Rain provided 'some relief'

AP Laserphotos

A Black Angus cow, top, nuzzles its nose into prickly cactus on the Hal Noelke ranch, about 45 miles west of San Angelo. The severe West Texas drought has made it necessary for many area ranchers to sell off all their cattle except for breeding stock. Dry cracked mud surrounds a dead cactus, above, on the ranch of J. Lane, eight miles north of Rankin. The land is so parched that cattle simply walking on the ground breaks it up.

RANKIN (AP) — The severity of a drought that has held West Texas ranchers and farmers in its grip for more than two years lessened recently when rain fell across the parched plains of the state.

But most troubled landowners say the end to the worst drought since the Dust Bowl is not even near.

"These showers we've had aren't doing much," lamented J. Lane, who ranches 9,000 acres near Rankin. "The end to the drought only will be a whole lot of rain — it's the only thing that will help."

The recent rain has provided "some relief" for the hundreds of ranchers and farmers across the state who are struggling to survive the worst agricultural recession since the 1930s, said Upton County agricultural agent Kent Powell.

"But it's still dry," he said. "We could surely use some more now."

Powell said the main complaint still among ranchers is that the rainfall, which in some areas has matched the annual average amount of precipitation, "doesn't make up for the past two to three years' losses."

"We've needed rain for so long and it's great to have gotten what we did," he said, "but we need enough to make up for the dryness of the past."

Lane, who lived through the droughts of the 1930s and 1950s, said current conditions "couldn't be any worse. I just don't see how I can keep (my remaining cattle) more than a month if it doesn't rain a lot."

He already has sold the majority of his cattle, choosing to retain only breeding stock.

Many ranchers have done the same, selling more stock than usual, said John Cargile of the Producer's Livestock Auction in San Angelo, where since early April an average of 10,000 cattle and 20,000 sheep per week have been sold.

"We've been moving between 50 and 75 percent more livestock through than normal," Cargile said. "They've all gotten rid of most of their livestock — they can't afford to feed it."

Producer's normally sells livestock on Thursdays and Fridays, but lately auctions have been held as often as five times each week, Cargile said.

The high cost of feed is what ranchers say worries them the most, next to the lack of moisture.

"Unless it rains for days and days, we can't grow anything for the cattle to feed on. Then we do what we've been doing for two or three years — feed. But that's mighty costly," said Lewis Smith, the owner of a 22,000-acre ranch near Rankin.

Despite a 1983 federal government feed program, which allowed livestock growers to purchase government-owned, low-grade corn at 75 percent of the federal floor price, most ranchers are continuing to buy their own feed.

And, Powell said, another feed program is not the answer.

With little vegetation left on the ranchers' arid land, all animals in the area, including deer that usually end up dead along a highway, are competing for feed.

Reagan: Protesters not speaking for majority

Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says the anti-nuclear demonstrators who dogged his 10-day trip in Europe do not speak for a majority and are advocating policies that could lead to "the peace of the grave."

The president was back at the White House on Sunday, with a relaxed schedule today, after the 8,000-mile journey to his ancestral home in Ireland, the D-Day beaches of Normandy and a seven-nation economic summit.

In a post-summit news conference on the lawn of Winfield House, the residence of the U.S. ambassador, the president was asked why he believed the anti-nuclear dissidents who rallied and marched in Ireland and London disagreed with his policies.

"They seem to think they have a simple answer to warfare, that if we just lay down our weapons and stand back empty-handed, somehow peace will come to the world," he replied. "They haven't stopped to figure that it might be the peace of the grave."

The state of U.S.-Soviet relations, particularly Moscow's refusal to resume nuclear arms reduction talks, was a topic that arose repeatedly on the president's trip, often by Reagan himself.

A senior American official, speaking on the condition that he remain anonymous, said Reagan was pressed at the economic summit by Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau to adopt a new approach toward the Soviets.

"He (Trudeau) felt the United States was wrong, (that) we should be more forthcoming," the official said Sunday.

When Reagan heard that, the official said, he "took his glasses off and said, 'Damn it, Pierre...I have said everything. What the hell more can I do to get those guys back to the table? You are telling me we haven't done it?' "

U.S. officials said other summit participants — the leaders of Britain, Germany, Italy, France, and Japan — supported the administration's refusal to offer any concessions to get the Soviets back to the table.

The summit leaders issued a joint statement Saturday calling for the speedy resumption of nuclear arms talks, which the Soviets broke off last December in the wake of NATO's decision to deploy 572 Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Western Europe.

The demonstrators in Ireland and in London, where an estimated 50,000 turned out Saturday, also were protesting the deployment decision.

Reagan said he didn't believe all demonstrators on Saturday were against him alone. "I don't think yesterday picked out any single individual," he said. "...Demonstrations have become a fact of life," he added. "Somehow people have felt that that's the way to express their ideas in a democracy in spite of all the legitimate channels that are open to them."

"...But I don't think they're speaking for a majority," he continued. "And I think sometimes they are unreasoning in that as yesterday, have any of them ever stopped to think that no one is demonstrating and they are not demonstrating in the nation that has the most nuclear weapons of all?"

At the short news conference, the president said NATO was strong "despite Soviet propaganda and attempts at intimidation."

Asked if there were any evidence that Moscow wanted to negotiate arms reductions, the president replied: "We're so accustomed to viewing the Soviets as engaged in various kinds of machinations and so forth, it's beginning to occur to some of us that maybe the silence is because they don't know what to say right now.

"After all, this is the third leader in the period that I've been in office here," he said. "Let them make up their minds what it is and we will keep the door open for any time that they want to come back."

Ministers agree oil lost in war should be replaced

■ U.N. Secretary General tours Mideast, Page 5A

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The Persian Gulf's Arab oil ministers have agreed that their nations should replace all oil shipments lost due to attacks in the Iran-Iraq war, a Bahrain official said today, and the two combatant nations agreed not to strike one another's civilians.

Bahrain's industry minister, Youssef Ahmed Shirawi, said that the oil ministers of the six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council agreed that their oil exports must continue flowing smoothly and competitively to world markets, "without any price changes or any discounts because of high insurance premiums."

Because of that, he said the oil ministers concluded a meeting on Sunday after agreeing to "replace all shipments whenever a tanker is hit...in order to avoid high insurance."

The plan must be approved by the heads of state of the gulf nations, but Arab diplomatic sources said approval is expected because the ministers went to the meeting armed with instructions from their governments.

Iraq has been attacking ships near Iran's main Kharg Island oil terminal in hopes of choking off the revenue Iran is using to finance the 45-month-old war effort. Iran has retaliated wtih several air attacks on vessels in neutral Arab waters.

Marine shipping sources said that 42 ships have been damaged in the gulf over the past four months, at least 36 of them because of Iraqi attacks and four because of Iranian attacks. One was raided by an unidentified plane and one reportedly hit a mine.

Shirawi said the ministers of the Council nations — Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain, Qatar and Oman — agreed on a series of measures which will be submitted to their respective heads of state for approval.

Those call for actions to avoid high insurance rates — such as using smaller tankers to avoid exposing large quantities of crude oil to attacks.

Sources close to the meeting said in Taif, Saudi Arabia, said the ministers examined the feasibility of building new oil pipelines, expanding the capacity of existing ones, storing oil in tankers outside the danger zones and other non-military options. The sources spoke on condition of anonymity.

Shipping sources have said that the amount of oil moving south through the Strait of Hormuz was about 20 to 40 percent below the 8 million to 9 million barrels a day that were carried from the gulf last March.

Both Iran and Iraq said Sunday they would honor a request from U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to stop shelling each other's civilian areas.

Successor to Trudeau will be chosen this week

John Turner

TORONTO (AP) — John Turner, a former finance minister who clashed with Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau a decade ago, is the strong favorite to be picked as Trudeau's successor at a Liberal Party convention this week.

Turner appears to have almost enough votes for a first-ballot majority of the approximately 3,500 delegates, according to surveys by Canadian news organizations.

The delegates are choosing a new party leader to replace Trudeau, who has resigned. The winner automatically will become prime minister.

Energy Minister Jean Chretien claims to have at least 1,000 votes, has been gaining strength in recent weeks, but the other five candidates, all Cabinet ministers in Trudeau's Liberal government, trail far behind.

"I don't think anybody has it in the bag," said Turner, a 55-year-old corporate lawyer, in a television interview broadcast Sunday. "We'll be working right up to the beginning of the voting."

Whoever wins will have to call an election before spring, facing what looks to be a close match with new Conservative leader Brian Mulroney.

But Liberal organizers are encouraged by recent public opinion polls, which showed that a 22-point advantage for the Tories evaporated after Trudeau — who had become extremely unpopular — announced he was quitting.

The convention opens Thursday night with a salute to Trudeau by prominent Canadian entertainers. Trudeau is to make a farewell address.

On Friday, the seven candidates each have a chance to speak, hoping to sway votes at the last minute. The new party leader will be chosen Saturday, but will not take over as prime minister until Trudeau formally resigns. That date has not been set, but is expected late June.

Turner and Trudeau have been rivals since both were in the Cabinet under Prime Minister Lester Pearson in the 1960s. When Trudeau won the leadership in April 1968, Turner was in third place on the fourth and final ballot.

Trudeau has been prime minister ever since, except for the nine-month Progressive Conservative government of Joe Clark in 1979-80.

Turner served as justice minister and finance minister for Trudeau but resigned in 1975. The reasons were never publicly stated but were widely reported to involve differences over economic policy and a personality clash.

On leaving the government, Turner set up a profitable law practice in Toronto while keeping his political contacts in good order.

As soon as Trudeau announced he was stepping down, Turner was seen as the heir apparent, but Chretien has waged a surprisingly successful campaign.

"The gap Chretien has yet to close is filled with the doubts of many delegates whether — as perhaps too-ordinary a guy, as too-clearly Trudeau's inheritor, and also as a Quebecer — he actually could win an election for them," wrote political columnist Richard Gwyn.

Turner has tried to combat the impression that he would shift the party's policies sharply to the right, favoring his former corporate colleagues over the downtrodden.

"Any economic measures a government under my leadership may take will not be at the expense of unemployed, the poor, the sick, the aged or the disabled," Turner told a forum in Toronto on June 3.

Recent opinion poll results have nourished speculation that Turner might call an election immediately after taking office — which is what Trudeau did in a similar position 16 years ago.

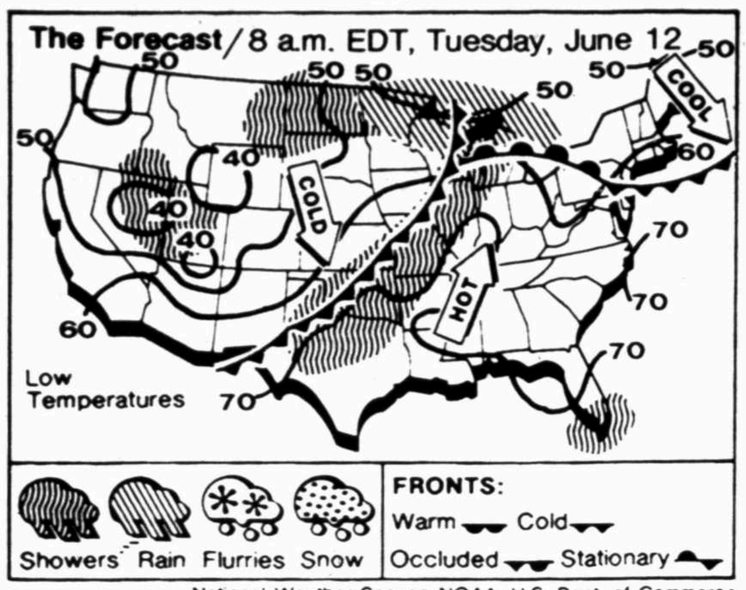
WEATHER SUMMARY



National Weather Service NOAA, U.S. Dept. of Commerce

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts showers for Tuesday from Texas to the Midwest, the northern Plains to the Great Lakes and for the central Rockies. Cold weather is expected for the Plains.

Chance of rain continues through tonight for area

A chance of rain continues in the Permian Basin through tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. The 20 percent chance of thunderstorms is expected to decrease with only partly cloudy skies in the forecast for Tuesday.

Temperatures will dip near 70 tonight with a high Tuesday expected in the middle 90s.

Southeasterly winds will breeze at 15-20 mph tonight, shifting southerly at 15-20 mph Tuesday.

Sunday's high of 86 was 17 degrees cooler than the record high of 103, set in 1958. The overnight low of 73 was 22 degrees warmer than 1975's record low of 51 degrees.

STATE

Thunderstorms — some heavy — covered the northeastern half of the Texas Panhandle today and rain dampened the higher elevations of far West Texas as moist tropical air persisted over most sections of Texas.

The moist air brought low clouds and high humidities to many areas, the National Weather Service said. Other isolated heavy showers were located over the northwest section of the Gulf of Mexico south of Galveston, and low level clouds blanketed the south and northwest.

The remainder of Texas had mostly clear skies.

Severe weather warnings were posted for much of Sunday evening in the Panhandle, including tornado and severe thunderstorms warnings, which were accompanied by damaging hail and high winds, the weather service said.

There were no reports of injuries or damage to property, officials said.

A tornado was sighted in Moore County, but did not hit the ground. However, Highway 287, about 18 miles south of Dumas, was under four feet of water, said Moore County Corrections officer Kenneth Faulkner.

"We're re-routing to the service road. It's one-lane traffic," said Faulkner.

In Deaf Smith and Roberts counties, funnel clouds were sighted but no damage was reported.

Predawn temperatures were generally in the 60s and 70s although the mercury had dipped into the upper 50s in the northern Panhandle. At 4 a.m., the low was 59 at Amarillo and the high was 78 at Brownsville.

A southeasterly wind of 10 to 20 miles brought a breeze to most of Texas. However, a light and variable wind was noted in East Texas and the lower Rio Grande Valley of Southwest Texas.

The NWS forecast calls for variable cloudiness with scattered thunderstorms northwest, south and southeast with afternoon highs today in the 80s and 90s in most areas and near 106 in the Big Bend valleys.

NATION

The Northeast today sweated through the fifth day of a heat wave that sent temperatures into the 90s, and thunderstorms packing high winds, hail and up to 5 inches of rain pelted parts of the nation's midsection.

The National Weather Service forecast more temperatures in the mid-90s along the Eastern Seaboard today. At 3 a.m. in New York City, it was a sultry 78.

Some relief from the pavement-buckling heat was predicted for the region later tonight as a band of thunderstorms was to gradually move east from the Great Lakes.

Record highs for the date were recorded in at least four cities Sunday — Atlantic City, N.J., 99; Binghampton, N.Y., 88; Scranton, Pa., 93, and Worcester, Mass., 91.

Bombing suspect says he was 'set up'

■ Karr former mental patient in Austin — Page 4A

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A 24-year-old former mental patient, arrested in the planting of 24 bombs in three Midwestern states after he was burned by an explosion in his rented car, insists that he is innocent and "somebody set me up."

Earl Steven Karr, who was in fair condition today in a secured ward for crime suspects at St. Paul-Ramsey Medical Center, was charged Saturday with possession of unregistered firearms after authorities discovered pipe bomb parts in his Minneapolis boarding-house room, said U.S. Attorney James Rosenbaum.

Karr could appear in court as early as today, Rosenbaum said. If he is unable to leave the hospital, the hearing could be held in his hospital room, the prosecutor said.

The suspect also may face charges in Wisconsin and Illinois, the other states where bombs have been found, Rosenbaum said. Five people have been hurt in explosions that occurred since early May, with three bombs discovered May 5-6 and 21 found since Memorial Day weekend.

"We have no evidence to indicate that he had an accomplice or was working with part of any organized group," Rosenbaum said.

Most of the bombs were planted in public places and were accompanied by notes saying they were the work of a "North Central Gay Strike Force." Authorities and homosexual community leaders say they have never heard of such a group.

Investigators have not yet questioned Karr and the motive for the bombs remains a mystery, Rosenbaum said.

In a copyright hospital interview published in Sunday's Des Moines Register, Karr said he was homosexual at one time in his life. "I had tried it when I was younger, but it's not for me," he said.

"Somebody set me up or something," Karr told the Register. "I don't know what...happened...because a person's the most important thing in the world. I wouldn't do it."

Rosenbaum said Sunday he had "nothing to say" about Karr's statements.

Karr came to police attention Friday when he was injured in an explosion in his rented car in a Mason City, Iowa, parking lot.

Rosenbaum said items seized from the car appeared to match items used to make the bombs. Search warrants were obtained to seize other devices or parts that could be used in bomb manufacturing from Karr's room, where disguises also were found, he said.

Karr told the Register he was on his way to Des Moines to see what the city looked like and had stopped in Mason City to check a map.

"I had gotten in my car and turned on the air conditioner and started to arrange my suitcases and straighten things out," he said. "Then — kaboom — it was the weirdest thing...I'll tell you one thing, I'm never going to leave my doors unlocked again."

Karr denied any involvement in the bombings, but said he realized the explosion in his car "would cast suspicions on me."

Four people were injured when two bombs were found in Eau Claire, Wis., on May 5-6; an undetonated bomb was found May 6 near Chippewa Falls, Wis. One person has been injured since the more recent series began May 25 — a trash collector in Milwaukee.

Five bombs have been found in Chicago this month, most recently on Friday. Three bombs were found earlier in Milwaukee, and others were discovered in La Crosse, Wis., and in the Minnesota cities of Stillwater and St. Cloud.

The maximum penalty for conviction of possession of an unregistered firearm is 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Hart: A lot can happen in five weeks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gary Hart is treading a fine line between an aggressive pursuit of his presidential candidacy and protecting his chances to run again in 1988 or to become Walter F. Mondale's vice presidential running mate.

Hart, saying "a lot can happen over the next five weeks," is hoping that lightning will strike and that somehow delegates to the Democratic National Convention will swing to him by the time they meet in San Francisco July 16.

The Colorado senator argues that public opinion polls will soon begin showing him to be a more popular challenger to President Reagan than Mondale, despite Mondale's bare majority of delegates.

There has been no sign of that so far. But at the same time, Hart has been saying that he does not intend to divide the party and that his foremost goal is to defeat Reagan this fall.

"I will not contribute to the divisions of this party," Hart said Sunday. He also promised to urge his supporters to vote for Mondale if the former vice president wins the nomination.

Hart returned to Washington from Colorado late Sunday, and he was appearing today before the Democratic Party's platform committee, as was the Rev. Jesse Jackson. Mondale continues his vacation on Long Island, N.Y.

Hart campaign officials disclosed Sunday that John McEvoy, a senior and trusted Hart aide, would serve as Hart's liaison to the Mondale campaign.

McEvoy's exact role was not spelled out, but he is known to be close friend of John Reilly, who is serving a similar role with the Mondale campaign.

Hart said Sunday on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley" that he had no interest in running as Mondale's running mate.

"I don't want to be vice president and I am not running for vice president ...I am not interested in the office and the idea or the thought doesn't appeal to me," Hart said.

But later, Hart was asked if he accept the No. 2 nomination if he became convinced that a Hart-Mondale ticket provided the only possible combination to beat Reagan.

"We'll wait and see on that," he said. "I think that conclusion is a long way off."

Asked about the likelihood that he would wage a convention fight over the so-called "tainted delegates" committed to Mondale, Hart said: "I am trying to get away from words like challenge, fight and conflict and all the rest."

Hart has complained that some of Mondale's delegates are "tainted" because they were elected in races where Mondale's campaign benefitted from money contributed to delegate committees by political action committees, which Mondale's campaign had officially eschewed.

Gary Hart

Also appearing on the TV show was New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, a key Mondale supporter who is among those mentioned as a possible vice presidential nominee. Cuomo said he has no interest in the vice presidency.

"I will do everything I can to help Vice President Mondale become President Mondale.. but I will not be a candidate for the vice presidency, nor will I be considered for the vice presidency," he said.

Hart chose a two-day trip to Colorado, his home state, and a speech before the state's party convention to reaffirm his determination to say in the race.

"I do not quit," Hart told 3,000 cheering delegates to the convention. "I continue, most of all," he said, "because to turn back now would violate all I stand for, all I believe in."

"There is only one delegate count that matters, and that is the one taken in San Francisco."

Hart insisted that in his telephone calls to delegates publicly committed to Mondale, he has found some who wish they had not announced their endorsements so early.

Those delegates, Hart said, are saying "I wish I hadn't (lined up with Mondale so early.) I think you are the stronger candidate. I am just going to wait and see what happens."

"Events can occur on issues, in the world or in public opinion polls that will change people's minds," Hart said. "A lot can happen over the next five weeks."

The agreement was Iran's first acceptance of an attempt to mediate the war. But Iran's state radio made clear that fighting on the battlefront would continue.

Arab and Western diplomats in the gulf region have said that Iran has about 400,000 troopers along Iraq's southern border and plans a major offensive soon.

Iranian state radio quoted President Ali Khamenei as telling Perez de Cuellar that "in order to prove its good will, Iran's government responds positively to your proposal concerning the cessation of any kind of attack on civilian areas."

Iraq's acceptance was announced over Baghdad Radio and the Arab state's official news agency. The agency said Iraqi President Saddam Hussein sent a message to Perez de Cuellar asking him "to lay down, at the nearest possible opportunity, effective arrangements" to supervise the agreement.

REAGAN

Asked if he believed Moscow would change its attitude if Reagan wins re-election, he said, "I think there's probably more chance that we'll be talking to each other if I am than there is before."

Reagan said the Soviet Union was ruled by consensus and right now perhaps "there isn't a consensus there on the course that they should be taking... Maybe the bear is hibernating."

The economic communique issued at the end of the summit called for reducing interest rates and deficits, but Reagan said he still didn't believe there was a connection between the two.

RAIN

And because pastures are so dry, Smith said, any "traffic on them, any hooves on them, it just breaks up the ground and makes the matter worse."

"That's another reason we're all selling what we can," Smith said. "My land probably needs two real good seasons to get back in shape."

Powell said only 900 head of cattle remain in Upton County, where usually more than 9,000 to 11,000 head graze.

"We're down to almost nothing and some folks are getting out," he said.

One family in his area has vacated its land, moving to Wyoming to pasture its cattle, Powell said.

"Most are holding on as best as they can, but the question continues to remain: 'How long can it go on?'" he said.

Smith said he will continue doing "the only thing I know" as long as the banks stay with him.

"If they don't chicken out," he said, "I won't."

Fred Lundgren, special assistant to Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said 82 West Texas counties currently are eligible for federal disaster loans.

But most ranchers already are so deep in debt, they cannot afford to continue borrowing, Powell and other agricultural agents said.

And the Farmers Home Administration recently reported more than half of its loans granted to Texas farmers and ranchers — about $609 million — are overdue.

FmHA officials said they have postponed numerous possible foreclosures, "but eventually they will have to enforce their own regs (regulations)," said Mike Moeller, president of the Texas Farmers Union.

The problem also has hit the southern portion of the state, where ranching conditions are "95 percent below normal," said Alfredo Vidaurri.

"There's little feed or forage in a lot of these pasture lands," he said, "very little water, very little grass and it's very dry."

Officials said ranching and farming losses contributed to Texas' dwindling net farm income, which totaled about $800 million in 1983, compared with $42 billion in 1979.

Despite the bleak picture painted by most everyone involved with ranching and farming, Powell said the recent rain showers in West Texas have given ranchers hope.

"You know, it gets hard to imagine things will ever turn around after three, four and for some, five years of bad conditions," he said. "But now I notice a little more optimism among a lot of people. We desperately need a lot of rain, but hope is good to have too."

Northeast sweating through record highs

The Associated Press

Fortified with air conditioners and ice water, people in the steaming Northeast sweated through the fifth day of a record-breaking heat wave today which has caused three deaths, buckled highways and sent over 1 million people scurrying to beaches.

In the nation's tornado-weary midsection, meanwhile, violent thunderstorms packing 70-mph winds and several twisters dumped up to 5 inches of rain overnight on parts of the Texas Panhandle and Oklahoma.

Hugh Crowther, a meteorologist with the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said today that the Northeast could expect a brief respite from the blistering heat as a band of thunderstorms moves east from the Great Lakes tonight.

"I can't say how long it provide relief," Crowther said. "Maybe a day or so."

"More of the same" was Crowther's forecast for the Plains and Midwest, where powerful but widely scattered thunderstorms were reported from Texas to Kansas overnight.

"A fairly strong thunderstorm system will produce severe weather over the same areas of Texas and Oklahoma later today," Crowther said.

The storms, which dropped golf-ball-sized hail on parts of eastern Colorado, caused no injuries or major damage, he said.

Throughout the Northeast on Sunday, there was a run on air conditioners and ice as more than 1 million people braved miles-long traffic jams and heat-buckled highways to reach crowded seashores.

The Northeast wasn't alone, however, as 50,000 people jammed Belle Isle Park near Detroit to escape a second straight day of 90-degree heat in Michigan.

Three heat-related deaths were reported Sunday in New York City as emergency squads scrambled to keep up with thousands of calls from people sickened when the mercury reached a record-tying 95 degrees.

In Boston, where the mercury also hit 95, the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority imposed 10-mph speed limits on trolley lines due to heat-warped rails.

There was a run on ice — blocks, cubes and crushed — at O'Neill Ice and Oil Co. in Boston as customers lined up to pay $4 per 40 pounds.

"Days like this make it all worthwhile," said John O'Neill. "Because no matter how good a businessman I am, if it ain't hot, people won't come."

Beaches were packed from Cape May, N.J., to Cape Cod, Mass., as water temperatures in the low 60s lured people from their homes.

In New York City, officials said about 740,000 people jammed city beaches while more than 160,000 would-be beachgoers were stalled in a seven-mile traffic jam to get to Jones Beach on Long Island. Beaches also were packed in New Jersey and Connecticut.

Appliance stores throughout the region reported a land-office rush to buy air conditioners.

"Thousands and thousands are being sold," said Chick Navlen, owner of the Trader Horn store in Hasbrouck Heights, N.J.

By noon Sunday, the temperature at the Atlantic City Airport in Pomona had reached 99, surpassing the previous record of 97 set in 1964. Other records for the date were 93 at Scranton, Pa.; 91 at Worcester, Mass.; and 88 at Binghamton, N.Y.

Inner-city residents — too many, according to authorities — kept cool by opening fire hydrants.

Newark Fire Director John Caufield said firefighters battling a three-alarm blaze that destroyed a store Sunday were hampered by a lack of water pressure.

In New York, police officers were ordered to close hydrants as the city entered the second day of a water alert.

In Brick Township, N.J., a 15-foot section of Route 35 was buckled by the heat.

"Two pieces buckled about 24 inches," said police Sgt. George Hogrefe. "At least three cars played 'Dukes of Hazzard' over it, but there were no injuries and no major damage."

The heat deaths in New York City included two men in the Bronx, ages 78 and 35, and a 68-year-old man in Queens, officials said.

A spokesman for New Britain Hospital in New Britain, Conn., said 60 percent of the patients in the emergency room Sunday were suffering from respiratory problems or heat stroke.

Trapeze flier Robbie Kilroy swings from the arms of catcher Tom Polich at the Denver Central YMCA's trapeze class. Some fliers catch another trapeze bar and fly back to the perch, while others just let go and fall 15 to 20 feet into a comfortable net.

Trapeze class makes for 'circus' at YMCA

DENVER (AP) — Shake hands with petroleum engineer Mark Sexton, and you'll be grasping one of his "wings" — he lives to fly trapeze, where his life is as much in his hands as the bar on which he swings.

Bernadette Pace works, by day, as a researcher in genetics. By night, at the Denver Central YMCA trapeze class, she plays with kinetics.

Art student Lucia Ausilio checked out the trapeze class because the Y wasn't offering gymnastics. Suddenly, her sketches were alive with images of people unfettered by gravity.

"I called my cousin in Italy to let him know about this," says Lucia, 24, of Naples, who attends the Rocky Mountain School of Arts. "He's the kind of guy who tries everything.

"He was amazed, he was totally upset, because he wanted to do it.

"He was jealous."

A TINGE OF basketball players' sweat still hangs in the air Wednesdays and Fridays when the fliers move in to set up their aviary.

The 30-foot net is rolled out on a dolly and hooked by heavy cables to giant eyes bolted into the corners of the gym. With a heaving of ropes and a propping of four-by-fours, the net is stretched taut, about seven feet from the floor.

The perch, hauled up out of the way by ropes, is lowered and Bernadette Pace, 40, of Denver clambers up the unanchored ladder.

That duty wins her the first flight of the night, a graceful arc starting from 24 feet up.

"I run for my body, but I fly for my soul," says the wiry, sparkle-eyed "Bernie," a researcher in DNA and RNA at National Jewish Hospital in Denver.

LIKE MANY of 20 or so regulars, Bernie simply stumbled across the class six years ago while attending some of the Y's more commonplace activities.

She wasn't sure she'd stick with it until she learned to do a "knee-hang," which leaves the arms free to connect with those of a "catcher" who swings upside down from another bar.

"I was really hooked then," she says.

When she moves to Indiana later this year, a trapeze rig will go with her, to be installed at home.

From time to time, a stranger will enter the gym, sit down on one of the sideline benches and stare up, incredulous.

"You should try it. It looks like a lot of fun, and it is," says Mark Sexton, 28, of Littleton, who joined the class four years ago after watching once.

Now, the oil industry engineer for the Denver office of the Norwest Bank of Minneapolis says, "What I live for is the trapeze. Everything else just helps to pay the bills."

Mark — slim, with shoulders like a weightlifter — has had offers to fly professionally. "Probably the main reason I'm not flying professionally is I'd be making about 20 percent of what I make now," he says.

HE HAD A trapeze rig in his yard last year. One day, the county zoning people called.

"They said, 'Well, we think you ought to tear it down.' I said, 'Have you got a good reason?' And they said, 'Well, we've got this obscure little ordinance that we've never enforced.'"

Mark took the rig down in November, when it was too cold out to use.

Fliers say it is hard to stay emotionally at arm's length from people you count on to seize your forearms at 30 mph, upside down.

"There's a sense of camaraderie that you get in few things," Mark says. "They're some of my best friends in the city. And there are always people trying it for the first time — we try to make them feel welcome, teach 'em how to do it."

It took Lucia some unpleasant falls into the net before she learned how to glide from the perch. Newcomers are "let off," or held around the waist so they can get both hands on the bar. But people learning to grab the heavy bar one hand after the other while hopping off the perch usually leap out too far.

THEIR OWN weight rips their fingers from the bar, and they hit the net feet first, face next.

Lucia worked through that stage after attending class off and on for three months — she was determined to "fly to the catcher." She kept at it until she could hook her knees over the bar on the first swing out, let go with her hands on the next swing back, and be plucked from the bar into a long, thrilling arc at the top of the next swing out.

STATE

Cleaning fluid served to nursing home clients

SAVOY (AP) — State health officials are investigating how cleaning fluid was mistaken for cranberry juice and served to five nursing home patients, including an elderly woman who drank two glasses, authorities said.

Dorie Emerson, 83, died after she was fed two glasses of an industrial-strength cleaning solvent with dinner Friday at the Savoy Nursing Home in Savoy, about 65 miles northeast of Dallas, officials said.

A second woman, Emma Zuver, 57, was reported in satisfactory condition Sunday at a Denison hospital with second-degree burns to her mouth and throat. She was fed two glasses of the cleaning fluid, family members told the Dallas Morning News.

Three other patients who drank the cleaning fluid had no side effects and were not hospitalized, said nursing home administrator Joan Pierce, who called the incident a "freak accident."

Ms. Pierce said remodeling in the kitchen had been "chaotic" and that cranbery juice may have been mixed up with chemicals used by a painting crew.

She refused to identify the liquid, but said it was "non-toxic, non-corrosive, non-flammable cleaning solution."

However, a Texoma Medical Center nursing supervisor told the News that the liquid was corrosive and that Mrs. Zuver suffered burns in her throat from drinking it.

"We're watching her throat. She drank a caustic material, so we're watching for burns throughout," said the nursing supervisor, who was not identified.

Investigtors believe the incident was accidental, said Fannin County Chief Deputy Sheriff Jack Robinson, who was to meet today with nursing home officials and investigators from the state Department of Health.

"What we're talking about is probably negligence on an employee's part," he said. "We don't know if what they served was toxic or not. You have to understand that these are elderly people who are ill."

The Dallas County medical examiner's office completed an autopsy on Mrs. Emerson on Sunday, but authorities said it could take several weeks to determine the exact cause of her death. She had been paralyzed from a stroke and required constant care.

Bill Johnson, assistant administrator of Fannin County Hospital in Bonham, where Mrs. Emerson was taken, said she had been given two glasses of the fluid before she died.

"At this point, we do not know if there's a direct cause-and-effect relationship between what happened and the death of the patient," Ms. Pierce said.

New Orleans washes out competition

DALLAS (AP) — New Orleans has the top tap as far as three judges are concerned.

Those three men, who gathered to test the boast of Dallas Mayor Starke Taylor, decided Sunday that New Orleans has the best tap water among the eight cities vying for that honor at the First Annual Great Invitational International Water-Tasting Challenge.

It all started quite mischieviously a few weeks ago, when Taylor insisted that Dallas' tap water can out-taste that of any other city. He challenged all North American cities to put samples of their water up to a test.

So at the American Water Works Association meeting here this weekend, judges from around the world came to sip wares from the eight cities that entered.

Dallas came in a somewhat embarrassing third place, trailing closely behind second-ranked Miami.

And New York officials, who had predicted that their Adirondack Mountain water would win easily, were left high and dry with no ranking at all.

New Orleans was the "clear winner" with a score of 1.67 for its water drawn from the Mississippi River, said Bob Spangler, AWWA public relations director.

The samples were rated from zero to 10, with zero a perfect score. None of the other scores, nor the rankings of the other cities, were released. But the worst rating was 9.7.

The other cities entered were Chicago, Seattle, Los Angeles and Toronto.

One of the judges, Gustav Boger, director of the Munich, West Germany, water department, said he wasn't surprised that he picked the New Orleans sample as the best.

"I had already visited the World's Fair and liked the water there very much," Boger said.

Joining Boger in judging the competition was Hugh Fish, chief executive of Thames Water in London and Dr. Michael A. Collins, director for the Center of Urban Water Studies at Southern Methodist University.

Firefighter saved his last life on Saturday

FORT WORTH (AP) — Firefighter Bobby Wayne Abshire believed he could make the difference between someone dying and someone living. So, when he was hit and killed by a car while trying to help a stranded motorist, he was doing what came naturally to him.

There was the time when Abshire jumped from a helicopter under fire to pull 23 wounded soldiers to safety during the Vietnam War.

But Abshire, 41, saved his last life early Saturday morning, when the rescue mission he attempted cost him his life.

"I remember one night we were coming home from the ballgame, and a young kid had been hit on a bicycle," his wife Jean told the Fort Worth Star Telegram Saturday. "He had to stop and help. He was always doing that. He'd tell me 'I could be the difference between someone living and someone dying because I know what I'm doing.'"

A fire engineer with the Fort Worth Fire Department, Abshire was killed at 2:30 a.m. Saturday by a car operated by a driver suspected of being drunk.

The car hit him on Airport Freeway in Bedford after Abshire had stopped to assist a stranded motorist.

"It was typical of something he'd do; he'd always stop and help someone," said Fort Worth Fire District Fire Chief Jim Noah, who worked with Abshire for several years in District 13.

Northeast Community Hospital officials said Abshire died of multiple injuries around 3 a.m. after he was brought in by ambulance.

He was on his way home from working late at a second job as an insurance agent when he passed a stranded car, police said.

Bedford police arraigned a 19-year-old suspect on investigative charges of involuntary manslaughter and driving while intoxicated.

"We heard tires squeal and saw the lights," Gary Thomas, 28, whose car had broken down, told the Dallas Morning News. "He yelled, 'Watch out,' pushed me off the side of the road and it hit him. He was just one of those nice guys that stops to help anybody."

Man accused of setting bombs 'very sick boy'

HOUSTON (AP) — A man accused of setting 20 bombs in three Midwest states was a "very sick boy" who was only recently released from a Texas mental institution, according to a close relative.

Earl Steven Karr, 24, was charged in connection with the random bombings on Saturday, just hours after he was seriously injured when a bomb exploded in his car in Mason City, Iowa.

He was transferred for treatment to a St. Paul, Minn., burn center. Officers who removed Karr from his flaming auto said he gave them a Houston address, Mason City Police Capt. Duane Jewell said Saturday.

A woman who agreed to be identified only as "a close family member," told The Associated Press that Karr grew up in Chicago, a member of a "typical middle class family," but that he had been under psychiatric care since he was age 6 or 7.

The woman said she became concerned about Karr after he came to Houston to visit her last September.

"I tried to have Earl committed to the Harris County Psychiatric Hospital and had to tell them that he was a very sick boy and I was afraid he would hurt himself or others," the woman said. "They took him in for observation for three weeks. Then they wanted to treat him only as an outpatient."

She said she finally persuaded authorities to place Karr in the Austin State Hospital in Austin, but that he was released within two weeks.

"I begged and fought and pleaded and nobody listened," she said.

The woman said psychiatrists concluded that Karr suffered from a "personality disorder" that had to do with "not developing fully."

"He hated life and life has been terrible for him," she said.

Young victim of SCIDS improves after transplant

HOUSTON (AP) — When T.J. Davis arrived in Houston last December he was a 7-month-old youngster who seemed unlikely to reach his first birthday.

He is a victim of severe combined immune deficiency, a condition in which the body has no defenses against germs. An infection already had taken hold in his face and T.J.'s cheek was twisted and enlarged, almost closing one eye.

His parents, Terry and Linda Davis, brought T.J. to the Texas Children's Hospital here in a last-ditch effort to save his young life. He had been treated at hospitals near his Caldwell, Idaho home, but few medical centers have the experience to treat his rare immune condition.

T.J., just a month before his first birthday, now is much improved and is developing as any other youngster.

His infection has been reduced. He is learning to walk and even run. And he now is beginning to eat ordinary food.

And he may be on his way toward a permanent cure.

Within days after his arrival at the Texas Children's Hospital Feb. 7, T.J. was given a transfusion of a specially treated bone marrow.

It was hoped that the transplanted marrow would take root in T.J's bone and start producing the lymphocytes that the youngster needed to fight infection.

Marrow transplant is the best way to treat SCIDS, doctors believe, but until recently such transplants required marrow that precisely matched the tissue type of the host. Once the T cells are killed, the marrow is injected into the host.

T.J. received 2½ ounces of treated marrow from his father and doctors said it would take at least six months to determine if the marrow worked.

Recount should end this week, officials say

AUSTIN (AP) — Democratic Party officials say they expect the recounts in the run-off for the U.S. Senate nomination to be completed this week as more counties recheck their vote tallies today and Tuesday.

A spokesman for State Sen. Lloyd Doggett of Austin said Sunday that more than half the votes in the run-off have been recounted, showing Doggett holding about a 1,000-vote lead over opponent U.S. Rep. Kent Hance.

"We are somewhere around 1,000 ahead," said Rich Paul, Doggett's press secretary. "I'd rather be on this side than the other side. I can't imagine paying for a recount and losing votes."

Doggett finished just 467 votes ahead of Hance out of more than 970,000 votes cast in the run-off, according to results compiled by the Secretary of State. Hance, a Lubbock conservative, then asked the Democratic Party for the recount.

Both campaigns have had representatives monitoring the recount, which party officials say should be completed by midweek.

Paul said recounts have been completed in most of the state's major urban counties, including Tarrant, Dallas, Harris and Travis. Doggett had been strong in the cities, while Hance ran strong in rural areas in the run-off.

Hance aides said no one was available Sunday to discuss the recount.

On Saturday, Hance spokesman Craig Tounget conceded that Doggett's margin appeared to be increasing.

"We're not catching up, yet," he said. "Actually, we've lost a little ground."

However, Tounget said, "There is still a great chance it can change."

More recounts were scheduled for Monday, Paul said, "with a smattering on Monday and Tuesday."

Hance gave the Texas Democratic Party $28,000 to begin the recount. Party officials have estimated that it could cost the candidate between $50,000 and $70,000 to recount the ballots in all 254 counties as Hance requested.

The winner of the Doggett-Hance race will face Republican U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm in November for the Senate seat being vacated by retiring GOP Sen. John Tower.

Nuclear protesters scale London's Big Ben tower

LONDON (AP) — Two protesters scaled scaffolding on the sides of the Big Ben clock tower today, climbed into hammocks suspended 180 feet above ground and unfurled a banner saying "Time to Stop Nuclear Testing."

Police arrested three other protesters — two supporters of the climbers and a man who chained himself to an elevator being used for renovation work on the famous tower.

Morning rush-hour traffic slowed to a crawl on Westminster Bridge over the Thames River as motorists gawked at the two men dangling from the tower, which looms over Parliament. Police made no move to bring the two men down.

George Pritchard, a spokesman for the Greenpeace environmental group, said his group staged the action and sent a letter to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. He said the group would wait for a reply before bringing the protesters down.

"They will be there at least until tomorrow, and could last a week if they have to," he said in a television interview. "They have nuts and raisins and they are trained and experienced climbers."

Pritchard said the protesters scaled Big Ben before dawn by climbing onto scaffolding from a ladder on top of a red double-decker bus, which the group had bought.

The tower has been shrouded in scaffolding and for months for renovation.

"We felt a bus painted red would not be noticed in London," Pritchard said, "and in fact a police car passed the bus as three of our people were climbing the ladder."

He said one of the men who was arrested, Leo Snellink, 26, of The Hague in the Netherlands, had chained himself to the workmen's elevator to stop anyone from reaching the other two men.

Police gave no details about the other arrests.

Pritchard identified the two men who climbed into hammocks as 30-year-old Englishman Ron Taylor and 26-year-old Swiss-American Renato Ruf from Zurich.

"They went up early this morning and suspended their hammocks opposite the central point of the clock's south face, 180 feet above the ground," he said.

Pritchard said the action was part of Greenpeace's international campaign to persuade the major powers to resume negotiations on a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty.

He said it was also meant to draw attention of servicemen who had suffered from radiation.

WORLD

U.N. chief's helicopter close to being attacked

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, in search of an elusive Middle East peace formula, has received a first-hand sample of war in Beirut and said his helicopter came close to being attacked by Syrian missiles as he left Lebanon.

The former Peruvian diplomat awakened Sunday, the second day of his visit to Lebanon, to the thunderous sound of shelling in downtown Beirut, 10 miles from his hotel in the mountain resort of Beit Meri. Going to the window, he gazed out over the Lebanese capital and saw machine gun tracer bullets being fired.

His reaction he said was sadness and bewilderment. "I don't understand what is the reason for all this shooting...Where is the foreign enemy they are shooting at?" he asked.

It was time, Perez de Cuellar said, for Beirut's combatants to "at last discover they are all Lebanese."

Sunday morning, Perez de Cuellar was flown from Beirut aboard an Italian-manned U.N. military helicopter to inspect units of the U.N. peacekeeping force in southern Lebanon.

On the return trip, the secretary-general's helicopter was diverted to the port city of Jounieh, north of Beirut, because some shells had hit near the intended landing site at the Lebanese Defense Ministry in suburban Yarze.

At Jounieh, the secretary-general and his eight-member party transferred to a French-built Puma helicopter of the Lebanese army for a flight across the Bekaa Valley and the mountains to Damascus.

The U.N. chief's charter jet awaited him in the Syrian capital to fly him to Amman, Jordan.

"Apparently the Lebanese did not clear the flight plan," a well-informed source told a reporter.

This apparent oversight became significant when Israeli jets flew over Beirut, putting Syrian missile batteries in the Bekaa on alert, said the source.

Italian party leader dies

ROME (AP) — Italian Communist Party leader Enrico Berlinguer, stricken by a massive stroke, died today, the Italian news agency ANSA reported.

A medical bulletin issued earlier said the condition of the 62-year-old Berlinguer had grown worse during the night. There were no more signs of brain activity and the prognosis had been "unfavorable."

Italian President Sandro Pertini, a Socialist, visited Berlinguer's room for a few minutes this morning. The 87-year-old president stayed in Padua over the weekend to be near Berlinguer.

Party leaders have been meeting periodically in Rome, but newspapers said they had no immediate candidate to succeed Berlinguer. Italy's is the largest Communist Party in the West.

The Communists are the second-largest political party in Italy, following the Christian Democrats. They drew more than 11 million votes, or 29.9 percent, in voting for the lower house of Parliament last June.

Go take a trip!

Summer hasn't even arrived yet, but temperatures are climbing, school's out and Midlanders are getting the itch to join thousands of other Americans on vacation outings.

All indicators are pointing to a good vacation season. In fact, the U.S. Travel Data Center, a Washington-based trade group that conducts research in travel activity, is predicting a total of 271 million person-trips during the period extending from this month through August. If the volume materializes it will mark a 3 percent increase over the banner year experienced in 1983.

A person-trip is defined as any journey of 100 miles or more by a U.S. resident to any destination in this country or abroad. And the conditions that make those trips likely are still present this year — stable gasoline prices, bargain air fares on some popular routes, continued strength of the dollar in relation to other major currencies, and a relatively high level of consumer confidence.

Additionally there are a couple of special events being held in the United States this vacation season which are certain to attract hordes of vacationers — the newly opened Louisiana World Exposition in New Orleans and the Summer Olympic Games scheduled to open in Los Angeles July 28.

The combination of those attractions and the anticipated heavy volume of vacation trips is encouraging for the American economy. Just as economic recovery spurred the upsurge of the vacation trade, vacationers should help keep the recovering growing.

So, lean back, take a sip of your refreshing tall, cool one, and leisurely plan your trip. It's vacation time and when you hit the open road, you won't be out there alone!

Pleading and bullying

It's getting to be an established routine. The Reagan administration or the NATO nations in Europe offer an olive branch to the Soviet Union. Within hours, the proffered concession is slapped down by the Kremlin. The Western press then describes East-West relations as something between chilly and frozen. And soon after that, a band of demonstrators, or perhaps a Democratic presidential candidate, turns up to blame (you guessed it!) President Reagan for the Soviet Union's distemper.

It happened again this week. Mr. Reagan took the opportunity of a scheduled address to the Irish Parliament to extend the hand of conciliation to the Soviets. Specifically, Mr. Reagan said the United States was prepared to discuss with the Soviets a possible pledge by NATO renouncing the use of force in Europe. In exchange, Mr. Reagan said the Soviets would be asked to agree to measures limiting the risk of military confrontation in Europe.

Because nothing in a non-use-of-force pledge would abrogate NATO's rights of self-defense and because the Atlantic alliance is politically if not militarily incapable of attacking the Soviet bloc, the pledge would be a somewhat nebulous gesture. But the Soviets had made such a promise one of their main negotiating demands at the continuing Stockholm conference on European security.

Yet they didn't take the olive branch. They said there was "nothing new" in the Reagan speech. What could be plainer than that the Soviet leadership, for its own reasons, decided months ago to remain wholly intransigent no matter what the West proposed?

At least some of the Reagan administration's pleading is clearly ill-advised since it only tempts the Soviets to conclude that bullying wrests concessions from the West. Unfortunately, Mr. Reagan and the Western European leaders are compelled these days by rattled publics to demonstrate constantly that they are striving to reduce tensions with the Soviet Union.

The Soviet leadership, facing no such domestic pressures, can be just as nasty as it needs to be to frighten Western publics even more. If only Western Europe's peace marchers and America's Democratic presidential aspirants could recognize that they are, in effect, being used by the Soviets.

Another View:

UNESCO crossroad

The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization was created at the end of World War II. It was largely the brainchild of the United States, which hoped that UNESCO could help the cause of world understanding and peace.

In its early years, UNESCO had major accomplishments. It brought expertise to underdeveloped countries and it raised the level of cultural and scientific cooperation.

In recent years, however, it has become a political organization. It now serves largely as a propaganda tool for Third World countries.

Because of this, UNESCO has come under strong attack in the United States and Europe. Many Americans, including President Reagan, believe that we should withdraw from the organization.

A strong and valid argument against UNESCO is that it has become an inefficient and wasteful bureaucracy. Its present secretary general, Amadou Mahtar M'Bow, dispenses patronage with an iron hand.

Before agreeing to withdrawal, Congress launched an investigation of UNESCO. It hopes to present a list of reforms that will make it possible for UNESCO to again play a positive role on the world scene.

This can be accomplished if UNESCO can be returned to its original non-political role and if its organization can be reformed. To accomplish this, M'Bow must be replaced.

Because of its early history and its potential, every effort should be made to save UNESCO. And until all avenues are explored, the United States should not resign.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, June 11, the 163rd day of 1984. There are 203 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 11, 1947, sugar rationing came to an end in the United States.

On this date:

In 1727, King George I of England died.

In 1859, a prospector laid claim to a silver deposit in Six Mile Canyon in Nevada — a claim that later turned out to be the multimillion-dollar Comstock Lode.

In 1942, the United States and the Soviet Union signed a lend-lease agreement to aid the Soviet war effort in World War II.

Documents plot gulf showdown

WASHINGTON — Secret Pentagon planning documents raise the specter of a confrontation in the Persian Gulf between the United States and the Soviet Union. This is the sort of flash point that could ignite the nuclear powder keg.

Jack Anderson

Let me hastily explain that most strategists don't believe this will happen. They don't really expect the Iran-Iraq war to spread to the superpowers. They think sanity will somehow prevail, and we will muddle through the Persian Gulf crisis without Armageddon.

Most scenarios circulating inside the Pentagon also forecast an Iranian victory, followed by the spread of Ayatollah Khomeini's Moslem fundamentalist revolution to Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and other Persian Gulf states. Unsettling as this would be, it probably wouldn't provoke a Soviet-American conflict.

But the opposite outcome — a desperate escalation of the war by Iraq, the destruction of Iran's oil-export facilities and the collapse of the Iranian economy — could embroil the Soviets. This is why the military chiefs have opposed President Reagan's cautious "tilt" toward Iraq. But his national security adviser, Robert McFarlane, wants an Iraqi victory to punish Khomeini and enhance U.S. power in the Middle East.

One of the secret Pentagon documents, examined by my associate Donald Goldberg, emphasizes that the scenario is "not a prediction of future events, not a guide for the employment of forces." It is merely a hypothetical "war" that "portrays enemy capabilities as indicated by current intelligence estimates."

Here is the secret scenario, which begins 65 days before open combat between the United States and the Soviet Union. In the language of the scenario, that would be "Minus 65," counting down to "D-day."

Minus 65: The Iranian economy is in ruins, and the volatile Iranian people rise up against Khomeini and his mullahs, causing "dissolution of central authority in Iran."

Minus 62: "Soviet forces in Transcaucasus, north of Caucasus and Turkistan begin selective mobilization." The United States responds by moving its "forward-deployed carrier and amphibious force" into better position.

Minus 37: The Kremlin "reaffirms" its 1921 friendship treaty with Iran and continues "preparations for invasion." The United States deploys additional AWACS planes and naval forces.

Minus 23: U.S. intelligence reports up to 10 Soviet divisions conducting "training operations" on the Iranian border. President Reagan calls up 100,000 reserve troops and puts U.S. forces around the world on low-level, DEFCON 3 alert. Supplies begin moving toward the Persian Gulf.

Minus 16: The Soviet Union announces "it is prepared to unilaterally invoke" the 1921 treaty, which permits Soviet troops to move into Iran. U.S. intelligence detects a major increase of traffic on Soviet railroads in the provinces bordering Iran. Reagan "declares intent to do whatever necessary to protect U.S. vital interests." The worldwide alert is escalated to DEFCON 7 and military preparations are intensified.

Minus 12: U.S. intelligence "determines that a Soviet invasion of Iran is imminent" and "partial mobilization" begins in the United States.

Minus 6: "Soviet forces depart assembly areas and move toward Iranian border." The Iranian military appeals for international help, and the United States "begins to deploy forces into Iran."

D-day: Soviet air attacks "throughout Iran" pave the way for a massive invasion by 24 Russian divisions. "U.S. and Soviet air forces engage in combat over Iran." U.S. intelligence detects "heightened Cuban readiness" and the United States "warns Cuba."

Plus 2: "U.S. determines Warsaw Pact preparations have reached levels that indicate an attack is likely" on Western Europe. Washington calls for "formal NATO mobilization."

Plus 6: NATO mobilizes, and the United States rushes in "full-scale reinforcements."

Plus 16: Soviet bloc forces smash into Western Europe with "at least 90 divisions." On the other side of the globe "North Korea attacks" South Korea. The fat is in the fire.

Though none of this is expected to happen, the unstated conclusion is that the United States will respond to any overt Soviet move toward the Persian Gulf.

EXECUTIVE MEMO: The pecking order in the Interior Department solicitor's office is easy to track: Just look at the carpet. Deputy Solicitor Mary Walker (referred to by some as "Imperial Majesty") recently had $11,000 worth of new beige carpet installed in her office. An official explained that the old carpet was not only worn, but had slits in it from years of shifting telephone installations. The worn, slit carpet ended up in another part of the solicitor's office — the division of Indian affairs.

EVANS & NOVAK

Regan left out of Reagan's trip

WASHINGTON — The long-simmering feud between the White House senior staff and Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan got nasty when he was kept off President Reagan's sentimental journey to Ireland.

Rowland Evans

Regan, whose roots to the Old Sod are far better tended than the president's, badly wanted to make the Irish trip. Including him made sense because he would be accompanying Reagan to the annual economic summit in London.

Robert Novak

But White House aides wanted no part of the hard-charging Treasury chief sharing the president's Irish glory. Their rationale: Other Cabinet members of Irish descent, such as Interior Secretary William Clark and Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan, also would demand to go. To avert the humiliation of not being with the president en route to the London summit, Treasury officials hurriedly worked up a trip to Vienna where Regan conferred with Austrian government officials and bankers.

HART TROUBLE

On the Sunday before Sen. Gary Hart's chances for the Democratic presidential nomination collapsed with his loss in New Jersey, veteran political operative John McEvoy submitted his immediately-effective resignation out of frustration over the failure of all his efforts to bring professionalism to Hart's campaign.

McEvoy, a Washington lawyer and former senior congressional staffer, was brought in to reorganize Hart's chaotic campaign after the April 10 Pennsylvania defeat. But well before the last batch of primaries, June 5, McEvoy had concluded that neophyte campaign chairman Oliver Henkel would not permit a professional operation and that Hart would not intervene against old law-school classmate Henkel.

The last straw for McEvoy was Henkel's failure to keep a Hart staff covenant against any talk about possible delegate-search cooperation with the Rev. Jesse Jackson until after June 5. Instead, Henkel leaked to a reporter an alleged Hart-Jackson deal. That hurt the senator in both the California and New Jersey primaries.

REAGAN'S ARABIAN PRINCE

President Reagan's quick agreement to Saudi Arabia's request for Stinger anti-aircraft missiles is partly explained by his fondness for Prince Bandar, Saudi ambassador to the U.S., who has perhaps the closest personal relationship of any foreign envoy with Reagan.

Bandar fits Reagan's romantic views of what a diplomat ought to be: a U.S.-trained fighter pilot, member of the Saudi royal family, son of the Saudi defense minister and (Reagan confides) as good a story-teller as the president himself. That relationship with the normally pro-Israel Reagan has made the prince the target of even more Israeli hostility than normally directed at an Arab diplomat.

A footnote: Bandar strongly urged his government in Riyadh that the U.S.-armed Saudi Air Force must take the first chance it got to attack Iranian planes in Saudi air space. That happened last week, exploding the fashionable argument here that the Saudis never would dare take on the Iranians.

TEXAS TRICKS

Although Rep. Phil Gramm had won the Republican Senate nomination in Texas three weeks earlier, his managers scheduled a steady diet of television spots for him just before the June 2 Democratic run-off in an effort to keep conservative voters at home.

The theory behind the commercials: Reminding conservative Texans about the chance to elect Gramm in November might keep them from supporting conservative Rep. Kent Hance against liberal state Sen. Lloyd Doggett in the Democratic run-off. Doggett edged Hance by less than a thousand votes — a relief for Republican leaders who had despaired of beating Hance in the general election.

A footnote: Hance's backers promise all-out efforts to stop Sen. Edward M. Kennedy in any future presidential nomination fight in Texas. Their vows of vengeance result from Kennedy's successful pleas to Hispanic voters to support Doggett.

LABOR BACKLASH

William Winpisinger, colorful president of the machinists union, caught an anti-labor backlash when he came in last among the four male candidates running as Mondale delegates and alternates in Maryland's 8th Congressional District, in the suburbs of Washington.

Winpisinger is one of the labor movement's most liberal and influential barons. In mass mailings to Democratic labor union families before the May 8 primary, he reminded voters that he was the top labor official on Mondale's slate. That was intended to maximize his vote.

But irrepressible, outspoken "Wimpy" trailed the other Mondale candidates. That will get him to the San Francisco convention, but only as an alternate, not a voting Mondale delegate.

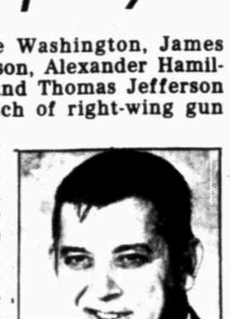
CHARLEY REESE

'Gun nuts' in good company

George Washington, James Madison, Alexander Hamilton and Thomas Jefferson were a bunch of right-wing gun nuts.



Charley Reese

That's why I don't mind so much when people who have lost touch with reality refer to me and other members of the National Rifle Association as right-wing gun nuts. I figure we're in good company.

Washington and his contemporaries believed exactly what a current bumper sticker says — that this nation's freedom was won by God, guns and guts. That, by the way, is a precise description of reality.

That's also why our forefathers included the right to bear arms in the Bill of Rights. The second amendment says that the people's right to bear arms shall not be infringed. It does not say the people's right to bear certain kinds of arms shall not be infringed. Nor does it say the people's right to bear arms shall not be infringed until some politicians think it should.

Our forefathers included this right because they were more intelligent and realistic than most of today's politicians. They understood human nature. They understood the nature of government. They knew that written expressions of rights, even in a Constitution, were meaningless unless the people had the means to defend those rights.

Madison and Hamilton were explicit about this in the Federalist Papers, a series of newspaper articles they wrote to sell the people on ratifying the Constitution. In one of them the question is posed: what recourse will the people have if this new federal government usurps the Constitution and becomes oppressive? The answer they gave: why the people will take up arms and defend their rights.

Government — any government — is institutionalized force. George Washington used fire as a metaphor. He said that government, like fire, was a useful servant but a fearful master. Mao tse-tung, the later dictator of China, was more blunt. He said the power of government comes out of the barrel of a gun. Indeed it does, including the power of our present government as you will find out if you ever break a law.

There is no physical impediment to a President proclaiming himself dictator so long as the army, which has guns, follows its commander in chief. There is nothing in Washington to stop the army, if it so chooses, from seizing power. There is no logical reason to think that there will never be a time when a foreign power may not defeat or blackmail the U.S. into surrender and impose an occupational government on the American people.

If these disasters should befall us then our only recourse would be armed revolt. The first task of a tyrant is always to disarm the people. Fidel Castro's first speech in Havana was a plea for everyone to turn in their guns. The Khmer Rouge, when they marched into Phnom Penh, spent three days collecting all the firearms before they revealed their true, genocidal intentions.

That's why we gun nuts oppose registration. A register of firearms would make it easy for a bad government to confiscate them.

We oppose handgun regulations because we do not wish to see a legal precedent set that could undermine the Constitutional right to bear arms. Some federal judges are very good at undermining Constitutional government these days.

Since the government bans illegal aliens and illegal drugs but cannot keep vast numbers of either out of the country, we think it is both philosophically wrong and foolish to attempt to ban firearms in the belief that criminals would not then have access to them.

Furthermore, police cannot protect individuals. If they can then why are roughly 20,000 people murdered, another 75,000 raped, a half a million robbed and more than half a million assaulted every year?

The only logical inference that can be drawn from these dreary annual crime statistics is that individuals must be prepared to defend themselves and their homes. Therefore, it is grossly immoral to deny honest citizens the means to protect themselves from criminals the government can neither control nor disarm.

Those of us who argue and lobby for your Constitutional right to bear arms have no apologies to make. We stand with the great men of the American Revolutions, with the Constitution, with reason and with reality.

Ireland turns away Soviet lawyer

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — The government said it sent a Soviet lawyer back to Moscow even though he had walked into a police station near Shannon Airport and indicated he wanted to go to the United States.

A prepared government statement said Irish officials interviewed 33-year-old Valery Agapov and decided he was not seeking political asylum in Ireland.

The statement said Agapov slipped off a Soviet Aeroflot jetliner when it made a 90-minute refueling stop at Shannon Airport Saturday on a flight from Havana, Cuba, to Moscow.

He turned up at a police station more than two miles from the airport and kept repeating the word "America," the statement said. He remained overnight for questioning.

Talks over Hong Kong resume

HONG KONG (AP) — The governor of Hong Kong, Sir Edward Youde, left for Peking today for talks on the future of the colony when Britain's lease expires and it returns to Chinese control in 1997.

The two-day meeting starting Tuesday is the 16th round of the second phase of talks, which began last September when British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher visited China.

Protesters arrested at U.S. bases

MUTLANGEN, West Germany (AP) — Police said they arrested more than 60 people who tried unsuccessfully to blockade U.S. military bases over the weeend to protest NATO nuclear missiles.

More than 1,000 demonstrators gathered Saturday at the U.S. arms depot at Mutlangen, where Pershing 2 nuclear missiles are deployed, and at the Bismarck and Hardt barracks at nearby Schwaebisch-Gmuend, West German police and U.S. Army spokesmen said.

Most of those arrested had refused police orders to clear entrances to the bases.

Jet piece falls on school grounds

TOKYO (AP) — An exhaust cover from a Korean Air Lines jetliner fell onto the grounds of an elementary school near Osaka Interantional Airport, but no one was injured, police said today.

More than 20 children were in the gymnasium of Ikejiri Elementary School in Itami City in western Japan when a section of a stainless steel tail cone, weighing about 16 pounds, fell through the roof of a hut housing a sewer pump.

Pope to begin trip to Switzerland

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Tuesday begins a six-day tour of Switzerland, a cradle of the Reformation and a center of some contemporary Protestant impatience with the pace of Vatican efforts toward Christian unity.

John Paul faces criticism in Switzerland that ecumenism — efforts to bring Roman Catholics and Protestants closer — has been stalling in recent years. The Swiss church also faces a shortage of priests and a problem of youth alienated by the Pope's views on sexuality and disenchanted with the Vatican approach to interfaith marriages. In Switzerland, almost one of every two marriages involves two faiths.

There has even been criticism of the pope's scheduled meeting with all seven members of the Federal Council, the Swiss Cabinet.

John Paul is to stop in 10 of Switzerland's 26 cantons, say three outdoor Masses and hold 21 meetings with Swiss bishops, Protestant, Orthodox and Jewish leaders, hospital patients, young Catholics and journalists.

A memorandum published by the Federation of Swiss Protestant Churches emphasizes common ground with the Vatican, but also lists what Protestant leaders consider chief obstacles to unity among Christians.

Among them are the Catholic Church's position that it represents "the one Church of Jesus Christ" and its requirement that Catholic partners in interfaith marriages obtain a special dispensation from their bishop and pledge to do everything possible to raise children in the Roman Catholic faith.

An open letter to the pope, launched recently at a parish council meeting in Lucerne, a center of Swiss Catholicism, expresses displeasure over the Vatican's stand against women in the priesthood. The letter's initiators claimed they collected more than 4,000 signatures.

The letter tells the pope: "Your recent statements on this issue makes us think that you have not sufficiently realized the problems caused in our country by the shortage of priests...We call on you to initiate the admission of women to priesthood and the abolition of celibacy (by priests) with all means available to you."

Some Swiss have even complained about the amount of news coverage given to the pope's visit. Kung, in a newspaper article, called the coverage a "show...with a personality cult that has no precedent in Switzerland." Swiss television coverage will total 30 hours.

Official reiterates Sakharov, wife are 'all right'

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin's chief spokesman today repeated official assurances that Andrei Sakharov, the dissident leader reported to have gone on hunger strike more than a month ago, is in good health.

Leonid Zamyatin, responding to a question from an American reporter at a news conference on the upcoming summit of the Soviet-led economic bloc, said the physicist and his wife, Yelena Bonner, are "all right."

"Everything the Western press writes about a hunger strike are all just allegations," said Zamyatin, head of the Communist Party Central Committee's International Information Department.

He said the official news agency Tass had expressed the "official position" on the Sakharov case in a recent report and added, "I have no secrets to keep from you, but I will not discuss this question further."

Sakharov, who has been confined to the closed city of Gorky since January 1980 because of his dissident activities, was reported by friends to have started a hunger strike May 2 to demand permission for his wife to go abroad for medical treatment.

A friend who visited Gorky last month told Western reporters that Sakharov had started the fast and that Mrs. Bonner was under investigation on charges of anti-Soviet slander and possibly treason.

The KGB secret police quickly put the friend, Irina Kristi, under house arrest in Moscow. A subsequent telegram from Mrs. Bonner said Sakharov was taken from their home May 7, but there have been no reliable official reports here about Sakharov's condition since then. The city of Gorky is closed to foreigners.

Record London heat wave makes queen mop her brow

Elizabeth

LONDON (AP) — By American standards, 77 degrees isn't that hot. But in London, the temperature was the highest in Britain and had even Queen Elizabeth II complaining about the heat.

The monarch, driven from Windsor Castle to watch a polo match on Sunday, looked flushed and uncomfortable as she arrived at Windsor Park. When the car stopped, she opened the door and sighed with relief.

"The heat is almost unbearable," the queen was heard to remark to an official as she mopped her brow.

At another polo venue, Cowdray Park, the queen's eldest son, Prince Charles, hurt his right leg when his horse collided with another during play Sunday.

His groom strapped up the leg with a horse bandage, and the prince played on. His team lost, however.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass. (AP) — The 1984 class roster at Mount Greylock Regional High School had one name that rang a familiar bell — Ali Reza Pahlavi, son of the late Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, Shah of Iran.

The shah's second son received his diploma along with 146 other seniors at the public school Sunday as his mother, the Empress Farah Dibah, and sister, Princess Leila, looked on with pride.

Prior to the family's 1979 exile during the Iranian revolution, the prince's European-style education was confined to the glittering Niaravan and Golestan palaces in Tehran, where he joined tutorials with about 15 carefully selected students. The shah died in 1980.

The prince spent more than three years at Mount Greylock taking college preparatory courses. Although the family will not discuss his plans, there have been reports he will attend Princeton University.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor Dom DeLuise, actress Nina Foch and writer-director Lawrence Kasdan were among the celebrities on hand at the 11th annual Student Film Awards, honoring 10 novice filmmakers whose fame may someday eclipse their own.

The winning films, chosen from among 279 college entries, were announced Sunday by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences before a crowd of 1,200 at the Samuel Goldwyn Theater in Beverly Hills.

Gene Allen, president of the academy, said the films would be shown in 20 countries through the U.S. Information Agency.

Merit awards went to William Kopp, California Institute of the Arts, for his animated film, "Mr. Gloom"; Alan Edelstein and Peter Friedman of New York University for their documentary, "The Wizard of the Strings"; and Gregory Popp and Frank Military of Northwestern University for their dramatic feature, "The Lottery Rose."

Other winners were Anthony Laudati of State University of New York at Purchase for his 14-minute animated film, "The White Gazelle;" Marilyn Waterman of Stanford University for her documentary, "Rodin's Balzac;" Alan Kingsberg of New York University for his drama, "Minors;" Dan Reed of the University of Illinois School of Art and Design for the experimental film, "Tuscola Moon."

Theresa's Tavern in Chicago once more home of blues

CHICAGO (AP) — The Rolling Stones played in her gritty basement tavern before they were famous, and for 34 years music lovers made pilgrimages to the South Side to see legends in the making.

After a brief, forced intermission, Theresa's Tavern is back — with music six nights a week, all of it blues.

The new club is a few blocks from the down-the-steps "home" where Theresa Needham introduced some of the genre's greatest musicians before her establishment was shut down last fall when she lost her lease.

The "mother of the blues," a feisty 72 years old, is clearly happy to be back in business.

Last week, on the one night when the microphones, amplifiers and even the customers were quiet, she took some time out to talk about the old nightclub and the new one.

"All the musicians that amounted to anything at all at one time or another worked down in that basement," she said.

Zane Grey fans gather to swap tales, editions

PAYSON, Ariz. (AP) — Nearly 100 fans of adventure writer Zane Grey gathered here Sunday from around the country to swap tales and first editions near the Mogollon Rim he celebrated in Arizona Clan.

There were slides and paintings of the scenes that Grey described, and fans also took a trip to Zane Grey's restored cabin halfway up the Rim. They also heard remarks by three old-timers who knew Grey when he lived at the cabin.

Grey, whose 120 books made him the most popular author of his time as well as making him rich, only stayed in his cabin here a few months out of the year.

He started his career as a dentist and semi-pro baseball player who had to pay publishers to print his first books.

Grey left Arizona for good in the late 1920s, after being denied permission to hunt bear out of season. He was happiest near water, where he amassed all but two world records for deep-sea fishing.

But though he spent most of his time at sea, at his home in Lackawaxen, Pa., or in other hideaways as far away as New Zealand, the isolated Arizona cabin remained "the heart of his fictional world," according to a biographer, Dr. Joe L. Wheeler.

Wheeler, former English Department chairman and now an administrator at Southwestern Adventist College near Dallas, is executive director of the Zane Grey's West Society. He wore brand-new black riding boots, a black hat, cowboy shirt, belt and well-pressed jeans.

Wheeler was considering a dissertion on Feodor Dostoyevsky when his professor at Vanderbilt suggested it was the popular writers — not the critically acclaimed — who had the greatest impact on their age.

Grey, a childhood favorite, was "the last chronicler of the frontier to write about it while the frontier still existed," said Wheeler, whose research gives Grey high marks for accuracy except for the large numbers of gunfights and abductions.

"It's pretty difficult to overestimate the impact of Grey on the psyche of his age," he added, saying sneers from colleagues have lessened as Grey gains academic respectability.

Grey's books, often two or three times the length of today's western novels by writers such as Louis Lamour, first ran as magazine serials.

Fullerton defeats Longhorns

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Cal State-Fullerton left fielder John Fishel says defending champion Texas didn't have the edge heading into the NCAA College World Series baseball title game even though the Longhorns had beaten the Titans three times in four meetings this year.

"It was whoever got in front," said Fishel, who was named the CWS most valuable player and tied a CWS record with his 13th hit of the tournament in Sunday night's 3-1 championship victory by the Titans. "We had something to prove out there. We had a goal of Omaha all year. It was in three parts — the regular season, the regionals and the College World Series. We won 'em all."

Fishel said the entire tournament had been an offensive show until Fullerton's Eddie Delzer and Scott Wright took to the mound to combine for a three-hitter against Texas.

"Eddie pitched a championship game," said Fishel.

"I was throwing strikes," said Delzer, a 5-foot-8 senior left-hander. "Everything went well."

DELZER ALLOWED Texas only two hits, both infield singles in the first inning. Texas' Elanis Westbrooks beat out a slow roller to third to lead off the game. He was sacrificed to second by Bill Bates and scored when Rusty Richards' grounder over the mound was knocked down behind second by Fullerton's Jose Mota.

From that point, Delzer didn't allow a hit and only three Texas batters reached base until a leg cramp sidelined Delzer while taking warmup pitches in the eighth inning.

Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson said it was only fitting that the championship came down to the two teams with the best pitching.

"It was great Series' battle," Gustafson said. "Cal State did a better job of pitching tonight. He (Delzer) did a great job and he was the guy I had a lot of concern about all week.

"He was the type of pitcher who could give us a lot of trouble and he sure did. If it hadn't been for his injury, he could have gone nine innings."

WRIGHT came in and kept the lid on the Texas bats. Only pinch-hitter Doug Hodo's double with one out in the eighth provided any Longhorn hope. Wright, who upped his NCAA record with the 22nd save on the season, then retired the next five batters.

Fullerton, ranked third with a 66-20 overall record, scored once in the second when John Bryant was hit by a pitch, stole second and scored on Kirk Bates' single. Bryant then tripled home Bob Caffrey in the fourth and Bryant scored the final run on George Sarkissian's sacrifice fly.

Freshman left-hander Greg Swindell, 14-2, took the loss for Texas in the finals. The fourth-ranked Longhorns completed their year with a 60-14 record.

Fullerton State also won the title in 1979, defeating Arkansas 2-1 in the title game.

Rowdy Gaines concentrates on games, not politics.

Gaines eyes five Golds

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Rowdy Gaines is a swimmer, a very good swimmer. He has hopes of winning five gold medals in the Summer Olympics.

Gaines, on the other hand, is not a politician, and at least for now, can't concern himself with the fact that Russia and East Germany, two swimming powers, won't be competing this summer in the Olympics.

"Right now, I can't concern myself with the fact that Russia and East Germany won't be competing," said Gaines, who was in Midland Sunday to give a brief swimming clinic for the City of Midland Swim Team.

"I do have to worry about making the American Olympic swimming team. That's the only thing I can concern myself with now. Our trials begin June 25 in Indianapolis and you can't take anything for granted. They take only the top two in each event, so it doesn't take much not to make the team."

GAINES IS favored to win a berth in five Olympic events. He owns the world record in the 100-meter freestyle and the American record in the 200-meter freestyle, an event that he has been ranked No. 1 in the world at times and as low as No. 2 in America. He also hopes to be a member of three relay teams. Thus, the hopes for listening to the Star Spangled Banner five times in the Olympics.

"After I make the team, I might reflect on the Olympic Games situation, but I don't think my feelings will change much. There is really nothing I can do about it anyway," said Gaines.

"I would be lying if I said this Olympics will be the same as it would be with East Germany and Russia in the Olympics. This Olympics will be a tainted one. Those two countries are the best next to us in swimming and there is no getting around that."

Gaines still has horrid memories of 1980 when American athletes were not allowed to compete in the Russian edition of the Olympics.

"The dream of making the Olympic team just naturally goes with all American athletes. I'm no different," said the 25-year-old Gaines. "There is no way I would be here if it weren't for the 1980 Olympics. I didn't get my chance and that dampened my views on the Olympics. Now we have a situation where 1984 is somewhat tainted.

"For instance, my best event is in the 100-meters. East Germany's Jorge Woithe was ranked No. 1 in the world last year and he won't be here to compete."

HOWEVER, WEST Germany's Michael Gross will be at Los Angeles in the 200 freestyle. Gross broke Gaines' world record in the 200 and that should be a dandy matchup.

The Olympic experience has vaulted many participants into the public limelight and produced great financial reward. That fact has not been lost to Gaines.

"You set personal goals and you tell yourself that is the reason you are competing. But in the back of the mind, you can't help but wonder what winning four or five gold medals in the Olympics might mean in terms of financial reward.

"It might not mean anything, but it will open some doors. I don't think there is any question about that. You can't help but think about it."

For the competitive swimmer, competition is a series of "peaking" and "tapering" for maximum results. Gaines is currently in the "tapering" posture.

"I'm at peak right now and I'm tapering for the trials," noted Gaines. "To reach a peak, I may swim eight to 10 miles a day, but right now I won't even do a mile a day.

Lakers take Celtics apart

By DAVID REMNICK
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Stitch by stitch, seam by seam, the Boston Celtics fell apart like a cheap suit Sunday.

They lost an 11-point third-quarter lead and a chance to carry their 15th National Basketball Association title home to Boston. Instead, they will lug home a sack of sweat-sodden laundry and, perhaps, a plan for Tuesday's seventh and deciding game at steamy Boston Garden.

The Lakers' 118-109 victory owed much to Boston's five-for-17 shooting in the fourth quarter and general collapse, but there were other factors at work. As he did in Game 1, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar ignored a shattering migraine headache and played magnificently. His 30 points led all scorers.

Magic Johnson, who had 10 assists, broke the championship series record in that category, and Byron Scott (11 points) hit several key shots during the Lakers' late surge, including a three-pointer that broke a 93-93 tie with 6:38 left in the game. Until then, the Celtics stayed in the game with free throws and pluck, but Los Angeles went on an 18-1 tear that made a return trip to Boston a certainty.

"IT WAS a lot of fun until the third quarter," said Celtics Coach K.C. Jones. "All of a sudden it became a job."

"We're going to Boston with all those banners hanging down waving at us," said Lakers Coach Pat Riley. "We'll see then who has the better team."

The teams would do well to acclimate themselves in an Amazonian jungle. The Boston Garden has no air conditioning and playing conditions for Game 5 on Friday were horrendous. Temperatures reached the high 90s and the heat wave on the East Coast is expected to continue.

"We've hired 5,000 people to pray for rain," Riley said. "Our medical staff will be filling the players up with nutrients and minerals."

Riley will be more than pleased if his defenders can repeat the job they did on Larry Bird Sunday. Although he had 28 points to lead the Celtics, Bird shot just 11 times from the field. He rarely handled the ball on the perimeter, where he is so effective as a shooter and as a passer. Instead, he got most of his points off the offensive glass and at the free throw line.

Abdul-Jabbar was listed as "questionable" before the game began. Early Sunday morning he had a migraine and vomited several times. He missed the Lakers' pregame "walk-through" in order to receive an intravenous treatment.

"There was never any question I would play. I'd just play sick," Abdul-Jabbar said. "I had a migraine around 1 a.m. and it was still there when I woke up in the morning. It went away just before the game. I threw up my breakfast. I guess I was running on vapors."

ABDUL-JABBAR played 35 minutes in the terrible heat Friday night. Game 5 at Boston Garden was a draining affair for everyone involved, but it could not have come at a worse time for Abdul-Jabbar. He has experienced severe headaches throughout the series. And while he is in incredible physical condition, he is, since the retirement of Elvin Hayes, the league's oldest active player.

But Abdul-Jabbar began Sunday's game like a leviathan, scoring 13 points in the first half. In fact, Robert Parish rested before Abdul-Jabbar.

"We're ordering another migraine for Tuesday's game," Riley said. "That's twice it's worked."

Abdul-Jabbar played 42 minutes, more than any other Laker. He forced Parish into foul trouble, pulled down 10 rebounds and passed for five assists. Before the game began, Abdul-Jabbar also gave the team a short lecture that clearly inspired them.

"In Boston last time I took a lot of bad shots (seven of 25) and I wasn't able to hit the open man," he said. "They were doing an excellent job of double-teaming me. Today I took a longer look at the defense. And Byron Scott did an excellent job for us. His shots took a lot of pressure off me."

Scott, who came from the San Diego Clippers along with Swen Nater in a trade for Norm Nixon, started for much of the year. But he has been erratic lately.

"The reason for that is pretty self-evident," Riley said. "Byron is very young. In that rally (in the third quarter) we went with Kurt Rambis, Jamaal Wilkes, Byron, Kareem and James Worthy. Quiet desparation, someone called it. You have to give the people who have been struggling a chance."

Dennis Johnson's tremendous shooting from the outside (22 points) and Bird's tenacious play close to the basket were the principal reasons for Boston's 65-59 lead at the half.

BOTH BIRD and Magic Johnson had 17 points in the half and Michael Cooper and Dennis Johnson had 13 each. But in this series, Worthy has been Los Angeles' most potent offensive weapon, and he had trouble shooting.

Worthy found another way to make his presence known. Ever since Kevin McHale decked Rambis on a fast break in Game 4, tempers have been fragile. Early in the first period Sunday, Worthy pushed Cedric Maxwell into the basket stanchion from behind. But unlike Rambis, who chased McHale with intent to punish, Maxwell made a few steps toward his antagonist and backed off from a possible fight.

Lendl stages one of great net comebacks

PARIS (AP) — Ivan Lendl staged one of the great comebacks in tennis Sunday when he oulasted John McEnroe 3-6, 2-6, 6-4, 7-5, 7-5 to win the men's title at the French Open, his first victory in a Grand Slam tournament.

"I had to work hard for it, that's for sure," said the 24-year-old Czechoslovakian after his four-hour, eight-minute victory on the sun-baked Center Court at Roland Garros Stadium.

"John was playing great in the first two sets. He was hitting corners and lines all the time. Then I think he got a little tired. I was in better shape today and could run all day long," said Lendl.

It was the fifth time that Lendl, ranked No. 2 in the world, had reached the final of a Grand Slam event. He lost to Jimmy Connors at the U.S. Open in 1982 and 1983, to Bjorn Borg here in 1981 and to Mats Wilander in last year's Australian Open.

But this time he prevailed, crushing McEnroe's hopes of becoming the first American man to win the French singles title since Tony Trabert in 1955.

"Im very happy that I won my first Grand Slam tournament in Paris and I will be back next year," Lendl told the crowd, which booed when McEnroe refused to take the microphone.

Earlier, Martina Navratilova and Pam Shriver won the first-ever Grand Slam women's doubles title by the same pair when they beat Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia and West Germany's Claudia Kohde 5-7, 6-3, 6-2.

In winning the title, Navratilova also became only the second player in the history of tennis to win the Grand Slam — successive victories at the world's four major tournaments — in both singles and doubles.

ASKED to describe his feelings when he found himself two sets down, Lendl said: "I saw a glimmer of hope as soon as I broke his service for the first time in the match in the middle of the third set.

"He broke me back, but I felt that once I had broken him once, I could do it again. I just had to hang on in there."

Three times in the opening set, McEnroe, who until this year had never gotten past the quarterfinals here, served an ace on game point.

When he swept into a 4-0 lead at the start of the second set, breaking Lendl twice and serving two love games, the title looked as if it was his.

In the third game of the third set, the 25-year-old New Yorker lost his patience with a television cameramen, grabbed the man's headset and threw it to the ground.

The crowd booed, and although McEnroe pulled out the game, he lost the set and suddenly looked vulnerable.

Suddenly his big first serve — used to such deadly effect earlier in the match — began to fail him. Lendl broke him twice, and when the Czech squared the match at two-sets all, the trophy was up for grabs.

As McEnroe became more and more frustrated with his service and overhit his approach shots, so Lendl turned on the power, hitting a succession of devastating service returns and forehan and backhand passing shots.

At 3-3 in the final set, Lendl saved two break points, held his serve to love the next time round.

TED BATTLES

Lendl turns rout into victory

The first two sets were like Martina Navratilova-Chris Evert Lloyd the day before. No contest. A gross mismatch.

The outcome was cast in stone, a good time to take the hyper-active pup for a run.

John McEnroe's superiority to Ivan Lendl was so conclusive, there really wasn't much point in pursuing the matter. If it was a fight, the ref would have stopped it. If it was high school baseball, the 10-run rule would have been invoked.

It was incedulous. This was for the French Open tennis championship and Lendl was the best the world had to offer against McEnroe? How did John ever lose to this guy?

McEnroe wasn't even getting a good work out in his tuneup for a Midland appearance in August. I guess the best thing about it was that John wouldn't be playing Ivan at the Chaparral Center.

It had been 30 years since an American had won the French Open, a modern wonder, perhaps, in view of the fact that Connors and McEnroe had taken so many shots at it. But after today, the U.S. could divest itself of that albatross.

AFTER WEARING out Christy Hanover and returning to the house, the third set was well underway. But instead of a coup de grace, Lendl was leading, 4-2. Surely, McEnroe was coasting.

But it was evident, that Lendl's chances were improving with each missed first serve. Fatigue had set in on both sides. Neither, it seemed, could hold a serve.

McEnroe couldn't get his first serve in and was a sitting duck for Lendl on the second.

Lendl hung on to win and then did it again, 7-5.

Instead of Navritolva-Lloyd, this was beginning to look more like the Lakers and Celtics. Los Angeles, with its superior ability, should have won in four straight. They let the Celtics squirm away in a couple of overtimes, and suddenly it's anybody's playoff.

MC ENROE'S superior skills were quite dominant in the first two sets, but by the third set, other factors clouded what had been a clear-cut issue—determination, perseverance, stamina. McEnroe is not bankrupt in this area. His past is littered with heroic stands, as well as the celebrated disputes with umpires and linesmen. But Sunday, Lendl had that little extra that made the difference.

It was after Lendl pulled even in the fourth set and the less-friendly combatants headed for the decisive final fifth set, that one had to wonder what effect the dramatic comeback had on McEnroe's resolution. It had to be demoralizing.

In the wake of Lendl's win one wonders if an American will ever win a French Open. One also wonders how much the match took out of McEnroe. Will he be able to recover in time for Wimbledon...or Midland?

Breland, Biggs don't relish July box-offs

FORT WORTH (AP) — Mark Breland and Tyrell Biggs, the stars of the 1984 United States Olympic Boxing Trials, aren't looking forward to a July box-off with competitors they've already whipped.

But they must prepare for the box-offs in Las Vegas July 6-7 against a "most noteworthy opponent" to be selected in Colorado Springs June 13-30.

Biggs, the super heavyweight champion from Philadelphia, was informed he will face Craig Payne of Livonia, Mich. in the box-offs. He has beaten Payne four straight times, including a 5-0 decision Sunday as the trails ended.

"It does bother me," said Biggs. "I've beaten this guy four times and I don't want to keep pressing my luck. I don't like it but that's the way it is."

If Payne defeats Biggs on July 6, then they would battle again on July 7 for the right to represent the United States in the Olympics in Los Angeles.

Breland, the welterweight champion from Brooklyn, won all of his bouts easily but will have to fight either David Gutierrez of San Diego or Louis Howard of St. Louis.

Breland beat both opponents 5-0, including Gutierrez in the finals on Sunday.

Tigers' sweep widens lead

Cubs beat Cards; Braves lose

By The Associated Press

The Detroit Tigers shook out of their recent slump with a doubleheader sweep of the Baltimore Orioles Sunday that extended their American League East lead to seven games.

Kirk Gibson and Alan Trammell drove in four runs apiece and Lou Whitaker fell one short of the major league record by scoring five runs as the Tigers won the first game 10-4.

Dan Petry hurled a three-hitter and Howard Johnson drove in two runs to pace the 8-0 second-game victory for the Tigers, who had lost nine of their previous 16 games before Sunday.

The Tigers doubled their 3½ game AL East lead in just four days by winning three of four from the Orioles while the second-place Toronto Blue Jays lost three straight to the New York Yankees.

FOUR ERRORS by the Orioles, now 11 games behind in third place, led to five unearned Detroit runs in the opener and four other runs were tainted by Baltimore's failure to execute plays in the second game.

In other American League action, Oscar Gamble and Don Mattingly each smashed two-run homers, with Gamble's blast into the upper deck in right field at Yankee Stadium snapping a 3-3 tie in the sixth inning, as New York downed Toronto 5-3 and completed a three-game sweep of the Blue Jays.

Baseball Roundup

Larry Parrish blasted two home runs and Pete O'Brien added a solo shot, leading the Texas Rangers to a 3-1 victory over the Oakland A's behind Charlie Hough's seven-hitter.

Carmen Castillo homered and Bert Blyleven pitched 2 2-3 scoreless innings in his first regular-season relief appearance since 1972 as the Cleveland Indians beat the Seattle Mariners 3-1 in the first game of a double-header.

Ken Phelps slugged a solo home run to break a 3-3 tie in the eighth inning as the Mariners snapped a six-game losing streak with a 4-3 victory in the the second game.

Rick Miller's pinch-hit triple drove in Bill Buckner with the tie-breaking run with two out in the eighth inning, lifting the Boston Red Sox to a 5-4 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Tom Brunansky's three-run homer in the first inning and a seven-run eruption in the fourth carried rookie Ed Hodge and the Minnesota Twins to a 12-5 triumph over the Chicago White Sox.

GEOFF ZAHN blanked Kansas City on six hits and Mike Brown and Brian Downing stroked run-scoring singles as the California Angels beat the Royals 2-0.

In the National League, run-scoring singles by Tim Raines and Jim Wohlford in the first inning started the Montreal Expos on their way to a 3-2 victory over New York, ending the Mets' winning streak at six games.

Lee Lacy's inside-the-park home run highlighted a seven-run 12th inning as the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 12-6 to snap a six-game losing streak.

Joaquin Andujar hit Ryne Sandberg with a pitch with the bases loaded and two outs in the eighth inning to force in the game's first run and Leon Durham stole home in the ninth to give the Chicago Cubs a 2-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

KEN LANDREAUX slugged his third homer in three days to lead the Los Angeles Dodgers past the Atlanta Braves 3-2. Graig Nettles hit two home runs and drove in four runs to help rally the San Diego Padres to a 7-5 triumph over the Cincinnati Reds.

The Houston Astros, who lost most of their bats in an overnight burglary, got a three-run homer from Jose Cruz in the first inning and breezed to a 7-4 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Cubs' Soff yields two hits in 1-0 loss

By The Associated Press

Ray Soff gave up only two hits in six innings, but it wasn't enough as the Midland Cubs couldn't generate any scoring punch.

The result was a 1-0 Texas League baseball victory for the San Antonio Dodgers.

In other Texas League action Sunday night, Beaumont edged San Antonio, 3-2, Shreveport blanked Jackson, 2-0, and Arkansas beat Tulsa, 5-1.

The only run Soff gave up came in the fifth inning when Larry See singled, moved to third when Ben Catlin reached on a fielder's choice and the attempt to force out See at second was wild. See came home on an infield groundout by Todd Gauntlett.

Tim Meeks, 5-5, was the winning pitcher for San Antonio. He gave up 10 hits, struck out 11 and did not give up a walk.

Mark Wasinger singled home Al Newman with the winning run in the eighth inning as the Beaumont Golden Gators edged the El Paso Diablos, 3-2.

Newman singled, was sacrificed to second and came home on the single by Wasinger, who was 2-4 with a double and a single.

Lightning strikes twice for golfer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — For most golfers, a hole in one in a lifetime is a major accomplishment. For Bob Harik of Anchorage, lightning struck twice on the same 18-hole round.

Playing in a best-ball tournament with four partners on the par-72 Elmendorf Golf Course on Saturday, Harik aced the 158-yard, par-3 fourth hole with a seven iron for his first-ever hole in one.

Four tee shots later, the 51-year-old Federal Aviation Administration employee used a six iron to hole out in one on the 149-yard, par-3 eighth hole.

"It was just a fluke," the 15 handicapper said later. "I never would have expected even one, much less two."

Express solidifies lead

By The Associated Press

The Los Angeles Express solidified its grip on first place in the USFL's Pacific Division Sunday as Duane Gunn returned a punt 77 yards for a touchdown in a 17-10 victory over the Oklahoma Outlaws.

The Outlaws, who lost their eighth straight game, managed to hold Express quarterback Steve Young to only eight completions and 69 yards, and intercepted two of his passes, but their offense again fell short.

Ernest Anderson's 5-yard scoring run in the third quarter was their first touchdown in three games.

After Gunn's 77-yard return in the first quarter opened the scoring, Los Angeles got a 39-yard field goal from Tony Zendejas with 18 seconds left in the first period. Kevin Mack scored the other Express touchdown on a 1-yard slam in the second period before Oklahoma scored for the first time on a 39-yard field goal by Efren Herrera as the first half ended.

The loss officially ended the 6-10 Outlaws' hopes for a postseason playoff spot.

The victory was the fifth in a row for Los Angeles, 9-7, and moved the Express one game ahead of the Denver Gold, who lost Friday, in the Pacific Division.

USFL

And, they did it while generating only 223 yards on offense.

"We're glad to win and get out of here," said Express Coach John Hadl. "Everytime you play (Outlaws Coach) Woody (Widenhofer), you're in for some trouble."

Widenhofer complained that his team "should have won today. I felt we outplayed LA."

"We didn't get a break all day long," Widenhofer said. "The team played inspired ball. I can't give them enough praise. The penalties were just too tough for us to overcome against a good team."

Oklahoma was penalized 11 times for 82 yards.

In other games Sunday, the New Jersey Generals defeated the New Orleans Breakers 31-21 and clinched a playoff spot, the Houston Gamblers clinched first place in the Central Division by downing the Chicago Blitz 38-13; and the Birmingham Stallions routed the Washington Federals 42-21.

On Friday night, Denver dropped a 21-19 decision to the Philadelphia Stars while the Arizona Wranglers routed the Jacksonville Bulls 45-14.

Saturday afternoon, the Oakland Invaders won their seventh straight game, 20-13 over the Michigan Panthers. Saturday night, the Tampa Bay Bandits rolled to a 42-24 victory over the Memphis Showboats.

Monday night's game features San Antonio at Pittsburgh.

Herschel Walker and Maurice Carthon each scored a pair of touchdowns for New Jersey as the Generals nailed down a wild-card playoff berth.

Walker scored on a 1-yard run and a 44-yard option pass from Rod Pegues while Carthon gained 71 yards rushing and tallied on a pair of 1-yard runs.

The Generals took the second-half kickoff and drove 79 yards, with Carthon going over from the 1 to make it 24-10.

GAINES

"I've gone through 25 or 30 tapering periods and it's very hard to hit a taper perfectly, where you swim the very best you can. This, however, is where I feel I may have the edge on the younger swimmers because I've had so much more experience with tapering. At 25, I will be the oldest to make the Olympic team — if I do."

Gaines graduated from Auburn two years ago and has since lived in Austin where he is training under the direction of Texas swim coaches Eddie Reese and Richard Quick. Both coaches were fomerly at Auburn.

Gaines didn't start competitive swimming until he was 17 years-old in Winter Haven, Fla.

"I don't know why I started so late. Winter Haven is 80 percent water and I grew up knowing how to swim. I wish I had started around the age of 14, but not before that. You can burn out if you start too young. That's why I think it is so important for the younger kids to have a lot of fun with their swimming."

Gaines is hoping to have some fun of his own in the next two months.

Group wants no change in gas exemption

AUSTIN — Saying Texas consumers are already paying high utility rates, the director of a natural gas trade association told the House Committee recently that current sales tax exemptions on gas sold for industrial use should not be changed.

"If you were to impose a sales tax on this natural gas, the consumer would feel the results immediately via the monthly bill," said Patrick Nugent, executive director of the Association of Texas Intrastate Natural Gas Pipelines, a trade group with seven large pipeline companies as members.

Currently, there is a sales tax exemption on natural gas sold to electrical generating companies and industrial customers, which Nugent said amounted to approximately $350 million per year.

"All of us depend on natural gas for our everyday living whether it be through electrical generation or through a local gas distribution company," said Nugent. "It is a commodity that is essential to all socio-economic groups."

Calling natural gas "a basic necessity of life much like food and medicine," Nugent said removing the exemption would be a disservice to consumers. Additionally, he noted the natural gas industry in Texas has yet to rebound from recession, and is being hurt by federal policies allowing out-of-state companies to sell excess gas in the state.

"As a result of recession, conservation and competition, natural gas sales have been hurt and hurt badly," Nugent said. "The pipelines have not been able to market the producers' gas, and as a result, we have seen many new wells shut in and takes from existing wells at an all-time low."

Natural gas must compete against alternate fuels in the marketplace, he said, with imported and domestic fuel oil posing a constant threat, as well as gas coming in from out-of-state and from the Outer Continental Shelf.

Nugent warned that instead of a temporary surplus in deliverability which is currently being experienced, the future could bring extreme hardships in the form of critical shortages.

AP expands stocks service

ATLANTA (AP) — The Associated Press has announced an expansion of its highspeed financial service that will allow newspapers to tailor and select stock market tables.

DigitalStocks II, the new service, will be available this fall. It was unveiled Sunday in Atlanta at the American Newspaper Publishers Association's Operations Management Conference & Exposition.

The AP's new financial service will be transmitted at 12,000 words a minute, meaning the entire New York Stock Exchange tables will be transmitted in four minutes.

AP member newspapers receiving DigitalStocks II will be able to select which stocks they want to list and which columns of information they want to print about each stock.

A key feature of the new service is remote programming, said Richard G. Atkins, AP director of communications.

When a newspaper's requirements change, the AP will be able to adjust the service by telephone. Changes would take effect in one day, without a visit from an AP technician.

DigitalStocks II is a complete service, and anything available on an AP financial wire today will become part of the new service as well.

At the operations conference, the AP also demonstrated Computer News Graphics, the first nationwide computer graphics system designed for daily newspapers.

Computer News Graphics combines computer techniques with the production of a graphics database to deliver sophisticated graphics more quickly.

Joining AP in the venture are graphics designer Robert Lockwood, newspaper consultant Craig Ammerman and computer specialist George Wieland. AP and Lockwood, who heads AP-News Graphics, will produce the graphics database. Ammerman and Wieland will put together the hardware.

Among other things, Computer News Graphics will allow newspapers to store their own graphics and retrieve, for example, a map of any section of the world, a sports team log or drawings of planes.

West Texas banker eager to process student loans

Students and parents who have tried unsuccessfully to borrow money for college expenses may be surprised to learn that there is actually an abundance of long-term, low-interest money available for that purpose. The trick is to find a banker interested enough in making such loans to go through the paper work involved.

At least one West Texas banker says his bank is not only interested but is eager to process student loan applications. Jim Bullock, senior vice president and head of the consumer loan department of Texas American Bank of Amarillo says his department is "quite active in making student loans and would like to make even more."

Cooperating with the Texas Guaranteed Student Loan Program, he said the bank will lend qualified undergraduate students up to $2,500 per year and up to $12,500 total over the course of his or her college years. Graduate students may qualify for as much as $5,000 per year or up to $15,000 total in student loans.

No interest is charged on the loans until six months after the borrower ceases to be enrolled as at least a half-time student. Then repayment at eight percent interest may be made over five to ten years, depending on the amount borrowed.

The amount of the loan for which a student may qualify depends on the cost of attending college, other financial aid which may be received and the family's financial condition.

Bullock said that once the school completes its part of the application, the bank routinely processes it and arranges for the disbursement of the cash. The proceeds from the loans can be used at any Texas school, including vocational schools, or by any Texas resident attending an out-of-state school, he said.

Texas American Bank's student loan coordinator, Traci Layman, should be contacted for additional information on Texas Guaranteed Student Loans and for loan application forms.

Largest credit unions growing faster than average

MADISON, Wis. — The nation's 100 largest credit unions grew faster in 1983 than the average for all credit unions, according to the Credit Union National Association (CUNA).

Loan portfolios at the 100 largest credit unions increased 19.9 percent during the year, ending 1983 with $12.01 billion in loans outstanding. By comparison, all 19,203 credit unions in the country showed combined loan growth of 13.0 percent, closing the year with $58.2 billion in loans outstanding.

Savings growth at the top 100 credit unions slightly outpaced that for credit unions in general, increasing 23.2 percent, compared to the national rate of 20.8 percent. At year-end, the largest 100 credit unions held $19.1 billion of the total $90.4 billion savings in all credit unions.

Assets of the top 100 increased 23.3 percent to $20.80 billion, compared to an overall asset growth rate of 18.9 percent and an aggregate year-end total of $98.3 billion.

All figures are for individual member credit unions only, and exclude corporate credit unions (those serving only other credit unions.)

Navy Federal Credit Union, Arlington, VA., remained the nation's only billion-dollar credit union, with $1.4 billin in assets, P1.2 billion in savings, $1.1 billion in loans and 616,027 members.

Eight credit unions broke into the top 100 for the first time.

Pennsylvania State Employees Credit Union, Harrisburg, made the biggest jump, from 153rd place to 74th. Naval Air Federal Credit Union, Norfolk, Va., jumped 64 places, from 129th to 65th.

Others joining the top 100 in 1983 were TRW Systems Credit Union, Redondo Beach, Calif.; Atlanta Postal Credit Union, Atlanta; Nevada Federal Credit Union, Las Vegas; Air Defense Center Federal Credit Union, El Paso; Motorola West Employees Credit Union, Scottsdale, Ariz. and Richardson Credit Union, Richardson, Tx.

Exxon begins injection on Illinois surfactant pilot project

Exxon Co., U.S.A. has begun injection of chemicals in a surfactant pilot project in an Illinois oil field that could lead to the recovery of an additional 75 million barrels of oil and extend the field life 30 years.

Sweeping the Fayette County reservoir with a surfactant-polymer microemulsion would follow more than 45 years of primary and waterflood operations that have yielded almost 300 million barrels of oil from the Loudon Field.

The surfactant mixes with water like a detergent to improve the ability of water to wash oil out of the underground rock. Recent start-up of an 80-acre pilot project to help determine wheather the surfactant process is commercial follows initiation early last month of a 40-acre pilot project. The two research pilot tests will extend over three to five years, according to Dan Mendell III, manager of Exxon's Midcontinent Production Division in Midland.

Exxon has completed two smaller pilots, each less than one acre, which resulted in recovery of about 60 percent of the oil still in place. The larger-scale tests will allow the company to experiment with the volumes of surfactant and well spacing to allow maximum recovery of additional oil if a full-scale project is implemented.

Mendell said a decision to expand the tertiary recovery process will be made in time to implement it by 1990.

The Loudon field, located in south-central Illinois 100 miles east of St. Louis, was discovered in 1938 and originally contained 26,000 productive acres. Exxon, which currently operates 14,300 acres in the heart of the field, has drilled more than 1,600 wells there since the field was discovered.

Water flooding in the early 1950s resulted in a production build-up that saw Exxon's production rate peak at approximately 30,000 barrels per day in 1963. A normal decline has reduced the company's production rate to 3,000 barrels per day, and most of the field will become uneconomical to operate before the end of the century unless tertiary production methods are begun.

If Exxon decides to use the surfactant throughout the field, Mendell estimates the company will be able to produce about half of the oil which would have been left behind after convential recovery methods ended.

"The commercial application of this technology has been delayed," Mendell explained, "because of its cost relationship to the price of the crude oil to be recovered." Mendell noted that recent technical improvements in the Loudon pilot process, including recovery of a significant percentage of the oil left after waterflooding, have made further pilot tests feasible.

"Coventional recovery methods leave behind an average of about 60 percent of the oil initially present. We hope to be able to expand use of this new technology which, when perfected and implemented in this and other fields across the nation where it is applicable, would allow reduction of American dependence on foreign oil production," Mendell said.

Keeping older cars gives auto repair industry boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans holding on to their automobiles for an extra year or two have given a boost to the auto repair industry, while putting a sizable dent in both new and used car sales.

The number of automotive repair shops increased by nearly 10 percent between 1977 and 1982, Census Bureau reports show. During the same period, used car dealers declined by 13 percent and new car sales operations fell 16 percent.

Responding to high prices and interest rates in recent years, Americans tended to keep their autos longer than in the past, according to figures collected by the American Automobile Association and the R.L. Polk Co.

Polk, which compiles statistics on motor vehicles, estimated the age of the average auto in the United States at 6.5 years. The firm says that's the longest Americans have held onto their cars since 1950.

And at AAA, Richard White estimated that the average age of the cars on U.S. highways increased from 5.7 years in 1972 to 7.2 years in 1982.

The dramatic recovery in the U.S. auto industry since 1983 was not covered by the data. So far this year, domestic cars have been selling at an annual rate of 8.6 million. At the bottom of the sales slump in 1982 only 5.75 million cars were sold.

For those who keep their cars longer, White said, more frequent care is needed. "Some people do routine maintenance themselves, while others rely on service facilities," he said.

The need to keep the growing fleet of older cars running saw the number of auto repair shops jump from 80,741 in 1977 to 88,568 in 1982.

And with Americans trading in their cars less often, the number of used car lots dealing in those autos declined from 13,287 in 1977 to 11,551 five years later, according to the Census Bureau report. That was the smallest number of independent used car dealers since 1967, when 11,502 were counted.

New car dealers fell from 30,793 in 1977 to 25,641 in 1982.

Used car dealers employed 36,744 persons in 1982, down from 42,276 five years earlier. And employment by new car dealers fell from 790,013 to 687,135 in the same period.

Auto repair shops made up only part of the drop in jobs, increasing from 316,302 employees in 1977 to 366,853 in 1982.

General repair shops were the largest category in both years, rising from 37,240 in 1977 to 40,475 in 1982. Body shops were the No. 2 category at 23,750 in 1982, up from 22,584.

Rising interest rates slow new home sales

WASHINGTON — Rising interest rates are beginning to slow the pace of new home sales, according to Pete Herder, president of the National Association of Home Builders.

The seasonally adjusted rate of new home sales stood at 634,000 during April, down five percent from March and the same rate as recorded in April 1983, the Commerce Department reported today. Actual sales fell to 59,000 during April, down from the 61,000 homes sold during March.

"Higher interest rates have bumped some borderline buyers out of the market and discouraged a few others," Herder said. "Nevertheless, home sales are still holding up much better than many had anticiapted."

During the first four months of 1984, 229,000 new homes were sold, up 11 percent from the 206,000 sold during the same period last year.

But rising interest rates have dampened the outlook for the second half of 1984, Herder added. "Inventories of unsold units have reached their highest levels in more than a year and builders are reevaluating their marketing and construction plans for the next six months."

Herder urged the Congress to enact and the President to sign a deficit reduction package that would cut the federal deficit between $142 billion and $182 billion over the next three years.

The Scamp™ is Here

- Simple two step blade control — both the blade and engine stop
- Handle-mounted manual restart cord makes starting a comfortable arm action
- 4-HP rated engine designed to last 50% longer than most mower engines
- High-fin flywheel helps the engine run cooler, and more efficiently
- Vented bowl carburetor gives excellent fuel efficiency and aids starting, especially when the engine is hot
- Non-mechanical sonic limited compression release for easier engine cranking
- Manual starter has a longer and 33% wider recoil spring and modular construction to answer the increased starting requirements from blade control
- High-performance blade lifts grass for even mowing, and increases air flow to improve bagging
- Folding handle
- Four square 14-gauge steel deck
- Optional accessories — side catcher, remote air filter

Turn Your Advertising Into Gold

Do It With Color. It's A Sure Sell

Color in advertising works that way. While black and white newspaper advertising still packs a bigger and better wallop than ever, when it comes to bringing customers into your store and moving merchandise off the shelves, carefully controlled comparative teststs have proven conclusively that the addition of a single color to a newspaper ad increases sales by an average of 41.4%

But color is only one part of the creative selling capacity of the Midland Reporter-Telegram Advertising. Put your green where it will do you the most good. Call 682-5311 today. One of our advertising sales experts will be happy to color your sales a more profitable gold.

Good breeding

ODESSA — "Blood will tell."

Generations of horse breeding come down to this simple maxim, says West Odessan Charlie White. His opinion might be considered expert after a lifetime of raising winning thoroughbred race horses.

White, 60, has been breeding race horses for nearly 50 years, taking up as a 12-year-old boy in North Texas the pastime enjoyed by several generations of his ancestors.

Since that time, White has honed his skills. He brought horses to his present farm in 1954 and has been breeding winners ever since.

Along with the importance of pure bloodlines, he counts luck as an attribute that has kept him successful. But there is more to breeding race horses than blind fortune.

In fact, White depends on his trusty catalog when making decisions. "We don't make any decisions at all," he says, "It's all done by breeding information records."

Forget the image of the breeder using his "horse sense." "Most of (the breeding information) is done by computers," he says.

White explains his success came from breeding cousins to cousins. While it makes for a good racing horse, this breeding technique spawns some temperamental creatures.

"These are some of the meanest damn horses in the world anyway," he said.

Even with all the planning and forethought that goes into breeding, White figured "a stakes horse is about one in 30 or 40."

And he claims no interest in any thoroughbred incapable of winning a race.

"We're strictly involved in racing," he says. "We don't ride 'em, we don't show 'em, we don't fall in love with them. If there's no money involved, we don't do anything" but sell them.

To accomplish this goal, White does not count on large numbers of breedings. "Numbers don't have a damn thing to do with it, " he says, "You're better off with one good horse than 50 bad ones."

Far from the stereotypically sprawling West Texas horse farm, with acres and acres of fence and countless stalls, the White spread spans only seven acres.

He suggests five colts "is about all you can handle" at one time. "What you're after is quality."

Rather than enclosed stalls, White's horses have individual runs. "We need to spend our time with the horses, not cleaning stalls," he says, adding he likes to have the horses outside as much as possible.

His strategy also saves money in other ways. "In Kentucky, one of their biggest costs is fences."

And what makes a stakes horse?

Topping out at about 50 mph, a successful race horse runs the mile in 1 minute, 34 seconds "and change," says White.

While his horses compete in futurities with purses of $150,000 and more, a 1984 feed bill of approximately $70,000 in northern oats and P1 alfalfa hay claims a big chunk of any winnings.

Race horses are commonly associated with Kentucky, but White traces the origin of today's championship bloodlines to the Arabian horse. Until the 1930s, White says most breeding papers were in Arabic.

Services were to be at 10 a.m. today in Gutierrez Funeral Chapel with burial in East Hill Cemetery.

Gramm: Bill only attacks symptoms

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An immigration reform bill calling for punishment for employers who hire illegal aliens should be defeated because it attacks the symptoms, not the cause of the nation's immigration troubles, U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm says.

The Republican candidate for U.S. Senate, addressing the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association Sunday, said he thinks immigration laws should be enforced.

But he said the United States should help Mexico back to its feet economically by opening free trade. Opening up trade, he said, would allow goods and services across the border instead of people.

Gramm said he thinks the Simpson-Mazzoli immigration bill, which is due up for debate in the U.S. House this week, should be defeated.

"I think it's attacking the symptom and not the cause," he said. "The cause is poverty.

"If my wife and children were starving to death, you would have to kill me to keep me from wanting to come to this country," he said.

The immigration bill would impose fines for employers who hire illegal aliens and would allow amnesty for aliens who can prove they have been in the country for several years.

The congressman said the United States doesn't "have anything close to free trade with Mexico."

Tariffs and trade quotas currently imposed upon Mexico should be lowered and U.S. companies operating there should be encouraged to invest in that country, he said.

The emphasis, he claimed, should be on helping Mexico establish new jobs and a "new employment base" to improve the quality of life for Mexicans in their own country.

Gramm said he may force a House vote on a bill creating jobs for Americans and Mexicans who have work permits in Texas.

The Enterprise Zone Bill, sponsored by Gramm and U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, also would provide tax breaks and other incentives to encourage industry and business to relocate in the Rio Grande Valley.

Gramm said the bill would help stem the flow of illegal aliens into Texas from Mexico.

Boy Scout Timothy Nunan, a sophomore at Midland High School, was awarded the Eagle Scout rank in a recent ceremony in First Presbyterian Church. Nunan, son of Jack and Nancie Nunan of 1004 Sinclair Ave., is a member of Troop 85, sponsored by the church. He has been in Scouting since 1976. In the past schoolyear, he lettered in academics, band and tennis.

'Angel of mercy' tried for baby smuggling

LAREDO (AP) — A Utah woman who has described herself as "an angel of mercy" was scheduled to go on trial today in federal court on charges she smuggled Mexican babies illegally across the border for adoption.

Nelda Karen Colwell of Layton, Utah, is accused of smuggling two Mexican babies into the United States for adoption by two Utah couples, and is believed by law enforcement officials to have helped at least 50 Utah couples adopt Mexican infants since 1980.

She has waived her right to a jury trial and asked U.S. District Judge George P. Kazen to decide her guilt or innocence. Attorneys expected testimony to begin this afternoon.

Mrs. Colwell, a homemaker and member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, was indicted with three other women April 10 and accused of running an infant smuggling ring.

The three other women — Laredo residents Sanjuana "Cuca" Martinez-Lopez, Celestina "Celina" Rios-Rivera and Juanita Melendez-Calderon — pleaded guilty to lesser charges last month in exchange for their testimony against Mrs. Colwell.

The attorney for Mrs. Colwell, George Handy of Utah, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that the trial will pit the "absolute truth" of his client's testimony against the three government witnesses.

"I have no doubt there was baby smuggling going on and they already have the smuggler, but Mrs. Colwell had nothing to do with it," Handy said.

Midlanders, Dallasites win bridge trophy

From Staff Reports

Gloria Crites and Leta Myers of Midland teamed with Sherrill Headrick and Steve Shirey of Dallas to capture the first place trophy in the team event of the Tall City Sectional Duplicate Bridge Tournament that concluded here Sunday. The tournament drew about 200 players in the team event.

Second place went to Mark Lair of Canyon, who played with three Midlanders, Mrs. Lloyd R. French, Mrs. W.W. Roye and Mrs. J.T. Dickerson.

Three cities were represented on the third place team, Bob Preston and Jo Smith of Abilene, George Findley of San Angelo and Ron Frazier of El Paso.

Mrs. Myers and Mrs. Crites were double winners in the tournament as they won the Open Pairs championship on Saturday. They were followed by Lair and French in second place and Fred Lugenheim and Brenda Gutmier, both of Corpus Christi, in third.

The Unmixed Pairs title went to Buff Slay and Bob Myers, both of Midland. Winning second were Headrick and Shirey, while Alan Copelan of Odessa and Frazer came in third.

In the Masters Pairs, Midlanders Betty Reeves and Mrs. Ford Chapman were the champions. Lugenheim and Slay took second place honors and Jacque Pierce and Vangie Lindsay of Lubbock took third.

The Open Pairs consolation champions were Linda Warren and Sara Alexander of Andrews. Dr. R.L. Spencer and his wife, Nanette, of Midland were second.

Midlanders Dan Dowler and Nancy Andrews finished first in the novice game Saturday night. They were followed by Brad Pomeroy and Bob Cunningham, both of Midland, and Marilyn Johnson and Marianne Slay, also of Midland.

The special warmup game which kicked off the tournament Thursday night was won by Slay and Mark Stark of Odessa. Second place winners were Toni and Jack LaVigne of Midland.

All events were played in the Holiday Inn Country Villa.

Special session provides new training ground for rookie legislators

AUSTIN (AP) — The seven rookie legislators who arrived at the state Capitol last week had a goal less controversial than the Dirty 30 of 1973. Nevertheless, their mission was reform and their aim was to be heard.

The seven won special elections over the past few months and took their seats on the House floor as the second special session of the 68th Legislature opened. House leaders say they can't recall another special session with as many newcomers.

The Dirty 30 was a group of pro-reform Texas House members during the early 1970s who generally were opposed to the reign of then-Speaker Gus Mutscher.

The rookie members say they feel special simply because of the issues they're facing — reform of the state's public education system and raising the money to pay for it.

"It's exciting to be part of the future," Rep. Mike McKinney, D-Centerville, told The Bryan College Station Eagle. "I am convinced...that what I do in this session may be the most important thing I ever do in my life."

Neeley Lewis, D-College Station, told the Eagle that the special session gives the newcomers a special opportunity.

"We have an amazing opportunity to do something — to improve the quality of education in the state of Texas," Lewis said.

"In my campaign, I was saying that I would support a tax increase for an investment in public education," said Rep. Russ Tidwell, D-Austin. "But (in the Legislature) it's been like the weather: Everybody's talking about it, but nobody's done anything. Now we have the opportunity to make the major reforms."

House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, has already attempted to make the newcomers feel at home. He took the rookies to lunch on Wednesday and advised them to "vote their district" — follow the wishes of their constituents.

"I think they're going to be a good group," Speaker Lewis told the Eagle. "None of them are going to play the Don Quixote role..."

He said all of the rookies support the "concept" of the special session, which is to improve public education, including teacher pay increases and changes in equalization aid, through increases in state taxes.

House Speaker Pro Tem Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, said the newcomers, with one exception, have previous legislative experience through working for legislators or on the Legislature's staff.

"They are of very high caliber," Berlanga said.

None of the seven were appointed to the powerful House committees of Public Education, Ways and Means and Appropriations, Speaker Lewis said. They sit on less-visible committees, such as Human Services, Public Health, Agriculture and Business and Commerce.

The newcomers spent their first week in the Capitol watching other committees' deliberations on Gov. Mark White's education reform-tax increase package and meeting with constituents and lobbyists.

The tax-writing Ways and Means Committee has been especially attractive to several of the rookies because of its serious consideration of eliminating certain sales tax exemptions as a method to help pay for the educational improvements.

Of four rookies interviewed by the Eagle, all said they would support removal of several exemptions — probably those on video games, certain computer software and dry cleaning. They also expect the House to approve elimination of some exemptions, but they predicted that those on food, medicine and legal and medical fees will remain intact.

Rep. Lewis, echoing the views of his fellow newcomers, said that closing the sales tax loopholes may permit lawmakers to leave the state sales tax at 4 percent, instead of raising it to 5 percent as the governor has proposed.

"There is great concern that if we use the one percent now," Lewis said, "that as we face the seemingly worsening revenue crisis that's going to be with us for the future, you've used up one of your key revenue sources."

Even Rep. Bill Carter of Fort Worth, the one Republican among the rookies and the only newcomer with no previous legislative experience, said he is prepared to vote for the "necessary funding" for teacher pay increases and other school improvements.

Radio-control plane fans to come to meet

From Staff Reports

Radio-control airplane hobbyists will be putting their aircraft into aerobatics and other flying patterns next weekend on the skidpath of Jim Hall's Chaparral Cars Rattlesnake Race Track south of Midland.

R/C enthusiasts from Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Colorado are to participate in the two-day show, according to Porter Wallis, president of the Hi-Sky R/C Club of Midland, host club.

Aerobatics will be in five classes: novice, sportsman, advanced, expert and masters. A sport-scale contest will be held to judge the airplanes' fidelity to the aircraft they model on a smaller scale.

Flying starts at 9 a.m. Saturday and next Sunday and will shut down about 5 p.m. Saturday and 3 p.m. the next day.

The meet will be the first contest sponsored by the Midland club in the last three years.

"We are proud of the good reputation our previous contests have given us," Wallis said in a message to R/C modelers, "and we hope that you find this contest one of the best you've attended."

The meet's contest directors are Charles Ambrose Jr. and Bill Coombes, both of Midland. Trophies will be awarded to the first three places in each event.

The flying site is about four miles south of Interstate Highway 20 just east of Rankin Highway (Texas 349) and southeast of Cotton Flat Baptist Church.

Cash, stereo taken from Word of Life office

From Staff Reports

In theft and burglary complaints filed with city police over the weekend, someone reportedly broke into the Word of Life office at 3525 Andrews Highway. Taken was a total of $1,525 in cash and stereo equipment.

An employee of Seat Cover Ace, 3000 W. Wall, told officers $1,513 in parts and spray equipment was stolen from the establishment sometime in the past month.

Molly Starnes of 603 Devonian said clothing, jewelry and a rug shampooer worth a total of $2,186 were taken in a break-in at that address sometime in the past six months. Entry was through a window.

And Charles A. Lusner of 2603 reported that tools, jewelry and a .357 Magnum revolver were taken in a burglary at that address. A screwdriver was used to spring a locked door. Total loss was placed at $6,050.

A vacant house at Rankin Highway and County Road 121-West was destroyed in a fire about 6:30 p.m. Sunday. Five fire department units responded to the call and used 8,000 gallons of water extinguishing the blaze. The owner of the house was listed as Victor Rodriguez of Midland. Cause of the fire was undetermined.

Fire of undetermined origin heavily damaged the upstairs portion of a vacant house at Louisiana Avenue and Pecos Street shortly after 10 p.m. Saturday. The owner of the house was not known, according to fire officials.

HORSES

Returning with the English from the Crusades, sons of English royalty brought the first Arabian horses with them to settlements in Kentucky's bluegrass regions.

Since that time, horse racing has become a multimillion dollar business attracting people from all over the world — most yearning for the big winner that could stake them for life.

"It's a little boy's game," says the 60-year-old with a gleam in his eye. "You can still be a little boy at my age. There's a lot of little boys in this business past the age of 80."

"It's crazy," offers the teetotaler. "A drunk finally sobers up, but the horseman never changes."

Bomb threat delays Mexicana Airline flight

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Mexicana Airline flight arriving in San Antonio with more than 100 passengers aboard was delayed at International Aiport for several hours while police searched for a bomb.

However, no bomb was found in the search Sunday.

The bomb threat was made against Flight 720 from Mexico City to San Antonio, authorities said.

Gold rush draws humans to Tumco once again

Copley News Service

TUMCO, Calif. — The rattlers, the scorpions and the 3-inch-tall antelope squirrels are not alone anymore in the eastern Imperial County desert south of the Chocolate Mountains.

Humans are back.

"We've got a new gold rush," says Sean E. Hagerty, a geologist with the Interior Department's Bureau of Land Management.

He estimates more than 5,000 claims have been staked. Here, where tumbleweeds are about the tallest things around, there are more stakes than trees.

Former San Diego Assemblyman and Municipal Judge George Crawford is panning for gold at the Buzzard's Mistake claim. "Hope springs eternal," he says.

Kathy Moe, observing the rush from the Gold Rock Trading Post, smiles and tells visitors to please don't feed the "dogs," they're coyotes.

TIMOTHY SADLIER-BROWN, a Canadian geologist visiting with his family, looks at rocks picked up by daughter Emily, 3, and says they are lievrite. "That means they're nothing; leave it right there on the ground."

Campers and four-wheel-drive vehicles bump along the wilder reaches of Sidewinder Road and nameless tracks where, archaeologists say, man first came and went 20,000 years ago. Then later came Indians, then especially gutsy Spanish missionary priests, then gold hunters in a boom 90 years ago and finally, until now, the snakes and their pals.

"Oh, a few old codgers still have burros. But the burros are pets and the old prospector, like the new, has a four-wheel-drive ride. But they and the weekend prospectors from San Diego and elsewhere are not the heart of the new gold rush," says Hagerty, young enough to wear a T-shirt to work and to have "Las Vegas Marathon" lettered on it.

"The heart of the matter is Gold Fields Inc.," he says. That is a daughter of London's Consolidated Gold Fields company, a global firm fetching gold from South Africa and other lodes.

"Gold Fields has spent $10 million to $20 million just to see if gold mining would be economic in Imperial," says Hagerty in his El Centro, Calif., office.

"Sure, that's a lot of money with no mining. But you can lose a lot more money if you dig without knowing it will work out."

HAGERTY SAYS Imperial County folk have been staking claims for years. Few have done more than the necessary $100-a-year work to keep the claim. The reason they hold the claims, he says, is to sell if Gold Fields or some other major mining firm wants to work the claim.

"Gold mining is very risky," says Hagerty.

Tumco is proof.

Ninety years ago thousands trekked to this site up against the Cargo Muchachos. They built a post office, a school, three general stores, seven saloons. They scooped up more than $10 million in gold before the pickings became too thin and Tumco, by World War I, had become a ghost town.

Now only a few adobe walls stand. Three tanks rust into the sands. A few holes in mountainsides remain. The rest is history. And an assortment of rusty food cans, shiny .22-caliber shell casings, a Kodak film wrapper, a Yashica lens cap is there, possibly to tickle a 21st century archaeologist.

"It's so nothing that even the ghosts have gone," says Sadlier-Brown.

THEN WHY has he come visiting with his wife, Renie, daughter, Emily, and 9-month-old son, Nowell? And his father-in-law, J.O. Anderson, mother-in-law, Betty, and friend, Helen Kinasz — the latter three refugees from snow country that enable Yuma motels to light No Vacancy signs.

Betty; "We came looking for gold."

J.O.: "No, we did not. We came for a picnic."

Betty: "Well, I came for the gold, dear husband."

J.O.: "Well, we came to look at Tumco. We came for history."

Kinasz: "Not much history. And fewer ghosts."

She waved a hand at the barren hills, the broken bricks of yesteryear, the gully where sidewinders play. "It's beautiful."

Former San Diego Assemblyman and Municipal Judge George Crawford, right, and Bill Glore, search for gold at the Buzzard's Mistake claim, one of an estimated 5,000 in Imperial County.

DOWN OGILBY Road and west on unpaved Sidewinder Road and north on something the Automobile Club of Southern California has the honesty to ignore on its maps is, 7 miles deep into the desert nothingness, a sign: "Buzzard's Mistake."

Not for an errant bird, but for George Massey, nicknamed "Buzzard." He is president of a Fallbrook-based group of about 1,500 amateurs bitten by the gold bug. They call themselves the Lost Dutchman Mining Association. Buzzard's Mistake is their claim.

DEAR ABBY

This Father's Day, give love with presents

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: Next Sunday (June 17) is Father's Day. Many believe Father's Day was invented by the merchants who saw a way to play on the sentiments of the buying public (after all, almost everybody has a father) and stimulate business. (Look what Mother's Day has done for the florists, greeting card people and retail merchants!)

Regardless of whose idea it was, it's a good one that has taken hold, and continues to bring joy to dear old Dad.

Last year, my Father's Day column brought a surprising number of requests from editors of church bulletins, newsletters and other publications asking permission to reprint it. Many readers wrote to say that they had put my suggestions to use, and found it more appreciated than any gift they had given Dad.

I was encouraged to run it annually, so here it is:

DEAR ABBY: The week before Father's Day, you wrote: "Don't give Dad another tie, shirt or wallet; give him something he will cherish forever — a letter telling him how much he means to you."

Well, I composed a letter on the bus to work that very morning, typed it on my lunch hour and mailed it to my father in a beautiful card that evening. He was actually my stepfather, but he had been more of a father to me than my real father. I knew it would mean a lot to him, especially since he was in the hospital at the time.

He died on July 5, and I'm so glad I wrote that letter. Now I can live with myself, knowing that he knew how I felt about him.

Thank you so very much for making me put my thoughts of love and gratitude on paper. If this letter helps just one person to do what I did, it was worth writing. — CLAUDIA IN SAN PABLO, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: My father wrote to you at least 12 years ago, and you put his letter in your column. You printed it twice on request. My father had it framed, and when we brought him here to live with us, he carried it in his hands for fear it might be damaged or lost.

When he heard his letter had been framed and hung in the chapel of a cemetery, he said, "What a pity it will be seen only by those for whom it is too late. It would accomplish more on the bulletin boards of high schools and colleges."

Abby, he made me promise that after he died I would write to you and ask you to run it again.

He died one week ago at age 72. Please print it once more for my beloved father. — FAITHFUL READER

DEAR READER: The letter that meant so much to your father has been requested more than any other. And here it is:

DEAR ABBY: I am the most heartbroken person on earth. I always found time to go everywhere else but to see my old, gray-haired parents. They sat home alone, loving me just the same.

It is too late now to give them those few hours of happiness I was too selfish and too busy to give, and now when I go to visit their graves and look at the green grass above them, I wonder if God will ever forgive me for the heartaches I must have caused them.

I pray that you will print this, Abby, to tell those who still have their parents to visit them and show their love and respect while there is still time. For it is later than you think. — TOO LATE

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

DIET CENTER®

Dear DietCenter, I am 7 years old. I just finished the Diet Center program. I lost 35¾ pounds and 66½ inches. I can do my school work better. I can dance better. I can run faster. And now I like myself.

Kristin Wameling

Sherry Wameling writes . . .

I am Kristin Wameling's mother. Last April, she started the Diet Center Program. Kristin is now a very different little girl in many ways. She lost her weight and inches, but the rewards go deeper than just reducing. She has even improved her school work.

Now, the smiles and outgoing personality can't even be measured. The kids on the school bus don't call her "Fatso," and she has her lifetime dream: designer jeans and pretty outfits.

During this time, I also lost 100 pounds. Now I can truly say we are a Diet Center Family. So thanks for letting us accomplish what no other diet could do . . . we're a healthy, new family! We love you! Sherry Wameling

Regardless of your age, Diet Center can be the last weight-loss program you'll ever need!

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, June 12, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Vice President George Bush, Chicago Cubs rookie pitcher Daryl Banks, "Towering Inferno" producer Irwin Allen, banker David Rockefeller, Jim Nabors and singer Vic Damone share your birthday. Also born on this date: Britain's wartime foreign minister Anthony Eden. A sense of purpose will put you on top of the heap. Learn to control your emotions in work situations. A business proposition will lead to a financial recovery. A blind date could be a turning point. Romance is better than ever! Count on a brother or sister's help in opening a career door. Parents and children draw closer together. Show your loyalty.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The outlook for a special project is brighter now. A good day to start a new health or fitness regimen. A former romantic partner reappears, making an interesting confession. Go slow.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A new approach reduces the tedium of routine work. Use the afternoon to make valuable new contacts. The news from abroad is surprisingly good. Celebrate tonight with loved ones.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Higher-ups are impressed by your ability to adapt quickly to new circumstances. Read contracts and agreements very carefully before signing. Postpone going to sales if low on funds.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Arguing will not solve a domestic problem. Compromise! Spending some time alone will help you see loved one's point of view. An evening phone call puts you in a cheerful mood.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Say exactly what you mean or someone could become confused. Put your creative talents to better use. Your social plans could suddenly change. Spend more time with loved ones.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): There will be fewer interruptions than usual today. Clear up pending paperwork. Romance begins to pick up. Continue to watch expenses if you want to take that dream vacation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your rapport with the opposite sex is excellent today. A compromise helps you negotiate a lucrative contract. Be extra patient with a Leo. Helping a teen-ager brings you closer together.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A private discussion with an attractive member of the opposite sex stirs up intense feelings. Your loyalty to a friend or relative is put to a severe test. Curb extravagance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An expert could help you find a quick solution to a financial problem. Curb a tendency to act impulsively. Play it safe: adopt a conservative approach to new ventures.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You obtain expert help for a special cause. A teen-ager is influenced by your actions, not your words. Set a good example. A minor mistake could turn out to be a big plus.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Higher-ups are impressed by your inventiveness. Hard work will lead to the big pay-off. Look forward to a promotion or raise. Be tactful with sensitive member of opposite sex.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You cannot solve a problem by running away from it. Stand up for your rights. A relative or neighbor extends a helping hand. Repay past favors before requesting new ones.

TV shows rise, fall of athlete

NEW YORK (AP) — Tonight's syndicated-network TV movie is called "Nadia" to attract viewers, but it could just as easily have been called "The Bela Karolyi Story."

Karolyi was the Svengali-like coach and taskmaster to Nadia Comaneci, the Romanian gymnast who, as a 14-year-old, became the world's sweetheart at the 1976 Montreal Olympics.

Karolyi is given credit for discovering, nurturing and motivating Nadia, all of which was true in varying degrees. What seems to be excessively exaggerated, however, is what comes across as the egocentric Karolyi's absolute altruism.

Karolyi's depiction in such broad, glowing strokes might stem from the fact that the coach, who defected to the United States in 1981, was a consultant to the production. "He was our main source of information," said independent producer Jim Thompson.

"Nadia," nevertheless, is sweetly satisfying, although it is sometimes too superficial a portrait. It will be broadcast on a national grid of stations, with many of them showing the film tonight.

It is unusual for first-run movies to be shown by commercial stations in the off-peak viewing months of June and July. But the producers are convinced that America's case of Olympic fever will extend to "Nadia" and next month's "Jesse Owens Story."

Nadia is discovered as a 6-year-old doing cartwheels at the school playground in her native Onesti. In re-creating that gray village, the filmmakers shot on location in Yugoslavia.

Interests and commitments also change, and what was once a game becomes a business. It's the rare athlete — baseball's Pete Rose comes to mind — who can still play with child-like enthusiasm after enjoying and suffering from fame.

After her phenomenal achievement on international TV at the Montreal Olympics, Nadia can't be the anonymous little girl anymore. She's toasted as "Little Miss Perfect" in recognition of her collection of perfect-10 scores at the Games.

Depressed and unable to cope with the pressure, changes and public expectations, Nadia rebels from Karolyi and her friends and goes on eating binges, gaining 40 pounds.

There also is the fuzzy suggestion that Nadia may have tried to commit suicide by drinking bleach. Thompson said the movie intentionally made the incident unclear.

"We only had second-hand information about the suicide attempt," said Thompson. "So we handled it the way Nadia did in her autobiography, which is you just don't know."

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK97 ♡83 ◇K76 ♣K1095
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—There are those who will argue that South has a minimum opening bid and, therefore, should pass. But that doesn't take into account that all his values are prime and that he has useful intermediates. Since aces and kings are undervalued in the point count system, we would go to game unhesitatingly.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q64 ♡K985 ◇10963 ♣A8
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
Pass	Dble	?

What action do you take?
A.—You have as much as the law will allow for your simple raise, and your defensive values are excellent. You must advise partner that you have a maximum raise, and the way to do so is to redouble. Unless your opponents have a club fit, they could be in big trouble.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠8 ♡AJ987 ◇AKQ8 ♣K102
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠

What action do you take?
A.—Partner does not rate to have much, but your hand is too strong to allow the opponents to buy the hand at the two-level. Since you have support for all the other suits, you should double. As partner has not yet bid, this double is for takeout.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K1092 ◇A9863 ♣AQ72
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	Pass	Pass	1 ♡
Pass	1 NT	Pass	2 ♡
Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Bear in mind that partner, who has made only a balancing overcall, could be quite weak. Certainly, he has, with his rebid, shown little more than a long, probably broken, heart suit. When faced with a misfit, get out of the auction as quickly as you can — you may already be one round too late!

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K985 ♡A87 ◇A10653 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Dble
Rdble	2 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—While partner's action is preemptive, it looks as if your hands fit well. Also, there is no guarantee that you can defeat any game contract the opponents might undertake. All things considered, we suggest you continue the preempt by raising to three spades. That could easily prevent the opponents from finding their heart fit, or the proper level of a club contract.

Q.6—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK873 ♡85 ◇J965 ♣63
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	Pass	2 ◇
Pass	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—So far you have shown only a moderate hand with some tolerance for clubs. Nonetheless, you do possess excellent defensive plusses. Double. This is cooperative. Partner shouldn't sit unless he also has good defensive values. And if the distribution is unkind, your double will not be catastrophic — two diamonds doubled and made is still short of game.

House faces touchy vote on proposed immigration reform

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is facing a touchy election-year vote on curbing the influx of illegal aliens, legislation that has divided two key Democratic constituencies — organized labor and the growing Hispanic population.

The vote could clear the way for a full-scale debate on the so-called Simpson-Mazzoli immigration reform bill, a major issue in recent Democratic presidential primaries. Or, the House could limit discussion of numerous proposed changes in the measure.

O'Neill and Majority Leader Jim Wright both said they would not be disappointed if the hotly contested measure were rejected on the initial vote.

"I'm cool to the bill, to be perfectly truthful," O'Neill told reporters last week. "This is not a Democratic bill."

President Reagan has come out in favor of the Senate-passed version of the bill, which is tougher than the House measure.

The Democrats are split on the matter, which has become a political hot potato in an election year. Lawmakers are aware of the growing strength of Hispanic voters and the need for organized labor's backing.

The measure's sponsor, Rep. Romano Mazzoli, D-Ky., and other proponents say the nation must come to grips with a "shadow population" of 3 million to 6 million illegal aliens now in the country.

Hispanics fear sanctions proposed in the bill would encourage employers to discriminate against anyone who is or looks Hispanic.

Two years ago, Rep. Edward Roybal, D-Calif., was able to kill a similar bill by offering so many amendments the measure was withdrawn.

Roybal is sponsoring amendments this year that would do away with the employer sanctions and beef up the border patrols.

The House is also set to resume debate on a $291 billion defense package. The chamber faces several tough decisions on the MX missile, anti-satellite weapons, cruise missiles and other major weapons programs.

The House voted more than a week ago for a virtual moratorium on MX production, pending a congressional review next year.

Carter papers net student 'B' in course

FRANKLIN PARK, Pa. (AP) — An eighth-grader whose show-and-tell offering turned out to be briefing papers for Jimmy Carter's debate with Ronald Reagan earned a footnote in history, but only a 'B' in her social studies course.

And her teacher, who brought the documents to the government's attention, netted a school reprimand for calling the FBI before she notified the student's mother.

Kristin Preble raised eyebrows Jan. 19, when she gave teacher Jim DeLisio a zippered briefcase stuffed with papers marked "Classified, Confidential, Executive" as part of a class project at Ingomar Middle School in Franklin Park, a Pittsburgh suburb.

The 13-year-old wasn't aware that her schoolwork was actually evidence in a top-level government dispute.

"She thought they'd be real interesting. I thought they'd be great, too," Kristin's mother, Carol Preble, said recently.

The Justice Department has confirmed that the 4-inch-thick bundle of documents was indeed a batch of briefing papers from Carter's 1980 re-election campaign. They had been left at a Cleveland hotel by presidential press secretary Jody Powell and found by Kristin's father.

"The papers were offered back to Jody Powell, and he says the little girl can keep them," a Justice Department official who asked not to be identified said late last week.

"He (Powell) looked at them and recognized them as his," said Carolyn Shields, Powell's executive assistant in Washington.

The debate papers, which were stirring controversy before Kristin's show-and-tell bombshell, have continued to make waves.

After a yearlong investigation, a House subcommittee concluded late last month that CIA Director William J. Casey played a major role in acquiring copies of a briefing book prepared for Carter's debate with Reagan in Cleveland on Oct. 28, 1980.

And a federal appeals court in Washington has scheduled a hearing June 20 to review a lower court decision ordering Attorney General William French Smith to appoint a special prosecutor in the case.

Mrs. Preble said her husband, Alan, a businessman who died in 1982, found the papers in his hotel room two days after the debate. A maid apparently placed them in his room by mistake and he brought them home as a souvenir, she said. They had been sitting around the house for more than three years when Kristin brought them to school.

"We had looked through them but didn't think they were important," Mrs. Preble said.

DeLisio, however, said he was stunned when he saw a binder marked "Property of the United States Government" and dozens of loose-leaf papers, including White House memos and telegrams.

Most of the papers were addressed to Powell and were dated from Oct. 25 through Oct. 28, 1980, DeLisio said.

"It had everything about the debate, everything you'd want to know from A to Z," DeLisio, 39, said. "The debate book itself was things that were going on in the world, domestic, foreign steel. There were things about Billy Carter and Libya."

One folder was marked "Iran" and "Classified, Executive, Confidential."

"I truly didn't want to look at it," he said. "I think I was just too...scared. I didn't want to know."

DeLisio said he took the briefcase to his Franklin Park home and tried repeatedly to reach Mrs. Preble by phone. He then contacted a cousin who worked in the Justice Department, who advised him to notify the FBI.

DeLisio, his wife, Carol, and their daughter, Amy, 13, spent much of the night reading the briefing papers.

When he was unable to contact Mrs. Preble the next day, DeLisio called FBI agents, who picked up the papers and sent them to Washington for analysis.

Manatt perfectly cast in peacemaker role

WASHINGTON (AP) — Charles Manatt, a man who likes to refer to party divisions as "opportunities" instead of "problems," seems perfectly cast to preside over what shapes up as a three-ring circus at the Democratic National Convention.

The party chairman — everyone calls him Chuck — walked a tightrope during the Democratic presidential primary season, urging candidates to tone down attacks on each other, defending party rules and trying to keep everyone focused on the goal of defeating President Reagan in the November election.

He was careful to avoid any show of favoritism among Walter F. Mondale, Gary Hart, the Rev. Jesse Jackson or any of the five other candidates who left the starting gate last year.

Even with Mondale now claiming enough delegates to give him the nomination, Manatt plainly is reluctant to declare the contest over, lest he offend Hart and Jackson and their supporters.

Two days after the final round of primaries last week, the self-made multimillionaire lawyer and banker was playing peacemaker among backers of all three survivors at a cocktail party at his home.

If the 48-year-old Manatt lacks the acerbic wit and flamboyant style of some of his better known predecessors — Texas lawyer Robert Strauss comes immediately to most minds — he seems to have been just what the Democrats wanted in the wake of Jimmy Carter's loss to Reagan in 1980.

Tattered and demoralized after losing the presidency and a majority in the Senate, Democratic leaders sought a nuts-and-bolts chairman with organizational skills and a proven record as a fundraiser. Manatt was their man.

"The party's more organized than it's ever been," said Mike Fernandez, press secretary to Sen. Ernest "Fritz" Hollings, D-S.C., an early presidential candidate who dropped out after a poor showing in the New Hampshire primary.

Under Manatt, who frequently travels around the country, the party revived its direct mail program, set up a media center, formed councils for businessmen and women and reached out to state and local politicians.

There is a temptation to call Manatt bland; yet the friendly and personable chairman succeeded in starting a Los Angeles law firm, Manatt, Phelps, Rothenberg and Tunney, that is hugely successful, representing politicians and entertainment figures like Michael Jackson and Linda Ronstadt.

Manatt's low-key manner and workaholic tendancies seem well-suited for cooling tempers and healing wounds in the post-primary season.

"It's certainly been a marathon," Manatt said recently during an interview, smoking Salems and speaking in an accent that reveals his Iowa backround. The Democrats "are quite united, very motivated to defeat Ronald Reagan in the fall," Manatt said.

At a party in his big brick house in one of Washington's most fashionable, tree-lined suburbs, Manatt circulated freely in a formal, red-walled reception room, introducing Hart, Mondale and Jackson Democrats to his guest, the Israeli ambassador. On one wall was a portrait of John F. Kennedy; on another a modern painting of Jimmy Carter with Menachem Begin and Anwar Sadat at Camp David.

Platform drafting sessions could turn into battleground

WASHINGTON (AP) — Party leaders want their 1984 Democratic platform to stress unity and focus on defeating President Reagan, but platform Chairwoman Geraldine Ferraro says drafting sessions could easily turn into another battleground for Walter Mondale and his presidential rivals.

"Politics could take over, there's no doubt about that," Ms. Ferraro, a New York congresswoman, said in an interview. She said she would try to stop that from happening, but that there was a limit to what she could do at this stage of the process.

The platform committee, after taking testimony from hundreds of witnesses throughout the nation, returns to Washington today to hear from Sen. Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

Mondale, who claims he has the nomination wrapped up by virtue of his commanding lead in delegates, declined the committee's invitation to speak in person.

Hart, delegate-short but apparently still determined to take his battle to the floor of the Democratic National Convention next month, may have sounded anew his battle cry by claiming that sticking to traditional Democratic themes in crafting the platform is not enough.

"Our party's platform must not dwell in the past but seize and secure the future," he said in a letter to Ms. Ferraro requesting a chance to address the platform committee. "It will not suffice for us to state the obvious: the bitter realities of the Reagan administration's callous and inhumane policies at home and a Cold War front abroad.

"Nor will it suffice for us to merely restate the Democratic rhetoric of the past," Hart said.

Amount of serious crime declines 7 percent in 1983

WASHINGTON (AP) — The rates of personal larceny and household burglary dropped to record lows in 1983 as the amount of serious crime in the United States declined by 7 percent.

These were among the preliminary figures from the government's most reliable crime data, released Sunday by the Justice Department's Bureau of Justice Statistics.

It marked the second year that major crime has declined and bolstered earlier reports that the number of crimes reported to the police had declined in 1983.

The bureau estimated there were 36.9 million rapes, robberies, assaults, personal larcenies, household burglaries, household larcencies and motor vehicle thefts last year.

That total is 2.9 million crimes, or 7 percent, fewer than the 39.8 million calculated for 1982.

There were 568,000 fewer rapes, robberies and assaults than in 1982, producing a 9.8 percent drop in the rate of violent crime, down from 34.3 to 30.9 violent crimes for every 1,000 persons in the country.

Among property crimes, the rate of personal larceny without contact between the victim and the criminal dropped by 8 percent, from 79.1 to 73.1 larcencies for every 1,000 persons.

This was the lowest rate of victimization for personal larceny in the 11 years the data has been gathered. As always, personal larceny was the nation's most common crime, occurring more than 13.9 million times in 1983.

The rate of household burglary, which hit a record low in 1982, declined again by 8.9 percent, from 78.2 to 71.2 burglaries for every 1,000 households.

Every crime covered by the bureau's National Crime Survey showed a decline, except rape, but the rise from 0.8 to 0.9 rapes for every 1,000 persons was statistically insignificant.

The crime survey data is based on interviews twice a year with 128,000 persons over the age of 12 in some 60,000 households.

Successful TV ad sells assertiveness for women

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A 30-second television commercial advising women to assert their independence and avoid problems by simply saying "no" to unwanted sexual advances has been so successful that it will be offered statewide, officials say.

The state-sponsored ad, which features an attractive woman in her 20s saying that "when I say 'no,' they hear me," was produced with $66,143 in federal funds and was broadcast this year as a public service announcement on Madison's three commercial TV stations.

The ad, designed to curb sexual assaults and unwanted pregnancies, is aimed at both women and men, said Maya Abels of the state Health Division.

Man kills wife, then self

ROSEDALE, Md. (AP) — An 81-year-old man who shot his wife, called his pastor and then killed himself was apparently despondent over the 75-year-old woman's poor health, police say.

The Rev. Glen Rodgers alerted Baltimore County police, who found the bodies of Harry Gutsmuth and his wife, Amelia, in the couple's home Saturday. The woman, who recently had undergone surgery to remove tumors, had been shot in the head with a .32-caliber pistol.

Gutsmuth told Rodgers he had already shot his ailing wife and that he was "ending it," police said. He said he was going to leave the door open so police could enter quickly.

Jewels to benefit orphan

NEW YORK (AP) — A 16-year-old orphan who found a bag full of jewelry near some railroad tracks in Hollywood, Fla., while playing hooky from school stands to become $500,000 richer when the jewels are auctioned Tuesday, officials say.

A police investigation failed to turn up the real owner of the 116 pieces of jewelry found on March 16, 1983, by Eric DeWilde. An official at Christie's auction house said the cache should fetch between $400,000 and $600,000.

Eric, whose father died before he was born and whose mother succumbed to cancer when he was seven, got the jewelry under a Florida "finders keepers" law that says the property goes to the finder if the owner doesn't come forward in six months.
