Solar eclipse casts shadow across earth

■ Amateur, professional sky-gazers use pinhole viewers, powerful telescopes to watch celestial event.

N.Y. Times News Service

MAUNA KEA, Hawaii — With breathtaking suddenness, the moon rushed over the sun exactly on schedule Thursday, casting an eerie shadow across a 9,000-mile swath of Earth stretching from Hawaii to South America.

The eclipse, regarded by scientists as the opportunity of a lifetime to study the sun, was carefully recorded by the world's greatest concentration of telescopes atop this volcano.

Along the path of totality, as the blacked-out zone was called, first-time stargazers were just as impressed.

"It gave me goose bumps," said Shirley Hirakami of Waimea, Hawaii, who watched from the foot of the dormant volcano.

"You know God is in charge when you see this," said Janet Krupnick, 58, who was among 3,000 people at Griffith Observatory in Los Angeles.

While scientists worked quickly to collect data during some four minutes of total eclipse in Hawaii, less cloistered souls down below practiced their own rites.

A couple exchanged marriage vows atop a waterfall at a Hawaiian hotel. Guatemalan Indians sounded church bells and banged pans in the daytime darkness to bring back the sun, and pregnant women in Mexico donned protective red shawls to protect their unborn from possible lunar maladies.

"It almost makes you privy to seeing the clockwork of the universe in action," said Fred Espenak, a NASA astrophysicist who was in Baja California, Mexico, where the total eclipse lasted the longest: six minutes, 53 seconds.

A partial eclipse was visible over much of the conti-

Gunman kills self

PASADENA — The neighborhood terrorized this week by a gunman who killed a police officer and held a hostage for 21 hours before committing suicide is better off without him, the gunman's acquaintances said. Marvin Harris, 40, shot himself in the head Thursday, ending a 21-hour ordeal in which he shot to death Pasadena police officer Jeff Ginn and kept Jean Lina hostage in her home. People who knew Harris, a former mental patient on medication for schizophrenia, said they were not surprised about the incident.

Ex-players charged

PILOT POINT — Murder charges were filed Wednesday against two former high school football players accused of killing a former running back. The body of Marvin Lydell Newberry had been found in a field east of Pilot Point in rural Grayson County. The 1988 graduate had been missing since June 21. Denton County Sheriff's deputies on Wednesday arrested Ely Dixon Sledge and Thomas William Prose, both 18.

Brooke 'knows'

NEW YORK — Brooke Shields says it's just a matter of time before she joins the ranks of such respected actresses as Jodie Foster and Michelle Pfeiffer. "I don't think I'm good, I KNOW I am," Shields says in the August issue of Redbook. "Hollywood doesn't take me seriously — yet." The 26-year-old beauty who started modeling before she could walk hopes the much-delayed "Brenda Starr" will breathe life into her moribund acting career. The 1986 film based on the cartoon strip is scheduled to be released in August.

Senate OKs $3.3 billion anti-crime bill

■ Because of gun provisions, additional penalties, final product is stronger version of last year's bill.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Senate Thursday night approved a broad new anti-crime bill that would expand the number of federal offenses that are punishable by death, impose a waiting period on handgun sales and place new limits on the rights of prisoners and the accused.

The measure, which had become bogged down in last-minute parliamentary maneuvers and private negotiations after 11 days of debate, passed by a vote of 71-26, with 45 Republicans joining 26 Democrats in support of a bill that blended Democratic and Republican measures.

Ten Democrats, including staunch opponents of the death penalty, voted against the bill. Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York cited the capital punishment provisions as his reason for voting against the measure, as did Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts and Sen. Alan Cranston of California.

Some Republicans, including opponents of gun control, rejected the

Delta acquires Pan Am routes

(NYT) — For the relatively low sum of $260 million, Delta Air Lines has agreed to acquire the vast trans-Atlantic route network of Pan American World Airways and other Pan Am assets.

The deal, reached Thursday, marks the beginning of the long-anticipated break-up of Pan Am — once the world's premier international carrier.

The transaction also wipes out any concern that Delta might be losing ground to its two bigger rivals, American and United airlines. Both have been ex-

Odessa Mayor Lorraine Bonner introduced the Rev. Jesse Jackson outside the Dynagen plant Thursday.

Jackson calls for Dynagen resolution

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Dynagen management is "making a step in the right direction" for the health of the community in refurbishing its plant and in re-industrializing its operations, civil rights leader the Rev. Jesse Jackson said here Thursday.

"The fact of the matter is," Jackson said to the applause of the rain-soaked crowd, "we need the plant. We need the jobs. We need the right to breathe free."

Jackson, the 49-year-old two-time presidential candidate, was invited by the Odessa chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) and Ector County Democratic Party leaders to help mediate the Dynagen situation that has become embedded in air and water pollution, in politics, and in the legal system.

'We need the plant. We need the jobs. We need the right to breathe free.'

the Rev. Jesse Jackson

The articulate Jackson likened the Dynagen case to the woes and hopes of the nation.

Neighbors of the Dynagen plant have filed a class-action lawsuit in complaining of foul and obnoxious odors emanating for the plant, which produces synthetic rubber for the world's fourth largest tire maker, General Tire & Rubber Co. of Akron, Ohio.

Meanwhile, in following a court order and in responding to citations from the Texas Air Control Board that Dynagen had violated the Texas Clean Air Act, Dynagen is carrying out a multi-million-dollar program of cleaning up its plant, removing sludge from its 165 acres of solar water-evaporation ponds, and installing a waste-water treatment plant.

Jetliner crashes in Saudi Arabia, at least 261 die

JIDDAH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — A DC-8 jetliner carrying white-robed Nigerian pilgrims and a crew from Canada crashed in flames Thursday while attempting to make an emergency landing, witnesses said. There were no survivors among at least 261 people on board.

Bodies of the pilgrims were scattered across the Saudi desert after the plane nose-dived onto the tarmac and exploded shortly after takeoff, airport officials and the witnesses said.

The number of people aboard the plane was in dispute. The plane was leased from the Montreal-based carrier Nationair by a Nigerian company, Holdtrade, to carry the Muslim pilgrims home from Jiddah to Sokoto, Nigeria.

The pilot was attempting to return to King Abdel-Aziz international airport after reporting "technical trouble"

Black Caucus votes to oppose nomination

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The Congressional Black Caucus voted 18-1 on Thursday to oppose the nomination of Judge Clarence Thomas, the Supreme Court nominee, who, as sucessor to retiring Justice Thurgood Marshall, would be the second black to serve on the Supreme Court.

After members reviewed the nominee's civil rights record, Rep. Edolphus Towns, D-N.Y., chairman of the caucus, said the feeling was that "he was not the person to carry on the legacy of Thurgood Marshall."

The dissenting vote was from Rep. Gary A. Franks, R-Conn., the only black Republican in the House.

The vote was largely symbolic since House members have no role in the confirmation of nominees to the Supreme Court. The action also had partisan overtones since opposing votes came from Democrats.

The caucus vote was, however, the first official act of oppostion from a black group, since the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and other civil Winds have been mostly from the south at 5 to 15 mph but not as gusty as Wednesday.

Scattered afternoon thunderstorm activity developed between Lufkin and Houston. Thunderstorms also formed this afternoon along a surface trough of low pressure along the West Texas and New Mexico border and in the Winter Garaden of South Texas.

The forecast for North Texas was for partly cloudy skies today with a slight chance of thunderstorms in the west and east. High temperatures 92 to 97. Mostly cloudy tonight and Saturday with scattered thunderstorms mainly in the north. Lows tonight 71 to 73. Highs Saturday in the upper 80s in the west to the upper 90s in the south.

ECLIPSE: Moon crescents sun right on schedule

(From 1A)

nental United States. Clouds and heavy rain disappointed eclipse-watchers in the Southwest.

A total of some 90,000 eclipse-minded tourists traveled to Hawaii and Mexico to watch from beaches, boats and mountaintops.

In Hawaii, birds returned to their nests and dogs settled down to sleep at midday, fooled by a phenomenon that scientists do not expect to be repeated at such length for another 150 years.

Atop Mauna Kea, astronomers had slightly more than four minutes to make or break years of preparation, under a thin layer of high cirrus clouds and volcanic haze complicated by nearby clouds.

The splendor of the total eclipse was a mixed thrill for some of the 50 to 60 astronomers running six major telescopes and 10 experiments, just as it was for those among an estimated 30,000 tourists on Hawaii's Big Island.

On Mauna Kea, where good weather is taken nearly for granted, the low-lying tropical trade-wind clouds threatened continuously to envelop the peak in fog — and did wash across the white telescope domes several times in the half hour before the full eclipse began.

Most of the researchers, however, said that even before studying their data fully, they are confident that the state of solar physics had advanced considerably from observations of the rapid passage of the moon's shadow which, traveling at nearly 6,000 miles per hour, darkened Mauna Kea's 13,796-foot summit for four minutes, 12 seconds.

From the mountaintop, the spectacle was riveting.

The moon first nudged in front of the sun at 6:30. A few minutes before 7:28, when it was to fully cover the brilliant disk of the sun, all eyes turned to the west, away from the eroded dawn, to watch the shadow come.

A darkness rushed out from the west, blotting the distant clouds on the horizon first. To the north and south, sunny skies painted the distance, but above, the light dropped abruptly.

At the first moment of totality, with temperatures dropping 10 to 15 degrees, the sight drew gasps from both John Waihee, the governor of Hawaii, and Japanese electronics tycoon Akio Morita, chairman of the Sony Corp., who were gathered with the scientists. Remarked Waihee: "What do you say? It's spectacular."

The wide sheet of clouds mantling Mauna Kea's stark, frigid, cinder-covered peak contrasted with the blackened sun. Encircled by a delicately rayed burst of coronal gases glowing eerily white, the black disk was topped with a cloud of denser pink gases blown explosively out into the corona in a huge "prominence" shaped vaguely like the letter M, rising at least 50,000 miles above the solar surface.

As the eclipse ended, the moon slid off the sun, moving from top to bottom as seen from Hawaii. The first glimpse of the sun's bright surface formed a perfect "diamond ring" effect as a burst of white light radiated from the glowing ring.

BILL: Senate passes broad anti-crime measure package.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., who sponsored the administration's bill, said that the version that was approved had retained some troublesome provisions but that it "contains the heart of the president's crime bill."

Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., said the final version would go farther than previous anti-crime legislation had. "I truly believe we have a sound, tough bill," he said shortly before the vote.

But even with all the claims of bipartisanship by both sides Thursday night, Biden took the opportunity to take a final political jab at the White House. "I hope the president would maybe take the politics of crime out of the upcoming elections," Biden said.

Attorney General Dick Thornburgh praised the Senate action, calling it a "powerful signal" that will "strengthen the ability of federal, state and local law enforcement to remove drug traffickers and violent offenders from our streets once and for all."

The final vote was delayed for several hours by an attempt by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to force a vote on an amendment that would have established penalties for the transmission of the AIDS virus by medical personnel. Helms later agreed to take the matter up as part of another bill next week.

The $3.3 billion bill, which emerged from the Senate after three weeks of intense negotiations among Senate Republicans, Democrats and the White House, is a blend of the approach proposed by Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., and an administration bill sponsored by Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.

Because of the gun provisions and a potpourri of additional penalties that were added to the bill in debate, the final product is a stronger version of the anticrime bill that the Senate passed one year ago in a vote of 94-6.

That package was never enacted because the House and Senate failed to resolve differences in their respective bills.

The House has passed a bill requiring a seven-day waiting period for handgun purchases.

VOTE: Black Caucus to oppose high court nominee

(From 1A)

rights groups have delayed formal action.

The black caucus vote came as administration officials and Thomas' backers in Congress sought to play down the disclosure that Thomas had smoked marijuana and to distinguish his case from that of Douglas H. Ginsburg, a Federal Appeals Court judge who withdrew his name from consideration for the Supreme Court in 1987 after it was revealed that he used marijuana while he was a law professor.

Thomas expressed regret Thursday for having smoked marijuana in college, but several senators said the disclosure should not damage his prospects for confirmation.

"I think it's pretty obvious that kids should know you shouldn't even try it once," Thomas told reporters on Capitol Hill, where he was making courtesy calls to members of the Judiciary Committee. "I express regret."

Thomas' supporters noted that his use of marijuana, first reported by The Washington Post on Thursday, should not have surprised members of the Judiciary Committee because he disclosed it on FBI forms and in interviews given to the panel when he was nominated last year for his current seat on the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. Ginsburg did not reveal his marijuana use until after he was nominated for the Supreme Court.

The White House said in a statement that Thomas "took several puffs on a marijuana cigarette in college and perhaps once in law school" about 20 years ago.

"It's inconsequential," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater. "The big difference is, we knew it. He acknowledged it. We weren't blind-sided."

Fitzwater also noted that in contrast with Ronald Reagan, President Bush has never condemned political appointees for experimenting with marijuana.

Although he withdrew, Ginsburg's disclosure defused the use of marijuana as a politically damaging issue. Republican and Democratic members of Congress have since acknowledged smoking marijuana years earlier. Among them was Sen. Al Gore Jr., D-Tenn., who was running for president.

Sen. Charles E. Grassley, R-Iowa, a member of the Judiciary Committee, which is expected to consider Thomas' nomination in September, said, "I definitely don't condone the use of marijuana and I wish he hadn't experimented with it. But Clarence Thomas is not a candidate for sainthood; he's a candidate for the Supreme Court.

JACKSON: Civil rights leader speaks in Odessa against Dynagen two years ago, after getting no results from complaining to the state environmental officials.

(From 1A)

"We don't want money," Norman said just before Jackson arrived to talk with Dynagen officials, workers and area residents. "We want to get this thing (corrected) so that we can sit in our front yards" and breathe freely.

However, his wife said that "the people that have suffered ... are entitled to some kind of compensation."

Rather than touching on the legal aspects, Jackson focused on the humanitarian, environmental, health and economic aspects of the Dynagen controversy.

Meeting with Jackson inside the Dynagen office complex included Tim Gorman, Dynagen's plant manager; General Tire officials from Akron; Freddie Sanchez, Dynagen's labor union president; Gene Collins, president of the Odessa NAACP chapter; members of the Jackson-founded Rainbow Coalition; and Odessa Mayor Lorraine Bonner.

"This coming together of labor and management and community leaders and political leadership, in hammering out a model plan, could very set the pace for the nation," Jackson said.

Rather than compromise, resolving the Dynagen problem is a matter of "communications and the establishment of trust," he said.

Each concern in the conflict is legitimate, Jackson said.

"The plant wants to stay, refurbish and rebuild. The community needs assurance that that will happen in some orderly process," Jackson said. "That's valid."

The mayor wants "the tax base in order to help provide for services for the city. That's valid." he said.

"The workers want their jobs. That's valid."

And the "people want to breathe free. That's valid," Jackson said.

"It's a matter of communicating to reconcile these interests."

Following his session with General Tire and Dynagen officials, Jackson said he was "really satisfied that the plans to refurbish are scientific and on time."

And if the companies in the Odessa petrochemical complex "are having a negative impact" on the community," then, Jackson said, "all the industries must bear the burden of making the community healthy."

Reiterating a plan he unveiled at the NAACP convention in Houston earlier in the day, Jackson called for a "New American Agenda," a 10-year plan for renewal and reinvestment — one similar to the bailout plan for Eastern Europe and Kuwait.

"It's time to bail out America," he told an appreciative crowd.

In outlining his plan to rebuild the economy, Jackson called for fair taxes, with rich citizens and corporations shouldering a bigger share of the nation's tax bill. A national health care plan also is needed, he said.

Jackson advocated tapping pension funds to build affordable housing, revitalize cities and create jobs.

A new GI bill to benefit Desert Storm troops should include a health care plan similar to the one enjoyed by Congress, he said.

Dynagen plant manager Tim Gorman said Jackson was "really professional and lived up to the expectations I had of him" in his negotiations.

"He is a eloquent and charismatic speaker and really an educated man. He heard both sides, and he came out more educated. He lived up to what I was hoping I would get when I meet him, and there were no guarantees."

Mayor Lorraine Bonner spoke favorably of the session with Jackson.

"We all came to this table today wishing to protect all of those people and came in an effort of conciliation and common cause to solve this problem. They are people that need jobs to feed their families, and those families need to breathe air and also to drink the water," she said.

"We cannot do something to the plant at the expense of the health of our citizens, nor at the expense of the jobs of the people who work here," the mayor said. "With that perspective, our community will come out as the winner, because the overall environment of our community is what's important for all citizens."

James Fuller, Midland College English professor and past president of the Midland chapter of the NAACP, said it is "imperative that this particular problem be resolved.

"And I think a person like the Rev. Jackson is a prime catalyst to expedite the whole process. I think his being here will accentuate the significance of this problem. And if, in fact, this particular company is the kind of corporate citizen that we like to think that they are, isn't it about time the problem is resolved?"

His wife, Robbyne Fuller, who is president of the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs, said that Jackson "has a way of moving people into action. He is able to negotiate and work with people and settle problems for the best of both groups. Once you bring it out, you work the problem and solve the problem," Mrs. Fuller said. "To solve the problem, everybody needs to sit down and talk about it. Let's save the jobs and let's make the air clean for everybody."

DELTA: New deal marks beginning of Pan Am breakup

(From 1A)

panding rapidly in international and domestic markets.

For Pan Am — once the unofficial U.S. "flag" carrier to the capitals of the world — the sale of its key assets at such a low price demonstrates its sinking financial condition.

Pan Am lacks the cash to survive the summer and is organizing the sale of its best remaining assets in anticipation of a shutdown, industry analysts said yesterday.

United officials met Thursday in New York with Pan Am executives in an effort to buy Pan Am's Latin American division and perhaps other Pan Am assets.

Experts said United may be interested in buying some of the same assets Delta has agreed to buy, including 21 Airbus A-310 jets. That could result in a formal auction being called for by the federal judge overseeing Pan Am's Chapter 11 bankruptcy case.

But Delta officials said their deal with Pan Am is "a package deal, not a deal for a collection of individual assets that can be separated out from the package."

Meanwhile, Northwest Airlines officials said Thursday that they will try to block Delta's acquistion of Pan Am's rights to serve London from Detroit, where Northwest has a hub.

Northwest has been seeking the Detroit-London route for more than a year but has been unable to reach an agreement with Pan Am. Industry experts suggested that Delta eventually may sell that route to Northwest.

In addition to Pan Am's trans-Atlantic route rights, Delta agreed to buy the Pan Am Shuttle, which operates high-frequency shuttle service between Boston, New York and Washington — the most heavily traveled routes in the nation.

Delta also agreed to acquire Pan Am's airport gates at Miami, Washington National Airport and New York's LaGuardia Airport. It also will buy Pan Am's WorldPort international terminal and Terminal B domestic gates at New York's John F. Kennedy Airport.

About 6,000 of Pan Am's 24,000 employees will be offered jobs by Delta.

Delta will also acquire the 21 A-310 planes Pan Am now uses on its trans-Atlantic routes and 24 Boeing 727s. Fourteen of the 727s will be dedicated to the shuttle operations with the rest being used on European routes out of the hub in Frankfurt, Germany.

Analysts said they weren't surprised that Delta bought some Pan Am assets. The Atlanta-based carrier's two-month study of Pan Am's assets has been widely reported.

However, the amount of money that Delta agreed to pay — $260 million, $60 million of which Delta will advance to Pan Am as a loan to help keep the carrier afloat — was surprisingly low, industry analysts said.

Killer whale gives birth before crowd of 2,000 people

SAN DIEGO (AP) — It was a whale of a show.

A 300-pound killer whale calf was born shortly after noon Tuesday at Sea World as 2,000 people looked on and cheered.

"The calf appears to be bonding with its mother, it seems strong and alert, and we're hopeful it is a healthy calf," said Jim Antrim, general curator at the park.

The calf's mother, Kasatka, is a 17-foot, 5,000-pound killer whale 14 to 16 years old. The calf is her first.

Kasatka went into labor about 9:17 a.m., causing Sea World staff to cancel the usual 11:15 a.m. show and invite show-goers to watch the birth.

The average-sized calf was born at 12:11 p.m.

In addition to this calf, five killer whales have been born and successfully raised at Sea World parks in San Antonio, Orlando, Fla., and San Diego.

The calf's stage name, like others before it, is Baby Shamu. It has not been given its personal name.

Senior staff veterinarian James McBaine said he believes Baby Shamu is female, although it could take as long as a week to make a positive determination.

"It's pretty hard to be certain, but we're prepared to give it a fairly high probability that it's female," McBaine said.

LAPD Chief Gates removes critic from Internal Affairs duty

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An assistant police chief who criticized Chief Daryl Gates was removed Thursday as head of the Police Department unit that investigates officer misconduct.

Assistant Chief David Dotson had testified before a civilian commission that investigated the department after the March 3 videotaped beating of motorist Rodney King. Dotson told the panel Gates' leadership was flawed.

Gates removed Dotson on Thursday to let a captain become commander of the Internal Affairs Division, police spokesman Lt. Fred Nixon said. He denied that the move constituted retaliation, and said Dotson had known the job would be temporary when he took it in March.

Dotson said late Thursday he didn't consider the move revenge, but City Council members Zev Yaroslavsky and Michael Woo were skeptical.

"I am outraged," Yaroslavsky said. "This is management by retaliation."

Yaroslavsky and Woo urged the city attorney and city Ethics Commission to determine whether the move violated city "whistleblower" ordinances.

Testifying before the commission, Dotson said of Gates, who has been chief for 13 years: "He is a very nice man. I love him!" But he added, "In the last 13 years in the Los Angeles Police Department, with a couple of very noticeable exceptions, we have not had in my opinion, at the top, very effective leadership."

"In my judgment, we do a very poor job of management and supervisory accountability," Dotson testified.

Nixon said Dotson understood that the Internal Affairs command was temporary when he took over in March. The post was left vacant at the end of February when Assistant Chief Jesse Brewer retired, Nixon said.

"There's been no demotion, no transfer, no retaliation. That's simply not true," Nixon said. "The timing is what is leading people astray, fueling the speculation."

Nixon added that Dotson had too many duties already.

"Internal Affairs is too critical a command to be a part of a shop that's as busy as Chief Dotson's shop," Nixon said.

Dotson told a KCAL-TV reporter Thursday night: "I do not feel as if I am being retaliated against. If I am, I would be very surprised."

Gates had been clearly distressed as Dotson's remarks to the commission became public this week. Gates said Dotson was in charge of discipline for two years and they had regular meetings. "You'd think he would speak out," Gates said.

Dotson has insisted that he did raise the issues with the chief before going to the commission.

The commission on Tuesday released a report urging an overhaul of the police department, which it said was slipping into a "siege mentality." It called for Gates to step down, but he said he didn't plan to anytime soon.

Brewer, the retired assistant chief, also criticized Gates in his testimony to the commission, transcripts released Thursday show.

Brewer said he thought Gates had done a good job overall in his 13 years as chief. But he added, "I would not give him a good grade in his handling of discipline. I think I would be generous in giving him a 'D' in discipline."

CRASH: Number of passengers is in dispute

(From 1A)

when it exploded, airport sources said. Other aviation sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the pilot reported fire in the plane's landing gear. They said he was advised to dump his fuel and return, but the plane exploded into pieces before he could.

One witness said wreckage was "scattered over 600 square yards in the southern desert expanses of the airport."

"The bodies, some whole, some torn to pieces, some missing limbs and some with their faces disfigured, were mingled with personal items. Nothing was intact," said Khaled Nazer, an editor of the English-language Jiddah daily, Arab News.

The pilgrims's white robes "were reduced to black tatters," and some of the victims's bodies were completely reddened "as if they had been fried to death," Nazer added. "It was awful."

He said copies of the Koran, the Islam holy book, were scattered among the corpses. Three hours after the crash, smoke still rose above the plane's burning fuselage, he said.

Holdtrade was set up by Ibrahim Dasuki, the son of Nigeria's supreme Muslim leader, the Sultan of Sokoto, to charter aircraft to carry pilgrims.

Thousands of relatives of the victims massed at the Lagos airport and in Sokoto offices of Nigeria Airlines and the charter company awaiting word on the crash. Sokoto is in the heartland of Muslim-dominated northern Nigeria.

The Saudi and Nigerian governments said in separate announcements that 261 people, including a 14-member crew, were on board. The Nigerian announcement said the crew included Americans and Canadians, but later reports from Canada listed all the crew as from that country.

An agent at Areen Travel in Jiddah, which arranged the charter, said 249 Nigerian passengers and a crew of 11 Canadians, one Briton, one Irishwoman and a French citizen were aboard Flight WT2120.

Nationair officials said their plane was carrying 250 passengers and a crew of 14 — four from Toronto and the rest from other parts of Ontario — at the time of the accident.

The discrepancies could not be immediately reconciled.

Nationair was founded in the mid-1980s by Montreal businessman Robert Obadia.

A Saudi government statement said the flight had just taken off when the pilot radioed the tower saying he was returning because he had "lost control of the landing gear and that there was a fire aboard."

Witnesses said they saw the plane spewing smoke and fire as it flew low over the runway. They said it appeared it had caught fire as it was taking off.

One of the witnesses said he ran as close as he could to the crash site, where he described "flames shooting into the air as high as six-story buildings."

The witness said the plane was in "small pieces, no big pieces around."

U.S. ammo depot explodes in Kuwait, injures at least 56

KUWAIT CITY (AP) — An explosion ripped through a U.S. ammunition depot Thursday, showering soldiers with shrapnel and engulfing vehicles in flames. At least 50 U.S. troops and six British troops were injured, officials said.

"It was raining metal," said Spc. Mark Alexander, a 23-year-old firefighter from Norwich, Conn., who was hospitalized with smoke inhalation. "I saw a dude with half his hand off."

The chain-reaction blasts at the Blackhorse Camp in Doha apparently began with an electrical fire on a truck carrying 155-mm howitzer shells, military officials said. The U.S. Embassy ruled out sabotage.

The ammunition, stored on pallets in a large open-air compound, included tank rounds, artillery and bullets, officers said. The depot is near a British mess hall, which was empty during the 11 a.m. blast.

A Pentagon source said preliminary reports indicated that 14 of the military's top-of-the-line battle tanks, M1-A1s, were damaged or destroyed. Another 35-40 military vehicles were damaged, the military said.

"We've lost more tanks today than we did in the whole war," said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

About four such tanks — each costing $2.7 million — were lost during the 43-day conflict.

The source said the explosion also claimed eight howitzers — costing $1.5 million each.

"It was blowing out shrapnel so we had to pull back and then — boom! — it went off," said Alexander.

"It tossed people around as they were trying to get away. That's why you have got a lot of these guys with broken ankles, broken arms."

The U.S. and British military and U.N. forces have bases near Doha, on a peninsula about 12 miles west of Kuwait City.

The Central Command in Tampa, Fla. said at least 50 U.S. soldiers were hurt. Their injuries ranged from minor cuts to serious shrapnel wounds.

Doctors at Al-Sabah Hospital said one U.S. soldier suffered serious brain damage after shrapnel shattered his skull. He was not expected to live. Three others underwent surgery.

About two-thirds of the 3,700 troops of the 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment at Blackhorse were on desert maneuvers when the explosion occurred.

The Blackhorse Camp is the last major contingent of U.S. troops in Kuwait.

Yugoslav tensions remain high

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Croatia's leader demanded on Thursday that two top federal army generals be fired, and the leader of Bosnia-Hercegovina said growing tensions among Serbs and Croats were threatening his republic as well.

A peace accord reached this week between the government and the two breakaway republics called for all opposing forces to pull back to their bases so negotiations can be held calmly. But both sides have been trading daily charges of truce violations.

Ethnic violence continued in Croatia, and tensions remained high in Slovenia despite a week-old cease-fire.

A team of 10 European Community diplomats arrived Thursday in Slovenia's capital, Ljubljana, to talk about monitoring the peace accord. The trade bloc is ready to send 40 to 50 unarmed truce observers but awaits permission from the federal collective presidency, which is to discuss the accord Friday.

Slovenia, Croatia and the federal premier already have approved the agreement, which was mediated by the European Community.

President Alija Izetbegovic of Bosnia-Hercegovina, worried about a possible Serbian-Croatian deal to carve up his republic between them, asked Thursday for a European Community mission to visit 'the central Yugoslav republic.

He suggested that Bosnia-Hercegovina might also leave the Yugoslav federation if Croatia and Slovenia succeeded in doing so.

There has been widespread speculation — denied by leaders of both republics — that Serbia and Croatia may be discussing ways to resolve their dispute by dividing Bosnia-Hercegovina.

"The international community should pay more attention to what is happening in Bosnia-Hercegovina, to what could become a conflict with wider implications," Izetbegovic said.

Serbia opposes granting Croatia independence because Croatia refuses to give up its Serb-populated regions in exchange. Serbia, most bent on keeping Yugoslavia whole, says it will annex those regions if Croatia becomes independent.

There has been widespread speculation — denied by leaders of both republics — that Serbia and Croatia may be discussing ways to resolve their dispute by dividing up Bosnia-Hercegovina. Half of Bosnia's population are Muslims, the other half Christians — 30 percent Serbs and 20 percent Croats.

Under some scenarios, Serbia would annex the Serb-populated areas of Bosnia and Croatia would take the Croatian-dominated lands, leaving a Muslim-dominated enclave.

Slovenian President Milan Kucan continued to express skepticism that the army would respect an agreement Monday to ease the crisis.

Stipe Mesic of Croatia, chairman of the eight-member federal presidency, says the army now is under civilian authority. But the army's attempt to squelch Slovenian independence last month and a battle with Croatian militiamen Sunday left officials of both republics skeptical about who controls it.

"The army is acting as a typical junta," Slovenian President Milan Kucan said in an interview. "It is . . . acting autonomously and in its own interests."

Kucan said Slovenia had largely put its fate in the hands of Western Europe by accepting the peace accord.

"By imposing a European way of solving the Yugoslav crisis, Europe has undertaken part of the responsibility for the destiny of the Slovene nation," he said.

Lifting sanctions will help change

Tamsanqa Linda flew into Midland International Airport last October with an urgent appeal. In a news conference he explained that the struggle in South Africa, his homeland, was no longer one between forces pushing for an end to apartheid, the government policy of separation of the races, and those resisting that change. Now, he said, the struggle was between "the free enterprise system and the Marxist ideology which the ANC (African National Congress) and communist countries are trying to create."

Asked how the United States could help South Africa prevent the communist takeover which could threaten the United States' access to strategic minerals, Linda said unequivocably that the United States should immediately lift its economic sanctions against his country and "stop supporting our enemies."

Now, nine months and numerous speaking engagements later, Linda is realizing at least part of his goal. President George Bush announced Wednesday he is lifting the trade embargo imposed on South Africa five years ago. The president declared that the "pillars of apartheid" had been destroyed and he called for boosting South Africa's troubled economy. That decision should help South Africa to develop the industrial base it needs to break free of those pushing the failed communist system and bring about even fuller realization of the free enterprise system which Linda strongly embraced in his tour of the United States. Economic freedom will help that country to compete in the highly-technical last decade of the 20th century.

Achieving that economic freedom won't be easy, but it will be simpler — and less bloody — since the ANC has been losing support among South Africa's black, white, Indian and Colored (mixed-race) communities in recent months. The fact that more South Africans have come to question the ANC's communist ties has hurt that organization.

Lifting sanctions won't change matters overnight, but at this point the sanctions would only have impeded that country's economic development. South Africa still has a long way to go before it can claim to be a full partner in the industrialized world, but removal of economic sanctions by President Bush was a good next step. That country has been torn by tribal warring and racial conflict in recent years. The struggle between the communist-backed forces and those supporting free enterprise has been much less visible, but it is one that will affect significantly the relationship between South Africa and the rest of the world.

When he spoke at The Heritage Foundation in Washington, D.C., in June, Mangosuthu G. Buthelezi, chief minister of Kwazulu, South Africa, and president of the Inkatha Freedom Party, noted, "The radical changes taking place in South Africa now are not the fruits of revolutionary activity. They are not the fruits of confrontationalism. Everything of course in the end helped in one way or another. I am not saying that violence and the threat of violence played no role. I am not saying that sanctions and international anger played no role. All I am saying is that the magnitude of what is happening in South Africa cannot be accounted for simplistically."

Buthelezi also said, "Whites want now to negotiate a new deal for everybody. They want now to establish a government under which everybody will be prepared to live.

"All the fighting can end and all the calls for revolution are dying down. There is now the licking of wounds, there is still the distrust and there are the fears that things will go wrong. There is, however, now opportunity and hope. And courage can now turn hope to reality."

President Bush's action should help to create an environment in which South Africa can nourish free enterprise and cast off its flirtation with the failure called communism.

ANOTHER VIEW

Bucy resigned SCC in wrong time, way

If J. Fred Bucy had intended to help build support for the Superconducting Super Collider by resigning abruptly as chairman of the Texas National Research Laboratory last week, he chose the wrong time and the wrong way to do so.

Mr. Bucy's claim that the project may not be built if Japan does not commit funding appears to be premature. . . . Department of Energy officials said . . . that even if Japan contributes only half of the hoped-for $1.7 billion, construction on the atom smasher will continue. . . .

Mr. Bucy's hasty exit — which was featured on network television newscasts and front pages across the nation — now may have created a negative impression that the project will have difficulty overcoming.

It is commendable that Mr. Bucy, the former president of Tex as Instruments, said he planned to continue working to rally foreign support for the collider as a private citizen. But he should be careful not to create more problems for his successor, who will be named by Gov. Ann Richards. The chairman of the commission is supposed to function as a super spokesperson for the SSC, the state's premier research effort.

JACK ANDERSON

Let's unmask the stealth candidates

WASHINGTON — Former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas is the only Democrat who admits he is running for president, but the list of stealth candidates is long and predictable. They want to keep the voters guessing about their presidential aspirations, but their politicking betrays them.

Anderson

Presidential wannabees who know what's good for them are lavishing attention and some money on the two states with primaries that could catapult them to a nomination — New Hampshire and Iowa. Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., started early. Last fall he donated $2,000 from his private political action committee to the New Hampshire Democratic Party. On the same day he gave $500 to Iowa's incumbent Democratic treasurer.

A spokeswoman for Gephardt said the contributions were "unrelated to any type of presidential bid." But the record shows that he hasn't donated to other state parties and candidates.

Gephardt is among the serious contenders who won't even admit so much as a yearning for the White House. With him in that category are Sen. Al Gore, D-Tenn., Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., and the Rev. Jesse Jackson, a Democrat. Under the heading of potential candidates who admit a passing interest, are Virginia Democratic Gov. Douglas Wilder, who concedes that he has fired up an "exploratory committee," and Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, who says he is running a "testing-the-waters campaign."

Our associates Jim Lynch and Scott Sleek looked into these pre-campaigns and found them to be subtle, but persistent. Gore produced a 28-minute video about himself boasting of his impact on millions of people in Tennessee and across the nation. He also sent thousands of Christmas cards to people in New Hampshire, as did Gephardt and Rockefeller. Again, these non-candidates will assure you this has nothing to do with setting their sights on the Oval Office. Gephardt's office explained that his Christmas list "is very large."

There's more to this denial campaigning than the possibility that these Democrats will stick their necks out only to have them chopped off by a very popular incumbent president. Federal election laws place spending caps on each candidate. But those limits aren't imposed until they declare their candidacy, or at least concede they are "testing the waters."

Federal election officials tell us this year's cast of democratic hopefuls are stretching the "I'm-not-running" line to the snapping point. If the stage-shy candidates don't announce by September, they run the risk of getting into the act too late. By then, the nation's key corporate fund-raisers will have committed themselves to someone else. Tardy entrants also risk coming up short on the federal matching funds that will become available next January. To qualify for up to $15 million in federal matching funds, a candidate must raise more than $5,000 in private contributions from 20 different states.

The quest for federal campaign cash explains why Wilder has dispatched campaign veterans to Iowa and New Hampshire and disbursed fund-raising operatives throughout 28 states. It also explains why Rockefeller picked this summer to go on a nationwide stump tour promoting children's issues.

Meanwhile, Tsongas, the only one who admits what he's really doing, stumps for votes across Iowa's farmland.

CHARLEY REESE

Declaration spells out man's rights, wrongs

When we celebrated Independence Day, we celebrated much more than the physical separation of a British colony from the motherland. We celebrated a revolution.

Reese

The Declaration of Independence is much more than a rhetorical flourish. It lays out the three basic premises of the American Revolution.

The first is that the rights of man precede government. The phrase, ". . . all men are created equal and endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights" broke the bonds with the old world where rights, such as they were, were favors granted by the government and where people were, by birth, separated into two classes with different privileges.

The American Revolution said rights were a condition of birth for all people. That was and is a truly revolutionary statement. In our own country today, many Americans, ignorant of their own revolution, suppose that government is the source of our rights. Not so.

The second premise of the revolution spells out the proper role of government. It is to protect these (natural) rights, the Declaration says, that men institute governments.

The old saying that the government is the servant of the people derives from this premise. Its sole function, from the Revolution's point of view, was to protect the rights of the people — not to redistribute income, provide housing and medical care and welfare. These are tasks that people may assign to government if they wish, but the fundamental purpose of government is to protect the people's rights.

So the third basic premise of the Revolution, contained in the Declaration, says when government fails to protect the people or becomes abusive of their rights, then the people have the right to alter or abolish it.

Thus, the American people today, should they decide our present government is abusive, have a right to change it or overthrow it. The American Revolution was in a true sense a permanent revolution since its principles transcend time and place and remain active regardless of circumstances.

A nation of subservient people, however, fearful of their government and toadying and obsequious to its officeholders, are not in a million years capable of a revolution or worthy of liberty.

Sam Adams, one of our Revolutionary leaders, said it well: "If ye love wealth better than liberty, the tranquillity of servitude better than the animating contest of freedom, go home from us in peace. We ask not your counsels or your arms. Crouch down and lick the hands which feed you. May your chains set lightly upon you, and may posterity forget that ye were our countrymen."

Moreover, the Constitution, which laid out the framework of our government, is based on these revolutionary premises. For example, the Second Amendment says the government may not infringe on the people's right to keep and bear arms — an absolute necessity if the people are, in fact, to have the right to alter or abolish a government that becomes abusive. The stupid modern sophistry that only state militias have the right to keep arms contradicts the philosophy as well as the historical record of the Revolution.

State governments, too, are instituted to protect rights and may be altered or abolished if they fail or become abusive. The Declaration says people have all the rights and government has only the few allotted to it by the people for clearly specified purposes.

Of course people are free only if they declare themselves to be free and are willing to fight for their freedom. If liberty be not valued, then no document is going keep the chains off our necks.

Charley Reese's column is distributed by King Features Syndicate.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Court nominee could be a white role model

Not the least of Clarence Thomas' achievements — assuming he gains Ted Kennedy's permission to sit on the U.S. Supreme Court — could be that of black role model. For whites.

Murchison

Thomas, and the rising generation of black conservatives, could do more to bridge the racial abyss than Jesse Jackson and his "rainbow coalition" could accomplish in a century.

Does a black man in public life have to be "politically correct" — committed to big government, big spending and big interference? Skeptical of traditional values? Reflexively distrustful of laws and cops? Reluctant to recommend work and initiative as means of escape from, yes, oppression, and yes, racism?

You might think so, listening to the cant of ideologues from Jesse Jackson to Spike Lee. The ideologues don't trust black conservatives such as Thomas, Walter Williams, Thomas Sowell and Shelby Steele. These they badmouth as sell-outs, "Uncle Toms," "Oreos." How dare they try to redefine the black agenda? How dare they defend free-enterprise economics or traditional standards of morality and behavior?

Thomas and the others extend their hands across the racial abyss: Come on, let's all work and worship; let's love America; let's honor the law. There is plenty of lumber and hardware for the construction of a common, non-racial agenda — the kind Americans thought they were building in the early '60s, when they kicked the props from underneath legal segregation.

Whites, tired of hearing Jesse Jackson pass off quasi-Marxism as the word of the Lord, hunger to hear a black like Clarence Thomas speak of values and yearnings common to all races and peoples.

Naturally the standard bearers on the other side — black or white — aren't going to let him get by with talking common sense. No, no, no. Solidarity matters more than sense. Stray a foot from the Party Line and you're probably in the pay of the Invisible Empire.

Attitudes of this sort lead to philosophical enormities. One starts to judge ideas, not as true or false but as "black" or "white." Thomas, in an interview four years ago with Reason magazine, complained: "You've got a situation recently where the president of the NAACP or one of his spokespersons is defending a kid who punched out a teacher. Give me a break. How in the hell are the kids going to learn, if they can punch out the teacher?"

"I'd have died if I'd done something like that and I went back home to my grandfather — literally died. You've got to have some standards of morality, some strong positive statements about expectations — and those organizations — could do that. Instead, they spend their time telling minority kids that it is hopeless out here. Why is it hopeless? Because Ronald Reagan is making it hopeless."

Is it too much to expect that we'll hear this sort of thing in the confirmation hearings? I have a dream. It is that Ted Kennedy or Howard Metzenbaum, the Senate's leading leftwing millionaires, will glower across the table at Clarence Thomas, asking how a conservative can understand the concerns of poor blacks.

In my dream, Thomas looks through them as if they were swamp gas, explaining civilly that his own rise from poverty was possible because integrity and initiative have no skin coloration, being the values of the human race. Thomas, in my dream, goes on: As humans recognize and live by these values, they prosper; as they live by different values, they sink into hopelessness and despair.

Thomas' own upwardly bound life is the proof of the pudding. It would be fine to hear the foregoing assertions from a prep school graduate. It is even better to hear them from someone who, as he told Reason, "went to segregated schools. You can really learn how to read off those books, even if white folks aren't there. I think segregation is bad, I think it's wrong, I think it's immoral ... but you don't need to sit next to a white person to learn how to read and write. The NAACP needs to say that."

That and a whole lot more.

G-7 leaders warm to Soviet role in IMF

BONN, Germany (AP) — Cautious leaders of the industrialized nations said Thursday they are considering offering Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev technical assistance and a role in international financial institutions.

Leaders of the world's seven economic powers, as well as representatives of the European Community, are expected to discuss some kind of Soviet participation in the International Monetary Fund and World Bank, the West's major global financial bodies, at a summit next week in London.

The summit of leaders of the United States, Britain, France, Canada, Italy and Japan is expected to focus on helping the Soviet Union move to a market economy.

The leaders agree the time is not ripe to offer the Soviet Union money, and want Gorbachev to outline specific economic reforms before considering a Soviet role in international financial bodies.

Gorbachev laid out a Soviet economic program in a 23-page report President Bush received Thursday. But Bush told reporters in Kennebunkport, Maine, the Gorbachev report was unlikely to completely satisfy Western leaders looking for detailed Soviet reforms.

Bush discussed the issue in Maine with Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu, as well as by telephone Thursday with British Prime Minister John Major and French President Francois Mitterrand.

Gorbachev will address the world leaders on Wednesday after the Group of Seven summit.

The meeting is expected to endorse a "special relationship" for the Soviets with the IMF and the World Bank that would entitle Moscow to the expertise of the two financial institutions but no money.

"The special relationship between the IMF and World Bank and the Soviet Union, for us, should be a transitional phase to true and full membership. And not an instrument to keep the Soviet Union waiting at arm's length," said a senior German government official.

The official, who will accompany Chancellor Helmut Kohl to the London summit, briefed reporters on condition he not be further identified.

The official acknowledged that moving the Soviet Union into the IMF and its sister World Bank was complicated and would take time. Nonetheless, he said, full membership must be granted eventually.

Finance ministers of the seven nations agreed June 23 the Soviet Union should be given associate membership in the IMF, which would grant it access to technical assistance but not funds.

Prime Minister John Major said at a news conference Thursday in London the summit participants want to see not only Gorbachev's blueprint but actual implementation of economic reforms.

"There will be a widespread feeling that there should be technical assistance, and I draw the distinction between technical assistance and large sums of money," he said.

Major said the seven leaders are also concerned about high Soviet spending on defense and are watching to see whether Moscow implements previous disarmament agreements.

"We'll have to take those into account in considering what assistance we can offer the Soviet Union in the short and the long-term."

PLO claims forces demobilized

BEIRUT, Lebanon (NYT) — The Palestine Liberation Organization said on Thursday that it had completed the demobilization of thousands of its guerrillas in southern Lebanon by giving up all its heavy and medium weapons to the Lebanese army in the port city of Tyre.

But the Lebanese minister of defense, Michel Murr, said only 50 percent of guerrilla armor in the city 45 miles south of here was delivered on Thursday. All heavy arms must be handed over, the minister demanded. Col. Kassem Jammoul, the commander of government forces deployed around Palestinian strongholds in Tyre on Wednesday, said the quantities of weapons surrendered by the PLO since the morning were significant.

A PLO spokesman said Palestinian guerrillas on Thursday delivered all their heavy and medium weapons to the Lebanese army at camps in Tyre.

The demobilization in Tyre began at daybreak as army trucks hauled artillery, rocket launchers, and anti-aircraft guns and mortars from three main Palestinian areas, Al Rashidiye, Burj al Shemali, and Al Buss. The guerrillas cooperated fully with the Lebanese troops, the PLO spokesman said.

Tyre is about nine miles north of Israel's self-declared security zone in southern Lebanon. Government officials in Jerusalem have said the disarming of guerrillas will not make them give up the zone, which Israel carved out six years ago to guard against guerrilla raids across the border.

Muslim fundamentalists said they again struck inside the security zone, inflicting heavy casualties on a patrol of Israeli forces and the south Lebanese militia. A communique on Thursday by the Islamic military movement, led by the pro-Iranian Party of God, said the raiders returned safely to base.

Shortly thereafter, gunners from the South Lebanon Army pounded the predominantly Shiite Muslim town of Nabatiye with artillery, but no casualties were immediately reported. Security forces said as many as 50 shells crashed in Nabatiye's outskirts.

Nabatiye borders the security zone, which is policed by Israeli troops and the 3,000-man South Lebanon Army.

Scowcroft: U.S. troops to protect Kurds at Turkish border

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, confirmed Thursday that U.S. troops will move to the Turkish border to help protect the Kurds against possible Iraqi vengeance.

"There will be a routine announcement shortly" confirming the troop movement, Scowcroft said in Kennebunkport, Maine, where Bush was meeting with Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu.

The announcement was expected on Friday.

U.S. combat-ready troops will make up one-third of the international rapid deployment force poised to guard the Kurdish refugees, administration sources said.

It will pave the way for the withdrawal of the remaining 1,400 U.S. troops in northern Iraq by July 15, said a military source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

U.S. forces first went into northern Iraq in April after hundreds of thousands of Kurds fled into the mountains in the wake of their failed uprising against the forces of Saddam Hussein.

By mid-May, 11,936 U.S. military personnel and 21,701 coalition forces had joined the military operation designed to bring the Kurdish refugees out of the mountains and shield them from Iraqi military action.

The military source said the so-called "quick reaction" force will contain forces from six nations — the United States, France, Britain, Italy, the Netherlands, Italy and Spain.

U.S., Soviets make progress on START

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union presented new proposals on Thursday for wrapping up a strategic missiles-reduction treaty, but Secretary of State James A. Baker III said tough issues were still resisting solution.

"If we were 96 percent a couple of weeks ago we are 97 percent now," Baker said after 4½ hours of talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander A. Bessmertnykh. "But we've got to be 100 percent."

Completing the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty would set the stage for President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to schedule a summit meeting in Moscow.

At this point, Baker said, "that would be premature."

■ More national news/8C

Baker said the proposals brought from Moscow by Bessmertnykh dealt with two of the remaining issues — how much information on missile tests would be exchanged by the two countries and the definition of new missiles.

"I think we have made some progress on these issues," Baker said.

However, he said a third stumbling block was still a serious problem. It concerns how many warheads certain missiles would carry.

"We are no way home free on that issue," Baker said.

And he quickly added: "Please don't take that to mean we are home free on the others."

Baker and Bessmertnykh will continue their talks Friday. In the meantime, U.S. and Soviet specialists worked on the intricate problems posed in these and other areas.

He said the two sides were making "a good-faith effort" to conclude the START treaty. Bessmertnykh described his talks with Baker as "very good."

The same mixture of optimism and caution marked remarks by President Bush when he met with Bessmertnykh earlier at the White House and by Baker all day long.

"I wish I could stand here and predict for you we can achieve that result," Baker said at the outset. "I cannot."

Japan won't pledge financing for collider

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (HNS) — Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu refused Thursday to pledge Japanese financing for the giant atom smasher planned south of Dallas, and his chief spokesman said any contribution would be less than the United States is seeking.

Coming amid renewed congressional debate on funding for the $8.3 billion superconducting super collider, Kaifu's lack of support could further endanger the massive science project.

The super collider, a 53-mile circular atom smasher to be built near Waxahachie, Texas, would allow examination of the most basic structure of matter and further studies of the origins of the universe.

When initially proposed, $2 billion of the collider's cost was expected to be borne by foreign governments. Although specific amounts to be contributed by individual nations was never spelled out, supporters penciled in Japan for a hefty share.

"I am not prepared today here to say what sort of financial cooperation would be possible," Kaifu said in a joint news conference with President Bush at the first family's vacation home.

While Bush and Kaifu conferred in private, Japanese government spokesman Taizo Watanabe raised additional questions about Tokyo's plan to buy into the collider project.

"I just doubt whether we can meet the expectation 100 percent," Watanabe told reporters, saying he could not estimate even the range of a possible contribution.

"In the form of quality there are many ways of expressing our support," the spokesman said. "It can be in terms of a financial amount, but at the same time we can contribute something in a different manner."

Watanabe cited "the number of scientists to be involved on our part" and said "that is also costly."

Kaifu said he and Bush had not discussed the collider in the two hours of talks held after the Japanese leader arrived in Kennebunkport as part of an around-the-world tour.

Meno: Give schools freedom to break rules

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas' new education commissioner touted a proposal Thursday to work with a handful of schools in developing innovative programs that can break state rules if they improve student learning.

"We need to particularly focus on impacted schools where the tradition of achievement has been poor ... Those are where the new models are most dramatically needed," Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno told the State Board of Education.

The proposal was part of a presentation by Meno stressing a need for Texas to improve student achievement, and to ensure that all students are given an equal opportunity to learn.

The state must define what students need to learn to succeed in life, and find a way to accurately measure achievement, he said. Then, schools should be given flexibility: "The program is negotiable."

There will likely be at least 15 schools initially included in the pilot project, Meno said.

A Texas Education Agency liaison will be appointed to work with the schools, he said. Meno said he would delegate his power to waive certain state rules to the liaison, so regulations don't get in the way of new programs.

Meno said he would ask the Legislature for authority to provide 15 days of staff development time in those schools, on a demonstration basis, which would leave 165 class days. Lawmakers recently voted to increase class days from 175 to 180.

"The idea is to basically make an investment in the people that are there, just like you would with an assembly line. You don't just keep running cars down the assembly line while you're retooling. You need time to go back, rethink it, make sure it's organized for the model you want to develop," he said.

Meno also said that a school accountability system should be provided that focuses on the results they achieve with students and on school improvement.

He said accreditation visits would not be made to school districts until a new process is developed for judging their performance. The visits likely will start up later in the fall, he said.

State Board of Education members praised Meno's emphasis on results and on preparing students for the "real world."

"I believe that we have a unique opportunity in Texas to be a model in the country," said Carolyn Honea Crawford of Beaumont, head of the board.

Richards set to push for more power

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards said Thursday she has received favorable comment on a move that would give her the right to appoint and fire the heads of major state agencies.

"The interesting thing is that the reaction has been very positive, or not at all. I'm kind of puzzled," Richards told reporters.

Texas is one of 10 states that does not have a cabinet form of government modeled on the national presidential administration.

But Richards, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Gib Lewis have agreed that during the special legislative session starting Monday they will push for expansion of the governor's power, according to published reports.

Richards said lawmakers may be sympathetic to the move because they are frustrated in dealing with agencies.

She said "the agencies are not responding. They do create situations in which money is wasted and there is no accountability for it and they want to try and get a handle on it. They think this may be as good a way as any."

In Texas, the governor has only indirect authority over agencies, whose heads are hired by boards filled with appointees chosen by the governor.

But because board members serve staggered six-year terms, the governor seldom has control of the agencies until late in his or her term of office.

Previous governors tried but failed to get authority from the Legislature to hire and fire directors of top agencies.

Richards' push for the authority will be included in eight bills implementing Comptroller John Sharp's government reorganization proposals, Richards spokesman Bill Cryer said.

Under the proposal, the governor would be able to appoint, subject to Senate confirmation, the directors of eight key areas of government. Those include education, human services, criminal justice, environment, transportation, commerce, state purchasing, and licensing.

"In the broadest sense there's a great deal of unanimity" on the proposal among the three leaders, Cryer told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

John Bender, a spokesman for the House speaker, said some members of the House have expressed concern about the governor's initiative, but he said Lewis supports letting the Legislature consider the proposal.

"The idea of making state agencies more accountable certainly has merit," Bender said.

Hundreds watch eclipse at Haley

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Eager sky-watchers turned out in force at Midland's Haley Park on Thursday afternoon to view what some scientists have called the North American "eclipse of the decade."

Conscientiously avoiding looking directly at the spectacle, hundreds of people gathered around various projection devices to watch as the moon obscured some 60 percent of the sun's disk.

"It shows you part of space that you don't have to see through a telescope," said 12-year-old astronomy enthusiast Christopher Stoltz, who was looking at an image of the eclipse projected through a hole in a piece of cardboard. "I came out here because this is probably one of the only times I'll be able to see an eclipse like this."

The Marian Blakemore Planetarium and the West Texas Astronomers club arranged the Haley Park viewing, which lasted the duration of the eclipse — from around 12:45 p.m. until shortly after 3 p.m.

Because of the danger of eye damage caused by looking directly at the sun, viewers at the park contented themselves with looking at images of the eclipse projected onto pieces of cardboard with mirrors and telescopes. Many people used homemade pinhole devices to view the eclipse indirectly.

As the eclipse approached its peak around 2 p.m., the sun's image appeared increasingly crescent-shaped behind the curve of the moon's shadowy edge. Meanwhile, the normally harsh West Texas sunlight grew soft and relatively dim.

"It's a strange kind of half-light," observed Janet Orr, who brought her three children to

5 Texans among top PAC-fund recipients

WASHINGTON (HNS) — Five Texans, including Houston Republican Jack Fields and Beaumont Democrat Jack Brooks, were among the U.S. House's top recipients of campaign funds from business political action committees between 1981-90, the citizens' group Common Cause said Thursday.

Brooks

Fields, a member of the influential House Energy and Commerce Committee, collected $954,630 during the 10-year period, while Brooks, who chairs the powerful House Judiciary Committee, accepted $872,179 in PAC contributions from business groups, the report said.

Fred Wertheimer, president of Washington-based Common Cause, said most of the leading PACs, including the National Association of Realtors and the American Medical Association, often give to both candidates in a race in an effort to buy influence and not to influence a particular election.

"Special-interest PACs aren't contributing to Democrats or Republicans, liberals or conservatives," said Wertheimer, whose organization has long sought public financing of federal elections. "They are investing in incumbents

UTPB, ECISD cooperative results in $167,217 grant

By Myra Lee Salcedo

ODESSA — Working as a team proved financially rewarding for the University of the Texas of the Permian Basin and Ector County public schools.

The U.S. Department of Education awarded a $167,217 grant to the university to fund personnel training, according to information from U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm.

"The money will go toward training bilingual teachers and to our bilingual program," said Susan Lara, UTPB assistant professor of education.

"The purpose of the grant is to fund UTPB students to go to school full-time to become bilingual teachers in public schools," Ms. Lara said. "We may hire an additional teacher to get them through the program faster."

Ms. Lara, who applied for the grant, attributed the university's success in getting the grant to showing a "real community need" for the funding.

Head Start parents have their own class

By Michelle Martin
Associated Press writer

EL PASO — Last year Yvonne Sanchez wouldn't dare approach the principal at the high school her daughter attends.

Now, questioning a procedure at the high school — or any other school her children attend — doesn't seem so scary.

She used to yell at her children a lot when she was angry at something. Now she expresses her anger in a more calm and productive manner and avoids taking her frustrations out on her children.

Mrs. Sanchez says her confidence ballooned after she enrolled in the Family Literacy for Parents class through her son's Head Start center.

The classes are free and open to any parents whose 3-, 4- or 5-year-olds are enrolled in one of El Paso County's Head Start centers.

Sentencing for Bryan Hale postponed until late July

Staff Report

Former psychiatric hospital administrator Bryan Allen Hale's sentencing on obscenity charges has been rescheduled for July 31, U.S. District Court officials confirmed Thursday.

Sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the sentencing was continued from July 17 because of delays in the preparation of a pre-sentence investigation report.

Hale, the former Glenwood Psychiatric Hospital Administrator, pleaded guilty June 7 to federal charges of sending obscene material through the mail.

He could face up to five years in prison and a $250,000 fine for the offense, which occurred in March when Hale sent a 155-page book detailing his sexual fantasies to undercover U.S. Customs Service Agents in Florida.

Investigators said Hale had been communicating with the agents, whom he initially contacted through a computer bulletin board system, in an effort to purchase a videotape containing child pornography.

EVENT: Partial eclipse wows hundreds locally

view the eclipse.

Mrs. Orr and her brood were among about 400 people who attended Thursday's viewing.

"It was about two days ago that I realized that this was going to be huge," said planetarium Director Mark Hartman. "I've done a lot of these, and I've never had this kind of turnout.

"How could I not be impressed? It's not just that people are interested — they're having a good time. People who normally would not be interested in any kind of astronomy came out. They were exposed. And that's what we want."

Most of the people at the viewing said they wanted to look at the eclipse — even if only indirectly — because of the rarity of such an event.

"It comes less often than the Olympics," quipped Pat Akin, a U.S. Postal Service letter carrier who brought her daughter, 10-year-old Alyson Thomas, to Haley Park on Thursday afternoon.

"She'll be 36 the next time this comes around," Ms. Akin said.

Jeremy Lassetter, an 11-year-old Santa Rita Elementary School student, said he was impressed by the eclipse's magnitude.

"One reason I came out here is because I'm probably not going to see another solar eclipse like this that takes up so much of the sun," he said.

Unfortunately for eclipse-crazy Texans, the eclipse's path of totality — where the sun was completely obscured by the moon — did not include the continental United States.

The moon's full shadow passed directly over the island of Hawaii and part of Maui. It hit North America at the Baja peninsula before moving across the Mexican mainland.

The maximum eclipse was visible along a stretch of the Mexican coast between Mazatlan and Puerta Vallarta.

In the Permian Basin, where only about two-thirds of the sun was obscured, the darkness of totality never loomed. And a spokesman at Midland's National Weather Service Office said local temperatures (the high Thursday was 92) were not affected by the eclipse.

Nevertheless, most people agreed the eclipse was an awesome sight.

"It's a unique event," said Melissa Perkins, a 19-year-old Texas A&M student home for summer vacation. "You can't look at it directly — that's the only bad part."

CLASS: Goal is to build parents' confidence

(From 1B)

During the past school year, 126 parents enrolled and 61 completed the 16-week program.

Through the classes, parents learn to speak and write in English, how to better communicate with spouses and their children and how to help their children build academic skills.

Parents also learn more about budgeting, health, drug awareness, careers, family planning, first aid and citizenship.

A major goal of the program is to help build the confidence of the parents, said Frances Provencio, coordinator of the program. Teachers encourage parents to talk during class sessions and at home.

Some of the parents are afraid of dialing the emergency number 911 or don't know how to get an identification card because they fear authority figures, Provencio said.

Agents delivered the tape, entitled "Educating Valerie," to Hale's Glenwood office on April 8 and arrested him for receiving child pornography. Subsequent searches of Hale's home and office uncovered photocopies of a magazine entitled "Lolita" that also contained child pornography, investigators said.

A federal grand jury later indicted Hale, 47, on two counts of receiving child pornography and one count of sending obscene material through the mail. If convicted of receiving child pornography, Hale would have faced up to 10 years in prison on each count.

A plea agreement that saw those counts dropped also led to the dismissal of state burglary charges against Hale in Ector County.

Those charges stemmed from the theft of some documents from the Odessa home of one of Hale's Glenwood co-workers, Marilee Anne Kyler, in March.

Hale resigned his Glenwood post following his arrest and has been replaced at the hospital.

is really short of bilingual teachers. I worked with Gene Buinger, (ECISD) superintendent in preparing the grant. I think working together really strengthened the proposal."

The assistant professor of education said that some students enrolled in the program are already employed by ECISD. "They will be the first ones to benefit from the grant," she said.

Ms. Lara said about 140 applications were received for 30 grants. "It's very competitive," she said. "You never know what to expect. You just try to write the best proposal you can."

The university expects to receive the grant in September.

EARNEST KIKER
Extension service plans garden tour

Summer is here, gardens are producing and the need for proper gardening and insect management has arrived. Ector and Midland County Extension Services will host a bi-county vegetable tour on July 17 at two outstanding farms in the Gardendale area.

Deborah Benge, extension horticulturist for Ector and Midland counties, said anyone interested in vegetable or fruit production, whether they have a small private garden of large commercial farm, is encouraged to attend. No pre-registration is required.

Kiker

The tour will begin at Hoppers Grocery in Gardendale at the corner of Texas 158 and Hollyhock at 6 p.m. Participants will travel by personal vehicles to the two tour gardens. The tour will be informal, with a question and answer format.

Sammy Helmers, District 6 extension horticulture specialist, will be the tour guide and answer any questions pertaining any aspects of vegetable or fruit production.

To answer any questions about insect management, Victor Lucero, extension entomologist for Midland and Martin counties, will be available. Lucero said participants will have an opportunity to learn about a variety of things including insect identification, biological and chemical control methods and timing and safety of applying pesticides.

Also on the tour to help answer questions will be Jim Word, CEA-agriculture for Ector County, Earnest Kiker, CEA-agriculture for Midland County and Benge.

ONe of the gardens on the tour belongs to H.E. Diller of west Gardendale. Diller will have grapes, pecan and fruit trees, tomatoes, okra, sweet potatoes black-eyed peas, squash, bell and green chili peppers green beans to see. Diller, a three-year gardener, said he uses drip irrigation and microsprinklers to irrigate his almost five-acre garden. He said the produce sold from his house and to area retail grocery stores. Diller said his specialty is 10-15y onions, which are large, sweet and a favorite of the consumers.

Bill Holiman of least Gardendale owns the second garden on the tour. He will have blackberries, pecan trees, tomatoes, sweet corn, black-eyed peas, green beans, squash, watermelons, cantaloupes, cucumbers, andokra. Holliman, a four-year commercial garden grower, said he sells produce from his house and through the Permian Basin Farmer's Market. He said irrigation is done mostly through a drip system, but some micro-sprinklers are used whenit is not windy. Holiman said he thinks participants will take home many good growing techniques and ideas for their gaardens.

If you have any questions about the tour, contact the Midland County Extension office at 687-1351 or theEctor County Extenstion office at 915-335-3071.

ATTENTION CATTLE OWNERS: A two-day short course will be offered at the Texas A&M University System Computer Training andEducation Center outside of Plainview July 23-24.

This program will cover several software programs pertaining to cattle. Participants will receive hands-on instruction in operating the programs. Training will be from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day.

Deadline for registration is July 17. For more information call call Jane Green at the Texas A&M Agricultural Research and Extension Center in Lubbock at 806-746-6101 or the Midland County Extension Service office.

Earnest C. Kiker is Midland County Extension Agent for Agriculture.

Second currency
Food stamps used to purchase weapons, sex, drugs and house

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food stamp fraud has become so common that the coupons are being used as "a second currency" to purchase weapons, drugs, sex and, in a recent case, a $30,000 house, government investigators say.

Investigating food stamp fraud is but one of many activities touted by the Agriculture Department's Office of Inspector General in a report to Congress covering the first half of the fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

The IG function is split into two basic operations: audit, which looks at how money is spent and whether spending is above board, and investigation.

Many times an audit will uncover wrongful or even shady procedures that will signal the entry of IG investigators. And auditors are invaluable in sorting out which beans wind up where, and why.

Many of the activities described by Inspector General Leon Snead reflect longstanding probes and examinations of USDA operations, including food stamps, rural loans, crop insurance and commodity programs.

"During this period, our audits resulted in $20.2 million in recoveries and collections, and $449 million in management commitments to use funds more efficiently," Snead said. "In addition, our investigations resulted in 334 indictments, 409 convictions, and $6.1 million in fines, restitutions and recoveries."

'Our ivestigations resulted in 334 indictments, 409 convictions, and $6.1 million in fines, restitutions and recoveries.'

— Inspector General Leon Snead, whose office conducts investigations of food stamp fraud

The report, sent to Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan on April 30 and released by the department last month, said the IG office "continues to spend a significant amount of its investigative time investigating fraud" in the food stamp program, the report said. The $18 billion program is expected to serve an average of more than 22 million low-income people per month this year.

Some examples of fraud cited in the IG report:

—In Michigan, a yearlong effort by federal, state and local authorities ended with the arrest of 57 persons. Undercover agents purchased about $27,000 worth of food stamps, and seized $78,000 in cash, 38 firearms, drugs and nearly $179,000 in counterfeit currency.

—An investigation in the St. Louis, Mo., area led to the arrest of 19 individuals on charges of food stamp trafficking and receiving stolen property. Agents searched the property of eight authorized food stamp dealers, recovering guns, drugs, counterfeit audio cassette tape recordings and thousands of dollars worth of other stolen property.

Local authorities also seized about $100,000 in cash from safe-deposit boxes owned by some of the individuals.

—A New Jersey real estate broker was arrested and charged with food stamp trafficking for selling a house to an IG undercover agent for $30,000 in food stamps.

The report also found continuing problems involving commodity operations of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. It recommended a tightening of controls over public warehouse storage operations to protect against losses and contamination.

Heat, dryness puts stress on most crops

COLLEGE STATION — Hot, dry weather in Texas is causing stress to ranges, pastures and late-planted crops but is pushing harvesting of hay, corn, sorghum, fruit, melons and vegetables, agriculture experts said.

Short soil moisture problems are found in the Panhandle, South Plains and Rolling Plains, and in Far West, Southwest and South Texas, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service reports.

Adequate to short soil moisture is the norm in west central, north central, central and south central regions, and adequate to surplus moisture is reported in East and Southeast Texas, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, Extension Service director.

Carpenter said frequent showers have interrupted sorghum cutting along the Coastal Bend caused cotton boll rot in some late-maturing fields. Haying continues between rains. Pastures, however, are improving and livestock is in good to excellent condition.

He said South Texas ranges and pastures are still only in fair condition after scattered rains during the past week. Corn is 20 percent harvested, and sorghum 25 percent. Cotton picking should start soon.

In Southwest Texas, eastern counties are generally green and making good progress with crops, western counties are too dry, said Joe Pena of Uvalde, Extension Service economist.

"Although forage in pastures and ranges is maturing and entering the summer dormant season, livestock remain in good condition," Pena said. "It appears that ranchers will have to provide maintenance feeding during the summer months unless we get more rain in this district."

Although corn, sorghum, sugar beets, cotton and fruit are making good progress in the Panhandle, soil moisture is drying fast, said Paul E. Gross of Amarillo, Extension Service district director.

"Ranges and pastures are suffering from heat and moisture stress but are still providing good grazing, and cattle are in good condition," Gross said.

The following specific crop, livestock and weather reports for the past week were filed by district Extension Service directors:

PANHANDLE: Soil moisture is adequate to short. Yields of the completed wheat harvest vary with moisture conditions: Corn, sorghum, sugar beets, cotton, peanuts and fruit are growing well but ranges and pastures need rain. Cattle are in good shape.

SOUTH PLAINS: Soil moisture is mainly short and most crops need rain. Cotton is 50 percent squared, sorghum is heading and corn is being irrigated. The wheat harvest is essentially complete,and potato and onion harvesting is active.

ROLLING PLAINS: Soil moisture is drying fast, and all ranges and dryland crops are suffering for rain. Wheat land is being plowed. Late cotton is squaring. Grasshoppers and livestock flies are a problem. Pecan development is good but webworms are active.

FAR WEST: Soil moisture is short to adequate, depending on where rain has fallen. Cotton growth is mixed, varying from good to fair. Pink bollworms are increasing. Livestock condition is fair to good and maintenance feeding continues. Sheep prices are stronger and ranchers are preparing for market the 1990-91 calf crop. Vegetable and fruit prices are stable.

SOUTHWEST: Scattered rains have helped. The eastern half of the district is green, while the southwestern portion remains too dry. Ranges, pastures and livestock are in good condition but maintenance feeding will be necessary if more rain fails to come soon. Corn and sorghum look good and a large crop is predicted. Cotton is making excellent growth, with high yields and quality anticipated. Onion harvesting is almost complete. The cantaloupe market is strong but watermelons prices have sagged.

Gunman shoots self after standoff

The State

PASADENA (AP) — A gunman who killed a police officer and then held a woman hostage during a nearly 21-hour siege fatally shot himself Thursday to end the ordeal.

Marvin Harris, 40, committed suicide about 9:40 a.m. while he held Jean Lina, 60, hostage in her home in the Houston suburb adjacent to the city's southeast side.

Harris shot himself in the head with the same .30-caliber rifle he used to kill Pasadena police officer Jeffrey Ginn Wednesday. Mrs. Lina heard the shot, but thought it might have come from outside, where officers had been playing loud music and even tapes of breaking glass.

She yelled to Harris, as she had done whenever she made a move during the ordeal, telling him she was going into the kitchen to get a drink of water. She saw his feet lying on the floor, but thought he may have been sleeping.

About a half-hour later, Mrs. Lina returned to the kitchen and saw Harris' body and fled. The police had phoned the home repeatedly after the shot was heard, but got no answer.

"He did not harm her physically," Pasadena Homicide Detective James Anderson said. "She's rather shook up about the incident, of course. She's been through quite an ordeal here."

Mrs. Lina emerged from the house with her arms raised. Her husband, Herald, who also had briefly been taken hostage Wednesday, was immediately reunited with his wife.

A son-in-law said the family declined to comment.

James Epdon of the Harris County Medical Examiner's office, said Harris was shot once in the head. He was conducting an autopsy late Thursday.

The incident began when Ginn stopped in front of Harris's home because he saw smoke coming from the back yard where police say Harris was burning marijuana leaves in a barbecue pit.

Harris fired one shot at Ginn, then followed him across the street. When the wounded officer knelt against a tree, Harris shot him twice more from point-blank range. Witnesses said Ginn never drew his revolver, which Harris later took.

Harris's family said the gunman suffered from schizophrenia since he was a teen-ager and that he had a persecution complex, believing anyone in a uniform was "out to get him." He had been prescribed medication but they didn't know whether he had been taking it.

"I don't know what to say except I love him and I'll be praying for him and I've been praying for him in his life," said Janet Harris, the gunman's sister.

Buddy Jaeger, 40, in whose lawn the officer was killed, said Harris often spoke about killing police. Jaeger said he spoke to Harris half an hour before Ginn was killed and the gunman again repeated his threat.

Killer bees get blame in fatal attack on dog

LOS FRESNOS (AP) — Experts are almost certain that the so-called "killer" bees attacked and killed a dog in Los Fresnos, according to the Honey Bee Identification Lab at Texas A&M.

Lab manager Leon Praetorius said the sample will be sent to the Agricultural Research Service honey bee identification lab in Beltsville, Md., for confirmation, possibly by Friday.

"It was about 96.6 probability that it's Africanized," Praetorius said.

A 1-year-old chow-German shepherd named Kuma was attacked Tuesday afternoon by hundreds of bees nesting in the wall of a house. The dog was on a 20-foot chain when the bees may have been agitated by the noise of a lawn mower, said the dog's owner, Mike Tanner.

"I'll tell you this way, if you pulled back his fur, you couldn't see any skin because there were so many stings," Tanner said. "He was in agony during the last two hours. He died in convulsions."

Tanner said his wife, Yolanda, and a gardener mowing their lawn at the time also were stung by the swarm, but they were not seriously injured.

Firefighters with the Los Fresnos Volunteer Fire Department sprayed soapy water on Kuma, but it didn't drive off the bees.

The dog died about 9 p.m. after he was taken to a veterinarian.

Texas A&M Agricultural Extension Service entomologist Alton "Stormy" Sparks said it could be the first mass stinging attack of a domestic animal in Texas.

Africanized bees were first trapped in the United States last October near Hidalgo. The bees are descendants of African queen bees that escaped from an experiment in Brazil in 1957.

About 100 Africanized honey bee swarms migrating from Mexico have been found and destroyed by officials in Texas. But as many as 200 additional swarms may have eluded trappers, said John Thomas, entomologist in College Station.

A Brownsville man was stung by Africanized bees last May, becoming the first person attacked by the aggressive insects since they crossed the border into the United States last year.

Two dodge execution in videotaped death

TYLER (AP) — Two half-brothers seen on videotape beating, kicking and stabbing a lawman who was killed after interrupting a marijuana shipping journey were spared the death penalty Thursday.

Jurors recommended life in prison without parole for Baldemar Sambrano Villarreal, 29, and a 40-year term for Reynaldo Sambrano Villarreal, 25. The death penalty was possible under a 1988 federal law stiffening sentences for killing law officers during drug crimes.

U.S. District Judge Robert M. Parker, who said he would impose the death penalty if jurors favored it, followed the jury's sentencing recommendations.

The men were convicted July 1 in the fatal stabbing and shooting of Nacogdoches County Constable Darrell Lunsford.

Lunsford, whose patrol car had been equipped with a video camera, stopped the Villareals Jan. 23 as they and another man tried to transport marijuana from Houston to Chicago.

The camera showed the three men beating, kicking and stabbing Lunsford. Lunsford was shot out of the camera's range. The tape — which was played for the jury — showed Baldemar Villarreal with the officer's gun.

Brewer's donation angers MADD

AUSTIN (AP) — A brewer's $100,000 donation to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department is being criticized by Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

But an agency spokesman defends the donation, part of Anheuser-Busch Inc.'s "Bud Man" promotion, saying it can help Texas in an era of tight budgets. The money will be used to increase public access to unique state lands.

Parks and Wildlife could net as much as $250,000 from the ad campaign, in which the brewery places "Bud Man" stickers in selected packages of beer.

"It's completely irresponsible," said Kirk Brown, who chairs the Texas chapter of MADD. "State agencies shouldn't be taking money from private promotionals, especially when it involves alcohol."

Prices retreat

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices showed a modest retreat Thursday in lifeless trading that snapped a four-day rally.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in August settled at $21.29 per barrel, down 14 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The retreat prompted local crude purchasers such as Texaco Trading and Transportation and Phillips to lower their posted price 25 cents to $20.00

"After a strong move yesterday, the market just simply took a respite and corrected slightly," said Thomas P. Blakeslee, an energy analyst at Pegasus Econometric Group Inc., in Hoboken, N.J.

There was no major news moving the petroleum futures, though traders showed some concern that a Shell pipeline leak in the North Sea will take a little longer than anticipated to be fixed.

Natural gas prices were mixed, with contracts for delivery in August settling at $1.157 per 1,000 cubic feet, down .3 cent.

Stocks advance

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices advanced moderately Thursday as traders took a slightly more sanguine view of the outlook for interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had fallen 17.22 points over the two previous sessions, climbed 14.98 points to 2,959.75.

Overnight in Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.01 yen to a closing 138.67 yen.

In New York, gold fell $2.20 a troy ounce to $367.80 on the Commodity Exchange.

Gold fell in London to a late bid price of $368.25 a troy ounce from $370.55 per ounce late Wednesday.

Arco unveils 'clean' gasoline

Company claims formula cuts some pollutants by one third

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Atlantic Richfield Co. has introduced a new fuel that the Los Angeles-based oil company says could cut vehicle smog emissions by 37 percent.

But the gasoline may never be sold at the pumps if it does not meet the anticipated new pollution-control standards.

Called EC-X, the gasoline is the third in a line of "EC," or emission control fuels developed and sold by Arco in the last two years. Arco officials said they hope the new gasoline would set the industry standard for fuels that have been reformulated in order to reduce pollution.

Arco Chairman Lodwrick O. Cook said if used in all cars and trucks, the fuel would cut vehicular emissions in California by 3.8 million pounds a day, the equivalent of taking a third of all cars and trucks off the road.

Compared with conventional gasoline, it would cut emissions of carbon monoxide by 25 percent, toxic compounds by 47 percent and total hydrocarbons by 580,000 pounds, he said.

EC-X would cost motorists about 16 cents a gallon more than current brands, while methanol-blend fuels are expected to increase prices by 25 to 40 cents.

Arco and other oil producers have been making suggestions to the California Air Resources Board on potential new standards to meet the federal Clean Air Act. The rules are due out this October and will be enacted in 1996.

The new fuel — essentially Arco's suggestion for the standards — met with mixed reviews from state and local air quality officials.

South Coast Air Quality Management District officials said they were "impressed" with the results. Norton Younglove, the AQMD board chairman, applauded Arco's effort to create a cleaner burning fuel, but doubted that state air quality officials would adopt the standards wholesale.

The district covers most of Los Angeles, Orange, San Bernardino and Riverside counties.

"There is no question that it is a very, very long step forward," Younglove said. But he added, "I think the question is whether (the state) will set the standard where this will meet it."

State air quality officials have found Arco's testing methods to be sound, but are unlikely to adopt the company's new formula wholesale, said Bill Sessa, Air Resources Board spokesman.

Job claims drop, boost economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Initial claims for unemployment benefits dropped 35,000 in the last week in June, the seventh decline in eight weeks, the government said Thursday. Analysts cited the report as evidence the economy continues to recover.

"It's the strongest signal there is right now that something has begun," contended economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch Capital Markets in New York. Never have the claims reports improved "as much as they have so far in a recession without the recovery being for real," he said.

"It's consistent with a continued recovery," added economist Allen Sinai of the Boston Co. "We have to conclude that hiring is picking up, that layoffs are continuing but at a reduced rate and that the economy is creating more jobs."

The Labor Department said 388,000 Americans filed new claims for unemployment benefits during the week ending June 29, down from 423,000 during the previous week.

It was the third consecutive drop following a 47,000 jump during the first week in June. Analysts said part of the sharp rise in early June likely was attributable to the Memorial Day holiday, since workers had fewer days in the holiday week to file claims and thus may have waited until the next week to visit an unemployment office.

Claims had fallen for four straight weeks in May, the longest stretch of declines since October 1982 at the end of the previous recession. They peaked at more than a half-million in March.

The report said the number of the nation's labor force actually receiving unemployment benefits for the week ending June 22 fell to 3.2 percent from 3.3 percent the previous week. There were 3.4 million persons claiming benefits.

Weak gas prices force drilling cuts

N.Y. Times News Service

Deeply depressed natural gas prices are leaving energy producers strapped for cash, prompting a decline in drilling activity and forcing layoffs of oil industry workers.

On the flip side, the downturn in prices is allowing utilities to purchase gas more cheaply, with consumers the ultimate beneficiary.

Fort Worth gas producer Ray Richey says he is getting as little as 95 cents per 1,000 cubic feet for gas he is selling at current spot-market prices — the lowest price he has received since the 1970s.

"You still have a tremendous amount of gas looking for markets, and it's just driving prices through the floor," he said.

Dallas oilman T. Boone Pickens says his firm, Mesa Limited Partnership, is receiving the lowest prices it has gotten for gas in at least 11 years.

During the energy boom of the early 1980s, Mesa once executed a deal in which it sold a portion of its gas for an astronomical $11.50 per 1,000 cubic feet. But this year "there are some cases where we've had to take under $1," Pickens said.

Halliburton Co. of Dallas, a large oilfield services firm, said Tuesday that it plans to lay off 1,200 workers as a result of a downturn in drilling and other oilfield activity.

"Natural gas prices are the principal driving factor necessitating the reduction," Halliburton spokesman Guy Marcus said.

Shell Oil also cited low gas prices as a contributing factor in its plans to lay off as many as 4,650 employees, or 15 percent of its U.S. work force.

The number of active U.S. drilling rigs tumbled last week to 859, a 15 percent decline from the already-depressed level of 1,011 working rigs a year ago. More than 50 percent of rigs were once drilling primarily for gas, but only 40 percent are now drilling gas wells.

Energy analysts cite five factors that have driven gas prices to unexpected lows:

MCorp wins ruling over FDIC

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge, for the second time this year, has ruled regulators violated banking law in a dispute related to the collapse of MCorp, once Texas' second-largest bank holding company.

U.S. District Judge Robert Porter, in a summary judgment for which no trial was held, ruled Wednesday the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. withheld money owed MCorp's New Braunfels bank after their 1989 takeover.

The $17.1 million in dispute was lent to MBank Dallas by MBank New Braunfels.

After regulators seized the Dallas bank and 19 others owned by MCorp, MBank New Braunfels was told it could get only 80 percent of the money, the same percentage creditors would receive for claims from the liquidation of MBank Dallas.

But because some MBank Dallas creditors got 100 percent of their claims, Porter said regulators violated the National Bank Act.

The New Braunfels bank was one of five to survive regulators' takeover of MCorp.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Investors want protection from inflation

By Bill Doyle

Q. My wife and I are in our early 60s and recently retired. We get a pension of $450 per month and will start getting $1,200 monthly Social Security benefits very shortly. The style in which we would like to live will cost $60,000 annually, after taxes.

Doyle

We have $450,000 in individual retirement accounts. Of this, $400,000 is in a GNMA mutual fund and $50,000 is in a money market mutual fund. We have $350,000 in U.S. Treasury bills. Our home is paid for and worth $275,000. We have country property which produces negligible net income but which we can sell for $250,000 when we need money. We have no debts.

I have suggested we move $100,000 from Treasury bills into a utility mutual fund as some kind of inflation protection. But my wife insists anything such as that is too risky.

Do you agree with her or with me? Or do you have some other suggestions?

Q. I'll side with you. A utility mutual fund — one holding stocks of electric, gas, water and/or telephone companies as investments — certainly is riskier than Treasury bills, which have the full backing of our federal government.

But share values of utility funds, besides paying reasonable dividends, have generally risen over the years, thereby providing the inflation protection you mention and logically should be seeking. Also, utility funds aren't a great deal riskier than GNMA funds — those holding Government National Mortgage Association securities.

I'd say putting part of your fat retirement nest egg into a utility fund will be a wise investment move. It's a cinch you are aware your nest egg is a good deal larger than the amounts the majority of retirees have been able to sock away. Your desired style of living is out of reach for most folks.

Based on your letter, to enjoy that high livin', you will have to sell your country property and invest that $250,000 where it will produce substantial income. Besides that, you probably will have to start making withdrawals from your IRAs.

Q. I inherited $150,000 and, wanting to invest it, went to a financial adviser at my bank. He advised me to buy shares of a mutual fund holding municipal bonds and paying tax-free dividends. I signed on the dotted line, not knowing what I was signing. The adviser never showed me the mutual fund's prospectus.

Four days later, I got a prospectus from the fund company. It shows the fund has a sales charge which took close to $5,000 of my money right off the top. The fund also has a 12b-1 plan and other annual expenses which come to 1.5 percent annually.

I am 75 years old and feel I was deceived by the adviser. Is there any way I can get my money back? I wrote the head man at the fund company. He said no, because I signed a paper.

A. You have a good shot at recovering that money, if you can substantiate that the adviser did not follow disclosure requirements. Every sales effort for mutual fund shares must be accompanied or preceded by delivery of the effective prospectus.

That's one of the rules laid down by the Securities and Exchange Commission to implement the Investment Company Act, the basic federal law covering mutual funds.

Get in touch again with the head honcho at the mutual fund, as well as the top brass at your bank and its brokerage affiliate. Let them know you will file a complaint with the National Association of Securities Dealers, if you do not get your $150,000 back.

Q. Recently, I redeemed 803 shares of a mutual fund at $9.63 a share. I was charged a $387 closing fee. The bid and asked prices on this fund are the same. If it is a no-load fund, how come I had to pay such a large fee?

A. It's not a true no-load fund. The $387 with which you were socked is a contingent deferred sales charge — a rear-end load — starting at 6 percent and declining by 1 percentage point annually.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices advanced moderately Thursday as traders took a slightly more sanguine view of the outlook for interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had fallen 17.22 points over the two previous sessions, climbed 14.98 points to 2,959.75.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 7 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume came to 157.69 million shares as of 4 p.m. EDT, against 178.20 million at the same point Wednesday.

In the credit markets, prices of long-term government bonds rose about $5 for each $1,000 in face value, lowering their yields to the 8.46 percent-8.51 percent range.

Gains in both bond and stock prices followed word from the White House late Wednesday that President Bush will reappoint Alan Greenspan as chairman of the Federal Reserve.

Analysts said that news settled the question of whether traders would be dealing with Greenspan or a new and unfamiliar face at the Fed in the months ahead.

But it appeared that lingering doubts about the outlook for economic growth and corporate profits prevented the advance from gathering much momentum.

In remarks to the House Banking Committee, Greenspan said it wasn't possible yet to take the measure of the budding economic recovery's potential strength and durability. He also declined to characterize interest-rate prospects.

Keating to plead Fifth Amendment

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Charles H. Keating Jr. will refuse to testify this week at a hearing into whether he and six others looted $130.5 million from Lincoln Savings and Loan, his attorney said Wednesday.

Under an agreement with thrift regulators, Keating will sign a paper exercising his right against self-incrimination. The deal will let him avoid having to take the Fifth Amendment repeatedly on the witness stand.

In contrast to a criminal trial, Keating's refusal to testify can be viewed in a negative light by Administrative Law Judge Paul J. Clerman.

Clerman is presiding over efforts by the Office of Thrift Supervision to recover the money and bar Keating from the industry.

Keating's declaration cites pending or threatened state and federal criminal proceedings as a reason for the refusal to testify.

The hearing, in its sixth day Wednesday, will be recessed indefinitely Friday so Keating's trial on 21 counts of securities fraud can begin in state court on Aug. 2.

It will be the first criminal action stemming from the $2.6 billion collapse of Irvine-based Lincoln, the costliest thrift failure in history.

Keating, a strident critic of S&L regulators, may be allowed to testify at the civil hearing later if the judge agrees, said his attorney, Stephen C. Neal.

Neal stressed that Keating was refusing only to testify this week about the first of four transactions that the OTS says constituted looting of Lincoln. However, there was no assurance the judge would allow him to return to the stand later.

So far, the hearing has focused on allegations that Lincoln lost $12.3 million from the improper funding of an employee stock ownership plan, or ESOP, set up in November 1985 at Lincoln's parent, American Continental Corp.

The OTS contends Keating, his family and top executives enriched themselves by selling stock to the ESOP, which they controlled. They are accused of paying for the ESOP with loans guaranteed by Lincoln in violation of banking regulations.

Greenspan's return locks up interest rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alan Greenspan's reappointment as head of the Federal Reserve virtually assures the nation's chief monetary policy-making body will not lower rates any time soon to spur the economy's recovery, analysts say.

"Monetary policy is on hold for the rest of the year," said Bruce Steinberg, an economist with Merrill Lynch Capital Markets in New York.

And because of that, said Allen Sinai of the Boston Co., "there is a potential clash with the administration" which would like to see further easing of rates to stimulate economic growth.

Few economists believe President Bush had any choice but to renominate Greenspan to a second four-year term as Fed chairman. His current term ends Aug. 11. The renomination requires Senate confirmation, but little opposition is expected.

"There didn't seem to be any other choice," Sinai said. "The puzzle is, why it took so long."

Bush has acted quickly in naming replacements for Cabinet members who left the administration and spent just four days deciding on a successor to retiring Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall.

His delay in announcing Greenspan's reappointment had raised speculation that the administration was seeking to pressure the central bank to keep interest rates down in hopes of ensuring recovery from the recession.

But Bush said in announcing the reappointment on Wednesday that while Greenspan has "been a fierce fighter" against inflation, "I think he also is as strongly committed to growth."

Robert G. Dederick, an economist with the Northern Trust Co. in Chicago, agreed with that assessment.

"He wants growth," Dederick said.

PRICES: Drilling declines

(From 5B)

duced demand sharply, leaving large supplies of gas in storage as spring arrived.

■ The national recession, which further trimmed energy demand.

■ The customary seasonal downturn in gas consumption that occurs in spring and summer.

■ Increases in gas supplies as a result of imports from Canada and successful drilling programs in areas such as the San Juan Basin of New Mexico and the Arkoma Basin of Arkansas and Oklahoma.

■ Deregulation of gas markets and reduced reliance on long-term contracts that help ensure producers higher fixed prices for their gas.

Texas, as the nation's leading natural gas producer, feels the effect of lower gas prices perhaps more than any other state.

Pickens says depressed gas prices are a prime reason for his company's expectation that this year it will drill less than half the 151 wells it drilled in 1990. About 90 percent of the company's energy reserves are in the form of natural gas or natural gas liquids such as ethane, propane and butane.

In the Gulf of Mexico, where much of the drilling traditionally is in search of gas, only 59 percent of the 194 drilling rigs are contracted for work. Approximately 20 rigs have fled the gulf in the past year, relocating to areas such as the North Sea where there are stronger economic incentives to drill for oil.

Both electric and gas utilities are among the beneficiaries of the lower gas prices, and consumers ultimately will gain, spokesmen for the utilities say.

Gas producers now find themselves in a "crazy new world" with more volatile prices as a result of government deregulation of gas markets, Houston investment banker Matt Simmons said.

"We turned the gas market into a casino," he said.

Or, as energy analyst Leonard Mitchell of the Eppler, Guerin & Turner securities firm in Dallas said in a recent report, "During the early 1980s, 80 percent of natural gas was sold on a (long-term) contract basis. Gas prices were higher, but fairly stable. Today less than 20 percent of gas is sold under long-term contract, while 80 percent is sold at much lower spot prices. The result is a much wider swing in seasonal gas prices."

In recent years, there have been repeated predictions that gas prices would rise sharply in the early 1990s, as demand for the environmentally attractive fuel increased.

"Katie saved $124 on her car warranty service."

Katie's friend, John, bought a new car a few months back. When it came time for the 5,000-mile warranty maintenance service John took his car back to the dealer. He got a bill for $194. He got a lubrication, oil and filter change and tune-up.

John's good friend, Tom, who works for TuneUp Masters®, told John that TuneUp Masters would have done the very same work for about $70. "But, Tom," John said, "my warranty wouldn't be valid if I didn't take it back to the dealer."

"Yes, it would," Tom said, "because at TuneUp Masters we will validate your warranty book just like the dealer. It's not who does the work that makes the warranty maintenance valid. Just that the work is done."

So John told Katie, and Katie went to TuneUp Masters for her warranty work. It was, indeed, about $70, and she saved $124. And her warranty is still valid. And if you bring this article with you you'll receive $5 off on a tune-up or $5 off on an oil change and lube, or $5 off on each. At TuneUp Masters.

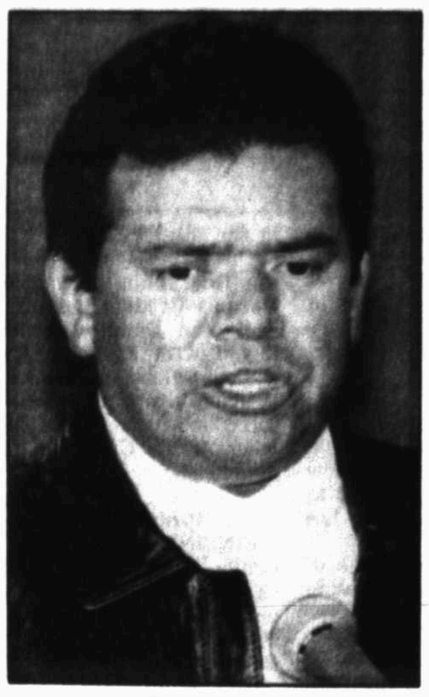
Fernando looks Midland bound

Angel GM calls starts by lefty 'not definite, but very positive'



Valenzuela

By Jimmy Patterson
and Bill Price
Staff Writers

Local baseball fans may have missed out the first time Fernando Valenzuela threw for the Class AA Midland Angels this season, but Valenzuela and Midland both got a reprieve Thursday.

Despite less than spectacular outings in the major leagues this season, the California Angels are willing to give Valenzuela another chance. But Valenzuela, who earned his fame while pitching for the Los Angeles Dodgers, will have to log more minor league time to get back to "The Show."

According to Midland Angel general manager Monty Hoppel, if eveything goes as planned, Valenzuela's stay in the minors would include a three-game stop with the Midland Angels, including two starts at Angels Stadium. After one stint with the Midland team while it was on the road, Valenzuela's first start at Angels Stadium could come as early as this weekend, during the Angels' series against the Tulsa Drillers.

Valenzuela, waived last Friday by the Angels, agreed to a minor-league contract with California on Wednesday. Valenzuela's agent, Tony DeMarco, his attorney, Dick Moss, and Angels senior vice president Dan O'Brien came to terms on a deal that will send the lefthander to the minors for at least 30 days.

"If everything goes well, he is coming to Midland. The only thing that hasn't been released is the day he'll pitch. The plan is to send him to Midland for a couple of weeks, maybe three starts.'

— Midland Angels general manager Monty Hoppel

"If everything goes well," Hoppel said, "he is coming to Midland. The only thing that hasn't been released is the day he'll pitch.

"The plan is to send him to Midland for a couple of weeks, maybe three starts, then to Triple A Edmonton for his three starts to make up his 30 days."

Hoppel said according to the information he has received, an official decision on when exactly Valenzuela would start for Midland would be made Friday morning.

Hoppel said the hope is for Valenzuela to make his first start at Angels Stadium no later than Monday, so the lefthander can work in two starts during the 10-game homestand. The Angels, who play five home games against Tulsa, followed by five against Shreveport, will be in town through July 20 before leaving on their next road trip.

"If he starts Monday, then the next start would be next Saturday (July 20)," Hoppel speculated. "If he starts a third time, it would probably be on the road.

"If he's going to start three times for us, we'd like to see him twice. That's what we're shooting for."

Hoppel added that while Valenzuela's appearances in Midland were "not a done deal, but (California officials) are very positive that he'll be coming to Midland. It could be a done deal Friday."

Drillers suffer 'Salmon-ella' poisoning

■ Midland outfielder Tim Salmon leads the Angels to a come-from-behind victory with a late-inning double and home run.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Gun powder is good in a dry state, but it still needs that key spark to be effective. Tim Salmon was that spark for the Midland Angels in a 7-4 victory over the Tulsa Drillers Thursday at Angels Stadium.

Salmon hit a two-run homer in the seventh and a run scoring double in the eighth inning to ignite the Angels' dormant gun powder as Midland rallied from deficits twice.

The Angel bats were almost silent for six innings against Tulsa starter Jon Hurst, but Salmon hit a towering homer over the Marlboro Man in left field after a single by Don Barbara to open the seventh. Marcus Lawton followed with a triple and Walt McConnell singled Lawton home to tie the game at 3-3.

Until that time Hurst seemed to own the Angels, allowing only two hits over the first six innings of play. Salmon's blast ended the dominance. Every one in the park knew it was out, but Salmon.

"I thought I hit it pretty good, but (Tulsa left fielder) David Green was just standing there like he had a chance to catch it and the third base ump was just standing there," Salmon said. "I thought, 'I hit that ball better than that,' but I lost it in the twilight and didn't know for sure until the ump finally signaled the homer."

Green never moved while waving his hands skyward. He knew it was out when it was hit.

Tulsa came back with a 4-3 lead in the eighth when Dan Rohrmeier scored on a sacrifice fly by Mike Burton.

But Midland greeted Tulsa reliever Rob Brown (3-5) with three consecutive hits as Salmon again tied the score with a double. Lawton then plated the game winner with a two run double against Barry Manuel.

"We never did get down in the game," said Salmon, who now has five homers in his last nine games and 17 for the season. "We were just hitting outs, but we were in the game."

Mike Butcher (5-5) got the win in relief while Doug Robertson picked up his first save of the year with a scoreless ninth.

Midland starter Fili Martinez threw five innings of shutout ball before three walks and a single to open the sixth. Rafael Montalvo came in to get a double play grounder and a fly out, but the Drillers had two runs on just one hit in the inning to take the lead.

Tulsa increased its lead to 3-0 in the top of the seventh when Burton scored on a double by Jeff Frye. But then the Salmon show started.

Jays bag Rangers

■ The American League's two divisional leaders square off in a game that turns into an old fashioned pitcher's duel.

Associated Press

TORONTO — Tom Candiotti and the Toronto Blue Jays picked up right where they left off before the All-Star break.

Candiotti extended his shutout streak to 15 innings, and John Olerud drove in the decisive run as the torrid Blue Jays beat Texas 2-0 Thursday night, dropping the Rangers out of first place.

"It was dead calm out there and the knuckleball was dancing real well," Candiotti said. "The conditions were just about ideal.

Candiotti, in his third start since a trade from Cleveland, allowed five hits in eight innings and struck out a season-high 10 for the fifth time. The victory, Toronto's fourth straight and 16th in 19 games, gave the American League East leaders a baseball-best 11 shutouts.

BILL PRICE

Don't be fooled by new bowl scheme

Price

It was a move intended to quiet the poor, ignorant masses.

The Cotton, Orange, Sugar, and Fiesta bowls, along with the Atlantic Coast Conference, Big East Conference and that Catholic Mecca of college football in South Bend, Ind. — aka independent Notre Dame — have joined forces to keep the status quo.

Wednesday's announcement of an alliance by those football biggies is supposed to allay fears that the current bowl system does not work, and ostensibly will more times than not produce a New Year's Day battle between the two top-ranked teams in the nation.

Never mind that the Rose Bowl, with its commitments from the champions of the Big 10 and Pacific 10 conferences, the Western Athletic Conference, and any upstart independents out there are excluded.

Southern California? UCLA? Ohio State? Michigan? Brigham Young? Who needs 'em. Patsies all. Get 'em out of here, because they're never any good.

Never mind that Nebraska athletic director Bob Devaney, whose Big Eight Conference sends its champ to the Orange Bowl, expressed this sentiment in an Associated Press story:

"The thing is that they're still trying to make a national championship forgetting half the country. So it's not going to be a real national championship, but it will be a little closer than what we have now."

Never mind the ulterior, though quite transparent, motive the bowl committees have of saving their own collective hides — the pact is supposed to be the savior of NCAA Division I-A college football.

Well, I've got news for you fans. It may put off the inevitable for a few more years, but this plan has no more validity than any other designed to keep a playoff system out of the only college sport that doesn't have one anyway.

As Devaney hints, the new system is better than the old mess, but he also added "all major teams in one division should get together and have a real playoff."

And as ol' Bill Shakespeare would have said, there's the rub.

The new scheme, which is scheduled to take affect with the 1992 season, has the same loop hole the old one did — it relies on a poll to make the decision as to exactly who are Nos. 1 and 2.

Though AP stories reflect that the news organization's own writers' poll will be used to make that determination, ESPN reported Wednesday that the coaches' poll, formerly with UPI but now affiliated with USA Today, was to be the benchmark.

And that opens up a whole other Pandora's Box. Now I would never accuse a Division I coach of being corrupt, but the possibility is there for a little tampering. A coach hoping to impress next year's recruiting crop could try to place highly his own team or a team from his conference, regardless of whether it's qualified to be there. As the old saying goes, the rich get richer.

That's not to say the writers' poll is any better. Being in "the business," I know as well as anyone how many imbeciles, not to mention homers, are out there.

The whole point is, why rely on polls at all? Cut the season short by a game, take out an open date or two, have playoff games in December, and presto!, a playoff system that takes little if no more time away from classes for the student-athlete.

With a field of 32, guaranteeing every one of the Top 25 teams a spot in the playoffs, the five rounds could be completed by Jan. 1.

It's so simple, kind of like a straight across the board income tax, that the Powers-That-Be would surely reject it. It takes away that big New Year's Day bonanza for the networks, as well as for the bowls. Oh, the bowls could be used as playoff sites, but a playoff would surely be the death for the clout they once held.

Thus Wednesday's new cartel.

AL: Twins open half with win over Bosox

(From 1C)

Olerud's RBI single, his third hit, came in the seventh off Kevin Brown (7-7). Rance Mulliniks hit an inside-the-park homer, his second and the first ever at the SkyDome, in the eighth.

Candiotti (9-7) gave way to Tom Henke, who pitched a perfect ninth for his 17th save in as many chances, ending the Rangers' four-game winning streak. The loss, coupled with Minnesota's 7-3 victory over Boston, dropped the Rangers a game behind the Twins in the American League West.

Candiotti, who lowered his ERA to 2.09, estimates he usually throws the knuckleball about 50 to 60 percent of the time. He upped the total against the Rangers.

"I must have thrown at least 70 percent tonight," he said. "And when I wasn't throwing it I was able to get the curve over for strikes."

After a one-out single by Rafael Palmeiro in the third, Candiotti retired 13 straight before hitting Steve Buechele with two out in the seventh. Candiotti, who walked none, lowered his ERA to 2.09.

Greg Myers started the seventh with a double and pinch-runner Derek Bell beat Ruben Sierra's throw to the plate to score on Olerud's single to right field.

"I was just looking for something I could move the runner to third with," Olerud said. "He threw me a slider in on the plate and I went with it."

After hitting two homers against Seattle in the last series before the All-Star break, Olerud appears to be getting back into the groove that had most experts predicting great things.

"It was a case of not being aggressive enough," Olerud said of the early-season slump. "Now I'm not letting as many first pitch strikes go by. I'm trying to get ahead and look for a pitch I can drive."

Brian Downing and Palmeiro started the game with consecutive singles, but Candiotti struck out Sierra, got Julio Franco to line out and struck out Kevin Reimer to end the inning.

Brown allowed nine hits in 7 2-3 innings, striking out six and walking none.

Twins 7, Red Sox 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Mike Pagliarulo's third hit broke a tie, and Paul Sorrento added a three-run pinch homer as the Minnesota Twins took the American League West lead with a victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Pagliarulo, who went 3-for-3 with a homer, doubled off reliever Jeff Grey with one out in the seventh inning to score pinch-runner Jarvis Brown and break a 3-3 tie. Sorrento, batting for Junior Ortiz following a walk to Shane Mack, hit his first homer on only his second hit in 12 at-bats since his recall from Portland on June 29.

Carl Willis (4-2), who pitched 2 2-3 innings, won in relief. Boston starter Greg Harris (5-8) lost despite allowing five hits in six innings while Minnesota's Kevin Tapani gave up 11 in 5 1-3.

The victory, coupled with a 2-0 loss by Texas to Toronto gave the Twins the division lead by a game. The loss left second-place Boston, which got three hits from Mike Greenwell, 6½ games behind pace-setting Toronto in the East.

AL Roundup

Brewers 5, White Sox 1

MILWAUKEE — Bill Wegman pitched his first complete game in more than a year, and the Milwaukee Brewers scored four runs in the fourth inning to cool off the Chicago White Sox.

Wegman (5-3) gave up one run on three hits in the fifth, but then settled down and held the White Sox to one single the rest of the way. Wegman allowed six hits, struck out three and walked three in pitching his first complete game since a 5-0 victory over the Oakland Athletics on May 18, 1990.

The Brewers, held scoreless by Charlie Hough (5-4) for three innings, sent nine batters to the plate in the fourth. The loss was only the fifth in 17 games for Chicago.

Royals 9, Tigers 5

DETROIT — Mike Macfarlane hit his second career grand slam in an eight-run second inning as the Kansas City Royals snapped a six-game losing streak against Detroit, beating the Tigers.

Kevin Appier (6-7) gave up five runs on seven hits in 5 2-3 innings for Kansas City. Appier also was the last Royal pitcher to defeat Detroit, on July 7, 1990, at Tiger Stadium.

Athletics 8, Orioles 1

OAKLAND, Calif. — Dave Stewart pitched seven shutout innings to win his 100th game for the Athletics, and Mike Gallego drove in three runs in a victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Stewart (7-5) ran his home record to 6-1, and the A's have won 10 of his 11 home starts. He gave up five hits, three by rookie third baseman Leo Gomez, to improve his career mark to 130-90 overall, and 100-55 since joining Oakland in 1986.

Stewart struck out eight and walked one.

Yankees 2, Angels 0

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Scott Sanderson pitched his first American League one-hitter as surging New York beat California, handing the Angels their fifth straight loss.

It was the second career one-hitter for Sanderson (10-3), who pitched one in 1979 for the Montreal Expos. The Angels' only hit off him was a fourth-inning leadoff double by Luis Polonia, who sent a grounder over the first base bag and past the diving attempt of Don Mattingly.

Mariners 6, Indians 0

SEATTLE — Cleveland absorbed its major-league-leading 12th shutout, with Brian Holman and Bill Swift combining on an eight-hitter for Seattle.

Holman (8-9) allowed six hits, striking out three and walking two in seven innings while beating Cleveland for the second time this season for a 5-0 career mark against the Indians. Swift got his seventh save.

Braves pitchers two-hit Cards

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Steve Avery, who flirted with a no-hitter, and Juan Berenguer combined on a two-hitter as the Atlanta Braves beat the St. Louis Cardinals, 4-1.

Avery retired the first 18 Cardinals before Rex Hudler blooped a single to center field leading off the seventh inning for the first hit off the 21-year-old left-hander.

Avery (9-5) faced the minimum 21 batters through seven innings, however, as Hudler was thrown out attempting to steal. He left in the eighth when the first two Cardinals runners reached on errors and scored an unearned run.

Todd Zeile reached on an error by third baseman Terry Pendleton and took third when second baseman Jeff Treadway booted Felix Jose's grounder.

Zeile was out at the plate when he tried to score on a grounder by Tom Pagnozzi to third, but Ray Lankford followed with a single, scoring Jose. Jose Oquendo then walked, loading the bases and chasing Avery, who struck out five and walked one.

Berenguer came on and got pinch-hitter Milt Thompson to hit a fly ball to left field. Pagnozzi tried to score but Pendleton's relay throw from left fielder Lonnie Smith nailed him at the plate for the inning-ending double play.

Berenguer also got the Cardinals out in the ninth to record his 13th save.

The Braves scored both runs in the seventh off Jose DeLeon (3-8) when Jeff Blauser opened the inning by reaching on third baseman Zeile's two-base throwing error. Blauser moved to third on a groundout and scored when Greg Olson bounced to shortstop Ozzie Smith, whose throw was too late to get Blauser at the plate.

Pittsburgh baserunner Barry Bonds returns safely to first as Cincinnati first baseman Bill Doran has the ball pop out of his glove.

Avery sacrificed Olson to second and Otis Nixon drove in Olson with a single to right.

The Braves added two runs in the eighth off reliever Scott Terry on a two-out, two-run double by Brian Hunter.

Expos 3, Dodgers 2

MONTREAL — Ivan Calderon homered and Mark Gardner gave up two runs in seven innings as the Montreal Expos beat the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Expos have won three of their last four games after losing 11 in a row.

Los Angeles' Brett Butler extended his hitting streak to 22 games with a single in the fifth inning.

Gardner (5-5) allowed six hits before Scott Ruskin finished for his sixth save. Ruskin gave up one hit.

Dodgers starter Bob Ojeda hit a two-run homer to tie the score 2-2 in the second inning, his first major league home run.

Calderon, a starter in the All-Star game, gave Montreal the lead with his 10th homer with two outs in the third inning.

The Expos scored two runs in the first inning off Ojeda (7-6). Marquis Grissom led off with a walk and Delino DeShields followed with a single. Calderon walked to load the bases and Tim Wallach drew another walk to force in a run. DeShields scored when Andres Galarraga hit into a double play.

Pirates 10, Reds 6

CINCINNATI — Barry Bonds drove in four runs, including three in Pittsburgh's five-run eighth with his 12th homer, as the Pirates defeated the Cincinnati Reds.

Struggling Randy Myers (4-6) gave up all five runs in the eighth after the Reds had twice rallied to tie the NL East leaders.

Jose Lind and pinch-hitter Orlando Merced singled to open the eighth. After a sacrifice by Gary Redus moved up both runners, Lind scored on a sacrifice fly by Andy Van Slyke and Merced came home on a single by Bobby Bonilla.

Jay Bell, who had been intentionally walked, and Bonilla scored ahead of Bonds' homer.

Phillies 3, Giants 2

PHILADELPHIA — Terry Mulholland gave up five hits in 8 1-3 innings and John Kruk hit a home run as the Philadelphia Phillies hung on to beat the San Francisco Giants.

Mulholland (8-8) had three-hit shutout going until the ninth when Mike Felder led off with a double and Will Clark hit his 16th homer. Mitch Williams put two runners on base but ended the game for his 14th save.

The Phillies scored in the fourth inning off loser Trevor Wilson (4-8) on Kruk's RBI single. Kruk hit his 11th homer in the eighth and Dickie Thon singled home a run in the seventh.

Astros 6, Cubs 4

CHICAGO — Pinch-hitter Ken Oberkfell's two-run double with two outs in the 11th inning gave Houston a victory over the Chicago Cubs, the Astros' sixth win in their last seven games.

Oberkfell's hit off Dave Smith (0-5) made a winner of Al Osuna (5-2). Mike Capel got the last three outs for his third save, leaving the bases loaded in the bottom of the 11th when Mark Grace grounded out to first.

Jeff Bagwell drew a one-out walk in the 11th, and after Luis Gonzalez struck out, Ken Caminiti singled. Oberkfell followed with a double off the right-field wall.

George Bell opened the ninth inning with his 17th home run off reliever Jim Clancy to tie the score 4-4.

Mets 4, Padres 3

NEW YORK — Kevin McReynolds singled home the winning run with two outs in the ninth inning after Garry Templeton was intentionally walked, giving the New York Mets a victory over the San Diego Padres for their eighth straight win.

VALENZUELA: Attorney assures his client in good health

(From 1C)

Thursday for confirmation, and failed to return calls from the MRT.

DeMarco said Thursday that he and California officials "agreed that he'll pitch in the minors for a period of 30 days after his first start or until Aug. 23, whichever comes first.

"After that, we expect that Fernando will join the Angels or he'll be free to go anywhere else," he said, adding he was confident Valenzuela would make it back to the majors.

"We believe the Angels will be satisfied he is pitching effectively."

Brown, whose club is in a five-way fight for the AL West title, hopes so, too.

"After a 30-day period, we will evaluate him," Brown said. "If he can help us, we will bring him up."

Club president Richard Brown was quoted as saying in today's editions of The Press-Enterprise in Riverside that: "The experiment continues."

The experiment began May 20, when the Angels signed Valenzuela nearly two months after the Dodgers released him. He performed well in three minor-league outings but was hit hard in a pair of starts with the Angels.

Valenzuela made three minor-league appearances before his American League debut. He pitched twice for Midland and once for Class A Palm Springs of the California League.

In his two appearances with Midland, Valenzuela pitched 13 innings, allowing no runs, seven hits and struck out 12. Valenzuela's Midland appearances were on the Angels' road trip to Jackson and Arkansas in late May.

Valenzuela, released by Los Angeles during spring training and signed by California in May, made two poor starts with the Angels, losing to Detroit on June 7 and to Milwaukee on June 12. Valenzuela allowed 10 runs and 14 hits, including three homers, in 6 2-3 innings.

After the Milwaukee loss, Valenzuela was placed on the 15-day disabled list due to a heart abnormality that showed up in a routine physical. Tests showed he had rare myo-cardio bridging of the left descending artery, which supplies blood to the heart muscle.

The condition, which causes periodic crimping of the vessel, would not affect athletic performance, doctors said.

DeMarco said Valenzuela was in good health.

"He's fine," DeMarco said. "Medication was never needed and won't be needed. He has conducted his everday activities as normal."

Valenzuela debuted with the Dodgers in 1980. In 1981, his first full season, he won the National League's Rookie of the Year and Cy Young awards. In a decade with the Dodgers, he was 141-116 with a 3.31 ERA.

He received $630,495 termination pay from Los Angeles after he was released in March from a $2.5 million, one-year contract.

The Angels paid him $300,000 under a contract that would have included another $200,000 had he remained on the roster July 15 and yet another $250,000 had he stayed on the roster Sept. 1. That contract also contained incentive clauses based on the number of Angels starts.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

ANGELS: Midland scores seven in final two innings

(From 1C)

ANGEL DUST: Angel save master Mark Zappelli, who ranked third in Texas League saves with 11, and infielder Kevin Davis were both promoted to Triple-A Edmonton Wednesday. Hector Berrios, who was 3-1 and one save in 17 games for Edmonton will replace Zappelli while Edgar Alfonzo, who was hitting .277 with four homers and 38 RBIs for Palm Springs, will replace Davis. ... The Famous Chicken makes his last stop in Midland tonight in what should be a wild and whacky homestand since Fernando Valenzuela is scheduled to return to Midland over the weekend and Max Patkin, the Clown Prince of Baseball, appears Monday. It is hoped that Valenzuela will report to Midland soon enough to get in two starts on this homestand.

Bengals showing little faith in Rembert

Associated Press

The Bengals' tale of two comebacks seems headed for opposite outcomes.

While Ickey Woods, the erstwhile star running back, is claiming his reconstructed left knee is nearly good as new after strenuous off-season conditioning, receiver Reggie Rembert might have lost his shot at making the team because of a perceived lack of dedication.

"Oh yeah, he's a long shot to make the team," Bengals coach Sam Wyche said of Rembert, acquired as a rookie from the Jets last summer. Rembert was on injured-reserve last season with a pulled hamstring and disappointed coaches by showing little incentive to work out or learn the offensive system.

The last Wyche heard from Rembert was three weeks ago, shortly after the receiver finished a two-week stay in a Minnesota alcohol rehabilitation center and just before he was accused in civil and criminal suits of assaulting a man. The Bengals ordered Rembert to undergo counseling for alcohol dependency after he was charged with drunken driving in two off-season car accidents.

Rembert, 24, missed a Wednesday appointment with Wyche, and the coach hasn't talked to him since. Rembert did not return a phone call to his house Thursday.

"I haven't seen him in three weeks," Wyche said. "I spent a lot of time with him early in the off-season encouraging him, but at some point you have to take it upon yourself to put the key in the ignition and drive down to work out."

Getting Woods to work has been no problem at all.

Woods finished his nine-week treadmill program this week by running a 4.45 40-yard dash, the fastest of his pro career.

"It's strong, I'm hoping to get it down some more," said Woods, who was running 4.7s and 4.8s last season. "That was straight ahead on a track, but I'm confident I can do something like that on grass."

Vikings

Receiver Hassan Jones underwent arthroscopic knee surgery for a small cartilage tear and is expected to miss the beginning of training camp, which starts July 22.

Jones missed most of training camp last season with a similar injury, but went on to catch 51 passes for 810 yards and seven touchdowns.

The Vikings signed eighth-round draft choice Reggie Johnson, a defensive end from Arizona.

Oilers

Cornerback Steve Jackson of Purdue, a third-round draft choice, agreed to terms. Jackson said he soon might sign a two-year, $903,000 package that includes an option year. When he signs, he will be the highest of 14 picks to do so with Houston.

The Oilers begin training camp Monday at Trinity University in San Antonio.

Falcons

Just a few extra pounds are too much of a burden for Steve Broussard.

"It slows me down and that can cause injuries," Atlanta's second-year running back said.

A series of nagging injuries midway through his rookie season shoved Broussard into a backup role to Mike Rozier, who was claimed on waivers from Houston earlier last season.

"I've always had an injury, but I always played every week," Broussard said, recalling his high school and college careers.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

FRIDAY, JULY 12, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your special organizational abilities will help further your career aims this coming fall. Flexible and fast-thinking, you find a way to overcome a tricky obstacle in November. Although your family responsibilities increase toward the end of December, you will never regret the sacrifices made for your loved ones. Early next spring, choose a romantic partner with a temperament similar to your own. Marriage could prove the most rewarding adventure of all!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Bill Cosby, exerciser Richard Simmons, botanist George Washington Carver, comedian Milton Berle.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Tempers are short today, so be certain to keep your own in check. Contract negotiations are best postponed. Someone who has evaded you in the past is now available. Look before you leap.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Seek new outlets for your creative talents. Your sense of timing is terrific. It is better to go it alone than to get involved with the wrong crowd. Avoid get-rich-quick schemes.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Friends who feel slighted will not be easily appeased. Neither can a loved one's broken heart. Go easy and you will find that every door opens to you. Romance looks happy.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Run, do not walk, to meet Cupid's arrow today. Your workplace could be the planning ground for an exciting event. Good friends add up to good times tonight. Dress stylishly but comfortably.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Avoid trying to rule the roost today. Make certain that loved one's needs are being met. A pal may offer faulty romantic advice. Heed your own instincts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Self-reliance will play a crucial role in how far you go today. You have the imagination needed for success but may lack will power. Be stricter with yourself. Ignore tempting distractions when working.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be alert for employment opportunities that offer you a chance to try something new. Romantic partner is won over by your devotion. Give your residence a face-lift.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Good financial signs surround new projects, possibly bringing abundance to your doorstep. Take a direct approach in business or love. Romance is sizzling, so see what you can cook up today.

The illusion of danger can be as threatening as the risk itself. Even so, looking at this layout, it is not easy to see how East can force declarer into a losing line. Can you spot East's brilliant bit of deception?

There was little to the auction. Certainly, South had more than adequate play for the heart game, and it would seem that, as the cards lie, the most the defenders can collect is a diamond trick and two clubs. But watch what transpired.

West led a diamond and, with little or no hesitation, East won the ace and returned the ten of spades! Let's consider the possibilities from declarer's point of view.

The spade shift looked to the world like a singleton. If East held the ace of clubs or a singleton heart, the contract was safe even if declarer lost a trump trick. So after winning the jack of spades, declarer led the ten of trumps and, when East followed low, shot up with the ace in an attempt to drop the king.

When the monarch did not appear, declarer went after spades. All would still be well if declarer could discard a club on the spades before someone ruffed, or if it was West who had to ruff the spade, since the king of clubs would then be safe from attack. A finesse of the nine won, but East surprised declarer by ruffing the third spade with the king.

The queen of clubs was the obvious return. By this time declarer had more than a sneaking suspicion of what had been perpetrated by a wily defender. The king of clubs was played without much conviction, and was promptly decapitated by West's ace and a club back netted the defenders their fourth and most satisfactory final trick.

Fiftysomething Jackie Mason to marry longtime companion

NEW YORK — Comedian Jackie Mason, a fiftysomething bachelor, will marry his longtime companion-manager Jyll Rosenfeld this fall, much to his family's delight, a newspaper reported Thursday.

Mason

Mason told the New York Post that his family had almost given up hope, explaining most Orthodox Jewish men marry when they're 18.

"If you're still not married by the time you're 25, they're worried about you. By the time you're 30, they give up on you. By the time you're 45, they're sitting shiva," he said, referring to the Jewish mourning period.

Rosenfeld has worked with him for 20 years.

Mason said he proposed last weekend. The comedian gave her a 14.3 carat diamond ring, the Post said.

The wedding is planned for November in London, where Mason is scheduled to give a performance.

PHILADELPHIA — The ninth of Ethel Kennedy's children, Matthew Maxwell Taylor Kennedy, will marry a fellow University of Virginia law student.

The bride, Victoria Anne Strauss of Philadelphia, is the daughter of Ben Strauss, head of the Pep Boys auto repair chain and of television personality Bonnie Strauss.

The wedding will take place Saturday at the Cathedral Basilica of SS. Peter and Paul, The Philadelphia Inquirer reported Thursday.

The couple, both 27, met about five years ago in Aspen, Colo.

Performing the ceremony will be the Rev. Jerry Creedon, who has overseen many of Kennedy weddings.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Amy Grant's "Heart in Motion" tour has been delayed because the Gospel singer has a strained voice, a spokeswoman said.

Grant

The first six dates of her tour were postponed, said Jennifer Cook, an assistant to one of Grant's managers.

"She has been having some vocal problems and needs to get her voice in shape. She'll definitely make up those dates later," Cook said Wednesday.

The summer-leg of the tour is now scheduled to begin Friday in Atlanta.

IOWA CITY, Iowa — The man whose book inspired the 1989 movie "Field of Dreams" plans to visit the farm where the movie was filmed.

"It will certainly be interesting to see," said W.P. Kinsella, whose novel "Shoeless Joe" was made into the movie starring Kevin Costner.

Kinsella said he has not seen the baseball field since it was carved out of a cornfield in northeast Iowa for the movie. The owner of the field has kept the baseball diamond as a tourist attraction.

Kinsella, a Canadian author who is in Iowa City to teach at the Iowa Summer Writing Festival, planned to accompany festival participants to the field this week.

"I'm anxious to take a bat and go up to the plate," Kinsella said.

ROSLYN, Wash. — Actor Barry Corbin will serve as grand marshal for a parade in this Cascade Mountain town where residents once complained of noise and traffic caused by filming his series "Northern Exposure."

Corbin plays Maurice, the crusty old owner of Cicely, the fictitious Alaskan town where the series unfolds. He said he'd be delighted to be the first-ever grand marshal for Roslyn's Wing Ding Parade on Labor Day, said Margaret Heide, city clerk of Roslyn, 70 miles southeast of Seattle.

The City Council voted Tuesday to renew a filming contract with Pipeline Productions, "Northern Exposure's" producer. The city receives $100 per day, and Pipeline is allowed to film through Dec. 20.

"Northern Exposure" ranked third in last week's A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings.

Jenny Margaret Humphrey of Brentwood, England, wishes to nominate Charles Schulz, creator of "Peanuts," for a Nobel Peace Prize.

Alas, writes Humphrey, the Nobel Committee receives nominations only from members of the Nobel Committee; appointed advisers to the Nobel Institute; government officials; members of the International Court of Justice; members of the Institute of International Law or the executive committee of the International Peace Bureau; university professors of political science, law, history or philosophy, and previous Nobel Prize winners.

If you fall into any of those categories and are in agreement with Humphrey, who says that the cartoonist ranks with the likes of Socrates, Aristotle, Sigmund Freud and Carl Jung, you may wish to contact her: 14 Railway Square, Brentwood, Essex, CM14 4LN, England.

■ House Democrats name Bonior whip

WASHINGTON — House Democrats on Thursday elected Rep. David E. Bonior of Michigan as whip, marking the fourth major shift in the Democratic congressional leadership in five years.

After weeks of intense, behind-the-scenes campaigning, Bonior, a low-keyed insider tactician who served four years as chief deputy whip, defeated Rep. Steny H. Hoyer of Maryland, chairman of the House Democratic Caucus. The vote, by secret ballot in a closed meeting of the Democratic caucus, was 160-109.

Bonior, 46, will succeed Rep. William H. Gray III of Pennsylvania after Gray leaves, probably in September, to head the United Negro College Fund.

In a preview of his role as a more visible Democratic spokesman, Bonior attacked the Bush administration. "There is a tremendous frustration out there in this country," he said. "The frustration of a country in a deep — and it is deep — and prolonged recession, faced with an administration whose only response to this is: It's no big deal."

■ Senate panel delays Gates' hearing

WASHINGTON — Despite a lobbying effort by the White House, the Senate Intelligence Committee on Thursday decided to delay hearings on the nomination of Robert M. Gates to be CIA director while it seeks information from intelligence officials on his knowledge of the Iran-Contra affair.

"The timing of the hearings, as I say, is completely, completely unknown at this time," Sen. David L. Boren, D-Okla., the committee's chairman, told reporters after the meeting, stressing the decision was made "on a totally bipartisan basis."

Although Boren said the delay "certainly does not reflect a negative attitude toward the nominee," Thursday's decision was a setback to Gates and President Bush, who has repeatedly expressed full confidence in his nominee.

■ Ted Kennedy Jr. admits treatment

WASHINGTON — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's 29-year-old son said Thursday he spent three weeks in an alcohol treatment center because drinking was "impairing my ability to achieve the goals I care about."

Edward M. Kennedy Jr. said in a statement distributed to the news media that he entered the center in Hartford, Conn., but added that he did not want to go into detail and would have no further comment.

"At times, life has presented me with some difficult challenges and I am doing my best to face up to them," said Kennedy, who lost his right leg above the knee to cancer when he was 12.

"Recently I have taken an important, positive step in my life," he said. "I have spent the last three weeks in an alcohol treatment program at the Institute of Living in Hartford."

■ Feds, Florida settle Everglades case

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Everglades water tainted by chemicals from nearby farms must be pure by 2002 under a settlement announced Thursday of a federal lawsuit against the state over pollution of the vast wetlands.

The agreement, announced by U.S. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh and Gov. Lawton Chiles, resolves a 2½-year-old lawsuit.

"Today marks a new day for the Everglades," Thornburgh said.

U.S. to abandon Clark but keep Subic base

WASHINGTON (HNS) — The United States has decided to abandon Clark Air Base in the Philippines because of damage from Mount Pinatubo but will try to cling to the Subic Bay Naval Base in upcoming negotiations with the Philippines, senior U.S. officials said Thursday.

Officials at the State Department and Pentagon said the eruption of the volcano caused damage totalling more than half a billion dollars, and the future activity of the volcano was too unpredictable to continue U.S. operations at Clark Air Base.

The officials, speaking separately and on condition of anonymity, made their comments nine days after a U.S. military team completed a damage-assessment at the base, a former cavalry fort in the Spanish-American war that has been used by U.S. aircraft since 1947.

A high-ranking State Department official conceded Clark has been rendered virtually useless as a result of the eruption of Mount Pinatubo and said "it is quite conceivable we will walk away" from the base.

A preliminary Air Force study concluded it would cost at least $520 million merely to repair damaged government property at the air base, much less clear the runways and adjacent aprons of ash and other volcanic debris.

The United States will not give up Clark, however, unless a long-term lease accord can be reached to maintain Subic Naval Base and Cubi Point, an airfield on the base where the runways can easily be extended to accommodate U.S. bombers and transport planes, the State Department official said.

MacArthur Corsino, the consul at the Philippine Embassy here, said: "We will probably allow them to keep Subic. But I don't know for how long."

Bush approves Iraqi target attack list

WASHINGTON (NYT) President Bush has approved a list of about 20 Iraqi command-and-control targets that would be attacked if Baghdad refused to comply with international sanctions to destroy its nuclear technology, Pentagon officials said on Thursday.

Administration officials have concluded that punitive strikes on Iraqi leaders would inflict more pain on President Saddam Hussein and his high command than strikes aimed at sites where Baghdad is suspected of hiding equipment and materials used to develop nuclear or chemical weapons, a senior Pentagon official said on Thursday.

Administration officials quickly added that no air strike is imminent. The United States has several squadrons of fighter and attack planes, including about 20 F-117 Stealth fighters, left in Saudi Arabia.

The announcement of the new target list is another attempt to intimidate the Iraqi government into full compliance with the United Nations-mandated destruction or removal of its nuclear materials and biological and chemical arsenals. It also reflects a shift in thinking by senior administration officials, who in recent days have acknowledged the difficulty of striking this material, much of which can be moved easily.

In a 15-minute telephone call on Thursday, Bush and Prime Minister John Major of Great Britain voiced agreement that Saddam had violated the United Nations resolution ordering Baghdad to provide details of its nuclear weapons so they can be removed or destroyed, British officials said.

The list is another attempt to intimidate the Iraqi government into full compliance with the United Nations-mandated destruction or removal of its nuclear materials and biological and chemical arsenals.

Administration officials said on Thursday that some United Nations inspectors had concluded that Iraq possessed enough raw uranium to build 20 to 40 nuclear weapons over 10 years, but only if work proceeded without a hitch. That assessment reflects the "high end" of Iraq's nuclear potential, they said.

"That might have been their ultimate goal, but it doesn't reflect anything like their current capability," an administration official said.

About 100 pounds of weapons-grade uranium that Iraq has acknowledged to be in its possession is under international safeguards. But administration officials said this week that they believe Baghdad may have clandestinely produced enough to build at least one nuclear device. It is believed that a bomb can be made from as little as 55 pounds of enriched uranium.

Other experts in the administration, however, estimate that Iraq has secretly produced only a few pounds of enriched uranium at the most.

As Western officials continue to monitor Iraq's compliance with the resolutions, the United States and its European allies will withdraw the last troops from northern Iraq by Monday, Pentagon officials and European diplomats said.

To protect Iraqi Kurds from possible retribution by Saddam, the officials said the United States and seven European countries have agreed to leave behind a 2,500-man rapid deployment force in southeastern Turkey.

Ground forces equipped with artillery and attack helicopters from the United States, Britain, France, Belgium, Turkey, Italy, Spain, and the Netherlands will be based in Silopi, Turkey, near the Iraqi border, a Pentagon official said.

Dozens of American fighter and attack aircraft, capable of striking targets in northern Iraq, will be stationed at the NATO base at Incirlik, Turkey, and aboard a United States aircraft carrier in the Mediterranean Sea.

DEAR ABBY

Nasal spray description stinks to confused reader

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You recently said that older people should not be ashamed to ask their doctors questions about medications prescribed for them. They should know how much to take, how often to use it, what the side effects are, etc.

Van Buren

I wonder why the instructions that come with some medications are written in language that nobody can understand. For example, my doctor prescribed a nasal spray. The only thing I could understand was, "Shake well before using." Here is a sample of what else came with my medication and instructions:

"Beclomethasone 17, 21-dipropionate is a diester of beclomethasone, a synthetic halogenated corticosteroid. Animal studies show that beclomethasone dipropionate has potent glucocorticoid and weak mineralocorticoid activity.

"The effects of beclomethasone dipropionate on hypothalamic-pituitary-adrenal (HPA) function have been evaluated in adult volunteers by other routes of administration. Studies with beclomethasone dipropionate by the intranasal route may demonstrate that there is more or that there is less absorption by this route of administration. There was no suppression of early morning plasma cortisol concentrations when beclomethasone dipropionate was administered in a dose of 1,000 mcg/day for one month as an oral aerosol or for three days by intramuscular injection."

Abby, there is much more that I cannot understand, but this should give you a general idea of what I mean. — JOHN W. EGGERS, SAN DIEGO

DEAR MR. EGGERS: I know exactly what you mean. Such gobbledygook is intended to confuse a person not schooled in Latin.

Don't be embarrassed. Ask your doctor for instructions that you can understand. And if there are any questions in your mind — ask for clarification.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 25-year-old woman who happens to have a very fair complexion. I do not tan very easily. My dermatologist just removed three precancerous growths from my arms and advised me to wear sunscreen when I plan to go out in the sun.

I get very irritated with people who tell me I would look a lot better if I got a little tan. Can you suggest a snappy comeback for these clods? — SUNSHY IN GEORGIA

DEAR SUN-SHY: Snappy comeback? You need no snappier comeback than the truth. Try this: "My dermatologist just removed three precancerous growths from my arms."

Then notice how quiet it gets ... followed by a, "Gee, I'm sorry. I didn't know" ... or words to that effect.

DEAR ABBY: Knowing that you are an animal lover, I am writing with the hope that this will reach many zoo visitors.

Recently, a monkey in our zoo died because she was fed something poisonous by a visitor. There are signs on all of our animal cages requesting "DO NOT FEED THE ANIMALS," but some visitors pay no attention to them.

Abby, it is heartbreaking when, in spite of all our training and care, we cannot prevent a death because some well-meaning visitor ignores our "No Feeding" signs. Please print this as a reminder. — SAD IN HAWAII

FAMILY MATTERS

Husband's actions toward wife indicate a repressed anger

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: This is written in reference to your response to the mother who wrote about her 19-year-old son who would continually come home drunk. When she would try to reason with him, her husband would always interfere on the son's behalf. When she ceased, the husband then began trying to reason with him.

May

Your response was fine, but there is another problem here to which you didn't respond. That problem is the husband and his taking the defense of the son whenever his wife tried to deal with the boy in his presence. The husband's actions in these incidents are very indicative, or revealing at the least, of a bitterness toward his wife. It may even be repressed.

His wife's taking the son to task gives the husband the opportunity to vent his feelings upon her by defending the boy and still keep his personal animosity toward her under wraps. He did this even though she was right. He subordinated the boy's problems to his own.

When the wife ceased her attempts to save her son from the errors of his ways, the husband was deprived of his opportunity to vent his wrath upon her. Then he assumed his responsibility toward his son. Obviously he loves his wife, but there is something eating at him with regard to her, and that needs addressing. OBSERVANT

DEAR OBSERVANT: You make some very good points. An illogical position usually is very logical in relation to its frame of reference. A person who seizes an inappropriate opportunity to vent repressed anger usually has a reason — often a reason imbedded in family of origin issues. For example, someone who is afraid of being abandoned will be reluctant to directly express anger to his or her spouse.

These issues should be addressed within the relationship. Whenever a spouse's response seems illogical or excessive to the situation, a logical "feelings" source for that response usually exists. One technique for addressing that situation is to pause and ask: "Can we stop for a minute and talk about how we are both feeling right now?"

If we can stop the interaction, we focus first on how we feel and then on possible sources of those feelings. Remember, feelings are always right because they are feelings. However, we might try generating a feeling more appropriate to a given situation. Thank you for writing and sharing your observations.

DEAR FAMILY: My 12-year-old niece lives in (another city). I stopped by to visit my sister on part of my vacation, and I am very worried about my niece. I think that my brother-in-law drinks way too much. While I was there for three days, he drank at least one six-pack of beer each night.

My sister says that he drinks like that all the time, but its not a problem because he just sits in front of the television and doesn't do anything to anyone. I don't know about that, but she wasn't raised that way. It was against our religion to drink and I still don't allow alcohol in our house.

For that reason I really can't say too much to them. But I've noticed that my niece is getting more and more withdrawn. She used to love to do things with me, but this time she mostly stayed in her room. Even when I took her shopping, she seemed very distant. I tried to get her to talk about how she was feeling, but she wouldn't say much. All she did say was that she was worried about her daddy. When I tried to ask her more, she wouldn't say another word!

I want so much to help her but I don't know what I can do. I don't want to cause a problem in their family and make my sister mad at me, but I can't just stand by and watch my niece dry up and blow away. My pastor suggested that I write you and see if you might know something. WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: You have every reason to be worried. Your niece is experiencing the tragedy of growing up in an alcoholic home. She already follows the first rule of the alcoholic home — "silence." She does not believe that she can express how she feels, thinks or believes.

I encourage you to consider sending her a book to help her at least have some idea of what is happening to her. It probably will create a problem with your sister, but I believe it is more than worth the chance. We must make every effort to save the child.

Three books that you might consider for her are: Claudia Black's "My Dad Loves Me, My Dad Has a Disease;" Edith Hornick's "You and Your Alcoholic Parent;" or Judith Seixas's "Living With a Parent That Drinks Too Much." Also, consider calling the Johnson Institute (800-231-5165) for a copy of their booklet, "Why Haven't I Been Able to Help?"

You are probably in a no-win situation, but that is just one part of the familial tragedy of alcoholism. God works in many ways and it is often not without earthly pain. I believe that we have to take the chance to help, even though the earthly consequences may not be desirable. Please write again and let me know if I can be of further help.

Jim May is the director of the Family Wellness Center.

Expert offers investment advice

DENVER (AP) — Individuals nearing retirement face a simple, but sometimes daunting, decision: what to do with a lump-sum distribution from a pension plan or tax-deferred savings account.

For more than half of American workers, the answer has been to spend it, according to the Employee Benefit Research Institute. That choice may buy a new car or a backyard pool, but forgoes long-term earning power, says Jim Kutner, a faculty member at the College for Financial Planning who specializes in investment planning.

"Deciding to preserve the principles — these funds that you've been able to accumulate on a tax-deferred basis — is as important as your investment choice," says Kuttner. Saving rather than spending spares you the extra tax liability incurred when you use tax-deferred monies prematurely. Moreover, choosing to save opens the door to years of compounded earnings.

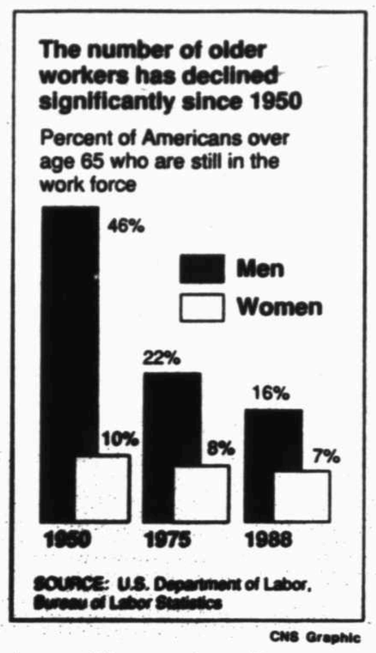
But deciding on an appropriate investment path presents another set of tough choices. What you choose will depend, Kuttner says, on your age, proximity to retirement, and the your other assets and pension resources.

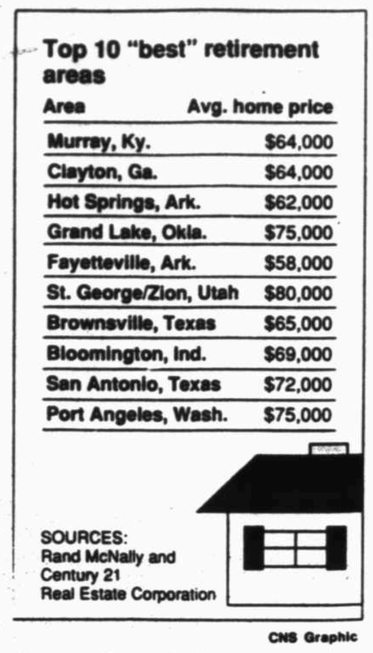
Kuttner offers two bases to use as you plan for investment of your sum: one for those 55 and older; one for those in their 30s and 40s.

55 AND OLDER

"A good starting point is a 50-50 mix of quality stocks or equity mutual funds and bonds," Kuttner says. "You have security in the bond component, and yet you have growth potential in your stock investment. It's important not to overemphasize fixed-income assets because earnings won't outpace the effects of inflation."

Don't eliminate "growth" investments from your portfolio when you reach age 55, contrary to commonly held investment beliefs. "Regardless of your age bracket, you should always have some assets in growth investments," Kuttner says, "especially because many of us will benefit from a longer life expectancy."





On the bond side, Kuttner suggests placing funds in a 10-year "ladder" in order to hedge the interest rate risk. "If you have $100,000, place $10,000 in a two-year bond, and so on, and finally, $10,000 in a 10-year bond," he says. "This way, you're recognizing that you can't predict interest rate cycles. Yet it minimizes your risk while providing liquidity and flexibility."

Rates are unpredictible, says Kuttner, who counsels against placing a majority of your holdings in long-term, fixed-return investments, such as long-term bonds or CDs.

30s AND 40s

Because these people have more time to invest, Kuttner suggests they aim for greater growth, with a mix of 70 percent stocks or equity mutual funds and 30 percent bonds.

"As this is a tax-deferred amount, you may choose high dividend-paying stocks or stocks that promise little current income but more long-term appreciation, or a compromise between two types," Kuttner says. "Your current income from this investment is tax-deferred, so it doesn't matter when the income is paid to you — now, or in the future. Select the best total return."

Another twist in dividing assets between stocks and bonds, says Kuttner, is the influence of your other fixed-income holdings. "Some consider Social Security, or any other type of fixed pension, factor it into your overall retirement plans. You may not need to put 30 percent of this lump sum into bonds since a predictable income will be coming from the pension fund."

Finally, what you do with a lump-sum or IRA rollover should be a comfortable choice. "There is an inverse relationship between our knowledge of an investment and our view of its risk level. We might think a wildcat oil driller — or even a farmer — is in a risky business. But they don't see it as having the same degree of risk because of their expertise," says Kuttner.

Others who choose the safety of CDs over stocks may be missing growth potential, but "short-term CDs or Treasury Bills are almost perfect hedges against inflation," says Kuttner.

Agency answers Medicare questions

Staff Report

Perhaps you haven't been hospitalized as a Medicare beneficiary. But what if you had to be admitted to a hospital today? Would you feel informed about important patient rights you have according to federal law? Would you be aware of or know how to handle important documents you might receive before or during your hospital stay?

Unfortunately, many Medicare beneficiaries find themselves unaware of important patient rights, and often it's during a time when they are neither physically nor emotionally prepared to assert those rights — during hospitalization.

It is imperative that you become informed of your rights now, while you're healthy, warns the Texas Medical Foundation. You should ask questions of the many resources available to you, one of which is your state peer review organization (PRO), the Texas Medical Foundation (TMF).

Under its contract with the Medicare program, the PRO must ensure that your receive only quality, medically necessary health care in the hospital and other care settings. This is done through ongoing review of Medicare medical records.

Most of TMF's medical record review is conducted after you've been discharged from the hospital, so you may never even know it has occured. But TMS also may conduct review of your medical record at your request — before, during or after your hospital stay. How you request review of you medical record is discussed in an important document titled "Important Message from Medicare, which you should receive upon admission to a hospital. Be sure to read this document thoroughly and ask questions if you don't understand it.

The "Important Message from Medicare" addresses instances where you might wish to request TMF review of your medical record while still in the hospital; in particular, if you feel you are being asked to leave the hospital too soon. In this case, you might be receiving another important document called a "notice of noncoverage." This may be given to you when the hospital determines that your inpatient care is no longer medically necessary and therefore, should no longer be covered by Medicare.

This is not to say that your are not ill and do not require medical care; it may only indicate that the appropriate care could be provided in a different setting, such as a skilled nursing facility or unit.

If you receive such a notice, and disagree with the hospital's decision to discharge you, call TMS by noon the next day and request an immediate review of your medical record. Within three days, TMF will determine whether or not it is medically necessary for you to remain in an acute care setting and continue to receive Medicare benefits.

You need to be fully informed about the decisions affecting your Medicare coverage or payment for your hospital stay.

Don't hesitate to ask your doctor or a hospital representative about your medical treatment or billing. And don't hesitate to contact TMF if you'd like more information about medical peer review, a free information booklet, or a copy of "Important Message from Medicare." Call the TMF tollfree beneficiary hotline at 1-800-777-8315.

Great-great grandfather has 2½-year-old son

LICKING, Mo. (AP) — He's 91 years old. His son is 2½.

Those numbers would be surprising to most people, but not Jimmie Jones, a great-great grandfather, who's proud of his latest offspring, Roger.

"I wasn't shocked," said Jones, who lives in the rural community of Licking, about 120 miles southwest of St. Louis. "I knew I was a hell of a man."

Sandy Jones, 42, his wife, agrees.

"I did, too," she said. "When the doctor told us I was pregnant, we didn't know whether to be tickled pink or shocked pink."

Jimmie Jones, who's first wife died in 1975, has 17 grandchildren, 26 great-grandchildren and one great-great grandchild. He was born in Osceola, Ark., and credits his longevity and virility to a diet of home-grown, home-cooked food — especially wild "poke leaf" salads.

His father died when he was 6 and his eyes moisten when the subject of how much of his son's life he'll get to see.

"That's why it's so important that they know each other now," said Mrs. Jones, who has spent much of her time putting together picture albums for later use.

The couple met when he was 64 and she was 16, but didn't see each other again until two decades had passed. They met by chance five years ago and at first didn't recognize each other.

"I'd gotten a lot uglier," Jones said.

"I was never attracted to men my own age," said Mrs. Jones, who accepted a marriage proposal that soon followed. "We married for the same reason younger people do — companionship and love."

After the wedding, they moved to a 10-acre farm near Licking in south-central Missouri, where he raised hogs until a stroke two years ago left him partly paralyzed.

"I love my family," said Mrs. Jones, who cultivates a vegetable garden and raises chickens and rabbits. "I feel I can make this home."
