Wild winds

High winds from a thunderstorm Saturday afternoon ripped the roof off units at Vantage Storage in northeast Midland Saturday afternoon. The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport recorded peak gusts of 43 mph at 3:56 p.m.

Winds uproot roof, end racing plans

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Hefty thunderstorm winds from a sand-darkened sky ripped off the metal roofing of a row of 100 storage units Saturday afternoon and put a scare into Robert Loewen and Jack Moore.

"We were just getting ready to race in Lubbock tomorrow," said Loewen, 30, a building contractor who races dragsters.

But the brief thunderstorm, augmented by powerful gusts and "something" turbulent in the dust, tore the roof off 100 of the 500 Vantage Storage units just north of Resthaven Cemetery at Big Spring Street and Loop 250 in northeast Midland about 4 p.m. Saturday.

Five minutes after the roof was lifted skyward about 75 feet and fell over the two men, over Loewen's pickup truck and onto an adjoining row of storage units, the rains and lightning came. Stored sports cars, furniture, tools, equipment, crates and boxes were left exposed to the rain.

"The last I had heard on the radio," Loewen reflected, "it was going to be hot and sunny throughout the weekend."

Loewen and Moore were just outside the compact storage unit and were working on the dragster's torque converter when the roof began its flight.

"It was awesome," said Loewen. "Man, you wouldn't believe...We watched the roof go way up in the air."

"There was no sound," Moore, a 21-year-old offset pressman, said of the moments before the roof was blown off.

Loewen and Moore were draped by the distorted roof. Both were unharmed; they immediately got out from under the roofing, dashed over it and away.

See related weather story, 2A

"We ran over the roof," Loewen said. "We didn't want to be under that sucker. I wanted to get some distance."

Meanwhile, John Lineberry, 29, who manages the storage business, was driving home when the storm hit, and his wife, Pat, 20, was taking a bath at home — a dwelling which adjoins the first row of storage units.

"I just heard it," Ms. Lineberry said of the crashing roof. "And the roof caved in." She was uninjured but frightened.

"It was real low to the ground," her husband said. "There was definitely something in the dust."

Lineberry said Loewen and Moore were very frightened after the incident.

"They were just scared to death," he said. "They didn't want to be here."

The twosome left but returned to survey the damage in a more peaceful climate.

"I'm kind of disappointed," said Loewen. "I can't go racing tomorrow."

Italian premier resigns office

ROME (AP) — Premier Giovanni Spadolini resigned Saturday, ending Italy's 41st postwar government after a dispute erupted in his five-party coalition over a defeated petroleum-tax plan.

Spadolini, a member of the minority Republican party, made the announcement at a Cabinet meeting and later gave President Sandro Pertini his formal resignation. The president told reporters consultations on forming a new government would begin Monday.

The resignation came one day after seven Socialist ministers resigned from the 28-member Cabinet following Parliament's rejection of a Socialist proposal to speed up tax payments by oil companies as part of the government's economic austerity program. The ministers angrily accused several Christian Democrats, the largest coalition faction, of publicly supporting the proposal but voting against it in the secret balloting.

A Cabinet communique said the Socialists considered the vote "an act of no confidence in the government as a whole."

The 57-year-old Spadolini, a former newspaper editor, refused to comment to reporters on why he quit.

He was the first non-Christian Democrat to head one of Italy's governments since 1945. Twelve of the 41 postwar governments were in power longer than Spadolini's, which lasted 405 days.

Until Pertini names a premier-designate to form a new government or announces a general election, Spadolini will continue to run the country's day-to-day affairs acting as head of a caretaker government.

Despite optimism, Begin won't leave

By The Associated Press

Lebanese officials expressed cautious optimism Saturday that the PLO would begin evacuating west Beirut in a few days, but sources close to Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin dismissed the latest withdrawal proposals as "fraudulent."

The Israeli sources, who asked not to be identified, said the reports Israel has received about the negotiations in Beirut indicate that it will not be acceptable.

"Apparently, the plan Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan is talking about is to get several hundred terrorists out of Beirut and then have a French force between them and us. Then the PLO would not have to leave, and this would prevent Israel from putting pressure on them. That would be a wonderful plan for allowing the PLO to remain, but this is the opposite of what we are trying to achieve," one source said.

Jerusalem conveyed to both Washington and Paris its opposition to the deployment of foreign troops in Beirut before all the guerrillas pulled out, Israel's state radio reported.

The Israeli reaction tossed cold water on hopes expressed by Lebanese leaders that the negotiations to end the siege of Beirut by evacuating the Palestine Liberation Organization fighters to Syria were about to succeed.

Financial Planning

In a continuing effort to expand coverage and content of The Reporter-Telegram business and financial pages, regular stories on the broad subject of financial planning will begin Sunday, Aug. 15.

Contributing to the series, which will appear in the Business Section each Sunday, will be associates of Peat, Marwick, Michell and Company, Midland certified public accounting and tax firm.

Subjects will cover a wide range and include use of computers in business, tax legislation, property sale, investing and other aspects of general financial planning.

Couple anticipating Washington fight

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Likening themselves to a pair of geriatric Don Quixotes, Charles and Florence McGowan of Midland will be charging off Monday to tilt at two modern-day windmills — Congress and the creaking Social Security system.

"We're both on Social Security and have no business on it," Charles McGowan, 66, said in explaining that he and his 66-year-old wife will be in Washington, D.C., this week, lobbying Congress to do the unthinkable: set a limit on the amount of income a Social Security recipient can have.

Persons earning more than that limit, say $30,000, would have their benefits — except Medicare — cut off. Should their income status change, they would then be eligible to start drawing benefits again. The whole process could be policed very easily, they maintain, through income tax returns.

McGowan is a retired construction superintendent and former union pipefitter who worked in oil fields throughout the world and who took early retirement at 62.

His wife quit the work force at the same time. Although neither of them receives a pension, they invested wisely and now enjoy what they describe as an "adequate income from royalties."

They also share a combined income of $625 a month from Social Security, which they say they don't need because their three children are grown and they no longer have any major expenses. When they first began drawing Social Security in February 1978 their benefits came to a total of $390 a month.

In less than two years they had drawn out more than they had paid in. "You tell me how young people today are going to pay for it?" said Mrs. McGowan. "Especially with old people living longer now. Social Security is going broke."

If they don't need the money, why don't they simply refuse to take it. The answer: "We'd be crazy to give it up if no one else does."

Also, they say the Social Security people told them it would cost more to stop the benefits than what it costs to pay them — and they couldn't get them back if it became necessary someday.

Citing a relative of his who takes in more during retirement than he did while he was working, McGowan said: "You'd be surprised how many people make more than $30,000 a year and still draw Social Security. It doesn't seem fair."

Noting retirees who enjoy Social Security benefits, along with country club memberships and $100,000 a year incomes from various sources, Mrs. McGowan added:

"I want everyone who needs it to have it. Keep the benefits the same, but there should be a cutoff, a ceiling, somewhere. Social Security is one reason budget deficits keep going up."

The McGowans say they've written the Social Security Administration but have yet to get an answer. So now they're going to Washington in person to spend 10 days or so buttonholing Texas senators and representatives, knowing full well they're fooling with quirky windmills even Don Quixote would probably avoid.

"It's political dynamite," said Mrs. McGowan. "Young people don't vote. Old people do, but our older friends keep telling us to shut up."

In addition to the Texas congressional delegation, the McGowans plan to visit with Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., whose large elderly constituency isn't likely to think any more highly of their proposal than some of their own friends and relatives do.

But one never knows what Congress may do. Besides, the McGowans seem to enjoy a good fight. Said Mrs. McGowan, her eyes lighting up in anticipation:

"I know Pepper won't be sympathetic — no way. But we're going to challenge him anyway. Something's got to be done."

Their bags packed and ready to go, Florence and Charles McGowan anticipate a trip to Washington, D.C., Monday where they will lobby for a new Social Security system.

Indira Gandhi's words belie her political style

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

SAN SIMEON, Calif. — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, controversial and highhanded leader of India, is on her way home after a nine-day visit to the U.S. during which she emphasized that her vast nation is not a Soviet ally and, incidentally, thought that capitalism might even be a good idea for sectors of her economy. On the outside, it added up to Mrs. Gandhi's desire to perk up relations and induce investment from Americans in India.

She was graciously received by President Reagan at the White House and gained a nuclear fuel accord with our government, ending a long-running dispute. The agreement allows France to supply the major atomic power plant in India. But first, India would seek U.S. permission before reprocessing spent fuel that may yield material for nuclear arms. American officials also say that Prime Minister Gandhi's first visit to our contry in a decade was prompted in large measure by a U.S. plan to sell F-16 fighters to Pakistan — for years a wary enemy of India.

The Indian prime minister's insistence that her country is non-aligned and not a Russian stooge was repeated wherever she went in Washington and to select audiences in New York. It was quite unsettling, to my way of thinking, that she never was once asked in public why in 1975, as prime minister, she personally promulgated "emergency laws." They were the equivalent of martial law. As a result, thousands of Mrs. Gandhi's critics were jailed and press censorship imposed.

In her arrogance, and supremely confident of the political power she wielded, Mrs. Gandhi committed an error despots normally avoid. After a couple of years of jail, she figured that

Mexicans anything but happy about devaluation

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Stunned and angry, Mexicans are watching the bottom drop from their once-growing economy and bracing for more price increases this week after the second big peso devaluation in six months.

In less than a year, a country which estimates it has the world's fourth-largest proven oil reserves has plunged from the brink of prosperity into its worst recession since World War II, and there is no immediate improvement in sight.

An ambitious development program, financed by revenue from vast new oilfields to turn Mexico into a major industrial power, is stalled.

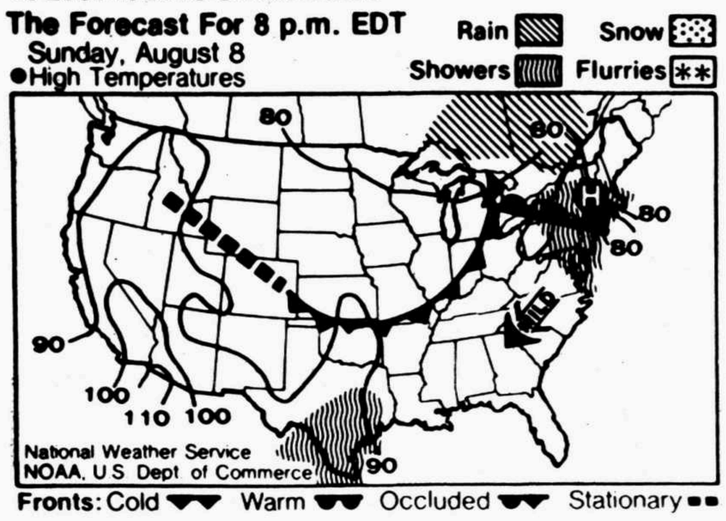

Jobs, which were getting plentiful after centuries of poverty, are scarce again and worker's wages buy one-third less than last year.

Within a year, inflation has doubled to an annual rate of 60 percent, the foreign debt has doubled to $80 billion and Mexico's economic growth has fallen to near zero from a previous annual rate of 8 percent. Bankers who once flocked to do business with Mexico are now reluctant to lend.

To force the country to stop spending more than it earns, Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog on Thursday imposed a new, two-tier exchange system, causing the peso to lose about half its value in one day — on top of a 46 percent devaluation in February.

A few days earlier, the government's withdrawal of consumer subsidies almost doubled prices for gasoline, electricity, gas and other basics.

West Texas thunderstorm cools Midland

A classic West Texas thunderstorm moved through Midland Saturday afternoon, unroofed a row of storage units northeast of town, cooled down the otherwise hot air and promised a somewhat cooler last-half of the weekend.

The storms was preceded by high winds, which kicked up sand and dust and gusted to a peak of 43 mph at 3:56 p.m., and then came the thunderstorm's rain and lightning.

The temperature dropped 15 degrees.

The weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport forecast "cooler" temperatures today — a high in the low 90s and a night time low in the mid-60s. The weatherman offered a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms this afternoon and evening.

The weather bureau recorded only .01 of an inch of rain Saturday from the fast-moving thunderstorm. That brings the total so far this year to 9.96 inches; the annual rainfall average is 13.51 inches.

For Monday, the weatherman is projecting partly cloudy skies and a 20 percent probability of thunderstorms in the afternoon.

Saturday's high temperature was 97 degrees, which didn't match the record high of 104 degrees for the date in 1964. The overnight low of 67 was 10 notches off of the record low of 57 degrees for the date in 1939.

Sunset today will fall at 8:40 p.m. Sunrise Monday will be at 7:09 a.m.

Stationary front brings thunderstorms

By The Associated Press

A stationary front extending through North Central Texas brought widely scattered thunderstorms to the region Saturday, with accompanying high winds and heavy rain in some areas.

High winds tore a roof off a building on the northern outskirts of Midland, a Midland County sheriff's spokeswoman said. And sheriff's officers in Stephens County said winds accompanied heavy rains that drenched Breckenridge, but no damage was reported.

The front extended from just east of Wichita Falls to San Angelo and an upper-level disturbance was poised over the Gulf of Mexico. North to northeasterly winds prevailed behind the front at from 5 to 15 mph.

Temperature readings ranged from 100 degrees at both Waco and Laredo to 77 degrees at Lufkin. Continued warm temperatures were expected through Sunday with scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms.

Three arrested in Lamesa liquor raid

LAMESA — Three people were arrested and approximately 1,000 cans — about 41⅔ cases — of beer, 70 bottles of hard liquor and "some marijuana" were confiscated in an alcoholic beverage raid here Friday night.

Twenty-four officers of the Lamesa Police Department, Dawson County Sheriff's Office, Texas Department of Public Safety and the Texas Alcoholic Beverages Commission participated in the raids at nine locations in the "dry" city.

Arrested, charged with possession of alcoholic beverages for sale in a dry county — bootlegging — and released on bailbonds were Barbara Ann Harris, 36; Leroy Gilmore, 69, and Irma Williams, 37.

Midlander killed in one-car rollover

A 23-year-old Midland woman was killed in a one-car rollover in the 600 block of West Florida Avenue about 11 p.m. Friday after her car hit a telephone pole, flipped over and skidded.

The woman, Diana Patino Rodriquez of 2112 City View Road, suffered massive head injures. She was not thrown from the car.

Ms. Rodriquez was born June 23, 1959, in Stanton.

Funeral arrangements are pending at Thomas Funeral Home.

One dead, three hurt in traffic mishap

One person was killed and three others were injured in a traffic mishap about 7:15 p.m. Saturday on U.S. Highway 87 in Sterling County, according to the Texas Department of Public Safety.

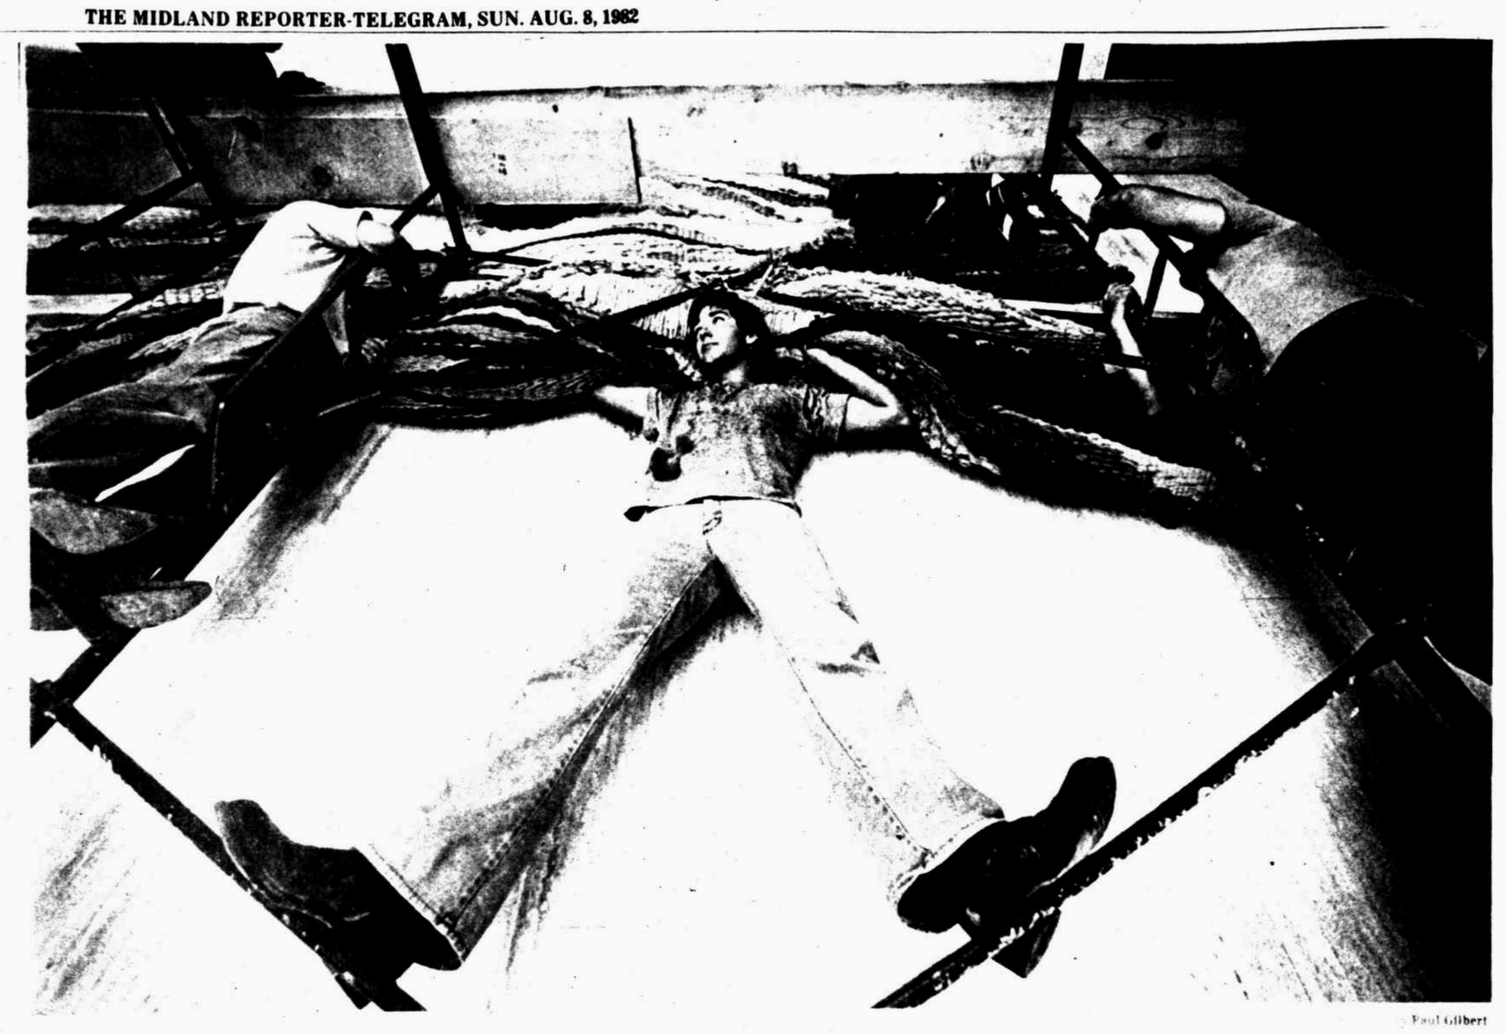

By late Saturday night, officers were still trying to ascertain identities of those involved in the accident. Details of the accident were not available by press time.

City police report two burglaries

Two burglaries with items valued at $3,370 were reported Saturday morning to Midland police.

According to police, Jim Glas reported a paint compressor valued at $3,000 taken from a storage unit at 3500 N. Loop 250.

In another burglary, police said Linda Ward reported items valued at $370 were taken from Wayne's Hair Design, 300 N. Big Spring St.

The tapestry, which features an oil motif, was purchased by HBF Corp.

Men still run America, but women play increasing role

By MIKE FEINSILBER

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fund-raising brochure of the Women's Campaign Fund claims that men run America. If that's true, it is less true than it once was and after November it is likely to be a little further from the truth.

After the elections, four women may sit in the U.S. Senate where there have never been more than two at any time. And women may govern two states previously run only by men.

"Eventually I think we're going to get a Congress that looks like the country," says Ann Lewis, political director of the Democratic National Committee, the first woman to hold so high a post in the inner workings of either political party.

Women's role in governing America is still minimal, but growing. In 1975, a total of 5,765 women held elective office, five years later, the number had almost tripled to 16,136.

Ten years ago, only 2 percent of the members of Congress, 5 percent of the state legislators and 1 percent of the mayors in America were women.

THOSE PERCENTAGES have all doubled or more. Women now constitute 4 percent of Congress, 12 percent of the state legislatures, 8 percent of the mayors.

But the picture is uneven. More than a third of the women elected to state legislatures in 1980 were in seven states — New Hampshire, Maine, Washington, Oregon, Colorado, Connecticut and Vermont.

In the legislatures of Pennsylvania and five Southern states — Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, Arkansas and Tennessee — women hold less than 5 percent of the seats.

Nonetheless, women who earn their living in politics say they sense that women are going to play an ever larger role in governing the country.

Ms. Lewis thinks an anti-government mood that first helped Jimmy Carter and then helped Ronald Reagan now is going to help women.

"If people think political institutions aren't working in their interests, they think, 'These men don't care about what I think or how I live,'" she says. "A woman candidate is a little more likely to know what real life is like. Just like you, she's a bit of an outsider. To a voter, that can be attractive."

THERE ONCE WAS a prejudice against electing women candidates.

"We saw in 1980 the crumbling of that sort of attitude in a lot of places in the country and I can't think of any area where it's a big problem now," says Nancy Sinnott, executive director of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee.

Ruth Mandel, director of the Center for the American Woman and Politics at Rutgers University, agrees. "Women who get nominated have about the same chance of winning as men," she says.

For a long time, a woman could land a nomination only if the situation called for a sacrificial lamb, someone to run against an unbeatable male. That time, says Ms. Mandel, is in the past.

Women are voting in larger numbers than before — and in larger percentages than men — another factor combatting the bias against women candidates.

Women got the vote on Aug. 18, 1920, but many women who were adults then never got the voting habit. In 1980, however, the Census Bureau reports, a fractionally higher percentage of women than men voted.

But what's happening can hardly be called a women's revolution.

IT WILL BE a long time before women hold office in proportion to their numbers in society. Turnover is slow in politics, incumbents win most elections, and most incumbents are men.

And special obstacles still face women when they run for office. First is the problem of raising money.

"If you are a woman," says Ann Lewis, "you are not likely to have a law school roommate who is now the partner in a downtown law firm. You probably haven't been golfing with your town's leading realtors. You aren't automatically linked in to the fund-raising network."

Meanwhile, says Miss Sinnott, the cost of running a winning campaign for Congress is climbing astronomically.

The price was $100,000 in the mid-1970s "and this year it looks like it will be $250,000 to $300,000 for the average winning race," she says.

A major source of campaign money, the 3,149 political action committees, gave congressional candidates $55 million last year. Most of it went to incumbents.

WOMEN LIKE TO SUPPORT women candidates, but they tend to be parsimonious when it comes time to help with cash.

Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, D-N.Y., tells a story about herself to illustrate that point.

Before she got into politics, Mrs. Ferraro spent a day campaigning with a woman candidate running for office in New York City. Impressed by her friend's effort, she whipped out her checkbook and wrote a $50 contribution.

A few weeks later, she and her husband were having lunch at the West Side Tennis Club. A friend joined them and told them of the financial difficulties of a male candidate he was supporting. Without further ado, Mrs. Ferraro's husband wrote out a check — for $1,000.

"Women have no idea what a campaign can cost," explains the congresswoman. "We generally earn less money, too. And women are always looking for bargains — it's a bit of a mindset."

To help women candidates over the money barrier, four groups raise money to contribute to women candidates they support on the issues.

The National Women's Political Caucus expects to give away $1 million from its national office and $2 million through state chapters; the National Organization for Women, stung by the defeat of the Equal Rights Amendment, hopes to raise at least $3 million for the 1982 election and to help defeat legislators who voted against ratifying the ERA.

"THE GOP HAS a grand old problem — women," said NOW President Eleanor Smeal on the day the amendment's deadline passed. Republicans were more likely to oppose the amendment than Democrats.

The National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs hopes to raise $100,000 to help women candidates and the Women's Campaign Fund — the organization that advertises "Men Run America" — seeks to come up with $200,000 in cash support and another $200,000 in such services for women candidates as polling, consulting and helping set up phone banks. The fund raises most of its money through the mail.

Executive Director Ranny Cooper says the fund helps women candidates line up appointments with the political action committees on all-important fund-raising forays to Washington.

"Women found that not only weren't they getting much money from PACs, they weren't getting past the front door," Ms. Cooper says.

"What the campaign fund has been able to do is penetrate this male-dominated network," she says. "We work very closely with the 200 or 300 largest PACs. So when a candidate comes to Washington, we put together a schedule for her, receptions, luncheons, fund-raising events. We offer her a desk, an office, a phone, a place to kick off her shoes between appointments."

THE FUND IS BIPARTISAN, but it has a litmus test for candidates: It wouldn't support a woman running against a male congressman who has proven to be an effective friend of the women's movement and it won't support women who oppose the ERA and favor restricting access to abortions.

Likewise, the women's caucus screens potential recipients in what chairwoman Kathy Wilson calls a "grueling three-day meeting."

The 65,000-member caucus is bipartisan — Ms. Wilson calls herself a "Jerry Ford Republican" — but, "We only help feminists," she says.

The 1982 round of primaries is not over, so it is too early to know how many women are running for Congress or state or legislative seats.

However, Rep. Millicent Fenwick, a Republican, is favored to win her race for a Senate seat from New Jersey and in Missouri Harriet Woods, a state senator, is the leader in the race for the Democratic nomination to oppose Republican Sen. John Danforth.

If either wins, the number of women in the Senate will go beyond two for the first time in history. Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., elected in 1980, and Nancy Kassenbaum, R-Kan., elected in 1978, were the first women to enter the Senate without having first inherited their congressional seats from a husband who had died in office.

SIXTY-FOUR WOMEN filed for party nominations to congressional seats, but most will not survive the primary process and it appears that about 25 will be candidates for House seats, including 17 of the 19 incumbents — all except Mrs. Fenwick and Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y., who is quitting Congress.

Editor's Report

her critics were too dispirited to mount opposition. She rather grandiosely granted amnesty for them and the nation to vote in a national election. After all, Mrs. Gandhi proclaimed, India, with a population of 670 million, was the biggest democracy in the world.

So the victims teamed up in a democratic coalition, rare in Indian politics. So she sent her older son, Sanjay, whom she was grooming as a potential successor, to fly around the country drumming up support. He failed because, among other deficiencies, Sanjay urged sterilization among males to arrest the population growth. He died later in an airplane crash, but the Indian prime minister is grooming a rather unwilling younger son, Rajiv, to follow her.

In any case, Mrs. Gandhi got the shock of her life when the Indian voters cast her out of office in a landslide. They elected virtually all those once jailed. Alas, that coalition began to bicker among themselves right after taking office. They even moved warily about bringing Mrs. Gandhi to trial for her "emergency" decrees imprisoning them. However, the anti-Gandhi coalition disintegrated swiftly and collapsed.

Out of office, the once and future Indian prime minister mended her political fences. She made deals in assorted regions throughout the vast subcontinent and fanned nationalism with anti-Pakistani rhetoric. She was adamant, of course, about India retaining the Moslem-populated province of Kashmir as a "right." This deeply offends Moslem Pakistan.

The Indian electorate, after a couple of years of a coalition fighting against itself, wearied of the ongoing mess. As is the case with so many parliamentary societies, it ignored the authoritarian rule of Mrs. Gandhi and re-elected her at the beginning of 1981. That's when she began by leaps and bounds to position herself ever more closely with the Soviet Union.

I find it quite remarkable that India's prime minister, who should have learned pragmatism from her father, the late Jawaharlal Nehru, first prime minister of India, should have tilted so far toward the Kremlin while professing non-alignment. Her father was scrupulous in avoiding that pronounced shift.

It is extremely curious that over here self-styled liberals always remain soft on pro-leftist dictators, whereas they go after right-wing military juntas.

In the middle '70s, Mrs. Gandhi disdained human rights by imprisoning critics, arresting labor leaders and beginning her regular missions to Moscow to seek solace — and arms — with which to equip the Indian army against Pakistan and the People's Republic of China. Today as the result of Mrs. Gandhi's efforts India has built the FOURTH largest army in the world. Her largest steel mill also has been furnished by the U.S.S.R.

Now the Indian economy is wallowing in extreme poverty. The average income is around $240 annually. Prime Minister Gandhi makes appealing cries for Americans to help stimulate her nation's private growth. Yet the swollen bureaucracy which she created on basic socialist lines must be drastically reduced before our country pumps untold millions into the Indian economy.

Make no mistake about Prime Minister Gandhi's agility, though. She is a world-class politician despite her arrogance and left-wing leanings. Obviously some of her father's realism surfaced when she encountered President Reagan last year at the Mexican economic conference in Cancun. She liked our president and even said so, long before coming to the U.S.

What is required from Prime Minister Gandhi once she is back in New Delhi must be to end the Indian silence on aggression in Afghanistan and other Soviet-led imperialist ventures. Otherwise, I really believe the U.S. cannot take seriously India's oft-proclaimed commitment to self-determination and democracy. Indira Gandhi is a lucky old pol with anti-democratic tendencies.

Former astronaut takes off on search for Noah's Ark

DALLAS (AP) — A 29-year-old man joined a former astronaut and 20 other people Saturday in a three-week trip to 17,000-foot Mount Ararat in Turkey in search of Noah's Ark.

Robbie Gowdey, a graduate of Southern Methodist University in Dallas, and former astronaut Col. James Irwin said they have no illusions about the expedition.

"Many have said the ark is there, but it has never officially been documented," said Gowdey.

He said he has been training for the expedition by jogging 8 miles a day and running with a backpack up and down the steps of a Dallas stadium.

Irwin, who started his own evangelistic ministry in Colorado, called High Flight, after his historic walk on the moon, said the ark expedition will be similar to his spaceflight.

"Actually, this expedition is more uncertain," he said. "We knew the conditions that existed on the moon. This is kind of unpredictable — the people, the temperature, the conditions on the mountain."

Gowdey said the group is taking cameras and video equipment to record the expedition. He and Irwin said the vessel that reportedly has been sighted beneath ice 14,000 feet up the mountain is Noah's Ark.

They said finding the ark would be a blessing to a "doubting, searching world."

Irwin said that when he was in Turkey four years ago, he could not get permission from the government to climb the mountain. But Turkish officials may have changed their minds, he said.

"Several years ago, I sent the president of Turkey a Turkish flag we flew to the moon," Irwin said. "So I just wrote him and reminded him of that and told him I'd like to climb his mountain."

Also accompanying Irwin are Eryl Cummings of Farmington, N.M., author of "In Search of Noah's Ark."

According to the Bible, the ark came to rest on Mount Ararat after the great flood.

The $60,000 expedition there is being funded by individual gifts, Gowdey said.

Coast Guard helicopter makes unscheduled landing in Gulf

PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) — A Coast Guard helicopter was forced to make an emergency landing early Saturday morning in the Gulf of Mexico after flying out to airlift an injured man off a shrimper, a Coast Guard official said.

The pilot was hoisting the man aboard the aircraft when the shrimping boat's antenna struck a rotor blade on the helicopter, said Lt. Steve Sparks.

"Anytime there's any possible damage to the rotor, the helicopter will make an immediate landing to see if there's any risk," Sparks said.

He said the pilot paddled around the downed helicopter on a raft and inspected the rotors before flying back to the Corpus Christi Coast Guard air station.

A second helicopter was dispatched from Corpus Christi about 5:30 a.m. to airlift Glen Boswell, 31, of Corpus Christi, off the shrimper, Sparks said.

The boat was about five miles off the coast of this South Texas resort town, and about 50 miles from Corpus Christi, he said.

Boswell was taken by ambulance to Memorial Medical Center in Corpus Christi, he said.

"He was suffering from a broken leg and a 12-inch deep cut in the leg," Sparks said. "We understand he fell into the winch that was pulling in the nets. Fortunately, as he was falling into the winch, he hit the lever that shut the thing off."

Hospital spokesman Camilla Salinas said Boswell was in stable condition with a fractured leg.

Canadian pleads guilty in Fort Worth

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A Canadian man has pleaded guilty to carrying into the United States more than 5,000 pills taped to his chest in cotton bags and stuffed in his boots, along with a "shopping list" citing various prescription drugs and prices.

Randall Worthy Mathewson, 31, of Vancouver, British Columbia, was arrested by U.S. Customs agents July 12 at the Dallas Fort-Worth Regional Airport. He went through customs after getting off a flight from Mexico City.

Mathewson, an employee of a Canadian import company, accepted a plea bargaining agreement Friday.

Displaced Northerners living in Houston campgrounds

HOUSTON (AP) — Scores of modern-day Okies, many of them Northerners who packed all they own into a car to come here seeking work, are filling campgrounds intended for vacationers.

Workers at the two Houston-area KOA campgrounds, areas designed for brief stays in tents, campers and tents, say their facilities are home to about 100 area newcomers.

"Some have lived here about six months," said Bruce Prehal, the manager of the camp who figures 40 of his 120 spaces are filled by such families. "Recently, those that couldn't find jobs have left, looking for another land of fortune."

A clerk at the other KOA campground said about 60 immigrants are living there.

Prehal said at one time his camp was about half-filled by the immigrants.

He has divided the grounds into two sections — one side for overnight guests, the other for his more or less permanent residents. The result is a striking contrast of people living outdoors from necessity and vacationers camping out for fun, he said.

"It was pretty back home, but there were no jobs," says Becky Morin, 23, who moved to Prehal's campground from Saginaw, Mich. She said she has lived here for three weeks with her husband and four children.

She said her family is relying on Prehal's charity until their first paycheck arrives. Her husband found work two weeks ago as a welder.

"Times are hard," said Prehal, who charges $63 a week for each site. "I don't mind helping out, but I don't give any handouts."

Those who find work leave. Others dig into their scant resources and wait.

"I see 'em after they've been here a while," says Ronnie Maxwell, 41, who owns a resale and salvage shop half a mile from Prehal.

"These people at the campground bring in everything in the world," he said. "One night a fellow came in here and the only thing he had left to sell was a 50-foot tape measure. I gave him $3 for it because he had a kid he needed to feed."

Houston offers some campers no more opportunity than the places they came from. One man sold his spare tire to raise money to go back North, Maxwell said.

But Jeff Sheridan, 27, and Dave Allen, 35, say there are still jobs for those who don't mind getting their hands dirty. They arrived from Amenia, N.Y., two months ago and are now working as carpenters.

"Texas is great," Allen said. "There aren't any easy jobs left anymore, but there are still some."

Majority leader calls on U.S., U.S.S.R. to cut defense budgets

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The United States and Soviet Union should cut their defense budgets by 10 percent and use the savings to help the world's needy, House Majority Leader Jim Wright says.

Wright, D-Texas, called for mutual cuts in defense spending over the next five years in an address Friday night to 250 people attending a Baptist Church-sponsored peace-making convocation here.

Under the plan and at current spending levels, both of the superpowers would contribute about $20 billion per year to the fund, he said. Over a five-year period, Wright said the $200 billion fund could:

— Build and equip a modern hospital in every community on Earth with 10,000 people or more, or,

— Build 250,000 elementary schools, or,

— Build 250,000 libraries, or,

— Build "almost a million miles of modern roads, enough to circle the Earth several times," or,

— "It could build approximately 10 million modern homes to replace the world's infested slums."

Wright also said 5 percent of that amount, or $10 billion, would eradicate malaria, typhoid, yellow fever and leprosy.

"You can take any combination you'd like, it adds up to a whole lot more sense than spending on the implements that kill and destroy," he said.

The majority leader, speaking on the 37th anniversary of America's nuclear attack on Hiroshima, Japan, said his plan could be part of what he said is a needed "new beginning" in international relations.

He commended President Reagan for initiating the strategic arms control talks, and called for him to put forward the joint-fund proposal in those negotiations.

A White House spokesman to whom the plan was described, said there would be no response "until we see the proposal."

The three-day meeting, sponsored by Louisville's Deer Park Baptist Church, ended Saturday.

Iranians fasting, spokesman claims

DALLAS (AP) — A spokesman for 33 Iranians jailed in connection with a riot on the Southern Methodist University campus says the group is on a hunger strike, but a sheriff's official says the men are eating candy bars and drinking a sugar water solution.

The Iranians, members of a group supporting Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, have been conducting a hunger strike since their July 30 arrest, according to Mohammad Jank of Dallas.

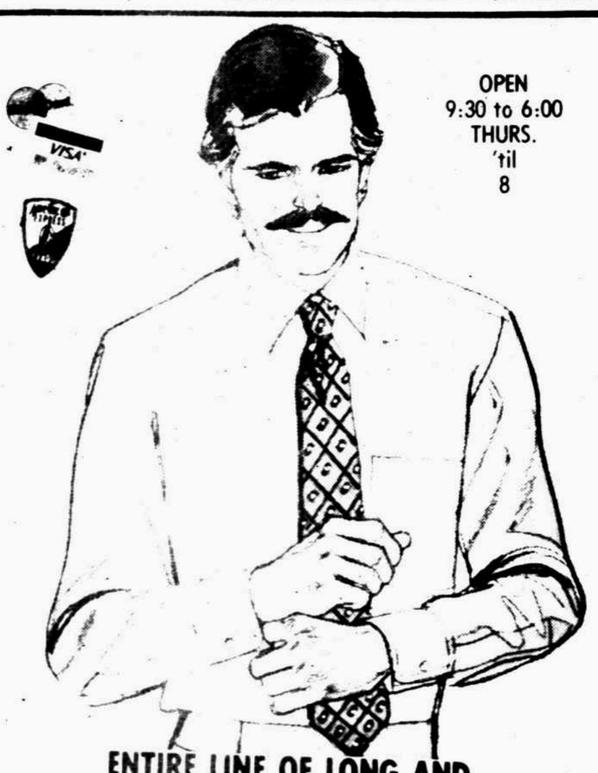

Dallas County sheriff's spokesman Jim Ewell said the Iranians have been refusing food since their arrest.

Two of 33 jailed Iranians were taken to a Dallas hospital Friday after complaining of stomach pains. They were treated and released, Parkland Memorial Hospital officials said.

The Iranians were arrested after a clash with an anti-Khomeini group at the SMU student center.

Broken main floods central Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — A broken water main in downtown Dallas snarled traffic, flooded a construction site and an underground truck terminal and forced a temporary shutdown of water service and computer operations at nearby businesses, officials said.

The 24-inch main was to be repaired early Saturday, according to Jackie Gregory, assistant manager of Dallas Water Utilities' distribution division.

The main broke about 1 p.m. Friday when a Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. construction crew removed the blocking from the main, causing the pipe to shift and pull from its joint, she said.

Water service was restored to area businesses about 3:30 p.m.

Arco Tower construction was shut down until eight feet of water could be pumped out, but a Republic Bank spokesman said bank operations were not affected by the forced computer shutdown.

"There were no major consequences because the city was able to give us some warning," Mike McKay said.

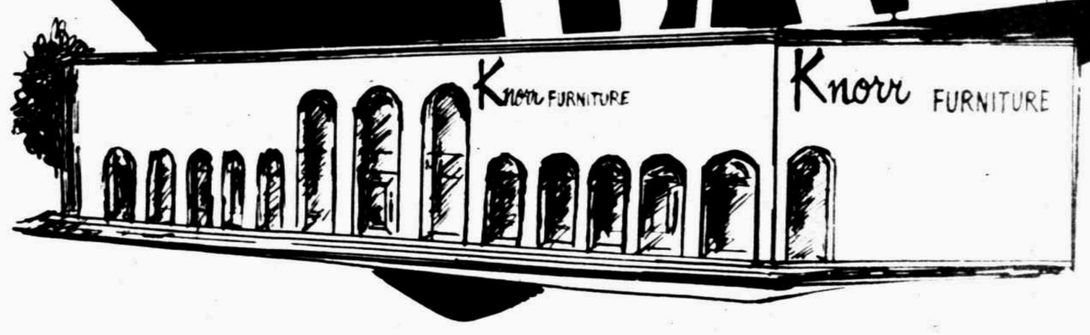

Boy Scout leader in critical condition

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — The leader of a band of nine Boy Scouts who were injured when their van overturned near Boise City, Okla., Wednesday slipped into critical condition after undergoing surgery at St. Anthony's hospital.

Richard A. Stephenson, 25, Ottawa, Kan., was driving the mini-bus when he reportedly fell asleep at the wheel on U.S. 64 three miles east of Boise City.

Travel expenses depend on position

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the head of the International Communications Agency, Charles Z. Wick, travels on government business, he generally flies first class, stays in luxurious hotel suites and travels by limousine. But he picks up a large part of the tab himself.

When Farmers Home administrator Charles W. Shuman goes on the road, he flies coach, stays in moderately priced motels and sometimes eats in hamburger joints. In Washington, he sometimes goes to a meeting by subway.

An examination of thousands of travel vouchers of top Reagan administration officials at eight departments or agencies shows that some Reagan administration officials travel in style. Sometimes they mix working trips with personal vacations.

BUT THE VOUCHERS also showed that for most top-level bureaucrats, life in the fast lane is not all that glamorous: They fly coach class, stay in motel chains that give discounts to the government and eat inexpensively to stay within a government budget.

Shortly after assuming office, President Reagan said his budget-cutting program included cutting federal travel expenses by 10 percent.

As a result, civilian departments and agencies reduced their travel budgets in 1981 by an average of 16 percent, according to the Office of Management and Budget. However, the travel budget at the Pentagon increased by 9 percent, wiping out any overall cuts in the travel budget.

Among other things, the vouchers show:

—Budget Director David Stockman chartered a military jetliner to Baton Rouge, La., in April 1981, at a cost to American taxpayers of $3,945. His written request stated that "commercial air travel is neither available, readily convenient or satisfactorily capable of performing the requirements of this mission."

The $4,000 mission: Stockman spoke to the 6th Congressional District Business Advisory Committee.

A YEAR LATER, Stockman issued a bulletin directing all executive branch agencies to tighten controls over the authorization of government travel.

—Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige flew first class last August to Denver and Kansas City on official business and then on to Albuquerque, N.M., where he spent nine days at his ranch in Mountainair, N.M. Taxpayers paid for his transportation to and from New Mexico, although the trip included only one day of official business.

Baldrige's itinerary shows he arrived at his ranch on a Friday night, spent the weekend and drove to Albuquerque the next Monday to testify at a Senate hearing and hold a press conference. Then he returned to his ranch for the rest of the week.

—Interior Secretary James G. Watt sometimes eats cheap meals. For example, on one three-day trip last January to Chicago, Boise and Denver, Watt billed the government a total of $5.75 for one day's meals.

—Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul A. Volcker took 38 official trips in the 12 months surveyed. On more than half, he flew coach class to New York. On almost all other trips, he flew first class.

—Commerce Assistant Secretary Lawrence J. Brady made eight trips to Boston between July 1981 and March 1982 to attend meetings, make speeches or give interviews. His itinerary always included a sidetrip to his southern New Hampshire residence.

—Assistant Agriculture Secretary C.W. McMillan made four trips to Mexico City in the 12 months surveyed, three times to attend meetings of the U.S.-Mexican Screwworm Commission.

The vouchers and receipts for hotels, meals and ground travel, obtained through the Freedom of Information Act, were checked for the period between April 1981 and April 1982 for officials at the departments of Agriculture, Commerce and Interior. They were also checked at the Office of Management and Budget, the Federal Reserve, the International Communications Agency and the Environmental Protection Agency.

GOVERNMENT PER DIEM allowances range from $50 to $75 a day within the United States and to more than $100 a day in some foreign countries. And federal regulations state that bureaucrats must travel at less than first-class rates. However, Cabinet officers and agency heads can exempt themselves from this ruling.

Although the survey showed that some Cabinet officers take advantage of this exception, government auditors say their first-class tickets did not have much effect on Reagan's $4 billion travel budget for fiscal year 1981.

"Less than one-half of one percent of the entire travel budget last year was spent on first class," said Ivan Michael Schaeffer, assistant commissioner at the General Services Administration. "For the most part, those who use first class are very high-ranking. If they say, 'I'm the head of an agency, and I'll go where I want to,' there's not much you can do."

The federal travel budget jumped from $4 billion for fiscal year 1981 to an estimated $4.8 billion in 1982 and is estimated at $5.1 billion in 1983.

The latest GSA report on government travel to Congress, dated June 1982, shows that the additional cost of first-class air travel was less than 1 percent of the total air travel costs for all government agencies, but the additional costs were not insignificant: $92,742 at the Treasury Department; $24,805 at the State Department; $22,219 at the Commerce Department; $20,618 at the International Communication Agency.

Reagan's close friend Charles Wick is one government official who almost always travels in style. Wick's travel records show he took four first-class flights between Washington and California in the 12 months surveyed.

THREE OF THOSE times, he stayed in $300-a-day suites at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel — and paid part of the bill himself.

On one seven-day trip last March when Wick attended the World Affairs Council, he was reimbursed $75 a day by the government plus an additional $148 a day because he said he used his room for government business. He personally picked up at least $400 of the total tab for meals and such additional expenses as room service and phone calls, records show.

His receipts show also that he rented a Cadillac Seville for $458.26. The government reimbursed him $126.97.

Wick's vouchers show also that he flew first class to Los Angeles on Dec. 29, 1981, concluded his business the next day and stayed in California "for personal reasons" over New Year's Eve.

Wick also took four foreign trips between June 1981 and March 1982, always flying first class on the overseas portions, the documents show.

Twice, Wick cited tight scheduling problems as a reason to take the supersonic Concorde. Each time he reimbursed the government for the $165 difference between first class and the Concorde for himself and a security guard who traveled with him, vouchers show.

"HE PICKS UP the difference himself," said Phyllis Kaminsky, Wick's spokeswoman. "It costs him several thousand dollars over a year. I've never seen anything like it."

Reagan told to earn Moral Majority support

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — President Reagan cannot automatically count on Moral Majority support should he seek re-election, says Moral Majority Executive Vice President Ronald Godwin.

In an article headlined "Symbols Wear Thin" in the August issue of the Moral Majority Report, Godwin wrote that Reagan hasn't pushed hard enough for public school prayer and tax credits for private school tuition.

"If Reagan thought that his support for those issues would get him into office, why does he now think that only symbolic gesturing will keep him in office?" Godwin wrote.

Godwin said it "has become repetitively axiomatic at certain levels in the White House to ... actually infer that ... members of Moral Majority and other pro-life, pro-family groups may gripe and bellyache but they have no choice but to support the Reagan administration."

The Moral Majority official said the axiom is false and displays "an attitude that rankles already severely strained loyalties."

He said the next two years "may very well be the last two years of the Reagan administration."

Moral Majority, a conservative lobby founded by Lynchburg evangelist the Rev. Jerry Falwell, has about 250,000 contributors, but claims it registered 4 million new voters and helped get Reagan elected in 1980.

Godwin said in a telephone interview Friday, "It's not a rebellion or a revolt, but ... a genuine concern that has assumed a certain amount of urgency."

Godwin said if Reagan doesn't start pushing the issues by the November congressional elections it could hurt conservative candidates.

He said his article was "not a threat, but a statement of fact. Our people are issue-oriented," he said.

Woman wounded but OK

CHICAGO (AP) — A 60-year-old Roman Catholic nun, described by a parishoner as "a woman who would do anything to help anyone," was stabbed and choked by a man who offered to pull weeds in exchange for a meal, police said.

Sister Mary Constance Polek was hospitalized in good condition Saturday with 18 stab wounds in the face, according to Amanda Pelletier, a spokeswoman for St. Mary of Nazareth Hospital.

During the assault, the attacker had threatened to "cut her eyes out," said Sgt. John Cioe.

Sister Polek was stabbed with her own penknife and choked with a bicycle chain after making sandwiches for the man, police said.

Joseph Barnes, a 27-year-old ex-convict was held on $500,000 bond Saturday after he was charged with attempted murder, attempted rape, armed robbery and home invasion, said assistant state's attorney James G. Piper.

Cioe said Barnes was arrested a short time after the attack Friday, which shocked the priests, nuns and parishioners of St. Mary of the Angels Parish.

"She would do anything to help anyone," said Ann Rodifer, whose daughter, Cathy, had been in the nun's first-grade class. "All were equal in her eyes."

"All she did was try and help and that's how she was repaid," said Marie Karpinski, who lived near the convent.

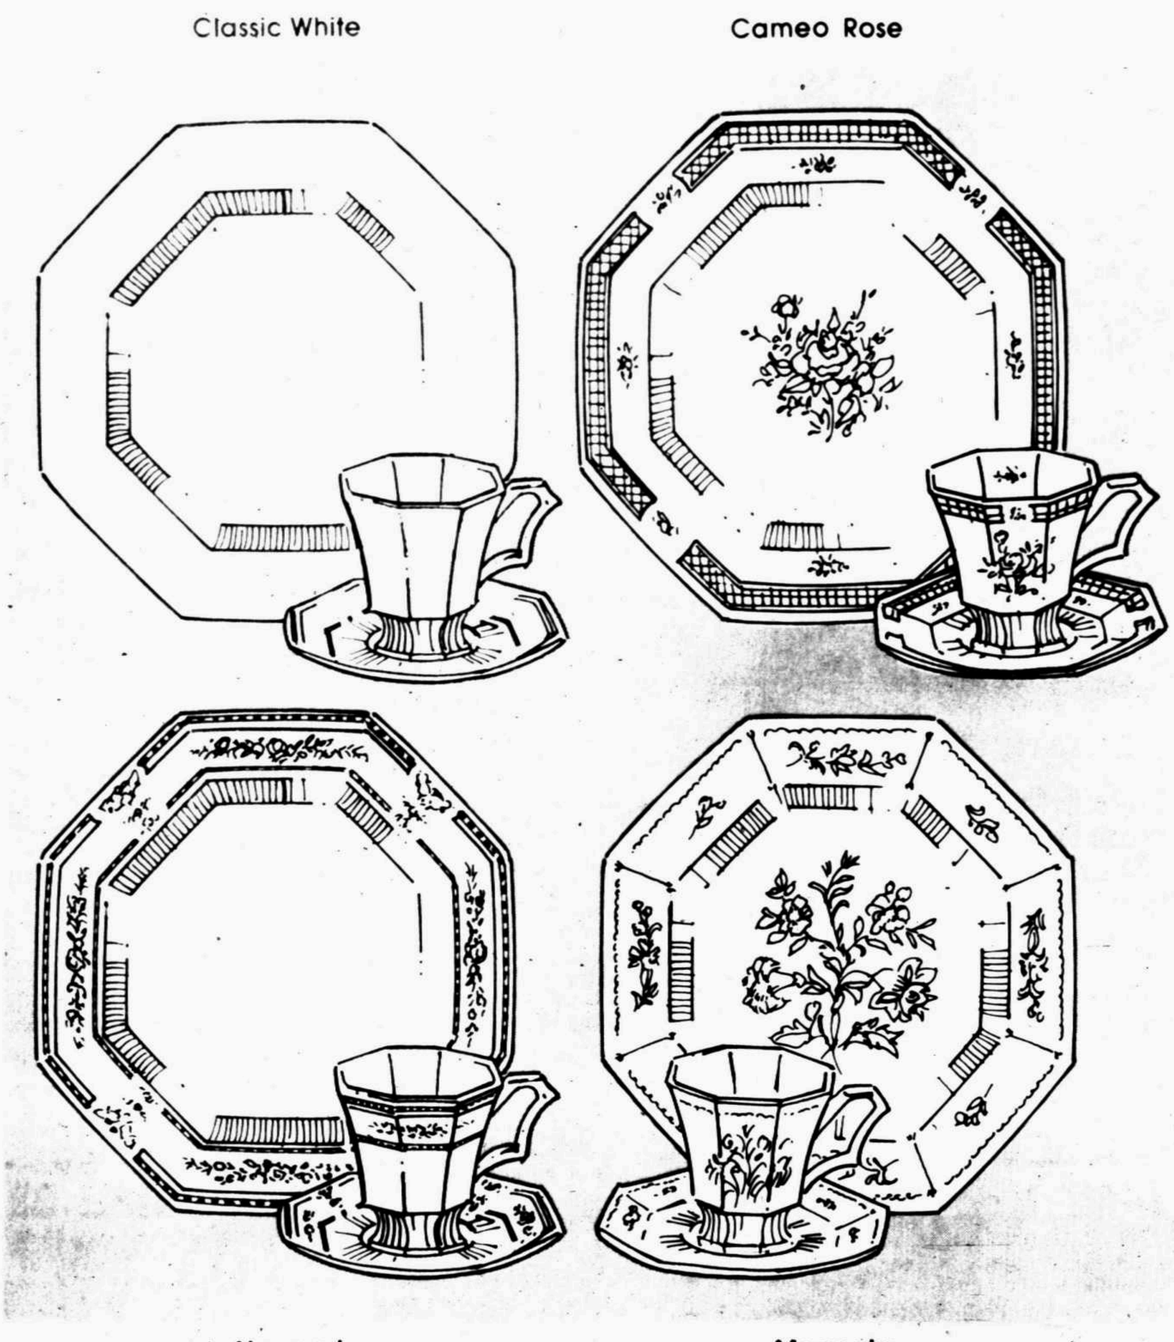

"Most of us are trusting," said the Rev. Stanley Pawlikowski, a parish priest. "We just presume that when people come to the door for help we should give it to them."

But on Saturday, when a man knocked at the door of the rectory and asked for food, Pawlikowski told him, "I'm in no mood to help right now."

Detective Luke Ballo, who investigated the attack, said Sister Polek told him, "I see now that I made a mistake being nice to him."

Ballo said the nun identified Barnes as the attacker. The penknife used in the attack was found in Barnes' possession, Ballo added.

Governors say new federalism disagreements still unsolved

AFTON, Okla. (AP) — The Republican chairman of the National Governors' Association declared Saturday that months of negotiations between state executives and the White House have failed to resolve disagreements over President Reagan's "new federalism" plan.

With the announcement by Gov. Richard Snelling of Vermont, the White House is left without the support of any organization of state and local officials for its plan to transfer $38.8 billion in federal programs to the states.

"New federalism," taxes, and their own political survival dominated the agenda as the governors gathered at a lakeside resort for an election-year meeting.

Overshadowing the substantive issues was the political reality of gubernatorial elections this year in 36 of the 50 states.

In those 36 states, 20 of the incumbent governors are Democrats and 16 are Republicans. Throughout the nation, the Democrats hold a 27 to 23 edge in governors.

In a statement issued on the eve of the governors' association annual meeting, Snelling quashed the White House's hopes that it could get the governors to back the Reagan federalism proposal.

"The governors cannot support a plan that fails to provide for the medically needy, discourages adequate state welfare assistance or ignored differences in state burdens," said Snelling.

"Our proposals to the White House addressed these concerns and we are disappointed that they appear unlikely to be included in the administration's revised plan," said Snelling.

While state and local officials generally welcomed the president's concept of shifting authority for many programs away from Washington, they have balked at some of the details. The Reagan plan has received a cool reception from organizations of city and county officials.

The annual three-day meeting of the governors' association formally opens today, with "new federalism" one of the first topics slated for discussion.

The president wants the states to pay the $8.1 billion that Washington now contributes for the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program as well as take over 30 other federal programs costing $3.7 billion.

In return, he offered to save the states $18.3 billion by taking over most of Medicaid. The president also would create a $20.4 billion trust fund to help states through an eight-year transition period.

Snelling said the governors "proposed an imaginative compromise that could have bridged the gap between the governors' strong belief in a larger federal role in income security programs and the president's deep conviction that welfare should be returned to the states."

"The administration apparently cannot support this compromise approach."

The governors also received a staff study warning that in its search for new federal revenues, Congress was considering taxes that could restrict state sources of income.

Another touchy issue confronting governors, though not on the official conference agenda, is the proposed balanced budget amendment to the U.S. Constitution. While few governors would oppose the idea of a balanced federal budget, they are concerned that it might end up balanced at the expense of states.

As for politics, seven governors have announced they will not run for re-election and four others are barred by state constitutions from running again.

The most startling pattern of retirements was among Midwest Republicans. The GOP governors of Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin are retiring and Gov. James Rhodes of Ohio, a Republican who has held his state's top political job for 16 of the past 20 years, cannot seek re-election.

In addition, Republican Gov. James Thompson of Illinois faces a tough re-election challenge from former Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III.

Illinois, Iowa, Michigan and Ohio are three of the states hit hardest by the recession. In Michigan, where the unemployment rate topped 16 percent earlier in the year, it was 14.4 in July.

The Labor Department announced Friday that the nationwide unemployment rate for July was 9.8 percent, the highest level since 1940.

Rising unemployment and cutbacks in federal aid are increasing the fiscal pressures on state governments.

Partnership sues corporations

DENVER (AP) — A California partnership has sued Exxon Corp. and Tosco Corp. for $58 million on grounds the energy firms misled the partnership on the Colony shale oil project's future.

Parachute Joint Venture Ltd. filed the suit in Denver federal court.

Exxon, which held 60 percent interest in the $5 billion Colony project at Parachute in western Colorado, cancelled the project on May 3. Tosco Corp., Exxon's partner, exercised an option to sell its interest for $100 million to Exxon.

The developer, a California partnership between Rutgers Mortgage Corp. and Western States Venture Capitol, charged Exxon with negligence in leading the partnership to believe the oil company was going ahead with the Colony project.

Parachute Joint Venture had exercised an option on 80 acres near the Colony project and had committed resources to building a shopping center called Parachute Park, the suit said.

Registration evader placing case in God's hands

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — A pacifist who expects to be the first person tried for failing to register under the new Selective Service law says he won't prepare a defense — he'll rest his case in the hands of God.

Enten Eller, a member of the pacifist Church of the Brethren, said Friday he told his lawyers to drop plans to argue that he was protected by the freedom of religion guarantees of the First Amendment.

He also has waived his right to have a jury in his Aug. 17 federal court trial.

Eller, 20, a senior at the Brethren-affiliated Bridgewater College near Harrisonburg, pleaded innocent last month and admitted to U.S. District Judge James Turk that he hadn't registered.

Eller cited his religious beliefs, saying registering for the draft would run against his idea of a Christian's duty.

Eller told the Roanoke Times & World News on Friday he was sorry Turk is being forced to make a decision in a dispute between law and conscience.

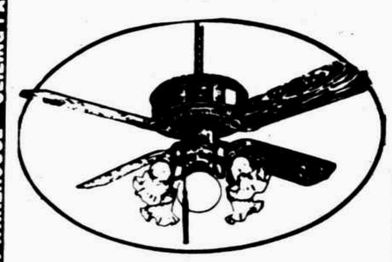

"There's another judge up there and he's the one I've got to answer to," Eller said.

Firemen walk through the rubble left by a Friday explosion which leveled a fireworks plant and killed three people. The Ohio state fire marshal's office and the U.S. Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Bureau have joined the investigation into what caused the explosion, which was heard by people 10 miles away from the plant.

Agencies join explosion investigation

CHESTERVILLE, Ohio (AP) — The state fire marshal's office and the U.S. Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Bureau joined the investigation Saturday into an explosion that leveled a fireworks plant and killed the owner and two employees.

The blast Friday was heard 10 miles from the plant and left behind only a strip of aluminium and a deep crater.

The blast at the Rainbow Fireworks Manufacturing Co. in eastern Morrow County claimed the lives of owner Jerry Siciliano, 42, of Mount Vernon and two employees, Raymond Hamlin, 20, and David Schenkel, 20, both of Marengo. The sheriff's office said Hamlin and Schenkel were step-brothers.

"We may never know what happened," said Morrow County Sheriff Tom E. Harden.

He said body parts were thrown into surrounding bean fields and a wooded area.

He said investigators believed Siciliano, Hamlin and Schenkel were inside the frame building at the time of the blast.

Siciliano's wife, Maria, 33, and three of their children — John, 11, Tony, 9, and Concertina, 7 — were in a house trailer about 30 feet from the explosion. She was treated for minor injuries at Morrow County Hospital. The children were not hurt.

Five-year-old Yankees fan finally gets his baseball wish

NEW YORK (AP) — Eric Zimmerman, a 5-year-old baseball fan dying of cancer, passes Yankee Stadium every day on his way to his treatments, and he asked if someday he might get to look inside.

With the help of two chambers of commerce and the Yankees organization, he not only looked inside, he was driven to the stadium in a silver limousine with a police escort, got to meet Dave Winfield and sat next to the dugout to watch the Yankees play. And they won, 6-0.

"He knows he's very, very ill, but I could tell by his face that he was very happy last night," George Zimmerman, Eric's father, said Saturday.

Eric has suffered from bone marrow cancer since he was an infant. Doctors have tried many treatments, but now say there is no cure.

Each day on his way to therapy at Manhattan's Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, Eric passes by the stadium. Once, he asked his mother if he might someday see the inside of the Bronx ballpark.

"I watch baseball on TV and that's how he became a baseball fan, I guess," said Zimmerman, of Wappingers Falls.

The boy's request reached friends at the Yorktown Heights Chamber of Commerce. They called the Bronx Chamber of Commerce, and the Yankees organization was contacted.

On Friday afternoon Eric and his family were driven to Yankee Stadium in a long silver limousine with a police escort.

Oraflex maker was warned

WASHINGTON (AP) — A week before Oraflex was withdrawn from the market, the U.S. government reprimanded the manufacturer of the arthritis drug for releasing "false and misleading concepts" about its safety and effectiveness.

News releases about Oraflex, which has been linked to deaths in Great Britain and the United States, included claims that overstated the drug's effectiveness and thus violated the law against misbranding products, said Jerome Halperin, acting director of the Food and Drug Administration's Office of Drugs.

Misconceptions and false impressions of the drug's safety and efficacy "are clearly evident in many broadcasts and printed news items which resulted from the press kit, press conference and dissemination of related materials," Halperin wrote in a July 27 letter to Eli Lilly and Co. of Indianapolis.

He asked the company to distribute a new release, which would be screened by the FDA, "clearly setting forth the clinically verified information about the safety and efficacy of Oraflex and its limitations as currently recognized in the approved labeling."

Eli Lilly spokesman Fred Pursell declined to comment on Halperin's letter.

The company voluntarily withdrew Oraflex from the international market on Wednesday, a few hours after Great Britain suspended sales of the drug for 90 days.

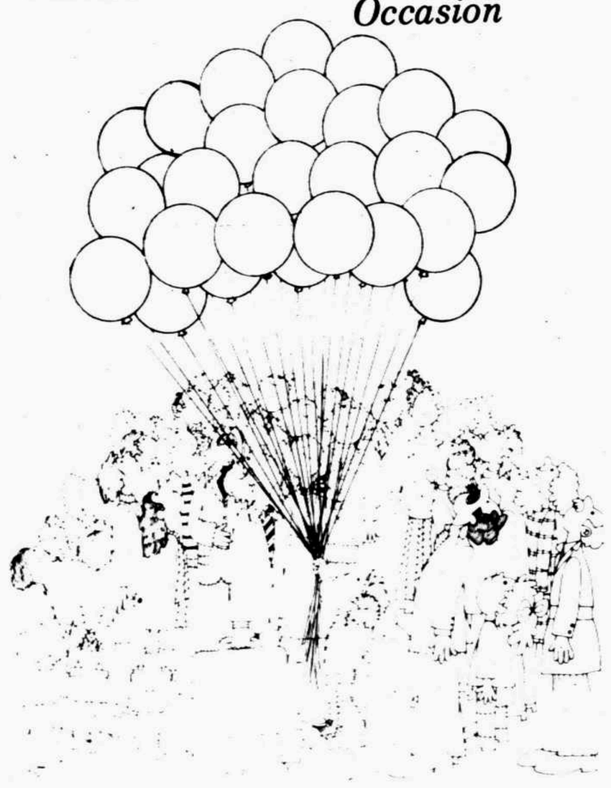

Oraflex, used as a treatment for rheumatoid arthritis and osteoarthritis, has been associated with at least 61 deaths in Great Britain and 11 in the United States.

The side effects of the drug, which has the generic name benoxaprofen, include gastrointestinal problems as well as adverse reactions in the liver, bone marrow, skin, eyes and nails.

Most of the Oraflex-linked deaths in Great Britain were among elderly patients.

Frank Coppola is led into a courtroom by a policeman in this 1978 file photo. Barring intervention, Coppola Tuesday will be led to another room, this time to face the electric chair. If he is electrocuted, Coppola will be the first person executed in the state of Virginia since 1962.

Coppola prepared to face death but retains insistence of innocence

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Early on, Frank Coppola wanted to be a priest, but changed his mind. Then he became a college basketball player, but flunked out. Then he became a policeman, then an auto mechanic. Then a burglar.

Finally, Coppola, a man of fateful contradictions, committed a murder so savage a jury sentenced him to death.

That was four years ago. Now, barring intervention by the courts or by the governor, Coppola, 38, will die this week in Virginia's electric chair — without, at his own request, an attendant clergyman.

Should he die as scheduled about 11 p.m. Tuesday, Coppola will become the first person executed in Virginia in 20 years and only the fifth in the nation since the Supreme Court revived the death penalty in 1976.

He says he doesn't want to live, but stoutly insists he is innocent of the April 1978 robbery and beating murder of Muriel Hatchell, 45, wife of Peyton Hatchell, a wealthy Newport News used-car dealer, in their home.

In June, when a judge set the Aug. 10 execution date, Coppola asked for a summer rendezvous with the electric chair so it wouldn't interfere with the schooling of his two teen-age sons.

The judge obliged.

"Further incarceration for these charges that I have maintained my innocence of can only lead to my being stripped of all personal dignity and continue to induce tremendous hardship on my family," Coppola wrote his lawyer at the sentencing, Augustus Anninos.

With even the least encouragement from Coppola, lawyers stand ready to seek a stay of execution from the courts. Coppola already has had three stays, but Anninos — no longer Coppola's lawyer — says there are "viable and real" legal grounds on which another could be granted.

But there has been no such encouragement from Coppola, nor from his ex-wife, mother of his two sons, or his own mother, with whom the condemned killer conferred before deciding against another appeal.

Despite pleas by clergymen and others who oppose capital punishment — among them Roman Catholic Bishop Walter Sullivan, who calls himself Coppola's pastor, and former U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark — Gov. Charles S. Robb has not indicated he will intervene.

"I'm on record as supporting the death penalty," the governor said after meeting last week with six clergymen representing Protestants, Catholics and Jews who asked him to stay the execution.

Any decision he makes "will be based on the law and the expectation of the governor supporting the law," Robb said.

Still, an aide to the governor said Thursday that Robb has not "foreclosed on anything ... especially should Coppola decide he doesn't want to die and if valid legal points are presented."

With the days dwindling down to a precious few, it seems possible that, an hour before midnight next Tuesday, Coppola will walk the 30-odd steps from his cell on Death Row at the Virginia Penitentiary to the execution chamber and die in the old, oaken electric chair that has not been used since 1962.

Since it was installed in the penitentiary in 1908, when the state abandoned public hangings, 236 people — all but one a man, and 208 of them black — have died in the chair, which the state has refurbished because of its antiquity.

The last person executed in Virginia was Carroll Garland, 26, of Lynchburg, who was electrocuted March 2, 1962 — less than a year after he had robbed and slain a gas station attendant on May 28, 1961.

Coppola's desire to become a Roman Catholic priest led to his enrollment in a Baltimore seminary at age 14 in 1958. He studied there one year before deciding the religious life wasn't for him.

Proxmire still fighting for anti-genocide bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Virtually every Senate business day for the past 15 years, Sen. William Proxmire relentlessly has stood in battle for a 33-year-old human rights issue that attracts little attention from his colleagues.

At least 2,000 times since 1967, the Wisconsin Democrat has risen to urge ratification of the International Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Genocide.

Though drafted under United Nations auspices with strong U.S. support and adopted unanimously by the General Assembly in 1948, the convention has been awaiting Senate approval since then-President Truman signed it in 1949 — 33 years ago.

There are some who consider the pact a dangerous document, others who believe it's a dead issue. Proxmire launched his campaign to keep it alive.

"I felt it was vital to keep it before the Senate," he said recently, adding that his pledge to wage a campaign of daily speeches until the pact is ratified "has served that purpose."

PROXMIRE made the vow "clearly feeling he would never be in the struggle this long," an aide said.

But he just as clearly intends to see it through.

The pact was written after the World War II Holocaust to make a crime of genocide, defined as acts "committed with intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a national, ethnical, racial or religious group."

So far, 88 other nations have accepted the treaty.

"I felt it was so outrageous" that the Senate would fail to ratify a treaty supported by every past president since Truman, Proxmire said.

He said he believes the pact is much more than a symbol, although its symbolic significance is important, and that an earlier version might have had an impact on the Nazi death camps.

Those who were conscious of what was going on would have had a firm basis — international law — to condemn it," Proxmire said. "A lot of people didn't really pay much attention, didn't believe it was going on, and I think this would have dramatized it."

The U.N. produced the treaty after the International Military Tribunal at Nuremburg found that consideration of genocide was outside its charter.

The document has its detractors — most of them focusing on the question of sovereignty.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has said that "all of us are concerned in a human way about violations of fundamental human rights in other nations. But legally we are incompetent to do anything about it unless we wish to alter the most cherished premise of international relations, namely the sovereign independence of nations."

SEN. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., calls the pact "fundamentally dangerous to our sovereignty and unique institutions" and adds:

"The Genocide Treaty, where it should restrain atrocity, is not observed; and where it would be observed, it is unnecessary."

Proxmire responds, "I do not believe in yielding United States sovereignty in any way...This is a very limited treaty. Not a panacea for the world's ills. Not a step toward One World Government.

"But it is an important moral statement, a strong diplomatic tool in the hand of the world's most powerful and influential country."

The Reagan administration is reviewing the issue, State Department officials said.

Nazi 'invasion' remembered

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A sharp-eyed visitor to the Sawgrass Beach and Country Club might spot the brush-covered sign marking the spot where four Nazi saboteurs came ashore during World War II.

Armed with munitions and $70,000 in cash, they were sent by Adolf Hitler in a plot to destroy American industrial plants, disrupt transportation centers and wreak general havoc.

A week earlier, in June 1942, a landing party of four others had slipped ashore near Amagansett on Long Island, N.Y., as part of the two-pronged invasion called Operation Pastorius.

Before a single act of sabotage was carried out, one of the Germans backed down and confessed the plot to the FBI. The others were captured in New York City and Chicago.

On Aug. 8, 1942, six were executed in Washington. Two others who testified against their co-conspirators received lengthy prison terms.

Historian Leon Prior, a former FBI agent in Miami, wrote about the Florida half of the invasion in a 1970 article for the Florida Historical Quarterly.

According to the accounts, the four Florida invaders had previously lived and worked in the United States, then went to Berlin for training.

The leader of the Florida mission was Edward John Kerling, a 33-year-old mechanic who had worked in New York. Second in the group was Herbert Hans Haupt, 22, a naturalized citizen from Chicago who worked as an optician's apprentice.

Another was Werner Thiel, 35, a Detroit toolmaker who was active in the German-American Bund. The fourth was Herman Neubauer, 32, a hotel worker in Hartford, Conn., and Chicago.

Both groups attended a sabotage school at Quentz Lake near Berlin, where they learned how to blow up bridges, railroad and power lines and to use explosives and incendiary devices.

Kidnapped girl's stepdad dies in fire believed set

GALLATIN, Mo. (AP) — Investigators say a house fire that killed the stepfather of a 9-year-old girl missing since she was kidnapped in May was deliberately set.

A coroner's jury ruled that Ron Nelson, 39, died of smoke inhalation in the early Friday fire.

A flammable liquid had been poured on the carpet outside a second-floor bedroom, said Ralph Canon, a criminal investigator for the Missouri Fire Marshal's office.

Nelson's wife, Rosalyn, was sitting on the front porch of the home smoking a cigarette when the fire broke out about 1 a.m., said Daviess County Sheriff Kenneth Calvin.

"We do not have a suspect," he said.

Nelson's death followed the kidnapping of his wife's daughter from a previous marriage, 9-year-old Jennifer Barden. The girl was last seen climbing into a pickup truck while playing in her front yard on May 1.

Authorities believe the girl was abducted by Billy D. Wilson, 27, and Roy James Hill, 36, who escaped from a jail in Washington Parish, La., on April 18.

Wilson was shot to death May 5 by a Mira, La., housewife who found him in her home. Hill was arrested May 4 on burglary charges in Texas.

Searches have failed to turn up any sign of the girl, and she is presumed dead.

The last official search ended unsuccessfully May 15 when 100 Missouri National Guardsmen volunteered for a weekend sweep through two counties.

Nelson, who operated a tavern with his wife, was a "quiet, easy-going kind of guy," said Wilbur Gordon, a Daviess County deputy sheriff.

"He used to tell me, 'I can't understand why this happened to my little girl.'" Gordon said.

The quiet of this farming town about 50 miles northeast of Kansas City had been shattered in January when an assailant entered the home of Tom and Mary Bergman and fatally shot Mrs. Bergman and an electrician working on the house. Two of the family's nine children were wounded.

The assailant, George "Hal" Page, shot himself when cornered by authorities. Police said he had demanded $20,000 from Bergman before the shooting spree as his share of a failed Alaskan gold mining venture.

Boy suspected of killing pals

INDEPENDENCE, Kan. (AP) — A 15-year-old was booked Saturday in connection with the shooting deaths of two teen-age friends from his Boy Scout troop, authorities said.

The 15-year-old, whose name was not released, was suspected of two counts of murder and burglary. The burglary allegation stemmed from an Aug. 1 break-in at an advertising specialty store next to his father's home.

Policd Chief Lee Bynum said no motive has been established in the slayings of Ivan Garmen, 13, and Chuck Holeman, 14, who died of multiple gunshot wounds from a .22-caliber rife.

The bodies were found in the living room of a home where the 15-year-old lived with his father. The victims apparently were spending the night with the 15-year-old, Bynum said.

The two boys were killed between midnight and 4 a.m., said Bynum, adding that neighbors reported hearing noises they thought were firecrackers around 2 a.m.

The father of the 15-year-old was not home during the night, Bynum said.

Ex-nursery school owner sentenced to over 26 years for child molestation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former nursery school owner has been sentenced to 26 years and eight months in prison for child molestation after thousands of pictures of naked children were discovered in his home.

Edward James Meacham, 49, was sentenced Friday by Superior Court Judge Robert I. Weil. Meacham was convicted of 11 counts of child molestation.

Meacham operated the now-closed Isabel's Nursery School in Eagle Rock with his wife, Isabel, who was not charged with any wrongdoing. He was arrested in May 1981 after parents complained to police that their children had been molested at the school.

Camera checks out TMI once more

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — A tiny television camera's second "quick look" at the damaged reactor at Three Mile Island still hasn't answered questions about whether any fuel melted during the March 1979 accident, plant officials said.

The company, in a statement released Friday, said a preliminary review of a videotape made by the camera at two points — on the edge of the reactor core and midway between the edge and the center — showed less serious damage than the first "quick look" July 21.

BPU Nuclear Corp. spokesman Doug Bedell said experts anticipate that the damage from the accident would be greater in the center, where the most heat is generated during a nuclear reaction.

Most recent B-1 flight called success

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The first flight in 15 months for the B-1 bomber project, dropped by President Carter but reinstituted by President Reagan last year, was a success, said an Air Force spokesman.

The three-hour test flight Friday of navigation and flight control systems was "virtually trouble-free," said Lt. Thomas Boneparte.

Navigation and flight control systems were tested on the three-hour flight, said Boneparte. Lt. Col. LeRoy Schroeder, head of the Air Force B-1 Test Unit at Edwards, said the crew also tested the craft's aerial refueling and high-speed capacities.

Ex-cop sentenced for raping woman

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former police sergeant has been sentenced to three years in prison for the rape of a 26-year-old woman he had stopped in the San Fernando Valley for a traffic violation.

Leigh B. Schroyer was sentenced Friday by Superior Court Judge Ricardo Torres, who allowed him to remain free on $5,000 bail pending an appeal. Schroyer resigned from the police department.

Schroyer, 39, was patrolling the West San Fernando Valley early in the morning on Oct. 3, 1981, when he stopped a Northridge woman and gave her a sobriety test, which she failed. The woman testified Schroyer took her to his home where he raped her.

Debt-forgiving store owner gets thanks from letter writers

DOVER, N.H. (AP) — A variety store owner who erased unpaid charge accounts from his books to stimulate business is getting gifts from people who read news reports about him.

Ernest T.J. Peters, owner of E.J.'s Variety store, said he received two letters containing $20 each in cash on Saturday.

"God bless you," one of the letter-writers said. "It was so good to see good news and love and forgiveness on the front-page amidst the reports of war, trouble and man's inhumanity to man."

Postmarked Scranton, Pa., and signed only, "a Scrantonian," the letter continued: "I am sending you $20 to express in my own way the joy you gave me by your act of love."

Marchers across the nation remember Hiroshima

By The Associated Press

Marchers in New York chanted "Hiroshima never again, nuclear war must come to an end" on Saturday as demonstrators in San Francisco walked in silence over the Golden Gate Bridge to mark the 37th anniversary of the first use of the atomic bomb.

Another protest was planned for Sunday in Piketon, Ohio, and some seaborne demonstrators in Washington state prepared to protest the arrival of a nuclear submarine.

In New York, about 500, banner-toting demonstrators marched through the streets of Manhattan's Lower East Side, one of the city's poorest neighborhoods.

David Chen, coordinator of the Asian American Caucus for Disarmament, said the parade route was chosen to "stress the human-need aspect of the peace movement."

In San Francisco, 800 to 900 people walked across the bridge on Saturday after a similar demonstration Friday night in San Francisco's Japantown.

LOOK! THE FOURTH $2000.00 WINNER FROM COCA-COLA PLAYING PEEL-A- FORTUNE IN MIDLAND

A very happy Mrs. Virginia Busbee of Midland, Texas, exchanges her lucky Coca-Cola cash caps that spelled the word HOMERUN for a $2,000.00 check from Charles Richardson, Midland Coca Cola Route Manager. Also pictured is Steve Walker, Store Manager of the Gibson's where Mrs. Busbee purchased her 16 ouncebottle of Coca-Cola that had the last letter needed to completethe spelling of HOMERUN.

Ever since your local Coca-Cola bottler began the Peel-A-Fortune game early this year, many of your friends and neighbors have been collecting letters of the alphabet from bottle caps and can tabs of Coca-Cola, Mr. Pibb, Sprite and Tab. They have been trying to spell the lucky words, HOMERUN, TOUCHDOWN, POINT or COKE in hopes of winning a prize or instant cash up to $2,000.00 from their local Coca-Cola bottler. Now, Mrs. Virginia Busbee of Midland, Texas has successfully spelled the word HOMERUN in accordance with the Peel-A-Fortune rules and has become the fourth Midland $2,000.00 Coca-Cola instant cash winner in 1982.

You can win too. Just like Patti McDermott, Joe Sanchez, Mrs. Danny Kellum, and Mrs. Busbee When you stock up your picnic supply of soft drinks look for the bottle caps or can tabs of Coca-Cola, Mr. Pibb, Sprite or Tab with $$$ on the top. Under each specially marked cap or tab is a letter of the alphabet. All you have to do is spell one of the lucky words on the game card and you can win a prize or instant cash up to $2,000.00 just like Mrs Busbee, even if you don't spell any of the words, you are a winner because you have provided yourself and your family delicious, refreshing, Coca-Cola or its allied brands of Mr. Pibb, Sprite or Tab.

Coca-Cola...the No. 1 selling soft drink in Midland and the Permian Basin. Coca-Cola...the one the others try to challenge or compare themselves to whether they are number 2 or 27. Coca-Cola...the one the others want to be when they grow up...the Real Thing. Just ask any of the following $2,000.00 winners in this year's Coca-Cola instant cash contest: Virginia Busbee, Patti McDermott, Joe Sanchez, Mrs. Danny Kellum of Midland and Martha Carlile and Renee Gamble of Clyde; Hope Lopez and James Rogers of Big Spring; Blas De Anada and Williard Farror of Lamesa; Dan Stone of Gayle and David Menzel of Desdemona.

No purchase necessary. Just look for game cards and details where you shop for Coca-Cola, Mr. Pibb Sprite and Tab. So play Peel-A-Fortune with Coca-Cola, Mr. Pibb, Sprite or Tab who knows...you could be a $2,000.00 instant cash winner...just like Mrs. Busbee.

Armenian 'suicide squad' attacks airport in Turkey

By EMEL ANIL

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — An Armenian "suicide squad" opened up with bombs and submachine guns at Ankara airport Saturday, and officials said at least seven people were killed and 69 wounded in a two-hour rampage that sent passengers diving through windows and trampling each other to get out.

The state radio said three police officials, three Turkish passengers and a terrorist were killed in the siege. Security forces seriously wounded the other two terrorists, state radio said. Earlier, broadcasts said two terrorists were killed and a third seriously wounded.

The guerrillas said their first attack ever in Turkey was a protest against "the Turkish fascist occupation of our land," and warned of suicide attacks in the United States, Canada, France, England, Switzerland and Sweden unless 85 prisoners held in those countries were freed in seven days.

THE TERRORISTS in the Turkish assault first attacked the international flight terminal at Esenboga airport, where they exploded a bomb and then strafed passengers going through passport control for a Dutch airlines flight.

"Someone with a black attache case in hand came in and set it on the floor. Soon there were explosions. We all threw ourselves on the floor. People were trampling each other trying to escape. Then, another person with a submachine gun walked in and started firing around. The panic got even worse," said Haci Veli Turkcan, who was at the airport to see a relative off.

Another witness, customs official Seyfettin Colak, said he first heard an explosion from the section of duty-free shops.

"The international flight terminal was crowded. There was panic. Then several people started shooting at the waiting passengers. The passengers jumped out of the building any way they could, some broke windows to do so. Just then I was shot and wounded," Colak said.

Turkey's state radio said one terrorist was wounded in the terminal and that two others ran into the cafeteria, taking 20 people hostage.

THE CAPTORS HELD the hostages for two hours, the broadcast said, while negotiations were started. The terrorists offered a written message to police and when an officer entered to take it, one of the gunmen panicked and set off a bomb. Security forces then rushed the cafeteria, killing one terrorist and wounding the second, the state radio said.

Earlier reports said two terrorists were killed in the terminal and a third took the cafeteria hostages.

There was no immediate explanation for the change in the number of terrorists reported involved but presumbably one of the passengers shot in the terminal was mistaken for an attacker.

Anatolia said one of the terrorists harangued the cafeteria hostages about his group, the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia. He demanded that an Armenian state be recognized in eastern Turkey, the agency quoted a witness as saying.

ONE REPORT SAID the terrorists probably disembarked from a Lufthansa flight which arrived at Esenboga at 3:25 p.m. (7:25 a.m. CDT). Another report, from Anatolia, said they might have arrived by land from elsewhere in Turkey. The shooting began at 4:15 p.m. and ended at 6:15 p.m., the agency said.

The Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia claimed responsibility for the attack in a phone call to The Associated Press office in Beirut, which said the operation was staged by "martyr Kharmian Hayrik Suicide Squad." Hayrik was not further identified.

The Secret Army is one of the two Armenian terrorist groups responsible for the assasination of 22 Turkish officials and members of their families abroad since 1973.

This was the first time Armenian terrorists staged a major operation within borders of Turkey where 30,000 Armenians live.

The terrorists say they are avenging the massacre of 1.5 million Armenians by Ottoman Turks in 1915-16.

Airport attack boldest one yet

By The Associated Press

The bloody airport shootout Saturday in Ankara, Turkey, was the boldest attack yet on a Turkish target by Armenian terrorists who have vowed to avenge what they claim was Turkey's massacre of 1.5 million Armenians 67 years ago.

The Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia is considered the most violent of Armenian terrorist groups who have claimed responsibility for a spree of killings, bombings and abductions aimed at the Turkish government.

Here is a list of previous major terrorist attacks against Turkish diplomats and their family members since 1973, compiled from various sources:

— Jan. 28, 1973. Two consular officials were shot to death at a hotel in Montecito, near Santa Barbara, Calif. Armenian immigrant Gourgen M. Yanikian, then 78, was convicted of killing Mehmet Baydar, 49, Turkish consul-general in Los Angeles, and Bahadir Demir, vice consul general. Yanikian was sentenced to life in prison.

— OCT. 22, 1975. Three gunmen killed Danis Tunaligil, Turkish ambassador in Vienna, as he sat in his office. The murder was blamed on a group called the Armenian Liberation Army.

— Oct. 24, 1975. Gunmen shot and killed Ismail Erez, 57, Turkish ambassador to France, and his driver, Talip Yenner, 24, in Paris. Armenians were blamed.

— Feb. 16, 1976. Turkish Embassy First Secretary Oktar Serit was shot to death in a Beirut pinball parlor. The Armenian Secret Army claimed responsibility.

— June 9, 1977. Taha Carim, Turkish ambassador to the Vatican, was shot and killed while entering his residence in Rome. Armenians were blamed.

— June 2, 1978. The wife, brother-in-law and driver of Zeki Duneralp, Turkish ambassador to Spain, were ambushed and killed. A group called Justice Commandos of the Armenian Genocide claimed responsibility.

— Oct. 12, 1979. A gunman ambushed and killed Ahmet Benler, 27, son of Ozdemir Benler, Turkish ambassador to the Netherlands.

— DEC. 23, 1979. Turkish press attache Yilmaz Colpan was assassinated by gunmen in central Paris. Armenians were blamed.

— April 17, 1980. Two men shot and wounded Veedi Turel, 62, Turkish ambassador to the Vatican, and his driver. Justice Commandos of the Armenian Genocide claimed responsibility.

— March 10, 1980. Explosions rocked offices of Turkish airlines in central Rome, killing one person and wounding seven. A caller to news agencies claimed the Armenian Secret Army for Liberation of Armenia was responsible.

— July 31, 1980. Gunmen killed Turkish administrative attache Galip Ozmen and his daughter, Neslihan, in Athens, Greece. Armenians were blamed.

— Aug. 5, 1980. Two gunmen shot up the Turkish consulate in Lyon, France, injuring four people, three seriously. The shooting was blamed on the Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia.

— DEC. 17, 1980. Two gunmen on a motorcycle killed Sarik Ariyak, Turkish consul general in Sydney, Australia, and the diplomat's driver. The Justice Commandos of the Armenian Genocide claimed responsibility.

— March 4, 1981. Gunmen claiming to belong to the Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia killed Resat Morali, labor attache with the Turkish embassy in Paris. Religious attache Tecelli Ari was wounded and later died.

— April 3, 1981. Cavit Demir, 43, Turkish embassy counselor in Copenhagen, Denmark, was critically wounded outside his apartment. Anonymous callers claimed a group called the Commandos of Retribution for the Armenian Genocide was responsible.

— June 9, 1981. Turkish diplomat Mehmet Savas Erguz was shot and killed in Geneva. Armenians were blamed.

— SEPT. 24, 1981. Four Armenian gunmen seized the Turkish consulate in Paris, held 60 hostages for 15 hours and surrendered. The militants demanded release of what they called Armenian political prisoners in Turkey.

Portillo blames gamblers

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Jose Lopez Portillo on Saturday blamed speculators and Mexicans who splurged on unnecessary purchases abroad for the drastic peso devaluation announced last week by his lame-duck government.

He said that a speculative run on dollars would have exhausted Mexico's central bank reserves within two weeks to a month, forcing a suspension of payments on the nation's $80 billion foreign debt, if it had been permitted to continue.

"Many hundreds of millions of dollars were taken from our monetary system in a period of several days," the president said.

Billions of dollars are spent each year by Mexicans crossing the border into the United States. It is also common for middle-class and wealthy Mexicans to purchase condominiums and other real estate in the United States as a hedge against inflation here.

Apparently, the grim outlook for the Mexican economy had caused those practices to swell to panic proportions.

"These purchases have been in excess," the president said. "That's all over with."

From now on, Lopez Portillo said, Mexico's "no longer abundant dollars" will be used "for that which is important for the entire country."

Lopez Portillo, flanked by his cabinet, spoke to business and labor leaders called to the presidential residence, Los Pinos, for an explanation of the government's decision to devalue the peso Thursday for the second time this year.

"I want to convince you to obtain your voluntary and massive support for the measures that are going to follow," he said.

South Africa dismisses invasion tale

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — South Africa on Saturday dismissed as "propaganda" reports that its forces have invaded southern provinces of Marxist-ruled Angola.

Angola offers refuge to black nationalist guerrillas seeking independence for South-West Africa. South Africa administers the mineral-rich territory, also called Namibia.

Angola said the purported South African invading force includes 60 warplanes, 30 helicopters, 40 armored cars and 200 pieces of artillery.

The claim was made Friday by Angolan Foreign Minister Paulo Teixeira Jorge, who said the southern part of his nation was invaded Aug. 2.

A South African Defense Ministry spokesman in Pretoria said Saturday the invasion claim was "typical of propaganda indulged in whenever important talks are being held on the future of South-West Africa, as are being held at present."

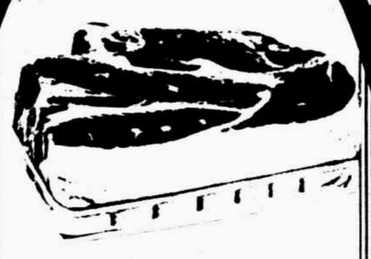

Namibia is administered by South Africa in defiance of a United Nations call for independence of the former German colony.

Jorge's claim was reported by the official Mozambique news agency from Tripoli, Libya, where Jorge had gone for a meeting of the Organization of African Unity.

Meanwhile, an account published in the Portuguese press said South Africa, with the aid of Angolan dissidents, foreign mercenaries and anti-Castro Cubans living in the United States, is planning a two-pronged invasion of Angola to be timed with a coup in Luanda against the country's Marxist government in the near future.

The account, carried in the politically centrist Lisbon weekly Expresso, claimed agreement was reached on "Operation Kubango" by the parties allegedly involved during a meeting in London in April.

Vietnamese delegation to visit Honolulu

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A Vietnamese delegation which searches for remains of American and Vietnamese war dead has left Hanoi for the United States, the Vietnam News Agency reported Saturday.

It said the delegation in charge of seeking information about personnel missing in the Vietnam War left Friday and planned to visit the U.S. Joint Casualty Resolution Center and Central Identification Laboratory in Honolulu at the invitation of the U.S. government.

These institutions are key U.S. agencies charged with resolving cases of about 2,500 Americans who did not return from Vietnam, which U.S. forces evacuated in 1975. Most of the missing have now been classified as dead with their remains not recovered.

The United States has been urging Vietnam to provide a full accounting of the American casualties as a step toward improving poor relations between the two countries.

Terrorists claim Paris bank bombing

PARIS (AP) — The French terrorist group Direct Action on Saturday claimed responsibility for a bombing that blew up part of the Discount Bank in Paris and shattered nearby windows but caused no injuries.

A anonymous telephone caller to the French news agency Agence France-Presse said the group planted the bomb that blew up on Friday, but the caller gave no reason. However, a security official with the bank said he believed the attack was linked to Israel's invasion of Lebanon because many of the bank's clients are Jewish merchants in the neighborhood.

Direct Action is described by police as an anarchist revolutionary group with a small following. The group also claimed responsibility for a machine gun attack last Sunday on the car of an official at the Israeli Embassy in Paris.

Jailed Philippinos tortured, letter says

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Twenty-three people jailed for alleged links to the outlawed Communist Party of the Philippines have appealed for U.N. intervention in their cases, claiming military authorities have tortured them.

Roman Catholic nuns acting on the prisoners' behalf released their petition on Saturday, saying it was filed at U.N. headquarters in New York last month.

In the petition the prisoners claim they have been subjected to torture including electric shock, choking, beatings around the groin and ears and burning with cigarettes.

They claimed that despite the lifting of martial law by President Ferdinand Marcos in January 1981, "violence in the treatment and handling of suspected subversives has become routine, even institutionalized."

Deluge ravages southwest Pakistan

QUETTA, Pakistan (AP) — Four days of torrential downpours have ravaged Pakistan's Quetta Valley, killing at least 33 people and damaging about 250 huts, police sources said Saturday.

They said rescuers were digging out bodies from muddy debris in valley villages outside Quetta, the capital of Baluchistan province in southwest Pakistan near the Afghanistan border.

Police dismantle bomb in central Vienna

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Police discovered and dismantled a homemade bomb in a park near Vienna's downtown shopping district, a spokesman said Saturday.

Newspapers reported the bomb was first found on Friday and had failed to explode because of a defect in its timing mechanism.

Police refused to speculate on who planted the bomb.

Iran claims 'liberation' of hills; Iraq says Iranian jet downed

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran claimed Saturday its forces attacked two Iraqi outposts near the Iranian border town of Qasr-e-Shirin and "liberated" two strategic hills held by the Iraqis inside Iran, killing 200 enemy soldiers.

Iraq said its air force shot down an Iranian jet in a dogfight near the port city of Basra, where most of the fighting has occurred since Iran invaded Iraq last month. Iraq claimed 15 Iranians were killed in Saturday's fighting.

Qasr-e-Shirin, about 430 miles west of Tehran, controls the main highway leading to the Iraqi capital of Baghdad, which is 220 miles to the southwest. The reported battle there could signal the beginning of a new thrust by Iranian forces.

When it invaded Iraq, Iran threatened to move in along the northern portion of the border, but until Saturday, most of the fighting was reported around the southern end of the border. Iranian troops have become bogged down in heavy fighting there.

The Iranian communique, reported by the official Iranian news agency, said Iraqi troops gave up the two hills around Qasr-e-Shirin after an hour's fighting. But they retreated to two other hills still held by Iraq inside western Iran, the communique said.

There was no way to verify the two sides' accounts of the fighting, since neither allows correspondents to cover the warfront on a regular basis.

Iraq has claimed that it has withdrawn all its forces from Iran, fulfilling Iran's first condition for ending the 23-month-old war. Iran has insisted that Iraqi troops are still on Iranian territory.

Meanwhile, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, leader of Iran's Islamic government, mocked Iraqi President Saddam Hussein in a speech reported by Tehran radio Saturday.

Khomeini called on Hussein to give up his office, although he did not demand Hussein's ouster as a price for ending the war.

"Let us presume he is victorious. He should retire himself victoriously in the same way he withdrew (from Iran) victoriously. And now he can search for another job victoriously," Khomeini said.

American Jews fill jobs vacated by Israeli reservists

EDITOR'S NOTE — Israeli military censors would not allow the location of the base to be identified in this dispatch.

By CHARLES J. HANLEY

AN ISRAELI ARMY BASE, Golan Heights (AP) — American Jews by the score are arriving in Israel to take up M-16 rifles and fill guard posts and other jobs vacated by Israelis called to serve in the Lebanon war.

The first contingent of 230 American volunteers settled in this weekend at a makeshift camp here on the gritty, wind-burned Golan Heights plateau, three miles from the Syrian frontier. Israeli military authorities refuse to let journalists further identify the camp.

An additional 100-200 Americans are expected to arrive next weekend.

Some who will be pulling guard duty at Israel's isolated frontier settlements said they wish they could join the Israeli army.

"When I came home from Vietnam, nobody cared," New Yorker Alan Forman said. "Here you're wanted, you're needed. You know you've helped Israel survive." The 32-year-old Forman said he served with the 1st Air Cavalry in the Vietnam War.

The volunteers, almost all from the New York area, include lawyers, teachers, a medical student and what seemed to be a large number of young men looking for some excitement in an otherwise empty summer. About 80 are women. Not all are Jewish.

Paul Clines, 21, who described himself as an Irish Catholic from Queens, accompanied a Jewish friend.

"I just thought it was important to come to help Israel," said the Oswego, New York State College student, wearing a neckerchief and dark glasses against the harsh sun.

The volunteers will replace Israeli military reservists from 20 Golan Heights settlements called up for the 2-month-old Lebanese campaign against the Palestine Liberation Organization. The Americans signed up during a recent two-week Israeli recruiting drive in New York.

Aharon Davidi, a retired army colonel who organized the program, said some volunteers will help with fieldwork on the agricultural settlements and some will work at army installations repairing backpacks and other equipment. But most will serve as guards on settlement perimeters, armed and wearing military fatigues.

"They first will receive basic military training in the use of the M-16 and Uzi submachine gun," he said.

During their four to six weeks in Israel, the Americans will spend off-duty hours at the camp, sleeping in army tents jammed with 10-12 cots each, eating meals served by an army mess and getting occasional days off to leave this area — seized from Syria in the 1967 Middle East war — for tours of other spots in Israel.

A few of the women, who said they were told in New York that they would be staying in settlement homes, were dismayed by rigors they faced.

"I brought skirt-hangers and everything, and now it looks like we have to live out of suitcases," one complained.

Although their stay here is free, the volunteers each had to pay $500 toward air fare.

"People are making sacrifices," said Forman, who owns a health food store in the New York City borough of The Bronx. "I took a chance leaving my shop with friends, but it was worth it."

The Americans seemed solidly behind the decision by Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government to invade Lebanon and try to destroy the PLO.

"I believe in what the Talmud says: 'He who comes to slay you, slay him first,'" said lawyer Robert S. Persky, 35, of Jersey City, N.J.

Rosalind Bierig, a 44-year-old biology teacher at Manhattan's Stuyvesant High School, said she was proud of Israel because it was "taking a stand against terrorism once and for all."

Mrs. Bierig, a widow with two teen-age children, said she hoped to settle in Israel soon.

"Women deserve to give birth to children and see them live and grow up, not be killed by terrorists," she said.

West Beirut hospitals may quit operating

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Hospitals in besieged west Beirut may no longer be able to treat patients if there is one more day of heavy shelling and bombing, a Red Cross official said Saturday.

At least nine of west Beirut's 15 hospitals and 27 clinics were hit in last Wednesday's 20-hour bombardment, the longest and most devastating assault since Israel invaded Lebanon two months ago in its campaign against Yasser Arafat's Palestinian guerrillas.

Several other hospitals were damaged in earlier attacks, and at least four small hospitals closed for lack of staff, water, medical supplies and fuel to run generators during the Israeli-imposed electrical blackout.

The Israelis allowed seven tons of medical supplies into west Beirut Saturday, but "all possibilities to properly run hospitals are coming to an end," Jean-Jacques Kurtz, spokesman for the International Red Cross office in west Beirut, told The Associated Press in an interview.

"The hospitals' staff are victims of just terror, and on top of that, one more day of clashes, one more day of bombing and shelling as on Aug. 4 and there will not be a single bed in any hospital in west Beirut for wounded people," he said.

With municipal water supplies to west Beirut turned off for two weeks, hospitals are relying on salty well water. The blockade has also prevented fuel from reaching west Beirut.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram

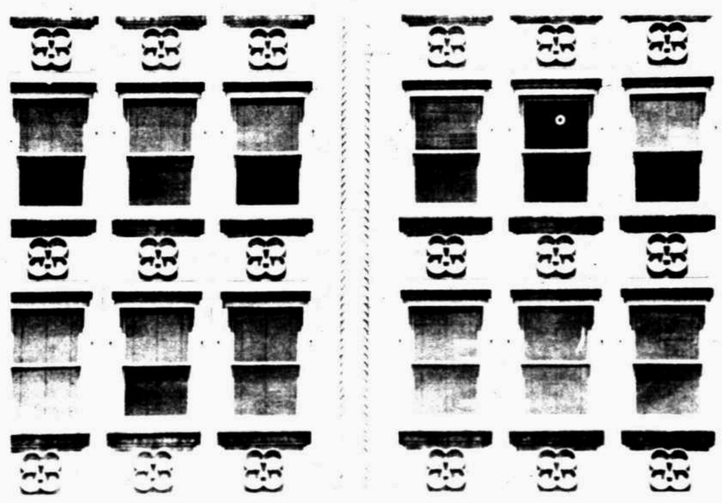

SUNDAY, AUGUST 8, 1982

The Petroleum Building, built in 1927-29 and the forerunner of Midland's skyscrapers, will be graced with a Texas Historical Commission marker at 3 p.m. today. The building is at Texas Avenue and Colorado Street in downtown Midland and is across the street from the courthouse.

Spires and crockets dress up the 12-story Petroleum Building, which, though more than 50 years old, has been remodeled on the inside. Its office space is completely leased.

Floridated paterae adorn the Petroleum Building's facades. The building follows the Woolworth Gothic architectural scheme.

Elegant edifice

That old edifice, Hogan's Petroleum Building, which became the catalyst and inspiration for Midland as the Permian Basin's petroleum center, began in the hope for glory, sank to a dismal state in the national economic slump of the 1930s, and then catapulted to greatness.

That building, Midland's first skyscraper, today stands as a staunch and graceful testimony of the vision of T.S. Hogan, the Montana statesman and financier who built the 12-story building in the 1927-29 period.

"Before the Depression, everybody thought it was wonderful," said Midland architect Gordon B. "Rusty" Arnold, who views the downtown building as Midland's most elegant and stately office tower. "During the Depression, it became 'Hogan's Folly,' but when things got to rolling again, he was called a 'visionary.'

"Hogan was a visionary, and there aren't many people like that," the architect said.

VARIOUSLY KNOWN as the Hogan Building, Hogan's Folly, Shell Building and the Petroleum Building, the edifice will be graced by a Texas Historical Commission marker in a public ceremony at 3 p.m. today.

Hogan's building was opened with the fanfare of a July the Fourth celebration in 1929 and was hailed as "not only the greatest building in the Southwest, but is one of the four most beautiful in Texas."

Back then, Midland was a cattle town which got its impetus as West Texas' oil capital after the Santa Rita exploratory well struck oil at Texon, near Big Lake, in 1923 and the resultant Permian Basin oil boom.

In the mid-1920s, rancher Clarence Scharbauer built the six-story downtown Scharbauer Hotel, which developed into a landmark and into a place where "deals were made by handshakes." The old Scharbauer has been displaced by the Hilton Inn.

Unlike the sturdy but relatively plain hotel, Hogan's Petroleum Building was designed with flair by Fort Worth architect Wyatt C. Hedrick and bears the "Woolworth Gothic" architectural style.

"The Woolworth Building in New York City sort of started the style," noted Arnold, whose office is in the Petroleum Building. The Woolworth Building, headquarters of the nickel-and-dime store chain, was built in 1911-13 and then was the world's tallest building.

The Petroleum Building, which includes the adjoining Yucca Theatre of imposing Assyrian design and which was equipped for moving-picture shows and vaudevillian acts, was conceived as far more than just an efficient office building and movie-house.

"It is not enough to offer prospective citizens brick and stones," Hogan said in 1928. "The spirit must be fed."

Earlier, in December 1927, Hogan referred to the pay-off of the office building and resultant growth of the city.

"Men of vision, common sense and courage will profit by the growth of the city. Others will tell their grandchildren what they might have done if they had bought this or that piece of property." Hogan touted Midland as the "logical" home for petroleum companies which intend "to participate in the development of the great oil reserves of West Texas."

The building ultimately fell from Hogan's ownership to that of architect Hedrick, and was purchased in 1977 for $500,000 from the Hedrick heirs by the Midland Southwest Corp.

"IT COST A million dollars," Arnold said of the original building, "and that was a helluva lot of money in 1927 and '28. It involved a heck of a lot of steel and concrete, that's for sure."

Marble wainscotting was used throughout the building, the floors were laid in marble-chip terrazzo. The building's facade was adorned with floriated paterae (floral designs); atop the building are crockets and spires.

"They (artisans) had the time to devote to the effort of ornamentations," Arnold said, "but today we don't have the time or the money to build them. They were craftsmen interested in doing ornamentation."

Arnold views the Petroleum Building as a "very important building — one of a kind."

"It'll never be able to be duplicated again, because the craftsmen who did this work are no longer out there," the architect surmised.

Today, the building virtually is intact. Much of the terrazzo has been covered, but the wainscotting is visible despite interior remodeling. Most of the old ceiling fans have been removed, the air-conditioning system has been revamped, and the pilasters, which once enhanced the entrance way, are no longer in place. The building has new elevators, a new mechanical system, and energy-efficient double windows.

"IN REMODELING of buildings in other cities," Arnold noted, "you often lose the style and the character, but this (the Petroleum Building) has remained intact. This building really has a lot of style to it.

"This building has survived the test of time," the architect said, "and it's the building that got Midland started as an office center."

Later in the 1980s, the Petroleum Building and the Yucca Theatre are to be complemented by a Midland Southwest Corp. city-block development called Renaissance West and will include a 31-story stairstep office building, a 16-story luxury hotel, parking garage and a common atrium, according to Andy Graham, the corporation's vice president for real estate. "The development is going to be a mix of the old and the new, and that's why we call it the 'Renaissance,'" Graham said.

"COMPARED WITH other buildings around the state," said Arnold, "I think it's one of the top 10. I think it's the best-looking building in town. I'll say that without any equivocation. It's got style, and that's why it's always been a poplular place." Aside from that, the Petroleum Building, at Texas Avenue and Colorado Street, is on "the best site in town — right downtown next to the courthouse."

Today, Midland is becoming a forest of office buildings, both short and tall, and the principal guideline in today's scheme is efficiency and profitability, noted Arnold.

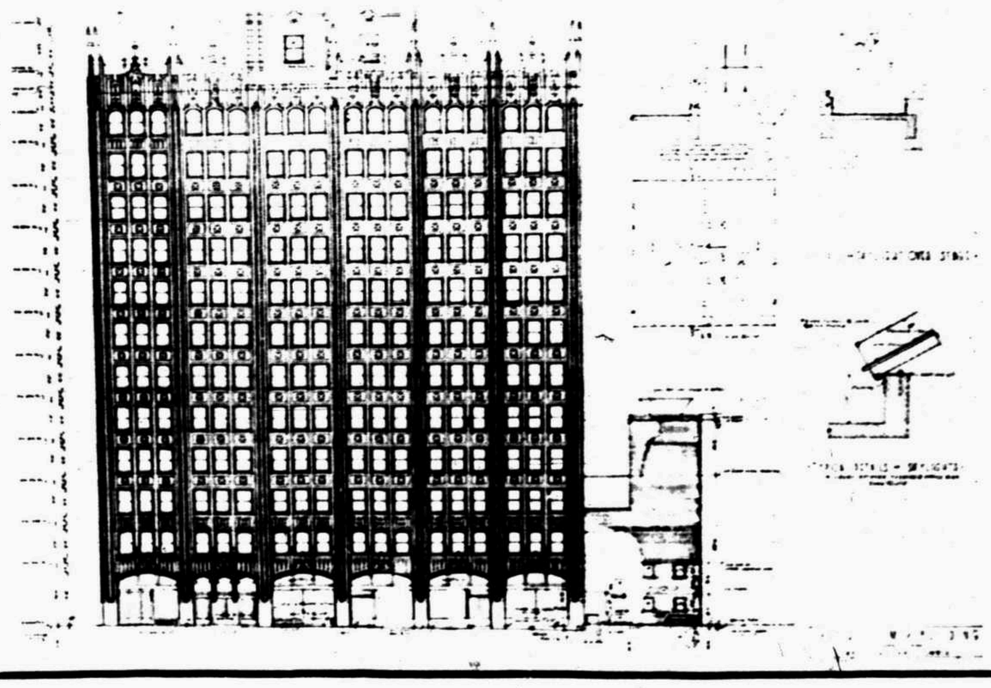

"It's difficult to build quality buildings today," he allowed, "due to the high cost of construction. But the high cost would pay dividends in the long run."

He explained:

"As building increases in Midland," he said, "those buildings that are the unique ones will be successful."

Midland architect Gordon B. "Rusty" Arnold, left, views the Petroleum Building as Midland's "best looking" office tower. Andy Graham, vice president of the building's owner, Midland Southwest Corp., envisions the landmark and its Yucca Theatre as complementing the Renaissance West development of another office building, hotel, parking garage and common atrium.

This photocopy of an original ink line drawing of the Petroleum Building is a work of art in the office of architect Gordon B. "Rusty" Arnold.

W.T. Mills

BIG LAKE — Services for W.T. Mills, 78, of Big Lake will be at 4 p.m. today in First Baptist Church in Big Lake with the Rev. J.B. Bitner officiating. Masonic graveside services will follow in Glen Rest Cemetery under the direction of Johnson's Funeral Home.

Mills died Thursday at his home.

He was born July 21, 1904, in Concho County. He married Irene Parker Sept. 20, 1933, in Eldorado and moved to Big Lake in 1939. He farmed and ranched in Concho, Glasscock and Reagan Counties and was a member of First Baptist Church in Big Lake.

He served on the Reagan County School Board from 1947 to 1953, worked as a Reagan County Commissioner from 1953 to 1963 and was a Reagan County Judge from 1971 to 1979.

Mills was a member of Big Lake Lodge No. 1203 for the past 39 years where he served as secretary from 1953 until his death. He received his life certificate in Masonic work in 1972 from the Grand Lodge of Texas, was made a life member of Sprayberry Lodge in 1957 and a life member of Big Lake Lodge in 1958. He was a member of the El Paso Consistory of Scottish Rights Bodies and held the honorary 33rd degree conferred in 1963.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, Gene Clay Mills of Bay Spring, Miss., and Jim Tom Mills of Roanoke; a daughter, Gerre Kay Eschberger of Fort Worth; a sister, Mrs. Fred (Lenna) Russell of Dallas; and six grandchildren.

Louise E. Sims

Graveside services for Louise E. Sims, 93, of 2901 W. Ohio Ave., will be at 11 a.m. Monday at the Belvedere Cemetery in San Angelo with the Rev. Tom Jones officiating. Services and local arrangements are under the direction of Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Friday in a Midland nursing home.

Mrs. Sims was born Sept. 18, 1888, in Scurry. She lived her early life in Kaufman County. In 1912, she married the late Robert R. Sims who preceded her in death in 1946. They moved to Midland in 1928. They moved to Fort Stockton in 1933 and then to San Angelo in 1946.

Mrs. Sims worked at "The Fashion," a ladies ready-to-wear shop in San Angelo, for 26 years. She was a member of the Trinity United Methodist Church in San Angelo and a lifetime member of the Chapter of Order of Eastern Star No. 826 (Concho Chapter).

Survivors include a son, Kirby G. Sims of San Angelo; a daughter, Caroline Keisling of Midland; four grandchildren, seven great-grandchildren and four great-great-grandchildren.

State hospital to conduct substance abuse seminar

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring State Hospital will conduct a substance abuse seminar Friday in the hospital's auditorium.

The seminar, "Techniques of Intervention: Why?" is sponsored through the Big Spring State Hospital and Howard College.

Registration with a $1 fee will begin at 8 a.m. and the general session will begin at 9 a.m. An additional $1 will be charged for those wishing to receive continuing education units from Howard College.

Dr. Melvin P. Sikes, a clinical and counseling psychologist and a professor of education psychology at The University of Texas at Austin, will be the consultant for this day-long seminar. He has researched and published in the field of alcoholism.

The seminar is not only geared toward those working in the field of chemical abuse, but also the general public who are interested in learning more about this problem.

Its theme is directed toward understanding the intervention strategies. The goal of the day will be to share practical, useful skills and experiences with people who work in this field.

Additional information may be obtained from Clyde J. Alsup, director of programs, substance abuse program, Big Spring State Hospital.

Local youth accepted into Boston music college

Stephen E. Kennedy, son of Mr. and Mrs. M.W. Branum of 1400 Cuthbert, was accepted into Berklee College of Music's special summer program in Boston, Mass.

The program, which began June 15, offers multilevel instruction in theory, arranging, harmony, ear training and listening and analysis. In addition, students receive private instrumental or vocal instruction and participate in a variety of ensembles.

Kennedy, who will receive instruction from Berklee's jazz faculty, will earn the equivalent of a full semester's credit.

Berklee offers a bachelor of music degree, as well as a four-year professional diploma program. Majors focus upon practical career preparation for today's music industry, including professional music, performance, jazz composition and arranging and music education.

Meier: Office of attorney general spokesman for law enforcement

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

The job as state attorney general is one of compromise rather than single-minded aggressiveness in the mind of Republican candidate Bill Meier.

And for that reason he sees himself as a more effective attorney general candidate than what his Democratic opponent, Jim Mattox, could achieve.

Meier, 42, talked of his goals if he wins the race in November and some changes that could be made in the agency during an interview with The Midland Reporter-Telegram last week.

He's looking at his campaign as a square with four corners, or points of differences with his opponent. And after listing them, he says, "You can ask me for any number of statistics on how we difter on these."

AT THE FIRST corner of difference, the two part ways on how the attorney general should function in that position. Meier says he views the attorney general as a spokesman and advocate "for law enforcement efforts in Texas in fighting crime. Mattox's record has been a soft approach on crime. His efforts have been inclined to soften the impact of law enforcement activities."

On the second corner, Meier says he has "respect and interest in protecting the Texas way and in protecting the Texas business climate."

That "Texas way" is something that each Texan can define, according to Meier.

As to business climate, the state senator explains that to mean deviating from organized unions and toward continuing the right-to-work atmosphere in Texas.

Calling himself a "right-to-work" advocate, Meier labels his opponent as a supporter of organized labor.

"His every vote has been for organized labor," says Meier, listing some of the legislation which he says Mattox supported, including food stamps for strikers. Mattox also has received about $200,000 in political contributions from organized labor in his three campaigns for Congress, Meier adds.

And he points out that the AFL-CIO has targeted $1 million for expanding labor groups in Texas, with the sights set first on Harris County "to infiltrate and get a toehold in the Texas economy. They are trying to get everyone working involved in unions."

The attorney general can exert some control over that growth, he contends, as the "people's lawyer" can determine related issues such as whether public employees can have union dues deducted from their payroll checks. With Mattox in the AG's seat, contends Meier, "you can have a puppet for organized labor."

THE THIRD CORNER turns on the issue of what Meier calls the Texas way of government, as opposed to the approach taken by Washington, D.C.

Meier contends that Mattox's six years in the U.S. House have taken him out of touch with Texas. Meier describes the differences between the two candidates as one of Mattox being against small businesses while he is an "advocate of individual opportunities for Texas."

Taking another jab at his opponent, Meier contends that Mattox's "voting record is more like the Northeast establishment and D.C. approach."

On the final corner, Meier's stand is that his qualifications to be lawyer for the state of Texas are better than those of Mattox.

Basically, the Republican candidate says that he has been a practicing attorney for the last 16 years with half of that time spent in the courtroom. Mattox, on the other hand, "has spent the last six years out of the law practice. You can't stay familiar with how to practice law when you're off being a congressman."

Getting down to a more personal basis, Meier says he has "the personality and personal ability to bring opposing groups together in resolving conflicts and in working for a solution. He described Mattox's tactics as a "one-sided obstructionist and going to the wall" for an issue."

Meier says he would give both sides a chance to air their views "and then come up with a mature judgment. This way, you can achieve results. Mattox, though, says he's a tough guy and will go to Austin and knock them around."

QUESTIONED ABOUT methods to reduce oilfield thefts — which has been a campaign theme of Mattox — Meier laughs before saying, "Most of the major criminal law bills passed in the last 10 yeas are bills I worked on."

He explains that the State Legislature in 1979 attempted to address the problem of oilfield thefts by requiring major machinery items to have identifying marks. The legislature said that someone in possession of equipment that has had its ID mark obliterated is violating the law. And the last session dealt with enforcing the law.

Oilfield thefts, in Meier's eye, are a reflection of the breakdown in the jurisdiction of the law enforcement bodies and that's where changes need to be made.

"A thief can come in and work through the cracks and elude effective law enforcement. As attorney general, I could provide a link for coordinating law enforcement through the Department of Public Safety, Texas Rangers and other existing agencies."

Mattox has called for the attorney general's office to represent the consumer in rate hike hearings before the Public Utility Commission. Here, again, Meier chuckles, saying that it would be a matter of "demagoguery."

"THE OFFICE IS specifically designated as the representative of the PUC after it has made a decision and the utility company has taken it to court for an appeal, which happens inevitably on every rate case."

For the attorney general to represent the consumer and oppose the rate hike before the PUC and then to take on the role of legal representative for the PUC before the courts is a conflict, he explains.

Meier, who makes almost double the $50,000-plus salary of attorney general in his private law practice, says the rate hearing system should be revised.

Under the current system where the PUC makes the decisions, "we're taking the regulation out of the hands of cities and putting it into three appointed officials." He suggests letting cities negotiate their rates and if it doesn't satisfy the utility companies the case should go directly to the courts. And for cities that don't have the money or means to research the rate hikes, the PUC could take on the job.

When the cases went to court, it would be the attorney general's office representing the cities, he adds.

MEIER WAS A SPONSOR of the Open Records Act "to get government out from behind closed doors" and he sees some improvements could come out of the attorney general's office in this area. Primarily, he would like to see opinions from the attorney general's office on questions of open records taking no more than two weeks.

Under the act, any record involved in government is open, he says, and the person who has custody of them "is responsible for making copies and providing them to the public."

Another change he would make is calling for the agency who refuses to open those records and is taken to court and loses to pay the court costs.

In Texas, there are 3,400 taxing districts, and this includes every agency from city and county to hospital and school. "Every government entity is covered by that act. There are no exceptions," he says, adding that it doesn't make any difference how much in taxes that agency collects.

Another change Meier would make in the $12 million per year, 500-person department is to add a litigation section.

"I want to do an in-depth analysis of the work load and how people are performing. There's been a 50 percent turnover in Mark White's administration," he says, acknowledging that lawyers in the private segment can make more money than working for the state. "But I want to try and avoid that turnover."

HE HELPED WRITE the War on Drugs five-bill program which was passed by the last legislature. Combined with the approved wiretapping bill, "this gives law enforcement a boost that gets the top person."

He also is looking at how law enforcement agencies can work with school administrations in reducing the amount of drugs floating around school campuses. Meier has suggested allowing drug dogs to sniff out where drugs are located and getting rid of the drugs, rather than worrying about getting the person who has that drug in his or her locker.

"Students are protected from unreasonable search and seizure," he says. "I am worried about their individual rights. But the overriding importance is to get the substance out of public schools, and any school system."

He acknowledges that drunk drivers are a problem and believes that raising the legal drinking age to 21 would help reduce the number of drunk drivers.

The selection of Democratic liberals in the primary and run-off don't pose a problem to his campaign, he says, pointing out that 600,000 fewer persons voted in the 1982 Democratic primary than in the 1978.

"What I predict is a closer look being taken by the Texas voter in November" and with the final result showing more levers pulled for the Republican candidates.

"Students are protected from unreasonable search and seizure...But the overriding importance is to get the substance (drugs) out of public schools, and any school system."

THE BEST PRICE ON EVERYTHING?

Having the best price on everything, we know would be a little tough to live up to. Midland Home Lumber Company comes pretty close, however, during the month of August. Close enough that we think you'll take advantage of our offer on Building Materials, Hardware, Floor Covering, Housewares, or many other items regularly stocked at our store. Here's how it works: Simply bring in to Midland Home Lumber Company a copy of advertising in the Midland-Odessa market on merchandise stocked by us and we'll let you discount your cash purchases at least 5% below the price our competitors advertised it for. This offer is good all during the month of August. If you've never been to Midland Home Lumber Company, you're gonna like us; we're like stores used to be, only a little better. If you're one of our regular customers, we hope we've been deserving of your business.

Bike safety display set

A tricycle and small bicycle Safety Town will be held at Midland Park Mall Aug. 16-28.

Purpose of the display is to stress to children the necessity of developing good safety habits when riding their bicycles and tricycles.

The display will be set up so that children will travel along a pre-determined path through a mini-city consisting of a church, school, police station and a house. Children will be instructed along the path on how to properly make right and left turns, how to yield and stop correctly.

Members of a law enforcement Explorers post will be manning the safety course. The Explorer post is sponsored by the Midland Police Department.

Filipinos awestruck by U.S.

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Jovita "Jovee" Rapinan, Ana Marie "Annie" Sanchez and Teresa "Tess" Javier arrived in Midland about a month ago. In fact they've only been in the U.S. a little over a month.

And the first thing one of these young Filipino nurses wanted to do when she got off the airplane was to buy candy bars while the other two wanted to buy Midland Park Mall.

"In the Philippines candy bars are $3 apiece," Tess said while rolling her eyes. "I love my candy. I wanted to buy them all. And Jovee and Annie wanted to buy all the clothes at the mall."

"Candy too!" Jovee added, leaning over the table. "My mother loves her candies, too."

While they were at the shopping mall the three girls saw something that they no longer can find in the Philippines.

"Video games!" Annie exclaimed. "They have been banned in the Phillipines — kids spend too much money, too much time on them."

WIDE-EYED, dark-haired and petite, the three Filipinos took time from a special orientation at MMH Thursday to tell about their experiences in West Texas.

Tess, the more outgoing and robust of the three is a 23-year-old pediatric nurse. Twenty-three-year-old Jovee, who is a medical surgical nurse, is rather mysterious and very feminine. And Annie, the youngest at 22 years old — also a medical surgical nurse — is more quiet and shy than the others.

Presently, all three are going through a special orientation for hospital procedures.

Cathy Engstrom, MMH registered nurse and inservice coordinator, said the hospital has a preceptor program which is offered to American graduates and has recently been expanded to include orientation for foreign nurses.

"This week we are going over the hospital surroundings — the physical plant — the organizational structure, a little hospital history, charts, legalities and the rules and regulations," Ms. Engstrom said.

"WE ALSO WANT to give them cultural enlightenment," said Wanda Douglas, a registered nurse and assistant inservice coordinator at MMH. Ms. Douglas has helped the girls get settled and adjusted to the Midland area. Also, MMH has provided three months free housing for the three.

Jovee, Annie and Tess were educated in the Philippines, graduating from St. Paul's College in Manila. After graduation they decided to take the Commission on Graduate Foreign Nurses School (CGFNS) exam which screens foreign nurses for the board exams in the U.S.

"The three of us were thinking about coming here (U.S.) while we were in school in the Philippines," Tess said. "We took our boards (in the Philippines). At that time we prepared ourselves for the CGFNS exam."

"Now, our parents are broke," Jovee said, adding that the tests are expensive.

"And they (parents) are crying," Tess said, explaining that they all miss their families.

Although six Filipino nurses hoped to come to the U.S. only these three girls could get their H-1 (working) visas.

"This hospital had the most agreeable contract," Jovee said. "Midland Memorial has very good benefits, salary and we liked the nature of the job."

THE YOUNG NURSES have been hired, signing a one-year contract, to assist with the 3 to 11 p.m. and 11 p.m. to 7 a.m shifts.

Jovee, Annie and Tess said they were shocked when they saw West Texas from the airplane.

"I said, Oh! Oh! Is this the place?" Tess remembered asking. "All we saw was desert and oil wells."

"We thought we were in the Middle East," Jovee laughed.

Giggly in an honest, child-like manner, the girls incessently chattered about experiences they've encountered in Midland.

"We have problems counting your money," they said in unison, each one adding that in the Philippines one American dollar is equivalent to eight or nine pesos.

"We have a code — PNDQ — pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters," Annie explained.

"Annie is memorizing the code all the time — PNDQ, PNDQ, PNDQ," Tess said, teasingly.

TESS RECALLED one "funny experience" when she went to the store to exchange some change for a quarter.

"He (the clerk) said 'you're not from around here,' and I said no. We just looked at each other. Then I looked at the money. I was trying to give him two dimes and and a penny for a quarter," Tess tittered with some embarrassment.

"And then at Albertsons — Oh, it is so different," Tess said. "What we did back home was put all our food on the counter. When it came time for us to pay (at Albertsons) the clerk said 'Oh what are you doing' and we had to take all the food and put it back in the cart," Tess said.

Jovee pointed out that in the Philippines women are taught to be feminine and conservative, but then "we read your American magazines and oooh ..." she giggled.

"When you're 18 here, you can go anywhere you want," Jovee said. "Not at home."

"My parents would not let me go to the disco in the Philippines, but they let me come her and live alone," Tess chuckled, shaking her head.

"I'M THE mother," she said, referring to their present living situation. "I do the cooking. But we had trouble with your long grain rice here.

"We had mushed rice the other night," she laughed, explaining that at first she did not use enough water and then too much.

"We measure water with our finger," she said. "But here, I didn't read the directions on the package."

The girls said they eat six small meals a day, including rice, pork and fish, as opposed to the three meals Americans eat.

"And pizza anytime," Tess said. "You cannot have pizza here anytime," she said, referring to the three of them trying to find a pizza parlor open for breakfast.

"And pancakes," Jovee added. "We eat pancakes anytime."

"We do not have fresh peaches in the Philippines," Annie interjected. "Just can peaches, but not fresh peaches or apricots."

Jovee, Annie and Tess said they are anxious and excited to begin their nursing careers. They agreed that they want to take care of the sick, learn about the American culture, beliefs and values, and Midland is the place they want to be.

"I love meeting people," Tess said. "While I was in my fourth year at school, I'm having a hard time, but I'm thinking about the time and expense. So I went through with it (schooling). And now, my classmates — we have jobs — together."

Local museum exhibit celebrates state women

Previously tucked away in attics, diaries, museums and libraries, the stories of Texas women are told at last in the exhibit "Texas Women — A Celebration of History" on display at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., beginning Aug. 15. The show will hang through Sept. 15.

Produced by the University of Texas Institute of Texan Cultures in conjunction with the Texas Foundation for Women's Resources, the exhibit highlights the impact of women on Texas culture, government, economy, family and community life. Its Midland showing is made possible through special support from the Midland Woman's Club, the Junior Woman's club and Texas National Bank.

Currently hanging at the museum is the Southwestern Area Art Show.

Museum hours are Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. No admission is charged.

Country crossover vocalist Crystal Gayle will perform at Six Flags Over Texas Aug. 15 at 7 and 9 p.m. This performance will be Miss Gayle's sixth at Six Flags since 1976. A $2 extra charge will be placed on each concert. Children under five are not subject to the concert charge.

'Dukes' finds the men to replace Bo and Luke

By GUS STEVENS
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Cloning has come to network television. Perhaps there have been lookalikes before — starting with the Doublemint twins — but the producers of "The Dukes of Hazzard" are attempting to replace two series stars with a couple of ringers.

When the highly rated tearing through the boondocks comedy returns to the air on CBS Oct. 1, two practically unknown players will be behind the wheel of their own beat-up stock car. They are Byron Cherry and Christopher Mayer, 25 and 28 years old, respectively, but they will play the usual childish roles demanded of all "Hazzard" cast members.

Expected to be among the missing will be two tried and true destruction derby experts, John Schneider and Tom Wopat. The two walked off the set last May in a squabble over income from merchandising of "Hazzard" products — T-shirts, belt buckles, swamp buggies and the like. Schneider and Wopat say it's the principle of the alleged ripoff that bothers them, and they have pledged to give any income they get from a resolution of the money fight to charity.

"Hazzard" producers say that it's possible Wopat and Schneider may return to the cast and, even if they do, Cherry and Mayer will remain. "We don't look on this as a cast change," producer Paul Pickard said. "They're additions."

They also are insurance and a way of flaunting power under the noses of holdouts Schneider and Wopat, two actors who did much to make "Hazzard" work during its first four seasons.

Cherry and Mayer will be called Cox and Vance Duke, suddenly-emerged cousins of Bo and Luke. They are personable lads, introduced to Hollywood society recently on the steps of the Hazzard County Courthouse at Burbank Studios.

Cherry and Mayer dressed for the occasion in blue denims, boots and Western shirts.

They certainly must have been honest about the element of surprise. Cherry is a former bartender and flight attendant who got the "Hazzard" job after appearing at a casting cattle call in Atlanta. Mayer, who must make the transition from Colgate graduate to Hazzard County swampland, has appeared in several off-Broadway roles.

ENTERTAINMENT

Rainbow at Chap Center Tuesday

The rock group Rainbow will perform Tuesday at Chaparral Center.

Tickets are priced at $8 in advance and $9 the day of the show. They may be purchased at Flipside Records in Odessa, Endless Horizons in Midland and Odessa, and at Chaparral Center.

Tickets for the Sept. 9 Tom Jones concert at Chaparral Center may be purchased at the same locations. Ticket prices are $15.50 and $12.50. To date over one-third of the tickets have been sold.

Hank Williams Jr., originally scheduled for Oct. 16, has had a change of date due to a change in his schedule. His date is tentatively set for the week of Oct. 11, between the 11 and the 14, with Oct. 11 being the most likely date at this time. Ticket prices have not been announced. Tickets will go on sale for the Williams concert after Labor Day.

Performing at Ector County Coliseum this month will be Merle Haggard and George Jones on Aug. 15 and Scorpians Aug. 17.

Tickets for the 7:30 p.m. Haggard and Jones concert are priced at $9.50. This concert, arranged in honor of their new single together, will be videotaped.

The first 1,000 tickets for Scorpians are priced at $8.50 with the rest being sold at $9.50.

Advance tickets for both Ector County Coliseum concerts may be purchased at Endless Horizons in Midland and Odessa. Tickets will be sold only at Ector County Coliseum on the days of the shows.

Appearing with Scorpians will be Iron Maiden and Girl School.

Other concerts scheduled for Ector County Coliseum include Judas Priest Sept. 5 and Mickey Gilley and Johnny Lee Sept. 15.

"Boeuf Stroganoff" (fillet of beef with sour cream) has as many recipe interpretations as there are cooks. The only thing that can usally be agreed upon is the beef and sour cream. However, there is one other very important aspect to this dish. The beef fillet must be brown on the outside yet rare within. The objective is to enjoy rare meat in a fine rich sauce. If it is to be served on a buffet, care should be taken to keep the "Boeuf Stroganoff" hot without continuing the cooking process.

GOURMET TIP:
Cooked too long, "Boeuf Stroganoff" becomes beef stew.

Proxmire forced to move

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Wisconsin's best-known handshaker, U.S. Sen. William Proxmire, briefly abandoned his usual site at the State Fair as a horde of hand pumpers moved in on his turf.

The Democratic senator shook hands for a while Friday at one of the fair entrances because there were too many candidates outside the Flower Building, which he called the "best place in the whole campaign."

You never know what'll happen when you're off to see a movie...

A Review

Like a doctor who goes to medical conventions to keep his hand in on the latest developments, I go to see every movie that comes to Midland, whether I review it or not. That is, at least I try, because also like the medical profession, where sometimes you go in for a gall bladder operation and come out minus an appendix, in the movie business you take your chances too.

It is late Thursday night after a very long day and I head to Midland Park Mall to see the last showing of "Forced Violence," starring Chuck Norris. When I get there everybody's going home and the ticket seller tells me the bulb has gone out on the projector and the air conditioner is off in that part of the theatre, so there won't be a last showing of "Forced Violence." They do offer to let me see "E.T." for free, but I have already seen it several times.

So, after waiting about 30 seconds, I ask again just to make sure there is no way to fix things and to reassure myself that this blemish on my record is unavoidable. Same answer: no "Forced Violence."

Now it is Friday and "Young Doctors in Love" is opening — also at the Mall cinema. This time I am going to review, but I don't bother to call ahead. After all, it is the beginning of the weekend crowd and I know everything will be fixed.

It is. But somehow the names on the marquees haven't been changed and we are told to go in the "Annie" theatre to see "Young Doctors." That always makes me nervous as I imagine sitting through 15 minutes of previews while "my" movie is starting in another part of the building.

So, it is with a bit more curiousity than usual that I look at the crowd when I go in. Definitely not an "Annie" crowd. In fact, the pre-show talk runs to baseball; the Cubs are in town and now we all know where they hang out between games.

Finally, "Young Doctors" starts — a little late — and about halfway through, the house lights come up as the film does a slow fade. But baseball players don't take well to the delay in this game and, after a few complaints, "Young Doctors" gets revived.

It was only a minor inconvenience for me though, since it is an occupational hazard, but in truth "Young Doctors" didn't suffer much. It is a series of one-liners and sight gags that can be interrupted at almost any point and still survive.

"Young Doctors" takes place in City Hospital and the new year signals the arrival of a fresh crop of interns. The movie has a smart one, pretty one, poor one, short one and almost everything in between, and their stories are the framework for every "hospital" joke there is. Take the one about the bomb in the bedpan, or how about the goldfish in the intravenous fluid or the old standard about the guy who comes in healthy and a year later is near death from hospital mishaps.

There are no real standout performances with a cast that includes veterans Dabney Coleman and Harry Dean Stanton and relative newcomers Sean Young and Michael McKean — all as doctors. But there are some hilarious individual scenes. One favorite is sure to be the urine test by the pathologist, Dr. Ludwig (Stanton). He sticks his finger into the specimen and licks it, encouraging the other interns to try their hand at the "taste test." Before it is all through, the joke is on him.

Funny too is the inclusion of television soap opera personalities as their TV characters. Most of the stories are from "General Hospital," like Jesse and Dr. Hardy, and they seem to fit right into this kind of film that walks the same thin line they do every weekday.

"Young Doctors," directed by TV's Garry Marshall, is funny foolishness and, like its predecessor, "Airplane," is not to be taken seriously for very long. Rated R, there is a scene where a young girl walks around half-bare at a party and, as might be expected, some of the jokes are not long on sensitivity, but if you like "Airplane" and the current television spin-off, "Police Squad," this is more of the same, only hospital-style.

Snyder joins ABC news team

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Snyder, the former NBC newsman who hosted the "Tomorrow" show for eight years, will join Channel 7 in early September, said Bill Fyffe, vice president and general manager of WABC-TV.

Snyder's jobs will include anchoring the 11 p.m. news show and other assignments still to be worked out.

In making the announcement Friday about Snyder's duties with WABC-TV and the ABC-owned television stations, Fyffe said, "Snyder was an irresistible opportunity for Channel 7. He is an outstanding anchorman and journalist. I have always thought Tom belonged on Eyewitness News and I'm extremely pleased we could finally get together.

Auditions for play scheduled

Auditions will be held Aug. 24 and 25 for Midland Community Theatre's Theatre II production of "Tintypes," selected by the MCT board of governors as the play to fill the "Best Available" slot.

"Tintypes" is a musical revue of American music from 1895 to 1918. The three-woman, two-man cast portrays such notables as Teddy Roosevelt, Anna Held and Emma Goldman.

Director for the production is Michael Spicer. Spicer is looking for five talented, energetic people from 20 to 35 years old who are willing to make a long commitment to this production, since it will probably be MCT's entry in the Festival of American Community Theatres.

"Tintypes" opens Oct. 1.

Concert site to be Cole Park

Cole Park will be open Aug. 21 only for those attending the concert planned for that day.

Those interested in using the park Aug. 21 will have to purchase a concert ticket to gain entry. For more information contact the Parks and Recreation Department.

Art show set

ODESSA — The Ector County Parks and Recreation Department is sponsoring an "Art in the Park" show Aug. 29 from 1 to 7 p.m. at Jim Parker Park, south of Odessa.

The event is an area festival of all the arts, with works on show and for sale.

Exhibit highlights Brule Sioux Indian life

ODESSA — "Crying for a Vision: A Rosebud Sioux Trilogy, 1886-1976," a photographic exhibit of the Brule Sioux on the Rosebud Indian Reservation, is currently on view at The Presidential Museum in Odessa. The show closes Sept. 1.

The Rosebud Trilogy highlights the work of three photographers who worked and lived among the Brule Sioux. The photographs cover the land, the people and the quality of life on the South Dakota reservation.

For more information call 1-332-7123.

Tickets and information may be obtained by calling 1-505-988-4640.

Lithographs at Snyder museum

SNYDER — The Diamond M Museum at Snyder is currently exhibiting "Lithography in New Mexico." This exhibition will be at the Diamond M Museum through Sept. 5.

"Lithography in New Mexico," circulated by the Museum of New Mexico, features lithographs by 20 New Mexico artists.

The Diamond M Museum, 909 25th St., will have programs each Sunday afternoon through Aug. 22. No admission is charged for the museum or the programs.

The museum hours are 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m. Wednesday through Friday and 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Last concerts of 1982 season set

SANTA FE — The Orchestra of Santa Fe Solisti will present the final concerts of its 1982 summer season Aug. 21 and 22 at 8 p.m.

Kay Johnson Newman, OSF concertmaster, will return from sabbatical to solo in Vivaldi's Concerto No. 5, Opus 8, "Tempest at Sea." Ms. Newman will be joined by Leonard Felberg and principal cellist Joanna de Keyser for Vivaldi's Concerto No. 11 in D minor, Opus 3 for two solo violins and solo cello. The program will also feature J.S. Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 3 in G Major.

Pickwicks present 'Charlie Brown'

The Pickwick Players of Midland Community Theatre will present "You're a Good Man Charlie Brown" in Theatre I, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 2:30 p.m.

Reserved tickets must be picked up at the box office prior to 1 p.m. on the day before the performance. An exception will be made for out-of-town reservations. Those will be held until 15 minutes before showtime. For reservations call 682-4111.

farm-ranch roundup

Byrns named as extension service's communications specialist

Byrns

SAN ANGELO — Steve Byrns, an agricultural writer, has been named communications specialist for West Texas with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

He will be assigned to Texas A&M University's Agricultural Research and Extension Center in San Angelo and will coordinate "media activities" in publicizing agricultural activities in West Texas.

Byrns, a former agricultural writer for the San Angelo Standard-Times, holds a bachelor's degree in journalism from Angelo State University and is working toward a master's degree in animal science at ASU.

Fall vegetables better, says horticulturist

COLLEGE STATION — Although there's still plenty of hot weather ahead, it's time to start getting things in shape for your fall vegetable garden.

Much of Texas is well suited for year-round gardening, and fall vegetables generally have better quality and flavor than those grown in the spring, says Dr. Sam Cotner, horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Popular warm season vegetables such as tomatoes, which is really a fruit, and peppers, eggplants, pole beans, potatoes, okra, cucumbers and squash can be planted in the coming weeks.

And so-called "winter" vegetables such as broccoli, cabbage, cauliflower, greens, parsley and carrots can be planted now for early harvesting.

Here's some gardening suggestions from Cotner: Work the soil into good shape, apply a "complete" fertilizer for new gardens, water adequately before and after planting; water stress could reduce yields.

Cotner says that transplanting is a good practice for fall gardens.

Livestock Day to be at Texas Tech

LUBBOCK — Livestock Day, which will focus on Quarter Horses, will be held Sept. 17 in the Texas Tech University Livestock Arena.

The affair starts at 10 a.m. and will be the opening event for the National Golden Spur Award Weekend.

Seven agricultural agents recognized

COLLEGE STATION — The Dawson County agricultural agent, Joe E. Wise of Lamesa, was among seven Distinguished Service Award recipients who were recognized last week in the annual meeting of the Texas County Agricultural Agents Assocation.

The award is the highest given by the National Association of County Agricultural Agents.

Cited along with Wise were Odis A. Lowe of Rockwall County, Joseph L. Winstead of Brewster and Jeff Davis counties, Rayford A. Cagle of Burnet County, Billy M. McCutchen of Milam County, Edmundo E. Martinez of Zapata County, and Vernor E. Bippert of Wilson County.

Ranchers roundup to be held in Del Rio

DEL RIO — Ranching industry's experts and policy-makers will share their expertise at the second annual International Ranchers Roundup (IRR) here Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Theme of the roundup is "Effective Ranch Management."

In addition to the talk sessions, a tour of Southwest Texas ranches will be on Monday, and a tour of Mexican ranches will be conducted Friday.

Smoke detectors can reduce deaths

COLLEGE STATION — Smoke detectors can provide an early warning of fire that could reduce deaths by fire and smoke by 50 percent, says a safety engineer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Almost 7,000 people die each year in 700,000 home fires in the United States. And since most of the deaths occur while people are sleeping, an early-warning device such as a smoke detector can be a life-saver.

The safety engineer suggests that the smoke detectors be installed on the wall or ceiling just outside the bedroom area.

Proposal won't help, says farmer

WACO — The Reagan Administration proposal to extend the grain agreement with the Soviet Union for one year will do little to bolster the sagging agricultural economy or improve the balance of trade, according to Mike Moeller, president of the Texas Farmers Union.

"At a time when we need stronger efforts to open overseas markets for American agriculture, we are receiving little more than an empty bread-basket from the Reagan administration," he said.

U.S. strength essential, Clark says

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Warning against "idle posturing or fruitless utopianism," national security adviser William Clark said Saturday that "American strength and will are essential to expansion of liberty around the globe."

Clark, who walked past about three dozen protesters of U.S. policy in El Salvador to speak to the American Bar Association convention, took issue with "those who demand absolute utopianism" in El Salvador, Turkey and other countries accused of suppressing individual liberties.

"We must seek, we do seek, to protect our national security even in those areas of the world where regretably there may be violations of personal liberties," Clark said.

He said the Reagan administration has worked for improving individual rights in countries including El Salvador, Turkey, Honduras, the Dominican Republic and Costa Rica.

"The administration believes that a strong America...is good for personal liberties around the world," Clark said, adding that no nation can succeed in pushing for human rights if it is perceived as "weak and unsure of itself."

Clark said opponents of the administration's methods of seeking expanded human rights in foreign countries mistakenly believe simple steps lead to changes.

"I only wish it were so," Clark said. "We must avoid idle posturing or fruitless utopianism."

Hitting hard at the Soviet Union, Clark said, "Of the two major powers, only the United States cares about personal liberties in more than a superficial way."

Lutheran Social Services picnic to be Saturday

A Family Reunion Picnic of the Lutheran Social Services of the Permian Basin is planned for 5 p.m. Saturday at Trinity School, 3500 W. Wadley Ave.

The picnic will be a barbecue cookout. Cost is $5 per family. The Council on Adoptive Children will be at the picnic.

Reservations may be made at 2705 A W. Michigan Ave. or by calling 563-1883.

Stanton County gets new agent

STANTON — Gary Clevenger will assume duties as Stanton County Extension Agent Aug. 16.

The announcement was made recently by Martin County Commissioners Court and Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Clevenger, who holds a master's degree in agriculture from Tarleton State University, was appointed Fisher County extension agent in 1980 and worked closely with the 4-H program.

Bill Williams dedicated fan of all amateur sports

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

According to Bill Williams, facilities director for the Midland Softball Association, approximately a quarter of all Midlanders are "touched" in some way by slow-pitch softball.

"Twenty-five percent of the people in Midland 'touch' slow-pitch softball, either by their husband playing, or their wife playing or their kids playing," he said. "It's the fastest growing sport today."

In Williams' case, softball's touch has been more an affectionate embrace. He has served on the Midland Softball Association (MSA) board of directors since 1969, managed and sponsored several city and state championship teams and assumed the responsibilities of facilities director for the MSA in 1982, a watershed year in the association's history.

Along with his deep love of softball, Williams, who manages to own and operate Bill Williams Tire Center between sporting events, professes an appreciation for all-amateur sports.

He has kept young people "on sides" for about 15 years as a high school football official in the Midland area. He's the outgoing president of the Permian Basin Football Officials Association and an acting deputy commissioner for Texas for the Amateur Softball Association. Much of his advertising money goes to help sponsor amateur athletics. Rare is the high school football game or Midland College basketball game where Bill and Peggy Williams aren't in attendance. Last weekend, they hopped an airplane for a softball tournament filled with top-notch teams in Nashville, Tenn.

"We just wanted to go watch them play," said Williams, shrugging his ample shoulders. "I guess that makes you a dedicated slow-pitch softball fan." Indeed, it's safe to say that 46-year-old Bill Williams is a dedicated fan.

And since 1969, when he entered business for himself and began devoting his time to the all-volunteer MSA, he and others have been trying to ease the tremendous "growing pains" in Midland's burgeoning slow-pitch softball program.

In 1964, a newborn MSA began operations with a seven-team league. This year, the MSA has 194 men's and women's teams and Williams predicted continued growth. "We don't see the end," he said.

As many as 3,500 softball players have scampered about the city's seven fields this summer, playing Monday through Friday, four games per field, from 7 to 11 p.m. Some form of organized softball, either tournaments or make-up games, occupies three of every four weekends. The hectic summer season, which runs from early March to mid-August, culminates this weekend with the city tournament. But quick on summer's heels comes the fall season in September and October.

With a few pre-season practices tossed in, "in essence, the facilities are used almost year round," Williams said. "Really, the only challenge anybody has is finding enough hours and enough fields to give these people the opportunity to play." Which, incidently, is no small challenge.

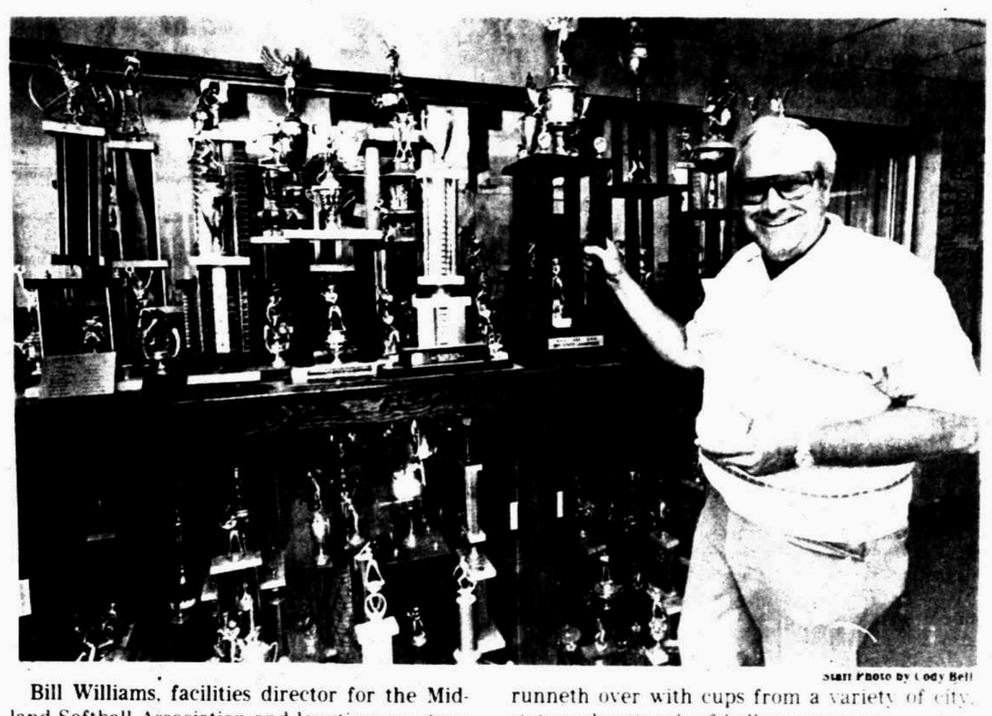

Midlander in Profile

Because Midland alone is unable to finance and provide facilities for softball's tremendous growth, the city has joined with the MSA in providing for the program's expansion. "And that's where the work comes in," Williams said.

On a corner of his comfortably cluttered desk, Williams unfurled blueprints for four new fields and a concession stand planned for construction this fall. One field was built this year to bring the total to seven, six at Hogan Park and one at Washington Park.

The four parks will be a joint effort, the city providing lights and the MSA handling the construction. Because interest in softball and Housing Authority to meet

Status of the rehabilitation program funded by the Community Development Block Grant will be reviewed when the City of Midland Housing Authority meets at 2 p.m. Wednesday in the City Hall Conference Room.

Susan Howell, CD coordinator for the city, will give a status report on the applications that have been taken. Initially, plans called for 45 to 50 homes of low- to moderate-income families to receive assistance with the federal money to fit its building standards. Horace Terry has been hired to oversee the repairs.

The board also will look at the proposed service contract on 58 General Electric Zoneline air conditioners. The current contract will expire Aug. 27.

Tabled at the last meeting and scheduled to be decided this time are resolutions establishing a procurement policy, establishing standards of conduct for employees of the Housing Authority, and establishing a code of ethics for members of the Housing Authority.

City holds annual auction

Cars, trucks, bicycles, stereo radios and tape players and various heavy equipment items are part of a wide variety of goods that will go on the auctioneer's block at 10 a.m. Aug. 14 in the city of Midland's annual auction.

The sale will be conducted at the Municipal Compound at Carver and South streets. It will include almost 50 pieces of city-owned automotive equipment of all models and makes — from Pontiac sedans to Dodge three-quarter ton pickups and Chevy vans.

A Cushman three-wheel scooter, a valve grinding machine, a Vibrastat roller, air compressors, 45-gallon drums, tires and all kinds of surplus parts also will be sold.

In addition, numerous typewriters, calculators and other pieces of office equipment will be available.

Almost 25 bicycles in all sizes and models will be sold along with television sets, suitcases, sleeping bags, radios, a telephone answering system and other abandoned items that have been held at the Midland Police Department.

Prospective bidders must register prior to the sale between 8 and 10 a.m. Merchandise may be inspected at that time.

All offers to buy must be "as is, where is" and the City of Midland makes no representations concerning any sale or any warrants on the mechanical condition of any item.

Buyers must pay with cash or check. Proceeds from the auction will be returned to the city's General Fund.

For additional information, telephone the city's purchasing division, 683-4281.

Bill Williams avid sports fan

the need for fields continues to grow, Williams only half-joked that "if we had these four that we're just beginning to work on, that'd only leave us about four short."

He praised the city parks department, which maintains the fields. He also lauded the efforts of fellow volunteers on the MSA board of directors, including Karl Reagan, president; Kent Sloan, secretary; Elizabeth Casbeer, treasurer; Freddie Ezell, tournament director; Marion Axe, women's commissioner; Joe Jankowiak, men's commissioner; Jimmy Mowles, umpire liaison, and Cathy Sherman, public relations director.

But "the time has come when volunteer help can't keep up with a program of the present size," Williams said. "Our association has been experiencing tremendous growing pains in the last two or three years."

So he indicated that the MSA will be hiring a salaried director for the 1983 season.

Although Williams continues to be active in the MSA, he stopped sponsoring and managing his own teams after winning a 1981 state championship with a team that boasted several former college baseball players and a few former Midland Cubs.

Williams sponsored entrants in two national tournaments, 1977 in Cleveland, Ohio, and 1981 in Burlington, N.C. But he said fielding a competitive team became increasingly difficult for a man who thrives on competition.

"I'm competitive by nature, I guess," concedes the husky Williams. A trophy case brimming with tournament "hardware" graces his tire store display room as testimony.

Williams, veteran softball sponsor and manager, said: "Slow-pitch softball started out 20 years ago as a recreation, you could take one or two good ballplayers and win. And the day has come, with the competitiveness, that it takes 10 good ballplayers.

"To come up with a group of people with that amount of ability is hard to do," he said. "It's a constant recruiting battle."

But beyond the rigorous competition available in softball's elite leagues, Bill Williams, sports enthusiast, said: "I enjoy all forms of slow-pitch softball. There's a level that we can all play at, however good or however bad we may be.

"I like to see people participate in recreation, that's what it's all about." Williams said he and others who serve as sports officials derive satisfaction from providing young people the chance to compete.

"Officiating is one of those things that's a necessary evil, so that young people can have the opportunity to play their sports." Williams wryly observed, however, that "you only need officials to settle the arguments between the adults. Kids are the greatest thing alive. If you'd get all the adults away from them, they wouldn't even need officials."

His love of competition plays as important a role in Williams' vocation as it does in his "leisure" activities. He entered business in 1969 to see if he could measure up to challenges he set for others.

"I'd been for several years telling people what they should do and how they ought to do it, so I decided I should take the challenge and see if what I'd been telling them was really right.

"I think deep down we all lurk with the idea of accepting the challenge and going out on our own.

"I think all sports is a game and I think business is a game. You've got to outsmart and outplan your competitors. You're just playing it for different fundamentals and the end result, instead of glory, is dollars."

By his own measure, Williams has answered the challenge, and despite slumping auto industry sales, he said business is growing steadily each year.

"The tougher the auto business gets, the better the tire business is," he explained. "Because you're not buying a new car, you're putting new tires on the old one.

Williams is working on construction of a new building in the 1500 block of south Rankin Highway, where he will combine his tire and retread businesses into one facility. At the same time, he hopes to begin construction of an athletes' dormitory on Midland College's campus. He plans to lease the facility to the college before eventually donating the building.

When asked how he managed to find time for business, sports, a wife, a daughter, Julie and a son, Billy, Williams revealed his secret.

"Well, you get your family to do all these things with you. And secondly, you get up very early and go very late. It's all got to be fun or you couldn't do it.

"Softball has been a very vital part of Peggy and I's life in the past 13 years," he said. "Your wife has to be considered part of all this or she wouldn't tolerate all the nonsense you get involved in."

Williams also praised his employees for their ability to carry on despite the boss' sometimes frantic schedule. "I'm slowing down, probably will be retiring from officiating. I can tell that the time has come that I've got to be more selective at what I do."

Williams conceded that the years when he is physically able to pound up and down the gridiron may be numbered, in part because his fascination with food nearly equals his love of sport.

He was born and raised in Hillsboro and later lived in Shawnee, Okla., before moving to Midland in 1962. He said he finds in Midland's people many of the character traits he admires.

"You've got aggressive people. People that come forward and go forward, make things happen," he said.

"I'm an optimist. Things will work out if you work hard. If you get up every morning and say: 'Man, I don't see how that's going to work,' it probably won't."

And for 13 years, Williams has been helping the MSA make things work.

I put glue on 28 silver dollars and glued them on a concho belt. They stayed on for a while and fell off.

I tried another type glue and the same thing happened.

What I want to know is how can I get the glue off? There are 12 real silver dollars and the rest are the Ike dollars.

Please, please, please, is there anybody anywhere who can tell me how to remove the glue? I sure would thank you! — B.M.N.

ANSWER: It is recommended by Tejas Coin and Stamp Co. that you try fingernail polish or pure acetone. Wipe the coins off with cotton or a soft cloth. This may change the color of the coin a little bit, but this is the only way to remove glue, says the company spokesman.

Can you tell me when an insurance company can cancel a personal automobile policy in Texas? — J.D.

ANSWER: The Texas Insurance Information Center of the Insurance Information Institute says the company can cancel the policy at any time for (1) non-payment of premium, (2a) if the person(s) named in the policy has had his or her driver's license or motor vehicle registration suspended or revoked, (2b) if any driver who lives with the person whose policy it is or any driver who customarily uses the covered auto has had his or her license suspended or revoked — unless an endorsement is made to the policy eliminating coverage for such persons.

We, the home owners who share the alley between Cimmaron Street and Ventura Drive in the 1600 block, are concerned about the legality of an out-building on the alley of Cimmaron that is being used as a rent house.

The only egress and ingress to this building is by alley. A truck parks in the alley overnight and a car parks by the building. It seems both parties work during the day.

Please advise in Answer Line. — Concerned Home Owners

ANSWER: Warren Cloyd with the City Planning and Zoning Commission says this location is classified as 1F1 in the city code, meaning that there cannot be two houses in a single family dwelling district.

The only exception, Cloyd points out, is obtaining a special use permit for a guest house, but this requires the guest house to be accessible from the street. Even so, he says, a guest house cannot be used as a rent house.

There are provisions where an accessory building can be used as a workshop, tool shed, or whatever, but excludes it being used as living quarters.

I would like to find someone who can remove thick caliche from areas in our yard where I want to plant trees. There must be at least two layers of caliche. I can only spade down about a foot and a half when I hit caliche.

I think it would take something like a jackhammer to break up the caliche. Can you help? — F.C.T.

ANSWER: The Auburg Co. says it can do this type of work for you, but will need to talk to you about the size of your yard and the possibility of there being enough room to move in the equipment needed. The company specializes in dirt work. You can call them at 684-8740.

How can I get a copy of the Consumer Information Catalog? I see it advertised on TV, but haven't taken down the address. — L.P.

ANSWER: For a copy of the free catalog, a listing of more than 200 selected federal consumer publications on such topics as child care, automobiles, health, employment, housing, energy, etc., send a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

City Council to consider annexation, money

Annexation and federal money will be two of the major topics of discussion when the Midland City Council gathers at 10 a.m. Tuesday for its regular meeting in City Hall Council Chambers.

The council has been reviewing annexation plans for land north and northeast of the city limits. At the last meeting on July 27, the council held a public hearing on the site. While several developers had requested the majority of the land area to be annexed, objections came from the country clubs and some farmers that have been included in the proposal.

According to the agenda, the council will consider possible deletions from the annexation proposal before taking action on the annexation ordinance.

With the deadline for submitting the 1982-83 application for Community Development Block Grant funds looming, the council will consider setting hearings on the proposal, as well as deciding how the money will be used.

And the council will set a date and time for a proposed use hearing on federal Revenue Sharing money.

Soil and Water Conservation Services will present a request for additional acreage at Hogan Park. The agency already has a nature trail at Hogan Park.

In other matters, the council will consider a bid for a new fire truck to replace one that was destroyed in a recent accident, a proposal for land use zoning around Midland Regional Airport, hiring a landscape architect for the new Municipal Court building, establishing a passenger loading zone along the south side of Midland High School and permitting a construction fence to be erected around the site of the First National Bank's proposed Eagle Plaza.

Surfacing for the umpteenth consecutive time on the agenda is consideration of a lease agreement with J. "Timber" Floyd for an effluent disposal site on part of his land 15 miles southeast of the city.

Also to be considered is a proposed lease for city-owned T-Bar Ranch about 60 miles west of Midland. The city has held that land in reserve because of its ground water supply for future needs.

Among the numerous planning and zoning items to be considered are:

—Changing the zoning on the southside of Golf Course Road between Tilden and Fairgrounds Road.

—A request by Albert S. Curle for a zone change from LR—2 to PD, planned district for an office or shopping center, on a 5.86 acre tract on the west side of Highway 349 south of Loop 250.

—A request by Pate-McLaughlin Architects for a PD, transition zone, for the east side of Loma Drive between Pine and Pecan streets and on the southwest corner of Big Spring Street and Pine Avenue.

—A request by Frances Coats to change the IF-2, single family district, to PD, planned district for a shopping center, on the south side of Illinois Avenue between Mariana and Delano avenues.

—A request from Moise & White for a Planned District housing development on 161.39 acres south of Mockingbird Lane and east of Holiday Hill Road.

—A request for a specific use permit to allow an institution of a philanthropic nature center at 2908 W. Ohio Ave.

—A request from B.S. Ltd. for a Planned District for a recreation center on the northeast corner of Big Spring Street and Pine Avenue.

County Commissioners

Midland County Commissioners' Court will consider a new tax rate in its 1:30 p.m. Monday meeting in the Midland County Courthouse.

The new rate proposal comes after the court had completed budget studies for 1983. The budget may nudge the $10-million mark.

In other business, the commissioners are to:

—Consider hiring an assistant for the federal rent subsidy program director.

—Consider installing a burglar alarm system for the new building for the Midland County tax assessor-collector and elections administrator. The building is at Front Avenue and Pecos Street.

—Discuss removal of Dumpsters in the county's rights of way.

—Approve appointments of judges and alternate judges and setting voting places for the Nov. 2 general election.

—Consider a resolution to bear the cost of installing two utilities conduits under Texas Highway 191.

Regional Planning Commission

The Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission board of directors will meet at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday in the conference room of the PBRPC office building at the Midland Regional Airport.

The agenda includes considering the following resolutions:

—Giving favorable review and comment to the grant pre-application from Volunteers of America for Midland Housing for the Elderly and Handicapped project.

—Authorizing the executive director to advertise for bids on the computer terminal for the PBRPC's accounting department.

—Authorizing the executive director to submit requests for proposals for the 1981-82 PBRPC audit.

—Considering the creation of a Multi-County Fiance Corporation to issue tax exempt, low interest rate housing mortgage funds.

Students 'shake hands' at Tech

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Although many Midland youngsters spent part of their summer at camp while others may have enrolled in summer school, 18 Midland youths, grades 5-7, combined the two.

The second "Shake Hands with Your Future" program allowed 153 gifted students from school districts throughout the state to participate in three courses for two weeks on the Texas Tech University campus during two sessions this summer.

"The students are involved in intensified classwork," explained Mary Anne Speck, coordinator of the program in Lubbock. "But there is a certain bit of social life, too. Not only are they situated in the classroom, but they learn to socialize with people who have the same creativity and intelligence."

Ms. Speck explained that information on the program is sent to every school district in the state. Gifted students ages 10 to 15 are nominated for participation in the program by principals, counselors and teachers.

"EVERY SCHOOL has students that qualify," she added. "It's up to the initiative of the people who receive the brochures to disperse the information to those students."

Adams

While Lubbock had the most students participating in the program, Midland was second with Allen running third. Students from 60 districts ranging from Houston to Canadian to New Mexico attended the program.

"There were even two kids from Canada who had just moved to Lubbock," said Stefanie Trott, 11, daughter of Mr and Mrs. James C. Trott. Stefanie said she enjoyed meeting different gifted students from other cities and schools.

"Some 10-year-olds were with 15-year-olds," she said, "and I think it worked out pretty good. It gave us all a chance to be with different people."

Kristina Adams, 12, daughter of Mr and Mrs. B.J. Adams, agreed about the compatibility of the group. "There were sophomores with sixth graders," she said.

"And I found out that everyone all over is into Dungeons and Dragons," added Stuart Williams, 11, son of Mr and Mrs. Stuart Williams.

While the three students attended the program for the first time this summer, they said adjustment was relatively easy.

Williams

Living in dormitories was new to them and they got first-hand experience with laundry rooms and roommates from different cities. And although Kristina and Stefanie happened to be roomed together, they also had strangers in their room. Cockroaches.

"I LOVED 'Shake Hands' and I want to go back next summer," Stefanie said. "It was all great, except for the cockroaches. They were everywhere."

After being informed they were accepted to the program, the three had received mini-catalogues containing course offerings and descriptions for the two-week period. With three classes scheduled a day, the students were asked to select their three top choices offered during the time slots.

Stefanie enrolled in dance, creative writing and creative music while Stuart took poetry, music and physics. Kristina enrolled in television production, theater and photography.

According to Ms. Speck, the students attended two classes in the morning, broke for lunch and then went back for their third class, which ended at about 3 p.m. From 3 to 5 p.m., the students could go back to specific classes to complete lab work, or they could sign up every morning to participate in numerous field trips and other activities offered that day.

"All of the activities are academically oriented," she said, "but they are like free time."

Trott

Students could visit the Ranching Heritage Center, Crosbyton's solar unit, the biology buildings at Tech or an antique car show. One favorite, according to Ms. Speck, was the trip to the Native Land, a city-owned park run by individuals who show the students how Indians lived. Students learned about weaving, basketry, cooking, woodcarving and using crude tools. The afternoon ended with the singing of folksongs around a campfire.

"MY FAVORITE was the pig farm," Stuart said. "I watched an operation on a pig and it was interesting."

"Mine was the trip to the bookstore," Stefanie said, giggling. But, the students explained ruefully, only one trip to the bookstore was allowed during the session.

Students also were allowed to swim in the university's pool, although for these three students, rain usually prevented them from enjoying the water.

Neurosurgeons, physicists and other speakers gave discussions every night after dinner. Free time was limited and usually spent in chess, backgammon, Rubik's Cube or Mastermind tournaments.

Some of the free time was spent like children at summer camps anywhere. Pranks were common, the three students said, such as when the group of students showed up at the Western dance dressed "punk."

On the last day of the two-week session, parents were invited to attend various programs and exhibits from each of the classes.

According to Kristina, one enterprising student molded a giant cockroach out of clay which the television production class interviewed for their final presentation, entitled, what else but, "Shake Hands with Your Cockroach."

Pool closure dates announced

The City of Midland's Department of Parks and Recreation has announced closing dates for the four city pools.

Washington and Halff pools will close today. Ulmer Park pool will remain open one more week until Aug. 13 and Doug Russell-Alamo pool will be open until Aug. 22.

Two Lee grads fighting for City Golf's top spot

Rain shortens championship flight

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

A pair of Midland Lee graduates are fighting to stay atop a tight field in this year's Reporter-Telegram City Golf Championship. David Teichmann and Grant Spencer both finished the rain-shortened championship flight at an even par 35.

Despite being tied for the lead, the 23-year-old Teichmann wasn't thrilled with his nine hole total.

"I was kind of lucky," he said. "I had three pars, three bogies, and three birdies. It was just one of those days."

Both first round leaders played high school golf for the Rebels and went on to play for Midland College. Teichmann played two years for the Chaparrals and now swings his clubs for the Sul Ross golf team. Spencer played one year at Midland College before taking his tees to McNeese State in Lake Charles, La. Neither golfer played at Lee or Midland College at the same time.

The 21-year-old Spencer was happy with his game despite a lull in the middle of his round.

"I was pleased with the way I was hitting the ball," he said. "I got under par early, then let up and played too conservative. Then I charged back and got the birdies I needed to finish even."

THE ONLY golfers effected by the rain were those in the championship and first flights. Each of those flights were caught in the rain and finished the day with only nine holes completed. The other flights finished the full 18 holes.

Rex Worrell, Hogan Park Golf Professional, said the golfers in those two flights would use their nine hole totals for the first round and would play the regulation 18 holes in today's final round.

Spencer spoke confidently about his chances of winning the event, saying, "I have a very, very good chance the way I've been hitting the ball. I plan to play aggressively all the way, that should eliminate the bogies."

With so many golfers bunched near the top, Teichmann seemed more concerned about playing a full round, noting, "Anything can happen, so many good players are close...I just hope the weather is clear."

And close they are. Dale Delay, Mike Haywood, Royce Wollard and Robert Upham are one stroke off the pace. Four more players are two strokes back and yet another four are three strokes behind the leaders.

IN THE other rain-shortened round, Orlando Montanez finished with a 36 and holds a one-shot lead over David Crow in the first flight. Still in contention at 38 are L. Ladaga, Richard Corbell and Lendon White.

The second round found a wide range of scores as three players are within two strokes of each other with the next best score, seven strokes back. Don Hughes shot a 76, one stroke better than Tommy Johnson. Tony Star finished with a 78.

Jesse Moreno shot a 77 and has the largest first-day margin of any flight leader. His three stroke lead in the third flight will be challenged by Bob Schooler and Mingo Valencia, who share second place with an 80.

Worrell, who is serving as tournament director, said that everything went smooth the first day and he anticipated no problems with the rain.

"We got the right amount of rain to make the course perfect for the final round," he said.

Jim Ward leads the fourth flight with an 83, one up on Bill Kayma. Jim Harris is another stroke back at 85.

In the two man struggle for the fifth flight, Clyde Payne leads Gerald Nobles 93-95.

Worrell said flight times for today's final round will the same time as they were Saturday.

Floyd's PGA record pace gives him five-stroke lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Ray Floyd, a noted front-runner, continued to grind along at a record-setting pace and established a bulging five-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the 64th PGA national championship.

And he was just a tiny bit miffed about it.

"The records are very rewarding," Floyd said after his 2-under-par 68, but was quick to add: "The round could have been a 63 very easily. I missed that many short putts. I should be looking at an 11-or 12-shot lead.

"I'm a good player from in front," the veteran acknowleged. "I won't go out and play for par tomorrow" in the final 18 holes of the chase for one of the game's most coveted titles.

"I'll play aggressively. I'll play the way that got me here."

And that, of course, has produced at least one record a day.

"I don't think I've ever lost a tournament when I've had a big lead. By a big lead, I mean three or four shots."

This lead is bigger. In fact, it matches the biggest in the tournament's history.

But, Floyd said, he doesn't yet have a lock on it.

"Not at all," he said. "There are a hundred ways you can lose the tournament. But I don't think I'm going to lose my game overnight."

Floyd set still another PGA record with his 200 total for three rounds over the Southern Hills Country Club course. It broke by two shots the 202 mark he established on the way to his 1969 PGA title.

WHILE FLOYD, less than a month short of his 40th birthday, was taking his liberties with the fierce reputation of the tough course that stretches some 6,862 yards over rolling hills, Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson found it more than they could handle.

Nicklaus, who counts five PGA championships among his record collection of 17 major professional titles, struggled to a 2-over-par 72 that left him at 216. That's six over par for three rounds over the course and left him out of the title chase in the last of the year's Big Four events, around which the 42-year-old Golden Bear has built his awesome reputation.

The hopes of Watson, currently the dominant player in the game, also came to an end. Watson, who beat Nicklaus in the dramatic climax to the U.S. Open and then went on to acquire his fourth British Open title, needed this title to become only the fifth man in history to score a career sweep of all the Big Four tournaments.

But Watson could do no better than a 71 that left him at 212 — 12 strokes back with only 18 holes to go.

Floyd, who counts a Masters and PGA title among his 17 career victories, has earned a reputation as one of the game's great front-runners.

He did that with an opening 63 on Thursday and hasn't been headed since. That 63 matched the best round in tournament history, broke Ray's own course record and represented the best first round in tournament history.

He added to the record collection Friday, shooting a 69 that set the tournament record for 36 holes at 132.

And now he's added one more, the best 54-hole total and tied still another, matching the largest three-round lead — five strokes, which he also set in 1969.

WITH HIS scoring heroics continuing in 90 degree temperatures — a considerable relief from the 100-plus marks that were recorded in the first two days — only Jay Haas and the Australian Greg Norman could keep Floyd in sight.

They shared second at 205.

"I've seen this before," said Haas, a three-time winner in six years of PGA Tour activity, after he had posted his 68. "He's the kind of guy who gets it going and keeps it going. He'll be hard to catch."

Norman took heart from Floyd's last-hole bogey that was recorded under threatening skies while distant thunder rolled in the background.

"Ray's miss of that last putt helped. Five back is better than six," he said.

"I have a realistic chance if Ray stumbles on the first few holes. And I have to get away to a fast start, at least three under after six holes."

But only that comibination, his own fast start and a Floyd lapse, Norman said, could set up a battle.

And, he noted, "Ray is playing with so much composure..." He let the sentence trail off, unfinished.

Bob Gilder, in second through the first two rounds, dropped back with a 72 and was at 206.

He seemed to be the only other man with any hopes at all of overtaking Floyd.

Cal Peete, winner of two recent tournaments, closed up with a 68 that left him at 207, seven strokes back. Peete, however, suffered a twisted knee while playing the 16th hole, declined an invitation to the press room for a mass intereview and hurried back to his hotel for rest and treatment of his knee.

"I hope to be able to play tomorrow," he said.

Tied at 208 were Seve Ballesteros, the flamboyuant young Spaniard who has won both the Masters and British Open, former PGA title-holder Lanny Wadkins and Jim Simons, winner of the Bing Crosby tournament earlier this year. Wadkins, winner of two tour events earlier this season, shot a 68. Ballesteros had a 69 and Simons slipped to a 73.

Vikings claim Hall of Fame victory over Colts, 30-14

By GEORGE STRODE
AP Sports Writer

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Steve Dils, Minnesota's second-string quarterback, shattered three Pro Football Hall of Fame exhibition passing records Saturday, leading the Vikings to a 30-14 victory over the Baltimore Colts in the season's first preseason game.

Dils, Tommy Kramer's backup, completed 27 of 45 passes for 313 yards, all Hall of Fame exhibition records.

His one touchdown toss, a 14-yarder to Tony Galbreath early in the fourth quarter, clinched the victory. It gave the Vikings a 23-14 lead after the Colts had rallied from a 16-0 deficit and closed to 16-14.

The old Hall of Fame passing records were 19 completions and 30 attempts by Minnesota's Bill Cappelman in 1970 and 240 yards by Baltimore's Johnny Unitas in 1964.

AN OVERFLOW Fawcett Stadium crowd of 23,379, the second largest in this 20-year-old series, watched the Vikings spoil the professional coaching debut of the Colts' Frank Kush.

Prior to the game, Doug Atkins, Sam Huff, Merlin Olsen and George Musso were inducted into the Hall of Fame.

Kramer played only the first quarter, as Minnesota's Bud Grant, who decided to coach after threatening a boycott earlier in the week, chose to go with Dils because of his brilliant performance. The Vikings built a 13-0 halftime lead on Sammy White's 15-yard end-around touchdown run and field goals of 29 yards by Rick Danmeier and 37 yards by Ish Ordonez.

Kush, the former Arizona State University coach, tried veteran David Humm of Nebraska and Ohio State rookie Art Schlichter at quarterback in the first half with little success. Mike Pagel, another rookie who played for Kush at Arizona State, started to move the Colts in the third quarter.

Pagel threw a 4-yard scoring pass to Ray Butler with 4:31 left in the period. Then, 61 seconds later, Randy McMillan ran 2 yards for a TD, reducing the Vikings' margin to 16-14. Pagel had set up McMillan's touchdown with a 35-yard pass to tight end Pat Beach.

BALTIMORE, LOSING its fifth striaght exhibition in the past two seasons, did not reach Minnesota territory until midway in the third quarter. The Colts' defense stopped a Minnesota fourth-down gamble and took over at the Baltimore 42, setting up their first touchdown drive.

Rohn Stark of Florida State, the Colts second-round draft choice, broke a Hall of Fame punting record with a 71-yarder in the first half. The old record of 63 yards was set by Donny Anderson of Green Bay in 1969.

The Vikings' No 3 quarterback, Wade Wilson, hooked up with Jarvis Redwine on a 67-yard pass play for the Vikings' final touchdown with 17 seconds left.

Reports say Dent for Mazzilli, John on trading block also

NEW YORK (AP) — Bucky Dent, the New York Yankees shortstop, will be traded to the Texas Rangers for outfielder Lee Mazzilli, according to published reports.

The trade may be accompanied by another swap — Yankee pitcher Tommy John to California for Angels pitcher Bruce Kison.

The Dent-Mazzilli trade has been agreed to by the Yankees and Rangers, a source familiar with the deal told The New York Times. The unidentified source said the teams agreed to delay announcement of the swap until after their doubleheader Sunday at Yankee Stadium.

There was no indication Saturday that the John-Kison deal had been completed.

But the New York Daily News reported in its Sunday editions that the pitcher trade would be announced after Sunday's doubleheader along with the Dent-Mazzilli deal. John is scheduled to start the second game.

"To comment on something like that would be improper," Yankee owner George Steinbrenner said of the reported trades.

BILL BERGESCH, Yankee vice president, confirmed the team had been in contact with the Rangers and Angels. "There have been discussions, yes, but nothing is finalized. I don't like to comment on trades unless they are made."

Mazzilli, a former New York Met who has been eager to return to the area since his trade to Texas on April 1, said Saturday, "I've just heard about rumors. "All I know is, I never wanted to leave here when the Mets traded me. I think everybody knows that. I've heard the rumors and I think — or rather hope — they're true. It's like Lou Gehrig said, if I were traded to the Yankees, I would consider myself the luckiest man on the face of the earth."

Dent, a starter on New York's 1977 and 1978 World Championship teams, has been unhappy since the Yankees acquired shortstop Roy Smalley from Minnesota last April.

"I don'o want to say anything because I don't know what's going to happen," said Dent.

"If that's the way they (the Yankees) feel, that I don't fit into their plans, then I guess it's the best thing that could happen to me," Dent said.

John, who also has been seeking a trade after being relegated to the bullpen two weeks ago, said that his agent had been in contact with the Angels. The left-hander has a 6-9 record.

"Whatever happens is for the best," John said. "I know they (Angels) are interested. The only thing is the Yankees have said they want proper reimbursement for a pitcher of my quality. But if I'm that much quality, why have I been in and out of rotation all year?"

Kison, a right-hander, has a 6-4 record. He turned down an offer from Steinbrenner in 1979 after playing out his option with the Pittsburgh Pirates. He instead signed a six-year, $2.4 million contract with California.

Dabbs overshadowed by people he brought to Texas

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

None of the "big name" coaches were at this year's annual Texas Exes Golf Tournament held at Green Tree Country Club Thursday, but some of the people who make UT's college athletic program successful were.

Among the not-so-household names was Ken Dabbs, special assistant to the athletic director.

Dabbs' name is overshadowed by the people he has brought to the ahtletic program at Texas. He was the recruiter who, in February of 1974, signed Earl Campbell and Brad Shearer to football scholarships.

Campbell went on to win the Heisman Trophy, given to the best college football player in the nation, and Shearer won the Outland Trophy, given to the best lineman in college football.

For Dabbs, 1974 was a very good year.

DABBS NO longer recruits but he is, among other things, the head of the recruiting program.

"At Texas we're selling as good a product as there is in the nation," he said. "Recruiting is easy when you've gone to eight bowl games in the last nine years and haven't had a losing season in 25 years."

But even with those kind of credentials there is a certain amount of uncertainty to the recruting wars.

"As a recruiter I had no idea what I would get," he said. "You just have to work and hope."

According to Dabbs, the selling of a university program to a student-athlete is not without its setbacks.

"First you find a kid that will fit into your program, then you work hard and make friends with him and his family, just to have him choose another school. It isn't the end of the world but it sure is diappointing," he said.

The Sam Houston graduate started as a freshman backfield coach to Darrell Royal in 1973. He graduated to backfield coach the next year and in 1975 became the recruiting co-ordinator. Dabbs readily admits that recruiting is, "like any other salesmanship job."

DABBS SAID the biggest change in recruiting has been the scholarship limit. "It has been a great equalizer," he said.

He denies the implication that recruiters look only for the best athelete, regardless of grades.

"The student-athelete is an investment," he said. "First you recruit him then you give him books, tuition, room and board. That ads up to about $45,000 a year. It's just not feasible for the school to lose that kind of investment."

In 1981 all seven of the men's sports programs at Texas were ranked in the top ten at one time during the year. It's a statistic that makes Dabbs comment, "There is a lot of pride at Texas," which is morethan just an idle boast.

White throws two TD passes; Hill hauls in three for 102 yards

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Danny White threw for two touchdowns and Tony Hill caught three passes for 102 yards and scored twice as the Dallas Cowboys conducted their annual intra-squad scrimmage Saturday.

White connected with Hill for a 44-yard touchdown and hit Butch Johnson with a 26-yard scoring strike as the offense beat the defense 48-40. Hill also caught a 44-yard touchdown pass on a reverse play from fellow wide receiver Drew Pearson.

The defense was awarded points for stopping drives, recovering fumbles and intercepting passes.

Larry Bethea and Bruce Thornton had two quarterback sacks each. Harvey Martin had one. Bob Breunig recovered a fumble and Angelo King picked off a White pass.

Offensively, Tony Dorsett ran 64 yards for a touchdown on one of his three carries. Timmy Newsome rushed 13 times for 47 yards and Robert Newhouse carried twice for 39 yards.

Johnson finished behind Hill in receiving, catching three passes for 71 yards.

Muhammad defeats Ramos by unanimous decision

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Eddie Mustafa Muhammad, former World Boxing Association light heavyweight champion, won a unanimous decision over Pablo Ramos Saturday night in a bout that best could be described as a workout for the winner.

The fight was the semifinal to the scheduled World Boxing Council light heavyweight championship between champion Dwight Braxton of Camden, N.J., and former champ Matthew Saad Muhammad of Jenkintown, Pa.

Mustafa Muhammad, who is the top contender to WBA champion Michael Spinks, clearly was the aggressor as Ramos did a waltz for the entire 10-round bout. Mustafa Muhammad also is ranked third to Braxton in the WBC rankings.

Judge Adalaide Tyndale scored the mismatch 48-41, judge Eddie Woods had it 50-41 and referee Rudy Battle carded it 50-39.

Lewis takes ARCO long jump, Ashford wins 100-meter dash

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Carl Lewis jumped 27 feet, 10¾ inches to win the long jump and sprinter Evelyn Ashford captured the 100-meter in 10.93 seconds to highlight invitational competition Saturday at the ARCO Jesse Owens Games.

Lewis, who is closing in on Bob Beamon's world record of 29-2, had a consistent series at the event, held at the University of California Los Angeles. His six jumps measured 27-.26 7¼, 27-10¾, foul, 27-9¼ and 27-10¾. Winded the third and fifth jumps for the University of Houston track star.

Jason Grimes, formerly of the University of Tennessee, was second at 26-10. Mike Conley of Little Rock, Ark., was third with 25-9½ and Mike Marlow of Berkley, was fourth with 25-8.

Ashford, of Los Angeles, barely missed her U.S. record of 10.90 seconds, but did accomplish the fastest 100 meters ever run by an American woman at sea level. Her American record is 10.90 and Saturday was the eighth time she has run under 11 seconds.

Dizne Williams finished second in 11.24. Jeannette Bolden was third in 11.32 and Florence Griffith was fourth in 11.35. All are from Los Angeles.

Lewis will leave for Europe on Monday for six competitions in the next 18 days. Only two of the events, at Zurich and Brussels, will be in the long jump.

Bramletts win trip to U.S. Open

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Midland's Sandy and Jill Bramlett will get to attend this year's U.S. Open tennis championships, not only as fans but as participants.

Saturday, the Bramletts became the sectional Mother-Daughter champions in the Equity Family Tennis Championships here, earning a right to meet 15 other sectional winners at the U.S. Open at the National Tennis Center of Flushing Meadows, N.Y., Sept. 9-11.

Sandy and Jill defeated Barbra and Karen Nilsen of Phoenix, 6-2, 6-4, Saturday in the finals to win the sectional crown.

The Bramletts also won the Mother-Daughter local and district titles prior to earning the trip to the national Equity Family Mother-Daughter finals at the U.S. Open.

Midland misses finals

SNYDER — Both Midland's Division IV and Division III teams failed to make the finals here Saturday as the national United Girls Softball Association tournament came to a close.

In Division IV action, Midland lost a 6-5 decision to Denison in a loser's bracket game to fall from the tournament. Denison then lost to Virginia in the championship finals by a 9-4 count.

In Division III action, Midland was eliminated Friday night with a 10-3 loss to Virginia as Kim Newcombe tossed a six-hitter. Odessa won the Division III crown Saturday afternoon with a victory over Virginia.

An All-Tournament team was selected, but no names were available.

Rent It or Own It
by Bob Howle

If you have the ability to make major repairs on your automobile, you will certainly need the right tools. An engine hoist is not the kind of equipment that you would expect to find in your neighborhood. However, for relatively small cost, you can rent this invaluable piece of equipment to ensure the success of your work. With a rented engine hoist, your car's engine can easily be removed while still in your own driveway. Remember, it does not cost much to do things the right way. You are more likely to pay more for attempting to do things the wrong way.

The right tool for the right job....this is the by word of success and satisfaction. Whatever you need from automotive repair to other repair and maintenance projects will be available for you to rent from BOB'S RENTAL CENTERS INC., 2700 Rankin Hwy., 685-1271, and 2909 N. Big Spring, 684-8294. We have what it takes for the contractor as well as the homeowner and do-it-yourselfer. We don't have any elephants, but we rent most anything else. Open 8-6 Mon.-Sat.

Handy Hint:

When using an engine hoist, select a level working area.

Yankees rout Rangers, 9-1

Hostetler ties club home run record

NEW YORK (AP) — Rick Cerone's two-run single highlighted a four-run third inning and Mike Morgan scattered eight hits to gain his first victory since July 1 as the New York Yankees routed the Texas Rangers 9-1 Saturday.

The Yankees backed Morgan with a 16-hit attack, including at least one hit by every member of the starting lineup. The 22-year-old right-hander struck out one and walked none in hurling his second complete game of the season.

Dave Winfield singled home an unearned run in the first and Willie Randolph doubled in a run in the second before New York broke open the game in the third.

Winfield led off with a walk off Frank Tanana, 5-13, and raced to third on Lou Piniella's single to left, with Piniella taking second on the throw to third. One out later, Ken Griffey beat out an infield hit to drive in Winfield and send Piniella to third.

After Griffey stole second, Cerone followed with his two-run single to left. Bucky Dent struck out before Collins, who had scored the first two New York runs, drilled an RBI double to knock out Tanana. Collins finished with three hits, including two doubles.

Dave Hostetler's 18th home run, in the sixth inning, provided Texas' run and tied the Rangers' club record for home runs in a season by a rookie, set by Pat Putnam in 1979. Hostetler's last four homers have come against the Yankees.

New York added an unearned run in the sixth as shortstop Wayne Tolleson's error led to Roy Smalley's RBI single. Jerry Mumphrey tripled in two more runs in the seventh to close out the scoring.

A's 7, Twins 1

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Matt Keough tossed a seven-hitter, Wayne Gross blasted a two-run homer and Tony Armas added a solo shot as the Oakland A's downed the Minnesota Twins 7-1 Saturday.

Keough, 9-15, struck out four and walked two in pitching his ninth complete game of the season. He lost his shutout bid when Ron Washington hit his fifth home of the season, leading off the ninth for the Twins.

Blue Jays 7, Tigers 4

DETROIT (AP) — Rance Mulliniks hit a two-run homer and Willie Upshaw and Glenn Adams added solo shots as the Toronto Blue Jays defeated the Detroit Tigers 7-4 Saturday, snapping a five-game losing streak.

Toronto's Jim Clancy and reliever Dale Murray gave up 10 hits in stopping Detroit's four-game winning streak.

Mulliniks' homer, his second of the season, came in the third inning with Alfredo Griffin aboard and gave Toronto a 2-0 lead.

White Sox 7, Red Sox 3

BOSTON (AP) — Tony Bernazard knocked in two runs with a double and a tie-breaking home run Saturday as the Chicago White Sox posted a 7-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox for their eighth triumph in the last nine games.

Bernazard's blast over the left field wall, his seventh homer of the season, came with two out in the fifth and broke a 2-2 tie. It came after John Tudor, 7-9, had retired nine men in a row.

Rich Dotson, 5-11, scattered eight hits before getting last-out relief from Kevin Hickey, who got his fifth save of the season.

Dotson walked three and struck out six in sending the Red Sox to their seventh defeat in nine games.

Orioles 6, Royals 5

BALTIMORE (AP) — Pinch-hitter John Lowenstein's sacrifice fly in the bottom of the eighth inning drove in Al Bumbry with the winning run as the Baltimore Orioles edged the Kansas City Royals 6-5 Saturday night.

Lenn Sakata led off the eighth with an infield single that glanced off the pitching rubber. Bumbry, pinch-hitting for Dan Ford, then laid down a sacrifice. Reliever Dan Quisenberry, 6-5, fielded the bunt, but threw wildly past first base for an error as the runners moved up to second and third.

Cal Ripken Jr. then lofted a sacrifice fly to score Sakata with the tying run as Bumbry took third. Eddie Murray was walked intentionally before Lowenstein flied to left to score Bumbry with the game-winner.

Tippy Martinez, 6-5, picked up the victory with two innings of scoreless relief.

Indians 4, Brewers 3

CLEVELAND (AP) — Von Hayes' two-out single in the bottom of the 11th inning drove in Miguel Dilone to give the Cleveland Indians a 4-3 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Saturday night.

With one out, Dilone bunted for a base hit and stole second. Loser Jim Slaton, 8-3, then hit Ron Hassey with a pitch. Rick Manning lofted a fly to deep center field as Dilone took third, and Hayes followed with his single to right field for the winning run.

Ed Glynn, 5-1, picked up the victory in relief.

Gorman Thomas doubled with one out in second off Rick Sutcliffe and scored when Don Money followed with a single for a 1-0 Brewer lead.

Giants' 15-hit attack dumps Astros, 9-2

Garner's two-run homer snaps Martin's first shutout

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Renie Martin pitched seven-hit ball for 8⅓ innings, scored two runs and drove in another and Joe Morgan rapped a three-run double during a six-run eighth inning as the San Francisco Giants unleashed a 15-hit attack and ripped the Houston Astros 9-2 Saturday.

Martin, 5-5, walked four and struck out three in 8⅓ innings before Al Holland finished up. Martin lost what would have been his first major league shutout when Phil Garner slammed a two-run homer, his 12th, in the ninth inning.

Martin started the Giants' three-run seventh off knuckleballer Joe Niekro, 11-8, with a one-out single and went to second on a single by Chili Davis. The runners advanced on Niekro's wild pitch and Martin scored on catcher Luis Pujols' two-out passed ball.

After Jack Clark walked, Pujols let another pitch elude him, enabling Davis to score from third. Reggie Smith capped the inning with a run-scoring single.

The Giants broke open the game in the eighth when they sent 12 men to the plate. Consecutive singles by Tom O'Malley, Bob Brenly and Johnnie LeMaster loaded the bases. Martin followed with an RBI infield hit and, one out later, Morgan cleared the bases with a double off the right field fence. Dave Bergman later added an RBI single and another run scored on a wild pitch by reliever Randy Moffitt, the fourth Astros' pitcher.

The victory put the Giants at the .500 mark.

Cubs 3, Phillies 2

CHICAGO (AP) — Bill Buckner stroked a tie-breaking, two-run single with two out in the eighth inning Saturday, lifting the Chicago Cubs to a 3-2 victory over the first-place Philadelphia Phillies.

The triumph was the fifth in the last six games for the Cubs, while the Phillies lost their third straight game.

Junior Kennedy singled with one out in the eighth inning and pinch hitter Scot Thompson followed with a double, sending Kennedy to third. Loser Larry Christenson, 7-6, issued an intentional walk to hot-hitting Ryne Sandberg before striking out Larry Bowa.

Tug McGraw then relieved Christenson, and Buckner singled up the middle for the game-winning hit.

Dickie Noles, 8-9, checked his former teammates on one run, four hits and struck out six in eight innings.

Gary Matthews hit his 17th homer with two out in the first inning to put the Phillies ahead 1-0.

Mike Schmidt hit his 22nd home run of the season, leading off the ninth against Lee Smith, who recorded his fifth save. Noles and Smith allowed a total of six hits.

Mets 5, Pirates 2

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Dave Kingman hit his 28th home run of the season, a tie-breaking, two-run smash in the sixth inning, to give the New York Mets a 5-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday night.

Kingman's towering homer into the left field seats came off loser Rick Rhoden, 6-10, and capped a four-run Met rally in the sixth.

Winning pitcher Pat Zachry, 6-4, scattered 11 hits in his first start since June 25.

Zachry fell behind 2-0 in the first inning. Johnny Ray singled, took third on a single by Bill Madlock and scored on Jason Thompson's single off Zachry's glove. Mike Easler then doubled Madlock home.

Cardinals 9, Expos 5

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Lonnie Smith's two-run triple broke a 5-5 tie and keyed a four-run rally in the seventh inning that powered the St. Louis Cardinals to a 9-5 victory over the Montreal Expos Saturday night.

Lonnie Smith's triple came off Bryn Smith, the third Montreal hurler and pinned the defeat on Dan Schatzeder, 1-7. Jim Katt, 5-2, was the winner with late relief help from Bruce Sutter.

Kaat, appearing in his 853rd game, had yielded a two-run homer to Tim Wallach which had tied the score 5-5 in the sixth.

Boston Red Sox outfielder Jim Rice carries Jonathan Keane into the clubhouse after the youngster was struck in the face by a line drive foul by Boston's Dave Stapleton Saturday at Fenway Park.

Foul ball strikes kid in face

BOSTON (AP) — A 5-year-old spectator's skull was fractured when he was struck by a foul ball Saturday at Fenway Park in the Chicago White Sox 7-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Jonathan Keane of Greenland, N.H., was hospitalized in stable condition.

The boy was seated in the second row just to the left of the Red Sox dugout along the first base line when he was hit above the left eye by the line drive off the bat of Boston shortstop Dave Stapleton in the fourth inning.

Dr. Arthur Pappas, the Red Sox team physician, said the youngster was taken to Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston where "it will take another few days before this is resolved."

After the boy was hit, Boston outfielder Jim Rice picked him up and raced through the dugout and into the Red Sox clubhouse where Pappas said compresses were applied to control the bleeding.

Stapleton said that when he hit the ball he thought it would go higher.

"All of a sudden, I looked up and Jimmy grabbed him, and there was blood on his (the boy's) face and all over Jimmy. I feel terrible. I just wish I could have it back," Stapleton said.

Rains wash out last Cubs-Dodgers game

An afternoon shower washed out the final game of the Midland-San Antonio five-game series scheduled for Saturday night at 7:30 p.m.

The rainout leaves the Cubs 3½ games behind the Dodgers in the Texas League Western Division second half race with a record of 18-23. San Antonio is 22-20.

The rains also caused the Cubs to postpone the MARC drawing for the trip to San Diego until the next homestand. The Cubs will return to Midland on Friday for their final homestand of the season, five games against El Paso and five against Amarillo.

The Cubs left this morning for a short five-game road trip to Amarillo.

Braxton retains title with sixth-round KO

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dwight Braxton retained his World Boxing Council light heavyweight championship by stopping Matthew Saad Muhammad at 1:23 of the sixth round Saturday night with solid lefts and rights to the jaw.

Braxton, 174½, took the offense from the opening bell of the scheduled 15-round bout and took very few punches as he battered Saad Muhammad about the ring almost at will.

"I may retire from the ring," said the 28-year-old Saad Muhammad, of suburban Jenkintown, Pa.

20 ways to help hold down your electric bill.

A checklist to help you save energy and money at home.

Energy Conservation Practices

Electricity is costing more this summer mainly because the fuel to make it is costing more. The following low- or no-cost home conservation practices can help you save energy and money.

- ❑ Do not use air conditioner unless absolutely necessary.
- ❑ Keep your thermostat set no lower than 80° in the summer. Use ceiling or oscillating fans to circulate the air.
- ❑ Check your air conditioner filters each month to see if they need cleaning or changing. And make sure that the outside unit is free of grass, leaves and trash.
- ❑ When leaving home, turn off air conditioning. If away for two days or more, turn off water heater.
- ❑ If you have a dishwasher, set water heater to 140°; otherwise, set temperature to 120° or lower.
- ❑ Use scrap insulation to plug air leaks in attic, around fireplace dampers and window air conditioners.
- ❑ Repair water leaks in pipes and faucets, and seal air duct leaks.
- ❑ Use drapes, blinds, shades, awnings or plants to block sunlight.
- ❑ Try to minimize traffic through outside doors.
- ❑ Economize in the kitchen. Plan meals so several dishes can be cooked in the oven at the same time.
- ❑ Save when you do laundry. Wash and dry only full loads of clothes.

Energy Conservation Measures

These home installations and modifications require an investment, but may return their cost to you in the form of savings on utility bills.

- ❑ Caulk and weatherstrip around doors and windows to reduce air leaks.
- ❑ Add insulation to ceilings, walls and floors.
- ❑ Insulate ducts, especially in the attic.
- ❑ Insulate hot water pipes in attic.
- ❑ Install insulation blankets on water heaters, especially in garage or basement.
- ❑ Investigate cost-effectiveness of storm doors and windows.
- ❑ Add solar-reflecting materials to doors and windows on east/west exposures.
- ❑ Install a clock thermostat to automatically set air conditioner and heating unit to desired temperature. Even when you're away from home, the clock thermostat can control your air conditioner for more economical operation.
- ❑ Investigate replacing your central air conditioner, especially if unit is more than five years old, with a new unit that has a Seasonal Energy Efficiency Rating (SEER) of at least 8.5.

Perfect dive, consistency pace Louganis to World Diving title

By KERNAN TURNER
Associated Press Writer

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador (AP) — Greg Louganis of the United States combined a perfect dive with consistency and the grace of a ballet dancer Saturday to win the gold medal in platform competition at the World Diving Championships.

The gold gave the United States a sweep of first-place victories in the diving. Louganis won the gold in the men's springboard competition. Megan Neyer of Mission Viejo, Calif., placed first in the women's springboard and Wendy Wyland of Mission Viejo captured the gold in the women's platform diving on Thursday.

Chris Seufert of Ambler, Pa., also earned a silver medal for the United States, placing second behind Neyer in springboard diving.

Louganis, 22, of El Cajon, Calif., established himself as the world diving champion by earning 634.26 points in 10 dives, including a crowd-pleasing inward 1½ somersault on his fourth dive, which received a perfect rating from all seven judges.

Vladimir Alemik of the Soviet Union was second with 629.85 points and Bruce Kimball of the United States won the bronze with 619.68 points.

The medal for Kimball represented a comeback for the 19-year-old from Ann Arbor, Mich., who only 10 months ago was critically injured in a car wreck which fractured his face, ruptured his spleen, lacerated his liver and kept his left leg in a cast for 10 months.

Louganis' smooth style brought prolonged applause each time he appeared on the 10-meter platform.

"My one hope was to execute a perfect dive and I did it," Louganis said at a press conference following the medals ceremony. "But once I got it, it was difficult to get back in a train of thought necessary to keep it up."

LOUGANIS WAS leading Alemik by a healthy 36.45 points after the ninth dive, but the 10th and final dive went badly for Louganis. He earned only 48 points for the difficult inward 3½ somersault, reducing his final margin over the Soviet diver to only 5.41 points.

Louganis said he knew the dive was bad when he hit the water, but figured he had enough a big enough lead to win the gold anyway.

"It's a new dive which I've been working on this past year," Louganis said. "I won't let that happen again."

Louganis' coach, Ron O'Brien, said the world springboard and platform champion trains twice a day, six days a week, 11 months of the year. When he's not in training, he practices ballet five hours a day.

"His dance background gives him a fluid style," O'Brien said. "When he gets on the platform, it's more like a dance than a dive."

Thomas Knuths of East Germany finished fourth Saturday with 597.21 points. Other divers, in order of placing, were Li Hongping of the People's Republic of China with 594.39, Li Kongzheng of China with 588.81, Falk Hoffmann of East Germany with 577.32, Dieter Doerr of West Germany with 552.36, Christopher Snode of Great Britain with 540.80, Dieter Plewka of West Germany with 537.87, Vjacheslav Troshin of the Soviet Union with 531.72 and Miguel Zavala of Mexico with 529.86.

East Germany's Sirch smashes record

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador (AP) — Cornelia Sirch of East Germany smashed the world record in the women's 200-meter backstroke and teammate Ines Geissler, handed American Mary T. Meagher her first butterfly defeat in a 50-meter pool since 1978 Saturday night at the World Swimming Championships.

Sirch was timed in 2 minutes, 9.91 seconds to break the world mark of 2:11.77 by Rica Reinisch of East Germany at the 1980 Olympics.

Silver medalist Georgina Parkes of Australia and bronze medalist Carmen Bunaciu of Romania were far back at 2:14.98 and 2:15.40, respectively.

Geissler set a meet record of 2:08.86 in the 200 butterfly, while Meagher was timed in 2:09.76, nearly four seconds slower than her world-record time of 2:05.96.

The previous meet record in the event was 2:09.87 by Tracy Caulkins of Nashville, Tenn., in 1978, when Caulkins won five gold medals and one silver. In this year's championships, Caulkins won two bronze medals and finished sixth in the 200 backstroke.

The only swimming gold for the United States Saturday night, the conclusion of the meet, was a world record in the men's 400 medley relay, giving the Americans a total of eight swimming golds in 29 events, compared to 12 by East Germany.

At the 1978 championships at West Berlin, the United States won 20 swimming golds, while the East Germans had only one.

Meanwhile, Greg Louganis of El Cajon, Calif., won the platform event Saturday for his second diving gold medal here, helping the United States to a sweep of four golds in the men's and women's diving competition.

In the four different sports contested in this equatorial seaport near the Pacific coast of South America, the United States finished with gold-silver-bronze totals of 13-11-10, while East Germany finished second with 12-9-5. The Soviet Union's totals were 5-9-4.

Competition was held in water polo and synchronized swimming as well as swimming and diving.

In swimming alone, East Germany had 12-8-5 for a total of 25 medals, the United States 8-8-9 also for a total of 25 and the Soviet Union 4-6-3 for 13.

In the Americans' world-record relay, Rick Carey, Steve Lundquist, Matt Gribble and Rowdy Gaines were timed in 3:40.84, surpassing the U.S. world mark of 3:42.22 set in the 1976 Olympics. The Soviet Union was second in 3:42.86 and West Germany third in 3:44.78.

It was the third gold medal of the championships for Gaines, but all were in relays.

The Soviet Union saved its best day for last, with a 1-2 sweep in the men's 1,500 freestyle behind the meet record of Vladimir Salnikov.

COM's Morse, Hasek combine for 45 points in TAGS meet

HOUSTON — City of Midland Swim Team members Laura Morse and Michaela Hasek combined for 45 points here Saturday in the 12-under Texas Age Group Swimming Championships, which was a real surprise for COM coach Hank O'Neill.

With only two swimmers in this division, COM expected few points. Points earned here will carry over to San Antonio next weekend when other age groups meet in the final TAGS competition.

Hasek's best showing was a seventh place 1:17.42 in the 100 back, but also had a ninth in the 50 backstroke (35.5) and a 14th in the 400 freestyle (4:58.64).

Morse posted an eighth place 4:55.73 in the 400 freestyle, and was 11th in the 100 breaststroke (1:28.67), 13th in the 50 breaststroke (40.69), 15th in the 200 freestyle (2:25.11) and 17th in the 50 freestyle (31.13).

Several COM swimmers will travel to San Antonio next weekend for the TAGS competition.

Naber's records only ones to survive since Olympics

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador (AP) — When 12 world records were set in 13 men's swimming events in the 1976 Olympic Games at Montreal, John Naber was just one of a large crowd. Today, his marks are the only ones that have survived the ensuing six years in a record-crazy sport.

"I had no idea the records would last this long," the 6-foot-6 Naber said of those glorious days in Montreal. "Only one men's record survived those Games. I didn't think my wins were outstanding. (American) Peter Rocca was not far behind me, but as it turned out, his second-place time also still stands as the second-fastest time ever in the 200 backstroke."

The only men's record that wasn't broken in the 1976 Games was in the 100 butterfly, a mark that had been set in 1972 by Mark Spitz while he was winning seven gold medals in the Munich Olympics. That record was broken in 1977, five years after it was set by Spitz.

Naber's world marks of 55.49 seconds in the 100 backstroke and 1:59.19 in the 200 backstroke are six years old. Not since before World War II has a man held a swimming record as long as has Naber.

In fact, no other records besides Naber's are more than two years old.

David Wilkie of Britain, the only non-American to win a men's swimming event at Montreal, set the 200 breaststroke world record at the 1976 Games. His mark of 2:15.11 lasted until last Thursday night at the World Swimming Championships when Victor Davis broke it with a time of 2:14.77.

"Now that David Wilkie's record has been broken, it will bother me less when my records are broken because we had talked before about being the only two record-holders left from 1976. We had kind of a mythical championship race," said Naber, who was in Guayaquil as a television commentator for the championships.

"I hate to admit it, but I was very glad Davis broke the record," Naber said.

The 26-year-old University of Southern California graduate from Pasadera, Calif., considers his TV work for CBS only a sideline.

"Swimming commentator is not a career option because there are only about three meets a year worth televising and the three networks split those up," he said.

Naber now is developing a career as a free-lance consultant who acts as a liaison between sports and business.

"The only possible salvation for amateur sports these days is corporate sponsorship," Naber said. "My career ambition is to help sports and business work well together."

Because he isn't committed to TV as a career, Naber feels his only real link to swimming is his records.

"It's like a little kid who has a tooth that's just barely hanging on," he said. "I'm holding onto the sport by one root, and one day, 'plink,' it will come out."

Naber said the 100 backstroke record probably would be broken next year by Dirk Richter of East Germany, who has a bdst time of 55.95, less than a half-second away from the mark.

Mavericks Vincent wants to be traded

DALLAS (AP) — The general manager of the Dallas Mavericks reacted with dismay Saturday to a report that forward Jay Vincent has threatened to demand a trade unless the National Basketball Association team improves his contract soon.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram in Saturday's editions quoted Vincent's agent, Fred Slaughter, as saying Sonju had broken several promises to Vincent, who wanted a trade unless his contract could be rewritten by his Aug. 21 wedding.

Norm Sonju said he talked to both Vincent and Vincent's manager last week before going on vacation.

"I told him (Vincent) we'd get on it next week, as soon as we (the club's executive committee) could meet. Vincent's contract is the No. 1 matter on the agenda," Sonju said in an interview with radio station KKDA-FM.

Vincent was selected in the second round of last year's draft, but became a starter and averaged 21 points per game after No. 1 pick Mark Aquirre broke a bone in his foot. Vincent went on to become a unanimous NBA all-rookie choice.

Vincent is entering the second year of a four year $450,000 contract.

Most can afford saltwater fishing

Everyone who visits the coast of Texas this summer needs a salty taste of saltwater fishing. And you can sample this Gulf of Mexico fishing at prices most vacationers can afford. Try fishing from a party boat.

I've heard countless numbers of Texans say that you just can't go deep sea fishing on the Texas coast because it's too expensive. To a certain point, that's correct, especially for the weekend or weekly visitor.

For private charter boat fishing you can spend anywhere from $200 to $1,000. The avid saltwater angler, who knows the saltwater ropes, might cut expenses by getting a few fello anglers together. But let's talk about the visitors, who want to enjoy the fishing possibilities with the entire family without having to pay through the nose.

RECENTLY, I fished out of the Dolphin Docks in Port Aransas aboard their party boat. The boat is a 65-foot rig designed to carry 25 to 30 passengers. Limiting the number of anglers to their boat for an eight-hour fishing trip, allows all the anglers to have a much better chance at boating some fish while other party boats would try to crowd 40 or more on this same type boat, resulting in dangerous tempers and fouled lines.

From the tip of Texas to the Lousiana border, there are countless number of party fishing boats. Some are good and some are lousy. I've tried many, but the Dolphin, out of Port Aransas, is one of the best going along the Texas Gulf Coast.

For $40 you can enjoy an eight-hour fishing trip, free of all that line-tangling hassle. They supply tackle, bait and assistance, but best yet, you've got a chance of catching some of the Gulf's mightiest gamesters.

A few friends and I arrived at the Dolphin Docks about 7:30 a.m., eagerly anticipating the 8 a.m. departure. Prior trips had produced good catches of kingfish for Dolphin customers.

WE WERE no more than 30 minutes from port when Captain Marvin began circling the boat for proper drifting position, and the 25 or so anglers prepared for the morning's first fish hookups.

All anglers are situated on one side of the boat. There's no dragging lines under the boat from opposite-side anglers. Very few tangles occur while fishing because they have perfected a way of allowing 25 anglers to drift their lines without any major hassles or tangles.

As the mighty Gulf would have it, one of those glorified Gulf thunderstorms poured out buckets of warm rainwater for more than an hour. But just as the rain left, we got into a wild school of feeding kings. Just as soon as those on board released their ribbonfish baits into the water, one hookup after another occured. There was eight people on bard battling kingfish at once. The fishermen were walking along the rails with rods raised high while those not fighting a fish were trying to get out of the way of those who were. It's a fun sight to watch and gets exciting when they are all ready to bring their fish aboard.

That day this crew of 25 anglers brought back to port 31 kingfish. The hero of the day was a man from Pampa, who boated five kingfish, including the largest at 46 pounds.

THE MAINSTAY of the party boat goers is the kingfish in the summer months. These torpedo-shaped gamefish will hit the drifted ribbonfish going 30 to 40 miles per hour. With speed like that, there's no setting the hook. All you do is hold on until their first run has slowed down somewhat. You can also expect to catch jack crevalles, lings, sharks, and if you are on one of those lucky trips, you might catch a sailfish or tarpon.

Taking a party boat is a great way to spend a day fishing the Gulf. It's a great family outing, and you'll meet some very interesting people from throughout Texas and the nation.

And whether you fish on a party boat or not, you'll have a great time visiting Port Aransas. This little island village is bustling in summer with beachcombing, surf or bay fishing and sightseeing. It's a place you can enjoy with the family.

BOWLING BEAT

Tomlin's 254-668 tops week

By RANDY ISENBERG

Thurman Tomlin, a newcomer to Midland, rolled a 254 game and 668 series while rolling in the Civic Mens Summer League on July 29. His bowling highlighted league action during the week. Other outstanding performances during the week were recorded by John Sepmoree, 232-646; Jackie Brookshire, 209-602; Gary Hight 242-602; Dennis Sprague, 237-623;Earl Wade, 244-602; Dot Fielding, 202-591; and Jimmy Foster, 222-623.

Lynda Campbell, rolling in the Mixmasters Mixed League, has turned in the season's best for a woman with a 279 game and 648 series.

The Muscular Dystrophy Association will be holding a fund raising bowl-a-thon at Dellwood Lanes on Aug. 14 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The Southwest Amateur Bowlers Association will host an event on Aug. 21 at Oakwood Lanes in Lubbock and on Aug. 28 at Dellwood.

Dellwood Lanes will be holding a qualifying tournament on the weekends of Aug. 14-15 and Aug. 21-22 for the Texa All-Star Championship. The tournament will be held on the Labor Day weekend, Sept. 4-6 at Don Carter All-Star Lanes in Fort Worth. The local qualifying will consist of two eight game blocks, one eight-game block bowled on Saturday and the second on Sunday.

The local level will allow multiple entry's. The top five finalists will meet in stair-step competition on Sunday, Aug. 22 at 2 p.m. Entry fee is $28 per person. It is a scratch singles event for Texas Bowlers only and there will be two divisions, one for men and one for women. The tournament is limited to 96 entries in each division and Dellwood Lanes has secured a spot for both divisions. For more information contact Randy Isenberg at 697-7871.

Pironi severely injured in German GP practice

HOCKENHEIM, West Germany (AP) — France's Didier Pironi, leader in the 1982 world driving standings, severely injured Saturday when his Ferrari crashed in practice for the German Grand Prix. Doctors were trying to save his right foot and lower leg from amputation.

He also suffered fractures to both upper legs and to his left arm.

Jean-Pierre Jabouille, manager of the Talbot-Ligier racing team, said after visiting Pironi in Heidelberg hospital that he thought the driver would never race again. He said doctors were hoping to stabilize the right leg injuries in an operation Saturday to avoid amputation.

Pironi's Ferrari somersaulted three times at more than 150 mph after hitting the Renault of France's Alain Prost, hidden in a ball of spray on the rain-soaked track.

Prost escaped unharmed. He took the pole position for Sunday's race, with teammate Rene Arnoux alongside in the front row. Pironi had captured the pole in first day of qualifying Friday. The final session Saturday was held in a drizzle.

The first five qualifiers were turbos, but if the rain continues Sunday as predicted, their striking power advantage in dry conditions would disappear.

This would help the McLaren-Ford of Britain's John Watson, who with 30 points to Pironi's 39, now is in effect the championship leader, five points ahead of Prost.

His teammate, two-time world champion Niki Lauda of Austria, who has 24 points, withdrew from the race. He suffered torn ligaments in his right wrist in an accident in qualifying Friday and wants to be fit for the Austrian Grand Prix next week.

Pironi's Canadian teammate, Gilles Villeneuve, was killed in Belgium earlier this year in a similar collision, but in dry weather.

France's Patrick Tambay, who replaced Villeneuve, earned a second row starting spot, alongside the Brabham-BMW turbo of reigning champion Nelson Piquet of Brazil.

In this tragic season, Italian Riccardo Paletti was killed during the Canadian Grand Prix when he hit the back of Pironi's stalled Ferrari on the start line. Pironi was unhurt then.

A collision at the French race two weeks ago resulted in 12 spectators getting injured when German Jochen Mass' car hit protective fencing. Mass also withdrew from the German race because of his injuries.

Pironi's accident occurred just after Irish driver Derek Daly passed Prost near the end of the south straight going into the Hockenheim stadium.

"All you could see of cars ahead were huge balls of spray," Daly said.

"I think Pironi, behind us, thought there was only my car in the spray, but Prost was there too."

Prost saw the Ferrari somersault over him after tearing off the right rear wheel of the Renault. "I prayed I would stop because I had no brakes then," he said.

In Confectionary Sales
Midland-Odessa Area

Life Savers provides sales people with the two ingredients vital to sweet success in the confectionary industry. A popular product line and a receptive market.

The Product Line: You'll be marketing Life Savers hard-roll candy, soft bubble gum and sugarless gum: timeless treats perfect for children of all ages.

The Market: With net sales of more than $320 million a year, Life Savers is a leader in the confectionary market. And even sweeter - government studies show confectionary sales climbing at a compound rate of 10% a year.

Aggressive sales people with at least two years of college or equivalent consumer product sales experience are invited to investigate the opportunities Life Savers offer. After thorough training, you will call on established wholesale and retail accounts to increase market coverage and brand penetration. You'll receive a competitive base salary, plus incentives, excellent benefits and company car.

When you've arrived... Meadowpark

A planned unit development of exquisite patio garden homes. Each home is custom designed for the individual lot and is never duplicated.

Meadowpark residents will enjoy a great deal of room and privacy because of the very low density of the development. The cluster arrangement of Meadowpark restricts traffic flow on residential streets. On-Street parking is prohibited, so that streets become areas for family activities.

Recreation facilities include park area, playgrounds, tennis courts and swimming pool with cabana, bath house and deck area.

- Privacy with enclosed patios-garden areas
- Fully landscaped with sprinkler system
- Bars with icemakers, wine racks, etc
- Full compliment of quality appliances including Sub-Zero refrigerator
- Spas-saunas-redwood decks-gazebos
- Swimming pool, cabana, tennis courts
- Beautiful custom cabinetry and moldings

$673.30 Per Month

You can't afford NOT to buy any longer!

Total move-in costs of $5250 is based on 5% down or $3800 plus $1450 closing costs based on 15 days prepaid interest. The first year's payment of $673.30 principal and interest only is based on a loan amount of $71,438. The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 15 7/8 % on $50,000 loan to value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 15 7/8 % for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be changed at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease & new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to amortize the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. Annual percentage rate approximately 16.575%

Ernie Schmeltzer, 3509 Park Lane, shares some time with his Little Brother, Colin Carter, 6. Although they have only been matched for four months, they have become good friends. They spend their time together making projects in Schmeltzer's wood shop, playing with his home computer, going to movies or just talking.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters creates lasting friendships

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Lifestyle Writer

Big Brother you're the very best
Just what I would choose to be
And maybe later I can give
Because you gave to me

—Part of a birthday poem written for Dirk Dieterich by his Little Brother, Jeff Tarpley

It is said that some matches are made in heaven, and others are made in Japan. But in Midland, some of the best matches are made through Big Brothers/Big Sisters.

"I think it's terrific because there's a void in my children's life that they have been able to fill," said Mary Tarpley, mother of two Little Brothers. "It's not a replacement or a substitute for their father, but it's something they need.

"I mean, can you imagine me out teaching a kid to shoot a gun? I'm not the camp-out kind, and Dirk (her son's Big Brother) does all this stuff with him that I can't do. Jeff has the advantages of having a male around without my having to run out and marry one."

Big Brothers/Big Sisters is an organization that matches children, ages 6 to 17 and growing up in single-parent homes, with an older friend of the same sex. Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Midland Inc., 1900 W. Illinois Ave., currently has 74 of these matches. It also has an additional 72 children on a waiting list; some have been waiting for two years.

Danny Johnson, 15, was on a waiting list for 1½ years before being matched. "There's a lot of little kids that are waiting and waiting. I was going to give up."

"Some of the kids call up once a week to see if we've found a Big Brother or Sister for them yet," said Carol Layman, executive director.

ONE OF THE reasons so many children are kept waiting is because participation in the program has more than doubled since the beginning of the year, when Big Brothers Big Sisters broke away from Family Services and became independent, financed through private contributions. Other reasons are a shortage of volunteers, especially men, and the difficulty of finding matches for older or minority children. Of the 72 unmatched children, 50 are boys. Only two of 29 minority boys have found matches.

To become a Big Brother or Sister, a volunteer goes through orientation and interviews, is informed of rules, discusses potential problems and lists his preferences as to the kind of child he would like to be matched with.

"We try to match up the volunteer and the child so that they have similar interests," Mrs. Layman said.

"We do a real thorough screening of volunteers. The parents are trusting us to find good people and Big Brothers and Sisters have a great impact on them, so we have to be really careful, because that's their special person they're not sharing with anyone else.

"That really is his friend totally," said Mrs. Tarpley about her 14-year-old son, Jeff, and his Big Brother, Dirk Dieterich. "I think that's why he's so crazy about it. I have nothing to do with it. Jeff's very possessive about him — it's special and he really doesn't like sharing him.

"DIRK'S JUST WONDERFUL. He's marvelous. After they matched him with Jeff I called around, because this is my kid and I'm not going to turn him over to just anybody. Everybody loved Dirk — it was really kind of sickening. If Jeff grows up anything remotely compared to what Dirk is, it'll be terrific.

"He's young enough to be fun and old enough to be mature. He (her son) shares things with him that he'd never tell me. To see that realationship build all on its own is like watching a flower unfold. It's beautiful."

Volunteers are asked to spend two to three hours with their Little Brother or Sister each week.

"It doesn't cost any money and can be flexible with their time schedule," Mrs. Layman said. Big Brothers Big Sisters has discounts to Cubs' games and is also trying to make agreements with movie theaters and Water Wonderland.

"It's not supposed to be a financial burden. Anything you do with your Little Brother or Sister is tax deductible, even gas you use driving around.

"The best thing you can do is just to spend time with them talking and going to the park or helping them with their homework," Mrs. Layman continued. "Really, what they need more than anything else is someone to listen to them. Most of the mothers have more than one child and they are working. They don't have the extra time to give to the child. And the Big Brothers/Big Sisters also serve as role models."

"THEY JUST LIKE to be together; they don't have to do anything special to enjoy it," said Lyn Cleveland, father of two Little Sisters. "They do things that I don't like to do or can't do. But what's really good about the program is that it gives them somebody to share with and someone they can go to and ask questions as they're growing up."

"I just like driving around with him," said Little Brother Danny Johnson. "We just talk and stuff. Just about all my family here is all ladies. Even my cat's a girl."

"It's just not easy growing up," Mrs. Layman maintained. "To be missing a father, especially for a little boy, makes it even harder. They need some kind of role model. One little boy said he wanted a Big Brother to answer "man" questions.

"Statistics show there's a percentage of Little Brothers and Little Sisters who stay out of the juvenile system because of this program. A statistically significant number of children improve by a whole letter grade in school after they've been matched...but I don't like to quote overall statistics, because when you see even one match making a difference a child's life it's wonderful."

"The people at the (Big Brothers/Big Sisters) office emphasize that we're doing these kids a favor, but I think what they fail to realize is what a big impact this is on me as an individual," said Big Brother Jim Stanford. "It's not what you can do for the kids, but what the kids can do for you. You don't have to be anything special for the kids to appreciate you — you just have to be an adult.

"I like children and I thought it would be a good idea to get into Big Brothers/Big Sisters. I think of my brothers and what they'd be like if they didn't have a father or a brother.

"YOU'D HAVE TO see me with Chris (Wainscott) to appreciate the way we are together," Stanford continued. "I love him and he loves me. Chris is a super little kid — he's a lot of fun to do things with.

"He's really interested in airplanes and I'm a private pilot, so we go look at planes and talk about them. I haven't got him to go up with me yet. We go bowling and running. We've done a little kite flying."

What does it mean to be a Big Brother or Sister?

"It's great," said Big Sister Karen Edwards. "Sara (Lozano) and I have a really good time together, although we come from really different backgrounds. She has shown me that someone can overcome very adverse conditions. She's a very strong little girl.

"We go out to eat, out for ice cream, swimming, to the park. Tonight we're going to make Barbie clothes...that's something I haven't done since I was six. We do a lot of fun things. I can provide Sara with new experiences. And there have been times when I have been really down and she finds her own special way to make me feel a lot better. Our friendship is completely different from any other friendship I have had.

"I can't think of any better way to spend my time than with Big Brothers/Big Sisters. It has provided me with a very unique and special relationship with someone that I probably would never have gotten the chance to know. I hope no matter what happens we will still be friends. I realize our relationship will change as she becomes older, but I hope she will always know she can always call on me when she needs to talk. I only know that my friendship with Sara has added another dimension to my life."

Big Brothers Big Sisters is having a Big Brother/Big Sister of the Year contest. This is one of the letters entered:

Dear Big Brothers/Big Sisters:

Hello, my name is Matthew Dawson and my Big Brother's name is Andy Graham.

My Big Brother and I have been together for 2½ years. My Big Brother and I have lots of fun going to the movies, skating, bowling, Cubs baseball, out to eat and to his house. When we are at his house, we play with his Intelevision and his juke box.

The reason I vote for my Big Brother is because he is nice and every time the swimming party comes up he supplies the pool. He is a lot of fun to be with and you ought to hear him sing.

I think he should be Big Brother of the Year because to me he is Big Brother of the Year every day of the year.

Talc use, cancer linked

BOSTON (AP) — Women who dusted their genitals and sanitary napkins with talcum powder were three times as likely to develop ovarian cancer as women who did not use talc, according to a study reported by Brigham and Women's Hospital.

The study was the first to link talc use to the disease, which affects 18,000 women a year and is the fifth-leading cause of cancer deaths in women.

Dr. Daniel W. Cramer, the obstetrician and gynecologist at the hospital here who was the principal author of the study, said it is doubtful that talc exposure is the only cause of ovarian cancer.

Cramer said further studies are needed before doctors can recommend that women should not use talc.

"It is hoped that this report will stimulate further study of talc exposure in relation to ovarian cancer," he wrote in a release from the hospital. "Animal studies would be helpful to determine whether and under what circumstances ovarian tumors may be induced by various talc preparations."

Results of the study were published in the July 15 issue of the journal Cancer.

The 215 cases studied were women with ovarian cancer diagnosed in Boston hospitals between November 1978 and September 1981.

They were compared to a control group of the same size with similar breakdowns of age, educational level and marital status.

The studied found that dusting talc on the genitals or on sanitary napkins was associated with an increased risk of ovarian cancer.

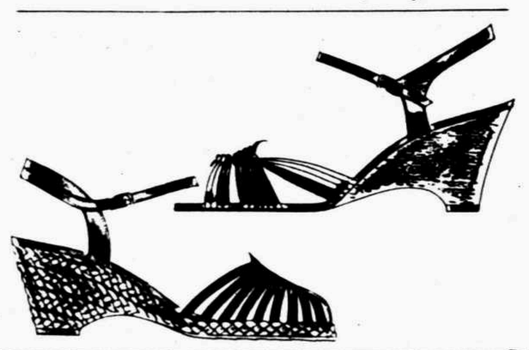

About 43 percent of women with ovarian cancer had exposure to talc by either or both of these routes, as compared with 28.4 percent of controls. Women who both dusted their genitals and their sanitary napkins were found to have a three-fold increased risk as compared to women with neither exposure.

Pac-Mania: Love affair with video game

By WARD SINCLAIR
The Washington Post

Innocence was lost cleanly and quickly in a college hangout in the South. It was a slow Saturday, and the place was empty. Students were away at the Kentucky Derby. A platoon of electronic video-game machines stood idle along the walls. Their lights blipped aimlessly, invitingly.

He put a quarter in a slot. A computer calliope played joyous music in 12-8 time. A smiling little yellow face popped up on the screen. He took the joystick, guided the little yellow face through a maze. Whucka-whucka, glomp-glomp, said the machine. Colored monsters darted from a cage. An orange ogre menaced. A red monster ate him. Whucka-whucka, said the machine.

He put in a second quarter and a third. Whucka-whucka, glomp-glomp. The little yellow man zipped up and down the maze. Monsters ate him each time. Glomp-glomp. He poured more quarters into the slot.

The idea was to avoid the monsters and run up the score. There was no knowing it then, but he had taken the first steps toward bondage. He had become a slave to the Pac-Man.

The pain began in the right elbow, and it worried him. He was, after all, a man of middling age, and discomfort of this kind was not unexpected. But this was a new and different hurt.

ARTHRITIS, HE THOUGHT. Bursitis, his friends said. See a doctor, they advised. It was important — his typing elbow, his tennis elbow, his jump-shooting elbow. But he feared a doctor's probing, and he ignored his friends.

Then the light of dawn appeared.

A woman who dabbled told him, "That is what happens. You get these pains, and your hands get sore. You'll get a callus on your finger from the joy-stick. My arm has hurt so bad I couldn't sleep nights. Had to sleep with it stretched out on a pillow. ..."

A bit later an editor handed him a wire-service article. Doctors were finding similar elbow and shoulder maladies among video-game devotees. It was an ailment of the times. Another, more reassuring story landed on his desk. It said the military was using video games to improve recruits' eye-hand coordination.

That was soothing — it showed a social purpose — but by now the pain had moved to his shoulder. His sleep was interrupted. He would toss restlessly, trying to ease the pulsations. There was no shaking it. It was the price of his addiction. He had fallen alone; he would whip it alone, he told himself.

The mania did not make him proud. Adults played the game, but it seemed a child's diversion. So he played, but he didn't tell his friends. Something else he didn't talk about: He resented kids who easily outscored him; even resented their presence in the video arcades.

HE WAS DRAWN by the lights and the sound. He liked the noises, whucka-whucka, glomp-glomp, the calliope. He especially liked the bonus fruits that popped onto the screen as a score increased: cherries, berries, peaches apples, grapes. He laughed aloud when he got his first apple. Hot-lick players could get bells, thunderbirds and keys. He once watched a boy, maybe 12, line the bottom of the screen with keys. He was incredulous, and he began disliking the kid.

He became furtive. He arranged cash purchases to assure he got quarters in change. He put $5 bills in the subway ticket machines, knowing an avalanche of quarters would come back. He would step out to the drugstore for a soda (even when the refrigerator was full of them) and drop a quarter into the Pac-Man.

Always, he had quarters. His pockets bulged, and coins clinked when he walked. Lunch hours, he tramped the streets, looking for an idle Pac-Man machine. He came to know the location of every downtown Pac-Man.

Not all of this was in vain. His score improved as he became more adroit with the joystick. But he pondered the mania, juggled it, rationalized it, cursed himself. Finally he decided it was the challenge that gratified. He wrote a good news article, he got little feedback. He bettered his score, he was pleased. Nods of approval from other players had meaning.

He drew another analogy. A new personal high score (they came slowly) rushed the adrenalin. He became an aging Jim Palmer throwing a two-hitter; a creaking Elvin Hayes going up for one more slam-dunk. He was a player! He was the human spirit putting technology to rout.

Now he was pushing 30,000 consistently, and he felt good about it. At the dentist's he read a magazine story about a celebrity Pac-Man tournament. The winner had 59,000 points, and he got his own machine as first prize. Good Lord, he thought, he was reaching tournament class. Then he read the rest of the story. It said the world record was in the millions. He was crushed.

He got a book that told how to win at Pac-Man. It laid out patterns that promised higher scores. He tried to memorize the patterns, intricate steps for outwitting the computer. The night he memorized his first pattern he dreamed about it.

THE PATTERNS WORKED, and his scores increased. But the book warned that technicians would add computer chips to alter patterns and outwit players. He began to sense it was a plot to wrench more quarters from him. Another story said that Americans were putting $5 billion a year into video machines. His theory made more sense.

He lost all grip the day they put two Pac-Man machines in the company cafeteria. Employees he'd never before seen queued up at the machines. He made friends with some of them. Collegial nods of approval became important.

He arranged odd lunch hours to avoid the queue, but so did others. He wondered when they did their work. He came in early (only for coffee, of course), and he played the machine. Others did, too, and he wondered how they explained late arrivals at their desks (missed the bus? babysitter ill?).

Women burned by sabotaged eyedrops

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Alpha Beta supermarkets have taken all eye drops, nose drops and nasal sprays from their Los Angeles-area stores because two women suffered eye injuries from using eye drops that had been laced with sulfuric acid.

Market officials issued the recall Tuesday and said the state health department was investigating the apparent sabotage. The motive for the contaminations was not known.

Last December, at least seven people suffered injuries when an unknown man ambled through several Alpha Beta and Thrifty stores deliberately lacing eye and nose medicines with chlorine, sufuric acid and other substances.

All eye and nose medications were recalled Tuesday by Alpha Beta. Customers who have purchased such items in the last 30 days were urged to return them to the nearest store for a refund unless the drops had been used and no harmful effects have been suffered.

Sulfuric acid can be detected because it often smells like rotten eggs.

The newest rash of contamination broke out at Glendale and Hollywood stores — both included in the list of stores targeted last December.

The company found out a week ago that a customer had bought contaminated Murine Plus eye drops at the Glendale store at Broadway and Chevy Chase Drive.

"We thought it was an isolated case," said Alpha Beta spokeswoman Esther Cramer, and so the company did not issue a recall at that time.

But on Tuesday, the company discovered that another unidentified woman was injured using Murine Plus, this time bought at the store on Sunset Boulevard and Western Avenue.

"We felt it was our duty to report this immediately, so others would not be harmed," Ms. Cramer said.

Bottom line: Needles may be missing mark

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Writer

BOSTON (AP) — A new study says doctors and nurses may be literally missing the mark when they give patients injections in the rear end.

Researchers have found that the standard needles used to give the injections aren't long enough to penetrate a layer of fat surrounding the large muscle called the gluteus, the target for many intramuscular injections.

"We want to make people aware that although they think they are injecting in muscle, they are injecting most often in fat in adults," said Dr. W. Peter Cockshott, who directed the study.

Cockshott and other researchers at McMaster University Medical Centre in Hamilton, Ontario, reported today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine that they used CT scans, a kind of X-ray, to measure the depth of fat on the buttocks of 213 adults.

They found the average women between the ages of 20 and 40 has 2.6 inches of fat surrounding the gluteus. Men have slightly less — about 1.5 inches. Yet the needles used for the injections are usually 1.4 inches long.

As a result, they found, the needles actually penetrate the fat and reach muscle in less than 5 percent of women and 15 percent of men.

Cockshott said little is known about how well medications are absorbed when they are injected into fat. But he said fat may be even better than muscle for injections.

"It's probably all to the good. I believe, that they are getting into fat, but no one's ever shown it," he said.

The practice of injecting medicines into muscle is based largely on custom, Cockshott says.

"Nursing is a profession that's hidebound by tradition," he said. "They haven't gotten rid of Florence Nightingale yet in some of these areas."

Some nursing textbooks say muscular injections are very painful, he said, "but I would challenge that myself."

The buttocks is often chosen over the arm as a spot for injections, he said, because the muscle there is larger and deeper, and there may be less chance of hitting a blood vessle or nerve.

Whether the buttocks is the best place for needles, he said, is still not known, but he added, "It's demeaning, isn't it?"

"I don't know whether we should use longer needles until we find out which is the better place to put them," he said. "That's the real bottom line."

Large number of actors being hurt while filming

By MILES BELLER
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — In the wake of actor Vic Morrow's fatal accident that also killed two child actors, the Screen Actors Guild revealed a significant increase in the number of actors hurt on the set in recent years — a number expected to climb higher in 1982.

Some 80 work-related accidents — including actors poked in the eye and stunt people knocked unconscious — were reported last year, according to James Nissen, SAG's national executive secretary. "And that was more than the year before," Nissen said, although he would not disclose numbers. He said that this year's figure probably will surpass last year's.

Citing demands for "more and more action" stunts that aren't properly worked out with all units of the film crew, he noted that "networks want six car crashes instead of one and bigger explosions than in the past."

Nissen said most serious stunt accidents occur because "different departments involved with making a film, such as special effects and the like, sometimes don't talk to one another. Many times, one department doesn't know what's going on with a stunt."

A communication slip-up that did cause an accident, said Nissen, occurred during the filming of "Heaven's Gate."

"A person on horseback was supposed to go from point A to point B. However, the horse didn't take direction and it veered away from its course. A preset explosion (special effect) went off close to the horse and it reared up and threw the rider, who was seriously hurt."

It could have been avoided, said Nissen, if someone had told special effects not to detonate the explosion "if you see the horse veering off course." Nissen also said it could have been prevented if shooting had been stopped the moment the horse began running the wrong way.

Youth leadership project planned

NEW YORK (AP) — A Leadership Experience and Development program, known as Project LEAD, will be initiated this fall by the Association of Junior Leagues with a 40-month grant of $290,000 from the W. K. Kellogg Foundation.

The project will train adult volunteers and high-school students to work in teams, employing their leadership skills and community resources to meet a variety of needs, from child care for preschoolers to services and activities for the mentally and physically handicapped.

Using a mentor concept, the adult volunteers will provide guidance and support to the youths in building self-esteem, according to AJL president Anne B. Hoover. The student leaders, in turn, will recruit and guide other young people as community volunteers.

The program, expected to reach high-school students in 180 cities by the end of 1985, is being implemented by AJL in collaboration with The Quest National Center. The center, based in Findlay, Ohio, provides programs for teachers, youth and parents centered around its "Skills for Living" curriculum.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmo Birkhead

Couple celebrates 50th

The 50th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Elmo Birkhead, 1801 W. Tennessee, was celebrated with a reception Saturday at 2 p.m. in the parlor of First United Methodist Church in Midland. Elmo Birkhead and the former Christine Farrar were married Aug. 6, 1932 in Carlsbad, N.M.

The couple's two children and three grandchildren, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Birkhead Jr. and son James, and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wallace and Graves and Christy, were hosts of the reception.

Mr. and Mrs. Birkhead moved to Midland in 1945, after residing in Coahoma and Knott. They were owners of Birkhead Feed Store until retirement, when their son, E. P. Birkhead Jr., purchased the store and business.

They have been active members of First United Methodist Church since moving to Midland in 1945.

Wedding is to be 6 p.m. Nov. 27 at Midland Luthern Church.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Lee High School. Her fiance was graduated from Midland High School and is employed by John L. Cox.

HUNT-COX

McALLEN — Mr. and Mrs. Luther B. Hunt Jr. of McAllen are announcing the engagement of their daughter, Cynthia Denise Hunt of Odessa, to Gordon B. Cox of Odessa. Plans call for a Sept. 4 wedding in Temple Baptist Church of Midland.

The future bride is a graduate of Robert E. Lee High School, Midland, and is employed by Southwest Airlines. Her fiance is a graduate of Kermit High School and works for Texaco Oil Co.

Mental disease may be treatable

CHICAGO (AP) — Dementia, a many-sided mental disease that affects the elderly, may sometimes be caused by treatable ailments instead of brain deterioration, a study says.

The affliction could be reversed in some cases with careful treatment, said the study, reported in today's edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Of 111 Boston-area nursing home patients, 26 who had dementia but exhibited no sign of brain damage were found to have other, potentially reversible, disorders — such as low levels of thyroid hormone, Vitamin B-12 deficiency and depression.

"It was a great surprise to us," said Dr. Thomas D. Sabin, director of neurology at Boston City Hospital and one of the report's authors. "We thought the number of potentially reversible dementias would be much lower than that."

In the other 85 patients, dementia was tied to irreversible brain damage, the study found.

Forms of dementia — marked by mental confusion, loss of memory, urinary incontinence and stumbling — currently afflict between 2 million and 4 million Americans. The figures are expected to jump in the next 25 years unless major advances in prevention and treatment of the illness are made, the journal said.

Distinguishing between reversible and irreversible dementia is often difficult, said Sabin. His report said that without proper diagnosis and treatment, patients with potential for improvement will still be forced to finish their lives in institutions.

Dementia caused by brain damage often is indistinguishable from dementia-like symptoms of depression that sometimes respond to anti-depressant drugs, Sabin said in the report.

He said patients may also have treatable disorders co-existing with deterioration of the brain, further complicating the picture.

The elderly are particularly susceptible to unstable behavior caused or aggravated by overmedication, particularly with tranquilizers, Sabin said.

"An elderly patient, hospitalized for an acute illness, can become confused and disoriented in reaction to medication and the dramatic change in his life," Sabin said. "Released to the care of his family or a nursing home, he's given tranquilizers which compound rather than ease his dementia-like symptoms.

"As his behavior begins to deteriorate, his family and physicians see long-term institutionalization as the only alternative," which creates a vicious circle for patients labeled as demented, he said.

The JAMA article concluded that an "individually tailored care plan" combining the use of community resources — such as visiting nurses and day-care centers — and environmental adjustments to ease patient fears and medication for particular behavior problems would best help families meet the demands of the illness.

Woman saves old dolls

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN

If a visitor were to come to 2208 W. Washington, Lona Mae Cornelius would lose no time in introducing him to her "babies."

"This one was my sister's doll. I played with it when I was little — it's over 70 years old," Mrs. Cornelius, 65, said as she gently rocked the small, delicate toy. "When she was a little girl...a barber called her in the barber shop and give it to her.

"It's original china — it's not the artificial china like the kind they got now. This is real," she said, fingering the doll with care. "She got her hand broke. I'd like to know where I can find a hospital and get her fixed."

Mrs. Cornelius inheirited the doll when her sister died last November.

"When we were little she would bring her over and say, 'She can stay with you for a month.' And when the month was over she'd say, 'It's time for her to go home' and I'd never want her to go.

"I got this little colored baby when I was 5 years old, so she's 60 years old," she continued, carefully picking up little Lizzy. "I got the other one (Mary Jane) when I was 10."

Mary Jane has eyes that roll open and shut and tiny teeth behind a shy smile. Her "skin" is dryed and cracked with age.

"She was busted and my husband was a painter, so he took some plaster mud and glued her head back together. Then he got some black paint and redone her hair," she continued.

She took out a miniature antique iron that she has had since she was a child. "This is what I iron my doll clothes with.

Cocktail dresses: Black is back

By GWEN JONES
Hearst Feature Service

The black cocktail dress is showing up at soirees all over the country, and designers are predicting that its popularity will grow even greater come fall.

One reason for that prophecy is that black is always more apropos in autumn than in summer. As Los Angeles designer Jill Richards points out, the short silhouette with daring decollete is "timeless and versatile. I always include a few cocktail dresses in my collection," says Richards, who's been turning out sophisticated fashions for the established woman for 13 years.

For other purveyors of stylishness, however, the little black numbers are a concession to the recession. The rationale goes that during lean times consumers want practical clothes that won't go the way of Nehru jackets or — more recently — the metallic look.

"There's definitely a return to traditional values," notes Sue Wong, a California designer whose Cee Gee collection features dresses in the $100-to-$200 range for "young-thinking" women. Wong views the comeback of the black cocktail dress (BCD) as part of a dressing-up trend and a revival of "a sense of ritual that has been missing far too long."

Indeed, such fancy frocks — which world-renowned couturier Valentino refers to as his "little black nothings" — haven't been this hot since the 1950s, when Marilyn Monroe flaunted the sexy designs of Bill Travilla in movies. Other sirens who helped the BCD cause were Susan Hayward, Deborah Kerr and Lana Turner.

Today's designs by Marlene Stewart hark back to the garb worn by those screen queens, but their inspiration, she says, came from the revival of '50s fashion action at trendy Hollywood clubs.

The black cocktail dress appeals to all kinds of women.

Super kids attend national science camp

By MARK PAXTON
AP Writer

BARTOW, W.Va. (AP) — When Gordon Videen of Tucson, Ariz., isn't working on his study of the defraction patterns of quartz and muscle fibers, he likes to shoot basketball with the other kids in the neighborhood.

Christine Christman of Alamagordo, N.M., investigated mycorrhizal relationships between plants and fungi last year, but also found time to help lead her high school cheerleading squad to the state championship.

And when Tom Beutner of Michigan City, Ind., wasn't fine tuning plans for the new aviation air foil he invented, he was working out with his school's cross country team.

It's true that the 100 students from around the United States attending the National Youth Science Camp are among the brightest in the nation. And, says camp director Rod Wilson, their research, often into uncharted scientific territory, helped win them invitations to the highly selective program.

Wilson acknowledges that he and other camp officials didn't quite know what to expect when the first group of young scholars arrived for the opening session in 1963. One question nearly everyone had was, what would they do with a bunch of eggheads?

"That's exactly the question we were asking ourselves in 1963," Wilson said. "But if you look back in high school, these kids haven't merely been specialists to any degree. They've accomplished a lot.

"If you take the average camper, he was valedictorian of his class, he has won several science type awards, he's been active — often in at least one athletic area, he was active in student government and he's active in his church.

"Basically, what we have is a well rounded bunch of kids," he said. "They're achievers."

The three-week camp is sponsored each year by the State of West Virginia and is heavily underwritten by private industry. Wilson says. Each state sends two representatives, frequently the winners of statewide science competitions.

The youngsters' time is divided between classes, workshops, lectures by nationally known scientists and a regular camp program of such activities as hiking and swimming.

Camper Ron Bennett's list of accomplishments is typical. The Farmington, Mass., teen-ager won a number of science awards in high school, and also edited his school newspaper. He has spent the past five years developing a radio telescope to chart solar flares in an attempt to determine their relationship to weather on Earth.

As he passed around a photograph of his homemade device, Bennett said he began gazing at the heavens as a child and hasn't been able to stop since.

"It was a case of looking at the stars when I was just a baby," said Bennett, who plans to attend the University of Colorado and go on to a career in solar physics.

Fellow camper Carrie Rinker of Atwater, Ohio, was involved in band, journalism and drama in high school, as well as a study of a group of enzymes called topoisomerase, which control the shape of DNA.

Camper Barbara Witkop of Selinsgrove, Pa., conducted a test with 33 women to determine how well they could identify smells while blindfolded. The test was performed in conjunction with Dr. William Cain of Yale University, Miss Witkop said.

But the science camp isn't all business for the 49 young women and 51 young men attending this year's session.

Nashua, N.H., resident Silvia Milkovitz credits her invitation to the camp in part to a study she conducted of water pollution on four New Hampshire waterways.

Uncle Sam has low-cost vacations in national parks

One of the 5-month-old black bear cubs at Wildlife Prairie Park near Peoria, Ill., shows off while playing with a stick in its pen.

By LOUISE COOK
AP Writer

If your spirit says it's ready for a vacation, but your budget says it's not ready for the price, it may be time to look at the National Park System for a low-cost, close-to-home summer holiday.

Most Americans tend to think of national parks in terms of remote wilderness regions. But the park system actually includes 333 recreational areas, many of which you can reach without a lot of expensive driving or time away from home. There are 48 full-fledged national parks included in the system; other places maintained by the park system range from historic houses and monuments to small, natural areas suitable for a single day's outing.

Admission to most of the national park sites is free; only 62 areas have an entrance fee, ranging from 50 cents to $3. The entrance charge does not include user fees for things like campsites; nor does it include fees imposed by concessionaires for food, equipment rentals, etc.

Duncan Morrow, a park service spokesman, said there were almost 238.5 million visits to the national park system in 1981 and this year's total is running about 4 percent ahead of last year's. (Note: The park service counts "visits" rather than individuals because it has no way of keeping track of the actual number of people involved. It also counts visits in two ways: People who stop and use the facilities — camping, touring monuments or battlefield, etc. — and those who simply drive through; there were 329 million "drive-through" visits in 1981.)

The park service has been trying to promote some of the lesser-known areas in its system and Morrow says it has had some success, particularly with Cumberland Gap National Historic Park, which extends over parts of Kentucky, Virginia and Tennessee, is less than 100 miles from the better-known and more-crowded Great Smoky Mountains of North Carolina and Tennessee, and offers some equal attractions, including a wilderness trail cut by Daniel Boone.

At the same time, Morrow said, some of the famous attractions are unique — and nothing else will do. "Obviously, there's only one place in the world where you can see 'Old Faithful,'" he said. (The geyser is in Yellowstone National Park which spreads over parts of Wyoming, Montana and Idaho.)

The Golden Eagle Passport costs $10 and is an annual entrance permit to all parks, monuments and recreation areas administered by the federal government. It is good only for the calendar year in which it is issued. The passport admits the holder, plus anyone accompanying him or her in a single, private, non-commercial vehicle. In places where entry is not by car, the passport admits the holder and immediate family group — parents, children and spouse. It covers entrance fees only. You can get it through the mail or in person from the headquarters offices of either the National Park Service, Room 1013, U.S. Department of the Interior, 18th and C Sts. N.W., Washington, D.C., 20240, or the Forest Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C., 20250, or from regional offices of either agency.

The Golden Age Passport is free and is available to people 62 and over. It covers admission fees and entitles the holder to a 50 percent discount on user fees charged by the federal government. You do not have to renew it annually. You must get a Golden Age Passport in person and must show proof of age. The passports are available at most federally operated recreational areas, as well as at park and forest service offices.

The Golden Access Passport is similar to the Golden Age Passport, but is available to anyone who is eligible to receive disability assistance from any federal program. You do not actually have to be receiving benefits to qualify; you simply must be eligible for those benefits. Like the Golden Age Passport, the Golden Access Passport does not have to be renewed.

For more information about the park system, contact the nearest regional office of the park service or write to the national headquarters in Washington. A booklet describing "Lesser-Known Areas of the National Park System" is available for $4 from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 192K, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

Louisville: What is life after Derby?

By MICHAEL CARLTON
The Denver Post

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — The summer is steaming here now. At times it feels like a barber's towel has been thrown across your face. The magnolia blooms are gone, now just brown mold on the ground. The sun shimmers over the brown waters of the Ohio, reigning king for another month.

As one walks the baking streets of Louisville, one thinks sweet thoughts of an earlier time, a season when the dogwood and the azaleas were in bloom, the mint juleps cool on the lips, and the horses thundered down the stretch in the 108th running of the Kentucky Derby.

During the Derby and the week preceding it, Louisville is another city, a gay young filly kicking up her heels on a bluegrass farm. She paints and poses for all the suitors — 150,000 of them — who crowd into Louisville to experience the magic of a Derby Day, to cry with a hundred thousand others when "My Old Kentucky Home" is played, even if they are from Iowa.

But the Derby is only one day, of course, and the suitors soon jilt this city and go home, and the hotels drop their prices out of the clouds and settle down to half-empty house counts.

Louisville is in the same peculiar situation as Indianapolis — a town that owes its reputation to a huge sporting event, one day when all the country looks to a small city which embodies, for a moment, a special spirit of America.

YES, YOUR THOUGHTS go back to that first Saturday in May, especially in the wet heat of a Louisville summer. And you muse: Is there life after Derby Day? Some.

Louisville is a fine small city (about 300,000 population), one that has limited appeal for a tourist during non-Derby days. It is not the sort of city one would plan a vacation around; it is a place that caters to its own residents and, just incidentally, tourists who happen to pass through.

The Actors Theater of Louisville is a perfect example of this. One of the most outstanding regional theaters in America, the Actors Theater presents an innovative, exciting program each year. As many as 60 plays have been produced in the theater in a single year and Louisville residents support it with a great deal of passion. Unfortunately for the visitor, however, the theater runs at an average capacity of 98 percent, so tickets are difficult to come by.

Even if you cannot be in Louisville for Derby Day and cannot get a ticket to the Actors Theater, there is enough in this river town to occupy you for a day or two.

Like it does in much of the South, history lies heavy here. Old Louisville, a restored residential area, has a collection of stunning 19th-century homes and Main Street in downtown Louisville has one of the largest assemblages of cast-iron building facades in the nation. There are historic homes to tour: Locust Grove, the final home of Louisville founder George Rogers Clark, and Farmington, designed by Thomas Jefferson and once host to Abraham Lincoln.

Louisville has a multitude of minor museums: the American Saddle Horse Museum, the Howard Steamboat Museum (across the river in Jeffersonville, Ind.), the J.B. Speed Art Museum, the Kentucky Derby Museum at Churchill Downs, the Kentucky Railway Museum, the Museum of History and Science, even a Col. Harland Sanders Museum, which traces the life of the man who brought us Kentucky Fried Chicken.

THERE ARE EVEN a couple of old steamboats — the Belle of Louisville and the Bonnie Belle — which give you a flavor of this city when it was the hub of commerce on the Ohio.

Although Louisville is famed for its Derby and its horses, there are those among us who think its more lasting contribution to society came much earlier, in 1783, when Evan Williams distilled the first Kentucky whiskey. Although there are those who insist on spoiling fine Kentucky bourbon with julep ingredients of mint and sugar, "Bourban and branch" remains the gentleman's drink in this city.

Two distilleries, Old Fitzgerald and Joseph Seagram & Son, offer tours Monday through Friday and nearby Maker's Mark Distillery in Loretto also conducts walks through the fermenting corn.

For the boys of summer there is a special magic to Louisville. For, when Mighty Casey struck out, it was with a Louisville Slugger. When The Babe strode to the plate, he carried a Louisville Slugger. And whe Henry Aaron beat The Babe's record he did it with a Louisville Slugger.

Long the predominant baseball-bat manufacturer in the world, the Louisville Slugger factory churns out as many as 7 million bats in a year. Each day, at 9:30 and 1:30, tours are given in the squatty little factory across the river in Indiana.

It is a bit like walking through the Baseball Hall of Fame. Here, on the banks of the Ohio, you see bats wielded by the greats of baseball — Cobb and Ruth, Mantle and Brett.

YOU ALSO WATCH bats being made. The bats you and I use are made in seconds; those used by professional baseball players take much longer, hand lathed by master craftsmen. The entire place speaks for the games of summer, and for the soft ease of baseball, the American sport.

This is the image I take away from Louisville — the quiet, sleepy town on a big-broad-shouldered river. Others may look at the Fourth Street Mall, the $130 million Galleria which will open in September, the gloriously restored Palace Theater and the equally gracious Seelbach Hotel.

But for me, on a humid summer evening, an evening in which the Kentucky Derby is but a distant memory, the gentle games of summer, and the lathes turning ash into baseball bats that may set records represent Louisville — a comfortable city secure in its own past and traditions.

Tourists face language gap

By GEORGE ZUCKER
AP Writer

The rich tourist lady looked upon Mauna Kea, the snowcapped volcano, and saw that it was good.

"Oh, driver," she gushed, "your Hawaii is — simply magnificent!" The young bus driver smiled and kept his eyes on the road, which wound along the eastern coast of the Big Island, Hawaii, between Hilo and Kailua-Kona.

"It's so lovely," the woman continued. "The beauty of the island makes me feel so good. It fills me with the spirit of — how do you say it?"

"It's the spirit of pupule," the bus driver answered.

"Yes," the woman said, "the spirit of pupule!"

A month later, The Honolulu Star-Bulletin published a letter from the woman, since returned to her California home. She wrote about how much she had enjoyed her Hawaiian holiday and wanted everyone to know she had returned to California "filled with the spirit of pupule."

The kamaainas (oldtimers) got a big kick out of that. "Pupule" is the Hawaiian word for "crazy."

Another coast haole (visitor from California) had been had.

Hawaiians love putting outsiders on. When the first New England missionaries put the Hawaiian language on paper, the island folk had a ball naming landmarks with double entendres.

More than a century later, a state commission would be created to clean up all the dirty names.

Easy to be awed by grandeur, majesty of Swiss Alps

By NAN CLAUSEL
Special to the Reporter-Telegram

Nothing prepares you for the grandeur, the sheer overwhelming awe you feel when first you find yourself surrounded by the Swiss Alps.

No movie camera, no wide-angle photograph, can capture the majesty of these mountains, the serenity of little green meadows clinging vertically to the mountainside — some higher up than the treeline — the clarity and grassy scent of the pure air, the bubbling rivulets tumbling down rocky gullies o the river valley below.

On the crest of Rochers de Naye (at 6,700 feet, a small moutain as Alpine mountains go), overlooking Lake Geneva, you have a 360-degree vista encompassing five chains of mountains. You are in the Vaudois Alps; visible are the Bernese and Valaisan Alps to the north and east, the Jura to the northwest and the montains of Savoy (Mount Blanc) on the southern side of the lake in France.

Standing there on what seemed like the roof of the world, while an occasional fluffy white cloud drifted below in the crystal air, I heard in my mind a familiar biblical passage, "Be still, and know that I am God."

It was as if, by providing so much splendor in such a small area of the earth, God wanted man to be properly humble and appreciative of His creation.

I WAS IN Switzerland as the guest of the Swiss National Tourist Office and Swissair for a writers' tour emphasizing the pleasures of summertime travel in this land of up-and-down. Our itinerary took us completely across the southern half of the country from west to east, then south to Lugano and north to Lucerne. Arrival point was Geneva, departure point Zurich, neither of which we had time to see. We traveled by motor coach, railroad (both standard and narrow gauge as well as cog), lake steamer, water taxi, cable car and foot power. In fact, the only mode of transportation I can think of that we missed was by ski-lift. (There are a few places where you can ski even in mid-summer).

The Swiss people, with their meticulous attention to detail and passion for perfection, have devised what surely must be the most efficient and comfortable transportation system in the world.

Switzerland is noted for its beautiful lakes as well as its mountains and summer is, naturally, the height of the season for the resort towns that line the lakeshores and the smaller villages that dot the mountainsides above the lakes. The climate is ideal, warm and sunny during the day (except when it rains, which is not often enough to worry about) and pleasantly cool at night. Air-conditioning is unkown and unnecessary except in a a few public places.

Our first stop was Montreux, on the eastern edge of Lake Geneva in the French-speaking area of Switzerland. Nearby is the smaller town of Vevey, a quieter resort famous as the home of Charlie Chaplin. Both have a wide, flower-bedecked promenade all along the lake front. There are no streets, hence no traffic, between the row of hotels and estates and the shoreline.

Bright, colorful, lively, Montreux is a summer playground par excellence. There are grand and elegant hotels, such as the Montreux Palace with its luxurious salons, spacious rooms and suites in the old styles (but with every modern convenience). Then there are the more modern hotels, such as the Hyatt Continental Montreux, where our group stayed. A luxury hotel in every sense of the word, the Hyatt had only been opened two months previously and was actually not quite finished (the indoor swimming pool and sauna fitness center were still uncompleted). I found the prices surprisingly reasonable for a resort hotel: a double room, spacious and with every convenience you could want, including private balcony overlooking the lake, goes for $82 to $110 American in season, with meals from the excellent kitchen priced about the same as one of San Antonio's good restaurants.

AMONG THE MANY restaurants along the promenade, we sampled the cuisine at Le Club and found it worthy of a four-star rating.

A word here about wines is appropriate. The hillsides in the lower elevations almost everywhere are covered with vineyards which produce some truly excellent wines. Total production is not enough for a large export trade, but do try the local wines. You will not be disappointed.

Probably the most famous tourist attraction in the Montreux area is the Castle of Chillon, immortalized by Lord Byron's stirring poem, "The Prisoner of Chillon." The earliest known reference to the castle dates from the year 1005, but there is no evidence that human beings inhabited Chillon during the Bronze Age, in the 18th and 19th centuries B.C. The castle, which stands on a small, rocky islet separated from the shore by a narrow waterway, has been restored to the condition of its period of glory under the Dukes of Savoy from the 13th to the 16th century. The dungeon is intact, even to the heavy beam near the ceiling from which many a prisoner met death by hanging.

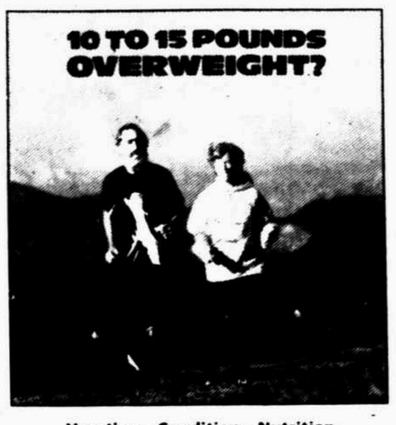

Another lakeside resort we visited was Lugano, in the far southeastern corner of Switzerland, the Italian-speaking Canton of Ticino. Here, the atmospere was warmer, the voices louder, the energy level higher than in French Montreux. Yet there was the same beautiful, people-oriented lakefront promenade, the balmy climate, the mountainsides diving steeply into the waters of Lake Lugano.

A little more than 10 years ago, Lugano suffered a grievous blow to its tourist industry when Lake Lugano was declared so polluted as to be unfit for swimming. In the years since then, at great expense, the city has built a new sewer system and water treatment plant which have succeeded in revitalizing the dying lake. The water is now pure and safe for bathing and the fish population is increasing steadily.

Americans have never constituted more than 5 percent of Lugano's tourists, and the city fathers would like to change that. Accordingly, they have undertaken a large advertising and publicity campaign, and they have extended the destination network of the commuter airline CROSSAIR (which incidentally uses 18 Swearingen Metroliner III aircraft manufactured in San Antonio) with low add-on fares.

LUGANO AND ITS surroundings have much to offer the traveler. It is a small but busy city which has taken pains to preserve its "old town" as well as develop its beautiful lakefront. Around the basin from the main part of the city is the Villa Favorita, a gallery built by the late Baron von Thyssen to house his private collection of paintings from the Italian, Flemish, Dutch, Spanish, French and German schools from the Middle Ages to the 18th century. It is one of the richest and most extensive private collections in Europe and is open to the public every Friday, Saturday and Sunday from Easter through the middle of October. Further up the lake from the Villa Favorita is the picturesque fishing village of Gandria, most easily accessible by boat.

Tourists explore the home of the post commander at Fort Davis National Historic Site. The commander's house is among a row of officers' homes at the restored fort, which gives visitors a taste of frontier life in the late 1800s.

Memories live on at old Fort Davis

By STEVE BREWER
AP Writer

FORT DAVIS, Texas (AP) — Bugles blare to assemble the troops. The sounds of clopping hooves and tramping feet grow closer and closer, mingling with the shouts and commands of the fort adjutant.

The adjutant reads a message from President Ulysses S. Grant, ordering flags at half staff for former President Andrew Johnson, who has died.

But the parade ground at Fort Davis remains still. There are no troops — only tourists and ghosts.

IT'S AN EERIE FLASHBACK to the past, all designed by the National Park Service to give visitors a feel of what life was like at a military post on the American frontier. The sounds wafting across the empty parade field come from speakers concealed in one of the vacant buildings.

"Hail Columbia" and "The Star-Spangled Banner" are played by an unseen Army band and echo through the empty stuctures. Behind those buildings, the Davis Mountains rear stony fingers that dwarf the gravestones of the cemetery below.

"We think the soundtrack adds a touch of realism to the fort," says park Superintendent Douglas McChristian.

"Last year, we had about 71,000 visitors," he said. "We're up 15 percent over that so far this year. People are adjusting to the price of gasoline and taking shorter trips."

THE FORT SITS IN A WIDE CANYON in the rugged mountains, within the city limits of the town of Fort Davis. Visitors expecting a movie set fort surrounded by a wooden stockade are disappointed.

"Stockades were fairly uncommon, despite what Hollywood would like us to believe," McChristian said. "That's the value of Fort Davis... We have a generation of people here who have been educated by television and the movies, but the fort shows what it was really like."

Nearly 60 buildings or ruins make up the fort site, ranging from barracks to officers' quarters to bakeries and stables. Best preserved are the officers' quarters and barracks that were erected after the Civil War.

FORT DAVIS WAR FIRST ESTABLISHED in 1854 to provide protection for travelers on the Lower Road west to El Paso. The first fort began as temporary structures of pine and canvas. Later, a few stone structures were built.

The fort was abandoned after its troops left to fight in the Civil War in 1861. When federal troops returned in 1867, the fort had been wrecked and burned by Indians.

New stone and adobe structures were built and housed soldiers until the fort was closed in 1891.

"It was bypassed by the railroad," says McChristian, a historian who specializes in frontier military history. "There were no more hostile Indians in the area. There was no reason to keep a post here."

THE BUILDINGS OF THE FORT remained in use by settlers in the area for another 40 years.

"Into the 1930s, people would move into these houses while they were waiting to get their own houses built," McChristian said. "One of the reasons they are in pretty good condition is because they were occupied so long. But during the '30s, the roofs were really beginning to crumble. People were coming over and scavenging material.

"Without the roofs, windows and doors, the walls were left to deteriorate."

IN THE 1960S, THE GOVERNMENT began a partial restoration of the buildings, replacing the roofs and, in some cases, the porches. Buildings that were beyond repair were left in their original condition.

"A big part of our job is keeping the visitors off the ruins," McChristian said.

During the summer, employees and volunteers in period dress staff the more important structures at the fort and describe what life at the Army post was like.

"In the officer's kitchen, for example, we have a servant ... who talks about the servants and how they were in a caste apart from the officers," McChristian said. "She gives a lesson in the sociology of the frontier. It's subtle. She doesn't announce, 'We're going to have sociology now.'"

Colorful Colorado is cool, historical

By JANET FULLWOOD
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

GEORGETOWN, Colo. — Summertime in the Rockies doesn't really begin until temperatures near the century mark in Texas. While people in some parts of the country are cranking up air conditioners and settling in for three months of big bills and sweaty picnics, people in the mountain communities of Colorado are opening their windows to let the cool, pure mountain air rush in.

With the arrival of summer to the mountains of Colorado, sometime in late June or early July, come wildflowers, swollen streams, puffy clouds and tourists — caravans of tourists, all out to revel in the magnificent scenery and escape the heat back home. In their search for mountain pleasures, few could go wrong by turning off Interstate 70 an hour's drive west from Denver for a dip into the frontier charm of Georgetown.

A TOURIST TOWN THIS IS; a resort town it is not and probably never will be.

Georgetown clings to its narrow valley as tenaciously as the nearby silver lodes that earned it the nickname "Silver Queen of the Rockies" cling to their beds of stone. Towering mountains surround it, a clear steam rushes through it, and history owns its soul.

There are other historic mining towns in Colorado, towns whose main streets recall the gold rush days with fixed-up facades and restored interiors. But in most of them, Main Street ends where the wood-and-glass condominiums of today begin.

NOT SO GEORGETOWN. Here the past lives on in more than 200 buildings raised before the turn of the century — and in the hearts of citizens and supporters so committed to historic preservation that some even shun the new 7-Eleven that recently went up on the edge of town.

Alone of Colorado's 19th-century mining towns, Georgetown never suffered a major fire, and blocks of the Victorian and country Gothic structures that made it typical of its time survived the decades intact. You can see them today, lining the 18 long blocks and four shorter ones that makes up part of the Georgetown-Silver Plume National Historic Landmark District, recognized in 1966 by the National Park Service as possessing "exceptional value in commemorating or illustrating the history of the United States."

A GOOD BIT OF HISTORY was made here, to be sure. Like most of the mountain towns of Colorado, Georgetown had its roots in the bawdy prospecting days of the late 1850s, when fortune seekers scoured the Rockies in search of gold. The gold played out early in the Georgetown region, but the discovery of substantial silver reserves in 1864 brought a new wave of miners, tradesmen, speculators and merchants to establish a permanent settlement in the upper reaches of Clear Creek Valley.

For the next 2 1-2 decades, Georgetown prospered as men hacked into mountains to exploit lode after lode after lode. In its 1870s heyday, Georgetown reigned as the third largest city in Colorado, boasting more than 5,000 permanent residents, elegant homes and hotels, opera houses, public schools, a hospital, two newspapers and a fire brigade that earned national recognition for efficiency and speed.

THE ROSY BLUSH OF PROSPERITY faded quickly and permanently in 1893 when the government put the country on the gold standard and the bottom fell out of the silver market. Georgetown never became a ghost town, but its population dwindled through the 1930s, to perhaps 200 souls.

After World War II, settlers began coming back and pumping new life into deserted structures that had crumbled through the years. Today the entire town (population 1,000) is listed on the National Register of Historic Places, and four non-profit organizations are actively involved in preserving the traditions Georgetown knew as the core of the greatest silver-producing area in the world.

"I think that one day Georgetown will be to the 19th century mining West what Williamsburg is to the 18th century founding fathers. This area financed the industrial revolution for the rest of the United States," says Ron Neely, executive director of the Georgetown Society.

THE GEORGETOWN SOCIETY, formed in 1970 during a period of intense land speculation arising from the state's anticpated involvement in the 1972 Winter Olympics, was the first organization in Colorado created specifically for purposes of historic preservation. It currently is involved in restoring five buildings chosen to represent a rounded view of life in 19th century Georgetown, from the modest cabin of a trapper to the ostentatious mansion of a silver baron.

It is Georgetown's peaceful setting and quiet wealth of frontier nostalgia that make the town such an interesting place to visit and charming place to stay. Heading the list of attractions for visitors who arrive between special events (there's a Victorian homes tour Aug. 21, a Christmas market in December and a Feashing Festival in February) are tours that showcase the way life in the boomtown Rockies used to be lived.

IN THE HAMILL HOUSE, an ornate Gothic Revival landmark once owned by an English silver mining entrepreneur, visitors learn that the Victorian era was not as black and white as old photographs would have us believe. Here are brightly patterned carpets, rich jewel-tone draperies and original trappings like flocked camel's hair wallpaper and walnut and maple strip floors that add color and life to history. Here, too, is William A. Hamill's stone carriage house, his office building and a fanciful, six-hole privy partitioned to divide servants from family members.

GEORGETOWN'S MAIN STREET is a picturesque strip of restored 19th century buildings that again recall frontier times. Today they house shops, art galleries, antique emporiums, saloons and restaurants — good restaurants like the Silver Queen and The Ram, where one can meet the friendly people of Georgetown and dine on Rocky Mountain trout, beef or lighter fare in the atmosphere of the Old West.

Also on the main street is Georgetown's unlikely souvenier of France, the Hotel de Paris. Built in the 1870s by Louis Dupuy, a mysterious Frenchman with a talent for cooking and unknown sources of wealth, the hotel was once the grandest in the Rockies and attracted a sophisticated clientel. Today it is a museum run by the Colonial Dames Historical Foundation and draws hoards of history buffs, many of whom make a special trip to Georgetown just to admire its richly furnished dining room, diamond dust mirrors and period guest rooms.

GEORGETOWN'S MOST ENJOYABLE family attraction lies not in creaking timbers, however, but in the Georgetown Loop Railroad, an engineering marvel built by the Colorado & Southern Railroad to connect Georgetown with nearby Silver Plume during the boomtown era. A $1 million grant from the Colorado Historical Society recently was awarded to begin reconstruction of the train's original route, including the famous Devil's Gate Viaduct, a high trestle that was razed for scrap half a century ago.

In the meantime, the train operates as it has since it reopened in 1975, with vintage steam locomotives hauling antique cars over 2.5 miles of restored loops and switchbacks up the mountain to Silver Plume and down again. A stop on the way allows visitors to tour the once-prosperous Lebanon Mine and see how silver was torn from the earth a century ago. No attempts are made to romantacize here — mining was tough work, accomplished by muscle and candlelight, and many laborers lost their lives slaving to make a few men rich.

WITH ONLY TWO MOTELS AVAILABLE to accommodate visitors, Georgetown traditionally has catered more to day-trippers than to vacationers who come to settle in a while. Now there's an interesting alternative, Odette Baehler's Georgetown-Baehler Resort Services (303-569-2665), offering lodging by the week-end, week or month in a choice of 10 houses, some old, some new, owned by part-time Georgetown residents who earn their bread and butter elsewhere. The offerings range from Victorian charmers to rustic ski cabins and rent for $500 to $840 a week for four guests. Linens, kitchen facilities, food staples, fireplaces and appliances are included, and Odette also can arrange bookings elsewhere in the Georgetown area.

STAYING IN GEORGETOWN is a good idea not only for those who want to experience the serenity of a Colorado mountain town, but also for those who plan to explore the region. Just over the mountain is Empire, another historic town that boats an old miner's inn, the Peck House, still in operation; the Red Men Hall, one of the best galleries of Indian weavings, sculpture, pottery, painting and jewelry in the country.

As a takeoff point for tours to Denver, Loveland Pass, Dillon Lake and other beauty spots in the eastern Rockies, Georgetown's location is unsurpassed. And Keystone, Loveland Basin, Arapahoe Basin, Breckenridge, Copper Mountain, Vail, Beaver Creek and Winter Park are all within an hour's drive through some of the most magnificant landscapes in America.

European travel now less expensive, more practical

Never let it be said that the very rich don't like to save a buck whenever they can. That's how many of them got that way - and thanks to a quirk in the dollar exchange rate, Europe can once again be enjoyed by the American tourist who likes to travel in high style.

By rough rule of thumb according to the August issue of Connoisseur - the magazine that caters to those that have a passion for the posh - first class hotels in major capitals now cost no more than $150 a night for a double room, and in the countryside perhaps half that.

The bargain luxuries are one of the few benign effects of "Reaganomics," but the situation may not last. Indeed, according to some gloomy financial gnomes, the dollar may drop by 10 percent against many European currencies by early autumn. Now is certainly the right moment to go, but if you must wait you can protect yourself by buying Swiss-franc traveler's checks in advance.

The rate of exchange is now very favorable - better than $1.90 to the dollar - and the Swiss-franc is likely to hold its own even if the dollar does not. Thomas Cook will sell Swiss-franc traveler's checks for dollars in New York, and they can be exchanged all over Europe.

And even if you're not one of the rich, you can still take advantage of those bargain exchange rates at the hotels and restaurants where the hoi polloi hang out. If you can't go now, Connoisseur points out, September is always the best month. It's cooler, less crowded, and the kids are back in school.

Flavor of Mexico is found in excellent seafood recipe

By BARBARA HANSEN

Veracruz, Mexico is known for its lively, tropical music, its friendly inhabitants and, on the culinary side, its coffee and seafood.

The best known of the many seafood preparations emanating from this coastal city is no doubt huachinango a la veracruzana, which is red snapper in a zesty tomato sauce.

The sauce is prepared in a variety of ways. Tomatoes, onion, garlic, olives and capers are basic components. Some cooks add chiles. Some leave them out. Broth or wine also may be used or omitted.

THE MOST IMPORTANT aspect of the dish is its freshness — primarily the freshness of the fish but also of the tomatoes that dominate the sauce. Canned tomatoes would give the wrong flavor.

For an excellent version of this dish, try the following recipe from the Casablanca restaurant in Venice, Calif., a Mexican restaurant that emphasizes seafood.

CARLOS HARO LASSO, the owner, partly anglicizes the name on his menu, calling the dish Pacific Red Snapper Veracruzano. But the flavor is as Mexican as if one were eating in Veracruz.

The whole red snapper is marinated with lime juice and salt, then topped with the sauce and baked. The recipe calls for a 3-pound snapper. If this size should be hard to find, use two smaller fish. Fish fillets or steaks also can be used; however, a whole fish makes a more dramatic and typical presentation.

Lasso suggests serving rice, beans and tortillas with the fish. Other good Veracruz style accompaniments would be a green salad or avocado cocktail, French rolls and white wine with flan and coffee for dessert.

PACIFIC RED SNAPPER VERACRUZANO

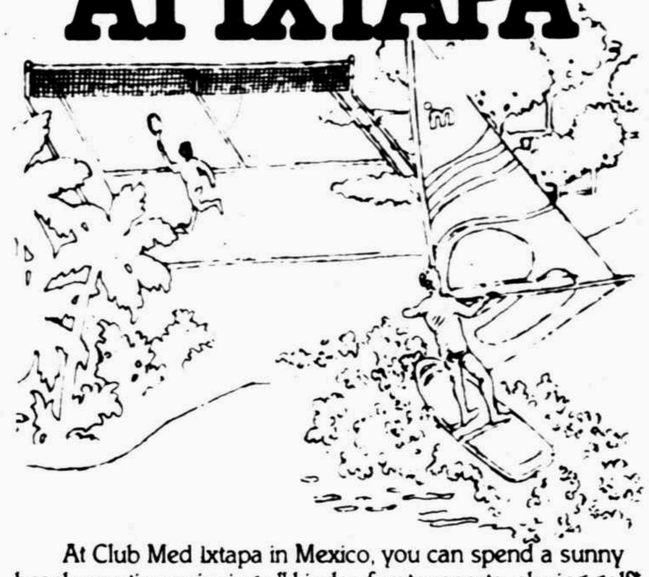

1 (3-pound) or 2 (1 1-2 -pound) whole red snappers
Salt
2 tablespoons lime juice
Olive oil
1 medium onion, thinly sliced
2 large cloves garlic, peeled and sliced
2 pounds tomatoes, peeled, seeded, and coarsely chopped
12 pitted green olives, halved
2 tablespoons large capers
2 pickled jalapeno chiles, cut in strips
1-4 teaspoon oregano
1 large bay leaf

Have fish cleaned, but leave on head and tail. Pierce both sides with large fork. Rub in 1 teaspoon salt and lime juice. Let stand about 2 hours.

Heat 1-4 cup olive oil in large skillet. Add onion and garlic and cook until tender but not brown. Add tomatoes, olives, capers, chiles oregano, bay leaf and 1-2 teaspoon salt. Cook over medium high heat until sauce has slightly reduced, about 10 minutes.

Place fish in oven-proof serving dish. Pour sauce over fish. Sprinkle 3 tablespoons olive oil over sauce. Bake uncovered, at 350 degrees about 20 minutes. Turn fish over and continue baking until just tender, 30 to 40 minutes. Baste frequently with sauce while baking. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

MAKING MIDLAND A BETTER HOMETOWN

MISUNDERSTANDING "OVER-55" BONUS

One of the greatest bonanzas for homeowners is the once-in-a-lifetime $125,000 exemption of taxes on the profit from the sale of a home for those over age 55. Unfortunately, many people who qualify for this exemption are not taking it because of a misunderstanding of the rules to qualify.

For example, one homeowner who wanted to sell and retire on the profit was told that he had to wait two more years because he had only owned his home for three years although he passed all of the other qualifications.

His incorrect advice was that since he did not own the house for five years he did not qualify because, according to the law, he had to own and occupy the house as his principal residence for three of the past five years.

There is no requirement for five years of ownership. This is a common misunderstanding. if you have owned and lived in the home for the last three years before the sale, you qualify.

It takes natural ability combined with hours of hard work to execute dance movements with Kelly Patterson's ease.

To dance is Kelly's dream

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

It was one of those lazy Sunday afternoons when time appears to have stopped and the day stretches endlessly forward.

For a couple of 13-year-old boys, no longer young enough to play kid games but not old enough to enjoy a day with no obligations, the day was a drag. They were looking for something to do.

The prospects appeared bleak until one of the boys remembered that Midland Community Theatre was holding auditions that afternoon. Why not try out? It would be a new experience.

Neither had any idea that this decision would have a long-range effect on his life. For one, it did.

Arriving at the theater, the boys were game to try out for any part in the musical. Little did Kelly Patterson dream that the audition was just the beginning.

Clad in hiking boots, Kelly was in the middle of attempting to execute a dance routine when the director, Art Cole, stopped the audition.

"He stopped everything and asked me if I had danced before," Kelly said in a recent interview. "I said, 'No.' He said, 'You should take it up.'"

Both boys made the "Carnival" dance ensemble. The year was 1978.

Today, Kelly has completed his first year at Southern Methodist University. He is enrolled, on a Dean's Honor Scholarship Award based on grades and dancing ability, in the university's school of dance.

"In Texas, it's the best school of dance as far as all kinds of dance are concerned," Kelly said. "TCU (Texas Christian University) might have a better ballet program, but no jazz at all. The University of Texas (at Austin) has a very good theater department, but it's just getting its dance department off the ground."

Kelly's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Patterson, wanted Kelly to remain in Texas because of the cost of out-of-state tuition and because of his age, he said.

"I skipped my senior year by taking double audit courses and taking senior English in summer school," Kelly said. When he wasn't studying academic subjects, he was dancing. He spent his time in Midland taking those dance classes he could at MCT and Audrey Walker School of Dance.

His desire to "hurry up" and get "the intensive training going" pushed him toward an early graduation.

"A dancer's career is the most short-lived of anyone's. A 35-year-old dancer is an old one. I figured I had a lot to learn and I still do."

Kelly is uncertain if he will remain at SMU after this school year because the university's dance program is "predominantly modern. That's what their emphasis is on.

"I want to dance on Broadway and also be able to sing and act so I decided SMU doesn't have what I'm looking for," Kelly said.

"I'm looking into some places right now that train in dance, in music and in acting," Kelly said. "The American Dance Machine is the one I'm most interested in. It's really respected in theater circles. Although it is mostly a dance company, it has a lot of emphasis on acting and singing. For example, dancers have to sing as they dance. If there are no lyrics, the class learns a poem and recites the poem in rhythm as it dances."

The fact that the American Dance Machine is based in New York City doesn't bother Kelly. His attitude is, "I'm going to live there sooner or later."

Kelly's summer vacation was cut short by his acceptance as a dancer in Casa Manana's production of "Lorelei" at Fort Worth. While he was in Midland, Kelly filled in for Cherry Jones, choreographer and dance instructor for MCT, returning once again to his roots.

He still remembers the sensations he felt his first opening night.

"Opening night was so exciting. I just got a chill when the overture started and the curtain went up. I knew when I got onstage that I wasn't nervous at all and that was surprising. Just excited. I knew then I had to keep on dancing."

Nothing fishy about diction class

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

"Woo...woe...war...wow," chants Paula Butts in her diction class, which utilizes the Arthur Lessac method for teaching American stage diction.

Following the physical exercises, class members began to chant.

"Woo...woe...war...wow...woo...woe ...war...wow...woo...woe...war...wow."

The pace was at first slow, picking up speed as the instructor spoke faster and faster and faster. At times, he put two fingers to the side of his mouth, checking to make sure his top and bottom teeth were at least that far apart as he chanted. The others followed suit.

All looked like fish, with each set of lips roundly extended as far forward as possible.

The group next lined up across the room from the instructor and began another fish-faced chant. This one was much louder than the first.

"Y—y-y-yes. Y-y-y-yes. Ea-ea-ea-ea-ea-sy-y-y-y-y-y. Ea-ea-ea-ea-sy-y-y-y-y-y."

Easy? No. It's the Y-buzz vibration.

The scene would have left an uninformed observer quite puzzled. In less than 30 minutes he would have witnessed what appeared to be odd human behavior — from unusual-looking physical warm-ups (head rolls, shaking arms, bent-over bodies slowly straightening) to strange sounds vibrating from lips roundly extended as far forward as two fingers of space between the upper and lower teeth would allow.

I know. I was a member of the fish-lipped group.

The verbal explanation is simple; it's the visual picture that's complex.

These people have not tuned out, but are instead tuning in to the proper use of the human voice, via the Arthur Lessac method.

"Lessac is one of two disciplines for teaching American stage diction," explained the class's instructor, Michael Spicer, co-director of the youth program at Midland Community Theatre. In addition, Spicer directs adult performances at MCT and teaches classes for adults.

"Good diction, just like good vocal action and control, is a learned physical activity, just like hitting a good forehand or playing golf," Spicer said in an interview following class.

"The summer after I first took this course, I played a 3,000-seat outdoor theater. I didn't have any trouble being heard without a mike all summer long."

The plays presented were all Shakespearean, which means proper enunciation, vocal control and tonal action (as in the Y-buzz and The Call — used by conductors, street vendors, barkers and newsboys) were obligatory.

Training the voice is vital for those who perform onstage. It can make the difference between being understood or misunderstood.

It is not always essential for those who do not perform, but rather an asset which can be utilized in the individual's work and private life.

"I really also feel that the ability to distinctly articulate your words adds so much credibility to what you're saying that it's a valuable tool and asset to anyone," Spicer said.

By the time most individuals have become adults, they have developed lazy speech patterns.

These poor speech patterns may range from dropping consonants, such as saying "exat" for "exact," missing what Lessac refers to as the BD double drumbeat in "stabbed" by saying instead "stabed," to rigid and tight rather than rounded and vibratory use of the vowel sounds.

To learn proper diction and voice control, it is necessary in the beginning to use exaggerated facial movements. As the correct mouth and facial movements begin to replace the lazy ones, the action required to produce them becomes natural and relaxed.

The physical exercises at the start of each class relax the throat and vocal muscles, thus easing the body's tension and making it easier to achieve the desired results. In fact, the body becomes so relaxed that it is impossible not to yawn.

The attitude toward yawning is another of the unusual aspects of the class.

Not only is it accepted — it is expected.

Michael Spicer assists Paula Butts in achieving the maximum call quality.

"Feel the book vibrate as you hold The Call. Now begin and hold it as long as you can. H'llo-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o," Michael Spicer tells class members, from left, Diane Brown, Paula Butts and Loree FitzGerald.

Annual workshop held by Childbirth With Preparation

By LINDA ANDERSON

Childbirth With Preparation of Texas, Inc. of Midland held the third annual workshop, July 30-31, at Kimber-Lea Clubhouse. CWP instructors met to "keep contact with the medical profession and exchange ideas — we feel it is our responsibility to our couples to keep up with the newest things in the profession," said Sherry Fishman, co-chairman of the workshop.

The Friday session included a meeting with labor and delivery nurse, which Co-Chairman Karen Gahr said was to "keep the lines of communication open."

Charles Silverman, staff psychologist and director of the Stress Management and Relaxation program at Central YMCA, was the speaker for the afternoon session on Friday. He discusses the uses of stress management in the labor and delivery situation.

"People can learn to bring on the state of relaxation upon entering the hospital and maintain the state of relaxation throughout their stay," Silverman said. "The relaxation techiques are great because when someone is very relaxed, their pain threshold increases (so it takes more pain before they can really feel it). Sometimes they dont need to use anesthesia."

He said that sometimes people think they are relaxed when in fact, they are very tense. "The facial muscles are a good indication of what the rest of the body is doing," he said. "If you are able to relax your forehead and facial muscles, that is probably a good indication that the rest of the body is relaxed. You must relax the mind as well as the body. In a relaxed state of mind, we are in more control of ourselves than if we are tense."

"Seventy-five percent of our thoughts are negative in nature," Silverman said. "We need to reprogram our thoughts to get some positive thoughts in there."

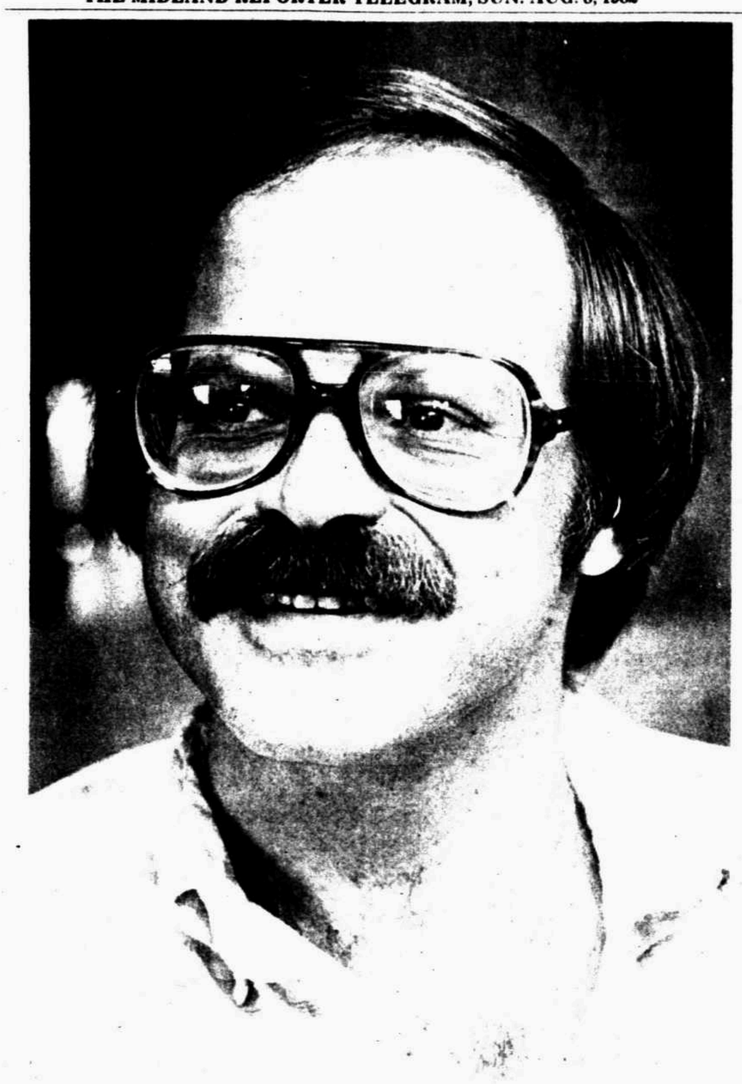

Childbirth With Preparation of Texas, Inc., teaches parents-to-be the Pavlov-Lamaze method of natural childbirth — "A method of conditioning for the labor response. It's breathing and relaxing, and educating, basically," said Mrs. Fishman.

"We have about 16 or 17 teachers and trainees. We do train our own teachers. We have a one-year-long, minimum, training program, which includes seminars, workshops, testing, observing, hospital observation, assisting and student teaching. There are 12 books or so that the trainees must read during their training period," she said.

CWP in Midland works with a board of doctors and nurses "that serve as a board of consultants," Mrs. Fishman said. "We try to clear up any misconception and check out new ideas and so on, with the board."

"We are a member of the International Childbirth Education Association and our teachings and our policies follow their standards," she said. "Childbirth With Preparation of Texas, Inc. has been basically self-contained in Midland since about January of 1980."

Any expectant couple interested in enrolling in a natural childbirth class with CWP should ask their obstetrician for information or call 697-7342. "The obstetricians have our brochures in their offices," said Mrs. Fishman.

Proper water temperature is key to appliance efficiency

NEWTON, Iowa (AP) — One way to ensure that home appliances which use water are operating efficiently is to set the water heater to deliver within a degree or two of 140 F hot water at the kitchen tap, advises an expert in the appliance field.

One of the easiest ways to check the home's water temperature is to allow hot water to run at the kitchen faucet until it reaches its maximum temperature, according to Douglas M. Ringger, manager of product testing for Maytag in Newton.

Then, he adds, fill a glass and take a reading of the water with a meat or candy thermometer. If the reading is not approximately 140 F, the water heater should be adjusted slightly each day over a period of time until the recommended water temperature is attained.

When the water supply is not hot enough, it can affect laundry results, Ringger points out. The "warm" setting on the clothes washer, where Maytag surveys show two-thirds of all loads are done, will produce essentially a cold wash.

This is because the warm setting is a 50-50 mix of hot and cold water, he explains. When the hot-water temperature is lowered, the temperature of the water drops as well, resulting in wash water that will not get clothes as clean as water of the proper temperature.

It is possible to override the problem by selecting the hot-wash cycle rather than the "warm" but, Ringger notes, it will take significantly more energy to wash a load than it would have had the water heater been set to deliver an acceptable warm-water temperature in the first place.

In addition to the home laundry, another appliance that requires hot water is the dishwasher. If the water reaching the dishwasher isn't approximately 140 F, fats in food will not dissolve and food can be redeposited back on the dishes instead of flushed down the drain.

A third concern with a water heater setting that is too low is that it can reduce the capacity of the hot-water heater itself. More hot water will be needed for such things as showers and baths and this could deplete the hot-water supply faster.

Keep in mind, too, Ringger suggests, that while it is beneficial to set the hot-water heater to deliver 140 F water, it should not be set any higher than this. Next to the furnace, the water heater is the biggest user of energy in the home, so it pays not to overdo it.

Richard Blythe, new director for High Sky Girls Ranch, shows a nearly-completed cottage, which, when finished, will provide housing for approximately 12 girls.

New director for High Sky Girls Ranch

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Richard Blythe, formerly executive director of Foster Home for Children in Stephenville, has been named director of High Sky Girls Ranch in Midland. Blythe has been in child care administration for the past 19 years.

"When I was a student at East Texas State University in Commerce in 1963, I started with a part-time position as choral director in the Boles Home for Children in Quinlan," he said. "Within a matter of weeks, I really had become a full-time employee and part-time student. I later became assistant administrator at that agency. From there I went to Stephenville to the Foster Home."

"I was originally a music and psychology major, so when I started out I never envisioned myself as an administrator in child care. I saw myself probably in social work, or psychology, or the ministry," Blythe said. "This is a full-time ministry of its own. Once I evolved into the developmental role, it's become a full life-work."

BLYTHE POINTED OUT that his career in child care covers about the same amount of time that High Sky has been in operation. "I began in child care just as this agency was beginning," he said. "I have watched the agency grow and have known every administrator it has ever had — I'm the fourth administrator."

Blythe said High Sky Girls Ranch was begun in June, 1963, "to provide a residential care facility — to provide a home — for girls. At that time there were several programs being developed for care facilites for boys, but very few facilities for girls. Mrs. Nobles spearheaded a local group in raising funds for the establishment of the ranch. The Fraternal Order of Eagles Auxiliary donated funds to help, and the ranch was begun. Through the years the Eagles have continued to support it as well as hundreds and hundreds of local friends."

HIGH SKY GIRLS RANCH is still located on its original site, 100 acres approximately six miles west of Midland, just off the Andrews Highway. The ranch has grown through the years to its present capacity of 32 girls, with construction nearing completion on new buildings to allow for facilities to care for 56 girls, Blythe said.

"We will be breaking ground in the next few weeks on the library/learning center, which will provide space for counseling, tutoring, administration offices, social work service with the families. In the development process, we will have built a maintenance shop/commissary, two new cottages, library/learning center and when construction is completed we will begin totally refurbishing the existing cottages."

GIRLS IN RESIDENCE at High Sky are referred to the agency by various sources, Blythe said, including the Department of Human Resources, various churches and private reference from the family. "The situation, in fact, that would bring a girl to us is almost as varied as the number of girls that are here," he said. "A girl may be from a severely economically deprived background, her family might have struggled and lost the battle to alcohol and divorce, there may be a few with severe emotional problems, the girl may be simply unable to cope with emotional stress within the family."

"Girls are cared for here without regard to the family's ability to contribute to the cost of that care," he added. "The vast majority of our funds come directly from the community. There are several auxiliaries (such as the Eagles) that also contribute."

HIGH SKY GIRLS RANCH was set up to provide residential care for girls between the ages of 6-18, "but in reality, we admit very few pre-teens," Blythe said. "Basically, a pre-teen is admitted if she is part of a sibling group. The majority of girls admitted are adolecents. Some girls in the Senior House might be 21 years old — you don't have to leave when you're 18. Those who are desirous of going on (to college) — the ranch will assist them as long as they are pursuing their educations."

EVEN THOUGH THE GIRLS are no longer living at home, their families play an important role in their lives. "Their relationships with their families are something we do our very best to encourage, yet obviously, based on what problem may or may not exist in that family relationship, there may be great variance in the length and amount of family visits," Blythe said, adding that High Sky has no set policy that says when a girl may or may not visit her family. That decision is made on an individual basis.

"It's impossible to meet the needs of all the girls, and have a hard and fast rule about family contact," he said. "We're going to work with whatever family there is in order to maintain whatever family relationship they may have. We know there is no more important aspect of the girl's life. Her family and its conditon are probably THE most real things in the girl's life. Outside of the physical care, there is nothing more important for us than being able to understand and deal with what are the realities in her relationship with her family."

AFTER SERVING AS EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR of Foster Home for more than 12 years, Blythe chose to accept the position of director at High Sky.

"Probably the key thing that brought me to High Sky was the opportunity to participate in the continuing development of High Sky Girls Ranch because I believe the Permian Basin probably provides the best opportunity anywhere in the state of Texas to develop a first-class child care facility that can be flexible enough to meet a variety of existing needs, and to modify the program to meet changing needs as they develop," Blythe said. "Obviously the financial resources are here and this community has performed in the past with compassion and generosity and willingness to support needed services."

"High Sky Girls Ranch is the only facility of is kind in the immediate vicinity. It has a record of sevice for nearly 20 years, while at the same time it's embarking on an entire new era with the development of new cottages, planned construction of the library/learning center... By early 1983, High Sky Girls Ranch will have virtually doubled the facilities and almost doubled the number of girls in residential care," he said.

"The board is an excellent board. They have presented a challenge to me to build on the past of High Sky and to develop the program and facilities to where they are the equal of any facility in this state or country," Blythe said. "I believe High Sky can be one of the finest child care facilities in the country. I believe the community provides the resources and the board is commited to it — and these are the ingredients necessary for an administrator to have available to him to make that goal a reality."

Senior Center art show, sale

The Midland Senior Center's art show and in-center sale will be Aug. 13 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the center, 2500 Delano. Many art works created by senior citizens enrolled in the art classes at the center will be exhibited and will be for sale. Paintings to be included in the show are in various media such as oils, watercolors and acrylics. The volunteer art instructor for the city of Midland-sponsored facility is Mrs. Kenneth (LaVoe) Peeler.

In addition to the art works, stitchery items, ceramics, plants and baked goods will be available for purchase during the day. The volunteer stitchery instructor is Mrs. Bernice Hughey. Carolyn Wallace, city employee, coordinates the ceramics group.

A meal is served each day at 11:45 a.m. and reservations are necessary a day in advance for those who desire to have a noonday meal while shopping at the art show.

Residents of the city and surrounding areas are invited to come look, browse and buy.

Crew suffers from fish poisoning

ATLANTA (AP) — Fourteen crew members on an Italian freighter apparently suffered ciguatera fish poisoning after eating part of a 25-pound barracuda caught from the ship, health officials said.

Nausea, vomiting and muscle weakness struck the 14 crew members who ate the fish in March, the national Centers for Disease Control said Thursday. Eleven were hospitalized in Florida. Seven required admission to intensive care units, but all recovered.

Ciguatera poisoning is associated with eating marine tropical reef fish, and the toxin is one of the most potent marine poisons, the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report. The toxin appears to build up in large predatory fish, such as barracuda, grouper and snapper, the CDC said.

One investigator recorded 280 poisonings from January 1978 to June 1980, the CDC said.

Richard Blythe, formerly executive director of Foster Home for Children in Stephenville, has been named director of High Sky Girls Ranch in Midland. Blythe has been in child care administration for the past 19 years.

"When I was a student at East Texas State University (in Commerce) in 1963, I started with a part-time position as choral director in the Boles Home for Children in Quinlan," he said. "Within a matter of weeks, I really had become a full-time employee and part-time student. I later became assistant administrator at that agency. From there I went to Stephenville to the Foster Home."

"I was originally a music and psychology major, so when I started out I never envisioned myself as an administrator in child care. I saw myself probably in social work, or psychology, or the ministry," Blythe said. "This is a full-time ministry of its own. Once I evolved into the developmental role, it's become a full life-work."

BLYTHE POINTED OUT that his career in child care covers about the same amount of time that High Sky has been in operation. "I began in child care just as this agency was beginning," he said. "I have watched the agency grow and have known every administrator it has ever had — I'm the fourth administrator."

Blythe said High Sky Girls Ranch was begun in June, 1963, "to provide a residential care facility — to provide a home — for girls. At that time there were several programs being developed for care facilites for boys, but very few facilities for girls. Mrs. Nobles spearheaded a local group in raising funds for the establishment of the ranch. The Fraternal Order of Eagles Auxiliary donated funds to help, and the ranch was begun. Through the years the Eagles have continued to support it as well as hundreds and hundreds of local friends."

HIGH SKY GIRLS RANCH is still located on its original site, 100 acres approximately six miles west of Midland, just off the Andrews Highway. The ranch has grown through the years to its present capacity of 32 girls, with construction nearing completion on new buildings to allow for facilities to care for 56 girls, Blythe said.

"We will be breaking ground in the next few weeks on the library learning center, which will provide space for counseling, tutoring, administration offices, social work service with the families... In the development process, we will have built a maintenance shop, commissary, two new cottages, library learning center, and when construction is completed we will begin totally refurbishing the existing cottages."

GIRLS IN RESIDENCE at High Sky are referred to the agency by various sources, Blythe said, including the Department of Human Resources, various churches and private reference from the family. "The situation, in fact, that would bring a girl to us is almost as varied as the number of girls that are here," he said. "A girl may be from a severely economically deprived background; her family might have struggled and lost the battle to alcohol and divorce; there may be a few with severe emotional problems; the girl may be simply unable to cope with emotional stress within the family."

"Girls are cared for here without regard to the family's ability to contribute to the cost of that care," he added. "The vast majority of our funds come directly from the community. There are several auxiliaries (such as the Eagles) that also contribute."

HIGH SKY GIRLS RANCH was set up to provide residential care for girls between the ages of 6-18, "but in reality, we admit very few pre-teens," Blythe said. "Basically, a pre-teen is admitted if she is part of a sibling group. The majority of girls admitted are adolecents. Some girls in the Senior House might be 21 years old — you don't have to leave when you're 18. Those who are desirous of going on (to college) — the ranch will assist them as long as they are pursuing their educations."

EVEN THOUGH THE GIRLS are no longer living at home, their families play an important role in their lives. "Their relationships with their families are something we do our very best to encourage, yet obviously, based on what problem may or may not exist in that family relationship, there may be great variance in the length and amount of family visits," Blythe said, adding that High Sky has no set policy that says when a girl may or may not visit her family. That decision is made on an individual basis.

"It's impossible to meet the needs of all the girls, and have a hard and fast rule about family contact," he said. "We're going to work with whatever family there is in order to maintain whatever family relationship they may have. We know there is no more important aspect of the girl's life. Her family and its conditon are probably THE most real things in the girl's life. Outside of the physical care, there is nothing more important for us than being able to understand and deal with what are the realities in her relationship with her family."

AFTER SERVING AS EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR of Foster Home for more than 12 years, Blythe chose to accept the position of director at High Sky.

"Probably the key thing that brought me to High Sky was the opportunity to participate in the continuing development of High Sky Girls Ranch because I believe the Permian Basin probably provides the best opportunity anywhere in the state of Texas to develop a first-class child care facility that can be flexible enough to meet a variety of existing needs, and to modify the program to meet changing needs as they develop," Blythe said. "Obviously the financial resources are here and this community has performed in the past with compassion and generosity and willingness to support needed services."

"High Sky Girls Ranch is the only facility of is kind in the immediate vicinity. It has a record of sevice for nearly 20 years, while at the same time it's embarking on an entire new era with the development of new cottages, planned construction of the library/learning center... By early 1983, High Sky Girls Ranch will have virtually doubled the facilities and almost doubled the number of girls in residential care," he said.

"The board is an excellent board. They have presented a challenge to me to build on the past of High Sky and to develop the program and facilities to where they are the equal of any facility in this state or country," Blythe said. "I believe High Sky can be one of the finest child care facilities in the country. I believe the community provides the resources and the board is commited to it — and these are the ingredients necessary for an administrator to have available to him to make that goal a reality."

Senior Center art show, sale

The Midland Senior Center's art show and in-center sale will be Aug. 13 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the center, 2500 Delano. Many art works created by senior citizens enrolled in the art classes at the center will be exhibited and will be for sale. Paintings to be included in the show are in various media such as oils, watercolors and acrylics. The volunteer art instructor for the city of Midland-sponsored facility is Mrs. Kenneth (LaVoe) Peeler.

In addition to the art works, stitchery items, ceramics, plants and baked goods will be available for purchase during the day. The volunteer stitchery instructor is Mrs. Bernice Hughey. Carolyn Wallace, city employee, coordinates the ceramics group.

A meal is served each day at 11:45 a.m. and reservations are necessary a day in advance for those who desire to have a noonday meal while shopping at the art show.

Residents of the city and surrounding areas are invited to come look, browse and buy.

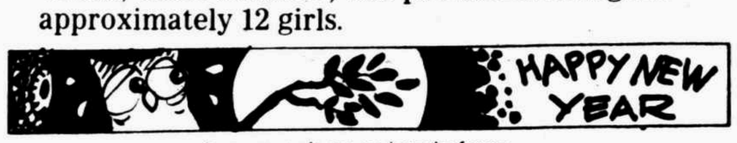

Crew suffers from fish poisoning

ATLANTA (AP) — Fourteen crew members on an Italian freighter apparently suffered ciguatera fish poisoning after eating part of a 25-pound barracuda caught from the ship, health officials said.

Nausea, vomiting and muscle weakness struck the 14 crew members who ate the fish in March, the national Centers for Disease Control said Thursday. Eleven were hospitalized in Florida. Seven required admission to intensive care units, but all recovered.

Ciguatera poisoning is associated with eating marine tropical reef fish, and the toxin is one of the most potent marine poisons, the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report. The toxin appears to build up in large predatory fish, such as barracuda, grouper and snapper, the CDC said.

One investigator recorded 280 poisonings from January 1978 to June 1980, the CDC said.

Some say owls can see into the future.

DEAR ABBY

Beach bums make waves

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday my husband and I were at the beach with our two daughters. We were just sitting there, minding our own business, when two couples parked themselves near us, using the filthiest language imaginable. They seemed to be deliberately hanging around, trying to provoke some kind of reaction from us.

My husband did not utter one word of reprimand, or let them know he objected to their gutter talk in the presence of me and our daughters. I was so humiliated I wanted to burst out crying and hitchhike home.

I lost some of my respect for my husband. This is not the first time he has sat there like a mouse instead of speaking up like a man. It's a good thing I didn't have a gun, or I'd be in jail right now.

Am I wrong to feel let down and disappointed? — DEPRESSED IN NEW ORLEANS

DEAR DEPRESSED: If these filthy-talking people were deliberately trying to provoke your husband into a fight, I think he was wise to have ignored them. Would you have "respected" your husband more if he had taken them on and been beaten (or worse) in the presence of your children? Furthermore, these days you never know who is "high" on what, or if a switchblade, gun or lead pipe will be used to help settle an argument. (P.S. You could have moved.)

DEAR ABBY: My husband is from a foreign country where it is acceptable to visit people in their homes uninvited and unannounced, even to stay overnight for an entire weekend. This is hard for me to deal with, as I am a private person and enjoy a calm, organized atmosphere in my home.

When one pair of my husband's relatives began coming frequently for weekends, I spoke with them frankly, telling them that they were welcome nearly any time but to please phone a couple of days ahead to make sure we had made no previous plans.

Well, all this did was to alienate them (temporarily) so that they did not visit for six months, after which they resumed their old pattern.

This is very irksome, not to mention inconvenient, when we've made other plans. My husband agrees that it's rather inconsiderate of them, but it doesn't seem to bother him as it does me. What should I do? — INVADED

DEAR INVADED: Speak "frankly" with the couple again and hope for another six months' respite. Do this twice a year and you'll have no problem.

I would like to know in which country (since the invention of the telephone) is it acceptable to drop in uninvited and unannounced for the weekend.

DEAR ABBY: "S.B. of Mountain View, Calif." writes that "If the good Lord had intended for us to go around naked, he would have created us that way."

Gee whiz! I thought he (she?) did. Course, that mean old serpent came along, so I suppose we will just have to leaf it that way. — L.E.B., MIDLAND, TEXAS

DEAR L.E.B.: I could quote from Genesis here, but perhaps I'd better leaf well enough alone.

Atrium featured in Parade of Homes entry

One of the most unique features of the Cal-Pine Construction entry into the 1982 Parade of Homes is the use of an atrium that seems to meander throughout the lving areas.

Builder David Pine, who is one among 30 builders in the second annual Midland Homebuilders Association parade, has placed skylights at stragetic areas to provide natural light for greenery in the designer atrium.

The entire parade, which runs Aug. 21-29 in the Wydewood addition, is located just west of the Midland Drive-Neely intersection, where Wydewood meets Neely. Tickets are $2 to tour all new homes, with the proceeds going to Christmas In April. Tickets will be available at the gate.

Vivid colors, plus two redwood decks, are among the extras in the Cal-Pine home. The living area features a glacier-rock fireplace and as apsenwood ceiling. A mirrored wall greets visitors in the entry-way.

Mirrored ceiling places emphasis on the lighting arrangement in Pine's formal dining area. The kitchen has an island working center for preparation of food, and space for a breakfast area. Colors of navy and burgandy provide a cheery atmosphere.

The master bedroom has a cedar wall for an accent in color. The master bathroom is spacious with a large dressing area and walk-in closets. A custom-built tub and shower are among extras.

The home contains a built-in vacuum cleaner system, an intercom system, and will be fully landscaped.

A detached garage adds finishing touches to Cal-Pine's entry, which is located at 2201 Wydewood.

Stolen cars: Dont' let yours be next!

By THOMAS R. BROOKS
(Special from Reader's Digest)

Every 28 seconds, somewhere in the United States, a car is stolen. That's 1.1 million vehicles a year. If your turn is next, chances are you will never get your car back. If you do, it possibly will have been stripped for parts. When Connecticut police showed a West Hartford owner his new Buick Riviera — minus fenders, hood, doors and wheels — he wept.

Back in the 1960s, when joy riders did most of the stealing, nearly 90 percent of the cars were quickly recovered. Today, with professionals running this $1.7-billion-a-year racket, roughly 496,000, or close to 45 percent, "disappear" for good. Most are gobbled up in "chop shops," where cars are cut into spare parts for a quick, high-yield profit. The front end brings $1500 to $2500 for economy cars, $5000 to $7000 for new luxury models. Doors are worth $50 to $500 each.

OFTEN CROOKS SIMPLY THROW the rest of the car away. Or they may leave it with a complaisant junkyard dealer who destroys traceable parts and then sells the rest of the body and frame for scrap.

Some 200,000 hot cars are shipped overseas each year. The best customers are Caribbean, Latin American and oil-rich nations. A new Ford LTD, retailing here for about $10,000, brings $20,000 in Mexico. A $26,000 Mercedes sells for over $100,000 in Algeria.

BUT IF STEALING CARS is no sweat, providing them with "paper" is a test of ingenuity. Every vehicle manufactured must have a vehicle identification number (VIN) — looking something like "IH57H5Z401067" — stamped on the engine or transmission. In addition, since 1969 a tag is usually affixed to the top left corner of the instrument panel cover. The VIN is the single most important clue in tracing a stolen car.

IN ALL, CAR THEFT COST us $4 billion in 1980, including the value of the cars stolen and the cost of trying to recover them. Yet the authorities — the FBI, state and local police — agree that auto thefts can be curbed. Here's what you as a car owner can do:

DON'T DEPEND on the VIN marks already in place. A good idea is to etch the VIN, or your own special "brand," in several hard-to-find spots, using an engraving pencil, or scratch it under the hood or trunk. Even dropping business cards into door interiors can help. One half-stripped auto was identified when the owner recalled that he had used a piece of a shoebox as a washer under the transmission plate.

WHEN LEAVING YOUR CAR, always remove your key from the ignition, close all windows and lock all doors. Unbelievably, nearly one in five autos stolen has been left either unlocked or with the keys in the ignition.

DO NOT LEAVE YOUR LICENSE or registration in the car. Always leave the auto's title at home. Thieves can use these documents to sell a car fraudulently.

KEEP PACKAGES AND VALUABLES out of sight. CB radios, tape decks, and other expensive items left in full view invite theft.

ALWAYS PARK YOUR CAR in a well-lighted area and avoid parking in the same place. Park with front wheels cut sharply to left or right, so the car is difficult to tow away.

USE SPECIAL LOCKS AND ALARMS. Many auto insurance companies give discounts on theft coverage if you install such anti-theft devices.

FINALLY, CURB YOUR GREED. The market for stolen goods now rivals legitimate business only because thousands of ordinary citizens are hungry for a bargain. Yet a terrific deal may mean it's crooked. If instinct tells you a car door is "hot," don't buy it.

DANDY LIONS

The Dandy Lions, auxiliary to Southside Lions Club, held the annual "Ladies' Night Out" recently at Cattleman's Restaurant. President Brenda Woodruff welcomed 12 members and introduced three guests: DeLynn Dudenhoeffer of Grand Field, Okla., Brandee Dunham of Abilene, and Ronna Overend.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF RETIRED PERSONS

The American Association of Retired Persons met recently in the Midland Senior Center. Jerry Lancaster with the Gospel Ragtime Band entertained with piano selections, playing many favorite old-time tunes.

GAMMA SIGMA CHATER, PSA

Carol Layman, executive director of Big Brothers/Big Sisters, made an appeal for volunteers to spend time with children who have only one parent, when she spoke to the Gamma Sigma Chapter of Phi Sigma Alpha recently. She stated that children must be at least six years old before they can apply for a big brother or sister, and can stay in the program until they are 17.

There are 70 children waiting for big brothers now. Volunteers must be at least 18 years old.

The meeting was in the home of Bess Baker. Guests were Hettie Currie and Dorothy Roberts.

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY

Mae Miller, past president of Unit 19, American Legion of Woods W. Lynch Pack 19, was installed as 16th district vice president in San Antonio at the Annual Department Convention. Mae is a member of the American Legion Auxiliary through her husband Carl Miller. She lives in Midkiff and works with the V.A. Hospital in Big Spring, bakes cakes for the veterans.

Shirley Ott of Midland has been elected American Legion Auxiliary Department President of the State of Texas.

The San Antonio Marriott Hotel was the Auxiliary headquarters hotel for the annual department convention.

Mrs. Ott has been a member of Woods W. Lynch Unit No. 19 of Midland since 1963. She has served two terms as unit president and one each as treasurer, secretary, chaplain, sergeant-at-arms, chairman of numerous committees and as executive advisory board member for six years. She served the 16th district as secretary for a term of two years and as 16th district president two years. She served the fourth division as sergeant-at-arms and as president one year.

She has achieved many other honors during her years in the Auxiliary.

Her eligibility in the Auxiliary is through her husband, Bud Ott, who served in the Coast Guard during World War II.

Mrs. Ott was employed 10 years with Shell Oil Co. and has been with Texaco, Inc., for 19 years as a lab technician in the Midland office.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF RETIRED FEDERAL EMPLOYEES

The National Association of Retired Federal Employees met recently for a dinner party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Walter, 703 Ainslee St. President J. Wayne Campbell held a short business meeting. Mailgrams were written to Congressman Kent Hance and Senators John Tower and Lloyd Bentsen.

New member was E. W. Clemens. Guests were Mr. and Mrs. S. W. McClure, Mrs. Laura Clemens.

The national convention will be held Oct. 16-21 at the Convention Center in Denver, Colo.

O. B. Russell gave a legislative report. A letter from Vice-President William Adams was read by President Wayne Campbell, concerning the national covention. Mrs. Susie Mae Davis was recognized as receiving a certificate and award of outstanding member and outstanding service as an officer.

The next meeting will be Aug. 25 at 2 p.m. at 2500 Delano.

Women in winemaking business

By DONNA LEE
Hearst Feature Service

Since women buy so much wine, Lolly Mitchell thinks it's only logical for them to work in winemaking.

Her husband, Jim, is the winemaker at their Sakonnet Vineyards in Little Compton, R.I., but Lolly works closely with him. "I'm the lady who holds the hose, helps with the crush, turns off the switch," she said. "I'd say my most valuable contribution is tasting when we plan the blends."

Lolly said a woman's taste in wine is somewhat different from a man's. "Women buy wine to serve with food," said Lolly. "They generally go for a wine that's a little softer."

LOLLY WAS A PUBLIC RELATIONS DIRECTOR and Jim was an international business consultant when they decided to escape city life and look for land suitable for growing fine wine grapes. They found an area near Narragansett Bay, where soil and climate closely match that of the Bordeaux region of France.

The Mitchells have produced some emimently drinkable wines since starting Sakonnet in 1974. Their wines took eight medals in the New England wine competition in 1981.

On the West Coast, Dawnine Sample supervises production of sparkling Chandon wine one of the best champagne-type wines in California. After a day at the winery, she sits down to dinner with her husband, an assistant winemaker for a competing winery. "We don't talk much about wine at dinner," she said.

SAMPLE ADMITTED THAT WINEMAKING is traditionally a male bastion. "However, the wine industry has grown so much in 10 years that there are a lot of young people in the business who are receptive to women. I don't even think there's prejudice among older winemakers."

She studied enology (winemaking) at the University of California, Santa Cruz, then worked for Zelma Long at Mondavi Vineyards before moving to Domaine Chandon, the California subsidiary of Moet-Hennessy, in 1976.

LONG STARTED AT MONDAVI VINEYARDS and is now winemaker and vice-president of Simi Vineyard in the Napa Valley and partner in the small privately-owned Long Vineyard. She trained as a dietitian, but then studied enology at the University of California at Davis, a leading school for winemakers.

"There are a dozen women in responsible positions in winemaking in California," said Long. "There were only five women in the program when I studied at Davis; probably 30 to 40 percent of the students now going into winemaking are women."

PERHAPS THE BEST-KNOWN "woman in wine" is Mary Cunningham, who joined Seagrams as head of its wine division after leaving the Bendix Corp. following rumors of romance with Bendix president James Agee, whom she subsequently married. Asked about Cunningham, Long said, "I'm sure her responsibility is strictly administrative. She doesn't have the technical background to do what I'm doing."

WHAT LONG IS DOING is taking total responsibility for Simi's winemaking. "I follow the grapes," explained Long. She goes into the vineyards, decides what to buy, when the grapes should come to the wineries and how to make the wines. She left Mondavi to join Simi in 1979 because it offered more challenge, she said.

After a visit to Moet and Chandon in France in mid-1980, Sample assumed winemaking responsibility for the sparkling Chandon wines made in California by bottle-fermenting in the champagne manner. She was recently made a vice-president.

THE WINE SHE MAKES isn't called champagne because that's a name properly reserved for sparkling wine made in the Champagne region of France. The method is the same, however. Grapes are made into still wine, then a blend of such wine is bottled with active yeast so that a second fermentation takes place inside the bottle. Carbon dioxide is trapped in the bottle, producing the effervescence of sparkling wine. The sparkling wine is aged, then sediment is removed and the wine is again sealed.

Such work demands time as well as talent. Long works 16 hours a day, six days a week during harvest. Sample works 14 hours a day, seven days a week at harvest.

Blackmon to speak

Kathy Blackmon, owner of Career Path, Inc., a local personnel consulting firm, will be guest speaker at the August meeting of Professional Secretaries International, to be held in the Trellis Room of the Hilton Hotel at 12 noon on Aug. 10.

Mrs. Blackmon, who was employed in the secretarial-administration field for 14 years, formed her own corporation in 1980. She currently serves the Texas Association of Personnel Consultants as second vice-president and certification chairman, and the National Association as a member of the membership and blue ribbon committees. She has served the State Association as director, membership chairman and recording secretary. She is a charter member and past director of the Permian Basin Associaton of Personnel Consultants; is a time management specialist and a member of both the Uptown Chapter Business and Professional Women and Xi Pi Kappa chapter of Beta Sigma Phi.

Patent on gene-splicing technique 'delayed'

By THOMAS MURPHY
AP Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A patent that would give two universities control over products developed through a gene-splicing technique has been delayed by the U.S. Patent Office.

The licensing fees from such products could be worth millions of dollars to Stanford University and the University of California, both pioneers in the genetic engineering process.

The two institutions learned Wednesday that the government is seeking clarifications in their patent application.

But none of the questions raised by the Patent Office poses an "insurmountable" problem, and the universities expect the application to be approved, said Stanford spokesman Mike Goodkind.

THE UNIVERSITIES already hold a patent on the cloning process, and the patent at issue would cover the genetic materials known as transformants that are developed through gene-splicing, he said.

Different transformants can produce a variety of compounds that previously were available only through natural processes.

Patenting the transformants essentially would give the universities control over all products resulting from them, Goodkind said. But he added it would be "naive" to assume that other researchers wouldn't soon come up with another means of achieving the same results.

SINCE THE FIRST PATENT was issued in 1980, the universities have collected $1.4 million by licensing 73 private companies to use the technique. The cost of an individual license is $10,000 initially and $10,000 per year.

Several licensees, which include Genentech, Cetus Corp., Bristol Myers, Dupont and Eli Lilly, plan later this year to market products made through gene-splicing.

Among those are human insulin, a growth hormone that might help the victims of dwarfism and a vaccine for a disease affecting swine.

Goodkind could not estimate how much revenue the universities might receive from licensing the original patent or the transformants created under it. Some say it could exceed $100 million.

"The potential is beyond belief if you start extrapolating down the line," he said.

GOODKING AND NIELS REIMERS, Stanford's director of technical licensing, both believe the Patent Office will approve the second patent after the universities clarify some points of the application.

"In its action this week, the Patent Office raises several questions which must be addressed before the patent can be issued," Reimers said. "But none of the issues seem to be insurmountable problems."

The first obstacle, he said, was a question of whether or not the patent application was detailed enough to permit other researchers to use the genetic engineering techniques described. But Reimers said the process outlined in the application already has been shown to work in laboratories around the world.

A second issue arose when the Patent Office noted some of the processes already occur naturally. But scientists believe the naturally occurring processes happen too infrequently to be useful in commercial gene cloning, Reimers said.

THE PATENT OFFICE also noted a visiting professor involved in the original gene-cloning research — Robert B. Helling — has declined to sign a disclaimer of inventorship. Stanford's patent attorney, Bert Rowland, has asked for more information about Helling's role in the research project.

Stanford says the process was invented by Stanley N. Cohen, a professor of genetics at Stanford, and Herbert W. Boyer, a professor of biochemistry at the University of California at San Francisco.

Warning issued on enema procedures

By FRED BAYLES
AP Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Medical investigators who traced six deaths to a contaminated enema machine at a Colorado clinic have issued a warning about a procedure used by some advocates of "natural" medicine.

Doctors reporting in today's edition of the New England Journal of Medicine say "colonic irrigation" — a type of enema administered by machine — should be better regulated and licensed.

Dr. Gregory Istre, an epidemiologist with the national Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, said the six deaths were linked to a chiropractic clinic in Montrose, Colo., where investigators said a colonic irrigation machine spread at least 36 cases of amebiasis, a dysentery infection of the colon.

The infection, caused by parasitic, one-celled animals, was so severe that 10 patients had to have part of their colons removed. Six died, the journal said.

"This outbreak may have been part of a more widespread problem of infections spread by colonic irrigation in the United States, and more aggressive action to license, limit, control or prohibit its use should be considered," said the article by Istre and other health officials from Colorado and the CDC.

In colonic irrigation, a tube is placed in the patient's rectum and water is pumped into the colon. The water is drained through another tube and the procedure repeated.

"It's like having multiple enemas given in rapid succession," Istre said. "In this case the hose and rubber tubing became contaminated."

Istre said investigators theorized the contamination came from a patient with amebiasis and was spread to the other.

There was evidence that a few people contracted the disease as early as 1975, Istre said, and health department officials detected a high rate of the disease involving the clinic in 1980. The clinic halted the procedure when the problem was discovered, and it closed a short time later, Istre said.

Colonic irrigation, a common medical practice in the 19th century, is sometimes used to treat constipation, diarrhea, headache and fatigue. It recently has gained favor among some people who believe it eliminates poisons and allows the body to better absorb trace metals through the intestine.

Disability coverage insurance has gained prominence as a personal acquisition or a part of an employee benefit package represented by the employer. This protection offers security to the worker as well as their families should they become unable to be gainfully employed. Insurance is protection for tomorrow. Call the POWELL INSURANCE AGENCY, 601 N. Marienfeld, today so that we can help you have a more secure tomorrow. Due to our independent status, we can tailor an insurance program to your specific needs. At POWELL INSURANCE AGENCY service to the client is our first consideration. Tel. 686-2001. Most of us recognize that one of our most important assets is our ability to work. This underscores the equal importance of disability insurance which pays us when we cannot work because of illness or injury. Consider that a 35-year old who earns $30,000 per year can expect to enjoy 30 more years in the work force. Without ever getting another raise, earnings would total $900,000. However, at age 35, the chances of suffering serious disability before age 65 are one in three. For this reason, 84 million people have some form of disability coverage. Are you among them?

Design for Today

More and more people are choosing wallpaper over paint for a wall covering. Although wallpaper may cost more initially, there are some long-term advantages with its use. Wallpaper stands up to abuse, can camouflage irregularities and create a mood in a way that paint cannot. Dark colors close a room in a warm embrace while light colors open the room. Irregularities can be concealed with small, non-directional patterns. Do not hesitate to extend wallpaper to encompass the ceiling. It can provide a solid, overall effect, especially in bathrooms and kitchens.

More and more people are coming to BEVERLY HILLS INTERIORS INC., No3 Oakridge Square, 686-9607 because of the unique design service provided by our staff. We can restore a townhouse or home, redesigning it both inside and out for a magnificent office. Make your dreams become a reality...With BEVERLY HILLS INTERIORS INC. all things are possible.

DECORATING TIP:
Consider using the same wallpaper design, but in reverse colors, to coordinate rooms.

AT WIT'S END

Making your home secure

By ERMA BOMBECK

If it doesn't bother Queen Elizabeth, it should.

A drifter whipped in and out of her bedroom at Buckingham Palace with less flap than it takes to get inside a Loehmann's fitting room.

What's more, he had visited a dozen times or more where he simply drank wine and talked.

I read where workmen spent the weekend stringing strands of barbed wire atop the iron spikes. I can only assume that up until that time the Royal Palace was made secure by a revolving door.

If I sound like an authority, it is because I live in a nation where, during the past ten years, the No. 1 industry has become "Security."

It's a country of alarms and buzzers, beeps and dead bolts, guards and X-rays, sirens and electronics.

It's a nation where Elton John dresses up as a policeman to get to his own concert, jewelry stores are patrolled by tarantulas and cobras, gas tanks are locked and libraries have an alarm system by the door.

It's where airlines give your pair of needlepoint scissors to the captain to ride in the cockpit, but give everyone on the plane a steak knife.

It's where a sensitive alarm system went off in a school one night and six police cruisers appeared within three minutes to discover a rat was trying to get out of the cafeteria.

Maybe Great Britain just isn't paranoid yet about security. If we had a Queen (and some say we do) there would be a bulletproof glass bubble over her horse and newscasters would remind everyone, "It's 11 o'clock, do you know where your Queen is?"

Of course, God only knows what she carries in that handbag. It's big enough for five grenades, a rifle and six ground missiles.

It's none of my business, but I've learned a few things living in this country that it might behoove the Queen to try.

Lock the front door at night. Sometimes when people try the front door and it's locked, it discourages them.

Tell unannounced visitors to your bedroom you're married and your husband is a prince, but doesn't like strangers.

Buy a dog.

Which reminds me, it was also reported that last summer a man who said he was in love with Princess Anne was found wandering around the grounds.

He was found to be mentally disturbed and went unpunished.

What Joan Rivers will do with that line, I don't want to know.

Former boxing champ born-again preacher

Former boxing champ George Foreman says he quit the ring when he "saw blood on my hands and feet where He had been crucified." Now he's a born-again Christian preacher.

By MIKE TOLSON
Hearst Feature Service

HOUSTON — With a street-bred killer instinct and a right hand as powerful as the kick of a mule, George Foreman streaked across the American boxing scene like a comet: Olympic titlist, promising pro, top contender and world champion.

Then one night in Puerto Rico he saw Jesus.

"I got off the dressing room table," Foreman later recalled, "and saw blood on my hands and feet where He had been crucified and blood coming down my face. I started screaming things like, 'Hallelujah, Jesus, I've been born again.'

"Then I began speaking in tongues. All the scriptures started to come alive in my head — the Bible, a book that I could never understand. I told everybody about it in the dressing room. They were so overwhelmed that they took me to the hospital. They thought I had lost my mind."

WHAT HE HAD LOST, though nobody knew it at the time, was the desire to fight. The most punishing heavyweight of modern times sought never to throw another punch.

Some people preferred a medical explanation, like brain protrusion for Foreman's hysterics. It doesn't matter much now. Standing in front of his tiny church in northeast Houston, the 33-year-old Foreman is as committed to spreading The Word as he was in the moments following his spectacular conversion.

THE CHURCH OF LORD JESUS CHRIST sits on a treeless lot from which the kind of pockmarked street that's a Houston trademark. It's just an unfinished metal building that will house the church's sanctuary and Sunday school classes. Until it's completed, worshipers [illegible] windows and leaking roof to hear the gospel according to George.

Sitting on a folding chair in the makeshift sanctuary, the 6-foot-4 Foreman, resting on an ever-expanding stomach, Foreman expressed it simply.

"All I want to do is get this message across. To [illegible] and others like yourself, and that Jesus is the son of God and died for you."

THE MONEY — OR MOST OF IT — is gone. The Rolls is [illegible] traded for a blue Chevy pickup with a camper top. The women have headed for greener pastures. Foreman is balding and 60 pounds over his fighting weight of 220.

In the manner of most converts, Foreman was [illegible] from San Juan. Ralph Cooper, an old friend who's now sports director [illegible] radio station, remembers being uncomfortable around him.

"He always seemed sincere, but what bothered me was that he was [illegible] obsessed with it. Every other word he said was a quote from the Bible," Cooper said.

Foreman's dedication or obsession took [illegible] title to Muhammad Ali in 1974 and he eventually [illegible] He joined the First Church of Lord Jesus Christ in 1976 [illegible] pay for repairs and expansion to the church, and he [illegible] dred new members.

FOREMAN HAD SLIPPED from public view, but stories [illegible] ings in and around the city boosted his profile. It took [illegible] he was arrested with Rev. L.R. Masters and an assistant minister in January 1980 for conducting a meeting in the parking lot of a [illegible] ety grew.

"Ain't that something," Foreman said after being [illegible] and fined a token $1. "I had a good reputation as a boxer, then I [illegible] and I go down as a criminal. I was America's apple pie and [illegible] was a criminal."

The best thing about Foreman's adolescence in Houston was that he survived it. The fifth of seven children born to a railroad construction worker, he found his escape route on a pool hall television set in 1965 when Johnny Unitas gave a plug for the Job Corps. Foreman thought, why not? Accepted, he was sent to the Fort Vannoy Conservation Center in Oregon.

His belligerent behavior there earned him few friends. The director of the center told Foreman to take out his aggressioon in the ring or take a hike. Under the slightly amazed eye of boxing veteran Charles "Doc" Broadus, Foreman suddenly found his niche.

THE ATHLETIC TRAINING, hitting and getting hit with a purpose was an immediate tonic. Within two years he was the Golden Gloves and Amateur Athletic Union heavyweight champion. The latter title assured him a spot on the 1968 Olympic team.

If ever a man seized a moment, it was Foreman in Mexico City. Middle America had watched in disgust as sprinters Tommie Smith and John Carlos thrust their black-gloved fists skyward in protest of the condition of the nation's blacks. A few days later, after Foreman separated Russian Jones Chepulis from his senses for the gold medal, he pranced around the ring waving a tiny American flag. Hollywood couldn't have staged it better.

FOREMAN REPEATEDLY SAID his demonstration was spontaneous and in no way a response to the raised fists. The soft-spoken 20-year-old, the rage of his youth now under control, came home a hero and a patriot.

The next step, of course, was the professional ranks. Starting with the usual stiffs, Forman gradually punched his way into contending status. By the time he fought Joe Frazier for the title in 1973, he was 37-0 with 34 knockouts. Frazier lasted little more than a round. The bout was stopped to keep Smokin' Joe from getting killed.

Foreman made only two title defenses, against Joe Roman and Ken Norton. He knocked them both out. He was invincible.

THE PARTY MIGHT HAVE gone on forever, had Ali not repeatedly peppered a befuddled Foreman into submission after eight rounds. It was a fight that secured Ali a shelf in boxing history and raised the first real doubt about Foreman.

Ali absorbed the punishment and allowed Foreman to punch himself into exhaustion. A quick left-right combination in the eighth put Foreman on his butt and ended it. The loss was an embarrassment to Foreman. He had looked like a different boxer — slow, crude, weary.

The inevitable comeback saw Foreman with a new manager, but the result was the same. Even after five straight early-round knockouts, his concentration was not what it had been. He was not as vicious in the ring.

Foreman had wanted another shot at Ali, but the defeat and the emotions that followed stirred those plans. He didn't see Ali until several years later when he was preaching on a Houston street corner.

WILL GEORGE FOREMAN ever find peace and happiness? His second [illegible] has always promised he will, but the last five years have had their twists and turns. There were two divorces, he recently married for the fourth time, [illegible] aborted second comeback and a nasty breakup with Rev. Masters and the First Church of Lord Jesus Christ.

Foreman said Masters and the church leaders took him for a ride. He [illegible] the church about $800,000, most of which has not been repaid. He filed suit in March to recover the sum.

"I took up with people I trusted, and they thought it was their chance to do something big," Foreman said. "It bothered me."

To get it rapidly. One Sunday during the sermon of assistant minister David Morriss, Foreman and a friend charged into the church, unplugged some music equipment and began their own sermon. He warned the stunned assembly of spiritual corruption.

"I didn't think he was preaching the word as he should and that's why I went there," Foreman said at the time. "I had to do it because of the scripture [illegible] 'Make not my Father's house a house of merchandisers.'"

FOREMAN LATER CHARGED Morriss with assault for an altercation near the pulpit. The charge was dismissed. Rev. Masters labeled Foreman's complaints "all a lie" and said Foreman wanted publicity and to take over the church.

Thus came the former champion to 2501 Lone Oak Road. It is his church, far from the 2,000-member tabernacle he envisioned several years ago, but still his own. He claims only 12 regular members.

"I don't have no goals about numbers. My big ideas have died: I'm just trying to maintain the small ideas. I've been here on some nights and there were just two of us. I appreciate that person's seriousness as much as a full church."

As for boxing, he has only minimal interest. He doesn't watch the fights, doesn't own a TV. Newspapers are his only link to the sports world. Few of his former friends and associates have kept in touch.

"When I took up religion, they dropped me," said Foreman. "They made it clear boxing was the only reason for their association with me."

PERIODIC CALLS did come from promoters and managers eager to sign him. In 1978, he announced a second comeback as a "Christian fighter," which would offer a bigger podium for his evangelism. The comeback died without one fight, mainly because Foreman lost enthusiasm. He no longer had the killer instinct.

FOREMAN EXPECTS to be a "simple preacher" all his life, though where he'll preach is uncertain. He will stay in Houston as long as he thinks it necessary, perhaps two more years.

He said his next destination is Longview, Texas — he had a dream that told him to go there.

Drugs for mild hypertension questioned

BOSTON (AP) — A veterans hospital specialist cautions against the drug therapy for patients with mild high blood pressure because the practice could cost $20 billion a year and do more harm than good.

Dr. Edward D. Freis of the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Washington urged caution in expanding treatment for high blood pressure in a report in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

"In view of the uncertainties, we may be doing more harm than good by giving life-long drug treatment to patients with borderline or mild hypertension," Freis wrote.

Recently, some experts have recommended treatment for people with mild or borderline cases of high blood pressure who have generally not been treated in the past. This would mean new drug therapy for an additional 40 million Americans, or one-fifth of the population.

In a report to Congress, Edward N. Brandt Jr., the assistant secretary for health, said a major survey says treatment could prolong life in both mild and borderline cases of the disease which doctors call hypertension.

Freis noted the drugs are expensive and may carry unpleasant or even toxic side effects. He said studies cited by proponents do not provide clear-cut evidence that people with mild hypertension live longer if they get drugs.

He recommended that many people with high blood pressure can be treated with diets that cut down their salt consumption and help them lose weight. People with other risk factors for heart disease, such as cigarette smokers, could be started on the mildest hypertension medicines, called diuretics. All people with elevated blood pressure should be checked regularly to make sure their disease is not getting worse.

Impressive [illegible] set off at one section of this bedroom through use of a striped wall covering with walls and [illegible] more contrast.

Left, a 'Zouave' pitcher, which is quite valuable if authentic. Right, a rosewood sofa. The six legs are a desirable feature.

Valuable 'Zouave' pitcher possesses colorful history

By JAMES G. McCOLLAM
Member, Antique Appraisers Association of America
Copley News Service

Dear Mr. McCollam: As near as I can determine, this "Ellsworth" pitcher was modeled by Josiah Jones and produced by Millington, Astbury and Poulson, Trenton, N.J.

It is my hope that you can give me some idea of its value and authenticity. — W.F.F., Ocala, Fla.

Dear W.F.F.: This is also called the "Zouave" pitcher.

During the Civil War when the Union Forces seized Alexandria, Va., in May 1861, Col. Ellsworth of the New York Zouaves cut down the Confederate flag on top of the Marshall House. As he descended the stairs, the proprietor of the hotel, James Jackson, shot Ellsworth dead. Jackson was then shot down by Corp. Brownell. This pitcher was made in commemoration of this historic event.

I find no recent record of a sale of this pitcher, but I can assure you that it is quite valuable if authentic. To the best of my knowledge, the original pitcher bore the potter's mark as shown. Also the handle was different than yours and there was cross-hatching around the base.

If any readers know of a recent sale of one of these pitchers, I would appreciate hearing from them.

Dear Mr. McCollam: This sofa is hand-carved rosewood and has six legs. When was it made and what could I sell it for? Are the six legs unusual?

W.E.R., Grundy Center, Iowa

Dear W.E.R.: This would be classified as Victorian Louis XV Revival and was made in the third quarter of the 19th century. The six legs are desirable and rosewood makes it more valuable than walnut.

It would sell retail for about $1,000 to $1,200. However a dealer would only pay about half the retail price.

Cherry Boone O'Neill tells of battle with anorexia

By BARBARA HUSTON

SEATTLE (AP) — In the serenity of her sophisticated suburban living room outside Bothell, not far from Seattle, beautiful Cherry Boone O'Neill, 28, is playing with her beautiful baby, Brittany, 10 months old.

Framed album covers on the wall are the only sign that she is Pat Boone's daughter, the one who nearly starved in a land of plenty.

"I'm one of the all too few who recover from anorexia nervosa," she says softly.

THE BIZARRE DISEASE of dieters kills almost 20 percent of its estimated 1 million victims today, Mrs. O'Neill says. Only a third of the survivors recover completely, like Cherry, who can now eat normally.

She spent the month of June in her living room frantically scribbling the last chapters of her book about involuntary starvation that doctors now call "a sophisticated form of suicide."

"Starving for Attention" is due out in November from Continuum. Some of the illustrations show her at the depth of her disease, thinner than a Dachau survivor and unable to keep food in her body. There's no resemblance to today's glowing young matron in the sprigged lavender dress giving a bottle to her alert daughter in lavender rompers.

"We decided to go public with her story," her husband of seven years, Dan O'Neill, says, "because frantic people are always calling us just beside themselves about anorexia."

WHEN CHERRY AND DAN were married in 1975 the bride was 21 and her teen-age anorexia was in remission. She was touring with the Boone family act at her parents' request, settling into marriage and aiming at perfection that always danced just outside her grasp.

One night the sense of chronic failure became too much. She took 60 laxative pills and the lethal teen-age battle was on again.

"Overnight I became someone who looked like a cadaver, the skin stretched tight over my bones. Dan said I wasn't the same person."

THE PAT BOONE FAMILY is known for its Christianity and always met for family prayer when at home in Beverly Hills. Dan O'Neill was a committed Christian, too. But prayer could not save Cherry from her obsession to binge and vomit or binge and abuse laxatives.

"When I had first discovered I could make myself thin, instead of fat, at the age of 16, I felt I had found the one thing in my life I could control when everything I couldn't control overwhelmed me," she says. "But this 'friend' finally turned on me. Anorexia is a lot like alcoholism, I think, a kind of slow suicide."

CHERRY SOON LAY NEAR DEATH at 80 pounds — still feeling fat — in a Los Angeles hospital where no one understood anorexia. She could eat but she would throw up and no one could prevent that. At this point O'Neill, a Seattle area native, intervened to bring her north to Seattle psychiatrist Raymond Vath, who was acquainted with anorexia and believed in family therapy.

"Dan had to see he couldn't perpetuate Daddy's authoritarian approach," Mrs. O'Neill says. "He couldn't order me to eat. He had to love me enough to let me live my own life, even if I was going to kill myself. And I had to see I was trying to die before I could make the decision to live."

As the eldest of four Boone daughters, Cherry had been on stage with her father since the age of 5. She and her sisters led a life in which nothing was left to chance in Pat and Shirley Boone's desire to keep the family in the limelight but out of the harm that Hollywood can do, their daughter says now.

SHE WENT ON HER FIRST DIET at 16 because she weighed 140 pounds and that was intolerable in an on-stage cluster of beautiful daughters.

Praised for her success, she couldn't stop practicing the first thing she'd ever discovered that she could control for herself. But at 92 pounds her parents intervened, sending her to a doctor who ordered her to gain weight or go to a hospital.

Now in her recovery, food is no longer an issue, she says. After the psychiatric treatment the O'Neills worked two years in Hawaii for Youth with a Mission, a Christian group. They came to Seattle in early 1980, where Dan runs a worldwide ecumenical Save the Refugees Fund network for the helpless victims of war in other nations.

Harmonic has resident composer

NEW YORK (AP)—The Los Angeles Philharmonic has been selected for the Meet the Composer—Orchestra Residencies program, starting in the fall.

It joins five previously announced orchestras in the program.

The orchestra has chosen William Kraft as its resident composer. Kraft is a former percussionist with the Los Angeles Philharmonic. He has written nearly 100 compositions.

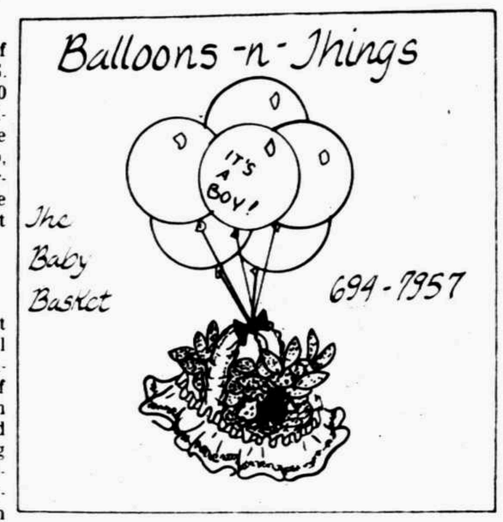

He will create at least one major work to be premiered and recorded by the Los Angeles Philharmonic.

Insects damage

Chemical control of insects that attack U.S. crops requires over 650 million pounds of pesticides a year, costing more than $2 billion. Even so, it's estimated that 13 percent of these crops are lost annually to insect damage.

Canola second

Canada's second most important agricultural export is canola, an oilseed with end products of edible oil and protein meal. Canola, developed from rapeseed, is giving its closest oilseed competitor, soybeans, considerable competition in both quality and cost. Canola exports in 1980 totaled $37.44 million.

Office closing, staff reducing trend continues

By LESLIE HAINES
Energy-Business Writer

The trend of some oil and gas companies with regional or division offices in Midland to reduce staff here or close the office entirely is continuing, according to industry sources.

Post Petroleum Company Inc., of Oklahoma City, is just one example of a growing list of companies involved in belt-tightening through staff lay-offs. The firm closed its small Midland office this past week.

Many companies are cutting their staffs by just one or two people at a time, according to Ed Miller, local manager of the Texas Employment Commission office.

Some operations are reducing their staffs to a handful of employees by offering transfers back to the home office in Houston, Dallas or Denver, instead of laying them off outright, he added.

The newly-unemployed geologist or landman doesn't appear at the TEC office, however, unless he has decided to turn down the transfer and remain in Midland, Miller said.

A few people with Mesa Petroleum's division office in Midland will be transferred to Amarillo headquarters as part of that company's plan to form a new onshore operations division, said Al V. Cecil, manager of communications for the Amarillo company.

"There will be fewer people in Midland, but not significantly. It's not a reduction in staff," Cecil said. "We are pulling in maybe 20 to 25 people from division offices all over the country to form the new onshore operations division. It's just a re-organization.

"Our Permian Basin division will certainly continue on in Midland and all Permian Basin exploration will continue out of that office."

A week ago Wednesday, Davis Oil, headquartered in Denver, let 14 Midland employees go, including five geologists, in what one employee said was a move that came as a total surprise.

The lay-offs left one landman and a production foreman to continue Davis' operations in the Permian Basin.

The landman, Doug Rowan, emphasized the company still is and will be active here; in fact, probably more aggressively so. "I was putting together prospects when this happened, and I still am. We are still actively leasing acreage and looking to buy prospects. We have not shut down our operations."

Davis was scheduled to spud a new development well in Concho County this past week, and is currently drilling two wildcats in the Permian Basin also.

"There is no money crunch," Rowan said, explaining that the move was made to increase general efficiency and reduce overhead. The Midland division had leased 10,000 square feet of office space, but half that space had been vacant, he explained.

The Midland division office has now been absorbed into the New Orleans division office, where much of the paperwork will be processed, giving him more time to work on prospects, Rowan said.

Davis Oil is not in any danger of going under, as has been rumored, Rowan emphasized. In 1981, the company drilled more wildcats than any other energy company, major or independent, he added.

Rowan said he is aggressively looking for more prospects.

Earlier this year, in May, Templeton Energy Inc. of Houston reduced its office staff in Midland from 11 full time people and a consultant to two full time and two part-time employees, said a spokesman in the Houston office.

There are no plans to bring the staff back up to level it enjoyed in May, he added.

In the last few months, Templeton has also reduced its staff in Pittsburg, Pa., and at the Denver and Houston offices.

Drilling contractors have been among the most unfortunate companies as far as lay-offs are concerned, yet often, the situation is only temporary. When a rig is stacked, lay-offs occur, but if the rig goes back up a week or two later, the hands are called back to work, said one spokesman.

Delta Drilling, based in Tyler, Texas, has experienced a 17 percent reduction in laborers company-wide, said a spokesman. The West Texas division, based in Midland, has been a bit luckier than most, reporting only a 15 percent lay-off rate, he said.

At the same time, Delta is currently trying to expand its exploration and production activity, he said.

Even if no lay-offs occur, there are companies which have altered their priorities or budgets for 1982. Enserch has experienced no reduction in staff and no changes in its budget, company-wide, said W. F. Files, area exploration manager in the Midland office. "So far, that's the case, but we have had some shift in drilling priorities," he said. "We have delayed some wildcats and are continuing with development wells."

Consolidated elects new president, leaving Midland

(SWN) — Consolidated Petroleum Industries Inc., Midland, has announced that Michael M. Fowler was elected President, Chief Executive and Chief Financial Officer and Director of the company at a board meeting held this week. Jack W. Young was elected Chairman of the Board, and D. Truitt Davis resigned as a Director to pursue his personal businesses. Jay Allen Chaffee was elected Secretary of the company and will continue his position as Corporate Counsel.

The company's executive offices will be relocated to Houston from Midland, Texas, but certain subsidiary operations will remain in Midland.

These management changes and other restructuring have been made in light of the company's current, financial circumstances and industry conditions which have materially adversely affected the company.

The company also gave a brief status report on certain of the company's affairs. The company indicated that, as a result of the continued decline in onshore drilling activity, it continues efforts to substantially reduce its involvement and commitments in the oil field services sector. At present, the company has five subsidiaries participating in various aspects of the service business, Tierra Drilling Corporation, Technical Fluids, Inc., Consolidated Pumping Services, Inc., Dunnam Tool & Supply, Inc. and CPI Wireline, Inc. The operations of the companies in this business segment will be reduced, eliminated or sold as management of the company believes advisable.

The company indicated its contract drilling subsidiary, which has experienced virtually a complete absence of market demand in its drilling rig activities, is currently in default as to certain payments due under certain of its loan agreements. To date, no lenders have taken action to attempt to obtain payments and negotiations are under way with such lenders to seek relief on such payment obligations and to otherwise restructure the arrange-ments to take into account the company's current operating results and present configuration. No predictions can be made at present as to the outcome of such negotiations.

Certain subsidiaries of the company are also in default of certain other technical requirements under various lending agreements and financing arrangements. The company, which is primarily a holding company, has guaranteed the debt of most of its subsidiaries.

In addition to its own financial negotiations, the company is also negotiating with various lenders with respect to certain drilling rig limited partnerships as to which a subsidiary of the company is general partner. The entities involved in such negotiations are Falcon 80-1, Ltd. and Falcon 80-2 Ltd., which have also been adversely affected by the severe problems in the energy segment of the economy as well as the current recession generally, and their rigs which have not been working in recent months.

The company noted that the above and other new measures were being taken as part of a survival plan for the company which has been directed at reducing the number of employees, eliminating unprofitable operations and otherwise cutting overhead and other expenses to the extent possible.

The company noted the Board's expression of confidence in Fowler to lead the company through the difficult situation facing it.

Fowler has been Executive Vice President of the company since March 4 of this year and has served as President of the company's refining subsidiary since 1980.

Steel, electronics workers will be losing their jobs

By LORRAINE CICHOWSKI
AP Business Writer

Republic Steel Corp. says 700 workers will lose their jobs when it shuts down bar mill operations in Cleveland, and another 1,000 employees are being laid off by National Semiconductor Corp. as the nation's unemployment rate keeps climbing.

Republic Steel said Friday it was shutting down the bar mill indefinitely at the Cleveland plant "in view of a severely depressed market for bar products."

A company spokesman said the action will enable Republic to use production facilities in Canton, Ohio, and Chicago more efficiently.

The steel industry has been operating at less than half capacity, and thousands of steel workers are laid off.

National Semiconductor, in Santa Clara, Calif., says its layoffs will affect mostly white-collar workers, about 10 percent of its U.S. work force. The affected workers are from facilities in Salt Lake City, Danbury, Conn., San Diego, and Hawthorne, Calif.

The diversified electronic parts and data processing manufacturer has been hurt by a severe price recession, which also led to the dismissal of 4,000 employees this year at Texas Instruments Inc., the world's largest semiconductor maker.

Earlier Friday, the Labor Department said the nation's unemployment rate soared to 9.8 percent in July, a postward record. It said the seasonally adjusted rate jumped 0.3 percent last month after only slight rises in national joblessness in preceding months.

In other economic news:

—The Department of Housing and Urban Development said it was lowering its interest-rate ceiling on federally backed single-family home loans by a half percentage point to 15 percent. The lower ceiling applies to loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration.

—The nation's money supply — the M1 measure of cash in circulation and deposits in checking-type accounts — rose $900 million in the week ended July 28, to a seasonally adjusted $451.4 billion. The change had little effect on interest rates because growth of the money supply still is within Federal Reserve Board targets.

RRC reports May crude oil production up

AUSTIN — Texas crude oil production totaled 74,259,586 barrels in May according to the Railroad Commission.

The figure compares with reported April production totaling 72,854,773 barrels and May 1981 production of 76,662,263 barrels.

Texas oil production averaged 2,395,470 barrels daily in May, down from 2,428,492 barrels daily in April and down from 2,472,976 barrels daily in May 1981.

The May allowable totaled 95,864,343 barrels.

The preliminary May summary indicated Texas oil production was 22.54 percent under the allowable for the month.

Through the first five months of this year, Texas has produced 363,895,996 barrels of oil.

State leases in bays, inlets and the Gulf of Mexico produced 82,981 barrels of crude oil during May 1982, in contrast to 89,566 barrels in the same month of 1981 and 76,898 barrels in April 1982. Through the first five months of this year, state leases produced 387,383 barrels of crude oil offshore.

Gas well gas production from state leases amounted to 17,218,935 Mcf in May against 20,723,276 Mcf a year earlier and 16,650,773 Mcf in April of this year. Total gas well gas production offshore from state leases was 86,609,717 Mcf through May.

Casinghead gas production totaled 219,432 Mcf in May against 236,372 Mcf in the same month of 1981 and 217,981 Mcf in April. That makes 1,120,784 Mcf through the first five months of 1982.

Condensate production from state leases amounted to 44,235 barrels in May, down from 71,725 barrels a year earlier and down from 46,897 barrels in April. Through May, state offshore leases produced 248,251 barrels of condensate.

Grad Center teaches rock sorting, paper shuffling

The Permian Basin Graduate Center announces two courses to be held at the PBGC Building, 105 W. Illinois, Midland.

"Depositional Environments and Reservoir Morphologies of Channel Sandstones in the Permian Basin" Tuesday, August 17, from 1-5 p.m. Dr. Richard R. Bloomer, Independent Geologist, R. R. Bloomer & Associates, Geologists, Abilene, will instruct. The course will show how channel-sandstone depositional systems can be reorganized and mapped in the subsurface and how they trap oil and gas. Registration fee is $100.

"Royalties and Division Orders," Thursday and Friday, August 19 and 20, from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Dr. George W. Hardy, III, Attorney, Broadhurst, Brooks, Mangham, Hardy and Reed, Lafayette, Louisiana, will instruct. It is a two-day course designed to give oil and gas personnel a knowledge of the legal principles and problems related to the administration of lease Royalty Clauses and Division orders. It is intended to be of value to both new and experiencde personnel. Registration fee is $260.

Magazines vs newspaper

NEW YORK (AP) — Time Inc. filed suit in federal court Thursday seeking to bar the Gannett Co. from using sections entitled "Life" and "Money" in its new national newspaper, USA Today.

Time publishes Life and Money magazines. It charged the newspaper group with trademark infringement and unfair competition in connection with use of "colorable imitations" of its Life and Money titles in prototype editions of USA Today, which has not yet begun full operation.

Education—Our Money's Worth?

In my travels over Texas, it has become clear that Texans rate crime, the economy, and the education of their children among their principal concerns.

This week I would like to discuss education. As the father of six children, this has long been one of my principal concerns also.

We currently spend over half our tax revenue on education, and many people raise the question to me, "Are we getting our money's worth?" The questions put to me indicate some think we are spending too much, others, not enough.

I too am concerned about the amount of money we spend on education, but I am more concerned about the quality of that education. I believe the quality of education our children receive can be improved by making some fundamental changes in the way we pay and treat our teachers.

I believe in merit pay for teachers. Frankly, I think good teachers ought to be paid more than poor teachers. A good, conscientious teacher cannot help but become discouraged and disillusioned when he or she ends the month with the same pay as one whom they know to be indifferent. The result is apt to be that they leave the teaching profession altogether.

I also think we ought to enter a system of competency testing not only for new teachers, but for those who are currently teaching. We test our kids, why not also test those who teach them?

In short, I think we ought to bear down on the basics, relieve our teachers of burdensome paper work now placed upon them, and recognize and reward our better teachers with better pay, for the sake of our children, and our future.

If you have thoughts on this subject, I would welcome them. Just write to me at 1213 W. 34th in Austin, 78705.

Big question in Washington; Where is Texas?

By STU HENIGSON
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Is Texas in the East or the West?

The answer seems obvious, but members of the Senate Environment Committee, which is looking into air pollution limits on coal-fired power plants, are finding the question controversial.

The panel's answer will matter to Texas, which is relying heavily on coal to replace natural gas as a fuel for generating electricity.

Under a proposal to set different pollution standards for Eastern and Western states, Texas is included in the West. That means half the state's lignite coal deposits would be worthless, too dirty to meet pollution standards.

But if the committee yields to pressure from Texas utility interests and deems the state to be in the East, it could mean more health problems and visibly dirtier air — but, potentially, lower electricity rates.

Texas has been caught in the middle of a long-running East-West battle over the sulphur dioxide emissions from burning coal.

In 1970 the federal Clean Air Act set pollution standards that favored the use of low-sulphur Western coal over high-sulphur coal from the East.

In 1977 the House, reacting to pressure from Eastern coal interests, pushed through a tighter emission standard for Western coal. That ended the incentive for Eastern power plants to import Western coal in order to meet pollution limits.

Now, five years later, Republican senators from the Western states are fighting back.

Sens. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., and Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., have proposed an amendment to the Clean Air Act that would divide the country and permit power plants in the East to emit 50 percent more sulphur dioxide than those in the West. The two senators hope that formula would end the battle between Eastern and Western coal interests.

The dividing line runs along the eastern borders of Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska and the Dakotas, putting Texas, naturally enough, in the West.

But as a coal consumer and a lignite producer, Texas faces the worst of both worlds. It has access to Western coal only at the end of a long and costly railroad haul, and its domestic lignite coal deposits typically contain a lot of sulphur.

Preliminary EPA figures released last week showed about half the lignite deposits in Eastern Texas would be too dirty to meet the "West" standard in the Domenici-Simpson proposal, according to committee sources.

Of greater concern to Texas utilities is that putting the state in the "West" category, forcing utilities to rely on the Burlington Northern Railroad to haul Western coal from the huge stripmines in Wyoming and Montana.

Several Texas utilities, including Houston Lighting & Power and San Antonio's City Public Service, waged a furious, but ultimately unsuccessful, battle to control Burlington Northern's rail rates after the railroad tripled its coal freight charges in the late '70s. Those freight rates now substantially exceed the value of the coal.

In pushing for inclusion as an "East" state, utilities in Texas claim it would permit them to move Illinois coal down the Mississippi River by barge to provide some competition for the Burlington Northern, committee sources say.

But Domenici has refused to consider putting Texas in the "East" category on grounds that it would give utilities burning Western coal an unfair advantage over companies in his home state of New Mexico, sources say.

"Essentially, Texas just wants to get dirtier," said one source close to Domenici. "Why should all the other Western states crack down and Texas get dirtier?"

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, a member of the Senate Environment Committee, opposes the amendment, according to sources familiar with discussions on the issue.

Domenici has offered to exempt Texas lignite from the "West" requirements in exchange for Bentsen's support, but so far Bentsen has refused to budge. He has argued that Texas is better off under the current law.

The Domenici-Simpson forces say they can push the amendment through the committee without Bentsen's support. But committee Chairman Robert Stafford, R-Vt., has made a pointed — and successful — effort to win unanimous approval in his committee on all key amendments to the Clean Air Act to ensure a solid, bipartisan front when the amendments face a vote on the Senate floor.

The orginal pollution standard in the Clean Air Act of 1970 called for emissions of 1.2 pounds of sulphur dioxide per million British thermal units — Btu's — of energy. Burning low-sulphur Western coal often meant a power plant could meet the standard without removing the sulphur dioxide from the smokestack gases in a process called "scrubbing."

In 1977 the standard was changed in a last minute maneuver in the House that never was debated. The altered standard required that all coal be scrubbed to remove between 70 percent and 90 percent of the sulphur dioxide, regardless of how clean it was in the beginning.

Since then utilities have had to scrub even the cleanest Western coal, and the economic advantage to burning Western coal largely disappeared.

A side effect of that rule, however, was to make pollution levels in the West far more stringent than in the East. For example, plants burning clean Wyoming coal and scrubbing at the minimum limit (70 percent) emit sulphur dioxide levels of 0.3 pounds per million Btu's, on average. But plants in East Texas burning high-sulphur lignite and scrubbing at the upper limit (90 percent) emit three or four times as much sulphur dioxide.

In setting their dual standards, Domenici and Simpson tried to split the country into Western coal-burners and Eastern coal-burners, and remove the requirements for any specific level of pollution reduction or techniques to achieve it.

Lignite doesn't fit well into that balance. It's high in sulphur and low in energy — some "is little better than dirt," said one Texas Air Control Board official — so it has the characteristics of the worst Eastern coal.

But increasing pollution limits in Texas to accommodate lignite coal and permit lower freight rates would have other, human costs.

During combustion sulphur in the coal mixes with oxygen to produce sulphur dioxide, which is one of the nation's worst pollution problems.

Sulphur dioxide causes respiratory problems, decreases visibility and appears to be a key factor in the complex ph3nomenon known as "acid rain."

A study by the Audubon Society earlier this year showed that by the end of the century that deaths caused by sulphur dioxide emissions from Texas alone would nearly double — from 1,100 to 1,900 per year — if the current pollution standard were rolled back to the level set in 1971.

Although the study can't be used to figure the potential death rate from pollution levels in between, Audubon officials say that increasing sulphur dioxide pollution in Texas can't come without an increased death toll.

Tentative steel agreement reached, USS rejects it

By ROBERT A. ROSENBLATT
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — U.S. and European officials tentatively agreed Friday on a plan to reduce European steel shipments to this country, but U.S. Steel Corp. immediately rejected the proposal.

The rejection by the biggest producer in the beleaguered U.S. industry intensified the trade dispute between America and some of its key allies, and was a serious setback for the Reagan administration.

After intensive negotiations, the administration thought it had an agreement under which the Europeans would curb their steel sales in this country, and U.S. steel producers would drop their legal complaints accusing the Europeans of unfair trade practices.

The White House issued a statement Friday praising the tentative agreement, reached by officials of the Department of Commerce and the European Economic Community, as a major step toward "a resolution of our steel trade problems." But several hours later the agreement fell apart when U.S. Steel Corp. called it "neither fair nor equitable" and said it could not go along.

U.S. Steel's action means the Department of Commerce must continue to levy stiff financial penalties against imported steel, even though the administration fears European countries will retaliate with quota restrictions or other penalties against American products.

Seven U.S. companies, including U.S. Steel, had filed complaints under U.S. trade law with the Department of Commerce, alleging that foreign governments were illegally subsidizing the export of steel to the United States.

The department ruled in June that the complaints were valid, and ordered importers to post cash or a bond equal to the subsidies, a major financial penalty against imports. If the ruling is upheld by the department after a final appeal by the foreign firms, the Department of Commerce would establish permanent "countervailing" import duties on the steel products.

The subsidies had been paid to steel producers by the governments of the United Kingdom, Belgium, West Germany, France, Italy, Luxembourg and the Netherlands, as well as Brazil and South Africa, the Department of Commerce said. Subsidies ranged from 1 percent to 40 percent of the value of the steel imports, and reached as high as $240 a ton."

The Department of Commerce was compelled to investigate the companies' complaints under U.S. trade laws. But the Reagan administration feared that the penalty against foreign steel could trigger a trade war. Thus, Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige has been trying to negotiate an agreement under which the U.S. companies could drop their cases.

U.S. producers, suffering a severe sales and earnings decline, blamed imports for much of their troubles. Steel from Europe accounted for 7 percent of U.S. consumption during the first quarter of the year, and imports have been rising.

The preliminary deal announced Friday by the Department of Commerce and officials of the European Economic Community would have established quotas for various steel products.

The officials said in a joint statement that the plan "would be a major step toward ending the constant litigation and dispute over trade in steel, which has been a source of irritation between the (European Community) and the United States for many years."

However, U.S. Steel Corp. chairman David M. Roderick said, "with reluctance and regret," that his company could not accept it.

"We believe the negotiated proposal is neither fair nor equitable, and to accept it would be to condone a continuation of massive subsidies by European governments of their steel companies, and permit a continuation of unreasonably high levels of steel imports into the American marketplace," Roderick said.

He praised Baldrige's efforts, and urged further work to find a "fair and equitable solution" that will allow the company to withdraw its legal complaints against foreign producers.

The other companies that would have been covered by Friday's agreement were Republic, National, Inland, Jones & Laughlin, Cyclops and Bethlehem.

Steel jobs are important both in the United States, where 120,000 workers are laid off in the current recession, and in European nations. Repeated efforts have been made to satisfy domestic interest while keeping an open-door trade policy.

The Carter administration established a "trigger price" system in 1978 designed to keep out imports that seemed to be selling at unfairly low prices. The system collapsed in March 1980. It was revived in September 1980, and suspended in January of this year, when the American companies filed their formal trade complaints with the Department of Commerce.

On each occasion, the federal government said it would monitor imports if the steel industry agreed to avoid filing complaints that could touch off an international trade war. The steel companies agreed until they believed that the system wasn't protecting their interests. They then took their complaints to the Department of Commerce.

In a separate steel trade dispute, the department will rule Monday on complaints by American firms that foreign steel producers have been "sumping" steel in the United States — selling it below the actual cost of production, or below the price charged in their home markets.

Parallel Petroleum votes reverse split

(SWN)--Shareholders of Parallel Petroleum Corporation Thursday voted to approve a one-for-ten reverse stock split and elected Charles R. Pannill to the company's Board of Directors.

As a result of the reverse split, there are 3,750,000 shares of Parallel Petroleum's common stock and 300,000 purchase warrants outstanding.

A total of 82.5 percent of the company's outstanding shares were represented at the special meeting in Midland, with 98 percent of those present voting in favor of the reverse split, according to Frank S. Delay, president.

A geologist by education, Pannill recently retired after almost 32 years with the Western Company of North America where he served in several capacities including those of executive officer and director. He currently serves as vice chairman of the board of directors of EESTARR, Inc., an oil and gas company with headquarters in Irving, Texas.

Millions in billions of cans

PITTSBURG, PA. — An estimated one million can collectors earned $38 million for returning 4.1 billion used aluminum beverage cans to participating Alcoa recycling centers during the first half of 1982. The used cans weighed nearly 171 million pounds, or about 3/4 pound for each American. About 24 aluminum cans make a pound.

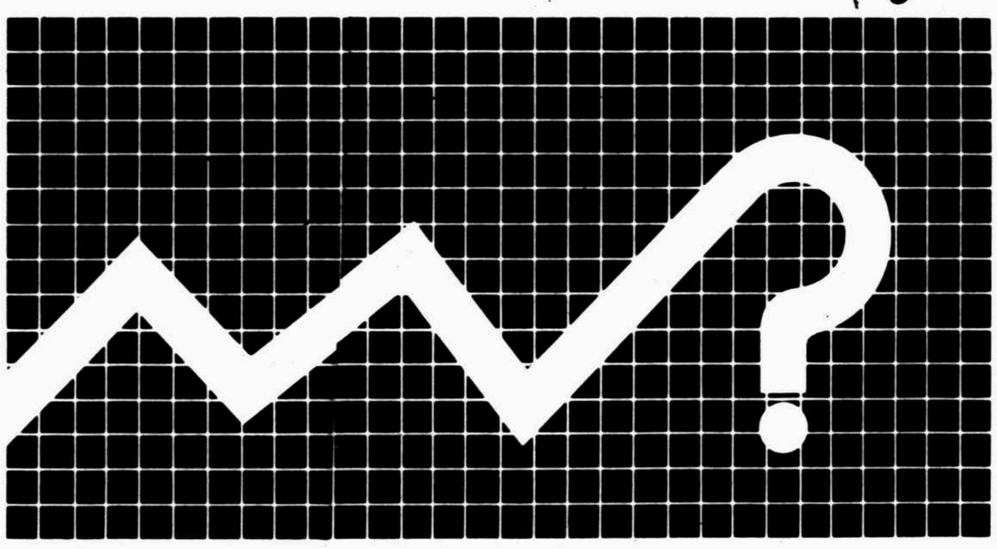

Ron Hawkins, Alcoa Recycling Company president, said the used cans will be recycled into new aluminum sheet for sale to can makers. Well over half of the estimated 50 billion aluminum beverage cans produced in the U.S. this year will be recycled, Hawkins said. "A growing commitment to recycling by supermarkets, can companies, brewers, the soft drink industry and others boosted the percentage of cans recycled nationally from 37 percent in 1980 to well over 55 percent this year," Hawkins said.

The aluminum industry is strongly committed to energy conservation," Hawkins said. "And aluminum recycling is a highly effective way to reduce energy consumption. Recycling aluminum saves 95 percent of the energy needed to produce new metal from ore."

Alcoa's first-half 1982 recycling activity saved the energy equivalent of over 1.6 million barrels of oil, or enough energy for the annual electrical needs of about 144,000 households. "That's enough to supply the residential electrical needs of a city the size of Pittsburgh for one year," Hawkins said.

Alcoa estimates can recycling has created over 25,000 new jobs at 6,000 buying centers, at aluminum recycling plants, in the transportation industry and at firms that build can processing equipment.

Investment Uncertainty?

WITH A FIRST NATIONAL 6-MONTH CERTIFICATE, YOU CAN BE CERTAIN OF YOUR INVESTMENT.

The interest rates or money funds may appear higher going in, but there is no way to be certain what the rate may be at the end of the month, or even the next week!

At The First National Bank of Midland, the interest rate on a 6-Month Money Market Certificate of Deposit is assured for the entire 182 day term, as long as you maintain your deposit.

Current Rate
11.614%

This is an annual rate and is subject to change at renewal. Federal regulations prohibit compounding of interest during the 182 day term and require that the penalty for early withdrawal be collected from the principal if the prescribed penalty period has not been met. The interest rate changes weekly and the current rate is in effect through August 9, 1982.

Cotton growers: save bucks and beneficials.

DIPEL® helps protect the high-yielding bottom crop from bollworms. And, because DIPEL leaves beneficials in the field, you reduce the chances of getting locked into a regular-interval spray program. Net result: your overall insecticide costs are likely to be reduced.

Since DIPEL costs less per acre than most conventional insecticides...and beneficials continue working your fields...bottom-line profits should be greater!

DIPEL is a natural, biological worm killer. One bite of treated foliage and worms stop feeding almost immediately...then die within a few days. DIPEL has not shown worm resistance build-up, won't affect boll maturity, and has not shown harmful affects on man or his environment.

DIPEL 4L is the only microbial insecticide which is registered for use with cotton seed oil. DIPEL may also be tank mixed with ovicides such as chlordimeform or methomyl if significant eggs are present at time of treatment.

Apply DIPEL when the majority of worms are less than ⅜" long, and scouting reports show light to moderate (up to 15,000 worms per acre) populations.

This is the year you need to save bucks and beneficials while controlling bollworms. DIPEL does it all!

Unemployment at 41 year high, car sales at 21 year low

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Reports this past week that unemployment rose to a 41-year high, auto sales fell to a 21-year low and sales remained sluggish for major retailers have raised doubts that a consumer spending spree will lead the economy into a sustained recovery from recession.

"The much-vaunted consumer-led recovery has been a flop," says economist David Jones at the investment firm of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. "I haven't seen the slightest hint of an improvement in the near term."

Reagan administration hopes for economic recovery have been based on heightened consumer buying power as a result of reduced inflation coupled with the 10 percent tax cut and a 7.4 percent increase in Social Security benefit payments that took effect July 1.

But if consumers have a greater share of their earnings available, they have yet to show signs of beating down merchants' doors to spend those funds.

With workers concerned about their jobs, any savings from tax cuts are being used either to pay off debts or set aside for hard times, says Jones.

U.S. automakers reported July sales of 129,998 new cars, down 13.5 percent from a year ago. The daily sales rate of 3,435 was the lowest since 1961.

Several major retailers reported sales declined in July from the same month a year ago, including No. 3 J.C. Penney Co. and No. 4 F.W. Woolworth.

Sears, Roebuck and Co., the largest retailer, and second-ranked K mart Corp. both reported slight sales increases, with Sears failing to keep pace with inflation.

The Labor Department reported the nation's unemployment rate rose to 9.8 percent in July from the 9.5 percent rate in May and June and a 9.4 percent jobless rate in April.

It was the highest unemployment rate since the government began keeping month-to-month figures in 1948. The previous high was the annual unemployment rate of 9.9 percent in 1941.

"These indicators, taken together, suggest the initial stages of this recovery will be very modest. The recovery will have little or no staying power," said Jack Lavery, chief economist at the private consulting firm of Merrill Lynch Economics Inc.

Lavery said he expects consumer spending for goods and services to rise by less than 2 percent in the current quarter.

He also is predicting a "decidedly weak" economy for the first half of next year, with "no significant or sustained recovery until mid-1983."

A more cheerful assessment came from the Conference Board, a business-financed research group, which reported its July survey of 5,000 households showed heightened confidence in future economic growth and increased plans to make major purchases during the next six months.

"Although current economic statistics range from indecisive to discouraging, the latest message from the consumer is distinctly positive," said Fabian Linden, executive director of the board's Consumer Research Center. "Consumer readings are now suggesting that the U.S. economy could show stronger growth in the second half of this year than many forecasters are projecting."

In other business and economic developments this past week:

—The Agriculture Department estimated food prices will rise an average 4.9 percent this year, down from the 5.2 percent rise projected a month earlier. The department cited indications of another year of bumper harvests that would hold down price increases. Last year's increase was 7.9 percent.

—The Commerce Department reported new orders for manufacturers' goods fell 0.3 percent in June after rising 1 percent in May and falling 1 percent in April. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said he believes demand will increase in the current quarter, but added: "Further declines in interest rates will be necessary, though, if we are to see a strong, sustained recovery."

—Major banks adopted a 15 percent prime rate, the third half-point drop in the key business-borrowing charge since July 19 and the lowest level since November 1980. The prime is the base upon which banks compute interest charges on short-term loans to their most creditworthy corporate customers. But other short-term rates rose during the week as the Treasury Department sold $28.25 billion in government bills and notes to retire old debts and raise nearly $10 billion in new cash to meet rising deficits.

—The Department of Housing and Urban Development cut the interest rate ceiling on federally backed home loans a half point to 15 percent, the lowest level in more than a year. Lenders are under no obligation to issue loans that carry interest rates at or below a government ceiling but sometimes are willing to accept a lower return because the loans are guaranteed by the government. In early July, private lenders were charging an average 17.22 percent on long-term home loans.

—The Commerce Department reported new construction rose 1.3 percent in June to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $230.7 billion. But private residential construction fell 1.1 percent from May.

—The Reagan administration delayed action on a proposal to expand the hours and jobs permitted for children 14 and 15 years old. The Labor Department, under pressure from Congress, extended the period for comment on the proposed regulations and said new proposals would be published after the comment period.

—The Commerce Department reported the nation's foreign trade deficit declined to $5.1 billion in the second quarter of 1982 from a $6.1 billion deficit in the first three months of the year. Oil imports fell to a daily average of 4.82 million barrels, the lowest level since 1972. The merchandise trade deficit covers only the flow of payments in and out of the country for products and materials. When services and financial transactions are added, the nation's overall balance of payments is usually pushed into a surplus. For the first half of the year, the foreign trade deficit reached $11.2 billion, about 40 percent of the $27.9 billion deficit for all of last year.

—The Federal Trade Commission dropped antitrust charges against Exxon Corp. in connection with its $1.24 billion acquisition of Reliance Electric Co. in 1979. The FTC had alleged that Exxon's plans to have Reliance make a fuel-saving device for electrical motors would eliminate possible competition between the companies in the manufacture of electric motor drives. But Exxon announced last March it would not market the device. In dismissing the charges, the FTC said, "Exxon and consequently the commisson misjudged the commercial viability" of the process.

—Mellon National Corp. of Pittsburgh and Girard Co. of Philadelphia announced plans to merge into what would become the nation's 12th largest banking company in an exchange of stock valued at $220 million.

—President Reagan nominated Martin Feldstein, an economics professor at Harvard University, to succeed Murray Weidenbaum as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers. Weidenbaum resigned last month to return to teaching. Feldstein, 42, is president of the National Bureau of Economic Research and is a member of the National Productivity Advisory Committee and the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control in Government.

Car costlier parted

CHICAGO, ILL. — If sticker shock is a problem in buying a new car, then by all means try to avoid damaging it. The escalating costs of car repair will come as a real shocker.

Buying all the replacement parts for a totally demolished subcompact car would cost about 3.8 times more than the original sticker price, according to a study by the Alliance of American Insurers. That's slightly higher than the 3.5 ratio of parts for a comparable domestic car last year.

The Alliance, a national insurance trade organization, hired a professional auto damage appraiser to determine the cost of buying replacement parts and materials for a popular 1982 foreign hatchback model with a manufacturer's suggested retail price of $7,128. Parts and paint costs added up to $6,787, excluding labor.

The car used in the current Alliance study was a two-door hatchback with unitized body construction and a five-speed manual transmission. It had no air conditioning, but came equipped with several features that are usually purchased as options.

Interests no market cure

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Declining interest rates have proved to be no cure for the woes of the stock market.

Interest rates have been dropping steadily of late, spurred by two half-point reductions in the Federal Reserve's discount rate.

Rates on three-month Treasury bills, which had been as high as 13 percent last June, got as low as 9½ percent last week.

But any investor who expected lower rates to be immediately translated into higher stock prices has been disappointed, to say the least. The stock market will wind up the past week at its lowest level in more than two years.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 24.26 to 784.34, on top of a 37.91-point loss the week before. That left the average, along with most other key indicators, at its lowest point since the spring of 1980.

Broader New York Stock Exchange trading also stood at its lowest point in more than 1,500 days. Declining issues outdistanced advancers on the Big Board by a wide margin.

On the NYSE, a record 54.26 million shares traded, up 4.47 million from the previous record set on Thursday.

The American Stock Exchange's Value Line index was down 4.00 at 344.99.

The stock market's behavior has been particularly troubling to economists mindful of the traditional business recoveries are preceded by rising stock prices.

Neither the market over the past few months nor the other two visions of the future by stock traders there is no such "recovery" in sight.

The latest recent economic statistics, like Friday's report of an increase in unemployment rate to 9.8 percent, seem only to reinforce their fears.

Most observers who believe the worst of the economic slide is past have trouble mustering much optimism.

"While we feel an economic trough has been reached, we are not envisioning a robust recovery," said Jack Lavery, economist at Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, in his weekly assessment of the outlook.

As economic weakness persists, warned Hugh Johnson, analyst at the brokerage firm of First Albany Corp., "the risks of a shock to the financial system and the financial markets will be quite high."

The longer it runs, the more analysts have come to view the economy's current slump as something more than an ordinary recession.

Said Van Kasper, president of a San Francisco investment firm bearing his name: "We have experienced difficult times before in recent decades, but this drop has come much closer to affecting everyone."

What happened this time? After 15 years of accelerating inflation we have had a change in trend. The perception that this change may be real has destroyed the success formulas of the past.

Realization that real estate, oil and other prices are capable of going down has shaken the confidence of the American public. Those who used leverage, i.e. borrowed money for these investments so that they could repay with future "cheaper dollars" have, of course, had more than their confidence shaken.

Defenders of the economic policies of President Reagan and the monetary strategies of the Federal Reserve argue that drastic steps had to be taken to stop inflation from running out of control.

After the current period of adjustment, they maintain, the economy will emerge in much better shape than it had been before.

"Is this a long-term change in trend?" said Kasper. "For what we have had to live with during this transition, let's hope so."

Norsul earns in Equador

ALBANY, Ga. — Fred Forster, Jr., Chairman, announced that Norsul Oil and Mining Ltd., (OTC-NORS), has received $108,236.05 as a net production payment for the 1982 second quarter on its one percent interest in the Coca Oil Field concession in Equador, operated by Texaco and the Equadorian state owned oil company. This is somewhat less than the $193,269 payment for the second quarter 1981, due to reduced crude oil prices.

Forster also stated that Norsul, for the first time, is now receiving revenues from domestic oil production in the United States. The company has a working interest in 7,300 acres of oil and gas leases in Runnels County. Two producing gas wells on this acreage have been connected to a pipeline. Based on initial flow tests, each well is capable of producing 500,000 cubic feet of gas per day. There are also two production oil wells on the property. Norsul has a 27.29 percent in gas well numbered 1-32, and an 18.13 percent interest in well number 2, and an 18.13 percent interest in each oil well.

There are 6,800 undrilled offset acres surrounding these producers in which Norsul has a 35 percent interest, and plans for drilling ten additional wells.

Norsul is an international resource company with interest in producing oil wells in Equador, placer gold mines in French Guyana, oil and gas drilling and production in Oklahoma and Texas and in a hotel casino in Quito, Equa-

Gulf Oil gives up pursuit of Cities Service Co.

By JIM McKAY
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Gulf Oil Corp. terminated a $4.8 billion offer to acquire Cities Service Co. on Friday, saying it was unable to reach agreement with the Federal Trade Commission on the agency's antitrust objections.

The aborted deal would have been the third largest corporate takeover in U.S. history, eclipsed only by Du Pont Co.'s $7.8 billion purchase of Conoco Inc. and the $6.3 billion paid for Marathon Oil Co. by U.S. Steel Corp.

In Tulsa, Okla., Cities Service issued a statement saying it was "astounded" by the development.

But Gulf said it had no choice.

"Over the last two weeks, Gulf has made detailed proposals to resolve the antitrust objections of the Federal Trade Commission," Gulf said in a statement. "As a result of the discussions with the FTC this week, it has become clear that the FTC is unwilling to accept the Gulf proposals."

The FTC contended the merger would give the combined company too great a share of the gasoline and aviation fuel markets where the two companies have their largest numbers of retail outlets.

At the FTC's request, U.S. District Judge Charles Richey issued a temporary restraining order July 29 blocking the proposed merger for 10 days while the FTC further investigated the takeover.

Gulf said it had instructed its depository, Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., to terminate its $63-a-share offer for 41.5 million shares of Cities Service stock, or 54 percent of the shares, and to return any shares already tendered. Gulf had planned to offer securities valued at $63 for each of the remaining shares.

Cities Service stock was down $6.75 a share for the day, closing at $37.25. Gulf stock closed at $25.50 a share, up 62½ cents. Trading was halted in both stocks about 2:30 p.m. EDT and Gulf issued its statement 90 minutes later.

"The FTC has taken the position that unless Gulf agrees to sell to a purchaser acceptable to the FTC, Cities Service's sole refinery or a major Gulf refinery as well as other Cities Service assets no settlement is possible," Gulf said.

"The FTC demands would involve very substantial costs to Gulf by reason of the divestures and associated expenses which make the acquisition unacceptable from a financial standpoint," Gulf said.

Cities Service's management issued a statement saying it was "astounded by the decision of the board of directors of Gulf to terminate its tender offer," adding: "There is absolutely no reason or basis for Gulf reneging on the agreement."

Cities Service said its management earlier had agreed to recommend that the $63-per-share tender offer be reduced by an amount equal to what it would cost Gulf to make the divestitures sought by the FTC.

Cities Service said it believed "Gulf has defaulted on its publicly stated and widely reported commitment made last week to contest the FTC action 'vigorously' and seek a reasonable basis for a prompt settlement of the issue."

Gulf, already the seventh largest marketer of gasosline in the United States, said the uncertainties surrounding the FTC's objections were too great to continue the deal.

"The FTC also confirmed this week that if Gulf were successful in opposing the FTC complaint for a preliminary injunction, the commissionintended to proceed with an administrative complaint requesting relief at least as broad as the settlement demands that Gulf finds unacceptable," the company said.

"The FTC would also have the opportunity to appeal any denial of its request for preliminary injunctive relief which would involve substantial delays and uncertainties as to the outcome," Gulf said.

The FTC contended the merger would give Gulf too high a concentration in gasoline marketing in the South, East and East Coast and jet fuel marketing on the East Coast and in the Southeast.

Overall, Gulf is the ninth largest industrial corporation in the United States. Cities Service is the 39th largest. The combined firm would have been the nation's fifth largest oil company.

Gulf stepped in with its offer for Cities Service after the Tulsa, Okla. company became embroiled in a takeover fight with Mesa Petroleum Co. of Amarillo, Texas.

The merger had been approved by directors of both Gulf and Cities Service.

Defense industry stocks have been awakening recently

By DONALD C. BAUDER
Copley News Service

The stock market has figured out that defense spending is being translated into jobs, industrial output and money — rather than being mere words bandied about by politicians.

The long-languid defense stocks — which soared until last year, then plunged — have come awake in recent weeks.

"We continue to be impressed with the action of stocks in the defense sector," said Charles L. Comer of Wall Street's Bache Halsey Stuart Shields.

It's difficult to separate defense stocks from other stocks, because the companies that get a lot of defense business are also widely diversified into other areas — most prominently, commercial aircraft, which is hurting just now. Most of the defense stocks are categorized as aerospace stocks, and despite the drag from their commercial aircraft and other recession-impacted businesses, those stocks have been doing well in the last few weeks.

Over the past year, however, they have done poorly — worse, actually, than the general market. According to data prepared by Hammond, Indiana's, Dow Theory Forecasts, aerospace stocks have plunged 24.6 percent in the past 12 months.

Some have really crashed: Boeing, Sundstrand and Textron are all off more than 45 percent. Martin Marietta is down 62.5. Lockheed, however, is up 42.1 and Grumman is up 9.6.

Now the stocks should continue moving up, say analysts. "Regardless of publicized cutbacks, defense spending is going to rise 7 to 13 percent in real terms," said Alan Benasuli of Wall Street's Drexel Burnham Lambert. "The group should do quite well relative to other stock groups, which may move slowly because of the sluggishness of the recovery."

Benasuli likes Raytheon, Northrop, United Technologies and Sundstrand.

Raytheon, Northrop and Rockwell International are revered for their solid balance sheets. In each case, debt is no more than 20 percent of total capitalization, according to latest Standard & Poor's data.

Raytheon is a good example of a company that diversified away from its reliance on defense — and now its defense business is what's holding it up. Earnings at its general aircraft-products operation (Beech) were down almost 30 percent in the second quarter, said Carol P. Neves of Wall Street's Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith. Also weak right now is Raytheon's appliance business, such as Amana.

Long-term, Neves ranks Raytheon a strong "buy," but she is neutral about its intermediate-term prospects.

Many analysts like Northrop, even though it has punished its own earnings severely largely because of development costs on the F-5G aircraft. Morton Langer of Wall Street's Bear Stearns predicts that Northrop will earn only 25 cents a share this year — down from $6.04 in 1981.

He put the estimate that low because he is assuming that Northrop won't be delivering any F-5Gs this year, although it will be flying them in September.

"More than $150 million was spent in 1981 for developing the F-5G, and roughly $250 million is to be expended this year," said Langer. He wrote this year's earnings down by $250 million for research and development costs that will be written off or incurred.

Still, orders for the aircraft should start coming in soon, and Northrop will start cashing in — making $8.50 per share next year, says Langer, who would buy the stock.

"We believe that Northrop can earn $14 to $15 per share by 1986," said Harinder S. Kohli, analyst for San Francisco's Sutro & Co. He notes that Northrop is talking with no fewer than 41 countries about purchase of the F-5G, and that "Northrop has been named the leading contractor for the Advanced Technology Bomber (ATB, commonly referred to as the 'stealth' aircraft."

Even though Northrop's earnings have been declining since 1979, the huge investments it has made will start paying off, says Kohli, who is strongly positive on the stock.

St. Louis-based General Dynamics is also on many analysts' star list. Wall Street's Salomon Bros. predicts General Dynamics will enjoy compound earnings growth of 27 percent a year for the next three years. Among rapidly growing programs the company has are the Tomahawk, GLMS, Standard Missile II and M-1 tank.

General Dynamics has suffered nine straight quarters of declining earnings, yet Wall Street's Bache Halsey Stuart Shields has kept it on its "buy" list. Now analyst Paul H. Nisbet says the string will be broken in this year's second quarter with a 75 percent gain, followed by a 30 percent rise in the third and another plus-75 in the fourth. Then earnings will rise 50 percent for the full year 1983 and 40 percent for 1984, says Nisbet.

Cubic Corp. has been put on the "buy" list by Los Angeles' Wedbush, Noble, Cooke Inc. Over the past year, Cubic stock has gone from $20 a share to almost $35. It just announced a 2-for-1 split to be effective Sept. 1.

Nine-months earnings were $2.84 a share vs. $1.98 in the year earlier. Defense business is quite strong — but so, too, are other areas of Cubic's business.

Eight securities applications filed

Eight applications to register $5,855,000 were filed with the State Securities Board during the past week.

Securities Commissioner Richard D. Latham said the applications included one Texas Company: C & K 1982 Fund C, Ltd., Houston, for $650,000.

Latham states that the Securities Board granted six permsits to sell $12,800,000 during the past week.

Others filed were: Bell Junction, Ltd., Denver, for $100,000; E. F. Hutton Credit Corporation, Greenwich, Conn., for $500,000; Merit Energy Drilling Program, Ltd. 1982, Denver, for $500,000; American Continental Corporation, Phoenix, for $80,000; Callon Institutional Royalty Investors III, Natchez, Miss., for $3,000,000; Continental Home Finance Corporation, Phoenix, for $1,000,600; and Harris Bankcorp, Inc., Chicago, for $25,000.

BOTTOM LINES

PARALLEL PETROLEUM (OTC: PLLL)

Company president Frank S. Delay reports an operating loss of $171,751 for the six months ended June 30, 1982 despite a 56 percent growth in revenues during the period.

Revenues were $553,841, up from $354,274 reported in the same period a year earlier. Oil and gas income for the six month period was $184,100 versus $37,077 a year ago. A total of $109,775 was charged against income for dry holes and abandonments during the period.

Revenues from successful exploration and development wells grew, but dry hole costs under the company's "successful efforts" method of accounting was responsible for the negative bottom line for the first six months of 1982, Delay said.

MIDLAND SOUTHWEST CORP (OTC: MISC)

G. Arthur Donnelly III, president and chairman, has announced financial results for the second quarter and six months ended June 30, 1982.

Revenues for the quarter were $11,175 million, although slightly lower than the first quarter of this year, they were up 33 percent from the same quarter in 1981. Net income decreased in the quarter by 48.5 percent compared to the same quarter a year ago.

Revenues for the six months ended June 30, 1982 increased 68.7 percent from the same period a year earlier. Contract drilling revenue was up $2.8 million, oil and gas sales were up $500,000, and equipment sales from a subsidiary were up $6 million. These sales were reported for only one month in the same period in 1981, the subsidiary was acquired in June, 1981.

Net income for the six months was down 22.9 percent. Earnings were $1.9 million, or 41 cents a share, versus 55 cents a share or $2.47 million, a year ago in the same six month period.

DAWSON GEOPHYSICAL (OTC: DWSN)

The company reported mixed results for the first nine months of fiscal 1982, L. Decker Dawson, president and chief executive officer, said revenues for the nine months were $12,413,000, up from revenues of $11,362,000 reported for the first nine months of 1981.

Net income for the nine months was $1,969,000, yielding earnings of $.67 per share, with 2,950,300 weighted average shares outstanding. This compares to net income of $2,154,000 and earnings per share of $.84, with 2,552,089 weighted average shares outstanding during the same period a year ago.

For the three months ending June 30, 1982, revenues were $3,630,000, compared to $4,287,000 recorded during the third quarter of fiscal 1981. Net income for the third three-month period of fiscal 1982 was $242,000, compared to $846,000 a year ago, and earnings per share were $.08, compared to $.30 last year.

Dawson Geophysical Company is engaged in contract reflection seis-mograph exploration for oil and gas on land. Founded in 1952 in Midland, Texas, and operating primarily in the southwestern and Rocky Mountain areas of the United States, Dawson Geophysical gathers processes and interprets seismic data for oil and gas companies and independent oil operators.

MID-AMERICA DRILLING & EXPLORATION INC. (OTC: MADE)

Company president James A. Rix announces record revenues and net income for the nine months ended May 31, 1982.

Revenues for the period were $3,930,497 compared to $1,321,573 for the similar period a year ago.

Net income was $1,070,429 or .032 per share based on 33 million weighted average common shares outstanding, as compared to $199,236 or $.006 per share for the nine months ended May 31, 1981.

Revenues for the quarter were $1.8 million versus $408,861 for the same quarter a year ago.

MINERAL DEVELOPMENT INC. (OTC: MNRL)

The company has released its annual report for the year ended March 31, 1982. Revenues increased from $2.46 million in 1981 to $3.58 million in 1982. Oil and gas revenues jumped 87 percent while revenues from sale of polyethylene pipe increased 45 percent due to higher volume.

Net income was $17,000 compared to $145,000 a year ago. Total assets increased to $5.7 million versus $2.06 million for fiscal 1981. Shareholders' equity increased to $1.77 million from $1.07 million for fiscal 1981.

Independent engineering reports conclude that the company more than doubled its proved oil and gas reserves during the year.

COOPER INDUSTRIES (NYSE: CBE)

HOUSTON (SWN) — The board of directors has declared quarterly dividends on the company's outstanding common and preferred shares.

A dividend of $.38 a common share is payable October 1, 1982. Dividends of $.625 per series B preferred share and $.725 per $2.90 preferred share are payable September 30. The record date for common and both series of preferred shares is August 20, 1982.

Cooper Industries, with 1981 sales of $2.9 billion, is a leading worldwide manufacturer of compression and drilling equipment, tools and hardware, and electrical and electronic products.

WESTERN COMPANY of NORTH AMERICA (NYSE: WSN)

FORT WORTH (SWN) — The board of directors has declared the regular quarterly cash dividend on the company's common stock of six cents ($.06) per share. The dividend will be payable on October 29, 1982, to stockholders of record on September 30, 1982.

The Western Company provides oil and gas well services of cementing, fracturing and acidizing to domestic petroleum producers and offshore drilling services internationally.

SUPERIOR OIL (NYSE: SOC)

HOUSTON (SWN) — A regular quarterly dividend of $.05 on each outstanding share of common stock, payable on September 27, 1982 to all stockholders of record at the close of business on August 27, 1982, has been declared.

In addition, the board of directors elected Joe O. Carter vice president, exploration. Carter came to Superior June 1, 1982 from Gulf Oil Exploration where he had been senior vice president of world-wide exploration and technology.

PANHANDLE EASTERN CORP (NYSE: PEL)

HOUSTON (SWN) — The company, parent of Anadarko Production with a division office in Midland, has reported lower earnings for the second quarter and first half 1982, attributing the decline to the recession and its adverse impact on demand for natural gas and crude oil.

For the three months ended June 30, consolidated net income was $63 million, or $1.53 per share of common stock. These results compare with net income of $79 million and $1.97 per share for the same period of 1981 on fewer shares outstanding.

Consolidated net income for the first six months of the year was $136 million, equal to $3.33 per share, versus $157 million and $3.94 per share for the same period in 1981. The 1982 first half net income made this period the second best in the Company's history.

POGO PRODUCING CO. (NYSE: PPP)

HOUSTON (SWN) — The company reports second quarter earnings figures and announces that the company more than replaced its liquids production and substantially replaced its natural gas sales during the first half of the year.

Net income for the second quarter of 1982 was $13,726,000, or $0.55 per share, compared with net income of $17,274,000, or $0.66 per share for the same period a year ago. Total revenues for the three months ending June 30 were $72,773,000 compared to $73,686,000 for the same three months of 1981.

A six-months independent engineering review of Pogo's oil and gas reserves indicates the company more than replaced its liquids production for the period and substantially replaced its natural gas sales.

TEXAS INSTRUMENTS INC. (NYSE: TXN)

The company has released its report for the quarter ended June 30, 1982. Net sales billed were $1.083 million, a 4 percent increase over the same quarter a year ago. Net income increased to $36.9 million, up from $10.5 million for the same period a year earlier. Earnings per share were $1.56 compared to 44 cents in the second quarter of 1981.

Government electronics and consumer products increased from a year ago, while shipments were lower in distributed computing, metallurgical materials and electrical controls. Geophysical business was up from last year at this time, but is now seen as weakening.

ENSERCH CORP (NYSE: ENN)

DALLAS (SWN) — The company's earnings applicable to common stock for the quarter were $36.1 million, a 22 per cent decrease from the $46.2 million earned in the second quarter of 1981. Earnings per share declined to $.67 from $.89 on 11 percent more average common and common equivalent shares outstanding.

Operating income for the second quarter of 1982 was $79 million, down 14 percent from the $92 million reported a year earlier. Revenues for the second quarter of 1982 were $601 million compared with $822 million for the same period of 1981.

The board of directors declared a regular quarterly dividend of .40 cents per share of common stock payable September 7, 1982 to shareholders of record August 20, 1982. ENSERCH has paid dividends each year since 1912 and has paid higher cash dividends each year since 1969.

Operating income for the first six months of 1982 of $161 million, was two percent below the same period a year ago. Revenues rose 15 percent to $1.9 billion from $1.7 billion.

TEXAS OIL & GAS CORP (NYSE: TXO)

The company has reported net income for the third quarter and first nine months of fiscal 1981 set new records. For the quarter ended May 31, 1982, net income rose 25 percent to $63.3 million, or .66 cents a share, compared with $50.57 million or 53 cents a share for the same period a year ago.

Revenues were $503.9 million, up 21 percent from $415.6 million a year earlier.

For the first nine months of fiscal 1982, net income was $179.6 million or $1.88 per share, a 29 percent increase from a similar period last year. Nine-month revenues were up by 24 percent, from $1.149 billion to $1.42 billion.

From an operations standpoint, the company gained by the opening on March 1 of the interstate Ozark Gas Transmission System, which TXO built. The company owns 25 percent of the system.

JIM SERVATIUS, EDITOR

A political paradox

George Strake, the Republican Houstonian hoping to unseat Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby in the November general election, was in Midland recently and noted a quirk of our political system that has been bothering us for some time.

"We need people in government," said Mr. Strake, "who don't need the job for a living." What he was getting at is that those individuals who can seek political office primarily for the money they get in salary may be less concerned with the important issues facing society. They may not vote on the important issues with political courage, but may seek only to be re-elected.

In a way he's correct. But in a way he's not. And therein lies what may be the most dangerous paradox of our form of government.

By its very nature the political arena attracts those with the financial means to get into office. People like George Strake, Bill Hobby, Bill Clements and Ronald Reagan have money. But government itself, by dealing in the areas in which it rightfully should deal, provides the opportunity for every elected official to become wealthy. Those who reach political office without a great amount of wealth usually leave office much richer by taking advantage of investment opportunities that open up to them during their government service. Is that wrong? Not necessarily, we think.

The government of this nation was established on the principle of fair and equal representation. Every man and woman was given the opportunity to represent a section of the land. It was that unique cross-sectioning that led to development, most likely, of this nation's fairness doctrine.

Today, just as during the early days of the republic, Americans want to be governed by a cross-section of the populace — some white, some black, some rich, some poor, a bunch of middles. That's the goal.

But how do we ensure that end in today's high priced political races that run into the millions? By restructing the amount spent on campaigns? By limiting the amount candidates can spend on their own races? By encouraging voter education and participation in the electoral process?

Americans do not want to be governed only by the rich, but neither do they want to restrict the minds of voices of talented, educated people.

It's a difficult paradox and one with no simple or quick solutions. Establishing salaries for public officials commensurate with their responsibilities can help. But the presence of money doesn't ensure honesty.

Perhaps the only solution at this point is to elect the best possible candidate to office and hope that high principles prevail.

South of the border

The Mexican government recently took a painful and unpopular step in almost doubling prices on basic items used by all its people — but it was a necessary action if Mexico is ever to recover from its financial woes.

Mexicans now will have to pay more for tortillas and their bolillo rolls, gasoline and diesel, home gas and electricity. All these items have been subsidized for years by the federal government — a support that no longer can be afforded.

The Ministry of Commerce has complained that government price supports were depleting Mexico's weakened coffers. The government owes almost $80 billion in foreign debts — bills almost impossible to pay because the country's major oil and agriculture industries are stagnant.

The action had to be taken and now is the opportune time, as President Jose Lopez Portillo's term of office grows to an end. Mexican presidents are limited to serving only one six-year term.

The halting of subsidies is bound to boost an already awesome inflation rate that amounted to 32 percent for the first six months of this year in mainland Mexico and almost 40 percent in Baja California. Inflation could easily reach 60 percent by the end of the year.

The government's recent action comes on top of austerity measures inacted in April. At that time the federal budget was cut by 8 percent and prices and tariffs were boosted to increase revenues by $3 billion.

The new price increases set the cost of tortillas at 10 cents a pound and bolillos at 4 cents each. Electricity rates were raised 30 percent and gas for homes by 18.6 percent. Gasoline jumped from 46 cents to 77 cents for regular and from 77 cents to $1.15 for premium. Diesel went from 19 to 31 cents.

The price increases brought immediate objections from labor and political groups. The Unified Socialist Party blasted the government for enacting a policy favoring "industrialists and merchants" and called on workers to "prepare themselves for actions of struggle against government policy."

Most labor unions had agreed not to seek wage increases last February when the peso was devaluated by 45 percent. Now they say that any agreement held with the government has been broken and they will demand emergency wage increases immediately and they will call nationwide strikes if increases are not granted.

Nevertheless, most economists agree that the price increases were necessary — that relieving the government of such subsidies is an important step toward economic recovery.

Other steps that must be taken include taxation of a small percentage of Mexicans who hold tremendous wealth, an end to an overwhelming corruption in government and business and a firm effort to control Mexico's burgeoning birth rate of 3.4 percent.

Action is needed now to solve Mexico's social and economic injustices before the country is hit by the kind of civil instability now being experienced in Central America.

Another View:

Paid off to fade out

If you're disillusioned with an officeholder and the next election's a long way off, what recourse short of impeachment or assassination do you have? Try paying him to fade from the political scene.

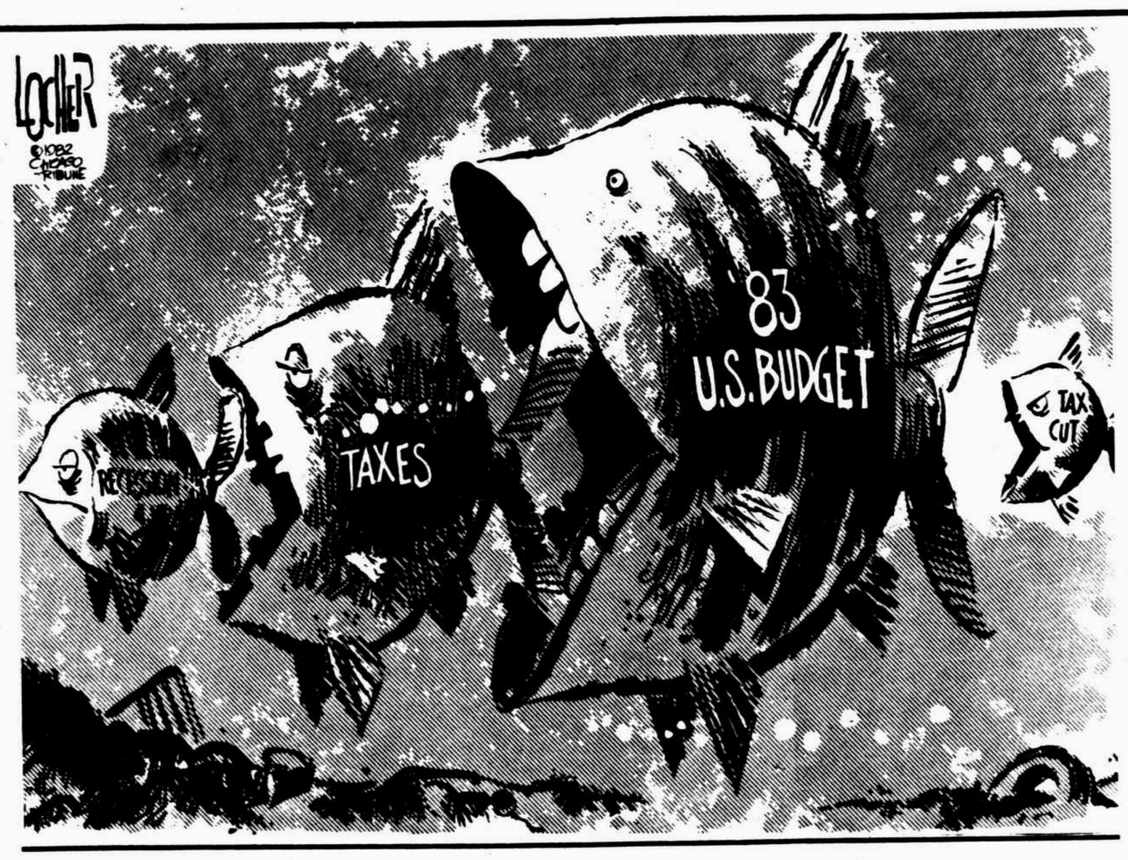

That's what John Trueman, a Canadian real estate broker, is trying to do to Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau. Trudeau promised to resign before the next general election, which isn't until 1985, but a lot of Canadians — Trueman included — are beginning to suspect that the promise won't be redeemed.

So Trueman is asking 500,000 of his fellow countrymen to kick in $10 apiece to a $5 million Trudeau Early Retirement Fund. He intends to entice the prime minister into private life with a juicy pension.

Trudeau has called the idea comical, but he isn't laughing all that heartily. At a recent news conference, he asked reporters if they thought anybody would be stupid enough to contribute to the retirement fund. When two reporters reached for their checkbooks, the prime minister changed the subject.

This much can be said for Trueman. When he tries to buy off a politician, he does it up front and in public. What's more he may have discovered an effective way out for a disgruntled electorate and given politicians yet another way to jack up retirement benefits.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Peace on earth put before heavenly peace

WASHINGTON — Once again, the enduring rivalry between the United States and the Soviet Union seems likely to turn what could have been a far-reaching United Nations effort at global cooperation into just another moot court exercise.

Jack Anderson

Unispace, the U.N.'s international conference on the exploration and peaceful uses of outer space, begins tomorrow in Vienna. Its goal is to bring the heavens under the authority of a nonpartisan U.N. agency. Outer space would be set aside for scientific research and peaceful development, in much the same way that Antarctica has been declared off-limits to nationalistic exploitation.

The conference represents an attempt by the Third World to carve itself a slice of the space pie that up until now has belonged exclusively to us and the Soviets. But the U.N.'s pie-in-the-sky effort seems doomed to be shot down by the flak of the U.S.-Soviet cold war.

Just as the Law of the Sea Treaty amounts to little more than high-sounding rhetoric as long as the United States and the Soviet Union refuse to sign it, so Unispace and any agreement that comes out of it will be a waste of time without U.S. and Soviet cooperation.

But the two superpowers show no signs of cooperating with this latest U.N. effort to spread the benefits of space technology around among all the nations. The reason is simple: Both U.S. and Soviet policy makers are far more interested in doing well militarily in outer space than in doing good philanthropically.

Each suspects the other — with good reason — of aiming for the stars with military advantage in mind. Peaceful development will have to come later.

The Unispace conferees apparently hope to deal with this basic issue by avoiding it. Of the 130-page draft report from the Unispace preparatory committee, only 15 paragraphs deal with the real gut issues — and only four of these paragraphs take up the growing concern over militarization of outer space.

Even this modest recognition of the problem is unlikely to survive the conference. Experts inside and outside the government have told my associate Corky Johnson that the few paragraphs devoted to military uses of space and other major stumbling blocks to international control will be stricken from the final report that issues from the Unispace conference.

The brief mention of military problems in space is hardly inflammatory; in fact, it amounts to little more than generalized hand-wringing.

"Increasing militarization does directly impinge on peaceful uses of space and on the benefits that nations can derive from space," the draft report acknowledges. "The recent introduction and proposed development of aggressive systems in space have cast a dark shadow over the peaceful and beneficial uses of space."

That's as far as it goes — but even that is too far for the two superpowers. Each argues — again, with good reason from its own point of view — that without a military East-West balance in space, peaceful international development is an impractical dream.

Here are some examples of the growing determination in Washington and Moscow to bring the Cold War into the stratosphere:

— In his July 4 policy statement, President Reagan emphasized the military importance of space by announcing formation of a new White House space committee under the National Security Council.

— Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger has said the United States may put defensive weapons up in space. An Air Force space command center will be set up in October to handle tests of such weapons.

— The Kremlin has made no secret of its suspicion that the space shuttle is basically a military venture.

— The United States claims the Russians are developing "killer satellites," known as A-sats, which can fire missiles at our satellites from positions in orbit. Both countries already have the ability to knock out the other side's satellites with non-orbiting weapons systems.

— U.S. and Soviet scientists are already working on such futuristic weapons as laser satellites, nuclear space missiles and improved spy satellites.

A background report on Unispace prepared by the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment describes U.S. space policy as striving always to be first. In the 1960s, the goal was to put the first man on the moon; the Soviets' early lead was overcome and the United States won the moon race.

Now, the report says, the emphasis is on military advantage. "Both the United States and the Soviet Union have maintained an increasing level of military space activities that are in large part motivated by the need to balance and counter their respective adversaries," the report states.

Ignoring the hard-eyed military calculations of the two superpowers, the Unispace conferees will discuss their wish list for outer space. Among the Third World's hopeful demands are these:

— Greater access to the "geostationary orbit" — the fixed satellite position along the equator that is already becoming crowded.

— Restrictions on the type of information that high-powered satellites can obtain about a country without its consent.

— Restrictions on direct-broadcast satellites that can beam information into a country without its permission.

— Transfer of technology and space information from countries that have it to those that don't.

Obviously, unless the United States and the Soviet Union decide to end their space arms race — which seems unlikely at this point — and agree to share their virtual monopoly on space technology with the have-nots, the Third World's demands are doomed and Unispace will be just another U.N. debate.

One expert put it this way: "As long as we and the Russians control space, you can forget the rest of the world."

A CHANGING WORLD

Micronesia wants closer U.S. relations

EDITOR'S NOTE: Regular columnist George Will is on vacation. When he returns, his column will resume as a regular feature of The Reporter-Telegram on Thursdays and Sundays.

PONAPE, Caroline Islands — The marvelous people of this still unspoiled island, one of 2,141 that make up Micronesia, 6,000 miles into the Pacific, are not a bit concerned about U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig's resignation, nuclear weapons negotiations between Washington and Moscow or most other so-called global crisis events.

John Pinkerman

They are, however, concerned about their burning desire to have varying degrees of close ties to the United States and so are their Micronesian brothers in the Marshall Islands, the Palaus and the Marianas. In short, they are puzzled at best and angered at worst by the foot-dragging that is delaying termination of the U.N. Trusteeship status and the start of permanent formal relationships with America.

The United States has administered the affairs of Micronesia since 1945 under a U.N. mandate following U.S. capture from Japanese occupiers. While U.S. bureaucracy and ignorance have caused some problems, the four principal areas (the Marshalls, the Federated States of Micronesia which include Ponape, Kosrae, Yap and Truk, the Palaus and the Northern Marianas) are anxious to get on with their closer U.S. association, one that includes American money in exchange for U.S. rights on their territory, some of these rights calling for military bases.

While such tiny, widely separated islands may not seem worth much vis-a-vis NATO bases in West Germany, strategists know that the Micronesian islands, covering only 516 square miles in land altogether, provide a possible U.S. Pacific "safety net" spread over 3 million square miles of water. This is vital at a time when opposition is rising to powerful U.S. bases in Okinawa and the Philippines.

As negotiations stand today, there is a substantial U.S. missile tracking base in Kwajalein in the Marshalls, and it will not be affected by whatever the islanders of that area decide on Aug. 17 when they vote on just what type of association they prefer with the United States. Also, Saipan, Tinian and other islands of the Northern Marianas already are, in effect, a commonwealth similar to Puerto Rico and U.S. military bases soon will spring up in that area. Palau is also targeted for an expanded U.S. Navy and Air Force outpost of considerable significance.

The federated states, including Ponape, "national capital," have no specific military role at this time, but they, too, are in a strategic location and could beef up U.S. military presence in the Pacific, particularly on Yap and Truk. Also, all Micronesia is expected to become an area pledged to barring any "third party" bases — the third party obviously referring to the Soviet Union.

There are some tough and separate negotiations ahead before a formal U.S.-Micronesia association is assured. The Northern Marianas, for instance, wonder if $32 million for a 100-year lease on the vital air base project on Tinian is enough. The Palaus wonder if they want exposure to large numbers of Americans and the change in a centuries-old lifestyle that such a situation would entail. Ponape wants no part of the welfare state (food stamps, etc.) that is so much a part of U.S. life; its people are anxious to make their own way. And, the Marshalls people are debating just how much independence they want in a U.S. association.

However, in a broad sense, all of these people, no more than 200,000 in number, are persuaded that a U.S. association beats what they have experienced in the past — subjugation by Spain, Germany and Japan. They know they want nothing to do with Moscow and they are not concerned with a possible Soviet U.N. Security Council veto when the dissolution of the trusteeship comes up.

On the civil side of Micronesia's administration, a top U.S. official agreed with DeMars in principle. "Technically, the U.S.S.R. has veto power," Neiman Craley, special assistant to High Comissioner Janet J. McCoy (McCoy was at the United Nations during my visit to Saipan), said in an interview, "but it might be that the four districts of the Trust Territory and the United States would do it (dissolve the trusteeship) anyway and just inform the United Nations that it had been done."

ART BUCHWALD

Vacations can result in lost jobs

As the earnings statements of large companies get gloomier there is more and more pressure on corporation executives to make economies in their firms. Most companies do this first by firing the office boy, then retrenching in the mail room department, and finally cutting the budget on the softball team.

Art Buchwald

But as time goes on and stockholders get unhappier, management may have to start making cuts in other levels of the company.

How does someone in a large company save his job when all around him or her are losing theirs? Perhaps I can be of help.

The first bit of advice is DO NOT TAKE A VACATION. No matter how badly you need one, hang in there, or else this is what could happen:

"Maxwell, what are you doing sitting at my desk?"

"Oh, Herndon, how was the Cape?"

"Fine. Now what are you doing in my office?"

"Well, finance decided to merge sales with packaging, and they asked me to take over. I naturally fought the move, but they were adamant. We tried to reach you on the Cape, but they said you were racing in the Hyannis-Nantucket sailboat trials. How did you do?"

"I came in third. Now where have I been moved to?"

"That's what they were trying to reach you about. They've had to cut across the board. I spoke up for you but...."

The second bit of advice is to institute an economy committee before one is constituted without you. Go into the boss and say, "B.J., I'd like to organize a cost-cutting program so we don't get caught like International Harvester with our pants down. What I suggest we do is form a team and look into every department to see how we can eliminate waste. I could report to you within a month, so you'll have something to show the board."

If your idea is accepted, you must use great tact in suggesting the elimination of somebody else's job, on the off-chance that he might survive and do you in.

You could say, "Gentlemen, I think we'd make a mistake if we let Fowler go. It's true his advertising campaign for Fluff was a complete disaster, but we must remember there has been great consumer resistance in toiletries for dogs this year. Fowler is a genius when it comes to advertising, even though he has a tendency to antagonize everyone he comes into contact with."

If Fowler loses his job, you have the minutes of the meeting to prove that you've defended him.

To show that you have the company's interest at heart before your own, announce some economies you're making in your own department. "I'm happy to announce, gentlemen, that I've furloughed two telephone operators and laid off four watchmen in our Wichita warehouse, thus saving us $33,000. This cuts my department to the bone."

The biggest danger during an economy drive is that the company may hire an outside consulting firm to make a private report on which people should be let go.

If one comes in the plant, stop all work you are doing and spend every waking moment with him. Most consultants know little or nothing about the business they are investigating, and if you can make them look good, they may believe you are necessary to the firm.

"Tell me, Herndon, who sits at this desk?" the consultant asks.

"Maxwell. He's a great golfer. He always plays on Wednesday afternoon with his doctor."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Aug. 8, the 220th day of 1982. There are 145 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 8, 1974, President Richard Nixon announced his resignation, saying the Watergate scandal had forced him to step down in the national interest.

On this date:

In 1540, England's King Henry VIII married his fifth wife, Catherine Howard.

In 1588, British sea forces under Sir Francis Drake destroyed the Spanish Armada in a battle off France.

In 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte sailed for St. Helena to spend the rest of his life in exile.

In 1963, thieves took $7 million in Britain's "Great Train Robbery."

Ten years ago: The Democratic National Committee officially nominated Sargent Shriver to succeed Thomas Eagleton as George McGovern's vice-presidential running mate.

Five years ago: Vice President Walter Mondale said a new set of rules for the FBI and CIA would bar all wiretaps, searches and mail openings without warrants.

Proposed homestead law changes raising some hackles

By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN — On Aug. 20, the House Financial Institutions Committee and House Constitutional Amendments Committee will take a look at what's shaping up as one of the touchier issues for the 1983 Legislature: amending the Texas homestead law.

"It's almost a religious issue," comments Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Salado, chairman of the Financial Institutions panel. "It will be volatile..."

Certainly it's an issue which arouses some strong emotions in Texans, who made the homestead law part of the state's constitution in 1845 after having enacted similar provisions for the Republic of Texas in 1839.

Texas Consumer Finance Association is hoping to see those constitutional provisions altered to allow homesteads to be pledged for purposes other than home improvement loans.

TCFA attorney Bob Duke, Austin, insists that his group isn't interested in repealing the homestead protection, but in allowing persons to use their property as they see fit.

TCFA has been conducting a survey of some consumers to determine if they'd like to be able to borrow with their homesteads used as collateral, and Duke says the answers indicate that half of those responding aren't aware they can't do that now.

In March 1981, the group hired Houston pollster V. Lance Tarrance & Associates to survey Texans about second mortgages, with Tarrance reporting that the public isn't familiar with the existing law and that 68 percent favored allowing such mortgages, while only 15 percent were opposed.

Opponents, the survey indicated, cited protecting the home and family as their major reason for opposing a change in the law.

Most other states have never employed such constitutional or statutory protections to homesteads, Duke reports, but have simply regulated lending practices as they concern homesteads.

However, Rebecca Lightsey, director of the Texas Consumer Association, doesn't feel any change is needed.

By altering the law and allowing homeowners to borrow against their homes, the result could be an increased number of foreclosures and families finding themselves without homes because of missed car payments, she argues.

Duke argues that that hasn't happened in other states and isn't the intent of the proposal.

Most often, Duke says, second mortgages in other states have been related to financing college for children, buying second homes, setting up or expanding businesses or meeting medical expenses.

Rep. Alan Schoolcraft, R-San Antonio, who sponsored legislation last year to change the law, plans to have legislation again in 1983 — as does Rep. Bill Ceverha, R-Dallas, another sponsor from 1981.

Schoolcraft's proposal would have set a floor of $2,500 on loans and required notice to the debtors that they could lose their home by non-payment of their loan.

Ceverha's approach was to simply delete the constitutional provision against borrowing against homesteads without spelling out specific limits or purposes.

Duke thinks the idea of minimum and maximum amounts (perhaps as a percentage of equity in a homestead) are likely to appeal to lawmakers, while Lightsey feels there should be some provisions spelled out on when consumers may borrow against their homes.

Duke also argues that no changes will be made unless those changes are desired by the public, since a constitutional amendment will be required.

And, he says, there won't be the sort of coalition of lenders which lined up behind HB 1228, the interest rate ceiling bill, in 1981, lining up to win approval of changes in the homestead law in 1983.

There's not the urgency, he comments, nor the widespread support, which existed for HB 1228.

Indeed, it appears that the major bank trade associations may sit this battle out while savings and loan associations, which hold most of the first lien mortgages on Texas homes, seem divided on the question.

And a number of politicians have indicated they don't like the plan.

Earlier this year Gov. Bill Clements told reporters he doesn't want any change in the law.

What Duke and some other proponents of change hope to do is convince Texans they'll like it better another way — but it's already clear some folks aren't going to buy those arguments.

SPEAKING OUT

Child abuse serious, not to be taken lightly

By NAN GORDON

A native Midlander, Nan Gordon is the director of Midland Rape Crisis Center. She attended Texas Tech University.

An estimated 60,000 to 100,000 children are sexually abused in America each year, according to the American Humane Association. Sexual abuse of children is a shocking topic but it is something that people need to be aware of. Experts believe that only a small percentage of sex crimes against children are reported. During the month of July, 15 cases were reported to the Midland Rape Crisis Center. An alarming number of the victims were children.

Sexual abuse can happen to any child, any time, anywhere. It can happen in familiar areas such as walking to, from and around school, in public places such as parks and playgrounds; and in deserted areas such as vacant lots, but many of the incidents occur at home. Because of the noticeable increase of children being sexually assaulted, the Midland Rape Crisis Center has developed a new safety program. The program is called "Speak Up, Say No" and is for children kindergarten through sixth grade. Penelope Peabody, an animated mouse, teaches "OK and Not OK" touching, that a child can say no to someone older, and that he she is not to blame if it does happen to them.

Some facts on sexual abuse of children: Children are natural targets because of their vulnerability to the natural authority of the adult or older abuser. Most often this is a crime of availability, such as the child living near the offender. Children seldom lie about such a serious matter. Not all children are able to tell parents directly that they have been molested. Parents must recognize that most sex abusers aren't strangers. The majority of cases are committed by someone the child knows and trusts, such as a family member, relative or neighbor. A relative or friend who molests a child usually asks him or her to keep it a secret.

For this reason, parents often don't learn that the abuse has occurred. If the parent does find out that a family member has abused the child, many do not take steps to help or protect their child. The parents' concern over scandal, preserving a failing marriage, keeping the breadwinner at home, often override the child's best interest. Children have not been made aware that they should be prepared for anything other than a scary-looking dangerous stranger. They are not prepared for someone who is nice to them to take advantage of them.

Adults can help prevent sexual abuse of children: Give children clear, accurate information on sexual child abuse. Teach children how to protect themselves. Encourage children to tell you about any incident no matter who the person is.

Some points to discuss with your child:

1. Do not accept a ride with a stranger or without parent's permission.

2. Do not walk or allow a stranger to walk with you — if a stranger does walk up to you or touch you, immediately walk away and go to the nearest person you can find — a police officer, a person working in a yard or to the nearest house — for help.

3. Do not accept a gift from a stranger.

4. If a stranger asks directions send him to a service station or the police department (if a person really wants directions he will most likely not ask a child).

5. Do not go near the stranger's car who is asking directions — DO NOT GO WITH HIM.

6. If someone does try to pick you up, write down the license number of the car and notify the police.

7. Do not play near or in public restrooms.

8. Children should know a safe, well-traveled route to take to and from school; isolated areas should be avoided.

9. Go straight home after school.

Sexual abuse of children affects everyone. The victim may suffer from physical and psychological harm. Family or friends may be angered or outraged or they may be covering the problem up and feel very guilty. Children often feel it is their fault, they are confused, frightened, feel responsible and guilty. Children usually give indirect signals when they can't come out and tell someone directly that this has happened to them. Things to observe are: a drastic behavior change, b acting out, c dropping hints about the situation, d telling things that happened to somebody else. Other signs you may notice with sexually molested children are: sleep disturbances, loss of appetite, irritability, crankiness, behaving as a younger child and changes in behavior at school or in relating to friends.

There are ways you can help if you learn that a child has been sexually abused. Don't deny the problem. Believe the child, try to control your emotions and stay calm. Try not to overreact. Fear and anger are normal reactions but can frighten the child. Let the child know that your feelings are not directed at him or her. Never blame, punish or embarrass the child. Give emotional support and tell the child that he she is not to blame and was right to tell. Give reassurance that he she is safe and that no harm will come from reporting the incident.

Children must be assured that, should this happen to them, they are not responsible and they have done nothing bad and they are not bad. Parents should get medical assistance for the child if sexual assault has occurred, counseling if needed and report the incident to proper authorities.

"Speaking Out" columnists are invited to submit articles on subjects of their choice. They should be limited to 850 words or less.

POSITIVE THINKING

How you think affects your life's quality

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

A skin specialist told me about the curious case of a supertense executive who had developed red blotches on his face. This man, it seemed, had got into a nervous habit of constantly picking his face.

"Does skin trouble of that nature have a name?" I asked.

"We call it neurotic excoriation," said the doctor. What a disease! Some sick condition in the man's thinking and emotions made him pick destructively at his face.

"What I did for him," the doctor continued, "was send him to his priest. I told him to tell his priest all about the mass of unhappiness weighing on his mind and to ask for spiritual help."

The executive followed the advice and came to understand his mixed-up attitudes. He began displacing them with faith, good will and healthy thinking and so finally he got over the face-picking habit and the blotches disappeared.

Of course, few persons pick at their faces, but many are always picking mentally at their circumstances or at other people. Take, for example, a young man who wrote, telling how he finally wised up to the reason he had failed at everything he tried.

A couple of years ago this man was a life insurance salesman, doing pretty well, but he hated it. What he really wanted was to teach brass in a college of music. So he sold everything to raise tuition money and enrolled in a school to qualify himself for that teaching post. But he failed in his studies and grew increasingly miserable.

He applied for two office jobs but in both cases was turned down in favor of someone else.

He then answered an ad without knowing what kind of job it was. Wouldn't you know? It was in insurance — the thing he disliked so much. His wife insisted that he take the insurance job until he could find something he would like.

"Meanwhile, I had a sneaking feeling that we ought to go to church. But immediately I disliked the pastor. He was too happy. I avoided shaking his hand on Sunday morning because I didn't want to talk with him.

I don't know why I was embarrassed with my new insurance job, and when friends asked me what I was doing, told them apologetically that it was only temporary. My supervisor did everything he could to help me but my first two months were a failure.

"It was then that a transformation started taking place. This supervisor is a religious person and has a terrific attitude all the time. Doubt and fear are not a part of him. He is a self-made man and is just as much at ease selling to the professional man as talking to the laborer. He said, 'Your past life has been a failure, but I will help you succeed if you will do exactly as I say for two weeks.'

"Instantly I made up my mind that I would prove him wrong. My pride was hurt. I did do exactly as he said. Result: I had 25 sales in two weeks and I had a ball doing it!

"Remember that happy minister? I now began to look at him objectively, point by point. After a lot of prayer I finally got up enough nerve to ask him for an appointment. I told him how I had felt about him and asked his forgiveness. I have since talked with him many times and now I know why he is so happy.

"This week I have read my Bible with new understanding and I feel a sense of joy I have never felt before. I feel completely at peace with the world. It's truly amazing how friendly people are if you only look for good. The future looks bright, yet I have never felt so humble."

I print this letter because it tells how a man got on top of his chief problem which, like most of us, happened to be himself. His stumbling block was compounded by false pride, hostility feelings and an underlying lack of confidence — three handicaps that often go together. But new insight and the acceptance of spiritual needs opened the door to effective, joyous living. He found the insurance business a wonderful way to help people.

Marcus Aurelius, the old Roman, knew what he was talking about when he wrote, "The happiness of your life depends upon the quality of your thoughts."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Over-regulation

To The Editor

"The Energy Outlook" editorial in Sunday's (Aug. 1) issue only points out a lack of faith in the free market system. I disagree with you and the governor about needing a national energy policy. Why do we need this expensive bureaucracy? What can they do that competitors don't do naturally and better?

There never would have been a shortage of oil and gas in the first place if the government hadn't interfered and I don't believe the Department of Energy contributed much to solve the problem.

Remember, government employees, elected or otherwise are not paid to produce. They do not have to make a profit and are not compelled to create new, money-saving systems in order to outdo competitors. Bureaucrats think they are helping us (poor helpless citizens) by overseeing businesses but in the end the high cost of government salaries and the typical ridiculous regulations, which they must write in order to reconfirm the importance of their job, does ultimately cost the consumer.

The best energy policy is a deregulated NO ENERGY POLICY. Believe in the free market. It still works better than anything else.

Lack of logic

To The Editor

While I am in complete agreement with the concept of one way streets for Midland, I must say that I am a bit confused (as are others, I am sure) by the apparent lack of logic demonstrated in their layout.

I travel the Andrews Highway to and from work, turning onto Texas Street to continue my journey to the downtown area. The one way segment of Texas does not begin until Avenue L, and this creates utter chaos for the rush hour traffic at that point. I have traveled this route three mornings this week, and three mornings I have almost been run over by a motorist who was of the opinion that Texas becomes one way immediately upon turning off the Andrews Highway.

When the motorist reaches Avenue L and sees the yellow markers in the street signaling the beginning of the one way segment, he whips over into the right lane of traffic without taking precaution to signal or pay heed to another vehicle to his right. I have had to brake violently to avoid a collision on three occasions. I admire the progressive thinking (finally) of our city fathers, but I believe that our city planners could have used a little more logic in laying out our one way streets, i.e., one way streets entirely to the main traffic arteries of the city rather than the piecemeal situation we have at present.

Perhaps the city could invest in signs that state "TRAVELING THIS STREET MAY ENDANGER YOUR LIFE."

Pro New York

To The Editor:

Charley Reese's initial generalization that "New Yorkers are like children, the most naive and provincial of all the genus homo sapiens Americanus" is about as incorrect as his use of the word genus (look that one up and you'll find that he has classified them at the species level, or ask any ninth grader).

But I suppose naive to Reese means not knowing how many cans of beer it takes to drive from Waco to Odessa; all things in context. And certainly one must feel guilty about one's own provinciality, if it is necessary to compare it to that of an entire population in a melting pot city whose population represents a far greater cross-section of the real world than most places.

Since according to Reese, New Yorkers live in pollution, filth, and assorted other unsanitary conditions, I guess we are to conclude that they as individuals are generally unsanitary (trash?). Of course, this is extremely valid, since it is the exhalations of those many diseased individuals which cause pollution. Even though they are trying their best to filter out the industrial and automotive exhaust with their lungs, it will take time; outdoor jogging should be encouraged. And since New Yorkers live amidst "advanced ripoffitis," we must be wary of them as we might be forced into buying something at an unfair price. Seems that Charley has forgotten one of the pillars of our economic structure, namely Caveat Emptor (you'll find this one in your sixth grade American history book). Of course if the prospective consumer is uneducated in his merchandise and unaware of its market worth he might overpay — whose fault is this?

Striking the high points for brevity now, the "few remaining legitimate theatres" referred to must redefine few, or has Broadway become suddenly illegitimate? And perhaps all neighborhoods seem blighted if the houses there lack two car garages and swimming pools, my apologies. And of course, the profound imagery of New York City as "a monument to the failure of liberalism," perhaps with a good advertising campaign we can even sell this one, bumper stickers and all. We should all get behind this one and all its corollaries as outlined by our leader. Yes, abolish subsidized mass transit and force everyone to buy large white Chryslers (made in Mexico, longhorn hood ornaments optional).

Next, do away with welfare and send all the elderly to Charley Reese's Sun Belt R&R Health Care Clinic, and those young enough to work can find jobs as kitchen help in his new restaurant chain. The homeless of New York can easily be plowed into the river, easily done with a cat dozer since Manhattan is an island. When you think about it, there really is no big problem if you have the answers, and a ready-made fall guy. Listen up New York: stop your humanitarian pursuits and let the poor die out, get that torch-bearing lady turned around and put up a No Vacancy sign, get on the stick and clean up your act to where decent white folks won't have to mingle with undesirables except at the car wash. And stop being naive and provincial and thinking that everyone deserves a chance — it's obviously too liberal.

Bellyaching's a way of life for some

ROUSTIN' ABOUT with Ed Todd

There are people in this world who thrive on bellyaching. They grumble for the sheer pleasure of it. If situations, people and things were — to their notion — perfect and in accord with their outward sense of what is right and proper, they'd be miserable. For them, complaining has evolved into a way of life. Disorder is their placebo and, therefore, is order, however discordant, to them.

Whether they know it or not, they are quite comfortable in what they hope others view as their life of misery. Complaining is their natural state.

Psychologists and psychiatrists probably have medical terms and observations for the various conditions of The Gripe and The Nag. And for the price of an office call, they'll propose some conditions and names for the state of discord. And after a few more consultations, they'll propose reasons why the habitual complainer is so stuck-in-the-mud complacent or so outwardly miserable.

The complainer probably would prefer that his state be viewed as miserable; it would be far more gratifying than to propose he is comfortable, which is likely. Too, the good doctor could suggest additional office visits and therapy, which would be futile, but which would enrich the headshrinker's bank account and which would give the bellyacher something else to fuss about.

He could compare shrinks to regular M.D.-type doctors and express woe. Doctors prey on his misery, the griper will gripe, and will contend that that goes for doctors who affix M.D., Ph.D., J.D., LL.D., D.D.S., D.C., D.O., Sc.D., D.V.M., and even Ed.D. and D.D. to their names.

Cries of woe are music to the bellyacher; cacophony is musical solace. Spike Jones is his favorite conductor.

The bellyacher will gripe, gripe, gripe to the point of revelry if things go against his grain, but, in reality, that's what he wants and craves. Without a gripe, what would he have to live for? His identify would be lost. He would be without recognition, and that would be a pity.

Efficient record-keeping easy for you with MCS

Paid Advertisement

If you own or operate a small business, you know the need for an efficient, dependable method of keeping your records. And there's no better way of eliminating costly error and time than using a computer. But most small businesses simply cannot afford a computer, not to mention the cost of employing a full time computer operator and or programmer. If you are in this situation, the relief you have been praying for has finally arrived. Now, as a hero comes to the rescue of a damsel in distress, Merchants Consulting Service is here to relieve some of the stress of your daily recordkeeping for your business. MCS is ready to fill all of your needs in the field of accurate, computer-kept records.

After working in national retail management for over twenty years, Dennis Haddon realizes the need for accurate record keeping at reasonable rates that small business owners can afford. He knows that accurate record keeping is just as important to small home-owned businesses as it is to the large national retailers. He also knows that not many small businesses can afford payroll expenditure for a full time computer operator, much less for an expensive computer. From his experience with larger national retailers, he knows details which are missing in the daily record keeping of smaller independent businesses. MCS specializes in analytical retailing, using their computer to maximum benefits for your business at rates you can afford.

Examples of major work MCS performs for your business are sales analysis, mark-up analysis, gross profit by department, and personnel cost analysis. Inventory analysis, actual cash flow, payroll, general ledger, accounts payable and receivable, and return on investment are other services MCS performs for your business monthly.

In addition, MCS specialties include tax preparation, quarterly analysis, projections, and sales history. All services may be contracted either seperately or at a package price.

Try dinner at Cattleman's

Paid Advertisement

So you got home from the office late and your wife has already fed the cold dinner to the Doberman, the kids are crying because they are hungry, your wife is crying because she spent all afternoon in a kitchen as hot as the Sahara on a mid-July afternoon for nothing, her surprise didn't come off because YOU didn't make it home, and... well, what else can go wrong? Now your wife is sobbing that everything is ruined, or is it? You can very quickly trandform yourself from a goat to a hero by treating your family, and yourself, to a pleasant eveing meal at Cattleman's Steak House.

One trip to Cattleman's and you'll love what owners Bill and Pat Henkel have done to serve you. The pleasant, relaxed atmosphere and the friendly, efficient staff will make you want to come back again and again. But perhaps the best experience you'll have at Calleman's is the delicious food.

Appetizers at Cattleman's range from a extra large or regular size mountain of onion rings to shrimp cocktail, fried zucchini, or fried mushrooms. Maybe you would prefer a hot bowl of homemade soup, steaming chili, or frito pie. The salad bar is a work of art.

To complement your dinner, Bill and Pat have included a good selection of wines, champagnes, and sherry, ranging from inexpensive to exquisite. They serve only premium beers, those generally considered to be the best.

Now comes the steak, cooked to your order of perfection. Dinner steak, ribeye, or club steak would be the perfect way to fill that hole in your tummy. Sirloins come in all sizes, ranging from sirloin for one to sirloin for eight. T-Bone steak, an old favorite, comes in three sizes to satisfy even the hungriest appetite. Prime rib is the prime choice of many hungry appetites when it is available.

Maybe instead of steak, you would prefer seafood. You can go to Cattleman's for delicious fried shrimp, oysters, scallops, catfish, and even froglegs. And even though every item on the menu may be considered special at Cattleman's, you owe it to yourself to try Cattleman's specialty: Chicken fried steak. Other menu items include fried chicken strips, hamburger steak, and Virginia ham steak. All entrees include a hearty baked potato and a trip to the salad bar.

For those of you who are not quite so hungry, Bill and Pat provide the all-American favorites: the hamburger or cheeseburger. Both come in two sizes. If you really want to spice it up, try one of the jalapeno burgers. Grilled cheese, ham and cheese, steak sandwiches, and turkey,ham and cheese sandwiches are waiting for those with only a light appetite. A trip to the salad bar may be made without a dinner order.

Kids are welcome at Cattleman's Steak House,too. Special child's plates are available for your little ones. Non-alcoholic beverages include tea, coffee, milk and soft drinks. And now that you have finished that delicious steak and are sitting back relaxed and contented, how about desert? Top it all off with scrumptious cherry or bluberry cheesecake or delicious pecan pie. Hours at Cattleman's are from 10:00 to 2:00 and 5:00 to 9:30, Monday through Friday and 5:00 to 10:00 on Saturdays. Cattleman's is closed on Sunday. And if the parking lot is full when you get there, go on in anyway. The parking lot is almost always full, and you very rarely have more than a five minute wait to be seated.

Peso shrinks 36 percent Friday

By JUAN M. VASQUEZ
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

MEXICO CITY — The Mexican peso lost about 36 percent of its value Friday after a government decision to let it float in relation to the U.S. dollar. It was the second devaluation of the peso in seven months as Mexico struggled to improve its badly ailing economy.

International economists said the devaluation was made necessary by the Mexican government's actions to cushion some of the February devaluation's hardships.

They "came in and started intervening (to prop up the peso in foreign exchange markets)," said Richard Kjeldsen, vice president and senior international economist at Security Pacific National Bank in Los Angeles. "They let wages go, they subsidized some of the firms to offset the higher wages, and then they let some of the prices go (up) again. Their inflation rate was popping up again."

Many banks were simply not selling dollars for pesos.

"I think they are just waiting to see which way it goes," an informed Mexican banker said.

"Seventy for a dollar today," a headline said in the early afternoon edition of one newspaper here.

Comments from Mexican bus riders and street vendors ranged from disgust to unprintable opinions about government leaders.

According to a banker specializing in the foreign exchange market, the peso can be expected to settle somewhere between 65 and 80 to $1 when the market calms down in a week or two.

Charles Semones, a Security Pacific economist, said the devaluation should help tourism — one of Mexico's largest industries — because of a more favorable exchange rate for foreign visitors. It also could enhance the country's export trade by making its goods cheaper abroad, he said, and stimulate U.S. manufacturing activity on the Mexican side of the border because labor here will become less expensive.

However, he added, it will have a negative impact on U.S. businesses near the border that are frequented by Mexican visitors, and it will create some inflationary pressure within Mexico because the prices of imports will rise.

The Mexican banker said the sudden decision of the Bank of Mexico, announced Thursday evening, caught much of the business community and some government officials by surprise.

"The comments I have heard are that the event was precipitated by the recent increase in controlled prices," the banker said. "That's why I don't believe it was planned."

The price changes, announced last Sunday, raised the cost of regular gasoline from 50 cents a gallon to about 80 cents. The cost of electricity and tortillas and other staples rose accordingly. The price of bread doubled.

This development appears to shake the confidence of Mexican wage earners and bring on increased skepticism about the ability of the lame-duck government of President Jose Lopez Portillo to control the economy. Lopez Portillo's six-year term will end Nov. 30.

For the past two months, government leaders had been saying that the economy was heading out of the crisis brought about by a peso devaluation on Feb. 17. On that occasion, the peso went from 26.5 to $1 to 45 to $1 before the government moved to set a firm rate.

In May, Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva-Herzog offered a grim assessment of the Mexican economy. He expressed hope that inflation in 1982 would not exceed 50 percent, which would still be a record at that.

He also forecast then that the government would control the "slippage" of the peso so that by the end of the year it would stand at no more than 55 to $1.

"That's all down the drain now," a Mexican banker said Friday.

Simultaneously with the decision to allow the peso to float, or seek a market-determined level in relation to the dollar, it was announced that the government would maintain a two-tier exchange rate.

There will be an officially supported rate of exchange for the importation of goods considered essential, and another rate, based on supply and demand, for imported luxury goods.

OU teaches dangers of oil exploration

NORMAN — Black gold, the lifeblood of the petroleum industry, follows a long, slow and sometimes dangerous route to the surface.

One of those dangers inherent in drilling and pumping oil - a blowout - is the focus of prevention systems training taught at the University of Oklahoma.

For the man or woman on the rig, courses offer a "refinement of the best procedures known to prevent oil well blowouts," said Bob D. Briscoe, assistant program manager for the OU Oil Well Blowout Prevention Systems School.

The OU school, the second university school established in the nation, was created because "industry recognized a need to train personnel in oil well blowout prevention," he said. The need was dramatized by several large blowouts which resulted in spectacular fires.

Briscoe is quick to dispel the misconception that all blowouts result in fire. "A blowout is any uncontrollable release of gas or salt water to the surface," he said. Briscoe drew the analogy of placing a person's thumb against the end of a garden hose in which water is being dispersed. "The water in the garden hose will follow the path of least resistance. When the pressure is greater at the end, the water will often spring a leak in the hose."

The same holds true for oil wells, he said. "An open well is not holding enough pressure against the resistance," said Briscoe.

When a blowout does result in a fire, not all are of "the magnitude movies portray," he said.

To train personnel in oil well blowout prevention, the OU school offers year-round class lectures dealing with tenchiques for handling possible blowouts and on-site training at a test well. IMCO BOSS simulators are programmed to electronically illustrate well conditions present during an impending blowout, and students are trained in the necessary procedures to apply to bring the well back to normal operation.

Designed primarily for drillers and toolpushers, the school also is widely attended by engineers, drilling supervisors, derrick workers, rig superintendents, rig managers and others related to drilling operations.

The OU Oil Well Blowout Prevention Systems School offerings include four courses approved by the U.S. Mineral Management Service.

A five-day offshore program covers subsurface blowout prevention stacks, and a four-day course deals with the surface stacks. In addition, the school offers one-day surface and subsurface refresher courses for industry personnel.

The USMMS requires that all supervisory personnel working on rigs on the outer continental shelf or in U.S. offshore waters complete the full offshore course once every four years and the refresher course once every year, said Briscoe.

OU's Oil Well Blowout prevention Systems School was established in 1975 as the second university school in the nation. The first was started at Louisiana State University at Baton Rouge.

The OU program, which trains more than 2,000 persons annually, is offered by the School of Petroleum and Geological Engineering, and Continuing Education and Public Service.

For more information, persons may call Briscoe at 405 325-3946.

Texas school offers graduate business classes

AUSTIN — Women in business may sometime need a helping hand — especially when they are entering the management levels of business for the first time.

The Graduate School of Business at The University of Texas at Austin once again will offer its successful seminar, Women in Business: Developing Managerial Skills, Nov. 7-12.

In 23 hours of instruction, women who have had at least two years' work experience but who need a firmer grip on management skills will learn how to interpret financial reports, absorb the principles of accounting and budgeting used in management decisions, and become familiar with aspects of business law, tax regulations and people management.

The UT Austin program is limited to 30 women. It will be conducted in the Thompson Conference Center. The faculty will be drawn from UT business and communication colleges, and from industry. Dr. Cristinca Banks, UT assistant professor of management, is the faculty coordinator.

The seminar fee is $650 if paid by Oct. 7, and $715 after that date.

The Office of Management Development Programs of the Graduate School of Business is in charge of the arrangements.

Program planners say the seminar particularly will be useful to women with non-business backgrounds who have been promoted to areas were general management skills are needed and to women who have returned to the work force recently after an extended absence.

Additional information about the program for women may be obtained from the Office of Management Development Programs, The University of Texas, Box 7337, UT Station, Austin, Texas 78712, telephone (512) 471-5893.

For those who need a quick grasp of basic business concepts, the Office of Management Development Programs at The University of Texas Graduate School of Business has devised a new short program.

Entitled Fundamentals of business, the program will be held Oct. 3-8 in UT's Thompson Conference Center.

In 28 hours of intensive instruction, the coruse will examine both the quantitative and behavioral aspects of management. Participants will take home a working knowledge of the organization of a company and of the managerial responsibility in each functional area. Members of the UT business faculty will offer the instruction.

Program topics will focus on finance, human resources management, uses of microcomputers, accounting, interpersonal dynamics, tax regulations and business law.

The course has been designed with four types of persons in mind.

A new manager who needs indoctrination in basic business concepts.

A manager in transition, preparing for a change in functions.

An experienced manager wanting to update his skills.

An entrepreneur wanting to learn sound business practices in order to capitalize on his ambition and ideas.

The cost is $875. Preregistration is required.

Telephone registrations may be made by calling the Office of Management Development Programs, (512) 471-5893.

Developers suing Exxon over shale project

DENVER (AP) — A California partnership has sued Exxon Corp. and Tosco Corp. for $58 million on grounds the energy firms misled it on the Colony shale oil project's future.

Parachute Joint Venture Ltd. filed the suit Friday in Denver federal court.

Exxon, which held 60 percent interest in the $5 billion Colony project at Parachute in western Colorado, cancelled the project on May 3. Tosco Corp., Exxon's partner, exercised an option to sell its interest for $100 million to Exxon.

The developer, a California partnership between Rutgers Mortgage Corp. and Western States Venture Capitol, charged Exxon with negligence in leading the partnership to believe the oil company was going ahead with the Colony project.

Parachute Joint Venture had exercised an option on 80 acres near the Colony project and had committed resources to building a shopping center called Parachute Park, the suit said.

Exxon had also committed itself to paying at least $175,000 on construction of a four-lane road to connect the shopping center with the Colony project and parchute.

The payment would be made if the road was begun by May 1982 and finished by the end of the year, the suit said. Construction actually began in February and continued through July, the suit said.

However, the suit said Exxon has ordered an escrow agent holding the $175,000 for the road deal not to release the money.

The suit said Parachute Joint Venture had received assurances as late as February from Exxon representatives that the project would continue as planned, that Exxon had committed $400 million to the project for 1982 and that the project was not being re-evaluated for possible shutdown.

The suit seeks $8 million in compensatory damges and $50 million in punitive damages from Exxon and Tosco.

Many exhibitors expected at SME show in Odessa

More than 40 exhibitors representing some 100 companies have already reserved space in the Society of Manufacturing Engineers' (SME) first Odessa Industrial Productivity Conference and Exposition, November 16-18.

The three-day exposition will be at Odessa's Ector County Coliseum, with the technical conference taking place at the nearby Holiday Inn Hotel.

Demonstrations will be featured in over 50 equipment categories at the show including machine tools of all types, material handling, plant maintenance, energy conservation, tool & die, welding & joining, computers & electronics, security, and inventory control.

November 18, SME expects more than 3,000 manufacturing engineers, executives and industrial plant personnel from throughout West Texas to attend.

The concurrent technical conference at the Holiday Inn Hotel is designed to update local industries on implementation and applications of new technologies.

Conference topics will include industrial robots, CAD CAM, jig and fixture design, quality assurance, and liquid organic coatings.

American Peening offers old way to save money being pumped down-hole, through the inside of the pipe. It's when the fluid is returning to the surface, around the outside of a string, that is is most corrosive, and it is the outside of the string is unprotected by plastic coatings.

There are numerous problems with plastic, Morgan said, not encountered when using shot-peened pipe.

One of the problems is plastic coatings are thin and easily worn away by wirelines sometimes lowered through the pipe, such as when making a deviation check. The cables can cut right through the plastic, ruining its protective qualities.

Also, plastic and steel expand and contract at different rates. The difference in movement between the two, can actually cause plastic to tear loose from the drill pipe.

MORGAN SAID HE TRIED discussing this problem with people in the plastic coating business. "They don't want to discuss it with you," he said.

Morgan said he has had plastic coated pipe fail in as little as 10 days after being put into service. In one instance he cut the failed pipe into sections and split them, exposing the plastic lining. "And it looked like it had the measles," he said.

One of the worst problems with plastic-coated pipe, Morgan said, is once it begins to fail, plastic flakes off and washes to the bottom of the string, plugging the bit. It forces additional trips to be made, and causes lost time.

For these reasons and many more, Morgan said, these past four years all of Tri-Service's new drill pipe has been shot-peened.

Morgan probably has more experience with shot-peened drill pipe than any other driller. It doesn't bother him that shot peening hasn't been proven within the drilling industry as a whole.

Artillary tubes, crankshafts, and other equipment used under stressful conditions is shot peened, Morgan said, "It stands to reason if it works on that, it sure as hell will work in the oilfield."

Board, insurers keepng an eye on homeowners coverage

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State Board of Insurance Officials and property insurance writers are keeping an eye on deviations for homeowners insurance in view of the 20 percent reduction ordered by SBI for rates effective Sept. 1.

SBI ordered an overall reduction in property insurance rates of 16.3 per cent for all property rates.

During the past two years, a number of insurers have received permission to deviate downwards from the SBI set rate, but some have indicated they may seek to cancel those deviations, or to reduce the amount of deviation.

Also keeping an eye on the change are insurance agents, whose commissions may be affected by the lower rates.

Changes in procedures for chartering credit unions have been recommended by the staff of the Sunset Advisory Commission in its report on operations of the Credit Union Department and Credit Union Commission.

The SAC staff says CUD records show that of the 144 credit unions chartered in the last 10 years, 49 (or 34 per cent) have failed.

Of that 49, the report says, the CUD estimated "that at least one-third of these failures could be directly related to a field of membership that was too small or lacked sufficient interest to support a credit union."

Another common problem, the report adds, was "ineffective or unfit management."

Currently, the report comments, Texas law provides no basis for the CUD to screen out credit unions "likely to fail as a result of such problems."

The report calls for amending the Credit Union Act to contain "adequate chartering requirements," including criteria on the "economic viability" of the proposed credit union and the "character and general fitness of the incorporators - as is done for banking and savings and loan association characters.

••••

Savings and Loan Commissioner Alvis Vandygriff has asked Attorney General Mark White to rule on whether a savings and loan association which collects money in an escrow account to pay taxes on mortgaged property is the "authorized agent" to receive original tax notices and tax bills.

Vandygriff, in his request to White, says he believes the association would be the agent under the Texas property tax code, but he wants White to rule on the question.

The State Banking Board has delayed, for the time being, any action in the second complaint it has considered this year involving the sharing of automated teller machines.

Heritage National Bank, Tyler, filed a complaint against Peoples National Bank and Citizens First National Bank, both also of Tyler, over plans by the two banks to install and operate such unmanned machines.

The two banks indicated they'd be willing to share the machines, as required by Texas law, but Heritage says the conditions weren't reasonable - particularly as to requiring a revision of the sharing agreement if the "data processor" were changed.

The board earlier this year issued its first formal ruling in another dispute involving three banks in the Bryan-College Station area, in regards to "equal prominence" in advertising on the use of shared ATMs.

••••

Gov. Bill Clements has appointed Carroll Sullivan, 34, Georgetown, to the State finance Commission for a term ending Feb. 1, 1985.

Sullivan is chairman of the boards of First National Bank, Georgetown; Citizens State Bank, Bastrop; and First National Bank, San Marcos, and Vice chairman of Cove State Bank, Copperas Cove.

He will fill the unexpired term of George S. Cone, Fulton, who resigned.

The Water Development Board has given final approval to amendments to its rules on industrial solid waste management, to incorporate revisions made to Federal regulations.

Among the changes is clarification of a section to provide that generators of small quantities of hazardous wastes still remain subject to the provisions, and setting out requirements for monitoring of groundwater by owners and operators of waste disposal sites.

Department of Water Resources staff members are continuing to work on proposed rules on recycling of solid wastes, which are to be considered by the WDB at a later date.

State Board of Insurance reports 22 county mutual insurance companies operating in Texas earned $323.1 million in premiums in 1981, with incurred losses of $199.1 million.

SB earlier reported all Texas insurers exceeded $6,686 billion in earned premium and $4,617 in incurred losses for the year.

Bad publicity puts bank on skids, forces merger, bail out

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Abilene National Bank, which according to a federal agency was in imminent danger of failure, was taken over Friday by Mercantile Texas Corp., a Dallas based holding company.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. said Friday it is giving an estimated $11 million in financial assistance to facilitate the acquisition.

The aid is in the form of a five-year, $50 million deposit at Abilene National. No interest will be paid for two years, and after that interest will be paid at the prevailing rate on one-year U.S. Treasury bills, the FDIC said. The agency said that based on current rates, it estimated it will be foregoing $11 million in interest payments.

"The FDIC board acted following notification by the comptroller of the currency that Abilene National's financial condition had deteriorated and the bank was in imminent danger of failure," the FDIC said.

The FDIC said that acquisition of Abilene National will ensure uninterrupted service for all deposit and loan customers of Abilene National, which has two offices in Abilene.

Mercantile owns 23 banks in Texas and has more than $9 billion in assets. Abilene National has about $449 million in assets.

"Abilene National has been the object of adverse publicity due to problems related to asset quality, rapid growth and liquidity," Mercantile said in a news release issued in Dallas.

"More recently, regulatory authorities and the banking community have become concerned with respect to Abilene National's ability to survive without significant new financial support," Mercantile said.

In mid-July, the Abilene bank and federal and state officials said Abilene National remained solvent despite a flood of withdrawals the bank blamed on a story The Dallas Morning News published concerning loan problems at the bank. The Federal Reserve lent Abilene National $50 million to help meet the withdrawals.

The bank said it had lost $50 million in deposits — mostly from institutional investors rather than individuals — the day the newspaper published the story. That was more than one-tenth of its total deposits. The bank said the trend subsided the next week.

"We're not in jeopardy of going under," Abilene National Chairman Don Earney said at the time.

Earney, in full-page advertisements in the Wall Street Journal and some Texas newspapers, said the original Dallas Morning News story exaggerated the bank's losses and said in a headline that the FBI was investigating the bank, when actually the bank itself was not under investigation.

The newspaper's managing editor, Ralph Langer, declined comment on the ads at the time, saying only, "If we have inaccuracies we correct them."

Earney said the bank had notified the FBI that a bank customer whose loans had been foreclosed had alleged a loan officer had requested and accepted kickbacks.

The customer's allegations were made after it was found that the customer had provided the bank with a bogus financial statement, Earney said. The bank foreclosed on $5 million in loans when the customer failed to clear up discrepencies, Earney said.

FBI agent Ray Loll in Dallas said at the time that the FBI was investigating allegations concerning "persons working in and customers" of the bank. Loll declined to elaborate.

The FDIC board said Friday it had agreed to give its finanancial assistance to Abilene National with the bank still open because the cost of doing so was substantially lower than the costs that would be incurred if the bank failed. If the bank had failed, the FDIC would have had to arrange for a healthy bank to assume its deposits or it would have paid off off insured depositors and liquidated the bank's assets.

Late last month, banks in Redwater and Hooks failed and the FDIC helped arrange for another bank company to purchase them and take over their operations two days after they closed.

The agency noted that the open-bank assistance also means the FDIC avoids exposure to any contingent liabilities and the administrative costs of a failed bank receivership.

Mercantile, to ensure Abilene National's stability, is contributing $20 million in capital to the bank immediately and has agreed to contribute more later depending on the comptroller of the currency's estimates of Abilene National's loan losses.

The FDIC said Mercantile took control of Abilene National's shares by foreclosing on a loan to Abilene National's parent company, Consolidated Bancshares Inc.

The transaction was approved by the boards of directors of Abilene National and Consolidated Bancshares, and — following FDIC policy — all members of Abilene National's board of directors submitted letters of resignation, the FDIC said.

The board of governors of the Federal Reserve System also approved the acquisition.

The news release issued by Mercantile said it and Abilene National "jointly agreed that the future access of the bank to markets for federal funds, large deposits and new capital, had become permanently impaired and that the acquisition was necessary to serve the best interests of Abilene National, its customers and the Abilene community."

Robert W. Semple, 32, was elected chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Abilene National Bank on Thursday. He had been an executive vice president of Mercantile National in Dallas, lead bank of the holding company, and previoulsy had been an FDIC bank examiner.

Mercantile Texas operates in the Abilene, Austin, Corpus Christi, Dallas, El Paso, Houston, San Antonio and Waco markets. The company said pending acquisitions will give it added operations in the Lubbock, Odessa and Sherman markets.

British move to denationalize gas

LONDON (AP) — Energy Secretary Nigel Lawson has ordered the state gas company to sell its interests in five North Sea oil fields in a move underlining the Conservative government's commitment to de-nationalize large sections of British industry.

Financial experts pegged the value of British Gas Corporation's North Sea interests at between $513 million and $855 million.

The Department of Energy said in a statement that the move was ordered by Lawson Friday under legislation that came into force this summer.

The move was bitterly denounced by Ted Rowlands, energy spokesman for the opposition Labor Party. The Laborites are fighting the entire Conservative de-nationalization program.

Rowlands said the order to sell was "barely constitutional" and showed a "flagrant disregard for Parliament's right to scrutinize the sale of national assets." The Parliament is now in summer recess.

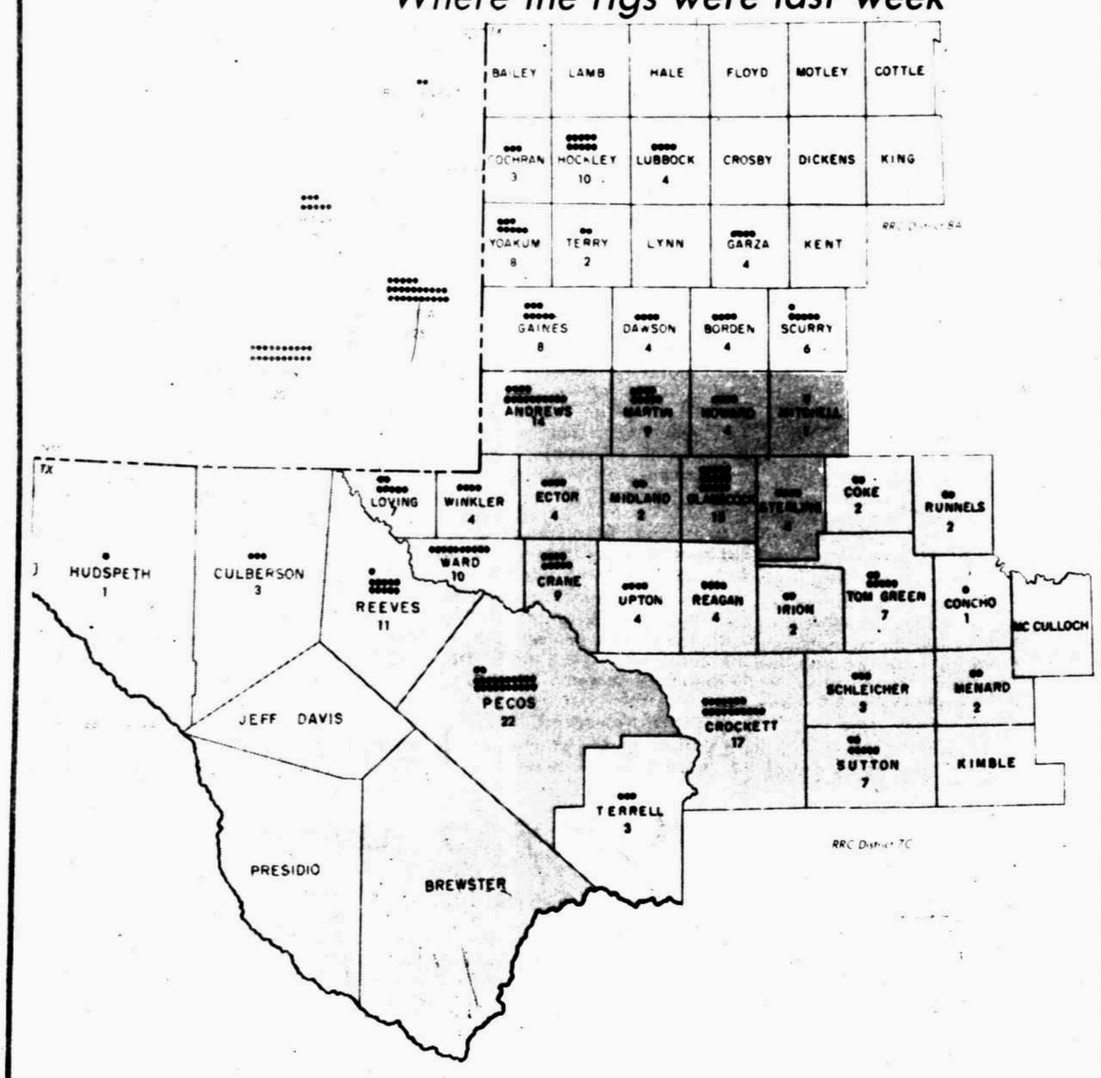

The government has not yet decided whether the corporation's oil field interests should be offered to the public in the form of shares or whether there should be a straight sale of the assets to other oil companies, sources said.

The oil fields involved are the Beryl, Montrose and Fulmar, all three of which are in production, and the Huttoon and North West Huttoon, both of which are under development.

Other de-nationalization moves by the Conservatives either already undertaken or pledged include the planned sale this November of 51 percent of the North Sea oil shares held by the state-owned British National Oil Corp.; the planned sale of state-owned British Airways, and the sale of 50 percent of the stock of state-owned British Aerospace to the public last year.

Basin rig tally up, U.S. down

Where the rigs were last week

The Permian Basin rotary rig count increased slightly last week. Accordinng to a survey by Reed Rock Bit Co., the tally was 282, up from 272 two weeks ago.

The count in weeks past was: 282, July 23; 283, July 16; and 283, July 9.

One year ago the bit makers spotted 459 rigs plying the area covered by the map.

After a one-week upswing, the national rig count declined again last week. According to figures released by the International Association of Drilling Contractors, 2,671 rigs were active Aug 2. A week earlier 2,730 rigs were at work. July 19 the score was 2,694, which was, up until last week, the lowest rig count in more than two years.

The IADC report shows 736 on-land rigs working Texas Aug. 2. Another 79 were drilling offshore. In New Mexico 70 rotaries were making hole.

Internationally, the rig count shrunk in June. The IADC reports a total of 1,475 rotaries active during the sixth month, down from 1,486 in May.

The international count breaks down like this: Africa, 212; Europe, 244; Far East, 274; Latin America, 511; Middle East, 198; and South Pacific 36.

Hot spots were: Algeria, with 78 active rigs; Italy, 36; Indonesia, 63; Mexico 171; Turkey, 35; and Australia, with 26 working rigs.

Embarassing auto now valued antique

By ANN JOB WOOLLEY

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Owners once were embarrassed by the flashy car that flopped so miserably, but 25 years after Ford introduced the Edsel, proud owners are gathering to celebrate.

"People used to take these cars out and park them behind trees because they were so embarrassed to own them," said Perry E. Piper, a member of the 1,500-member Edsel Owners Club Inc.

The club, with members in the United States, Canada and nine other nations, has brought together about 100 Edsels for a reunion this weekend at a Dearborn hotel near Ford Motor Co., which designed, built and abandoned the Edsel two years after introducing it.

The Edsel, named for the only son of the company's founder, Henry Ford, is 25 years old now and considered an antique, with a place in the Henry Ford Museum nearby.

Today's auto market is about the same as it was Sept. 4, 1957, when the Edsel debuted for the 1958 model year, said Shelley Cleaver of Jacksonville, Texas, president of the club and owner of 14 Edsels. Five of the 14 work, he said.

"There was a recession; the economy was way down," he said. "It was supposed to attract the young business executive on his way up. But it was bad timing... No car model had good sales that year."

Already, Cleaver said, people were looking for smaller, economy cars as "the cheaper way out."

The Edsel had several novel features, including a push-button automatic transmission, push-button automatic lubrication, warning lights to indicate low oil, low fuel or open doors. The wheel discs were painted to match the car, which featured wraparound windows, rubber bumper tips and optional seat belts.

But there was a problem with quality, says Piper of West Liberty, Ill.

"The cars out were not very well built," he said. "The cars were out before they were ready."

Some of the Edsel's problems came from dealers who ordered models loaded with options and tried to sell them in a bleak economy, he said.

Ford and other automakers had decided to raise prices on the 1958 models by 10 percent because of higher material and labor costs. The Edsel was the first model out with the higher price tag, and dealers "still had their old models and were trying to unload them," said Piper.

About 110,000 Edsels were sold from the car's introduction until it was pulled off the market Nov. 19, 1959, Cleaver said. About 4,000 to 5,000 probably still exist, including 1,500 owned by members of his club, he said.

Edsels, which cost $250 million to bring to market, sold for between $2,400 and $3,800 at a time when the average Ford cost in the lower $2,000 range, Cleaver said. Now, Edsels cost from $300 to well over $6,000, he said.

Auto chiefs busy looking for partners

By DAVID LAMMERS

TOKYO (AP) — Auto executives these days resemble the freshmen at a high school cotillion, dance cards in hand, eagerly searching for the best partners.

Japanese auto executives are among the busiest, signing agreements at a jitterbug tempo: promising to build cars or parts for American and European firms, planning factories abroad and forming joint ventures.

Japanese companies produced more than 11 million vehicles in 1981 and exported more than 6 million. But gone are the days when Japan's 11 automakers could make cars at home and export as many as possible.

Quotas adopted or urged by unemployment-plagued foreign governments have effectively bottled up export growth, forcing the Japanese to adopt a more internationalist outlook.

In addition, the high cost of technological development has forced even some giant firms to sign joint venture agreements; for smaller automakers, these deals can be the key to survival.

An American official based in Japan says the main reason for the recent rash of joint ventures between Japanese and U.S. firms is congressional pressure on Japan to curtail its auto exports, or face a protectionist reaction — such as a requirement that a certain percentage of parts in cars sold in the United States be American-made.

That kind of threat is taken seriously here.

"Trade friction is a serious problem for the Japanese automakers, who are making long-term plans designed to ensure their firms' survival," says a spokesman for the Japan Automobile Manufacturers Association, who following Japanese practice asked not to be quoted by name.

American union leaders, whose members have suffered greatly from the slump in the U.S. auto industry, and trade officials here say locating Japanese plants in the United States may be the only way for Japan to avoid protectionist legislation.

Every major European nation except West Germany limits imports of Japanese cars, and the Japanese government instituted quotas for shipments to the United States and Canada.

Japan's automakers have turned to joint ventures to boost their European market shares with made-in-Europe vehicles. They also are making deals with U.S. makers.

General Motors Corp. has forged ties with three relatively small Japanese auto firms and is expected to complete a deal with arch-competitor Toyota Motor Co. this fall. Toyota probably will take over an idle GM plant, possibly at Fremont, Calif., to build about 200,000 small-model cars a year.

One of GM's existing pacts is with Isuzu Motors, which will make about 200,000 Chevette-size cars in 1984 at a production cost that analysts say GM cannot match in the United States. Daihatsu Motors, partly owned by Toyota, will supply "knockdown" cars that will be assembled at a GM joint venture in Australia.

Isuzu also acted as matchmaker to introduce GM to Suzuki Motor Corp., the industry leader in mini-car technology. A general cooperation agreement was signed in August with Suzuki.

Isuzu, a leading truckmaker here, also signed distribution and sales agreements with GM for the Pacific and European markets, allowing Isuzu to market cars and trucks through GM sales points.

A joint venture between GM and Fujitsu-Fanuc will increase GM's robot army from the current 300 to 800 by the end of 1983 and a reported 14,000 by 1990.

Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. also have ties with the Japanese.

Ford has a 25 percent share in Toyo Kogyo Corp., maker of Mazdas. The Hiroshima-based company also turns out parts for Ford cars and trucks, and the two firms are considering joint production of mini-cars.

Chrysler, which owns 15 percent of Mitsubishi Motor Co., markets about 85,000 Mitsubishi-produced cars a year in the United States and soon will begin receiving 140,000 Japan-built engines for its 1983 K-cars.

Mitsubishi also says the firm may take over a closed Chrysler plant and produce 200,000 units a year in the United States, but a spokesman says the deal is "not yet ripe."

Toyota's tie-up with GM will be its first international toehold. But analysts say GM's help in lining up suppliers will make the task easier than going it alone, as Nissan Motor Co., Japan's No. 2 automaker, will do with its new Tennessee small truck plant.

Nissan has been far more aggressive than Toyota in moving outside Japan. While Toyota built new facilities in Japan the late 1970s, Nissan was forging a variety of agreements with foreign automakers.

Besides the Tennessee plant, the maker of Datsuns has been active in cooperating with European firms. Plans call for Volkswagen's Santana model to begin rolling off Nissan assembly lines in Japan in late 1983, and a Nissan spokesman says that deal could lead to other production ties elsewhere.

Nissan has a technical agreement with France's Citroen to share emission control technology. Alfa Romeo and Nissan have set up a joint firm called ARNA to make small cars by 1983 near Naples, Italy. In Spain, Nissan owns a 33 percent equity in Motor Iberica and reportedly plans to buy a larger share later.

A much-heralded Nissan plan to build a 200,000-car-per-year plant in Britain is in doubt because Nissan reportedly is unhappy about labor relations and the quality of parts from British suppliers. A final decision is pending.
