Birthright opens Big Spring office

Birthright of Big Spring has established an office to provide help for women with problem pregnancies.

Director Eunice Nix explained that Birthright offers assistance to women who have chosen to have their babies. They provide free pregnancy tests and can make referrals to various agencies for financial and other assistance. The organization will be able to help with maternity clothing and clothing for the baby, Nix said. Volunteers are also available to offer friendship, moral support and encouragement to the expectant mother, she added.

Birthright is located in the Colonial Oaks Office Center, 600 East FM 700, Room 17. Their phone number is 264-9110. Office hours are Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Birthright is staffed by volunteers. The organization is currently seeking additional volunteers as well as shelter homes, Nix said. They also welcome donations of maternity clothes and baby clothes.

Birthright is a non-profit, inter-denominational organization financed by donations.

Tickets on sale for street dance

Tickets for the Jody Nix Street Dance, scheduled for Saturday night during the Heart of the City Festival, are now on sale at the Chamber of Commerce office, 215 W. Third St., and at Downtown Main Street Inc., 100 Main St. (in the caboose).

One of the biggest complaints about the dance last year, explained coordinator Beverly Franklin, was the lack of seating during the dance. This year, she said, the group has decided to rent tables and chairs. The sale of the tickets will help with the costs.

Tickets are $8 per couple and $5 for single tickets. Tickets can also be purchased at the dance on June 1.

For more information about Heart of the City Festival, call Beverly Franklin, 267-4801.

Coahoma will move graduation inside

Coahoma High School graduation exercises have been moved indoors due to the expected inclimate weather. The ceremony begins at 8 p.m. tonight in the high school auditorium, not on the football field, as was scheduled earlier.

City offices to be closed Monday

The city of Big Spring offices will be closed Monday in observance of the Memorial Day holiday.

Trash will not be picked up on Monday, but the landfill will be open normal hours.

Reaction to ruling is mixed

Family planning clinics around the country say they'll forfeit millions of dollars in federal money rather than abide by a government ban on abortion counseling.

"Our principles are not for sale," Jill June, head of Iowa's Planned Parenthood affiliate, said Thursday after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled 5-4 that clinics using federal funds cannot discuss abortion with their patients.

Abortion foes hailed the ruling as a step toward reversing the landmark Roe v. Wade decision legalizing abortion in 1973.

"It's about time," said Dottie Roberts of Family Action, an anti-abortion group based in Lake Stevens, Wash. "The general public is fed up with the biggest disaster of sex education any civilized society has seen."

"It can no longer be presumed by the abortion industry that the nation's highest court is in their pocket," said Arlene Champoux of Massachusetts Citizens for Life.

But family-planning officials said the ruling would mean two standards of care — one for the poor, one for the rich — and prevent doctors from fulfilling their ethical duty to inform patients fully of their medical options.

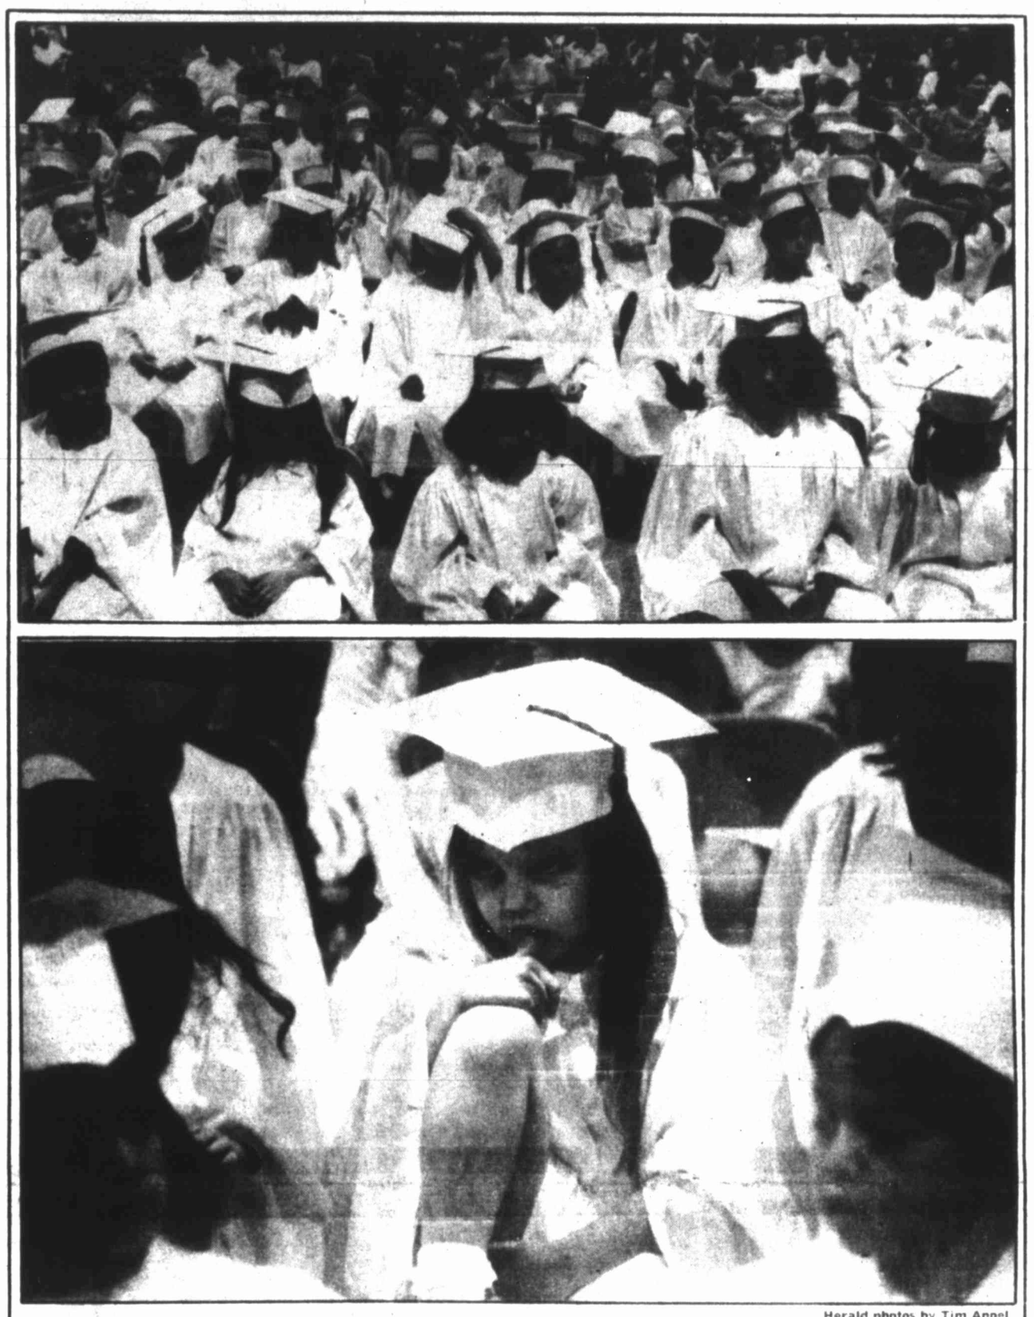

Others said some clinics that forgo federal dollars might have to cut services or close.

The high court on Thursday upheld regulations issued by the Reagan administration in 1988 that say federally funded clinics may not discuss abortion with pregnant women or tell them where to get one.

The federal government supports about 4,000 clinics serving more than 4 million poor women each year.

Faye Wattleton, president of Planned Parenthood Federation of America, said her organization's network of clinics would continue to counsel on abortion. She said she

Suspects arrested in hotel incident

Two men, who allegedly broke into the Settles Hotel and threw cement blocks off the top of the structure, were arrested after failing to leave the area where the crime was committed.

At 7 a.m. Thursday, the Big Spring Police Department received a call from a passerby, reporting unknown subjects throwing bricks from the top of the hotel, said department spokesperson Lt. Terry Chamness.

Three officers were dispatched to the scene but were unable to locate the perpetrators during a search of the building.

At 10:40 a.m., the police department received the second call and officers were again dispatched to the scene. Two male subjects were found in the area and, after questioning, were believed to be the perpetrators.

Billy Jake Ranier, 19, of Big Spring and Raymundo Gonzales, 20, also of Big Spring were arrested and charged with criminal trespass, said Chamness. The two men were released Thursday on $1,000 bond each.

The perpetrators were able to enter the dilapidated building because the owner of the hotel, Gil Caudra, has not complied with his agreement with the city to secure the building, said Assistant City Manager Tom Decell.

Caudra recently pleaded guilty in Howard County Court to city code violations and agreed to pay $6,000 in fines and arrange for repairs, including re-boarding of the doors and windows, completion of a fence around the structure and construction of a covered walkway in front of the hotel.

Thursday's arrest follows several block-throwing incidents that have left holes punched in the sidewalk surrounding the hotel.

Senate approves fast-track trade pact for Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush won authority from Congress today to conduct amendment-proof trade agreements with Mexico and other nations.

In a 59-36 vote, the Senate followed the House's lead in extending the so-called "fast-track" authority for two years.

Bush, in Boston today to deliver a speech on trade, had said he needed the fast-track power to proceed with talks to tear down barriers between the United States and Mexico and other trading partners.

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., led the opposition, saying a free trade zone with Mexico will destroy the ailing textile industry in his home state.

He said South Carolina could lose 1.4 million jobs in the next decade as companies move to Mexico where labor is cheap. "That is why we are so desperate," Hollings said during debate today.

The fast-track concept effectively bars Congress from changing a trade agreement once it is signed, forcing lawmakers to make a take-it-or-leave-it vote on a negotiated treaty.

The House approved the proposal Thursday, 231-192.

Sen. Don Riegle, D-Mich., who also opposed Bush, said he will not abandon his fight. He intends to push legislation that will allow Congress to change any agreement with Mexico to ensure American jobs and the environment are protected.

"This U.S.-Mexico free trade agreement is really a jobs program for Mexico," he said today. "What is clear, the United States needs a jobs program for this country."

Bush on Thursday said he "couldn't be more pleased" with the House action on an issue he has called vitally important to the hemisphere's future.

Bush says foreign governments would refuse to talk with the United States about tariff-reducing measures unless U.S. trade negotiators had the flexibility and power to make deals — without having them changed by Congress.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and a crucial Bush ally in the trade fight, said the vote was a "momentous occasion for the Senate," determining whether the United States chooses to "move forv or backward as a cou ould be no mistake abo he stakes are high," Bents id before the vote.

Bentsen supports the view advanced by U.S. and Mexican governments — as well as the business community — that a free trade agreement removing tariffs will benefit the United States by opening up new export markets and boosting the economy.

Rock and plant filter system may solve sewage problems

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

COLORADO CITY — An idea for outer space has some practical applications in sewage treatment at a cheap cost in rural areas, area officials learned at a seminar Thursday.

A rock-plant filter system developed by NASA for use by astronauts in space absorbs sewage by using plants and does not rely on chemicals or moving parts, said Robert Kyle, president of Kyle Engineering Inc. of Dallas, at the seminar organized by the Big Country Resource Conservation and Development.

The 12-county RC&D helps find private and public grants for projects, ranging from conservation to economic development, that are approved and prioritized by an executive board composed of representatives from each county. Attending the seminar in the C.C. Thompson room were 37 people.

Two members of the RC&D board who were at the meeting said there is interest in this area in looking further into the rock-plant filter system, which uses bullrushes and reeds to soak substances from sewage.

"The maintenance of this rock-reed sewer system in next to nothing," said Michael Hoch, the Glasscock representative on the RC&D board. "It uses no electricity, no moving parts. It just uses the plants."

Hoch said it may fit into plans by officials in Glasscock County, population 1,447, to construct water sewage and water treatment systems in Garden City. Hoch estimates there are about 300 people in Garden City.

RC&D member Bobby Cathey of Howard County said they may look into the system as a possible upgrade to the water sewage plant in Coahoma, population 1,133.

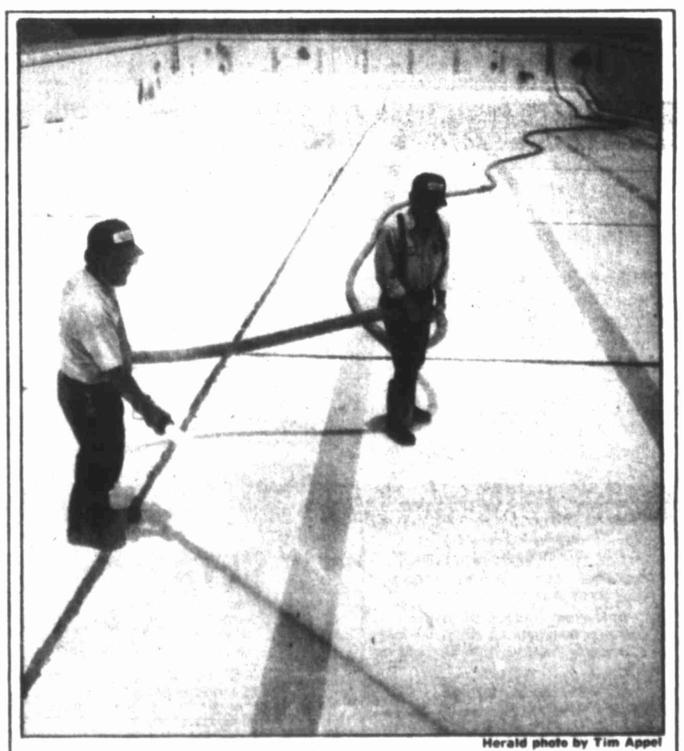

"I feel like Coahoma might possibly have to update their's later on," Cathey said. "There's grant money there if you know how to apply for it and know how to get it."

A rock-plant filter addition to a plant serving about 1,000 people or a new rock-reed sewage plant for a community of about 300 people would cost up to $100,000 to construct, Kyle estimated. The system is ideal for communities that have the available land for the filter, he said. A filter could even be built for a single-family residence.

A plant being planned in Alvarado will require 18 acres of water treatment ponds and one acre for the rock-plant filter, Kyle said. A plant half that size that is opening in Whitney required about 10 acres.

Those are the only two rock-plant systems that have been planned in Texas and among only a few in the country, Kyle said. The Alvarado plant is expected to cost from $1 million to $1.5 million to construct while the Whitney plant cost about $700,000.

In Texas, $6.5 million in grants and $11.4 million in loans were given out by the U.S. Department of Agriculture Farmers Home Administration for water and sewer construction, said Charles B. Hart of USDA office in Temple, who also addressed the seminar. Interest rates vary from 5 to 6.75 percent, depending on qualifications and need, he said.

Governor looks for deal on jail overcrowding

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards hopes state and county officials can strike a deal over the thousands of state felons now crowding local jails.

Richards and lawmakers met Thursday with officials from counties that won a lawsuit over the inmate backlog.

She said progress was being made but stopped short of predicting that an agreement would be reached.

"I don't know whether it will or not. I do think, though, that we've made tremendous progress, and ... there's a whole new feeling of trust among the people who are involved in these discussions," she said.

"By and large, everything is very good. I just can't promise you that it's a done deal yet, because it isn't," said Richards.

Because of federal court population limits on the Texas prison system, some 9,000 state prison-bound felons now are being held in 54 county jails around the state.

Two lawsuits were filed against the state by counties over jail crowding.

Last June, state District Judge Joe Hart of Austin ruled that the state must pay 12 counties $40 per prisoner per day. The ruling could mean the state owes some $110 million to the dozen counties that sued, although the state is appealing.

In addition, U.S. District Judge James DeAnda ruled in February that the state must set up a $750,000 fund for Harris County to use to rent jail space in other counties to house the 1,200 state prisoners it is holding. The state may be required to pay more, and it is appealing that ruling, too.

The Senate has approved — and the House is considering — a bill that would make a deal with counties over the inmates.

It would acknowledge the state's duty to accept those prisoners and authorize a one-time payment to counties. It also would require that, after Sept. 1, 1995, the state accept all felons from county jails within 60 days of prison processing paperwork being completed.

Parks, wildlife panel adopts fee increases

AUSTIN (AP) — The cost to hunt, fish, camp or just visit a state park will increase under fees approved by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission.

The new fees, expected to produce from between $20 million to $30 million in additional revenue per year, take effect Sept. 1.

Parks and Wildlife officials have said more money is needed to improve the state parks, offset slumping or flat revenues from hunting licenses and the cigarette tax, and wean the agency from general tax funds.

State parks received about 21 million visits last year, officials said.

Under the new fees, entering a state park will increase from $2 per vehicle to a range of $2 to $6.

Resident hunting and fishing licenses will increase to $13 each; a $3 increase in the hunting license and a $5 increase for the fishing permit.

A combination hunting and fishing license will increase from $15 to $25.

Registration fees will rise from $12 to $18 for a motorboat under 16-feet long and $18 to $27 for boats 16-feet to 26-feet.

Campsite fees will range from $6 to $16 depending on utilities offered.

The commission took no action on a proposed annual $10 fee to use state parks — called a conservation permit. A bill allowing the commission to adopt the fee is being considered by Gov. Ann Richards.

The commission also adopted hunting and fishing regulations for the 1991-92 season, which also take effect Sept. 1.

Richards defends panel appointment

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards, who says she enjoys hunting and fishing, appeared before the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission to try and quiet a furor raised by one of her appointees to the panel.

Before a packed crowd Thursday, Richards recalled when she hunted with her father. "I remember those hunts fondly. With the smells of kerosene oil, wet wool jackets and gun oil mixed with tall tales and men's laughter," she said.

Richards added, "Of course, much of my courtship was spent cleaning birds taken on hunts organized by my future husband."

She was on hand because of a remark made last month by Commissioner Terese Hershey of Houston, who criticized a Parks and Wildlife hunting promotion program by saying, "I think I've done well by not throwing up."

Parades to salute veterans

Parades, parties and picnics will mark the traditional start of summer this Memorial Day Weekend, which promises poignant remembrances of the 26 Texans killed in our nation's latest war.

One of the biggest observances will take place Saturday at Fort Hood, where officials at the world's largest military installation are expecting a crowd of 100,000 for its "Heroes' Homecoming" celebration.

The event will salute U.S. military personnel who served during Operation Desert Storm "whether they were over there or over here," said Sam Baker, festival spokesman.

"The United States has the finest war technology and the most finely tuned military in the world, and we need to celebrate that," Baker said.

Other large celebrations are scheduled in Austin, Dallas, Houston and San Antonio with smaller events planned in cities, towns and military installations across the state.

Secretary of the Army Michael P.W. Stone will address the Fort Hood gathering just inside the fort's main gate, and Lee Greenwood will perform an hourlong concert sure to include "God Bless the U.S.A."

Chaplain Col. Don Breland will lead the crowd in a moment of remembrance for those killed in the Persian Gulf War.

"This Memorial Day celebration is particularly important because of the Persian Gulf War and the superior performance of our military forces and their leadership," Baker said. "That leadership and performance kept our casualties much lower than anyone could have imagined. It's something Americans can be proud of."

Texas A&M University is planning to salute the troops this fall.

Because the school is between spring and summer sessions, it has designated September "Desert Storm Month," a celebration culminating in the Sept. 28 football game in College Station against Southwestern Louisiana, where 600 students, faculty and staff served in Operation Desert Storm.

"We wanted to honor servicemen and women, but being that we're not in session, we decided a monthlong celebration would be a good substitute," said Mary Jo Powell, a university spokeswoman.

Several of the 100 squadrons of the Confederate Air Force will perform in Memorial Day Weekend airshows, including one in Breckenridge.

In Houston, a parade, bands and a POW-MIA candlelight ceremony Saturday will mark the city's annual Memorial Day celebration, dedicated this year to the servicemen and women who served in Desert Storm.

House OKs property tax exemption change

AUSTIN (AP) — The House approved a proposed constitutional amendment to allow voters to save their partial homestead exemptions from school district property taxes.

"Your homeowners' property taxes will go up unless we pass this constitutional amendment," said Rep. Paul Colbert, D-Houston.

The measure, which earlier passed the Senate, won approval with a vote of 124-17. It was returned to senators for consideration of House changes.

If it wins final legislative approval, the proposal will go on an Aug. 10 statewide ballot.

The bill is needed because the state's new school finance law created countywide education taxing regions for school districts. A minimum local property tax is imposed, and revenue is shifted among school districts within the regions.

However, the governing boards for the new taxing regions don't have the same authority as school boards currently do to grant homestead exemptions.

Of the state's 1,050 school districts, 259 currently grant homestead exemptions.

The school finance law was passed after poor school districts sued the state, and the Texas Supreme Court ordered lawmakers to even out education funding available to school districts.

The House also tentatively approved a bill that would give teachers and other public school employees access to a statewide group health insurance plan. The state would put no money into the program.

In other Thursday action, the House:

— Gave its final approval, 115-23, to bill to honor slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. with a full state holiday. The measure, which earlier passed the Senate, returns to senators for consideration of amendments.

— Tentatively approved a bill meant to prevent professional athletes from simultaneously drawing a salary and receiving worker's compensation payments when injured.

— Tentatively approved authorization for universities to collect a general service fee of up to $12 per semester hour, up from the current $6.

— Tentatively approved a bill allowing Texas A&M University system schools to increase their student recreational fee from the current maximum of $35 per semester to $50. Texas A&M students voted in 1987 for the higher fee, and the Student Senate affirmed the vote in 1989.

— Tentatively approved a bill that would create a defense to prosecution for unintentionally doing something that injured a child, elderly person or invalid.

Spousal rape bill passes on voice vote

AUSTIN (AP) — House and Senate sponsors have reservations about their bill to make it easier to prosecute someone who sexually assaults his or her spouse.

But with only four days remaining in the legislative session, it appeared they would take what they have.

Senate sponsor Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, said the measure "makes it a bit easier for someone who has been raped to file a suit and be successful against their spouse."

The measure cleared the Senate on voice vote Thursday, after Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown added an amendment which said prosecution against a spouse would require "a showing of bodily injury or the threat of serious bodily injury."

Brown, R-Lake Jackson, said the amendment would enable prosecutors "to make a clear determination" whether to pursue a complaint.

Sen. Ellis said, "Obviously, it's not the best of all worlds. I would have preferred the language that came over in the original House bill. I would prefer there be no conditions."

He said accepting Brown's amendment was the key to Senate passage.

"I think today, for the bill to make it through the Senate by unanimous vote, is a major policy shift," Ellis said.

"I think my colleagues in the Senate who have gone on record in support of it at least showed there is some sensitivity to the fact that rape is rape," he said.

House sponsor, Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, said of the amendment, "I don't like it a bit."

"It makes it harder for people to make good, clean arrests. It makes it harder for DAs to prosecute," she said.

But she added that she would accept the change, which would send the bill to the governor.

Ms. Danburg said although Brown and Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, have worked hard to cultivate a pro-victim, anti-crime image, "They obviously could care less about the victims of crime when those victims are married to their assailant."

Ms. Danburg said Lyon would not let the bill out of committee without the amendment. "Who's he trying to protect? Rapists?"

Lyon said through a spokesman that Ms. Danburg, "After further checking out the truth, has now publicly retracted her statement and has personally apologized to me."

Ms. Danburg said, "I didn't go that far," but confirmed that she had apologized.

Senators also approved a bill to provide a procedure for increasing prison capacity, which has been set at 95 percent of capacity because of a federal court order against overcrowding.

Students oppose honorary degree

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — President Bush will make his first visit to Yale University, his alma mater, since becoming president and campus protests are planned.

The visit was confirmed by law enforcement and other sources familiar with planning for Monday's graduation.

Bush, a 1948 Yale graduate, is expected to get an honorary degree and speak to the graduating class. Most years, Yale does not have a commencement speaker.

Neither the White House nor the Yale administration has confirmed Bush's visit. It is a Yale tradition not to reveal the identity of honorary degree recipients until the day of the ceremony.

Bush's last trip to Yale was as vice president on Aug. 7, 1987, when he attended the dedication of a device used for nuclear research at the university.

The last time Yale had a commencement speaker was also the last time a president received an honorary degree — 1962.

Ill youth barred from graduation

CHICAGO (AP) — A 400-pound high school senior with an inoperable brain tumor has been barred from attending his graduation because of his "size and health," the principal says.

The presence of Jim Stan at the June 14 commencement would be an interruption, said Reginald Brown, principal of George Washington High School on the city's southeast side.

Stan, who uses a wheelchair and experienced a weight gain because of medication for his cancer, has been tutored at home since he was a junior, when doctors diagnosed him and gave him six months to live, said his mother, Mary Ann.

The thought of attending graduation has kept Stan going and he was devastated by Brown's decision, she said.

Brown, principal of the school for only three weeks, said Stan's presence would cause an extraordinary problem "considering (his) size and health."

Stan's nurse, Doris Johnson, said his poor health would prohibit him from staying for the entire ceremony.

Abducted twin united with parents

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A couple were reunited today with their 2-week-old son, who was abducted from a hospital nursery a day after his premature birth. A nurse in whose car the baby was found was arrested, authorities said.

Jerry and Sandra Chavez cuddled Kevin, a twin, at Presbyterian Hospital after he was found safe Thursday night in a car that was pulled over on an Albuquerque interstate.

The infant was abducted May 10 from the nursery at Memorial Medical Center in Las Cruces, a day after he and his brother were born 4½ weeks premature. Police said Kevin, who weighed 5 pounds at birth, was taken by a woman posing as a medical student.

Acting on a tip, the FBI arrested Bridget M. Denny-Shaffer, 36, a nurse from Gallup, as she drove into Albuquerque on Interstate 40. The infant was found in the car, said FBI spokesman Doug Beldon.

Allied relief forces advance into Dohuk

ZAKHO, Iraq (AP) — An allied relief force today headed for Dohuk to begin restoring electricity and other basic services to the Iraqi regional capital to help smooth the way for the return of some of the last Kurdish refugees.

The team of 24 soldiers and one civilian relief official will be followed a day later by 143 others, including an armed "small security contingent," said U.S. Navy Lt. Katy Wright, a spokeswoman for allied relief headquarters.

Dohuk was home to 300,000 Kurds before a failed Kurdish rebellion drove them, and hundreds of thousands of others, toward Turkey and Iran. Most have returned home, but fear of Iraqi troops kept away residents of Dohuk, which is excluded from an allied-protected zone.

Tensions remained high in the allied-created security zone in northern Iraq, where 500 Kurdish men on Thursday stormed an Iraqi police station in this border town, eight miles south of the Turkish border.

No injuries were reported from Thursday's attack in Zakho, and the U.S. military went to the aid of Iraqi police. The incident was one of a growing number of clashes between the Iraqis and the Kurds.

Ms. Wright, who spoke from Incerlik air base in Turkey, said that the allied relief workers in Iraq include electricians, sanitation experts, work crews, explosive ordnance disposal teams and an armed security contingent.

The larger allied force that will arrive in Dohuk Saturday will begin sanitation operations, hook up power to the city's hospital, set up water pumps and remove rubble and explosive hazards.

The city, 25 miles south of Turkey, was damaged during the Kurdish rebellion that followed the Gulf War and by the subsequent Iraqi crackdown.

The team will include a 77-member medical group of doctors, nutritional experts, nurses and medics. Military police will provide security for the team and its equipment.

Turkey's semi-official Anatolia news agency said Iraqi Gen. Nushwan Danoun, Baghdad's liaison with the allies, accompanied the force to Dohuk.

"Varying tasks will keep them there from seven to 21 days," Ms. Wright said.

Western aid workers said Thursday, however, that Iraq's Ministry of Health gave them and the allied troops 60 days starting today to work in Dohuk.

"After that we're supposed to pack our bags," said Stuart Willcuts, an official with Northwest Medical Teams, a Portland, Ore.-based medical group that will be working in Dohuk.

Allied officials have said that their entering Dohuk did not imply they were extending their security zone in northern Iraq. But they will have the only troops in the city.

Rebels within miles of Addis Ababa

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Advancing rebels tightened their grip on the capital today, claiming to have cut off all but one major highway leading to the city as the military tried to rally its disintegrating forces.

After their relentless gains caused President Mengistu Haile Mariam to flee the country Tuesday, the rebels claimed to have moved to within 12 miles of the capital to the west and seized a key town and highway southeast of Addis Ababa.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman, however, said the rebels "have repeatedly given us assurances they would not march on the capital" before U.S.-mediated peace talks scheduled to open in London on Monday.

Both sides promised to attend, but the rebels refuse to heed the government call for a pre-negotiations cease-fire.

Threats to the capital culminate a three-month offensive by the main Tigrean rebel coalition, the Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Democratic Front, that has garnered its best gains in 16 years of fighting in this Horn of Africa nation of 51 million people.

Ireland plans ban on pit bulldogs

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Ireland plans to join Britain in banning pit bull terriers.

"We are going to have a total ban on the ownership, breeding and import of pit bull terriers. That means that all of the animals here will have to be eliminated," Environment Minister Padraig Flynn said Thursday.

Details of the government's plan for implementing the ban were not released.

There are an estimated 2,000 pit bull terriers in Ireland.

Following a public outcry over a pit bull terrier attack on a 6-year-old girl, the British government announced Wednesday that it would ban the dogs and order the destruction of most of the 10,000 in that country.

British Home Secretary Kenneth Baker told the House of Commons American pit bull terriers and other fighting dogs "can be completely friendly and docile one minute and complete killers the next. They can't be controlled."

Hundreds of thousands mourn

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Rajiv Gandhi's body was committed to flames today in an ancient rite that by Hindu tradition freed his soul from earth and from the political violence that scarred his nation and ended his life.

The former prime minister's 20-year-old son, Rahul, lighted the funeral pyre of logs atop a flower-draped brick platform near a memorial to Gandhi's mother, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, who also fell victim to assassins.

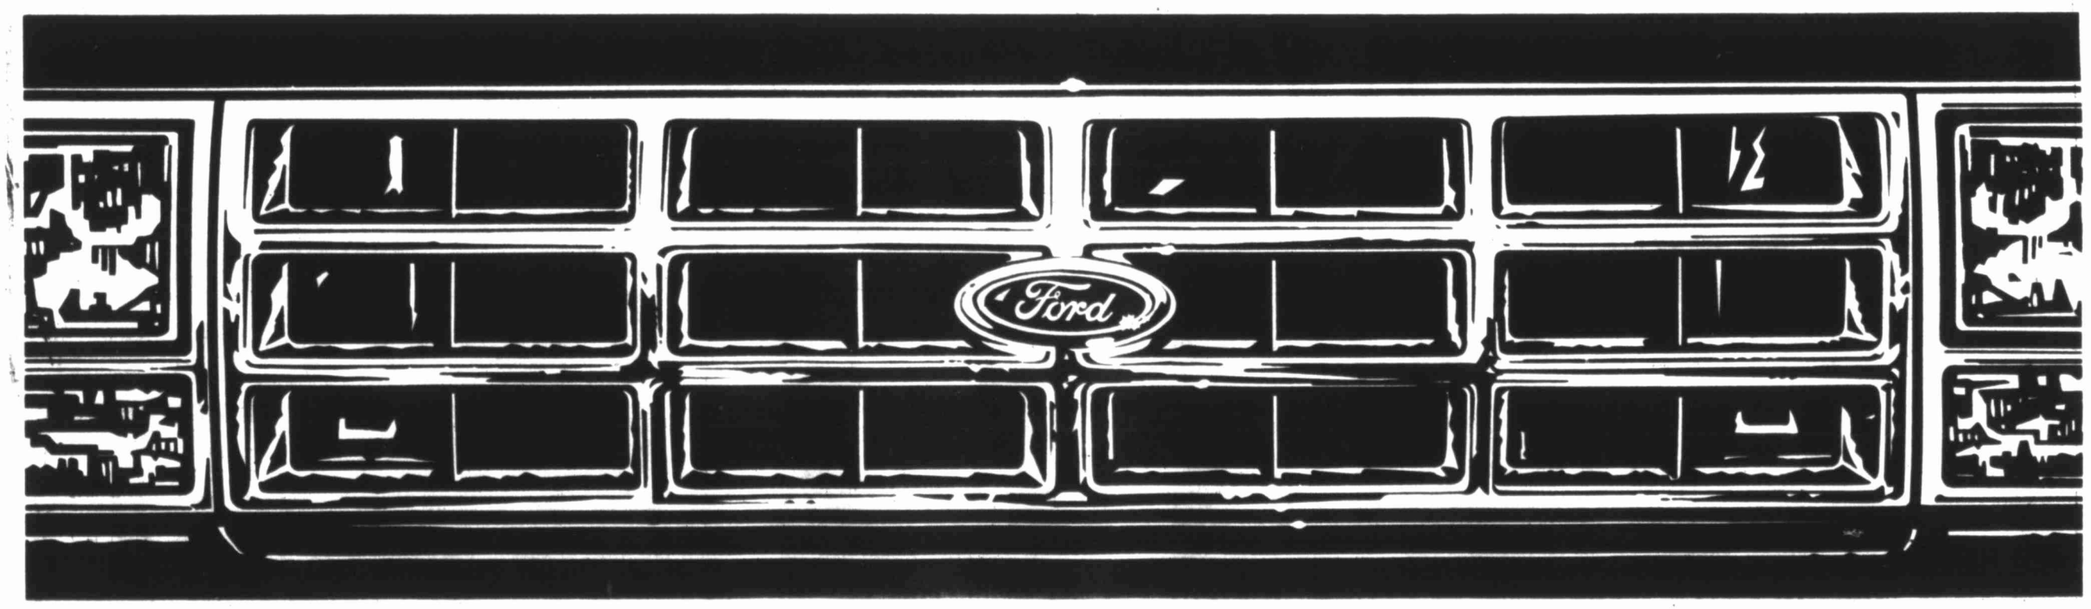

More than 150,000 people lined a 10-mile funeral procession through the capital for the funeral for the scion of independent India's most important political family.

The procession ended at a riverside cremation site next to a memorial to Gandhi's mother, whose killing by her Sikh bodyguards in 1984 thrust her son into power for five years.

Legal options are not state secrets

Many civil rights proponents were stunned by a decision of the Supreme Court on the issue of abortion Thursday.

By some fairly convoluted reasoning, the Court decided five to four to uphold an administrative ban on discussion of abortion at any clinic that receives federal funds.

Clinic personnel are required to tell anyone who asks about abortion that the clinic staff "does not consider abortion an appropriate method of family planning."

That's all very well and good; most people would agree with that statement. But if a woman is asking about abortion, it's probably safe to say it's too late for much planning. At that point she's got two options — to have the child or not.

If abortion were an illegal procedure, doctors, nurses and counselors would be justified in not giving out the requested information. But abortions are legal under many circumstances. To deny a woman information about a legal procedure is inconsistant with civil liberties as recognized and practiced in this country.

Middle and upperclass women are free to get abortion information from the doctor of their choice. Unfortunately, poorer women often do not have that option. Ninety-eight percent of all family planning clinics are partially funded by the federal government. For many poor women and many teenagers, this is the only source of information.

Abortion is a highly emotional issue and one that very few people are neutral about. There has been no clear mandate from the voters either way. Until there is, abortion remains a decision that every woman must make for herself.

It makes sense to allow a woman to discuss the issue intelligently with her doctor and with a trained counselor before making up her mind. Insisting that abortion is not an option is unrealistic, untrue, and medically unsound.

Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., announced that she and other members of Congress would move quickly to introduce a bill canceling the regulation. We strongly support a public vote on the issue. A clearcut vote by elected representatives is a more democratic procedure than an administrative ban. This is a issue that deserves public debate.

The writer's art

Tangled and mangled sentences

James J. Kilpatrick

Putting together an English sentence is like packing a suitcase. It is best done in an orderly way. When we throw in everything helter-skelter, things get badly crumpled. So it is with writers who pack their prose in haste.

The misplacement of adjectives and adverbs causes much confusion. A couple of years ago The Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch reported that "the old women's workhouse is just south of the Jackson Pike jail," leaving readers to wonder about the new women's workhouse.

In Minnesota, the New Ulm Journal carried a classified ad offering a "huge selection of good boys clothes," which presumably are better than bad boys' clothes. Columnist Andy Rooney had the same thought. For years, he said, "Brooks Brothers has set the standard for good men's clothes."

In the same vein, Modern Maturity carried an advertisement: "Your unwanted man's wristwatch could be worth hundreds of dollars!" In Omaha, a reader of the World-Herald commented that some collectors have expressed interest "in old men's watches." It's about time. Headline in Salem, Ore.: "Archbishop Favors Larger Women's Role." Small women may not apply.

In Seneca, S.C., the weekly Journal carried an ad from the local Day Care Center: "Wanted: Four year old teacher. Must be self-motivated." In Jacksonville, Fla., the Times-Union chronicled awards in the field of education: "In Green Cove Springs, Bennett Elementary School's Teacher of the Year is Sharon Warfuel, a third-grade educable mentally-handicapped teacher."

From The Indianapolis Star: "Fourteen years of flat beer sales turned around last year in Germany."

In Buffalo, N.Y., the News carried a light story on a 6-year-old girl who was temporarily barred from a marching and twirling competition because of a flawed birth certificate. "Sure enough, somebody at the San Diego hospital where she was born erroneously had typed in 'male.'"

Every textbook on the writing art warns us against the dangling clause. These hang like bra straps out of the poorly packed sentence. In February, The Miami Herald wrote about a compassionate police officer who rescued a couple of old dogs: "Smeared with oil and infested with fleas, the detective bundled up Benji and Bandit and carted them off to the Broward County Animal Control Shelter." The policeman's lot indeed is not a happy one.

This was from The Associated Press, in a story last year about a man who deserted from the U.S. Army in 1959: "On returning to the United States last month, the army arrested him at the airport . . ."

In Seattle an elderly woman died in an automobile accident. An autopsy indicated that she had suffered a cardiac rupture: "After suffering the attack, her car sped out of control and struck another vehicle near East Mercer Street."

An accident in Florida led to a lawsuit. Foreman & Associates, a public relations firm representing the winning lawyers, put out a press release that described the collision: "Driving while intoxicated, Culver's automobile killed David at the intersection of Dixie Highway and Hypolux Road."

An evangelist placed an ad in the Greenville (S.C.) News: "After many days of fasting and prayer, God has touched Bro. Terrell with a fresh anointing." Very kind of God.

Last July The Associated Press reported from Rome that three famous tenors would sing in a fund-raising concert on behalf of the World Cup soccer championship. "An avid soccer fan, Pavarotti's home team, Italy, failed last week to make the finals."

We must learn to capture the errant prepositional phrase. Last year the Knight-Ridder News Service interviewed Traci Lords, a former porn queen: "My idea of a wild Friday night is to drink wine and cook spaghetti in my underwear." It seems an odd container, but interesting.

We ought also to watch for sentence constructions that may carry more than one meaning. The Associated Press in March marked the 50th anniversary of certain events in World War II: "In London, the government announces that men too old for military duty and women will be drafted for factory work." Served the old geezers right.

Let us remark with a raised eyebrow a classified ad in the Senior Spectrum of Nevada: "Christian lady will pet and house sit. Excellent credentials."

In Las Vegas, a fast-food eatery used its cheeseburger as a fund-raising attraction: " 'Help a Las Vegas child. Eat one today!' " It's one way to control the population.

Note to those who entered the Great Simile Contest of 1991: I am still madly judging similes for slippery, serene, rough and graceful, and will announce winners soon. Meanwhile, the 800 contestants who submitted "slippery as a soapy baby's butt," or variations thereon, can forget about winning the prize.

Weapons frequently outlast friendships

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

Capitol report

WASHINGTON (AP) — Because weapons can prove more durable than the governments that get them, U.S. arms deals abroad sometimes linger to haunt the salesman.

Equipment lost by a U.S. ally in war or revolution can later equip a hostile regime. American weapons from Vietnam turned up in Nicaragua; arms sold to the shah of Iran became the ayatollah's.

"Our weapons have a tendency to last longer than our friendships," said Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark.

Iraq shopped East and West for the arsenal with which it waged war. In defeat, the Iraqis may have held onto some U.S. Hawk missiles, among 300 originally sold to Kuwait and seized in the invasion. The Pentagon doesn't know how many were destroyed in the air war.

But along with the problems come diplomatic, military and economic arguments for weapons sales abroad.

They can help cement ties with nations that support U.S. policy and interests, in the Middle East and elsewhere. They can be used to maintain military balance in troubled regions.

And in a time of declining U.S. military budgets, the revenue involved is important in maintaining American defense industries. It also keeps prices down; without it, Pentagon procurement would cost more.

The dilemmas that go with the arms trade were never more evident than in the Persian Gulf War, when some of the weapons used by Iraq were produced in nations that joined the coalition against Baghdad.

Those complexities have been on display in the three months since the war ended.

"There's one thing in this country that people really are homing in on right now and feel strong about, and that is arms exports, particularly to Third World nations," Bumpers told Defense Secretary Dick Cheney at a budget hearing this week.

"Right," said Cheney. "But again, senator, I'd make the point that it's not been U.S. arms that fueled the war with Iraq."

Weapons from the Soviet Union, China, North Korea and other nations did that, he said, and any Middle East arms restraints would have to apply to them, as well as the United States and its Western allies, to be meaningful.

There are demands in Congress that the Bush administration seek such limits, to halt sales of materials that can be used for nuclear and chemical weapons, and of missiles to deliver them, and to clamp controls on the sale of sophisticated conventional arms.

The administration emphasis has been on weapons of mass destruction, but Cheney said at the Senate hearing that it is shaping a policy that would limit conventional weapons traffic too.

It would not be a ban. "If we're going to have an intelligent policy, it can't just be arms sales are bad," he said.

Cheney said the administration was working to shape an agreement to control the flow of armaments into the Middle East. "It's probably best put together at this point quietly and through normal diplomatic channels," he said. "It is an issue that is being actively worked within the administration and in consultation with our allies."

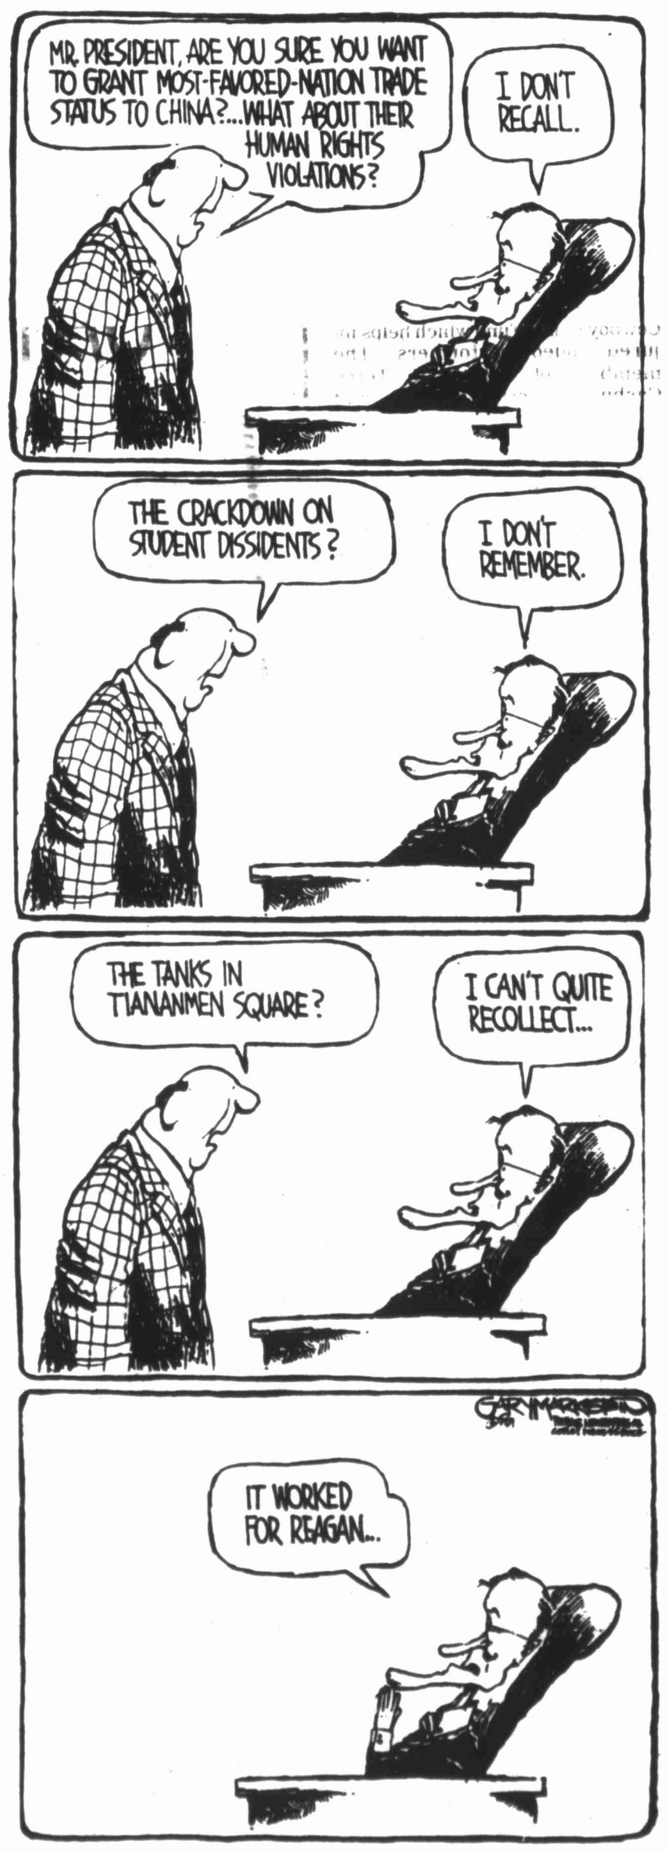

Sen. Joseph R. Biden, D-Del., wants legislation that would require the administration to draft an arms sales control plan and seek its adoption at a conference of the nations that have supplied most Middle East arms — the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain, France and China.

There's no chance of getting that passed, let alone signed, but it's a way to raise an issue on which Democrats complain the administration has been sending mixed signals.

In the House, Rep. Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., the majority leader, and Rep. Dante B. Fascell, D-Fla., chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, have proposed a moratorium on U.S. arms sales in the Middle East pending negotiations for international restraints.

But decisions on this one won't be made in Congress, they will be made by Bush. "Nothing will happen . . . without the administration's leadership," Biden said in proposing his bill. "Absent that, nothing is going to happen."

Remote controls click with viewers

Lewis Grizzard

I've noticed something odd about a few of the hotel rooms in which I have stayed recently. The remote control devices for the televisions have been bolted down on the bedside tables.

What made this even more intriguing was the fact the televisions themselves weren't attached to anything.

This led me to conclude either hotel management felt the remote control devices were more valuable than the televisions, or nobody could pull off the task of stealing a television out of a hotel room.

I think my first conclusion was the correct one. Anybody who really wanted to steal a television from a hotel room could do so with a little creativity.

I would get one of those work shirts with my name sewn above the left pocket. To make myself look even more official I would get a clip board with a pencil attached to it by a string.

Then, I would obtain one of those hand trucks and wheel the TV right out through the lobby.

Even if an assistant manager said to a desk clerk, "Hey, do you think that guy is stealing one of our televisions?" the desk clerk likely would reply, "Of course not. He has a clip board with a pencil on a string. Quite obviously he is an official television repair person."

So, have remote control devices become more valuable than the TVs themselves?

Indeed. Where would we be today were it not for the remote control device, which I like to refer to as "the magic clicker."

These things absolutely amaze me. They are small enough to hold in your hand and they have no wires.

Yet, with a clicker, you own the world. You can race up and down the staggering list of channels we have today without ever getting out of your chair.

What did we do before the magic clicker? We had to get up, walk over to our television sets and change the channels by hand, that's what.

Can you imagine having four-score channels, as many of us have today, and having to get up every time we want to check out what is on the other channels?

This could lead to anger and frustration and ultimately to anarchy.

Take what happened in Kuwait.

Sources have indicated to me that during the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait, Iraqi soldiers went door to door in Kuwaiti neighborhoods not only raping and pillaging but also confiscating magic clickers by the thousands.

Iraqis, who had no magic clickers before, were tired of changing channels by hand.

When the war ended and Iraqis went back home, there was no electrical power to run their televisions, but if the juice ever does come back on, Iraqi viewers will be able, with one push of their magic clickers, to switch from government-controlled Baghdad news reports to something of substance, like "Mr. Ed" reruns, where Ed whinnies in Arabic. Meanwhile, I'm still trying to figure out what sort of American actually would steal a magic clicker out of a hotel room if it weren't bolted down.

Probably the same sort who would steal hotel towels or purposely not put the shower curtain inside the tub while showering.

As Conrad Hilton once said, "You can't trust nobody."

That's another reason the magic clicker is so valuable. It allows us to sit happily upon our butts in front of the TV and go from Peter Arnett reporting for CNN to Mr. Ed in a heartbeat when we want to find substance, too.

You can just about believe every word a talking horse has to say.

Letters

Letters to the editor on issues of general interest always are welcomed by the Big Spring Herald and always are printed if these guidelines are followed:

Letters should be 350 words or less, typewritten if possible, and double-spaced. If not, the handwriting must be legible to reduce chances for mistakes.

They are subject to editing, but the essence of the writer's message will not be altered. Letters exceeding the 350-word limit will be cut.

They must be signed, free of libelous statements and in good taste. Political endorsements won't be accepted during a campaign; candidates are allowed a single letter during a campaign.

Lions honor Dorothy Garrett

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer

The Big Spring Evening Lions Club has named philanthropist Dorothy Garrett as 1991 Citizen of the Year.

Club officials said Dorothy has demonstrated tremendous commitment to the community through her support of programs and development projects. She was honored at the club's recent 35th anniversary celebration.

In the history book "Howard County 1882-1982," Dorothy wrote that her family, the Dublins, moved to Big Spring from Odessa when she was 6 years old.

"The family was not immediately accepted into the neighborhood," she wrote, "because everbody thought we were non-union railroad scabs."

Dorothy's parents, Charles and Viola Dublin, had decided to move when a drought threatened their ranch. For years they lived next door to the family of Horace Garrett, grandson of Dora Roberts.

Although she earned a scholarship for college, Dorothy returned to Big Spring for school because of the era's widespread financial difficulties. While working at State National Bank as a young woman, Dorothy became engaged to Horace Garrett.

Tragedy struck suddenly when Dorothy, while on a trip out of town, contracted polio. After living in an iron lung for three years, she was miraculously able — with help from braces — to walk down the aisle as Horace's bride.

Like many newlyweds, the couple could not afford a car. Dorothy remembered their enjoyment at taking an occasional trip to Midland and seeing movies for 10 cents a ticket. Her husband spent much time on his grandmother's Forsan ranch.

Horace died in 1967 at age 56. His former post as chairman of the board of directors of the Dora Roberts Foundation, passed to Dorothy. The directorship now rests with her daughter, Sue Partee.

Dorothy has supported many community programs, including Mobile Meals, Christmas in April, the Salvation Army and many handicapped individuals. She has generously given to the Big Spring Humane Society, Howard College, Rape Crisis/Victim Services, the Westside Day Care Center, Rotary International, Big Spring Main Street and Vietnam veterans' organizations.

DOROTHY GARRETT

Recently, when Dorothy heard there was increased oil production in Forsan, she is reported to have said, "Great, now I can help more people."

Through even difficult times Dorothy managed to keep her sense of humor intact.

"Life has been wonderful in Big Spring," she wrote in the history volume. "But our family has never qualified for the Old Settler's Picnic."

Graduates celebrate a new beginning

By BARBIE LELEK

Graduation is a special time for all seniors if for no other reason than what it stands for. The community has also chosen to honor our graduates this year. On May 8 all graduating serniors from Colorado City, Westbrook and Loraine were presented with windbreaker jackets. The jackets are black with the Nocona boots logo on the back and seniors '91 written on the front. The jackets are a gift from Wood's Boots and Shoes and Nocona Boots. The Fort Wood Cafe honored our seniors by inviting them to a free meal at the cafe after Baccalaureate services May 19.

The Baccalaureate service was held Sunday at the high school auditorium. Reverend John Farris of the St. Luke Methodist Church brought a fun and interesting message which kept the audience entertained. The title of the message was the Pentecost Baccalaureate Sunday.

Tammy Wagoner, '92 Student Council Chaplain brought a short devotional and prayer, and CISD Superintendent Don Nimmo offered the benediction.

Calvary Baptist Church members were privileged to be a part of the annual graduate service which is a tradition which is held every year. The seniors dressed in their robes and square hats were made the center of attention as they were presented a NIV bible from the church and the object of the pastor's sermon. Calvary seniors are: Sharon Chambers, Jeremy Strain, Nat Gabba, Tammie Blair, Christie Blair and Jason Lawson. ★ ★ ★

The popular country music group Mason Dixon once again entertained Colorado City folks at Fort Wood May 13. The group sang such hits as "When Karen Comes Around." Another hit "3935 Westend Avenue" was enjoyed by the crowd as local children were used to help sing the popular tune. After the concert the trio gave away goodies donated by several supporters of the group. Wood's Boots was kind enough to donate a pair of Justin Boots to some lucky winner.

The group tours the country doing free concerts and donating the funds from donations to the Cowboy Crisis Fund which helps injured rodeo performers. The members of the group Terry Casburn, Jerry Dengler, and Frank Gilligan spent a great while after the concert signing autographs, taking pictures and visiting with the local fans.

Being the only friend of a bore

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I am at the end of my rope. Actually, I am mad at myself because I just came home from another boring evening. I am a 74-year-old retired widower with time on my hands. I belong to a golf club where I hang out to kibitz with the card players.

A retired professional man about my age, also a widower, also kills time at the club. I felt sorry for him because he was always alone, so I started having lunch with him — then he suggested we have dinner together (Dutch), so I said OK. Now I can't get rid of him.

He is the most boring person I've ever met. He talks about himself, his investments, his assets, his this, his that, and no matter how hard I try to get off his favorite subject (himself), he manages to get back on it.

I can't get rid of this obnoxious guy. He sticks like glue, and doesn't have one other friend at the club. Everybody avoids him because he is so egotistical and boring.

If you can solve this problem, Abby, you are a genius. For obvious reasons, I can't sign my name or location. Sign me ... TRAPPED

DEAR TRAPPED: You could do yourself and your boring friend an enormous favor if you sat him down and told him very frankly that he would not be so lonely if he made a few major changes in his personality.

Tell him that nobody wants to listen to a person who talks about nothing but himself and his assets. If he's all that well-heeled financially, he could benefit enormously from a few sessions with a psychologist. The truth may hurt, but it could also solve your problem.

A recent Moss Elementary Parents and Teachers Association meeting honored students and parents for achievements during the 1991-92 school year. Lana Schooler was awarded the Outstanding Parent Volunteer Award, and more than 300 students received trophies or certificates for their accomplishments.

Honors for elementary students

Moss Elementary honored outstanding students during the last 1991-92 Parents and Teachers Association meeting recently and presented the first annual Outstanding Parent Volunteer award to Lana Schooler.

"This was such a surprise, but I became suspicious when I saw those four teachers (walk to the podium). Those are the four teachers I've worked the most with," Schooler said.

The teachers, Betty Addy, Silvia Slaten, Jeannine McKimmey and Marva Forman, presented Schooler with a plaque commemorating her five years of volunteer service to Moss Elementary. She was also presented with a needle point picture of a poem she wrote about children. Pam Moss, secretary for Anderson Kindergarten Center, made the 16-by-20 picture and framed the finished work for presentation at the meeting.

"I do all this for the kids. I've got best friends here, I know them all by name, and I love the kids," Schooler said.

She was recognized for her contributions, including volunteering as room mother, fund-raising for the PTA, substitute teaching, coordinating the annual talent show at Moss Elementary and writing the school newsletter.

Students were also rewarded for many achievements during this academic year, including 82 students who received straight As, qualifying for the Principal's Honor Roll. Twenty-two students received perfect attendance certificates, and the students who participated in the school reading program received trophies.

Dawna Kirkpatrick and Christina Martinez received $50 savings bonds for winning the Carmen Labbe award, named after a Moss Elementary teacher who died in 1986. Three students, Christina Matinez, Farrah Schooler and Keith Wright, received the Presidential Academic Fitness Award and received certificates of achievement and letters from President Bush.

Parent volunteers received certificates to honor their work, and Ronnie Moss, Moss Elementary principal, said those awards will become annual.

Roxy Belew presented 187 trophies to the school's top readers. Small trophies were given to the 158 students who read between 100 and 199 books, and larger trophies were presented to the 27 students who read more than 200 books.

Second-grader Courtney Wegner read 559 books, making her the top reader in the program. Her brother, first-grader Braden Wegner, placed second by reading 518 books. They are the children of Twila and Robert Wegner.

Moss's total for the reading program was 35,586 books, and Belew said the students surpassed last year's total of 140 trophies.

Howard College students get scholarships

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Howard College students Mary Martin, Karen McCormick and Angela Samaniego are the recipients of scholarships offered as a result of Senate Bill 1351 passed by the 1989 Texas legislative session.

Martin and McCormick are recipients in the scholarship program for Rural Professional Nursing Students. Samaniego is a recipient in the scholarship program for Ethnic Minorities in Vocational Nursing.

The scholarship programs select recipients from a pool of nominees submitted by rural communities statewide. These nominees are outstanding graduating high school students or other worthy students who are entering the nursing professions.

These programs are designed to encourage students to enter health professions and serve rural communities in Texas. They are also designed to encourage students to become nurses, to challenge vocational nurses to continue their studies and become registered nurses and to entice nurses to work in Texas.

There are 10 scholarships, loan repayment and matching fund employment programs established by Senate Bill 1351.

Assignments just a call away

SULPHUR SPRINGS (AP) Students' homework assignments at Travis Elementary School are just a phone call away.

That's what began happening at the school where a new service provides a recording made by teachers who discuss class activities.

Parents can dial, listen for instructions on how to reach their child's teacher's recording and lean back while they hear comments.

"We're really just doing this as a pilot program here at Travis," says principal Billy Dan Lindley.

The idea came to Lindley after he attended educational conventions where similar projects have been discussed.

"We always discuss communications with parents," he said, adding that he considers parents' positive interaction with their children and their homework as top priority for not only education, but for good family relations. "It means everything — just that support. We try to let them know what we are doing here," he said.

At first, some of the teachers were a little hesitant about meeting head-on with a tape recorder, but they found they took to the project like ducks to water — at least like the professionals that they are.

Vasanawala to be honored at Duke

By MARSHA STURDIVANT

Ami S. Vasanawala, daughter of doctors Shreenivas K. and Kokila S. Vasanawala, Big Spring, will be honored for her academic accomplishments at the Grand Recognition Ceremony on June 2 at Duke University Chapel in Durham, N.C.

VASANAWALA

She is being honored for her participation and superior performance on the Scholastic Aptitude Test. She scored comparable to entering college students. Vasanawala is a seventh-grade student at Goliad Middle School.

The ceremony and awards are sponsored by the Duke University Talent Identification Program to salute and recognize the highest scoring seventh-graders in the 11th annual talent search.

Vasanawala also will be honored at a statewide ceremony June 10 at Trinity University in San Antonio.

Grigg to serve as FFA area president

Jason Grigg, son of Pat and Patsy Grigg, Coahoma, will serve as the Future Farmer's of America Area II president for 1991-92. Seven districts make the Area II from El Paso to Anson. He will preside over area meetings and attend the state leadership camp in Trinidad in June. He will also attend the national convention in Kansas City, Mo. in November.

GRIGG

Grigg, 18, was elected president by seven district members. All contestants presented award and accomplishment projects and spoke to the general assembly during the convention May 11.

He has been the reporter for the Coahoma FFA and was elected vice-president for the 1991-92 school year. He received the most outstanding young man award, is a member of the National Honor Society and serves as student trainer for the Coahoma High School football and basketball teams.

Degrees awarded

Sharon D. McGrievy, Big Spring, daughter of Rodney and Mary Ruth Peterson, Ackerly, received a bachelor of science degree in elementary education with a specialization in biology from Sul Ross University. She is married to Mike McGrievy, Big Spring.

★ ★ ★

Sheri Myrick, daughter of Jerry and Muriel Myrick, Big Spring, received a bachelor of science degree in kinesiology from Lubbock Christian University. While at school, she was a member of the volleyball and basketball teams and the Lambda Omega Alpha social club.

MYRICK

Myrick has been accepted at the United States Sports Academy. She will begin her master's degree program this summer at the academy in Daphne, Ala. She plans to study athletic training. Myrick was a Big Spring High School 1987 graduate.

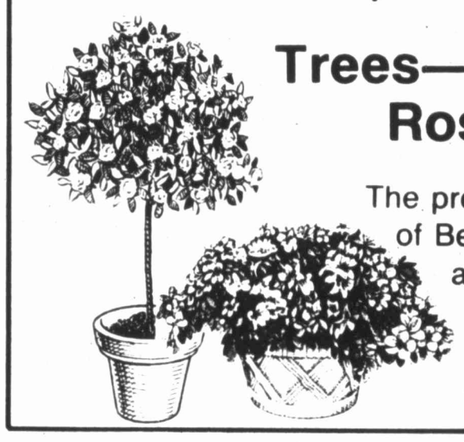

New officers

The Big Spring High School Student Council elected officers for the 1991-92 school year. Travis Sinclair is president; Keely Bowerman, first vice-president; Ray Mendoza, second vice-president; Melisa Ware, recording secretary; Mary Katherine Terrazas; corresponding secretary; and Jason LeGrande, parlimentarian. The officers will attend a leadership workshop in July at Angelo State University in San Angelo.

Varsity cheerleaders

Big Spring High School varsity cheerleaders for 1991-92 are Shawna Griffin, Ginger McMillan, Melanie Zapata, Kara Coleman, Erin Roberts, Becky Tedesco and Eric Jonkee. Chris Viasana is the newly elected varsity mascot. The junior varsity cheerleaders are Brandi Belew, Kendra Carey, Regan McCann, Amy Miller and Betsy Murphy.

The puss caterpillar, also known as the wooly worm or tree asp, is the most unpleasant stinging caterpillar in Texas. Severe pain is the most common symptom of contact with a puss caterpillar. Swelling, shock-like syndromes and convulsions have also been reported.

Doctors warn of stinging caterpillars

DALLAS (AP) — This is the season to beware of tiny hairy caterpillars that pack a big sting.

"I tell my grandchildren, 'Anything with long hair on it, you do not touch,'" says Dr. J.W. Stewart, Texas A&M Extension entomologist in Uvalde.

There are several types of stinging caterpillars in Texas, Stewart said, including the io moth, saddleback caterpillar, buck moth and hag moth.

But the most unpleasant crawling critter of the bunch is the puss caterpillar, also known by the deceptively cute name of wooly worm — or, more ominously, the tree asp.

A report in the May issue of the Annals of Emergency Medicine warns that the puss caterpillar can cause severe pain. Although no deaths have been reported, two U.S. Army doctors who studied the effects of the caterpillar's sting say it has caused swelling, shock-like syndromes and convulsions.

The caterpillars do not have a stinger such as a wasp or bee. Instead, their venom flows through hollow spines.

Reaction to the caterpillar's venom is fast. The site of the sting often swells rapidly and limbs can double in size. Other symptoms include headaches, fever, nausea, vomiting and cramps, said doctors Robert T. Pinson and James Alan Morgan.

"The cases I treated complained of intense pain, with a couple requiring treatment with narcotics," said Pinson. The research was conducted at Darnall Army Community Hospital at Fort Hood.

Hands and arms are most often affected, the doctors said. The best way to avoid being stung is to stay out of the caterpillar's way, Pinson said.

"The fur is very fine, almost the texture of a pussy willow," Pinson said.

Treatment includes ice packs, pain medication and treatment for the intense itching that can follow.

Populations of the puss caterpillar vary from year to year, depending on the number of natural predators, wasps and flies. Scientists said it is too early to guess what this year's population will be.

Hopes of land reform wane in Paraguay

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — When Gen. Alfredo Stroessner was overthrown and exiled two years ago, thousands of peasants began to dream of owning the land they till.

It hasn't happened. Peasants who waited received nothing. Those who seized their land lost it again to soldiers or vigilantes.

"They burned our homes and arrested 13 people," said Juan de Dios Mezá, who joined 500 families in taking over an estate 185 miles north of Asuncion, the capital. "We were trying to grow mandioca, corn and cotton."

Much of this nation bordering Brazil, Argentina and Bolivia is sparsely populated farm country. It is the size of California and has a subtropical climate, good soil, plenty of rain and only 4 million people.

"The problem isn't lack of land, it's the concentration of land in few hands," said Dionisio Gauto, director of a Roman Catholic Church group that is drafting legislation to submit to Congress on behalf of peasants.

"Paraguay has 96 million acres, of which half are suitable for farming," he said. "There's more than enough land for everyone."

Americas Watch, a U.S. human rights group, reported this year that 78 percent of Paraguay's land is held by 1 percent of the population.

"Actually, 41 foreign companies own 36.3 percent of the land and large Paraguayan landholders own another 42 percent," it said in a report.

Much of the land is used by its German, Japanese and Argentine owners as pasture for cattle.

Paraguay has 300,000 farm families, who make up about 60 percent of the population. At least one family in three works someone else's land.

During the 34 years Stroessner was in power, the government sold nearly all the public land to foreigners or gave it military officers, Gauto said.

Under Stroessner's constitution of 1967, a foreigner cannot own more than about 25,000 acres. Meza's group of 500 families used that as a legal basis in May 1990 when they occupied part of a 100,000-acre estate owned by a Brazilian.

Police and soldiers asked them to leave at first, Meza said, and drove them out with bulldozers two months later.

About 12,000 peasants have tried to occupy land. Nearly all were thrown off and hundreds have been jailed.

"Thousands of landless peasants, because of ... promises to respect human rights, thought that the February 1989 coup meant their moment had arrived and justice would take place," Americas Watch said in its report.

Mina Feliciangeli, leftist Workers Party candidate for mayor of Asuncion, said large landholdings "should be expropriated whether they're productive or not."

Gauto, asked whether the situation was becoming explosive, said: "Exactly the opposite. People are becoming resigned. They think things won't ever change."

How's that?

Q. What is "no fault" auto insurance?

A. "No fault" auto insurance means that in the event of an accident, neither driver is liable for damage to the other vehicle. Each driver's own insurance company is responsible for repair of their own damage, according to a local insurance agent.

Borden County High School graduates 11 seniors

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

Alpha and Omega, a begining and an ending, was the theme for the 1991 Borden High School commencement exercises.

Evening thunderstorms were unable to keep Gail residents at home Thursday, as approximately 300 family members and friends of the 1991 graduates were in attendance at the graduation ceremony. The commencement exercises began at 8 p.m. at the Borden County High School Auditorium.

In the Salutatorian's Address, Shane Kemper cited the support of families, teachers, coaches and friends as making graduation possible for the 1991 seniors.

Special music for the commencement was provided by a male quintet known as "Grateful Heart." Their inspirational music followed the theme of the ending of an era and a new begining.

Borden County High School 1991 graduate Jeana Jones gives the Valedictorian's Address in Thursday's commencement exercises in Gail.

In the valedictorian's address, Jeana Jones said to draw strength and guidance from God for the challenges ahead.

An oral history, given by graduate Cole Vestal traced the scholastic careers of the 11-member graduating class from kindergarten to the present. In this history, Vestal described events such as cheating on a second grade test, and other embarrassing anecdotes.

Graduate Paul Sturdivant gave the class prophecy by way of a humorous first person account told from the viewpoint of a man returning to his home town after making his success in the world.

The Honorable J.Q. Warnick, United States Magistrate Judge was the guest speaker at the ceremony. His speach was motivational in nature and called upon the young men and women to take advantage of the opportunities given them and to never let fear of failure stop them from trying.

Superintendent Jimmy Thomas and Board President Jack McPhaul presented diplomas to the following graduates: Charlotte Ball, Jo Barnes, Chad Conner, Kim Doyle, Rod Jeter, Jeana Jones, Shane Kemper, Jimmy Rios, Jason Sharp, Paul Sturdivant and Cole Vestal.

Kemper evoked a Rodney Dangerfield passage in his Salutatorian's Address saying, "As you make your way into the world, watch out for number one, but don't step in number two.

Senate report: MIAs ignored by Pentagon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government remained silent while thousands of Americans disappeared into Soviet, North Korean and Vietnamese prisons following the wars of this century, a report by Senate Republican staffers says.

Americans have languished in Soviet prisons since U.S. troops intervened in the Russian Revolution and civil war in 1918, the 112-page report released Thursday by the GOP minority staff of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

It cited classified documents and personal accounts in estimating that 20,000 U.S. troops in German POW camps during World War II were captured by the Red Army, and many vanished into prisons and slave labor camps.

The report slammed the Pentagon for its handling of the 2,273 Americans still listed as missing in action as a result of the war in Indochina.

It said the Pentagon, which says there is no evidence of live POWs in Vietnam, has acted "contrary to common sense" in discounting all live-sighting reports as flawed and thus invalid.

Defense Department policy "appears to be geared toward disproving each live-sighting report" rather than giving the "highest national priority" to resolving the MIA issue, the report contended.

The investigators said their findings were "remarkably similar" to those of Army Col. Millard A. Peck, who recently resigned as head of the Defense Intelligence Agency's Special Office for Prisoners of War and Missing in Action in protest over what he called the government "charade" in trying to resolve the MIA issue.

Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams, questioned at a news conference Thursday, said there had been seven formal investigations over the past decade into the government's handling of the POW-MIA issue.

"They have all concluded that there is no conspiracy, that there is no coverup, that the government is undertaking a good-faith effort to account for prisoners-of-war and those Americans listed as missing in action," Williams said.

He said the Pentagon has 150 people working fulltime or nearly fulltime on the MIA issue.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., in an introduction to the report, wrote of a "dismaying scenario" where communist governments have used U.S. POWs as political bargaining chips and slave laborers while Washington for diplomatic reasons has "downplayed or denied" reports of POW-MIAs.

Helms, the ranking Republican on the Foreign Relations Committee, expressed support for a bill to establish a Senate Select Committee on POW-MIA Affairs to further investigate the issue.

The question of whether Americans are still being held in Vietnam has gained prominence recently as the Bush administration considers establishing diplomatic relations with the Hanoi government.

The report quoted a National Security Agency employee as saying that the 591 POWs returned by North Vietnam in 1973 represented only 15 percent of American servicemen held in captivity.

The rejection of all 1,400 firsthand live sightings since then comes from what the report called a "compelling need on the part of the Department of Defense to uphold the 'no-evidence' policy."

"Any evidence that suggested an MIA might be alive was uniformly and arbitrarily rejected, and all efforts were directed towards finding and identifying remains of dead personnel, even though the U.S. government's techniques of identification were inadequate and deeply flawed," it said.

Articles on racism in yearbook upset students

ODESSA (AP) — Several articles and a poll in a high school yearbook attempting to debunk charges of racism have actually stirred up racial tension.

The articles, in the 1990-91 Odessa Permian High School yearbook, were accompanied by a pie chart showing the results of a survey asking 200 Permian juniors how often they heard the word "nigger."

The students who publish the yearbook say they were only attempting to debunk charges of racism in H.G. Bissinger's 1990 book "Friday Night Lights," which centers on the city's obsession with high school football.

But minority leaders and some students said they found the survey, and particularly the use of the epithet, inappropriate and offensive.

In an unscientific poll, 20 percent of the students surveyed said they heard the epithet every day, while 19 percent heard it weekly and 18 percent heard it monthly. Nine percent said they heard it three or four times a year, while 35 percent heard it "less often," the yearbook said.

Gene Collins, a member of the NAACP in Odessa, said the organization plans to meet with Ector County School District officials to discuss the yearbook.

expects Congress will enact legislation to counter the decision.

In California, a spokeswoman for the state Health and Welfare Agency said Gov. Pete Wilson would use state money if necessary to protect more than 200 clinics that serve 400,000 poor women. The clinics receive about $9.6 million in federal money.

"The governor is so committed to preventive prenatal services, I can't imagine him not bending over backwards to make sure the funds get there," said Kassy Per...

In Washington state, Health Secretary Kristine Gebbie said state government there would do the same. Washington has 23 family planning agencies.

The Reagan administration regulations were challenged by the city and state of New York and by Dr. Irving Rust, medical director of a clinic in New York City's South Bronx. They were put on hold until the issue was resolved in court. Now they can be enforced.

The clinic that lost the challenge said it too will quit taking federal money rather than keep silent about women's legal options.

Dinah Farrington, executive director of Indiana's Planned Parenthood, said the ruling could force clinics to withhold life-saving information.

"The really dreadful part of this is, if a woman had an ectopic pregnancy, which would be life-threatening, you couldn't tell her about abortion," she said. "All you could do is send her to an emergency room."

"It is a restriction on the free speech of doctors," said Howard Simon, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union in Michigan.

"If the pregnancy is health-endangering and abortion may be advised, the doctor cannot say that. That is limiting the information given women and (is) mandated medical malpractice."

Oiler win tourney; host local tourney

KILEEN — Local fast-pitch softball team, the Final Oilers. prepped for their local tournament this weekend by winning the Kileen Inviational.

The Oilers will be in action again this weekend when they host the Huck Doe Memorial Tournament starting at 8 a.m. at Roy Anderson Complex. Teams competing against last year's national tournament Oilers will be from Coahoma, Odessa, Lubbock and Sterling City. The Oilers will play Sterling City at8 a.m.

Coach Cotton Mize's Oilers won the first game by a 6-3 win over Austin Manor. Brian Mayfield was the hero with two hits and three runs batted in. The Oilers won the game in the sixth on singles by Mayfield and Johnny Mize and a double by Wes Overton. Johnny Mize was the winning pitcher.

In the second game Johnny Mize whitewashed Wichita Falls Glimmers, 5-0, firing a three-hitter. The Oilers started strong with Steve Salsman hitting an inside-the park-homer. Burl Roberts drove in two runs and Jeff Jones and Abel Gomez also had RBI.

In a marathon third game the Oilers beat Kileen 5-4 in 13 innings. Bobby Doe went the distance and picked up the win. The Oilers got their first four runs on RBI by Salsman, Roberts, Overton and Jones.

In the bottom of the 13th inning Salsman leads off with a double, followed by a bunt single by Gomez and a walk by Randy Ledbetter. Doe then drives in the winning run to give himself the victory.

The championship game was cancelled because of rain, leaving the Oilers the only unbeaten team and giving them the championship. Making the all-tournament team were shortstop Gomez, catcher Roberts and pitcher Doe.

Hawks start new Texas-Oklahoma battle

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. — The Howard College Hawks will find out quickly where they stand at the National Junior College World Series when they take on top-ranked Seminole of Oklahoma in the first round of the tournament Saturday.

The Hawks, 52-11 for the year and ranked ninth in the nation, will meet Seminole at 2 p.m. (Texas time) at Lincoln Park Field. Other first-round games will feature Glendale of Arizona facing Trinidad of Colorado, Iowa Western against Manatee (Fla.), Community College of Rhode Island against South Suburban of Illinois and Mississippi Gulf Coast vs. Allegheny Community College (Md.).

The HC-Seminole matchup will feature two of the most potent JUCO offensive attacks in the nation. Seminole, which sports a 57-2 record, boasts a team batting average of .377, second-best in the nation.

The Hawks, meanwhile, are no pikers either when it comes to swinging the bats. Howard is batting at a team average of .357 and has the nation's leading home run hitter in New York freshman Frank Rodriguez, who has rapped 25 homers this season.

The leading hitter for Seminole, stat-wise, is Ernesto Rivera with an average of .486, a figure slightly ahead of Rodriguez's .464.

Neither team is void of pitching, however. Seminole's Eugene Myers holds a spotless 7-0 record and a notable 1.35 ERA. Mike Copple and Rodriguez are the staff aces for Howard, with respective records of 13-4 and 12-1. Howard coach Bill Griffin has said that Rodriguez will start against Seminole Saturday.

Although both teams feature potent attacks, neither coach would predict a high-scoring game.

"I really wouldn't know," Seminole coach Lloyd Simmons said when asked for a prediction. "I haven't seen Howard play. I hear they have an outstanding hitting team and an outstanding hitter (Rodriguez).

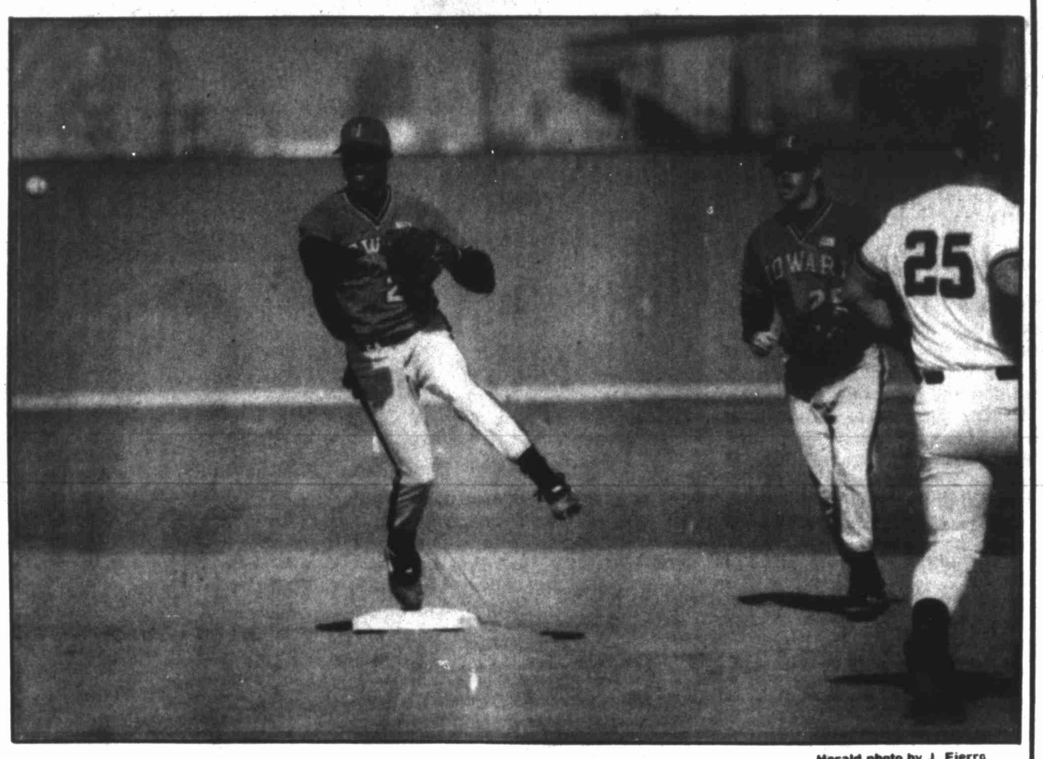

Howard assistant Joe Almaraz also doubted that the game would be a high-scoring affair.

"When you get to this part of the season, especially in the first part of the series, pitching will always dominate hitting," Almaraz said. "We just really think that at this point, pitching will set the tempo for us, whether it's good or bad performance."

Almaraz did say, however, that Saturday's game should be exciting. "They are number one in the country," he said. "To be number one, you've got to be able to play good baseball and obviously have good people. We've got to play our type of baseball to be competitive. We feel that if we do the things we've done in the past — have good pitching and get our share of hits, we think the scoreboard will be in our favor at the end of the game.

"Seminole will be ready to play, and we'll be ready to play," Almaraz added. "It should be a good baseball game for the fans."

The winner of the Howard-Seminole game will face the Rhode Island-South Surburban winner at 2 p.m. Monday. The losers of those two games will meet at 2 p.m. Sunday.

HC assistant handles challenges

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

This has been a very challenging year for first-year Howard College assistant baseball coach Joe Almaraz. Almaraz took over for Frank Anderson, who got a similar position at Texas Tech.

Almaraz's first big challenge came early in the school year when head coach Bill Griffin had to dismiss several players from the squad because of disciplinary reasons. Almaraz's job — go find ballplayers in a hurry.

JOE ALMARAZ

So Almaraz went to Puerto Rico and began his mission. "I rented a car and just drove around," he said. "Over there they have fields two miles apart, they play a lot of baseball. I went to an all-star game and checked it out."

When it was all over, Almaraz came back with five players — outfielders Efrain Contreras, Daniel Pagan and Milton Diaz, pitcher Edwin Corps and catcher Nelson Delpin. Contreras, whose dad is a high school baseball coach, has made the biggest impact, batting .347 with eight home runs, including three grand slams, and 56 runs batted in.

Diaz is batting .330, Delpin .309 and Pagan .217. Corps is one of the top five pitchers, fielding a 1-1 record with a 5.50 earned run average. He has

Greene makes Expos blue

MONTREAL (AP) — If there was one guy who knew what Tommy Greene was going through as he neared a no-hitter, it was teammate Terry Mulholland.

And that's why Mulholland was the first one to start spraying the beer in the clubhouse after Greene completed a no-hitter in the Philadelphia Phillies's 2-0 victory over the Montreal Expos Thursday.

"I was just so happy for him and I know this is going to make a big, big difference in his career," said Mulholland, who threw the National League's last no-hitter last Aug. 15 against the San Francisco Giants. "It's just to give him so much confidence in his own abilities. It's going to be great."

The locker-room celebration was delayed somewhat because Greene spent the first 25 minutes after the game doing television and radio interviews on the field. But waiting around their food table was a lot easier on the Phillies than waiting for the last couple of innings to wind down.

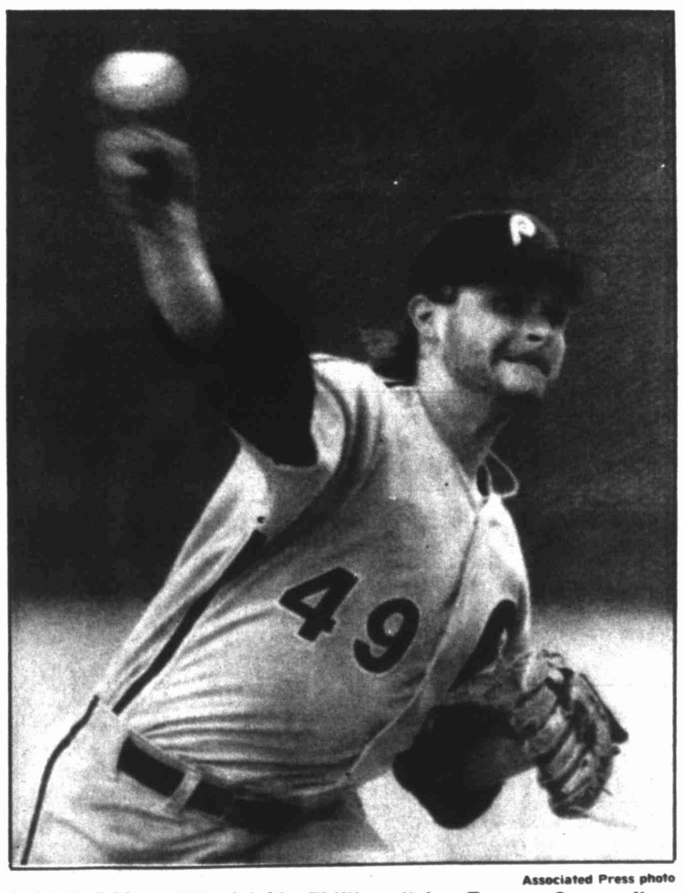

"We were with him on every pitch, but didn't say anything to him, because it's not right to," Mulholland said.

Actually, the Phillies didn't have to say anything because Greene (3-0) was well aware of what was going on. Still, the 24-year-old right-hander from Lumberton, N.C., who was making only his second start of the season, tried not to let it affect him.

"I knew from the sixth inning what was happening, but you still have to concentrate on doing your job," Greene said.

Greene, who pitched the first no-hitter in Olympic Stadium since Montreal's Charlie Lea did it against the Giants on May 10, 1981, overpowered the Expos, throwing 130 pitches, 76 for strikes. He struck out a career-high 10, and walked seven, allowing only three fly balls.

Greene ended the game himself, spearing Tim Wallach's comebacker to the mound. After the pitcher stabbed the ball, he extended his arms outward and jogged toward first base before flipping the ball to Ricky Jordan for the putout.

Rockets mentor tabbed top coach in the NBA

HOUSTON (AP) — Don Chaney can go about his business now that he has a business.

The Houston Rockets coach got a double dose of good news Thursday — a multiyear contract and the Red Auerbach Trophy as the NBA coach of the year. Chaney was delighted by the trophy and relieved by the contract.

"It's difficult to be jockeying with the draft when your future is in limbo," Chaney said. "So it's good to get the contract out of the way and get on with the business at hand.

"I was very concerned. I have a goal of going to the championship before I'm out of coaching, and I felt the opportunity might be slipping away."

But the Rockets and Chaney got together on a multiyear contract that is believed to be for three years at a salary between $400,000 and $500,000, making his coach of the year award even sweeter.

Chaney was the runaway winner after leading the Rockets to a franchise record 52-30 record despite playing 25 games without center Hakeem Olajuwon, sidelined with an eye injury.

The Rockets compiled a 15-10 record during Olajuwon's absence and went on a winning spree when he returned. The Rockets had a club record 14-1 record for March that included a 13-game winning streak.

They were 29-9 over the final three months of the season, becoming the 10th team in NBA history to lose fewer than 10 games over that time span.

"The key was that great March we had even though we were shorthanded," Chaney said. "There was even mention that we might be a lottery team, but our guys responded to the negative comments and jelled as a team."

HOUSTON — Houston Rockets coach Don Chaney with the Red Auerbach trophy after being named NBA Coach of the Year. He also was awarded a new contract with the Rockets.

The Rockets held opponents under 100 points 40 times and allowed an average of 103.2 points per game, sixth lowest in club history.

Chaney, who was drafted by former Boston coach Red Auerbach in 1968 and played 10 years for the Celtics, received 69 of a possible 96 votes from a national panel of NBA sports writers and broadcasters.

Robinson becomes fourth manager fired this month

BALTIMORE (AP) — Frank Robinson did his best, but he couldn't overcome the Baltimore Orioles' injuries, lousy pitching and inconsistent hitting. Now it's Johnny Oates' turn, and it's not an enviable position.

"I think he has a chance to be a good manager, but he's not a miracle worker, so don't expect miracles," Robinson said Thursday, shortly after he was fired as the Orioles' manager and replaced by Oates, his first-base coach.

With Baltimore languishing in last place with a 13-24 record, Robinson became the third major league manager to lose his job in three days when the Orioles reassigned him to the front office. Although the team went through great lengths to specify that Robinson was still an integral part of the organization, the deposed manager knew better.

"I wasn't reassigned, I was fired," Robinson said. The club offered him a job that would include the evaluation of player talent, but Robinson said he would wait until the post become better defined before deciding whether to accept.

Oates, 45, was the 1988 International League manager of the year. He has held three minor league managing posts and was the Orioles' first-base coach since 1989. He had longed to be a big-league manager since he retired in 1981, but would have preferred to get his chance under different circumstances.

"I thought this day would be a totally exciting and exhilarating time for me, but I've had mixed emotions all day long," he said. "But I'm excited for the challenge and hope that it can be a long, successful tenure here in Baltimore."

When Robinson had to serve a three-day suspension last June, Oates took over and won two out of three. He recalled that time fondly on Thursday, making it a point to mention that the Orioles barely missed sweeping the New York Yankees.

If nothing else, he brings a wealth of optimism into the job.

"If you don't start with high hopes, your chances of lasting aren't very good at all," he said. "It's not going to be an easy job. It never is. We've got a lot of work to do, but we cannot come back to the .500 level in one inning or one game. I know it's a cliche, but we'll have to go one game at a time."

Robinson, 55, was baseball's first black manager when he took over the Cleveland Indians in 1975. He managed the Indians from 1975-77 and the San Francisco Giants from 1981-84 before joining the Orioles' organization.

He replaced Cal Ripken Sr. as manager in April 1988, six games into what developed into a record 21-game losing streak at the start of the season. The Orioles finished 54-107 that year, but in 1989 Robinson was named American League manager of the year for leading Baltimore to an 87-75 record and a second-place finish.

Challenge

pitched very well in his last several outings however.

Almaraz had another interesting challenge later this year — battling back from an injury. Ironically it was Almaraz's first injury in his baseball career. That career spans from high school ball at John Jay in San Antonio, Bee County College, Lamar University and a stint in the professional Triple A Mexican League with Tampico.

It came in the conference series with Odessa College. It happened in the bottom of the fourth inning in the series opener. Howard second baseman Jeff Schulz made too wide of a turn at third base and ran into Almaraz who was coaching third. It resulted in damaged ligaments and cartilage in his knee. It will require surgery when the season is over.

"I knew I was hurt but we were battling for the conference championship, the only thing that mattered is that we won," said Almaraz. "I always preach to the kids on going out and doing whatever it takes to win."

What it took was Almaraz wearing a knee brace — only in the dugout mind you. When it was time to go coach the bases he would take the brace off. "I always believe in not letting you opponents know you have any weaknesses," he said.

It seems it was fate that Almaraz and Griffin would get together. Griffin, a 34-year coaching veteran, was coaching Panola when Almaraz was playing for Bee County in Beeville. "I remember Panola had a good ballclub, they were just coming off winning the national championship," he recalled. "We beat them four out of five and I distinctly remember coach Griffin in the dugout, telling his pitchers, 'well just throw the ball anywhere,', because were were hitting them good."

Almaraz and Griffin never lost contact after that. On a couple of occassions they got together at coaching conventions and Almaraz told Griffin to give him a call if he ever needed a coach.

That call came last summer when Anderson took the Tech job. Since then the duo have led Howard to its first-ever World Series appearence.

"This has been a year of pitching and home runs for us," said the HC assistant.

"I look at it as a holdup, our pitchers have the guns and stick 'em up. Our batters take all their cash with the home runs."

With their veteran coach and wounded assistant, the Hawks hope to continue that routine in Grand Junction, Colo.

Hot Rangers leave Twins stranded

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jose Guzman hasn't pitched in a major league game in three seasons. If he keeps on pitching like this, he won't pitch in too many more.

Guzman, who missed all of the 1989 season and most of 1990 with shoulder problems, walked nine in 3 2-3 innings Thursday, but the Texas Rangers came back to beat the Minnesota Twins 10-6 in 11 innings.

The victory, coupled with Oakland's 11-1 loss to Chicago, gave the Rangers a half-game lead in the American League West.

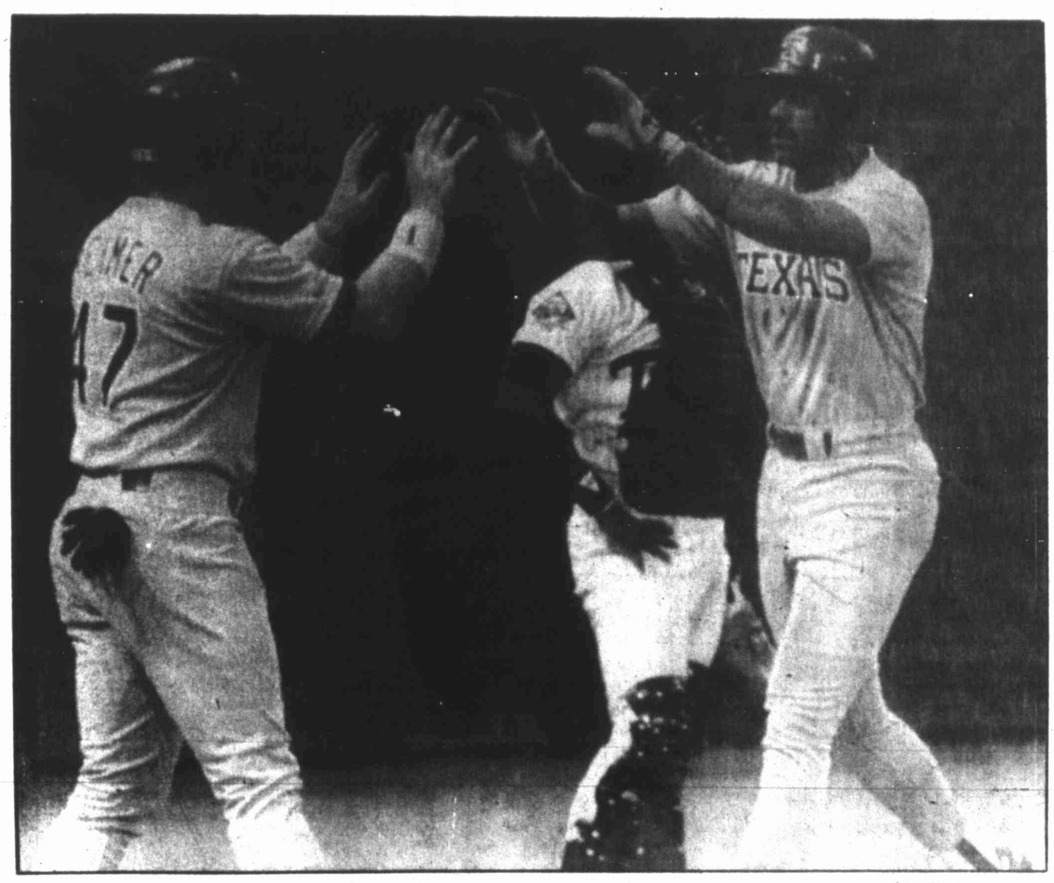

"I didn't really know where the ball was going," Guzman said. "I was just trying to get some outs."

Guzman made 10 minor league appearances last year as part of his comeback. He allowed two runs and four hits against the Twins.

"He had outstanding stuff today," Texas manager Bobby Valentine said. "It might be hard to say that when you walk nine men, but the problem was he had too much adrenaline. He's just head and shoulders ahead of what he had in the spring. He was really pumped, but his arm was OK."

Reuben Sierra was 4-for-6 with five RBIs as the Rangers extended their club-record winning streak to 10. With the score tied 5-5 in the 11th, he hit a three-run double. Juan Gonzalez hit a two-run double later in the inning.

"I thought the lead would hold up, but they kept battling back and they're a good team, but so are we," Sierra said. "We've got the confidence right now."

MINNEAPOLIS — Texas Rangers Juan Gonzales (right) gets a high-five from Kevin Reimer after he drove him in with a two-run homer in the second inning of Thursday's game against the Minnesota Twins.

American League

Kirby Puckett went 6-for-7 for the Twins, getting five singles and a triple. The major league record for hits in an extra-inning game is nine by John Burnett of Cleveland in an 18-inning game in 1932.

But Minnesota stranded 21 runners, three short of the American League record for an extra-inning game.

Tigers 5, Red Sox 3

Pete Incaviglia, who had struck out in all 11 previous career at-bats against Roger Clemens, broke a 3-3 tie with a run-scoring double in the seventh inning at Tiger Stadium.

Mike Henneman (4-1) got the victory and Paul Gibson got two outs for his fourth save.

Milwaukee 7, Cleveland 3

B.J. Surhoff hit a two-run single in a four-run first inning as Milwaukee ended a three-game losing streak.

Don August (3-2) allowed three runs and seven hits in six-plus innings, struck out three and walked two. Darren Holmes pitched three innings for his second save.

White Sox 11, Athletics 1

Frank Thomas had a career-high five RBIs and Greg Hibbard pitched a five-hitter.

Hibbard (3-2) struck out three and walked one in his second complete game.

Penguins one win away from Stanley Cup

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mark Recchi found his game, Frank Pietrangelo found himself in the lineup and the Pittsburgh Penguins find themselves one victory away from the Stanley Cup championship.

"We capitalized on some good opportunities," said defenseman Larry Murphy after the Penguins beat the Minnesota North Stars 6-4 Thursday night to take a 3-2 lead in the best-of-7 Stanley Cup finals.

The Penguins can win the Cup with a victory on Saturday night in Bloomington, Minn.

Just as they did in Game 4 in Bloomington, when they scored three times in the first three minutes, the Penguins took a big early lead at The Igloo Thursday night.

They scored four straight goals, including two by Recchi, to jump into a quiek lead by 13:41 of the first period.

For Recchi, it was a reaffirmation of his talent. He had scored a team-leading 113 points during the regular season and was second to Mario Lemieux in playoff scoring with 32 points coming into Thursday night's game.

Stanley Cup

However, he had been held to merely one assist in the first four games of the finals until Thursday night.

While Recchi was finding his game, Pietrangelo was surprised to find himself in the thick of the action.

He was called on to replace Tom Barrasso after the Penguins' starting goaltender was removed after the first period because of a groin pull.

Pientrangelo got that and plenty more as the North Stars rallied to make things close.

Pietrangelo faced 18 shots in the final two periods, many of them too close for comfort. And although he gave up three goals, he held the North Stars away when he had to.

The North Stars closed within 5-4 on early third-period goals by Ulf Dahlen and Gagner. But the North Stars' luck turned sour when the puck went into their net off Broten's skate at 18:21. Troy Loney was credited with the goal.

Padres beat Braves in marathon game

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Darrin Jackson forgives his teammates for withholding their congratulations after he hit a home run he'll never forget.

"We still had to go out there and play defense," he said.

And the way things were going, there was no guarantee the San Diego Padres could hold off the Atlanta Braves for three more outs. But they did, and came away with an 11-10 victory in 12 innings Thursday night.

"You know, it's never over 'til it's over," Jackson said. "Then they thanked me."

Jackson homered on the first pitch of the 12th as the Padres — scoring six unearned runs in the game on five Atlanta errors — beat the Braves in a 4-hour, 44-minute marathon.

The game capped a day in which a former Brave — Tommy Greene — pitched a no-hitter as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Montreal Expos 2-0. Elsewhere in the National League, it was Los Angeles 2, Houston 0; Cincinnati 6, San Francisco 2; St. Louis 8, Pittsburgh 2, and Chicago 4, New York 3.

Jackson's second homer of the season — and 15th Padre hit — came off Jeff Parrett (0-1) and cleared the left field fence. It made a winner of Steve Rosenberg (1-1) and spoiled an Atlanta comeback spiced by a three-run, game-tying homer by David Justice.

Both teams scored four times in the 10th, with all the San Diego runs unearned as a result of two Atlanta errors.

Rosenberg, who allowed the homer to Justice in the 10th, got Francisco Cabrera to hit into a game-ending double play after Justice singled for his fourth hit, the last of 12 by Atlanta.

Justice went 4-for-7 with four RBIs. Tony Gwynn had three hits and three RBIs for the Padres.

Reds 6, Giants 2

Jack Armstrong (4-2) pitched a four-hitter for his first complete game since last July 29 at San Francisco, and Paul O'Neill hit a three-run homer in a five-run first inning.

Visiting San Francisco has lost six consecutive games, including three straight to the Reds. The Giants, who have not led in any game during the streak, had not been swept at Riverfront Stadium since July 1985.

Trevor Wilson (0-4) gave up all six runs and seven hits before he was removed with one out in the second.

Dodgers 2, Astros 0

Tim Belcher won for the fifth time in six career Astrodome decisions and Lenny Harris drove in two runs for Los Angeles.

Belcher (4-4) allowed six hits in 7 2-3 innings, struck out two and walked four. Harris had run-scoring hits in the fourth and sixth off Xavier Hernandez (0-4). Eddie Murray also had hits that figured in scoring both runs.

John Candelaria, who has not allowed a run in his last 14 appearances over 6 1-3 innings and stranded all 12 inherited runners in his last nine outings, retired pinch-hitter Mark Davidson on a fly ball with two men on to end the eighth. Jay Howell worked a perfect ninth for his eighth save, making the Dodger bullpen 12 for 12 in save opportunities.

Cardinals 8, Pirates 2

Jose DeLeon won for only the third time in 27 starts, and Felix Jose had three of 15 St. Louis hits and scored twice as the surging Cardinals beat sputtering Pittsburgh.

The Cardinals, also getting three hits from Todd Zeile and two runs scored from Ozzie Smith, took two of three games from the Pirates to win their fifth consecutive series. The Pirates have lost four of their last five games.

The victory was the first for DeLeon (2-3) since April 20, snapping a string of two losses and three no-decisions.

DeLeon, 7-19 last season, pitched 5 1-3 innings, allowing five hits — including Jay Bell's fifth home run to start the sixth — struck out one and walked three. Scott Terry worked the final three innings for his first save.

National League

Cubs 4, Mets 3

Doug Dascenzo's squeeze bunt with two strikes scored Shawon Dunston in the ninth inning and kept Cubs manager Jim Essian unbeaten.

Luis Salazar led off the ninth with an infield single off John Franco (1-3) and was forced by Dunston. Pinch-hitter Hector Villanueva, a slow runner, followed with a grounder to deep shortstop and Kevin Elster made a throwing error that moved Dunston to third.

Dascenzo tried the squeeze on a 3-1 pitch but fouled the ball behind the plate. Essian, named manager of the Cubs before Wednesday's game, came right back with the squeeze and Dascenzo dropped a bunt between the mound and third.

Les Lancaster (1-1) pitched two innings for the victory and Paul Assenmacher got three outs for his fourth save.

Florida sophomore tosses no-hitter

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

While John Burke was nearly perfect all night, it was after midnight when he got some offensive help in Florida's opening game in the NCAA baseball tournament.

All four of the No. 1 seeds that saw action in the first round of regional play won on Thursday, capped by Burke's no-hitter and Brent Killen's two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning that gave top-seeded Florida a 2-0 victory over Furman in the East Regional at Gainesville, Fla. Because of heavy rains earlier in the day, the final game ended after midnight.

Burke (8-4), a sophomore right-hander, struck out 14 Paladins, with only a first-inning walk and his own fifth-inning error keeping him from a perfect game.

"It's the biggest game that I've thrown in my life," Burke said.

But his no-hitter, Florida's first since 1978, wasn't secured until the bottom of the ninth.

Dave Majeski opened the inning with a single to deep short. One out later, Killen, a junior first baseman, hit a 1-1 curveball from Furman starter Will Ertel (12-6) over the right field fence.

Furman's Tom Nagy almost ended Burke's no-hit bid with two outs in the top of the ninth, but a diving defensive play by third baseman Joe Russo ended the inning.

St. John's pulled off the biggest upset of the day when the Redmen beat second-seeded Georgia Tech in the Atlantic Regional.

The Redmen, who trailed 4-2 going into the eighth inning, defeated the Yellow Jackets 5-4 on Denis Durland's two-run homer.

Durland's second homer of the season gave St. John's the lead for the first time. The Redmen pulled within one when Keith Rader led off the eighth with his ninth home run of the season.

Elsewhere in the Atlantic Regional at Tallahassee, Fla., top-seeded Florida State defeated Coastal Carolina 6-0 behind Roger Bailey's six-hitter. Dennis Walsh's three-hitter gave Alabama a 5-1 victory over Florida International.

Bailey (11-2) scattered six singles and struck out seven as he posted his 20th win in two seasons.

Walsh needed 111 pitches in his complete game to boost his record to 11-4 for Alabama. Philip Doyle, the Crimson Tide's placekicker for four years, broke a scoreless tie with a two-run homer in the fourth inning.

NCAA Baseball

At Fresno, Calif., top-seeded Miami went ahead on Jonathen Smith's leadoff home run in an eight-run sixth inning and went on to a 13-1 victory over Portland in the West II Regional.

Miami (46-15) trailed Portland (30-18) 1-0 after three innings. But the Hurricanes tied the score in the fourth on Juan Llanes' homer and scored eight runs in the sixth, when Charles Johnson hit a three-run homer, his 14th.

Stanford (38-21), seeded second, beat San Diego State 12-5 in the second game. The Cardinal trailed 5-4 after six innings, but scored four runs in the seventh, highlighted by David Holbrook's two-run single.

Jeffrey Hammonds finished with four RBI, including a three-run homer in the first, for Stanford. The first eight Cardinal runs were off Brian Holliday of San Diego State (43-20).

Bobby Jones pitched a five-hitter, striking out 14 batters, to lead Fresno State to a 7-2 victory over Cal State Northridge.

Fresno State (38-20) was led offensively by Philip Romero, who was 4-for-5 with three RBI. Northridge (41-17-1) got a two-run homer by Scott Richardson in the first inning off Jones (14-1), who settled down after that.

At Orono, Maine, top-seeded Clemson jumped to an early lead and defeated Princeton 13-5 in the Northeast Regional.

Joe DeBerry hit a two-run homer in the first inning as Clemson (57-8) ran up a 6-1 score by the sixth. The Tigers scored seven more runs before Princeton (24-21) answered with four runs in the ninth.

Clemson's Jason Angel (14-1) allowed six hits and one run in eight innings for the victory.

Rex Buckner hit a two-run homer, sparking a five-run sixth inning that gave Mississippi State a 10-4 victory over Towson State.

Mississippi State (41-14) jumped to an early lead with three runs in the first inning and never trailed. Paul Petrulis had three of the Bulldogs' 11-hit total. Erik Sheetz had a two-run homer for Towson State (27-22-1).

Brian Seguine led Maine's 15-hit attack with three hits and three RBIs as the Black Bears defeated Villanova 10-3.

Shawn Tobin's solo homer in the third inning gave Maine (46-16) the lead, and the Black Bears went on to build an 8-0 lead. Jack Stanczak, Cliff Foley and Mike Evangelista each had an RBI for Villanova (37-14-1).

Maine's Larry Thomas (9-3) pitched seven innings for the win, allowing three runs and striking out nine. Brian Kenney (6-5) took the loss for Villanova.

In other East Regional games at Gainesville, Fla., John Hay doubled home the winning run with one out in the ninth inning, giving fourth-seeded Missouri a 5-4 victory over No. 3 Jacksonville in the East Regional.

In the second game, second-seeded North Carolina State (46-18) broke open a close game with a five-run sixth inning to down Ohio University (33-26) 11-5.

Favored teams counting on tough times

AUSTIN (AP) — Oklahoma State baseball coach Gary Ward says even though his team and the No. 5 Texas Longhorns are the favorites to win the NCAA Central Regional, he's not counting anyone out.

"I don't question anyone's ability to play," said Ward, whose team finished as runner-up in last year's World Series. "There are some very imposing team's here. We'll say 'Yes, sir' to all of them."

The ninth-ranked Cowboys and Longhorns, who have been to the NCAA playoffs a combined 66 times and to the College World Series 33 times, are joined by Alabama-Birmingham, Rutgers, No. 15 Long Beach State and No. 22 Southern Mississippi.

Cliff Gustafson, coach of the top-seeded Texas Longhorns, and Ward say the Central Regional field, which includes four ranked teams and five with at least 40 victories, is the toughest in years.

"People tend to focus on the traditional powers," Gustafson said. "They may not give credit to the Rutgers, the Southern Mississippis or the UABs. People don't realize how strong they are because they haven't been to the World Series yet."

Third-seeded Long Beach (40-19) is certain to give the Longhorns (46-16) and Cowboys (43-18) their toughest challenges.

Long Beach in the first round plays Southern Mississippi (41-22), which is making only its second tournament appearance.

"Long Beach could easily have been a No. 1 (seed)," said Ward. "I think Southern Miss is kind of the dark horse. They'll be overlooked. I don't think there is any rest for any of us. If you escape Austin, you're ready for the series."

Golden Eagles' coach Hill Denson said his team is just looking for a little respect.

"I don't agree that it's an automatic that Texas or Oklahoma St. will win it all," Denson said. "Long Beach is capable, and if we played like we did last week, we can walk through this thing."

The Longhorns for the first round drew UAB (28-28), which took the Sun Belt Conference Tournament by winning four games.

The Cowboys face Atlantic 10 Conference champion Rutgers (32-20), which has won 17 of its past 21 games.

The Longhorns chances hinge on the health of injured pitchers Brooks Kieschnick (6-1, 2.58), the Southwest Conference most valuable player, and Chris Gaskill (7-3, 3.89). Both have suffered minor arm problems in the past week.

Oklahoma State boasts power hitter Michael Daniel, who has 26 home runs, 103 runs and a .358 batting average. Daniel, the Big Eight player of the year, is confident about the Cowboys' chances.

"It's gonna take a good team to beat us now," Daniel said.

Former Bronco has to do time for assault

LITTLETON, Colo. (AP) — Former Denver Bronco Gerald Perry was sentenced to 75 days in jail Thursday and began serving the sentence only hours later after admitting that he sexually assaulted the fiancee of a teammate.

Carmen Santiago, fiancee of former Bronco Orson Mobley, watched as Perry pleaded guilty to misdemeanor third-degree sexual assault.

Arapahoe County District Judge Kenneth Stuart sentenced Perry to 180 days in jail, but suspended 105 of them. Stuart also ordered Perry to contribute $5,000 to a charity that helps victims of sexual assault or domestic violence.

At the time of the incident on Nov. 13, Santiago said Perry "was violent, angry and physical. There was no doubt in my mind he was trying to hurt me. I won't be able to put it behind me for a long, long time."

Santiago said she was satisfied with the plea bargain.

The sentence will allow Perry to join the Los Angeles Rams after missing only a couple of weeks of training camp.

He faces another hearing in Aurora Municipal Court where a judge will decide whether to add another 45 days to the sentence for violating probation on a conviction of solicitation for prostitution.

Lakers will get physical

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers, manhandled in Game 2 of the Western Conference finals, believe they'll be ready to hand out some licks of their own tonight in Game 3.

"If they foul you quickly in a bad way and knock you down, we're going to have to do the same thing," Lakers forward Sam Perkins said after practice Thursday. "A slap for a slap. The refs aren't calling anything.

"We've got to come out and establish ourselves quickly."

The Lakers took the homecourt advantage away from the Portland Trail Blazers in the opener of the best-of-7 series by winning 111-106, but they were outrebounded 51-28 in losing Game 2 109-98 Tuesday night.

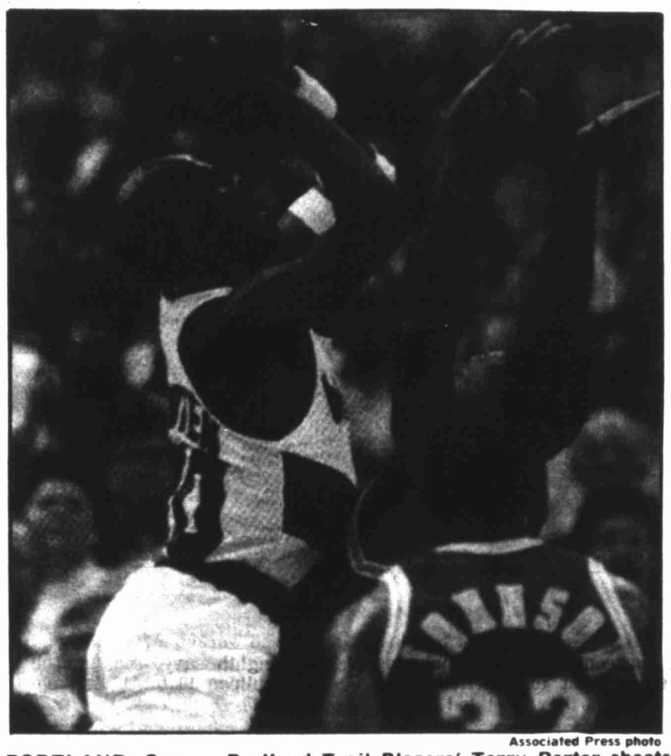

The Blazers can get the homecourt advantage back by beating the Lakers tonight or in Game 4 Sunday before the series moves back to Portland for the fifth game Tuesday night.

Asked what the Lakers can do to improve their performance on the backboards, Perkins said: "We'll try to box out, lay a body on somebody, get a foul to send a message. You've got to lay a body on somebody."

Perkins was about the only Laker to do a decent job on the boards in Game 2, collecting 10 rebounds to go with his 19 points.

Lakers center Vlade Divac, who was pushed all over the court by the Blazers, has pulled down only two rebounds in each game of the series.

"We've talked with all the guys, not just Vlade," Lakers coach Mike Dunleavy said. "The guys who aren't rebounding know who they are."

Associated Press photo

PORTLAND, Ore. — Portland Trail Blazers' Terry Porter shoots over Los Angeles Lakers' Sam Perkins in NBA playoff action Tuesday night in Portland. Porter pumped in 26 points to lead Portland to a 109-98 victory.

Said Divac: "I know what's going on. I have to tell myself, 'It's the playoffs, I have to play every game hard.'

"I just have to push myself in the game, play physical, and I'll be OK. If you want to play physical, you can do it, you can learn."

Divac, who has gotten hammered several times in this series, smiled when asked how he felt about banging on the Blazers.

"I don't like it, but if somebody hits me first, I have to return it," he said. "We're not going to play dirty in the game, just physical and very hard."

While the Lakers will have to do a better job of rebounding, the Blazers will have to cool off hot-shooting Los Angeles guard Byron Scott.

Pistons hoping to give Vinnie some help tonight

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Vinnie Johnson is at it again. It's NBA playoff time and Johnson is hot. The problem is that the rest of the Detroit Pistons are not.

The Pistons trail Chicago 2-0 in the Eastern Conference finals, and unless they can regain their touch in games Saturday and Monday at The Palace, the Bulls will end Detroit's dream of a third consecutive NBA title.

Johnson, called "the Microwave," heated up quickly against the Bulls. He averaged only 11.7 points per game during the regular season, and through the Pistons' first 11 playoff games, he averaged only 13.1 points.

But in two games against the Bulls, Johnson is averaging 25 points.

"I had it going and I was either making my shots or going to the foul line," Johnson said. "But you know we couldn't stop them on the other end. You got to make some stops."

Indeed. The young and hungry Bulls have thrashed the Pistons by scores of 94-83 and 105-97.

"We've got to get some other people to play well," Johnson said. "We are playing a little soft. We got to play a lot harder. The Bulls are more aggressive, but nothing we are not used to. Boston was more aggressive (in the conference semifinals) than they were. We are just not responding."

Responding is what Johnson does best. It was his 15-footer with 0.07 seconds remaining at Portland almost a year ago that gave the Pistons their second consecutive championship.

Only two other teams in history have ever won three titles in a row: the Minneapolis Lakers (1952-54) and the Boston Celtics (1959-66). If the Pistons are to join that list, they have to win four of the five possible remaining games in this series.

That means Johnson will need help. Mark Aguirre is averaging 20.5 points against the Bulls and Joe Dumars is averaging 16.5 points. After that it drops all the way to Isiah Thomas and his 10.5 points. No other Detroit player is averaging double figures against the Bulls.

"I wouldn't say I was the only guy, but there weren't too many other guys," Johnson said. "We just need some inside play and post-up play. Right now, we got to get some other people involved."

That's easier said than done. The Bulls' defense is playing this year the way the Pistons' defense played in the past. Chicago's average playoff yield is 90.9 points in 10 games. That's 1.9 points off the playoff record set by Phoenix in 1981.

"Defense is the nature of both teams, and I'm sure both teams want to maintain their consistency," Chicago's Michael Jordan said.

Jordan is averaging 31.1 points through Chicago's 10 playoff games, but only 28.5 points in the two games against Detroit. That's because the Bulls' bench, like Detroit's Microwave, has heated up in this series.

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: A friend of mine has asked me to get involved in a small group Bible study in her church. I would like to, because I would like to find out what the Bible is all about, but I am afraid to because I don't know anything about the Bible and I know I will just make a fool of myself. I don't want to hurt my friends's feelings, but I don't think I can accept her invitation. Can you understand why I feel this way? — Mrs. N.R.

DEAR MRS. N.R.: No one likes to be embarrassed, of course, and your feelings are perfectly understandable. However, I hope you will reconsider, for this could be a very important opportunity for you.

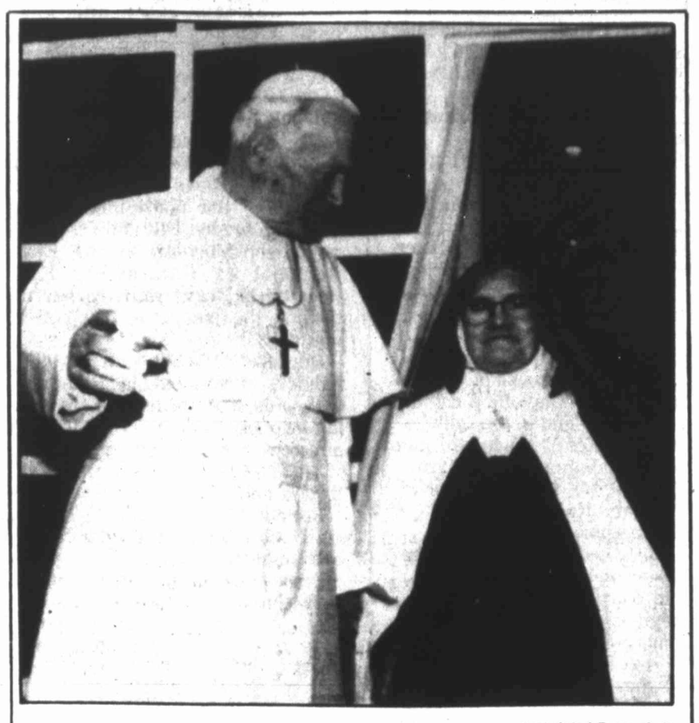

Let me mention two things you might not have considered. First, I suspect there will be others in this group who feel like you do and are just as concerned about their lack of knowledge. Second, I suspect you will find the group leader (and the other members of the group) will not try to embarrass you in the least. In fact, I think you'll find they care for you and will accept you just as you are. You might share your concerns with your friend — although she probably already knows how you feel, and has felt free to ask you because she knows you will not be embarrassed in this group.

But there is another thing you need to remember also. Down inside we each have a hunger to know God (even if we have never labeled it that way) — and that is true of you also. And the amazing thing is that God has a desire to know us also — rather, a yearning for us to come to know Him in a personal way. And that's one reason He has given the Bible to us. The Scriptures "are able to make you wise for salvation through faith in Christ Jesus" (2 Timothy 3:15). Ask God to help you understand His Word — and through it to come to know Him personally by faith in Jesus Christ.

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: We are very disturbed over some things that are happening in our son's high school. They won't permit any religious influence, even Bible studies after hours or anything. But one of the teachers is constantly bringing subjects like reincarnation and the power of spiritual energy into classroom discussions (and she makes it clear she believes in them). Why do they permit her to do that, when you can't even mention the name of Christ or have a Bible on your desk without getting into trouble if you are a teacher? — Mrs. S.F.

DEAR MRS. S.F.: I'm reminded of the words of the ancient Hebrew prophet Hosea: "They sow the wind and reap the whirlwind" (Hosea 8:7). For decades we have banished God from the classroom, and now we are paying the tragic price in soaring drug use, sexual immorality and teen-age pregnancy, and a whole host of other problems among our youth. When you banish God, you banish any final standard of right and wrong — and eventually you end up in moral chaos.

The legal issues are complex, I know, and we live in a pluralistic society. At the same time, we need to pray that the kind of situation you describe will stop, and the trend toward a completely secular society will be reversed — including in our classrooms.

Pope urges Europeans

Pope John Paul II stands beside Carmalite nun Lucia De Santos, 84, the last survivor of the group who said they had a first of a series of visions of the Virgin inn Fatima in 1917, before celebrating mass at the Shrine of Fatima in Portugal, recently. The pope, on the site of the great mysteries of the Roman Catholic Church, urged Europeans to build a new society devoid of materialism on the ashes of atheism.

Church news

New Life has "Miracle Revival"

The New Life Chapel in Industrial Park will be having a "Miracle Revival" May 23-26 beginning at 7 p.m. nightly. Rev. Freddy Clark will lead the services.

REV. CLARK

For thirty years, Evangelist Freddy Clark has covered the eastern coast from Canada to Florida with tent and auditorium Deliverance Revivals. Brother Clark has a unique "sign-gift ministry" in that the individual prayer of faith is conducted by revelation. All are welcome to attend this special Revival.

College Park events

The College Park Church of God Family Praise and Worship Center, 603 Tulane Avenue, will host the "Anchor Brothers Band" this Sunday at the 6:30 p.m. Praise and Worship Service. Admission is free and a nursery is provided also. The public is invited.

* * *

The public is invited to Sunday School at 9:30 a.m. with praise and worship services following at 10:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. A "Children's Church" is featured at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday nights are for the family with Family Training Hour at 7:30 p.m. The youth services will begin Wednesday, June 5, with new youth directors Ron and Terri Casteel from Irving. For further information or transportation to the church, call the office at 267-8593.

Nazarene honors grads

All high school and college graduates will be honored this Sunday during the 10:40 a.m. service, at the First Church of the Nazarene, 1400 Lancaster. This year's grads include: Stacey Berner, Howard College; Chrisie Aguilar, Midland Avalon Vocational; Tracy Carpenter and Lance Moore, Big Spring High School; Misty Morton McKay, Sands High School; Susan Phillips, Howard College; Chris Rosenbaum, Forsan High School; and Tiffani Ward, Coahoma High School.

As part of the "Youth Challenge" emphasis, the teens will participate in the evening service, at 6 p.m., with testimonies, special music, etc.

The following Sunday, June 2, we will celebrate the arrival of Associate Pastor and Mrs. Dick Milton, who are moving here from Alabama. We would like to invite the public to the services to meet Pastor Milton on June 2 and to services every Sunday at 9:45 a.m. for Sunday School; 10:40 a.m. for morning worship; and 6 p.m. for the evening "Celebration of Praise."

Woman theologian enjoys needling role in Catholicism

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Uta Ranke Heinemann, a woman of prominent family and rare academic attainment, has also been classed a Roman Catholic maverick, but she brushes it off jauntily.

"It's more 'in' at the moment to be 'out'," she said with an impish grin and flash of blue eyes. "My impression is that it's fashionable to be 'out' and not 'in'."

She was talking about a fellow Catholic scholar, the Rev. Hans Kung, removed by the Vatican from teaching "official Catholic theology," but she also was referring to herself.

"It's fashionable to have lost one's chair," said she, daughter of former West German President Gustav Heinemann and described as becoming in 1970 the first woman licensed by Catholicism to teach theology.

However, she was ousted in 1987 from that post at Germany's University of Essen at the behest of the local bishop for questioning the biological virginity of Jesus's mother.

She said in an interview that terming such ousters stylish "may be a bit of exaggeration," but "some of it holds true for me."

Although no longer teaching New Testament and early Christianity, she remains a tenured faculty member, teaching religious history without a church mandate.

She also has produced a peppery new book, "Eunuchs For the Kingdom of Heaven," published by Doubleday, lashing at the church as being controlled by male celibates and as demeaning women and sexuality.

"I'm fed up with the pope interfering with things that are none of his business — contraception, for instance," she said, refering to the church's prohibition of it.

Such matters should be restored "to the competence of the couples themselves," she said. "It's time to extricate married love from the voyeuristic participation of the pope and bishops."

Her book's title is taken from Jesus' comment in Matthew 19:12 about men "who have made themselves eunuchs for the sake of the kingdom of heaven."

She maintains that "the whole of church history adds up to one long arbitrary, narrow-minded masculine despotism over the female sex."

A buoyant woman, gleeful in her critiques, she said the also unseated Kung "was more influential" than before.

Kung, barred by the Vatican in 1979 from teaching Catholic theology at Germany's University of Tubingen after he questioned some church concepts such as papal infallibility, now teaches ecumenical theology there.

He also has produced a new book, "Global Responsibility: In Search of a New World Ethic," published by Crossroad, in which he contends that world peace cannot be achieved without "peace between religions."

They share ultimate goals of peace and harmony, he says, and through dialogue should combine their influences in that common quest.

He writes: "Humankind can less and less afford religions stirring up wars on this earth instead of making peace; making people fanatical instead of seeking reconciliation; practicing superiority instead of engaging in dialogue."

Mrs. Ranke-Heinemann's book, a best-seller of nearly half a million in Germany, now also is out in other European languages, as well as the English edition here.

It was denounced by New York's Cardinal John O'Connor as purveying "hatred, scandal and malice," although he said he had only read the dust jacket and didn't intend to read more.

Mrs. Ranke-Heinemann, married to religion professor Edmund Ranke and mother of two sons, said that "there is nothing of hatred" in the book.

She said it was based on reliable, historical scholarship, recording negative church views on sexuality through the centuries, but was written "to read like a glossy magazine."

"It's so taxi drivers can understand it."

She said she received a letter from the captain of a German coastal freighter saying the crew's reaction to the book was "falling from laughter into anger and from anger back into laughter."

She conceded bishops these days sometimes "say good things" about women being equal, but they "do the opposite."

"If women were equal, the church should alternate — one male pope, one female pope," she said sportingly. "Starting now, to even things up, for 2,000 years we should have a female pope."

That's "hyperbole," she said, "to make a point."

Amnesty for objectors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sixteen Protestant church leaders have urged Congress to enact legal amnesty for soldiers who refused as conscientious objectors to serve in the Persian Gulf War.

The message asked heads of the armed forces to end trials and punishment of objectors.

Thirty-three Catholic bishops earlier urged such a policy in a letter to President Bush.

Press gets new editor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Greg Warner, 36, former associate editor of the Florida Witness, is the new executive editor of Associated Baptist Press, set up as a news service for Southern Baptist weeklies across the country.

The service was organized by moderates after the denomination's now-entrenched fundamentalist administration fired the top editors of the denomination's official news agency, Baptist Press.

Methodists and Roman Catholics join in task

LAKE JUNALUSKA, N.C. (AP) — A joint international commission of Methodists and Roman Catholics says they "face an urgent task of evangelizing a world deeply affected by superstition and secularism, by indifference and injustice."

A summary of five years of dialogue between representatives of the two church bodies, released by the World Methodist Council here, calls on Catholics and Methodists to "take very seriously the degree of communion that both churches already share."

Noting that Methodists historically have centered on preaching while Catholics centered on the Eucharist, the summary adds: "In recent decades Methodists are increasingly appreciating the centrality of the Eucharist and Catholics the fundamental importance of the preaching of the word."

The report, entitled "The Apostolic Tradition," covers the fifth round of talks in a series that began in 1967. The complete 50-page text is to be issued in July.

Noting that Methodism ordains women while Catholicism forbids it, the summary recommends further exploration of how ordained ministry "most appropriately signifies and reflects the relationship between Christ and his own body, the church, which includes both men and women."

Nazi video?

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Jewish Committee has asked leaders of Germany and Austria to investigate the proliferation of video games using Nazi death camps as a theme.

Citing gruesome aspects of the games, such as points earned for gassing people and selling their gold fillings, AJC president Sholom D. Comay said in letters to German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and Austrian Chancellor Franz Vranitzky:

"When youngsters play to see who can commit a more complete genocide, we all lose."

A new relationship for Baylor

DALLAS — A special study committee named by Texas Baptists in the wake of Baylor University's surprise charter change last September drafted on May 13 a proposal outlining a new relationship between the state Baptist convention and the university.

Under the proposal, the Baptist General Convention of Texas would ask Baylor to agree that the convention directly elect 25 percent of regents elected annually and the university regents elect 25 percent. Of the remaining 50 percent, Baylor would nominate two Texas Baptists for each vacancy and the BGCT would choose one.

The proposal includes governance by a single-tiered board of regents for Baylor, eliminating the 48-member board of trustees previously elected by the BGCT.

The agreement also calls for at least a 90 percent vote of the regents to amend three key provisions of the university charter: that the university operate according to Christian and Baptist ideals; that university assets would be transferred to the BGCT upon dissolution; and that each regent be a Baptist.

The agreement "concludes whatever controversy may have existed between the convention and Baylor regarding Baylor's Sept. 21, 1990, action amending the university's charter."

The proposal will be presented to the BGCT Executive Board at its June 11 meeting in Dallas. If Baylor does not accept the recommended agreement by July 20 after its board meeting, the committee will make a new recommendation to the executive board at its September meeting.

If Baylor agrees to the proposal, the committee recommends tha the convention's coordinating boards for education and human welfare institutions consider releasing escrowed 1990 funds totalling $1.5 million, including interest earned.

The agreement also calls for all expenses directly related to the Baylor action to be deducted from the funds. Total BGCT committee expenses are about $80,000.

Robert Naylor of Fort Worth, chairman of the special committee, said he hoped that Baylor "would find in this proposal the protection it desired and the participation which the BGCT felt was basically necessary for a relationship."

Naylor termed the proposal "a positive effort toward reconciliation and a new relationship."

Phil Lineberger, president of the BGCT and pastor of Richardson Heights Baptist Church, Richardson, said, "I have a great deal of confidence that the proposal that has been made will be received in a good spirit and will be carefully evaluated and, hopefully, accepted by (Baylor President) Dr. (Herbert) Reynolds and the leadership of Baylor University.

"Our great desire is to continue to demonstrate a spirit of togetherness in our common goals of winning Texas to Christ and providing young people with a quality Christian education."

Child Evangelism Fellowship appoints new area director

The Mid-West Texas Chapter of The Child Evangelism Fellowship is pleased to announce the full-time appointment of Lee Bartel to serve as the Area Director. The Mid-West Texas Chapter stretches from Pecos and Alpine over to San Angelo and Abilene. Over one hundred thousand children between the ages of 4-14 live in this 5500 square mile area. Lee and his wife, Joy, join over 2000 full-time workers who serve in over 100 countries world-wide in ministries associated with Child Evangelism Fellowship, CEF.

CEF's focus is children. It ministers to adults by training them to be more effective in teaching children. Then by conducting various neighborhood meetings during the summer and the school year, children are reminded that adults are interested and care for them. The summer meetings are called 5-Day Clubs, while the weekly meetings during the school year are called Good News Clubs.

Training others and organizing large groups of volunteers are nothing new for Lee and Joy as they were previously involved in a CEF ministry in Omaha, Nebraska. Two years service as the Area Director there and three years on the CEF Nebraska State Board while operating a family-owned printing shop kept life interesting. Lee also served as the Chairman of Deacons for Faith Bible Church and as an Adult Sunday School Teacher.

Since moving here with their daughter, Carah, and son, Caleb, in addition to their CEF activities, involvement with a local church has remained a high priority. Lee is currently a deacon and youth leader at Midland Bible Church and Joy is a Sparks Director in the Awana program and a children ministries leader.

If CEF can be of service to your church or day-care center in training adults or teaching children, our mailing address is 725 Dormard, Midland, TX 79705. Our phone number is 915/685-1310. Please make Lee and Joy welcome as they serve in our area.

SCOREBOARD

Portland at LA Lakers, Game 3 (10 p.m. EDT). The Western Conference final is tied at one game each. The Trail Blazers won two of three games at the Forum this season, both in overtime.

SUPER JOB

Don Chaney, who guided the Houston Rockets to a 52-30 record despite the 25-game injury absence of All-Star center Hakeem Olajuwon, received the Red Auerbach Trophy as NBA coach of the year on Thursday.

The Rockets were 15-10 without Olajuwon and rallied off a 13-game winning streak shortly after he returned. Houston bettered its record of last season by 11 games, the second-best turnaround in the league.

SERIES

The Detroit Pistons have trailed 2-0 in a best-of-7 series seven times in their history — they have never come back to win any of those series.

Arkansas bound

BILL MURRAY

The state is the only one he has yet to set foot in, but he's planning to head there next year, the comedian says in the upcoming USA Weekend magazine.

"When it's the last one, it's more mysterious than ever. How can I possibly not go there?" said the former "Saturday Night Live" comic.

Murray said he's hopeful that Arkansas will provide the same type of culinary revelation that Kentucky did.

"We knew they had the best fried chicken, and sure enough, we found this great place called Kentucky Fried Chicken," he said. "They even made it extra crispy."

Who's house is this anyway?

"I went by there and said to the guy, 'What are you doing?' and he told me he just wanted to leave it there for 20 minutes or so," the comedian said Wednesday. "But come to think of it, that was a month ago."

Hope's attorneys have told house mover Al Hampton to remove the 22-foot-high building from the vacant lot, but Hampton hasn't complied.

Hampton wasn't available Thursday for comment, said a woman who answered the telephone at his home.

Hampton's company was moving the house on April 19 when it got mired in a flower bed. City authorities let him put the building on Hope's property. It was the only vacant land in the area and the house was blocking the road.

"Our position is it's got to get moved, but it's a unique situation," said City Attorney Joe Fletcher. "It's the property owner's responsibility for keeping property clear, but obviously (Hope) didn't put it there."

SATURDAY, MAY 25, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your personal relationships are in the spotlight now. Stay on your toes. A promotion or raise is possible by late summer. A change of lifestyle will have multiple benefits in October. Long-distance travel is likely before the winter holidays. Avoid risky career and business gambles in early 1992.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Dixie Carter, jazzman Miles Davis, country singers Tom T. Hall and Jessi Colter.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A friend or relative could try your patience. State your views calmly but firmly. Collect unwanted household items and donate them to a favorite charity. Family chats are delightfully informative.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Being inquisitive could help you uncover a real bargain. Small children play an important role in your domestic affairs today. Keep in touch with someone who has helped you in the past.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Change your spending habits to relieve a temporary financial strain. Buy in quantity whenever practical. Your curiosity about a stranger could lead to happy new romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Financial matters require prompt attention. Seek experts' advice if legal questions are involved. Read the fine print before signing contracts. Loved one may feel neglected. Be more attentive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Weekend employment could be the answer to temporary financial woes. Enlist family's help. Socializing will lift your spirits this evening. Romance looks more promising than in the past.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Seek quiet surroundings to complete important paperwork. A telephone call or letter brings great news! Going out with your pals tonight could be expensive; avoid going overboard.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Productivity is what counts most now. Concentrate on working out the details before launching a project. Get several bids if renovating. You could lose out if you shilly-shally in romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Bowing out of the spotlight today gives you a chance to unwind. Make a list of your priorities. You may need to reorganize your life. A small child makes an important disclosure.

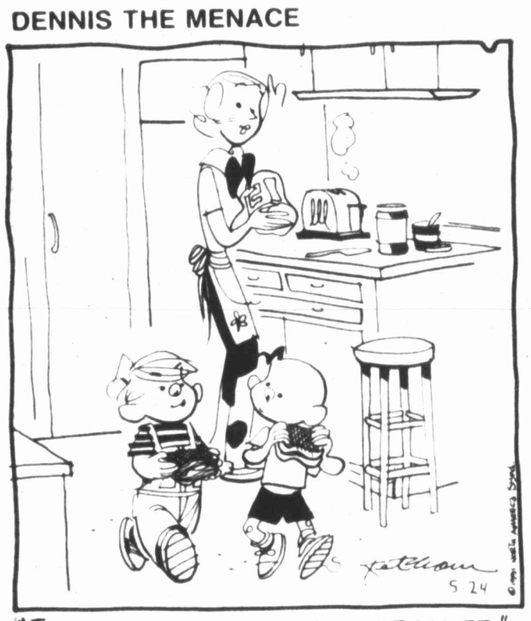

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Study a financial plan closely; it could be right on the money! An element of secrecy can benefit you in some ways. Be ready to take direct action. Romance may have to wait.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The focus today is on your finances. Find ways to increase your income. Expensive travel is best postponed. Use the fax or telephone. The direct approach works best in romance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are a dynamic healer of hearts and homes today. Other people look to you for guidance. You sparkle in a group setting! Spending a quiet evening at home will recharge your batteries.

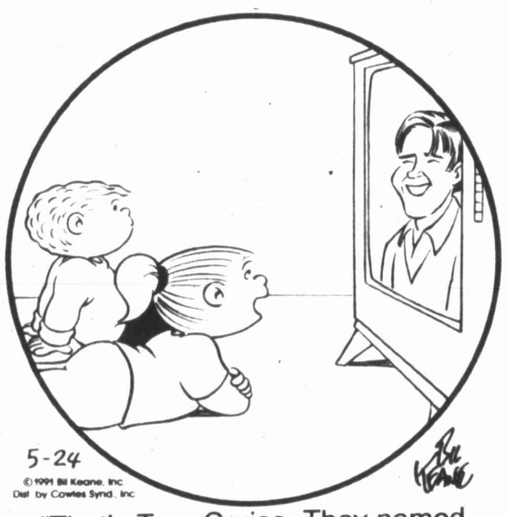

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Welcome surprising news today. A message from someone at a distance boosts your ego. Expand your circle of acquaintances — you are tuned in to the right crowd. Avoid talking shop at parties.

County officials to meet Tuesday

Martin County Commissioners have scheduled a regular meeting for Tuesday in the county courthouse to consider redistricting of precincts, according to County Judge Bob Deavenport.

Among other items on the agenda, commissioners are scheduled to consider bids for replacement pickups for the road and bridge department, budget amendments, forming a safety committee and implementing a drug policy.

University professor gets Sears award

Pug Parris, assistant professor of physical education at McMurry University, was selected as winner of a 1990-91 Sears-Roebuck Foundation Teaching Excellence and Campus Leadership Award.

Ron Sharp, manager of Abilene Sears-Roebuck, presented the award to Parris Friday at McMurry's annual senior recognition dinner.

Parris is one of nearly 700 faulty members being recognized nationally by the Sears-Roebuck Foundation for resourcefulness and leadership as an independent college educator. Parris and McMurry received $1,000 each, with the college to receive the funds in a grant. Winners are selected by independent committees on each campus.

The program is administered nationally by the Stamford, Conn.-based Foundation for Independent Higher Education and regionally by Thomas R. Bria, president of the Texas Independent College Fund.

Parris received her bachelor of science degree from McMurry in May 1973 and her master of education from Abilene Christian University in August 1977. She joined the McMurry faculty as an instructor in August 1978 and currently is working on her dissertation toward a doctoral of education in physical education from Texas A & M University in College Station.

Parris is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Deavenport of Stanton.

Diabetes center has summer camp

The West Texas Diabetes Center of the Southwest has scheduled a summer camp for boys and girls between the ages of 7-17 at the Prude Ranch between Midland and Odessa June 9-15.

Space is limited to 60 campers, but there are still scholarships available for anyone qualifying, according to camp official Lisa Wallace.

Activities will include lots of healthy fun and physical and educational activities, Wallace said.

For more information contact Wallace at 1-915-686-0000.

Senate approves fast-track trade pact

In a 59-36 vote, the Senate followed the House's lead in extending the so-called "fast-track" authority for two years.

Bush, in Boston today to deliver a speech on trade, had said he needed the fast-track power to proceed with talks to tear down barriers between the United States and Mexico and other trading partners.

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., led the opposition, saying a free trade zone with Mexico will destroy the ailing textile industry in his home state.

He said South Carolina could lose 1.4 million jobs in the next decade as companies move to Mexico where labor is cheap. "That is why we are so desperate," Hollings said during debate today.

The fast-track concept effectively bars Congress from changing a trade agreement once it is signed, forcing lawmakers to make a take-it-or-leave-it vote on a negotiated treaty.

The House approved the proposal Thursday, 231-192.

Sen. Don Riegle, D-Mich., who also opposed Bush, said he will not abandon his fight. He intends to push legislation that will allow Congress to change any agreement with Mexico to ensure American jobs and the environment are protected.

"This U.S.-Mexico free trade agreement is really a jobs program for Mexico," he said today. "What is clear, the United States needs a jobs program for this country."

Bush on Thursday said he "couldn't be more pleased" with the House action on an issue he has called vitally important to the hemisphere's future.

Bush says foreign governments would refuse to talk with the United States about tariff-reducing measures unless U.S. trade negotiators had the flexibility and power to make deals — without having them changed by Congress.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and a crucial Bush ally in the trade fight, said the vote was a "momentous occasion for the Senate," determining whether the United States chooses to "move forward or backward as a country."

"There should be no mistake about it — the stakes are high," Bentsen said before the vote. He noted that fast-track affects talks not only with Mexico but also the Uruguay Round negotiations with 108 countries under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Bentsen supports the view advanced by U.S. and Mexican governments — as well as the business community — that a free trade agreement removing tariffs will benefit the United States by opening up new export markets and boosting the economy.

A North American free trade zone, comprising the United States, Mexico and Canada, would form the largest consumer market in the world.

Report: U.S. has ignored MIAs since World War I

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government remained silent while thousands of Americans disappeared into Soviet, North Korean and Vietnamese prisons following the wars of this century, a report by Senate Republican staffers says.

Americans have languished in Soviet prisons since U.S. troops intervened in the Russian Revolution and civil war in 1918, the 112-page report released Thursday by the GOP minority staff of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

It cited classified documents and personal accounts in estimating that 20,000 U.S. troops in German POW camps during World War II were captured by the Red Army, and many vanished into prisons and slave labor camps.

The report slammed the Pentagon for its handling of the 2,273 Americans still listed as missing in action as a result of the war in Indochina.

It said the Pentagon, which says there is no evidence of live POWs in Vietnam, has acted "contrary to common sense" in discounting all live-sighting reports as flawed and thus invalid.

Defense Department policy "appears to be geared toward disproving each live-sighting report" rather than giving the "highest national priority" to resolving the MIA issue, the report contended.

The investigators said their findings were "remarkably similar" to those of Army Col. Millard A. Peck, who recently resigned as head of the Defense Intelligence Agency's Special Office for Prisoners of War and Missing in Action in protest over what he called the government "charade" in trying to resolve the MIA issue.

Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams, questioned at a news conference Thursday, said there had been seven formal investigations over the past decade into the government's handling of the POW-MIA issue.

"They have all concluded that there is no conspiracy, that there is no coverup, that the government is undertaking a good-faith effort to account for prisoners-of-war and those Americans listed as missing in action," Williams said.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., in an introduction to the report, wrote of a "dismaying scenario" where communist governments have used U.S. POWs as political bargaining chips and slave laborers while Washington for diplomatic reasons has "downplayed or denied" reports of POW-MIAs.

Helms, the ranking Republican on the Foreign Relations Committee, expressed support for a bill to establish a Senate Select Committee on POW-MIA Affairs to further investigate the issue.

The question of whether Americans are still being held in Vietnam has gained prominence recently as the Bush administration considers establishing diplomatic relations with the Hanoi government.

The Senate report said the Soviet Red Army captured and never returned dozens of soldiers from the American Expeditionary Force that fought in Russia in 1918. Nineteen were spotted a decade later in Moscow's Lubyanka Prison, and many others were seen in a Siberian labor camp.

Clinics vow not to keep silent

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Family planning clinics around the country say they'll forfeit millions of dollars in federal money rather than abide by a government ban on abortion counseling.

"Our principles are not for sale," Jill June, head of Iowa's Planned Parenthood affiliate, said Thursday after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled 5-4 that clinics using federal funds cannot discuss abortion with their patients.

Abortion foes hailed the ruling as a step toward reversing the landmark Roe v. Wade decision legalizing abortion in 1973.

"It's about time," said Dottie Roberts of Family Action, an anti-abortion group based in Lake Stevens, Wash. "The general public is fed up with the biggest disaster of sex education any civilized society has seen."

"It can no longer be presumed by the abortion industry that the nation's highest court is in their pocket," said Arlene Champoux of Massachusetts Citizens for Life.

But family-planning officials said the ruling would mean two standards of care — one for the poor, one for the rich — and prevent doctors from fulfilling their ethical duty to inform patients fully of their medical options.

Others said some clinics that forgo federal dollars might have to cut services or close.

The high court on Thursday upheld regulations issued by the Reagan administration in 1988 that say federally funded clinics may not discuss abortion with pregnant women or tell them where to get one.

The federal government supports about 4,000 clinics serving more than 4 million poor women each year.

Faye Wattleton, president of Planned Parenthood Federation of America, said her organization's network of clinics would continue to counsel on abortion. She said she expects Congress will enact legislation to counter the decision.

In California, a spokeswoman for the state Health and Welfare Agency said Gov. Pete Wilson would use state money if necessary to protect more than 200 clinics that serve 400,000 poor women.

"The governor is so committed to preventive prenatal services, I can't imagine him not bending over backwards to make sure the funds get there," said Kassy Perry.

In Washington state, Health Secretary Kristine Gebbie said state government there would do the same. Washington has 23 family planning agencies.

The Reagan administration regulations were challenged by the city and state of New York and by Dr. Irving Rust, medical director of a clinic in New York City's South Bronx. They were put on hold until the issue was resolved in court.

The clinic that lost the challenge said it too will quit taking federal money rather than keep silent about women's legal options.

Dinah Farrington, executive director of Indiana's Planned Parenthood, said the ruling could force clinics to withhold life-saving information.

Odessa students upset over racism articles

ODESSA (AP) — Several articles and a poll in a high school yearbook attempting to debunk charges of racism have actually stirred up racial tension.

The articles, in the 1990-91 Odessa Permian High School yearbook, were accompanied by a pie chart showing the results of a survey asking 200 Permian juniors how often they heard the word "nigger."

The students who publish the yearbook say they were only attempting to debunk charges of racism in H.G. Bissinger's 1990 book "Friday Night Lights," which centers on the city's obsession with high school football.

But minority leaders and some students said they found the survey, and particularly the use of the epithet, inappropriate and offensive.

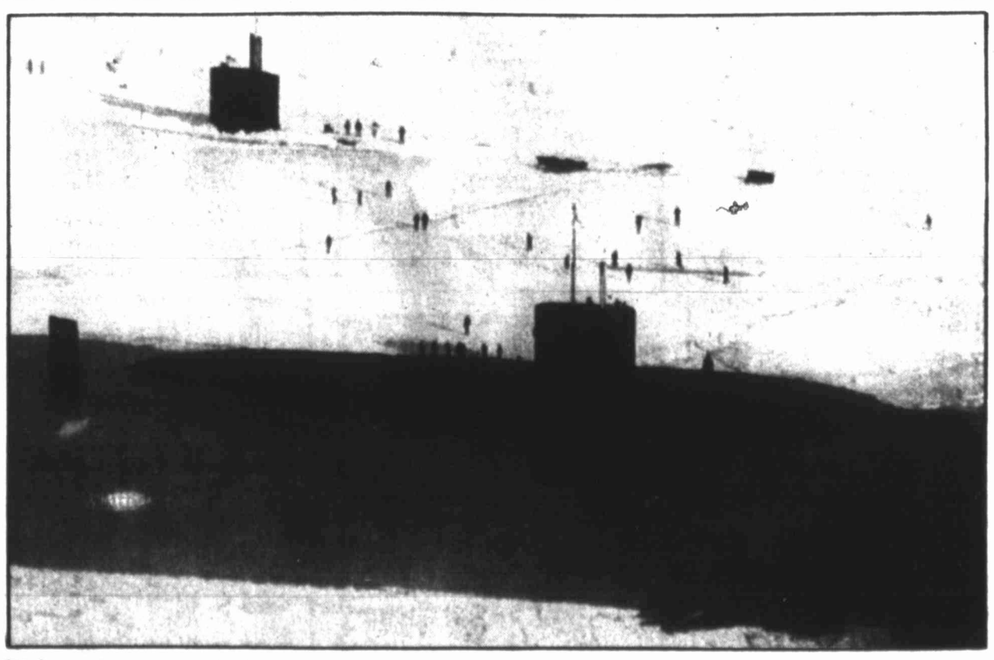

In an unscientific poll, 20 percent of the students surveyed said they heard the epithet every day, while 19 percent heard it weekly and 18 percent heard it monthly. Nine percent said they heard it three or four times a year, while 35 percent heard it "less often," the yearbook said.

Gene Collins, an member of the NAACP in Odessa, said the organization plans to meet with Ector County School District officials to discuss the yearbook.

"I'm also going to talk with some of the students," Collins said. "If they want to demonstrate, I'll be right beside them, even if it's just one student."

School Principal Jerald McClary refused comment on the yearbook, but said he did not review the articles before they were published.

Flo Lambeth, the teacher who supervises production of the yearbook, defended the publication, saying the survey and related articles were necessary to defend the school against charges of racism in Bissinger's book.

Parks, wildlife panel adopts fee increases

AUSTIN (AP) — The cost to hunt, fish, camp or just visit a state park will increase under fees approved by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission.

The new fees, expected to produce from between $20 million to $30 million in additional revenue per year, take effect Sept. 1.

Parks and Wildlife officials have said more money is needed to improve the state parks, offset slumping or flat revenues from hunting licenses and the cigarette tax, and wean the agency from general tax funds.

State parks received about 21 million visits last year, officials said.

Under the new fees, entering a state park will increase from $2 per vehicle to a range of $2 to $6.

Resident hunting and fishing licenses will increase to $13 each; a $3 increase in the hunting license and a $5 increase for the fishing permit.

A combination hunting and fishing license will increase from $15 to $25.

Registration fees will rise from $12 to $18 for a motorboat under 16-feet long and $18 to $27 for boats 16-feet to 26-feet.

Campsite fees will range from $6 to $16 depending on utilities offered.

The commission took no action on a proposed annual $10 fee to use state parks — called a conservation permit. A bill allowing the commission to adopt the fee is being considered by Gov. Ann Richards.

The commission also adopted hunting and fishing regulations for the 1991-92 season, which also take effect Sept. 1.

Richards defends panel appointment

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards, who says she enjoys hunting and fishing, appeared before the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission to try and quiet a furor raised by one of her appointees to the panel.

Before a packed crowd Thursday, Richards recalled when she hunted with her father. "I remember those hunts fondly. With the smells of kerosene oil, wet wool jackets and gun oil mixed with tall tales and men's laughter," she said.

Richards added, "Of course, much of my courtship was spent cleaning birds taken on hunts organized by my future husband."

She was on hand because of a remark made last month by Commissioner Terese Hershey of Houston, who criticized a Parks and Wildlife hunting promotion program by saying, "I think I've done well by not throwing up."

Governor looks for deal on jail overcrowding

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards hopes state and county officials can strike a deal over the thousands of state felons now crowding local jails.

Richards and lawmakers met Thursday with officials from counties that won a lawsuit over the in mate backlog.

She said progress was being made but stopped short of predicting that an agreement would be reached.

"I don't know whether it will or not. I do think, though, that we've made tremendous progress, and ... there's a whole new feeling of trust among the people who are involved in these discussions," she said.

"By and large, everything is very good. I just can't promise you that it's a done deal yet, because it isn't," said Richards.

Because of federal court population limits on the Texas prison system, some 9,000 state prison-bound felons now are being held in 54 county jails around the state.

Two lawsuits were filed against the state by counties over jail crowding.

Last June, state District Judge Joe Hart of Austin ruled that the state must pay 12 counties $40 per prisoner per day. The ruling could mean the state owes some $110 million to the dozen counties that sued, although the state is appealing.

In addition, U.S. District Judge James DeAnda ruled in February that the state must set up a $750,000 fund for Harris County to use to rent jail space in other counties to house the 1,200 state prisoners it is holding. The state may be required to pay more, and it is appealing that ruling, too.

The Senate has approved — and the House is considering — a bill that would make a deal with counties over the inmates.

It would acknowledge the state's duty to accept those prisoners and authorize a one-time payment to counties. It also would require that, after Sept. 1, 1995, the state accept all felons from county jails within 60 days of prison processing paperwork being completed.

Parades to salute veterans

Parades, parties and picnics will mark the traditional start of summer this Memorial Day Weekend, which promises poignant remembrances of the 26 Texans killed in our nation's latest war.

One of the biggest observances will take place Saturday at Fort Hood, where officials at the world's largest military installation are expecting a crowd of 100,000 for its "Heroes' Homecoming" celebration.

The event will salute U.S. military personnel who served during Operation Desert Storm "whether they were over there or over here," said Sam Baker, festival spokesman.

"The United States has the finest war technology and the most finely tuned military in the world, and we need to celebrate that," Baker said.

Other large celebrations are scheduled in Austin, Dallas, Houston and San Antonio with smaller events planned in cities, towns and military installations across the state.

Secretary of the Army Michael P.W. Stone will address the Fort Hood gathering just inside the fort's main gate, and Lee Greenwood will perform an hourlong concert sure to include "God Bless the U.S.A."

Chaplain Col. Don Breland will lead the crowd in a moment of remembrance for those killed in the Persian Gulf War.

"This Memorial Day celebration is particularly important because of the Persian Gulf War and the superior performance of our military forces and their leadership," Baker said. "That leadership and performance kept our casualties much lower than anyone could have imagined. It's something Americans can be proud of."

Texas A&M University is planning to salute the troops this fall.

Because the school is between spring and summer sessions, it has designated September "Desert Storm Month," a celebration culminating in the Sept. 28 football game in College Station against Southwestern Louisiana, where 600 students, faculty and staff served in Operation Desert Storm.

"We wanted to honor servicemen and women, but being that we're not in session, we decided a monthlong celebration would be a good substitute," said Mary Jo Powell, a university spokeswoman.

Several of the 100 squadrons of the Confederate Air Force will perform in Memorial Day Weekend airshows, including one in Breckenridge.

In Houston, a parade, bands and a POW-MIA candlelight ceremony Saturday will mark the city's annual Memorial Day celebration, dedicated this year to the servicemen and women who served in Desert Storm.

AUSTIN — Gov. Ann Richards confers with House Speaker Pro Tem Wilhelmina Delco, right, during Thursday's House session at the State Capitol. The governor is keeping tabs on major legislation as the end of the session draws near.

House OKs property tax exemption change

AUSTIN (AP) — The House approved a proposed constitutional amendment to allow voters to save their partial homestead exemptions from school district property taxes.

"Your homeowners' property taxes will go up unless we pass this constitutional amendment," said Rep. Paul Colbert, D-Houston.

The measure, which earlier passed the Senate, won approval with a vote of 124-17. It was returned to senators for consideration of House changes.

If it wins final legislative approval, the proposal will go on an Aug. 10 statewide ballot.

The bill is needed because the state's new school finance law created countywide education taxing regions for school districts. A minimum local property tax is imposed, and revenue is shifted among school districts within the regions.

However, the governing boards for the new taxing regions don't have the same authority as school boards currently do to grant homestead exemptions.

Of the state's 1,050 school districts, 259 currently grant homestead exemptions.

The school finance law was passed after poor school districts sued the state, and the Texas Supreme Court ordered lawmakers to even out education funding available to school districts.

The House also tentatively approved a bill that would give teachers and other public school employees access to a statewide group health insurance plan. The state would put no money into the program.

In other Thursday action, the House:

— Gave its final approval, 115-23, to bill to honor slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. with a full state holiday. The measure, which earlier passed the Senate, returns to senators for consideration of amendments.

— Tentatively approved a bill meant to prevent professional athletes from simultaneously drawing a salary and receiving worker's compensation payments when injured.

— Tentatively approved authorization for universities to collect a general service fee of up to $12 per semester hour, up from the current $6.

— Tentatively approved a bill allowing Texas A&M University system schools to increase their student recreational fee from the current maximum of $35 per semester to $50. Texas A&M students voted in 1987 for the higher fee, and the Student Senate affirmed the vote in 1989.

— Tentatively approved a bill that would create a defense to prosecution for unintentionally doing something that injured a child, elderly person or invalid.

Spousal rape bill passes on voice vote

AUSTIN (AP) — House and Senate sponsors have reservations about their bill to make it easier to prosecute someone who sexually assaults his or her spouse.

But with only four days remaining in the legislative session, it appeared they would take what they have.

Senate sponsor Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, said the measure "makes it a bit easier for someone who has been raped to file a suit and be successful against their spouse."

The measure cleared the Senate on voice vote Thursday, after Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown added an amendment which said prosecution against a spouse would require "a showing of bodily injury or the threat of serious bodily injury."

Brown, R-Lake Jackson, said the amendment would enable prosecutors "to make a clear determination" whether to pursue a complaint.

Sen. Ellis said, "Obviously, it's not the best of all worlds. I would have preferred the language that came over in the original House bill. I would prefer there be no conditions."

He said accepting Brown's amendment was the key to Senate passage.

"I think today, for the bill to make it through the Senate by unanimous vote, is a major policy shift," Ellis said.

"I think my colleagues in the Senate who have gone on record in support of it at least showed there is some sensitivity to the fact that rape is rape," he said.

House sponsor, Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, said of the amendment, "I don't like it a bit."

"It makes it harder for people to make good, clean arrests. It makes it harder for DAs to prosecute," she said.

But she added that she would accept the change, which would send the bill to the governor.

Ms. Danburg said although Brown and Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, have worked hard to cultivate a pro-victim, anti-crime image, "They obviously could care less about the victims of crime when those victims are married to their assailant."

Ms. Danburg said Lyon would not let the bill out of committee without the amendment. "Who's he trying to protect? Rapists?"

Lyon said through a spokesman that Ms. Danburg, "After further checking out the truth, has now publicly retracted her statement and has personally apologized to me."

Ms. Danburg said, "I didn't go that far," but confirmed that she had apologized.

Senators also approved a bill to provide a procedure for increasing prison capacity, which has been set at 95 percent of capacity because of a federal court order against overcrowding.

The puss caterpillar, also known as the wooly worm or tree asp, is the most unpleasant stinging caterpillar in Texas. Severe pain is the most common symptom of contact with a puss caterpillar. Swelling, shock-like syndromes and convulsions have also been reported.

Doctors warn of stinging caterpillars

DALLAS (AP) — This is the season to beware of tiny hairy caterpillars that pack a big sting.

"I tell my grandchildren, 'Anything with long hair on it, you do not touch,'" says Dr. J.W. Stewart, Texas A&M Extension entomologist in Uvalde.

There are several types of stinging caterpillars in Texas, Stewart said, including the io moth, saddleback caterpillar, buck moth and hag moth.

But the most unpleasant crawling critter of the bunch is the puss caterpillar, also known by the deceptively cute name of wooly worm — or, more ominously, the tree asp.

A report in the May issue of the Annals of Emergency Medicine warns that the puss caterpillar can cause severe pain. Although no deaths have been reported, two U.S. Army doctors who studied the effects of the caterpillar's sting say it has caused swelling, shock-like syndromes and convulsions.

The caterpillars do not have a stinger such as a wasp or bee. Instead, their venom flows through hollow spines.

Reaction to the caterpillar's venom is fast. The site of the sting often swells rapidly and limbs can double in size. Other symptoms include headaches, fever, nausea, vomiting and cramps, said doctors Robert T. Pinson and James Alan Morgan.

"The cases I treated complained of intense pain, with a couple requiring treatment with narcotics," said Pinson. The research was conducted at Darnall Army Community Hospital at Fort Hood.

Hands and arms are most often affected, the doctors said. The best way to avoid being stung is to stay out of the caterpillar's way, Pinson said.

"The fur is very fine, almost the texture of a pussy willow," Pinson said.

Populations of the puss caterpillar vary from year to year, depending on the number of natural predators, wasps and flies. Scientists said it is too early to guess what this year's population will be.

Hopes of land reform wane in Paraguay

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — When Gen. Alfredo Stroessner was overthrown and exiled two years ago, thousands of peasants began to dream of owning the land they till.

It hasn't happened. Peasants who waited received nothing. Those who seized their land lost it again to soldiers or vigilantes.

"They burned our homes and arrested 13 people," said Juan de Dios Meza, who joined 500 families in taking over an estate 185 miles north of Asuncion, the capital. "We were trying to grow mandioca, corn and cotton."

Much of this nation bordering Brazil, Argentina and Bolivia is sparsely populated farm country. It is the size of California and has a subtropical climate, good soil, plenty of rain and only 4 million people.

"The problem isn't lack of land, it's the concentration of land in few hands," said Dionisio Gauto, director of a Roman Catholic Church group that is drafting legislation to submit to Congress on behalf of peasants.

"Paraguay has 96 million acres, of which half are suitable for farming," he said. "There's more than enough land for everyone."

Americas Watch, a U.S. human rights group, reported this year that 78 percent of Paraguay's land is held by 1 percent of the population.

"Actually, 41 foreign companies own 36.3 percent of the land and large Paraguayan landholders own another 42 percent," it said in a report.

Much of the land is used by its German, Japanese and Argentine owners as pasture for cattle.

Paraguay has 300,000 farm families, who make up about 60 percent of the population. At least one family in three works someone else's land.

During the 34 years Stroessner was in power, the government sold nearly all the public land to foreigners or gave it military officers, Gauto said.

Under Stroessner's constitution of 1967, a foreigner cannot own more than about 25,000 acres. Meza's group of 500 families used that as a legal basis in May 1990 when they occupied part of a 100,000-acre estate owned by a Brazilian.

Police and soldiers asked them to leave at first, Meza said, and drove them out with bulldozers two months later.

About 12,000 peasants have tried to occupy land. Nearly all were thrown off and hundreds have been jailed.

"Thousands of landless peasants, because of ... promises to respect human rights, thought that the February 1989 coup meant their moment had arrived and justice would take place," Americas Watch said in its report.

Mina Feliciangeli, leftist Workers Party candidate for mayor of Asuncion, said large landholdings "should be expropriated whether they're productive or not."

Gauto, asked whether the situation was becoming explosive, said: "Exactly the opposite. People are becoming resigned. They think things won't ever change."

How's that?

Q. What is "no-fault" auto insurance?

A. No-fault auto insurance means that in the event of an accident, neither driver is liable for damage to the other vehicle. Each driver's own insurance company is responsible for repairing damage, according to a local insurance agent.

Man shot to death

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A shotgun toting man was shot to death after wounding two San Antonio police officers during a two-hour standoff at an apartment complex, police said.

Officers said John R. Ellis, 40, was shot to death late Thursday after he fired two shots at officers and taunted them by shouting, "Ha! Ha! You missed me."

The man was then shot in the head and neck with a .12-gauge shotgun after he taunted the officers, Sgt. Paul Buske, a police spokesman said. Ellis was pronounced dead at the scene.

Buske said the officer who shot Ellis was Jerry Seffel, 45, a 21-year veteran officer.

Ellis was pointing a .410-gauge pump shotgun at Seffel at the time the fatal shots were fired.

Sgt. Bill Ewell, a sex crimes supervisor, was struck by pellets and debris in his left eye and left side of his face as he stood around a corner from an apartment where the gunman was holed up.

Sgt. Stanley Robert Biedrzycki, 38, was wounded in the leg after a blast fired by the gunman ricocheted, Buske said.

Officers said the standoff began after police were called to the scene because Ellis and his girlfriend were having a fight. The woman had been injured, officers said.

Officers said the girlfriend, identified as Redonna Haby, 28, was bleeding from her left arm and from wounds around her mouth. Officers talked to her and another woman for a time and then started walking to Ellis' apartment when he fired one shot at them.

Special Weapons and Tactics team members were called to the scene and the area around the gunman's apartment was sealed off, Buske said.

"The suspect would intermittently come out of his apartment onto the patio and fire," Buske said.

Export drop eases pressure on transport

WASHINGTON (AP) — Grain exports are down, but the Agriculture Department says the decline has helped ease pressure on the U.S. transportation system.

Moreover, rains have replenished much of the river system that serves the main grain areas. Stream flows were reduced sharply by drought in recent years.

"The return of normal navigation conditions on the Mississippi River system has allowed barge shipments to increase seasonally," the department's Economic Research Service said Thursday. "Rail and barge equipment should be adequate for wheat and coarse grain harvests."

Although fuel prices are down from year-ago levels, operating costs for all transportation modes have increased. However, the report said, competitive pressures have limited rail increases and held barge rates down.

Coarse grains, called feed grains in the United States, are mainly corn but also include sorghum, oats and barley. The report analyzed the supply and demand situation for those, along with hay and pasture conditions.

Global production of coarse grain in 1991-92 has been projected by USDA at 830.6 million metric tons, up about 6 percent from 1990-91, due to larger U.S. crops expected this year, while foreign production is expected to drop 4 percent.

USDA projects total U.S. feed grain output this year at 240.4 million tons, up about 10 million tons from last year.

Department officials caution that the 1991 projections are highly tentative and are based primarily on yield trends and assumptions that weather patterns will be normal.

USDA's first "all crops" estimates for 1991 production of corn, soybeans and many other important commodities will be issued in August.

A metric ton of is about 2,205 pounds and is the unit favored in international trade and in reporting total U.S. feed grains. One ton is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or sorghum, 45.9 bushels of barley, or 68.9 bushels of oats.

World trade in feed grains is expected to be 96.1 million tons, up from 92.3 million tons in 1990-91 — which is the lowest in three years.

Looking at hay prospects, the report said farmers indicated in March they would harvest hay from 61.4 million acres in 1991, down about 150,000 acres from 1990.

The stockpile of hay at the beginning of the 1991-92 marketing year on May 1 was estimated at 27.1 million short tons of 2,000 pounds each, the same as a year earlier.

"In early May, pasture and range conditions in most of the country were equal to, or better, than a year earlier," the report said.

Head Start graduates

The Stanton Head Start graduation was at the Stanton High School Auditorium Thursday night with 18 students in the program. The students began the program with a musical processional and the Pledge of Allegiance.

High school faculty member Charlie Pinkerton gave the invocation for the program, followed by the singing of "My Country 'tis of Thee" by the graduating boys and girls.

The children added color to the graduating procession with a style show for the audience.

Elementary principal Jim White gave the address to the audience, advising parents and friends of the students to "believe in children because there is faith in their eyes, hope in their attitude and love in their touch."

Grady High honors its outstanding students

Seniors Laurie Romine and Michael McKaskle were presented the scholar athlete awards by the U.S. Army Reserve for their excellence in athletics and academics.

Romine received one of the state's highest honors presented to the top student at a high school. She received the distinguished State of Texas Honor Graduate Award. The award provides a full-tuition scholarship to any state-supported college or university in Texas.

McKaskle, along with Romine, received top honors in the UIL competition and for being at the top 10 percent of their class.

The Mirabeau B. Lamar Award was presented to Brent Rivas by Masonic Lodge No. 951. The annual award is given by the lodge for character, citizenship and scholarship.

The Golden "G" departmental awards for excellence in curriculum areas went to the following students:

Vocational agricultural — Heather Madison; English — Laurie Romine; science — Elizabeth Rivas; social studies — Laurie Romine; math — Laurie Romine; industrial technology — Armando Alaniz; and foreign language — Elizabeth Rivas.

The Presidential Academic Fitness Awards was presented to students who scored above 80 percent on math and verbal achievement tests. The student must have an overall "A" average and completed 12 or more credits in higher level courses.

They are: fifth grade — Sarah Rivas; eighth grade — Jake Hartman, Rawley Mims, Toby Shewmake, Angela Tubb, Cornelio Wiebe, Issack Wiebe and John Woodward II; seniors — Michael McKaskle, Laurie Romine and Brent Rivas.

Romine was also awarded the Principals Leadership Award for outstanding student leadership.

The Principals-Academic Award for achieving the highest overall school year class average went to Elizabeth Rivas with an average of 96.8.

Bradley Gibson was awarded the UIL Walt Disney Dreamers and Doers Award.

Various academic and athletic scholarships went to Romine, McKaskle, Sherrie McMorries, Heather Madison and Cade Robertson.

Redistricting map submitted

DALLAS (AP) — Attorneys for the city have submitted a controversial city council redistricting plan with four black and two Hispanic seats to the U.S. Justice Department for approval.

The City Council on Monday narrowly approved the 14-1 single-member district plan, which included eight predominantly white seats. More than 50 percent of the city's residents are minorities. The plan was sent to the Justice Department Thursday.

The plaintiffs in the 1988 voting rights lawsuit against the city said they were not satisfied with the plan and were expected to ask a federal appeals court to send the case back to U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer in Dallas.

Plaintiffs Marvin Crenshaw and Roy Williams, failed city council candidates who are black, favor a plan with five mostly black districts.

Mike McKool, an attorney representing the city, said the city will ask the Justice Department whether the a fifth black city council seat is required under the Voting Rights Act. Under both plans, the mayor would be elected at-large.

Delegations squabble over SSC funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Illinois lawmakers upset about cuts to a home-state physics project are joining forces with super collider opponents to slash construction funding for the $8.25 billion atom smasher being built in Texas.

Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, said the SSC's opposition picks up prestige and strength with the addition of members of the Illinois congressional delegation, who blame the collider for a $43.5 million cut to the Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory outside Chicago.

"It's very ominous," Bryant said Thursday. "Now you've got a whole delegation mad. Ironically, they're mad because the Appropriations Committee would not approve a new start at Fermilab, not because of any cuts. But that's what got them riled up so they're gunning for us now."

SSC opponents will have their chance to take aim at the SSC next week, when the House considers a $21.5 billion energy and water appropriations bill that includes $434 million for the superconducting super collider.

The House Rules Committee voted Thursday to allow Rep. Sidney Yates, D-Ill., to offer an amendment that would strip the SSC of $43.5 million and use the money for improvements at Fermilab.

Rep. Jim Slattery, D-Kan., will also be allowed to offer an amendment to strip the SSC of all federal funding.

Sixteen members of the Illinois delegation warned in a letter this week to House Appropriations Committee Chairman Jamie L. Whitten, D-Miss., that they would support efforts to kill the SSC entirely unless $43.5 million is set aside for improvements at Fermilab.

The Illinois lawmakers failed, however, to convince the Appropriations Committee Wednesday to transfer $43.5 million from the SSC's 1992 budget to Fermilab.

Although the Appropriations Committee gave the collider $100 million less than what President Bush requested, Slattery and members of the Illinois delegation believe the SSC is siphoning funds away from other science projects.

They're also afraid that the situation for other science projects would deteriorate further as construction on the SSC gets under way in Texas and the demand for federal funds increases significantly.

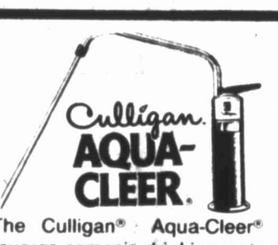

Slattery said SSC proponents have exaggerated the potential for technical spinoffs, and complained that the estimated cost of the SSC had risen from $5.6 billion in 1987 to the current, official $8.25 billion.

That estimate, however, does not include the costs of detectors, spare magnets, operating costs during construction or adequate contingency funds, Slattery testified.

Slattery said he is also skeptical about the Energy Department's promises to raise $1.7 billion of the SSC's costs from foreign countries. The only commitment to date is a $50 million pledge from India.

"This has turned out to be one of the hungriest hogs at the federal trough," Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Ill., told the Appropriations Committee Wednesday.

But Rep. Joe Barton, an Ennis Republican whose district includes the SSC site, predicted SSC backers would win the fight next week and suggested "our opponents are gluttons for punishment. I can't recall a vote that we haven't won, by margins of 2-1 or 3-1."

CITY OF STANTON
COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT FUND
TEXAS COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

The City of Stanton has completed its 1988 Texas Community Development Program (TCDP) project under a contract with the Texas Department of Commerce. This paving/drainage improvements project involved the construction of a asphalt paving and concrete curb and gutter on selected streets in the City of Stanton.

A public hearing on this TCDP project will be held at 7:00 o'clock P.M. on June 10, 1991, in the Stanton City Hall, 102 West School Street, Stanton, Texas. The purpose of this public hearing will be to discuss and evaluate the City's implementation of this paving/drainage improvements project.

Citizens are encouraged to attend this public hearing and present their views to the City. Written comments will be accepted by the City until this public hearing is concluded.

For further information about the City's 1988 TCDP project, contact Danny Fryar, City Manager, City of Stanton, at (915) 756-3301. Handicapped individuals who might have difficulty in attending this public hearing should contact the Stanton City Hall office to arrange for special assistance.
