Lebanese warplanes hard hit in mission

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — One of Lebanon's five operational warplanes was shot down today, two were hit and a fourth made an emergency landing in Cyprus after the air force's first combat mission in 10 years, officials said.

Shellfire also apparently from Druse batteries struck the U.S. Marine base and the area near the U.S. and British embassies, but no Western casualties were reported.

The air force had seven warplanes several weeks ago, but one was burned in an attack at the airport and another was under repair and not functioning, leaving only five to take to the skies today.

A Lebanese military communique said one of the Hawker Hunter jets was shot down and crashed into the Mediterranean. The pilot was rescued by a U.S. helicopter and flown to the carrier Iwo Jima.

Marine spokesman Charles Rowe said "there is no indication his life is in danger." He did not elaborate.

A Western military source said the plane was hit by either small arms fire or anti-aircraft guns over the central mountain town of Souk el-Gharb. The source, who briefed reporters on condition he not be named, said another Hawker Hunter was hit, but it landed safely, was repaired and sent back up in the air.

The spokesman for the British base in Akrotiri in southern Cyprus, Martin Hallm, said two Lebanese Hawker Hunter jets made emergency landings there. He said one flew back to Lebanon and the other was damaged and remained on the tarmac. He did not elaborate, but informed sources in Cyprus said it was shot up.

The Western military source in Beirut said Syria scrambled jets along Lebanon's northern border and Israeli warplanes thundered over southern Lebanon, but neither Israeli nor Syrian planes intervened in the fighting.

The air raid by the Lebanese air force marked the first time in 10 years that its warplanes staged bombing sorties. The target, reportedly beaten back by the raid, was a Druse force attacking the mountaintop town of Souk el-Gharb with support from Palestinian guerrillas, Lebanese command communiques said.

Four mortar rounds later hit the Marine zone, sending the 1,200 American peacekeepers ducking into bunkers and foxholes, Associated Press photographer Don Mell said by telephone. About three hours later, a couple of mortars struck just inside Marine lines at the airport.

U.S. Embassy press attache John Stewart said three shells fell "very close" to several sand-bagged Marine positions guarding U.S. and British personnel at the two embassies. They are in northern Beirut and the airport is in the southern part of the city.

Palestinians build forces

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Palestinian guerrillas are steadily building their forces in central Lebanon and soon may confront the Israeli army across its new Awali River defense line in south Lebanon, Israeli military analysts say.

Military sources say there are between 1,000 and 1,500 guerrillas concentrated mainly along the Beirut-Damascus highway between Bhamdoun and Aley, about 10 miles southeast of Beirut.

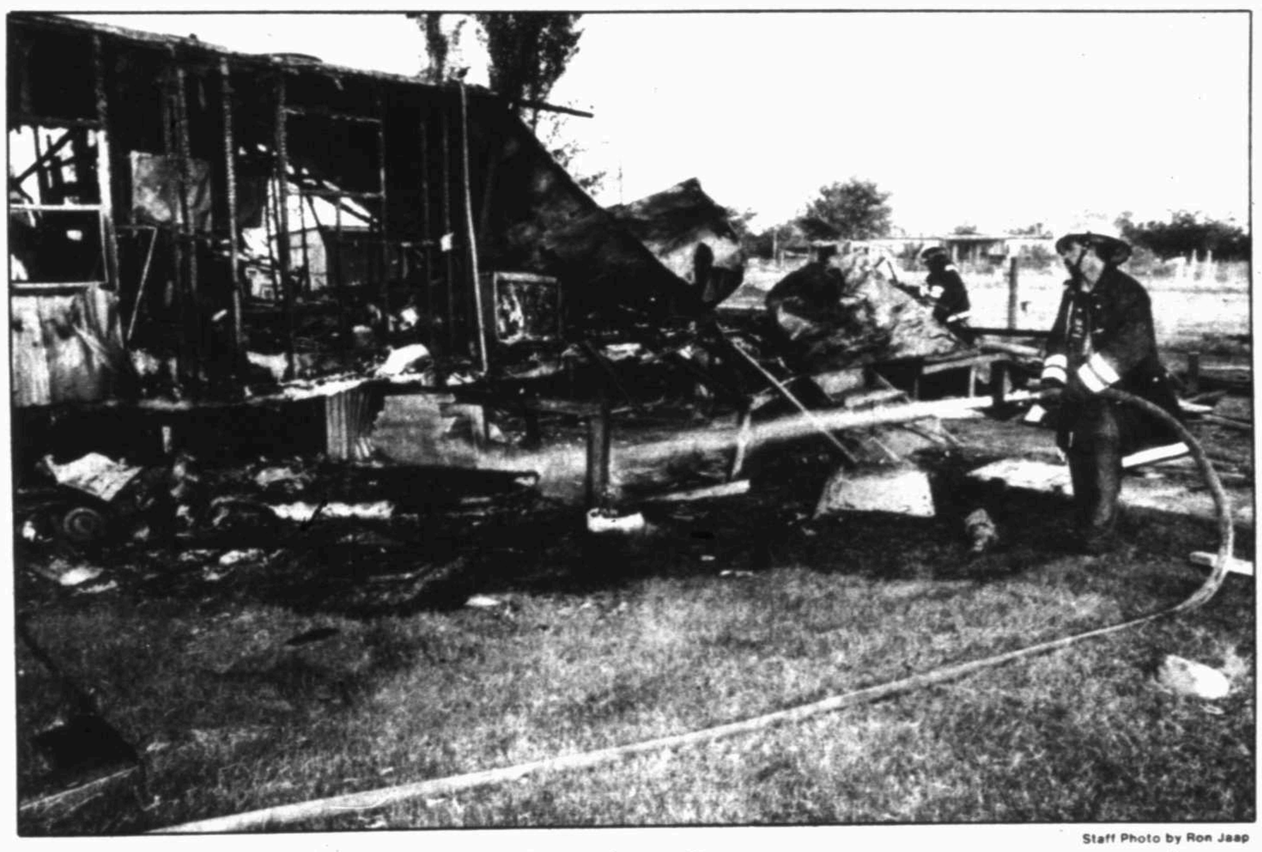

Since Israel's Sept. 4 withdrawal from the embattled Chouf Mountains overlooking Beirut, there has been a steady buildup of Palestinian forces equipped with Soviet-made Katyusha rockets, tanks and other heavy weapons, the sources said.

"We are definitely taking into consideration that before too long we will find them (the Palestinians) facing us across the Awali, perhaps within weeks," said one Israeli military analyst who declined to be named. "I would expect they would try this."

Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Thursday that Israel would not permit the Palestine Liberation Organization to establish bases in the Chouf, although no details were given by government sources about what would be done to prevent it.

The analysts said Palestinian guerrillas moved into the central mountain area around Aley with Syrian encouragement after Druse militiamen overran about 3,000 Christian militiamen in Bhamdoun last week.

A well-placed Israeli official said U.S. envoy Richard Fairbanks told Shamir the United States would not allow the strategic mountaintop town of Souk el-Gharb to fall to Druse forces.

Trailer fire

Midland firefighter Jim McCoul sprays the smoking remains of a mobile home, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. James W. Allison, at County Road 1220 and 118 South this morning. The fire, which broke out at 1 a.m., was extinguished at about 4:30 a.m. Firemen responded again around 7 a.m. when the fire rekindled.

Fire destroys mobile home

A fire that destroyed a mobile home in rural Midland early this morning rekindled around 7 a.m., forcing units from the fire department to respond again.

According to fire officials, a house and its contents at County Road 118 West and 1220 South, occupied by James Allison, were destroyed when a fire broke out at about 1 a.m. today. Eleven men battled the blaze until almost 4:30 a.m.

Blazing on arrival, the fire was extinguished with 10,500 gallons of water. Two trucks responded when the flames shot up again at 7 a.m.

Cause of the blaze was attributed to a leak in a pipeline. No injuries were reported in either incident.

Resignation marks 'new day' for TDC

HOUSTON (AP) — The resignation of state prison director W.J. Estelle signifies that "the rules of the game have changed" and marks a "new day" of increased state and federal government influence in the prison system, state officials say.

Estelle, citing the Legislature's rejection of more than half of the Texas Department of Correction's proposed $1.5 billion prison budget, publicly announced Thursday he will resign within the next three to six months.

Reagan, Congress put Soviet leaders 'on notice'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Armed with unanimous backing of the Congress, President Reagan is telling the Soviet Union that its shooting down of Korean Air Lines Flight 007 is condemned by Americans of all political views.

"The Kremlin is on notice," Reagan said in a statement Thursday as the Senate voted, 95-0, to approve a harshly worded joint resolution passed a day earlier by the House, 416-0.

"When it comes to responding to its aggression, there are no Republicans or Democrats — only Americans, united and determined to protect our freedom and secure the peace," the president said.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., a veteran of many legislative battles, picked up Reagan's theme, saying, "This is a major bipartisan achievement."

Similarly, Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., said: "The world will have heard this nation speaking with one voice." And Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said, "We stand together with the president of the United States in this action."

The Korean jumbo jet carrying 269 people was downed by a missile-firing Soviet fighter plane after it strayed into Soviet airspace north of Japan while en route from Anchorage, Alaska, to Seoul.

Before gaining final passage of the resolution, which goes to Reagan for his signature, Baker had to deflect attempts by a group of conservatives led by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who offered eight amendments that would toughen the measure with specific sanctions.

In doing so, Baker was reflecting White House wishes that Congress show a united front in support of the limited steps that the president has taken thus far.

But Helms argued, "Unless we put some teeth in it (the resolution), it will be shrugged off in the Kremlin. The fact is we must take real action."

The State Department, meanwhile, said an air travel ban that took effect Thursday to protest the plane's destruction had cut about half the air traffic between the the Soviet Union and non-Communist countries.

"We are gratified at this," we think it is fairly successful," said a senior State Department official who briefed reporters on condition he not be identified by name.

Local liquor stores, restaurants won't serve Russian vodka

By GAIL BURKE

All 23 Pinkies Liquor Stores have pulled Russian vodka off their shelves to protest the shooting down of the Korean airliner by the Soviet Union, according to a spokesman for the West Texas liquor chain.

"We pulled all of that (Russian) vodka off of our shelves," said Bob Standifery, marketing manager for the Midland-Odessa area.

In Midland, a spokesman for Pinkies at the Northland Center said: "We took all of it off the shelves this week.

"We're doing this to keep the consumer from being upset with the situation over there," the Pinkies spokesman said.

According to a news release from Pinkies, a company spokesman said: "We don't want to lend our support to any Russian products. We will continue to carry a wide variety of domestic and other imported vodkas to satisfy the needs of our customer."

Bill French, manager of Bennigan's restaurant in northwest Midland, said: "We felt real strongly to take a stand on what we believe in and not sell any (Russian) vodka until some action is taken by the Russian government or this whole matter is settled."

A spokesman at The Polo Grounds restaurant on Wadley Avenue, said "if Pinkies has boycotted the Russian vodka, many of the restaurants won't have it because they distribute a lot of the liquor in Midland."

According to Standifery, Pinkies is the local distributer for most of the restuarant/lounges in the area and the Russian vodka "Stolichnaya" will not be available.

"We're not sure what we're going to do with it yet," he said. "For now, we'll store it until further notice."

In a survey of several Midland liquor stores, Jack Leonard, owner of West End Liquors, 3805 W. Wall Ave., said he also pulled the vodka off its shelves.

Soviet, U.S. warships cross paths on plane search

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

U.S. and Soviet warships searching for the wreckage of a South Korean airliner closed to within 550 yards of each other today and a Japanese admiral expressed concern about a possible "shooting incident."

Rear Adm. Masayoshi Kato of Japan's Maritime Safety Agency said the 3,011-ton U.S. frigate Badger and the 8,200-ton Soviet guided missile cruiser Petropavlovsk maneuvered within 550 yards of each other about 20 miles north of Moneron, a tiny Soviet island in the Sea of Japan.

"I hope no shooting incident will occur between the two vessels," the admiral said at a briefing in Wakkanai, Japan.

In Montreal, the U.N.'s aviation agency this morning resumed an emergency meeting on the airliner, with Western delegates pushing for passage of a resolution condemning the Soviet Union. A resolution rebuking Moscow for a "criminal" act was on the way to President Reagan after being passed unanimously by both houses of Congress.

Soviet and American task forces are hunting off Japan for the Korean Air Lines jumbo jet shot down by Soviet fighters Sept. 1 with the loss of all 269 aboard.

A helicopter from the Badger was seen over the area, apparently monitoring the Soviet ships. U.S. military officials in Japan said they had no information on the search operation.

Kato said Japanese patrol boats saw 12 Soviet ships in the area, including the 15,000-ton oil drilling vessel Mikhail Mirchinsk and the 12,000-ton rescue ship Georgi Kozumin. The Soviets have not said if they have found the airliner.

The Georgi Kozumin was conducting undersea operations before dawn this morning, Kato said. The ship was flashing a signal saying "conducting maritime operations — unable to steer, do not move with 1,000 meters (1,100 yards.)"

■ Banning Soviets could endanger Olympics; Related stories — Page 2A

An MSA official, who asked not to be identified, said the Soviets may be trying to recover the airliner under cover of darkness.

Kato said the destroyer USS Stark and the U.S. Navy tug Narragansett were also spotted near the Soviet fleet. The Narragansett and the Navy salvage ship Conserver, also reported in the area, have sonar equipment that can detect signals the airliner's "black box" voice recorder should be emitting.

The head of the Japan Sound Research Center said analysis of the last radio transmissions from the airliner had ungarbled several phrases. Matsumi Suzuki said the pilot had reported "rapid decompression" on the airliner 50 seconds after the Soviets said it was hit by a missile.

In Montreal, Western nations were pushing today for a condemnation of the Soviet Union and an independent investigation as the governing council of the International Civil Aviation Organization continued an emergency session.

Members of the American and other Western delegations were working on a resolution condemning Moscow. A member of the U.S. delegation, who asked not to be named, said as many as 25 of the 33 nations on the council would vote for the resolution.

Federal Aviation Administrator J. Lynn Helms, head of the U.S. delegation, said he expected the council to pass the resolution today. "The other nations of the world have the same feeling we do," he said.

But Soviet delegate Ivan V. Orlovets said Thursday Moscow was conducting its own investigation and the world should wait for the release of its findings before reaching any conclusions.

"There are no grounds for studying this matter in ICAO," Orlovets told the meeting of the agency's 33-nation governing council. "You have to have the facts before starting to accuse people."

The official Vietnam News Agency said today that mass meetings have been held in Hanoi to protest "the U.S.-masterminded South Korean plane intrusion into Soviet airspace." Several meetings of Communist Party officials, workers and visiting Soviet experts demanded the United States "immediately end its dark schemes against world peace."

President Reagan said the Soviet action was condemned by Americans of all political views after the Senate Thursday passed a resolution, 95-0, blasting the "criminal destruction" of the airliner.

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

Cool weather for the northern half of the country is forecast through Saturday by the National Weather Service. Warm weather should continue in the South, with rain predicted for the Northeast.

Area gets just sprinkle of rain

About .14 inches of rain sprinkled the parched plains Thursday, brining the total recorded rainfall to .34 inches for the month. Since the first of the year, the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport has recorded 3.13 inches of rain.

While the NWS didn't mention any rain for the weekend, it is expected to be partly cloudy through the weekend.

Tonight's temperature should dip to the mid-60s, climbing to the mid-90s Saturday. Southeasterly winds are expected to breeze through at 5-15 mph.

Thursday's high of 94 missed the record high of 100 set in 1965, while the overnight low of 68 was warmer than the record low of 50 set in 1951.

Soviet ban would 'endanger' games

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A state legislators' resolution seeking a ban on Soviet participation in the 1984 Olympics could be "very dangerous to survival of the Olympics," says a Games official.

The resolution by Republican state Sen. John Doolittle calling for action by President Reagan and Congress against the Soviets was approved late Wednesday 74-0 in the Assembly and 36-0 in the Senate.

It "condemns the government of the Soviet Union" for the shooting down of a Korean jumbo jet Sept. 1 and urges "appropriate action to oppose Soviet aggression," including banning Soviet athletes from coming to Los Angeles for the Summer Games next year.

F. Don Miller, executive director of the U.S. Olympic Committee, criticized the Legislature's action.

Although the Olympic movement is "one of the strongest social forces in the world," said Miller, "We constantly find narrow-minded people trying to use it."

"Everyone has been invited to Los Angeles and to renege on this at this time would be very, very dangerous to survival of the Olympics and the Olympic movement," he said.

The Los Angeles Olympic Committee's board chairman, Paul Ziffren, and president, Peter V. Ueberroth, said they felt the best response was to say nothing.

Miller, however, in a remark that also recalled the U.S. boycott of the Moscow Games in 1980 after Soviet troops moved into Afghanistan, said: "It's a sorry state of affairs that we do not have men with enough intellect to develop a foreign policy with some meat in it, but go back to the same thing again and again. Isn't there more to our foreign policy than amateur sports?"

"I think we need to take some concrete actions against the Soviets," Doolittle said Thursday. "Participation in the Olympic Games is something they prize, I'd say just about more than anything that involves the free world."

Meanwhile, in Nashville, Tenn., entertainer Johnny Cash announced he has canceled a tour of the Soviet Union to protest the downing of the Korean jet, which was carrying 269 people.

The country music star was scheduled to perform in Leningrad and Moscow Oct. 29 and Oct. 30.

"This is a matter of conscience," Cash said Thursday.

Cash, known for such songs such as "A Boy Named Sue," "I Walk the Line" and "Ring of Fire," said he will proceed with a tour of Scandinavia and Europe.

In Los Angeles, the 26,000-member retail clerks union announced its support for a national boycott of Russian vodka and caviar.

"Obviously, we cannot legally tell our members to not handle Russian products," said Ric Icaza, president of Local 770 of the United Food and Commercial Workers. "But we can inform them that they have a personal right to refuse to handle the goods, and we will file grievances to protect that right."

He said the boycott should continue until the Soviet Union pays compensation to families of the victims.

In Arkansas, the sales manager of a chain of waterbed stores says windows of the shops in Little Rock, Pine Bluff, Hot Springs and El Dorado will be plastered with signs condemning the Soviet Union.

George Yelvington said A.J.'s Waterbeds will provide markers for people to sign their names or make comments on the posters, which will be sent to the Kremlin.

Analysis reveals messages from downed KAL airliner

TOKYO (AP) — A new analysis shows the pilot of the South Korean airliner shot down by a Soviet jet fighter reported rapid decompression in the plane after it was hit by a missile, an official said today.

Matsumi Suzuki, director of the Japan Sound Research Center, said in a television interview that the pilot radioed "rapid decompression" 50 seconds after the fighter reported to its ground control that "the target is destroyed."

He said continued analysis of radio communication between the pilot of the Korean Air Lines jumbo jet and Tokyo's Narita Airport had deciphered several garbled phrases.

Suzuki later told The Associated Press that his center had been able to delineate from the tapes several phrases previously unintelligible because of static. They included:

"All engine."

"Rapid decompression."

"One-zero-one."

"Two-delta."

The meaning of the phrases was not immediately known.

Previously the last distinguishable words from the pilot were "KE 007 to Tokyo Radio" 48 seconds after the Soviets said the aircraft had been hit. KE 007 was the aircraft's call number.

A Soviet interceptor fired two missiles at the Boeing 747 on Sept. 1 as it flew off-course over the Soviet island of Sakhalin. All 269 people aboard are presumed dead.

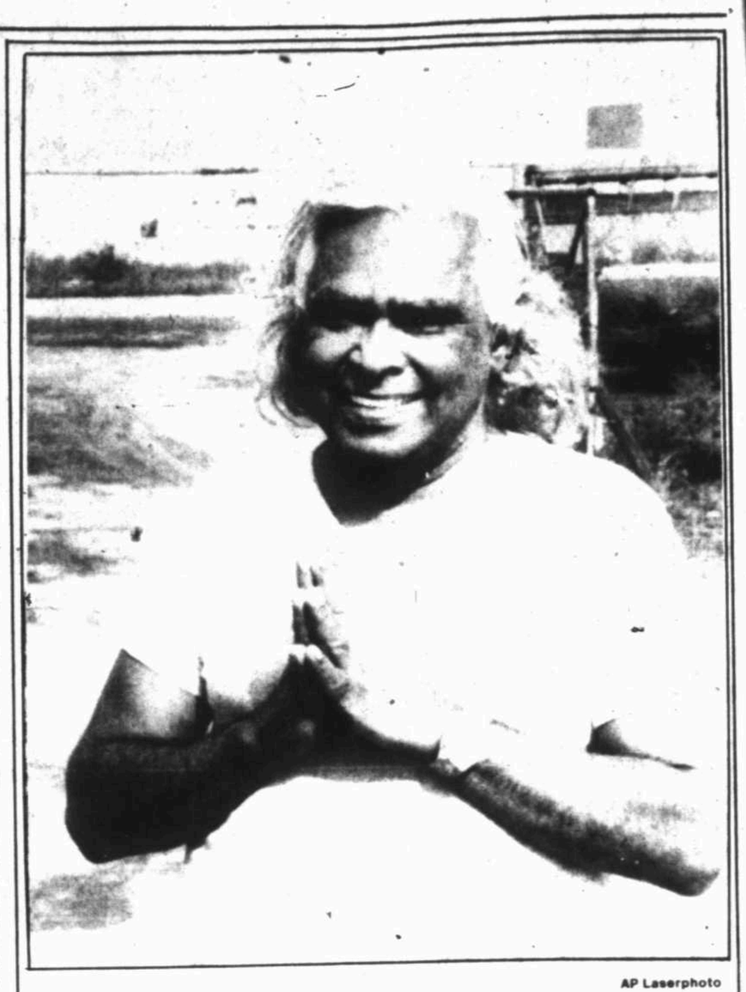

Airports don't want Soviet flights

NEW YORK (AP) — The governors of New York and New Jersey are refusing to let Soviet diplomats, including Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, land at metropolitan airports, because the Soviets shot down a Korean jet carrying 269 people.

The U.S. State Department had asked the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey to permit a plane carrying a Soviet delegation to the United Nations Security Council meeting this weekend, and another flight next week carrying Gromyko, to land at Kennedy or Newark International Airports.

But a statement by New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean and New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, released Thursday by Kean's office in Trenton, said the Port Authority, which operates the airports, had been instructed to deny the request.

The governors have veto power over the port commissioners.

Yoga master Swami Vishnu Devananda safely returned to West Berlin Thursday after crossing the wall in a motorized kite. He called the stunt a "request for peace."

Soaring swami wants kite back

BERLIN (AP) — An Indian swami who soared over the Berlin Wall on a private peace mission was hopeful today that Communist authorities would return his $7,200 motorized kite.

"They haven't returned it yet, but he's hopeful," said a spokesman for Swami Vishnu Devanada, 55, who made the spectacular flight Thursday while attending a global peace festival in West Berlin.

The swami himself declined to be interviewed by telephone.

Communist authorities have not said whether they will return the craft. Private aircraft that stray across the frontier are sometimes confiscated after being forced down by East German military planes.

The official East German news agency ADN reported Thursday that the swami "deliberately entered East German airspace and landed in the capital of Berlin. After examining the circumstances surrounding the violation of airspace, the pilot was warned and expelled to West Berlin."

West Berlin police said today they hadn't decided whether to charge Devananda with violating airspace over the divided city. The Four Power agreement on the status of Berlin forbids such flights.

Devananda landed the craft in a plowed field Thursday morning following a 15-minute flight across the Communist barrier from the British sector of West Berlin.

He was detained and questioned for more than five hours by Communist police, warned never to repeat the flight and sent back on the subway to West Berlin minus the kite.

The red-and-orange kite had a 16-foot wingspan, a lawnmower seat, three-wheel landing gear and was powered by a Kawasaki motorcyle engine.

Devananda heads the Svinanda Yoga Vendata sect, based in Quebec, which claims 100,000 members worldwide.

After his return to West Berlin on Thursday, the silver-haired swami told The Associated Press that he flew the kite over the Berlin Wall "to prove that love and flowers can overcome barriers better than bombs."

With the pockets of his robes filled with chrysanthemums, Davananda said he "sailed like a beautiful bird 100 feet above the wall."

"I was cold and couldn't see well through the clouds, but I saw the wall and the guard towers. As far as I know, no one shot at me," he said.

The kite landed in a plowed field after being aloft for about 15 minutes and was quickly surrounded by "about 20 to 30" startled farmers, the swami said.

"They couldn't understand my English but they knew the word peace," Devananda said. "I got the most beautiful welcome. They had never seen a plane like that and were really surprised."

Senate Democrats push application of act

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats, in their "final position" on the future of the U.S. Marine contingent in Lebanon, are pushing to legally bind President Reagan to the 60 to 90-day time limit spelled out in the War Powers Act.

Under legislation introduced with a 29-0 endorsement by the Democratic caucus Thursday, the president would have to withdraw the troops within that time frame unless Congress declared war or otherwise authorized them to remain longer.

The legislation declares that the clock started to run on Aug. 29, when the first two of four Marines to die in shelling attacks in Beirut were killed.

"This is my final position and the final position of the Democrats in caucus," Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said. He added, however, that negotiations had not broken down.

Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., expressed "the hope that we can still exercise a degree of cooperation in bringing this problem to a bipartisan solution."

Earlier in the day, Baker offered a compromise under which Reagan would ask Congress to act on the matter "within the scope of the War Powers Act" but would not invoke its time-limit provisions.

Congress would then pass legislation authorizing the Marines to stay, which Baker said would "almost certainly" not be an open ended, or blank check, authorization.

This was not enough for the Democrats, who had voted unanimously on Wednesday to demand that Reagan invoke on his own the part of the act that limits his authority to keep troops in a hostile zone.

Since Reagan has refused to do this, maintaining it would infringe on his powers as commander-in-chief, the Democrats decided to introduce a bill that would declare the time limits in effect.

An aide to the GOP leadership, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said Baker believes the issue is still open to negotiation despite Byrd's "final position".

But Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., senior Democrat on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and one of the principals in the negotiations, said, "I think the two sides are pretty far apart."

Refugees still haunted by year-old massacre

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A year after the massacre of hundreds of Palestinians in the refugee camps of Sabra and Chatilla, fear and shattered memories still haunt those who live along the barren, dusty roads of the camps.

"My parents say I scream in my sleep," said 19-year-old Mahmoud Saadeh, who ran — with gunmen firing at him — to escape the killings.

"Every time we hear a rumor of something happening, we put on our slippers and start running. They may come back," said Samar Khalifa, a 15-year-old Palestinian girl.

Her father was killed outside the family's home when Christian militiamen entered the two camps on the southern edge of Beirut last Sept. 16.

They killed for 2½ days. When they left, the streets were littered with bodies, some shot early in the rampage and bloating in the sun. Men were lined up in rows and shot. Some families were killed in their homes, in bed or at the table.

Four hundred and sixty bodies were found, but authorities say there may have been many more victims. Some of the missing have never returned, some bodies were bulldozed under houses by the killers, and talk of still-undiscovered graves persists.

Samar still lives in the house where her father was dragged out and killed. Her 13-year-old sister, Ekhlas, said of their father: "I miss him so much. My grades at school have fallen. I just can't concentrate."

Samar said no one would have returned to the camps were they not patrolled by the multinational peacekeeping force, the Italians at Chatilla and the French in adjacent Sabra.

"If one Italian tank leaves this area, we will flee," said Samar. "They are defending us."

Auntie Lee's home cooking averts robbery

WILTON MANORS, Fla. (AP) — Proving that the way to a gunman's heart is through his stomach, a Chinese restaurant owner used home cooking and sweet talk to win over three young robbers who held her family hostage for 12 hours.

The gunmen were calling her "auntie" before they left.

Moy Lee, a 66-year-old grandmother, said she told jokes to the three armed youths, prepared them a supper of beef and asparagus over rice, and entertained them with a movie when they invaded her home in this Fort Lauderdale suburb last week.

The three youths said they belonged to a gang from New York City's Chinatown and had been sent by their ringleader to rob her and her husband, who own the successful Moy Lee Chinese Restaurant in Hollywood, Mrs. Lee said.

"They told me, 'We know you have a lot of money. We checked you out. We know what we're doing,'" she said.

Mrs. Lee said she "sweet-talked" her captors as they sat around the kitchen table at 3 a.m., eating and watching a tape of a Bruce Lee martial arts movie that they played over and over until dawn.

"I knew I had to keep them calm, talk them out of killing us all," she said. "I was ... so scared at first I couldn't swallow a sip of water. I prayed, 'God, I've been a good girl, please help me.'"

By the end of the ordeal, the youths were calling her "Auntie Lee," a term of endearment, she said.

The gunmen, who spoke a Hong Kong dialect of Chinese and used walkie-talkies to communicate with two accomplices, held Mrs. Lee, her husband, Winston, 67, their 15-year-old granddaughter, Eva Lee, and a family friend, Louis Tutora, in the house for 12 hours.

They agreed to leave when the Lees gave them $4,000 and promised to deliver another $3,000 within a week, Mrs. Lee said. Two suspects were arrested outside a Wilton Manors bowling alley Tuesday as they tried to pick up the money.

Mrs. Lee said she was jumped as she got out of her car outside her home at midnight Sept. 6.

"I got out of the car, one jumped from behind a tree, another jumped from behind another tree — pop, pop," she said. "Then one said, 'You go inside. We're going to talk business.'"

The owners of a Chinese restaurant in Plantation were victimized in a similar extortion attempt six to eight weeks ago, but the FBI has not determined whether the crimes are linked.

Arrested Tuesday were Chong Boon San, 21, and Chung Lee Pung, 20, who were charged with federal extortion and held on $2 million bond, said FBI spokesman Dennis Erich. Three other suspects remain at large, he said.

In another apparent shakedown case, a 20-year-old New York man was arrested Thursday and accused of killing the manager of a Chinese restaurant in Philadelphia.

Allan Lee was arrested on a sidewalk of New York City's Chinatown in the death Aug. 22 of Jadeine Wong, 25.

Let's hear it for that great Italian scientist Copernicus

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — It sounded like a good idea at the time: a White House always conscious about its support among ethnic groups honoring Columbus and listing his colleagues in the "quest for knowledge."

But in so doing, the White House mixed up its ethnic groups, sneaking in Copernicus, the early scientist and pride of Poland.

In the formal proclamation signed by the president, designating Monday, Oct. 10 as Columbus Day, the president saluted the "bold and adventurous navigator who left Europe in 1492 in search of new lands and first recorded the sighting of the North American continent."

"He represents a spirit, the spirit of the Renaissance which contributed to the development of America," Reagan's statement said. It added: "Along with Galileo, Copernicus, and others, Columbus symbolizes a quest for knowledge, a willingness and fortitude to go beyond what is accepted as truth in the name of progress."

One White House proclamation writer said there was no attempt to "Italianize" Copernicus. Rather, she said, he was included to complete a list of explorers of the world and its knowledge.

• • •

The president, touting as he often does the role that private industry and business can play on a voluntary basis in helping disadvantaged people, was calling attention last week to a campaign to attack adult functional illiteracy.

A White House "fact sheet" described the elements in the Adult Literacy Initiative.

• • •

It was at the literacy ceremony that Reagan revealed a deep secret about himself. He is a cheater. Or, at least, he has been a cheater in the past.

He shared a podium with well-known educators and said:

"Hearing of some of what you've done made me ashamed of the times that I cheated in English literature on Shakespeare."

There were no details available about the president's cheating. And by the way, the White House transcript of the president's remarks on literacy issued later in the day failed to capitalize the "E" in "English."

The new senator from the state of Washington is Dan Evans, the state's former governor and the keynote speaker at the Republican National Convention in 1968. He was chosen to replace Henry M. Jackson, who died Sept. 1. He is a Republican.

But the announcement of the president's schedule for last Tuesday had the following item for 10:50 a.m.: "Meeting with Senator Dan Evans (D-Washington), the Oval Office."

Sex ring floors town

From Wire Reports

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — The sobering disclosure by Brattleboro police last week that 10 public school students, ages 8 to 13, ran a sex-for-sale business has rocked this blue-collar town tucked in the southeast corner of Vermont.

The children will not be arrested or disciplined in any way, Brattleboro Police Lt. Richard Guthrie said. Instead, they will be treated as victims. At least two men will be arrested on charges of having sex with children, investigators said.

"The children need to receive treatment in order to overcome the trauma," said Thomas Torti, a social worker with the Vermont Social Rehabilitation Services office, who has counseled several of the families of the children. "I don't think these kids understood the full consequences of what they were doing."

THE child prostitution ring began last winter, police said, when a man offered a schoolgirl money to perform sex. "She talked to her friends about it," Guthrie said, "and somehow, it just snowballed from there."

Though Guthrie first termed the network of children a "prostitution ring," he said later that "the real word for it is exploitation." But he said the children did receive money for the sexual acts they performed for adults.

The children did not work out of a house. They were not streetwalkers. They did not publish classified ads in counter-culture tabloids. They had no pimp. They made their contacts, Guthrie believes, through word-of-mouth.

Police called in Brattleboro public school officials to tell them of the child prostitution group's existence and that they had identified its members.

"IT was just a total shock as we sat there and listened to what had been going on," said Brattleboro Supervisory Union Assistant Superintendent William Ellis. "We're all responsible, in a way. We all live in the community, but we don't always see what is going on in the community."

Some Brattleboro area residents said that the child prostitution activity had been common knowledge for months.

"I knew it was happening, but I didn't know the kids ran it themselves," said Richard Tinkham, a jobless 20-year-old. "I think what made it boom was that movie, "Risky Business" (in which a teenager runs a call-girl ring). The kids must have figured, 'Hey, what a way to make money.'"

POLICE said they took measures to safeguard the identifies of the children involved, but at least one of the children's parents was angry that police described the operation in detail to the press.

"The kid made a mistake — that's what it amounts to," the Brattleboro Reformer quoted an unidentified parent as saying. "I don't think my child realized what the heck was going on. They did get some money, yes, but they were not out there soliciting."

Brattleboro is a town of about 15,000, and, with the sensational story of the kiddie prostitutes moving across the land, it found itself under the microscope of the national and international press.

Egyptian workmen restoring Citadel, Mohammed Ali mosque

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Thousands of Egyptian workmen are restoring the thick limestone walls of Cairo's Citadel and polishing the splendid alabaster facade of the Mohammed Ali mosque in the biggest-ever restoration of the city's deteriorating Islamic monuments.

Situated on a spur of the Moqattam hills east of the city, the 12th-century Citadel, which encloses several mosques, palaces and government buildings of different eras, and the 19th-century mosque, with its shiny silver domes and 250-foot-high minarets, have always been the most striking architectural feature of sprawling, congested chaotic Cairo.

They evoke a romantic, Oriental vision of the medieval city that was called "the city of 1,000 minarets."

But together with hundreds of other medieval-era mosques, baths and schools of the area known as Islamic Cairo, they have been neglected by the government in favor of restoring Egypt's rich pharaonic treasures. Guidebooks apologize for their grimy, shabby condition.

Since it was built by the Arab conquerer Saladin in 1176, most of the Citadel has been off-limits to the public because it was controlled by the succession of armies that occupied Egypt. Even today, the Egyptian military controls the west quarter of the fortress, which includes a notorious jail that has held prisoners since medieval times.

All that began changing recently when the $2.5 million restoration project got under way using 2,000 laborers from the Antiquities Organization.

Industrialist writes about weapons

WAYLAND, Mass. (AP) — Industrialist Bernard O'Keefe thinks an above-ground nuclear explosion should be staged every five years to remind the world of the terrible destruction that awaits the push of a button.

O'Keefe, the chairman of the board of EG&G, Inc., has intimate knowledge of that power. As a Navy ensign he helped build and arm the bomb dropped on Nagasaki. He was in Nevada and the Pacific to help test the effects of nuclear blasts.

He has seen the fireball and felt the shockwave. Few, he says, can conceive of the forces unleashed in a thermonuclear weapon.

"It bothers me that so few people are around now that have seen a nuclear explosion," he says. "It creates the possibility that either in the United States or in the Soviet Union, somebody might decide that you can actually have a limited nuclear war."

To convey his message, O'Keefe has written a book entitled "Nuclear Hostages," which details the development of nuclear weapons, from the discovery of X-rays by Wilhelm Roentgen near the turn of the century to the present debate over Pershing and MX missile basing in Europe.

"I think the young people in particular have to be taught what happened. That these things (the bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki) were not random acts of violence in 1945," he says. "I thought it was time the history needed to be told."

But he had another reason to write his book. O'Keefe believes the populations of the United States and the Soviet Union are the hostages in a nuclear stalemate that can't be easily ended. His hope is that increased trade between the two countries and a renewed detente can cool the arms race.

As head of a major American corporation and chairman of the National Association of Manufacturers, O'Keefe thinks his credentials as a "card-carrying member of the military-industrial" give his words more weight.

"It would be very easy to be a peacenik and come up and say 'hey you know what we ought to do is be nice to the Russians.' But that doesn't get you anywhere," he said.

Turkeys come first with some West Virginia legislators

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Turkeys carried the day in the West Virginia Legislature when it came to scheduling some committee meetings.

Delegate Joseph Albright, noting that monthly interim committee sessions were scheduled for Oct. 22-25, asked Tuesday why the meetings couldn't be held a week earlier, Oct. 16-18.

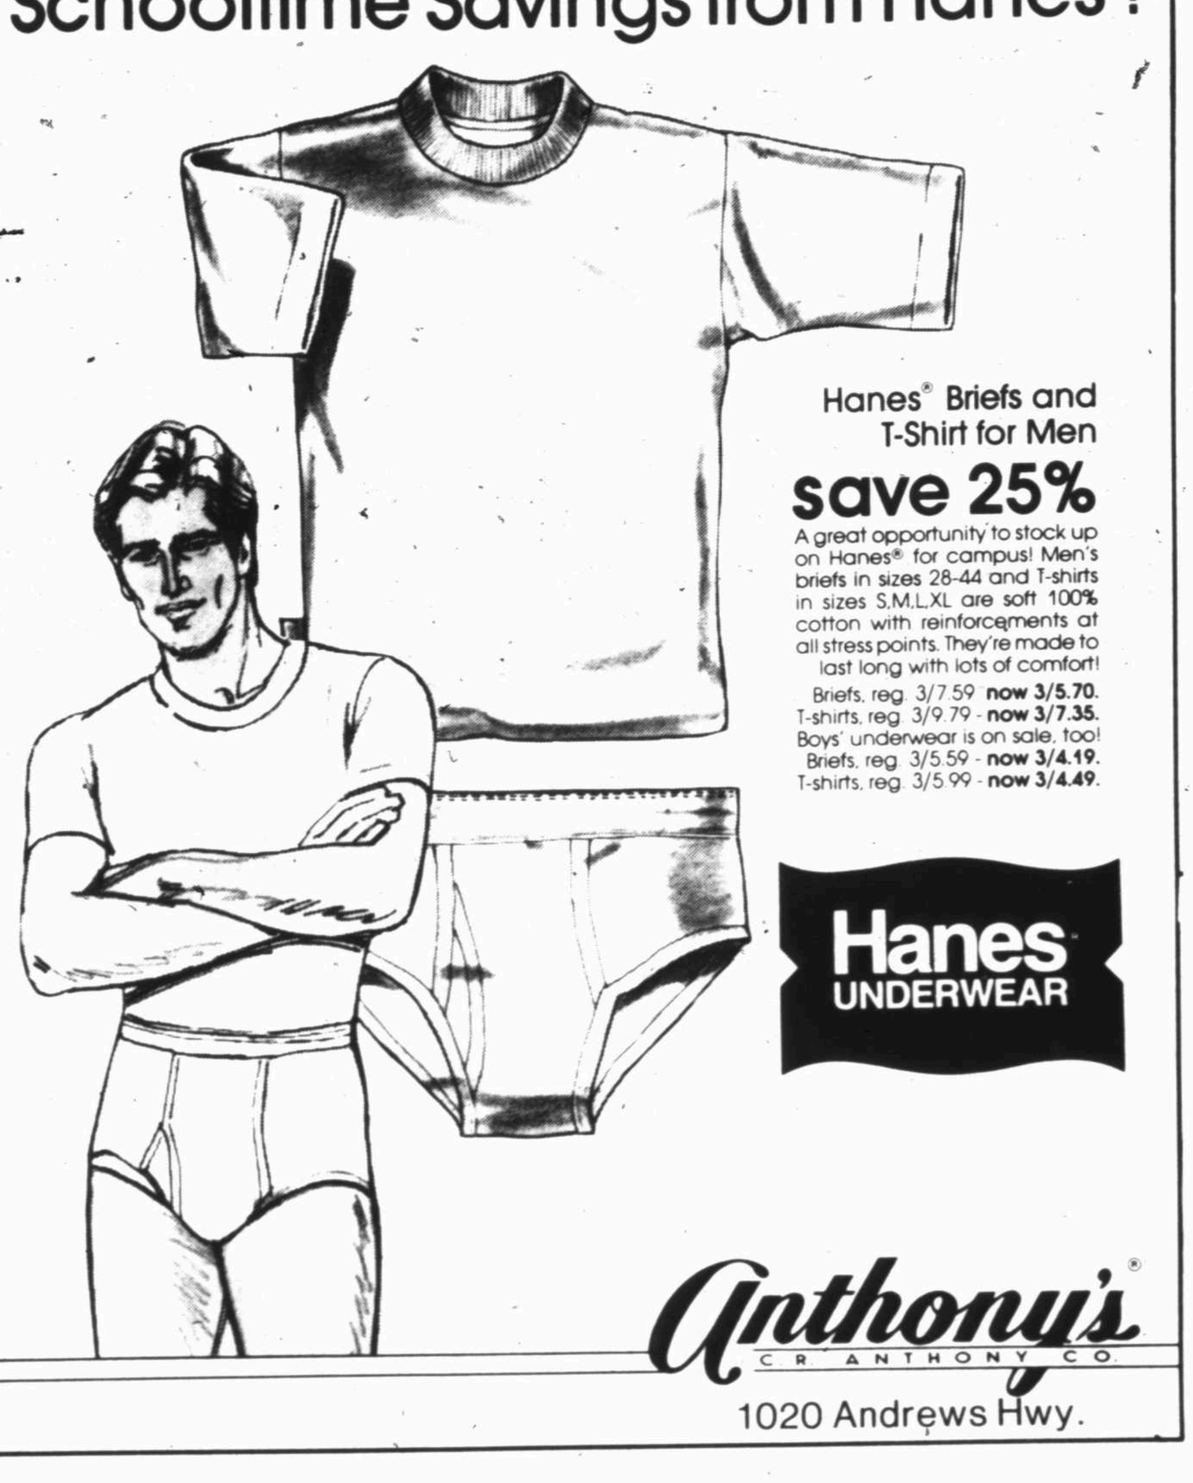

Earl Vickers, director of legislative services, stepped right in and informed the lawmakers that Oct. 15 is the first day of the turkey-hunting season. It is nearly impossible, said Vickers, to persuade legislators to work during turkey season.

Not wishing to offend his sportsmen colleagues, Albright retracted his suggestion. House Speaker Clyde See then asked for a vote on whether to hold the meetings as scheduled.

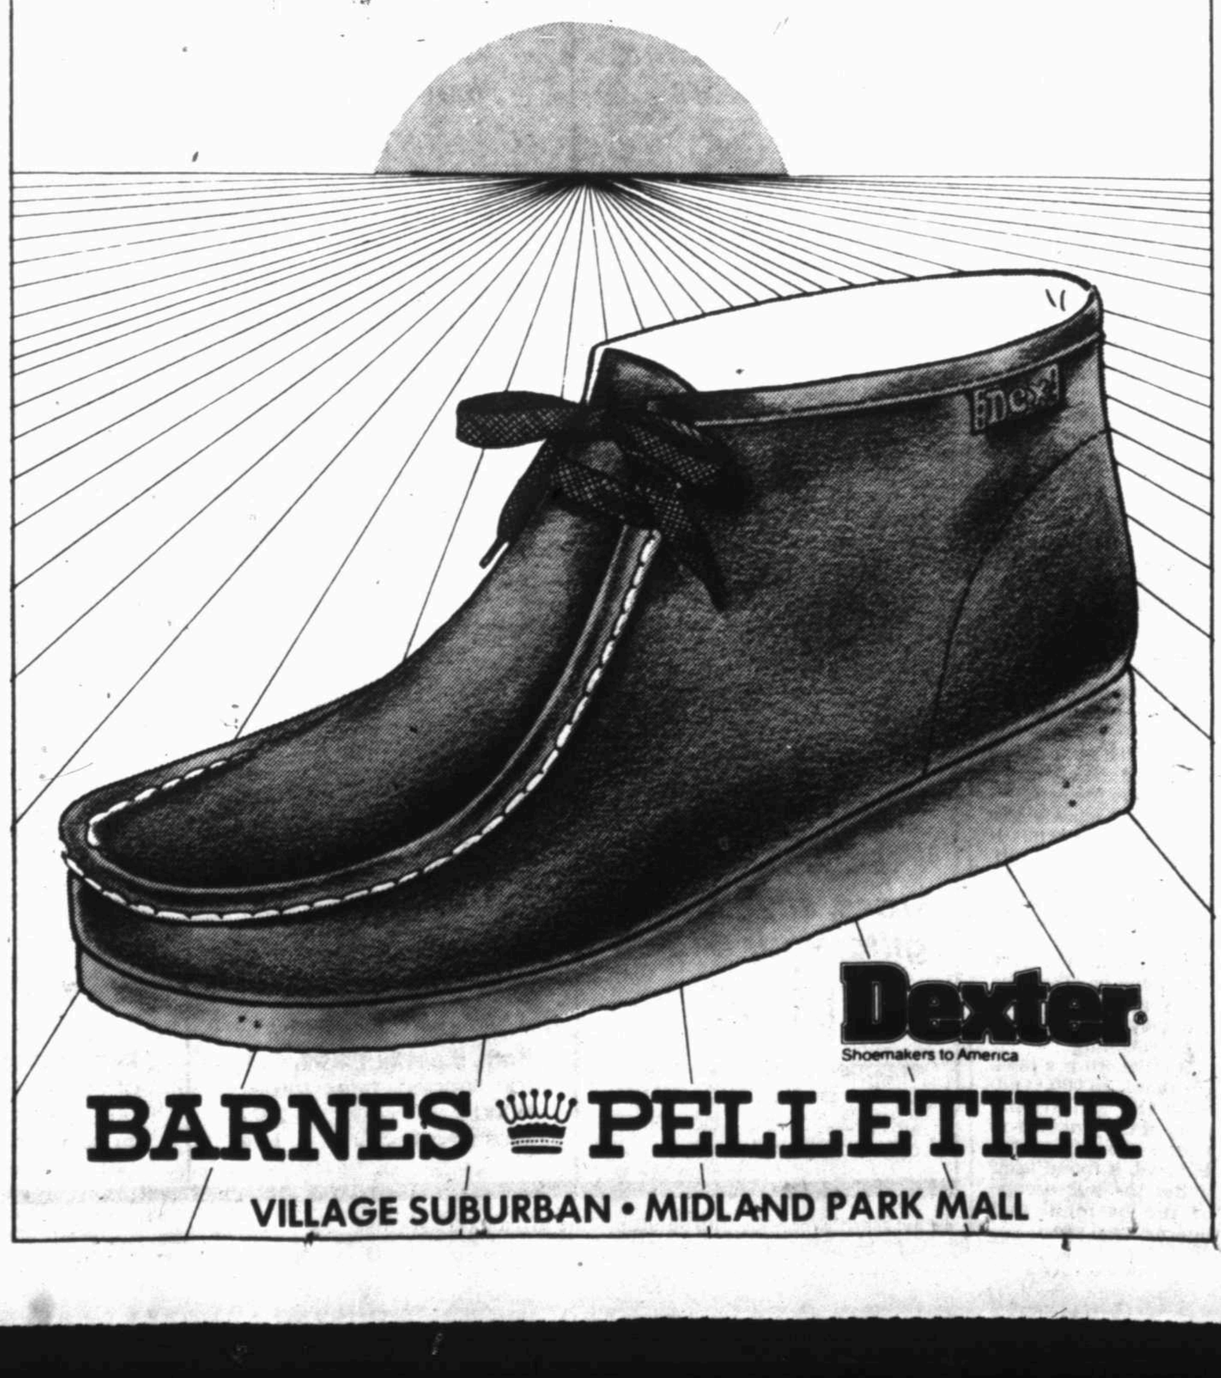

"All those in favor, gobble," the speaker directed.

The measure passed.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Acetaminophen does not relieve inflammation

Dear Dr. Solomon: I sprained my ankle while playing basketball and the doctor recommended that I take aspirin even though I usually use acetaminophen. Why wouldn't either one have been suitable? — Thurston, Austin

Solomon

Dear Thurston: Acetaminophen like aspirin, is effective in relieving pain and reducing fever. However, it has no effect on inflammation, which often is associated with a sprained ankle.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Suppose a man has to have a testicle removed for some reason. Can he still have sexual relations and can he still have children? — Rex, Chicago

Dear Rex: According to Dr. Floyd Fried, of the University of North Carolina School of Medicine, the loss of one testicle does not affect sexual performance or desire; however, fertility is slightly reduced.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have a few questions about breast self-examination that I hope you can answer for me. Why do doctors tell women to examine their breasts both while lying down and sitting up? Why is it best to do it shortly after a woman has her period? — Mabel, Carlsbad, N.M.

Dear Mabel: Breast self-examination performed both while lying down and sitting up may help detect a lump that cannot be felt in one or the other position alone. Similarly, a lump is more likley to be felt if the breasts are checked three to four days after the end of the menstrual period.

Dear Dr. Solomon: You recently printed a letter from "Hillary" who wanted to know how parents with above-average intelligence could have a child with dyslexia. Although your answer was accurate in regards to the probable genetic link of dyslexia, it failed to address the major implication of her letter: that dyslexia and intelligence are linked.

A dyslexic has specific difficulties related to the management of language. This has nothing to do with his/her level of intelligence. Obviously, some of the manifestations of dyslexia, such as number sequencing reversals and problems with auditory discrimination, can make it difficult for the child to fulfill his/her scholastic potential. However, once these problems are compensated for, either through special training or through the sheer perserverance and ingenuity of the many undiagnosed dyslexics, a dyslexic is just as capable of obtaining a scholastic goal as anyone else. — Frances M. Giandalone, Dyslexic Student Organization, University of Massachusetts (Amherst)

Dear Dr. Solomon: Some girl I know has been on drugs and now she is pregnant. What are the chances of her getting off drugs before the baby is born? — Lester, New York City

Dear Lester: I would have to rate the chances of a pregnant young woman getting off drugs as somewhere between slim and none. In fact, Dr. Yvette Reid, of the District of Columbia General Hospital, says that drug detoxification is not recommended during pregnancy because it may do the baby more harm than good.

An important consideration at this point is the mother's ability to care for the child after she gives birth. Both she and the baby will require a great deal of assistance if they are to have a satisfactory outcome.

Dear Dr. Solomon: The daughter of a friend of mine was a healthy adolescent one day and a severe diabetic the next. How can a serious illness like this come about almost overnight? — Mrs. B.S., Vineland, N.J.

Dear Mrs. S.: There is some question about whether diabetes actually does develop as rapidly as seems to be the case. Some researchers have reported that the disease occurs over a span of several years and that a new blood test may be able to reveal its early signs.

The significance of this finding is that if signs of the disease can be detected at an early stage, physicians might be able to start treatment earlier and thus avoid some of diabetes' long-term consequences.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My wife is a smart woman but we're having an argument and I'd like you to straighten her out. I'm on medication for high blood pressure and it's doing the job. In fact, I eat what I want and I've even put on some extra weight, but my blood pressure is still normal. My wife says that if I took better care of myself I wouldn't have to take the pills. Wouldn't you agree that I have the best of both worlds? — Stu, Madison, Wisc.

Dear Stu: I would agree that you have a smart wife, but that's where our agreement ends. Antihypertensive drugs can be of real value for someone whose blood pressure cannot be controlled in any other way. But why use drugs if nonmedical approaches such as diet and exercise will do the trick?

I try to control hypertension in my own patients by prescribing a diet if they are overweight, but limiting their sodium intake and by encouraging participation in an exercise program. If these efforts don't work, I may have to resort to medication.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father is 67 years old but you would never know it if you ever played a game of tennis against him. He is being scheduled for coronary artery surgery, mainly because he has angina and it interferes with his tennis. He's all gung ho for the operation and I haven't said anything to him about how I feel because I don't want to dampen his spirits. But isn't he too old for an operation as serious as the one he is scheduled for? — Philip, Silver Spring, Md.

Dear Philip: A study conucted at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., indicates that advanced age is not a suitable reason for avoiding coronary artery surgery. In fact, a five-year review of more than 1,000 patients at least 65 years of age revealed that the symptomatic benefits of such surgery were comparable with those in younger patients. However, increased age did lower the possibility for survival.

In regard to the recurrence of angina, which is not uncommon following coronary artery surgery, patients over 65 years of age had a 53 percent rate of recurrence compared with a 61 percent rate for those under 65 years.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine had an ectopic pregnancy and she says her doctor told her that she was lucky it was found out in time. What is an ectopic pregnancy and why is it considered so dangerous? — Ms. E.C., Tacoma, Wash.

Dear Ms. C.: A ectopic pregnancy is any pregnancy outside the cavity of the uterus and the reason it is considered dangerous is that it can result in death. As with many medical conditions, early diagnosis and medical intervention are important; otherwise, serious blood loss or infection may result.

Dr. Sally Faith Dorfman, of Mount Sinai Medical Center in New York City, notes that ectopic pregnancies are usually manifested during the first trimester; however, the diagnosis can be made at any time during the pregnancy.

'Bombingham' remembers black girls killed in 1963

By HOYT HARWELL

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — The street and sidewalks beside the church were so littered with shattered glass it was impossible to take a step without crunching it underfoot.

The splintered shards had come from the Sixteenth Street Baptist Church, stark reminders of a bomb blast that had killed four black girls and, with their blood, seared the conscience of a nation.

The bomb exploded inside the church Sunday morning, Sept. 15, 1963 — 20 years ago Thursday. Slain in a cloak room, as they slipped choir robes over their heads, were Carole Robertson, Cynthia Wesley and Addie Mae Collins, all 14, and Denise McNair, 11.

The civil rights movement had posted other violent landmarks, and others would come, but no other single act was so deadly, so full of blind hatred, so symbolically cruel in its striking down of young children.

Widespread revulsion over the crime helped forge legislation that dramatically altered racial policies in this sharply segregated city — nicknamed "Bombingham" because of 50 dynamite explosions over 15 years — and throughout the Deep South.

IN MANY ways the bombing, intended to reap terror, reaped change.

—Two decades later and four blocks from the church, in City Hall, Richard Arrington is mayor, the only black mayor in the city's 112-year history. And he is running for re-election against a white councilman in a race virtually free of racial issues.

—Blacks serve on the City Council and other official groups.

—About 20 percent of the police force is black.

—School officials say they have ended all vestiges of segregation in a city that previously had dual, and clearly unequal, school systems.

The bombing is "as fresh in my mind as if it happened yesterday," said the Rev. John H. Cross, 59, then pastor of the church and now a Baptist official in Atlanta.

When it happened, he said, there was "fear and anger and resentment." But 14 years later, when a former Ku Klux Klan member, Robert E. Chambliss, now 79, was convicted of murder and sentenced to life in prison, "I had compassion and pity," Cross said. "...I had as much compassion for him as if he had been my own daddy."

But Denise McNair's mother, Maxine, today implores the black community: Do not forget. And she is skeptical of the changes in the South.

"SOME OF the changes are cosmetic," she said in an article in Down Home magazine, run by her husband, Chris, a photographer and former two-term state legislator.

"There are those who would like to brush this thing under the rug," she said. "Some people don't want to talk about it, but it happened. Those children are dead because of some fiendish act. We don't need to forget."

Those at the church, who have not forgotten, plan a memorial service Sunday for the four girls.

The police chief at the time of the bombing, Jamie Moore, now retired, recently called it "the most heinous and useless thing I ever saw."

In 1963, however, Moore was under the command of then-Police Commissioner Eugene "Bull" Connor, a staunch segregationist, now dead, who had called out Birmingham firefighters and police dogs earlier that year during Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s campaign for equal rights for blacks.

The FBI, the state and the Jefferson County sheriff's office began investigating the bombing immediately. The girls' parents said they were told that the FBI knew who had set off the bomb but could not get anyone to testify.

A SHERIFF'S detective, James Hancock, worked on the case for several days and told Sheriff Mel Bailey he was close to breaking it. But the late Al Lingo, head of the state Department of Public Safety, took over. Bailey cautioned Lingo that he was acting too soon, but on Sept. 29, Lingo ordered the arrest of Chambliss and another Klansman.

Officers questioned Chambliss for two days and Lingo filed a misdemeanor charge of possession of dynamite, but Chambliss was found innocent and set free.

Bill Baxley, a college student in 1963, became attorney general in 1970 and reopened the unsolved case a year later, assigning three men to the job. Chambliss was tried for murder in 1977.

The key prosecution witness was a Methodist minister, the Rev. Elizabeth H. Cobbs, the niece of Chambliss' wife, Flora. On the day before the explosion, she said, she was visiting in the Chambliss home.

"He said he had been fighting a one-man war since World War II," Mrs. Cobbs testified, "and he said if anyone had backed him up, they would have the (blacks) in their place by now."

She said Chambliss was irate over a newspaper story that reported a black man had attacked a white girl with a knife the previous day.

"He placed his hands on the newspaper," she said. "He looked me in the face and said, 'Just wait till after Sunday morning, and they will beg us to let them segregate.' I asked him what he meant and he said, 'Just wait and see.'"

CROSS RECALLED that the church had planned to hold a youth day that Sunday "and a lot of the children were excited about taking part, ushering and singing in the choir."

At first, Cross recalled, he thought there had been a gasoline explosion because there had been problems with a hot water tank.

"Then I began to smell powder," said Cross, who was in the sanctuary a floor above the explosion, "and I realized it was something different."

Three of his four children were in the church. One, a 2-year-old daughter, received head cuts from flying glass.

Among church members, he said, "There was a feeling that 'I just can't believe this would happen.'"

States struggle along

From Wire Reports

WASHINGTON — A major government study claims that despite a record $9.9 billion in new taxes and widespread budget cuts, the financial condition of most states will not improve much in fiscal 1984.

The study said state government employees will bear much of the burden of state budget problems, with 19 states not providing an across-the-board salary increase and 22 states limiting such adjustments to 5 percent or less.

"In 1983, most states wrestled with severe financial problems because of lingering after effects of the recession," said William Passannante, president of the National Conference of State Legislatures (NCSL).

Despite cuts and new taxes, only seven states are projecting a balance of as much as five percent in fiscal 1984 while six states still anticipate deficits, added Pasannante, who is speaker pro tem of the New York State Assembly.

Though the fiscal situation is still tough, said the study done by NCSL, major tax reduction initiatives are expected to be on the ballot in Ohio in November and next year in California, Oregon and Florida, and tax protests are also underway in other states, such as Michigan.

Texas, "better off than most states, is suffering because its two major tax contributors — oil and gas — are in doldrums," said Steve Gold, director of the NCSL's Intergovernmental Finance Project and co-author of "State Budget Actions of 1983."

New York ended fiscal 1983 with a small deficit, said Gold, but will likely have a surplus in 1984; Washington, which had to raise taxes, will end the year with a deficit, as will Michigan, now in the midst of an economic recovery.

California, which finished the year with a large deficit, will have a surplus as a result of an austerity budget. Maryland's austere budget will also keep the state in the black.

The survey disclosed that states increased taxes a net of $7.1 billion, the largest ever, bringing to $159 billion state revenues from taxes. More than three-quarters of the states also trimmed their fiscal 1983 budgets after they had been adopted.

At the start of fiscal 1984, 11 states had deficits and 15 had balances of one percent or less when 5 percent has traditionally been considered the prudent minimum.

According to Gold, 16 states boosted personal income taxes; 12 raised general sales taxes; 15 enacted major business taxes; 17 imposed or raised cigaret taxes; 14, alcoholic beverage levies; 19, motor fuel taxes and 17, miscellaneous taxes.

While the net increase was $7.1 billion, the gross was $9.9 billion.

Mattox vows to stay in office even if convicted of charge

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox says charges of commercial bribery against him show a "difficult twist of logic," and vows to remain in office even if he is convicted.

He said prosecutors "looked for 2½ months and couldn't find anything and they dreamed up the most trumped-up thing they could find to put out there."

Mattox was indicted on a charge of commercial bribery in an indictment that alleged he threatened to block the public bond business of a Houston law firm that was trying at the time to interrogate his sister.

"I think the ones of you who have read the indictment realize how profoundly twisted the whole matter had to be for them to put that forth. You can't have a bribe that comes out of a threat," Mattox said Thursday at a news conference.

He said the commercial bribery law was intended to be used "in a kickback situation."

"I noticed that you all had a very difficult time in trying to write and address the fact that somewhere another a threat became a bribe. It's a difficult twist of logic," he said.

At one point, the tough-talking attorney general suggested the matter could have been disposed with more directly in the old days.

"I can remember back in Texas history when a fellow used to be able to either whip the socks off another fellow that insulted or offended his family or his wife, and as a matter of fact even go to the point of killing him at times," Mattox said.

"I don't know what Texas has come to — now we got a district attorney over here who gets mad at me because he said I threatened somebody," he said.

Asked if he would resign in the event he is convicted, Mattox's one-word reply was "no."

Mattox repeated his accusation that Mobil Oil Corp. "conceived" and "orchestrated" the indictment, handed down Tuesday by a Travis County grand jury. Mobil has denied it had anything to do with any criminal action against Mattox.

The lawsuit between Mobil and the state involves mineral rights on Clinton Manges' South Texas ranch. Manges, a $50,000 contributor to Mattox's 1982 campaign, filed the $1.67 billion suit last year over disputed oil leases, and the state joined on Manges' side because Texas owns some of the mineral rights.

Mattox said he did not intend to use state resources of his agency as he prepares his defense, but he said he would be entitled to do so if he wanted to.

"I consider it an attack on my office — there's no doubt about that," he said. "It obviously arose out of a piece of litigation that the attorney general's office is trying to win."

Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox, indicted Tuesday by a Travis County grand jury on a charge of commercial bribery faces reporters at a news conference in Austin Thursday.

He said he planned to spend four to five hours a day working on his defense, but he said since he usually works 18 hours a day, that would still leave 12 hours of work a day on usual state business.

Mattox said Austin lawyer Roy Minton would be one of his attorneys. Minton has represented several indicted public officials, including former Speaker Billy Clayton, who was cleared of federal bribery and conspiracy charges in 1980.

"I regard myself simply as a soldier in a war," Mattox said. "It's a war that takes some casualties at times. It's a war where I got into a fight with the big boys, and the big boys play plenty rough."

Mattox was accused of threatening to withhold approval of bond packages prepared by the Houston law firm of Fulbright & Jaworski, which represents Mobil, unless a lawyer for the firm stopped trying to subpoena Mattox's sister for a deposition.

Mobil's lawyers wanted to talk to Janice Mattox in hopes of getting a Laredo judge taken off the case by showing alleged political ties between him and the Mattox family.

Notables celebrate UT's 100th birthday

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas began its second century today, apparently satisfied it is, at long-last, a "first-class" institution and intent on becoming one of the great universities of the world.

Dr. Peter Flawn, UT-Austin president, said Thursday the school's mission is the same as it was 100 years ago — to teach students to think.

Flawn and others, including Gov. Mark White, a Baylor graduate, addressed a convocation that was part of UT's 100th birthday celebration.

Wales Madden Jr., chairman of a centennial commission that prepared a report for UT's future, said 25 years ago a similar group decided that the school was not "first class."

Thursday, however, Madden told the convocation, "The University of Texas at Austin has passed through those portals of eminence and is now one of the truly great universities of this nation. It now stands at another portal of eminence. It will pass through this portal only when it is recognized as a world-class institution."

Flawn said the university had evolved from a small public university in a rural state to an internationally recognized school "that satisfies fully the constitutional mandate to be first class."

The university opened its doors on Sept. 15, 1883 — four years before Austin even had indoor lights — and 221 students were admitted the first semester. All were Texans.

The current enrollment is over 48,000, with students from every state and 148 foreign countries.

The 175-member centennial commission of UT alumni and friends recommended that school administrators require all students to become familiar with computers, but Flawn had this warning:

"We should not build 'computer literacy' at the expense of literacy. ... The vision of a student seated alone at a console hour after hour produces in me a certain unease, and I reassure myself by countering with a vision of that student arguing vehemently in a small seminar room. We must not lose the human interaction."

"Computers can calculate, learn, remember, compose, reason, infer, and deduce," Flawn said. "But certain entertaining motion pictures to the contrary notwithstanding, computers cannot think and cannot feel."

White, who described UT as "one of the state's most prized and priceless resources," and former governors John Connally, Allan Shivers, Preston Smith and Dolph Briscoe were among those at the convocation. All but White and Smith are UT graduates.

Among the notables attending and taking part in the Centennial Convocation ceremonies marking the University of Texas' 100 anniversary Thursday are, left to right, former governors John Connally, Dolph Briscoe, Alan Shivers, and Preston Smith.

Although UT centennial celebrations have been held throughout the year, Thursday was considered special.

Law students, dressed in attire of the 1880s, re-enacted UT's first law class on a vacant lot near the Capitol. Students and visitors to the campus listened to band music and munched on barbecue and an eight-foot-tall birthday cake shaped like the UT Tower.

Austin dedicated a three-acre park along Waller Creek to UT and also honored the school with a twilight parade and a birthday party at Scholz Garten.

Appointment of attorney could delay trial

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — The appointment of a new attorney to represent nurse Genene Jones, charged with injecting seven children with a paralyzing drug, could force a delay in the woman's upcoming murder trial.

Georgetown attorney Jim Brookshire was appointed Thursday to represent Ms. Jones, who is scheduled to be tried Oct. 17 in the September 1982 death of an infant Kerrville girl.

"It's (the case) been pending for a year and I'm supposed to do it all in a month," Brookshire said. "I met her for the first time today in the courtroom. We haven't even sat down and talked yet."

One of Ms. Jones' attorneys, Joe Grady Tuck of Kerrville, had asked to be dismissed from the murder case after a change of venue to Georgetown was granted.

Ms. Jones, 33, will be tried later on charges that she caused serious injury to six other children by injecting them with a powerful muscle relaxant, succinylcholine.

State District Judge Murray Jordan, presiding over a pretrial hearing, refused to revoke the nurse's indigency status Thursday after she testified that she has been unable to land a job since being linked to the baby deaths.

"I can't even afford a cup of coffee," she told reporters outside the courtroom.

The attorney representing Kerr County, H. Ritman Jons, had filed a motion seeking to force Ms. Jones to pay for her defense.

The nurse was freed on $225,000 bond backed by her mother, Gladys Jones, who testified that the bail virtually sapped all her financial resources.

"It was understood that if I could make the bond and get her out of jail, that was all I could do for her," Mrs. Jones said.

Genene Jones testified that she has been out of work for months and that her 19-year-old husband, Garron Turk, has been employed for a week — earning minimum wage at a Kerrville restaurant.

The couple has been living with Kerrville bail bondsman Edd Hodges for the past two months, she said.

A Bexar County grand jury is investigating a string of suspicious infant deaths at the pediatric intensive care unit of San Antonio's Medical Center Hospital from 1978 to early 1982.

Ms. Jones worked at the hospital during the period under investigation, but has denied any wrongdoing.

Body of abused child found

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who allegedly fatally beat his 2-year-old daughter and then weighted her body down with two 30-pound automobile batteries and tossed it into a bayou faces murder charges after law officers pulled the badly decomposed body from the murky water.

Step aside, now

In the wake of his indictment on a charge of commercial bribery, Jim Mattox should step aside as Texas attorney general until the case is resolved.

It will be up to a jury to determine Mattox's guilt or innocence. For now, we are presuming he is innocent as the American legal system specifies. Still, an indictment is an official accusation of possible wrongdoing and as such could bring into question any of Mattox's official actions.

The official charge alleges Mattox threatened to put the Houston law firm of Fulbright & Jaworski out of the state bond business. The Austin grand jury that indicted Mattox is looking into other allegations, though, and possibly more indictments could be forthcoming.

Mattox's position itself — chief law-enforcement officer for the state of Texas — necessitates strict adherence to legal decorum and at this stage of the ballgame his first thought should be of protecting the integrity of the Texas legal system.

Through carrying out his responsibilities as attorney general, Mattox would bring under undue scrutiny every legal action of the state. During his absence, his duties can be capably handled by the office's staff of attorneys.

The only other consideration at this time is when Mattox's decision should come. The sooner, the better, we believe.

Another Bush mission

It seems like only yesterday that Ronald Reagan and George Bush were snarling at each other, or at least not smiling at each other, on the campaign hustings. Each wanted to be president and each waged a two-fisted fight, including the much-publicized drama of who had first grabs to that microphone in Nashua, New Hampshire.

Once Mr. Reagan was selected, much speculation arose as to where he would turn for a running mate. It was expected by many that he would pick, automatically, someone of his own political stripes. Instead he selected Mr. Bush who is more liberal and was generally labeled as a Reagan adversary.

As it turned out, the president's trust was well placed, for the vice president has lived up to that trust. He has been loyal, and helpful, and has served as the president's eyes and ears on a number of international missions.

We were reminded of this as Vice President Bush embarked on another important mission. After a couple of days in Morocco this week, where he talked with King Hassan II about problems in Chad and the Middle East, he went on to gather information in other African nations. Algeria and Tunisia are on his schedule, and in a few days Mr. Reagan and the State Department will be beneficiaries of his knowledge.

When Bush was named vice president, some right-wingers thought Mr. Reagan was leaning to the left. Some left-wingers thought Bush had "sold out" to the right to enhance his political career. Well, the one thing to say about all this is that some politicians can rise above the pettiness of every-day ideological politics, and serve country before party. Vice President George Bush has demonstrated this in admirable fashion.

Another View:

Don't laugh too loud

No kidding, a group of California psychologists has come up with a Sense of Humor Inventory of 40 jokes representing 10 categories of humor. It doesn't show whether you have a "good" or "bad" sense of humor, but it's supposed to tell something about your personality.

Take this story, for example: A man falling from a cliff grabs hold of a root and, hanging in midair, looks heavenward and cries, "Is anyone out there?" A voice responds: "Yes, my son, let go and I will bear thee up." After a pause, the man says: "Anyone else?"

If you like that type of "philosophical" humor, the researchers say, you're impulsive, enthusiastic, cheerful, expressive and alert. If you like social satire ("Military intelligence is a contradiction in terms."), you're apt to be jealous, dogmatic, tyrannical and irritable. If you get a real yuk out of ethnic jokes, you're a tough-minded realist. You are "unsentimental, cynical" and you "reject illusions."

If you like sex jokes (Man to woman, while pouring her a drink: "Say when." Woman: "Right after this drink."), then you're impulsive and unsophisticated. If you don't like "sick" jokes, you're probably sober, introspective and full of cares. But if you like nonsense jokes ("What does a grape say when stepped on? Nothing — just a little whine."), then your personality is more self-assured than apprehensive.

Well, you get the idea. But isn't the whole thing a little frightening? How are you supposed to know that the fellow reciting jokes at the next cocktail party isn't really testing your personality? If you laugh at the wrong kind of joke, you risk being pigeonholed as dogmatic or unsophisticated. But if you don't laugh at the right jokes, you're apt to be viewed as too apprehensive or introspective. Everyone will have to practice laughing and keeping a straight face on cue.

It's high time we all start taking our humor more seriously.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Interest rates threaten recovery

WASHINGTON — The recent boom in the housing industry has been a point of pride for the Reagan administration. It's supposed to be the biggest single sign that the American economy is recovering.

Jack Anderson

But unfortunately, the housing boom is fizzling out.

The villain is the same one that caused the housing depression in the first place: high interest rates. Statistics show that many home buyers simply won't pay mortgages that demand more than 12.5 percent interest.

But in the strict privacy of its august chambers, the Federal Reserve Board anticipates that mortgage interest rates will hover around 13 percent through the end of next year.

The difference between 12.5 percent and 13 percent may not seem important, but it's enough to discourage many home buyers. A $60,000 mortgage at 13 percent, for example, costs $47 more a month than a 12.5 percent mortgage. When you get up to 14 percent, the difference is $70 a month, and that can be the difference between acceptable and unacceptable.

"The higher interest rates now prevailing are putting the cost of mortgage credit beyond the limits of affordability for a great many families," says Jack Carlson, chief economist for the National Association of Realtors.

The link between interest rates and home building was dramatically illustrated in the past 12 months. Alarmed at the length and severity of the recession, Fed Chairman Paul Volcker decided to loosen up the nation's money supply to encourage lower interest rates. Result: New housing starts, which had hit a post-Depression low in 1982, jumped 70 percent in the first six months of this year.

Then the Fed, worried about renewed inflation, tightened up on the money supply this summer. Mortgage rates went from 12 percent to near 14 percent in short order — and housing sales plummeted. If mortgage rates don't go back down, the slump can only continue.

But my associate Michael Binstein has obtained a "strictly confidential" Federal Reserve Board report, which predicts no relief in sight for home buyers until the end of next year.

The Fed's forecast is for mortgage rates to average 13.37 percent from October through December, 13.25 percent in the first quarter of 1984, 13 percent in the second quarter and 12.75 percent in the last half of the year.

What makes the situation critical is the drastic ripple effect a housing recession has on related industries, like lumber, concrete, steel and home appliances. For example, in May 1982 housing starts were 54 percent below the previous four-year average — and there were decreases of 23 percent in lumber production, 27 percent in cement, 37 percent in construction steel and 28 percent in household appliances.

On the other hand, of course, if mortgage rates go down and the housing industry starts booming again, it will lead its allied industries to the prosperity that's still waiting around the corner.

SOVIET PR: The shooting down of a South Korean airliner, with 269 persons aboard, was assessed at first as a public-relations disaster for the Kremlin. Certainly President Reagan has done his best to put the black hat of villainy on the Soviet leadership.

But sober second thoughts have led to the uneasy conclusion that, after all the fiery rhetoric, the slaughter in the skies may serve the ruthless old men in the Kremlin.

Essentially, some analysts fear that the incident and the Soviets' incredible response — though it may have been a PR disaster — may intimidate other nations. And the Soviets would rather be feared than loved.

In this view, the Russians have succeeded. They warned that "intruders" would be shot down, and they made good on their threat. It's a stark, simple message, and one that is not lost on the Japanese, our European allies and Third World countries: The Soviets mean what they say, and will back up their tough talk with tough action.

CHARLEY REESE

Welfare corrupting society

The food stamp program in fiscal year 1982 involved 23 million recipients and $11.1 billion of our sweat converted into tax dollars.

Charley Reese

It is always fun to go back and review the nonsensical and inaccurate predictions of the politicians and bureaucrats attending to the birth of one of these programs.

In 1966, Howard P. Davis, deputy administrator, U.S. Department of Agriculture foods program, had this forecast about the future of the food stamp program.

"Ultimately when the program reaches maximum expansion, we've been figuring on 4.5 million people, covering about one half of the counties in the country and involving somewhere between $375 million and $400 million a year."

Let's see, he was off by 18.5 million people and $10.7 billion. I'd say that is a sizeable error in forecasting. Of course, it wasn't Davis' fault the program expanded. You can blame that on Congress and on liberal editorial writers.

I believe we could feed anybody who was hungry without food stamps. The Commodity Credit Corp., which is a government agency, is holding in storage 11.4 billion pounds of nonfat dry milk, 1.5 billion pounds of other dairy products, 184.6 million bushels of wheat, 1.8 billion pounds of rice and other assorted amounts of assorted foods.

We have food stamps because liberals think it is demeaning for people to have to go by a warehouse and pick up food if they are hungry.

We have food stamps because the wholesale and retail food industry figures it might as well make a profit on our charity.

We have food stamps because the farmers' lobbyists, or some of them anyway, figure the more food that is bought, the better for the farmers even if they get on the average only about 37 cents of the consumer's food dollar.

The only way to devise a simple welfare program that will do the job without bankrupting the taxpayers is to take the profit out of every single welfare program. I don't see any reason for there to be a profit in charity and despite liberal-collectivist claims that people have a "right" to all of these things, welfare is charity. It is taking from those who have earned something and giving it to somebody else.

We must also make a firm commitment to cut out chiselers. Welfare lobbyists always claim they are minimal, but that is not true. Even the USDA audit reveals an average of nearly 10 percent error in the food stamps alone.

We must also make these programs available only to the truly needy. Up until 1981, strikers automatically got food stamps which is nothing more than tax subsidy of one side of a private dispute. It is the job of a union to provide for its striking members, not the taxpayers.

There is no question either, though nobody wants to admit it, that some young girls are being urged to have children just to draw Aid to Dependent Children payments and other benefits. That's why you have such a high rate of illegitimacy.

The present welfare system is not only a drain on productive members of society, but it is a corrupting influence. Unless liberals find the courage and honesty to reform it, one of two things will happen: we'll either go busted or people will get so angry they will wipe out the welfare programs altogether.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On Sept. 16, 1850, the slave trade was forbidden in the District of Columbia.

On this date:

In 1630, the village of Shawmut, Mass., changed its name to Boston.

In 1862, the Civil War battle of Antietam in Maryland began.

In 1919, the American Legion was incorporated by an act of Congress.

And, in 1940, President Franklin Roosevelt signed the Selective Service Act, which set up the first peacetime military draft in the nation's history.

Ten years ago: the military junta that took over Chile said armed civilians were still resisting authorities.

Five years ago: Nicaragua's national guard said it had retaken the nation's second largest city, Leon, from guerrillas.

Today's birthdays: "Candid Camera" creator Allen Funt is 69 years old. Actor Peter Falk is 56.

Thought for today: "Think wrongly if you please — but in all cases, think for yourself." — Gotthold Lessing, German dramatist-critic (1729-1781).

MX missiles will create jobs

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Bringing 100 MX missiles to southeastern Wyoming and western Nebraska will create 650 permanent jobs, but the influx of job-hunters will put extra demands on the state's governments, an Air Force study says.

The report, released Thursday, also said 3,100 jobs would be created in the construction, to start next year, at the Warren Air Force Base command post in Cheyenne.

Proper planning will help offset the possible negative effects of the population growth, the report said. The MX missiles are to be deployed in existing Minuteman missile silos.

Father faces sentence for death

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A man facing sentencing in the beating death of his 3-year-old son broke into sobs and told the judge, "I thought I was doing my best. God knows I loved the kid."

Superior Court Judge Edwin Stern on Thursday sentenced Allen Bass, 21, to 20 years for aggravated manslaughter and five years for endangering the welfare of a child, to run concurrently. Bass denies taking part in the September 1982 beating that killed Shawn Nicely, one of five children of Bass and his girlfriend, Renee Nicely.

Man poses as doctor for months

DENVER (AP) — An unemployed construction worker says he "never touched or treated a patient" during more than two months he spent in Denver hospitals posing as a doctor to get food and shelter.

Ervin Luther Boyd, 24, said at the Denver City Jail on Thursday he began posing as Dr. David Loudon after his release from another jail where he served 90 days for stealing a radio. He dressed in scrub clothes and carried a stethoscope in the hospitals, where he slept in waiting rooms and borrowed change for vending machine food.

The arrest came Wednesday after a nurse became suspicious when he refused to examine a patient. Boyd said he turned himself in.

Ammonia tanks cause of blasts

FORT PIERCE, Fla. (AP) — A blast that unleased "a gigantic white cloud" of toxic gas, burning 16 people, occurred as workmen at an ice company were changing ammonia tanks, officials said.

St. Lucie Fire District Chief Russell Rogers said he was not sure what caused the tank of ammonia, used in the freezing process, to burst Thursday at the Royal Palm Ice Co. About 25 people in surrounding businesses were evacuated for several hours.

Four men handling the ammonia were admitted to the intensive care unit at Lawnwood Medical Center with serious and critical burns.

Residents upset with prices

TIMES BEACH, Mo. (AP) — Residents upset with the prices offered by the government for their homes in this dioxin-contaminated town have taken to painting the amounts on the sides of their houses.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency on Thursday began handing out checks in the first government buyout of an entire town because of hazardous waste contamination. The agency would not say how many residents accepted the checks, which it said covered the fair market values of the houses plus up to $15,000 to help residents relocate.

Governor to leave after term

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Gov. J. Joseph Garrahy says he will leave office next year after four two-year terms so that economic reforms he plans to push as a private citizen "are considered and adopted on their merits, without politics."

The popular Democrat, in announcing Thursday that he will not seek re-election in 1984, also said he wants more time with his family.

A study commissioned by the 52-year-old Garrahy's administration will make recommendations next month expected to call for broad programs to boost Rhode Island's troubled economy.

Worker sues over lunch date

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — A health worker has sued claiming her bosses ordered her to stop having lunch at work with an AIDS victim and to get "clearance" before bringing the man into the building.

The $2 million suit was filed Wednesday in Montgomery County Circuit Court by Ruth Ann Miller, an employee of the National Institutes of Health, and William Lee, who was being treated at an NIH clinic for acquired immune deficiency syndrome. Four NIH supervisors are among several defendants.

Institute officials withheld comment. The suit alleges the couple suffered "humiliation, embarrassment and damaged reputations."

Rockefeller remains chairman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sharon P. Rockefeller has been re-elected chairman of the board of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

Mrs. Rockefeller, the wife of West Virginia Gov. Jay Rockefeller, was elected Thursday at a meeting at which President Reagan's newest appointee was denied a seat, according to CPB spokesman Don Veraska. Edward J. Pfister was re-elected as the corporation's president.

The board voted not to seat William Lee Hanley Jr., a New York industrialist Reagan appointed when Congress was in recess. Reagan said Hanley did not need Senate confirmation because he was a recess appointee. But the corporation's general counsel ruled board members must receive Senate confirmation before they can be seated.

Rallies, petition drives scheduled

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition of labor and consumer groups has scheduled rallies and petition drives next week to persuade Congress to extend price controls on natural gas.

Rallies, demonstrations and petition drives will be held in 65 cities in 35 states, the Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition and the AFL-CIO said Thursday. The effort will be aimed at lawmakers who have not pledged their support to a measure that would extend price controls on natural gas.

Academy to review chemical

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission has authorized a review of the potential health hazards of a chemical used to make pliable plastics that are commonly used in products for infants.

The commission voted Thursday to ask the National Academy of Sciences to review di-ethyl-hexyl phthalate, a chemical that has been found to cause cancer in laboratory animals. The chemical is used to make pliable plastics for pacifiers, teething rings, toys, bumpers and crib covers. Most pliable plastics contain up to 40 percent of the chemical.

USIA shows truth about Soviet attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — A few hours after the Reagan administration learned that the Soviets had gunned down a civilian passenger plane, the United States Information Agency (USIA), the government's propaganda arm, mobilized in an unprecedented way to beam America's version to the world.

"There has never been this kind of effort before," said USIA director Charles Z. Wick. "This gave us an unprecedented opportunity to show the truth which is the greatest communication asset we have on behalf of the free world against the disinformation of the Soviets. And that's what this contest is all about."

In a recent interview in his modern office complex a few blocks from the Capitol, Wick and three other top agency officials described how they mobilized a task force to dramatize America's version of the incident through film, television and its overseas broadcasting service, the Voice of America.

The prime mission of the USIA, which was established 30 years ago and now maintains 206 posts in 126 countries, is to strenghten foreign understanding and support for U.S. policies. In the words of an agency press release: "to counter hostile attempts to distort or frustrate the objectives and policies of the United States."

And when the Reagan administration heard Sept. 1 that the Soviets shot down a Korean Air Lines plane carrying 269 people, the USIA went into fourth gear.

Wick said that after the administration obtained tape of the Russian pilots discussing their tactics, USIA film experts worked through the night to make the 11-minute videotape that was later played at the United Nations Security Council meeting.

"People came into the studio in their pajama tops over Labor Day weekend to be a part of this effort," said Alvin Snyder, USIA television-film director. "It was a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to try to communicate this kind of story."

And Snyder, a former television network producer, recognized that it is often small details that make a drama.

At the United Nations, he made sure a television monitor was placed behind the Soviet ambassador to the United Nations, Oleg A. Troyanovsky. And pictures of the Soviet ambassador, looking glum as he listened to the tape playing behind him, made front pages and magazine covers around the world.

"We had several fallback positions if the U.N. decided not to permit showing the videotape," Snyder said. "We had one tape set up in the hallway and one in the garden. And in case the system failed, we had another tape machine on a separate generator."

"This agency has been engaged for a long time in public diplomacy," said Jack Hedges, USIA counsel. "But now we're in an era of video-diplomacy."

The officials explained that even before Snyder's team began putting the videotape together, the Voice of America had made the plane incident its top news item.

"We know without question that during periods of international crisis, VOA listening in countries like the Soviet Union skyrockets," said Kenneth Tomlinson, who runs the VOA. "People turn to shortwave radio to find out what actually is going on in the world."

Tomlinson said the VOA increased the number of programming hours to the Soviet Union from 16 to 17 each day.

Congressman wants apology

WASHINGTON (AP) — An angry congressman, accused in a Republican campaign letter of "supporting communism," says he will work to defeat President Reagan's plans for aiding the International Monetary Fund unless the president apologizes for the incident.

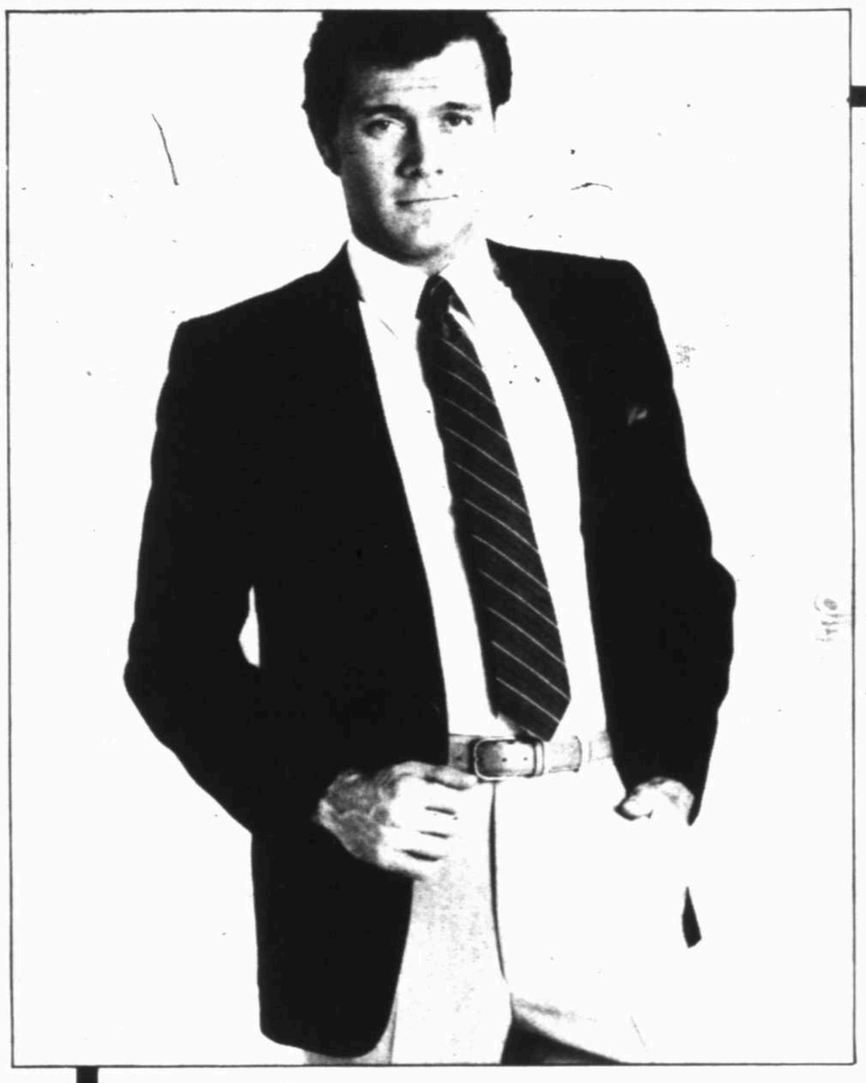

Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., who supported the administration's plan for increasing IMF support by $8.5 billion when it passed the House by six votes, told Treasury Secretary Donald Regan to pass his comments on to the president.

The IMF legislation, which has passed the House and Senate, calls for an $8.5 billion hike in U.S. support for the international lending agency. But it still faces a House-Senate conference committee and separate legislation to fund it must be appropriated.

Obey was angry about a letter distributed earlier this summer by the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee. It accused 20 Democrats, Obey included, of "supporting communism" because they had voted against an amendment to the IMF legislation that would have banned loans to communist nations.

Aid to Portugal possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is making it clear he is willing to increase foreign aid to Portugal if a new agreement is reached with the country over U.S. use of a military base in the Azores.

After a meeting Thursday between Reagan and Portuguese President Antonio Ramalho Eanes, an administration official who did not wish to be identified said that while the United States does not formally tie the aid to the military base agreement: "Obviously, the Portuguese do have economic problems and they have military modernization needs and we want to be as helpful as we can."

The two presidents socialized in the evening at a state dinner in the Rose Garden with a guest list that included such Hollywood luminaries as Lillian Gish, Merv Griffin, Eva Gabor, Fess Parker, Richard Widmark and Michael Connors.

Gas blamed for explosion

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A black mineworkers' union claimed today that no one checked for buildups of methane gas before an explosion killed 63 workers in South Africa's worst mining disaster in 23 years.

The charge was made by the 40,000-member National Union of Mineworkers after secretary Cyril Ramaphosa said his investigators spoke with survivors.

The Hlobane coal pits in northern Natal Province were shaken by the blast on Monday.

Marshalls favor freedom

MAJURO, Marshall Islands (AP) — Moving a step closer to complete independence, residents of this tiny mid-Pacific republic have narrowly approved an end to United States trusteeship, according to a final vote count released today.

The plebiscite, held on the scattered islands and atolls on Sept. 7, saw 6,215, or 58 percent of the voters, favoring the Compact of Free Association, and 4,509 opposing it, officials said.

A simple majority was needed to approve the compact, which is now subject to approval by the U.S. Congress.

Missile testing opposed

OTTAWA (AP) — Opponents of a plan to test U.S. cruise missiles in Canada have won a preliminary legal victory, with a judge rejecting a government request that the Federal Court refuse to hear their case.

Justice Alex Cattanach, in proceedings Thursday, gave government lawyers 30 days to explain why testing the missiles "is justifiable in a free and democratic society."

After the explanation is filed, a hearing would be scheduled at which a coalition of peace, labor and women's organizations would request an interim injunction to block tests of unarmed cruise missiles starting early next year in western Canada.

Both sides have said they will offer testimony at the hearing from international experts to support their arguments.

Guerrillas take over town

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas overran a town in a key eastern province as President Alvaro Magana, making a speech 10 miles way, said he "definitely" would not negotiate sharing power with the rebels.

Salvadoran civilian and military sources said about 50 guerrillas attacked El Triunfo, 75 miles east of the capital, and occupied the town of 5,000 inhabitants after hours of fighting Thursday — El Salvador's Independence Day.

Military sources said seven soldiers were killed in the battle. There were no reports of guerrilla casualties.

Fighting raged Thursday evening around Jucuapa and Chinameca, southwest of El Triunfo, as rebels attacked those towns also.

Railroad car commandeered

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Police were investigating reports today that a crowd of blacks, angry about lack of space on a train, took over a railroad car reserved for whites and forced its 12 passengers to leave.

No one was arrested or wounded in the incident, which began Thursday after blacks waiting for trains into Johannesburg saw there was not enough space in the segregated cars reserved for them.

Survey predicts slow recovery for poorer countries

WASHINGTON (AP) — Crippled by the sharp recession, poorer countries will recover slowly from economic problems that have stifled efforts to improve the living standards of their citizens, an international survey concludes.

The 1983 annual report of the World Bank released Thursday said developing countries "suffered severely from the prolonged recession" that ended in the United States late last year but still hangs on in other parts of the world.

The effect was "most alarming" in Africa where economic stagnation continued. Economic growth there has declined, in per capita terms, since the early 1970s, it said.

In developed parts of Latin America, it said, the recession has caused "the progress made during the 1970s to be abruptly interrupted."

Slower economic growth in the developing world, it said, "has undoubtedly resulted in increases in unemployment and underemployment, and hence additional poverty." It noted, though, the difficulty in coming up with a precise measure of the changes.

"While this analysis must inevitably be presented in terms of rather dry statistics, for many communities, the 'current cyclical downturn' is, in reality, a tragedy of no small proportion. Emergence from this condition will be a slow process," according to the report. The bank, which has 144 nations as its members, channels money from the richer nations to the poorer ones for development projects.

Because of the plight of the developing world, the bank urged continued support to put its lending program for the poorest nations on a "secure and sustainable footing."

The Reagan administration and Congress have been reluctant to boost U.S. contributions to the lending pool, called the International Development Association.

The Carter administration agreed to give the program $3.2 billion over three years, a sum that President Reagan wants stretched out to cover four years instead. To meet that commitment, Reagan has asked Congress for $245 million in fiscal year 1983, which ends Sept. 30, and $1.1 billion in 1984. Congress has yet to approve the request.

Reviewing the bank's recently ended 1983 fiscal year, the report indicated it had been a difficult one for the developing world.

"The impetus toward development" in many nations "was more sharply broken than at any time since the founding of the institution, as the impact of the deepest recession since the 1930s continued to be felt in all parts of the world," it said. The World Bank's operations began in 1946.

Despite the gloomy picture, it held out hope of better times for the poorer countries.

Begin to remain in seclusion

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin's aides said today he has lost weight and will remain in seclusion following his resignation, but they said reports that he is in a deep depression are exaggerated.

Begin has secluded himself at home for nine days, and an aide said he did not know when the 70-old-old leader would return to his office to work full-time as caretaker prime minister.

He formally submitted his resignation Thursday, sending it by envoy to President Chaim Herzog. Begin's failure to follow tradition and present the letter personally further stirred speculation about his health.

Herzog said he would open talks Sunday with political parties on which should lead the new government. He said he will receive the opposition Labor Party delegation in the morning and a group from Begin's Likud Bloc in the afternoon.

Labor was called in first since it is the largest faction in Parliament. Consultations will end Tuesday, a spokesman said today.

Begin, who remains caretaker prime minister with full policy-making powers until a new government is decided on and sworn in, waited for 18 days after announcing his intention to resign before submitting it formally.

The delay allowed Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, his Herut Party colleague and likely successor, a chance to assemble a parliamentary majority.

Herzog has said he would choose the man "who enjoys the support of the majority in the Knesset (Parliament) and to authorize him to form a Cabinet."

After consulting with Israel's political parties starting next week, Herzog was seen almost certain to choose Shamir, a 68-year-old comrade of Begin from the days when they fought together for Israeli independence.

Shamir was elected by his party after Begin announced Aug. 28 that he was resigning, and has won the backing of the six coalition parties.

AP Laserphoto

The Knesset can choose its own candidate, but only if none of the candidates chosen by Herzog is able to form a coalition that can win the Knesset's confidence. In this case, the Knesset's candidate must be backed by an absolute majority of 61 members and must accept the nomination.

Matityahu Shmuelevitz, director of the Prime Minister's Office, told The Associated Press that Begin's return to work "depends on whether he can shave off his beard."

While Begin is in seclusion, Cabinet meetings are chaired by Deputy Prime Minister David Levy, but he is not the acting prime minister unless Begin so appoints him.

Aides say Begin is suffering from a recurrent skin ailment which prevents him from shaving. The prime minister is meticulous about his appearance and does not want to be photographed with a stubble.

'Junk Yard Dawgs' defense has returned

Midland High holds on to upset Estacado, 14-13

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Midland High defense reclaimed their role as the "Junk Yard Dawgs" at Memorial Stadium Thursday night in a 14-13 upset over Lubbock Estacado, the No. 5 ranked Class 4A team in the state.

The "Dawg" defense lived with a bad rap all week, following a 25-20 loss to Andrews, but they came back with "Pride" labeled in the heart against one of the best teams in the state. "How 'bout them Dawgs!"

Despite allowing 184 yards rushing to Estacado tailback Terry Upshaw, the Bulldogs gave up only 231 yards total offense to the Matadors. But the yardage was unimportant. It was the gutsy turn-away style of play that put the Bulldogs back as a defensive unit.

ESTACADO MARCHED to the MHS 26, 5, and 15 yard lines without scoring any points. It was a show worth watching.

"I think our attitude check this week paid off," said a jubilant MHS coach Pat Culpepper after the game. "The defense was just super. There were so many big plays that you couldn't count them all."

Defensive back Kenneth White was outstanding, intercepting a pass in the end zone and catching Upshaw after a 42-yard gain that looked like was going for six points.

"We worked hard all week and it paid off," said White. "I think we are a good defensive team."

Terry Hannon, the only returning starter to the defense, said, "We have much more talent on defense than we had last year. We're going to be a better defensive team than last year. We have confidence in each other."

Ends Keith Byrd and Hannon applied intensive pressure, wrecking havoc in the Estacado backfield while Jimmy Essman and Brad Edgar did the dirty work in the middle.

"Byrd and Hannon were keys for us because that was our game plan to crash our ends on Estacado. They did a good job of putting on pressure. We call it our Missouri press defense," said Culpepper.

BUT IN the final scope of things, it was an errant pass by Estacado on a two-point conversion try with 3:02 left in the game that gave the Bulldogs the win. Estacado pulled to within 14-13 when Upshaw broke for a 27-yard TD after a successful fourth down pass play of eight yards. Quarterback B.T. Ross, however, missed two crossing receivers in the end zone on the conversion effort and No. 5 was down the tubes.

"Our quarterback (Ross) just threw the ball too quickly. I think it was there, but in hindsight, I guess we should have run the ball," said Estacado coach Louis Kelley.

MHS took a 7-0 lead in the first period of play when quarterback James Welborn hit sophomore tight end Darrell Davis with a 34-yard scoring strike. But MHS failed in the first half to put the game away. They got to the Estacado 10 before Richard Fry missed on a 37-yard field goal attempt and couldn't get in again after getting to the Estacado 15. Allen Foret also fumbled a ball after a 36-yard reception to the Estacado 10.

"The ball just stuck to the ground when I dropped it. It should have gone out of bounds," said Foret.

With all the missed opportunities, things didn't look bright for MHS when Estacado gave them consistently poor field position in the second half. The Matadors took advantage of the field position to tie the score at 7-7 with 11:08 left to play when Tony Sowell intercepted a Welborn pass and returned it 20 yards for the score.

WITH THE game reaching late stages, Welborn found Todd Shiplett down the left sideline for 48 yards and Randall Collins followed with a 25-yard tackle breaking and player carrying TD romp. Fry's second extra point was the margin of victory.

"Estacado has great linebackers and did a good job of taking the short stuff over the middle away from us. So we thought we could go deep and Welborn tossed it perfectly over the shoulder of Shiplet. It was just a perfectly excuted play," said Culpepper.

After Estacado missed the two-point conversion effort, MHS was able to run out the clock behind the hard running of Collins, who had 79 yards on 15 carries.

MHS is now 2-1 after facing three straight teams that were in the playoffs last year. The task is not over, however, since they host Odessa Permian, another playoff team, next Friday at Memorial. Now the Bulldog stock is back up with a good defensive showing and a passing attack that has not sputtered in three games. Estacado is also 2-1 and damaged goods as far as state rankings are concerned.

Suspicious TD pass helps Browns win

CLEVELAND (AP) — The first-quarter touchdown that gave the Cleveland Browns the lead for good Thursday night looked a little bit suspicious when it was replayed to a national television audience.

But the slick 19-yard pass from Brian Sipe to Ozzie Newsome will stand in the record books, as will the Browns' 17-7 victory.

"Referees are very, very rarely wrong in this game," Sipe said afterward, laughing.

Newsome dove for the first-quarter pass in the right corner of the end zone. Though he was blanketed by Cincinnati defender Ray Griffin, Newsome popped the ball toward his chest with his fingertips.

Whether the ball then bounced on the ground into his chest will likely forever remain a mystery.

"They had a blitz," Sipe said of the play, "and I knew it was coming. I had two options, and Ozzie's the one I picked. I'm glad I did. That's an immediate throw that doesn't need a drop and a set."

THE BROWNS' opening drive resulted from the first of several critical Cincinnati mistakes. Chip Banks jumped high to pick off a pass by Ken Anderson near midfield to start the drive.

"It looked like the first drive, again, it looked like a good drive," said Bengals' Coach Forrest Gregg. "But we stopped ourselves again, with an interception. I've got to give Banks credit. He made a great play."

Mike Pruitt ran one yard for Cleveland's other touchdown.

Sipe threw for 201 yards, and the pass to Newsome was his eighth touchdown pass of the year. He completed 21 of 31 passes and hit on his first nine attempts in the game.

A pair of Cincinnati mistakes led to two of the Browns' scores. Banks' interception led to the first, and Cincinnati defensive back Ken Riley interfered with receiver Dave Logan on a third-quarter pass to put the Browns inside the Cincinnati 5.

Pruitt scored his touchdown two plays later, with 27 seconds left in the quarter.

Matt Bahr's 19-yard field goal in the second period accounted for the Browns' other score. The kick was set up when Sipe pitched to running back Dwight Walker, who threw his first career pass 25 yards to Ricky Feacher at the Cincinnati 4.

Anderson, playing despite a neck injury aggravated in last Sunday's loss to Buffalo, started slow, but then heated up to direct the Bengals' only scoring drive early in the second quarter.

Anderson hit six-of-six passes for 42 yards on a 71-yard drive climaxed by rookie Larry Kinnebrew's touchdown. The one-yard run came on his first career carry.

Anderson again had the Bengals on the move late in the fourth quarter, marching them from their own 20-yard line to the Cleveland nine before throwing an interception to Clarence Scott in the end zone with 1:33 left in the game.

Zoeller, Levi Gilder tied?

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Fuzzy Zoeller shot a 2-under-par 70 and — apparently — was in a 3-way tie for the second-round lead Thursday in the new Las Vegas Pro-Celebrity Classic, the first American golf tournament to offer $1 million-plus in total prize money.

Zoeller, the first-round leader, Wayne Levi and Bob Gilder all finished 36 holes in this 5-day, 90-hole event with the same numerical total, 133.

Zoeller, however, had a better score in relation to par. He's 11 under for two rounds. Levi and Gilder are 10 under.

The confusing discrepancy arises from the fact that three of the four courses used for the first four rounds of this event — Showboat, Desert Inn and the Dunes — are par 72 layouts. The other, the Las Vegas Country Club, carries a par of 71. Levi and Gilder have played the par 71 course. Zoeller has not.

"I don't know who's leading. And it doesn't matter. It doesn't make any difference. We all have to add it up on Sunday," said Zoeller, who had an opening 63 at Showboat and played his second round in 100-plus degree heat at the Desert Inn. It was highlighted by an eagle-3 on his first hole.

Levi, winner of the Buick Open last month, played his first round at the par 71 Las Vegas Country Club and added a 66 Thursday at Showboat.

Rematch at Memorial: Lee hosts Eastwood

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

A year ago when Midland Lee traveled to El Paso Eastwood, it was billed as the meeting of two strong football teams.

Well, the Troopers had their problems in that game, losing 42-13, but overcame them as the season developed and went on to win a state playoff berth.

After the victory, things weren't quite the same for Lee. The Rebels dropped three District 4-5A decisions and ended up losing a coin flip that determined the district's second representative in the playoffs.

Tonight, the Troopers have a rematch when they enter the Tall City for an 8 p.m. game at Memorial Stadium.

Things have gone pretty much as expected for the Rebels in their first two football games, finding little difficulty against Lubbock Coronado or Monahans while grinding out a total 589 yards and 68 points (giving up only seven).

AS A result of their early-season play which has produced a 2-0 record, the Rebels are ranked No. 8 in the Associated Press schoolboy poll and No. 4 in the Harris Ratings, rankings that have little meaning to Lee coach Spike Dykes.

George may let Billy go due to player unrest

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner is seriously considering ending Billy Martin's third stint as manager because of player dissatisfaction and the team's apparent failure to win its division, the New York Times said in Friday's editions.

A parade of agents, including that of star reliever Rich Gossage, has told Steinbrenner in recent weeks that their clients no longer want to play for Martin, the newspaper said. In addition, third base coach Don Zimmer has submitted his resignation because of his displeasure with working under Martl—time to warm up before being brought into games and does not like Martin's practice of bringing him in with runners on base instead of letting him start innings.

"Goose (Gossage) is adamant," one Yankee said. "There's no way he'll be back if Billy is."

Other dissatisfied players, according to the Times, are Steve Kemp, Ken Griffey and Dale Murray.

"Some agents use that as a ploy because it's time for their players to negotiate a contract or their players haven't been playing," said Martin, who is in the first year of a five-year contract.

Martin was hired for a third time by Steinbrenner last January after having been fired by the Yankees owner after the 1979 season. His first tenure as New York manager ended during the 1978 season when he quit under pressure. However, he was back with the Yankees in July, 1979, replacing Bob Lemon who had replaced him.

MHS volleyball rallies for win; Lee stumbles

Just when Big Spring was about to knock off Midland High in volleyball Thursday night, the Bulldogs dug deep for that extra effort to overcome an 11-1 deficit in the third game and went on to post a District 4-5A victory.

After losing the first game 15-13, the defending district champs came back to beat the Steers 16-14 in the second and then gave up only one point after the 11-1 score to post a 15-12 victory to keep their 4-5A record unbeaten at 2-0.

"We started out real slow and didn't start getting it all together until the second game," said Midland High coach Linda Jolly. "The third game you could call a come-from-behind miracle. We were down 11-1 and the girls hung in there and proved they were real fighters. It makes me realize they're not going to lose without putting up a good fight."

In the earlier junior varsity game at MHS Gym, the Steers won in three games, 12-15, 16-14, 10-15.

Over the weekend the Bulldogs will be competing in the West Texas State Varsity Tournament in Canyon. On Tuesday, it's back to 4-5A action with MHS at Abilene Cooper at 6 and 7 p.m.

Things didn't go so smoothly for the Midland Lee Rebels in San Angelo, losing the JV contest 15-6, 15-14 and varsity 15-7, 15-9.

"San Angelo played a real good game, they're a real strong team," said Rebel coach Jancie Baulch. "And, we didn't play that well. We never got it going like we needed to. Anytime you play San Angelo, I think you have to play to the best of your ability or they will take advantage of you."

Francona helps Expos beat Phillies, 4-1

By The Associated Press

Major Leagues

Terry Francona hit a home run and two singles and drove in two runs as the Montreal Expos beat the Philadelphia Phillies 4-1 Thursday night to further tighten the National League East pennant race.

The loss by the Phillies dropped them into a first-place tie with Pittsburgh, which beat the Chicago Cubs 8-4, while Montreal is only one-half game back.

Expos pitcher Bill Gullickson, 15-11, gave up six hits before yielding to Bob James with the bases loaded in the eighth. James struck out Len Matuszek and finished up with three strikeouts against the four batters he faced to earn his fourth save. Kevin Gross, 4-6, was the loser.

Gullickson, 8-1 since the All-Star break, has won four straight decisions.

Francona's second homer of the season, with one out in the fourth, gave the Expos a 2-0 lead.

The Phillies scored in their half of the fourth on Matuszek's second major-league homer and second in as many nights.

But Montreal made it 4-1 with two runs in the fifth on Tim Wallach's sacrifice fly and a run-scoring single by Francona.

Dave Parker had three hits and Richie Hebner drilled a pinch-hit grand-slam home run to back Larry McWilliams' route-going performance as the Pirates defeated the Cubs. McWilliams, 14-6, allowed eight hits, struck out nine and didn't allow the Cubs a hit after Ron Cey's solo homer, his second of the game, with one out in the sixth.

Elsewhere in the NL, George Foster hit a two-run homer in the seventh inning to snap a tie and give the New York Mets a 6-4 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals. Foster's 25th homer of the season kept the Cardinals 2½ games behind the leaders.

Alejandro Pena scattered five hits and the Dodgers took advantage of a wild performance by Houston pitcher Nolan Ryan en route to a 6-0 victory that extended Los Angeles' lead in the West to 4½ games.

In the American League, Wade Boggs, the major-league batting leader, featured a 15-hit attack with a double and two singles as the Boston Red Sox defeated division-leading Baltimore 7-1, snapping the Orioles' six-game winning streak. The loss trimmed Baltimore's American League East lead over Detroit to five games, but the Orioles still have a six-game advantage in the loss column.

George Wright clubbed his 18th homer and capped a four-run seventh inning with a two-run double to pace the Texas Rangers to a 6-5 victory over the Oakland A's.

Ken Schrom beat his former teammates for the third time this season and Dave Engle and Mickey Hatcher both homered to boost the Minnesota Twins to a 6-2 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Harold Baines hit his third career grand-slam homer in an 11-run sixth inning and LaMarr Hoyt pushed his major-league leading total to 21 wins as the Chicago White Sox defeated the Seattle Mariners 12-0 in a game that was shortened to 6½ innings by rain.

Mancini stops Romero in ninth to defend title

NEW YORK (AP) — Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini, the World Boxing Association lightweight champion, didn't know a whole lot about Orlando Romero before their fight Thursday night in Madison Square Garden. He quickly found out.

"Where do they get these guys," Mancini kept saying after Romero gave him all he wanted before he kept the title with a one-punch knockout in the ninth round. "Hopefully I won't have to see too many more of these guys? Where do they get these guys ... these southpaws from South America."

Romero, of Peru, went into the fight ranked No. 1 by the WBA. But his ability was questioned by many boxing observers. No longer. He fought Mancini on even terms and seemed to be taking charge until the champion, with most of his family including his father and 81-year-old grandmother watching, ended it in the ninth round.

"In the early rounds I was trying to catch him with a right when he was lunging in," said Mancini. "I hit him a couple of times but I didn't catch him that much.

"I said to myself, 'Ive got to go back to the well.'".

Mancini reached down in the ninth and after missing with a wild right hand came up with a left hook that caught Romero on the jaw and dropped him on his back. Referee Tony Perez counted the challenger out at 1:56 of the round.

It was the 22-year-old Mancini's first title defense since Duk Koo Kim was knocked out in the 14th round and fatally injured last Nov. 13 at Las Vegas, Nev.

Eastwood 'not as explosive,' as in '82

"We're going to play teams ranked a lot higher than we are and a lot lower," said Dykes. "And, everyone of those teams is capable of beating us. We don't pay much attention to rankings, we really don't consider them."

Eastwood coach Todd Ware, whose team is 0-2 and looking to rebuild a graduation depleted squad which features several under-classmen starters, doesn't hold much stock in polls either, but seems to agree with the polls.

"I think Lee is one of the best teams in the state, on film and on paper," said Ware. "They've got everything going, experience and everything else. I think we'll be the decided underdog and I hope we give them a good game."

And, a good game is what Dykes is expecting despite Trooper problems in their first two outings.

"Our scouts have scouted them in two games and they're not nearly as explosive as they were a year ago offensively," said Dykes. "Graduation just wiped them out. Five players off that team got major college scholarships.

"They're more balanced, running the ball better than they did a year ago but they're certainly not passing as well," continued Dykes. "The worst thing that's happened to them that's kept them from being effective is turnovers. Turnovers have killed them, kept their defensie in a hole the whole game."

Replacing those five players hasn't been easy for Eastwood, relying heavily on the junior ranks for replacements with five underclassmen on offense and four on defense.

"We're a young and inexperienced team," said Ware. "We only have one starter back on offense and only three on defense. That lack of experience has hurt us real bad. The mistakes on offense put us in bad field position and that's what's been hurting us.

"Right now, I'd say offensively we haven't moved the ball well at all on the ground or in the air. We've got more yardage passing but have had a lot of interceptions and fumbles. Defensively we're stronger in the line and linebackers than we are in the secondary, which is young."

That defensive strength is going up against Lee's offensive strong point: running.

The Rebels have used fullback Isaac Garnett effectively up the middle and have been able to pop speedster Walter Jones around the sides. Also, Randy Ellis seems to get the job done on those rare occasions when he carries the ball, two carries for 72 yards and one touchdown (a 60-yarder).

"You've got to stop their fullback, that's the first thing you have to do against the wishbone," said Ware. "Then you have to stop the sweeps and make them throw if you can."

IMPROVING FROM game to game is one of Dykes' biggest goals and tonight is no exception.

"We're just going to continue to try and do better which is alwyas the case early in the season," he said. "We made some mistakes in the kicking game last week (against Monahans). We had several penalties on returns, missed a field goal and dropped a punt. Our kicking game is really in bad shape."

One area he is satisfied with is turnovers. "We're not giving up the ball and that's the best part of our season so far."

Let's all hope it just keeps getting better.

Tech's Lewis will miss Baylor game

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Starting I-back Robert Lewis will miss Texas Tech's game with Baylor Sept. 24 and may miss the Texas game Oct. 1, head football coach Jerry Moore said Thursday.

Lewis, a junior from Greenville, was injured in a workout Wednesday, Moore said. He said Lewis suffered a severe left ankle sprain. Lewis gained 133 yards in Tech's season opener against Air Force last weekend.

Moore said Lewis made a simple cut on the field during a workout and sprained his ankle.

Lewis will be replaced by senior Dale Brown of Lewisville, Moore said.

Conner hasn't hurt his sailing rep any

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Skipper Dennis Conner brought a reputation as a sailing genius into the America's Cup races. He has done nothing to hurt it in the two races of the challenge series.

"Dennis does a remarkable job of pacing his personality to the stages of the race," said John Marshall, a sail company president who crews on Conner's America's Cup defender, Liberty.

Liberty and Conner handed challenger Australia II and helmsman John Bertrand the second straight defeat Thursday to take a 2-0 edge in their best-of-seven series for the historic grand prize of sailing.

It was not a good day for the Aussies. They filed a protest of Liberty's win, to be heard today. They called for a day off, so that means the third race won't be held until Saturday.

And the Australian yacht was hit right at start of the race with failure of a masthead fitting, which hampered the challengers throughout the race, won by Liberty by one minute, 33 seconds at the end.

But Conner noted that despite the fitting failure, he had to come from behind as Australia led through the first three legs of the six-legged race, and apparently had plenty of push.

"She seemed pretty fast to us regardless of her problems," he told a news conference. "I'm sure it (fitting failure) didn't help them any, but they were still pretty fast for us today."

For the second straight day, Conner showed his ability to spot wind shifts coming out into Rhode Island Sound, and put them to use.

Liberty was behind going up the second windward leg, forcing Australia II into tacking duels and finally breaking off to take a long hitch to the east, and the Aussies did not cover them.

"We went to the right and we were fortunate enough to pick up a breeze that lifted us, and so when we came together, they had to tack underneath us," said Conner, veteran of the last four cup series.

Translation: that's the point where Liberty went ahead, to stay.

That's also the point the Australians protested

The race was staged on a cool, bright day with northeast winds that were 17 knots at the start, dawdling down to 10 or less at the end, and wandering as much as 30 degrees around the compass.

"Dennis is superb in these conditions," commented Marshall, who heads North Sails and is sail trimmer on Liberty. "And some of us have sailed this course since 1974.

"So it's not entirely luck."

Marshall said Conner typically sails conservative tactics at start of a race, but then begins to grind down the opposition.

"He knows exactly the problem the other guy is having," Marshall commented, "and when he sees them in trouble, he gets more aggressive.

Lee Freshman gets off to victorious beginning

Lee Freshman picked up a pair of victories as ninth grade football got underway last week for the Midland-Odessa Conference teams.

Lee Maroon and Lee White opened their seasons with identical 20-8 victories over Bowie and Midland Gold. The two schools played their second games Thursday with White at Ector and Maroon against Hood at Permian High. Also Thursday, Bowie played defending champion Nimitz at Odessa High.

Both Midland Freshman schools are still looking for their first victories. Midland Purple suffered a 26-6 loss to Nimitz last week and will be looking for the mark in the win column against Crockett on Saturday at Midland Freshman Field at 10 a.m. Midland Gold travels to Bonham for a 2 p.m. game.

In the eighth grade Midland-Odessa Conference, the three Midland schools had successful beginnings, each posting victories over their Odessa opponents.

Goddard, last years unbeaten, untied champion, opened with an easy 52-0 victory over Hood while San Jacinto blanked Crockett 18-0 and Alamo defeated Ector 29-6.

Alamo hosts Hood on Saturday and San Jacinto takes on Bonham at the Memorial Stadium Pracitce Field. Both games are at 10 a.m. At 10:30, Goddard travels to Crockett and Bowie takes on Ector.

On Saturday, the eighth grade Midland City Conference schedule opes with Alamo at San Jacinto and Goddard Red at Trinity. Goddard White is open. All games are scheduled for 10 a.m.

In seventh grade action Saturday, in the American Conference, Goddard Red is at Alamo Scarlet and Alamo Grey at San Jacinto Green for noon kickoffs and San Jacinto White is at Goddard White at 10 a.m.

The seventh grade National Conference, which was originally for Tuesday playing dates, has changed to Saturday and will open its season this weekend. At 10 a.m., Goddard Red is at Alamo Scarlet and, at noon, Alamo Grey will play San Jacinto Green at Memorial Staidum Practice Field and San Jacinto White is at Goddard White.

National Demolition Derby at Twin Cities Saturday

Demolition champions from across Texas and from three other states will be entered in the National Demolition Derby at Twin Cities Speedway at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, each vying for cash, trophy and title.

Under the established rules, no vehicle can remain stationary longer than five minutes. The derby will run continuously until only one car is left running.

A $3,000 purse will be paid with $1,000 going to the first place finisher and $500 to each of the second, third, fourth and fifth place finishers. Six trophies will also be awarded.

Drivers in the derby may maneuver forward or backward, although rules prohibit deliberate head-on collisions or hitting an opponent's car in the front door on the driver's side. All glass will be removed and all doors and wagon gates must be strapped, wired or welded shut. Junk buyers will be present to buy all wrecked vehicles.

Twin Cities Speedway is located five miles east of Odessa on Highway 80. Admission for the event is $5 for adults.

Motocross

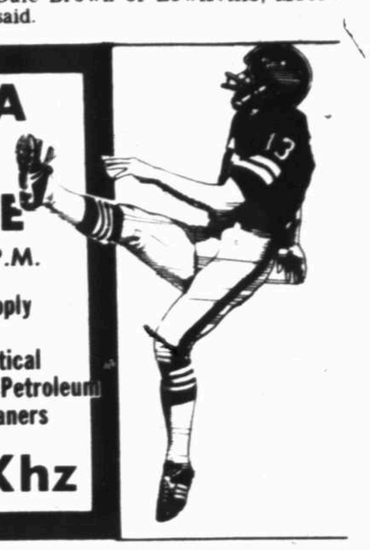

A broken thumb crushed the national championship hopes of Brian McGary, 15, sponsored by Glenn's Honda of Midland, in the recent Motocross competition at Ponca City, Okla. McGary won the High Plains Region championships in 80cc Stock, 80cc Modified, 105cc Open, 125cc Stock and 125cc Modified. Going into the 125cc Modified finals at Ponca City, he took the highest possible score, including two first, from qualifying heats, but McGary and Mike Healy crashed in the 125 finals. McGary, however, completed the race, driving with one hand, to take a 15th. He also was ninth in the 80cc.

Cyd Charisse doesn't look like 60-year-old grandmother

By JUDI HUNT
Hearst Feature Service

When Cyd Charisse, she of the unending legs, stands with her arms thrown out in exuberance, suddenly you're reminded of scenes out of such movie classics as "The Bandwagon" and "Brigadoon."

What you're not reminded of is the passing of time that has made Charisse 60-years-old and a grandmother ("Gabrielle Charisse, just 1-year-old in July, and the most beautiful" baby). She is startlingly slender and agile, and though there are lines on her face, they don't detract from the beauty that made her the darling of some of MGM's best musicals, Charisse still dances, still exercises stringently, and "honestly" attributes her figure and energy to the dance classes and the walking that are part of her daily regimen, and that of her husband of more than 30 years, singer Tony Martin.

"He walks a lot farther than I do," she admits. However, she adds with a smile, "I do have my dance class every day. We really believe that walking is good for you, it gets the blood circulating, you're away from the ringing phone, your head feels better and you don't feel stress so much."

When the Martins have leisure time, they like to vacation at the beach, but Charisse admits that they're gone so often on their nightclub tours that what she likes most is to get home to Los Angeles, see a few friends, catch up on their social life — they're close friends of the Jimmy Stewarts and the Ricardo Montalbans — and, not surprisingly, see a good movie.

"And I like to drive to Laguna and visit my mother or go and see my son, Nicky, and spoil the life out of the baby (her granddaughter). I also visit with our son, Tony Jr., who's writing screenplays."

Charisse says she wouldn't mind seeing her granddaughter go into dancing. "I think dance training is wonderful. Even if she never became a dancer, the training would help her in whatever she wants to be."

Her own career continues, although not at the same rate as in the '50a. She is doing "a lot of stage work in such plays as 'Cactus Flower' and 'Bell, Book and Candle,' and loving it. It's so much fun working with live audiences."

But she looks back fondly at her screen career, one that might not ever have gotten off the ground because she was too young and naive to understand what it meant when she was offered a seven-year movie contract.

Bob Hope's salute to NASA without photos of one astronaut

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — When Bob Hope salutes the National Aeronautics and Space Administration on his first show of the season, one of the seven first astronauts will be missing.

Hope will be unable to show any pictures of former astronaut John Glenn because the Democratic senator from Ohio is a declared candidate for the presidency. NBC would be required to give equal time to all other candidates.

The Mercury capsule in which Glenn became the first American to orbit earth will be shown on the 90-minute special on Monday, Sept. 19.

'First Camera' latest NBC news magazine attempt

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — It's the smallest of small consolations, but Lloyd Dobyns says NBC News announced its intention to enter the newsmagazine business first. That was in 1968, and it turned out to be the last time NBC's magazine was first in the minds of anybody.

Subsequently, it has become television's longest-running miss. While CBS' "60 Minutes" has risen to pre-eminence, NBC has had eight different entries, including "First Tuesday," "Weekend" and "NBC Magazine," with and without David Brinkley.

This Sunday night, NBC trots out No. 9, "First Camera," replacing "Monitor," a ratings disaster last season against ABC's "Fantasy Island." "We found out that Saturday night at 10 is not the best time for a reality program," says Dobyns, who has anchored three magazines: "Weekend," "Monitor" and, now, "First Camera."

Sunday at 7 p.m., Eastern time, seems a perfect time for reality. Real-life pro football hands off a captive, heavily male audience, and "60 Minutes" has run to glory with it.

The thinking is that NBC's football telecasts could work miracles for "First Camera," but, oddly enough, the show's premiere telecast comes when CBS, not NBC, has the late-afternoon national game, setting up this season's first new "60 Minutes" broadcast.

"More than anything else in the world, I wanted to go against '60 Minutes,'" says Dobyns. "In this business, if you want to play with the big boys you should go against the big boys."

But NBC's big boys don't have the recognition of CBS' four horsemen: Mike Wallace, spondents, and Mark Nykanen as investiga- Harry Reasoner, Ed Bradley and Morley Safer.

Besides Dobyns, "First Camera" has Rebecca Sobel and Steve Delaney as corretive reporter. Marvin Kalb, Ken Bode and Jack Reynolds will also contribute when they find time away from their "Nightly News" commitments.

South Africans swallow satirist's bitter medicine

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Blacks and whites — apartheid foes and white supremacists — sit night after night for the bitter medicine dished out by South Africa's premier satirist.

At first, Pieter-Dirk Uys amazed his audiences for daring to mock the government in a country with such tight censorship. Then they were surprised that his satircal revues weren't banned, as his early serious plays had been.

Uys' aim is to make people laugh, and his main target is absurdity, wherever he finds it. When Uys is on stage performing the skits he has written, all sides squirm — police, white liberals, black maids, cabinet ministers.

Changing costumes, characters and sexes without blinking an eye, Uys obliges his audience by impersonating everyone from Prime Minister P.W. Botha to white liberals to South Africa's powerful security police. None is spared his acerbic wit, in English and Afrikaans — a language developed from Dutch.

In "Farce About Uys," his newest revue, he has a black maid impersonate the often dour-faced Botha, and she has his mannerisms down pat.

In two minutes, Uys goes from playing Hasie, a retired Afrikaner (a South African of European descent) national leader, to Billie-Jeanne, a big-chested, go-go dancer at a multiracial hotel in a tribal homeland.

France buys more gasoline

France's gas production has not kept pace with increasing demand. As a result imports have risen from about 55 percent of requirements in 1974 to nearly 70 percent today.

Independents challenge IRS windfall ruling

From Wire Reports

WASHINGTON — Oil industry independents said Thursday motorists and the U.S. Treasury will suffer unless a complex Internal Revenue Service ruling on calculating the "windfall profits" tax is overturned.

Testifying before a House Small Business subcommittee, the independents repeated allegations that Atlantic Richfield Co. is using a tax formula that allows ARCO to cut gasoline prices temporarily and undercut its competition.

In the process, according to one preliminary estimate, the government is losing as much as $800 million a year in taxes.

"We believe that the money that ARCO is saving by understating the value of its crude (oil in calculating the tax) is being used to systematically destroy independent competition in the markets Arco wishes to dominate," said Edward G. Modell, representing the Independent Gasoline Marketers Council.

It has been estimated that ARCO underestimates the value of Alaskan oil by about $3 a barrel.

Harry Langdon, vice president of Tosco Corporation, a small oil marketer, said ARCO's practices have given it as much as a 5 cent-a-gallon price advantage over smaller companies.

While consumers may view ARCO prices as a bargain now, said Phillip R. Chisholm of the National Oil Jobbers Council, "they will be stunned to learn in a few years that ARCO or any other major oil company in a similar position has firm control of the retail market and is therefore not subject to the healthy competitive pressures traditionally brought to bear by the independent segment of the industry."

James D. Kowal, manager of commercial and distributor sales for Arco Petroleum Products Co., defended ARCO's calculations and said "there is simply no connection between" calculating the tax and pricing gasoline.

ARCO has been able to cut prices to gasoline dealers by ending its credit card operations and by emphasizing self-service facilities, Kowal said.

He said a generally weak economy and conservation efforts have reduced demand for gasoline, increasing competition and forcing out weaker segments of the industry.

The allegations against ARCO were first raised almost a year ago and were the subject of two earlier congressional hearings. Since those hearings, the IRS issued a ruling that was aimed at clearing up the confusion but, according to some oil authorities, the ruling only made it worse. Rep. Berkley Bedell (D—Iowa), chairman of the small business committee's oversight panel, said the ruling was confusing.

The dispute concerns how producers calculate the "windfall" tax on oil produced on Alaska's North Slope. The "windfall profits" tax was enacted in 1980 to give the government a share of the higher oil prices that accompanied the gradual removal of federal controls on prices.

The Congressional Research Service told the House panel that the IRS ruling did not specifically approve or disapprove of ARCO's formula, which considers transportation to Gulf Coast markets as a major factor in calculating the tax.

ARCO said the IRS interpretation "is consistent with our view of proper compliance with the windfall profits tax."

Sohio reached the same conclusion and said the ruling will have no effect on its tax calculations. Exxon called the IRS interpretation "clearly inconsistent" with what the tax law requires.

Exxon Co. vice president Robert J. Doyle called on the IRS to clear up the confusion with a new ruling. Representatives of the independents said Congress should resolve the dispute.

The three major companies operating in Alaska — ARCO, Exxon and Standard of Ohio — use three different methods of figuring the tax. Independent portions of the oil industry — the refiners and distributors — say ARCO's method cheats the government and gives the company an artificial subsidy that ARCO uses to cut gasoline prices to dealers.

The independents say they cannot match ARCO's "subsidized" prices and, as a result, are being squeezed out of several markets.

The Treasury Department at first refused a subcommittee invitation to send a witness but later agreed to send John Chapeton, assitant secretary for tax policy, who met with panel members privately.

It was learned that Chapeton said the Treasury Department will issue a new ruling in two weeks.

Rep. Bill Nelson (D-Fla.), chairman of the budget committee's tax policy panel, said at Thursday's hearing that he had requested the General Accounting Office to review the issue.

The Florida Democrat said the GAO will issue a report in December but that the agency already has said the government is losing $500 million to $800 million a year.

Nelson charged that the Treasury Department has been lax in in issuing a correct interpretation of the 1980 windfall profits tax law. He also said he feared it was too late to recoup money the federal government has lost.

Sun lauds FERC's rule

DALLAS (SWN) — A spokesman for a leading proponent of production enhancement incentives for natural gas from old interstate properties called Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) action Wednesday "...an important first step, but only a first step, toward realizing the full potential for reasonably priced gas supplies."

Chad J. Bardone, a vice president of Sun Exploration and Production Company, said the FERC has confirmed what natural gas producers have been saying for years — there is a significant supply potential from older gas fields, if only price controls can be lifted. Sun has been urging FERC to allow natural gas producers and purchasers the flexibility to negotiate more realistic prices for gas production from older wells and fields where certain costly production enhancement work is required to provide future supplies.

Wednesday's FERC order extended to interstate gas producers the flexibility to renegotiate production enhancement prices heretofore available only for gas produced from intrastate wells and fields.

Bardone pointed out that the Commission has verified Sun's contention that a substantial amount of natural gas remains in older fields and wells that cannot be economically produced under the current regulatory pricing structure of the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 (NGPA).

"Our studies indicate billions of cubic feet of natural gas will be produced at reasonable prices if pipelines and producers can negotiate the price increases that will be permitted once the new FERC policy takes effect.

"The FERC action involves only a very narrow approach toward production enhancement, with controlled prices and limited types of enhancement projects," said Bardone. "Consumers hould realize that the supply potential is far greater if old gas were totally de-controlled."

The Sun executive said that the latest FERC order does not provide a market-sensitive price which would stimulate the maximum possible enhancement work. "The Order does not address thoses cases, and there are a number of them, in which, for perhaps totally unrelated reasons, a purchaser will not agree to an enhancement project even to keep a well producing. This prevents consumers from receiving gas which could be lower in price than that from other sources. Also, the Order does not address in any manner the fact that existing contract prices may limit the drilling of additional wells in known producing areas. These wells are needed to produce natural gas that can never be produced from existing wells because the gas simply will not flow to them."

Relating the FERC action to legislation pending in Congress, Bardone said there is no question about the need to continue efforts toward complete deregulation of natural gas if the nation is to achieve the maximum supply at the most reasonable cost to consumers.

"Although the FERC order is a step in the right direction, clearly the benefits of increased supplies and assured domestic production capability to back out more imports of foreign oil and gas can only be achieved through total market flexibility," said Bardone.

Shell exploring Arizona; Dowling's well gives official cause for hope

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The massive entrance of Shell Oil Co. and prospects of a commercial find south of Yuma are the major oil exploration developments now in Arizona, A.K. Doss, executive director of the state Oil and Gas Conservation Commission, said Wednesday.

Contrary to what might be expected, oil drilling plans have increased in the state since last December when Phillips Petroleum abandoned most of its leases after a reported $60-million effort.

Doss estimated at least 25 drilling projects are likely to be underway by this fall.

Dowling Petroleum, Midland, is "very enthusiastic," according to Doss, about what it has found so far in a wildcat well about eight miles south of Yuma, near the Mexican border.

"They have not made a completion attempt yet, but we are expecting work to resume on that well pretty quickly," Doss said. "Their company officials are very enthusiastic about the potential and, of course, if they are fortunate, Arizona would be fortunate too, because the well is located on state-trust (state-owned) lands."

"Personally, I think it's just a matter of time until somebody comes along and makes a major strike," said Doss, who was a consulting geologist and independent oil operator in Texas for 23 years before moving to Arizona.

"A lot of other people obviously think the same thing. Oil and gas wildcatters are a strange breed, and the supposed Arizona overthrust area fascinates them. It's a real frontier."

To date, Arizona has only 39 commercial wells, all relatively small and all on the Navajo Reservation near the border with Utah, Colorado and New Mexico.

Shell's little-publicized activity revolves around Kingman, with leases extending from Lake Mead almost to the Bill Williams River, Doss said.

"I'm not exactly sure how much land they've leased, but it runs into several thousand acres — possibly as much as a million acres," Doss said.

Shell hasn't disclosed it's intentions but Doss said there is considerable speculation that the company is planning deep-drilling because of the long-popular theory that there is oil 10,000 or so feet below Arizona's granite — the so-called overthrust theory.

Phillips at one time had leases on about six million acres of state-owned lands and the rental fee alone was described as "considerable."

Phillips never has confirmed how much it spent on dry holes in Arizona, but it did say it spent "in excess of $5 million" on six test holes just in 1982. Earlier, it had gone 18,000 feet deep south of Florence and 10,500 feet south of Tombstone. It reportedly will make another try this fall in New Mexico, just across the border from Cochise County, where it drilled many Arizona wells.

The 39 commercial wells on the Navajo Reservation produced about 140,000 barrels in July, "not all that big in the overall scheme of oil production," said Doss. There are 42 gallons to a barrel.

Other drilling work in the planning stage for this fall, according to Doss include:

— Resource Operators of Denver, follow up operations on a well eight miles north of Show Low.

— Sanchez-O'Brien of Laredo, Texas, additional drilling north or Roosevelt Lake.

— Bob Walker of Abilene, Texas, an independent geologist, on a Phillips lease seven or eight miles south of Tombstone.

— Mountain States Resources, Cutbank, Mont., completion of one to three wells on the Navajo reservation.

— Kerr-McGee, seven development wells on the reservation.

— Golden Sun of Cottonwood, follow up drilling near there.

— Brooks Exploration of Co. of Denver, two exploratory wells in the Arizona Strip country north of the Grand Canyon.

— Alpar Resources of Texas, two wells on its lease between Flagstaff and the Grand Canyon.

— Sumatra Energy and High Plains Petroleum, of Denver, a joint effort on five wells in the Holbrook basin.

"That's quite a bit of activity even though Phillips has quit," said Doss. "I asked one of the company officials why they were making that last attempt just across the line in Hidalgo County, New Mexico. He said, 'the geologists felt if they recommended Arizona again, even if they still believed in it, they'd all be fired'."

Donoghue's Money Fund Average (Averages for all 250 taxable funds)		37	8.78	8.75

Money Fund Table Commentary: Assets of the 250 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746 decreased $803 million to $161.2 billion for the week ended September 14, 1983.

The taxable money funds' 7-day average yield stayed at 8.78% for the second week. The taxable money funds' 30-day average yield increased to 8.75% from 8.74%.

The taxable funds' average maturity lengthened to 37 days from 36 days.

William E. Donoghue says, "Assets of all taxable money funds registered the largest one week decline since June 29. The $803 million decline this week came primarily out of the institutional funds and funds investing in Eurodollar and Yankee certificates of deposit."

"Investors have been moving out of both money funds and bank MMDAs in recent weeks to seek higher returns on equities or lock into high long term money rates."

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven- and thirty-day periods. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. x - average term to next rate adjustment date; g - one time sales charge; r - restricted availability. Teen wins case in damage suit

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A Crane teen-ager who alleged a Crane policeman sprayed Mace into his face without due cause following a high-speed chase in 1982 was found damaged by a six-member federal jury Thursday afternoon.

Though the jurors said the officer, Woody Howell, had used excessive force against 19-year-old Wayne Douglas Daniell, they awarded him nothing.

"They found for us," said Daniell's attorney, John Green of Odessa, "but they didn't give us any money."

An experimental three-member jury which also heard the case in Judge Lucius D. Bunton's court, however, determined Howell didn't use excessive force in making the arrest. The latter verdict has no effect on the case.

Earlier this year, Bunton launched an experiment to determine how closely the traditional six-member civil jury and the trial three-member jury came to decisions.

Evidence indicated Daniell was arrested for disorderly conduct by Howell, who has since left the Crane police force, following a chase by Crane police and Texas Department of Public Safety troopers about 1:30 a.m. on June 27, 1982. Howell was a passenger in a souped-up Pontiac Firebird driven by another teen-ager, Casey Ellison, who admitted he got scared after police started chasing him through town, floorboarded the accelerator and headed north at speeds approaching 120 mph.

POLICE CAUGHT the teen-agers after the car's engine "blew up" about five miles north of Crane.

Daniell testified that the car was traveling about 50 mph through Crane when Howell turned on his police unit's flashing lights and gave pursuit. Howell said the car was traveling through town at 80 mph and that he clocked it traveling at 117 mph at the peak of the chase.

Of the four youths in the Ellison car, only Ellison and Daniell were arrested. Ellison was charged with speeding, and Daniell was charged with disorderly conduct after he used "abusive language" against Howell and the other officers.

Daniell testified the officers, except for Howell, unholstered their sidearms and used abusive language.

"They told us if we moved they were going to blow our — away," Daniell said.

Daniell said he previously had been arrested and jailed by Howell for traffic violations. Under cross-examination by Howell's attorney, Jim Boldrick, Daniell admitted that he had been given about two dozen traffic tickets in the previous two years, had been involved in vandalism but "that was a long time ago."

Not every individual agrees with every book

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

"In a period of time when conservatism becomes the prevalent philosophy you will always have this issue (banning of books) rear it's head," stated Maridell Fryar, director of secondary education for the Midland school district.

In conjuction with the national observance of Banned Books Week, Ms. Fryar explained the policies and procedures used to select and review books used in the classrooms and libraries of MISD. Director John Deats explained similar guidelines of the Midland County Library.

"The whole thing at issue here is not that every individual in the community agrees with every book on our shelves," Deats said. "We try to represent a wide range of viewpoints. There would be something wrong with the selection if no one disagreed with the ideologies and viewpoints of the community. That's what writing is about...freedom of expression. And the individual has the freedom to read or not — that's his prerogative.

"However," he added, "we don't make a point of buying books that are borderline pornography just to make a point."

Both the school and county libraries have written guidelines concerning book selection and handling of complaints. Ms. Fryar and Deats said objections were rarely raised. Neither could recall a formal complaint being filed against a book in the past few years or the necessity of forming a review committee to hear objections to a work.

In the case of assigned reading, Ms. Fryar said, if a parent or student objects to a required book another work will be substituted.

"Academic freedom doesn't mean we simply run roughshod over the sensitivities of the public," she explained. "We don't feel there's only one book a child can read in any given situation. If it happens to violate a child's or parent's taste or family code we can find a substitute. With that philosophy we shouldn't have any problem with a person or group trying to ban a book.

Midlander named to Gramm's committee

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Tipperary Oil chairman Deane Stoltz of Midland has been named to an exploratory finance committee for U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm's expected Senate campaign. Stoltz is one of 37 persons on the committee.

Stoltz views Gramm as the "number one possibility of being the Republican nominee" for the seat being vacated by another Republican, John Tower, who announced recently he won't seek re-election after serving 24 years.

Gramm, a former economics professor at Texas A&M University, had been a member of the Democratic party until last winter when he was threatened with losing his powerful committee assignments. He resigned, ran as a Republican and won.

"He's conservative, dynamic and has established a name for himself that does credit to the state of Texas," said Stoltz. "He's vocal, assertive and making his presence known. He's an excellent choice to follow Tower."

Stoltz said the exploratory committee's duty is to assess Gramm's statewide financial support before he commits to a campaign. "My belief is he does have, or will have, that support. We'll be seeking commitments," he said.

But the group hasn't been given a time limit. Considering that Gramm has said he will make an announcement about the race at the end of September, Stoltz said, "We'll have to work real hard and real fast."

Gramm was in Midland Aug. 30 for a brief meeting with local Republicans seeking their support and advice. Stoltz said he was at that meeting.

One in every 450 people have pacemakers

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — In a country with a population of roughly 230 million, anywhere from 500,000 to 2 million people have cardiac pacemakers — depending on which news magazine one reads, according to an expert on pacemakers.

"I think it's probably closer to half a million," Dr. Michael Bilitch, associate professor of medicine at the University of Southern California School of Medicine, said. "One in every 450 people — that's pretty common."

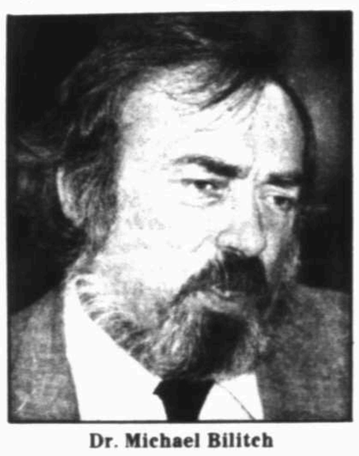

Bilitch, who spoke Thurday on fitting pacemakers to a patient's needs during a continuing education course at Odessa Medical Center Hospital, said there is a one in 200 chance that any person at least 60 years old has a pacemaker.

The average age of patients receiving cardiac pacemaker implantations is 65 to 70.

In 1983, about 125,000 pacemakers were implanted in patients in this country.

"That's 500 per day, five days a week," Bilitch told about 100 physicians, emergency room and critical care unit nurses and student nurses.

In 1969, roughly 70 per 1 million people received pacemaker implantations. In 1981, the figure increased to 513 per 1 million. Estimates for 1983 are 550 per 1 million.

Dr. Michael Bilitch

"There has been a little bit of leveling," Bilitch said.

But the United States still leads the world in the number of implantations, he said. In 1981, 125 implantations per 1 million people were made in the United Kingdom. In France that year, 400-450 implantations per 1 million were made.

In China, with a population of about 1 billion people, "there are probably fewer pacemaker implantations than there are in Odessa, Tex."

"We do do it with greater freedom than anywhere else in the world," Bilitch said.

With the increase in numbers, there is a change in reasons for implanting cardiac pacemakers.

In the 1960's, when the operations were first done, implantations were made to save a person's life. Today, pacemakers are put in to improve a person's life, he said.

The purpose is not to prolong someone's life, according to Bilitch. Today, they are done to make that life better.

"We're hoping to improve on that person's clinical life to enable them to do the things they want to do," he explained.

Cardiac pacemakers can be used for several reasons, he said. The major reason is to control bradycardia, a condition in which the heart beat is slow with a pulse rate of 60 per minute or less.

Pacemakers may be used to prevent tachycardia, which is a condition with an abnormally rapid heart rate, usually more than 100 beats per minute.

Also, pacemakers are used to improve the instability of a person's heart beat, even though the rate may not be life-threatening.

A large percent of the cardiac pacemakers implanted today are for atrioventricular block, blockage of the atrium and ventricle of the heart.

Patients with Adams-Stokes disease, a condition characterized by sudden attacks of unconsciousness, with or without convulsions, which often accompanies heart block, also may require pacemaker implantations.

Other reasons for cardiac pacemakers include fatigue, heart failure and angina pectoris, characterized by acute pain in the chest resulting from decreased blood supply to the heart muscle.

The two types of pacemakers include the single chamber, which works in the atrium or the ventricle, and the dual chamber, which works in a combination of both.

Costs of pacemakers vary from $1,900 to a little more than $6,000, Bilitch said.

"That's for the device itself," he said.

Pacemaker leads (one-third of pacemaker patients have two) cost an average of $500 each. Leads are electrodes used in recording changes in electric potential, created by the activity of the heart.

Professional fees for implanting pacemakers run an average of $2,000. Surgical fees average from $1,200 to $1,300, with the low around $700-$800 and a high of $3,000.

Average hospital markup is about 50 percent, Bilitch said, and the average amount of time a patient spends in the hospital is four to five days.

"It's hard to get out for less than $12,000," he said.

Pilot, firearms supplies dealer convicted of violating U.S. wildlife hunting laws

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A Midland helicopter pilot and an Odessa firearm and sporting supplies dealer were convicted Thursday by a federal jury of violating U.S. wildlife hunting laws.

Convicted were the pilot, James Clyde "J.C." Short Jr., 35, who was accused of flying trophy hunters in airborne pursuit of eagles and game animals, and Larry Todd, 30, the alleged "promoter" who was accused of soliciting people for airborne hunting trips.

The eight-man, four-woman jury deliberated about seven hours before returning the verdict.

"We're always happy when justice is done," said co-prosecutor Christopher A. Nuechterlein of the U.S. Department of Justice's Wildlife and Marine Resources Section in Washington, D.C.

Todd was convicted of conspiracy to violate the Lacey Act in 1981 and 1982 by plotting to sell wildlife via airborne hunts. However, the jury did not convict him of another charge, perjury, by lying to a federal grand jury in November 1982 and denying — said it was "ridiculous" — that he had made any airborne-hunting offers. In their deliberations, the jurors reportedly voted 11-1 to convict Todd for perjury. In criminal cases, a jury's vote must be unanimous to get a conviction.

Todd could be sentenced up to five years in prison and fined $10,000.

Short, who could be sentenced up to 11 years in prison and fined $35,000, was convicted of conspiracy to violate the Lacey Act, of violating the act by effecting the airborne hunts and of violating the Bald Eagle Protection Act by killing an eagle in January 1982.

Todd and Short are to be sentenced at noon Oct. 6 by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton. At that time, Bunton said he would allow the men to say anything which might tend to mitigate their sentences and "whatever else is on your hearts and minds." Todd's defense attorney was Walter Wilson, and Shorts' attorney was Bill Alexander.

Two months ago, Bunton sentenced two Midland bear killers, Steve Dudely Quain, 40, and Frankie Keller, 30, to 179 days in prison and fined each $6,000. They had been convicted of violating U.S. Customs laws by smuggling bears they had killed in Mexico into Texas in June 1981. The government accused both of shooting the bears from an airborne helicopter piloted by Short.

Pleading guilty earlier to misdemeanor violations of federal wildlife laws were Midland taxidermist Karl Brosig, 26, who was placed on probation for two years and fined $500 for working on game killed in violation of the U.S. Airborne Hunting Act; Midland farmer Lee Bell, 29, who admitted killing an eagle, deer and javelina from a helicopter piloted by Short; and Midlander Mike Nickell, 23, who admitted killing a Barbados sheep from the airborne craft.

Nuechterlein noted "the felony conviction on Todd has repercussions," since federal and state laws prohibit a convicted felon from possessing, owning or dealing in firearms.

"A convicted felon cannot deal in firearms; he can't possess firearms," said Texas game warden Gary Mitchell of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department. "He can't go hunting. Larry Todd's hunting and trap shooting days are over. J.C. Short's hunting days are over." Todd is manager of the Midland-Odessa Sportsman's Den shops owned by his father, J.R. Todd. Larry Todd had testified that he made $140,000 in the business last year.

The wildlife hunting case was investigated by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

U.S. Wildlife Agent Jim Stinebaugh, who headed up the 1½-year investigation into illegal airborne hunting, said "I think we had proved our point on (Todd's) perjury, but we certainly accept the jury's verdict."

"I feel that it (the investigation and prosecution) has been successful. And the judge's sentences certainly will have a lot of effect on stopping this" airborne hunting.

"This (airborne hunting) has not been for any 'hunting' purposes," Stinebaugh suggested. "It's all been for trophies."

Co-prosecutor Jose A. Toro said the jury's verdict accents "what we have been saying: We're serious about this business. We sincerely hope this will have a deterrent effect" on airborne hunting.

"The law is being vigorously prosecuted and enforced," said Nuechterlein.

Said another case investigator, Texas game warden Terry Lloyd: "I think it's not only a deterrent on the federal level but on the local level." Lloyd said that for every one wildlife felony case filed by the United States, Texas files about 1,000 misdemeanor cases.

Stinebaugh said the investigation is continuing.

"I hope that this will do some good," said Mitchell, "but it is not the end of our business. We've got the big fish. There's still some little fish that we want."

Five-year-old boy hurt

ANDREWS — A five-year-old Andrews boy is listed in stable condition at Odessa's Women and Children's Hospital following a car-bicycle accident in Andrews Wednesday night.

According to Andrews police, Elias Emiliano Jr., of 1501 S.W. Avenue E, was struck by a vehicle driven by Calvin F. Elrod, 40, of Hobbs, N.M., at about 9 p.m. Wednesday.

Police said the child was following his father, who had been working on a vehicle and was driving away to test it, when he rode through an intersection in the 1400 block of S.W. Avenue E.

The child was wearing dark clothes and the bike had no reflectors on it, police said.

He was taken to Permian General Hospital in Andrews with two broken legs and possible facial fractures, police said. He was transferred to Women and Children's at noon Thursday.

The nursing supervisor at Women and Children's declined to comment on the child's injuries but did say he was in fair condition.

Lt. Michael Angel, of Andrews, was the investigating officer.

Teen-ager wins case

Daniell, who admitted he had been drinking alcoholic beverages that night but contended he was not drunk, said he was handcuffed by Howell after he simply said, "It sucks." He denied that he used a series of expletives, including calling the police officers "fat pigs" and threatening to whip them.

ONCE IN THE police car, Daniell said he tried to slip his hands and arms, which were handcuffed at his back, to his front but Howell caught him and said he had "better have the handcuffs back behind my back or he'd do something about it."

Daniell said he did as the officer said.

"I didn't think I did anything wrong," said Daniell. He said Howell told him "I (Daniell) don't have any rights...and sprayed me with Mace" around the eyes and mouth.

"You sure are quiet," he said Howell told him later.

Back in Crane, Daniell said he was "drug out of the car and pushed up to the police station, roughly."

He was jailed that night but was released the next afternoon after pleading guilty to disorderly conduct and paying a $56 fine.

Later, he said he developed blisters and scabs about his face and had to have medical treatment. Those expenses totaled $25, he said.

Howell testified that Daniell was kicking in the backseat of the police car and wouldn't stop. Instead of threatening him with a firearm or hitting him with a flashlight or nightstick, Howell said he sprayed him with a "short burst" of Mace.

"I was abused," complained Daniell. "There was no reason for his taking action of spraying me with that Mace."

Howell said Daniell had been "very abusive, cussing" and wouldn't stop kicking. "If you continue continue kicking,'" Howell said he told Daniell, "'I'm going to spray you with the Mace.' He continued kicking and tried to kick me."

After the burst of Mace, Daniell quietened down, he said.

HOWELL SAID the incident later was investigated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Crane police chief and that he was cleared of any wrongdoing.

Nevertheless, Howell said he resigned from the police force "to take a better job" at Sonora, where he is a police officer.

"It's a better part of the country," said Howell. "It's a pretty part of the country, better equipment, more preferable working conditions, and the schools are better. The city of Sonora pays all of your utilities."

Later, Howell, admitted that he resigned "so I could take my two-week vacation and look for a job." He conceded the job at Sonora doesn't pay as well as the Crane job.

Prior to working at Crane, Howell was a police officer in Stanton. He said he resigned there following a conflict with the then police chief, Jerry Register. Register, however, said Howell left the force after Stanton City Judge Arthur Wilson said he "would not take any more complaints filed" by Howell. Register said the city judge thought Howell was not "credible or reliable."

All persons don't agree with all library books

"A parent can ask the librarian not to let a child read a certain book," she continued. "But what we would prefer is that the parent be aware of what their children bring home and be involved in what their child reads. My personal feeling is, I hope the parent is involved enough with what his child reads that he tries to help him understand it rather than try to shield him from it. If a parent reads a book with the child, then he has a much more powerful teaching tool than simply preaching to the child."

"If an adult wants to screen the material his child reads, that's fine," agreed Deats. "That's what parents should do."

The written philosophy of the school district is to provide materials which "present a diversity of appeal and different points of view. Materials should not be excluded from selection because of the origin, backgrounds or views of those contributing to their creation. Materials should not be removed from circulation because of partisan or doctrinal disapproval."

It states librarians and teachers should present opposing points of view fairly and adequately, encourage freedom for inquiry, and have the right to include controversial issues and materials as long as they comply with MISD policies. "The appearance of sexual incidents or profanity shall not automatically disqualify a book. Rather, the decision shall be made on the basis...of literary value," it says.

"Things having to do with sex, some religious materials, things written about certain ideologies such as communism, things only a highly advanced and mature student could handle — those are kept back and are not given general ciruculation but are issued when a teacher has certified a student can use the material," Ms. Fryar explained.

"I think since we've become very sensitive and responsive that we've been able to avoid (complaints)," she said. " We don't believe that children should not examine different pionts of view, but we certainly don't have a hands-off anything-goes policy. We don't draw back from books that might have controversial themes, but we do look at them and screen them. We don't intend to have books that would be blatantly offensive, but we want to give them the opportunity to examine other points of view."

Most well-known books which have been banned in other cities can be found on high school library shelves in Midland, including such popular titles as "Catcher in the Rye," "Go Ask Alice," "I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings," "The Scarlet Letter," "Catch-22," "To Kill a Mockingbird," "Death of a Salesman," "Merchant of Venice," "The Diary of Anne Frank," "The Crucible," "The Grapes of Wrath" and "Of Mice and Men."

The county library has a policy based on American Library Association guidelines. It includes a "freedom to read" statement and a library bill of rights "which has to do mainly with freedom of access to information," Deats said. "Our selection policy is very positive in tone. Basically, we are trying to meet the educational and recreationsl needs of the community."

In both libraries the librarians are responsible for selecting and ordering materials.

Rose Marie Stortz, head librarian at Midland High School, has been with the district for 10 years. She said she has never heard a complaint about a book from a parent or student. The biggest problem she has in that area, she said, is having students in the back of the room giggling over biology books.

"We've been extremely lucky, I think. No one has ever come to me asking to pull a book off the shelf. Some elementary school librarians have pulled some books from the shelves and brought them to the high school library — books like "To Kill a Mockingbird," which are classics. I think parents of young children might be more concerned about their children reading such books."

Deats said he felt the community as a whole was very sympathetic and open-minded about access to a variety of viewpoints. "It's very dangerous if you put censorship powers in the hands of one individual or a group of individuals," he warned.

Burglaries, thefts reported

Police Round-up

Abqut $2,000 in currency taken from a convenience store safe early this morning and other burglaries and thefts were being investigated by Midland police today.

Barbara Harman, manager of the Merit Food Store, 1800 N. Big Spring St., reported $2,000 in cash was missing from the store's safe at 6 a.m. today. According to police, the front door was unlocked and the burglar alarm had been turned off when Ms. Harman arrived at work. The burglary apparently took place between 11 p.m. Thursday and 5:30 a.m. today.

In other action, Donald Snyder, of 2810 Franklin, reported the theft of a gold ring valued at $600 from a jewelry box in his home. The theft, turned in at about 3 p.m. Thursday, apparently occurred Aug. 28.

Bob Favor, 3208 Preston, reported the theft of a hydraulic jack, valued at $300, from his backyard. Reported at 8 p.m. Thursday, the theft took place sometime between 8 p.m. Wednesday and 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

Tim Merrifield, 903 W. Kansas, reported the burglary of his automobile, parked on the street outside of his home, at 8 a.m. Thursday. According to police, Merrifield said he heard a loud noise coming from the street at 11 p.m. Wednesday. A radar detector, valued at $250, and about $10 in cash were missing from the vehicle. About $100 worth of damage was done to his radio and console.

The theft of an electric guitar and a wooden case, valued at $450, was reported by Chico Hinojos, 2210-B Northrup, at about 1 p.m. Thursday. According to police, Hinojos went to pick up the items up from the Music Store of Texas, 407 Andrews Highway, where they were being repaired. An employee of the store told him four Hispanic men already had picked them up. One reportedly said "Chico" sent him.

In other action, a 20-year-old Midland man was arrested for possession of heroin at about 11 a.m. Thursday. According to reports, the Hispanic male was arrested by two officers at the corner of Illinois Avenue and Lamesa Road. Formal arraignment is expected today.

Man brown bags loot

ODESSA — A man armed with a brown pistol walked into a Colonial convenience store at West County Road and Yukon about 11 p.m. Thursday and left with a brown bag full of money.

A spokesman with the Ector County Sheriff's Department said the clerk was bent down behind a counter working when the man walked in, showed the pistol and asked her to put money in a bag. He left on foot going south on West County Road, said the sheriff's officer.

The man was described as black, about 6 foot 2, 180 pounds with short black hair and a beard.

The case is still under investigation, said the officer.

Water bill increases

BIG SPRING — Municipalities' water bill for August almost hit the $1 million mark, according to a release from the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

The monthly revenue statement of CRWMD shows the dozen cities receiving water directly or indirectly from the district paid $994,318 in August. Oil companies paid another $134,697, and rural and other sources pushed total August receipts to $1,191,178. Municipal revenues for the first eight months amounted to $6,881,840 and total receipts $8,812,974.

If the cities had a robust water bill, the district had a correspondingly large power bill. Electric energy cost $500,506 for the month, and $3,332,139 for the eight months. August's charges would have been higher except for pumping patterns to meet peak demands. This meant that 24.16 percent of the 2,040,849,000 gallons delivered last month came from the Ward County wells and 4.53 from Martin County wells. Both are far cheaper to produce due to their closeness to the point of delivery.

For the first eight months, 15.17 percent came from Ward County and 2.20 percent from Martin County wells. Lake deliveries accounted for 67.55 percent of August deliveries against an eight months percentage of 77.01 percent.

Expenses for August amounted to $710,640 exclusive of debt service, and $4,853,049 for the first eight months. Of the August total, $639,290 was for operation and maintenance, and for the eight months $4,314,518. The balance went to administration and general and for recreation operations, the latter being mostly offset by revenues from that source.

Water deliveries for August totaled 2,040,849,047 gallons and for the first eight months of the year 12,910,943,183 gallons.

Dressage show to be held

West Texas Dressage and Combined Training Association will be holding a cross country jumping and dressage show from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

Site for the show is south of Midland. Interested persons should take Fairgrounds Road under Interstate 20, go 1.6 miles and turn west on a dirt road past an evergreen tree. The dirt road will lead to the show grounds, said a spokesman.

He noted this is the first time these grounds have been used for a show. The public is invited.

Mother gets life sentence

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A 21-year-old mother of two sentenced to life in prison for her role in the slaying of her former husband could be eligible for parole in 8½ years, according to a state official.

Sherry Wolf, whose silence on a tape-recorded slaying helped convict her of murder, was sentenced Thursday by State District Judge Darrell Hester.

Jim Bates, her lawyer, said the case would be appealed.

Mrs. Wolf was convicted of murder July 29 for her role in the bludgeoning death of her former husband, Billy Staton, who had captured the sounds of his own death on a hidden tape recording.

Mrs. Wolf, who cried when she heard the sentence, became the third person to receive a life sentence in connection with the double slaying.

Staton was bludgeoned to death with a metal bar and his fiancee, schoolteacher Leticia Castro, was beaten with a hammer and shot at the Wolf's La Feria home July 16, 1982.

State prosecutors alleged the killings were planned to end a bitter court battle over Staton's rights to visit his daughter by Mrs. Wolf.

Staton concealed a small tape recorder under his shirt the last time he went to the Wolf home to pick up his daughter, 2½ year-old Melanie. He wanted to gather evidence that the Wolf's were not obeying the court order that allowed him to see his child, his attorney testified at the trial.

Child care facilities real problem to welfare officials

AUSTIN (AP) — Many of the complaints received about day care facilities for children can be blamed on a reduced work force, the Texas Department of Human Resources board was told Thursday.

It is obviously a real problem," said J. Livingston Kosberg, Houston, board chairman.

"How much of it is related to the Department of Human Resources we can't tell at this point," he said.

Kosberg said he talked with Gov. Mark White on Thursday about published reports of abuse and neglect. "He expressed his concern over the situation," Kosberg said.

He said part of the problem is the reduction of personnel in the child care licensing division from 600 in 1977 to 240 at the present time. Cliff Martin, director of licensing, said the staff of 600 employees regulated 12,000 children in day care facilities. Now, the much smaller staff regulates 21,000 children.

The Legislature has authorized 265 employees for 1984-85.

"However, I am confident that if we had 200 more inspectors, complaints of abuse and neglect would not go away," Kosberg said.

DHR Commissioner Marlin Johnston said his department was concentrating on "the very serious and complex situation."

"It needs to be handled delicately so it is done right," Johnston said. "We are asking that all the cases named in recent published reports be reviewed. It will take a few weeks to do a definitive job."

He also told the board he would give them an outline in about a week of department plans for child care regulation, with a full report later.

The preliminary report on licensing of child care facilities was presented at a briefing for the three members.

Lena Eaton, left, holds the first letter she received from Emily Crossfield, right, in 1923, when both were schoolgirls.

Pen pals meet 60 years later

By The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Lena Eaton and Emily Crossfield grew up together, sharing each other's joys and sorrows for 60 years although they lived an ocean apart.

The two women, both grandmothers now, met for the first time last month. They greeted one another in an emotional scene at Dulles International Airport when Crossfield, 72, arrived from Australia for a three-week visit with Eaton, 75, who lives in Washington.

It was in August when Eaton received her first letter from Crossfield, then a 12-year-old schoolgirl in Leeds, England. Crossfield's teacher had requested letters from American children, then asked her students to answer them as a writing assignment. Crossfield was given Eaton's letter and the two have corresponded since.

Crossfield's first letter, a yellowed, fragile memento that Eaton still cherishes, read, "My dear American Friend, I am very glad to have the opportunity of writing to you from our school. It gives me great pleasure to think that I have a friend over the sea to whom I can write. ... Your English friend, Emily Pearson."

This was the first of many letters in which Crossfield and Eaton shared moments of happiness, grief and changes in their lives over the years, as they became adults, found jobs, married and raised three children each.

The letters continued during World War II when Crossfield worked as a saleswoman in a glass and china shop and Eaton as a secretary in a Washington insurance agency.

They did not stop in 1950 when Crossfield moved from England to Australia with her husband and children.

"For 60 years," said Crossfield, now a widow, "we wrote each other at Christmas, once or twice during the year and when events happened in our families."

Eaton, a lifelong Washington resident, said, "We've written so many letters, but they contained nothing political, just personal notes. We talked about our children and gardening."

Although they never telephoned one another or talked face to face before, sitting on the back porch of Eaton's Washington home recently they behaved like sisters despite the distance, different cultures and lifestyles that have separated them.

Crossfield seemed at home in Eaton's meticulously decorated, two-story brick house. A statuesque woman in a blue print dress, she beamed at Eaton, who seemed more reserved but apparently just as delighted with the visit.

Computer performs household chores

Hearst Feature Service

CYPRESS, Calif. – In the cramped second-floor bedroom of a tract house, Gus Searcy and Franz Kavan engaged in conversation on a first-name basis with a machine named "Sidney."

Sidney, a computer-programmed device they've invented, responds to voice commands by performing a variety of household tasks, part of a system they call "AIR" – Artificial Intelligence Recognizer. It functions as a kind of a servant in a box. Searcy and Kavan have high hopes for Sidney. Indeed, they predict he will talk his way to fame and fortune.

"Sidney," Searcy says firmly to the machine.

"Yes, master," answers Sidney in a digitalized but friendly voice.

"TV on," Searcy tells Sidney.

"OK, master," Sidney replies.

Without a pause, the TV in the bedroom clicks on, blaring a daytime game show.

On command from Searcy, Sidney turns on the fan, air conditioner, radio, the lamp (which it also dims), and the pinball machine in the living room.

"Goodnight, Sidney," Searcy declares.

"Goodnight, master," replies Sidney, shutting down all the electricity in the house.

"Have you ever seen anything like this?" Searcy excitedly asks. "Our biggest fear is that some big companies will steal this idea from us. All the parts for the system may be out there, but we're the first to get a practical model. Ours is the first all-purpose talking and responding system."

The two are an unlikely pair of Davids gearing up to battle the computer Goliaths: Searcy, a fast-talking, part-time magician with expertise in electronic gadgetry, and Kavan, a soft-spoken, German-born software wizard.

Searcy, 31, came up with the idea for Sidney about 10 years ago while watching the movie "Demon Seed." It's about a malicious, talking computer that attacks its human masters.

It took until this year for Searcy to devise the electronic hardware. He put it together for $1,000, a bargain compared to the millions of dollars larger companies are investing to build such a machine. But he still needed the computer software that would program Sidney to perform whatever household tasks were demanded. By chance he met Kavan, a 28-year-old free-lance programmer. Six months later they came up with the first working model.

Searcy recalls the first conversation he had with Sidney: "I said 'Lamp on,' and it turned off the air conditioner and I knew we were in business."

Sidney looks like a small stereo speaker. Right now it's hooked into a home-computer system, but Kavan says eventually it will work as a separate unit that can be sold for as little as $300.

Before Sidney will carry out commands, it must learn to recognize the voice of the user (Sidney won't respond to an unfamiliar voice). The speaker conducts a pre-programmed dialogue with Sidney allowing the machine to break down the human voice into a distinctive electronic pattern.

Once Sidney becomes familiar with the voice, it can carry out a variety of orders. Kavan has programmed it to recognize 256 separate commands for household chores – virtually everything but the ironing and windows.

Computer experts are somewhat skeptical about Searcy, Kavan and Sidney.

Harold Kinne, vice-president of Future Computing, a Texas research firm, said voice-activated computers have been around for several years, but they're so difficult to use and of such limited value that consumers haven't been racing out to buy them.

"The voice input is one problem," Kinne said. "You have to talk in this digitalized speech which the computers can understand."

Searcy and Kavan say they've solved that problem by programming their machine to respond to a "natural" tone of voice. "Talk to it like you're talking to a friend," they advise.

Scott Instruments of Denton, Texas – one of a handful of computer companies manufacturing voice-activated machines – is working with "speaker independent systems" that could be used by paraplegics or the elderly in their homes. They currently manufacture a system that can speak in a variety of languages.

Charles Kee, president of Scott, believes that "by the end of the decade you'll be turning on your air conditioner, your radio, your TV, with your voice." The technology is already available, Kee says. "The hard part is translating that for the consumer market."

DEAR ABBY

Female drivers fuel man's fetish

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am an unmarried man, 34 years old, and I've got what I think is a serious problem that I can't seem to correct myself.

Although I date a few women and don't consider myself sexually starved, I have a compulsion to follow women drivers whom I spot on the freeways and find attractive. I've done this probably 50 or 75 times in the past two years. I never approach them, never talk to them, never even smile or wave. I just follow their cars until they pull into a garage or up a driveway. Then I usually park nearby and watch them walk into their homes or into a shop.

Now, believe me when I say I get no sexual arousal from any of them, although it leaves me feeling very good. I can't figure out why I do it and can't seem to break the habit, even though it sometimes costs me a couple hours a day, not to mention gas money.

I am a professional man with a few degrees and lots of awards for my work. Please don't tell me I need professional help, because I don't think my habit is hurting anyone, or even me. It's simply puzzling.

Have you any opinions on my problem and how to stop it? – JUST LOOKING

DEAR JUST: I think you have a form of voyeurism. (You get your jollies from looking.)

The "harm" can be in carrying it to the point of violating the privacy of another, which is punishable by law if you should make a nuisance of yourself.

Better nip this in the bud, buddy. A professional man has a lot to lose. And don't dodge professional help, because that's exactly what you need.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I gave up drinking. It's been several months now and I am much happier with my life. I've had no shaking, craving or other symptoms associated with alcohol withdrawal.

I do not plan to drink again, but here is the problem: The very people who decided that I drank too much before now tell me that since I'm not drinking I'm not "any fun" to go out with anymore. How should I respond? – SOBER IN ST. PAUL

DEAR SOBER: This way: "Sorry to disappoint you, but if one of us has to be disappointed, I'd rather it be you."

DEAR ABBY: I am a young man, getting married soon to a wonderful young woman. This is a first for both of us. I earn a good living, have a nice amount of equity and am financially secure.

However, I have one great insecurity. No matter how perfect my fiancee and I seem for each other, there's always a possibility of divorce. I would really like to have a prenuptial agreement, but I'm afraid if I mentioned it, she would be against it.

Your opinion would be greatly appreciated. – CHICKEN

DEAR CHICKEN: Today there's a 50-50 chance that your marriage will end in divorce, so don't be a dumb cluck. Explain this to your "chick," and if she really loves you, she won't fly the coop.

Heated battle may be waged over GOP post

An Analysis

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — The pending retirement of Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., has set the stage for a heated battle over his leadership post, even though control of the next Senate won't be decided until November 1984.

A clear favorite to succeed Baker has yet to emerge, though his term expires in January 1985 and he announced months ago that he wouldn't seek re-election.

Republicans have been the majority in the Senate since early 1981, but Democrats are making a major effort to regain control of the chamber next year — a feat that would require a net gain of six seats.

Republicans in the Senate are mindful of the possibility of losing control of the chamber to the Democrats, a factor that may have kept GOP interests from focusing too closely on the leadership race.

GOP SENATE sources said Senate Majority Whip Ted Stevens, R-Alaska — the earliest-declared candidate to succeed Baker as majority leader if Republicans retain control in 1984 and as minority leader if they don't — is encountering major problems in drumming up support for his candidacy.

Stevens, often caustic and hot-tempered, may not have the ability to smooth ruffled egos and seek middle-ground positions needed for the top Senate job, some key Senate Republicans are suggesting.

"Ted Stevens feels that he has an obligation to run for the post. Many wish he wouldn't. It seems doubtful that he'll get it," said one top Senate Republican who did not wish to be identified.

Stevens, now the No. 2 Republican in the Senate leadership lineup, is likely to face spirited opposition from either Sen. James McClure of Idaho or Richard Lugar of Indiana.

McClure has been quietly telling colleagues for some time that he'd be interested in the job. "McClure may start from the strongest power base of anyone," said one Senate GOP insider. "Right now, he has to be considered the front-runner."

LUGAR HAS not actively been lining up support as of yet but could develop into a strong candidate once the 1984 elections are over, senior Senate Republicans contend. Currently, he is said to be preoccupied with his job as chairman of the Senate Republican Campaign Committee, which provides financial and technical help to GOP Senate candidates around the nation.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., are also being mentioned as possible contenders for the top Senate GOP post.

Dole, an unsuccessful 1980 GOP presidential contender, has not discouraged such talk. "I'm not disinterested," he says.

In fact, Dole has been busy handing out money to his GOP colleagues who are running for re-election this year — a fact that certainly won't hurt if he ever needs their support for the GOP leadership election.

His fund-raising political action committee has reported raising more than $321,000 so far this year, even though Dole is not up for re-election. Dole has given more than $80,000 of it to various Republican Senate campaigns.

MEANWHILE, A leadership challenge could develop on the Democratic side of the Senate, especially if Democrats win the majority next year.

Should Democrats regain control of the chamber, party sources say there is a good chance that Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., now the Senate minority leader, may be opposed for the post of majority leader.

But no one is talking too freely about who it might be — although names heard occasionally include Sens. Dale Bumpers of Arkansas and Lawton Chiles of Florida.

"Challenging Byrd is not something one would do lightly. It would be a serious matter, not something you'd talk about too much ahead of time," said one Senate Democrat. Byrd in the past has easily overcome rumored challenges to his leadership posts.

SENATE DEMOCRATS are talking about a possible challenge to Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., to the No. 2 Senate post — assuming Cranston is unsuccessful in his campaign to win the Democratic presidential nomination and remains in the Senate.

Cranston is the Senate Democratic whip.

Some colleagues are suggesting that Cranston has spent so much time on presidential politics that he has ignored his Senate party leadership responsibilities.

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., is being mentioned in party circles as a likely challenger for the Democratic whip's post.

Council upset over bar's name

SANTEE, Calif. (AP) — Horton Clay says he didn't mean any disrespect when he named his tavern after a famous building in town. And he doubts that citizens of Santee will mistakenly drop by one when they meant to visit the other.

After all, he explained to City Council members concerned about the name of his bar, "It's Clay's City Hall, not the Santee City Hall."

Clay, sporting a T-shirt advertising his establishment, also reminded the council that his bar is on the other side of town.

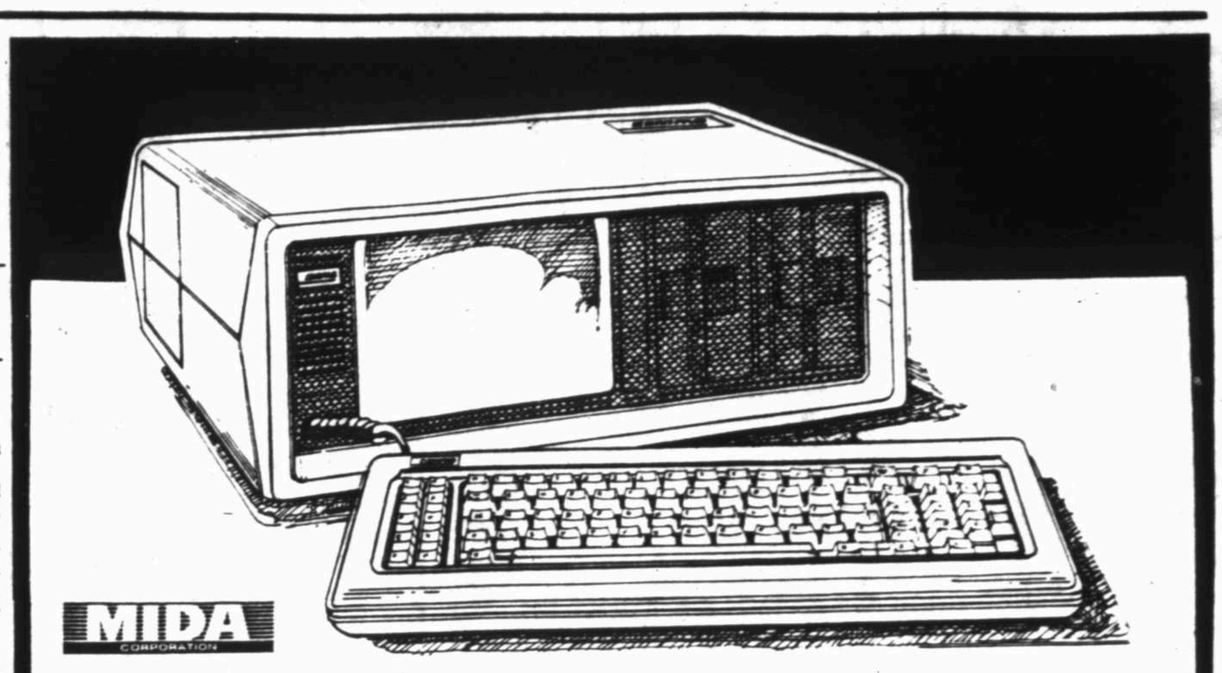

"It's a misuse of verbiage," Councilman Gerry Solomon complained at the meeting night.

At least one person has complained that Clay's use of the name belittles the seat of government in this San Diego suburb, Soloman said.

City officials said they weren't sure what could be done about the bar's name, but they instructed their staff to look into the matter.

"I'd feel like I've been impeached if they take the name away," said a worried Clay.

Mayor Jim Bartell concluded the discussion by suggesting, "Maybe we should adjourn to (Clay's) 'City Hall.'"

THE BETTER HALF

"Stanley made the punch and pizza, so eat, drink and be wary!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, September 17, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Football great George Blanda, Chief Justice Warren Burger, author Ken Kesey, actors Roddy McDowall and John Ritter and Philadelphia Phillies coach Bobby Wine celebrate birthdays today. Your instincts guide you safely through troubled waters this year. The business outlook is greatly improved. Profits begin to rise. Family members draw closer together. Reach out to those you may have offended in the past. Romantic partner is a source of inspiration. Look into investment opportunities you could not afford previously. Those in sales make some hefty commissions now. Be careful not to spend your money on useless luxuries when you should be building savings.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Older people admire your abilities. Take time out to visit them. A weekend trip perks up the entire family. You will have more fun if you stop looking for perfection in romance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Because you gave in once before, a family member thinks he can get around you again. Do not let anyone take you for granted. An artistic hobby could become a commercial success.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Look forward to a whirlwind of social activity this weekend. Small fry should be included in your recreational plans. Set the record straight with a neighbor who is steaming over a misunderstanding.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Love is in the air! You find it hard to concentrate on those chores that need to be done. Relinquish some of your domestic authority in order to attain greater harmony.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Think big when it comes to family business plans. Finances need careful management. You do not want to come up short when it is time to pay the bill for recreational activities.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A love triangle is developing that could threaten an important friendship. Do not do anything silly. A jealous co-worker who bears a grudge could explode at a party. Play it cool.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A new fitness/diet program enjoys favorable influences. Get a domestic matter settled so that everyone can relax again. Financial success is close at hand. Reconcile with a distant relative.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Mate may think you are too involved with sports. Compromise. You can change bad habits if you really want to. You may have to reinforce the requests you make of a child.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You find yourself playing a very important role in someone's life. Recognize your power and use it wisely. Rehearse what you will say when you meet with someone who has angered you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A last-minute trip lifts your spirits. Catch up on what is happening with the children. A "shortcut" could slow you down in the long run. Guard your valuables.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Intervening at a grandchild's request could get you into hot water with your own children. Sign up as a community volunteer. Romance heats up when your self-confidence increases.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Organize your time so that you can complete all of your chores. A phone call brightens your day. Your powers of persuasion are phenomenal! You get what you want.

New ABC show airs tonight

NEW YORK (AP) — The current pet phrase in Hollywood is "high concept." Television executives, when they're not "doing lunch," are constantly searching for high-concept programs. These are shows that are so undemanding that they don't have to be explained to pre-schoolers or network programmers.

High-concept programs, for the most part, are anti-intellectual, devoid of subtlety and nuance and so blatantly broad in their characterizations that they become offensive.

Some may think this also defines today's family sitcoms and burning-rubber series, and they wouldn't be wrong. Bud Grant, president of CBS Entertainment, says "The Dukes of Hazzard" would be high concept, "The Waltons" low concept.

Anyone suffering from acrophobia best not watch ABC's new series, "Webster," which debuts tonight, and "Hardcastle & McCormick," which starts Sunday — sky-high concepts, if there ever were two.

In one case, ABC wanted warm-hearted comedy in the manner of Gary Coleman's "Diff'rent Strokes." In the other, the network wanted executive producer Stephen J. Cannell, who found ratings magic with "The A-Team," to create another world of punching-bag violence, where the victim always bounces back.

In each case, more is definitely less.

"Webster" stars the pint-size black kid from the Burger King commercials, Emmanuel Lewis, 12, who plays 7-year-old Webster Long. This high-concept, low comedy is so gushingly sentimental and manipulative that it's gooey.

George and Katherine Papadopolis, played by the real-life married couple, Alex Karras and Susan Clark, were just married after a whirlwind two-week courtship. He's an ex-jock who's now a sensitive lunkhead doing football analysis on TV. She's a proper Brahmin who works as an ombudsman but is lost at home, where making toast requires an instructional handbook.

It's instant culture clash, served up in a very heavy-handed way. What's more, the secondary characters are equally exaggerated and stereotypical. Katherine's male secretary is catty. George's ex-teammate, Peanut Butter Bukowski, is Polish, brutish and foolish.

Into this situation walks Webster, the son of George's best friend. Webster's parents died in a car accident, leaving George, as godfather, to raise the child. Katherine balks, but is won over by Webster's terminal cuteness.

The cute one in "Hardcastle & McCormick" is Brian Keith, the venerable actor who is much better than his material.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	4 ◇	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♡.

At first glance it might seem that declarer's fate hinges on which finesse he tries — clubs or diamonds. But declarer found a way to try both finesses!

After North raised spades, South's hand became enormous. His jump to four clubs was a cue-bid (three clubs would be a game try), and North showed the ace of diamonds in response. South needed no more.

West led the jack of hearts and declarer won. He cashed the ace of spades and was disappointed to learn that he had to lose a trump trick. But he was able to turn that misfortune into a plus.

Instead of simply relying on a finesse in one minor suit or the other, declarer cashed out the ace of diamonds (a key play) and his high hearts. West saw he would be end played if he ruffed the third heart, so he sluffed a club. But he was simply postponing his moment of reckoning.

With his partial strip completed, declarer simply threw West on lead with his trump. Had West still had a heart to lead, he would be yielding a ruff-sluff to declarer. A club lead would be into declarer's tenace, so West was forced to lead a diamond.

If he led the king, declarer would ruff, enter dummy with a trump and take a club pitch on the queen of diamonds. So West led a low diamond, but declarer played dummy's queen and took his club sluff immediately.

What if East had the king of diamonds? Then declarer would ruff, get back to dummy with a trump and fall back on the club finesse for his slam. He would be no worse off than if he had tried to guess which finesse to take initially.

National Endowment for Arts to present $22.6 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Endowment for the Arts is distributing $22.6 million in grants ranging from a stipend to a literary press in Port Townsend, Wash., to $1.5 million for New York's Metropolitan Opera.

Frank Hodsoll, the endowment's chairman who announced the matching grants on Thursday in Los Angeles, predicted they would generate more than $160 million in private matching funds. According to the terms of federal matching grants, arts organizations must raise three dollars for every dollar of federal money.

The endowment awarded 35 challenge grants to help established, high-quality organizations achieve long-term financial stability. Advancement grants were given to help 29 smaller institutions of outstanding artistic achievement put themselves on sound financial footing.

Pageant's preliminaries continue

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Miss New Jersey sang her way to a preliminary talent victory, while Miss Ohio won the swimsuit competition despite a year of law school that left her feeling she needed to diet.

Suzette Charles, of Mays Landing, N.J., won Thursday's preliminary talent competition with a rendition of "Kiss Me In The Rain," a song popularized by Barbra Streisand.

Pamela H. Rigas, Miss Ohio, predicted that when her law school classmates at the University of Cincinnati heard of her victory Thursday night, "they'll probably be screaming and bringing the newspaper articles to school.

Miss Charles, 20, has had 15 years of voice training during which she has performed at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C., at a casino-hotel in this seaside resort and in 17 television commercials.

No black woman has ever been crowned Miss America, but Miss Charles was the second black contestant to capture a division of this year's preliminaries. The other was Miss New York, Vanessa Williams, who won the swimsuit competition Wednesday night.

Debra Maffett

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Outgoing Miss America Debra Sue Maffett has a few gripes with the media, but that won't stop her from getting into the business herself.

The 26-year-old former Miss California told a news conference Thursday that some reporters failed to see the Miss America pageant as "a stepping stone for education."

Instead, she said, they wrote about such things as her nose, which she had fixed before entering last year's pageant, or breast implants in this year's Miss Texas, Dana Rogers.

"A lot of times, I would go into a city and they would spend half a page on my nose, while a lot of women out there are looking for a way to pay for education," she said. "This (pageant) is a stepping stone for education."

DEADWOOD, S.D. (AP) — Robert F. Kennedy Jr. was on his way to undergo treatment for a drug problem when he became the focus of a police investigation in Rapid City, S.D., a friend says.

Bill Walsh, an owner of the Franklin Hotel in Deadwood, said Thursday that the 29-year-old son of the late senator had agreed to admit himself to a drug treatment program in South Dakota's Black Hills and had planned to visit Walsh beforehand.

But Kennedy became ill Sunday night while on a plane carrying him from Minneapolis to Rapid City, and something happened — officials have refused to say what — that led police to obtain a warrant to search Kennedy's bag for "contraband and controlled substances."

Four days later, the results of that search were still unknown. No charges have been filed against Kennedy, a former assistant district attorney in New York City.

Walsh, 43, a former Roman Catholic priest who said he has known Kennedy since 1980, would not say would what drugs Kennedy was using. Kennedy has been a frequent guest at his hotel, Walsh said, but to his knowledge was not using drugs there.

• • •

Helen Reddy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Helen Reddy and her former husband, Jeffrey Wald, have agreed to settle the differences in their bitter divorce without a trial, Ms. Reddy's attorney says.

Under the agreement, the two will share legal custody of their 10-year-old son, Jordan Sommers Wald, said lawyer Gary Olsen on Thursday.

The boy will move each week from Ms. Reddy's home in Brentwood to Wald's home in nearby Beverly Hills, but he will remain at the same private school that he has been attending, Olsen said.

"I think that arrangement is probably in the boy's best interests, rather than forcing him to undergo a custody battle," he said.

The agreement reached in nine hours of negotiations Monday says that Ms. Reddy, 42, will keep all her earnings as an entertainer and Wald will keep all his profits as a personal manager, Olsen said.

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — James Levine, music director and principal conductor of the Metropolitan Opera, will also carry the title of artistic director starting in the 1986-87 season.

Under terms of a five-year contract, the 40-year-old Levine will be responsible for all the musical and artistic aspects of the company, general manager Anthony A. Bliss said Thursday.

Levine became music director of the Met in 1976. He made his debut with the company in 1971 conducting "Tosca" and was named principal conductor in 1973.

John Dexter, the Met's last artistic director, left in 1980.

• • •

LONDON (AP) — Entertainer Tommy Steele, who was discovered singing rock 'n' roll in a coffee shop 25 years ago, was honored for a quarter-century of stardom with a lunch attended by a host of show business personalities.

Ex-Beatle Ringo Starr and his actress wife, Barbara Bach, attended the affair put on Thursday by the Variety Club of Great Britain at the Savoy Hotel.

Steele, 46, is pulling in capacity audiences at the London Palladium with a lavish musical, "Singin' in the Rain."

American actor Gene Kelly, who starred in the original film and has danced with Steele, sent taped congratulations.

• • •

FLORENCE, Ky. (AP) — Undaunted by rejections from President Reagan and Soviet leader Yuri Andropov, a public relations man is trying to entice Britain's Prince Charles and Princess Diana to visit a local thoroughbred racetrack.

Andrew Furman, director of promotions at Latonia Race Course, wrote to the royal couple Wednesday saying he had read in the newspapers that they were "eager for a visit to the United States — just waiting for an invite.... Here it is."

Comedian George Burns also declined an earlier invitation, even though he was offered a box of cigars, Furman said.

"Now if you turn us down, I'll begin to get a complex," he wrote to Charles and Diana. "Please visit us."

• • •

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Robert C. Dennis, 67, a television screenplay writer who created more than 500 scripts for such shows as "Charlie's Angels," "Hawaii Five-0" and "Dragnet," died Wednesday of cancer.

Dennis was best known for his contributions to such television series as "Alfred Hitchcock Presents," "Cannon," "Harry O," "Batman," "The Outer Limits" and "Barnaby Jones." He created the TV series "Passport to Danger" and wrote the only "Perry Mason" show in which the fictional attorney lost a case.

• • •

LONDON (AP) — Beverley Nichols, a best-selling writer who confessed in his memoirs that he tried three times to kill his alcoholic father, died Thursday at the age of 85.

Nichols was best known for his books on gardening and country life. His 50 books included thrillers and children's stories, and 30 were best-sellers.

• • •

WASHINGTON (AP) — William J. Fellner, a former member of the Council of Economic Advisers with an international reputation for his work on inflation and full employment, died Thursday at his home in Washington after suffering a heart attack. He was 78.

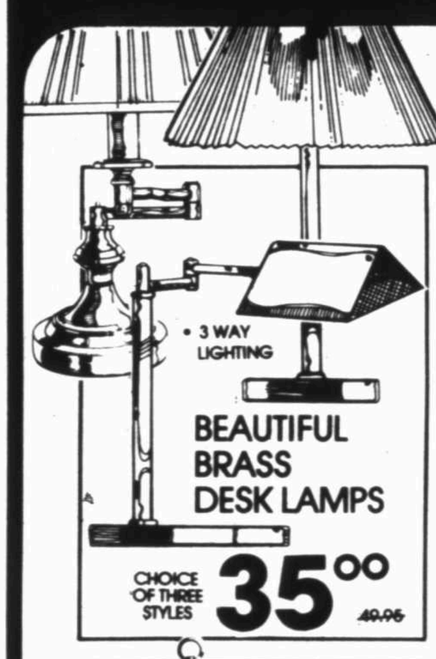

Fellner, an advocate of free economies, was appointed to the three-member council by President Nixon in 1973 and served until 1975.

CLERK-TYPIST
Business-Energy News Department

The Reporter-Telegram has an opening for a Clerk-Typist in the News Department. Duties will include gathering and assembling information for daily drilling report and other oil data.

Good typing skills and at least some knowledge of basic oil and gas terms important. Other requirements: A high school education, some formal training in clerical and typing skills and recent clerical experience.

We need a self-starter who will follow instructions but work without strong supervision. Good telephone style is important. You would use your car on a limited basis.
