Hurricane's 'flight plan' still up in the air

By ED BIRK
Associated Press Writer

CEDAR KEY, Fla. — Unpredictable Elena, after being stalled at sea for two days, strengthened to a major hurricane with sustained winds of 125 mph Sunday and headed toward the Gulf Coast, where the second evacuation in four days was ordered.

Some 250,000 people in Florida's Panhandle were told to flee the storm Sunday, as were 175,000 people on Alabama's coast.

Hurricane warnings were extended westward from Yankeetown, below Florida's Panhandle, to Grand Isle, La., about 50 miles beyond New Orleans. The warnings covered more than 500 miles of coast.

The storm, blamed for at least one death, was expected to make landfall by daybreak between Pensacola and Mobile, Ala., if it sustained its movement of 10 mph to the north-northwest, Mark Zimmer, a forecaster with the National Hurricane Center said Sunday evening.

Farther south, officials said they would lift evacuation orders in the central Florida around Tampa area Sunday evening, letting some 500,000 people return home. National Guard troops called out earlier Sunday to keep restless evacuees from returning to the coast were then told to check identifications of those returning.

Elena had forced evacuation in the Panhandle and in Alabama's two coastal counties on Thursday before veering toward Florida's west-central coast, where an estimated 1 million people were evacuated. Panhandle and Alabama residents returned home as the storm wobbled 80 miles west-southwest of Cedar Key in the Gulf of Mexico on Saturday.

The hurricane started moving Sunday afternoon, when Zimmer said the storm had "established a definite track, heading north-northwest."

"The eye has already passed Apalachicola and is going near Panama City," about 50 miles farther west in the central part of the Panhandle, Zimmer said later Sunday. "What we're emphasizing to people is that hurricane-force winds are occurring now from Apalachicola to Panama City."

At 7:30 p.m. EDT the storm's center was 40 miles south-southwest of Panama City, the center said. Zimmer said the "best bet" was landfall between Pensacola, at the western tip of the Panhandle, and Mobile, about 70 miles to the west.

About 250,000 people were affected in the five Panhandle counties where the governor ordered the evacuation, said Bob Nave, an official with the Department of Emergency Management. Alabama officials estimated 175,000 people were affected by evacuation orders there Sunday.

"Evacuation must be rushed to completion," the center said in a statement. "Rising tides as much as 10 to 12 feet above normal could occur and escape routes may be cut off before midnight."

Forecasters said the storm also could bring up to 15 inches of rain.

Labor Day: Last holiday of summer has dark side

Highway death toll growing

Associated Press

A flurry of one-vehicle accidents pushed the holiday traffic death toll in Texas to 31 Sunday, the Department of Public Safety said.

The DPS predicts that 45 people will die by midnight Monday, the end of the 78-hour holiday count that began at 6 p.m. Friday.

During the similar period last year, 41 Texans were killed and five others died later of injuries.

Many of the accident victims were not wearing seat belts, despite a new law requiring those in the front seat to wear the restraints, said DPS spokesman David Wells.

"We're still seeing that a lack of safety belt use is a factor in the accidents," Wells said.

The seat belt law, passed by the Legislature this spring, went into effect Sunday. However, the law includes a 90-day grace period before fines can be levied against violators.

The latest fatalities reported by the DPS include:

— Cruz Mireles, 27, Nuevas Zacatecas, Mexico, who was killed as he was crossing a street at 12:32 a.m. Saturday in San Antonio. Police said the accident was a hit-and-run, and the driver of the car has not been located.

— Mary Lucille Taylor, 53, of Houston, who was killed as a passenger in a two-car crash at 10:27 a.m. Sunday in Leon County about five miles west of Centerville at State Highway 7 and Farm to Market Road 39. Another woman in the car, Valerie Gibbs, 50, of Los Alamos, N.M. was critically injured.

For some Midlanders, Labor Day signifies the last day of summer vacation. Others aren't so lucky. Here, Emergency Medical Service paramedics Mark Chamness, left, and Scooter Magee tackle average weekday chores while on duty.

Many remain unemployed

WASHINGTON (AP) — For 1.2 million Americans, the Labor Day holiday honoring working people is little more than a dreary milestone marking at least six months of being unemployed and searching without success for a job.

The picture is particularly grim for blacks, who as a group are experiencing a 15 percent jobless rate — more than twice the national unemployment level. Also hard hit are Hispanics, who are experiencing 11.2 percent unemployment.

But the decline of industries in the manufacturing sector, a development many blame largely on foreign imports, is hurting workers of all races in the steel-producing centers of the North and the textile mills of the South.

There are 40,000 laid-off steelworkers in the 11-county industrial area of northeastern Illinois and northwestern Indiana, including thousands of long-term unemployed whose jobless benefits have expired. Some are losing their homes because they can't keep up with the mortgage payments.

"We have money from the federal and state government for job retraining, but retraining for what?" asks Jack Parton, director of the United Steelworkers Union District 31 in East Chicago, Ind.

"The computer industry never did materialize in this area. We have some of the best mechanics, millwrights, electricians out there in the street. These are A-rate people wanting a job. These people would much rather be working."

Drugs split family from Texan accused as 'Night Stalker'

EL PASO (AP) — Drugs caused a rift between father and son more than three years ago, but Julian Ramirez still finds it hard to believe his son could be the brutal "Night Stalker" serial killer.

The killer has been blamed for 16 random murders and 21 assaults in a rampage that spanned California during the past six months.

Richard Ramirez, 25, who grew up in El Paso, was arrested Saturday and booked for investigation of murder.

Julian Ramirez, in an interview conducted in Spanish at his home in El Paso, said he learned on television Friday night that his son was wanted by California police, but he didn't immediately understand the accusations.

In a copyright story Sunday in the El Paso Times, he said he had not seen his son in two or three years, that drugs had caused them to grow apart.

"I believe the marijuana he's been smoking put him out of control," said the elder Ramirez, an employee of the Santa Fe Railway in El Paso.

"There was a break between us. He didn't want to do what we told him to," Ramirez said.

"It was like this: I'm your father, and I tell you not to use drugs. And you want to keep using them/Do you understand?"

Of the murder allegations, he said, "In my heart, I can't believe he would have arrived at that. But if the authorities there have proof, what can we do?"

The elder Ramirez said he didn't plan to go to Los Angeles to visit his son, who is being held without bond until a hearing, or try to help in his son's legal defense.

"No," he said. "I don't have the money. In a case this heavy; it would be very difficult. I can't say that my son didn't do it, if the law has proof. What role am I supposed to play?

"How can I tell you it doesn't hurt? We haven't been in contact, but he's still my son."

Although he said his son was a "good boy," Julian Ramirez described Richard as "stubborn."

"When he wanted to do something, he did it. He wanted to go to L.A., and he went," he said.

When the younger Ramirez was 18, he left home for Los Angeles and returned only sporadically for visits, his father said. He said he last saw his son two or three years ago, when his son dropped in for a visit.

The younger Ramirez was arrested three times by El Paso police, records show. The first arrest occurred in 1977, when he was 17. Subsequent El Paso arrests were in 1979 and 1982. All were on charges of possession of less than two ounces of marijuana.

Up until four years ago, the Ramirez family lived in Central El Paso. The younger Ramirez dropped out of school when he was 14, six months before he was to have finished the ninth grade, his father said.

Alma Gaytan, a schoolmate of Ramirez's and one-time next door neighbor, said Ramirez was an average student in elementary school who fell in with a group of students in junior high who used drugs.

"Growing up he was an average student. But in junior high, he got in with some bad influences," said Ms. Gaytan, 25.

Maria Arredondo, another neighbor, said Ramirez was a quiet boy who kept to himself and didn't have many friends.

"He was quiet and always stayed at home. They (the family) kept to themselves. Just good morning, good night, that's all," she said.

Spacewalker successfully spins 'jump-started' satellite into orbit

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — With a mighty heave and a weightlifter's grunt, spacewalker James "Ox" van Hoften sent a repaired satellite spinning off on its own Sunday, successfully completing a daring salvage project in space.

"Good spin, Ox," called fellow spacewalker Bill Fisher as the 7½-ton Syncom 3 satellite whirled away from the space shuttle Discovery at three revolutions per minute. "Ahhhh, that's great."

"Well done, Ox," said mission commander Joe Engle, who watched from Discovery's cabin.

"A good steady spin," agreed van Hoften, who pushed the satellite away from the shuttle while standing on the end of Discovery's 50-foot robot arm, 230 miles above the Pacific Ocean.

The hand launch was the final act of a complex repair job that energized dead electrical circuits inside the Syncom 3 and gave the $85 million communications craft a chance to climb out of its uselessly low orbit and become a working satellite.

About an hour later, Mission Control told the astronauts that a ground station had contacted Syncom 3 by radio and that the satellite had responded to commands.

"The status (of the satellite) looks good," said Mission Control.

"That's good news," replied Engle. "If you've got any other satellites that need fixing, we'll be glad to take care of them before we come down."

Steven Dorfman, president of Hughes Communications Inc., owner of the satellite, called the repair project "the most remarkable salvage mission in the U.S. space program."

But he warned that there was still no final assurance that Syncom 3 had survived intact its long exposure to the deep cold of space that could have caused damage to the satellite's rocket engines and propellant.

"The hot wire phase is over," said Dorfman. "The question now is will the engine turn over."

Hughes officials earlier had given only 50-50 odds for success and Dorfman said that despite the spacewalk success, "the betting windows are closed and it's too late to change the odds." Marvin Mixon, a Hughes vice president, said that temperature readings taken Sunday were "encouraging."

Syncom 3's first rocket firing is set for Oct. 29, following weeks of testing and warming of the 11,000 pounds of propellant on board. If successful, the craft will soar to its working station.

Mourners in Japan, South Korea recall downing of KAL jetliner

TOKYO (AP) — Mourners gathered in Japan and South Korea on Sunday to memorialize 269 people killed when Soviet jets shot down a Korean Air Lines jumbo jet two years ago.

In Wakkanai, Japan's northernmost city, 250 relatives of victims dedicated a 65-foot monument in a 1½-hour ceremony at Cape Soya Park on the anniversary of the Sept. 1, 1983, attack.

Soviet interceptors downed KAL flight 007 with heat-seeking missiles after the South Korean jetliner strayed into sensitive Soviet airspace on its way from Anchorage, Alaska to Seoul, South Korea.

The ceremony on Japan's northern island of Hokkaido was sponsored by the Association of Bereaved Families of the KAL Incident, which raised $500,000 to build the monument, according to organization President Masakazu Kawana.

The memorial is in the shape of a crane with 16 wings, representing the 16 countries of origin of the passengers, said Kawana, whose 20-year-old son was on the plane.

Among the victims were 61 Americans, including Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga.

The monument was built with 269 white stones, one for each victim. The crane's neck is pointed toward tiny Moneron Island off the western coast of Soviet Sakhalin Island, where the plane is believed to have gone down.

In the back of the monument there is a small "peace bell" made of stainless steel which visitors can ring.

In Chonnan, South Korea, about 50 miles south of Seoul, 500 mourners burned incense and laid flowers at a monument to relatives killed in the KAL crash, the Association of Bereaved Families of the KAL Incident said.

Family members gathered for a one-hour ceremony in front of the granite monument in Manghyang Gardens, a public cemetery. Victims' relatives dedicated the monument last year, said Lee Young-tae, who heads the relatives' association in South Korea.

Climber killed at JAL crash site

TOKYO (AP) — A man climbing to pray on the mountainside where a Japan Air Lines jetliner crashed was killed Sunday by a falling rock, police said.

Police in Gunma Prefecture (state) said Saburo Hisano, 32, was struck on the head by a rock near the crash site on the 5,400-foot Mount Osutaka, 70 miles northwest of Tokyo.

They said local police took him to a hospital, where he died several hours later.

Hisano was accompanying Tomio Otsuka, whose husband and daughter were among 520 people killed in the Aug. 12 crash. Only four people survived.

Hisano was an employee at Ms. Otsuka's business in Nara, central Japan, police said.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Irish prison inmates riot

CORK, Ireland (AP) — About 70 inmates, some wielding pickaxes and pitchforks, seized control of the Spike Island prison compound off the Irish coast Sunday and set it afire, leaving three-fourths of the prison a smoldering ruin, police said.

Riot-equipped police, backed by Irish soldiers, moved in to restore order at the minimum-security prison. No terrorist convicts are housed in the compound.

About 40 inmates clambered onto the roof of a two-story recreation hall and held out for a time, but gave up and climbed down as dusk fell, police said.

Inmates had commandered a bulldozer and smashed across the compound as they torched buildings, witnesses said. They said three buildings were destroyed and two others heavily damaged.

One guard was slightly injured by a gasoline bomb, but no inmates were reported hurt, police said.

Mourners attack whites

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Black mourners returning from a funeral for riot victims near East London attacked and killed two whites and badly wounded two other whites, police said Sunday.

The attack followed a funeral for 18 black riot victims attended by about 50,000 people in Duncan Village, a black area of East London on the Indian Ocean.

Meawhile, about 1,500 black miners at a small coal mine began a strike Saturday night, 24 hours ahead of the scheduled walkout at seven gold and coal mines with 60,000 black miners, said Howard Gabriels, an official of the black National Union of Mineworkers.

Lebanese fire resumes

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Gunfire crackled from south Lebanon to the Christian suburbs of Beirut around President Amin Gemayel's palace on Sunday in renewed fighting that also saw a new spate of kidnappings of Lebanese civilians.

One person was killed in combat between Moslem Druse and Amal militias who pushed their struggle for control of west Beirut. The militias grabbed five Lebanese hostages, police said.

Eight miles outside Beirut, Christian units of the army fought artillery and rocket battles with Druse around the army-held village of Souk el-Gharb. Sixteen people were wounded when the Druse lobbed shells at nearby suburbs.

In southern Lebanon, police said a Moslem militiaman was killed in fighting between the Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army and the Popular Liberation Army, an alliance of Moslem and leftist fighters.

Irish pact in offing?

LONDON (AP) — An agreement giving the Irish Republic an advisory role in running Northern Ireland will soon be submitted to the British and Irish cabinets, British press reports said Sunday.

Press Association, a British domestic news agency which is regularly briefed by the government, said the plan could be ready in time for an Anglo-Irish summit in late October or early November.

The news agency said, however, that government sources in London put the chances of a successful deal at no better than 50-50, mainly because of Protestant resistance to any move toward power-sharing between London and Dublin.

A spokeswoman for Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain refused to confirm that the long-awaited accord on the future of the province, the site of much sectarian bloodshed, was nearing completion, or to give details of proposals under discussion.

Train engineer charged

CHATEAUROUX, France (AP) — A judge charged locomotive engineer Jean-Yves Brisset with involuntary manslaughter Sunday for failing to slow his express train in a construction zone prior to a wreck that killed 42 people.

Conviction could mean a prison term of three months to two years and fines ranging from the equivalent of $575 to $3,600.

No Americans were known to have been on the train, but many British and Spanish tourists were among the casualties.

Police quoted Brisset, 37, as admitting he was traveling too fast in a 20 mph zone early Saturday. He was released Sunday pending trial.

Executions ordered

PEKING (AP) — Chinese courts ordered the immediate execution of three men convicted of marketing a drink using industrial alcohol which killed 25 people and blinded seven, leading newspapers reported Sunday.

The papers said two separate cases were involved in Sichuan province, where the executions were ordered Saturday.

In one case, former peasant Zuo Chenggong and peddler Li Yongtai set up a company in Chengdu and made fake "bai jiu," or white liquor, from diluted industrial alcohol, half of which they sold through a merchant in the city.

Fifteen people poisoned by the brew died and seven were blinded, the Peking Daily and the overseas edition of the People's Daily reported.

In a second case, the papers said the concotion offered by Chongqing shop manager Li Ronghui killed 10 customers and made four others ill.

China needs more jobs

PEKING (AP) — China must create 140 million jobs by 1990 to accommodate its growing population and workers who will lose their old jobs due to economic development, the official Xinhua news agency reported Sunday.

Xinhua quoted Labor Vice Minister He Guang as saying 30 million young people will enter the labor force by 1990.

Trade center begun

PEKING (AP) — Work began Sunday on a $280 million world trade center that planners say will include a 40-story office block, an 18-floor hotel, conference facilities, apartments and gardens.

The complex, to be completed by late 1987, will occupy 444,000 square yards on Peking's main thoroughfare, Jianguomenwai. Peking currently has no comparable facility.

It is a joint venture between the Kerry Industrial Co. of Hong Kong, owned by Malaysian industrialist Robert Kuok, and the China Economic and Trade Consultants Corp.

Kuok is one of many wealthy overseas Chinese investing in mainland China under the open-door policy of leader Deng Xiaoping.

Pact would restrict offshore activity

New York Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Interior Secretary Donald P. Hodel, ending a 12-day information-gathering tour of California, held a public hearing here on a "preliminary agreement" that would ban nearly all oil and gas exploration off the coast of California for the rest of the century.

The hearing was one of 11 held by the secretary at cities and towns along the coast, from Eureka in the north to Oceanside in the south, and he said they had prompted him to re-evaluate an agreement between the state and federal governments.

In addition to environmental concerns, the secretary said he would consider such issues as the jobs provided by offshore oil and gas exploration, the effects of energy costs on members of minority groups, and the poor production potential of the few tracts that the Interior Department has selected to lease. Northern California, where the majority of the offshore tracts designated for exploration are situated, is still virgin territory in offshore oil and gas development.

"I'm not looking at junking it all together," Hodel said. "I'm hoping on using the preliminary agreement as a framework."

The agreement was reached between the Interior Department and a group of California legislators on July 16 in an attempt to satisfy the desires of conservationists while meeting the nation's energy needs. A final agreement between the state and federal governments is intended to replace a four-year moratorium on drilling off the California coast. The moratorium, declared by Congress after a number of leases by the Interior Department proved controversial, expires Sept. 30.

Under the plan, 150 tracts off the coast would be opened for developement immediately after agreement, while the remaining 6,310 tracts designated for exploration would be off limits until the year 2000. The only exception would be made in a national emergency. The Interior Department designated the tracks after preliminary tests indicated the quantities of oil and gas that might be found beneath them.

According to a statement released by the Department of Interior, public comment in California "has raised serious questions" about whether the preliminary agreement would provide enough offshore development "to protect the national interest."

The Interior Department and California representatives had hoped to have a final plan by the end of September. Talks are to continue when Hodel returns to Washington over the weekend.

Environmentalists have generally applauded the plan. The Sierra Club said Friday that if the plan was abandoned it would seek another moratorium on the leasing of offshore tracts.

Minority groups, however, objected to the preliminary agreement, saying that higher energy costs would have a negative impact on small businesses and create job losses.

"Hispanics, blacks and other low-income workers are the first to be hit in an energy crisis," said Craig Hume, a representative for some Hispanic businessmen in Los Angeles. "We support a more aggressive offshore program in California."

The American Petroleum Institute, in what it called an analysis of the proposed ban, said, "The negative effects would be felt in all 50 states." It cited in particular inland states such as Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvannia. The institute predicted that a total of 250,000 potential jobs would be lost nationwide should the aggreement go into effect.

Also in question was the amount of oil and gas underneath the 150 federally owned tracts that have been singled out for development.

"From what I've seen and what I've heard, these 150 tracts apparently contain a very limited amount of hydrocarbon," Hodel said, referring to the indicator of oil and gas deposits. "We could put them up for sale and have no buyers."

Experts fear shortage of petroleum engineers

HOUSTON (AP) — Petroleum engineering majors are becoming so few in Texas colleges that the depressed oil industry may have a shortage if it recovers, educators and industry experts say.

While graduates in petroleum engineering still command high salaries, they are finding fewer available jobs, said Douglas Von Gonten, head of Texas A&M University's petroleum engineering department.

"I'm definitely concerned," Von Gonten said in a recent interview. "If hiring practices don't pick up and enrollment continues to decline, then when the business does pick up again, the petroleum engineers won't be available."

Enrollment in most engineering areas of study is down about 15 percent, Von Gonten said, but the enrollment decline in petroleum engineering is significantly higher.

Last fall, he said, Texas A&M had about 900 petroleum engineering students, about half as many as the department had three years ago. The university just graduated about 270 petroleum engineers, but the newest class has only about 100 students, he said.

"It's directly related to the depression in the industry," Von Gonten said. "Other schools like the University of Texas and Texas Tech have seen about the same amount of drop."

The University of Houston once offered a full petroleum engineering curriculum for undergraduate students, but now only offers a graduate program.

"There was a petroleum engineering department here for about 20 years until 1967, when the last depression hit the industry. Students simply fell away," said Dr. Elmond Claridge, director of the petroleum engineering program at the University of Houston.

Even the graduate program has suffered in the past two years.

"We had 140 students in our program," he said. "Now we're down to about half of that."

Rice University does not have a petroleum engineering department but offers petroleum engineering courses as electives to its chemical engineers.

"We feel that basic training in chemical, mechanical and some other engineering principles is what our students need, rather than teaching them specific professions," said David Hellums, dean of Rice's George Brown School of Engineering.

Von Gonten said the industry in Texas will need an average of 800 to 1,00 new petroleum engineers each year to keep up.

Seat belt use, Blue Law repeal take effect

AUSTIN (AP) — Laws mandating the use of seat belts and repealing the state's 24-year-old Blue Law went into effect Sunday, three months after the 1985 legislative session that approved the measures.

The Blue Law, enacted in 1961, prohibited the sale of 42 items on consecutive Saturdays and Sundays, effectively banning Sunday sales.

Originally, supporters said the measure was aimed at discount houses, since it specifically prohibited sales of furniture, clothing, hardware and appliances.

But opponents of the Blue Law said it was antiquated and interferred with the ability of working families to complete their shopping on weekends.

Although Sunday was the effective date of the repeal, many stores started opening up on Sundays almost immediately after Gov. Mark White signed the measure on May 31.

The repeal does not affect Sunday sales of automobiles, because car dealers did not want to be included.

But the ban is lifted off everything else, and state officials estimate the new Sunday sales will bring in additional sales tax revenue of $24 million to $40 million to a state facing a tight budget squeeze over the next two years.

The seat belt law requires anyone in the front seat of a moving car or small pickup to wear a lap seat belt. State troopers first will give warnings to violators, but fines of $25 to $50 will be issued after Dec. 1.

White said he was reluctant to sign anything that might infringe on individual freedom, but he later did television spots, sponsored by car manufacturers, urging all Texans to "buckle up."

Sponsors said the law will save more than 1,000 lives a year.

ELENA

As the storm moved, hurricane warnings were discontinued along some 110 miles of central Florida coast, from Citrus to Sarasota counties, with gale warnings taking their place in much of tha area. Tornadoes and flooding were possible around the edges of the 350-mile-wide storm, the center warned.

At 8 p.m. EDT the hurricane center estimated Elena's eye was near latitude 29.4 north and longitude 85.7 west, or about 115 miles southwest of Pensacola, with winds remaining near 125 mph.

Elena was reclassified as a Category 3 hurricane, up one step on a 1-to-5 scale of ferocity, said storm forecaster Hal Gerrish.

"This is the strongest since Alicia hit Galveston Island in 1983," said Gerrish. "The longer it thrashes the coast, the more damage it will do."

On Saturday, the storm's highest sustained winds were 100 mph, and its eye had been as close as 55 miles from Cedar Key. The town bore the brunt of the hurricane's outlying wind and high water as heavy rain and tornadoes hammered other parts of the state. Tides 5 to 6 feet above normal inundated streets in the evacuated town.

One man was killed Saturday on the east coast, and a second man died of a heart attack across the state in a Tampa shelter, officials said. More than 100 homes were destroyed or damaged by tornadoes spawned by Elena.

"Two or three times it has approached an area — first New Orleans, then Pensacola, then Cedar Key — only to stop and turn back around," said forecaster Bob Case.

Elena's behavior was unusual, Case said, but not unprecedented. In 1950, Hurricane Easy did two 360-degree loops in the Gulf of Mexico before it chose a direction.

In central Florida, authorities sought the National Guard's help to ensure an orderly return and to reduce the possibility of looters and sight-seers.

"The National Guard folks will be (in those counties) as long as the county officials need them," said Anne Nelson, a spokeswoman for the governor's office.

Gov. Bob Graham had ordered 1,200 National Guard troops to set up barricades blocking access to low-lying areas along the central west coast, and put 3,000 more on alert.

In all, the Red Cross had opened some 310 shelters Saturday from Tampa-St. Petersburg north into southern Georgia, and more than 240,000 people spent the night in them, American Red Cross President Richard Shubert said Sunday in a briefing in Washington.

Off the coast Sunday, U.S. Coast Guard cutters rushed toward two ships disabled in the 15- to 18-foot seas.

The 400-foot freighter Master Charge with 24 aboard was drifting without steering or power off Tampa Bay toward the eye of the hurricane, said Coast Guard spokesman Dan Waldshchmidt. A fishing boat with two aboard was reported taking on water off Fort Myers to the south.

Jacksonville, on the Atlantic Coast, had gotten 8.86 inches of rain in 24 hours, including 2.95 inches in six hours Sunday morning. One Tampa television station reported measuring 1.75 inches of rain in 15 minutes.

TRAFFIC

— Jeffery Lynn Cunningham, 24, of Fairfield, was killed about 4:50 p.m. Sunday just west of Fairfield when the car he was driving ran off a farm road, hitting a dirt embankment, rolling over and throwing him from his seat, The DPS said he was not wearing a seatbelt.

— Ronald Keith Adcock, 30, of Gruver, who was killed when his motorcycle ran off Texas 207 in Armstrong County and overturned about 7 p.m. Saturday.

— Nicole Y. Mandrell, 17, of Rusk, who was killed in a one-vehicle accident at 8:30 p.m. Saturday about three miles south of Rusk on Farm to Market Road 1857.

— Bobby Dale Clark, 37, of Orange, who was killed in a one-vehicle rollover accident at 7:52 p.m. Saturday on Texas 87 north of Newton.

— Jeanne Lee Wright, 37, of Rowlett, who was fatally injured when her car crossed the median of Interstate 20 and sideswiped another vehicle. The accident took place at 2 a.m. Sunday in Kaufman County.

— Jesse Randall Schmitz, 20, of Palestine, who was killed when his car ran off a rural road in Anderson County at 2:15 a.m. Sunday.

— Leo Joe Laprade Jr., 19, of Blackwell, who died when he was struck by a pickup as he slept in the roadway of Farm to Market Road 3399 southwest of Blackwell. The accident happened at 6:20 a.m. Sunday.

JOBS

Some 10,000 to 15,000 of the laid-off workers in Parton's district don't even have recall rights for their old jobs, but most are long-time residents of the area and "they hate like heck to leave," says the district director.

"It's the worst it's ever been and I've been here since 1959," says William Andrews, president of steelworkers Local 1010, whose membership has declined by 3,000 and another 2,500 rank and file on layoff from Inland Steel Co.

Roughly 300,000 black workers nationwide have been unemployed 27 weeks or longer and are actively looking for work, according to Labor Department figures. In almost all states, jobless benefits run out after 26 weeks.

Another 1 million Americans, 341,000 of them black, have dropped out of the work force because they have become too discouraged to look for another job.

And another 1 million blacks are among 5 million Americans working part-time because their hours have been cut back or they've been unable to find a full-time job.

Among black teen-agers, meanwhile, the last time unemployment for that group averaged less than 40 percent for an entire year was in 1980.

"What I see is a situation where adults and youth are competing for the same federal training dollars," said Steven Sims, vice president of the Urban League in New York. "Attention is being paid in a minor way to adult retraining, but there's not enough money for both adults and youth. The result is that both populations end up suffering and competing for a finite amount of money from the Reagan administration, which really doesn't care about their plight anyway."

The administration has repeatedly said its job training initiatives, scaled down in some cases by 45 percent from earlier programs, are operating much more effectively than their predecessors.

In North and South Carolina, 46,000 textile jobs have been lost in the past year and a half, according to one company owner's estimate. Many of the laid-off workers are older employees who have "worked in textiles all their lives. At 50, 55 years old, they're basically unemployable," says Bruce Raynor, southern regional director of the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers union.

Not only is the federal role in job re-training in the region "negligible," says Raynor, but "in the end they're not jobs to re-train people for."

Job growth in the textile regions of the South is in lower-paying work in the service sector, says the union official. What that means is that a $7-an-hour textile worker with company-paid health insurance, a mortgage and other debts is being offered a $3.35-an-hour clerk's job at a convenience store.

A recent Labor Department study showed that of 3.1 million displaced workers who were re-employed, about half took pay cuts, often exceeding 20 percent.

Unlike the steel industry in the North, the textile plants in the South are predominantly non-union.

Will cigarette taxes smoke out more funds for 24 states?

By WILLIAM M. WELCH

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly half the states have looked to tobacco this year as a source of more money, and many are ready to step in with their own new tax if Congress allows an 8-cent-a-pack federal levy to expire at the end of this month.

Twenty-four states this year enacted some type of tax on cigarettes, according to a survey by the National Conference of State Legislatures.

Of those states, 16 passed laws raising their tax by 8 cents a pack contingent upon the federal rate dropping from 16 cents to 8 cents Oct. 1, as scheduled in current law.

That's an iffy prospect, however, as there are proposals pending when Congress returns this week to make the current 16-cents per pack tax permanent and others to raise it.

Some states enacted both a contingent tax on cigarettes and another unconditional cigarette tax increase. One, Florida, passed a contingent tax increase and also instituted a 25 percent wholesale tax on smokeless tobacco products, such as chewing tobacco and snuff.

Congress doubled the federal tax to 16 cents as part of the package of tax increases enacted in 1982. The increase was temporary, to expire Oct. 1, 1985, though it was widely considered likely that Congress would later extend or make permanent the higher levy.

States are eager to step in if the federal tax is lowered because cigarette taxes amount to a lot of money and have been a traditional place for states to turn for revenue. Florida, for example, estimates the additional 8 cents a pack would bring in $75 million a year.

According to Congresssional Budget Office figures, the federal tax of 16 cents a pack is estimated to bring in $4.7 billion in fiscal 1985, which ends Sept. 30. The CBO estimates that cigarette tax revenues would drop to $2.5 billion in 1986 if the federal tax returns to 8 cents a pack.

Speaker John Tucker of the New Hampshire state House, a Republican, says tobacco excise taxes are a source that states need more than ever now because of federal budget cuts.

"It's our feeling that with the loss of federal revenue sharing programs for the states, with the cutbacks that have occurred to states...it's appropriate that Congress allow the states to capture that money," he said.

New Hampshire, which has no income or sales tax and already has one of the largest cigarette taxes at 25 cents a pack, passed an 8-cent contingent increase. Tucker said the legislature hasn't appropriated the expected money, about $16 million a year, but that he wants it used for education.

Freedom to work

On this Labor Day, American workers have more to be joyous about than they may fully recognize.

Yes, Labor Day grew out of the labor movement of a century ago and was born in the battle for workers' rights. Two particular individuals — a New Jersey machinist named Matthew Maguire and a New York City carpenter named Peter J. McGuire — are credited with getting the first Labor Day parade started in 1882 as a means of honoring working people.

But the celebration is more than one honoring the "organized" labor movement, and as Americans sit back to rest and relax today they should ponder what the freedoms enjoyed by workers in this country truly mean to them.

While American laborers may find ample reason for moaning about what they're required to do for their jobs, they have the freedom, at least, to largely choose what type of labor they'll be doing over most of their lives — within the limitations of their own abilities. A person who wants to spend his time attending to the medical needs of others can do so, as can those who want to work the land, erect skyscrapers or cultivate houseplants.

In the Midland area, that strongly independent lifestyle is exemplified in the primary industries — oil and oil-related industries, ranching, farming. This is a land of self-made individuals who hold high the values of hard work and rugged perseverance that made the Midland and Odessa success stories possible.

So, it's understandable that the values expressed in Labor Day observances — values of hard, honest labor in return for financial reward — are cherished in this region. And here the free enterprise system is held forth as the difference between working for a future and merely working at someone else's command.

The freedom to work in one's own best interest is the freedom to accumulate personal wealth. That separates free nations from slave nations.

Nature vs. experts

Only about a decade ago, the doomsayers and the zero-population growth advocates were solemnly predicting that our planet was about to lose its capacity for feeding its teeming billions. They warned that starvation and chaos were just around the corner.

The tragic famine in Ethiopia and Sudan appeared to provide some substance to the dire forecasts.

Now nature has turned the tables on the experts again, with a little assist from the agronomists. A new spot check in this country indicates that corn, sorghum, soybean, wheat and cotton crops will continue to exceed those of the past few years. And in such advanced nations as Great Britain and the Netherlands, wheat productivity per acre actually exceeds America's.

Meanwhile, scientists are developing drought-resistant grains for the African nations whose politics are impeding the efforts of the free world to assist their famished. The new laboratory developments will enable the Africans eventually to feed themselves, if their rulers acquiesce.

In our own country looming farm surpluses create another good news-bad news situation. On the favorable side, of course, the big crops assure the consumers plenty of food plus lowered prices on produce and meats. But for the farmers and the banks to which they owe money, the surplus picture is discouraging.

America's farm income problems have defied solution for generations. Ways must be found, without delay, to enable farm families to keep their land and equipment so they may continue to feed their fellow citizens and be suitably compensated for their toil.

Another View:

Reagan's S. Africa

Finally President President Reagan has provided a basis for understanding his relatively relaxed and indulgent view of South Africa. To an Atlanta radio station, he has given a little snapshot of his picture of reality in that quarter.

He finds it a place where important progress is being made through the happy incidence of a reformist local government and a persuasive American administration; where blacks really have very little to complain about; anyway the Soviet Union is stirring the pot. No wonder he resists any policy change.

Except it is all — or most of it — quite untrue. From his comments it is evident that the president does not have the foggiest notion of what apartheid is actually about.

As Washington Post reporter Glenn Frankel makes plain in a dispatch from Mamelodi, South Africa, even in the limited areas where Reagan points to progress there is not all that much to boast about.

One could hoot at the president for his ignorance if it were not so painful. He altogether omits from his picture, furthermore, any hint of the larger and grosser aspects of apartheid: the humiliation and harassment of the pass courts, for instance, the forced removals, the brutalization of family life.

He shows no awareness of the fundamental question of political power — that is, of the disenfranchisement of blacks under the current system, and of the quality of repression organized by whites to deny blacks political power.

Has anyone told him that a state of emergency is currently in effect, and that blacks are being arrested and killed practically every day?

The president did make his ritual use of the adjective "repugnant" to describe apartheid. By what else he said, however, he erased any impression that the system truly troubles him.

It was not simply that he was at pains to excuse the Rev. Jerry Falwell from the burden of his unfair and unfeeling criticism — since only partially retracted — of the Nobel peace laureate, Bishop Desmond Tutu.

It was the particular explanation Reagan offered in so doing. South Africa, he said, is "a combination of minorities. There are at least 10 tribal divisions there."

This is a painful echo of the official South African rationale for the large structure of apartheid: that blacks are not the rightful citizens of a unitary South African state, but are members of distinct tribes who are to be consigned, unconsulted, to separate "homelands."

What Reagan has said goes far to explain the most objectionable aspect of his approach to South Africa: his stunning lack of moral energy and commitment to the cause of justice.

The South Africa he depicts exists only in his mind. But the South Africa the United States must deal with exists on the ground.

U.S. didn't trust W. German spies

WASHINGTON — The latest West German spy scandal may have shaken the Bonn government, but it came as no surprise to the CIA.

Jack Anderson

In fact, our CIA sources tell us that at least one more high-level West German intelligence official is suspected of working for the East Germans, and may be exposed any day.

Fortunately, the number of West Germans who have sold out over the years for love, money or ideology convinced the CIA long ago that its counterpart in Bonn could not be trusted with U.S. secrets that are routinely shared with other allies.

The CIA's glum conclusions about West German intelligence and counterspy agencies was translated into a highly sensitive White House policy — dating back to President Ford — which has denied the West Germans access to "top secret" information in three military categories: "Combined Military Operations, Planning and Readiness"; "U.S. Order of Battle" and "Military Intelligence."

Four allies are cleared to see the information in all three categories: Australia, Canada, New Zealand and Britain. Japan is allowed to see top-secret data in the military intelligence area.

The CIA's disenchantment with the West German intelligence agency it helped organize and fund began in 1961 with the arrest of a top West German official, who confessed to delivering 15,000 photographs of sensitive files and 20 spools of tapes to Soviet agents in East Berlin, starting 10 years before.

A recent Defense Intelligence Agency report summarized 30 cases of individuals who betrayed NATO secrets to the Soviet bloc since the North Atlantic Treaty was signed in 1949. Eleven were West Germans, five were East German "plants," four were French, four were Belgians, two were Italians and the remaining four were Canadia, British, Turkish and American.

While motivation varied, according to the DIA report, the fascinating thing is how the Soviet spymasters used Cupid's arrow as an effective weapon against lonely German secretaries in positions to provide classified documents.

With depressing regularity, secretaries working for NATO or West German ministries fell for smooth-talking East German spies and handed over military secrets.

Here are some of the moonstruck traitors listed in the DIA report who were seduced by men known in German intelligence parlance as "blackbirds":

— Ingrid Garbe worked in the West German mission to NATO from 1976 until her arrest in 1979. She was recruited in 1971 by an East German intelligence officer "with whom she had fallen in love." At the direction of the East German intelligence service, she had initially applied for a job in Bonn's foreign ministry.

— Ursel Lorenzen, another secretary, went to work at NATO headquarters in 1966 and defected to the East in 1979. She "spied 'for love' and ... married her former East German spymaster following her defection." She is believed to have given East Germany all the NATO secrets she could get her hands on.

— Leonore Heinz Suetterlin was an "unmarried secretary in the West German Foreign office (who) was wooed and wed by Suetterlin, who, unknown to her, was an agent of the KGB." Beginning in 1960, "she provided her husband more than 3,000 documents from her office, including Foreign Office cable traffic and NATO and German defense and intelligence information."

She also passed along personal information on fellow employees "and on security investigations of Soviet and East German agent suspects."

Another foreign ministry secretary, Helga Berger, fell for Peter Krause, who claimed to be a British spy who needed her help. After she handed over several secret documents, he admitted he was working for East Germany.

THE OMBUDSMAN: An Army Reserve sergeant has written us to complain about the conditions her unit had to endure during their two-week field training at Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa. She said the floors in the antique barracks were rotting; lighting was inadequate; there were no locks for the doors, only one shower and the water was undrinkable. She said a soldier got cramps from drinking the water and had to be flown to the hospital. The deputy commander of the base replied, in effect, "bullfeathers." He said the World War II buildings were being renovated, and there was nothing wrong with the water.

DIPLOMATIC DIGEST: The sporadic but growing number of terrorist attacks on American installations abroad has had an unnerving effect on our diplomats and their families. Congress is currently considering a $4 billion plan to improve security at U.S. embassies. A key part of the project is the removal of embassy facilities from city centers to safer suburbs. This led one old Foggy Bottom hand to bemoan the placement of American diplomats in "ghettos" — even if they are secure "golden ghettos."

MINI-EDITORIAL: It's long since time the Navy scuttled the barnacle-encrusted tradition of the "captain's mast" — the summary proceeding at which a crew member's career can be wrecked on the flimsiest of evidence. These kangaroo courts made a certain amount of sense in the days when Navy ships were at sea for months, and discipline had to be swiftly enforced. But in the modern Navy, no ship is more than a few days from some port where charges can be adjudicated in an orderly fashion. Dumping the captain's mast would not only be fair to the crew, it would free the skipper from duties for which he is not properly trained.

Manhattan on $10 million a year!

NEW YORK — After winning $13.7 million in the New York State lottery the other day, Joe Moore of Brooklyn said he might now be able to afford to live in Manhattan. Actually, he can do it on a little less, but the question is how his relatives will behave if he takes the plunge.

Russell Baker

It was the relatives that gave me trouble when I lived in Manhattan on slightly less than $13.7 million. To be perfectly honest, I did it on less than $10 million and after paying the rent I still had enough left over to go to the theater two or three times a year.

So I assure Moore that with $13.7 million he can swing Manhattan financially. With $13.7 million he can buy a two-bedroom apartment on a lower floor in an elevator building. In a fairly safe neighborhood, too. And one of the bedrooms should even have a window.

If he wants windows in both bedrooms, of course, he'll have to sacrifice something, and I'd suggest he sacrifice the car. Without a car, he won't have to pay a car mover to keep moving the thing from one side of the street to the other in conformity with alternate-side-of-the-street parking laws.

Living on less than $10 million, as I was doing, made the car mover an unaffordable luxury. On the other hand, by constantly dropping whatever I was doing and rushing out to move my car from one side of the street to the other, where I then had to sit in it for three hours before moving it back to the place I had moved it from three hours earlier — well, it kept me happy in a strange kind of way.

Having less than $10 million, you see, meant I could not afford most of Manhattan's pleasures; but whenever I started feeling sorry for myself, I recovered quickly upon reflecting that since I spent most of the waking hours obeying the parking laws, I would have no time to dawdle in fancy restaurants even if they were affordable.

Thus, life in Manhattan seemed worth every million it was costing. I still recall the satisfaction of hearing two youths waiting for an outbound plane at Newark Airport discussing the joys of Manhattan life. "The thing about New York," one said, "is they have all these things, but most people can't afford to go to them, so what's the use of having them?"

You could tell that both men had less than $500,000. Such people could hardly be expected to understand the surge of pleasure that suffuses the well-heeled when they realize that by giving up the bedroom that has the window they can afford to go to the opera.

My happiness began to crinkle around the edges after my relatives heard I had less than $10 million and was living in Manhattan. Naturally, they wanted to witness this curiosity, for most of them had less than $7 million, while some had less than $5 million, and none had got much beyond six-bedroom country houses in the Hudson Valley or 800-acre horse farms in Kentucky.

The first to come were two dear cousins. They stayed the night. Naturally, I gave them the guest room, the one with no window. "People here sleep in the closet?" Cousin Cyril asked. I explained the beauty of the windowless bedroom, how it would prevent their being awakened by car burglar alarms, shots, explosions.

They were baffled when I put the TV set outside the apartment door, but kept mum about that until they got back home. Then they told my sister. She telephoned. "You feeling all right?"

Well, she had heard that at bedtime I'd been putting out the TV set instead of the cat. "In Manhattan," I had to explain, "you always put the TV set outside so nobody has to make a mess by breaking in to steal it."

My aunts came. "You've got less than $10 million and you live in a cubbyhole like this?" they said with incredulous eyes, while talking about how much fun it must be to go to the opera and eat in fancy restaurants every night, and trying not to notice that I was attacking cockroaches with toxic gas.

Their report back home brought a visit from my favorite uncle, a doctor of madness, who has less than $2 million and lives on a Maryland estate hopelessly remote from great opera. "How are you?" he asked at the door.

"Can't go into that now," I cried, dashing past him. "I've got to move the car to the other side of the street and sit in it for the next three hours."

His report to the family created such dismay that, to save my reputation, I decided to leave Manhattan and move to Brooklyn so I could afford to go to the opera whenever I wanted. Then I remembered that I don't like opera.

What I like is sitting in my legally moved car three hours at a stretch.

CHARLEY REESE

Weinberger outstanding at Defense

Though he has not yet achieved the human perfection his critics demand, Caspar Weinberger has been an outstanding secretary of defense and a man who deserves the gratitude of all Americans.

Charley Reese

I was not enthusiastic about Weinberger's appointment in 1980. I've disagreed with some of his foreign policy decisions. The more I have watched him, however, the more I've come to appreciate and admire him.

Weinberger was given the toughest job in the administration. He had to do four things simultaneously, any one of which would have been a major undertaking. He had to restore military morale which had been devastated in the 1970s. He had to restore our military capability which had also been devastated by neglect. He had to get a grip on a mammoth bureaucracy which had run wild. He had to keep defending the necessity of military spending when the federal deficit and the mad infatuation with arms control fueled the traditional American distaste for military spending in peacetime.

To handle all four simultaneously would defeat anyone except an extraordinary human being.

And handle them he has. The morale of the military has been restored. Much of the neglected fighting capability has been repaired. He has addressed and made great progress in reforming and managing the defense bureaucracy. And he continues to tell the truth about the dangers facing America with force and clarity.

What I most admire about him is that I have never seen him flinch, or duck, or hide, or back away from what he perceived to be his duty just to deflect criticism or salvage some personal advantage. He is the rarity in Washington — the man with power, ability, and character.

It's no surprise if you are surprised by these words. It's the nature of things in this electronic age of instant and mass communications that critics and problems more easily draw the spotlight than supporters and answers.

A diode purchased for $110 is big news. The 122,429 diodes purchased the same year for four cents each as well as the $110 refund are much less likely to make the network television news shows.

The horror stories in defense procurement have not been kept in perspective. They have been used instead by critics of defense to discredit America's military buildup. They have been used by partisan demagogues to discredit political opponents.

Most of these procurement horrors were in fact uncovered by Weinberger's men. Some of them are simply misunderstood glitches in complex accounting systems like the $4 aspirin on a hospital bill which does not and is not intended to reflect the actual cost of the aspirin. Rather it is a result of an accounting method of distributing overhead costs.

The point is that under Weinberger nearly all the horror stories have been surfaced by men assigned to find them whereas in previous administrations if they surfaced at all, they surfaced because some brave whistleblower defied his bosses.

Last year over 250 contractors voluntarily refunded over $2.9 million and over 400 contractors were suspended or debarred. In Fiscal Year 1984, the Defense Department obtained 174 indictments for contract-related hanky panky and 181 convictions. If you think Weinberger has not moved vigorously on this issue, just check the record of indictments and convictions prior to his coming on board.

One example of Weinberger's effective management is giving service secretaries decision-making power and holding them accountable as opposed to hoarding all the power in his own office, as his predecessors did. This alone has made a tremendous difference coupled with the quality of the service secretaries President Reagan has appointed. The other is a recent order by Weinberger that a senior corporate executive must personally sign off that all submitted invoices contain legal and legitimate expenses. By forcing a top executive of the contractor to put his name and anatomy on the line, Weinberger is insuring those invoices will get a hard look before they arrive at the Pentagon.

Congress created the bureaucratic mess Weinberger has had to struggle with. Congress adds about 25 percent to the cost of every major weapons system it stretches out instead of buys in an economical manner. Congress, not the Defense Department, adamantly refuses to close unneeded military bases. Congress even sometimes forces Defense to buy weapons the military doesn't even want.

Cap Weinberger is a mighty good American.

Reagan, Congress may fall into some tough times

By TERENCE HUNT

WASHINGTON (AP) — With few big victories under his belt this year, President Reagan faces more tough battles with Congress this fall on everything from taxes and trade to sanctions against South Africa, topped off by a summit showdown with Mikhail Gorbachev.

It is a challenging autumn agenda for anyone, much less a 74-year-old president who underwent major surgery for colon cancer just seven weeks ago. The difficulties are compounded by a sluggish economy, a simmering White House feud with Republicans in Congress and the GOP's nervousness over next year's congressional elections.

Given Reagan's mixed record of achievements and setbacks this year, his performance in the final four months of 1985 could determine how much steam is left in the "Second American Revolution" he proclaimed or whether his administration is losing its political muscle.

"I am feeling fine and when we get back to Washington it's going to be full steam ahead," Reagan promised during his only public appearance in his 23-day California vacation that ends Monday. He returns to work with his popularity at all-time high, according to a poll published by Time magazine in August.

Administration strategists believe the chief measures of Reagan's success or failure this year will be his meeting in Geneva with Soviet chief Gorbachev in November, and the progress of his plan for sweeping changes in the tax code.

An Analysis

Already, the administration has dampened expectations of any breakthrough in U.S.-Soviet relations at the summit, saying it may be difficult to achieve even incremental improvements without some change in the Kremlin's approach to arms issues.

A White House official, speaking on condition he not be identified, suggested the summit could boil down to a public relations test between Reagan, the "great communicator," and "Gucci" Gorbachev, who has impressed Western audiences by avoiding the dour and dreary Kremlin style of earlier leaders.

"Obviously when you have the first meeting between Ronald Reagan, leader of the West, Mr. Conservative, with the new, energetic leader of the Soviet Union, it's going to be an important meeting. How historic it's going to be I don't know," a senior White House official said, speaking privately.

On Reagan's tax plan, the senior official said the White House would be entitled to proclaim victory if a bill "that bears the clear imprint of Ronald Reagan's paternity" clears the House and is sent to the Senate before year's end.

To refocus public attention on the subject, Reagan will tout his tax-overhaul plan in Independence, Mo., on Labor Day, and in Raleigh, N.C., on Thursday. After that, plans call for one trip a week out of town for the next two months to sell the program.

White House officials realize the president's sales pitch for taxes, at least in his first two speeches, will have to compete for attention with an expected media focus on Reagan's health and whether he appears fully recovered from cancer surgery.

As the tax campaign moves beyond the second week, "It will be more and more difficult to focus all the national press attention on tax reform because the message will be similar to the one" already delivered, one official said.

To counter that, the official added, "We'll hit the regional markets and focus attention in areas that have political importance and areas that you think have congressmen, legislators who can be persuaded."

Already, the tax plan is changing. The Treasury Department is sending Congress a set of revisions to make up a $25 billion loss in revenue that the Joint Committee on Taxation says it would cause as written.

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III and his top deputy, Richard Darman, will huddle with members of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee Sept. 7-8 at a "retreat" in the Virginia horse country to discuss possible alterations.

A major fight looms over sanctions against South Africa that are nearing final approval in Congress. The lawmakers view sanctions as the best way to press the Pretoria government to change its system of racial segregation, but Reagan is sticking by his strategy of seeking change through dialogue and persuasion.

NATION in brief

Freight train sabotaged

LAUREL, Md. (AP) — Eighteen cars of a southbound Chessie System freight train derailed early Sunday when the train slammed into a bulldozer that had been placed on the tracks, police said.

No injuries were reported following the 3 a.m. accident, although authorities evacuated a nearby apartment complex when spilled diesel fuel caught fire.

Prince George's County fire officials reported the fire was extinguished within 15 minutes, and residents were permitted to return to their apartments.

Emergency rail crews, working with cranes to lift the twisted wreckage, estimated it would take between 24 and 36 hours to clear the tracks, officials said.

The bulldozer had been stolen from a nearby construction site and placed on the tracks, Prince George's County police said.

Teacher talks break off

CHICAGO (AP) — Negotiators for the Chicago School Board and the Chicago Teachers Union broke off contract talks early Sunday, and a union spokesman said a strike vote would be held in the nation's third-largest school district.

Elsewhere, strikes continued in seven smaller school districts in Michigan, Pennsylvania and Illinois, and a union official predicted a strike for Philadelphia's 19,000 teachers, whose contract expired Sunday.

Talks went through the night in an effort to avert what would be the third strike in as many years for Chicago's 430,000 pupils, set to return to classes Wednesday. Union spokesman Chuck Burdeen said the 16-hour bargaining session failed to break a salary deadlock between the two groups.

"No settlement has been reached, and no time has been set for future negotiations," Burdeen said.

Gang rape investigated

CHICAGO (AP) — Police held three suspects and searched for as many as 12 others Sunday in connection with the gang rape of a woman who allegedly was assaulted for five hours in an abandoned apartment building.

No charges had been filed Sunday, as the victim had been unable to give police details of the attack or identify the suspects, said police Sgt. Montgomery Jackson.

"It was obviously a very traumatic experience for her ... she was at times incoherent," Jackson said. "We're hopeful her condition will improve so we can talk to her or call her in for a lineup."

The 28-year-old woman from suburban Elmhurst left a bar late Thursday with a man she had met there and accompanied him to several parties, Jackson said.

The man apparently abandoned her at a party on the city's South Side, he said.

As the woman left that party she was attacked by a man and taken to a vacant building where she was beaten and raped by that man and others for about five hours, Jackson said.

Plane forced to land

CHANTILLY, Va. (AP) — A Boeing 737-100 jetliner was forced to return to Dulles International Airport minutes after taking off for Newark when a passenger noticed part of an engine casing was missing, officials said Sunday.

People Express Flight 183, which took off at 7 a.m. with 115 passengers and a crew of five, returned to Dulles without incident, said airlines spokesman Ed Stukane.

The pilot did not declare an emergency, Stukane said, adding, "He did the prudent thing, and decided to return and have it checked out. The passengers were not in danger."

The Boeing 737-100 jet is equipped two with Pratt & Whitney JT8D-7 engines, Stukane said.

Subway 'syncopating'

NEW YORK (AP) — Music, they say, soothes the savage breast. But will it work on a New York City subway rider?

The Metropolitan Transportation Authority plans to find out by introducing live music in selected subway stations this fall with a program called "Music Under New York."

"With all the capital program work taking place underground, delays and inconveniences to our riders are inevitable," MTA Chairman Robert Kiley said recently. "We hope making music in New York's most unusual concert halls will make the subway-riding experience more pleasant."

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Glasscock, Upton, Reagan, Crane, Gaines, Andrews, Dawson, Borden, Martin and Howard counties: Labor Day, sunny, hot with isolated late afternoon thunderstorms and rain chance less than 20 percent. High upper 90s and wind south 5 to 15 mph. Monday night and Tuesday, mostly fair with isolated thunderstorms and chance of rain less than 20 percent. Low near 70 and high near 100.

Labor Day high should stay in 90s

From Staff and Wire Reports

Skies will be sunny through Labor Day with high temperatures in the mid-90s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

A low near 70 is forecast for tonight with southerly winds at 10 to 20 mph through Tuesday. Tuesday's high will be near 100 degrees.

Sunday's high of 99 was 5 degrees below the record set in 1959. The low of 72 was 16 degrees above the record set in 1968.

STATE

Texas was blistered by record heat Sunday and the National Weather Service was predicting more of the same for Labor Day.

On Sunday afternoon, the mercury soared to 106 degrees in Waco and the Dallas-Fort Worth area, 104 in Austin and 102 in Houston. Reese Air Force Base near Lubbock was the coolest place in the state Sunday with 91 degrees.

The weather service blamed the baking heat on a large upper-level dome of high pressure.

The heat induced a lone thunderstorm north of Alpine in the Davis Mountains, and a few showers dotted southeastern Texas between Toledo Bend and Beaumont. Otherwise, the state had hot, clear, sunny skies.

Readings in Austin, Waco and Houston broke records, while the Dallas-Fort Worth area was only one degree below the 107 record-setting degrees registered in 1951.

Austin's previous record high was 103 in 1951, Houston's previous record high was 101 in 1956, and Waco's old record of 105 was also in 1951.

NATION

Sunny, humid weather prevailed in the southern Plains on Sunday while Hurricane Elena spun off torrential rains as it moved toward the Florida Panhandle.

Elena's winds reached major hurricane strength of 125 mph, and gale and hurricane warnings covered much of the western Florida coast, Alabama and parts of Mississippi.

Tornadoes touched down Sunday at Florida's Mayport Naval Air Station, where 3 inches of rain fell in the six hours before 1 p.m., and Atlantic Beach, where the roof of a house was torn off, the National Weather Service said.

Flood watches were in effect for much of northern and central Florida and southern Georgia, where storms were widespread.

Navratilova wins quickie

NEW YORK (AP) — Defending champion Martina Navratilova made a cameo appearance Sunday, needing only 37 minutes to crush Italy's Sandra Cecchini 6-0, 6-1 and move into the fourth round of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

Seeking her third straight title in America's premier tennis event and her second straight Grand Slam tournament victory, Navratilova next will meet Sweden's Catarina Lindqvist, the No. 13 seed who defeated Leigh Ann Thompson 7-5, 6-0.

No. 11 Steffi Graf of West Germany also captured her third-round match, downing Anne White 6-4, 6-2.

In the men's singles, seventh-seeded Yannick Noah and his French Davis Cup doubles teammate, Henri Leconte, easily gained berths in the fourth round. Noah ousted Vitas Gerulaitis 6-3, 6-4, 6-3, while Leconte rolled over West Germany's Hans Schwaier 6-2, 6-2, 6-1.

No. 11 Stefan Edberg, one of five Swedish players to be seeded here on the hardcourts of the National Tennis Center, dropped the first set before disposing of Brad Gilbert 4-6, 6-4, 6-1, 6-4.

Also advancing into the fourth round was young Jay Berger of Plantation, Fla., an amateur who stopped veteran Brian Teacher 4-6, 7-6, 6-4, 7-6. Berger, ranked fourth in the United States in the Boys' 18 last year, earned a main draw wild card by winning the U.S. Tennis Association's Boys 18 and Under national championship last month.

The crowd in Louis Armstrong Stadium applauded loudly when Cecchini held serve to begin the second set. It was her lone moment to shine in the bright sunshine as Navratilova was devastating.

The left-handed native of Czechoslovakia who now makes her home in Fort Worth, Texas, served only six times in the match — and was taken to deuce only once. But she broke Cecchini's service six times.

It was Navratilova's easiest match as she has rounded into top form for the final week of this Grand Slam tournament. She has yet to lose a set and has dropped only six games in her first three matches.

"It reinforces the fact I am hitting the ball well," Navratilova said of her brief Stadium Court appearance. "In 1983, when I won it (the women's singles title), only the final went more than one hour."

Randolph backs into U.S. crown

WEST ORANGE, N.J. (AP) — Medalist Sam Randolph, accompanied around the golf course by a chiropractor because of nagging back spasms, captured the U.S. Amateur title Sunday, defeating Peter Persons of Macon, Ga. 1-up in their 36 hole final.

Randolph, runner-up to Scott Verplank in this event last year, captured the 85th national amatuer title by rolling in an 18-inch birdie at the 35th hole to go 1-up and then halving the 36th hole with a par after hitting his second shot into a bunker.

He rammed home a 8-foot par saving putt at the Montclair Golf Club to claim the crown he lost to Verplank 4-and-3 last year.

It was a gutsy performance by the 21-year-old University of Southern California golfer who started getting back spasms on Friday during a quarterfinal victory over two-time champion Jay Sigel of Berwyn, Pa.

The back did not bother him that much during his Saturday semifinal victory over Canadian Jack Kay Jr., but it acted up Sunday, and Randolph was treated on the fifth tee and again in the lockerroom after the 27th hole by Dr. Rich Gueci of Summit.

"The right side sacroiliac joint is fixated, therefore there is inflammation," said Geuci. "I did some muscle work on Sammy reducing the muscle spasms he was getting from that side."

Randolph was even after his treatment following his second trip around the front nine, and he came back and birdied the 28th hole to go 1-up.

Sindelar B.C winner

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Local favorite Joey Sindelar knocked in a hole-in-one on the 14th hole Sunday, breaking a three-way tie for the lead en route to the $54,000 championship of the B.C. Open.

The winner carded a 3-under-par 68 on the 6,966-yard En Joie Golf Club course for a 72-hole total of 10-under-par 284.

Mike Reid, whose damaging bogey-4 on No. 14 moments before Sindelar's dramatic shot was the margin which prevented a playoff, was second in the $300,000 Professional Golfers' Association event at 9-under 284. He also shot 68.

The triumph was the second of the year for Sindlear, a popular victor because he hails from nearby Horseheads in New York's Southern Tier. The 27-year-old Tour sophomore won the Greater Greensboro Open this spring.

He jumped from 20th place on the Tour money list to 11th with $249,800.

Sindelar, Reid and Bruce Lietzke were locked in a duel for mastery until Sindelar's ace on the 212-yard 14th hole flew straight for the flag, hit about 10 feet in front, bounced twice and rolled in. It put him 10-under and two shots ahead of Reid and Lietzke, who then bogeyed the hole to fall three shots back.

Bill Glasson, shooting 67 for the afternoon, collected the last of four birdies on the 16th hole to pull in with 276.

Reds' Rose closes in on Cobb despite foul cry

Associated Press

Hit No. 4,186 for Pete Rose drove in a run as the Cincinnati Reds beat Pittsburgh Sunday, and it had the Pirates crying foul.

Cincinnati rallied for three runs in the eighth inning to win 3-2. Bo Diaz's homer made it 2-1, Rose's second single of the day tied the game and Dave Parker's single won it.

Pirate catcher Tony Pena said that Rose called out that the ball had hit his foot, but silenced his protests when his bouncer went over third baseman Jim Morrison's head.

"The ball had a nick on it and Tony said that Pete called out, 'It hit my foot,'" said Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner, who argued with umpires at length. "He knows the ball hit his foot. He didn't run until the ball bounced over (Jim) Morrison's head and he knew he had a hit."

Rose said his foot was untouched and spoke in general terms about an umpire's reaction to his alleged yell.

"If a hitter did do that, the umpire still can't call it," Rose said. "The hitter can yell anything he wants, but the umpire has to see it (hit a foot). Otherwise, every time you'd hit into a double play, you'd say it hit your foot."

Asked whether he called anything out, Rose grinned widely and said, "I don't recall anything. That's just another hit."

It brought him to within six of breaking Ty Cobb's all-time hit record of 4,191.

St Louis 5, Houston 0

John Tudor, 16-8, scattered seven hits and pitched his major league-leading seventh shutout of the season. He lowered his earned-run average to 2.03.

Willie McGee smacked three hits, homered and drove in two runs for the Cardinals. Both St. Louis' three-game losing streak and Houston's four-game winning streak ended.

Mets 4, Giants 3

Keith Hernandez, pinch-hitting in the ninth inning, hit a two-run homer off Mark Davis to cap a three-run rally. Hernandez got his 21st game-winning RBI of the season, tying the NL mark which he already shared with Jack Clark.

Gary Carter's 20th homer of the year had given the Mets a 1-1 tie.

Bob Brenly drove in all three runs for San Francisco with a single and a two-run double.

Phillies 4, Dodgers 1

Juan Samuel had three hits, scored twice and drove in a run while John Russell homered as Philadelphia completed a four-game sweep of Los Angeles. It was the first time the Phillies had swept a four-game series from the Dodgers since 1955.

Samuel, 30-for-72 over his last 16 games, hit a triple, double and single. Russell hit his sixth homer. John Denny, 9-11, yielded four hits over eight innings.

Cubs 15, Braves 2

The Cubs, enjoying their biggest scoring total since 1980, were aided by three Atlanta errors and 11 walks. Davey Lopes belted a homer and a pair of singles and Keith Moreland had three hits and drove in four runs. Chris Speier drove in four runs although he had only one hit.

Derek Botelho, 1-2, pitched a six-hit complete game.

Chris Chambliss hit a two-run homer for the Braves, who suffered their second loss after winning five straight under new Manager Bobby Wine. Padres 5, Expos 1

Andy Hawkins and Lance McCullers combined on a three-hitter and Garry Templeton singled in two runs to help San Diego close within six games of the Dodgers.

Hawkins, 17-4, gave up three hits in 5 1-3 innings. McCullers replaced him with two runners on and pitched hitless relief for his fifth save.

Yankees 5, Angels 3

Pinch-hitter Don Baylor and Don Mattingly homered consecutively in the seventh inning, breaking a 3-3 tie. Mattingly's homer was his second in two innings. He hit a two-run shot in the sixth as New York scored three times to tie the score. He now has 25 on the year.

White Sox 4, Blue Jays 1

Harold Baines slugged a two-run home run, his 15th of the year and sixth in 11 days. Ron Kittle added a bases empty shot and Britt Burns, 15-8, pitched seven shutout innings.

Baines and Kittle homered off Steve Davis, 1-1, who was making his first major-league start. Carlton Fisk doubled home a run for the White Sox, who beat Toronto for only the third time in 12 games this season.

Tigers 14, A's 3

Chet Lemon hit two solo homers, his 10th and 11th, and singled in another run, while Barbaro Garbey highlighted Detroit's nine-run explosion in the eighth with a three-run double.

Garbey's pinch-double, a two-run single by Kirk Gibson, four walks and an Oakland error powered the eighth-inning outburst, in which the Tigers had only five hits.

Mariners 10, Orioles 2

Jack Perconte went 5-for-6, Alvin Davis hit a three-run homer and Domingo Ramos had a three-run triple. Matt Young, 10-14, went eight innings and gave up seven hits, including a solo home run by Mike Young. Young's 23rd homer was his 12th in the last 26 games.

Red Sox 10, Twins 3

Jim Rice and Tony Armas homered, highlighting a 16-hit attack. Rice, Wade Boggs and Bill Buckner each had three hits. Rice's homer was his 22nd; Armas' was his 19th. Boggs completed an 11-for-19 four-game series and is now hitting .362.

Tim Teufel hit his seventh homer for Minnesota.

Indians 11, Brewers 4

Joe Carter had three hits, including a home run, stole three bases and scored three times. Julio Franco, Brook Jacoby and Brett Butler also contributed three hits apiece. Ben Oglivie hit a three-run homer, his 10th, for Milwaukee.

Rangers 5, Royals 3

Oddibe McDowell tripled and singled and scored twice as Texas completed a three-game sweep. The Royals remained 2½ games behind first-place California in the AL West.

Winner Mike Mason, 6-12, pitched seven innings, giving up two runs on eight hits. Duane Henry pitched the last two innings for his first save.

Perfect Cowboys point for Washington opener

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Just how perfect are the Dallas Cowboys?

Dallas Coach Tom Landry isn't sure, although his team completed the National Football League preseason with a perfect record for the first time since 1971.

The Cowboys became only one of three NFL teams with unblemished preseasons with a 20-10 victory over the Houston Oilers Saturday night. Washington and the New York Giants are the other two.

The win gave Dallas a 15-4 record against Houston in preseason games and was the seventh straight over the Oilers in the annual clash for Texas bragging rights.

"You never know how good you are until you tee it up against the best and we'll do that against Washington in the opener," said Landry. "Then we'll know where we are for sure. It's always a great game when you play Washington."

Landry said Dallas' 4-0 record surprised him.

"I thought we might be 2-2, but that's the way it went and we'll see what it means," he said.

Landry wasn't overly pleased with Dallas' effort Saturday night.

Dallas quarterback Gary Hogeboom rifled a pair of 24-yard touchdown passes to Tony Dorsett and rookie wide receiver Leon "Speedy" Gonzalez. The game-winner came on a 24-yard scoring shot to Gonzalez, a seventh-round pick from Bethune Cookman, in the third period.

The Oilers, who finished the preseason with a 1-3 mark, lost quarterback Warren Moon in the first half with a ripped thumbnail.

"We could have put Warren Moon back in the game and it was tempting but I've been at this game long enough to know better," Houston Coach Hugh Campbell said.

Joe Dumars reveals first love

Joe Dumars' first love was football. It's not surprising. His older brother is a defensive back for the Birmingham Stallions of the USFL and Joe seemed headed in the same direction.

Then, he abandoned football before his senior year as high school.

What happened?

"It was simple. I fell in love with basketball."

After starring at McNeese State, the 6-3, 200-pounder was drafted No. 1 and is capable of playing either guard, so his chances are good.

"I've been working out twice a day to keep in shape until it's time to report Sept. 28."

Although the Pistons cut Spud Webb after rookie camp, the McNeese star will return to Cleveland for preseason drills. "A lot of players are drafted," says Dumars, "But you've really got to make a big impression to make it. It's just hard to make if you aren't a No. 1 pick. They have so many veterans returning, players who have proven themselves. There just isn't much room."

Since the draft and camp, the summer has been a case of marking time until the main event. As a result, Dumars has played in three games such as the Spud Webb benefit at the Chaparral Center last week and even went to New York to play summer ball.

It isn't until he mentions that home is Natchitoches, La., that his real down-deep love is revealed, despite his flirtations with basketball and football.

Asked if he remembered Lee Smith, the Chicago Cubs' premiere relief pitcher and former Midland Cub, who played at Northwest Louisiana in Natchitoches, his enthusasism is like a light being flicked on.

"I watch him pitch all the time. I not only remember him, but played against him at Northwest Louisiana State. They used to let me play in the scrimmages when I was 14 and 15. Lee was a reserve 6-5 forward, a good player. Those scrimmages helped me a lot."

"I was a catcher for eight years. I really liked the game. In fact, a lot of people told me I should have stayed with baseball."

It's a shame Joe couldn't have played all three sports, but that's the price of specialization.

No bowl for SMU, but Ponies have say in who goes

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist can't compete for the 1985 Southwest Conference football championship because of probation but the Mustangs can just about decide who does go to the Cotton Bowl.

SMU's games against SWC foes will still count in the standings.

"Our goal is to go 11-0," said SMU linebacker Kit Case. "We'll be a much closer team because of the NCAA probation. We have a lot to play for."

The closest thing SMU will have to a bowl game is a Dec. 7 nationally televised (ABC) game in Norman, Okla., against the Oklahoma Sooners.

"Oklahoma is our bowl game," said Case.

The loaded Mustangs have the talent to sweep through the season unbeaten but it's unlikely given the balance in the league. Houston had two losses last year but played in the Cotton Bowl — the first time a team with two losses has reached the postseason classic.

The SWC had its tightest football race in 70 years last season.

This year six teams have a legitimate shot at the title with only Texas Tech and Rice considered unlikely longshots. Of course, SMU can compete only for the national title (Associated Press).

Houston and SMU tied for the title with two losses last year and for the first time the five top teams finished within one game of each other.

Houston and SMU were 6-2 followed by Texas Christian, Texas and Arkansas at 5-3.

Arkansas came within a point of the co-championship, finishing a game back after a 32-31 loss to TCU.

Texas A&M came back strong to whip TCU and Texas.

Baylor missed out on a co-championship with cliffhanger losses to SMU and Arkansas.

Texas Tech lost close games to Baylor, Texas and Houston.

Rice didn't win an SWC game but scared SMU, Baylor and Houston.

SMU, which defeated Notre Dame in the Aloha Bowl, is loaded again. The Mustangs are 49-9-1 in the last four seasons under Coacy Bobby Collins.

Quarterback Don King will again return to lead an offense that averaged 396 yards per game, including 251 on the ground.

Class tailbacks Reggie Dupard and Jeff Atkins will be back to give SMU a 1-2 punch that should be the envy of the nation.Make that a 1-2-3 punch with the addition of freshman Bill Jones of Corsicana, the class of the Texas schoolboys.

Arkansas is loaded defensively, returning nine starters.

The Hogs led the SWC in scoring defense and total defense last fall.

Hatfield must find a quarterback to replace Brad Taylor and Danny Nutt. Greg Thomas can run and Mark Calcagni can pass.

Razorback receiver James Shibest, who caught 51 passes for 907 yards and seven touchdowns, is the cream of the SWC.

Houston, a Cotton Bowl loser to Doug Flutie and Boston College, brings back the exciting Gerald Landry, a veer quarterback supreme.

The Cougars have swift receivers and tough running tailbacks led by Raymond Tate.

Tackle T.J. Turner will anchor a respectable Cougar defensive unit.

Don't sell Coach Jackie Sherrill's Texas Aggies short. They closed fast last year and are loaded in talent positions particularly at quarterback where Craig Stump and Kevin Murray can produce instant excitement.

Sherrill said the final victories over the Horned Frogs and Longhorns "should serve as a good springboard for the next year."

On defense, A&M has nine starters returning.

Texas could be pesky if Coach Fred Akers can solve his inconsistent quarterbacking. Texas fell from No. 1 in the nation last year during a seige of bad offense.

Todd Dodge and Bret Stafford will be battling it out with redshirt tailback Charles Hunter expecting to add punch to his position.

"The way things went at the end of last year can be turned into an incentive for this year," said Akers, whose team was bombed 55-17 by Iowa in the Freedom Bowl.

A non-conference schedule which includes Missouri, Stanford and Oklahoma should tell Texas where it stands.

Then there's the return of All-America running back Kenneth Davis and resurgent TCU under wildly enthusiastic Coach Jim Wacker.

The Frog' 8-4 record was the best in two decades.

"Who would have everthought the little ol' Horned Frogs would be 8-1 and ranked in the Top Ten last year?"said Wacker. "That was a great experience and one we would like to continue in 1985."

Speedy quarterback Scott Ankrom is expected to give the Horned Frog Veer offense an added dimension.

"We're still have to completely overhaul our offensive line after graduation losses and we're notdeep in the defensive front," Wacker said. "We still have an inordinate amount of speed at our skill positions. We'll have three guys in the backfield with 4.4 speed."

The Baylor Bears have two excellent quarterbacks in Cody Carlson and Tom Muecke. Coach Grant Teaff has retooled his offenseto take more advantage of their passing talents.

Freshmen running backs Charles Perry and Jeff Murray could contribute immediately to the Bears, who have a rugged non-conference schedule which includes Georgia and Southern California.

Texas Tech Coach Jerry Moore has gone from the I Formation to the "Wing-Bone" attack which was popularized by Hatfield at Arkansas.

However, the Red Raiders will have to depend on green quarterbacking and that can be fatal in the SWC.

Tech's defense should again be strong to keep the Raiders respectable.

The Rice Owls of Watson Brown could be much better and still not win an SWC game.

District 4-5A launches 1985 grid season this week

From Staff Reports

The 1985 high school football season opens this week with seven of the District 4-5A teams seeing action Friday while Abilene High will travel to Wichita Falls Saturday night to play Rider.

Midland High's Bulldogs open in Memorial Stadium at 8 p.m. Friday against Lubbock Monterey. The Purple Pack nudged the Plainsmen, 10-7, last year in getting off to the kind of flying start Coach Doug McCutchen is hoping for against this season.

Midland won its first four games and five of its first six last year.

Midland Lee, one of the challengers to defending champion Odessa Permian, will be at Lubbock Coronado. The Rebels, sans the swift touchdown tandem sprinters of a year ago, Tyrone Thurman and Walter Jones, are back with a bigger than-ever line.

Coach Jack Tayrien's Rebels beat Coronado 27-0 last year and will be favored to do it again.

Odessa Permian, king pin of West Texas, treks to El Paso to face Coronado in its traditional opener. Last year, Coach John Wilkins' Panthers beat the Mustangs, 26-0, and they are expected to do it again. Permian faces El Paso Hanks and Fort Worth Eastern Hills in its other pre-conference games.

Odessa High, the only opening night loser a year ago, will be out to reverse at 17-14 loss when it hosts the Amarillo Sandies in Ratliff Stadium.

Coach Jerry Millsapps is counting on experience to propel the Bronchos into the thick of the race, although Permian, Lee, San Angelo and Abilene are supposed to be the Big Four this year.

San Angelo, back to a position of contention after some off years, faces Hereford at San Angelo. The Bobcats won 21-0 over the Whitefaces last year and Coach Jimmie Keeling's squad packs too many weapons for the Panhandle opponent in the opener.

Abilene Cooper's opener is against always tough Brownwood, the monster of 4A, and Coach Gordon Wood's Lions will give the Cougars a tough game. Last year Cooper won 17-0.

Big Spring will host Snyder, a team the Steers beat 17-14 last year. Coach Quinn Eudy is looking for improvement over last year's 2-8 record, 0-7 in 4-5A, but Big Spring is still a long way from contending.

Permian, of course, shared the state Class 5A title and posted a 15-0-1 record and the Panthers will be trying to hog the title this year.

Midland Lee, the district's other representative in the playoffs, posted a 12-2 reccord, 7-1 in conference to take second.

BASEBALL—The Califonia Angels reactivated Daryl Sconiers called up five players, including former Midland Angel Daryly Sconiers, from their Edmonton farm team...

FOOTBALL— Quarterback Joe Montana, who missed the 49ers' final two exhibition games because of a sore back, expects to get in a full week of practice before the NFL opener. "I can move and throw without any pain. I think it's going to be fine. I'm ready."...

GOLF— Bernhard Langer boosted his 1985 earnings to $546,000 Sunday when he won the European Open at Sunningdale, Eng., championship by three strokes with a 67-269. Runner-up was Irishman John O'Leary at eight under par...

Lee Elder sank a 15-foot birdie putt on the third sudden-death playoff hole Sunday to win the $200,000 PGA Citizens Union Senior Classic, edging out three others who had tied at the end of regulation play at Lexington, Ky. Elder, along with Walt Zembriski, Dan Sikes and Orville Moody, ended play with 7-under-par 135s. Elder had a 3-under-par 68 for the day, while Zembriski fired a 67 and Sikes and Moody both shot 65s...

Hajime Meshiai rolled in a seven-foot birdie putt on the 15th hole to slip away from the pack and win the $177,000 KBC Augusta with a 71-206 at Ukoka, Japan Sunday, one stroke ahead of Fuzzy Zoeller...

Yuko Moriguchi struggled to a one-over-par 75-219 while other top contenders collapsed around her to capture the Isuzu Ladies Cup Sunday...

TROTTING— Prakas, the trotting sensation who won the Hambletonian in record straight heats, matched the performance by posting yet another record and consecutive victories in the World Trotting Derby at DuQoin, Ill. Bill O'Donnell drove the 3-year-old bay colt to a first-place finish in the international trotting championship Saturday with times of 1 minute, 55 2-5 seconds in the first heat and a world record 1:53 2-5 in the second. The second-heat victory broke the mile record for trotters of 1:53 4-5...

AUTO RACING— West German Formula One racer Stefan Bellof died Sunday of injuries suffered in a car crash during the 1,000 Kilometers of Spa endurance race at Francorchamps, Belgium. Bellof was involved in an accident with Belgian driver Jacky Ickx, after which he crashed head-on into the fencing rails around the circuit. With smoke pouring out of his Porsche 956, a medical emergency team had to struggle for more than 10 minutes before freeing Bellof. He was taken to the nearby circuit surgery center, where he died...

CYCLING— Davis Phinney, a member of the U.S. pro team, suffered a skull concussion following a bad spill during the road race at the 1985 World Cycling Championships in Giavera Del Montello Italy. Phinney, 26, from Boulder, Colo., was involved in a pileup of cyclists during the first stages of the world event...

Martin takes swipe at George

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Billy Martin, who has had an ostensibly amicable relationship with George Steinbrenner since he returned as manager earlier this season, took his first verbal swipe at the New York Yankee owner Saturday. Martin's comments concerned what he saw as a need for minor league reinforcements for the stretch run.

"We need 10 guys up here right away so I can give my outfielders and infielders a breather," Martin said before the game with California. "I have a second baseman who needs a day off. My second baseman and shortstop have played every game. They need a breather. I'd like to get my center fielder out of there after we are ahead or behind a bunch of runs. My right fielder, too. I'd like to see pinch-runners who can run.

"I'd like all these things, but unfortunately our owner doesn't come around."

Dashing Phoebe favored on five-straight victories

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Pitchfork in hand and ankle-deep in hay, she didn't exactly personify someone so close to so much money.

But Julie Jewson thrives on going against the grain.

Jewson is a rare breed — a woman quarter horse trainer who Monday will saddle one of the entries in the $2 million All American Futurity at Ruidoso Downs.

Her horse is aptly named — Timeto Get Tuff.

The 10-horse field of 2-year-olds will be going for a first place purse of $1 million in the 440-yard sprint that takes roughly 22 seconds from start to finish.

Dashing Phoebe, one of only two fillies in the race, is the favorite on the strength of five straight wins and earnings of more than $311,000 in her first year on the track.

Six Fortunes, a colt that has earned nearly $165,000 this year campaigning in California, rarely runs a bad race and has finished in the top three in seven of his eight starts.

Easy One Fine Day, the other filly, has won five of nine races.

But in a race that doesn't allow for any mistakes, anyone of the 10 horses can win.

"There isn't a horse in the field you can't like," said Jewson.

Veteran trainer Jack Brooks, a two-time winner of the race who has the colts Mr Trucka Jet and Muscatel in this year's race, agrees.

"You take Dashing Phoebe out and everyone is equal," said Brooks. "In this race, a little bit of luck can make all the difference."

For Jewson, a petite 5-foot-2, luck took a turn for the better at a point when it seemed headed in the other direction.

A year ago this week, the Jewson-trained 4-year-old colt Betts Moon Full Moon broke down while running in a major stakes race at Ruidoso Downs and had to be destroyed. It was the first horse in four years of training she had lost, and Jewson took it hard.

"There's just a lot of heartbreaks in this business," said Jewson. "When something like that happens, it changes your attitude."

But on the same day that Betts Full Moon died, his owner, Westerville, Ohio, businessman C. Vincent Fister purchased the then yearling Timeto Get Tuff.

The colt developed into a good enough runner to make the elite futurity field. His only problem, said Jewson, is his attitude.

"He's a clown," she said. "He usually has his mind on something else beside the racetrack.

Timeto Get Tuff will be ridden by John Weghorst, a 29-year-old jockey with his first ride in an All American. On the eve of the big race, Weghorst was uncharacteristically calm.

"It's just another race, at least that's how you have to think about it," said Weghorst. "The calmer I stay the better it ought to go. If you get nervous, you only make mistakes."

For jockeys Jerry Nicodemus and Jacky Martin, the race will be a chance to become the first three-time winners of the futurity.

Nicodemus, who will be aboard Dashing Phoebe, won in 1968 with Three Oh's and in 1970 with Rocket Wrangler and ran second with Streakin Six in 1979.

Martin won with Moon Lark in 1970 and Mr Master Bug in 1982 and will ride the fast-improving Mr Trucka Jet on Monday.

The rest of Monday's field includes Bombay Native, Racin Image, Sixarun and Digging For Gold.

Brigand Silk, who was scratched from the second set of trials 10 days ago, died late Saturday. The colt had won two futurities and was considered the leading contender for the All American before being scratched just prior to the final trials.

The cause of death had not been determined.

Savannah team lone unbeaten remaining

From Staff Reports

Blessed Sacrament Catholic of Savannah, Ga., remained alone as the only unbeaten team in the National Amateur Softball, Association Men's Church Class A Slow Pitch tournament at the Bill Williams Complex in Hogan Park.

Blessed Sacrament defeated First Evangelical Free Church of Austin, 15-1, in the winner's bracket showdown Sunday night. So now the Austin team moves into the loser's bracket and will play this morning in an attempt to get another crack at the Georgia team in the championship game at 11:30 a.m.

Midland Golf Course Rode Church of Christ White team remained in the running until Sunday night, winning five of six games. First Baptist Blue of Norman, Okla., however beat the White, 6-5, and will advance in the losers' bracket .

Action resumes at 9 a.m. today. If the winner's bracket team loses in the championship playoff, another game will follow the 11:30 a.m. contest.

Elliott wins Southern 500

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Bill Elliott, driving a heady, conservative race, watched his top three competitors go up in smoke on his way to winning both the Southern 500 Grand National stock car race and a $1 million bonus.

Elliott, who earned his 10th victory in 20 starts this season, made it three out of four in the Grand National "Big Four" and picked up the Winston Million, the biggest single payoff in the history of auto racing as he outran five-time Southern 500 winner Cale Yarborough to the finish line.

"Awesome Bill from Dawsonville," a 29-year-old Georgian, added his first Southern 500 victory to triumphs in the Daytona 500 and the Winston 500 to earn the $1 million prize offered for the first time this year by R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

The only one of the 1985 "Big Four" the drawling red-haired driver didn't win was the World 600 in May, where he succumbed to brake problems.

This week, shrugging off the intense pressure that nearly smothered the young driver at the World 600, Elliott first ran off to an easy pole victory on Thursday, played it cool for the huge media turnout, then drove confidently to the 14th victory of his Grand National career.

However, Elliott's intimidating Ford Thunderbird was not dominant in the 367-lap race over the treacherous 1.366-mile Darlington International Raceway. In fact, he played a waiting game throughout the sweltering day as Dale Earnhardt, Harry Gant and Yarborough all took turns in seeming control.

There were times during the race when Earnhardt, Gant and Yarborough all gave indications they might be strong enough to run off and hide. But, each time, something popped up to keep it from becoming a runaway.

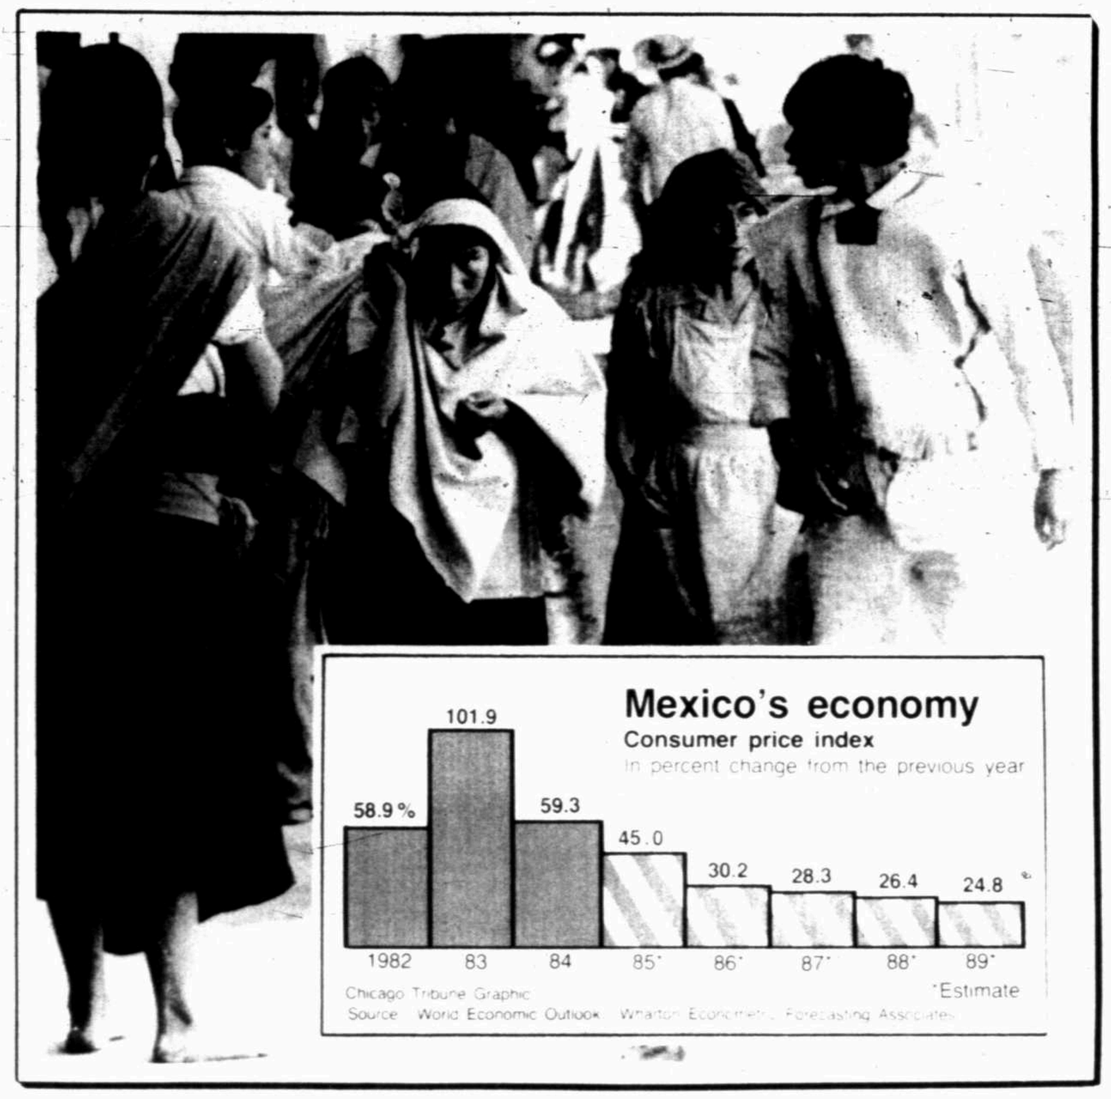
Pemex corruption putting lid on Mexico oil boom

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service



Economists forecasting declining change in Mexico's consumer price index over the next five years.

MEXICO CITY - Mexico City, Mexico's largest urban center is blotted out by smog. With surrounding mountains obscured in brown haze, the most striking feature visible from Mario Ramon Beteta's palatial high-rise office is the slow-moving traffic clogging the capital's major roadways.

Ramon Beteta is director general of Petroleos Mexicanos - Pemex - the government-owned oil monopoly which dominates the Mexican economy in the same manner that this newly completed 52-story complex towers over the squat skyline.

Mexico is now the world's fourth largest crude-oil exporter. Its 2.7 million-barrels-a-day production surpasses any government or private oil corporation in the Western Hemisphere, rivaling that of the oil trust of the Soviet Union. Pemex's foreign sales of $16 billion now account for 69 percent of Mexico's exports. Oil revenue generates 45 percent of all income to the national treasury and 9.4 percent of Mexico's gross national product. And that makes Pemex the key to the nation's ability to recover from its economic crisis and service the $96 billion foreign debt.

WITH KNOWN RESERVES that at current consumption rates will last 71 years, relatively low production costs and proximity to the U.S. market, the future of the Mexican oil industry appears assured. But Pemex has long suffered a contradictory history of promise and problems, including well-documented waste, corruption, mismanagement and miscalculation. The ability of the Mexican government to manage the "new" Pemex and its oil policies, analysts contend, will determine how well Mexico recovers from the current problems, the structure of its domestic economy, and Mexico's financial relationship with the U.S. and the world.

Mexico's economic problems were precipitated by a continuing five-year drop in the global demand for oil, which created an overvalued peso and cut foreign revenue, said economist Roger Aller at Bank of America.

Mexico's petroleum exports fell by half in June. In response, Mexico broke free of the price structure set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and reduced prices an average $1 a barrel. The move, part of a general re-evaluation of national economic policy by the Mexican government, was applauded by economists. Observers in the U.S. are hoping Mexico will take one further step and abandon previous limits placed on Pemex's crude-oil sales to foreign countries and companies. Officially, Pemex sells 49 percent of its total exports to companies based in the United States, accounting for 20 percent of this nation's oil consumption.

FOR MEXICO, Pemex is a source of both national pride and humiliation. It was born in 1938 following the expropriation of primarily U.S. oil companies. A statue in Mexico City titled "The Oil Workers" celebrates the event as a victory over foreign intervention. But the industry suffered through decades of inefficient operation that kept Mexico a net oil importer until 1974, when discoveries of vast new reserves prompted the government to invest an estimated $20 billion into Pemex.

Then-President Jose Lopez Portillo declared that Mexico would rise to become a worldwide economic power on its sea of oil, and international bankers wasted little time in extending the necessary credits. Mexican oil reserves grew from 5.6 million barrels in 1970 to 71 billion barrels now. Production jumped from 487,000 barrels a day in 1970 to 3 million barrels a day in 1985.

But the 1981 recession, its ensuing oil glut and price reductions, burst Mexico's bubble. Mexico's economy collapsed a year later. The government could no longer ignore allegations of corruption in both Pemex and the union that represents all company workers. As part of a labor agreement, the Oil Workers Union gained a share of Pemex revenue. And Pemex's past director general, Jorge Diaz Serrano, who was once hailed in the U.S. press for his business acumen, was convicted of embezzlement and remains in a Mexico City jail.

IN THE MEANTIME, the government became so enraptured with the promises of greater oil revenue that little attention was paid to the need to generate other exports. Eventually, the peso became so overvalued that companies doing business in Mexico could not compete on the international market.

In 1982, President Miguel de la Madrid appointed Ramon Beteta, a one-time university professor and former finance minister with a reputation for personal integrity, to tame Pemex. Observers generally give him high marks for recent moves to lower prices and rein in the corporation.

The price cut, Ramon Beteta said, created an immediate demand that led to the doubling of production within two weeks. World prices have stabilized for the moment, though many analysts believe further drops will occur. Ramon Beteta indicated that Pemex would continue to lower its price to "remain competitive," if necessary.

In the meantime, Ramon Beteta said he has instituted a house-cleaning within Pemex, including an anti-corruption campaign and an unspecified number of layoffs among the 160,000 employees. The union, too, has been controlled, he said.

UNLIKE PRIVATE OIL companies, Pemex has a dual role as both as a commercial and political entity, which observers said limits its ability to be efficient. Ramon Beteta acknowledged that Pemex "is very large and too darn complex." But he argued that it reflects necessary political and economic compromises that serve the national interest.

Pemex is required to build roads, hospitals and schools in regions where drilling and refinery sites are located, facilities that are then turned over to local municipalities. Such costs, Ramon Beteta argued, would never be borne by private oil firms.

Still, Pemex's record of public service is spotty. Only recently has the company paid attention to the environmental problems it creates. Texans still remember a 1979 blowout in a region called Campeche Sound that lasted nine months and washed extensive amounts of crude onto Gulf beaches. And despite the smog that has blighted the capital, Pemex does not refine unleaded gasoline. It has been unable to invest the funds necessary to refine it. Ramon Beteta said unleaded gas would be availble within a year.

In the meantime, Pemex's relationship with both U.S. refiners and the government is described as cordial. But analysts said that Mexico remains cautious of becoming overly dependent on the U.S. The country still smarts from a humiliation suffered during the Carter administration when a previously negotiated natural gas deal with U.S. firms was blocked after Pemex built a 800-mile pipeline to bring the gas northward.

Shopping malls most ingenious marketing scheme ever devised

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

JEFFERSON COUNTY, Colo. — The electronic dawn came precisely at 9 a.m., bathing the Orange Julius stand in a cool fluorescent glow and glistening off the designer frames in the counters at Royal Optical. Along three miles of hallway, 195 store managers began raising their Roll-O-Matic auto-shutters, and a platoon of cookie, corn dog and KarmelCorn purveyors lit their ovens.

To the swelling strains of "Oh, What a Beautiful Morning" on the Muzak, a new day was breaking at Southwest Plaza, an enormous pentagonal shopping mall that floats above a vast sea of suburban homes like the battleship USS New Jersey at a convention of canoes.

Before the end of the shopping day 13 hours later, about 30,000 people would pass through the Plaza, staying an average of 2.3 hours apiece. They would fill all 6,928 spaces in the sprawling asphalt parking lot, drop 150 pounds of pennies into the fountains around the mall's central "performance center," eat 1,000 Super Pretzels and purchase a half-million dollars' worth of goods and services ranging from diamonds to doorknobs, dental checkups to divorce settlements.

It is established sociological lore by now that giant shopping centers such as Southwest Plaza, a concrete hulk built in a style that might be called early airplane hangar, have become the social center of American life, the new Town Hall and Main Street, although Main Street would have to be 30 blocks long to hold all the shops and offices this center provides.

But to the retailing and service industries — the fastest-growing sectors of the American economy — the shopping center is first of all an amazing money machine, the most powerful marketing mechanism ever devised.

The ingenious secret of the American shopping center — if anything that happens 30 million times a day can be said to be secret — is a phenomenon deliberately designed into every mall. It has been called the "Gruen transfer" in honor of retailing visionary Victor Gruen, who conceived the notion 30 years ago, and it was visible on a recent morning at Southwest Plaza minutes after the center opened for the day.

A young woman wearing pink pedal pushers and tugging two small children marched rapidly down the corridor, resolutely ignoring the petting zoo, the Dairy Cream, the Radio Shack and the House of Suede as she headed directly for Kinney's Shoes.

In marketing parlance, she was clearly a "destination shopper" — a consumer who had come to the mall with a specific purchase in mind.

But the woman could not find all the shoes she needed at Kinney's. So she set off toward one of the mall's other shoe stores — a trip that took her past dozens of other merchants.

Suddenly, she veered into Hickory Farms; from there, she moved down the corridor to Waldenbooks. By the time she arrived at the next shoe store, her arms were full of purchases, and each child was lapping at an ice-cream cone.

Just as Gruen intended, the woman had been transformed from a "destination shopper" to an "impulse shopper" — precisely the metamorphosis about which mall designers dream.

"See, we put one shoe store here and another way over there," explained Marcella Cain, Southwest Plaza's exuberant young operations manager. "We want you to pass 35 more stores between the two. Hopefully, you'll drop 30 or 40 more bucks along the way. ... A destination shopper turns into an impulse shopper."

Feds foreclosing on nation's first synfuel plant

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — The U.S. Department of Energy is foreclosing on the nation's first commercial-scale synthetic fuels plant and suing to enforce natural gas contracts federal officials say are critical to the facility's future.

The government took control of the Great Plains Gasification Project Aug. 1 from a consortium of five energy companies that defaulted on a $1.5 billion loan when Energy Secretary John S. Herrington rejected additional federal aid.

The $2 billion plant, 75 miles northwest of Bismarck near Beulah, N.D., turns lignite coal into natural gas.

The government's action, filed Thursday in U.S. District Court in Fargo, seeks to foreclose on the loan and force subsidiaries of the partners to honor their gas contracts. Foreclosure could cost the plant $300 million in tax credits, officials say.

The gas contracts are held by subsidiaries of four of the five consortium members and are considered key to the government's chances of finding a buyer for the plant. Under the contracts, the partners are paying about twice the spot-market rate for natural gas.

Natural Gas Pipeline Co., a subsidiary of Chicago-based MidCon Corp., filed suit in Illinois state court and Washington federal court last week to abrogate its contract, worth $4 million a month.

The Energy Department lawsuit seeks a judgment requiring Natural Gas Pipeline "to take or pay for its share of the synthetic natural gas and to continue to honor its gas purchase agreements," said Energy Department spokesman Robert Porter.

Natural Gas Pipeline claimed in its lawsuits that its gas contract cannot be enforced because it was made with the partnership. The lawsuits also claim the Energy Department could not fulfill the obligation to buy the gas for 25 years, since it has agreed to operate the plant only through mid-1986.

Freedom papers reject buy offer

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — The board of directors of Freedom Newspapers Inc. has rejected an offer by dissident shareholders to acquire the newspaper and broadcasting company in a $900 million transaction.

Harry Hoiles, a major Freedom shareholder and son of the communications group's founder, R.C. Hoiles, had offered $96 a share for the company.

Freedom includes The Orange County Register, 28 other newspapers and four television stations. The Register, the group's flagship newspaper, is California's third-largest daily newspaper.

In Texas, the newspaper group includes the Brownsville Herald, Harlingen Valley Morning Star, McAllen Monitor, Odessa American, and Pampa News.

In an advisory ballot, the offer was rejected by a 63 percent of the privately held firm's 53 shareholders, the company said Thursday.

"We like newspapering, and we would not sell at any price," said Robert C. Hardie, Freedom chairman and publisher of the Marysville-Yuba City Appeal-Democrat in Northern California.

"We take great pride in running this company as it is, and we foresee no change in that commitment," added R. David Threshie Jr., a member of the Freedom executive committee and publisher of the Register.

STOCK CODES

All Stock Codes are based on industry standard Ticker Symbols provided by your broker or available from any Standard & Poor's Stock Ticker Guide. Codes are made up of a series of two-digit numbers, each representing one of the letters in the Ticker Symbol.

To determine the two-digit code for any letter of a Ticker Symbol, remember: The first key to be depressed is always the one on which the letter appears. The second key is always a "1," "2" or " indicating that letter's position on its own key (first, second or third position). EXAMPLE: "IBM"="43 22 61"; "BX"= "22 92." Remember to depress the star key (*) after entering each code.

Sting stung by criticism of jazz effort

By G. BROWN
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

At 33, Gordon Sumner, better known as Sting, has been a schoolteacher, a lead singer and bassist for one of the world's most successful rock bands, a solo artist, and an actor.

Why isn't he content with success? The answer is simple: boredom.

"I don't like the idea of permanence," he said recently. "It sounds like an albatross hanging around your neck."

Although the Police reached the pinnacle of rock world success, Sting was not satisfied. He has set out to establish himself on his own, releasing a passionate, thoughtful album titled "The Dream of the Blue Turtles." In typically ambitious fashion, Sting recruited an all-star ensemble of young jazz players — Branford Marsalis, saxophone; Omar Hakim, drums; Kenny Kirkland, keyboards; Darryl Jones, bass — and whisked them off to a Caribbean studio to record. The resulting LP sounds more like a Police record than the jazz album people expected.

Sounding more upbeat than his intense image would suggest, Sting described his record and accompanying tour in a telephone interview from Los Angeles.

"Basically, the whole project was designed to create a new kind of hybrid that was neither rock 'n' roll nor jazz, but was hopefully another country — another country that I'd have to make a journey to, just as the band did. So we don't play like Weather Report or Miles Davis — but neither are we going to sound like...uh, Van Halen!" He laughed heartily. "Or the Police!"

"FORTRESS IN YOUR Heart," the new track being played on the nation's radio stations, is the most striking piece on the album. Sting's plaintive vocal and the dramatic tension of the chorus propel the song to a sweeping climax.

But the public was introduced to the LP through a pedestrian single, "If You Love Somebody Set Them Free." Although the song made the Top 5 on the pop charts, that bit of hit-making brought accusations that Sting hadn't been adventurous enough with his jazz-trained charges.

"But the other school of criticism is that there's too much (jazz influence)," he argued. "I mean, you can't please all of the people all the time, but I please myself."

Branford Marsalis, the acclaimed 24-year-old saxman from brother Wynton's band, also objected to the standards critics set for the new band.

"If we weren't jazz musicians, they wouldn't even be talking about 'stretching out,'" he said. "I never heard of people buying a Police record and saying (drummer) Stuart Copeland doesn't stretch out enough.

"We were recruited as being so-called jazz musicians, and all of a sudden there was this big thing where people expected it to be a jazz record.

"NUMBER ONE, IT'S not our album. Number two, it's not a jazz record. It's not really a pop record, because we don't play like pop musicians. But it is our job to play along with Sting and make his music sound the best that it can.

"Philosophically, we are a band, but realistically, Sting wrote all the music, it's his band, and I'm gonna do whatever he tells me to."

But no one involved with the record was prepared for the lyrical weightiness of Sting's tunes, which address everything from the price of superpower politics ("Russians") to the perils of nuclear energy. "We Work the Black Seam," a track driven by a grinding keyboard riff, was inspired by a recent British coal miners' strike.

While few people would argue with the views expressed in the songs, Sting admitted that he runs the risk of sounding didactic, of being tagged pop music's secular preacher.

"But I couldn't see any point in writing yet another song for the marketplace that didn't mean anything, that just had words that rhymed and had a rhythm that worked," he added. "I think there's room in the medium for songs that actually have some kind of message, that mean something.

"I DON'T WANT to write them if they're meaningless — then I want another job. If I have to write doggerel, I want out."

If Sting ever chooses that option, he's already paved the way for a career as an actor. In recent years, he has infiltrated the film world with small roles in big movies ("Dune") or vice versa ("Brimstone and Treacle").

His current solo tour conveniently coincides with his high visibility in "The Bride," a remake of "The Bride of Frankenstein" co-starring Jennifer Beals, which opened last week to bad reviews but encouraging notices for Sting. In September, he'll appear opposite Meryl Streep in "Plenty," a romantic drama.

"Basically, I've been very lucky, and I've worked with some of the best actors in the world," Sting admitted. "So I've actually learned in the deep end, if you like. I still regard myself as an apprentice actor; I don't think I've had enough experience to consider myself an established actor.

"I really think the medium is a producer's medium; even the director doesn't have total say over what goes on the screen. It's a very capital-intensive industry. You know, you can make an album for a couple of thousand dollars. You can't make a film for less than half a million. You can't even make a video for that these days."

If his acting or recording careers turn stale — or if he keeps the Police on indefinite hold — Sting insisted that his low threshold for boredom would provide other opportunities.

Sting, lesser known by his given name, Gordon Sumner, has put Police members Andy Summers (center) and Stewart Copeland (right) on permanent hold while he moves into the world of jazz.

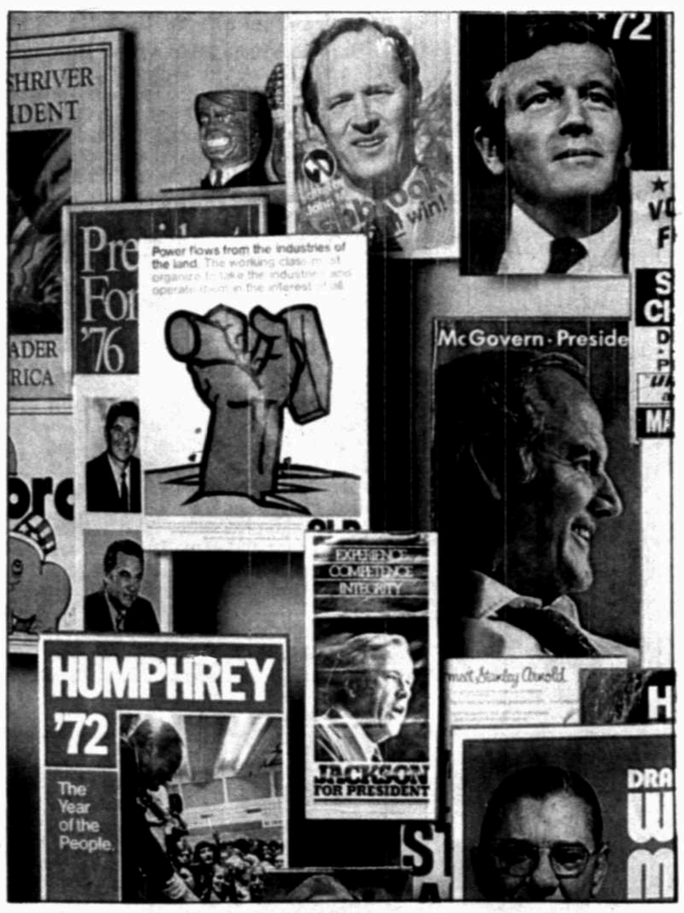
Museum director Valerie Christensen pauses in the Hall of Presidents. Pictured behind her is a mural of an early day presidential campaign.



Visitors to Odessa's Presidential Museum may relive recent political campaigns in the Every Four Years exhibit. Campaign memorabilia illustrate the history of the electoral process.

The John Ben Shepperd Gallery, the site of various short-term exhibits, enables the museum to expand into other areas of history, science, technology and the arts.

Presidential Museum

ODESSA — The only museum in the United States dedicated to the office of the presidency and all the men who have served the office is in Odessa.

The setting does seem unlikely.

Nevertheless, the small group of Odessans who founded the Presidential Museum two decades ago believed the idea had merit and they set out to make it a reality.

Today, the museum's comprehensive holdings of more than 25,000 items of presidential memorabilia, its 3,500-volume library and its collection of original art have attracted national recognition. More than 300,000 visitors have toured the exhibits.

The museum was conceived in November 1963 by Odessans W.H. Holm and Dr. Luis M. Morton following the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

They discussed the possibility of paying tribute to the slain president by creating some kind of a memorial and presented their idea to Dorothy Croft, a long-time civic leader. She immediately agreed to head the project and recruited four additional persons to form the "Committee of Seven."

The scope of the project broadened early on when the committee concluded that the presidency itself, rather than any single president, demanded a memorial.

As they envisioned, the museum would be designed to foster an appreciation for the office.

Throughout 1964, the committee conducted a whirlwind campaign to solicit funds, select and prepare a site and acquire items for the collection.

Their efforts were non-partisan, supported by both the City of Odessa and Ector County, and involved thousands of volunteer hours. The list of donors included Presidents Dwight Eisenhower and Harry Truman, and President and Mrs. Lyndon Johnson.

In February 1965, the "Presidential Room" officially opened in the Ector County Library building with a menagerie of contributions from Texas and across the country. By 1981, the collection had outgrown its original home. That year, the library moved to a new location and the entire building was made available to the museum.

A $250,000 donation from the city facilitated an extensive renovation program with some of the funds being used to create a short-term exhibit hall in honor of former Texas Attorney General John Ben Shepperd. Ralph Rhodes of New Harmony, Ind., also designed and constructed two long-term exhibit halls and a new foyer.

One in 17 Texans victim of crime in 1984

By KATHRYN BAKER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A resident of Texas had about a one in 17 chance of being a victim of a crime in 1984, up 2.1 percent over 1983, according to the FBI report "Crime in the United States."

But a Texan's chances of being the victim of a violent crime dropped 0.2 percent to about one in 200, the statistics indicated.

Out of every 100,000 residents of the state, 6,030 were victims of crimes in 1984, 505 of them violent, according to the FBI report.

Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox said the agency had not analyzed the 1984 figures, but said "as Texas contintues to grow, crime will continue to be a problem."

He said the agency was planning to release new crime figures for the first six months of 1985 on Tuesday and hinted, "the picture's going to change."

According to the FBI's compilation of 1984 statistics, a Lubbock area resident had the highest chance of being a crime victim, about one in 11, compared with a one in 29 chance in Brazoria, the lowest-rated Texas metropolitan area.

Brazoria reported 3,425 crimes per 100,000 residents in 1984, 295 of them violent. It had the lowest rate per 100,000 residents for robbery, burglary and theft.

Lubbock's statistics showed that 9,121 residents out of 100,000 were victims of crimes, 805 of them violent crimes. The city had the highest rates in the state in the aggravated assault and theft categories.

"I would not accept anyone branding us the crime and sin capital of the world," responded Lubbock police spokesman Bill Morgan.

He said the high rate could have been the result of good police work but more likely was due to variations in the way different cities report their crime statistics.

"I would not take those as absolute gospel because of the possibilities of errors in reporting," Morgan said. "And you can have beneficial rises in the crime rate that reflect better police work and citizen involvement.

"I think at times we take a beating because we don't try to slough anything off," he said.

Houston had the highest murder rate, reporting 609 murders in 1984 for 19 per 100,000 residents.

El Paso had the second-highest statistic of violent crime per 100,000 residents — 736 — though its overall rate of crime per 100,000 — 6,046 — was Vxthe highest in the state. El Paso had the second-highest rate of aggravated assault, 487 per 100,000 residents.

The Killeen-Temple area was second lowest in crime rate, with 3,989 crimes per 100,000 residents, and was lowest in violent crimes, reporting 239 violent crimes per 100,000 residents.

Abilene police investigations Capt. Ray Portalatin said his city was the victim of skewed statistics because it erroneously reported such crimes as child molesting in the forcible rape category. Abilene showed the highest rape rate, with 75 per 100,000 residents.

McAllen-Edinburg-Mission was the lowest rated in the rape category, with seven per 100,000 residents.

San Antonio was second-highest in the rape statistics behind Abilene, reporting 70 rapes per 100,000 residents.

Abilene had the lowest murder rate with six for the year, about five per 100,000 residents.

Houston had the highest car theft and robbery rates.

According to statistics, a resident of the Houston metropolitan area had about a one in 100 chance of being a car theft victim and about a one in 2,800 chance of the being the victim of a robbery.

Car theft rates were also generally high along the Texas-Mexico border.

Dallas was second behind Houston in murders, reporting 382 in 1984 for about 18 per 100,000 residents; robberies, with 263 per 100,000 residents; and theft, with 4,830 per 100,000 residents.

Fort Worth was third in the overall crime rate, reporting 8,169 crimes per 100,000 residents.

Crime statistics for state, metropolitan areas listed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a list of crime statistics for the state and for Texas standard metropolitan statistical areas for 1984 according to agencies reporting to the FBI.

The first figure is the number of crimes committed per 100,000 residents and the second is the number of violent crimes committed per 100,000. The rest of the figures are total numbers of murders (including negligent manslaughters), forcible rapes, robberies, aggravated assaults, burglaries, thefts and motor vehicle thefts. Figures for arson were not reported.

Kay Dalton Williams

Kay Dalton Williams, 88, of Midland, died Friday at a Big Spring nursing home following a lengthy illness.

Memorial services will be at 9 a.m. Wednesday in Thomas Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Stephen Kennelley officiating.

Mrs. Williams was born Oct. 30, 1896, in Bartlett. She was in the newspaper and advertising field for many years, working in Colorado, Missouri, Oklahoma, Wyoming and Kansas. She was owner of Kay Williams Construction Co. in Midland until her retirement and was the only woman in Texas eligible to bid on work through the Texas Highway Department. She was a charter member of the Altrusa Club of Midland and a charter member of Friends of the Library.

Survivors include a daughter, Jerry Williams of Granada Hills, Calif.; a sister, Margaret Guest of Grapevine; and a brother, Thomas Dalton of Los Angeles.

The family has requested memorials be made to one's favorite charity.

City police probe reports of several weekend thefts

From Staff Reports

A wrist watch, knife and about $4,500 cash were reported stolen during a burglary Sunday from the Isaac Hernandez residence, 401 E. Texas Ave., according to the Midland police department.

Hernandez told police the theft occurred about 1:15 p.m. The total value of the stolen property has not been determined, according to reports.

In other weekend complaints, Mary Long, 413 E. Pecan St., told police someone broke into her vehicle while it was parked at her residence Sunday and stole an AM/FM cassette stereo. The auto burglary occurred about 1 p.m. The value of the stereo system has not been determined, police said.

Also, an automobile battery was stolen Saturday from B&J Wrecker Service, 1603 Orchard Lane, a company spokesman told police.

Police said the battery was reported stolen between 4 and 6 a.m. Saturday. Its value has not been determined.

Congressman's wife reaches decision

SULPHUR SPRINGS (AP) — Betty Chapman has just made a difficult decision.

After 14 years of teaching, she decided last week to set aside her educator's career to aid her family in the transition from rural life to the life of a congressional family.

With the recent election of her husband, Jim Chapman, to the U.S. Congress from the 1st Congressional District, Mrs. Chapman said she has had to weigh her priorities and make some changes.

"All along I kept thinking that I would teach and still have time to do all the things I want to do with Jim," she said. "But it has finally soaked in that because of Jim's new job, I'm going to have a lot of new responsibilities."

Mrs. Chapman had made arrangements to begin her fifth year as a sophomore English teacher at Sulphur Springs High School, and had even arranged to miss the first two days of classes so she could attend the swearing-in ceremonies for her husband.

But an invitation from Chapman's local supporters to meet with another group of supporters in New York City Sept. 6 prompted her to seriously reconsider teaching now, she said.

"I can't just teach at my leisure. I have to be there all the time," she said. "I can't be taking off to do things with Jim. It wouldn't be fair to the students.

"The good thing is that all the choices are wonderful," she said. "I just want to do them all, and I can't.

Mrs. Chapman said the classroom is the only place "that I really have my own identity, and it's hard to realize I have to give it up for a while. But please understand I like all the other identities, too — Jim's wife, Jennifer and Trey's mother, the campaigner."

The latter identity came to the forefront recently as Mrs. Chapman acted as a "second Chapman" during the congressional campaign, covering one side of the East Texas district while her husband covered the other.

She said she took a recreational vehicle and about six friends with her and visited about three or four towns a day.

MUSEUM

In May 1984, the Presidential Museum reopened in its expanded quarters.

From the lobby dominated by Rhodes' re-creation of the presidential seal, visitors may view objects related to each of the nation's chief executives. The hall currently features the Dishong Collection of the First Lady inaugural gown replicas, a gift of Mr. and Mrs. Gayle Dishong of Odessa.

The Hall of Presidents opens into the Every Four Years exhibit: artifacts of the American electoral process.

There, visitors may view a variety of displays which reveal the changing nature of presidential campaigns. Among the many artifacts are the Henry Clay pipe used during Clay's unsuccessful bid to win the nomination in 1840.

Also available are turn of the century coin-like medals which eventually gave way today's campaign buttons.

Director Valerie Christensen and Curator Anne Sherburn direct day-to-day activities at the museum and arrange short-term exhibits in the John Ben Shepperd Gallery.

In addition to presidential exhibits, the museum offers changing temporary exhibitions that cover a broad subject area including art, history, and science and technology. Exhibits change every four to eight weeks.

"The NASA Story," on loan from the American Science and Technology Center in Washington, D.C., currently is exhibited in the gallery. Plans also are under way for a fall quilt show.

Texan killed in crash of ultralight

BELLVILLE (AP) — A 35-year-old man died Sunday when his ultralight helicopter crashed near the Bellville airport, the Department of Public Safety said.

James Penny, of Cyprus, was practicing takeoff and landing approaches when he crashed about 2,000 feet away from the runway, said DPS spokesman David Wells.

The craft "was in the process of making a left turn when it lost altitude and crashed into a pasture," Wells said.

State Fair food vendors to accept only coupons

DALLAS (AP) — Food vendors at the State Fair of Texas will accept coupons, not cash, this year to help silence complaints that the fair engages in food price-fixing.

The coupons will cost 25 cents apiece, and will be purchased at 12 booths set up around the fairgrounds — a system similar to the one used to sell coupons for amusement rides, officials said.

The change was announced Friday at a meeting of fair management and food vendors and comes in the wake of a federal lawsuit filed last week by two longtime fair vendors charging price-fixing.

Fair spokeswoman Nancy Wiley said that although, "in our opinion, the fair has not fixed prices before," the fair has encouraged vendors to keep the prices at a level "the public can afford."

Girlfriend hurt Thayer's defense

DALLAS (AP) — Former Deputy Defense Secretary Paul Thayer and stockbroker Billy Bob Harris probably could have escaped criminal charges in an insider stock-trading case had they agreed to civil penalties and restitution, according to The American Lawyer magazine.

Instead, the magazine said, Thayer led a continuing cover-up that put him on a collision course with the government. However, when his former girlfriend decided to cooperate with investigators, Thayer's plans fell apart, the article said.

In the magazine's September issue, Sandra Ryno of Dallas said Thayer offered to marry her and leave the country in an effort to talk her out of revealing details of the case that landed him and Harris in federal prison.

Thayer besieged her with calls, leaving messages such as "Please don't do this to me, baby" on her answering machine, Ms. Ryno said in the article — "How Paul Thayer Bluffed His Way into Prison."

Sandra Ryno of Dallas said Thayer offered to marry her and leave the country in an effort to talk her out of revealing details of the case that landed him and Harris in federal prison.

Ms. Ryno, 40, told the magazine she rejected Thayer's advances and cooperated with government investigators so that her 15-year-old daughter, Melanie, would not have to tell her friends, "My mother isn't here because she's in jail."

Ms. Ryno's testimony helped federal prosecutors unravel a coverup of a scheme that earned illegal stock profits for friends of Thayer — including Ms. Ryno, Harris and others.

Thayer passed inside information to Harris, who bought the stock on behalf of Ms. Ryno and others.

Thayer, former chairman of Dallas-based LTV Corp., pleaded guilty in March to obstruction of justice for lying to the Securities and Exchange Commission in its investigation.

Harris also pleaded guilty, and they were sentenced in May to four years in prison and were sent to a minimum-security federal prison camp at Big Spring, Texas.

Lawyers for the two have filed motions in U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., asking Judge Charles Richey to reduce their sentences, among the stiffest ever handed down in an insider stock trading case.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Charles Roistacher, who prosecuted the case, said Friday he will oppose the requests, the Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday.

The SEC filed a civil suit against Thayer, Harris and five others in January 1984, accusing them of generating more than $1.9 million in illegal profits based on tips provided by Thayer while he was chairman of LTV and a member of the boards of Anheuser-Busch Co. and the Allied Corp.

According to the SEC, Thayer provided tips about Anheuser-Busch's plans to acquire Dallas-based Campbell-Taggart, Allied Corp.'s plans to take over Bendix Corp., and LTV's plans to bid for Grumman Corp.

The stock of a company usually rises when word gets out that it is the object of takeover action.

In an interview with the Times Herald, Roistacher said the defense strategy was "to beat the civil case, and the criminal case would go away. When we turned Sandy Ryno, based on what she told us, we were able to develop more and more substantial information."

STATE IN BRIEF

Petnappings probed

HOUSTON (AP) — After Yvonne Gillard realized her poodle, Peggy, had vanished, she posted handbills and soon received a call from a man promising to return the animal in return for a $100 ransom.

"The man who called said his sister bought a dog that had fit the description I had put out. They hadn't bought her — they stole her," Ms. Gillard said.

Houston police officer Gwen Lively said petnapping is an easy crime to commit but difficult to solve because the furry victims are often difficult to identify.

Lively is the city's only officer assigned full-time to investigate pet abduction cases.

"I am the only one working these cases. I've got far more cases than I can work at," he said. "It's difficult to find people to work in this area."

Letters aren't 'permisos'

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Undocumented Mexican aliens are paying hundreds of dollars for letters they wrongly believe are permits that will give them immunity from deportation, officials say.

Many notaries public and attorneys hired by undocumented workers to file immigration documents for them are giving out letters that many of the workers are interpreting as permits, said Harlingen attorney Thelma Garcia.

"These letters are in English. There is usually a statement across the bottom of these letters that states 'this is not a permiso.' The aliens are Latinos. They can't read English. The only word they can read on the letter is 'permiso,' so they think they have a permit," Ms. Garcia said.

The letters, in fact, state only that the undocumented worker has hired an attorney to help them with immigration documents, she said.

"I don't believe in them (letters). I only give them out when they ask for them and only after I explain to them that they are are not permisos," Ms. Garcia said.

Mennonites slipping in

SEMINOLE (AP) — Mennonites in search of a better way of life are slipping over the Mexican border into the United States, causing concern among church members that their family won't stay closely knit.

About five to 10 Mennonites a month are illegally entering the United States, officials said. They flock to the Mennonite community in Gaines County in West Texas, where they hope to improve their standard of living.

"The conditions here are better than in Mexico," explained Andrew Plett, minister of the Seminole Mennonite Church. "Their average wage in Mexico is $5 a day."

Plett, who speaks with a soft, Dutch accent typical of the Mennonites who still retain their native European tongue despite years of living in Mexico, Canada and now the United States, said earnings from farms in Mexico also are poor.

Billboard ban sought

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — In hopes of luring "quality growth" that might be turned off by a forest of billboards, a group of businessmen is shepherding a move to ban the future construction of the signs in and around the city.

But billboard operators argue that the signs indicate a healthy, growing city, and one spokesman charges that a construction ban would be nothing less than a violation of the industry's constitutional rights.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, September 3, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Heed a warning from someone who has more experience. A romance or marriage will be strengthened by the events of the next few months. A cancellation is not the end of the world. Start looking immediately for another contract or customer. Mate is highly supportive. Give credit where it is due. Your sensitivity makes you a wonderful friend and spokesman. Show those who rely on you that you are trustworthy. A legacy is possible. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: actresses Anne Jackson and Valerie Perrine, Los Angeles Raiders linebacker Darryl Byrd, Kitty Carlisle, legendary actor Alan Ladd, automobile designer Ferdinand Porsche.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your reaction to a new development at work may have been too emotional. Back off a bit. A positive attitude will help you emerge a winner. Keep spending under control.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your generosity is wonderful but could wreck your budget if you do not watch out. Give family responsibilities top priority. Regular exercise helps you stay fit and trim. Encourage mate to join you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): There could be marvelous advantages to implementing a plan proposed today. Stay on your toes. A parent or child offers reassurance. An excellent day to shop for things for your home.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your ability to clarify confusing situations is a tremendous asset to school or work. Good things begin to happen. Be careful not to get caught up on an ego trip.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be sure of your facts before making a family decision. Work conditions will improve only if you are fair in your criticisms. Adopt a positive approach. Others turn resentful if you scold.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A lofty achievement is within your grasp. Patience is the key to progress. Look for a home you can both afford and enjoy. Including high-tech elements could help a plan win approval.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stop trying to be everything to everyone. Turn your back on the past and concentrate on building for the future. You get valuable support when you need it most.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can no longer afford to ignore some parental advice. A problem will not solve itself. Be more communicative with your co-workers and friends. Love and good luck go hand-in-hand.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Concentrate on getting your office or work place running more smoothly. Better organization will bring higher profits. Say the word and an old friend will lend a helping hand.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stand up for your beliefs. You take real satisfaction in a special achievement or honor. A long-time business partner gives you a guarantee of continued service. Repay a favor.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Go ahead! Spend a few extra dollars and get the expert advice you need. Quality counts, no matter what business you are in. You help yourself when you help your company.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Competition only strengthens your resolve to do your very best. Higher-ups are watching to see how you perform under pressure. Do well and you could get an incredible opportunity! Limit spending.

♠K76 ♡Q1052 ♢KQJ7 ♣Q9
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♢	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Your hand is worth one effort, especially since you should promote the value of the queen of clubs. It is a choice between four clubs and three no trump. Since you have mostly soft values and you cannot be sure how useful your diamond honors will be, we prefer three no trump.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠83 ♡AK764 ♢KQ105 ♣72
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	Dble	1 NT
Pass	Pass	Dble	2 ♣

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner has the enemy on the ropes and they are floundering. Don't bail them out by bidding two diamonds. Partner could want to double two clubs and you must not deprive him of the opportunity. Pass. If partner can't double two clubs, he will take some other appropriate action—he knows your side has the balance of power.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K10542 ♡QJ10 ♢8 ♣AQJ6
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
5 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—We cannot construct a hand where partner is missing both red aces and the king of trumps and where he would still be strong enough to make a slam try. Why, then, didn't he cue-bid or ask for aces? He must be worried about the trump suit, and you can set his mind at rest on that score. Bid six spades.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q1095 ♡A3 ♢9874 ♣J102
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	1 ♢	Pass	Pass
Dble	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Partner is showing a very good hand, and you have more useful values than he has any right to expect. We would not blame you if you decided to jump to four spades. However, you should cater to the possibility that partner has raised with only three spades and that the hand might play better in some other strain. Bid three clubs. This must be a forward-going move and it warns partner that you have only a four-card spade suit. Now he will be perfectly placed to select the best contract.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ5 ♡83 ♢975 ♣AKJ102
Partner opens the bidding with a demand bid of two spades. What do you respond?
A.—There is no telling how high you will want to get. A small slam should be certain and a grand slam is possible. To allow for an orderly investigation, set the trump suit at once by raising to three spades. If you show your clubs first and then support spades, partner will never believe that you have such a fine holding in his suit.

Liverpool finally capitalizing on continued Beatlemania

New York Times News Service

LIVERPOOL, England — More than 20 years later, Beatlemania has begun to catch on with municipal authorities here.

Hundreds of fans descended last week on Liverpool, the hometown of all four members of the Beatles, for Beatles Festival Week. They found Liverpool well prepared for their onslaught, but only a few years ago that would not have been the case. Liverpool has only recently started to turn the Beatles' legacy into commercial enterprise.

"Five years ago you couldn't even buy a Beatles postcard," said Deborah G. Peters of Anaheim, Calif., who attended the Mersey Beatle Convention last weekend as part of the festival.

Now, Beatle devotees can not only enjoy festival events like the Beatles Sound-Alike Competition or 50 hours of Beatle videos, but also partake of Liverpool's assorted Beatle shops, Beatles walking and bus tours to spots like Penny Lane and Strawberry Fields, and a new Beatle museum, called Beatle City, in a building painted to resemble the Yellow Submarine.

"We've been promoting the city on the back of the Beatles," said Ron C. Jones, tourism development officer for the Merseyside County Council, which spent some $14,000 on this year's festival.

That hasn't always been the case. In the 1970s, the Beatles were less than popular with many in Liverpool. In 1977, the Liverpool City Council rejected a plan for a Beatles statue, saying that the group had done little for Liverpool and that the singers had taken drugs, thus discrediting the city.

Even the Cavern Club, the Mathew Street nightclub where the Beatles began to sing their way to fame, was demolished to make way for a parking lot.

"Liverpool thought the Beatles were a passing fad and made no effort to make them a tourist attraction," said Sir Trevor Jones, a City Council member.

The Cavern Club has been rebuilt on its original site as part of a shopping center that bespeaks efforts to bring business and tourism to Liverpool. Tourism is seen by many as an answer to Liverpool's high number of jobless people, almost 61,000, and its decaying manufacturing base, which has seen the loss of some 40,000 jobs since 1978.

Beatlemania has been an inspiration, especially for the 24,000 people under 25 years old who are out of work. "The Beatles showed that any kid playing a guitar could make it," says George Downey, managing director of Cavern Entertainments, which includes the Cavern Club.

But Beatle tourism has yet to prosper fully. Although the Beatles were a drawing card for many of the 1.5 million tourists who came to Merseyside in 1983, merchants selling Beatle goods say their turnover is not spectacular, especially during the winter months. The Beatle City museum is expected to end its first year at a loss, as the 200,000 tourists who are expected to have visited it by its first anniversary in September will not bring enough business to offset expensive copyright fees for Beatles photos and videos in the museum's sound and light displays.

"This should all have been done 20 years ago," said Philip Norman, who wrote a history of the Beatles. "Liverpool could have become like Nashville."

Prince gives horses a tongue-lashing

SANDRINGHAM, England (AP) — Four of the queen's horses got a royal tongue-lashing from Prince Philip, Queen Elizabeth II's husband, after the carriage he was driving in a horsemanship contest went astray.

Reporters at the Norwich Union Trials heard Philip shout "You bloody twits!" Saturday after the team galloped to the wrong side of an obstacle on the course in this east England city.

On the second go-round, the prince negotiated the course successfully. But the 64-year-old ex-seaman, known for his salty language, was overheard mumbling, "You're a useless lot."

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — When Jimmy Carter pitched a softball team composed of former administrative aides to victory, he joked that the win boosted his record to 1-43.

"This is the first victory of my lifetime," said the former president, 61.

Saturday's game in Carter's hometown was part of a Labor Day weekend reunion of more than 200 former administration officials and other guests. Jody Powell, Carter's White House press secretary, had organized the get-together, which also featured a fish fry and barbecue.

Powell said the key to Carter's 9-7 success was his — Powell's — leaving the game in the seventh inning.

Sam Donaldson, ABC's White House correspondent who played on the opposing team, said he hit solid balls each time and had unlucky breaks.

"He figured some technical way to get me out," said Donaldson. "Of course, he did that all during his presidency."

WARM SPRINGS, Ga. (AP) — Donna Cline of Las Vegas, Nev., was crowned Ms. Wheelchair America 1986 during the 14th annual pageant, held at the Roosevelt Warm Springs Institute for Rehabilitation.

"I couldn't believe it," Ms. Cline said after Saturday's pageant. "All of these women are so accomplished in their own right that they all deserve the crown."

Ms. Cline, 26, is a news anchor and reporter for KVBC-TV in Las Vegas. She is a paraplegic as the result of a 1978 automobile accident.

Denise Weisenborn of Maple Heights, Ohio, was selected first runner-up. She is an attorney who uses a wheelchair because she has muscular dystrophy.

Ms. Cline will spend the next year traveling to promote the pageant program and as an advocate for the more than 36 million disabled people in the United States.

Contestants from 14 states and Puerto Rico competed in the pageant. They were judged on their accomplishments, personality and appearance.

GREENWICH, Conn. (LAT) — Taylor Caldwell, author of more than 30 best-selling novels, has died at the age of 84.

Ms. Caldwell, who lived here, died Friday night of pulmonary failure caused by lung cancer, State Medical Examiner Dr. Hugo Virgilio said Saturday.

Gerald Fried, Ms. Caldwell's son-in-law, said that the author's husband, Robert Prestie, called Ms. Caldwell's daughter, Margaret, with news of the death. Mr. Prestie gave no further details.

"Dynasty of Death," published in 1938, was the first of Ms. Caldwell's 33 novels, including "Testimony of Two Men" (1968), "Great Lion of God" (1971) "Captains and Kings" (1972) and "Answer as a Man" (1981). Her works were translated into 11 languages, and she was a frequent contributor to national magazines.

Seminars help teach 'Good Grief'

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Nancy Voorheis has spent the year learning to deal with the grief that comes from loss — and now she's helping others deal with it.

"Loss, especially when it's unexpected loss, can be and often is devastating," Voorheis said. "But whatever the loss, when it comes too close to home, there is the tendency to sit down and give up. And that's something that people need to learn not to do. And I've now taken on the job of helping anyone get up and keep going as long as they choose to do so."

Voorheis is teaching grief management courses to people suffering from personal loss.

She talked about her day of personal loss in May 1984:

The 50 or so words scribbled on a piece of yellow legal-size paper started simply "I love you" and ended asking for forgiveness.

"I felt pain everywhere in my body, and at the same time, I remember being numb as I read Phil's short note," said Voorheis. "Everything was a contradiction."

Her husband had decided that day to take his own life.

RECENT BUSINESS losses by the entrepreneur had made Phil Voorheis depressed, but wife Nancy says she still believes there were no outward clues that could have warned her of what her husband was planning.

"We shared everything, at least that's what I believed. I knew business was hurting; he had just lost $50,000 in a computer company venture. He gave up a managerial position in a large company to go out on his own, and we both knew it would take time. We were planning a trip to Europe to celebrate his 60th birthday.

"When I first read his suicide note, I thought it was just a bad dream and that I'd wake up. And then a friend I had called to be with me found his body in the back yard. He had shot himself."

For a while, Voorheis's whole world changed from charity fund-raising meetings to a world of fear, anger and resentment.

"I remember the young paramedics offering me a tranquilizer when they came out to the house on that day in May," she said. "I immediately turned down the offer. I'm an alcoholic, and I hadn't touched any form of drugs for nearly three years.

"A power flowed through me. I had a real sense that I would be given the strength to do whatever I had to do without the help of drugs or alcohol."

DURING THOSE FIRST few days and weeks, she said she remembers feeling frightened and alone.

"But I have a deep faith, and I knew that I was to travel down this road for a purpose. I wanted that purpose to show itself so that I might understand why all of this was happening to me."

She said she has found the answer.

"I've been through a lot of sorrow in my life — chemical dependency and the death of family members — and all of it has served to strengthen me," Voorheis said. "In the months since Phil's death, I have experienced both peace and power within me.

"I have discovered that grief can be good."

And so began what the 57-year-old former kindergarten teacher labels "my special saga ... my journey through loss and grief."

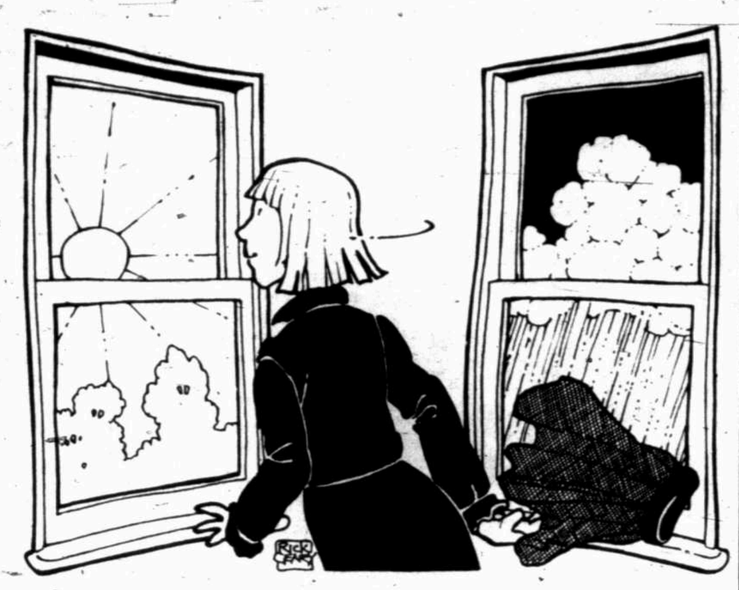
She said that it is her belief that God gives each person special talents and then through pain (or joy), fine-tunes those talents so that they might be shared.

"My talent is to understand that life is about choice, that we can choose to survive and to grow or we can choose to give up and die."

That's something she said not everyone can understand without a little help from a friend. And she's decided she's to be that friend to a lot of people, some she has yet to meet.

VOORHEIS HAS STARTED offering seminars in grief management. The seminars are more of a support system than lesson plans, she said.

"It's for people going through the grief of losing someone loved and (who) need some help making peace with that loss."



CNS Graphic

She has titled her seminars "Good Grief."

"I divide the seminars into three categories," she said. "First, the person has to let it all out. Discovering one or two persons to share with on a one-to-one basis really helps facilitate the healing process. We need to start collecting and then reading what others have written about grief and loss. I ask the people to make a contract with a friend so that he or she might place trust in the other person, and vice versa."

Next, the person has to learn to become his or her own best friend.

"A long-distance telephone call from my sister proved to be another turning point in my recovery. She said that since I had lost my best friend (Phil), maybe it was time for me to try and become my own best friend. But I couldn't do it on my own. It took my friends to show me what a valuable person, and friend, I really am.

"It's easy if you have someone show you. You need to spend time with yourself and practice. I have the class make tapes to themselves and play them back later. I have them write letters to themselves. But mostly I ask them to be as patient with themselves as they have been in the past with another 'best' friend."

AND FINALLY, the person has to choose life.

"Maybe that last part is the hardest. It takes a lot of work to become aware ... to be reborn. Grief and loss make us die emotionally and spiritually unless we put the brakes on.

"I ask them to pick someone in public life who they don't know but deeply respect. Someone who has had to deal with loss. After some research, they are asked to write a letter to this person, sharing their own loss and also telling this person how his behavior has lifted and helped them. You'd be surprised how that seems to bring grief into focus."

In the two classes held earlier this year, 15 people have taken her four-week seminar.

"I needed help in order to make sense of my loss, and I couldn't find what I needed," she said. "That's the reason I started this program."

One of the more important aspects of this program, according to Voorheis, is to share feelings of pain and grief.

Grief over loss of pet 'normal, appropriate'

Hearst News Service

Rocky the dachshund was one of those dogs who was more like a person.

He lived with Betty Carmack for 10 years, and since she's single he was the one she usually turned to when she came home from a hard day at work as an associate professor of nursing at the University of San Francisco.

"He was a really important source of affection, caring and comfort for me," she says.

Seven years ago, Carmack lost Rocky in a rafting accident on the Trinity River. She assumes he drowned.

"I felt very guilty," she says. "I got another dog right away, because the house was just too empty. I needed something to give to and to give back to me. But it wasn't the same. I'd look at that new little dog and compare her to Rocky. I was almost resentful in a way because she was there and Rocky wasn't. I struggled with the grief over his loss for at least a year."

Fortunately, friends and family understood, but Carmack got to wondering about people who had lost pets and didn't get that kind of support, people who heard only comments like, "What's the big deal? It was just a dog (or a cat). Why get so upset? You can always go out and get another one."

Carmack, who has spent most of her life in psychiatric mental health nursing, knew that wasn't the way it worked, and her concern led her to start a counseling service for bereaved pet owners.

Before starting her operation a couple of years ago, Carmack consulted James Quackenbush of the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine, who has been doing similar work since 1979.

"I know there will be skeptics who think this is frivolous and silly," Carmack says. "One guy heard about what I was doing and said, 'What's the world coming to?' But I get reactions like this only from those who don't understand the bond between people and animals, who don't see how you can get so attached to pets."

Carmack does individual counseling at her home, where her clients are greeted by her latest dog, a cocker spaniel named Sunshine who almost seems to sense their pain, Carmack says, and puts them at ease. She also leads two group sessions a month at the San Francisco SPCA and the Peninsula Humane Society.

"I've worked with 250 to 300 people so far, primarily women," she says. "A few men have come and been able to get their feelings out but they're in a minority."

Carmack tries to get across her feeling that it's "normal, natural, appropriate and expected" to go through grief after the loss of a pet.

"In many cases, the grief pet owners feel is as intense as that experienced after the death of a person. I don't think this is so hard to understand when you look at the degree of attachment pet owners develop with their pets. For many, the relationship with their pets is the most meaningful one they have. Pets are like members of their family, the reason they come home at night. So the loss has to be profound. When the animal dies, there's no one there to need them anymore, and they need to be needed."

Carmack helps talk them through the anguish and fills some of the void.

"A lot of people have told me that before they knew my service existed, they felt very much alone. They went underground with their feelings. They were afraid to be open."

Carmack deals not just with people who have lost their pets but with people who are anticipating a loss through illness or old age and don't want to see the animal suffer.

"We talk about decisions they'll have to make and alternatives, about euthanasia, burial versus cremation and whether to put the pet in a cemetery. We also discuss how the pet might be remembered, with a memorial service or a scrapbook or by planting a tree or a shrub. And we look at how to cope with any guilt or anger that might be involved."

Carmack hasn't forgotten the guilt she felt. She only wishes she'd had the chance to bid Rocky a proper goodbye.

DEAR ABBY

Organ donor's gift may last lifetime

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: The letter you published recently from a healthy man asking why he must die before donating one of his kidneys brings to mind my own recent experience. I am a relatively healthy middle-aged man who recently went through two emergency major surgical procedures. My organs, I assume, are in fine condition, and I would have been willing and happy to sign an organ donor certificate.

Although my life was in imminent danger, neither my surgeon, my family physician, nor anyone at the hospital made such a suggestion. During my recuperation, I saw a group of people on a television talk show who were anxiously awaiting kidney donors in order that their lives could be saved.

Why can't the medical community be more cooperative to those organizations handling organ transplants so that in situations such as mine, the opportunity to gain healthy organs is not lost? — ANONYMOUS ATTORNEY

DEAR ANONYMOUS ATTORNEY: Good question. But it would seem inappropriate, and downright ghoulish, to suggest to one whose life is in imminent danger to sign an organ donor card.

Although millions of people carry donor cards indicating that immediately after their death their usable organs may be harvested to help the living, the majority do not.

Thank you for giving me the opportunity to remind others to become organ donors. There is absolutely no cost to the donor or the recipient of any organs donated after death.

This little essay, written by Robert N. Test, brought a windfall of new donors each time it was run. Let's hope history will repeat itself:

"At a certain moment a doctor will determine that my brain has ceased to function and that, for all intents and purposes, my life has stopped.

"When that happens, do not attempt to instill artificial life into my body by the use of a machine. And don't call this my 'deathbed.' Call it my 'bed of life,' and let my body be taken from it to help others lead fuller lives.

"Give my sight to a man who has never seen a sunrise, a baby's face or love in the eyes of a woman.

"Give my heart to a person whose own heart has caused nothing but endless days of pain.

"Give my blood to the teen-ager who has been pulled from the wreckage of his car, so that he might live to see his grandchildren play.

"Give my kidneys to one who depends on a machine to exist from week to week.

"Take my bones, every muscle, every fiber and nerve in my body and find a way to make a crippled child walk.

"Explore every corner of my brain. Take my cells, if necessary, and let them grow so that someday a speechless boy will shout at the crack of a bat and a deaf girl will hear the sound of rain against her windows.

"Burn what is left of me and scatter the ashes to the winds to help the flowers grow.

"If you must bury something, let it be my faults, my weaknesses, and all prejudice against my fellowman.

"Give my soul to God.

"If by chance you wish to remember me, do it with a kind deed or word to someone who needs you. If you do all I have asked, I will live forever."

Donor cards are available by writing to: The Living Bank, P.O. Box 6725, Houston, Texas 77265. Include a legal size, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope. I have carried such a card for 15 years and feel there is nothing I can leave after my death that will be of greater value.

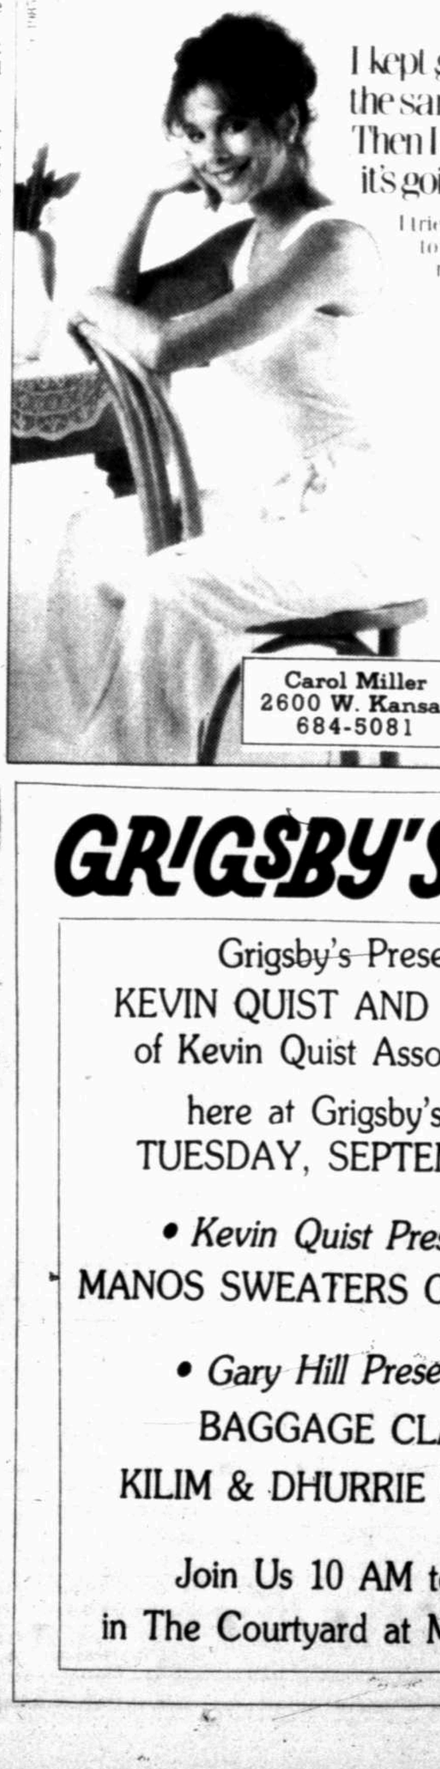
Midland Park Mall 697-7171



I kept gaining and losing the same 20 pounds. Then I said, this time it's going to be different.

I tried every pill, every gimmick to lose weight. Only to feel miserable when I gained it all back. Finally I said no never again—this time I'm going to Diet Center. I lost the weight, without hunger. And I'm keeping it off.
My only regret?
Not going sooner!

DIET CENTER
You're going to make it this time.

LABOR DAY, MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1985

WORKING TOGETHER

THAT'S WHAT MAKES AMERICA GREAT

We salute the working people of America today, Labor Day 1985. We hope they continue to take pride in their work and make working as a team their number one priority in the 1980's. Working in unison, we can continue to keep America a top competitor in markets worldwide.

A SPECIAL SALUTE TO AMERICAN LABOR

BUYERS GUIDE

IMPORTANT: Spoken promises are difficult to enforce. Ask the dealer to put all promises in writing. Keep this form.

VEHICLE MAKE ____ MODEL ____ YEAR ____ VIN NUMBER ____
DEALER STOCK NUMBER (Optional)

WARRANTIES FOR THIS VEHICLE:

☐ AS IS--NO WARRANTY

YOU WILL PAY ALL COSTS FOR ANY REPAIRS. The dealer assumes no responsibility for any repairs regardless of any oral statements about the vehicle.

☒ WARRANTY

☐ FULL ☒ LIMITED WARRANTY. The dealer will pay 100 % of the labor and 100 % of the parts for the covered systems that fail during the warranty period. Ask the dealer for a copy of the warranty document for a full explanation of warranty coverage, exclusions, and the dealer's repair obligations. Under state law, "implied warranties" may give you even more rights.

SYSTEMS COVERED: Engine: Cylinder Block and All Internal Parts, Cylinder Head Assemblies, Timing Case, Chain, Gears, Belt and Sprockets, Harmonic Balancer, Oil Pump, Water Pump, Transmission Case and all Internal Parts, Torque Converter, Drive Plate, Flex Plate, Fly Wheel, Bell Housing, Transaxle Case or Rear Axle Housing and all Internal Parts, Drive Shaft and Axle Shaft Assemblies and their Housings, Axle Shaft Bearings, Drive Shaft Center Bearings, Constant Velocity Joints, Universal Joints and Yokes

DURATION: All listed components are covered for 3 Months from the vehicle sale date or 3,000 miles from the vehicle's odometer reading at the time of vehicle sale (whichever comes first) after payment by the customer of the first $50 of covered repair costs for each repair visit ☒ SERVICE CONTRACT. A service contract is available at an extra charge on this vehicle. Ask for details as to coverage, deductible, price, and exclusions. If you buy a service contract within 90 days of the time of sale, state law "implied warranties" may give you additional rights.

PRE PURCHASE INSPECTION: ASK THE DEALER IF YOU MAY HAVE THIS VEHICLE INSPECTED BY YOUR MECHANIC EITHER ON OR OFF THE LOT.

SEE THE BACK OF THIS FORM for important additional information, including a list of some major defects that may occur in used motor vehicles.
