Survivors return home

HOUSTON (AP) — American survivors of an air raid on a refinery in Iraq embraced family and friends Thursday night during an airport reunion marred by the absence of one man missing and presumed dead.

Relatives and friends who gathered outside the Customs gate at Houston's Intercontinental Airport Friday night tearfully greeted each of the 20 to 30 survivors who made the flight from Amsterdam.

Sharon Johnson and her 11-year-old son Barry were met by her father-in-law L.H. Johnson. Her husband, Harvey Johnson, 33, of Dickinson, was one of three Americans listed as missing and presumed dead after Iranian F-4 Phantom jets pounded a petrochemical plant in Basra, Iraq, on Tuesday.

A Washington Post reporter said witnesses told him Johnson was killed when the first Iranian bomb hit a maintenance garage at the plant.

However, Johnson said he had heard little about his son since his daughter-in-law called him from Amsterdam on Tuesday night. She had left for Iraq Aug. 13 so her son could enroll in school.

"We're still waiting in anticipation that he's alive. But the tension of waiting to hear is getting to be too much," Johnson said.

"We are not taking it that bad. We've got high hopes. If we let ourselves go we might go overboard the other way," said Johnson.

Raymond Delunna of The Woodlands suffered shrapnel wounds to the legs and arms as he fled the bombing in Iraq, escaping with only the clothes on his back.

He was taken by ambulance Thursday night from the airport to a local hospital.

"I was in the petrochemical complex and we were beginning to start up when the Iranian planes came in. I really didn't see how many there were. When somebody is strafing you, you don't look to see how many there are. They hit our motel pretty bad too. But I don't know how many were injured," said Delunna.

"The only thing I've got is what I have on, a pair of pants, the shirt I was working in and a pair of shoes," he said.

Many of the survivors declined to talk to reporters Thursday night, saying only that they were tired and glad to be home.

Others, however, complained that employers had not removed them from the plant soon enough.

Billie Harris of Laporte, the wife of Robert Harris, a technician with Foster Associates of Pasadena, said her husband's company "didn't tell him until the last minute to get out."

"In my opinion they could have gotten him out a lot earlier. But that's a wife's opinion sitting over here," she said.

Briceson Cook, 31, of Houston, said his company, Lummas Construction Co. of Bloomfield, N.J., evacuated its executives but left other workers to fend for themselves.

"There was a contingency plan to get the top people out. But for the rest of us, it was every man for himself," said Cook, who added that he escaped by jumping aboard a pickup truck carrying company executives out of Basra.

"People were lining the dusty road and jumping onto any vehicle they could. It was pandemonium. It certainly was not a planned evacuation," he said.

A Lummas Company spokesman in New Jersey declined comment, saying reports filtering back from the war-torn area were conflicting and confusing.

Iran denies Khomeini death

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iraq's official radio reported Friday that Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the Iranian revolutionary leader with whose regime Iraq is at war, has died, but Tehran Radio denied the report shortly after.

"It has been confirmed to us that the impostor Khomeini has met his death," said Baghdad Radio.

It did not say how the claimed confirmation was obtained.

It was the second report this week by the Iraqi radio of a sensational development in its adversary's capital. On Tuesday it reported that the 52 American hostages held in Iran had been released unconditionally. Tehran Radio denied the report, and Baghdad Radio abandoned it.

Two arrested on narcotics charges

City police arrested two Pampa men early today for fleeing and evading police and public intoxication charges and later discovered the two were in possession of a large amount of drugs and narcotics.

Charles Dennis Holt, 20, 831 S. Barnes, and Calvin John Cockrell, 23, Route 2, Box 396, were arraigned on felony possession charges before Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford at 10:15 a.m. today.

Bond for both men was set at $7,500 each for the possession of a controlled substance charges. Holt was additionally charged with unlawfully carrying a firearm. Lunsford set bail on that charge at $1,000.

The events leading to the arrest began when Patrolman Rocky Ferguson was stopped by a citizen who told the officer of a vehicle containing two men who were in possession of a gun and possibly narcotics. Pampa Police Chief J. J. Ryzman said. A description of the vehicle was given, he said.

Ferguson later observed a vehicle driving without lights at Somerville and Browning Streets. An unsuccessful attempt to stop the vehicle led to a chase through city streets and alleys at speeds "in excess of" the limits, Ryzman said.

After the fleeing car was stopped by the officer, the driver, Holt, was arrested for traffic violations. Cockrell, a passenger, was arrested for public intoxication.

After a subsequent investigation, the officers discovered suspected drugs and narcotics, Ryzman said. The chief said suspected LSD, marijuana and a white powder — which is to be analyzed to determine its identity — were some of the substances found on the suspects.

The evidence will be turned over to the Criminal Investigation Division and taken to the Department of Public Safety laboratory in Lubbock for analysis, Ryzman said.

The police chief did not have an estimate on the street value of the drugs, he said.

Holt and Cockrell were in the custody of city police early today pending arraignment on the civil charges of fleeing and evading police and public intoxication.

BOAT SHOW UNDERWAY. The new 1981 boats for lake-going Panhandle residents are on display today throughout the weekend at the Pampa Mall. The latest models include a pontoon, speedboats and bass boats. Mall hours are from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Weather

The forecast calls for a 50 percent chance of thundershowers today and a 40 percent chance tonight. The temperatures will be in the mid 60s today and the overnight low will be in the mid 50s.

Homecoming queen named tonight

Six Pampa High School coeds are anticipating Homecoming ceremonies tonight when the 1981 Homecoming Queen will be crowned during the football game between the Pampa Harvesters and the Borger Bulldogs.

Candidates for the honor are: Heidi Allen, the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Gene Allen; Laurie Comer, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Comer; Valisa Fellers, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Fellers; Ronda Geer, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Geer; Renae Hess, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Hess; and Jana Van Zandt, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Van Zandt.

The crowning of the queen is to be held during the half-time activities.

The football game is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. tonight in Harvester Stadium.

A homecoming dance will be conducted at M. K. Brown Auditorium from 10 p.m. to 1 a.m. Music will be provided by KIXZ of Amarillo.

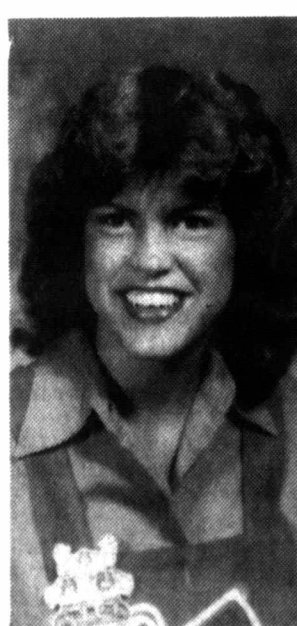

If statistics are any indication, the Harvesters, with a record of three wins and no losses, have a good chance of being victorious on their homecoming tonight. The Borger Bulldogs are coming into the game with a one-win and two-loss record.

VANDALS STRUCK PAMPA HIGH SCHOOL during the night — the eve of the football game between rivals, the Pampa Harvesters and the Borger Bulldogs. School officials arrived early today to find someone had painted the building with pro-Borger captions. Last year, vandalism before and during the game between the football foes cost citizens and insurance companies more than $4,000. Two Pampa youths were arrested last year and charged with criminal mischief in connection with the incident.

Mediation effort begins

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq claimed today the fall of Iran's burning oil refinery city of Abadan was imminent while both countries appeared moving toward mediation of their border conflict. The two Persian Gulf oil giants duelled with heavy artillery across their border waterway on the fifth day of the war, setting off fires in oil installations on both sides.

Both countries have indicated they will accept Islamic mediation, according to Pakistani Foreign Minister Aga Shahi, a key figure in the 40-member Islamic Conference of Nations. He spoke with reporters in New York in advance of a meeting of U.N. delegates who also are members of the Islamic conference.

Baghdad radio broadcast a statement by Iraqi Foreign Minister Saadoun Hammadeh saying Iraq would "welcome any discussion" to end the fighting but warning that "any assistance offered to the Iranian regime, especially in the field of spare parts, will be considered an act of aggression against Iraq's security."

There have been reports, denied by Washington, that Iran might seek spare parts for its American-made planes in exchange for release of the 52 Americans it has held hostage since Nov. 4.

Iran reported "very heavy" civilian casualties in Abadan and Khorramshahr, two major ports on the Shatt al-Arab waterway. Tehran radio quoted Iranian President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr as denying Iraq's claim that it had captured Khorramshahr. It said he visited the front Thursday and went within four miles of Khorramshahr.

Tehran radio said "the brave people" of Khorramshahr had set up defenses on all sides of the city and were fighting in the streets and on the rooftops.

The Iraqi military said earlier Iraqi forces had captured Khorramshahr and were closing in on Ahwaz, the capital of Iran's oil-rich Khuzestan Province 70 miles to the north. The claim fueled speculation Iraq was trying to seize all of Iran's 24,000-square-mile oil heartland.

A spokesman in Paris for a French oil company said the Iraqi national oil company had told its customers it had halted "all oil exports." He declined to elaborate but the Iraqi decision was understood to mean it had stopped shipments through the pipelines to the Mediterranean as well as through the gulf.

Government sources in neighboring United Arab Emirates said more than 30 cargo ships carrying goods bound for Iraq and Iran were anchored just outside the Persian Gulf, apparently afraid to enter the war zone.

Baghdad radio broadcast a claim that Iraqi anti-aircraft brought down 11 Iranian planes that raided the cities of Mosul and Kirkuk and economic and military installations elsewhere. Informed sources said there was heavy damage to the small oil refinery in Kirkuk and to the larger refinery in the southern port of Basra, which Iranian jets pounded Thursday.

The Iraqi command said three of its planes were lost, but did not confirm any damage to its refineries.

A group of reporters who traveled to Basra from Kuwait drove to a small village on the banks of the Shatt opposite Abadan. The reporters said they could hear outgoing Iraqi artillery from both the Iraqi and Iranian sides of the waterway toward Iranian positions near Abadan.

"It looks like all of Abadan is on fire," said London Times correspondent Robert Fisk. "The column of smoke from Abadan refinery is billowing for miles into the air. Even the sound of incoming shells passing overhead was deafening."

The reporters said authorities in Basra told them of having counted 100 dead and 500 wounded in that Iraqi city since the border dispute escalated into an undeclared war.

Khorramshahr is Iran's biggest port 25 miles down the disputed waterway from Basra, Iraq's chief port.

The Japanese consul in Khorramshahr reported Iraqi forces had not entered the city Thursday night and there was fighting south of the city. Diplomats in Baghdad also said fighting for the city was continuing today.

But the Iraqi military command said its forces "liberated" Khorramshahr Thursday morning after a flanking movement by Iraqi troops to the north cut the railroad from Khorramshahr and neighboring Abadan to Ahwaz and Tehran, and "made the liberation of every yard of Arab land usurped by the Persians possible."

It said its troops were moving on Abadan, five miles to the east, and Ahwaz.

Defense declines questioning of FBI informant in Brilab

HOUSTON (AP) — Defense attorneys, in a stunning and surprising move, today declined any cross-examination of FBI informant Joseph Hauser.

Hauser, the key witness in the Texas Brilab case had been on the stand for more than a week as prosecutors played a score of tapes involving an alleged insurance kickback scheme.

When Hauser finished his testimony today, defense attorneys Roy Minton, Gerald Goldstein and Ed Mollett, one by one, said "No questions."

The three attorneys refused to give any reason for their action.

One legal advisor to the defense said, however, "The tapes more or less spoke for themselves and didn't really prove anything. There was no need to go back over the conversations and Mr. Hauser has been discredited already."

In the morning testimony, Hauser said he had one last conversation on Nov. 19 with defendant Donald Ray, an Austin attorney, and then 10 days later began serving a 30-month federal prison term on a conviction of insurance bribery and fraud.

On trial with Ray is his law partner, Randall Wood, and Texas House Speaker Billy Clayton.

In the telephone conversation with Ray, Hauser asked the attorney if he needed any money "to operate on, to see some people."

Ray said perhaps "a couple of thousand."

Hauser said, "Would $3,000 be all right?"

Ray said, "Yeah."

Clayton, Texas labor leader L.G. Moore, Wood and Ray were indicted by a federal grand jury June 12 of extortion, racketeering, bribery and conspiracy in an alleged kickback scheme. The government contends Clayton accepted a bribe from Hauser, posing as an insurance executive, in favor of steering a state employee insurance contract to him.

Clayton, Wood and Ray are now on trial in a Houston federal court.

Moore will be tried later.

On secret Brilab tapes played Thursday there was a rustle of paper and Hauser counting "one, two, three, four, five" and then saying to Clayton "this is just peanuts."

Clayton said of the $5,000 contribution, "Well let me tell you we appreciate the heck out of it."

The recordings, made by Hauser, are the heart of the government's case against Clayton, a veteran of 20 years in the legislature, six years as speaker, and with hopes of the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in 1982.

Clayton has insisted the $5,000 was only a campaign contribution, legal in Texas if it is reported to the secretary of state.

The speaker never reported the stack of $100 bills but said there was no need to do that because he planned to return the money at a later date.

Hauser, posing as a representative of a large insurance company, asked the speaker's help in reopening bids on the $76 million-a-year state employee health and welfare insurance contract.

The Hauser tapes had Moore saying, "We want to make a contribution to your campaign. If that creates a problem for us under this type of circumstances, we don't want to do it."

Clayton said, "Let's get this thing and try to take care of it first... and then, then let's think about that because if we do something now and then we start raising hell about this (the current insurance contract), you know how the damn press is."

The Thursday tapes also had this conversation:

Moore: "Let me tell you something now, Billy. Let me tell you what my commitment is to you... He (Hauser) wants the business. He can do a better job. My commitment is, we will put, I will, in your, whatever you want to run, a $100,000 going in and we can be prepared to put up a half million."

Hauser: "Now that's for every year, every year, you understand that?"

Clayton: "Well, let me tell you, anytime you can show me where you will save the state money... well by God, I'll go to battle for you... you know I think that is what part of my job is... try save the state money."

Clayton said he would have to report the contribution, but Hauser suggested the speaker put it away and think about reporting it later.

The FBI informant, later under questioning by the prosecution, said the speaker handed the money to his administrative assistant Russell "Rusty" Kelly and told him "you know where to put it."

After the meeting, Moore called Kelly and said, "pick up the phone and call me for whatever you need in those Houston House races."

Then Moore called Wood and said, "We made a contribution to Clayton and he accepted it. No problem."

Texas weather

By The Associated Press

A slow-moving cold front brought showers and thunderstorms to most of Texas last night, causing some streets and highways to be closed by high water.

In the north Dallas suburb of Carrollton, a 14-year-old boy was struck and killed by lightning as he walked home from school during a thunderstorm. Daryle Ellis was found lying unconscious near his home about 4:30 p.m. Thursday, and died shortly afterwards at a local hospital.

A flash flood warning was issued for Val Verde County in southwest Texas, and several roads were closed by high water. More rain fell on the water-logged North Texas town of Roscoe, where residents have been forced to use portable toilets while the city struggles to repair the sewer system that was closed by earlier floods.

Forecasters said the rain will continue, and temperatures are expected to be slightly cooler. Early morning readings were in the mid-50s in northern rain areas, and in the 60s and 70s elsewhere. Highs in the 60s in West Texas, and 70s and 80s elsewhere, were predicted.

Texas forecasts

North Texas - Mostly cloudy and mild through Saturday with showers and few thunderstorms southeast. Scattered showers and thunderstorms west tonight and entire area Saturday. Highs upper 70s west to mid 80s east. Lows 60s.

South Texas - Flash flood watch in effect for Hill Country and adjacent Edwards Plateau. Occasional thunderstorms, some locally heavy, continuing through Saturday. Highs 80s and 90s. Lows 60s and 70s, near 80 coast.

West Texas - Flash flood watch through tonight. Rain and a few thunderstorms through Saturday, some possibly locally heavy south through tonight. Highs mid 60s mountains and north, mid 70s south. Lows mid 50s north to mid 60s southeast. Highs Saturday 70s, low 80s Big Bend.

Port Arthur to Port O'Connor - East and northeast winds 15 to 20 knots through Saturday. Seas 5 to 7 feet. Winds and seas higher in and near occasional thunderstorms.

Port O'Connor to Brownsville - East and southeast winds 15 to 20 knots today and east and northeast 15 to 20 tonight and Saturday. Seas 5 to 7 feet. Winds and seas higher in and near occasional thunderstorms.

Extended

Sunday Through Tuesday

North Texas: Partly cloudy. Scattered showers southeast portion Sunday. A little warmer Monday. Lows in the mid and upper 60s. Highs Sunday in the 80s. Highs Monday and Tuesday in the upper 80s and lower 90s.

South Texas: Scattered showers and thunderstorms Sunday becoming isolated Monday and Tuesday. A little warmer Monday and Tuesday. Highs Sunday in the 80s north and in the 90s south. Highs Monday and Tuesday mostly in the 90s.

West Texas: Warmer with a chance of showers and thunderstorms most sections Sunday and southwest towards mid week. Highs in the 80s except 90s Big Bend. Lows in the 50s except 60s southeast.

National weather

Thundershowers spread from the lower Mississippi Valley to the Arizona deserts, with heavy rains in southwest Texas and southern New Mexico.

Thundershowers also blanketed much of the Northeast, and most of the rest of the country had clear to partly cloudy skies.

More storms were expected over the Northeast, as well as from Florida to North Carolina. Widely scattered thundershowers also were forecast for the Gulf Coast states and parts of the Southwest.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 26 degrees in Warroad, Minn., to 84 degrees in Fort Lauderdale, Miami and Key West, Fla., and in Phoenix and Yuma, Ariz.

Here are some early morning temperatures and conditions around the nation:

Eastern U.S.: Atlanta 70, cloudy; Cincinnati 56, fair; Cleveland 53, partly cloudy; Detroit 51, windy; Miami 85, fair; New York 64, foggy; Philadelphia 64, rain; Pittsburgh 58, thunderstorms; Washington 71, foggy.

Central U.S.: Chicago 48, fair; Denver 56, fair; Des Moines 44, fair; Fort Worth 73, rain; Indianapolis 52, fair; Kansas City 48, partly cloudy; Louisville 62, cloudy; Minneapolis-St. Paul 38, fair; Nashville 68, foggy; New Orleans 77, fair; St. Louis 56, fair.

SEEING TRIPLE.

Triplets, adopted at birth by different families 19 years ago, got together for the first time today on NBC's "Today Show" in New York. Earlier this week, David Kellman, center, recognized his own face in a news picture of his brothers, and said, "They have to be my brothers." A call to Eddy Gelland, right and Robert Shafran, left, led to the trio's reunion.

Sioux tribal leaders to decide on Black Hills purchase price

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — Sioux Indian tribal leaders gather here Sunday to decide whether to accept $105 million or demand more for 7.3 million acres of the Black Hills their people once occupied.

The question is hotly debated and stirs deep emotions among the 68,000 tribal members who would be eligible to share the $105 million awarded to the Sioux on June 30 by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The high court ruled 8-1 that an 1877 act of Congress illegally seized the Black Hills from the Sioux without just compensation.

The court said that the Fort Laramie Treaty of 1868 had set aside the western South Dakota hills for "the absolute and undisturbed use and occupation of the Indians," but was tossed aside after an expedition led by Lt. Col. George Armstrong Custer discovered gold there.

Some tribal members favor accepting the $105 million and ending the battle of the Black Hills. Others want to refuse the cash and fight in federal courts or Congress for more money and publicly owned land.

Still others want to take the $105 million and then ask for additional compensation. And some Sioux, insisting that the Black Hills are sacred and theirs forever, say the hills cannot be sold and want to demand their return.

Man charged in 1967 slaying of Texas University student

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Robert Zani, already charged in the murder of a San Antonio real estate man, was indicted Thursday in the 1967 slaying of George Vizard IV, a leader in the University of Texas chapter of Students for a Democratic Society.

Zani, 36, attended the university at that time.

Vizard, one of the more vocal leaders of the student movement against the Vietnam War, was clerking at a drive-in grocery when he was shot to death on July 23, 1967. Vizard's body was found in the store's cold storage locker.

Vizard's followers, including his wife, suggested at various anti-war rallies the "establishment" had Vizard murdered because of his views.

Zani is under federal indictment on charges he murdered San Antonio real estate agent Julian Dess, whose mutilated body was found on Padre Island Dec. 8. Zani's wife also was indicted in Dess' killing.

Zani has been jailed here since March on a charge of credit card abuse.

Health officials report large outbreak of encephalitis cases

ATLANTA (AP) — Unusually large outbreaks of encephalitis, a disease causing inflammation of the brain, have been reported in the United States this year, particularly along the Gulf Coast, the national Center for Disease Control reported today.

Houston has been hardest hit by the mosquito-borne disease, with 18 confirmed cases and 12 suspected cases of St. Louis encephalitis, the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report. Two deaths were reported in the area.

Eight other confirmed cases were reported in the neighboring Gulf Coast counties of Harris, Brazoria, Chambers, Galveston and Jefferson, the report said.

One case of another strain of the disease, eastern equine encephalomyelitis, has popped up in Michigan. It was the first human case of EEE ever reported in Michigan, the CDC said. The disease usually affects horses.

A 12-year-old boy, who lived on a St. Joseph County, Mich., farm which was hit by an outbreak of the disease among horses, developed acute encephalitis on Aug. 28 and remains hospitalized in a coma, the CDC said.

Equine vaccination was intensified by horse owners in the area and the equine cases — 72 of which were reported — are diminishing, the report said.

St. Louis encephalitis has also been reported in New Orleans, where four confirmed and four suspected cases were reported from July 29 through Aug. 10, the report said. One other case was reported in nearby Evangeline Parish.

Gambler sought to testify in investigation

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Alan Smith, Texas A&M's freshman kicker, prevented a lot of embarrassment when he booted the "second kickoff" out of the end zone at the start of the Penn State-Texas A&M football game last Saturday night.

Smith had kicked the opening kickoff into the end zone for a touchback, and Penn State's Nittany Lions were preparing to go on offense from the 20 when officials directed both teams to midfield for another kickoff.

A Penn State television network was still in a commercial at the time of the first kickoff, officials informed Texas A&M coach Tom Wilson and Penn State coach Joe Paterno, so line judge Earl Birdy of West Missila, Pa., had blown his whistle while the kickoff was still in the air.

Had Penn State returned the second kickoff for a touchdown, or had a turnover occurred allowing Texas A&M possession deep in Penn State territory, a major controversy would have resulted. Smith's second kickoff out of the end zone made the dispute moot.

"There was no harm done, but it could have well been," Wilson said.

"It was explained to me they were in a television time out. It had been understood that the TV coverage would not affect the game at all, but one official on the side did not understand that. He saw they were in a commercial break or something and blew the whistle," Wilson said.

Bill Morgan, information director for the Southwest Conference, said the NCAA has an agreement with the ABC-TV network on what is done to accommodate the television coverage, but said those guidelines apply only on ABC coverage.

"We have a lot of games that are televised for subscription TV, cable TV and such, but it's with the understanding they are not to affect the game in any way. It's like we don't even know they're there," Morgan said.

"This was the judgment of one official, and the consensus is it shouldn't have been done," Morgan added.

DRUG ABUSE STUDY

All citizens who are concerned about drug abuse are encouraged to attend weekly meetings at 7 p.m. Tuesdays at Clarendon College-Pampa Campus, 900 N. Frost St.

The purpose of these meetings will be to:

- 1) To study the extent of drug abuse;
- 2) To seek methods by which citizens can effectively assist in curbing drug abuse;
- 3) Provide support and assistance to families affected by drug abuse.

OKTOBERFEST ANNOUNCED

The Lake Buchanan Chamber of Commerce officials have announced the Oktoberfest festivities will be held Oct. 3 and 4 at the Bier Garten on Highway 29 three miles West of Buchanan Dam.

The Oktoberfest is an annual event in the Lake Buchanan area and many local residents attend the celebration.

Serviceman files paternity suit to gain custody of son

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — A 21-year-old serviceman who was adopted himself has filed a paternity suit in an effort to gain the custody of his illegitimate 13-month-old son.

Airman 1st Class Jeff Claypool said he filed suit after he learned that the boy, Michael, was about to be put for adoption.

"I could not see my son go out into this world not knowing his parents," said Claypool, who is stationed at Moody Air Force Base.

A hearing on the suit was being held today in Superior Court in Anne Arundel County, Md.

Claypool was asking the court to declare him the father of the boy, said his attorney, Morton Fowler of Washington, D.C.

"When I filed the action, the clerks were sort of scratching their heads," said Fowler. "They didn't know whether a father could sue to have a declaration of paternity."

A paternity action filed by a father is rare, if not unheard of, said Fowler.

"Everytime I go home on leave and see him I just can't help but cry...because I think he knows who his father is," said Claypool. "And everytime I go see him it is just out of this world. It is just something that makes your whole body feel so good, knowing that there is somebody with your own blood out there in this world."

Claypool said he asked his 16-year-old Maryland girlfriend to marry him when he learned in March 1979 that she was pregnant, but she refused. Since the suit was filed, Michael's mother has decided to withdraw her consent to the scheduled adoption and is fighting Claypool for custody of the child.

Texas corporation loses lease suit

By The Associated Press
Arkansas Louisiana Gas Co. has won a court battle with Texas Oil and Gas Corp. over $1-an-acre oil and gas leases on 33,000 acres at Fort Chaffee, Ark.

Federal Judge Joyce Green ruled in Washington on Thursday that Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus had acted within his authority when he cancelled the oil and gas leases awarded to the Texas firm last year without competitive bidding.

Arkla had filed lawsuits to block the leases to Texas Oil and Gas, which with three other companies has planned to build a new interstate gas pipeline through the Arkoma Basin in eastern Oklahoma and western and central Arkansas.

Arkla has been fighting the proposed pipeline.

Andrus contended in a trial that began in July that the awarding of the $1-an-acre leases on the Fort Chaffee land was an "administrative error" and that he had the power and the duty to correct mistakes by his department.

Appeals from Judge Green's court go directly to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Arkla President Sheffield Nelson said late Thursday he was "ecstatic" about the judge's ruling. He predicted that competitive bidding on the leases will result in $150 or more an acre in revenues for the federal government.

Recounts fail to change results

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Gerald Dennis of Antlers increased his margin of victory Thursday over state Rep. Hollis Roberts of Hugo in a recount in a disputed southeastern Oklahoma state Senate race.

Dennis led Roberts by 168 votes when the recount started in the Democratic runoff race in Senate District 5, which includes McCurtain, Choctaw and Pushmataha counties.

The recount increased his lead to an even 200 votes.

Recounts in two other legislative races, which were completed Wednesday, reaffirmed former Garvin County Sheriff Bill Branch as the winner over state Sen. Charles Vann of Pauls Valley in the Senate District 15 Democratic runoff and James Williamson of Tulsa as the victor over Kenny King, also of Tulsa, in a Republican runoff in House District 76.

Dennis picked up 24 votes in the Pushmataha County recount and eight votes in Choctaw County, giving him 9,125 votes to 8,925 for Roberts.

No recount was conducted in McCurtain County because District Judge Pat Pate of Poteau, who was assigned to supervise the county's recount after the local judge disqualified, ruled the ballots had not been properly secured after being tabulated.

Dennis and Roberts were seeking the Senate seat being vacated by the retirement of Senate Majority Leader Jim E. Lane, D-Idabel.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Sophia Loren says that filming her life story gave her "many, many headaches" and "nightmares," but she's glad she did it.

The Italian film star, in New York on Thursday for a two-week tour to promote the film and a new fragrance named after her, said in an interview she found it "very difficult" to play both herself and her mother in the made-for-television movie.

But, she added, she was "quite pleased" with the movie, shot in Italy this summer. It was based on her autobiography, "Sophia: Living and Loving," and is to be broadcast by NBC on Oct. 26.

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the newest sensations on Broadway is David Merrick's musical "42nd Street," but if you want to see it you better be prepared to pay Fifth Avenue prices.

Merrick has just increased the cost of an orchestra ticket to $35 on both weekends and weeknights, a record. When the show opened last month, the seats went for $27.50. Two weeks later, the price went to $30, which was the top price for some long-running shows.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Jerry Lee Lewis, 44, has been ordered by a court to stay away from his estranged wife, Jaren, who has accused him of beating her.

An injunction granted Thursday by Judge Charles O. McPherson prohibits Lewis from "coming around her, threatening her, assaulting, molesting or harming her" or the couple's only child, Lori Lee Lewis, 8.

Mrs. Lewis, who has filed for divorce from her husband of almost nine years, asked for the injunction Wednesday and for part of Lewis' income and custody of their daughter, Mrs. Lewis, 38, and the child live in Memphis.

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — While Edmund Muskie grapples with affairs of state in Washington, his dog, Robbie, is tangling with the affairs of the state back home.

Robbie joined 50 dogs, one kitten and a horse named Jamie in a rally and protest march at Maine's statehouse on Thursday.

The animals, wearing placards and accompanied by their masters, were howling about a proposed cut in the budget of the state Animal Welfare Division.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Frederic Forrest, nominated for an Oscar last year for his role in the film "The Rose," will take an actress for his bride — Marilu Henner of the television series "Taxi," a spokesman says.

A spokesman for the couple said the wedding will be Sunday at the home of friends in New Orleans. It is the first marriage for Ms. Henner, who is 26. Forrest is 42 and was married once before.

After the ceremony, they will return to Hollywood.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Jerusalem issue key to Mideast peace

"Men rode in blood to their knees and bridle reins. Indeed, it was a just and splendid judgment of God that this place should be filled with the blood of unbelievers, since it has suffered so long from their blasphemies. The city was filled with corpses and blood."

So writes the chronicler of the capture of Jerusalem by the crusaders on July 15, 1099. Arabs and Jews, both men and women, died alike on that day under the naked swords of the militant Christians.

Jerusalem was a Jewish city for about 1,000 years before Christ. Then it fell to the Romans and in 637 was captured by the Arabs, who made it the chief Moslem shrine after Mecca. Except for relatively brief intervals (the crusaders lasted less than a century), thereafter Old Jerusalem remained under Moslem rule until 1967, when Israel captured it from Jordan.

Now the Knesset has declared Jerusalem the eternal capital of the state of Israel, an action that has been condemned by the Arabs and by the Security Council of the United Nations, the United States abstaining from the unanimous vote.

The Camp David peace process has almost come to a halt because Egypt's President Sadat refuses to continue serious negotiations in the face of what he considers the Knesset's provocative action.

The Camp David peace process may have reached a dead end despite Carter administration claims of renewed hope that lower-level discussions hold promise of eventual full-scale negotiations toward a settlement. Only the prospect of recovering the remaining Egyptian territory in the Sinai from Israeli occupation is likely to bring Sadat back to the negotiating table.

Meanwhile, the other Arabs who have not been involved in the Camp David process are becoming more and more alarmed over the course of Israeli policy in Jerusalem and in the other territories seized from Jordan and Egypt in 1967.

Any effort to use the $2 billion in U.S. economic aid earmarked for Israel (an amount equal to almost half Israel's defense budget) as a lever to persuade the Israeli government to change its policy was rejected, 85 to 7, in the U.S. Senate in June. And President Carter promised the Democratic National Convention that, if re-elected, he never will use U.S. aid to Israel as any kind of lever on Israel.

Camp David detoured around the Jerusalem issue. But there can be no lasting peace, there can be no real security for the countries and peoples of the Middle East, until the Jerusalem issue is faced squarely and settled.

Keep the state out of prayer - in - school

Louisiana is trying what many a Texan would like to see back in effect.

Under a new state law, children may pray in Louisiana public schools for the first time in nearly two decades. Actually, there was never anything keeping them from praying. But they didn't have a formalized time for it before.

The U.S. Supreme Court acted wisely in 1962 when it declared formal prayer in classrooms violated separation of church and state. Louisiana, the first state to reinstate classroom prayer, hopes to dodge the law by playing games of obfuscation and semantics.

First, prayer time is not called "formal." The words prayer and meditation are mentioned in the legislation, but not defined. In addition, the bill makes clear that "the exercise," meaning classroom prayer, "shall not be intended or identified as a religious exercise."

It certainly isn't a gymnastics exercise or one commonly associated with the diagramming of sentences.

Leave it to the Louisiana legislators to finesse a political coup in an election year. They get the credit, while local officials take the heat. The state lawmakers gave local school boards the option to offer prayer. It might be difficult to keep a seat on a school board without picking up the option.

The onus also is on teachers and students: Neither may be required to offer prayer.

But the teacher who refuses very well might be called on the carpet by school board officials, administrators and parents to defend religious preferences or lack thereof.

The student who refuses very well might become a victim of social ostracism, although few children would exercise their prerogative and actually walk out during worship service.

Lawmakers evidently ignored the personality characteristics of children. They are not yet adults — that's why they're in school — and they will succumb to peer pressure however uncomfortable they are inwardly with the action. The Louisiana bill thus adds potential pressures to the classroom.

However cleverly worded, it is unconstitutional to insinuate the church on a state-supported school. Our founding fathers meant only one thing by separation of church and state: Keep them separated.

We have no objection to any student offering a prayer at school or anywhere else. Indeed, even totalitarian dictatorships have been unsuccessful in keeping their people from praying. As an intensely personal and private matter, praying can't effectively be legislated against.

However, we believe students have plenty of opportunity to pray, in school, at home and in church without formalizing it and therefore violating the constitutional guarantees of church and state-supported school.

While the majority of the people are religious and believe in the benefits of prayer, we must never lose sight of the fact that there are some people with other beliefs and the public schools are theirs, too.

One of the most shameful sights of recent times was the appearance of Robert Mugabe, the Marxist leader of Zimbabwe, as a guest of President Carter at the White House.

Mr. Carter makes a big hullabaloo over human rights when confronted with a conservative government that takes strong action to counter communism. Former Prime Minister Ian Smith, who held the line against terrorist rule in South-Central Africa, received shabby treatment from Mr. Carter, as did Bishop Abel Muzorewa, who succeeded him. But Mr. Carter had nothing but praise for Mugabe, the terrorist leader turned prime minister.

Robert Morris, chairman of the American Zimbabwe Rhodesian

Association, recently described Mugabe's rise to power, saying that his forces gained power "through an election that was marked by massive intimidation." Mr. Morris remarked that he "personally witnessed the events preceding the election and saw the affidavits that attested to the depredations, the threats and even the killings by more than 5100 Mugabe guerrillas who violated the ceasefire and roamed the countryside in their acts of voter intimidation." He also noted that the government-run radio and television in Zimbabwe "belch forth uninterrupted communist propaganda."

This, then, is the type of leader welcome at the White House by that great advocate of human rights.

It's unreasonable to suppose that Mr.

Carter will give up the double standard in judging political regimes. The double standard is embedded in the foreign policy of the Carter administration. Regimes of the Left are favored; regimes of the Right are bitterly opposed.

The Congress and the country have to consider what is best for the United States in the long run. It's highly unlikely that the American people favor the extension of financial assistance to the Mugabe regime — aid which the Carter administration has granted. America had a good chance to get a stable, sound government in Rhodesia-Zimbabwe when Bishop Muzorewa was in charge of the government. The Carter administration refused to take advantage of that opportunity.

According to an official of the U.S.

International Development Cooperation Agency, the U.S. "expects to have made commitments to Zimbabwe that total over $100 million and to have dispersed a large proportion of that amount," within a year of Zimbabwean independence. That would be nothing short of outrageous.

It would be a great mistake for the United States to attempt to treat Zimbabwe as a client state, dependent on American largesse. We don't need that kind of dependency.

The solution may be for the U.S. government to urge Zimbabwe to turn to its neighbor, South Africa, for help. The South Africans have provided essential help for Mozambique, on condition that the leftist regime there behave itself in its dealings with its neighbors. It may be that South Africa could extract the same pledge from Mugabe, and make him live up to it. Mugabe won't do this, of course, if he thinks the United States will fund his government.

LOOK KID, THE SCHOOL BOARD DOESN'T EVEN KNOW THE ROUTES, SO WHY ASK ME?

Is it legal to tutor children at home?

by Paul Harvey

Most Americans objecting to trends in public education are unaware that it may be legal to tutor children at home.

Indeed, there is now aborning a National Association of Home Educators — a clearing house for information on legalities, mechanics and curriculum for at-home education.

The Bergmans of Smithton, Missouri, have nine children, ages one to 21. All of them "home-educated."

The eldest, a daughter, qualified for college at the age of 15, maintained a 3.8 grade average through Weaver State College in Ogden, Utah, and then got her Masters at Idaho State.

If you want to educate your children at home your odds are best in western states. Distances are so great in most western states that home education always has been more logical than education in public groups.

You'll find the most parents teaching their own children in the state of Utah. Home educators are next most numerous in Missouri.

The founder of the National Association of Home Educators, Mary Bergman (the mother of those nine), says, "You'll have a dickens of a time setting up your own home school in Kansas, Washington, Ohio and Michigan — but even there it can be done."

These are the steps she recommends: The parents and a friend should become a three-person non-profit corporation under their state's statutes for the purpose of becoming "a school."

They should then contact the state board of education and register as "a private school," identifying themselves as faculty (accreditation not required) and outlining the projected curriculum.

Then the county education authorities should be advised of a willingness to comply with the requirements of any necessary county permits.

And that's about all there is to it.

In most instances where parents are involved in litigation over this situation, it is because they did not follow this procedure.

Some sought open confrontation with school authorities, instead. That, says Mrs. Bergman, is not the way.

In most states, the law reads that a parent is obligated to see that children receive a public, "or an equivalent" education.

At-home education is not new, of course. Ancient Greeks made parents solely responsible for early training of their children.

George Washington and Abraham Lincoln never went to school and Thomas Edison was educated mostly by his mother. Communal societies in California and elsewhere are opting for at-home education.

It may not re-supplant public education, but it is an increasingly attractive option.

Teachers make war on children, parents

By Oscar Cooley

Many schools are closed because their teachers are on strike. In Philadelphia, 220,000 children are locked out of school because their teachers are striking.

Struck schools are still educating. Their children are learning that to get your way in the world you should organize and use the force of numbers, even violent force if it comes to that.

School children look up to their teachers, assuming that whatever Teacher does is right. Teacher, like Mother and Father at home, sets the example. And surely, when several or all the teachers in the school do the same thing it must be the right thing to do.

In some states — Ohio, for example — it is against the law for public employees (employees of government) to strike. Teachers in public schools are public employees. Yet, teachers in these states, as in others, have gone on strike, ignoring the law. In Ohio, the newspapers reporting the public school strikes do not even mention such strikes.

This tells the children of those schools that you do not have to obey the law. If a law gets in your way, just ignore it. Teacher does, so it must be right. Is this the kind of education that Ohioans want for their children?

Often, a teachers' strike results simply in the teachers remaining away from school. The children's parents are notified there will be no school, always good news to children who want to play ball, go fishing, or just romp about. All in all, the prospect is pleasant, so the children think the strike is great. They do not see the strike as a pitched battle, which it is.

It cannot be emphasized too often that a strike is not a mere quitting of work. It is not quitting at all, for strikers walk out but do not walk away. They lay down their work tools and pick up picket signs. Leaving the production line in the plant, they form a picket line outside the plant and move back and forth to advertise that a strike is in progress.

When other workers come to work, the pickets try to persuade them not to and even use physical force to keep them from entering the plant. The striker considers the job his own property, his means of livelihood, and he will fight to retain it.

A striking labor union is an embattled army, and a strike is a military operation. In order to do battle, teachers first organize, as soldiers do. The teachers school themselves to accept discipline. So do soldiers. The teachers train themselves to act in concert, like robots. So do soldiers.

Striking teachers have an enemy, the employing parents and taxpayers, and the object is to hurt the enemy so that he will do as they say. The soldier, too.

Soldiers, as well as teachers, hope the enemy will capitulate without a fight, but both stand ready to fight if necessary, to damage or destroy property, to hurt and even kill people if they cannot win without doing so.

These facts of life need to be recognized so that people will be fully aware of what is going on in the work - a day world. And it is especially important to note that teachers' strikes, of all such conflicts, are peculiarly dangerous since they have the effect of saying to the young and impressionable, "Fighting is good. Teacher does it."

The real employer of the teacher is not the school superintendent or board but the citizens of the community for whom the school board and officials act as representatives. Among the citizens, the parents of school age children are the ones most directly concerned. When teachers strike, they throw down the gauntlet to the parents.

If a parent is sympathetic to unions, he is likely to side with the strikers, holding their wages are too low and their demands, whatever these may be, are just. If these demands are granted, it will cost him and fellow-taxpayers, but he will deny that, insisting that the higher school bill must be paid by raising the taxes on business and businessmen, all of whom he sees as rich and undertaxed.

Parents who are not sympathetic to unions and strikes will resent the teachers' walkout. They will feel their children are being made to bear the brunt of the dispute between teachers and school board. For the sake of the children, they may urge the board to grant the strikers' demands — anything to get the school open. But if this is done, the school taxes will have to go up, increasing the burden on all the taxpayers.

Such parents are in a dilemma. If they fight the belligerent teachers, the children will suffer. If they capitulate, the taxpayers will have to pay. They will probably favor capitulation because the increased tax bill will be in future, and maybe — just maybe — can be avoided by other economies.

Conclusion: The teachers' army has fewer soldiers than the parents' army, but the teachers, being organized and unyielding, will win the battle. Most teachers' strikes will end in gains for the teachers and losses for the parents. The children will have learned that force and lawlessness are good, which is not true.

Although both Arwak and Carib Indians inhabited Barbados at one time, the island was uninhabited in 1627 when the first white settlers arrived from England. In less than a decade slaves were brought from Africa to work the sugar plantations, which continue to serve as the mainstay of the island's economy.

Wandering Indian blacksmiths, who travel in bullock carts and operate roadside forges, are descended from armors who fled the fort of Chitorgarh in February 1568, the night before it fell to conquering Mogul armies. Shamed by their escape, they vowed never again to settle in houses, and the Lohar caste follows this injunction today.

The United Nations has supported adoption of international traffic signs that use standard shapes, drawings and symbols to overcome language barriers, so motorists can recognize road hazards and regulations wherever they drive.

By SAMUEL KOO
Associated Press Writer
VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II's first synod of Roman Catholic bishops opens today with expectations that it will break no new ground and will reaffirm the church's traditional opposition to birth control, abortion, divorce and extra-marital sexual relations.

In a solemn Mass in the magnificent Sistine Chapel, the pontiff declared that it is "the duty of each Christian family to guard and preserve humanity itself. Families must preserve fundamental values of the church."

The pope delivered his homily in Latin, seated in the gold-embossed papal chair with his back against

Michelangelo's "Last Judgment."

Solemn hymns echoed through the 15th-century chapel as more than 200 cardinals and bishops in red and purple robes prayed.

After the Mass, Cardinal Terence Cooke of New York told reporters that "the synod would be a wonderful show of support for family life throughout the world." He said he expected "strengthening and reaffirmation" of church values but no major changes.

But Bishop Theobonius Gomes of Binajpur, Bangladesh, said he believed there is "much airing out" to be done on the birth control issue. "It has to be debated. Population is one major problem in our country," he said.

"Don't expect any changes in doctrinal matters, because these things simply cannot be changed," said Archbishop Jozef Tomko, secretary-general of the Sixth World Synod of Bishops.

"Our objective is to help Catholic families who must live in an ambience which pays little heed to their Catholic principles. The family in such circumstances needs help if it is to defend its religious values and live by them in the face of pressures from without and confusions within," Tomko said.

In addition to dealing with the basic tenets of the church, and drafting guidelines for dealing with Catholics who ignore them, the bishops will, for the first time since the 1962-65 Vatican Council II, try to find common views on a wide range of other issues facing the world's 760 million Roman Catholics, including the changing role of women, sex education, consumerism and drug addiction.

Birth control appears to be the most controversial issue facing the 216 invited bishops meeting in the historic Sistine Chapel. In a series of speeches setting the tone for the synod, Pope John Paul emphasized his unyielding opposition to contraception, abortion and divorce.

The pontiff reaffirmed the church's rejection of all birth control devices and chemical contraceptives such as the pill. He said artificial contraception violates human and Christian ethics and is unworthy of civilization.

Carbon dioxide plant planned

HOUSTON (AP) — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. has announced plans to build a $20 million carbon dioxide plant expected to boost long-range production at two North Texas fields by more than 3 million barrels.

Officials of the Houston-based company also said Wednesday a pipeline would link the plant with the Alford South and Deaver fields near Bridgeport.

Chairman George Mitchell said the plant will produce about 8 million cubic feet of gas to be used to boost the recovery rate to about one-half of the oil in the reservoirs of the two fields.

The extra production should amount to about 3 million barrels at the Alford South field and about 500,000 at the Deaver unit, Mitchell said.

He said primary recovery operations in the North Texas area typically yield 15 to 20 percent of the in-place oil, secondary recovery operations such as continuous water injection recover a similar amount and the tertiary stage adds about another 10 percent.

Plant construction is expected to begin within a few weeks. The tertiary operations would start late next year, with the resulting increased production anticipated in 1982, Mitchell said.

Pipeline balks, town is thirsty

PETROLIA, Texas (AP) — The 600 citizens of this tiny North Texas town have run out of water because of a balky pipeline and a parched lake, a city spokeswoman said.

Citizens have turned to the Texas National Guard for two 400-gallon tank trucks to bring drinking water from wells in an irrigation field here, city secretary Pat Haney said Thursday.

The small Clay County town has been rationing water since March 4, she said, but a cutback in average daily consumption from 120,000 gallons to 85,000 gallons has not helped.

The hot, dry Texas summer dried up on Aug. 27 the lake that supplied Pretolia's water, Mrs. Haney said.

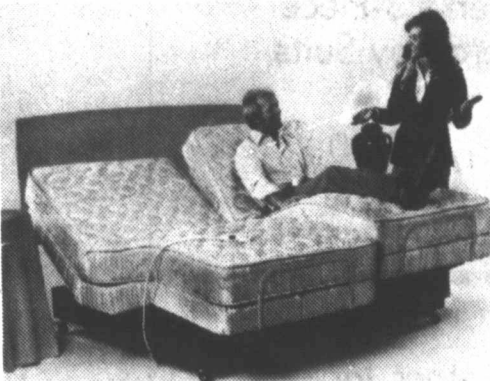

The city then installed 7,200 feet of pipe from its existing well field to a three-well irrigation field where more water could be purchased.

The long-awaited line was completed Monday, Mrs. Haney said, but when it was turned on the pressure broke the line.

"We repaired it and tried it again Tuesday and it broke, so we repaired it and tried again Wednesday and it broke," she said.

Crews were working on the pipeline again Thursday, she said, and planned to turn the water on Friday morning.

Artist says tax laws unfair

By PEGGY BRIANT
Tempe Daily News

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Famous Arizona-born artist Ted DeGrazia, whose angry protests of tax treatment of artists have gained him almost as much attention as his gentle, ethereal trademark paintings of Indian children, says he doesn't paint for posterity.

"I want to be remembered as a human being," he said. "I don't paint for tomorrow."

The comments came as he signed his autograph in gold — for posterity — for about the 250th time. He was halfway through the task of autographing 500 ceramic dinner bells at a Tempe company, Sandstone Creations.

Sandstone, which makes Southwestern-oriented stationery and gift items for marketing through gift and department stores across the country, is using DeGrazia's "Little Prayer" painting of an angel as the design for a limited edition of 7,500 bells.

DeGrazia said he wasn't burning any more paintings — "it's too hot."

But, he said, he's still angry with the government tax officials and is storing paintings in caves in the Superstition Mountains.

"Nobody knows where they are but me," he said. "If they can't see 'em, they're not there, are they?"

DeGrazia set a torch to some of his paintings to protest the inequities of a tax system which, he said, only allows an artist to deduct the price of materials for a work he gives to charity, "but when you die, they want 50 percent of the paintings you have left."

"Nothing protects the artists in this country," DeGrazia added. "In Europe, Ireland, even the Far East, they like artists. But not here."

"The art world is such a tough racket," he said as he continued to sign bells with a gold ceramapen. "It takes so long to get there, an artist is just getting good when he's ready to die."

He started painting when he was young and "I was gray when I hit it big," he said. "I quit painting when I was painting for dollars... I like to do art work because I want to, not because somebody else wants to pay me for it."

DeGrazia himself likes to be alone. "I'm a hermit," he said. "I don't like public things."

He comes from three or four generations of miners.

But "in 1932, I was 23, the mines were closing (in the Depression) and the camps wanted miners to get out, so I left too much school."

If he takes up violin making, Steven will be carrying a 300-year tradition into its 10th generation. But a vocational decision doesn't have to be made for a long time. Steven is only 9, a third-grader.

The youngster isn't the first of the Meisels to wonder about different work. Steve's father, Kurt Lothar Meisel, had thought as a boy that he'd like to be a forester. And Steve's grandfather, Kurt Oswald Meisel, now 76, had wanted to be an engineer.

But there's something about the luther craft that gets into your blood, says Lothar, 51, who goes by his middle name. It's a labor of love, he says, for people of sensitivity and pride.

"When you make a violin, it's not like any other violin," he says. "It's almost like a child of yours. There's potential in a fine violin, but it takes proper care to bring it out to the fullest."

Most of his time is given to repair and restoration of stringed instruments. Meisel has to steal time from that work to make about four violins a year. In his career, he has made 150 violins, 17 violas, one cello and one bass. He didn't enjoy making the bass. It was "too big, too awkward," Meisel felt like a carpenter building a dog house.

Meisel's father, Kurt Oswald, was a government employee in Germany, a teacher of violin making. Because moonlighting wasn't permitted, Kurt made only about 40 violins. He made his last one 10 years ago and eye problems recently forced him to cut back on repair work.

The Meisels know of no other family with such a long tradition line of violin makers. The tradition began with Johann Meisel, who lived from 1659 to 1713.

Kurt learned the craft from his father, worked as an assistant violin maker in Holland and taught violin making in a technical school in Germany from 1927 until the mid-1940s.

Lothar began his apprenticeship under his father, was an assistant violin maker in Germany and moved to Cleveland, Ohio, in 1953 to work as a violin adjuster. A year later his parents joined him in the United States.

But Lothar wanted a business of his own where he could make violins. The family moved to Owatonna in 1967, choosing the community because it was a small city only 65 miles south of Minneapolis-St. Paul.

It is traditional for a violin maker to start out with a lifetime supply of wood for himself and his son. Lothar uses maple for the violin's back, side and neck, hazel-spruce for the top, ebony for the fingerboard.

When Lothar's parents came from Germany, they brought Carpathian mountain maple cut from a tree in 1900.

Lothar also has some older wood which has been in the family for 100 years. Wood used in violins must combine strength, beauty and acoustical quality.

Tools are important, too. Because a "machine doesn't have feelings," the work is all done by hand. Some of Lothar's chisels, knives and scrapers have been used in the family for generations.

The arch of the violin is carved. The only wood that is bent is that used for the sides. Hot animal glue is used to join the components. Filler, transparent varnish and three coats of clear varnish are applied and rubbed down. For proper vibration, the varnish must "float" atop the wood and remain flexible.

"A good violin maker must know something about physics and chemistry," the husky, graying luthier says.

To keep wood colors true, the work is done under natural light in a shop in Lothar's home.

Finally, the violin is finished. The instrument is fitted with strings and then adjusted. The testing, the breaking-in of the instrument's "voice," is done by Lothar's wife, Pat, a violin and viola teacher.

Meisel hasn't calculated the hours that go into creating a violin, but guesses he could make one in about a month if he didn't do any repairing, renovating or paper work. He's never had that opportunity. Instead, a customer ordering a Meisel violin must wait at least a year for delivery.

He evades telling what his violins sell for, except that they're "reasonably priced" for quality instruments.

New band arises from Lynyrd Skynyrd

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The Rossington Collins Band wants to be on top and this time the members want to notice that they're smelling the flowers.

"We want to be the best band in the world and we shall not be defeated," says guitarist Gary Rossington.

Guitarist Allen Collins says, "We were living a dream before and never knew it. I just want to take everything in that I missed before. It went by me too fast. The good times just slipped away. Now I want to grab hold of them, live them out to the fullest."

"I want everybody in the band to take everything in and live this dream, instead of letting it slip away."

"Just take a lot more in, enjoy what you can enjoy, instead of being afraid or bugged about being on the road. It is not so bad. There's more good times than bad. Everybody talks about the road like it's a bad way of life. I love it myself."

The Rossington Collins Band contains four members of Lynyrd Skynyrd — the two leaders, Billy Powell, keyboards, and Leon Wilkeson, bass.

Lynyrd Skynyrd gave its last performance Oct. 20, 1977, in Greenville, S.C. The group's plane crashed that night in Mississippi, killing lead singer Ronnie Van Zant, guitarist Steve Gaines, his sister Cassie, backup vocalist, the road manager and pilot. Everyone else in the band was injured.

Rossington and Collins got together about a year ago and thought they'd hire some backup musicians and front a band together. They had the name, their own last names, before they had the band.

They got together with Powell, Wilkeson and drummer Artimus Pyle from Skynyrd and played a few times. "We didn't want to try and make it off the old band and old name. It would be easy to do that. We wanted to do it ourselves again," says Collins, who bears scars on his left arm, which was broken in three places.

He says two bones in Wilkeson's arm which allow the arm to pivot at the elbow grew together so he couldn't move his arm side to side. "He had those bones removed. Now he has got it all back. I say he can play bass again. He'll set a bass on fire. It took a long time, but everybody is back in shape now."

However, two days before rehearsals started for the Rossington Collins Band, Pyle had a motorcycle accident and broke his leg in 12 places. Rossington says, "It looked like he couldn't play for a year, so he resigned."

He was replaced by Derek Hess. Guitarist Barry Harwood was added. Both of them, like the rest of the band, are natives of Jacksonville, Fla.

Rossington and Collins thought a long time about what to do for a lead vocalist and inevitable comparisons with Ronnie Van Zant. They heard backup singer Dale Krantz on the last 38 Special album, a Jacksonville band led by Ronnie Van Zant's brother, Donnie. Collins says, "On one song, she sort of steps out and wails a little bit; she sort of steals the show there."

Rossington says, "We thought we'd give her a try. An hour after we started, we were sure."

Miss Krantz was born in Angola, Ind., and has a degree in music education from Indiana University.

The band members thought they'd cut a few tracks to see how they sounded and in three weeks cut a whole album. "Anytime, Anyplace, Anywhere."

MCA Records brought it out in June and it has been No. 12 on the best-selling charts from last August into early September. The single, "Don't Misunderstand Me," was No. 58 at the same time.

Rossington and Collins thought about trying to make the music different from Lynyrd Skynyrd's music but decided to go ahead in the vein that came naturally to them, counting on new musicians and a belting girl singer to make some difference.

"We manage and produce and play," Rossington says of himself and Collins. "We've been in the business long enough to know how to book tours and not lose money, how not to get cheated out of money and how to produce our own albums. We know what we want. We want to do everything ourselves."

"We're the leaders, but on stage we don't try to upstage the others."

Collins says if the business work gets too heavy for them, they'll hire help. Rossington adds, "This has been the hardest time, starting and everything."

He says "People said we couldn't do it. They think two guitar players who used to have a rowdy image couldn't come out and do this and do it right and have the music please people."

The rowdy image comes, he says, from their origin as a bar band. "Ten years ago, where we were, it was a no-no to have long hair. We'd have to fight our way out of places sometimes. We'd be packing our equipment and here comes drunks wanting to fight. We got branded with that."

Rossington says that Lynyrd Skynyrd played New York four or five times before it was accepted. The Rossington Collins Band had an enthusiastic reception in its first appearance.

Collins says, "I can't say in words how good the last two and a half months has been. It is going good."

"We're hungrier than before. Because we've been there. Now we want to do it to even the score and make things right."

Family tradition of violin making goes back 300 years

By GALE TOLLIN
Associated Press Writer

OWATONNA, Minn. (AP) — Young Steven Meisel says he might decide to be a violin maker. He's thought some about being a policeman, but he figures that might require too much school.

If he takes up violin making, Steven will be carrying a 300-year tradition into its 10th generation.

But a vocational decision doesn't have to be made for a long time. Steven is only 9, a third-grader.

The youngster isn't the first of the Meisels to wonder about different work. Steve's father, Kurt Lothar Meisel, had thought as a boy that he'd like to be a forester. And Steve's grandfather, Kurt Oswald Meisel, now 76, had wanted to be an engineer.

But there's something about the luther craft that gets into your blood, says Lothar, 51, who goes by his middle name. It's a labor of love, he says, for people of sensitivity and pride.

"When you make a violin, it's not like any other violin," he says. "It's almost like a child of yours. There's potential in a fine violin, but it takes proper care to bring it out to the fullest."

Most of his time is given to repair and restoration of stringed instruments. Meisel has to steal time from that work to make about four violins a year. In his career, he has made 150 violins, 17 violas, one cello and one bass. He didn't enjoy making the bass. It was "too big, too awkward," Meisel felt like a carpenter building a dog house.

Meisel's father, Kurt Oswald, was a government employee in Germany, a teacher of violin making. Because moonlighting wasn't permitted, Kurt made only about 40 violins. He made his last one 10 years ago and eye problems recently forced him to cut back on repair work.

The Meisels know of no other family with such a long tradition line of violin makers. The tradition began with Johann Meisel, who lived from 1659 to 1713.

Kurt learned the craft from his father, worked as an assistant violin maker in Holland and taught violin making in a technical school in Germany from 1927 until the mid-1940s.

Lothar began his apprenticeship under his father, was an assistant violin maker in Germany and moved to Cleveland, Ohio, in 1953 to work as a violin adjuster. A year later his parents joined him in the United States.

But Lothar wanted a business of his own where he could make violins. The family moved to Owatonna in 1967, choosing the community because it was a small city only 65 miles south of Minneapolis-St. Paul.

It is traditional for a violin maker to start out with a lifetime supply of wood for himself and his son. Lothar uses maple for the violin's back, side and neck, hazel-spruce for the top, ebony for the fingerboard.

When Lothar's parents came from Germany, they brought Carpathian mountain maple cut from a tree in 1900.

Lothar also has some older wood which has been in the family for 100 years. Wood used in violins must combine strength, beauty and acoustical quality.

Tools are important, too. Because a "machine doesn't have feelings," the work is all done by hand. Some of Lothar's chisels, knives and scrapers have been used in the family for generations.

The arch of the violin is carved. The only wood that is bent is that used for the sides. Hot animal glue is used to join the components. Filler, transparent varnish and three coats of clear varnish are applied and rubbed down. For proper vibration, the varnish must "float" atop the wood and remain flexible.

"A good violin maker must know something about physics and chemistry," the husky, graying luthier says.

To keep wood colors true, the work is done under natural light in a shop in Lothar's home.

Finally, the violin is finished. The instrument is fitted with strings and then adjusted. The testing, the breaking-in of the instrument's "voice," is done by Lothar's wife, Pat, a violin and viola teacher.

Meisel hasn't calculated the hours that go into creating a violin, but guesses he could make one in about a month if he didn't do any repairing, renovating or paper work. He's never had that opportunity. Instead, a customer ordering a Meisel violin must wait at least a year for delivery.

He evades telling what his violins sell for, except that they're "reasonably priced" for quality instruments.

'Counselors' flawed

COUNSELORS-AT-LAW. By Jerome Weidman. Doubleday. 401 Pages. $12.95.

Jerome Weidman's new novel, "Counselors-at-Law," has much that is good in it. Unfortunately, the good material, packed in the middle of this big book, is severely hampered by a dull opening and a less-than-credible ending.

The novel deals with the goings-on at a big New York law firm with the cumbersome name of Isham, Truitt, Kelly, Shreve, Merz, Uchitel and Condome. It describes in fascinating detail the operations of the firm at its lowest and at its highest levels.

But to get to this material, the reader has to wade through a mass of dreary prose that tempts one to set the book aside. However, those who hang on and plod ahead will be rewarded as Weidman eventually comes to the absorbing meat of his story. They will be let down again in the book's closing sections but they will have had a good ride for a couple of hundred pages.

On the surface, the story deals with attorney Tom Lichine's being found asleep in his office at Isham, Truitt, when he is supposed to be in Alabama working on a murder case. This incident serves as a springboard for Weidman to leap off into a wide-ranging narrative on the power of lawyers, political corruption, and the effects of a moral big business on the social fabric of the nation.

It is when he is dealing with these subjects that Weidman shines and treats the reader to an entertaining and educating look at how the wheels of power turn and who does the turning.

Unfortunately, this display of verbal power flags, then gutters out at the end, and the reader is left to wonder what this novel might have been had a bit more care been taken.

Pampa Civic Ballet reschedules auditions

The time for auditions for the Pampa Civic Ballet has been changed from 2 p.m. to 1:30 p.m. Sunday. Auditions will be at the Beaux Arts Dance Studio. Area ballet dancers are invited to audition for the company. The first performance, a Christmas ballet, will be Dec. 13. Each dancer in the company must be taking a minimum of two classes a week from his or her regular ballet teacher. Neil Hess of Amarillo will be audition examiner. There will be an audition fee. Ages for the Junior Company are 10-13. Senior Company members are 13 years and older. Dancers chosen during the audition will be required to attend all company rehearsals.

Researcher duplicates stone tools

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — This day and age has no corner on technological strides that change the world and alter the environment — Stone Age man took steps that had much the same effect, a researcher says.

Experimental archeologist Bruce Huckell points out the Stone Age standard of living skyrocketed when man started making tools for hunting, butchering and skinning.

Though sharp stones occurring naturally were probably used to cut meat for some time before the first stone tool was manufactured, "sometimes, someone found out he could make them (stone tools)," Huckell says. "From then on, the sky's the limit. Whoever made that connection was the first one to really start something. It was the first major step in environmental modification."

In a sense, he says, it was the first step toward the industrial revolution. That's one of the reasons stone tools fascinate Huckell, one of the reasons he's practiced untold hours during the past 11 years learning how to make tools that seem indistinguishable from the best ones prehistoric man fashioned.

Using only other rocks, an elk antler and deer horn, Huckell works flint as deftly and precisely as a woodcarver cutting an intricate pattern in walnut.

What happens when he strikes the flint is not haphazard. He can tell you exactly how the stone will flake before he delivers the blow.

Using only his hands, a piece of flint, some sandstone for sandpaper and a couple of antlers, he can produce projectiles and cutting tools that seem as good as anything that comes from the steel mill.

Some experimental archeologists are also spending weeks living off the land, putting together everything they need to survive on an aboriginal level.

Huckell explained that experimental archeology provided another way for scientists to peer through the chinks of time into the past. Traditionally, excavation of sites and study of people currently living at the aboriginal level have been the two sources of information available to archeologists, he said.

By actually working with the tools, archeologists get a better understanding of the function, changes and wear in tools.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

PAMPA NEWS Friday, September 26, 1980 9

DEAR ABBY: Charles and I met on a blind date, and we hit it off beautifully. I'm 36, divorced and not hard up for dates. Charles is 40, a lawyer with a terrific personality. He claimed he was a great cook, and invited me to his apartment for a gourmet dinner.

When I arrived at his tastefully furnished bachelor high-rise, he greeted me warmly and handed me a cocktail. Then his phone rang. I'm sure it was a woman. He went into another room to talk privately and, Abby, he left me alone for 30 minutes! When he returned he didn't even apologize! I did my best to hide my anger.

We resumed our conversation — then his buzzer rang. (Someone was calling from the lobby.) He said, "No, don't come up. I'll be right down." Then he said to me, "Excuse me, I'll only be a minute." After sitting alone for another 30 minutes, I decided I had had enough, so I left. When I reached the lobby, I saw my "host" engrossed in a very animated conversation with a young woman. I simply said, "Goodbye, Charles, I am leaving." He grabbed my arm and held me while he told the other woman to "go home, and please don't do anything foolish."

Then he asked me to please come upstairs with him so he could explain everything. I told him there was nothing to explain, his rudeness was inexcusable, and I never wanted to see him again. (His response was unprintable.) Abby, was I justified for leaving as I did? And how would you have handled it?

MANHATTAN

DEAR MANHATTAN: You hung around longer than I would have. I'd have left when my host became a "ghost" for 30 minutes, and then offered no apology.

DEAR ABBY: How long should a woman stay with a man who says he is not ready for marriage? I'm 34, single, successful and sophisticated. Dave (not his real name) is 32, sweet and shy. We've dated steadily for seven months, and I would like to get married. Dave is looking for "fireworks" — which our relationship lacks, but they may come later. If they don't, it wouldn't bother me because I think what we have is better and more lasting than fireworks.

We really do care for each other, but I'm terrified of wasting time.

What do you think? Should I set a time limit?

BIOLOGY IS DESTINY

DEAR BIOLOGY: If it's fireworks he wants, give it until the 4th of July.

DEAR ABBY: Five months ago my wife began studying karate at a women's martial arts center, and shortly thereafter she bought some weights to lift at home.

At first I found it rather amusing, and when she would practice her karate on me, I could still easily pin her shoulders to the floor. Lately, however, her karate kicks and punches have begun to really hurt, and last week she finally was able to beat me up!

At first I thought it was just luck, but since then, she's succeeded in pinning me down five times in a row, each time with more ease and a lot more bruises for me.

Our sex life remains exciting, but do you think a marriage can last if the wife is physically stronger than her husband and can beat him up?

BRUISED HUSBAND

DEAR BRUISED: Why not? It would be a sad state of (marital) affairs if the durability of a marriage depended on the physical strength of either party. Make love, not war!

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Flats are back

NEW YORK (AP) — Tired of teetering on high heels? It's time to come down to earth because flats are back for fall in bright colors, new textures and jazzed-up styles, according to The Footwear Council.

Footwear trends of the season reflect a return to a classic look, the Council reports. Loafers, moccasins, oxfords and simple pumps dominate fall's well-heeled scene.

These low-heeled shoes combined with fashion's higher hemlines mean that more leg will be showing. Thus, "leg-dressing" has become an important factor in fall's fashion silhouette. Although sheer stockings may have been the perfect complement to mid-length skirts and high heels, fall's new lower-heel and higher-hemline fashions demand a change, the Council points out.

To achieve the most flattering look, it's best to wear flats with textured, patterned and opaque stockings, socks and leg warmers. This gives the legs new interest and decreases the visual distance from heel to hem.

The Footwear Council offers the following tips to add a fresh dimension to your own autumn outfits:

— Start your fall wardrobe from the bottom up. Select shoes with an eye towards fashion, comfort, and quality. Picks of the season include timeless, versatile styles to mix and match with a number of outfits.

— Coordinate hosiery with shoes. For example, brown opaque stockings worn with low-heeled brown shoes give legs a long, clean line.

— Try wearing two different types of leg coverings at once — a jazzy pair of argyles over ribbed, solid-color tights will look super with the new oxfords. Ankle socks work well with patterned or opaque stockings when matched with pumps.

— Select colors and patterns that can be worn in a variety of combinations or alone. Adopt a color family — such as browns, greens and grays — for complete head-to-toe dressing, incorporating footwear, hosiery and major fashion pieces. Then, accent with complementary touches — a belt, scarf or ribbon.

— Take along both shoes and hose when choosing separates. The right proportions and balance of color and texture are more important than ever this year. The suit you try on in the dressing room bare-legged will look different when paired with the right shoes and leg coverings.

— Autumn is the perfect time of year to take long walks and enjoy nature's changing colors," notes Andrea Marie Rosen, fashion director for The Footwear Council. "With flats back in fashion, strolls will not only provide scenery beautiful to behold, but will be a delight to your feet as well."

— And flats, paired with the proper leg dressing, will add a whole new dimension to fall's colorful panorama.

Management expert advises women

By JOY STILEY

AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — When Diana Silcox set up her office systems business seven years ago, she found she was working 15 to 18 hours a day. Now, not only has she learned to use her own time more efficiently but she is helping others do the same.

"Though I was an organized individual, I had no time for myself and I decided to find out what time management was all about," she recalled in an interview. "I found I was doing everything and more but not making effective use of my time."

As she began learning more about it and successfully applying the principles to her own life, she began to advise her clients on time management, speak about it before business organizations, run workshops and seminars. Eventually she became a professional time management consultant, specializing in women's needs.

"For instance, a working mother's life is different from a working father's life," she explains. "There's a psychological and cultural difference, and I'm concerned with breaking those cultural patterns. We try to become super-women because that's how we were trained."

Now Ms. Silcox, 37, has written a book with Mary Ellen Moore, "Woman Time: Personal Time Management for Women Only!" For it she interviewed 30 women whose problems and solutions she presents.

"I wanted to use real people, not just espouse theory," she says. "I wanted it to be a book women can relate to, to reinforce them — 'hey, I'm doing it right' or reassure them — 'hey, I'm not alone; she has the same problem and has overcome it.'"

"I'm single. I have friends who have families," she continues. "Our activities may differ but the problems remain the same. We all as women have a tendency to do everything. We are the doers, the tenders, the housekeepers."

She says when men, who have always had support systems — mothers, wives, girlfriends — are in a time bind they are willing to buy time for themselves, paying for services, products, outside help. But women don't realize their time is worth money.

A single man will automatically take his laundry out to be done, she points out, but "we see the single woman in the laundry room on Saturday, doing her laundry. The woman says 'What's all this?'"

She can't — and shouldn't — insists Ms. Silcox, who emphasizes that "priority" is the key word in time management, deciding what is important and acting on it.

The first step, she says, is to find out how you are spending your time by keeping a daily log for a week, "the most difficult and boring part. You think you know how you're spending time but when you see it written in little blocks you find you have spent a great deal of time on unimportant details and didn't do the one or two projects that absolutely had to be done."

"So," she continues, "you develop a new strategy. Each day decide what you want to do and write a 'to do' list so you'll have something in front of you at all times."

"Decide what has to be done and start with that. Otherwise the tendency is to do the things that just take two or three minutes first, when what really needs doing may be at the bottom of the list."

Be realistic as to how long things take, she warns. Leave space for things that might go wrong — interruptions, crises, things that you don't expect. If everything goes right the reward is extra time for yourself.

"But," she adds, "always include time for yourself. The tendency for women is to have time for their husbands, time for their children, time for their boss, time for their employees, but never time for themselves."

Along with establishing priorities, Ms. Silcox says learning

The once-typical American family — a husband in the labor force, a wife at home and their children — is no longer the status quo. "A scant 15 percent of all families adhere to this traditional model," according to a Family Circle magazine article, "The New American Families."

Today's American family is more likely to be either a single living alone, a divorced parent with one or more children, a couple who have decided not to have children, or a middle-aged couple who have raised their children and are facing a second life-style together as an "empty nester" family unit.

More working women (over half of all women now work), the staggering divorce rate, the declining birthrate and a longer life expectancy are among the causes mentioned in the article as changing the American family's lifestyle.

Children 'shadow' to get view of work

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Mark Santa Cruz thought he wanted to be a priest, and he found out he might be right. Guillermo Jarillo thought he wanted to be a mechanic — and found out he might be wrong.

They were among about 165 Tucson High School students who spent at least one day this year as "shadows" — working alongside someone in a career to gain first-hand experience of the working world.

Like Santa Cruz, some students found their career aspirations cemented by their experience. Others, such as Jarillo, decided they should be looking elsewhere.

The basic idea was to enable them to discover some of the realities of their choices and the schooling and preparation necessary to achieve them.

Before being "shadows," they might have been considerably less realistic, sponsors said.

"They might be getting straight F's in school and talk about being psychiatrists when they grow up. Or lawyers, doctors, rock singers — those kinds of things," says Rosemary Tindall of Pima County Developmental Career Guidance, one of the project's sponsors.

Jarillo says he sees mechanics as interesting — "a challenge to figure out what's wrong, why the machine doesn't work. I have a real curiosity to find it out, and I don't stop until I do."

The 16-year-old junior helped a friend rebuild an automobile engine last summer, so when he had the opportunity to shadow someone, he chose a trailer mechanic.

But Jarillo didn't like what he saw. "It seemed a little boring. I want something more challenging," he said. So then he spent a day with Gates Learjet mechanic Rick Wright, who concluded the shadowing adventure with a trip to Marana in a rented private plane.

"He (Wright) gave me a tour of the plant and then told me how to get a job there. I can either go to college for four years and then take three tests to get a license, or I can get training in the Air Force," Jarillo explained.

"Right now, I'm thinking of going into the Air Force after high school. Aviation mechanics get better pay than regular mechanics. And what I've heard, a lot of jobs are opening for aviation mechanics," the student added.

Sometimes the shadowing experiences made students more aware of the difficult decisions they must make. Bethany Palmer, 18 and a graduating senior, spent a day with cosmetologist Doretta Hodge. "At first I wanted to be a beautician. Now I'm looking at being a P. E. (physical education) teacher. I don't know which to choose," she said.

Aspiring lawyer Ricky Copeland spent an afternoon with practicing lawyer Richard Davis. "He told me that being a lawyer is nothing like what you see on TV," the 16-year-old junior said. "It's not like Perry Mason. It was basically what I expected, though. It fascinated me."

Santa Cruz, 17 and a graduating senior, said counselors had tried to discourage his interest in becoming a priest, so he was suspicious when he entered the shadowing program.

But Santa Cruz accompanied Father Vicente Lopez to Parker one Saturday, where Lopez celebrated a Mass in Spanish. And he served as an altar boy for Father Patrick Ott at St. Ambrose Catholic Church and Father Robert J. Brauer at St. Augustine's Cathedral.

KC sausage sales to benefit the deaf

Proceeds from a Polish sausage sale to be conducted by Council 2767, Knights of Columbus this weekend will be used by the Texas State Council Knights of Columbus Deaf Community Program to benefit the hearing-impaired. A 1980 goal of $200,000 has been established for the year.

The deaf program has been one of the top projects of the Knights of Columbus for several years, according to a local Council spokesman.

Polish sausage will be available at the Knights of Columbus Hall, located at Ward and Buckler Streets in Pampa from noon until 7 p.m. Saturday and again Sunday from 1 p.m. until 6 p.m.

Dr. John Stewart to speak

Dr. John Stewart, Professor of Biblical Studies at Texas Christian University will speak at the First Christian Church 18th and Nelson Street, at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 27 and Sunday evening at 7:30 p.m. he will also be speaking at the Morning Worship Hour at 10:50 a.m. Sunday.

He is a man of wide and varied experiences and one of the most sought after speakers in the denomination.

Dr. Stewart has attended Texas Christian University in 1956 as Assistant Professor of Old Testament and since 1967 has been the Associate Professor of Old Testament. He has traveled to: Scotland, England, France, Belgium, Holland, Luxemburg, Germany, Israel and Greece.

The theme of his messages will be "Church Loyalty." The messages will not be denominational in context.

Any members of any church would be blessed by hearing him.

The First Christian Church will have a reception to follow the evening meetings for everyone to become better acquainted with Dr. Stewart.

All are invited to the First Christian Church to hear Dr. Stewart.

Pampa minister selected for Baptist Convention

The 95th session of the Baptist General Convention of Texas will meet in Houston on Oct. 28-30 to deal with matters that will affect two million Texas Baptists and other Texans.

Claude Cone, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Pampa, has been selected to serve on the Nominating Committee of the Texas Baptist Convention.

Cone, a member of the Baptist General Convention Executive Board, will nominate candidates for membership on the standing committees of the board which include the Administrative Committee, the Business and Audit Committee, the Christian Life Commission, the State Missions Commission and the Public Relations Advisory Committee.

Cone is one of 15 persons who are selected to serve on the committee for one year.

"We Believe—Therefore We Speak" is the theme of the convention which will focus on the achievement of "Bible Mission Thrust," a Southern Baptist Convention campaign to allow every person on earth the opportunity to hear the gospel by the year 2000.

A major facet of the thrust will be consideration of a record proposed $37.4 million Cooperative Program budget for Texas Baptists' share of the worldwide mission efforts of 13 million Southern Baptists.

An "On to Houston" campaign is being conducted to assemble 6,000 messengers to deal with a wide range of issues that might include problems of the local church and convention agencies and institutions.

Preceding the convention will be the annual meetings of Woman's Missionary Union and Texas Baptist Men on Oct. 27-28.

JANIE WHITE & SON — LIGHT

Janie White and Son - Light will be ministering in song and in the word Monday, Sept. 29, and Wednesday, Oct. 1, at 7:30 p.m. in the Community Christian Center 801 E. Campbell.

Pastor Van Brouwer cordially invites the public to attend and admission is free.

Religion roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 400 religious leaders, most of them black clergy, have issued an appeal to presidential candidates to take up minority concerns, particularly "America's deepening urban crisis."

The gathering was the first annual meeting of Partners in Ecumenism, a black-led project of the National Council of Churches, to strengthen ties between black and white churches and focus energies on fair housing, health care and employment.

Participants came from 21 denominations, mostly Protestant, but also including Roman Catholicism and Eastern Orthodoxy.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Synagogue Council of America has urged U.S. rabbis and their congregations to flood CBS-TV with protests against the scheduled Sept. 30 program, "Playing for Time," starring Vanessa Redgrave.

The complaint was not against the program itself, dealing with a Jewish heroine of the Nazi persecution of Jews, but at Ms. Redgrave, characterized as a sympathizer and supporter of the anti-Israel Palestine Liberation Organization.

"CBS's moral insensitivity in casting Vanessa Redgrave as Fania Fenelon, Jewish heroine of the Holocaust, demands a strong, united Jewish and Christian, powerful protest," said Rabbi Bernard J. Mandelbaum, executive officer of the council.

The council, representing all three wings of Judaism, Conservative, Orthodox and Reform, sent its call to about 2,500 rabbis, also urging a boycott of the program and of CBS generally.

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Southern Baptist officials report that a majority of delegates at a convention of Italian Baptists signed a statement accusing President Carter of pursuing a foreign policy "contrary to the gospel of Christ."

The statement criticized Carter, also a Baptist, for plans to build the cruise missile and his call for America's European allies to increase military spending. Italy has about 8,000 Baptists.

NEW YORK (AP) — The new general secretary of the Church of South India, formed in 1947 and the first major merger of Protestant bodies, says it now is in a union talks with the Church of North India and other groups to become the Church of India.

"Thou wilt shew me the path of life:
in thy presence is fulness of joy..."

PSALM 16-11

HERE IS THE PATH

"I DON'T SEE ANYTHING"

THERE IS ONLY ONE WAY TO SEE THROUGH A CAMERA

Did you ever try to look through a camera from the front side? Yes, most of us have... out of curiosity... but we would not even consider trying to take a picture in such a manner. There are many though, who go through life never giving themselves a chance to really see God. In order to see God, one must look at him through faith. Attend church regularly, seek God where others can help direct you in your search for God.

"So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

McCarthy book is uneven

DAYS AND NIGHTS AT COSTELLO'S. By Joe McCarthy. Little, Brown. 281 Pages. $12.95. This last book by Joe McCarthy is a hodgepodge of 10 personal pieces in which the writer tells of some of the things that delighted him during his life and some that did not.

The writing is uneven, although mostly good, and the subjects discussed are usually of interest although McCarthy presses a bit too hard on occasion.

This contrast may be seen quite sharply in the items titled "Costello's" and "Shor's" respectively. Each deals with a noted bar and the men who ran them. But in the first, McCarthy goes on at overly great length about the noted writers who would take a drink at Costello's and much of what he has to say about them is of little interest.

In "Shor's," however, the thrust of the story lies in telling about Toots Shor while the bar he ran serves as background for that larger-than-life man. The anecdotes related in Shor's, unlike many of those told in the companion piece, Kennedy's, bears a similar light touch. He talks of the members of that famous family with respectful familiarity.

Museum exhibits Nigerian art treasures

By JOAN BRUNSKILL
NEW YORK (AP) — "Treasures of Ancient Nigeria," the exhibition now at the Metropolitan Museum of Art here, is rich fare for both eye and mind. The collection is simply stunning to look at, while its background is an intriguing part of art history.

There are about 100 objects in the exhibition, representing seven cultures spanning more than 2,000 years. They are carried out in terracotta, bronzes of various copper alloys, ivory and stone, in distinctive styles, displaying highly refined workmanship.

The cumulative effect is of delightfully surprising variety. There are straightforward representational works, as well as more abstract designs, with one single theme outstanding: the treatments of the human head or bust, in lively, elegant interpretations rendered with sophisticated techniques.

The novelty of the collection lies in several factors. It has been rare for this regional African art, in these materials and of such antiquity, to be recovered and collected, let alone exhibited far away from its home ground. Wooden sculptures not much more than a century old have often represented for Westerners the major strength of African art.

These Nigerian works from ancient traditions have in most cases been excavated only in the past 40 years or so. They all come from African museums — this is the first time the Nigerian government has made available a major loan of some of its greatest art treasures, and it is immediately evident that the concepts and skills on display compare with those of accepted masterpieces from other cultures and times long revered in the West.

The earliest pieces in the exhibition are the Nok terracottas, dating from about 500 B.C. to A.D. 200. They are mostly heads and small figures. The warmth of tone and the rough, glinting textures of the terracotta are a rich complement to the strength of the designs and their expressiveness.

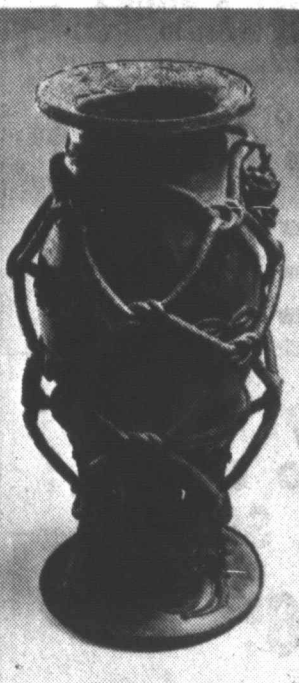

To move from this group to the Igbo-Ukwu bronzes of the 9th-10th centuries is an exhilarating leap. These are vessels and ornaments, encrusted with patina, profusely and delicately decorated with complex repeating patterns, often of abstract design although also incorporating animal forms.

The Ife section contains a remarkable series of noble heads from the 12th to the 15th centuries, with outstanding poise and grace in every line, from every angle. Some are in smooth, burnished zinc brass or copper, some in well-preserved terracotta, all finely worked with sensitive molding.

The group of 15th-century Owo terracottas consists of more heads, of engaging individuality, and fragments of sculptures incorporating animal and plant motifs, probably of religious significance.

Benin bronzes are among the few Nigerian works of art to have won earlier appreciation outside Africa. A selection here is of strong quality and impressive variety — heads, plaques, vessels, and perhaps the most eye-catching works in the show: a large pair of magnificent bronze leopards, marvelously detailed, originally altar water vessels.

The Benin group, from the 15th-17th centuries, include intricate ivory cuff and a lidded bowl of ivory and brass, both finely carved.

late-16th-century Benin bronze; head said to represent the usurper Lajuwá, 12th- to 15th-century Ife terracotta; roped pot on a stand, 9th- to 10th-century Igbo-Ukwu bronze.

On display also are some legendary Tsoede bronzes from the 14th century, a pair of enigmatic Esie soapstone sculptures dating from some time before 1850, and a large stone Ikrom monolith of undetermined date and mysterious significance.

Theories about their origins, and interpretations of these Nigerian art works are often still tentative because so many of them have only recently come to light, and archeologists and art historians are pursuing research in almost unknown areas.

As the guest curator of the exhibition, Dr. Ekpo Eyo, director of the Nigerian National Museum, says, "Our field is still very young and there are many gray areas that only more work can throw light upon." So it is of special interest to have available this sampling of rare and beautiful objects, and to share the speculation about their still obscure provenance and meaning.

The exhibition was organized by the Detroit Institute of Arts, where it was first shown. It will be at the Metropolitan through Oct. 26.

Republicans claim defense decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Republican trio from the Senate Armed Services Committee claims the combat readiness of the nation's armed forces has declined at an alarming rate during the Carter administration.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said Thursday he was appalled by the information the group gathered in visits to major military bases last week, including his own trip to Fort Hood in Texas.

"Unfortunately, President Carter has failed to grasp the fundamental axiom that the best guarantee that you will never have to use force — the best guarantee of peace — is for your adversaries to be certain that our force is better than theirs," Tower said at a news conference. "Today, unfortunately, that certainty no longer exists."

He said the trips were prompted by news reports that six of ten Army divisions are not ready for combat.

Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, visited Fort Riley in Kansas and Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, went to Fort Campbell in Kentucky.

Tower said the trips demonstrated that serious problems exist in all three measurements of combat readiness — troops, material and training.

The charges echoed Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan's statements earlier this week in Texas that declining military strength during the Carter administration left the president no choice but to remain neutral in the conflict between Iran and Iraq.

Tower said the conflict was caused partially by a vacuum of leadership in the area, a result of the failure of Carter's foreign policy.

"What is clear here is the decline of American military strength has undermined American political influence," he said, adding that a Reagan administration would emphasize peace through preparedness.

The Texas senator said that among the group's findings during its visits last week were a division with less than 55 percent of the required non-commissioned officers and a division's artillery with less than the adequate number of howitzers.

Tower declined to locate the problems to specific bases.

"The most striking problem we observed is a severe shortage of manpower, and specifically, the grossly depleted ranks of our career force — our non-commissioned officers and petty officers," he said.

Tower said the main reasons are inadequate pay and benefits and a serious decline in morale caused by a perception that no one outside the military cares.

"A command sergeant major with over 24 years of service who is responsible for the leadership of over 7,000 troops pointed out that his 19-year-old son made about the same wage working at the Dairy Queen," he said.

Cohen said the president has not exerted forceful leadership to stem the departure of career officers.

Residents claim illness following Titan II mishap

GUY, Ark. (AP) — A fog that looked like a "light snow" blew into this tiny community shortly after a Titan II missile exploded five miles away last week, and officials say about two dozen residents, including the mayor, have been sick ever since.

The residents are complaining of nausea, burning sensations in their noses, throats and lungs, and dry, salty lips, although none apparently has become ill enough to be hospitalized.

Benny Mercer, mayor of the community of 200, puts the blame squarely on the toxic fumes that seeped from the silo.

Lt. Gen. Lloyd R. Leavitt, vice commander of the Strategic Air Command, said Wednesday that Air Force calculations indicated toxic fumes had not reached Guy and in fact had not gone more than one mile from the silo.

But Mercer said Thursday that the fog, which arrived about an hour after the explosion, melted within 15 minutes and the Air Force did not take measurements soon enough to detect it.

The silo blew up last Friday after a wrench socket dropped by a workman ruptured a missile fuel tank. One person was killed and 21 were injured. The warhead from the missile was ejected from the silo and was later taken to a weapons plant in Amarillo, Texas, to be analyzed or disassembled.

Mercer said he was awake early Friday because he had been alerted to the explosion by a firefighter and was conferring with other community leaders on whether to order an evacuation.

Before the town was evacuated, Mercer said, the fumes started to roll in.

"A little after 4 a.m., it started moving in here like fog," he recalled. "We could see ash falling, little particles. In the mercury lights, it really showed up, like a light snow. You could step out in it, breathe it, and it would just burn your nose plumb to your lungs."

Mercer said he and his wife, Daisy, 36, and two of his children stepped out into the fog and came down with symptoms that afternoon. Two other children did not get in the fog and aren't sick, he said.

"I'm still nauseated," he said. "The lung congestion seems a little better, but it comes and goes. At times I can breathe fairly well, at times not so well."

Richard A. Hinkle, an area physician, said eight or nine people from Guy had come to him with the symptoms.

"The wind apparently carried it in a narrow strip from the missile site up to and through a strip of Guy," Hinkle said. "As far as I can recall — I know where most of them live — I believe it could be plotted out as a pattern with the wind flow."

"Don't get me wrong," he said. "The people I saw were not all that sick. Of course, I haven't seen most of them since they first came to me. I'm presuming they're getting better. And I don't know what effects it might have later on."

Mercer said that about two dozen people had the symptoms and "more are turning up all the time."

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

Sept. 27, 1980

This coming year could be lucky for you, but you'll have to take care that there are no strings attached to your good fortune. You won't be disappointed if you expect only what you're entitled to.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you try first and last, let the one with whom you share an interest proceed as he or she feels is best. This person is lucky for you. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Sometimes you can resist change to the point where you block out something good that's trying to happen. This could be the case today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be extra careful in working with tools or materials you are not familiar with. There's someone you can turn to for advice if you're not too proud to ask.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) By jumping to conclusions, unnecessary discussion with a friend could occur today. Have a long talk so that you understand each other before you make a judgment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Rash behavior over something you don't like could lead to your own undoing today. See what the others think before making changes.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Lack of a schedule or planning would get things off to a slow start for you today. Don't fret. Someone who knows what to do will rescue you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your luck lies in doing things for your self today. Others may be too careless with your possessions and cost you more than their help is worth.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Though you may encounter a number of setbacks or changes in plans today, social activities you have scheduled should still turn out to be great.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Mishaps could occur today if you attempt to do too many things or try to do them hastily. Fortunately a member of your family will come to your rescue.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Keep a flexible attitude today regarding your social hopes. Initial plans may not turn out to be the fun you thought, but things that take their place will.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It may at first appear as if everything is working against you today, but this problem is short-lived. Conditions will suddenly shift in your favor.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Action without thinking could get you in a heap of trouble today, while taking the time to figure things out right will do just the opposite.

Two sentenced in conspiracy

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston attorney and an insurance adjuster received probation sentences in an alleged conspiracy to collect on false worker's compensation claims.

Attorney Donald A. Hecker, 35, pleaded no contest Thursday to a theft charge. He was given 10 years probation and fined $5,000 by State District Judge Jimmy James.

Hecker's license to practice law also was revoked and will be held by the court during his probation.

William Alfred Reed, an insurance adjuster with Employers Insurance of Wausau, pleaded guilty to a theft charge. James sentenced Reed to five years probation and ordered him to make $970 restitution.

The two men were among nine people indicted earlier this year on charges of participating in the alleged scheme that netted as much as $1 million from false insurance claims, said Assistant District Attorney Bill Eggleston.

Eggleston said those accused would take jobs, fake an accident, have a doctor confirm the "injury," and collect between $5,000 and $25,000 from the employer's insurance policy.

Judge defends position in business

AUSTIN (AP) — Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski says Texas would "have only paupers" on the bench if State Supreme Court candidate C.L. Ray's view of judicial wealth prevailed.

Jaworski, two retired Texas Supreme Court justices and a retired law school dean defended Justice Will Garwood on Thursday against criticism by Ray, Garwood's Democratic opponent in the Nov. 4 election.

Garwood, the only Republican on the court, was appointed 10 months ago and is running to keep the job.

Ray, an associate justice of the Texas court of civil appeals, says Garwood should sell his corporate stocks or get out of the race.

Ray contends Garwood's extensive holdings will involve him in repeated conflicts of interests or require him to disqualify himself so often he would be a part-time judge.

"There has been some bit of demagoguery exercised here. ... I am shocked. I am amazed that charges of this kind were made," Jaworski said at a news conference.

Also speaking were retired Dean Page Keeton of the University of Texas Law School and retired Justices Robert W. Calvert and Ruel Walker.

Calvert said Garwood has had to disqualify himself from only 11 out of 802 cases because of possible conflicts of interests.

Reserve Board action could hike loan rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — The interest rates Americans pay for various types of loans are expected to rise in the wake of the decision by the Federal Reserve Board to hike its key bank lending rate from 10 percent to 11 percent.

The action Thursday by the seven-member board also raises the likelihood that the nation's recovery from the current recession will be slowed.

Spokesmen for both the housing and auto industries have warned that a new increase in interest rates could cause a premature end to the improvement in sales in those two industries.

A statement by the board said the action was "part of the continuing policy of the Federal Reserve to discourage excessive growth" of the nation's money supply.

Because most economists believe an excessive growth of the money supply contributes to inflation by putting more money in the hands of consumers and businesses, the board obviously felt it had to act. Higher interest rates discourage borrowing, and thus slow the growth in the money supply.

Interest rates have generally been on the rise in recent weeks, and Thursday's action by the board appeared likely to continue the trend. Several major banks increased their prime lending rate last week to 12.5 percent, the highest level since mid-June, although still well below the April peak of 20 percent.

Home mortgages also have been edging up in recent weeks. The government increased the allowable rates for mortgages backed by the Veterans Administration and the Federal Housing Administration to 13 percent on Monday. In California, home mortgage rates of 14 percent are common and are spreading through the rest of the nation.

It was the first time since March that the board has raised the prime discount rate, which is the amount of interest charged on loans from the federal reserve to the nation's bank.

The last change in the federal discount rate came July 28, when it was lowered from 11 percent to 10 percent. That was during a period when interest rates were generally falling.

But with a number of key indicators showing that the current recession is apparently drawing to a close, the nation's money supply has been growing at an exceptionally rapid annual rate of more than 12 percent, well above the board's target for a growth of 7 percent in the current year.

A full percentage point increase in the discount rate is an indication that the board means business, as changes in the discount rate are usually only a quarter or a half a point.

Threshers drop ninth-grade contest

Amarillo Bonham scored a fourth-quarter touchdown to break a deadlock and defeat the Pampa Threshers, 14-8, in a ninth-grade football game Thursday afternoon at Harvester Stadium.

With the score tied at 8-all, Kelly Calvin intercepted Pampa quarterback Deven Cross's pass on the Threshers' 16 to set up the winning TD. Two plays later, Carl Espie went over from the 16 for the deciding score.

Bonham opened the scoring on Calvin's 10-yard pass to Kyle Carter in the second quarter. Calvin passed again to Carter for the conversion to make it 8-0.

Pampa went on a 73-yard, 16-play march in the third quarter with Dennis Kuempel taking a pitch from Cross and scoring on a three-yard end sweep. Cross passed to Marty Cross for the extra points to tie things at 8-all.

"Our kids played a lot better this week," Pampa coach Dick Crockett said. "We played one of the best teams in Amarillo. We just came up short."

Kuempel was Pampa's top rusher with 82 yards on 18 carries. Danny Sebastian added 38 yards on 10 steps.

Cross completed six of 15 passes for 75 yards, but threw two interceptions. David Fatheree snared two passes for 33 yards.

Cross intercepted a pass himself from his defensive safety position while Kurt Pounds recovered a pair of fumbles.

Pampa is now 1-2 for the season. "This season is not over yet," Crockett said. "We have one more non-conference game. Then we start district."

Harvesters, Bulldogs resume intense rivalry tonight

"I don't worry about our men getting ready for Pampa. We've been thinking about them all summer."

Quote from Borger head coach Butch Henderson during two-a-day workouts.

When Pampa head coach Larry Gilbert taped that bold-face sign over the dressing room door, it was to remind his Harvesters that won-lost records can be tossed into a locker and forgot about when Pampa and Borger clash in a tense football rivalry that has endured for almost 50 years.

"Records don't mean a thing when Pampa and Borger play," Gilbert said. "Borger is always fired up when they play us."

Assistant coach Ricky Palmer agreed.

"This is the biggest game for Borger," he said. "They've been preparing for us since last year."

Pampa blanked Borger, 26-0, a year ago.

While Pampa is unbeaten

after three outings, Borger has won only one of two contests. The Bulldogs fell to Hereford, 28-7, last week.

Although the Harvesters scored a 17-10 decision over highly-regarded Lawton High (Okla.) last week, Gilbert is hoping his team can improve offensively.

"We made some little errors that can add up to big ones if it's not corrected," Gilbert said. "Our blocking was there, but our backs just didn't quite hit the seam the way they should have. However, we got it into the end zone when we had to and that's what counts."

Gilbert said senior halfback Arthur Williams, who led Pampa rushers with 40 yards on 12 carries, enjoyed a good night.

"It was one of Arthur's better games," Gilbert said. "Several times he had to be what we call b.y.o.b. (be your own blocker) when he was carrying the ball. Still, I felt like we battled them on even terms on offense. Defensively, we had a slight edge."

Borger opened with a 21-12 win over Perryton, then lost to Vernon, 21-19. Last week the Bulldogs had problems moving the ball against Hereford's huge defensive line.

Listed below are the probable lineups for both clubs.

Pampa Harvesters

Offense—Cavin Coleman at tight end; Steve McDougall at split end; Gwinn Greenwood and Pat Langford at guards; Ted Hutto and Mike Graham at tackles; Billy Ward at center; Sam Edwards at quarterback; Arthur Williams and Bobby Dorsey at halfbacks; Leroy Kuhn at fullback.

Defense—Harold Landers at noseguard; Robbie Leffel and John Schilling at linebackers; Ward and Ruben Ambroz at tackles; Clifford Anderson and James Borchardt at ends; Kuhn and Dorsey at cornerbacks; Andy Richardson or McDougall at weak safety; Clay Coffee at strong safety.

Borger Bulldogs

Defense—Joey Haddox and Mike Plumley at ends; Raswell and Smith at tackles; Tod Elrod at noseguard; Chris Ray and Danny Hill at linebackers; Blake Prewitt and Doug Washburn at cornerbacks; Leniel Forsythe at rover; Forrest at safety.

Rowdiness at football games on the increase

Elementary and middle school youngsters are becoming a discipline problem at Harvester football games, according to Pampa High Athletic Director Loyd Waters.

"It has become very difficult for school officials at the games to control the youngsters," Waters said. As a result some kids have been hurt, involved in fights, and in general disrupted the evening and enjoyment of others that are there to watch the game."

Waters urged parents to make their children sit in the designated stadium and not run up and down the stadium steps.

"Parents of students that continue to create a problem will be contacted to assist with their youngsters in the future," Waters added. "It is hoped that parents and students will cooperate in this matter. We don't want to be unreasonable with the kids, but most of all we are concerned about their safety."

Aggie cleared of wrongdoing

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — A Texas A&M football player suspended from the Aggie team Tuesday was reinstated after he argued the "drugs" found in his room were pills prescribed by a team doctor.

Sophomore defensive back Darrell Adams of Houston was cleared by an A&M disciplinary hearing board Thursday.

"Being cleared by the committee does not mean a player is automatically back on the team, but we called (head coach Tom) Wilson's office, and he said he would reinstate Adams because there's essentially no accusations against him any longer," an A&M spokesman said.

The board said its decision on the two other players suspended — senior defensive back Elroy Steen of Gonzales and junior linebacker Cal Peveto of Vidor — would be announced Friday.

Peveto and Steen would have until Tuesday to appeal the decision and any punishment by the board. The appeal would be heard by a university disciplinary appeals panel made up of four faculty members and three students.

Dr. H. Dwayne Lagan, the team physician, confirmed he prescribed heart medicine and nerve pills for Adams during the summer and said neither drug is harmful or illegal.

"They took the wrong action against me," Adams said Wednesday. "They can tell the pills had the doctor's name on it."

Adams apparently also was reported to have some marijuana "roach clips." He said the objects were "things" he got in a workshop for his industrial education major.

Steen was arrested Tuesday afternoon and charged with possession of a controlled substance after university police told him they had found marijuana in the tape deck of his car. Wilson said drugs were found in Peveto's room.

Adams said Peveto told him a single "black molly," an amphetamine, was found in Peveto's room. His teammate was going to use it for a 4-hour drive home, Adams said.

Wilson announced the suspensions Wednesday afternoon for "disciplinary violations," but Adams and Peveto claimed they were being made scapegoats for the Aggies' poor start this season. The team lost to Georgia, 23-20, and Penn State, 25-9, but won their first game over Mississippi, 23-20.

Adams told The Fort Worth Star-Telegram that rooms of five players, including the three who were suspended, were searched Tuesday after a team meeting Monday night in which Wilson warned that drug use "would not be tolerated."

In the meeting, Adams said, Wilson told the team he was aware that certain players were using drugs and would be caught soon.

Beck, Crenshaw tied for Napa tournament lead

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — Ben Crenshaw and Tom Watson, who have won more than $700,000 between them this year, have a low-key approach to Napa's annual golf tournament.

But 24-year-old Chip Beck, tied with Crenshaw for the lead after Thursday's first round, is in a fight for survival on the PGA Tour.

"I'm 161st on the money list and I know I have to move up a little bit," the struggling pro from North Carolina said after posting a 6-under-par 66 on the Silverado Country Club's South course.

After making that understatement, Beck added, "I know my wife was glad to see those putts dropping today."

His tour winnings this year total $8,939, and if he doesn't reach $12,000 he'll lose his PGA tournament players card. After the Napa tournament, the Anheuser-Busch Classic, there are only two more events this year.

Crenshaw and Beck were one stroke ahead of four golfers who posted 67s Thursday — Gary Hallberg, Mark Hayes, Jack Renner and Scott Watkins. Watson was at 68, in a 10-way tie for seventh.

Those tied with Watson included Mike Reid, Tom Weiskopf, Johnny Miller and Lon Hinkle. A group at 69 included Andy Bean and Rod Curl, and at 70 was defending champion John Fought, Napa's own Mark Lye and many others.

Beck had six birdies and no bogeys for his 66, while Crenshaw, playing the slightly longer North course, had seven birds and one bogey.

"I'm looking to make this a nice year-ending event," said Crenshaw, winner of $183,727 this year despite no tournament titles.

Crenshaw made a 50-foot birdie putt at the first hole and sunk a 20-footer for another birdie at the second.

Sims gives Detroit hope for future

By BRUCE LOWITT

AP Sports Writer

In 1956, Billy Sims was learning how to walk. Now, as we know so well, he can run, too — and if he runs the way he's been running so far this year, he'll be a part of something the Detroit Lions haven't achieved since 1956.

That's the last time they managed to win their first four games in a season. In fact, they won their first six, en route to a 9-3 record which left them one-half game behind the Western Conference champion Chicago Bears. They won the National Football League championship the next year — and haven't won a title since.

The Lions already have won more games this year than they did in all of 1979, when they were 2-14. The 3-4 mark matches their 1970 start, the last time they made the playoffs (as the National Conference's wild-card team in the Central Division).

Minnesota, which narrowly beat Detroit in the teams' two meetings last year, is 2-1 and tied with defending division champion Tampa Bay.

Sunday's other games are: Philadelphia at St. Louis, Chicago at Pittsburgh, Cleveland at Tampa Bay, Dallas vs. Green Bay at Milwaukee, Houston at Cincinnati, Los Angeles at the New York Giants, New Orleans at Miami, Oakland at Buffalo, Atlanta at San Francisco, the New York Jets at Baltimore, San Diego at Kansas City and Seattle at Washington. Monday night's game is Denver at New England.

The Vikings will be trying to do to Sims what they did to Walter Payton last Sunday. They slammed the door on the defending National Conference rushing champion, limiting him to just 39 yards (his fewest since the 1978 season) and holding the entire Chicago ground game to 93 yards in a 34-14 runaway over the Bears.

Sims didn't exactly have an explosive day in Detroit's 20-7 triumph over St. Louis, gaining 95 yards, 13 of them on a touchdown run midway in the final period. But a 7-yard touchdown sprint in the second period was wiped out by a holding penalty. Had it stood up, Sims would have become the first player in NFL history to gain at least 1,000 yards in each of his first three games. Nevertheless, he's still the NFL's rushing leader with 382 yards, 55 more than Wilbert Montgomery of Philadelphia.

The Eagles, who have scored the most points (104) and allowed the fewest (16) in the NFL this year, haven't had a start like this since they went 4-0 back in 1954. Dick Vermeil's players pushed him past the break-even point last Monday night when their 35-3 trouncing of the Giants gave him a 32-31 pro coaching record.

Buffalo, San Francisco and San Diego also will be trying to keep their records unblemished through four weeks while the Jets, New Orleans, St. Louis and Kansas City will be looking for their first victory of the season.

College football roundup

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

A Madison Avenue type attempting to market Saturday's college football offerings would have little trouble selling the element of surprise to Arizona State, less trouble with revenge for Penn State and no problem peddling survival to Vanderbilt.

"I think about it everyday," said Penn State running back Curt Warner, who played a minor role in the 42-17 shelling his team took last season at the hands of Nebraska. "But it's a different ball game this year. We'll find out if we're a big league team."

Indeed they will, along with a national television audience and a crowd of 85,000 expected to pack the Nittany Lions' Beaver Stadium to watch 11th-ranked Penn State seek revenge against the third-ranked Cornhuskers. Both teams are unbeaten at 2-0.

"We've got a big score to settle, and that's at the top of the list," center Bob Jagers said of the charge that Joe Paterno's Lions are nothing more than a big fish in a little pond — Eastern football.

"I think there are five or six teams who are certainly in the caliber of being national champions," Paterno said, adding that Tom Osborne's Cornhuskers are among them.

In other games involving Top Ten teams, top-ranked Alabama hosts Vanderbilt, No. 2

Ohio State entertains 20th-ranked Arizona State, No. 4 Oklahoma is at home against Stanford, 5th-ranked Southern California visits Minnesota, No. 6 Pitt hosts Temple, 7th-ranked Texas entertains Oregon State at night, No. 9 Florida State travels to Miami, (Fla.), and 10th-ranked Georgia is at home against Texas Christian. No. 8 Notre Dame is idle.

Also, No. 12 Missouri is at San Diego State, 13th-ranked Washington hosts Oregon, No. 14 North Carolina entertains 19th-ranked Maryland, No. 15 Arkansas is at home against Tulsa, 16th-ranked UCLA hosts Wisconsin, No. 17 Michigan entertains South Carolina, and 18th-ranked Auburn is at home against Tennessee.

"We might surprise a few people," said Arizona State Coach Darryl Rogers, whose 2-0 Sun Devils did just that in upsetting and knocking Houston from the Top Twenty two weeks ago. "It's a phenomenal challenge."

The Sun Devils have outscored the opposition 71-17 while recovering seven fumbles and intercepting seven passes in routs of Houston and Oregon State. But Rogers, former head coach at Michigan State, knows how tough it is to win at Ohio Stadium, where the 2-0 Buckeyes have sold out 72 straight times. Michigan State lost there twice under Rogers by 49-21 and 42-0 scores.

"It's always a privilege to play that team in that stadium before that crowd," said Rogers, who said the artificial turf won't bother his players after two games on natural grass. "I'm not worried about the surface. I'm worried about some of the people OSU will have running on it."

Foremost among them is quarterback Art Schlichter, the Buckeyes' Heisman Trophy candidate.

"He's a true passer, but his running ability can hurt you as much as anything," said Rogers.

Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce is not selling Arizona State short by any means.

"It's very evident they have good players when you look at their films," said Bruce. "The problem is that people who do some predicting don't look at any film."

There is some film Vanderbilt Coach George McIntyre would rather not see too often. It shows unbeaten Alabama doing its usual routine of stomping on opponents with 0-2 Vanderbilt the unanimous choice to become victim No. 3 this season and No. 299 in the career of Crimson Tide Coach Bear Bryant.

McIntyre said the Commodores, losers of 25 straight Southeastern Conference games, will have to run the ball quite a bit against the two-time defending national champions.

"The only bad thing about throwing the ball so much against Alabama is that on every incompleteness the clock stops," said McIntyre. You have to think about that."

McIntyre does, however, plan to have his Commodores see one more film before taking on the Crimson Tide.

"I think we'll go see 'The Longest Yard,' he said with a smile.

National League baseball roundup

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

When you have nothing else in September, you can play the spoiler. It's not a role anybody relishes, particularly the St. Louis Cardinals, who had better things planned for the fall when they began playing baseball in the spring.

Jim Kaat has been in the majors since 1959. He's been to one World Series with Minnesota in 1965 and played on two division championship teams — Minnesota in 1970 and Philadelphia in 1976. At 41, he's had a lot of practice punching holes in other people's pennant hopes. But he says it's a small consolation.

"I've said all along we shouldn't take too much delight in being spoilers," said Kaat Thursday night after he scattered 11 hits in pitching the Cardinals to a 10-2 victory over the fading world champion Pittsburgh Pirates. "If we were playing the kind of ball we are capable of, we'd be in contention."

The Cards' Ted Simmons, one of the most consistent hitters in baseball over the past decade, has never been to a playoff or World Series. After knocking in six runs on a solo homer, grand slam and a single Thursday night, he could only hope for a more significant forum one day.

"I'm looking forward to a September when I have a big game like this and it helps us win our division," he said. "Now we can only hurt Montreal."

St. Louis plays Montreal next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Montreal fell out of first place in the National League East, slipping one-half game behind Philadelphia after the Phillies edged the New York Mets 2-1 and the Expos lost to the Chicago Cubs 5-4.

Philadelphia hosts Montreal for a three-game series beginning tonight.

The Pirates, meanwhile, are 4½-games back, and the fans seemed to have given up hope. Only 6,805 came out Thursday night.

"We've got to win them all now," said Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner, whose team has nine games left — all of them against sixth-place Chicago and the fifth-place New York Mets.

The Houston Astros broke a first-place tie with Los Angeles in the NL West. The Astros beat Atlanta 4-2 while the Dodgers fell to San Francisco 3-2 and dropped a game behind Houston. Meanwhile, Cincinnati, a 5-3 winner over San Diego in 10 innings, is just 2½-games back and starts a three-game series in Houston tonight.

Astros 4, Braves 2

Joe Morgan certainly has October experience after five championship series and three World Series with Cincinnati. He showed the way Thursday night with a two-run homer and an RBI-single.

Nolan Ryan, 10-9, went five innings before leaving with a back spasm.

Giants 3, Dodgers 2

San Francisco's Ed Whitson downed Los Angeles with his pitching then boosted them up with a prediction. "The Dodgers are still the class of the division. Houston doesn't have their hitting," he said.

Terry Whitfield and Darrell Evans slammed homers to back the pitching of Whitson and reliever Gary Lavelle. Whitson, 11-11, pitched 71-3 innings before Lavelle came on to record his eighth save.

The Giants beat Burt Hooton, 13-8, for the first time in 11 decisions.

Reds 5, Padres 3

The Cincinnati Reds are glad Vic Correll isn't following doctor's orders. "The doctor told me I wouldn't play at all this season," said Correll, who was disabled with an injured left Achilles tendon.

Correll smacked a two-run double in the 10th inning to lift the Reds over the Padres. Since returning to the lineup, Correll has picked up eight hits in 16 at-bats. His previous hits were all singles.

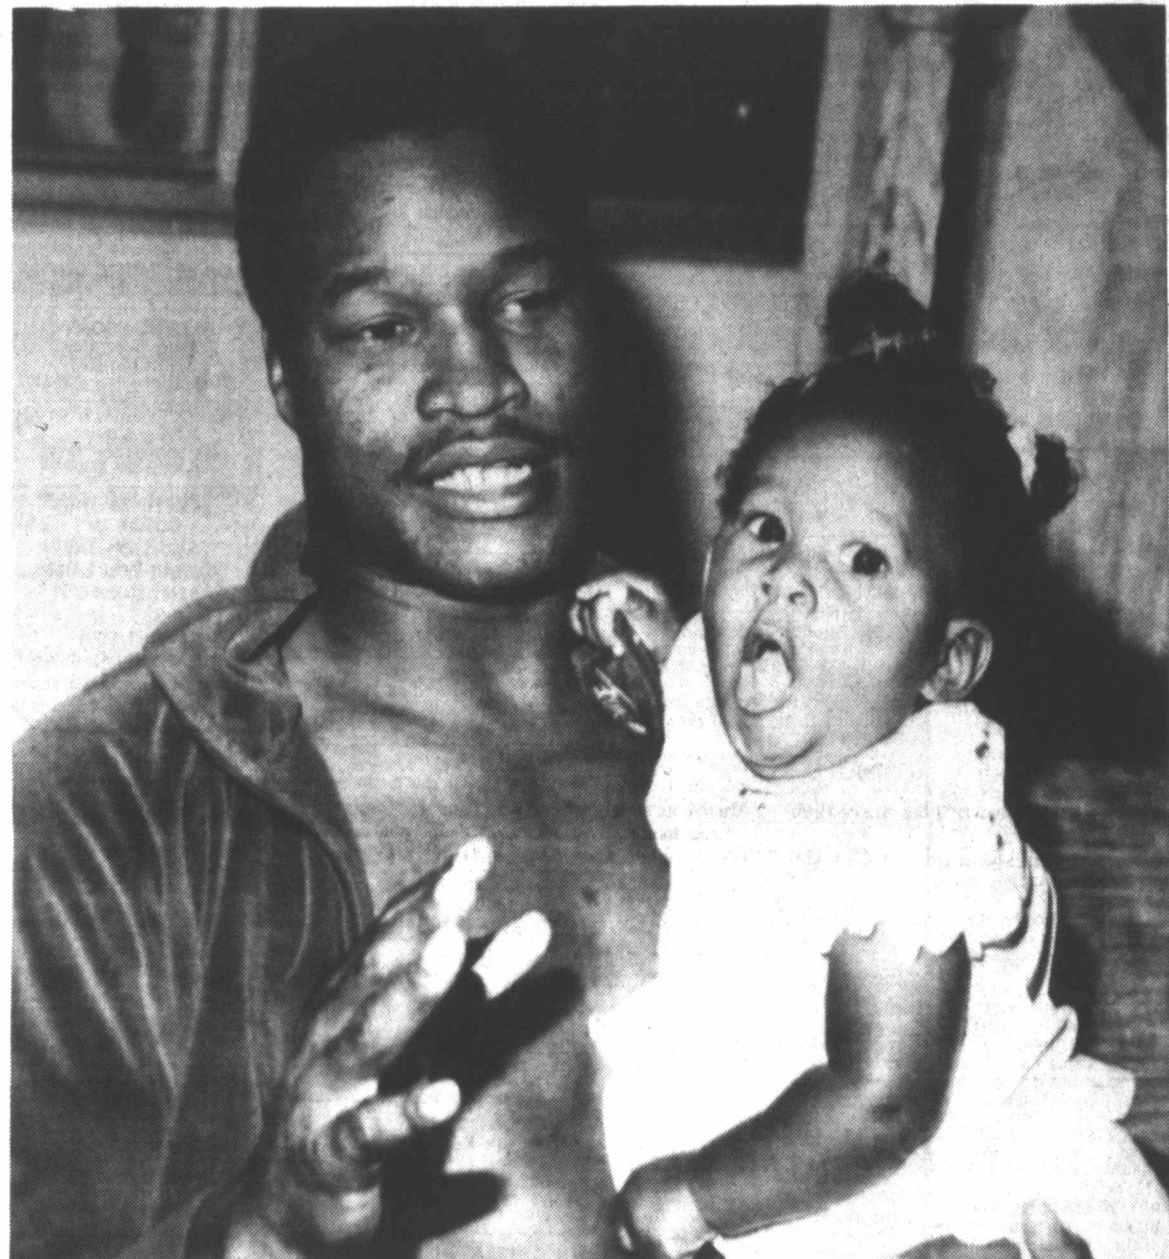

The Reds erased a 3-1 deficit in the seventh on pinch hitter Harry Spilman's two-run single.

Phillies 2, Mets 1

Rookie Lonnie Smith replaced the slumping Greg Luzinski in the Philadelphia lineup and contributed the winning hit, an RBI-single in the fifth. Smith is hitting .336 to Luzinski's .232 but doesn't have the Bull's home run power.

Cubs 5, Expos 4

If the Expos can pick up tonight against Philadelphia where they left off against Chicago, they'll be happy. Down 5-1, the Expos rallied for three runs off Cubs ace reliever Bruce Sutter in the ninth. But Dick Tidrow came in with runners at first and third and retired Rodney Scott to end the game.

WORLD BOXING Council heavyweight champion Larry Holmes relaxes in his suite along with six-month-old daughter, Kandi Lauri. Holmes meets Muhammad Ali Oct. 2 in a title fight.

Vandeweghe rejects Mavericks contract

DALLAS (AP) — Kiki Vandeweghe, the UCLA All-America center drafted No. 1 by the Dallas Mavericks, has rejected the team's contract because it didn't give him a requested trade option.

Mavericks officials said. The 6-8 star asked Thursday for a contract clause saying he could insist on a trade to another NBA team after a year of play.

Mavericks officials said it was too early in the game to change the contract. Vandeweghe's father had been quoted previously as saying the offer was "more than fair," they said.

"We put our original contract offer on the table, and he rejected it so he won't play with the Mavericks this year," said team spokesman Allen Stone. Vandeweghe flew from Los Angeles to Dallas Thursday to renegotiate his contract. He met with Norm Sonju, general manager, and Rick Sund, the team's director of player personnel.

Vandeweghe failed to report in early September with other rookies and with players the franchise obtained in the expansion draft. Sonju said Wednesday the Mavericks would withdraw their offer if he didn't report by 6 p.m. Thursday.

Vandeweghe then phoned team officials and said he was flying to Texas to talk to them. He had already indicated the Mavericks' offer wasn't good enough.

He has enrolled in UCLA, but will remain the property of the Mavericks, who indicated they will try to trade him before the 1981 draft next spring.

Rangers edged by Mariners

SEATTLE (AP) — Dave Edler checked the dugout before walking to the plate. The Seattle Mariners rookie third baseman was looking for a pinch-hitter.

When none stepped up, Edler justified Seattle Manager Maury Wills' confidence by lashing a two-out, bases loaded, 3-and-2 pitch for a double. The 11th-inning hit scored three runs and brought the Mariners a comeback 7-6 triumph over the faltering Texas Rangers Thursday night.

"Maury has pinch-hit for me in those situations before," Edler said, "but when there was no one there, I knew it was me."

Texas reliever Danny Darwin, 12-4, was the victim of the Mariners' fourth comeback. The win was Seattle's fifth straight, equalling a club record. The loss was the seventh in a row for the Rangers and their 14th in 16 games.

"I was nervous, no doubt about it," added Edler, who had only five runs batted in in 20 previous games with Seattle after being recalled from Spokane of the Pacific Coast League.

Bruce Bochte started the winning rally with a single and Tom Paciorek added another single. Willie Horton sacrificed the runners to second and third, and, with two out, Darwin walked Jerry Narmon.

With Jim Anderson running for Paciorek and Julio Cruz running for Narmon, Edler worked the count to 3-and-2 before picking on a high fast ball for the deciding double.

The Mariners overcame Ranger leads of 1-0, 3-1, 4-3 and 6-4.

"They kept coming back on us," said Texas Manager Pat Corrales. "If it's not one thing, it's another. But tonight was the best we've played in a while."

Pat Putnam had given the Rangers a 6-4 lead in the 11th with a two-run homer to right field following a single by Rusty Staub. Both hits were off Seattle reliever Dave Heaverlo, 6-3.

After Tom Paciorek's two-out, bases loaded pinch-hit single in the sixth inning brought Seattle to a 3-3 tie, the Rangers went ahead on back-to-back doubles by Putnam and Billy Sample, who finished the night with two RBIs, in the ninth.

Seattle's Willie Horton tied it with a leadoff homer, his eighth, in the ninth.

Bump Wills scored two of the first three Texas runs against his father. Al Oliver drove him in each time, the first with an infield out in the opening inning, the second with a single in the sixth.

Sample singled to score Staub, who had doubled, in the second inning off Mariner starter Rob Dressler.

Seattle recorded a first-inning run when Kim Allen was hit by a pitch, stole second and came home on Larry Milbourne's single.

Corrales played the game under protest from the ninth inning when Seattle coach Frank Funk visited Heaverlo at the mound before the pitcher had faced one batter.

Maury and Bump Wills set a record. Never in major league baseball has a father managed against his son. The only father-son combination prior to this was Connie Mack and his son, Earle, who were together with the Philadelphia A's, the last time in 1914.
