Buckling down

Signs like this one started going up all over Odessa this week, urging motorists to achieve a 70 percent compliance rate with the state seat belt law by the end of 1990.

New signs urge Odessans to wear their seat belts

By DAVID MORRIS
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Seat belt use in Texas is the law, but some people haven't gotten the message.

In 1989, only 48 percent of Odessa motorists wore their seat belts, compared with 70 percent in Midland, Texas Transportation Institute survey results show.

The State Highway Department hopes 24 signs which started going up this week along Odessa roadways will encourage drivers there to buckle up at a rate equal to that of their Midland counterparts.

The 18-by-24 inch signs read "70/90 — Buckle Up Odessa." The numbers symbolize achievement of 70 percent compliance with the seat belt law by the end of 1990, Highway Department spokesman Richard Phillips said Thursday.

To pique driver interest, the signs' lower sections have been obscured by question marks which will be removed in February as part of National Child Passenger Safety Awareness Week, Phillips said.

Department of Public Safety Lt. Jimmie Rhoads credits the 1985 seat belt law with a reduction in statewide traffic fatality rates. He said seat belts don't guarantee survival in an accident, but they improve the odds.

Sonic boom stirs some shockwaves

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A group of U.S. military jets — perhaps Air Force F-16 fighters — screaming through the West Texas sky Friday broke the sound barrier and resulted in hundreds of calls to public safety agencies from those who heard the sonic boom.

"They have been calling us too," said Marcy Blauvelt, spokeswoman for Midland International Airport. "We've gotten calls that for a while were one right after the other."

Although residents throughout the area heard the clap right before 5 p.m., which many likened to an explosion or thunder, apparently the aircraft were flying too high to be seen.

"We didn't see them, the (control) tower didn't see them," Ms. Blauvelt said. "All we heard was the sonic boom. Some people called from 10 miles north of the airport, some people called from Odessa. We had calls from downtown Midland."

A Midland fire dispatcher said as many as 250 calls flooded the switchboard there. Midland County Sheriff's dispatchers reported about a dozen calls.

"Some officers also reported it on the radio," Sheriff Gary Painter said. "But none of the officers saw the airplanes."

Only a handful of callers dialed the Department of Public Safety in Midland to ask about the boom, a dispatcher said.

Midland airport officials said the military jets were not involved in any local operations. A call to the Federal Aviation Administration Fort Worth Center resulted in an unconfirmed report that the boom was caused by four F-16 fighters from San Antonio's Kelly Air Force Base.

"They told us that when they flew over they were three miles from our airport," Ms. Blauvelt said. "They thought they were flying at 41,000 feet and were a flight of four F-16s."

But later, the Fort Worth facility reported to Midland officials that the F-16 report could not be confirmed.

The identity of the jets may never be known, Ms. Blauvelt said.

Jobless rate holds steady

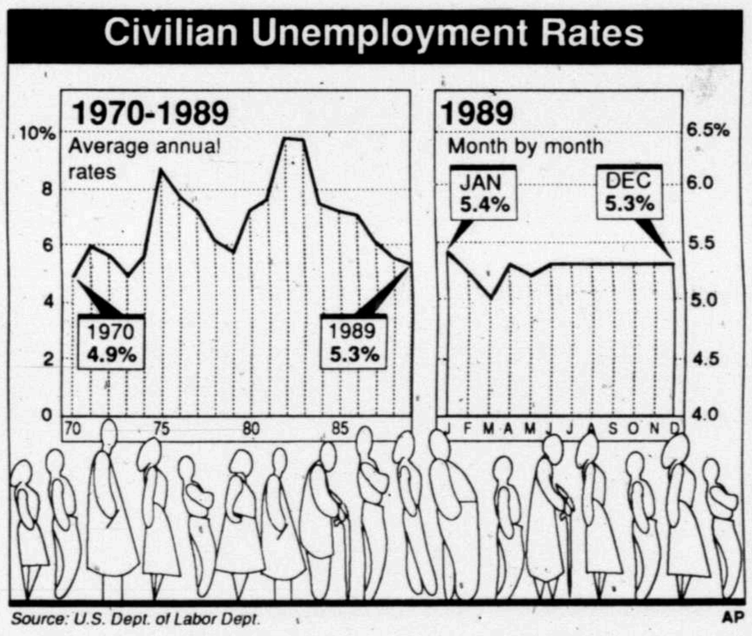

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate held steady at 5.3 percent last month as gains in service industries offset the ninth consecutive monthly drop in manufacturing jobs, the Labor Department said Friday.

The steady civilian jobless rate, which ended 1989 just under the level where it began, gave private analysts hope that the economy's current sluggish growth will not worsen into a recession.

"That's a good number and it certainly suggests that the economy isn't falling out of bed," said Robert Dederick, chief economist for the Northern Trust Co. of Chicago.

In other good economic news, the Commerce Department said Friday that orders to U.S. factories for manufactured goods, which have been lackluster in recent months, shot up 2.4 percent in November to a seasonally adjusted $239.7 billion, their best showing since April.

County residents urged to register with new 911

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

The top guns of Midland's fire, police and sheriff's office agencies asked rural-area residents Friday to make sure their correct addresses are registered for the enhanced 911 system.

Chief Richard Czech of the Midland Police Department said the addresses of possibly 275 residences outside the city have not been entered into 911 computers.

Either their telephone numbers do not match the addresses or no address is registered at all, he said.

Emergency dispatchers have been testing the new system, expected to go on-line March 3, since early last month by calling from various locations around the city and county. About 2,700 calls have been made.

Unlike the current system, when a 911 dispatcher picks up a call, the caller's address and telephone number appear on a nearby computer screen.

Czech said enhanced 911 hookup is expected to be 99 percent complete when it begins operating.

"There's no other system in the state that's done that," he said of the almost error-free system which will have more than 58,000 access lines.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said it has been difficult sometimes to find the source of an emergency call under the current 911 system, which does not automatically display an address.

Dispatchers have had to rely on the caller to find the location, Painter said.

Midland Fire Department Chief James Roberts related one incident where a boy called saying his home was on fire. The boy had given only a street name before he fled the burning house.

Bushes have worked to keep public, private lives apart

EDITOR'S NOTE: President and Mrs. George Bush today observed their 45th wedding anniversary. In a two-part series following exclusive interviews the Bushes speak warmly and candidly about their marriage and why they believe it has been so successful.

By TRUDE B. FELDMAN

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Barbara and George Bush today celebrate their 45th wedding anniversary. Their years as a couple have spanned an important period in American and world history — with Bush himself often a key participant. Yet they have been successful in making sure that the turmoil and the pressures stopped at the threshold of their home.

Over the years, the Bushes have always shared the same outlook as to their family life and the importance of its stability, as well as their religious faith.

Their relationship illustrates the axiom that love is not just looking into one another's eyes, but looking in the same direction.

Sitting in the Oval Office and reminiscing, President Bush describes his first meeting with Barbara Pierce — 48 years ago.

"I first met her at Christmastime, just after Pearl Harbor was attacked. The United States was at war, so I guess you might call ours a wartime romance. To me, to this very day, it has been a classic love story."

Seventeen-year-old Bush was at a Christmas dance at the Greenwich Country Club in Greenwich, Conn., where he grew up. (His father Prescott was a U.S. senator from Connecticut from 1952 to 1962.)

When he first saw 16-year-old Barbara, he summoned the courage to ask a mutual friend for an introduction. "She was wearing a red and green dress, all Christmasy, and she was beautiful," the president tells me. "That and her friendly smile were what first attracted me."

He asked her for the next dance. But when the band began to play a waltz, he told her he didn't know how to waltz, so they sat out that dance and began to talk. They catted through the next three dances. "We found we had a lot in common, even our senses of humor," he recalls. "I wanted to see her again."

He did see her again — "a night or two later" — at another Christmas dance, this one in nearby Rye, N.Y., Barbara's hometown. "We both went back to school, but during spring vacation we saw each other quite a bit," Bush says. "Then I took her to my senior prom at Andover." (The president graduated from Phillips Academy in Andover, Mass., on June 4, 1942, and eight days later, on his 18th birthday, he enlisted in the U.S. Navy as a seaman second class.)

Barbara Bush recalls that George was not only extremely handsome, but also very pleasant. "It wasn't love at first sight," she adds, "but we enjoyed each other's company from the start."

Her younger brother Scott Pierce says that if it wasn't love at first sight, it was close — "perhaps love at second sight."

He remembers the first time he saw George Bush. "It was soon after he met my sister," Pierce relates. "She insisted the family attend a basketball game between the local team and the visiting all-stars. It wasn't until we got to the YMCA that we realized the reason for her insistence — George Bush was playing. I was 11 years old and my first impression was that her boyfriend wasn't too good a player.

"I think Barbara knew this was more than a rush because it was the first time she had given notice to the family that here was a guy she really liked."

Even though she had other boyfriends, Barbara admits that George was the first boy she ever kissed. Bush's mother, Dorothy Walker Bush, believes her son "never had any sweethearts before Barbara." His older brother Prescott says that if George Bush did, they were "not serious ones."

With Barbara Pierce however, the romance turned serious less than one year after they met. And in August 1943, while she was visiting the Bush family in Kennebunkport, Maine, she and George became engaged.

She soon endeared herself to the Bush-Walker family with her spunky personality and lack of pretense.

"I still recall when George first told us he had met the niftiest girl," the president's mother tells me. "Barbara was outgoing and lots of fun."

Dorothy Bush, now 88 years old, remembers her as a wholesome teenager with a cheerful disposition. "As the family got to know her, we grew to love her," she says, "Over the years Barbara has been like a daughter to me."

Mrs. Bush adds that even though Barbara and George were "quite young" when they wanted to get married (three years after they first met), she and George's father felt they were "sensible people" who were "well suited" for each other.

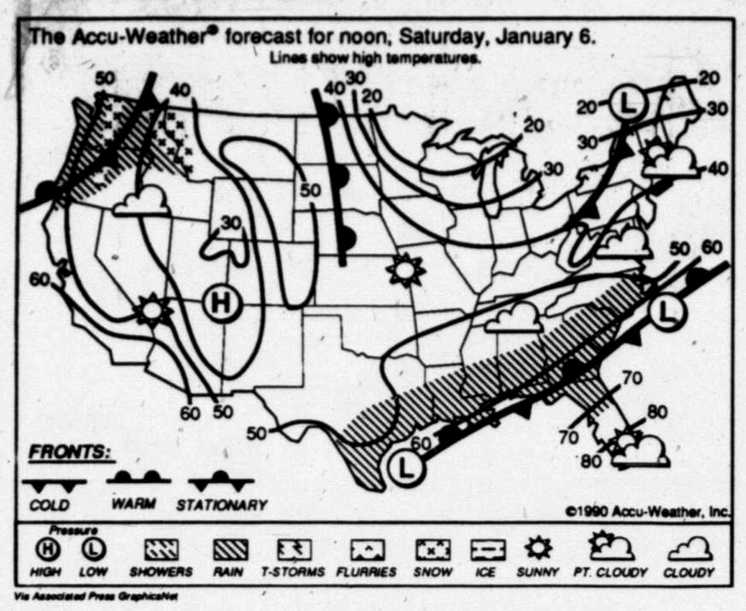

Nonetheless, Barbara Bush believes that if it had not been for the war, neither her family nor George's "would have considered" their marrying so young. "The timing of our wedding," she says, "was set off by the war."

Bush 'not seeking deal' in Noriega drug trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said Friday he is "not seeking a deal" on a reduced charge for Manuel Antonio Noriega and vowed to "bend over backwards" to avoid saying anything that would interfere with the deposed Panamanian ruler's trial.

"Our case is strong, our resolve is firm and our legal representations are sound," Bush told a nationally televised news conference after discussing Noriega's prosecution on drug-trafficking charges with Attorney General Dick Thornburgh.

Bush also announced he is dispatching Vice President Dan Quayle on a fence-mending tour of Latin America "within the next several days" to explain the U.S. military action and muster support for the new Panamanian government of Guillermo Endara.

Conceding the Dec. 20 U.S. invasion of Panama had upset U.S. allies in Central and South America, the president said: "I am concerned, because I am well aware of how our friends south of our border ... look at the use of American force anywhere."

But, he added, "I think it's something that's correctable."

Bush said he had "no immediate plans" to visit Panama. However, an administration official, who declined to be identified, said a presidential visit is under consideration and that Panama might also be included on Quayle's itinerary.

The president called revitalizing Panama's economy "a major priority" to help it recover from the U.S. military invasion and economic sanctions. He did not put a price tag on the U.S. aid, but some estimates for the damage have run as high as $2 billion.

Even as he savored Noriega's capture, Bush said he would be "ever mindful" of the legal process from now on, suggesting he would refrain from his previous characterizations of Noriega as a "thug" and criminal.

"He is now in custody. Time for rhetoric is over," he said.

Bush said he was convinced Noriega would get a fair trial and "I am going to bend over backwards and not answer hypothetical questions or not do anything that might prejudice that."

With Noriega securely in U.S. custody in Florida, Bush said he hoped to bring U.S. combat troops home from Panama "as soon as possible." But he declined to give a timetable.

Still, he ruled out a long-term peacekeeping role for U.S. troops. "I'd like to see their police forces, whatever emerges, reconstituted," Bush said. Noriega's Panamanian Defense Forces were decimated in the U.S. military action.

Bush said the some 12,000 troops stationed at U.S. bases in Panama before the invasion would be left there, but would not serve a police role.

Some 2,900 combat troops were brought home this week, leaving about 24,500 military personnel, according to the Pentagon.

In an opening statement at his news conference, Bush said, "Our government is not seeking a deal with Noriega. Our policy remains that we have brought him to this country for prosecution."

"We are committed to a fair trial and to providing all the protections guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution and laws," Bush added.

Asked if he would rule out a plea bargain with Noriega — perhaps offering reduced charges to Noriega in exchange for his information on drug-trafficking — Bush said, "I'm not ruling it in."

He added: "I'm just saying he's got his rights and he ought — we ought not to stand up here and try t define narrowly what they are."

In Miami, Noriega attorney Steven Kollin said Noriega wasn't interested in a plea bargain. "A man who is innocent is not receptive to any plea bargain."

13 charged in family's deaths

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Authorities charged 13 former members of a religious commune with murder or conspiracy after the bodies of a family of five were found buried at an Ohio farm in what a prosecutor Friday called a human sacrifice.

Seven of those charged were arrested in the Kansas City area by Friday afternoon, said George Rodriguez of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms in Kansas City. Six others were being sought.

"Two of those arrested have confessed to their participation in the mass murders," Rodriguez said at a news conference. He said authorities have a motive but would not release it.

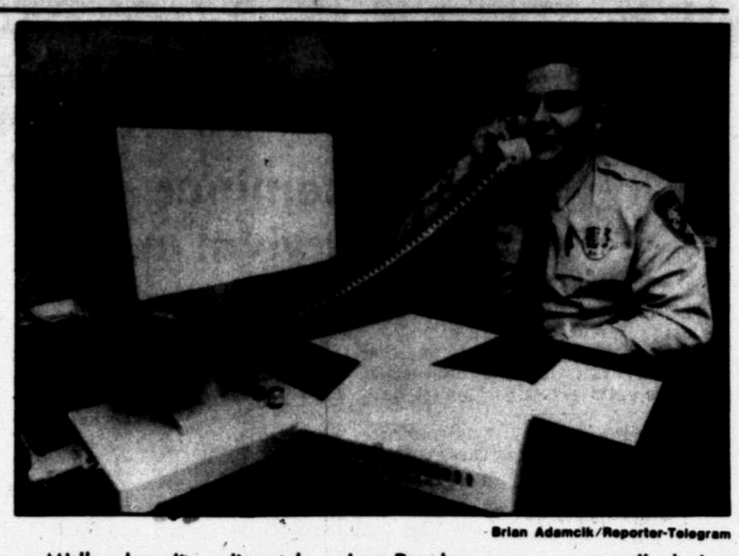

In Cleveland, Lake County Prosecutor Steven C. LaTourette said the indicted cult members "are not crazy. They are the coolest, most inhuman people this town has ever seen."

He said the Averys apparently were killed because of commune leader Jeffrey Lundgren's interpretation of a prophecy that members had to be sacrificed before the group could relocate to the wilderness.

The 13 were indicted by a Lake County grand jury Friday on murder or conspiracy charges.

No federal charges were filed in the case, and Rodriguez said the defendants will be extradited to Ohio to face state charges.

Five of those in custody waived extradition at a Jackson County, Mo., court hearing Friday afternoon. The two other suspects in custody won't have extradition hearings until Monday.

"We drove up and down the street until we found the smoke," Roberts said.

Painter said enhanced 911 will greatly decrease the time it takes for officials to reach an emergency.

"It will be probably one of the biggest benefits to Midland County that has ever come along," he said.

To make the system as effective as it already is, Midland County engineers and U.S. Postal Service officials have been reassigning rural addresses for the past three years, Painter said.

Roberts said other systems statewide have only been between 40 percent and 60 percent completed when they went on-line.

"It's working," he said. "We have a very low error rate on the whole system."

Czech urged citizens who have unregistered addresses or ones which do not correlate with their telephone numbers to call 683-9911.

Some residents have been afraid to report their addresses, Czech said. However, he assured the addresses would be kept confidential.

In addition, Czech requested residents to allow 911 officials into their homes to make sure the telephone was hooked into the system. He said the officials will be carrying proper identification.

Enhanced 911, which will be housed in the city's new building at 601 N. Loraine St., is only part of the changes safety officials will make in coming months.

The center will serve as the main location for the Midland Emergency Communications District. Police, fire, ambulance and sheriff's office emergency calls will be fielded and dispatched by officials working in a room of the Loraine Center.

Man released after arrest for 'retaliation'

From Staff Reports

A Midland man is out on bond today after being arrested Thursday morning by Odessa police for allegedly striking an Odessa convenience store employee in December.

Odessa Police Department spokesman Cpl. John McAhon said Ricardo R. Leyva, 27, who gave a home address of 3210 Roosevelt in Midland, was arrested about 8 a.m. Thursday at 2811 S.W. Loop 250 in Midland. He was taken to Odessa Municipal Court and charged with retaliation, a third degree felony.

He was transferred to the Ector County Jail and was out on $10,000 bond by 5:45 p.m. Thursday, jail records show.

McAhon said Leyva is accused of striking Oscar S. Ornelas, 40, of Odessa outside the Seven-Eleven store in the 1200 block of North Crane in Odessa the evening of Dec. 24, 1989.

Ornelas was taken to Medical Center Hospital in Odessa with undisclosed injuries. He was treated and released, hospital records show.

Midland police were called to assist with the arrest Thursday, but MPD spokesman Cpl. Jim White said Leyva was already in custody by the time Midland officers arrived.

BOOM

"I wouldn't know who to call," she said. "There are bases north of here and south of here."

Some reports of broken windows were also reported by residents, Ms. Blauvelt noted.

An aircraft flying the speed of sound moves just as fast as the air disturbance it causes. The disturbances "pile up" in front of the plane and form a shock wave.

When a jet flies faster than the speed of sound — and when the shock wave reaches the ground — it is heard in the form of a booming or clapping noise.

BELTS

In 1984, there were 2,342 traffic fatalities in Texas, and about 91 percent of those killed were not wearing safety belts, DPS figures show.

In 1986, the year after the law was enacted, 2,072 people died on Texas roads, down 12 percent from 1984. About 69 percent of those killed were not wearing seat belts.

In 1988, 2,013 traffic deaths occurred, down 14 percent from 1984. About 71 percent of those killed were not wearing seat belts.

"You're 25 times more likely to be killed (in an accident) if you're not wearing your belt than if you are," Rhoads said. "It keeps that second collision from happening inside the car — with the steering wheel, with the dashboard, with the windshield."

Rhoads said seat belts also prevent passengers being thrown through the windshield.

"There's a much greater chance of staying alive if you can stay in that car," he said.

Rhoads said he did not know why compliance with the seat belt law is lower in Odessa than in Midland.

"Possibly they just enforce it more here than they do there," he said. "But that would be pure speculation."

Midland Police Department figures show that in 1988, Midland police issued 633 tickets for failure to wear seat belts. Last year, that number was up to 1,280. The penalty is $40 for drivers and passengers and $35 for unrestrained children.

Ticket figures for Odessa were not available. The Odessa Police Department does not keep a categoric record of traffic tickets, department officials said Thursday.

Odessa Police Lt. Victor Crumrine said that Odessa police might not be enforcing the law as vigorously as Midland police.

"The officer at his discretion can enforce that law," Crumrine said. "It could be that Midland police were enforcing the law more. It would depend on the particular officers."

Out of 67 cities surveyed, the Texas Transportation Institute lists Odessa as number five in the rate of accidents in which either a driver or passenger was not wearing a seat belt. Midland was 34th in the survey.

The Institute is a division of Texas A&M University.

In 1988, Midland had 2,529 traffic accidents, 1,294 injuries and eight fatalities, Highway Department figures show. Odessa had 2,698 accidents, 1,536 injuries and 15 fatalities.

Phillips said he hopes the Highway Department's signs will increase Odessans' awareness of the seatbelt law and bring down the number of traffic injuries and deaths.

"We would hope to see some improvement," Phillips said. "We would hope it would help to move the ranking more in line with Midland."

JOBS

The increased demand was widespread across most industries, led by another big jump in orders for aircraft. Economists said the rise in orders, if it continues in coming months, should halt the slide in manufacturing employment, probably by the middle of next year.

Analysts were still concerned that the slowdown in the overall economy, which many feared would last until the spring, would translate into higher jobless rates in the months ahead.

"There definitely is some weakness out there in the land. ... The steady growth of the service industry is what's keeping us from slipping into a recession," said economist Cynthia Latta of DRI-McGraw Hill.

During all of last year, the unemployment rate fluctuated in a narrow range within a tenth of a percentage point of 5.3 percent, except for March when it dipped to a 15-year low of 5 percent. The average for the year was 5.3 percent.

Based on a workplace survey, manufacturing industries lost another 25,000 jobs in December, bringing factory job losses since March to 195,000. U.S. manufacturing suffered in 1989 with widespread layoffs in auto plants and other factories.

Good shoes can make royalty notice

N.Y. Times News Service

LONDON — In Great Britain, pork sausage, fertilizer, shoes, and other everyday goods can break into the rarefied realm of royalty. Part of the trick is getting noticed by the right people.

The right people in this case are Queen Elizabeth II, the Queen Mother, and Prince Philip, and Price Charles.

The queen allows herself and other members of the royal family the privilege of demonstrating their satisfaction with certain goods and services that their households use by granting what are called royal warrants to the tradesmen who provide them.

More than 850 men and women currently hold the warrants, impressive documents proclaiming that "by command of the queen," a company's goods or services are of a quality that merits official royal recognition.

In a country that still regards the queen as one of its great sources of national pride, a royal warrant provides instant status.

Those on whom the honor is bestowed are allowed to wear a Royal Warrant Holders' Association tie or head scarf, attend a formal luncheon and dinner, as well as the Association's Open Golf Day, and to have sent on their behalf greetings or flowers to members of the royal family on birthdays or other special occasions.

More important, the warrant holders are allowed to display prominently — but, of course, tastefully — the royal coat of arms at the entrance to their establishments, on their packaging and stationery. Their goods and services are elevated to the position of royal goods and services, suggesting that they are the best available.

"IT'S THE CREME de la creme," said John Weatherston, owner of R.G. Hardie & Co. in Glasgow. He holds a royal warrant as maker of the queen's bagpipes, which are played not by the queen but by the Queen's Piper.

"It doesn't cost you anything," he explained, "but by the same token, they can take the royal warrant back without any excuses because it's actually a gift from them to you. If anyone misbehaves, well, the royal family wouldn't like that. After you get it, you meet people in a similar position who are all trying to behave themselves."

Tim Heald, author of a recently published book on the history of the royal warrant and its holders, said that written evidence of the practice dates to the Middle Ages. The warrant is always given to specific individuals who are directors of their companies, Heald said, and never, in a blanket way, to the companies.

People in the professions, like physicians and lawyers, are not eligible to receive warrants. Traders of a variety of descriptions are eligible, but can only apply after regularly serving the royal family for at least three years.

Applications, which must include sales receipts that prove that substantial business is done with royalty, are carefully examined by the Royal Household Tradesmen's Warrants Committee.

The committee also takes a close look at the quality of a company's goods or the standard of its service. But the final decision rests with members of the royal family, who have bestowed the honor on directors of companies that range from Rolls-Royce, Harrods, and Cartieri to Kleen-Way, a company that sweeps chimneys; Ken Whatmough, a fishmonger; and Valerie Bennett-Levy, who holds the royal warrant as the queen's "supplier of nosegays."

From 20 to 30 companies are granted warrants every year, Heald said, and just as many lose them. The warrants, most of which are held by Britons, are reviewed after 10 years.

"REASONS FOR LOSING the royal warrant are never revealed," Heald said, adding that the warrant could be taken back if a company went bankrupt, was taken over by another concern, or no longer supplied the product that originally gained the warrant.

"But if someone exploits the warrant, for example taking a huge advertisement out that said they had it, he would be likely to lose it or at least get a crisp telling off from the palace."

"In other words," Heald writes in his book, "By Appointment: 150 Years of the Royal Warrant and its Holders," "no vulgar exploitation of the warrant is allowed. You would not be allowed to produce 'Royal Oxford Marmalade' with a coat of arms several times bigger than the word 'marmalade,' much less include a line that said, 'As eaten by her majesty the queen on toast for breakfast daily.' That would be very bad form and you would be struck off instantly.

"Yet, the implication of the discreet, tiny coat of arms which is allowed is very much the same," he went on.

"Potential consumers are expected to assume that the queen is indeed in the habit of using all these items regularly. And the message, however subliminal, is that if you too consume them, then an infinitesimal part of the magic of monarchy will rub off on you. Of course, the message must be imparted with the utmost good taste, lest the crown be thought to be endorsing a commercial product for commercial gain. But provided the taste is good — in every sense — the message may be sent."

The Royal Warrant Holders' Association, which has offices opposite the rear entrance of Buckingham Palace, helps keep track of the use of the warrant.

Austin's first baby of 1980s hopes 1990s will be cheerier

AUSTIN (AP) — Putting his first 10 years behind him, the first baby born in Austin in the 1980s has three goals for the 1990s — be a grown-up, own a house and become a police officer.

Lupe Morones is hoping the next decade will be kinder to him. During the 1980s, Lupe's parents separated, his father was sent to prison, his mother run over and killed by a taxi-cab, and his grandfather twice underwent major surgery.

But all is not sad for Lupe, who attends special education classes at Galindo Elementary School.

"It was a happy time when my mother was alive, and it is still a happy time," said Lupe. "My mom used to be a happy person with us, and she wants me to be happy."

Lupe started his second decade with a lively birthday party at an uncle's country house Monday.

On Jan. 1, 1980, Emma Morones and Felix Morones proudly held up their son, Lupe, who was captured in an Austin American-Statesman photograph the next day as "Decade's First."

Lupe's mother and grandparents taught him how to deal with his parents' separation in 1987, and the 5-year prison sentence his father received in March 1988 for arson and sexual assault.

Lupe was living in his grandparents' home when his mom was struck and killed by a taxi as she crossed a city street in the rain last June.

Lupe grows quiet when the accident is mentioned.

"It still worries me," he said. "I don't like to talk about what happened to her."

Grandparents Eulalio and Emilia Arevalo, who raised three of their own children, have health problems that so far have not interfered with their task of raising five grandchildren.

Emilia Arevalo, 69, is diabetic. Her husband Eulalio, 70, had surgery for colon cancer two years ago and received a pacemaker for his heart the week before Christmas.

STATE

Harris County judges hold strategy session

HOUSTON (AP) — About 50 Harris County district judges met in an unprecedented strategy session to divvy up the county in a way to keep incumbents on the bench.

The bipartisan assembly met Thursday to decide who would go where after U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton earlier this week ordered non-partisan judicial elections in nine urban counties in May. Under the Bunton plan, 26 legislative districts will elect 36 judges in Harris County.

Also Thursday, State District Judge Sharolyn Wood filed a motion with the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans to block Bunton's order.

But Harris County Administrative Judge Miron Love cautioned the judges the current system of at-large partisan elections will likely not be in place for the upcoming election.

He urged the 34 judges who plan to seek re-election to avoid running against each other in the legislative districts.

Ten of the districts with a high concentration of minorities will elect two judges. Love noted that a few districts already are crowding with candidates.

The interim plan allows judges to run in districts where they do not reside, a benefit in this case since a high concentration of judges live in the central, south and southwest areas of the county, Love said.

Bunton's order applies in nine urban counties — Bexar, Dallas, Harris, Travis, Tarrant, Jefferson, Lubbock, Ector and Midland.

Bunton ruled in November that the current system of at-large elections discriminates against minorities, and asked the League of United Latin American Citizens, who brought the case in Midland, and Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox to submit an interim plan for judicial elections.

The Mattox-LULAC plan, calling for partisan judicial elections along legislative boundaries, was criticized by the judges who said it would bring substandard judges to the courts at the expense of experienced, longtime judges.

Mattox said Thursday he will petition Bunton to reconsider the Mattox-LULAC plan.

By HOLDEN LEWIS

LUBBOCK (AP) — Election administrators Friday said the legal tug-of-war over a special judicial election ordered by a federal judge won't give them much time to prepare ballots and polls.

"I think the people making the decisions are more confused than the ones administering the elections," said Robert Parten, elections administrator for Tarrant County.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton of Midland on Tuesday ordered special elections May 5 for 115 district judges in nine urban counties. He said the system violated the Voting Rights Act by illegally diluting the votes of minorities.

Attorney General Jim Mattox has asked the judge to change his order to make the elections partisan. Other state officials want the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals to stay Bunton's order and allow elections as usual — with judges running in the March 13 primary and November general election — while Bunton's decision is appealed.

Until the legal battle is resolved, elections administrators don't know whether to place judges' names on the March 13 primary ballot, whether they need to prepare a separate set of judicial ballots for May 5, whether party affiliations will be listed on the ballots or when runoffs will be held.

"I wouldn't say it's confusing," said Doris Ruff, Lubbock County's chief deputy clerk. "We're more in limbo and have to wait to see what happens."

"I really don't have many answers for office-holders and candidates," said Tony Gomez, the Bexar County elections administrator in San Antonio.

There isn't much time to work problems out because absentee voting in the primary begins Feb. 20, and ballots and polling places need to be prepared about three weeks before that, said Bruce Sherbet, Dallas County elections administrator.

"We have some difficulty in planning this," Sherbet said. "That's four elections in four months, and we might have close-to-overlapping absentee periods, and we might have trouble getting materials out and back in and back out again."

It would cost Dallas County taxpayers $500,000 to $1 million to hold special judicial elections in May and runoffs in June, Sherbet said.

Freeze damage 'horrible'

WESLACO (AP) — The head of a federal delegation surveying brown, wilted crops and groves devastated by a hard freeze last month said Friday the damage was worse than he expected, and estimated the government probably would provide at least $100 million in aid.

"I don't like what I've seen at all," Jerry Harris, chairman of the state committee of the Agriculture Department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said after he toured sugar cane and vegetable fields and citrus groves.

"It's just horrible," Harris said. "It's devastating what it's going to do to this area's economy."

Harris said he thought President Bush would declare the area a disaster area and move quickly to keep producers, packers, shippers and farm workers in the industry.

Gov. Bill Clements on Tuesday made the disaster request, but Bush by Friday afternoon had not authorized assistance. The governor said initial estimates show the freeze just before Christmas caused about $385 million in damage to crops, agricultural businesses and lost wages.

An estimated 70 percent of the citrus crop remaining on the trees was destroyed, and many trees are expected to die.

Harris toured damaged areas Friday with officials from the Small Business Administration, Farmers Home Administration and the Agriculture Department.

Citrus grower Donald Thompson showed the widening cracks that eventually will kill his grapefruit trees.

"As it gets warmer, the cracks are going to get bigger," said Thompson of his grove near Weslaco.

Ruined grapefruit from the trees he had to plant after a devastating 1983 freeze lay rotting on the ground. The freeze also turned the leaves brown and dry.

"Good growers may not replant because they don't have the resources to do so," said Richard Hensz, director of the Texas A&I Citrus Center in Weslaco.

He said Thompson's trees probably would die, and that it takes about five years for new trees to reach full production.

"It's going to be tough to get new people to come into this industry, having two freezes this close together," Ray Prewett, executive director of Texas Citrus Mutual told Harris.

The Texas citrus industry on about 35,000 acres had just begun to rebound from the 1983 freeze.

In a sugar cane field several miles away, Jack Nelson cut open a cane stalk and showed pulp made yellow by the freeze. Healthy cane is white inside.

Nelson, president of the Rio Grande Valley Sugar Growers, said one-third to nearly one-half of the $43 million crop could be lost.

Nine environmental protesters arrested at Austin loop site

AUSTIN (AP) — Nine demonstrators were charged with criminal trespass Friday after locking themselves to road construction equipment to protest the building of an outer loop around the city, officials said.

The misdemeanor charge carries a maximum penalty of six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

The protest began in southwest Travis County about 4 a.m. and ended about 11:30 a.m., when the demonstrators from the group Earth First! finally were separated from the machinery, said Sgt. J.P. Beck of the Travis County Sheriff's Department.

Sheriff's officers handling the protest first called in a locksmith, who drilled the cylinders out of two of the locks after unsuccessfully trying to pick them, Beck said.

Five locks were cut off with a grinder, and two were unlocked by the protesters, he said.

The Oak Hill fire department stood by with the "jaws of life," but officers decided against using the mechanism because of the possibility of injury, Sgt. Mike Miller said. The jaws frequently are used to free people from wrecked cars.

Sgt. Miller said there were about six officers at the protest, and they estimated the incident cost roughly $30,000 in law enforcement and other expenses.

"We had a bunch of people tied up on that," Miller said. "They figured it was kind of an expensive deal for people in the county."

STATE in brief

Feb. 27 likely date for session

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements may call a special legislative session beginning Feb. 27 on public school finance reform, leaving time for a second 30-day session on the issue before a May 1 deadline imposed by the Texas Supreme Court, the governor's press secretary said Friday.

"One of the reasons the governor is looking at the 27th, or around that date, is to give the Legislature enough time for two full sessions, if that's what's necessary," said Rossanna Salazar, Clements' press secretary. "He does believe that would be enough time."

The Supreme Court unanimously declared the state's school finance system unconstitutional in October, after finding glaring disparities between property-rich and -poor school districts.

The court gave the state until May 1 to devise a new public school funding plan, and Clements has said he will call a special session on the issue this spring.

Settlement a 'victory'

AUSTIN (AP) — Street people who sued the city after their slogan-plastered, makeshift houseboats were removed from Town Lake say the $38,000 settlement is a victory for their cause.

Most of the money is expected to go for legal fees. But James Williams, who led the fight against the city for the Street People's Advisory Council, said the suit accomplished a goal.

"I really feel it was a victory for the homeless and the poor," said Williams. "We got the people's attention and we did get the city's attention. I hope the City Council will go forward and try to make some meaningful changes for the homeless in Austin."

City Council Member Max Nofziger also called the settlement a victory for the street people, "both in drawing people's attention for their causes and for hauling the city into court and winning."

Williams said he hopes to use part of his settlement money for a one-way ticket to Europe.

IRS missing collections

AUSTIN (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service is failing to collect billions of dollars in taxes because it lacks the money and staff to do the job effectively, according to a study by a U.S. House subcommittee.

The yearlong study concluded that the ability of the IRS to manage the nation's tax system effectively, and to enforce tax laws, is being jeopardized.

"It is obvious the IRS needs more resources to do the job," said U.S. Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle, who headed the oversight subcommittee. "While the IRS does the best it can with the resources given, the agency is severely crippled with its current budget."

Sally Sassen, a spokeswoman for the IRS Austin operations, acknowledged the lean budgets.

TDH now testing milk

FORT WORTH (AP) — The Texas Department of Health is awaiting results of tests that will determine whether milk sold in the Dallas-Fort Worth area contains traces of potentially hazardous antibiotics.

State health officials joined the U.S. Food and Drug Administration in the milk-testing effort after news accounts reported tainted milk in several large U.S. cities.

The state took samples of unpasteurized, raw milk from tanks at processing plants in Dallas, Waco and Fort Worth to test for sulfamethazine, said James Fraley of the department's milk and dairy products division in Austin. Results should be back early next week, he said.

"We're doing it in reaction to this recent concern," Fraley said. "We tested very intensely up until about six months ago and quit when we didn't find anything after three months.

"But I don't want to be the one to say there's nothing out there. So we're doing the tests."

The tests are in addition to the monthly sampling the department conducts at each Texas dairy farm and of each retail milk or dairy product processed in the state. Under an interstate agreement, those routine tests do not analyze for sulfamethazine, which is suspected of causing cancer.

BUSH: 'You might call ours wartime romance'

From their wedding 45 years ago, left, to the presidential inaugural ball in Washington, D.C., dancing, along with such physical pursuits as swimming and tennis, have had a part in the private lives of George and Barbara Bush.

Scott Pierce adds, "My dad loved George and, early on, recognized greatness in him. So my parents (Marvin and Pauline Pierce) supported the marriage — even though, ideally, they would've preferred that both finish college first." (Barbara Pierce left Smith College in her sophomore year to marry George Bush. He later graduated from Yale in 1948.)

Bush had earned his wings in June 1943, becoming the youngest pilot commissioned by the Navy. In September 1944 his plane, with the name "Barbara" painted on it, was shot down in the Pacific, but he was rescued, and by Christmas Eve, was home on leave. Five days later he served as best man at the wedding of his brother Prescott to Elizabeth (Beth) Kauffman.

"George brought Barbara to our wedding," Beth Bush recalls. "she was lovely looking, with big eyes that seemed to grow larger whenever she looked at George. It was as if she couldn't believe he was home after all the dangers he had been through."

A week later, on Jan. 6, 1945, Prescott was best man as George and Barbara were married in her family church in Rye.

"At her wedding Barbara looked radiant and was full of enthusiasm about their future together," Prescott recalls. "And today, while I'm proud of what George has accomplished, in speaking of his success I always include Barbara, because she had a tremendous amount to do with my brother's achievements."

At that time (1945) a man under 21 years old had to have parental consent to marry; a woman over 18 did not. Beth Bush remembers that 19½-year-old Barbara was "really tickled" that her 20½-year-old fiance — a war hero with a Distinguished Flying Cross — needed his parents' permission to marry and she did not.

Jim Pierce, Barbara's older brother, missed the wedding because he was in the Navy. But he likes to feel that somehow he shared in the spirit of the occasion. "My mother and I were co-owners of war bonds," he says, "and she cashed them in to help pay for Barbara's wedding."

Fourteen-year-old Scott was groomsman at his sister's wedding and recalls there were many guests in military garb. "George looked tall and skinny in his Navy uniform," he says. "For a teenager like me it was a festive, adult event and fun to lead the procession with George's brother Jonathan."

The bride and groom honeymooned at The Cloister in Sea Island, Ga. The resort recently hosted a party for its 32,000th honeymoon couple. From the White House Barbara Bush wrote the Social Director that she and the president couldn't attend the event, but were "pleased and amused to learn we were 'Couple 1,768.'"

SUNDAY: George and Barbara Bush discuss their "special relationship" and say looking at the positive side of life was important to their marital success.

Barbara Bush told Jackson 'displeased'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said Friday that former Democratic presidential hopeful Jesse Jackson registered his disagreement with the U.S. military invasion of Panama in a telephone call to the president's wife, Barbara.

Asked at a news conference if the Dec. 20 invasion was a "political jackpot," Bush said, "Well, Jesse Jackson doesn't think so. He talked to my wife. And so there's differences of opinion on that."

He did not elaborate on Jackson's call. Presidential press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Jackson called Mrs. Bush on Thursday "to inquire about her health. He also raised the issue of Panama. I guess he said the same things he's been saying in the press," the spokesman added.

Mrs. Bush's press secretary, Anna Perez, confirmed that Jackson called to talk about Mrs. Bush's health, the subject of recent news accounts because she is undergoing radiation treatment for a persistent eye ailment.

But Perez declined to give further details of the call.

Asked if Jackson and Mrs. Bush conversed often, she said, "I don't think they're phone pals."

Jackson has said the invasion caused a loss of the U.S. "moral authority."

He said in comments published in the Los Angeles Times that the action dealt a setback to the war on drugs, jeopardized the upcoming drug summit in Colombia, "undermined the global movement toward peaceful democratic change and respect for the rule of law and revived a long history of imperial interference in Central America."

"One wonders if we have damaged our national soul to feed our national ego," he wrote. "In a world rapidly turning away from military solutions, the American action looks morally untenable and obsolete."

Bush says TV made him seem 'indifferent'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said today that some Americans got the wrong impression that he "didn't give a damn" about U.S. losses in Panama because television had shown him in a "frivolous" mood while split-screen TV carried pictures of GIs' bodies being taken from a plane.

At today's news conference, Bush took the unusual step of appealing to the television networks to give him warning when they use the split screen technique while he was conducting a news conference. He said if a competing news event were so urgent as to justify the use of that technique, he would stop the news conference.

"I could understand why the viewers were concerned about this," Bush said. "They thought that their president at a solemn moment like that didn't give a damn. And I do, I do, I feel it so strongly."

Toward the end of his Dec. 21 news conference, a relaxed Bush was seen on television bantering with reporters while, one by one, the flag-draped coffins of Americans killed in the Panama operation also were shown as they were carried from a just-arrived transport plane at Dover Air Force Base, Del.

It was evident to viewers that Bush was unaware of the image that was going out to the country. The news conference was held in late afternoon just one day after the Panama operation started. In all, 23 American servicemen died during the U.S. intervention.

"I read a lot of mail after the last press conference and I had some calls because when I was speaking here in this room, juxtaposed against my frivilous comments at the time was some split-screen technique which showed the bodies of dead soldiers in caskets coming home," Bush said at the conclusion of today's session.

"I would respectfully request that if the urgency of the moment is such that that technique is going to be used, if I could be told about it, that we stop the proceedings.

"So please help me with this if you would ," Bush said, directing his appeal to the television networks.

The Dec. 21 news conference ended with presidential press secretary Marlin Fitzwater telling reporters to stay in the room to receive Christmas presents. At the same time, honor guards in dress uniform were still solemnly carrying coffins from the plane.

Stuart had been 'routine' suspect after wife's death

BOSTON (AP) — The man who summoned police with his car phone and said a black robber had abducted and shot him and his pregnant wife was only a routine suspect in the case until his own brother gave police evidence of an elaborate, grisly hoax, officials said Friday.

Charles Stuart killed himself Thursday after learning his brother had revealed evidence against him in the Oct. 23 killing of his wife, Carol.

Stuart had been seriously wounded himself. While hospitalized he wrote a moving letter to be read at his wife's funeral. Then he made a dramatic appearance at the deathbed of his newborn son, who was delivered by Caesarean section after the shootings and died 17 days later. And he gave a description of a black man as the killer.

"He thought he had the perfect crime ... the eulogy at the church that he had a friend read ... This guy went way out. He really thought he had a perfect crime," said Reading Police Chief Edward Marchand.

Paul Leary, first assistant Suffolk County district attorney, said although there were some apparent discrepancies in Stuart's account, investigators felt they were not significant enough to pursue. He would not elaborate, citing a grand jury investigation.

But Leary said Stuart was a routine suspect from the beginning because investigators always check out husbands when wives are killed.

Jack Levin, a professor at Northeastern University and expert on crime, said if Stuart was his wife's killer, the crime was so premeditated and elaborate it could only be the work of a sociopath — "the last people you expect. We're talking about the cream of the crop in killing."

The scales tipped when Stuart's brother, Matthew, 23, went to police Wednesday.

The younger Stuart told police his brother asked him to meet him the evening of Oct. 23 in the city's Mission Hill area, which is where the shooting took place, said Matthew's attorney, John Perenyi.

The Stuarts had been at a hospital for birthing classes. Stuart told police a gunman forced them to drive to the Mission Hill area and robbed and shot them. When police found them, Mrs. Stuart was near death in the passenger's seat.

Perenyi said Stuart drove up to the meeting place that evening, tossed a sack to Matthew, who was sitting in his car, and told his younger brother to take it home to Revere, where Matthew lives with their parents.

Stuart suggested to his brother that the bag might have to be disposed of, according to the attorney. Inside the sack, Matthew found a pistol, Mrs. Stuart's supposedly stolen pocketbook and engagement ring, Perenyi said. Matthew took out the ring and disposed of the rest of the items in the Pines River in Revere

After police heard the account from Matthew, police divers found the pocketbook Thursday but not the gun. Matthew gave the engagement ring to investigators Wednesday night.

Paroled killer charged in Rochester slayings

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A paroled killer charged in the slayings of eight women was ordered held without bail Friday and authorities say they have linked the man to a total of 11 killings over the last two years.

The break in the serial slayings was "just a matter of luck," said one of the police officers who spotted the suspect's car from a helicopter.

After his arrest, Arthur Shawcross, 44, of Rochester made statements about the slayings and told police where to find three bodies, said Police Chief Gordon F. Urlacher, who refused to say if the suspect confessed.

A state police source, who spoke on condition on anonymity, said Shawcross had confessed to 11 slayings.

Authorities had been investigating the deaths and disappearances of 16 women in the Rochester area since March 1988 and as recently as Dec. 26. Urlacher and Monroe County District Attorney Howard R. Relin said five of the slayings are not related to the others.

"The number that we believe that he's responsible for was 11," Urlacher said. "We've said all along that we don't believe all these cases were related, and that's the way it turned out."

Most of the women Shawcross is accused of killing were involved in prostitution and drugs, police said.

"He went to them posing as a 'john' (customer), was able to get them in the car, then took control of them — took them to various locations, wherever it might have been," State Police Superintendent Thomas Constantine said in Albany. "In most cases, the death was strangulation."

Constantine also said some victims were mutilated.

Shawcross pleaded innocent to eight counts of second-degree murder in Rochester City Court on Friday. Judge John Manning Regan ordered him held without bail. A preliminary hearing was scheduled for Wednesday.

Shawcross was also charged with one count of patronizing a prostitute.

In addition to the eight cases in which charges were filed, the district attorney said evidence linking Shawcross to three other deaths will be presented to grand juries in Monroe and neighboring Wayne counties.

Relin said Shawcross moved to Rochester in 1987, when he was paroled from prison. He had serving 15 years for the 1972 strangling of 8-year-old Karen Ann Hill of Rochester while she was visiting Watertown, 150 miles to the northeast.

Police said the break in the serial slayings came Wednesday while officers in a helicopter were searching a park 12 miles east of Rochester where clothing of a missing woman had been found. The officers spotted Shawcross' car, then the body of another missing woman.

'Dogs perfect in district; Rebs win

Lee, Odessa High combine for just 69 points

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Editor

Midland Lee's 36-33 District 4-5A basketball victory over Odessa High at Chaparral Center Friday night was a throw back to the days when 69 combined points was a good night's work, but living in the past didn't seem to bother the Rebels in this one.

The main reason is that the victory vaulted the Rebels back into the thick of the 4-5A chase after losing an emotional game to Midland High in the district opener last Tuesday while OHS, considered to have a playoff shot, won its opener against Odessa Permian Tuesday. Now both teams are at 1-1 in the loop chase. Things seem to even up quickly in this wacky loop.

Even though Lee trailed only once in the game (11-8 in the second quarter), the Rebels had to work for every inch of this one.

For one thing, leading scorer Greg Crowe hit only three of 14 shots from the field for seven points while his teammates were hitting a meager one of 14 from the charity stripe, including missing seven straight on the front end of one-and-one situations in a trying fourth quarter.

But even though things didn't turn out rosy in the scoring column (Lee had no player to finish in double figures), they worked hard on defense.

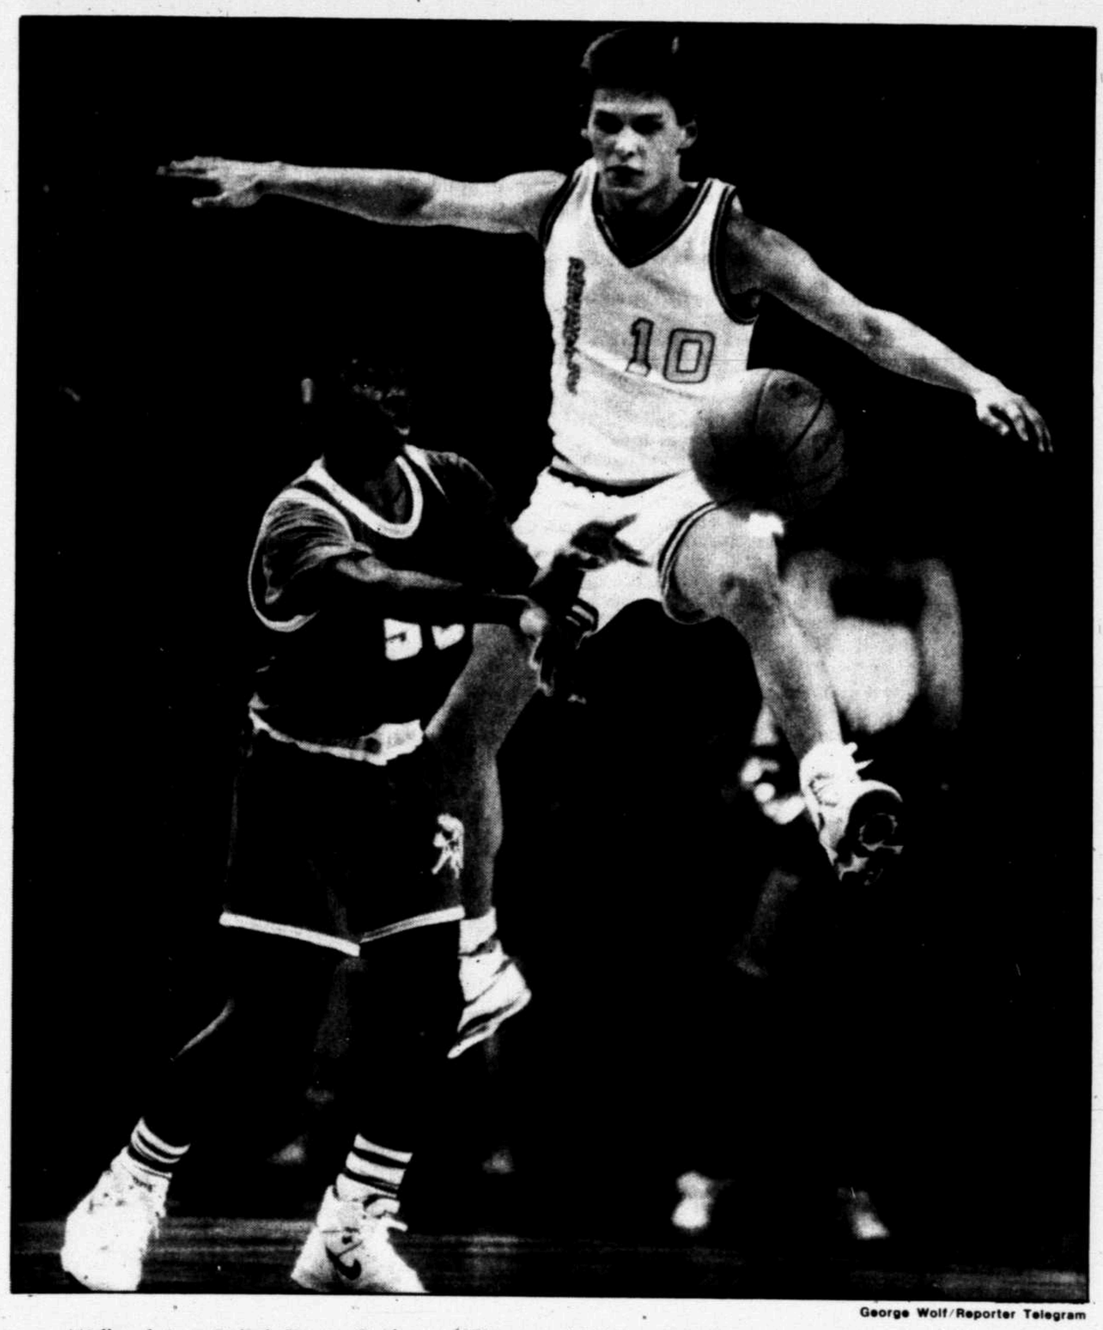

How hard, you ask? Well, George Collins, who had a big 26-point night against Permian Tuesday, was held to a mere three points by David Meade and Bo Blackburn inside. OHS' Ira Young led all scorers with just 12 points and he hit only five of 17 shots from the field. Football and track star Patrick Brown was three of 11 from the field and was held to nine points.

"Odessa High has some great talent on the floor," said Lee coach Paul Stueckler, "but the great thing about basketball is that if you play smart and control the tempo of the game, you have a chance to win. If we did nothing else, we did control the tempo of the game.

"The thing that pleased me most is that I saw our people down and working out there and Odessa just didn't get much penetration on us. And then they didn't hit but one three-point shot in the second half and that came with 1:55 left to play in the game."

Lee put itself in position to win the game in the third period when David Meade scored six of his eight points in a stretch that gave the Rebels a 32-22 lead with 1:22 left in the period.

ODESSA — Call them the Cardiac 'Dogs.

Maybe it's not original, but it fits.

The Midland High boys basketball team showed that it's not a group to be taken lightly in the final minutes by pulling out a 78-76 overtime win over the Odessa Permian Panthers here Friday to take sole possession of first place in District 4-5A.

The Bulldogs, 13-8 overall and 2-0 in district play, have won eight of their 13 games by eight points or less — and had to come from behind in most of those.

"We have a tendency to relax when the score is close," senior guard Keith Gilbreath said, "but when we're behind, we do more of the things we have to do to win."

Permian led for most of the game, but Midland High took the lead in the fourth quarter only to see the game go into overtime at 76-all when Permian's Erskine Talbert cashed in on an offensive rebound with six seconds left in regulation.

The Panthers, 7-11 overall and 0-2 in district play, took a quick three-point lead in overtime and seemed to gain an additional edge when MHS scoring star Michael Wright fouled out 33 seconds into the extra period.

But Gilbreath drove underneath for a layup and the Bulldogs took the lead for good when Gilbreath fed guard mate Scott Melzer for a fast-break layup with about a minute left.

The Bulldogs got some insurance in the final half-minute on a layup by Johnny Mackey and two free throws by Rodrick Hickey, but Permian stayed in the game on a three-pointer by Carlos Ross that cut the Bulldog lead to 84-83 with five seconds left.

After a Permian timeout, the Panthers tried to steal the inbounds pass, but Melzer got the ball to Gilbreath, who was fouled with two seconds left and made one of two free shots to seal the win.

Both MHS coach Jack Stephenson and Permian mentor Willie Spears felt like the Bulldog press tied up the bigger, slower Panthers.

"I think our pressure finally began to tell on them," Stephenson said.

"We didn't attack their press," Spears said. "And when you don't attack it, it attacks you."

The MHS press offset the Bulldogs' cold outside shooting and Permian's ability to work the boards for multiple scoring opportunities. MHS made only 32-of-76 from the field, while Permian made 30-of-65.

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Kent Hull grinned when he was asked if the Buffalo Bills would forget their troubles as they begin the AFC playoffs Saturday against the Cleveland Browns.

"I forgot all about it already," said Hull, the Bills center. "You'll have to refresh my memory."

Fair enough. Most recently was running back Thurman Thomas' public castigation of quarterback Jim Kelly on cable TV. But that hardly does justice to a vitriolic season that started with high hopes and ended with losses in four of six games.

Actually, an incident after last season hinted at the turmoil that would be on display this season.

Ex-Bulldogs hoop it up tonight

A sense of deja vu will fill ol' Midland High gymnasium at 7:30 p.m. today as 40 faces from past take to the court in the Second Annual MHS Alumni Basketball game.

Members of the Bulldog boys basketball teams dating back to 1960 will be teamed by the years of their graduation (even years versus odd years) to raise money for the MHS athletic department. Cost of admission is $3 for adults and $1 for students or children.

In last year's inaugural game the even squad won 74-72 and laid claim to the Doc Dodson Trophy, named for the MHS trainer through all these years.

Trying to even the score for the odd team will be coach Don Humphrey, who will have 17 former Bulldog stars at his disposal. Hoping to give the even squad a 2-0 edge in the series is coach James Cagle, the former MHS mentor who coached several playoff teams in the 1970s and is coming from his teaching job in Carrollton for the affair.

Last year about $800 was raised for the purchase of a new speaker system for the MHS gym, according to MHS Ex-Students Association vice president Lynne Ray. Proceeds from this year's game will also go towards that purchase, with any remaining money going to the MHS athletic department, she said.

Fifteen past Bulldog standouts will come in from cities and towns across the state — places like Amarillo, Austin, Dallas and Houston — with the rest being former MHS players who have stayed in Midland.

Some of the players who will be on hand are Eddie Shirley, who coached at MHS after pulling down all-state honors in 1963, brothers Jimmy and Gary Brewster, and Dick Campbell, a member of the 1960 team that won 30 straight games before falling in the regional playoffs to Pampa. Also playing will be Midlander Steve Melzer (1964), whose son Scott is now a star guard for the 1989-90 Bulldogs.

Ron Taylor, the 6-10 1972 graduate who went on to Midwestern University after leading the 'Dogs to the state finals, survived with the 1977 Houston Rockets until the final cut then returned to Midland.

Pass-happy Niners, Vikes may be grounded at Candlestick

Associated Press

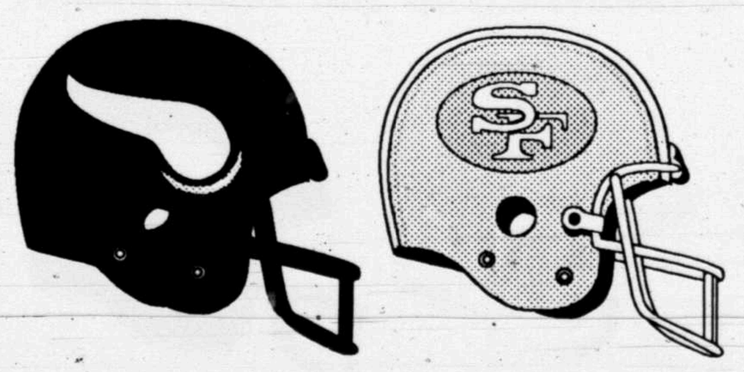

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The passing games are the focus as the Minnesota Vikings and San Francisco 49ers meet in their third NFC playoff game in three years Saturday. A forecast of rain, though, could change that.

When nature takes over at Candlestick Park, anything can happen. The Oakland Athletics and San Francisco Giants can attest to that.

"In the playoffs, you have to be ready for anything," said 49ers running back Roger Craig, speaking more of strategy than of the threat of another earthquake. "Everything's different. You prepare different schemes to try to throw people off."

It was during the Chicago Bears-49ers NFC championship game at Candlestick five years ago in which Bill Walsh used guard Guy McIntyre in the backfield, Craig reminded, and that was "the idea William Perry made millions from."

The 49ers, who own the NFL's No. 1 offense, and the Vikings, with their top-rated defense, know each other so well that, rain or shine, a new wrinkle or two might be in order.

But overall, both sides say they'll rely mainly on what's worked in the past in this rivalry: Anthony Carter and a ferocious pass rush for the Vikings, Joe Montana's quick drop and quicker receivers for the 49ers.

Carter and the Vikings' rush were responsible for Minnesota's 36-24 playoff surprise two years ago, Montana's passing for the 49ers' 34-9 redemption last January.

"I think we can draw a lot from those experiences," said Vikings quarterback Wade Wilson. "We're very familiar with their personnel and their philosophies, and we realize what we have to do to be successful against them."

His favorite target, Carter, hasn't approached the 10-reception, 227-yard game he had in the 1988 playoffs. His teammates and the 49ers both agree he's the one player who most closely approaches the game-breaking talent of San Francisco's Jerry Rice, and Wilson said the Vikings probably will use several formations designed to create single coverage on Carter.

"We have to get the ball to him," Wilson said. "For us, he's the player with the most potential for a big play."

If it rains, San Francisco's ball-control passing game is less likely to be affected than Minnesota's. Montana has been working all week on getting rid of the ball fast on short throws in order to avoid the Vikings' No. 1 sack attack of Chris Doleman (20½ sacks), Keith Millard (18) and company.

Pass protection remains a vulnerable area, however; the 49ers gave up 45 sacks this season while getting only 43 of their own. San Francisco quarterbacks were sacked only three times in two games with Minnesota last year, but Montana went down four times in the 1988 playoff loss.

"It's kind of like putting your plug in the dike and you don't have enough fingers for all the holes," said Bobb McKittrick, the 49ers' offensive line coach. "They were that way last year and we did it, and we might do it this year. But they're awfully good."

Stuart had been 'routine' suspect after wife's death

BOSTON (AP) — The man who summoned police with his car phone and said a black robber had abducted and shot him and his pregnant wife was only a routine suspect in the case until his own brother gave police evidence of an elaborate, grisly hoax, officials said Friday.

Charles Stuart killed himself Thursday after learning his brother had revealed evidence against him in the Oct. 23 killing of his wife, Carol.

Stuart had been seriously wounded himself. While hospitalized he wrote a moving letter to be read at his wife's funeral. Then he made a dramatic appearance at the deathbed of his newborn son, who was delivered by Caesarean section after the shootings and died 17 days later. And he gave a description of a black man as the killer.

"He thought he had the perfect crime ... the eulogy at the church that he had a friend read ... This guy went way out. He really thought he had a perfect crime," said Reading Police Chief Edward Marchand.

Paul Leary, first assistant Suffolk County district attorney, said although there were some apparent discrepancies in Stuart's account, investigators felt they were not significant enough to pursue. He would not elaborate, citing a grand jury investigation.

But Leary said Stuart was a routine suspect from the beginning because investigators always check out husbands when wives are killed.

Jack Levin, a professor at Northeastern University and expert on crime, said if Stuart was his wife's killer, the crime was so premeditated and elaborate it could only be the work of a sociopath — "the last people you expect. We're talking about the cream of the crop in killing."

The scales tipped when Stuart's brother, Matthew, 23, went to police Wednesday.

The younger Stuart told police his brother asked him to meet him the evening of Oct. 23 in the city's Mission Hill area, which is where the shooting took place, said Matthew's attorney, John Perenyi.

The Stuarts had been at a hospital for birthing classes. Stuart told police a gunman forced them to drive to the Mission Hill area and robbed and shot them. When police found them, Mrs. Stuart was near death in the passenger's seat.

Perenyi said Stuart drove up to the meeting place that evening, tossed a sack to Matthew, who was sitting in his car, and told his younger brother to take it home to Revere, where Matthew lives with their parents.

Stuart suggested to his brother that the bag might have to be disposed of, according to the attorney. Inside the sack, Matthew found a pistol, Mrs. Stuart's supposedly stolen pocketbook and engagement ring, Perenyi said. Matthew took out the ring and disposed of the rest of the items in the Pines River in Revere

After police heard the account from Matthew, police divers found the pocketbook Thursday but not the gun. Matthew gave the engagement ring to investigators Wednesday night.

Paroled killer charged in Rochester slayings

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A paroled killer charged in the slayings of eight women was ordered held without bail Friday and authorities say they have linked the man to a total of 11 killings over the last two years.

The break in the serial slayings was "just a matter of luck," said one of the police officers who spotted the suspect's car from a helicopter.

After his arrest, Arthur Shawcross, 44, of Rochester made statements about the slayings and told police where to find three bodies, said Police Chief Gordon F. Urlacher, who refused to say if the suspect confessed.

A state police source, who spoke on condition on anonymity, said Shawcross had confessed to 11 slayings.

Authorities had been investigating the deaths and disappearances of 16 women in the Rochester area since March 1988 and as recently as Dec. 26. Urlacher and Monroe County District Attorney Howard R. Relin said five of the slayings are not related to the others.

"The number that we believe that he's responsible for was 11," Urlacher said. "We've said all along that we don't believe all these cases were related, and that's the way it turned out."

Most of the women Shawcross is accused of killing were involved in prostitution and drugs, police said.

"He went to them posing as a 'john' (customer), was able to get them in the car, then took control of them — took them to various locations, wherever it might have been," State Police Superintendent Thomas Constantine said in Albany. "In most cases, the death was strangulation."

Constantine also said some victims were mutilated.

Shawcross pleaded innocent to eight counts of second-degree murder in Rochester City Court on Friday. Judge John Manning Regan ordered him held without bail. A preliminary hearing was scheduled for Wednesday.

Shawcross was also charged with one count of patronizing a prostitute.

In addition to the eight cases in which charges were filed, the district attorney said evidence linking Shawcross to three other deaths will be presented to grand juries in Monroe and neighboring Wayne counties.

Relin said Shawcross moved to Rochester in 1987, when he was paroled from prison. He had serving 15 years for the 1972 strangling of 8-year-old Karen Ann Hill of Rochester while she was visiting Watertown, 150 miles to the northeast.

Police said the break in the serial slayings came Wednesday while officers in a helicopter were searching a park 12 miles east of Rochester where clothing of a missing woman had been found. The officers spotted Shawcross' car, then the body of another missing woman.

'Dogs perfect in district; Rebs win

Lee, Odessa High combine for just 69 points

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Editor

Midland Lee's 36-33 District 4-5A basketball victory over Odessa High at Chaparral Center Friday night was a throw back to the days when 69 combined points was a good night's work, but living in the past didn't seem to bother the Rebels in this one.

The main reason is that the victory vaulted the Rebels back into the thick of the 4-5A chase after losing an emotional game to Midland High in the district opener last Tuesday while OHS, considered to have a playoff shot, won its opener against Odessa Permian Tuesday. Now both teams are at 1-1 in the loop chase. Things seem to even up quickly in this wacky loop.

Even though Lee trailed only once in the game (11-8 in the second quarter), the Rebels had to work for every inch of this one.

For one thing, leading scorer Greg Crowe hit only three of 14 shots from the field for seven points while his teammates were hitting a meager one of 14 from the charity stripe, including missing seven straight on the front end of one-and-one situations in a trying fourth quarter.

But even though things didn't turn out rosy in the scoring column (Lee had no player to finish in double figures), they worked hard on defense.

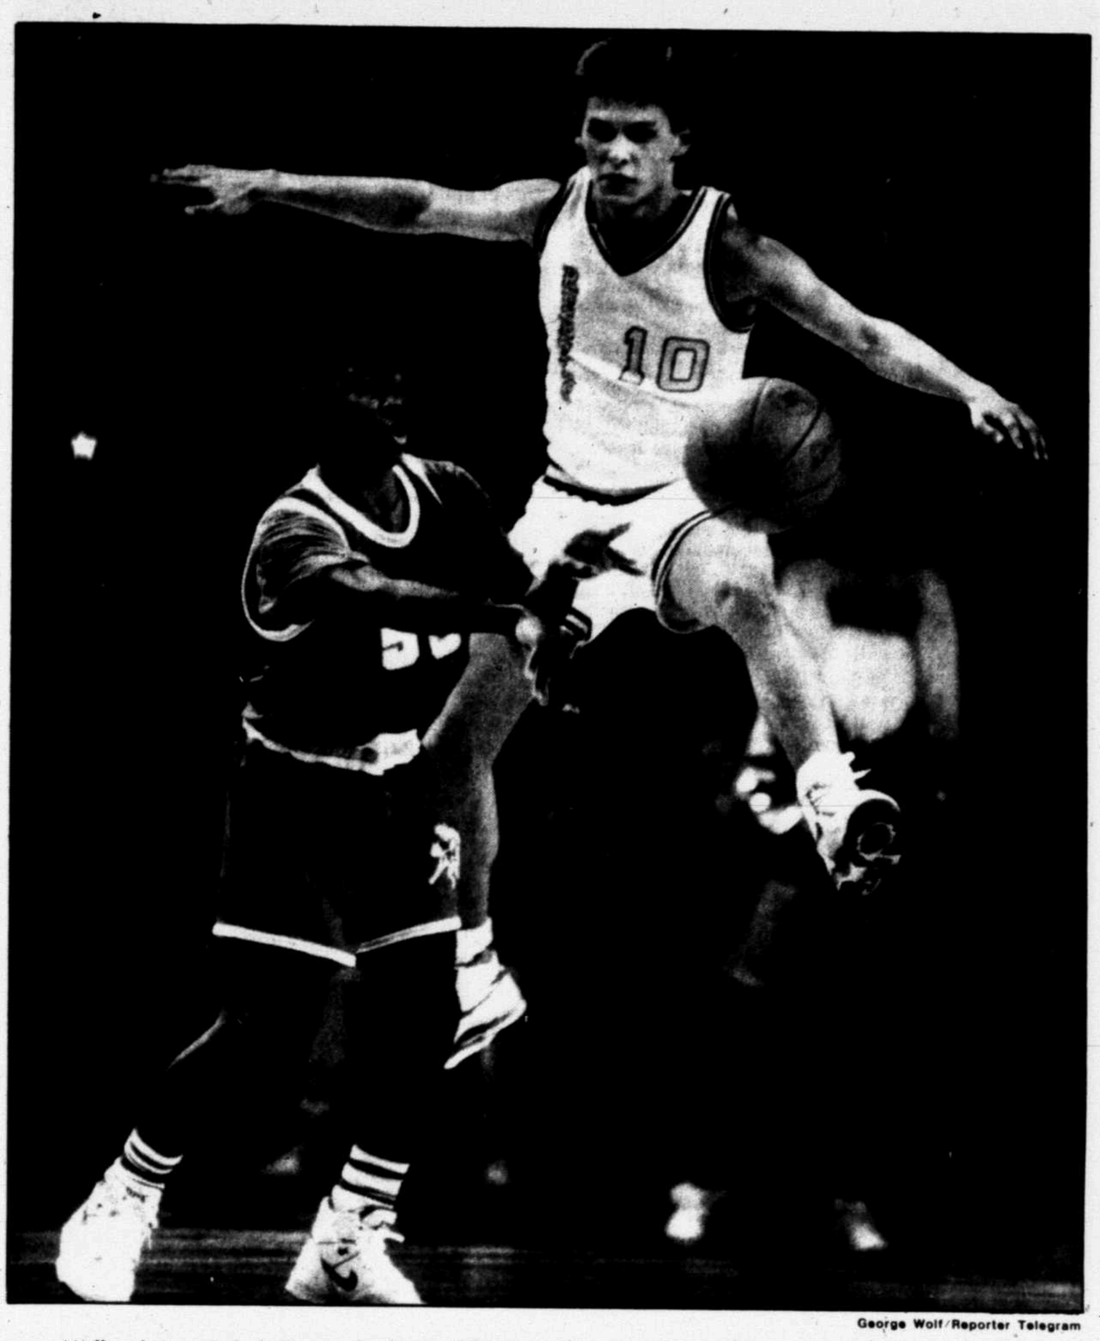

How hard, you ask? Well, George Collins, who had a big 26-point night against Permian Tuesday, was held to a mere three points by David Meade and Bo Blackburn inside. OHS' Ira Young led all scorers with just 12 points and he hit only five of 17 shots from the field. Football and track star Patrick Brown was three of 11 from the field and was held to nine points.

"Odessa High has some great talent on the floor," said Lee coach Paul Stueckler, "but the great thing about basketball is that if you play smart and control the tempo of the game, you have a chance to win. If we did nothing else, we did control the tempo of the game.

"The thing that pleased me most is that I saw our people down and working out there and Odessa just didn't get much penetration on us. And then they didn't hit but one three-point shot in the second half and that came with 1:55 left to play in the game."

Lee put itself in position to win the game in the third period when David Meade scored six of his eight points in a stretch that gave the Rebels a 32-22 lead with 1:22 left in the period.

"If our team hustles, chases, hits, pursues and plays as hard as they can and they want to fire me, that's fine, I can live with that. If our team did not play hard, and attacked you like a pack of wimps, and everybody in the media loved me and they gave me a new five-year contract, I couldn't live with myself." — Houston Oilers head coach Jerry Glanville.

Mavericks' head coach Richie Adubato

Mingling with big names aided Mavs' Adubato

By MIKE McALLISTER
Associated Press

DALLAS — They would meet every Friday night after games, either at Tierney's over cheeseburgers or the Town Pub, which had the kind of pizza to satisfy even the demanding palate of Richie Adubato.

The group consisted mostly of New Jersey high school coaches: Dick Vitale, Hubie Brown, Herman Kull, Bill Raftery, Brendan Malone, Lou Campanelli and Adubato. Sometimes they were joined by basketball officials who worked area games. Often, a kid named Mike Fratello would show up after finishing practice at Montclair State. "He just liked to hang around," Adubato said.

For hours they would sit and discuss basketball. The teams, the coaches, the players, the styles, the theories, the philosophies. The closed sign came on at 2 a.m. but being regulars, they were allowed to stay longer. If the sun peeked out as they left, then it had been a good night of chalk talk.

"There was a tremendous exchange of ideas in those days," Adubato remembered. "It was great. Between all the coaches and all the referees there, you could talk about every game in the county, learn about every player and every team. When I became coach at Upsala College, I used to do half my recruiting every Friday night."

But more than that, it was the exchange of ideas that not only benefited Adubato but everybody else in the group. Each coach had his own approach to the game and was adamant that his way was the right way. But there was also a willingness to listen and take from others.

From that standpoint, it's no surprise that over pizzas and cheeseburgers in the early 1960s grew a collection of coaches who would eventually make it big. Brown and Vitale are former NBA coaches who now are television commentators. Raftery is a former college coach now calling games for ESPN. Campanelli is at the University of California. Kull and Malone are NBA assistants for Sacramento and Detroit, respectively.

And Fratello and Adubato now are NBA head coaches. Fratello's Atlanta Hawks took on Adubato's Mavericks in late December in the first-ever NBA meeting between the friends.

"It's certainly unique that from those high school days, all the coaches were able to elevate themselves to the points they have now reached," Kull said.

Although it seems amazing so many top coaches would come from one area in New Jersey, each man did have two things going for him — an immense passion for basketball and an opportunity to learn from others who shared that passion.

There were arguments to be sure. Each coach often felt the need to raise his voice to get his point across. The discussions grew louder as the night went on. And since these were coaches who the next week might find themselves matching strategies against each other, sometimes there was no love lost.

"Oh, there were no friendships when your team took the court against one of the other guy's teams," Kull said. "It was very competitive. But we were willing to learn and steal from one another. It was almost like going to a basketball clinic."

But arguing among themselves, the group banded together when getting together with the Philadelphia crowd: Chuck Daly, Jim Lynam, Jack Ramsay, and etc.

New Jersey and Philadelphia, in the 1960s, were basketball hotbeds.

But there was one major difference. New Jersey coaches believed in man-to-man defense while Philly coaches honored the matchup zone. For any basketball coach who lives and breathes the sport, it was an issue worth defending to the last X and O.

"We got into some great arguments in those days," Adubato said, smiling. "Great arguments."

The New Jersey group is still and has always been tight-knit. Vitale, when he became the Detroit Pistons coach in 1978, hired Adubato as his assistant. When Vitale was fired 12 games into the 1979 season, Adubato took over, eventually finishing the season with a 12-58 record. While Vitale left coaching, Adubato stayed in, waiting 10 years before getting another opportunity to be a head coach when the Mavs fired John MacLeod Nov. 29.

The passion, Vitale said, still remains for both, just like back in New Jersey.

"We've got a tremendous love for the game," Vitale said. "We eat, drink and sleep it. But our beginnings are junior high in every possible way. But through hard work, we were able to make an impact in the sport. It's a beautiful thing."

Adubato has known Fratello for more than 20 years, ever since Fratello was a high school player in Hackensack. Later, when Fratello became a graduate assistant at the University of Rhode Island, Adubato helped him recruit two New Jersey high school players.

Fratello was able to repay Adubato by helping him land a job with the Knicks, who were coached, of course, by another New Jersey guy, Brown. And when Adubato was considering the Mavericks' job, he called Fratello for advice.

"We're very close," Adubato said. "But I'm very close with all those guys. There's been a lot of dribbling, a lot of shots, a lot of films watched among us.

"It was easy to develop friendships because we all had a common goal. Basketball has been the most prominent part of all our lives."

Lady Bulldogs pull up short against Mojo

Odessa High girls down Lee, 48-45

By BILL PRICE
Sports Writer

Midland High's girls basketball team gave Odessa Permian, one of the District 4-5A front runners, all it could when in the third quarter Friday night at the MHS gymnasium, but the Lady Panthers pulled away in the final period for a 64-46 win.

The victory put Permian at 3-1 in 4-5A and 9-8 overall, while the Lady Bulldogs fell to 0-4 and 7-12.

In other 4-5A girls action Midland Lee fell to Odessa High in Odessa 48-45, and San Angelo downed Abilene Cooper in San Angelo 71-53. Abilene High played a non-district game in Wichita falls.

Mary Ann Isom topped all Lady Rebel scorers with 26 points and Stephanie Graham led OHS with 14. Lee is now 1-3 in 4-5A and 5-14 overall, while OHS is 2-2 and 8-9, San Angelo 3-0 and 15-3, and Cooper 1-3 and 10-7.

In the MHS-Permian affair Mojo, which boasts two posts taller than 6-feet tall — 6-1 Stephanie James and 6-3 Kaelie Butler — jumped out to an early 12-2 lead and, on the strength of eight first-quarter points from LaShon Powell, was ahead 16-8 entering the second quarter.

Even with James earning her third personal foul in the second period, Permian was able to capitalize on 16 first-half turnrovers by MHS pull ahead slightly more by half time, 30-16.

But then came the third period, with the Lady 'Dogs showing a calmer offensive strategy and going on a 9-4 run to cut the lead to nine points, 34-25. Twice MHS got the lead under the 10-point mark, only to see the Lady Panthers slip away each time.

Still, the quarter ended with MHS behind by only 11 points and the Lady 'Dogs were able to keep pace through the first four minutes of the fourth period. But in the later half of the quarter, Mojo was able to convert from the free throw line — Permian was 13-of-16 in the quarter and 12-of-18 for the game.

"Gosh, they're just so big. We panicked right away, but our kids did a good job of coming back once we got calmed down," said Jane Young, MHS coach. "Where they really got us was at the free throw line. We didn't go to the line much in the second half."

"I think our girls just relaxed in the third quarter," said Permian coach Terri King. "What hurt us was having Stephanie on the bench for so much of the game (she picked up her fourth foul in the third quarter). She usually gets 20 points a game, but she only had eight tonight.

"We lost a little bit with Kaelie in there because it's her first night back from an injury. We're going to have build her minutes back up slowly.

"We have a goal to win district, but it's going to be hard. Like tonight, Robin (Landreth of MHS) really did an outstanding job of driving into the lane. It's like our girls were just there camping out," King said.

"The kids gave them a fight, it just didn't end up the way we wanted it. But we're going to beat some people in this district. It just didn't happen tonight," Young said.

Powell was the game's high scorer with 22 points, and Kerry McSwain scored 11 for Permian. Sophomore Sally Gibson led the Lady Bulldogs with 14 point and Landreth added 12 to the MHS cause. Also for MHS, Ashley Chase and Effie Freeman scored seven points apiece, while James and Butler added eight points each for Mojo.

After an open date Tuesday, the Lady 'Dogs return to 4-5A play Jan. 12 against Abilene Cooper at the MHS gym.

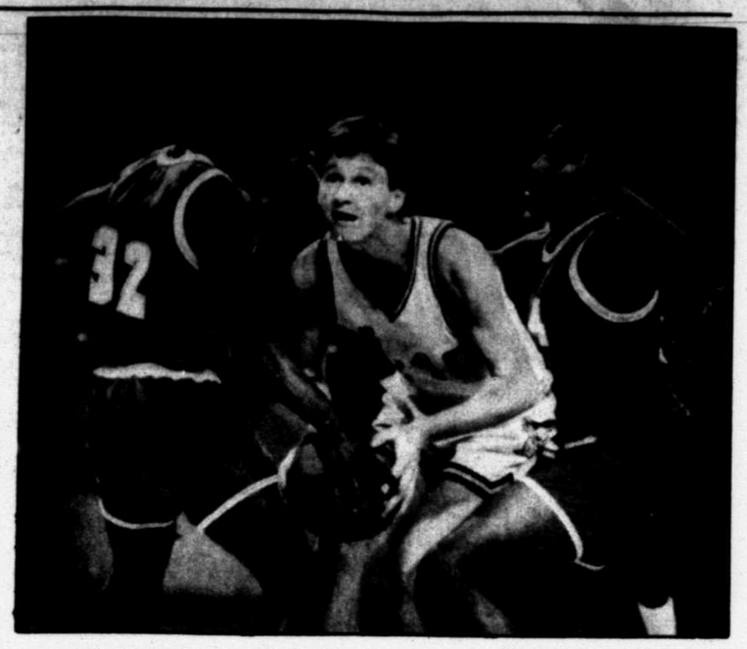

The Lee girls are back in play Tuesday, when they host San Angelo at 8 p.m. in the Lee gymnasium.

WEIRD

After the Bills lost 21-10 to the Cincinnati Bengals in the AFC championship, a discussion turned into a shouting match as the Bills filed into the locker room at Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium.

The two players involved were veteran offensive lineman Joe Devlin and kick returner-defensive back Erroll Tucker and the verbal fireworks were of sufficient intensity that television analyst and former Bills player Paul Maguire wasn't able to conduct postgame locker room interviews.

Devlin, a 14-year veteran, is one of the team's captains. Tucker lasted several games into the season before he was waived. He finished the season with New England.

In Buffalo's only preseason game at Rich Stadium, at night, a power failure caused by a faulty generator nearly forced postponement.

Bills owner Ralph C. Wilson Jr. used the incident as an example of how the 17-year-old stadium, owned by Erie County, was deteriorating. Wilson vowed the Bills wouldn't play there when the team's lease expires in 1998.

The nonsense began in earnest during the Bills' second game of the season, a 28-14 loss at home to the Denver Broncos that would cost them home-field advantage in the playoffs.

With the Bills trailing 15-0, defensive end Bruce Smith went into celebratory convulsions after sacking Denver quarterback John Elway. That prompted a heated argument between Smith and linebacker Cornelius Bennett that was caught by Monday Night Football camera crews.

Another sideline argument followed when Kelly threw an interception on a pass that was intended for wide receiver Chris Burkett. Kelly was seen jawing at Burkett, who had turned the wrong way on the pass pattern.

It wasn't the last controversy involving Kelly, but it was the last involving Burkett, who quickly found himself on the bench and, within days, released. He finished the season with the New York Jets.

Starting fullback Larry Kinnebrew was suspended for the next game after missing practice because he overslept. At the end of the season, Kinnebrew was arrested following an argument outside a suburban nightclub.

Then Kelly separated shoulder in a 37-14 loss to AFC East rival Indianapolis.

The next day on his morning radio show and then later in the afternoon, Kelly blasted offensive tackle Howard Ballard for missing a block that allowed Colts defensive end Jon Hand to hit him, causing the injury.

It wasn't the first time Kelly publicly criticized teammates. The year before, Kelly took shots at Burkett and Ronnie Harmon.

Kelly was replaced by backup quarterback Frank Reich, who won all three games he started and became so popular he actually outpolled Kelly 3-1 in write-in votes during Buffalo's mayoral election.

Kelly soon would find out what it was like to catch flak from teammates. Two games before the season ended, Thomas blasted Kelly on a cable television show after Kelly had several poor performances.

But perhaps the most bizarre incident in a season filled with much weirdness involved two assistant coaches who joined head coach Marv Levy's staff before the start of the season.

Wide receiver coach Nick Nicolau and offensive line coach Tom Bresnahan were reviewing game film after the Bills' 34-3 victory over the New York Jets Oct. 22.

Bresnahan reportedly was insisting that it was the play of his unit that led to the victory. Finally, Nicolau, who is much smaller than Bresnahan, apparently had enough and decked Bresnahan with a solid uppercut.

He then grabbed Bresnahan in a headlock and drove him head-first into a wall. The dented wall needed to be repaired, as did Bresnahan's face, which required several stitches.

Amazingly, according to Levy, "Tom and Nick are close friends ... who lived together for four or five months in the off-season."

So, you see, even if Buffalo loses to Cleveland on Saturday, fans will still have plenty to remember from the 1989 season.

NINERS

Long, pass-oriented drives in the first quarter have set the tone for one-sided games in the previous two playoff matchups.

"I feel the receivers have got to make some big plays," Rice said. "If we can do that at the beginning of the game, then we can take the momentum away from them and play 49er football."

Mike Sherrard, sidelined with a twice-broken leg since a promising rookie year with Dallas in 1986, has been practicing all week in the 49ers' four-receiver, one-back offense and was activated Friday. But Minnesota cornerback Carl Lee will be spending most of his time watching Rice and fellow All-Pro receiver John Taylor.

"We know what they're capable of, and I'm sure they think they know exactly what we're going to do," Lee said. "There aren't a lot of mysteries in a game like this."

Two-man duel between Azinger, Baker-Finch highlighting tourney

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Ian Baker-Finch and Paul Azinger, responding to each other's good play, are threatening to make a two-man struggle out of golf's Tournament of Champions.

"We seemed to inspire each other," Azinger said Friday after he and Baker-Finch, playing in the same twosome, pulled well ahead of the rest of the pack in the winners-only event that opens the 1990 PGA Tour season.

Baker-Finch, an Australian who scored his first American victory in the Colonial tournament last summer, held a one-shot lead over Azinger after 36-holes, with no one else within four strokes of the top.

They were paired again today in the third round, with Baker-Finch delighted to be leading and Azinger not all that disturbed about being one shot back.

"I enjoy being in the lead," Baker-Finch said after he'd turned a fast start into a five-under-par 67 and a 133 total.

"I'm happier when I'm leading, and the happier I am, the better my score tends to be.

"I'd say about half the tournaments I have won, I've led all the way," said Baker-Finch, who has collected 11 titles around the world and led all the way in his 1989 American victory.

"I'm more comfortable when I'm in front."

His comfort margin was kept to a minimum by Azinger, who did not make a bogey in a round of 68 that left him one at 134 at the tournament halfway point.

Azinger, called "Zinger" by his fellow pros, shared the first-round lead with Baker-Finch but wasn't all that disappointed about failing to keep pace.

"All I know is that when I lead all the way, I lose weight. And I can't afford that," joked the tall, skinny Azinger, who turns 30 today.

"It's my birthday, but I'm not expecting any present from Ian. He's playing too good," Zinger said.

ALUMS

"Even though we have a lot of the guys coming in from out of town we have plenty of them who live right here in Midland," Ray said. "A lot of local people will remember that 1960 team that won 30 consecutive games before losing in the playoffs. Dick Campbell is 6-5 and was one of the shorter players on that team.

"Dick played with Mike Humphrey and Mike Marsh on that team, and even though those two won't be able to make it to the game, we have plenty of good ball players who will be here."

Players who have committed to play in the game are as follows:

ODDS: Walter Bryson, 1979; Craig Crawford, 1987; Craig Dunn, 1977; Scott Gilmour, 1963; Doug Hixon, 1983; Bill Kerr, 1975; Jahnny Pannell, 1983; Milton Sanders, 1981; Eddie Shirley, 1963; Mike Velasco, 1981; Phillip Ward, 1977; Hershlee Rogers, 1975; Terry Rogers, 1977; Richard Young, 1981; Booker Mackey, 1981; Jimmy Brewster and Michael Cobb.

EVENS: Moose Armendariz, 1974; Brandon Battles, 1974; Gary Brewster, 1972; Dick Campbell, 1960; Fred Franklin, 1984; Bill Fredrickson, 1978; Bruce Gilmour, 1972; Doug Gilmour, 1972; Jeff Gotcher, 1976; Clifford Hickey, 1978; Harold Howard, 1972; Scott Louderback, 1982; Kyle Lusby, 1988; Steve Melzer, 1964; Preston Robertson, 1982; Sammy Rodriques, 1972; Chris Rooker, 1984; Bro Seltzer, 1966; Thomas Wilson, 1986; Bill Wood, 1964, Ronald Taylor, 1972; and Robert Young, 1978.

Giants looking good in time for Rams

New York keeps player transactions to a minimum

N.Y. Times News Service

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Since the National Football League season began four months ago, the Giants have added only eight players to their roster.

On Saturday, the day before their first playoff game, they will probably add one and perhaps two or three.

The candidates are Eric Dorsey, who has recovered from surgery for a broken right foot; Raul Allegre, who recovered weeks ago from a strained right quadricep; and Damian Johnson, who had back surgery nine weeks ago.

Dorsey seems sure to be reactivated. Allegre appears to be 50-50 and Johnson is a little less likely.

For every player added to the roster, one must be placed on injured reserve or waived. The leading possibilities are Bjorn Nittmo, Mark Duckens and the injured Brian Williams.

Nittmo has been the kicker since Allegre's injury. Duckens has filled in on the defensive line and Williams has been an occasional starter at offensive guard.

The Giants will play the Los Angeles Rams at Giants Stadium at 11:30 a.m. CST Sunday. According to league rules, all changes in a team's 47-man roster must be made by 3 p.m. Saturday.

Before their injuries, Dorsey was a starting defensive end, Johnson a starting offensive guard and Allegre the kicker. All have been on injured reserve six or more weeks and are eligible to be activated.

Each season, a team can activate five players from injured reserve or from its six-man developmental team without exposing them to waivers. In addition, each playoff team is allowed one extra activation for each playoff game.

During the regular season, the Giants used free moves to activate Bob Kratch, Steve DeOssie and Nittmo. They have three moves available.

In past years, Dorsey and George Martin were the Giants' defensive left ends, with Dorsey playing in running situations and Martin against the pass. When Martin retired, Dorsey became a fulltime player and improved his pass rush.

After Dorsey broke his foot in the second game of the season, John Washington filled in adequately. Duckens, a defensive end obtained on waivers after Dorsey was hurt, has played little.

"My foot is pretty stable now," Dorsey said. "There is no weakness, no pain whatsoever, no physical limitations. So I'm not apprehensive.

"I've tried to go pretty hard the last two weeks. The key is how you feel the next day. Last week, it would feel sore the next day. This week, I've felt good."

After Allegre was hurt, Nittmo was the kicker in the last six regular-season games. Although the left-footed rookie from Sweden did a competent job, he lacks Allegre's experience.

If Nittmo remained the kicker and became injured, Allegre could be activated for future playoff games.

If Allegre was activated, Nittmo dropped and Allegre then injured, Nittmo could not be brought back this season and the Giants would have to look for a free-agent kicker. So it is difficult to tell what Coach Bill Parcells will decide about his kickers.

"I'm just hanging loose," Nittmo said. "I have no idea what he will do."

Allegre has kicked this week with Jeff Hostetler, the regular holder, and Frank Winters, the regular snapper, though the league rules did not allow him to practice with the team.

"You've got to treat it like you're going to play," Allegre said. "If I don't play, I'll have feelings like I never had before. If I don't play, I don't know what my future is here."

Steelers enter Mile High as underdog — again

Associated Press

DENVER — Little more than an observer the last time the Denver Broncos and Pittsburgh Steelers met in the playoffs, Broncos linebacker Karl Mecklenburg intends to make his presence known Sunday.

As a second-year pro making the transition from defensive end to linebacker, Mecklenburg was a specialist in 1984, and his services weren't required in the playoff matchup against the Steelers.

"I was a third-and-long pass-rushing specialist, and it was never third-and-long," Mecklenburg said.

The underdog Steelers — 9-7 during the regular season that year compared to Denver's 13-3 — beat the Broncos 24-17 at Mile High Stadium on the strength of a relentless rushing game.

Another 9-7 Steelers' team comes into Mile High on Sunday, and having discovered a crunching ground attack, Pittsburgh presents the Broncos with a frightening sense of deja vu.

Although favored, Denver doesn't possess the momentum usually required of successful playoff teams. After clinching the AFC West title in Week 12 of the regular season, the Broncos lost three of their last four games and finished at 11-5.

Pittsburgh, meanwhile, won five of its last six to reach the playoffs, then upset Houston 26-23 in overtime in the AFC wild-card game.

"They're playing with a lot of confidence," Denver coach Dan Reeves said. "They're running the ball much better than when we played them during the season (a 34-7 Denver victory). They've got two big backs in Merril Hoge and Tim Worley. If they get their running game going, it can be a long afternoon."

Both Reeves and Mecklenburg feel the Broncos' earlier victory could work against them.

"The biggest concern I have is when you beat a team early in the year, sometimes you don't take a team seriously enough," Reeves said.

"I think it's a disadvantage for us having won earlier," Mecklenburg said. "I can remember in '84 when we had a much better team than Pittsburgh as far as the record goes and they came in and killed us. They're a good team. They're able to run the trapping game, and it's going to be on our shoulders defensively to stop them from running the ball and get the ball back to our offense."

The Steelers finished the regular season ranked last in the NFL in total offense and passing, but the Broncos aren't taking Pittsburgh quarterback Bubby Brister lightly either.

"He's a fiery guy," Mecklenburg said. "He's a leader. With an emotional quarterback like that, if things are going well, it's great. If they're not, it's a disadvantage. But I think he's able to rally his guys.

"We'll need to get some pressure on him. He doesn't get easily rattled, but in our last game I think he got frustrated. Toward the end, he would drop back to pass and start running around doing some things you don't see him do in other games. Any time you're losing as badly as they were, you're bound to be frustrated."

Mecklenburg, an All-Pro this season after leading the Broncos in tackles and recording 7½ sacks, said Denver will be looking to force turnovers Sunday.

"It's going to come down to turnovers," he said. "We haven't been coming up with many lately. Hopefully, we can this weekend."

The Broncos have emphasized the run this season, behind rookie Bobby Humphrey, who rushed for 1,151 yards. The defense ranks third overall in the NFL, yielding only 275 yards per game.

NY Jets interview offensive coordinator

NEW YORK (AP) — Dick Steinberg continued his search for a coach for the New York Jets Friday when he interviewed Bruce Coslet, the offensive coordinator of the Cincinnati Bengals.

"We had a good meeting. It was very positive," said Steinberg, who was hired last month to run the Jets' football operations. He met with Coslet in Cincinnati.

Coslet, 43, a former tight end for the Bengals, has been their offensive coordinator for four seasons. In that time, the Bengals have had one of the most productive and innovative attacks in the NFL.

Clippers break drought at Garden

Associated Press

Ron Harper and Benoit Benjamin sparked a 16-2 fourth-quarter rally and the Los Angeles Clippers ended a 10-year Boston Garden losing streak Friday night with a 114-105 victory over the Celtics, who played most of the game without Larry Bird.

Harper had six points and Benjamin five in the surge that turned a 97-92 deficit with 7:14 left to play into a 108-99 Los Angeles lead with 45 seconds to go.

The victory broke the Clippers' overall 11-game losing streak against Boston and was their first in Boston Garden after 10 straight losses since their last win on March 2, 1979. Boston's four-game winning streak ended.

Bird sprained his left ankle with 42 seconds left in the first quarter and played just 19 minutes, only four in the second half. He left the game with 7:37 remaining in the third quarter and didn't return after scoring 12 points.

Boston was led by Kevin McHale with 20 points. The Clippers were paced by Harper's 28 and Danny Manning with a season-high 26.

The Clippers' decisive surge, in which Boston managed just two free throws by Kevin Gamble, began after McHale's basket with 7:14 remaining. Baskets by Harper and Benjamin drew the Clippers to 97-96. Benjamin sank a hook shot after grabbing an offensive rebound, giving Los Angeles the lead for good with 5:32 left.

After Boston's Dennis Johnson missed two free throws, a layup by Gary Grant, Benjamin's free throw and Harper's two free throws built the lead to 103-97 with 3:28 to play.

Gamble then made his foul shots but the Clippers capped the rally with layups by Charles Smith and Harper and a free throw by Smith. The Clippers padded their lead with 20 seconds left when Harper sank two free throws after Boston coach Jimmy Rodgers was charged with two technical fouls and ejected.

Boston began the fourth quarter with an 88-80 lead, then lost its shooting touch and was outscored 34-17 in the final period.

76ers 104, Mavericks 79

Johnny Dawkins scored 21 points and the Philadelphia 76ers went on a 21-0 first-half run, then eased over the Dallas Mavericks.

The 76ers scored the final 12 points of the first period and the first nine points of the second quarter, with Ron Anderson contributing six points during the run. Philadelphia had dropped four of its previous five games.

Dallas won the first meeting on Dec. 15 in Philadelphia, 95-88 after Sixers' leading scorer Charles Barkley was ejected midway through the third period.

Barkley, entering the game with a scoring average of 23.7 points, had 14 points Friday but contributed 18 rebounds.

Sam Perkins scored 19 points to lead Dallas, which had won six of its previous eight.

Mike Gminski had 20 points for the 76ers.

Dallas was only able to get as close as 15 in the third quarter. Gminski scored 10 points during the period and Philadelphia took an 80-63 lead into the final quarter.

The Sixers shot 69 percent from the field in the second quarter, opening the period with an 11-1 run to build their largest lead, 41-17 with 9:26 to play until halftime.

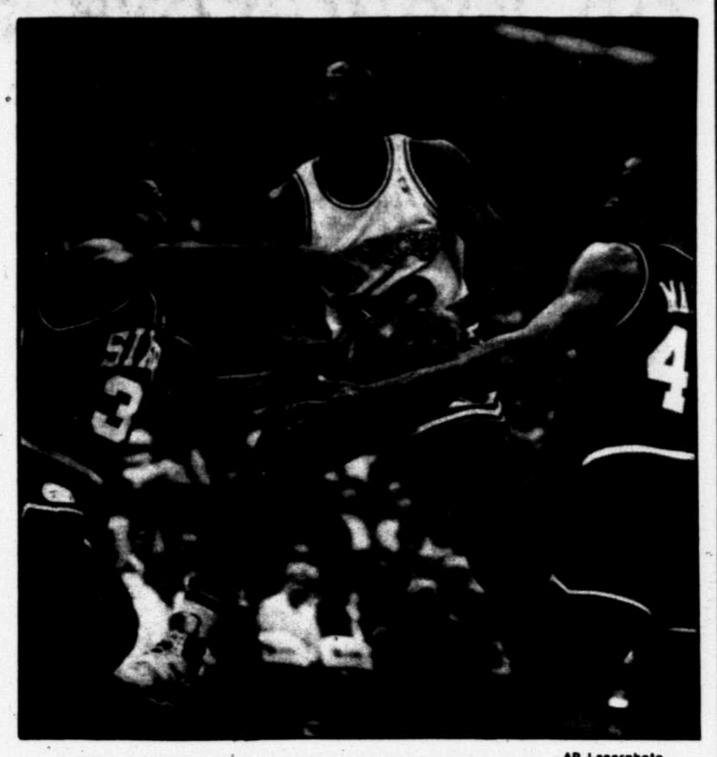

Cavaliers 119, Bullets 107

The Cleveland Cavaliers overcame a 19-point first-quarter deficit and handed the Washington Bullets a club-record 12th consecutive road loss as Mark Price scored 27 points and Craig Ehlo 23.

Jeff Malone led the Bullets with 28 points but he had only two in the fourth quarter when Cleveland outscored Washington 32-20.

The Cavaliers trailed 41-22 late in the first quarter and then rallied behind the hot outside shooting of Price and Ehlo and the inside game of John Williams. Cleveland shot 8-of-11 from 3-point range, with Price going 4-for-4 and Ehlo 3-for-5.

The Cavaliers trimmed the deficit to 62-56 at halftime and it was tied 87-87 entering the fourth quarter.

Dallas guard Derek Harper, center, loses control of the ball as he is guarded by Philadelphia's Hersey Hawkins, left, and Rick Mahorn.

The Bullets led 98-97 on a driving basket by Harvey Grant with 5:58 left but the Cavaliers scored the next nine points. Ehlo's jump shot with 5:10 left gave Cleveland the lead for good 99-98 and Williams and Price each scored three points in the run.

Pistons 122, Pacers 99

Mark Aguirre scored eight of his 12 first-quarter points during a 20-9 run and the Detroit Pistons cruised to their fourth straight with a victory over the slumping Indiana Pacers.

Indiana, losing its third straight game, turned the ball over 23 times. The Pistons, who have committed just 43 turnovers during their winning streak, had only 10 against the Pacers.

Aguirre, breaking a 15-for-46 shooting slump over the past four games, finished with 26 points.

Isiah Thomas, who had 12 of his 24 points in Detroit's first period, needed three stitches to close a cut over his left eye after being elbowed unintentionally by Detlef Schrempf with less than a second remaining in the second quarter. Thomas, however, was in the lineup to start the third period.

Schrempf scored a career-high 26 points and pulled down 12 rebounds for Indiana.

The Pistons, shooting 53 percent, were the fourth straight Indiana opponent to shoot 50 percent or better. Five of the last six Pacers opponents have hit better than half their shots.

Bulls 127, Magic 116

Michael Jordan scored 43 points and led the Chicago Bulls over the Orlando Magic, who dropped their seventh straight game and 11th in a row on the road.

The victory was the Bulls' 12th straight at Chicago Stadium, tying the club record set in 1974-75. The Bulls are 13-1 at home and have won 11 of their last 13 games overall. The victory also was Chicago's fifth straight, equaling its season high.

It was the seventh time this season that Jordan, who leads the NBA with a 33-point average, has scored at least 40. Scottie Pippen added 19 for Chicago. Terry Catledge led Orlando with 27 points while Nick Anderson and Sidney Green each had 17.

Dickerson leaves doubts as to his return to Colts

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indianapolis Colts want to sign Eric Dickerson to a contract extension. But, in an interview published Friday, the NFL's seventh all-time rusher said he may not even report for training camp next summer.

"Right now, I plan on coming in, but there's still a chance I might not show up," Dickerson said in an interview with The Atlanta Constitution.

Dickerson is under contract to play next season for $1.45 million, the final year of the contract he signed following his trade to Indianapolis by the Los Angeles Rams on Oct. 31, 1987.

"I don't love football the way I once loved the game," he told the newspaper in a telephone interview. "I don't look at it as fun anymore, and it definitely used to be fun. A lot of the fun has been taken away from it, I guess, because you go through so much on the field and off the field."

Dickerson, who rushed for 10,000 yards quicker than any back in NFL history (91 games), was bothered by a nagging hamstring injury for much of the past season and missed a game due to injury for the first time in his NFL career at Miami on Nov. 5. He was injured Sept. 24 and aggravated the injury on Oct. 22.

"I never really got well until maybe the last two weeks of the season," Dickerson said. "I played as well as I could have under the circumstances. Even when I'm hurt, I always figure it's my responsibility to play and play hard. But, for how long, I'm not sure."

He is scheduled to play in the Pro Bowl in Hawaii next month.

"I'm not hurt badly now: I'm not almost a cripple or anything like that. It makes you think that maybe it's time to get out healthy," Dickerson said of the injury.

NCAA begins investigation of UTEP

Associated Press

EL PASO — The NCAA is conducting a preliminary investigation of the basketball program at Texas-El Paso amid allegations that players used cars belonging to coaches and boosters, athletic director Brad Hovious said Friday.

"We do not feel we are guilty of any wrongdoing, but the publicity generated by these stories has caused the NCAA to begin a preliminary inquiry into this matter," Hovious said. "The NCAA has not given us any specific allegations."

Former UTEP assistant coach Nate Archibald, plus former players Jerry Jones and Kenny Parham alluded to car use in a story printed last year in Newsday, a Long Island, N.Y. newspaper.

The newspaper quoted the athletes, who left the basketball program without explanation during the 1987-88 season, as saying they received cash and free use of cars from "sugar families."

The three later claimed they were misquoted.

Hovious investigated the newspaper's allegations, but said he found no wrongdoing.

Former UTEP basketball player Shelton Boykin, a reserve who played only one season, 1987-88, with the Miners, was quoted in a December Los Angeles Times article as saying: "When we wanted to go out, we'd get a car. They were nice cars — Cadillacs, Mercedes, Jaguars ... "

Boykin, however, said he was "misunderstood" by the newspaper. "That's not what I meant. It was like, if you wanted a ride somewhere, there were some friends around, just like we have friends out here (in Los Angeles)," he said.

The NCAA could find problems that he couldn't, Hovious said, adding he doesn't know the scope of the investigation.

"This is kind of like the IRS ... you've paid your tax but you don't know if you'd paid it all," Hovious said.

The NCAA's investigators are expected on campus this week for a stay of up to two weeks.

"STUNNING. A FILM OF ENORMOUS VISCERAL POWER with a performance by Tom Cruise that defines everything that is best about the movie. Watching the evolution of his Ron Kovic is both harrowing and inspiring. 'Born on the Fourth of July' connects the war of arms abroad with the war of conscience at home."

Tyrone Jake: A story of love, money, greed and football

By I.P. WESTON
N.Y. Times News Service

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — This is a story of love, money and football.

Rose Yvonne McGee, 35, a local insurance agent, believed she'd met the man of her dreams one night last June in a trendy Los Angeles nightspot.

She said he introduced himself as Mike Irvin, wide receiver for the Dallas Cowboys.

"I was smitten with him," she said. "I found him very handsome."

Several weeks later, the bloom appeared to be off their budding romance when Ms. McGee told Santa Barbara police that "a con man" had bilked her out of $29,000 in cash.

She had sent away to the Dallas Cowboys for a photograph of Irvin, and the glossy image she received back in the mail was not her man.

With her cooperation, the police arrested the alleged impersonator, who turned out to be Tyrone Jake, 30, a Los Angeles County parolee.

He is being held in county jail pending charges in Santa Barbara Superior Court for felony grand theft through false pretenses.

On the day of Jake's first court appearance to review evidence in the case, the prosecution was thrown a curve.

Ms. McGee, their star witness, announced to Judge Joseph Lodge that she had married the defendant Nov. 21 in a civil ceremony at the county jail.

The marriage certificate listed Jake's occupation as "Football Player."

Deputy District Attorney Gerry Franklin agreed that the new Mrs. Tyrone Jake's disclosure "put an interesting spin on the case," but he said it wouldn't have a significant effect on the prosecution.

Rules of evidence normally prevent spouses from testifying against their partners, he said, but not in cases where the defendant is charged with a crime against his or her spouse. Ms. McGee said she knew this before her marriage.

"I married him because I love him," she said.

Ms. McGee said she trusts Jake and never had any doubt he intended to repay the loan. She insisted trust was not an issue when she hired two private investigators in July to look into Jake's activities.

"Franklin and the police assumed I went to the private investigators over concern about whether (Jake) was a football player," she said.

"But I did it because I thought he was seeing other women. There was no question in my mind he was a playboy. I wanted to see what the heck he did with his time."

Police said they arrested Jake outside of Ms. McGee's home in July when she lured him to Santa Barbara on the pretense she would lend him another $30,000.

The $29,000 she did lend was never recovered, but Ms. McGee said she doesn't care.

She knows her husband is not a football player and that he allegedly has a long history of bilking women out of money by posing as famous athletes.

"I'd lend him the money again," Ms. McGee said. "I can't figure out who (the prosecution and police) think they are protecting."

Franklin said Jake first started impersonating athletes for financial gain in 1982, when he allegedly impersonated a well-known basketball player.

"He's made a career out of sweet-talking women out of cash," the prosecutor said.

During a search of Jake's Los Angeles apartment, investigators found a list of telephone numbers with women's names.

Two of these women told Franklin that Jake had courted and borrowed money from them while posing as Stacey Toran, the Los Angeles Raiders player who died Aug. 5 in an automobile accident.

Both women went to Toran's funeral, believing that they were paying their last respects to a boyfriend, Franklin said.

Neither of the women had seen Jake since Toran's death, probably because Jake had been arrested the week before in Santa Barbara.

Ms. McGee said she regrets ever lodging a complaint against Jake. She said her private investigators hounded her into reporting him to the police.

"They said this guy was pulling the wool over my eyes," she said. "The worst thing that might be said is he took advantage of a woman in love. That's not a crime."

Ms. McGee lent Jake the $29,000 in two installments several weeks after they met in Los Angeles, she said. To do so, police said she took out a second mortgage on her home for $20,000 and borrowed $9,000 from friends.

Although she admits telling detectives she lent Jake the second sum before she received Michael Irvin's picture, she said she lied about that fact.

She now claims she had the picture before she made the second loan, with full knowledge that Jake was not Irvin.

She also claimed she was reasonably certain Jake was not Irvin when she made the first loan.

"I lied because I was angry," she said.

"I was so embarrassed that I'd fallen in love ... and lent that much money to a man I didn't know very well. I did not want him arrested. He borrowed the money under the name Tyrone Jake."

Jake is now on parole for a 1987 felony conviction of defrauding American Express of $23,000. He served a prison term after a 1984 conviction for felony grand theft. He is also facing felony charges in Los Angeles relating to a drunken-driving offense involving injuries.

"I think he's going to play football," she said. "He's been invited to the Dallas Cowboys camp."

This was news to Bob Ackles, director of player personnel for the NFL team. "I've never heard of him," Ackles said. "If he was someone we were considering at all, I would know about it."

Raiders ready for Hogs

Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Guard Arlyn Bowers, who gave Arkansas a needed lift against Houston, will be back in the starting lineup when the 14th-ranked Razorbacks play Texas Tech at Lubbock on Saturday.

Bowers scored 14 points and made several important steals as the Razorbacks rallied from 18 points down Wednesday night to beat Houston, 82-78, on the road.

"If we can win at Texas Tech after winning on the road at Houston, that would be a real lift for us," Coach Nolan Richardson said. "We went into this road swing hoping for a .500 finish. Now, we're looking for a 1.000. There's no guarantee at home in this league. I think all the road teams won Wednesday night."

The Houston game was the Southwest Conference opener for the Razorbacks, who improved to 9-2 for the season. Tech, 5-5, opened SWC play by losing to Texas 109-71 in Austin on Thursday night.

"Against Tech, we hope to get out and get going and get some momentum going early," Richardson said. "Tech is shooting the ball pretty well and they're averaging nearly 80 points a game."

He said Lee Mayberry would start at the other guard, that Todd Day and Lenzie Howell would be at forward and that he was leaning toward Mario Credit at center.

"It will be a war from the word 'go.' Tech plays so much better at home than on the road but you can say that about most teams. If we just show up and expect to come home a winner, Tech will send us home with a loss."

Arkansas lost three conference games last year and one of those was at Tech, 84-73. The Razorbacks have not won at Houston and at Lubbock in the same year since 1979 and the games weren't played consecutively that year.

The Razorbacks have four players averaging in double figures and two more are close. Day, who had 22 against Houston, is averaging 20.5 points per game. Mayberry is averaging 15.8, followed by Howell at 14.9 and Credit at 13.7. Miller and Ron Huery are each averaging more than nine points per game.

The Raiders' leading scorers are Derex Butts and Jerry Mason, each averaging more than 14 points per game.

Twins who posed for Playboy plead innocent to tax evasion

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Two twin sisters and Playboy models pleaded innocent Friday to federal charges they evaded taxes on about $1 million they allegedly received from an elderly businessman.

Lynette Harris and Leigh Ann Conley were allowed to remain free without bail, but Magistrate Aaron E. Goodstein ordered the two to report to the federal probation and parole office here biweekly.

Conley and Harris, 35, allegedly did not pay taxes on money they received from the late Shorewood businessman David Kritzik.

Harris claims she was the elderly millionaire's mistress and that the money she got from him was a gift, and thus was not reportable as income. She has said her sister received cash gifts from Kritzik to compensate her for lost income.

The twins appeared in two films together, but Harris says their joint movie careers were sidelined by her seven-year, full-time relationship with Kritzik, who died last June at the age of 89. Harris and Conley also have modeled together and appeared in Playboy in 1978 and 1981.

The government charges that the money, which ranged from $60,000 to $257,000 per year from 1984 to 1987, represented direct payments for services.

Harris, formerly of Arlington, Texas, and now of Mukwonago, Wis., is charged with two counts of tax evasion and two counts of failure to file federal income tax returns. If convicted, she faces a maximum prison sentence of 12 years and fines totaling $625,000.

Conley, of the Milwaukee suburb of Glendale, is charged with four counts of failure to file income taxes. If convicted, she could be sentenced to as many as four years and fined as much as $325,000.

Harris, who was not named in Kritzik's will, filed a $5 million claim in Probate Court against his estate. She also has filed a slander suit in Federal Court against Kritzik's son.

Both women are married and divorced; Harris retained her maiden name.

Kritzik was a mail-order merchandiser who founded General Merchandising Co. It was sold in 1962 to the JC Penney Co. for $11 million.

You can learn more than spelling while playing with blocks. You can also learn how good and evil are the results of the choices we make.

HAT could have been HATE. And LOVE would then have been incomplete. It all depends on where you put one block.

People who realize the tremendous importance of seemingly small choices want their children to acquire a sense of spiritual responsibility. The churches and synagogues serving our community respect and fulfill that vital need through religious education and moral training.

When we grow up and put away our blocks, those same churches and synagogues provide the spiritual foundation on which we build a life of decision-making.

Converts from the Holy Land meet again

FORT WORTH (AP) — The infectious, bouncy rhythms of Middle Eastern music soared through the chapel as an Arab Baptist revival meeting, possibly Texas' first, went into full swing.

"Halleluia, Fa-howal Ella," the small congregation sang in Arabic at University Baptist Church. "Wa Howa Alla-qualde Dow-man Yasued."

The words in English meant, "He is Lord and he is always in my heart."

The Rev. Fayiz Saknini, a Baptist evangelist who grew up in Nazareth, the childhood home of Jesus, pounded the pulpit in emotional free-wheeling baptist fashion. But his words were Arabic.

"Life without hope is sad. It is hell on earth," Saknini said through an interpreter. "Without Jesus we have no hope," he told about 50 worshippers at the meeting last fall.

The Arab revival was probably the first in Texas, said the Rev. Raouf Ghattas, pastor of the Arab mission at University Baptist.

Ghattas said the goal of the revival was to reach the growing Arab population that in recent years has increased to more than 30,000 in the Fort Worth-Dallas area.

Most Arabs are Muslims, he said, but many have a Christian background.

Ghattas, 43, grew up in a Christian home in Cairo, Egypt, as a member of the Presbyterian faith. Now he is a Baptist seeking a master's degree in theology at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth.

Ghattas wants to be a Christian missionary in the Middle East, serving with the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board.

But he hopes to reach fellow Arabs in this area, too.

A poster in his office at University Baptist, printed in Arabic and English, says, "We will not rest until all the Arabs of Fort Worth hear about Jesus."

The Arab mission, which has special classes in Arabic language and culture, has grown from five to 50 members since it was founded in 1985. Most of the growth came in the last year, Ghattas said.

Ghattas has an Arab Christian radio broadcast carried on KVTT/FM 91.7 at 6 p.m. on Sundays. He said it is the only Arab Christian program in the state.

Ghattas acknowledges that most Arabs in the area are Muslims, noting that there are five Islamic mosques in Fort Worth and Dallas.

"I have visited the mosque in Fort Worth, and I have very good relations with my Muslim friends," Ghattas said.

During the revival meeting, Shaun Shorrosh, a native of Lebanon now studying at Southwestern seminary to be a Christian missionary, spoke softly into a microphone as he translated the Arabic words for English-speaking visitors wearing earphones. Those without earphones sat near Shorrosh to hear his translations.

His wife, Amal Shorrosh, also a seminary student, played the piano and sang with the church's music director, Nizar Haddad, who also attends the seminary. Shaun Shorosh's father, Fu'ad Shorrosh, is a Baptist preacher in Tennessee.

Saknini travels the nation preaching and is an employee of the Southern Baptist Home Mission Board based in Atlanta.

"To reach Arab people, you have to love them," Saknini said. "You avoid insulting them by preaching negatively. If they are of Muslim background, you try to emphasize what you have in common with them."

When speaking to Arabs about Christianity, he uses Arabic words, such as "Allah" for God and "Yeshua" for Jesus.

All Arabs, he said, are born into a religious faith. Usually that faith is Muslim, but sometimes their background is in a Christian faith, such as the Coptic, Orthodox or Maronits Catholic churches of the Middle East. Even if Arabs aren't practicing the faith they followed in the Middle East, they find it hard to change to a Wetern-style Christianity, Saknini said.

Many are skeptical of Western Christians, because they still remember learning about the crusades of the Middle Ages, when Arabs of all faiths were killed. Also, they are affected by loyalties to their native Arab nations and know that Western Christians, because they still remember learning about the crusades of the Middle Ages, when Arabs of all faiths were killed. Also, they are affected by loyalties to their native Arab nations and know that Western Christians usually have supported Israel in Arab-Israeli political conflicts, he said.

Becoming a Christian convert often means sacrificing family ties, said Nomie Derani, a former Muslim form Lebanon who is a member of the Arab Baptist mission and a student at Southwestern seminary.

"My family hasn't spoken to me in nine years," she said.

During the revival meeting, Saknini, whose brother Fu'ad Saknini is pastor of the Baptist Church in Nazareth, had a reunion with the Rev. Finlay Graham and his wife, Julia, who retired in 1986 after 40 years as Baptist missionaries to Lebanon.

Finlay Graham was in charge of missionaries in the Middle East and founded the seminary in Lebanon where Sakinini studied. Graham now is an adjunct professor at Southwestern Seminary.

"Our Muslim friends are militantly evangelistic," Graham said, "and they are doing a lot more than Christians in many places to rehabilitate ex-convicts and fight drugs."

The greatest concentration of Arab Christians in the United States, Saknini said, is around Los Angeles.

Extension seminary courses scheduled

The Presbytery of Tres Rios and Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary have joined together to bring to West Texas extension seminary courses for those in the Midland/Odessa area and others who are interested, but are not able to regularly attend classes at the seminary in Austin, according to Dr. A.J. Moreau, director of the West Texas Extension of APTS.

The next course, to be held in the spring semester, 1990, will be "American Church History," taught by Dr. R. Ken Peters, adjunct professor at APTS and pastor of the New Braunfels Presbyterian Church, New Braunfels.

Dates for the course, to be held at First Presbyterian Church, Odessa, will be Friday night/Saturday: February 9-10; February 16-17; March 9-10; March 30-31; April 20-21; and May 4-5, 1990.

This is a six credit-hour course in which participants explore how Christianity in America developed in relation to a larger and largely secular, historical context. The course seeks to avoid the kind of narrowly institutional focus which is characteristic of so much denominational history.

Topics to be studied among others, are: Spanish Catholicism in a New World environment; how the reformation came to America; reconsidering Presbyterianism and American Politicians; and Protestantism's uncertain future.

Anyone interested in quality theological education may participate. The program will be especially attractive to persons interested in beginning work toward a Master of Divinity degree; persons working toward certification as Christian educators; lay persons interested in deepening their knowledge and competence.

Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary is a seminary of the Presbyterian Church (USA), located in Austin. The seminary has been educating people for the Christian ministry since 1902.

Seventh-day Adventists supports needy programs

"The old-fashioned concept that we are our brother's keeper will be translated into dollars and cents at the Midland Seventh-day Adventist Church," says a release from the church.

Jan. 13 members will give an offering to support the following checklist of services for those in poverty in Midland and other cities:

- Medical vans to give needed tests to those too poor to obtain them otherwise;
- Tutoring for students from low income homes who need help in mastering subjects at school;
- Classes on simple family finance so money can be stretched as far as possible;
- Classes in family relationships for families that are fragmented by poverty, disease, drugs or other problems;
- "Know Your Rights" classes for families to learn enough abut the law to protect themselves from illegal acts;
- Child care classes that offer simple but effective methods in nutrition, sanitation and other health principles;
- Field trips that take children to cultural centers where their horizons can be broadened;
- Day camps that allow ghetto children to enjoy the freedom of life in country settings;
- Immigration classes that assist in achieving legal status and eventual citizenship for the foreign-born;
- and contact with and classes for migrant workers.

"Each of the millions of people to be helped through these programs are out brothers and sisters," said Eddie Card, pastor, in announcing the offering the local Adventist church will give. "As Christians we feel the same concern for these people as our Lord did by his example in healing the sick, comforting the sorrowing and giving hope to those in great need."

The local Adventist church is joining some 35,000 other Adventist congregations throughout North America in giving to aid those in need in the various improvised areas of the nation's cities.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Glass to have finance seminar

Jack Glass will present his family finance seminar at Calvary Assembly of God, 908 S. Johnston St., Sunday through Wednesday.

Some of the topics to be discussed include four reasons people encounter financial difficulty, seven money mistakes people make, hot to get out and stay out of debt, 10 purposes of a properly drawn will, five spending rules for the home, 12 tidy tips for grocery shoppers and eight things a budget can do for you.

The seminar first was presented in 1977 when Glass discovered that most of the conflicts in people's lives came as a result of money problems. Since that time, the seminar has been presented in high schools, churches, community rooms, at camps and on college campuses.

"This is a practical course which tells money where to go so that people don't have to ask where it went," says a release from the church. "Attenders participate in the interaction of budget-building and developing a debt-retirement system, as they learn ways to get away from too much month left at the end of the money."

Hours are 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Sunday and 7:30 p.m. Monday through Wednesday. Coletta Glass will be speaking to the women's ministries at 10 a.m. Tuesday.

The church's pastor, the Rev. Gayle Reeves, invites all interested parties to attend.

Susan Eisenhower to marry advisor to Soviet president

WASHINGTON (AP) — Susan Eisenhower, granddaughter of President Dwight Eisenhower, said Friday she will marry an adviser to Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, Roald Z. Sagdeev, a rocket scientist and political reformer.

They will be married in a Feb. 9 civil ceremony in Moscow and then will be "blessed" at a religious ceremony at the U.S. Embassy there, Sagdeev said in a telephone interview from Washington.

Sagdeev, a Volga Tatar, said he has "no religious assignment;" Miss Eisenhower is a Protestant.

The couple will maintain two homes, living in Washington with Miss Eisenhower's three school-age children during the fall and spring, and spending summers in Moscow, said Sagdeev, 57. He said he has two grown children.

They met 2½ years ago, and the romance blossomed while they collaborated on a book about "survival, how a very thin layer of intellectuals survived through difficult years, through purges," before Gorbachev rose to power in 1985, Sagdeev said.

The first draft of the book is finished, he said.

Miss Eisenhower, 38, was not immediately available for comment on the wedding, which she announced through the Eisenhower World Affairs Institute. She is the daughter of John Eisenhower. Her brother, David, is married to Julie Nixon Eisenhower.

The marriage will be Miss Eisenhower's third, said a friend of the family. Her first husband was London barrister Alexander Bradshaw, with whom she had one daughter. Her second husband was John Mahon, an attorney in Rochester, N.Y., the father of her two youngest daughters.

Sagdeev is thought to have Gorbachev's ear on a range of scientific issues, and has said that he offered the Soviet leader advice on Star Wars, which Sagdeev opposes.

Stallone

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Sylvestor Stallone is going in for another round of struggle and success in the boxing ring.

Stallone, Talia Shire, Burt Young and company will begin filming "Rocky V" here Jan. 15, Mayor W. Wilson Goode announced Thursday.

The new film will feature the familiar formula — fighting, winning with the boxing backdrop. Rocky Balboa, perhaps Philadelphia's most famous resident since William Penn, faces his greatest challenge, producers say, a test that will pit him against his own values, strength and, ultimately, his own spirit.

Boxing heavyweight contender Tommy Morrison is featured as Rocky's protege, Tommy Gun. John Alvidsen, who directed the first "Rocky" in Philadelphia in 1975 with the then-unknown Stallone, will direct the fourth sequel and filming is expected to last about six weeks.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Martha Raye, the exuberant 73-year-old comedian known as the "Big Mouth," broke several ribs in a fall at home that forced a hospital stay, officials said

Miss Raye was listed in fair condition Friday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, said hospital spokesman Ron Wise. She fell on Tuesday.

"We're not sure yet when she's going to be released yet, but I don't expect it to be more than a few days," Wise said, adding that she was in good spirits.

Miss Raye worked in theater and in movies such as Charlie Chaplin's "Monsieur Verdoux," but is perhaps best known for entertaining troops with Bob Hope. She did shows at military bases during World War II, the Korean War and in Vietnam.

Her morale-boosting efforts earned her presidential praise and a special Academy Award in 1969.

Most recently, she has appeared in TV commercials, capitalizing on her widely elastic smile and nickname to promote a denture adhesive.

Willis

DENVER (AP) — Portions of Bruce Willis' "Die Hard II" will be filmed at Stapleton International Airport, which has angered airline officials who say it endorses terrorism.

"It involves terrorism, violence against airports, destruction of an aircraft and a crash," Jack Ekey, general manager of United Airlines' Denver operations, said Thursday.

"As a matter or principle, we don't believe that kind of thing represents either airports or airlines in a way which we see ourselves or want the public to see us," he said.

Representatives of all airlines that use Stapleton lodged a complaint last week with airport officials.

Twentieth Century-Fox plans to start shooting the film at Stapleton and in Weld County on Jan. 15.

Greg Lazzaro, location manager of the film, said the airlines' position is "total, unadulterated bull," and "preposterous and stupid."

Ekey said the film script, which has not been shown to the airlines, is the story of police officer's battle against terrorists who try to take over Dulles International Airport in suburban Washington, D.C.

The plot of the sequel to "Die Hard" is heavy on wisecracks and liberal in the use of automatic weapons and plastic explosives, he said.

Wilder

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Filmmaker and art collector Billy Wilder said his artworks were unharmed by the flames of a rampaging fire that whipped through his apartment building last month.

"Nothing was lost. We just had smoke damage," Wilder said in a recent interview.

Inside the posh Westwood-area apartment he shares with his wife, Audrey, were African sculptures, French primitives, drawings by Saul Steinberg, pre-Columbian artifacts and more than 2000 books, he said.

The Dec. 23 fire spread from a construction site to more than a dozen nearby buildings as high winds blew embers over a wide area. More than 150 people evacuated to escape the fire that caused an estimated $25 million damage.

Wilder would not disclose the value of his art collection.

Wilder, 83, was a busy Hollywood film producer, director and screenwriter during Hollywood's Golden Age. His feature film credits include "Double Indemnity" in 1944, "Some Like It Hot" in 1959, "The Apartment" in 1960 and "Irma la Douce" in 1963.

"The Apartment" earned him the Academy Award for best director.

WORLD in brief

West Germany to fund work

EAST BERLIN (AP) — Officials from both German nations announced a multibillion-dollar project Friday to renovate crumbling cities in East Germany and provide more and better housing for people on both sides of the border.

Also Friday, East German's official news agency reported that ousted Communist leader Erich Honecker, who faces corruption charges, is too ill to be jailed and needs surgery to remove a kidney tumor.

The first beneficiaries of the joint renovation project will be the East German cities of Meissen, Weimar, Brandenburg and Stralsund.

Those cities and many other urban areas of East Germany require major restoration following damage during World War II.

General neglect under a socialist system that gave priority to industry over living conditions, and the devastating effects of the brown-coal haze choking major cities, have contributed to their deterioration.

West Germany's construction minister, Gerda Hasselfeldt, said Bonn will contribute $4 billion to the project in the next two years.

Ms. Hasselfeldt and East Germany's minister for construction and housing, Gerhard Baumgaertel, said the reconstruction of the four cities will be the pilot project for cooperation between the German states.

Liberian fighting noted

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Fighting between Liberian forces and rebels opposed to President Samuel K. Doe has destroyed two towns in northeastern Liberia and sent thousands fleeing across the border, Western diplomats said today.

The fighting began nearly two weeks ago in eastern Nimba County, where Doe said two groups of rebels entered Dec. 24 from neighboring Ivory Coast.

One of the groups killed a police sergeant at the border town of Butuo before government forces "arrested the situation," while the other group reached the capital, Monrovia, but abandoned their weapons and surrendered, Doe said Tuesday.

Family may not stay

HAIFA, Israel (AP) — Nineteen members of a Soviet family who immigrated to Israel this week may have to find another place to live after disclosing that they are not Jews but members of a Christian sect.

Pyotr and Alexandra Trofimov arrived in Israel with 17 children and grandchildren on Dec. 31 after emigrating from the Crimean city of Simferopol.

Like Jewish immigrants to Israel, the Trofimovs were granted automatic citizenship and given certificates entitling each family member to $175 and extensive housing and education benefits. They were housed in three modern apartments in the port city of Haifa.

The government apparently learned through news reports later that the family is not Jewish but Pentecostal, a fundamentalist Christian sect.

Abductions reported

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Drug traffickers in Medellin have abducted at least 20 people, including members of Colombia's richest families, as part of their terrorist war against the government, police said Friday.

Most of the victims were kidnapped in the last two months in Medellin, the center of the country's cocaine trade, said a police spokesman in Medellin.

The spokesman, reached by telephone, refused to identify himself.

A statement sent by the Medellin cartel said traffickers had ordered the "leaders of working-class neighborhoods to take members of the traditional oligarchy hostage."

Moslem rivals fight

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rival Shiite Moslem militias battled with machine guns, mortars and rocket-propelled grenades today in south Lebanon, killing four people and wounding 12, including three PLO guerrillas sent in to quell the violence, police said.

President Elias Hrawi, meanwhile, planned to set up his office and residence in a west Beirut building to avoid the risks of commuting in the Moslem area, where his predecessor was killed by a car bomb.

'Re-educated' Vietnamese headed for new lives

WORLD

By DAVID BRUNNSTROM

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Hundreds of Vietnamese who helped the Americans during the Vietnam War, and paid for it with years in "re-education" camps after the Communist victory, are en route to new lives in the United States.

Three chartered jets brought the first 156 former camp inmates and their families to Bangkok from Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon, on Friday and 151 more were expected Saturday.

Nearly 2,000 Vietnamese, including family members, are scheduled to leave their homeland by March, said Richard Kocher, head of the Thailand office of the International Organization For Migration. His agency handles medical processing and transportation of the refugees.

"I have come to the free world," said former army officer Nguyen Thuong Hiep after arriving at Bangkok airport with his wife and two children. "Everyone loves their country, but our country suffers, as you know. We do wish to come back sometime."

The two young daughters of another former officer wore white lace dresses and red hair ribbons in celebration.

"I cannot say how happy I am after all these years," said Nguyen Cao Son, who taught at a military academy. He spent three years in a re-education camp, then three years in jail for trying to flee the country by boat.

Hundreds of thousands of Vietnamese were subjected for years to a spartan regimen of manual labor and political study for serving the U.S.-backed government of South Vietnam, which fell in April 1975.

A U.S. source in Bangkok has said Washington believes about 100,000 former camp inmates are among the 600,000 Vietnamese who have applied to emigrate to the United States. He said the Vietnamese government estimates former inmates and their families total 550,000 people.

Vietnam has freed hundreds of the prisoners in recent years, and Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach had said in June only about 120 people remained interned.

An agreement on resettling former camp inmates was reached in July. The U.S. negotiator, senior State Department official Robert L. Funseth, said at the time it would help heal "the last big wound remaining from the war."

Many of those who arrived Friday will join relatives in California and other parts of the United States after a few days in a Thai immigration facility.

Nguyen Van So has been trying to join his sister in Oklahoma since he was freed in 1981 after six years years of confinement. He said conditions in the camps were very, very bad. It was hard labor."

Ho Van Phuoc, a helicopter pilot who flew hundreds of missions during the war, said he saw about 25 people shot for trying to flee a re-education camp and many others died of disease.

Some family members of the former inmates were not as happy to leave home. "It is very sad to be separated," said Nguyen Hoang Bich Van, 18, who left her boyfriend behind.

The refugees said people in Vietnam were following the pro-democracy movements in Eastern Europe closely and hoped the revolution would come to their own country.

"I hope the government will be good enough to understand the situation and open the society," said Nguyen Cao Son. "We don't want a situation like that in Romania to happen in Vietnam."

Nicolae Ceausescu, the Communist dictator of Romania, was overthrown and executed last month after a bloody uprising.

Hundreds of thousands of Vietnamese have been resettled in the United States since the war.

The two nations do not have diplomatic relations.

Panamanian newspapers reopen as fight for recovery continues

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Two newspapers seized by the military more than two decades ago reappeared Friday with editorials defending the U.S. invasion that toppled Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega and installed a civilian government.

The Chamber of Commerce, staunchly opposed to Noriega during his rule, also reopened its doors after being closed for a year and nearly destroyed in the invasion fighting.

At the reopening ceremony for the chamber, President Guillermo Endara said Panama must "fight for freedom every day" despite Noriega's surrender to U.S. authorities Wednesday and flight to face U.S. drug trafficking charges in Florida.

President Bush said in Washington he hoped the troops deployed to oust Noriega would leave Panama "as soon as possible ... I would look for an early return." He refused to set a timetable.

Bush said the normal complement of troops in Panama — roughly 12,000 — would remain. An additional 14,000 were sent in to supplement the existing forces during the U.S. assault.

A Pentagon spokesman said Friday that 900 U.S. troops left, raising the total number of soldiers who left Panama since the invasion to 2,900. There are now 24,500 in the country because additional military police and other support personnel have come in since the assault.

The newspapers Critica Libre and El Panama America had editions on the streets Friday with pro-U.S editorials defending the Dec. 20 invasion. The dailies were seized by the military in 1968 shortly after the military coup that installed Omar Torrijos as leader. In recent years, the papers were used as pro-Noriega mouthpieces.

U.S. Rep. Richard Gephardt, right, shakes hands with Panamanian President Guillermo Endara as Vice Presidnet Arias Calderon looks on.

El Panama America criticized the Organization of American States for condemning the invasion.

"The Latin American governments ... acted against the best interest of Panama, against the 35,000 Americans living in the country, against the security of the Panama Canal and against the international campaign to end drug trafficking and money laundering," it said.

Facing economic difficulties following the invasion and two years of U.S. economic sanctions that nearly froze the flow of dollars, Panamanian businessmen said Friday that U.S. economic aid was essential to rebuild the country.

"We are a living a difficult moment ... for the worker, for the businessman," said Chamber of Commerce head Alfredo Maduro. "For the real recovery of the country to take place, we will need the help of our friends."

A White House spokesman said the 1991 budget had no aid money to repair invasion-related damage to Panama.

"Undoubtedly there will be some international funds, some bank loans and that sort of thing that would be involved, and at this point we just can't say how any aid might be financed," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

Gorbachev focusing on domestic woes

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev canceled meetings with foreign guests to concentrate on domestic crises, a source said Friday, and news of the schedule change triggered a steep drop in the Tokyo stock market and unsettled Wall Street.

Gorbachev put off engagements with foreign visitors, including British opposition leader Neil Kinnock, to deal with border riots in Azerbaijan and the breakaway Communist Party of Lithuania, a senior official said.

News of the schedule change was not reported by Soviet media, but it was felt abroad.

The Tokyo Stock Exchange recorded its sharpest drop on Friday since Oct. 16, plummeting 438.12 points, and analysts put the plunge down to concern about Gorbachev's fate. A slight decline in stock prices on Wall Street and a steep drop on the Hong Kong exchange were also attributed to the Soviet leader's schedule changes.

"To Japan, the worst thing that could happen to the world scenario would be for Gorbachev to drop from sight," Chris Schreiber, an investment analyst with New Japan Securities, said in Tokyo.

The market reactions pointed up how closely Gorbachev is linked by many in the capitalist world to the success of the reforms and improved East-West relations he has pursued since coming to power in March 1985.

A senior Communist Party official, asked Friday about Western news reports that Gorbachev had postponed planned meetings with Kinnock and other foreign dignitaries, replied, "It's right."

"We have many problems right now," he added.

The Communist official, speaking on condition of anonymity, mentioned disturbances this week along the Iranian border and the Lithuanian Communist Party's decision to break away from the ruling national party headed by Gorbachev.

Soviet Azerbaijanis tried over the New Year's holiday to force open the frontier and reunite with their ethnic brethren in Iran, tearing down guard towers and prompting the KGB to reinforce security along the frontier. Fences remain flattened and other barriers out of commission along the border, Soviet TV reported Friday night.

Gorbachev is expected to travel to Lithuania next week on a mission from the national party's Central Committee to try to mend the rift with the Lithuanian Communists. They voted two weeks ago to split off from the 20 million-member ruling party and pursue local independence, and Lithuanian party leaders who met with Gorbachev for five hours Thursday said he failed to sway them from their decision.

A dissenting faction of Lithuanian Communists who voted to remain loyal to Moscow were on their way to the capital Friday to meet with party leaders, said a TV journalist.

Meanwhile, the Estonian Communist Party threw its support to the Lithuanians in the dispute with Moscow, reports said Friday. The Estonian party's Central Committee meeting Thursday set March 23 for a session of its own full congress.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov, in a telephone interview, would neither confirm nor deny that Gorbachev was putting aside foreign questions to concentrate on domestic problems.

Asked about a report from London that the Soviet ambassador to Britain, Leonid Zamyatin, had told Kinnock that Gorbachev was postponing a Jan. 16 meeting with Kinnock and all other contacts with foreign politicians this month, Gerasimov replied: "Has this meeting been planned? Let The Associated Press compose its own commentary. For me this is all clear. Let them comment on that as they wish."

West favors supervision of Romanian elections

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Western politicians said Friday the plan to hold elections in only three months could give the interim leadership an unfair advantage, and they recommended international supervision of the vote.

U.S. Rep. Frank R. Wolf, R-Va., said Romania's new political parties lack the "tools of democracy," and proposed a referendum on the election date. New parties have asked that elections be delayed beyond April so they will have time to organize.

Wolf and Otto Lambsdorff, both of whom were visiting Bucharest, recommended international monitoring of the elections. Lambsdorff is a former West German economics minister.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze was scheduled to visit Bucharest on Saturday for the first meeting between the new leaders and a ranking Soviet official.

Silviu Brucan, a member of the National Salvation Front, said Thursday the Soviets had promised extensive aid, including fuel for the hard winter. The Front has governed Romania since the downfall of Communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu, who was deposed Dec. 22 and executed Dec. 25.

Lt. Gen. Victor Stanculescu, who is in charge of the economy for the Front, said in an interview published Friday some trading partners had agreed to accept exports of industrial products instead of food. He did not name the countries, but food has been one of Romania's exports to the Soviet Union.

The interim leadership has stopped food exports and redirected supplies to the nation's 23 million people, who endured rationing for years as part of Ceausescu's successful plan to repay the foreign debt.

Its revolution appears to have brought Romania closer to the Soviet Union, despite the collapse of the Communist Party. Ceausescu often was at odds with the Kremlin on trade and foreign policy, and rejected Mikhail S. Gorbachev's plans for economic and social reform.

Shevardnadze and Romanian leaders are expected discuss the sensitive issue of Soviet Moldavia, one of several restive Soviet regions. Most of the republic is former Romanian territory annexed in 1940 under a secret protocol of the Hitler-Stalin pact of 1939.

Moldavians, whose language is virtually identical to Romanian, have demanded increased autonomy and Romania's revolution has prompted speculation they may seek reunification.

The National Salvation Front initially said it would not run candidates in the April elections, but later reversed itself. The half-dozen parties founded since the revolution have said they need time to organize.

Wolf said the Front's control of radio and television "could be a real concern" in a campaign, and parties outside the Front should be allowed access to the media.

Without media access and scarce equipment such as typewriters and copiers, the independent parties would be at a serious disadvantage, Wolf said.

Lambsdorff also expressed concern that the interim leadership would have an edge, and said at a news conference: "It would perhaps be necessary to assure international supervision for the results of the elections to be completely fair."

Policeman reports partner shoplifted candy

SKOVDE, Sweden (AP) — A policeman with a sweet tooth was turned in by his partner for shoplifting a two-cent piece of candy, but the state refused to prosecute the case, it was reported Friday.

The two officers went into a closed candy store in November to investigate a burglar alarm, which turned out to be faulty, the TT news agency said. On the way out, one officer took a piece of candy, and was charged with shoplifting by his partner, TT said.

Prosecutor Krister Waern said the charge was dropped because the candy store owner previously had offered treats to police when they came to his shop late at night to turn off false alarms, TT reported.

Other police in Skovde, in south-central Sweden, agreed the officer was wrong to take the candy but said his partner should not have reported him.

The officer was not identified, in keeping with Swedish law.

Communists urge settling of ethnic strife in Bulgaria

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — Senior Communists appealed for a halt to mounting ethnic strife Friday as strikes over the rights of ethnic Turks paralyzed two cities and Slav nationalist protests spread to at least seven other cities.

Tense relations among the Slav majority, the estimated 1 million ethnic Turks and ethnic Moslems in Bulgaria boiled over into vocal, patriotic protests by ethnic Bulgarians objecting to a Dec. 29 decision on minority rights.

The Communist Party reversed the assimilation policy pursued by its ousted leader, Todor Zhivkov, and said ethnic Turks could use their own names and language and practice Moslem religious rites free of previous restrictions.

On Thursday, thousands of Bulgarians waving the red, white and green national flag and chanting "Bulgaria for the Bulgarians!" protested outside the National Assembly in Sofia.

They demanded that the Dec. 29 decision be reversed and a referendum be held on ethnic rights.

The ruling Communists and the democratic opposition rejected the demands in a joint appeal for ethnic calm.

That failed to quash protest strikes Friday in Kardzhali, where almost half the 50,000 inhabitants are ethnic Turks, and nearby Haskovo, where 25,000 people rallied under such slogans as "The Central Committee sold out Bulgaria."

Most of Kardzhali's population was reported on the streets and srikes shut down all enterprises and public transport there. Reports reaching Sofia said both ethnic Bulgarians and what the state news agency BTA called "the Moslem population" staged different demonstrations, but no word of violence emerged.

BTA said work stoppages and demonstrations also took place in Plovdiv, Bulgaria's second largest city; the central town of Stara Zagora; the northern cities of Ruse, Razgrad and Silistra and the eastern towns of Shumen and Varna.

Thousands rallied for five hours outside Communist Party headquarters in Shumen, where rail traffic was paralyzed all afternoon, BTA said. In Silistra, students threatened a hunger strike against the ruling, it added.

The Defense Ministry meanwhile pledged that the southern border with Turkey was secure. Turkey said Thursday that the protests could damage the always prickly relations between the two nations.

Think about it.

Czech leader challenges Moscow over German unification

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
Hearst News Service

The Soviets' current line is that "history must decide" the fate of German unification — strongly suggesting that as, far as they're concerned, "history" had better be a long time in making up its mind.

An Analysis

PARIS — Vaclav Havel, Czechoslovakia's fledgling president, has become the first of Eastern Europe's new breed of leaders to challenge Moscow on a major issue of international politics.

His endorsement of German unification as an event ¹ality that neither his own country nor the rest of Europe need fear flies in the face of Soviet policy.

Until now, the newly emancipated Eastern European governments were content to demonstrate their independence of Moscow through internal political and economic changes.

Havel's statement on German unity during his visit earlier this week to East Berlin and Munich is the first time a position markedly at odds with Moscow's has been taken on an issue central to East-West relations.

If the Czech president, in office only a few days, realized he was treading on dangerous ground, he showed no sign of it.

In the present circumstances, there are advantages for a country like Czechoslovakia to be led by someone whose career has been spent defying totalitarian authority and writing avant-garde plays rather than digesting the rules of power politics.

Havel hedged his support for a single Germany with plenty of ifs and buts.

He emphasized — as, for that matter, have most West German politicians — that unity could be achieved only by democratic means and in step with moves toward greater European unity as a whole. He also warned against any suggestion of restoring Germany's pre-war borders.

Nonetheless, he said that a united, democratic Germany, provided that essential conditions were met, was no cause for fear among its immediate neighbors or in the rest of the world.

Coming from the leader of a country that was one of Hitler's first victims and, as he said, is "virtually surrounded" by Germany, Havel's words were remarkable.

His position substantially differs from what Soviet officials, from President Mikhail Gorbachev down, have been saying.

Gorbachev has repeatedly insisted that, whatever other changes he's prepared to contemplate, the rapid disappearance of a separate East Germany isn't one of them.

Gorbachev's vehemence on the subject may even have helped to switch President Bush and Secretary of State James Baker from their initial enthusiasm to their present go-slow approach to unification.

The Soviets' current line is that "history must decide" the fate of German unification — strongly suggesting that as, far as they're concerned, "history" had better be a long time in making up its mind.

Only two weeks ago, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze warned that any attempt to press the issue would lead to the "destabilization" of Europe.

"Destabilizaton" is an updated version of what the Soviets used to call "revanchism" — the idea that a unified Germany would inevitably embark on an expansionist policy to seek revenge for its World War II defeat.

Throughout the postwar period, Soviet propaganda harped on that fear in countries like Poland and Czechoslovakia where, admittedly, memories of what the "Reich" had been capable of were impossible to forget.

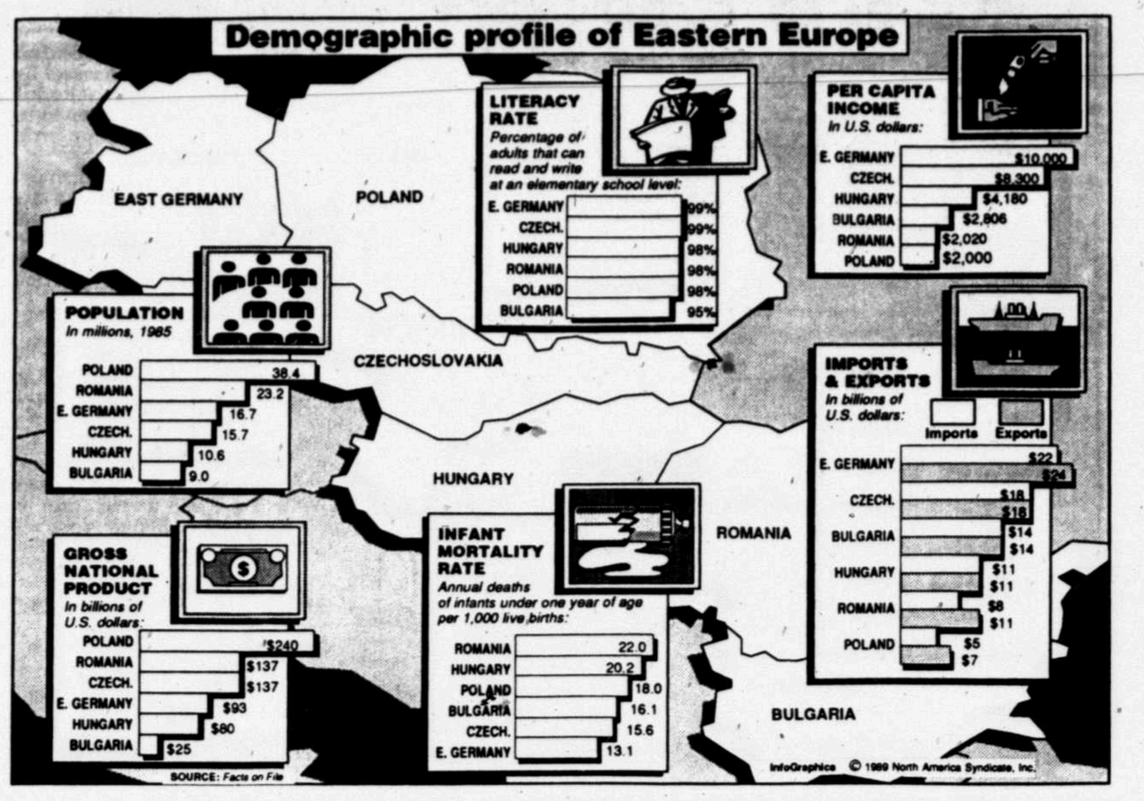

But Havel's declaration cuts across the Soviet position in a manner that Moscow must find particularly discomfiting.

He has made what, for an Eastern European leader, amounts to a new appraisal of Germany, one that the Soviets clearly aren't yet ready to accept.

In effect, he has said the Czechs are willing to forgive and forget — are willing, in fact, to give the new German generation a strong benefit of doubt in the interest of the wider goal of European peace and prosperity.

Havel appeared to be inviting the Poles, the Hungarians and others in the pulverized Soviet bloc to join him in reassessing the German question on their own and no longer to take their cue from Moscow.

The implication was that, although the Soviets may have a vested interest in East Germany's survival, Czechoslovakia and the other new Eastern European regimes don't necessarily share it.

Azerbaijan region historically troubled

N.Y. Times News Service

The part of Azerbaijan north of the Aras River was briefly independent, beginning in May 1918, but was conquered by the Red Army in 1920.

The Azerbaijanis are a Turkic-speaking Shiite Muslim people who live on both sides of the Soviet-Iranian border, in territory that has been a battleground for peoples and tribes for centuries.

The area, bordered by the Caspian Sea, Russia, Soviet Georgia, Soviet Armenia, Turkey and Kurdistan, was conquered by, among others, the Persians, Arabs, Mongols and Turks.

In the early 19th century, Russia conquered the northern part of Azerbaijan — the territory north of the Aras River, which now forms much of the border between Soviet Azerbaijan and Iran. The segment of Azerbaijan south of the river became a province of Persia.

The part of Azerbaijan north of the Aras River was briefly independent, beginning in May 1918, but was conquered by the Red Army in 1920.

The Soviet republic of Azerbaijan covers about 33,000 square miles, including the Nakhichevan autonomous republic and the Nagorno-Karabakh autonomous oblast. The total population of the oil-rich republic is about 6.7 million.

The Azerbaijani section of Iran covers about 41,000 square miles, with a population of about four million ethnic Azerbaijanis.

The Soviet-Iranian border area was a focus of international tension at the end of World War II.

Stalin sent Soviet troops into northern Iran in 1941 and refused to pull them out at the end of the war. The Soviet troops supported the formation of a local government independent of Teheran in Iranian Azerbaijan, but the Iranian government, the Western powers and the U.N. Security Council insisted on Soviet withdrawal.

By the end of 1946, the Soviet troops had withdrawn, and Iranian troops were again in power.
