Missile limitation 'close at hand?'

MOSCOW (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said today an agreement eliminating superpower medium-range missiles from Europe and likely leading to a summit in Washington is "close at hand."

But both Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze told reporters hard work remained before the superpowers could sign such an agreement.

Shultz held a news conference in Moscow after three days of talks with Communist Party chief Mikhail S. Gorbachev and other Soviet leaders.

"I think we made quite a lot of progress and perhaps we can see prospects with hard negotiations ahead, but prospects close at hand of reaching agreement in that area," Shultz said.

"Very considerable headway has been made and we should be able to work out agreement in this field with hard work and creative efforts," he said.

Shultz and Shevardnadze met for several hours before the secretary of state addressed reporters, and afterwards the Soviet foreign minister offered an upbeat assessment of the possibility of a superpower summit in Washington.

Shevardnadze said there was a "rather good prosect" of another summit meeting between President Reagan and Gorbachev. Asked what was needed, he said, "to tuck up our sleeves and work."

Gorbachev offered Tuesday to scrap short-range missiles in non-Soviet Eastern Europe and seek a compromise on the U.S. "Star Wars" program, the official Tass news agency reported.

Gorbachev also told Shultz he was willing to meet with Reagan to conclude a treaty on medium-range missiles and work out "key provisions" in three other areas, the agency said.

At his news conference, Shultz did not go into the specifics of Soviet proposals, but said he would be discussing the areas of negotiation with America's European allies in Brussels on Thursday.

Those areas are strategic offensive weapons, anti-missile defenses, and nuclear tests, it said.

Tass did not say whether Gorbachev would accept Reagan's invitation for a Washington summit this year. Gorbachev told reporters Tuesday that "generally, without reason, I do not go anywhere, particlarly America."

U.S. officials in Moscow did not immediately respond to the latest Soviet report on the Shultz-Gorbachev meeting Tuesday. One U.S. official said earlier the two sides had agreed not to talk about the substance of Shultz's meetings with Soviet officials until after they were concluded.

Shultz met this morning at the U.S. Embassy with 19 Soviets who have been refused permission to join their spouses or other relatives in the United States.

He told the group he had told Reagan in a telephone conversation Tuesday evening that he would be meeting them.

Harried taxpayers up against tonight's midnight filing deadline have the option of filing for an extension. However, if taxes are owed they must be paid and included with the request for more time, the IRS advises. The extra time is to be used to allow more time in completing forms, not avoiding payment of taxes.

IRS advises: 'Send a check'

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON — Midnight is the deadline for most Americans to file their federal income-tax returns, but, IRS Commissioner Lawrence Gibbs said today, taxpayers who haven't done it by now might consider asking for an extension — or fleeing the country for a day.

"My advice...is that they should do two things — one, send us a check for the balance of any taxes they owe us and get a form from one of our office to get an extension to file their taxes later this year," Gibbs said in an interview on NBC-TV's "Today" show.

Asked if taxpayers would be able to avoid the deadline by being out of the country for a day, Gibbs smiled and said, "There is a provision that if you're out of the country you do have an extension until June 15."

For those filing returns at the last minute, the Internal Revenue Service commissioner offered this advice to avoid mistakes:

"I'd say checking the return carefully, checking the math. Be sure that the return has been filled in properly and that the math adds up. Then, I'd say signing the return and the most important thing, particularly from the standpoint if you have a refund, use the label we sent to you. It will help us process your return. We'll get your money back to you faster."

And for taxpayers filing at deadline time, the Postal Service is ready to help.

"All over the country we have people who will bend over backward to be at the curbside, to cancel mail until the deadline," Jeanne O'Neill, a spokesman at Postal Service headquarters in Washington, said Tuesday.

"If you are waiting for the last minute to file," she cautioned, "call your neighborhood Post Office and check to see what arrangements have been made. We don't want people dropping their returns into a neighborhood box that won't be picked up until after the deadline."

Reaction to one-site SSC resolution mixed, optimistic

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

A Garden City superconducting super collider site spokesman said he supports a state commission's decision to propose only one site to the U.S. Department of Energy.

But a Midland member of the commission's advisory council said the one-site resolution was a mistake.

"A West Texas site has a much better chance if more than one site is recommended because of some of the criteria involving cultural things and proximity to large cities with various amenities," said former Midland mayor Ernest Angelo, who serves on the 13-member council advising the Texas National Laboratory Commission.

Up to three locations in West Texas, including Garden City, Amarillo and a Fort Stockton area site have been proposed.

However, another former Midland mayor, Thane Akins, said, "It will be more effective if they are totally behind one site than if they run up there with several of them." Akins is project manager for the Garden City SSC commission.

"There's only one site in Texas that can win the national race, so that's fine with us," added Akins, referring to the Garden City site, about 40 miles southeast of Midland.

About nine different sites in Texas are seriously competing to become the official state SSC location.

Angelo contended that not only West Texas, but the state would be better served if more than one site was proposed to DOE.

A concern about a lack of money to pay for more than one site proposal was "premature," Angelo said.

Suspect dies, sheriff hurt in bombing

KOKOMO, Ind. (AP) — Authorities searched today for the motives that led a suspected drug trafficker to detonate a briefcase bomb inside a sheriff's office, killing himself and injuring 15 others, including the sheriff.

Robert Gray, 42, detonated the bomb cradled between his legs at 2 p.m. Tuesday during a recess in his trial on two counts of dealing in a controlled substance, LSD, authorities said.

The explosion sent shards of glass and metal flying into the body of Howard County Sheriff John Beatty, who was seated across from Gray, and triggered evacautions of the area around the courthouse.

Later Monday, workers were ordered to leave the Chryler Corp. transmission plant were Gray worked. However, a search of Gray's locker turned up no explosives, said Assistant Police Chief Larry Darlin, and workers were allowed to return about midnight.

Council approves drug testing policy

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

City Council Tuesday approved a new drug testing policy for prospective and current employees that puts Midland "on the cutting edge" of national drug policy, an assistant city attorney told the body.

"Not many (cities) are doing it across the country," Assistant City Attorney Keith Stretcher told the council during their regular bi-monthly meeting at City Hall.

The new policy holds that all prospective city employees must submit to a drug test during the physical examination phase of their employment application process.

Current employees would only be required to submit to the tests if the city administrators felt there was "probable cause" to investigate drug use, Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor has said.

Prior to the test, the employee would have the opportunity to present his case in a hearing with city department heads to determine if probable cause actually is present, McGregor said.

At-large Councilmember Katie Heck, who voted for instituting the policy Tuesday, said this morning her main concerns about the testing fell into the area of accuracy.

She was fearful that persons taking legal over-the-counter or prescription drugs such as antihistamines might accidentally be labeled illicit drug users because of testing inaccuracy.

Those fears were allayed, she said, by assurances from test administrator Roy Harrison — of Midland's Harrison and Associates drug testing firm — that the procedure "reduces the possibility of a false positive to zero."

Harrison told the council that the only way testing could identify a false positive is if the samples accidentally were switched.

Texaco-Pennzoil fight could stir white-oil style lobby

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texaco-Pennzoil spat brewing in the Legislature is being called the white oil battle of 1987. Not because it has to do with the white oil controversy in the Panhandle, but because many Capitol observers liken the tremendous lobbyists-crawling-out-of-the-woodwork scene witnessed here over the past several days to the white oil feud of two years ago.

The dispute over how producers treat chilled, so-called white oil — some said it was oil, others said it was gas — brought lobbyists out in droves last legislative session. Now, more than 20 lobbyists have signed on with either Texaco Inc. or Pennzoil Inc. within the past week in reaction to a bill filed by Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, and Charlie Evans, R-Hurst.

The bill would limit the size of a bond a company must post to appeal a case at $1 billion — an obvious effort to help Texaco, now in bankruptcy, out of its legal predicament.

Pennzoil successfully convinced a Houston jury last year that Texaco interfered in Pennzoil's attempt to take over Getty Oil. The judgment came to more than $10 billion, and that figure grew rapidly when interest was added.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled this past week that Texas law requiring Texaco during the appeal process to post a bond equal to the judgment — about $12 billion — is constitutional.

Texaco first hired star lobbyist Jack Gullahorn, already one of the busiest hired guns in Austin. Gullahorn quickly assembled a team consisting of the best lobbyists money can hire — except for those Pennzoil rushed out and hired first.

"It's fantastic," said one former House member and lobbyist who has worked at the Capitol for 30 years. "My first reaction when I heard about all this yesterday was this is the white oil bill of the 70th Legislature.

"Everyone who's been employed here has their own sphere of influence," he said. "So in that light, it's beneficial to have all the people you can have, and that way you can parcel out all the contacts that need to be made. You must combat a heavy brigade with another heavy brigade."

The importance to both companies is tremendous, as evidenced by the mass hirings of lobbyists, most of them free-lancers who often earn six figures for a single bill. This fight is expected to run into the millions, although neither side will say exactly how much they are making. Neither side, however, denies that the total will exceed $1 million per company.

"I don't know if they really need that many," said one lobbyist not involved in this case. "But when you start talking billions for the company, maybe a million or two spent up here is worth it."

Gullahorn, once an aide to former House Speaker Billy Clayton, hired Rusty Kelley, another former Clayton aide. Neal T. "Buddy" Jones, former top aide to Speaker Gib Lewis, also joined the team. So did former House member and lead tort reform lobbyist Jerry "Nub" Donaldson, and longtime Texas Municipal League, insurance and lottery lobbyist Dick Brown. Kraege Polan, a full-time lobbyist and a friend of Parker's, signed on, along with former insurance board staffer Evelyen Ireland, recently retired House member Bill Messer and veterans Dickie Ingram and Walt Graydon.

Today's typical American home houses fewer people

WASHINGTON (AP) — The typical American household is less crowded than ever before, with the number of people in each home less than half what it was in the mid-19th century.

The average household as of July 1, 1986, included 2.67 people, an all-time low, the U.S. Census Bureau reported Tuesday.

That was down from an average of 2.76 people in 1980, and fewer than half the 5.55 people in the average 1850 household.

Shrinking household size has attracted considerable attention in recent years, and the shift reflects changes both in the age pattern and social activities of the American people, said Census Bureau population expert Campbell Gibson.

This average has fallen because the number of households in the nation is growing faster than the population in general, he explained.

For example, between 1980 and 1986, the number of households increased 10.5 percent to 88.8 million, while the number of people grew 6.4 percent to 241 million. The average household size is calculated using a somewhat smaller total, since several million people live in places other than households, such as college dormitories, hospitals and prisons.

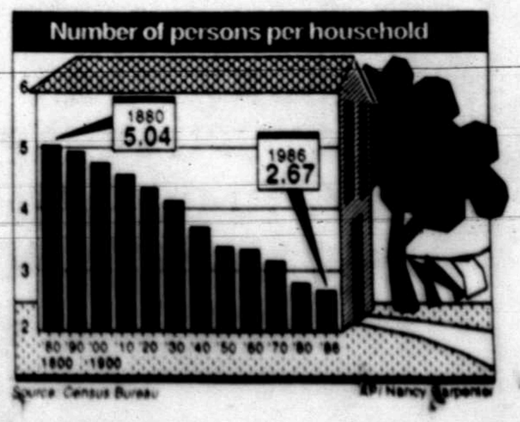

A major reason for the recent household growth, explained Gibson, is that the nation is growing older, or at least more mature.

The presence of children in a population tends to increase household size, Gibson observed, while a larger share of adults generally results in people going off on their own and setting up smaller, independent households.

That has been an important factor in the last decade or two, Gibson explained.

For example, in 1964 the typical household included 3.33 people of whom 1.23 were under age 18 and 2.10 were adults, he said. By last year, the average of 2.67 people included 0.71 under 18 and 1.96 adults.

About three-fourths of the decline in household size is in the under-18 age group, Gibson pointed out.

Former translator explains 'honey trap'

By BRYAN BRUMLEY

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a young translator for the Soviet government travel agency Intourist, Alexandra Costa was encouraged to flirt with foreign visitors, and "if a relationship developed, the KGB wanted to guide it."

A. Costa

"One of the conditions of the job was that I was to report to the KGB," Ms. Costa said.

"I was seeing one of the British guys, but nothing really developed," she said in an interview this week. However, "one of the other girls fell in love with a British man," and the KGB wanted to run her as a "swallow," or seductress.

"My KGB handler complained that, 'the wrong girl fell in love. She won't talk to us.' "

The woman ended up marrying the man and moving to England, said Ms. Costa, who defected from the Soviet Embassy in Washington in 1978 and now works as a computer consultant in the Washington area.

The woman who refused to cooperate was an exception in what Ms. Costa calls a "totalitarian state" where "most people don't refuse to cooperate with the KGB. The state owns everything, and if you want a job or an apartment, you play the game."

The game is often the "honey trap," the oldest trick in the book of espionage, one that diplomats, businessmen and journalists are warned to avoid in the Soviet Union, but one into which many tumble nonetheless.

Official Washington reacted with outrage to revelations that at least three Marines apparently traded secrets for sex at U.S. dilomatic missions in Moscow and Leningrad.

But over the past few decades, a British, a French and a Canadian ambassador, and a U.S. and a French military attache, are among those known to have fallen into variations of the same snare.

Cases that receive publicity are often intelligence failures, security officials say, because the seduction comes to light before the victim can be blackmailed into betrayal.

Far more cases do not come to public attention, according to U.S. security officials, and many probably are never reported. Among the best known instances:

— In 1956, the KGB laid an elaborate plot to entrap French Ambassador Maurice Dejean, author John Barron wrote in his book, "KGB."

Dejean, spotted as a lady chaser on earlier diplomatic assignments, was seduced by a beautiful Soviet actress cooperating with the KGB. Another KGB operative, posing as her husband, burst in upon them at a compromising moment, thrashed him and threatened to seek the ambassador's expulsion.

Other undercover KGB agents, social contacts of Dejean, persuaded the ambassador that they had managed to hush up the affair. The plot came to naught after one of the key players, Soviet writer Yuri V. Krotkov, defected and briefed Western intelligence. Dejean was recalled without fanfare and with no apparent loss of diplomatic secrets.

— The KGB also targeted a military attache who served under Dejean, Col. Louis Gibaud. Microphones hidden in the walls of Gibaud's apartment disclosed that he often quarreled with his wife, and the KGB steered a succession of beautiful women his way. He fell for one. Three plainclothes Soviet agents confronted Gibaud with compromising photographs and told him he faced two choices: cooperate or be disgraced. Gibaud chose a third path, suicide.

— Maj. James R. Holbrook, a family man in his 40s, was known as one of the best Russian speakers in the U.S. Army.

In January 1981, he and fellow attache Lt. Col. Thomas A. Spencer visited the town of Rovno, near the border of the Soviet Ukraine and Poland, an area in which the Red Army would be likely to mass before any crackdown on the Polish Solidarity movement.

Holbrook left Moscow abruptly after his return from the border, and on Feb. 20, the Soviet news agency Tass reported he had been found in his hotel room "having sexual intercourse" with an unidentified Soviet woman.

Embassy officials later accused the Soviets of trying to blackmail Holbrook, and Washington sources said he apparently had been drugged.

Toxic chemical mishaps noted in two states

Associated Press

Workers today cleaned up a 2,000-gallon chemical spill in Utah that killed one person and forced 1,000 from a 2-square-mile area, while 1,000 evacuees in Gary, Ind., have been allowed to return after containment of an acid leak.

In Dublin, Calif., authorities today evacuated a hotel and apartment complex after a toxic chemical spilled from an overturned tanker.

Gary Mayor Richard G. Hatcher said Tuesday questions remained about whether company officials waited too long to notify authorities following the leak, which critically injured one person and sent 92 others to hospitals.

Fumes from both accidents have dissipated, authorities said.

Residents of four evacuated homes in North Salt Lake, Utah, returned Tuesday and workers were expected back on the job today at the 30 businesses closed after the spill, Mayor DeWayne Simmons said.

However, it may take a day or two to clean up all the spilled trichloroethane, a solvent used in liquid resins, at Hodson Laboratories Inc., said South Davis Fire Chief Brent Argyle.

"The solvent has impregnated the carpet and walls," he said.

The chemical ate into a concrete floor and flowed into an alley behind the building. Workers plugged a drain to prevent it from leaking into the sewer system and built an earthen berm around the 50- by 70-foot building.

Crews used a vacuum truck and absorbent material in the cleanup, said Richard Harvey, Davis County environmental health director.

James Lee Hodson, the plant manager of the family-owned business who was killed in the accident, was alone in the plant when the chemical gushed from a broken pipe, said Owen Hogle, Hodson's executive vice president.

Hodson arrived early to take a shipment of trichloroethane and apparently was transferring the new solvent from one tank to another when "an elbow ruptured on a holding tank," Hogle said.

"With just 15 seconds of exposure, you can become unconscious," Hogle said.

Six people, including two paramedics and a North Salt Lake police officer, were hospitalized briefly.

In Gary, Hatcher lifted an evacuation order Tuesday afternoon, nearly eight hours after a hydrochloric acid spill caused about 1,000 people, including students at two public schools, to flee the area around an industrial cleaning products company.

One person was hospitalized in critical condition, at least one other was held overrnight for observation, and the others were treated for minor respiratory complaints and released, hospital spokesmen said.

Hatcher said the spill at Gary Products Co. apparently was discovered Monday night by a company worker who failed in an attempt to stop the leak. City authorities were not notified until Tuesday morning, Hatcher said.

"The question I'm most concerned about is why were proper city authorities not notified when the leak occurred," Hatcher said.

Repeated telephone calls to Gary Products officials for comment were not returned.

Workers covered the spill site with lime and sand to neutralize the acid and flushed city sewer lines.

About 1,000 gallons of toxic and high flammable vinyl acetate spilled from the overturned tanker in Dublin, police said.

SHULTZ

"He sends you his best wishes," Shultz said. "You are always on our minds."

He also visited the grave of Soviet writer Boris Pasternak and had lunch at the U.S. Embassy with several Soviet intellectuals.

Radio Moscow this morning called Gorbachev's proposals "new ideas" but said the United States didn't seem interested in taking advantage of them.

On Tuesday night, Tass quoted Gorbachev as virtually daring the Reagan administration to take Moscow up on its offer.

"What are you afraid of?" the agency quoted Gorbachev as saying. "We are for a reliable agreement with the most stringent and all-bracing control."

Gorbachev "expressed the readiness to record an agreement on medium-range missiles (including) the Soviet Union's obligation to eliminate its shorter-range missiles within a relatively short and clearly defined time frame," Tass said.

The offer covers short-range Soviet SS-12 and SS-23 missiles deployed in Czechoslovakia and East Germany.

Regarding Star Wars, the U.S. program for developing a space-based missile defense formally called the Strategic Defense Initiative, Tass today quoted Gorbachev as saying, "We look for compromise decisions."

It said Gorbachev wanted Star Wars research restricted to laboratories and proposed the two sides draw up a list of devices that would be barred from testing in space.

Reagan has rejected previous Soviet demands to limit Star Wars testing to laboratories.

In Santa Barbara, Calif., where Reagan is vacationing, deputy White House press secretary Dan Howard said: "I can say that the ideas presented in Tass are interesting and we would take them seriously if true." He said any such proposal must be discussed with NATO allies.

The issue of short-range missiles, which have a range of 350 to 600 miles, has been a sticking point in negotiations to eliminate the superpowers' medium-range missiles in Europe, a goal shared by both Moscow and Washington. Medium-range missiles have a range of 600 to 3,000 miles.

The Tass account said Shultz insisted on the U.S. right to deploy short-range missiles to match those that would remain in the western Soviet Union. Washington has no short-range missiles deployed in Europe, though the West Germans have 71.

The Soviets have 130 short-range missiles in East Germany, Czechoslovakia and the western Soviet Union.

The Soviet news agency also said Gorbachev was prepared to eliminate battlefield tactical missiles. The two sides have thousands of such weapons with ranges of up to 350 miles.

Tass charged, "The U.S. leadership is practically unprepared to act vigorously, to go its part of the way."

Shultz, in a 4½-hour meeting with Gorbachev, delivered a new invitation from Reagan to go to Washington for a summit meeting this year. But Gorbachev stressed that any summit should produce solid results, saying: "This cannot be just a stroll."

The commission is expecting to pay about $1 million to complete it's proposal, but Angelo said some proposals — such as Garden City's — are more complete than others and would require less money to polish up.

Despite his reservations about the state commission's one-site decision, Angelo said the nine-member body left the "door open" to go with more than one site.

Akins said he remains confident that the Garden City site will be the one Texas presents to DOE.

"I think the most important factor is meeting all the criteria. Our site is the only site I'm aware of that meets all the criteria," Akins contended.

However, if Garden City is not selected by the state commission, local proponents will take their proposal straight to DOE, Akins said.

"Our site is going to be submitted to the DOE whether Texas does it or we do it. With all the work we've done, it'd be foolish not to independently let them look at it whether the state endorses us or not."

The Garden City commission is working to condense about a thousand pages of reports into a 200-page proposal before the state advisory commission's May 5 deadline.

The advisory council will spend two days studying the proposals and make their recommendation to the commission May 11, Angelo said.

On May 11 the state commission will meet to whittle down the statewide competitors to one.

In related news, a local campaign to reimburse a $50,000 donation made by the Midland City Council for a local SSC lobbying effort has reached 20 percent of its goal with a week to go.

Steve Hardin, director of economic development for the Midland Chamber of Commerce, said despite only raising $10,100 as of Wednesday he is confident the total $50,000 will be raised by next Tuesday.

"This is very typical of what you find. The monies come in at the end of the drive. We still feel like we'll be able to raise the $50,000 with ease," Hardin said.

Boards of directors for the Midland Industrial Foundation, Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and Midland Chamber of Commerce have been soliciting minimum donations of $100 each since April 7.

COUNCIL

District 2 Councilmember Oralia Corrales was the only member voting against instituting the new policy. She emphasized this morning that her opposition was not based on the idea of drug testing itself.

"I believe the concept is good," she said, adding added that she was concerned about the validity of testing. Persons who are aware they will be tested could simply refrain from drug use prior to the test, she pointed out.

"I think it (the policy) is a good thing in that Midland is a city that is concerned about the drug problem, and hopefully that will deter people from doing drugs," she added.

"Yet on the other hand, I just have an uneasy feeling about this — that we're treading into a whole different territory and we need to be really careful about doing this," she said.

Assistant City Attorney Keith Stretcher told the council that Midland is one of the few cities in Texas that is instituting a drug testing policy.

"It is a new area and you will be on the cutting edge," Stretcher told the council.

The council Tuesday also voted unanimously to modify an existing city ordinance that many of the city's landlords had fought in a vocal defense of what they called their constitutional rights.

Under the ordinance, the city was empowered to place liens on landlords' property in order to force their tenants to pay delinquent water bills.

The modification protects the landlords city-filed liens if the landlords file a one-time declaration of their rental property, City Attorney David Reagan told the council.

That filing allows the city to legally move against the tenants instead of the landlord, Reagan has said.

Also because of the filing, the city can assess water deposits equal to three times the average monthly water bill logged at a rental property, Reagan said.

That higher deposit should protect the city in case the tenant moves without paying his bill.

As part of the compromise, the city will cancel all liens already filed and repay the money collected from landlords who already have paid off their liens, Reagan said.

In other action Tuesday, the council:

— approved a plan to establish base lines for lot numbering east of Fairgrounds Road and south of U.S. Interstate 20,

— sent out for re-bidding a maintenance contract for city data processing equipment,

— approved a zone change for houses located on Illinois Avenue between H and K streets from single-family dwellings to planned development, and — approved a contract with the Midland Economic Development Co., for adminstration of a $161,000 revolving loan fund for businessmen on Midland's east and south sides.

Pennzoil, meanwhile, also snatched up some top lobbyists. Bob Strauser of Houston's Baker and Botts law firm went to work, hiring Don Adams, a former state senator and one of Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's closest friends. George Christian, former press secretary to President Lyndon Johnson, and his son, George Jr., were brought in to help. So were former House Speaker Clayton, who finds himself on opposite sides from former employees Gullahorn and Kelley. Nick Kralj, whose watering holes have served legislators for decades, is helping out, as is former House parliamentarian Bob Johnson.

And the list goes on. Even with all those lobbyist and all the money spent by both sides, Parker, who was asked by Texaco to carry the bill, assessed it this way: "Dropping this thing in the hopper may at least get the parties talking to where they can work something out."

BOMB

Grant County Sheriff Ron Mowrey, the sheriff in Gray's home county, reported Tuesday night that live bombs were found at Gray's mobile home in Marion after police dogs gave a positive signal of explosives.

But a state police bomb squad only found four dummy sticks of dynamite connected to a timing device, said sheriff's Sgt. John Lawson. He said deputies also found two water pistols that resembled machine guns.

"We believe someone occupied the house earlier in the evening and left these as a prank," Lawson added.

He said about 50 people were evacuated from a four-block area around the mobile home until 3:45 a.m.

Beatty was in serious but stable condition today at Methodist Hospital in Indianapolis. Spokesmen there said Beatty was burned over 40 percent of his body, received multiple cuts on his legs and was wounded by flying fragments of metal on his torso, arms and legs.

The others injured, including two police officers, were listed in good or fair condition, or were treated and released.

Mayor Stephen J. Daily said an autopsy was scheduled today on Gray's body.

Last original director of Contra umbrella group soon will quit

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Alfonso Robelo says he soon will quit the leadership of the Nicaraguan rebel umbrella group founded at U.S. urging in hopes of unifying the Contra movement.

He will be the last of the three original directors to leave the United Nicaraguan Opposition, or UNO.

Robelo's decision, which he announced Tuesday, comes just five weeks after fellow moderate Arturo Cruz left the UNO directorate.

The new sign of disarray could further weaken support for the Contras in Congress, where opponents of more U.S. aid to the rebels have demanded some sign of progress in the nearly 5-year-old guerrilla fight to oust Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

In a telephone interview, Robelo gave as his reason for leaving the same one cited by Cruz — a continuing conflict with Adolfo Calero, the president of the Nicaraguan Democratic Force or FDN, the largest rebel army fighting under the UNO umbrella.

Calero himself quit the UNO leadership in March after complaints by Robelo and Cruz that he had opposed attempts to broaden the Contras' support inside Nicaragua.

But the beleaguered UNO is now reforming itself into a larger group, to be called the Nicaraguan Democratic Resistance, with seven directors instead of three. Robelo predicted Calero would be one of those leaders and that the FDN would dominate the group.

Robelo, a businessman, said he would be willing to serve in the General Assembly of the new group but not in its directorate.

"In the past we've had periodic crises in UNO because of lack of unity, so I think it is my duty to position myself not in the directorate but in the assembly where I will represent my party," Robelo said.

"To try to get into the directorate would mean that I will have the problems with Adolfo that I've had in the past, and that is not for the benefit of the cause," he said.

The changes in the umbrella group's name and leadership and the expansion of its General Assembly from 28 to 54 members will come at its next meeting late this month or early in May.

The expanded directorate and the formation of the representative assembly are part of a U.S.-backed effort to democratize the Contras and give them more political credibility among Nicaraguans and members of the U.S. Congress.

Each of the four exile political parties that belong to UNO will get one seat on the directorate. They are the Conservatives, Liberals, Social Democrats and Christian Democrats.

North Korean leader Kim celebrates 75th birthday

Kim Il Sung

TOKYO (AP) — North Korean leader Kim Il Sung celebrates his 75th birthday today, 42 years after establishing the secluded Communist state he still rules with an iron grip.

Experts agree that although his son has been designated heir apparent in the Communist world's first planned father-to-son transfer of power, the elder Kim is not likely to retire soon.

Known in his homeland as the "great comrade leader," Kim is an enigmatic, cult-like figure, adored by a people who know him primarily through government-compiled textbooks and newscasts. Statues of him abound and his portraits hang in virtually every household.

"Korean students are taught in their schools that he is the national leader who brought the anti-Japanese guerrilla struggle to a successful victory and founded the independent nation of Korea," said Choe Kwan Ick, an official of the pro-North Korea General Association of Korean Residents in Japan.

"He led the socialist construction to success. He has extended his care and solicitude to Korean residents (overseas)," Choe said. "That's why we feel warmth and respect. It's a natural and logical process."

Mystery still surrounds the rumors last November that Kim was assassinated. South Korea reported hearing funeral music and solemn eulogies broadcast across the tense demilitarized zone.

The rumors were quickly dispelled when Kim appeared in public, but it was never clear whether anti-Kim elements in the North actually made the broadcasts or if they were fabricated by the South.

Takao Kamakura, a professor and North Korea specialist at Saitama University, said there is no evidence of any calls in North Korea for the elder Kim to step down.

Consuming records

Peter Ladong, of Kreuzberg, West Berlin, has come up with a new way to consume stereo hits. The 42-year-old man eats one of his chocolate records, which range in flavor from bitter almond or walnut to marzipan. Ladong uses latex to cast a negative form from any record and recasts the chocolate duplicate in the rubber matrix. One of his records can be played up to 20 times.

Costs heavy, gains few in Iran's war with Iraq

An Analysis

By JOSEPH PANOSSIAN

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran has kept the initiative in its 6½-year-old war with Iraq by throwing a one-two combination of offensives against the entrenched enemy. But the costs have been heavy and the gains few.

The Iranians had promised a "fateful blow" in the Gulf War by the end of the Persian calendar year, March 21. But their twin attacks last week came too late and fell far short of a decisive breakthrough.

By the weekend, in fact, the Iraqis claimed to have pushed the attackers back on the southern front near Basra. And the Iranians sounded resigned to more months of war, vowing now to defeat Iraq by next Persian New Year's — March 21, 1988.

"Huge resources, energy and time have been devoted for future moves," Prime Minister Hussein Musavi was quoted as saying by Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency.

Some of the fiercest fighting has taken place in the past nine months. Iraq's official news agency claimed 250,000 Iranians were killed or wounded in that period "without being able to make the slightest change in the situation."

But the Iranians have made advances in the past year, battling to within six miles of Basra, Iraq's second-largest city, recapturing the Iranian border town of Mehran on the central front and pushing 20 miles into northern Iraq's Kurdistan mountains.

In the latest fighting, Iran said its troops renewed their push April 7 toward Basra, target of three major offensives since December, and then two days later punched across the central front to capture strategic border terrain 110 miles northeast of Iraq's capital, Baghdad.

An Iraqi military source claimed 13,000 Iranians were killed in the first five days of fighting near Basra. An Iranian commander said 12,000 Iraqis were killed or wounded.

The two sides' battle and casualty reports are difficult to verify, since journalists and other outside observers rarely are allowed to the front.

The war began in September 1980 when Iraq invaded neighboring Iran in a bid to reclaim disputed territory and punish the revolutionary government of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini for alleged attempts to subvert President Saddam Hussein's rule in Baghdad. It was the latest in centuries of wars between the Arabs who populate modern Iraq and the Persians of Iran.

Since January 1981, about two dozen Iranian offensives, relying heavily on "human-wave" assaults by teen-age volunteers, have regained lost territory and driven into Iraq.

Foreign military analysts' estimates of the war dead range from 1 million, 700,000 of them Iranian, down to 350,000.

Since June 1982, Hussein has sought a cease-fire and peace talks. But Khomeini has not relented in his key demand — that Hussein be removed from power.

Analysts say Iran has been unable to unleash a decisive offensive because of a power struggle within its fundamentalist Moslem leadership, severe economic problems and difficulties in supplying front-line troops.

Khomeini and other Iranian leaders have sought in recent months to dampen expectations of a speedy end to the conflict.

Although the Iranians may still contemplate a single "war-winning" offensive, some Western analysts believe they plan a coordinated series of attacks all along the 733-mile front to wear down Iraqi forces and eventually topple Hussein.

Western intelligence agencies estimate that Iran, with 43 million people to Iraq's 15 million, has more than 650,000 troops along the battlefront, mainly in the central and southern sectors.

With the approach of summer, when temperatures soar to 120 degrees on the sun-baked border, conditions favor the highly mechanized Iraqi.

Isolated Nicaraguan town receives supplies from Cuba

PUERTO CABEZAS, Nicaragua (NYT) — Normally, residents of this isolated coastal area of northeast Nicaragua are entitled to buy one pound of low-priced beans and a like amount of rice every 15 days. But in the second half of March, supplies ran low and residents were put on half rations.

This week, the situation suddenly improved. Full rations were restored, and there were goods in the stores. The difference was that the Cuban freighter Cienfuegos, delayed by bad weather, finally arrived, bringing with her 1,200 tons of supplies.

Rice and beans were not all the Cienfuegos carried. Among the other products aboard were powdered milk, boots, cooking oil and toothpaste.

For the last year, according to residents of Puerto Cabezas, most of this area's needs have been met by shipments from Cuba.

"When the Cuban boats come, they turn scarcity into abundance," said Juan Tejada, who runs a supply post where food from Cuba is sold at controlled prices.

In the office of the local Sandinista government here, there is a hand-lettered sign expressing gratitude to the Cubans. "True ships of peace are those which come from Cuba with the solidarity of the Cuban people and government," the sign says.

This part of Nicaragua is more remote than any other.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Mishaps cause concern

PARIS (NYT) — Two accidents within days at French nuclear installations have prompted new concern about this country's ambitious nuclear power program.

French officials have temporarily shut down Europe's biggest plant making fuel for nuclear reactors, at Tricastin, as a result of an accident over the weekend.

They also said they did not know why a dangerous chemical was leaking from France's fast breeder reactor, the only such commercial reactor in Western Europe. A breeder reactor makes more fuel than it burns.

On Sunday night the state-owned Atomic Energy Commissariat said it was halting uranium enrichment at the Tricastin enrichment plant near Pierrelatte for a week while it investigated a leak of mildly radioactive toxic gas discovered over the weekend. The leak injured seven workers.

On Monday, Jean-Pierre Capron, head of the commissariat, said in an interview that experts still had not determined the cause of a leak of sodium coolant discovered over a week ago at Superphenix, the world's biggest fast breeder reactor, not far from the Pierrelatte plant.

Soviets deny nuclear mishap

TOKYO (AP) — The head of the International Atomic Energy Agency said today Soviet officials have assured him there was no nuclear accident in their country last month.

West Germany, Sweden, Switzerland, Norway and France said Tuesday they recorded varying increases in atmospheric radiation in March, though no damage or injuries were reported.

IAEA director-general Hans Blix, who is in Tokyo for an international conference on nuclear power, said the level of radiation detected in Europe was not dangerous.

"The level is extremely low and of no health significance, certainly," said Blix, the head of the United Nations body charged with promoting peaceful uses of nuclear power and ensuring that power plant fuel is not used to make weapons.

Blix said Nikolai Lukonin, the Soviet minister of atomic power engineering who is attending the three-day conference in Tokyo, told him there had not been an accident.

More rail cars torched

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Eight railway coaches were set afire and two were stoned in Soweto in the latest attacks on trains of the strike-hit government transport company, officials said today.

The government's Bureau for Information said a white man, whom it did not identify, was injured in one of the rock-throwing incidents Tuesday. It said damage to the burned and stoned coaches was "considerable."

The South African Transport Services, which operates the trains, has blamed striking black rail workers for the arson attacks that began Monday, disrupting travel for tens of thousands of residents of the sprawling black township outside Johannesburg.

The South African Railways and Harbor Workers Union, which represents about 16,000 workers on strike since March 13, said it was consulting lawyers "on how to react to statements linking us to clearly illegal acts."

The general manager of the transport service, Bert Grove, said the strike "has developed into civil unrest."

Hart still haunted by 'character issue'

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The "character issue" that dogged Gary Hart in 1984 popped up on the opening day of his first official 1988 presidential campaign swing when he said he was told opponents' campaigns were spreading rumors about his personal life.

Hart said reporters had told him of the rumor-mongering by opponents about his marriage, but Hart said he had no evidence of his own that they were circulating such stories.

"I hope they are not and I believe they are not," he told reporters traveling on his campaign plane Tuesday.

Hart nonetheless was clearly irritated when a casual remark to a reporter became the biggest news of his campaign swing. Hart had tried to focus on agriculture, arms control and the need to raise taxes.

"It was an off-the-cuff comment, not meant to make news," Hart said.

But make news it did, overshadowing a day which took him from Denver to Amarillo, Texas, to Des Moines, Iowa, and on to Pittsburgh. The former Colorado senator planned to meet today with unemployed steelworkers to discuss their needs and the need to reindustrialize the nation.

"Now you see why I want to talk about ideas," Hart told reporters. "The only thing I was going on were statements by other reporters that this was being done by other Democratic and Republican campaigns."

Hart neither identified the reporters involved nor repeated any specific rumors. Hart aides also did not characterize the rumors, other than to say they involved his personal life and marriage of 29 years to his wife Lee.

However, The Washington Post, in today's editions, said Post reporter Lois Romano confirmed telling Hart that representatives of other presidential campaigns had passed along rumors that the former senator was a womanizer.

She said she asked Hart how he planned to deal with the rumors, the Post said. His reply was that candidates who try to spread the rumors are "not going to win that way, because you don't get to the top by tearing someone else down," the Post reported.

Hart became entangled in what has been called the character issue during the 1984 campaign. One element of that issue was the two separations the Harts had gone through, one of which included an announcement of an impending divorce.

Questions about Hart's changing his name from Hartpence, misrepresenting his age in campaign documents and a late U.S. Naval Reserve commission also caused Hart trouble in 1984.

Starting up his 1988 bid generated stories anew on the character issue and the leftover debt from 1984. Hart has paid off all but $1.3 million of the $5 million debt generated by his 1984 campaign.

One story this week in Newsweek quoted a former Hart adviser as saying Hart can't stop "having the sex issue raised if he can't keep his pants on." The former adviser, John McEvoy, has since been quoted as saying his comment was about a hypothetical situation and did not refer to any Hart indiscretions. Rumors about Hart's personal life had arisen in his 1984 campaign, after he and his wife reconciled immediately before the 1984 campaign.

In an autobiographical story in the Boston Globe earlier this year, Hart confronted the character issue and said his marriage had grown stronger.

"Comment was made of the fact that Lee and I suffered short separations during those years. Coming in an age of divorced presidents, this seems to deserve no more attention than that," Hart wrote. "Lee is proud of reflecting, as she should be, that we were able to resolve those temporary stresses where others were not. In 1988, we celebrate our 30th wedding anniversary."

Judge requests review of Hinckley file

Hinckley

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge, told that John W. Hinckley Jr. corresponded with Florida death-row inmate Theodore Bundy, wants to review the presidential assailant's letters and papers to help evaluate his mental condition.

Hinckley, who is seeking a 12-hour Easter pass from the mental hospital where he was sent for shooting President Reagan in 1981, was ordered to produce all his letters, notes, postcards, poems and other writings.

U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker issued the order Tuesday after learning Hinckley corresponded several times last year with Bundy, who is awaiting execution for the 1978 killings of two women Florida State University students and a 12-year-old girl. He also is suspected in three dozen other murders in several states.

The judge told Hinckley's lawyers: "If he wants to leave he is going to have to cooperate."

Parker said he would review the material before today's hearing on Hinckley's request for the Easter pass.

Hinckley was acquitted by reason of insanity of attempted murder charges stemming from the March, 30, 1981 shooting of Reagan, presidential press secretary James S. Brady, a Secret Service agent and a city policeman.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Roger Adelman told Parker on Tuesday that Secret Service agents who interviewed Bundy on Florida's death row learned the two had exchanged letters for six months last year.

The Secret Service contacted Bundy after Hinckley's lawyers gave prosecutors two letters he received from the Florida inmate last summer, Adelman said.

Those letters indicated that Bundy had received mail from Hinckley. "He says that in his letters," Adelman said.

The contents of the Bundy letters "certainly bear some similarities" with Hinckley's fascination with the movie "Taxi Driver," Adelman said.

Prosecutors and psychiatrists say Hinckley shot Reagan to impress actress Jodie Foster, who played a prostitute in the violent movie.

During his Secret Service interview, Bundy "claimed that in 1986, he received three or four letters from Mr. Hinckley," Adelman said, adding, "He claimed he wrote to Mr. Hinckley two or three times."

The correspondence "was initiated by Mr. Hinckley in May 1986. Mr. Bundy stopped writing last October 1986," Adelman said.

The Secret Service agents found a piece of paper in Bundy's prison cell that bore Hinckley's address, as well as notations of July 21 and Aug. 7, the dates Bundy said he wrote to Hinckley, Adelman said.

Bundy told the agents he threw away Hinckley's letters.

The emergency hearing was convened Tuesday to hear objections from Hinckley's lawyers to the service of a subpoena on their client at St. Elizabeths Hospital.

"What they are trying to do is execute a search warrant," said defense attorney Judith Miller. "They have not gone through the necessary steps to get a search warrant."

But Adelman and hospital attorneys said the Secret Service agents merely gave Hinckley the subpoena and left.

Parker ordered the hospital to give him a list of all videotapes, audio tapes and books in Hinckley's possession. The order covers the period since Hinckley, 30, was sent to St. Elizabeths in 1982.

Hinckley's correspondence with Bundy was revealed unexpectedly Monday during testimony by psychiatrist Glenn H. Miller, who recommends the unescorted family visit by Hinckley.

Dr. Miller also revealed that Hinckley once had sought the address of convicted mass killer Charles Manson.

In addition, Hinckley once received a letter from Manson follower Lynette ("Squeaky") Fromme, imprisoned for trying to kill President Ford in 1975.

Prosecutors want Hinckley's letters to use as evidence to block Hinckley's visit request, which was made initially by the hospital.

The letters "bear directly on his state of mind," Adelman said.

Parker said he will decide whether any of the material is relevant and can be used to cross-examine Dr. Miller and other witnesses.

Parker dismissed defense complaints that Hinckley's privacy would be violated if he were forced to surrender letters to his girlfriend, Leslie deVeau.

Ms. deVeau, 43, a former St. Elizabeths patient, was acquitted by reason of insanity in the 1982 shotgun slaying of her 10-year-old daughter.

Ms. Miller questioned the relevancy of Hinckley's love letters.

But Parker said: "Who knows? There may be something in the communications to Ms. deVeau which is quite relevant to this hearing."

Navy jets collide; Pilots eject safely

NORFOLK (AP) — Two Navy jets collided off the Florida coast Tuesday afternoon, but the pilots ejected safely and were rescued by Navy helicopters, a spokeswoman for the Naval Air Force Atlantic Fleet said.

Lt. Jeffrey Penfield, 27, and Lt. Charles Boyajian, 26, both of Mandarin, Fla., escaped with "bumps and bruises" and did not require hospital treatment, said Cmdr. Jolene Keefer.

The Navy is investigating to determine the cause of the accident, she said.

The two FA-18 Hornets, the newest aircraft in the Navy fleet, collided about 5:45 p.m. EDT during an air combat maneuvering mission off the coast near Jacksonville, Fla., Ms. Keefer said.

The aircraft were assigned to Fighter Attack Squadron 136 based at Cecil Field, the Naval air station near Jacksonville.

Abandoned military sites potentially hazardous

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Farmer Walter Conley was plowing a field near Monmouth last summer when his blade struck an old mortar shell that had worked its way to the surface.

The gunpowder and phosphorus-packed shell burst into flames when the plow ripped it open. Conley was fortunate that the detonator, containing about a half-pound of explosives, was torn away from the shell.

The incident mystified him until he recalled that his farmland had served as an artillery practice range for the U.S. Army's long-abandoned Camp Adair, where about 100,000 soldiers trained in World War II.

"I think that since World War II, almost every year somebody has dug up one of those shells, but we didn't think much of it because the others were all practice shells" that didn't burn or explode, said Sgt. Jeff Fisher of the Polk County sheriff's department.

During America's mobilization for World War II, military bases, airfields, radio and radar stations, target and artillery ranges sprang up across the country. After the war, some were converted to civilian airports, docks and ports. Parks, farms and housing developments sprouted on others.

Until recent years, not much thought was given to the possibility that some sites might still contain long-forgotten hazards: Toxic chemicals, fuel tanks, munitions, buildings in disrepair, open wells and other potential problems.

The Portland detachment of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has surveyed 18 former Oregon military sites for hazards, and has dozens more to inspect in coming years. So far, preliminary inspections have uncovered no serious problems, and the program has been relatively inexpensive because work has been limited to preliminary investigations.

Nationwide, the Defense Department estimates the government eventually will spend $5 billion to $10 billion to complete the identification and cleanup of potentially hazardous military sites, a process that began in 1975 when the Pentagon initiated its Installation Restoration Program. Pentagon officials say they hope to have all sites cleaned or under contract for cleaning by 1996.

However, the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, said in an April 1985 report that the Pentagon's top estimate of $10 billion may be conservative.

The GAO noted that estimates of cleanup costs tend to rise as more problems are discovered on sites. At McClellan Air Force Base in California, for example, the Pentagon estimated cleanup costs at $12.3 million in September 1983. Revised estimates in October 1984 placed the cost at $81.1 million.

In the same span of time, the estimated cost of cleaning Hill Air Force Base in Utah rose from $6.1 million to $9.4 million, and Robins Air Force Base in Georgia climbed from $4.3 million to $13.7 million.

The Interior Department has identified more than 4 million acres of its land that may be littered with unexploded bombs and shells, and the Pentagon has catalogued almost as much ordnance-contaminated land of its own.

As for chemical hazards, Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif., has said that "billions of gallons of dangerous chemicals have been disposed of at more than 4,000 sites at as many as 473 military bases. Leaks from many of these sites — the Pentagon currently estimates up to 800 — have contaminated the soil and ground water supplies in nearly every state in the nation."

Nearly 3,000 current and former military sites nationwide have been identified as "exhibiting characteristics indicating the potential for contamination" and were recommended for confirmation studies as of September 1985, according to a Pentagon report on the cleanup program released in February 1986.

As an example of how costs can climb, a single spill of a few hundred gallons of PCBs by an unknown person contaminated 1,850 tons of soil at Fort Lewis in Washington. The army decontaminated the site in eight days, at a cost of nearly $500,000, Carl J. Schafer, the director for environmental policy in the office of the assistant secretary of defense, said in 1985 testimony before the House Armed Services Committee's subcommittee on readiness.

The Defense Department disposed of more than 8 million pounds of PCBs nationwide in 1984 alone, said Schafer.

The Pentagon program is modeled after the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act, commonly known as the Superfund Act.

With five-card majors becoming the norm, we recall fondly that the late Adam Meredith, one of the all-time greats, was a proponent of opening three-card majors, especially in spades. This hand from a pair event illustrates what can happen if you follow that style.

The one-spade opening bid was typical Meredith. After North cue-bid, South had no option but to introduce one of his minor suits, and he had nowhere to go when North corrected to four spades. He could only hope his partner would produce at least four cards in the suit.

West attacked with three rounds of hearts. Declarer did not like his chances much, but he went for broke. He ruffed the third heart and successfully ran the jack of trumps. When both defenders followed to the next two rounds of trumps, there was a gleam of light. Now all declarer needed was a successful club finesse and for East to have the only trump left in the game.

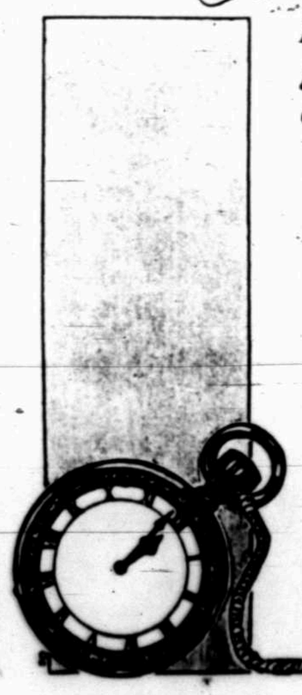

Declarer crossed to the table with a diamond and led the jack of clubs for a finesse. When that won, he reverted to diamonds. Since East had the remaining trump and was out of hearts, declarer could lose only one more trick and the contract was home with the help of two finesses, a 4-3 trump split and a heart position which could be expected from the bidding.

Not everyone bid to game on the North-South cards, and those who did played in diamonds for a score of 400. Our declarer collected 420, for an absolute top on the board.

Now we are not recommending three-card majors as the wave of the future. But "a touch of Meredith" now and then certainly does add a bit of spice to the game.

Mickey Gilley sues longtime business partner to strip 'Gilley' name from club

Gilley

HOUSTON (AP) — Country singer Mickey Gilley has filed suit against his longtime business partner, seeking to strip the "Gilley" name from the landmark nightspot made famous in the 1980 film "Urban Cowboy."

Gilley filed the suit Tuesday in State District Court against Sherwood Cryer, owner of Gilley's Club in Pasadena, a Houston suburb.

"I just can't get along with him anymore," Gilley told The Houston Post in a telephone interview from Reno, Nev., where he was performing Tuesday. "We disagree on everything."

The suit seeks an injunction to have Gilley's name removed from the club, for Cryer to stop claiming to be his manager and for a receiver to be appointed to watch over the assets of Gilley's Enterprises Inc., one of four companies involved in the club.

The suit also seeks 50 percent of Gilley's Enterprises' assets and alleges that Cryer has failed to pay taxes for the club. A hearing is set for May 5.

Cryer, reached by the Post in Pasadena, said he planned to fight the suit and claims that Gilley still works for him under a management contract.

"I think Mickey has gone to pieces just because he turned 50 (Gilley is 51)," Cryer said. "He just wants to take his $2 million (that Gilley makes on the road each year) and high-roll with it, and he's determined to break up everything we've spent all these years building up.

"He's not going to do it, because I'm going to fight him on it," Cryer added.

The two men became partners in the middle 1970s, when Gilley was a country singer with a big local following but little commercial success and Cryer operated a series of stores and clubs in Pasadena.

Cryer convinced Gilley to work for him, and changed the name of one of his nightspots to Gilley's.

Gilley, who has had a string of popular country songs, later began touring the country to perform, while Gilley's, under Cryer's ownership and management, became a showplace of country music.

The club became even more renowned after John Travolta appeared in "Urban Cowboy."

"I've wanted him to fix the place up, but he won't do it" said Gilley. "He says 'It's just a honky tonk.' I say that I know that, but it doesn't have to be a dirty one. It can be a clean one. But he won't fix it. That club is going down and it's taking me with it, because people think I run it."

Cryer disputes Gilley's claim.

"When did he ever plow any money back into this business?" Cryer asked.

Williams Jr.

PARIS, Tenn. (AP) — Hank Williams Jr. will be grand marshal of the parade April 24 at the annual "world's biggest fish fry."

Williams, of Paris, was voted entertainer of the year last week at the nationally televised Academy of Country Music awards.

"I'm very proud to be asked to be grand marshal," he said Tuesday, a day after returning from deep-sea fishing in Mexico. "Besides, I get more fish this way."

Williams, the son of a country music legend, is known for his hits "Mind Your Own Business," "All My Rowdy Friends Are Coming Over Tonight" and "Family Tradition."

CHICAGO (AP) — Ukrainian-American groups set up pickets at CBS studios in four cities to protest what they contend was an unfair depiction of Ukrainians as Nazi collaborators in the TV movie "Escape From Sobibor."

The groups also have called for a boycott by Ukrainian-Americans of products produced by Chrysler Corp., the movie's sponsor.

Spokesmen for the network and Chrysler said Tuesday night that the movie, televised Sunday night, accurately depicted history and was not meant to offend anyone.

The film, based on a Richard Rashke book of the same title, starred Alan Arkin as the leader of 600 Jewish prisoners who revolted against Nazis in an attempt to escape from the Sobibor death camp in Poland in 1943. About 300 survived.

The three-hour screenplay identified most guards as Ukrainians. The Ukraine, just east of Poland, is a once-independent Soviet republic.

"They have basically condemned a whole nation and ethnic group as being the greatest collaborators the Nazis ever had. That is sheer lunacy," said Andrew Fylypovych, executive director of the New York-based Ukrainian Heritage Council, in a telephone interview from Philadelphia.

Although many death-camp guards were Ukrainian, they were forced into the jobs by the Nazis, said Fylypovych.

Members of Ukrainian communities in Chicago, New York, Philadelphia and Washington D.C., have picketed CBS studios in their cities, he said. About 1 million people of Ukrainian descent live in the United States, said Fylypovych.

The Chicago-based Ukrainian American Justice Committee said its picketing at WBBM-TV, the CBS-owned station in Chicago, would continue at least through Thursday.

Representatives of Ukrainian groups were to meet with a CBS official today in New York, he said, to ask for a retraction or for CBS to broadcast a program with a positive view of Ukrainians. Chrysler, he said, should seek such action from CBS.

While CBS is "certainly sensitive" to the concerns of the Ukrainians, "the film was a drama based on historical fact," George Schweitzer, a CBS spokesman, said in a telephone interview Tuesday from New York.

"It was thoroughly researched. No insult was intended, nor does one leave the film with that feeling," Schweitzer said.

"It was a piece of world history," Bernard Mullins, director of sales and marketing public relations for Chrysler, said in a telephone interview from Detroit. "It was filmed from the book and from interviews of the survivors involved."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Randy Travis, who won four trophies in the Academy of Country Music Awards, says he had early inspiration from George Jones, Hank Williams, Merle Haggard and Lefty Frizzell.

"I started singing in clubs when I was 14," he said. "I was singing songs sung by the traditionalists. They sing with emotion and soul."

Travis last week was given "Hat" trophies for best male vocalist, best song and single record of the year for "On The Other Hand," and best album for "Storms of Life," the fastest million-seller in country music history.

He isn't forgetting that in 1984 he was a dishwasher and part-time singer in a Nashville club, and says that at age 27 he wonders what "got into me" during his teen years.

"I was into drinking, drugs and fighting," he said.

Truth comes first

In today's litigious society, newspapers that aggressively expose wrongdoing by public figures risk costly court battles and multimillion-dollar punitive judgments by juries unsympathetic to hard-hitting journalism. In recent years, journalists have relied increasingly on higher courts to overturn libel verdicts inconsistent with the First Amendment's guarantee of freedom of speech and the press.

That's why an appeals court ruling in 1985 reinstating a $2 million jury award against the Washington Post had a chilling influence on American investigative journalism. In recent weeks, however, the full U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia rejected the libel judgment, on grounds that the newspaper's expose had been substantially true and that it had acted without malice in publishing it.

The higher court's ruling is a victory not only for investigative journalism but also for the public interest, which is served by enterprising efforts to ferret out mischief in high places. Repressive libel suits that deter journalists and others from responsibly bringing to light misdeeds by public figures only make it easier for corruption to hide from the powerful corrective of public scrutiny.

The case against the Washington Post was brought by former Mobil Oil Corp. President William Tavoulareas. The paper had reported that Tavoulareas misused Mobil's assets to "set up" his 24-year-old son. Peter, as a partner in a shipping firm whose business relied heavily on transporting Mobil petroleum. Although the trial court judge dismissed the jury's award against the Post, a three-judge federal panel later reimposed it, arguing that the newspaper's policy of encouraging "hard-hitting investigative journalism" constituted "malice" and "reckless disregard" for the truth.

Ultimately, the full court of appeals correctly ruled that adopting an adversarial position is within a newspaper's professional responsibility and is protected by the First Amendment which, the court said, "forbids penalizing the press for encouraging its reporters to expose wrongdoing by public corporations and public figures."

In fact, the news media's skeptical stance toward government and other public institutions is a fundamental obligation of a free press in an open society. The press can only uphold the role intended for it by the Constitution when it is unfettered to report the truth, regardless of whom it offends.

A heart-y thank you!

There is always a fund-raising going on to support one deserving organization or another. We give to the people who go door-to-door in the name of a good cause. We send a check in response to a solicitation in the mail. We help sponsor a large fund-raising party. We did our good deed. Seldom do we give that money another thought until tax time. I want you to think back to one group to which you probably gave a small donation.

In early February an elementary school child asked you to sponsor him or her in the American Heart Association's "Jump Rope for Heart." If you did, you certainly have good reason to feel good about that donation and about what you did to make a child feel really good about himself.

On Feb. 7, 715 MISD elementary students jumped rope for three hours to raise money for the AHA. And raise money they did! They raised $27,000! There just aren't any words that express how fantastic these children are. If you sponsored a child, please take the time to tell him or her what a wonderful job they did.

One child in particular should be singled out for special recognition. His name is Phillip Seidenberger. He attends Burnet Elementary. Phillip raised the most money for "Jump Rope for Heart." He raised $420 and received a trophy and a skateboard for his efforts. He has a very special reason for supporting the Heart Association — his father has had open-heart surgery.

I also want to thank a very special group of teachers. These are the MISD Physical Education teachers. They spent several weeks teaching the children the fundamentals of rope jumping and some very difficult multi-rope routines. Mary McMannis coordinated the MISD participation for this event.

These children are our future leaders and volunteers. They have to be praised for the good things they do because so much of what they hear about "kids" is negative.

The American Heart Association's goal is to find the cause and cure for heart disease. Through superior efforts such as those shown by the children of Midland, we know that goal will be reached, hopefully in our children's lifetimes.

Good business climate

The oil bust has made one fact very clear to me. Texas needs to diversify its economy and it needs to attract new businesses to the state. Fortunately, Texas can offer a favorable business climate — we've got a large pool of skilled and unskilled labor, low cost housing and office space, good weather, and above all, Texas has low taxes.

Unfortunately, some of our Austin legislators are trying to muddy our attractive business climate by raising our taxes. Texas needs higher taxes like it needs a hole in the head. At a time when we are desperately trying to draw businesses like the Super Collider to Texas, no one should try to drive them away.

It's a good thing we've got a governor like Bill Clements who understands business and knows what business needs and wants. He is doing all he can to keep Texas taxes low and attractive. I am behind him 100 percent.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Wednesday editorial page

Today is Wednesday, April 15, the 105th day of 1987. There are 260 days left in the year. Federal income tax reports are due today.

Today's highlight in history:

Seventy-five years ago, in the early morning hours of April 15, 1912, the British luxury ocean liner Titanic sank in the North Atlantic off Newfoundland, less than three hours after striking an iceberg. About 1,500 of the more than 2,200 people aboard died in the disaster.

On this date:

In 1817, the first American school for the deaf opened in Hartford, Conn.

In 1850, the city of San Francisco was incorporated.

In 1861, President Abraham Lincoln declared a state of insurrection and called out Union troops.

In 1865, at 7:22 a.m., President Abraham Lincoln died, several hours after he was mortally wounded at Ford's Theater in Washington by John Wilkes Booth. Andrew Johnson was sworn in as the nation's 17th president.

In 1920, a robbery at the Slater and Morrill Shoe Company in South Braintree, Mass., resulted in the deaths of a paymaster and guard. Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti were subsequently convicted of the murders, and executed.

In 1945, President Franklin D. Roosevelt was buried at the Roosevelt family home in Hyde Park, N.Y.

Insiders benefit from MBDA grants

WASHINGTON — The Commerce Department's inspector general recently found "evidence that insiders are more prone to benefit from special awards" by the Minority Business Development Agency. These noncompetitive "special awards" amounted to 18 percent of the agency's budget in fiscal 1984 and 1985.

Jack Anderson

We previously reported charges by an agency official that the special grants were being used to lure blacks and Hispanics into the Republican Party. Agency Director James Richardson Gonzales denied that politics was behind any of the special awards made at his discretion.

Inspector General Sherman Funk told our associate Stewart Harris that Richardson Gonzales was cleared last September of any criminal wrongdoing. And Funk's report stops short of accusing Richardson Gonzales of playing politics with the grants, but says the award process provides evidence of insiders benefiting and raises questions about favoritism.

The director conceded that improvements should be made in management of the special awards. He doled out $13.1 million worth in 1984-85. The agency's budget for those two years was just less than $80 million.

The agency "has used scarce federal funds on projects rather common and often costly," the inspector general reported, "and activities that, in many instances, duplicated established programs."

An example cited by the inspector general involved a proposal by Richardson Gonzales to make a special award of $203,427 to a Sherman Oaks, Calif., company, ARVCO, to provide services the inspector general said were essentially the same as those already provided by a minority center in the area.

"The director's recommendation was especially distressing because the recipient may not have been the best qualified firm to manage the project," the inspector general wrote. In an earlier competition to run a minority development center, he explained, ARVCO had finished behind four other applicants.

ARVCO was also identified in an affidavit by MBDA's San Francisco regional director as one of the groups that benefited from Richardson Gonzales' alleged use of agency grants as a Republican Party recruiting tool. The head of the company, A.R. Villalobos, is prominent in the California GOP. He could not be reached for comment.

Richardson Gonzales withdrew his award of a special grant to ARVCO after the inspector general's objections. But since then the proposal has been re-submitted with what the inspector general considers only one major change: a $90,000 increase in the amount.

For the future, the inspector general recommended that the Minority Business Development Agency set up a review panel to pass judgment on proposed special awards before they are sent to the director for approval.

The agency should be more selective in the grants it hands out, the inspector general warned. Of the 15 special projects his investigators studied, eight either conflicted with the agency's charter or duplicated services already being provided.

In addition, the inspector general's report faulted the agency for funding overpriced projects. One shocker was a grant of $288,389 for five one-day seminars to make young Hispanics aware of private enterprise's possibilities. This amounted to $1,068 for each student's day of instruction.

"We learned that private industry charged fees ranging from $50 to $195 per student for similar one-day seminars," the report states.

In another example of extravagance, the investigators found that one grant recipient leased wastebaskets in California for $29 each per year. The wastebaskets' original price was about $7.

The inspector general also recommended closer attention to basic accounting procedures. For example, according to the report, the Commerce Department is still trying to collect from a grant recipient who spent part of the money for a condominium and a Mercedes.

PAPER GLACIER: The stately bureaucratic pace of the Food and Drug Administration's response to a congressional order three years ago has enraged Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa. There was supposed to be some urgency involved: Congress ordered the FDA to set up a registry of pacemaker implants and removals by Jan. 1, 1985, to help track down patients in peril whenever the lifesaving devices were the subject of a manufacturer's recall. More than two years late already, the FDA says it will be at least the end of June before the relevant regulations can take effect. Heinz accused the agency of "ineptitude, neglect or blatant disregard of the law."

MINI-EDITORIAL: What a pathetic performance that was on ABC's "Nightline" recently by Reps. Daniel Mica, D-Fla., and Olympia Snowe, R-Me., sitting in Moscow and bemoaning the sad state of the U.S. embassy the KGB has been building for the past several years. Asked what they had actually seen that was new or shocking, the junketing legislators hemmed and hawed and suggested that it would be a breach of security to divulge what they had seen — even though the Russians obviously knew. It became embarrassingly clear that, aside from their TV exposure, the trip had been a waste of time and money.

Moscow spy scandal: Not a national disaster

BERLIN — The near hysteria over espionage these days has produced a thriller atmosphere without the sober reasoning of the best spy thrillers. The preposterous Senate vote recommending that Secretary of State George Shultz cancel his trip to Moscow was an impulse of thoughtless indignation without concern for policy.

Flora Lewis

The highest officials have talked vaguely of great damage to U.S. interests as a result of the Marine guards' failure on duty. But nobody seems to be weighing the bigger questions of how much the loss of secrecy really matters.

After all, Shultz is arriving for the Moscow talks with considerable optimism because Mikhail Gorbachev, the Soviet leader, appears ready to make a series of important concessions to meet concrete American and allied security needs. Of course, he's not making them to please but because just scooping up secrets doesn't meet his policy needs either.

There have long been good grounds for suspecting that a large part of what the CIA and KGB do serves primarily to keep each other in business. John Le Carre's novels are not so far from the truth. The agencies play a kind of game where winning is more important than the substance of informed decisions that the stolen secrets are supposed to make possible.

President Reagan said the Soviet spymasters went "beyond the bounds of reason," Shultz said they transgressed the "limits of unacceptable activities," and former CIA director Stansfield Turner said they violated the "appropriate limit." These are ways of saying that of course everybody spies, but there are some unwritten rules of the game that the players expect to be observed. That doesn't sound very serious.

There are different kinds of spying and some make a real difference. One can be called hardware — when blueprints or actual equipment is delivered enabling copies to be made and countermeasures developed that could affect military capability. Another kind is operational, intelligence that could help track submarines on patrol, for example, or pinpoint targets. That's the kind of thing the Walker ring did to the U.S. Navy, and Jonathan Jay Pollard did for Israel, and it does cause grave damage.

Another has to do with counterintelligence, exposing agents. It can be tragic to the people involved, who may lose their lives, but it is a part of the reciprocal business.

Political intelligence is something else. That is presumably the main information the Russians expected to get by prowling around the existing U.S. Embassy in Moscow and massively bugging the new one being built.

Incidentally, rather than destroying the new building, Reagan should insist that the Russians buy it back at cost, with no charge for whatever gimmicks they planted and can surreptitiously recover. The United States can afford to do without those unwelcome gifts and the Soviet state no doubt has some use for such well-wired offices and apartments. Then, the Russians would have to provide a new site for American construction.

Anyone who has lived in the East knows how irritating and tiresome it is to be under constant surveillance, robbed of all privacy. It's one of the hardships of the post. But it isn't a national disaster and it needn't affect foreign policy.

Diplomats engaging in negotiations are instinctively appalled at the idea that the other side may know about their intentions beforehand. They assume secrecy is a tactical necessity. That isn't necessarily so.

It can be argued that both the Russians and Americans would have been better served if they knew more about each other's plans at the Reykjavik summit meeting so the responses could have been better prepared. And the Russians could hardly have learned about the instructions Shultz received for his Moscow mission before the key points appeared in the next day's American press.

Current and former intelligence officials and diplomats at a meeting of the American Council on Germany in Berlin had the routine distressed reaction to the Moscow spy affair until they were pressed to say what they thought had been affected by the spill. Probably not much of substance, most admitted. It is hard to conceive of any significant Soviet decision that might have been taken, or not taken, because of the secrets acquired.

This doesn't excuse the gross betrayal of duty by Americans in government service. Spying is a dirty business and it's humiliating to learn the adversary has scored on you. But the deplorable affair shouldn't be blown into an issue of state.

ART BUCHWALD

Gennady only thinks he has the last laugh

Gennady Gerasimov, the Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman, was described by the Reuters news agency as finding the U.S. Marine scandal at the American Embassy in Moscow very humorous.

Art Buchwald

Well, Gennady Gerasimov, you may be laughing now, but you're not going to be laughing for long.

The truth is the Marine incident was our set-up job to snare Russian nationals into an American plot that would make the Soviets look foolish in the entire cloak-and-dagger world.

First of all, Gennady Gerasimov, you should learn a few things about our Armed Services. You cannot seduce an American Marine unless he wants to be seduced. When you sent your KGB agents, doused in "Evening in Moscow" perfume, through the halls of the U.S. Embassy, you made a mistake. Your female spooks were told to steal code books, top-secret cables and as many blueprints as they could possibly stuff in their peasant blouses.

As part of their assignment the KGB ladies were ordered to commit sexual transgressions with our Marines in the name of Mother Russia.

What you didn't know, Gennady Gerasimov, and what you are probably finding out for the first time as you read this, is that we had your game plan all the time. Our Marines had instructions not to resist the overtures of your spook women. All the time your spyniks thought they were compromising our gyrenes, we were taking Polaroid shots of what was going on. What you did not realize, Gennady, is each Marine was ordered that if things got tough, to "lie back, close your eyes and think of America."

This is what really happened, Gennady Gerasimov, that fateful night when all hell broke loose at the embassy. At midnight three of your women came to the gate and said they were from the Bolshoi Ballet and wanted to defect. They asked if they could party at the same time.

Our Marines knew it was a plot, particularly when one of the women inquired if she could borrow a diplomatic pouch to put her tutus in.

Following instructions, one Marine called his superiors and asked what he should do. An officer said, "Give them your sharpshooter medal. We must not lose their confidence."

As distasteful as it sounds, the Marines partied with the women. After everyone had a bottle of wine and a dance, one of the women said, "Could we see the code room?"

The Marine again called his superior. "Show it to her," the superior replied. "Let the Russians think the U.S. has nothing to hide."

Another one of the girls told our Marines, "I have a mother who is very poor, sick and aging. The one thing she wants before she dies is a State Department burn bag."

Well, we're not dumb, Gennady Gerasimov, so we gave her a burn bag that was full of shredded confidential memos. As for your third KGB heroine, we cooked her goose too. Her wish was to bug the new embassy building from top to bottom. We were ready for that one and loaned her the pliers and wire.

So, Gennady Gerasimov, the Marine Corps saga may be funny to you, but the Americans are the ones who are doing the chuckling. Your Kremlin party girls got very little for their sexual favors — code books, some top-secret cables and the U.S. Order of Battle for World War III. There wasn't enough stuff to fill the ambassador's OUT basket.

What lulled you into a false sense of security, my Russian friend, is that you thought our Marines would rather make love than war.

The big joke, Gennady, is that after all your dirty tricks we came out on top. You went to a lot of expense and time bugging every inch of our new $200 million embassy, never dreaming that after you wired it we were going to tear it down. Ha, ha, ha, ha.

Associated Press

Sunday, April 15, 1787

PHILADELPHIA TODAY

Hilary Baker, Joseph Swift, and Francis Hopkinson were appointed to sit on the Alderman's Court. Hopkinson, a former member of Congress for New Jersey, signed the Declaration of Independence for that state. He was presently a lawyer in Philadelphia.

Jacob Hiltzheimer attended church and dined with Gen. Thomas Mifflin at his country place at the Falls of the Schuylkill.

CONFEDERATION TODAY

James Madison wrote to Gov. Randolph of Virginia:

"This City has been thrown into no small agitation by a motion made a few days ago for a short adjournment of Congs. and the appointment of Philada. as the place for its reassembly. No final question was taken but some preliminary questions showed that six states were in favor of it. As neither N. Jersey nor S. Carolina were present the vote is strong evidence of the precarious tenure by which N. York enjoys her metropolitan advantages. The motives which led to this attempt were probably with some of a local nature. With others they were certainly of a general nature. The indignation of N. Jersey & of R. Island agst. N. York. presented this moment, & the experiment was accordingly made."

DELEGATES TODAY

James Madison's letter to Gov. Randolph speculated on the advisability of Washington's attendance at the Convention:

"The probability of Genl. Washington's coming to Philada. is in one point of view flattering. Would it not however be well for him to postpone his actual attendance until some judgment can be formed of the result of the meeting. It ought not to be wished by any of his friends that he should participate in any abortive undertaking. It may occur perhaps that the delay would deprive the Convention of his presiding auspices and subject him on his arrival to a less conspicuous point of view than he ought on all occasions to stand in. Agst. this difficulty must be weighed the consideration above mentioned, to which may be added the opportunity which Penna. by the appt. of Docr. Franklin has afforded of putting sufficient dignity into the Chair."

Benjamin Franklin wrote to old French friends, Veillard, Rochefoucauld, and D'Estaing. Veillard was Franklin's neighbor in Passy.

To Veillard, Franklin detailed a mix of domestic and public matters.

"As to the little history I promised you, my purpose still continues of completing it, and I hoped to do it this summer, having built an addition to my house, in which I have placed my library, and where I can write without being disturbed by the noise of the children, but the General Assembly having lately desired my assistance in a great convention to be held here in May next for amending the Federal Constitution, I begin to doubt whether I can make any progress in it till that business is over....

"Besides the addition to my house, mentioned above, I have been building two new Houses on my front, next the street. They are of brick, and each twenty-four feet wide by forty-five deep, and three stories high. The affairs in dealing with so many workmen (362) and furnishers of materials, such as bricklayers, carpenters, stone-cutters, painters, glaziers, lime-burners, timber-merchants, copper-smiths, carters, labourers, etc., etc., have added not a little to the fatiguing business I have gone through in the last year."

LOOKING BACK

Franklin as an Almost Elder Statesman

Thomas Reed, speaker of the House in the late 1800s and one of America's great wits, once defined a statesman as "a politician that is dead." That definition was peculiarly applicable to Benjamin Franklin in 1787. Aged, infirm, and no longer active in politics, though still active in public service, Franklin was no longer loved or hated or feared as a politician, but he was not yet completely accepted as a statesman either.

Few people can be in public life for over 50 years without making political enemies, and that was one area in which Franklin was not exceptional. A leader of a faction trying to get the Penns replaced by a royal government, Franklin had run afoul of fellow delegate John Dickinson in the early 1760s. By failing to oppose the Stamp Act before it passed, he had earned the suspicion of many Americans.

An early and ardent advocate of American independence, he had again encountered Dickinson and such other moderates as James Wilson. An equally ardent supporter of the radical state constitution of 1776, he had earned the suspicion of that document's opponents, such as Robert Morris, Gouverneur Morris, George Clymer and Thomas Fitzsimons.

Time had undoubtedly softened the memory of old political antagonists, but not to the extent that they had become uncritical admirers. The omission of Franklin from the original list of Pennsylvania delegates may have been as much in hope as in fear that his health would prevent his attendance, and several of his fellow delegates may have cringed whenever he rose to speak.

Campaign to prevent product tampering

By PHYLLIS MENSING

CHICAGO (AP) — Government and industry groups are sponsoring a national ad campaign to get across the message that threatening to tamper with consumer products is illegal, even if the threat is not carried out.

"A lot of people don't know it's against the law," said Jim McKenzie, special agent in charge of the FBI office in Chicago, where seven people died in 1982 after taking cyanide-laced Tylenol capsules.

One of the campaign's public-service TV ads opens with a shot of a phone booth and features the gruff voice of Dennis Franz, who plays Lt. Norman Buntz on television's "Hill Street Blues."

"Make a product tampering threat from this box, and you'll end up in this box — for five years," Franz warns as the scene shifts to a prison cell. "Ask yourself, are five years of your life worth tampering with?"

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration reported 1,692 of product-tampering threats in 1986, 13 times more than the 128 in 1985. Officials say most of the threats are made by phone and most are phony.

Under federal law, those convicted of making a threat could get five years in prison and a $10,000 fine. Carrying out a threat carries a maximum life prison sentence and $250,000 fine.

The new ads, which are also going on radio and billboards and are sponsored by the FDA, the FBI, the Advertising Council and several industry groups, stress those penalties.

"It's the people who think it's a lark or a joke — those are the people we're trying to dissuade," said Bill Weintraub, vice president of marketing for Kellogg Co. in Battle Creek, Mich., and one of the ad campaign's coordinators.

"More than $1 billion in perfectly good products had to be destroyed (last year) because of threats that people phoned in," Weintraub said.

The tampering threats targeted milk, toothpaste, soup, drug products and various other grocery items, Weintraub said. As a result, he said, drug companies alone are spending $500 million to $1 billion a year on protective packaging.

"There are other costs that we really don't know about, like the cost of inspecting these products and security costs at plants," Weintraub said.

Psychiatric studies indicate product-tampering threats tend to come from males age 20 to 30 who usually have no criminal record, said George Schott, vice president of J. Walter Thompson U.S.A. in Chicago, the agency that volunteered to develop the advertising campaign.

"There seems to be a range of deviant behavior you're dealing with — people who are angry or upset and looking for an outlet for their frustrations," Schott said. "Some of them even may derive a sense of power from seeing a product removed from the shelves."

The federal anti-tampering law was enacted in 1983, after the seven Chicago-area deaths. No one has been charged in the slayings, and the case remains under investigation.

NATION IN BRIEF

FAA drug test lab chief reassigned during probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration's drug-testing laboratory chief has been reassigned until completion of an investigation into possible mishandling of tests, agency officials say.

Delbert Lacefield, who has been with the FAA for 20 years, was removed as head of the forensic toxicology research unit at the FAA's Civil Aeromedical Institute in Oklahoma City, officials said Tuesday. It was not disclosed where Lacefield was reassigned.

The Transportation Department directed last month that the laboratory stop testing for drugs and alcohol after concerns were raised about procedures used in tests following the Jan. 4 fatal Conrail-Amtrak train collision near Baltimore.

NASA to buy rockets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has taken the first step toward acquiring throw-away rockets for launching some of the satellites that had been intended to ride into orbit aboard the space shuttle.

David Garrett, a NASA spokesman, said Tuesday that the agency is taking $2 million from another program for studies on converting two scientific satellites for rides on Delta 2 rockets and for lifting a huge Tracking and Data Relay Satellite into space aboard a Titan 4. Another Titan 4 would be used for a planetary mission not yet decided on.

Before the Challenger accident last year, NASA had stopped buying expendable launch vehicles because it was relying on the shuttle to dispatch all satellites from a low orbit around the Earth.

Public critical of Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite President Reagan's attempts to put the Iran-Contra affair behind him and to pursue other matters aggressively, Americans remain skeptical about his presidency, says a poll released Tuesday.

The ABC News-Washington Post telephone survey of 1,509 adult Americans nationwide for five days ending Monday found Reagan's overall job rating had remained about steady since the previous poll March 19.

The March 19 poll, taken just after the president's news conference regarding the Tower commission report on the Iran-Contra affair, showed that 50 percent approved of Reagan's handling of the job. In the current survey, 48 percent approved, a drop which the poll found statistically insignificant. The poll's margin of error was plus or minus 3 percentage points.

"This latest reading is little better than the 44 percent Iran-gate low-point Reagan got right after the release of the Tower report on Feb. 26," the survey found. "But it's still a full 19 points lower than the 67 percent positive rating he enjoyed just before the scandal broke."

The presidentially appointed Tower board criticized Reagan's management style for inadequate supervision of the National Security Council's activities involving the secret sales of U.S. arms to Iran and the purported diversion of payments to the Contra rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government.

Boy returned to respirator

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Seven-year-old Ronnie DeSillers, the Miami boy who underwent two liver transplants, was returned to a respirator Tuesday after he experienced breathing problems when the device was removed, his family said.

Doctors at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh turned off the respirator, allowing the child to breathe without assistance for the first time since his second transplant, April 3.

He remained in critical but stable condition in the hospital's intensive care unit, said hospital spokeswoman Lynn McMahon.

Ronnie received a new liver Feb. 24, but a viral infection damaged it, prompting a search for another liver. His mother, Maria DeSillers, said a biopsy performed Monday shows the second donor liver appears to be functioning well and is infection-free.

Ronnie generated headlines in early February when medical funds raised by his classmates in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., were stolen. Countless Americans, including President Reagan, chipped in to help pay for the transplant.

Charity 'misused' funds

NEW YORK (AP) — An official of a large cancer charity has defended its practice of spending as much as 97 percent of its multimillion-dollar income on fund raising and management.

"I don't believe anyone is being cheated in this process," said Randall Grove, executive director of the United Cancer Council. "No matter what agency you chose to contribute to, there are always overhead expenses. A portion of your dollar certainly goes to the expenses of the organization."

Grove on Tuesday confirmed a report by the National Charities Information Bureau that found that only 2.9 percent of the $5.2 million spent by the council in 1985 went to fight cancer.

Temperatures still climbing

From Staff and Wire Reports

Temperatures will continue to climb on Thursday with the National Weather Service predicting a high near 90 degrees. Skies will be sunny and winds will be out of the south at 10-15 mph, according to the NWS at Midland Regional Airport.

The overnight low will also be warmer. The mercury should drop only to near the 50-degree mark. Under fair skies, winds will be out of the west at five to 10 mph.

Tuesday's high was 24 degrees below the record high of 95 set for that date in 1935. Today's low of 42, recorded at 5 a.m., was 15 degrees above the record low set for this date in 1933.

STATE

A weak high-pressure ridge moved into South Texas today, bringing partly cloudy skies and some high clouds, while it was mostly clear elsewhere across the state.

Early-morning temperatures were in the 30s in the Panhandle and mountains of Southwest Texas. Readings in the 40s to the 50s prevailed elsewhere, the National Weather Service said.

Extreme temperatures ranged from 31 degrees at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to 59 degrees at the Naval Air Station in Corpus Christi.

Winds were light and westerly across most of the state, with speeds near 10 mph in North Central and Northeast Texas.

Light and variable winds prevailed along the Rio Grande from the Big Bend region east to the deep south.

It should be clear across the state through tonight, with highs in the mid 70s to the 80s and near 90 in the Rio Grande plains. Lows were expected in the 40s and 50s except lower 60s in the deep south.

A warming trend was expected in North Texas through Thursday, the weather service said. Lows should be in the 40s to lower 50s, with highs Thursday in the 80s.

NATION

Rain spread across broad sections of the Midwest and South today as thunderstorms piled hail 4 inches deep in Kentucky and high water alerts were posted in Tennessee.

Showers and thunderstorms ranged from the Ohio Valley across the eastern Tennessee Valley to the Southeast and Virginia.

Strong thunderstorms with high winds dotted the region from the southern Appalachians to northern and western Georgia, dumping 4-inch-deep hail at Middlesboro, Ky. A flash flood watch was posted in eastern Tennessee.

Board doesn't renew coach's contract

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The school board of the Midland Independent School District voted 7-0 at 2:30 a.m. today for non-renewal of the coaching contract of Midland High School head tennis coach Pete Barizon for the 1987-88 school year.

The vote came after a 10-hour open session of the board, as requested by Barizon. The board had voted for non-renewal of Barizon's coaching position on March 24 in closed session. The board, however, will allow Barizon to continue to teach world history.

Lawyers Bruce Williams, representing MISD, and Thomas J. Griffith, representing Barizon on behalf of the Texas Classroom Teachers Association, paraded 19 witnesses to the stand during what may have been the most lengthy hearing in MISD history.

The charge for non-renewal was for failure to supervise a sixth period tennis class during the off-season. Barizon's coaching abilities were not in question.

Asked if he would appeal the board's decision, Barizon replied, "I don't know yet. I'll have to get with my lawyer (Griffith)."

Griffith said, "I won't know until I have to talk with my client and the Classroom Teachers, but my recommendation would be yes."

Barizon can appeal the board's decision to the Texas Commission of Education.

Major testimony centered around the days of Nov. 10, 17 and 18 when Midland Athletic Director Gil Bartosh made three separate unannounced and unnoticed visits to view Barizon's off-season program after receiving complaints that "some of the kids were leaving the MHS campus during the sixth period."

Bartosh noted that he saw Barizon check the class roll, and afterwards, some of the kids played softball with a tennis ball and others began to leave campus. "One kid told me she was going home and the next time I went, three or four said they were going home," said Bartosh.

Barizon said he allowed tennis students to either play softball, go to the library or leave campus to work out at private clubs because "players needed time away from tennis to avoid burnout. Tennis is the only sport with fall and spring schedules and you can't expect them to play for nine months."

Barizon added that letting the students go came during the off-season was "with the approval of Mr. (Doyle Eugene) Isaacs (grade level principal at MHS.)"

Isaacs testified, "that I never gave Coach Barizon permission to let his kids leave campus. Never did he ask for that permission, nor did I grant permission."

Bartosh said an incident in the fall of 1982 "there was a very parallel situation to what happened in 1986, checking roll and then letting youngsters leave and scatter out.

"Some parents were concerned then and I told Pete that we needed some sort of off-season program, which is important in any sport. You can't play tennis just when it's in season. I told Pete I would recommend him for the next year — give him another chance — if he could show improvement in the area of supervision during the off-season. He did a good job of coaching in the fall and spring. The problem came in the four months of the off-season."

Jimmie Kelly, MHS principal, said, "Bartosh reported to me that on Nov. 10, 17 and 18 that 11 boys and one girl were playing softball during the sixth period tennis class and the remainder were leaving campus. I told him I would check it out.

"On Nov. 19, George Cooper and I investigated and found Barizon checking the roll and visiting the students. He told the students there would be no more free periods and that they must bring racquets and play tennis. Then he released the students for softball and to leave campus."

Barizon said, "After I found out about the concern involved with my off-season practice, I did as asked. The problem as stated to me was corrected on Nov. 20."

A former assistant coach under Barizon in 1982, Karen Bristle, and current assistant Cindy Hazen both said that is was the practice to let the stuents leave campus during sixth period to practice at other facilities if they wished.

Attorney Griffith said in his closing remarks, "You have a prized tennis coach and it would be a shame to lose him.

MISD costs per student rank below average, report says

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland public schools' costs per student rank below the average for school districts its size, according to a national report comparing school budgets.

The report, Local School Budget Profiles: A Comparitive Analysis, shows the Midland Independent School District spending below the average in per pupil expenditures such as executive administration, central and business services, school building administration, total instructional services, and salaries and benefits for teachers, administrators and support staff.

Superintendent Joseph P. Baressi Jr. Tuesday reviewed the report before trustees, saying it shows "we're getting a lot for Midlanders' money.

"We're getting above average results (on achievement tests) for below average expenditures. That means our people are working harder and more efficiently than the average," Baressi said.

Total MISD expenditures per pupil in 1986-87 were $2,092 — the lowest of the other 18 school districts in the survey. That's more than $700 below the national average of $3,663 for school districts the same size and more than a $1,000 below the average of $4,112 for all U.S. school districts.

Expenditures per pupil for executive administration, which includes the superintendent, assistant superintendent and their staffs, were $18.49 compared to $38.49 for districts of equal size and the national average of $67.71.

Grandfather makes quilts to show his love

By NICKI B. LOGAN

PLAINVIEW (AP) — Some day, 50 years from now, when Shawn and Jennifer Collier show their children their "bow tie" and "pinwheel" quilts, they can tell them about how PawPaw made them each a quilt.

That's right. PawPaw.

Their grandfather, Bill Collier, is a quilter.

"When I was a little boy, when we started fussing and fighting, mother would sit us down and start us cutting and piecing quilts to shut us up," laughed Collier. "Oh, girl, I hated it then. That was real punishment."

He started to quilt again last year while he was recovering from heart bypass surgery. "It's hard for a man who is used to hard work to suddenly find time on his hands, so to keep from going crazy, I picked up quilting again. I really appreciate my mother teaching us how to do it... now."

Collier is a barber by profession but worked at everything else after shop hours when his children were growing up. "I've been a barber for 31 years, but we farmed, cut hay, gardened — everything. I worked hard. Quilting saved my sanity when I had to slow down."

The first quilt Collier made was a "colonial girl" pattern for his wife, Gwen. "While I was recovering from surgery, I would sit in my big chair with Cookie and Troubles (miniature dachshunds) on each side of me and quilt on the hoop. If they got on a pin, they would growl until I moved it out of their way. They were company for me when my family was at work.

"My family was so supportive of me when I was feeling bad, they wouldn't let me get depressed. We played games, and they were with me every minute. My daughter Jackie started crocheting a bedspread for me while I was in the operating room, she (just) gave it to me."

Besides the quilts for his grandchildren and his wife, Collier has made quilts for other family members. A recent project is an "around the world" bedspread made from 3,700 3-inch pieces of double-knit fabric. "I cut 3-inch pieces in my sleep now," he laughed. "When I finish it, I am going to make a double wedding ring quilt for me."

> "When I was a little boy, when we started fussing and fighting, mother would sit us down and start us cutting and piecing quilts to shut us up."
>
> — Bill Collier

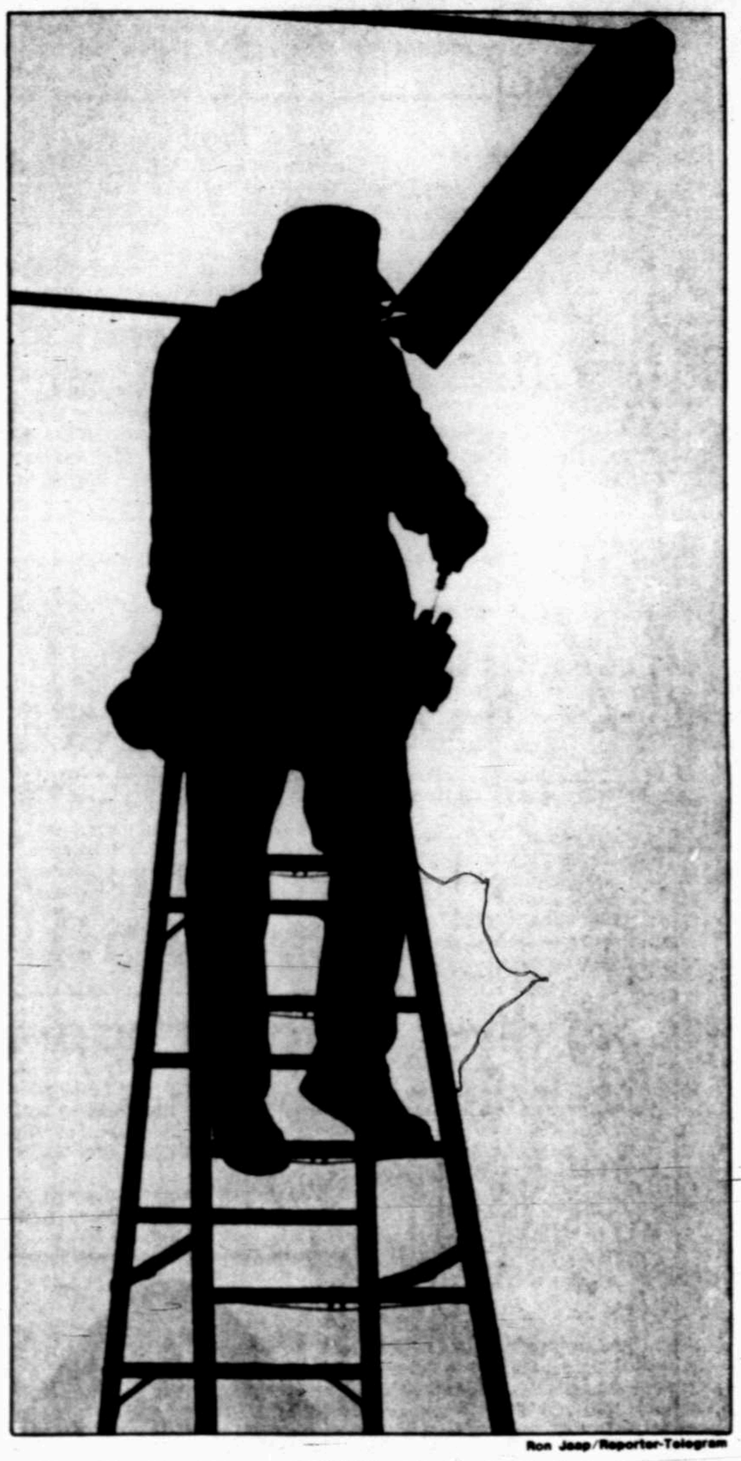

Between customers, Collier works on his quilts. He has an iron and ironing board set up in the back room of the barber shop along with a sewing machine. "I've just about wore out that sewing machine — and my fingers — this past year," he said.

The double wedding ring pattern may be his favorite, but he has made colonial girls, broken star, Dresden plate, bow tie and pinwheel. "I'm always getting new patterns. If I see a pretty quilt laying on a bed I just whip out some paper and pencil and trace a pattern and go home and make a quilt."

Collier mused on his hobby, "When I was younger and in good health, I enjoyed riding pony express with my boys. We raised fighting chickens and was always doing something. When us old fellers get old and have to slow down, I'm telling you, it's hard.

"You're used to doing all the time and you need to keep busy. It happened to me. I'm just happy to be alive. When you're sick you realize how much your family means to you — how much you love them. Your family is the most important thing in the world to you."

One way Bill Collier shows his love is by making quilts, something warm to remember him by.

Wright named farmers co-op general manager

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Charlie Wright

Charlie Wright doesn't behold himself as "the new Hoot Leonard." He's just Charlie. But Wright is the new general manager of the Midland Farmers Co-operative.

He succeeded Leonard, who retired last month after serving as the co-op's general manager for 20 years.

"He's our kind of folks," Leonard said of Wright, who was the co-op's cotton-gin superintendent. "He's an old ag boy. He's worked here 10 years, and he knows all the people, and I think he's an honest old boy."

Leonard, a 62-year-old farmer and cattleman, has been retained as a consultant to the co-op.

"You don't get that kind of a deal most times — to have somebody with that much expertise to fall back on for advice," Wright said.

E.F. "Gene" Jones, president of the co-op's board of directors, said that the co-op and its directors "appreciate" Leonard and his "expertise" and noted that he was "real conservative and real cash-flow conscious" in conducting the co-op's business.

Leonard "wouldn't have recommended him (Wright) if he didn't think he was tops," Jones said.

"Old Charlie, he'll do a great job," Jones said. "He doesn't have a great education, but he's smart. Sometimes if you get too great of an education, you get to where you don't want to get you hands dirty."

Commented Wright: "The 'school of hard knocks' is a real good teacher."

Wright, whose background is in agriculture, grew up on the sandy soil around Ivanhoe, a Fannin County community near the Red River in Northeast Texas. Wright's family grew peanuts, corn, sweet potatoes and some cotton on the Fannin County sandy soil, which borders the Blackland Belt.

Shortly after he was graduated from high school at Ivanhoe in 1955, Wright left the farm to work in machine shops for two aircraft companies — Convair and Chance Vought — in Fort Worth.

"That was just factory work," Wright, 50, recalled. "A lot of kids out in the country went to the big city and got a job."

But in 1959, he left East Texas and moved to West Texas.

"East Texas is more of a depressed area," Wright said, "and good-paying jobs are hard to find there. And I like the climate in West Texas."

Out west, Wright worked in the cattle feedyard industry in Lubbock, Hereford and Abernathy until 1972. That year, he moved to Midland County, where he "ran a ranch."

"I'm a country boy, and I can't get away from it."

In the mid-1970s, he joined the co-op, where his primary responsibility was overseeing the ginning operation.

"I never did spend a lot of time in front of the gin stands ginning," Wright said, "but mostly keeping the gin running."

Once, Wright considered farming as a sideline.

"I sure considered it at one time," he said, "but luckily I couldn't get it done. It's a terrible headache trying to break even on it (farming)."

One of his roles now as the co-op's general manager is to keep the co-op solvent and to serve the needs of farmers and ranchers.

"I sincerely hope so," Wright said. "It's going to be more of a challenge to keep the co-op viable in the near future because of the depressed economy in agriculture."

In addition to ginning and baling cotton, the co-op operates a farm-and-ranch supply store.

Wright noted that the co-op's board of seven directors "decides the policy and steers the business, and the manager carries out their direction. The strength of the co-op is in the strength of the board."

Wright said that one of the biggest appeals which agriculture holds for him is the people in farming and ranching.

"I like the people; that's No. 1," he said.

Wright said he enjoys "the people I work with and the people I work for and the people I do business with."

"Most all of my life, I've been involved in agriculture. As a general rule, it's not a dog-eat-dog world when you deal with other people as it is in other industries."

Odessa council to decide on detention facility

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A decision April 28 by City Council members on a specific use ordinance concerning location of minimum security detention facilities is expected to determine the future of a proposed facility.

Local general contractor Jimmy Moore has proposed that the old Gulf Oil building, 911 W. 2nd St., be remodeled and used to house low-risk, non-violent inmates.

Moore, owner of J.L. Moore Building Contractors Inc., 907 W. 2nd St., said the Gulf building would be completely remodeled for use as a privately run minimum security jail.

According to Moore, the proposed facility would not involve work release or halfway house inmates.

Earlier this year council members rejected a proposal to convert the old Sands Motel on East 2nd Street for use as a halfway house for state prison parolees.

The proposed facility would follow "stringent" state guidelines and could be helped by a bill signed by Gov. Bill Clements this week that would allow privately run jails, housing from 500 to 2,000 prisoners, to operate as an adjunct to Texas Department of Correction facilities.

Moore said the facility would employ about 20 people and have an annual payroll of $400,000 to $500,000.

Moore said the two-story Spanish-style former Gulf Oil-owned building, which was later owned by Odessa College and used as an athletic dormitory from 1967 to about 1981, would be "superior for this type of facility."

The effort to convert the old Sands Motel into a halfway house generated a storm of protest from residents and business operators in the east Odessa area.

The controversy prompted City Council members to draft a new ordinance containing specific guidelines for granting permits for such facilities.

The Council is scheduled to take final action on the proposed ordinance at its next meeting April 28.

Living in big city often turns drivers into madmen

Ott

Although I grew up in a small town, I've always taken a certain amount of pride in being able to drive in a big city without completely freaking out.

Living in Houston for three years no doubt had something to do with that ability. It is nothing but freeways and out-of-control drivers, so to exist there means being able to weave in and out of traffic without flinching.

Do it enough and even a farm boy becomes somewhat expert in the art of getting from Point A to Point B without colliding with any number of obstacles attempting to impede your progress.

I had good training, as well.

When I first moved there a friend noticed my hesitancy on the freeways, particularly when trying to get on one from the service road. I was jerking around, stopping and going with no rhyme or reason. Very amateurish, I must admit in hindsight.

He merely smirked and said, "There's two things you must always remember. Drive as fast as you can and never yield to anything smaller than an 18-wheeler with a West Virginia license plate and a driver who has a beer belly."

"But isn't that sort of rude?" I asked.

"Look, it's as much your road as his," he said. "Besides, as soon as you slow down some little old lady will wipe you out from the rear. You've gotta go fast, man, fast."

Another thing about big-city driving is that it changes your personality.

I arrived in Houston a nice, quiet gentleman who opened doors for women and who was always polite to his elders.

I left a madman.

If some jerk (the most common word used by city drivers) cut in front of me on the expressway I would shake my fist at him wildly and scream horrible things that would make an Al Pacino movie seem like something out of Walt Disney's mind. I would also make that famous gesture of waving with only one finger.

I had a constant scowl on my face. It was me against the world.

And why not? Every other driver on the road had a similar temperament and was out to get me. A person has no friends on the freeway. The whole world is the enemy and must be treated as such.

The horn became my favorite tool. When a person delayed even briefly after the light changed from red to green, I honked. When a person in front of me turned without signalling, I honked. When a person changed lanes without my approval, I honked. If I just happened to be in a bad mood, I honked.

And, not with just a gentle tap, either. I sat on that blasted horn until I got action. Get out of my way, was the message I wanted everyone within earshot of me to get.

It was a side of me which I wasn't particularly proud. Still, to survive, a man does what he has to do. He must adjust to his surroundings.

Such it is with me.

Now that I'm back in a smaller town, my driving habits have calmed considerably. No longer am I the uptight motorist.

If someone in front of me doesn't immediately take off when the light changes, I wait patiently. I realize that his mind is probably on something more important. No problem. I'll still get to where I'm going in plenty of time.

There's no need to honk. So I don't.

I just smile and wave at him — but with only one finger.

Bad habits are hard to break.

Storekeeper ministers to elderly

PACIO (AP) — Jay Gentry lives peacefully at his general store in this Delta County community southeast of Lake Creek.

On sunny days, his 11 roosters, 17 hens and three pullets pass the open doorway of the store that is west of his home on Farm Road 198.

Gentry, 86, says it never gets too cold to open up his store. "If you wait until about two o'clock in the afternoon, when the folks around aren't working, then my place fills up," said Gentry.

A pot bellied stove inside offers a place to sit and get warm on a cold day. A row of chairs is ready for sitters and conversation any time.

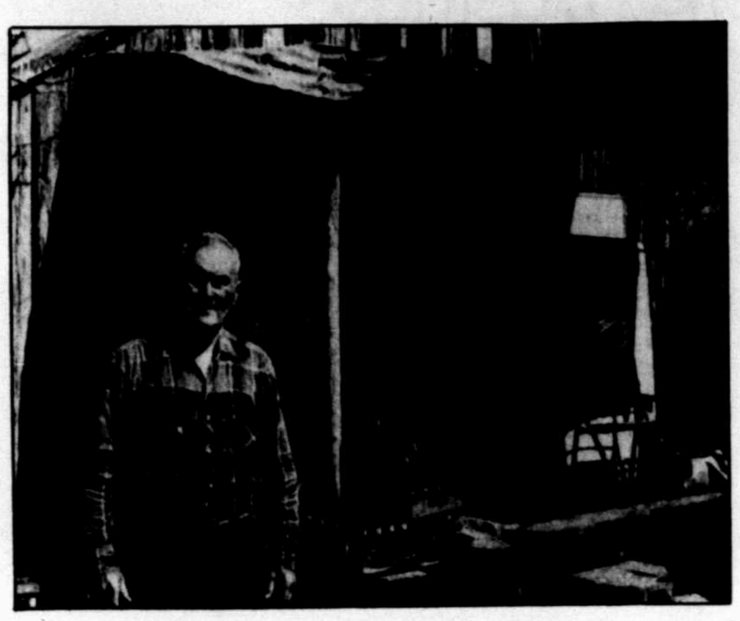

On the wall of his store, he keeps a 20-inch skillet. "I use it to fry fish in, or cook breakfast on campouts," said Gentry.

Gentry sells fresh eggs from his yard, plus bacon that arrives each Tuesday from Sulphur Springs. "A woman came from Winnsboro and bought a whole side of bacon last week, and the next day a man came and bought $51 worth," he said.

He also sells cold drinks, candy and bubble gum, fishhooks, nuts and bolts, ax handles, needles, pins, vinegar, salt blocks for cattle and a few more items, but no tobacco.

"I quit carrying cigarettes or chewing tobacco years ago in my store...I used to make lots of money selling it," Gentry says. "The Lord told me it was the wrong thing to do. I lost two brothers from cigarettes."

Gentry operates his store from daylight to dark, six days a week, and stops about 4 p.m. on Wednesday to head for Cooper for one of his special tasks — visiting patients at the two nursing homes there.

AP Laserphoto

Jay Gentry opens his Delta County store in Pacio in East Texas six mornings a week and looks forward to each day. Gentry also visits "sick folks" in the towns of Cooper and Paris.

He spends his Sundays visiting patients at the six nursing homes in Paris, and recently was honored for his volunteer service by the Medical Plaza Nursing Home in Paris.

Gentry says he does not belong to any particular church, but feels a special call to his nursing home visits.

"The Lord just put it on me to visit the sick folks," he says. "You can't show me in the Bible about joining a chuch. I can't read a word of it, but I feel close to the Lord. I just do what the Lord tells me to do."

Sometimes on Sunday, he does not get finished with his Paris visiting, including folks in the hospital, until sundown. It's his own personal ministry.

"I go in every room. I don't care if I don't know them," he says. "I walk all day long in the halls. I never worry or let it get to me — the shape those people are in. They look forward to it (his visit), too," he says.

Each Christmas, Gentry carries loads of bananas, apples and candy for the patients. At other times he brings home-cooked treats.

"I fix biscuits, sausage and quail and take to the hospitals. One time, I fixed cornbread and poke salad and took it because a nurse asked me to," said Gentry.

He has his freezer full of quail and squirrel. He does not raise a garden anymore "because folks just give me more than enough fresh things."

On the wall of the store are deer antlers and an elk head. "I went elk hunting in Colorado recently, and never could get the hang of the rifle scope. I can hit plenty without it, but not a dadburn thing with it," he said.

Gentry moved to Texas in 1908 from Jackson County, Tenn., where he was born.

He ran a store in Lamar County for 14 years. He moved to Delta County and built his 26-by-16-foot store in 1937, and he chuckles, "They can't get me to run no more."

He has two children and five grandchildren. His wife, Lola, died 12 years ago.

"At first, I was going to tear my store down. But now, I won't get rid of it until it falls down," Gentry says.

Officials say El Paso flunking emissions tests

EL PASO (AP) — Vehicles in El Paso, the only city in Texas to exceed federal standards for carbon monoxide, are flunking a new test designed to bring the air into compliance with EPA rules, officials say.

Since January, when tailpipe emissions tests began in El Paso, about 70,000 vehicles have been tested, said Danny Wilkinson of the Texas Department of Public Safety. Of those, Wilkinson estimated that between 15 percent and 20 percent did not pass.

The EPA won't begin compiling statistics until August, Wilkinson said Tuesday. The tailpipe emission tests are part of the mandatory annual inspection of vehicles.

In most cases, minor repairs will bring the vehicles into compliance with emission standards, Wilkinson said.

As expected, low-income areas had the highest rate of failures, said DPS Sgt. Glenn Wood.

The DPS is in charge of training and registering service stations that administer the tests. The agency also runs checks to make sure service station attendants are inspecting the vehicles properly for signs of tampering with anti-pollution devices and for non-compliance with emissions standards.

So far this year, six inspectors in El Paso have been suspended for one year for "flagrant" violations of inspection procedures, Wilkinson said. Seven stations have been fined and 17 warnings have been issued.

An estimated 289,000 vehicles will be inspected this year in El Paso, Wood said.

At a recent meeting sponsored by the League of Women Voters, El Paso residents quizzed air pollution officials on how successful the city is going to be with its air pollution control program.

Raul Munoz, head of the environmental division of the City-County Health District, said El Paso will always have air pollution problems because it is next to Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

Vehicles in Juarez generally are in worse condition than in El Paso and are not required to have anti-pollution devices, he said.

Last week, EPA and DPS officials stopped about 500 cars throughout the city to check for tampering with anti-pollution devices. The voluntary inspections were part of a study to determine the extent of compliance with state law.

Officials here say they are aware that many drivers register their vehicles in Juarez or in neighboring New Mexico, which also does not have pollution controls.

COACH

"He was told about all of this on Nov. 19 and the problem was corrected on Nov. 20 and he hasn't received any complaints since."

MISD attorney Williams said, "There has been a failure to put together a structured off-season program. It happened in 1982 and in 1986 and he can't say I didn't know. He still hasn't put together an off-season program.

Barizon said, "I definitely would like the opportunity to continue to coach at Midland High. There is a great future for MHS tennis. I was instrumental in helping design the new tennis center and that's where I would like to be next year."

In opening remarks, board member Fred Newman said, "The preponderance of the evidence shows that kids were released from school without supervision and that is a clear violation of policy."

Board member Joe Golding said, "The main issue is the sixth period class. Was there supervision? Two assistant coaches said they let the kids go and at least six administrators had been around to address this problem long before Nov. 19."

Ronald Britton, another board member, said, "Non-renewal in this case is based on supervision, not how good a coach he is. He is bound to follow school policy whether he likes the policy or not."

Board member Michael Conaway said, "Problems have continued subsequent to Nov. 19 because we had testimony that kids were seen playing at the Midlander after that date during the sixth period class."

Betsy Robinson of the board said, "I see coach Barizon as a great tennis coach, but it was well-known to him that there was concern over the lack of supervision in the sixth period tennis class."

Board member Joe Reed added, "There is a lot of evidence that students were released from campus during the sixth period and little to prove that students were not released."

No directions were given to find a replacement for Barizon, but that search is expected to begin soon. Bill Jackson, board president, did inform Barizon at the end of the meeting that his coaching contract would not be renewed, but that he would be retained as a teacher.

MISD

Per pupil expenditures for central and business services such as professional, clerical staff and equipment and supplies for central office personnel, were $77.82 compared to $98.63 for comparable districts and $87.92 for the national average.

Per pupil costs for school building administration — principals, assistant principals, clerical services and supplies — were $148.50 compared to $196.72 for similiar districts and $212.34 for the national average.

Expenditures for instructional services — teachers, librarians, counselors, instructional supervision, curriculum development, aides, books and supplies — were $1,831 per pupil compared to $2,227 for the group and $2,434 for the national average.

According to the report, MISD spends more on improvement and development of instruction. That cost per pupil is $106 compared to $65 for the group's average and $45 for the national average.

Officials said MISD spends a larger percentage of its budget on teacher salaries than most districts.

But per pupil expenditures for salaries, retirement contributions and fringe benefits for classroom teachers of $1,73 is well below the group average of $1,742 and the national average of $1,895, according to the report.

In a separate report, officials said MISD's central office staffing is well below 22 other Texas schools districts surveyed by Educational Research Services Inc. of Arlington, Va.

According to the report, MISD's total of 30 central office staff is well below that of Ector County ISD's 78 staff members, Lubbock's 59, Beaumont's 44, Spring Branch's 83 and Fort Bend's 104.

In other business, trustees:

— Authorized the school district to seek outside funding for a skills for adolescence program sponsored by Lions Club International.

— Authorized administrators to seek bids for Midland High School band uniforms.

— Approved on second reading a new board policy to help reduce classroom paperwork.

House gives tentative approval to cruelty to animals bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The House has given tentative approval to a bill against animal cruelty that one lawmaker says provides stiffer penalties for hurting animals than for hurting humans.

"It's not even illegal to rape your wife, but it is going to be a prison conviction to be cruel to an animal," said Rep. Billy Clemons, D-Pollok, complaining about Rep. Charles Finnell's bill.

The Finnell measure, which decreases penalties for some animal cruelty offenses while increasing others, won preliminary approval in a non-record vote Tuesday. Finnell, D-Holliday, wants to allow prison terms of up to 10 years on third convictions for animal-related offenses.

Finnell's bill lowers the penalty for animal neglect, the most common animal-related offense, from a Class A misdemeanor to a Class C misdemeanor. He said that would allow quicker prosecution.

The measure faces another House vote that would send it to the Senate.

Bond set on Midlander charged with sexual assault

Police Roundup

From Staff Reports

A 30-year-old man has been charged a day after he was arrested shortly after a 29-year-old woman told police she had been sexually assaulted.

Dean Tyrone Tryon, 200 E. Dengar Ave., was charged Tuesday with sexual assault. Bond was set at $10,000 by Judge Robert Pine.

According to police, the attack occurred about 9:35 a.m. at a residence on East Spruce Avenue. The victim, 29, told police a man walked to her residence, knocked on the front door, then forced his way in when the victim answered. He wore a black mask during the attack, police said.

After the attack, the victim ran to a neighbor's house, and police were called. Tryon was arrested about 10:15 a.m. after he was spotted by an officer and tried to flee the area in an automobile.

The Midland County Sheriff's office is investigating the burglary of a business near the intersection of County Road 124, near the west end of CR 1308.

According to reports, between 7:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. Tuesday, someone removed a window screen at Nalco Chemical, entered the business and stole $1,700 cash, a .22 caliber rifle valued at $130 and a .22 caliber pistol valued at $120.

Midland police are investigating the burglary of a residence in the 1100 block of East Jax Avenue. According to reports, a stereo valued at $1,000 and a 19-inch color television set valued at $250 were stolen. Police said the burglary occurred between 7 p.m. Monday and 7:15 a.m. Tuesday.

Grand jury to hear evidence on baby found in Dumpster

From Staff Reports

A Midland grand jury is scheduled to hear evidence today in the case of a baby who was found in March in a hospital Dumpster, according to Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre.

According to police, a 25-year-old Pecos woman drove to Midland to buy a car March 5 with two of her children, ages 2 and 4, and her brother.

While paperwork was being processed on a car she purchased, police said the woman went to a restroom and apparently gave birth to the baby boy.

Police said several spots of blood were found in the restroom.

According to police, she then allegedly wrapped the newborn in a coat, then drove to Midland Memorial Hospital and put the baby in a trash can.

The body was found later among trash emptied from an outdoor hospital dumpster, police said.

The mother was charged with murder and released on $10,000 bond, police said.

WRIGHT

Wright said that farming and ranching people, regardless of their economic success, share much in common and identify with one another.

"You might find a very wealthy man sitting at the (co-op's) coffee table with a poor fellow," he said, "and you couldn't tell by listening to them or looking at them" which one was poor and which one was wealthy.

By his reckoning, success in life is not measured "in dollars. That's not right."

"If we just use the talent God gave us and use it in the right direction," Wright said, "we will usually be successful."

Senate to vote on bills that would prevent grand jury system abuse

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

STATE

AUSTIN — Several bills aimed at preventing abuse of the grand jury system headed for the full Senate Tuesday after receiving committee approval.

The proposed changes would place necessary checks on grand jurors and district attorneys who might abuse the system to harass and possibly indict innocent people, said Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville and a former prosecutor. The Senate Criminal Justice Committee approved the measures.

One of the proposals would prevent prosecutors from obtaining an indictment by presenting evidence of false statements to the same grand jury before which the perjury allegedly occurred.

"(This affords) the accused person a fair and impartial forum," Glasgow said in his analysis of the bill.

The measure would address a problem that came up during three Jefferson County grand jury investigations of Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, as part of the Happy Times Video case in 1984 and 1985. Two grand juries indicted Parker on charges ranging from aggravated perjury to promotion of prostitution to organized criminal activity. A visiting judge dismissed those indictments because of irregularities in the grand jury process. A third grand jury later cleared Parker of any involvement in the Happy Times case.

The first set of grand jurors indicted Parker for aggravated perjury, charging that he had lied to them under oath. Parker, who supports the grand jury reforms, and Glasgow said such situations create less-than-objective grand juries.

Another proposal approved by the committee would permit only the prosecutor and grand jurors to question witnesses. During the Happy Times case, Parker complained that district attorney's investigators badgered witnesses and jurors.

The committee also approved a bill that would prohibit a grand jury foreman from issuing subpoenas for evidence and witnesses.

"As proposed, (the bill) limits the scope of grand jury investigations to those matters presented to the grand jury by the state prosecutor," Glasgow said in his analysis. The proposal would prevent "runaway grand juries" that proceed against the advice of prosecutors, he said.

A provision of the bill would require the state prosecutor to inform the grand jury of all subpoenas issued with regard to the investigation and allow grand jurors to inspect all evidence seized.

House OKs bills which Lewis says will make streets safer

AUSTIN (AP) — Speaker Gib Lewis' anti-crime package, which has won preliminary House approval, is the latest in a series of ineffective attempts to make the state's streets safer, the director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union says.

But Gara LaMarche added that the sections he found most objectionable were deleted in committee, leaving the package relatively harmless from a civil liberties standpoint.

He called it a "watered-down version of the traditional fare we've seen from the speakers and the governors over the last several years."

The package, which faces another House vote that would send it to the Senate, includes a bill that would make many inmates serve longer prison terms.

"I think it's going to be one that is going to make the streets of Texas safe," Lewis said, acknowledging the package would be costly because it would require new prisons.

Rep. Dan Morales, D-San Antonio, said his measure restricting early release of inmates would not take effect until more prison space is built to hold the inmates. He projected the cost at $255 million.

"It is time, I believe, to rethink the policy of depopulation and move in precisely the opposite policy direction and recognize a significant expansion program at the Texas Department of Corrections is necessary," he said.

Asked where prison money would come from, Lewis said, "We're going to have to find the revenue somewhere and I think those who voted for it today are willing to do that."

Preliminary approval also was given for a bill that would repeal the Speedy Trial Act. The bill, which sets deadlines by which prosecutors must be ready to go to trial, was not part of Lewis' package, but he supported it.

Sponsor Rep. Ted Roberts, R-Corpus Christi, said the Speedy Trial Act is "another loophole for criminals to try to get off."

LaMarche lamented what he said was the false hope raised by backers of the Lewis package.

"The regrettable thing about it is that, whatever you think about these bills, they are not going to have any impact on crime. We come back session after session and really kid the public into thinking if we tinker around with the rules of evidence we're going to make the

Other bills in the package would:

— Allow the admission of illegally obtained evidence if prosecutors could show the officer who got the evidence had acted in good faith.

— Allow juveniles accused of violent offenses to be tried as adults. If convicted, the juvenile would be held by the Texas Youth Commission until old enough for transfer to TDC.

— Allow jurors to see the juvenile criminal records of adult defendants. Only records for the previous five years could be admitted as evidence.

Senate OKs bill extending MHMR department

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has approved bills to continue the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, penalize persons who use fake IDs and give Mexican nationals a tuition break at certain Texas colleges.

The bill extending the MHMR department to 1999 was sent to the House on voice vote Tuesday, despite Sen. John Leedom's comments that a provision in the bill could lead to "open-end" expenses for parents of patients.

The MHMR department, established in 1965 and now one of the largest state agencies with nearly 23,000 employees, operates eight state mental hospitals and 13 state schools for the retarded.

The agency would be abolished on Sept. 1 under the Texas Sunset Act unless it is continued by the Legislature.

Bill sponsor Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said the measure deletes the current fee schedule, which he said was adopted in the 1960s and is outdated. "This gives the department latitude to update the fee schedule." Leedom, D-Dallas, said the bill allows the state to recover treatment costs, which could be "astronomical."

Farabee said the "ability-to-pay" provision would apply only to parents whose patient-children are under 18, but could save the state millions of dollars.

If a family's income is $50,000 to $100,000 a year, "why shouldn't they pay a little more than $170 a month (the current cap)?" Farabee said.

Leedom's amendment to reinstate the fee schedule was rejected 21-7.

Farabee said the bill would delete the requirement that the state mental health commissioner be a medical doctor. However, a medical director would be added to the administrative staff.

The bill also would require annual reviews of all community mental health programs, instead of every three years.

The bill to penalize persons who use fake driver's licenses to cash hot checks or obtain alcoholic beverages was approved without debate after the sponsor Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, agreed to reduce the offense from a third-degree felony to a Class A misdemeanor.

The felony offense would have provided maximum punishment of 10 years in prison. Maximum punishment under a Class A misdemeanor is one year in jail.

Under the bill, which was approved on voice vote, a person could be fined up to $200 for making a false statement in obtaining a driver's license. If the false statement pertained to suspension, revocation, cancellation or denial of a license, the maximum punishment would be 180 days in jail.

Sen. Tati Santiesteban's bill authorizing in-state tuition for Mexican students attending Texas border colleges or Sul Ross State University was amended to require students to show "financial need."

Santiesteban, D-El Paso, said the out-of-state tuition rate of $120 per semester hour makes it "virtually impossible" for a foreign student to attend college in Texas.

DEA agent says he didn't know of plot to kill colleague

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A federal drug agent says he didn't know of a plot to assassinate a colleague who was killed during a New Year's Eve drug bust a half-dozen miles from the Mexico border.

"To me that's absurd. It's beyond reality," Drug Enforcement Administration special agent Angel Perez testified Tuesday when asked if he knew of any plot to execute special agent William Ramos.

But a defense attorney in the federal murder trial of Felipe Molina Uribe claimed during his opening arguments that Ramos was "executed and assassinated."

"I don't know by who," said Molina's attorney, J.M. Ramirez. "I don't know who did the killing."

Ramos died after a gunshot pierced his chest during a scuffle with Molina over a gun, government witnesses testified.

Ramos and DEA informant Roberto Ortiz — who had gone to a South Texas supermarket to execute a drug bust — were with Molina in a car in the parking lot when shots were fired, witnesses said.

Ernesto Rodriguez, another informant, said he and Ortiz were at the rear of Ramos' car when he heard the agent calling for help.

"Then I saw Felipe had agent Ramos by the neck and I'm on the edge of the door and I grab Felipe's boot ...and at that moment I saw the pistol he had in his hand, his left hand. I tried to grab the gun. That's when I felt the gunfire," Rodriguez said.

Rodriguez said he heard two other shots fired inside the car.

Prosecutors rested their case Tuesday, the second day of testimony. The case was to resume today.

Ramos, 30, is the second DEA agent to be killed on duty in less than two years. The last DEA agent to die on duty was Enrique Camarena Salazar, who was killed in February 1985 in Guadalajara, Mexico.

Ramos was also the second narcotics officer to die in the Rio Grande Valley within two months.

Authorities recovered 300 pounds of marijuana from a van in the supermarket parking lot. Molina pleaded guilty to two drug charges prior to testimony beginning Monday in the case. He will be sentenced on those counts May 13, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Jack Wolfe.

In addition to being tried on a charge of murder, Molina also faces a count of using a firearm in the commission of a violent crime.

Dollar rises

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose against almost all major currencies in lively early trading in Europe today, boosted by a Japanese announcement of international intervention to revive the battered currency.

The dollar's slide turned into a rout Tuesday and sent gold prices soaring to their highest levels in four years.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar closed at 141.85, up from the record closing low of 141.35 yen it hit on Tuesday.

The dollar recovered after opening at a record low of 140 yen, the lowest level since modern exchange rates were introduced in the late 1940s.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Tuesday:

—1.8132 West German marks, up from 1.7910

—6.0360 French francs, up from 5.9825

—1.3170 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3180.

In London, the dollar rose against the British pound, which was quoted at $1.6255 — cheaper than $1.6290 on Tuesday.

Gold prices also rose but fell back as the dollar strengthened. At the start of bullion trading in London, gold moved up strongly, following a more than $14 rise overnight in New York, but fell back later as the dollar strengthened — attracting some investors back towards currency markets.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $447 a troy ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $441.50. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $445.50.

Silver prices also rose strongly. The metal was quoted in London today at a bid price of $7.16 a troy ounce, up from Tuesday's $7.06.

Judge OKs financing for Hunt offshore project

DALLAS (AP) — A bankruptcy judge cleared the way for Placid Oil Co. to go ahead with a $31 million plan to finance an offshore drilling project that the Hunt brothers say can lead the company to economic recovery.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Harold C. Abramson ruled Tuesday night that allowing development of the Green Canyon project off the Louisiana coast would benefit both Placid Oil and its creditors. Following the ruling, a Placid attorney said the Hunts could move forward on the project as soon as today.

However, the Hunt's 23 creditor banks, which are seeking to collect more than $773 million in debts, argued the project is not economically viable.

Lamar Hunt, Nelson Bunker Hunt and William Herbert Hunt, along with Placid Oil, sought approval for the financing plan to continue developing the deep-water oil production project they claim would extract 75 million barrels of oil from the Gulf of Mexico.

"This is a very, very important event in that Green Canyon for Placid Oil represents one of the precious few offshore properties domestically and deepest offshore projects in the world," said Keith Burton, a spokesman for the Hunt brothers.

Abramson's ruling also prevents creditors from foreclosing on any Placid assets if the company defaults on a $31 million drilling loan it needs to keep the Green Canyon project going.

Lawyers representing the creditor banks argued in almost 15 hours of testimony that the development of Green Canyon was risky and could endanger the creditors' position by further eroding assets of the company.

Placid Oil lawyers maintained, however, that the plan would enable Placid to pay off its creditors with proceeds from the project.

"What Green Canyon does in this case is take a gigantic step forward in solving that problem," said Henry Simon Jr., lead attorney for Placid.

The project had also drawn support from the company's unsecured creditors — who are owed more than $30 million — and the Internal Revenue Service.

Placid Oil, owned by a joint trust of the brothers, filed for bankruptcy protection last August after the creditor banks sought to foreclose on assets.

Clements worried about Texaco jobs

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says he hasn't made up his mind about legislation which would lower the bond Texaco must post while appealing the loss of a multibillion-dollar lawsuit to Pennzoil.

But Clements said he is worried about what will happen to the Texaco jobs in the state.

"I'm concerned about the Texaco-Pennzoil situation as it relates to jobs," Clements told his weekly news conference Tuesday.

"Texaco has some 8,000 employees in the state of Texas. Of course, this is a very important company. It was founded in Texas. It was an outgrowth of the old Spindletop field, which I think goes back to 1901. So Texaco has been a longtime member of our community," Clements said.

Texaco has sought protection under federal bankruptcy laws after being on the losing end of an $11 billion judgment to Pennzoil, which alleged that Texaco Inc. had broken up a merger.

Under Texas law, the losing side is required to post bond roughly equal to the judgment in order to protect the winning side while appeals are pursued.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, and Rep. Charles Evans, D-Hurst, have introduced legislation that would limit the amount of the bond that must be posted to $1 billion.

Clements said he hasn't seen the legislation or talked with Parker or Evans.

"Until I see the bill, and I talk to the sponsors and fully understand the bill, I'm not taking a position on the bill as such," the governor said. "But I want to emphasize that I am terribly concerned about these 8,000 employees. I don't want anything to happen to them."

Texas Rep. Hugo Berlanga (D-Corpus Christi) and lobbyist, Babe Schwartz, rear, laugh at a bumper sticker that found its way into the House Tuesday. Both Texaco and Pennzoil have hired lobbyists to represent their interests in the state legislature.

Unocal sues investment bankers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Unocal Corp., the parent of Union Oil Co. of California, filed a $2.43 billion lawsuit Tuesday against two investment banking firms and four indicted Wall Street traders over its 1985 takeover battle against T. Boone Pickens Jr.

The action by Unocal is the latest in a series of lawsuits brought in the wake of the widening insider-trading scandal that has implicated some of Wall Street's top investment bankers.

Unocal's suit alleges breach of contract and fiduciary duty, fraud, negligence and conspiracy.

Named in the Superior Court suit are Goldman, Sachs & Co., which was Unocal's chief financial adviser in the takeover fight; Robert M. Freeman, a partner at Goldman; Kidder, Peabody & Co. and three Kidder executives — Richard B. Wigton, Timothy L. Tabor and Martin A. Siegel.

More defendants may be named later, the suit said.

The suit alleges that Freeman provided confidential information about Unocal's plans to Siegel, Wigton and Tabor, who used that information to trade stocks in Kidder's own accounts and the accounts of certain clients.

"We believe that the Unocal claims against our firm are frivolous and totally without merit, and we will vigorously defend against these claims," Goldman said in a statement issued in New York.

Kidder spokesman Hugh Covington said officials there hadn't been served with the suit and had no immediate comment.

Pennzoil price defies analysis

New York Times News Service

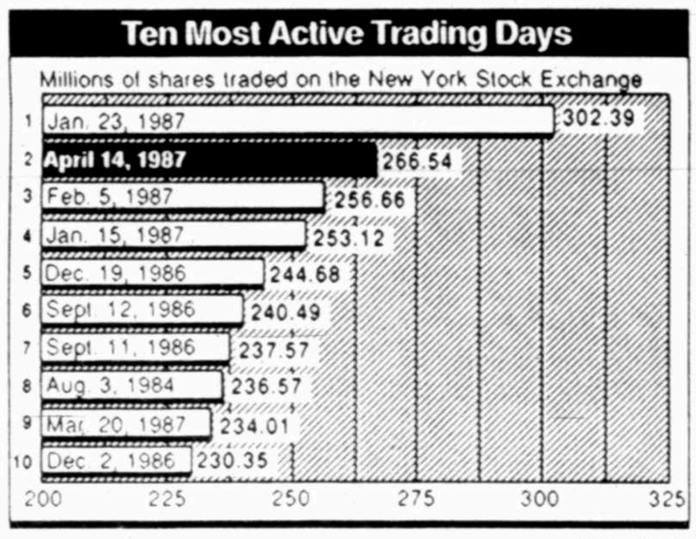

NEW YORK — "Determining the worth of Pennzoil's stock is like trying to catch a slippery eel." That's how Earl Lester, oil analyst for the Standard & Poor's Corp., describes the high-stakes battle between the Pennzoil Co. and Texaco Inc. Suddenly, a tantalizing game on Wall Street has become the placing of bets on Pennzoil's fast-moving shares.

Last week, when speculation ran high that Pennzoil would exact a handsome tribute from Texaco, Pennzoil shares sold as high as $95 and finished Friday at $92.25. On Monday, one day after Texaco sought protection from creditors under the Federal Bankruptcy Code, Pennzoil shares plunged $15.25, to $77. Tuesday, the stock fell $1.375, to $75.675.

Ten Most Active Trading Days

Millions of shares traded on the New York Stock Exchange

AP LaserGraphic

The above graphic illustrates the ten biggest trading days on the stock market.

Stocks prices plunge in intense trading

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Stock prices plunged in intense trading Tuesday, with declining shares overwhelming gainers 13 to 1. For the first two days of the week, the Dow Jones industrial average has declined 3.7 percent.

Tuesday the Dow average was down 65 points late in the afternoon but cut the loss about in half, ending with a decline of 34.09 points, to 2,252.98. Trading swelled to 266.5 million shares, the second-busiest session ever on the Big Board.

The market has been torn for two weeks by interrelated economic jitters, all of which are bubbling up at once.

Analysts Tuesday cited the intensification of trade friction between the United States and Japan; fears of inflation reflected in a strong rise in precious metals and gold mining shares; a rise in interest rates in the credit markets, the unexpectedly large $15.1 billion trade deficit, and a steep decline in the dollar.

The number of declining stocks on the Big Board, at 1,646, overwhelmed the meager list of 163 issues that advanced in price.

Dollar, trade crises pummel stock markets

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar's weakness continues to send shock waves through the financial markets.

The precipitous decline in the U.S. currency, steepened by a disappointing report on the U.S. trade deficit, touched off more waves of selling in stocks and bonds Tuesday.

The slide, which began Monday in anticipation of the trade report, resumed with a vengeance Tuesday morning after the Commerce Department announced that the trade imbalance had widened in February to $15.06 billion.

Tuesday's activity all hinged on the trade report, which was seen as a sign that the weakening dollar has done little to improve the nation's trade imbalance. Fears persisted that the sinking dollar eventually would force the Federal Reserve to tighten credit to restore confidence in dollar-denominated investments.

In Tokyo on Tuesday, the dollar fell 1.15 yen to 141.35, its lowest closing level there since modern exchange rates were set in the late 1940s. The previous record low of 142.50 yen was hit on Friday and Monday.

By late afternoon in New York, the dollar had eroded to 140.75 yen, nearly 2 yen cheaper than its late Monday rate of 142.60.

On Wall Street, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 34.09 points to close at 2,252.98 Tuesday, after having lost 51.71 points Monday.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange soared to 266.54 million shares. It was the busiest day since Jan. 23, when a record 302.39 million shares changed hands.

The trade deficit numbers were by far the most critical of the day, analysts said. The February deficit, which measures the excess of imports over exports, was up from a revised January shortfall of $12.27 billion.

Southwest Royalties moving into Coquina building

By MELLA McEWEN

McEwen

SOUTHWEST ROYALTIES, INC. has purchased the Coquina East building, 407 N. Big Spring, from Wagner & Brown and is preparing to move into the three-story building around June 1, according to Bill Coggin, the company's controller.

He said the third floor is being remodeled for the company, but there is still some space on that floor for lease. Other companies moving into the building include West Texas Oil Reports and Joel Castello. Coggin added that TDS is looking to sublet some office space on the first floor.

Southwest Royalties made the purchase in a move to gain more space and room for expansion, Coggin explained. He notes that the expansion could very possibly include some additional jobs in the near future.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Purchasing dual issues tricky, but brokers' responsibility

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I placed a limit order, good till canceled, with a brokerage firm to buy 500 shares of common stock in a utility company at 16⅛ — $16.87½ a share. A few days later, the New York Stock Exchange tables in two newspapers listed that stock as low as 16¾ — $16.75 a share.

The brokerage did not buy the 500 shares for me. They claim the 16¾ quote might have been on some exchange other than the New York Stock Exchange. Do you agree with their contention?

Doyle

A. It's very possible that the stock did not trade at 16¾, or even at 16⅛, on the New York Stock Exchange but did trade at those prices elsewhere. Nonetheless, the brokerage firm should have bought the stock for you.

New York Stock Exchange newspaper stock tables are "composite" or "consolidated" reports of trades in NYSE-listed stocks on that exchange, five regional exchanges around the country and in the over-the-counter market. Many stocks are "dually listed" on the NYSE and regional exchanges.

Brokerage firms are required to use the Intermarket Trading System (ITS) electronic communications network to execute customers' orders in dually listed stocks at the best prices available in any of the ITS-linked markets.

When the stock you wanted to buy traded as low as 16¾, that price was reported on the up-to-the-minute nationwide Composit Quotation System. There's no good reason the brokerage couldn't have purchased 500 shares for you, at no more than 16⅞.

Q. About a month ago, I gave a discount brokerage firm an order to sell 20 shares of preferred stock at 96½ — $96.50 a share. Since then, according to newspaper stock tables, that stock has traded higher than 96½ on at least three occasions.

When I telephoned and asked why my shares have not been sold, I was told the brokerage wants to sell the stock just as much as I do; the stock is thinly traded; the price quotations I saw in the paper may have been wrong.

Can you explain this? Is 10 shares still a round lot in preferred stock?

A. Ten shares is a round lot "unit of trading" in some preferred stocks, including the one named in your letter. Those are thinly traded stocks in which there is not much activity. Most stocks, of course, trade in 100-share round lots.

There's little doubt that the brokerage wants to make the sale, so that it can earn a commission. That's its reason for being in business.

And, remembering the slogan of padded brassiere manufacturers (Nobody's perfect!) we must admit that newspapers occasionally make mistakes. However, inaccuracies in stock tables are rare. If that brokerage firm expects you to believe papers carried incorrect price quotations on the same stock at least three time, next you'll be asked to believe in the tooth fairy.

Q. You say there is no such thing as a "stop loss order" and that the correct term is "stop order." I have seen the phrase "stop loss order" printed many times and I recently heard a financial adviser on radio say "stop loss order."

What is your reaction to that?

A. Some people say "stop loss order" because they don't know any better. Others do it out habit.

Still others — especially some less-than-forthright members of the brokerage fraternity — use that phrase to give the mistaken impression that it guarantees the sale of stock at a predetermined price and protects the customer against any possible loss.

It does no such thing.

A stop limit order, on the other hand, sets a price but does not provide assurance that the stock will be sold or bought at the stop limit price. So there's no guarantee against loss with a stop limit order, either.

HUNT

Abramson said granting the financing would expedite the filing of Placid's reorganization plan. Simon said that Placid will file a preliminary reorganization plan by June 15.

The brothers claim they can reap $650 million in profits and salvage their beleaguered oil empire in the deep-sea drilling project if they win court approval to prevent creditors from raiding assets needed for the project.

But witnesses for the banks testified that the offshore blocks could yield much smaller profits or even losses. The banks said the Hunts and Placid should be forced to meet obligations to creditors.

Paul Wickes, lead attorney representing the creditor banks, argued that allowing the Green Canyon project to proceed would be creating "a super-class of creditors," because it would allow Placid to pay its creditors selectively.

Wickes said he did not know what the banks would do in the wake of Abramson's ruling.

The Hunts are suing the 23 banks for a total of $13.8 billion, claiming the lenders committed fraud in a conspiracy to wreck Placid Oil and conspired to create a world price fixing monopoly in the offshore drilling contract industry — claims which the banks have denied.

PENNZOIL

The companies are battling over Texaco's acquisition of the Getty Oil Co. — a deal done in 1984 just after Pennzoil had reached what it considered a binding agreement to acquire three-sevenths of Getty. In 1985 a Texas state court jury awarded Pennzoil damages of $10.53 billion plus interest after ruling that Texaco had improperly interfered in Pennzoil's agreement.

Two months ago, a Texas appeals court upheld the verdict but reduced the damage award by $2 billion. With interest, the award now totals $10.3 billion. That figure represents the maximum damages that might be exacted. But analysts point out that if Texaco emerges victorious in the courts, it conceivably might not have to pay a penny.

Lester and some other analysts estimated the value of Pennzoil's stock as an ongoing company — without any contribution from Texaco — at about $50 a share.

That valuation means that when Pennzoil was trading last week at $95, approximately $45 of the market price represented expectations of what the company might derive from Texaco.

But after Texaco's surprise bankruptcy filing, any resolution favoring Pennzoil appeared much more uncertain.

"You are shooting at a moving target when considering Pennzoil's stock," said Barry Sahgal, oil analyst for Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. "The value of Pennzoil is dependent on the outcome of the litigation with Texaco and the timing of the resolution of that event.

"As a base, I think there is a litigation premium of $15 to $20 a share in Pennzoil's stock price, thereby bringing its potential value to $65 to $70. But based on the information we have today, I would judge the stock to be overpriced."

Some analysts disagree with that opinion. Warren Shimmerlik of Merrill Lynch rates Pennzoil's shares as a "buy" over the next 12 months. "We still believe the risk-reward ratio is positive for Pennzoil," he told the firm's sales force Monday.

At Drexel Burnham Lambert, Edith Barschi takes a neutral stance. She noted that vast uncertainties — a possible settlement, the appeal process wending its way through the courts and the bankruptcy itself — make it impossible to judge Pennzoil's stock by using traditional analysts' approaches. "One is speculating on the outcome of the case by buying or holding the stock," she said.

Frederick P. Leuffer, senior oil analyst at Cyrus J. Lawrence Inc., reiterated on Monday his recommendation to sell Pennzoil. "The premium in Pennzoil's stock has been so large that if the company is defeated in the courts, the downside risk in the shares is intolerable."

American-made car sales off

New York Times News Service

DETROIT — Sales of new American-made cars fell 15 percent, to 193,139 units, in the first 10 days of April, the eight manufacturers reported Tuesday. Sales of light trucks rose 1.5 percent, to 97,687, partly offsetting the decline for automobiles.

Over all, light-vehicle sales totaled 290,826, a decline of 10.1 percent from the 323,545 sold a year ago. There were nine selling days in the 1987 period, as there were a year ago.

After seasonal adjustments, the annual sales rate for autos was 7 million, down from 8 million in the 1986 period and 7.5 million in the final selling period of March.

Analysts said the decline, after an apparent improvement at the end of March, seemed to signal that consumer demand for cars and light trucks was fundamentally weaker than the companies had forecast. The question, the analysts said, was whether the weakness was only temporary or a signal of a longer-term decline in demand for high-priced durable goods.

"I'm beginning to think we are looking at some fundamental weakness in the market," said Edward J. Sullivan of Chase Econometrics. "The effect of the new tax law was gone by March, and we should have seen stronger sales."

But Susan G. Jacobs of Merrill Lynch Economics said she expected the sales lull to be temporary. "I think the current sales pace reflects a hesitancy on the part of consumers as they adjust to the new tax law," she said. She added that she expected improved sales by late spring, with an annual sales rate of 7.5 million to 8 million cars a year.

STOCKS

Other casualties in the broad-based retreat included the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, which fell 6.46 points, to 279.16, and the New York Stock Exchange composite index, which lost 3.83 points, to close at 158.31.

"It was an absolute massacre at one point," said Gerald Walsh, a stock-index futures analyst at Prudential-Bache Securities. "There is a confluence of bearish technical and fundamental factors at work that has eradicated several technical support levels and chopped many people to pieces."

The decline in the last two days and the increasing volume portend to some analysts that a major correction might be under way; but to others, declining prices are a buying opportunity.

Bret Haire, managing director of the First Boston Corp. said that throughout the life of this rally, which began in August of 1982, every correction has proved to be a good time to buy.

"People began to buy on weakeness again this morning, after yesterday's decline," Haire said. "But when there was no follow-through and the market didn't go up, they did the only thing that they could do and that was to sell again."

UNOCAL

Unocal's suit comes just less than a week after Freeman, Wigton and Tabor each were indicted on four felony counts related to illegal stock trading stemming from the Unocal case. All denied wrongdoing.

If convicted of all counts, the three face maximum penalties of 20 years in prison and fines of $250,000, or twice any illegal profit — whichever is greater.

Siegel has been linked to one of Wall Street's leading speculators, Ivan F. Boesky, who agreed last November to plead guilty to an unspecified criminal charges and pay $100 million in penalties for illegally trading stock using information not available to the public.

Siegel pleaded guilty Feb. 13 to felony counts of illegal stock trading and tax evasion.

Customers paying price for bad checks

By BILL MENEZES
Associated Press Business Writer

NEW YORK — Bank customers long have paid the price for writing bad checks, and even as a battle to cut that price is waged on several fronts the cost apparently keeps rising.

Customers pay through fees banks charge for checks written without enough money in the accounts to cover them.

While the fees vary widely, an April 1 survey of 110 institutions nationwide by the Bank Rate Monitor newsletter indicated fees averaged $15 for a bounced check, up $2 from 1984.

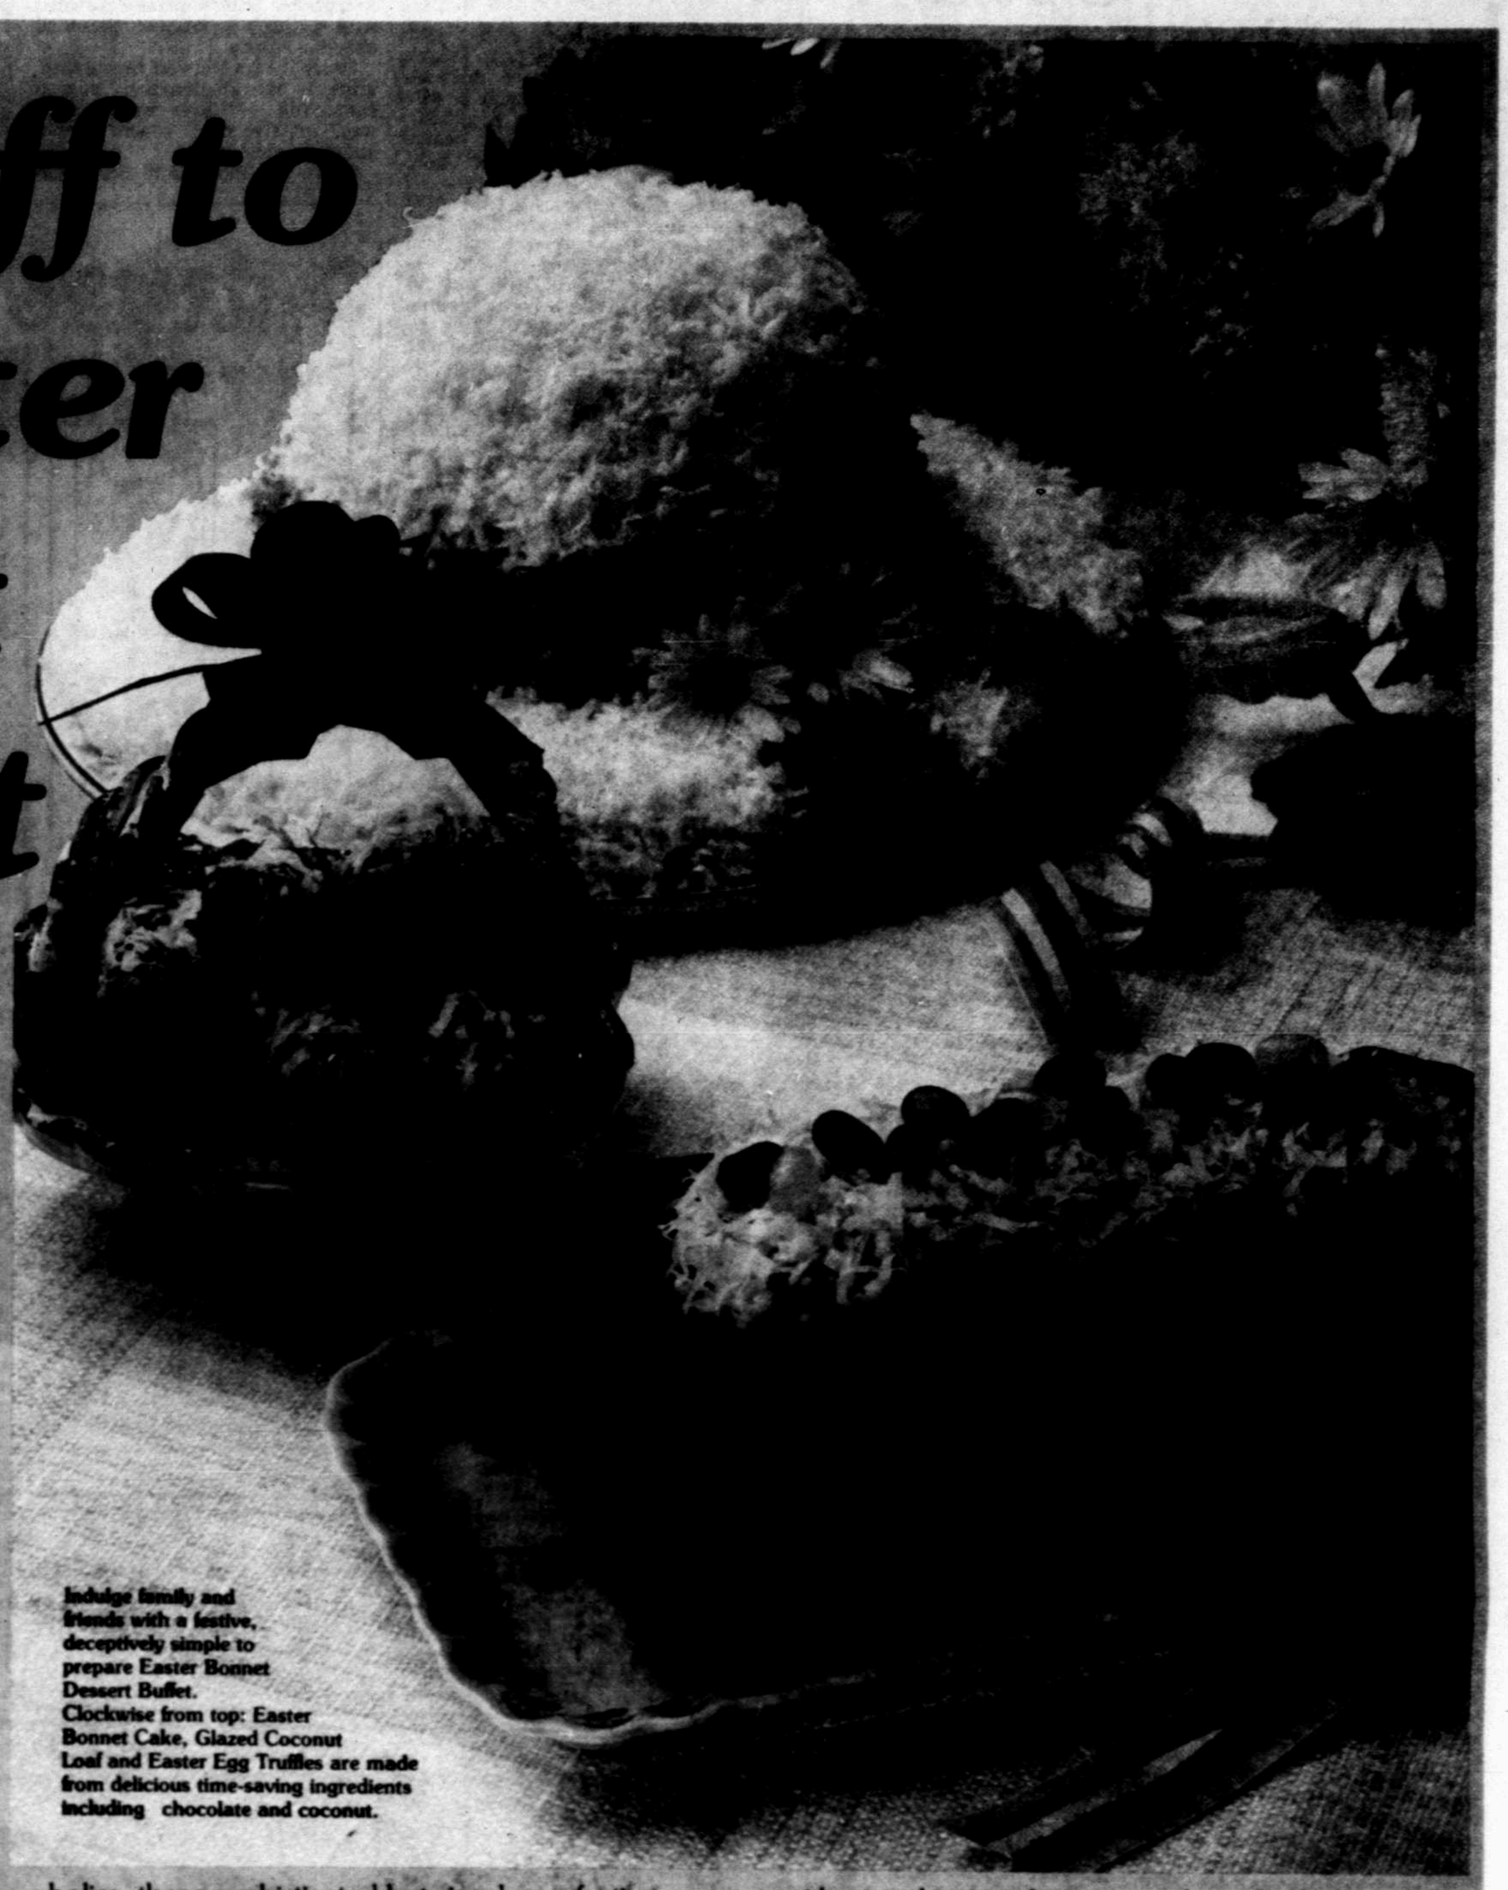

The highest fees were in Philadelphia. Institutions surveyed in that city charged an average of $25 per check, led by Mellon Bank (East) and Pennsylvania Society For Savings at $30, the survey indicated.

Other average bounced-check fees by city included Boston, $13.50; Chicago, $11.50; Dallas, $16.50; Denver, $16; Detroit, $14.50; Houston, $18; Los Angeles, $10; San Francisco, $10; and Washington, $19.50.

The lowest fees were in New York, where state law limits state-chartered institutions from charging more than $7 a check. The New York City average was $8.50, lowest among the cities surveyed.

Some of the institutions set daily limits on fees that could be imposed, ranging from $30 at San Francisco's Bank of America and Wells

Hats Off to an Easter Bonnet Dessert Buffet!

Indulge family and friends with a festive, deceptively simple to prepare Easter Bonnet Dessert Buffet. Clockwise from top: Easter Bonnet Cake, Glazed Coconut Loaf and Easter Egg Truffles are made from delicious time-saving ingredients including chocolate and coconut.

This spring, make Easter a bountiful affair.

Cakes, candies and other desserts take on a special importance at Easter time. It's as if we've been granted permission to pamper ourselves, totally indulging in the "rites of spring."

Take the initiative this year and show off your culinary talents to family and guests with a new concept in Easter entertaining: an Easter Bonnet Buffet. Created from simple, time-saving ingredients, such as cake and pudding mixes and Baker's coconut and chocolate, this glamorous display of desserts outshines even memorable foods from holidays past.

Fun and festive for kids and grown-ups alike, the dessert buffet is an impressive way to show your guests where your real talents lie as a chef.

A song could be written for the Easter Bonnet Cake. It's lovely, delicious and lemony with showers of fresh-tasting flaked coconut descending on a pretty, wide-brimmed cake "hat" that is incredibly easy to make.

Using an ordinary glass bowl and a pizza pan for the shape, you can bake this Easter Bonnet Cake in a snap with such work-saving ingredients as instant pudding and pie filling, whipped topping and yellow cake mix. The result is a light and scrumptious hat to show off in the Fifth Avenue parade of Easter foods!

Another star performance in the dessert buffet is given by Easter Egg Truffles. Designed especially for chocoholics, these sophisticated but simple confections are truly heavenly made with semi-sweet chocolate and rum flavor. Cover the truffles with flaked coconut, chopped nuts or other crunchy coatings.

Glazed Coconut Loaf is another temptation to try. With a hint of orange rind and toasted coconut flakes, this cake says "showstopper."

The most playful desserts in the Easter collection are the Fruit 'n Cream Dessert Mold and Coconut Crust Chocolate Pie. The first blends cream cheese with gelatin for a creamy dessert, highlighted with strawberries, banana and crushed pineapple. The pie features an extraordinary but easy crust of ground pecans and flaked coconut with a delectable sweet chocolate filling.

During this Easter celebration, serve your guests their favorite sweet tooth flavors of chocolate, lemon and heavenly flaked coconut from your own kitchen. Above all, give your Easter desserts your own special touches, the pretty garnishes that add that festive holiday elegance.

Enjoy a bountiful Easter this holiday!

EASTER BONNET CAKE

- 1 package (2-layer) yellow cake mix
- 1-1/2 cups cold milk
- 1 package (4-serving size) lemon flavor instant pudding and pie filling
- 3-1/2 cups (8 oz.) non-dairy whipped topping, thawed
- 2-2/3 cups (about) Angel Flake coconut
- 1 or 2 drops red food coloring

Prepare cake mix as directed on package. Pour 3-1/2 cups of the batter into greased and floured 1-1/2-quart metal or ovenproof glass bowl; pour remaining batter into greased and floured 12 x 3/4-inch pizza pan. Bake at 350° for 15 minutes for the pan and 50 minutes for the bowl, or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cool cakes 10 minutes; then remove from pan and bowl and finish cooling on racks.

If bottom of bowl-shaped cake is very rounded, cut off a slice to make flat. Split bowl-shaped cake crosswise into 3 layers.

Pour cold milk into small mixer bowl. Add pudding mix. Beat at lowest speed of electric mixer until well blended, 1 to 2 minutes.

Place 12-inch cake layer on large plate or tray. Spread layer with 1-1/2 cups of the whipped topping. Center bottom layer of bowl-shaped cake on frosted layer; spread with two-thirds of the pudding. Add the second layer; spread with remaining pudding. Add top layer, forming the crown.

Spread remaining whipped topping over crown. Mix red food coloring and 1 teaspoon water in bowl. Add 3/4 cup of the coconut and toss with fork until evenly tinted. Place around bottom edge of crown to resemble hat band and bow. Sprinkle remaining coconut over rest of cake. Garnish with fresh flowers, if desired.

Note: If pizza pan is not available, use greased and floured 9-inch layer pan, dividing batter between pan and bowl. Bake in pan for 25 minutes; bake in bowl as directed.

COCONUT CRUST CHOCOLATE PIE

- 1 package (6-serving size) chocolate flavor pudding and pie filling
- 1 package (4 oz.) German's sweet chocolate, broken in pieces
- 2-1/2 cups milk
- Quick Coconut-Pecan Crust
- 1 cup thawed whipped topping

Combine pie filling mix, chocolate and milk in saucepan. Cook and stir over medium heat until mixture comes to a full rolling boil. Remove from heat; beat to blend, if necessary. Cool 5 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Pour pudding mixture into crust; cover surface with plastic wrap. Chill at least 4 hours.

Before serving, remove plastic wrap and garnish pie with whipped topping. Garnish with toasted coconut and pecan halves, if desired.

Microwave Directions.

Gradually stir milk into pudding mix in 2-1/2-quart microwave-safe bowl. Add chocolate. Place in microwave oven and cook at HIGH 4 minutes. Stir well and cook 2 minutes longer; then stir again and cook 2 minutes, or until mixture comes to boil. Remove from oven. Cool 5 minutes, stirring occasionally; pour into pie shell.

Quick Coconut-Pecan Crust Combine 1/3 cup melted butter or margarine, 2 cups Angel Flake coconut and 1 cup ground pecans. Press evenly into ungreased 9-inch pie plate. Bake at 350° for 20 minutes, or until golden brown. Cool.

GLAZED COCONUT LOAF

- 1-1/3 cups (about) Angel Flake coconut
- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 2-1/4 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/3 cup butter or margarine
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 2 eggs
- 3/4 cup milk
- 1 tablespoon grated orange rind
- 4 squares semi-sweet chocolate
- 1/4 cup butter or margarine
- 1 tablespoon light corn syrup

Spread coconut thinly in shallow baking pan. Toast at 350° for 7 to 12 minutes, stirring frequently until lightly browned; set aside.

Mix flour, baking powder and salt.

Beat butter with sugar until light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each. Add flour mixture alternately with milk, beating after each addition until smooth. Stir in toasted coconut and orange rind.

Spoon batter into a greased 9 x 5-inch loaf pan. Bake at 350° for 50 to 55 minutes or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean.

Cool in pan for 10 minutes. Remove from pan and cool on rack.

For glaze, heat chocolate, butter and corn syrup in saucepan over very low heat, stirring constantly until melted and smooth. Chill until glaze thickens slightly, about 20 minutes. Pour glaze over cake and spread evenly. Garnish with coconut and jelly beans, if desired.

EASTER EGG TRUFFLES

- 3 squares semi-sweet chocolate
- 5 tablespoons unsalted butter
- 1 egg yolk
- 2/3 cup sifted confectioners sugar
- 1 teaspoon rum
- Toasted Angel Flake coconut or finely chopped nuts

*Or use 1/4 teaspoon rum extract.

Melt chocolate in saucepan over very low heat, stirring constantly; cool. (Or, to microwave, place chocolate in microwave-safe bowl; heat at HIGH until chocolate is almost melted, 1-1/2 to 2 minutes, stirring once. Stir until completely melted. Cool.)

Cream butter with egg yolk. Gradually add sugar, blending well. Stir in chocolate and rum. Chill until firm enough to handle. Shape into 1-inch ovals to resemble eggs. Roll in coconut or chopped nuts; chill. Store in refrigerator. Makes about 15 candies.

FRUIT 'N CREAM DESSERT MOLD

- 1 pint strawberries
- 1 banana, sliced
- 1 can (8 oz.) crushed pineapple in juice
- 2 packages (4-serving size) or 1 package (8-serving size) lemon flavor gelatin
- 2 cups boiling water
- 2 packages (3 oz. each) cream cheese, softened
- Mint leaves

Hull 4 of the strawberries; thinly slice each without cutting through stem end. Slightly fan each berry. Arrange fanned berries and sliced banana in bottom of 6-cup mold.

Drain pineapple, reserving juice. Add water to juice to make 1 cup. Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add measured liquid. Pour 1/2 cup of the gelatin over berries and bananas in mold; chill until set but not firm.

Measure 1-3/4 cups gelatin into a bowl. Chill until thickened.

Blend remaining gelatin slowly into cream cheese, beating until smooth; set aside.

Add crushed pineapple to thickened gelatin; spoon into mold. Chill until set but not firm. Top with cream cheese mixture. Chill until firm, about 3 hours. Unmold. Garnish with remaining strawberries and mint leaves. Makes 10 servings.

Re-grading USDA beef expensive for consumers

By MERLE ELLIS

I think they are trying to do it to us again! It's a lot more subtle this time and it really doesn't have anything to do with beef quality. But I have a gut-level feeling that it's going to cost us.

It was announced in the Federal Register on March 4 that the Agricultural Marketing Service has filed a petition to change the name of the USDA "Good" grade of beef to USDA "Select." Why? That's a good question. After all, what's in a name? Let's examine the history of the USDA grading system. Perhaps we can find a clue there.

The first tentative standards for beef grades were formulated in 1916 and were established as the official grades in 1926. Since then, the official grades have been revised or amended at least 10 times, and in most of those changes, the requirements were in some way lowered. The most sweeping change came in 1950 when the entire grade "Choice" was declared USDA "Prime" and the "Good" grade was elevated to USDA "Choice." Since then, there have been at least five further changes, each time in some way lowering the requirements for a beef carcass to be stamped with a given official grade.

The grading system has become virtually meaningless to beef consumers. Many, if not most, of the major supermarket chains no longer handle graded beef, but, rather, choose beef that is ungraded, beef that is even lower in quality than the already many times lowered "Choice" grade. It's not graded USDA "Good" which is the grade lower than "Choice." Rather, it is left ungraded and labeled by the supermarket chain with whatever designation they choose to use; Safeway's "Quality Beef," Lucky's "5-Star," Peter's "Premium, "Sam's "Select," whatever.

Now they want to change the name of the USDA "Good" grade to USDA "Select." Why?

They can't, without causing considerable negative consumer reaction, again reduce the grading standards. Consumers have had about all of that that they are going to take. An effort to lower the standards again in 1983 met with so much negative reaction that the attempt was aborted. If they can't lower the grades to get more of the lower quality beef being raised today to qualify for "Choice" grade, then why not change the name of the lower "Good" grade to something new; something that can be promoted as something special?

Much of today's lower beef is lean and consumers say they want lean beef. A new name will make today's leaner, lower quality beef "more attractive" to consumers. It can be promoted as better, more healthful. Maybe with a new "Select" name and a little promotion, today's USDA "Good" grade beef could even be sold for more money! Ah, ha! I think we've found the bottom line.

There's plenty of good lean beef on the market. It may not bear the USDA "Good" purple ink but it's available in almost every supermarket in the country. Changing its name to USDA "Select" is bound to cost you more. USDA graders are paid by the packer and that cost is passed on to you. Promoting the new grade will cost money and you'll end up paying for that. Every piece of literature ever published about the USDA Beef Grading System will be obsolete. Who knows how many bodies in Washington it will take to correct the confusion that will cause and how much that will cost. But you can be sure who'll pay the bill.

If you'd like to know more about the issue, check the March 4 Federal Register Volume 52, issue No. 42, page 6577. It's probably in your library. Then if you feel as I do that this "name change" is a lot of unnecessary, potentially costly, nonsense, it's not too late to do something about it. Send your comments to: Standardization and Review Branch, Livestock and Seed Division, Agricultural Marketing Service, 2649 South Building, U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250. Comments on the proposal must be received no later than May 3, 1987.

Natchitoches meat pies to go national

COUSHATTA, La. (AP) — Another Cajun culinary treasure is about to escape the boundaries of Louisiana. It's only a matter of time before people all over the country could be eating Natchitoches Meat Pies.

Capitalizing on the nationwide clamor for things Cajun, particularly food, Len McCain of Natchitoches is gearing up production.

The Natchitoches Meat Pie, indigenous to a small French region in central Louisiana, is a crimped pastry shell filled with meat sauce and seasonings.

While not as well-known as blackened redfish or jambalaya, the half-moon shaped fried pie has been a favorite in this area for years and has a small following in Texas and Mississippi where McCain sells frozen pies.

He makes them in five flavors: original (beef and pork), crawfish, shrimp, crabmeat and taco.

Each is a spicy delicacy, but freezer sales have been less impressive to McCain than the long lines at country fairs and festivals, where people queue up for the hot, freshly cooked pies.

Now, with a new, award-winning package emblazoned with the words "Louisiana Cajun," McCain found the frozen item attracting attention at a recent Boston food show.

"The acceptance was great. Our packaging didn't take second to anybody," he said. Since then, he has been approached by companies in several states that want to distribute the pies.

"Louisiana Cajun catches the eye. It's the thing now," said McCain.

McCain bought the recipe when he bought the company, the Natchitoches Meat Pies Co. That was 4½ years ago, and at the time the traditional beef and pork was all there was.

McCain, whose family had been in the grocery and restaurant businesses, developed the taco recipe and his mother came up with the seafood recipes.

In the plant in Coushatta, a small town about 45 minutes northwest of Natchitoches, 30 employees each day chop onions, pimentos, celery and bell peppers; flake meat or seafood; measure ingredients; and mix dough.

On an average day, about 600 cases containing 48 pies each are shipped out, McCain said. They go to restaurants and stores in Louisiana and parts of Mississippi and Texas.

But McCain is ready to go national and expects production to pick up with potential major contracts.

"My philosophy is to go with what you've got and grow a little at a time. I don't want to do too much too soon because that could mean cash flow problems," McCain said.

Friends have already asked McCain to expand his line to include barbecue, burrito and pizza flavors. But he prefers "to see how these five do" before diversifying.

Bittersweet 'Cincinnati chili' served over spaghetti

Associated Press

It's as much a ritual as gumbo in New Orleans and steak sandwiches in Philadelphia: a bittersweet chili sauce served over spaghetti on an oval platter (not a bowl) and crowned with a fluffy mound of shredded cheddar cheese.

Order it, says Midwest Living magazine, in the Cincinnatians' special shorthand — "three way," "four way," or "five way" — with cheese, onions, and-or beans.

There are more Gold Star than Skyline chili parlors, and it was Empress chili makers that first introduced the concoction back during the Depression. But the general opinion is that Skyline, founded by Greek immigrant Nicholas Lambrinides in 1949, is the best.

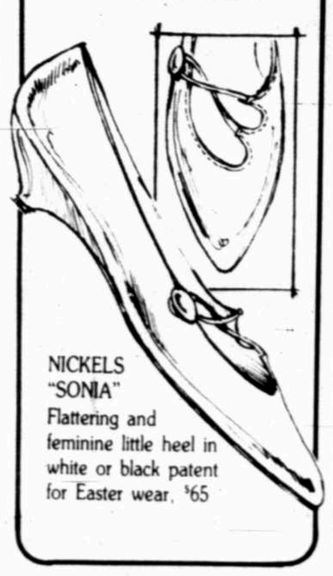

Lambrinides first dished up his chili in the Price Hill neighborhood, luring his clientele with free samples. A view of downtown from the first parlor provided the trade name.

Years later, Lambrinides' sons came up with the idea of creating an island in the middle of their restaurants, where cooks assemble the chili-spaghetti and Coney Island hog dogs (with chili and optional cheese) in seconds and before the customers' eyes.

Regulars at the Skyline say they can tell the difference between that parlor's chili and other Cincinnati chilis, though no one can spell out exactly what it is. The Lambrinides brothers aren't talking. They keep their recipe in a double-locked vault for which there are just five keys — one for each brother. Only the Lambrinides can mix the sauce.

WHAT'S COOKING

Volunteer brings 'life' to stories

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the seventh article in a series of What's Cooking interviews with Volunteers in Public Schools.

By MYRA LEE SALCEDO
Lifestyle Writer

Kathy Wilson Scott Rathburn/Reporter-Telegram

Kathy Wilson's eyes sparkled when she spoke about telling kindergarteners a story complete with puppets, visuals and a sing-along.

"We are always sure to have some type of activity to involve the kids, to get the wiggles out," she said.

Ms. Wilson, a member of Volunteer in Public Schools (VIPS), along with VIP partner, Brenda Faught, designed packets of 20-30 minute programs for other volunteers to present to children from kindergarten through sixth grade ... "although we did present a Sesquicentennial program for older children once, seventh and eighth graders at Goddard," she said.

The story telling packets contain stories that "can be brought to life" with poems, riddles, songs, puppets, visuals and posters.

"I've always told stories to kids. I've found that it takes a lot of time and preparation, but familiarity makes it fun," Ms. Wilson said.

Ms. Wilson said she has been involved in VIPS for total of eleven years in three other school districts, and five-and-one-half years in the Midland Independent School District.

"I became involved in the schools as soon as I got here," she said, "and I have to say that Midland has been by far, the best district I have worked in."

Although Ms. Wilson has a son, Kyle who is a junior at Lee High School, and a daughter, Alycia who is in the sixth grade at Travis, she presents programs for school children of all ages.

The vibrant VIPS volunteer said, "There is another side to just reading stories from a book. It's fun to get up in front of people, tell stories and ad lib."

Ms. Wilson also volunteers some of her time at Lee High School helping to conduct testing in the classroom and she helps to prepare report cards. She also volunteers time to do office work at Santa Rita elementary besides being involved in music and PTA programs.

"I also enjoy spending time with the 180 super band students at Lee High School," Ms. Wilson said. "People who aren't involved with high school students are really missing out."

The VIPS volunteer also is active at First United Methodist Church. She participates in several choirs, is a past Sunday School teacher, and is president of United Methodist Women.

Ms. Wilson said she intends to stay active as a VIPS volunteer. "I hope to develop longer stories. I created a story on the Folklore of the Hill Country for older children. It was very successful and I would like to do more of the same," she said.

Even with all of her activities, Ms. Wilson still finds time to prepare some of her family's favorite meals, including Mexican and Chinese dishes. "My children are no strangers to the kitchen. They love to cook," Ms. Wilson said.

Some of Ms. Wilson's family's favorite recipes follow.

CHEESY CHICKEN TORTILLA STACK

½ cup vegetable oil
6 (8-inch) flour tortillas
8 ounce sour cream
½ teaspoon seasoned salt
½ teaspoon hot sauce
2½ cups cooked chicken, shredded
2½ cups (10-ounces) shredded Monterrey Jack cheese
1¼ cups (5-ounces) shredded cheddar cheese
½ cup plus 2 tablespoons minced green onion (optional)
1½ tablespoons margarine, (melted)
½ cups shredded lettuce (optional)
¼ cup chopped tomato (optional)

Heat oil in ten inch skillet. Fry tortillas, one at a time, in hot oil 3-5 seconds on each side. Drain, set aside.

Combine sour cream, salt and hot sauce. Place one tortilla on a lightly greased baking sheet. Spread one tablespoon sour cream mixture over tortilla. Sprinkle with ½ cup chicken, ½ cup Monterrey Jack cheese, ¼ cup cheddar cheese, and two tablespoons green onions. Place another tortilla on top and repeat layering with remaining tortillas. Top with last tortilla. Reserve remaining sour cream mixture. Brush top tortilla and sides with melted margarine.

Cover with foil and bake at 400 degrees for 30-40 minutes. Immediately remove foil; place tortilla stack on serving plate. Spread remaining sour cream mixture on top of tortilla stack; sprinkle with lettuce and tomato. Cut into wedges and serve. Yield: 4 servings.

Tortilla stacks can be made ahead and baked.

NOTE: Ms. Wilson recommends the following recipes for children.

PEANUT BUTTER PLAY DOUGH

1 cup peanut butter
1 cup powdered milk
½ cup honey
½ cup powdered sugar

Mix together all ingredients. Children can play with dough and then eat it. Keep refrigerated.

INDIVIDUAL PUDDING

2 tablespoons instant pudding
½ cup milk

Stir until mixed well. Children will enjoy mixing the pudding themselves. Pudding can be served in individual cups or glasses.

CORRECTION: The Quick Cherry Cobbler recipe by Geriann Green published in last week's What's Cooking column contained a measurement error. The recipe should have read ¼ teaspoon salt.

Expert suggests trading calories instead of skipping meals

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — One way to lose weight without feeling that you are cheating yourself is to trade calories from one meal to the next, says a food industry expert.

"Try eating a light meal at lunch, such as a salad, when you know you'll be going out to dinner," says Donna Higgins, director of Del Monte Kitchens.

"That way you can enjoy yourself without gaining weight," he said.

Higgins says weight gain is "a matter of calories consumed vs. calories burned."

The food industry expert said, "Reducing the amount you eat without skipping meals will do more to take weight off than a crash diet, and it is a technique that can be used anytime."

Microwave recipes help make Easter 'egg-citing'

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

No food is more closely associated with Easter than the egg. Like the tree at Christmas and the turkey at Thanksgiving, Easter just wouldn't be the same without eggs.

Why eggs? Because they symbolize new life.

Long before the Christian era, Egyptians, Greeks and Romans exchanged eggs during their annual spring festivals.

The egg was also an important symbol on the Passover tables of ancient Hebrews.

For hundreds of years now, colored and decorated eggs have been exchanged on Easter Sunday. This custom is thought to have been introduced into Europe by knights returning from the Crusades.

According to an old Polish legend, the Virgin Mary boiled several eggs and dyed them red, green and yellow to amuse the infant Jesus.

Polish Easter eggs are still dyed with these colors, and are thought to symbolize Christ's resurrection.

Red is the favored color for Easter eggs in many parts of Europe, since this color recalls the blood of Christ.

The Chinese, too, exchanged red-tinted eggs to celebrate the coming of spring — long before Christ's birth — the color, like the egg, being an emblem of life.

During the 18th century, egg races were popular Easter events in certain parts of France.

Egg hunts and egg-rolling contests are still popular in Europe and the United States, the most famous being hosted by the first family and held on the lawn of the White House.

What more appropriate dish could you serve on Easter Sunday than one prepared with eggs? Besides being the symbol of Christ's rebirth and the coming of spring, eggs provide the highest-quality protein known to man, and are second only to mother's milk in the essential amino acids.

Following are a few microwave recipes to help you celebrate a happy, egg-citing Easter:

EASTER SUNDAY BREAKFAST BAKE

1 (12-ounce) package seasoned bulk pork sausage
¼ cup chopped onion
¼ cup chopped green pepper
½ cup sliced fresh mushrooms
8 eggs
½ cup milk
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon each pepper and paprika
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese
1 cup shredded Swiss cheese
Fresh parsley sprigs

Crumble sausage into 10-inch microwave browning skillet (do not preheat).

Add onion and green pepper. Cover and microwave on HIGH setting 3 to 6 minutes, stirring every 2 minutes, until meat is no longer pink.

Drain off fat, then break up meat with back of spoon and spread evenly over bottom of skillet. Top with even layer of sliced mushrooms. Set aside.

In 2-quart glass container combine eggs, milk, salt, pepper and paprika. Beat well. Microwave, uncovered, at MEDIUM setting 5 to 8 minutes, stirring every 2 minutes, until eggs are just set and still very moist. Stir in shredded cheeses and pour over sausage.

Microwave, covered, at MEDIUM setting 10 to 12 minutes, rotating dish one-quarter turn every 4 minutes, until center is set. Let stand, covered, 5 minutes before serving. Garnish with fresh parsley sprigs.

MICROWAVE HUEVOS RANCHEROS

¼ cup vegetable oil
¼ cup diced onion
¼ cup diced green pepper
1 (28-ounce) can whole tomatoes, drained
1 (3-ounce) can diced mild green chilies, drained
¼ teaspoon pepper
6 eggs
1 cup shredded mild cheddar cheese
6 warmed corn tortillas
Mexican-style salsa (optional)

Combine oil, onion, and green pepper in 13x9x2-inch glass baking dish. Microwave 5 to 7 minutes, stirring every 2 minutes, until onion is translucent and green pepper is just tender.

Add drained tomatoes, mashing up with fork. Stir in green chilies and pepper. Cover and microwave 5 minutes, stirring after 3 minutes.

Break eggs over tomato mixture along edge of dish. With toothpick, pierce each egg yolk twice and each white 3 times.

Cover dish with plastic wrap and microwave 4 to 7 minutes, or until eggs are done to taste. Sprinkle with cheese, replace cover, and let stand 5 minutes.

Serve over warmed corn tortillas and top with a spoonful of Mexican-style salsa, if desired.

MUSHROOM EGGS DIVAN

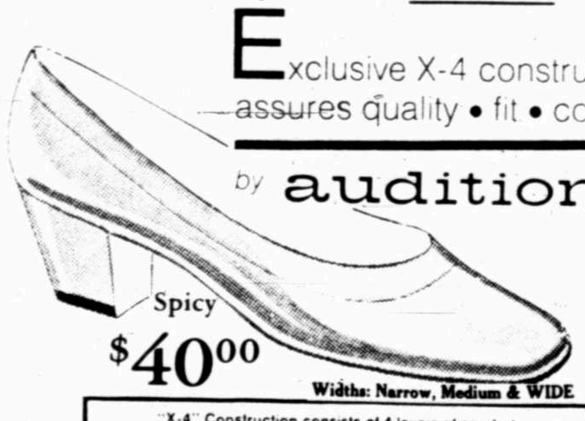

6 eggs, lightly beaten
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
¼ cup sliced green onion
1 (10¾-ounce) can condensed cream of mushroom soup
1 cup broccoli flowerets, broken into small pieces
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon onion powder
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
½ cup shredded Monterey Jack or Swiss cheese

Combine all ingredients except pimiento and cheese in 1½-quart glass casserole. Cover and microwave 6 to 8 minutes, stirring every 3 minutes, until set but still moist.

Stir in pimiento and top with shredded cheese. Let stand, covered, 3 minutes before serving over toast points.

Passover recipes vegetarian

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

Passover began this year on April 14. Perhaps the most beloved of all Jewish holidays, Passover, "The Festival of Liberation," commemorates the exodus of the enslaved Jews out of Egypt and into a newfound freedom.

Families who celebrate Passover begin with a thorough housecleaning and all chametz (leavened bread) is removed from the home.

Throughout Passover only unleavened bread, or matzah, may be eaten. Why unleavened bread? Because when the Jews fled Egypt, their departure was so hasty that there wasn't time to let the bread dough rise. The use of unleavened bread symbolizes this event.

Some Jews also consider beans, rice, corn and cereal as chametz and avoid these foods during Passover.

If you have any questions about which foods are kosher for Passover, please consult your rabbi.

Passover lasts for eight days, but only the first two and last two days are considered full holidays (the days in between are half-holidays).

The first two evenings are home holidays known as the seder, meaning "order." During the seder, Jews recount the epic flight from slavery, ending with prayers, benedictions, and psalms of thanksgiving.

Traditional songs are sung and symbolic foods placed on the seder table, with special dishes and cooking utensils used only during Passover. In addition, there is an obligation to include the lonely or unfortunate on the guest list during the seder.

Jewish Vegetarians of North America is a non-profit group that promotes the practice of vegetarianism in the Jewish tradition, and seeks to explore the relationship between Judaism, dietary laws and vegetarianism.

For them, a vegetarian seder "exemplifies the intrinsic values of Judaism: compassion for animals, concern about world hunger and ecology, and a close family atmosphere with hospitality to neighbors and friends."

Those interested in joining may write to Jewish Vegetarians, P.O. Box 1463, Baltimore, Md. 21203. Telephone: (301) 752-VEGV.

Today's recipes are from "Something Different for Passover" by Zell J. Schulman, Triad Publishing Co., 1986.

MACARONI AND CHEESE, PASSOVER STYLE

3 large eggs
3½ cups matzah farfel (or six matzahs, broken up)
½ pound cheddar cheese
1 cup milk or half-and-half
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon white pepper
1 pint sour cream
1 stick (½ cup) butter, cut into 16 pieces

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease a 2-quart casserole with butter.

Beat two eggs well with wire whisk and pour over farfel. Cut up cheese into small pieces.

Beat remaining egg with a wire whisk and stir in milk, salt and pepper.

Layer in casserole as follows: matzah farfel, half the cheese, half the sour cream (in dabs), half the butter. Distribute each layer evenly. Pour milk mixture over top. Cover and bake for 30 minutes. Remove cover and bake 10 to 15 minutes to brown. Cut into squares.

Serves 6 to 8.

NOTE: For a slimmer version, use skim milk and cut down on butter.

ISRAELI SALAD

1 carrot
3 radishes
1 small red onion
1 small green pepper
1 cucumber, peeled and seeded
3 medium tomatoes, seeded
2 green onions
1 tablespoon parsley
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Pinch of salt
Pepper to taste

Chop carrot, radishes, onion, green pepper and cucumber with sharp knife (do not mince). Dice tomatoes. Chop green onion and parsley quite fine. Combine in serving bowl and refrigerate several hours.

Thirty minutes before serving, make dressing by mixing together oil, lemon juice, salt and pepper. Pour over vegetables and let marinate until ready to serve.

Serves 4.

DRIED FRUIT DELIGHTS

1 cup pitted dates
1 cup pitted prunes
1 cup raisins
1 cup dried figs
2 tablespoons brandy
1 tablespoon ground ginger
1 cup walnuts
1 cup finely ground nuts

Soak dried fruits in boiling water to cover, for approximately 10 minutes. Drain and pat dry.

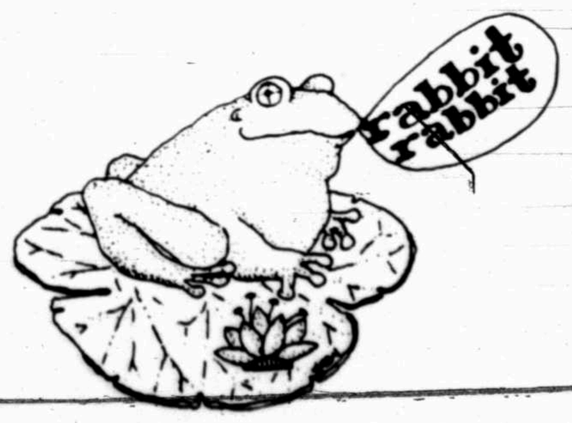

In container of food processor combine dates, prunes, raisins, figs, brandy and ginger. Pulse several times. Add walnuts and process until fruits and nuts are chopped very fine. Scrape sides of container as necessary.

Form into balls the size of a large olive. Place on wire rack to dry slightly. Roll in ground nuts and store in tightly covered container.

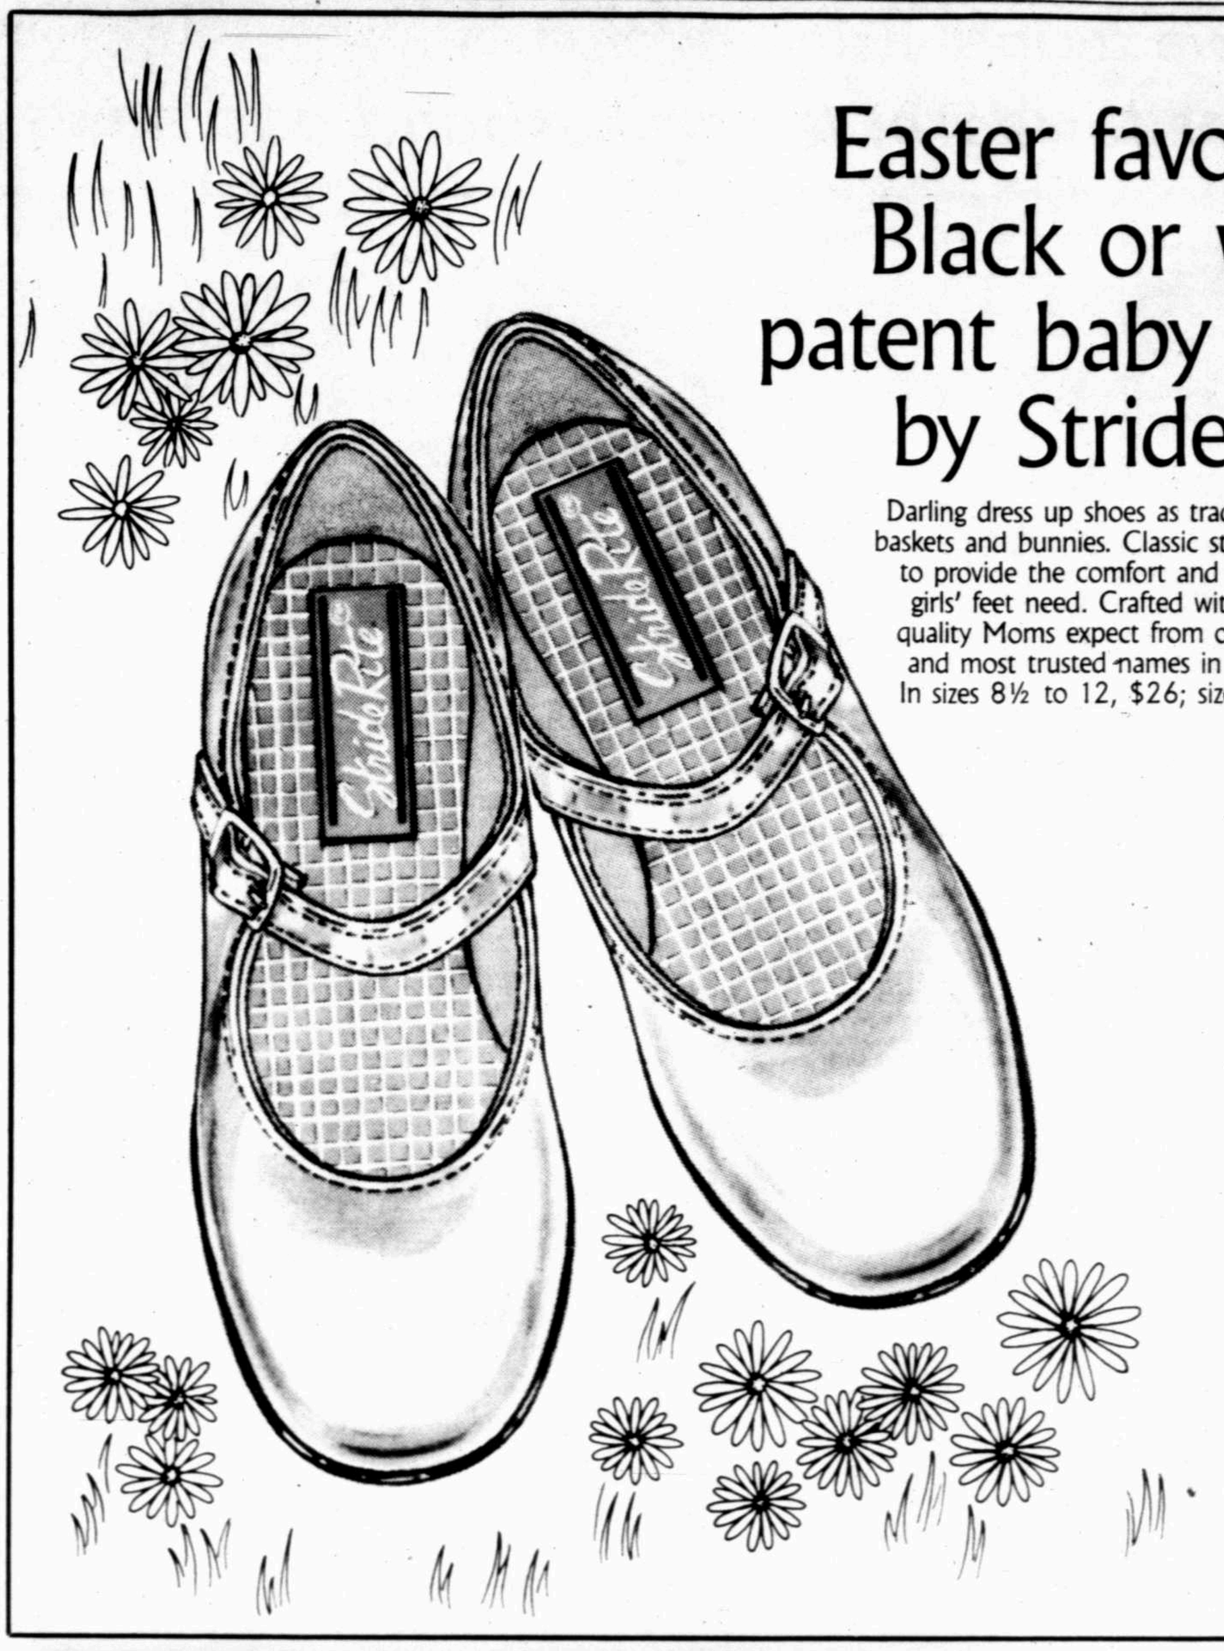

Makes 5 to 6 dozen.

DEAR ABBY

Wife lives to regret telling husband bad news

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Maybe if I write this letter to you it will be easier to live with myself.

The doctor told me that my husband had only one year to live, and if I didn't tell him, he would!

We had been a devoted married couple for 55 years, and I couldn't bear the thought of his hearing such terrible news from a doctor, so the task was mine.

It took me three months to get up the courage to tell him, and when I finally did, we both cried and clung to each other.

Abby, it was so sad to see him living without hope. Although he lived six months longer than the doctor predicted, I feel certain that if I hadn't told him such discouraging news, he'd still be alive, living with faith and hope.

He died five years ago today, and I still feel guilty for telling him. Abby, only the Lord knows how much time we have left. How I wish I had never told him. — E.M., HOLIDAY, FLA.

DEAR E.M.: Please don't feel guilty. Most doctors believe terminally ill patients should be told that they are seriously ill, and possibly terminal, so that they can get their affairs in order.

But I agree with you, when all hope for recovery is gone, the patient loses the will to live, which could contribute greatly to an earlier demise.

You are obviously still grieving and tormented by undeserved guilt. Please contact a senior citizens center near you. Most offer grief therapy and support groups. Good luck and God bless.

DEAR ABBY: My hobby is amateur photography. I enjoy enlarging and framing my pictures artistically and giving them as gifts.

The subjects are generally in good taste — landscapes, scenic shots, historical sites and interesting city scenes.

I was recently invited to a friend's wedding in New York, so I framed several skyline pictures I had taken of Manhattan and gave them to the couple as a wedding gift.

They will be living in Florida, so I thought this would be an appropriate gift since they were married in Manhattan. My girlfriend thought my gift was tacky. She says art is a very personal thing, and this couple may feel obligated to display my pictures, even if they don't like them. I'd like your opinion. — W.E.H., CLEARWATER, FLA.

DEAR W.E.H.: Was the gift you gave the New York couple a gift from you alone, or was it a gift from you and your girlfriend?

If it was from both of you, then she could have given something less personal if she objected to your selection. For her to have called your gift "tacky" was rather tacky of her — and unkind as well.

I think a Manhattan scene, personally photographed and artistically framed by you, was most appropriate since they were married in Manhattan.

(For Abby's booklet, "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Eggs stuffed with avocado

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Start crackin' and make an elegant brunch or supper dish from the Easter bunny's gifts. After the egg hunt, get boiled eggs into the refrigerator within 10 hours. You can store the eggs there for up to 7 days. They'll be fresh for this recipe and more.

AVOCADO-STUFFED EGGS
4 hard-cooked eggs
1 avocado
Lemon juice
2 teaspoons prepared horseradish mustard
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon finely chopped onion
2 tablespoons margarine or butter
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon instant chicken bouillon granules
1 teaspoon dried parsley flakes
½ cup milk
½ cup water
¼ cup chopped fully cooked ham

Peel eggs. Halve lengthwise; remove yolks and set whites aside. Halve avocado lengthwise; rub lemon juice over cut edges. Peel and mash 1 avocado half. Wrap and store remaining half for another use. Combine mashed avocado with egg yolks, mustard, lemon juice and salt. Mix well. Fill egg white halves with avocado mixture; arrange in 2 individual casseroles.

For sauce, in a small saucepan cook onion in margarine until tender but not brown. Stir in flour, bouillon granules and parsley. Combine milk and water; add all at once to flour mixture. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbly. Pour sauce over eggs. Top with ham. Bake, uncovered, in a 325-degree oven about 15 minutes or until heated through. Makes 2 servings.

Venturino takes charge

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

After being shell-shocked for a 7.09 earned run average through the first seven games, the Midland Angels pitching staff was looking for someone to take control.

After allowing consecutive hits to open the first inning, Phil Venturino did just that, handcuffing El Paso, the rest of the way to earn an 11-2 Texas League victory Tuesday at Angels Stadium.

Venturino mowed down 23 straight Diablo hitters after Lavell Freeman's RBI double in the first and the Angel bats took care of the rest. Venturino lowered the Angels' team ERA to 6.15, and his own total to 5.40.

THIRD Baseman Joe Redfield provided much of the offensive damage with three hits and five RBI, including his second home run of the year. Robbie Allen also poked a pair of doubles for three RBI.

But it was Venturino, the Brooklyn boy making good, who was the master on this night, walking none and striking out five by mixing his assortment of three pitches. It was Venturino's second win in as many starts, and the second time he was roughed up in the first inning.

"The first inning has been a problem for me — and it was last year, too," said the St. Francis College (N.Y.) product. "(Pitching coach) Chuck Hernandez had me working longer in the pen tonight to try and loosen up because I seem to settle down after a while."

VENTURINO WAS struck by the first inning blues in his first start against Wichita, as well, allowing five runs before settling down to pitch five scoreless innings to pick up his first win. The Diablos appeared to be on the same course, but Venturino turned it around in a hurry.

"After the first two hitters, I saw a different Phil Venturino out there," manager Max Oliveras said. "He got mad and he looked very sharp. He had excellent control. If we're going to get something positive from this ballpark, it's going to start tonight."

Indeed, the Angels accomplished numerous deeds Tuesday.

- For the first time this season, Midland put back-to-back wins together.
- The Angels reached the .500 mark for the first time at 4-4.
- And Midland created a four-way logjam at the top of the Texas League's Western Division.

The win gave the Angels a 2-1 edge in the five-game set with El Paso, with the series continuing tonight at 7 and concluding Thursday.

The Angels' offense continued to generate at high levels with 16 hits against a trail of El Paso pitchers. Midland is averaging nearly eight runs per game through the first eight games.

REDFIELD NEARLY hit for the cycle against El Paso, collecting an RBI single in the first, a two-run triple in the fourth and a two-run homer in the sixth. It was a welcome offensive explosion for the smooth-fielding journeyman third baseman.

Redfield was acquired from the Atlanta organization just prior to the season to shore up Midland's infield defense. It was the fourth stop in a year for Redfield.

"One positive is that you know someone wants you — and I know when I'm with a good organization because I've been in a couple that weren't," Redfield said. "But I'm happy here in Midland now. I hope I can make a home here, at least for a while."

ANGELS NOTES: First baseman Stan Holmes stole his second base of the season Tuesday, tying him for the team lead with Joe Redfield. As a team, Midland is 4-for-4 in steal attempts... Outfielder Doug Jennings and his .522 average, will miss another game or two because of a pulled hamstring...

MC's Duncan signs with Red Raiders

Todd Duncan
....heads for Tech

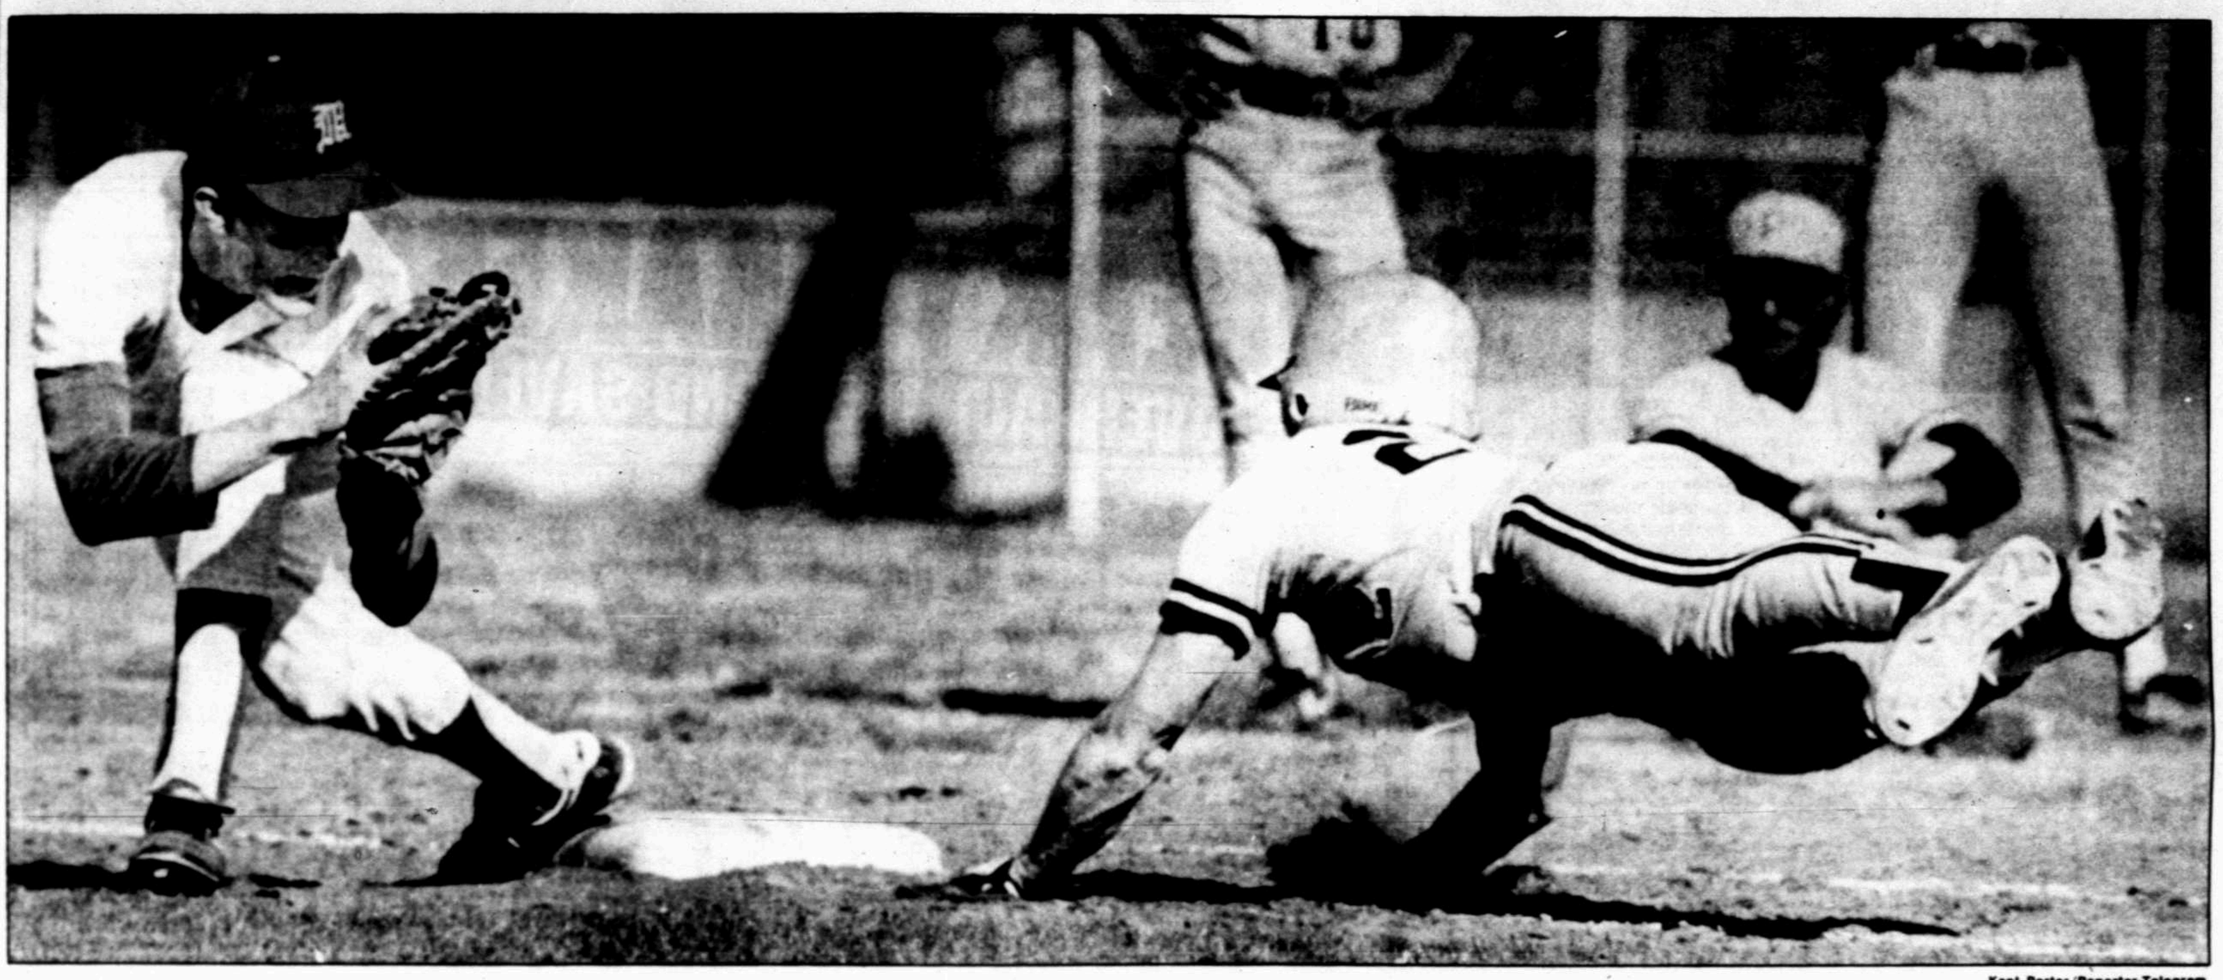

In the background, the phone was ringing and Texas Tech head basketball coach Gerald Myers was grinning from ear to ear. "Tell them they're too late. Todd Duncan is ours."

And so it was Tuesday that Midland College's Mr. 3-Point became a Red Raider on his 20th birthday, signing a scholarship agreement with Myers and Tech.

To some it came as no shock that Duncan cast his lot with Tech. After all, he played his high school ball at Lubbock Coronado and his family still lives in the Hub City.

"I know everyone thinks I chose Tech because it's home, but I tried to put all that in the back of my mind. I looked at where I might fit in the best and help the most and this is my decision," said Duncan, who hit 104 3-pointers out of 180 field goals made this year at MC while

Odessa Permian takes over second with 9-7 victory

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Midland High Bulldogs had the Odessa Permian Panthers right where they wanted them: Three runs down, one out in the top of the seventh inning and their best pitcher on the mound.

Then, on the way to victory and sole possession of second place in the District 4-5A standings, Bulldog pitcher Eric Boyt started losing his stuff. He was still throwing strikes, but the Panthers were making contact with the ball, hard contact.

Mike Adams started the one-out rally with an infield single and went to second on Jon Hitt's single up the middle. Courtesy runner Mike Winchell came in and followed Adams around the bases on Darren Allman's two-RBI triple to right.

Still with only one out, Nolan Watson tied the game at seven with his single to left. The Bulldogs finally ended the inning with their second of four double plays in the game.

However, as good as the double play was for Midland High, it wasn't enough to save Boyt. Despite two more twin kills in the last two innings, the Panthers found more than enough punch in their bats to knock the MHS ace off the mound.

Hitt started the ninth with a single (Winchell in) and, one out later, Watson hit the game's only home run, a towering shot over the right field fence for a 9-7 score, which held up through the final MHS batters.

The last four Bulldogs could barely get their bats on the smoke coming in from hard-throwing Permian reliever Larry Hill, the winner and 6-1 on the year. Boyt, 3-3, took the loss.

In the standings, Permian moved into second at 6-2 (17-4 overall), 1½ games behind idle Abilene Cooper. Midland fell into third at 5-3 (12-11).

PERMIAN JUMPED out to an early 2-0 lead with solo runs in each of the first two innings only to see Midland knot the score on a Jamie Surratt two-RBI single up the middle.

Craig Crawford's RBI groundout in the third gave Midland a 3-2 lead and a throwing error by Permian third baseman Daniel Bean gave the 'Dogs a run and extra out in the fourth. Tony Perez took advantage of the error with a two-RBI double to left-center, 6-2.

Permian cut the lead to 6-3 with an RBI single by Mike Adams in the fifth and made it 6-4 when Bean's single plated Watson in the sixth.

MHS added an insurance run in the bottom of the sixth when Yorkman reached on an infield hit, went to second on a Jim Werner ground out and scored on Perez' second double of the game. The insurance policy expired in the top of the seventh.

"I was thinking, Boyt's control is as good as anybody's," said Whalen, in defense of his decision to stay with Boyt. "He lost a little off his fastball but he keeps the ball down and throws a good split finger fastball so I was thinking double play. I don't think I left him in too long. I'd probably do the same thing again."

Whalen finally relieved Boyt in the ninth with Sam Sowders but, by then, Watson's homer was over the fence and Woody Bryant was on second with a double.

In the top of the eighth, the Bulldogs had a chance to claim the victory when Surratt collected his third hit of the game off starter Brad Cornett. Permian coach Jimmy Davis called Hill out of the bullpen and he, along with Davis' strategy, got the Panthers out of trouble.

Whalen made the first move, having Tommy Yorkman bunt Surratt to second and, after Werner moved him to third on a groundout to Allman, Davis took over.

The Permian coach decided not to pitch to Perez, 3-for-4 in the game with two doubles for three RBI and two runs scored. After walking the MHS sophomore, he let Hill throw to Boyt. One pitch. When boyt fouled it off he put Boyt on first and gave Crawford the spotlight. The Bulldog designated hitter struck out looking, his third straight K of the game.

"We already had the force at-second," said Davis. "I wanted to take a look at one pitch (to Boyt) and he fouled it back. He was close to hitting it. Crawford had struck out in his previous at bats and I had a lot of confidence in Larry Hill."

It paid off well for the Panthers

Gee 4-5A medalist; Rebels take second

From Staff Reports

SAN ANGELO — Midland Lee didn't win the boys District 4-5A golf title Tuesday here at Bentwood Country Club, but Rebel golfer Bobby Gee did claim the medalist crown.

Gee, a three-year first team player for the Rebels, shot a 78 in the windy final round for a four-round total of 298, 15 strokes better than Abilene Cooper's Robert Joyner, who also shot a 78 for a 313.

"His season average through 14 competitive rounds is just over 77 which is outstanding for a high school golfer," said Lee coach Ronnie Stephens. "He won medalist by 15 strokes so he was definitely the class of this district."

Rebel Larry Bryan, who was in second in the medalist race before a disastrous round of 87, finished third at 317.

Problems like those that plagued Bryan were what cost Lee the team title. Leading Cooper by four strokes going into the round, the Rebels fired a 335 for a 1275 district total, while Cooper shot 329-1273. Well out of the running was San Angelo, claiming third place with a 342-1326.

"We knew we were in the playoffs last Friday (when Lee took the four-shot lead in Odessa) and the only way not to make the playoffs was not to show up and we almost didn't," said Stephens. "To play at that level (varsity) the people that win can face adversity and Cooper faced adversity better than we did. When your No. 2 player shoots 87 (Bryan) and No. 4 shoots 95 (Randy Milby), you don't deserve to be in the playoffs."

But, in the Rebels are and they have a little more than two weeks to prepare for Region I competition May 1-2 at Meadowbrook Golf Course, Squirrel Hollow in Lubbock.

In that 36-hole tournament, the top two teams and top two medalists will advance to the state tournament in Austin.

Also in the tournament, Midland High fired a 336 to move into seventh play at 1350.

Boxing and Suspicion: Hagler-Leonard outcome fixed?

By IRA BERKOW
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Regarding the Hagler-Leonard middleweight title fight, some who witnessed it and some who didn't still question whether the only thing square was the ring.

When Gil Clancy returned from Las Vegas, Nev., to New York, he recalled, "My Chinese laundryman, who hardly speaks English, told me it had to be fixed. He said, 'They do it to make more money.' "

When Ted Koppel on "Nightline" received an on-the-scene report from Dick Schaap that night, Koppel, who hadn't seen the fight, said, "Dick, I have to ask you this...." The question was, were the fighters doing business?

"YEAH," said Vito Antuofermo, the former middleweight champion, "the way I saw it a deal was made. I saw the closed circuit. Everyone was in on it — the promoters, the judges, the fighters. They were all looking to make another fight out of it."

The ingredients for a rematch were there, especially if Leonard, the 3-1 underdog and challenger, would win, as he did in a 12-round decision. The fighters made at least $12 million each on this one. Another one and maybe they double their money.

But Clancy saw the bout as the genuine article. "Hagler and Leonard were so intense, they disliked each other so much, that money didn't mean a thing. It was all pride and ego.

"When the decision was announced, Hagler shrunk like a little old man. He was devastated. Beyond that, I don't think there's going to be a rematch. Leonard's going next for Tommy Hearns, and the light-heavyweight title."

HOW DID Antuofermo see it so clearly the other way? "You know Vito picked Hagler, and said it would be no contest," noted Clancy. "It's just a rationalization. I think a lot of people gave Leonard no chance, and when the fight was close, and then Leonard got the decision, they figured, oh no, no way, Hagler had to carry Ray."

Ray Arcel, the venerable trainer, believed that Leonard won the fight "100 percent on its merits."

"It was a case of brains over brawn. He outsmarted him and outpunched him."

Even though it may have appeared that the fighters were hitting each other as hard as they could, said Antuofermo, "fighters know how to hit hard and yet not hurt each other. But when you want to tear a guy's head off, you can."

To Harry Markson, the former fight promoter, "there was, as the lawyers say, not a scintilla of suspicion in my mind about the fight. It was a split decision."

Markson believes that fights were once much more capable of being fixed than they are today. "Fights are pretty well regulated by the state commissions, and they're watched closely. I think that era of phony fights is at an end."

Now's the time for wild flowers and LL elbow

Cochran

It's that time of year again. Trees are budding, wild flowers are blooming, and little leaguers are playing baseball. With the call to "Play Ball", we need to be especially aware of a common baseball injury that may trouble these young players for the rest of their lives—the Little League elbow.

This particular elbow problem is seen in young pitcher's who follow a heavy pitching schedule. The professional pitcher throws about 120 pitches in nine innings, whereas, the Little League pitcher will pitch an average of 18 times in six innings. The youngster will throw hard on days between games. The recurrent stress on the LLer will frequently lead to insidious damage to the pitching elbow and its growth plates.

J.E. Adams, M.D., studied 162 boys and compared pitchers to non-pitchers and to kids who were not playing baseball. He found that elbow damage was directly related to the amount of throwing and whether the youngster threw curve balls.

All of the pitchers evidenced some elbow damage on xray, whereas, few of the nonpitchers and controls showed these changes.

In the Houston Study, 595 LL pitchers were examined by J.J. Gugenheim, M.D., and his associates. Seventeen percent of their patients had elbow symptoms and 12 per cent had lost full extension of their elbows.

What makes both studies important is that by the time the young pitchers had elbow complaints, irreversible damage had occurred. Most of these young me presented to their physicians when they were 13 or 14 had graduated from the LL program.

Without getting into medical specifics, these young people developed problems on both sides of the elbow. The damage was related to growth plate injuries and to fragmentation of the joint surfaces. These are the types of problems that can lead to lifelong elbow disability with loss of range of motion and arthritis.

The keystone of preventing these elbow problems in young pitchers is the teaching of good throwing mechanics. They must be kept from throwing with just the arm. Correct throwing mechanics utilizing the large muscle groups, bodyturn, and proper pushoff and follow through must be developed. Adequate pregame and warmup is necessary and the shoulder and elbow should be iced after the game.

Young pitchers should be encouraged to report elbow or arm soreness. If xrays demonstrate abnormalities, then pitching should be avoided for the remainder of the season.

Jerry Cochran is president of the Midland Orthopedic Center and specializes in sports medicine and athletic surgery.

Lee girls 'almost' a 4-5A golf cinch

From Staff Reports

With a 48 stroke lead over second place Midland High, Midland Lee looks like a pretty good bet to win the District 4-5A golf title with only Thursday's 18 holes at Hogan Park remaining in league play.

The Rebels' prospects look promising enough for Coach Shirley Stephenson to crawl out on a limb with a "You never know, but it looks like we'll have to fall apart not to get into the playoffs."

Midland High could get the other berth into the Region I tournament at Lubbock if the Coach Greg Manship's Bulldog girls can hold on to a 20-stroke lead over third place San Angelo. San Angelo last week shot a 413 to Midland's 415 while fourth place Odessa Permian, seven back of San Anelo, shot a 410.

Of course, the day's best round at San Angelo was Lee's 399—1186. Following the Rebels are Midland 1234, San Angelo 1254, Permian 1261, Cooper 1288, and Abilene 1424.

The top two teams and top two medalists qualify for regional and going into the final round, Michelle Hapek, Cooper, 250, and Chris Witenberg, San Angelo, 255, are the leaders. Midland Lee's Jan Pepperone is third with 272 and Permian's Candy Morgan is fourth with 276.

Tee off time Thursday is 9:30 a.m.

McConnell pokes two as Dodgers bomb Pilots

Associated Press

Walt McConnell batted two homers, including a two-run shot, as the San Antonio Dodgers edged Wichita 10-7 in a Texas League baseball game.

The Dodgers scored six runs in the second inning, keyed by McConnell's two-run effort. McConnell also batted a solo homer in the third. Jeff Brown soloed in the sixth.

In other Shreveport split a doubleheader with Jackson. The Captains took the opener 2-1, and the Mets came back to win the nightcap 3-2.

Scott May, 1-1, was credited with the win for San Antonio. Greg Harris, 0-1, was the loser.

Jackson's Al Carmichael batted a two-out solo home run in the seventh inning to break a 2-2 tie and give the Mets their first win of the season in the nightcap.

In the opener, pitcher John Burkett struck out five, walked four and scattered six hits over six innings as the Captains edged the Mets 2-1.

In the second game, the Mets scored their other two runs in the sixth inning. Carmichael led off the bottom of the inning with a single and Marcus Lawton followed with another. Daron DeLuca bunted to load the bases and Joaquin Contereras then doubled to drive in Carmichael and Lawton.

A third inning solo home run by Everett Graham highlighted Captains' scoring.

Mets pitcher Ed Pruitt, 1-0, grabbed the win. Shreveport's Randy McCament, 0-1, got the loss.

The Captains scored in the third inning of the first game. Tony Perezchica's fielder's choice drove in Kirt Manwaring and in the eighth when Greg Litton's RBI single scored Perezchica, who had doubled.

Jackson, 1-7, finally notched a win as Shreveport, 6-2, took its second loss.

MC preps for WJCAC tournament in Odessa

From Staff Reports

Anticipating 18 victories while needing just 10 is a nice situation for Midland College tennis coach Joe Williams, as he prepares his teams for the WJCAC tournament in Odessa.

Action Friday and Saturday determines which teams enter the Region V tourney next week in Waco. If the Chaparrals can win as few as five men's and five women's matches, both teams qualify.

"The system allows the winning and runner-up teams to advance everyone to the regional tournament," Williams explained. "A first place finish at number one singles or doubles also qualifies."

Since the Chaparral men, 17-0 and No. 2 nationally, defeated the other three colleges fielding men's teams last weekend in the team championships, they'll be favored. MC beat NMMI 7-2, SPC 7-2, and OC 9-0. Johan Dysholm, normally the Chaps' No. 3 singles player, is injured and was replaced by Brett Campoy, usually the No. 6-7. Campoy also was forced to play the No. 3.

MC's defending national champion women, 12-1 and ranked No. 1 in the nation, played inthe NM State Invitational at Las Cruces, and suffered their first loss, 6-3 to Utah while defeating Grand Canyon 9-0, UNLV 7-2.

Against UNLV, MC freshman Rebecca Nevarez edged 1986 MC All-American Jane Howe 6-3, 2-6, 7-5.

At Odessa, most of the Chaparral women are expected to get byes into the finals because of their records. Only Midland, OC, and SPC play women's tennis.

TECH

the Chaps were running on the way to the NJCAA national finals.

And Duncan had some choices to make. He visited University of Texas-Arlington this week where former MC coach Jerry Stone is taking over the reigns. Duncan had narrowed his list to Cal State Fullerton, Colorado State, New Mexico State, UTA and Tech during the last week.

"Some other schools like Arkansas, Baylor, Wyoming and Kansas talked with me, but I wanted to make this decision on my birthday. I narrowed the choices to five and felt like they were all great schools, but I picked Tech because of the school and the area because I want to coach eventually and the job opportunities are good," noted Duncan.

Myers says that obtaining a point guard was the No. 1 priority on his recruiting list and he feels Duncan fills that need for his Red Raiders.

"I have only two guards on my team coming back and only one of them, Sean Gay, can handle the ball," said Myers. "Todd gives us the point guard we want. And if everything works out, Sean doesn't even have to play the point because he can also be good at the off guard since he likes to get in there and rebound.

"Since Todd is from Lubbock, I've seen him play since he was in junior high. And we were tickled to death when he decided to go to Midland College. I knew he would get the coaching and be in a competitive program. He has always been a great shooter, even in high school, but his defense and ball handling have improved tremendously since coming to Midland.

"Any time you can get a kid who hits 56 percent of his shots from the field and 87 percent of his free throws, you have to be tickled to get him. But I like Todd because he doesn't take bad shots, he's a team oriented player and has an understanding of basketball at both ends of the floor. That really fits any basketball scheme I can think of."

So, Duncan has two years to play at Tech instead of four as a freshman would, but he isn't sorry.

"I owe everything to the people of Midland, Coach Stone and the college for the opportunity I've been given today," said Duncan. "Playing at MC was a great experience that really helped me. After all, I worked out daily against Ricky Grace, Mookie Blaylock and Lincoln Minor. Those are great players to learn from, regardless of the level of play.

"Getting to play my games in front of my parents, family and friends is an extra bonus. I know my dad is happy. He's a basketball nut."

TED BATTLES

WTexans experience genuine Yankee spring

Battles

Now you know what a Yankee spring is like.

Late spring. Back during the Midland Invitational Golf tournament, Midland Lee Coach Ronnie Stephens was apprised of the situation, "Here it is mid-March and still no leaves on the trees. I've never seen a spring this late in Texas."

"It's not the leaves that bother me. It's the mesquite." said WT native Stephens. "My daddy always told me that until the mesquite came out, there was still a freeze coming and the mesquite hasn't shown any signs of life yet."

The comment was dismissed as an old wives, or at least Daddy's, tale.

Then an early April snowstorm wiped out a final-fling weekend ski trip.

And now it's mid April and still no leaves. And there won't be any plums, either.

Yet the tardy arrival of spring did insure good snow on the mountains beyond normal expectations, so another trip was planned.

What happened is enough to make you dash off an angry letter to the NCAA or Forestry service.

Surely, somebody can do something.

Here was another quest for "spring skiing", that elusive grail everyone talks about but seldom finds, and this was about like all those that had preceded it.

At least this time there was no getting caught up on the mountain in a snowstorm with winds 60-100 mph. And unlike last year at Ski Apache, the victim didn't come back looking as though he had fallen asleep on a Sunday in July at Jones Beach.

AS THE skis were being put on, it was snowing, a bit windy and still too cold for April, even April in North Dakota. The demand for an explanation brought a "Spring skiing was yesterday," from the person in charge.

That wasn't bad enough. The next day, a Sunday, snow fell all morning. By afternoon, it was falling even harder, although it was a gentle snow without a biting wind. It only stung the face when skiing downhill.

By mid afternoon, it was so thick and deep, people were having trouble finding their way down the mountain. The fall had to be 12 to 20 inches. Yet, unbelievably, they closed shop for the season at the day's end. No more skiing.

There wasn't this much snow in January. Now there was enough snow to ski until June. And still they were closing up. Apparently, there is no law or justice.

The NCAA, as everyone except SMU knows, was helpless to do anything about it. So, apparently, was the forestry department.

Of course, there are havens of relief still available for the determined. Ski Apache, with close to 100 inches, at Ruidoso doesn't close down until April 19.

Then there's always Wolf Creek, what 130-140 inches, and bragging about spring conditions. Good old Wolf, most snow in Colorado and apparently they stay open as long as the snow lasts.

Then, of course, there's always Mount Washington in New Hampshire, where the weather is so foul and the winds so strong that the only kind of skiing permitted is spring skiing. The only trouble is. There's no lift. They won't let skiers use the cog rail, so the only way to get to up is to hike. Still, they say the run down Tuckerman's Ravine is worth it.

WASHINGTON — Navy Secretary James H. Webb reversed a decision of his predecessor and ruled that young naval officers will not receive any "special accomodation" in the future to play pro sports. Webb, who was sworn in as the Navy's 66th secretary last Friday, said he would insist that graduates of the U.S. Naval Academy fulfill their responsibilities as naval officers on a full-time basis, without expecting special arrangements or duty assignments that would allow them to participate in professional athletics as well.

Webb said he would honor a different type of commitment given to another NAVY basketball All-American David Robinson.

FIX

CLANCY thinks that the fight-fixing notions of some come from, he said, "old movies."

"But boxing lends itself to suspicion, and always will," Markson said. "There's a tremendous amount of money involved, and remember, the people in boxing aren't always among the nobility of our citizenry."

Jake LaMotta's plunge against Billy Fox, at Madison Square Garden in 1947, is one of the few documented instances of a fix.

Perhaps the most famous odoriferous bout in recent times was the second Liston-Ali heavyweight title fight, in 1965, in which Ali threw a punch in the first round and Liston fell down and, as some contend, refused to get up.

Some called it a phantom blow. Jimmy Cannon wrote that "the punch wouldn't have crushed a grape."

Markson, who was there, thought the knockout suspicious. "But Cus D'Amato," said Markson, manager and trainer for Floyd Patterson, Jose Torres and Mike Tyson, "thought it was a terrific punch."

LAMOTTA was "knocked out" in the fourth round precisely as choreographed by the underworld characters who invested in it. The sham seemed obvious to the 20,000 fans there.

"The first round, a couple of belts to his head, and I see a glassy look coming over his eyes," La Motta wrote in his autobiography, "Raging Bull." "....a couple of jabs and he's going to fall down? I began to panic....I don't know how we even got through the first round without me murdering him, sometimes I thought the air from my punches was affecting him, but we made it to the fourth round."

Dodgers beat Astros in 12th

Associated Press

Pedro Guerrero's back, the Los Angeles relievers are back and so are the Dodgers.

Guerrero, who was out of the starting lineup for four games as Los Angeles lost its first five, hit a pair of two-out RBI singles, including the game-winner in the 12th inning, as the Dodgers rallied for a 3-2 victory over the Houston Astros on Tuesday night.

NL

"We needed this game," Guerrero said. "It was important for us, especially with Mike Scott pitching (tonight)."

It was the fourth consecutive victory for the Dodgers after their 0-4 start, which saw their relief pitchers falter.

Mariano Duncan opened the 12th with a walk off loser Charlie Kerfeld, 0-1, and was sacrificed to second by Dave Anderson. Ken Landreaux was walked intentionally before Duncan advanced to third on a fly ball by Alex Trevino.

Guerrero, who had singled in the tying run in the eighth inning, then laced Kerfeld's first pitch into center field for the game-winning hit.

When Guerrero left the field after the hit, he and Kerfeld exchanged words, and it appeared for a moment that a fight might break out.

"I've got no respect for him anymore," Kerfeld said. "It might come back to haunt him. I don't know what his problem is."

"All he's got to do is get me out," Guerrero said of Kerfeld. "I don't know what he was saying. He wanted to fight. The pitch (that won the game) was a fastball right where I wanted it."

Houston starter Danny Darwin took a four-hit shutout into the eighth inning, but the Dodgers rallied for two runs to tie the game.

Darwin hit Duncan with a pitch and then balked him to second before Steve Sax doubled to make it 2-1. Sax then came home on Guerrero's first single.

"Hitting Duncan was the turning point of the game," Astros Manager Hal Lanier said.

Giants 3, Padres 2

San Francicso boosted its record to 7-2, equalling its best start since 1979, while San Diego fell to 1-7, its worst beginning since 1974.

Bob Melvin hit his fourth homer of the year — all against the Padres — to give the Giants a 2-0 lead in the second.

San Francisco extended the margin to 3-0 in the third after starting pitcher Mark Davis missed his first major-league home run by inches. He settled for a triple off the left-center field wall and scored on Chili Davis' groundout.

Expos 9, Cardinals 4

Montreal became the last major-league team to win its first game of the season as Jeff Reed drove in four runs and Jay Tibbs pitched eight shutout innings against St. Louis.

Reed had a three-run double in the first inning and an RBI single in the fifth, and Tim Wallach added three RBI with a sacrifice fly and a two-run single for the Expos, now 1-5.

Tibbs, 1-1, took a three-hit shutout into the ninth inning, but Tommy Herr had a two-run double and Jack Clark an RBI single for the Cardinals before Bob McClure got the last three outs. McClure surrendered a sacrifice fly to Jim Lindeman.

Mets 7, Phillies 5

New York, expected to get a strong challenge from Philadelphia in the East, handed the Phillies their sixth loss in seven games.

Mookie Wilson singled in the tie-breaking run in the ninth inning and went to third on right fielder Ron Roenicke's error. Wilson then scored when Juan Samuel threw wildly to home on Wally Backman's ground ball.

Ron Darling, 1-0, who escaped from a two-on, no-out situation in the bottom of the eighth, got the victory despite allowing 11 hits in eight innings.

Mike Schmidt hit his third homer of the season and 498th of his career in the fifth inning and Howard Johnson had a two-run homer for the Mets.

Reds 6, Braves 3

Eric Davis and Kal Daniels both homered as Cincinnati improved its record to 6-1 by beating Atlanta.

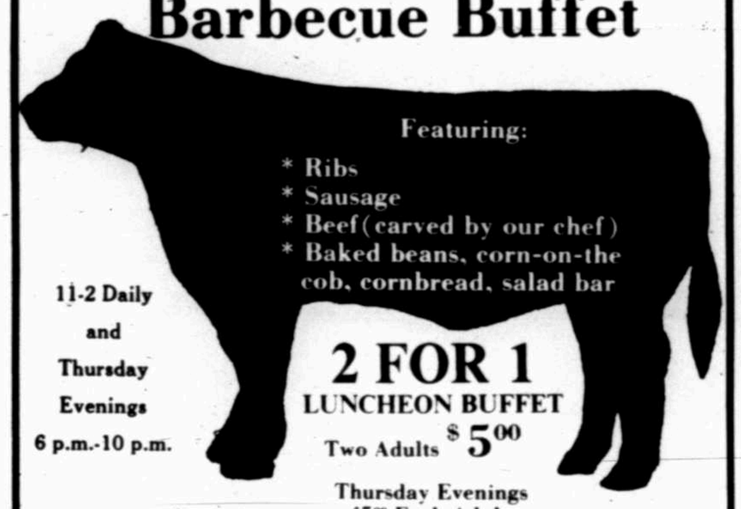

Daniels had a leadoff homer in the sixth inning that broke a 3-3 tie, and three Cincinnati pitchers held the Braves to five hits. Ted Power, 1-0, allowed five hits in six innings, Ron Robinson pitched two hitless innings and John Franco got the last three outs for the Reds.

Davis, hitting nearly .500, hit a three-run homer after David Palmer issued consecutive walks to Daniels and Terry Francona to open the game.

STATE IN BRIEF

Man held in two deaths questioned about third

DALLAS (AP) — Police held a bank employee in the slayings of two women at an apartment building last year and questioned him about the recent strangulation death of a third woman at another complex.

The 21-year-old man was held Tuesday without bail at Lew Sterrett Justice Center. The suspect was once a resident of the same apartment buildings as the women, police said.

The man was accused in the fatal stabbings of two women last summer in the bathrooms of their apartments. Tippawan Naksuwan, a 37-year-old waitress, was found dead on July 24 and her 22-year-old neighbor, LaShun Chappell, a nursing home aide, on Sept. 15.

Homicide investigators said the nude body of Mary Milligan, a 21-year-old bank management trainee, was discovered Tuesday by her roommate in their apartment's bathroom.

Police said Ms. Milligan's car was found abandoned in a downtown Dallas parking lot. An autopsy showed she was strangled by hand and drowned, said a spokesman for the Dallas County medical examiner's office.

Ms. Milligan lived about two miles away from the apartment complex of the other victims.

Utah seeks Texas woman

CEDAR CITY, Utah (AP) — A Utah judge has issued a warrant for the arrest of a Fort Worth, Texas, woman who walked away the jail where she was serving time for bilking the Mormon Church out of welfare commodities.

Scott Burns, Iron County attorney, said a warrant was issued for the arrest of Bobbie Dintino, 25, who was serving a one-year jail term for bilking the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Cedar City out of $273 in benefits.

Judge J. Philip Eves had granted a defense motion allowing Dintino to be released for two hours Monday to interview for a job.

Burns said Dintino never showed up for the interview and authorities have not seen her since she left the Washington County jail.

Burns said he "adamantly opposed" the release.

DC remains under limit

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — The state prison system remained under its state-mandated limit of 95 percent of capacity today after an unofficial count of admissions and releases, prison officials said.

On Tuesday, 202 inmates were admitted to the prison system, while 108 were released, according to prison spokesman David Nunnelee.

As of midnight Monday, the 26-unit system held 37,927 inmates, filling it to only 93.89 percent of capacity, or 450 inmates below the 95 percent ceiling, Nunnelee said.

This week, the prison system was open to new admissions on a Monday for the first time in nearly three months after weekend releases lowered the population to below 95 percent of capacity.

For the previous 10 weeks, the prison had been operating on an open-and-shut system, in which prisoners were admitted on Tuesdays and Wednesdays. The prison system would then remain closed to new admissions the rest of the week.

Bill restricts arrest method

AUSTIN (AP) — The House sent the Senate a bill Tuesday that would place tighter restrictions on when police could break down a door to make an arrest.

Texas law enforcement officials now can use such entry at any house to make a felony arrest, but Rep. Robert Earley's bill says police could break down doors only if an arrest warrant had been issued for the suspect and if the home was the suspect's residence.

The measure by the Portland Democrat won final House approval Tuesday in a non-record vote.

The House also gave final approval Tuesday to a bill by Rep. Sam Johnson, R-Plano, that would allow crime victims to testify at parole hearings for the criminals that victimized them. The right to testify also would cover relatives of deceased crime victims.

Vet home buyers can save

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas veterans buying homes can get an extra savings by combining a state loan with a federal home loan, Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said Tuesday.

"By using their Texas benefits, Texas veterans can now save up to $2,600 in mortgage payments and up to $600 or $800 in closing costs by combining a Texas Veterans Housing loan with a federal Veterans Administration home loan," Mauro said.

Mauro said veterans are eligible for these savings because the interest rate on VA-backed loans jumped a full point this week to 9.5 percent.

The Texas Veterans Housing Assistance Program offers eligible Texas veterans up to $20,000 at 9 percent to use toward purchase of a home.

Judge will visit TDC unit

HOUSTON (AP) — U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice wants to get a first-hand look at a Texas prison today to wind up a contempt hearing that could cost the state up to $800,500 per day in fines for failing to comply with his orders on prison improvements.

Justice agreed to accept the invitation of F. Scott McCown, special assistant attorney general, and said Tuesday he would visit the Jester III Unit in Fort Bend County, which houses handicapped inmates.

Today's tour concludes a contempt hearing that began Monday in Houston.

Several handicapped inmates from the Jester unit testified Tuesday, complaining about medical care and poor working conditions.

"I don't think their problems are of a constitutional dimension," McCown said.

It will be the second tour of prisons this year for Justice, who previously had not visited facilities his orders so profoundly have affected.

At Tuesday's hearing, James Lynaugh, interim director of the Department of Corrections, was questioned by Justice about his agency's commitment to comply with court orders.

"I don't believe there's anyone working for TDC who is not trying to bring into compliance," Lynaugh said, adding that he believed the department would be in total compliance by September.

"We're not perfect in deploying in cellbocks all those officers, but as we become more accustomed to putting those officers into place, they will be there instead of wandering off from time to time like some of them do," Lynaugh said.

Justice gave William Bennett Turner, attorney for the inmate plaintiffs, 10 days to file briefs proposing fines for failure to comply. The state then will have 10 days to respond to Turner before Justice issues a decision.

In other testimony Tuesday, inmates complained about inadequate recreation time and health care and improperly confiscated personal property in violation of court-ordered reforms.

"What's important to note is that improvements have been made," McCown said.

Turner agreed, saying the department is placing officers in dormitories and has hired medical personnel in line with Justice's orders.

"But the TDC responds only to court orders with dollar signs," Turner said. "This hearing is just a clean-up effort at this point. We'll be back into court time after time."

Justice on Dec. 31 found the state in contempt of an agreement to improve prison conditions and gave the state until April 1 to comply or face fines of some $24 million a month. The fines were delayed pending the outcome of this week's hearing.

The judge has ordered the state to complete reforms it agreed to as part of the landmark April 1981 decision in what has become known as the Ruiz case.

The case is named after inmate David Ruiz, whose handwritten civil rights lawsuit in 1972 alleged poor security and living conditions and excessive crowding.

"It's come a long way," Turner said of the corrections department. "We may make it into the 20th century in corrections before the end of the 20th century."

Officer pitched rookie of year award

AP Laserphoto

Dallas police officer Jeffrey Hutchinson is applauded by officer Sheila Robinson after he was named the department's rookie officer of the year.

DALLAS (AP) — Jeffrey Hutchinson's first year as a Milwaukee Brewers pitcher was stopped short by an injury, but his second stint as a rookie — this time with the Dallas Police Department — was a hit.

Hutchinson, who joined the police force in 1985, was named the department's Johnny Sides Rookie Officer of the Year for 1987.

The honor means "everything in the world," Hutchinson said.

"There are so many negative things that have happened in the department. Then something like this reinforces your belief that there are some positive things that are going to happen," he said.

"It's given me the determination to keep going."

The award is named for a 21-year-old officer who was fatally shot trying to arrest four bank robbers on Feb. 7, 1951, only 21 days after he graduated from the police academy.

To be nominated for the award, officers must have served less than 18 months.

Hutchinson, 27, from Chippewa Falls, Wis., joined the department after a chance meeting with Dallas police recruiters in Minneapolis in February 1985.

His career with the Brewers ended with an arm injury in his rookie season in 1981.

"There are so many negative things that have happened in the department. Then something like this (receiving rookie of the year award) reinforces your belief that there are some positive things that are going to happen," he said.

— Jeffrey Hutchinson

As an officer with Dallas' northwest division, he has seven commendations. Hutchinson has made 409 arrests, written 303 traffic citations and made 1,242 service calls.

Officials cited his arrest of a man who was the last of four escapees from the Cooke County jail in Gainesville as an example of exemplary work.

While accepting the award, Hutchinson paid tribute to his fellow officers.

Clements' abortion position questioned

AUSTIN (AP) — A state senator says he is going to withhold a favorable vote on an abortion bill before his committee until Gov. Bill Clements publicly clarifies his position on the legislation.

Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, said comments the governor made Tuesday "raised the question of what his real intent is."

During his campaign last year, Clements made an issue of getting anti-abortion legislation passed. But at a news conference Tuesday, the governor said he considered it vital that the abortion bill include a provision that unmarried teen-agers obtain at least one parent's consent for the operation.

The author of the bill, Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, dropped that provison from his bill on Monday, saying he was a political realist and knew the Health and Human Services Committee wouldn't approve the bill with the provision.

"I am sure that when the bill is reported out of committee and goes to the (Senate) floor, there will be an amendment that will be voted on" to again require parental consent, Clements said.

That comment set off a protest in the Health and Human Services Committee, which took up the bill later Tuesday. Edwards and Sen. John Whitmire, D-Houston, promised to vote against the bill if an attempt to amend it on the floor was planned.

Lyon needs five votes in favor of the bill to pass it out of the nine-member committee. He said Whitmire and Edwards were key votes.

Clements talked with Lyon in the Senate chamber, the committe meeting site, and said he would back a bill passed out of committee if it was in a form Lyon approved of, Lyon said. Clements also said he was not planning to try to get the bill amended, Lyon added.

Clements' administrative assistant, Richard Land was asked to testify before the committee to clarify the governor's position.

"He was speculating on what possibly might happen," Land said referring to the governor's comments at the news conference. "He also expressed support for both parts of the bill."

Land said the governor didn't plan to ask Republican lawmakers to amend the bill when it reaches the floor.

Judge rules in favor of home schools

FORT WORTH (AP) — In a major victory for home-schooling advocates, a judge has ruled that Texans can legally pull their children out of public schools and teach them at home as long as they use an organized curriculum.

State District Judge Charles Murray ruled Tuesday that Texas' compulsory school attendance law requires only that children attend a school with such a curriculum, and that home classes are equivalent to private schooling.

Murray also said the state Board of Education and the Texas Education Agency do not have the authority to define "private school" because they have jurisdiction only in public schools.

The ruling came in a class-action lawsuit filed against the state in 1985 by a group of parents who teach their children at home. Four home-school curricula companies joined the suit.

Court records show that between 10,000 and 15,000 school-age children in Texas attend home schools.

"It's incredible," said Fort Worth attorney Shelby Sharpe, who represented the parents. "It's a 100-percent victory for home education."

"Needless to say, we're very, very happy," said Gary Leeper, whose wife Cheryl teaches their 10- and 12-year-old children at home. "We won everything we wanted, and didn't sacrifice anything."

The Leepers filed the initial lawsuit against the Arlington school district.

Most home schools use lesson plans from companies that offer religious-oriented material. Those home schools are accredited through the companies, and therefore comply with state law, the ruling said.

School districts throughout Texas had filed criminal lawsuits against more than 80 couples who teach their children at home, saying the parents were guilty of truancy.

The districts based their suits on TEA and state board contentions that home schools are not really schools.

Murray's ruling prohibits Texas school districts from pursuing charges against parents who teach at home. But his ruling does give school district truant officers the authority to check occasionally to ensure that school-age children are in school — whether public or private.
