U.S. fighters shoot down Libyan planes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two U.S. F-14 jet fighters shot down a pair of Soviet-built Libyan SU-22 fighter planes over the Mediterranean early today in a one-minute clash about 60 nautical miles off the Libyan coast after an "unprovoked attack" by the Libyans, the Defense Department said.

None of the Americans in the two-man F-14s were hurt, officials said. One Libyan pilot was seen parachuting from his stricken plane.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger told a news conference the attack was clearly over international waters and was unanticipated. Libya, however, considers that its territorial rights extend 200 miles to sea.

Weinberger said the United States planned no retaliation as a result of the attack, but that the naval force to which the planes are assigned would finish its planned exercise Wednesday afternoon on schedule.

The Pentagon announced the 1:20 a.m. EDT incident before dawn and Weinberger appeared at the hastily called news conference later to read the official statement, which said:

"Two U.S. Navy F-14 aircraft involved in a previously announced routine exercise in international air space over international waters in the south central Mediterranean were attacked by two Libyan SU-22 fighter aircraft.

"After being fired upon, the F-14s from the aircraft carrier Nimitz took action in response and shot down both Libyan aircraft."

"The U.S. government is protesting through diplomatic channels this unprovoked attack, which occurred in international air space over 60 nautical miles from the nearest land."

Since the United States and Libya do not have direct diplomatic relations, Weinberger said the U.S. protest was being channeled to the Libyan government through the Belgian government.

The protest declared that, "Any further attacks against U.S. forces operating in international water and airspace will also be resisted with force if necessary."

At the State Department, officials said the administration may seek a meeting of the U.N. Security Council to denounce the Libyan action.

The officials, who asked not to be identified, said council members were informed of the incident this morning through the council president. U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim also was notified.

Sources in Brussels, meanwhile, quoted senior NATO officials as saying the North Atlantic Council, made up of representatives of the 15 alliance nations, will meet at the request of the United States to discuss the incident.

Weinberger praised the performance of the F-14 crews, saying "I think they carried out their mission extremely well."

Air Force Lt. Gen. Philip C. Gast, operations director under the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said the mission of the F-14s was to fly patrol over the fleet, which includes two aircraft carrier battle groups and their escorts. The second carrier is the Forrestal.

Military officials said that such patrols are normal procedure and that one of their purposes, in addition to guarding the fleet, is to warn unwary aircraft from possibly wandering into an area where missile firing exercises are being held.

Weinberger and Gast both said the pilots of the F-14s were acting under rules permitting them to defend themselves.

"If an enemy aircraft conducts a hostile act, the (U.S.) aircraft commander has the right to defend himself," said Gast.

Report recommends tighter protections

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new Treasury Department report praises Secret Service agents for their quick action when a gunman opened fire on President Reagan but is "full of recommendations" on how to prevent such attacks in the future, its author says.

The report, ordered by Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan within days of the March 30 assassination attempt and scheduled for release today, recommends closer cooperation between the agents who protect the president and the White House staff that works with him.

The Treasury department oversees the Secret Service as well as the Bureau of Alcohol, Firearms and Tobacco, which quickly traced the pistol alleged to have been used in the wounding of Reagan, White House press secretary James Brady, a Secret Service agent and a city policeman.

In ordering the investigation, Regan had said "my initial impression is that the department functioned in a very professional and expert manner."

"I think the conclusion of the report would support that," its author, Treasury general counsel Peter Wallison said Tuesday.

However, Wallison said, the report is "full of recommendations" about what might be done better in the future.

In general, he said, the Treasury Department just wants to make sure that "in dealing with the White House" all relevant questions are considered and decided before the president appears.

He said many of them boil down to a single point: "All we want is to be sure we get some sort of regularized procedures so we don't end up doing things on an ad hoc basis.'

Reagan still at work on U.S. economy

By LEE LESCAZE
The Washington Post

LOS ANGELES — President Reagan Tuesday denied that his 1982 budget deficit will be larger than the earlier forecast of $42.5 billion, during a day spent considering how to reconcile two of his most cherished goals: a balanced budget and billions of dollars of new defense spending.

Reagan met with his top national security and budget advisers for more than three hours in what he called a preliminary attempt to identify federal spending cuts necessary in 1983 and 1984 to balance the budget while not retreating from his aim to increase real defense spending by about 7 percent annually.

Few details of the meeting were announced, but the budget picture was confused by seemingly contradictory statements from administration spokesmen.

White House communications director David Gergen told reporters in Washington that "there is an upward creep of perhaps a few billion, but the increase in the (1982) deficit will be less than double-digit."

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes joined Gergen in denying news reports that the deficit has grown by about $20 billion. "I doubt if it will be much in excess of our $42 billion figure," Speakes said.

Speakes insisted that he was not out of step with Gergen's remark about "upward creep." Reagan was even more firm than his spokesmen that the projected deficit will not grow.

"No, we're not changing our ideas about the 1982 deficit at all," he told reporters who were admitted for a few minutes to the meeting room on the penthouse floor of the Century Plaza Hotel.

In its effort to reshape the budget, the administration is being pulled in two directions. Some senior administration officials want to maintain pressure for more budget cuts by spreading word that the deficit is growing.

The price to be paid for creating such a climate, however, is that interest rates remain high in anticipation that the federal government will need to borrow more money. High interest rates keep the bond market flat and cripple important sectors of the economy, such as the housing industry.

Although some senior administration officials had been willing to pay this price to achieve more deep cuts, their first priority, Reagan's remarks Tuesday appear to mean that the administration will take whatever measures are necessary, including vetos of appropriations bills, not to exceed the $42.5 billion deficit figure.

Asked how he would find the money to pay for his promised defense increases while balancing the budget, Reagan said:

"Well, we sure can't go to Brazil." It was unclear what he meant.

As Speakes described Tuesday's meeting, Office of Management and Budget Director David A. Stockman made an initial presentation with charts and graphs indicating options for saving money in defense programs. Stockman spoke for about an hour.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, White House counselor Edwin Meese III and White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III then participated with the president in a general discussion of long-range budget planning.

"There can't be any hot news for you. These are just preliminary discussions," Reagan told reporters.

Speakes said the meeting reflected the president's determination to have a "strong national defense built on fiscal soundness." He said no consideration was given to abandoning the goal of a balanced budget in 1984.

The 1981 budget inherited by Reagan will produce a deficit estimated at $55.6 billion. The $42.5 billion deficit forecast for 1982 is down $2.5 billion from the March forecast because of an increase in estimated receipts resulting from congressional changes in the recently enacted tax bill.

Tuesday's budget session was during Reagan's second and last day of meetings with top advisers this week.

He plans to underline his commitment to a strong defense Thursday by visiting the nuclear carrier USS Constellation at sea about 65 miles off the California coast.

Reagan is to return to his ranch in the mountains north of Santa Barbara to resume his vacation over the weekend.

Autopsy ordered on body found at construction site

An autopsy has been ordered in the death of a Lubbock man whose badly decomposed body was discovered late Tuesday afternoon in the back seat of a parked car at the Claydesta Plaza construction site, Wadley Avenue and North Big Spring Street.

Police estimate that 30-year-old Marvin Edward Lea, an employee of Blackhawk Electric of Midland, had been dead approximately two weeks when his body was discovered by construction workers about 5:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Officers said Lea apparently had been living in the 1966 Pontiac Bonneville. It appeared he fell asleep on several pairs of pants that had been rolled up and used as a pillow. His body was found in a semi-fetal position.

Witnesses said the car had been parked in the rear portion of the site about two weeks. Family members said he had not been ill and a girlfriend in Levelland told officers she last saw him about two weeks ago.

Justice of Peace Charlie Sprayberry ordered an autposy and Lea's body was taken to the Thomas Funeral Home, where arrangements are pending.

20-year-old Odessa woman reports apparent kidnapping

Odessa police are expected to handle an apparent kidnapping case involving a young woman who told Midland officers she was abducted at gunpoint in Odessa and driven to Midland late Tuesday night.

The 20-year-old Odessa woman said she was approached by two men at the Pizza Hut Restaurant at 42nd Street and Grandview Avenue about 11:30 p.m. The men told her their car had broken down and asked for a ride to a friend's Odessa apartment.

When she pulled up in front of an apartment complex at 52nd and Grandview, one of the men pulled a gun and ordered her to the floorboard of her 1981 pickup truck, face down. After taking $8 in cash and several credit cards from her purse, the men drove her to a house under construction at 3701 N. Anetta in Midland, where they forced her to disrobe and tied her up with her clothes.

The men then left. A passerby heard her calls for help about 2 a.m. today, took her to his motel room and Midland police were called.

Odessa police said this morning they were waiting for the woman to contact them before they conducted an investigation.

'Gentlemen Prefer Blondes' writer dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Anita Loos, the tiny dynamo who wrote witty lines for stage and film stars ranging from Mary Pickford to Marilyn Monroe and convinced a nation that "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," is dead at age 88.

Miss Loos, who was born and remained a brunette, died Tuesday at Doctors Hospital, which she entered Monday night. The cause of death was not immediately known. One friend, Michael O'Shea, said Miss Loos's sight and hearing had been failing.

She wrote the popular 'Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" in 1925, a novel about a dumb blonde named Lorelei Lee. It became a hit play and movie. Then she coined anoher phrase when she wrote the book "But Gentlemen Marry Brunettes."

So successful was "Gentlemen Prefer Bondes" it obscured in the public mind a long career ranging from early scenarios for silent films through numerous movie scripts and Broadway hits to witty novels and Hollywood memoirs, including "A Mouse is Born," "No Mother to Guide Here" and "Kiss Hollywood Goodbye."

Her last book, "The Talmadge Girls," published in 1978, was based on her career from 1916 to 1925 as a screenwriter for silent screen stars Norma and Constance Talmadge.

It was, in fact, Miss Loos who thought up the idea of adding printed captains to the scene in silent movies, and she wrote the first subtitles for "Macbeth" in 1916. The same year she wrote the subtitles for the classic D.W. Griffith spectacle "Intolerance"

Many of those Miss Loos met along the way from Hollywod to Broadway, such as Helen Hayes, Lillian Gish and Carol Channing, remained her friends in later life.

On Thursday she was to have appeared at the Grand Central Art Gallery, where an exhibition of memorabilia and photographs entitled "Anita Loos and Friends" was to open and run through September. It will open as planned as a memorial.

Miss Loos once said she wrote "Genlemen Prefer Blondes"on a long train ride between coasts, and meant it as a spoof of a romance between the satirist H.L. Mencken and a beautiful but-dumb blone.

"I had no thought of its ever being printed," she said. "My only purpose was to make Henry Mencken laugh, which it did."

Miss Loos' husband died in 1954 after a long illness. She is survived by a niece, Mary Anita Loos.

Funeral arrangements have not been announced.

Longview representative misses grand jury date

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Longview Rep. Mike Martin, the shooting victim reluctant to talk to investigtors, has missed his second date with grand jurors looking into the case.

"It's obvious there is a problem. I have no earthly idea what it is," said Les Sith, Martin's former spokesman who testified bfore the grand jury Tuesay.

Smith and other Martin associates who testified say they don't believe Martin's story about beng shot by a hooded gunman from an ocult group known as the "Guardian Angels of the Underworld."

Martin, a 29-year-old Republican, was hit in the arm by shotgun fire on Jul 31 outside his recreational vehicle here. At first he said he did not know who shot him or why. Now he maintains he was shot by a gunman for the occult group

Martin, Smith, leislative aide Les Roebe, Gregg County GOP Chairman Wayne House and political adviser Jim Beasey were subpoenaed for Tuesday's grand jury session. Martin could not e found to be served wth the subpoena. The other four testified durig a session that lasted more than three hours. They also took lie detector exams here Monday night.

It was Martin's second missed date wih grand jurors. He was served with a subpoena for last Tuesday, but did not show up. Assistant Travis County District Attorney Allen Hill said prosecutors are faced with several choices.

On option would be to subpoena Martin again.

"If the degree of cooperation continues as it has been, it may well be a futile thing" to issue another subpoena, Hill said

Another choice would be to issue a "writ of attachment" based on the subpoena Martin did get. Failure to show up could lead to a contemt citation, Hill said.

A third option would be to forget about te case because the victim is not cooperating. However, Hill said the grand jurors want answers.

Gregg County Sheriff Bobby Weaer said he has given up trying to find Martin on Tuesday to serve the subpoena. Smith said he last heard from Martin on Monday, andnow does not know where he is.

After testifying for about 90 minutes, Smith told reporters he believes Martin is involved in "an attempt to prevent something from being discovered."

"I was continuing to get the same story over and over in the face of obvious disbelief from many people," said Smith, the first person Martin called after the shooting.

Smith said he initially believed the occult story because "it was the most coherent story I heard since the actual shootig."

His confidence faded and late last week he decided he could no longer act as Martin's spokesman.

"We (Beasley and Smith) felt like we were being perhap being used ...for whatever reason we didn't know," he said.

Smith said he still does not know much about the motive for the shooting.

"It's a problem of enough magnitude that would cause him to react this way," he said.

MENTAL HEALTH UPDATE

Some mental problems plague families, may be 'environmental'

By KENNETH H. WOLF, MSSW, SP

QUESTION: Is there now enough known about mental health problems to tell if the main causes are biological or environmental?

ANSWER: There is not enough known about the causes of mental health problems to make any kind of blanket statement of this sort. We do know that certain kinds of problems may occur in different generations of the same family.

There is a great deal of evidence to suggest that biological or genetic factors may be involved in this kind of phenomenon. However, strong evidence also exists that people learn methods of problem solving and mal-adaption from their families, so that what may appear to be a biological factor in mental health problems may be learned behavior patterns.

In certain problems, there are probably both biological and environmental causes. There may be an inherent "weakness" which is biological or genetic in nature, which is then triggered into a full-blown problem by the stress of life.

In other kinds of problems, environmental factors seem to be much more likely causes than anything biological or genetic. Most kinds of marital discord, for example, are based in the relationship and not in individual biology or genetics.

Regardless of the specific cause of causes of a mental health problem, the treatment may be based in biology, psychology, sociology or in some combination of these elements. The fact that there have been great advances in the development of psychoactive medications (tranquilizers) in the past 25 years does not mean that the mental health problems which they treat are necessarily biological in nature. What it does mean is that there are several ways of attempting to treat a given problem, regardless of its cause.

A key point to remember is that most mental health problems have multiple factors which have played a role in intially causing the problem and in maintaining the problem once it has started. Identifying the specific cause or causes of problems is less important in treatment than in doing something to break the cycle of the symptom patterns. Once this symptom cycle can be broken or disrupted in some way, hope generally returns to the client and his own natural healing processes stand a better chance of taking over to complete the recovery process. Many mental health problems may never have a specific cause identified, but successful treatment can and is being undertaken nevertheless.

QUESTION: I have heard two opposite opinions on when it is best to begin treatment of the alcohol abuser. One says that the alcoholic has to hit bottom before treatment will do any good. The other says that treatment should be started as soon as possible. Which is the best way to go?

ANSWER: Treatment for any problem, including alcoholism, should be begun as soon as possible. There are some approaches to the early-stage alcoholic which have shown some success in getting him to recognize his problem and accept help.

In treating the alcoholic, his denial that he has a problem is usually the greatest stumbling block to treatment. This is why it often happens that the alcoholic does in fact "hit bottom" before he will accept treatment. Early treatment of alcoholism may prevent the irreversible damage which has often occurred by the time the alcoholic "hits bottom."

Skywalk collapse remains a mystery

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Moaning victims still lay trapped under tons of blood-stained debris when the question was born: what caused two skywalks at the posh Hyatt Regency Hotel to crash suddenly onto a crowded dance floor?

In the month since the walkway collapsed killing 111 people and injuring 188 others, more than a half-dozen theories have emerged about why all that steel and concrete came crashing down.

Witnesses said hundreds of people were dancing on the walkways, swaying in time to a Duke Ellington tune. Engineers have suggested key washers might have been missing or certain welds were inadequate.

Sixty-two lawsuits already have been filed in the case, asking $1.6 billion in damages and the list grows daily. The disaster, the worst in Kansas City's history, remains under intense investigation.

But some engineers contend there may never be a single explanation for the July 17 accident. Instead there may be only the different opinions of experts hired by the owners, managers, builders, architects and the lawyers for the victims.

What is known is the fourth-floor walkway, 45 feet above the lobby floor, pulled away from six vertical 1¼-inch rods anchored to beams in the ceiling. The walkway crashed onto the second-floor walkway, and both crashed in a cascade of concrete and steel on hundreds of people attending a popular Friday night tea dance. Of the injured, 36 still were in hospitals Tuesday.

These are some of the opinions advanced by witnesses and engineers who have viewed the debris and photographs of the wreckage:

—Dancing on the walkways: On the night of the accident, witnesses said as many as 300 people were dancing on the walkway. Structural engineers said the spans were designed for walking, not dancing.

—Harmonic vibration: Those at the scene said dancers were swaying to "Satin Doll" and other musical favorites of the 1940s and 1950s. Some speculated the swaying might have triggered a phenomenon known as "harmonic vibration," in which normally stable structures can be toppled by a swaying motion.

—Change in design: The Kansas City Star reported July 21 that a key design change had been made, doubling the stress on critical box beams connecting the four 30-foot sections of each walkway. Originally, six rods were run from the ceiling, through the box beams in the fourth-floor walkway to the box beam of the second-floor walkway, the newspaper reported. But the design was changed so six rods ran from the ceiling to the fourth-floor walkway and six others ran from the fourth to the second-floor walkway, the paper said. A structural engineer hired by the Star, Wayne Lischka of Prairie Village, Kan., said the added stress may have contributed to the fourth-floor walkway tearing away from the support rods.

—Long-span design: William Marshall Jr., chairman of a American Institute of Architects study on long-span structures, said such spans lack the built-in support of conventional spans, which often are braced by columns, partitions or walls. Long-span structures involve unsupported beams 100 feet or longer. Marshall said the spans normally are safe and reliable but added "this lack of redundancy (added support) is what concerns us." The AIA long-span study was completed before the Hyatt disaster.

—Redundancy: Bogdan O. Kuzmanovic, a civil engneering professor hired by The Kansas City Times, called the walkways "time bombs." He said the skywalks lacked adequate redundancy, or safeguards, but refrained from citing a specific cause for the collapse.

—Washers: Engineers hired by a law firm representing some plaintiffs in Hyatt lawsuits said washers were missing from two of the six rods running from the ceiling to the fourth-floor walkway. The engineers said the box beams may have failed when nuts on the rods pressed against the welded seams of the beams, splitting them and starting the fatal chain of events. The firm's study was conducted by Lee Lowery Jr., professor of structural engneering at Texas A&M University, and Rex Paulsen, an engineer from Denver.

—Anchors changed: Rollin Hammer, an inspector for the H.R.Inspection Service, a private firm hired for the Hyatt project, said six three-quarter-inch bolts were substituted for steel weld plates to anchor the walkways in the hotel walls. Kuzmanovic said using such a method to secure the walkway to the wall didn't provide the continuous contact that steel weld plates would have provided.

—Welding: The most recent theory to surface is that welded seams on some of the steel beams connecting the sections of walkways were too shallow to meet construction requirements. Lischka criticized the depth and quality of the welds in Sunday's Star after viewing photographs of the damaged sections. "The tearing is so clean that it is obvious that a proper full-penetration welds did not exit. The weld did not penetrate the entire thickness of the material." The Times reported Aug. 2 that city inspectors spent an average 8½ minutes a week checking the foundation, structure, concrete and steel in the 40-story, $50 million hotel that opened in July 1980.

A rescue worker looks over crushed cars and trucks Tuesday in north Houston after a section of the Continental Bank Parking Garage collapsed. No one was injured in the cave in although the garage collapsed during business hours.

Warmer weather expected

With no mention of rain in the forecast, Midlanders should be seeing warmer and drier afternoons through Thursday.

According to the National Weather Service the low tonight will be in the middle 60s and the high Thursday in the upper 80s.

It should remain partly cloudy with light and variable winds through Thursday.

Tuesday's high of 83 missed the record high for that date of 102 degrees, set in 1970, by almost 20 degrees while Tuesday's low of 63 was only three degrees off the record low temperature set in 1950.

Heavy thunderstorms were reported early today over portions of South Texas and along the middle section of the gulf coast.

Forecasts called for thundershowers in eastern and southern section of the state today with locally heavy rain possible in South Central Texas. Widely scattered thunderstorms were forecast for the mountains of Southwest Texas.

Parking garage collapses on cars, no one injured

By KATHY BAKER

HOUSTON (AP) — Crews searched through the rubble of a collapsed parking garage for more than eight hours before declaring with relief that, although several cars were crushed flat, no one was in the way when the floors gave out.

A 30-by-60-foot midsection of the top level of the three-story structure caved in Tuesday afternoon, smashing and collapsing parts of the second level, officials said.

Several cars were crushed "flatter than a pancake," said Fire Department spokesman Andy Tucker.

Cranes and other pieces of heavy equipment were brought to the building north of Houston, and, by late Tuesday, authorities said they had searched the last car and there were no injuries.

"There was no forewarning at all," said Ron Cate, an Amoco Oil Co. employee who had just parked his truck on the ground level of the garage when the building began to cave in.

"I just heard this tremendous loud blast all at once," Cates said. "Then I saw these cars sandwiched on top of one another. I saw some people in front of me, and I started running."

Randall Parish, vice president of Friendswood Development Co., which owns the garage, said the building was pre-fabricated and built in 1978. He said representatives of the contractor, MacGregor Construction Co. of Houston, were on the scene helping secure the rest of the structure and trying to find out what caused the cave-in.

"It sounded like a big jet plane going by. By the time we looked out, it was clear gone," said John King, an oil company vice president whose office overlooks the garage. Several seconds after the collapse, he saw a man drive a silver sedan to within feet of the hole left by the collapse.

"He parked his car, got out and looked into the hole. Then he just walked away," King said.

MC approves new budget

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The Midland College Board of Trustees approved a budget of $6,934,782 for fiscal year 1981-82 in their regular meeting Tuesday.

The budget had been revised from the previous meeting where it was originally estimated before the actual tax figures had been calculated.

Dr. Jess H. Parrish, president of MC, told the board, "We feel much more comfortable with these revised figures."

According to Parrish, an increase of some $43,000 for part-time salaries is very important. Parrish said that, with the number of qualified auxiliary faculty employed it was very important to keep them and their high standards at the college.

The board also approved the 1981-82 ad valorem tax rate of 10.3 cents for every $100 valuation, reflecting less than a 3 percent increase over last year.

The tax rate will be divided allowing 7.2 cents for maintenance and operation and 3.1 cents for debt service.

Approval of a salary increase was brought up again after the board had been found in apparent violation of the open meetings law in an earlier meeting. The across-the-board pay hike of 17 percent had been illegally deliberated in a closed meeting and only the results had been announced publicly. The open meetings law says any deliberations affecting a group of individuals must be discussed publicly.

The increase raises each faculty member's salary by $2,592 with bonuses of $50-$200 for each year of experience up to a maximum of 10 years.

Board members also approved a motion to continue their $3,080-a-year contract with the Human Relations Council. According to Kim Modisett, executive director of the HRC, the council has been soliciting private funds and has recovered half of the $21,000 lost when they lost their contract with Midland Independent School District during an expense cutback earlier this summer. Ms. Modisett told the board that despite the loss she feels the council can continue to provide service for Midland.

In other action, the board approved faculty resignations and recommendations, a renewed contract with Ogden Food Service Corporation, the tax office error and correction lists and vouchers, and financial statements for the months of June and July, 1981.

Economy fell further than reported

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy fell further than was first thought during the April-June quarter, declining at an annual rate of 2.4 percent after racing ahead at a rate of 8.6 percent in the first quarter, the government reported today.

The drop in inflation-adjusted gross national product had been estimated at 1.9 percent in the Commerce Department's original report one month ago.

The department's new report said corporate profits also dropped sharply in the second quarter as the overall economy weakened.

Before-tax profits fell 12.5 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $224.9 billion and after-tax profits dropped 11.3 percent to a rate of $150.1 billion in the quarter. Both rose 3 percent in the January-March period, the report said.

Corporate profits from current production — a category which does not include inventory profits — declined 7.9 percent to an annual rate of $187 billion in the second quarter after rising 10.7 percent in the first three months of the year.

As the Commerce Department reported one month ago, major reasons for the GNP decline were a decrease in inflation-adjusted final sales by American businesses and a big drop in net exports, a category that had helped push GNP upward in the first quarter.

A number of economists are predicting that inflation-adjusted GNP will also be down in the current July-September quarter, thus fulfilling one commonly accepted definition of an economic recession — two consecutive quarters of negative GNP.

Murray Weidenbaum, chairman of President Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers, said recently that the nation may indeed be in its second recession in two years.

But neither he nor any private economist of note is forecasting a severe downturn this year. Most of them describe the economy as sluggish or soft rather than falling apart.

Today's report also showed inflation — as measured by the broadly based GNP price deflator — rising at an annual rate of 6.6 percent in the second quarter, up from the 6 percent first reported but still well below the 9.8 percent of the January-March period.

The economy has been giving mixed signals recently, as shown by Commerce Department reports Tuesday which indicated Americans' personal income rose at the fastest pace in a year in July and that even the badly slumping housing industry recovered a bit in that month.

The department reported that rising employment and cost-of-living increases for Social Security recipients helped push personal income up 1.6 percent last month, the largest gain since it rose 1.6 percent in July 1980.

Even without the Social Security increase, the gain would have been just under 0.9 percent, compared with 0.7 percent for June and 0.6 percent in both April and May, according to the report.

Commerce Department economist Ago Ambre said the income rise, which was coupled with a 1.2 percent increase in personal spending in July, was "the best news on the personal income front we've had so far this year."

The department also reported Tuesday that starts in the troubled housing industry rose 3.3 percent to an annual rate of 1.06 million in July after falling more than 10 percent in both of the previous two months.

Analysts added, however, that permits for future construction fell in July for the third straight month, declining 4 percent and giving strong indication that the housing slump has not hit bottom.

Several industry spokesmen said that with interest rates remaining at or near record levels, construction and sales this year could be below 1980 and perhaps even worse than the severe housing recession of 1975.

Housing generally makes up only a small percentage of the gross national product, but it has major "ripple effects" on other parts of the economy such as manufacturing of home furnishings and appliances.

Sandra Shaber, a senior economist with the private forecasting firm of Chase Econometrics in Bala Cynwyd, Pa., said Chase is predicting a slight decline in the inflation-adjusted gross national product in the July-September quarter despite the gains in income and spending.

Changes in consumer spending "have dragged the economy up and down" in recent cycles, she said.

This year, however, relatively strong spending seems to be serving instead as "the floor under the economy," keeping it from falling as far and as fast as it did last year, she added.

Contributing to Chase's forecast of a GNP decline in the third quarter — following a 1.9 percent annual rate decline in the second — are a weakening export performance, slower non-defense government spending and weak business investment, she said.

Ambre said that investment has not been strong and that the nation's trade balance is suffering because of the recently stronger dollar.

He added that President Reagan's tax cuts, including substantial help for business, could aid the investment picture before the end of the year.

"Nobody really has a handle on the savings pool that will be generated from the act, but I think it will be huge," Ambre said. He added that a significant amount of that new savings "will be deployed in business."

Members of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Union hold a demonstration near the White House Tuesday in support of their walk-out against the Federal Aviation Administration.

Offers to mediate gain little notice from Reagan

By WILLIAM J. EATON and MARLENE CIMONS
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Three former secretaries of labor appointed by Republican presidents have offered to act as special mediators in the air controllers' strike but the Reagan administration has shown little interest in the idea so far, the Los Angeles Times learned Tuesday.

The disclosure of their proposal came as the Federal Aviation Administration said it had now shut down 29 airport towers to shift controllers to busier air fields where they are needed because of the strike.

At the same time, the Department of Transportation launched independent studies of air safety and controllers' working conditions as part of its effort to reassure the public and to rebuild the air traffic system. The National Transportation Safety Board also will conduct an investigation of air safety.

Meanwhile, minor delays continued on some international flights to and from Spain and Portugal because of the Portuguese controllers' sympathy shutdown of a key base in the Azores.

The three former secretaries of labor who offered to serve on a special panel in the dispute between the government and 12,000 striking members of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Association were John T. Dunlop, James D. Hodgson and W. Usery Jr.

Dunlop and Usery served in the Ford administration and Hodgson in the Nixon administration.

"We offered to mediate, or make recommendations for a settlement," Usery said in an interview. "That's certainly what is needed. Both sides misread the other and they keep digging a ditch that gets deeper and deeper."

President Reagan has said that the PATCO members quit their jobs when they struck on Aug. 3 in defiance of the law and a no-strike oath they took as federal employees. He has ruled out amnesty in the dispute, ordering the dismissal of 12,000 controllers.

The administration broke off negotiations with the union when the strike started. It has said it will reduce airline operations by 25 percent below normal for at least seven months and train thousands of replacements for the controllers.

Usery said that the strikers could be penalized and the dispute resolved without the loss of millions of dollars in airline revenue, if veteran specialists in labor-management troubleshooting intervened.

"We even pardon people with a criminal conviction, or impose a suspended sentence, or probation," Usery said. "The first question is, does the government want to be conciliatory?"

So far, Usery said, their talks with the Reagan White House and Department of Transportation officials have produced no results.

Dunlop, a labor-management middleman who has been involved in national labor disputes for more than 40 years, is a Harvard university professor. Hodgson, who was director of industrial relations at Lockheed Corp., is now retired.

Secretary of Transportation Drew Lewis, who has said he would rather shrink the air traffic system rather than rehire the strikers, announced a special study into air safety by the Flight Safety Foundation, a non-profit organization with headquarters in Arlington, Va.

Lewis said that the study was ordered to "make the public more comfortable" and reassure overseas air traffic controllers on the reliability of the U.S. system. It will cost $186,000 plus expenses and take four months, he said.

"We want a tough, hard critical report," Lewis told reporters. "We're not sure what the problem is — but we're prepared to address it." At another point, he said: "We are convinced the airways are safe."

In another action, Lewis announced that an independent task force would study on-the-job issues involving controllers now at work, including job requirements, retirement and other personnel policies.

The task force will consist of Lawrence M. Jones, president of the Coleman Co., Inc., of Wichita, Kan., David G. Bowers, program director of the Institute for Social Research at the University of Michigan, and Stephen H. Fuller, vice president for personnel administration and development at General Motors.

It will submit a report within five months, Lewis said.

Robert Poli, president of the striking union, termed the appointment of the task force a "belated reaction to what PATCO has been saying for years .... It took another disaster for them to act; thankfully, not a mid-air collision, but the destruction of the air traffic control system."

Pilots say skies as safe — if not safer

By PAUL VITELLO
Newsday

Airline pilots around the country say that the nation's airways are as safe as they have ever been — if not safer — largely because of the substantial reduction of air traffic during the 17-day strike by air traffic controllers.

Many of the 47 pilots surveyed by Newsday said, however, that they would be concerned about safety if the Federal Aviation Administration allowed air carriers to put more planes in the air while the strike by 12,000 union air traffic controllers continues. (The Reagan administration contends that the strike is over, and is now working to slowly rebuild the system by replacing those controllers who were fired two days after the strike began.)

The poll reached a fraction of the nation's 40,000 airline pilots and was not scientific. But the pilots' responses generally reflected the views of Air Line Pilots Association officials, who said Tuesday that, with reduced traffic, the airways are safe.

"The controllers are being overcautious, and I like it," said Charles Dobrescu of Glen Cove, N.Y., a Trans World Airlines pilot with 30 years of piloting experience. "It is probably the safest environment I have ever flown in."

The major airlines have been operating between 65 percent and 75 percent of their normally scheduled flights since the beginning of the strike — or about 10,000 daily flights, compared with the normal 14,000. The substitute force of 6,500 supervisors and non-striking controllers represents about one-third of normal staffing.

Without exception, the pilots contacted said that with operations at 75 percent of normal, air traffic could continue indefinitely to move safely under the guidance of the controllers who have been working since the strike began Aug. 3.

Of the 47 pilots, 19 said that increasing the number of aircraft in the sky might compromise safety, if the number of controllers did not increase proportionately. Another 10 said they were not sure what the safety implications would be, but said that increased traffic would cause more delays.

"It's analogous to an expressway that can carry 10,000 cars an hour without any problems. If you put 15,000 cars on that expressway, it bottles up on you," said John Eckert of McHenry, Ill., a Delta Air Lines co-pilot. "But at the present levels, we're getting better service, better treatment than ever."

All but five of the pilots surveyed agreed to talk on the record. The others said they would not do so because their employers frowned on them speaking to the media on any subject related to airline business.

The key to the pilots' sense of safety, many said, was separation — the distance controllers have been maintaining between aircraft. Normally, there are from 5 to 15 miles separating planes as they arrive and depart from major airports. During the strike, the pilots said, the substitute controllers have been maintaining the distance at between 20 and 50 miles.

"Things are quite nice," said Bruce Haedrich of Elliot, Maine, a Delta pilot. "The controllers are keeping traffic well separated." He said air traffic now, compared with pre-strike conditions "is like the difference between driving down the highway in Maine, and driving down the highway in Boston."

"The controllers are being overcautious, and I like it. It is probably the safest environment I have ever flown in."

Air quality in need of controls

By SCOTT M. BUSHNELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — The blame for poor air quality in many parts of the country lies at the feet of government, not industry, argues a Yale law professor in a new book.

Bruce A. Ackerman, who wrote "Clean Coal, Dirty Air" with one of his students, William T. Hassler, believes Congress and the Environmental Protection Agency have handled the problem of air pollution ineptly. The book focuses on the creation and enforcement of the Clean Air Act as it applies to emissions from the burning of coal.

"Congress's well-intentioned effort to improve the administrative process has driven EPA to an extraordinary decision that will cost the public tens of billions of dollars to achieve environmental goals that could be reached more cheaply, more quickly and more surely by other means," Ackerman said in a recent interview in his office at the Yale Law School.

"This is the way it ought to be done: Congress should set goals in terms of what it wants. That is, a healthier environment should extend the life of 25,000 or 50,000 people or whatever for one year.

"The second step should be for EPA to determine how to achieve those goals — what sort of things you can control, and set goals for industry. And then leave it to industry to find the best way to meet those goals."

Ackerman maintains that if industry were allowed to burn coal that gave off "x" amount of sulfur oxides and were sufficiently taxed on the amount over that figure, industry would find a way to remove the pollutants at a cost less than the tax.

"But the present system doesn't do that," Ackerman said. "Congress instead chose to go for the 'pie-in-the-sky' of wanting clean air, instead of stating operational goals. The law lacks real human values."

Congress tried to "force" the issue of clean air by removing it from the discretion of the agency and setting a particular policy. But in doing so, Congress and the EPA became fixated "with the scrubber as a symbol of technological salvation," the Yale professor said.

Ackerman argues in his book that by determining that scrubbers were the best method of emission reduction, the government overlooked "the enormous quantity of sludge" they generate and introduced a costly process it was not technically capable of evaluating.

Ackerman believes the nation could achieve the same clean-air goals at about half the current cost.

"An effluent tax is the mechanism to force industry to clean up its emissions," said the 37-year-old native of New York City, explaining that business will naturally find the cheapest way to do things.

("Clean Coal, Dirty Air" is published by Yale University Press.)

Jogging: The harm may outweigh the health

By SANDY ROVNER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Little by little, tentatively and with some considerable care — because there are a lot of them out there — the case is being developed.

I want to say up front, that I haven't anything personal against them.

Why, some of my best friends... Of course, I'm not at all sure I'd want my daughter to marry one, or become one herself, but I suppose joggers do have a right to do their thing, however inelegant....

What's becoming more evident, though, is that jogging may not be the health panacea its afficionados proclaim.

Certainly exercise is important and study after study has suggested that exercise is an element in a long and healthy life.

Nevertheless, it is not the only element and possibly not even the most important element. That one is, most specialists believe today, having forbears who lived long and healthy lives — good genetic coding, in other words. And although exercise does seem to lower the risk of a heart attack, it doesn't do it as well as either eliminating smoking or controlling high blood pressure. (And high blood pressure can be somewhat lowered by exercise.)

But not only is jogging not the only form of exercise, it may not be the best for many people.

Moreoever, the way some people do it, it is rife with dangers of its own.

There have been a few warnings, but they are half-hearted, at best. (Who wants to take on 30 million joggers?) But even the sports specialists devoted to running concede that the injury rate (practically everybody, soone or later) is not acceptable.

Most of the problem stems from all that weight being thrust upon a poor foot that really ought to be one of four, rather than one of two.

A lot of the problem stems from misconceptions about running. About how, when, how much and how fast to run. About whether to compete. About how much good it will do you.

Bill Burlison, a former congressman from Missouri and now a Washington lawyer, is a dedicated athlete and inveterate jogger. But three years ago he passed out in the middle of a competitive (foot) race and for some hours was believed to have suffered a heart attack. In fact it was a heat stroke.

He recalled recently that "I was preparing for a 10,000-meter race and went out the day before and did the distance (6.2 miles) fine. The temperature was only about 60 or 70 degrees. I had never trained for distance running.

"The race the next day was in the afternoon and the heat was about 87. And for the first time in my life I passed out in an athletic contest. I was unconscious for about four hours with a temperature of 107."

Burlison was fine in a day or so and went on to win his congressional campaign that year, if not his race. (He lost his seat in 1980, but is still running in foot races. He'll compete in the Marine Corps Marathon this year, he says.)

What Burlison's case points up is this: Running increases susceptibility to changes in weather, hot or cold. Even training for hot or cold weather running will not guarantee a lack of trouble.

Should women run?

Some gynecologists have suggested that it doesn't do to joggle around the female organs the way they get jogged by jogging.

On the other hand, some women jog right through pregnancy with no apparent ill effects to mother or child.

Should people with known heart conditions run?

There have been a number of studies in which heart patients participate in running programs. At the George Washington University Medical Center, Dr. Pat Gorman headed one such study along with a number of other medical centers in the U.S. The results did not clearly demonstrate reduced mortality among the endurance exercisers, but "we still take the position that the exercise habit is healthful... and jogging is as good as any... done in moderation." He noted that the one study (in Finland) which did show reduced mortality among exercisers dealt with a so-called multiple intervention group which also was given antismoking training, nutrition information and methods for controlling blood pressure, not just exercise. "So while exercise is good," said Gorman, "it showed it should be supplemented with other approaches. I think most of us had that idea right all along."

On the other hand, jogging can be lethal if it is not done sensibly, with a doctor's consultation and, for heart patients, probably with more or less constant medical supervision.

Finally, a sports medicine orthopedist at the Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago recently concluded that, in effect, if your body isn't perfect to begin with, whatever is wrong with it will get worse if you jog.

Tragedy of the Irish

Another Irish nationalist guerrilla — Jacie McMullen — has joined the hunger strike being waged by Irish terrorist organizations in hopes of gaining liberalized treatment for incarcerated guerrillas from the British government.

That's nothing new, of course. It just represents another step in the progression of that endemic disease which has plagued Northern Ireland for years; the mania continues unabated.

Most recently in this sad, sick saga has been the hunger strike, which, as of early this week, had carried nine prisoners to their deaths, the most notable being Bobby Sands whose self-mandated starvation death created shockwaves worldwide earlier this summer. Now more young men have sworn to follow Sands to their graves unless the British government liberalizes its treatment of incarcerated guerrillas.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has refused to negotiate with the hunger strikers despite the intense public pressure created by the attention focused on the strikers and their demands. It would be easy to throw reason to the winds, to succumb to the pressures of the situation and to give in to their demands "in the name of humanity."

To do so, though, would mean resigning the British government to continual attacks in this manner by the Irish Republican Army and the other splinter organizations leading the offensive. Prime Minister Thatcher recognizes that fact and the larger implication it bears for her government. She realizes giving in to the strikers would be akin to submitting to the ransom demands of international terrorists.

The situation, thus, has evolved into something of an insane battle of wills pitting the prime minister against the IRA — and they're playing to a world audience. Unfortunately for the hunger strikers, they may have underestimated the resolve of Mrs. Thatcher. She has no back door through which to escape the situation, no face-saving sidestep.

It must be the hunger strikers — the IRA — that breaks this time. Until that decision is reached the world will be forced, sadly, to watch this tragic opera of death in Northern Ireland.

A haunting reminder

For 20 years the Berlin Wall has been exposing the tyranny and failures of communism for the rest of the world to see.

Brutal aspects of the wall largely are hidden behind a whitewashed facade but it continues to fascinate tourists who climb atop platforms on the western side to gaze at the deadly devices fashioned to kill East Germans attempting to flee to freedom.

It started almost as if it were a trial balloon. Much like criminals working under the cover of darkness, police from the East in the wee hours of Sunday, Aug. 13, 1961, began breaking up street pavement, digging trenches and stringing doubled strands of barbed wire as Soviet troops ringed the city.

Germans were wrong in their belief and hope that the the western powers occupying Berlin would not permit it, but the Kennedy administration along with Britain and France acquiesced. Within two days, work started on replacing the barbed wire with a wall.

Today the 28-mile-long barrier consists of eight lanes of devilishly conceived obstacles including electrical fencing, dog corridors, spikes, roadways for guards in armored cars, anti-tank obstacles and an anti-car trench.

Three million refugees have succeeded in fleeing westward since World War II, an exodus rate that some believed threatened the survival of East Germany as a state. Freedom lovers still are attempting to cross the 15-foot-high reinforced wall and built-in obstacles. Seventy-one have died trying to reach a new way of life since 1961.

Two decades ago when the then new barrier was only strands of barbed wire, East Germans living at the sector line jumped from windows to freedom and displayed more courage than did President Kennedy and the western powers. By refusing to challenge the Soviet Union's unilateral action, the three western nations handed Moscow an easy victory that lingers on as a haunting memory.

ART BUCHWALD

Psychology majors need not apply!

One of the problems with today's economy is that it's very hard to find young people who are good salesmen. Many students coming out of college are more interested in a customer's motivation than they are in closing a sale. They also have a tendency to be too honest, which can play havoc in the retail business.

Art Buchwald

A friend of mine has a dress shop here in Georgetown, and she told me of the problems she had with a young lady, a psychology major, whom she hired as a salesgirl.

This, in essence, is what happened:

The first day a lady came in the store, and the salesgirl (let us call her Miss Brampton) asked if she could be of help.

"I'd like a suit for the fall," the lady said.

"What price range?" Miss Brampton asked.

"It doesn't make any difference," the lady replied.

"Well, let me ask you this question: Do you want the suit because you need it? Or have you just had a fight with your husband, and are trying to get even by making a very expensive purchase?"

"I beg your pardon?" the lady said.

"Perhaps you suspect him of some infidelity, and you think this is the only way you can get back at him."

"I have no idea what you're talking about," the customer said.

"Spending money in anger is a very expensive form of hostility. My advice to you is to think it over for a few days. Try to patch up your differences. Buying a new suit won't save your marriage."

"Thank you very much," the customer said frostily and left the store.

"She's angry with me now," Miss Brampton told the dress shop owner, "but in a week she'll be grateful I talked her out of it."

My friend the shop proprietor decided to let the incident pass; but that afternoon another customer came in, and Miss Brampton asked if she could be of help.

The lady said, "I need something really exciting. I'm going to the Kennedy Center, and I want a dress that will knock everyone dead."

Miss Brampton said, "We have some lovely evening dresses over here for insecure people."

"Insecure people?"

"Oh, yes. Didn't you know that clothes are one of the main ways women compensate for insecurity?"

"I'm not insecure," the lady said angrily.

"Then why do you want to knock them dead at the Kennedy Center? Why can't you be accepted for yourself instead of what you wear? You are a very attractive person, and you have an inner beauty you try to disguise. I can sell you a new dress that will attract attention, but then you would never know if it were you or the dress that made people stop and stare."

By this time, the dress shop owner decided to step in.

"Miss Brampton, if the lady wants an evening dress, let her see our evening dresses."

"No," the customer said. "Your girl is right. Why spend $500 to get a few compliments from people who really don't care what I wear? Thank you for helping me, young lady. It's true I've been insecure all these years and didn't even know it."

The customer walked out of the store.

The final straw for the dress store owner took place an hour later when a coed came in to buy a hotpants outfit, and Miss Brampton gave her 30 minutes on women's lib and then said, "All you do when you buy hotpants is become a sex object."

That night the dress shop owner put a sign in the window: HELP WANTED — NO PSYCHOLOGY MAJORS NEED APPLY.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

FBI's case against Williams was shaky

WASHINGTON — At a recent dinner, a group of well-read Washingtonians was asked: What crime was Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., convicted of in the FBI's famous ABSCAM case? Almost in chorus, they answered: "Taking money from an Arab sheik."

Jack Anderson

That these educated people, who keep abreast of what's going on in the world, should be so woefully misinformed about a headline operation like ABSCAM is not altogether surprising. It is a tribute to the FBI's press agentry that people believe an undercover operation of such dubious morality was actually a brilliant, legitimate job of law enforcement.

In fact, Williams did not take a bribe, nor was he accused of doing so. He did not take any money, nor did the government prosecutors suggest he did. They couldn't: Their own secret videotapes showed that when he was offered money by the FBI's undercover ABSCAM operative, he reacted with a horrified "No, no, no, no!"

Williams' indictment — and subsequent conviction — stemmed from an atempt to induce a fictitious Arab sheik to invest $100 million in a titanium mine. The senator also listened to suggestions that he should help obtain government contracts for the mine.

Senators routinely seek government contracts that will benefit their constituents. He explained under cross-examination: "My friends asked me to perform a role that they said was important to them and their financial well-being. I permitted those feelings of friendship to override my judgment."

It was suggested — but never proved — that Williams owned a hidden interest in the mine. On videotape, he said he was interested in the mine, not that he owned an interest in it.

He also boasted on videotape of his Washington influence. But he was coached to make the boastful statements by the FBI's undercover "sting" man, Mel Weinberg, who insisted this was the best way to impress the sheik.

After a 13-month investigation, FBI officials admitted in a memorandum that they didn't have a case against Williams. This exculpatory memo reviewed by my associate Indy Badhwar was withheld from Williams and his attorneys.

The memo also showed that the ABSCAM investigators were counting on a final trap to catch Williams. For this purpose, one last meeting was arranged with the phony sheik.

The FBI hoped Williams would be induced to make some incriminating move before the hidden cameras. The trap was sprung, but it came up empty. While the cameras ground futilely, the senator emphatically refused the FBI undercover agent's offer of a bribe.

When Williams started to explain that he didn't take bribes, he was cut off by a telephone call. What he didn't know was that another FBI agent and a Justice Department attorney were monitoring the conversation in a hidden room.

They would use the telephone to advise the phony sheik how to manipulate the conversation. They also interrupted the senator when he started to make a statement that might have exonerated him.

Conceded Assistant U.S. Attorney Edward Plaza under oath: "It was our impression after watching that tape that he (Williams) was going to go on and talk about the difference between his public and his private activities as a senator but was, in fact, cut off by the agent."

At the trial, Williams' attorney, George Koelzer, accused the government of bringing the senator back for another, final visit with the phony sheik because the Justice Department knew it couldn't make a case against him.

In response, FBI agent John Good, who was in charge of the Williams investigation, claimed that the government already had an airtight case against the senator and merely wanted to improve on it. Yet Good attended a previous strategy meeting, where it was admitted the FBI had no case.

Footnote: An FBI spokesman said that Good's testimony at the trial "was consistent" with what Good personally believed. It was Good's own opinion as an investigator that he had a case against Williams, even though the prosecutors may have thought otherwise.

SOLIDARITY PINCHES: The National Treasury Employees Union is one of the most militant in government, and it lined up squarely behind the striking air traffic controllers. But privately there was a bit of grumbling last week among some Treasury union members.

The rub was that the union had its annual convention in Montreal. The normal way to get there would be by air, but that route was closed by the Canadian controllers — as well as the union delegates' own aversion to crossing a picket line. So they had to drive or go by train or bus.

To make matters worse, one convention speaker, Rep. William Ford, D-Mich., canceled his appearance. An aide explained that he wouldn't cross the controllers' picket line — and he wasn't about to drive.

ILL-WILL AMBASSADOR: John West, who was Jimmy Carter's ambassador to Saudi Arabia, is back home in South Carolina, but he continues to expound the pro-Saudi views for which he was known as ambassador.

West recently undertook a vigorous letter-writing campaign to members of Congress, concentrating on members of the Senate Foreign Relations and House Foreign Affairs Committees. The letters are a blistering critique of Israel, particularly its use of American-supplied planes in the raids on Iraq and Lebanon.

A CHANGING WORLD

James Watt: Wrong man in the wrong job at wrong time

Interior Secretary James G. Watt complained the other day that he was being "creamed" publicly over his policies contributing to despoilment of America.

John Pinkerman

Creaming really is too gentle a fate for such a man. He should be fried, deep-fat fried. What he has done in less than a year in pushing destruction of much of the nation's natural treasures is defended by him as a bid to "undo 50 years of bad government."

You need not be an ecology freak to despair of this insensitive man and you have to wonder why President Reagan puts up with him. Mr. Reagan, as a westerner, has great love for the environment of the desert, the mountains, the forests, the seashores, and it would seem that it is about time for the president to send Watt packing. For this observer, there is a certain sense of relief living in a national forest (under the Agriculture Department) rather than in a national park that Watt could ruin.

Watt's arrogance and insensitivity perhaps are excusable as personal traits in dealing with people but they are criminal considering his disregard of the total national interest. And, his entire record reflects such disregard.

One of his own agencies, for instance, the Bureau of Land Management, has been operating a successful program devoted to adoption of burros and wild horses — to get them off areas where they were overgrazing and to provide pets for eager American families. Watt, however, has a different solution: He proposes slaughtering 6,000 of these animals that presumably are protected by U.S. law. This is cruel and it is unnecessary. If money is on his mind, he might increase adoption fees, which are very low, and persuade many thousands of Americans that he is interested in a humane solution to the problem.

Watt doesn't think much of whooping cranes either, even though they are almost extinct as an American species. He proposes giving Texas' Matagorda Island wildlife refuge back to the state — for recreational and commercial development. In addition to the cranes, other increasingly rare species would be affected, including brown pelicans, Southern bald eagles, Arctic peregrine falcons, American alligators and endangered sea turtles. This refuge has been a favorite seasonal home for many types of birds from the north and they have won the protection of interior secretaries for many years — until Watt came along.

Watt, surprisingly, supports greater protection of whales, but almost in the same breath as he let that fact be known he showed himself to be an avowed enemy of the fragile ecology that is represented in the western desert. He did this by disregarding everybody's opinion but his own in asking President Reagan to revoke a 1972 order protecting federal lands from damage caused by off-road vehicles. There are 12.5 million acres of such brittle land in California alone and the motorcycles and dune buggies already have destroyed much of that thin crust that protects plant life.

Watt's demand, now withdrawn, that a billion acres of western offshore territory be opened to indiscriminate oil drilling has been getting him the most publicity, and even oil companies like Exxon and Mobil have been dubious about his plan, mostly because the areas are too big to be handled effectively. And Alaska, which is head over heels in love with oil exploration, opposed the secretary's plan. That should have told him something.

Republicans for more than a century have been leaders in appreciating and properly managing the marvelous environment with which this nation is blessed. This all started with President Lincoln's setting aside of Yosemite Valley as a park in 1864. It also makes Watt's actions under a conservationist president even more incongruous.

However, Watt's true colors might show themselves best in statements that indicated he had found the Grand Canyon a bore. Regarding what most Americans and visitors from around the world consider a great thrill — a raft trip through the canyon — Watt said, "I don't like to paddle and I don't like to walk." He found this trip "tedious" and generally a waste of time.

Watt is a westerner and one might think he would have a great appreciation of the natural wonders of the West, plus those across the entire nation. But he doesn't, and this makes him the wrong man in the wrong job at the wrong time. It's far past the day when he should go back to where he came from.

Tear gas: Is it America's new 'miracle weapon?'

By JIMMY THORNTON
Copley News Service

In their fictional battles against evil, Flash Gordon and Buck Rogers may have helped instill in Americans the belief there would someday be a handy weapon that zaps bad guys the way bug spray zaps flies.

Now, millions of Americans apparently have decided that day has arrived.

They are arming themselves with tear gas to ward off assailants.

But self-defense experts and law enforcement officials caution the public against considering tear gas the ultimate defense against people who attack other people.

Many of these same experts strongly believe tear gas may do more harm than good — that it gives people a false sense of security, a self-confidence that is unwarranted and which could lead them into situations where they will not only be in harm's way but will be victimized.

Still, with national polls showing that many Americans are walking scared (a recent Associated Press-NBC News Poll showed that 40 percent of the people surveyed were afraid to walk at night in their own neighborhoods), tear gas sales are booming.

National and state laws have been changed to make tear gas available to the public as a defensive weapon.

The big question is how effective is tear gas against assailants? A recent segment of the ABC television program "20-20" showed dramatic scenes of burly Ventura County sheriff's deputies in California simulating attacks against women. The "victims" were armed with tear gas and expecting to be attacked.

Not one woman was able to prevent an attack — even though each had her tear gas canister out and was ready to fight back.

The tests were conducted under the supervision of Sheriff's Lt. Steve Giles, former commander of the Ventura County Police and Sheriff Training Academy in Oxnard.

He determined that tear gas available to the public was ineffective.

The present academy commander, Lt. Hank Carrillo, considers the two types of tear gas sold to the public worthless. He told this reporter he would not recommend that his wife or 17-year-old daughter carry tear gas.

One reason many people have confidence in tear gas is the fact the term "mace" has become generic in use. That is, any tear gas is often referred to as mace. The Mace brand product, manufactured by Smith and Wesson, has gained a reputation for effectiveness. It contains a tear gas irritant (phenylchloromsthylketone) so strong that the law forbids its use by the public. Law enforcement agencies and security guards often use Mace.

The two types of tear gas most often sold to the public are designatd as CN and CS. Each has long chemical designations.

The program "20-20" did not differentiate between the two types of tear gas, and this ommission has Robert Boxer, president of Aero-Chem, Milwaukee, maker of the CN variety, hopping mad.

Boxer said that the ABC magazine program was "totally unfair."

Of course, that is the type of reaction you would expect from the maker of a brand product. However, tests involving sheriff's deputies in both San Diego and Alameda (Calif.) counties give credence to Boxer's claims that CN products are more effective than CS products — more effective, that is, against sudden attacks.

In California, both CS and CNS types of tear gas have been approved for sale to the public.

State Attorney General George Deukmejian has issued a bulletin to sellers that neither should be considered better than the other — both are all right for sale as defense weapons.

A spokeswoman for the attorney general said his office does not know of any independent tests of the products and therefore maintains a neutral position as to effectiveness.

During an investigation, this reporter found there have been at least four independent tests of tear gas sold to the public. Three were by sheriffs' departments, including Ventura County's.

Tests in San Diego and Alameda counties determined that CN products are more effective against assailants than are CS products.

A fourth field-testing was conducted by the Los Angeles Police Department. As a result of the test, Los Angeles policemen carry a CS product called ChemShield

Commander William Booth of the LAPD said his department "ran some rather rapid field-tests with ChemShield and other tear gas products" and, in a hurry-up fashion, decided the CS product was sufficient for police use.

He said department officials will continue to test products and, if a better one comes along, they will consider a switch. He said CN products were included in the test.

Defense trainer feels tear gas ineffective

Copley News Service

When Ginger Reznik grabs her man, the odds are 10-to-1 he's headed for the deck with Reznik firmly in charge — even if he's armed with tear gas.

Reznik, in her 40s, stands 5 foot 3 and is the mother of a teen-aged son and daughter. And when she gets her 115-pound body moving — watch out!

As a lead self-defense instructor for the Women's Self-Defense Council, which she helped found in Honolulu, she firmly believes women should train to use their hands, feet and body to defend themselves against attackers. And she doesn't give a hoot for tear gas as protection.

Reznik recently created a sensation with her assault on an elderly exboxer who was trying to zap her with tear gas during a meeting of the Honolulu City Council.

For the last two years, proponents of tear gas as a personal defensive weapon have sought to legalize it in Honolulu.

People like Police Chief Francis Keala and Reznik were opposed to it.

Writers for the Honolulu Star-Bulletin reported that City Council floor leader Frank Loo had expressed uncertainty on how to vote and challenged Reznik to prove the tear gas device would be ineffective.

She agreed, but there was some confusion over the ground rules.

Loo, an ex-boxer, agreed to squirt Reznik with tear gas as she stood before the council. When he did, at a distance of about 7 feet, Reznik went wild with movement, kneeing and grabbing him. Meanwhile, she had successfully prevented the tear gas from hitting her face.

As tear gas "bathed" her (her word), she wrestled Loo to the ground as supporters shouted, "Hurt him, hurt him!"

"I could have pummeled the hell out of him," she said.

As for the tear gas:

"I was bathed in the stuff," she said. "No one in the council chamber was hurt by it. In fact, in our struggle, the top of the canister broke."

Reports from Honolulu have it that Loo was caught unprepared for such an attack by Reznik. And he felt Reznik's kick to his groin was a low blow.

As fleeting as a bird's song...

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — It's the same old story: the six have lost their jobs to automation.

Officials at the Golden Nugget casino hotel say the six tropical birds for which they paid $10,000 weren't singing for their supper.

Thus, the colorful cockatoos and macaws are being donated to the Philadelphia Zoo because they rarely chirped and weren't lively enough for the hotel's Victorian-style lobby, said spokeswoman Muriel Harris.

Visitors to the plush resort freqently found the birds dozing on their perches in the three-story cage.

China gearing up for Carter's visit

PEKING — No American statesman has ever seen, much less talked to, Chairman Hu Yaobang, the new man assuming command of China's destiny. American diplomats hope that Jimmy Carter will break the barrier when he visits China next week.

The former president's 10-day visit, which starts Monday, will be his first to China although he was the president who established formal diplomatic relations with Peking. The trip is described as strictly private, but the White House dispatched a special communications team to Peking on Monday in case the need arose to communicate directly with Washington. And in the past, "private" visits have not necessarily been private.

China's custom is to extend full courtesies to former chiefs of state — even to the point of granting Richard M. Nixon a 100-minute interview with Chairman Mao Tsetung when the former president came to Peking in 1976, his first major public foray after resigning office because of the Watergate scandal. He later briefed the Ford administration on his visit.

When Gerald R. Ford visited Peking in March, he was received by Vice Chairman Deng Xiaoping and Foreign Minister Huang Hua. And Ford carried a letter from President Reagan inviting Premier Zhao Ziyang to the United States.

Celebrate life, calendar says

By ELAINE SMYTH
Copley News Service

Are you becoming kind of dog-eared around the edges -- experiencing that one-dimensional feeling of being an observer rather than a participant in life?

Are you beginning to feel that type of panic that tells you fall and winter are approaching and you still haven't reveled in summer's bounty?

Celebrate, says William D. Chase.

Celebrate. Celebrate. Celebrate.

Chase ought to know. He and his wife Helen are editors of "Chases' Calendar of Annual Events," an informative and whimsical compendium of events that dares the reader to ignore them.

Chase, a former newspaperman, and his wife annually publish this tome that allows perfectly intelligent, sane adults to shed their serious side and celebrate annual events ranging from the "Stone-Skipping Open Tournament" (July 4 and you probably missed it) to National Play-Doh Day (come on, dig in on Sept. 16).

There is, promises Chase during a telephone interview from the couple's office in Flint, Mich., at least one day for everyone, including a day for those who don't want to do a darn thing.

By browsing through the calendar, readers can celebrate days that recognize strawberries, tubas, even the No Bull Peace Prize. There's a day saluting tardiness, a National Excuses Week and, oh yes, a National Grouch Day.

You say you would feel rather foolish attempting to skip stones on some lagoon or wallowing endlessly in Play-Doh? Don't worry. Just fantasize.

Sit back in that comfortable chair. Shoes off. Feet up. Thumb carefully through Chases' calendar and select your fantasy celebration.

Pretend it is June 28 and you are participating in Man Watchers' Compliment Week (June 28-July4) at the urging of Suzy Mallery of Man Watchers Inc. How about that man at your dry cleaners who has hovered carefully over your clothes for years and, yet, has never been acknowledged by you? Acknowledge him. Thank him for the masterful attention he gives your clothes. Or, better yet, tell him he really looks terrific with that tan.

Imagine his response. He stands taller and smiles. He thanks you in a quiet voice. His day will never be the same.

In case you can't make it in person, you can use your fantasies to trot off to the Miss Crustacean USA Beauty Pageant and Ocean City Creep (Aug. 19 in Ocean City, N.J.), an annual event that selects the most beautiful tree crab and the fastest tree crab on earth. Or how about becoming an imaginary participant in the World's Chicken Pluckin' Championship on Oct. 3 in Spring Hill, Fla.

The calendar is a many-splendored thing: History buffs march through its pages in search of another battle of stillanother Civil War landmark.

Johnny Carson and other television personalities have been seen waving the book about during their shows, announcing the celebration of this or that day, Chase says.

And radio disc jockeys around the country wake up their early-morning audiences with the announcement that, say, on this day in Tunisia (Aug. 13) it is Women's Day to celebrate their independence or, in Ocean City, N.Y., it's Baby Parade Day. During the late-night hours chances are pretty good that another DJ will put his listeners to sleep with the same "oh, really" information.

Grand jury indicts 3 in Mexia deaths

(c) 1981, The Dallas Times Herald

GROESBECK, Texas — A grand jury Tuesday indicted three Limestone County law enforcement officials for negligent homicide in the June 19 drownings of three black teen-agers who had been taken into police custody near Mexia, Texas.

Named in the indictments are David Drummon, a probation officer; Kenneth Archie, a reserve deputy, and Kenny Elliott, a sheriff's deputy.

If convicted of the charges, the three men could each face a maximum penalty of a year in jail and a $2,000 fine.

The dead men were Steven Booker, 19, of Dallas, and Carl Baker, 19, and Anthony Freeman, 18, both of Mexia, about 90 miles southeast of Dallas. The three were attending a traditional celebration marking the anniversary of the emancipation of the slaves in Texas when they were taken into custody for alleged possession of marijuana, police said.

The three were placed in a small boat to be ferried across a lake to a police command post. About 35 yards from the shore, the boat capsized, and the youths drowned in the lake.

The indictments charge that the officers caused the deaths "by transporting the (teen-agers) in an overloaded motorboat, and without any life preserving devices, and said motorboat being operated without any lights at night in violation of the Texas Water Safety Act ... and such criminally negligent conduct resulted in the death by drowning."

The severity of the charges was determined by members of the grand jury.

"My feeling was that there were two possibilities — either involuntary manslaughter and criminal negligence. Why they decided that (criminal negligence), I really don't know," said Kenneth McFall, a Limestone County criminal investigator.

Patrick Simmons, the county attorney, said that the charges filed against the men were of the same severity as that typically filed against a motorist driving 40 miles per hour in a 15-mile-per-hour school zone and hitting and killing a child.

"I think it's fantastic," said Larry W. Baraka, a Dallas lawyer and former Dallas County prosecutor who conducted a preliminary inquiry into the cause of the deaths.

"Having seen things like this in the past, you just don't know," he said. "I was prepared for it (the grand jury proceeding) to go either way."

Although Baraka said he was satisfied with the severity of charges, he conceded that the victims' families might not be so happy.

"I don't probably think that they will be very happy with that charge, being a misdemeanor," he said, acknowledging the relatives "may perceive it as a buying-off situation, just a deal worked out."

Evelyn Baker, the mother of Carl Baker, one of the drowning victims, said Tuesday, "I was hoping it would happen. I just feel like they (the officers) should be punished some kind of way."

Mrs. Baker said she believes that the officers should be sent to jail if they are convicted of the charges.

"They shouldn't be free to walk around the way I do. I haven't done anything wrong," she said.

Steven Booker's sister, Charolette Nelson, also had hoped criminal charges would be filed.

"They killed them, and that's all there is to it, and they should be punished," she said.

During the earlier inquiry, Baraka had called the incident "one of the worst police procedures I have ever seen" and said that evidence presented at that time would support a negligent homicide charge.

Commercial fishers file suit against redfish law

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP)— Fish dealer Joe Solis says his future will be grim after Sept. 1 unless a federal district judge strikes down a state law banning commercial redfish and trout catches.

"Collect food stamps," Solis said Tuesday when asked what he would do if a court challenge to the law fails. "that's all I can do."

Solis, another fish dealer and two commercil fishermen filed suit Monday in federal courtseeking to have the conroversial law declared unconstitutional.

'You're wiping out a whole industry," Solis told a news conference Tuesday. "You're denying a group of individuals a living."

A hearig date before U.S. Distict Judge James DeAnda has not been set in the case. The defendants, the Texas Parks and Wildlfe Department and its regional director Robert Miles, have 10 days to file a response.

The Texas Legislature passed the redfish bill after some the fiercest lobying seen since a state sales tax was enacted two decades ago. The law will take effect Sept.1.

State wildlife officials and sports fisermen complalned that redfish and trout were declining because of overfishing by commercil interests.

Legislators put a two-year ban on commercial catches and further limited the number of redfish and trout sportsmen may catch.

Texas licenses approximately 3,000 commercial fin fishermen, of which about 600 depend on redfish catches for a living.

The federal lawsuit charges the law with discriminating against commercial fishermen and intrfering with interstate commerce by prohibiting importation of redfish caught outside Texas.

"Despite such alleged overfishing, (wildlife) department officials did not support altrnative legislation to prohibit all taking of redfish and speckled sea trout by both commercial and non-commercial fishermen," the suit states.

Harrelson ends hunger strike

HOUSTON AP) — Askng for a hamburger, onion rings, fries, a malt and "lot of catsup," convicted hit man Charles Harrelson ended a month-long hunger strike in the Harris County jail, his attorney said.

Don Ervin said his client had fasted since July 17 to protest "harassment" of his family by investigators probing the 1979 sniper slaying of U.S. District Judge John Wood Jr. Harrelson is a suspect in Wood's death.

Hrrelson took his advice and ended the hunger strke Monday night, Ervin said.

Sheriff's Major R. W. Duncan said Harrelson had lost no weight since Augut 10, leading jail officials to believe other inmates had slipped Harrelson food.

Ervin said Harrelson was in poor condition and looked lke "somebody just about to die."

But Duncan said a medical examinatio Tuesday showed Harreson to be in good halth.

Harrelson is being held in the jail on charges of gun possession and possession of cocaine.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

They're not good, but not too bad

Dear Dr. Solomon: Over the years I have tried to follow the nutritional advice you present in your column, particularly as it applies to my children. I especially like your emphasis on nutritionally sound, well-balanced meals, rather than reliance on gimmicks.

The reason I'm writing now is that the newspapers and television have made a big deal of President Reagan's sweet tooth in regard to jelly beans. How can this be reconciled with a well-balanced diet? — Mrs. F.H., Springfield, Mass.

Dear Mrs. H.: I must respond to your question on two different levels. In the first place, any person who attains the age of 70 in the physical condition that the president enjoys, with all the vigor he displays, must be doing something right. I'm not suggesting that the jelly beans are responsible for his physical youthfulness, but they certainly don't appear to have done him any harm. My own guess is that the number of stories written about the jelly beans probably exceeds the amount he actually consumes.

However, I do not want to leave the impression that I consider jelly beans a health food, or that I encourage their consumption. On the contrary, all of us can go through life very nicely without consuming a single one. The American Society of Dentistry for Children points out that jelly beans not only have no nutritional value, but are among the worst varieties of candy for the teeth.

My own recommendation, which I respectfully offer to the president and to the general public, is to substitute fresh fruit for the candy. Fruit is not ony more nutritious, but can be just as satisfying to the taste.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What purpose does iron serve in the body, and what happens if a person doesn't have enough? I would also like to know if using foods such as iron-rich flour would assure a good supply of iron. — Mrs. V.P., Casper, Wyo.

Dear Mrs. P.: Iron is used by the body to carry oxygen in hemoglobin. A person with an iron deficiency will experience fatigue since the cells and tissues will not be receiving an adequate supply of oxygen.

Iron in food does not necessarily guarantee an adequate supply since not all such iron can be used by the body. For example, the iron in iron-enriched frozen bakery goods may not be available for the body to use; on the other hand, the iron in freeze-dried breakfast drinks would be available since the vitamin C in the drink converts it to a highly soluble form.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I sometimes see mention made about fat-soluble vitamins and water-soluble vitamins. Will you explain what the difference is? — Ms. B.F., Salt Lake City, Utah

Dear Ms. F.: Fat-soluble vitamins — A, D, E, and K — are stored in the body fat. Water-soluble vitamins — B complex and C — cannot be stored. Deficiencies in the water-soluble vitamins are a more common problem.

Auto insurance could cost more

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Midland drivers will be paying more for auto insurance under rate proposals by the State Board of Insurance staff which are to be considered by the board at its annual auto rate hearing Thursday.

Bodily injury rates for Midland County would decrease an average 9.9 percent under the staff recommendations, with property damage rates rising by 18.6 percent.

For $50 deductible comprehensive coverage, the increase would be 20.4 percent.

Statewide, the average change would be a 0.3 percent decrease in bodily injury rates, a 16.3 percent increase in property damage and a 24.3 percent increase in $50 deductible comprehensive coverage.

The board also is to receive recommendations on changes from an industry advisory group, with those changes expected to be higher. The board could adopt either recommendation, adopt another set of rates, or refuse to make any changes at this time.

If changes are approved, the amount paid by an individual policyholder would depend on the age, sex and driving habits of the policyholder, and on the age and make of the insured auto.

A staff exhibit shows that for a 1981 "low-priced" Ford, Chevrolet or Plymouth not used in business but driven to an from work, with no male operator under 25 and no female operator under 21, the changes would be as follows for $10,000/$20,000/$5,000 liability, $5,000 personal injury protection, $50 deductible comprehensive and $200 deductible collision.

Current: bodily injury, $31; property damage, $59; personal injury protection, $23; comprehensive, $78; collision, $139; total, $330.

Proposed: bodily injury, $28; property damage, $70; personal injury protection, $25; comprehensive, $80; collision, $158; total, $361.

The change amounts to $31 or an increase of 9.4 percent.

The same rates — for the West Texas Oil Field rating territory — would apply in Ector County.

More and more people are turning to mobile homes as a solution to the housing crunch. But finding a place to put that mobile home is almost impossible.

A waiting game

EDITOR'S NOTE: Two years ago, residents on the low end of the income scale were feeling the pinch of escalating housing costs and unavailability of units. Today, housing is ranked as the city's worst problem. This is the fourth of an eight-part series focusing on what is — and isn't — being done to resolve the situation.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

More than two months ago, Kirby James and his family were living in a parsonage in Redding, Calif. Trained to be a journeyman carpenter, the picture for work grew dimmer as the unemployment rate soared over 20 percent.

Then came a telephone call from his wife's uncle, also a carpenter. "You wouldn't believe the work out here in Midland, Texas."

Cunningham

James and his wife, Linda, packed their five children and belongings into a bus converted for living quarters to begin a new adventure in Midland. That "adventure" has soured.

He found work, alright, and so did his wife. But the Jameses are living with another family until they can find housing.

"The main problem is trying to come up with the first and last month's rent and a deposit," he said. "It's something like $1,000 to $1,200 we have to come up with just to rent something."

Even if they can come up with the seed money, few landlords are willing to rent to a family that includes five children, ranging in ages from 4 to 15. And what has been offered to the James family doesn't meet their standards.

"SOME ARE CHARGING $400 a month rent and the houses should be condemned. I wouldn't move my children in there," he said.

James can understand the problems landlords have had with some children destroying the rental property.

"The landlord looks at us and already has judged me and my family. My kids are good kids and I'm very proud of them. I don't judge the landlord. All I'm asking for is a fair shake. If I can show I'm capable of taking care of the property, then judge me.

"Even a murderer is judged after the crime has been committed," he noted.

A carpenter for 12 years, James is making $12.18 an hour and works out of the union hall here. He brings home $400 a week and Linda makes up to $200 with her part-time jobs. "He makes good money and I make money, but it's still not enough to get us into a house. It's going to take $1,000 to get us into the crummiest house in Midland. I'd just as soon forget it," Mrs. James said with a hint of bitterness.

Even a maximum combined salary of $600 a week isn't enough to pay rent, or make a house payment, and support five children, according to James. He pointed to the size of his family and the $800, more or less, attached to some rental property they had seen advertised. Lack of a fall-back savings by the Jameses and the huge house payments made necessary by lack of escrow and high interest compound their problem.

They would be willing to park their bus in a mobile home park in the meantime, but there are no spaces for rent.

AND WITH school a few weeks away, the Jameses are becoming apprehensive.

"There's a lot of emotional pressure," she explained. "Families are coming in here and having to get ready for school. The kids are getting agitated."

The James family consists of Teresa, 15; Brian, 12; Lisa, 10; Maria, 5; and Shawna, 4. Four will be attending Midland public schools.

To "equal out the higher cost of living here," James said he eventually will have to get into the $20 to $25 an hour bracket.

"I have bills to pay. I can't pay bills if I'm sitting in a house somewhere and not working. I like to work," he stated.

Looking at Midland's housing shortage, he chastised the city leaders for not providing housing for the workers. "The working class needs housing, too. It they don't cater to the ones doing the building, it's going to hurt. They're catering to the high society here."

He blamed the building industry here for contributing to the high cost of housing. "It's the builders who are getting the money."

James, though, has seen the lucrative aspects of being in the construction business and is nurturing thoughts of getting on that side of the fence by starting his own construction company.

"I've talked to some people who have gone into business for themselves. They say if I can hold out for the first three to four months, we'd be swamped with work."

The Jameses don't want to continue their present situation of living with another family. If they can put together enough money, they would prefer buying a piece of land and putting up their own house.

The days pass with no encouraging word on housing, but the family has decided to wait it out. They're not alone. The uncle who called Mrs. James about the work here still hasn't found a place for his family, which is sitting back in Lubbock.

"I don't consider ourselves hopeless or without despair," James said. "We have hope in our hearts. I'm sure we're going to make it. I do believe there is a house waiting for us."

The James family is an example of how the middle-income newcomers are being squeezed by the lack of housing in Midland. But the situation worsens for low income families who are coming to Midland to start a new life.

Kim Modisett, director of the Human Relations Council, recalled a family who arrived in Midland a few weeks ago from Alabama. Gayle and Tom Mercer packed up all their belongings and their two children, ages 7 and 10, and came to find a job.

Tom had three offers, but the companies refused to hire him until he could get a permanent address. And that was the problem. They wound up living in their car because they couldn't find low-cost housing.

"I had to advise him to move on to Odessa," said Ms. Modisett.

"The landlord looks at us and already has judged me and my family. My kids are good kids and I'm very proud of them. I don't judge the landlord. All I'm asking for is a fair shake. If I can show I'm capable of taking care of the property, then judge me.... Even a murderer is judged after the crime has been committed."

housing:
fourth in a series

BECAUSE OF HIGH interest rates and rising building costs, the concept of the traditional home as the public knows it today is changing. In fact, builders say, it must change.

David and Neal Hail, third generation homebuilders in Midland, is one example of builders doing an about-face in their thinking. The Hails have no problem finding buyers for their houses, many of which are in the exclusive Green Tree Country Club Estates.

Nevertheless, the Hails are an example of local builders beginning to look at south and east Midland as a means to provide lower cost housing. The change in thinking was precipitated by the fact they couldn't keep workers for their construction because there was no place for the laborers to live.

"There's a shortage in lower-priced housing," said David Hail. "We have subcontractors living in trailers on our jobs and in tents. It's laborers who come to town and can't find a place to live. If we can't provide housing for the laborers, how can the city grow?

"We had one crew come in from Alabama and we gave them all the work they needed. But they couldn't find housing and left."

For a low-cost housing development to be successful, they noted that the houses would have to cost less than $60,000.

The Hails and other developers are looking to south and east Midland as the New Frontier. While that area has long been viewed as a blight to the city, newcomers are unaware of the stigma to that area and will move into a house where they can get it, the Hails believe.

"The east and south side of town will take off," predicted Neal. "There are large blocks on the south and east sides where you can create entire new neighborhoods. There will be peer pressure to keep it from deteriorating."

That development will only ease the housing problem, not resolve it. The only solution is for prices to come down.

"We're faced with rapid rising costs of subcontractors and the increasing cost of everything, from the foundation and land on up to the finished product," reported Neal. Brother David added that a $70,000 house can't be put on an $18,500 lot and the builder make any profit from the job.

LAND PRICES are going up, they said, reporting that lots in the Green Tree Estates range from a low of $27,000 up to $50,000.

Spiraling material costs also are forcing housing costs upward, they said. "Twelve months ago, a 1,200 square foot house in Permian Estates was selling for $39,500. Today, the same house sells for $45,000."

To the Hails, the housing market will become a "whole new ballgame" as builders search for means to keep houses within reach of a majority of the public.

They look to smaller lot sizes and possibly a house with fewer amenities. The 30-year fixed rate mortgage is gasping its last breath as the variable rate mortgages take hold. And builders will be forced to come up with innovative ways of financing, according to Neal.

Some developers are calling for an increase in the number of small lots, saying the land costs would be reduced. And they add the complaint that the city's Planning and Zoning Commission is out of touch with reality when it comes to Midland's housing needs.

Mayor G. Thane Akins remarked that the city has done more smaller lot zoning recently, although the small, cheap lots primarily are located on the south and east side. However, the council changed its tune Aug. 11 and allowed smaller lots in the Northgate Addition in northwest Midland.

THE IDEA behind the P&Z Commission is to have a "cross-section of the community. You wouldn't want all builders or real estate people" (on the board).

Besides lower cost conventional housing, an increasing number of people are looking to mobile homes and manufactured housing as their solution.

Even the City Council is changing its "anti" attitude toward mobile homes. Akins recalled that mobile homes had been kept out of most sections of Midland because the neighborhoods didn't want them.

"Mobile homes have had a bad image over the years because of their temporary nature," he explained. "But that's changing. They're becoming better built and more permanent. We (City Council) are trying to work in more mobile home developments. These will meet an immediate housing need."

Mobile home sales are booming in the Permian Basin area, according to reports from dealerships. The primary reason is the lower cost; a secondary factor is their availability.

Like conventional housing, mobile homes have felt the effects of higher building costs and inflation. But the price still runs cheaper than standard housing.

AVERAGE PRICE of a mobile home is $19,000 to $20,000. Two years ago it was $14,000. Average monthly payments run from $280 to $350, whereas two years ago it was $140. Space rental is running from $100 to $130 a month today; two years ago it was $60.

But buyers are bumping into roadblocks — no spaces to park the mobile homes.

Airline Mobile Home Park keeps a continuous waiting list of 40 to 50 names and has broken ground to add 380 spaces. "I get at least 10 calls a day" from people looking for a place to park the mobile home, said owner Carl Stewart. "A lot of people are going into mobile homes who had never thought about it before."

Ruby Beinhauer, manager of South Lamesa Mobile Home Park claimed her telephone rings 24 hours a day with requests for spaces. She stopped taking names of all the callers, and limits her waiting list to 10 names.

John Bushman, owner of A-1 Mobile Homes, charged that the city government in the past had been against mobile home parks and refused to zone for them. Even though he called for relaxing the code, Bushman still favored some restrictions, such as putting in permanent steps and enclosing the bottom.

"MOBILE HOMES are becoming an accepted way of life, they're not shoddy cracker boxes," Bushman added.

Rodney Langley with First Quality Mobile Homes noted that "sales are going wild" but the problem is finding a place to park them. He suggested better developments, such as the type on the West Coast where the mobile home and its lot is sold as a unit, like a conventional house.

Bushman suggested the movable houses be allowed in the same spots where a frame home could be located. "We don't feel like we have an inferior piece of merchandise like we had 10 to 11 years ago."

Odessa utilizes a unique zoning, which Midland doesn't have, to allow mobile homes in neighborhoods with conventional houses. The zone, known as GR, has been in existence since 1971, said Planning Director Judy Miller. "It was an innovative type of thing for Odessa to allow this mixed residential zone. It has helped the housing shortage here."

In these GR districts where a mobile home might be parked on a lot between single family houses, Ms. Miller said she hasn't noticed valuations of the conventional homes going down.

Odessa has another ruling which might be more attractive for mobile home parks and that involves the city ordinance which requires no minimum acreage of land for establishing such a park. Midland, meanwhile, requires at least eight acres for such a development.

Mayor Akins, however, sees change ahead and predicted more mobile home park developments, especially in east Midland along Fairgrounds Road. "It may require some revision of our ordinances" to accomplish what the mobile home developers are wanting, he conceded.

"MOBILE HOMES or manufactured housing is all I see as a solution to the housing shortage until we get some relaxed interest rates and until building costs go down."

LIVING TODAY

Volunteer Extension Homemakers

By SHARON A. HILLIS
County Extension Agent
Home Economics

Volunteer Texas extension homemakers gave more than $6 million worth of time to improve quality of life for their fellow citizens last year—and they're working this year to top that.

As we face economic hardships and dwindling resources, Texas Extension Homemakers stands as one of the state's most valuable resources. Who are they?

TEXAS EXTENSION HOMEMAKERS

Members of the Texas Extension Homemakers Clubs number 23,000 across the state of Texas. For more than 50 years, these club members in more than 200 Texas counties have learned home economics skills and passed that information on to others. In 1980, they held 55,680 meetings with educational programs.

Last year they gave 1,817,000 hours—an average of 79 hours per person, or a total of 622 years—in volunteer service.

Figured at $3.45 per hour, they donated $6,277,650 of volunteer time—and they reached into their pockets for an additional $28,000 in cash—to improve their communities and make life better for the people who live there.

Community projects conducted by Texas Extension Homemakers Clubs varied across the state because of varied needs in the different countries, but more than 100 communiy projects involved 4-H, health, safety, family life, citizenship, cultural arts, recreation and community improvement.

MIDLAND COUNTY EXTENSION HOMEMAKERS

Midland county now boasts nine clubs, with a total of 121 members, organizing four new clubs and doubling the membership in 1980-81. Midland County clubs have contributed both time and money to many worthy causes, including all phases of the Midland County 4-H program, Casa de Amigos, Midland Crime Prevention program at the Midland Police Department, Christmas in April program, Alicia International Project, Easter Seal campaign, Dress-A-Live-Doll program, 4-H district and state scholarships And State 4-H Center, to name only a few.

Midland County Extension homemakers continue to give leadership to numerous committees at district and state levels. Currently, Mrs. Mary Evelyn Bryant serves as director for District 6 Texas Extension Homemaker Organization, composed of 22 counties in the Far West, and is a member of the Texas Extension Homemaker Association State Board.

Club educational programs in Midland County include all six home economics areas—cultural arts, recreation, community improvement and citizenship. A few examples of home economics program subjects that club members have received include yeast breads, furniture refinishing, time management, women and credit, stress and spring fashion tips.

Some cultural arts programs include "History of Midland," "Quilting—History and Skills," "Picture Framing" and numerous home accessory and holiday decor skills, resulting in enhancement of quality living and saving of family income, two important items in today's world.

ANNUAL DAY
Oct. 23

An annual event known as Extension Homemakers Annual Day in Midland County supports the extension homemakers organizatio currently composed of nine clubs and the council.

Funds are raised at this event though ticket sales for a hearty salad luncheon and home/gift items sold in booths sponsored by each extension homemaker club. Mrs. Jackie Forsyth, Midland County Extension Homemaker Council chairman, along with the other 21-member council members, coordinate this and other county wide activities.

This year Annual Day wil be Oct. 23 at the County Exhibit Building on E. Highway 80. Club members across the county are already preparing for this event and Midlanders and surrounding Permian Basin fans are already inquiring about the date, time and place. Thousands of Midlanders annually show up for the luncheon and sale.

Frosty art on the mall

Ice—a frozen block of water used to keep food and drinks cool. It can be more than just that, though. As Jacques-Henri Benoit knows, with talent, practiced skill and patience, that cold, hard but slippery chunk can be transformed into a beautiful piece of fine sculptured art that adds grace and elegance to any party or special occasion.

Benoit, executive chef for Four Seasons Plaza Nacional Hotel in San Antonio, will appear at Midland Park Mall Saturday to demonstrate his ice-carving techniques. He has worked at many levels in fine restuarants of France since 1967 and began work in America in late 1975.

His Midland appearance, in conjunction with Midland Park Mall's first anniversary celebration, will tie in with his drawing the winner of the Midland Park Mall "Do It Up San Antonio-Style" contest through which the mall will give away a trip for two to stay at Four Seasons in the romantic and ethnically cultural city of San Antonio.

Benoit plans to begin work on his carving at 3 p.m.; upon production of his finished sculpture, the chef will draw and announce the mall contest winner.

The winner will receive round-trip airfare for two from Midland to San Antonio.

Masonry paint gives stucco buildings face-lift

By GENE GARY
Copley News Service

Q. We are new owners in a large stucco condominium complex where the other owners have diverse opinions about what should be done to perk up the slightly faded and streaked pink exterior.

We have watched other stucco buildings being sandblasted and repainted in various ways. We are unsure whose opinion weshould believe.

Thank you for any information you can give. — Dr. and Mrs. J.A., San Diego, Calif.

A. Stucco is easy to paint with a good quality masonry paint.

Sandblasting is needed only when the stucco is peeling badly from a previous coat of paint. Wire brushing is recommended if peeling is not too severe.

The purpose of the painting, the condition of the surface and the expected exposure all combine to dictate the selection of the right paint. Consequently. these factors should be relayed to your local reputable paint dealer or contractor, and he will help you choose the right paint for every masonry painting project.

There are many quality and alkaline-resistant paints, and each has its advantages and disadvantages. For example, latex paints for use on masonry surfaces, including stucco, can be used with confidence. They come in a wide variety of colors, are water thinned and can be applied to a damp surface, Indeed, the surface should be dampened before applying the first coat of a latex paint.

Oil-base stucco and masonry paints are similar to conventional house paints in many respects. Their flat or low-sheen qualities tend to hide surface irregularities and these paints produce good results when stucco and adjacent wood trim are to be painted the same color.

Whatever color you choose, of course, is up to the wishes of the majority of the condominium owners.

Q. Moisture is being drawn up the stucco walls of my house, leaving white marks as high as 2.5 feet from the ground. In some places, the stucco is flaking and crumbling, but only the outer layer.

What is the best way to remedy this? The house is about 12 years old. — J.H.H., La Jolla, Calif.

A. You did not state whether your house is built on a concrete slab or has a perimeter foundation with a crawl space under the house.

If you have a crawl space, the ground should be covered with strips of polyethylene plastic or moisture-proof building paper, overlapping the strips at least six inches and seal the seams with roofing cement.

Adequate air circulation should be provided in the crawl space with louvers or vents installed in each wall, allowing one square foot of opening for each 300 square feet of ground surface,

Drainage should be checked around the house to see that all water drains away from the house, whether on a foundation or slab. Also avoid sprinkling too close to walls of the house.

If your house is built on a concrete slab, the lack of proper drainage may be the cause of your problem.

To repair the stucco, remove all the flaking, crumbling and loose material. A wire brush is good for this purpose. Then buy stucco patching material, which can be obtained at masonry dealers or large paint stores. Follow their instructions carefully.

When making the patch, cut back under the edges of the damaged area, wet down the surface, then apply the patching mixture. Keep the repaired area shaded from the sun until it dries. When dry it can be painted.

After repairing the stucco, using a sealer (Thompson's Water Seal is a good product) applied about three feet up fromthe ground will help protect the stucco.

DEAR ABBY

Woman's busy husband takes time for his affairs

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband's job requires him to be out of town quite a bit. Everything was going fine with our marriage until last month when he telephoned long distance to say that his company physician had advised him to spend a month away from his work and without any contact with his family!

I tried to reach the company physician to ask him about his advice, but his office informed me that the doctor will not be back until the end of the summer! I suspect my husband is having an affair.

Abby, would a doctor make such a suggestion? Do you think a man of good conscience would follow such a suggestion? I need your opinion — URGENT AND ANXIOUS

DEAR URGENT: You give me very few facts to go on, but if you suspect your husband of having an affair, you must have good reasons. The whole thing smells fishy to me, too. Every responsible physician has a substitute doctor covering for him in his absence. The only "covering" I see here is the company physician covering for a pal who needs an excuse to disappear for a month.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 10 1/2 years old, and my problem is a neighbor boy I'll call "Mike." He's 4. Mike keeps coming to my house and he rings our doorbell about 15 times! Then he'll ask if I'm home. If I am, I have to go out and play with him, and if I'm not home he just sits out in front and waits for me.

Sometimes Mike will go in our backyard and play on my swing set without asking anybody. If I tell him he can't swing on my swing without permission, he says he can because his mother said so. What should I do? — POOPED WITH PESTS

DEAR POOPED: You may need some cooperation from your mother and Mike's on this one. First explain to Mike that you can't play with him whenever HE feels like it. If he rings your bell when you're not in the mood to play with him, say so. Then have your mother tell his mother that your swings should not be used without supervision. Better yet, they should be locked up, because if anyone is injured on them, the owner could be sued.

DEAR ABBY: When we have house guests, we give them their own room, bath, house key and our extra car. We figure it's their vacation, and they should feel free to get up, eat, sleep and come and go as they please.

The question: When friends and relatives invite our houseguests to dinner or whatever, I don't think they should feel obligated to invite us, too.

My sister disagrees with me. What do you think? — FIRST-TIME WRITER

DEAR WRITER: It depends on what the invitation is for. If it's a larger party to honor your houseguests, you should be invited. But you need not be invited to accompany them to every coffee klatch, tea, beer bust, tour of the city, shopping tour, zoo, art gallery and museum. There is no "rule." And where no rule exists, common sense should prevail.

DEAR ABBY: I can sure feel for PATTY IN TACOMA, who's 25 and looks like 17. I've got the same problem, although I'm only 13 and get treated like I'm 9.

When I walk into a restaurant, I'm handed a "kiddie menu." Please don't tell me I'll appreciate looking young eventually. I've heard that so many times I could scream!

And please ask your readers not to ask us small, thin people if we have "anorexia." We're perfectly healthy — we're just small.

There are advantages to being small, however. How many 6-footers do you know who can crawl under a locked bathroom door in the airport and unlock it for all those little old ladies who forgot to bring their dimes? — SMALL BUT USEFUL IN TUCSON

DEAR ABBY: Do you think it's really possible to forgive and forget? — VIRG

DEAR VIRG: I know it is. Were it not so, we'd all be living in an awful kind of hell.

DEAR ABBY: Was I ever relieved to see the letter from MOLLY, whose husband can't HEAR unless he has his glasses on! For years I thought I was the only person with this freaky problem. I'm extremely nearsighted, and I can't hear without my glasses — especially on the telephone. Thanks, that letter made my day! — FELLOW SUFFERER

DEAR SUFFERER: According to my mail, you have a lot of fellow-sufferers, but here's a new one:

'Early warning system' for birth defects helps put parents at ease

ATLANTA (AP) — The national Centers for Disease Control serve as an "early warning system" to watch for substances that could cause birth defects, according to researchers working to prevent a repeat of the thalidomide disease of almost two decade ago.

Since 1974, the Birth Defect Monitoring Program has checked everything from spray adhesives to airport noise to the malathon being sprayed on California fruit flies for possible birth defect associations, said Larry Edmonds, a CDC epidemiologist.

The program is designed to head off bith defect epidemics like that caused by the drug thalidomide in the early 1960s, according to Lee James, a statistician in the program.

Thalidomide was a sedative in wide use in Europe and limited use in the United States until thousands of pregnant women using the drug bore children with severely malformed arms and legs.

So far, no new "thalidomides" have been found, Edmonds said.

"Peope are raising question about birth defects, but the fact is, most are staying the same or going down," he said. "If we can reassure the public there is no hazard, that's an important public health service."

Edmonds and James, in interviews last week, pointed out these investigations performed by the BDMP:

—When a high number of central nervous system malformations were occurring in same Ohio communities in 1976, a consumer group asked the BDMP to see if the polyvinyl chloride factories in the area might be responsible. No connection was found.

—When cattle in Michigan were accidentally fed the chemical PBB in 1978, the birth defects monitors got dozens of requests for information from people in the state. No connection was found.

Tips on removing tub decals

To remove bathtub decals, soak decals in mineral spirits, then scrape off, says Bonnie Piernot, a family resource management specialist.

Next, spray the tub with an all-purpose spray cleanser and rub with the abrasive side of a sponge. Then wax the entire tub with an automobile paste wax.

Mrs. Piernot is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Designer has taste for the bizarre

(c) 1981, Newsday

NEW YORK — It's 11 a.m. when Betsy Johnson comes skipping into her bubblegum pink Seventh Avenue showroom, looking as if she had just stepped off the cover of a New Wave record album.

Her hair is short, black and tousled.

Around her neck are three strands of oversized rosary beads and charms.

And muffling her ears are headphones wired to a cassette player on her belt.

If the image that this tiny, energetic designer conveys is pure Punk, the reality, she says, is much softer.

"I'm real Connecticut rah rah .... I'm Cos Cob (dresses), but sexier," said Johnson, 38, who was born in the small town of Wethersfield, Conn., grew up in the even smaller town of Terryville and has a reputation for the bizarre. "I was a cheerleader for four years in high school and was even head cheerleader at Syracuse University."

Actually, Johnson and the clothes she has been designing for 16 years are linked more than anything to dance.

"I was the only dance teacher in Terryville, Conn.," she said. "I was always teaching dancing in my back yard and sewing costumes. I always wanted to be a dancer, like Mitzi Gaynor. What, I tried to do was a combination of dance and art, until I realized that it had to be one or the other."

BASIC BETSEY — as the mainstay of Johnson's $3 million-a-year business is known — consists of lots of cotton Lycra, a non-seasonal fabric that has the stretch and cling of a dancer's leotard. It is dyed — solid or striped — in hot shades of magenta, red, teal or purple. And it is fashioned — with puffed sleeves, low necklines and dropped waists — into a few simple dresses, tops, knickers, pant and jumpsuits that sell for $20 to $110.

Her other extreme is a country girl, bar-maid look. Victorian skirts. Taffeta petticoats. Laced-up corsets. "Underweat as outerwear," as Johnson calls it.

"There's something uncouture, un-Seventh Avenue about me," she said unabashedly. "Even when I try to be elegant, it has that Brigitte Bardot, underwear, country girl look, rahter than Gloria Vanderbilt chic."

Whimsical. Humorous. Personal. Those lables have been attached to Johnson's clothes ever since 1965, when she began designing for Paraphernalia and became one of the leaders in the anti-Seventh Avenue movement. Although Johnson's firm has been on Seventh Aveneu for three years now, she sees herself as outside the mainstream. Her clothes, she said, are not for the rail-thin model, but for the "All-American woman — shortish and bigger in the hip than in the bust." They fill the gap, she said, between couture and junior clothes produced in Hong Kong.

"SEVENTH AVENUE is a kind of sophisticated, tasteful thing I don't connect with," she said. "I've never worn clothes like that. ... I think I'm a costume designer. They're little storybook clothes."

Johnson, a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Syracuse University, made the leap from dance to design in 1964, when she was a guest editor at Mademoiselle magazine. After the internship ended, she stayed on, doing "nothing meaningful," yet learning from everyone.

During lunch, she worked as a free-lance illustrator. After work, she operated a clothing business out of her 1 1-2-room Brooklyn apartment, advertising her designs in the back pages of Mademoiselle and in the ladies rooms of Conde Nast, which publishes the magazine.

"I realized that making clothes is completing what a drawing can't be — going from two-dimensional to reality," Johnson said. "I've always liked sculpture, which you can hold. Designing clothes lets you go through the process of art work ... but then you have a real thing you can wear. It's a more exciting form of comunication than a flat drawing."

Because she had no design background, Johnson searched fruitlessly for a design job until 1965, when she was hired by Paraphernalia, a trendy botique that had launched new designers such as Mary Quant. Johnson, whose clothes were bought by the likes of Julie Chrisite, Brigitte Bardot and Twiggy, remained there until 1968. "After the drugs, Timothy Leary, pop and rock, things went softer," and she went to Alley Cat, a junior ready-to-wear firm, where she won a Coty Award in 1971.

IN THE MID-1970s Johnson said she bottomed out, working for a variety of designers without much satisfaction. She did junior clothes, maternity clothes (she was pregnant), children's clothes (she had a daughter, Lulu) and home sewing patterns.

"I thought it was all over until Punk (force) started in London," Johnson said. "It felt like a reincarnation of the '60s. It felt the same as when I was 22. I put my portfolio together and went around to manufacturers for eight months."

The advice she got was to start her own firm. And three years ago, she did just that, with Chantal White, who had worked for Cathy Hardwick and is now Johnson's business partner. Using $100,000 of their own, and $100,000 from a bank, they started Betsey Johnson Inc.

JOHNSON, WHO BELIEVES in symbols, said the first collection was launched on her birthday, under a full moon, in the Year of the Tiger. And it was a smash.

The next collection bombed. They were left with 3,000 pieces of pink and teal spring clothes and not even enough money to stage a fashion show to sell them and pay the contractors. "It was a nightmare," Johnson said. "I was physically sick it was so horrible."

Instead of dumping the outfits, they opened a tiny botique at 130 Thompson St. in SoHo that still sells Johnson clothes, old and new. The shop is near the 3,000-sqare-foot bubblegum pink loft in Tribeca that serves as Johnson's home and workshop.

Since that shaky beginning, the company's lot has improved considerably. Last year, Betsey Johnson did $1 million in sales; this fall's collection has sold $1 million, and the company projects $3 million sales for the year.

She has one toe in the licensing waters — a contract with a Japanese firm for fishnet stockings — and is looking cautiously for others. Johnson said her goal is not to become an enormous company, just one that "some people like. Beene is Beene," she said. "I hope to establish my own point of view, which doesn't have a life if it isn't constant."

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Helpful hints from the odds and ends department

DEAR HELOISE:

Ever wonder what to do with all those loose screws, buttons, tiny nails, or other objects you may come across when cleaning your house or apartment? They may be important when you find that a certain appliance or piece of furniture requires that particular screw or button. I keep a small jar or container for storing these odds and ends. It saves time when looking for objects I might otherwise discard.

You may be surprised at what you can locate by using this system — Gloria Constantinitis

+ + +

I know! Everytime I vacuum I find some little item on the floor. It never fails that as soon as I've pitched it out, I discover where it should have been. — Heloise

REJUVENATED

Dear Heloise: A few years ago we had a second refrigerator that had been scrubbed so much near the door handle (because of grease from mechanics' hands), the paint was down to the bare metal.

Taking adhesive-backed plastic, I cut it in a design around the door handle from top to bottom. I chose black to hide any future greasy finger marks, but any color will work.

I must admit it looked pretty good. Many though I had bought a new refrigerator. Just work your design out on newspaper before doing any actual cutting to make sure you've got the right size and design. — Grace Thompson

FRAME UP

Dear Heloise: Put each of your children or grandchildren's school pictures or yearly photographs in one frame stacking the latest photograph on top of the previous years.

Those photos are not mislaid and the current one can be displayed and enjoyed.

Fun, too, to remove them all and see the changes in the youngsters as each year goes by — Mrs. Mildred Murray

HOMEMADE PLANTER

Dear Heloise: I have lots of large plants and didn't want to spend my money on large planters.

Using discarded metal or plastic buckets (I got mine from a local cafe), I took plaster of paris and applied it to the outside of the bucket and, with the tines of a fork, made it look like a log by making grooves from top to bottom.

After it was completely dried, I spray painted it brown.

I've had lots of compliments and it certainly didn't cost much. - LaVonne Fries

+ + +

PAINLESS POURING

Dear Heloise: I enjoy baking, but having arthritis in my hands, I find pouring the batter from the bowl to the pan is a painful impossibility. Spooning the batter is a tiresome chore.

I found I could use a soup ladle to get the batter to the pans with less strain on my hands. It does the job quickly, neatly and efficiently. — Mrs. William Simon

COCOA 'NUT'

Dear Heloise: I am a lover of chocolate-flavored coffee. When I used the last spoonful and was unable to go to the store for another jar, I decided to make my own, using instant chocolate mix and instant coffee.

The result was just as delicious as the expensive brand I'd been using.

I used three-fourths teaspoon of each, but cup size and strength desired would determine amounts needed.

Your column has helped me out so many times, so I hope this hint will save others a hard-earned dollar. — Sally

Money problems abound in land of easy credit

By HIDESUKE NAGASHIMA
Copley News Service

TOKYO -- Automatic tellers and various kinds of plastic money are no longer the novelties they used to be for Japanese, thanks to the spread of electronic banking.

But Japan has completely skipped the checking account in the process, and the upshot is that some Japanese simply haven't learned how to control buying without cash.

As consumer credit proliferates, so does delinquency. Although most Japanese are financially sound and still are among the most saving-minded in the world, some are "credit-drunk" spendthrifts.

Banks, retail and consumer credit industries have their own credit reporting systems but have so far failed to share information with one another, allowing bad-risk consumers to keep over-borrowing from different businesses.

An agency specializing in collecting consumer debts reports growing delinquency.

The problem is not surprising in view of the fierce competition between retail industries to boost sales on credit. People use readily available credit to buy everything from the latest video cassette recorder to an expensive kimono -- some without giving much thought to repayment.

Consumer credit extended in Japan last year hit 16 trillion yen ($70 billion), accounting for 11 percent of total consumer spending, according to major commercial banks and credit sales companies.

The growth of consumer credit, at an annual 20 percent rate in recent years, reflects changing lifestyles in Japan.

Traditionally, the Japanese have considered borrowing money less than respectable, but that is beginning to change, especially among the younger generation.

If the present trend continues, the U.S.-style consumer spending pattern heavily dependent on credit may become common in Japan.

Credit sales industries seem to deliberately understate delinquency to hide the true situation. Admitting widespread delinquency would invite charges that the cost of clearing bad debts is unfairly passed onto other consumers in the form of higher merchandise prices.

Some retail industry estimates put the delinquency rate at less than 1 percent but that is impossibly low, in the opinion of Naokata Uchida, a public relations official for the Credit Control Union, an agency specializing in collecting consumer debts.

"My guess on the national delinquency rate is at least 5 percent, or over 800 billion yen ($3.6 billion) at the present rate," says Uchida.

The Credit Control Union is a collection agency grouping some 4,500 insurance firms, banks, credit card firms and other businesses. The agency reports growing delinquency on the part of debtors.

"One credit sales store chain claims it has no repayment problems with 99.7 percent of its customers," says Uchida. "But that's impossible. The rate should be much, much higher."

A recent survey by the Credit Control Union showed that bad debts averaged about 750,000 yen ($3,300) per case and that one out of every four delinquent debtors had disappeared from their home.

What are the major causes of delinquency?

"One problem lies with businesses extending credit without making proper checks on credit records, amid a severe sales war," says Uchida.

On the part of consumers, some can't keep up with payments because of bankruptcies, illnesses, accidents and other personal problems. Others are just "slow payers" who pay only under pressure and "credit-drunk" spendthrifts.

Officials may not sit on draft boards

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorney General Mark White held Tuesday that elected city, county or state officials may not serve on local draft boards.

Hi opinion went to Col. Paul Dean Aikin, state director of selective service. The federal government recently re-established selective service boards and placed them in stand-by status in case the military draft is resumed.

White said service on a draft board would violate the Texas Constiution's prohibition against holding positions of "profit or trust" in both the federal government and the state or its political subdivisions.

He said positions of trust involve the exercise of sovereignty on behalf of the government.

Whistleblowers may receive large bonus

WASHINGTON — Whistleblowers who report their agencies' squandering tax dollars could receive bonuses of up to $20,000 under a provision squirreled away in the big budget reconciliation bill. But there is no money set aside for the program, and the officials who would make the awards, the inspectors general, are not enthusiastic about it.

The provision, the godchild of Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., authorizes agencies to reward an unspecified number of employees who disclose waste, fraud or mismanagement. The employee can receive $10,000 or 1 percent of the savings resulting from the disclosure, whichever is less. In addition, the president may award $20,000 bonuses to up to 50 whistleblowers each year.

The agency bonuses would be awarded by the inspector general, an officer within some departments and agencies who investigates charges of waste or fraud.

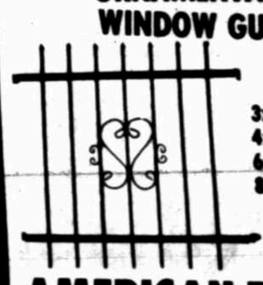

"It's generally felt that there are enough incentives for people so-called 'blowing the whistle' that this type of compensation is unnecessary," said Robin Raborn, a spokesman for the Office of Management and Budget. Because of opposition from the inspectors general and questions about how the program would be implemented, cash grants may never be made under the program, she said.

Schroeder could not be reached for comment because she was touring Asia. Previously, she said the agency awards would be an extra tool for inspectors general to combat waste and that public presentation of the presidential awards would help "overcome the fear that seizes most would-be whistleblowers." All 50 presidential awards should be presented each year, she said.

The inspectors general learned of the proposal only as it was nearing a final vote and quickly expressed their concern. Paul R. Boucher, the inspector general of the Small Business Administration, conducted a quick poll and found seven inspector generals opposed and seven in favor of the cash incentives.

Fourteen-year-old Tracy Mitchell, a freshman at Deer Park High School, tried unsuccessfully to have a cheerleader squad rule against waist-length hair changed, so she resigned from the group.

Cheerleader chooses to remain a long-hair

HOUSTON (AP) — A 14-year-old cheerleader has decided she'll turn in her pom-poms rather than cut her waist-length hair.

Tracy Mitchell refused to conform with a Deer Park High School rule on cheerleader hair length and says she will watch the football games from the bleachers this year

She asked school trustees to change the rule, but the board refused to intervene after the Deer Escorts, a drill team governing the cheereader squad, voted to keep the shoulder-length hair rule.

"I still can't believe the school board would do that to us," Tracy said. "I didn't fight the rule bcause I love my hair. I did it because I think it should be my choice how I wear it."

Drill team sponsor Cindy Faris contends the hair code promotes neatness, uniformity and team discipline.

Tracy admits it will be difficult to watch the games from the stands, but said, "I've decided all this was just meant to be and that there's nothing I can do about it. But I know I'm going to try out for cheerleader again next year — as long as they change the hair code."

Women get $3.2 million in discrimination case

The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — A jury here awarded $3,250,000 to two Los Angeles women Tuesday who said that an insurance company had denied their claims because they were black and were represented by a Jewish lawyer.

Jurors in the court of Judge Alfred L. Margolis voted 10-2 to grant $150,000 compensatory damages and $1.5 million punitive damages to Carol Whitmore, and voted 11-1 to award $100,000 compensatory and $1.5 million punitive damages to her mother, Clara Whitemore.

After delivering their verdict, jurors told the attorney representing 20th Century Insurance Co. of Los Angeles that they were swayed by employees of the company who testified that they were intimidated into ignoring or rejecting claims by blacks and Latinos — particularly if those claimants were represented by a Jewish lawyer.

"I think this case will have the desired effect on other insurance companies that unfair claims practices are not going to be tolerated no matter whether claimants are black or white or whatever," Charles J. Mazursky, the attorney for the two women, said. "People who pay their premiums and support the insurance industry are entitled to a better shake."

Ralph Hemer, 20th Century's attorney, said he could not determine immediately whether the company would appeal the unusually large verdict.

"I don't feel the facts of this case warrant the kind of punitive damages the jury awarded," Hemer said. "It is totally out of proportion to the alleged acts of the company and to the size of the company."

Mazursky said the size of the award was proper because 20th Century has $100 million in assets, a $30 million surplus in its stock portfolio and an annual net income of $8.5 million to $10 million.

"It was my argument," Mazursky said outside court, "that the only thing that any profit-making company understands is that a certain practice, if found to be illegal, is unprofitable."

In addition to the unusual charges of unconstitutional racial discrimination, and the fraud charges — which are more common to civil bad-faith insurance cases — the Whitmores' case was the first to be tried under California's Unfair Claims Practices Act.

Mazursky argued that 20th Century violated at least two provisions of the act by failing to settle the routine claims promptly and failing to respond promptly to communications from the Whitemores.

The Unfair Claims Practics Act, patterned after a model suggested by the national association of state insurance commissioners, was adopted by California in 1972. It was at first viewed as a tool for the insurance commissioner to use in investigating improper claims practices, but in 1979, the California Supreme Court ruled that individual claimants could sue for monetary damages based on violations of the law, paving the way for the Whitmores' case.

What seemed a cut-and-dried insurance claims matter began march 30, 1977, when the Whitmores' car was hit by an uninsured drunk driver who ran a red light.

Carol Whitemore, who was driving, suffered facial cuts and a torn cartilage in her knee. Her mother, who had chronic heart problems, received a fractured ankle and concussion.

Because the driver who struck their car was uninsured, the Whitmores went to their insurance company, 20th Century, for what they expected would be automatic and quick compensation for their injuries.

However, the company offered no payment until it was forced into arbitration more than a year later on May 30, 1978. The $25,000 awarded the Whitmores by the arbiter was finally paid in January 1979, nearly two years after the accident.

To support the charge of discrimination, Mazursky presented as witnesses three 20th Century employees — a claims supervisor, a manager and a former vice-president — who testified during the two-week trial that company president Louis Foster's racial biases permeated claims adjustments.

Foster and other executives denied from the witness stand any such prejudice in the company.

Does Key 47 fit Hughes' Lost Will?

HOUSTON (AP) — No one knows what key No. 47 opens. It belonged to Howard Hughes, and some would like to think it could unlock the "Lost Will" they believe the eccentic billionaire left when he died.

The so-calld Lost Will is one of at least 40 documents to surface since Hughes died Apil 5, 1976, on an emerency medical flight from Mexico to Houston. Most of them already have been thrown out by various courts.

Beneficiaries of the Lost Will — which purportedly leaves the bulk of the vast estate to the Florida-based Howard Hughes Medical Institute — admit they have not located an original copy.

Thy have only a tissue carbon copy. But they say a mystery key, stamped "47" and found among Hughes' pesonal effects, may open a strongbox somewhere that contains the original.

Attorneys for Texas and several cousins opposing the Lost Will scoff at the notion, saying there is no Lost Will.

The Howard Hughes Medical Institute, a tax-exempt research foundation which owns the multi-billion-dollar Hughes Aircraft Corp., unsuccessfully attempted to probate its carbon copy will in California and Nevada courts.

In Houston, Probate Judge Pat Gregory, who ruled last month that Hughes died without leaving a valid will, swiftly rejected the purported will after HHMI failed to identify two witnesses who signed the will or another person who had read it.

Gregory's decision was appealed in July to Texas' 14th Court of Civil Appeals, and a ruling is expected late this year.

The Lost Will is neither dated nor signed by Hughes, but its beneficiaies say it is probably about 55 yeas old because thy say it was found along with a letter from his lawyer dated May 30, 1925.

Within hours after his death, an extensive search of every place Hughes visited, lived and worked was launched in efforts to find a will.

They fond none, but searchers uncovered an envelope marked "keys" in California among some of the recluse's personal items. In the envelope were two sets of keys to safety deposit boxes. All but one was identified.

And that remaining key, labeled simply "47," has led to speculation by the holders of the Lost Will that it could open a lockbox somewhere containing the original will.

Attorneys for Texas and others contesting the Lost Will say even if there were such a will, HHMI still would not be entitled to the estate, worth from $180 million to $2 billion.

If the Lost Will is valid, they say, the tycoon, must have intended for his fortune to go to the Howard Hughes Medical Research Laboratories, the organization named in the will. Although such an organization was planned, it was never actually built.

"HHMI is a complete stranger to the 1925 will, it is not named in it and in fact was created nearly 30 yeas after the 1925 was allegedly executed," said a court response by the Texas attorney general's office. "Its interest is no greater than that of any member of the genral public."

But Lost Will beneficiaries argue that even thouh the exact name in their document is different, Hughes' intent was to lease his wealth to the medical research institute he later founded in his name.

While one group of attorneys argues over the validity of the Lost Will, another series of hearings is under way in Gregory's court to divide Hughes' estate on the assumption that the eccentric entrepreneur died without a will.

But no end appears in sight, and attorneys admit they are getting weary.

Shelton Smith, who represents two paternal cousins claiming part of the estate, said, "How many times are we going to have to go through this? Time and money are being spent going from state to state. Are they going to take this to Delaware next year?"

Banker guilty in embezzlement case

HOUSTON (AP) — W. Darrell Wiggin faces up to 30 years in prison and a $30,000 fine after pleading guilty to charges he embezzled nearly $17 million from the bank he worked for.

The former Allied Bank of Texas senior vice president entered the plea Tuesday before U.S. District Judge Ross N. Sterling.

Sterling set sentencing for Sept. 29.

Wiggins, an 11-year employee of the bank, told the judge he became involved in a scheme 10 years ago to sell unauthorized negotiable securities to help bank cutomers whose loan applications were turned down by Allied. He maintained he did not personally profit from the illegal transactions.

The bank filed suit to regain its losses from Wiggins' holdings, which included vast ranching properties in Texas and Colorado.

Wiggins was accuse of siphoning amounts ranging from $75,000 to $7.2 million from the bank between Dec. 9, 1980 and Jan. 2, 1981.

He resigned his post in January after the bank dicovered the $17 million loss.

School president released

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) Newark Board of Education President Carl Sharif has pleaded innocent to attempted murder and other charges in two alleged assaults last month on a "streetperson" and his friend, authorities say.

Sharif, who also is an aid to Mayor Kenneth Gibson, was released on his own recognizance folowing arraignment Tuesday bfore Superior Court Judge Edward Neagle.

"In light of the fact the defendant has very substantial ties, this office felt there was no reason to fear he would flee, and we agreed to no bail," said Essex County Assistant Prosecutor John Redden.

Sharif allegedly fired a handgun July 24 at a man identified by authorities as David Maor, Redden said.

Sven days earlier, Sharif allegedly pistolwhipped a Newark man identified as Bobby Simmons, Redden said. Redden said Simmons was a "street person," and he and Major were "associates." Redden did not elaborate.

Authorities refused to discuss what they thought was the motive for the alleged attacks.

Sharif was charged with attempted murder, aggravated assault, possession of a firearm and possession of a firearm with the purpose of using it unlawfully.

Prosecutor George Schneider said following the alleged attack on Simmons that Sharif's sons, Eric Dawson, 18; Darren Dawson, 19, and Carl Sharif, 21; all of Newark, and his brother, Clyde Dason, 43, of West Orange, were arrested on charges of aggravated assult. They have not been arraigned.

He said the charges would be presented to a grand jury, probably next month. Sharif's secretary said the school board president was not answering telephone calls.

In a statement released by Gibson's press office, the mayor said he wants Sharif to remain as an aide and as school board chairman.

Idyllic New Zealand bay is every fisherman's paradise

By NANCY CLEELAND
Copley News Service

BAY OF ISLANDS, New Zealand -- One promoter claims there is an island in this bay for every day of the year.

That's an exaggeration, said another local. But who's counting after a hundred?

Spots of land break up mile after mile of protected water. Eighty of them are named. Each offers its own secluded beach, perfect for afternoon picnics or a sailing break.

This is where modern New Zealand began, back in 1769 when Capt. Cook dropped anchor for England and gave the place its present name. He found the native Maoris none too friendly, but the attractive, fertile land and a benevolent climate kept drawing back his comrades.

Fortunately, the long voyage kept numbers down. Despite its attractiveness, Bay of Islands remains relatively unspoiled and isolated.

Only 3,000 people live here yearround, most in the tiny towns of Paihia, Russell, Waitangi and Kerikeri. The population swells to 10 times that during the busy summer-Christmas holidays (seasons are reversed in this part of the world).

Zane Grey, the American writer of Western folklore, lived his last years here in pursuit of big game fish. His "Tales of the Angler's El Dorado, New Zealand," published in 1926, immortalized the area and made him a bit of a local hero. Tourist boats point out his former camp on Urupukapuka Island with pride.

Of course, any serious fisherman could have found the place without Grey's help. Huge yellowtail (known as kingfish here), blue and yellowfin tuna, mako shark, and blue, black and striped marlin are routinely reeled in, including a 415-pound all-tackle world record yellowtail nabbed in 1964.

Big game fishing is centered in Paihia, where boats can be chartered from a wharf in the middle of town.

About $250 will buy a boat for a full day of fishing, holding four anglers comfortably. Singles can usually pick up a quarter share on a boat at an information office on the wharf. Some operators also offer half-day trips, at $150.

Anglers with less expensive tastes can buy a $15 ticket to a party boat trip, for red snapper on the bottom.

For a closer look at what's underwater, Paihia Dive center runs scuba trips to a variety of dive spots in the bay. Visibility of 15 to 60 feet, clearest from February through May, affords a good view of corals and sponges that cover the rocky floor.

Two of the best areas are Cathedral Cave, which features 80-foot drop-offs, and Bird Rock, where bat rays glide through forests of elkhorn kelp.

All dive spots in the bay are loaded with colorful subtropical fish that amaze divers by their numbers and audacity. Like most other wildlife in New Zealand, fish are accustomed to a trouble-free life. Small pink moa moas looking for handouts repeatedly bump divers.

Rock lobsters peek out of crevices in the rock. Kiwis call them crayfish. Pau paus, similar to California's abalones, are also found here.

One avid diver and treasure hunter, Kelly Tarlton, crammed a few decades' worth of booty into an old ship and called it the Shipwreck Museum. Moored at Waitangi, it holds a wealth ofsunken treasure including the recently recovered Rothschild jewels.

Historic decisions on U.S. defense being made this week

By JOHN HARRIS
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON -- Historic decisions on the defense of the United States are being made against an ominous deadline this week, as the nation's leadership ponders the shape of America's strategic nuclear power for the rest of the 20th century, and maybe beyond.

The deadline is the moment, believed just a few years ahead, when the Soviet Union will achieve the capability of destroying America's presently immobile, ground-based missile strength with a first strike of highly-accurate intercontinental missiles.

A first strike of this nature could deprive the U.S. of its ability to retaliate with a ground-based second strike. This, experts say, would render U.S. air and undersea-based nuclear capability correspondingly more vulnerable. The result, they add in a worst-case scenario, could be a stricken, relatively-helpless U.S. and an unscathed, dominant Soviet Union.

For these reasons President Reagan is now facing the immense responsibility of deciding where and how to base the planned mobile MX missile system, whether or not to build a new manned bomber and how to speed up development of the Trident submarine program -- decisions that involve the complete "triad," or three-legged base, of U.S. nuclear power.

The mathematics of the situation is such, the experts say, that it is no longer a question of whether new missile, bomber and submarine systems should be built, but only of when and how. The alternative is a swift, wide-ranging U.S.-Soviet disarmament agreement, largely based on mutual trust, a prospect few in the Reagan administration find realistic.

To help Reagan reach his decisions one of the most high-level conferences in recent American history is now in session in a Los Angeles hotel suite. Yet the decision-making process has been marked, it is said, by controversy between Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

Haig -- and the U.S. Air Force -- want the MX missile to be placed in the vastly-expensive, mobile, land-shelter mode envisioned during the Carter administration, reports say. But Weinberger, it is said, prefers an innovative, airborne MX mode, in which missiles would be launched in flight from large cargo planes.

Administration-watchers are awaiting the outcome of the Haig-Weinberger argument with considerable interest, and are wondering whether a head will roll if further disagreements on fundamental policy ensue. Reagan, it is pointed out, is apparently leaning toward Weinberger on the MX basing issue.

The two top Administration men have clashed before, it is noted, when Haig urged postponement -- to ease West European sensitivities -- of the recent announcement that the U.S. had decided to manufacture and store the neutron weapon. Weinberger had pressed for immediate publication, arguing that American policy could not be subject to other nations' attitudes, regardless of their status as allies.

The manned bomber issue has a background of intense controversy, too, and technological holdouts from the Carter Administration -- if there are any left in the White House or the Pentagon -- perhaps still support former Defense Secretary Harold Brown's decision to shelve the planned B-1 bomber project and contentrate on missiles instead.

The present administration appears committed to developing a manned bomber.

Rosalynn Carter, son Jack Carter and former President Jimmy Carter are given a tour of the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday by Robert K. Wilmouth, second from right, president and chief executive officer of the Board of Trade. The Carters visited the Chicago Board of Trade to view the opening and to visit their son Jack, who is a financial instruments trader at the Board of Trade.

Carter' re-election committee asked to repay government $105,362

WASHINGTON (A) — Former President Carter's re-election committee has been asked to repay the government $105,362, most of it representing interest earned on the $9.4 million his 1980 campaign received in federal funds.

The repayment amount contained in a bill sent the committee Tuesday by the Federal Election Commission is less than 10 percent of what court papers say the commission may ask President Reagan's election committee to repay from its $29.4 illion.

The commission said Carter's committee should repay $103,169 in interest earned on the campaign funds. It contends that because federal money was involved, the interest belongs to the government.

Also sought were $923 in contributions the commission ruled Carter could not legally accept and $1,270 for expenditures it said were not qualified under the law providing federal financing of presidential campaigns.

The Carter committee has 30 days to make the payment unless an extension is requested.

The audit report also said that some unspecified matters were referred to the FEC's legal office and that additional payments might be required from the Carter committee.

Reagan's committee filed suit in U.S. District Court here last week to stop the commission from publishing the final audit on his campaign. A letter attached to the suit says the audit may seek repayment of more than $1.5 million.

The suit said the committee and "various individuals associated with" it could suffer "unnecessary and unwarranted exposure to severe damage to their good name and reputation" if the audit is made public.

The suit said the campaign also could face legal action "pursuant to the civil and criminal provisions" of the election law.

The election commission is forbidden by law from commenting on the Reagan case until the audit is released. A lawyer for the Reagan committee declined to comment beyond the court papers.

Carter was asked to repay $19,443 after his primary campaign, which was partially financed with federal funds. Most of this was for exceeding the spending limits in Iowa, Maine and New Hampshire.

Reagan's final primary audit asked for $413,960, including $137,737 spent over the limit in New Hampshire. Most of the money sought in this Reagan audit was for excessive payments made to the committee by the overnment during the campaign.

Both candidates were given $29.4 million to conduct their general election campaigns. Once the money is accepted, a candidate may not spend more than that or accept private contributions beyond minor amounts to cover legal and accounting expenses involved in conforming with election laws.

Layton planned to kill defectors, but not congressman, lawyers say

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Larry Layton, caught in a web of power and paranoia woven by the Rev. Jim Jones, planned to kill a planeload of Peoples Temple defectors but knew nothing of a plot to kill a congressman, his lawyers say.

In opening statements Tuesday at Layton's trial, Assistant U.S. Public Defender Frank Bell said Layton was unaware that Rep. Leo Ryan, D-Calif., and Richard Dwyer, U.S. chief of mission in Guyana, were going to be ambushed on a jugle airstrip in Guyana.

Layton is charged in a four-count indictment with conspiracy to murder Ryan and Dwyer. Ryan was killed during the Nov. 18, 1978, ambush and Dwyer was uninjured.

"The evidence will show that the people who shot down the Leo Ryan group were not aware of Larry's plans, and Larry was not aware of their plans," Bell told the U.S. District Curt jury hearing Layton's murder-conspiracy trial. No plane of defectors ever left.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Dodero said he plans to prove the 35-year-old Layton, who gave up his wife to Jones, posed as a Temple defector to carry out a plot hatched by Jones's lieutenants to kill Ryan and Dwyer.

Dondero said prosecution witnesses, scheduled to begin testimony today, would tell the jury Layton was seen with a handgun he allegedly used to wound Temple defectors Vernon Gosney and Monica Bagby during the ambush.

Television videotapes made before and during the attack woud show Layton talking before the incident with temple leaders who fired on Ryan's plane, Dondero said.

Bell contended Layton's plan had been to board the plane and when it was over the jungle, "shoot the pilot...to kill the defectors."

Layton "went to pieces" because of the depressing cirumstances at the Jonestown settlement, Bell said, adding after the ambush, Layton was seen "staring at the sky in a confused manner and mumbling about CIA conspiracies."

Killed at the Port Kaituma airstrip were Ryan, NBC television newsman Don Harris, NBC cameraman Robert Brown, San Francisco Examiner photographer Greg Robinson and Patricia Parks, a temple defector.

Hours after the ambush, Jones led 912 members of the Peoples Temple in mass murder-suicide at nearby Jonestown.

U.S. District Judge Robert Peckham made no final ruling Tuesday on the admissibility of the television videotapes.

The two hours of tape shot by an NBC News team featured interviews with temple members who insisted they were happy and free to leave whenever they chose, despite reports to the contrary. "They say they're happy, but they were all dead within eight hours of the interviews.

Atlanta concerned about Cubans' release

The Los Angeles Times

ATLANTA — Mayor Maynard Jackson expressed concern Tuesday for the safety of Atlanta's citizens if 322 imprisoned Cuban refugees are released as scheduled, and he asked for federal assistance in preventing disturbances such as those encountered in Miami last year.

In a letter to the Atlanta City Council, he said it was Washington's responsibility to develop plans "to ensure the safety and welfare" of both the freed Cubans and Atlanta citizens. The letter asked the council to join his request for federal assistance.

Jackson's comments came in response to U.S. District Judge Marvin H. Shoob's order to release some of the 1,800 Cubans who have been held for as long as 14 months without charges at the federal penitentiary here.

The first group of 322 refugees is scheduled to be released Wednesday unless the federal government can show in a morning hearing that Shoob's order was improper.

The Cubans were among the 127,000 who fled the island last spring in a "Freedom Flotilla." Their massive resettlement in Miami caused racial unrest and an upsurge in crime in that city.

Those refugees who did not have proper entry papers, or wereconsidered by the Immigration and Naturalization Service to be criminals or mentally ill were eventually transferred to the maximum-security, 79-year-old penitentiary in atlanta. They have remained there ever since.

"I am disappointed that Mayor Jackson chose to make such remarks," Gene Guerreroi, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union in Georgia, said. "I think those reinforce fear, and I think that that fear is unfounded."

"The Immigration Service has charactgerized these Cubans as dangerous people," Guerrero added. "I am not convinced that any of them pose any danger. Many of them simply didn't have the proper papers. The vast majority that were characterized as criminals had served their time, or (were) near the end of their sentences, and more often than not, their offense was crime against property, like minor burglary."

Dick Jameson, the Washington-based coordinator for the U.S. Catholic Conference, which is heling to resettle the Cubans, said that about 30 percent of the Cubans in the first group to be released will move in with relatives throughout the country. Others, he said, would be assigned to halfway houses in various states, where they could learn English and could become integrated into local communities.

Atlanta has a Latino population of 40,000, about 2,000 of whom are Cubans who settled here without incident after arriving in the flotilla. Few of the Cubans scheduled to be released Wednesday would be likely to remain in Atlanta, immigration sources said.

Like other officials involved in the pending release, Jameson urged careful screening of the imprisoned Cubans and a relaxed timetable for freeing them. If they were released without the sponsorship of their families or some organization, he said, the resulting problems might lead some back to prison.

"These people have no way of defending themselves out in the street," Jameson said. "It's better to wait another week or two in the slammer than to get out and be back in this time for a crime committed in the United States. We don't want people in the states to be endangered."

In his ruling Monday, Shoob said the government's handling of the imprisoned Cubans had been a "disgrace." He accused the immigration service of dragging its heels and rejected a government proposal to speed up the processing of the refugees' applications for release, saying that he wanted immediate action instead.

"My purpose is to get those people out of there who by every standard ought to be released," Shoob said.

The government has divided the 1,800 imprisoned Cubans into 12 classifications according to their backgrounds and potential threat to society ranging from those not having entry papers to those who are insane.

Anniversary bomb feared by police

RENO, Nev. (AP)— Police pressed to make arrests early this month in the extortion bombing at Harveys Resort Hoel-Casino for fear that the first anniversary of the incident Aug. 27 would be marked with another blast, a federal prosecutor says.

John Birges Sr., the high-rolling gambler indicted in the case Tuesday wih his two sons and three other people, has been accused by the FBI of stealing dynamite to build a second bomb.

Agents said they feared the bomb would be used either at Harveys, near Lake Tahoe, or at the Bank of America's headquarters in San Francisco. A federal grand jury indicted Birges, 59, accused of masterminding the plot; his two sons, John Waldo Birges Jr., 2, and James William Birges, 19; Ella Joan Willams, 47, with whom the elder Birges lived; and Terry Lee Hall, 25, and Willis "Bill" Brown, 50, both of Fresno, Calif. The Birges famil lives in Clovis, Calif.

The indictments charge them with conspiracy to attempt extortion, interstate commerce in the pursuit of unlawful activity, interstate transport in the aid of extorion and the transport of explosives. The maximm penalty is 40 years in prison and a $40,000 fine.

The six were expected to appear before a U.S. magistrate today in Fresno for a removal order. Arraignment was to follow in Reno.

The two younger Birgeses may be treated lightly because they cooperated in the investigation of their father, Assistant U.S. Attorney Ed Kane said Tuesday. He said he expected them to testify against the others.

John Birges Jr. was charged Friday with perjuring himself before a federal grand jury in February in Reno.

The Newspaper BIBLE

WHAT'S THE WORLD COMING TO?

Heaven and earth will disappear, but My words remain forever. But no one knows the date and hour when the end will be - not even the angels. No, nor even God's Son. Only the Father knows. (Matthew 24:35-36)

And God has commanded that the earth and heavens will be stored away for a great bonfire at the judgment day, when all ungodly men will perish. But don't forget this, dear friends, that a day or a thousand years from now is like tomorrow to the Lord. He isn't really being slow about His promised return, even though it sometimes seems that way. But He is waiting, for the good reason that He is not willing that any should perish, and He is giving more time for sinners to repent. The day of the Lord is surely coming, as unexpectedly as a thief, and then the heavens will pass away with a terrible noise and the heavenly bodies will disappear in fire, and the earth and everything on it will be burned up. And so since everything around us is going to melt away, what holy, godly lives we should be living! You should look forward to that day and hurry it along - the day when God will set the heavens on fire, and the heavenly bodies will melt and disappear in flames. But we are looking forward to God's promise of new heavens and a new earth afterwards, where there will be only goodness. (2 Peter 3:7-13)

Then I saw a new earth (with no oceans!) and a new sky, for the present earth and sky had disappeared. (Rev. 21:1)

Rising woman novelist defends romantic books

DALLAS, Texas (AP) — She's modeled professionally, hosted a television show, flirted with show biz and perfected the sizzling kiss.

She's tall and willowy and looks like she writes, which, in her own words, is "erotic and sensuous," never "crude or dirty."

Meet author Sandra Brown, alias Rachel Ryan ... Laura Jordan ... Erin St. Claire.

"I've got three publishing houses so I write under three names," she said, as if that somehow made sense.

But with six novels sold to major New York publishers, Sandra seems well on her way to becoming a soft-core counterpart to Harold Robbins.

Which is not bad for a self-confessed Texas "daydreamer" with a husband, two fiesty kids and a mom and dad who wonder just what it is she's up to next.

Sandra, 33, writes romantic novels, those much-maligned, much-read paperback yarns that insensitive male clucks call dirty books.

They're daring, not dirty, sniffed she. "I ignore the snickers."

Until recently, Sandra was just another beautiful and familiar face on Dallas television; a brown-eyed, brown-haired model in a busy fashion marketing center.

Then she wrote and sold a book called "Love's Encore," which surfaced this month in Dell's "Candlelight Ecstacy Romances."

Dell apparently liked Sandra, purchasing three more titles, "Love Beyond Reason," "Eloquent Silence" and "A Treasure Worth Seeking."

All but "Love's Encore" were sold via synopses, not manuscripts, in roughly 18 months.

"I'm negotiating a seventh," she said, an eyebrow fluttering sensuously as she surrendered a copy of "Love's Encore" to an insensitive male cluck.

Says a teaser on the back cover:

"A glorious day on the sparkling Utah ski slopes lay behind her. Flames blazed on the hearth in front of her. Before she knew what possessed her, Camille had surrendered utterly to the virile stranger—a man like no man she had met before."

Two years later, Camille and the virile stranger cross paths again, and the chance meeting raises this haunting question:

"Would she have accepted the challenge had she known he would be there...taunting her...beckoning to her in the magnolia-scented night...daring her to risk heartbreak—and love—again?"

One suspects she would. But whatever, you get the idea.

Senator knocks government spending

By FRED MUIR
Copley News Service

Be advised: Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, thinks the federal government spends too much money.

Garn said in an interview that it took the federal government nearly 200 years -- until 1962 -- to spend its first $100 billion.

The second $100 billion clicked away in just seven years, he said.

And by 1974, when Garn was first elected to the Senate after serving as mayor of Salt Lake City, the federal budget was proposed by then-President Gerald Ford to be $295 billion. Congress later passed a budget of $318 billion that year.

Now the budget stands at more than $700 billion.

"Last year, there was a $100 billion increase in spending without any act of Congress," said Garn. "It was all due to automatic escalators" and similar entitlement programs.

"The budget is literally out of control. President Reagan did not overstate the situation when he said that in January. If anything, he understated the situation.

Garn said that $1 in every $10 of taxes now goes just to pay interest on the national debt.

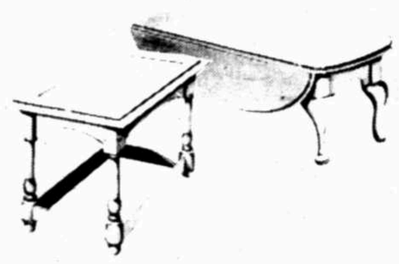

He said 23 percent of America's gross national product is taxed away by the federal government, and an additional 17 percent goes to state and local governments.

Kuhn expected to make decision today on schedule

By The Associated Press

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn delayed his decision today on a change in the format for the major league's split-season playoffs.

Kuhn met with Lee MacPhail, president of the American League, and Chub Feeney, National League president, for much of the day Tuesday, but no announcement was made regarding the split-season and playoff systems adopted by the owners following the 50-day players' strike.

THE OWNERS opted for the split season with the hope that teams far down in the standings would be able to draw fans because they were not hopelessly out of the pennant race down the stretch. The winners of each portion of the season in each division would qualify for a divisional playoff, with the team winning that moving into the league's championship series.

The New York Yankees, Oakland A's, Philadelphia Phillies and Los Angeles Dodgers were first-half division winners, in first place at the time of the strike June 1, and already have qualified for the playoffs.

The snag in that format occurs when the same team wins both portions of the season. Then, under the present system, the team with the second-best pecentage in that division over the entire season would take on the club which twice finished first, in the divisional playoff.

IT BECAME apparent, however, that teams could benefit by losing. For example, if the Kansas City Royals and Oakland A's were battling for the second half flag in the American League West, and the Chicago White Sox were playing the A's, Chicago might make the playoff by intentionally losing games to Oakland. The White Sox would be out if Kansas City won the division in the second half of the season. But if the A's won both halves, the White Sox might be the team with the second-best overall percentage.

Therefore, by losing games to Oakland, Chicgo could help itself into the postseason. White Sox Manager Tony LaRussa said he would be in favor of his team forfeiting those game in order to make the playoff.

WHEN KUHN heard of LaRussa's comments, and similars ones made by St. Louis Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog, he pledged to revise the system or "at least make an adjustment in it to preclude any possibility of a team losing a game to get ahead. We're not going to have that happen."

What are some of the commissioner's options?

The split-season format could be scrapped and the standings would revert back to those at the time of the strike, with the games played after the strike added in.

If the same team wins each half of its division race, it would draw a bye, thus qualifying for the league championship series.

The team with the best record in the second portion would play the club which won both halves.

Having the two second-place teams for each half of the season hold one game playoff to determine who plays the two-time division winner. Whatever format is decided upon, the players association must approve it.

MARVIN MILLER, executive director of the players association, said his union "will certainly be open to consideration" of any revised split-season concept.

'We would have to approve any new plan because they would be changing the contract," said Miller.

CFA, NBC to team up

By The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The College Football Association has confirmed that NBC wuld pay half the legal costs if its battle with the NCAA goes to court raising a new storm of controversy in the war over control of football televison rights.

Ohio State President Harold Enarson said he was "astonished" that the CFA would enter into such an agreement. And Andy Geiger, atletic director at Stanford, termed the news "incredible."

Meanwhile, Charles M. Neinas, CFA executive directr, said the organization mihgt shorten the three-week "reconsideration period" in which CFA schools can change the ballot they cast Friday. All 61 CFA members will gather in Atlanta Friday to vote on whether to ratify a four-year television deal with NBC.

THE NCAA has reached agrement with ABC and CBS for the same period, 1982-85, and has said it would begin disciplinay action against any schools that adopt the NBC-CFA plan. This could lead to a split of the CFA schools from the NCAA, a situation many CFA and NCAA supporters alike say could lead to athletic chaos.

The CFA includes all major independents and five conferences — the Big Eight, Southeastern, Southwest, Western Athletic and Atlantic Coast. The Big Ten and Pac-10, of which Ohio State and Stnford are members, do not belong.

This is not the first time the CFA's relationship with NBC has stirred controversy in the athletic community. Earlier, it was learned that Neinas, in a report to the CFA board of directors, had said that in the event of a CFA pullout from the NCAA, "... NBC is willig to commit the means to support CFA activities in other sports ..."

"This really astonishes me," Enarson, a frequent NCAA critic in the past, said in an interview with the Associated Press, "that there could be any serious consideration of letting any external agency — in this case, big-time, big-money television — pull the strings as it were.

"THE HANDLING of one's legal services is as close to the heart of institutional itegrity as anything I can imagine I think we would be naive in the extreme to belive one could let someone else pay half your legal fees without having that other party share mightily in the control of policy. Frankly, I find it mid-boggling."

Neinas confirmed the CFA had such an arrangement with NBC.

"The reason we suggested that clause be included in the contract is simple," he said. "I the CFA and NBC are partners and as a result of an agreement, litigation evolves, then the partners should be prepared to share in the expense. People can read what they want into things."

"President Enarson's point is exactly on target,"Geiger said in an interview. "The relationship is indeed a partnership, and it is a significant departure from the stated purpose of he CFA at its inception. It has strayed giant strides away from the special-interest lobbying group it claimed it was going to be."

CHIEF EXECUTIVE officers of the Big Ten and Pac-10 schools met in Denver last weekend and issued a statement reaffirming their support of the NCAA. While the NCAA has maintained a low profile this week, Big Ten and Pac-10 presidents have been on the phone urging preidents of CFA schools to vote against adoption of the CFA plan and avoid a possibly destructive confrontation.

Enarson predicted many of the CFA presidents would be repelled b the CFA-NBC alliance.

"I really can't beieve those 61 presilents will buy that," he said "How can the CFA say blythly, 'Oh, by the way, we will abide by some of your rules some of the time, but we will decide which rules we will abide by ...'

"I remember when entreaties were made to the Pac-10 to join that there were assurances this sort of thing would not happen," said Geiger. "The CAA as a membership association isn't perfect because it is that."

Could this be TCU's year?

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — To hear Texas Christian football Coach F.A. Dry tell it, the Southwest Conference is tougher than a boarding house steak.

"The only breather you get in this conference," said he, "is an open date."

Only half jokingly, he pointed out recently that a team must be a national contender if it expects to finish in the top echelon of the SWC.

"Texas...Arkansas...Houston...Baylor...SMU...I don't think there's a lot of difference in the first five. All five were bowl teams last year."

THAT DOES, however, overlook the fact that three of the five, including defending champion Baylor, lost their postseason contests.

"People do slip in and beat our teams," Dry conceded, "but I believe it's because of what we do to each other each week."

Dry's observations came on the eve of a new SWC season, one in which his Horned Frogs could be a spoiler if not an out-and-out contender.

"You can never be satisfied unless you win," he said, but declined to predict just how much winning he expects his Frogs to do.

"If I could predict such things," he grumbled, "I'd get rich on forecasting alone."

But after four rebuilding years, Dry kicks off his fifth season at TCU with a team which an opposing coach suggests is "going to bite some people."

Thirty-five lettermen return, including eight starters on offense and nine on defense. Said Dry:

"WE'RE MUCH more physical, and we have more depth than we've had since I've been here...These kids have morale and incentive...They are achievers."

He also has some players, he says, "who can move the football," which has seldom been the case since his arrival here in 1977.

Foremost among the movers are quarterback Steve Stamp and his top passing target, Stanley Washington, a flashy split end with All-SWC credentials.

Stamp seized the starting quarterback slot five games into the 1980 season and went on to complete 127 of 247 passes for 1,830 yards and 14 touchdowns.

It hardly hurts that he is also a gifted runner.

But TCU also has, in backs Kevin Hardy and Marcus Gilbert, a pair of veterans who could bring new life to a running attack known widely as nonexistent.

ANOTHER PLUS is fleet Phillip Epps, a 3-year letterman who looms as a possible All-SWC flanker.

The kicking game appears solid, with Greg Porter, 15 of 16 on extra point tries last year, eyeing some school kicking records.

Despite uncommon speed, experience and size, the defense must jell quickly, blending junior college transfers into the system, if TCU is to be a winner, Dry said.

"IF YOU can't stop anybody, you can't beat anybody," he quipped, noting that injuries decimated the defense last year, presumably wrecking his rebuilding timetable.

But the time may be now.

Veteran linebackers Darrell Patterson and Mike Dry, the coach's son, and tackle John McClean loom as the defensive leaders, forming one of the top trios in the conference.

The schedule favors the Frogs for a change, providing an open date after the Sept. 5 kickoff at Auburn. Six of the remaining 10 games are at home.

"I think that's good," said Dry.

Schroeder's home run dooms Cubs to defeat

EL PASO — Catcher Bill Schroeder, who had not hit a home run since July 12, got back in the groove here Tuesday night with an eighth inning solo shot to lead the El Paso Diablos to a 5-4 victory over the Midland Cubs.

THE BIG hit by Schroeder off loser Craig Lefferts (11-11) gave the Diablos their fourth victory in five outings of the completed series. However, Midland remained only ½-game out of first place in the Texas League West as Amarillo defeated San Antonio, 10-6.

Amarillo also jumped into the title picture with the victory, moving to within 2½ games of first place. Midland travels to Amarillo today for a 7:30 p.m. game with the red hot Gold Sox. San Antonio, also having trouble winning now, travels to El Paso. Only 15 games remain in regular season play.

MIDLAND HAD tied the game at 4-4 in the seventh inning with a three run outburst. Carmello Martinez, J.W. Mitchell, Joe Carter, Mike Diaz and David Pagel produced consecutive singles for two runs and Jack Upton brought in another with a grounder.

Lefferts went the distance for Midland. He gave up 10 hits and was touched for two runs in the first. Two errors by Mitchell in the fifth paved the way for two unearned runs off Lefferts. Lefferts had 10 strikeouts in the game, but Schroeder's homer in the eighth proved to be his downfall.

Al Koontz, now 5-5, won the game in relief as he replaced Montgomery in the three-run Midland seventh. Koontz gave up four Midland hits, but did not allow a run.

The largest crowd of the series, 4,196, was on hand for the contest.

Bergy not ready to retire

The Philadelphia Eagles may have some doubts about Bill Bergey's ailing left knee. He doesn't, though.

Bergey, for many seasons one of the premier midde linebackers in the National Football League, was placed on the four-week injured reserve list by the Eagles Tuesday as last season's Super Bowl finalists reached the NFL's mandatory 60-man roster limit.

"He's just not physically ready to play," said Eagles Head Coach Dick Vermeil, who added he made the decision reluctantly.

It was one Bergey wasn't ready to swallow.

"I thought I played well Saturday (against Pittsburgh) until I saw the films from the end zone. They showed obviously that my knee has not come along."

BUT BERGEY isn't ready to call it a career just yet.

"I'll bet I'll be back," Bergey told reporters at the Eagles' West Chester, Pa., training base. "I'm down right now. But starting next week I'll be aggressive. I'll do weightliftig, swim, work on stationary bike and build up my knee to where I think it should be."

Bergey injured the knee in the third game of the 1979 season and missed the remainder of the year. He came back in 1980 to lead Philadelphia with 119 tackles, but it was obvious he had lost much of his lateral mobility.

"I ever wanted to see this day," said Bergey. "But I've been very lucky. I'l just see what happens. When I'm sure I can't play I'll be ready to retire easily. Right now I'm not ready to admit I can't play football any more."

A number of NL players, including a number of Bergey's former teammates, had the same feeling after Tuesay's cutdowns.

The Eagles waived 10 players Tuesday, including six-year fullback Mike Hogan and fifth-year wide receiver Luther Blue.

OTHER BIG names who were told to turn in their play books were veteran running backs Don Hardeman of the New Orleans Saints, Bubba Bean of the Atlanta Falcons and Boobie Clark of the Buffalo Bills.

Veteran Steve Furness was given a different sendoff by the Pittsburgh Steelers, who traded the defensive lineman to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

The New England Patriots also went through the formality of deactivating tight end Russ Francis, who earlier this year surprsed the team by announcing his retirement. Hardeman was one of Houston's first-round draft picks in 1975 after starring as both a running back and linebacker at Texas A&I. He never gained the fame that many top-round selections enjoy, and ultimately became expendable when Earl Campbell joined the Oilers in 1978.

He was traded from Houston to Tampa Bay to Baltimore before the 1978 season and last year went to Denver. When the Broncos cut him he joined the Saints as a linebacker, but it did not pan out.

BEAN WAS the Falcons' first-round draft choice out of Texas A&M in 1976. He gained 428 yards as a rookie, missing his second season with a knee injury, rushed for 707 yards in 1978, then reinjured his knee and sat out most of 1979 and all of 1980.

"He has athletic ability and talent," said Coach Leeman Bennett. "We just couldn't get it out of him. We felt now was the time to let him go. By letting him go now rather than later, there's more chance someone else will pick him up."

Defensive back Steve Luke, acquired by the Falcons last month in a trade with Green Bay, also was cut — as was Frank Reed, the safety the Packers picked up in the deal that sent Luke to Alanta.

Clark, 31, a 12th-round draft choic by Cincinnati, had his best year as a rookie when he gained 988 yards and scored eight touchdons. But he never matched that performance, was waived by the Bengals in 1978 and played sparingly for Houston after that.

The Bills also placed Booker Moore, one of their top draft choices this season on reserve list for non-football injuries. He is suffering from a neve problem.

While many players were being cut, two holdouts returned to the fold. Baltimore signed wide receier Roger Carr, who walked out of camp last week aftr he and the Colts failed to reach agreement on a new contract, while the Denver Broncos signed placekicker Fred Steinfort.

THE BRONCOS also waived a dozen players, including former Nebraska running back I.M.Hipp.

The Los Aneles Rams placed three players on the injured reserve list, including third-round draft choices Greg Meisner of Pitt and Bob Cobb of Arizona, both defensive linemen.

The Pittsburgh Steelrs placed quarterback Rick Trocano, an 11th-round selection from Pitt, on injured reserve. He has been unable to practice due to pulled stomach muscles.

Lnebacker Clifton Odom and defensive tackle Ron Crew, two of Cleveland's hgh draft picks of a year go, were among the dozen players lopped off the Bowns' roster, while safty Tony Blount was waived by the New York Giants.

Guard Noah Jackon was signed to a pair of one-year contracts by the Chicago Bears and the New York Jets signed tight end Sam Bowers, who had been with them in the 1980 exibition season and was waived last week by the Giants.

The Detroit Lions placed vetern wide reeiver Jesse Thompson and three others on the injred reserve list, while Kansas City announced the retirement of reserve fullback Arnold Morgado and waived three others, including Sylvester Hicks, the Chiefs No.2 draft choice in 1978.

Gary Huff, an eight-year pro signal caller with Chicago and Tampa Bay, was one of three players waived by the San Francisco 49er.

Ali starts comeback?

By The Associated Press

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Three-time heavyweight boxing champion Muhamad Ali arrived in Columbia today to launch his latest comeback attempt and "teach the world not to quit."

Ali was scheduled to take a physical examination later today to determine whether he will be granted a boxing license here.

Richland County boxing officials have said they see no reason why a 39-year-old Ali shouldn't be allowed to fight if he can pass a medical test.Ali will turn 40 this January.

Ali said Lybia, Egypt, Morrocco and other North African countries were "begging me to come." But he said he wanted to make his comeback attempt in the United States — and Columbia appeared to be the only possibe site. "I'm actually teaching the world, teaching the deprived pople, teaching the minority peope, people who give up," he said.

Ali, looking tired from his cross-country plane trip, admitted in a barely audble voice that it would be hard to step into the ring again.

"It's going to be tough to get in shape and come back," he said. "It's risky, but life is risky."

Ali said that just having the chance to be four-time champion meant he had to try "I'm the only man who can do it," he said. "I know I can win. But I'm going to have to prove that a 40-year-old man can still fight."

Ali declined to name his choice of opponents, noting that Mike Weaver, Larry Holmes, and others would all be tough to beat.

Ali said Joe Frazier, who once beat Ali for the title and then lost in a rematch with Ali, was planning a comeback of his own.

A reporter told Ali that Frazier had been in town recently and said that he didn't trust Ali and would never turn his back on him.

For the first time Ali smiled, his voice rose, and he said in a parody of his old bantering style: "Joe Frazier's my man. I want Joe Frazier!"

REGULAR SEASON ENDS

Valentine's presence boosts Kingman

By The Associated Press

When the New York Mets got a Valentine on May 29, it was like giving Dave Kingman a Christmas present.

Ellis Valentine has had only sporadic success since being acquired from Montreal just two weeks before the players' strike, but Kingman says that his own power groove was given a big boost by having Valentine batting behind him in the lineup.

In the last 16 games before the strike and eight games after, Kingman has 12 home runs and 25 runs batted in, including two solo homers and a run-scoring double as the Mets blanked the Atlanta Braves 4-0 Tuesday night.

"In my mind it's an immense advantage knowing a threat like that is behind me," said Kingman, who bats fourth in the Mets' lineup ahead of Valentine. "Prior to and just afer the strike I've been getting pitches to hit. To me, he's (Valentine) been a big help."

Kingman's homers, in support of the combined six-hit pitching of Ed Lynch and Neil Allen, were his 17th and 18th of the strike-shortened season, tying him with Mike Schmidt for the major league lead.

Kingman's RBI double came in the first inning off loser Rick Mahler, 3-3. It scored Mookie Wilson, who had singled and sole second.

Kingman got both of his home runs off reliever John Montefusco, on the first pitch of the sixth and eighth innings. Both shots carried into the left field seats.

Lynch, 2-3, allowed five hits in 7 2-3 innings before he was relieved by Allen with two runnrs on base in the eighth. Allen retired Bob Horner on a grounder to end that threat and went on to earn his 10th save.

The Mets, 17-30 before the strike, are showing new life in the second season. They have won six of their eight starts and are in first place by a half game in the NL East.

"I'm excited about the race," said Kingman. "We've got some new faces on the club. We've got some guys who are injured but we're still wining with untested arms on the mound. They are pitching their hearts out.'

Dodgers 5, Cubs 0

Burt Hooton allowed no Chicago runners past second base as he pitched a four-hitter for his 25th career shutout.

Dusty Baker, who extended his consecutive-game hitting streak to 15, had two run-scoring singles for Los Angeles and Ken Landreaux added a two-run single.

Reds 3, Phillies 1

Tom Seaver outdueled Steve Carlton, surrendering only four hits in 8 1-3 innings to pace Cincinnati in a battle of three-time Cy Young Award winners.

"It doesnt make any difference (who the opposing pitcher was)," said Seaver. "You condition yourself hard, regardless of whether you're pitching against someone who's 1-10 or 10-1, a first-place team or a last-place team."

Seaver, 8-2, had three-hitter through eight innings, but needed relief help in the ninth. Carlton, 9-3, gave up two runs in the sixth on a run-scoring single by Ray Knight and the first of two sacrifice flies by Sam Mejias.

Astros 6, Expos 3

Houston, 6-3 in the second half, took over first place in the West as Cesar Cedeno knocked in three runs with two singles and Bob Knepper blanked Montreal for 8 2-3 innings.

Knepper was working on his fifth shuout of the season with two outs in the ninth when he was victimized by a two-run homer by Larry Parrish.

Padres 4, Cardinals 3

Luis Slazar hit two run-scoring singles and Chris Welsh pitched a four-hitter for seven innings as San Diego won only its second game in nine decisions since the strike ended.

Welsh had a 4-1 lead gong into the eighth, but he gave up a two-run homer to Gene Tenace to make it close. St. Louis got two runners on base in the ninth against reliever Dan Boone, but John Urrea retired the last two batters for his first save.

Giants 4, Pirates 2

Former Pirates Ed Whitson and Milt May paced San Francisco's victory over Pittsburgh.

Whitson allowed one run and four hits in 5 1-3 innings before having to leave the game with a hyperextended elbow.

Second coach on trial

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Former University of New Mexico assistant basketball coach Manny Goldsten often left on recruiting trps "on the spur of the moment," a school offcial told a district court jury.

Robert DoBell, associate athletic director at UNM, testified Tuesday Golstein spent a great deal of time on the road during the time he was the chief recruiter for then UNM head basketball Coach Norm Ellenberger.

"HE WAS on the road-quite a bit," DoBell said. 'He was on the run all the time."

DoBells testimony came as the prosecution opened its case against Goldstein, who is charged with three counts of fraud and three counts of filing false public vouchers. The charges, all four degree felonies, relate to three recruiting trips fo which Goldstein submitte vouchers for reimbusement from the university

Specifically, Goldstein is accused of cheating the university out of $1,001 during a period from March 1978 to September 1979.

The charges against Goldstein stem from an investigation which followed a recruiting scandal that hit the school's basketball program in December 1979. As a result of the scandal, which centered on the school's recruitig tactics, Ellenberger and Goldstein were fired at the start of the 1979-80 season.

PROSECUTOR STEPHEN Westheimer told the jury in his opening remarks Tuesday the state will prove Goldstein received $123.44 for a trip to Hobbs, N.M., that he never took. He said Goldstein received $684 for a trip to Atlanta and New York that he did not make. And Westheimer said Goldstein received $194 for travel that he did not make during one trip that included many stops.

DoBell, who spent several hours on the witness stand, most of it under cross examination by Goldstein's attorney Ann Seinmetz, explained the travel voucher system in use at the university at he time Goldstein was an assistant coach.

DoBll said the university paid for airline tickets, telephone calls, car rental fees and other expenses claimed by Goldstein as part of recruitig trips. At one point, DoBell said the university's travel voucher system was inadequate nd added, "It's a poor way to run a business."

He said the voucher system has since been revamped.

"ISN'T IT your job to review these documents so that the proper reimbursement can be made?" Ms. Steinmetz asked DoBell.

"Yes, it's probably my job to do so, but I also have to rely on the individual to say, 'I did this, this and this,'" DoBell answered.

Goldstein is the second former Ne Mexico basketbal coach to stand trial on state charges.

Leach, Ainge shine brightly in wins

By The Associated Press

Rick Leach was a football hero and Danny Ainge made his fame in basketball in college.

Now the ball is bouncing in a different direction for both of them, as they seek to make it big in baseball. And Tuesday night, both did well on the diamond.

"I know I have major league ability and I know I can play," said Leach after his three-run homer helped the Detroit Tigers beat the Minnesota Twins 3-0.

"I'm a winner," added Leach after blasting his first major league homer. "All I can compare tonight with is beating Ohio State and going to the Rose Bowl."

Leach starred at quarterback for the University of Michigan.

Ainge, an All-America basketball player for Brigham Young University, has been struggling with the Toronto Blue Jays. But Tuesday night, he reached base four times to help his team beat the Kansas City Royals 5-3.

"Basketball can't help but be on my mind when people keep bringing it up," said Ainge. "But I'd just as well not talk about it. I had gone from a lot of success to a failure, really. It was good for me mentally to get some time off (with the baseball strike). I was being over-aggressive at the plate and not being a smart hitter."

Ainge's three singles against the Royals raised his average to .199.

In other American League action, Milwaukee beat Texas 3-1 in the first game of a doubleheader before dropping the nightcap 8-6, the New York Yankees blanked Chicago 4-0, Baltimore edged California 6-5, Cleveland trimed Seattle 5-2 and Oakland beat Boston 3-2 in 15 innings.

Leach's homer came in the sixth inning and it was all the runs Detroit needed as Milt Wilcox and Kevin Saucier combined on a six-hitter. The victory was Detroit's fifth in a row matching the Tigers' longest streak of the season, while sending the Twins to their fifth straight defeat.

Steve Kemp drew a walk off Minnesota starter Roger Erickson, 3-8, in the Detroit sixth and went to third on Kirk Gibson's two-out double before Leach lashed Roger Erickson's first pitch for his game-winning homer.

Wilcox, 8-5, allowed all six Minnesota hits in eight innings before Saucier took over in the ninth.

Along with his three singles and a walk, Ainge turned in a sparkling play at third base to thart a Royal rally. One of Ainge's singles triggered a two-run eighth that provided the Blue Jays with their winning runs.

Luis Leal, 4-8, was the winner with reief help from Roy Lee Jackson, who came in with two out in the eighth and gained his sixth save.

Brewers 3-6, Rangers 1-8

Ben Oglivie hit a three-run homer in the first inning and Moose Haas scattered seven hits in 71-3 innings as Milwaukee stopped Texas in the first game of their doubleheader. Haas, 7-4, recording his first victory over Texas since 1979, needed eighth-inning relief help from Jamie Easterly and Rollie Fingers, who pitched out of a one-out, bases-loaded jam and went on to record his 16th save. "The main things I have going for me now are control and experience," said Fingers. "I'm usually able to throw the ball where I want to, and that's a big thing. Early in my career, I was put into a lot of pressure situations — big games that were on the line So it doesn't bother me now to come in late in the game with men on base."

Bill Stein's two-run single keyed a six-run sixth that propelled Texas over Milwaukee in the second game.

Yankees 4, White Sox 0

Ron Guidry and George Frazier combined on a six-hitter as New York defeated Chicago and snapped a four-game losing streak.

Bob Watson slammed a run-scoring triple off Steve Trout, 6-4, in the Yankees' first inning and Jerry Mumphrey added a two run single in the seventh. The Yankees scored their final run in the eighth on Oscar Gamble's RBI double.

Guidry, 7-3, allowed three Chicago hits over the first six innings. He did not walk a batter while striking out seven and has pitched 11 scoreless innings since the season resumed, yielding only four hits and fanning 15.

Orioles 6, Angels 5

Scott McGregor survived a rocky start to pitch Baltimore over California with relief help from Sammy Stewart. It was the left-hander's seventh straight victory over the Angels, dating back to early 1979.

McGregor, 8-2, allowed three runs and five hits in the first two innings but then recovered with Stewart's relief help.

Angel second baseman Bobby Grich extended his hitting streak to an AL high 20 games with a run-scoring single in the first inning.

Indians 5, Mariners 2

Andre Thornton's pinch-hit home run leading off the seventh inning triggered Cleveland past Seattle. Thornton hit a 3-0 pitch from Seattle's Bryan Clark, 2-3, into the left field seats after Seattle had tied the game 2-2 in the bottom of the sixth on Richie Zisk's RBI single.

A's 3, Red Sox 2

Bill Campbell's wild pitch with the bases loaded in the bottom of the 15th inning scored Jeff Newman from third base with the winning run as Oakland beat Boston.

The Red Sox had taken a 2-1 lead in the top of the 14th on Julio Valdez's RBI single before Tony Armas tied the game 2-2 with his 14h home run. Bob Owchinko the third A's pitcher, hurled the last 12-3 innings to improve his record to 4-2.

Feeling toward baseball changed since strike

By THOMAS BOSWELL
(c) 1981, The Washington Post

Nothing is more alien or confusing for baseball's fans or, for that matter, its players, than the necessity of examining their feelings toward the game. Part of the sport's power comes from the fact that, since childhood, we've accepted it as being one of those few national institutions that is, unarguably, on the side of the angels.

Now, baseball, one of the spontaneous and relaxed corners of our culture, has been forced to turn temporarily introspective and moody. From the bleachers to the dugout to the owners' boxes, baseball has not quite been itself in its first week since the strike.

Baseball is something you play, not something about which you feel guilty.

NOTHING IS more indigenous to the game than talk — the lifeblood of chatter, anecdote, humor and taletelling that courses through every cranny of the game. This circulatory system of crude merriment and earthy energy hasn't dried up. But it's been a bad week for baseball's customary good cheer.

"I can't think of one funny line I've heard since we came back," said a front-office veteran of the Cincinnati Reds. "We haven't regained our sense of humor yet."

Part of this prickliness is due to the aftermath of the 50-day strike. Fans, instead of automatically revering players, now look at them with a willingness to make quick, harsh judgments. Slumping Davey Lopes, captain of Los Angeles, has been booed so unmercifully that he says, "I never dreamed I'd here this from Dodger fans."

ALTHOUGH BASEBALL has, wisely, not released any official figures yet, it appears that the game will indeed be hurt at the box office and, perhaps, more than expected. Through the first five days, and 59 games, of the new season, the average major league attendance was 18,497. That's 11.3 percent lower than the prestrike '81 average of 20,865. In particular, the AL average of 15,112 is pathetic.

Nonetheless, generally disappointing attendance has clouded the scene. That's not the only reason, however, for baseball's generally gray mood.

Ask players what they'll remember from the first week back and you get an utterly uncharacteristic blank stare. The only other time players consistently react in this way is when they are coming off the disabled list after a long, serious injury. Then, they always seem aloof, totally self-immersed, worried and serious far beyond the normal demands of their game.

In a sense, this was the week that 650 players all came off the disabled list simultaneously.

NEVER HAVE so many players been so worried about injury at the same time. An athlete's body is, of course, his livelihood, and when that body is in jeopardy, you've got a nervous, irritable ballplayer. Any big-leaguer who isn't anxious about whether or not he'll make it through the first two to three weeks of this second season in one piece isn't facing reality. "I'm not in top shape," admitted Dennis Leonard, Kansas City's three-time 20-game-winner. "Like a lot of players, I thought the season was dead. I wasn't going to work out all summer just so I could sit out all winter. Now, I have to get ready in a hurry."

For the first time in history, baseball has accidentally combined late-spring-training conditioning and late-season, pennant-race pressure into one time frame.

"In the next fews days," said Baltimore coach Ray Miller, "you'll see 'em start dropping like flies — hamstrings poppin', sore elbows and shoulders. It's not the first few games that'll do it. It's when the fatigue starts to show with the day games after night games, doubleheaders and travel. Some careers will end in the next week or two and everybody knows it."

Compounding the sense of general anxiety is a new Gold Rush mentality created by the owners' split-season plan. At the very moment when players instinctively believe they should be taking it just a bit easy, they also know that they have an unparalleled chance to steal a spot in the playoffs.

More than half the teams in baseball know that, over a normal season, they would need a miracle to make the playoffs. You can't play for six months on adrenaline, team spirit and other intangibles. However, baseball history is chock full of examples of teams that have managed to play far over their heads for 50 games — or 100 games, for that matter. Every season has its "surprise" Cinderella teams that raise a fuss into July or even August, then fold.

"In a 162-game season, every game is serious," said Texas shorstop Mario Mendoza. "But not as serious as these next 50 are going to be."

IN OTHER words, baseball — the most relaxed and, over the long haul, fairest of our professional games — has suddenly become the most frenetically unpredicable crap shoot that anybody could imagine.

"Nobody's ever seen nothin' like this," said Kansas City Manager Jim Frey.

Baseball attendance is confusing the experts

KERRY DOUGHERTY
(C) Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The second half of baseball's split season is just over a week old and a survey of ballpark attendance would confound experts who predicted the 50-day players' strike would cause fans to either return en masse or boycott the rest of the season.

Attendance is inexplicably up in some parks, down in others.

In some cases, baseball executives cite foul weather or unexciting contestants in explaining away the early low figures. In other cases, where the numbers are slightly higher than the first half, executives complain that the gate would normally be much higher at this point in the season — if not for the strike. The sharpest drop in ticket sales last week was at Cleveland Stadium, where only 4,773 fans showed up for opening night the second time around. By week's end, the largest crowd was 12,790, compared with a 21,283 per game average before the strike.

In Bloomington, Minn., the Twins drew almost 2,000 more fans per game last week than in the first half of the season. But management was disappointed with the size of the increase.

In some cases, the split season appeared to boost sagging attendance, perhaps because the format was said to give losing teams a new lease on life. The New York Mets, who trailed their division by 17 games just before the strike, got off to a winning start last week in Chicago and were cheered on by 34,136 fans their first night back at Shea Stadium.

"The split season has helped us enormously; no doubt about it," said Lou Gorman, Mets vice president of baseball operations.

In San Francisco's Candlestick Park, which was less than one-quarter full for games in the first half of the season, attendance dropped by 3,000 a game last week, but Giant executives said they were not yet alarmed.

"Here in San Francisco, more than most cities, our attendance is affected by how we play," said Patrick J. Gallagher, vice president of the Giants' business operations, who added that the team traditionally draws well on Sundays and has not yet played a Sunday game. "We were in fifth place before the strike. I'm sure that had a lot to do with our low numbers last week."

Baltimore also drew below its average during last week's seven-game home stand. The Orioles drew 19,850 opening night, but only 13,780 for Wednesday night's game against Kansas City.

Miami Dolphins no longer dominate NFL's AFC East

Has developed a reputation as least predictable division

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — The AFC East used to belong to the Miami Dolphins, but it has produced four champions in the last five years and developed a reputation as one of the National Football League's least predictable divisions.

New England has the best talent in the division but somehow usually finds a way to lose near the end of the season. The most explosive offenses belong to the Baltimore Colt and New York Jets, but their defenses keep them from winning consistently. With Miami rebuilding, that left the Buffalo Bills to climb to the top last season.

IN ITS first decade, the division knew only three champions — the Dolphins, Patriots and Colts. But the Bills changed that in 1980, winning the title with an 11-5 record built on a strong defense and versatile rookie back Joe Cribbs.

Buffalo Coach Chuck Knox, the NFL's Coach of the Year in 1980, has built a favorite for consecutive titles with judicious draft choices and a blend of seasoned veterans. The Bills are expecially tough on defense.

"It's the Bermuda Triangle because ball carriers have a habit of getting lost in our territory," says 270-pound nose tackle Fred Smerlas, a Pro Bowler in his second season. The other points of the triangle are inside linebackers Shane Nelson and Jim Haslett, whose 125 tackes led the team. Isiah Robertson and Lucius Sanford play outside in the 3-4.

LEFT END Ben Williams had 12 sacks last year while Sherman White complements the pass rush on the other side.

Strong safety Steve Freeman led the team in intercepions with seven, while free safeties Jeff Nixon and Bill Simpson and cornebacks Mario Clark and Harles Romes complete the solid, veteran unit.

With 225-pound fullback Booker Moore, this year's No. 1 draft choice, out of action because of a nerve ailment, the Bills again will rely on 203-pound Curtis Brown to carry the ball or block for Cribbs.

Cribbs set a Buffalo rookie record with 1,185 yard rushing and also caught 52 passes, a team record for a back.

Quarterback Joe Ferguson threw for 2,805 yards and 20 touchdowns last year. His top receivers are Jerry Butler and Frank Lewis and tight end Mark Brammer.

The offensive line is strong, with underrated tackles Ken Jones and Joe Devlin flanking guards Reggie McKenzie and Conrad Dobler and center Will Grant.

NEW ENGLAND is a statistician's dream and an analyst's nightmare with five first-round draft choices in the secondary, a 441-point output and 10-6 record in 198 — and no playoff berth.

Tight end Russ Francis has retired, but Coach Ron Erhardt still has reserve Don Hasselbeck and wide receivers Stanley Morgan and Harold Jackson, the top active receiver in the NFL with 532 receptions.

Strong-armed quarterback Steve Grogan has been inconsistent.

Completing the backfield are Vagas Ferguson, who rushed for 818 yards as a rookie, and Don Calhoun.

Miami Coach Don Shula has 193 career victories in 18 years of NFL coaching despite an 8-8 mark last season.

In the fourth game last year, he put David Woodley at quarterback and the tight-round pick passed for 1,850 yards and 14 touchdowns.

NOW SHULA must rehabilitate the running game, which wasn't helped when No. 1 choice David Overstreet defected to Montreal of the Canadian Footbal League.

Tony Nathan and rookie fullback Andra Franklin show promise. Nathan caught 57 passes for 588 yards last year, better than wide receivers Nat Moore (47 catches) and Duriel Harris (33).

Miami defensive ends Kim Bokamper and Doug Betters play ahead of linebackers A.J. Duhe, Larry Gordon and newcomer Bob Brudzinski.

Injury-riddled quarterback Bert Jones gives the Colts another dimension on the field, and he stayed healthy long enough last year to set personal records with 348 completions for 3,134 yards.

Baltimore whipped Buffalo twice in 1980 and could be the sleeper of the division with a revved-up offense based around receivers Roger Carr (61catches) and Ray Butler, and with first-round choice fullback Randy McMillan to par with 80-yard rusher Curtis Dickey.

The Colts finished 21st in pass defense, but should improve with a stronger pass rush and the work of strong safety Bruce Laird, cornerback Derrick Hatchett and linebackers Barry Klauss, Mike Woods and Sanders Shiver.

At 4-12 after an 8-8 season the previous year, the Jets were te AFC's disappointment of 1980.

INJURIES, A woeful defense and the unsteady play of quarterback Richard Todd knocked Coach Walt Michaels' club off schedule.

Todd comleted 264 passes for 3,329 yards but also threw 30 interceptions. Many of his passes went to backs — kick returner Bruce Harper caught 50 and led the NFL in all-purpose yardage with 2,072 —but this year he will seek to take advantage of the speed of wide receivers Johnny Jones (25 receptons) and Wesley Walker 19).

New York draft choices Freeman McNeil and Marion Barber are running backs who shoud help.

Defensively, New York has enormous potential in 285-pound end Mark Gastineau, tackle Joe Klecko and linebackers Greg Buttle and Stan Blinka. The Jets were 26th of 28 teams in pass defense and need the work of new defensive coordinator Joe Gadi there.

Few think Georgia will battle for title

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Coach Vince Dooley of defending national champion Georgia couldn't ask for a better setup.

Most champions enter the following season pegged as the team to beat, but such is not the case this year. Few preseason forecasts call for Georgia to challenge seriously for another collegiate crown.

DOOLEY, WHO annually presents a pessimistic outlook for his team, gladly accepts such a forecast.

"I anticipate a difficult time, to be frank with you, because we really were a senior football team despite some great play by some individual underclassmen," Dooley said.

Those exceptional underclassmen, headed by All-American tailback Herschel Walker, will make the Bulldogs a contender in the Southeastern Conference race, but Dooley is more concerned with the six offensive and seven defensive starters he lost.

"It's been my experience in coaching that there are two places where you don't want to be inexperienced — the secondary on defense and in the offensive line," Dooley said.

THOSE ARE the exact areas that were depleted, losing four of the six down linemen on offense and the entire secondary, including second team All-American Scott Woerner and All-SEC Jeff Hipp. The Bulldogs also lost placekicker Rex Robinson, the SEC's all-time scoring leader.

Walker enters his sophomore season after rushing for 1,616 yards, the most ever by a freshman in NCAA history.

Dooley says the main question about Walker is "staying healthy and always keeping a good supporting cast. If he can do that and maintain that great attitude, he'll keep getting better and better. There's no telling how good he can be, but those are big ifs."

ALL-SEC quarterback Buck Belue, who threw for 1,314 yards and 11 touchdowns, also returns, but Dooley is concerned that both Belue and Walker missed spring practice. Walker ran track last spring and Belue played baseball.

"When players miss spring practice, it takes them a little bit longer to be ready to play in the fall," said Dooley, who must prepare his team for a tough Sept. 5 conference opener with Tennessee in the newly enlarged 76,000-seat Sanford Stadium.

Gunboat hijackers meet with French

PARIS (AP) —The leader of a band of anti-Khomeini Iranians who hijacked an Iranian gunboat last week met today with French naval authorities at the Mediterranean port of Toulon to discuss giving up the vessel, Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson announced.

Cheysson said the 60-foot gunboat Tabarzin would be returned to the Iranian government if it was surrendered. He said the possibilty of asylum for the hiackers was being studied, although Iran's foreign minister warned against their being given refuge.

A French tug towed the Tbarzin from Marseille Tuesday night and it anchored 2½ miles off the French naval base at Toulon. It was flying the imperial Iranian flag.

A spokesman in Paris for the monarchist group that sponsored the hijacking said the leader of the commandos, Adm. Kamal Habibollahi, was negotiating with the French for fuel to continue his journey. He claimd the ship was still the seat of government for "Free Iran."

Cheysson said officials were not sure if any French laws had been broken and that was being reviewed.

Twenty heavily armed Iranian exiles, members of the pro-monarchy Azadegan group, seized the gunboat and its 31 Iranian crew members Thurday off the coast of Spain and sailed to the Moroccan port of Casablanca. It was one of three French-built gunboats being transferred from France to Iran. The other two were not attacked and were reorted Tuesday in Oran, Algeria, on their way to Iran.

At Casablanca, the commandos threatened to blow up the gunboat, loaded with a large number of weapons and ammunition, unless they were provided with fuel and provisions.

Moroccan officials said they feared an explosion would destroy the port and complied with the demands. Then the hijackers took the boat to Marseille, France's chief Mediterranean port. They were believed heading for Egypt, where the late shah of Iran's heir, young self-proclaimed Shah Reza II, lives in exile.

In Marseille, the hijackers demanded more food and fuel to get them farther along and again threatened to blow up the boat if their demands were not met. After negotiations, they allowed French authorities to remove 29 members of the crew who asked to be returned to Iran but held on to the captain and another officer. They also agreed to be towed to Toulon, where they would do less damage if they made good on their threat to blow up the boat.

French Defense Minister Charles Hernu said Tuesday night the government would not provision the comandeered vessel and suggested that the hijackers take it back into international waters. However, he said it would be against tradition for the navy to force it to leave.

French officials said they believed the Tabarzin had enough fuel to travel between 150 and 200 miles.

Reminding France of the Iranian government's anger when it granted ex-President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr asylum afer his escape from Iran, Foreign Minister Mir Hossein Musavi said: "This adventurist act has once again put France to the test."

"Granting asylum to pirates is undoubtedly tantamount to legalizing terrorist actions on the high seas," Musavi declared, according to Tehran Radio.

Meanwhile, Bani-Sadr in an interview with The Associated Press said the U.S. government had given him permission to emigrate to the United Staes. But State Department spokeswoman Anita Stokman said the claim was "totally false," and another U.S. official in Washington called it "hogwash."

Bani-Sadr in the interview said Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the revolutionary leader who made him president and then broke him, is subject to many weaknesses, ignorant in the fields of politics, economics and world affairs, and enjoys the support of only 15 to 20 percent of the Iranian people.

Khomeini in a broadcast speech called Bani-Sadr and his leftist supporters "flies who are in the last days of their lives" and challenged them to try to overthrow him.

"Who can stage a coup? Here is a group sitting in Paris and putting out statements. Come ahead, the way is open," he said.

Tehran Radio also reported the arrest of 29 more members of the Islamic-Marxist underground Mujahedeen Khalq organizaion and other leftist groups. It said assassins on motorcycles shot and killed Mohammad Baghe Hosseinpoor-haker, an activist of the fundamentalist Hezbollah, or Party of God, in the northern city of Tabriz.

Mexican labor leader denounces Reagan plan

Los Angeles Times

MEXICO CITY — Mexico's most powerful labor leader, Fidel Velasquez, Tuesday unequivocally denounced the Reagan administration's plan for dealing with undocumented workers in the United States.

Speaking as head of the 8.5 million member Congress of Labor, Velasquez assailed the plan as "a unilateral measure without judicial equity, discriminatory and (which) violates all human, civil and labor rights."

Going beyond specific criticism of various aspects of the plan, Velasquez said the measure was a U.S. effort to improve its negotiating position vis-a-vis Mexico in the political and economic spheres.

Although the Mexican government has remained silent officially on the Reagan plan, Velasquez's statements often reflect official policy.

Within hours after the critical document was made public, one of Mexico's most influential daily newspapers, Excelsior, seconded Velasquez and declared that his statements mirrored the position of the government.

Communists seek more production

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Romania's Communist Party leadership, beset by a faltering economy and a poor harvest, has appealed for an increase in production and farming output.

The appeal Tuesday followed recent warnings of an inefficint harvest season and the appearance of food lines at meat stores in the nation's capital.

Short food supples, proposed price hikes and a 20 percent cut in ths month's meat ration has triggered scattered strikes and demonstrations in Poland.

The party leadership asked that "all party and state bodies do everything in their power to secure a good supply ... and rational use of the reserves of farm food produce," the official Agepres new agency said.

Party officials also criticized "shortcomings" in the nation's industrial sector and called or an increase in foreign trade, the agency said.

There have been recent spot shortages of cheese, butter and other dairy items throughout the country as well as an apparently dwindling meat supply.

Recent reports published in the West have indicated concern over Romania's mounting foreign debt, second only to the $27 billion owed by Poland.

In a report published in June, a Washington-based consulting firm said Romania's debt to the West could reach $12 billion this year.

The party's Central Committee also fired longtime Politburo member Leone Rautu on Tuesday ater some of the key party ideologist's relatives sought permission to leave the country.

Th actions of an official's family are an indication of the "quality of a member of the (party's) leadership," said Agerpres in reporting the dismissal of Rautu, who also was removed as president of the party academy.

It was not known how many members of his family sought emigration visas, but observers here said the affair involved Rautu's children.

Strike by Polish printers shuts down newspapers

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A two-day strike by union printers kept the official Communist press from reaching Warsaw streets early today, but the government insisted that its two main dailies had been published.

Other major cities were also reported without newspapers but local editions appeared in Bydgoszcz and Szczecin in defiance of the strike, said officials of Solidarity, the independent labor federation.

The government radio and television services were not affected by the printers' walkout demanding more exposure on the national and local media for Solidarty.

Kiosks in Warsaw, where the nation' s major papers are published and printed, were without daily newspapers. Some were closed, with red and white Solidarity signs on their window. Those that were open sold other goods and weekly publications.

"A newspaper?" asked one female vendor with a laugh. "There is a strike. Come back in a few hours and maybe will have Trybuna Ludu."

Soldarity spokesman Seweryn Jaworski told a news conference Tuesday that Trybuna Ludu, the Communist Party's chief newspaper with a nationwide circulation of 1.1 million, was being printed at military printing plants, and the government was planning to deliver it in army trucks.

"The government will try to break our strike," he said, "but we have appealed to readers not to buy newspapers and to kiosk sellers not to sell the dailies."

PAP, the official news agency, carried a press review quoting from Trybuna Ludu and the army daily Zolnier Wolnosci Warsaw Radio said the two papers appeared, but the party daily had only four pages and the army paper was printed in its usual six-page format in a military printing house.

Warsaw printers quit work Tuesday on today's newspaper editions and struck the largest printing houses in the capital. Strikers wearing red-and-white armbands occupied the plants to ensure that no property was damaged, union officials said.

An executive of Zyce Warszawy, the capital's most popular paper, said the staff was "trying to publish. The format will be the same but maybe only two or four pages."

It was believed to be the first newspaper strike in the Soviet bloc, but the government made no attempt to avert it. There were no negotiations on the strikers' demands, and plant directors made no attempt to stop the printers who left their presses, a Soidarity official said.

The strike was ordered by Solidarity's Warsaw local despite a call from the union's ntional leaders last week for a two-month suspension in the recent strikes and street marches protecting food shortages and the government's plans to increase food prices.

However, the Solidarity no-strike call specifically exempted the printers' walkout and said it would go head as planned if their demands were not met.

The union charged it was unjustly blamed for the food protests, which it said were a spontaneous public reaction to a disastrous situation created by the government. It demanded an end to the official media attacks on it and that it be given 30 minutes a week national TV time, 15 minutes a week for local telecasts in the major cities, the same amount of radio time and its own columns in the Warsaw and provincial papers.

Teachers laid off in Boston

BOTON (AP) — The Boston School Committee has voted unanimously to eliminte about 1,000 teaching jobs, including 710 held by permanent teachers and 250 held by provisional employees, in the city's public school system.

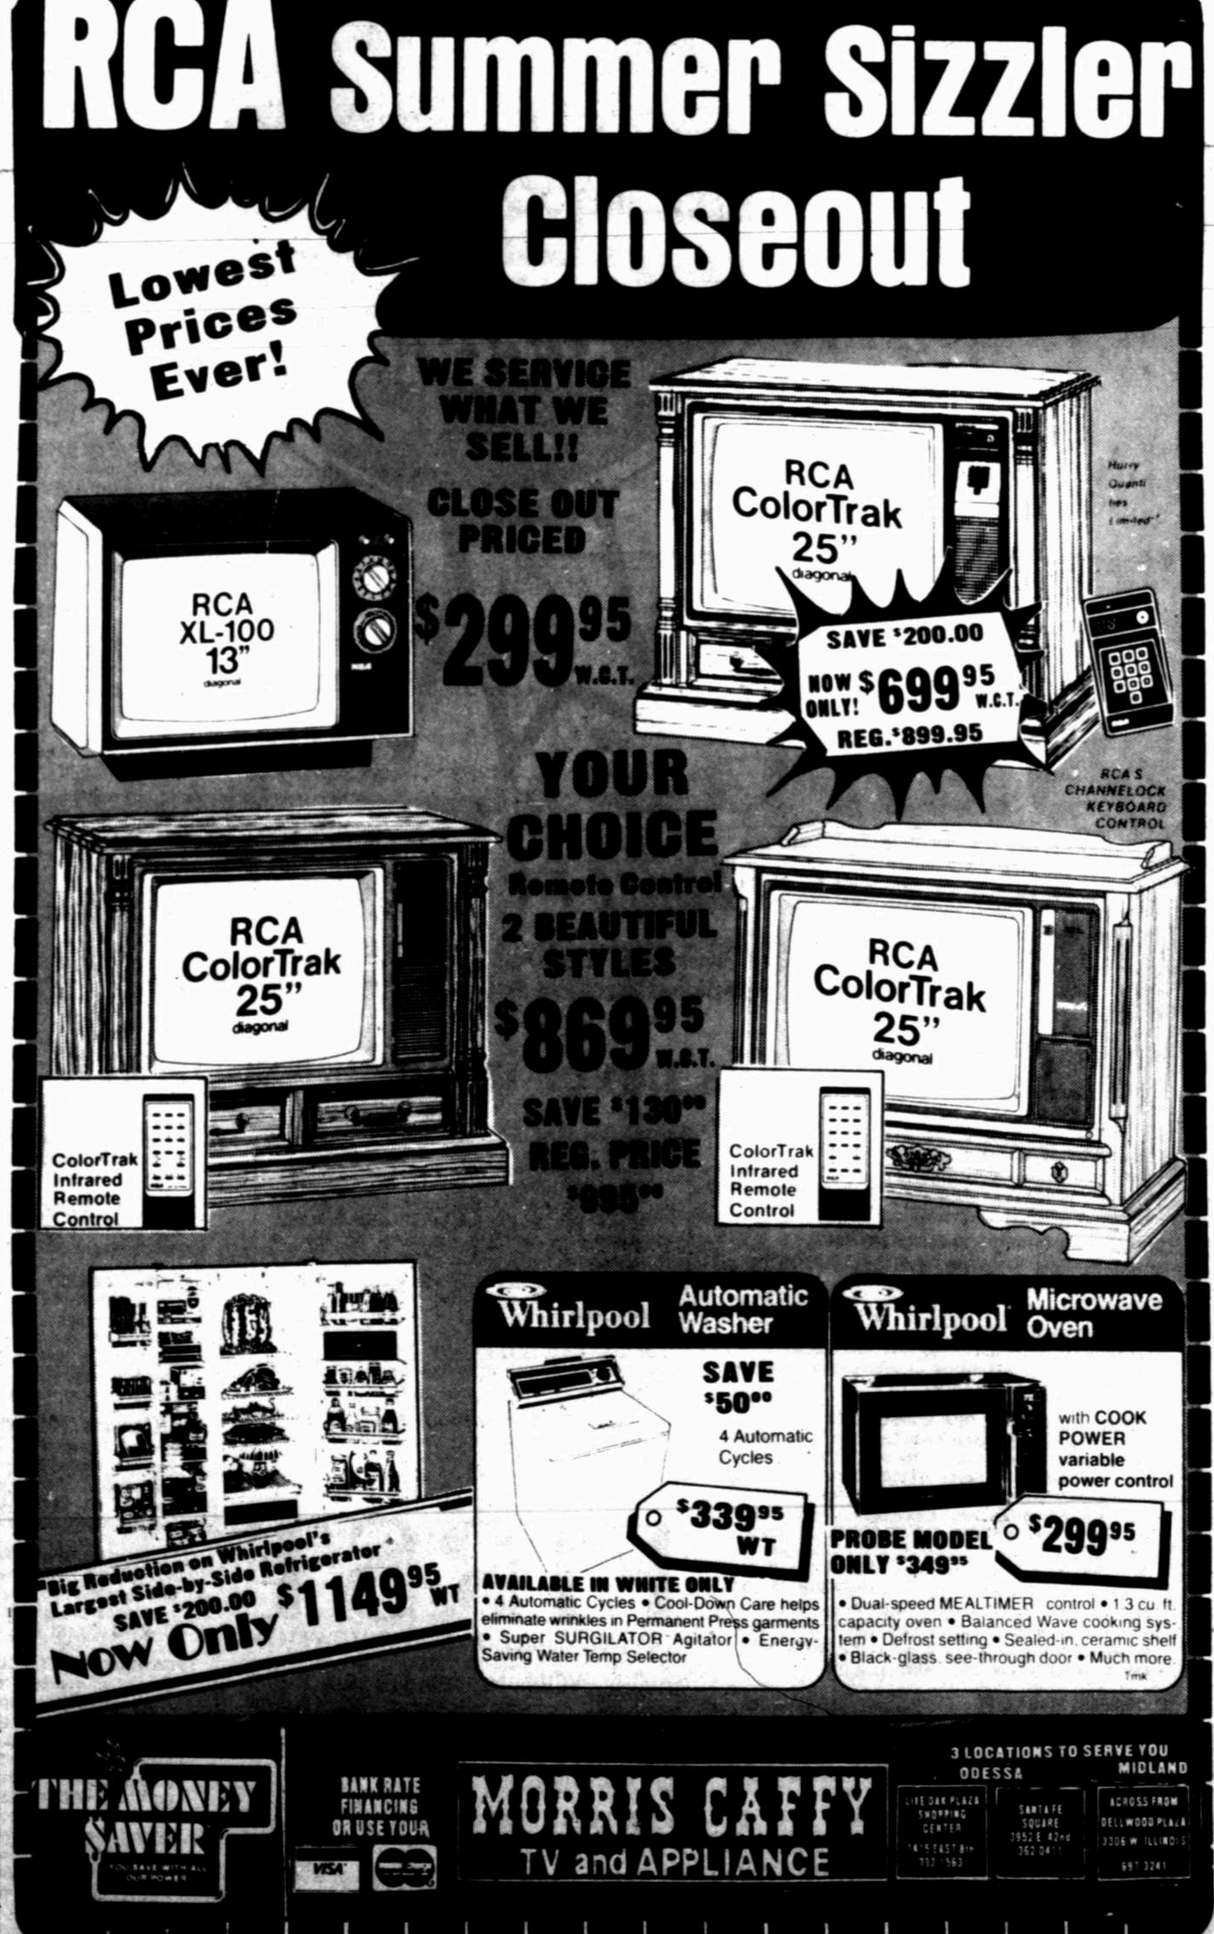

The commitee also voted Tuesday night to demote nine headmasers and principals and to demote or dismiss 129 other administrators. Up to 100 of the administrators would return to teaching roles, meaning the ranks of the laid-off teachers could increase.

The cuts come as the system makes an effort to hold to a $210 million budget. Budget overruns of about $20 million last year threatened to force officials to close school early for 65,000 pupils.

The 4-0 vote, taken at West Roxbury High School with one committee member absent, caused Boston Teachers' Union President Kathleen Kelley to call on her membership to complain to the office of Mayor Kevin H. White and the Boston school system.

The vote was a victory for Robert Spillane, the school system's new superintendent.

"It's certainly not the happiest moment for everyone," Spillane said, "but I'm very pleased the action has been taken because it shows the committee is going to be responsible and do its best to live within the $210 million."

PBGC slates logging course

A three-day short course "Nature of Carbonate Sediments and Rocks, with Carbonate Core-Logging Problem — An Excercise in Identifying Facies and Interpreting Depositional Environments" will be offered by the Permian Basin Graduate Center, Monday through Wednesday, Aug. 24-26.

The class will be instructed by Drs. Clyde H. Moore Jr. and Don G. Bebout and will meet daily from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the PBGC Building, 105 West Illinois.

This comprehensive course will familiarize geologists-geophysicists with basic complexities of the carbonate sediment-rock system, and emphasize features useful for paleoenvironmental reconstruction and pore space evolution.

The course covers carbonate sediments, carbonate rock classifications and contrasts features of quartoze clastics with carbonates.

Major Holocene carbonate depositional environments are illustrated and acient rock analogues examined, along with concepts of carbonate diagenesis outlined stressing cementation and dolomitization, with their relationship to original depositional environment, pore space reduction and production.

The course concludes with a critical examiniation of carbonate rock sequence using the "total rock history" approach, outlining depositional diagenetic history as they relate to the pore space evolution of the sequence.

A core-logging problem will guide participants through the complexities of logging carbonate core, calibrating core to electrical logs, correlating facies from well to well, identifying vertical sequences, producing facies maps, and interpretating depositional environments.

Dr. Clyde H. Moore Jr. is a professor of geology at Louisiana State University and Dr. Don G. Bebout is director of research, Louisiana Geological Survey.

Registration fee if $325. Call 563-2311 for registration.

Du Pont now faces consolidation

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Du Pont Co. has won the hand of Conoco Inc. in the largest corporate marriage ever, but much still must be done before the two can live happily ever after.

"The key challenge is to make the total company work in a way the total is greater than the sum of its parts," Du Pont Chairman Edward Jefferson said Monday after Du Pont stockholders overwhelmingly approved the $7.7 billion takeover.

Jefferson said most details reain to be worked ot regarding how the largest chemical company in the nation will absorb Conoco, the ninth-largest oil company and second-biggest coal producer.

He said comittees have been apointed and dinners scheduled so people from the tw companies can getacquainted. And the possibility remain that Du ont will sell off some of he energy reserve to pay the $4 billion debt mounted to inance th deal.

But Jefferson said the merger will plce Du Pont in a stronger position to compete with the oil companies, such as Exxon, which are moving ncreasingly into the chemical field. He also said the new companywill be cmpetitive internationally, particularly wih the German companies, BASF, Bayer and Hoechst, and with ICI in Briain.

Du Pont shareholders began lining up as ealy as 8:30 a.m. Moday for the noon meeting. Then, by a margin of nealy 16-1 among shares vted, they approved the issuance of new Du Pont shares to acquire te Conoco tock.

Although the strng majority of the 2,000 shareholders who attended favored the merger, there was a vocal minority in oppositon.

"Conoco is just going to be a monkey on your back, just like the one you see hee," saidone shareholder motioning to a stuffed toy monkey perched on her back.

AP report wrong

NEW YORK (AP) — The Associated Press erroneously reported Tuesday that a report on alleged oil company overcharges was compiled by the Energy Institute of America.

The report was compiled by the Energy Information Administration, a branch of the U.S. Energy Department.

The report, issued Monday, said oil companies may have overcharged customers by more than $1.3 billion in 1979 by passing off old price-controlled oil as decontrolled higher-priced oil.

Second company target of Hispanic organization

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — The League of United Latin American Citizens has expanded its complaint to include a second company that bans any language but English at work and a spokesman says he is investigating several other businesses.

Ruben Bonilla, general counsel for LULAC, has vowed to file a class-action suit against Champlin Petroleum Co. for the policy, which he says discriminates against Mexican-Americans.

LULAC amended its complaint with the Equal Opportunity Employment Commission Tuesday to include Coastal States Petroleum Co. of Corpus Christi, which has had an English-only rule since 1978, Bonilla said.

"It is important in the operation of the plant that English be the only language spoken. Thank you for your cooperation," the Coastal States rule reads.

Bonilla said Coastal States has agreed to "clean up the language and to make it clearer that they don't really care what language is spoken on the job as long as the job is performed," Bonilla said.

He said he was investigating reports of similar policies at other companies.

Gloomy outlook for price unity

By W. JOSEH CAMPBELL
AssociatedPress Writer

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — OPEC's president said today more obstacles have cropped up at the oil cartels emergency meeting on restoring price unity, and Venezuela's oil minister said he doubts the ministers can reach a binding decision.

"There are problems, more than we visualized," the president, Indonesian Oil Minister Subroto, said. "The mountains are higher and the rapids are deeper than we thought." He did not elaborate.

Venezuela was insisting on a base price of $36 for a 42-gallon barrel of crude oil, while Saudi Arabia, the biggest producer in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, said it would go no higher than $34.

Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi oil minister, said Tuesday after two days of prliminary negotiations, that a unified price formula could be worked out. But he insisted he would agree to boost his base price of $32 by no more than $2, and even that "would be very hard" to accept.

"We are happy with $32," he said. He added that if $34 was agreed on, it must be "frozen for a long period of time."

Venezuelan Oil Miister Humberto Calderon Barti was equally adamant that his government woud not reduce its base price of $36. He said Venezuela can sell all the oil it wants to at that price even in today's glutted market.

"If the others accept $36 a barrel," he sid, "we'll have a decision. If not there won't be a decision."

OPEC prices presently range from Saudi Arabia's $32 a barrel to $40 charged by African producers for top-quality crude. Most of the countries charge about $36. But Saudi Arabia's daily production of more than 10 million barrels is more than 40 percent of OPEC's output and both reduces the average price andmaintains the oil glut as a depressant on prices. Calderon Berti said he favors setting base price in a range from $34 to $36 , with differentials for top-quality crudes of about $2. This would lower the ceiling price to $38.

Yamani declared such a two-tier plan unacceptable.

Despite the apparent standoff, some ministers expressed confidence the meeting would achieve the price unity that has eluded the cartel for two years. Mana Saeed Otaiba of the United Arab Emrates said he believed chances for a compromise were good.

Impetus for the special conferece, which may last into Thursday, was the persistent surplus of 2 millon to 2.5 million barrels a day on the international oil market. The glut has exerted downward pressure on prices and slashed the revenues of Libya, Nigeria, Algeria and other countries that charge OPEC' highest prices.

Since Saudi Arabia's production is nearly 2 million barrels over its designated ceiling of 8.5 million barrels and that excess is about eqal to the international surplus, the African producrs attribute the glut to the Saudis' refusal to reduce their output. Yamani has been quoted as saying Saudi production will decline only under market pressures resulting from a unified OPEC price.

Fires, ripped fences mark coal mine demonstration

By J.L. SCHMIDT
Associated Press Writer

GALATIA, Ill. (AP)— More than 14,000 union coal miners conducted a statewide wildcat srike in an apparent show of support for demonstrators protesting the construction of a non-union mine.

Vehicle and buildings were set ablaze at the mine Tuesday and a chain link fence was ripped down as a demonstration that had been brewing for weeks in this town of 700 finally erupted.

State police dropped tear gas from helicopters to disperse 2,000 demonstrators who had set fires and ripped down fences at the construction site of the Kerr-McGee mine, officials said.

"You ain't seen nothin' yet," yelled the driver of a red pickup that raced past about 20 police vehicles parked amid the wreckage.

Rolls of steel mesh from an 8-foot chain link fence ripped down by the demonstrators covered the edge of the highway and motorists slowed at the sight of more than a half-mile of bent fence posts.

The demonstrators, many of them apparently union miners, also torched vehicles, buildings and fields witnesses said.

No injuries were reported. State police said one arrest was made, although no details were available.

Taylor Pensoneau, spokesman for the Illinois Coal Association, said mining at 50 sites in 22 counties came to a standstill as an estimated 14,500 miners stayed off the job.

United Mine Workers union officials declined comment on the demonstration. They said the work stoppages indicted sympahy with the protest.

Only the Sahara Coal Co. mines, operated by members of the rival Progressive Mine Workers union in Saline County, remained open.

The demonstration was rooted in the July arrest of four members of UMW Constructon Local 2117. The four were charged with criminal trespass for allegedly tearing down several fence posts at the site.

A crowd of union miners, angered by construction of the state's second non-union mine, began gathering at the site near here shortly after 10 a.m. Tuesday.

In a demonstration at the University of California at Irvine, Charlie Duncan of Santa Monica, president of the Western Apicultural Society, turns himself into a human beehive to prove Italian bees can be controlled. The 30,000 bees swarmed all over Duncan, failing to sting him even once. He was holding artificial Pheromone — the substance a queen bee excretes to attract her swarm.

Planes to California in Medfly assault

By TRACY WOOD
The Los Angeles Times

LOS GATOS, Calif. — Low-flying, four-engine airplanes will join a fleet of helicopters in the aerial war against the crop-destroying Mediterranean fruit fly infestation that now threatens much of California's $14-billion agricultural industry, state and federal officials said Tuesday.

The three DC-4s, which cost less to operate and can fly longer hours without refueling than the helicopters, could be ready to fly by the end of the week and may take over primarily rural areas, such as the 78-square mile spray zone in the state's agricultural heartland, the San Joaquin Valley, Medfly eradication project leaders said. Officials said it was still uncertain if the planes would fly their spraying missions at night, as the helicopters do, or during early morning daylight hours.

There now are 701 square miles in five counties that are subject to weekly helicopter applications of the pesticide malathion in an effort to rid the state of the destructive insect. Threats of embargoes because of the Medfly infestation have come not only from other states — mainly in the South — but also from Japan, South Korea and Taiwan.

The $750,000 contract between the U.S. Department of Agriculture and Globe Air of Mesa, Ariz., calls for a minimum of six weekly applications. The spraying operations most likely will be conducted in Stanislaus County, in the San Joaquin Valley, Southern Santa Clara County, in the San Francisco Bay Area, and possibly over Livermore, an Alameda County town near the mountain range that separates the Bay Area from the San Joaquin Valley.

Project spokesman Richard Steffen said that it now is costing about $480,000 a week for helicopters to spray the entire Santa Clara Valley, plus zones in San Mateo, Santa Cruz, Alameda and Stanislaus counties.

AGRICULTURE

The fleet of 10 helicopters are expected to continue flying over the densely populated section of the spray zone where opposition by residents to the application has been the most intense.

Helicopters were used from the beginning in an effort to overcome the objections from urban residents to any kind of aerial spraying. The helicopters can fly at night and are more accurate than the planes.

Officials said that it might be possible to use the planes at night as well, although they are less maneuverable than the helicopters and cannot fly under low cloud conditions that frequently exist near the Pacific coast.

Project leaders said that any daylight flying would be limited to the early morning because wind and thermal conditions later in the day could disrupt the even spray patterns necessary to ensure that the ares are adequately covered.

The airplane contract signed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture was indicative of improved working arrangements between the state and federal officials since a weekend meeting in which previous communications and other problems were worked out.

Republicans and some Democrats in the California Legislature have been calling for the resignation of Medfly project director Jerry Scribner and also calling for the federal government to take control of the eradication effort. GOP leaders in the lower house of the Legislature plan to seek a motion of impeachment against Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. Thursday, based on the state's handling of the Medfly issue.

Scribner, asked if he was concerned about being tired, joked "I'd be delighted. Unfortunately, I haven't been given to believe I will be allowed to return home, nor has USDA expressed enthusiasm for taking over control of the project."

Scribner said he was "encouraged" about the Medfly situation because no new flies have been found in Stanislaus County since Sunday and no new finds of any kind in the rest of the 5-county quarantine area in the past two days.

In another development, Scribner said that the 13-member technical review committee that advises the project is being re-structured. Chairman Don Dilley, principal staff entomologist for the California Department of Food and Agriculture, will be replaced but will remain as a committee member.

U.S. Department of Agriculture officials had wanted the committee expanded to include more experts on the Medfly issue.

Scribner said the change had "nothing to do" with criticisms leveled at the project by Republicans in the Legislature.

Investigators say packing plants fail to meet USDA requirements

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional investigators say that 16 of 62 meat and poultry packing houses given surprise inspections last year failed to meet Department of Agriculture sanitation requirements.

The General Accounting Office said problems included carcasses contaminated by dripping condensation; dead flies on work surfaces; meat dragging through dirty work trays; and "very dirty" overhead structures and equiment.

Seven plants had problems with rodents, insects and insecticides, the GAO said in a report criticizing the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service, which assigns inspectors to interstate slaughter facilities.

"Nearly half of the...plants had inadequate controls over condemned and inedible materials" getting ito meat and poultry destined for human consumption, the GAO said.

"The widespread sanitation and pest control deficiencies can be attributed to inadequate enforcement by inspection personnel and, more importantly, inadequate commitment of plant managers," the GAO said.

"FSIS personnel were not adequately enforcing sanitation requirements, and plant managers were not sufficiently commited to maintaining a high level of sanitation," the GAO concluded.

"FSIS monitoring of slaughter plant operations does not effectively assure (the) plants' compliance with inspection program requirements," the report said.

"Slaughter plan...improvements are not likely to be made until inspection personnel strengthen their enforcement of FSIS standards and plant managers acknowledge and carry out their responsibilities," the GAO said.

Its report said that although budget restrictions had caused a shortage of inspectors and low morale, FSIS testing programs lack proper supervision and do not assure the public that beef, pork and poultry "are reasonably free of contamination or dressing defects."

The GAO said curent FSIS criteria "allow too many defcets" in carcasses and are "ineffective" because many plants do not implement them properly.

Government personnel did not perform required inspections, failed to test the proper number of carcasss, did not select test carcasses randomly and even posted sampling times in full view of plant workers, according to the report.

The GAO recommended that the Agriculture Departent ask Congress to give it authority to impose fines against unsanitary packers. It said that the only present penalty is to withdraw the inspectors, which shuts down a plant.

Agriculture officials, however, questiond "whether a financial penalty system could be equitably administered and whether such a system would be effective," according to the GAO.

The report also recommended stricter enforcement of sanitation requirements, better recordkeeping by FSIS personnel and more effective monitoring of inspectors and inspection supervisors.

The GAO said the plants randomly selected for inspection by its investigators were in Kansas, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Arkansas and Georgia.

White sues USDA in Medfly battle

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorney General Mark White says the U.S. Department of Agriculture has moved too slowly in fightng the Mediterranean fruit fly, perhaps because of California Republicans in the USDA's top echelons.

White sued the USDA in a Dallas federal court on Tuesday to force it to quarantine the entire state of California and fumigate all produce bound from California to Texas.

He said U.S. District Judge Pat Higginbotham will hold a hearing on the suit, filed on behalf of Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown, at 9 a.m. Saturday.

"We in a sense, are going to be protecting the entire southeastern United States because it (California produce) all flows through Texas.... We are at the choke point on the funnel," White said in an interview.

White agreed with Brown that the USDA has moved too slowly in combating the Medfly infestation, saying he was "appalled" that the federal agency has not alreay quarantined all of California

He said California growers have pressurd the USDA not to impose a quarantine that goes beyond five counties where the Medfly has been found.

USDA's top management is full of California Republicans, who pay attention when large growers object to having their crops quarantined, White said.

"There has been enormous pressure in California pressure from the liberal Democrats not to spray and from Republican farmers not to quarantine.... That's the ruination of the nation — liberal Democrats and Republicans," White said.

Brown announced he will start fumigating California produce arriving in Texas on Sunday, and asks the federal court in his suit to keep the USDA and California growers from interfering.

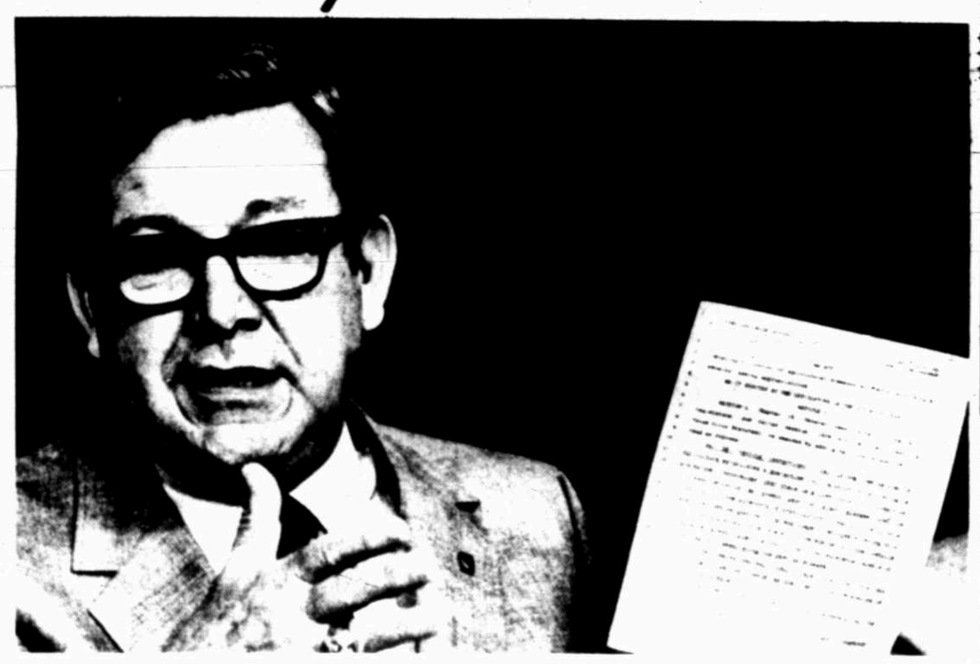

He said a new state law, carrying a $1.5 million appropriation to fight the Medfly, gives him ample authority to fumigate.

The suit against the USDA seeks reimbursement for whatever Texas spends on fumigation.

"The USDA has been negligent, they've been slow, and they have been behind the spread of the fruit fly in California," Brown told a news conference.

He predicted that if the Medfly spreads to the South Texas citrus regions, "if you do find an orange, it will be $3 apiece."

Brown said his department has placed 3,000 insect traps in strategic areas of Texas, including airports, and plans to place another 7,000.

Fruit flies long under control in Europe

ROME (AP) — The Mediterranean fruit fly is still a potential menace to the region where it got its name. But the insect causing such havoc in California has been controlled in Europe for two decades, mostly with insecticides.

"The peach and orange crops suffered devastating losses in Spain and Italy in the 1950s," said George Berg, a consultant to the U.N. Food and Agricultural Organzation and an expert on the Medfly. "In the 1960s, they started spraying. At the present time, the problem is well under control in the Mediterraean."

The Europeans use bait sprays, an insecticide — malathion and fenthion are commonly mixed with hydrolized protein to attract the fly and tempt it to eat the poison.

Thousands of sterile male flies are also set free in infested areas, to mate with fertile female flies who then produce no eggs. But Berg says the sterile male technique is not enough by itself.

"The Medfly is a serious pest," he said. "As soon as you stop the sprays, you've got the problem again. Any place in the Mediterraean they want to produce fruit in commercial quantities, they need the sprays."

Spanish rgowers shield their plants with mosquito netting in addition to spraying at ground level and from the air. Agriculture Ministry officials say the pest is not a problem now, but they've been working hard against it for years.

In Greece, the Medfly occasionally attacks the southern apricot and citrus orchards, but routine spraying generally keeps it under control. The law calls for infested crops to be destroyed, but this has not been necessary, according to the Agricultue Ministry.

Italian officials say insecticides and the use of sterile males have kept the problem under control in southern Italy's apricot, peach and citrus orchards.

The Mediterranean fruit fly originated in Africa and spread to southern Europe, Central America and parts of South America.

Rain improves crop conditions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rain from tropical storm Dennis has suddenly improved crop and pasture conditions in much of the Southeast, the government says.

However, large areas of Texas and the Mississippi Delta region remained dry and "crops were showing signs of moisture stress by midmonth," the Joint Agricultural Weather Facility said Tuesday in a report covering the week of Aug. 10-16.

"Dry weather in the spring wheat growing areas (in the Dakotas and other Northern states) enabled farmers to make rapid progress" in harvesting their crop, it said.

Corn nationally was reported in fair to mostly good condition, although there were some poor stands in the Southeast which suffered weeks of dryness before the rain was dumpd by tropical storm Dennis.

Farmers in many areas were delayed in planting corn last spring by excessive rain.

"Progress in Indiana and Ohio continues to lag behind normal due to late planting," the report said. "Over three-fourths of the corn in the South was mature and harvesting operations were becoming more widespread."

Soybeans were in fair to mostly good condition throughout the nation, and rain helped the crop in the Southeast, it said.

The cotton crop was reported in fair to good shape, with the boll set about 92 percent complete in the major states, compared with 94 percent a year ago.

In a related report about the U.S. feed grain situaion, the department said current prospects point to an output of feed grains — mainly corn but also including sorghum, oats and barley — of 236 million metric tons.

That would be up 19 percent from 1980 production but still 1 percent shy of the 1979 record.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds.

Total "disappearance" of feed grains is expected to be around 228 million tons, up from an estimated 28 million in 1980-81, the report said. Larger domestic use and exports will account for the increase.

"The use of corn for feed will likely be 106.7 millin tons, only slightly larger than this year because of the downward adjustment in hog production, little improvement in livestock-corn margins (of profit), and increased sorghum, barley and wheat supplies," it said.

Corn exports are expected to gain about 2.5 million metric tons in 1981-82 to an estimatd 62.2 million, the report said.

It's a fair day for 'My Fair Lady'

NEW YORK (AP) — The classic "My Fair Lady" is back on Broadway — with a real-life subplot straight frm "42nd Street" — the tale of a young actress called to step in for an ailing star.

Ringham

Understudy Nancy Ringham — a 26-year-old with seven performances under her belt and two lucky pennies in her change purse — was thrust into the limelight Tuesday night to co-star opposite Rex Harrison.

Cheryl Kennedy, originally cast as Eliza Doolittle, withdrew Monday night after her laryngitis developed into a severe case of nodes on the vocal cords.

"It's all happened so fast," said Miss Ringham, who as a child used to listen to the soundtrack that made Julie Andrews famous, "never dreaming that it would someday be me."

While Harrison had been insistent on having a British actress play the part and had said Miss Kennedy was his personal choice, "he's been wonderful, helping me and being there during this trying time," his new co-star said.

With all 1,900 opening-night tickets sold and her parents, two brothers and a sister in front seats, the young singer — who a year ago was waiting tables in a New York restaurant — had "a few butterflies in the old stomach, to say the least."

LONDON (AP) — American songwriter Alan Jay Lerner has married for the eighth time, the Daily Mail reported today.

The newspaper said the 62-year-old Lerner — who wrote the lyrics or "My Fair Lady," currently being revived on Broadway — was wed recently to Liz Robertson, 26, the actress daughter of a security officer in the Port of London.

Miss Robertson is appearing in a play at the Chechester Festival Theater, near the couple's honeymoon hotel in a Sussex seaside village, the newspaper said.

Lerner met his bride two years ago after Miss Robertson was given the lead role in a London revival of "My Fair Lady."

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Comedian Bob Hope is slated to appear at next month's annual Roy Clark Star Night, a benefit for the Children's Medical Center here, the show's producers said.

Hope and Clark will be joined at the Sept. 12 event by Doc Severinsen, Woody Herman and his orchestra, country music singer Jimmy Dean and comedian Norm Crosby, the Jim Halsey Co. said Tuesday.

The program will climax the Roy Clark Celebrity Golf Classic, a two-day event at Cedar Ridge Country Club.

WEST YELLOWSTONE, Mont (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter turned down an invitation to attend the ground-breaking of the Federation of Fly Fishermen here, but he did come to town for a fishing vacation.

Carter; his wife, Rosalynn; and their children, Amy and Chip, arrived here Tuesday by private jet. After chatting briefly with spectators, the Carters were driven to Yellowstone Village near Hebgen Lake where they plan to enjoy the trout fishing until Sunday.

Carter had been invited to attend opening ceremonies Thursday evening for a new building to house the fly fishermen, who are holding their international convention here this week.

But an IFF spokesman said he was told by an official in the Carter party the former president would not attend the ceremony.

GLADWYNE, Pa. (AP) — Neighbors of soul singer Teddy Pendergrass are upset over his plan to subdivide property in an affluent Philadelphia suburb.

Pendergrass has proposed dividing his 13-acre estate — on which his $600,000 house is located. The home formerly was owned by television talk-show host Mike Douglas.

Pendergrass' lawyer, John Frazier Hunt, told a planning commission meeting his client "has absolutely no intention of selling or moving in the near — or even distant — future." But neighbors in the secluded Montgomery County community are not pleased.

"I'm all against it," said Mrs. James Allen Montgomery. "The more subdivision, the more people living here. We all like things just the way they are around here. And whoever tries to change things will be closely scrutinized."

The 30-year-old singer, who has recorded five platinum albums, said during his childhood in a Philadelphia ghetto he never dreamed of moving to the suburbs, "because I didn't even know they existed."

Spielberg's acting lessons make news

He returns to Texas for newsroom experience

By SUSAN STOLER
Asociated Press Writer

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Veteran actor David Spielberg enrolled in unusual acting "lessons" recently for his role as a television news director in the CBS series "Jessica Novak," debuting this fall.

Spielberg, a native of Mercedes in the Rio Grande Valley, has spent days watching how news directors at stations in Los Angeles, New York and his native South Texas run their operations.

"I've become almost a news freak," the 38-year-old performer said. "But I know I couldn't stand to do it for a living."

"Jessica Novak," a one-hour show on Thursday night, will star Helen Shaver in the lead role of a beginning television reporter. Spielberg plays her hard-nosed boss, Max Kenyon.

Spielberg has appeared on dozens of television shows including "Lou Grant," "One Day at a Time" and "Trapper John, M.D."

He also starred in the short-running "American Girls," several seasons ago.

During a visit to KGBT-TV, the CBS affiliate here, Spielberg talked about the homework he did for the new show.

"It was just fascinating,' he said of watching a news department put together a newscast from morning to airtime. "It was almost like putting on a play every night. The closer you get to airtime, it was just like a play. You could feel the tension."

Spielberg was at a New York station when an important story broke about vandals almost causing Newark, N.J., to lose its water supply.

"By the time I left, I was exhausted and I had only been watching," he said.

Spielberg returned to Texas recently to visit his father, a Rumanian imigrant who moved to Weslaco and married a Mexican-American school teacher.

"I was born in Mercedes because that's where the hospital was," he said. Spielberg attended parochial schools and graduated in 1957 from Weslaco High School.

During his two years in the Navy, he decided on acting a a career.

"I was stationd at Norfolk, Va., and took the ferry across the Cheasapeake Bay one day to get to New York. I got seasick on the ferry," he said. "I went into this theater to get out of the cold and that cinched it. It was my first Broadway play."

The play was "Compulsion" starring Roddy McDowell.

Spielberg enrolled at the University of Texas after his discharge as a drama major with a minor in business.

'I thought I'd hedge my bets," he said.

However, after spending two summers at acting school in New York, he quit college and moved to the Big Apple.

Growing up in a town of less than 10,000 gave him a naive optimism about breaking into the acting business, he said.

"I guess coming from a very small town and not knowing what the odds were was good for me," he said.

A series of odd jobs, from waiter to cabbie to elevator ooerator, kept food on his table.

Spielberg's first feature film was "Man-in-the-Moon-Marigolds," directed by Paul Newman. He was nominated for an Emmy for his role as the prosecutor in "The Lindberg Kidnapping Case," co-starring Anthony Hopkins.

But his first love is the stage.

Actor David Spielberg came home to Texas recently, in part to learn how to portray his character on a new television series this fall. He will play a television news director on CBS' "Jessica Novak."

"I think the purest acting is on the stage. In film you can sort of hide behind the camera but everything is out there on the stage," he said.

Spielberg says he hopes to have creative input into material for "Jessica Novak," filmed at Twentieth Century Fox studios. The set was modeled after one at KNXT-TV in Los Angeles.

Only one episode of the first 13 was written by Aug. 1, due to the writers guild strike. In the pilot, Jessica gets personally involved in a "childnapping" case.

"I don't see how you could succeed (in news) if you tend to get really involved in all your stories," Spielberg said. "All the atrocities, like that guy slashing derelicts' throats in New York, are too much."

He would like to see an episode dealing with the problems of Vietnam veterans exposed to the defoliant Agent Orange.

"I was one of the luky ones that fell between Korea and the Vietnam War," he said. "I was not called to put my body on the line."

Some similarities will exit between "Jessica Novak" and "Lou Grant," in that both are one-hour, dramatic series dealing with real issues.

Spielberg once portrayed a newspaper ad salesman in an appearace on "Lou Grant."

"He was a guy who sexually harrassed his secretary. I got an incredible amount of mail on that," he said. "A lot of women thanked me for the fact I didn't soft peddle the part."

The new show will follow the popular "Knots Landing" but will be competing with ABC's "20-20" and the critically acclaimed "Hill Street Blues" on NBC.

"It's not an easy time slot," he said.

'Lady' no longer 'fair' or fresh

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Critic

NE YORK (AP) — "My Fair Lady," one of Broadway's most praised musicals, is back. So is Rex Harrison. And young Nancy Ringham, hastily upped from understudy to star, has her biggest-ever break in theater.

It should be a happy occasion, this revival of Lerner and Loewe's 1956 hit, a hit that ran 2,717 performances and made a star of another young unknown, Julie Andrews — the first Eliza Doolittle to Harrison's haughty Henry Higgins. But there's bad news.

It's not just the throat ailment that forced Britain's Cheryl Kennedy — who was to play Eliza — to withdraw from the revival's 12-week run a few days before the show's premiere here Tuesday night.

Nor is it just that Miss Ringhm, her American understudy who now stars as Elza, doesn't bring such sparkle to the coveted role — only competence, a good voice and an uneven Cockney accent. No, the major problem is the revival itself. It's oddly flat, tepid and ordinary except in three respects:

—The commanding, masterful stage presence of Harrison, robust in voice and movement despite his 73 years.

—The twinkly charm of a tiny 92-year-old English wonder, Cathleen Nesbitt, back in her small but engaging original role as Professor Higgins' sly old mother.

—The brilliant, eye-pleasing costumes and sets of Cecil Beaton and Oliver Smith, the respective creators of same for the original "Lady," a melodious adaptation of Shaw's "Pygmalion."

You enter this silver anniversary edition, hoping the old magic's still there. You exit wondering if, after nearly a year on tour, the thing's just out of gas. It looked like that at a Monday preview.

Sure, Higgins, the aristocratic, petulant phonetician, still takes that bet from good-natured Col. Pickering (Jack Gwillim) and transforms the proud, igorant Cockney flower girl named Doolittle into an elegant, well-spoken beauty toasted by upper-crust London.

Once again, he grows accustomed to her face and inexplicably succumbs to love that starts when the fiesty lass conquers the phrase, "The rain in Spain stays mainly in the plain."

And again, there's that fine score, be it Eliza erupting into "I Could Have Danced All Night," her would-be beau (Nicholas Wyman) crooning "On the Street Where You Live" or her happy-go-lucky wastrel father (Milo O'Shea, wasted here) carrying on "With a Little Bit of Luck."

CBS building momentum, again wins ratings game

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS continued to build momentum for the upcoming prime-time season, listing seven of the 10 most-watched shows in the week ending Aug. 16 and winning the three week competition for the 13th time in a row, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed.

The seson, delayed by the recently settled writers' strike in Hollywood, still is about six weeks away.

CBS won the race in a week dominated by reruns with "Dukes of Hazzard" in first place, "M-A-S-H" second and "Trapper John, M.D.," tied for third.

The rating for "Dukes of Hazzard" was 21.4. Nielsen says that means of all the nation's homes with television, 21.4 percent saw at least part of the No. 1 show.

CBS' average rating for the week was 14.6 to 13.2 for ABC and 11.6 for NBC. NBC dropped to the No. 3 spot after a week in second place.

The networks say CBS' rating means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 14.6 percent of the nation's homes with TV were tuned to the No. 1 network.

ABC's "20-20," in 12th place, was the highest-rated of the week's first-run programs. ABC's first "Monday Night Baseball" game after the players' strike — and the last game in the series — was No. 38.

NBC had four of the week's five lowest-rated programs, including 'Greatest Heroes of the Bible" in 65th place, Part I of a two-part movie, "March or Die," 66th, "Sanford" 68th and "NBC Reports Why Poland Makes Moscow Shudder," 69th. "Those Amzing Animals" on ABC was No. 67.

Here are the week's 10 top-rated shows:

"Dukes of Hazard," with a rating of 21.4 or 17.1 million homes, and "M-A-S-H," 19.9 or 15.9 million, both CBS; "Trapper John, M.D.," CBS, and "Three's Company," ABC, both 19.8 or 15.8 milion; "The Jeffersons," 19.7 or 15.7 million, CBS; "Too Close for Comfort," 19.1 or 15.3 million, and "Fantasy Island," 19 or 15.2 million, both ABC, and "House Calls," 18.8 or 15 million, "Dallas," 18.4 or 14.5 million, and "60 Minutes," 18.3 or 14.6 million, all CBS.

The next 10 pograms:

"Diff'rent Strokes," NBC; "20-20," ABC, and "Facts of Life," NBC, tie; "Love Boat," ABC; "Taxi," ABC, and "Alice," CBS, tie; "Quincy, M.E." NBC; "Laverne & Shirley," ABC, and "CHiPs," NBC, and "Knot's Landing," CBS, tie.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, August 20, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Our 23rd president, Benjamin Harrison, was born on this date, as was the late celebrated Finnish architect Eliel Saarinen. In the coming months, you will draw closer to fulfilling some long-held ambitions. Count on receiving help when you need it most. Family members give you their full support. Your gift for self-expression is a powerful asset and could lead to a life in the limelight. You make a very persuasive spokesman for those causes dearest to your heart. Hasty decisions involving romance or marriage could cost you dearly. Go slow! Children are demanding but a source of tremendous joy.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Complete projects already under way and keep any secrets to yourself. An impatient attitude can become a barrier to achieving your goals. Show tenderness toward a small child.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Avoid making any hasty decisions. Thoughtful deliberation will help you take the most efficient steps to advance your career goals. Expert advice can prove very valuable. Postpone travel.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Buying a house can be a wise investment. Friends will be supportive of your plans so long as your goals seem realistic. Your social life is on the upswing! An old flame could reappear.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Security is fine but you must not allow yourself to become stuck in a rut. Making a big change may not be easy; seek expert advice to reduce the possibility of error!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your advice is very valuable to someone with a less disciplined attitude. You can do a lot to relieve a friend's confusion or worries. Be willing to work late if necessary.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Alter your schedule to accommodate loved ones' needs. At work, your personal plans may be subject to delay, interference. Be prepared to postpone certain changes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You will accomplish more if you work alone today. Friendships may be tested. Seek the company of someone you trust and get things off your chest. Avoid becoming involved in schemes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Compromise is the key to success in your business, personal dealings. The contacts you make today could help you branch out and widen your circle of friends. Try new things.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Romance is inspiring! Rely on your own efforts as much as possible, and catch up on a backlog of work. Unfinished business proves easy to bring up to date. Pay bills on time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be more realistic about your career. New propositions deserve careful investigation. Some inside information will come your way later today, easing your worries.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Delay making financial investments until more information is available. Unforeseen expenses could develop in connection with your loved ones. Do your entertaining at home.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An influential person's behavior may be hard to figure out. Why try? Hidden motives will soon be revealed, giving you the upper hand. Keep romance on the back burner.

"Ladies and Gentlemen of the Jury:

"I feel sure that you will find my client, Mr. South, blameless of any guilt on this hand. He and his partner, Mr. North, who is instituting this action for damages, reached an excellent six spade contract which, as you can see, depends on no more than losing only one trump trick.

"West led a low club. Declarer won in hand and laid down the king of spades. East, an old hand, tried the 'black on black' stunt by discarding a club, but my client was awake. He realized the danger of losing two trump tricks, and saw that, to avert it, he had to shorten his trumps to the same length as West. To accomplish that, he had to ruff two red-suit cards in his hand.

"Since he held seven diamonds and only five hearts between the two hands, my client naturally tackled the heart suit first. Unfortunately, West held only two hearts as well, so he overruffed the third heart and exited with a club, and my client still had to lose a trump trick.

"We maintain that Mr. South was a victim of bad luck and not poor play. Therefore, we request that you find his partner's suit to be frivolous and without merit."

"We, the jury, unanimously find in favor of the plaintiff, Mr. North. However, since Mr. South was on the right track, we recommend that the damages be nominal.

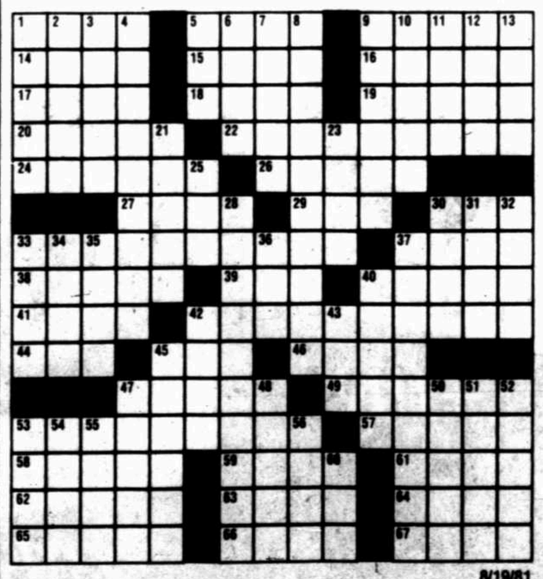

"There is one flaw in the defendant's argument. Since he had to ruff a diamond anyway if he were to bring about the required end position, the success of the contract hinged on finding West with at least three diamonds. Therefore, declarer should have ruffed a diamond before starting hearts. When West shows up with four diamonds, a heart ruff becomes unnecessary—declarer knows that he can safely cross to the dummy with the king of hearts and ruff another diamond. Declarer then simply cashes his high clubs and the ace of hearts before exiting with a low trump. West must then lead from his queen of trumps into declarer's king-jack, and the contract is home."

Ebony, a 6-year-old child born as a diseased, unwanted infant, frolics near her Chicago home as her adoptive mother, Diane, looks on.

Miracle baby grows up to live a normal life

CHICAGO (AP) — Ebony Peacock came into this world so diseased that nurses wore gloves to protect themselves from infection when they picked her up. No one — including her own mother — wanted her.

Ebony was born with congenital syphilis and rubella, porous bones and a heart defect. She weighed less than a pound and a half.

Doctors at the University of Illinois high-risk nursery diagnosed the infant as blind and deaf. They said her condition would worsen.

They were wrong.

Six years later, Ebony is a lively, normal child, a kindergarten graduate who is about to enter first grade.

New medicines and technologies played a role, but doctors credit the care Ebony received from one woman — a licesed practical nurse who loved a baby no one wanted — as the key to her recovery.

"She was real scrawny looking," remembers Diane Peacck, who was employed in the high-risk nursery when Ebony was born.

"People said if you gave her a tin cup, she'd look like a chimpanzee. Most of the preemies (premature babies) have a cuteness about them, but she didn't."

Nevetheless, Mrs. Peacock quickly "adopted" Ebony as her special charge. She held her often, and would wrap her in a blanket and carry her around like a papoose as she cared for other babies.

"I always liked the underdog, and I think that's why I took to Ebony," Mrs. Peacok said. "She seemed to know me and quiet down when I held her."

When Ebony was six months old, and weighed six pounds, Mrs. Peacock was allowed to take her home. Ebony's improvement began almost immediately.

"Within the first month, she began to respond to sound and she'd never done that in the hospital," Mrs. Peacock said. "A few months later, she responded to light. Each time I took her back to the hospital for a monthly checkup, they couldn't believe it. She seemed like a new baby."

Ebony's sight and hearing developed, her bones strengthened and her heart defect cleared spontaneously, Mrs. Peacock said.

When Ebony turned one, Mrs. Peacock, then a divorced mother with a 3-year-old child, adopted her. Mrs. Peacock has since remarried.

Mrs. Peacock's emotional involvement was vital to Ebony's health, said Dr. Dharmapuri Vidyasager, director of the newborn nurseries at the Univesity of Illinois hospital.

"I am certain that Ebony wouldn't have developed her hearing, fo example, without the sound stimulation she reeived," he said.

Ebony is unusual but not unique, he said. Other babies whom doctors have given no cance have surprised them by living.

As for Ebony, when her mother chides her for playing too raucousy, she smiles and says: "Momma, I was born to dance."

Amnesia victim may be key to missing money

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio is looking for $1.3 million in unaccounted-for money and the one person who might solve the mystery apparently has amnesia and can't help.

The story of Jane Boerger, 48, former head of the cashier's department in the state treasurer's office, unfolded Tuesday following the release of a state auditor's report.

State Auditor Thomas Ferguson said the report showed there was a $1.3 million discrepancy between the amount shown by the cashier's office as its checking account balance and the amount listed in bank records.

The report also said numerous reords, which might account for the money, were missing from Jan. 7, 1979 through June 30, 1980 — the period covered by the audit.

"We don't know that any money is missing," said a Ferguson aide.

The auditor's report did not claim illegal act, nor did it make a finding for the recovery of the money.

It also said "inadequacies of finacial record-keeping in the cashier's department made it imposible to pursue the differences (in account balances) further."

Meanwhile, state Treasurer Gertrude Donahey and member of her staff recalled how Ms. Boerger left the office Jan. 17, 1980 — while the audit was in progress — and never returned.

That night, according to members of her family, the woman lapsed into a coma that lasted 10 days. Afterward, doctors said, she had been stricken with hysterical amnesia and could not recall her past or anything about her work in the treasurer's office.

On Tuesday, she reportedly still had no recollection and was staying with relatives on a farm near Sidney in northwestern Ohio.

Deputy Treasurer Wayne Maloon recalled a strange pttern of behavior by Ms. Boerger in the days befor she left, and he said it may have stemmed from his reprimanding her for keeping a messy office.

"I had kind of a hassle with her over her office," Maloon said, adding it was "in a disarray and not well-kept."

He said Ms. Boerger, who joined the treasurer's office in 1971 tended to do most of the cashier's work hereif rather than delegate authority.

"I think she just tried to do too much in this office, and it just got to her," Maloon said.

Mrs. Donahey, now in her 11th year as treasurer, reviewed the report with the auditor's staff and said she already has moved to install more computer technology to avoid further accounting problems.

Ferguson's exminers said it was imposible to track the money through BancOhio National Bank, holder of the account, because bank records are kept only six months after transactions are completed.

Ronald Reagan's retreat reflects his governmental style

By GEORGE E. CONDON JR.
Copley News Service

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — The feel of a genuine crisis is there almost anywhere people have been affected by the strike by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization.

It is there in Chicago when top officials of the AFL-CIO nervously talk about this being the most significant event in U.S. labor history, since President Harry Truman tried to draft striking railroad workers into the Army in 1946.

It is there in the taxicabs and the flower shops and other large and small corporate endeavors where the economic losses from the strike mount daily.

And it is certainly there in the airports, both domestic and overseas, where wary travelers buy increasing amounts of insurance even while many would-be air travelers are taking instead to trains and buses in fear of the safety of American skies.

But there is one place, at least, where there is no feel of crisis and little sense that anything is out of the ordinary.

That place is Rancho del Cielo, President Reagan's "ranchin the sky" — a 688-acre ranch atop the Santa Ynez Mountains — where the chief executive is taking a month-long vacation while his aides in Washington continue to grapple with the ramifications of his decision to fire all the strikers.

The president is receiving daily briefings on the strike.

But the clear implication of his aides' comments is that Mr. Reagan is truly on vacation, more involved in chopping wood and clearing brush than monitoring the details of labor strife.

"This is a very good example of the president's style," said one White House aide who asked not to be identified.

"He has set the tone and communicated his own philosophical view of the strike. He has taken firm action. But now it is up to the people he has appointed to manage the details and the implementation of his policy.

"Of course, this is a different style than we've seen in other presidents," he said. "Can you imagine any president since Eisenhower acting similarly? Certainly not Nixon or Carter. They would have canceled vacations and personally supervised every detail."

Dressed casually and talking with the sounds of the Pacific Ocean coming from across the street, David Prosperi, a White House press aide, said the president had offered to stay in Washington if his presence would help resolve the situation.

"But the president has ample confidence in Drew Lewis(secretary of transportation) and there really was no reason to stay," said Prosperi. "We're keeping him informed. The president has been briefed when necessary."

He added, "This is just continuing in the style he set when governor. He's a person who all along has believed in getting the best people for the job and letting them do their jobs. He has confidence in the people he appoints.... But keep in mind that he's the one who is making the final decision."

Other White House aides say that Mr. Reagan's determination to avoid the nitty-gritty — and often politically debilitating — details was reinforced by the example set by former President Jimmy Carter.

There's nothing typical about this California teen-ager

By PATRICIA WOLF
Hearst Feature Service

No one ever would call Gary Chartier a typical teen-ager.

At 14, Chartier, who looks like a young attorney and talks like an old one, would rather spend his idle hours calling right-wing foreign dignitaries and penning constitutions for emerging governments than hitting the beach or listening to rock 'n roll.

"Without appearing egotistical, I enjoy a combination of intelligence, persistence and a lot of gall," said the boy wonder, whose IQ has been placed at between 135 and 160 (140 is considered genius).

The Wunderkind is an only child, who lives with his housewife mother and physician father in a custom-built home set among orange groves in the city of Corona, 55 miles east of Los Angeles, Calif.

Chartier favors three-piece suits over jeans and Irish and British folk ballads and classical military music over Bruce Springsteen. And he proudly acknowledges he is one of the few in his high school who carries a briefcase. "It's my trademark," said Chartier, proudly displaying the red-leather case. "Although I am looked upon as a nut."

Because of his gruff voice, Chartier is often mistaken for an older chap. A 59-year-old Rutgers University professor, whom Chartier considers one of his good friends, has no idea his phone mate is 14. "He asked me once if I was retirement age," the teen-ager said.

But it is his interest in foreign governments, primarily ones with right-wing ideologies, and his hero-worship of the late Shah of Iran and the Pahlavi family that sets him apart from other whiz kids. By his own accounts, Chartier has spent about $275 for trans-Atlantic phone calls and telegrams in the last year and a half. He usually tries to call collect. Some, like Haydar Saltik, secretary-general of the National Security Council of Turkey, accept the charges.

"We talked about the military situation in Turkey," said Chartier of his call last November. "Saltik is charismatic. He could sell you the Brooklyn Bridge, site unseen, at twice the price, have you will it back to him, then have you jump off it."

Others like Ian Smith, former prime minister of Rhodesia, do not accept the charges. Some like Jorge Rafael Videla, former president of Argentina, are not reachable.

Chartier's biggest disappointment has been his inabiity to talk to any members of the Pahlavi family, although he has received a personal letter from Ashraf Pahlavi, twin sister of the late shah, Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

He sent three telegrams to the shah. One sent the day before he died, read, "We're praying for you and are glad you're in such good health." "I felt ridiculous," Chartier said. "I immediately dispatched a message of condolence."

Chartier said he has "an intense and deep respect for the shah. He lifted a country out of utter chaos and advanced it to a great civilization."

The boy wonder, who classifies himself as a libertarian-conservative (a libertarian on social issues, a conservative in foreign policy) spends most of his spare time writing constitutions. He has had no takers yet, but then, his only completed document is one he penned for the United States, which he renamed the United American Empire.

In his 18-page constitution, Chartier advocates a monarchy. The first emperor, as Chartier has named his head of state, would be chosen by a "council of revolution." The leader, in turn, would select 15 families, whose members would choose succeeding emperors from among themelves. The emperor would be required to abdicate at age 75. "We don't want anyone senile," Chartier said.

An emperor could be crowned at age 30. "Thirty is not terribly old, I think," said Chartier, for the first time showing his age.

MC to offer course in magic

For people with a secret desire to hang someone in mid-air and not be prosecuted for it, or for people who would like to make money re-appear once it's gone, Midland College is offering a golden opportunity.

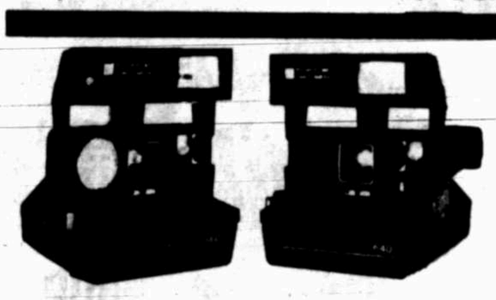

A short course titled "Introduction to the Art of Magic" will begin Sept. 17.

"Students will meet for two hours each week over a period of six weeks and learn a tremendous amount of magic," said James Bramlett, head of the MC Department of Community Services which sponsors short courses.

Students need to pre-register now to reserve classroom space and order the required textbook. Pre-registration will take place from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. weekdays in the Administration building, room 156. The deadline for registration is Sept. 3.

Call 684-7851, ext. 147 or 216, for more information.

Vodka: New ingredient in Poland's crisis menu

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
European Correspondent
Hearst Feature Service

PARIS — A new ingredient has entered the interminable Polish crisis — vodka.

Hardly noticed abroad, the independent trade union movement Solidarity marked another point last week by forcing the Communist authorities to add the Poles' favorite alcoholic beverage to the long list of rationed goods.

Polish informants say the move is likely to have far-reaching and unforeseeable consequences. Solidarity's leaders have rightly regarded drunkenness as one of Poland's most pervasive social and economic handicaps. They have accused the regime, not without reason, of tacitly encouraging it.

But, by compelling the government to introduce stringent limits on vodka consumption at this time, they may have inadvertently created a fresh source of national tension.

The imposition of rationing — a half-liter per person every 15 days — was purely a political decision. In a nation of ubiquitous scarcity, vodka is the one thing that has never been in short supply. It is also cheap, a half-liter (slightly more than a pint) bottle costs as little as 50 cents.

Officially, Poland's Communist leadership has always denounced excessive vodka consumption as a shameful blight that seriously hindered the country's economic progress because drunkenness resulted in widespread absenteeism from jobs or, what was worse, persistently shoddy workmanship. In practice, little was done to discourage drinking. On the contrary, the party came to rely on the tranquilizing effects of vodka to dampen the average Pole's discontent and to give him — or, increasingly, her — something to spend his money on.

Poles point out that the notion they have always been awash in vodka, that drunkenness is a traditional national vice, is a myth. Before World War II, the annual consumption of alcohol in Poland was one liter per capita. By 1978, this had increased to nearly nine liters.

To Lech Walesa and other Solidarity leaders, chronic drunkenness has been the most visible symptom of Poland's social decay. Zbigniew Bujak, who heads Solidarity's Warsaw branch, not long ago described vodka as "a government weapon...part of an attempt to keep the workers drunk and powerless."

Right from the start, abstemiousness has been a part of Solidarity's canon. During the Gdansk shipyards strike a year ago that founded the movement, strikers were forbidden to drink. The ban was enforced.

Solidarity's campaign against drinking, in which it has the warm support of the Catholic Church, has had impressive results. The government itself says that alcohol consumption has dropped by one-third in the past year.

But, even some Solidarity supporters are questioning whether vodka rationing was a wise step. There is considerable fear that it will lead to yet another black market. "Bootlegging," as a Polish diplomat here who is symnpathetic to Solidarity's objectives put it, "is something we can do without."

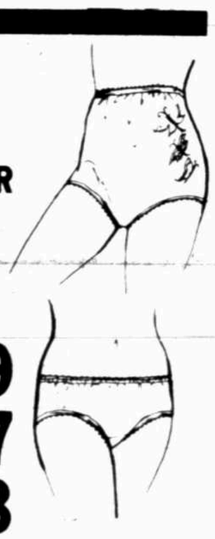

The action could boomerang in another way. "In this instance, the element of compulsion has been introduced by Solidarity," Victor Grenz, a Polish dissident, pointed out. "Let's face it, it will provoke a certain amount of discontent among ordinary Poles. They will blame Solidarity, not the government, for their deprivation."

The past fortnight has accentuated other divergencies between Solidarity's leaders and the mass base of the movement. The leaders have called off the recent hunger marches about which they were always lukewarm. But the question of filling the stomachs of the masses has been and remains the majority's main concern. They have begun to show impatience with the leaders' more "theoretical" demands for economic and social change.

Vodka rationing could add to that feeling.

Texas turning to northern states to fill teacher shortage

(c) 1981, The Washington Post

AUSTIN, Tex. — The booming Texas economy is contributing to a teacher shortage in Houston, Dallas and other Texas cities, and state educators have turned to the Frost Belt for help.

In Dallas 710 teachers have quit since March 1, many of them leaving for jobs in private industry. In Houston 203 teachers resigned during a one-month period this summer.

In other Texas cities that have experienced shortages in recent years an influx of teachers from Michigan, Massachusetts, Indiana, Ohio, New York and New Jersey has helped alleviate the problem.

"We're recruiting all over the world," said Felix Cook, deputy superintendent for personnel of the Houston Independent School District. "About 85 percent of our teachers are from out of state."

The situation in Texas is far different from conditions nationally, where a teacher surplus exists. "Generally speaking, there is not a teacher shortage across the United States," said Peg Jones, acting director of research for the National Education Association.

Jones said there are about 355,000 teachers for 129,500 jobs nationwide next fall. A recent NEA survey found 19 states reporting the chances for teachers' finding jobs poor, while another 17 reported conditions were terrible. Texas called conditions average.

Budget cuts and the tax revolt in many Northern industrial states like Michigan and Massachusetts have contributed to a decrease of 55,000 teaching jobs this year, which Jones called "the largest one-year drop in American history."

But in Texas there is a need for more teachers. Last year schools in the state employed about 161,000 teachers, and that figure is expected to increase this year. "My guess is it might go up 4,000 to 5,000," said Brian Wilson, director of information analysis at the Texas Education Agency.

One reason the state needs more teachers is because it is growing so rapidly. Between 1970 and 1980, Texas added more than 3 million people, a 27 percent increase. To meet the demand, local school districts have started extensive recruiting drives outside of Texas.

The Houston school district has recruited in many Northern industrial states and has taken advantage of the economic problems those states are experiencing.

"We were there when they cut back," said Felix Cook. "We saw it coming, so we were there."

Cook said the Houston schools have hired 700 new teachers this year "and we're still employing, because we still have vacancies."

The Corpus Christi schools, which had a serious shortage of special-education teachers a year ago, mounted a mail-order campaign around the country. Goode said other vacancies would exist "had not so many out-of-state applicants" answered the ad campaign.

Teachers who come to Texas face lower salaries than they are used to receiving. Loraine Bodoh, a teacher-registration consultant for the Texas State Teachers Association, said the state ranks 33rd in teacher salaries. "There are a lot of other states that pay more," she said, "but there are't a lot of openings in the other states, so the teachers are going where there are openings."

She compiles a regular list of vacancies in the state and said there are still "a lot of positions" unfilled only a few weeks before the opening for the 1982-82 school year.

These low salaries are a factor in the decision of many Houston and Dallas teachers to quit the schools for private industry. "Some of them are going into computer work, some into real estate, others into (other) private businesses," said John J. Santillo, assistant superintendent for personnel of the Dallas Independent School District.

He estimated that the Dallas schools will be short 125 teachers next fall and blamed the higher wages in private industry for much of the problem. Teachers in Dallas start at $13,217 with a bachelor's degree and $14,481 with a master's. "Our experience is that many industries are starting them off at $18,000 to $20,000," Santillo said.

As an example of the money available in private industry, he cited one of the secretaries in his office, who is leaving next week to work for an oil company that has guaranteed her a $4,000 raise.

Santillo reported that many more women and minority teachers in Dallas have been lured away by firms with affirmative-action programs. "The percentage of them leaving is much larger than it has been," he said.

Among the problems in Houston is a shortage of math and science teachers, many of whom are able to find better-paying jobs in the Houston area. But the NEA's Jones said the shortage of math teachers is not confined to Texas. "That's a nationwide phenomenon," she said.

Two other factors have contributed to the shortages in Houston and Dallas. One is the mobility of the residents, an offshoot of a vibrant economy. The second is a court-ordered expansion of the state's bilingual-education program, which will require about 1,700 more teachers statewide this year.

Congressmen fill up vacations differently

WASHINGTON (AP) — While some members of Congress are spending ther August vacations out of the country, New York Republican Jack Kemp is sitting on a bench in California and Illinois Democrat Paul Simon is reading Indian treaties.

Kemp, a former Buffalo Bills quarterback, is watching his son, Jeff, try to win a job as a quarterback with the Los Angeles Rams.

Kemp booked speaking engagements in California to help defray trip expenses.

Simon told constituents in a weekly news letter he had heard about treaties with Indians since grade school but had never read one.

So Simon had his staff collect a sampling, and he ultimately read 16 treaties.

A treaty with the Delewares that called for the return of several "stole" horses led Simon to this conclusion:

'I have the impression that here were horse thieves on both sides."

Rep. William D. Ford, D-Mich., as supposed to spend a day of his recess in Montreal, which he described in a prepared speech as "this hospitable city far removed from the steamy hat and depressing political climate in Washington."

Fonda-Hayden camp attracts liberals

SANTA E\RBARA, Calif. (P) — Liberal activists are sending their childen to a summer camp run by Tom Hayden and Jane Fonda, a place where a kid can take a field trip to a nuclear plant or bring a book about Ho Chi Minh on the trail.

But like most kids their age, the boys and girls appear to be more intereted in each oher.

The 120-acre Laurel SpringsCamp near President Reagan's mountain hideway in the pine-covered Santa Ynez Mountains is a laid-back, noncompetitive, unregimentd camp that stresses the importance of alternaive energy sources, Hayden said.

And, in Hayden's words, it stresses "love, responsibility communiy, the possibility of alternatives to see the world and personal growth."

'It's almost the opposite of politics," said Hayden. 'Politics is about how you organize people. This is about how you help a human being, one who doesn't vote."

The campers, ages 9 to 15, mostly are the sons and daughters of veteran liberal activists who pay $125 a week to send their kids away for part of the summer, usually for three weeks.

The reading material in the campers' bunks reflects such expected fare as Super Teen magazine, "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" and "Catcher i the Rye."

But the camp library has the board game "Class Struggle." Between "The Real Mother Goose" an a book on the Chumash Indians, who once lived in the ara, is a biogrphy of Ho Chi Minh.

Besides swimming, horseback ridig and hiking, camp actiities include Power Day, with instruction on the merits ofwriting letters to Interior Secretary James Watt; Political Day, when children are taught how to fill out ballots and give speeches; a trip to the Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant followed by a visit to the anti-nuclear Abalone Alliance office, and movies such as "Norma Rae" and "No Nukes."

Unless prodded by an adult, however, the conversaton of campers usually has nothing to do with politcs or alternative energy. Discussions tend to be about boys or girls — how short all the boys are this year, for example, or how "yucky' girls can be.

Hayden, a prominent opponent of the Vietnam War and Ms. Fonda, star of such films as "Coming Home," "The China Sydrome" and "The Electric Hrseman," bought Laurel Springs for $500,00 in 1977. Some of the 20 counselors are old friends of Hayden and Ms. Fonda from the Indo-China Peace Campaign days; others are recent converts to Hayden's Campaign for Economic Democracy. Like Hayden and Ms. Fonda, the camp has is detractors. One is Stephen Frank, immediate past president of the Californi Republican Assembly, a conservative volunteer organization within the Republican Party. Frank at one point accused Hayden and Fonda of "training children to use weapons" at the camp but later retracted the accusation in telegram to Hayden. Frank has been sued for libel by Hayden and declined to comment.

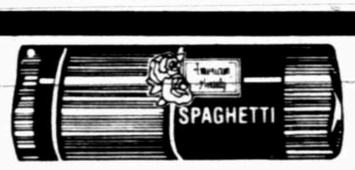

For Ms. Fonda the camp's most important features are those she missed when she was a young camper.

'I went to beautiful camps, and they were hateful," she said. "We learned how to shoot, and I won medals. They were big camps, very competitive and very frightening and quite regimented. There was no sense of values, no caring," she said.

Promising literary talent in trouble again after knifing

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer

NW YORK (AP) — Jack Henry Abbott was the toast of the town's literay set just a month ago, an untrained writer who'd parlayed a hellish lifetime behind bars into an acclaimed new book and a promising new lfe.

Today Abbott is on the run, possibly in Mexico, trying to dodge a murder charge, trying to hide the letters J, A, C, K that are tattooed n the four fingers of his left hand.

His writing since mid-July seems to have been limited to two letters mailed to his sister in Salt Lake City, naming her recipient of royalties from "In the Belly of the Beast," a vivid collection of letters Abbott wrote to author Norman Mailer about prison life.

Police say that on July 18, six weeks after he was moved from a Utah prison to a Manhattan halfway house, Abbbott argued with a waiter. They stepped out to the sidewalk, where the waiter was knifed and killed.

Since then, Mailer, the man who discovered Abbott, helped him get his letters published, wrote a letter to his parole board and gave him a job in New York has refused to discuss the case.

Mailer is "still unwilling to talk about it. I think that unwillingness will be permanent," Scott Meredith, literary agent for Mailer and Abbott, said Monday.

"He's just heartsick. He's so distressed about how this turned out," Meredith said of he Pulitzer Prize-winning writer, who is spending August in Maine.

Mailer has been alternately criticized for ignoring or glamorizing Abott's record of violence, which began with reform school at age 14 and culminated with a conviction in 1966 fo killing a fellow inmate.

"The press is mad at Norman because he won't talk about this," said an associate who asked not to be identified. "And they have a right to be. He shouldn't have crawled into a cocoon like this, especially since he's usuálly so open."

The detective supervising the manhunt said Abbott would be caught eventually. He has spent all but 10 months of his life since age 14 in custody, and 'he is fundamentally inapable of coping in free society," said Detecive William Majeski.

'He's a survivor," Majeski conceded. "But that was in prison. In New York he had trouble from the start."

Majeski said that although Abbott never showed signs of paranoia or violence to Mailer or Meredith, he was unable to deal with routine matters.

Meredith said he was shocked by the knifing.

"Even when we had small business disagrements he was mild, pleasant and gentle. There was never the slightest indication of a tendency toward violence" he said. 'I would have walked down any street with Jack, and I can't say that for all my clients."

When Abbott was in prison, Meredith, Mailer and Random House editor Eroll McDonald wrote letters to his parole board, praising his writing. But others say that was not why he was granted parole, effective Aug. 25, and moved to a halfway house in the interim.

Lawyers with the Prisoners' Rights Projet at the federal prison in Marion, Ill., say Abbott made a deal: in return for criticizing prisoners' lawyers at Marion and recanting a story about being tortured by guards there, he would be sent back to Utah state prison, where he could seek parole on state charges.

The prison lawyers imply — and federal officials deny — Abbot was released early because he charged the lawyers with encouraging an inmate work strike

Pearl Harbor surprised U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although U.S. cryptographers had broken the Jaanese diplomatic codes in 1941, President Roosevelt had no prior warning of the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor Dec. 7, according to a recently declassified document.

In fact, Japan's premier and war minister also were ignorant of the pending attck, William F. Friedman, the Army's chief cryptographer during World War II, sid in the National Secuity Agency document. Friedman sad there was nothing in intercepted Japanese dilomatic cables about the attack.

"The premier of the country and its minister of war were not notified of the impending attack on Pearl arbor by their own high command," he said. "At the time of the attack, the only codes we had broken were the diplomatic codes, which did not have anything in them about the attack."
