All Personnel of United Airliner Found Dead in Plane

INVESTIGATION STARTED TODAY AT SALT LAKE

Plane Struck Range
After Circling
For Altitude

SALT LAKE CITY, Feb. 26. (U.P.)—Eight persons lost in a great trimotored plane of the United Airlines Friday were discovered dead today, when a searching party was able to penetrate into the rough mountain ranges 20 miles east of here.

The plane was located from the air last night, but darkness and failure to find a landing field precluded a landing.

An investigation of the cause of the crash was started. The plane disappeared in misty weather, with only radio information. Evidently it veered slightly off course in the swirling snow and mist while circling to get altitude to enable it to fly over the hogback.

The tragedy follows a series that has taken the lives of army and commercial pilots during the last few days of poor visibility and other dangerous flying conditions.

PILOT SEES WRECKAGE NEAR SALT LAKE CITY

SALT LAKE CITY, Feb. 26.—The United Airlines transport plane, missing since last Friday afternoon with eight persons aboard, was found, badly wrecked, at the top of Parley's Canyon, leading out of the Salt Lake Valley, at 5:30 p. m. Sunday (M.S.T.).

Don Broughton, pilot of a searching plane, said there was no movement and no sign of life about the wreck, which lay, nose down, partly concealed by a clump of trees.

He identified the plane by its license number, as well as by its appearance. It was 300 feet from the top of a knoll and the north slope and some 250 yards from the power line to the beacon.

Pilot Broughton said he circled the wrecked plane two or three times to determine the occupants were alive, but was unable to do so.

Party Starts on Foot

As soon as he landed at the airport here after the radio report of the plane, a foot party was started to the location from a service station about five miles away. At the same time preparations were started to send a party of United Airlines officials from here.

The plane left the Salt Lake airport at 2 p. m. Friday and sent out no radio report after that time. When 6:30 p. m. was passed, the hour when its gasoline supply would have been exhausted, search was instituted, which continued through the succeeding hours.

The plane was piloted by Lloyd Anderson of Cheyenne and Eric G. Danielson of Cheyenne was co-pilot. Passengers aboard were J. J. Sterling, mayor of Benton Harbor, Mich.; E. L. Walker, Rock Springs, Wyo.; Marcellus Zinsmeister, Des Moines, Iowa; Evald W. Berglund, Boone, Iowa; and Bert McLaughlin, Perry, Iowa. Miss Mary Carter, the stewardess, was the only woman aboard.

The ship carried blankets, light lunches and coffee. Temperatures ranging little below freezing for the last two days of the trip were reported by the seven men and Miss Carter, who were able to survive if not badly injured in the crash.

In Heart of Mountains

The spot where the plane was sighted is in the heart of the rugged Wasatch mountains, about 20 miles east of this city.

Persons residing near the foothills of the Wasatch range reported they noticed the ill-fated airliner shortly after it had left the airport here en route for Cheyenne, Wyo., circling above the valley, as if to gain altitude for its trip over the mountains.

At the time the tips of the Wasatch were hidden by low-hanging clouds, preventing the plane from following its usual course up Parley's Canyon and through the gap in the range. How near it missed was indicated by the fact that it struck a mile from the beacon that gleamed its reassurance of a safe passage.

Pilot Anderson had more than 7,000 hours of flying to his credit. He gained his first flying experience at Los Angeles and obtained his license in 1926.

HIGH OFFICIALS OF 13 COUNTIES OF WEST TEXAS CALLED TO MEET HERE TO DISCUSS DROUGHT RELIEF

County judges, mayors and chamber of commerce secretaries from 13 West Texas counties of the drought-stricken area were called Monday to meet in Midland Friday at noon to make a united appeal for continued CWA work or other drought relief legislation.

The meeting was called by Judges Philip Yonge of Lamesa, J. S. Lamar of Stanton and Elliott H. Barron of Midland. Judge Yonge was in Midland Sunday to confer with the Midland judge.

The Midland county official sent letters today to all county judges in the affected area. Acting Mayor Martin C. Ulmer wrote letters to mayors and the Midland chamber of commerce wrote secretaries in the affected towns.

The meeting will be held in the county court house and is called for 12 m. Only these officials were invited in order to expedite the business expected to come up. About 30 persons are expected to attend.

Judges, mayors and chamber secretaries in the following counties were invited: Andrews, Dawson, Ector, Gaines, Glasscock, Howard, Martin, Midland, Crane, Winkler, Ward, Upton and Reagan.

With the temperature 25 degrees below zero and the long Antarctic night about to set in, Capt. Innes-Taylor, Pezos and San Angelo oil man well known here, left the Little America base of the Byrd Antarctic expedition Saturday night for a 150 mile trip towards the pole.

His concern is getting supplies cached so that when, next year, Byrd and his airmen fly over the pole they will be protected in case of forced landing by plenty of food.

This information was broadcast from Little America by Commander Byrd and two of his lieutenants, one of them a young medical student who is treating an injured man by diagnosing his condition and radioing American medical authorities for suggestions of treatment.

Capt. Innes-Taylor was a member of the Canadian Royal Air Corps during the World war and afterward was a Northwest mounted policeman in that country. He was in charge of the Byrd expedition's dogs on the first trip to the pole.

Midland Man Heads
Geodetic Surveyors

PECOS (P)—Pecos has been made the district headquarters for the U. S. Geodetic survey and a crew of 38 men, which may later be increased, is at work laying out various key points for use in preparing accurate maps, surveys, etc., of this part of the state. Van Camp of Midland is in charge of the men working out of Pecos. The district extends from Midland on the east to El Paso on the west; from Gaines county on the north to the Mexican border on the south.

NEW LIFE STIRS IN OKLA. FIELDS

TULSA, Okla. (P)—There's a stirring as of new life out here in a region—and this area—that many had given up as lost.

It is the old stripper oil well country, getting its face lifted after a fashion, and growing more desirable despite the ravages of time.

The greater part of the stripper area is old, pained and halting as this raw country counts time. East Texas, now three years old, is a mere infant compared with Nowata, Washington, Rogers, Tulsa and other Oklahoma counties.

Embracing roughly the northeastern third of Oklahoma and the southeastern quarter of Kansas, what is now the stripper territory once was the marvel of the world then nursing that robust youngster known as the motor age.

For 40 years it developed and spread to embrace its present area. All flush oil fields dwindle. The largest rampant gushers one day must lose their tremendous internal power and be placed on the pump as "settled" or "stripped" production.

In recent years the old fields were virtually forgotten, thousands of wells being abandoned. The flow from the others slowed even when pumped. From magnificent monsters they dwindled until there was just a trickle of oil; production had dropped to as little as half a barrel of oil a day.

But something happened. "Re-pressuring" with compressed air or natural gas boosted output. Something devised a way of shooting an inch line "tube" into the hole, ate away foreign matter that clogged the minute pores in the lime and sand through which the oil seeped.

It rose under government control of flush areas such as East Texas.

Soon another factor entered. All these fine new fields had plenty of oil, but strangely, this oil had poor lubricating qualities. There was a growing scarcity for good lube crude. The oil man remembered what fine "lube" oil came from the old stripper territory.

Small operators who had acquired the old leases to eke out a living found improved financial conditions. Some actually received bonuses for their oil, something unheard of since the days of Burbank in the Western Osage hills.

The old Bartlesville sand country was on the up grade and today it is doing rather nicely, considering that virtually all the pools have been discovered and almost depleted.

Even modern science cannot refuse to admit that the old stripper territory is doing rather nicely, considering that virtually all the pools have been discovered and almost depleted.

The first well drilled successfully in Oklahoma still is pumping away in Bartlesville. It cannot be verified, but old timers there say there's a saucy toss to its pumping jack head as it toils away, active and watched again after years of neglect.

76 Men Brave Sand
Storm, Attend Class

Sand-stormy weather failed to daunt the spirit of the Men's class of Hotel Schenbauer Sunday morning, a count showing 76 men present. Work of the secretaries, Andrew Northington, Sam Warren, Woodrow McClung, Colter, Hatt, Carl Covington and J. V. Stokes is credited with being mainly responsible for the growth of the class. Bill Patrick was encoered when he played an accordion solo.

Temperature Here Skids to Lowest Mark of Winter

A chilling northeast wind that blew up an hour after midnight brought sub-freezing temperatures to Midland and the wide embracing area today, and the mercury tumbled to the low mark for the winter at 7 o'clock, 13.9 degrees. The mercury fell 42.1 degrees. Sunday's minimum was 31. The cold early today did not hurt so much as that temperature would suggest, as surface wind velocity was negligible. From 14 miles an hour at 7 o'clock, it dwindled to 2 miles before 10:30. However, this area had experienced near-spring weather for most of the winter and had not become inured to wintry blasts, so naturally wore its top coat collars about its ears.

No appreciable shrinkage of livestock was expected as no moisture accompanied the lowering temperatures and none was predicted in this area.

The temperature by hours:

1 a. m.	31
2 a. m.	29
3 a. m.	25
4 a. m.	23
5 a. m.	23
6 a. m.	17
7 a. m.	13.9
8 a. m.	14
9 a. m.	16
10 a. m.	18

MANY AUTOMOBILE
RADIATORS FREEZE

Caught unaware by the sudden change in temperatures, many motorists found frozen radiators this morning when they attempted to start their machines.

Observers said 14-degree temperatures in this section is rather unusual. Minimum generally is around 18 degrees for cold spells here. However, last year saw the mercury plummet to nearly 12 degrees below zero, to mark the coldest here in 48 years. Sub-zero weather was recorded only twice this year before.

I don't know that I can get anything out of it, but I don't think the doctors did either. Jess usually finds some way to beat the game. I heard he fished around until they put him on a liquid diet, and as the doctor walked out, Jess was heard to say, "Heh, heh, heh."

I think they ought to have given him a change in diet.

WHEN RADICALS MEET

One thing that the ordinary citizen finds it almost impossible to understand is the venomous bitterness which the different radical sects hold toward one another.

The row between Socialists and Communists at that Austrian protest meeting in New York the other night is a case in point.

To most of us, probably, the difference between a Socialist and a Communist is not very great; certainly it cannot be a tenth as great as the difference between either party and an out-and-out capitalist.

But neither Socialist nor Communist ever assails the capitalist with half of the sustained fury that he looses on his comrade-in-radicalism.

A Socialist-Communist row is the most savage of all political scraps.

And it's all very hard to comprehend. One would think the two factions at least could present a united front against the established order.

But they can't. They never fight so well as when they are fighting each other.

A SERIOUS UNDERTAKING

The fact that three army pilots lost their lives in crashes while flying to airmail fields, preparatory to taking up their new duties as mail pilots, is a bad omen, even though they had not yet begun to fly the regular mail routes.

It does not mean, of course, that the army flyers will be less capable of carrying the mail than the regular civilian pilots have been.

But it does serve as a reminder that flying the mail is a specialized and difficult job, requiring the utmost skill and the most elaborate and accurate preparation.

The civilian pilots have made a truly remarkable record on this job in the last half dozen years. No one doubts that the army flyers are as brave, capable, and well-trained as any airmen in the country; but in taking over the mail routes they are stepping into a strange new field, filled with dangers.

The whole country will wish them the best of luck in their new venture.

ESSENTIAL PRACTICE

Again the United States fleet indulges in war games. Some 90 warships and 300 airplanes enter complicated and difficult maneuvers off the lower California coast, and stories about the "attacking force" and "defending force" get into the papers once more.

We landmen, who hardly see a warship from one year's end to another, seldom pay much attention to these maneuvers—except that we may, in our ignorance, wonder occasionally if they really are necessary.

And it is not a bad thing for us to remember that these war games are just about the most important of the navy's many peace-time functions.

They are to a fighting fleet what daily scrimmage is to a football team. A football team that never practiced would stand little chance of winning its games; a navy that ignored its war games would not be likely to have much luck in actual war.

Under the Dome of the Capital

BY GORDON K. SIEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent

Gaius Sempronius Gracchus and his Roman relief efforts 1550 years ago have been waved as a warning to the Texas legislature in their relief session.

Rep. J. O. Smith, Elgin, received a marked copy of an ancient history book. It detailed how Gracchus first distributed corn, then oil and wine, at government expense. The historian attributed the downfall of the Roman empire to the system Gracchus put in force.

Incidentally, the historians relate that Gracchus was "hoist by his own petard." Rivals for Tribune, unable to overcome his popularity with the masses because of his donations to them, at length hit upon the plan of putting up a rival candidate who promised more than Gracchus. His fickle followers turned to the new premier.

Texas became defendant in another score of suits as a result of the special session of the legislature. Numerous additional resolutions were passed authorizing claimants to take their disputes with state departments into court for decision.

A citizen cannot sue the state without such permission from the legislature.

Most of the claims grow out of highway construction damage claims, or disputes with contractors over the amount due on contract.

A legal division to combat such suits was set up after the regular session of the legislature so numerous were the petitions to sue.

Sen. Will Martin, Hillsboro, believes sessions of the legislature bring normal business to a standstill. "It's not the mere cost of a session, which is considerable, that makes unnecessary ones harmful," said Martin. "But every time we meet, business men get scared about what may be done to their industries, slow up activities and rush down here to protect them."

An oil painting of Vice-President John N. Garner has been on display at the state capitol during the special session of the legislature. Proposals to buy it to hang in the House will be renewed at the regular session, in recognition of his

Round

the tobacco does not spill out

Every Lucky Strike is made from the finest tobacco and only the center leaves—not the top leaves—because those are under-developed—not ripe. They would give a harsh smoke. Not the bottom leaves—because those are inferior in quality. They grow close to the ground, and are tough, coarse and always sandy. The center leaves are the mildest leaves, for which farmers are paid higher prices. Only these center leaves are used in making Luckies the fully packed cigarette—so round, so firm—free from loose ends. That's why Luckies draw easily, burn evenly. And remember—"It's toasted"—for throat protection—for finer taste.

Direct from the Metropolitan Opera House

Saturday at 1:50 P. M., Eastern Standard Time, over Red and Blue Networks of NBC, Lucky Strike presents the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York in the complete Opera, Lucia di Lammermoor.
