Case goes to jury

KERRVILLE — Jurors began deliberating Darlie Routier's fate Friday after a dramatic exchange between the Rowlett housewife and the prosecutor in which she called him a "liar." Assistant District Attorney Greg Davis told the jurors to think about 5-year-old Damon and 6-year-old Devon, both of whom were stabbed to death June 6 in their suburban Dallas home. Jurors began considering the evidence at 1 p.m. Friday. They are working in the courtroom because the exhibits are so expansive they can't fit in the jury room.

Nation's state

WASHINGTON — Libraries: flourishing. Crime, from graffiti to murder: diminishing. Airplanes: more crowded but onboard service slow. Women: getting a better break from the corporate world. On Tuesday night, President Clinton gives his broad view of the State of the Union. In advance, people from scattered segments of the American mosaic gave The Associated Press their views from close up. On many fronts, the news is upbeat. Prosperity has trickled through much of society — sometimes without much notice.

Military hazing

WASHINGTON — "Disturbed and disgusted," new Defense Secretary William Cohen declared Friday the military must have "zero tolerance" for the kind of hazing shown in videotapes of Marines beating award pins into the chests of young troops. But he also said he didn't know how widespread it might be.

Gunfire kills 2-month-old girl

By Joe Gaines
Staff Writer

Two men were arrested and charged with murder in the shooting death of a 2-month-old girl during an argument at Emerald Terrace Apartments at 4405 N. Garfield St. Thursday night.

Alton R. Simpson, 20, and Terrence T. Belcher, 19, were arrested early Friday morning.

Shortly before 10 p.m. Thursday, Simpson, Belcher, another male and a female entered apartment 1105 and got into an argument with the residents over stolen property and drugs, police reported.

Both Simpson and Belcher have addresses at the same complex.

The other male has not been found. Neither the female nor the other male are considered suspects, but the male is being sought for questioning, police said.

Inside the apartment were approximately five adults and 2-month-old Deaunjinic Butts. Among the adults were Deaunjinic's parents, Mario Butts, 18, and mother, Wshaun Woden, 19. The other adults were either relatives or friends, police said.

During the argument, Simpson allegedly waved his gun in the air and fired two shots in the living room. Belcher had allegedly given a .22-caliber semi-automatic weapon to Simpson earlier in the evening.

Both shots went through the living room wall and into a back bedroom of the apartment where Deaunjinic was sleeping on a bed, police reported.

One of the bullets entered the infant's side, striking her in the torso, police reported.

Bush touts property tax cut

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram
Gov. George W. Bush talks with Jackie Hamilton, Midland Independent School District board trustee, after his speech Friday afternoon at Midland Center.

'We've got a problem in Texas ... Our property taxes are too high on middle-class Texas....I'm often asked who's against (a property tax cut). People who don't pay taxes are probably going to be against it.'
—Gov. George Bush speaking in Midland

Governor stops in Midland to garner support for tax reform proposal

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Gov. George W. Bush — who has been traveling the state seeking public support for his property tax relief plan — outlined a need for tax reform and proposed a solution to about 300 people at the Midland Center Friday afternoon.

"We've got a problem in Texas ...," he said. "Our property taxes are too high on middle-class Texas."

Bush told the crowd that property taxes — which doubled in the last 10 years — have grown to become a burden on homeowners and made it difficult for prospective home buyers. In addition, high property taxes put a damper on recruiting industry to Texas, he said.

Meanwhile, some segments of Texas society get away with paying little or no taxes to support the state's public schools, he said.

To make the system fair, put a hold on property taxes and to keep the school funding equity issue out of the courts, Bush has proposed an alternative taxing plan.

The governor is asking the Legislature to slash local school property taxes — which total about $10 billion — by about $2.8 billion. That equates to a roll back of school property taxes — which average statewide about $1.40 per $100 valuation — by 20 cents.

Midland's property tax rate is $2.61 per $100 valuation, with $1.38 per $100 valuation — or almost 53 percent of total property taxes — going to the school district.

To provide the property tax relief, Bush proposes making up the difference through higher sales and motor vehicle sales taxes, a new business tax and an annual allocation of $1 billion from the state's budget. The plan also calls for increasing the homestead exemption for school property taxes from $5,000 to $25,000, exempting business inventory from school maintenance and operation taxes (a significant portion of school property taxes), and eliminating the corporate franchise tax.

The proposed increase in sales tax would raise the state's share from 6.25 cents per dollar sales to 6.75 cents per dollar sales.

Midland's sales tax rate is 7.75 per dollar sales. In addition to the state's 6.25 cents per dollar, the city takes 1 cent per dollar sale and the county gets a half cent per dollar sale.

The proposed business tax would impose a 1.25 percent tax on business sales above $500,000, less the cost of goods and capital invested.

And finally, the state would use $1 billion saved in state expenditures to support schools. That amount would be earmarked annually for schools.

The proposed plan would reverse the ratio of state funding to local funding, allowing the state to fund schools centrally but still allow schools to be governed locally, Bush said.

Of the several people queried about the plan following Bush's speech, most said the plan provided more fairness and a few said they needed more time to study it.

Bush said homeowners, prospective homeowners, businesses and the state as a whole will fare better under the plan.

"I'm often asked who's against it. People who don't pay taxes are probably going to be against it," Bush said.

Midlander's legacy, foundation donation provide almost $10 million for university

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Texas Tech Chancellor John T. Montford came to the Midland International Airport Friday to announce a new $5 million endowment to provide fellowships for graduate students.

The legacy of longtime Midland civic leader and businessman Foy Proctor and matching funds from Southwestern Bell's SBC Foundation has provided almost $10 million to Texas Tech University. The $5 million program announced Friday will utilize $2.5 million from the Southwestern Bell donation and $2.5 million from the funds donated by the Proctor Ranch Matching Gift Program.

In addition, the SBC Foundation is donating $1.5 million for the support of various academic programs at the university. This brings the total SBC Foundation donation to $4 million.

SBC Foundation President Raul Reyna presented the $4 million Southwestern Bell donation Friday.

Montford called Friday "one of the most significant days in the history of our graduate program," because of the benefit expected from these donations.

PG&E's purchase of Valero would create one of top 10 gas marketing operations

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

PG&E Corp.'s plans to buy Valero Energy Corp. for $1.5 billion in stock and debt, creates a combination of companies that will be one of the top 10 gas marketing operations in the United States.

PG&E, parent of Pacific Gas & Electric, was the final winner in a courting process that started in November with approximately 30 companies looking to buy Valero's natural gas business. The business includes a 7,500-mile pipeline system and eight natural gas processing plants in Texas.

Valero operates two pipelines in the Permian Basin — one from the Waha header in Pecos County to San Antonio and the other from the Waha header to Dallas-Fort Worth.

In an interview with the Reporter-Telegram, Bill Greehey, Valero chairman and CEO, said the final bidders included: Enterra Energy; Cinenergy, a Cincinnati-based utility; Conoco; Pacific Gas & Electric; and Enron.

The purchase doesn't include Valero's refining and marketing subsidiary, which will be spun off before the acquisition. Greeney said the refining side of the business was a major reason for the decision to merge.

Palestinian legislators frustrated by Arafat

HEBRON, West Bank (AP) — The Palestinian legislators were steamed. Yasser Arafat had just negotiated a breakthrough peace agreement with Israel, but hadn't bothered to brief them.

The lawmakers were shown a copy of the Hebron accord — belatedly. It had no maps and was written in English, a language many of them don't know.

"Why should we get a copy? We can just go and pick it up from the Hebrew newspapers," lawmaker Marwan Barghouti, the West Bank leader of Arafat's Fatah movement, said sarcastically.

In the end, Israeli troops pulled out of Hebron on Jan. 17, before the Palestinian legislative council had a chance to even debate the agreement.

The episode illustrates only part of the council's trouble in the year since the Palestinians made history by electing their first legislature.

The 88-member council, sworn in last March, is heavy with Arafat loyalists. Still, there is growing dissatisfaction over the Palestinian leader's executive branch, which has ceded the legislature little power and given short shrift to its advice.

The legislature lacks even a permanent home. Its weekly meetings most often are held in a converted classroom in the West Bank town of Ramallah. Last week, the legislators met in Hebron to mark the Palestinians' take-over of most of the city.

European nations offered to finance construction of a permanent parliament in the West Bank, but the council members declined. They said they would wait until they could make east Jerusalem their capital — a goal opposed by Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu.

The council's greater obstacle may be Arafat's reluctance to share authority. In his days as chief of the Palestine Liberation Organization, Arafat enjoyed broad powers, noted Nabil Amr, an Arafat political advisor.

"For the first time there is a legislative council working on the ground beside the executive authority. It is the opposite of the way it was with the PLO," Amr said this week.

The legislature has passed major resolutions in the past 10 months, but few have been implemented, independent legislator Ziad Abu Amr said. "And we are far from achieving any success in the area of separation of powers."

Bills approved by the council to define the powers of each of the three branches of government have ended up — unsigned — in Arafat's bottom drawer.

"It could be that the executive does not want to be restricted by a constitution," lawmaker Ghassan Khatib said.

Hanan Ashrawi, a legislator and minister of higher education, acknowledged that, "there is frustration on the part of the council members and a bit of defensiveness on the part of the executive authority."

However, Ashrawi said both sides were learning on the job.

"We hope that in time ... the legislative council will understand the extent of its authority and the executive branch will understand that it is indeed subjected to monitoring by the legislative branch," Ashrawi said.

Khatib, head of Jerusalem Media Communication Center, said he doubted time alone would do the trick. "The council needs to be brave and take a stand to change this relationship," he said.

Khatib noted that Arafat frequently uses "national interest" as an excuse for ignoring council directives — such as legislation calling for police to release detainees who are not charged.

"The justification is that, for example, detaining a Hamas member is in the national interest. It's hard to argue when national interest is used as the justification," he said.

But while the council may lack power, it apparently serves a purpose. Dalal Salameh, who ran on one of Arafat's hand-picked slates, said the Palestinian leadership mostly has used the council as a fig leaf.

"We are used to saying, 'See — we have a democratic society. We have a Palestinian legislative council,'" Salameh said.

Child safe after sitters arrested

OTTAWA (AP) — Five-year-old Chad Mannasingh wasn't home alone. He was home with two babysitters who, unbeknownst to him, were escaped prisoners.

When police raided his apartment Thursday, Chad knew exactly what to do.

"Under there," says Chad, pointing to a spot beneath his mother's bed. "That's where I went."

The brothers, Christopher Robert, 20, and Eric Robert, 23, were two of the region's most wanted men. They had escaped from jail across the Ottawa River in Hull, Quebec, on Tuesday, using a plank to scale a barbed-wire fence.

They were accused of robbing and beating a 91-year-old man.

Late Wednesday, the brothers showed up at the Ottawa apartment of Molly Mannasingh, a family acquaintance. Unaware they were on the run, she offered them the couch.

All went well until Thursday afternoon, when Mannasingh went grocery shopping and asked the Roberts to watch Chad.

Acting on a tip, police pounded on the door and threatened to break it down. After a second warning, Eric opened the door. Police caught Christopher on the balcony and led the brothers away in handcuffs.

Vietnamese executives to face firing squad

■ Four top officials were sentenced to death after being convicted of fraud.

Associated Press

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam — A Communist Party member and three associates were sentenced Friday to death by firing squad for bribery, embezzlement and gambling that ruined a state-run company in Vietnam's biggest corruption case.

Broadcasting the sentences over a public-address system, People's Court Justice Bui Hoang Danh issued a warning to others: Corrupt officials and business executives must be prepared to pay for their crimes with their lives.

A total of 20 people, including business executives, bankers and government officials, were charged in the case involving the state-run import-export company, Tamexco.

They were convicted of a litany of corruption charges, including bribery, embezzlement and gambling, that led to the downfall of Tamexco and the loss of more than $27 million.

A guilty verdict was a foregone conclusion in the case, but many people anxiously awaited the sentencing. In Vietnam, criminal defendants are presumed guilty until proven innocent.

Danh's voice echoed through the neighborhood outside the courthouse as hundreds of people stood by, listening in silence.

Tamexco director Pham Huy Phuoc — a leading Communist Party member — two of his gambling partners and a government official from southern Vietnam must die by firing squad for their crimes, Danh said.

"Phuoc, now an ex-Communist Party member, cannot be vindicated," Danh said, his voice crackling through loudspeaker static. "He has become a most dangerous criminal to the people of Vietnam. He deserves the highest punishment."

Danh announced prison sentences ranging from life to three years for the remaining 16 defendants.

In October, Vietnam introduced the death penalty for corruption cases that involve serious losses to the state. Since then, capital punishment has been invoked three times for corruption cases.

Defense attorneys for Phuoc and his co-defendants acknowledged the guilt of their clients but said corruption was endemic in Vietnam and their clients should not be singled out for punishment.

Danh and four other judges accepted the prosecution's recommendation that Phuoc and his three associates go to the firing squad for their crimes.

The courthouse was surrounded by security guards and police officers Friday as local authorities sought to keep the crowd under control. The high-profile Tamexco trial has drawn growing public attention.

Only a handpicked audience was allowed to attend the trial, while foreign journalists and most local reporters were barred from the courtroom.

A court in Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon, established a precedent in October, sentencing a corrupt bank executive to death.

India's bandit queen is to surrender for murder trial

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — An Indian legislator known as the Bandit Queen said Friday that she will surrender for trial in connection with the murders of 20 men.

Phoolan Devi told the Supreme Court she would give up after the court turned down her appeal to transfer 54 cases of murder, robbery, extortion and kidnapping to another state in order to receive a fair trial, the Press Trust of India news agency reported.

Devi, 36, is accused of massacring 20 villagers in Behmai, where she had been held prisoner and repeatedly raped by men of a higher caste, or social class. Devi was released on bail in 1994 after 11 years in jail when the state government dropped the charges, saying she had suffered enough.

Devi, who portrayed her criminal career as part of a struggle between low-caste Hindus like herself and the upper castes in one of India's most backward regions, later won a seat in Parliament in the northern state of Uttar Pradesh by campaigning for the rights of low-caste women.

She told the judges she will surrender Tuesday to a court in Kanpur, the United News of India news agency said. A judge in Kanpur had ordered her arrest in January in response to a filing by a resident of Behmai.

Devi had appealed to the court to transfer her case to the neighboring state of Madhya Pradesh but was turned down.

Ex-Auschwitz officer arrested in Germany

FLENSBURG, Germany (AP) — A former Nazi who published magazines and books denying the Holocaust happened was arrested Friday in northern Germany.

Thies Christophersen, 79, was immediately brought before a judge, but was too sick to be jailed, prosecutor Ruediger Meienburg said.

A police spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Christophersen was released into his son's custody.

Christophersen was a German SS officer and a guard at the Auschwitz concentration camp in Poland. He published a pamphlet, "The Farming Community," which denies Germany exterminated millions of Jews during World War II.

Christophersen went to Denmark to avoid German charges of incitement to violence and racial hatred in 1986. Denmark turned down Germany's extradition requests. But in 1994, protesters forced him out of Denmark. He surfaced in Switzerland in 1995, but was ordered to leave.

KILL: Infant dies when argument leads to gunfire

(From 1A)

Police arrived at the apartment around 10 p.m. Thursday after a neighbor complained about a disturbance. The fight was over when police arrived and both Simpson and Belcher had left the scene, police said.

About the same time police were called, the residents of the apartment called for an ambulance because the baby was having difficulty breathing, residents told authorities.

At the hospital, it was discovered that she had been shot. The bullet had struck several major organs, causing internal bleeding, according to autopsy results.

She died shortly before midnight Thursday, police reported.

The parents were most likely unaware their baby had been shot because the bullet made a small entrance wound and did not exit the body, police reported.

Simpson and Belcher were found later Friday morning at a neighboring apartment complex. Simpson later led police to another apartment and what is believed to be the murder weapon, police reported.

Both Simpson and Belcher are in custody. Belcher is being held on $50,000 bond; bond has not been set for Simpson.

It is not the first time either man has been arrested, according to court records. Simpson was arrested in July on possession of cocaine charges and is awaiting trial, according to records.

Belcher has been arrested at least six times, on charges including evading arrest, resisting arrest and driving with a suspended license, according to court records.

His most recent arrest was in November 1995, when he was charged with possession of less than two ounces of marijuana and sentenced to 10 days in jail and a $300 fine, according to court records.

Belcher had been originally charged with unlawful carrying of a weapon in connection with Thursday's shooting, but authorities changed the charge to murder.

The charges were upgraded because he was allegedly "party to the offense" and had allegedly given his gun to the suspected shooter, said District Attorney Al Schorre.

Both men could have been charged with capital murder because the victim was under age 6, but police did not have enough evidence to prove that the slaying was intentional, Schorre said.

Belcher is the cousin of Angela Perkins-Belcher, who was killed in November 1993. She was shot in the chest after a fight at a local night club. Sherry Henderson originally was convicted of her murder and sentenced to 50 years in prison. The sentence later was overturned and a second trial ended in a conviction of criminally negligent homicide. The judge released her because she had already served the maximum time for the crime.

Since Angela's death, her parents, Tony and Janice Belcher, have become victims' rights advocates. Their emotions about the charges against their nephew are mixed.

"I asked my wife how I'm supposed to feel about it," Tony Belcher said.

He was shocked to learn his nephew was charged with murder and was not aware he had a criminal record or would be carrying a weapon, he said.

"I told him and my own children that carrying a weapon doesn't make you tougher, but weaker," he said.

However, his heart is with the "state," he said. He hasn't yet spoken to Belcher's mother, his sister, but he said she would know what he would say.

"That murder of that baby was dead wrong. That baby didn't even have the chance to live," he said.

After listening to reports of feelings of retaliation by a member of the baby's family, Tony Belcher said that would be wrong as well.

"I know how those people feel; my baby was shot and killed, but don't retaliate. Let the state handle it. Retaliation will only cause more problems," he said.

BUY: PG&E plans to purchase Valero

(From 1A)

"The natural gas business sells for considerably higher multiples than the refining business, and this was causing us to experience locked-in value," he said. "Refining was pulling down the value of our natural gas assets."

He said that when Valero decided to put its gas business up for bids in November its stock was selling for $25, but is now selling for $33.

"Now we will be able to grow and increase the value of both companies," Greehey said.

He said the new subsidiary, as well as the refining business, would be located in San Antonio and that the growth would be good for the fortunes of San Antonio.

Valero Refining and Marketing refines high-sulphur residual oil into reformulated gasoline at its 171,500-barrel-per-day refinery in Corpus Christi.

"We will continue to operate as always. There will be no cut in employment," Greehey said.

He expects the name of the company to be changed, but he was not certain what it would be.

The Valero acquisition is the third for PG&E in Texas. The company acquired Energy Source Inc., a Houston gas marketing business, in December and Teco Pipeline Co., a Corpus Christi gas gathering and transportation company, earlier this week.

In completing the merger, PG&E said it will issue $722.5 million in stock for the purchase. Each Valero shareholder will get about 0.63 shares of PG&E for each share, based on a PG&E's closing price of $22.75 a share on Thursday. The value to Valero shareholders is about $14.25 per share of Valero stock.

Valero holders will also get one share of the spinoff refining and marketing company, which will retain the Valero name.

"We will see more mergers like this in the future because there is more synergy between a gas and electric company, than between two gas companies," Greehey said. "It makes a lot of sense."

He said the merger, which must be approved by the SEC and stockholders, should be final in July, following a June stockholders meeting.

Peru wants Japan to back tough hostage stance

■ Delegates from each country to meet in Canada today to coordinate plans.

Associated Press

LIMA, Peru — Peru's president has a message for Japan on the hostage crisis in Lima: Mistakes may have been made during the 6-week-old standoff, but Peru's hard-line stand with leftist rebels holding 72 captives is sound.

President Alberto Fujimori and Japanese Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto are to meet in Toronto today, officially to coordinate strategy on the crisis at the Japanese ambassador's residence.

But Fujimori was stung by Japanese criticism this week of his efforts to demoralize the leftist rebels — efforts Japan feared risked the lives of the hostages, who include Japan's ambassador and Japanese business executives.

Fujimori asked for the summit to find a compromise with Japan's more conciliatory stand on the crisis — and avoid further criticism that weakens his bargaining position with the rebels.

About 20 Tupac Amaru rebels stormed the ambassador's home during a diplomatic reception on Dec. 17 and demanded that Peru free hundreds of their comrades from Peruvian jails.

Fujimori refuses. Talks to free the hostages ground to a halt several weeks ago when Fujimori said he wouldn't even discuss the issue.

Japan became alarmed when, in the absence of progress, Peruvian security forces began a series of maneuvers around the elegant diplomatic compound. On Monday, commandos gestured obscenely at the compound, drawing rebel gunfire.

Police didn't return fire, and no one was hurt. But Hashimoto publicly warned Peru to avoid unnecessary risks.

Fujimori acknowledged the error in an interview published Friday. "The risk was produced by an isolated action. These four policemen are going to be punished," he told the Argentine newspaper La Nacion.

He also said that commanders will be punished for the intelligence and security failures that allowed the guerrillas to take the residence.

But he warned that the rebels are responsible for the welfare of their captives, and said he reserved the right to deal with them as he sees fit.

"We've said it many times: They have been warned that absolutely nothing must happen to the hostages. If someone dies for health reasons, then things will be different, totally different," Fujimori said.

Concern for the hostages' health is increasing. Aid workers say several captives suffer stress-related illnesses such as hypertension, digestive problems and depression. One captive has battled stomach cancer.

Fujimori, the son of Japanese immigrants, has close ties with Japan, one of Peru's largest trade partners. He has said he won't ask Japan for carte-blanche permission to raid the residence, which under international law is considered Japanese territory.

"That's a theme that must be coordinated with Japan, agreed to by the Japanese government," he said.

Fujimori has offered to discuss improving prison conditions and giving the hostage-takers safe passage out of the country. But he withdrew a previous offer to discuss possible amnesty for the rebels.

FUNDS: Tech receives donations

(From 1A)

"I offer my most sincere thanks to the leadership of Southwestern Bell and the SBC Foundation for this magnificent gift that will set the pace for 21st century graduate studies at Texas Tech," he said.

"Southwestern Bell has a proud history of supporting programs that encourage young people to excel in education and that provide our state's educational institutions with the resources to meet tomorrow's challenges," said Edward E. Whitacre Jr., chairman and chief executive officer of SBC Communications.

The Proctor Ranch Matching Gift Program was created in November when Texas Tech regents approved a $6 million matching fund program from the partial proceeds from the sale of Proctor's Panhandle ranch.

Proctor donated the ranch, located northwest of Amarillo, to Texas Tech upon his death in 1988.

Entering the cattle business in West Texas after serving in World War I, Proctor eventually became one of the most prominent names in ranching, operating large sections of land in the Panhandle, between Midland and Rankin and even in Arizona. He lived in Midland until the death of his wife in 1972.

When coupled with another $6 million in matching funds from other private donations (such as Friday's SBC Foundation donation), this program will establish as many as 700 new fellowships and scholarships for the university, said Tech spokesman, Steve Kauffman.

The fellowships generated by this program will allow the university to draw the most promising of graduate students to Texas Tech, he said.

This latest endowment fund project with matching funds from the SBC Foundation will push the Proctor program to more than 40 percent of this eventual goal.

Each of the Texas Tech campuses is guaranteed at least one graduate student position from the new fellowship program, including the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center in Odessa.

Each of the campuses then will compete for additional scholarships from the program.

In addition, promising students from the Permian Basin could be selected to benefit from fellowships offered at the Lubbock campus, Kauffman said.

Directors change name of oil show, name president

From Staff Reports

The Permian Basin Oil Show directors announced a new name, date and president for the event at Thursday's board meeting.

Following several years of increasing participation from foreign countries, the board voted to change the name of the Permian Basin Oil Show to the Permian Basin International Oil Show.

"We felt the change was needed to reflect the growing participation of the international oil community," said Jay Alvey, executive director of the oil show.

Alvey said that the dates had been changed from Wednesday, Thursday and Friday to Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. The dates are Oct. 20-22, 1998.

"We serve our exhibitors and more and more of our exhibitors requested this time frame to allow them to get back to their homes and offices," Alvey said.

New officers elected to head the show include: John Dinger, president; Dave Robbins and Kirk Edwards, vice presidents; and Lewis Gray, treasurer. Alvey will remain as executive director and Bobby Sparkman will be assistant to the executive director.

Dinger, owner of Slough Equipment Co., has been involved in the oil field specialty supply and service business since 1974. A native of Iowa, he is a graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point and served in the U.S. Army from June 1969 to March 1974.

Robbins is a Midland oil & gas consultant and Edwards is president of Odessa Exploration.

Jury begins deliberations in Routier murder trial

KERRVILLE (AP) — Jurors began deliberating Darlie Routier's fate Friday after a dramatic exchange between the Rowlett housewife and the prosecutor in which she called him a "liar."

Assistant District Attorney Greg Davis told the jurors to think about 5-year-old Damon and 6-year-old Devon, both of whom were stabbed to death June 6 in their suburban Dallas home.

"Once upon a time they were ours ... in a real sense they were our future. Can you imagine them laying in the carpet, looking up with open eyes, drowning in their own blood?" Davis said as he approached Mrs. Routier. "Can you imagine what it must have been like for those two children that morning to look up? ... They saw this woman here."

"Liar," Mrs. Routier said quietly.

"She says liar now," Davis responded.

"Liar, liar," she said again.

Jurors began considering the evidence at 1 p.m. Friday. They are working in the courtroom because the exhibits are so expansive they can't fit in the jury room.

Defense attorneys Richard Mosty and Doug Mulder hammered at the state's contention that Mrs. Routier was driven to murder the boys because the family had financial problems and she was upset by her weight.

"It makes no sense that this lady would change from a good mother, a doting mother, to a psychotic killer," Mosty said.

They also attacked the credibility of the state's witnesses, particularly FBI violent crime specialist Alan Brantley, who testified that the boys were killed by someone they knew well.

Mosty called Brantley's testimony a "witchcraft opinion from the FBI headquarters."

"The state brings a bureaucrat from Washington who has been to one murder scene in his life ... Brantley comes down and gives you a mail-in verdict," Mosty said.

Prosecutors told jurors that Mrs. Routier's motives may never be clear to them.

"We cannot always get into the mind of the defendant. The motive may be locked away in there," Assistant District Attorney Toby Shook said.

Shook sketched out the state's version of physical and circumstantial evidence and described what prosecutors believe are implausible inconsistencies.

He questioned why the screen was cut rather than pulled off; he reminded jurors that Mrs. Routier didn't ask about her children en route to the hospital; and he reiterated prosecution testimony that the crime scene was staged.

Few household items were out of place after a supposed struggle, as if the intruder "wanted to be careful with all those dainty little things that were in that house," Shook added.

Davis scoffed at a psychiatrist's testimony that Mrs. Routier suffered from "traumatic amnesia" that prevents her from recalling all the details. He calls it the "I can't remember or I won't remember defense."

The defense argued that Mrs. Routier was made a suspect immediately and the Rowlett police ignored other possible leads.

Mulder pointed out that a man matching the description that Mrs. Routier gave to police had been spotted that same day in another part of Rowlett. Several witnesses mentioned a suspicious black car in the alley.

And Bexar County's medical examiner, Dr. Vincent DiMaio, testified that her wounds, including the slash across her neck, are consistent with her story that she battled an attacker, Mulder said.

"She just doesn't all of a sudden go haywire and kill her children," Mulder said. "Who of us could withstand the scrutiny that they have put this woman through for the past nine months."

Judge dismisses juror in Simpson's civil trial

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Three days of deliberations in the O.J. Simpson trial were scrapped and the jury was forced to start all over again Friday after the only black woman on the panel was removed for misconduct.

Sources said Rosemary Caraway, 62, was dismissed from the civil case for failing to disclose during jury selection that her daughter works for the district attorney's office that prosecuted Simpson at his murder trial.

The disclosure prompted a request from Simpson's lawyers for a mistrial, which was denied, and a move by the plaintiffs to sequester the jury for the rest of its deliberations. The judge turned that down, too.

Caraway, a retired telephone company dispatcher, was replaced with an Asian-American man in his 30s.

The new jury deliberated for about five hours Friday before breaking off for the weekend. It consists of six men and six women: nine whites, one Hispanic, one Asian-American and one person of Asian and black heritage.

The group's composition was in sharp contrast to the mostly black, mostly female jury that acquitted Simpson at his criminal trial in 1995.

Superior Court Judge Hiroshi Fujisaki removed Caraway over objections from the plaintiffs and told the newly reconstituted jury: "Each remaining juror must set aside and disregard the earlier deliberations as if they had not taken place."

Some of the jurors appeared discouraged by the development. Simpson was not present at the courthouse.

District Attorney Gil Garcetti's office said it had notified the judge about the juror's connection.

"We only learned yesterday afternoon that she was a sitting juror," said spokeswoman Sandi Gibbons. "We immediately communicated this information to the court."

Gibbons said the daughter does not report directly to Garcetti. But sources said she is a high-level legal secretary who works in the district attorney's front office.

MSNBC reported the daughter worked for Allen D. Field, director of special operations. Gibbons refused to confirm that, saying the employee had asked her not to release any information.

Fujisaki also was told that Caraway and her daughter once had dinner with Christopher Darden, a prosecutor at Simpson's murder trial.

It was the second major snag in the trial this week. On Tuesday, Caraway and other jurors were questioned by the judge after reports surfaced that two jurors from the murder trial had sent a letter to jurors in the civil case to try to promote a deal for public appearances after the trial.

On many fronts, state of nation is upbeat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Libraries: flourishing. Crime, from graffiti to murder: diminishing. Airplanes: more crowded but onboard service slow. Women: getting a better break from the corporate world.

On Tuesday night, President Clinton gives his broad view of the State of the Union. In advance, people from scattered segments of the American mosaic gave The Associated Press their views from close up.

On many fronts, the news is upbeat. Prosperity has trickled through much of society — sometimes without much notice.

Of course, it's not all sunshine. Roads, bridges, waterways are deteriorating. Homelessness is spreading. Many people feel their living standard has fallen. Alonzo Hamby, an Ohio University historian, speaks of a national "malaise or morale problem, or whatever you want to call it."

A look at the country from a variety of perspectives:

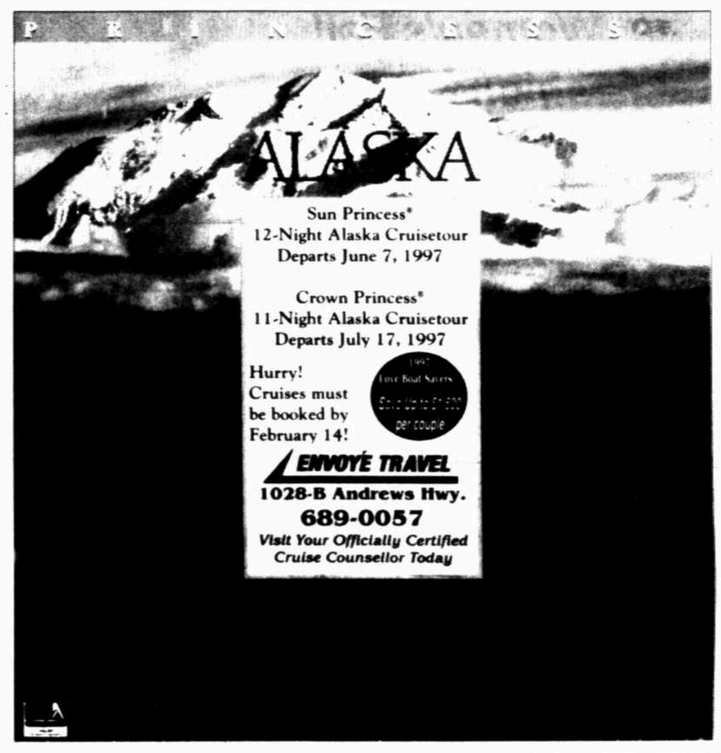

RIVERS: "Our rivers have cleaned up a lot in 25 years," says Tom Cassidy of American Rivers, an environmental group. "Rivers no longer burn and they are no longer clogged with raw industrial waste and untreated sewage. But if you're a fish, a river is still a dangerous place, and if you drink water from a river there are still human health concerns."

WOMEN: "Ten or 15 years ago you would not have found public discussion of domestic violence, acquaintance rape, sexual harassment," says Leslie Wolfe, president of the Center for Women's Policy Studies. "Remarkably, some of the best strides for women have been in corporate America."

PREJUDICE: "What makes things different today from 15 or 20 years ago is that all ethnic groups are in tension with each other, in terms of white and black, black and Korean, Anglo and Hispanic. We even see the redevelopment of religious conflicts," says Howard J. Ehrlich, director of the Prejudice Institute in Baltimore, a research outfit.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS: "I'm seeing a lot more optimism," says Carole Kennedy, president of the National Association of Elementary School Principals and herself a principal in Columbia, Mo. "The public is saying education is a priority. At least we're being listened to." Still, she worries about "the equity gap" — some public schools spend as much as $12,000 per pupil, some as little as $3,000.

HOMELESSNESS: "More employed people are winding up in shelters," reports Mary Ann Gleason of the National Coalition for the Homeless.

Cohen condemns hazing, orders zero tolerance

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Disturbed and disgusted," new Defense Secretary William Cohen declared Friday the military must have "zero tolerance" for the kind of hazing shown in videotapes of Marines beating award pins into the chests of young troops. But he also said he didn't know how widespread it might be.

Cohen, at his first Pentagon news conference since his Cabinet confirmation, said he was ordering the military service chiefs to find out how extensive the problem is.

Appearing beside him, Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said it was clear that "some leaders were involved and did not take the right steps. That's what's particularly bothersome about this incident."

Because hazing is not a specific violation under the Uniform Code of Military Justice, Pentagon officials said they were unable to say whether the two videotaped incidents shown repeatedly on television Friday were common.

Others inside and outside the military said hazing occurs all the time, especially in elite units, and that it is accepted and condoned by the victims and by senior enlistees and officers.

"We're not naive," said Marine Corps Maj. Scott Campbell. "We feel that there is still a problem, and that's why we are addressing it."

Cohen said of the videotapes, apparently made by Marines who were involved, "I am disturbed and disgusted by the treatment of young Marines in the hazing incidents."

"I intend to enforce a strict policy of zero tolerance of hazing, of sexual harassment and of racism," he said.

The incidents took place at Camp Lejeune, N.C., in 1991 and 1993.

In a separate news conference on the steps of the Pentagon, a livid Marine Gen. Charles Krulak, the Corps commandant, said 30 people were involved in the 1991 incident, the more serious of the two. Nine of them are still Marines.

"We know who they are," Krulak said.

While the statute of limitations has run out on court martialing the Marines for assault or conduct unbecoming, Krulak said he could discharge them.

"To say that I'm outraged would be an understatement," he said.

The Marine Corps has opened an investigation of the two "blood pinnings" in which elite paratroopers have golden jump pins beaten into their chests. CNN broadcast portions of the videotapes Thursday night. NBC's "Dateline NBC" planned to broadcast portions Friday night.

"It's not condoned. If we find out, it's not tolerated," said Army Lt. Col. William Harkey. An Air Force Academy spokesman, Neil Talbott, said he knew of no recent problems.

The Marine Corps reported that in the past several years 52 Marines have gone to court martial on charges that stemmed from hazing incidents and at least 34 Marines have received non-judicial punishments such as forfeiture of pay, confinement and bad conduct discharges.

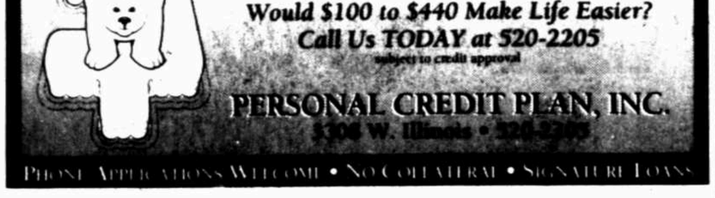

And others outside the military said serious hazing is common.

"What has been called by the Pentagon an isolated incident that's going to be stamped out is widespread, and not just among the Marines," said Chris Lombardi of the GI Rights Network, a coalition of peace groups that runs hotlines that service members can call to report abuse, harassment or other problems.

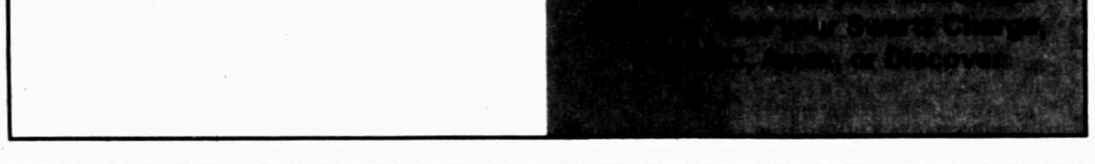

An Army enlistee at Fort Hood, Texas, who spoke on condition that he not be named, said he had witnessed a practice almost identical to the "blood pinnings" captured on the videotape. The enlistee said he had seen the practice performed on a woman, leaving twin scars on her upper breast. He also had witnessed a form of gantlet in which a promoted enlistee walks between lines of comrades as they hit or slap the person.

Georgia probation

ATHENS, Ga. — The University of Georgia on Friday placed itself on two years' probation and recommended that it lose five football scholarships next year because of alleged infractions of NCAA recruiting rules.

The self-imposed penalties, which included reduced recruiting trips, were recommended to the NCAA Infractions Commmittee during a hearing in Phoenix, Ariz., to discuss 10 allegations.

A statement released by the university said Georgia's probation would include a periodic in-person monitoring system and written institutional reports on recruiting activities.

It also recommended a reduction in the number of expense-paid campus visits by potential players — from 56 to 48 next season and 52 in 1998-99.

The statement said the university would reduce the number of coaches who can recruit off-campus next season by one, and that it recommended a reduction in initial scholarships by five in 1997-98, with overall scholarships not to exceed 79.

It said in 1998-99 there would be no reduction in initial scholarships and overall scholarships could not exceed 82.

The university also has written to Dan Calloway, a Palm Beach County, Fla., youth sport organizer involved in some of the alleged violations, indefinitely dissociating him from the Bulldogs program, the statement said. It also placed a ban on recruitment in Palm Beach County for up to two years.

Greenwood stages crucial sweep in District 3-4A

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

GREENWOOD — The Greenwood girls and boys basketball teams did themselves a favor on the floor of the Greenwood Gym Friday with big District 4-3A wins over Sonora.

The girls opened the evening with a 67-56 win over Sonora to move into a tie for second place while the boys followed in a most-impressive fashion.

Sophomore post David Upton scored a career-high 37 points to lead the Rangers to 93-79 win over Sonora and to move the Rangers into a first-place district tie with the previously-undefeated leaders of 4-3A.

"It is a big win," Greenwood coach Justin Morret said. "The kids are excited and it feels good. I just hope we don't lose our focus."

That might be hard to do, especially with the district title in the balance. Friday, Upton made sure that the Rangers (16-11 overall, 6-1 in district) got that chance. The young post threw in 13 field goals and was 11-for-12 from the free-throw line. He came into the game shooting 67 percent from the line. He went out speechless, only to say that this was a game that he had been waiting for.

Add in Neil Boecking's 22 points, and it was quite a performance from Morret's leading duo.

"We have said all along that Upton will have a big night," Morret said. "If Boecking has a big night, that makes us tough."

Not only did the two dominate with their point contribution but they combined for 24 rebounds, 13 from Boecking.

The players also had help in avenging a 68-66 loss at Sonora with the help of the back court. Despite having starter Brandon Hunnicutt on the bench for all of the second quarter with three fouls, Morret got 12 points from Calef Montes and eight from Brandon Curry. Without their contribution, the big guys might not have been as effective.

MHS boys win title; Girls fall

■ The Midland High Bulldogs claim the District 4-5A basketball championship with win over San Angelo and an Odessa Permian win over Abilene Cooper.

Staff Report

SAN ANGELO — It's been a long time coming.

Sixteen years to be exact since Midland High last won the District 4-5A championship. Thanks to a 90-49 pounding of San Angelo Central Friday night and Odessa Permian beating Abilene Cooper, 51-50, the Bulldogs are the champions.

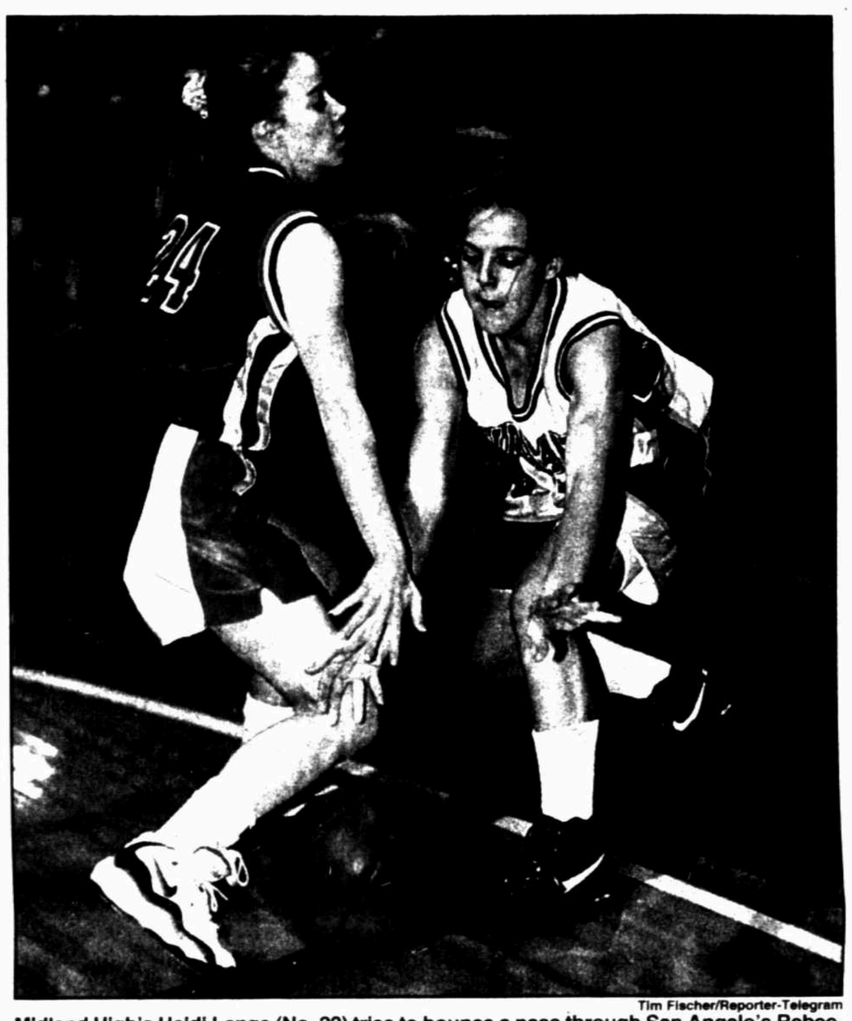

Midland High extended its district record to 10-0 while Cooper fell to 6-3. The Bulldogs also extended their winning streak to 14 games and improved to 25-3 on the season.

"Every year I tell people that I have the best team, maybe this year they'll believe me," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson. "I'm just elated to win a district championship, but we know that we've still got work to do. We can't relax as we would like to make our record in district to 11-0 on Tuesday. It's been a great year so far. We've won 25 games and a district championship. We know we have the playoffs to look forward to. The kids are excited and I'm excited."

The Bulldogs travel to Cooper to face the Cougars on Tuesday.

MHS used a second half surge, which included 10 3-pointers, against the Bobcats as they turned a 33-27 lead at the half into a rout. All five starters for the Bulldogs landed in double figures. Kirby Lemons and Jon Stephenson led the way with 16 points each, Charles Tatum had 14, Russell Gardner had 13 and Jay

By Lee Passmore

In a game which had District 4-5A playoff implications for both the Lady Dawgs and San Angelo Central, Midland High made more field goals, had more rebounds and committed fewer turnovers than its opponent. It didn't matter.

The Lady Bobcats went to the free throw line an astounding 61 times, making 43 of them en route to clinching a playoff spot with a 67-57 win over MHS. The loss, coupled with Odessa High's 53-38 win over Abilene High, eliminated Midland High from the playoffs. It wasn't an easy pill to digest for Raughton, who had led Midland High to the previous four district championships.

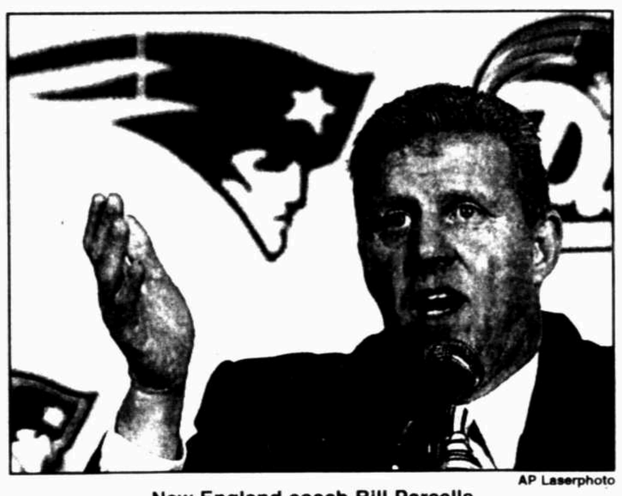

"This is about as tough a loss as I've had to take in a long time," Raughton said.

It's not stretching it to say that Central's frequent trips to the free throw line were what did in the Lady Dawgs (20-9 overall, 6-5 in district). The Lady Bobcats won despite making only 11 shots from the field, including none in the second quarter. In that period, Central (25-5, 9-2) made 11 of 17 from the line.

That was only a warmup for the fourth quarter when the Lady Bobcats sank 18 of 26 from the charity stripe.

New England coach Bill Parcells ...steps down after getting Pats to Super Bowl

Parcells steps down as Pats' coach

By Howard Ulman

FOXBORO, Mass. — Bill Parcells stepped down as coach of the New England Patriots today, concluding a four-year reign that began in last place and ended at the Super Bowl.

It also could be the first step to his joining the New York Jets — provided that they surrender at least their top draft pick to the Patriots.

The NFL has ruled that the Jets must receive the Patriots' approval to hire Parcells because his contract runs through 1997.

"Please don't trade your No. 1 draft choice because ... that must be part of the solution." Patriots owner Robert Kraft said at a separate news conference after Parcells met with reporters.

Kraft also said the Patriots have a short list of potential successors, whom he wouldn't identify, and would begin the search for a new coach immediately.

The new coach must be "a guy who can get us back to the Super Bowl next year and for many years to come," Kraft said. "If we feel we've found the right guy, we'll close it as soon as we can."

Parcells refused to say what his future in the NFL would be.

Pressed by reporters as to what he would do if the Jets and Patriots reached an agreement, Parcells said, "I know zero about what's going to come my way."

The Jets, who want Parcells to succeed Rich Kotite as their coach next season, had one conversation with the Patriots on Thursday. Kraft said it was a preliminary discussion but wouldn't reveal what was said.

Parcells' resignation came two days after NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue ruled that the coach's contract with the Patriots

Jones gags Cowboys' coaches from discussing team matters

By Scott Soshnick
N.Y. Times News Service

Irving — Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones is preventing anyone in the organization, including head coach Barry Switzer, from discussing football-related matters with the media.

The media blackout likely will last until after the NFL draft on April 19-20, said Cowboys spokesman Rich Dalrymple, although it could extend through training camp.

The move is the latest in the team's increasing efforts to limit access to the media. Midway through the season, the Cowboys closed the locker room after practices.

Dalrymple said Jones is concerned media leaks might hamper the team's chances to sign a free agent or re-sign their own players.

"It's such a competitive thing and such a strategic arena for us this time of year with the salary cap and free agency, the organization feels it's best that there not be any personnel discussions with the media."

During the week of the divisional playoff against the Carolina Panthers, the Cowboys closed the locker room after a woman, who later recanted her story, said wide receiver Michael Irvin and offensive lineman Erik Williams sexually assaulted her. The team's public relations staff brought select players into the team meeting room for interviews that week.

Cowboys cornerback Deion Sanders has signed a one-year contract to play baseball for Cincinnati, putting an end to his hiatus from baseball while creating confusion about his commitment to football.

Though Cowboys owner Jerry Jones expressed confidence that Sanders will play all 16 regular-season games for his team, Reds general manager Jim Bowden said, "If we're in a pennant race, Deion is not going to leave the Reds."

Rodman awaits ruling from NBA commissioner

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — NBA commissioner David Stern will decide early next week whether Dennis Rodman can return to the Chicago Bulls after the All-Star break.

Stern and Rodman met Friday at the NBA offices, and decided an arbitrator will rule on whether Rodman can go to arbitration in attempt to get back more than $1.1 million in pay lost during the suspension.

"It was a positive meeting," union head Bill Hunter said. "We were trying to get some resolution. I had been insisting on arbitration and had been threatening to go to court to get an arbitrator appointed."

Rodman was suspended for at least 11 games without pay for kicking courtside cameraman Eugene Amos in Minneapolis on Jan. 15, fined $25,000 and ordered to undergo counseling.

"The meeting was constructive," Stern said. "I will

Mesa pleads innocent to rape charge

By Ken Berger
AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND — Cleveland Indians pitcher Jose Mesa pleaded innocent to a rape charge Friday, surrendered his passport and was freed on $10,000 bond two weeks before spring training.

His wife, Mirla, left the courthouse feeling ill. A friend drove her to a hospital emergency room, where she was treated for stomach pains and released, said Patrick Garmone, spokesman for Columbia St. John Westshore Hospital.

Mirla Mesa kissed her husband before the arraignment and left the courtroom. Her illness appeared unrelated to the proceedings.

Mesa, 30, is charged with rape, assault and other charges related to a complaint by two women he met at a nightclub Dec. 22.

Mesa's lawyer, Gerald Messerman, met with assistant Cuyahoga County prosecutor Frank Gasper while the star bullpen closer's mug shot and fingerprints were taken. Messerman's wife and law partner, Gail Messerman, would not say whether a plea agreement was being worked out.

"He's not going to plead anything but innocent," Gail Messerman said.

Gasper, who did not speak with reporters, had asked Judge Kathleen Sutula to set bond at $20,000 and order Mesa, a native of the Dominican Republic, to give up his passport.

Mesa stood before the judge and did not speak during the hearing. He left the building unnoticed about an hour afterward, with family members and Gail Messerman still waiting inside.

The pitcher apparently did not know his wife had taken ill and arrived at the hospital later, Garmone said.

Messerman did not object to the court taking Mesa's passport, but said the $10,000 bond was excessive because the player was not likely to flee.

"He has been a resident of the United States since 1987, and he is a professional athlete who is seen by millions of people all over the country," Messerman told the judge. "He has six children and a wife. He has appeared twice in court. There is no reason to believe he will not appear again, and he will."

Mesa was indicted by a Cuyahoga County grand jury Jan. 16 on one count of rape, two counts of gross sexual imposition, one count of felonious assault and one count of carrying a concealed weapon.

Andrews tops Fort Stockton

ANDREWS — A huge second half lifted the Andrews girls basketball to a 56-27 win over Fort Stockton Friday.

Andrews 21-8 for the year and 7-3 in district 4-4A, will now play either El Paso Ysleta or Burgess next week in the bi-district round of the Class 4a playoffs.

Andrews lead 17-13 at the half erupted behind six 3-point field goals. Holly fields lead the team with 15. Kacee Connolly and Korrie McKinney scored 12 each while Keitha Ramsey threw in 11. For the game, Andrews fired 10, 3-pointers. McKinne lead with four.

"We came out a little flat in the first and then we shot the ball extremely well," Andrews coach Roger Goldsmith said. "We got the press going and then hit some shots. It makes it easy when you score."

game at the free throw line," Raughton said. "I know since I've been here that a team has never shot 61 free throws in a game."

Since Raughton has been at Midland High, it has usually meant a more successful season for the Lady Dawgs than they had this year. They were officially eliminated from winning district championship prior to Friday's loss, which means that the torch will be officially passed to either Central or Midland Lee, both of whom are 9-2 with one district game remaining.

Several of Lee's players attended the game, knowing that a Midland victory would give their team a one-game lead in the fight for the district crown and the upper hand toward a first-round bye. But the Lady Dawgs couldn't give the Lady Rebels quite the help they needed, although they didn't make it easy for Central.

"Any time we square up with Midland High it's going to be a very tough ball game," Central coach Jan Wakefield said. "When you spread the court like we did in the last few minutes it means you have a lot of confidence that you can hit your free throws."

Neither Central nor Midland High could score from the field in the final few minutes of the game. The Lady Dawgs took a 55-54 lead, ironically, when Kim Paschall made one of two free throws. Central's Imani Dunbar then hit a pair of free throws to reclaim the lead for the Lady Bobcats, who never trailed again.

Dunbar was the biggest beneficiary from the free throw line, making 14 of 21 attempts on her way to a game-high 21 points. In the fourth quarter, Midland High lost four players to fouls as Talitha Belcher, Jamie Nicholson, Jodie Mitchell and Paschall all collected their fifth fouls.

"We've got role players who can step up, but Talitha Belcher needs to be on the floor in the last three minutes of the game," Raughton said.

The final score proved to be the biggest lead in the game for either team. Both teams struggled offensively early, with Midland High failing to find the basket and Central handling the ball clumsily against the Lady Dawgs' press. MHS went on a 9-0 run early in the second quarter to take a 17-12 lead, its biggest lead of the half, at which time the Lady Dawgs were up 25-22.

Midland High had built a lead of as much as six twice in the third quarter, but Central came back and claimed a 43-42 lead at the end of the period. In the fourth quarter, the lead switched hands five times before Central began its parade to the free throw line.

The game was a far cry from the first district game between the two teams, in which Central rolled to a 77-45 victory. Friday, Central's vaunted trio of Dunbar, Patrina Pearson and Kanesha Randle were quiet on the boards, as Midland High outrebounded the Lady Bobcats 34-30.

"We did a much better job on the glass," said Raughton, whose team also beat Central 71-61 in overtime in a non-district game in November. "We got killed on the boards last time."

Tarhonda Belcher led Midland High with 14 points while Paschall added 10. Randle had 20 for Central, making 11 of 13 free throws.

GREENWOOD: Boys, girls pull sweep

(From 1B)

"Our guards are good enough that people have to play them (tough)," Morret said. "They know their roles."

But what might have been the difference is Greenwood's defense and its free throw shooting. Sonora's Ty Harrelson did get 25 points and J.P. Hudman threw in 17 but when it came down to the fourth-quarter shootout, they were held in check.

he Rangers, however, were not. Upton scored 13 in the fourth quarter when the Ranger lead fell from double digits to as little as three points. The Rangers also made 15 of their 21 attempts from the charity stripe, including nine consecutive points from the line that increased the lead to 11.

Sonora fell to 21-4, 6-1.

Like in the boys' win, a late spurt guaranteed victory for the Rangerettes. Just when it looked like it would come down to possessions, the Rangerettes turned one of basketball's simplest acts into an art form and put away a game that was mostly their's in the first place.

"We have improved so much in that area this year," said Rangerette coach Alan Wootan, whose team shot 46 percent from the line last season. "Lately we have hit them, and that made the difference."

The win moves Greenwood into a tie second-place tie with Sonora as both teams, at 5-3 in district, are still behind Colorado City. Reagan County fell to Crane 65-62 in OT to fall into fourth. That keeps a playoff spot alive and well. Now with games versus Colorado City on Tuesday and at Reagan County next Friday, the Rangerettes' fate can be helped with a pair of wins.

"My deal is that the next game is the important (one)," Wootan said. "You can't let what happened (in the last game) get in the way. Our backs are against the wall, and if we lose we are virtually eliminated."

Greenwood (13-13 overall) won this game thanks to a series of runs that got the team its lead and then kept it in the last few minutes. It seemed every quarter there was another run. Greenwood started with a 14-2 run in the first quarter, had an 8-0 run in the second. And when their advantage was just three, 56-53, in the fourth quarter, the Rangerettes put the game away on the free throw line, scoring their last 12 points from that point.

Leading the way for Greenwood was Cassie Henkel's 19 points. Crystal Walker threw in 17. Both players combined for 12-for-16 shooting from the line. Inside Cara Watzl scored 13 points and pulled down 12 rebounds while junior post Karen Gasch scored 10 and registered four blocks.

Arbitrators give Gourdine victory over players

NEW YORK (AP) — Simon Gourdine, fired as executive director of the National Basketball Players Association after its latest collective bargaining agreement, was awarded $883,738 plus interest on Friday by a panel of three arbitrators.

Gourdine replaced Charles Grantham as head of the union prior to labor negotiations that concluded in September 1995 with a six-year contract. In negotiating the deal, Gourdine fought off a challenge from top agents representing star players, who were pushing for a more aggressive negotiating stance.

The union's board then agreed to a two-year contract extension for Gourdine starting Nov. 1, 1995, calling for salaries of $500,000 the first year and $600,000 the second year. Just two weeks after the extension was announced in January 1996, players unhappy with the way Gourdine led negotiations forced a vote on the contract, and the union's executive board reversed course and fired him.

Gourdine contended he was paid only $208,000 of the $1.1 million due under his deal and took the union to arbitration.

Arbitrators Ralph Berger, William Mechmann and Paul McDonough ruled he was entitled to $883,000 plus interest from last March at an annual rate of 9 percent. They denied his claim for legal fees and costs, a total Gourdine estimated at $120,000.

Former NFL player Bill Hunter was hired in June as executive director of the players' association.

Bruce Meyer, the union's lawyer in the case, could not be reached for comment.

MHS: Bulldogs wrap up District 4-5A crown

(From 1B)

Christian added 11. A total of 17 Bulldogs saw action in the contest, one in which determined the district title.

The Bulldogs also forced 31 turnovers and out-rebounded Central 26-18.

"We played very well in the second half," Stephenson said. "We're just in great physical shape and it really showed tonight."

The MHS junior varsity also won, 72-58, over Cooper.

In further playoff implications, the Permian win over Cooper didn't help Midland Lee's chances of making the playoffs. The Rebels fell to a game-and-a-half behind third-place Permian in the standings.

The Panthers (17-12, 6-4) were paced by Jessie Houston with 12 points and Cornell Hicks with 11. Kyle Scott led Cooper (18-10, 6-3) with 11 points.

In other boys action, Odessa beat Abilene High 76-74.

In girls' District 4-5A action, Permian beat Cooper 68-46.

Twins sign Meares

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota Twins shortstop Pat Meares agreed to a one-year, $1,425,000 contract Friday, more than five times his 1996 salary.

Meares hit .267 with eight homers and a career-best 67 RBIs last season while making a team-leading 22 errors. He established career highs in games, at-bats, runs, hits, doubles, triples and walks.

He had just seven errors through the first 74 games, but made 15 in his final 78.

Meares earned $275,000 last season and had been seeking $1.75 million. The Twins were offering $1.1 million until agreeing Friday to the middle ground.

Sanders fills hole in lineup

CINCINNATI (AP) — Deion Sanders was interested in playing for the Cincinnati Reds because no other baseball team has made him feel so comfortable.

The Reds were interested in getting him back after a one-year layoff because no one else was available to fill a glaring need for a leadoff hitter.

Even though Sanders is not an accomplished leadoff hitter, he has accomplished more than anyone else they had heading into spring training. That's why they agreed to an unusual one-year contract on Thursday.

"He really fits well here," manager Jim Bowden said. "We've won with him. We were in first in '94 (before the players' strike) and we were first in '95.

"We need speed. We had a slow team last year. You can't play on turf and not have speed in the mix."

Heading into spring training, unproven Curtis Goodwin was first in line to play center field and bat leadoff. Goodwin was expected to play center last year, but struggled in spring training and was sent to the minors.

He had four stints with the Reds, batting .228 in 49 games. He batted leadoff in 27 games — third-most on the team — and had an on-base percentage of .323, poor for a leadoff hitter.

Thomas Howard hit leadoff most often last season, but had an on-base percentage of only .307. He left as a free agent after the season.

Sanders has not been much better at reaching base — his on-base percentage was .327 in 1995, his last season of baseball. But he's a much better center fielder than Goodwin and has much more major-league experience.

The question is whether he can play up to his former standards after taking a year off from baseball so he could play full-time for the Dallas Cowboys. An eye injury he suffered in the Cowboys' playoff loss to Carolina will limit him for another month or so, giving him little time to get his swing back in shape.

Sanders thinks he can follow Eric Davis' example. The outfielder retired after the 1994 season because of a neck injury that required surgery, came back to the Reds last year and batted .287 with 26 homers and 83 RBIs.

Davis, who left as a free agent after the season, talked to Sanders when the cornerback was considering returning to baseball this month. Sanders figured that if Davis could miss a year and come back, he could, too.

"I was encouraged by guys like Eric Davis. I was very encouraged," Sanders said.

Although he told Bowden late last year that there was only a 40 percent chance he would return to baseball, Sanders changed his mind in the past month.

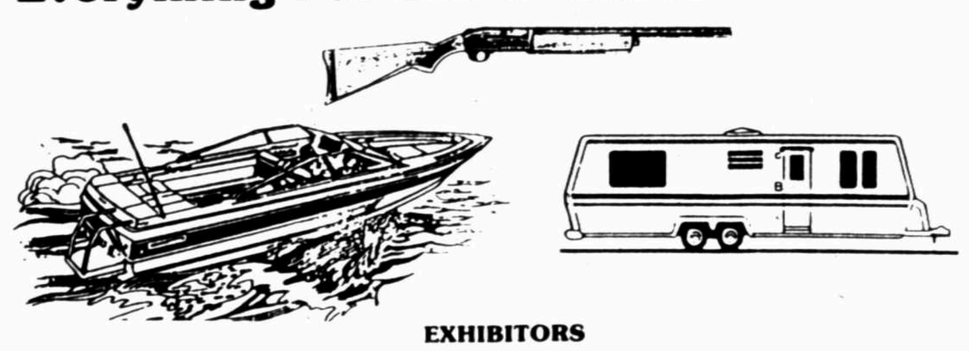

He said the only baseball team that interested him was Cincinnati. He has some close friends on the team and likes the way he can keep a low profile in the city.

He can joke now about his arrest for allegedly trying to drive a motor scooter out of Riverfront Stadium after a game in 1994. A jury acquitted him of all charges, and another jury ruled in his favor in a civil lawsuit filed by the police officer that arrested him.

"A lot of people say, 'Why the Cincinnati Reds?' This is the only team in baseball where I felt like it was a family," Sanders said.

Sabres snap Stars' streak

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Matthew Barnaby scored one goal and set up another Friday night to lead the Buffalo Sabres to a 3-1 victory over Dallas, snapping the Stars' four-game win streak.

The Sabres were hanging on to a one-goal lead when Barnaby stole the puck in the Stars' zone and slipped a backhander between Artus Irbe's legs to put the game away with 5:23 remaining.

Derek Plante and Dixon Ward scored in the second period for Buffalo, which won its second straight and pulled into a tie with the Pittsburgh Penguins for first place in the Northeast Division.

Dominik Hasek stopped 34 shots for the Sabres. He lost the shutout on Mike Modano's goal in the third period, which brought the Stars within 2-1. Dallas had three shots bounce off the post or crossbar.

Hasek has allowed only two goals in his last two games in victories over the Penguins and Stars. Dallas had not lost since Jan. 14.

Rodriguez takes lead in Caribbean Classic

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — Chi Chi Rodriguez shot a 4-under-par 67 to take a one-stroke lead over three golfers in the first round of the $850,000 Royal Caribbean Classic on Friday.

The first-round lead is his first since October 1993 in the Raley's Gold Rush Classic.

Jack Kiefer, J.C. Snead and Bruce Summerhays were 3-under in the opening event of the Senior PGA Tour season on the Crandon Park Golf Course.

Kermit Zarley and Tommy Aaron were two strokes back after shooting rounds of 69.

"I haven't won, I haven't played well," said Rodriguez, long a fan favorite. "I really had lost my enthusiasm for playing the senior tour."

His enthusiasm has come back and, if Friday is any indication, so has his game.

"I was happy with my putting today. I didn't three-putt all day," said Rodriguez, who tied for 32nd in last year's event.

A new interlocking grip as well as new golf balls from a company of which he is a part owner, have also helped Rodriguez regain his form of old. Rodriguez says the balls are injected with something.

"The scientists won't tell you what it's injected with. They're trying to get a patent," Rodriguez said.

The tournament winner will get a check for $127,500 and a positive start for 1997.

Snead, who won the Royal Caribbean in 1995, showed a strong long game.

"I drove the ball really good. I didn't miss a fairway for the first time in awhile," said Snead, who's been having trouble out of bunkers of late after taking the advice of a teacher and changing his swing.

Snead birdied three of the last five holes to pull within a shot of Rodriguez.

The conditions and the course were kind in the morning as 13 golfers were under par at the turn. Dave Eichelberger, Gibby Gilbert and Rodriguez each had 3-under 32s on the front nine.

PARCELLS: 49er's Carroll front-runner for Pats' job

(From 1B)

prohibits him from working for another NFL team next season unless the Patriots give permission.

Parcells read aloud from a letter he had given to Kraft, then thanked fans and players for supporting him. Parcells took the team from last place to the Super Bowl in four seasons.

He said he and Kraft had parted on decent terms.

"We just have a little philosophical difference, and Bob owns the team and he has every right to run the team any way he wants," Parcells said.

Kraft praised Parcells for his work as a coach and said he hoped to announce a replacement within a week.

"He brought credibility, more than anyone else, to this franchise and left us a wonderful foundation to build on," Kraft said.

Parcells had contended that he could simply buy his way out of his contract for $1.2 million and work for any team next season.

"I'm a league guy. Whatever the commissioner says, I'll abide by," he said of Tagliabue's ruling against him.

Parcells' successor could be one of two defensive-oriented assistants, San Francisco's Pete Carroll or New England's Bill Belichick. Or New England might turn to an offensive specialist, Green Bay's Sherm Lewis, or a highly successful former head coach, George Seifert of the 49ers. Or a darkhorse could emerge.

Whoever gets the job would have a tough act to follow. Parcells took a team that was 2-14 in 1992 all the way to last Sunday's Super Bowl, where it lost 35-21 to the Packers.

Parcells left his previous head coaching job with the New York Giants after winning the 1991 Super Bowl. The Giants didn't even qualify for the playoffs the next two seasons under Ray Handley.

New England, though, has a talented nucleus, especially with an offense centered around Drew Bledsoe, Curtis Martin, Terry Glenn and Ben Coates.

"I can't see the team falling apart" without Parcells, said defensive back Mike McGruder. "We have some guys who are free agents that (we) need to sign."

The free agency period begins Feb. 14. But the need to decide on a head coach for next season is more urgent because the scouting combine of college players begins Feb. 6.

A front-runner for Parcells' job is Carroll, the 49ers defensive coordinator the past two seasons after posting a 6-10 record in his only season as a head coach in 1994 with the Jets.

A broadcast report during the Super Bowl said a deal with Carroll was complete, although Patriots spokesman Don Lowery said the team has not talked with any potential coaches or their representatives. Carroll did not return a phone call seeking comment Thursday.

The Boston Herald reported Thursday that Seifert will be the first potential candidate contacted by the Patriots once Parcells leaves. He resigned as the 49ers coach after the season and has rejected a five-year, $10 million offer from the St. Louis Rams. He is now a 49ers consultant earning $1.5 million this year.

The impact of Joe Bugel's appointment Thursday as coach of the Oakland Raiders was felt all the way on the East Coast. Belichick, the Patriots' assistant head coach, was considered a contender for the Oakland job, but now he's free to succeed Parcells.

Furyk takes 36-hole lead with wild swing

■ Pebble Beach Golf

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — There will never be a TV ad with a bunch of kids saying, "I'm Jim Furyk." Yet the guy with the swing that exists only in Tiger Woods' nightmare leads the Pebble Beach Pro-Am after two rounds.

Furyk, the 26-year-old whose swing was described by Irish professional David Feherty as looking like "an octopus falling out of a tree," is nevertheless one of the most accurate drivers on the PGA Tour.

And on Friday he made enough putts for a 65 at Poppy Hills to be at 12-under-par 132 after 36 holes, one stroke ahead of David Frost and two better than Paul Stankowski and Mark O'Meara.

First-round co-leader Jesper Parnevik was in a group five players at 9-under-par.

The guy who does have the "I'm Tiger Woods" commercials — and a perfect swing — once again played with Hollywood hunk Kevin Costner and once again they were followed by enormous galleries.

But Woods was unable to get his game in high gear and shot a 72 at Poppy Hills and was at 142, 10 strokes behind Furyk.

Furyk, a two-time winner in three years on tour who takes the club way outside on his backswing and loops it back through in a round-about path to the ball, takes references to his unusual swing with good humor and a little amazement.

"Here I am 12-under, leading the tournament and I spend 90 percent of my time talking about my swing," he said after a seven-birdie, no-bogey effort.

"It's kind of a trademark for me," said Furyk, who was 14th in driving accuracy last year. "I don't feel too bad about it. I do it my own way. It might not be right, but it's the way I do it."

Furyk's swing was certainly right in the second round of the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

Teeing off in the first group of the day in a dense fog, Furyk birdied three of the first four holes as the players were once again allowed to improve their lies in the fairway and rough because of the extremely wet conditions from three weeks of rain.

"If anyone told you it wasn't helping, they'd be lying to you," Furyk said about being able to move the ball. "But there is no other way he'd be able to play the tournament."

None of his seven birdie putts were longer than 20 feet as iron shots hit from perfect lies zeroed in on the flag.

Frost, who shot a 63 at Pebble Beach, one off the course record, said moving the ball was worth "two strokes, at least."

Frost made nine birdies and nine pars and six of those birdie putts were from inside 10 feet.

RODMAN: Bulls waiting

(From 1B)

decide next week whether Dennis will be reinstated following the All-Star break."

Rodman has missed seven games. He also agreed to a $200,000 out-of-court settlement to Amos.

"He said he was ready to get back and play basketball and put this thing behind him," Hunter said. "He wants it considered that he could make a positive contribution to the NBA."

As for Stern, Hunter said, "He just wanted to talk to Dennis and have the assurances there wouldn't be any further difficulties."

Rodman is contesting the fine, and the union wants the case heard by an arbitrator. Hunter said the sides had agreed that John Feerick, the dean of Fordham University School of Law, would decide if he has jurisdiction to hear the matter as an arbitrator.

"If he decides he doesn't have jurisdiction, then we're basically foreclosed," Hunter said.

NBA lawyer Jeffrey Mishkin said Feerick had not yet been contacted, but would be asked to replace Daniel Collins as the sport's arbitrator.

Stern is expected to make his determination Monday or Tuesday, according to Hunter. The union also has told Stern he has no authority to order Rodman to undergo counseling.

"I'm not crazy," the Chicago Tribune quoted Rodman as saying. "I'm not like that character from 'Silence of the Lambs,' Hannibal Lecter, who has to sit in some cage and people say, 'You can watch Dennis Rodman, but don't get too close.' "

The 11th game of the suspension is Wednesday night at the Los Angeles Lakers, the final game of a six-game road trip. The Bulls return home to play the Charlotte Hornets on Feb. 11.

Hunter contended the suspension points out a deficiency in the NBA's collective bargaining agreement. In baseball, suspensions do not go into effect until after appeals are decided. In addition, suspensions are with pay for players with nonguaranteed contracts. Arbitrator Nicholas Zumas will decide later this year if teams can withhold pay when players with guaranteed deals are suspended.

"We clearly should have that," Hunter said. "Obviously, that is something I will be fighting for. Otherwise, the commissioner reigns supreme. There has to be some cutoff."

"We'll negotiate the future when it's time to negotiate," Mishkin responded.

Meanwhile, Rodman's ex-wife signed a six-figure deal to write a tell-all book about her life with the bad boy of basketball.

"Worse Than He Says He Is: Off the Court with Dennis Rodman" will be an account of Anicka Rodman's turbulent seven-year relationship with her former husband, Dove Books president Michael Viner said Friday in Los Angeles.

Stern is expected to make his determination Monday or Tuesday, according to Hunter. The union also has told Stern he has no authority to order Rodman to undergo counseling.

Rodman wants back on the court, but he'll sweat this one out.

It's not clear what Stern's decision will be when it comes down early next week.

Until then, all parties will wait.

Pacers defuel Rockets

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Reggie Miller scored 33 points and Dale Davis earned his 12th double-double of the season to lead the Indiana Pacers past the Houston Rockets 100-74 Friday night.

Davis, listed as probable with a sprained right ankle, finished with 17 points and 11 rebounds.

The Pacers shot 50 percent from the field and outrebounded the Rockets 54-34. Rockets' center Hakeem Olajuwon, who recorded 48 points in a 113-109 loss to Denver Thursday night, had just six points and missed seven of eight shots from the field in the first half.

Three of Olajuwon's shots were blocked by Rik Smits, who also scored nine points and dished a season-high four assists despite playing hurt.

The Pacers held a 15-point lead at the end of the first quarter, 34-19, behind Miller's 17 points. Indiana extended its lead to 57-38 at halftime after shooting 56 percent from the field.

The Rockets weren't allowed many second chances in the first half, when they grabbed just two offensive rebounds.

Sam Mack kept Houston in the game early by drilling four 3-pointers in the first seven minutes. He had only three points after that, though, to lead Houston with 15.

Timberwolves 97, Spurs 95

SAN ANTONIO — Chris Carr hit a driving 10-footer in the lane with seven-tenths of a second left, giving Minnesota a win over San Antonio.

The Timberwolves (21-24) completed their first winning January (9-6) in dramatic fashion after inbounding the ball with 3.5 seconds remaining.

San Antonio's Avery Johnson lost the ball as he drove for a layup to give Minnesota its last possession.

After Carr's jumper, Sean Elliott put up a long shot at the buzzer, only to have Tom Gugliotta reject it.

San Antonio failed to score 100 points for the 19th straight game.

Kevin Garnett and Gugliotta made two key plays in the last minute as Minnesota twice built a three-point lead. But Elliott's 3-pointer tied the game at 95 with 36.5 seconds left.

Garnett scored 30 points and Gugliotta 22 for the Timberwolves, who beat San Antonio for the third straight time this season and snapped a 14-game losing streak here.

Vernon Maxwell and Dominique Wilkins had 27 points each for San Antonio., which slipped to 11-31. San Antonio hit 26 of 27 free throws, including a perfect 11 by Wilkins, who became the sixth NBA player to score 26,000 points in his career.

Minnesota outrebounded the Spurs 45-31, including a career-high 20 for 28-year-old-rookie Dean Garrett.

Celtics 111, Trail Blazers 105

BOSTON — Boston broke a seven-game losing streak, outscoring Portland 34-20 in the final period.

Rick Fox scored 33 points and Todd Day and David Wesley added 20 each for the Celtics. Gary Trent led the Trail Blazers with 24 points, while Clifford Robinson contributed 21.

Boston's last victory was Jan. 14 at home over Golden State, 116-108.

Two free throws by Chris Dudley gave the Trail Blazers a 94-85 lead with 5:35 left in the game. Boston answered with a 5-0 run, including a 3-pointer from Fox that cut the lead to 94-90.

Day's 3-point shot and Antoine Walker's layup after a bad pass by Dontonio Winfield tied the game 96-96 with 3:02 left.

Hornets 102, Bucks 95

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Glen Rice scored 43 points, one short of Charlotte's franchise record, and powered a fourth-quarter run as the Hornets held off Milwaukee.

Rice, who made 13 of 20 field-goal attempts and 12 of 13 free throws, broke the 30-point mark for the 11th time in 17 games.

The Hornets, winning for the eighth time in 11 games, shot 74 percent on the way to a 36-23 lead after the first quarter, and they didn't let Milwaukee closer than four points the rest of the way.

Charlotte also got 20 points from Dell Curry and 13 points, 11 rebounds and nine assists from Anthony Mason, who had missed the previous two games with a sprained toe.

Ray Allen had 22 points for the Bucks, who lost to Charlotte for the 16th time in 20 games. Milwaukee also got 18 points apiece from Glenn Robinson and Vin Baker.

Magic 109, 76ers 99

PHILADELPHIA — Anfernee Hardaway scored 27 points as Orlando won for the sixth time in seven games.

The Magic also have won nine of 11. Philadelphia has lost 13 of its last 14 at home and is 3-26 in the last 29 games.

Orlando's Horace Grant added 16 points and Rony Seikaly had 13. Allen Iverson had 26 points and eight assists for the Sixers. Don MacLean matched a season high with 24 points.

BOYS

Abilene Coooper at Midland High

When: 2 p.m.
Where: MHS Soccer Field.
Records: Midland High is 7-3 overall and 3-1 in District 7. Abilene Cooper is 5-6, 1-2.

Coaches: Midland High — Tom Esikhati; Abilene Cooper — Joel Bundick.

Opponent: Abilene Cooper is coming off a 4-0 win over Odessa Permian in Abilene on Tuesday. The Cougars broke open a 0-0 halftime score with four second-half goals. Two came off the foot of senior midifelder Brian Foster (four goals and two assists).

Injuries: None.

Last action: MHS ran its string of district victories to three with a 3-2 win over the San Angelo Central. Three different Bulldogs (Zach Inman, Jason Peredes and Jerad Fain, found the back of the net while Tom Esikhati's team eventually won the midfield battles.

Notes, quotes: After four difficult games to start the district, this game was supposed to represent a breather for MHS. However, Cooper's win Tuesday and a close 1-0 loss to Lee has MHS thinking otherwise... MHS' defense is a big reason for the early success. While the offense has been getting its act together, the defense held Permian to one goal, Abilene High to 0 and Central to 2. The Central game was evidence that the defense (Sweeper Matt Lackey, Jeremie Piette, Cody Brown, Tres Wallace and keeper Bryan Alley) can also keep a team in the game as they withstood the Central pressure in the first half until the offense and midfield took over....

Next game: MHS will travel to Odessa High Tuesday.

Midland Lee at Abilene High

When: 2 p.m.
Where: Lee Athletic Complex in Abilene.
Records: Midland Lee is 3-3 overall and 2-1 in District 7. Abilene High is 5-5 and 1-3.

Coaches: Midland Lee — John McCulloch; Abilene High — Joel Hugh McNzies.

Opponent: Abilene High is suffering through a streak of offensive inconsistency over its three straight losses. In the past three games, the Eagles have been outscored 2-0 in regulation, but dropped two games that went to a shootout. Tuesday, AHS fell to Odessa High 2-0. Key players for the Eagles will be sweeper Ahmad Brooks and midfielder David Perez.

Injuries: Lee defender Ryan Dodd is doubtful (illness). Forward Troy Henry and Stephen McCloud are probable (illness).

Last action: Lee's offensive performance was good enough to overcome Coope , 1-0, but it didn't have the Rebs' coach John McCulloch doing cartwheels after the game. Lee outshot Cooper 22-12 but just couldn't find the net. Adrian Castresana did save the day for the Rebs with a goal in the 59th minute. Lee shutout Cooper for the fourth time in five games.

Notes, quotes: There is a good feeling around the Lee practice fields that scoring will return. It got so bad in one week ago against Cooper that McCulloch benched Henry, the district's leading scorer in 1996, 10 minutes into the second half... However, the third-year coach says that practices have been very encouraging and he expects good things in Abilene. He also says that in this district scoring will become mandatory... "It (Scoring) has been a problem in the district," McCulloch said. "No team is finding anyone to score goals. If we start finishing, we would be where we want to be."... One key to the game will also be the Rebels defense. This game has the potential to be very low scoring, and a goal allowed might be suicide...Dodd will be replaced by James O'Leary... The Rebels have posted shutouts in both district wins...

Next game: Lee hosts Odessa Permian Tuesday at 4:30 p.m. at the Lee Soccer Field

Abilene High at Midland Lee

When: 2 p.m.
Where: Lee Soccer Field in Midland.
Records: Lee is 8-3 overall and 1-2 in District 7. Abilene High is 3-7 and 1-3

Coaches: Lee — Mike Simpson; Abilene High — Rene Barbee

Opponent: Abilene High stopped some of the bleeding of a three-game district losing streak with a 1-0 win over Odessa High on Tuesday. Barbee's bench goes just two deep.

Injuries: Lee - Lesley Keel is probable (foot).

Last action: Lee lost 3-0 in Abilene to the Lady Cougars. Mike Simpson's offensive juggernaut was held to six shots and no goals. It was the first time Lee was shutout this season.

Notes, quotes: Simpson's team has had a full week to think about the Cooper loss and that might mean AHS is in for a hard time. Simpson will shake his lineup around to get more people in the act but he expects all guns to be firing on the AHS goal... "This will be a tough game and we will approach it like that," Simpson said. "We have made changes and we are looking foward to seeing how they work." Simpson also says seeing his team down in the standings is enough motivate his team... "Being in this position is strange," Simpson said. "The two losses are to the front runners and we will have them at home (in the second half). It will come around and will keep the players' focus... Lyndsey Howell will be back with the club and Simpson has moved three players up from the junior varsity (Freshmen Allison Herr and Tiffany Friedman and sophomore Erin Shryock)...

Next game: Midland Lee will play in Odessa versus Permian on Tuesday.

Midland High at Abilene Cooper

When: 2 p.m.
Where: Lee Athletic Complex in Abilene.
Records: Midland High is 7-2-1 overall and 4-0 in District 7. Abilene Cooper is 9-1 and 3-0.

Coaches: Midland High — Scott Hodkinson; Abilene Cooper — Claudia Blea

Opponent: Abilene Cooper, a three-time defending district champ, struggled somewhat in the 1-0 win over Permian on Tuesday. Blea's team did outshoot Permian 22-9. Stacy Metcalf, who has 10 goals for the year, scored the game's lone goal for Cooper in the second half. Also, Crickett was moved back to the goal due to Catherine Weir's basketball intrest.

Injuries: MHS — Sweeper Meg Bennett (pulled quadricep), Ann Smith (leg injury) are probable. Illnesses have taken the MHS club by storm. Jodie Nicholson is questionable.

Last action: MHS kept a half-game lead in the district with a 2-0 victory over Central on Tuesday. Becky Salgado teamed with Kristin Gassiott to get the Lady Bulldogs on the board and Kim Elger scored her team-high fifth goal of the year. Tori Watson recorded the shutout in goal.

Notes, quotes: This is the second straight weekend that Cooper will host a team from Midland... MHS, who tied Cooper and Lee for the district title last season has never defeated Cooper in Abilene. In fact, Cooper has not lost a district game in the Key City in over two and a half years... Elger and Salgado have scored in their last two games... One big question (Will Weir start in goal?) will only be answered on the field before the game. Her presence moves Crickett to the midfield and makes the team that much better... Last Saturday, Cooper handed Midland Lee a 3-0 thumping...

Next game: MHS will host Odessa High Tuesday at 4:30 p.m. at the MHS Soccer Field.

Ohio State loses No. 2 scorer to weakening heart muscle

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State will have to play the rest of the season without its second-leading scorer and rebounder.

Starting 6-foot-9 center Jermaine Tate has been diagnosed with cardiomyopathy, a weakening of the heart muscle, and has been advised to withdraw from basketball and other vigorous activity, the team said Friday.

Doctors at the Ohio State University Medical Center said the heart is supposed to pump 60 percent of the blood out with every stroke. Tate's is pumping 40 percent or less.

"We do not know what caused the injury to the heart muscle," said Dr. Jim Ryan, a cardiologist at the center. "We've ruled out several possibilities, but the cause of the original injury is not clear. What we want to do is let the heart muscle recover and return back to normal function."

Ryan said there are no odds or percentages of recovery.

"But there is reasonable hope that withdrawing him from activity, and with medical therapy, he will recover," he said.

Tate averaged 14.1 points and 6.4 rebounds a game for Ohio State. The Buckeyes (8-9, 3-5 Big Ten) host Wisconsin (11-6, 4-4) on Saturday.

"I'm really hurt about this situation," Tate said during a news conference. "I have to look out for my health. I have to quit basketball, which is what I like doing. Maybe I'll get better."

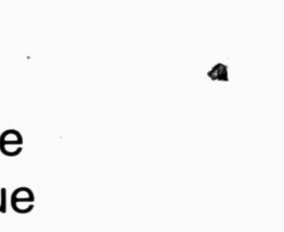

Ayers, whose team surprisingly beat 17th-ranked Indiana 73-67 Thursday night, was concerned about his former starter.

"This is a tough time for me in terms of seeing one of my young men come in and have something so important to him taken away. I know basketball is very important to Jermaine, but quite honestly, I'm a little relieved. Now I know what we're working with."

Quarterback Jim Kelly ends 11-year career with Buffalo Bills, announces retirement

Kelly's ends 11-year career with Bills

By BUCKY GLEASON
AP Sports Writer

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Over the years, they went through their biggest victories and most frustrating losses together. On Friday, when Jim Kelly announced his retirement, he and the Buffalo Bills cried together.

Kelly, stopping several times to keep his voice from cracking, ended his 11-year NFL career with nine teammates at his side. He leaves without winning a Super Bowl in four tries.

"To leave and not be a part of this team is something that will be very difficult to swallow," said Kelly, looking toward teammates Thurman Thomas, Andre Reed, Bruce Smith and Kent Hull. "I also know in my stomach and in my heart, it's time to move on.

"I don't want to go out the way some other quarterbacks went out. I want to go out with some dignity, with respect from my peers, respect from my teammates. I wanted to retire a Buffalo Bill."

Kelly told friends and family members last week that his career was over. He announced his retirement during an emotional news conference at Rich Stadium.

"I shed a couple tears," Thomas said. "Me and Bruce both did. I know how much Jim means to me on and off the field. It'll be a picture stuck in my mind for the rest of my life."

The quarterback's future with the Bills had been in doubt since the end of the season, and questions about his future intensified last week. Kelly had reserved comment until reaching a settlement reportedly worth $1 million with Bills owner Ralph Wilson.

"It's difficult for me today to be here," Wilson said. "There's no player who has done so much for the Buffalo Bills as Jim Kelly."

Kelly is considered the greatest quarterback in Bills history, having completed 60 percent of his passes for 35,467 yards, 237 touchdowns and 175 interceptions. He turned the franchise around and gave hope to a football town but never achieved the ultimate goal of an NFL title.

Kelly's career with Buffalo started with Bills fans standing along the highways, holding signs and waving as his limousine pulled into town. He became the only quarterback to start four straight Super Bowls, which he did to begin the 1990s.

"It has been a great ride," Kelly said. "While I do agree with the many who have said this is the end of an era, but to me, it's not an end. To me, my life is just beginning."

Kelly, 36, wants to spend more time with his family. He and his wife Jill have a 2-year-old daughter. They are expecting a second child in two weeks.

Kelly also said he has a meeting next week with NBC president Dick Ebersol to discuss a career in broadcasting. NBC is looking to replace football analyst Mike Ditka, who became coach at New Orleans.

Kelly, who had a career-low 14 touchdowns passes and a career-high 19 interceptions this season, doesn't remember the last play of his career. He sustained a concussion after fumbling twice on the same play before being sacked in a playoff loss to Jacksonville.

Backup Todd Collins is expected to take over the starting job for the Bills next season. The former Michigan star spent two years as Kelly's understudy.

Kelly's skills had been in decline in recent years. After throwing three interceptions and being sacked seven times this season against Miami, he suggested Collins should take over if the mistakes continued. Kelly would have become a free agent had he not retired.

Finch rejects offer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Basketball coach Larry Finch rejected an offer to stay with the University of Memphis when he agreed to take $413,660 to resign at the end of the current season, the school said Friday.

That payoff, the majority of which will come in monthly payments of $9,350, covers the three years that would remain on Finch's contract.

For the rest of this season, he will continue to draw his regular annual salary of $110,000, plus $64,000 for local radio and TV shows.

AD R.C. Johnson said a search for Finch's successor will begin immediately and declined to name any potential successors.

Web insurance

LIFE-line, a new educational website, has been launched to provide Americans straightforward answers to complicated insurance questions.

Sponsored by the Life and Health Foundation for Education (LIFE), LIFE-line offers everything from basic information on different types of insurance to interactive calculators that help consumers determine the value of their lives in dollars and cents.

The site offers information on basic types of life insurance and provides tips on how to choose a company and an agent, and even review questions to ask at the first meeting.

LIFE-line can be accessed on the World Wide Web at http://www.LIFE-Line.org. The site has been named a "Pick of the Week" and a "Keeper" by Microsoft and a "Hot Site" by USA Today.

Magellan dropped

Netscape Communications Corp's Internet web browser now includes the WebCrawler directory instead of Magellan, Excite Inc. said.

Excite, an Internet-directory company, bought rivals WebCrawler and Magellan within the last four months. It said it decided to invest in WebCrawler and absorb Magellan's technology into its other products.

Excite said it paid Netscape an unspecified fee to include WebCrawler in its browser software. Other Internet search companies paying to be part of Netscape's browser software are Lycos Inc., Infoseek Corp. and Yahoo! Inc.

Internet directories are used to look up information on the Internet. Appearing on Netscape, the most popular Internet browser, has helped the directories reach larger audiences, improve their brand recognition, and boost advertising sales. The directories depend on ads for their revenue.

Microsoft soccer turns up lame

Soccer — or football as it is known in much of the world — may be the most popular game on the planet, but many Americans seldom give it more than a second glance, except perhaps during the Olympics.

With strategy and 3-D shooters still ruling the game charts, an old-fashioned sports game may sound a little boring. Nevertheless, Microsoft has attempted to take the wide-open field and excitement of international soccer and reduce it to the size of your monitor.

Microsoft Soccer is a scrolling one-player game with tons of options, variations and other bells and whistles, but all the razzle-dazzle does little to hide just how average a sports game it is.

—The plot: No plot, just soccer. Kick the ball, push the ball down the field, pass the ball. You can play a single game or enter a tournament with 91 international teams of varying ability. There is also network and modem play.

—Playability: For a game that's subtitled "action so real it hurts," Soccer doesn't give the player a lot of activity choices. Shoot, pass, chip, slide and shove make up the entire repertoire for both offense and defense, with the only trick shots being headers and bicycle kicks. The goalies make some pretty cool-looking diving catches, but the computer does that for you.

Microsoft does give you control of just about everything else. The game's team customizer is extremely thorough. Everything from the color of the uniforms, to the player's strengths and weaknesses, to the color of each player's hair can be controlled by the user.

Technology allows hearing impaired to phone home

Palmtop computer plus wireless modem equals cell phone for deaf

By Elizabeth Weise
AP Cyberspace Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — A year ago, Mark Elderkin had this brainstorm:

Computers the size of a paperback book were hitting the market, able to do almost everything a laptop could — including hook up to a modem, and thus the world. Add a cellular phone connection, and you've got a portable office, capable of sending and receiving e-mail, faxes and pages, and connecting with the Internet. Everything an on-the-go executive could want.

But who else might want these things?

Elderkin's answer: the deaf.

Elderkin's brainstorm has borne splendid fruit — a cellular phone for the deaf, created and sold by RadioMail, the company where he was director of marketing. And it serves as a textbook example of how out-of-the-box thinking can lead to profit and progress.

Since the introduction of telecommunication devices for the deaf, or TDDs, in the 1970s, deaf Americans have used small keyboards with one-line digital displays to talk to each other via the phone lines.

But TDDs are expensive, not portable and they can talk only to other TDDs — problems a palmtop computer-modem-cellular phone doesn't have.

Elderkin's company had first introduced nationwide wireless Internet services four years ago, plugging a modem about half the size of a cigarette package into a laptop computer; without too much trouble, he thought, the service could be adapted for the deaf.

Elderkin left RadioMail in 1996 but, before he did, he handed the idea off to marketing manager Judy Leigh, who set out to make it happen.

When she sat down and looked at the problem, she realized the

Lisa Rogers, right, and Alice McGill, who are both hearing impaired, demonstrate their wireless internet services by sending messages back and forth at San Francisco's Civic Center park. The set-up, which also requires an Internet account, uses a Hewlett Packard Palmtop 200LX with a U.S. Robotics All-Points PC card modem. Roger's dog, Brandy, sits patiently at her feet.

WICHITA, Kan. — When you teach adults how to take their first steps on the Internet, you have to be very patient.

"I really don't have as much patience as a teacher does," said instructor Anna Walter, presiding over a class of six adults.

Anna is 9. She is in the third grade.

She and other pupils of L'Ouverture Computer Technology Magnet School taught their first computer class for more than 60 grown-ups Tuesday night.

The children taught everything from browsing the World Wide Web to researching any topic under the sun, to designing their own home page. Anna told her class how she set up her own personal Web page back in second grade.

Bettie Duerksen, 56, a retiree, said Anna's lesson was just the push she needed to get going on the Internet. "I stumble around in it, and I just need a little direction," she said.

Tim Nguyen, 45, a Boeing machinist, said he went to the class to learn how to look up information on his stock portfolios. It was the first time he had explored the Internet.

"She's very smart for a third grader," he said, pointing to his 9-year-old instructor, Paige Barnum. "I like the way she teaches me."

L'Ouverture started offering classes to parents five years ago as a way to teach them what their children were learning, principal Howard Pitler said. A year ago, the school decided to expand the idea.

It's sad but true: Online services are dinosaurs

I want you to keep that flying car in mind today because I'm going to make a prediction of my own. I predict commercial online services such as CompuServe and America Online won't survive, at least in their present form.

Until recently, I thought at least some of them would stay around to ease newcomers into the online world and the Internet.

Here's what has happened to change my mind:

■ Internet service providers once did a terrible job at making things easy for newcomers. Just installing the software was a nightmare that required filling in IP numbers and domain server names.

Nowadays, the best Internet providers have software that is just as easy to install as that of the commercial online services.

■ I didn't know enough about the Net. I thought the sheer size of it would swallow up all the warm neighborly feeling I used to get from amateur bulletin boards and discussion groups I

Galaxies are no longer far, far away thanks to the web

NEW YORK — Millions of young adults under age 30 still have vivid memories of the "Star Wars" science fiction adventure movies, the first of which was released 20 years ago. Those awesome special effects! The humming light sabers! The Yoda dolls!

Just as 20th Century Fox Home Entertainment prepares to re-release the original "Star Wars" this month, stargazers can find an expanded Force on the World Wide Web. New sites devoted to the "Star Wars" trilogy abound, as do countless others started earlier by fans and maintained faithfully ever since.

A Web traveler can start at the Lucasfilm official trilogy site. It features a countdown clock to the re-releases, which include some new scenes, as well as a coloring book and skill games on the Galactic Map.

Name notwithstanding, the Death Star is a friendlier, homier Web spot. It is actually a collection of "Star Wars" links, each painstakingly reviewed by its author, Jared Wold.

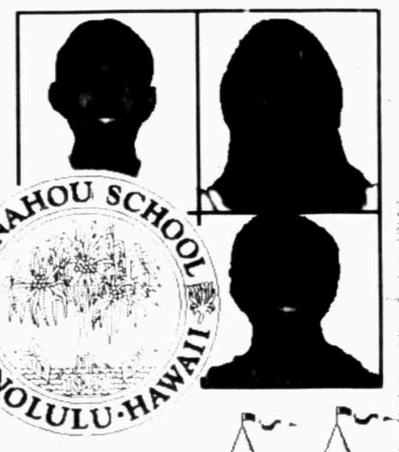

For sheer size and range, few can compare with the Star Wars Home Page maintained by Jason Ruspini at the University of Pennsylvania.

The Star Wars and Beyond site displays some of the creativity that helped inspire the movie trilogy. It

Dear Amy: My teacher said I can use information from the World Wide Web, but I have to say where I got it. How do I put URLs and e-mail references in my report's bibliography? —Juliana, Fort Worth, TX

Dear Juliana: My teacher told me about a Web site at Classroom Connect for citing Internet addresses. If you go to http://www.classroom.com/class-room/CitingNetResources.html they show you how to put in the author's name and where and when you downloaded it from the Web. Also, in our multimedia lab at school, we make reports that include graphics, sounds and video clips. So we learned how to make a bibliography of all those things, too.

Dear Amy: I have friends that are moving away and I would be lost without them. What should I do? —Laura, Glens Falls, N.Y.

Dear Laura: Don't be too sad because maybe the World Wide Web can help. If your friends have e-mail accounts, you could write to them. Since they can write back to you very quickly, it's almost like they are nearby. If your family has a Web page (which is really cool), you can post pictures of your pets or your family's vacation so your friends could see what is happening in your world. I hope this helps.

Quarterback Jim Kelly ends 11-year career with Buffalo Bills, announces retirement

Kelly's ends 11-year career with Bills

By BUCKY GLEASON
AP Sports Writer

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Over the years, they went through their biggest victories and most frustrating losses together. On Friday, when Jim Kelly announced his retirement, he and the Buffalo Bills cried together.

Kelly, stopping several times to keep his voice from cracking, ended his 11-year NFL career with nine teammates at his side. He leaves without winning a Super Bowl in four tries.

"To leave and not be a part of this team is something that will be very difficult to swallow," said Kelly, looking toward teammates Thurman Thomas, Andre Reed, Bruce Smith and Kent Hull. "I also know in my stomach and in my heart, it's time to move on.

"I don't want to go out the way some other quarterbacks went out. I want to go out with some dignity, with respect from my peers, respect from my teammates. I wanted to retire a Buffalo Bill."

Kelly told friends and family members last week that his career was over. He announced his retirement during an emotional news conference at Rich Stadium.

"I shed a couple tears," Thomas said. "Me and Bruce both did. I know how much Jim means to me on and off the field. It'll be a picture stuck in my mind for the rest of my life."

The quarterback's future with the Bills had been in doubt since the end of the season, and questions about his future intensified last week. Kelly had reserved comment until reaching a settlement reportedly worth $1 million with Bills owner Ralph Wilson.

"It's difficult for me today to be here," Wilson said. "There's no player who has done so much for the Buffalo Bills as Jim Kelly."

Kelly is considered the greatest quarterback in Bills history, having completed 60 percent of his passes for 35,467 yards, 237 touchdowns and 175 interceptions. He turned the franchise around and gave hope to a football town but never achieved the ultimate goal of an NFL title.

Kelly's career with Buffalo started with Bills fans standing along the highways, holding signs and waving as his limousine pulled into town. He became the only quarterback to start four straight Super Bowls, which he did to begin the 1990s.

"It has been a great ride," Kelly said. "While I do agree with the many who have said this is the end of an era, but to me, it's not an end. To me, my life is just beginning."

Kelly, 36, wants to spend more time with his family. He and his wife Jill have a 2-year-old daughter. They are expecting a second child in two weeks.

Kelly also said he has a meeting next week with NBC president Dick Ebersol to discuss a career in broadcasting. NBC is looking to replace football analyst Mike Ditka, who became coach at New Orleans.

Kelly, who had a career-low 14 touchdowns passes and a career-high 19 interceptions this season, doesn't remember the last play of his career. He sustained a concussion after fumbling twice on the same play before being sacked in a playoff loss to Jacksonville.

Backup Todd Collins is expected to take over the starting job for the Bills next season. The former Michigan star spent two years as Kelly's understudy.

Kelly's skills had been in decline in recent years. After throwing three interceptions and being sacked seven times this season against Miami, he suggested Collins should take over if the mistakes continued. Kelly would have become a free agent had he not retired.

Finch rejects offer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) -- Basketball coach Larry Finch rejected an offer to stay with the University of Memphis when he agreed to take $413,660 to resign at the end of the current season, the school said Friday.

That payoff, the majority of which will come in monthly payments of $9,350, covers the three years that would remain on Finch's contract.

For the rest of this season, he will continue to draw his regular annual salary of $110,000, plus $64,000 for local radio and TV shows.

AD R.C. Johnson said a search for Finch's successor will begin immediately and declined to name any potential successors.

Technology allows hearing impaired to phone home

Palmtop computer plus wireless modem equals cell phone for deaf

By Elizabeth Weise
AP Cyberspace Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — A year ago, Mark Elderkin had this brainstorm:

Computers the size of a paperback book were hitting the market, able to do almost everything a laptop could — including hook up to a modem, and thus the world. Add a cellular phone connection, and you've got a portable office, capable of sending and receiving e-mail, faxes and pages, and connecting with the Internet. Everything an on-the-go executive could want.

But who else might want these things?

Elderkin's answer: the deaf.

Elderkin's brainstorm has borne splendid fruit — a cellular phone for the deaf, created and sold by RadioMail, the company where he was director of marketing. And it serves as a textbook example of how out-of-the-box thinking can lead to profit and progress.

Since the introduction of telecommunication devices for the deaf, or TDDs, in the 1970s, deaf Americans have used small keyboards with one-line digital displays to talk to each other via the phone lines.

But TDDs are expensive, not portable and they can talk only to other TDDs — problems a palmtop computer-modem-cellular phone doesn't have.

Elderkin's company had first introduced nationwide wireless Internet services four years ago, plugging a modem about half the size of a cigarette package into a laptop computer; without too much trouble, he thought, the service could be adapted for the deaf.

Elderkin left RadioMail in 1996 but, before he did, he handed the idea off to marketing manager Judy Leigh, who set out to make it happen.

When she sat down and looked at the problem, she realized the

Lisa Rogers, right, and Alice McGill, who are both hearing impaired, demonstrate their wireless internet services by sending messages back and forth at San Francisco's Civic Center park. The set-up, which also requires an Internet account, uses a Hewlett Packard Palmtop 200LX with a U.S. Robotics All-Points PC card modem. Roger's dog, Brandy, sits patiently at her feet.

WICHITA, Kan. — When you teach adults how to take their first steps on the Internet, you have to be very patient.

"I really don't have as much patience as a teacher does," said instructor Anna Walter, presiding over a class of six adults.

Anna is 9. She is in the third grade.

She and other pupils of L'Ouverture Computer Technology Magnet School taught their first computer class for more than 60 grown-ups Tuesday night.

The children taught everything from browsing the World Wide Web to researching any topic under the sun, to designing their own home page. Anna told her class how she set up her own personal Web page back in second grade.

Bettie Duerksen, 56, a retiree, said Anna's lesson was just the push she needed to get going on the Internet. "I stumble around in it, and I just need a little direction," she said.

Tim Nguyen, 45, a Boeing machinist, said he went to the class to learn how to look up information on his stock portfolios. It was the first time he had explored the Internet.

"She's very smart for a third grader," he said, pointing to his 9-year-old instructor, Paige Barnum. "I like the way she teaches me."

L'Ouverture started offering classes to parents five years ago as a way to teach them what their children were learning, principal Howard Pitler said. A year ago, the school decided to expand the idea.

It's sad but true: Online services are dinosaurs

Every time I read a prediction about technology, I picture a magazine cover from my childhood. On the cover of Popular Science there was a car with fold-down wings. The article explained that — by this time — we'd all be driving a Studebaker that could fly.

If you see a flying car on the way to work tomorrow, please pull over to the side of the road and rest your eyes.

I want you to keep that flying car in mind today because I'm going to make a prediction of my own. I predict commercial online services such as CompuServe and America Online won't survive, at least in their present form.

Until recently, I thought at least some of them would stay around to ease newcomers into the online world and the Internet.

Here's what has happened to change my mind:

■ Internet service providers once did a terrible job at making things easy for newcomers. Just installing the software was a nightmare that required filling in IP numbers and domain server names.

Nowadays, the best Internet providers have software that is just as easy to install as that of the commercial online services.

■ I didn't know enough about the Net. I thought the sheer size of it would swallow up all the warm neighborly feeling I used to get from amateur bulletin boards and discussion groups I

NEW YORK — Millions of young adults under age 30 still have vivid memories of the "Star Wars" science fiction adventure movies, the first of which was released 20 years ago. Those awesome special effects! The humming light sabers! The Yoda dolls!

Just as 20th Century Fox Home Entertainment prepares to re-release the original "Star Wars" this month, stargazers can find an expanded Force on the World Wide Web. New sites devoted to the "Star Wars" trilogy abound, as do countless others started earlier by fans and maintained faithfully ever since.

A Web traveler can start at the Lucasfilm official trilogy site. It features a countdown clock to the re-releases, which include some new scenes, as well as a coloring book and skill games on the Galactic Map.

Name notwithstanding, the Death Star is a friendlier, homier Web spot. It is actually a collection of "Star Wars" links, each painstakingly reviewed by its author, Jared Wold.

For sheer size and range, few can compare with the Star Wars Home Page maintained by Jason Ruspini at the University of Pennsylvania.

The Star Wars and Beyond site displays some of the creativity that helped inspire the movie trilogy. It

Magellan dropped

Netscape Communications Corp's Internet web browser now includes the WebCrawler directory instead of Magellan, Excite Inc. said.

Excite, an Internet-directory company, bought rivals WebCrawler and Magellan within the last four months. It said it decided to invest in WebCrawler and absorb Magellan's technology into its other products.

Excite said it paid Netscape an unspecified fee to include WebCrawler in its browser software. Other Internet search companies paying to be part of Netscape's browser software are Lycos Inc., Infoseek Corp. and Yahoo! Inc.

Internet directories are used to look up information on the Internet. Appearing on Netscape, the most popular Internet browser, has helped the directories reach larger audiences, improve their brand recognition, and boost advertising sales. The directories depend on ads for their revenue.

Microsoft soccer turns up lame

Soccer — or football as it is known in much of the world — may be the most popular game on the planet, but many Americans seldom give it more than a second glance, except perhaps during the Olympics.

With strategy and 3-D shooters still ruling the game charts, an old-fashioned sports game may sound a little boring. Nevertheless, Microsoft has attempted to take the wide-open field and excitement of international soccer and reduce it to the size of your monitor.

Microsoft Soccer is a scrolling one-player game with tons of options, variations and other bells and whistles, but all the razzle-dazzle does little to hide just how average a sports game it is.

—The plot: No plot, just soccer. Kick the ball, push the ball down the field, pass the ball. You can play a single game or enter a tournament with 91 international teams of varying ability. There is also network and modem play.

—Playability: For a game that's subtitled "action so real it hurts," Soccer doesn't give the player a lot of activity choices. Shoot, pass, chip, slide and shove make up the entire repertoire for both offense and defense, with the only trick shots being headers and bicycle kicks. The goalies make some pretty cool-looking diving catches, but the computer does that for you.

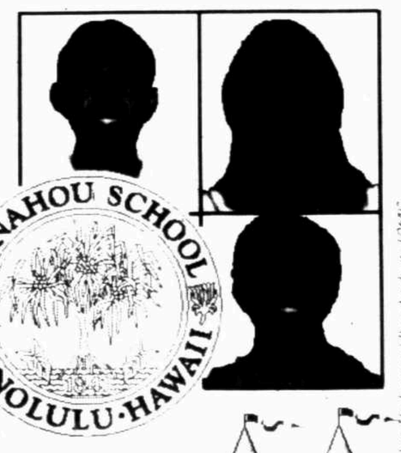

Microsoft does give you control of just about everything else. The game's team customizer is extremely thorough. Everything from the color of the uniforms, to the player's strengths and weaknesses, to the color of each player's hair can be controlled by the user.

Dear Amy: My teacher said I can use information from the World Wide Web, but I have to say where I got it. How do I put URLs and e-mail references in my report's bibliography? —Juliana, Fort Worth, TX

Dear Juliana: My teacher told me about a Web site at Classroom Connect for citing Internet addresses. If you go to http://www.classroom.com/classroom/CitingNetResources.html they show you how to put in the author's name and where and when you downloaded it from the Web. Also, in our multimedia lab at school, we make reports that include graphics, sounds and video clips. So we learned how to make a bibliography of all those things, too.

Dear Amy: I have friends that are moving away and I would be lost without them. What should I do? —Laura, Glens Falls, N.Y.

Dear Laura: Don't be too sad because maybe the World Wide Web can help. If your friends have e-mail accounts, you could write to them. Since they can write back to you very quickly, it's almost like they are nearby. If your family has a Web page (which is really cool), you can post pictures of your pets or your family's vacation so your friends could see what is happening in your world. I hope this helps.

DEAF: Trust a difficult aspect of life for the hearing impaired technology was almost entirely in place. RadioMail users already got an account that sent and received pages, faxes and e-mail. Because the account is always "on," subscribers didn't have to wait for their computers to boot up or their Internet connections to log on. In those respects, RadioMail was just like a phone.

"This is a perfect example of what universal design can do," said Betsy Bayha, director of technology policy at the World Institute on Disability in Oakland, Calif.

"Something that's designed to be flexible for the businessperson on the go becomes something that can also be extremely useful for people who need visual communication because they can't use the telephone."

It's also a huge market. At 23 million, the deaf and hard-of-hearing make up 10 percent of the U.S. population. "And it's only getting larger as people get older and their hearing diminishes," Bayha points out.

To reach that market, the San Mateo, Calif.-based company faced two hurdles: cost and trust. Of the two, cost was the easiest.

"Originally, RadioMail billed by the number of messages sent, because that made sense for executives. But for the deaf community, who would use it more as a phone, we needed a different billing structure," Leigh said.

So they developed new pricing based on the number of characters sent. Leigh said most of the service's deaf customers opt for the moderate plan, which bundles in the modem rental to bring the service up to about $79 a month.

"That's still cheaper than two-way paging, and much cheaper than most people pay for cellular phones," she said.

Add a Hewlett Packard 200LX palmtop computer, which weighs about 19 ounces and costs around $500, and the physical requirements are met.

Trust was the more difficult hurdle. The deaf community has always been wary of an often autocratic hearing-world that treated them as children to be managed.

"You just get inundated with hearing people who know what's best for you. They say 'This is going to work for you. This is what's going to be best for your life.' Well, who are they say that?" said Lisa Rogers, a deaf attorney who consulted with RadioMail on its approach to the deaf community.

The marketing couldn't come from a bunch of hearing people saying "you should use this." It had to be the deaf talking to the deaf.

"When you work with the deaf community, it's not only a communication issue, it's a trust issue. It needs to be 'Oh yeah, you're deaf like me,' " said Alice McGill, deputy director of the NorCal Center for Deafness in Sacramento, who also worked on the project.

To build that trust, Leigh's team spent months revamping RadioMail to make it "deaf-friendly."

"We had to re-engineer our customer service. We had to train our folks on how to handle TTD calls. We did a tremendous amount of education about deaf culture and the deaf community," she said.

Deal hailed as boon to consumers helps AOL resolve PR crisis

By David Kalish
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — America Online took a major step toward resolving a public relations nightmare by agreeing to refund customers unable to log on because phone lines were swamped.

State attorneys general hailed the blanket settlement Wednesday as a boon to many of AOL's 8 million consumers receiving unlimited online service. Analysts said AOL didn't do too bad either. The company admitted no wrongdoing and may recoup the estimated $10 million to $20 million in refunds from savings off reduced advertising.

The news also boosted America Online stock 5.7 percent, or $2 a share, to $37.25 on the New York Stock Exchange.

In recent weeks, AOL was embarrassed by media reports that customers enrolled in the flat-rate plan, introduced in December for $19.95-a-month, repeatedly encountered busy signals because of network bottlenecks created by the unlimited access. Moreover, several states this past week threatened to sue unless AOL promised refunds.

The company, based in Dulles, Va., seized on the deal as evidence of its commitment to serving its customers.

AOL chief executive Steve Case acknowledged the company underestimated capacity and is spending $350 million to expand its system.

"I think our focus is meeting the needs for our members and certainly what we're announcing today does that," he said Wednesday.

Millions of AOL's subscribers are potentially eligible for refunds. But several analysts said the settlement's ultimate cost to the $1.4 billion online service should be relatively insignificant. More importantly, they said, it should enable America Online to get beyond the assault of negative publicity to refocus on expanding its technological network.

Mary Meeker, an analyst at Morgan Stanley & Co., said the estimated maximum cost of $20 million would be nearly offset by the company's savings from reduced advertising. America Online agreed to suspend most advertising during February and add a disclaimer to ads warning that people may encounter delays logging on.

One report Thursday indicated that customers attempting to take advantage of the refunds encountered yet more busy signals.

"I got put on hold for over an hour and a half," said Jack Simpson, a customer in Florida. It seemed like every 30 seconds they said, 'We're sorry, the lines will be busy.' "

STAR WARS: Humor page takes a look at the lighter side of movie

includes pieces of the "Star Wars" legend contributed by fans: history, additional scenes, and what might have happened after the last movie ended.

A good deal of the "Star Wars" success story was fought on the merchandising front, and collectibles have gathered steam over the years. What's a slightly used Darth Vader mask bring these days?

Check the Collector's Archive Page for links to a toy resource page, action figures site, and a guide to the price of collectibles. A photographic gallery displays items from store displays to movie props.

These are dedicated collectors. One rhapsodic description reads: "Here it is in all its glory — the Deathstar, from the original 'Star Wars.' Somehow, Lucasfilm managed to throw this piece away, so it ended up in Missouri! Talk about the ultimate centerpiece to your living room! This is perhaps one of the best 'Star Wars' prop pieces in any private collection."

With a phenomenon like "Star Wars," there must be a musical out there somewhere. One site says it houses official musical feature numbers like "Run, Luke, Run," "Use the Force" and "Tonight We Got Alderaan," which are set to tunes from popular shows like "Godspell," "Les Miserables" and "Miss Saigon."

Actual sounds from the movie, like the endearing burbles of the droid C3PO and Yoda's giggle, can be downloaded at Wav Central.

Still others sites take visitors to the lighter side of the galaxy.

The Star Wars Humor Page has a wide selection, including Darth Vader's diary. One entry reads: "When Helen, my date, answered the door and saw me for the first time, she went pale with delight and her knees went weak. She said she'd asked the dating service for someone tall, dark and with an air of mystery, but that this was ridiculous!"

The Good, the Bad and the Funny site is all of these things. It includes a fictional list of "Star Wars" toys that failed. That sounds hard to believe, and harder still when one sees that the list includes a Chewbacca toy with real nits. A slightly more successful effort is what looks like a school report by the site's author on the movies.

The Web is most helpful in bringing together members of diverse "Star Wars" clubs. Players of the Star Wars Customizable Card Game can find information about tournaments and other player activities on a site called Decipher.

The making of "Star Wars" involved using new technology, and the Web displays this very fittingly. Many sites include sophisticated gaming scripts and Java applications.

ONLINE: AOL best, but no longer recommended

(From 1C)

frequented on online services.

I didn't understand that the size of the Net means there are literally thousands upon thousands of small discussion areas that are much better and just as friendly as anything on an online service.

■ The commercial services ran up a white flag when they decided — right or wrong — to become gateways to the Net. I don't think they had a choice, so I'm not criticizing them for that. But when the big sales pitch became the ease of logging onto the Internet, then they moved onto the turf of the Internet service providers.

The good Internet providers do a better job. The connection is faster, the dial-in numbers are seldom busy and the software choice for Internet tools is virtually unlimited compared with the online services.

■ Lastly, I forgot that consumers are status conscious. In this Internet savvy world, a person's e-mail address is important. And some folks look down their nose at CompuServe and AOL.

I think AOL is the best choice of the remaining online services. But I don't recommend it anymore. It's a fine commercial service. But I can't tell you how many e-mails I get from readers who are frustrated because the service is often unavailable, either because of busy access numbers or because the system is temporarily down for maintenance.

I also get mail from folks who are frustrated because some Internet software — Internet Phone is an example — won't run correctly on AOL.

I don't take all this lightly. I signed up for CompuServe almost as soon as the service was available. It wouldn't be an exaggeration to say it changed my life.

Over the years, I met a lot of fine people there. I also used AOL for a long time and had some really terrific talks there.

I have friends who kid me about being nostalgic over something as mundane as an online service. But I am. So this is one column I don't like writing.

About the only thing that cheers me up is a picture I keep getting as I type this — a shiny blue Studebaker flying over Interstate 75.

"They are very good at teaching the Internet to people. They understand it very well, but they can also talk in terms that adults can understand," Pitler said.

According to a recent American Internet User Survey, 1.1 million Internet users are under 18.

Instructor Aaron Kramme, 9, was learning about patience from his student, Caroline Parsons, 38.

He tried to explain that the revolving asteroid in the corner of the screen was the computer's way of showing that it was working on its current task. But Parsons stumbled over the word "asteroid."

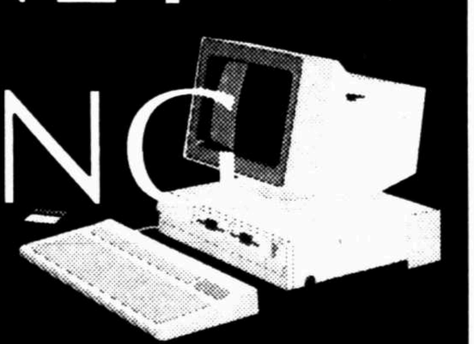

"I didn't say a cuss word," Aaron said, laughing.

Still, he realized his impatient leaping from Internet site to site was rapidly leaving her behind, so Aaron came up with a 9-year-old's solution.

He sat on his hands.

THE REAR END/FRONT END TEST

Dear Tom and Ray:

I drive an '89 Beretta and just recently I've noticed that when I drive over a speed bump, my car makes a loud "bang, bang" sound that wasn't there before. I asked my brother-in-law if he thought I should have the shocks replaced. He told me I needed to give it the "rear end/front end" test to find out. What you do is hoist your rear end up on the hood of the car, bounce the front end up and down, and then jump off. If the car continues to bounce, you need shocks. When I asked him if this was a scientific test, he said "Absolutely—works every time". What do you guys think? Is this a reliable test, or is he just pulling my leg? —Barbara

RAY: Believe it or not, Barbara this IS a legitimate test for worn-out shock absorbers. And I love the term "rear end/front end"!

TOM: Unfortunately, worn-out shocks would never go "bang, bang".

RAY: So in your case, doing this test is like prescribing a nose X-ray for a cold. The test is scientific. It's just not appropriate for the symptoms.

TOM: That noise is more likely caused by your springs. It sounds like the car is bottoming out. Your springs could be worn out or broken, or you could be missing one or more of the rubber cushions that prevent the springs from fully compressing and going "bang, bang."

RAY: Or it could be a loose or unattached exhaust piece that's hitting the bottom of your car, or even a shock that's falling off. But whatever it is, I don't think the rear end/front end test is going to give you the answer.

TOM: Yeah. I don't care how big your rear end is, Barbara. Even my brother can't impose the kind of forces necessary on the front end to diagnose this kind of noise. This is going to require a trip to a mechanic who can put the car up on a lift and take a look. Good luck.

Dear Tom and Ray:

I have a 1990 Honda Prelude. The owner's manual recommends changing the timing belt at 90,000 miles. I took it to a repairman for an estimate, and he also recommended that I change the water pump. He said water pumps only last about 80,000 miles, and if it were to go out, antifreeze would leak on the timing belt and the belt would have to be replaced again. What's your opinion on the water pump? —Karol

RAY: I agree, Karol. I'd change the water pump, too.

TOM: First of all, you know that the timing belt is serious business in this car. On some engines (including most Hondas) if the timing belt breaks, the valves can get crushed by the pistons. And that can easily ruin the engine. So you're absolutely right to treat it as preventive maintenance and change it when the owner's manual recommends.

RAY: And I'd look at the water pump the same way — not because it's going to leak antifreeze, but because the water pump in this engine is driven by that timing belt. And if the water pump seizes (which they tend to do after 80,000 to 100,000 miles), even that new belt will go kablooey, and again, it's bye bye engine.

TOM: The other reason to do the water pump now is that there's a lot of common labor in these two jobs. So if you're doing the timing belt anyway, all you really end up paying for the water pump is a little bit more than the cost of the part.

RAY: It's like my brother's brain surgery, Karol. While they were in there, the doctor said they might as well take care of the hemorrhoids at the same time.

TOM: Well, you asked for it, and here it is. My brother and I sat down and wrote down everything we know about how to make your car last forever.

RAY: And it only came out to eight lousy pages!

TOM: But now this gold mine of information can be yours.

RAY: Get your copy of "Ten Ways You May Be Ruining Your Car Without Even Knowing It!" by sending $3 and a stamped (55¢), self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Ruin No. 1, PO Box 6420, Riverton, NJ 08077-6420.

Jeep Grand Cherokee tackles off-road obstacles with power and comfort

by Bob Plunkett
Special to Reporter-Telegram

Sand, silt and icy rivulets flowing from a melting glacier spread across a mile-wide path etched below Alaska's snow-capped Chugach Mountains to form the Knik River, which in this headwater area consists of runoff from the glacier also known as Knik.

In the brief Alaskan summer, this vast floodplain serves as a ripe supermarket for nocturnal creatures such as the bear and moose who forage here, but in daylight it becomes a playground for motorized four-wheelers to romp through radiator-deep channels and plow fresh tracks across sandy dunes and river flats.

Yet no vehicle tackles the Knik's slippery surfaces quite like the Jeep Grand Cherokee that one tester steered last August during the inaugural Alaskan Jeep Jamboree. This ultimate sport-utility wagon doesn't just take on tough off-road action, it takes you out there while enveloping all in the trappings of luxurious motoring.

Shift to bottom gear in lowest range of the full-time 4-wheel-drive system and focus ahead with hands squeezing a fat steering wheel, foot nudging the accelerator and mind focused on sending so much power to nubby tires. Then relax as the incredible occurs — Jeep-style.

Grand Cherokee, elegant bastion of comfort, plunges into a swift channel of the Knik River and forges through all that chilly water, silt and mud. It noses down an embankment, tilting to 40 degrees or so, then musters an arsenal of low-gear torque and applies the force of a regiment of horses to move more than 3,700 pounds of automotive metal across the watery obstacle.

You had to see it to believe this feat.

Other Jeeps followed, all led through the Alaskan riverbed by Mark Smith, legendary off-road Jeep pioneer and founder of Jeep Jamboree weekend wilderness excursions.

"Let he Jeep do all the work for you," Smith had advised at the onset of the Alaskan excursion, pointing out that Grand Cherokee's low-gear engine torque, when coupled to sophisticated 4-wheel-drive mechanisms, enables the Jeep to go where other sport-utility vehicles dare not venture.

Of course, Grand Cherokee is not like other sport-utes. It's built to tackle sandstone walls of Utah canyons, blast through Florida's muddy swamps, plow up Carolina coastal dunes, or take a bee-line tack across California's granite-blocked Sierras — as Smith proves every summer when he leads Jeeps over the Rubicon Trail, toughest of two dozen Jamboree routes.

Unlike Wrangler and Cherokee, other off-road models in the Jeep line, Grand Cherokee adds surprisingly plush items of comfort and convenience. It also stocks a smooth suspension system which introduces a limousine-like ride quality off-road when rolling across the wild side of Mother Nature.

The 4x4 versions utilize a live-axle front and rear, with Jeep's "Quadra-link" arms, track bar, stabilizers and car-like coil springs. Gas-charged shock absorbers become the standard here, but monotube high-pres. ure gas shocks are available for heavy-duty action.

Get out there in the mud and the silt, but don't leave the comforts of luxury behind. The Grand Cherokee offers reclining front bucket seats, cruise control, and AM/FM/Cassette over a live-axle 4x4 drive system with "Quadra-link" arms, track bar, stabilizers, coil springs and gas-charged shocks. All of this is powered by a 5.2-L, 220-hp V-8 or a 4.0-L, 185-hp straight six cylinder powerplant.

Then there's that unmatched muscle. Grand Cherokee's V-8 engine becomes the most significant option offered for the two Grand Cherokee trim models of Laredo and Limited. The 5.2-liter V-8 produces up to 300 lbs/ft of torque at 2800 rpm and installs 220 hp under the command of your right foot.

The base powerplant, Jeep's husky straight-line 6-cylinder taskmaster, displaces 4.0 liters and generates 185 horses at 4600 rpm plus unchallenged torque of 220 lbs/ft at 2400 rpm.

The primary difference between these engines amounts to available power and extra muscle to lug a trailer, as the 6-cylinder version earns a trailer-towing capacity of 5000 pounds while that V-8 increases the load to 6500.

Grand Cherokee comes to market with either a 4x2 rear-drive arrangement or choice of two remarkable Jeep-exclusive 4x4 systems — Selec-Trac and Quadra-Trac. Shift-on-the-fly Selec-Trac goes further in part-time 4-wheel deployment because it functions for any type of pavement or off-road over bumps and ruts. To switch from rear-drive to 4x4 mode, simply flip a floor-mounted lever.

Permanently-engaged Quadra-Trac on pavement normally channels most of the available engine torque to rear wheels but will automatically distribute power to any of the four wheels which have the best traction. In addition, the system adds a low-gear setting for serious work off-road.

Selec-Trac becomes a standard for Laredo's 4x4, with Quadra-Trac available for less than $500. Quadra-Trac is Limited's standard, with Selec-Trac a no-cost option.

Grand Cherokee also provides noteworthy safety features that range from dual airbags for front riders to safety-cage construction and a sophisticated anti-lock brake mechanism which independently regulates brake pressure at each wheel.

Grand Cherokee differs with other Jeeps primarily on the quality and quantity of interior features — the standard seems to be power-everything. Laredo's interior layout applies fabric-covered reclining front buckets separated by a center console, with the back bench positioned in front of rear wheel wells so you end up with adequate lateral space for three adults to ride shoulder to shoulder.

Rear seatbacks split and fold to form a cargo bay designed to carry almost 80 cubic feet of gear.

Standard analog instruments include a tachometer and gauges for voltage and temperature. Other features range from cruise control and intermittent wipers to an AM-FM stereo system with cassette deck, remote releases and a standard roof rack, power equipment, keyless entry and tie-down cargo hooks.

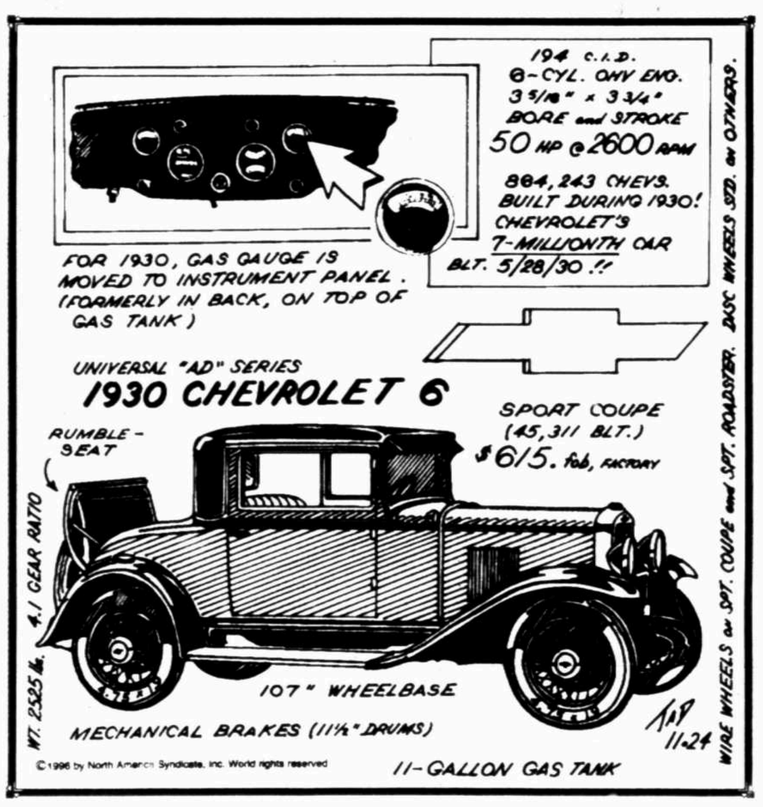

Limited brings leather seats and special conveniences like automatic temperature controls, 10-way power movements for front buckets with memory feature for driver's seat and exterior mirrors, additional interior lighting and exterior foglamps, plus unique external cladding.

For hauling a trailer, an optional package of hardware is offered, as is Orvis Edition trimmings. For serious off-road action, a heavy-duty suspension package can transform even an Alaskan riverbed into a living-room-smooth ride.

1930 Chevrolet Sport Coupe

PRESENTING THE IMPROVED 'UNIVERSAL' CHEVROLET!

It was advertised in the original color sales catalog as "the greatest Chevrolet in Chevrolet history!" It was the 1930 "Universal" ("AD" series), which looked quite similar to its totally redesigned predecessor but with minor improvements that could be noticed.

From the outside, one visible change was the slightly slanted windshield, which graced the various General Motors cars of 1930 and reduced road glare at night. Also, Chevrolet's wheels were now 19 inches in diameter instead of 20. Disc wheels were still found on most body types, but wire wheels were included on the Sport Coupe and Sport Roadster and could be special ordered for other models at extra cost.

Inside, the greatest improvement was the attractive new all-black instrument panel with its small, round gauges. A gas gauge was now included on the dash. The driver's seat was adjustable, and the steering wheel was moved to a lower, more comfortable position.

On the Sport Coupe, the rear window could be lowered a few inches to permit conversation between front-seat and rumble-seat occupants.

Other body types included the four-door, seven-window Sedan, four-door, five-window Club Sedan; the two-door Sedan (better known as the "Coach"); Business Coupe with trunk; Roadster; Sport Roadster; and Phaeton.

Windshields could be folded down flat on the three open models for an exhilarating rush of air in one's face (or an eyeful of gnats, whichever occurred first). Open cars were equipped with side curtains that could be brought out and attached during cold or rainy weather.

Fisher-built bodies were made of steel over a wooden framework. This was known as 'composites body construction.

Dear Mr. Grimsley,
The first thing I notice when I entered your new sales lot in Midland (besides the 7 hungry salesmen launching at me), was your mission statement, "All leadership personnel will treat every person as a potential lifetime customer, communicating a professional image that embraces honesty and concern for our customer's wants and needs." Mr. Grimsley, that is exactly what I received from your man Paul Garcia when I purchased my car this month. I can't tell you how pleased I am with my purchase and the way I was treated by Mr. Garcia, Mr. Thole and Mr. Weaver. I am proud to, and already have, referred customers to your location for their used car needs.
Thanks again!
Respectfully,
Tom G. Revilla

The seminar uses interactive learning techniques to help people absorb and remember the key characters, geography and major themes of the Old Testament. Auditorium floors are turned into "maps" as people sit or stand near "Bible lands and waters."

In just five hours, from 7 to 9 p.m. that Friday and 9 a.m. to noon that Saturday, participants master a survey of the Old Testament, even if they have very little Bible knowledge, said a release from the church.

All interested parties need to contact the church office, 699-7064. The cost of the seminar, including supplies, refreshments and child care, is $10 a person.

"Walk Thru the Old Testament" seminars are conducted by teachers from "Walk Thru the Bible."

Of special interest to educators will be the fact that CEU credits are available to those who attend the seminar.

Building completed

STANTON — Pastors Leroy and Jannie Linney invite the public to join in celebrating the completion of the building of Hosanna Christian Fellowship, 2001 N. Lamesa Highway.

Services will begin at 10 a.m. Sunday with praise and prayer, accompanied by words of testimony and encouragement by a number of guests.

Pastors John and Carolyne Redic of Victory Chapel in El Paso will begin the services with prayer, and the Rev. Richard Spencer of Cornerstone Christian Fellowship in Midland will deliver the dedication sermon.

Open house will be from 2 to 4 p.m. Feb. 2.

For more information call Leroy or Jannie Linney, 1-915-756-3688.

Blood drive set

A blood drive will be held in the Fellowship Hall of First United Methodist Church Sunday.

Blood donations may be made between 8:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. Free T-shirts and refreshments for donors will be provided. Also the PSA test will be available at a cost of $15 for blood donors and $20 for non-donors.

A spring series of Crown Ministries classes is scheduled to begin with an orientation class Wednesday. Regular classes will start Feb. 19. Through scripture, participants will discover biblical principles about earning, spending, saving, giving and investing. There is a fee of $45 per person or $50 per couple for the classes. For more information call the church, 682-3701.

Jody Hill will be leading the video series, "That the World May Know," from "Focus on the Family." The three-week series is a light trek through Israel. Sessions are open to all adults and youth from the ninth grade up. The classes begin Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. in Room 100.

The Chancel Choir's 36th Shrive Tuesday Pancake Supper is scheduled for 5 to 8 p.m. Feb. 11 in the Fellowship Hall. Tickets cost $3 each, with no charge for preschoolers. The menu features all-you-can-eat pancakes and sausage. Tickets are available from Chancel Choir members or at the door.

In addition, First UMC, Main Street at Ohio Avenue, has started two new worship services.

A contemporary worship service begins at 8:30 a.m. Sunday in Glass Memorial Chapel with the Rev. John Rech as the leader. These services feature contemporary music. The purpose for adding the service is to expand First UMC's ability to respond to the variety of worship needs within the community. Those attending are invited to dress casually. Glass Memorial Chapel may be entered from Main Street.

Also there is a 6:30 p.m. Wednesday evening service of song and sacrament in the chapel, led by the Rev. Molly Krueger. This service is an informal and unstructured 45-minute time of worship that begins with song — familiar hymns and choruses — and continues with a devotional on topics suggested by the worshiping congregation. The service includes a time of personal and corporate prayer and the celebration of Holy Communion.

Other worship services available at First UMC include 8:30 and 10:30 a.m. Sunday services in the sanctuary which are led by the Rev. Lane Boyd and the Community of Joy, a contemporary Christian experience in a non-church setting at Cole Theatre, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., led by the Rev. John Rech.

During the four weeks of February, Ms. Krueger is teaching a series of lessons during the Sunday School hour on the Sacrament of Holy Communion. The class explores theology, UM understandings, how parents can better instruct their children and provides answers to practical questions.

For more information call 682-3701.

Festival scheduled

Asbury United Methodist Church will be hosting its first Spring Arts and Crafts festival from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. April 26 at the Midland County Exhibit Building, East Highway 80.

This will be the beginning of a new tradition for Asbury UMC. In November, the church hosted its 17th annual Fall Festival.

The Spring Festival also will coincide with the Church's 50th anniversary.

At this time, there is booth space available for rent. For an application or more information call Karen Hughes, 683-2867.

The seminar is $103, and there are discounts for additional family members.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1997

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The written word will prove lucky for you. You could write or sell the great American novel! Business matters will require your undivided attention in June. Know your priorities. A financial expert's advice could help you hang on to more of the money you make. Next fall, take advantage of an inexpensive travel package. A wedding that takes place towards the end of '97 will enjoy every blessing. Let higher-ups know you are ready for larger responsibilities.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: actress Sherilynn Fenn, singer Rick James, poet Langston Hughes, heiress Lisa Marie Presley.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Although friends mean well, they could distract you from your goals. Put work ahead of pleasure. Someone's decision to go back to school inspires you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Travel is part of the picture. You get a lucky break when you least expect it! Fresh financial gains allow you to live more comfortably. Romance is on the upswing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Patience is essential when trying to resolve a parent-child conflict. Maintain a positive attitude. Good things will happen if you have confidence in yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You need to decide if a relationship is worth salvaging. A heart-to-heart talk helps you pinpoint a problem. Time spent on self-improvement activities is an excellent investment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Positive developments in a relationship will send your spirits soaring. Be more daring when expressing your views and feelings. Once you zero in on a goal, almost nothing can deflect you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your keen mind is a tremendous asset in business. Computer studies are favored. A weekend job is no substitute for time spent with your children.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your feelings for someone are changing. Dig deeper. You could discover something that will make or break your relationship. Act swiftly if a health problem arises.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may be able to travel less without hurting your business. Equip a home office with a computer and fax. A friend or business ally helps you find a way around an unexpected roadblock.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The love you show will come back to you tenfold. Weigh all available information before deciding whether or not to change your occupation. Keep your records up to date for tax purposes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A tough choice lies ahead. Do not let friends influence an important family decision. Visit someone confined to a hospital or nursing home. Take along a useful gift.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Community service is as fulfilling for teen-agers as it is for adults. They gain new insights from dealing with people from all walks of life. Seek loved one's input regarding an unusual invitation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A new romantic attachment brings unexpected benefits. You widen your circle of friends. Family harmony is a source of contentment. Spend some money to make your home more comfortable.

Siegfried and Roy to start eighth year as headliners at The Mirage

LAS VEGAS — It's no illusion: Siegfried and Roy are starting their eighth year as headliners at The Mirage.

The tiger-taming duo reach the milestone Saturday.

The illusionists have performed 3,134 shows at the hotel-casino over the past seven years, drawing sell-out audiences that totaled 4.71 million people. The shows have grossed about $350 million, manager Bernie Yuman said.

Siegfried and Roy, who began performing in Las Vegas 25 years ago, are also known internationally for their work in preserving rare white tigers and lions, some of which are featured in their show.

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Dick Clark is returning to the airwaves in the state where he became a star. But the only dancing on his new show will be done by jubilant prize-winners.

Dick Clark to tape one-time, half-hour game show.

Clark, whose "American Bandstand" originated in Philadelphia, will tape a one-time, half-hour game show for the Pennsylvania lottery. The program, airing March 8, is part of the lottery's 25th anniversary celebration.

"Pennsylvania is part of my roots and I think they probably asked me because of my ties to the area," Clark said. "It didn't seem like a major challenge."

Three audience members get to play one of three games of chance. Two games have a top prize of $120,000, and the third offers $125,000.

The 25-member audience is being selected from mail-in coupons handed out with lottery tickets.

LONDON — Adding another branch to the gnarled family tree of Britain's royals, Princess Anne's ex-husband is getting married.

Mark Phillips, who coached the U.S. equestrian team at the 1996 Olympics, took out a license in Hawaii to marry a member of the 1984 squad, Press Association reported Friday.

Phillips, 48, and Sandy Pflueger, a 47-year-old originally from Hawaii, visited City Hall for the necessary paperwork on Thursday and were expected to marry this weekend, the British national news agency reported.

The agency said Phillips met his second bride as he did his first, through their shared passion for horses. Princess Anne, the only daughter of Queen Elizabeth II, was on Britain's 1976 Olympic equestrian team, and Phillips was a reserve member.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — He's a ready-made Big Man on Campus: Bill Bradley, former basketball star and U.S. senator, is heading back to college.

Bradley, who retired from the Senate last year after three terms, said Thursday he will take an academic seat at the University of Maryland at College Park, effective immediately.

The Democrat and former New York Knicks star said he will help shape the research agenda for the university's Academy of Leadership and examine issues such as improving race relations and reforming political campaigns.

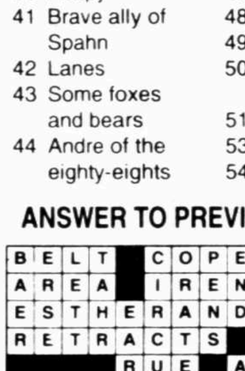

The academy's projects in the past have included efforts to develop political leadership among minorities.

Bradley, who will keep his home in Montclair, N.J., also announced on Thursday he will work with Stanford University during the 1997-98 academic year.

MOSCOW — Donald Trump wants to bring a little of the Hudson to Moscow, proposing to refurbish an aging hotel next to the Kremlin.

Trump submitted plans for renovating the dilapidated Moskva Hotel, a construction official said Friday. The city wants him to fix up the monolith without turning it into another glass-and-steel skyscraper, said Vladimir Resin, first deputy head of Moscow government.

Donald Trump wants to refurbish aging hotel next to Kremlin.

"We are not building any towers in the old part of the city," Resin told the ITAR-Tass news agency. "We are not going to turn the ancient city into a Manhattan."

Trump visited Moscow in November to consider building a luxury residential tower. City authorities proposed he refurbish two Soviet-built hotels near the Kremlin, the Moskva and the Rossiya, both known for their crumbling interiors, poor service and lack of cleanliness.

If Trump gets the Moskva contract, it will be his first overseas real estate development project.

FBI investigates 200 national spy cases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI is investigating some 200 spy cases nationwide as the end of the Cold War has brought no slackening in foreign espionage against this country, a senior bureau official said Friday.

"That's a good number," replied Raymond A. Mislock, chief of the national security section of the bureau's Washington field office, when asked whether ongoing espionage investigations actually number around 200.

"We have an extremely high number of espionage allegations," said Mislock, who supervised the investigation and arrest late last year of former CIA station chief Harold James Nicholson and former FBI employee Earl Edwin Pitts on charges of spying for Russia.

"The Russians are still here," Mislock told a gathering of reporters. "It's no accident that the SVRR and GRU residencies in Washington are the largest in the world. And it's not just the Russians. The threat comes from throughout the world."

The SVRR is the successor to the Soviet KGB and the GRU is Russian military intelligence. A residency is the Russian term for what the CIA calls a station — a foreign office or bureau.

"Some people in government who should have known better assumed this would die with the end of the Cold War," Mislock said, but he noted that the manpower in his office has increased, not decreased, since then.

Mislock handles both counterespionage and counterterrorism cases in Washington and northern Virginia and terrorism cases against Americans in the Middle East, Africa and Europe.

At FBI headquarters, growing instances of domestic terrorism, like the Oklahoma City bombing, prompted the assignment of more agents to counterterrorism, Mislock said.

A year ago, FBI headquarters had one section of agents dealing with terrorism. Now, one section deals with domestic terrorism and another section with international terrorism. Academics are being hired and experts borrowed from the CIA and the Defense Intelligence Agency to staff a terrorism analysis section.

"The domestic threat has become more of a concern than previously," Mislock said. "And the international threat has stayed very high."

Agents working for Mislock were sent by FBI Director Louis Freeh to Saudi Arabia to help investigate the bombing of a housing complex that killed 19 U.S. airmen last June. All but a handful of the agents were withdrawn as the Saudis kept them from participating equally in the investigation.

Mall death toll stable at three

HOUSTON (AP) — Searchers on Friday accounted for the six people feared missing under piles of steel and rubble after a 20-foot-high wall collapsed at a shopping mall, killing three and injuring seven.

Authorities said they did not expect to find more bodies in the rubble.

"We haven't any relatives asking us about anybody that might be left here," said Fire Chief Eddie Corral.

It was possible, though, that someone had not been reported missing, especially if they lived alone, Corral said.

Demolition crews were removing the last sections of a vacant department store when a section of wall common to the old store and the mall caved in Thursday.

A couple of dozen elderly "mall walkers" were exercising at the time. Six walkers and a firefighter were injured — none seriously.

"I looked once behind my shoulder and it looked like waves coming down," said Elizabeth Lingold, one of the six mall walkers taken to area hospitals. "We were not lucky, we were blessed."

Officials found three bodies under the rubble. Killed were Leola Edwards, 59, Ema Curtis, 62, and Thelma Loraine Jolly, 53, all of Houston.

On Friday, engineers were examining the remaining section of the wall to make sure it was secure before sending rescuers back into the debris, Corral said.
