Panel votes for aid cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — With strong bipartisan support, a House panel voted unanimously to cut off aid to the government of Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos and await a legitimate government that has the backing of the Philippine people.

Filipinos still would receive humanitarian and economic aid under Thursday's House action, but it would be channeled through the Catholic church and other non-government organizations.

Most military aid would go into an escrow account to await "a legitimate government ... which commands the support of the people of the Philippines," the bill said.

Meanwhile, it was learned that the United States would be represented — at the most — by only a third-level embassy official at Marcos' inauguration, tentatively scheduled for Feb. 25. Such a move would be a diplomatic slap in the face to Marcos.

Vice President George Bush attended Marcos' 1981 inaugural and praised the Philippine leader for his "adherence to democratic principles."

In its 9-0 vote Thursday for an aid cut-off, the House subcommittee on Asian and Pacific Affairs overrode objections of the Reagan administration, which wanted it to wait until special presidential emissary Philip C. Habib returns from Manila to report on his talks there.

But subcommittee chairman Stephen J. Solarz, D-N.Y., said quick action was needed to make clear to Marcos that the United States "will not countenance a stolen election."

He said it would "send a message to the Philippine people that the United States has withdrawn its support for the Marcos regime while continuing its support and assistance for the Philippine people."

The bill now goes to the House Foreign Affairs Committee, which is expected to take it up soon. Solarz said the full committee would have time to hear Habib — who is not expected back before Monday — before it acts.

Solarz said he had been assured by an intermediary earlier in the day that the legislation has the support of presidential opposition candidate Corazon Aquino, who has charged that fraud by Marcos and his supporters deprived her of an election victory.

"Mrs. Aquino supports the legislation ... and feels it reflects her own view about how the United States can contribute to the restoration of democracy in the Philippines," Solarz said.

The bill was introduced by Rep. Robert G. Torricelli, D-N.J., who said, "I have never seen both parties, or both houses in this institution, act more singularly than they have on this occasion." Four Republicans joined five Democrats in voting for it.

Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., reflecting the deep shock and anger on both sides of the aisle over the Feb. 7 Philippine election, said he had been one of the strongest congressional supporters of the Marcos government.

Commission studies field house parking

BY PAUL PINKHAM
Staff Writer

The Pampa City Traffic Commission is looking into the possibility of handicapped parking at the Clifton McNeely Field House, following action Thursday night.

The commission decided to seek the recommendation of high school athletic director John Kendall after receiving a letter from Katherine Gibby, 858 S. Sumner.

Gibby said her mother, an avid Harvester basketball fan, is an asthmatic and cannot walk long distances in cold weather. She said her car has a legal, disabled parking certificate.

Chairman Floyd Sackett said the best spot for handicapped parking would be on Harvester, west of the field house. He noted the traffic commission has no jurisdiction in the school parking lot.

In other action, Police Chief J.J. Ryzman reported the city is still studying ordinances that would forbid parking large trucks, semi-trailers or recreational vehicles in residential areas of the city. Two complaints were received from the Northcrest section of town about 18-wheelers parked at the intersection of Willow and Rosewood and in the area of Sirroco, Cinderella and Pembroke.

Ryzman said the city is aware of the problem and has been studying ordinances from other cities to determine how they handle similar problems.

Sackett noted there may be a parking problem at the corner of Atchison and Frost, particularly when refurbishing work on the Schneider Hotel is completed and the hotel is converted into housing units. He said Frost is too narrow at the intersection to permit parking on both sides of the street.

Commissioners Doug Lockwood and Lee Fraser were appointed to look into the problem.

The commission also voted to recommend that school zone times be changed to 7:30 to 9 a.m. from the current 8 to 9:30 a.m. upon Ryzman's recommendation.

In other business, the commission reviewed accident studies and traffic counts for several intersections and made the following decisions:

— tabled a decision on the traffic light at the corner of Faulkner and Alcock but heard from a local businessman and representatives from nearby Horace Mann Elementary School, all of whom supported leaving the traffic light in place.

— said more traffic control measures probably are not necessary at the corners of Linda and Beech and at 19th and Chestnut.

— decided to recommend a stop sign on Charles where it meets Decatur.

— tabled a decision on placing a light at the intersection of 23rd and Duncan, but Sackett said the intersection is one of the biggest traffic problems facing the city.

— took no action on removing a light at Frost and Francis, but Sackett indicated he would like to see the light removed eventually.

— requested an engineering study be done by the city to place stop signs west of Sumner, north from Kentucky to 18th. Sackett said signs are needed in that section of town but he does not want them placed randomly.

— ordered an accident survey be done on the intersection of Lefors and Jordan.

— took no action on a citizen request to place traffic control at 21st and Duncan. Sackett said he could not see any reason for measures to be taken there.

Governor's wife to launch project

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Linda Gail White, wife of the state governor, will initiate Main Street Project activities in Pampa with an official visit here on March 13.

Mrs. White will fly into Perry Lefors Field north of the city about 10:15 a.m. that day. After arriving in Pampa, she will take a walking tour of the downtown business area, said Lyn Moulton, local Main Street Project manager.

The tour will conclude on the steps of the U.S. Post Office, where the governor's wife and other officials will speak briefly on the Main Street Project concepts.

Mrs. White also will unveil project architect Dick Ryan's first drawing of a proposed rehabilitation or renovation of one of the downtown buildings, Moulton said.

After the ceremonies, a reception for Mrs. White will be held in the First Baptist Church parlor. During the reception, blueprints of renovation plans for City Hall and the Schneider Hotel will be on display.

Texas' first lady will leave Pampa at 11:30 a.m.

Wife of Gov. Mark White, Mrs. White maintains an active schedule of official duties, including visiting the various state cities selected annually for inclusion in the Main Street Project program, Moulton said. Five cities are chosen yearly.

Moulton said the public is invited to attend the activities officially initiating the local Main Street Project.

Mrs. White's visit is the first of several activities and events already lined up under the project goals, designed to revitalize the downtown business area and to attract more people to the city.

Though the governor's wife will be making an appearance here, Moulton stressed that the project "has nothing to do with politics." Her appearance is part of her official duties in support of the project throughout the state.

Members of the Main Street Project Advisory Board will be approved and appointed by the Pampa City Commission at its Feb. 25 meeting, Moulton said the members will represent a broad section of people in the city, not just downtown merchants.

The board's purpose is to advise the project manager, establish goals and priorities, assess effectiveness of programs and activities, sponsor forums on Main Street issues and serve "as a sounding board," Moulton explained.

In addition, a separate committee from the board members probably will be set up later to review designs for rehabilitation and renovation projects in the downtown area.

One of the first events being planned is a Bridal Extravaganza on Sunday, March 16, at M. K. Brown Auditorium from 2 to 4:30 p.m.

Focusing on fashions and other items for brides and grooms-to-be, the show will feature fashions, including gowns for brides and tuxedos for grooms, with models for both; booths from downtown retailers, door prizes and a honeymoon trip grand prize.

Tickets will be $3 and may be purchased at the door or from various downtown merchants.

A resource team from the state Main Street offices will be visiting the city July 22-24. The team consists of eight to ten professionals "volunteering their time for an intense study" of Pampa's needs, Moulton said.

An open town meeting will be held at 2 p.m. on July 24 for the team to discuss their findings and to share ideas with and hear comments from those in attendance.

In another activity, a grant writing workshop has been scheduled for Aug. 13-14. The workshop, open to anyone in the Panhandle area, will offer a thorough background and education in writing grant applications, Moulton said.

Wall of water hits California towns

By MARTIN STEINBERG
Associated Press Writer

Rescuers in helicopters worked feverishly today to lift to safety the remaining residents of two northern California towns flooded by a wall of water released when a levee unexpectedly crumbled, forcing 21,000 people to flee, many in panic.

Crews dumped truckloads of huge rocks today into the levee near the confluence of the Yuba and Feather rivers, which already had receded several feet since the breach occurred about 6 p.m. PST Thursday. It was the second levee to give way Thursday under the weight of nine days of rain.

Elsewhere in the West, cleanups were under way in the wake of waves of Pacific storms that killed at least 17 people, flooded thousands of acres and homes and set off hundreds of avalanches and mudslides. Preliminary estimates put the damage in California, Nevada and Utah near $100 million, and officials estiimated that 20 percent of Napa County's vineyards were damaged.

House tops peek above waterline

About 33,000 people have had to flee their homes, including the 12,000 in Linda, Calif., and 9,000 in nearby Olivehurst evacuated Thursday.

A half-dozen police and National Guard helicopters plucked people from rooftops in Linda, whose residents were taken to five shelters within two hours of the breach, said

Bill Helms of the state Flood Control Center in Sacramento.

Residents screamed, tapped pans and waved flashlights to attract the airborne rescuers "to come and get them from their rooftops," said David Gordon Hall of Sacramento radio station KFBK, who was in Linda.

A 40-foot breach grew to about 100 feet by this morning, said Naser Bateni, supervisor of flood control at the state Department of Water Resources. The breach was a surprise because the Yuba River was 5½ feet below flood stage and receding when the levee crumbled, said Bateni.

"The police could not set up guidelines quick enough at the different corners on which way to go to get away from there, so people were just going in circles, turning around going in other directions, trying to get out of there," said Marysville resident Jim Leary, who was in the Peach Tree Mall in Linda when the levee crumbled, releasing a 3- to 4-foot-high wall of water.

High school drama students to present Victorian thriller

BY CATHY SPAULDING
 Staff Writer

Strange things have been going on at the Manningham household. Pictures are being moved. Letters are being lost. And the gas lights in the living room flicker when night falls.

Is Bella Manningham going mad? Or is she being driven mad by a diabolical husband?

That's what Pampa audiences will have to decide at 7:30 tonight and Saturday when the Pampa High School Drama Department presents Patrick Hamilton's Victorian thriller "Angel Street" at the PHS auditorium. Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for children.

People who have seen the 1940s Ingrid Bergman, Charles Boyer thriller, "Gaslight" will quickly recognize the plot about a scheming husband and his tormented wife.

"The play was originally called Gaslight," director Nanette Kelton, a PHS drama teacher, pointed out.

Set in the Pimlico district of London in the 1880s, the play begins serenely enough. Mr. Manningham (played by PHS sophomore Don Pendegrass) proposes an evening at the theater to his doting wife, Bella (junior Susan Graves). But he notices a picture missing from the wall and he begins badgering her about where she may have hid it. She swears to him she never touched it, but she doubts even her own actions.

And there are other things the beleaguered Bella "forgets" doing. She loses things. And forgets statements her husband distinctly remembers her saying.

But late at night, when her husband is not at home, Bella notices the gas lights flicker above her fireplace and hear noises in the top room, where nobody goes.

When she reaches her lowest ebb, London police sergeant Rough (sophomore Marc Gilbert) drops by for questioning. He is investigating a murder that occurred at that house 15 years ago. A priceless collection of rubies had been hidden somewhere in the house. He suggests that Mr. Manningham might be deliberately trying to drive his wife insane.

But he wouldn't do anything like that. Would he?

Woven into this web of premeditated insanity are the Manningham housekeepers: the saucy tart Nancy (senior Robin Newman) and the mousy and dour Elizabeth (Patti Warner). Two policemen are played by Johnny Hawley and Brook McNeely.

Although tonight's and Saturday's performance will be the full three acts, the play is Pampa's entry in the University Interscholastic League One-Act Play competition, which opens in March.

"I'm trying to cut it down to 40 minutes," Kelton said, adding that she does not know which members of the cast will be in the one-act contest cast.

PUC postpones Bell rate case four months

AUSTIN (AP) — Final arguments in the Southwestern Bell rate hike case, previously scheduled for today, have been postponed for four months so the Public Utility Commission can read 17,267 pages of testimony.

The commission decided Thursday to ignore its examiners' report calling for a $14.4 million rate hike, including a 15-cent monthly increase in the cost of basic residential service.

The postponement was ordered because commission staff internal memos wound up in Bell's hands. The company agreed to the postponement.

Bell wants a residential service increase of $1.50 to $2 a month. The rate request was filed last March as a $323 million package, but later pared by the company to $277 million.

The commissioners had planned to rule next Tuesday. That schedule changed after Public Utility Counsel Jim Boyle complained Bell had improperly obtained internal commission documents about the case.

The commission ordered an investigation, and Thursday got Bell officials to agree to the delay and to throw out the examiners' report.

"They want the extra time to personally read all the transcripts of the case," said Royce Caldwell, Bell vice president for revenues and public affairs in Texas.

Under the agreement, any rate hike eventually awarded to Bell would be retroactive to March 17.

Caldwell said his company did not want to postpone the decision, but felt the commissioners' proposal "was the safest thing for them to do to make sure" there would be no "cloud" over the case.

He also said it is "obvious" there was no improper contact between the company and the commission staff. The internal communications that wound up in Bell's hands were nothing more than "a computer printout of some numbers."

But Boyle, the state lawyer representing residential and small business customers, said the calculations included in the material are "not inconsequential."

"And how valuable that material is is not as important as the process, the feeling that private conversations could take place without notifying other parties," he said.

"I think the commission acted responsibly in trying to remove any cloud that may hang over the Southwestern Bell rate case as far as private communication between the staff and the company," he said.

Boyle wants the commission to cut Bell rates by $150 million.

Make March 23 Walk Day

She said nothing's true, and everything is connected. — Jim Carroll

As I leaned on my car, making $10 worth of gas fill my Chevy's tank 3/4 of the way, a big Bell Gas tanker flooded a hole underneath my feet. This year, I will burn more gas than the tanker was pumping into the ground.

Nearly everyone I saw this week at a gas pump had a stupid grin on his/her face. It was costing them less than it had since the early 70s to put petroleum in their cars and they were eating it up. For kicks, I sat around at the stations and watched the prices go down by the hour. I understand the real action was in Borger, where a brief but bona fide gas war broke out and Regular sold one Saturday for 54.9.

I was as happy as anyone, then I got to thinking about the whole petroleum thing and my enthusiasm ran out of gas. We in the Off Beat space seem to spend quite a bit of time harping on government, and our editor Wally wants it done away with. I think we have a worse evil, though.

The major oil companies own our lives as we know them. Man is a slave to oil, and Kerr-McGee killed Karen Silkwood.

I'm not just talking about we citizens of the Panhandle. Oil's dominance over life here is pretty self-evident, and we're getting a pretty good dose of the consequences of our dependence right now. Money's tight.

Still, the current economy here has nothing and everything to do with why oil owns you, me and the rest of Man on Planet Earth. We can't get through our lives without it, even though some day it will all be gone.

Without oil, cars would be worthless, and we wouldn't be able to build them any way. Transportation would be no more developed than the horse and buggy, and someone would have to figure out what would keep the wheels from grinding. No machines would work. They have to be lubricated. Thus it would be impossible to create many of the things we own. Our presses couldn't roll. We wouldn't have tennis shoes. We wouldn't have plastic. No Tupperware. No heat, except for wood. No light save fire.

The discovery of oil and uses for it made possible Today's World, and it is one that is milking it's very existence off of the Earth's past. We are taking from the past and returning nothing. Trees can be cut down and grown again. Oil cannot. It burns.

The T. Boone Pickens' of the world know this. The major oil companies know they hold all of the cards. They are the ones who decide how much money they want to make off of a barrel of oil. I understand that Nature can alter the availability of that which it produces, and I can accept price fluctuations when it does. Man decides the cost of everything else. We all know that the gas prices in Pampa are decided in coffee shops. Oil is no longer of Nature's production. It is there, in our bowels, and we draw upon it to fit our desires.

Some day soon, gas prices will start rising again. Supply and demand, we will be told, but that's a bunch of garbage. There is an oil glut now, but that's not stopping them from punching more holes in the ground. Now, as they find oil they're plugging the holes, but we will be expected to forget that when they decide to tell us that supplies are low.

Partially because of OPEC, there was an alleged Major Oil Glut in the early 70s and we pretty much freaked out. Remember what gas rationing did to your lives? Oil owns us.

Statistics say we handled the Oil Glut by building fuel-efficient cars, driving less and driving together. Statistics also say we didn't learn a damn thing from the experience. I say how could we have, if feeding off oil is much of all we know?

Over the past several years oil prices have leveled. Now they're falling. Our response condemns itself. We bought cars for gas mileage when they told us we were low on fuel. Now they've decided we're not, and we're buying larger, less efficient cars.

The oil companies know this and love it. Never, please, believe what they say. Nothing is true, and everything is connected.

Because of what I've come to believe about oil companies, I've had second thoughts on the residents of Phillips, who're fighting eviction notices from Phillips Petroleum. Phillips Petroleum bought a full page ad in our paper today saying that independent oilmen are thieves and raping our future. Ronald Reagan says Russians are of an Evil Empire.

It's propaganda on all counts. Russians are humans and no matter who drills the holes it's rape.

I asked in one of my columns why the Phillips people would fight to live next to an oil refinery. It seemed mindless to me and much of tradition still does, but I no longer care why the Phillips residents want to stay there.

More power to them, I say, and don't let them drag you down. Phillips Petroleum would not want the land if it's not going to use it. As Phillips Petroleum expands, so does its rule of our lives. Residents, fight the buggers tooth and nail.

Pampans, and I'm totally serious here, let's do something futile but apt. The oil companies need to know that we think their whole game stinks, even if we're under lock and chain. For one day, let's hold what freedom we can.

I am declaring March 23 Walk Day in Pampa. I am doing so now so that I may have time to harp on the issue if you don't take this for real. Please don't subject us to that.

March 23 is Palm Sunday, and I can't think of a better day to walk to where you go. Please, as a show that you're not a slave, do not drive on March 23. There is no way it could be anything but good for you.

Our healths would benefit if we walked where we went on March 23. It would help our hearts and lungs and legs and none of us would die in auto accidents. We would see each other on the sidewalks, get to know each other and undoubtedly be better off.

Think of churches with filled pews and empty parking lots. Think of downtown busy with people and empty cars. Think of the taste of the air. Like John Lennon, imagine all the people living for the day.

To call March 23 Walk Day is simple and Utopian. It would not be hard, though, to make it reality. I will be afoot that day, and I only ask you to join me.

Many will not, and that only confirms what I've said. Those who chose to drive, all I ask of you is to watch for we on the sidewalks, and please don't run us down.

Principal: Charge is a farce

LIVINGSTON, Texas (AP) — After three days on the witness stand, school principal Hurley Fontenot remained unshaken in his contention that he is innocent of killing a football coach.

Prosecutors on Thursday attempted to shake Fontenot's alibi by showing he failed to take investigators to a pond where he said pine bark chips collected under his truck.

Similar bark pieces were found in the area where the body of Billy Mac Fleming was discovered 10 days after he was last seen April 12, 1985 with Fontenot at Hull-Daisetta Woodson Junior High School, where both men worked.

Fontenot, 48, is accused of killing Fleming, 36, because both men were rivals for the affections of school secretary Laura Nugent. Fleming died of two .22-caliber bullet wounds to the head.

Prosecutors contend Fontenot carried Fleming's body in the back of his pickup truck and dumped it in a wooded area. Fontenot insists he was en route to a Houston airport to pick up his daughter at the time the coach disappeared.

His daughter, who Fontenot said was coming home to get some furniture for her Austin apartment, never arrived.

In his third day of testimony Thursday and first time under cross-examination by District Attorney Peter Speers, Fontenot said he did not show officers the fishing hole after authorities asked him where he might run over pine samplings with his truck.

"I did not see the significance of this," Fontenot said.

Speers also asked Fontenot how traces of human blood showed up in the camper shell of his pickup truck.

"I have no idea where that blood came from," Fontenot said. Later in the day, however, Fontenot explained that the blood came from garbage containers that included his wife's sanitary napkins and his own vomit that contained blood. Fontenot's health problems, including a heart attack and bypass surgery, have been cited as reasons why he could not have frequent sex with Mrs. Nugent, whom he had dated occasionally for about two years.

Prince treated like a king

AUSTIN (AP) — Prince Charles, a special guest at Texas' 150th birthday party, was treated like a king — for a day.

In turn, he stole Texans' hearts.

The prince came to the capital city Thursday bearing a gift to the state's year-long celebration of its independence from Mexico.

It was Prince Charles' third stop on a Texas trip that already had taken him to Dallas and Houston and wound up today in San Antonio.

In a ceremony on the Capitol steps, which shows the workmanship of Scottish stonemasons, Prince Charles presented Gov. Mark White a picture of the old Texas Legation on St. James Street in London.

"I do wish you a very, very happy birthday, indeed. And hope that most of you live to see the next 150 years," Prince Charles told a crowd of more than 3,000, some of whom had waited for six hours to see the heir to the British throne.

But considering the gifts the 37-year-old prince received, one would think it was his birthday.

On arrival at Bergstrom Air Force Base, Prince Charles was presented three Western-style hats. One, a size too large, dropped to his ears. Two were for his young sons.

At the pink-granite Capitol, the prince received a 1 1/2-foot wooden gavel, which he jokingly said could be put to good use "for maintaining discipline in the home," as well as a Texas flag, an 1838 map of Texas printed in London and a collection of limited edition replicas of 10 flags of the Republic of Texas.

Texas was a republic before it became a state in 1845.

Prince Charles said the United Kingdom "was one of the first nations, believe it or not, to recognize the newly independent state of Texas."

White said, "Although Great Britain's flag never flew over the state of Texas, nor was it one of those six that did, you can tell that your presence here today has captured the hearts of all Texans, your highness, and we're delighted to have you."

House Speaker Gib Lewis, after chatting with the prince, said, "I told him he had captured the hearts of all Texans. He was very impressed with that. He's a very charming person."

Cynthia Bernal, a secretary who had driven 65 miles to see the prince said, "When other people want to see Bruce Springsteen or Michael Jackson, I don't bother. For the prince, I bother."

After a lunch of chicken breasts, rice and a molded Bavarian cream with pureed fresh raspberries, Prince Charles paid a call on the University of Texas, where he visited a microelectronics laboratory.

He quizzed former Adm. Bobby Inman, chairman of Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp., and others about how high-technology can be transformed into products that people use and, according to Inman, showed a great interest in graduate students working in the lab.

"I was fascinated by watching his interaction with students. He could run for office very effectively," said Inman.

A thousand or more students stood in record-breaking temperatures in the mid-90s to catch a glimpse of Prince Charles, and 19-year-old sophomore Keith Dunlap of Baytown sprinted to his dorm for a small, stuffed Longhorn steer that he gave to the prince.

Dunlap said he told the prince he should give the animal to his sons, and the prince replied, "Oh, I will."

"I'm still in shock," said Dunlap.

At night, Prince Charles used a three-foot sword to cut the world's largest cake, which weighed 45 tons and was large enough to feed 300,000 people.

He joined Lady Bird Johnson, the widow of the late President Lyndon B. Johnson, at a $5,000-a-couple dinner, with the proceeds going to restore the Capitol, and attended a concert.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

How much taken is all that counts

One of the funniest — and at the same time one of the most depressing — indications of how little economics is understood these days, even by professional economists, is the respectful seriousness with which people receive the often repeated assertion that if it takes a tax increase to wipe out the budget deficit, it's worth it. We should be willing to tolerate almost anything, we're told, if only it will get rid of the horrible threat the deficit poses to our economic health as a nation. Balderdash.

Not that the deficit isn't harmful. When government has to borrow hundreds of billions of dollars to keep its book balanced, it crowds many private businesses out of the capital markets altogether. And those that don't get crowded out find they have to pay much higher prices for the money they borrow, because interest rates have been driven up by the increase in demand created by government borrowing.

When there's a relative shortage of available capital, some businesses that need money to expand won't be able to expand; some entrepreneurs who need money to launch new enterprises won't be able to launch them. The economy will be less vital, less wealthy, less prosperous than it would be otherwise. Anyone who thinks the American economy has shown robust good health over the past few years should reflect on how things might have been without Ronald Reagan's 12-figure deficits.

But if we balance the federal budget by increasing taxes rather than by cutting spending, we won't improve matters at all. If the government borrows $200 billion, that's $200 billion that won't be available to the private sector, true. But if the government increases taxes by $200 billion, that too is $200 billion that won't be available to the private sector.

What matters, in terms of the effect on economic vitality, is what percentage of the national wealth is absorbed by government, not what method the government uses to absorb it. Deficit or taxes, it all comes to the same thing in the end: a massive wet blanket thrown over our potential for economic growth.

Meaningless holidays

This week, we observed the holiday known in most places by the uninspiring designation of "President's Day." It ostensibly honors two men, Washington and Lincoln, each of whom used to have a day all his own. Here in the Land of Lincoln the day is half-redundant, since the state persists in observing the 16th president's real birthday, Feb. 12. But elsewhere, the two holidays, which fell just 10 days apart, begged for consolidation, thus freeing another day to ditch work to commemorate someone else.

Now be honest. How many of you spent even a few minutes of your day off (if you got one) meditating on the debt we owe to the Father of Our Country and the Great Emancipator? Uh huh. Just as I figured.

This is only one of many such dubious occasions. The federal government closes down on 10 different days: New Year's Day, Martin Luther King Jr.'s Birthday, Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, Columbus Day, Veterans' Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas.

What's the point? Most of these have long been drained of any authentic meaning. Only on Christmas and Thanksgiving do most people make even a perfunctory attempt to order the day around the purpose for which it was reserved.

The other holidays rarely serve any ennobling purpose. New Year's Day is an occasion for gorging on college football games, and for recovering from the debauchery of the previous night. Memorial Day is reserved for the first trip to the local swimming pool. Independence Day is an excuse to guzzle beer and generate noise pollution. Labor Day is reserved for the last trip to the local swimming pool. Veteran's Day is well, beats what people do on Veteran's Day, except avoid work.

None of this is to denigrate the original intent, much less the people who are supposed to be honored. It's not the fault of veterans that Americans don't pass their day meditating on the sacrifices of those who have served in uniform. But let's face it — they don't. Neither do most veterans.

Martin Luther King's birthday, you will protest, is an exception, and so it is. Because it's new, people still feel obliged to justify it by genuflecting toward brotherhood and racial harmony. Give it time. Before long, there will be TV commercials for car dealerships featuring a silly-looking man masquerading as King and shouting, "I have a dream...that I'll be able to save big on a new Chevy!"

There are other problems with these holidays. One is that they're not holidays for some people, who have to not only work but also cope with closed banks and offices, no mail and a nettlesome sense of inequality. Another is that anyone who isn't working has to cope with all the other people who are also off. Spending a weekday in early September at the beach sounds nice, unless 40 million other people decide to do the same thing.

It wouldn't do us any harm to scrub these holidays and use the time to work instead of goof off. I mean, the Japanese won't be snoozing on the couch tomorrow afternoon. Unless I miss my guess, for us all to spend an extra eight days (I'll leave Christmas and Thanksgiving alone) producing instead of consuming would give a nice boost to the economy, besides taking a bite out of the deficit.

Anyone who wants to commemorate the original purpose of these holidays would still be free to do so. People somehow manage to celebrate birthdays, anniversaries and assorted religious occasions without demanding the cooperation of government bodies or employers. Irish-Americans everywhere, I've noticed, manage to celebrate St. Patrick's Day despite having to go to work.

Besides, there's something odd about commemorating the historic contributions of dedicated people by promoting mass idleness. We should heed the example of Calvin Coolidge. When he died, the mayor of his hometown of Northampton, Mass., asked that the local merchants not close for his funeral, but show their respect by diligently attending to their normal tasks. Coolidge, bless him, would have wanted it that way.

Love affair turns sour

Farmers love farming. Why else would any man or woman work dark-to-dark year after year for less than the national minimum wage?

Farmers love farming. Most farm families have roots three and more generations deep in the soil which they till, in the barn they fill — and were born in the house in which they live.

While farming is a lot of things — ranging from cattle to catfish — I am best acquainted with Missouri farmers and Missouri farming because the Harveys' family farm is there.

Ninety percent of Missouri farmers are married. Most small-scale farmers have had to take some kind of a second job so they can afford to be farmers.

Farmers love farming. A lot of my neighbors were prospering and expanding in the 1970s. Some rented extra land. Many borrowed money to buy more land. By 1981 Missouri farmland prices were way up there by any previous standard — up to $1,000 an acre.

But prices were good for everything Missouri grows — beans and hay and grains, some cotton and rice.

Then came 1982. Farmers are resilient. They can roll with the vagaries of the weather and unpredictable prices, but some new factors are keeping them awake nights.

Their assets — farmland and machinery — are declining in value.

Their overproduction of meat and grain is stockpiled, declining in value.

And then the draught of 1982. Now the cash flow is squeezed to where it won't meet payments on loans.

Farmers love farming. Whatever the risk and however hard the sweat-work, farming has always meant freedom to do your own thing, to be your own boss — apart from the stress of the city's asphalt jungle.

But when farm income is not enough to feed the farm family and creditors are hounding farmers and antiquated machinery is breaking down, the farmer is taking his own stress to the roadside tavern making bad things worse.

By 1984 farm auctions were up 100 percent over the year previous. That is the ultimate personal failure; when a farmer loses his farm. Next came escalating alcoholism, family violence, divorce.

Forty-seven Missouri farmers killed themselves in 1982, 69 in 1983, 71 in 1984. And more in 1985.

And the increases in suicides have been almost entirely among farmers under 40. It was they who had thought the 1970s would last forever.

I don't know what to do about it, but I'll bet if farmers on the other side of the world were being dispossessed and killing themselves, we would think of something.

C-SPAN fulfills television potential

WASHINGTON (NEA) — "The instrument can teach, it can illuminate," pioneer television journalist Edward R. Morrow once said in explaining the awesome potential of his medium.

"It can even inspire," Morrow added. "But it can do so only to the extent that humans are determined to use it to those ends. Otherwise, it is merely lights and wires in a box."

Unfortunately, Morrow's employer and the other commercial television networks have severely restricted their role as providers of inspiration and illumination, opting instead to dispense least-common-denominator entertainment.

The Public Broadcasting Service has been somewhat more rewarding, but it too has been disappointing as a vehicle that might have advanced the viewers' understanding of their world.

There is, however, one television news organization that comes close to fulfilling Morrow's vision and achieving the medium's potential for serving the public through offerings that are enlightening yet compelling.

It is the Washington-based Cable Satellite Public Affairs Network, aptly characterized by one industry expert as "cable's most unique and, in some ways, greatest contribution to television."

Distributed to approximately 23 million homes by 2,000 cable systems throughout the country, C-SPAN is an oasis in the television desert, providing informative and intriguing around-the-clock programming interrupted by neither disruptive commercials nor intrusive commentary.

Best known as the cable operation that broadcasts the live, complete, unedited proceedings of the House of Representatives, C-SPAN also covers:

— Hearings of both House and Senate committees on such diverse topics as obscene record lyrics, ambient air quality standards, organized crime, airline deregulation, health care and offshore fishing rights.

— National Press Club speeches made by newsmakers ranging from politician Geraldine Ferraro and evangelist Jerry Falwell to New York Philharmonic Musical Director Zubin Mehta and actress Jessica Lange.

— Call-in programs that encourage viewers to question politicians, diplomats, lobbyists and journalists. Guests have included Vice President George Bush, feminist leader Gloria Steinem and consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

Although C-SPAN's programming is Washington oriented, its crews regularly travel to other cities. Last year, it broadcast the annual meetings of the National Governors Association in Boise, Idaho; the Republican Governors Association in Wilmington, Del.; the Council of State Governments in Lake Tahoe, Nev.; and the U.S. Conference of Mayors in Anchorage, Alaska.

In recent presidential election years, it has been the only television news organization to offer uninterrupted gavel-to-gavel coverage of the nominating conventions of both major political parties.

C-SPAN's history dates back to 1977, when Brian Lamb, its founder and chairman, persuaded a number of television industry executives to invest $400,000 to launch the non-profit cooperative venture.

Today, C-SPAN operates on an annual budget of about $6.5 million, slightly more than the three major commercial networks spent on the combined yearly salaries of Dan Rather, Tom Brokaw and Peter Jennings.

Most members of C-SPAN's staff of slightly more than 100 are young men and women in their 20s and 30s, but their work is thoroughly professional — and it is appreciated by viewers seeking innovative programming.

"C-SPAN brings us as close to pure democracy as anything we have known," says an Illinois follower. "It is a university...for all of us to attend, learn and form our own opinions to keep alive the free exchange of ideas," adds a Massachusetts C-SPAN enthusiast.

Analysts: Texaco helped by federal appeals court decision

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal appeals court decision has strengthened the bargaining position of Texaco Inc. in its multibillion-dollar legal battle with Pennzoil Co. over the acquisition of Getty Oil Co., industry analysts said.

But the chairman of Pennzoil said he disagrees with that assessment, suggesting that he is willing to either negotiate or go back to court and let the chips fall where they may.

A three-judge panel of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit ruled Thursday that Texaco would not have to post a $12 billion bond while appealing a Texas court verdict that Texaco improperly interfered with a merger agreement between Pennzoil and Getty.

In upholding an earlier ruling by a federal judge, the panel said the $1 billion bond ordered by the judge in White Plains, N.Y., was sufficient, and that Pennzoil could not attach liens to Texaco property while Texaco goes through the appeals process.

At its White Plains headquarters, Texaco issued a statement saying it was pleased by the appeals court decision.

It "confirms Texaco's ability to appeal the judgment of the Texas State District Court through the Texas appellate courts without the burden of an oppressive bond and liens," said John K. McKinley, the company's chairman and chief executive officer.

In Houston, Pennzoil Chairman J. Hugh Liedtke told The Associated Press that he joined McKinley in being delighted that the case would move forward through the Texas courts.

On Wall Street, Texaco closed up 1/4 at 29 1/4. Pennzoil closed up 1 1/2 at 57 1/2.

Analysts said the court's action put Texaco in a stronger bargaining position, should negotiations on an out-of-court settlement resume. They noted that although Pennzoil had the upper hand in settlement talks while the bond requirement was in force, Texaco might be able to make the case drag on for months or years if freed of the bond.

"It means that Texaco is relieved of the kind of blackmail pressure that the $12 billion bond represents," said Bruce Lazier, an analyst with Prescott, Ball & Turben Inc.

"Without that sword hanging over their heads, they're free to go ahead with the appeals process and negotiate with Pennzoil, knowing that they're not going to have to put themselves in jeopardy."

But to prevent such stalling, the appeals court told Texaco to "promptly and diligently prosecute its appeal" in the Texas courts.

"This is what we'd like to see," said Liedtke.

On Nov. 19, a Houston jury ruled that Texaco had wrongly interfered with a merger agreement between Pennzoil and Getty Oil Co. and then acquired Getty itself. The jury awarded Pennzoil $10.53 billion in damages.

Texas State Judge Solomon Casseb Jr. affirmed the award in December, adding $600 million in interest and saying more interest would accumulate at the rate of 10 percent annually.

In a federal suit filed Dec. 13 in U.S. District Court in White Plains seeking to bar Pennzoil from attaching liens on Texaco assets, Texaco said that because it could not afford to post a $12 billion bond required under Texas state law it would be denied its constitutional right to appeal the adverse verdict.

Upholding Judge Charles L. Brieant Jr.'s decision granting Texaco's requests, the appeals panel said the $12 billion bond "lacks any rational basis, since it would destroy Texaco and render its right of appeal in Texas an exercise in futility."

"This would at least amount to a deprivation of its property in violation of its right to due process under the Constitution," the court added.

Deposed appointee is upset at White

AUSTIN (AP) — An appointee deposed by Gov. Mark White says he might just come to Austin to try to claim a seat on the State Commission on Judicial Conduct.

W. Dwain Read of Conroe claims White tried to get him off the commission shortly after appointing him because the governor found out Read recently switched to the GOP.

White's staff said the governor replaced Read because he became a candidate for Montgomery County Judge. It would be a conflict of interest for Read to serve on the commission while running for judge, according to the governor's office.

The 12-member commission reviews complaints against judges.

Read, a Groesbeck auto dealer, said Thursday he "may just very well" come to Austin to try to claim a commission seat.

White picked Read for the commission Feb. 13, which was 10 days after Read switched parties and filed for county judge. White did not know that Read — formerly active in the Democratic Party — had jumped to the GOP.

White on Wednesday named

Lowell Cable of Sulphur Springs to Read's seat. Read had been appointed, and took the oath of office, to replace Robert Rogers of Dallas, whose term expired.

Election law does not bar Read from running for county judge while serving on the commission, according to John Steiner, director of the elections division of the Secretary of State's Office.

But Steiner said he did not know whether Read is barred from serving on the commission because he is a candidate.

"As to his status of his appointment, that's entirely between him and the governor's office," he said.

Read said the case raises a constitutional question.

"Can the executive branch undo something they've already done?" he asked.

"I have a Feb. 13 letter from the secretary of state that says I may assume the duties as soon as I executed the oath of office. I executed the oath of office prior to the governor's office calling me trying to rescind the appointment," said Read.

Haynes offers homeowners free services

PHILLIPS, Texas (AP) — More than 500 residents cheered when Houston lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes told them he is willing to represent them at no charge in an eviction battle against Phillips Petroleum.

Residents in this town of 1,500 have been given eviction notices by Phillips, the town's largest employer and landlord to most.

The oil company operates a large refinery near here and leases the land on which hundreds of homes are located.

Phillips has set a deadline of Aug. 31 for the residents to vacate the land and move their homes to make way for future company expansion.

No official action was taken on Haynes' offer at a homeowners meeting Thursday, but members of the homeowners association will vote Monday on a resolution to retain the flamboyant Houston attorney. In an obvious effort to seal the deal, Haynes gave the audience his home phone number just before leaving the podium.

"I'm not here to get rich off you, I'm already rich," Haynes said. "And I'm not here to get famous, I'm already famous."

"The bottom line is while your legal situation is difficult, it is not hopeless," the famed attorney told a packed Phillips High School Auditorium Thursday night. "You've got some legal legs to stand on you've got a cause within the law."

Haynes referred to what he called "Corporate Phillips" as a train wanting to "bulldoze" the town.

"I don't believe you all want to be pushed into relocation," he said to the cheering audience. "I don't believe a Texas American is going to let themselves be relocated."

The attorney said he had read the letters that Phillips has sent to the homeowners asking them to leave or offering them financial assistance on property they plan to develop west of here.

"I don't like the coercion," said Haynes, referring to the eviction notices. "I don't like the pushing, I don't like the deadline and I know you don't like it."

Haynes says there is a way to stop Phillips from relocating the town.

"People, you've got to think positive, what we've got to say is that we've got them in their tracks," he said.

Windshield wiper manufacturer to move to Texas border

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Trico Products Corp., a leading manufacturer of windshield wipers, has decided to move its operations south to save money while boosting the area's depressed economy with more than 1,000 jobs, company officials announced.

The Buffalo, N.Y.-based company will have to lay off about half of its 2,500 workforce to make the move.

But it will employ about 1,250 people in twin plants in Brownsville, Texas, and Matamoros, Mexico and area officials are elated.

The border area has been struggling after recent devaluations and fluctuations of the Mexican peso.

Company officials said the twin-plant concept, in which production and assembly of materials are divided between two facilities, would save the company money and make it more competitive.

"It's going to mean an awful lot for our company and I'm sure it's going to mean an awful lot for our communities," company president Richard L. Wolf said.

About 400 people will be hired in Texas and another 850 in Matamoros, company officials said.

The relocation and twin-plant concept would lower labor and building maintenance costs while boosting the depressed economy of the area, said Richard William Wolfe, a former General Motors executive, named to head operations for the twin plants.

"These kinds of costs allow us to be productive and compete in a world market," Wolfe said. "I think this is one of the last great frontiers of the United States, this area that we're at down here."

Wolf said there has been discussion with unions in Buffalo, but the decision to move the company is final.

About 1,100 manufacturing, engineering and administrative personnel will stay in Buffalo, officials said.

"There will be some selective skills and management abilities that we would want to bring down here," Wolf said. "But a good number of them unfortunately will lose their jobs."

But business and civic leaders from Brownsville and Matamoros praised Trico's decision to move to the area.

"We're here as a big community. We have a river between us, but it doesn't divide us. It unites us," said Brownsville Mayor Emilio Hernandez.

Trico was founded in 1917 in Buffalo, N.Y., and also has manufacturing facilities in England and Australia.

In 1985, the company boasted U.S. sales of $145 million and foreign sales of $28 million.

Limited production along the border will begin later this year and the company should be in full operation by mid-1988 when the facilities are completed, Wolfe said.

"Trico is good for Brownsville and Texas, and Texas will be good for Trico," Gov. Mark White said.

Dan Petty, chairman of the Texas Economic Development Commission, said the company's decision is an outgrowth of unsuccessful efforts Texas made to attract the new GM Saturn and Toyota auto plants to the state.

Girl's identity still unknown

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The identity of a girl whose body was found in a Fort Worth burning field, stripped and stabbed, remained a mystery today, officials said.

Police Lt. A. Rachels confirmed that the investigation which began Wednesday night, when the child's body was discovered during a brush fire, was continuing.

"We do not have any one person who we think it is," detective Capt. Ben Dumas said Thursday. "She could be a runaway from another city, which is a distinct possibility. We're not ruling out anything."

The girl, estimated to be between 11- and 14-years-old, apparently was killed shortly before her body was doused with flammable liquid and set on fire,

SPEAKS TO PEOPLE — President Reagan addresses the people of Grenada at a rally in Queen's Park in Grenada Thursday. Reagan earlier placed a wreath at a memorial at St. Georges Medical School honoring the Americans killed during the rescue mission.

Reagan, in Grenada, says U.S. has no plans for Nicaragua action

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, warmly received in his first visit to Grenada since sending invading troops there to block a communist takeover, says he has no thought of similar action in Nicaragua.

"I think it's an entirely different situation," Reagan told reporters Thursday as he posed for photographs with Sir Paul Scoon, governor general of Grenada, during a four-hour visit to the island nation.

"So you're ruling out use of U.S. force in Nicaragua?" Reagan was asked.

"We never had any plans for such a thing," he answered.

Addressing an estimated crowd of 20,000 or more Grenadians at a playing field that was a command post during the 1983 invasion, Reagan indicated, however, that he plans to keep up the pressure on Nicaragua's leftist government.

"Today, in Nicaragua, we see a chain of events similar to what happened here," he told the Grenadians, who chose a democratic government after Marxist Prime Minister Maurice Bishop was murdered by fellow leftists, paving the way for the U.S. invasion.

"I will never be sorry that I made the decision to help you," said Reagan.

The president laid a green wreath, wrapped in lavender ribbon, at an oblong-shaped granite memorial to the 19 U.S. servicemen killed in the invasion.

The audience that jammed Queen's Park in St. George's, the Grenadian capital, interrupted Reagan's speech with applause more than two dozen times.

At the airport, at St. George's Medical School, at the park and along his motorcade route, Reagan was greeted with signs of thanks for the U.S. action and other assistance.

One sign said, "99 per cent of Grenadians think you saved their lives."

Another, held up by a child from an international school, said, "Room 82 thanks you."

People jammed bleacher seats at the park and stood in an adjacent field and on the brow of a nearby hill. Prime Minister Herbert Blaize said it was the biggest crowd in the history of the island, which has a population of about 90,000.

"I can't tell you how moved I have been," said Reagan, speaking as evening shadows lengthened and a freshening breeze off the ocean whipped U.S. and Grenadian flags scattered throughout the crowd.

The president planned a meeting with House Republicans on Capitol Hill today, but aides said it would deal with domestic issues, not with his bid for $100 million in assistance to rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist regime.

He is expected to return to that subject, and touch on his Grenada visit, in a televised speech on defense issues next Wednesday.

NASA is also looking at a possible main fuel tank leak

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — NASA propulsion experts, attempting to explain extraordinarily low temperature readings on Challenger's suspect rocket booster, are trying to determine if a small, undetected leak in the shuttle's external fuel tank may have triggered last month's disaster.

If a leak in the tank allowed super-cold hydrogen to escape and hit the shuttle's nearby right rocket booster, it could have created temperatures low enough to affect the performance of the large O-ring seals that join sections of the booster, according to this theory.

The tank sits just two feet from the solid-fuel rocket boosters.

Harold Hallisey, deputy manager of the rocket propellant tank project at the Marshall Space Flight Center, said Thursday the possibility of a leak in the tank, which carries 500,000 gallons of liquid hydrogen and oxygen, "is being looked at."

James W. Thomas Jr., who heads the solid rocket motor team at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, suggested that only a leak of hydrogen could have caused temperature readings of 7 and 9 degrees Fahrenheit on the surface of the booster.

NASA officials acknowledge such readings were recorded several hours before the Challenger was launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla., on Jan. 28, but they have said the readings might have been false because the hand-held infrared measuring device has an error margin of as much as 10 degrees.

Nevertheless, even a 19 degree reading should have raised concerns, officials said, but the reading never was forwarded up the chain of command to those who made the launch decision. Challenger exploded 73 seconds after launch, killing the shuttle's seven-member crew.

It had been thought that a leak in the external fuel tank would be detected by sensors that gauge pressure levels inside the tank, but Hallisey said he didn't know how sensitive those instruments were.

Another engineer, speaking only on condition of anonymity, said a very small leak could escape detection, and yet be large enough to impinge low temperatures on the side of the solid rocket booster.

Thomas said in an interview that extremely cold temperatures on the right booster could have caused the synthetic rubber O-ring seals to shrink and fail under the internal pressures of the launch.

"We had no reason to believe that we had a cold temperature problem" with an air temperature of 38 degrees at the time of the launch, Thomas said. He added that the rocket boosters were designed to work properly between the temperatures of 31 and 99 degrees.

Although temperatures dipped into the mid-20s the night before, he said, the rocket engine seals would have warmed up well into the 30s by launch time. He said it takes only about two hours for the seals to warm or to cool to the temperature of the outside air.

Mergers getting antitrust scrutiny

NEW YORK (AP) — Unless the government says otherwise, Coca-Cola Co. and Pepsico Inc. alone will control more than 80 percent of the U.S. soft-drink market, which totals $30 billion a year.

The two companies, already the industry's dominant players, are poised to reach that level via proposed acquisitions of their closest rivals.

Coke announced Thursday it had agreed to buy fourth-ranked Dr Pepper Co. for $470 million, and Pepsico agreed last month to buy No. 3 Seven-Up Co. for $380 million.

The Reagan administration has been relatively lenient in allowing much larger mergers to go through. But because the proposed Coca-Cola and Pepsico acquisitions would give them overwhelming joint command of their market, some industry and legal observers predicted the deals would receive close scrutiny from antitrust officials.

"They really ought to take a look at this," said Charles Brown, attorney general of West Virginia who is vice chairman of the antitrust committee of the National Association of Attorneys General and a former Federal Trade Commission lawyer.

Coca-Cola, with an industry leading 39 percent of the market, would lift its share to about 46 percent by buying Dr Pepper, while Pepsico, currently with 28 percent, would climb to 35 percent with the Seven-Up acquisition.

Battered home satellite industry begins offensive to regain sales

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The once-booming home satellite TV industry, whose sales skidded with the advent of scrambling by Home Box Office and similar

Teachers organize against HB 72

AUSTIN (AP) — A new organization of Texas teachers has been formed to oppose the reelection of Gov. Mark White because of his backing of the 1984 school reforms bill, Doug Ward, an English teacher in Monahans, told a news conference.

A statement from the Texas Teachers for Respect and Responsibility, read by Ward, said House Bill 72 stripped local school boards and administrators of authority centralizing control of education in Austin.

"It was wrong," the statement said, "for the governor to have removed elected members of the state school board and to have replaced them with appointed individuals sympathetic to the governor's wishes."

plans by other cable networks, is regrouping to fight off the threat.

About 1.5 million Americans own dish antennas to receive satellite signals, with 600,000 of those sales made last year before the boom went bust.

Sales reportedly have plummeted more than 50 percent since Home Box Office began scrambling its signals last month, although industry officials refuse to be specific. HBO's move was followed by announcements from nearly two dozen other cable TV services that they also plan to scramble their signals.

The scrambling, begun under pressure by local cable companies disturbed at the growth in the number of people buying satellite dishes to receive cable TV programming free over the air, has thrown the market into chaos, industry spokesman Taylor Howard said Thursday.

"We've been beaten very hard," said Howard, chairman of SPACE, the industry's trade group, who likened the campaign to "crisis control."

"The marketplace is very confused," he said. "People who might have bought before are now waiting."

More than 10,000 delegates attending the SPACE-Satellite Television Technology Inc. convention here decided Thursday to hire a public relations firm to brush up the industry's image, Howard said.

"We've never been against paying for these channels," he said. "We just want it done right, with free competition in the marketplace so the rates will not be out of line with what people now pay for cable."

Howard said SPACE plans to air a "very positive campaign to educate the public" to the advantages of satellite television.

"The market has been turned sour by essentially bad press," he said. "We want to show the public that there are still many advantages to satellite television."

Dish marketers like to point out that up to 100 unscrambled channels are still available, despite the planned scrambling of so-called premium channels and such advertiser-supported channels as the sports-oriented ESPN and Cable News Network.

Abilene man's idea a classic

By LARRY LAWRENCE
Abilene Reporter-News

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — The Texas Historical Foundation didn't have to look far to find a project for the 1986 Sesquicentennial.

Its vice president, W.P. "Bill" Wright Jr. of Abilene filled the bill.

The Abilene businessman, recently elected chairman of the Texas Committee for the Humanities, recalled the success of a photographic history of Abilene in which he had been involved. That project had been put together and printed by the University of Texas Press for the city's centennial. The volume was a success, so why shouldn't a photographic history of Texas go over big?

Wright became involved in the foundation's sesquicentennial project during a conversation in 1982 with John Ben Sheppard, another longtime board member and former Texas attorney general.

"He asked me to think about a project," Wright said.

That conversation led to a two-volume photo history of Texas. The first volume covers the years from 1850 to 1980, and the second from 1980 to now.

"We felt there should be volume of Texas history and one of contemporary times," Wright said.

The "Historic Texas" volume includes photographs selected from among thousands collected throughout the state. They date from the earliest days to the start of the 1980s and cover many facets of early Texas life.

"The 'Contemporary Texas' volume is the work of 16 world-class photographers selected to show the Texas of today," said Wright, himself a keen amateur photographer.

Many months were spent planning, securing financial support and editing material before printing by Texas Monthly Press.

Initial funding of $105,000 for the editorial budget came from Dupont and Conoco, Wright said.

As director of the project, Wright put together an editorial team that included Martha A. Sandweiss, curator of photographs for Fort Worth's Amon Carter Museum, general editor; Roy Flukinger, curator of the photography collection at the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center at the University of Texas at Austin, associate editor; and Anne W. Tucker, curator of the Gus and Lyndall Wortham collection Houston Museum of Fine Arts, contributing editor.

"Each editor was asked to select five photographers to work on the contemporary volume," Wright said.

In addition, the editors invited author William A. Owens to write the essay for the historic volume, and Stephen Harrigan, senior editor of "Texas Monthly," to do an essay for the contemporary volume. Both accepted, and their essays add much to the books, Wright said.

"We also were able to get Richard Pearce-Moses to work full time in locating photo collections," Wright said. "He visited archives, and looked over private and corporate collections. There were literally thousands of photographs viewed from which the final selections were made."

Pearce-Moses has extensive experience both as a working photographer and as a photographic archivist.

During the course of the project additional funds were granted by the Texas Commission on the Arts through the Amon Carter Museum, Wright said.

In addition to a boxed limited edition the books are available unboxed and can be purchased as a set or by single volumes. The historic volume is $29.95 and the contemporary volume $35 at bookstores throughout Texas.

Profits will go to the Texas Historical Foundation — one half to aid the Capitol restoration and the other half for the foundation's project of identifying and cataloging the historical photography collections in Texas.

Each photographer agreed to donate one set of prints to the Humanities Research Center, and one set to Amon Carter Museum for a traveling exhibit to be shown in Texas.

"My compliments go to the photographers," Wright said. "They really were only paid a pittance for the amount of work done. They saw it as personal contributions to the Sesquicentennial."

"I think we had an outstanding photographic team," Wright said.

"Texas Monthly Press had some good ideas and gave us a fine printing job on good paper," he said. "It was well worth my time in being able to work with the large number of people dedicated to the project."

Alaskans' lives envelope reader

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Lifestyles Editor

When Slim Randles worked at The Pampa News as managing editor, he'd never let a slow afternoon go to waste. I doubt there are few things he loved more than lighting up his pipe, leaning back in his squeaky old chair, and letting loose with all sorts of stories about his life in the Alaska Bush. Now he's taken many of these stories, wrapped them into the lives of fictional characters living in a fictional town and created a book, "The Long Dark, An Alaskan Winter's Tale," recently published by Alaska Northwest Publishing Company in Anchorage. Texans may not think they have too much in common with Alaskans, especially since there's a bit of rivalry between the two states. Texans don't much like to hear that anything is bigger than they are. But Ran-dles' book shows that Texans and Alaskans experience many of the same problems when it comes to adapting to the harshness of the country they chose to live in. And, if Randles' book is any indication, both Texans and Alaskans seem to have a uniquely humorous way of dealing with their troubles. That is why I believe that any Texan who loves to hear old stories of crusty personalities and gruff humour, would find just as much to enjoy in Randles' book as an Alaskan would. "The Long Dark" reflects Randles' personal style of writing and talking — laid-back, folksy, constantly spiced with humour and a touch of irony. The book seems slow at first, especially to those who are used to the racy adventure stories most popular right now, but as each page is turned, the reader becomes more engrossed in the lives of Randles' characters.

Let me tell you a little bit about the people who live in Kahiltna, a tiny village in rural Alaska Bush. There's Siwash Simmons, crusty old-timer; Buck Davis, the bush pilot upon whom most of the bush residents' lives depend for transportation, food, medical supplies, communication and help in emergencies; and Pete Kelly, who decides to tape record his dying so people will know what happens when they die.

Then there's Frank Granger, owner of Kahiltna's favorite gathering place with the unlikely name of "South Seas Roadhouse;" Harry Pete, "whose ancestors predated the white man in Kahiltna;" and Hemingway Jones, South Seas bartender and frustrated writer.

Although the Alaska Bush is famous for breaking women, some hardy female souls seem to thrive on the dangers, frustrations and loneliness of the country, such as Mary Davis, loving wife of Buck for more than a quarter of a century; Sherry Kelly, niece of Pete Kelly and heir to his estate — "this place, the traps and all;" and loveable Minnie Hunter who plays mother hen to all the Kahiltna residents. "The Long Dark" is a pleasant mixture of happenings, emotions, hilarity, irony and just enough cliff hangers, literally, to keep the reader interested. It rises up around a reader like the lazy smoke from a chimney, enveloping one into the lives of its characters until the reader becomes one of them.

My greatest complaint about this book is that it wasn't long enough. I hope Randles will compile another anthology of stories about the lives of these people who now seem like friends.

Randles, and his wife Jean Tierney, are now living in Albuquerque, N.M., where both work for the Albuquerque Journal, as well as doing some freelance writing. They are the parents of a daughter, Bridget Mary Tierney-Randles.

Dear Abby

Country's cold stereotype heats up Canadian's anger

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you in the hope that this might appear in your column and educate some of your readers about Canada. I live in New Liskeard, Ontario, and every time I go to the United States, I get fed up with some of the people who think there is snow falling up here 365 days a year—that Canadians live in igloos, travel by dogsled and dress like lumberjacks. I met a girl in Alabama who thought Canada was one of the states in the United States!

We have beautiful summer weather when the snow disappears and is replaced by temperatures in the 80s or 90s. I don't know anybody up here who has ever traveled by dogsled. We dress like most Americans, and live in houses just like you do.

Why are you people so ignorant of us? The farther south I travel, the more ignorant the people are. Canadian schoolchildren learn about your country in school. Why don't your schools teach your children about us?

ROBERT S.,
ANNOYED CANADIAN

DEAR ROBERT: Obviously the ignoramus you've met in the United States are confusing Alaska with Canada. We do teach our children about Canada—but apparently we're not doing a very good job of it. I hope this inspires some of our school-teachers to familiarize their students with our good neighbors to the north. They have long been our best friends.

DEAR ABBY: You told "The Woman He Pushed Aside" that unless he was hypnotized or kidnapped, he was a free agent, thus perpetuating the common myth that a person in a hypnotic trance can be made to do things against his basic nature. This is not true. If it were, a criminal could be "made" not to break the law, lazy people could be "made" to be productive, and I would be a lot richer.

HYPNOTHERAPIST

DEAR HYPNOTHERAPIST: Men and women are not by nature monogamous, they are polygamous, so a man who has vowed to be forever faithful to one woman can conceivably stray while under a hypnotic trance since it is human nature to do so.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old girl who has baby-sat since I was 14 to earn money for college. I am reliable and really like children. Some places where I baby-sit I am expected to clean up the kitchen, do the laundry and even the ironing. I am never told that I have to do these extras—the lady just says, "After the kids are asleep, maybe you could do this or that?"

I never get paid extra for doing these things, but I always end up doing them anyway. I rarely watch television; I either do my homework or read because I want to be able to hear the kids if they wake up and need me.

If you print this, maybe it will help other sitters who have the same problem. Thank you for a whole lot of sitters.

ANYTOWN, U.S.A.

DEAR ANYTOWN: Cleaning up the kitchen and doing the laundry are domestic duties that no sitter should be expected to perform without extra pay. Sitters, stand up for your rights! When you accept a job, it should be clearly spelled out what your duties will be.

Canyon museum opens Petroleum Wing

CANYON — The Feb. 23 opening of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum's Don D. Harrington Petroleum Wing represents a landmark event for the state's oldest and largest state-supported museum. This 75,000 square-foot edifice, dedicated to the independent oil and gas operators of the Panhandle, incorporates the latest in exhibit design and museum interpretation and doubles the museum's existing exhibit space.

Taking five years from planning to completion, the building and exhibits were entirely funded by grants totaling more than $6 million from the Don and Sybil Harrington Foundation of Amarillo.

The first floor, dedicated to paleontology and geology, contains materials collected by the museum since its beginning in 1921. "Paleontology: A Fossil Record of Life" is an exhibit revealing life forms in the Panhandle from the very oldest geological strata up through the most recent. Such creatures as the Permian Age dimetrodon, a 13-foot-long lizard, and skeletons of various large and small dinosaurs are presented. Ice Age mammals such as saber-toothed cats, ground sloths, and bison are also represented.

Artist's conception

"Panhandle Oil and Gas: The Early Years" occupies the entire second floor of the new exhibit wing and is devoted to the 1920s, 1930s, and 1940s, the "boom years" of oil and gas development in the region. Individual exhibits within the energy exhibit are devoted to the independent oil operators who brought the industry to life, the workers who drilled for oil, the process of turning natural gas into gasoline and other products, and the wholesale and retail oil business in the first half of the present century. In each section, artifacts, documents, photos, and state-of-the-art audio-visual technology brings the subject to life. At various points, the visitor is taken down into the ground to see how drilling tools work and is led through a life-size diorama of the "oil patch," complete with full-size rig, pump jack, pulling unit, thousand-barrel tanks, and flaring gas.

The Panhandle-Plains is Texas' oldest and largest state-supported museum, with more than 100,000 square feet of exhibits telling the story of Texas from early in geologic time through Indian occupation, ranching, town building, and 20th century industrialization. Annual museum attendance is 130,000. Museum hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and Saturday, 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday, with 6 p.m. closing June through August. Admission is free.

Have you considered renting books or films for genealogy research? Several companies offer this type service. Procedures for renting the items depend on the company.

The Stagecoach Library, 1840 S. Wolcott Ct., Denver, Colo., 80219, has printed a new catalog, for $5.50, with 3,000 books available for rental. After selecting a book to borrow, mail a deposit for the cost of the book. The company then sends you the book to use for two weeks. After that time, you either return the book or you may purchase it. When the book is returned, the company deducts the rental fee, postage and handling fees, and mails a refund.

The American Genealogical Lending Library, P.O. Box 244, Dept. H., Bountiful, Utah, 84010, has more than 60,000 microfilm for loan or purchase, but requires a membership fee of $30. The membership entitles you to a catalog and one year of ordering privileges. Some of the film available include complete Federal Census Records 1790-1910, early military records, ship passenger lists, some state censuses and slave schedules, some tax lists and an assortment of rare books and manuscripts. Purchase price for the film is $11 and the rental fee is $2.75. Write for more details and application forms.

If you use either of these services, please write and tell me your opinion. Would you recommend them to other researchers? I have not used either of them for the rentals, but have received positive comments about both of the companies.

Do you use another company? Send your suggestions to me, Gena Walls, 8825 S.W. Maverick Terrace No. 1009, Beaverton, Ore., 97005.

South Texas winter playground for Midwestern retirees

By JOEL WILLIAMS
San Antonio Express-News

BLUETOWN, Texas (AP) — Twenty-five motorcycles are parked together on U.S. Highway 281's final stretch, where the highway follows the outer edge of the United States just before the Rio Grande meets the sea.

A group of bikers has taken over this county park two miles from Mexico, filling the air with Midwestern English. Most of the gang members are at least 60 years old.

They are celebrating the annual rites of winter when 200,000 retired people pour into the Lower Rio Grande Valley between Mission and Brownsville. Midwesterners and Canadians claim the Valley as their winter territory much the same way New Yorkers and other Northeasterners head for Florida.

Recreational vehicles pop up like aluminum mushrooms between November and April. The occupants stay in densely populated parks with views of their neighbors' quarters on all sides, in a flat, often treeless countryside.

Yet they enjoy a huge peer group with plenty to do daily. It's childhood revisited year after year and the Valley is a playground where they spend millions of dollars doing whatever they want.

"We're just a bunch of teenagers," says one member of the motorcycle group that meets regularly at the Fun N Sun Resort, an RV park in San Benito. License plates on their bikes almost exclusively represent Midwestern states.

Nearby, a woman plays on a swing set with her husband pushing. New Yorkers Art and Bea Gluck defected from the Florida winter scene because they prefer the informality of Midwesterners to the more formal Northeasterners.

"You have to dress up too much in Florida," Bea says.

They plan to spend five months in Texas this year, and have started riding with the Fun N Sun group.

Locals used to give such tourists the somewhat negative label of "snowbirds," but now usually call them the "Winter Texans." The northerners' dollars have gained new respect since the peso devaluations of 1982 made U.S.

shopping trips prohibitive for most Mexican tourists.

Retirement plays an important role in the Valley's economy.

"The only thing that kept us from chaos since the peso devaluations has been the steady growth in the winter population," says Carl H. Rush, who has performed annual surveys on the Winter Texans for the past 10 years.

Most of them come to the Valley at first to escape cold winters, but soon start returning because they miss the fun they had the year before, Rush says.

"They're on a fling when they come down here," says Rush, director of the Bureau of Business and Economic Research at Pan American University in Edinburg.

Harry Cade, a retired Canadian truck driver from Oshawa, Ontario, says, "Some of them get a little out of hand as far as I'm concerned. They just go, go, go, go, go."

His wife, Norine, a former General Motors Corp. employee, agrees.

"A lot of these people are farm people who were always tied down," Norine says. "Now they have all this freedom and get involved in all the activities and dances and pancake breakfasts and everything, then they wonder why they have heart attacks."

The Cades live in the W & I Resort in Mission, the city with the highest concentration of Winter Texans. The city of 23,000 has 12,000 spaces for recreational vehicles and mobile homes.

The Valley Winter Texan survey for the 1984-85 season showed their median age was 65.1 years old for females and 67.3 for males in Cameron and Hidalgo counties, where they are concentrated. More than 80 percent reported previous annual visits for as many as 30 years.

Iowa and Minnesota were the most common home states for the visitors. Fifty-seven percent lived in RVs and spent a median total amount of $163 per week for things such as food, housing, utilities, gasoline, clothing and other needs.

More than 12 percent surveyed indicated they planned to buy property in the Valley, and 10 percent each year decide to stay in the area year-round.

Some resorts have gone bankrupt, however, when developers learned it takes more than real estate savvy to survive in an overbuilt market.

Along with their dollars, Winter Texans bring their culture into the mostly Hispanic Valley. Nearly all of the long-term tourists are Anglos who speak little Spanish.

"They're more Anglo than the Anglo people we have here now," Rush says.

Some have complained in the Pan Am survey that Spanish-speaking store clerks probably are talking about them. Another respondent faulted the Valley for having too many Mexican restaurants.

"Their habits are already set, based on their all-Anglo exposure up North," he adds.

But most get along with the local population and some work for local charities during the winter, in between leisure activities.

Canadians tend to stay the longest, because their winter lasts longest. Some parks cater to the Canadians and fly the maple leaf flag along with the U.S. and Texas flags. Places like the Pine to Palm Resort in Weslaco and the W & I Resort in Mission, are virtual Canadian enclaves.

A recurring theme at the Winter Texan resorts is Canadian and Midwestern pride in what they consider a more easy-going culture than that of the Northeasterners in Florida.

Al Stark, from Independence, Mo., said he and his wife rode their motorcycles to Florida this season, and stopped at a resort to pick up some brochures. "They told us, 'You can stay, but the motorcycles have to go.' So we came here."

After making debut with two broken arms, police chief is still into music

By LARRY ZELISKO
Abilene Reporter-News

MERKEL, Texas (AP) — Two broken arms didn't stop Ray Pack's debut as a drummer 20 years ago with Mel Way and the Wayward Playboys.

Pack, then 15, played with a cast on each arm. He was injured in a diving accident: he slipped off a motel roof while trying to dive into the swimming pool to collect a bet.

"I did win the bet," he says. "It was a $25 bet and cost me about $3,000."

He later successfully dived off the building into the pool.

After 20 years, two albums and nine singles, Pack is still making music, but his job as Merkel police chief comes first.

It's hard to be police chief and a musician, he says, explaining "People think I'm not a good police chief if I'm a picker too."

The police department has "cleared over 60 major burglaries and thefts in the last two years," he says.

Ray Pack and the Halfbreed Band were on the verge of stardom, when their manager, Audrey Williams, first wife of Hank Williams Sr., died, Pack says.

"When she died, it took the wind out of my sails. I had stars in my eyes then. I thought I was about to make it big."

Her death convinced Pack to seek another line of work. A couple of friends, Constable Vernon Wade and the late Henry Guenther, a Justice of the Peace, talked him into going into law enforcement.

He received his certification from Texas A&M University and worked with the Taylor County Sheriff's Department for a short time before being hired as a patrolman by the City of Merkel in 1978.

He became chief the following year.

The Halfbreed band still plays together six or eight times a year at special celebrations and private parties. Pack plays rhythm guitar or bass.

Pack and his brothers — Rabbit, Duke and Peewee — make up the band. Rabbit now plays with the Clay Mack Band out of Fort Worth, Peewee is with Peewee Pack, Kenny Slack and the Texas Hat Band, and Duke is a lineman with the Rural Electrification Administration.

The band has been invited to play in Australia, as a result of a performance at the World Brahman Conference in the Astrodome. Pack says the band will probably play the gig, but a date hasn't been confirmed.

Pack estimates the band put more than a million miles on its old Greyhound bus. The craziest thing to happen to the band was en route to a gig in Nevada, when the bus broke down near Langtry in West Texas.

It took Pack most of the night to hitchhike to Alpine to rent a big truck to continue the trip. When he got back to Langtry about 4 a.m., the band was playing at the local Gulf station for just about the entire town.

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

PAINT . . . Protects wood and metal

GOD'S WORD . . . Protects the soul

As paint protects wood and metal from decay, rust, and corrosion, so the promises found in God's word protect the soul from the evils of sin, anxiety and despair. Hear God's wonderful promises proclaimed from the pulpit in the church of your choice this Sunday. These promises so heard will accomplish wonderful things in your soul and heart, for God says of His Word, "It shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." Isaiah 55:11.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Church to show 'Prodigal Planet'

Prodigal Planet, a Mark IV production, will be shown at the Bible Baptist Church, Starkweather and Kingsmill, in the main auditorium at 7:30 p.m. today.

The film offers a futuristic look at a nuclear-charred world following the wholesale exchange of nuclear attack, said Pastor Dick McIntosh. The movie follows the lives of a few survivors left in that radioactive wilderness.

Prodigal Planet is the fourth in a series of prophecy films on the end times that also include Thief in the Night, A Distant Thunder and Image of the Beast.

The latest in the series builds on the quality and power of the earlier films. It is notable not only for the excellent performances and the compelling dramatic sweep of the story line but also for its Biblical accuracy and penetrating insights into scriptural truth, McIntosh said.

The story follows the desperate journey of David Michaels, a condemned fugitive from the worldwide dictatorship of the anti-Christ. He and others who refuse to wear the mark of the anti-Christ must run for their lives.

At the same time, underground believers are seeking a key computer component that will allow them to broadcast information and support to their resistance members around the world. It becomes Michaels' lot to try and deliver the component to an unknown destination in the deserts of the western United States.

"His search for clues unravels like an Agatha Christie thriller," McIntosh said.

Using outstanding technical production and cinematography, Prodigal Planet allows a glimpse of the devastation in the "days after."

Although the film is based on Biblical prophecies of destruction and tribulation found in the books of Revelation, Daniel and Ezekiel, the film offers a positive message of hope and reassurance amid the current climate of pessimism and despair about the future, the pastor said.

"Even a planet that has become prodigal is not beyond the reach of the love of God," he said. Prodigal Planet is a true story that is yet to happen.

McIntosh invited the public to attend the special showing.

St. Mark to host district conference

The Wichita and Amarillo District Conference of the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church will be held at St. Mark CME Church, 406 Elm, today and Saturday.

The conference will begin with a welcome program at 7:30 p.m. today. Holy Communion also will be served.

Business sessions will be held Saturday, with the conference concluding about 2 p.m., reported Pastor H. R. Johnson.

Homer L. Pacey will serve as presiding elder and Bishop C. D. Coleman will be the presiding prelate.

Religion Roundup

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Actor David Soul, the handsome blond of TV "Starsky and Hutch" fame, has plunged into battle in behalf of a controversial, church social-action ministry, and has endured some difficulties for it.

Soul recently was sentenced to two years probation and a $1,000 fine for disorderly conduct in refusing police orders to disperse from a protest meeting in a church yard.

His brother, the Rev. Daniel Solberg, earlier had been ousted as pastor of the Nativity Lutheran Church in Allison Park, Pa., for participating in a clergy-union coalition protesting regional unemployment and corporate policies.

A documentary film called "The Fighting Ministers," narrated by Soul, currently is being shown around the country in churches and elsewhere, chronicling the prolonged struggle over the ministry.

The 57-minute film, produced over a period of 18 months at a cost of about $200,000, with Soul footing most of the bill, was edited by Richard Chandler, editor of the movie, "Amadeus."

A Lutheran Church in America disciplinary panel has recommended removal of Solberg, Soul's brother, from the ordained ministry, following earlier defrocking of another Lutheran pastor, D. Douglas Roth, in the same conflict.

WASHINGTON (AP) — New regulations proposed by the Selective Service system would prohibit religious bodies during a draft from offering alternative service for conscientious objectors on the basis of beliefs, an interfaith agency says.

The proposed new rules "would tell religious bodies what they can or can't do," says the Rev. L. William Yolton.

THE HARVESTERS

Harvesters group to sing here

The Harvesters, contemporary gospel music group of Southwestern Assemblies of God College at Waxahachie, will be ministering at the Calvary Assembly of God, Crawford and Love, at 9:45 a.m. Sunday.

Rev. R. G. Tyler, pastor, said the Harvesters are one of the most outstanding and versatile groups in contemporary music today.

The group members have gathered from across the United States to blend their talents in music. Representing the college, they usually travel in two groups throughout the Southwest region.

"These young collegians feel that they are involved in a definite ministry of reaching young people for the Lord Jesus Christ," Rev. Tyler said.

The members are chosen not only for their musical ability but also because of their Christian character and academic ability, he explained. The Harvesters travel weekends and make two tours each year, one at spring break and one during the summer.

"This concert is something you will want to attend," the pastor said. "If you love good music, love to worship and love to become acquainted with young people acquainted with a vision and a purpose, you are invited to attend this event."

There is no admission charge.

New federal judge, Reagan share church-state viewpoint

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A prominent scholar in law, ethics and religion, John T. Noonan, is taking up a high federal judgeship that could bring some ideas shared with President Reagan into the clouded arena of church-state relationships.

The new post for Noonan possibly also could point toward eventual judicial review of abortion — which he sees as a human rights violation — particularly if he later happens to be moved on to the U. S. Supreme Court when a vacancy comes there.

Whatever the prospects, Noonan isn't talking about such matters now that he's been sworn in on the bench of the U.S. Court of Appeals, carefully choosing his words to guard its judicial impartiality.

"My present position precludes any advocacy," he said in an interview. But he said of his appointment that it's natural that Reagan, like presidents before him, wanted a man generally in accord with his policies.

"This has been true of almost any period," Noonan said, adding that most any president is "interested in knowing generally" his appointees. "Obviously if they disagree with his policies, he disagrees with the appointment."

As for the much-reported screening by the Reagan Administration to make sure that potential judges fit his philosophy, Noonan said:

"I don't believe there has been any more of it than under any president who doesn't want to see his policies swatted by people he appoints. I don't see any difference between Reagan and his predecessors about it."

Noonan, 59, joining the appeals court for the ninth circuit in the far west, based in San Francisco, is a classical scholar of Judeo-Christian history and thought as well as a widely respected authority on legal ethics.

For 19 years, he has taught law and legal ethics at the University of California Law School in Berkeley, Calif. He is author of seven books on subjects ranging from abortion and jurisprudence to a history of bribery.

His "A Private Choice: Abortion in America," registered a sharp and legally probing challenge to the 1973 Supreme Court decision allowing abortion, along with pressures and politics surrounding it.

Protestant conservatives, Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox leaders and Orthodox Jews have carried on a persistent campaign against the court decision ever since, and Reagan has spoken out often and strongly against it.

His administration, so far unsuccessfully, also has backed moves to allow prayer in public schools, aid to non-public schools, and has favored interpretations of church-state separation more accommodating to religion.

Noonan, a greying, blue-eyed man with a slight scholar's stoop, gently declined discussing specific issues but he said questions about relationship of church and state have become an "area of ferment."

Assessing the overall results of the modern string of court decisions about it, he said, "there has been a net gain for religious liberty" — something he called an "overriding value."

He said that a thesis was being advanced in a Williamsport, Pa., case, now before the Supreme Court, to treat religion "as a form of free speech." In the case, high school students seek a right to hold religious meetings.

Group aiding fundamentalist 'runaways'

By PAULA FROKE
Associated Press Writer

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — While growing numbers of people are entering fundamentalist churches, a recently formed organization has gone to work to help dissatisfied people get out.

"Fundamentalists Anonymous," the group is called, saying it is modeled after "Alcoholics Anonymous." While AA carefully shields identities, leaders of FA seek public notice.

"We have obviously struck a raw nerve out there," says Richard Yao, head of the group in one of numerous press releases from its office in New York, reporting more than 3,000 responses to his appearance on a TV show.

Most came from fundamentalists trying to leave their folds, but who were having serious difficulties doing it, he says, adding: "The word is out. Fundamentalism could be a serious mental health hazard to millions."

Strongly disputing the charge, the Rev. Edward Dobson, editor of the Fundamentalist Journal, calls it misleading to draw blanket conclusions from "isolated cases of abuse" in most any religious group.

Christian fundamentalism, a resurgent force on the current religious scene, stresses literalistic views of the Bible and doctrines, strict behavioral codes and sometimes avoidance of close associations with non-fundamentalists.

Yao's group accuses fundamentalism of "authoritarian tendencies" to control lives. He says ex-fundamentalists have "withdrawal symptoms" and need a "support group" to help them throw off the strict rules and develop a "celebration lifestyle."

"There is a way out and there is life after fundamentalism," says Yao, 32, an ex-fundamentalist himself, a New York lawyer and editor with a Yale theology degree, but no longer affiliated with any church institution.

He founded FA last year to help other ex-fundamentalists throw off their "fundamentalist mindset." He says it now has 28 chapters across the country, with 120 others forming, and has inquiries from more than 10,000 people.

"We want to be a support group for other people who have been hurt the way we have," says Sherry Burgdorf, who helped organize the Minnesota chapter.

"If a person leaves one of the so-called religious cults, usually their family and the other world welcomes them back," she says. "But when you leave fundamentalism you are leaving everyone — the way you spend your time and money, the music you listen to, your hopes for the future — every single aspect of your life."

Yao says the organization began with a classified advertisement in the Village Voice weekly newspaper in New York.

* ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — A Lutheran leader has advocated "altar and pulpit fellowship" — sharing Holy Communion and pulpit ministry — with major Presbyterian denominations and the Reformed Church in America.

Presiding Bishop David W. Preus of the American Lutheran Church told a pastors' meeting that Lutherans should "make a course correction in relation with other Christian churches," practicing "unity in reconciled diversity."

He said theological dialogues have shown sufficient basis for inter-communion with the Presbyterian and Reformed bodies, similar to the eucharistic sharing recently authorized between Lutherans and Episcopalians.

Preus also urged Lutherans to "pursue with patience" the goal of shared communion with Roman Catholics and to "explore the possibilities of sufficient agreement in the gospel and sacraments" for such ties with other churches.

WARREN HASSE

FROM THE NOTEPAD: "I think we're playing the Harvesters our second game of the season." Amarillo Sandie football Coach LARRY DIPPLE told me. "Nothing can be made official until after March 1, but I think that is the way things are being planned." PISD Athletic Director JOHN KENDALL agrees that is the hoped for scheduling, which is good news for PHS watchers...Former Pampa assistant cage coach (and head man at Spearman and Canyon) ROY KIEVAL, is head coach of the Class 5A Pearland Oilers in the Houston area, RANDY HOLLOWAY reports. Holloway, who spent 21 very successful seasons coaching Texas schoolboy basketball in the Houston, Clear Creek and Dallas areas, is wanting to get back into the side court ranks after several very good years financially in the business world. "I enjoy the money I'm making now," he told me this past weekend, "but I really miss coaching." Yeah, Randy, it is an addiction, no doubt...A couple of former Perryton Ranger athletic stars are doing well in business. BOB THORPE is with AMOCO in Tulsa, SCOTT DOORES in computers in Dallas...NFL officials who worked the Pro Bowl received $3,000 pay for their efforts, plus five days of all-expense Hawaiian living for themselves and one other person. "It was great," said back judge RON SPITLER. "For four days they told us to just relax and enjoy ourselves. It was a reward for good work during the season. Then," he told me, "when we got our minds at ease they came in Saturday and told us we'd have to work extra hard calling a good game because there had been several major officiating errors in the Super Bowl Game. It was tough to reverse your relaxed attitude..." "Bobby Knight will never, never leave Indiana, and you can write that in stone," BOB DONEWALD, one of his former assistants now in a Division I head coaching job, tells me. Donewald is doing a fantastic job at Illinois State, with 20-win seasons five of his last seven, and appearances in the NCAA post season the last three campaigns...VINCE LOMBARDI is given the credit (or criticized) for having coined the phrase "Winning isn't everything. It's the only thing." But did you know that those words were uttered by everybody's screen hero JOHN WAYNE in a 1953 movie titled Trouble Along the Way? Wayne was cast in the role of a down-and-out former pro grinder, hired to restore good fortune to a Catholic college football program. Truth is, what Lombardi really said was "Winning isn't everything; but trying to win is the only thing." Or at least that's the claim of Lombardi historians...Did you, too, remember that GENE STALLINGS, new head coach of the St. Louis football Cardinals, had a brother who served as manager of the Pampa Montgomery Ward Store? And doesn't BUDDY RYAN, new Philadelphia Eagle head coach, have a sister living in Pampa?...DALLAS COWBOYS are now taking applications for the famed cheerleader jobs. Call their office in Irving for info...Condolences to WELDON TRICE on the death of his brother Jack last week in Carlsbad, N.M. Birdog, as he was better known, served as athletic director and interim head football coach at PHS, halting a 15-game losing streak in his first game effort, with a 15-14 win over Amarillo High, thanks to a kickoff return by future all-American KEN HEBERT...I tried to hire the Texas Rangers' manager to come over to the house last Friday, so the wife would get a live, walking, talking VALENTINE, but BOBBY said he was leaving for Florida that night to open spring camp. "I'm excited about the future of the Rangers," he told me. "We've got some great players to build on in Oddibie McDowell, catcher Don Slaught and Pete O'Brien at first base." And the smiling, enthusiastic little field general is so excited about rookie outfielder Pete Incaviglia of Oklahoma State, who has never played a game of professional ball, that he is thinking of starting him. The Rangers got him from Montreal when the Expos couldn't get him signed. "This guy's something," said Valentine...I polled all the other member schools in a conference call last week, and the unanimous opinion was to add no new members at this time," said Missouri Valley Conference commissioner JIM HANEY to my querie about Northern Illinois U.'s request to join the MVC. "The NCAA membership is so unstable right now we feel it is better to wait a year or two before we consider it." Reports persist that Tulsa and Wichita State might move elsewhere, and some say Southern Illinois may eventually drop several or all athletic programs...Along those lines, BILL REEVES, AD at UT-Arlington, a Plainview native, says: "These are tough times for every Division I-AA school. I think what happened to us (dropping football) could be a forerunner for other programs. I don't know of any Division I-AA program in the country that is self-sufficient without some form of subsidy"...The Little Harvester, PHS publication, reports that vice-principal TIM POWERS was a fine high school basketball player at his Muncie, Ind. school, receiving a four-year scholarship to Wayland Baptist. And Home-making teacher LYNN MELTON played four seasons of varsity basketball at Slaton HS, and then accepted a four-year scholarship to Texas Tech...Incidentally, the Dallas Times Herald must have a country-western music fan in the sports department. Sunday's paper listed the Plainview church school as WAYLON Baptist. Didn't have a score on Willie.

No. 1 Tar Heels upset by Terrapins

By The Associated Press
After beating top-ranked North Carolina, Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell was in a reflective mood.

BLOCKING FOUL — Maryland's Len Bias (34) fouls North Carolina's Brad Daugherty while trying to block his shot. (AP Laserphoto)

The Terrapins, down 72-71 in overtime, used Len Bias' jump hook with 1:51 left and Keith Gatlin's four points in the final seven seconds for a 77-72 ACC victory over the Tar Heels Thursday night.

Now in his 17th year at Maryland, Driesell's teams have been invited to the NCAA playoffs or NIT 15 times. Those teams included the likes of Tom McMillen, Len Elmore, John Lucas, Buck Williams and Albert King.

But Driesell's success against North Carolina and Coach Dean Smith has been limited. "Thirty-five points more and we'd be 20-19 against North Carolina," Driesell pondered in the Maryland locker room after the victory. "That's since I've been coaching."

As Maryland coach, Driesell was 7-26 against Smith (prior to Thursday), while the remaining losses came while Driesell was at Davidson.

"Not too many teams beat the No. 1 team on their home court," said Driesell. "As a matter of fact, we've beaten a lot of number one teams in the country, but I don't believe we've ever beaten one on the road."

Elsewhere among Top 20 teams, No. 19 Michigan State upended seventh-ranked Michigan 74-59; No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas routed New Mexico State 92-75; No. 12 Bradley outlasted Drake 88-79; and No. 15 Indiana nipped Illinois 61-60.

With 2:58 left, Brad Daugherty scored on a dunk and the Tar Heels held their biggest lead of the second half at 68-59.

"We got behind ... and came back and went up," Driesell said. "The whole ball club played with poise."

Bias, who finished with 35 points, then went to work.

He canned a perimeter jumper, then stole the inbounds pass and jammed it in to get Maryland within 68-63 with 2:45 left. Jeff Baxter added a layup and the deficit was three.

Jeff Lebo hit the first of a one-and-one opportunity, but Bias came back with another jumper with 50 seconds remaining. Kenny Smith missed the front end of a one-and-one and Baxter hit a 22-footer from the right side to force overtime with the score tied at 69.

Joe Wolf scored all of North Carolina's points in overtime, and his layup on a pass from Steve Hale gave the Tar Heels their last lead at 72-71 with 2:14 left.

North Carolina saw its slim lead in the ACC regular-season race evaporate. The Tar Heels, 25-2 overall, fell to 9-2 in the ACC and dropped one-half game behind second-ranked Duke. Daugherty led the way with 23 points, while Wolf had 15 and Smith 12.

Gatlin added 10 points, as did Baxter and Gatlin. Maryland raised its record to 15-11, 4-7 in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Kings slip by Spurs

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Sacramento Kings guard Reggie Theus had what San Antonio coach Cotton Fitzsimmons wished his team had — rhythm.

Theus hit two free throws with five seconds left to secure a 107-105 NBA victory for the Kings Thursday night.

Theus hit six free throws in the last quarter to go 8-for-9 for the game. The Kings were 11-for-12 from the line in the fourth period while the Spurs converted on only 7-of-15 of their attempts. The Spurs missed seven of their last nine free throw opportunities.

"When you shoot free throws like a junior high team you can't expect to win," Fitzsimmons said. "We couldn't execute at the line. That's why we lost the game."

The Spurs shot 18-for-32 from the charity stripe for the night while Sacramento connected on 21-for-25 tries.

"I just had the rhythm tonight," Theus said of his free throw shooting. "It's a technical type of thing. You shouldn't miss free throws."

Fitzsimmons ruled out additional free throw shooting for the Spurs despite blaming a poor line performance for several Spurs losses.

A turnaround jumper from LaSalle Thompson with 2:18 left followed 47 seconds later by two free throws by Eddie Johnson gave the Kings a 103-99 advantage.

Swim teams compete in district meet today

The Pampa High swim team contends for district honors today and Saturday at the Y pool in Lubbock with the top six individuals in each event advancing to regionals.

"We've been tapering for the meet all of this week," said Pampa Coach Norma Young. "Our times have been good in practice. We just need to compete. We haven't swam since the Amarillo Invitational."

Young looks for Pampa to battle it out with Lubbock High, Amarillo High and Tascosa for the girls' division title.

"Whoever performs best during these two days will win it," said Young. "That's what it boils down to. I feel like we have a real good shot at it."

Other teams entered include Caprock, Palo Duro, Lubbock

Monterey and Lubbock Coronado.

Young looks for Renita Hill, 100 backstroke; Rachille Hill, 200 IM and 100 freestyle; Betsy Chambers, 500 freestyle; Lisa Turcotte, 50 freestyle, and Pauletta Morrow, 500 freestyle, to qualify for regionals. Wendy Wilson, Suzette Schneider, Morrow and Renita Hill have a good chance of making it in the 200 medley relay, Young said. In the boys' division, Brad Pope, 500 freestyle; John Edwards, 50 freestyle, and Pat Richards, 200 freestyle, could make it to regionals, Young said.

The top six in each event advance to the regional meet. District finals begin at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

Mustangs' pressure destroys Darrouzett, 68-30

By DAN MURRAY
Sports Writer

CANADIAN — Wheeler Mustangs coach Mike Newland isn't so nervous now.

Wheeler smothered Darrouzett with a full court press and galloped to a 68-30 bi-district playoff win before 800 fans here Thursday night. The Mustangs logged 16 steals with their press, forced at least that many more Longhorns' turnovers, and took Darrouzett's offense out of the game.

Wheeler will play the winner of tonight's Phillips-Hartley game next week in the area round of the Class 1A area round of the state boys basketball playoffs.

Newland said prior to Wheeler's win that the first playoffs game always makes him nervous, and he had reason to be with the Mustangs' 30 percent shooting in their two previous practice games.

But Rusty Ellisor hit Wheeler's first two shots of the game and the Mustangs went on to shoot 44 percent for the contest. Ten of Wheeler's 13 first half field goals came from 15 feet or more, and Newland's worries vanished.

"I'm glad to get that first one over with," Newland said. "I tell the kids, once you get that first one under your belt anything can happen."

Wheeler hit Darrouzett with a full court, trapping zone press, and destroyed the Longhorns' offense. The 'Horns had a height advantage on the Mustangs — their front line averaged 6-3 — but Wheeler had the edge in quickness and took big advantage of it.

"We saw 'em early in the year and it didn't look like they handled the press well," Newland said. "We were going to try 'em and see how they handled it."

Darrouzett didn't and the Longhorns' season is over at 15-12. Wheeler's now 16-4.

The Longhorns tried to defense Wheeler with a 2-1-2 zone, but the Mustangs simply bombed over it enroute to a 29-14 first half lead. Wiggins hit his first two and the Mustangs hit 10 of 13 field goals from 15 feet and beyond in the first 16 minutes. Four Mustangs ended up scoring in double figures.

"I was worried because of the way we'd been shooting, but things just started clicking right away," Newland said. "This was one of our best games offensively and defensively against the press."

Wiggins — who had 10 points, eight assists and four steals — swished from the right corner on his first shot of the game; Wheeler opened pressing and Darrouzett immediately turned the ball over. Wiggins hit from the corner again.

The Longhorns were pounding the offensive boards early, but soon it didn't matter. Darrouzett's David Imke briefly tied the score at 4-4, but Wheeler blew the game open soon enough.

Wiggins and sharpshooter Randall Hugg made it 8-4 before Darrouzett got a bucket from Brooks Robins, then Wheeler's press shut out the Longhorns for the rest of the quarter.

The score would've been much closer had Wheeler allowed Darrouzett's offense to get into its half-court inside game, but the Longhorns had trouble getting the ball up the floor consistently against the Mustangs' press.

Hugg hit from 16 feet, Wheeler forced a turnover and Robert Andis scored on a follow shot, then Bubba Smith drilled a set shot from the top of the key as the Mustangs took a 14-6 first quarter lead.

Robbie Miller kept Darrouzett close early in the second stanza, but Wheeler began to blow it open when a steal and layup by Dale Hazel put the Mustangs up 21-10. Wiggins, Ellisor and Hugg hit from the left and right corners over the remainder of the quarter and Wheeler took a 29-14 halftime lead.

The Mustangs' press crippled Darrouzett's offense in the first half, and in the third quarter Wheeler put the Longhorns out of their misery.

Darrouzett scored just five points in the period, and after a Miller field goal two minutes into the quarter the 'Horns didn't score again until Imke hit two free throws with 10 seconds left. By then, Wheeler led 43-19.

Darrouzett tried a press of it's own in the third quarter but, after a Hugg jumper, the first thing Wheeler did was pass through it and get an easy layup by Smith.

Smith scored six straight points for the Mustangs, following the layup with consecutive tip-ins of missed layups following Wheeler steals. Hugg and Andis later made it 43-17 before the 'Horns Imke scored at the end of the quarter.

With the score at 45-22 early in the fourth, Wheeler began an 18-2 run that enabled Newland to clear his bench. Andis, Wiggins and Hazel scored six points each in the run, which Wheeler finished off with fours straight steals and layups or tip-ins.

Hugg led the Mustangs with 15 points, while Andis added 11 points and 11 rebounds. Smith had 12 points and six boards, while Hazel had nine points and seven rebounds. Ellisor scored eight for the Mustangs.

Darrouzett got 17 points from Miller, five from Robert Duke and no more than three from anyone else.

The Longhorns also finished with a good idea of what full court pressure defense can do to a tall team's offense. You might say Wheeler made an im'press'ion.

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Robin Blake, frustrated in his pursuit of the world lightweight championship, has decided to move up one division to continue boxing as a junior welterweight, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Thursday.

Blake, 23, had contemplated retirement after suffering a unanimous 10-round loss against former Olympic gold medalist Medrick Taylor on Feb. 2 in Lake Charles, La.

Blake's overall record is 27-4 with 18 knockouts.

Ward gets Rangers biggest salary ever

DALLAS (AP) — While the Texas Rangers won for a second time the arbitration of outfielder Gary Ward's salary, Ward ended up with a consolation prize — the highest base salary in the team's history.

Federal arbitrator Neil Gunderman ruled in the American League team's favor Thursday in Chicago, meaning Ward will play for $865,000 a year rather than the $930,000 he hoped to draw. The new salary is a $190,000 base salary increase over the settlement Ward received after filing for arbitration last year.

Israelis spare no effort to search for missing soldiers

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — To Israelis, it is only natural that their army is conducting door-to-door searches through dozens of southern Lebanese villages to look for just two captured soldiers.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres told a conference of lawyers here Thursday there was probably no other army in the world that would go to such lengths for only two missing men.

"I'm not sure that any normal army would do the same," he said. "I regard this effort to check out every place, every scrap of information in the hope of discovering the whereabouts of two young men, as...one which expresses our attitude towards the value of human life and dignity."

The massive search operation the Israelis have carried out this week in southern Lebanon, backed by helicopter gunships and tanks, also demonstrates the power they can muster against any real or perceived threats from the territory they vacated last year after a three-year occupation.

Last June, when Israel withdrew the bulk of its forces from southern Lebanon, Peres, Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin and other senior leaders warned that they would not hesitate to return in force if the guerrillas attacked Israelis.

The two Israelis captured Monday were ambushed about four miles north of the border in what Israel calls its "security zone." As many as 1,000 Israeli soldiers remained in this narrow buffer strip after the withdrawal.

An anonymous telephone caller told a Beirut newspaper that the fundamentalist Shiite Moslems who seized the soldiers had killed one of them Wednesday night because the Israelis ignored a demand to withdraw.

He said a photograph of the victim would be released Thursday, but it had not turned up by nightfall, and there was no other proof of the claim.

Israeli newspapers reflected the consensus in this nation of 4.2 million for an all-out effort to find the soldiers. But such a public display of sensitivity is an Achilles heel on which Israel's enemies can play.

"Every beginning terrorist in the Mideast today knows how sensitive Israel is to the fate of the captives, and what pressure families of captives can put on the government," military affairs writer Ron Ben-Ishai said in the daily Yediot Ahronot.

Lebanese guerrillas have used acts of terror to try and influence Israel's policy in southern Lebanon since last June 14, when Shiite extremists hijacked an American TWA airliner and demanded the release of Shiites imprisoned in Israel.

On Sept. 10, 1985, Israel freed the last of the more than 1,100 mostly Shiite inmates from northern Israel. Although their release had been demanded by the hijackers, Israel denied any concession had been made to the terrorists' demands.

About a dozen Lebanese Jews also have been kidnapped in an effort to force Israel to abandon the buffer zone that is patrolled by Israeli soldiers and a pro-Israeli militia. Three of the Lebanese Jews have been killed.

Israel also has engaged in lopsided prisoner exchanges with Palestinian groups in the Lebanon war, a decision that broke precedent and policy by dealing with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Six soldiers held by Yasser Arafat's Fatah faction were exchanged for 4,000 Palestinian and Lebanese prisoners held by Israel on Nov. 23, 1983. Three soldiers held by Ahmed Jibril's pro-Syrian PLO faction were exchanged May 20, 1985, for 1,150 mostly Palestinian prisoners held in Israeli jails.

Most Israeli soldiers going into Lebanon this week appeared to support their mission, but many grumbled about the fact they were returning to a country they had learned to hate during three years of occupation.

But Capt. Yaakov, who would not give his last name in keeping with army regulations, told a reporter after leading a search party into Lebanon that "that's what is so beautiful about our army — they send in thousands for a small chance that (the two soldiers) may be found."

THE BLACK MAGIC OF WHITE OIL

1 Illusion vs. Reality

Some magicians use smoke and mirrors to fool you. In the Panhandle, some people are trying to create the illusion that their wells are oil wells, not gas wells. Their trick is to chill the gas with refrigeration units until it produces some colorless liquid which they call "white oil." Because the wells produce these liquids, the people who operate them claim they're oil wells. But that's an illusion. And it's illegal. In reality, their objective is to produce large quantities of natural gas. Natural gas that they have no legal right to produce. Natural gas that they produce in total disregard of the Texas conservation laws that are designed to protect and prolong the life of the Panhandle Field.

2 The Tricky Disguise

Here are two wells in the Panhandle Field — one legitimate, the other a phony. The well on the left belongs to a gas lease operator. It's legal. The well on the right is also a gas well but it's disguised as an oil well. It's illegal. Texas law is clear. An oil well can only be classified as an oil well if it produces liquids naturally — without any artificial processing. The Texas Railroad Commission upheld that law last year after seven weeks of exhaustive hearings. This meant that white oil operators couldn't use refrigeration units in order to get their wells classified as oil wells. The trick was up. The white oil wells were shut down. And none too soon.

3 Presto! One Well Becomes 64

Want to make a cold drink disappear fast? Use 64 straws. That's the heart of the white oil problem. Under state conservation laws, many more oil wells are allowed on a section of land than gas wells — 64 times as many, in fact. Gas wells are spaced farther apart because they can draw production from a much larger area than can oil wells. This helps prolong the life of the field and ensure the maximum amount of gas is produced over the long term. With this sort of prudent, orderly production, the Panhandle Field should be producing significant quantities of natural gas beyond the year 2000. However, under the white oil scheme — with 64 gas wells being drilled where only one is currently allowed — the Panhandle Field could be drained in only 3 to 5 years.

Some people say they're surprised by all the fuss over white oil activity. So what if a few people make money at the expense of others — or if the Panhandle Field gets drained sooner than it should? Does it matter? It does if you live in the Panhandle. The Panhandle Field is fundamental to this region's economy. Production from the field, the related pipelines, the processing plants, refineries and the countless service industries provide thousands of jobs, hundreds of millions of dollars in payroll, and millions of dollars in taxes. Premature depletion of the Panhandle Field would jeopardize all this. Some people want to see white oil activity start up again. Those of us with a long-term interest in this region's economy and its people can't allow that to happen.
