Negotiations Intensify...

Carter Has Slim Chance To Get Hostages Freed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although terming prospects of a breakthrough "very small," the Carter administration says it is still possible to reach a settlement on freeing the American hostages in Iran before President-elect Ronald Reagan takes office.

Negotiations have intensified in the past two days with an exchange of messages between Washington and Tehran and a hastily arranged trip by Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher to Algeria.

Christopher, the chief American negotiator, left Washington Wednesday night and arrived in Algiers at 5:17 a.m. EST, the State Department said. He and Algerian Foreign Minister Mohammad Benyahia then met for two hours. Neither the Algerians nor members of Christopher's entourage would comment afterward.

The meeting was designed to elaborate on a U.S. message sent to Iran Tuesday night in response to Iranian questions about the American position.

Standing in sub-freezing temperatures at Andrews Air Force Base before setting out for Algiers for the third time in two months, Christopher departed from the usual State Department position of refusing to characterize prospects for a settlement.

"Nothing would please me more than to say we are on the verge of an imminent breakthrough," he told reporters. "I can't conscientiously say that.

"But I can say that the process is continuing and the distance between us, which is still measured in very large numbers, seems to be narrowing somewhat. I emphasize seems to be."

Only a few hours before, State Department spokesman John Trattner said the administration was "neither more optimistic nor pessimistic" about a settlement.

But he added: "I don't think we would be sitting here working on transmitting messages through the Algerians to Iran if we didn't think it was possible in this administration. We certainly do think it is possible. We always have thought it was possible."

Christopher conceded that "serious problems remain. Communications are difficult. Time is running out."

"But no one in my position could rest well unless he went to the limit of his personal endurance in trying to find a solution," he said.

A senior American official said earlier that prospects for the breakthrough before Reagan's inauguration Jan. 20 are "very small indeed."

New Parks Board Has First Session

Four members of the city's new parks and recreation board met Wednesday with consultants and city officials for their first dicussion of plans for the new department.

The new board was appointed at the city council meeting Monday night. Members of the parks and recreation board are Patsy Huckabee, Jimmy Dyess, Delbert Downing, Jerry Vestal and Fay Thompson. All except Dyess attended the luncheon session Wednesday at K-Bob's Steakhouse.

Also in attendance were Walter Heard, parks suprintendent for the City of Lubbock, and John Alford, parks and recreation director for Lubbock who have been retained as consultants for the development of Line Park, which is located along Deep Creek between 30th St. and 37th St.

Meeting with the group for their first session were Mayor Milton Ham and Dr. John Best, Rod Waller and Don Gressett, members of the city council, and J. K. Ward, county park superintendent.

The parks and recreation board plans to hold another session tonight, at which time it expects to elect its officers.

The parks and recreation board, which is the first to serve in that capacity here, will have direct supervision of city park development and operation, and will make recommendations to the city council on policy matters,

Clayton May Seek 5th Term

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Bill Clayton told reporters today he might run for a fifth term as speaker of the Texas House.

Clayton is expected to win an unprecedented fourth term when the House elects its presiding officer on Jan. 13, the day the 67th Legislature begins its 140-day regular session.

He disclosed he might be open to a fifth term while talking informally with reporters following a news conference about prospects for the upcoming session.

Reminded that he had stated unequivocally in the past that his fourth term would be his last, Clayton answered with a grin, "I've made New Year's resolutions, too."

Hunts Buy Big In Canada

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Money from the billionaire Hunt brothers of Texas is gushing into Western Canada.

Nelson Bunker, William and Lamar Hunt invested $93 million in Western Canadian mineral properties in a buying binge this week and New York bankers say the brothers have been given the go-ahead to purchase holdings in "at least a half a dozen mining ventures."

This week's buying involved three Western Canadian mining concerns, but a spokesman for Hunt Energy Corp. of Dallas would not confirm or deny that other approved acquisitions also involve Canadian properties.

Spy Gets 18 Year Sentence

BALTIMORE (AP) — David H. Barnett, a former CIA operative, was sentenced to 18 years in prison today for selling intelligence secrets to the Soviets for $92,600.

"I don't think there is any question you did harm to this country," said U.S. District Judge Frank Kaufman.

Kaufman said the sentence was intended to deter others from selling intelligence secrets. The maximum sentence for espionage is life in prison.

Barnett pleaded guilty last Oct. 29 to a single count of transmitting information to a foreign power.

Industrial Foundation Election Set

Ballots were going into the mail today for the election of four directors of the Scurry County Industrial Foundation.

The deadline for returning the ballots is Jan. 19, and the results of the election will be announced at the foundation's annual meeting scheduled for Jan. 22.

All members of the foundation are entitled to vote in the director's election.

Nominees for the four positions to be filled in the election are Mike Line, Larry Anderson, Ray Max Grimmett and Mike Reed.

Board members whose terms expire include Lanny Wadleigh, who has served the organization as president the past year, Derald Lambert, Bill Ziske and Rex Fields.

The new directors will serve a term of three years on the board.

Holdover members of the industrial foundation board are Truett Bryan, John Greene, John Reed, Don West, Ernest Sears, Mal Donelson, Don Wolfe and Bill Wilson III.

Records Set In 1980 By Snyder Financial Firms

Snyder financial firms set new records in both deposits and loans at the close of 1980, according to their quarterly reports as of Dec. 31.

Overall deposits topped the $150 million mark for the first time, while deposits in banks hit the $100 million mark for the first time and savings and loan deposits reached the $50 million mark for the first time in history.

Although a continuing inflationary spiral undoubtedly contributed to the gains, increased industrial activity in area oilfields and brisk retail activity toward the end of the year were credited with helping set the new records.

The deposits in the two banks and two savings and loan firms totalled $151,450,837, which eclipsed the old record of $142,772,360 set at the close of the first quarter of 1980.

The overall loans amounted to $85,209,673, nearly three quarters of a million more than the previous record of $84,561,458 set on June 30, 1979.

Bank deposits reached $100,126,982, exceeding the old record of $94,932,006 which was set March 31, 1980, and savings and loan deposits amounted to $51,323,855, compared to the old record of $49,967,102 set last Oct. 30.

Bank loans amounted to $46,964,320 at the end of the year, exceeding the old record of $46,078,619 set at the end of 1978. Savings and loan firms reported loans of $38,245,353, just slightly below their record of $38,710,725 set June 30, 1979.

Snyder National Bank reported deposits of $52,120,787 and loans of $24,631,494.

West Texas State Bank reported deposits of $48,006,195 and loans of $22,332,826.

Snyder Savings and Loan reported deposits of $29,768,000 and loans of $26,190,000.

First Federal Savings and Loan reported deposits of $21,555,855 and loans of $12,055,353.

Silver Taken In Area Burglary

A $1,000 reward has been posted for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the persons making a $50,000 silver haul from the rural Snyder home of Elizabeth Connell.

The silver, in the form of silver table ware and including 22 place servings, was reported stolen Wednesday. The discovery of the theft was made by Connie Springer of Snyder, a daughter of Mrs. Connell. Mrs. Connell, said Scurry County Sheriff Keith Collier, was not at home at the time.

The house is located approximately eight miles west of Snyder. Although it is not known exactly when the burglary occurried, Collier said entry to the residence was gained through a window.

Collier asked that persons having information concerning the break-in contact the sheriff's office.

Curtailed Visits To Hospital Urged

Cogdell Memorial Hospital is overflowing with patients, and hospital officials are urging that visits to patients be limited.

A heavy upsurge in patients suffering from respiratory and flu-like illnesses has kept the hospital full and sometimes overflowing since the Christmas holidays, said Cy Miller, hospital administrator.

Doctors and the hospital staff are requesting that visits be curtailed for the benefit of the patients and visitors alike, said Miller.

"We could sure use some of the rooms in the new wing if we had them ready," Miller said. The hospital has overflowed several times recently, and respiratory illnesses usually are more prevalent this time of year. The "season" for this type of illness usually lasts several weeks during the winter.

"It will help all involved if people will refrain from visiting hospital patients at this time," Miller said.

The new 50-bed wing of the hospital is due to be ready for occupancy soon, and hospital officials hope that it can be put into service in time to help with the heavy winter patient load.

5 Persons Sentenced In Borden

Five guilty pleas were entered Wednesday in Borden County.

Pleading guilty to charges of theft were Wade Reynolds of Odessa, Jim Bob Parvin of Gardendale, and Julian Lee Hudgins of Big Spring. The three men are alleged to have stolen merchandise from the home of Richard Hodnett May 16, 1979.

Each defendant received a five-year probation, fined $500, and ordered to make restitution.

On charges of criminal mischief, guilty pleas were entered by Randy Lee Waldon of Carlsbad, N.M., and Preston Joel Bleak of Lovington, N.M. They are alleged to have killed one head of cattle last Aug. 11 owned by Bill Wilson.

Each received a three-year probation, fined $300, and ordered to pay restitution.

Our mail produced a couple of interesting references to a language called "lunch counterese" the other day. A ham sandwich was called "a pig between two sheets" and lunch counter slang for a bowl of tomato soup was called "red noise."

We had not encountered these expressions before, but it brought to mind some of the soda jerk's lingo of by-gone years, back in the days when very few male youngsters in small towns ever made it to adulthood without "skeeting" soda at a local drug store.

That was back in the days, of course, when the drug store's soda fountain was the only thing even remotely resembling today's fast food emporium.

The real professionals behind the soda fountains became true artists, and each had his specialty. The pro was the full-time employee who not only served as overseer of the part-time youngsters, but also gave lessons in concocting various items that attracted customers, who mostly were the teenagers and their dates. An apprentice was limited to the simpler wares, such as a plain Coke, for which the lingo for placing the order was "shoot one." The rookie also was on something kin to probation until he was able to hang a loaded tray on a car door without spilling a drop.

And you are middle-aged or past if you remember when a Dr. Pepper was a "Waco," which was derived from the city where this popular drink was launched.

But we never heard tomato soup called "red noise." In fact we don't recall many people being particularly interested in tomato soup in those days. But they did like a "bowl of red" which was the universal slang for a bowl of chili. In fact, this expression became so well known that it became the title of a book authored by Frank X. Tolbert, one of the better known chili experts.

The only role that tomatoes had in this connection, as we recall, was the tendency of some customers whose appetites were larger than their wallets and they would order a "bowl of red," devour about half of it, and then surreptitiously replenish the bowl's contents from the ketchup bottle that invariably was on the counter.

Here are a few more items from the recent mail:

Reagan Told Curbing Budget To Be Big Job

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan will inherit a 1981 inflation rate exceeding 12 percent and a sluggish economy that will push unemployment as high as 8 percent, the outgoing Carter administration predicts in its forthcoming economic outlook.

The grim forecast, which parallels other projections by the Congressional Budget Office and private economists, is the reason strategists for Reagan are warning the president-elect that the current budget deficit will be "far worse" than originally predicted.

David A. Stockman, Reagan's budget director-designate, said Wednesday the task of controlling federal spending — in light of double-digit inflation and sky-high interest rates — "is going to be even greater than we expected."

He told reporters the 1981 federal budget is fast piling up a $60 billion deficit, the same as last year's red ink and double the figure predicted only months ago by the Carter administration.

As recently as last spring, Carter vowed that the fiscal 1981 budget would show a slight surplus.

Carter's budget for fiscal 1982, which is to be delivered to Congress less than a week before Reagan takes office, is expected to project a deficit of about $40 billion after $740 billion in federal spending, sources say.

That budget is based on the Carter administration's economic outlook that sees consumer prices advancing at more than 12 percent for the third year in a row.

The Carter budget predicts inflation, as measured by the Consumer Price Index, will rise 12.6 percent in 1981, about the same as last year and only slightly less than the 13.3 percent pace in 1979.

This lack of progress on the inflation front occurs despite last year's severe but short recession, which kept the economy at a virtual standstill for all of 1980.

The Carter administration assumes that the Gross National Product, after adjusting for inflation, will not grow at all in the first six months of 1981. However, a 3.4 percent annual growth rate predicted for the second half would mean a 1.7 percent expansion for the whole year.

Historically, that is a meager improvement, particularly after a recession. In 1982, the Carter administration foresees a 3.5 percent growth rate.

Men Born In '62 Register

Men born in 1962 are urged to go to the post office by Friday and register with the Selective Service.

The registration, which is not a true draft registration, is aimed at obtaining the names and addresses of all men born in 1962, said Postmaster Jack Tilson.

To be filled out, said Tilson, is a card asking only for the name and address of each person registering. From the post office, the cards are mailed to Washington, D.C.

The only exceptions are for men already on active duty with the armed forces and for non-immigrant aliens.

Men born in 1963 or later are supposed to register within 30 days of their 18th birthday.

Q.—Why were the cross walks not repainted on the square when the streets were resurfaced?

A.—This is still in the program, says Mike Smith, city engineer. It apparently involves priorities. The highway department resurfaced the streets and marked some traffic lanes and it also plans to repaint the cross walks. In fact, the city engineer said correspondence this week reconfirmed these plans.

Begin May Quit Minister's Post

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin will resign next week, setting the stage for early elections, possibly by this summer, Israeli newspapers predicted today.

Begin will quit unless a compromise is reached on salary demands by the nation's 58,000 teachers, and both Finance Minister Yigael Hurvitz and Education Minister Zevulun Hammer decide to stay in office, the papers said.

Hurvitz, seeking to cap an inflationary spiral that left Israel with the world's highest inflation rate — 131 percent — last year, has threatened to quit if the Begin government gives in to the teachers' demands for higher pay, while Hammer says he will resign if the teachers don't get salary hikes.

The resignation of either minister would almost certainly topple the government, and the newspapers said there was little hope a compromise could be found.

Israel is scheduled to hold parliamentary elections in November, but the balloting could be pushed up to the beginning of summer if Begin quits.

The newspaper Yedioth Ahronoth said Begin would submit his resignation to President Yitzhak Navon on Sunday, if a Cabinet meeting scheduled for earlier in the day is unable to work out a compromise on the teachers' demands.

reagan no workaholic

Why has President-elect Ronald Reagan's unusually casual approach to governance during the transition period produced so much amazement and indignation among supposedly sophisticated political observers?

Those who claim to be startled by Reagan's apparent lack of interest or involvement in much of the new administration's daily routine either are feigning surprise or haven't closely examined his record.

Virtually every objective account of Reagan's stewardship as governor of California, for example, portrays his as a man with little or no involvement on his part.

Many of the issues that demanded the governor's attention were summarized in terse (if not oversimplified) one-page "mini-memos" so Reagan wouldn't have to be burdened by listening to complex arguments or reading detailed analyses.

Reagan was, of course, forced to become involved in resolving California's major problems during his tenure in office, but nobody ever accused him of being a workaholic.

One especially revealing account of Reagan's nine-to-five day is contained in "Ronnie and Jesse" by Lou Cannon, an astute Washington Post reporter. The book was published in 1969 — more than a decade ago.

"Often (Reagan) arrived home by 6 and showered immediately, then changed into his pajamas," writes Cannon. "In the evening, he and Nancy watched television — and the governor read correspondence or memos.

"Both (Reagan) and Nancy were disturbed by jibes that he was a 'part-time governor' with nothing better to do in the evenings than watch television. Still, he liked to watch it."

A contemporary account that reinforces that earlier evidence comes from former President Gerald R. Ford, who was courted by Reagan during last year's Republican National Convention as a potential vice-presidential running mate.

Ford freely acknowledged — and Reagan never denied — that the two men seriously discussed a unique arrangement under which Reagan would, in effect, serve as "chairman of the board" while Ford acted as "chief operating officer" in charge of day-to-day government activities.

Political scientists and historians were aghast at the notion of a president's delegating so much of his authority, but the arrangement apparently never bothered Reagan. Indeed, there is growing evidence that the role originally offered to Ford now is being played by Edwin Meese III, counselor to the president-elect.

Given Reagan's longstanding propensity for such arrangements, it's hardly astounding to find him touring Pacific Palisades, Bel Air and Beverly Hills on visits to his barber, tailor and dentist while his staff is introducing his Cabinet selections and issuing policy statements in his name.

Is Reagan's management style suitable for a successful presidency? That question ought to remain unanswered until he — and the voters — have an opportunity to test it following his inauguration.

We do know that previous presidents who had a penchant for detail and an obsession about doing almost everything themselves were notably unsuccessful with that approach.

Lyndon B. Johnson, for example, was notorious for calling the managers of obscure government programs to complain about their failings after reading stories on the wire-service printers installed in his White House suite so that he wouldn't miss any new tidbit of information.

Similarly, Jimmy Carter was widely derided for insisting that he personally retain authority to schedule playing time on the White House tennis courts.

Johnson and Carter were so obsessed with trivia, however, that they failed to recognize the massive popular sentiment mounting against them. If Reagan wants to experiment with a different approach — at his own risk — he deserves the opportunity.

The Iranian hostage crisis may be lacking a number of things — including rationality on the part of at least one of the parties — but certainly not a vivid vocabulary.

"Barbarians," "criminals," kidnappers," "tyranny," "savagery," "swindling" are a few of the choicer terms heard in recent days. It is getting to the point where a program may soon be necessary to tell precisely who is calling whom what.

Under the circumstances, it may be helpful to keep in mind that business about name-calling being harmless when you consider the alternative, namely physical expression of hostility. In all the sound and fury, the emphasis, fortunately, is still on the former. That at least is something to be thankful for even should the apparent impasse carry through Jan. 20, and possibly well beyond.

There may well be, however, more to that impasse than is apparent on the surface.

Not the least interesting aspect is the developing role of the Algerians. Selected initially by the Iranians as ideologically compatible middlemen, they are taking their commission very seriously. If not — yet — full-fledged mediators, they are more than mere messengers. They appear to be making some effort to enlighten the Iranians on the realities of the American situation, in particular on the power relationships among Congress and outgoing and incoming presidents.

It is not the sort of performance that the Algerians' behavior until very recently would have suggested might be expected of them. After wrestling independence from France in 1962, they took a stance as the radicals' radicals of the developing world. Algerian antipathy toward the West in general and the United States in particular was well publicized and expressed in a number of ways, including the availability of haven for skyjackers and assorted terrorists and political fugitives. Eldridge Cleaver was an Algerian guest for a lengthy spell.

The Algerians also are among OPEC's price hawks, pushing for every dollar that can be wrung out of the oil-consuming industrial nations.

With a record like that, no wonder they appear simpatico to the Iranians. They are in a position to talk reason and just may be able to get the Iranians to listen.

But back to the impasse, this is far from the first such the crisis-ridden postwar world has seen. The Iranian hostage situation invites comparison with the Pueblo incident of 1968, in which North Korea seized and held a U.S. electronic intelligence ship and its crew. Their release was secured after months of similarly frustrating lack of apparent progress in negotiations.

Twenty years before that, an entire city was being held hostage. Berlin. The crisis precipitated by the Soviet land blockade of the divided city appeared to have hardened into a permanent superpower standoff with neither side able to yield without damaging loss of prestige or to take any new action without risk of war. Its resolution came suddenly, so far as the public was concerned, as a consequence of informal contacts between the American and Soviet ambassadors to the United Nations.

The point in both examples is that there is much more to crisis-ending than the publicized maneuverings of the antagonists, and that much may be going on behind the scenes of which the public is unaware. It may not be too much to hope for something of the sort in the present situation.

Of course, in both the Pueblo and Berlin crises the United States was dealing with coldly rational if bitterly hostile opponents. Whereas in Iran...

But here we are, back to names again.

at wit's end

Returning anything to a department store for adjustment is one of my favorite things. It ranks right there under getting three estimates on a crushed car door.

It isn't that the salespeople give you a bad time, it's just time-consuming.

On Christmas when I opened a box contaning a blouse, a cardigan and slacks, I was flattered that my husband saw me as a 5-10, 36-pound girl.

"The pants have Cheryl Tiegs on the pocket, he said proudly. I weighed more than Cheryl Tiegs at my birth.

"Maybe you could exchange them for a designer with a longer name and bigger pocket," he said.

The day after Christmas I tried on the blouse. The sleeves held my arms to my side like a vise. The sweater would never button in this life.

Two days after Christmas, the department store set special desks to handle the returns more efficiently. I took a second look at my outfit.

"How are you at handling stress, Cheryl?" I said in the closet to no one in particular. If I did without breakfast, didn't drink a glass of water in 36 hours, left the top gripper open, secured the zipper with a pin to keep it from easing on down, rolled up the legs and wore an overblouse, I could get by with it. I hung them in the closet and watched TV.

Four days after Christmas, my husband asked if I had returned my outfit. I took another look at the blouse. If I did arm circle exercises every morning for the next year, rolled up the sleeves, didn't button the two bottom buttons, and didn't use my hands or shoulders to open doors, answer phones or drink coffee, I could wear it under a coat. I hung it up in the closet.

A few days ago, I ran across the box holding the Christmas sweater. I thought about returning it when I took another look at it. What the heck, if I hung it loosely over my shoulders and looped the arms under my chin and looked breathless like I'd just come off the "courts," it would fit like a glove. I took it out of the box, threw away the tags and sales slips and viewed my coordinated sports outfit that Barbie would have to wear a truss to get into.

Foolish? Maybe. On the other hand, there isn't a day goes by that I'll not look at that trio and quote a wise man who once said, "Some men see things as they are and say why. I dream of things that never were and say why not?"

The California bicyclists are at it again. Three girls recently rode through town. I can't remember now whether they were going to California or coming from there, but California was on their itinerary.

Really, the business of getting on one's bicycle and going to California is old stuff. I have lost count of the number of nuts I've talked to who were either going to or coming from California via bicycle. I have talked to people visiting California via moped and Model-A Ford. I have talked to people running to California, walking there on stilts, and even one guy who was rollerskating there.

They all thought their ideas of travel were unique. I'll have to grant that the rollerskater was one of a kind, but the others were only vain if they thought their modes of travel were novel. What I want to see now are some genuinely different folks passing through town.

Beer barrels have been kicked to California before, but has anyone ever had the courage to put himself in the barrel? Now that would be different. In 1981, I would like to interview someone who had been kicked every step of the way to California. Such a person would probably be a little punch drunk by the time I got to talk to him, but how normal could he have been to ever start such a journey?

Another way of getting to California would be to swim there -- over land. It could be done. It would require a large truck with a small swimming pool mounted in the back. As the truck was slowly driving down the road, the swimmer could be putting in his strokes in the pool. That, too, would be different.

Another way of getting to California would be to have a friend fly you there, while you dangle precipitously from the wingtip. The more athletic might want to walk California on their hands, crawl there, jump rope there, cartwheel there, or ambulate there on their knees.

For the bizarre among us, there is the option of walking there in nail-studded shoes or having a buddy walk behind you and flog you. Of course, I'm not sure I'd want to talk to those folks. What I'd really like to talk to, however, is a set of Siamese twins going to California any way they wanted to.

Like a primordial call, I think, the urge to visit California attracts the lunatic fringe.

not a profession yet

NEW YORK (AP) — With would-be customers priced out of the market, with new construction buried in an economic morass, with financing demanding a tax lawyer's agility, real estate people are having their problems.

But some of the industry's problems, according to a fellow who relies on some 34 years of critical observations, were brought on by itself.

"What problems?" William D. Patterson was asked.

"Incompetence," said Patterson, who helped found and who now heads Delaware's largest Realtor, Patterson Schwartz, headquartered in Wilmington. He expounded:

"I told a real estate group a while ago that we aren't a profession and they got angry. But we're not a profession. We're approaching a profession and we're making great strides, but we've got a way to go."

Patterson, it may surprise some to learn, is also an official of the National Association of Realtors. He is in fact the brand new president of its educational arm, the Realtors National Marketing Institute.

"If we have a theme for this year it's specialization and professionalism," he said. Education will be the vehicle. "Education and training is the bottom line in this business," he said. It will be proven again this year, he said. Perhaps as never before, he suggested.

"The real estate business is becoming more complex and competitive," he explained. "For the time being, and if mortgage rates stays at 14 or 15 percent, we'll need a lot of innovation or we won't see deals."

Patterson's job for the year — he'll be detached from his Wilmington office — is to spread word of the institute's many courses and books for, he says, "those seeking to be more than sales people."

It's a practice of many years, one that helped build his firm to 130 people grossing $100 million a year. All are employees rather than contractors, the latter being a looser alliance common to most firms. It allows him, he says, "to tell them what needs to be done."

During the difficult days he foresees for this year, and probably 1982 and 1983 as well, the well-trained, well-directed Realtor will get the business, says Patterson. He will, for example, know creative finance.

As practiced through much of 1980, creative financing means inducing the seller to take back a mortgage from the buyer. It can mean tax advantages for the seller. It can mean a steady, high-interest income.

The well trained agent or Realtor, said Patterson, "will qualify the buyer and have complete information on that person when he goes to the seller. He'll be able to advise on taxes. He'll know the seller's needs and his investment goals." In other words, he'll act professionally.

thoughts

The Ten Commandments are a covenant between God and his people. God agrees to give them fatherly love, forgiveness and protection and they agree to obey and serve him. There are several methods of dividing them but the usual one is the first four contain the duties to God and the second six contain the duties to man. Some put the fifth in the first group as a religious duty. Jesus based the commandments on love when asked which was the greatest commandment in the law.

"Jesus said unto him, Thous shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." — Matt. 22:37-39

new crime tool

NEW YORK (AP) — Electronics will soon provide another weapon in the war on crime.

The publication MIS Week reports the development of a mobile wireless facsimile machine that can be hooked up to a patrol car's transmitter. It will enable policemen to send and receive identifying pictures while pursuing suspects.

Developed by a Japanese firm in cooperation with the Japanese National Police Agency, the pictures from the unit are good enough in quality for newspaper use, says the publication.

Fumaric Acid Pondered As Meat Curer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite its ominous-sounding name, fumaric acid can be used safely to cure meat and poultry products, the government says.

Still, as part of its rule-making process, the Agriculture Department is asking for public comments on whether to allow the use of fumaric acid in the curing process.

Donald L. Houston, administrator of the department's Food Safety and Quality Service, said the proposed rule would classify fumaric acid as "a cure accelerator which must be combined with a curing agent for the purpose of fixing color in meat and poultry products."

Houston said fumaric acid occurs naturally in many plants and is produced commercially. It has been approved by the Food and Drug Administration for use in non-meat food products.

Your Birthday

January 9, 1981

It's important this coming year to stay on the best of terms with persons whose assistance you need in your career or business. Solid relationships can help you advance your ambitions many times faster than you could on your own.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Steer clear of friends and acquaintances who sometimes take advantage of your generous nature. These persons may consider you a sitting duck today. Romance, travel, luck resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Should you find yourself in a competitive situation today, don't underestimate your adversaries. The foe may be a trifle stronger than you think.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Acting without thinking today could cause you unnecessary problems. Plan that which you hope to do with extreme care, then follow through to the letter.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be careful in dealing with friends today where money is involved. A misunderstanding could suddenly erupt if the transactions get complicated.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Persons whose support you need in order to further your ambitions must be treated with extreme tact. A wrong move could cost you an ally.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This is not a good day to experiment with untested methods or procedures workwise. What you think is a labor-saving device may prove to be the opposite.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Usually you're not the type who takes risks on things about which you know little, but today a persuasive friend may encourage you to act against your better judgment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Making snap decisions on important domestic issues could cause complications today. Don't decide unless you're sure you have all the facts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't let your attention wander if you are working with unfamiliar tools or materials today. Daydreaming could cause serious mistakes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're reasonably lucky today, except in situations where you hope to get something for nothing. A jackpot isn't likely if you don't first put a coin in the machine.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) On the homefront today, disruptions could arise over ridiculous issues. Conduct yourself so that no one can accuse you of being the instigator.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) From time to time you have a tendency to blurt out things you wish you'd never said. Guard against this tendency today so you won't have to apologize later.

Dear Abby

Ragamuffin Has Plenty of Nothing

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My 5-year-old daughter, Penny, is in a gifted children's class in public school. She has a classmate, Randy, who is a handsome, kind little fellow, but Penny says that no one likes him because he is dirty. She says he wears the same dirty jeans and T-shirt, his tennis shoes are holey, the laces untied, he never wears socks or underwear and he could really use a bath.

I told her that we like or dislike people because of the way they behave, not the way they dress, the color of their skin, the way they wear their hair, or what church they go or don't go to.

Penny likes Randy and has become his friend. (She's the only friend he has.)

I've considered writing Randy's mother a note telling her in a nice way that her son is being discriminated against because of his neglected appearance. I've also considered buying the boy some new clothes and underwear. Or should I just mind my own business? Maybe you have a suggestion on how to help Randy.

OPEN FOR SUGGESTIONS

DEAR OPEN: Because you know nothing about Randy's home life (he may not even have a mother), express your concern to Randy's teacher. A child who comes to school dirty, ill-clad and so obviously neglected needs help. School authorities are in close touch with agencies that provide assistance to abused and neglected youngsters. A child in need is everybody's business. Thank you for caring.

DEAR ABBY: I need your advice. I'm in love with a wonderful guy who wants to marry me. My problem is my work. He wants me to give it up. I'm a model (fashion and photography), and I've been told by experts that I have a great future in this field. Norman knew I was a model when we met and it didn't seem to bother him. Now he tells me that after we are married he doesn't want me to continue in this line of work.

Abby, I love modeling, but I love Norman too, and it's creating a terrible conflict within me. I don't want to give up my career, but I don't want to lose Norman. He's a very stubborn, possessive man who has given me an ultimatum — either him or my modeling. Please help me.

TORN

DEAR TORN: If you give up modeling to marry this stubborn, possessive man, prepare for more ultimatums. His idea of a "model wife" is one who yields to his demands.

Wardrobe Focus

By Florence De Santis

NEW YORK (NEA) — Although businesswomen have been around since the first typists in the 1880s were known as "typewriters," only recently has business dressing been receiving the special attention it deserves. Even Brooks Brothers offers man-tailored suits for women these days.

More popular, however, is the complete, easily assembled business wardrobe. Its most convenient example can be ordered by mail from the spring Spiegel Catalog. Spiegel has gone to designer Gayle Kirkpatrick, a pioneer in the separates field, who's now designing for Breckenridge.

Kirkpatrick starts with a wool blend blazer, with a lengthened, two-button silhouette and rounded detailing. It comes with a lined skirt shirred in front and invert-pleated in back for ease. Classic slacks complete the basic wardrobe, in a choice of taupe, chamois or navy.

Kirkpatrick adds two shirts, one striped and one paisley, with softly bowed round collars and long sleeves. They're in a silky, easy-care polyester, as is the matching paisley pleated skirt that turns one blouse into a dress top. These items feature all three colors in their prints. The six pieces in this wardrobe can be mix-matched not only with each other, but with many pieces a woman already owns.

If North had been a hand hog he might have bid three notrump over South's three hearts. Or South might well have bid three notrump over North's three spades. If so, there would be no article. North would play in three notrump and make four or maybe five odd.

As a matter of fact, the game was duplicate and two North declarers did play in notrump and collect 11 tricks. At all other tables South played in four spades.

The defense started with the jack of diamonds lead. East took his ace and king. Some East players continued with a third diamond since they knew that West could ruff. This made things easy for South. He just discarded his deuce of clubs and claimed the balance after West ruffed.

At a few tables East stopped to think. South had bid spades and hearts as if he had a lot of cards in those two suits. He had also produced two diamonds. It was quite likely that he would hold just a singleton in clubs. So the thinking Easts played the ace of clubs before leading the third diamond and no matter what South did he would have to lose a trump trick, his contract and most of the match points.

Sensible shopper

Barbi Benton told Beauty Digest magazine how much she follows fashion trends: "I'd call myself a sensible trend follower. I'll raise or lower my hems. If straight-leg jeans are in, as opposed to bells, I'll follow that. But I don't invest in new clothes just because they're splashed all over the papers and magazines, especially if they're silly fashions like poodle skirts."

Art Guild Discusses Old Homes

"Shelter: Yesterday," was the subject under discussion at the Art Guild Study Club Jan. 6.

Mrs Paris McPherson and Mrs. Stanley Noah served as hostesses and program leaders.

Mrs. McPherson used pictures to illustrate her talk on early day homes. She told of the older homes in Scurry County, the dug-outs and half dug-outs, which the early day settlers used.

According to old records, the family of John Webb built the first house in Scurry County. It stood where the court house is now and the lumber was hauled by oxen teams from Fort Worth.

Mrs. McPherson explained that all early day homes were made of materials which were available at that location.

Pictures were shown of fine homes that were built by wealthy land owners on plantations and in cities, including San Marcos and Galveston. Many of these homes are being restored today, according to the speaker.

Mrs. Myron Roe, club president, presided at the business meeting.

Mrs. Noah and Mrs. McPherson served refreshments to 12 club members. The group met at the Martha Ann Woman's Club.

To save energy, make sure the refrigerator and freezer are placed away from heat sources.

Possible help for tinnitus

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — About three months ago I began to notice strange ear noises. After having an audiogram and an examination by an ear doctor, I was told I had a hearing loss in the high frequency range. The doctor told me there was nothing that could be done about it, that it was a common complaint with aging. I'm 64. He said I would just have to tolerate it and live with it.

If you can imagine the sounds of bees buzzing, meat frying in the pan, water running, a snake hissing and loud pulsation noises happening all at once, that is what I am experiencing. I understand the word for this is tinnitus. Should I seek further advice? Can you help me in any way?

DEAR READER — Perhaps you should seek a second opinion. Ear noises may be caused from something simple, such as wax in the ears, which is probably not your case since you just had an examination. They can be caused by some medicines, including ordinary aspirin.

Sometimes they are associated with a hearing loss and if a suitable hearing aid is provided after careful matching with your special loss by an audiologist, it can eliminate the problem. The improvement in hearing makes you less aware of the annoying sounds.

Still others are not associated with a hearing loss and can be benefited by a tinnitus masker. This device provides constant sound to the ears that literally masks the annoying sounds. Not all audiologists are certified to dispense the tinnitus masker if it is needed.

The different things that might be done for people with ear noises are discussed in The Health Letter number 12-10, Help for Tinnitus — Noise or Ringing in the Ears. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been experiencing a burning type pain on the left side of my chest for the past few years. I also find it difficult to breathe through my nose at times. I've had several complete checkups with EKGs but nothing is ever found wrong. Can you think of what may be causing these discomforts?

I'm 33 years old and have been a police officer for the past 10 years. I don't drink or smoke and never have. I don't drink excessive amounts of coffee or tea. I'm athletic, 5 feet 8 inches and 170 pounds.

There is a history of heart attacks within our family but not at a young age. Grandfather, at 73, and father, at 63, died of heart attacks.

DEAR READER — Chest pain from heart disease is usually neither burning nor sharp. It is more often a pressure or dull ache. Burning pains over the left chest are more likely to be related to anxiety-tension or muscle or skeletal problems.

Some doctors might think you have neurocirculatory asthenia, in view of your description and the absence of findings on your examination. That is a term used for symptoms of that nature noted in anxiety. They are sometimes seen in people who are exercising above their level of fitness — such as trying to train too fast.

WHy don't you eliminate all coffee, tea and colas and try to relax a bit more and see if that helps. If not, you might want to investigate any psychological factors that may be causing you stress.

Texas Is Number 1 In Farms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas went against the national trend in 1980 and became No. 1 in the nation for number of farms in the state, mainly because of the increasing popularity of farming as a part-time pursuit, according to new federal statistics.

Preliminary Agriculture Department figures show the number of farms in Texas climbed by 1,000 last year, reaching 186,000, a total that is expected to hold steady through this year.

The state had more farms than any other, leading second-place Missouri which had 120,000 farms last year and third-place Iowa with 119,000.

The number of farms in Texas had declined steadily since 1975 when there were 189,000.

"There's an inceasing number of small, part-time farms coming in," Arnold Bollenbacher of the Census Bureau said. "One of the major things that is occurring there is that there is a sizable increased count of places with under 50 acres, especially, and much of this is part-time."

The increasing number of farms in Texas and their decreasing average size both ran counter to national trends.

The total amount of land devoted to farming, however, declined slightly since 1975 to follow the national trend that has prompted mounting concern over the disappearance of the nation's farmland.

The Agriculture Department estimates show farm acreage in Texas for 1980 at 138.8 million acres, down by 100,000 acres from the previous year and by 1.2 million acres since 1975.

Projections for this year show the amount of Texas farmland holding teady.

A farm is defined in the report as a place that sells at least $1,000 of agricultural produce.

Clements Wants Kingpins Of Crime

EDITOR'S NOTE: Anti-crime bills are certain to take up much of the 1981 Legislature's time as Gov. Bill Clements has proposed an extensive package of proposals, and numerous legislators have indicated they want to get tough with criminals. This is one of a series of AP stories on matters before the Legislature.

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas' top lawman and Gov. Bill Clements have put the word out that they are going after the kingpins of crime during the 1981 Legislature.

Bills filed before the session indicate legislators also want criminals to keep their hands off youngsters and old folks.

The desire of Clements and Col. Jim Adams, director of the Department of Public Safety, to get a wiretap bill approved has focused most attention on that proposal, but it appears doomed.

Clements claims polls show Texans support tapping telephone lines if that is what it takes to shut down major drug traffickers, who have generated a $3 billion a year business in the state.

A wiretap bill passed the Senate in 1979, but never got a committee hearing in the House.

"We must enact a state wiretapping statute if we are to ever reach the upper echelon of the drug traffic in Texas — there are no two ways about it," says Clements.

His proposal would be limited to felony narcotics cases and, in response to wiretap critics, Clements maintains the bill would have enough safeguards to protect the privacy of law-abiding Texans.

"The people of Texas ought to fear the source of this request," says Executive Director John Duncan of the Texas Civil Liberties Union. "Bill Clements came out of the Department of Defense under the Nixon administration — a department that routinely violated the constitutional rights of Americans by spying on them."

Although a Clements aide says Speaker Bill Clayton has assured the governor he will remain "neutral" on wiretap, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby opposes the proposal and predicts it again will not clear the Senate. To stack the odds in his favor, Hobby is expected to appoint Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, another opponent of wiretap, as chairman of the committee that will consider the bill.

Adams said a proposal from the "War on Drugs" campaign by Dallas millionaire H. Ross Perot to seize illicit funds that have been invested in legal businesses is directed at crime bosses.

"We haven't seen the existence in Texas of an organized crime family," says Adams, a former FBI boss. "There are 26 such families, all headquartered in other states, but we are seeing their money coming into Texas motels and banks."

The Perot group proposes stiffer penalties, with no parole, for major drug dealers, greater penalties for selling narcotics to minors and outlawing "head shops" that sell drug paraphernalia.

Heart Attack Suffered By Marty Robbins

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music singer Marty Robbins is undergoing tests at St. Thomas Hospital to determine if surgery is needed following a heart attack.

Robbins' daughter, Janet Robinson, said Wednesday that her father complained of chest pains on New Year's Day and consulted a doctor who recommended that he be hospitalized. He was admitted to the hospital Monday.

"It was a minor heart attack," she said from her father's recording studio. "I don't know if they'll have to perform an operation. He'll probably be in the hospital for a week or two."

A hospital spokeswoman said the 55-year-old Grand Ole Opry star was in serious condition in the hospital's special care unit.

Robbins, best known for his million-seller "El Paso," underwent heart surgery in January 1970.

Meanwhile, another Grand Ole Opry veteran, Ernest Tubb, entered a hospital Wednesday for treatment of a mild case of pneumonia, his agent said.

Tubb, 66, was in satisfactory condition at Nashville's Baptist Hospital. Dick Shuey, Tubb's agent, said the country music singer had been sick with the flu for several days.

Character actor Sidney Greenstreet's first movie was made in 1941 when he was 61 years old — "The Maltese Falcon."

Reports Drugs Stolen From Apartment

Laetril was one of several drugs reportedly stolen in a residential burglary here yesterday.

Bill Johnson, 1500 27th St., told police Laetril, an empirin compound, codeine, and some prescription drugs were taken from his apartment. The burglary, reported at 3:40 p.m., is being worked by Don Whittenburg.

Also reported yesterday was a criminal mischief at 417 34th St. Veen McMullan told officer Don Cheek that 10 windows had been smashed on two cars, causing damage estimated at $400.

Four minor traffic accidents were also worked.

The first occurred at 4000 College at 2:15 p.m. Involved in it were a 1976 Ford driven by Tracey Williamson of Hermleigh and a 1976 Chevrolet driven by Jolene Smith of Jayton. Working the wreck was Kerry Fritz.

Keith Ward worked a one-car wreck at 32nd St. and Ave. X at 4 p.m. In that mishap, a 1978 Pontiac driven by Betty Courtney struck a fire hydrant.

In the parking lot of the Travel Inn, a 1977 Chevrolet driven by Daniel Scott Oldham of Hamilton was in collision with a parked 1980 Oldsmobile owned by George Pena. That accident occurred about 6 p.m. and was worked by Whittenburg.

Cheek worked the final accident at 7:20 p.m. in the 300 block of 37th St. Reports show a 1975 Ford driven by Marie Dillard was in collision with a 1978 Ford driven by Graham Richard Smith.

Governance Plan Up For NCAA Vote This Week

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Does the headline, "NCAA Set to Vote on Governance Plan" fail to grab your interest?

Okay, try this: "NCAA to Undergo Sex-Change Operation."

In affect, that's what the ruling body of collegiate athletics may be on the verge of doing. At their convention beginning Friday in Miami Beach, every NCAA member from tiny Albion College to the titans of Oklahoma and Notre Dame will vote on a controversial plan to bring women into the governing structure of the venerable, male-dominated association.

In one bold stroke, the NCAA will attempt to place about 215 women on important committee and staff positions. And in another, related proposal, Division I schools will vote on sponsoring women's championships.

Even the familiar NCAA emblem - the pair of hands placing a victory wreath on a young man's reverently bowed head - is being laid to rest. Any day now, the NCAA will unveil an emblem picturing two bowed heads, one male, one female, receiving the wreath.

The most ardent supporters of "governance," as the proposal is referred to by NCAA insiders, predict only a narrow victory. The vote on Division I championships will also be close. And it's possible that governance will pass and Division I women's championships fail, creating the awkward situation of women wielding great influence while no big-time NCAA member conducts women's championships.

If the sweeping governance package is adopted, the change would be revolutionary. Powerful, vocal forces are lined up on both sides.

Some female athletic administrators, notably Donna Lopiano, president-elect of the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women, (AIAW) say the plan does too little for women. Critics question how the ambitious expansion will be funded in these days of economic hardship.

And they challenge, among other things, the wisdom of putting women on such powerful bodies as the Infractions Committee, which sits as judge and jury. The committee reviews evidence presented by the Enforcement Department and punishes big-time football and basketball schools if it finds infractions of the rules.

The governance plan was put together by a 14-member committee established in November, 1979, two months before the NCAA's Division II and III schools voted to sponsor women's championships starting in the 1981-82 academic year. Since the plan was finalized, the NCAA staff and officers, including executive director Walter Byers and secretary-treasurer Jim Frank, have lobbied for its passage.

Mayes Chosen All-Star Player

Sherry Mayes, the only senior member of Snyder High School's class 4A state championship volleyball team, has been selected to play in the Texas High School Girls Coaches Association All-Star Game to be held July 10 in Fort Worth.

Mayes, a 5-8 spiker, joins 11 other girls on the West team, which will compete against girls from East Texas in the annual contest.

Her selection makes the fourth straight year Snyder has placed a girl in the All-Star Game. Eva Rich was named in 1978, Dana Elrod in 1979 and Billie Owens in 1980.

Others named to the All-Star West Team this year include Ruthie McDevitt, San Angelo Central; Mauree Dunn, Arlington; Lesha Beakley, Kerrville Tivy; Gloria Gonzales, Crane; Cheryl Johnson, Carrollton-Turner; Sharon Neugebauer, San Antonio Jefferson; Christy Bizzell, Lamesa; Jackie Butler, Kermit; Shelly Heath, Monahans; Belinda Bass, Seminole; and Linda Magers, Big Spring.

Mayes served at an 87 percent accuracy rate this season for 196 points and from her middle hitter position scored 145 kills at an 84 percent figure.

A three-year letterman for Coach Joyce Elrod's Tigers, Mayes was named to the Class 4A All-State Tournament Team after the past season and is expected to be recruited by Florida State University, Southwest Texas and Abilene Christian, among others. She was all-district and made the all-tournament squad in the Snyder Tournament this year, and was all-district in 1979.

She is also a member of the National Honor Society.

Meet Tonight In ABC Tourney...

WTC-Midland In Reverse Roles

BIG SPRING--Western Texas College's Westerners, only one year after claiming an NJCAA National Championship, find themselves the underdogs going into tonight's 9 o'clock game with No. 1 ranked Midland College here.

The scene is the annual ABC Howard County College Tournament, held at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. Opening the two-day, four-team tournament will be Howard College, taking on Sul Ross junior varsity at 7.

In years past, this annual meet has been played in classic style with each team playing a predetermined opponent each night. This year however, the format will be a regular tournament, with tonight's winners meeting at 9 tomorrow, and losers vying at 7.

One year ago at this same time, WTC was beginning to knock off challenger Midland in the first of four games the two would match up in during the season. Midland was ranked most of the year, but was eliminated from national tournament competition by the Westerners, who went 37-0.

A year later, with a new coach and basically a whole new ballclub, the Westerners find themselves the underdog to virtually the same Midland team.

"There's no doubt that Midland will be the favorite," said Western Texas Coach Larry Dunaway. "(In addition) We're rusty and out of shape from the holidays. A team with the talent that Midland has, even if they are in the same situation, can overpower you."

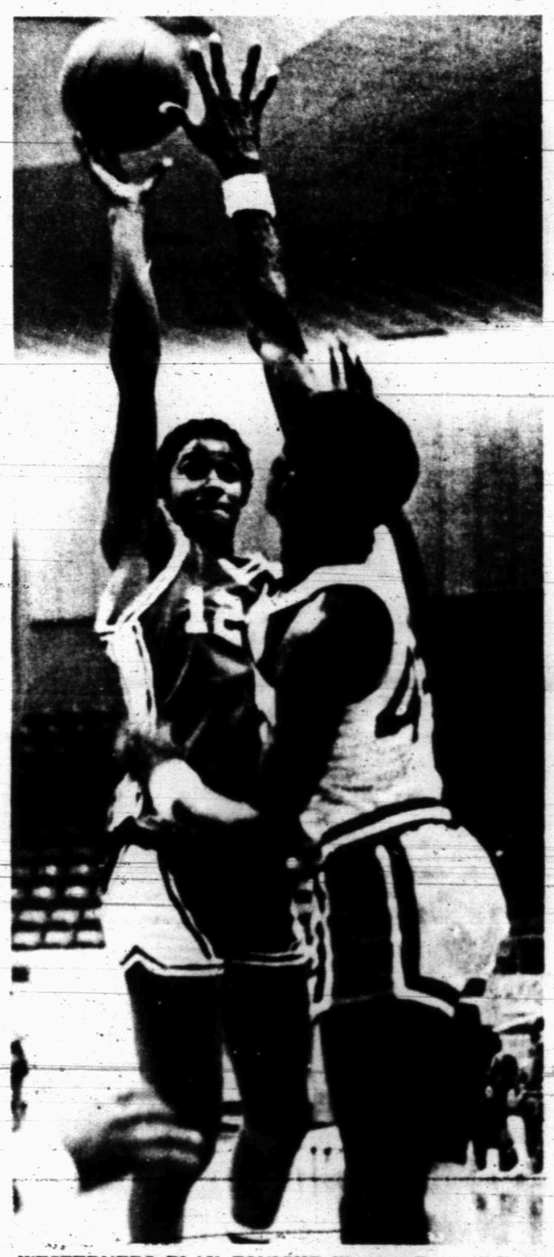
Dunaway, who did not want to play in the tournament because it included two conference opponents, Midland and Howard College, says the Westerners are going to take a positive approach against the Chaps.

"We've got nothing to lose by playing the No. 1 team and we can learn a lot about them which may help us in conference play. That's the way we're looking at it. I don't believe in playing conference teams in tournaments...because it is either going to have a positive or negative effect on your team, and you never know which one. But since we're obligated to play in it we're going to go down there and do the best we can."

Still, it's doubtful Midland will see the same WTC team tonight that they'll play against later in the season.

"We might do a little experimenting that we wouldn't do if it were a conference game," explained Dunaway. "We'll do some different things and see how they react. When you play a team like this and have a film of them, it helps you prepare the next time around."

Western Texas resumes conference play Jan. 15 in Hobbs, N.M. against New Mexico Junior College, then hosts Clarendon, Amarillo and Frank Phillips in order before traveling to Midland to meet the Chaps in loop action.



WESTERNERS PLAY TONIGHT--Western Texas College's Westerners take on No. 1 ranked Midland College in non-conference action at Big Spring tonight in round one of the ABC Tournament. WTC's Dusters are also in tourney play, at Tonkawa, Okla. See related stories, this page. Above, Westerner Darren Lee sacks up two points over the outstretched arm of a Howard College player.

Midland Remains Atop Juco Poll

HUTCHINSON, KAN.--Midland College, as expected, remained the top ranked junior college basketball team in the nation after a three-week long stretch during which most schools across the country took some fashion of holiday break.

The Chaps received 192 points and 13 of a possible 21 first-place votes to lead No. 2 Kankakee Community College of Kankakee, Ill., by 37 points.

Three other Texas teams are included in the poll, released this week. They are No. 6 Tyler Junior College, No. 8 Cooke County College, and No. 11 Frank Phillips College.

Two Texas teams are listed in the NJCAA's latest team offensive figures, Cooke County and Western Texas College. Cooke is the fifth high scoring team in the nation, averaging 101.5 points a game. Western Texas, last year's national champion, is seventh with a 95.3 average. Tops in the nation is Claremore Junior College of Okla., averaging 107 points.

The NJCAA is expected to release its first women's poll of the season within two weeks.

ENMU Picks Up UT Back

PORTALES, N.M. (AP) — Eastern New Mexico University has announced that Brad Beck, a running back for the University of Texas this past season, has enrolled at the NAIA school and will be eligible next season.

Beck, who was highly recruited following his high school career at Perryton, Texas, decided to transfer to ENMU because he was unhappy with the amount of playing time he was getting at Texas, Eastern officials reported Wednesday.

"I left Texas because of playing time," Beck told ENMU officials. "I wanted to play more my senior year, so I left Texas to gain that opportunity."

Beck, who turned down offers from such schools as Oklahoma; Mississippi, Alabama, and Notre Dame to attend Texas, was a two-year letterman for the Longhorns.

In the 1979 Sun Bowlgame against Washington, the 5-foot-10, 210-pound Beck rushed for a game high 98 yards in the Longhorns' 14-7 loss. This season Beck was used primarily on punt returns and carried the ball only 15 times for 48 yards.

Managers Joe McCarthy, Alvin Dark and Yogi Berra all won pennants in both the National and American Leagues.

Dusters Pitted In Meet Tonight

TONKAWA--Joe Cushing's Western Texas College Dusters are back in action tonight after a three-week break, taking on Garland Community College of Hot Springs, Ark. at 6:30 in the Northern Oklahoma Tournament here.

Other games slated today included Amarillo versus Cloud County, Kan., at 2, Moberly, Mo., against Dodge City, Kan., at 4 and Northern Oklahoma versus Wayland junior varsity at 8:30.

Winner of the Western Texas-Garland game will play a Moberly-Dodge City victor at 5 p.m. Friday. Losers will vie at 1 Friday.

The championship game is slated for 8:30 p.m. Saturday.

Cushing's Dusters return to Snyder for a week's rest before beginning a five-game home stand which includes conference members Clarendon, Amarillo, Frank Phillips, South Plains and Howard County.

Snyder Cagers Clash With Panthers Friday

FORT STOCKTON--Snyder and Fort Stockton boys will do their part here Friday to clear up the District 2-AAAA basketball standings, at least temporarily.

Meanwhile, Snyder's girls will be crossing their fingers for some outside help as the Fort Stockton bus pulls up to SHS Gym tomorrow.

Both varsity games - the boys in Fort Stockton, the girls in Snyder - are preceded by 6:15 p.m. junior varsity contests. Tickets at either site are $2 for adults and $1 for students.

The Tigers and Panthers are two of five district teams with only one loss each in first-round boys play. Lamesa, Odessa Ector, Fort Stockton and Snyder are all 2-1, while Andrews is 1-1. Sweetwater leads the race with a 3-0 record; Monahans and Pecos are 0-2 each and San Angelo Lake View is 0-3.

Other games around the conference Friday are not expected to help clear the standings unless upsets occur, as Ector is at Lake View, Monahans is at Sweetwater and Andrews is at Pecos.

Neither the Panthers or the Tigers have had outstanding seasons, but both are doing well since the holiday break. Fort Stockton is 7-10 after knocking off Monahans 53-51 Tuesday, while Snyder is 6-12. The Tigers, who have won all three of their ballgames since returning from the Christmas holidays, defeated Lamesa on Tuesday, 48-47.

The situation is far less complex in girls play, but no doubt Snyder Coach Ken Housden wishes it weren't. Monahans' girls rule the roost with a perfect 6-0 record, while Snyder is next in line at 5-1.

To get a shot at the round championship, or a part of it, Snyder has to snuff out the Lady Panthers at home Friday and defeat rival Sweetwater on the road next Tuesday...AND...hope that Monahans gets knocked off at home either Friday against Sweetwater, or Tuesday against Odessa Ector.

Both Snyder wishes are possible. The Felines are on a streak of five straight wins, while Sweetwater and Ector can be salty opponents for any team when they are playing well.
