Israeli border policement briefly detain a Palestinian and prevent him from entering the east Jerusalem village of Sur Bahir after Israeli police killed a Hamas activist in a shoot-out Friday.

Israeli unrest

JERUSALEM — Israeli troops shot to death a Palestinian guerrilla leader Friday, a day after the killing of another rebel commander touched off the worst rioting in the occupied lands since Israel and the PLO made peace. The escalating violence between Palestinians and Israelis threatens to hold up Israel's withdrawal from the territories, a major component of the Sept. 13 peace accord./6A

Starving

CHICAGO — Five-year-old Clifford Triplett's favorite thing to do when he visited his grandmother was eat — chicken, spaghetti, just about anything. On Friday the little boy was in a hospital suffering from malnutrition and dehydration that left him weighing just 18 pounds. He also was burned and bruised. His mother and her boyfriend were in jail, charged with aggravated battery to a child./17A

Diplomat kidnapped

SAN'A, Yemen — An American diplomat was kidnapped by Yemeni tribesmen and government officials were negotiating Friday for his release. The abduction of Haynes Mahoney was the first known kidnapping of a diplomat in this faction-ridden nation south of Saudi Arabia./8A

Russians get first taste of televised political campaigns

By Celestine Bohlen
N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — From slick ads splicing pop stars and small children with pictures of a smiling President Boris Yeltsin, to a mini-documentary accusing the government of robbery and incipient Stalinism, Russians are getting their first taste of the rough, inchoate campaigning that will dominate the airwaves each night until the eve of parliamentary elections on Dec. 12.

The campaign kicked off formally on Nov. 8, but for most voters it began Monday evening with chunks of free air time distributed to each political party on two state-owned television channels.

Most of the 13 parties competing in the elections are still struggling to establish their identity, and many of them have split their allotted hour to maximize the exposure all of them desperately need.

What they do with their prime air time is supposed to be their business, although that, too, came under question this week as Yeltsin warned his opposition to lay off any criticism of his proposed constitution, which is also on the ballot next month.

The hardest-hitting campaign spots have been indirectly aimed at Yeltsin, although he is not running in these elections and has not backed any one party. Night after night, candidates from opposition parties blame the current government for all of Russia's ills — rising crime and poverty, economic mismanagement and corruption and the storming of the Russian Parliament in early October.

The filmmaker Stanislav Govorukhin used the free air time allotted to the Democratic Party of Russia to level a bitter, sarcastic attack not only on what he calls crimes committed by Yeltsin, but on the President's proposed constitution, which Govorukhin said would make him more powerful than Russia's last czar.

Those and other accusations prompted Yeltsin to warn opposition members today at a meeting that they could lose their air time if they used it to criticize the proposed constitution.

Shoppers crowd Midland Park Mall Friday to kick off Christmas shopping season.

Shoppers jam stores, malls for Christmas

■ Many shopped less traditional outlets like TV networks, computer services, mail-order catalogues.

Associated Press

The lines formed early and stores stayed crowded Friday, the traditional start of the Christmas shopping season, giving retailers confidence for better sales and profits.

As in recent years, however, shoppers kept an eye on their budgets, carrying lists and plotting strategies for making the most of the season.

"Today, I'm buying the things I know will sell fast and might be gone a few weeks from now," said Pat Yeager, who was shopping in Buffalo, N.Y. "I can come back later for the routine things, turtlenecks, pajamas, and maybe get a better price."

Mona Taylor of Dallas was hunting for gifts for her two young children while visiting relatives in Little Rock, Ark.

"We're going to try and spend less, maybe, or about the same, and try to get more educational, creative things rather than spend money on things they look at for an hour," she said.

Taylor scoffed at movie-inspired toys that thrill the younger set.

Local sales surge

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Many Midland businesses experienced a strong upsurge in sales Friday, traditionally the busiest shopping day of the Christmas season.

Several other area retailers noted increases in customer traffic, even if sales had not yet increased. Statistically, the weekend following Thanksgiving is the busiest of the year in terms of overall retail sales.

"They (customers) are still kind of shopping . . . there is more traffic than usual," said Bill Juran, owner of the House of Arts and Crafts on W. Wadley. Customer traffic at the Kids Only Toy Store at 3001 W. Loop 250 has been exceptionally high. Actual sales at the store, however, have not yet risen as sharply, according to employees there.

Other area merchants have experienced dramatic increases in sales. "It's been very, very favorable. We've had heavy traffic, for us, all day," said Milt Thornton, proprietor of Midland Sound at 1024 Andrews Highway.

Man travels across ocean for chance at restored vision

Patient's companion has high hopes for homeland

ODESSA — Andrey Scherbakov has high hopes for his homeland of Kazakhstan — especially since communism has crumbled in what was the Soviet Union.

Scherbakov is in the Midland-Odessa area accompanying his friend, Ulan Abmagilov, while he receives surgical procedures not available at home.

The two men live in Almaty which is the capital of Kazakhstan, a country south of Russia and north of China.

Scherbakov said Kazakhstan is peaceful, in contrast to many of its former comrades — such as Bosnia and Serbia — which were all republics of the former Soviet Union.

"All around us there is armed fighting," Scherba-

ODESSA — Ulan Abmagilov never celebrated Thanksgiving before he arrived in Midland earlier this week. But, he may have plenty of reasons to be thankful now.

Abmagilov is a 30-year-old businessman from Almaty, Kazakhstan — which was one of the republics that made up the former Soviet Union. The country is located between Russia and China on the Asian continent.

He made the trek to the Midland-Odessa area to receive eye surgery that is not available in his home country.

On Friday at Medical Center Hospital in Odessa, Dr. Harshad G. Shah, a Midland ophthalmologist, performed two procedures on Abmagilov — vitrectomy and cataract surgery — in an effort to restore some vision in his left eye.

Shah met Abmagilov during a mission in Kazakhstan a few months ago. Shah participates in Orbis

Midland woman dies in early-morning shooting; officials charge 20-year-old

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

A Midland woman was killed and another local woman jailed following an early-morning shooting incident near the Zodiac Club in the city's south section.

Angela Perkins, 21, was pronounced dead by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine at Midland Memorial Hospital at 1:57 a.m. Friday. Ms. Perkins suffered one gun-shot wound to the chest, according to Midland Police Department reports.

Sherry Henderson, 20, has been arrested in conjunction with the homicide, according to police reports. She was arrested at the Kent Kwik Convenience Store at 1500 W. Front Street after a passing patrolman spotted her vehicle.

The small-caliber handgun, thought to have been used in the killing, has not been found, said Sgt. David Garcia, community relations officer with MPD.

Future uncertain for drunken driving class

AUSTIN (AP) — State regulators have approved a 5 percent auto insurance discount for Texas drivers who take a drunken driving awareness course. But some wonder if such a class ever will be widely used or even available.

"I just think there will be no demand for this new course at all," said Phil Ward, president of USA Training Co, which teaches a defensive driving course in Texas. If demand is meager, the economic incentive for private, for-profit operators to teach the course would be negligible.

The discount approved by the State Board of Insurance in September is effective Wednesday. But the curriculum for the six-hour course won't be crafted until after the first of the year, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

"We are still in the process of developing the curriculum ... The implementation date was pretty unreasonable," said Robby Duffield, director of offender education services for the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse.

Instructors for the current eight-hour defensive driving course, which offers a 10 percent insurance discount, say the main incentive people have in taking that course is not the discount. It is to get traffic tickets dismissed.

Ward said 13 million traffic tickets are written a year in Texas, and about 8 percent of those who get ticketed take defensive driving.

"With defensive driving, you get a lot of bang for your buck, yet only 8 percent take defensive driving," he said.

Ward said no statistics are available to determine how many people take defensive driving classes just for the 10 percent insurance discount. But at a recent comedy defensive driving school a teacher polled her class of 30; just one was there for the discount alone.

"Every class has one geek," the instructor quipped.

Even if the course isn't offered broadly to the public, it could be taught to special groups. For example, one nonprofit group is interested in teaching the course to high school students.

The 5 percent discount for the drunken driving awareness course would be in addition to the defensive-driving discount. Anyone convicted of driving while intoxicated in the past seven years, or minors convicted of possession of drugs or alcohol, would not be eligible.

Public Insurance Counsel Amy Johnson, the state consumer advocate, said her office originally wanted a 10 percent discount for the new class.

Jury sentences former cult man in two killings

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who once belonged to a radical polygamist cult has been sentenced to five years in federal prison for killing a Houston man and his young daughter as revenge for leaving the sect.

Richard LeBaron pleaded guilty in October to charges of murder-for-hire and conspiracy to tamper with a federal witness and has cooperated fully with federal authorities.

Now 22, LeBaron was 17 when he shot Duane Chynoweth, and his 8-year-old daughter, Jennifer, at point-blank range outside a vacant Houston home on July 27, 1988.

At almost the same time, Chynoweth's brother, Mark, was gunned down at another site in Houston, and Ed Marston, was gunned down in a Dallas suburb.

The three men had abandoned the Church of the Lamb of God, a polygamist cult that believed in killing those who disavowed its teachings.

In May, William Heber LeBaron, Patricia LeBaron, and Douglas Lee Barlow, were sentenced to life in federal prison without parole for their part in the slayings.

Richard, William and Patricia were among more than 50 children of the late Ervil LeBaron, who founded the Church of the Lamb of God. Barlow was a stepson.

Another former cult member, Cynthia LeBaron, was granted immunity and testified against her half-siblings in that trial. Two other cult members have been indicted in the slayings, but they are believed to be in Mexico.

Prosecutors said the men were killed because they left the sect, while the girl was killed because she was a witness.

In sentencing Richard LeBaron on Wednesday, Lake took into account the fact that he had been virtually enslaved and brainwashed by the cult since he was a child.

Lake said Richard LeBaron was instrumental in "putting and end to this reign of terror" by helping other family members separate themselves from the remnants of the cult.

"I want to be a good person," Richard LeBaron told the judge. "I know I can be. I just need a chance to prove it."

When Lake asked him what he was thinking when he shot the two, Richard LeBaron said, "I was scared to death. At the time I just did what I was told."

Richard LeBaron also was ordered to pay $46,000 in restitution. He is expected to enter the federal witness protection program.

Boy, 7, starts fire, kills baby, injures woman

FORT WORTH (AP) — A 7-year-old child started the fire that killed a 7-week-old boy and critically injured his godmother, officials said Friday.

Fire officials say the 7-year-old boy, whose name was not released, was playing with a lighter on a sofa and started the fire around 9 p.m. Thursday.

Firefighters found his godmother Mattie Walker, 42, and her other godchild Emmitt Ward in a second-floor apartment closet, where they apparently had taken refuge from the fire.

"It's really a shame because there was a window right by them, but for some reason they went into the closet," said fire Battalion Chief Richard Ward.

Ms. Walker was babysitting her two godchildren, who were not related, when the fire broke out. She suffered smoke inhalation and was in critical condition Friday at John Peter Smith Hospital.

The baby died on arrival at Cook-Fort Worth Children's Medical Center.

Fire Department spokesman Kent Worley said the 7-year-old was in the living room and the others were in another room when the fire started.

HOME: Patient's companion has high hopes for his country kov said in his best English. His companion speaks no English, which is why Scherbakov came to the states with him.

Scherbakov said as communism continues its descent, everything in what was the Soviet Union is changing.

"I was born in one country and now I live in another," he said. "But, of course now it is better."

He said the Kazakhstan government issued new money just two weeks ago. Along with the issuance of the new money, Scherbakov said inflation is creeping up.

But, he is quick to add, "it is the first step to real independence. We have a new parliament, a new president — we have hope."

Even as he sings the praises of his government, Abmagilov chuckles from his hospital bed.

"He doesn't like our president or our parliament. But this is his opinion," Scherbakov said.

Scherbakov commented on the friendliness of Texans and the warm smiles he sees everywhere.

"There, people are unsure of their economics. They are fighting for life, unsure of where their food will come from. It is a very hard life. Not a lot of people are smiling," he explained.

"Here, a lot of people are smiling. We hope to change our life," Scherbakov said with a weak smile.

However, technology is behind the times in Kazakhstan. Medical procedures are limited and equipment is out of date.

Scherbakov said his brother, who works as a pilot, was injured while working on a plane. Part of his brother's scalp was severed in an accident. Two months and three operations later he is not much better and the family cannot afford to send him to a western country for treatment.

In a universal language, Scherbakov shrugged indicating he didn't know what would happen to his brother.

He gave an example of just one way medical equipment is behind by pointing to the the hospital bed Abmagilov was lying in.

"This. We don't have anything like this there," he said indicating the way the bed contorts to help make the patient more comfortable.

He also commented on the pleasant Texas weather.

Scherbakov said what Midlanders are considering extremely cold weather is quite comfortable to him.

Kazakhstan gets hot in the summer with temperatures in the upper 90s and extremely cold in the winters with temperatures dipping down to 30 degrees below zero Fahrenheit.

Another plus for the foreign men has been music. Scherbakov said he has bought a number of compact discs that are difficult to come by back home. He said his Louis Armstrong acquisitions have been the biggest coups for him.

But, Scherbakov is anxious to return home to his family and his country. Both he and Abmagilov have called their wives every day since they arrived in the states.

Each day could bring another change in their home country, even if very minor.

CROWD: Shoppers jam stores in search of gifts

(From 1A)

"As for all of the Aladdin and dinosaur crap, this is just a fad. It will wear off," she said.

Friday was also busy at catalog order centers and less traditional outlets like TV shopping networks and computer services.

"This is our busiest weekend for shopping," said Carol Wallace, a spokeswoman for Prodigy Services Co., one of the largest on-line services for personal computer owners.

Prodigy customers could browse and order from catalogs offered by J.C. Penney, Lands' End, Spiegel and dozens of specialty shops.

Orders were heavier than usual on the Home Shopping Network, spokeswoman Louise Cleary said.

L.L. Bean, the popular Maine-based outdoor gear company, is among a dozen mail-order houses participating in an advertising experiment with Apple computers.

Advertisements for each company are included on CD-ROMs that will be distributed free next month to about 30,000 people.

CD-ROMs are compact disks used to store data for personal computers. Those who place orders using the disks will do so through a special telephone line so Bean can "see if our customers have a tendency for it," spokeswoman Catharine Hartnett said.

Retail industry analysts have become more upbeat lately in their forecasts for holiday sales because the economy shows signs of improving.

Despite the budget-conscious comments from many shoppers Friday, retailers were generally excited about the season's prospects.

"I think the best holiday shopping season since I've been in the business was 1983 and this year will top that kind of year," said Bob Greiner, executive vice president at Belk Simpson Co., a department store chain based in Greenville, S.C.

Wintry weather slowed traditional shopping in parts of the Midwest and West. The upper Midwest got two feet of snow Thursday while freezing rain caused trouble further south. Record low temperatures were set in many states.

Crowds were big, however, in some hard-hit areas including Chicago, Dallas and Kansas City.

"Bad weather sometimes works in your favor," said Jimmy Canant, assistant manager at Wal-Mart in McAlester, Okla., where two inches of sleet had fallen. "We're such a big building now that you can stay several hours and do all your shopping."

Stores motivated shoppers with discounts, services such as personal shoppers and baby-sitting, and special hours reserved only for older adults and people with disabilities.

Many stores had giveaways to tempt the first customers Friday morning.

Jones Store Co., a department store in Kansas City, gave away cellular telephones. People who spent $250 at Tyson's Corner Mall in the Virginia suburbs of Washington, D.C., were given a brass and pewter bell with a cherub on top.

SHOP: Local sales surge for Christmas

(From 1A)

"Wish we could do this every day of the year," Thornton said.

"It's been more than average. Definitely more than average," said an employee with Permian House of Music on Oak Ridge Square. Business also increased at Satellite City on E. Hwy. 80. "As a matter of fact, it's been pretty good," an employee said.

Not all retailers experience a jump with the Christmas season approaching. Sam Jones of Sam Jones Pianos Organs Clocks said piano sales are more consistent and "not affected as much" by the season.

Of all retailers contacted Friday, none reported a poor day for sales. Some were experiencing average customer volume, or only slightly higher than average.

Sales at the Sears store in the Midland Park Mall have been exceptional, since Thanksgiving. "We're having a very, very good day," an employee said.

This year looks good for the area's retail market, according to managers of Dillard's and Sears. Sales at Sears are expected to be much higher than for the same day last year, said John Marshall of the Midland Sears store. By 4:15 p.m., sales at this store had matched those of the entire Friday after Thanksgiving last year, Marshall said.

Customer traffic at the Midland Park Mall was reportedly very heavy Friday. "Yeah, you can't park very close," Marshall said.

"We're expecting a very good season," said Jeff Menn of the Dillard's regional office in Dallas. Menn declined to say how much retail sales usually increase during the Christmas season.

WEATHER WATCH

Today to be clear, warmer

Staff Report

The icy chill that froze up much of West Texas and set a new low temperature for Nov. 26 won't linger so low today.

About an hour before dawn on Friday, the temperature dropped to 13 degrees, which was right for freezing up ponds, tanks, troughs and busting unprotected water pipes and car radiators.

The low cold set a record by outdoing the 18 degrees recorded on Nov. 26, 1938, in Midland, according to the weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

The all-time record low temperature in Midland was a minus 11 degrees recorded on Feb. 2, 1985.

For today, the weatherman is calling for clear skies and warmer daytime and night-time temperatures.

The high today is to be near 60 degrees; Friday's peak temperature was 48 degrees.

Winds today are to be westerly at 10 to 15 mph.

Tonight's low temperature is to be in the upper 20s.

The high temperature on Sunday under clear skies is to be near 70 degrees.

The record high temperature for Nov. 26 is 83 degrees in 1990. The record for temperature for Nov. 27 is 16 degrees in 1938.

NATION

Rain and snow extended across the middle of the nation Friday, wind buffeted the West and the East Coast, and record lows stretched from Idaho into Texas.

An upper level weather system produced light snow from the northern high Plains to the western Great Lakes, the National Weather Service said.

Rain and snow fell over most of northeast Wisconsin during the morning, making highways hazardous. Downed power lines in Juneau County knocked out service to 2,000 homes, Oakdale Electric Cooperative line supervisor Dan Hoag said. "For every line we put on, two drop out," he said.

The mass of cold air responsible for this week's record cold on the Plains was pushing eastward, forming a cold front stretching from the Great Lakes to the lower Mississippi Valley.

Along that front, light rain and drizzle extended from Indiana to Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia during the afternoon. And a mixture of snow and ice coated the ground from central Texas to west-central Illinois, contributing to scores of traffic accidents.

In central Texas, freezing rain and drizzle coated bridges and overpasses in Austin during the night, contributing to dozens of accidents. At Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, American Airlines canceled all outgoing flights from 6 p.m. Thursday to 10:30 a.m. Friday, spokeswoman Marion DeSisto said.

Light rain also was reported over the Florida Peninsula and coastal Texas.

High pressure centered over Idaho produced high wind over parts of the West. The wind fanned brush fires in Southern California and fire crews were placed on alert Friday.

Strong wind also plagued the eastern slopes of the northern and central Rockies, whipping up blowing snow in places.

Strong northeasterly wind associated with high pressure centered over New England buffeted much of the southern Atlantic Coast. Tides 10 to 15 feet higher than normal were reported along the coast of North Carolina.

The arctic air sitting over the central part of the nation pushed freezing temperatures as far south as the coast of Texas during the morning and subzero readings were reported as far as the southern Rockies.

Morning lows in the teens and single digits extended through the Rockies into Minnesota, Iowa and northern Missouri. Lows in the teens and single digits also were common in the Northeast.

Record lows Friday, according to the weather service, included 16 at Abilene, Texas; 20 at Bridgeport, Conn.; 23 at Dallas-Fort Worth; 6 at Lewiston, Idaho; 13 at Midland, Texas; 11 below zero at Missoula, Mont.; 14 below at Pocatello, Idaho; 19 at San Angelo, Texas; 8 below at Sioux City, Iowa; and 15 at Wichita Falls, Texas.

SIGHT: Man travels to U.S. for eye surgery

(From 1A)

International, which is an international non-profit organization that is involved in fighting blindness.

The doctors operate on a DC-8 airplane, which is an airborne ophthalmological teaching hospital that travels to developing nations. In addition to providing treatment, surgerical services and medication, the participating doctors teach procedures to other doctors so they can carry on the work.

During a recent trip Abmagilov sought help for the rapidly increasing blindness in his left eye. Because of a lack of equipment in his homeland, Abmagilov could not receive the proper care there. Shah offered to perform the surgery for free if Abmagilov could find a way to the United States.

Through the help of friends, Abmagilov was able to get airfare to the U.S. Because he speaks no English, a friend — Andrey Scherbakov — came along to serve as a translator and source of support.

Both men left their wives and children at home to seek a chance at restored vision for Abmagilov. Not only did they travel across the globe, but their travels were sluggish at times because of an airline attendants' strike.

The men flew from Amalty to Moscow then on to Amsterdam in the Netherlands; then to Dallas and on to Midland-Odessa. They have been staying with Shah and his family.

"I offered him my services if he came here . . . he is staying with me right now so he doesn't have to spend any money on living expenses. I am giving him a Thanksgiving gift," Shah said.

Not only is the doctor housing and feeding the men, he is also providing Abmagilov's surgery for free and paying for the hospital stay.

Scherbakov said Abmagilov was born with vision and lost his sight in his right eye in an accident. Later his left eye began to lose vision until he became almost completely blind in 1986. He has the ability to see shadows through the left eye.

In broken English, Scherbakov said "imagine what it would be like to lose your vision . . . but he believes in Mr. Dr. Shah. Now he has some hope some vision will be restored."

"This would be a new style of life for him," Scherbakov said about the possibility of his friend regaining the sight in his left eye. The owner of a private import-export firm, Abmagilov depends upon sighted employees to run the business.

Scherbakov said Shah told his friend, "There is no magic in this world, but we have some hope."

Shah said Abmagilov suffered from a cataract and a detatched retina in his left eye. The surgery he performed Friday included removing the cataract as well as scar tissue from the left eye.

"That should help release all the traction on the retina and prevent it from detaching again," Shah said. "I am hoping with all this long journey he has endured we will get him some good results. He won't have to be led around the rest of his life like he is now."

Immediately following the surgery, Shah said the procedure went well but there was a lot of scar tissue that couldn't be removed. An implant was made to improve his chances for some vision. He will check Abmagilov again today to see what improvements have been made.

Shah said the surgery recovery will take about 10 days but the eye will take about four to five weeks to heal before getting his permanent glasses.

The doctor said Abmagilov will also need a special laser surgery, which he will perform in about 10 days, to remove a film that appears after an implant has been made. That surgery is not available in Kazakhstan.

SHOOT: Midland woman dies

(From 1A)

The weapon is thought to have been a .38 caliber revolver, but postmortem medical reports will be needed to make the determination.

Shortly before emergency personnel received the 9-1-1 call at 1:23 a.m., a disturbance broke out inside the club, Garcia said. The confrontation was between the deceased and the sister of the alleged assailant, witnesses told police.

The disturbance escalated with those involved being ejected from the club, according to police reports.

The fight continued after those involved left the building, the spokesman said. At that time, Ms. Henderson is alleged to have drawn a handgun and fired one time into the chest of Ms. Perkins, police said.

Ms. Henderson reportedly then left the scene prior to police arrival, officers said. An "attempt to locate" notice was given to patrol officers, who found and arrested Ms. Henderson shortly after the incident, Garcia said.

Ms. Perkins was transported to the Midland Memorial Hospital Emergency Department and was pronounced dead after resuscitation efforts failed.

Ms. Henderson has been charged with murder and bond is set at $15,000, according to police reports.

Ice begins to melt following Thanksgiving day storms

Associated Press

Sunny skies and warming temperatures helped melt some of the ice covering roadways across northern Texas Friday, but meteorologists warned that an overnight freeze could make travel hazardous again early Saturday.

Highways and streets became skating rinks Friday morning after sleet and freezing rain pelted the state on Thanksgiving Day.

Travel was chaotic for early morning commuters, shoppers fighting to make their way to after-Thanksgiving sales, and at airports, where passengers sought to catch flights that were earlier delayed or cancelled.

The snails-pace driving sped up throughout the day, as temperatures crept above the freezing mark into the 40s and the icy roads began to thaw.

"Everything out there is melting, but we're anticipating that all the melting sleet and water runoff will more than likely freeze over again," said James Black, of the Dallas office of the Texas Department of Transportation.

"I would advise people to get all of their traveling done before dark. By 9 p.m. it'll be back below freezing," said Skip Ely, meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Fort Worth. "Some areas protected by shade and secondary roads will still have some ice, so people should still use common sense and drive with caution."

Some 75 crews worked Thursday and Friday to sand roadways, Black said. The crews were on standby for Friday night and the rest of the holiday weekend.

Temperatures were expected to dip back down into the 20s overnight. But a warming trend should begin early next week, Ely said.

Saturday, temperatures will be in the 50s with overnight lows in the 20s and 30s. On Sunday, temperatures should warm u to the 60s. Lows will be in the 30s.

The cold temperatures threatened to cause damage to more than just cars and roads. In South Texas, harvesters worried that the freezing temperatures would hurt crops.

Fred Huebinger, sales manager for Elmore and Stahl Inc. in Pharr, said a freeze predicted for Starr County could end the bell pepper season.

"It will if it gets down to 28 for two or three hours," Huebinger said.

Bell peppers in Starr County already are about two-thirds harvested, he said. Growers can do nothing but wait this weekend to see what happens to the rest, he said.

The icy conditions also caused Six Flags Over Texas to delay its "Holiday in the Park" event until Saturday. Officials said even the amusement park's "real snow" ride was inoperable.

"We can't use it because the tarps are frozen," said spokesman Bruce Neal.

On Thursday, authorities reported hundreds of weather-related traffic accidents.

In North Texas, a five-vehicle wreck hospitalized an off-duty Dallas police officer. Austin police reported more than 150 fender-benders, with some pileups of up to 20 vehicles.

Man works on computer game

HOUSTON (AP) — Jim Shiflett is working on a computer software program of biblical proportions.

A devout Christian, the 38-year-old Houstonian is completing work on an action computer game called Mark of the Beast, which is based on prophecies in the Book of Revelation.

The game will not be overtly religious in tone, but it does take its themes from the Bible, Shiflett said. Houston-based software publisher Road Scholar is scheduled to release it in March or April.

"I believe that instead of cursing the darkness, you should light a match," Shiflett said. "It's not my desire to go out there and say, 'Don't do what you are doing,' but rather offer a positive message."

Shiflett also has created Dazzle, a kaleidoscopic screen saver, and a successful commercial product called Razzle Dazzle.

Mark of the Beast was born out of a dinner-hour rant by Road Scholar President Keith Hendrick, who is also a Christian, about a best-selling game that had occult overtones.

Shiflett took up the challenge to create an action-packed program with a positive message that would appeal to mainstream computer gamers.

The game's protagonist is Jack Logan, described by Shiflett as a "not-looking-for-trouble kind of person."

Logan lives in a city run by an evil mayor, and he is marked for death when he witnesses a crime committed by the mayor's henchmen.

The "mark of the beast" is an electronic chip imbedded in the citizenry's hands. The chip contains vast amounts of information about each individual, and thus serves to control them.

Society is in the grips of a world government that's careening toward an apocalyptic conclusion, but a handful of resistance groups are fighting the good fight.

The people running the underground are Christians and Jews, and Logan is pulled into one group that is resisting the evil mayor.

Although there is action and some violence in the game, players are rewarded by finding nonviolent ways to accomplish what must be done.

The game is a huge project with more than 90 full screens of background and intricate and complex character movements to program.

More violence erupts across Israeli territories

JERUSALEM (NYT) — Violence in the occupied territories threatens to delay the scheduled withdrawal next month of Israeli troops from Jericho and the Gaza Strip, amid growing concern that the escalating bloodshed could unravel the Israel-PLO peace agreement.

For the second time in three days, Israeli forces Friday shot and killed a prominent Palestinian militant of the Islamic resistance group Hamas, the foremost opponent of the Israel-PLO accord.

The killing of the guerrilla leader in Arab east Jerusalem threatened to spark further unrest in the occupied Gaza Strip, where on Thursday and Friday nearly 40 Palestinians were shot and wounded by Israeli troops in fierce street clashes.

Israeli troops Friday fired on Khaled Mustafa Zer, 25, after chasing him from his hideout in the Arab Jerusalem suburb of Sur Bahir. Zer, who died at the scene, was a leading member of Izzedine el-Qassem, the military wing of Hamas. He was wanted for killing a Jewish settler and two soldiers in recent months, authorities said.

"They called for him to stop. He didn't and they shot him," a police spokesman said.

On Wednesday, Israeli forces in Gaza shot the leader of the military wing, Imad Aqel, at a roadblock. Aqel was described as Israel's top wanted suspect, responsible for killing 12 Israelis and four Palestinian collaborators.

Police also said Friday that a Palestinian killed by troops in the West Bank village of Beit Awwa near Hebron on Nov. 8 was also an Izzedine el-Qassam operative suspected of killing an Israeli and several Palestinians.

In a statement, Hamas leaders vowed revenge "the size of which hasn't been until now" for the killings. A general strike continued into its second day Friday in the impoverished Gaza Strip, home to 850,000 Palestinians.

Meanwhile, Jewish settlers opposed to the peace agreement reportedly battered parked Arab cars in the West Bank city of Hebron, and Palestinian youths responded with stones.

The Israeli army dispatched reinforcement to the occupied territories and Arab east Jerusalem, radio reports said.

The Israeli government, led by a left-leaning coalition, has been pressed hard in recent days to maintain support for the peace deal, which calls for limited Palestinian autonomy in the West Bank town of Jericho and the Gaza Strip beginning in April. Israeli troops are scheduled to begin their withdrawal from the areas on Dec. 13.

Iraq accepts long-term monitoring of weapons

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Iraq accepted on Friday long-term U.N. monitoring of its weapons programs, eliminating a major obstacle to the lifting of trade sanctions imposed after Baghdad's 1990 invasion of Kuwait.

Allowing long-term monitoring was one of the key requirements in the 1991 Gulf War cease-fire agreements, which also called for elimination of Iraq's weapons of mass destruction.

The United States and other Security Council members have blocked any lifting of the punishing trade sanctions until Iraq complies fully with the cease-fire terms.

Baghdad, desperate to sell oil to shore up its crippled economy, requested that the council lift the oil embargo in exchange for its compliance. But U.N. experts have said they would insist on having a monitoring program in place for some months before recommending an end to the embargo.

Iraq had been seeking assurances that the council would lift the oil embargo if it complied. But it apparently accepted the binding Security Council resolution on long-term monitoring without such assurances.

The resolution would allow international weapons inspectors to roam Iraq freely and for an indefinite period to prevent Iraq from again acquiring weapons of mass destruction.

Iraqi Ambassador Nizer Hamdoon delivered a letter from Iraqi Foreign Minister Mohammed Said al-Sahaf to the Security Council stating Iraq's commitment. A copy was obtained by The Associated Press.

It states that Iraq has decided "to accept the obligations.

Analysts: Disillusion haunts peace process

By Nicolas B. Tatro
Associated Press writer

■ News Analysis

JERUSALEM — Amid riots and bloodshed, there are signs Israelis and Palestinians are growing disillusioned with a peace process that many feel has not lived up to expectations.

Israeli soldiers ambush underground fighters and arrest Palestinian activists while Jewish settlers go on anti-Arab rampages. Palestinian militants stab soldiers, attack Jewish settlers with axes and issue leaflets threatening more violence.

Almost every day there is bloodshed, and the violence is taking its toll on the hopeful climate of peacemaking that prevailed after the Sept. 13 signing of the Israel-PLO accord.

Since the pact, 31 Palestinians and 10 Israelis have been killed.

Israeli troops on Friday killed a senior Palestinian fighter, a day after riots exploded in the Gaza Strip to protest the death of Imad Aqal, another well-known guerrilla fighter for the Muslim fundamentalist Hamas group. Thirty-four Palestinians were wounded by gunfire, two seriously.

Violence is likely to continue until Israeli soldiers start to pullout and Palestinians take the reins. In the meantime, the tit-for-tat warfare is likely to continue as extremists try to upend the peace process.

The question is how long Palestinians and Israelis are willing to wait.

Palestinians complain Israel released only a few hundred of the 10,500 prisoners in Israeli jails and then stopped. Hundreds of deportees have not been allowed to return home. The army continues to confront Palestinian youths in the streets. Jobs are scarce and travel restrictions tight.

Haidar Abdel-Shafi, a Gaza doctor who headed the Palestinian delegation to the peace talks in Washington, said there was a "mood of frustration and distrust" in Gaza.

"It will be very difficult to control a population that is losing its confidence in the peace process and in the promises that have been made when the declaration was proclaimed," Abdel-Shafi said in an interview with The Associated Press.

The daily al-Quds newspaper said in an editorial that nothing concrete had emerged from the peace process to change people's lives. "Peace without practical steps on the ground will not work," it warned.

Saud al-Shawaa, a veterinarian and supporter of the Islamic resistance movement in Gaza, said Palestinians see no signs that Israel is living up to promises to end 26 years of occupation or stop the killing.

"There is no need to threaten the agreement with violence. It is collapsing by itself," he said.

Signs of anger also appeared in student elections at Bir Zeit University in the West Bank. In student elections, Yasser Arafat's pro-peace Fatah suffered a resounding defeat .

ADS: Russians get taste of political TV campaign

(From 1A)

"The president's position is that the constitution should not be involved in this election campaign," said his spokesman, Vyacheslav Kostikov. "Too much nervous and political energy has gone into it. Too many clashes have already occurred over the constitution."

An Information Court of Arbitration assigned to monitor the campaign warned Govorukhin and two other candidates Friday that they could be stripped of their parliamentary mandates if they continued to use their air time to attack opponents.

In contrast, the leading party, Russia's Choice, headed by the government's top economic reformer, Yegor T. Gaidar, has taken a "feel good" approach. Its campaign spots show portraits of glowing Russian faces, including a clip of a young boy and his St. Bernard sitting on the floor as adults around them troop off to vote for Russia's Choice.

Staking out political turf is proving to be an enormous task for all 13 parties, most of which did not even exist just a month ago. Nor for that matter did the new two-chamber, 628-seat Federal Assembly for which they are running, nor even the constitution that will guide them if they get elected.

Even now, the new Federal Assembly still does not have a building to call its own.

It is probably not coincidental that Russia's Choice, which now holds the lead among Russia's urban voters in opinion surveys, is running the most Western-style campaign.

It has buttons featuring a famous statue of Peter the Great, it is printing posters with the image of a solemn Gaidar and it even has a campaign theme song: "Russia Is Risen."

"We want to be liked," said Anna V. Uvarova, one of the dozens of young campaign workers at the Russia's Choice headquarters in a downtown Moscow mansion. "We have noted that all the other parties in their ads attack Russia's Choice, rather than putting across a message of their own."

Besides, she said, after two years of unending political debates, Russian viewers are likely to switch channels on "talking heads" — the format chosen by most of the opposition parties.

There have been a few attempts to liven up the oratory. Vladimir Lukin, now Russia's ambassador to Washington, held up his hands for the camera to make the point that his party (which goes by the tongue-numbing name of the Yavlinsky-Boldyrev-Lukin bloc) is going to the elections with "clean hands."

Another party brought shopping bags filled with groceries — including a broken egg — to demonstrate the explosive impact of inflation on family budgets.

Confusion has dominated this hastily called campaign, the first to be held since the final collapse of the Communist Party.

As the first wave of political advertising has shown, what is emerging is more of an on-the-job training program for fledgling and probably temporary political groupings than a spectrum of real political choices.

For the voter, bewilderment begins with the assortment of names and personalities — three parties calls themselves "Democratic," including the ultranationalist party led by Vladimir Zhironovsky.

Russia's liberals, once united behind the anti-communist movement led by Yeltsin, have split four ways. Even top-ranking members of Yeltsin's government are divided into various camps, with Prime Minister Viktor S. Chernomyrdin leaning away from Gaidar's Russia's Choice and toward the Russian Party of Unity and Accord, led by Deputy Prime Minister Sergei M. Shakhrai.

The disarray of the "democrats" is perhaps the most significant development, and one that clearly worries top reformers like Gaidar.

"It boils down to the fact that not just one democratic bloc, but four democratic blocs are going to the elections," Gaidar said at a news conference this week.

POLICE REPORTS

Government negotiates for release of U.S. diplomat in Yemen

SAN'A, Yemen (AP) — An American diplomat was kidnapped by Yemeni tribesmen and government officials were negotiating Friday for his release.

The abduction of Haynes Mahoney was the first known kidnapping of a diplomat in this faction-ridden nation south of Saudi Arabia.

In Washington, a State Department official said the kidnapping stemmed from a squabble between competing factions and that it seemed likely Mahoney would be released shortly.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said an American oil worker was held hostage briefly last May as part of political infighting.

The Interior Ministry said the tribe holding Mahoney has made "demands of the (San'a) government" in exchange for his release, but did not specify them.

The Interior Ministry statement did not identify the tribe holding Mahoney, head of the United States Information Service in Yemen.

Interior Minister Yehya al-Mutawakali rushed with a team of aides to the abductors' hideout to negotiate Mahoney's release, officials said.

President Ali Abdullah Saleh has ordered tribal chieftains to work to secure his release, goverment officials said on condition of anonymity.

The ministry's statement said five gunmen in a jeep intercepted Mahoney at 7:50 p.m. (11:50 a.m. EST) Thursday a block away from the Taj Sheba Hotel, the site of a British Airways reception. The gunmen took him and his car.

U.S. officials in Washington said Mahoney had attended a Thanksgiving dinner given by U.S. Ambassador Arthur Hughes and was abducted before he arrived at the reception, the officials said.

By Friday morning, security officials had tracked down the abductors' hideout in Gahm, 43 miles northeast of San'a, in the oil-rich Mareb province, the Interior Ministry statement said.

"The ministry is taking measures to secure the freedom of Mr. Mahoney and the return of his car," the statement said.

U.S. Embassy diplomats and guards reached at home in San'a because of the Muslim sabbath refused to discuss the incident.

Acquaintances of the diplomat said Mahoney speaks Arabic, is in his late 40's and has a family in San'a that was not harmed.

The U.S. Embassy has asked all Americans in Yemen to exercise caution during the next few days, but they are not believed to be under any threat, State Department spokeswoman Julie Reside said in Washington.

The Mareb has been the scene of various kidnappings of foreigners, mainly oilmen and tourists, over the past two years.

The kidnapping comes amid political tensions between Saleh and Vice President Ali Salem al-Beidh, former president of South Yemen.

Ambassador Hughes has been engaged in mediating the dispute, urging the two men to reconcile their differences to preserve Yemen's union and the democracy they have introduced.

Conservative North Yemen and formerly Marxist South Yemen united three years ago.

Egyptian government appeals for support

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — A 12-year-old girl killed in a failed attempt to assassinate Egypt's prime minister was buried Friday, while the government tried to turn public outrage over her death into support for its fight against Muslim extremists.

Hundreds turned out for Shaima Abdel-Halim's funeral in a government mosque usually reserved for burying VIPs. "Terrorism is the enemy of God," mourners chanted as the schoolgirl's coffin was carried through downtown Cairo.

"What has she done to them? What is our mistake?" Shaima's grandmother screamed at a government minister at one point. The official, education minister Hussein Bahaa-el-Din, wept.

A bomb lodged under a car outside a girls' school exploded Thursday as Prime Minister Atef Sedki's motorcade passed. Shaima was crushed by a door torn from its hinges by the blast. Most of the 21 people injured were cut by shattered glass. Sedki was not hurt.

Egypt's state-run television repeatedly aired footage of property destroyed in the attack and of top government officials visiting hospitalized survivors to pay respects and promise compensation.

A banner headline in Saturday's editions of the government weekly newspaper Akhbar el-Yom declared: "The People of Egypt Condemn Terrorism." Other newspapers carried similar headlines and quoted vows of security officials to "eradicate extremism."

Jihad, a radical group that assassinated President Anwar Sadat in 1981 and the parliament speaker, Rifaat el-Mahgoub, in 1990, claimed responsibility for the attempt on Sedki.

Jihad, or Holy War, is one of several Muslim fundamentalist groups seeking to topple Egypt's secular government and establish a strict Islamic state.

More than 240 people have died in the terrorist campaign in the past two years.

As the funeral procession approached the U.S. Embassy in Cairo, some mourners took up chants demanding extradition of Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman, spiritual leader of Egypt's main Muslim radical groups.

He is jailed in New York for his alleged involvement in the Feb. 26 bombing of New York's World Trade Center and in plotting other terrorist activities.

A chant rose of "Omar Abdel-Rahman is a terrorist. America ... America, give Abdel-Rahman back to Egypt." But almost immediately, Egyptian government security men, almost as numerous as the mourners, shushed them.

Tropical storm kills 43, leaves 67 unaccounted for in Vietnam

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — A tropical storm that battered Vietnam's central provinces killed 43 people and left 67 missing, government officials said Friday.

Officials at the typhoon and flood control center said 166 people were injured and tens of thousands of homes destroyed or damaged by Tropical Storm Kyle.

The storm hit Khanh Hoa, Phu Yen and Darlac provinces Tuesday with winds of more than 67 mph.

Irrigation systems and facilities for fishery and agricultural production also were wiped out, officials said.

It was the 10th storm to hit Vietnam this year. Last month, torrential rains and flooding killed 122 people in Phu Yen and two other central provinces.

Trade ministers face growing obstacles

GENEVA (AP) — With three weeks to go, the list of obstacles left to overcome in world trade talks is growing longer.

Negotiators met Friday at the headquarters of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade in Geneva to discuss objections by the United States to a proposed trade reform package.

The United States is unhappy with proposals to regulate "dumping" — exporting products at a lower price than the same product sells for at home. It has circulated its own suggestions, raising fears that the delicate compromises already reached in the 116-nation talks might unravel.

The U.S. move was criticized by delegates from Japan, South Korea, Malaysia and a group of developing countries, sources said.

In addition, GATT Director-General Peter Sutherland warned that continuing differences between the United States and European Community have placed the entire round of trade talks in jeopardy.

U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor and his EC counterpart Leon Brittan must achieve a "substantive result" at talks next Wednesday in Brussels, Belgium, Sutherland said.

"We cannot afford further delay without jeopardizing the round," he said. The talks, which began in Uruguay in September 1986, face a Dec. 15 deadline. Negotiations need to be completed by Dec. 13 so the text of the agreement can be sent to each country's government, Sutherland said.

The United States and the EC disagree on cuts in farm subsidies. France has vowed to block any package that hurts its farmers.

The Americans and Europeans also disagree on reductions in import duties. The EC wants Washington to dismantle high duties on textiles, but is resisting U.S. demands for cuts on products like electronics and paper.

Europe also opposes American demands to open its markets to unlimited imports of movies.

U.S. officials issue statements on sanctions against Pakistan

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The Clinton administration is proposing the repeal of a law that has barred American military aid to Pakistan because of that country's efforts to develop a nuclear bomb. But State Department officials insisted Friday that they did not intend to lift sanctions against Pakistan.

The administration proposal, in a draft of a new foreign aid bill recently sent to Congress, would repeal the so-called Pressler Amendment, which bans military aid to Pakistan unless the president can certify that Pakistan neither possesses nuclear weapons nor is trying to develop them.

In place of the amendment, named after the Republican senator from South Dakota, the administration would substitute generic language in which no specific country is named.

The provision would ban American assistance to any "nonnuclear weapon states" that have equipment capable of enriching or reprocessing fissionable materials for nuclear weapons, unless the country submits to inspections by the International Atomic Energy Agency to insure that the reprocessing is for civilian purposes.

Pakistan would still not qualify for American aid under the proposed change. "Pakistan remains under Pressler Amendment sanctions in accordance with U.S. law," the State Department said Friday in a statement. "Even if a new foreign assistance act without specific language on Pakistan were passed, we would continue to apply Pressler standards to Pakistan."

But some in Congress note that the proposed bill allows the president to waive economic sanctions against a country that may be building a nuclear bomb if he determines it is in the national interest to do so. Those critics say the administration's proposal thus weakens the Pressler Amendment, which contains no waiver provision.

"It's a wonderful smokescreen," said an aide to Pressler. "The State Department has always wanted to get rid of the Pressler Amendment because it has no waiver."

The Pressler Amendment, enacted in 1985, states that as long as Pakistan has a nuclear bomb or the main components of a bomb, "no technology shall be sold or transferred to Pakistan."

Russia blasts Ukraine for weapons policy

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia rejected Ukraine's conditional approval of the START-1 nuclear arms reduction agreement Friday and accused the Ukrainian government of reneging on its pledge to become nuclear-free.

Ukraine's approval "cannot be recognized because the conditions it contains distort the goals" of the treaty, the Russian government said in a statement.

Russia said it would stop maintaining Ukraine's deteriorating nuclear warheads.

Ukrainian legislator Volodymyr Yavoritsky called the Russian statement "dirty nuclear blackmail" and warned that Russia was heading toward "a nuclear confrontation" with Ukraine.

Ukraine has been under pressure from Russia and the United States to approve the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty. Until it does, the farther-reaching START-2 agreement, which calls for the United States and Russia to cut their nuclear arsenals by two-thirds, cannot take effect.

START-1, originally signed in 1991 by the United States and Russia, has been approved by Russia and by Belarus and Kazakhstan, the other former Soviet republics with nuclear weapons.

Russia asked the U.N. Security Council to keep Ukraine from "undermining the nuclear disarmament process, strategic stability and nuclear non-proliferation regime."

The statement marked a new round in the bitter struggle between the two countries over former Soviet property in Ukraine, including the Black Sea Fleet, nuclear weapons and other military equipment.

Ukraine's parliament ratified START-1 last week, but its approval was accompanied by more than a dozen conditions.

The treaty provides for the dismantling of one-third of the U.S. and Soviet arsenals of long-range missiles and bombers. Under the treaty and protocols added later, Russia would be the only former Soviet republic to retain nuclear weapons.

But Ukraine agreed to liquidate less than a half its 1,240 nuclear warheads, and only after receiving financial compensation and security guarantees from the West and Russia.

Ukraine also declined to join the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty.

Russia said that meant it could no longer service the Ukrainian warheads, because it would violate Russia's obligations under the Non-Proliferation Treaty.

Ukraine does not have the technology or resources to service its warheads, Ukrainian lawmaker Yavoritsky said.

Yuri Kostenko, co-chairman of Ukraine's parliamentary working group on START, said there was "no basis for Russia's accusations."

"Ukraine has not contradicted any international agreements," Kostenko said.

Ukrainian leaders say they remain committed to becoming nuclear-free. The ratification of START-1 is the beginning of a "stage-by-stage" disarmament process, they said.

An unidentified Bosnian Serb soldier cooks soup in a trench along the front lines in the northern Bosnian town of Brcko, some 75 miles north of Sarajevo, Friday. U.N. mediator Thorvald Stoltenberg said a European offer to suspend sanctions against Yugoslavia if it promotes a peace deal in Bosnia could open new possibilities in talks to end the war.

Despite pledges, Bosnian factions block aid

By Alexander G. Higgins
Associated Press writer

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnia's warring factions are again blocking aid deliveries despite their agreement not to do so, U.N. officials said Friday.

Ron Redmond, spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees in Geneva, said convoys had delivered 1,000 tons of aid in Bosnia during the past three days.

But Lt. Col. Bill Aikman, spokesman for U.N. peacekeepers in Sarajevo, said Serbs, Croats and Muslims were again hampering operations barely a week after faction leaders agreed in Geneva to grant relief convoys safe passage.

All three sides have blocked aid deliveries as a tactical measure in their war, which erupted in April 1992 when the republic's Serbs rebeled against independence from Yugoslavia. The Croats and Muslims backed independence.

The Bosnian government says more than 200,000 people have been killed and at least 2 million made homeless. U.N. officials estimate as many as 3 million people across Bosnia will need aid this winter.

In Geneva, U.N. envoy Thorvald Stoltenberg said peace talks on former Yugoslavia will resume Monday. The talks collapsed in September when Bosnia's Serbs and Muslim-led government disagreed over terms for dividing Bosnia.

In Sarajevo, the planned evacuation of more than 1,000 civilians from the besieged capital was delayed.

According to Redmond and Aikman, all three sides were blocking aid:

■ Serbs were refusing to let aid be shuttled from Serb-held Banja Luka to Zenica, a main distribution point in central Bosnia. Redmond called "outrageous" the Serb claim that the aid was meant only for Serbs.

Pressures on Kurdish rebel movement grow

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — The Kurdish autonomy movement, whose guerrilla war has claimed 10,000 lives, is facing tightened military and diplomatic pressure as it marks its 15th anniversary today.

Even so, its leader has picked out new targets to intensify its campaign, taking aim at the state-owned pipeline company and Muslim fundamentalists.

On the diplomatic front, the latest blow came Friday when Germany banned the activities of the Kurdistan Workers Party (PKK). France launched a crackdown against the Kurds last week.

The moves follow violent attacks by Kurds on Turkish offices across Europe this year.

Abdullah Ocalan, a dropout from Ankara University's prestigious school of political science, formed the PKK on Nov. 27, 1978, to seek greater political and cultural rights, such as Kurdish language education and broadcasting.

He started an armed rebellion six years later in the southeastern provinces, where half of Turkey's 12 million Kurds live.

The PKK intensified its war in June after the Turkish government declined to enter into negotiations during a cease-fire declared by the guerrillas. Almost 2,000 people have been killed in the last six months.

In an interview this week with the Germany-based Kurdish news agency Kurd-Ha, Ocalan vowed to step up the battle again.

"We will force the Turkish republic's institutions, such as schools, to stop functioning," Ocalan said.

New targets he cited include the state-owned pipeline company BOTAS, the Muslim fundamentalist Prosperity Party, the conservative and religious press, and schools and hospitals in the southeast.

Kurdish guerrillas have killed 32 teachers in that area since the fall semester. More than 1,200 schools there remain closed.

BOTAS is the owner of the now-closed twin Turkish-Iraqi pipelines. It is pursuing new projects to carry oil from Azerbaijan and the Central Asian republics through southeast Turkey.

The government has taken a harsher military stand, a move that led to allegations of human rights violations.

"The army is evacuating villages, killing innocent people," said Hatip Dicle, a Kurdish member of the Turkish parliament. His Democratic Party took the issue to the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe last week.

Yeltsin threatens to pull plug on political opponents' TV air time

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin threatened on Friday to deny free television air time to political parties if they attacked each other or the draft constitution that would give him sweeping powers.

Yeltsin summoned leaders of the 13 parties competing in Russia's Dec. 12 parliamentary elections to spell out election rules.

"I would like each candidate to advertise his own program and not sling mud at others," Yeltsin told them.

The president warned the candidates against criticizing Russia's proposed constitution, which also will go before the voters on Dec. 12. "I would like you not to touch it," he said.

"The free time will be taken back from you if you deviate from your subject, and your subject is your platform," he warned.

After the meeting, Nikolai Travkin, leader of the center-right Democratic Party, said Yeltsin was wrong to try to limit campaign rhetoric.

"We did not overstep civilized boundaries in our campaign, nor did we tell lies," Travkin said. "Real life is what ought to be discussed."

Yeltsin already banned a dozen hard-line and nationalist parties, and suspended publication of newspapers that supported them, after the army on Oct. 4 crushed a rebellion by reform opponents. Since then, some have been allowed to participate, including the Communist Party of the Russian Federation.

Yeltsin also has issued a decree banning alleged ring-leaders of the October rebellion from running in the election.

Communists and other hard-liners allowed to compete in the elections have repeatedly attacked the proposed constitution as dictatorial.

If approved, the new constitution would give Yeltsin sweeping powers, including the right to disband the parliament and call new elections.

Yeltsin complained that some campaigns were amounting to little more than insults and "this shouldn't happen in the new Russia." Some candidates have accused others of alcoholism, closet communism and Stalinist tactics.

Yeltsin disregarded the current constitution — a vestige of the Soviet era — on Sept. 21, when he dissolved the Communist-dominated parliament and ordered new elections.

The parties competing for seats in a new parliament cover a wide spectrum, from radical reformers backing Yeltsin to Communists.

Russia's two major television stations have set aside 13 hours of prime time for the parties to introduce candidates and platforms to Russia's 149 million people.

Yeltsin's spokesman Vyacheslav Kostikov told reporters after the meeting that the parties reached a "gentlemen's agreement" to act ethically during the campaign. He warned that "measures" could be taken against violators.

Anatoly Sliva, deputy head of the State Legal Department, said parties or candidates criticizing the constitution might be dismissed from the race.

"If a candidate or a bloc calls on voters to vote against the new constitution, it may be assessed as a public refusal to run in the election," Sliva said on television.

Kostikov has said some of the political commercials were meant to provoke Yeltsin into banning them and make the president look undemocratic.

Yeltsin also announced Friday where the new parliament will be housed.

The lower house, or Duma, will meet in a skyscraper office building that used to house the headquarters of Comecon, the former trade organization of Communist countries.

It is next to the former parliament building, or White House, which closed for repairs after army troops stormed it Oct. 4.

Somalis travel to conference in Ethiopia

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Somalis from rival factions are bound for a conference in Ethiopia that might be their last chance to pull their country out of chaos and despair.

Moving the capital out of Mogadishu and away from warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid could be one solution, some suggest.

The main conference of donor nations and relief groups is scheduled for Monday at Addis Ababa and is to focus on resettlement of diplaced people, trade, economic management and health and education.

It is to be followed two days later by an assembly of Somali politicians.

The Clinton administration has promised $100 million only if Somalis can agree politically. Security is just one concern that world relief workers face in Somalia. Without political progress, officials said world leaders may write off Somalia and shift their aid to lands more capable of helping themselves.

Above all, Somalis say, Aidid and his archrival, Mohamed Ali Mahdi, must end their personal dispute in Mogadishu.

If not, other factions may decide to join forces, move the capital out of Mogadishu, and drop Aidid from the equation, some say.

"Neither Aidid nor Ali Mahdi wants peace because they will lose their supporters," said Mohamed Sheikh, a businessman and founding member of a new, independent political group.

The two warlords belong to subclans of the Hayiwe ethnic group. Ali Mahdi's militia controls the capital's northern sector, and Aidid holds the south side. Sheikh said Aidid held the key to settlement in this East African country, mainly because of his skill as a military organizer, drawn from a career in the army of deposed dictator Mohamed Siad Barre.

Aidid also has the most weapons. But most of his militiamen are in Mogadishu, leaving the rest of Somalia relatively calm.

"If all the others except Aidid agree and fighting continues in Mogadishu, we may need to take a great national decision — to shift the capital from Mogadishu to another town. I think we will suggest this in Addis Ababa.

"Everyone is fed up," said Sheikh, who is from a branch of Aidid's clan.

Somalia's despair is reflected in the capital. Nearly all of its houses and public buildings are in ruin. Battered cars and buses bump along pot-holed streets. The port is operating again, but is plagued by labor and clan disputes.

Years of civil war and clan battles have wiped out all government structures, and the United Nations is trying to re-establish them.

Local elders and a few unenthusiastic police try to keep order. Banditry has become a way of life for many young Somalis with easy access to guns and none to jobs.

People crowd around the U.N. compound daily to apply for jobs, but work is scarce.

Only the market is alive, with coal vendors and stalls where Somalis still have a chew of qat, a green, leafy stimulant imported from Kenya.

A cease-fire between Aidid and Ali Mahdi's militias is largely holding, but minor clashes occur almost daily — and the Aidid-Ali Mahdi bitterness remains.

Elsewhere in Somalia, many have returned to their farms and cattle, but clans still fight over selection of district and regional councils, a U.N.-sponsored structure that is to form the basis of a transitional national council.

A peace conference in the Ethiopian capital last March produced an agreement for a cease-fire, disarmament and formation of the councils.

Most of the 15 factions that signed have implemented the accord to some degree. But Aidid has boycotted the councils.

Health officials point to cavities among children

ATLANTA (AP) — About half the children surveyed in Oregon have cavities in their teeth, and that shows that states must do more to provide dental care for young people, health officials said Friday.

"In spite of all our progress, dental disease persists in children," said Dolores Malvitz of the Division of Oral Health at the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. "Some groups of children still have large amounts of dental decay that remains untreated."

The 1991-92 statewide study of 2,872 Oregon children ages 3-12 also found that American Indians, Asians and Hispanics had a much higher prevalence of dental disease than whites.

Among children ages 6-8, for example, an average of 55 percent had tooth decay in their primary or permanent teeth, according to the study. A breakdown shows that 52 percent of white children in the age group had tooth decay, but the numbers were significantly higher for other groups: American Indian children, 91 percent; Asian, 67 percent; Hispanic, 65 percent; black, 64 percent.

The goal of federal health officials is to reduce the number of children with tooth decay to 35 percent by the year 2000.

"It could be that they're not receiving preventive measures early enough, or it may mean that they do not have access to care," said Ms. Malvitz. "Unfortunately, it's those without access to preventive measures who have the disease, then the disease is not treated."

For children who don't have access to a private dentist or who can't afford one, states need to provide dental care through community health programs or through schools, the CDC said.

While the city of Portland, Ore., has a school program to provide protective tooth sealants, many sections of the state have limited access to dental care, Ms. Malvitz said.

Providing fluoridated water also helps prevent decay, but only 25 percent of the Oregonians connected to public water systems have fluoridated water, Ms. Malvitz said. Nationally, 62 percent of the people connected to public water systems have fluoridated water.

"Oregon is at the bottom there," Ms. Malvitz said.

Lunar eclipse to take place tomorrow night

NEW YORK (AP) — The delicate Pleiades star cluster and the pale orange star Aldebaran will grow brighter Sunday night when the full moon slips quietly into darkness in an eclipse visible across the United States.

"It will be high up in a dark sky, so nobody anywhere in North America should have any trouble seeing it, if the sky is clear," said Alan M. MacRobert, an associate editor at Sky & Telescope magazine.

The moon will begin entering the Earth's shadow at 9:27 p.m. CST Sunday. It will be totally eclipsed from 12:02 a.m. until 12:50 a.m., making for a late night for watchers in the Permian Basin.

Still, MacRobert's advice is not to miss it.

"Either stay up and have an eclipse party, or set the alarm clock and at least stick your head out the door," he said.

He described a lunar eclipse as "one of the grander spectacles of nature." He noted that for thousands of years people thought a lunar eclipse was something horrible and catastrophic. "That's a measure of the visual impact it can have," he said.

Lunar eclipses occur once or twice a year, but this one happens to be perfectly situated for viewing in North America. As the passing moon becomes eclipsed, starlight will seem to shine brighter — particularly from Aldebaran and the Pleiades.

It will be the most widely visible total eclipse in North America since July 5-6, 1982, with the next good one not due until Sept. 26, 1996.

A pale, ghostly image of the moon is likely to persist during the period of total eclipse, as light from sunrises and sunsets skims around the edge of the Earth, is scattered by the atmosphere and reflects off the moon, MacRobert said.

If you'd like to catch the eclipse on film, MacRobert could offer only this: Take lots of pictures at many different exposures — and plan to throw most of them away.

Clinton's meeting with Rushdie angers Iranian

WASHINGTON (AP) — A brief meeting President Clinton had with British author Salmon Rushdie touched off an angry reaction Friday from the head of Iran's judiciary, who said Clinton had become "the most hated" person in the Islamic world.

U.S. officials defended the Wednesday meeting, saying that Clinton wanted to express solidarity with a man who has been the target of death threats by Iran because of his writings.

"By accepting this writer you (Clinton) have made yourself detested in the Islamic world," Ayatollah Mohammed Yazdi said in a sermon at Tehran University. "I say that you are the most hated among Muslims around the world."

A State Department official said the vehemence of the statement discredited the notion that the Iranians have lost interest in Rushdie now that almost five years have passed since his novel, "The Satanic Verses," was condemned as blasphemous by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Clinton's decision to meet with Rushdie contrasted with President Bush's refusal to grant an audience to the 46-year old author. And it was consistent with Clinton's efforts to give human rights a higher profile than his predecessor did.

But the State Department warned U.S. citizens abroad through its embassies that the White House meeting could lead to "terrorism or mob action." A spokeswoman said Friday that Americans abroad also were asked to take precautions at the time of a previous visit by Rushdie to the United States.

Some in government said they felt that Clinton acted imprudently in agreeing to a meeting that, according to the State Department, could bring harm to Americans overseas.

But one official said, "If there is a threat, it would come from those inclined to threats anyway." The United States has accused Iran for years of sponsoring international terrorism; Iran is one of seven countries on a U.S. list of countries believed to engage in such activities.

As if to confirm the political implications of the meeting, Clinton kept photographers away and engaged Rushdie for only a few minutes. Playing down the meeting seemed an acknowledgement by Clinton that to do otherwise could have inflamed feelings among some in the Middle East.

There was initial speculation that the kidnapping of an American official in Yemen on Thanksgiving Day -- less than 24 hours after the meeting with Rushdie — was a retaliatory act.

Justice O'Conner OKs deportation of some aliens

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Supreme Court justice Friday let the government deport some illegal aliens who are seeking legal status in a dispute over a now-expired federal amnesty program.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor temporarily lifted a lower court order that had protected the aliens from deportation.

O'Connor noted the high court ruled against another group of aliens in a similar case last June. The immigration rights groups that won the lower court appeared to lack legal standing, she said, adding that aliens could sue on their own behalf.

The 1986 Immigration Reform and Control Act offered legal residency to all illegal aliens who lived in the United States continuously since Jan. 1, 1982. The one-year period for applying for amnesty expired on May 4, 1988.

In 1989, a federal judge in Seattle gave some aliens a new chance to seek legal status under the amnesty program.

The judge ordered the Immigration and Naturalization Service to take a new look at cases involving aliens who failed to comply with address reporting requirements, who violated the terms of their visas before Jan. 1, 1982, and who were incorrectly reinstated to lawful resident status after Jan. 1, 1982.

About 20,000 to 50,000 aliens are involved, their lawyer said, adding that some were denied legal status under the amnesty program, while others did not apply because they expected to be rejected.

U.S. District Judge Barbara Rothstein last summer barred immigration officials from deporting those aliens while their cases were pending. Rothstein, of Seattle, ordered the INS to give the aliens work permits and either act on their cases within 90 days or provide them notice.

The government is appealing her order to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. O'Connor, who hears emergency matters from the 9th Circuit court, lifted Rothstein's order until the appeal is decided.

In seeking the order granted Friday, Solicitor General Drew Days III said Rothstein's order would create "widespread interference with the administration of the immigration laws."

The Justice Department has asked the high court to set aside the ruling that let the aliens renew their bids for legal status.

In a similar immigration case, the Supreme Court last June set aside a ruling that had given 300,000 other illegal aliens a new chance to seek legal status under the amnesty program.

The justices said courts did not have enough information to decide whether the aliens were eligible to contest their cases. Appeals probably should be allowed only for those who actually sought to apply and were rejected, the court said.

The case acted on Friday is INS vs. Immigrant Assistance Project of the Los Angeles County Federation of Labor, A-426.

Webster B. 'Dan' Todd, Jr., brother of New Jersey Gov.-elect Christie Whitman, leaves a Newark, N.J. office building through an underground loading dock after ending his deposition to Democratic attorneys on Friday. Todd reportedly told investigators that nothing could reverse the election's outcome.

Controversy over New Jersey vote heats up

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The brother of Gov.-elect Christie Whitman told Democratic attorneys looking into charges of vote suppression that nothing could be used to reverse the Republican's narrow victory, the attorneys said Friday.

Webster B. "Dan" Todd Jr. testified before attorneys for the Democratic State Committee as part of a lawsuit to overturn Whitman's 26,620-vote victory over Gov. Jim Florio. Todd was questioned for four hours over two days about whether Whitman's campaign suppressed the black vote in the Nov. 2 election.

Whitman's campaign manager, Ed Rollins, had said Republicans paid black ministers and Democratic operatives $500,000 to keep them from urging blacks to vote for Florio. He later retracted the statement, and Whitman maintains that he was lying.

Todd was his sister's campaign manager before Rollins took over in late September, and then he remained a top adviser. He repeatedly denied knowledge of any payments, according to a 137-page transcript of the deposition.

"I cannot say to you we have sufficient evidence to overturn this election," attorney Gerald Krovatin said after the deposition was over.

Todd also was questioned about a statement he made at a symposium at Princeton University two days after the election. Todd attributed Whitman's narrow victory to "getting out the vote on one side and voter sup—." He stopped himself, then continued, "and keeping the vote light in other areas."

When asked what he had planned to say, Todd replied, "I'll be damned if I know. I looked at this tape four or five times, and I don't know what I didn't say."

"Is it your testimony, then, that when you used the term 'voter sup—' you were not using the term 'voter suppression?' " Krovatin asked.

"I don't know if I was using (that word)," Todd said. 'If it said, 'Voter suppression,' I would still add, keeping the vote — I'm not ashamed of 'voter suppression' as a term.

"It's not a normal term but I'll tell you I looked at that thing a half a dozen times since the fourth of November, and I don't know what I was going to say. I know what I did say."

Some Haitians find life difficult in Bahamas

By Richard Cole
Associated Press writer

NASSAU, Bahamas — Selieg Baptiste fled into the night, bushes and fences slashing at his arms and legs as Bahamian immigration police raided a squalid Haitian shantytown.

He escaped. But months later he sits outside his shack on the outskirts of Nassau and remembers, fingering his scars. His T-shirt proclaims "It's Better in the Bahamas," even though life is getting rougher for Baptiste.

The Bahamas, an island paradise with a struggling economy, is cracking down on Haitians living there, running periodic raids and holding some in jail until they or their families can pay their own passage home, usually about $200.

Like most of his increasingly unwelcome Haitian countrymen, Baptiste has no residence papers, no job, no prospects. He's stuck in a Bahamian limbo, without the $2,500 to reach Florida in a smuggler's boat and afraid to go home to Haiti's violence.

Haitians have lived in the Bahamas for decades, brought in by white property owners to work the sugar plantations, at gardening or in heavy construction. The more recent influx of refugees became a campaign issue in last year's elections, however, and the government promised to get tough.

Its new extradition deal with Haiti is on hold until the current crisis in Haiti is resolved, but Baptiste still fears the government raiders.

"They come at 2 a.m. They knock the doors off and come in. We jump over fences, run through the bushes — that's how I got these scars," says the 31-year-old Baptiste. "Now we sleep in the bushes — the children too, sometimes."

The effects of the policy, of course, are not limited to the islands. The raids, along with the protracted struggle in Haiti, are believed responsible for the sharp increase in the number of Haitians smuggled into Florida this month.

Another Haitian, 24-year-old Tiswan Jean-Baptiste, has worked little in his four years in the Bahamas and says he regularly flees immigration raids. "I don't live easily here," he says. "If I had the money, I'd already be in Miami."

Oppression and poverty have traditionally ruled in Haiti, but conditions became even more wretched after the elected president, Jean-Bertrand Aristide, was overthrown in September 1991. The military has terrorized Aristide supporters, and U.N. economic sanctions, meant to pressure Haiti's rulers to reinstate Aristide, have hit the poor hardest by driving up prices and making certain goods scarce.

The number of Haitians in the Bahamas is, at best, fuzzy:

■ The Bahamas' Roman Catholic Bishop Lawrence Burke estimates 25,000 Haitians are now marooned there. "There is a genuine feeling our culture is being threatened," Burke says.

■ Haitian consul Joseph Etienne puts the figure at 35,000 to 40,000.

■ Attorney General Orville Turnquest says more than 50,000 Haitians account for a full fifth of the Bahamas' 260,000 residents.

Robert Sweeting, a member of Parliament from the island of Great Abaco, says the government has decided that whatever the number, it's too many.

"It just got completely out of hand," he says. "These people were just allowed to come in and squat. We're determined to deal with it."

The get-tough policy is strongly supported by 31-year-old Gregory Powell.

Plane crash in California kills 2, hurts 6

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A single-engine training airplane crashed into an apartment building Friday and burst into flames, killing two people and injuring six.

The Italian-made Marchetti M260 aircraft had just taken off from Santa Monica Airport about 1½ miles east of the building when it clipped a power line, slammed into a carport and caught fire, witnesses said. Firefighters quickly extinguished the blaze.

"It was like an earthquake, but an earthquake with a whole lot of shaking and a whole lot of screaming," said building resident Steve Reed, 39. "It looked like the building was on fire."

Two people on the plane were killed, and a third, a man in his 20s, was taken to a hospital with critical injuries, said police Sgt. Gregory Slaughter.

Five people on the ground were injured. Two police officers and another person sustained slight burns and smoke inhalation trying to rescue the plane's occupants, Slaughter said. They were taken to the hospital for treatment.

One additional person was treated for smoke inhalation and another refused treatment.

The names of the dead and injured weren't immediately available.

The plane was registered in Arizona and based at Santa Monica Airport, Slaughter said. A man who answered the telephone at the airport referred all queries to Santa Monica police.

The cause of the crash was under investigation.

Bostonians debate title for 3rd harbor tunnel

By Robert W. Trott
Associated Press writer

BOSTON — It's the Splendid Splinter vs. the Rascal King.

The naming of the third tunnel under Boston Harbor is shaping up as a contest between Boston's biggest sports legend, Ted Williams, and its biggest political legend, James Michael Curley.

Last month, Gov. William Weld brought the former Red Sox left fielder to Boston and unveiled a sign reading "Ted Williams Tunnel."

But Robert Kane, an undertaker from the suburbs, wants to keep the Williams proposal in the dugout.

He says Curley — who served as a Boston city councilor, mayor, Massachusetts governor, U.S. representative and state legislator in a political career spanning 55 years — is a more suitable person to name the tunnel after.

"I'm not trying to deify him. He was not a saint but he accomplished a lot," the 51-year-old Kane said. "There should be some public building or some public structure named after him."

Other than a statue near Fanueil Hall, and an elementary school named for his first wife, nothing in Curley's beloved Boston bears his name.

Curley, who died in 1958 eight days short of his 84th birthday, was one of the nation's most prominent big-city Democratic bosses. The basis for the main character in the book "The Last Hurrah," he was elected mayor in four different decades and served one term as governor.

A friend of immigrants, particularly the Irish, Curley was a populist with an oratorical flair who knew how to use patronage appointments and public works jobs. Indeed, the proposal to name the tunnel after Curley could be viewed as a payback — he gave Kane's uncle a job at the Fire Department.

Curley also served two prison terms — one in 1904 for impersonating a friend at a civil service exam, and during his last mayoral term for mail fraud. President Truman pardoned Curley for the mail fraud conviction.

While Curley, dubbed "The Rascal King" in a recent biography of that title by Jack Beatty, presided over City Hall and Boston's neighborhoods, Williams' domain was more centered — left field and home plate at Fenway Park.

Williams — also known as Teddy Ballgame and the Thumper — was the last major league baseball player to hit .400, with a .406 average in 1941. He amassed 521 home runs, 1,839 RBIs and 2,654 hits despite missing about five years of playing time because he served as a Marine pilot during World War II and the Korean War. In his last at-bat, Williams clouted a homer at Fenway Park.

Weld said he chose the 75-year-old Williams because too many public structures are named for politicians. Williams, who also has roads named for him in Massachusetts and his native San Diego, called it one of his greatest honors.

But some Democrats said Weld was premature in declaring the tunnel named for Williams, a Republican fishing buddy of former President Bush.

"The governor had the signs made and the announcements made like it was cut and dried," said Rep. Thomas Kennedy, who filed Kane's bill.

Rep. Steven Karol, chairman of the committee that will rule on the bills, has said the tunnel won't be named until construction is finished, sometime in 1995.

Maryland voters cast ballots in woman's garage

CHARLESTOWN MANOR, Md. (AP) — Olga Ganderton awoke from a nightmare Friday, thinking she had forgotten to vote. Little wonder it was heavy on her mind. The only polling place opened in her garage at 7 a.m.

Half of her two-car garage was the site for Charlestown Manor's own Black Friday — the day sometimes bitterly divided voters cast ballots on whether to be annexed by nearby Charlestown to get city water.

Mrs. Ganderton, who was the fifth voter, offered her garage as part of her civic duty. It didn't hurt that she supported the annexation.

"They had nowhere to go and they had to be on some property to be annexed so I offered my garage," she said.

Stanley M. Hearne, Charlestown town administrator, said Cecil County and the state had approved the site.

"It's a routine voting process," said Pete Williams, supervisor of the Charlestown Board of Elections. He recalled the last time the annexation vote was taken in the late 1980s it was in a recreational vehicle.

The garage was certainly big enough for the 25 eligible voters. But it was a long, cold day for poll workers in this community in the northeastern corner of Maryland. Mrs. Ganderton's gas grill provided a little heat. Every so often, a door had to be opened to clear the garage of fumes and smoke.

"It's like years ago when you only had those pot-belied stoves to keep you warm," Mrs. Ganderton said.

By noon, 13 people had cast paper ballots in a wooden box and election judge Esther Heisler used the handle of a fly swatter to keep the ballots pushed down.

But the issue of annexation had so divided the unincorporated neighborhood that some residents who opposed the move were taking their time about voting.

"I'm going to wait and let them freeze as long as I can," said Bill Schreffler, Mrs. Ganderton's nephew, who lives two doors away. He and his wife, Debbie voted at 12:30 p.m.

The Schrefflers said their well was one of the better ones in the neighborhood and they didn't want to be annexed to get city water.

"I don't want to live here in the town and pay county taxes and town taxes," Mrs. Schreffler said. "There are too many rules and regulations with the town."

Dorathy Fulmer, 76, who lives next door to Mrs. Ganderton, was also taking her time about voting.

Child's starvation, burns focus attention on welfare agency

Hannah Rorden
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — Five-year-old Clifford Triplett's favorite thing to do when he visited his grandmother was eat — chicken, spaghetti, just about anything.

On Friday the little boy was in a hospital suffering from malnutrition and dehydration that left him weighing just 18 pounds. He also was burned and bruised. His mother and her boyfriend were in jail, charged with aggravated battery to a child.

And the state's child welfare agency — which at least twice this year has faced allegations that it badly failed an abused child — was again under scrutiny because relatives said they had reported the situation and child welfare officials did nothing.

On Thanksgiving, Clifford's mother, Aretha McKinney, took him to a hospital, saying he was passing in and out of consciousness.

Clifford weighed what a 1-year-old might weigh and had burns and bruises on his feet, head and bottom, said nursing supervisor Purita Zamora of St. Bernard Hospital.

He was sent to Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center and was in serious condition Friday. Doctors said he was severely malnourished and dehydrated and alerted police.

Police officer Antonio Artis saw Clifford in the hospital. "You know when they show the picture of those children starving in Somalia on TV? That's what he looked like," Artis said.

Police arrested McKinney, 25, and her live-in boyfriend, Eddie Lee Robinson, 34. Both were charged Friday with aggravated battery to a child.

Clifford's mistreatment was no secret to his relatives — and shouldn't have been to the Department of Children and Family Services, either, said McKinney's sister Carla McKinney.

She said the boy "had bruises and was so thin — it was obvious that she wasn't feeding him."

"He couldn't get enough food or water. Sometimes she (Clifford's grandmother) would sneak food down to him," added the sister, who lives upstairs from Clifford with her mother.

Relatives said they repeatedly called DCFS to report that Clifford was being mistreated. Investigators for the agency visited the family a number of times but left Clifford in the home, they said.

"They would send somebody out but they wouldn't do anything about it," Clifford's grandmother, Dorothy McKinney, said Friday.

DCFS spokeswoman Martha Allen said the agency is barred by law from talking about its investigations. But Allen said an agency inspector general appointed by Gov. Jim Edgar this year was investigating the case.

Dorothy McKinney described her grandson as a polite boy who loves playing with toys and games, but loves food most of all.

"He loved to eat, spaghetti, chicken. He loved chicken, just loved chicken," she said.

Dorothy McKinney said she pleaded with her daughter to get assistance for the boy. "She said she was trying to get help for him but nobody would help her," she said.

DCFS took custody of Clifford's siblings, Patricia McKinney, 10, and Eddie Lee Robinson, 2, and placed them in Dorothy McKinney's care, Allen said. A third sibling, Willie Lee Triplett, 7, lives with other relatives in Mississippi, family members said.

DCFS has been criticized in the past year for its handling of two cases.

Anti-pelt marchers target fur district

Horror movie queen 'Elvira' joins thousands of animal rights protesters in New York City.

NEW YORK (AP) — Furriers watched from behind locked storefronts Friday as more than 1,000 animal-rights activists marched through New York's fur district in an annual protest against pelts.

Marchers yelled "Shame on you!" at a few passers-by they spotted wearing fur coats on Seventh Avenue, also called Fashion Avenue — though stickers on street signs changed that to "Compassion Avenue."

Vamp horror queen Elvira rode atop a hearse surrounded by black-suited men carrying signs that said "Fur is Dead."

Furriers didn't lock their doors out of fear; their stores are always locked to prevent thefts. Counter-protesters taped flyers to lampposts and mailboxes reading "Aren't you tired of animal activists telling you what you can't eat or wear?"

Police estimated the crowd at 1,000 to 1,200; protest organizers put it at 2,000.

Speaking at a rally, Friends of Animals president Priscilla Feral told marchers that activists have helped reduce U.S. fur sales from $1.8 billion five years ago to about a third of that last winter.

Karen Handel, a spokeswoman for the Fur Information Council of America, said fur sales were $1.1 billion last winter, up 10 percent from the year before.

Police seek female partner in sex video

NEW YORK (AP) — Rapper Tupac Shakur, in New York to film a PG-rated movie about basketball, also stars in an X-rated production apparently meant for private viewing, a law enforcement source said Friday.

Police searching Shakur's suite at the Parker Meridien Hotel last week found a 20-minute videotape which shows Shakur and a young woman engaged in a sex act, said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Police do not know who the woman is or how old she is and are trying to find her, the source said.

A police spokesman declined to comment on the source's report.

Police got a search warrant for Shakur's hotel room after a 20-year-old woman complained that she was sexually attacked there by the rapper and then offered to three of his friends as a "reward" for their service to him.

Shakur, 22, of Marin City, Calif., Charles Fuller, 23, of Richmond, Calif., and Ricardo Brown, 30, of Miami, were indicted on sodomy and sex abuse charges in the alleged attack. They are free on bail and police are looking for the fourth man.

Shakur's lawyer, Michael Warren, said earlier this week that police had confiscated a cassette but he did not say anything about its contents.

"They seized a lot of things that had to do with his fans, his female fans," Fuller's lawyer, Robert Ellis, said Friday.

The Daily News quoted a law enforcement source Friday as saying the woman on the tape looks like a minor and seems to be drunk or on drugs. "She does not look like she's in her right frame of mind," the News quoted its source as saying.

Ellis indicated that defense lawyers know who Shakur's sex partner is, but he would say only that "it is our understanding that she is not underage, and that she was not intoxicated by drugs or anything else."

The News also reported that police have interviewed other young women who visited Shakur, in town to film "Above the Rim," a movie about basketball.

The paper said Michelle Fuentes, 18, visited Shakur briefly in his hotel room Oct. 13 after he called her in reply to a fan letter. "He was a gentleman," she said. "He didn't even try to kiss me."

At the time of Shakur's arrest, he was free on $55,000 bail in connection with the shooting of two police officers Oct. 31 in Atlanta.

Florida tourism on road to recovery

By Edwin McDowell
N.Y. Times News Service

The homicide statistics seemed to spell disaster for the $31 billion tourist industry in Florida: since the beginning of last winter's tourist season, nine visitors, all of them foreigners, have been killed near some of the state's most popular resorts.

Yet as visitors begin to stream into the state this week, government and private tourism officials say that Florida is unlikely to suffer the economic disaster that had been foreseen by some as recently as two months ago.

Even the end of the American Airlines strike is a positive sign, since the carrier has a hub in Miami and also flies to cities like Orlando, Fort Lauderdale and Tampa.

"We appear to have passed through the eye of the hurricane where the crime issue is concerned," said Dean Sullivan, a spokesman for the Florida Department of Tourism.

Tourists' visits may drop no more than 5 percent, officials say, and may even reach last year's level.

The main reason is that 93 percent of Florida tourists are repeat visitors familiar with the surroundings and, the reasoning goes, less likely to be deterred by fear of crime. And Florida remains the nation's top travel destination, polls say.

Also, bargain air fares to Florida, a proven stimulus to travel, are proliferating. And the state tourist commission is planning to spend huge amounts of money on advertising to stoke this winter season.

Jim West, owner of Uniglobe West Horizons Travel of Worthington, Ohio, is a Florida booster.

"Most people still choose Florida over everywhere else," he contended. "They may be wary of Florida if they've never been there before. But most have been to Florida previously without encountering any security problems, so they feel safe returning."

Moreover, the state has moved vigorously to reassure tourists — by posting security guards at roadside rest stops, installing toll-free visitors' help lines, printing multilingual brochures about safety and adding 100 cars donated by auto-rental companies for police patrols.

Still, the foreign tourists, who make up 15 percent of the trade, are a wild card. Florida officials are worried about a drop-off in visits, especially from Europe, but even here there may be some basis for optimism.

"We expect a reduction in visitors from Germany and Britain," said Miyco Villafana, a spokesman for the Greater Miami Convention and Visitors Bureau. "But we're optimistic that the Italian market will grow, and Latin America remains strong."

International visitors have taken up the slack in recent years as the number of American visitors to Miami has flagged. Some of that has to do with the recession, which appears to be ending, if at an uneven pace around the country.

In fact, from the beaches of Pensacola, Fort Lauderdale and Daytona to the theme parks near Orlando, industry officials say their biggest concern remains the economies of the Northeast and Midwest, regions that contribute roughly 48 percent of Florida's 40.5 million visitors.

The state's commerce secretary, Greg Farmer, said Florida tourism would probably remain at a relatively sluggish level, although one state official said privately that he would be happy if tourism fell no more than 5 percent — which would be 2 million visitors.

Recent tourism signals are difficult to decipher. August figures, the most recent available, show that the number of visitors plummeted 12 percent from the comparable month in 1992.

Yet, despite the killings, each of the previous seven months of 1993 showed tourist increases. And the last two killings of the nine, which accelerated a torrent of bad international publicity, occurred in September. In tourism terms, their effect will not be known until the month's figures are released in about two weeks.

Florida is the top state destination in autumn, far ahead of California, the runner-up in that period, a survey of 1,500 American adults by the Washington-based Travel Industry Association said. The survey was completed on Sept. 19, five days after the killing of the ninth foreigner, Gary Colley, a Briton, at a rest stop along an interstate highway near Tallahassee.

In another survey, also completed on Sept. 19, Carlson Travel agencies across the United States found that bookings for Florida were as strong as last year. And the Uniglobe Travel network reported last week that Florida remained the most popular destination with Americans in the upper Midwest and Northeast.

But while surveys can tell how many people have booked trips to Florida or made hotel reservations, they cannot say how many others would have booked, had the perception of danger, or the economy, been happier.

"Because of the recession, our numbers have been mostly flat the last couple of years," said William C. Peeper, executive director of the Orlando-Orange County Convention and Visitors Bureau, whose area attracts more than 13 million people annually.

"We haven't seen any signs of a drop-off for this winter, but we probably won't be able to tell for a couple of months."

And in Fort Lauderdale, where foreigners account for about a quarter of the 5.1 million visitors, officials say there have been few cancellations, but a softness in bookings for later in the season. European travelers tend to make their plans three months or more in advance.

Likewise, European visits were up 9 percent through September in the St. Petersburg-Clearwater area, where tourism is the leading industry. "But there's concern that long-range bookings are not as strong as they were expected to be," said Lee Daniel of the area convention and visitors bureau.

To bolster foreign tourism, five public and private organizations in St. Petersburg and Tampa will begin a $500,000 British advertising campaign in January.

L.A. council votes to boycott '95 Rose Parade

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — The City Council has voted 11-1 to boycott the Rose Parade on New Year's Day 1995 unless the parade's Executive Committee is integrated with women and minorities.

Council members said Wednesday that they did not withdraw from the Jan. 1, 1994 parade in nearby Pasadena because of financial and contractual commitments to enter a float in the event.

Los Angeles Councilwoman Jackie Goldberg — a parade fan who has camped overnight on Pasadena's Colorado Boulevard to get a good viewing spot — said the threat of a 1995 boycott sends a strong message to parade organizers that an all-male, all-white Executive Committee is unacceptable.

"It is an exciting and thrilling event," Goldberg said. "But in good conscience it is time for them to change. This is one of the last bastions of all-white, all-male leadership of a major event of Southern California."

If the committee is not integrated, Los Angeles would end 96 years of participation in the New Year's Day parade, which is seen on television by 425 million people in 90 countries.

In reaction to the council vote, the Tournament of Roses Association issued a statement listing recent steps taken to include more minorities and women, including formation of a Membership Diversity Committee and implementation of an affirmative action plan.

"Since last December, the Tournament of Roses has taken significant actions to foster greater diversity within its organization," the statement said.

The statement also says the association recently reorganized the Board of Directors of the Tournament of Roses Foundation to include minorities and women.

But the statement did not address the call to integrate the separate Executive Committee — which is the top governing body of the association — and tournament officials refused comment.

The statement concluded by saying it was "clear that the Los Angeles City Council is not fully aware of the progress that has been made, and we will contact them immediately to brief each council member individually on the issues and actions pertinent to this matter."

Civil rights leaders recently have stepped up protests of the makeup of the Executive Committee but Los Angeles Councilwoman Rita Walters said people have struggled for decades to win more involvement by minorities in the parade and associated Rose Queen pageant.

The motion approved by the council criticizes the organization that runs the parade as "rife with a tradition of denying women and persons of color access to vendor and service contracts, as well as full participation in its committees and programs."

Los Angeles Councilman Mark Ridley-Thomas noted that the city has signed contracts and $100,000 in city money has been committed already to building a float for the parade two months from now. He said the motion gives the parade organizers plenty of time to integrate the Executive Committee.

"Any institution that has a history that has been documented that speaks of exclusion on basis of gender and race does not deserve the support of a municipality such as city of Los Angeles.

The councilman pressed for a vote Wednesday even though Councilman Richard Alatorre asked that the matter be delayed a week, claiming "negotiations are taking place and appointments are imminent."

Councilman Hal Bernson cast the lone vote against the motion, saying he thinks the committee should be integrated but believes negotiations being mediated by attorney Stanley Sanders should be given a chance to resolve the conflict.

"I think we ought to take care of Los Angeles' problems," Bernson said. "I don't approve of it (situation) but there are other ways to deal with it. Let the negotiations continue."

Sanders, who attended the council meeting, said he was asked by Los Angeles Mayor Richard Riordan to try to mediate a resolution but he declined comment when asked if an announcement is imminent about integrating the nine-person Executive Committee.

A former Los Angeles Parks Commissioner and mayoral candidate, Sanders said he does not expect the hard-line taken by the council will jeopardize negotiations on integrating the Executive Committee.

"My sense is it really doesn't affect this (negotiating) process," Sanders said.

'Six Companies' seeks new role in Chinese America

SAN FRANCISCO (NYT) — After overseeing the affairs of Chinese America for nearly a century, the once-dominant Chinese Six Companies is today a mere shadow of its former self.

The Six Companies, also known as the Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association, exerted enormous influence from 1882 until the 1970s through its network of traditional district and family associations.

But this influence waned with the emergence of social service agencies and advocacy groups, as well as an explosion of the Chinese American population after changes in U.S. immigration laws.

Lately, growing interest among Chinese Americans in China's affairs, along with the recent thawing of relations between China and Taiwan, have cut into one of the Six Companies' primary functions: anti-Communist watchdog.

"Chinatown is very different than before," said board member Thomas Ng, a San Francisco fire commissioner affiliated with the group for more than 20 years.

Adrift in a post-Cold War era, the staunchly pro-Taiwan group faces an uncertain future. Confronted with internal disputes, financial problems and a rapidly changing local and global political landscape, the Six Companies is under pressure to reform.

"The Six Companies has a sound structure, particularly in respect to its networks that exist throughout the world, but it is trapped in an old body," said Chinatown lawyer Edward Liu. "It is led by old-guard leaders who lack vision."

Reform-minded members say outmoded politics and archaic bylaws, last revised in 1930, are hindering the Six Companies' ability to adapt to rapidly changing needs.

For instance, the bylaws stipulate that the group's general counsel must be a sai yen, or Caucasian. And while they don't prohibit women on its board, a female has yet to hold a director's post.

"If the Chinese Six Companies officially represents all Chinese in America, they should let other people join in," said Eddie Au, of the Sam Yup association.

One of the most dramatic changes in the last two decades has been the increased diversity of the Chinese American community, once dominated by a fairly homogeneous group of villagers from Guangdong's Pearl River Delta.

The seven organizations that make up the Six Companies — the Sam Yup, Ning Yung, Yan Wo, Yung Wo, Sue Hing, Hop Wo and Kong Chow benevolent associations — represent people from the districts of this delta region, roughly the size of the Bay Area.

Today, however, the 315,345 Bay Area Chinese include immigrants from Taiwan, Southeast Asia, South America and numerous regions of China.

Phoenix's mother discusses son's overdose

LOS ANGELES (AP) — River Phoenix's mother says her son was not a regular drug user and that his overdose stemmed from a party scene "way beyond his usual experience and control."

"It is my prayer that River's leaving in this way will focus the attention of the world on how painfully the spirits of his generation are being worn down," his mother, Arlynn "Heart" Phoenix, said in a letter published in Wednesday's Los Angeles Times.

The 23-year-old rising star of "Stand by Me" and "My Own Private Idaho" died of an overdose of cocaine and heroin after partying early Halloween morning at the Viper Room, a trendy Hollywood nightclub co-owned by actor Johnny Depp.

Mrs. Phoenix, who lives in Gainesville, Fla., said the world is a confusing place for young people "and we need to address that." She wrote:

"Drug abuse is a symptom of an unfeeling, materialistic, success-oriented world where the feelings and creativity of young people are not seen as important."

Despite reports her son was a frequent heroin user, he was not an addict, she said.

"His friends, co-workers and the rest of our family know that River was not a regular drug user," she wrote. "He lived at home in Florida with us and was almost never a part of the 'club scene' in Los Angeles.

"He had just arrived in L.A. from the pristine beauty and quietness of Utah where he was filming for six weeks. We feel that the excitement and energy of the Halloween nightclub and party scene were way beyond his usual experience and control."

Industrious Egypt chokes its people

By Chris Hedges
N.Y. Times News Service

KAFR AL-ILW, Egypt — When the students at the Kafr al-Ilw primary school begin to cough uncontrollably they are sent home.

They are also dismissed early when their sores spread and fester, when they begin to faint in the classroom, when they lose clumps of hair, and when the stinging in their eyes makes it impossible to read.

As they pass under the shadow of the towering stacks of the Portland Helwan Cement Co., the boys and girls leave footprints in the milky colored dust that cloaks the trees, houses, crops, and soil. And when they get to their mud-walled huts, the shuttered windows are covered by newspaper or cloth to keep back the gritty powder of unburned calcium and cement.

Those parents who can afford it send their children away for "the cure," a trip to distant friends or relatives where they can recover. The others are kept indoors for several days until they improve.

"Everything is dying," said Mansour Salim Mohammed, a 63-year-old farmer, as he sat near his field. "A third of my crop fails. The animals often won't eat and four of my seven cows have died in the last two years. The water we use to irrigate is reddish brown or yellow and stinks. My eyes burn and at times I can't see."

Like many developing countries that made the headlong push toward industrialization, Egypt is now confronting the ecological damage unleashed by huge state industries, like these in the 10-mile-long industrial belt in the city of Helwan, that pump pollutants into the air and spew chemicals and waste into the water.

But the heavy industry is owned and managed by the state, and the government is often more concerned with raising production and providing jobs than limiting environmental damage.

"It is no accident that the world's most polluted countries are socialist countries," said Said Naggar, a former executive director of the World Bank who last year set up the Civic Forum, a liberal research organization. "The area around Helwan once had some of the most beautiful winter resorts in the world, but it has been polluted by iron, steel, and cement factories, all from the public sector, that refuses to install pollution devices."

The air in Cairo, and the industrial belt around the city, is a noxious yellow haze. Plants and factories spew waste directly into the Nile, damaging a river that provides over 95 percent of the country's water needs. Many of Egypt's 58 million people, especially those in urban areas, are tormented by high lead levels, liver problems, and respiratory ailments, health workers say. Workers in the cotton fields are poisoned by pesticides and those in the tanning industry by exposure to chemicals used to cure leather.

"If we tried to enforce the laws we have now, we would have to close down all the factories that dump refuse into the Nile," said Dr. Salah Hafez, the chairman of the Egyptian Environmental Affairs Agency.

Critics say that government agencies charged with enforcing environmental requirements, such as installing filters on the smoke stacks in the Helwan industrial strip, are crippled by bureaucratic infighting, corruption, and ineptitude.

A new environmental law has been held up in Parliament for three years while the 67 existing statutes languish unenforced on the books.

Bahaa Dien Hafez Bakri, a professor of environmental and urban ecology at Cairo University, said: "There is no serious research under way to find out about environmental damage and there is no attempt by the government to enforce the environmental laws we already have. The failure of the central government to respond has meant that there is no check on the environmental damage."

The villages around Kafr al-Ilw, 20 miles south of Cairo, have pleaded with government officials to enforce the use of the filters in the smoke stacks and import technology to reduce the fumes and dust pumped into the air around Helwan.

But Salah Abdel Kader, the local health inspector, says his pleas for assistance go unheeded. And he dismissed a recent government report that said that only 29 percent of the some 300,000 who live near the Helwan factories suffered respiratory problems caused by pollutants.

"About 80 percent of the people here have chronic bronchitis and eye infections," said Kader, "and everyone has sores, rashes, and hair loss. Babies are born with a condition called pigeon chest and emphysema.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

■ Dedicated planned

Good Shepherd Evangelical Lutheran Church, 3800 Bluebird Lane, will dedicate new hymnals in a special service at 10:45 a.m. Sunday.

"Christian Worship: A Lutheran Hymnal" is the title of the book published in August by Northwestern Publishing House, the publishing arm of the Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod, located in Milwaukee, Wis. A decade of research and preparation have gone into the new book, which contains five major services and 600 hymns.

The most obvious change from "The Lutheran Hymnal," published in 1941, is an updating of language to reflect more contemporary usage, said a releae from the church. Change in worship language has been a controversial issue in some hymnals released in the last decade. Some recent worship material and Bible translations have advocated new terms for God to down play or remove masculine imagery for God.

This Wisconsin Synod hymnal, reflecting the biblical conservatism of that church body, has avoided extreme changes. The Father, Son and Holy Spirit remain unchanged, but the new book does tend to avoid so-called "exclusive" language with reference to people.

But some older language is retained, especially for well-known traditional texts or when revision would not work well poetically. An occasional "thou" or "thy" also remain for the same reason.

The 1983 synodical convention decision which launched the hymnal project determined that it would be a "new/revised" hymnal. So it is designed to be relatively comfortable for those who used its 1941 predecessor, the release said. The main services from that earlier book are revised with only modest changes.

The public is invited to attend the service.

■ Choir to perform

"Wise Guys and Starry Skies" will be performed by First Presbyterian Church's Children's Choir at 6:30 p.m. Dec. 5 in the sanctuary, 800 W. Texas Ave.

The public is invited to attend.

■ Last service conducted

The Rev. David Krenke of Good Shepherd Lutheran Church will be conducting his last service here Sunday.

He has accepted a call to serve as pastor at a sister congregation in Leesburg, Fla. Guests are invited to attend the church worship service at 10:45 a.m.

■ Women hold meeting

Women's Aglow of the Permian Basin is holding its Night Outreach Meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Odessa's Best Western garden Oasis, 110 W. I-20.

This month's speaker will be Midlander Pat eaves. Mrs. Eaves and her husband, Willie, are the owners of Classic Hair Designs, Midland.

An optional buffet dinner will be served in the restaurant beginning at 6:15 p.m. Cost is $6.50.

All are invited to attend.

■ Art to be auctioned

Arts and crafts made by members of Ranchland Heights Baptist Church will be auctioned at 7 p.m., Dec. 3 at the Suburban Lions Club building, 2550 Flynt.

Homemade quilts, wooden games, embroidered linens, cakes, relishes, and other crafts will be auctioned. Proceeds from this sale will be given for the Lottie Moon Christmas offering for foreign missions. For more information call the Women's Missionary Union President, Sarah Crawford, at 684-7048 or the church office at 697-4471.

The young people will have a cornbread and bean supper at 5:30 p.m. the same day. This is a fund raiser for youth activities. Rev. Lucian Rudd, pastor of the church invites everyone to attend all of these activities.

■ Advent to begin

St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3001 West Kansas, will begin the season of Advent with a special service at 5 p.m. Sunday in the sanctuary of the church.

The Hanging of the Greens is a family worship where the sanctuary is decorated for the season.

Narrated by Heather and Bert Bostic, many different families will bring in the greenery and place it to be used during the season of Advent. Included in the service is a liturgy to bless the Advent Wreath and Chrismon Tree and the congregational singing of many Advent and Christmas Carols.

A covered dish dinner will follow in the fellowship hall and the evening will conclude with the Annual Youth Cake Auction. The public is invited to attend.

■ Festival to be held

An Advent Festival will be held at Trinity Presbyterian Church, Louisiana at Andrews Highway from 3 to 7 p.m. Dec. 5.

There will be arts and crafts, Christmas Shirts, games, study and fellowship for all ages.

Dinner will be served and childcare is available. For more information, call the church office, 682-2514 or Jan Frank, 699-4125.

Also the men of Trinity Presbyterian are meeting each Thursday morning at Green's Restaurant, 20-B Village Circle, at 6:15 a.m. for breakfast, Bible study and fellowship. Call Phillip Lawson, 694-200 for additional information.

■ Meeting to be held

ODESSA — Women's Aglow Fellowship — Odessa Chapter will hold its monthly fellowship meeting at 10 a.m. Wednesday at Best Western Oasis, 110 W. Interstate 20.

The speaker for December will be Debra Gwinn, a registered nurse by degree, but now in full-time ministry. Miss Gwinn's focus is to promote women and to help them get established in their callings. Her topic will be "How to Walk in Your Calling."

■ Preparation planned

A time of preparing the building for the Advent and Christmas seasons will be held Sunday at First United Methodist Church, Main Street at Ohio Avenue.

The annual "Christmas at First Methodist" celebration begins at 5:45 p.m. with classes decorating their rooms or assigned areas. At 6:30 p.m. a "Hanging of the Greens" service will be held in the sanctuary.

Following this service will be a time of refreshment and fellowship. Included in the fellowship time will be a living nativity scene.

The public is invited to attend. Child care will be available for infants and toddlers. For more information contact the church office at 682-3701.

■ AIDS service set

First United Methodist Church Chapel, Main at Ohio, will hold World AIDS Day Worship Service from noon to 12:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Lunch will be provided for a nominal fee from 11:30 a.m. to noon and 12:30 to 1:00 p.m. at the church.

■ Church hosts program

The Unitarian Universalist Church of Midland will host a program entitled "Who is Bahu-'u'llah?" at 9:45 a.m. Sunday.

Fly

This program will outline the life of the founder of the Baha'i Faith. This religion, founded in the last 19th century in the Middle East, is one of the world's most wide spread and rapidly growing religions.

The speaker will be David Fly, former chairman of the Midland and Odessa Baha'i communities. He is experienced as a teacher at Baha'i schools throughout the state of Texas. He teaches economics and coaches the Academic Decathlon and Texas Star Academic Challenge Teams at Lee High School in Midland.

The public is invited to attend.

■ Open House planned

The Bookstore of Holy Trinity Episcopal Church will hold an Open House on Monday and Tuesday.

Hours are from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. The Bookstore, 1412 W. Illinois Ave., is located adjacent to the church in the middle of the block.

Many Christmas gift ideas, such as books, Bibles, and numerous other articles will be on display. Refreshments will be served and Mrs. Grace Jordan, the bookstore manager, invites the public to come by.

■ Church to celebrate

Midland Lutheran Church, 2705 W. Michigan Ave., will celebrate the first Sunday in Advent this Sunday with a 10:30 Communion Service.

A special part of the celebration is the lighting of the Advent Wreath. The wreath holds four candles, one for each week of the Advent season. These candles serve to remind us of the coming of Jesus as the "Light of the World." A different candle is lit on each of the four Sundays before Christmas in anticipation of the coming Holy Event.

At Midland Lutheran, a different family will light each candle. The first candle, the Prophecy Candle will be lit by Richard and Phyliss Faulkner and their son Kevin.

"O Come, O Come, Emmanuel" will be presented by youth instrumentalists and choir. The Sunday school hour for all ages begins at 9:15 a.m.

Special midweek Advent services will be held each Wednesday at 7 p.m. beginning Dec. 1. Prior to the service a light supper will be served at 6 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall for a nominal charge.

The public is invited to share in the celebration of the Advent Season with Midland Lutheran. For more information call the Rev. Ronald Meyer, 694-1373.

■ Church to celebrate

Hope Lutheran Church, 2003 N. A St., will celebrate the first Sunday of Advent at its 8:30 and 10:30 a.m. services Sunday.

Advent marks the start of the church year. It is a four-week period of preparation for Christ's coming as the baby Jesus at christmas.

■ More religion/4B

A single candle will be lit on the Advent wreath to observe the Sunday and will be followed by the lighting of an additional candle each of the following three weeks of the Advent season. The Rev. David Herman, pastor of the church, wil deliver the sermon.

Leabeth Quinn is organist. The public is invited to attend.

In addition, Hope Lutheran Church will hold a 15 minute Advent meditation led by Mary Beth Anton at 6:15 p.m. Wednesdays during Advent beginning dec. 1. the worship will be preceded by a supper meal at 5:30 p.m. and followed by choir rehearsals for all ages.

THE PRICE OF "FREE" WILL

You might say that "the price of free will" is a contradiction in terms...but is it?

Slowly, then increasingly faster, this gleaming, blurring jet-propelled bird skims the runway, until, with a shriek, and then a roar, it thrusts skyward, able to transport us anywhere in the world within hours. Enmeshed in the magic of the moment, some might feel drawn to follow an impulse, buy a ticket and "leave our cares behind". It is possible, you know. Plastic credit is easy enough to obtain, as most of us realize. Yet, if we use our free will inappropriately, we still pay the price.

Truly, God Himself gave us free will...and the ability to discern what is practical from what is possible. By worshiping God and meditating upon His Word, God will show us the way. Follow His will. Your destination is sure...and God has paid the price.

Baptists to turn off TV in protest

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — May 1 is the day North Carolina Baptists will turn off their television sets to protest violence and moral depravity depicted on some television shows.

More than 4,000 delegates to the state's annual convention voted unanimously last week to declare that day as the Great American TV Turn-Off Day.

"Many of us are deeply concerned today about the programs which are continually transmitted into the homes of America by the television industry," said the Rev. Clay Warf, pastor of Roxboro Baptist Church.

"We invite other Baptist state conventions to join us in turning off our televisions on this day in protest of the assault on Christian morals and values as well as common decency."

The resolution represents one more protest by Christian denominations against television programming. A number of denominations protested the contents of "NYPD Blue," a new police show that aired this fall and contains profanity, nudity and sex.

Earlier this month, the state Baptist newspaper editorialized against television as "a powerful medium that portrays illicit sex, alcohol and drugs and violence of all sorts as the norm."

The Baptist State Convention of North Carolina has about 1.2 million members in 3,577 churches.

WHO ARE THE UNITARIANS?

They are people who think about their beliefs and then live those beliefs.

If you thought you had "to think alone and like it" you may find a happy church home within the Unitarian Universalist fellowship, in intellectual company with Emerson, Jefferson, Thoreau, Robert Goddard, Susan B. Anthony, and other Unitarian Thinkers, past and present.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

■ Music, missions set

"December will be a month of emphasizing music and missions at Alamo Heights Baptist Church," said David Kirby, the church's minister of music.

"Our church will try to reach our largest foreign mission offering goal ever, so that those in our world who have not yet heard the gospel of Christ might have the opportunity. We will also seek to worship our Lord and Savior through several musical productions during the month."

Kicking off the month will be the Foreign Mission Banquet at 6 p.m. Dec. 4. The banquet will feature the Rev. Ebbie Smith, professor of ethics and former missionary to Indonesia.

Reservations for the banquet can be made by calling the church office 697-3101 by 5 p.m. Dec. 1.

A donation of $5 per family is suggested.

Smith will also speak in the morning service at 11 a.m. Dec. 5.

The Alamo Singers, composed of junior and senior high school students, will present the musical "And It Came to Pass" at 6 p.m. Dec. 5.

Other musical presentations include, "Don't Be Afraid Brigade" and "Come Celebrate Jesus," presented by the children's choir and adult worship choir respectively. These presentations will take place beginning at 6 p.m. Dec. 12.

A special debut presentation of "A Cowboy Christmas Tale" will be presented at 6 p.m. Dec. 19. This musical was co-written by Ben Conray, pastor of the church, and will depict the story of Christ as told by a trail boss on a cattle drive.

Finally, there will be a candlelight service at 6 p.m. Dec. 22.

The public is invited to participate in the special activities through the month at Alamo Heights, 1305 N. Midland Drive.

■ Seminar scheduled

The Rev. Leroy Crouch of Anaheim, Calif., will be conducting a Restoration Ministries Seminar Dec. 4-11 at the former Ramada Inn, 3100 W. Wall Ave.

Topics of discussion include: "Living in the Holy of Holies," "Entering His Sabbath Rest," "Feast and Holy Convocations," and "Restoring Personal Relationships."

Crouch has been a full-gospel minister for 39 years.
in the Spirit. The Seminar will be held at the former Ramada Inn, 3100 W. Wall in Midland. Meetings are scheduled for Sabbath and Sunday at 2 p.m. and Monday through Friday at 7 p.m.

Kent Christian Radio, 920 AM and 90.5 FM, is sponsoring the seminar, and Harold Willis, manager, will be airing daily interviews. Also, Crouch will be Al and Tommie Cooper's guest on KMLM Prime Time Christian Broadcasting at 11 a.m. Dec. 6.

He will be interviewed by Debra Guinn of KKKK Christian Radio (99.1 FM), and the interviews will be aired at 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Dec. 7.

Crouch will also be ministering at Living Waters Full-Gospel Fellowship, 4500 W. Illinois Ave., at 11 a.m. Dec. 12.

He will be available for ministry through Dec. 15. For more information call 686-8036 or 683-6555.

■ Missionary returns

Jeffrey Wade Hales, son of Lloyd and Barbara Hales of Midland, returned last week from a two-year voluntary mission in London, England for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

A special welcome home service will be held for Hales at 2:45 p.m. Sunday in the chapel at 4508 Gateway. Visitors are welcome.

"It was the greatest learning experience of my life," said Hales. "It has helped me to come to a realization of who I am, as well as where my priorities should lie and has taught me the necessity of having strong, quality family relationships and values."

Presently, he plans to work in Midland until January when he can resume his studies in computer science at Brigham Young University.

■ Revival scheduled

"If My People..." is the theme of a revival scheduled at Northwestern Baptist Church, 3901 Mockingbird Lane, Sunday through Wednesday.

The Rev. Bruce Troy, pastor of Second Baptist Church, Odessa, will be the evangelist and Rick Bender, minister of music at Northwestern, will lead the music.

Daytime services will be at noon Monday through Wednesday. All are invited to bring a sack lunch and eat together preceding the service. The church will furnish tea and coffee. Other daily services begin at 7 p.m.

All are invited to attend. For more information call the church, 689-0612.

Monk benched

ASHBURN, Va. — Art Monk, the NFL's all-time leading receiver, is getting benched by the Washington Redskins in favor of what their coach calls a "young kid" who should have stayed in school another year.

Nobody — from Monk, a 14-year veteran, to coach Richie Petitbon, to the Redskins' other receivers — is happy about it. Except, possibly, 1992 Heisman Trophy winner Desmond Howard, and he's not talking.

But with a 2-8 record and the season a wipeout, the Redskins' front office that laid out $5.8 million and a pair of first-round draft choices to snare Howard finally has prevailed over the coaches.

Battle of the 'bones set

■ Midland Lee's wishbone offense comes face to face with the wishbone of the Lewisville Farmers today at Memorial Stadium.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

'Bones will literally collide at 2 p.m. today at Memorial Stadium as 11-1 Midland Lee plays host to undefeated Lewisville (11-0-1) in the Class 5A Division II (Small School) Region I football playoff battle.

Wishbone vs. Wishbone. Maroon and White vs. Maroon and White. These two teams could look at each other and swear they are at home.

And they are about as evenly matched as two football teams can get, according to the Harris Rating System, which has Lewisville at No. 8 and Lee at No. 9.

"It should be something," says Lee head football coach Earl Miller. "These are two good football teams and Lewisville is going to be excited about playing here because they lost to Odessa Permian last year at Ratliff Stadium at this same stage of the playoffs. All the ingredients are here for a great game.

"It's also a big weekend for Midland. We're playing at home and bringing people into town. It's a good thing for Midland on one of the biggest shopping weekends of the year."

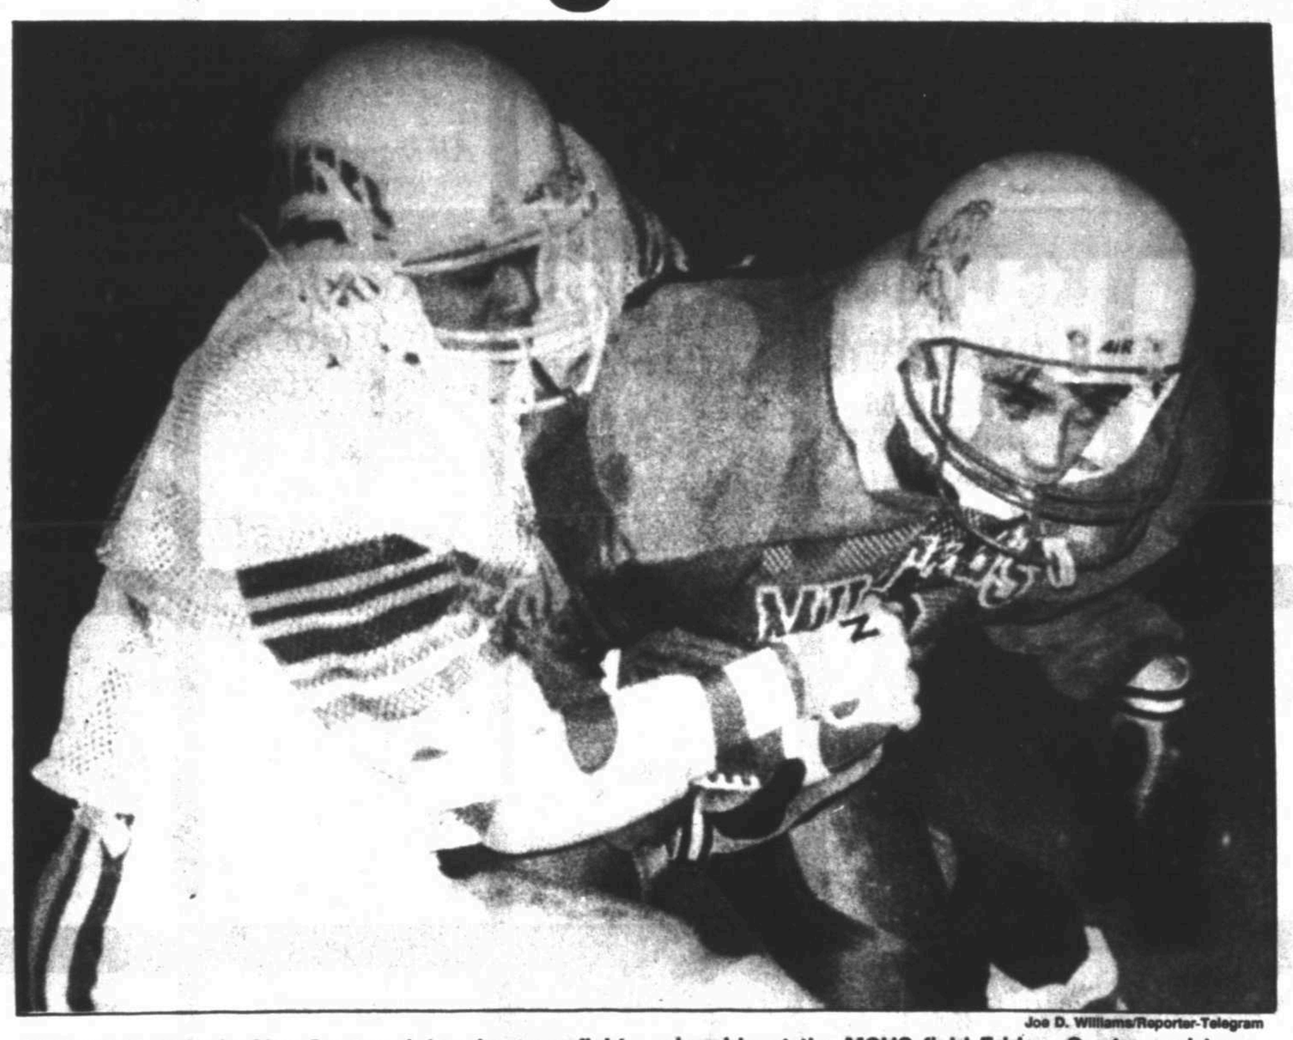
Mustangs win state title



Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Midland Christian's Clay Gunter, right, churns upfield for a first down in the Mustangs' 74-34 win over El Paso Jesus Chapel for the TAPPS six-man state championship at the MCHS field Friday. Gunter and teammate Kyle Jackson scored all but one MCHS' touchdowns as the Mustangs won their third straight title.

■ Midland Christian uses a stingy second half defense to shut down El Paso Jesus Chapel for its third straight state championship.

By Pete Herndon

Midland Christian running back Kyle Jackson turned in what literally proved to be a bone-chilling performance in the state championship six-man football game of the Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools Friday night.

It was bone-chilling for MCHS coach James Blake, anyway.

"I want you guys to know that water is cold," Blake said after having the team's water bucket dumped down his back in the waning moments of the Mustangs' 74-34 win over El Paso Jesus Chapel. It was Midland Christian's third consecutive state championship.

"The thing that really makes this special is that it's not only back-to-back championships, but back-to-back undefeated seasons. We are 12-0. We've won 31 in a row, now. That rubs off on the younger kids. You heard what they were saying. They don't want to be the ones to break the string."

Jackson, an all-state running back and linebacker, sent his teammates scurrying for the water bucket with Blake's name on it by scoring three second half touchdowns.

It was his 62-yard scoring run early in the third quarter that gave MCHS a 52-34 lead and appeared to put the Mus-

Red Devils break Hart

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

ODESSA — For almost two quarters it looked as if the Hart Longhorns would once again toy with the emotions of the Rankin Red Devils. But Rankin refused to be Hart-broken for two years in a row.

The Red Devils came back from a 14-point, first-half deficit to win a Class 1A Region I semifinal over Hart 25-20 Friday at Odessa's Ratliff Stadium. Rankin will play Sudan, 43-22 winners over Wink, Friday at 7:30 in Seminole for the region championship.

Hart (11-2) had sent Rankin home with a 24-7 win in the same round of the playoffs last year. The Red Devils (10-2) rebounded from a sluggish start this time and scored four unanswered touchdowns to return the favor to the Longhorns.

Rankin coach Ray Sanchez said the turning point in the game came when Hart's Harvey Robledo stepped in front

Chaps ice win with free shots

■ Midland College converts 15 second half free throws to defeat Lamar Community College and improve to 11-0 this season.

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Midland College showed Friday night that they could play the half court game as they downed Lamar (Colo.) Community College for the second time in three nights 75-66.

Like Wednesday's 80-71 Chap win, the Lopes of Lamar played a deliberate style of basketball, using the clock and keeping Midland College from its normal fast break style of basketball that had the Chaps averaging 111 points per game before Wednesday.

"I just don't have the bench to run with Midland," said Lamar coach Ronnie Dean. "If I tried to run with them

LEE: Rebels and Farmers evenly matched

(From 1C)

But the matinee feature on this Saturday is the matchup of 'Bones, both of which are capable of dazzling opponents and scoreboards. It will be Lee's broken 'bone look against the pure wishbone of the Farmers. About the only difference is that Lee runs more offensive sets and throws a little more often.

So, the quick question arises. Can the defensive teams of wishbone teams defend against the wishbone?

"The wishbone creates a lot of problems for you because it comes at you from all different directions," Miller says. "It's not that hard for us to prepare for since we know the wishbone. We know how to defend against it, but the question is whether or not we have the personnel to stop it. We're really thin on defense right now."

Frank Melgoza, playing with a broken wrist, will move to defensive end to replace the lost Melvin Dunson while Ryan Walker, who has been out since the third game of the year, will see action for the first time since then at defensive tackle. Backup defensive player B.J. Honeyman was also injured this week in practice and probably won't play.

"We just can't lose anyone else," Miller said. "Defense is our major concern right now. You hope the offense continues firing up points, but at this stage of the playoffs, you can't expect the numbers we've been having."

The Lee wishbone is also a concern for Farmer coach Ronnie Gage.

"We've worked against our wishbone in the spring, but not much during the season," Gage said. "We don't see it too much. But it's not just the wishbone that concerns you when you face Lee. They have so many skilled athletes with receivers, a great quarterback, good runners and a big line. They have all the ingredients you need to score points.

"Defensively, Lee has that old school image. They just line up and play tough, hard-nosed football. They move to the ball well. We've had a tough schedule this year, but we think Lee is probably our toughest challenge to date."

The Lewisville defense has been rugged, allowing only 3.1 yards per carry this year. Only two teams have scored more than one touchdown in a game (Sherman 33 points and Flower Mound Marcus 14).

Farmer nose guard Pete Bonenberger is one of the best at 252 pounds.

"Lewisville is coming off a shutout (24-0) against South Grand Prairie, so we know they can play defense, too," Miller said. "They have that big nose guard, so our center (Will Shaw) is going to have a real challenge. However, Will has been up against some good nose guards this year and we've played against the 5-man defensive front the last two weeks. At least, that part isn't that hard to prepare for since we've been seeing it over and over."

The Lee offense is coming off a school record 79-point performance against a weak El Paso Bowie team while Lewisville is coming off its second shutout of the year. That in itself poses an intriguing matchup today.

"Our defense has been a big part of our team this year," Gage says. "They have played well, but what concerns me is that we have not faced a team with all the threats that Lee possesses on their offense."

The winner will advance to the quarterfinals against either Abilene Cooper or Haltom, which play at noon today at Texas Stadium in Irving. Naturally, Cooper and Lee would like the quarterfinal game to be an all-District 4-5A shootout and a rematch of Lee's memorable 17-14 victory over Cooper to end regular season play.

But today is the battle of 'Bones. And this one is close enough that neither team will be thinking of games down the road come 2 p.m.

RANKIN: Brisk second half wins for Rankin of a Jo Jo Guerra pass and returned it 14 yards for a 14-0 Hart second-quarter lead.

(From 1C)

"Something happended then," Sanchez said. "We turned it up defensively and came back and scored on our next drive."

The Longhorns scored on their first drive, getting six first downs and going 70 yards. And after the score was moved up to 14-0, Hart forced Rankin punter Robert Guadarrama out of bounds for a vitual turnover at the Rankin 22. But a fake field goal attempt from the 16 failed and Rankin began getting back in the game.

"We knew tonight we had to get revenge and we just did," said Rankin back Roy Abalos, who turned the game in the Red Devils favor on several sweeps in the second half. "But we didn't come out in the second quarter like we should have."

Abalos had 107 of his 137 yards in the second half and scored two fourth-quarter touchdowns. Except for an 80-yard touchdown run by the Longhorn's Eddy Chavers with 3:27 to play, the Red Devils dominated the second half, allowing only three first downs for Hart.

"We really didn't play one of our better games but their defense played better than I expected it to play," Hart coach Danny Wilhelm said.

Rankin qaurterback Jo Jo Guerra threw two interceptions on his first three attempts. But the senior settled down to complete key passes in the second half, mostly to Guadarrama, who finished with three catches for 48 yards.

"They were more intense, especially in the first quarter," Sanchez said.

Rankin looked like a different team in the second half. They scored on their first three possessions to go from a 14-6 deficit to a 25-14 lead. Guerra, who had thrown 36 yards to Guadarrama in the second quarter for a score, ran for a two yard touchdown and Abalos had TDs of 5 and 12 yards.

"We started pitching the ball outside and running flip sets and our linemen decided to come off the football," Sanchez said.

Rankin got a scare when Chavers made his long run for a score. But Joe Ramos recovered the ensuing onside kickoff try and Hart lost a fumble on its final possession.

"There are a lot of us seniors who have been playing in the playoffs for a lot of years and we didn't want to quit playing," Red Devil guard Keith Braden said.

CHAPS: Lamar win puts mark at 11-0

they would run me out of the gym. They have too much depth.

"Midland is the best team that we've faced so far. They have the total package — a true point guard, depth, shooters, you name it."

"They were playing a slower tempo, switching defenses a lot," said Midland College coach Steve Green. "I think we proved to ourselves that we could play the half court game. You usually have those types of games in conference because we know each other so well so it's good to win one like this."

Lamar, 3-8 on the year and currently on a 14 game road trip to open the season, built an early 12-6 with 15:12 to play on a lay in by John Stevens. Stevens, who was held to eight points Wednesday night with Midland, scored a game-high 22 points, including 12 in the first half.

Midland rallied back and built a nine point lead, 32-23, with 4:02 to play behind Kirk Ford and John Brown. They combined for 19 points as Midland built a precarious 36-30 halftime lead.

Lamar opened the second half with a seven-point run on baskets by Stevens, Joe Weaver and a three-pointer from Paul Gardette to take a 37-36 lead with 18:35 to play.

The Chaps went to a smaller, quicker lineup in the second half and built a 12-point lead, 73-61. Midland converted 15 of 21 free throws in the second half as Midland scored just two field goals the final 6:21 of the game, converting eight free throws down the stretch.

The Chaps held Lamar guard Joe Weaver to just 12 points after he scored a game-high 25 against MC on Wednesday in an 80-71 win. Weaver hit just 4 of 15 shots and was benched midway through the second half.

"He probably got tired," said Green. "Kevin Rice did a tremendous job on Weaver. We wanted to bump him off the screen and push him outside — make him take an extra dribble and have to work for every shot."

Lamar, which was shooting 38 percent from the field before Wedensday's game, was held to 33.8 percent by the Midland defense, including 3 of 16 from three-point range.

Midland College will face the Abilene Christian junior varsity today at 6 p.m. Abilene Christian (0-1) lost to Odessa College 134-65 after falling behind 21-0 to open the game. Classic host Odessa College (8-0) will face Lamar at 8 p.m. today.

MC: Mustangs win third straight title tangs over the top. The run followed a goal-line stand by the Mustangs.

"It's like the coach said, the first three minutes of the second is always the crucial part of the game," said Blake, a 190-pound senior. "I think we probably bent them over when we stopped them. Then we went ahead and broke their backs when we scored."

El Paso had come back from a 36-12 deficit in the first half to trail by 10 at intermission. The Chargers threatened to close the gap further following a fumble recovery on Midland Christian's 15-yard line.

On fourth-and-goal from the 6, MC pressured El Paso quarterback Kareem Cager into an errant pass, ending the threat and setting up Jackson's game-breaker.

Jackson followed with touchdowns of 4 and 32 yards later in the half. He finished the night with 207 yards and four touchdowns on 12 carries. He also caught a 20-yard touchdown pass from Neil Truex.

Blake said he expected this kind of performance from Jackson.

"He is a two-time all-state linebacker and all-state as a running back last year," Blake said. "Guys like him only come along every once in a while."

Jackson's backfield mate, Clay Gunter, carried the Mustangs in the first half.

Gunter finished the night with 264 yards, 176 before intermission, and scored four times. Gunter's scores all came in the first half.

"We felt like we could hurt them in a wing set," Blake said. "We hurt them bad in it. Then they made some adjustments and we had to make some adjustments to their adjustments."

Gunter scored from 32 yards out on Midland Christian's opening possession. On the Mustangs' next opportunity, he scored in three plays. A pair of point-after kicks by Chad Bayley gave the Mustangs a 16-0 lead they would never relinquish.

Cager attempted to bring the Chargers back with a 19-yard scoring strike to David Moore. Moore then scored on a 1-yard run following an interception by Tony Box.

Jackson followed with a 22-yard touchdown run and Gunter added scored from nine and 60 yards to give Midland Christian what appeared to be a comfortable 36-12 lead.

A 72-yard kickoff return by Kenya Cager kept El Paso in the game until after intermission.

Defending 4A champion Waxahachie, Highland Park in marquee showdown

By Jaime Aron
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Another week, another championship-caliber playoff game.

■ Playoffs Preview

This week's winner-becomes-the-favorite matchup pits defending Class 4A champion Waxahachie and Highland Park in their second annual playoff meeting. They play a regional-round game today at 8 p.m. in Texas Stadium.

Waxahachie (12-0) won last year's fourth-round playoff game 10-9, then cruised to a state title.

The Indians finished this season ranked No. 1 in The Associated Press poll. The Scots (12-0) were third.

In last weekend's marquee game, No. 3 DeSoto slammed No. 1 Dallas Carter 52-27.

Neither coach expects this weekend's game to be a blowout because Waxahachie and Highland Park have similar strengths and weaknesses.

"It's about as balanced a matchup as we've seen," said Indians coach Scott Phillips.

"I don't think either team will dominate the other," said Scots coach Don Richardson. "I do think there may be more points scored than last year."

In other playoff games this weekend, Converse Judson (11-0-1) continues its run toward a second straight Class 5A Division I title by facing Eagle Pass (7-4) in a quarterfinal.

The most interesting 5A Division II bracket is region II, where Richardson Lake Highlands (9-3) plays defending champ Temple (9-3).

Another game worth watching is the 3A battle between Vernon (10-2) and defending champ Southlake Carroll (12-0).

Those teams played a thrilling 39-35 third-round game last season.

Schulenburg (9-3), the two-time defending 2A champs, will try to continue rebounding from a slow start against Freer (11-0).

The defending 1A champion Bartlett Bulldogs (7-5) will try advancing against Flatonia (7-4).

Although the Waxahachie-Highland Park winner will bear the burden of being the 4A team to beat, neither coach wants to look past today's game.

To Phillips, he only has to look back to last year's game to find extra motivation.

"A year ago, we eliminated them from playoffs by one point," he said. "We were glad to win, but we didn't feel like we won very convincingly. We left some doubt in some people's minds even though we won it all.

"Of course, us eliminating them by one point has to give them tremendous anticipation to return the favor."

But Richardson wants to downplay the revenge motive.

"Until this week, we hadn't even mentioned it," he said. "I'm sure it's in the back of everybody's minds."

American, Canadian pair up to reach ATP doubles semis

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The No. 1 team made it to the semifinals of the ATP Tour World Doubles Championships with a loss, a win and, on Friday, a bye.

Grant Connell of Canada and Patrick Galbraith of the United States were granted a victory after the withdrawal of their scheduled opponents, No. 4 seed Luke Jensen and Murphy Jensen. Luke Jensen underwent an emergency appendectomy at a Johannesburg hospital Friday.

Connell and Galbraith will face Jacco Eltingh and Paul Haarhuis of the Netherlands in one of today's semifinals. The Dutch team, seeded third, is undefeated in the $1.2 million tournament.

In the second semifinal, No. 5 David Adams of Australia and Andrei Olhovskiy of Russia, also undefeated, will play Australians Todd Woodbridge and Mark Woodforde, the No. 2 seeds.

The eight leading ATP Tour teams have been playing in two round-robin pools since Wednesday. The top two finishers in each pool advanced to the semifinals, and a five-set final is scheduled Sunday.

Eltingh and Haarhuis beat Tom Nijssen of the Netherlands and Cyril Suk of the Czech Republic, seeded seventh, 6-3, 6-7 (8-10), 6-1.

Adams and Olhovskiy had a hard-fought victory over Australians Mark Kratzmann and Wally Masur, the No. 8 team, 7-6 (7-5), 6-7 (10-8), 7-6.

Woodbridge and Woodforde, 2-1 in round-robin play, beat Spaniards Sergio Casal and Emilio Sanchez, seeded sixth, 6-3, 6-3.

With the departure of the Jensen brothers, Connell and Galbraith played the U.S. alternates, Rick Leach and Ken Flach, in an exhibition match Friday. Connell and Galbraith won 7-6 (7-0), 6-3, for a 2-1 record in round-robin play.

Galbraith played despite laryngitis.

Cubans add on to latest list of defections from games

By David Beard
Associated Press Writer

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — In the middle of the week, Conrado Cabrera and Noel de la Cruz were the pride of Cuba. On Friday, they became the latest Cubans to seek political asylum during the Central American and Caribbean Games.

Two days after collecting the gold and silver medals in the 4,000-meter bicycling race at the regional championships, Cabrera and de la Cruz were helped to defect by former Cuban cycling coach Jose Menendez.

Menendez, also a Cuban defector, said the cyclists "want to establish themselves in Colorado or Los Angeles to further their careers."

Their decision reflected the rush even among Cuba's traditional athletic, artistic and political elite to flee a worsening economic crisis and limited opportunity in their Communist homeland.

Those seeking asylum Friday would not talk to waiting reporters at INS offices in San Juan. Menendez, the cycling trainer, said Cabrera and de la Cruz feared speaking to the media until they arrived in Miami.

Melendez said they will hold a news conference then "to explain why they defected."

Cuban exiles in Puerto Rico say 16 Cubans already have defected and "considerably more" will do so before the games end Tuesday. They predict some, such as Cabrera and de la Cruz, will leave like the Von Trapp family in "The Sound of Music" — after one last championship performance for the fatherland.

Among the latest to defect was pitcher Odalys Hernandez, who led the women's softball team to a victory Thursday night, according to Julito Labatut, member of a small exile group called the Rescue Patrol. "I was looking for a little bit of liberty, which doesn't exist in Cuba," Hernandez said.

The group rented a small aircraft Saturday that flew over games sites in southern Puerto Rico, trailing a banner with a phone number for Cubans interested in defecting to call.

Labatut, who owns a floral shop in San Juan, alleged that 400 of the 881 Cubans who arrived in this U.S. commonwealth for the competition were working as security agents or spies on fellow athletes.

The Cubans have upgraded security since the defections began, said Robert Bowles, assistant district director for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The defections come despite attempts by President Fidel Castro's government to retain its star athletes by allowing them to keep a bigger share of the purses.

Cuban delegation members say Olympics champion high jumper Javier Sotomayor, for example, will be allowed to keep $10,000 of the $38,000 Asturias Prize he gets Saturday as this year's best Spanish-speaking athlete. Sotomayor also got to keep a Mercedes awarded him for winning the gold medal in the world championships this summer in Stuttgart, Germany.

Despite the defections, Cubans continued to dominate the regional tournament, winning 136 gold medals and 213 overall by the start of competition Friday, far outpacing runner-up Mexico, which had 37 gold and 146 overall. Cuban weightlifters have broken two world records this week, and the men's baseball players, followed closely here by major league scouts, were on track to win their 14th straight international championship.

Defending champ takes slalom at World Cup

SANTA CATERINA VALFURVA, Italy (AP) — Defending World Cup champion Anita Wachter of Austria won her second consecutive giant slalom Friday, taking a battle of nerves with French rival Carole Merle and fighting off the comeback of Swiss veteran Vreni Schneider.

Wachter, 26, controled her skis and her emotions as she flashed down the Cevedale course in the fastest second run of the race for a winning aggregate of 2 minutes, 17.31 seconds.

Merle, 29, the reigning giant slalom champion who led Wachter by only .01 seconds in the first run, was overcautious in the second run and fell to fourth place, 1.34 seconds behind the winner.

Schneider gave herself a birthday present by placing second, her best giant slalom finish in nearly two years.

■ Womens World Cup

Austrian Ulrike Maier was fourth.

Wachter, who routed the opposition in the opening World Cup race at Solden, Austria, last month, left Schneider .78 seconds behind and led Maier by 1.13 seconds, showing impressive form and determination.

"The second run was tough mentally, because Carole was so close and I knew I needed a faultless run to beat her. I managed to control my nerves. I also had to control Vreni, who skied very well," said Wachter, who is shooting for her second World Cup title this season and for her second Olympic gold medal at Lillehammer in February.

She was an Olympic combined champion at Calgary in 1988.

After winning two giant slaloms with the No. 1 bib, Wachter said, "That number brings me luck. I hope to get another one for the next race."

Her eighth World Cup career victory vaulted Wachter to 200 points overall, 70 ahead of Schneider and 90 ahead of Merle, who was third in Solden.

"No doubt I'm off to a great start in the Cup this season. But I'm not overly excited, because it's a long way to go and I was lucky so far," Wachter said.

Schneider, who turned 29 Friday, said she could not have expected anything better after being bed-ridden with the flu until a few days ago.

"I arrived here on the eve of the race; I could not test the track. Under the circumstances I'm really happy," said the Swiss ace.

Horse racing at Santa Fe rests on state law

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — The future of horse racing at The Downs at Santa Fe could rest with the state's willingness to change the law that prevents anyone from owning an interest in more than two racetracks.

R.D. Hubbard, the owner of Ruidoso Downs, is reportedly negotiating with Santa Fe Racing Inc., to take over both The Downs at Santa Fe and the corporation's lease to run an annual meet at the New Mexico State Fair track in Albuquerque.

Ruidoso Downs spokesman Bruce Rimbo said Wednesday if the deal goes through, Hubbard may try to have the state law changed or close the Santa Fe track.

Holding interests in the Santa Fe, Albuquerque and Ruidoso Downs tracks would put Hubbard over the two-track limit. The law is intended to prevent any single interest from dominating racing in New Mexico, said Santa Fe lawyer Tom Dunigan, who was a deputy attorney general when the racetrack ownership law was adopted.

Cheney wins welterweight decision

NEWCASTLE, Australia (AP) — Grahame "Spike" Cheney of Australia stopped Tom Alexander of the United States at the end of the sixth round of their welterweight bout Friday.

The 24-year-old Cheney, the Australian and World Boxing Council international welterweight champion, pounded his outmatched opponent until the fight was called off by ring doctor David Parker.

The 30-year-old Alexander, who is from Pittsburgh, sustained a suspected broken nose and was also cut badly over the right eye. Cheney floored Alexander with a left hook in the opening round and applied constant pressure.

Cheney, a silver medalist in the 1988 Olympics, improved to 13-1.

Alexander, who lost for the sixth time in 24 professional fights, said Cheney was too strong for him.

"I like to come forward, he took that play away from me," Alexander said.

Unbeaten Australian junior welterweight champion Shannan Taylor moved into contention for a Commonwealth title shot with a unanimous 10-round decision Luis Maysonet of Hartford, Conn.

It was the first time in his five professional contests that the 21-year-old Taylor had been taken the distance. Maysonet, 22, dropped to 15-4.

Tua KOs Acey in heavyweight bout

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — Heavyweight David Tua knocked out Michael Acey in the first round of a scheduled 10-round fight Friday.

Tua, 21, was an Olympic bronze medalist in 1992. He is based in the United States since turning professional last year.

The Samoan-born Aucklander needed just 55 seconds to knock out Acey, a 32-year-old from Beckley, W.Va.

Tua had Acey on the canvas after just 30 seconds with one flurry, but Acey was able to continue. However, a left hook from Tua again floored the American.

Tua improved to 11-0 with 10 knockouts. Acey's record dropped to 13-10.

Palmer battles youngsters in Skins Game

By Bob Green
AP Golf Writer

PALM DESERT, Calif. — It's a plot, Arnold Palmer said in mock indignation. A yuppie plot.

"They're plotting to keep me from getting a skin," the 64-year-old Palmer said before a practice session for the first nine holes Saturday in golf's Skins Game.

"It'd be embarassing for them if I won a skin," Palmer said of his three opponents, PGA title-holder Paul Azinger, Fred Couples and Payne Stewart; none of then were born when Palmer began winning pro golf tournaments in the mid-1950's.

Stewart, the winner of the last two of these two-day, 18-hole, made-for-television events, disagreed with Palmer's assessment.

"Why should it be embarassing?" he asked. "He's Arnold Palmer. He's the King. He can still play.

"It's not like he has to shoot a medal score against us. He just has to hit a couple of good shots, make a putt at the right time. He can do that."

And that's what Palmer is counting on in his return to competition against three of the current leaders of the American pro tour.

"One of the problems I've had, in addition to putting, is keeping my concentration over 54 or 72 holes," Palmer said. "My mind wanders sometimes.

"But in this format, I can maybe get away with it. I can keep my concentration for one hole. So if I can just get it in the fairway, get it close and then maybe make a putt or two, I could maybe sneak in and win a skin or two," he said.

It will be, he said, his last appearance in this competition against younger players.

Palmer, who won the last two Senior Skins Games — and he was even giving away years to his opponents in those events — gave up participation in the regular Skins Game in 1987.

He comes back this year as a last-minute replacement after John Daly was suspended by PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman earlier this month.

■ Skins Game

"I had to think long and hard about it," Palmer said of his decision to accept the invitation from tournament organizers. "It took me a couple of days to make up my mind."

"But now I'm looking forward to it. I'm going to have a good time whether I win a skin or not."

And then, in a group interview with the other participants, he assumed the role of a stern father.

"Now, it's like I tell my kids, I have some instructions for you and I want you to pay attention, you hear? I want you to behave yourselves out there. I want you to conduct youselves as young gentlemen."

Stewart, Azinger and Couples laughed. But they listened, too.

And, while they insist there is no plot, they agreed Palmer correctly identified the theme of popular event: The King vs. the Kids.

"And you know who everybody is going to be rooting for," Couples said. "It isn't going to be me or Paul or Payne."

Azinger, who appeared in knickers and a cap in the colors of the NFL Green Bay Packers in mimicry or Stewart's traditional attire, said he is only "about 80 percent" recovered from a back problem that threatened his participation.

Sweden to bid on 2002 Olympiad

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Sweden, which has lost five straight bids to be host to the Winter Olympics, will try again for the 2002 Games.

Local governments gave their approval Friday for a combined bid from Ostersund and nearby Are, which failed in previous attempts for the 1994 and 1998 Olympics.

Those followed failed bids by Falun and Are for the 1992 and 1988 Games, and Falun, Are, Hammarstrand and Goteborg for 1984. Are also lost earlier joint bids for the 1964, 1968, 1972 and 1976 Games.

Others who have announced bids for 2002 Winter include Salt Lake City and Quebec City. The deadline for bids is Oct. 1 and the International Olympic Committee will select the host city on June 16, 1995 during a meeting at Budapest, Hungary.

A recent poll showed 58 percent of residents in Jamtland, the northern Swedish province where Ostersund and Are are situated, support the bid.

"Ostersund and Are have been so close before, so why not try again?" said Cege Anderberg, a Swedish Olympic Committee member.

Are and Ostersund will open an Olympic campaign office shortly and plan activities during the Lillehammer Games.

Stockholm, the Swedish capital, is moving ahead with plans to bid for the 2004 Summer Olympics. Stockholm last hosted the Summer Games in 1912,

Collectors expect Wagner card to go cheap

WOODBURY, Conn. (AP) — A rare baseball card of former Pittsburgh Pirates shortstop Honus Wagner being auctioned off Saturday is not expected to attract the $451,000 another Wagner card fetched two years ago.

"It's beat up," said Jason Leonard, an employee of Nutmeg Auction Services. "It's got creases. The man (owner) carried it in his wallet."

The card, which dates between 1909 and 1911, is part of a "T" series, which stands for tobacco. The back of the card promoted Sweet Caporal Cigarettes.

The Wagner card is part of a collection of about 625 "tobacco" cards kept by a man who died in 1971. The cards, along with other memorabilia, including a 1946 photograph of Wagner and the late baseball great Ty Cobb signed by both players, will be auctioned Saturday.

Leonard's father, Paul, an owner of the Nutmeg auction house, said he believed the Wagner card might sell for about $20,000, and that the entire collection might sell for about $60,000.

Dealers and collectors from as far as Colorado and Chicago are expected to attend the auction.

Iwasaki-Smith holds lead in Aussie Open

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — David Iwasaki-Smith shot a 3-under-par 69 to take a one-stroke lead over Wayne Grady on Friday after the second round of the Australian Open.

Iwasaki-Smith, who has an 8-under 136 total through two rounds on the 6,948-yard Metropolitan course, reached 14 greens in regulation.

"I'm fairly happy with that, considering the wind," Iwasaki-Smith said. "It's always nice to have a good score in the second round and obviously I want to continue it."

Grady, the 1990 PGA champion, shot a 69. Darren Cole was two back after a 69. First-round leader Brad Faxon shot a 74 to drop three back along with Jeff Woodland (68), Robert Allenby (69) and Bradley Hughes (71).

Swede leads World Open

KAIMONCHO, Japan (AP) — Joakim Haeggman of Sweden started with an eagle en route to a second-straight 67, increasing his lead to two shots Friday midway through the World Open.

■ World Open

On the 433-yard, par-4 first hole, Haeggman's 153-yard second shot landed seven feet from the pin and then rolled in for an eagle. Haeggman, 24, added four birdies and one bogey on the 7,014-yard, par-72 Kaimon course of the Ibusuki Golf Club in southern Japan.

Haeggman, competing in Japan for the first time, completed the 36 holes with a 10-under-par 134.

Frankie Minoza of the Philippines birdied the last three holes on the way to a 67 and a 136 total. He had four other birdies and two bogeys.

Nebraska lays claim

LINCOLN, Neb. — Nebraska says it is the best team in college football. Now it looks like the Cornhuskers will get a chance to prove it on New Year's Night.

■ Top 25 Roundup

The second-ranked Cornhuskers stopped No. 16 Oklahoma 21-7 on a frigid Friday and will take a perfect 11-0 record into the Orange Bowl.

Nebraska, No. 2 in the AP media poll and No. 1 in the coaches poll, most likely will play Florida State if the Seminoles can win at Florida on today. Florida State leads the AP poll and is second in the coaches poll.

The coalition poll that will determine bowl matchups has Nebraska No. 1 and Florida State No. 2.

For Cornhuskers coach Tom Osborne, it'll be his 21st bowl game in 21 years at Nebraska. He never has lost more than three games in a season, but he has never gone undefeated and he has never won a national championship.

His team fell behind 7-0 when Oklahoma scored on the first possesion of the game, and was tied at the half.

But the Cornhuskers took the game over in the second half with bone-crushing defense on a bone-chilling day with a wind-chill factor of minus-15 degrees, scoring twice in the final quarter.

"We didn't play very well in the first half," Osborne said. "It took a lot of character to come back."

With 18 seconds to go in the game, Nebraska fans rushed the field and the referees let the clock run out.

Nebraska now should get a chance to back up its No. 1 claim in the Orange Bowl.

"Whoever we play will be a great team," Osborne said of the Osborne matchup.

On several occasions Osborne has seen his national title hopes evaporate on New Year's Day. He has an 8-12 record in bowl games, including losses in his last six.

The Cornhuskers already knew they were going to the Orange Bowl before taking on archrival Oklahoma. But they needed to beat the Sooners to guarantee a shot at the national championship.

All they had to do on Friday was win. And they did.

All they have to do now on New Year's Day is win, and Nebraska will have it's first national title since 1971 and Osborne his first ever.

The Cornhuskers won their third straight Big Eight title, getting 14 points in 13 seconds early in the fourth quarter.

Nebraska's defense was without star Trev Alberts, the Big Eight defensive player of the year, who was on the bench with an early injury. The Sooners kept Nebraska's nation-leading ground game in check through three quarters, allowing 72 yards in a 7-7 game.

But the Huskers defense came up with the plays that kept them tied, and the offense finally produced the decisive points.

Tommie Frazier passed 11 yards to Abdul Muhammad for the go-ahead score with 13:20 to play. David Seizys then recovered a fumble by OU's Darrius Johnson on the ensuing kickoff. That set up a 20-yard TD run by Calvin Jones on the next play.

Oklahoma (8-3 overall, 4-3 in the Big Eight) marched 74 yards on its first possession, with Dwayne Chandler scoring on a 1-yard run. The drive was costly for Nebraska because Alberts went to the sidelines with a separated right elbow.

Toby Wright's interception of Cale Gundy's pass in the second quarter set up the Huskers at the OU 15. Four plays later, Frazier swept right end for a 2-yard touchdown to tie the game.

Nebraska's defense headed off another threat early in the second quarter. Jerald Moore broke loose on a 47-yard run, but he fumbled when hit by Tyrone Williams at the Nebraska 14 and Donta Jones recovered for the Huskers.

The come-from-behind win marked the 24th time in the last 31 meetings in the series that the team taking the lead couldn't hold on.

Nebraska, averaging 304 yards per game on the ground, managed just 122. Jones, the Big Eight scoring and rushing leader, ended with 25 carries for 82 yards.

It was the 10th time Nebraska was unbeaten heading into the Oklahoma game. The Huskers had lost five of those previous meetings, the last in 1987 in a 17-7 win for then-No. 2 Oklahoma over No. 1 Nebraska.

The last time Nebraska went to the Orange Bowl unbeaten was in 1983, when the Huskers lost 31-30 to national champion Miami.

No. 5 West Virginia 17, Boston College 17

BOSTON — Unbeaten West Virginia stayed in the national title hunt with a stunning comeback over a Boston College team that ran out of last-minute rallies.

Darren Studstill's 24-yard touchdown pass to Ed Hill with 1:08 left, the Mountaineers' second touchdown in seven minutes, and a two-point conversion gave the Mountaineers a 17-14 victory.

The Eagles (8-3) couldn't match their winning comeback at Notre Dame six days earlier when they got the ball with 1:09 remaining and marched to a last-play field goal and a 41-39 upset.

Mike Logan, whose fumble recovery started West Virginia's winning drive, ended the last threat with an end zone interception of Glenn Foley's desperation pass on the final play.

The win left West Virginia (11-0) and Nebraska as the only unbeaten teams eligible for a bowl game. Nebraska is already committed to the Orange Bowl, but the question remains: Who will they play?

Nebraska is No. 2 in the AP media poll and No. 1 in the coaches poll. Florida State, which plays at No. 7 Florida on Saturday, tops the AP poll and is No. 2 in the coaches poll. The coalition poll, which will determine bowl matchups, has Nebraska No. 1 and Florida State No. 2.

If Florida State loses or struggles to win, West Virginia will have a greater chance of rising to No. 1 or No. 2 in the coalition poll and playing in a head-to-head matchup for the championship on Jan. 1.

Boston College, whose eight-game winning streak ended, is expected to go to the Carquest Bowl at Miami on Jan. 1.

No. 13 North Carolina 38, Duke 24

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Leon Johnson rushed for 142 yards and scored four touchdowns to break the Atlantic Coast Conference single-season freshman scoring record as North Carolina defeated Duke.

North Carolina (10-2, 6-2 ACC) finished second in the conference for the first time since 1986. The Tar Heels, who may go to the Fiesta, Sugar or Gator bowls, also won 10 games in a season for only the fifth time in 103 years of their football program.

■ More Sports/ 10C

Duke finished 3-8, including 2-6 in the ACC. Blue Devils coach Barry Wilson, who announced Nov. 1 he would resign, completed his four years at Duke with a 13-30-1 record, including 0-4 against North Carolina.

Johnson, who rushed 24 times, scored on a 29-yard pass in the first quarter and on runs of 9, 10 and 5 yards. His last two touchdowns came in the third quarter after Duke had pulled to 21-14 at halftime.

Johnson's 16 touchdowns and 100 points broke the previous ACC freshman scoring mark of 84 points, set by North Carolina State's Ted Brown in 1975. It also was the second time this season that Johnson matched Brown's single-game record with four scores.

Johnson's rushing total pushed him over 1,000 for the season, joining fellow tailback Curtis Johnson.

No. 19 Arizona 34, Arizona St. 20

TEMPE, Ariz. — Dan White threw for 209 yards and three touchdowns, helping Arizona keep its New Year's Day bowl hopes alive with a victory over Arizona State.

Arizona (9-2) finished 6-2 in the Pac-10, tying UCLA and Southern California for the best record in the conference. UCLA won the title on a tie-breaker.

Arizona could be in line for a bid to the Fiesta Bowl, while the Sun Devils (6-5, 4-4) tied California for fourth place and must hope the Alamo Bowl takes them instead of the Golden Bears.

Rice's Brynton Goynes (78) recovers a fumble by Houston's Donald Moffett as Cougars Joe Wheeler (64) and Joey Mouton (81) look on.

Owls avenge loss, 37-7

HOUSTON (AP) — The Rice Owls didn't get a bowl invitation but at least they got revenge.

Bert Emanuel and Josh LaRocca each threw two touchdown passes as Rice scored 37 consecutive points, taking advantage of eight Houston turnovers for a 37-7 victory that completed the Owls' second straight winning season.

Houston's 60-34 victory last season knocked the Owls out of a bowl game but this year, the Owls had to settle for their first back-to-back winning seasons since 1960-61.

"They are our rival," Rice coach Fred Goldsmith said. "It makes other victories a little hollow if you can't beat your rival in town. We put those things in the past. There are different people there now.

"Kim Helton (Houston coach) conducts himself with class. There's no animosity. It's just good to beat our rival in our town."

The Owls finished 6-5 for the seasons and 3-4 in Southwest Conference games. Houston (1-9-1, 1-5-1) closed out its season with six losses and a tie.

"They can't say it's the same old Rice anymore," defensive back Nathan Bennett said. "They've got to have some respect for us."

Houston scored on the first drive of the game on a 14-yard run by TiAndre Sanders but that was the end of their scoring as the Cougars slowly wilted under their own mistakes.

"It seems like every time we draw back to throw a pass, we either get hit in the back to create a fumble or we hit a receiver in the chest with it and it bounces out and they intercept it," Helton said.

"Obviously, the burden falls on the head coach. If I could get down there and catch it for them I would but I'm too old for that."

Rice intercepted three of Jimmy Klingler's passes and recovered a fumble by Donald Moffett and turned three of the turnovers into touchdowns for a 28-7 halftime lead.

Houston's turnovers continued in the third quarter, beginning when Rice linebacker Larry Izzo recovered a fumble by Klingler early in the third quarter at the Houston 28, leading to a 34-yard field by Johnny Bagwell.

Bennett's second interception near the end of the third quarter set up Bagwell's 23-yard field goal with 12:52 left in the game and Jeff Sowell's fumble recovery at the Houston 16 led to Bagwell's 27-yarder with 9:17 to play.

Despite their 6-5 record this season, the Owls didn't qualify for a bowl because they didn't have the required six victories over NCAA Division I-A opposition. One of Rice's victories was over I-AA Sam Houston State.

LaRocca came on with 35 seconds left in the first quarter when Emanuel suffered a toe injury and the backups continued the scoring pace. Emanuel and Edmonds both returned to play late in the game.

"When I got in there I didn't want to slow the momentum we had going," LaRocca said.

Peach Bowl won't consider Clemson search for coach

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — The Peach Bowl says it won't consider Clemson's search for a new coach when it awards the bowl's other berth.

"From our perspective, the fact that Clemson will have a new football coach doesn't have any bearing on the selection," Robert Dale Morgan, the game's executive director, said.

With North Carolina's 38-24 victory over Duke on Friday, Clemson (8-3) is the bowl coalition's likely third-place selection from the Atlantic Coast Conference, which would play Kentucky (6-5) in the Peach Bowl Dec. 31 in Atlanta.

After coach Ken Hatfield stepped down Wednesday in return for a $600,000 buyout of the three years left on his contract, Clemson officials said they might have a new coach in time to guide the Tigers in postseason play.

WLTX-TV in Columbia, citing unidentified sources, reported that Baylor coach Chuck Reedy and Tennessee-Chattanooga coach Tommy West were at Clemson on Friday.

Hatfield's possible replacements include Reedy, West, Florida State defensive coordinator Mickey Andrews and current Clemson coordinator Bobby Johnson, The Greenville News reported, citing unidentified sources.

Clemson spokesman Tim Bourret said the school had no comment on the selection process. There was no answer at athletic director Bobby Robinson's home or office telephones.

There was no response to messages left at Reedy's home telephone or at a Baylor spokesman's. Reedy was a Clemson assistant coach from 1978-89.

Heisman winner recalls move from farmland to Aggieland

By Whit Canning
Associated Press writer

COLLEGE STATION — As the Texas A&M football team went through an afternoon workout, coach R.C. Slocum was joined on the sideline by the school's recently appointed director of development, out to take a look at the troops.

It was August — preseason — and there was a carefree atmosphere on the field, where the players laughed it up, played a little tag, and grinned at the sun. Finally, the director turned to Slocum with a brief observation.

"Y'know," he said, "these players of yours have just had more fun in 15 minutes than I had on this field in four years."

This reflection tumbled freestyle from the memory of the man who, through the passage of 3½ decades, remains the most exalted Aggie hero of them all — John David Crow.

It was a recollection of what it was like for the young Aggies — back there in that dim, distant past — to play for the legendary coach that many loved and most feared, Paul "Bear" Bryant.

"It was so damn tough here then," he said. "It was, 'Get tough or get out.'"

Although many left, Crow stayed. He missed the famed Junction trip because he was a freshman at the time but became known through the years — in company with Lee Roy Jordan and one or two others — as maybe the fiercest football player Bryant ever unleashed in his nearly 40 years as a head coach.

Fixing the foe with a baleful stare made more frightening by a birth defect, the 6-foot-2, 200-pound Crow became a one-platoon era monster — charging from either side of the line of scrimmage (halfback, linebacker) like a maddened buffalo.

Crow

He and his wife, Carolyn, have been married for 39 years, or roughly 38 years and six months longer than people predicted back in 1954. Their three children are grown, and Crow, 58, now can sit in his office, surrounded by 42,000 students and almost as many school buildings and f t-food joints, and marvel at what his alma mater had become.

"Sometimes," he says, "it's hard to believe this is the same place."

In 1954, it was a small (6,000 students) military-agricultural school sitting in the middle of a prairie, and Bryant — who had raised the University of Kentucky's program to heights never known before or since — was hired to build a winner.

Dutifully, his recruiters fanned out in search of the kind of rawboned country kid that you could scratch with a knife and hit tree bark. They found one in Springhill, La., a town of about 2,500 people gathered around a paper mill.

Harry and Velma Crow had moved there from Marion, two parishes to the east, because of the mill. Of his birthplace, Crow says, "back then it was still going through the Depression. Hell, maybe it still is."

A difficulty at birth had resulted in nerve damage that gave the left side of his face a frozen look. It has been alleviated with treatment through the years and never has been a big problem for Crow — but it added to his frightening aspect on the field...

In 1957, he became the only player in A&M history — and the only one of Bryant's endless legion of superstars — to win a Heisman Trophy. A replica of it stands in the A&M athletic complex, another at the door of the Paul W. Bryant Museum in Tuscaloosa, Ala.

"I still have the real one at home," Crow says, grinning.

He played 11 years in the National Football League with the Cardinals and 49ers, had two 1,000-yard rushing years, and was named to a '60s All-Pro team. He coached for a while, then returned to A&M a decade ago first as assistant athletic director, then as athletic director.

Last spring, he became a partner in a South Texas dog track with the son of the coach who once awed (and greatly admired) him. In conjunction with that move, he stepped down as athletic director and assumed the duties of director of development, working specifically with the "Capture the Spirit" capital improvements program, and the Twelfth Man Foundation.

Immediately after graduation, he and Carolyn were married — an event not necessarily loaded with great expectations, among some.

"Well, I was the big football hero and she was Miss Springhill and all that," Crow says, laughing, "and everyone just figured we were two dumb kids too young to know what we were doing, and we probably were. People didn't give us much of a chance. But here we are, 39 years later... .

"In fact, in my freshman class at A&M there were 12 married players, and we were the only couple that made it through the four years still together."

In the recruiting process, the Aggies cleverly lured Crow away from Magnolia A&M — 25 miles away, across the state line in Arkansas — where his older brother had played.

"That was really funny," Crow says. "Actually, I was being recruited by Oklahoma, LSU, some others. But Elmer Smith, who had been my brother's coach at Magnolia, asked me to come up there and visit, so I did. When I got there, he took me aside and said, 'You're too good to play here, but I need to do this for the boosters, so just talk to 'em for a while and then go back home and forget it, OK?' So that's what I did.

"Then Bryant hired Elmer as an assistant, and he came back — for real, this time. I didn't really know much about the Southwest Conference. I know about SMU and Doak Walker. I ended up visiting SMU, Rice and Baylor. But I told Elmer I would go to A&M.

"There was also a story going around back then that A&M 'stole' me right off the LSU campus, but that isn't what happened. I visited LSU, but that's all. I went to Texas A&M because of Elmer and Coach Bryant.

"Besides, my daddy wouldn't have let me go to LSU anyway, since I'd told A&M I was coming. My daddy lived his life by one rule: if you said that this or that was what you were gonna do — then by God, that's what you did."

Which is not to say that Harry and Velma necessarily were overjoyed to see their son disappear into the wilds of Texas.

"I'm not saying we were the most country folks around," Crow says, "but we had just got our first TV set my senior year in high school, and College Station seemed like a long way away. My parents were worried about me, and when I got there I was scared to death."

Also, extremely disappointed.

"One of the most appealing things Elmer had told me was that Coach Bryant was going to take the team off somewhere for two-a-days that would be kind of like a summer camp, where we would kinda live out in the woods and just concentrate on football. It really sounded neat.

"Then when Carolyn and I got settled in, he came around and told me they weren't taking the freshmen. I was heartbroken."

This turned out to be the famed trip to Junction, which ever since has reverberated in Aggie lore like the Death March from Bataan.

Crow remembers "standing across the street, watching those two busloads leave." If he watched them return 10 days later, he saw only one bus.

The survivors of that trip won only one game in 1954 but — Bryant style — put everyone they played through a rugged, bitter ordeal. There was just no talent. It was all on the freshman team.

"A couple of times that year they brought us over to scrimmage the varsity, and we beat the hell out of 'em," Crow says. "After that, they stopped bringing us over because it was bad for morale."

But over the next three years, with players like Crow, Jack Pardee, Roddy Osborne, Bobby Joe Conrad, Dennis Goehring, Charley Krueger, John Tracey and Bobby Marks, the Aggies lost only five times. They won a SWC title, put together an 18-game unbeaten streak, and once — for a week — held the No. 1 ranking in the nation.

Through it all, a strange relationship developed between the crusty Bryant and the big kid from the small town in Louisiana who idolized him.

"I guess in the beginning, I was afraid of him," Crow says. "I was certainly in awe of him. If I saw

His (Bryant's) type of player was ... well, I won't say you had to be a farm boy, but you had to have a toughness about you.
— John David Crow

him coming down the sidewalk, I would cross the street rather than meet him face to face.

"He reminded me of my dad. My father was a tough, tough man — and Coach Bryant was exactly like him. But in his case, it was kinda one of those things where you respected someone so much you just didn't want to actually be around them.

"It was like ... throughout my life, I was always a big John Wayne fan, but I once backed out of a dinner where I could have met him. I guess he was such a hero to me that I didn't want to find out he was only human.

"In later years, I coached with him (Bryant) at Alabama, my son played for him, and I am now a business partner with his son. But back in the early years, I was in awe of him."

Early on, however, something happened that created a special relationship between the Bryants and the Crows — the birth of John David Crow Jr.

"Mrs. Bryant (Mary Harmon) just fell in love with him," Crow recalls, "and she was always figuring ways to talk Carolyn into bringing him over to their house. She and Carolyn became great friends, and they would baby-sit for us, and so we had a little different relationship after that.

"Bryant coached a lot of great players over the years, but you didn't really have to be some kind of blue-chip talent, necessarily. His type of player was ... well, I won't say you had to be a farm boy, but you had to have a toughness about you, that's what he was looking for. He had built that program at Kentucky with all those Marines back from the war, and that was the kind of player he looked for; no fear, one who would back away from nothing. If you had that quality, you could play for him.

Crow won the Heisman Trophy in 1957.

"Anyway, he's the reason I'm sitting here today. If it hadn't been for him, I might have spent most of my life back in Springhill, throwing stuff off of boxcars."

For many years, however, Crow was leery of strangers asking questions about Bryant.

"One time this big national magazine interviewed me for a story on Coach Bryant," he says, "and they used a quote where I said, 'He was a tough, tough, mean S.O.B.,' and they cut it off right there and printed it that way. They left off the rest of the sentence, where I said, 'but he was fair, tenderhearted, and I loved him ... '"

The big game of Crow's sophomore year was a 19-16 upset of a powerhouse TCU team that went 9-1 behind Jim Swink. Crow spent most of the game in the doghouse for injuring his knee after being assigned to personally stop Swink.

"I didn't even go back to the dressing room," Crow says. "Billy Pickard, the trainer, took me back into a portal behind the bench and we found a public restroom and went in there and he taped my knee. But I wasn't much good that day."

The two unbeaten powers clashed again in '56 in the famous "Hurricane Game" at Kyle Field, won by A&M, 7-6. Like all true Aggies, Crow swears that Swink did not score from the 1-yard line on a play that TCU fans have claimed ever since was miscalled by the officials and cost them the game.

"I had a real good vantage point," Crow says. "I was on the bottom of the pile at the goal line."

The Aggies finished the season unbeaten, but on probation for overzealous recruiting, and TCU went to the Cotton Bowl.

In '57 the Aggies were penalty-free, 8-0 and ranked No. 1 in the nation when they rolled into Rice Stadium in late November, but they were beaten, 7-6, by the Owls, who went on to claim the Cotton Bowl berth. By kickoff time, there already had been strong claims in the local newspapers that Bryant would be leaving A&M for Alabama after the season, but in Crow's view, it didn't cost A&M the game.

"I've never believed that," he says. "They just had the better team that day, and they beat us.

The next week, the Aggies played Darrell Royal's first Texas squad for the Sugar Bowl berth and lost, 9-7. Afterward, Bryant told the team it had been invited to the Gator Bowl, and the team needed to take a vote on whether or not to accept.

"Me and Krueger were the captains, so we had to conduct the vote," Crow says. "After missing the national championship, the Cotton Bowl and the Sugar Bowl, we decided to just call it a season. Except we had to go in and tell Coach Bryant, and Krueger made me do the talking.

"So we told him, and he sat there and took a drag off his cigarette, and then he looked up and said, 'Well then, you better go vote again, because I just told the Gator Bowl people that we'll be there.'"

The Aggies lost again (3-0 to Tennessee), but it was anti-climactic. When someone asked Bryant in early December if he thought Crow should win the Heisman Trophy, The Bear replied, in his customarily diplomatic fashion, "Well, if they don't give it to Crow, they should just do away with the -- thing."

Crow won it, although he wasn't sure at the time just what it was.

"It wasn't so well known back then," he says, "although I figured it must be some kind of big deal when my mother called from Springhill and said we were all going to New York.

"Then when we were up there for the presentation, I looked around and saw a 'Movie Tone' camera, and I figured it was pretty big because they were the people that did the newsreels they showed in the movies."

For 36 years, it has remained a moment etched in Crow's memory.

"It was the first time in my life," he says, "that I ever saw my daddy with tears in his eyes."

After the season, Bryant went to Alabama and Crow was drafted by the Cardinals, who were then still in Chicago. They offered a salary of $15,000, and the boy from Springhill was overwhelmed. Then, wonder of wonders, they tacked on a $1,000 bonus.

"I went and talked to Coach Bryant and asked him what I should do, and he advised me to take it," Crow says. "He added that that was what he was making.

"I remember coming back home after my first season and still having $9,200 in the bank! I thought I was in heaven."

Crow lasted for 11 years in the NFL (between them, Crow, Pardee, Krueger, Conrad and Tracey accumulated 65 years of NFL playing time) and they were mostly good ones. He became a frequent Pro Bowl selection and is particularly proud of being named — along with Doak Walker — as one of the backs on an All-SWC pro team named during the '70s. He still holds some of the Cardinals' records.

"Football gave me a good life, and I have enjoyed it," Crow says. "It has been a great honor for me to be able to call people like Doak Walker my friends."

"But more than that, the good Lord blessed me with a wonderful wife and a great family ... and when

Aggie defense holds true to form in victory

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas A&M knew its defense would be a factor against Texas. The Aggies just didn't know a backup defensive back would make the game's key play.

Safety Dennis Allen, who didn't even appear on the Aggies' two-deep chart, intercepted Shea Morenz's pass just in front of the end zone Thursday night to preserve an 18-9 victory and Texas A&M's third consecutive Southwest Conference crown.

Texas had reached the Aggies' 2-yard line with 5:55 left and the Cotton Bowl berth was starting to slip away from Texas A&M.

"My responsibility was the weakside running back," Allen said. "He blocked, so I was able to work underneath to get the interception. I think my mind went blank. I saw the ball, I caught the ball and I went crazy after that."

The victory was Texas A&M's 22nd straight in SWC games, a conference record. The Aggies also became the first team in SWC history to go three seasons without a conference loss.

Texas A&M overcame a 6-0 deficit in the second quarter and took a 15-9 lead halftime lead on the strength of some big plays. Its defense, ranked third, did the rest of the work.

Freshman Leeland McElroy provided a spark with a 100-yard kickoff return, tying an NCAA with three kickoff returns for scores in one season, Corey Pullig then threw a 14-yard touchdown pass to Tony Harrison.

When the Longhorns got the ball on the Aggies' 34 with 9:13 to play, they still trailed by six. Texas moved steadily to the A&M 2 and faced fourth-and-1 when Allen made the interception.

"I study a lot of film and pay attention to what the coaches are saying in the meeting," Allen said. "Then, when I get a chance to play, I just seem to be in the right place at the right time."

Scott Szeredy kicked field goals of 20, 42 and 48 yards for Texas. The Aggies defense repeatedly stiffened when backed up deep in its end.

"Without a doubt, it is the funnest group I've ever been around," Texas A&M defensive coordinator Bob Davie said. "Look how they responded in so many tough situations. That shows a lot of character and heart."

Morenz wound up completing 10 of 30 passes for 124 yards.

"We just couldn't make it happen," Morenz said.

UTEP hopes to end season on winning note

By John Mossman
AP Sports Writer

■ WAC Roundup

Eric Drage could be excused if he wanted to pack it in. With five broken ribs, Drage, who has been sidelined the past two games, might just as easily miss Brigham Young's regular-season finale today against Texas-El Paso.

The fact that BYU's top receiver hopes to play says something about the importance of this game.

Tradition is at stake. BYU has had 19 consecutive winning seasons and has gone to 15 straight bowl games. Both streaks are in jeopardy.

The Cougars (5-5 overall, 5-2 in the Western Athletic Conference) must win at home on Saturday and, curiously, hope that Wyoming also wins on the road against San Diego State. That would create a three-way tie for the WAC title among BYU, Wyoming and Fresno State, which has already finished its season at 6-2.

In that event, the Cougars would earn the WAC's automatic bid to the Holiday Bowl. BYU has the tiebreaking edge based on how those three co-champions fared against the highest-finishing team that all three played (Colorado State). BYU beat CSU, but Wyoming and Fresno both lost to the Rams.

If, however, the Cougars win and Wyoming loses, the tiebreaker goes to Fresno State on the basis of head-to-head competition. Fresno defeated BYU during the season.

Wyoming's bid for the Holiday Bowl hinges on beating SDSU and having BYU lose to UTEP. Wyoming beat Fresno earlier this year.

If Wyoming and BYU both lose this week, Fresno wins the title outright and the bowl berth.

After the Holiday participant is decided, four other WAC teams could wind up in as many as three other bowls because of the WAC's agreements with the Aloha, Copper and Freedom bowls.

Fresno State (8-3 overall) appears a lock to appear in some bowl game. Utah (7-5) also is in the mix. BYU and SDSU must win Saturday to have the required six victories over Division I-A competition to qualify. Wyoming (7-3 overall) also has qualified, but if the Cowboys lose Saturday, they would finish the year with three straight losses and might be dropped from consideration.

"We have to win to have a shot at the championship," BYU coach LaVell Edwards said, "so it's a very big game for us."

Edwards' players already know that. Besides Drage, running back Jamal Willis (knee), offensive guard Evan Pilgrim (ankle) and linebacker Travis Hall (elbow) are expected to climb out of sickbeds and be available.

BYU has beaten UTEP in 21 of the last 22 meetings, and the Miners have not won in Provo since 1970. However, the last time the two teams met in Provo, in 1991, UTEP nearly won, having a late field goal blocked in a 31-29 loss. And the Cougars have not played well at home of late, uncharacteristically losing their last three games at Cougar Stadium.

UTEP (1-10, 0-7), despite playing New Mexico tough in last week's 35-29 setback, has lost nine straight games and 10 straight WAC games dating back to last season.

"Our motto this week will be: 'Get ready one more time,'" UTEP coach Charlie Bailey said. "We've really got something to play for. If we can win, we can keep Brigham Young from having a winning season."

Oilers say Pittsburgh has no respect

Associated Press

The Houston Oilers are psyching themselves up for the Pittsburgh Steelers by calling the Steelers arrogant.

■ NFL This Week

Arrogant? A team that lost 37-13 last week?

Well ...

"They have no respect for our receivers," says defensive end Sean Jones. "How do I know that? Because they've said so many times. They think our receivers are soft and catch passes because of the run-and-shoot."

There are a lot of elements to the meeting Sunday night at the Astrodome of the two teams that are tied for the AFC Central lead at 6-4. For one, people around the league respect the Steelers and their talent immensely, a respect that doesn't seem present for the Oilers.

But fluke or not, Houston is back where it was supposed to be after a 1-4 start that almost got coach Jack Pardee fired.

Everything has broken for them since, notably the schedule, which brought them two games against 0-10 Cincinnati, another against 1-9 New England and a trip last week to Cleveland, where the Browns are in chaos after Bennie Kosar's departure.

"I feel sick talking about it," says linebacker Greg Lloyd.

"It's very important to maintain an even keel," coach Bill Cowher says. "Last week there was a lot of talk about the fact we beat Buffalo and that we were the team in the AFC. I said it then and I'll say it now — there's a lot of football left."

The Steelers have been known to get well at the Astrodome. They won there opening day last year to start a run to the division title and have won three of their last four games in Houston.

This week, they'll probably do without Barry Foster, who sprained an ankle in the Buffalo game. Leroy Thompson is his backup and may go up against his college backfield mate at Penn State, the Oilers' Gary Brown, who has 360 yards on the ground the last two games filling in for the injured Lorenzo White.

Cowher, whose team will meet the Oilers again on Dec. 19, is duly impressed.

"A lot of people were counting them out five weeks ago," he says. "But I knew they were a talented team that's been there before. We know what we've got in front of us."

San Diego is at Indianapolis Monday night.

Buffalo (8-2) at Kansas City (7-3)

This could have implications for home field in the playoffs, but the Chiefs have to think first things first — they blew a 14-0 lead to Chicago last week that helped cut a game off their two-game lead in the AFC West.

Will we see Joe Montana again this week? Maybe, maybe not — he practiced this week but, as usual, coach Marty Schottenheimer probably will wait a while to decide.

These two have met only twice since 1986, both in 1991, when each blew out the other — the Chiefs winning 33-6 in Arrowhead, the Bills winning when it counted, 37-14 in the playoffs. That, of course, was back when Steve DeBerg was handing off to Christian Okoye and Barry Word for the Chiefs.

But Buffalo's changed almost as much — in style, if not in personnel. Only twice this year have they scored more than 24 points and the Bills have been held under 20 points in six of their 10 games, depending on defense not only to hold but to score.

New Orleans (6-4) at Minnesota (5-5)

Two teams were embarassed on national television last week.

The Saints are in free fall, having lost four of five after losing 42-7 by the 49ers Monday night, their worst loss since 1973 to a team they usually play close. The Vikings were thrashed in Tampa Sunday night after winning in Denver, a strange parlay if there ever was one.

Phoenix (3-7) at New York Giants (7-3)

Despite their record, the Cards have outscored their opponents this year and are a little healthier after a bye. The Giants have just three touchdowns in the four games since they lost Mike Sherrard — but the opposition hasn't had a TD in the last two games.

One problem for the Giants has been the passing game — the offensive line has blocked well for the run, but has had trouble picking up blitzes.

San Francisco (7-3) at Los Angeles Rams (3-7)

NEVER write off the 49ers, who now control the NFC West and may even get the home field back for an NFC title game. One reason — George Seifert's revamped defense, a 4-3 that allows him to make better use of his large but less-than-speedy defensive linemen.

"I think the rest of the NFL will take note," says safety Tim McDonald. "But we still understand this business. You're only as good as your last game."

Cleveland (5-5) at Atlanta (4-6)

This would be a perfect spot for the Falcons to stumble — coming off a win over Dallas in which they were sky high. That's what Jerry Glanville teams tend to do — their only loss in their last five games was at home to Tampa Bay after winning at New Orleans.

But the Browns are in such total disarray since Bill Belichick dumped Bernie Kosar that it's hard to imagine them pulling an upset. Todd Philcox has six interceptions and two fumbles in his two games as Cleveland's starter.

Tampa Bay (3-7) at Green Bay (6-4)

The Bucs are getting better as Craig Erickson improves, but Lambeau Field isn't a nice place to visit these days. The Packers, who won 37-14 in Tampa, dominated the Lions last week more than the 26-17 score indicates.

Sterling Sharpe, who caught 10 passes for 147 yards and four TDs in Tampa, probably won't do it again; Jackie Harris, the other receiving threat, is out. But the Packers were able to run for 153 yards against the Lions with Ed West blocking for Harris at tight end, so the injury may be more of a tradeoff than it looks.

Denver (6-4) at Seattle (5-5)

John Elway is having one of his best seasons, perhaps because he's no longer under the thumb of Dan Reeves, although (gasp!) he's failed twice to mount last-minute drives that could have pulled out victories. Still, he was near-perfect last Sunday as the Broncos brought the Steelers back to earth.

The Seahawks, who lost in Denver, 28-17 a month ago, have already won 150 percent more games than they did last year and have some playoff hopes. That's due largely to Rick Mirer, who's energized the offense.

New York Jets (6-4) at New England (1-9)

The Jets are on a five-game run against the worst the NFL can produce and could be 9-4 by the time Dallas comes to town in a month. They're next three opponents are a combined 6-24.

The Jets are one of the few teams to handle New England easily, 45-7 in their first meeting. This could be tougher — six of the Pats' losses are by four points or less and they're at their toughest in Foxboro. Bill Parcells would like nothing more than to send a message back to New York.

Los Angeles Raiders (6-4) at Cincinnati (0-10)

At least the Raiders have been unpredictable, which is something the Bengals can't say. In fact, the Bengals are starting to look like a serious threat to become the first NFL team ever to finish 0-16.

Vandy tops UT women

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Heidi Gillingham scored 23 points and grabbed 11 rebounds Friday in leading Vanderbilt to a 93-71 victory over Texas.

Gillingham and Julie Powell (20 points) provided most of the scoring muscle as No. 2 Vanderbilt (1-1) shot 57 percent, compared with 42 percent by Texas (0-1).

The Commodores went on a 12-0 run early in the game, pulling ahead 27-11 at 8:17 on a basket by Kelly Dougherty.

Vanderbilt led by as much 20 points during the first half and went into halftime leading 44-25.

Vanderbilt junior starter Mara Cunningham tore the anterior cruciate ligament on her left knee early in the second half, a season-ending injury. It was the same knee that required surgery two seasons ago.

Cunningham, from Appleton, Wisc., averaged 8 points a game from 1991-'92 and was named most valuable player in last year's Southeastern Conference tournament.

Rhonda Blades and Donna Harris each scored 11 points for the Commodores.

Nekeshia Henderson led Texas with 28 points. Amie Smith added 17.

LSU bumps UT

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Freshman Ronnie Henderson made a big impact in his first game, hitting five 3-pointers and scoring 21 points Friday night to lead LSU to an 86-66 victory over Texas.

The 6-5 Henderson, one-half of LSU's highly-touted freshman backcourt, also added a thunderous dunk midway through the second half, jumping over a player three inches and three years his senior.

The stuff put LSU up by 17 and drew a roar from the crowd matched only by the response to announcements about Saturday's football game, when the Tigers play Arkansas with a bowl bid on the line.

Jamie Brandon scored 18 points, Clarence Ceasar 17 and Lenear Burns 16 for LSU (1-0), which won its seventh consecutive home opener. Terrence Rencher led Texas (0-1) with 17 points, and Rich McIver had 10 points and 11 rebounds.

But the star was Henderson, considered one of the top two guards in his high school class. The other, Randy Livingston, also signed with LSU and is expected to be back from a knee injury around Jan. 1.

Texas coach Tom Penders has never beaten the Tigers. This time, the problem was .397 (25-63) shooting from the floor. The Longhorns made just 5-of-8 from 3-point range, compared to 9-of-15 for LSU.

Burns scored eight straight LSU points as the Tigers took a 32-19 lead with 4:14 left in the first half. It was 39-27 at the break and LSU led by as many as 23 late in the game.

Maryland shocks Georgetown

Associated Press

LANDOVER, Md. — Duane Simpkins' driving layup with three seconds left in overtime Friday gave Maryland an emotional and improbable 84-83 upset of No. 15 Georgetown.

■ Top 25 Roundup

Maryland trailed by 13 points in the second half and by three with 66 seconds left in overtime before rallying to win the opener for both teams.

Joey Brown's 3-pointer off the glass as the shot-clock expired put Georgetown up 83-80 with 66 seconds left in overtime. But Maryland freshman Keith Booth made a pair of free throws, and a Georgetown turnover set up Simpkins' final shot.

The Hoyas had no time left to take another shot.

Maryland's John Smith scored 26 points in his collegiate debut and sophomore Johnny Rhodes had 20, including 16 in the second half. George Butler led the Hoyas with 21 and Othella Harrington had 16.

It was the first meeting between the two Washington-area teams since 1980, and both squads received plenty of support from the vocal crowd.

Maryland, which started three sophomores and two freshmen, was a decided underdog and played the part early in the game. The Terrapins trailed 53-40 before roaring back by holding Georgetown to just one basket in the final 8:50 of regulation.

That one basket was huge, however, as Butler nailed a 3-pointer with six seconds left in regulation to force the overtime.

Maryland missed seven of its first eight shots in the second half and Harrington scored six points as Georgetown expanded its 10-point halftime lead to 13. Maryland refused to wilt, however, and drew within 65-60 with six minutes to go.

Two free throws by Booth cut the gap to one with 3:37 left, and a steal and dunk by Exree Hipp put Maryland up for the first time in the second half. Hipp fouled out on the next play, however, and Brown made one of two at the line.

Rhodes then popped in a 15-footer, stole the inbounds pass and hit a layup to put Maryland up 73-69.

Georgetown built a 38-28 halftime lead by limiting Maryland to 12-for-34 shooting and forcing 11 turnovers.

No. 1 N. Carolina 90, No. 9 Minnesota 76

NEW YORK — Led by Donald Williams' career-high 28 points, top-ranked North Carolina bounced back from its shocking loss to Massachusetts with a 90-76 victory over No. 9 Minnesota to take third place in the Preseason NIT.

Williams connected on 9 of 14 shots for the Tar Heels (3-1), who opened a 74-58 lead with 7:10 to play only to have the Golden Gophers (2-2) get within 81-76 with 2:11 left. North Carolina went 9-for-14 from the free throw line the rest of the way as Minnesota missed its last eight shots of the game.

Williams has scored at least 20 points in eight straight games, a streak that began in last season's East Regional semifinals and continued through his Final Four MVP performance.

This was North Carolina's second appearance in the Preseason NIT, with the Tar Heels having finished third in 1988, beating Indiana in the consolation game.

It was North Carolina's defense that established the big lead midway through the second half as Minnesota went more than 3½ minutes without a field goal. Williams began to click from the outside and his four-point play with 11:21 left gave the Tar Heels a 63-53 lead. It was his second straight 3-pointer.

No. 24 Vanderbilt 83, Penn St. 60

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Vanderbilt opened the second half with a 16-2 run and Ronnie McMahan scored 25 points as the No. 24 Commodores downed Penn State in the season opener for both teams.

Vanderbilt, which trailed 33-29 at halftime, took control of the game early in the second half as McMahan's basket with 14:31 remaining built a 45-35 lead.

No. 10 Oklahoma St. 113, Providence 102, OT

TULSA, Okla. — Brooks Thompson's driving layup with 7 seconds remaining in regulation tied the game, then he scored eight of his 33 points in overtime to carry No. 10 Oklahoma State to a 113-102 victory over Providence on Friday night.

Tip Off Classic

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Michigan's Fab Five lost Chris Webber, but now it's a Fab Four with a fantastic Fife.

Jalen Rose scored 28 points and sophomore Dugan Fife contributed excellent floor leadership and defense as the Wolverines beat Georgia Tech 80-70 Friday night in the Tip-Off Classic.

Bulls run past Mavs

Associated Press

DALLAS — B.J. Armstrong scored 26 points and Toni Kukoc had a career-high 24 as the Chicago Bulls snapped a three-game losing streak Friday night by cruising past the Dallas Mavericks 108-85.

■ NBA Roundup

The Bulls, who had lost six of their previous seven, led by as much as 35 in the third quarter, scoring on five consecutive layups during one stretch.

Dallas' first sellout crowd of the season booed the team's defensive effort during that lackluster third-quarter spell. The Mavericks fell to 1-10, the worst record in the NBA.

Horace Grant added 15 points and 13 rebounds for Chicago, which finished 2-5 in its seven-game, 10-day road trip.

Lakers 102, Pacers 100

INDIANAPOLIS — Vlade Divac hit a 20-foot jumper with 1 second left, giving the Los Angeles Lakers a 102-100 victory over the Indiana Pacers on Friday night.

It was the first win in seven road games for the Lakers and broke a five-game losing streak, the last three losses coming on the road. It was the second straight homecourt loss for the Pacers.

Hornets 110, Bucks 99

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Larry Johnson scored 28 points and Charlotte held off a late rally to hand the Bucks their 10th consecutive defeat.

The win enabled the Hornets to keep pace with Atlanta atop the Central Division at 8-4. Milwaukee is within one defeat of tying a franchise record of 11 straight losses set on three occasions.

Hawks 124, Bullets 108

ATLANTA — Dominique Wilkins turned in a 24-point third quarter as Atlanta won its seventh straight.

SuperSonics 110, Timberwolves 92

MINNEAPOLIS — Ricky Pierce scored a season-high 28 points on 10-of-14 shooting as undefeated Seattle got its 10th consecutive victory.

Shawn Kemp added 22 points for the Sonics, who are two victories shy of the best start in franchise history — 12-0 at the outset of the 1982-83 season. The NBA record is a 15-0 start by the Washington Capitols in 1948.

Warriors 100, 76ers 88

PHILADELPHIA — Chris Webber scored 10 of his 21 points in the fourth period and grabbed a game-high 14 rebounds to lead Golden State.

Latrell Sprewell added 21 points and seven assists for the Warriors, who are now 2-1 in their four-game, seven-day road trip. Clarence Weatherspoon had 15 points, and Dana Barros and Jeff Hornacek each added 13 for Philadelphia.

Heat 101, Celtics 93

BOSTON — Glen Rice scored 38 points and grabbed 16 rebounds to pace Miami.

Rice's season-high scoring total included 14 points in the fourth quarter, when the Heat broke open the game. Steve Smith added 15 points, Rony Seikaly 11 and John Salley and Matt Geiger 10 each.

Nuggets 112, Trail Blazers 101

DENVER — Dikembe Mutombo had his first triple-double of the season and the third of his NBA career as he led Denver to a victory over Portland.

Jazz 100, Nets 97

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone hit short jumper with 1:06 left and Jeff Malone added a pair of free throws with 7 seconds remaining to give Utah the victory.

Fox courts Stern

LOS ANGELES — Howard Stern, the controversial radio talk-show host, may wind up as the host of Fox's late-night show, replacing Chevy Chase.

"We are talking to him," a Fox source said.

The big question, the insider said, is just how advertisers would respond to Stern. The fear is that Stern, who is known for his off-color comments that have caused the Federal Communications Commission to crack down on him with fines, would turn advertisers away.

A Fox spokeswoman said the network would "officially have no comment" on the report.

Whoopi and Ted flop once again

Art imitated life in "Made in America." Right? Or was it vice versa. Only Ted Danson and Whoopi Goldberg know the answer to that. And they're not talking — literally.

Director Richard Benjamin cast the popular stars for what was to be the comedy of the summer. But the film quickly expired at the box office, almost as fast as Ted and Whoopi's short shelf life as an item.

"Made in America" mirrors the couple's short-lived romance in that never have two characters had so little in common.

Danson is a used-car dealer who does wild-and-crazy TV commercials (think Cal Worthington).

Whoopi is a widowed single mother who owns a bookstore in Oakland. She's as serious as taxes. Ditto for her only child (Nia Long).

Whoopi's dear screen daughter stirs up a hornet's nest when she traces her heritage. The path leads straight to a sperm bank and a big mistake. Turns out ol' Ted is the very white dad to this very black young lady. In vain attempts to hide their true feelings for each other, Ted and Whoopi scream at and scheme against each other for 111 minutes. Which apparently is only a few minutes less than they did in real life.

'Wonderful' wanes

Next month's Christmas episode of "Married ... With Children" has Al and Peg Bundy couch-bound trying to find something to watch on TV besides "It's a Wonderful Life," which is playing on 16 channels.

That was nearly the case last year, when the all-time favorite holiday film from Frank Capra was shown everywhere in December — 26 times on broadcast and cable channels in the Seattle-Tacoma market, for example.

But this year, the film will be seen much less frequently, thanks to Republic Pictures Corp., which is threatening to become known as The Grinch that Stole "It's a Wonderful Life."

And next year, if Republic has its way, there will be even fewer holiday broadcasts of the 1946 classic starring Jimmy Stewart. In fact, there may be just a single major-event appearance on a network.

From nanu to nanny

By Hillel Italie
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — It is the last in a long day of interviews for Robin Williams, the final stretch of a different New York City Marathon. He is sweating, red-faced, his blue eyes slightly dimmed. A wave of the genie's hand and an assistant produces a tall, cool glass of soda.

Williams

But just as Williams settles onto the hotel couch, there's a knock on the door. It's Billy Crystal, in town for David Letterman's TV show. The two comedians laugh and embrace. They crack jokes, converse in a dialect that sounds like Moscow in the Catskills. Crystal sits down for a few minutes and they reminisce, beginning with their first encounter, a benefit years ago in San Francisco.

"It was huge," Williams says. "Steve Martin, Martin Mull. It was run by this big guy who looked like Sidney Greenstreet, who made great chopped liver and never paid you. ...

"It was wild," Crystal says. They had Melissa Manchester .. ."

"... Loudon Wainwright."

"It was an obscure benefit," Crystal says.

"Now, for you esoteric fans," Williams calls out, "Please help save the shrimp, ladies and gentlemen!"

Crystal throws his arms around Williams and they pose for pictures. After more jokes about chopped liver, they recall how they once sat in the announcing booth for a New York Mets game.

"It was the second game he had ever been to," Crystal says. "I asked him what was the first game and he said, 'I saw the San Franciscos.'"

"Happy to be in America!" Williams shouts, back in Borscht Belt-Russian ecstasy. "Thank you bat and ball!"

"He was doing a Russian baseball player," Crystal explains.

"We only have left field!"

Loud laughter. Unprintable gags.

Crystal has to go, but the show is just getting started. Williams is "on," in touch with whatever it is that makes him shake and erupt like an unwatched pot of boiling water. It seems wholly spontaneous, beyond the boundaries of mere publicity.

Ladies and gentleman, the genie has left the bottle.

"You have an internal critic, an internal drive that says, 'OK, you can do more.' Maybe that's what keeps you going," Williams said. "Maybe that's a

Robin Williams has problems in the kitchen as he tries to pass himself off as a British nanny.

'Mrs. Doubtfire' far from a drag

By Jimmy Patterson
Special Projects Editor

Down through the years, Hollywood has always been able to rake in the dough by giving us movies where men dress as women.

There were Tony Curtis and Jack Lemmon in "Some Like it Hot." Dustin Hoffman won an Oscar for "Tootsie," a character that looked astonishingly like former Houston mayor Kathy Whitmire (which always made me wonder if Whitmire would look like Dustin Hoffman if she lost the dress and the glasses).

Now, the 1993 holiday film season brings us Robin Williams as an aging British nanny, in "Mrs. Doubtfire."

Just the thought of the gifted comic actor dressed in drag is enough to send thousands of Williams fans flocking to the box office.

"Doubtfire" lacks the slapstick zaniness of the Lemmon-Curtis cross-dressing feature, and Williams' character isn't quite as ambitious or goal-oriented as Hoffman's Tootsie.

Williams puts his stamp on another memorable character.

But, who cares? "Mrs. Doubtfire" is an absolute treat. Mixing the perfect amount of heart-tugging drama with Williams' comedic flare, "Mrs. Doubtfire" can do no less than bring in mega-bucks for Hollywood this season.

Williams, who plays Daniel Hillard, an out-of-work voice-over artist who, as a father, has an unwavering affection for his children, is caught one afternoon by wife Miranda (Sally Field) throwing a wild 12th birthday party for his son. The hard-working, career-minded Miranda sees little humor in the fact that Daniel has invited an entire petting zoo into their scenic San Francisco home to help with the celebration.

The party is the final straw, and Miranda demands a divorce from a man she considers irresponsible; someone never able to take anything seriously.

Consequently, Miranda is awarded temporary custody of the couple's three children, with Daniel being granted once-a-week visitation rights. The judge tells Daniel that custody will be reconsidered in three months if Daniel is able to

'Catalog of the Stars' filled with ideas

With the turkey hopefully digested by now, we turn our thoughts to those loved ones who are nearly impossible to buy Christmas gifts for. Difficult relations who either have everything, or are unimpressed with cute little pairs of socks or paisley ties.

Patterson

If you have one of those on your list (and who doesn't?), consider a few items from the "Catalog of the Stars," a Christmas wish book chocked-full of books, videos and other never-before-available items, such as:

■ The Dr. Jack Kevorkian Garage Door Opener. Works best when it doesn't work at all.

■ Sylvester Stallone's Unabridged New American Dictionary. Contains all the words Sly has learned over the years. Makes a great stocking stuffer!

■ "Larry King's Greatest Video Moments." Hosted by Larry King. Written by Larry King. Produced by Larry King. Opening tribute to Larry King by Larry King. (Also available in Rush Limbaugh edition).

■ When your kid has successfully finished the video game "Where in the World is Carmen Sandiego?" be sure and buy him the sequel: "Where in the World is Michael Jackson?"

■ The Rush Limbaugh Fountain Pen. Great for dads, but only writes with severe slant to the right.

■ Ed Rollins Truth Serum.

■ "Why You're Not Certifiable," with Sally Jessy Raphael, Phil Donahue, Oprah Winfrey and Montel Williams. A video montage of talk show guests with every psychological disorder known to humankind — as well as disorders not previously known to exist before Sally, Phil, Oprah and Montel told us about them. Designed to make even the most neurotic feel good about themselves.

■ A '90s version of the old Rock 'Em, Sock 'Em Robots game featuring the likenesses of Phoenix Suns forward Charles Barkley and his fearless opponents: An unending supply of assorted anonymous bar patrons.

■ Oregon Sen. Bob Packwood's latest book, "Senatorial Ethics and Proper Sexual Conduct for the '90s" (Fewer pages than even Sly's dictionary.)

■ Collector's Edition Ross Perot-size Q-Tips.

■ The popular new home computer game hosted by David Letterman entitled, "That Woman Who Keeps Breaking Into My House."

■ The current N.Y. Times Bestseller, "The Religious Teachings of Heidi Fleiss."

■ Parker Bros. new board game, "Let's Carve Willard Scott For Thanksgiving."

■ The Rush Limbaugh/Bill Clinton reversible calendar. Good for families with diverse beliefs. Limbaugh calendar counts down the days until Clinton is out of office. Clinton calendar celebrates each and every weekend, the only two days of the week that Rush is not heard or seen either on radio or television.

WILLIAMS: Winters was first major influence

(From 1D)

demon. ... Some people say, 'It's a muse.' No, it's not a muse! It's a demon! DO IT YOU (...)!! HAHAHAHAHA-HAHA!!! THE LITTLE DEMON!!"

His mouth is gnarled, his lower lip in danger of shooting off like an arrow. He is impersonating Groucho on acid. He is giving pornographic interpretations of the Rorschach print blot on his T-shirt. He is a family man promoting a family movie, "Mrs. Doubtfire," but right now no children are in the room.

Even when he talks about the film, the discussion borders on adults only. "Mrs. Doubtfire" stars Williams as a struggling voice-over artist whose eternal playfulness drives his wife (Sally Field) to divorce him and gain custody of their three kids. Grieving over the separation from his family, Williams dresses up as an elderly British woman and gets hired as the nanny.

"There's no other way to realize what mandatory bondage women go through than to put on four hours of makeup and go out and enjoy your afternoon, go out on a hot day in a wool skirt," he said.

"'Now do you understand? Twenty-eight days and the mood changes! Maybe a little hormonal RUSH will get you going!! DO YOU LIKE TO HAVE YOUR INSIDES RIPPED OUT BY A CHILD!!!'"

Williams, 41, grew up in the suburbs of Chicago, Detroit and San Francisco, the son of a wealthy auto executive he addressed as "sir." The only child in his parents' spacious homes, he invented characters and acted out their parts. He discovered his gift for mimicry by mastering the voice of his maternal grandmother, whom he only met by telephone.

His first major influence was Jonathan Winters, another miner of the stream of consciousness. Later, he was turned on to the great stand-up performers: Lenny Bruce, Richard Pryor, George Carlin. Their acts were not warm and lovable. They were just being themselves: frightened, angry, confused.

After college, Williams worked in small comedy clubs in San Francisco. He made a guest appearance on "Happy Days" that led to his own sitcom, "Mork and Mindy." He was also a popular guest on "The Tonight Show" with Johnny Carson, once sharing the billing with Bob Hope.

"It was interesting," Williams said. "He was supposed to go on before me and I was supposed to follow him, and I had to go on before him because he was late. I don't think that made him happy. I don't think he was angry, but I don't think he was pleased.

"I had been on the road and I came out, you know, gassed, and I killed and had a great time. Hope comes out and Johnny leans over and says, 'Robin Williams, isn't he funny?' Hope says, 'Yeah, he's wild. But you know Johnny, it's great to be back here with you ...'"

Williams laughs, maniacally. 'Yeah, he's wild,' he keeps repeating, the words sliding out of one side of his mouth. One voice leads to the next: Hope blends into Bing Crosby who gives way to Don Rickles who segues to Moe of the The Three Stooges.

Asked how people react when they see him in public, Williams offers two versions. Passengers next to him in airplanes tend to request quietly that they be seated elsewhere. The less celebrity-shy might do anything from asking for an autograph to suggesting material even Williams wouldn't touch.

Now living with his second wife and their children in San Francisco, Williams likens his comedy to the daily jogs he takes across the Golden Gate Bridge. There are times he will look over the edge, one side of him pulling back in fear, the other insisting he can fly like Garp.

"Maybe there's something in your mind that gets afraid of that thing. 'We should still hold as long as possible. I don't think we should let the id out yet. Robin, I'm really afraid, because you know, you've been in therapy and I don't think you've worked out everything in your mind.'

"Then, there's the demon: 'C'MON, TALK ABOUT IT!' Even as a journalist, you're saying, 'C'MON, TALK ABOUT IT!' But then there's the other thing: 'No, No no, don't talk about that. I know you want to jump in the stream of consciousness, but it's going to take you over the edge, into the abyss. ...'"

ELTON: Raitt pairs up for LP's most soulful moment

ner, John, who sounds chipper no matter what he's singing, supplies the gospel-blues fervor that Cohen studiously subverts.

In its juxtaposition of two voices that sharply pull against each other, "Born to Lose" is similar to the Bono-Frank Sinatra teaming on Sinatra's recent "Duets" album, a record with which John's is bound to be compared. But beyond the basic concept of having John record with many different singers. the two albums are very dissimilar.

Where Sinatra's album is rooted in a traditional pop idiom and uses classic pre-rock arrangements, John's album roams all over the place stylistically and uses mostly new, contemporary pop arrangements.

Although the voices on Sinatra's album were recorded separately, John was in the recording studio with most of his 15 partners. Instead of strutting their stuff for him in virtuosic technical displays, they blend with him in tight two-part harmonies that sometimes leave the identity of the guest unclear.

Ultimately the differences come down to personality. Sinatra is an innovator whose partners have no choice but to work within his established musical framework. John is an assimilator and something of a chameleon who instinctively extends himself in many directions.

John's music has always been informed by his enthusiasm for all kinds of pop. In his early albums, his music paid homage to the Band and to Crosby, Stills and Nash. He went on to try on roles that have included a 1950s rock-and-roll tunesmith, a bouncy merry-go-round version of Mick Jagger, a disco performer, and a cabaret crooner.

And on "Duets" (MCA 10926; compact disc and cassette), in which he hopscotches through more styles than on any previous album, he has never sounded friskier.

DOUBTFIRE: Film deals delicately with divorce

find an acceptable home and keep a steady job.

Suddenly richer thanks to an interior design deal she swings at work, Miranda sets out to find a housekeeper. With the help of his brother Jack, a makeup artist, and Jack's friend Frank (who together the Hillard kids refer to as "Uncle Jack and Aunt Frank"), Daniel becomes the perfect British version of Aunt Bea. She is the quintessential housekeeper, whose bits of worldly wisdom occasionally inspire Miranda. Mrs. Doubtfire also repeatedly tries to get Miranda to leave her new boyfriend, Stu (Pierce Brosnan), but never quite succeeds.

"Stu?" Mrs. Doubtfire asks Miranda in a fine British accent. "Sounds more like a heavy soup than a person, doesn't it?"

Williams' trademark improvisational comedy is never more apparent in the movie than during his quips with Brosnan. In fact, "Effie, brace yourself!" is already one of the holiday season's more memorable lines.

There are moments more touching, including when the couple's youngest daughter, five-year-old Natalie, learns that her mom and dad are divorcing and dad will be leaving.

"You can't leave now," she tells her dad. "We're in the middle of 'Charlotte's Web.' Who'll help me finish?"

Natalie (Mara Wilson) is one of those irresistibly cute child actors who controls the screen with every appearance she makes. She is never on long enough or often enough, though, for the audience to grow weary of her cuteness.

Mrs. Doubtfire

Daniel/Mrs. Doubtfire ROBIN WILLIAMS
Miranda Hillard ..... SALLY FIELD
Jack ..... HARVEY FIERSTEIN
Stu ..... PIERCE BROSNAN
Directed by Chris Columbus.
Rated: PG-13 (mild language).
Running time: 124 minutes.
Venue: UA Cine 4.

Without spoiling the ending, it's safe to say that everyone makes out as well as possible in "Mrs. Doubtfire," with the title character even getting her own television show and Daniel getting to see the children more often.

"Mrs. Doubtfire" builds toward an uproarious climax in an upscale San Francisco restaurant. It is there that both Daniel and Mrs. Doubtfire have simultaneous dinner engagements. Daniel is summoned by the owner of the television station he works for in what is essentially an interview for a job he can't afford to lose; Mrs. Doubtfire is needed for a family celebration. The hilarity that follows is alone worth the price of admission.

The film deals with the trauma of divorce in a touching fashion and one leaves wishing every child in broken homes can find as happy an ending as the one depicted on screen.

There are no real surprises in a movie of this sort. And there's no mistaking that the film is a star vehicle for Robin Williams, arguably the funniest man alive today.

But as gifted an actor and as brilliant a comedian as he is, it's hard for a project to go wrong when Williams' talents are involved.

PERFECT: Drama moves along nicely lead, a psychotic criminal named Butch Haynes who escapes from a Texas prison and kidnaps a 7-year-old to aid in his flight to Alaska.

The role is simply out of Costner's reach. Haynes is complex, and the bond he must form with his child hostage is one of the more perplexing and frightening on-screen relationships in years. Costner lacks the subtlety and depth required. His performance is a bland, one-note effort.

Otherwise, John Lee Hancock's very effective drama moves along nicely, with sprinkles of wit from Eastwood in his role as the career Texas Ranger Red Garrett.

The year is 1963, and John F. Kennedy is on his way to Dallas. Butch and Terry Pugh (Keith Szarabajka), a convict even scummier than Haynes, escape from prison and, while trying to switch cars, find themselves at the home of a single mother and her two children. Pugh tries to rape the mother and Butch rescues her but takes her son, Phillip, as a hostage.

After Pugh tries to sexually abuse Phillip, Butch kills him and he and the child become road buddies. A curious friendship develops: Phillip, who has been raised as a Jehovah's Witness, has been forbidden to celebrate all the special childhood holidays — Halloween, Christmas, birthdays. Butch wants to help the kid experience all he's missed.

Phillip's never been on a roller coaster, so Butch ties him to the top of the station wagon he's stolen and gives him the ride of his life. (Note: In this the age of lousy parents who blame movies for their children's bad behavior, this scene is sure to be excised sometime after its release.)

When Phillip steals a Casper the Friendly Ghost costume, the theft brings him closer to Butch because now he, too, has done something bad and is "on the lam."

Finally, before he meets uncertain death, Butch tells Phillip to write a list of everything he's ever wanted to do, and make sure he gets to do those things in life.

Along the way, the chase is taken up by Garrett, a team of deputies, an FBI idiot and a criminologist, Sally Gerber (Laura Dern).

Little is made of Dern's role, though she puts in a good performance. At the start, Sally is set up as a possible foil for Red, a grizzly cop who chugs Geritol ("Arthur Godfrey says this stuff'll keep you young, but I'm not so sure"). She also lectures the fed about Butch's psychological makeup, saying it's more important to know why he's going where he's going than to know where he's running to.

But the movie never goes anywhere with that thought or the use of Sally's criminology. There's little reason for her to be there, except to set up tension and look pretty.

As Phillip, T.J. Lowther is perfect. This is only his second film role; he also appears in "A Home of Our Own" with Kathy Bates. He seems younger and more vulnerable than the 7-year-old he portrays — a child who wants to belong, who wants a father, a buddy.

A Perfect World

Butch Haynes ..... KEVIN COSTNER
Red Garnett ..... CLINT EASTWOOD
Sally Gerber ..... LAURA DERN
Phillip Perry ..... T.J. LOWTHER
Directed by Clint Eastwood; Produced by Mark Johnson and David Valdes. Written by John Lee Hancock.
Rated: PG-13.
Venue: North Park Cinema.

There are frightening scenes played out before Phillip's eyes: He learns to handle a gun — a scary reality with the level of youthful violence today.

But the most uneasy scene in the movie is when Butch sets out to kill a family that has shown him kindness. First, there's a bittersweet moment when he dances with the grandmother (Mary Alice) to an old 78. Then he hears her son listening to a radio report about Butch and Phillip.

The decision to liquidate the family is swift. But what unleashes Butch's fury is the brutality the father shows in disciplining his young son.

Butch and Phillip both have the same reaction to any form of parental reprimand or discipline: They cringe. It is another emotional link between the two fatherless beings.

"A Perfect World" is a Warner Bros. release and a Malpaso production, with Mark Johnson and David Valdes as producers. Eastwood directed from Hancock's script. The movie is rated PG-13.

Spielberg's new tale extinct of any value

N.Y. Times News Service

There's a very good reason Walt Disney has cornered the market when it comes to animated features. Artistic excellence and musical savvy aside, the company's strongest suit is its understanding that a successful animated feature should delight adults as much as it does their offspring.

To his credit, Steven Spielberg is a kid at heart. When it comes to the Saturday matinee motion picture romp, nobody does it better. But when it comes to animation, he bites.

"We're Back! A Dinosaur's Story," the fourth Spielberg-produced animated feature and second from his still-fledgling company Amblimation, shares the same faults as its three predecessors: "An American Tail," "The Land Before Time," and "An American Tail: Fievel Goes West." While the littlest of kids will find the amusement value high (about the equivalent of, say, an empty cardboard box) the older kids and adults will be bored unconscious.

Based on Hudson Talbott's children's story, "We're Back" aims to capitalize on the dinosaur craze that's gripping America's youngsters.

Walter Cronkite is the voice of Captain NewEyes, an eccentric genius who plucks a foursome of dinos from prehistory, raises their IQs with a high-tech breakfast cereal called Brain Grain and offers them the chance to grant the wishes of modern-day children.

With the help of his wish radio, the good captain has determined that dinos are just the ticket to cheer up today's tots. The cheerful lizards, who not only have become smarter, but also cuter and less vicious-looking, happily agree.

But the Captain's evil brother, Professor ScrewEyes (the voice of Kenneth Mars) wants the creatures for his Eccentric Circus, a bizarre big top designed to scare its patrons.

Terrific ideas, like Professor ScrewEye's fear of radio, a device that tunes in the fears of children, go by unnoticed in this colorful mess of a movie that's completely lacking in wit, emotion, memorable music and, most importantly, magic.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Be ready for the unexpected. A flexible, off-the-cuff approach will let you rack up new career and financial victories. In early 1994, a child teaches you something important about love. Grant all family requests that are reasonable. A golden opportunity to travel is featured next spring. Remain true to your high ideals. Take a firm stand where business ethics are concerned.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Robin Givens, rock legend Jimi Hendrix, actor Bruce Lee, attorney Caroline Kennedy Schlossberg.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): See to financial matters promptly. Try not to get angry with someone who likes to call the shots. You also have a tendency to act that way! Always take the high road.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Financial ventures prosper. A new residence could be part of your plan. A change of environment proves beneficial for your emotional health. Let loved ones know that you are aware of their concerns.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Take aim at a new goal. Seek information about the work you would like to do. Pursuing a different career could be a turning point in your life. Party with friends tonight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Keep your emotions under good control even if you get an unexpected jolt today. Try to accept those things you cannot realistically hope to change. Curl up with a good book tonight. Relax.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Good financial news is featured. Something you put on the market is likely to be sold. Remember a lesson learned in the past and avoid making the same mistake. Play it cool in romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An excellent day to help as many people as you can. Offer your services without expecting anything in return. Cultivate a calm manner and avoid sounding judgmental when helping those less fortunate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Romance looks terrific. Keep a firm hold on what you want. The evening brings news that will enrich or delight you. Take only a few people into your confidence. Guard your sources.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Curb an urge to act vindictively toward someone who has wronged you. You are much too fine a person to indulge in petty revenge. Use your artistic talents to increase your wealth and prestige.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take a closer look at your plans. Carefully scrutinize a so-called bargain. Travel or romance could be touch-and-go. Delay signing important papers until Monday.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do not blame other people for your own shortcomings. It is time to make an important decision. Your charm has a galvanizing effect on member of opposite sex. Study your dreams carefully.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Staying at home holds special appeal today. Tact and affection bridge a generation gap within the family circle. An unconventional romance has certain fringe benefits.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): People at a distance play a major role in your enjoyment of close ties today. Do your best to keep things on an even keel at home. Avoid bringing up controversial subjects.

TODAY'S CHILDREN: Freedom is as necessary to these Sagittarians as air to breathe. Highly mobile and curious, they will want to roam even as tots. Neatness counts big with them.

Some of Hollywood's leading men admit they love to love

NEW YORK — Some of Hollywood's leading men admit it: They love love.

"You can write a book or a play or do almost anything, but you cannot make a movie if you don't appreciate women," Jack Nicholson said in December's Cosmopolitan.

Gerard Depardieu, married 23 years, said that on a movie set with a beautiful woman he may enjoy "a little seductive teasing" but goes no further.

"Conquest is not heroic," he said. "What's heroic is to make love last."

They were among more than two dozen movie and television stars who talked to the magazine about their sex lives.

Sylvester Stallone said he thinks about endless love.

"I want to be romantic forever, to be cryonically frozen with a box of chocolates under my arm, and some flowers, and then thawed out in 200 years so I can propose to someone."

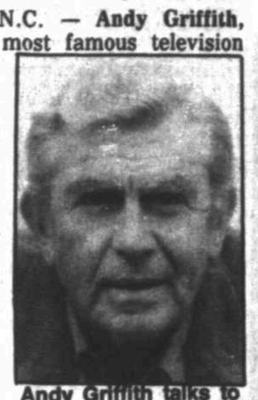
CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Andy Griffith, North Carolina's most famous television sheriff, is on a case in his home state.



Andy Griffith talks to governor about leaking petroleum tanks.

He recently called Gov. Jim Hunt's staff and asked them to look into residents' fears about leaking petroleum tanks at a Charlotte facility.

Griffith, aka Sheriff Andy Taylor, is interested because Neil Castles, who lives near the tank farm, works as a driver on the set of Griffith's current television series, "Matlock."

The show, featuring Griffith as a rumpled defense lawyer, is filmed in Wilmington. Castles and his wife, Jean, have complained to local officials that water from their well smells and tastes bad.

Residents fear leaks might cause cancer and reduce property values. Oil companies said the fears are unfounded.

Bill Holman, a lobbyist for the North Carolina Sierra Club, said Griffith's involvement might help resolve controversy over the tank farm.

"It may take Matlock to clean up this mess," he said.

MIAMI — Marjory Stoneman Douglas, the Everglades' most eloquent and enduring defender, was thrilled when President Clinton called a few months ago and invited her to the White House.

But she wasn't told until Thanksgiving eve that she will receive the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian honor.

The 103-year-old Douglas was "ecstatic," said her secretary, Sharon Richardson.

Douglas will spend Monday and Tuesday nights in the White House as the Clintons' guest. On Tuesday, she will be one of five people to receive the medal during a ceremony.

The other honorees: former Supreme Court Justice William Brennan; the late Justice Thurgood Marshall; U.S. District Judge John Minor Wisdom of Louisiana, an opponent of segregation; and the late Joseph Rauh, a labor lawyer who founded Americans for Democratic Action.

LOS ANGELES — Tom Arnold powered down four doughnuts in a minute's time to demonstrate his readiness for a charity dessert-eating contest.

Arnold and his wife, Roseanne, will be paired Dec. 5 against Hulk Hogan and restaurateur Robert Earl to raise money for the Tom and Roseanne Arnold Foundation for Abused Children.

"I will stuff myself until I get sick. I mean, I will have a sugar overdose. Anything for the foundation," Arnold said Friday on KTLA-TV's "The Morning Show."

The contest will be held at the Planet Hollywood restaurant in Costa Mesa.

Both Arnolds have said they were abused as children.

NEW YORK — The man known as Captain Kangaroo thinks television has gotten too commercial, Mel Allen thinks sportscasters talk endless gibberish, and Virginia Graham thinks talk shows are not substantive.

All are television pioneers to be honored for their careers Monday when they will be inducted into the Silver Circle of the New York chapter of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

"Today, there's what I call the 'toy shelf' mentality," Bob Keeshan, who is known to millions as Captain Kangeroo, told The Associated Press. "Shows are built around dolls and games and characters created as toys. They're really glorified sales tools and I think, exploitative."

Allen, the sports announcer known for his familiar voice on "This Week in Baseball" faulted modern sportscasters for information overload.

"Today, on 'Monday Night Football,' you have three people commenting on each play," he said, "and because of instant replay, you get to see that play two or three times before action resumes."

NOTICE TO PUBLIC BY MIDLAND NEIGHBORHOOD HOUSING SERVICES, INC. OF INTENT TO REQUEST THE RELEASE OF FUNDS IN CONNECTION WITH THE HOME INVESTMENT PARTNERSHIP PROGRAM

November 9, 1993
Midland Neighborhood Housing Services, Inc.
401 East Illinois, Suite 106
Midland, TX 79701

(915) 686-0066

TO ALL INTERESTED AGENCIES, GROUPS AND PERSONS: On or about November 9, 1993 the Midland Neighborhood Housing Services, Inc. (NHS) will request the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs (TDHCA) to release funds under Title II of the National Affordable Housing Act of 1990 for the following project:

HOME Program Contract Number: 532022
Description: Rehabilitation of Ten Owner Occupied Homes
Location: TO BE IDENTIFIED IN EAST & SOUTH MIDLAND
Total Estimated Cost: $150,000.00

An Environmental Review Record respecting the within projects has been made by NHS which documents the Environmental Review Record is on file at 401 E. Illinois, Suite 106 and is available for public examination and copying upon request between the hours 9 AM to 4 PM Monday through Friday. Comments will be received 7 days following the publication of this notice.

NHS will undertake the projects described above with the HOME Investment Partnership program funds from the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs under Title II of the National Affordable Housing Act of 1990. NHS is certifying to the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs that NHS and Raul Ceniceros, Executive Director of NHS, in his official capacity as Executive Director, consent to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal courts is an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to environmental assessments, decision-making, and action; and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. The legal effect of the certification is that upon it approval, NHS may use HOME Program funds, and the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs will have satisfied its responsibilities under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 and 24 CFR Part 58.

The Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs will accept an objection to its approval of the release of funds and acceptance of the certification only if it is on one of the following basis:

(a.) that the certification was not in fact executed by the chief executive officer or other certifying officer of the Grantee approved by the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs; or

(b.) that the Grantee's environmental review record for the project indicates omission of a required decision, finding, or step applicable to the project in the environmental review required procedures (24 CFR Part 58), and may be addressed to the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs, P.O. Box 13941, Capitol Station, Austin 78711-3941.

Objections to the release of funds on bases other than those stated above will not be considered by the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs. No objection received after (date of last day in the TDHCA 15 day objection period) will be considered by the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs.

CAROLERS

When we think of Christmas, we think of those delightful carolers strolling house-to-house in Charles Dickens time (the age of Yule logs and plum pudding). Here's a colorful scene that will help your home have an old-fashioned Christmas. Measuring a life-size 52" by 35", this outdoor display is easy to make. Just glue the color poster onto plywood and saw it out! Prop the display up with a stake, dramatize with a small spotlight, and you'll have the cheeriest house on the block!

How to make money in three easy steps.

Step 2.

Aim for an audience.
After you've selected a solution for another to seize, bring that person to life. Think about your product or service and its original value to you, then detail its features and benefits to another individual.
When you put those benefits into words, others like you will find value too. And that's of value to you!

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

NEWLY PATENTED
OIL PRODUCTION
TECHNOLOGY

Licensee (s) wanted to implement a process defined by a recently issued U.S. Patent. The "Process" is one which allows the manufacture and use of C02 within an oil-bearing dolomite formation by both causing a controlled dissociation of C02 for the flood agent. The process appears to be economically adbantaged over surface purchase of C02, and, of course, is not dependent on surface availability of C02. For further information contact:
