OUSTED SHERIFF REFUSES TO YIELD

Great Crowd of Fans in Midnight Welcome to Spudders

Faith

Worthy of Post—
Prices of Gasoline—
Congratulations—
Why He's "Highest Paid"

R. H. HENRY of Burkburnett, member of the Lions club of that city, announces Dr. R. H. Graham of Wichita Falls for next president of the Texas Lions clubs, and meets an immediate response from Wichita Falls, Electra and other Lions clubs.

With the state convention of the club in Wichita Falls next year, the friendly support of Northwest Texas clubs for Dr. Graham, president of the Wichita Falls club, should bring success to the enterprise.

Those interested in community affairs in Wichita Falls know Dr. Graham has brought credit to the local organization and to the city by his service as president here, and as leader of delegations to conventions in McAllen, Texas, and Miami, Fla. Texas Lions could look far without finding a man who would fill their chief office with greater dignity and benefit.

A COMPARISON of commodity prices issued by the U. S. department of labor shows gasoline is the cheapest commodity of general use in the country. The average wholesale price of gasoline for 1926 is given as 118.1 per cent of the average price for 1913, and the average price of 'all commodities," is 151 per cent of 1913 prices.

This is interesting information not only to those connected with the oil industry, but to the thousands of purchasers of gasoline. Here's what the American Petroleum Institute has to say about the matter:

"THUS the official figures show that the petroleum industry has been able, in the face of such an enormously increasing demand, to maintain a price level far below other commodity groups. They prove the high efficiency of the industry and the constant betterment of its methods. They demonstrate, further, that the full benefit of efficiency and constant improvement in spite of increasing labor costs, has been passed on to the consumer."

A. E. KELLY, for the last nine years office manager of the Texas Electric Service company, becomes the new manager of the company here, succeeding the late P. A. Rogers.

The Record News knows of no more fitting tribute to the work of Mr. Rogers than the naming of this man, who was always his trusted lieutenant, to carry on the work and policies which made "Pete" Rogers beloved of all Wichita Falls.

Mr. Kelly, eminently qualified and suited to fill his new position and to assume the added responsibilities, hopes to continue the broad policies of public service instituted by his predecessor.

If he were not already for his own work well and favorably known to Wichitans, this announcement alone would win for the new electric company head a cordial reception from business men and from the public.

ARTHUR BRISBANE, for years known as the highest-salaried newspaper writer in the world and a millionaire in his own name, proves his right to his pay by "scooping" the world on Henry Ford's apology to members of the Jewish race.

To newspaper readers over the nation, Mr. Brisbane's article was merely a surprising and intensely interesting news story; to workers on newspapers, it was one of the most sensational individual achievements in modern journalism.

Mr. Ford's apparent attitude toward members of the Jewish race has long been well-nigh inexplicable to the general public. Mr. Brisbane must therefore receive credit not only for producing an outstanding and exclusive newspaper article for the newspapers and news services with which he is connected, but for apparently convincing Henry Ford that he should halt and undo, so far as possible, much of the work done in his name against Jews.

BAND LEADS ROARING FANS IN WELCOME

Farmer Boy of Santa Anna County Brings Out Record Crowd

WELL, THEY'RE HERE

Iowa Park, Electra And Vernon Help Greet Spudders Home

By BLONDY CROSS

Wichita Fals climbed out of the 9 o'clock town class Friday night momentarily, at least.

It took a long, lanky, gangling farmer boy from the Santa Anna country to turn the trick. For Carl Williams, the East Texas cotton farmer and turkey king who in the warmer months turns his thoughts to mechanisms of the baseball diamond, came home last night.

All This, And More

Carl Williams, lovingly termed the Old Trojan by hundreds of fans, and his gallant knights of the bludgeon, the Wichita Falls Spudders, baseball team deluxe, Texas league leaders and from all outward appearances impending victors in the struggle for the Dixie championship, were greeted with shouts of acclaim and the blare of trumpets at the Union station when they rolled in from Fort Worth, tired and worn from a hectic road campaign that carried them over the entire Texas baseball circuit and brought them home victorious in 11 games of 13 on foreign soil, the most successful jaunt into enemy territory made by any Texas team the current pennant drive.

More than 1000 solid fans enthusiastic followers of the Spudders from this city, from Iowa Park, from Electra, and from even as far as Vernon were on hand to greet the conquering heroes, for the present baseball kings of Texas and in all likelihood champions of the league and then of the entire southland when the Texas race ends in September and the victors in the Lone Star state clash with the Southern association gonfalon winners, come back to the home hearth.

"Well, they're here, if nothing else," wurbled one glistening-eyed fan who appeared to have endulged a bit too heavily in spirits for the occasion, and then, "Whe-e-e-e!" The battle was on.

As the Fort Worth and Denver's "midnight special" screeched to a stop, Paul Seeds' brass band flared a lusty and rythmic welcome and sturdy cheers sprang from the leather lungs of more than 1000 loyal supporters of the coming Texas league champions.

Led by Mayor R. E. and Mrs. Mayor R. E. Shepherd, the enthusiastic crowd surged forward and swarmed around each noble athlete as he dismounted. Speeches were not in order, but all the boys were given the glad hand.

What Happened

Swede Swenson, dapper third sacker, was one of the first to alight. He grinned, sidestepped and ducked through the gathering. The stalwart Peter Lapan, solemn of mien and infensely sober of expression, flopped off night, waved a pudgy hand and began hunting Bert, the club trainer. Fandom fell back momentarily worried as Bert rushed forward with the medical kit. But nobody was hurt. Pete just wanted Bert to carry his luggage for him. Like most of our national pastimers, Mr. Lapan shows not so much ambition off the field, but when in the monkey suit—look out! He's there!

Howard Fitzgerald, the left-handed outer gardener, came next with a bashful, scared then apparently annoyed expression on his face. Hilarity Howard isn't much for the flowery stuff, but he's loud with the lefthanded bludgeon.

Levine Called "Flying Fool" After Planning Return Across Atlantic

Chamberlin in Open Break With His Companion On First Flight in "Columbia"

LEBROURGET, France, July 8. (AP)—Michael Drouhin, the French flier, on his arrival here tonight after piloting the monoplane Columbia to Croydon, England, and back, declared that he was satisfied with the American airplane and confirmed that he intended to fly from Paris to New York. Drouhin said he found the Columbia easy to pilot, but wanted to change the compass before trying the trans-atlantic flight.

The French flier took a wide swing eastward in returning from England, covering more than 300 miles.

LEVINE CALLED FOOL FOR PLANNING HOP.
By Universal Service.)

PARIS, July 8.—"Drouhin and Levine are real flying fools," according to the majority of French aviation experts who frankly express the opinion that a return flight to New York from Paris in the Columbia is a foolhardy venture and doomed to failure.

This is also the view of Clarence Chamberlin, who piloted the Columbia on its flight from New York to Germany, though he refrains from publicly saying so and is doing his utmost to tutor Drouhin so the Frenchman may get the utmost out of the Bellanca plane.

The gloomy criticism of the undertaking is based on two main factors: neither Drouhin nor Levine has the slightest knowledge of Atlantic navigation, and the flying range of the Columbia is only 4000 miles.

Drouhin, with small experience in the Bellanca type of plane, would not be able to take off successfully if extra fuel were to be added. Chamberlin has already expressed the opinion that on a westward trip in a Farman biplane with a 4500 mile range, Drouhin would have to refuel at St. John, New Foundland.

To these objections Levine replies that the Columbia flew to Germany most of the time by the sun, as the earth inductor compass went out of action 200 miles from New York. Regarding the flying range, he says, it is probable that the Azores route will be taken, which means a distance of 4000 miles from Paris to New York.

Suspects Held In Attempt To Rob Crack 'West Texan'

Special to The Record News

VERNON, July 8.—Officers continued late today to question suspects and investigate the attempt of three men to derail the "West Texas," fast Fort Worth & Denver passenger train and the attack of the men on J. D. Ferguson, 74-year-old tower man at the Frisco-Denver crossing here at about 1:45 o'clock this morning. Held at the point of a gun, Ferguson refused to obey the three masked assailants and signaled for the train to pass, thus frustrating what is believed to have been an attempt to derail and rob the passenger train. Foiled in this purpose, the bandits attacked Ferguson, painfully beating him and knocking him unconscious.

Suspects Are Held

Three detectives of the railroad company arrived here today and began an investigation of the affair. Local officers had already rounded up a numbr of suspects and questioned them today. No charges had been filed at a late hour today.

Mr. Ferguson regained consciousness about 15 minutes after the attack and found that the train he had refused to derail was on its way to Amarillo and the assailants had fled. Although unable to use his right arm and suffering from pains in the side where a rib was broken and in the chest where he was kicked by one of the men, the aged man went to the home of L. D. Cole nearby and was carried to his own home by Mr. Cole. His injuries are not serious.

He Faces Revolver

Mr. Ferguson heard a knock on the door of the tower early this morning after the headlight of the 1:45 train was in sight, he said this morning. Then someone called out, using the familiar "J. D.," the name by which Mr. Ferguson is known. Going to the door, Mr. Ferguson asked the name of the visitor. As he did so a revolver was thrust through the window and he was forced to the floor.

"Throw out that derail or we will kill you," Mr. Ferguson quoted the intruder as saying with a curse. Seeing the approaching train down the track, the aged tower man threw the switch that signaled a clear track ahead, and went down under the blows of his assailants.

His arm struck one of the levers and one of the men kicked him in the chest after he was down and he remembered no more, Ferguson said. The three men entered the room wearing eye shades pulled down over their eyes so that he could not recognize them, and one stood in the door with the revolver while the other two threatened, Ferguson said.

One Appeared Drunk

The fact that the man addressed Ferguson by his familiar nickname leads officers to believe that the assailant was familiarly known to Ferguson. Investigation is being made from this angle. Ferguson said that one of the men swayed as though intoxicated.

Mr. Ferguson has been employed by the Frisco railway since 1912.

Officials of the Denver could give no reason for the attempted robbery. The train carried no unusual amount of money, they said, so it is believed that the bandits intended to rob possibly both the mail car and the passengers.

MYSTERY IN DEATH BY GUN

Vernon Man Is Believed Murder Victim

Special to The Record News.

VERNON, July 8. — Funeral services for R. B. McClane, 31, who was found dead in the Humble Oil company's pumping station southwest of Vernon Wednesday night, were held at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon at Clara, near Burkburnett. The body was taken to Clara shortly after noon Friday.

No further developments as to how McClane met his death have been made by officers investigating the case. He was found lying on a bench inside the pumping station, with the top of his head and face shot away by the load of a shotgun. The gun was found beside the bench.

The angle from which the shot was fired caused Justice of the Peace W. D. Hollars to believe that someone shot McClane and tried to make it appear a suicide. No further evidence to support this theory has been introduced, however.

Judge Hollars' coroner's verdict was that "McClane met his death at the hands of unknown parties." In the inquest held Thursday morning testimony by several witnesses went to show that McClane was morose and despondent over financial troubles.

A. C. Cobert, who found McClane's body as he came to relieve McClane at the station at midnight Wednesday night, testified that he had had a fight with McClane several mopths ago, but that they had got on good terms again. Mrs. McClane said that her husband was in good spirits on the day of this death. The widow and four small children survive.

HASKELL CO. IS SCENE OF QUEER TANGLE

J. C. Turnbow Refuses To Give Up His Post As Sheriff

NEW ONE IS NAMED

Wayne Perry Chosen By County Commissioners As Successor

Special to The Record News.

HASKELL, July 8.—Two sheriffs, one ousted from office and the other sworn in as his successor by the Haskell county commissioners court, is the peculiar problem that only a court hearing may solve as opposing factions in the Haskell county government lined up for a showdown Saturday.

Sheriff J. C. Turnbow, elected first on an anti-klan ticket three years ago and re-elected last year for a second term, who was ousted several days ago by the Haskell county commissioners following his refusal to file a new bond (his old bond as sheriff having been declared "not sufficient" by the county commissioners court) has as yet refused to yield the office to which he was elected. Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, he has announced, he will publicly present his side of the controversy in an address on the court house lawn here.

Perry Files Bond.

Whether he will surrender his office without resistance or whether he will force the county commissioners to take their ouster proceedings into the Haskell district court presided over by Judge Bruce Bryant has not been indicated definitely by Sheriff Turnbow.

Meanwhile, Sheriff Wayne Perry who was selected last Friday at Trunbow's successor by the county commissioners court is standing by, watching developments. The commissioners' appointee on last Tuesday filed an official bond of $5000 and took the oath of office. Hence Haskell county's problem of two sheriffs.

Considerable friction between Sheriff Turnbow and the Haskell county commission has been existing for some time, according to those informed in court house affairs. Intense feeling has also developed and on one occasion resulted in an encounter in the court house between a county official and and a prominent Haskell citizen in which a gun is reported to have been displayed, cooler heads prevailing however to prevent more serious trouble.

PERRY AWAITS ACTION OF HASKELL COURT.

Wayne Perry, one of the two sheriffs of Haskell county in a long distance telephone interview with the Wichita Falls Record News Friday night stated that he had not yet taken over the duties of the office to which he had been named by the Haskell county commission. Sheriff J. C. Turnbow, whose expulsion from office was voted by the Haskell commission has so far refused to yield his post to which he was elected at the 1926 general election, Perry said.

"I am standing by to see how things turn out in the event of a contest, which would have to be decided in the district court, I will not take over the office," Sheriff Perry said.

"Sheriff Turnbow and I are good personal friends and the fight over the office is not between him and me but with the county commissioners court," Perry continued.

Turnbow in Country.

"Whatever action is taken in the event of a contest will be by the county commissioners court. I have nothing to do with it," he declared.

Sheriff Turnbow could not be located for an interview by telephone Friday night. At Haskell it was stated that he was spending the night at the home of a daughter in the country, no telephone connections being available.

BASEBALL BY LIGHTS NEXT

Great Flood Lights Give Clear Field

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, July 9.—"All right groundkeeper switch on those center-field lights and let's 'play ball.'"

The baseball umpire of five years from now may start play in the good old national pastime with some such admonition, if the prophecy of Claude B. Davidson, president of the New England league proves correct. Mr. Davidson, after witnessing the first illuminated baseball game ever played between two teams, declared that within five years the big leagues will be playing regularly scheduled games by artificial light.

The electric light contest witnessed by Mr. Davidson was held as an experiment at Lynn, Mass., one night last week. Engineers of the General Electric company rigged up a battery of 72 flood-light projectors which scattered a total of 26,640,000 candlepower about the baseball field.

"And I might say further", Mr. Davidson added "that within less than five years the New England league will be playing its regulation league games by electric light."

Eight thousand fans attended the moon-time performance at Lynn which so enthused the New England league president. The Lynn and Salem league teams provided the competition.

Many of the fans who attended the experiment for the sake of seeing a novelty, and sipped their pop from semi-darkness of the stands were surprised to find themselves watching a swift, well played game of ball. Only two errors were made, and sport writers declared that these two slipups might just as easily have happened in a bona fide sunlight matinee performance.

Several members of the Boston Red Sox and Washington Senators, playing in Boston at the time were present expressed their surprise at the excellent lighting conditions. The highest of the "balloon" flys were visible, searchlights forming a canopy of light.

Card Playing Habits Give Index To Character of Different Races

By Universal Service.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 8.—If you want to understand the racial temperament of a people study its card-playing habits, is the unusual advice of Ely Culbertson, Los Angeles and New York bridge teacher, who is ranked among the best auction bridge players of this country. He has played in nearly every capital of the world.

Culbertson, in St. Louis with his wife on his way to compete in the American Whist League Congress at Hanover, N. H., made some original observations on the card habits of various nations. Notable among them are the following statements.

The Egyptians are the finest card players in the world and especially excel in contract bridge.

Poker is more popular in Russia than in the United States and is better played there.

The English have made auction bridge a game for scientists; the Americans have made it a game for lawyers; while the French and Italians are the bridge anarchists of the world.

Egyptians Superior.

Asked to explain the superiority of the Egyptians, Culbertson said, "I think it is on account of their tremendous intuitional powers. Egyptians, and to a lesser extent Armenelans and Syrians, have an uncanny ability to anticipate plays and read their opponents hands."

"I actually began to believe in 'second sight' when I saw Egyptians playing against me in bridge make plays that showed they knew nearly every card my hand contained and how I meant to play it," Culbertson declared.

"I sensed more strongly the mystery of Egypt sitting in a bridge club at Cairo than standing out on the desert in front of the Sphynx."

Culbertson said the wonderful memory of the Egyptians also helped them in cards.

Next to the Egyptians, Culbertson placed the Russians as bridge players. He said, however, that poker was more popular and that the Russians played it more shrewdly than the Americans. Culbertson described vividly scenes in fashionable St. Petersburg clubs before the war where Russian nobles used to risk their fortunes at poker.

"I have seen a Russian noble bet his whole estate and even jewelry and his clothes on one power hand," Culbertson said. "Russians, before the revolution, were the heaviest gamblers in the world and next to the Chinese the most stoical."

Russians Play Poker.

"Poker is ideally suited to the Russian mind," he explained. "Psychology is a passion with educated Russians and they study the reactions of their opponents in a poker game with the closeness of a scientist performing an experiment. They also know the mathematical percentage for or against nearly every hand they can draw."

"Do they bluff as much as Americans?" Culbertson was asked.

"They bluff more but they do it more subtly," he answered. "That's where they utilize their psychology."

English are the most cool-headed and reasonable bridge players in the world, Culbertson said. He said Americans played with more inspiration but less reasoning. He added that Americans had betrayed their love of having numerous laws by inventing most of the conventions and rules used today.

CAL OPPOSED BY INSURGENT

Senator La Follette Will Fight Third Term

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—The opening gun of the "anti-third term" barrage that is certain to be turned upon President Coolidge when congress meets was fired today by Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, in the first formal declaration of any republican senator against the renomination of Mr. Coolidge.

In a lengthy and biting criticism of the Coolidge policies and alleged activities of the president to be renominated for another term in the White House, the youthful progressive republican voiced openly the sentiments that have rumbled beneath the surface for months among the progressive wing of the G. O. P.

While warning that the renomination of Mr. Coolidge could be forced through "his control of southern delegates, who are bought and sold with federal jobs as the medium of exchange" the senator asserted that the president "is in fact a long way from his goal."

Even at this early date," declared La Follette, "it appears that the president will have to do more than wear a ten-gallon hat, kiss babies and catch trout, in order to carry him to a third term in the White House."

La Follette said the president started his campaign in earnest by going to the Black Hills," the center of the agricultural regions hostile to his attitude on the farm problem."

"Surrounded by newspaper reporters and photographers, with a corps of publicity men, the president is attempting to make the farmers forget his veto of farm relief legislation by wearing a 10-gallon hat and catching trout with milk-fed worms," he added.

The senator characterized as "guff" the president's speech to the farmers in which he told them that "whenever we are in America, we are in a state far better off than anywhere else in the world."

RODEO SELLS "WILD" CATTLE

Bucking Longhorns Sold To Packing Houses

FORT WORTH, July 9.(AP)—As human champions of the prize ring and other sports have done before them, 66 bucking steers, some of them grizzled heroes of several furious rodeos, paid the eternal tribute to time and inactivity here recently.

Having weathered in some instances three or four seasons in the rodeo of the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock show and grown fat and tractable in the idleness of the off-season months, the string of bucking and bulldogging steers followed the steps of innumerable others of their kind to the packing houses.

The sale marked the disposal of the entire string of rodeo stock owned by the Exposition and Fat Stock show, inasmuch as previously 22 of the more active performers had been sold to a California rodeo, as spry enough for the Californians if not for Texans.

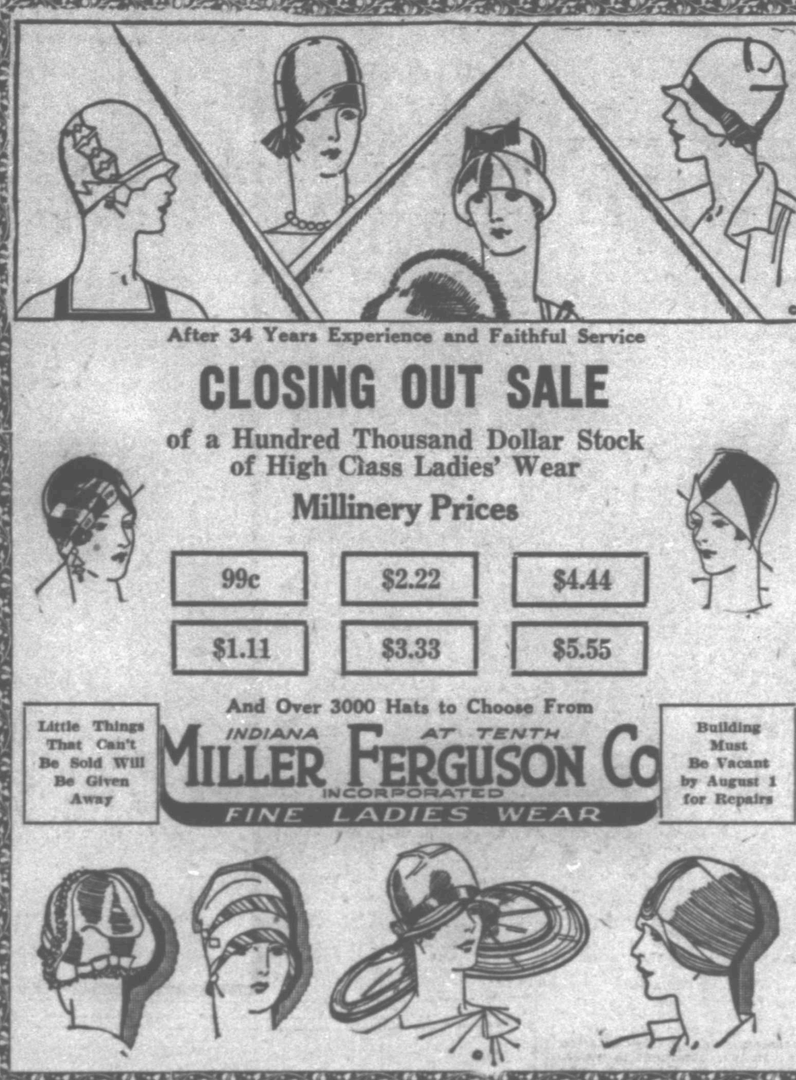

Selection of about 100 new bucking and bulldogging steers will begin soon under the personal supervision of John Davis, secretary-manager of the Exposition and Fat Stock show, in preparation for the 1928 rodeo, planned to be bigger and better than ever before.

The wildest and seemingly most active steers, preferably of the mixed Brahma and range type and showing good humps, will be chosen from supplies moving into the stockyards, and if this source proves inadequate a trip into the brushy cattle regions of southwest Texas where the Brahma abounds will be resorted to, Davis said. Bucking steers of about 1200 pounds and bulldogging steers of about 850 pounds will be sought.

But, whereas the fat stock show will acquire its own rodeo steers and will pick them from the ranges of Texas, it will depend upon Wyoming, as usual, for its bucking horses, obtaining its supply of "outlaws" from Ed McCarty, proprietor of a ranch near Cheyenne and a professional developer of rodeo horses.

MAY SETTLE SAPIRO SUIT

Ford Attorneys in Deal On Libel Damages

By Universal Service.

DETROIT, Mich., July 8.—Settlement of the $1,000,000 libel suit brought by Aaron Sapiro, Chicago attorney, against Henry Ford, was considered likely today as a result of Ford's statement that he has discontinued his fight on Jews.

The Chicago attorney started suit against Ford for articles which appeared in the Dearborn Independent. The case ended in a mistrial here several weeks ago. A new trial has been set for September 12.

Robert Marx, law partner of Sapiro, stated today that negotiations for settlement have been started.

"I understand negotiations have been opened," said Marx. "But I have no definite knowledge about them. It is all in the hands of Sapiro's attorneys."

Settlement Sought

Attorney Wm. E. Gallagher, Sapiro's attorney here, today verified the report that efforts are being made to settle the case out of court. He prepared a formal statement.

At the same time, however, C. B. Longley and Stewart Hanley, attorneys for Ford, declared they were going ahead with plans for the trial.

"We have heard nothing that would cause us to discontinue our plans for the trial," said Longley.

"I have not received word from Mr. Ford to change our plans. All I know about the new angle which has been brought up today is what I read in the papers."

Hanley made a statement practically identical to that of Longley.

According to Marx, Sapiro is now touring Saskatchewan, Canada, by automobile.

Sapiro in Canada

He said Sapiro was making the trip in the interest of co-operative farming. He added that he had been unable to reach Sapiro to verify the reports of settlement.

Sapiro is expected to return to Chicago Sunday.

Stewart Hanley of counsel for Mr. Ford in Mr. Sapiro's libel suit, said today when he was informed of the automobile manufacturer's statement that so far as he knew there was no connection between Mr. Ford's statement and the libel suit.

"The date on which to begin the re-trial of the case was argued as recently as July 1 in the United States district court before Judge Fred M. Raymond," Mr. Hanley said. "He set September 12, and as far as I know, the case will go to trial at that time. There is no connection so far as I know, between the Ford-Sapiro case and Mr. Ford's statement of today."

Mr. Hanley said that directly to his knowledge, there were no settlement overtures proceeding from Mr. Ford with respect to the libel suit.

No More Comment

When informed later that Mr. Gallagher stated that a copy of Mr. Ford's statement had been in his possession Mr. Hanley said he had no further comment to make.

Judge Fred M. Raymond, who presided in Detroit over the Ford-Sapiro libel suit, declined to comment today upon the action of Henry Ford in discontinuing his attacks on the Jews and withdrawing from publication article criticizing that race.

"All I know is what I read in the papers about the matter," Judge Raymond stated, "and besides, I do not think that I should make a statement as it might be construed to favor either side or the other in the suit in which is still pending trial."

Spudders Get Big Welcome

glistening the moon light as he bared his head and dodged, was greeted first of all by Mrs. Lyman Lamb who had an argument to settle. The Missus wanted to know whether the Spudders left on their road trip Monday two weeks ago four and a half games out front or five and a half. That's easy to settle: It was four and a half. The Spudders, incidentally, returned with a five-game margin over their nearest pursuers, the Waco Cubs.

Then came Willard Carl Williams, himself, and the heavens were shaken by shouts of the worshipping crowd.

Mayor Greets Williams

"Waddya say, Carl?" "Hi, there, Carl!" rang out on every side.

"Great work, Williams," gurgled the Lord High Mayor.

"Yep," answered the great man, "the boys have been right in there fighting."

"But you did most of it, Carl," somebody shouted.

"Yeah, I been pulling for 'em. Gave 'em lots of moral support," Spudder pilot answered.

And "Slick" Ansley, who with Mrs. "Slick" was on hand to take Williams home in his car, nearly broke down and cried, so happy was he.

The Spudders are back for a 17-day home stand, starting Saturday afternoon at Spudder park in a game with the Fort Worth Cats.

Manager Williams said Tom Estell, the spitball pitcher, is his likely mound selection for this afternoon.

Among Those Present

Many of the old stand-bys were on deck. Red Phillips, the Spudder announcer, Secretary Guy Airey, of course, Pitts, the barber, and a raft of regular Spudder accessories or necessities (call 'em what you would,) were there.

Amongst the gathering and apparently just as enthusiastic as any was Roy Carter, police commissioner and loyal fan, cheering his lungs out. No clergymen were noticeable in the assembly.

Wee Willie Lawson, pudgy sandlotter, was present.

"Little Mae" Wilson, culinary queen, was out with bells a-ringing.

There was Sam Kruger, the jeweler and bestower of many prizes to Spudder athletes in the past for duty performed on the field of battle.

Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Wilson and daughter Katherine, all veteran Spudder fans, stayed up late just to see the boys come home.

There was Bill Rogers, Jim Giddings and Jim Kaufman who knocked off a clarinet-basso by-play between stunts by the regular Paul Seeds band.

Bob McCulloch, another rabid bug, couldn't miss the celebration.

Dr. J. A. Heyman was out, too.

And among others were Archie Miller, Elmer Stevens, Billy Walsh, Elree Griffin, R. L. Dodd, Mrs. W. P. Turner and Ichabod. Couldn't be all according to Hoyle without Ichabod.

SURVEY ROUTE FOR HIGH LINE

Olney-Megargel Power Way Being Located

Special to The Record News.

OLNEY, July 8.—Surveying of the new high line from Olney to Megargel 15 miles west is progressing rapidly according to O. P. McCary, manager of the Olney office of the Texas-Louisiana Power company. The survey was started last week and will be completed within the next few days. The necessary equipment will be here in a few days, and the company expects to begin setting posts and constructing the line about July 15.

Power for the Megargel territory will be supplied from the Olney plant, and the small plant now in Megargel will be disbanded.

Olney District Permits Show Sharp Decline

Applications for oil well drilling permits have dropped in the Olney district from 200 to 50 a month, G. W. Tilley, deputy supervisor of the state oil and gas division, said Friday while in Wichita Falls.

"Six months ago applications for permits averaged 200 a month," he said. "However, with the curtailment of drilling operations the applications received at the present time will not average more than 50 a month."

In the Olney district, Mr. Tilley said that the main operations were being carried on in the South Bend pool of Young county.

"In the South Bend pool," Mr. Tilley said, "the operators are more active than in other sections of my district."

In the Electra district, according to J. L. Martin, also a deputy supervisor, who was in Wichita Falls Friday, the operators are using their crews for repair work around wells and drilling equipment.

"Very little drilling is going on at present in the Electra district," said Mr. Martin. "About the only new 'holes' are offsets."

More Oil Leaves Storage Than Goes in Panhandle

AMARILLO, July 8.—More oil went out of storage in the Panhandle field the past week than went into storage.

Runs to storage averaged but 26,074 barrels a day, while withdrawals totalled 26,684 barrels per day, leaving a loss to storage of 610 barrels a day.

SUICIDES LEAD TEXAS DEATHS

Self Destruction Figures In 1926 Double Accidents

Special to The Record News.

AUSTIN, July 8.—Suicide took high rank in Texas in 1926 among the ways or causes by which persons departed the life on earth, according to Dr. C. E. Durham, head of the state bureau of vital statistics.

Suicides were nearly double the total number of automobile and train accident fatalities, and exceeded the number of persons killed in these accidents plus the 439 persons who died at the hands of others, he pointed out.

There were 1,067 deaths by the 10 "official" methods of suicide in Texas in 1926, Dr. Durham said.

Heart disease, with 4360 death; pneumonia, with 4239; tuberculosis, with 3457; kidney diseases, with 2134 and influenza, with 1469 deaths, exceeded the number of persons who took their own lives. There were 42,236 deaths reported in the state in 1926.

Smallpox is far down the list, with but four deaths during the year in Texas. Typhoid claimed 504 victims and diptheria 266.

Pellagra, to most people only an overhanging danger, rather than an actuality, resulted in the death of 736 persons in Texas during the year, Dr. Durham said. This was the highest number since 1917. The heavier toll was ascribed to "hard times" resulting in improper diet and inadequate food.

The state vital statistician pointed out there are 205 "official" ways to die, this being the number of causes of death which have official or legal recognition by international acceptance.

Donley County Crops In Good Shape Now

Special to The Record News.

CLARENDON, July 9.—Crop conditions in Donley county are on a par with other Panhandle counties, late, spotted, and at this time badly in need of rain. A large decrease in the cotton acreage will be in evidence due to the lack of moisture in the northern and western parts, where practically no cotton will be made, none having been planted. The entire county is in need of rain at this time. A large feed acreage has been planted and with rains near more will be planted covering practically all the western and northern ends of the county.

PLAINVIEW TO GET NEW PLANT

New Equipment Installed By Power Company

Special to The Record News.

PLAINVIEW, July 8.—The Texas Utilities company at Plainview is installing a 1250 horsepower Deisel engine in their power generating plant at Plainview, which will give the local plant a total of 2850 horsepower.

George Keetch and Walter Barrett of St. Louis have charge of installation. According to the chief accountant of the company, Glen Smith, the installation was made necessary by the increasing business of the utilities concern in this territory. The company supplies 31 plains cities with light and power, and three New Mexico cities, and maintains generating plants at Lubbock, Plainview and Canyon for the Texas cities on the plains, and at Clovis for the New Mexico towns. In addition to those four plants which will operate on the same circuit, the company operatives independent plants at Dimmitt, Silverton and Levelland.

Another improvement and expansion being made by the Texas Utility company, according to its general manager, J. B. Scott of Plainview, is the drilling of an additional well at Plainview for furnishing the municipal water supply additional water. The new well which will be 38 inches in diameter is being drilled by the Edwards Well company of Oklahoma City under the management of A. V. Shuler. The new well will increase Plainview's municipal water system's supply by 50 per cent, and will give 3000 gallons per minute supply.

McConnell, were pioneer citizens of Haskell. Mr. and Mrs. McConnell were married June 17 in Brenham and left immediately for San Diego where they will make their future home.

Crops Excellent In Area Around Paducah

Special to The Record News.

PADUCAH, July 8.—The weather for the past week has been favorable for growing crops, except that some of the latest plantings are not showing a good stand. The fields have been cleared of grass and weeds, and the plants are growing off nicely.

Lateness of the planting season has caused considerable reduction in the cotton acreage, this reduction being planted to the grain sorghums and June corn.

Dorothy Dix Articles Daily--Advice To Women

MAID FLIRTS WITH TROUBLE

Girl Is Silly to Take Ride With Stranger

The Worried Young Man Who Cannot Give His Fiancee Diamond Engagement Ring—Silly Girl Who Craves Adventure of Auto Pickup — Foolish Boy Who Wants to Marry Before He Can Vote

DEAR MISS DIX—In these days of prosperity are diamonds a luxury or a necessity? Does a woman feel cheated if her fiance or husband cannot give them to her when she sees all about her inferior women wearing them on their fingers and their wrists and in their ears?

What do you consider the proper length of an engagement? I have always thought that a betrothal should last a year, during which time a man should be on his best behavior, and if he persisted in any personal habits which were repulsive to the girl and which she felt she could not endure in the future, it was her privilege to break the engagement and return whatever gifts of value he had bestowed upon her. JOHN G.

Answer: Diamonds are certainly a luxury and not a necessity, and their possession neither makes nor mars a real woman's happiness.

Most women like jewelry, and if their husbands or sweethearts can give it to them, they enjoy it just as they would a good car, or a fine dress, or a lovely home. But it is not necessary to their happiness, and millions of women go through life without even a diamond chip, contented and cheerful, and with no sense of being deprived of one of the good things of life.

Perhaps the gold-diggers, who only care for men for what they can get out of them, feel that they are cheated when they are not given platinum and diamond wrist watches and solitaires, but the worth-while woman, who loves a man for himself, feels that she is defrauded only when her husband fails to give her affection and tenderness and consideration.

So don't think that your sweetheart feels that you hold her cheaply, or that she is put in an inferior position to other women, because you cannot give her diamonds. If she cares for you, she would not want you to go in debt to give her jewels that you could not afford, and she is willing to wait for her gems until you can pay for them without sacrificing yourself. Many a man, who could not give his fiancee even a pin point of a diamond as an engagement ring, has plastered his wife over with tiaras and stomachers and whatnot by the time she was middle-aged.

No definite time limit can be set upon an engagement. That always depends upon the individual case, but, generally speaking, I think your idea of a year as the proper length of a courtship, is ideal. That gives a young couple time in which to get acquainted with each other's peculiarities and to find out how really companionable they are, and yet it is not so long that it rubs the bloom off their romance.

But if a young man is always on his good behavior, how is the girl really to find out his true disposition? For after marriage he is bound to drop his pose and be himself, so it seems to me that it would be far better if, during the engagement, both the girl and the man tried to show each other their faults, instead of always putting the best foot foremost and parading their virtues.

Undoubtedly many engagements would be broken off if the girl got a line on the real man she was marrying and found out in time that he was stingy, or grouchy, or tyrannical, or morbidly jealous.

Likewise, many a man would make a safe getaway if he discovered that the girl he sees dolled up always went slouchy and slovenly around home, and that, instead of being so soft-spoken and gentle that butter would melt in her mouth, she was peevish and fretful and nagging.

Therefore, my advice to you is to quit worrying about diamonds. Love is the real jewel that a woman craves. Put in your year of engagement trying to find out just what sort of a girl you are proposing to marry, and giving her a chance to size up what sort of husband material you are.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—The average man hasn't enough courage. That's what ails him.

Listen. Last week I was walking along a certain street when a small car passed me, the occupant of which looked at me twice, then drove out of sight. I walked on. In a few minutes some one accosted me i na kind voice. It was this some man. He had followed me without my knowing it, but all he said was, "Are going to work?" I was so surprised I just nodded my head and walked slowly on, thinking he would overtake me. However, he didn't. If he had only said, "Come on," and opened the car door. I would have jumped in, but he lost out and I lost out, because I was timid and he didn't have enough nerve. LUCY.

Answer:

I should say, Lucy, that your guardian angel was working overtime to save you, and that instead of spending any time regretting that you missed an adventure that you should be down on your knees thanking Heaven for your safety.

For respectable men do not pick up respectable girls who are strangers to them on the streets, and when any unknown man offers you a ride in his car you may safely conclude that he "bodes you no good," as the old-fashioned melodramas used to say.

In the early days of the automobile they called it 'the devil wagon." It still is when it is driven by men who prowl the streets and entice young girls to go on joy-rides with them.

More girls have hurtled down the road to destruction that way than any other, and so the next time an automobile sheik drives up to the pavement and asks which way you are going, or remarks that it is a pleasant day for a ride, call the police.

You are curiously unsophisticated for a business girl in this day, if you regret that a man did not use cave-man stuff and kidnap you and carry you to your doom.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am a minor, but through my father's consent am going to get married early next month. But this is the trouble: My father, who is 75 years old, is very bossy and tyrannical and hard to get along with, and he says that even after I am married I've got to obey him until I am 21. Will the law compel me to obey him after I am married? I am willing to let my father boss me, but I hate so much to think of his tyrannizing over the girl that I am thinking of cancelling the wedding day, as I do not wish her to suffer for me. A MINOR.

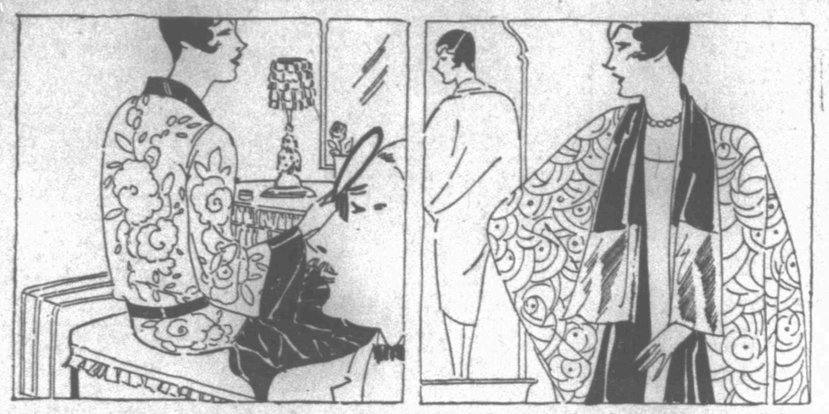

Answer:

For goodness sake, put off your wedding until you are man enough to be able to be independent of your father and protect your wife. Can't you see how idiotic it is to get married while you are still a child, still under authority, and can be treated like a child?

Marriage isn't for infants. It is for grown-up men. You seem to have the germ of manhood in you. Give it a chance to develop, and then you will be fit for some girl to marry. DOROTHY DIX.

MODISH MITZI Mitzi Packs a Full Suit Case By JAY V. JAY

"There won't be much room for suitcases in the car, Mitzi," says Dad, "so don't pack a whole lot of coats and things.". Mitzi agrees. "She'll just take the flowered georgette negligee with the taffeta flounces, that takes so little room. And for evening she will have to take a wrap of some kind.

This scarf will take up very little room, it's like those first made by Reboux. Though it looks as though it were a wrap, it is practically a shawl, the effect is entirely in the way it is worn. It packs very well, and can be shaken out in a minute with the wrinkles remaining.

For her bathing suit she must take a coat that belongs to it. It is of wool jersey and the quilted effect on the suit and the coat is made by stitching in contrasting thread. Dad won't mind her taking two coats. But how she is to pack her silk coat, and her flannel jacket?

Her flannel coat she'll wear. The only trimming is of stitching, on the collar, the cuffs and pockets. She has packed about four coats that she simply had to have. Dad will make an awful fuss about their being an extra bag—but he'll find room for it—even if he chucks out his golf bag. Dad's that way.

Cowboy Coolidge

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE has made the landing. He is Cowboy Coolidge until the close of the campaign next year. He has been adopted by the Sioux. His Indian name is "Big Chief Quietmouth." He has been photographed in all the habiliments of the cowboy of the long ago. He has a gifted young Scandinavian for his preacher every Sunday. He baits his hook with worms when he is fishing. He tosses a five dollar bill into the plate after religious service.

He is cultivating the farmers and their wives and babies. He talks their language. He has an insurgent senator for messenger boy. He knows what he is doing away out in the Black Hills country. While all this was going on Brookhart of Iowa remained silent until patience ceased to be a virtue, and then the wild man of Iowa politics tossed his hat into the ring and declared for a union of the peoples of the south and the west.

Cowboy Coolidge is having a grand time. After the great battle has been fought next year he may have abundant material for a book to carry the title "How I Won the West."

Colquitt In The Open

FORMER Governor Oscar B. Colquitt had declared the political season open in Texas. He has made formal announcement of his candidacy for the United States senate. He has made known his opposition to Governor Alfred E. Smith as presidential standard bearer "because of Smith's attitude toward the enforcement of the national prohibition law."

He has declared his undying opposition to all efforts to repeal the prohibition amendment and has committed himself to its enforcement. This is interesting. For years this former governor was the leader of the anti-prohibitionists of Texas. Now he is a dry dry.

He is chairman of the state tax survey. There may be two or three reports submitted by that survey. There will be a Colquitt report submitted. It will be as bristling as the report submitted by Colquitt away back in the years when Joseph B. Sayers was governor of Texas.

That report was spectacular. There are politicians who are betting that the coming report will be more than spectacular and may make an interesting platform for the senatorial aspirant in 1928.

An Open Beach Driveway

TEXAS is said to have the longest open beach driveway in the world. It is the San Patricio causeway which connects Corpus Christi with Padre Island. It was officially opened July 4 and 1500 automobiles loaded with celebrants made the parade.

At the island end of the causeway a four-mile road has been constructed which leads directly to Padre Island beach and gives ready acess not only to the world's longest beach drive but to one of the greatest hunting and fishing grounds in existance.

It is said the beach drive is in perfect condition for a distance of 40 miles down Padre Island to the shell bank and it is possible to make the entire drive of 140 miles from Port Aransas to Brownsville.

Is Texas moving onward? Why ask foolish questions.

Hearst Backs Reed Of Missouri

WILLIAM Randolph Hearst, speaking through his chain of newspapers, declares Senator James A. Reed of Missouri an ideal candidate for the Democrats to name as their standard bearer next year. William Randolph Hearst never did like Alfred E. Smith. In three pitched political battles under the skies of New York state, the publisher was routed by the governor.

Now the governor is said to be a presidential possibility, and the publisher is convinced in his own mind that the thing for the Democrats to do is to go to the middle west and name a Missourian for first place. Politics is a funny game. It is a game of hates as well as a game of economic policies.

Fifty-five and Happy

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE is 55 and happy. He was made a Boy Scout on his 55th birthday. He has been made an Indian, a cowboy and a Boy Scout in less than 30 days. He has been an office holder for 30 years and has never known defeat. Now just where will his waterloo come in?

On The Same Platform

SENATOR Brookhart of Iowa says that Wall street ,through the federal reserve banking system, is the great money trust of all times, and former President Obregon of Mexico is telling the Mexicans that Wall street and Rome are doing their best to throttle Mexico.

All the independence that Mexico has today, all the advanced standards of living to be found among the masses, all the development of Mexican interests and Mexican resources have been the result of the money poured into Mexico by Americans and other nationalists.

When Diaz began the uplift of his countrymen they had a wage scale almost as low as the coolies of China. He invited Americans and Europeans to advance the money for the development of the resources of his republic.

He was a benevolent dictator, a real builder and the only builder that Mexico has had in a hundred years—that is a native builder.

Half The Gold In World

JUST at the present time gold in the United States totals $4,600,000,000 or just about half of the world's supply of monetary metal. This is said to be a new high record and the federal reserve bulletin is authority for the statement that the people of the United States have almost twice as much gold as they need or could possibly put to use as currency reserve. Tell this to the corn belters. Tell it to the wheat belters. Tell it to the cotton belters. They do not appear to realize how rich "we" are.

New Law Demanded

PROHIBITION Administrator F. R. McReynolds, in charge of the territory of Southern California and Arizona, demands a law for the removal of all judges who fail to interpret and apply the law "according to the constitution and the intention of the courts." Isn't a judge "the court?" Isn't it possible to take an appeal from the lowest to the highest court? Now why should a court be gagged or bulldosed?

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By BURTON RASCOE.

NEW YORK, July 9, (EFS)—At large dinners of fraternities and other social organizations it is frequently the rule not to allow tips to be collected at the tables. In such cases the tips are arranged for in a lump sum, paid before the banquet to the head waiter. The head waiter allots a certain amount of this money to the captains, who in turn divide up with the waiters, who in turn divide with the bus-boys. The chef and cooks also get their percentage out of the lump sum.

Frequently, however, the chef is rewarded by the chairman of the committee on arrangements, with an extra bonus for a good meal after the banquet is over. And rich men who have large private dinner parties sometimes present the chef with checks of $500 and $1000.

* * *

A night club reporter for the Morning Telegraph wrote a paragraph in his column not long ago in which he carelessly phrased a sentence in such a way that the reader might gather that liquor was on sale in a certain night club. It was true that liquor was on sale there, but the reporter was obligated by the code of Broadway not to betray the fact, since he was allowed the privilege of entering the place, a privilege not willingly accorded to squealers.

The next night while making his rounds he dropped into the night club. The head waiter told him as he came in that someone wanted to se him in the back room. Suspecting nothing amiss, he went into the room designated. The door was closed abruptly behind him and locked when he came in.

Two flint-eyed and tight-lipped young men in caps were standing behind a table. Each pulled out a gun and laid it on the table. "Now," said one of them, "we want to talk to you about that paragraph you wrote about this club last night."

The reporter was scared stiff. He protested that he was on the square and not a squealer and that when he wrote the paragraph he did not think it sounded the way it apparently did sound.

At the end of a long conference in which the men kept menacingly fingering their gats, one of them said:

"Very well. Hereafter read your stuff over very carefully and don't make any more slips. There hasn't been a body found in the East river for some little time."

* * *

That last sentence, "There hasn't been a body found in the East river for some little time," is time-honored and customary warning of gunmen whenever they object to something someone has done. They are soft-spoken men, these gunmen, and they are not given to violent language. Like Ruth Snyder on trial, they don't like to hear the word "murder" and they never use it themselves.

The oil rush in Colombia is compelling railways and steamship lines to add more cars and boats to care for the rapidly increasing volume of freight.

The Whole Family Is Interested

My Son's Sweethearts

ILLUSTRATED AND COPYRIGHTED BY JOHNSON FEATURES INC. by IDA McGLONE GIBSON

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

Phillip Wyne Tracy IV has had a childish engagement with Natlee Jones. Becoming interested in Lyra Hilliard, an old friend of his mother's, he falls in love with her. Natlee, overhearing him making love to Lyra, breaks her engagement. The whole affair, however, sinks into nothingness because America enters the World war.

Phil is one of the first to enlist. Just before leaving for France, Phil meets Natlee again and they plan to be married. The immediate departure of the troops, however, prevents this. Phil's regiment is sent to the front soon after arriving in France. He is wounded, receiving the croix de guerre.

After the armistice Phil is awarded a scholarship in a French university, and while in Paris he comes face to face with his mother, who has come to France to hunt him. Major Aukland, who is devoted to Anne Tracy, accompanies her.

In talking things over, Mrs. Tracy learns that Phil intends to marry Pat, a rich French divorcee. She refuses to give her consent to the marriage.

Phil compromises with his mother. If she will refuse Major Aukland's proposal of marriage, he will give up Pat for two years. She agrees and Phil goes to tell Pat. She instinctively knows something is wrong and tells him they will never marry.

Here the story further unfolds—

* * *

OFF TO AMERICA

For the next few days Phillip's nerves, as well as his mother's, were rather jumpy. Phillip was all the time thinking that Pat would either telegraph or telephone. With a man's usual egotism, he could not think that she would let him go without at least one more goodbye.

Mrs. Tracy had the same feeling, and every time the telephone rang she rushed over to it. Never before had John Aukland left her without a lingering farewell.

However, at the end of the week she saw in one of the Paris papers that Major Aukland had gone to Turkey with the Near East expedition, and a friend told Phillip one evening that he had seen Pat leaving the station for Switzerland, consequently they both became calmer, if not happier.

Neither mother nor son referred in any way to the absence of Pat or John Aukland in their conversation, when they were perhaps more in each other's thoughts all the time than any one or anything else.

Phillip had to leave Paris for two or three days to go and get his discharge papers. During that time his mother finished up the shopping and so kept herself too busy to think much about anything.

All the time, however, she kept asking herself if again she had made a mistake, for Anne Tracy had come to see that her interference between Phil and Natlee had been a great error of judgment.

She felt better when on the Fourth of July they stood on the Rue de Rivoli and cheered the American troops as they marched up that historical street, escorted by the crack regiments of England, Belgium, Italy, Canada and Australia.

Phil lifted his mother high in the air and said, with more pride and enthusiasm than she had heard him express since she had met him abroad: "We're proud we're Americans, aren't we, young lady, and we're glad we're going home."

"Yes, Phil, I shall be so glad to get home that it seems to me now I shall never want to go away again. Oh, I have so many plans for both of us.'

"Don't talk of plans, Mother. They make me miserable. What can you plan for such a poor stick as I am?"

Anne Huntington Tracy looked at her boy. He was thin and she saw lines on his face that ought not to have been there until he was at least 30, and the tears came to her eyes. Would he ever get back his youthful spirits again?

It was not until the 14th of August that mother and son found themselves at Le Havre, embarking for America. They were both of them leaving many happy days and many very terrible days behind, but after all, that is only what makes up life.

Just as the boat edged out from the pier, Mrs. Tracy felt her arm clutched by her son. She raised her eyes to his wace. He was not looking at her. He was looking over the crowd on the dock. Following his gaze, she saw Pat's face turned up to them. Anne felt a little guilty, for Pat's eyes were very sad and the tears were streaming down her cheeks.

Phil took off his hat and bowed formally. His mother thought he seemed almost glad that the parting was just as it was. Neither mother nor son mentioned it to the other afterward. The episode was apparently closed.

Phillip yas a little ashamed, for since that afternoon on the Bois he had never tried to see Pat again. He had not even written to tell her when he was sailing. His mother was perfectly willing, now they were leaving France, not to mention Phil's French sweetheart's name to him.

He noticed, as he saw her on the pier, that there had been times when he had forgotten her.

Soon they both turned away from the land and faced across the sea toward America. Both were leaving the past two years behind them. Phillip characteristically was saying to himself that he had been jilted, anyway. There was nothing else for him to do but to take it as gracefully as possible. He did not realize that he was accepting it almost too gracefully.

Mother and son did not talk much to each other as they sat out on the deck in the sunshine, for to tell the truth each was more than a little curious to know exactly what the homeland would mean in the next year or two, and both were trying to adjust themselves to imagined conditions.

Early one morning, Phillip came to his mother's stateroom and said: "Would you like to say good morning to the Goddess of Liberty, Mother? She looks pretty good to me, even if she is a lying old dame, with her insinuation that America lights the world with her torch of liberty. In reality, the U. S. A. is not the 'land of the free' any more than it is the 'home of the brave'."

"Now, Phillip," said his mother, "dont be so cynical. You know the Goddess of Liberty out there in the harbor gives every American a thrill as he glimpses her after a long stay abroad."

"Well, I'll say this for her, she gave me a thrill.'

"Go up on deck, Son, and I'll be up as soon as possible."

In a short time she stood beside him. Their hands were clasped together and the huge statue seemed to be welcoming them home.

All at once Phil turned away from her, and the mother say his eyes grow misty.

"I'm afraid it will never seem the same to me without Rod. Not one of the other fellows will ever take his place."

"There's Natlee, Phil," Anne Tracy said softly.

"Im sure Natlee has forgotten me, Mother. I have not heard from her since your arrival in Paris. By this time I presume she has married Jerry Kenyon. Seems strange to think of Jerry making up to Natlee. He used to turn his nose at the thought of her father's dairy. The other day, however, I came across a great advertisement where he and Mr. Jones were exploiting condensed milk. He seems to have a change of heart. I am satisfied I'm going to be very lonesome over here. It almost seems to me this minute that I'm coming to an alien land. I have forgotten how Americans look and act. I'll probably be ridiculous in my own home town."

Phil turned impulsively and put his arms around his mother's shoulder. "Mum, dear, you, too, are fond of Paris. Let's fix things up here and go back."

"Perhaps we will, Phillip. To tell the truth, I feel very unsettled myself."

Phillip Tracy pulled his mother to him. "Come on, young lady," he said, using the pet name he generally employed when he wanted to be particularly coaxing. "Don't let's stay here if we don't like it, just because it's America. I expect you and I have the hardest fight of our lives before us. Do you realize that this silly old war has taken two years away from us and we've got to work like the devil to get them back?"

"You'll have a chance, Son, but when a woman reaches my age, two years out of her life are gone forever."

"I'm afraid that I'll never have a chance to make those beautiful dreams come true that I had before the war. It will never be those same dreams anyway; it's too late now to take up my father's business. I'll have to brush around and find something else. Perhaps we've both made a mistake after all, Mother dear. I should have stayed in Paris, where the people know better than they do here what the world has done to the young men now living. I'm coming home a stranger. What will I find here?"

"You will be all right, Son, if you only find yourself," said Anne Tracy, softly.

"Different" Chicken Dinner Easy to Prepare

By MRS. RUSSELL SCRIVENER
Route 3, Iowa Park
Second Prize.

Chicken in Cream
Mashed Carrots
Green Beans, Oklahoma Style
Flower Salad
Pocketbook Biscuits and Butter
Green Grape Jelly
Raw Peach Pie

Much of this dinner is prepared long before dinner time, either the day before or early in the day, while the witchen is cool, making it appropriate for hot weather. It is a comparatively inexpensive menu, in this season of chickens and fresh vegetables. The cream would be the most expensive item (if purchased at retail), but in both recipes in which cream is used I have given a more reasonably priced substitute.

This dinner is particularly attractive served as a plate dinner—that is a portion each of chicken, carrot and beans and a biscuit and jelly is served on a dinner plate; the salad, of course, on a separate plate.

Chicken in Cream

Select a large plump chicken or a young hen; to dress it for cooking this way; unjoint as for fried chicken and cut in two any pieces that are unusually large. Salt well, dredge thoroughly with flour, brown in hot fat or butter, a few pieces at a time, until golden brown. Pack a layer at a time in a deep kettle or pudding pan, sprinkle each layer with a little flour, more salt, if necessary, pepper, paprika and a very little finely chopped onion or clove of garlic and a small green pepper cut in strips. Barely cover with very rich milk or cream or evaporated milk diluted with about half as much water as milk. Cover tightly and cook very slowly for about three hours. A fireless cooker is splendid for this recipe—allow at least four hours for cooking.

Mashed Carrots

Four to six good sized carrots are scraped and boiled until very tender, in as little water as possible, allowing the water to boil away when done. Wash very fine, season well with salt, pepper and butter and a dash of ground cloves. Be sure to serve hot.

Green Beans, Oklahoma Style

Cook the beans in boiling salted water until tender, one and a half to two hours. Allow the water to evaporate until the beans are nearly dry. Add two tablespoons butter or three tablespoons bacon frynigs. Mix one tablespoon flour to a smooth paste with a little water, stir into the beans and cook over a slow flame for about five minutes, stirring the beans carefully so they will not be mashed. Serve hot.

Flower Salad

Place a large perfect lettuce leaf on each salad plate. Cut smooth red tomatoes in quarters, removing any green around the stem end. Place five of the tomato quarters on the lettuce to form the petals of the flower, with stem end of tomato toward the center of the plate. Over the centers of the "petals" place a circular mound of chopped cucumber, onion and green pepper, which vegetables have been marinated half hour in French dressing or diluted vinegar. Flatten this circle of green and in the center pile a heaping tablespoon of mayonnaise made as follows:

Mayonnaise

Into a mixing bowl put two or three teaspoons of prepared mustard, quarter teaspoon salt, a good dash of paprika and yolks of two or one whole egg. Beat well, then add salad oil one tablespoon at a time until the mixture thickens. Add two tablespoons vinegar or lemon juice, then more oil until about one cup is used and the dressing is stiff and smooth. All ingredients should be cool and about the same temperature. Keep mayonnaise in a cool place.

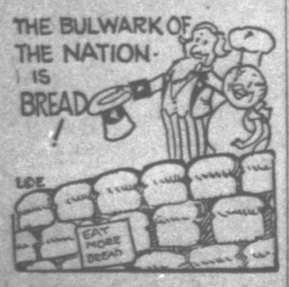

Pocketbook Biscuits

Roll biscuit dough thinner than usual, cut with a large center, spread with butter and fold in the middle (like Parkerhouse rolls). Brush outside with butter and bake as usual.

Raw Peach Pie

Make a rich, rather dry pastry, roll at least quarter-inch thick and with it line a large deep pie plate or glass baking dish. Prick and bake to a light golden brown. Cool. When ready to serve fill this shell with peaches which have been sliced, generously sprinkled with sugar and chilled. Sprinkle lightly with cinnamon. Serve with whipped or plain cream or use a soft custard made thus: In a double boiler heat one pint milk with one-yuarter cup sugar and with one-quarter cup sugar and slightly beaten yolks of three eggs; return to fire and cook, stirring all the time, until the mixture coats the spoon. Pour into a cold bowl, when cool add one-half teaspoon of vanilla and chill custard thoroughly.

Sunday Menu For Vegetable Dinner Economical and Tempting

A $1 special award goes to Mrs. A. E. Kelly, 1701 Polk street, for the following easily prepared, economical and palatable Sunday dinner menu.

Vegetable Sunday Dinner

Combination Salad — Stuffed Peppers
Sliced Cucumbers—Broiled Tomatoes
Hot Rolls
Peach Cobbler — Ice Tea

Combination Salad: Cut lettuce on individual salad plates; then place finely cut onions on lettuce then cut up green peppers and radishes and cover with mayonnaise before serving.

Broiled Tomatoes: Cut large tomatoes in half crosswise, sprinkle with cracker crumbs, dot with butter and salt and pepper. Broil 30 to 45 minutes.

Stuffed Peppers: One pound ground meat, one medium size onion cut fine; fry partly done. (This can be done on Saturday.) When ready to stuff peppers on Sunday use a left over gravy for seasoning meat, salt and pepper. This will stuff six or seven big peppers.

"Cool and Tempting Dinners" Goal Of Winners of Sunday Menu Contest

That summer heat makes the housewife think of summer foods is undeniably proved in the list of menus received by The ecord News this week in the Sunday Dinner Menu contest. Foods palatable on a seething summer day; foods that would look cool and appetizing to the most wearied husband; foods easily digestible and delicious to the taste—all were found by the dozens of recipes in the letters that poured in.

The prize winners this week seem both to be rapidly climbing to the head of the list in the "good cooks of Wichita Falls and community," as both have won awards before. Mrs. Holman Cook, 1414 Polk street, sent a menu that deserved a second award, and will receive the first prize of $5.00, and Mrs. Russell Scrivener, route 3, Iowa Park, is winner of the second prize.

One dollar awards go to Mrs. A. E. Kelley, 1701 Polk street and Mrs. Grover C. Johnson, box 876, Wichita Falls, for the excellence of recipes suggested. All seemed particularly fitted to this season of the year, and it would be a real unprejudiced menu editor who did not favor foods that "sounded cool."

Instead of interest waning in the contest, more and more housewives are entering their menus and writing appreciations of those printed each week. Scores of letters have been received thanking the "cook and the editor" for a delightful meal served by the recipes printed in the past.

The contest is open to any and all of The Record News housewife readers. The only standards are the usual requirements for the good Sunday dinner in summertime that include economy, timeliness, balance, originality and the discussion.

SOUR MILK AID TO HEALTH

Experts Advise Use In Any Form

"Wherever sour milk is used in liberal amounts as a human food, the people are of exceptional physical perfection," states Dr. E. V. McCollum of Johns Hopkins University. It is used in enormous quantities in Asia, Arabia, Balkan States, North Africa and the grazing sections of Abyssinia. In hot countries and among pastoral people living under primitive conditions, it is the custom to sour milk immediately.

"Speaking of the use of sour milk in foreign countries," says Dr. Hannah K. Lyons of the National Dairy Council, "I shall never forget my delight at the sour cream dish which I ordered for an experiment in one of the milk-chocolate lunch rooms in Germany. Strawberries and peaches were served in a large bowl of chilled sour cream sprinkled with a little sugar, and I found this as appetizing and cooling as the many other people in the lunch room who were making it their entire meal."

Sour milk is particularly good in the diet because of its action on the intestinal bacteria. It is also wise economy to use up every drop of milk purchased. It is therefore a good health practice to use as much of it as one can in cottage cheese or mixed with ordinary mayonnaise dressing or used in any of the following recipes:

Sour Cream Dressing.

1-2 pt. thick sour cream.
1-4 pt. mayonnaise dressing.
Juice of half a small onion.
1-2 tsp. lemon juice.
3-4 tsp. salt.
1-4 tsp. mustard.
1-8 tsp. paprika.
1-8 tsp. white pepper.

Fold all ingredients into the unbeaten sour cream.

Hot Days of Summer Demand Iced Drinks

Hot days demand cool drinks. There is nothing so refreshing as the tinkle of crushed ice against the sides of a thin glass. One just naturally feels refreshed after sipping a cool beverage, even the thought of it increases our vigor on a scorching hot day.

If drinks are made with fruit juices they are important for their food value because of the vitamines and minerals they contain, and when served with cake or cookies make a nourishing afternoon lunch for children or grownups.

The wise housewife will can extra fruit jucie during the canning season ready for use when she wants a cool drink. It is much better to can them in a concentrated form, it saves jars and when you are ready to use it, add water and other juices to make it go farther.

A little lemon juice just gives the proper zest to any drink. Tea infusion makes a good base for punches, and so does ginger ale.

A home should never be without oranges and lemons during hot weather. Coco, tea and coffee can be served iced and make delicious drinks. Coffee and cocoa when combined makes a drink of unusual flavor.

To be refreshing cold drinks should not be too sweet. They have more of a tendency to quench the thirst when just a little tart.

JELLY ROLL

3 eggs beaten separately.
1 cup sugar.
1 1-2 cups pastry flour.
2 level teaspoons baking powder.
1-2 cup warm water.
Flavoring.

Sift flour once, then measure, add baking powder and sift three times. Beat whites stiff, fold in sugar, fold in beaten yolks, then water, then flour lightly. Bake in long shallow pan in hot oven at 375 degrees F. When done spread quickly with jelly, and roll carefully in napkin.

FRIENDS WHO DROP IN

I like the friends who just drop in
At any time of day.
It shows a care-free soul within
A spirit free and gay.

I like to hear their frienly rap
Upon the outer door.
I like to hear their quick feet tap
Across my kitchen floor.

They bring a bit of pleasant news,
Or some amusing tale,
Or tell me I've no time to lose,
To reach the linen sale

They do not come with dutious air
To pay some social sum.
Friends who drop in are simple there
Because they want to come.

HARRISON TO BIG AIR FETE

Wichitan Flies to Dallas Friday Morn

made the trip in a little more than three hours.

Three seconds after the propellers of Hawks' ship ceased to spin, Charles W. Meyers in a Waco Whirlwind swooped down upon the city's new municipal airport. Others of the group of 14 official entries arrived at intervals during the next hour.

The field was crowded with a welcoming crowd, and it was with difficulty that police kept the paths clear from midfield, where the machines landed, to the roadway, where they were lined up for inspection and refueling. In addition to the thousands of spectators the fliers were officially greeted by members of the Dallas Flying club and by city officials.

Masked Girl Flier.

Added color was given the arrival of the distinguished fliers by a comely young woman, smartly dressed and wearing a black mask over her eyes. She alighted from an expensive limousine and was among the the first of the spectators to inspect the planes as they taxied up to the official timers stand for a check of their logs. By her questions she revealed an amazingly complete technical knowledge of aircraft. To all questions asked she replied: "I have nothing to say."

It was whispered around the field that she was the mysterious "Senora X." who announced sometime ago that she would enter a pilot in the Dallas-Hongkong flight, and accompany him.

Immediately after arrival the visitors were whisked away from the landing field to a local hotel where accommodations had been arranged, and where they were honor guests of the Dallas Flying club and the Dallas chamber of commerce at a banquet Friday night.

In the ships making the tour there are represented the most modern types of aircraft, ranging from single seaters planes to the giant tri-motored passenger carriers.

Many Monoplanes.

Monoplanes predominate though several of the entries are newer type bi-planes. Of the 14 ships, 11 are powered with Wright whirlwind motors, of the type used by Colonel Lindbergh. Colors of the machines vary almost as much as their sizes, ranging from dull gray sheen of the Ford-Stout transport all-metal monoplanes to the bright yellow of the Waco entries, two in number.

The fliers will take off from Love Field Saturday morning at 10 o'clock enroute back to Detroit, stopping at Oklahoma City at 11 a. m. From Oklahoma City they will go to Tulsa, arriving there at 3:30 p. m. where they will spend the night.

HUBERT HARRISON FLIES TO DALLAS FOR FETE

Flying to Dallas in one hour and 37 minutes, Hubert M. Harrison, general manager of the local chamber of commerce, made a double-purpose trip to Dallas by plane Friday afternoon, inspecting the 14 planes in the national air tour and conferring with postal authorities and officials of the National Air Transport company on air mail service for Wichita Falls. The trip was in all respects satisfactory, he reported on his return.

Mr. Harrison states that negotiations relative to having Wichita Falls placed on the air mail route between Dallas and Chicago are progressing in a highly gratifying manner, and that definite announcement on the arrangements can probably be made within a few days.

Success Indicated

Indications at present are that the final settlement will be consistent with all that residents of Wichita Falls could wish, and that the project will go through successfully, he said.

Concerning the air tour, Mr. Harrison expressed an enthusiastic appreciation of the display, stating that it was undeniably the greatest aggregation of commercial airplanes ever seen together in this part of the United States. He was particularly interested in the new Ford transport for passenger lines, equipped with chairs for seven passengers and the size of a large locomotive. Three Wright whirlwind motors propel the giant craft, which will play the most significant part in future travel, Mr. Harrison said.

Another plane attracting the interest of the immense crowd was the Ryan monoplane of exactly the type used by Col. Charles Lindbergh in his trans-Atlantic flight except for coloring. The plane on tour was all in gold, and was surrounded by admiring spectators, Mr. Harrison affirmed.

Newest Planes

All planes, were of the latest types in keeping with the purpose of the tour which is to demonstrate the most modern facilities for aerial service. The tour will proceed Saturday to Oklahoma City.

Mr. Harrison complimented his own pilot, Merrel Brock of the Westmoreland flying field, as being one of the finest pilots in the country. This trip was made in Mr. Brock's new "Swallow" ship between 5:30 and 7:15 o'clock.

Ice Cream Nation's Most Popular Dessert

If one should ask all the men, women, and children in the United States to name their favorite dessert the greatest per cent would, without a doubt, say ice cream, because the people in the United States eat more ice cream in proportion to the population than any other nation.

Ice cream originated in Italy about the year of 1700. From Italy it spread to France, then to England and from there to the U. S. It is said that Mrs. Dolly Madison, wife of President Madison, introduced it at a state dinner in the White House during her husband's administration in 1809.

If frozen foods are eaten slowly they are warmed sufficiently before they reach the stomach so that they are not harmful. But extremely hot foods are injurious to both the stomach and the teeth The sundden changes are likely to injure the enamel.

The food value of the different frozen desserts will depend, of course, upon the ingerdients used. The least valuable will be the water ices, which are fruit juices sweetened.

Ice cream is a thin cream, sugar and flavoring mixture which is frozen without thickening or whipping.

Mousse is fundamentally whipped cream sweetened, flavored, then frozen. Sometimes gelatine is added.

Parfait consists of whipped cream to which beaten egg whites have been added. The mixture is sweetened, flavored, then frozen. Fruit and nuts may be added if they are desired.

Frappe means half frozen. It is a mixture of sweetened fruit juices, diluted with water and frozen to the consistency of mush.

Sherbet is similar to a frappe except that either dissolved gelatine or beaten egg whites is added to the mixture, then it is frozen rather stiff. Different fruits are often added.

ORANGE PUNCH

4 oranges.
1 lemon.
2 cups water.
4 cups charged water.
2 cups sugar.

Grate yellow rind of oranges, add gratings to sugar and two cups of water. Stir until sugar is dissolved. Boil 5 minutes after it reaches boiling point. Remove from fire, and when cold, add lemon and orange juice. When ready to serve turn into punch bowl, add cracked ice and charged water.

Planes Drill to Music.

Airplanes drilled to the time of music at an exhibition of the Royal Air Force at Hendon, Aerodrome, near London, recently. The planes in a combined evolution dived, turned and executed other movements to the beats of a band on the ground below. The craft chosen for the musical drill were nine steel, single-seater fighting machines, driven by air-cooled engines, and capable of a speed of 150 miles an hour.

Dempsey Socks Mates Roughly

Ex-Champion Puts Kayo To Couple Heavies

BY FRANKLYN GRANT
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., July 8.—Jack Dempsey returned to the mug mangling wars this afternoon, after a 24-hour lay-off, and gave the non-paying customers plenty of thrills.

Three rather daring sparring partners, who were the first to work with the ex-champion, slapped him with plenty of vim and vigor, while Dempsey contented himself mainly with trying to prance out of the way of their stabbing lefts and hooking rights.

One of them, Tille (Kid) Herman, who was Dempsey's mate last year, and who came back to the camp for his first time this afternoon, enthused the customers quite a bit by belting Jack with a vast variety of punches, all of which carried plenty of steam.

And then along came Italian Jack Herman, a heavyweight, who also was a newcomer. By the time Italian Jack arrived Manassa Jack was rather annoyed by the Les Majeste which had been committed by the first trio—Saxon, Shade and Tillie, and, furthermore, he was just about warmed up to his job.

Hard On Herman

So he chased in after Italian Jack and about two minutes later they had to lift Italian Jack out of the ring and assist him to a restoration spot.

Pietro Corri, the Austrian heavyweight, who had been treated rather gently by Dempsey in other workouts, and who took to telling the boys that he was quite good, and saying it in such a way as to reflect upon the socking qualities of the ex-champion, then romped into the ring. About one minute later he was lifted out of it and Marty Burke finished out the round, breathing deep sighs of relief when it was over.

They tossed a 230-pound gent from Utica named Leon Labriola at Dempsey and Leon figured that his job was to try to assassinate Dempsey at the earliest moment. He swung ponderous punches with everything he had in those punches. Dempsey ducked or sidestepped the vast bulk of them and countered heavily with right and left hand smashes to the body.

Leon's Tummy Aches

"Oh—oh," sighed Leon, when the bell ended his first meeting with the punching man from Utah. The reason Leon would say no more was because he simply could not.

Allentown Joe Gans finished up the day with a fast workout, during which Gans was very careful to keep as far out of range of Dempsey's left hook as was humanly possible.

Jack Delaney, who once nursed a notion that he wanted to mingle with Dempsey, was one of the onlookers. After it was all over Delaney refused to make any comment; saying:

"I want to see him work tomorrow before I give my opinion."

BURRO IS BARRED

MEXICO CITY.—City officials concerned for the dignity of their newly paved streets have issued an edict which will do much to remove the picturesque quality of this town. In future the burro, patient beast of burden and ubiquitous carryall, which has been a feature of Mexican life everywhere since there was a Mexico, will not be permitted to stroll casually along the spacious boulevards in the center of the town. These are reserved for automobile traffic only, according to the order, and it's back to the sticks for the burro.

NO CLUES TO ASSASSIN YET

Slayer of Alanreed Family Still at Large

Special to The Record News.

CLARENDON, July 9.—Sheriff W. A. Pearce stated today that no more clues had been found in connection with the killing of the Weatherby family near Alanreed which was discovered by a neighbor last Monday. One negro that had been brought to the Donley county jail in Clarendon to question, gave no information that was worthwhile.

Pearce was called to Hedley yesterday to quiet what was thought to be an attempt to run all the negroes out of the community. The affair was stopped without any consequences. Similar reports of demonstrations of the same nature have been reported from Alanreed and McLean but no disturbances have been caused yet.

Several clues are being probed from which it is hoped to find something definite in a few days that will throw light on the Panhandle's worst crime.

Zulus Like Western Films.

When it comes to moving pictures the Zulu likes the Wild Western variety, and the wilder the better. Next in line of favor is the American comedy. Educational films are tolerated, but society dramas are zero in his estimation, according to Arthur L. Adams, of the American Board Mission at Rhodesia, South Africa, where picture shows are given out of doors to entertain the thousands of natives who work in the diamond mines.

ARE ELOPEMENTS WISE?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

There Should Be No Hurry About Marriage

By Beatrice Fairfax.
An Authority on the Problems of Love and Marriage.

ROMANCE inheres in the thought of an elopement, in the heart of many a girl. The unconventional, secret, runaway match, with its impulsiveness and element of surprise, may seem to spell romance as compared with a conventional, formal wedding.

The lure of the elopement is dimly connected in our minds with stories the world loves to tell in ballads, poems and opera, of the young Lochinvar, Othello, Romeo and Juliet, and countless other tales of pathetic, undaunted love.

In the days when every marriage was a marriage of convenience and arranged by parents, regardless of the wishes of the young people concerned, secret elopements were an extremely hazardous and pathetic, but inevitable, protest against parental tyranny. But in this free, modern age, when young people choose their own life partners, is there any need of eloping?

There are seldom parental objections nowadays to a marriage of love and suitability. When there is opposition to a marriage today, the chances are there is good reason for objecting. So is it not wise to pause long and consider well whether these objections are well founded? Does it pay to elope?

Suitability is fully as essential to married happiness as love. The husband who doesn't care for the same sort of things that interest you, whom you cannot proudly introduce to all your friends, knowing they will find him a comfortable and congenial companion, the husband who cannot support you, is not going to make you happy long, no matter how fascinating he may seem at the moment. It takes time and careful thought to determine this question of suitability. That is why so few elopements lead to happy marriage. They are almost always an impulsive, ill-considered yielding to emotion by two persons determined to snatch self-indulgent pleasure at all costs, regardless of the welfare of others.

The elopements, frequently recorded by the newspapers, of men and women already married, deserting husbands and children, is an extreme example of the selfish cruelty of many elopements.

"Love is all that matters" is the excuse given. But such persons do not guess even faintly what love is, for love is unselfish. When the novelty of the new partnership wears off, the new love, so called, proves even more faulty and unsatisfying than the old.

Every elopement is, in its very nature, a running away, hence carries the elements of cowardice that dare not remain and face the music, and of disorder and haste.

There should be no hurry about marriage. It is the one event that needs careful thought because of its far-reaching, all-powerful effects on the present and future. Take time to think things over. Study the man who interests you. Study yourself.

Do not let yourself be rushed or coaxed into a runaway marriage. For repenting at leisure is likely to be an embittering if not tragic ordeal.

The man who truly loves you is proud of you and will glory in acknowledging you as his wife before the world. He does not feel the need of secrecy in hiding the most glorious event of his life—his marriage to you.

If you are tempted to elope, take two years to think it over. Then, at least, your elopement will have a fighting chance of leading to successful, permanently happy marriage, because it will not be a reckless impulse.

Some girls feel that an elopement is preferable to the hard work and expense connected with a large wedding. But there is, fortunately, a happy medium between these two extremes—the extravagantly elaborate wedding and the furtive, runaway match. Let your wedding be as simple as you wish—possibly just a little group consisting of your parents and his, and a loved friend or two, in the quiet and mellow light of your church. But let it stand for a frank, proud facing of facts, rather than a runaway elopement, with its sinister suggestion of need of concealment, haste and disorder.

In this way, beauty and affection, the good wishes of friends and the proud affection of your parents will bless your wedding and suitably usher in the new life that begins for you with your marriage to the One Man.

A CANOE FOR TWO

One Hundred Years Ago and Today

Drawn by Dorothy Flack

© 1927, by Int'l Features Service, Inc. Great Britain rights reserved.

THERE'S always been something essentially romantic about a canoe. Perhaps it's the fact that it was just made for two. Or it may be because a canoe glides so swiftly and silently over the waters in the still light of the moon that we almost think we could reach the moon if we kept right on going in this pleasant way.

The Indian maiden and her lover—what dreams did they dream, what hopes did they cherish as they drifted about the quiet water? If you would really like to know, you have only to ask the next lovers you see drifting in a canoe any fine Summer evening.

For they are dreaming dreams, too, and cherishing hopes. And their dreams and hopes are probably very much the same as those of the Indian brave and his sweetheart.

Your Own Attitude Gives Your Job Its Dignity

By Lucy Lowell

ANY kind of a job can be made the most dignified thing in the world. It's all in the attitude of the worker.

There's a college in a suburban town, and some of the students work their way by doing odd jobs for the townsfolk.

LUCY LOWELL

They trim hedges and mow lawns and mend screen doors and keep gardens going for the commuters.

And one young fellow had a regular job doing these for a family. He has done his work well enough, but with no particular interest. It has been as if he wished everybody to know he was much above such menial tasks and feels rather ridiculous at them.

Another student substituted for him one day. And from the way he went at it he plainly did not consider himself ridiculous at all in overalls wielding a sickle and a rake.

It happened to be a dismal day, one of those raw days of late Spring when a bit of fire in the furnace improves the spirits of everybody.

And the housewife glanced at the boy out on the lawn and wondered if she dared ask him to build a fire. It was a thing she never would have suggested to the regular man.

She did ask him, finally, in a timid way. And he smiled and said he would be delighted.

"I'm here to serve you in any way I can," he told her. Perfectly acquiescent he was, and yet there was about him so much dignity that every one felt building a fire in the furnace might be made a very special and important operation.

Every task he performed was done just that way. And, of course, the housewife was so impressed that she wished him to take the job as a permanent thing.

But he blushed and stammered a little when he explained that he worked only a day now and then to help out his friends.

She discovered later that the boy who had built her furnace fire was the son of a wealthy man and reasonably might be expected to scorn all menial toil.

But no toil is menial; it is the worker's attitude toward it that makes it seem so.

Nervous Instability Cause of St. Vitus' Dance

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.,
Former President of the American Medical Association.

I HOPE you have never been so unfortunate as to have had a case of St. Vitus' dance in your own household. Not that it is such an alarming disease, for practically all cases recover, but because it is very distressing while it lasts.

CHARLES A.L. REED, M.D.

St. Vitus' dance is a nervous ailment. It chiefly affects children. It is unhappily all too common.

Chronic "fidgets" in a child are often due to chorea, which is the scientific name of St. Vitus' dance. It may be slight and may be severe. Skinner, a recent English writer, gives a good description of the typical case as follows:

"The slightly built, bright-eyed little girl of seven or eight comes into the room with first one shoulder forward and then the other. She sits down suddenly, only to spring up again immediately and arrange her skirt. She then reseats herself and crosses her hands in her lap. This is hardly completed when her hands are jerked off her knees. She looks at you and then out the window. A smile appears suddenly and disappears as suddenly. She may utter a kind of respiratory cry."

That is early chorea, a mere danger signal of the approaching storm. There is now little doubt that chorea is connected with rheumatism, this authority assures us. It is quite possible, however, that it may result not only from rheumatism, but from other infections as well. Its frequency varies with the season. Statistics show that it is greatest in February and March and in June and July. Half the cases occur between ten and sixteen years of age, the time when the central nervous system, particularly the cerebrum, or large brain, is going through its most rapid phase of development.

Skinner found that out of 130 cases rheumatism accounted for 30 per cent, non-rheumatic disease for 27 per cent, and the illness appeared without previous disease in 45 per cent. Some of the latter undoubtedly develop rheumatism later. The "nervous temperament" with over-work at school probably accounted for the majority of this 45 per cent and were prominent factors in the other cases. For this reason, a child who suffers from St. Vitus' Dance should be very carefully looked after, as it may have in its body the seeds of rheumatic heart disease and permanent disablement, or a permanently broken down nervous system.

The trouble originates in the brain. It often is probably due to its invasion, not by the microbes of disease themselves, but by the working on a nervous system lowered in tone by school work. Those, by their action on certain centres in the tired brain, produce nervous disturbance. Like most poisons these act only on susceptible subjects. What this susceptibility may be, except when induced by overwork of the brain, it is difficult to say. Perhaps a child who comes from a family with a hereditary nervous instability is more likely to respond to rheumatic infection with St. Vitus' Dance than oncoming of sound nervous stock. Or it may be those children with a naturally bright and active intellect, whose nervous systems are more highly strung and sensitive, who literally "eat up" their work at school, will show chorea when attacked by rheumatism where others, less developed mentally, show heart disease or joint troubles.

The movements are in no way different from those of the normal action of the muscles, and are very similar to the involuntary movements of an infant at birth. This suggests that they are "release" movements; i.e. due to the failure of inhibition in the higher centres which control primitive muscular movements.

Our Rhyming OPTIMIST

By Alice Michaelis

THERE are no barriers too high for man, there are no limits set too far away, if only he be member of that clan which ever turns to fear a visage gay. For, ages back, one man down unknown seas went venturing to regions strange and dim, went sailing out to meet the mysteries that lurk in wait beyond Earth's utmost rim. And yesterday another man soared high with shining plane into the realm of air, the first to brave the trackless wastes of sky, but one of time's long list who greatly dare. Men change, and times, but still the dauntless heart can by no barrier be turned aside, for valor to her sons will still impart a changeless will that conquers wind and tide.

When Manners Are Correct

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

A Bridal Shower.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

My sister is getting married, and I am planning on giving her a shower.

1—Is it proper for an unmarried sister to give the shower?

2—Should it be held in her own home?

3—Should girl friends be invited only, or older women also?

A CONSTANT READER.

IT always seems to me to be a bit too obviously a begging party when such a close relative as a sister gives the shower. But still, there is no rule against it. There are, as a matter of fact, no rules for giving showers—they depend upon one's own choice and one's own taste.

2—I suppose that it would have to be, if the unmarried sister and the bride live at home. Usually, showers, if they are given at all, are given by friends of the bride, and are just teas in the home of the friend, and to this tea the bride's friends bring gifts appropriate to the kind of shower.

3—This, too, is just a question of choice—and congeniality.

No Cause for Offense.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

My brother's father-in-law died. My wife and I attended the wake, but did not go to the funeral or send flowers. Ten days later my sister-in-law mailed the usual cards of appreciation to friends who had sent flowers and to friends who had attended the funeral. Should she have sent cards to me and my wife?

Should I remind her of her omission? My wife feels that we have been purposely slighted by my sister-in-law.

A READER.

THERE was no "omission," as far as I can see from your letter. Why should you and your wife be sent a card of appreciation when you did not send flowers? There was no reason in the world why your sister-in-law should send you and your wife a card of thanks. Do not accuse your sister-in-law of any social lapse. I cannot for the life of me see what justification your wife has for thinking that you and she were "slighted" by your sister in-law.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

Folly's Daughter

A Thrilling New Mystery of New York Night Life

By Ann Lisle

The Shannon Opening.

ON the evening the Shannon Hotel opened a number of things happened which had a bearing on Jill Hathaway's life. She was not among those present at the opening. But she was one of the two who were affected by the ripples of events too remote to seem likely to touch them.

ANN LISLE

Folly Duane was at the opening. She sat at a table on the covered roof, and she looked like the "million dollars" Sam Kerby proudly called her. She was wearing a printed georgette in black, with bunches of wee red roses. And she had a hat on that was a mass of rose petals sewed by the nimble fingers of Jill Hathaway.

"My ward made it," she told Sam proudly. "I'm beginning to think that if I don't get ahead much faster than I have in the past few years I'll have to let the child take a position this Fall. I've always had an ambition to look out for her—right."

"You chivalrous little darling," Sam said with heavy approval. "Why are you so good to the kid?"

"I like being good to people. Her mother belonged to a wonderful family. She went through the mire and came out with her skirts so draggled she couldn't drag herself on any longer. Her family cast her off. She has nobody to turn to but me. Nobody! I—had to stand by. I've brought up the child as if—as if she were my own."

Sam howled with delighted laughter: "You baby! Imagine you having a girl big enough to learn dressmaking. Folly, I could not stand it if I thought you'd ever belonged to a man enough—enough to have a child by him."

Folly cast her eyes down demurely and sighed. "Do you—like me enough to be that jealous, Sam?"

"You witch, I'm mad about you! Want I should give the kid a part in the show?"

"No Sam. I don't want her getting wise and sophisticated the way stage kids have to. I—want to look out for her. It's my biggest joy to keep her from—the sort of thing that happens to me—falling in love with a big man who—wouldn't marry me even if he didn't have a wife."

Sam laughed. The passion in her voice, the suggestion in her words thrilled him. He was a big, rugged man whose inherent weakness his look of physical power entirely hid. And he liked to feel that he was a Samson—morally as well as physically. Folly's flattery, conscious and unconscious, tightened her hold on him.

"Rehearsals start in a week," he said. "I'm going to see that you get paid from the first day. And we said a hundred a week, didn't we?"

Folly looked him full in the eyes. "We said fifty. And it was to be forty until I paid you back the hundred I borrowed to pay Jill's debt of honor and to get us both a few cool Summer clothes."

"You honest little thing. Think I'm going to have a square-shooter like my little Folly working her fingers to the bone for a kid she adopted out of the goodness of her cute little heart. Not Sam Kerby! You don't know me yet. I'm shrewd but not hard."

"You're as tender as a woman in spite of your strength," Folly murmured. "And I can't bear to—take money from you. I—love you too much."

"I married the wrong man. And still more—the wrong 'un twisted me around his finger and made me suffer more than I thought I knew how to suffer...I meant to make men pay. I meant to be as clever and hard as they come. And then—I met you!"

It was good theatre. But it was honest passion. And Sam, trained in theatre, felt the real and didn't bother about the sham which was his job and not his interest when he left his desk. Folly went home with two hundred dollars and the joyful assurance that her future was safe.

At a near-by table, Bonnie Clair sat watching with narrow eyes and wondering why the little blonde with the big Kerby made her feel as if there was something she ought to remember, something that had a lot to do with Roy Scarlett, who had brought her to dinner at the Shannon.

And off in a corner, another woman who made her living by supplying bits of gossip for a weekly that lived by destroying reputations, wondered if Mrs. Kerby and Mrs. Roy Scarlett would pay well for having her leave out of her "Juicy Jottings" column the fact that their respective husbands had been brazen enough to bring other women to the opening.

And Vivian Scarlett, speeding terrified to answer a telegram that told of the release of a white-haired old woman who had been put in an insane asylum fifteen years before when a jury brought in a verdict of "Not Guilty," didn't dream how much of her future hung on the decision of a muck-raking writer she had never met. Nor did Jill Hathaway dream the part chance was playing in her life.

The night the Shannon Hotel opened seemed to Jill a drab and cruel one for her, too, a red-letter evening. For she spent the hours staring unbelievingly at a sheet of paper which enclosed a fifty dollar bill and this curt message:

"This is yours. Kindly take me at my word and keep it. And if you ever need work, don't forget that Mrs. Moore of the Shannon is instructed to look out for you.

CATS TRIUMPH OVER LEADERS

Wachtel Bests Kiefer By 7 to 2 Score

FORT WORTH, July 8. — He used to be Harlem Joe Kiefer to the Cats, but Friday he was just a ball player named Joe and the Atzmen hit him briskly to win their fifth straight victory. The score was 7 to 2. Incidentally, it the third time this season Fort Worth has downed the league-leading Spudders, who won nine in a row before the spell was broken.

Once it was broken, Fort Worth won three out of four from Wichita Falls.

Paul Wachtel did the hurling for Fort Worth and did it right, keeping the ball where he wanted it all afternoon. When Paul has his control, all he needs is a couple of runs or so and suitable defense and he had all of that and more Friday.

Cats Get Jump

Fort Worth took the lead in the first inning, scoring a run and then coming back for two more in the second. Moore beat out an infield hit to start the Cat half of the first and continued to second when Benton threw wildly. McAuley singled to center and went to second while Moore was scoring. Hurt flied out to center, Sweeney popped up to second and Holland grounded out to short. Smith opened the Fort Worth half of the second inning with a home-run to right. Bonewitz struck out and Lindimore tripled to center. Wachtel flied out to left and Lindimore scored after the catch. Moore was thrown out by Swenson when he tried to beat out a bunt.

Tobin Hits Homer

Wichita Falls scored one of its runs in the fifth inning when Tobin led off with a home run into the right field stand.

The Cats got to Kiefer in the seventh for four runs on as many hits and an error. Wachtel struck out. Moore singled to center. McAuley flied to center. Moore stole second. Hurt drew a base on balls. Sweeney singled past third and Moore scored. Sweeney stole second. Holland grounded to third and Swenson threw wildly to first base, Hurt and Sweeney scoring. Smith hit a two-bagger to left and Holland scored. Bonowitz beat out an infield hit, but Lindimore flied out to right field.

Lamb Gets Gate

The Spudders scored their other run in the ninth. Tobin grounded to short but was safe on Sweeney's error at first. Lapan batted for Kiefer and singled to right. Tobin went to third. LaFayette hit into a double play, Tobin scoring. Turgeon walked and Fitzgerald flied out to right.

The game was featured by bickering of the league leaders. Lamb was ejected from the park by police in the fourth inning when he protested Umpire Grady's reversal of a decision at first base. Gaddy called Lamb safe and then called him out.

PIRATES CRIPPLED

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 8.(AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates who had the National league leadership for 45 days despite injuries to several players, suffered two more casualties as they dropped the leadership to the Cubs here Thursday.

Hal Rhyne, shortstop, injured his leg as he slid into second, while Johnny Morrison, of the pitching staff, is temporarily out of the lineup with a bruised hand, suffered in a fall at his home.

Kremer, Cuyler, Wright, Traynor, Harris and Aldridge have been among the casualties of the present season, while Earl Smith, catcher, is still under suspension for a recent tiff with Manager Bancroft of the Boston Braves.

MACKS MAUL SAD SAM.

ST. LOUIS, July 8. (AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics pounded Sam Jones for 12 hits in seven innings today and won the first game of the series from the St. Louis Browns, 7 to 5. Nevers held the vistors hitless in the last two frames. Lefty Grove allowed the Browns only eight hits and got seven strikeouts, bringing his season total to 105. Simmons starred at bat with a triple and a home run. Cobb scored two men with a double in the seventh score:

Yankees Split Double Bill With Bengals

DETROIT, July 8.(AP)—The Yankees opened their second invasion of the west today, splitting a double program with the Tigers, winning out in the second contest by 10 to 8 after losing the initial struggle by 11 to 8. Ruth connected for his twenty-seventh wallop with two on base during a five-run rally in the second inning of the final. Besides his homer, the Babe got a single.

Ruth went hitless in the opener while Gehrig banged a triple and two singles and another single in the nightcap. Stoner came out victor over four opposing hurlers in the Detroit victory. About 25,000 were in attendance.

SENS 7-4, INDIANS 4-3.

CLEVELAND, July 8. (AP)—Washington broke its long losing streak here today by taking both ends of a doubleheader from Cleveland, 7 to 4, and 4 to 3. Speaker's hitting was a factor in each defeat of his former team.

Cleveland outbatted Washington in the first game but poor base running and coaching cheated the Indians out of three runs while the errors gave the Senators three.

Longhorns Lose Slugfest By 16-14 Score

League Standings.

The Continental Oilers upset the dope bucket at Katy park Friday afternoon and slammed three Panhandle pitchers about the lot for a ragged 16 to 14 win. It was wild and loosely played game with numerous errors mixed in with some hard and long hits and spots of brilliant baseball.

Gabe Harris weathered the game for five innings and then gave up the job to Dickey who allowed two hits and one run in two innings and fanned four men. All three of the men retired in the seventh inning were by strikeouts.

Carrington and Harris led the the hitters with three singles in four times at bat. Taylor and Boone got two out of three for the Conocos. Rawles and Connally hit two out of three for the Longhorns while Graves hit two for two and scored four runs by virtue of a pair of walks along with his hits.

Rawls Flashes.

Rawls pulled a true thriller in the fourth inning when he scored from second base on a combination wild pitch and stolen base. Rawls took third on the wild pitch and running up about half way to the plate he came to a standstill. Doke thinking to run him back to third, allowed Rawls to make a sudden dash and beat him to the plate.

McDuffy started off wild and two walks, an error and a hit batsman forced in one run. Hull's double scored two men, and Taylor's long triple scored another pair. An error, a stolen base and a single by Harris scored the remaining two i nthe first.

An error, a walk to Maddox, singles by Rawls and Melear and an infield out followed by singles by Hinds and Graves and a long two base drive by Connally scored six for the Panhandle.

Neither side scored in the second inning, but a new outburst gave the Conocos five in the third. A walk, a double by Doke, another walk, a triple by Whatley, an infield out scored the five.

Roberts Starrs.

A walk, a single by McMahon and a jungle heave by Carrington that allowed McMahan to circle the bases gave the Panhandle two more in the third.

Three great catches by Roberts at third base held the Conocos down in the fourth, but the Longhorns broke out with four runs to tie the score. A walk, hit batsman, a wild pitch, two stolen bases and an infield out put over the first two. A triple by Graves, a single by Connally, a stolen base and two errors gave them the other pair.

Singles by Harris and Boone coupled with an error by Melear gave the Conocos one in the fifth. A triple by Maddox and a single by Rawles again tied the score in the fifth.

A walk, a single by Harris, a wild pitch and a single Boone gave the Conocos two more in the sixth. A walk, a passed ball and a single by Randolph gave the Panhandlers their sixth innings score.

A single by Carrington, an error and fielder's choice followed by a single by Taylor gave the Conocos their last score in the seventh.

ROOT ALLOWS BUCS ONE HIT

Cubs Touch Meadows For 1 to 0 Victory

PITTSBURGH, July 8. (AP)—Charley Root allowed Pittsburgh one hit today and Chicago defeated the Pirates, 1 to 0. The victory, the ninth in a row for the Cubs, gave them a firmer hold on first place—one full game ahead of the Pirates.

The only run of the battle was scored on an error in the second inning, when after Grimm doubled and two were out, the Cub first baseman tallied on Traynor's wild throw to first in an effort to get Beck, who had grounded to the Pirate captain at shortstop.

Root scored his fifteenth victory of the season and incidentally, was the first big league moundsman to turn in a one-hit game so far this year. It was Gooch who spoiled Root's chance for a no-hit game. The Pirate catcher singled to left in the eighth. Only three batters faced Root in each of the first six innings.

The bespectacled Meadows hurled for the Pirates. He was nicked for eight scattered hits and had the Cubs well in hand in the pinches. The score:

PHILADELPHIA, July 8. (AP)—Cincinnati made it two straight over the Phillies today by a score of 8 to 5 in 11 innings. Hughey Critz broke a 5-5 deadlock in the 11th by singling two runs across with the bags filled and two out. Hargrave followed with an infield tap that tallied the third counter. The Phillies tied the score and drove Rixey out of the box in the eighth and would have won but for poor base running. The score:

BUFFS BEAT WACO

HOUSTON, July 8. (AP)—Exhibiting more fight and determination than they had shown in any other encounter of the season, the Buffs Friday whipped the Waco Cubs, 5 to 4, and made their threat for second place in the league standing a real menace, as far as Derrill Pratt's hustling tossers are concerned. Manager Joe Mathes' men won the game in the eighth round with a sensational rally that netted three runs and the game. Johnny Kane, Wally Roettger, Fred Frankhouse and Ray Powell were the three who came through for the Bisons in the eighth. The score:

Lewis Says He'll Show Stecher Up

Special to The Record News.

SAN ANGELO, July 8.—Ed "Strangler" Lewis, who showed West Texas wrestling fans that he was better by straight falls than "Scotty" McDougal, champion of the British Isles, in a match here last week, said he was coming back to West Texas, look over the oil game and probably settle down in San Angelo and build a gymnasium here.

Before he returns, though, or even thinks of settling down, he intends to prove his claims to the heavyweight championship of the world.

"I am going to Wisconsin and train for six weeks. Then I should be in the greatest condition of my life and intend to show Joe Malchovitche and Joe Stecher and the public who is the best man. Then I'm going to quit the game."

The oil game is more thrilling to Lewis than the wrestling mat, according to his own statements. That's the reason he wants to come back here and get in on the bottom of the oil boom in West Texas. He has had production in Kansas a number of years and was able to make money as Tulsa boomed into a city.

Spudders Back Home To Finish With Cats

Fussell or Estell probably will do the pitching for the Spudders Saturday afternoon in the first home game of three weeks.

The Fort Worth Panthers resume hostilities with the Wichita Falls wallopers this afternoon in Spudder park at 4 o'clock. Jimmy Walkup looms as Jake Atz' probable mound selection.

The Spudders returned home Friday night from a very successful tour of the league, winning 11 games and losing seven while on the road. That's a .611 average.

That 7-2 pasting handed the Williams outfit Friday in Fort Worth served only to injure the pride of the haughty Spudders. The fast-plunging Waco Cubs in second place were unable to take advantage of the Wichita Falls loss. Waco marked time, losing to the Houston Buffs, 5-4. Wichita Falls retains its five-game margin over the Cubs.

San Antonio beat Beaumont, 7 to 3.

Turkey Gross already is finding the managerial toga a warm proposition. Dallas dropped another yesterday, losing to Shreveport, 4-3.

The acquisition of Pug Griffin, former Dallas outfielder, from Des Moines was announced by President Gardner.

Griffin always has been well above the .399 hitting type. He is a right hander.

BAN JOHNSON QUITS OFFICE

American League Prexy Gives Up Fight

Universal Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, July 8.—Byron Bancroft Johnson, co-founder of the American baseball league, president since its establishment in 1901, and stormy petrel of big time baseball, literally fought his way out of the game when he resigned his presidency today after one of the stormiest baseball meetings in the history of the sport.

Although Johnson came here from Chicago after the sudden calling of the meeting looking very bad physically, he refused to attend the conference. Johnson barricaded his door and refused entrance to Clark Griffith of Washington, Col. Jacob Ruppert of New York, and Robert Quinn of Boston, when the three club owners were named as a committee to call on the president.

Schwartz Serves as Wedge

Vice President Schwartz was at last chosen as a peace messenger. Johnson admitted Schwartz to his room and a little later Schawartz returned to the meeting attended by most of the league magnates and brought Col. Ruppert back to Johnson's room.

It was not until then that the old warrior surrendered and tendered his resignation. The president issued a formal statement which read:

"To the members of the American league:

"After 34 years of service as your president, secretary treasurer (offices he held with the old Western league included) I tender my resignation, such resignation to take effect on November 1 or earlier should I so decide. My compensation shall end immediately on my retirement."

The league officials upon receipt of Johnson's resignation isseud a statement which said:

"The American league owners with great regret receive the resignation after 34 years of distinguished service of Ban S. Johnson. We regret that our acceptance has been made necessary by the burden of responsibility placed upon him, incidental to and connected with the offices. In accepting his resignation the American league extends all of its good will and good wishes to Mr. Johnson."

The statement was signed by all of the club owners of the American league.

Successor Unchosen

With his colors flying proudly till the last, Johnson, himself, requested that he receive no salary until after November 1, although he has a contract of $40,000 a year running till 1935. The league members, out of deference for their old chief, moved to choose a successor and it was announced that none will be selected until after Johnson formally leaves office.

Johnson intimated that he might resign the office before November 1.

The resignation of Johnson sounds taps over the career of one of the outstanding and perhaps the most colorful of all the officials the national pastime has known.

The first of Johnson's baseball duels resulted from the break with Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the White Sox, and one of baseball's most famous pioneers. Johnson and Comiskey were regarded as the two principal founders of the American league.

The Johnson-Comiskey split grew out of the White Sox scandal in 1919 which necessitated the appointment of Judge Landis as high commissioner of baseball. Comiskey sided with Landis, the second of Johnson's arch-baseball enemies.

It was the Johnson-Landis feud, however, which proved the American league's president baseball death. Johnson, who had dominated baseball before Landis' appointment, found his authority dwindling with the advent of the so-called czar.

Plugged Cobb

Johnson took issue with Landis' methods in dealing with dishonesty in the game and frequent passages at arms resulted. Matters came to a head with the unearthing of the two major baseball scandals of last winter, in which Johnson, as usual, took an active part.

A special showdown meeting was called in Chicago last winter, which was expected to settle the Landis-Johnson controversy. Most of the club owners of the American league had turned against their chief and sided with Landis and Johnson's resignation was looked upon as a matter of course.

The issue was averted, however, when Johnson's physician reported that the president was seriously ill, and the American league club owners granted their chief an infinite leave of absence. It was thought at the time that the club owners had achieved a subtle "coup de grace" and that Johnson was out of the baseball for good.

However, the president turned up at league headquarters several months ago in apparent good health once more and announced himself ready to take over his duties again. He soon made his power felt when he plastered a stiff fine on Ty Cobb.

ON WITH THE FIGHTS

NEW YORK, July 8.(AP)—The state boxing commission today cleared the way for the comeback attempts of Jim Maloney, and Paul Berlenbach and gave formal permission to Tex Rickard to stage a Dempsey-Sharkey battle at the Yankee stadium July 21.

Berlenbach was given permission for two tune up bouts with Gus Berger, at the Ridgewood Grove A. C., Saturday night and with Ben Connolly at Boston July 25.

8 STATES CONTAIN ALL OF U. S. CARBON BLACK MANUFACTURERS

61 PLANTS IN FUTURE

Production Amounts to About 200,000,000 Lbs.

If the Roxana Petroleum company is granted permission to erect a carbon black plant, near Graham in Young county, there will be 61 plants situated in eight states, according to a statement issued by the department of commerce at Washington. At present there are 60 plants in operation.

The Roxana company recently asked permission to erect the plant.

Production of carbon black amounts to approximately 200,000,000 pounds a year. The product is chiefly used in the manufacture of automobile tires. Carbon black comprises about 10 per cent of the material used in the construction of casings.

Carbon black is a fluffy, black pigment, made by burning natural gas with insufficient air. Although it has been in use for about 50 years, it would still be comparatively unknown to all except ink manufacturers had it not been for the discovery of its use in rubber in 1915. The carbon black industry owes its early existence to the printing press, but its recent growth and present economic status is due to the rubber industry which, in turn, is dependent on the automobile.

The chief uses of carbon black, in order of their importance, are as a filler in rubber and as a pigment in ink and paints. It is also used in a number of miscellaneous products such as stove polish, crayons, cement, paper and composition goods.

About two-thirds of the total output of carbon black is eventually used in rubber, its finely divided state being said to greatly reduce oxidation and increase the tensile strength. Carbon black is not considered as indispensable in rubber as in printing ink, and in times of high prices it has often been supplanted by zinc oxide or graphite. However, it is at present of great importance to the tire trade, which uses roughly 85 per cent of all the rubber consumed in this country. The modern automobile tire, deep black in color and with great resistance to abrasion, is a vast improvement over the tire of 20 years ago, which was built on the lines of the present-day innertube. Although the greater part of the improvement in quality of tires has been due to better manufacturing methods, some part of the advance can be probably credited to the use of carbon black, which comprises, as said, about 10 per cent of the weight of the average tire.

Production of carbon black in 1925, the latest year for which statistics are available, amounted to 177,417,000 pounds. Production of the material received its greatest impetus in 1923, when the output was more than doubled in comparison with that of the preceding year. Prior to 1922, stocks of carbon black at the plants were small and of relatively little importance. For several years after 1915 the active demand for use in rubber exceeded the productive capacity of the industry and stocks necessarily were small. With the great increase in production in 1923 and 1924 stocks rose rapidly during those years but showed little change in 1925, when production decreased.

Exports of carbon black have assumed considerable importance since 1923, when production first greatly exceeded demand. Exports in 1926 amounted to approximately 39,210,000 pounds, having a value of $3,622,000.

The carbon black output is usually sold or handled through brokers, but large quantities are also distributed directly to domestic or foreign consumers, or are sold to other producers.

Among the policemen on duty in the exclusive West End of London are experts in German, Spanish, French and Italian.

Lubbock Plans Rousing Welcome For Oil Geologists in Meet Saturday

Special to The Record News.

LUBBOCK, July 8.—The oil fraternity of West Texas will receive the glad hand here Saturday evening when Lubbock citizens will be out in masse to welcome them to Lubbock for the first annual get-to-gether party sponsered by the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce.

A big free feed, a map of the Lubbock district will be throwed in with the welcome.

Several hundred Lubbock merchants and professional men will join local oil men in entertaining the visitors.

A large attendance is assured from the number of wires and letters being received by the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce and the number of promises sent in by Lubbock scouts, geologists and other members of the oil trade headquarters in Lubbock.

A map has been prepared by the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce showing towns, railroads and oil tests in the 34 counties surrounding Lubbock in a new oil district created at Tulsa recently with headquarters here. A blue print of this map will be given each guest at banquet.

Invitations have been mailed to every oil man in West Texas whose name the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce could obtain. All others of the petroleum trade are expected to attend regardless of whether the available lists carried the name or not, according to Charles A. Guy, chairman of the committee in charge.

NEW YORK COTTON.

NEW YORK, July 8. (AP)—The cotton market was quite but generally steady today, prices showing moderate advances on covering promoted by reports of showers or rains in the eastern belt. October sold up to 17.17, or 19 points net higher and closed at 17.15, the general market closing steady at net advances of 7 to 11 points.

The opening was steady at unchanged prices to an advance of 3 points. There was further liquidation in preparation for tomorrow's acreage report and a little Liverpool selling at the start. Offerings were comparatively light, however, and the market soon turned steadier on covering and local buying, inspired by the rain reports from the eastern belt.

Evidently these created increased apprehensions as to prospective damage by boll weevil, and there were spurts of covering during the afternoon attributed to interests who had sold earlier in the week on expectations of reactions in advance of the government acreage report.

July sold up to 16.92 and December to 17.38, in late trading, or about 9 to 12 points net higher. The close was within a point or two of the best on most positions. There was some buying during the day by houses with London and Liverpool connections, but the bulk of the day's business as to the showing of the official acreage figures tomorrow.

Private reports on acreage published during the pas tweek or ten days have estimated the decrease as compared with last year at from 8.5 to 16 per cent, averaging 11 per cent, and the opinion was expressed by local brokers that the market was prepared for a government report of between 10 and 12 per cent.

Exports today were 29,909, making 10,960,976 bales so far this season. Port receipts 7850. U. S. port stocks 1,126,443.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, July 8. (AP)—Evening up in advance of the government's acreage estimate due at the opening tomorrow and trade buying on reports of rainy weather in the belt forced cotton prices up 12 points above the previous close today. October traded up from 16.98 to 17.05 but eased off to 17.03 in the late trading and closed at that figure. The general market closed steady at net advances of 10 to 11 points.

The market was on the upgrade from the start, first trades showing gains of 5 to 7 points. The firmness at the opening was attributed to the better Liverpool cables and early reports of rain in the central and eastern portions of the belt.

When the weather map corroborated these reports the market showed more animation. Covering by shorts in advance of tomorrow's report also assisted prices in their upward trek. By midsession October was trading at 17.05 and December at 17.26, 12 points net up.

The firmness continued throughout the afternoon trading with but a minor reaction of 1 to 2 points right at the end.

The membership of the local exchange decided against suspending trading for 20 minutes tomorrow to receive the government report. Previously the market would suspend for that length of time in order that traders may digest the reports.

Exports for the day totaled 24,909 bales and for the week 103,523 bales.

Big Bull Card Foreseen In Report of Coming Crash Of Bear Ring On Wall Street Market

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, July 8.—Excellent support was given the market leaders today following early bear selling because of the increase in brokers' loans. The strong undertone and the fact that the figures for June had been largely discounted brought about covering in many directions. There were both strong and weak spots; the explanation is that a group behind the weak issues is widely extended and has made a private settlement for the turning over of stock to another banking firm. This group, it is rumored, may lose control of far more valuable interests.

Such a development is regarded as the biggest of bull cards. While bearish sentiment prevails, the big banks and industrial interests remain optimistic on high class stocks and business and money.

Reports reaching Wall street that the world banking parleys would discuss the sale of Reich bonds in America is not likely to meet the approval of leading business interests of this country. Proceeds of this bond sale, it is pointed out, would be used to build up German industries and place them in a strong position to compete with American business. Opposition to the sale of these bonds by our industrialists is not based on sentiment but on purely business reasons. A sale of French bonds on the other hand would not interfere with American industry because of the nature of French manufactures which are mostly in the form of luxuries.

Money loaned at 4 per cent. Commodities were higher; foreign exchange quiet.

Houston Oil spurted to a new high. Shorts have been selling this stock on the advance and have been punished severely. The company's earnings are showing a decided improvement; something that the bears were not aware of. The company has also signed contracts for the three cities with the companies that supply gas to Galveston, Houston and Dallas. Houston Oil is expected to approach the 200 mark on this move.

While General Motors closed lower, the resistance to selling pressure was noticeable. Some bankers predict a price several points above the current market. This view is based on prospects of another distribution in stock. Nash Motors strengthened and Jordan Motors was in demand. Gabriel Snubbers led the motor accessories by selling at a new high record price. The firm representing the steel and General Motors interests in the stock market have put out a bullish circular on Gabriel Snubbers which brought about buying orders yesterday. There is a large short interest in snubbers. Those supporting the stock look for it to sell at 60 on this move.

International Telephone felt the effect of steady buying and closed higher. Some of the leading banking interests are behind this issue because of the growth of business and increase in earnings. A large amount of mid-year funds are being placed in the stock.

Another auto accessory coming nto favor is Reynold Spring, which has entered into a contract with five big automobile companies for exclusive use of Reynolds' Springs for all of their cars. The company is also negotiating for a big contract with the Ford company for its new car. Reynolds may repeat in the market what Timken did, going from 35 to 104. When Timken was 55 attention was called here to the possibilities of the company and Reynolds is now in the same position that Timken was at 55.

Rubber was under pressure. Activity developed in Lambert and there was a renewal of buying in Loose Wiles. Railroads did little. There is good buying going on, however, in Lehigh Valley and a price tag of 200 has been placed on it. The First National bank and associates are understood to hold 65 per cent of the stock. This was disclosed at the meeting held three months ago and since that time its holdings have been increased. Other buyers have been the Girard Trust and the Pennsylvania company from such estates as the Williamson, Wright and Worden and Packard.

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW.

CHICAGO, July 8. (AP)—Disconcerting black rust news from both North and South of the Canadian boundary did much to lift the wheat market today after early declines. Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, ⅛ to 1⅛c net higher, with corn ¼ to 1⅝c net up, oats at 1 to 1½c advance, and provisions 2 to 5c to 11c gain.

Corn rose with wheat and as a result of expected falling off in receipts next week, oats displayed independent strength and were in active request on account of reports of crop injury from recent hot weather. Provisions went upward, owing to sympathy with the action of grain values and of hogs.

N. Y. Stocks

NEW YORK, July 8. (AP)—Extensive readjustment of speculative accounts, inspired in part by the record-breaking volume of stock exchange member loans, imparted widespread irregularity to the price movement in today's stock market. Vigorous bullish demonstrations in several of the so-called "blue chip" industrial issues and merger rails were offset by the heaviness of a number of standard industrials, and the weakness of some of the minor specialties. Trading showed a further contraction in volume, total sales falling below 1,500,000 shares.

Call money again renewed at 4 per cent and held steady at that figure all day but in the "outside market" funds were reported to be available at 3¾ and 3½ per cent. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged. Although brokers' loans are now more than half a billion dollars above those of a year ago, it was pointed out that the New York federal reserve ratio is now 83 per cent, against 74.6 a year ago and that of the entire federal reserve system 76.9 against 73.2 per cent last year.

Houston Oil was again the sensational feature, soaring nearly 8 points to a new high record at 173¾, as against a low of 60¼ earlier in the year, while panic-stricken shorts rushed to cover.

Motors were mixed, with most of the popular issues inclined to heaviness. General Motors reacted from an early high of 202 to 198⅝ and then climbed above 199 for a net loss of 1⅝ on the day. Hudson climbed above 83, but later lost all its gain. Jordan advanced 3 points at the expense of an overcrowded short interest and Dodge Brothers common and preferred sank to new low levels, the last named recovering its loss and closing 1¾ higher.

BRADSTREET REVIEW.

NEW YORK, July 8. (AP)—Bradstreet's tomorrow will say:

Tendencies toward betterment in crops, and to a lesser extent, in retail trade, noted last week, have become more marke dthis wee. Especially is this seen in crops which now present a marked contrast with th echaotic conditions ruling a month ago. Retail trade feeling the influence of agood holiday week's trade, has responded also to further development of vacation needs and also to a very general "sales" campaign following the turn of the year. Wholesale trade has, largely speaking, marked time, although the effect of revived retail trade and the better prospect for the crops ha simproved the general tone a trifle. Industry, on the other hand, has continued to present the quiet appearance noted throughout June, this being accentuated by a rather more than seasonal shutdown for vacations over the mid-year period. Weekly bank clearings $10,574,487,000, an increase of 16 per cent over last year.

WOOL MARKET.

BOSTON, July 8. (AP)—Interest in wool is more general among the manufacturers than at any time this year. Inclination to anticipate orders for goods is clearly evident. Fine wools both from fleece and territory sections are moving to the mills at suddenly hardening prices. The demand is strong on medium grade domestic wool, especially quarter blood, and the mills have bid on sizeable quantities ofthat quality for which grading will require several weeks.

WHEAT GOES TO NEW PEAK

Grain Fails to Hold Best Level However

BY CHARLES J. LEYDEN.
Universal Service Staff Corespondent.

CHICAGO, July 8.—Wheat reached new highs on the movement today in a broad trade but failed to hold best levels as heavy profit taking developed. The close, however, was at fair gains for the day. Speculative interest in all pits was more active, oats especially showing more life.

Houses that have been leading the buying campaign in wheat were again aggressive, although on the bulge they sold freely. Rust in the American and Canadian northwest coupled with further disappointing threshing returns from the winter belt was the basis for the buying in the leading grain.

July wheat opened at $1.46¼, sagged to $1.45⅝, rallied to $1.48½ and closed at $1.47¼@1.47¾. September started at $1.44¾@1.45, sagged to $1.44¼@1.44⅜, bulged to $1.46¾ and closed at $1.45¼@1.45⅝. September corn opened at $1.06⅛, dipped to $1.05⅝, rallied to $1.07½ and closed at $1.06½@1.06⅝.

The seaboard reported fair export inquiry. Liverpool closed steady ⅛ to 1⅜c higher, corn ⅝ to 1⅝c up, oats 1 to 1½c higher and rye 1 to 1½c up.

Corn moved up with wheat. July corn was relatively strong and narrowed its discount to 7⅛c under the September compared with 9¼c recently. The run of corn from the country is rapidly falling off. Weather conditions over the belt were generally favorable, although warmer temperatures in most areas are probably desired.

Less encouraging crop news on oats was received from the middle west and a better buying movement uncovered a sold out position. Sales in rye were inclined to cover and prices for this grain advanced sharply.

COMMERCIAL BULLETIN.

BOSTON, July 8. (AP)—The Commercial Bulletin tomorrow will say:

There is a broader demand for wool and prices are generally firmer, though not quotably dearer, except for a few descriptions. The tendency, however, is definitely against the buyer. Prices in the west are fully firm with demand steady.

London has opened with prices approximately 5 per cent dearer on the average than the close of the previous series.

The manufacturing position is the most favorable it has been for months. Quotations:

Scoured wool, Texas, fine 12 months selected $1.05@1.10; fine 8 months 90@92c.

Mohair, steady; good original bag fall Texas 58@59c; Texas kid 68@70c.

The people in that mushroom city of between 5000 and 7500 persons eats between 5400 and 7200 eggs a day, an average of more than an egg a person a day. CARRIERS GET HALF HOLIDAY

Maricle Makes Test Of Plan Here

Wichita Falls postal carriers will be given a Saturday half-holiday for the first time Saturday afternoon, according to announcement from Postmaster O. P. Maricle Friday, who has sanctioned the plan.

Mr. Maricle stated that the arrangement is still in the experimental stage, and will be changed if too great a delay in mail deliveries is caused. It has been under consideration here for some time and was approved by the business council of the chamber of commerce and other organizations if experience proves it to be practicable.

Mr. Maricle pointed out that mail arriving on noon trains might not reach its destination until Monday morning, and though this has not been a source of noticeable inconvenience in other cities, close watch will be kept to determine any laxity in the Wichita Falls service. It is believed generally that the few hours difference will cause little delay as other cities have reported successful half-holiday arrangements.

There will now be one residence delivery and two business district deliveries on Saturday if the plan is retained.

Jailed as "Drunk," He Now Faces Auto Theft Case

In automobiles reported to have been stolen it is a good idea to stay sober.

One man discovered this fact to be true Friday morning after becoming Thursday night a "guest" in the city jail, charged with intoxication.

The young man was arrested while driving an automobile. After his incarceration for alleged drunkeness, Chief of Police Burns examined the automobile Friday morning and discovered that it was reported to local police as being stolen from Waco.

The man is being held in the city jail pending instructions from Waco as to his disposition.

"Tour of World" For Boys Ends at Shawnee

Two boys, 12 and 13 years old, leaving Wichita Falls Thursday morning on a "tour of the world," only reached Shawnee, Okla., Friday morning before they became enmeshed in the clutches of the law requested to find the boys by their parents.

Using the telephone and telegraph wires to good advantage, Chief of Police Frank Burns located the boys in Oklahoma.

Grand Jury Adjourns For Three-Day Period

After a three-day session, the county grand jury adjourned Friday until Tuesday morning. No indictments were returned Friday.

During the first two days of the session, Wednesday and Thursday, the grand jurors returned 34 true bills.

The state is represented in the grand jury deliberations by E. F. Fruechte, assistant district attorney.

DISTRICT FARM AGENT

John R. Edmonds, district agricultural agent from the A. and M. college extension service, was in Wichita Falls Friday and paid a short visit to the offices of O. K. Barnes, agricultural agent, and Frank McMordie, dairy expert of the chamber of commerce. Mr. Edmonds was on his way to Quanah where he will hold a terracing school with the county farm demonstration agent. Mr. Edmonds stated that "things in this section were all right in every respect." He will probably stop here again on his return to College Station for a longer visit.

Electric Company to Maintain Usual High Standard of Service

A. E. Kelly Named Manager to Succeed P. A. Rogers; New Official Tells Ideals of Organization

"The policies of the Texas Electric Service company will be observed in their entirety in the future as in the past, and I trust that the people served by the company will find the quality of service and management always the best," said A. E. Kelly, newly appointed manager of the company, at the close of his first day's work in this capacity Friday.

Notice of Mr. Kelly's appointment was received here Friday from John W. Carpenter of Dallas, president of the company. He has been office manager of the Texas Electric Service here for the past nine years, acting as temporary general manager since the death of P. A. Rogers in May.

Long Service Here.

The new manager stated that he had not considered the reorganization of the staff as yet, but that the new office manager and others to be promoted or employed to fill vacancies would be named within the next week or two.

Mr. Kelly had been closely associated with the former general manager, Mr. Rogers, for several years, and came to Wichita Falls at the same time as Mr. Rogers in 1919. Knowing the policies of his former chief so well, and having served in his office during any absence, the new executive is most ably fitted to carry on the work without one break in the efficient routine.

The story of the two men and their work is strikingly similar. Mr. Kelly has been in the electrical utility business for over 15 years, and like his predecessor, learned the fundamentals of the business from the ground up. This knowledge combined with other experience in executive lines has prepared him in an unusual manner for the duties incumbent on the manager of a company the size of this one.

Bright Prospect.

Following grammar school work in Dallas and commercial cources in the Fort Worth High school, Mr. Kelly filled positions as auditor for the Texas and Pacific railroad in Dallas and for the Southern Pacific in San Francisco before entering the electrical business. It was then that he became associated with Mr. Rogers, and worked with him several years in Sherman, Denison and Dallas. Waco was also his home for some time where he was still connected with the electrical company.

Mr. Kelly sees ultimate possibilities in the future for Wichita Falls and the growth of every business here. In his line he feels that there is opportunity for keeping the city at the top of the list in electrical service facilities, and points to the completion of the high voltage line and surrounding territory as an indication of continuous growth.

The new manager has become identified with many civic movements in Wichita Falls and is well known to scores of friends and acquaintances who Friday congratulated him on his appointment.

Today { At the Theaters

By Ruth Morrison

Majestic: "Rough House Rosie," with Clara Bow, Fables, Topics of the Day and Pathe News.
Olympic: "The Circus Ace," with Tom Mix; comedy and Pathe News.
Mission: "Splitting the Breeze," with Tom Tyler; chapter 9 of "Return of the Riddle Rider," and Pete Pate's Musical show.
Garden: "Code of the Cow Country," with Buddy Roosevelt, and No. 2 of "Whispering Smith Rides," and comedy.
Gem: Bob Custer in "Cactus Trails," and comedy.

The long awaited successor to Clara Bow's highly successful starring debut "It" reaches the Majestic theater today under an alluring title "Rough House Rosie." This young woman who has made such amazing strides during the past few years, is worthy of more than passing notice.

While "It" created all sorts of box office records, critics wherever the picture has played, seem to think "Rough House Rosie" has an even brighter future before it.

As for the story "Rough House Rosie" concerns itself with Rosie O'Reilly, a belle of Tenth avenue and, more important, the sweetheart of Joe Hennessey, self-styled "coming middleweight champion." The plot develops when an amusement park clairvoyant predicts great fame as a dancer for Rosie. To realize her ambition, she stages a "boxing ballet" with six pretty girls. Booked into a night club "Rough House Rosie and Her Roughnecks" are a success from the start. Lew McKay, a cafe frequenter, attracted to the girl, gives her a diamond pin and—the police arrest her as a holder of stolen goods.

After a night in jail, Rosie is released when McKay confesses and Arthur Russell, owner of the jewelry, refuses to press charges. He offers to take her home in his car and they leave just as Joe arrives with bail money. Flattered by Russell's evident love and impressed by his wealth, Rosie soon finds herself forgetting Joe and no one realizes this more than Joe himself. A book of etiquette proving useless, he tries being a caveman but discovers this doesn't work as Rosie hits him on the jaw and he falls to the floor unconscious. Then — but that ought to be enough to whet one's interest.

Those who read Nunnally Johnson's amusing Saturday Evening Post story needn't be told that we've only recounted "the half of it." Suffice it to say that before the picture comes to a smashing close, we are taken to a "wild" country club party and to the ringside at Joe's big fight. Frank Strayer, the man who made "Steppin' Out" and "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" directed. Reed Howes, often starred in independent productions, heads Miss Bow's featured cast. Arthur Houseman, Doris Hill and Douglas Gilmore are also featured. Gilmore was Bebe Daniels' "A Kiss in a Taxi" hero. Max Marcin adapted "Rough House Rosie." Louise Long and Ethel Doherty prepared the screen play for Paramount.
