STINSON DIES OF INJURIES

"Dean of Them All," Suffers First Accident

CHICAGO, Jan. 26. (UP)—Edward A. Stinson, 38, veteran pilot and an airplane manufacturer, died early today of injuries suffered when his plane crashed last night as he attempted to land on a golf course. Three passengers were injured.

The crash was Stinson's first serious accident in more than 16,000 hours of flying.

Stinson's condition was reported by doctors at midnight to be hopeless. He suffered a crushed chest and internal injuries.

Clark Field, of Kalamazoo, Mich., John Tompkins, of East Chicago, Ind., and Frederick Gillies, of Chicago, other occupants of the plane, were less seriously injured.

The plane, a huge Stinson-Detroiter brought here late Monday from the Stinson plant at Wayne, Mich., developed motor trouble while over Lake Michigan a short distance off shore and struck a flag pole, shearing off the right wing when Stinson endeavored to maneuver it to a safe landing on Jackson Park golf course.

For the 20 years he has been in aviation, he has flown nearly 1,500,000 miles, the equivalent of 60 times around the world. He has held numerous endurance records.

Yet in all this flying, the "ace" never used a parachute or suffered injury until last night's crash.

During the world war, he was in charge of student flying at Kelly field, San Antonio.

UNVEILING WAITS WHILE FUNDS FOR MEMORIAL SLOW

Only $258 is needed to complete the fund, Scarborough said.

Date of the unveiling will be announced in papers over the state as soon as the fund is completed.

Tomb That Rivals King Tut's

A DECORATED SKULL, believed by archaeologists to have been that of a warrior of an opposing tribe killed in battle by one of the six chieftains whose tomb was opened. The skull was decorated with carved sea shells plugged in the eye sockets, a piece of flint in the nose cavity, and dispatches say it was also decorated with turquoise.

WITHIN THE TOMB—The six chieftains, believed to have been buried there after a battle in the 15th century, were found in sitting postures on stones, some of which are visible here. The bodies and almost all the articles buried with the chieftains had been removed when this picture was taken, although one earthenware vessel is seen in the foreground.

WELL BALANCED PROGRAM TO BE PLANNED HERE

First meeting of the program committee of the two-day community short course was held Tuesday morning in the office of the Midland chamber of commerce, and a tentative program was mapped out. Those on the committee are P. J. Mims, Mrs. Roy Parks, J. C. Miles, W. W. Lackey, Miss Genavieve Derbyberry, Frank Elkin and O. L. Walton.

The program will not be announced in detail until finally completed, but numbers proposed include the Midland high school band, community singing, motion pictures which include comedies, lectures by nationally known experts, the high school quartet and various school choruses, including singing by negro school children, solos, musicians from church orchestras and the Lions club orchestra, tap dancers, and other special numbers.

Every program is arranged to be snappy, peppy and educational. Similar programs were so popular in Santa Anna, town less than half the size of Midland that 8,000 people attended the six programs; over 7,000 attended at Clinton, Ia. Over 97,000 people in the South last year attended similar community meetings.

Potash Men Visit Ector Co. Fields

ODESSA, Jan. 26.—Representatives of an eastern engineering company have been in Odessa the past week visiting the potash fields 11 miles south of Odessa. They are here to secure necessary information which will enable them to place their bid with the Texas Potash corporation for the sinking of a 2100-foot shaft to the potash deposits. The potash people contemplate spending some $200,000 on the sinking of this shaft. Operations are expected to start within the next several months. The Odessa field is one of the richest deposits in the world, according to scientists.

Midland Man Once Excavated Mounds Near Discoveries

Seeing pictures of the finding of fabulous relics from the tomb of six ancient Mixtecan chieftains at Monte Alban near Oaxaca, Mexico, 300 miles southeast of Mexico City, reminds B. C. Girdley of Midland that he dug into burial mounds in the vicinity of the tomb a few years ago without finding more than jade, amulets of carved work and copper and symbols found out in the rock.

In the vicinity of the place where Girdley and peons of the hacienda he was in charge of toiled, one of the most important discoveries ever made on this continent was unearthed, a tomb that scientists believe rivals the richness of that of King Tut.

The six chieftains found in the burial place are believed to have been killed in the 15th century.

Fabulous tales of the Indians of Oaxaca led Girdley and a group of other interested persons to undertake the former excavation.

But they did not make the lucky strike.

The Weekley et al No. 1 Cowden, Ector county wildcat, was preparing this week to run and cement 3 1/4 inch casing at 3,200 feet. This means that probably another week will lapse before there are new developments.

Ten inch casing was landed at 1,462 feet and a 10-inch hole was straightened from 2,325 feet to the top of the fishing tools at 3,080 feet. This was before No. 1 Cowden shut down, shortly before Christmas, to move in a light rotary supplementing the cable tools.

No. 1 Cowden is 1,980 feet from the north and west lines of section 33, block 43, township 2 south, T&P survey, about eight miles north-east of the Penn pool and about 15 miles south of Stanolind's (formerly Southern Crude's) two producers on the Dick Cowden ranch.

Train Victim Was to Marry Soon, Say Letters Found in Pocket After Crash

While plans were being made this afternoon for the burial of Nobel Stewart, 20, taxi driver who lost his life early Monday morning when he drove his car into the path of a fast freight train, a new angle in the case arose.

Letters found on the boy's body showed he was engaged to marry Miss Marie Hamilton, 19, daughter of a Midland county farmer.

One of the letters was from the girl, the other was to her and had not been mailed.

Endearments showed they were very much in love.

The letters discuss the difficulty of housekeeping unless a modest apartment is taken, but each professes readiness to attempt it.

In the Stewart home $31 in $1 bills was found under a rug and it is said by friends of the boy that Miss Hamlin was holding some of his savings for him.

Stewart was described by friends as quiet, sober and determined to "show folks that I can make a name here." He frequently said he wanted to "get ahead," and to that end was saving his money as fast as possible.

Funeral services were to be conducted this afternoon at 3 at the Ellis mortuary. The Rev. O. W. Roberts was to have held the ceremony. Burial will be held at Fairview.

Out-of-town relatives and friends here for the funeral include Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Stewart, grandparents, two uncles and an aunt of Hot Springs, Ark., C. J. Stewart, father, of Tucson; L. D. Stewart, uncle, of Pecos; Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Baxter, Mrs. R. Kenyon and Mrs. W. H. Lacey of Pecos.

FEBRUARY 15 AND 16 DATES SET

Midland Committee Engineers the Program

Acceptance of the International Harvester company's advance representative to Midland's invitation that the company stage its two-day short course in agriculture, horticulture and home economics, was made at a well-attended meeting held Monday afternoon in the chamber of commerce office.

Date for the important course was set for Monday and Tuesday, Feb. 15 and 16.

The agricultural extension department of the International Harvester company will furnish without charge the speakers for this two-day series of meetings which will be purely educational and open to everyone in this community and in adjoining towns.

F. J. Wolfe of the harvester company was chief spokesman of the meeting. He outlined a comprehensive plan for putting on the short course, helped to organize local committees and outlined their duties, distributed a good supply of publicity material and made all preliminary arrangements.

He explained that only six short courses are being planned for West Texas at this time, and that five of the six towns had been picked.

"Midland's request that the course be held here was so well arranged and forceful that I drove many miles out of my way to investigate," he said. He explained that the spirit of Midland spokesmen at the meeting and Midland's assurance that crowds would be solicited from Martin, Ector, Andrews and other proximate counties caused him to believe that the course would do a vast deal of good if held here.

Wolfe emphasized thoroughly that all talks given by the speakers at the short course would be strictly of an educational nature, quite free from sales or advertising. Communities which have had these meetings are unanimous in their praise and appreciation, and strong in their appeal for a return short course this year.

Only a very limited number of communities in Texas are favored with this short course this year.

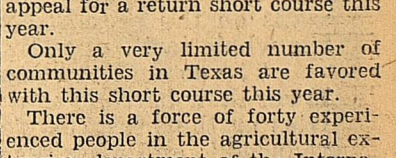

There is a force of forty experienced people in the agricultural extension department of the International Harvester company who will give all their time and efforts to instructive and helpful work among a large number of people as they can reach in an effort to increase the happiness and prosperity on the farm, improve the general health of the people, make the work of the housewife easier, and help boys and girls to worthwhile accomplishments. This extension work of the harvester company has been carried on for the past 13 or 14 years with increasing success and enthusiasm.

Further details will be announced from time to time. A crew of capable speakers and demonstrators will conduct these meetings. There will be three sessions daily—morning, afternoon and evening. The speakers use moving pictures, lantern slides, and large charts to illustrate their talks. Everything will be free. There will be much of interest to everybody—men, women, boys and girls from town and the farm. All are asked to make a note of the date, plan to attend and tell everyone.

Following are the committees selected to help with this two-day (See SHORT COURSE page 6)

THAT MEXICAN TOMB

Necklaces and breast plates of solid gold, pearls as big as doves' eggs, jade ornaments that are beyond price, carvings of alabaster and amethyst, vases of gold and onyx—the treasures of the ancient tomb recently opened on Monte Alban, in old Mexico, seem to be the sort of thing archaeologists dream about but seldom see.

Undoubtedly the discovery will be of great importance for the light it will shed on civilization in Mexico before the Spanish conquest. Even better, however, is the fact that its dazzling richness will lead many Americans to a new interest in that old civilization.

One of the most romantic and colorful tales in all history is the tale of ancient Mexican civilization. Yet most of us never bother to find out about it. We know that Montezuma ruled the Aztecs when Cortez came, and that the Spaniards took many a shipload of gold out of his realm—but that's about all. The details of the bizarre civilization that the Spaniards found and destroyed are a closed book to us. And the book is well worth reading.

If ever men stumbled into an enchanted land, those conquering Spaniards did. Small wonder that Bernal Diaz, their historian, wrote wildly and left all power of criticism behind him! Enlightened and superstitious, rich and half-naked, polished and crude, refined and cruel—the Mexican civilization was a bundle of riddles, a mass of contradictions that are not even yet entirely unraveled.

Where did they come from, those ancient Indian civilizations? Where did they learn the arts and sciences that make their cities dazzle their conquerors? Where did they get that startling legend of a white god who came out of the Atlantic, taught them for a time and then sailed away into the east? Whence came their ornaments of jade—found nowhere else in the new world? Where did they get that old-world emblem, the swastika? Why did they have a cross in so many of their sacred carvings?

There are dozens of similar questions to be answered. The field is almost incredibly interesting. The man who is induced, by this new tale of a rich tomb, to do a little reading about ancient Mexico will find himself richly repaid.

BEAUTY CONTESTS

The father of the young French girl who has just been elected "Miss France" for 1932, has burst out with angry letters to the newspapers protesting against all beauty contests as degrading and insulting.

Having, apparently, somewhat old-fashioned ideas about what is good for girls and what is not, he asserts that "to take young girls around France and to other European capitals with pompous royal comedy, exposing them to the curiosity of blasé revellers is an insult to honesty"; and there are probably plenty of American parents who will agree with him.

In theory, a contest to select the nation's loveliest girl is a charming thing. In actual fact, most of the charm is rubbed off long before the contest is over. This Frenchman is not alone in his indignation.

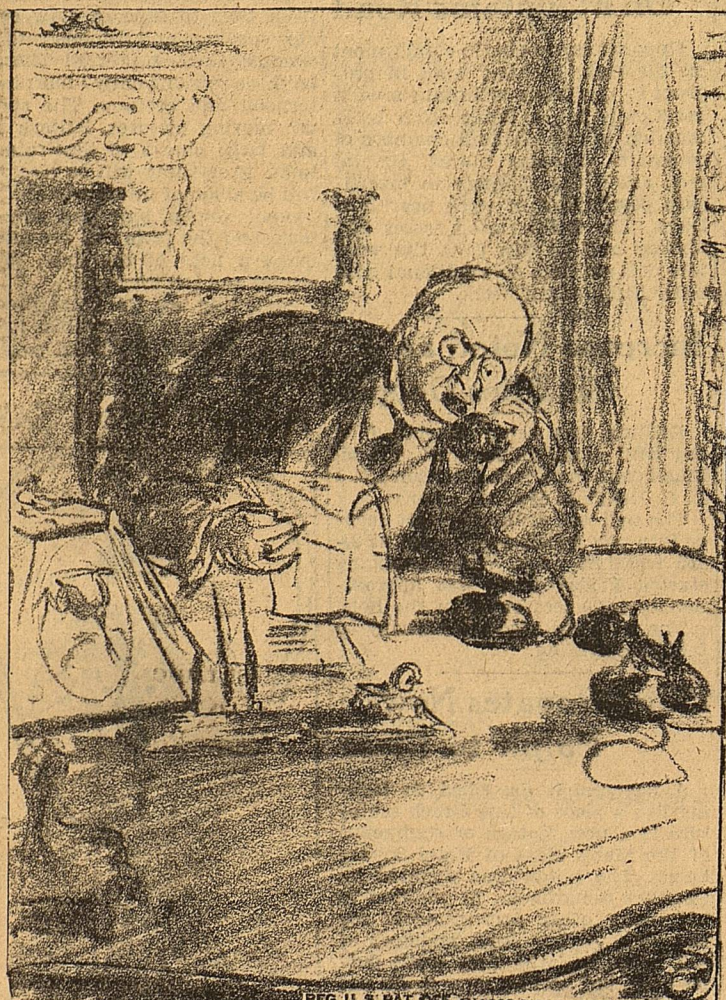

DO TARIFFS PAY?

Comments made recently by the League of Nations' economic committee on the influence of national tariff walls on the present economic crisis may help to bring the whole tariff question up for renewed study.

The committee remarks that "creditor countries must lower their barriers against imports from the debtor countries or the prospects for recovering their debts will be reduced"; and after pointing out that nation after nation has increased its tariff rates in an attempt to gain better economic conditions, it adds that "the general result . . . is almost inevitably to prolong and seriously to aggravate the crisis."

All of this constitutes a direct challenge to the high-protection school, and it is not the sort of thing that can be answered by stock catch-phrases. If it leads us to a thoroughgoing and dispassionate survey of the merits and demerits of our tariff rates it will be a very good thing.

Floods Continue to Occur in the Mississippi Valley Simply Because the $325,000,000 Was Only to Control the River Itself.

WASHINGTON.—People get to asking why, since Congress authorized $325,000,000 for flood control nearly four years ago, floods still occur in the Mississippi valley.

The answer is that there have been no Mississippi river floods this year and probably won't be any, that recent floods have occurred on tributaries at points considerably removed from the Mississippi and that the big 10-year federal flood control program undertakes to control only the Mississippi itself. Also, as Calvin Coolidge once said, the government can't insure citizens against storms, floods and other natural catastrophes.

It appears now that there will be no Mississippi river flood this spring. The river hasn't even reached the bottom of its levees. You never can tell, though, until the middle of February. If the river is still low at that time it won't swell high enough subsequently to do any damage. It hasn't overflowed the banks for a year and is now 20 or 30 feet below the point it reaches when it gets really bad, according to the army engineers, who handle the flood control project.

The project undertakes to protect the alluvial valley from Mississippi flood waters, but the only thing the flood control act provided for tributary streams was that federal money might be spent on them in cases of emergency for rescue work, maintenance or repair. The army engineers have rushed in with sandbags and other aid during the recent overflow of the Tullahoma river in Mississippi state.

The tributaries thus covered stretch from the Appalachian mountains to the Rockies, and none of them, according to information here, has a levee system adequate for protection of its entire valley in case of peak floods. In two months following Nov. 17, more than 21 inches of rain fell in the Tallahatchie-Yazoo basin and the waters found weak levees to break through at some spots and no levees at all at others. Some communities on tributaries haven't levees because they aren't worth the expense and flood waters, coming before the crop season, sometimes do more good than harm except for general inconvenience.

Mississippi river flood control works have been greatly strengthened since the disastrous 1927 floods with their huge life and property loss. Even in 1929 the greatest volume of water that ever went down the stream—except in 1927—passed along without making a single levee break. And two more years of levee building and re-enforcement have since passed. When the project is completed the army engineers are sure the control system will be able to take care of even such a water rush as that of 1927. The known weak spots in the levee line already have been plugged and backstopped.

About $127,000,000 of the authorized expenditure has been appropriated, including $35,000,000 for this fiscal year. Most of the money goes for strengthening and enlarging levees, but there is also the nearly completed floodways above New Orleans and at New Madrid, and a large amount of revetment and navigation work in the project. It is conceded that all flood waters can't always be kept in the river channel, and certain places have been left where flood waters are expected to escape as a matter of course. Attempts have been made to make the government buy about 500,000 acres of the land theoretically subject to such overflow.

In four years about 300 miles of the 1000 miles of Mississippi levees have been fixed. The levees run from 10 to 30 feet high. The number of men employed on the project has varied from 4500 to nearly 12,000. About 210,000,000 cubic yards of earth have been placed in the levees.

See Yourself as Others
See You--by Handwriting

Handwriting . . . penmanship, as it was called when it was the second of the three R's . . . may be going out of fashion because of the stenographer and her typewriter, but it still has one important function. It is growing in importance as a means of reading character. Graphology is being taken more seriously in the business and social life than ever before.

If you go to consult a graphologist, more likely than not you will find him a serious minded, dignified gentleman of broad education who might grace any of the professions.

At least, that description exactly fits Lorne O. Milne, a leading graphologist, whose home and offices are in Chicago.

And today The Reporter-Telegram takes pleasure in announcing that the services of Milne have been secured for its readers. In this issue of the paper you will find a coupon that will entitle you to a 300-word personal analysis of your handwriting by Milne, for only the cost of handling, 10 cents, and a stamped, self-addressed envelope for his reply. Your own analysis will be sent you, enclosed in a neat booklet.

Never before has it been possible to secure such a service as this for less than $5, the usual price a reputable graphologist charges for a handwriting analysis. But through a fortunate arrangement between Milne and The Reporter-Telegram, we are able to make this heretofore unheard-of offer.

"Graphology is a genuine science," Milne will tell you. "If you have any doubt about it, look in the dictionary."

Upon looking in a copy of the Standard dictionary, here's what we find: "Graphology is the science of estimating character or of determining personality by studying the handwriting."

Milne talked quite a bit about his work the other day. "That one's character shows in his handwriting is a belief almost as old as handwriting itself and common to people all over the world," he said. "Old Nero was not so slow back in 58 B. C. or thereabouts, for he had discovered graphology and to a friend one day said of a third person: 'That fellow is treacherous; I know it by his handwriting.'"

"The first book to be written on the subject, however, did not make its appearance until the year 1632. It was written by an Italian, one Camilli Buldo, and it would not be of much help to a graphologist today. In 1830 the Abbe Flandrin contributed something more on the subject, and from that time on it has been slowly but surely developed from an amusing pastime to one of the recognized sciences, founded on classified knowledge."

Just here Milne became emphatic. "You know the vogue all forms of personality study are having," he said. "Well, graphology is not only more accurate but goes further than psychology, psychoanalysis or any of the new systems of character study. It goes on from the point where all of them leave off."

"It isn't like fortune tellings then?" he was asked. "It is nothing like astrology, the ouija board, phrenology or any of the mystical cults," he replied. "It is founded on the sound theory that your handwriting is a picture of your mind, reflecting your character traits and tendencies as accurately as a mirror reflects your features."

"In Europe graphology now forms part of the curriculum of the leading universities and is put to practical use in many ways. Business men, doctors and teachers all find it invaluable to them in their several professions. In England, Germany and Holland it is in almost general use."

"How did you happen to take up graphology?" Milne was asked. "Purely as a hobby," he replied. "I had three sisters, each of a distinct type of character and entirely different from each other. As a schoolboy I noticed that certain characteristics of handwriting seemed to indicate corresponding traits of character. From the accidental beginning of the study I have gone on, devoting a lifetime to the science."

Milne was born in Canada of Scotch ancestry. Whether the fact that the Scots like other members of the Gaelic race are psychic had anything to do with Milne's bent for character study, he doesn't know. When he was 9 years old his parents moved to a farm in South Dakota, and there he grew up like the son of any pioneer family of the west, and going to a district school. After being admitted to the bar, he practiced his profession for many years, meanwhile pursuing his hobby of graphology as a side issue. Finally the hobby became his profession.

Just here there should be pointed out the fact that a graphologist and a handwriting expert are two entirely different functionaries. The handwriting expert is the man who is called into court to determine forgeries and to pass on questioned documents. The graphologist, on the other hand, does for society what the psycho-analyst sets out to do. The handwriting expert may know nothing of graphology, and the graphologist might be an entire failure as a handwriting expert.

Milne, as a graphologist, not long ago read the character of G. W. Schwartz, Chicago handwriting expert, from his handwriting. Schwartz told of the incident himself, explaining that he disguised his handwriting in several different ways, as only a handwriting expert could, but that he couldn't fool Milne. "He made the same analysis from each of the samples sent in under various names," he said, "and it proved to me that graphology, to which I had never paid the slightest attention, really is a science in itself."

Here are some of the interesting things Milne has to say about graphology:

A person's handwriting is really a

Dear Sir: As to "These Days": Well, what's the use to worry? There's no particular need to hurry. The world was not made in one day. God did not make it that way. So take your time and make sure. Some job or position to secure. A winner you know never quits. A fanner you know seldom hits. Then come on get the habit. Get something if you have to grab it. Where there is a will there is a way. That's the way to realize our pay. Be ye steadfast, ever trying. That's the way to keep from crying. Do not demand unreasonable pay. We can't do it, that's yesterday. I know a man and his job he quit. Because the pay was such a little bit. Question did he better himself? Now earning nothing to go on his shelf? Did you hear? Life is what we make it. ## Work of County Nurse for Year Is Reported

Editor's Note: The first annual report of the public health nurse, Miss Martha Bredeemer, has been prepared for publication by Miss Kathleen Eiland as it was delivered by the nurse at the recent annual meeting of the Midland county health board. This is the second installment. Others follow.

By MARTHA BREDEMEIER

Prenatal and post-natal work should be three times what it is, for the ideal start with an infant is to prevent defects. That there is such a thing as perfection of defects in young children is illustrated by an experience in Fargo, North Dakota. When the public health nursing service there first examined children of school age six years ago, it was almost impossible to find a perfect set of teeth among them.

When a perfect set was found, nurses, teachers and others were called in to see what it looked like. Now many perfect sets of teeth are found among the Fargo children.

You may wonder at the 54 visits marked "not home" in the chart below. Of course a nurse with her little bag may look quite a bit like a peddler. She sometimes wonders if she is mistaken for one in those homes where no one comes to the door in answer to her knock.

Nursing care visits are those where actual work is done, such as taking temperatures or giving instructive bedside care. General care means advice to individuals not listed under any other group.

Social service or welfare refers in some cases to giving of clothes or groceries but mostly to arrangements to secure medical, dental or other forms of relief.

There is a list of forty children the county who will not likely be very ambitious adults unless the community gives them needed medical relief.

Public health nursing is not social service work. The past year there has been too much social service work done by the county nurse in a community the size of Midland. Under the circumstances this has been unavoidable for you can't educate hungry men with sick children.

The year's total of 1929 home visits made by the county nurse mean an average of 6 visits every working day. The home visit record follows:

Prenatal and postnatal, 105; infant and preschool, 297; school, 607; not home, 54; nursing care, 84; general care, 362; social service, 230; total, 1720.

Wider Range

For Air Liners

LONDON. (UP).—Britain's latest air liners claim to have the greatest range of speeds and the greatest margins of safety of any in regular service.

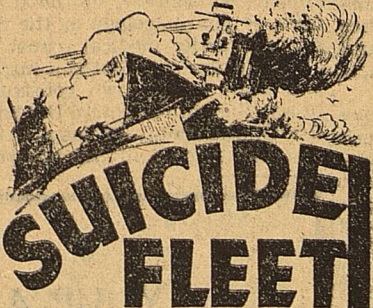

Recent tests with Horatius, one of a fleet of eight new giant, four-engined biplanes built for the Imperial Airways, show that with a weight of 13 tons the machine attains a speed of 138 miles an hour in level flight at an altitude of 4,600 feet. On the other hand, Horatius continued to fly level at 48 miles an hour.

This great range of speeds gives a greater factor of safety than is possible with limited flying and landing speeds. In an emergency landing in a confined place, or a landing in fog, are much more easily and safely accomplished with a low landing speed than with one of about 60 miles an hour. High top speeds make for maintenance of time tables through the additional power available to counter-act headwinds or storms.

The new fleet of Handley-Page biplanes of the Horatius type are being used on the Imperial Airways European and Indian routes, and an additional margin of safety is provided by the fitting of the well-known wing slots on each of the machines.

THIRTY-EIGHT MEN OUT FOR TRACK; DISTRICT PROSPECTS GOOD

GREAT RESPONSE CAUSES COACHING STAFF TO FOREGO CALLING SPRING GRID PRACTICE UNTIL MUCH LATER

Thirty-eight men are out for track at the high school. Workouts started last Tuesday. The number of prospects is increasing daily. The thirty-eight are: Charles Allen, Conrad Bonner, Burton Bradshaw, Lloyd Burris, Tom Collins, A. B. Cooke, Ted Dozier, Levi Driver, E. B. Evans, E. B. Estes, Murray Fasken, Orville Gee, Barney Graf, G. B. Hallman, Bill Hogsett, Robert Howe, John Pud Inman, Maurice King, Raymond Levellen, Naron Lee, F. H. Lanham, Frank Midkiff, Hunter Midkiff, Vann Mitchell, J. D. Montgomery, Leland Murphy, Johnnie Nobles, Osborn, Ham Pinnell, R. Parrott, Allen Sherrod, Johnnie Sherrod, Dub Stanley, Spec Voliva, Ed Watts, James Walton and James Walker.

Workouts so far have consisted of limbering up, stretching, setting starting blocks and taking starts, learning the form of clearing the low hurdles, passing the baton for relays, and enough running to get in shape.

With another week of general training, the coaches plan to hold the stiffest competition that the boys can stand in all events and select from 5 to 10 of the best in each event for individual coaching and intensive training. The prospects for a good track team are very bright. There are perhaps 15 boys out who can win points in the district meet if they train religiously.

One of the most pleasing things about the track team at present is the fact that a number of boys who are excellent football prospects but who have never been out for athletics before, are showing up well in track. If the same group comes out for football next fall, the coaches will have little trouble in developing two fast backfields—something that was sadly lacking on the Bulldog squad this past season.

Coaches Barry, Henderson and Lingo are all working with track for the time being. It was originally the plan for one or more of the coaches to take up winter football shortly after the track was started but Coach Barry says that since they are reaching nearly all the football material with track that there may be no football until the middle of April.

A schedule is being arranged whereby every boy on the track squad will compete with every other boy in each event and the squad members will be ranked in every event.

At present it looks as if the ten fastest men out for track are: Frank Midkiff, Lloyd Burris, G. B. Hall-

TWO GAMES ARE SCHEDULED FOR THIS EVENING

Two basketball games will be played in the men's industrial league this evening, beginning at 7:30.

Clinic plays Prairie in the first, Southern Ice and United Dry Goods meeting in the second.

The girls' team of the women's league practices this afternoon beginning at 5:30.

Cosden Oil company of Big Spring defeated Clinic's team last night, 27-17. The game was fast from the start, but the advantage Clinic held in being better acquainted with the low ceiling of the local gym could not counterbalance the superior teamwork and shooting ability of the visitors.

SPORTS REPORTS

Col. Joe O'Gorman again: "The trading of Hack Wilson to Brooklyn would give the world an outfield consisting of Herman, Wilson and O'Doul. Maybe when Max Carey said he was going to teach the Brooklyn to be a thinking ball club he didn't know just what kind of a job he had."

"A New York scribe wrote that Jack Sharkey was notified of Schmeling's desire to fight him. He was playing a saxophone. He should have been playing a bull fiddle and a bass drum, too."

"Bat Battalino was suspended by the New York commission for weighing too much. Ah! Fame at last!"

"Admiral Upham says football efficiency will have nothing to do with the selection of future candidates for Annapolis. But you probably will see young men chosen for the academy in spite of their gridiron ability."

"Babe Ruth says he will sign his contract in Florida early in February. He would like to get the colonel as far away from home as possible."

Here You Are, Stanley
The knockout of Stanley Poreda suffered at the hands of Salvatore Ruggieri put something of a crimp in Stanley's immediate aspirations, but it relieved this observer of a great load of worry. The worry was generated the first time we ever saw Poreda fight. Poreda has a terrific right uppercut that is, or used to be, very, very wild. Our constant dread that Mr. Poreda eventually would knock himself out has now been alleviated.

Ah! Enlightenment!
It is now revealed that Jack Sharkey promised his managers, in his last bout with Max Schmeling, that he would not "cut loose with everything he had" before the sixth round. Aside from the consternation this disclosure arouses upon this most appropriate occasion, it gives us cause to wonder, too, how many kinds of foul blows Mr. Sharkey knows how to administer when he really decides to cut loose?

The Solid Men
The reinstatement of Max Schmeling by the New York Boxing commission put the commission in an even stranger light than that in which it is accustomed to basking. The commission, you may remember, declared Sharkey champion when Schmeling kept putting off the commission's demand for a return bout. But the reinstatement of the German means that he becomes champion again in the eyes of the commission. It's probably a sleight-of-hand job.

Did You Know That . . .
If the A's care to go in for base stealing in a big way, they don't have to go far to find out how it's done. . . Eddie Collins, now coach of the club, once stole six bases in a game with Detroit. . . and that is still an American league record. . . Sidney Well, president of the Reds, requests any of his athletes dissatisfied with salary offers, to call upon him in person, rather than try to iron it out in the mails. . . The tip is being passed along on a 200 to 1 shot to win the Derby. . . the name is "I Pass" . . . never has raced. . . and the word comes along from Lexington that he has been timed at 2:04 in a mile and a quarter, running uphill. . . I Pass is a son of Thunderer, out of Two No Trumps . . . and didn't race as a two-year-old because he was growing too fast.

Brothers of Huey P. Long Say He Looks In Mirror and Sees Great World Ruler

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 25 (NEA). Undisputed king of Louisiana politics, Huey Long has gone to Washington to take his seat in the United States senate secure in the knowledge that the people of his state believe firmly in his policies as governor—even if some of them have been remarkable policies, to say the least.

What Long will do in the senate remains a mystery. But you can depend on it that he will do something. His political career never has been marked with lack of action.

The recent gubernatorial election in Louisiana is typical of the man. Not satisfied with mere endorsement of a candidate for governor, O. K. Allen, Governor Long stamped the state, addressing as many as seven and eight gatherings a day.

And when the ballots were counted, Long's man was far ahead of his four opponents and the Long ticket had been swept into office by one of the biggest majorities in Louisiana's history.

The state had vindicated again the actions of a man alternately extolled by his admirers as a genius and denounced by his opponents as a political mountebank.

There was no middle ground in the recent Louisiana election. You were either for Huey Long or against him. Candidates were largely forgotten. The issue was Huey Long, pure and simple, and the way Long adherents crowded to the polls was a revelation to friend and foe alike.

The bitter controversies of the campaign were marked even by a split between Long and his two brothers. They are Julius Long and Earl K. Long, who stood by him when he was threatened with impeachment and who, with Huey, had been dubbed "The Three Musketeers of Louisiana."

Now, instead of the "Three Musketeers" they are known as the "Three Fighting Brothers."

Julius Long, eldest of the three and an attorney, managed the campaign of one of the opponents of Governor Long's candidate. Julius spoke frequently of his brother's political career and asked the voters of the state to send "my brother back to his family."

"Huey needs disciplining," Julius often said. "He thinks he has become a king. He has joined bad political company. Our family wishes to keep him out of trouble by defeating him. He is not temperamentally fit for great power. He is smart, but he has become puffed up with power. He stands before the mirror and thinks he sees the ruler of the world."

Huey Long talks about what he has done. When I was district attorney of Winn Parish I taught him all the law he knew and then sent him to the University of Oklahoma and to Tulane university. His talk about finishing a law course in a few months is bosh. I drilled law into him for years. Huey has done little to reflect credit on the family. All his sisters, his father and his brothers are against him in this campaign."

Earl Long, youngest of the three brothers, was equally vehement in his denunciation of Huey during the campaign. Earl was a candidate for lieutenant governor in opposition to Huey's candidate for that office. "What right has this tin-pot Napoleon, Huey Long, to tell me that I can't run for lieutenant governor of this state?" Earl asked. "I went broke keeping him out of trouble when the legislature was full of men who wanted to impeach him and he was crying like a baby."

Huey Long has been quiet, for the most part, in regard to his two brothers.

"Don't pay any attention to these brothers or relatives of mine," he said in one campaign speech. "They don't cut any ice with me. He (Earl) is running on his family history. He doesn't say nice things about me, but I don't care. He says I'm the black sheep of nine children in the family, but you all knew that before I was elected governor. Don't pay any attention to these brothers or relatives of mine. I don't care what they say."

And, perhaps, Huey didn't care so much after his ticket had been swept into office.

Huey has never believed in doing things half way. Elected to the senate more than a year ago, Long refused to resign as governor and go to Washington at that time, preferring to remain in Louisiana to give his personal attention to the election that would name his successor. And now he has gone, his own man in the gubernatorial chair.

T & P Northern Case To Be Argued Soon

BIG SPRING.—According to reports reaching Big Spring, oral arguments will be heard on the application of the Texas and Pacific Northern Railway company on February 17 for permission to construct 333 miles of railroad from Big Spring to Vega. The interstate commerce commission hearing is to determine if the recommendation of its examiner is to be accepted or whether all or only a part of the Texas and Pacific Northern will be constructed.

The evidence is based on testimony at the Texas hearing in Lubbock when many West Texas citizens presented testimony endorsing the plans for the 333 miles. Under the examiners recommendation the line would be required to confine construction at first to 126 miles consisting of 80 miles from Big Spring to a point near Pride and then a branch line from Pride to Lubbock consisting of 46 miles. The line would penetrate a fertile agricultural section of West Texas. Tom Garrard will be one attorney to argue the case.

Man-Made Heart Used by Animal

SAN FRANCISCO. (UP).—Machine age efficiency has scored another triumph.

A man-made, mechanical heart has been successfully substituted for a living animal's own heart.

The revelation was made during a demonstration directed by Dr. Maurice L. Tainter, of the department of pharmacology of the Stanford university medical school here. Dr. Tainter substituted a mechanical heart of his own construction in a living animal before the Society for Experimental Biology, keeping the animal used in the experiment alive "for hours."

In describing the use of the mechanical heart, Dr. P. J. Hanzlik, head of the pharmacology department, said:

"After the substitution of the mechanical heart for the animal's heart, the blood continued to pulse through the body.

"The blood pressure remained normal. By showing responses to narcotics, it enabled us to study their effects. The animal lived for hours."

The device has been used in studying the reaction of blood in living animals by Dr. Floyd De Eds, of the United States department of agriculture, who has been experimenting at the Stanford pharmacology department.

Conoco Germ Processed Oil Saves Motor

When Walter H. Freed reached Pueblo, Colorado, after a 41-mile drive from Colorado Springs, his car was so hot it had to be put into gear before it would stop!

He had plenty of Conoco Germ Processed Oil in the car. No steam was coming from the radiator, so he did not suspect the cooling system.

But a garage man found not a drop of water in the radiator! The 41 miles had been driven without water in the radiator—only the oil to keep the motor from burning up.

Conoco Germ Processed Oil withstood this ordeal! Inspection of the motor revealed no damage done.

Convincing evidence of Germ Processed Oil's stability, of its sure protection under the most trying conditions! Proof that Conoco Germ Processed Oil offers you the safest lubrication for your car.

The oil that protects motors through such ordeals will lubricate your car better in every-day driving. For peace of mind, for economy and long motor life, change now to Conoco Germ Processed Oil at the sign of the Conoco Red Triangle.

We neither encourage "dry radiator" experiments nor guarantee success under all conditions. But unsolicited letters from motorists, now in our files, testify to this and hundreds of other unusual tests of Conoco Germ Processed Oil—runs of ten to over fifty miles with the crankcase empty.
