two year in a row."

She refused, he added.

Persons wishing to contest the current market values of their property may visit with Wilkinson or his appraisers in Suite 160 at Dellwood Mall or may call 699-4991.

Otherwise, they may make appointments with the Midland County Appraisal Review Board which has the sole authority to change the appraised values up to the time they approve the tax roll.

'Double dippers' scoop rich pensions from taxpayers' coffers

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 50 members of Congress are costing taxpayers millions of dollars by supplementing their $75,100 annual salaries with pension benefits earned from previous government service, the National Taxpayers Union says.

The lobbying group said the biggest of what they called "double dippers" were 59-year-old Sen. Daniel Evans, R-Wash., whose pension from state service including governor and legislator is $60,527 a year, and 69-year-old Rep. Lindy Boggs, D-La., who receives a $47,274 annuity as a congressman's widow.

It listed Alan Dixon, a 58-year-old millionaire Democrat from Illinois, as receiving $30,400 a year in retirement benefits for nearly 30 years of service in his state's government.

Senate President Pro Tempore Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., takes home $33,390 in benefits from Social Security, an Army pension and a state pension, in addition to his $82,100-a-year salary, the taxpayers union reported. Thurmond is 82 years old.

NATION

The group said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., is paid $13,735 a year in combined benefits from Social Security and a pension from his days as state legislator. The wife of the 72-year-old speaker also receives $5,035 in annual Social Security payments, the group said.

Each member of the House and Senate receives an annual congressional salary of $75,100, except for Thurmond and the minority and majority leaders of each chamber, who are paid $85,000. The House speaker earns $97,900 a year.

The taxpayers union, a lobbying group which publicizes what it considers waste in government, said it obtained the figures through Freedom of Information Act requests to the government and reviews of the lawmakers' annual financial disclosure statements.

"A federal pension bomb is ticking away in Washington that is about to explode in the taxpayer's wallet," said Sid Taylor, the group's research director.

Congressmen take double supplements

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Taxpayers Union, a lobby group, listed these 53 members of the House and Senate as receiving federal, state or other governmental level pensions in addition to their annual congressional salary, including 48 with pensions of at least $4,000.

Every member of Congress is paid $75,100 a year, except the House speaker who is paid $97,900 and the majority and minority leaders of both chambers and the Senate president pro tem who are paid $85,000.

GTE admits it reached out for classified Pentagon papers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A subsidiary of the GTE Corp. has agreed to plead guilty to illegally receiving Defense Department budget documents, some of them classified, and will pay $590,000 in costs and fines, the company and Pentagon officials say.

The announcement of the pleading came Tuesday as a federal grand jury charged a consultant and two officials connected to the firm, the GTE Government Systems Corp., with conspiring to illegally obtain Pentagon documents.

The GTE subsidiary was charged in U.S. District Court in Alexandria, Va., with a single count of conspiracy. The company said it would plead guilty to the charge today.

In a prepared statement, the Pentagon said GTE also had agreed to suspend corporate officials named in the indictment pending resolution of the case; pay $580,000 to cover the government's investigative costs; absorb all legal costs it will incur; and "refund all payments made to its consultant who obtained the documents."

It also will pay a $10,000 fine.

From its headquarters in Stamford, Conn., GTE Corp. released a prepared statement saying GTE Government Systems Corp. "...agreed to plead guilty to a single count relating to the receipt without authorization of DOD budgetary and planning documents...."

The charge involved activities that took place more than two years ago, the statement said, adding: "The use of such documents was a common industry practice and at GTE Government Systems, they were handled only by persons with appropriate security clearances."

> "The use of such documents was a common industry practice and at GTE Government Systems, they were handled only by persons with appropriate security clearances."
>
> — GTE Corp. statement

The company said it "does not condone such activities" and said it has agreed to pay the government's costs of investigating the case. It also promised to "implement a program to prevent any recurrance of such activities."

In the separate criminal information and indictment against three individuals, Justice Department officials said GTE Government Systems Corp. had been "a major supplier" to the Defense Department in the electronic warfare area.

The three were charged with "conspiring to convert to their own use Department of Defense documents containing classified and proprietary information." The department said the alleged conspiracy involved budget documents relating to future Pentagon procurements, primarily in the area of electronic warfare.

Named as defendants were:

—Robert R. Carter, 55, of Mountain View, Calif., a former GTE employee who was marketing manager of the Electronic Warfare Organization at GTE's Western Division.

—Walter R. Edgington, 60, of Annandale, Va., a GTE vice president for marketing with offices in Rosslyn, Va.

—Bernie E. Zettl, 62, of McLean, Va., a consultant doing business as Zettl Associates, with offices located at various times in Springfield, Annandale and Arlington, Va.

Edgington and Zettl were named in three counts and Carter was named in one count.

The criminal information against the firm asserted that GTE Government Systems Corp. officials "took steps to assure that their possession of the documents was not known."

If convicted, Zettl and Edgington each face a maximum sentence of 25 years in prison and a $30,000 fine, while Carter would face up to five years and a $10,000 fine.

The Pentagon took credit for initially discovering "the illegal practices."

Committee wants curb on 'dirty' ads

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of the Senate Commerce Committee are taking aim at some of the mean, sleazy and dirty things they see on television, and they're not talking about oilman J.R. Ewing of CBS-TV's "Dallas."

Their legislative guns are trained on something much closer to home: the increasing number of negative political advertisements appearing during congressional election campaigns.

Led by Chairman John C. Danforth, R-Mo., they began the campaign Tuesday with a hearing that opened with videotaped reruns of some campaign spots they found offensive.

Like the one that asked the question, "Who owns Quentin Burdick?" and had an auctioneer's voice reading off campaign contributions made to the Democratic senator from North Dakota. The spiel ended with, "Sold! To big Eastern labor unions for $246,000."

Then there was the ad showing a picture of a whale and the house owned by Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va. The announcer said, "They have one thing in common. Neither can be found in West Virginia."

Another TV spot went back 21 years and was a pointed reminder for committee member Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., of his unsuccessful bid for the presidency against President Johnson.

The ad was one of several run by the Democrats in 1964 implying that conservative Goldwater would bring a quick nuclear-weapon trigger finger to the White House.

"This dirty advertising has become a business, a rather major business," commented Goldwater, who along with Danforth is a co-sponsor of legislation intended to discourage negative campaign aids.

Their bill would require broadcasters to provide equal response time to a federal candidate attacked by an opponent's ad, unless the opponent actually delivered the attack.

The proposal also would require equal time for a politician to respond to any ad prepared and run independently of the opponent if the ad either attacked the politician or endorsed his opponent.

Joining in the call for an end to negative ads was Howard Baker, who retired last year as Senate majority leader. He called them "a sneak attack on a decent person."

"Not only is the negative ad the sleaziest new element in politics, it may also be the most dangerous," the Tennessee Republican said.

Study: Chemicals causing cancer lurk in the home

CHICAGO (AP) — Toxic chemicals found in every home, from paint to common cleaning solvents, are three times more likely to cause cancer than airborne pollutants — even in neighborhoods close to chemical plants, a federal study concludes.

"It was difficult to accept for a while," said Lance Wallace, an Environmental Protection Agency scientist who evaluated data from the five-year study. "But a number of similar studies...concluded the same thing."

Wallace's report was prepared for delivery to the American Chemical Society's 190th national meeting today.

He acknowledged Tuesday that toxic chemicals found in the home could be responsible for no more "than several hundred deaths each year."

And even then, he added in an interview, scientists would be hard-pressed to determine the role any given substance played in a cancer-related death, and could not say for sure that toxic chemicals in the home directly caused a single death.

But Wallace said the level of toxic chemicals ingested indoors, either through breathing, eating, drinking water or skin absorption, "make the home more of a toxic waste dump than any chemical plants nearby."

The report cited paints, cleansers, plastics, cosmetics and building materials as probable sources of toxic chemicals in the home.

Some sources were as familiar as cigarette smoke (benzene) but others, like taking a shower, came as a surprise, said Wallace, who is on leave from the EPA as a visiting scientist at the Harvard University School of Public Health.

Showering is suspected as the primary cause of elevated levels of chloroform in nearly every home, he said, because of the chlorine in water.

The study generally found toxic chemical levels indoors at three times the outdoor rate, he said.

Veterans may pay part of VA hospital treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Health insurance companies and some veterans themselves would have to begin paying part of the costs of treatment at Veterans Administration hospitals under a bipartisan congressional proposal.

The plan is an effort by Democratic and Republican lawmakers to come up with $300 million in VA savings to meet requirements of the 1986 budget passed by Congress.

Some of the money would come from a new requirement that veterans who have a family income of more than $25,000 — and whose ailment isn't directly related to their military service — pay up to $476 a year for VA medical treatment. The amount is linked to the "co-payments" required under Medicare.

That would repeal current law saying veterans over the age of 65 may be cared for free of charge at a VA facility, regardless of their ability to pay.

Yet the change stops short of the Reagan administration's proposal, which would have set a maximum income limit of about $15,000, except for veterans with service-connected ailments. The administration proposal is called a "means test," and opponents say veterans would have to spend their own money almost to the poverty level before becoming eligible for a VA hospital.

The bipartisan proposal was before the House Veterans Affairs Committee today where its sponsors are the chairman, Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., and vice chairman, Rep. John Paul Hammerschmidt, R-Ark.

"I'll be blunt," Montgomery warned in detailing his plan to the Veterans of Foreign Wars' national convention last month. "If you don't stand with the House committee as it works to find the savings that have been mandated, then the administration is going to implement its more limited means test, and I know you don't want that."

Rather than cutting spending, most of the "savings" under the plan is new income for the VA. The largest portion of the money, $204 million, would be generated by a provision authorizing the VA to bill insurance companies for the treatment of veterans who have insurance.

That idea, suggested earlier by the Reagan administration, has drawn fierce opposition from the insurance industry. It contends that if insurance companies must pay for VA hospital care, the costs will be passed on to employers' group health policies and to individuals in higher premiums.

"I have every indication that it's going to pass this year," said Mary Nell Lehnhard, vice president of Blue Cross and Blue Shield Association. "...And employers are going to have to pay for this."

Most health insurance policies have clauses stating they will not pay for care provided in VA hospitals or for which the policyholder has no legal obligation to pay.

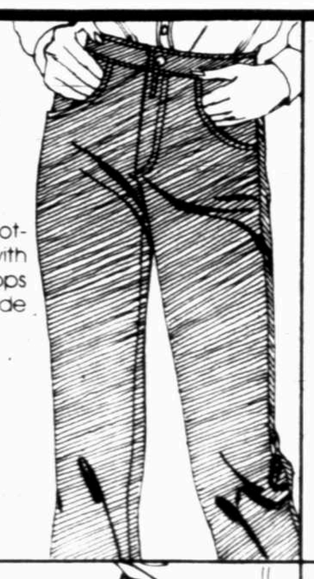

A study earlier this year by the General Accounting Office recommended billing private insurance companies for VA medical bills.

NATION IN BRIEF

Extract to aid 'preemies'

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Medical researchers say a substance extracted from the lungs of calves may soon wipe out many cases of respiratory distress syndrome, the No. 1 killer of extremely premature newborn babies.

The substance is known as a surfactant and is missing from the lungs of babies born before the 32nd week of pregnancy, making it hard for them to pass oxygen from their lungs into their bloodstream.

About 8,000 to 10,000 premature infants die annually in the United States from respiratory distress syndrome. Many of the lives could be saved if the babies were given surfactant at birth, the researchers say.

Recent studies in Rochester, Buffalo and Toronto have shown that giving the preemies a surfactant purified from an extract of calves' lungs can aid the babies' breathing and save them from lung damage and even death.

The surfactant is a thick, cloudy liquid with a slippery feel. A breathing tube sends it into the newborn's lungs, where it is absorbed. The calves' lung derivative also seems to stimulate natural production of surfactant in the babies' lungs, said Dr. Goran Enhorning of the University of Toronto.

Trick-or-treating limited

DECATUR, Ill. (AP) — Parents are being asked to accompany trick-or-treaters Halloween night in this central Illinois town, where two little girls were slain last year.

The Decatur City Council also decided Monday to urge parents to allow children to stop only at houses with porch lights turned on, and to look for alternative activities for young ghosts and goblins.

The council agreed to limit trick-or-treating to two hours, from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m., but rejected the idea of a total ban.

Calls for a ban on trick-or-treating followed the deaths of Sherry Gordon, 12, and Theresa Hall, 10, whose bodies were found in a vacant housing project apartment. They had disappeared Halloween night.

No arrest has been made in the case.

Pit bull insurance needed

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — In the wake of a series of maulings, Broward County commissioners have decided that people who own pit bull terriers will have to insure their dogs for $1 million, register them and restrict them.

The rules governing pit bull ownership go into effect Oct. 15.

The ordinance, approved 4-1 Tuesday, requires owners to muzzle, leash or pen their dogs and provides penalties of 60 days in jail and fines of $500 for violations.

Dancer falls to death

SEATTLE (AP) — The Japanese dance troupe Sankai Juku has canceled its seven-city U.S. tour after one of its members plummeted six stories to his death before a horrified crowd in the group's first American performance.

Yoshiyuki Takada, 31, died at Harborview Medical Center Tuesday of "multiple trauma and head injuries" shortly after he fell in a noontime show to promote the group's performances here.

Takada plunged to his death just after he and three other performers, attached at their ankles to ropes, began to be lowered separately from the roof of the building in a performance described as a "dance of birth and death."

Reagan appoints judges

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan intends to nominate Nicholas Tsoucalas, a judge of the New York City Criminal Court since 1968, as a judge of the U.S. Court of International Trade, succeeding Nils A. Boe, the White House announced Tuesday.

The White House also announced that Reagan plans to nominate Laurence H. Silberman, a Washington attorney who is a member of the General Advisory Committee on Arms Control and Disarmament, as a judge of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington. He would fill a new position created by Congress last year.

In addition, the White House said, Reagan has chosen three individuals for nomination as federal district judges: Alan A. McDonald, a practicing attorney in Yakima, Wash., for the Eastern District of Washington; Paul N. Brown of Sherman, Tex., also a lawyer in private practice, for the Eastern District of Texas; and Henry T. Wingate, an assistant U.S. attorney for the Southern District of Mississippi since 1984, as a judge of that district.

'Shopping mall' high schools deplored

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three education researchers today unveiled a chilling portrait of American high schools as a shopping mall that offers something for everybody, but does little to push the average student toward mastery of academics.

"The schools have done a masterly job at selling the importance of high school attendance, but have failed in the attempt to sell to most students the value of working hard to learn to use one's mind," authors Arthur G. Powell, Eleanor Farrar and David K. Cohen concluded.

"In this consumer-oriented institution...you can get as much or as little as you choose," they said in a book, "The Shopping Mall High School: Winners and Losers in the Educational Marketplace."

"If you choose to buy little, the problem is yours, not the mall's. The mall is neutral about the kinds of purchases you make and about how informed a consumer you are. The mall wants your regular presence and your good behavior, and for that alone it will sell you a diploma."

The researchers based their portrait on schools they visited in the Boston area, Denver, San Diego, Cleveland, Mobile and other sites in 1981-82.

"If you choose to buy little, the problem is yours, not the mall's. The mall is neutral about the kinds of purchases you make and about how informed a consumer you are. The mall wants your regular presence and your good behavior, and for that alone it will sell you a diploma."

—"The Shopping Mall High School"

They found one school that took 65 typeset pages to describe the 400 available courses, and another that offered 480 courses. Some courses with virtually the same titles ranged from the easy to the exacting.

In order "to entice and graduate the entire adolescent population, and ensure that most are somehow the better for it," high schools make numerous accomodations with academic rigor, they said. This produces "a neutral environment where a do-your-own-thing attitude prevails."

"One school allows students to take up to 36 percent of their credits during grades 10 through 12 in Marching and Concert Band," the researchers found.

"Many teachers with little commitment or skill wish to retain their jobs. They use student passivity as an excuse to cover up their own passivity," they said.

Using pseudonyms, the book tells of actual teachers who regale students with tidbits from their own love lives. Such lackadaisical teachers "settle for a relaxed classroom atmosphere as an end in itself....Lacking education and commitment to their work, they too prefer undemanding classes. They are satisfied, as long as students attend and are not disruptive."

"Most act as if they believe that the 'smarts' needed for life are not really taught in high school," the authors said. Many assign little or no homework, and some tolerate students who listen through headsets to Sony Walkmen, so long as the volume is kept low.

But the book also depicts an exacting teacher leading an advanced English class in a probing discussion of Ibsen's play, "A Doll's House." High schools typically offer challenging courses for students on the fast track, the authors said, as well as special services for slow learners or disruptive students.

But the great mass of students in the middle are often poorly served by the shopping mall high school, the authors concluded.

"The very factors that make many average youngsters unspecial — they are neither skilled enough nor problematic enough to stand out — also make them trouble-free, invisible and taken for granted by schools," they said. "Parents of such children should become forceful advocates themselves, and should organize if they individually lack the means to send their children to another school."

Texan elected Episcopal bishop

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The Rt. Rev. Edmond Lee Browning, newly elected presiding bishop of the 3 million-member Episcopal Church, is a soft-spoken but firm opponent of the nuclear arms race and discrimination against homosexuals who doesn't believe "we should put anybody down."

The white-haired Texan, who has been the bishop of Hawaii for nine years, aired his liberal views in a news conference Tuesday, sometimes at odds with the denomination's official position.

Candidates in Punjab speak softly but carry 'big sticks' for protection

By BRAHMA CHELLANEY

AMRITSAR, India (AP) — Each of the 992 candidates is allowed to carry a gun and have two police bodyguards in the campaign now under way for 117 state assembly and 13 national Parliament seats in turbulent, violent Punjab.

The government, responding to Sikh terrorist threats to disrupt the balloting set for Sept. 25, has assigned more than 100,000 security personnel to the campaign, an unprecedented number in an Indian state election.

Some candidates have 18 or more paramilitary personnel or commandos guarding them in homes that have been fortified with sandbags.

The campaign got off to a timorous start last Friday and is expected to remain that way because of the potential for danger.

Violence is no stranger to Indian electioneering, but this is the first time political terrorists have posed a fundamental threat to free voting.

Many leading candidates of the two main parties, the Sikh Akali Dal and Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi's governing Congress Party, remained barricaded this week, fearing terrorist attacks.

The campaign's first killing came this past weekend. Subhash Chander Billa, a Congress Party youth leader not assigned a guard, was shot as he left his home with political pamphlets. Officials blamed Sikh terrorists.

The mood in the Sikh-dominated state of 17 million is one of uncertainty and fear in certain areas. But most Sikhs and Hindus appeared determined to vote, despite a boycott call by Sikh militants to protest Gandhi's accord with Sikh moderates to bring peace and order to Punjab.

Punjab's violence peaked in June 1984 with an Indian army attack on Sikh militants inside the Golden Temple, the Sikh holy place in Amritsar. This was followed in October by the assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, allegedly by bodyguards identified as Sikhs.

Police say terrorists seeking an independent Sikh nation in Punjab will try to assassinate candidates and intimidate voters in an effort to wreck the accord and plunge the state into deeper turmoil.

The voting will be seen as a critical phase in settling the Punjab crisis and ending three years of bloodshed. It is expected to show whether the might of Gandhi's central government can control terrorism.

Punjab, under direct federal rule for two years, has 10 million Sikhs, 7 million Hindus and 10.7 million eligible voters.

The Akalis never have won an absolute majority and the Congress Party is putting up weak candidates to bolster moderate Akalis opposing militants.

In this Sikh holy city and militant stronghold, there is little campaigning. Auto rickshaw drivers are charging double for carrying Congress Party loudspeakers that blare, "Build a bright future for Punjab — Vote Congress."

Hindu driver Om Prakash has doubled his charges to 300 rupees ($24.20) for eight hours and refuses to work at night when Sikh terrorists might strike.

"Half the money is insurance for the risks I take," he said.

At least 36 bulletproof vests have been imported from the United States for the campaign, a senior Punjab official told The Associated Press. A spokesman for the moderate Akali wing said the vests are being provided to all leaders and candidates who speak in favor of Gandhi's peace accord.

Thai officials hold suspected coup leaders

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Officials said today that 79 members of an air force security unit had been detained in connection with a failed coup, and that some business and labor leaders also may have been involved in the revolt. In Singapore, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs issued a statement saying Thailand had requested that a suspected coup leader be allowed to stop over in Singapore while he made arrangements to go elsewhere.

"The Thai authorities had requested permission for Col. Manoon Rubkachorn to transit in Singapore briefly and arrangements are being made for his departure soon," the statement said. It did not say when Manoon would leave or where he would go.

Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanonda said Tuesday that the coup had been suppressed with a minimun of violence, and that the suspected leaders would be treated fairly. The revolt Monday by about 500 soldiers was quelled after a confrontation that left four people dead and 59 others injured.

Some of the detained military men held the air force chief, Marshal Prapan Dhupatemiya hostage in rebel headquarters at the Supreme Command during the aborted coup, said military sources who spoke on condition they not be identified.

The military sources said all 79 detainees were from the air force security force commanded by Manat Rubkachorn, brother of Manoon. They were detained Tuesday and were being held at air force headquarters at Don Muang Airport, the sources said.

Military sources said the men would be turned over to investigators from a joint civilian-military committee appointed by Prem.

A senior police official reported that "a number of civilians" who he declined to identify were believed to have also taken part in the attempted coup.

The director of the Bangkok mass transit authority, Pichate Satirachawal, charged that businessman Ekkayuth Anchanbut seized control of the authority during the coup and was seen communicating by telephone with coup leaders.

The government has also charged that several labor union leaders tried to stir anti-government sentiment during the rebel attack on the army radio station.

Police sources said an investigation is "likely to result in arrests, since the incident caused death and the loss of property, which is contrary to the laws." Suspects could be charged under anti-subversion laws that call for a maximum penalty of execution or life imprisonment, police said.

Thai officials said Manat Rubkachorn and Manoon Rubkachorn flew to Singapore late Monday. The U.S. State Department said in Washington on Tuesday that three suspected coup leaders who had arrived in Singapore had requested political asylum in the United States. The identify of the third suspect was not clear.

Gorbachev makes extensive changes in party personnel

By ALISON SMALE

MOSCOW (AP) — Six months after taking over leadership the Communist Party, Mikhail S. Gorbachev and his political allies have succeeded in making some of the most rapid and extensive personnel changes in Soviet history.

In both the personnel shifts and his policies, Gorbachev has proven very much the political heir of the late Yuri V. Andropov, the former KGB chief who began making extensive changes but died after only 15 months as Soviet leader.

The anti-corruption drive and campaign to boost the economy begun by Andropov ground to a halt when Konstantin U. Chernenko assumed party leadership in February 1984. Chernenko paid lip service to Andropov's policies but failed to pursue them vigorously.

Since Gorbachev became Communist Party chief on March 11 — six months ago today — he has taken up where Andropov left off, elevating younger, professional supporters to high positions in both the party and the government.

Four of Gorbachev's allies have been promoted to the party's ruling Politburo. His former rival for the party leadership, Grigory V. Romanov, has been ousted and discredited by widespread rumors of heavy drinking.

Three new men have joined the Central Committee Secretariat, the 11-man group headed by Gorbachev that runs the country day to day.

The most visible of the changes involved Andrei A. Gromyko, who became president after 28 years as foreign minister. He was replaced by Edvard A. Shevardnadze, the former Georgian party leader.

Chiefs of nine government ministries also have been replaced, mostly by younger men.

Within the Communist Party, the heads of 20 regional committees — the leaders of districts of a million people or more — changed in five months, according to an unofficial compilation of announced changes. By comparison, Chernenko's rule saw six switches and Andropov's first five months only five.

The pace of change quickened later in Andropov's time, after he installed Yegor K. Ligachev in April 1983 as head of the Organizational Party Work Department in the Central Committee.

Ligachev had access to the records of every party member and began weeding out the oldest, least qualified and most corrupt, replacing them with Andropov's supporters.

Now believed to be the No. 2 man in the Kremlin, Ligachev forms an important link between the Andropov and Gorbachev eras.

He was promoted in April to full Politburo membership without the usual candidate stage. Although he then handed over the Organizational Party Work Department to Georgi P. Razumovsky, Ligachev still oversees all important personnel changes.

An article he wrote for the authoritative journal Communist in August made clear he wants to create a new pool of candidates for promotion after next February's Communist Party congress.

Such congresses are held every five years and the next one gives Gorbachev and his allies a chance to consolidate personnel and policy changes made so far and advance new ones.

Ligachev's influence may account for the similarity in types of people promoted under Andropov and Gorbachev, men in their 50s or early 60s with unblemished party careers.

Among new ministers, particularly in key economic areas such as oil production, almost all have professional qualifications in their field.

In the party, several of the new regional chiefs came to Moscow with or shortly after Ligachev in 1983. Most combine experience of the region they now run with Central Committee work in the past two years.

What is not clear is how much the new men will change policy.

Gorbachev has called for a new approach to the economy and told those who resist to "get out of the way." An August decree initiated new price incentives, industrial building policies and wider powers for local decision-making.

Moscow offers chemical-free zone

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Tuesday said Moscow would respect and guarantee a zone free of chemical weapons in Europe if the United States did the same.

The official news agency Tass said Gorbachev made the statement during Kremlin talks with Johannes Rau of West Germany, the prime minister of the state of North Rhine Westphalia.

Tass said Gorbachev reiterated Soviet support for creation of nuclear-free zones in Europe and creation of similar zones free of chemical weapons. The Soviet-led Warsaw Pact in 1983 proposed a European zone in which chemical weapons would be banned.

"In case of the establishment of a zone in central Europe that would be free of chemical weapons, the U.S.S.R., guided by its basic foreign policy, would be ready to guarantee and respect the status of the zone," Tass quoted Gorbachev as saying.

Afghan rebels reportedly kill 1,000 Soviet, Afghan soldiers

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Rebels killed or wounded some 1,000 Soviet and Afghan soldiers in the battle for control of Afghanistan's Paktia region near the Pakistani border, Western diplomats said Tuesday.

They said the Soviets and the Afghan government had committed 15,000 soldiers in the operation launched Aug. 21 to choke off guerrilla supply lines, and the offensive began winding down late last week.

The sources cited diplomatic reports from the Afghan capital of Kabul.

They said a large number of anti-Marxist guerrillas also were killed in the fighting, and scores of wounded were taken to the Pakistani border city of Peshawar for treatment. Many had lost limbs from Soviet artillery and rocket attacks and air raids, the diplomats said, speaking with the condition they not be identified.

They added they did not know how many of the Soviet-Afghan casualties were killed and how many were wounded.

Kabul Radio reported "intense fighting" in parts of Paktia, but gave no details.

The diplomats here said the insurgents shot down four Soviet helicopters during the Paktia offensive, and were continuing to harass Soviet and Afghan army convoys on the Gardez-Khost road.

They said other reports from Kabul and the guerrillas commands listed these actions:

Rebels rocketed two military jeeps carrying employees of Khad, the Afghan secret police, in Herat on Aug. 27, killing everyone in the vehicles. The number of victims was not given.

Nearly three dozen rockets were fired into Kabul between Sept. 4-7, and the targets were the Soviet military complex at Darul Aman, the Soviet Embassy, a Soviet garrison at Khair Khana and three residential areas.

Ten members of the Peoples Democratic (Communist) Party were killed Aug. 11 when a bomb went off in a theater in Kabul's Karta Parwan area during a party meeting.

A guerrilla shot and killed an Afghan soldier guarding the Soviet Embassy on Sept. 4.

Western reporters generally are barred from Afghanistan, and there was no independent confirmation of the various claims.

There were these other developments:

— The Pakistani Foreign Ministry said four Afghan air force planes rocketed a Pakistani village Monday, killing two civilians and wounding 10. It said the attack was on Faqiran Kalli, close to the Afghan border and 180 miles southwest of Islamabad.

It said the Afghan charge d'affaires in Islamabad was summoned to the ministry Tuesday and given "a strong protest."

— Kabul Radio said government troops killed "a large number" of rebels and seized tons of armaments in fighting around the mountain resort of Paghman northwest of Kabul.

It said among the weapons seized were 980 grenades, 14 anti-aircraft guns, 175 rockets, 372 mines and 2.3 million rounds of ammunition.

— Employees of the Afghan Bakhtar Airlines, Afghanistan's domestic carrier, appealed to the U.S. Senate to ask the Reagan administration to stop supplying weapons to the rebels, according to a Kabul newscast monitored in Islamabad.

It repeated the allegation, made by the government Saturday, that one of the airline's Soviet-built Antonov-22 planes crashed on Sept. 4, killing all 52 people aboard, after it was hit by a U.S.-made surface-to-air missile.

The government said the two-engine plane was struck while taking off from the Kandahar airport.

All of the main guerrilla organizations have denied shooting down the plane, but one group said its forces downed a military transport aircraft at Kandahar in late August.

Mozambique, Zimbabwe forces attack guerrillas

MAPUTO, Mozambique (AP) — Joint Mozambique-Zimbabwe ground and air forces launched new offensives against rebel strongholds, newspapers reported here Tuesday.

The Noticias newspaper, quoting military sources, said Monday that mercenaries from Britain, Israel, Portugal, the United States and West Germany were fighting alongside Mozambique National Resistance guerrillas at a base called Gogogo, in Manica province.

The base is located near the guerrillas' Casa Banana headquarters, which was captured on Aug. 28. Hundreds of rebels were reportedly killed in that assault.

The newspaper gave no further details about reports of mercenaries defending the Gogogo stronghold. But the semi-official Mozambique news agency, AIM, reported today that troops from Mozambique and Zimbabwe mounted a new assault at the camp.

"The bandits have been completely disorganized," a military spokesman was quoted by Noticias as saying. "...Many are surrendering with their weapons. Others prefer to hide their guns and surrender without them."

In a separate offensive, Noticias reported that Mozambique forces in the past 10 days killed 101 rebels in the Manhica and Magude districts of the southernmost Maputo province.

Marcos, cardinal reconciled at birthday Mass

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos and one of his strongest critics, the Roman Catholic cardinal of Manila, embraced and pledged reconciliation today at a Mass in honor of Marcos' 68th birthday.

Cardinal Jaime Sin said his meeting with Marcos "opens a new horizon of harmony" between church and state in this troubled nation.

In the past, Sin has accused Marcos' government of corruption and human rights violations, and has labeled the president a dictator. Last year, the archbishop called for bigger anti-government demonstrations to end Marcos' rule.

Sin has turned down previous requests to celebrate Mass for Marcos on his birthday. He acceded this year, saying humility was the first step toward national reconciliation.

Government officials, including Prime Minister Cesar Virata and Chief Justice Felix Makasiar, foreign diplomats and church dignitaries sat with the president and his wife Imelda on a covered grandstand at Manila's seaside Rizal Park.

The government bused in about 50,000 people to cheer Marcos at the Mass.

Marcos, who has ruled this country of 53 million for two decades, eight of them under martial law, had earlier declared his birthday a national holiday. He changed his mind last Monday, saying he did not want to deprive workers of a day's wages.

"My prayer to God is that Ferdinand E. Marcos be granted the joy and love of his family and the respect and remembrance of the Filipino people," Sin said in his homily. He led the congregration in cheering Marcos and his wife. He took the president by the hand and led him to the front of the stage where they each released a white dove. Then, Sin and Marcos embraced as the crowd cheered.

Although his homily was for the most part conciliatory, Sin warned that national reconciliation cannot be achieved without justice, truth, freedom and respect for human rights.

In a speech after the Mass, Marcos asked the opposition for greater cooperation, and said he was willing to consider the suggestions of "anybody who thinks he has a program to answer our problems."

Alluding to continuing calls for his resignation and an opposition attempt to impeach him last month, Marcos asked that he be allowed to peacefully finish his current six-year term, which expires in 1987.

French rail president resigns, citing mishaps

PARIS (AP) — Andre Chadeau, president of France's state-owned railroad system, has resigned, saying he was taking responsibility for a series of train accidents.

In a letter to Transport and Housing Minister Paul Quiles made public by the railroad authority Tuesday, Chadeau said he was convinced the railroad's staff had "pulled themselves together in a way that will avoid a repetition of the human errors which were directly responsible for the accidents."

But he said he was taking overall responsibility for the accidents.

On July 8, nine people died and 54 were injured when a train hit a truck at St. Pierre-du-Vauvray west of Paris. Two people were killed crossing tracks in southern France on Aug. 1.

On Aug. 3, two trains collided head-on near Flaujac in central France, killing 32 people and injuring more than 160. The accident was blamed on a stationmaster's error in sending a train down a track he thought was clear.

Tell 'em, Governor

Gov. Mark White was correct in issuing a call earlier this week for the Southern Governors' Association to join his fight against provisions in the Reagan administration's tax simplification that would eliminate federal income tax deductions for intangible drilling costs and to repeal percentage depletion allowances.

At presstime, the governors still had not resolved the request, although Gov. White was a loser in the battle initially because the governors did not wholeheartedly back White's request for support for the oil industry. That was indicative of an undercurrent running in this country away from the quest for energy independence. That's regrettable because the tax simplification proposals in question could seriously impair the oil industry.

In fact, Dallas Congressman John Bryant, visiting in Midland over the weekend, told local oilmen, "It's almost a lead pipe cinch that depletion is gone, and the industry will have a real challenge to retain intangible drilling costs." Removal of the drilling incentives, he said, could reduce drilling by as much as 30 percent.

That would constitute a disastrous blow not only to Texas and the oil and gas industry, but the nation as a whole. It literally would gut the quest for energy independence.

"If we just ignore it, we're going to come out of here looking like we didn't have the courage to take a stand," the governor told the others at the convention. He was correct in that assertion, too.

Gov. White is intimately familiar with the peculiarities of the oil industry. He should be; the Lone Star State is the leading producer of oil in the United States. He knows, for example, that the "start-up" time to get rigs running and oil flowing to a needy nation is better than two years. And that drilling wells is, even under the best of conditions, an expensive gamble.

And, the governor is well aware, stripping away all the energy security the petroleum industry has worked so diligently to develop in recent years would be foolhardy, once again putting the nation in the delicate position of having to rely on other countries for its oil needs. Currently, of course, there's an overabundance of petroleum on the market and it looks as though there's no need for concern. But that overabundance can dry up quickly.

In the past the governors' association has taken firm stands encouraging drilling and exploration. Now with the Congress looking seriously at undermining the oil industry's sound foundation is not the time for the governors to decide the United States has enough energy security.

What a joke! How much is "enough" energy security? Qualify the question by asking how much oil this nation would need in the event of an embargo, or a war, or an embargo at the same time as a war, or any one of a number of other calamities that could occur at any time and absorb the world supply of oil in a short time.

Gov. White stood steadfastly behind the oil industry and should be recognized for his position. We only hope Congress hears — and heeds — the governor's wise advice.

Consider all patients

In regard to the recent tax increase voted upon the citizens who own property in the Midland County Hospital District for the operation of Midland Memorial Hospital, I pose the following questions to the Midland Memorial Foundation, Trustees and Hospital Board:

Has consideration been given to the possibility of bringing in a team from a professional hospital management company to run our hospital on a contract basis?

Has consideration been given to the possibility of selling the present hospital to a health resources company? This may require an election from the voters to dissolve the district and find a company that would assume the present debt. If this could be accomplished, it would remove the tax burden on the taxpayers. This has taken place in other areas of the country.

The tax increase recently voted upon the property owners may not have been necessary had the administration of Midland Memorial Hospital not exercised their right to defeat Parkview and the other private facility in their desire to construct a chemical- and drug-related facility. This action alone cost some $3,000 of hospital funds.

This maximum tax increase without a public hearing may not have been necessary had the hospital purchased the Knorr property when it was offered to them for $350,000. The property was purchased later for some $500,000, with the plan by the administration that it could be renovated and rented to doctors in order to generate income to the hospital. After the renovation was underway, it was found that the building was not "structurally sound" and the utilities (plumbing) were inadequate to accommodate the additional people that would be in the medical building. The end result of this poor planning is that the taxpayers now own a building that cannot be put to use for the purpose for which it was purchased.

Midland Memorial Hospital has excellent facilities and a fine group of medical personnel working within the facility. I would suggest that the powers that be make a concerted effort to find out why some 41 doctors have banded together to study the possibility of building another facility. The doctors that I have talked to about this are all in agreement that it is not an investment project. It is to provide a first-class facility for the treatment and care of their patients.

An interesting sidelight to all of this was the recent announcement by Ray Branson stating that they would take one of the wings at MMH and convert this to an executive suite for the important people of Midland so they would not leave Midland for medical treatment. Does this mean he plans to have first-class treatment for VIPs and lesser treatment for those not so fortunate?

Everyone should have the best treatment available from that medical facility when they come through the door. Two levels of medical treatment should not be tolerated or ever considered. We all hurt and suffer alike; where is the consideration for the average patient?

Lobbyists protecting Krugerrands

WASHINGTON — As the Senate debates economic sanctions against South Africa this week, a few high-powered lobbyists will be doing all they can to soften any action against what has become a symbol of apartheid: the Krugerrand. The coin is minted by the white-minority government from gold mined by politically powerless black miners.

Jack Anderson

The lobbyists, hired by both the South African government and the nation's gold mining industry, include a former campaign manager for Ronald Reagan, George Bush's former press secretary, a former Senate sergeant-at-arms and a number of former members of Congress.

Former Rep. Garry Brown, R-Mich., who is coordinating the lobbying effort to prevent a ban on trading in Krugerrands, concedes that it all may be an exercise in futility, as violence continues in South Africa. It's the Pretoria government's choice of response — reform or repression — that counts, he indicated.

"What we in Washington do is of little consequence," he told our associate Tony Capaccio, "but what the government does in South Africa is what's important."

This recognition of reality hasn't stopped the lobbyists from doing their best, nor has it discouraged the South Africans from laying out substantial sums to promote its interests on Capitol Hill.

For example, the South African government has paid former Reagan campaign manager John Sears $1.3 million in quarterly installments since April 1983. Among the issues Sears has been working on this year is the proposed ban on Krugerrand sales. He provided fact sheets to at least 63 members of Congress, arguing that a ban would throw thousands of black miners out of work.

From January 1984 through March 1985, the Pretoria government paid the law firm headed by ex-Sen. George Smathers, D-Fla., $406,034. The firm has kept track of the progress of at least 18 congressional actions, including the proposal to ban the Krugerrand.

The South African gold industry's lobbying funds in this country are dispensed by its New York marketing arm, International Gold Corp. Ltd. A spokesman for the firm confirmed it had an operating budget of $11.3 million for the first five months of 1985.

Among International Gold's expenditures this year is $165,000 in retainer fees paid to the Washington law firm of Kirkpatrick & Lockhart. Since 1983, the firm has been paid a total of $247,857 by International Gold, to lobby against the Krugerrand ban.

At Brown's urging, Kirkpatrick & Lockhart in July hired Peter Teeley, Bush's former press secretary. An unspecified part of Teeley's $5,000 monthly retainer is for advice he is to provide to International Gold, which also hired lobbyist Howard Liebengood, the former Senate sergeant-at-arms, for $10,000 a month.

Teeley, pointing out that his client was the law firm, not the South African gold industry, declined to say what kind of advice he is providing to International Gold. Liebengood called the proposed Krugerrand ban "unfortunate and unfair," and said, "We're doing what we can for those people" — meaning, apparently, his client.

Shortly after the firm hired Liebengood, but before it was getting any advice from Teeley, International Gold on June 21 donated $20,000 to the Conservative Caucus Foundation, a leading New Right group.

Brown himself has carried on a quiet lobbying campaign on behalf of the Krugerrand. It has included lobbying his one-time political opponent, Rep. Howard Wolpe, D-Mich., in February, and escorting an International Gold representative to a meeting with a State Department official in June.

UNDER THE DOME: Rep. William Clay, D-Mo., currently in his eighth term on the Hill, has either grown in office or is tired of renting formal wear. He asked the Federal Election Commission if he could properly spend campaign contributions to buy a tuxedo for political functions. The commission, noting that members who were in Congress before Jan. 9, 1980, can spend their campaign funds for anything they choose, gave Clay its approval for puttin' on the ritz.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: Regimes may come and go in Iran, but the secret police lives on. In the shah's day, the dreaded internal security force was called Savak. When Ayatollah Khomeini took over, the underground enforcers became known as Savamah. Now our intelligence sources say another bunch of secret police goons has appeared as part of the Revolutionary Guards. They report any "deviationism" to the mullahs, and reportedly make up in ruthlessness and fanaticism what they lack in competence.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Not so long ago Labor Day meant back-to-school sales and end-of-summer vacations. But nowadays, Labor Day too often means strike deadlines and contract negotiations. No one begrudges teachers a decent standard of living, but increasingly schoolchildren are paying the price in class disruption and make-up days. In Chicago, teachers went on strike for the third straight year. Nationwide, more than half a million students have been affected this year by teacher strikes. If teachers don't get any respect, as they so often lament, maybe it's because they act less like Mr. Chips and more like John L. Lewis.

ART BUCHWALD

Bat hunting still keeps 'em up late!

EDITOR'S NOTE: While Art Buchwald is on vacation, we reprint some columns from the past.

Because of high taxation and the struggle to keep up some of the larger estates, the grand old sport of bat hunting in England is slowly dying out. There was a time when the lords and ladies of the great manors did nothing but hunt for bats. But now the trend is toward gassing them or using poison. You have to go pretty far to find people who still enjoy killing bats by hand.

Art Buchwald

It was my good fortune to meet in Sussex one of the great bat hunters of all time. His name is Lieutenant Colonel Ian Anderson, formerly a battalion commander of the Home Guard, and a retired stockbroker, who lives in a magnificent home outside of East Grinsted called Old Surrey Hall. Old Surrey Hall was built in 1430, has a ceiling 40 feet high and is considered one of the Great Halls of England. Because of its age and its height, Old Surrey Hall also has a great number of bats, which hang from the ceiling during the daytime and fly through the rooms at night. Mr. Anderson is up every night bat hunting from midnight until 3 in the morning, and in less than a year he has killed six bats, two in the last week alone.

Since I expressed an interest in bat hunting, Mr. Anderson and his wife invited me to attend a bat hunt one evening at Old Surrey Hall.

I was at a loss as to what to wear for a bat hunt, but didn't want to show my ignorance by asking, so I showed up in a checkered peak cap, a raincoat and rubber boots. I couldn't have been more wrong.

The only correct outfit to wear for bat hunting is a hair net, a bathrobe and sneakers.

When I arrived a few minutes before midnight it was raining and thundering outside and the wind was whistling around the building. Mr. Anderson told me it was perfect bat-hunting weather.

He handed me a tennis racquet, which had been warped in more or less of a curve.

"This is your bat," he said. "You can put on this hair net and bathrobe and these sneakers in the other room."

When I returned there were several other people in the drawing room, including Sir Robert Haddow, the former British Consul General in Los Angeles and San Francisco; Dr. Robin Beare, a great plastic surgeon, and Felix Kelly, an English artist. The Andersons poured out whiskey for everybody, which is the traditional drink before going into a great hall to swing at bats. (Or, for that matter, anything.) Each person had his own warped tennis racquet.

Once inside the great hall Mr. Anderson gave out positions. I was assigned the left wing of the balcony overlooking the great hall. Mrs. Anderson was in the center, and Dr. Beare was right wing. Down below Sir Robert was standing on the couch and Mr. Kelly was hiding under a curtain. Mr. Anderson was by the open door which led into the corridor.

When everyone was in position Mr. Anderson turned on the light over his wife's grandfather's portrait. It was the only light allowed on in the room.

Suddenly the bats started flying out of the ceiling. They whooshed down into the great hall at tremendous speed. At the same time we all started swinging. The object, of course, was to put a spin on the bat (that's why the racquet has to be warped).

Mrs. Anderson, who was after one particular bat (unlike the rest of us, who swung at anything), almost batted me on the head. "Watch it, Mona," her husband cautioned. "You're putting too much speed on your back-spin service."

Dr. Beare, who is a stag-beetle champion in Sussex, was using an unorthodox chop drive which the other people admired but couldn't duplicate.

Sir Robert had a forehand defense swing, and Mr. Kelly was a counter-hitter.

During the first chukker we noticed Mr. Anderson wasn't swinging at all. That confused us.

In about 20 minutes the bats became fatigued and retired to the eaves.

We all went back into the library for the second traditional drink of whiskey.

The second and third chukkers went the same as the first, with no one making a kill. But on the fourth chukker I understood why Mr. Anderson played by the open door. Mrs. Anderson almost hit a bat which, in its effort to escape, flew out of the door of the great hall into the narrow corridor.

"Yoicks!" shouted Mr. Anderson, running down the corridor and swinging his racquet. The bat, unable to escape, made one attempt to get back into the great hall but Mr. Anderson's forehand was too fast and he killed the bat with one volley.

Uniformed police eject a black man from the courthouse in Birmingham, England, Wednesday, after he and several other people attempted to disrupt the judicial proceedings of those involved in Tuesday's rioting.

Looting, arson flares again in Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) — Sporadic car burnings, looting and arson were reported early today in a riot-torn immigrant district of Birmingham, but police predicted that the worst of the two days of violence was over.

West Midland police said today that they arrested 92 people overnight for crimes including burglary, theft, illegal possession of weapons and public order offenses, bringing the total number of arrests since the rioting began Monday to 128.

Authorities said 10 police officers, three civilians and three firefighters were injured by rioters overnight, but that none of the injuries was serious.

Chief Constable Geoffrey Dear said during a pre-dawn visit to police officers in Birmingham that he was "quietly confident" the atmosphere in the Handsworth district would cool if the night passed without a major confrontation.

"I think we're over the hump," he said.

Dear said there were 150 incidents of violence in the area late Tuesday and early today, ranging from "stupid copycat vandalism to some looting."

A city police official who spoke on condition of anonymity said a car was overturned and set on fire overnight in the Lozells Road area of Handsworth, the center of Monday's rioting in which two Asians died in a blazing post office.

Firefighters called to a burning truck in Handsworth had to flee when rioters threw stones at them, police said.

They said window-breaking, looting and arson spread to other districts, with gangs of mainly black youths attacking and burning shops at Tyburn Square, and Erdington, and setting a car on fire and attempting to burn a junior school in Sparkbrook.

Police foot patrols were deployed throughout Handsworth and hundreds more spent the night in buses parked on side streets.

Riots symptom of racial tension in Britain

By MARCUS ELIASON

LONDON (AP) — Whether or not the latest outbreak of urban violence in Britain was the work of criminals or a reaction to social deprivation, it once again reflected the festering state of race relations in this country.

Hardly a week goes by without a race-related incident, small or large, marring the image of Britain as a tolerant, placid land.

Six weeks before the inner city of Birmingham erupted in arson and looting that left two people dead, there were rumbles in the Toxteth district of Liverpool, the flashpoint of Britain's last outbreak of race-related rioting in 1981.

Police sought to hush up the latest Toxteth incident, in which three policemen were wounded by about 50 youths hurling bricks, stones and spears, saying they feared news reports would sensationalize it and encourage more violence.

Meanwhile, in London, police were investigating a rash of arson attacks against homes of families of Asian descent. Suspicion has fallen on supporters of the National Front, a white-supremacist fringe group. But no arrests have been made.

At the same time, the trial of four Asians and three whites accused of brawling in a London slum in April 1984 drew to a close. Although the brawlers had inflicted little damage, many of Britain's non-whites saw the Asian defendants as having stood up to racist harassment.

The judge apparently agreed. Handing down lenient sentences of community service, he said the Asians had "overreacted to long-standing and serious provocation."

Any attempt to explore the roots of racial violence quickly runs into the argument that police harassment is to blame.

It was the first comment heard from Birmingham blacks standing on street corners Tuesday, the day after the rioting erupted. They claimed the police regarded them all as junkies, pestered them constantly with raids, body searches and arrests on drug charges, and paid no attention to their grievances.

An estimated one in three non-whites is unemployed, compared with one in five whites.

Only five percent of Britons are non-white, but they tend to cluster in city ghettoes, easy prey for drug peddlers and racketeers. Despite valiant efforts by race-relations organizations and equal-opportunity legislators, the statistics constantly show higher unemployment and lower educational achievement among blacks.

Birmingham appeared ripe for trouble. Once the auto capital of Britain, its car industry has been decimated by foreign competition.

It lost 203,000 jobs between 1961 and 1981 and has the lowest regional Gross Domestic Product after strife-torn Northern Ireland. Its unemployment rate is 20 percent, seven points above the national average, and the rate is 29.9 percent in the Handsworth and Lozell districts where Monday's riot began.

Yet Birmingham, 106 miles north of London, is generally regarded as having a good race-relations record.

The municipal government is controlled by the left-wing Labor Party, which usually has little good to say about the police. But council leader Dick Knowles said Birmingham's police relations with immigrants "have been very good for as long as I have been associated with the city, and that goes right back to the 1960s."

While racial tension permeates Britain's inner-city troubles, it is not the only cause of violence. Unemployment and social deprivation ignore ethnic lines, and many white youths were involved in the 1981 disturbances.

Dr. George Gaskell, a psychologist with the London School of Economics, interviewed 96 black and 108 white youths in London to find out why there were conflicts between police and blacks, and found little evidence that blacks felt worse treated than whites.

He wrote in the weekly New Society journal that black hostility toward police often seemed to be "inherited as a group experience, a 'folk history' of unpleasant, perhaps frightening experiences with the police."

In an interview with The Associated Press, Gaskell said the police had improved their relations with non-whites since the 1981 rioting.

Gunmen try to kidnap Portugese ambassador

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Gunmen tried to kidnap the Portuguese ambassador at a checkpoint between the Christian and Moslem sectors of Beirut today, but soldiers from a mostly Shiite Moslem army brigade opened fire and scattered the abductors, an embassy spokesman said.

Anis Abdul-Malak, a Lebanese who serves as the chief of the Portugese Embassy's consular section, said the kidnap attempt occurred this morning at the Kasskass-Masaleh crossing along the mid-city Green Line.

The ambassador, 57-year-old Louis Gonzaga Ferreira, was riding with his wife Maria in a chauffeur-driven Chevrolet when the limousine was intercepted by gunmen on the Moslem side of the Green Line, Abdul-Malak said.

He said the assailants fired into the air,stopping the car moments after soldiers at an army checkpoint waved it through into the Moslem sector. The soldiers from the mainly Shiite 6th Brigade opened fire on the kidnappers, who fled into a maze of alleys.

Soldiers then escorted the ambassador and his wife to the Portuguese Embassy in west Beirut's Verdun district, the spokesman said.

Ferreira was on his way to the embassy from his residence in east Beirut's Hazmieh neighborhood when the kidnap attempt occurred, Abdul-Malak said.

The Green Line crossing recently was reopened to traffic after being closed to halt a spate of sectarian kidnappings in which police said more than 60 Christians and Moslems were seized.

Last month the chauffuer of the West German ambassador was shot dead by Christian militiamen in the no-man's land between the two sectors of the city.

Police said that elsewhere in Beirut, Shiite Moslems seeking to overwhelm a Palestinian refugee camp blasted its flimsy homes with anti-aircraft guns, and the defenders responded with machine-gun fire. Two people were killed and four were wounded.

Another person died and three were injured in fighting between Christian and Moslem militiamen across the Green Line.

Police said the two deaths and four injuries at Bourj el-Barajneh raised the toll since fighting broke out last week to 55 dead.

Israel releases last of Lebanese prisoners

Associated Press

Israel on Tuesday released 119 Lebanese and Palestinians, the final group of more than 750 prisoners in Israel whose freedom was demanded by Shiite Moslem gunmen who hijacked a TWA jetliner in June.

The Israeli action opened the way for the possible release of at least some of the Westerners kidnapped in Beirut in the last 18 months.

Shiite Moslem officials in Beirut said two Frenchmen kidnapped in Beirut nearly four months ago would be freed soon. But there was no word on 10 other missing Westerners, seven Americans, two Frenchmen and a Briton.

The hijackers of the American jet in June held 39 Americans hostage for 17 days. Although Israel and the United States refused to negotiate with the hijackers, Israel said it would release the prisoners in several groups if calm prevailed in south Lebanon.

The fourth and final group of prisoners was welcomed as heroes when they rode into the southern Lebanese port of Tyre on buses. Many of them chanted: "We will fight Israel again."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Cambodian rebels claim Vietnamese casualties

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A Cambodian resistance group claimed today that its artillery gunners struck Vietnamese positions at a provincial center in northwestern Cambodia, killing three Vietnamese soldiers and wounding 10 others.

Khmer Rouge radio said communist guerrillas seized arms and ammunition in the Sept. 3 attack in Siem Reap province, which borders Thailand. The radio gave no other details.

The broadcast, monitored in Bangkok, said Khmer Rouge forces also launched two attacks in Battambang province in western Cambodia last Thursday, killing seven Vietnamese and injuring six others.

It was not possible to confirm the claims. The Khmer Rouge and two non-Communist groups are battling Vietnamese troops, which invaded Cambodia 6½ years ago.

Car bomb kills driver

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A car bomb exploded at a roadblock in southern Lebanon today, killing the driver and injuring two militiamen from the Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army, military sources said.

The Toyota blew up at a checkpoint near the village of Hasbaya, at the edge of Israel's buffer zone about 10 miles north of the Israel-Lebanon border, said the sources. They spoke on condition they not be identified.

It was not known whether the driver was on a suicide mission, and the sources had no additional information.

It was the seventh car bomb attack in the past two months. The previous attacks were part of a campaign to drive the last vestiges of Israel's presence from Lebanon.

Israel withdrew the bulk of its troops from Lebanon on June 10 after occupying southern Lebanon for three years. It left behind some soldiers to back up the South Lebanon Army, a predominantly Christian militia formed by Israel to act as a proxy force against Moslem guerrilla activity.

Nations stage war games

CASTRIES, St. Lucia (AP) — Hundreds of U.S., British and Caribbean soldiers and sailors have begun a mock assault on this Caribbean island nation, the first test of regional forces financed by the United States since the 1983 Grenada invasion.

The five-day "Operation Exotic Palm" war games opened Tuesday as members of St. Lucia's Special Services Unit "secured" the international airport on this island's southern tip.

The exercises called for troops to answer a call for help from the government of the fictitious island-nation of "Linus" because of a threat from "externally supported forces." Insurgents are supposedly supported by two "Marxist-Leninist" nations in the region.

More than half of the assault troops are American, and the remainder come from the newly formed, U.S.-trained counter-insurgency units of the Caribbean islands. U.S. and British warships also are participating.

Barbie trial delayed

LYONS, France (LAT) — The long-awaited trial of Klaus Barbie, former Gestapo "Butcher of Lyons," which was scheduled to start in November, will have to wait until the beginning of 1986, law sources said here Tuesday.

New information has been discovered in archives at the Defense Ministry and War Veterans Ministry concerning Barbie's alleged activities when he was Gestapo chief of Lyons during World War II, the sources said.

The new information includes a comprehensive list of names of those who were in the last train of deportees sent from Lyons by Barbie on Aug. 11, 1944. The list contains more names than those held by the prosecutor, and more time will be needed to study them, sources said.

The examining magistrate, Christian Riss, ended his initial inquiry several months ago, but the trial has been delayed while authorities searched for a large-enough courtroom.

Barbie was sentenced to death in his absence by two French military tribunals in the immediate postwar years on charges of executing, torturing and deporting many thousands of Jews and resistance members.

Luxurious warship built

PORTSMOUTH, England (AP) — Britain has built a warship for Bahrain that has an oval bed, sunken bath with 22-karat-gold taps, a Danish stereo system piping music throughout, and a television that rises from the cabin floor.

The 100-foot vessel is a fast patrol boat built for Bahrain's navy by Souters of Cowes on the Isle of Wight at a cost of $2.2 million. It is armed with a 20-mm gun and anti-aircraft missiles.

Souters said Tuesday the boat is likely to be used by one of the "very senior ministers" of the tiny Persian Gulf sheikdom.

The bridge roof is lined with gray suede, public rooms have cream leather seats and blue carpets, and there is West German furniture and kitchen equipment.

Bathrooms are lined with royal blue marble and the toilet bowls are of smoked glass.

British try to raise bomber

LOCHEND, Scotland (AP) — A salvage operation to raise a British World War II Wellington bomber from the bottom of Loch Ness began Tuesday with divers attaching hundreds of small chains to the 14-ton aircraft.

The bomber has shared the dark waters of the northern Scottish lake with Nessie, the legendary Loch Ness Monster, since a Royal Air Force pilot ditched the plane during a training flight on Dec. 31, 1940, when an engine failed during a snowstorm.

The nearly intact plane, veteran of 14 bombing missions against Nazi Germany, is the only surviving Wellington to have seen active service.

An Aberdeen salvage company plans to raise it Friday so that it can be restored and put on display at the Vickers aircraft museum in Weybridge, 20 miles southwest of London.

Possible heavy rainstorms in forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Raincoats and umbrellas may be needed tonight as thunderstorms, some possibly heavy, are expected in the Midland area, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

A 50 percent chance of thunderstorms will accompany a forecasted low near 70 tonight. The possibility of rain is expected to decrease Thursday to a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms as the high warms to the upper 80s. Winds will be from the south at 10 to 15 mph tonight, increasing Thursday from the south to southeast at less than 20 mph.

Tuesday's high of 96 was four degrees below the record set in 1964. This morning's low was 18 degrees above the 1935 record of 50.

STATE

A weakening tropical wave over Southeast Texas prompted thunderstorms from Port O'Connor to Freeport early today, and forecasters expected the precipitation to spread over a large portion of the state later.

Strongest thunderstorms were offshore in the Gulf south of Galveston, the National Weather Service said. Low clouds covered much of the lower coast, South Central and East Texas.

Additional thunderstorms were scattered over the Panhandle and from the Davis Mountains westward. Skies were fair in the remainder of West Texas.

Early-morning temperatures cooled into the 60s and 70s across most sections. Extremes were 64 degrees at El Paso and 79 degrees at Laredo.

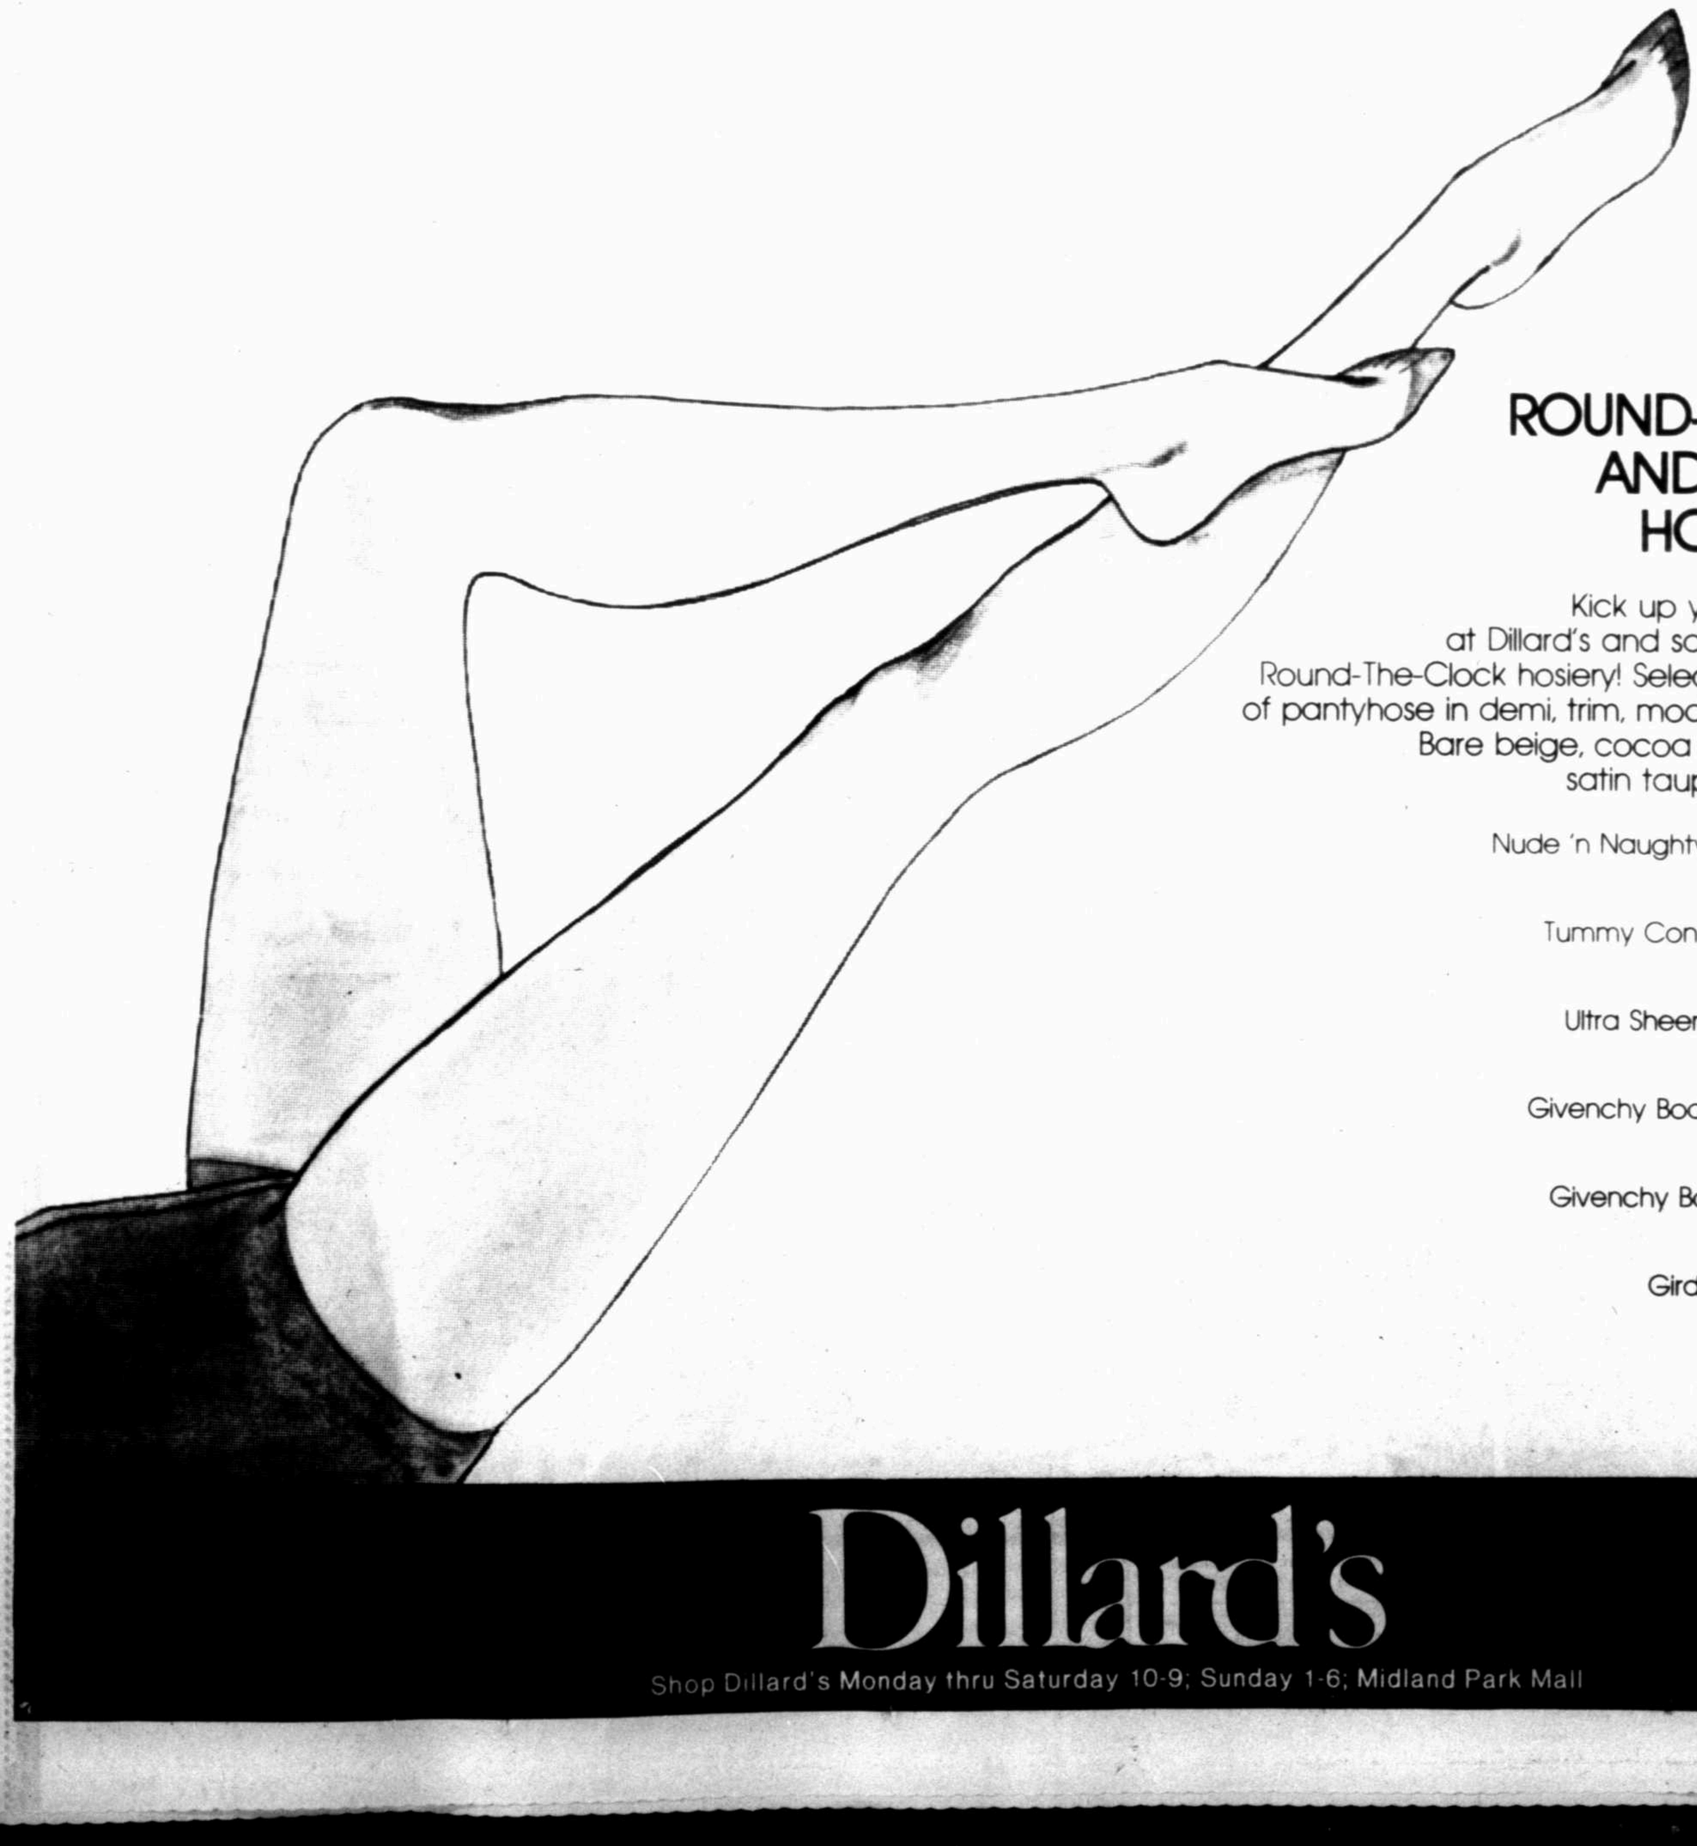

It should be partly to mostly cloudy statewide through tonight with isolated to scattered thunderstorms possible over a large portion of the state. Lows tonight were expected in the 60s and 70s.

NATION

Rain was scattered from New England to the Pacific Coast today while temperatures across much of the north were on the low side.

Showers and thunderstorms dotted the southern Pacific Coast, central Rockies and the area from the central and southern Plains to the lower Mississippi Valley; rainshowers were scattered across New York, New England and the middle Atlantic Coast states, and thundershowers spread across the eastern Gulf of Mexico and northern Florida.

Stargell, Madlock deny Berra's drug revelation

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Willie Stargell and Bill Madlock have denied allegations made in federal court by former Pittsburgh teammate Dale Berra that they illegally dispensed amphetamines, or "uppers," to the infielder and other Pirates.

Berra, now with the New York Yankees, testified Tuesday in the trial of a Philadelphia man accused of dealing cocaine to major league players that the use of the stimulants, or "greenies," was once common among the Pirates and other big league teams.

"From whom did you get (amphetamines) in Pittsburgh?" Berra, the son of Hall of Famer Yogi Berra, was asked by defense attorney Adam O. Renfroe Jr.

"From Bill Madlock," Berra replied.

"Who else, if anyone, did you get them from?" Renfroe asked.

"From Willie Stargell," Berra said.

"Willie Stargell gave you amphetamines?" Renfroe asked.

"Yes, when he was playing for us," Berra said.

AMPHETAMINES are stimulants that can produce a sense of self-confidence and increase energy, alertness and the ability to concentrate. Berra said he sometimes used the drug when injured because it "made me feel stronger."

Kansas City Royals outfielder Lonnie Smith testified last week that he used amphetamines and suspected that former Philadelphia teammates Nino Espinosa and Bake McBride also used "greenies." Other Phillies players were implicated in an amphetamines-related case that was tried in a Pennsylvania court in 1981.

Berra, who said the use of "uppers" has decreased in the major leagues in recent years, first "heard" the stimulant was available from Stargell and Madlock when he played briefly for the Pirates' 1979 world championship team.

"I heard that if I asked them for one that I would get one, but I didn't ask for any and they never gave me one," Berra said

Berra said he never requested and didn't receive the drug from either of the former Pirate team captains until sometime in 1980 or later.

Berra's charges were quickly denied by both Stargell, now the Pirates first base coach, and Madlock, who was traded by the Pirates to the Los Angeles Dodgers last month.

Stargell hit 475 home runs during his 20-year career and Madlock is a four-time National League batting champion.

"I'm surprised by it," Stargell said of Berra's accusation, which came before a hushed courtroom filled with reporters and spectators.

"It's not true," Stargell said. "That's about all I can say about it."

Madlock, contacted in Atlanta where the Dodgers were playing the Braves, at first refused to comment, then said, "A lot of those guys up there are trying to get some people mentioned to take the monkey off their back."

Pirates' Willie Stargell
...denies giving drugs

Berra was asked whether Stargell and Madlock were ever prosecuted for distributing the pills. U.S. Attorney J. Alan Johnson immediately stood and said, "The investigation continues."

Johnson later declined to elaborate on the remark, which was ordered stricken from the record by U.S. District Judge Gustave Diamond.

Stargell said he was unaware of any government probe.

Berra testified Monday that Stargell was among those gathered for a meal in a Philadelphia hotel suite in 1982 where Berra first met defendant Curtis Strong. Strong, 38, is charged with distributing cocaine on 16 dates from 1980 to 1984 when the Pirates played home games.

BERRA SAID he bought cocaine from Strong in an adjoining bedroom that day but that Stargell was not in the room when the transaction took place.

Twenty current or former major league players have been tied to a knowledge of drug use or the actual use of cocaine since testimony began last Thursday in Strong's trial. Some of those mentioned — Stargell, Madlock, Dave Parker of the Cincinnati Reds and Keith Hernandez of the New York Mets — are among the biggest names in the game.

San Francisco Giants outfielder Jeff Leonard on Tuesday became the fifth player to testify and was to be on the witness stand today. Leonard was expected to be followed by former Pirates outfielders Parker and John Milner.

Berra testified he shared cocaine with Parker, Milner, Baltimore Orioles outfielder Lee Lacy and Pirates pitcher Rod Scurry when the five were Pittsburgh teammates.

The prosecution has removed Lacy from its original witness rotation and reportedly no longer plans to call the outfielder. Renfroe will begin questioning defense witnesses when the government concludes its case.

Leonard, 29, said he used cocaine "as a pick-me-up type of thing" until his drug habit increased and he finally sought drug and alcohol rehabilitation in late 1982. He said he hasn't used the powdered narcotic since leaving the treatment center.

"I went in (the center) because of the concern from others ... a deterioration of skills," Leonard said. "I was lagging in attention to my family and I was heading downhill."

Leonard was forced to dodge a series of difficult questions from Renfroe, who has attempted to discredit the witnesses by portraying them as pampered, highly paid athletes concerned only with avoiding prosecution and maintaining their high standards of living.

AT ONE point, Leonard said that using cocaine made him "numb."

"Are you still numb in the head?" Renfroe quickly shot back.

Leonard said he twice purchased cocaine in 1982 from Strong, once in a Pittsburgh hotel and the other time in an Atlanta hotel. Former Giants teammates Al Holland and Chili Davis were present during the Atlanta transaction, he said.

Leonard also said he shared the drug with former Astros pitching star J.R. Richard and Los Angeles Dodgers utilityman Enos Cabell.

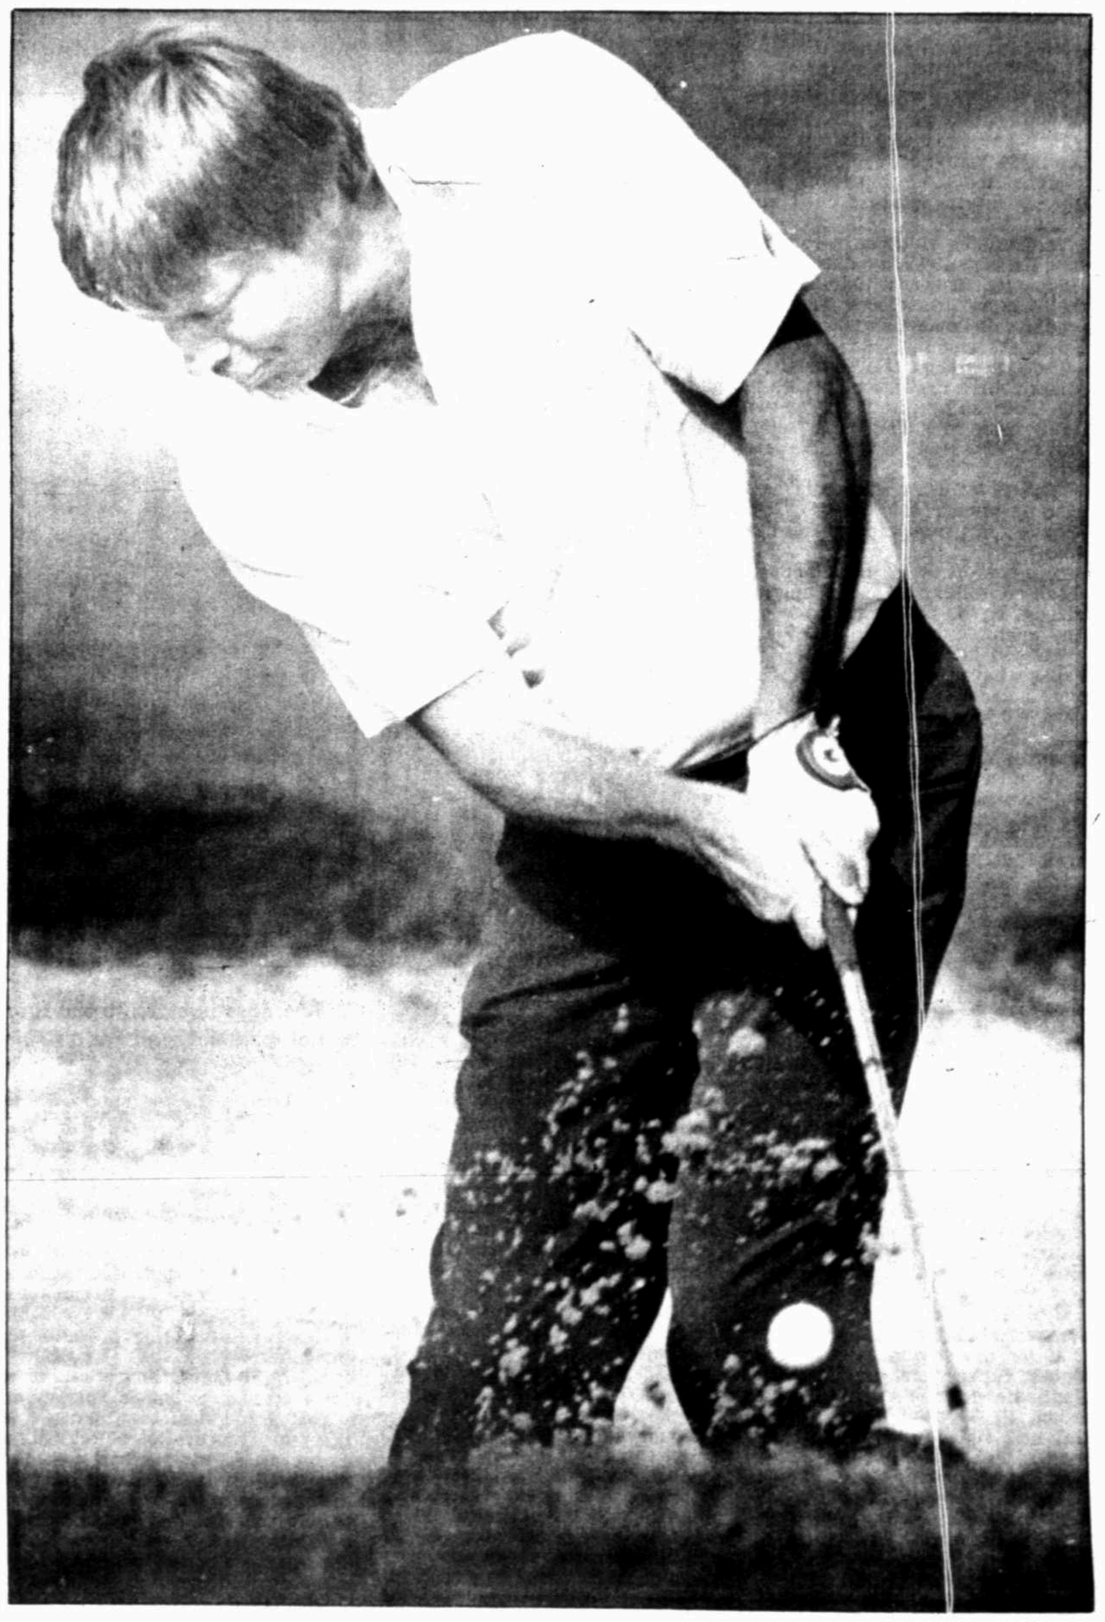

"I was addicted ... (cocaine) was a way of life for me," Leonard said. "But I've told my employers they can test me today, next week, next year and it's all right. I will never go back to drugs."

Berra said his cocaine problem was not serious enough for him to enter a rehabilitation center, but he said he received counseling for six months, during which he underwent urinanalysis three times a week.

"I've rid myself of drugs for nine months," Berra said. "The reason why I stopped using (cocaine) was the FBI was talking to me, the case was coming to trial and I had to appear before (a federal) grand jury. I thought it was the opportune time to stop using cocaine."

And, he said he learned during counseling, "The drug is a lot more dangerous than I originally thought."

Berra said his wife, Leigh, used cocaine with him before they were married and that she once purchased the drug in New Jersey and brought it to him in Pittsburgh.

Jackson repeats Texas League title

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The Jackson Mets made it a repeat performance with their second consecutive Texas League championship by rolling over the El Paso Diablos for the fourth straight championship series game.

The 6-4 victory Tuesday came despite three Diablo runs in the ninth as the Mets fueled a home town frenzy in Smith-Wills Stadium.

About 4,000 fans cheered the 1984 and 1985 league champions.

El Paso broke open the scoring at the top of the first when Alan Cartwright walked, advanced to second and then scored on a single by third baseman Jesus Alfaro.

The Mets responded moments later with two runs in the bottom of the first when third baseman Dave Magadan reached on an error by El Paso shortstop Kiki Diaz. Randy Milligan walked and Jason Felice hit a single to drive in Magadan and Milligan for a 2-1 lead.

In the fourth Jackson got its third run when second baseman Keith Miller scored on a wild pitch, advanced to third base and then came home.

In the fifth, Jackson added three more runs. Left fielder Mark Carreon walked and Magadan followed with a two-run homer — his first homer in two years for the 5-1 lead.

Felice reached on an error by second baseman Dan Purpura and got to second. Shortstop Ross Jones drove Felice in with a single for a 6-1 lead.

In the ninth, El Paso woke up, adding three runs. Alfaro singled, right fielder John Gibbons reached on a fielder's choice, and catcher Dave Huppert singled and drove in Alfaro. Cartwright then hit a two RBI single to score Gibbons and Huppert for the 6-4 final score.

Craig Weissmann, 9-8, pitched until one out in the ninth, for the Mets. Ed Pruitt came in and got his fourth save.

Temple still has Lee fever

"I don't know just how bad we are, but I do know how Custer felt during his Last Stand," said Lubbock Coronado football coach Ken Wallace after a 42-0 pasting at the hands of Midland Lee last Friday night at Lubbock's Lowrey Field.

And those seem to be the questions being pondered this week by Rebel football fans. Just how bad is Coronado? Or how good is Lee?

Those are also questions that are still begging for answers. No one I've talked with seems to have and adequate answer. The prevailing theme seems to be, "Let's wait another week and see what happens."

Of course, another week will take Lee across the state to Temple, where the once state-ranked Wildcats lay in hiding. Everyone has said that will be the key test to assess this edition of the New Tradition.

But a funny thing happened on the way to the Temple-Lee rematch. Temple lost a 20-18 decision to Austin Crockett last Friday in Austin. Temple has lost only five regular season games in 10 years. Maybe the Wildcats were looking too much toward the Rebels this week and paid the price.

At any rate, expect Temple to throw the kitchen sink at Lee — if they have one to throw. Everywhere the Lee coaches went this summer, they came back with tales of how other coaches across the state had told them about Temple's yearning for another shot at Lee. It's an obsession in Temple.

Lee buried Temple, a playoff team last year, 35-7 in Midland's famous "Where's the Beef" victory last fall. It was one of the worst defeats in Temple football history.

Lee coach Jack Tayrien had to fly to Austin to view the Temple-Crockett game film because "Coach (Bob) McQueen didn't seem interested in exchanging films," noted Tayrien.

In fact, Tayrien noted that he has not talked with McQueen since last year's game. "We're on the board together for the THSCA, but he (McQueen) avoids me."

Tayrien had no bitterness in his voice. It was more like a statement of fact. At any rate, you know Temple wants this one.

It would be interesting to be in the Temple camp this week, knowing that you have placed a great deal of importance on this non-conference game. And also knowing that you lost to Crockett while Lee went out and put 42 points on the boards.

Even if Coronado proves to be a lower echelon team in District 3-5A, the Lee performance Friday is impressive. Any time one team has 201 yards rushing at the half against any team, you have things working in high gear. And consider the fact that Coronado was able to muster a mere 38 yards rushing the entire night against Lee's defense, an area where most of the concern has been noted in pre-season. That's a top performance against anyone.

Coronado's biggest scoring threat came in the second quarter when the Mustangs got to the Lee 33-yard line. And they only got that far because it was a Lee fumble that set up Coronado at the Lee 44 to start that drive.

Despite the final 42-0 outcome, it was a game in which Tayrien must have felt like he was between a rock and a hard place. Coaches generally don't like to run up the score, but you can't tell kids to go out and die either.

After watching his No. 1 unit score the first four times it touches the ball, Tayrien must have wondered when to call off the dogs. He did after his Rebels marched 85 yards on 17 plays to open the third period to make the score 35-0.

Tayrien's problem is that his squad didn't have a pre-season scrimmage and he needs to see his No. 1 unit function as long as possible. The starting team really hasn't been under fire and that is a key situation for a very inexperienced backfield.

And what are you going to do when you put in your No. 2 group and it scores from 65 yards out in two plays? Whether by design or not, Lee didn't score in the fourth quarter. It was certianly a game in which the Rebels could have named its own score.

In all, Lee used eight backs to roll out 355 yards rushing and three receivers for 101 yards passing. No. 2 fullback Chris Alexander was an interesting sidelight for the Rebs. Alexander worked pre-season as a defensive tackle and was moved last week to fullback after an injury to Novert Morales. Alexander gained 43 yards on nine carries in the third and fourth quarters. It's that kind of depth that makes Lee look scary to its opponents.

Like I said, it would be interesting to be in the midst of the Temple camp this week. Lee just may not lay down and die next week, regardless of how much revenge the Wildcats would like to extract from the Rebel hides.

Yankee streak climbs to 11

Associated Press

The New York Yankees have won 11 consecutive games. No Yankee team has won so many in a row since the 1964 Yankees reeled off 11 straight. And the comparisons with the old Bronx Bombers don't end there.

The Yankees hit three more home runs Tuesday night in outlasting the Milwaukee Brewers 13-10. During the 11-game streak New York has produced 22 homers and now has hit 153 in 137 games.

The victory kept the Yankees 1½ games behind first-place Toronto in the American League East. The two teams meet in a four-game series starting Thursday night at Yankee Stadium.

"This is what it's all about," said winning pitcher Ed Whitson, 10-7. "You're going to run into games like this.

"But everybody in this lineup is capable of coming up and hitting the ball out of the ballpark. Any body. Any pitch."

Whitson knows his offense. The Yankees have four players with 20 or more homers — Don Mattingly (28), Dave Winfield (24), Don Baylor (21), and Rickey Henderson (20). Third baseman Mike Pagliarulo has hit 18.

Not since 1962 has a Yankee team had five players with 20 or more homers. The World Champion '62 Yanks had Bill Skowron (23), Tom Tresh (20), Roger Maris (33), Mickey Mantle (30) and Elston Howard (21).

The Yankees were down 3-1 after four innings, but scored five runs in the fifth and followed with four more in the sixth to chase Ray Burris, 9-12.

Ron Hassey's three-run homer, off the right-field foul pole, came with two outs and followed a two-run double by Mattingly in the fifth. Mattingly and Winfield, who walked, scored on Hassey's 11th homer.

Griffey hit his seventh homer of the year in the sixth inning, scoring Bobby Meacham and Henderson, to key a four-run outburst that made the score 10-4. Pagliarulo had scored earlier when Milwaukee second baseman Jim Gantner threw home instead of to first on Henderson's grounder.

Henderson drove in three runs and scored three times to run his total for the season to 123 — the highest Yankee total since Maris and Mantle tied for the AL lead with 132 in 1961. His 65 stolen bases are also a club high since Fritz Maisel set the team record of 74 in 1914.

"You don't care how you get a win right now," said Hassey, whose homer proved to be the winning hit. "If we keep winning and they (Toronto) keep winning, it's going to be quite a showdown."

Dan Pasqua also homered for New York while Paul Householder connected for the Brewers.

Blue Jays 2, Tigers 1

In Toronto, Damaso Garcia singled in the seventh inning to snap a 1-1 tie and Doyle Alexander outpitched Jack Morris as the Blue Jays sent Detroit to its' sixth straight defeat.

With one out in the seventh inning, Jesse Barfield singled and stole second. One out later Garcia singled to left to score Barfield. Alexander, 15-8, checked the Tigers on seven hits and twice pitched his way out of bases-loaded jams. He struck out eight and walked four.

"Doyle has pitched pretty well all season," said Detroit's Alan Trammell. "He made great pitches when he had to. He knows excatly what he has to do. Last year we did what we had to do."

AL Roundup

Royals 6, Angels 0

At Anaheim, Frank White and Lonnie Smith hit two-run homers to back the three-hit pitching of Charlie Leibrandt as Kansas City blanked California to increase their lead over the Angels in the American League West to 1½ games.

The victory was Kansas City's ninth in its last 10 games and the Royals are now 32-15 since July 21, when they trailed the Angels by 7½ games.

The Angels won 7-1 Monday night and the two teams square off in the rubber game tonight, with the Royals' Danny Jackson facing Ron Romanick.

"They embarrassed us last night," said Smith. "It's a good feeling to come back like we did tonight. I think the team that's going to win it is the team that's playing the best the last week of the season."

Orioles 7-3, Red Sox 5-5

In Boston, Eddie Murray broke a tie with a two-run homer in a six-run Baltimore eighth inning and Mike Young hit a pair of homers in the first game of a doubleheader.

Wade Boggs doubled in the eighth inning of the first game for his 200th hit. Boggs has 200 or more hits the last three seasons.

Boggs came back with a 4-for-4 performance in the nightcap to raise his AL-leading batting average to .368 in support of Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 13-11, as Boston gained the split.

White Sox 7, Twins 2

In Chicago, Joel Davis, a 20-year-old rookie, outpitched veteran Bert Blyleven and Ron Kittle snapped a 2-2 sixth-inning tie with his 16th homer in leading the White Sox to victory over Minnesota.

Rudy Law went 4-for-5 for the Sox, drove in two runs, scored twice and stole two bases. "Rudy was outstanding," said Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa. "He did just about everything you could do as a leadoff man."

Indians 8, Mariners 5

In Seattle, Joe Carter drove in two runs with an inside-the-park home run and Mike Hargrove added two RBIs in a five-run fifth inning to lead Cleveland over Seattle.

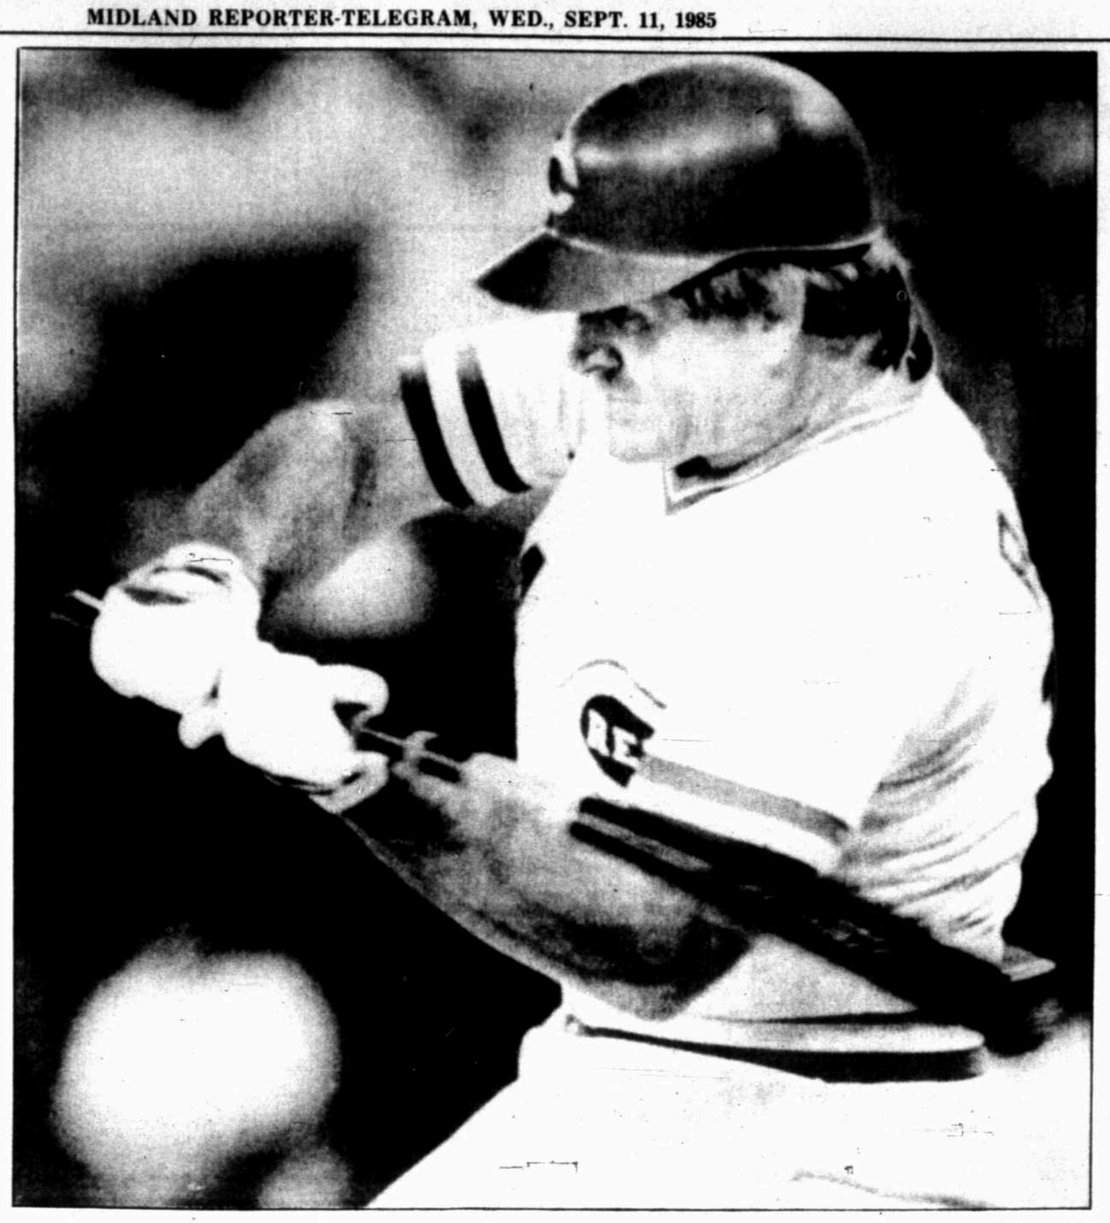

"I knew when I rounded second I wasn't going to stop," said Carter. "I was going to give it my best shot."

Carter has some experience with inside-the-park home runs, having raced for three in his college career at Wichita State. Even with the practice, though, he wasn't sure he could make it. "I thought (AL) Cowens might catch it, and even when I saw it bounce I still didn't know if I had a shot," Carter said.

A's 10, Rangers 3

In Oakland, Bruce Bochte's 12th home run of the season sent Oakland ahead in the fifth inning and Dave Kingman hit the 15th grand-slam homer of his career in the seventh as the A's ended a six-game losing streak by downing the Rangers.

"It was good to see the big guy come out of it," A's Manager Jackie Moore said of Kingman, who has 404 career homers — three behind Duke Snider on the all-time list — but only six over the last two months. "Tiredness probably has had something to do with it, but I think it's more of a mental tiredness."

CINCINNATI — Hold the confetti. It won't spoil. Keep the celebration in the on-deck circle. Maybe an extra day of anticipation will make it taste that much sweeter.

Ty Cobb, who's been in a terrible slump lately, rallied unexpectedly Tuesday night, thanks to a pair of San Diego pitchers who refused to give in to Pete Rose and inevitability.

Rose took an 0-for-4 collar from LaMarr Hoyt and Lance McCullers and will try again tonight for that sooner-or-later 4,192nd hit that will thrust him past Cobb as baseball's all-time hit leader.

WHEN IT became obvious that Rose would not get his milestone hit Tuesday night, market-minded Reds' management seized the opportunity to flash a scoreboard reminder that plenty of good seats were still on sale for tonight's game.

The Rose soap opera means extra business for the box office and it showed Tuesday night with Riverfront Stadium's first sellout since Opening Day, gathered for what most expected to be the landmark game.

Every time Rose came to the plate, many of the 51,045 fans set off a sea of camera flashbulbs that made the ballpark look like a Hollywood premiere. It might have shaken a mere mortal. It did not, however, upset Pete Rose.

"I might have been a little overanxious," he said. "I might have been trying too hard."

That did not translate to nervous, though, he insisted. No way. "Hey, I've made more outs than anybody in history," he said. "I don't get nervous."

Hoyt and McCullers, however, could be excused if they were a trifle jittery. They were the victims of circumstance, the poor souls who happened to be on the mound, holding the baseball when Rose stepped to the plate, waving that black bat of his at Cobb's record.

It was not an enviable assignment. Both men, however, survived nicely.

Hoyt, the starter, retired Rose three times, getting him to pop up a 3-1 pitch in the first inning, fly to left field on the first pitch in the fourth and pop up to short in the sixth.

"The way I approached it was if he was going to get the hit, I wanted him to earn it," the pitcher said. "I wasn't giving him anything down the middle. I wanted to mix it up.

"On the first at-bat, I gave him hard stuff. I threw a couple of fast balls for balls and I felt bad because I was behind. I wanted to challenge him, get the ball in, don't give him the fat side of the bat to work on the ball.

"The last at-bat I gave him a couple of breaking balls. He hit a fast ball anyway."

Hoyt left for a pinch hitter in the seventh. When Rose next arrived at the plate in the eighth, the pitcher was McCullers, a 21-year-old rookie from Tampa, Fla., who used to watch Cincinnati's Big Red Machine in spring training a decade ago.

This was not a time for reminiscing, however, because Cincinnati had the tying run on second base.

The setting was perfect for the historic hit. It did not happen. Almost, but not quite.

McCULLERS' first pitch was a ball, which was not according to plan.

"I wanted to make a good pitch and get ahead of him," he said. "Instead I got behind."

So, instead of coming inside with the next pitch, the way he might have preferred, McCullers offered a fastball down and away. Rose swung and drilled a shot to left field.

The immediate reaction was base hit. Even McCullers thought so, for an instant. "He hit it good," the pitcher said.

Rose agreed. "I swung the bat good one time," he said. "The last time. I hit it right on the nose."

Left fielder Carmelo Martinez moved quickly to his right and pulled in the drive. McCullers was out of his jam and Rose's night was over.

In right field, paper flowed down from the packed stands in a premature, mistaken celebration. Some people refuse to cancel a party, no matter what.

Mets tip Cards with slam

Associated Press

Whitey Herzog isn't in awe of Howard Johnson, but would have to concede that the New York Mets' third baseman does know how to end a dispute. And pick his pitches.

"It was a fastball right down the pipe. That's the only pitch he can hit. He can't hit a changeup or a breaking ball," the St. Louis manager said of the ball Johnson hit for a grand-slam homer Tuesday night.

That grand slam beat Herzog's Cardinals 5-4, gave them their fourth straight loss and removed them from first place in the National League East as the Mets assumed sole control for at least one night.

Johnson was the first batter after a bench-and-bullpen-clearing incident that stemmed from George Foster's being hit by a pitch from Cardinals starter Danny Cox. His ninth homer turned a 1-1 tie in the first inning into a 5-1 lead that Ron Darling and Roger McDowell barely held.

Mets Manager Dave Johnson said the altercation and Johnson's homer helped motivate his players. "You hate to see things like that interfere with the outcome of a ballgame," he said. "But any time a pitcher hits one of your players and the next guy hits a home run, it charges you up."

Foster, by nature a slowpoke in the batter's box, stepped in, then out, in, then out. "The pitcher was playing cat and mouse, keeping me waiting," Foster said. "I wanted to be ready when I stepped in the box. The pitcher should have been told to pitch just as I was told to hit."

The next pitch was in, and Foster didn't back out enough. It caught him on the hip, the bases were loaded and a full-scale incident broke out.

There were two on and two out when Foster was drilled. Cox said he didn't want to do it. "It was a fastball inside," he said. "It just happened to hit him. Pitching him inside is part of the game."

The benches cleared, but no punches were thrown and order was restored within five minutes. Cox went to 2-1 on Johnson, then threw a fastball. Right down the pipe.

St. Louis jumped to a 1-0 lead in the top of the first when Tom Herr slammed only his fifth homer of the year and third against the Mets.

The Cardinals moved within 5-2 in the fifth on Ozzie Smith's double and a two-out single by Vince Coleman, who then stole his 92nd base but was left stranded.

Darling, 15-5, took a three-hitter and the three-run lead into the seventh. But leadoff walks to Mike Jorgensen and Smith, and a one-out double by Coleman cut the margin to 5-3.

"Ronnie started running out of gas," is how Manager Johnson described it.

McDowell relieved, gave up an RBI groundout to Willie McGee and then retired Herr on a fly ball to end the threat. He finished for his 13th save.

Padres 3, Reds 2

Ty Cobb's record was built to last, and it survived another night. Pete Rose went 0-for-4 in front of a sellout crowd of 51,045 and still has only 4,191 hits.

Garry Templeton had four hits to lead San Diego over Cincinnati and broke a 2-2 tie with an RBI single in the seventh. The spoilsport shortstop also put Rose out twice, on popups in the first and sixth innings.

"My night didn't take anything away from Pete," Templeton said. "He's had pressure on him all his career. He'll get his hit. I think it will come tomorrow."

Rose flew out to left field in his other two times at bat.

"I feel a little disappointed," Rose said. "I hate to disappoint you people, I hate to disappoint the fans, and I hate to lose. Other than that, I couldn't care less."

The start of the game was delayed 15 minutes to let the crowd filter into Riverfront Stadium, which was draped with banners in Rose's honor.

LaMarr Hoyt, 14-8, making his first start since Aug. 18 because of a sore right shoulder, gave up five hits in six innings for the victory.

Buddy Bell hit a two-run homer, his fourth for Cincinnati this year.

Goose Gossage pitched a 1-2-3 ninth inning for his 22nd save.

National League

Pirates 2, Cubs 1

Rick Reuschel pitched his sixth straight complete game and struck out 12 batters, just one short of his career high. He gave up only eight hits, walked one batter, and the run he allowed was unearned.

Reuschel is 36 years old and has a rotator cuff injury, so just how is he 12-7?

"He's a lot stronger and a lot sharper with his pitches. A comeback like his happens but it doesn't happen very often," Cubs Manager Jim Frey said.

Reuschel lowered his ERA to 2.24, fourth best in the league. In his last 50 1-3 innings, he has allowed two earned runs for a 0.36 ERA.

Denny Gonzalez hit his fourth homer of the season, in the second inning, against loser Steve Engel, 1-4.

Dodgers 10-10, Braves 1-4

Mariano Duncan batted in five runs and Rick Honeycutt pitched a five-hitter as Los Angeles crushed Atlanta in the opener. Greg Brock hit a grand slam in a tie-breaking, five-run seventh as the Dodgers mashed the Braves in the relatively tense nightcap.

The Dodgers are 11-3 against the Braves this year.

Len Matuszek and Mike Scioscia homered in the second game for Los Angeles; Dale Murphy hit his NL-leading 35th for the Braves.

Honeycutt, 8-12, had lost six of his last eight decisons. He also set off a five-run second inning with an RBI single. Pascual Perez, 1-10, lost again.

Phillies 5, Expos 2

Mike Schmidt's three-run homer with none out in the bottom of the 11th was his 27th of the season and No. 452 lifetime, tying him with former Boston Red Sox star Carl Yastrzemski on the all-time list.

Tim Wallach hit his 16th home run for Montreal and Mitch Webster homered for the fourth consecutive game, hitting his ninth of the year. His four home runs in four games is an Expos record.

Astros 4, Giants 1

Bob Knepper, 13-10, pitched a three-hitter for his fifth win in his last six decisions. He pitched his fourth complete game, did not walk a batter, struck out six and retired the last 14 to lead Houston to its 11th win in 13 games.

Knepper had a run-scoring infield hit and Kevin Bass hit a two-run single in Houston's three-run fourth inning.

The Giants' Chris Brown hit his 15th homer of the season.

With his 48th victory as an Astro, Knepper became the winningest left-hander in Houston history. Dave Roberts is not Ty Cobb and 47 is not 4,191, but Knepper was happy with the milestone.

"Not all of us can set historical baseball records, but it's nice to set a team record. It won't get me in the Hall of Fame, but it feels good. It's nice to stay in a place long enough to set a record," Knepper said.

Yankees work on Seaver trade

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees have claimed 300-game winner Tom Seaver of the Chicago White Sox and will try to work out a deal for the 40-year-old veteran today, according to a report in the New York Daily News.

The News reported in today's editions that sources close to both Seaver and the White Sox said that details of a trade were being negotiated. A 48-hour waiver period will expire today.

No other American League club lower in the standings than the Yankees had claimed Seaver.

If a deal is not worked out between the two clubs, Chicago will remove Seaver from the waiver list today.

The Yankees, 13-10 winners in Milwaukee Tuesday night, have won 11 straight and 29 of 34. New York trails the Toronto Blue Jays by 1½ games in the American League East.

But despite the winning streak, the Yanks have been looking for help in the pitching department.

"We're trying, believe me, we're trying," Yankee owner George Steinbrenner said of New York's quest for pitching help. "I've said before that we're not going to mortgage our future for the sake of getting a veteran pitcher who might only help us for a couple of weeks."

But the prospect of the one-time Met in pinstripes has to be an attractive one to Steinbrenner, as well as to Seaver.

"All I can say right now is that the thought of coming back to New York is certainly attractive from a personal standpoint," Seaver told the News. "I haven't been told anything, but I'm not totally surprised by this, simply because our club has to decide which way they want to go next year. At least I have a say in this."

Seaver's approval on an agreement between the Yanks and White Sox would be needed to complete any transactions.

Seaver, who won his 300th game on Aug. 4 at Yankee Stadium, is 13-10 this year with a 3.25 ERA, eighth best in the AL.

The News said a source close to Chicago co-owner Jerry Reinsdorf was looking to trade Seaver and his $1 million annual salary. Chicago is all but out of the pennant race, standing nine games behind first-place Kansas City in the AL West.

Seaver broke into the major leagues in 1967 when he went 16-13 for the New York Mets and became the club's first star, winning rookie of the year honors.

In 1969 he won 25 games and the first of three Cy Young Awards in leading the Mets to the world championship.

Seaver was traded to the Cincinnati Reds on June 15, 1977, following a money dispute with club official M. Donald Grant.

After six seasons with the Reds, including a no-hitter against St. Louis on June 16, 1978, he was traded back to the Mets in December of 1982.

Seaver was the Mets' opening day pitcher in 1983 and finished the year 9-14.

In a move that dismayed many Met fans, Seaver was left unprotected in the 1984 free-agent re-entry draft and was claimed by the White Sox on Jan. 19 as compensation for Dennis Lamp, who signed with Toronto.

Seaver is fourth on the all-time strikeout list with 3515, 19 behind Gaylord Perry.

If the Yankees acquire Seaver he could start this weekend against the Blue Jays, taking the place of ailing Marty Bystrom in the rotation.

Seaver would not be eligible for any post-season action.

Sutton now wears a halo

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Don Sutton, a winner of 293 games during a big-league baseball career that began in 1966, was acquired by the California Angels Tuesday from the Oakland A's in exchange for two minor league players to be named later.

Sutton, 40, had a 13-8 record and a 3.89 earned run average in 29 starts for the A's this year. He threw one complete game and, in his last 19 starts, was 10-3 with a 2.68 ERA.

"I'm going to be merging into an already good ball club," Sutton said at a news conference shortly before the Angels faced the Kansas City Royals at Anaheim Stadium.

THE ANGELS moved to within a half-game of the American League West-leading Royals with a 7-1 victory Monday night, the first of a three-game series between the two clubs, but lost Tuesday to fall back to 1½ games off the Royals' pace.

"I found out I had cleared waivers this morning," said Sutton, who has a lifetime record of 293-226. "It will be nice to go home after a home game for the first time in five years."

The veteran right-hander, who ranks sixth on baseball's all-time strikeout list with 3,299, missed a scheduled start for the A's Monday night, and team officials said he was flying to his home in Laguna Hills, near Anaheim, because his father-in-law was in the hospital.

Sutton said his father-in-law has a clogged artery that caused a heart problem.

"Don Sutton means an outstanding addition to this club," Angels Manager Gene Mauch said. "He will find a way to make contributions down the way as he has many times in the past.

"HE IS not going to be taking anyone's place (in the Angels' starting rotation). All I can say is I plan on pitching him four times, maybe five" during the rest of the season.

Sutton, who won't be eligible for post-season action should the Angels qualify, said he expected to make his first start for California either Thursday or Friday against the Texas Rangers. Mauch said no firm decision had been made.

"I'll do whatever Gene Mauch wants me to do," Sutton said. "I have reached the stage of my career where I know there's a not a whole lot of time left. It'll be nice to spend some time with a contending ballclub."

Sutton pitched for the Los Angeles Dodgers for 15 years, setting club records in eight categories.

Race appeal denied

BLOOMFIELD HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Stewards for Championship Auto Racing Teams have turned down a protest by Johnny Rutherford over the controversial finish of Sunday's Molson-Indy 200 in St. Pie, Quebec, Canada.

Rutherford was leading the race on the .826-mile tri-oval at Sanair Super Speedway as the 225-lap event wound to a close under a caution flag brought on out lap 209.

It appeared the race would end under the yellow, with Pancho Carter finishing second. But CART officials restarted the race as the cars entered the third turn of the last lap and Carter beat Rutherford to the finish line by less than six inches.

Rutherford's team filed an official protest after the provisional finishing order was posted, claiming that Carter had passed illegally because the track was still under a caution flag.

Wally Dallenbach, CART's chief steward, and fellow stewards J. Kirk Russell and Bill Chambres Tuesday turned down the protest, saying the track was under green conditions when Carter made his pass.

Dallenbach, a former Indy-car driver, said all the correct procedures for restarting a race were followed.

"The starter held up one finger to signal we would go green the next time around, and the pace car light went off and he ducked into the pits," Dallenbach explained. "At the point the lights went green on the track, the portion of the track from turn three to the finish line became fair territory to improve your position.

"At the start of the race, you cannot improve your position until you pass the starting line. But, on restarts, drivers can start improving their position the second they see a green light or green flag."

Rutherford's team has 72 hours in which to appeal the stewards' decision. If it does, CART will form a special three-person panel to hear the appeal.

Such an appeal, filed by carowner U.E. "Pat" Patrick and driver Emerson Fittipaldi, remained pending Tuesday in a denied protest from the Pocono 500 on Aug. 18.

Theismann's loose tongue aided Dallas victory

That 44-14 Dallas victory over Washington Monday night. Don't bet the family jewels on the Cowboys making the Super Bowl on the basis of that game.

It was a game of emotion. It's something that has been building all summer and the Cowboys' unblemished exhibition record served to heighten fan expectations.

Quarterback Joe Theismann's loose tongue did the rest, although Theismann and Coch Joe Gibbs swear on a stack of bibles that the deragatory quotes about the Cowboys at the opening of Theismann's Vienna, Va., restaurant were pure fabrication, the product of some trouble-stirring writer's imagination. In fact, it is claimed, so was the opening. Gibbs went so far as to deplore the Metroplex papers for irresponsible reporting.

THE COWBOYS got all the incentive they needed, however, last year when, as Randy White described that game, "We were a little disturbed at the end of the game when he stood up and ran around with the ball. We didn't feel it was necessary."

The way the Dallas fans booed the mere appearance of Burgundy for pregame warmups, you'd have thought the Oakland Raiders were in town. These are the same Dallas fans who normally use their hands to stifle yawns and applaud politely for an 80-yard run by Tony Dorsett or a 90-yard White to Hill bomb.

DORSETT was still radio-active after the game. He stood up on a podium and praised Coach Tom Landry for "an imaginative, innovative, aggressive offense, an offense in which all the weapons were used.

"If we continue to play to employ all our weapons, we have a big, strong offensive line that is capable of opening holes." Then in an obvious reference to forecasts that for Dallas to beat Washington it would have to be a low-scoring game, "This is an offense that is capable of scoring a lot of points."

Still, wound up, Dorsett declared, "The whole team is more aggressive...hungry..." He blamed the latter on the assembled writers, "You guys wrote us off before the season even started. This is the first surprise. Tonight we won even though we didn't execute like we can...."

This was the guy who three weeks ago was demanding to be traded?

IT DIDN'T start out like it was going to be that kind of night for the Cowboys. Washington started out running John Riggins, five straight plays, off the left side for sizeable bites of yardage. It was almost as though Gibbs was either drying out his big running back in the Texas Stadium steam bath or punishing him for holding out. Of course, it could be he was figuring on running Riggins until his tongue hung out and then bringing in former Heisman Trophy winner George Rogers to finish off the beleaguered Dallas defense.

"The were running out of an unbalanced line," Dallas assistant Ernie Stautner explained the consistent early gains, "So we made some adjustments. If we stop the run, then Theismann has to pass, so we pulled a linebacker for a defensive back...." and the rest was 44-14.

Quarterback Danny White, sidelined by an injury in preseason, admitted some rust, but claims it began to come together after the first couple of series. White feels there's still plenty of room for improvement, but he was never better than he was on the 98-yard drive, repeatedly coming up with clutch third and long passes. "In a game like this, I think that is a real killer. It proves you are in shape. We kept their defense on the field a lot and our defense got to rest."

Asked if he was surprised that Landry didn't take him out when the game got out of hand, "No, and I'm glad he didn't. I wanted every minute of this."

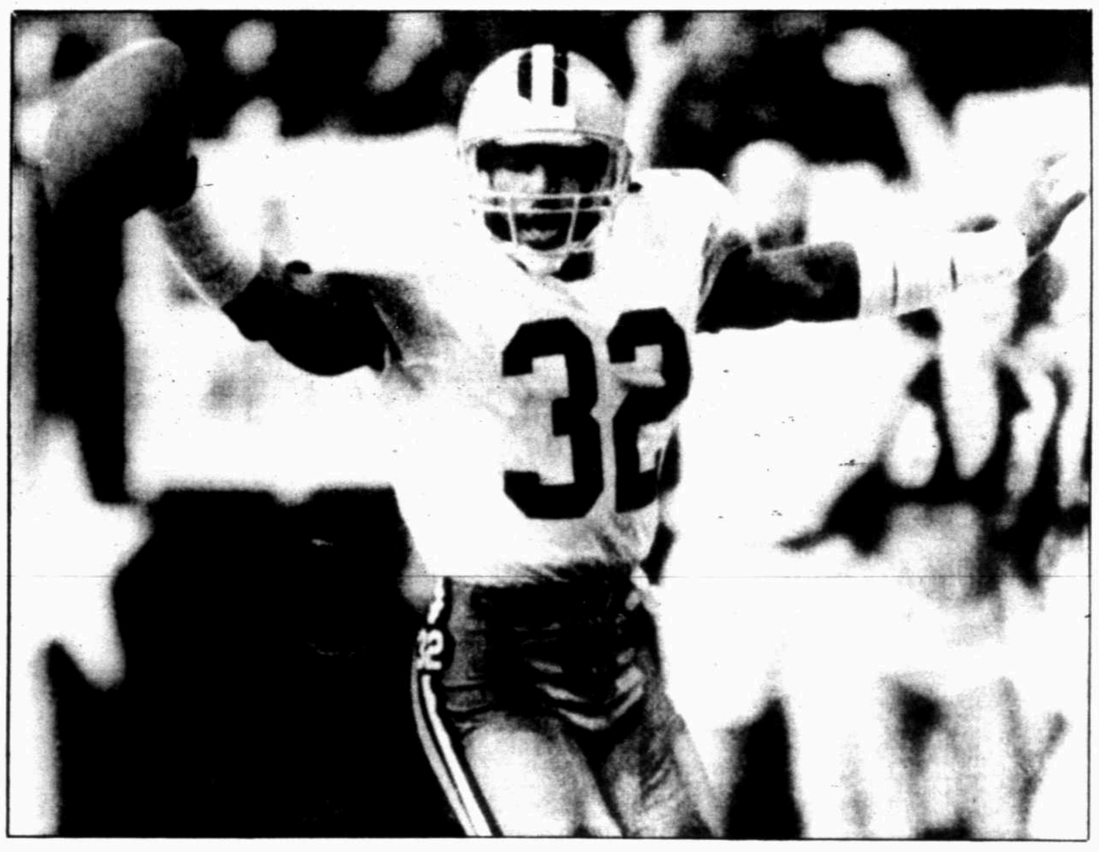

EMOTIONALLY charged? Even the Cowboys admit they won't reach the pitch attained for the Redskins when they invade Detroit to play the Lions Sunday...all, that is, except defensive back Dennis Thurman.

"Not as high this week? Why wouldn't we be. We're going to the Silverdome where they beat us with 12 men on the field the last time we were there. That's something I haven't forgotten."

And 44-14, the memory returns of 1979 when the Cowboys destroyed the Los Angeles Rams, 30-6, in an early season game in Texas Stadium. Anyone who witnessed the execution felt that any further competition between these two teams would be cruel and unusual punishment.

In the first round of the playoffs, the Rams eliminated the Cowboys, 21-19. But don't get me wrong, beating the Redskins like that is a blast no matter whether it's at the beginning or end of the season. It's worth it if for not other reason than to hear a crowd roar in Dallas.

Oklahoma slides in poll

Associated Press

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer wasn't surprised that the Sooners lost their No. 1 ranking in the Associated Press poll Tuesday because he had predicted it would happen eventually.

"We knew what was going to happen," Switzer told the AP. "It's kind of what I anticipated. We got all the publicity in the preseason (the Sooners were No. 1 in the preseason and first regular-season polls) but we don't play our first game until Sept. 28 and I knew people would forget about us.

"Besides, the poll doesn't mean anything at this point. I'm involved with so many other things I don't have any time to worry about where we stand in the poll."

WHILE OKLAHOMA slipped from No. 1 to No. 2, Auburn jumped from No. 2 to No. 1, just two points ahead of the Sooners, by routing Southwestern Louisiana 49-7 behind Bo Jackson's 290 yards rushing and four touchdowns.

Auburn Coach Pat Dye said he "didn't think think we'd move up on Oklahoma, but I know it really doesn't make a difference either way. It's nice to be No. 1, but I really don't want to talk about it now. I'll talk about it in January.

"I'm more concerned with facing the No. 1 defense in the nation this weekend (Southern Mississippi, which allowed only 138 yards in blanking Louisiana Tech 28-0)."

Auburn was No. 1 in the 1984 preseason poll and promptly lost its first two games to Miami and Texas. Dye said the difference between the No. 1 ranking last year and this year "is like night and day. I don't think it's going to make it any easier than last year and it's a tremendous motivating factor for teams we play.

"But it's different in the way our people are handling it. I haven't heard it mentioned. Nobody's running around here excited about being No. 1 like they were last year."

Auburn received 16 first-place votes to Oklahoma's 28 from a nationwide panel of 60 sports writers and sportscasters. But the Tigers, who totaled 1,118 of a possible 1,200 points, received 25 second-place votes and were not rated lower than seventh on any ballot while two voters placed Oklahoma in the Second Ten, nullifying the Sooners' edge in first-place votes. Oklahoma received 1,116 points.

There was considerable shuffling from last week's rankings but the only team to drop out of the Top Twenty was No. 12 Washington, which lost to Oklahoma State 31-17. The Huskies were replaced in the Top Twenty by Alabama, which made it for the first time since the second week of the 1984 season.

Florida and Southern California climbed into the first four as a result of impressive opening-game victories, while Florida State, Oklahoma State and UCLA moved up from the Second Ten to the Top Ten. They replaced Maryland, defending national Brigham Young — which had its 25-game winning streak snapped by UCLA 27-24 — and Nebraska.

Florida, a 35-23 winner over Miami, jumped from fifth to third with three first-place votes and 974 points. The Gators replaced Southern Methodist, which had problems before defeating Texas-El Paso 35-23 and slipped to sixth.

Southern Cal rose from sixth to fourth with six first-place ballots and 970 points on the strength of a 20-10 triumph over Illinois, which had been No. 11 but fell to 19th. Iowa, which has not yet played a game, slipped from fourth to fifth with five first-place votes and 911 points. Sixth-place SMU received the other two first-place ballots and 908 points.

Florida State vaulted from 17th to seventh with 755 points by upsetting No. 10 Nebraska 17-13 and Oklahoma State went from 16th to eighth with 741 points by trouncing Washington.

Ohio State, which gets under way this weekend, remained in ninth place with 686 points while UCLA shot from 20th to 10th with 612 points by beating BYU and dropping the Cougars from eighth to 16th. Maryland, which had been No. 7, lost to Penn State 20-18 and skidded to 17th. The victory boosted moved the Nittany Lions from 19th to 11th.

Rounding out the Second Ten are LSU, Notre Dame, Arkansas, South Carolina, BYU, Maryland, Nebraska, Illinois and Alabama.

Last week's Second Ten consisted of Illinois, Washington, LSU, Notre Dame, Arkansas, Oklahoma State, Florida State, South Carolina, Penn State and UCLA.

Alabama did not play last weekend but defeated Georgia 20-16 in its opener.

Landry deflates big head

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Dallas Coach Tom Landry has a good example from last year to keep his team from getting the big head after Monday night's 30-point victory over the Washington Redskins.

Dallas opened with a 20-13 victory over the Los Angeles Rams on a Monday night, then were blasted 28-7 the next week by the New York Giants.

"That's a good example of what can happen if you don't get up for the second game on the schedule and I plan to use that example," said Landry. "Losing to the Giants turned out to be the game that knocked us out of the playoffs."

The Cowboys were still euphoric Tuesday after a 44-14 victory over the Redskins.

"It feels great to win a game like that," said Landry. "Anytime you beat Washington with a performance like we had, it's a big victory."

Landry then said with a chuckle at his weekly press luncheon, "I'm sure we've awakened everyone on our schedule for the next few weeks."

He said a big difference between last year and this year is that Dallas played a Monday night game on the West Coast then had to travel the next Sunday to the East Coast.

"That kills you," Landry said. "At least this time we opened at home and Detroit is close to our time zone. It's not going to be as bad."

The Cowboys intercepted Washington quarterback Joe Theismann five times and had a total of seven turnovers.

"I'm realy surprised," said Landry. "It's hard to believe we beat them like that. It was one of the best victories we have had. Our secondary was tremendous. They had great anticipation."

Landry added, "I'm sure we'll be flat in practice this week."

Asked what the game told him about his team, Landry said, "I'm still not sure just where we are. Who could predict what happened Monday night?"

The Cowboys opened as four-point favorites over the Lions.

"Detroit looks good to me on film," said Landry. "They won a big game over Atlanta. It will be tough."

Landry said the attitude is much different on the 1985 Dallas team than it was last season.

"I could predict we were going to play well because I felt we've had a good climate to operate in since training camp," Landry said. "This team seems to be together.

"A victory like the one we had over Washington is a result of it (togetherness). If you have it, then things like this happen."

Syracuse walkout returns to team

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Doug Marrone, a 285-pound bulwark of the Syracuse University offensive line, returned to the squad Tuesday after a 10-hour walkout, school officials said.

The senior tackle said his disappearance Monday night stemmed from a personal problem which he resolved, officials said.

Athletic Department spokesman Larry Kimball said Marrone had been reinstated and would travel to Starkville, Miss., for Saturday's Syracuse opener against Mississippi State.

"He met with Coach (Dick) MacPherson, they discussed it, and that's all there is to it," Kimball said.

Pitz testifies in Ron Springs' trial

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas police officer testified Tuesday she suspected former Dallas Cowboys running back Ron Springs was under the influence of alcohol and drugs when she and another officer arrested him at a nightclub.

Cpl. Vanessa Pitz testified during the second day of Springs' trial on a charge of aggravated assault on a police officer.

She said she thought the former National Football League player "was using alcohol and some sort of stimulant" the day he is accused of assaulting her and her colleague. But she said Springs never was tested by police to determine if he was under the influence of drugs or alcohol.

Springs, 28, was indicted in February on the third-degree felony charge which stems from his Jan. 18 arrest at the Million Dollar Saloon, a Dallas topless bar. If convicted, he faces up to 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Pitz said Springs hit her in the face, kicked her in the shin, "body slammed" her against a bar and threw her over some bar stools when she tried to handcuff him.

She said Springs was finally arrested with the help of another club employee.

During a recess, Springs denied the officer's accusations.

"I wouldn't use any drugs, it's probably just a cheap shot by her," he said.

A report on Springs' arrest Jan. 18 arrest stated he was sober, while a section concerning drug use was marked "unknown."

Pitz said Tuesday she told the clerk to mark unknown "because we don't know what kind of drug" he used.

She said she thought Springs was using a mixture of stimulants because he was "very hyper, very jumpy" and had "swings in mood from being very angry at us, to being nice, to being angry."

But when defense attorney Richard Corbitt asked Pitz if Springs was slurring his speech, mumbled or showed signs of being drunk, she said no.

AP honors Tech's Timmy Smith

Associated Press

Timmy Smith isn't in this year's Texas Tech football media guide because it was thought scholastic problems would keep him out of school.

But Smith passed nine hours in the last semester of summer school to become eligible and, boy, is his home state of New Mexico unhappy about it.

Smith, a junior from Hobbs, N.M. rallied the Red Raiders to a 32-31 victory over the University of New Mexico Lobos last week to earn The Associated Press Offensive Player of the Week honors.

Junior free safety Thomas Everett of Baylor returned a punt 75 yards for a touchdown, intercepted a pass, made 12 tackles (3 of them on goalline stands) in a 39-18 victory over Wyoming to earn The AP's Defensive Player of the Week honors.

"He's the best I've ever seen," said Baylor Coach Grant Teaff. "Van McElroy (A starter for the Los Angeles Raiders) was a great one and of course Jerry Gray at Texas was sensational.

"But Thomas can just do more than anybody I've seen. He can return punts. He defends the pass great and makes interceptions. And he tackles like a linebacker.

"Brother, can he hit!"

It was only Aug. 23 before Smith had his first practice in Coach Jerry Moore's wishbone offense, far behind other players who had spring work.

Smith didn't get into the New Mexico game until the second quarter with Tech trailing 14-0. On a third and one, he rushed for 10 yards as Tech marched to a field goal.

Trailing 31-10 late in the third period, Smith ran 31 yards for a touchdown. On the first play of the fourth quarter, Smith dashed 42 yards for a touchdown. He was injured on the play and suffered a left knee injury and will miss this week's Tulsa game.

Tech offensive coordinator Tom Wilson said, "Timmy played a great game. He is a bigtime back. He definitely broke the game open offensively for us with his touchdown run."

Lee's Rebs move into AP Top 10

Associated Press

Odessa Permian successfully opened defense of its state Class 5A co-championship to retain its No. 1 ranking while Midland Lee made its first appearance in the rankings, moving into the No. 10 spot in The Associated Press Schoolboy Football Poll.

Permian, which shared the 1984 title with Beaumont French, blanked El Paso Coronado 28-0 and collected 22 of the 25 first place votes.

Conroe, which beat Bryan 27-3, got two first place votes and finished second by a 242-212 point margin. Houston Yates, fourth a week ago, jumped ahead of Converse Judson into third place with Judson dropping to fourth.

Temple, the only loser among the 5A preseason ranked teams, dropped out of the top 10 after a 20-18 loss to Austin Crockett and was replaced in the No. 10 spot by Midland Lee, which shut out Lubbock Coronado, 42-0.

Hempstead in Class 3A and Munday in Class A were near-unanimous top picks as Tomball easily retained its No. 1 rank in 4A along with Electra in 2A and Munday, the defending A champion.

Hempstead and Munday each received 24 of the 25 first place votes cast by The AP's panel of Texas sports writers and sportscasters, missing unanimous 250 point totals by one each.

Tomball blasted Rosenberg Terry 48-12 and Sweetwater blanked Clyde 51-0 to remain 1-2 on the 4A list but two other teams, No. 5 Gregory Portland and No. 10 Port Arthur Lincoln, suffered losses and dropped off the list.

The newcomers in 4A earned their spots following victories over Class 5A opponents. Lubbock Estacado beat Plainview 14-9 and became the No. 10 team and Brownwood took over at No. 9 after beating Abilene Cooper 27-14.

Hempstead defeated Caldwell 32-12 to retain its top billing in 3A and Navasota moved up from third to second, replacing Post.

There were three upsets among the 3A ranks and three new teams to replace them in the rankings.

Second-ranked Post, No. 4 Vernon and No. 8 Waco Connally are the departures and No. 8 Alvarado, No. 9 Port Arthur Austin and No. 10 Kermit are the replacements.

Alvarado edged Waco Connally 14-13 to get into the poll, Port Arthur Austin beat Orangefield 24-0 and Kermit blanked Post 14-0.

Electra and Hamlin remained 1-2 in 2A with Alto moving up from third to second in place of Grand Saline, which dropped to 10th after a 9-7 loss to Van.

Munday had no trouble defeating Haskell 33-0 and Union Hill shut out Harleton 28-0 to hold the top two Class A spots. No. 6 Nazareth and No. 9 Maypearl dropped out of the top 10 after losses.

Granger, in the ninth spot, and Valley, which came in 10th, moved into the ratings.

Three girls make soccer squad

NEW BRITAIN, Conn. (AP) — Three girls who have tried out for the New Britain High School boys' soccer team have made the team and will be playing for New Britain this week.

"I didn't cut anyone, male or female," soccer coach Harold Lawson said Tuesday.

A coach for a girls' team was never found and girls were allowed to try out for the boys' team.

However, a rumor that a girl had been cut from the team before a tryout was denied by school officials.

"I can't independently verify that it's true," Lawson said of the rumor.

The first game of the season for the New Britain soccer team is Thursday and Lawson said the three girls will have the same opportunities as the boys to play. He said the girls have the same skills as the boys.

"My concern," said board member Michael K. Becker, "is very simply that if there is that kind of showing of interest on the part of girls that they have a chance."

Nicklaus duo enters tourney

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jack Nicklaus and 23-year-old Jack Nicklaus II will play in the Greater Milwaukee Open, the first time the famous father and his son have entered the same professional golf tournament as competitors.

"If I'm playing ahead of him, I'll probably be looking over my shoulder to see how he's doing," the elder Nicklaus said of his son and sometimes caddy. "It won't be any problem."

"I'm not approaching it any differently than any other tournament," the younger Nicklaus said. But he admitted he was excited, both because he was playing in the same tournament as his father and because it will be only his second Professional Golfers' Association tour event.

The legend's namesake, an amateur, made his first appearance this summer in the Quad Cities Open, but missed the cut.

The $300,000 Greater Milwaukee Open begins Thursday at Tuckaway Country Club in suburban Franklin, a par-72, 7,010-yard layout which features hills and large greens.

Organizers of the 18th annual tournament were especially pleased just to get the elder Nicklaus, who has never competed in the Greater Milwaukee as a professional. The 45-year-old Nicklaus played in the tournament as an amateur in 1961 when it was played at North Hills Country Club. He finished three strokes behind winner Bruce Crampton.

Nicklaus probably is here only because he's having an off year. He is yet to win a tournament this year. In past years, this portion of the Nicklaus season was devoted to competing in Ryder Cup matches.

Franklin toes stay at A&M

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Charles "Spec" Franklin has done his part to keep the Texas A&M football kicking chores in the Franklin family.

He tutored eldest son Tony, who became the second all-time leading scorer in Southwest Conference history, and then kept the mold and used it on his youngest son Eric, currently kicking three-pointers for the Aggies.

Franklin recovered from the embarrassment of missing his first collegiate try at an extra point last season to become the Aggie kicker and will be barefooted and ready Saturday when the Aggies open the season against Alabama.

"My father has been my coach," he said. "He had a mold of Tony and when I came along and started getting serious, he could steer me in the right direction.

"If Tony had been doing something right, my father would say do this and you will have success. It's a credit to my father," he said.

Tony, now kicking for the New England Patriots in the National Football League, kicked 56 career field goals, an SWC record, at A&M. His longest was 65 yards against Baylor and he also had long-range bombs of 64, 62 and 59 yards.

After his first game mishit, Eric recovered and converted all five field goals attempts, including a 50-yarder against Texas Christian, and he hit five of six extra points for the season.

Eric has been compared to Tony since he first picked up a scruffy football and started kicking it around the backyard at Levelland.

But Eric hasn't tired of it.

"I've never gotten tired of the fact that I'm his little brother, and I never will," said Eric, eight years younger than Tony. "It's been an inspiration to me and I hope that I can have just a little of the success he's had and is having."

When Eric started having success as a kicker, he never had far to go for instruction.

His father was a punter and running back at Ranger Junior College and Tony is always available for tips.

"Tony has the knowledge and the on-field experience that helps," Eric said. "I talk to Tony about things that I'm doing. I'm really lucky to have two men that know as much about it and they happen to be right in my family."

The younger Franklin said there was never any doubt that he would attend A&M, although he came to the campus as a walk-on.

"I've been an Aggie as long as Tony has," Eric said. "When I came out of high school, Southern Methodist and TCU recruited me a little bit but my heart was set on the Aggies."

But he thought his dream of kicking for the Aggies ended with his first kick in the TCU game last season.

"I went 'Oh Lord,' it was pitiful," he recalled. "I really didn't think the coaches were going to give me another shot. But they let me finish the game and I didn't miss another kick."

Rice's Courtney Hall, 17, starts at center

HOUSTON (AP) — Courtney Hall was a wide-eyed 16-year-old when he enrolled at Rice University six weeks ago.

But a lot has happened to the California native in a short time. He had a birthday Aug. 26 and on Saturday he'll line up as the starting center for the Owls when they open the season against the Miami Hurricane.

Hall, 6-foot-1, 235, will get more of an education against the Hurricane, going against veterans who outweigh him by 40 pounds.

"I'm nothing but skin and bones now," Hall said. "But I'm not worried about it. I've gone against big people before. I went against a 300-pounder in high school once. I'll just have to use the quickness to offset their strength."

Hall was so impressive in preseason drills that Coach Watson Brown was able to move last year's starting center, Jim Simpson, to guard.

"Yeah, I'm excited," Hall said. "I guess I was a little better than the coaches thought I was when they recruited me. I knew I wouldn't be redshirted, but I didn't think I'd play this much this fast."

Hall has been doing things ahead of schedule most of his life. He started the first grade at a military school when he was four years old and has always been younger than his classmates.

"I guess my mother wanted me out of the house," he said. "I was still as big as the other kids."

Brown was surprised that the Owls were able to pull Hall away from his southern California roots.

"It came down to us and Southern Cal," Brown said. "I couldn't believe we got him."

Hall's coach at Wilmington, Calif.'s Banning High School was Chris Ferragamo, brother of Vince Farragamo, former Los Angeles Rams quarterback.

But when decision time game, Hall headed for Texas.

"I guess it's a dream for every LA boy to play for USC when he's growing up," Hall said.

In recent years, Pakistan has dominated Asian bridge. This year they will again represent their zone in the World Bridge Championships, to be held in Sao Paulo, Brazil. Paying attention to spot cards proved rewarding on this deal from Pakistan's Asian Championship match against India.

The bidding in the two rooms was similar except that the Indian North chose three no trump as the final contract. He lost four diamond tricks and a spade.

Against four spades, West led the queen of diamonds. East overtook with the king, cashed the ace and shifted to a heart. Declarer won, cashed the king and ace of clubs, then took care to ruff a club with the seven of trumps. Next he led the jack of trumps and overtook in dummy with the king.

These plays in trumps were crucial, for now declarer led the six of trumps and, when East followed with a low trump, declarer could underplay the five. When the six won, declarer was still in dummy, and he shortened his trump length further by ruffing a club.

The rest was routine. With seven tricks in the bag, declarer simply cashed his remaining high heart and exited with a heart. It made no difference who won the heart trick. Declarer could simply sit back and wait to score his last two trumps to bring home a well-played game.

Springsteen donates $25,000 to help build warehouse for Miami food bank

Springsteen

MIAMI (AP) — Rock star Bruce Springsteen has donated $25,000 to a local food bank to help build a food storage warehouse, an official said.

"We talked to Bruce before the concert about problems in our county and he feels that when he's touring in a community he should give a little back to that community," Ilene Zweig, a spokeswoman for the Daily Bread Community Food Bank, said Tuesday.

Springsteen, who has donated hundreds of thousands of dollars to food drives, veterans' organizations and unemployment shelters, was in Miami for two sold-out concerts in the Orange Bowl Monday and Tuesday, attracting an estimated 72,000 rock 'n' roll fans each night.

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Famed Spanish bandleader and ladies' man Xavier Cugat, 85, has denied recent press reports that he would exchange wedding vows for a sixth time — this time with his Mexican secretary and nurse.

In an interview on Spanish national radio, Cugat, dubbed the "King of Rumba," said he had no plans to marry Yvonne Massanes, whom he described as "a good friend."

Cugat, who has been hospitalized for four heart attacks and respiratory problems, said Tuesday, "My health and age leaves me unprepared to marry."

The musician introduced the steamy Latin dance to the United States in the 30s. He has lived in Catalonia since he retired in 1978.

Cugat's last wife was the Spanish-born entertainer Charo Baeza, who has appeared frequently on the ABC television show "The Love Boat." They separated several years ago.

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Happy Rockefeller, the widow of former Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller, has lent a tapestry of Pablo Picasso's anti-war masterpiece "Guernica" to the United Nations.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, in announcing Mrs. Rockefeller's five-year loan on Tuesday, said the 10-by-22-foot work will hang outside the Security Council chambers.

It was commissioned by Rockefeller in 1955. Picasso personally supervised the weaving at a workshop in Var, France.

The original painting was created in 1937 after the Basque town of Guernica was devastated by German bombers aiding Gen. Francisco Franco's Nationalists in the Spanish civil war. It now hangs in Madrid's Prado Museum.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Heroin was discovered in a hypodermic needle seized from Cathy Evelyn Smith a few hours after the drug death of comedian John Belushi, a coroner's chemist testified.

The hypodermic needle and a spoon taken by police from Ms. Smith's purse also showed traces of cocaine, chemist Lloyd E. Mahanay testified Tuesday at her preliminary hearing on murder charges.

Mahanay said he detected the heroin only by conducting a sophisticated test a year after Belushi died March 5, 1982. That was eight months after Ms. Smith was quoted in the National Enquirer as saying she repeatedly injected Belushi with a "speedball" mixture of cocaine and heroin before his death.

Belushi, who gained fame on the "Saturday Night Live" television series and then starred in the movies "Animal House" and "The Blues Brothers," was 33 when he died in a rented Sunset Strip bungalow.

Ms. Smith, 38, a Canadian-born back-up vocalist for singers such as Gordon Lightfoot and Hoyt Axton, has been charged with second-degree murder and 13 counts of furnishing heroin and cocaine to Belushi.

The preliminary hearing, to determine whether she must stand trial, began Monday before Municipal Judge James F. Nelson.

The coroner's office determined that Belushi died of acute heroin and cocaine intoxication, according to a report released in 1982.

Mahanay testified that a test he conducted in March 1982 disclosed only traces of cocaine. But a year later, he made further tests at the suggestion of another coroner's official and found heroin as well, he said.

The prosecution claims Ms. Smith gave Belushi the dose that killed him in the early morning hours of March 5. If convicted, she faces a maximum of eight years and eight months in prison.

Defense attorney Howard Weitzman claimed that Belushi was responsible for his own death.

"We have Belushi, a known abuser, who was paying for the drugs, who was furnishing the cocaine and paying for the heroin," Weitzman said during a court recess. "One has to wonder why this young lady, who was a known addict at the time and was doing what Mr. Belushi was requesting her to do, should be prosecuted for murder."

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Michael Drummond was doing "very, very well," as he approached the critical period when his body might reject the human heart that replaced the Jarvik-7 artificial pump that kept him alive for nine days, hospital officials say.

Drummond remained in critical but stable condition, the normal status given post-transplant patients, University Medical Center spokeswoman Nina Trasoff said Tuesday.

He was the sixth recipient of a Jarvik-7 heart and the first in whom the device was used only as a temporary bridge to transplantation. He received the heart of a 19-year-old motorcycle accident victim from Texas last Saturday.

Drummond had taken several steps and sat up for long periods Monday and Tuesday and had visited several times with members of his family, Ms. Trasoff said. He has been eating well and taking most of his medications by mouth, with only one intravenous tube still attached.

COVENTRY, England (AP) — Laura Ashley, founder of the international fabric and clothing design empire, was reported in critical condition Tuesday, her condition unchanged since she was hospitalized after a fall over the weekend.

A spokesman at Walsgrave Hospital in Coventry, where Mrs. Ashley, 60, was in the neurosurgery unit, would give no details of her injuries but said her condition remained "stable and unchanged."

Newspaper: Saudi oil prices to drop in October

KUWAIT (AP) — Saudi Arabia has reached a preliminary agreement with six international oil companies to undercut OPEC's official price structure by selling its oil at market-related prices beginning in October, a Kuwaiti newspaper reported Tuesday.

The report in the usually reliable newspaper Al-Watan was the first from the Persian Gulf region to support similar accounts that have been sweeping oil markets for weeks.

Oil industry officials and trading sources have said Saudi Arabia has expressed interest in a pricing agreement that would enable it to sell more oil, but there has been no official confirmation that an accord has been reached.

The persistent reports have said that Saudi Arabia, eager to increase its oil production from the 20-year lows of this summer, would set the price of its crude oil on the basis of what refiners receive for the petroleum products produced with that oil.

"This would mean a substantial reduction in the prices of Saudi crude oil," Al-Watan said.

Each $1 decline in the world price of a barrel of oil, if passed on entirely to consumers, is the equivalent of a 2½-cent reduction in the price of refined petroleum products, such as gasoline.

Al-Watan said the government of Saudi Arabia reached agreement on the market-pricing arrangement with Exxon Corp., Mobil Corp., Texaco Inc., Chevron Corp., all in the United States; the Royal Dutch-Shell Group of Companies, which has headquarters in Britain and the Netherlands; and Mitsubishi Oil Co. Ltd. of Japan.

A shipping industry source in Tokyo, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said Exxon had chartered at least five oil tankers to transport oil from the Saudi Arabian port of Yanbu to its European refineries beginning in October, apparently as part of the new pricing arrangement.

At the New York headquarters of Exxon, spokeswoman Juliet McGhie refused to confirm or deny either the Kuwait or Tokyo reports. In the past, Exxon has repeatedly refused to comment on contracts with suppliers, citing competitive reasons.

Mobil and Texaco also declined to comment.

At Chevron's San Francisco headquarters, spokesman Larry Shushan said that if there was an agreement with Saudi Arabia, "we're not a participant."

But he also said of Saudi Arabia: "We understand they're interested in making some agreement."

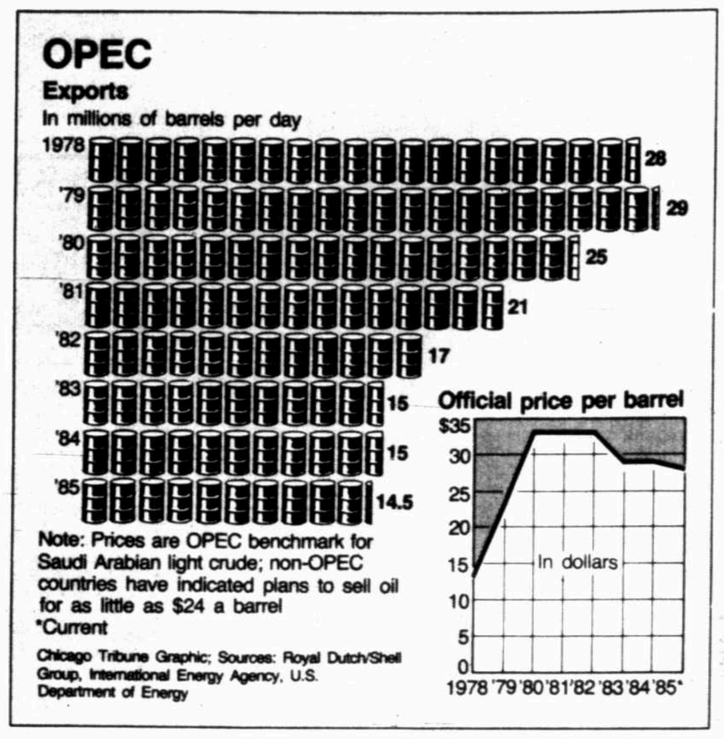

A trader for a U.S. oil company that does not do business with Saudi Arabia said that Norbec, Saudi Arabia's oil-marketing arm, had been sounding out potential customers to see what it would take to move the kingdom's oil.

Currently, U.S. refiners along the coast of the Gulf of Mexico are losing money for each barrel of Arabian Light oil they purchase for $28, the official price of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Platt's Oilgram Price Report, a newsletter covering the petroleum industry, said Tuesday that it calculated Arabian Light would have to sell for $26.22 a barrel to guarantee that Gulf Coast refiners cover their expenses.

On the spot, or non-contract, market, Arabian Light was quoted Tuesday at $27.15 a barrel for October deliveries, or 85 cents below OPEC's official price, according to Telerate Energy Service, a private market-information firm.

Al-Watan did not provide specifics on the anticipated cut, but said new prices would be effective Oct. 1.

Delegation vows to halt new offshore exploration

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of California's congressional delegation angrily accused Interior Secretary Donald Hodel of breaking an agreement that would limit offshore oil drilling, and vowed to extend a moratorium on all new exploration for oil and natural gas off the California coast.

Some members of the delegation held out the possibility of writing into law the tentative agreement they reached with Hodel in mid-July, which they accused the interior secretary of abandoning during a heated, two-hour private meeting today.

"The administration's credibility has suffered a very serious blow," said Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif. "We had an agreement and the Department of the Interior is reneging on that agreement. We have no alternative but to go for a moratorium."

Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., said, "We have a new show. It's called 'Let's Break a Deal.'"

Hodel, meeting with reporters after the meeting, denied that he had backed out of the agreement.

"We are much closer together now," he said. "We have the framework in the preliminary agreement to go forward in the negotiations."

Under the preliminary agreement reached July 16 between Hodel and the California delegation, 150 tracts of nine square miles each would be offered for oil and gas exploration off the California coast in exchange for extending until the year 2000 a congressional moratorium on exploratory drilling of the state's remaining 6,310 undeveloped offshore tracts.

Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., chief House negotiator, said the majority of the delegation today offered to make minor changes in the 150 tracts to get the deal through Congress with administration support.

But, Panetta said, Hodel insisted on major changes. "Hodel made it very clear that he can't support" the initial agreement, he said.

Before today's meeting, Hodel had protested that the 150 tracts covered by the July 16 agreement represented only 5 percent to 10 percent of the state's potential offshore petroleum resources. He said that was insufficient, and the oil industry agreed.

Hodel said today that when the preliminary agreement was announced, he was unaware of Interior Department findings that the 150 tracts contain only 50 million to 200 million barrels of oil or their equivalent in natural gas. The department said the best 150 tracts it has identified off the California coast would yield an estimated 300 million to 900 million barrels of oil.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., told reporters that "we do not have an agreement," despite support by the state's two senators and 70 percent of its 45-member House delegation.

"Presumably we will seek to extend the moratorium and-or put the agreement into law, with some modifications," he said.

Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., said he favors writing the July 16 agreement into law, with some changes to cover "sensitive areas in Southern California."

Lawmakers press pay equity study

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying women must be allowed to escape a "wage ghetto," lawmakers and labor leaders on Tuesday urged Congress to order a study of whether women in the federal work force are victims of pay discrimination.

"We won't be satisfied until every single American is paid fairly in this country," Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, said at a news conference.

Legislation introduced by Ms. Oakar would require a study of federal employees to determine if their classifications and wage systems are marred by discrimination based on sex or race.

The news conference, at which labor and feminist leaders appeared followed a ruling by a federal appeals court in San Francisco that the state of Washington did not have to offer women employees equal pay for jobs deemed to be of equal worth — the concept of "comparable worth" or "pay equity."

Ms. Oakar said that while she was disappointed by the decision, "that ruling is only one stray stone in a surging tide of determination to obtain economic justice for women and minorities in the workplace."

Comptroller seizes two Dallas companies

AUSTIN (AP) — The state comptroller has seized two Dallas businesses, beginning a statewide crackdown on companies that owe delinquent sales taxes.

Comptroller Bob Bullock said the closings were a last resort, but necessary.

"Some businesses just persist in not paying the tax money they collect from their customers. Each and every one of the businesses we are seizing has been given ample opportunity to pay the money they owe," Bullock said.

Two Dallas businesses — a printing company that owed $2,634 and a pizzeria that owed $7,135 — were closed Tuesday, said John Moore, spokesman for the comptroller's office.

Similar seizures are planned in other cities later this week, Moore said.

Bullock said that in addition to the seizures, enforcement officers are filing liens and freezing bank accounts of delinquent merchants.

Sales tax receipts collected by merchants at the time of sale are legally due the state.

"These merchants have a clear-cut choice: they can pay the money when it's due or they can make it hard for themselves by not paying and see their business shut down. It's the government's money, but it's their choice," Bullock said.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Austin employers expect to increase hiring

AUSTIN (AP) — An August survey of major Austin employers showed that 40 percent of them expect to increase hiring for the fall, according to the temporary help firm that conducted the study.

"Austin, compared with the other 389 cities that participated, shows a relatively bright outlook," said Harvey Levin of the Austin office of Manpower, a national temporary help company.

Sixty Austin firms were questioned. Forty percent of them said they anticipated more employees during October, November and December. Ten percent said they would cut back. Forty-three percent predicted no change, and 7 percent said they were uncertain of their hiring plans.

Contractor charged with 13 safety violations

AUSTIN (AP) — The Occupational Safety and Health Administration has issued citations alleging safety regulation violations at an Austin construction site where a worker died in July.

Ronald Ratcliff, an employee of Ron Kinning Inc., died July 11 when he fell from a two-story scaffold at the Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp. (MCC) construction site at the Balcones Research Center.

The OSHA citations allege Kinning violated 13 safety regulations, acting OSHA safety supervisor Jim Butler told The Daily Texan newspaper.

Among the allegations, OSHA said a manually propelled scaffold was operated on a surface that was not free of pits or depressions.

Company officials refused to comment on the citations.

Although two workers have died at the MCC site, overall conditions are safe, according to Walter Timberlake, president of the AFL-CIO's Austin chapter.

Texaco finds new Gulf reservoirs

By The Associated Press

Texaco Inc. has announced that it found new oil and natural gas reservoirs within a mile of an earlier discovery on Green Canyon Block 6 in the Gulf of Mexico and said it is evaluating development plans.

The well, designated OCS-G-6987 No. 2, was drilled in 675 feet of water about 170 miles southwest of New Orleans as a confirmation to the previously announced discovery at the nearby No. 1 well.

Texaco said oil and gas were discovered at depths between 3,500 feet and 7,500 feet. Tests at depths between 5,854 feet and 5,904 feet tested natural gas at 357,000 cubic feet a day and oil at a rate of 423 barrels a day.

The well is 3,200 feet southwest from the No. 1 well.

In July, Texaco said it discovered oil and natural gas between depths of 7,000 and 8,000 feet at two holes drilled at the No. 1 well. One of those holes tested 7.9 million cubic feet a day of gas and 407 barrels of oil daily, and the other tested 3.8 million cubic feet a day of gas and 100 barrels of oil daily.

Texaco and Union Exploration Partners Ltd. each own 50 percent of the lease on Block 6 and two blocks adjacent to the discovery.

Independent catalog agents sue Montgomery Ward, Mobil

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Claiming they were deceived into thinking their businesses were safe, independent catalog agents of Montgomery Ward & Co. have sued Ward and parent Mobil Corp. over plans to end catalog sales.

Three couples filed the class-action lawsuit in U.S. District Court on behalf of 450 independent catalog sales agents for Ward in the company's Baltimore and Cincinnati regions, alleging fraud, restraint of trade and breach of contract.

After being reassured Ward would back their independent operations despite plans to shut Ward-owned catalog stores, the agents were told Aug. 2 the company would close the sales agencies within 14 months, the lawsuit alleged.

The couples filing the lawsuit on behalf of themselves and other agents were David Smith and his wifeMary K. Smith, of Quakertown; Harold and Mary Ann Balsinger of Coatesville; and Michael Masone and Louise Masone of Abingdon, Va.

Smith said the regions cited in the suit cover m of the United States east of the Mississippi River, except for Mississippi, Wisconsin and parts of Illinois.

Mobil spokesman John Lord and Ward spokesman Charles Thorne said their companies hado immediate comment on the lawsuit. Thorne saidard announced Aug. 2 that the end of catalog sales by the end of 1986 was part of a plan to cut unprofitable operations.

The lawsuit was at least the second filed by agents regarding the company's plans to end catalog sales. Operators of 10 stores in Texas filed a lawsuit in a state court last month.

The Philadelphia lawsuit alleged that until Aug. 1, Ward and Mobil continually assured the independent agents no plans called for closing their stores.

The pintiffs cited oral assurances and the May issue of a company publication, "Forward," which they said assured agents the closing of company stores "by no means" meant the end of the independent agencies.

Because of the assurances, the lawsuit said, agents incurred sales and promotional expenses.

Three counts in the lawsuit alleged breach of contract, citing a lack of good faith and failure to give proper notice of plans to terminate agreements.

The suit also alleged Ward and Mobil interfered with the agents' relationships with customers by failing to properly fill catalog sales orders. In addition, the suit alleged Ward and Mobil deprived the agents of business opportunities by starting a toll-free telephone number and circulating specialty catalogs directly to customers.

The lawsuit said Ward engaged in restraint of trade by requiring that its catalog items be sold at the price stated in the catalog and alleged fraud and deceit through misrepresentations of Ward's intentions to continue catalog sales.

On an allegation of restraint of trade by Ward and a count alleging a racketeering violation by Mobil, the lawsuit seeks triple damages determined in court, plus interest and costs. On seven other counts, the lawsuit seeks $75,000, plus interest and costs.

FAA abandons proposed ruling to require fuel flame retardant

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration has abandoned a proposed regulation that would require airlines to use a fuel flame retardant, once thought to be a prime way to reduce the danger of aircraft fires, officials said Tuesday.

FAA Administrator Donald Engen said he decided not to pursue the proposed rgulation requiring the additive because it failed to prevent a huge fireball during a deliberate test crash of a jetliner last December in California.

The failure of the test as well as "other technical issues not yet resolved lead me to conclude that the concept is not practical for day-today airline operation in the forseeable future," Engen said in a letter to ranking members of the House subcomittee on aviation.

The airlines all along had opposed plans by the FAA to require the additive, known as AMK, arguing that it interferes with normal engine operation and that its benefits had yet to be proven.

Nevertheless, FAA officials, after years of testing, were convinced last fall that the additive was the best way to retard post-crash fuel fires and the agency was prepared to begin writing regulations that would have required the additive by U.S. airlines.

The program was put on hold, however, when the additive failed to prevent a giant fireball during the controlled impact demonstration at Edwards Air Force Base last Dec. 2.

The airlines immediately pointed to the test as proof that the additive would not prevent fires in a crash, although supporters of the additive, including FAA researchers and engineers, insisted that the circumstances of the test crash were unique and that the additive would still reduce the dangers of fire in most accidents.

FAA spokesman Fred Farrar said Tuesday that the agency may still conduct some research on AMK and plans to continue examining the "general subject of what to do about post-crash fires."

FAA officials acknowledged, however, that the AMK research will be given low priority.

Safety experts have said that as many as four out of every 10 people who survive the impact of an airine crash, nevertheless, die because of an ensuing fire.

The AMK additive prevents the formation of a highly flammable mist which causes the violent eruption of a fireball in some aircraft crashes, researchers say.

Such a fireball engulfed a British Airtours Boeing 737 as it was taking off Aug. 22 from the airport at Manchester, England after one of the plane's engines exploded. The takeoff was aborted and some passengers escaped, but 54 persons died in the plane as the fire rapidly spread over the fuselage and into the cabin.

El Chico Corp. reports profits up 8.5 percent

DALLAS (SWN) — El Chico Corp. announced a 4.2 percent increase in sales, an 8.5 percent increase in operating profit, and a 10.3 percent increase in net income for the first quarter ended August 23, 1985.

Net sales were $21.9 million during the period compared to $21.0 million for the same period a year ago. Operating profit was $1.41 million vs. $1.30 million in the year earlier period. Net income rose to $1,003,000 or 22 cents per share from $909,000 or 19 cents per share during the same period a year ago. Other income during the period, including gains on the sale of properties, yielded $156,000 net vs. $119,000 net for the same period a year ago.

Gilbert Cuellar, Jr., president and chief operating officer, said promotional coupons increased sales during the first quarter of fiscal 1985 but, in an effort to reduce the usage of price discounting, the same promotion was not implemented during the first quarter of fiscal 1986.

During the quarter, two new company-owned restaurants were opened: one El Chico in Lewisville (Dallas), Texas on June 11, 1985; and one Cactus restaurant in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma on July 31, 1985. A third new company-owned El Chico restaurant was opened in Irving (Dallas), Texas on August 7, 1985, replacing an older restaurant which was closed. The company's newest El Chico was opened on September 4, 1985 in DeSoto (Dallas), Texas.

System-wide sales during the period, including those from franchised restaurants, were $26.0 million, an increase of 8.9 percent over the $23.9 million recorded for the same 12 week period a year ago.

The Dallas-based company owns and franchises a chain of 98 full-service "Tex-Mex" style Mexican and concept restaurants in 11 states in the sunbelt region. The company presently has 79 company-owned and 19 franchised restaurants in operation compared to 76 and 15, respectively, a year ago.

Report: TMI tests thrown out before accident

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The results of more than 200 safety tests were discarded at Three Mile Island Unit 2 in the year before the reactor's 1979 accident, according to a new report.

In other instances, "inaccurate data was included in the tests with the specific intent to manipulate the test result," according to the report, released Tuesday by TMI's operator, GPU Nuclear Corp.

The report summarizes the findings of a 15-month investigation headed by Edwin H. Stier, former director of New Jersey's Division of Criminal Justice. GPU Nuclear commissioned the probe.

Stier said there is no evidence that the problems led to the March 1979 accident, in which Unit 2's main cooling system lost water, nuclear fuel partially melted and radiation leaked.

The investigation looked at tests designed to detect water leakage from the reactor's cooling system. The "leak rate tests" took place between March 1978 and the plant's March 1979 accident.

Allegations of problems in the Unit 2 tests surfaced in 1980. In 1984, Metropolitan Edison Co., TMI's former operator, pleaded guilty to failing to have an adequate test to measure Unit 2 leak rates.

Stier's report is the first public attempt to document the extent to which leak rate tests were fraudulent, why results were discarded, and who was responsible, he said.

The tests were required to show that leakage from the cooling system was within one gallon per minute, as mandated by the unit's operating license.

According to the report, reactor operators tried to conduct the tests during every eight-hour shift at Unit 2.

Whenever the results exceeded the limit — which occurred at least half the time — the results were discarded, even though they should have been kept, Stier said.

Testing would continue until a "passing" result could be obtained, the report said. That was done sometimes by manipulating the data, according to the report.

The evidence did not establish that top-level managers participated in fraudulent test procedures, the report said.

Study shows oil firms' tax rate 37 percent

WASHINGTON — In 1984, the average of the effective federal tax rates paid by 21 leading petroleum companies was 37 percent, while that of non-oil industrial companies was 22 percent, according to a study released today by the American Petroleum Institute.

The study also showed that the average of the effective federal tax rates, including current income and windfall profit taxes, of the 21 companies was higher than the average of the non-oil companies in each of the five years from 1980 to 1984.

The new report, "Federal Income Tax Burden of Leading U.S. Oil and Non-Oil Companies, 1980 to 1984", updates a May 1985 study by including data on industry operating taxes and local excise taxes to present a total domestic tax compilation for the 21 petroleum companies.

Federal, state and local taxes paid by the 21 companies in 1984 totaled more than $29 billion, according to the study.

The data show that federal income and "windfall profit" taxes of $8.8 billion in 1984 account for about half of the $17.7 billion in operating taxes paid by the companies. State and local income taxes, property taxes, severance taxes, payroll taxes and other miscellaneous taxes account for the other half.

In addition, product excise taxes for which these companies were responsible totaled $11.5 billion to bring the companies total domestic taxes in 1984 to $29.2 billion.

South Korea hoping to expand car market

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

SEOUL, South Korea — This is a country where car ownership is still only a dream for the average citizen. Only one South Korean in 40 owns a car, and most of the automobiles here are taxis or company owned. Yet, despite this limited domestic market, South Korea's fledgling auto industry stands on the brink of a major expansion.

The industry, which now has the capacity to produce 500,000 vehicles, plans to double that to 1 million by 1987 — about as many cars, trucks and buses as are now operating in the entire country. But the growth is aimed at overseas markets — the United States and Canada in particular — and not at Korean buyers.

South Korea is going to be "a factor in the world automobile market," predicts Ahn Chong Sang, executive director of Samsung Co., an auto parts exporter.

Already, exports will top 100,000 units this year, more than the whole industry could produce a scant three years ago.

Although South Korea "cannot imitate the success of Japan" in car exports, Ahn says, it will be making an auspicious entry into the American market next year. Hyundai Motor Co. reportedly plans to ship 100,000 cars to the United States in 1986. And in 1987, South Korea's three established auto companies — Hyundai, Daewoo and Kia — expect to be exporting a total of 385,000 cars to the United States and Canada.

Some growth is expected in the domestic market, but Lee Soo Jang, director of overseas trade for Kia Motors, says it would be wrong to expect domestic demand to match the capacity of factories that are being built.

"Our investment policies will have to be based on exports," he says.

That's because the prospects for a surge in domestic demand are slim. The government, apparently hewing to the old belief that a car is a luxury item for the rich, shows no signs of lowering either taxes or surcharges on cars.

Those charges amount to as much as 53 percent of the production cost of a car here, American analysts say.

Only 109,725 passenger cars were sold at home in 1984.

(Tariffs on imports are even tougher, so prohibitive that the South Korean auto market is effectively closed to foreign producers.)

"Taxation on cars is a very serious public policy matter, which won't easily be settled," says Ahn, the Samsung executive.

Because of taxes, a subcompact here sells for about $6,000. This, says an executive of one auto company who asked not to be identified, is almost double the price that his company plans to ask for its car in the United States.

The American analysts, who also asked not to be identified, estimate that, in 1987, South Korea will produce as many as 500,000 more autos than the domestic market can consume. Therefore, one analyst said, exports "are likely to number significantly higher than South Koreans would like to admit and are likely to be given strategic importance (by the government)."

Lee, the Kia executive, says that, to support decisions already made to expand plant capacity, "by 1990 we must achieve exports of at least 500,000 vehicles," including trucks and buses. Capacity of the three firms that year is expected to reach 1.64 million units — 950,000 for Hyundai, 450,000 for Kia and 240,000 for Daewoo.

The American analysts here agree that the sheer size and potential productive capacity of the new plants will force the three companies to look to exports, not the home market, to sell their products.

However, the problems involved in breaking into the American market promise to be immense. Only Hyundai has much experince as an exporter. The entry of Daewoo and Kia into the American market will mark the first time that auto makers without significant exporting experience have picked the U.S. market for their first major effort.

Slipshod production techniques that were good enough to satisfy South Korea's protected domestic market are causing headaches for the plant foremen supervising production for export, the American analysts say.

Four die in oil rig crash

PEKING (AP) — A Chinese helicopter crash on an oil rig in the Yellow Sea killed four people and injured three, the official Xinhua news agency said Tuesday.

The Bell-412 helicopter, operated by the China Industrial Aviation Service, crashed Monday while landing at the No. 8 oil-drilling platform of the Japan-China Oil Development Corp., a joint venture searching for offshore oil.

The accident occurred in the Gulf of Bohai, off China's northeast coast.

The aviation service is part of the Civil Aviation Administration of China, the state airline.

Xinhua said there were eight people on board the helicopter — four Japanese and four Chinese. Two Japanese and two Chinese were killed.

Japanese officials said the dead included oil corporation officials Katsuo Nishino, 42, and Shoji Kobayashi, 55. The Chinese victims were not identified.

Tichenor acquires Chicago station

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Tichenor Media System Inc., a major group operator of Spanish-language radio stations based in Harlingen, has acquired Chicago station WIND-AM for $6.85 million, McHenry T. Tichenor Jr., president of TMS, said Tuesday.

The purchase of WIND, a 5,000 watt station currently owned by Group W, Westinghouse Broadcasting and Cable, Inc., is subject to approval from the Federal Communications Commission.

"Our very positive working relationship with Group W Radio, which began with their purchase of KQXT, San Antonio, from our company last year, has made our acquisition of WIND possible," Tichenor said. "We look forward to the opportunity to serve the Hispanic population in Chicago in the manner that has made our stations leaders in the markets we serve."

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks moved broadly lower in morning trading today after suffering a widespread loss in the previous session.

Telephone, auto, mining and drug issues led the retreat.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off nearly 6 points Tuesday, tumbled another 9.08 to 1,324.37 after two hours today.

Declines overall held a 2-1 lead over advances on the New York Stock Exchange, whose composite index dropped 0.64 to 107.68.

Big Board volume totaled 41.56 million shares at noon EDT, compared with 40.79 million at that hour Tuesday.

The Commerce Department today said American business plans to boost spending on expansion and modernization in 1985 by about one-third of the increase of 1984 — 5.8 percent compared with 15.3 percent.

The latest prediction also represented a downward revision from a June estimate that business planned an average capital spending increase of 6.2 percent this year.

On the NYSE's active list, Revlon dropped ¼ to 43, Richardson-Vicks rose ⅜ to 48⅜ and Martin Marietta fell ⅜ to 34⅞.

SCM rose ¼ to 73⅜ after announcing a $74-a-share leveraged buyout agreement between SCM management and Merrill Lynch & Co., which fell ½ to 30⅜.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index lost 1.03 to 229.28.

Americans buying cars at strong, frenzied rate

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Lured by some attractive promotional bait, American consumers have been buying cars in a frenzy lately.

In the last part of August, they drove new automobiles off dealers' lots at a rate of 40,000 a day. Figures for the first 10 days of September, due out late this week, are also expected to be impressive, if not quite up to the late-August pace.

As any industry-watcher who has been asked has been quick to point out, the boom in the business results in large measure from some special, short-term factors.

Most important, domestic manufacturers are subsidizing it with loans at interest rates of 7.5 percent or 7.7 percent on "selected" models from their 1985 inventories. They want to clear this merchandise out so that they can start pushing their 1986 lines.

Their competitors have responded with various promotional campaigns of their own.

Furthermore, some of the business was borrowed from a few weeks earlier, when sales were held down by a strike of truck haulers who ship cars from factories to dealers.

All this comes at a time when sellers of cars normally make their end-of-model-year pitch to bargain-hunting consumers.

A below-market interest rate amounts to a price reduction in disguise — indeed, as shoppers for cars should be aware, it often may be a substitute for a concession in the selling price that a dealer might otherwise be willing to negotiate.

The current offerings are scheduled to expire around the end of this month as the supply of remaining '85 models dwindles. But though the car manufacturers can dictate when and where any specific financing deals are offered, they cannot simply call an end to fierce competition.

And the way the outlook is shaping up for the industry and the economy as a whole, many analysts say more special offers for car buyers are likely in the months ahead.

"The competitive nature of the auto market itself will make sales incentives — cut-rate financing, price rollbacks, dollar days, sellathons, etc. — the rule not the exception," said John Maher in the latest edition of Economic Week, a commentary from New York's Citibank.

In the fourth quarter of the year, domestic car sales, which ran at an annual rate of 13.5 million in late August, "could fall as low as 6.5 million units annualized if no new incentive programs are initiated," declared Donald Straszheim, chief economist at Merrill Lynch Economics.

Forecasts of continuing promotional and price competition are based on several factors. For one thing, many analysts consider prospects for consumer spending to be questionable at best over the next several months.

Import quotas on Japanese-made cars have been relaxed, Korean imports are also on the rise, and more and more Japanese-brand vehicles are being built in this country.

Adds Maher: "General Motors has lost about five percentage points of market share in recent years. As the industry's price leader, GM fired the first salvo in the current sales campaign. GM is adding to capacity and has every intention of buying back lost market share.

"Domestic incentive programs are slated to end at the end of this month," he concluded. "They probably will — for a while.

"But in a market where too many cars are chasing too people their return is inevitable. The implications: A buyers' market for new cars with a squeeze on manufacturers' profit margins as they are forced to absorb the increased marketing expense of a price war."

Coke defies order to share formula

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — The Coca-Cola Co. has defied a federal judge's order that it reveal its secret cola formulas, saying that the company could suffer incalculable and irreparable harm if the secret gets out.

U.S. District Judge Murray M. Schwartz is now waiting for directions from 40 Coca-Cola bottling companies, which filed suit in an effort to gain the secret formulas to settle a pricing dispute, the judge's office said Tuesday.

The judge will consider suggestions by the bottlers' attorneys for punishing the Atlanta-based company for refusing to turn over the formulas within 20 days, as he had ordered.

Attorneys for Coca-Cola said in Monday's letter to the judge that giving him the formulas "could well lead ultimately to public disclosure."

"In that event, the gravity of the harm to the company and its bottling system ... would be incalculable and irreparable," the attorneys said.

Schwartz issued the discovery order last month in a 1983 case in which 40 bottling companies are claiming Coca-Cola should sell them syrup used to bottle Diet Coke under the same price structure as the flagship-brand syrup.

To prove that claim, the bottlers said, they needed to show the two products are the same except for sweetness. Schwartz ordered the company to turn over its 99-year-old original formula along with formulas for new Coke, Diet Coke, caffeine-free Coke and experimental low-calarie colas.

The company refused to provide those ingredients but did agree to turn over to the judge the taste-test results between caffeine-free Coke and Coca-Cola that he had requested under a protective order.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Sale of silver may be used to offset any capital gains

By BILL DOYLE

Q. We bought 3,000 ounces of silver, at $8.50 per ounce, in June 1984. Since that time, silver's price has declined and now is closer to $6. Our purchase was for possible short-term profit. If we sell now, we will have a long-term loss. Should we sell and take our loss? If we do sell, how do we report this on our federal income tax return?

A. Whether of not to sell has to be your decision. This column never gives "sell" or "buy" recommendations on individual investments — much less on precious metals, which are not investments. They are speculations.

You rolled dice in the precious metals market and lost. That's the sad story of all too many people.

If you sell now, you'll have a long-term capital loss to report on Schedule D of your 1985 income tax return. Let's say you sell at $6.25 an ounce. That will give you a $6,750 long-term capital loss.

All of that capital loss can be used to offset capital gains you realize this year by selling precious metals, stocks or any other "capital assets" at profits. That reduces or eliminates capital gains tax on your profits.

If you have no capital gains, half of your capital loss — $3,375, in this example — can be used to offset your other "ordinary" income.

Furthermore, only $3,000 of capital losses can be applied to reduce your ordinary income — and the tax you pay — each year. The rest can be carried forward to lower future years' ordinary income.

In this example, without capital gains to report, your $6,750 capital loss would reduce your 1985 taxable income by $3,000 and your 1986 taxable income by $375.

• • •

Q. I must say you err and do your readers a disservice when you call precious metals "speculations." You pick a period of the past five years, during which gold and silver prices fell, to back your contention. Why not use 10, 20, 50 or 100 years, when precious metals went way up in value?

A. Because that wouldn't change the fact that precious metals are out-and-out speculations — not investments.

I'm not opposed to speculation. There's some element of risk in just about everything. I won't discourage people from speculating, as long as they are ready, willing and financially able to take on the heavy risks involved. We've all heard the expression: "No guts, no glory."

But this column does have an obligation to point out the heavy potential for losses when headed down the speculative road. To do otherwise would be a true disservice to readers.

When that caution is sounded here about precious metals, it invariably brings a batch of hopping-mad mail from "gold bugs." So be it. My first thoughts have to be about the vast majority of readers, who can't afford the risks of gold, silver, platinum and other highfliers.

• • •

Q. I have a set of pure silver medallions, minted in 1973, for which I paid $12 an ounce. This is supposed to be a "limited edition" imprinted with great events and personages of World War II.

With the price of silver way down, how do I find out if this particular collector's item is worth anything?

A. As long as they are truly silver, you should have no trouble selling the medallions for the going price of that metal. You might get more for them as collectibles, but don't get your hopes up. So many medallions such as that have been produced over the years that there is a glut on the market.

Take your medallions to a number of coin and precious metal dealers and ask what they will give you. Prices can be different from dealer to dealer. So, shop around.

And be aware that dealers' buying prices are lower than their selling prices. The difference is the dealers' markup, which also can vary from dealer to dealer. After all, they are in business to make money.

Fitness fever causes a Cookbook Boom

By JAMES R. GRAY
Hearst News Service

The health revolution has hit the cookbook market, and the results have been astounding. A visit to a bookstore today will yield dozens of health-oriented cookbooks, from diet plans to recipe books to life-style-oriented approaches.

Unfortunately, the results of this boom have been mixed. For every book that offers good common-sense advice mixed with medical knowledge, there are a dozen that merely promote the latest fad diets or offer information that seems unbalanced at best. Consider two of the latest "health" cookbooks, both of them hardcover tomes with some medical connections.

"Fit For Life" (Warner Books, $16.50) is a 242-page offering by Harvey Diamond, director of nutrition at the Academy of Integrative Medicine in Santa Monica, Calif., and Marilyn Diamond, who heads the San Vivante School for the Culinary Arts in Pacific Palisades, Calif. Their ideas are heartily endorsed in a foreword by Dr. Edward Traub.

"Eat Right, Eat Well — The Italian Way," (Knopf, $19.95) is a similarly health minded 530-page book by Italian chef Edward Giobbi and Dr. Richard Wolff, a Massachusetts cardiologist.

That is where the similarities end, however. "Fit For Life" is virtually a tract on a specific plan for eating. "Eat Right, Eat Well" is a far more interesting beast — basically an ethnic cookbook injected with good nutritional sense, especially as it relates to cholesterol and heart disease.

"FIT FOR Life" is not, for the most part, actually a cookbook. Instead, it's a long and sometimes dull account of what the authors believe is a healthy food plan. They take great pains to say that this is not a diet book, but a plan to change your style of dining for the rest of your life. Still, one can't help but think that a book that suggests readers eat only fruit and fruit juices before noon is a bit faddish — and not something many of us would want to use for the rest of our lives.

The basic idea of the "Fit For Life" food plan seems to be a three-step plan for "elimination" of food in the morning, "appropriation" in the afternoon and evening, and "assimilation" at night. Within this outline, it severely limits what one can eat when, how and with what. It's a strict regimen, and it's not made to seem especially appealing.

The book tries to be very serious about its subject, citing hundreds of articles and books (few of them from medical sources, however).

The few recipes included in the meal plan are less than inspiring. Some are nearly laughable, with cutesy names like "Tortilla Boogie," "Vegetable Toastie" and "Fruit Smoothie." Or how about a recipe for "Perfect Corn on the Cob" that, essentially, tells the reader to boil the corn and season it with butter and salt. Do you really need a recipe to tell you that?

"EAT RIGHT, Eat Well — The Italian Way" is a bit more limited in its focus, aiming mainly at reducing the fats and cholesterol in the diet to benefit the heart, not at altering a person's total lifestyle. But it is a great deal more successful at attaining its goal because it handles its task with bold creativity and moderate adaptations that make its food seem both appealing and good for you.

What Giobbi and Wolff have done is to take traditional and some very untraditional Italian recipes and adapt them where necessary to conform with modern ideas on nutrition. They run the gamut from pastas to meat dishes to vegetables to desserts. And almost without exception, they sound terrific. If one were to skip the book's introduction, one wouldn't even know this was a "health" cookbook if it weren't for the little tables at the end of each recipe listing calories, cholesterol, protein, carbohydrates, total fat, saturated fat, monounsaturated fat and polyunsaturated fat.

The "Eat Right" approach looks like a winner because it uses imagination and style to make its food seem like a prize, rather than a punishment — and healthy to boot.

Here's a sample of the recipes from both books. First, from "Fit For Life":

PERFECT CREAMY CAULIFLOWER SOUP

2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 medium onion, coarsely chopped
6 to 8 scallions, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
2 stalks celery, chopped
2 medium cauliflower, cored and coarsely chopped
½ teaspoon sea salt
½ teaspoon curry powder (optional)
⅛ teaspoon fresh ground black pepper
½ teaspoon dried thyme
1 teaspoon dried savory or marjoram
6 cups water
2 tablespoons vegetable bouillion
½ teaspoon fresh ground nutmeg

In a heavy soup kettle, melt butter. Add oil. Add onion, scallions and garlic. Add celery and cauliflower. Add seasonings. Mix well and cook uncovered over medium heat for several minutes, stirring frerquently. Add water and vegetable bouillion.

Bring to a boil. Simmer, covered, over medium heat for 15 minutes, or until cauliflower is tender. Remove cover and cool slightly. Puree in small increments in blender until smooth and creamy. Reheat, adding fresh ground nutmeg, if desired.

Serves 4.

CURRIED CORN SALAD

1 tablespoon safflower oil
½ cup red onion, finely diced
½ cup red pepper, finely diced
½ cup green pepper, finely diced
½ teaspoon curry powder
½ teaspoon dried oregano
¼ teaspoon turmeric
4 cups cooked corn
½ cup pimento-stuffed green olives, sliced
½ cup mayonnaise
¾ teaspoon sea salt, seasoned salt or salt-free seasoning
2 tablespoons fresh cilantro, chopped (optional)

Heat oil in large skillet. Add onion and saute until soft. Add red pepper and green pepper; saute briefly until they just begin to wilt. Add curry powder, oregano and turmeric and saute briefly. Add to corn in a large bowl. Stir in olives. Add mayonnaise and sea salt, and mix well. Garnish with cilantro.

Serves 3.

From "Eat Right, Eat Well — The Italian Way":

FISH SALAD

½ pound shrimp
1 cup small pasta (such as shells, tubettini, elbows), cooked and drained
2 slices fresh cod, about 1½ inches thick (or red snapper, bass or haddock), boiled gently in small amount of water for 4 to 5 minutes
Juice of one lemon
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1 tablespoon safflower oil
2 tablespoons chopped fresh mint
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 tablespooon finely chopped Italian parsley
3 cups loosely packed arrugula (rocket cress), picked and washed; or a mixture of salad greens (bibb, endive, leaf, etc.)

Boil shrimp in water to cover for 3 minutes, then cool and shell. Mix all ingredients except arrugula (or salad greens) and gently toss. Cool to room temperature. Do not refrigerate. Serve either on bed of arrugula (or greens), or toss greens with a lemon-and-oil dressing and serve on the side.

Serves 4 to 6.

PASTA, FISHERMAN STYLE

2 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon safflower oil
2 teaspoons chopped shallots
1 teaspoon chopped garlic
Hot pepper flakes to taste
3 cups peeled, chopped tomatoes, fresh if possible (drain, if canned)
1 teaspoon dried oregano
1 cup fresh peas, cooked 3 or 4 minutes
2 teaspoons chopped fresh basil or 1 teaspoon dried basil
Salt to taste
1 pound of white fish fillet (scrod, striped bass, red snapper) cut into 1-inch cubes
1 pound any tubular-cut pasta, such as elbows, shells, etc.
2 teaspoons brandy or good bourbon (optional)
Finely chopped Italian parsley

Heat the oils in a medium to large skillet or saucepan and add shallots. When shallots begin to get translucent, add garlic and hot pepper. When garlic begins to brown, add tomatoes, oregano, peas, basil and salt.

Cover and simmer 15 minutes. Add fish and continue cooking, uncovered, for several minutes. In the meantime, cook pasta a little less than al dente; then drain well. Add to sauce, turn up heat, add brandy (or bourbon) and cook over high heat a minute or two. Garnish with parsley.

Serves 6.

BROILED CHICKEN WITH BEER SAUCE

One 2¾ to 3-pound frying chicken, split
Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste
1 cup tomatoes, peeled, seeded, chopped and put through a food mill
1 cup light beer
1 tablespoon good mustard
1 tablespoon finely chopped Italian parsley
1 teaspoon crushed rosemary

Wash the split chicken and salt and pepper it. Heat the broiler for a few minutes. Place the chicken in a baking dish skin-side-down and broil close to the heat, about 8 minutes on each side.

In the meantime, boil tomatoes and beer in a small saucepan, uncovered, over moderate heat until reduced by half. Stir the mustard, parsley and rosemary in, then spoon sauce over chicken. Turn chicken over occasionally and baste with the sauce. Cook until chicken is tender and separates from bone (about 45 minutes). Watch carefully or reduce heat if broiler seems too high. Garnish with remaining sauce.

Serves 2.

BROCCOLI WITH YAMS

2 yams, about 1½ pounds
1 bunch broccoli
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon safflower oil
3 tablespoons coarsely chopped shallots
Hot pepper flakes to taste (optional)
¾ cup chicken or beef stock
Salt to taste

Bake yams in a preheated 450 F. oven until tender but firm; about 40 minutes.

Clean broccoli by peeling tough skin off stems. Cut the stems and flowerets into manageable pieces. Blanch broccoli in boiling water, then drain and set aside.

Heat the two oils in a medium skillet, add shallots and saute. As shallots begin to brown, add broccoli, hot pepper flakes and stock. Peel yams, cut into ½-inch slices and add to broccoli. Add salt, cover and simmer for 10 minutes. Serve hot.

Serves 4 to 6.

FRIED FRUIT

Batter:
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 cup cold water
2 egg whites, lightly beaten
2 tablespoons fruit liqueur
Pinch of salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
Fruit:
2 apples
2 pears
Strawberries
Corn or vegetable oil for frying
Powdered sugar

Mix the batter ingredients until well blended. Put several ice cubes in it and refrigerate for at least an hour.

Peel, core and slice the apples and pears. Wash the strawberries. Heat about ¾-inch of oil in a small to medium skillet. When oil is hot, dip fruit in batter, a few at a time, and carefully drop coated fruit into the skillet. Fry to a golden brown. Blot on paper towels and keep warm.

Serve hot, dusted with powdered sugar. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Festival promotes healthy hearts

Associated Press

The American Heart Association is observing the "American Heart's Food Festival" this week to promote healthy, low-cholesterol dining.

The AHA is offering the following basic guidelines for making foods "heart healthy:"

— Foods are baked, broiled, poached or steamed — not fried; where appropriate, foods are prepared in nonstick pans so that neither margarine nor cooking oil is required.

— Lean cuts of meat are used. Visible fat is trimmed from all meats before they are cooked and, when possible, after they are cooked. The skin is removed from chicken.

— Seasonings, such as garlic and lemon juice, replace cream sauces.

— Low-fat or skim milk is used instead of whole milk.

— Low-fat yogurt is used instead of sour cream.

— Egg whites are substituted for whole eggs in recipes calling for one to three eggs. (The ratio is two egg whites for each whole egg.)

— Margarine replaces butter and in some circumstances is used in reduced amounts — when it is spread on bread, for example.

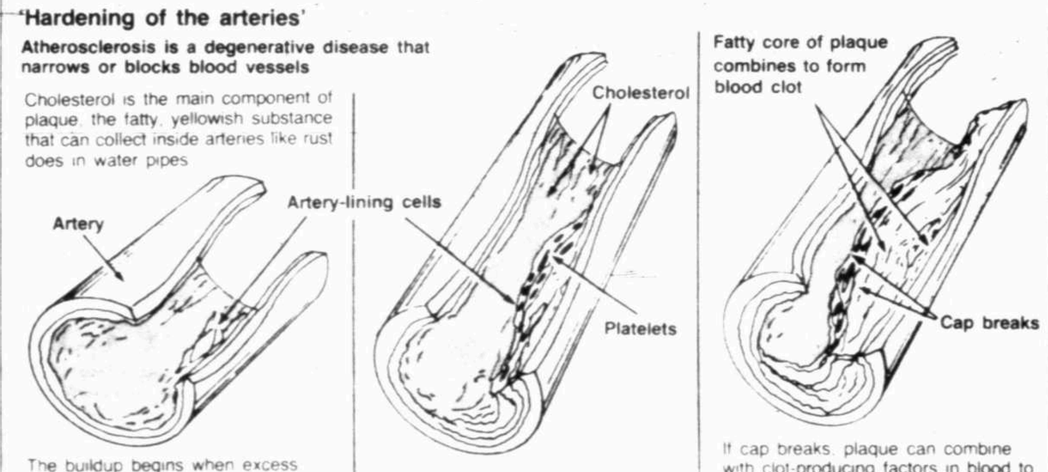

— Fresh fruits and vegetables are used in abundance.

— Most dishes are made from scratch.

Chinese recipes easy to make

By PAUL BENSEN
and EVANDER PRESTON
Copley News Service

Many Chinese recipes are natural choices for the after-work chef, since dishes that are stir-fried or deep-fried in a wok, like today's recipes, require just a couple of minutes' cooking time.

Over the last decade, Oriental cuisine has become much more popular in this country for a variety of other reasons, too.

For one thing, the quality and variety of Oriental restaurants here have improved dramatically — perhaps as a response to a more sophisticated and adventuresome American clientele. Also, the cuisines of China, Japan and other Oriental countries mesh well with the current prevailing trends in dining — toward light, visually appealing dishes that use meat sparingly and rely heavily on fresh, lightly cooked vegetables.

Both of us have often served Chinese meals to friends who loved the food, but felt that it was too exotic and difficult to prepare for them to try it at home. One major concern of these people was that some ingredients in Chinese recipes are available only at Oriental specialty stores, and they were hesitant about dealing with row upon row of jars and bottles containing unfamiliar ingredients and labeled only with Chinese characters.

This concern is largely unfounded, since the staff at such specialty stores are usually very willing to help novice Oriental chefs find what they need to prepare a favorite recipe. Even if you live miles from the nearest Oriental market, though, great Chinese meals are as close as your nearest supermarket.

SOME TIME AGO, we began hearing reports that American sauces and ingredients have become quite the rage among chefs in China. Condiments that we take for granted, like chili barbecue sauce, steak sauces and Tabasco have become sought-after items among Chinese chefs — much like American jeans and rock albums among Chinese young people.

We found this trend fascinating, and wondered whether you really can cook a great Chinese meal strictly with ingredients available at every American supermarket. Our experiments proved that this is, in fact, the case, and we hope you'll agree when you try today's recipes.

For a main dish, we decided on chicken prepared with some commercial American sauces mixed with sherry, cornstarch and soy sauce. Our four favorites, each very different from the others, represent a good cross-section of typical provincial Chinese seasonings.

The Tiger Sauce recipe has a piquancy reminiscent of Hunan and Szechuan seasoning — though it is not as spicy as many of those provinces' sauces (if you want a hotter version, just increase the amount of Tiger Sauce to taste). Heinz 57 sauce, combined with the other ingredients, has more of a Cantonese flavor. A1 Steak Sauce, again combined with sherry, cornstarch and soy sauce, brings Mandarin cooking to mind. The same basic recipe, but with Pickapeppa Sauce, has a definite Oriental flavor, but we weren't able to relate it to any specific regional cuisine. We decided to use chicken thighs in these recipes because they have excellent taste and texture when stir-fried, and are much less expensive than chicken breasts.

STIR-FRIED CHICKEN THIGHS WITH ORIENTAL SAUCES

4 tbsps. peanut oil
2 green peppers, cut in 1-inch squares
3 scallions, coarsely chopped
1 tsp. minced garlic
1 tsp. minced fresh ginger root
1 lb. chicken thighs, skinned, boned and cut in 1-inch pieces

SAUCE:
1 tbsp. Tiger Sauce (or A-1 Steak Sauce, Pickapeppa Sauce or Heinz 57 Sauce — see text, above)
2 tsps. soy sauce
1 tbsp. sherry
2 tsps. cornstarch

In wok, stir-fry green peppers in 2 tablespoons of the oil. Cook peppers just long enough to bring them to full color. Do not allow to brown or blacken. Remove peppers from wok, drain and set aside.

In other 2 tablespoons of oil, stir-fry scallions, garlic and ginger root 1 minute, taking care that none of the ingredients burns. Add chicken joints and continue to stir-fry 3 to 4 minutes more. Add reserved green peppers and sauce and stir-fry another minute, until all ingredients are mixed together well and heated through.

Serves 2.

CRAB EGG ROLLS

1 pkg. egg roll wrappers
2 (6-oz.) cans crabmeat, drained
4 ounces cream cheese
2 scallions, chopped
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. white pepper
2 egg whites, for sealing wrappers

Cut 24 squares, approximately 4x4-inches, from egg roll wrappers. In large bowl, mix crabmeat, cream cheese, scallions, salt and pepper until mixture is uniform.

On each square of wrapper, place 1 heaping teaspoon of mixture. Fold corners in to form "envelope" and seal edges with egg white.

In wok, heavy, deep-sided frying pan or deep fryer, deep-fry egg rolls, 3 or 4 at a time, at 350 F to 375 F, until golden brown.

As each batch is done, transfer to warm oven.

Makes approximately 24 egg rolls.

Some wines go with vegetables

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

Everyone seems to be talking about what wine goes with what food, and as a standard response I address the question in relation to the main dish.

That is, the question usually arises, "What does Chardonnay go with?" and I can give some general symbiotic matchups.

Never, however, has the question arisen: "Does the wine chosen for a particular main dish go with the vegetable that will be served with that main dish?"

Now, admittedly, this argument is a bit precious. Who really cares whether a Chardonnay chosen to match with the lobster will also match with the tomato rougail that is served with it?

In fact, when this was mentioned to me, my first reaction was just that: Who cares?

But then I began to think about it. And the concern should be a legitimate one.

First of all, most people know that wine does not usually marry very well with salads, especially tossed green salads with oil-and-vinegar dressings. The reason is the vinegar, which is so acidic that it changes the taste of the wine, making it relatively unpleasant.

By the same logic, any vegetable dish in which vinegar is a strong component will not make the wine taste very good, and if that dish is on the same plate with a fine main dish, the entire experience is going to be jarring.

For that reason, most people serve vegetables these days steamed, lightly sauteed or with a light butter and/or cream sauce.

But as our society moves toward ever-lighter styles of food, it is clear that some people are serving vegetable preparations as the main dishes. I love vegetarian cooking because of its freshness and its use of interesting spices, many of which are never seen in most homes (spices like fenugreek and French tarragon and lemon thyme).

When green vegetables are used as a main course, without any sweetening added, my favorite wine with them is Sauvignon Blanc or Fume Blanc. The slightly green taste usually matches well with vegetables.

Among those that annually offer good varietal intensity are from Kenwood, Robert Mondavi, Beringer, Chateau St. Jean, Silverado, Zaca Mesa, Phelps, Girard and San Pasqual. The 1983 San Pasqual wine in particular is a spectacular offering, the best wine maker Kerry Damskey has made.

When the dish in question offers more herbal intensity, choose a wine that has more intensity of herbal flavor. In particular, for example, pasta primavera is normally more assertive, and in that and similar cases I would select a Sauvignon Blanc with more intensity of herbal aromas, such as Dry Creek Fume Blanc, a personal favorite from year to year.

When very simple vegetable dishes are served, such as those with plain white sauces, a more delicate wine would be appropriate, such as Sauvignon Blancs from BV, Sterling, Rutherford Hill or Brander. The 1983 Brander is made in the style of a French white Graves.

It's been said wine doesn't go with certain foods, such as egg dishes, asparagus and artichokes. I dispute those flat assertions, arguing that the way a dish is prepared determines if it matches with wine.

To be sure, marinated artichoke hearts goes with no wine I can think of, but that's because of the vinegar-enhanced brine in which the heart is steeped.

Vegetable-laced quiche (an egg dish) is most enjoyable with Sauvignon Blanc; so are steamed artichokes served with an herb flavored sauce and asparagus with hollandaise.

Diet may be a variable affecting cancer risks

Copley News Service

"It may never be possible to specify a diet that would protect everyone from all types of cancer," Sushma Palmer, D.Sc., executive director of the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Academy of Sciences, said at a recent nutrition press conference sponsored by the Dairy Council of California.

"Absolute associations between cancer and foods are difficult to isolate. The development of cancer is very complex, poorly understood and influenced by many environmental factors other than diet," Palmer said.

Diet is certainly one variable in the risk for cancer, she said, but other risk factors include smoking, exercise and family history. The only real established cause of cancer is tobacco, according to Palmer.

Some scientists have implied that cancer may be related to the environment in a major way, and as much as 90 percent of all cancer is related to environmental factors. They also suggested that 40 percent of cancer in males, and 60 percent in females, may be related to diet.

The fact that cancer is the second leading cause of death in the United States, with a 50 percent mortality in the 800,000 new cases each year, has led to tremendous numbers of new studies. A new wealth of information has been developed, but until recently it had not been systematically analyzed to determine what it really meant in terms of advice to the American public.

In 1980, the National Cancer Institute asked the National Academy of Sciences to examine the link between diet, nutrition and cancer. Five years later, they concluded that most common cancers appeared to be influenced by diet, but they can't say what proportion is diet-related, or what difference diet can make, although they recognize that diet is important. These conclusions were reached with the understanding that current information is far from complete.

Nevertheless, the evidence of the importance of the link between diet and cancer was convincing enough to inspire four new dietary recommendations:

1. Reduce the intake of both saturated and unsaturated fats to no more than 30 percent of total calories.

2. Avoid high-dosage supplements of individual nutrients, and include fruits, vegetables and whole grains in the daily diet.

3. Minimize consumption of cured, pickled and smoked foods.

4. Use alcohol only in moderation.

Certainly, these are not dramatic recommendations, and would not be difficult for most people to follow.

In addition, there were two other recommendations that were directed more to regulatory agencies, like the Food and Drug Administration and the Environmental Protection Agency, than to the general public.

One was to minimize the contamination of foods with carcinogens, and to test food additives for carcinogens before using them to identify mutagens (substances that produce genetic mutations in bacteria and other simple cells). Second was to test for density and minimize that concentration in foods.

Sandwich tips given

Copley News Service

Here are some hints for saving time in preparing school lunch boxes:

— Make sandwiches ahead of time and freeze for up to two weeks. Some good sandwich candidates for freezing include cold cuts, peanut butter (but not jelly), meat loaf, tuna, beef, turkey and chicken.

— Mayonnaise can be frozen only if it takes up no more than one-third of the volume of the sandwich.

— Spread butter or margarine all the way to the crusts before adding filling to ward off sogginess in the bread.

— Pack the lunch box straight from the freezer; sandwiches will thaw before lunchtime.

— Pack non-perishables, such as cookies, chips and fruit, the night before.

— For great mini-shakers, cut straws, fill with salt or pepper and twist the ends.

Non-alcoholic drinks trendy

Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — It is Friday afternoon at the Clift Hotel, and pinstriped executives, capping off a week of business, are seeking relief at the lobby bar.

One orders a tall, cool papaya nectar. Another asks for a glass of Crystal Geyser with lime. A third wonders whether the luxury hotel carries Lapsang Souchong, a Chinese tea with a strong, smoky flavor.

It is tea — no longer martini — time at the Clift. And the number of customers drawn to the display of hot English crumpets and Highland scones has doubled in six months.

"It's very noticeable that there is a movement away from liquor," said William Mackay, food and beverage director of the Clift. "So now, we're carrying a whole range of Twining Teas, and finding that people do know, and will ask, for Darjeeling."

That some Americans are drinking less alcohol is a documented trend. But that a range of institutions, such as the Clift, are making policy decisions to help people drink less is part of a parallel movement with a new name — neo-temperance. Its followers are a small group of community activists, policy makers and researchers who believe that the best solutions to the problems associated with alcohol are not individual, but societal.

"The problem isn't alcohol, it's the alcoholization of American life," said Ray Chavira, chairman of the policy committee for Americans for Substance Abuse Prevention. "We're saying cool it, stabilize, reduce perhaps, but no more increases in the availability and consumption of alcohol."

Chavira, a former alcoholic, is part of a group of temperance advocates who want to eliminate "happy hour" and "last call," and train bar and restaurant employees to serve fewer drinks as they watch for drunks. They want to ban beer and wine advertising on television, or be allowed equal time for information about its dangers. They are looking to change liability laws for drinking establishments and to increase liquor taxes so that they remain in line with cost-of-living increases.

"Now, in the marketplace, liquor beverages are equated in price with soft drinks and coffee," said Friedner Wittman, study director at the Prevention Research Center in Berkeley, Calif. "What kind of signal is that to send in a societal way when it's clear that drinking a lot of alcohol has consequences and that drinking a lot of Coca-Cola does not?"

While the alcohol industry spends about $1 billion annually on radio and television advertising alone, alcohol prevention messages total about $10 million each year, according to Wittman.

To curb the industry ads, the Washington-based coalition "Project Smart" (Stop Marketing Alcohol on Radio and Television) launched a national campaign that gathered 1 million signatures in support of equal time for health messages on alcohol in advertising. So far, SMART has been rebuffed by Congress.

The SMART campaign, though part of the new temperance, has failed to catch on in the way that Mothers Against Drunk Drivers (MADD) — responsible for passage of some 300 new laws across the country — has, according to Craig Reinarman, associate director for policy studies at the Prevention Research Center.

"They're fighting an uphill battle," Reinarman said. "They are advocating something which by definition is much more difficult. They do not have the ability to provide the compelling testimony of a sobbing mother who has lost a daughter. They're focusing on a huge industry with lots of jobs, and most people drink."

What makes the new temperance a "particularly fertile, historical moment," according to Reinarman, are the cultural trends identified with the baby-boom generation — an emphasis on health and away from heavy drinking.

Frozen foods hot

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are eating more frozen foods than ever before, according to a study conducted by researchers for the Frozen Food Action Communications Team, who found that frozen food consumption is up, thanks to high-quality dinners and entrees that working parents and singles can prepare quickly.

The study also predicted that frozen food consumption in the United States will double by 1990.

THE BUTCHER

Frozen fish can be even fresher

By MERLE ELLIS

We were sitting at a table in the bar at the Ketchikan Airport waiting for our plane and lamenting the fact that we had to leave after a wonderful few days of fishing at Yes Bay Lodge in Alaska. There were ten of us and we had done rather well. Ten good-sized boxes of frozen halibut and salmon had been checked in at the luggage counter minutes before.

At the next table, another group of lucky anglers were talking of their good fortune and the good food they had enjoyed at their lodge. "There's nothin' like fresh salmon," one man remarked, "that's why I wouldn't let 'em freeze my catch, I want my family to taste it fresh!"

"But it won't be fresh by the time you get it home!" one of his buddies exclaimed, "you should'a had it frozen!"

There is, it seems, a general misconception with regard to the quality of many frozen foods, fish in particular. Generated and perpetuated (I think) by the current craze promoting the "New American Cuisine" or "California Cuisine," which use "only-the-freshest-of-ingredients," anything frozen has gotten an unjustified bad rap. Fresh is the opposite of stale, it is not the opposite of frozen. Some things must be frozen to maintain their fresh quality. Fish often is one of them.

Now I'm not going to try to convince you that the fish I brought home from Alaska and that now fills my freezer is going to taste as good as the fish the cooks at Yes Bay Lodge served two hours after it had been caught. Nor am I suggesting that the "fresh" fish you are served in one of those wonderful new "only-the-freshest-of-ingredients-fifty-five-dollars-fixed-price-plus-wine-tax-and-gratuities" restaurants isn't great. What I AM saying is that the frozen fish in your super market's meat case is apt to be fresher than the "fresh" fish in the same case.

Stop and think about it. Which is fresher, a fish caught off the coast of Alaska, kept in a slush ice bath on the fishing boat for several days until the tender picked it up to take it to Ketchikan, where it was repacked in more ice for shipment to Seattle (another few days) for distribution across the country (another day or two) to supermarkets, where it sits in the meat case a day or two until you buy it "fresh?" Or is the fresher fish a fish that was processed and flash-frozen the same day it was caught and kept frozen until you thaw it in your refrigerator? I think you'll agree; frozen is fresher.

Modern techniques and technology allow the attributes of fresh-caught seafood to be captured and preserved for months by freezing. There are, however, a few basic signs of frozen seafood quality to keep in mind when shopping to make sure you are getting the quality you should.

Many pre-wrapped packages of frozen seafood have an expiration date stamped on the label. Look for that date and pay attention to it. As a general rule, fish should not be kept in your freezer or any freezer for more than six months. If you plan to keep fish in the freezer for more than a day or so, be sure that it it wrapped in moisture-proof freezer paper. One of the guys at Yes Bay Lodge recommends dipping solidly frozen fish steaks in cold water before wrapping for the freezer. The water forms an ice glaze that helps prevent freezer burn.

Don't buy frozen fish that is stacked above the load line in the frozen food case; it has not been kept at the proper storage temperature.

Watch out for water stains on the packaging, ice crystals inside the package or other signs that the fish had thawed at any point.

Avoid buying any frozen fish that isn't solidy frozen.

If you are ever lucky enough to fish the icy waters of Alaska and consume your catch only hours after it's been caught, you are in for a treat. That's fresh fish. If not, buy frozen.

That's fresh, too!

Merle Ellis is a columnist for Chronicle Publishing Co.

Booklets available

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers and backyard gardeners are culling their crops over much of the nation, and that means freezing and canning the excess to enjoy through the winter.

Even those who don't garden may still want to put up berries or other fruits and vegetables purchased at roadside stands or picked at "pick-your-own" farms.

To help, the Department of Agriculture has out together two booklets explaining the processes and essential steps in freezing and canning. Both booklets can be obtained from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. RW, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

"Home Canning of Fruits and Vegetables," is Item 199N and costs $1.50, while "Home Freezing of Fruits and Vegetables," is Item 200N and costs $2.

Canning generally takes more care then freezing, but either can be accomplished with a little care and work.

A boiling water-bath canner can safely process fruits, tomatoes and pickled vegetables.

A steam-pressure canner is needed for other common vegetables, the Department of Agriculture reports, because safe canning of low-acid foods required temperatures higher than that of boiling water.

DEAR ABBY

Woman urges 'fun, experience'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I made a big mistake of going to bed with a man on our first date. We dated for a year and a half, but he never really respected me because I was so "easy" (his words). The fact that I had a master's degree, was attractive and made good money made no difference whatsoever — he treated me like trash.

Fortunately, he wasn't the kind of person I would have wanted a permanent relationship with anyway, so I wrote it off as a good learning experience.

Women should use men the way men have been using women for years — for their own fun and pleasure. They should go to bed only with men they know they could never be interested in, and when they meet a man who really counts, they should hold back the sex in the beginning and play hard to get. That way, they'll have all the fun and experience without getting emotionally involved while they're waiting for the right man to come along. — MASTER OF THE GAME

DEAR MASTER: Using men for "fun and experience" is no more moral than men using women. The game you propose is fraught with danger. Jumping into bed for fun and experience can be hazardous to your health and disastrous for the reputation. Grow up and slow up, sister.

DEAR ABBY: Immediately after the death of my father, my sister parked "Sara," her 30-year-old, unmarried, unemployed, lazy daughter, in my mother's home to keep her company and cheer her up. After four months, Sara, who is supposed to be on a special weight-loss diet, has done nothing but sit around, watch television and gain weight. She's even rejected offers of employment.

Mom feels trapped in her own home. It is obvious that Sara is doing nothing for her morale. In fact, I know my mother wishes that Sara would go home already, but she doesn't want to offend Sara's mother.

What should I do? — NO RIGHT ANSWERS

DEAR NO RIGHT: Wrong! There is a right answer. If you "know" that your mom feels trapped and wishes Sara would go home already, encourage her to tell Sara that she appreciated her visit, but the crisis is over and she can go home now.

DEAR ABBY: Please say something to those people who make unannounced visits to see their friends. Several times a week, I change or cancel my own plans because these visits last anywhere from one to four hours.

My plans may have been to take a nap because I had not slept well the night before, or perhaps to enjoy a long soak in a hot tub. Such things may seem unimportant to some folks, but they are cherished luxuries that I resent giving up.

Whatever happened to the old practice of calling first? I would certainly never drop in on a friend and assume I would be welcome.

Please print this, Abby. A friendship is being threatened. —TIRED OF COMPANY

DEAR TIRED: I'll print it, but I doubt if it will help you. Why? Because "those people" who visit you unannounced are welcomed with open arms while you hide your resentment.

Try this next time you have your day planned and company surprises you. Surprise them with: "I'm sorry you didn't call to let me know you were coming; I have plans for the day and it's too late to change them now. Please telephone ahead next time because I'd like to spend some time with you."

Inhospitable? No, just lesson No. 1 in the art of enlightened selfishness. Be good to yourself. It's later than you think.

Pavlova national dessert of New Zealand

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

According to the "New Zealand Kiwifruit Cookbook" by Jan Bilton, published in New Zealand in 1981, that country's national dessert is "Pavlova."

It's said that the dessert was named for the Russian ballerina of international fame, Anna Pavlova, who was born before the end of the century and lived until 1931. However, it's been only a dozen years or so — if my memory is correct — that American cooks have been serving this sweet.

Recently a friend sent me a recipe for Pavlova. It makes a delicious offering — a large crisp meringue shell filled with whipped cream, topped with sliced kiwifruit.

PAVLOVA

4 large egg whites
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon white vinegar
1 cup heavy cream
4 kiwifruit, peeled and sliced
Raspberry Sauce (see recipe)

Grease a cookie sheet; line with foil; grease foil; sprinkle lightly with a little cornstarch. Mark an 8-inch circle on the foil.

In the large bowl of an electric mixer, at high speed, beat egg whites and salt until frothy. Stir together 1 tablespoon of the sugar with 1 tablespoon cornstarch; set aside. Gradually add remaining sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time, to egg whites, beating after each addition for about 1 minute or until sugar is dissolved. Add cornstarch-sugar mixture to egg-white mixture; beat until blended. Beat in vanilla and vinegar.

Spread on cookie sheet within marked circle; spoon higher on side to form a hollow. Place in a preheated 400-degree oven; immediately reduce temperature to 250 degrees. Bake until very lightly browned and surface is dry — 1½ hours. (Meringue will be crisp and firm.) Cool completely on a wire rack. Peel off foil and slide onto a serving platter.

Just before serving, whip cream. Line center of meringue shell with some of the kiwifruit slices. Fill center with whipped cream. Garnish with remaining kiwifruit. Serve with Raspberry Sauce.

Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Raspberry Sauce: Thaw and drain 2 packages (each 10 ounces) frozen raspberries in syrup; reserve 1 cup syrup. In a 2-quart saucepan stir together ¼ cup sugar and 1 tablespoon cornstarch. Gradually stir in reserved syrup, keeping smooth. Stir in raspberries. Stirring constantly, cook over medium heat until clear, thickened and boiling. Cool. Store in a tightly covered container in the refrigerator. Makes about 2 cups.

Midlanders take oath of citizenship

From Staff Reports

Marfa Mayor Jane Shurley tendered some ranch-country advice to newly naturalized American citizens Tuesday in federal court in Midland.

"Risk being yourself. Don't be afraid of sharing a smile," said the 55-year-old rancher in Big Bend and Davis Mountains country in far southwestern Texas.

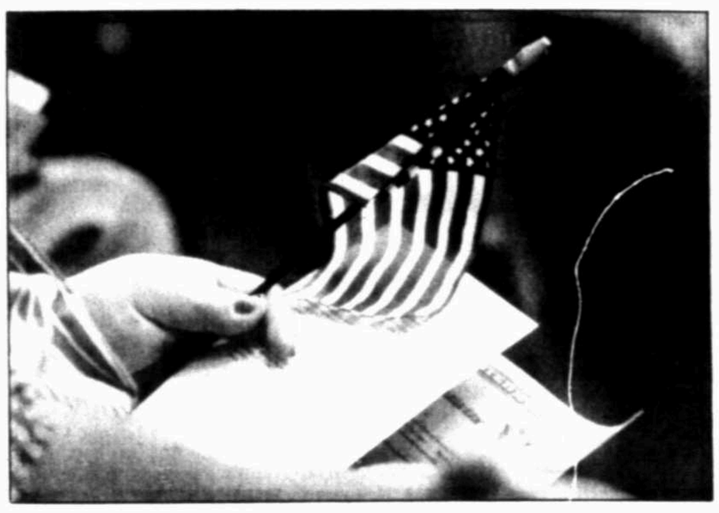

"We still need each other; we need friendship," she told the 46 citizens, who ranged in age from 21 to 64, from eight countries in the Americas, Europe and the Orient. "World peace is not an impossible goal."

She told the ex-aliens that they are "truly unlimited" in aspirations and accomplishments "unless we ourselves impose those limits."

Americans have the "freedom to reach goals at any age," she said.

"I'm proud to be an American."

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton, who presided over the ceremony, told his friend, "Thank you again and again, Jane Shurley, for doing a fine job." And the judge congratulated the 46 men and women on their newly attained United States citizenship.

The United States of America is their country now. That became true for 46 former foreigners who underwent naturalization ceremonies Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Midland. The new Americans are sworn in as new citizens and pledge their allegiance to the nation. The flag symbolizes their new-found land. Jane Shurley, mayor of Marfa, above, greeted the new citizens and told them that they have the "freedom to reach goals at any age."

Commissioners, council may trade services

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Midland City Council and the County Commissioners' Court agreed to look at trading off services in lieu of cash payments to each other during a joint meeting of the two governing bodies Tuesday afternoon in City Hall's conference room. But the consensus came after the two had locked horns over a "you vs. us" philosophy.

In addition, the council and commissioners agreed to cooperate on getting East Indiana Avenue and Elkins Road paved and to get right of way for a drainage channel for the State Highway Department.

The council had submitted a list showing the county owed $57,330 to the city for providing health care and ambulance services from the fire department.

County commissioners indicated they couldn't pay the bills. "It's extremely doubtful we can get to the end of the year before we run out of money. We're about to file for bankruptcy," said Commissioner Durward Wright.

"Our budget is stretched to the limit," added Commissioner Win Brown. "The 7.9 percent tax increase is not sufficient to cover costs."

Assistant City Manager Mike McGregor said he had found several agreements between the city and county to share costs of the Health Department and Emergency Medical Services and the county would receive those services. The last resolution McGregor found was written in 1982 but never signed by both governmental bodies. Since then, the county hasn't paid any money for ambulance and fire services.

"Have you sent us a bill?" asked Brown.

"At this point, we're disclosing it to you," said McGregor. Prior agreements called for the county to pay $15,000 a year. A new proposal would call for the county to pay 14 percent of the runs made by the EMS. Figured for the past three years, the county owes the city $40,887.

"We feel if we're not billed correctly, we just don't pay," said County Judge Bill Ahders.

"Please be assured that you will get a bill before the end of the year," McGregor said. The county, he said, is benefitting from the city's equipment.

"It looks like you're providing a service for the poor downtrodden people in the county," said Wright. "Many of those are transients. You put data before us showing that you pick up people in the county. But they're not county residents and they're not city residents."

"I didn't refer to county residents as downtrodden," said Councilman Steve Davidson. "Is this (EMS) a service you want provided?"

Wright argued that the county is set up to provide state services, such as a criminal justice system and roads, to a geographical area. By law, commissioners can gain its revenues by property taxes and by fees and fines. The city, however, gets part of its income from sales tax, which county residents pay when they shop in Midland.

"Has anyone figured the 16 percent of sales tax rebate the county residents contributed to the city?" Wright said.

The county contributes $38,500 annually to the Health Department, according to a report prepared by the city. But McGregor said the city needs an additional $16,443 to "match revenue with expenditures regarding services provided to Midland County." These services include inspections of restaurants, swimming pools and child care facilities, child immunizations, venereal disease testing and pre-natal clinics.

"We could turn this around and say you owe us for housing prisoners," Wright said. "Many of those are city residents."

The council and commissioners decided to defer any action on the items until the county could study the figures.

Freddie Nelms asked the county to work with the city on getting Indiana Avenue paved where it intersects with Fairgrounds Road. "We've been working on this 3½ years. Give it your best consideration," he said.

Council raises golf fees, water rates

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Things were on the "up and up" when the Midland City Council met Tuesday in a regular session at City Hall. The price to play golf went up, water bills and the charge to use the new landfill are going up and people who pay their sanitation bill late will pay an extra 10 percent.

A compromise was worked out with golfers who use Hogan Park Golf Course to eliminate the annual greens fees after Oct. 1. Instead of the original proposal to go to $8 on weekdays and $10 on weekends for a round of golf, players can purchase a discount card which will allow them to play 40 rounds for $320.

Annual fees had been $300 per year for unlimited play plus $1.50 per round of golf. Players who purchase annual cards before Oct. 1 can use them until Oct. 1, 1986, according to Parks and Recreation Director George Logan.

The compromise came after several disgruntled golfers attended a City Council meeting to oppose the proposal to go to the per-round charges. A 12-member committee headed by Ed Nixon designed the compromise which the council approved. After the meeting, Nixon said he felt golfers made some progress. "The council did listen to us." But the compromise, he said, could result in people going to courses in other cities to play.

"We have a budget at our house and we'll just have to see how many rounds of golf we can afford to play. We'll either have to cut down or find another place that will be cheaper," he said.

United Way kicks off 1985-86 drive

From Staff Reports

The United Way of Midland begins its 1985-86 Fall Campaign today, marking its 38th year of service here.

The Kick-Off Luncheon was held at 11:45 a.m. today at the Midland Center. The campaign will run through Oct. 24.

The Kick-Off featured results from the summer Pilot Campaign which raised $567,080, or 27 percent of this year's overall goal of $2,120,000.

The organization began as the Community Chest in 1947, and raised $25,000 to serve six agencies — the Midland Youth Center, Good Fellows, the USO, the Girl Scouts, the Boy Scouts, and the Salvation Army.

Over the years, the name changed from the Community Chest to the United Fund, and in the 1970's became the United Way of Midland.

In 1986, the local United Way will serve over 30,000 people in the community. Agencies supported by the United Way now number 16, and as the amount of dollars raised has increased, the needs in the community have grown and changed. Today, meeting community needs means facing the challenges of the '80's, whether it is working with victims of family violence, to serving seniors on a fixed income, or offering a "latch key" program for scouting groups. United Way agencies are working to find solutions for today's problems.

This year, the United Way challenge to raise $2,120,000 is a 7.8 percent increase over the amount raised in 1984. Campaign Chairman Tom Madonna has recruited almost 1,000 volunteers to help in the task, but he also knows the challenge of raising over $2 million will be great. "In order to meet the needs of 16 human service agencies in 1986, we have taken on the task of raising $2,120,000" Madonna stated. "We know that times are tough; they are for us all. But we also know that when times are hard, the needs are greater, and we feel that with the support Midland has always given to the United Way, our goal can and will be reached."

Odessa city manager: $16.5 million needed for capital improvements

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA - City council members Tuesday were told a $16.5 million in capital improvements program will be required over the next three to five years to meet anticipated future growth.

City Manager John Harrison asked Odessa council members to consider calling a bond election sometime between now and April 1986 to provide funds for a development program "based on future population growth estimates, land use trends, and developing traffic patterns, as well as addressing the requirements of providing service to the current-day population."

The proposal presented for council consideration encompasses $10.9 million in public works projects, slightly more than $1.6 million for fire protection and nearly $4 million for parks and recreational improvements.

According to Harrison, if voters approve the program, the expenditures would be made in the fiscal years 1985-86 through 1987-88 and would add only nominally to annual tax bills.

The capital improvements program, he said, "provides for the rehabilitation and improvement of existing public facilities, the preservation of past investments crucial to the infrastructure of the community, as well as desired additions to capital equipment and facilities.

"Such provisions are essential to the orderly and consistent development of the city as a better place to live," Harrison told council members.

Part of the reason a general obligation bond revenue election is being proposed, Harrison said, is because it appears this will be the last year federal revenue sharing funds will be available to such purposes and existing and anticipated tax revenue will be insufficient to meet anticipated needs.

Harrison also suggested council members consider appointing a citizens' group to explore the proposed capital improvements programs and make priority recommendations.

On a motion by council member Melissa Hirsch, the council designated Mayor Pro Tem Vern Foreman to head up the citizen group.

Under the public works section of the proposal, certain streets, mostly main arterials, would be widened and/or reconstructed, needed drainage improvements would be made and the traffic signal network improved and expanded. The program would also provide funds for the annual rebuilding of existing streets.

Improvements in fire protection recommended in the proposal include: land acquisition and the relocation of two fire stations, purchase of a new 100 foot-plus aerial ladder truck and construction of a "burn house" at the fire training grounds.

Abuse suspect may have bond revoked

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A Midland man convicted of child molesting in February and charged in another child-abuse incident allegedly committed in June may have his appeal bond revoked after being charged Friday with aggravated attempted kidnapping.

At the request of the Midland County District Attorney's Office, 142nd District Judge Pat Baskin has set a hearing for 1 p.m. Sept. 18 to determine if 38-year-old Joseph Gallagher should be allowed to remain free on bond.

Gallagher is appealing his Feb. 28 conviction and 13-year sentence for indecency with a child, but according to Assistant District Attorney Tom Morgan, his $10,000 appeal bond can be revoked if the judge decides he is likely to commit another crime.

Gallagher was arrested at his home at 610 W. Cowden Friday after a Thursday incident in which he allegedly tried to handcuff the head administrator of Trinity School.

According to police reports, Gallagher went to the home of Margaret Simmons, 2301 Country Club, about 6 p.m. Thursday and tried to handcuff her and take her down to the police station because he claimed the school owes him $2,400.

Ms. Simmons avoided the handcuffs, ran inside her house, locked the door and called police, but Gallagher had left by the time they arrived, reports said. He was arrested on a warrant the next day, and released on a $60,000 bond.

"I said (to myself) the law isn't going to be able to help me on this, so I might as well go over and confront her," Gallagher told the Reporter-Telegram Tuesday. He said the money was owed him for consultant work he'd done last October for the school at 3500 W. Wadley, and added he had done "nothing improper" at Ms. Simmons' house.

Gallagher works as a security guard for Bill Electronics, reports said. Besides his appeals bond, the former Boy Scout leader, Big Brother volunteer and substitute teacher for Trinity and Lee Freshman schools is also free on a $50,000 bond after being charged with attempted indecency with a child in a June incident involving a 10-year-old boy.

FEES

Logan, using a slide presentation to show municipal golf courses at Odessa, San Angelo, Big Spring, Lubbock and Abilene in comparison with Hogan, said, "I think we do a heck of a job at Midland and the fees are reasonable for the condition of the greens."

But some golfers still objected to the compromise. Don Hunt, 59, said he would retire next year and was too young to get a senior citizens annual card. He estimated it would cost him $2,000 a year to play five days a week at Hogan.

Bob Walker charged that the council had its mind made up about the fees before the committee had been appointed to work on a compromise. "In my case, I won't be able to play at Hogan. I'll have to drive to Stanton and play," he said.

Assistant City Manager Mike McGregor said actual cost per round is $7.50 to $8. Maximum capacity of Hogan Park Golf Course is 118,000 rounds, which means the same number of rounds played in January and February as in June and July and that is not possible due to weather conditions, he said.

Water and landfill rates will be going up Oct. 1, and the late charge will be added to sanitation bills at the same time.

The minimum water charges will go up $1 and the rate for additional water above the 2,000 gallons allowed for the minimum will increase by 25 cents. The new rates, for example, will be $9 for residential customers for the first 2,000 gallons and $1.60 for each additional 1,000 gallons. Apartment complexes will be charged an additional $1 per unit, going up to $6.

Deputy City Manager Fred Poe said the water department budget reflects a deficit of $1,950,000 for 1985-86, but that budget includes putting $2.2 million into a depreciation fund. If the minimum charge were raised by $3 and the additional rate by 15 cents, said Poe, it would wipe out the deficit.

Part of the increase also is designated to pay the city's share of constructing Stacy Dam and Reservoir near Ballinger. Once completed, it will serve as an additional water supply for Midlanders. Councilman David Godfrey suggested the depreciation account be used to pay for putting in the pipeline from Stacy Dam to Midland.

Citizens paying their sanitation bills late will have to pay a 10 percent penalty, and that should generate about $60,000 to $65,000 in additional revenue for that department. The council considered raising the base rate from $6.75 to $7 a month for residents. Poe said that department's budget shows a deficit of $58,000 and the late charge would balance it. If the rates had been raised, it would have brought in about $105,000 in additional revenue, he said.

Using the city landfill also will become more expensive. The charges will be 50 cents per carload, $2-2.40 for a pickup load; and $3.50 a ton for trucks and trailers over 10,000 pounds.

Yellow and white traffic paint was purchased for the traffic department, but traffic engineer Fred McGary had to explain why the department was buying paint every month.

"We must buy thousands of gallons of paint. What do we do with all this paint?" asked Councilman Steve Davidson. "The streets aren't striped. Are people painting their houses with it?"

The last purchase went to paint school crossings, according to McGary. Midland's major thoroughfares should be painted once every two months, he said. And the purchase Tuesday should be enough to cover the city's streets once.

"I talked to a paint salesman who said West Texas is the worst place in the country to paint in, other than the north where you can't paint for all the snow," he said. The department has been testing "thousands of gallons of paint" to find one that will stay visible for more than two months but hasn't found the right mixture yet.

McGary was asked about putting buttons on the streets, and he said those work fine until the street is sealcoated, which covers the buttons. Pulling up the buttons to sealcoat the street doesn't work either, since part of the pavement comes up with the button.

In other action, the council agreed to buy a dump truck and snow plow for $86,428 from Chaparral Trucks in Odessa. This purchase completes the equipment needed for Midland Regional Airport to remove snow and ice from the runways. Total cost of the equipment has run about $300,000 and the Federal Aviation Administration will pick up 90 percent of that cost, according to Poe.

TRADE

The north side of East Indiana is located in the county while the south side is in the city. The street is scheduled to be paved with federal Community Development funds, but the city can't do the work until all the right of way has been dedicated to the city. Commissioners agreed informally to check into the right of way and offered use of its equipment for paving the street.

There was the same cooperation on Elkins Road, which Commissioner C. Wallace Craig said is divided between the city and county.

"We can't maintain anything in the county but the county can do things for the city," said Councilman David Godfrey.

The trade-out "is the way we should approach it. Our hands are tied on coming up with any more money," said Craig.

State Highway Department has asked the council and commissioners to obtain right of way for a drainage channel to be constructed from the intersection of State Highway 158, Fairgrounds Road and Interstate 20 to Midland Draw. City Manager James Brown said drainage is a major problem at that intersection.

The Highway Department is suggesting the 200-foot wide channel follow the contours of the land, which would cross a farmer's tract, while the city is looking at following section lines.

No decision on which route should be used was made at the meeting.

CAPITAL

Parks and recreation capital improvement recommendations include: rehabilitation and improvement of existing parks and recreation facilities, including establishing a South Dixie Sports Complex to accommodate baseball diamonds now located at several parks.

According to Harrison, relocation of baseball and comparable activities in a sports complex would allow the city to make other parks more family oriented.

The parks and recreation segment of the bond proposal also calls for construction of a gymnasium at Sherwood Park on the city's north side and an activity building at Floyd Gwin Park on the city's west side.

Streets that would be widened under the public works proposal include: Clements Street, from South Dixie to Grant Avenue; West 16th Street, from Harless to West County Road; University Boulevard, from Andrews Highway to West County Road; and West 3rd Street, from West County Road to Graham.

Street reconstruction projects proposed include: Dixie Avenue, from East 8th Street to University and from 45th Street to the north city limits.

According to Harrison, part of the fire protection improvements might be subject to re-evaluation, depending on the outcome of negotiations between the city and Ector County concerning fire protection outside the city limits.

County commissioners voted Monday to pay the city only $330,000 for fire protection, rejecting what they considered a request from the city for $650,000.

Harrison said the city had asked the county to increase this year's payment for fire protection, but the $650,000 included if, what he termed a cost study, merely represented estimated cost to the city of providing fire protection outside the city limits.

Concerning suggestions the county might opt to purchase only ambulance service, Harrison said it is difficult to estimate, separately, the cost of ambulance or fire protection service because what the county is really paying for is participation in, what might be termed, a comprehensive public service system.

Personnel, equipment and the communications system are all interlocking, he said, which makes it difficult to separately cost such services.

Harrison expressed the belief that the city and county will be able to successfully negotiate a mutually beneficial agreement. He said, however, he continues to believe Odessa taxpayers should not be expected to fund public services for county residents.

Woman reports theft of pickup

From Staff Reports

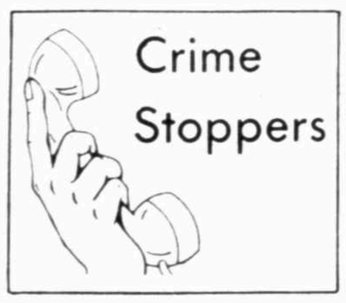

A Midland woman reported the theft of a $10,000 pickup Tuesday, according to police reports. Rebecca Mayfield, Route 4, 121 Brokenhills Road, reported the theft of her 1980 Chevrolet pickup occurred at 3401 West Wall.

In other reports, a dome house at 140 West Country Road and State Highway 349 was burglarized Tuesday, the Sheriff's Office said. Nita Jackson reported missing a $350 television set and a $600 microwave oven from the residence.

Don Blank, 1421 Ainslee, told the Sheriff's Office that radio equipment worth $6,144 was stolen sometime between June and September from a radio tower near FM 7159 and County Road 140, reports said.

On Tuesday, SIE Wireline Products, 7415 E. Highway 80, reported missing since June a $1,755 oscilloscope, and Terry Yocom, Route 10, Box 10344, reported the theft of a $250 cassette player and a $300 television set from his home near county roads 1130 and 57.

Odessan jailed on assault charge

From Staff Reports

ODESSA - A 40-year-old man remained in the Odessa city jail in lieu of $15,000 bond today on a charge of aggravated sexual assault.

Police spokesman Rusty Baker said Walter W. Thomas, 4305 W. 14th St., was arrested by officers at his home about 2 p.m. Tuesday. Thomas was arraigned on the sexual assault charge before Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly, who set bond.

The charge against Thomas involved the alleged assault of a 27-year-old woman in her northwest Odessa home Aug. 27.

The woman told investigating officers a man entered her home about 2:15 a.m., placed a knife to her throat and forced her to perform oral sex on him.

SKIN CANCER
Skin cancer is common among people over the age of 40. Skin cancer usually does not spread to other systems of the body if diagnosed and treated early. Exposure to the sun is a prime factor that promotes skin cancer. It is very important for one to use sun block agents preferably number 15 to screen out the sun's harmful rays and reduce the risk of skin cancer. Prolonged exposure to the sun also causes rough dry scaly areas that are pre cancerous, if these areas are left untreated they may develop into cancer. Any spot that scabs over, scales, bleeds, grows larger, or does not heal within a few weeks may signal a problem. If an existing mole enlarges suddenly, changes color, bleeds or has irregular border can be a sign of transformation to skin cancer. If you have any of these warning signals see your dermatologist at once.

Anti-Communist League holds conference

ADDISON (AP) — Money and power dominated the shop talk around the Registry Hotel as resistance leaders from around the world gathered at the World Anti-Communist League conference.

Those at the meeting Tuesday said they hope to attract financial and political support from the public for their causes.

They also say the conference as a good place to talk shop with their international counterparts.

"Each country has a different way of struggle," said Bee Moua, who belongs to a group aiding Laotian guerrillas. "We hope to share with our friends from other parts of the world and to learn from them."

Representatives of anti-communist movements in Nicaragua, Afghanistan, Angola, Cambodia, Laos, Vietnam, Ethiopia and Mozambique are expected to speak at the five-day conference. About 300 people are expected to attend the conference, organizers say.

"We've come to show the world what they (Soviets) mean when they talk about peace," Afghan rebel Abdul Martin, 20, who recently lost both hands to a Soviet land mine, said through an interpreter.

"We want to develop an awareness of the fact that there are countries whose people have been so abused that they've decided better dead than red. Our primary philosophy is that we're pro-freedom. Our greatest concern is the human misery caused in those countries taken over by communism."

— U.S. Army Maj. Gen. (retired) John Singlaub

The league and its American arm, the U.S. Council of World Freedom, hold the annual conference to promote awareness of what they call the "world communist menace" and raise money for fighters, explained retired U.S. Army Maj. Gen. John Singlaub, chairman of both organizations.

"We want to develop an awareness of the fact that there are countries whose people have been so abused that they've decided better dead than red," Singlaub said.

"Our primary philosophy is that we're pro-freedom," he said. "Our greatest concern is the human misery caused in those countries taken over by communism."

Singlaub retired in 1978 after disagreeing loudly and publicly with President Jimmy Carter's defense and foreign policies.

He recently attracted attention when he said White House national security officials advised him on raising money for resistance movements after Congress stopped CIA aid to Nicaraguan rebels.

During the conference, members will participate in workshops and seek ways to aid resistance movements, Singlaub said Tuesday.

"For example, if a big problem is a lack of understanding in Europe of Nicaragua, the solution might be to sponsor a visit to Europe" of Nicaraguan resistance leaders.

"If the Afghans say their most serious problem is lack of medicine," he said, "the solution might be to ship medicines and even doctors to them."

Several groups have threatened to protest the meeting, including the Dallas chapter of the Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador and the World Affairs Council.

Singlaub dismisses the protests as communist-inspired.

But Linda Hijek, of the El Salvador group, scoffed.

"We have a responsibility to speak for the truth concerning U.S.-supported aggression against Nicaragua," she said.

Officer arrested in burglaries

FORT WORTH (AP) — Police say a decorated veteran officer charged with stealing painkillers from a drug store is a suspect in at least 20 other pharmacy burglaries.

Patrol Sgt. Robert L. Daniels, who was twice nominated for officer of the year and who had been dubbed "Super Trooper" by colleagues for his hard work, was placed on unpaid leave following his arrest Tuesday.

Daniels, 33, was freed on $12,000 bond after being charged with burglary and drug possesion, authorities said. He is a suspect in at least 20 other pharmacy burglaries, they said.

He was arrested at 2:30 a.m. as he allegedly walked out of a pharmacy with a bottle stuffed in his shirt containing 500 painkillers, police said.

Daniels is a 1973 honors graduate of the police academy who has received 22 commendations for his police work in 11 years, said police spokesman Doug Clarke.

Police said Daniels, a bespectacled father of three with a receding hairline, told them he had been addicted to painkillers for several years. They said his family is making arrangements for him to enter a drug treatment program.

"Police are human," said Capt. B.L. Dumas. "None of us in today's society are immune to this to this kind of problem or addiction."

Alleged rapist caught in Dallas

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Police in Dallas have arrested an unemployed Gilbert, Ariz., man sought in the case of the so-called "Camelback rapist," Phoenix police said Tuesday.

The arrest came after police tracked down a caller who had been staying in frequent contact with detectives by phone, Phoenix Police Sgt. Brad Thiss said.

Two Phoenix detectives traveled Tuesday to Dallas to question Timothy J. Curry, 33, about seven sex attacks on women. The attacks were reported since late August on or around Camelback Road in Phoenix, Thiss said.

Officials don't know whether Curry will fight extradition, Thiss said.

Police got Curry's name from three acquaintances who phoned last week, when police received about 200 tips from the public, Thiss said. He said that after those tips came in, a man believed to be Curry has spent quite a bit of time on the phone with Phoenix police.

The man "developed a pretty good relationship with one of our detectives," Thiss said. The calls made the case easier, Thiss said.

The caller talked about the "Camelback rapist" investigation, and he seemed to be trying to establish an alibi, Thiss said.

Once Phoenix police determined the man was phoning from Dallas, they contacted Dallas police, who arrested Curry at a friend's house on a warrant accusing him of the alleged fraudulent use of a bank card taken from a sexual assault victim.

Thiss said Curry has been in prison in Indiana, Kentucky, Texas and Arizona. Curry received a five-year sentence in Maricopa County in 1979 for theft, and was released on parole in March 1984. Thiss said Curry was off of parole by May.

Curry's criminal history has no sex crime convictions, Thiss said.

Commission studying pornography problem

HOUSTON (AP) — Scheduled hearings before the Attorney General's Commission on Pornography are aimed at pinpointing the problems and trying to resolve those problems, the chairman of the commission said.

"Our mission is not censorship. Our mission is really to determine what type of problem pornography presents and make specific recommendations as to how that problem can be cured," Henry Hudson, chairman of the commission, said Tuesday.

Hudson said about 20 witnesses, including two victims from Texas, will appear before the 12-member commission today and Thursday.

U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese III named the commission in May to study the dimensions and effects of pornography and recommend measures, if appropriate, to control its production and distribution.

The commission, which has already held hearings in Washington and Chicago, also will hold hearings in Los Angeles, Miami and New York, Hudson said.

Houston-based country singer stays close to Western roots

By BOB DARDEN

WACO (AP) — Country fans, DJs, program directors, truck drivers, waitresses, cowboys, bankers — just about everybody — knows what to expect when they hear a new Gene Watson song. Watson is country through and through.

You won't see Watson opening for Kenny Rogers, Dolly Parton or John Denver. Through 17 albums and hits like "Love in the Hot Afternoon," "Paper Rosie," "Where Love Begins," "14-Karat Mind," "Farewell Party," "Speak Softly (You're Talking to My Heart)," "What She Don't Know Won't Hurt Her," "You're Out Doin' What I'm Here Doin' Without" and others, he's done nothing but good, solid C&W music.

Watson and his Farewell Party Band are on tour in support of 'Memories to Burn,' his first LP for Epic Records. Fortunately, it contains more of the same — good, old-fashioned Gene Watson music.

"There are a lot of ballads on it again," he said. "I think I more or less have to include several since a lot of people kind of consider me a singer of ballads. Ballads are just sort of like a rock — something you lean back on. Funny thing about the ballads is that I've had several hits with up-tempo songs. I try to steer away from including all slow songs on an album and mix it up some.

"I like to sing stories that are true to life, that a person is apt to go through. It makes me feel good when somebody comes up and says, 'Boy, that song is my life story.' That's what I set out to do."

Having said all of that, there are some differences on 'Memories to Burn.' For one, Watson has added a little more electric piano and clavinet this time around.

"Well, there is some different kinds of stuff on this one," he said, "mainly to give things a little different twist. On songs like 'I Want My Rib Back' and 'Get Along Little Dogie,' I'm trying to steer away from regular country instrumentation. They are both up-tempo songs and maybe they'll hit a broader playlist. I mainly did it to show people that we do have the qualifications to do other types of music. Still, as long as I'm singing the song, it's going to be country."

"I like to sing stories that are true to life, that a person is apt to go through. It makes me feel good when somebody comes up and says, 'Boy, that song is my life story.' That's what I set out to do."

— Gene Watson, C&W singer

It's a point Watson is serious about. The Paris, Texas, native has lived in Houston since 1966 and has always performed in traditional country bands and clubs.

After recording for tiny World-Wide Records, he scored his first hit with Resco Records in 1974, the racy "Love in the Hot Afternoon." From there, he signed with Capitol, then MCA Records for four years, before signing with Epic earlier this year.

"We set our sights on CBS-Epic from the beginning," Watson said. "We wanted it for the long-run, but at the same time, there were some things I wanted in the negotiations before we'd sign. One was that I could produce myself. This way, if the album fails, I can't blame anybody but myself. Plus, I'm sure this way that my music is going to remain true to me and my fans.

"I kicked off my career with traditional country music and I've stayed with it ever since, even when it seemed that everybody else made the turn to pop. Now that other artists are turning to pure country, I think we're getting a whole lot more consideration than ever before.

"My fans are built in. They buy my type of music. Same with the DJs and programming directors. I talk to a lot of PDs and they tell me they don't even have to preview one of my songs before they play it; they just add it because they know it is going to be country."

In addition to producing or co-producing his recent albums, Watson ensures sympathetic backing by using his own Farewell Party Band in the studio. That's something few artists this side of Willie Nelson do any more. ("This band IS my style. It's easier for me to communicate with them in the studio because I know how we communicate on the road.")

"Memories to Burn" has only been out a few weeks, and the first single, "Cold Summer Day in Georgia," is slowly climbing the charts. Epic Record executives still are unsure about what's next. ("Picking hit songs from an album is really like looking into a dark curtain. You just don't know. You take the one you think will do the best, then wait for the feedback on the others.")

"We've thought all along that 'Cold Summer Day in Georgia,' should be the first," he said. "Listening to the feedback from fans, DJs, PDs and writers is kind of steering us toward 'Memories To Burn' for the next 45. That could change if charts open up, though. 'Georgia' is so wishy-washy right now, I don't know how it is going to do. Besides, I'm not much of a chart-watcher.

"Next might be 'I Want My Rib Back.' It is sort of a novelty tune and I don't do many of those. I think it's a hit, though.

World-class chess players call third game a draw

MOSCOW (AP) — Title holder Anatoly Karpov and challenger Garri Kasparov agreed to a draw Tuesday in the third game of the world chess championship.

Karpov, playing black, offered the draw after 20 moves and Kasparov agreed. The challenger had started the game with the Queen's Gambit and the players traded a bishop and a knight before the draw.

The draw leaves Kasparov leading 2-1. He won the first game of the championship and they have now played two draws. A draw counts one half point and a victory one point.

The first player to win six games or score 12½ points in a maximum of 24 games wins the title.

Robot threatens to reprogram reporter

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Step right up and shake claws with the robot, folks! It walks. It talks. It beeps. It blinks.

"Hello, there," Mr. Telebot, a pushy, $65,000 android, said to a startled news reporter.

"You're not saying anything," the 200-pound automaton testily observed. "You will have to be reprogrammed."

Mr. Telebot was one of dozens of state-of-the-art "personal robots" rolling about the International Personal Robot Congress and Exposition during a three-day gathering of robot promoters.

Humiliation buys chance to see 'the Boss' concert

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — What are a pair of Bruce Springsteen concert tickets worth?

Would you eat a Springsteen poster for them? Eat mashed potatoes with your feet? Dive into gelatin?

Well, some people would. And did.

They won tickets in a radio station contest to see how much people would humiliate themselves for a chance to see the Boss.

Kay Thomas of Franklin munched her way through about one-fourth of Springsteen's "Born in the U.S.A." poster to win tickets. "I just hope Bruce knows what I'm going through," she said. "I thought he would taste better than this."

Senate leaders still fighting sanctions

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Senate Republican leaders, facing a united Democratic opposition and GOP defectors, say they probably hold just enough votes to block a drive aimed at defying President Reagan by imposing economic sanctions on South Africa.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, who said today's showdown vote would be close, accused the Democrats of seeking partisan political advantage by forcing approval of the sanctions bill after Reagan on Monday had ordered sanctions of his own against South Africa's white rulers.

"Maybe after a few days of president bashing we can go back to the real world" and consider ways of really influencing the South African government to end the apartheid system of racial separation, Dole said.

"They see it as a political issue and we see it as something the president has accomplished," Dole said of Reagan's apparent change of policy.

Democrats, who said Reagan's list of sanctions was a watered down and less effective version of the congressional measure, said they would vote as one to choke off a filibuster blocking a final vote on the Anti-Apartheid Act of 1985.

On Monday, an initial attempt to win the 60 votes needed to do that failed, 53-34. A dozen senators were absent, six from each party.

Dole supported the anti-apartheid legislation until Monday, when Reagan ended his long opposition to any sanctions by agreeing to implement many sections of the bill on his own, either in whole or in part, while eliminating others.

Now the Kansas Republican wants to set the bill aside, delaying a final vote for several months until the Senate sees how the administration's sanctions work.

Reagan, who says the bill is an intrusion on his responsibility to conduct foreign policy, ha' threatened to veto the measure if it passes.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of thV Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said there are votes to pass the measure in the Senate but that a presidential veto would be sustained.

He said it would be better to shelve the bill and, if the president fails to produce, "the option is to bring the bill off the shelf, probably with a good deal of vigor."

Politically tinged barbs were hurled by both sides in the controversy and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said in one interview, "The Republican Party is at a crossroads. It must decide whether to be the party of Lincoln or the party of apartheid."

Lugar accused Democrats of a "vindictive" bid to embarrass the president by forcing him to veto the sanctions bill.

On Monday, 41 Democrats and 12 Republicans voted to end the Senate filibuster and proceed to a final vote on the measure.

A winning coalition would require the votes of all 47 Senate Democrats plus 13 Republicans.

Lugar helped draft the compromise bill that is pending in the Senate after easily clearing the House. He then lobbied administration officials heavily to persuade Reagan to endorse a package of sanctions on his own.

Once that happened, he agreed to help sidetrack the legislation he had helped write, and joined other GOP leaders in swinging over to support the filibuster.

Reagan announced on Monday he would implement several steps designed to pressure the South Africa government to abandon apartheid.

His sanctions include restrictions on the sale of computer equipment and nuclear technology, and on bank loans to the South African government. In addition, he said he would seek permission under an international trade agreement to ban the importation of Krugerrands into the United States.

Nine countries enact mild trade sanctions

LUXEMBOURG (AP) — Nine of the 10 Common Market countries have agreed to mildly punitive trade, cultural and diplomatic measures against South Africa to protest the white-minority government's racial policies.

Britain stood alone Tuesday in refusing to agree to the measures, saying it wanted more time to assess whether the actions would help force South Africa to abandon apartheid, the system of racial segregation under which 5 million whites rule 24 million blacks.

The British did agreed with the other Common Market members on a call for an end to the state emergency imposed by the South African government, and the release of all political prisoners, including guerrilla leader Nelson Mandela.

Britain's opposition did not prevent the nine other countries from acting against South Africa, but it ruined the Common Market's hope of presenting a united stance.

Malcolm Rifkind, the British delegate, stressed that although his government needed more time to assess the possible impact of the punitive measures, it did not object to the other nations taking the actions.

The talks by the European freign ministers lasted 10 hours — twice as long as scheduled.

Aziz Pahad, a member of Mandela's African National Congress, the main guerrilla group fighting South Africa's white government, said the Common Market had fallen short of the international sanctions needed to force South Africa to end apartheid.

"Obviously, the fact that there was so much wrangling over this is an indication of a failure to come to grips with the real explosive situation that is developing," Pahad said in a telephone interview in Luxembourg.

On Monday, President Reagan announced limited economic sanctions against South Africa that are more severe than the actions taken by the Common Market countries. Financial analysts have said most of the U.S. sanctions will have little practical impact.

All 10 Common Market nations, plus representatives of Portugal and Spain who participated because they are to join the Common Market in January, adopted a statement condemning apartheid.

In addition to an end to the state of emergency imposed in July and release of political prisoners, they demanded "real negotiations with the true representatives of the South African people."

The foreign ministers also agreed, with British support, on "positive measures," such as intensifying contacts with nonwhite groups in South Africa and promoting educational programs for the nonwhite population.

The punitive measures that were adopted include:

— an embargo on arms coming from and going to South Africa.

— an embargo on oil sales to South Africa. There already is no reported oil trade between the Common Market nations and South Africa.

— recall of military envoys from South Africa and refusal to grant accreditation to military envoys from South Africa.

— discouragement of cultural and scientific agreements, except those that contribute to the ending of apartheid or have no role in supporting it.

— a halt of exports of sensitive equipment to the South African armed forces and police.

— a ban on new nuclear cooperation agreements.

"The question of other measures, including sanctions, remains," the foreign ministers said in a statement.

Foreign Minister Jacques Poos of Luxembourg told reporters that the Common Market nations will be watching the situation in South Africa and may meet again to consider stronger measures.

The ministers never discussed imposing full-scale economic sanctions, such as halting all bank loans or severing all trade, according to officials from several delegations.

The Common Market has strong commercial links to South Africa. Last year its exports to that country totaled $5.8 billion and its imports totaled $7 billion, according to Common Market figures.

More than 700 people, most of them blacks, have died in the past year in anti-apartheid violence in South Africa.

Springsteen, Van Zandt set anti-apartheid recording

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bruce Springsteen will join his former E Street band guitartist Steve Van Zandt and at least three dozen other artists in an anti-apartheid record titled "Sun City," due for release in early October.

The record will be distributed by Manhattan Records, with profits turned over to the New York City-based Africa Fund, a non-profit, tax-exempt organization founded in 1966 by the American Committee on Africa.

"Just as many of us sang out on behalf of victims of Africa's famine, we are singing out also for those hungry for freedom," Van Zandt said in a recent statement. Van Zandt wrote "Sun City" after a monthlong tour of South Africa to collect material for an album.

Africa Fund spokesman Paul Irish said Monday in a telephone interview that the organization "is a means for Americans to support the African struggle for freedom and independence."

The performers, collectively titled Artists United Against Apartheid, are an eclectic gathering including Pat Benatar, Miles Davis, Lou Reed, Eddie Kendricks, David Ruffin, Jackson Browne, Kurtis Blow, Jimmy Cliff, Bonnie Raitt, Bobby Womack, Nona Hendryx, Peter Garrett, and Bono Hewson from U2.

The results will be mixed and produced for release in early October, with no firm date set.

Manhattan will put out a seven-inch single and a 12-inch extended play record, which will feature four versions of the song, including the star-studded version, a rap version with Blow and Melle Mel, an instrumental version, and a spoken-word version interspersed with taped speeches from jailed anti-apartheid leader Nelson Mandela and Bishop Desmond Tutu.
