9 KILLED, 10 HURT, IN APARTMENT FIRE

Bear Kills Child

Partly Devoured Body of Girl, 3, Discovered

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 1. (UP)—A large black bear, hunger maddened when driven from the woods by forest fires carried off a 3-year-old daughter of Fred Grorricuk at Lowlands, 100 miles from here, and killed her, reports from the sparsely settled section said today.

Terrified when the beast battered down the flimsy door of Grorricuk's back-woods home, two other children fled to neighbors, leaving the 3-year-old child in the room.

The parents were working in the fields some distance away. When they returned with neighbors summoned by the two children, they found the body of their child, partly devoured, near their home.

ZEPPELIN WELL ON WAY HOME

Message Gives Position As 1,020 Miles Out

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1. (AP)—The Graf Zeppelin gave her position to the navy department tonight at 11:25 o'clock, E. S. T., as 49.30 west longitude and 38.00 north latitude. The position would place the ship at a point about a thousand miles due west of the Azores. Aided by tail winds, the Graf was estimated to have covered 1,220 miles during the 15½ hours since she left Lakehurst, an average of about 80 miles an hour.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Sept. 1. (AP)—The Graf Zeppelin sailed for Germany today and Dr. Hugo Eckener, the man who piloted it around the world, stood quietly on the ground and watched it go.

Having made up his mind to stay on in America for a few days and send his dirigible back under command of Capt. Ernst Lehmann, Doctor Eckener stood in the morning sun by the hangar door and saw the ship depart at 7:18, eastern standard time.

When the command "up ship," was given, the growd crew heaved and the bow rose easily. But the tail dragged close to the ground and even when pulled upward by the mounting prow hung at a sharp angle below the dirigible's forward section.

Then the engines roared and the sluggish ship at last seemed to remember the reputation it had to uphold and straightened out, melting into the east toward the ocean it was to cross for the fifth time in less than a year.

The Graf's commander prepared at once to leave for Cleveland tonight that he might attend the air races there. From there he will go to Akron, Ohio, for business conferences with officials of the Goodyear-Zeppelin company, which holds American rights to the Zeppelin patents.

Before leaving Captain Lehmann, a diminutive sailor of the skies who led the first dirigible raid against London in the war and who has commanded half a dozen airships smaller than the Graf, said he expected to start due east and then, if weather permitted, to swing on a southerly course by way of Bermuda and the Azores. He thought he would probably reach Friedrichshafen Wednesday.

Street Cars at Enid Ordered Discontinued

ENID, Okla., Sept. 1. (UP)—Enid's mayor and two city commissioners have ruled against continuation of street car service here. The traction company's franchise, recently revoked, had been effective 22 years. The order issued Saturday that all street cars be removed from the streets was said to have preceded arrangements for bus carriers as a sole means of city transportation.

HE DESERVED IT

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Sept. 1. (AP)—Spelling "Liuokalani," name of the last queen of Hawaii, correctly, won William McDougall of Sacramento a gold medal and $200 in the high school students' spelling contest at the state fair here.

BEATING KILLS AMARILLO MAN

'Beer Joint' Scene of Fatal Affray; Man Hurt

AMARILLO, Texas, Sept. 1. (AP)—Sam T. Hutton, 50, was killed and his companion, A. A. Peterson, a carpenter, was severely beaten in a house, which Peterson described as a "beer joint," here tonight.

Police immediately began searching for three men and a woman said to have been drinking at the house since early in the evening.

Hutton's neck was broken and he was bruised. Peterson said he was set upon when he went to the aid of Hutton, a local painter.

The carpenter declared the fight which ended in Hutton's death resulted from a dice game argument.

The four suspects were declared to have fled in an automobile after the killing.

Four Boys Held In Series of Robberies

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 1. (UP)—Four boys, the oldest 14 years old, were in a detention home here today awaiting trial in juvenile court and police had solved a series of recent north side robberies in which a few cents to $50 had been taken.

Mrs. Henrietta Reed was credited with terminating the "gang's" career. When she approached her home after a shopping tour Saturday, the four youths jumped from windows and fled. Mrs. Reed outran one of them and, through him, police obtained the identity of his companions.

Poincare's Condition Reported Improved

PARIS, Sept. 1. (US)—Former Premier Poincare, whose health forced his resignation following the ratification of the allied debt settlements, and whose condition has been extremely grave, was today reported as improved.

M. Poincare's physicians today stated that his "condition is satisfactory, that his fever has subsided and that he has begun to take food."

Factory Smoke Latest Menace to Aviators

CHICAGO, Sept. 1. (UP)—Smoke, the heavy black kind that belches from Chicago factory chimneys constantly, is the latest hazard for endurance fliers.

So vexing did the smoke become for Pilots Russell Mossman and C. E. Steele, who had been in the air for more than 210 hours here tonight in their attempt to break the 421 hour record, that they dropped a note complaining of the difficulties of flying through the murky pall.

Instructor and Pupil Killed in Air Crash

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 1. (UP)—A flying instructor and his pupil were killed instantly today when the biplane in which they were soaring over Burbank went into a nose dive and plunged 1,500 feet to crash in Valhalla cemetery.

The dead: Arnold V. Geldart, 35, Burbank, pilot, and Rex Crouse, 18, Los Angeles. Both bodies were crushed in the wreckage and the heavy motor of the plane was buried in the ground.

Congressman Jones To Open Silverton Schools

Special to The Record News.

SILVERTON, Texas, Sept. 1.—The public schools will be opened here next Thursday, with Congressman Marvin Jones present to deliver the principal address. Silverton's new $100,000 school building will be officially dedicated by this district's congressman, just preceding the term's opening by Supt. Charles R. E. Weaver.

Robison Continues To Improve From Pneumonia Attack

NEW LONDON, Conn., Sept. 1. (AP)—J. T. Robison, Texas state land commissioner, ill with pneumonia at the home of his son J. T. Robison Jr., here, was reported slightly improved today. A nervous breakdown preceded his present illness. Hopes for his recovery are gaining daily as he continues to show improvement.

PRISON JUNKET COMES TO END

Centralization Group To Meet Friday

DALLAS, Sept. 1. (UP)—The 12 members of the Texas prison centralization commission were at their homes in various parts of Texas tonight after a trip through 23 states investigating various prison systems. The commission disbanded on its arrival here last night.

Recommendations to the legislature will be considered at a series of meetings, the first to be held in Austin Friday. On that day a banquet will be held in honor of the three correspondents of Texas newspapers who made the trip with the commission. Gov. Dan Moody will be invited to the banquet.

Among the suggestions which will be embodied later in recommendations to the legislature are many of economic and humanitarian value. Improved schooling and improved business methods for operating prisons will probably be asked.

The commission found that every prison allowed the inmates to read newspapers. Only a few carried on any newspaper censorship whatever. Committee members agreed that the withholding of newspapers in Texas is a poor policy.

In its visitations the commission found that Texas is far behind the average state in its prison system. In one case, the retardation was considered fortunate. The fact that Texas does not have a highly organized industrial prison system eliminates the task faced by other state systems—that of seeking new ways to keep prisoners engaged when a federal law passed last spring, permitting states to bar prison-made goods at their borders, goes into effect.

Mounted Cops to Ride Steeds for Last Time

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 1. (AP)—The horse will lend his last proud struts to the Labor day parade here. Efficiency has moved in on the police department. The mounted patrol of 23 strapping officers will be motorized after Monday and their steeds led off.

WEATHER

WEST TEXAS: Partly cloudy Monday; Tuesday, partly cloudy, probably thundershowers and cooler in the Panhandle.
OKLAHOMA: Partly cloudy Monday; Tuesday, unsettled, probably local showers, cooler in north and west portions.
EAST TEXAS: Partly cloudy, probably occasional rains in south portion Monday and Tuesday. Moderate to fresh easterly to southerly winds on the coast.

CITY HONORS LABOR TODAY

Business Suspended Here For Annual Holiday.

In recognition of the forces of labor at whose hands the wheels of industry are kept in motion, Wichita Falls will pause Monday for one day of rest, recreation and celebration of a holiday.

With all members of the Retail Merchants association committed to an all-day closing program, both the main and Monroe street postoffices closed except for the hour of 8 to 9 a. m., city and county offices locked up for the day, and organized crafts of labor receiving a full holiday, practically the entire population of the city will be free to spend the day at will.

Hunters Open Season

Scores of nimrods who were in favorite outdoor haunts at the stroke of the gong Sunday morning, when the hunting season opened, will also spend Monday in pursuit of doves or prairie chickens. A variety of sports nearer home will find hosts of followers. The annual golf tourney opens Monday morning at the Wichita Falls Golf and Country club, while the local amateur baseball champions, the Producers' Creamery nine, engage a Fort Worth enemy in a double-bill at Spudder park.

There will be no rural or city mail delivery during the day, it was announced. Merchants have been requested by the American Legion, Pat Carrigan post, to mount their American flags along the curbs throughout the downtown district. According to Floyd Friberg, adjutant, there are about 300 such flags in the city.

The principal attraction for the latter hours of the day has been arranged at Lakeside park, where a program of circus stunts, musical revue, junior bathing reveue, band concerts, and other entertainment will be given. An elaborate display of fireworks is to include the spectacle, "A Night in Holland," effected with a large shipment of especially prepared cartridges.

Bathing Revue

The juvenile bathing revue is to take place on the stage at the Lakeside coliseum at 8 o'clock. Entrants will be judged by three judges on the stage, and by the applause of the spectators. Children under 14 years of age are eligible, and a number have been entered in the contest, the winner of which is to receive $20 in cash. Second prize is $5.

All Three of Rockdale's Ministers Resign

ROCKDALE, Texas, Sept. 1. (UP)—Rockdale will soon be without ministers. The pastors of the Lutheran, Christian and Baptist churches preached farewell sermons today after resigning to accept new pastorates in other towns.

Liberty Bows To Dollar, Says Butler

COLLEGE HEAD WARNS WORLD OF CATACLYSM

Glorification of Material Things Threatening Human Race

SHIFT TO ECONOMICS

Speaker Repeats Assertion That World Lack Single Great Leader

NEW YORK, Sept. 1. (US)—Wealth has displaced liberty as the center of gravity of human interest. That shift explains the eclipse of liberalism. The dream of a United States of Europe rapidly nears reality.

Three great economic entities confront a changing world—a world which today lacks a single great poet, great philosopher or great religious leader!

In an address which bristled with such challenging utterances as these Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, tonight urged a new approach to revision of the American tariff.

Nationalism Dangerous

Narrow nationalism, Dr. Butler predicted, will produce another world cataclysm which would end civilization. There is peril, too, he stated, in the glorification of materialism. We would then lapse, he declared, into the state of "industrious and contented ants."

In essence his was an invocation to the gods of the machines to bless, rather than curse the earth with the fruits of mass production. His talk was internationalist in tone. He spoke at the Parrish Art museum, Southampton, L. I.

The American educator said:

"Put bluntly, the shift in the position of the center of gravity of human interest has been from politics to economics: from considerations that had to do with forms of government to considerations that have to do with the production, distribution and consumption of wealth.

No Great Men

"I am prepared to repeat the statement which I made in London in 1927 and again express the opinion that there is today in the world no great poet, no great philosopher, and no great religious leader.

"Perhaps modern man has overlooked the fact that no institutions, however admirable, will work themselves and that human nature remains human nature with its intellectual and moral limitations, with its emotional heaves and outbursts, with its selfishness and fanaticisms, whether it finds itself citizen of a republic or subject of a despot or owing allegiance and service to a feudal lord.

Returning Snowden Is Given Ovation

LONDON, Sept. 1. (US)—Britain's conquering chancellor of the exchequer, Philip Snowden, returned from the reparations conference at The Hague today to receive an ovation at the hands of thousands waiting at the station.

Demands for a speech from the throngs of cheering people drew from Snowden a statement about the results achieved in agreeing on the Young plan:

"The Hague conference realized our best hopes for settlement of the reparations problem. The settlemen will give a feeling of security and will likely help in the economic reconstruction of Europe.

"The restoration of the political and economic sovereignty of Germany is one of the greatest achievements of the conference."

Oklahoma Collects $3,039,321 in Taxes

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 1. (UP)—Oklahoma collected $3,039,321.34 in taxes for the month of August, State Auditor Shaw announced here. Collections for August, 1928, were $2,340,849.57. Gross production tax yielded the greatest percentage of the receipts with $1,775,796.61. Income tax returns decreased from those of the same period a year ago.

Thomas A. Edison, Ill, Slips 'Fast One' Over Doc—Puffs A Cheroot

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Sept. 1. (US)—The doctor had not said he could not smoke. Certainly not! The doctor had not even mentioned smoking.

Thomas A. Edison generally knows what he is talking about, and, at the time he was talking about smoking a cigar. The inventive genius who was 82 years old last Feb. 11, has been confined to his home, Glenmont, in Llewellyn park, here with a cold.

Members of his family, including his son, Charles, were doubtful about the therapeutic value of a strong cigar to a man with a cough and cold, but who could resist Mr. Edison's logic?

He got the cigar. He took 10 deep, delightful puffs, smiling widely. That was yesterday.

But when Dr. Hubert S. Howe, of New York, arrived in West Orange today he decided that not even the genius of Mr. Edison could invent a way of using a cigar to cure a cold. Dr. J. Hammond Bradshaw of Orange, agreed with him.

And so cigars have been stricken from the inventor's menu. His condition is very much improved, Charles Edison said. He added:

"The physicians expect him to be out in a week. There never was cause for alarm, and father is improving rapidly. He is very anxious to resume work."

Labor Laws Only Partially Solve Problem of Child Welfare, Class Told

Mrs. Grover C. Johnson Appeals for Adequate Character and Vocational Training in Address

Declaring that strict enforcement of laws forbidding child labor has accomplished only half of needed reform in that quarter unless more adequate vocational and character training be given all children of school age, Mrs. Grover C. Johnson delivered a Labor day address Sunday morning before the Sunday school of the Floral Heights Methodist church.

Mrs. Johnson opened her discussion with a comprehensive review of the growth of legislation designed to protect children against physical and moral deterioration in industry. Withdrawal of children from factories has not always accomplished the desired results, the speaker said, for the reason that many of them slip through the network intended to keep all young children in the public schools. During the last year, Mrs. Johnson stated, approximately 1,000 boys and girls in Wichita Falls who should have been in school were not enrolled.

Continued effort to keep young persons out of factories and other similar employment, and more intelligent training in school for profitable use of leisure time, were named by Mrs Johnson as a duty imposed upon society by present conditions. The full text of her address follows:

To say anything new on the subject of child labor law is not an easy task. The field has been covered for 30 years with pamphlets and books. It would seem that the last word had been said on the need of child labor laws and their enforcement. The literature on child labor has been principally for the purpose of promotion of certain types of child labor legislation. Much of it has been of a propaganda character. Nearly all of it relates to the first step in the child labor movement, which was to accomplish the physical and moral protection of children.

Protection of Children

The campaign for child labor laws in the United States has been built upon the need for physical and moral protection of youth. The story of the sacrifice of children for private gain, stirred the moral sense of people and aroused them to action. The employment of children even as low as eight years in mills and factories became one of the first objectives of the attack. Long hours of labor for children up to 14 hours a day and over was another gross evil which was coincidentally under attack. The employment of children in dangerous occupations, such as mining, very early aroused the indignation of right-minded people.

Looking back over a period of 30 years we can view in perspective the achievements in this regard.

Five-Power Disarmament Conference Predicted

PARIS, Sept. 1. (US)—A five-power disarmament conference for the near future was predicted here this afternoon by Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson, who arrived here on his way to Geneva to attend the opening of the league of nations council there tomorrow.

"The conversations between Premier MacDonald and Ambassador Dawes have not yet reached the stage which will permit the prime minister to make a decisive statement on their conclusions as he had expected to when he arrives in Geneva," said Henderson.

BLAZE TRAPS RESIDENTS OF BIG BUILDING

Sleeping Tenants Engulfed In Inferno Without Chance to Flee

NEWSMEN IN RESCUE

Scribes Save 12 Lives and Help Firemen Battle With Flames

WINNIPEG, Manitoba, Sept. 1. (UP)—Nine persons were killed and 10 others were injured when fire swept through Midway Court early today and gutted the three-story apartment building.

The flames broke out suddenly before daybreak and gained such headway before firemen arrived that most of those killed were burned to death in a blazing inferno that engulfed them so rapidly they had no chance to escape.

List of Dead

The dead: Alfred Applebee, his daughter, Irene, 11, Mrs. Elizabeth Gaunt, Ralph Weighton, 62, Mrs. Madge Edwards, 34, Marjorie Edwards, 14, Gordon Edwards, 9, and two unidentified.

The 70 occupants of the apartment house were sleeping when the blaze first was discovered at 2:30 a. m. The blaze had progressed so far when firemen arrived that they were unable to check it.

Aided by the staff of the Winnipeg Free Press, across an alley from the burning structure, the firemen turned all their efforts toward rescuing those on the upper floors who were cut off by flames belching up the stairways and fire escapes. Several of the occupants leaped from windows.

Scribes Make Rescue

Newspaper men broke through windows, rescued a dozen of the tenants and then assisted in fighting the blaze with three lines of hose from the Free Press building.

Nine of the tenants were sent to hospitals suffering from smoke and minor injuries.

Authorities, at a loss to account for the fire, started an investigation immediately to determine whether the Midway Court, an old structure, had been inspected recently for fire hazards.

FIRE DESTROYS NEWCASTLE GIN

Keith Plant Burns With Loss of $32,000

Special to The Record News.

NEWCASTLE, Texas, Sept. 1.—Fire completely destroyed the E. C. Keith gin here last night at an estimated loss of $32,000.

But for the constant work of the Newcastle fire department the flames also would have destroyed the gin's office building and cottonseed shed, and the large grain elevator and cotton platform nearby. Firemen were called to the scene at 10:30 o'clock, and remained fighting the blaze until about 1:30 a. m., when it was pronounced under control.

The origin of the fire is as yet undetermined, although it has been definitely said that it originated in the top part of the gin. Mr. Keith told officials that prior to leaving the plant late yesterday afternoon he made a thorough inspection, as was his usual custom, and that everything seemed to be in its place.

The loss of the gin was felt greatly by its owner. Mr. Keith said that but recently he had installed about $6,000 worth of new machinery. Hiss loss also included about $1,600 worth of new bagging which was stored in the gin.

Insurance on the gin totals $6,000 Mr Keith said.

Only one bale of cotton was in the gin at the time of the fire, the previous ginnings, totaling about 100 bales, having been moved from the structure.

Mr. Keith is a prominent Young county planter, and owns several large farms in this vicinity. He made no statement relative to rebuilding his plant. He has been in the ginning business here 30 years.

Repetition of Missouri Wheat Failure Seen

COLUMBIA, Mo., Sept. 1. (UP) Possible repetition next year of the huge losses of Missouri wheat in 1916 through the hessian fly was foreseen in a report issued here by Leonard Haseman, Missouri university entomologist. Haseman said weather conditions this year favored development of the fly, which has been reported widely distributed, and advised farmers to plow under infested wheat stubble, destroy volunteer wheat and plant after the fly-free date.

Dallas Host to First Fraternity Convention

DALLAS, Sept. 1. (UP)—Members of the Alpha Sigma Lambda fraternity, meeting here in the first national fraternity convention ever to be held in Dallas, enjoyed an evening's outing tonight after engaging in the second business session this afternoon. Donald P Moorman, Omaha, grand master, presided over the session. The fraternity will choose new officers tomorrow.

Dallas Orders Courteous Treatment of Prisoners

DALLAS, Sept. 1. (UP)—Courtesy to prisoners instead of rough treatment was ordered by William Graves, police commissioner, at the afternoon detail conference here today. He warned police not to beat prisoners when making arrests unless the arrest were resisted.

The orders were the aftermath of a hearing before the city commission Friday at which time three policemen were exonerated of beating a 19-year-old youth.

Shots Halt Negro's Break From Jail

TOMS RIVER, N. J., Sept. 1. (US)—Two bullets from the gun of a state trooper today ended the desperate attempt for freedom of James Harris, a huge negro of New York.

Harris kicked Warden William J. Liming, of the county jail, unconscious this morning and stole his keys. He ran to the kitchen, where he felled Mrs. Liming and a woman trusty with blows of his fist.

Dashing from the house, he ran through the town, followed by Harry Davidson, a 60-year-old trusty, who saw him turn into the woods to hide.

There, a few minutes later, he was found by State Trooper Kuboph. Kuboph brought him down with two bullets in the leg, and Harris was taken back to jail and placed in solitary confinement.

Baby Burner to Face Sanity Hearing Tuesday

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 1. (UP)—Mrs. Josephine Valenti, 19-year-old mother, convicted of burning her baby to death, Tuesday will face a superior court jury charged with learning whether she is sane and should be sent to prison for life.

'Shuttle' Takes Off Unceremoniously on Non-Stop Trip

Hank Brown Burns Up Motor to Cop $10,000 Stake in Race

NEW YORK, Sept. 1. (US)—With only a few weary mechanics, who had worked all night overhauling the motor, as a gallery, the Boeing-Hornet plane Shuttle, carrying 2,000 pounds of United States mail, took off from Mitchell field, L. I., early today in a second attempt to make four nonstop flights from coast to coast.

The human element—Capt. Ira Eaker and Lieut. Bernard Thompson—although virtually sleepless for 24 hours, were ready as soon as the motor was pronounced in condition.

It was a matter-of-fact takeoff, with no formality, no ceremony. The two pilots, who had had but an hour's sleep after dinner, sat about Mitchell field while mechanica worked. At 6:45 a. m., the plane, which had burst into flames Saturday afternoon, delaying the hop-off, was wheeled onto the field.

Mail was loaded, the pilots climbed in. They took off without a backward glance, and, not even pausing to circle the field, shot straight away towards Cleveland. Cleveland is the first of their four refueling stations.

HENRY J. BROWN WINNER OF RACE

CLEVELAND, Sept. 1. (AP)—Fuel tanks nearly empty and motor burned out and sputtering, Henry J. Brown, veteran Cleveland-New York air mail pilot, pushed his black and silver Lockheed mail wing monoplane across the finish line at the national air races today at 5:19 p. m., 13 hours and 18 minutes out of Los Angeles on a nonstop flight for $10,000.

So far the money is his, Lee Schoenhair of Los Angeles having made the flight in 13 hours, 51 minutes and 10 seconds, and Lieut. Col. Roscoe Turner having been disqualified by failing to arrive before 6 o'clock in the evening. Two more flyers, however, are waiting to better the time. They are: Art Goebel, Honolulu-Pacific flyer, and John Wood of Wausau, Wis.

"I couldn't have gone 15 minutes longer," Brown said. "The gasoline tank was nearly dry and the motor burned out." His average speed 156.4 miles an hour as compared with Schoenhair's speed of 149.65 miles an hour.

GRAPES, DOCTORS AND SUNSHINE

NEW YORK, Sept. 1. — Doctor Doran of the prohibition escadrille, with branches in all leading cities, makes a statement that should bear fruit.

The good doctor, if possible, warns over-zealous prohibition cadets against breaking and entering private homes and interfering with fermentation of grape juice.

The doc further revolutionizes sudden entrances and quick exits by conceding that fermentation of fruit juices is an act of nature.

The doc ain't up on his amendments. That act has been repealed.

Since reading Professor Doran's biography of a prune in the act of stewing itself in its own juices, we have made exhausted experiments with fruit juices.

We did not try the apple. Issac Newton tried that apple gag and got a pop on the eye.

Neither did we go in for science and research on a watermelon.

Coming from an old family of barristers we could never forgive a watermelon for being 90 per cent water.

But we did put a grape out in the California sun. And when a grape is kissed by the California sun, it's smacked good and plenty.

Nothing happened to the grape for the first minute. The sun was just playing with it.

At the end of the third minute, the grape started to get red in the face. Indicating a high blood pressure in local soda water fountains.

At the end of an hour, fermentation had set in from all angles.

The grape became lopsided.

We applied a tire gauge to it and it showed a pressure of 36 pounds all around.

Just the ideal pressure for touring on rough roads.

At the finish of the first day in the sun, the grape was still a grape.

It contained some deadly toxins. But not in habit-forming quantities.

At the start of the second day, that grape started to leap like a Mexican jumping bean.

But, we over-experimented. Just when the grape was all set for the Christmas rush, it turned pale and then collapsed.

It became a raisin.

We followed Doctor Doran's homeopathic advice and allowed that chunk of round fruit to ferment to its grape's content. But it turned out that its content was not precipitate.

From now on we refuse to look upon the wine when it is red or the grape when it is sunburned.

All Saved As Steamer Sinks

Much Buffeted Freighter Smashes Headland

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland, Sept. 1. (US)—In the fog-filled darkness this morning, the Norwegian steamer, Ole Aarvold, crashed into the rocky headland at Cape Pine and sank.

Captain Hellson succeeded in landing the two passengers and 16 members of the crew safely then followed them ashore. The steamer is a total loss.

Cape Pine is the southwestern tip of Newfoundland on the Avalon peninsula, famous for its treacherous seas and frequent wrecks. At this time of year, the fog on the coast is as dense as wool and even the high gale that was raging when the Aarvold struck did not clear the air.

This was the last of several accidents that befell the freighter. In December, 1928, she cleared from Buffalo with a cargo for Scandanavian ports. In midocean, she threw off her propeller and for 36 days drifted helplessly. The Scottish trawler Grimesby finally sighted her, took off her crew and towed the Ole Aarvold to Aberdeen.

The Ole Aarvold was a steel screw steamer, of 842 tons, 187 feet long, built in Bergen, Norway, 10 years ago. She was owned by D. S. A. A. Vard and managed by S. O. Aarvold and company under the Norwegian flag. Oslo was her home port.

COLLEGE HEAD WARNS WORLD

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler Gives Address

eighteenth century and more rapidly during the first half of the nineteenth, man's knowledge of natural forces and his power over them so greatly increased that there was brought about a profound modification, not only of his daily life and occupation, but of his interests both dominant and unconscious.

Opportunity City-ward

"Machinery displaced the human hand and the factory pushed to one side the industry of the home. The tide of human interests and human opportunity began to flow city-ward almost as a matter of course and the outlook on life of millions upon millions of human beings was radically changed as were their environment and their hourly occupation.

"When the air is made a highroad and the human voice finds the ocean no obstacle, we are living in a wholly new world whether we realize it or not.

"Obviously, a revolutionary result of the shift which has taken place in the center of gravity of human interest is to put wealth in the position which liberty used to occupy. This displacement more than anything else explains the extraordinary decline of political liberalism which has taken place in both Europe and the United States.

Eclipse Is Plain

"The present eclipse of liberalism is so plain that he who runs may read. The economic interest is now bound up closely, although we must hope not permanently or for any considerable length of time with that extreme form of nationalism which brought on the great war and which was sent to its destruction by and through that war.

"If narrow nationalism, built on a truly political foundation could not do better than it did, what can possibly be expected of a narrow nationalism that is built on an economic foundation? The world is just now standing at the cross roads.

"It may take the path in one direction which will make agriculture, industry, commerce, trade, finance, the fortunate means of uniting the whole world, of increasing its prosperity and of buttressing its peace, or it can take the opposite path which will turn the nations into narrow-minded, unsympathetic, jealous and quarreling neighbors, and so prepare the way for another cataclysm which, if it should come, would mark civilization's end.

Importance of Tariff

"It is perfectly possible for congress in enacting new tariff legislation to advance or set back the prosperity and the peace of the world. The time has long since gone by when tariff legislation was merely a domestic matter.

"The hour has struck for constructive far-seeing statesmanship. This is no time to listen to the selfish pleas of paid lobbyists or to permit log-rolling combinations of special interests to use public authority for their own benefit in disregard of the far greater interest of the whole people of the United States.

"What was once the dream of a United States of Europe is on its rapid way to become a reality. Thus new international organization is quite likely to come into existence as a new economic administrative unity with an increasing measure of free and unrestricted trade between its component parts.

"The alternative before the British commonwealth of nations would appear to be either to join the economic union which will be the United States of Europe, or to institute a new and third economic union, world-wide in its scope and magnificent in its proportions. Of the two, the latter seems at the moment the course more likely to be pursued."

Funeral Services Held Sunday for P. E. Dixon

Funeral services for P. E. Dixon, 61, 2014 Buchanan street, who died about 6:45 o'clock Saturday morning, were held from the chapel of the Hines mortuary at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon with Dr. Gaines B. Hall, pastor of the First Southern Presbyterian church, officiating. Burial was in Rosemont.

Active pallbearers were Frank Richardson, Horace Robinson, Dean Hawkins, Archie Fitzsimmons, Henry W. Davis and Oscar Mosier.

Survivors include three sons, Frank, Walter and Riley Dixon, all of Wichita Falls; two daughters, Mrs. S. J. Yates, and Miss Ruth Dixon, both of Wichita Falls; two brothers, W. E. Dixon of Dallas, and J. H. Dixon of Austin; and two sisters, Mrs. L. C. James and Mrs Alice Horton, both of whom live in California.

Mr. Dixon was a carpenter and had lived in Wichita Falls for the past 12 years. He was a member of the Woodmen of the World.

Body of G. B. Raymond To New York for Burial

Following a three-day search by telegraph and radio, Mrs. Roger Miller, daughter of G. B. Raymond, who was found dead at his home, 711 Holliday street, here Thursday night, was located Sunday at Lewiston, N. Y., by officials of the Albert's Funeral home where the body of Mr. Raymond is being held.

In a telegram to the funeral home, Mrs. Miller instructed that the body of her father be forwarded to Afton, N. Y., for interment. The body will be shipped at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Miller did not state how it was she had been informed of her father's death. Officials of the funeral home had wired station WEAF in New York City, asking that the news of the death be broadcast in an effort to locate the daughter who was on an automobile trip with her husband.

Bride Asks Judge To Undo Marriage Ties

ARKANSAS CITY, Sept. 1. (UP) —All the 16 years' experience of Willis White, blind probate judge here, with marriage of young couples did not supply him with a response to a young bride who asked that he undo the matrimonial knot he had tied for her.

"My husband left me three days after we were married by you," the latter said, "and I want you to send me a divorce by return mail. If there are any charges for same, I will take care of them."

Defies Prohibition Agents

Barricaded in her boatwell at Grosse Point Park, near Detroit, Mich., Mrs. Marshall J. Moorish defied prohibition agents to force their way in to search her speedboat. Agents said the craft contained liquor. Mrs. Moorish said it was said for her children to play in.

Higher Prices and Greater Activity Mark Week's Trade on Cotton Marts

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 1. (AP)—Greater activity prevailed in cotton the past week than has been the rule of late. Although during the first days of the week prices were erratic and fluctuated narrowly, the latter part was characterized by a steady advance and rather active buying of a speculative character.

The market reached the highest level of the present movement in Saturday's short session when December contracts sold as high as 19.50 or 90 points, equivalent to $4.50 a bale, above the lowest of the preceeding Saturday. The market closed at 19.43 for December compared with 18.75 on the preceeding Saturday, representing a net gain for the week of 68 points or nearly $3.50 a bale.

Prices were forced upward by reports of private authorities giving low condition averages for the last days of August and forecasting decreased yields compared with the government's estimate of Aug. 8. There also developed a brisk speculative demand for contracts which absorbed the selling by ring traders as well as hedging.

There has been a decided broadening of the demand for spots during the week and the daily sales at southern reporting markets ran well ahead of the corresponding days last year.

5,498 Attend Sunday School

A large bloc of absentees, representing perhaps a last-week gesture of freedom before the opening of public schools on Sept. 9, crowded the total Sunday school attendance in the city on Sept. 1 down to 5,498, a loss of 100 from the mark of the preceding week.

Some of the smaller churches reported slight gains in attendance Sunday morning, but in most of the larger ones, material cuts were recorded. The First Baptist, heading the list in numerical enrollment, had only 808 pupils present. This school has set its goal at 1,600 for next Sunday, Sept. 9, which has been designated as a special rally day.

The individual reports for Sunday were as follows:

	Sept. 1	Aug 25
First Baptist	808	830

ANNIVERSARY

Baptists Seek 1,600 at Sunday School to Honor Powers

Efforts are being made by the First Baptist Sunday school to obtain an attendance of 1,600 in Sunday school on Sunday, Sept. 9, in celebration of the 12th anniversary of Dr. O. L. Powers' induction as pastor of the local church, it was announced Sunday.

A meeting of teachers and other Sunday school workers is to be held Wednesday night at the church, according to J. W. Mason, educational director, for the purpose of organizing plans for getting in touch with all pupils not regularly attendant during recent months.

Special programs are to be given in all the departments of the Sunday school on Sept. 9, Mr. Mason said.

Silverton Student's Spray Kills Cotton And Apple Moths

Special to The Record News

SILVERTON, Texas, Sept. 1. R. D. Hodges, son of T. J. Hodges and a student of vocational agriculture, has the distinction of demonstrating complete or perfect control over the coddling moth, a common insect here that does heavy damage in the county to the apple crop. Using a spray of arsenate of lead, young Hodges wholly eradicated the worms, while other orchardists have suffered severe damages.

POLICE FINES TOTAL $2,133

Traffic Violations Lead In Total of 552 Arrests

A total of 552 arrests, the great majority for traffic violations, were made by the police department during the month of August, according to the monthly report of the corporation court, issued Sunday by R. M. Hurst, clerk of the court.

Fines imposed totaled $2,133, the amount attributed to prisoners serving time in jail and cases appealed to higher courts reducing the total collections to $1,744. Five cases were appealed to a higher court, 29 prisoners served time in jail and 453 cases were disposed of during the month, the report showed.

One prisoner escaped, 213 were lodged in jail, 61 were investigated and released and eight were turned over to the juvenile authorities. Two prisoners were held for the state hospital, five for other states, seven for other counties, and 11 were transferred to federal authorities, one to state authorities and 11 to county officers. The department recovered one stolen automobile unassisted and six with outside assistance.

The arrests were divided as follows: Traffic, 310; drunk, 44; disturbing the peace, 21; affray, 19; violating the vice ordinance, 12; assault, 4; breaking glass on the street, 2; vagrancy, 11; gaming, 15; theft under $5, 6; soliciting, 2; abusive language, 3; violating the health ordinance, 1; violating the peddling ordinance, 1.

Mayo Corrects Story Of Vernon Altercation

W. J. Mayo, who was reported in The Daily Times in a dispatch from Vernon to have been jailed there on a charge of aggravated assault on J. Browning, first husband of Mrs. Myrtle Mayo, made several corrections in the dispatch in a statement to The Record News Sunday.

The suit between Mr. Mayo and Mrs. Myrtle Mayo was not an action for divorce, as reported in the dispatch, but was a suit for the custody of the four Mayo children, according to Mr. Mayo. The suit was settled by compromise, he said. W. J. Mayo and Mrs. Myrtle Mayo were divorced about a year ago, Mr. Mayo declared.

Both Mr. Browning and Mr. Mayo are Wichita Falls residents and not Odell residents, Mr. Mayo said in his statement. Mr. Browning did not testify in the suit at Vernon as reported, it was said. The altercation between Mr. Browning and Mr. Mayo took place outside the courtroom at Vernon, Mr. Mayo said, and was due to "former trouble" and not to any action of Mr. Browning in the present suit. Mr. Mayo said he was not jailed on the aggravated assault charges, but made $500 bond immediately after the altercation with Mr. Browning.

County Commissioners To Dine at Hospital

Members of the county commissioners court will be entertained at noon Monday at the Wichita General hospital in celebration of the Labor day holiday. The regular weekly meeting of the court will be held on Tuesday, John P. Marrs, county judge, has announced. Every member of the court has accepted the invitation to dine at the hospital.

FOUR JAILED IN BEER RAIDS

City Officers Seize 300 Bottles of Beer

Four persons were arrested for violations of the Jones law within one hour Saturday afternoon and over 300 bottles of beer and a quantity of whisky were seized by officers, according to reports at police headquarters.

One woman was arrested and 113 pints of beer and several pieces of manufacturing equipment were seized in a raid at a house on Bluff street about 4:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The woman was lodged in the city jail and will be transferred to federal authorities Monday, officers said. Those in the raiding party were Plainclothes Officers Ellis Summers and A. L. Stubblefield, City Detective Fred Fountain and Traffic Officer Homer Bentley.

A second raid about 5:30 o'clock at an address on Burnett street resulted in the arrest of a man and his wife and the seizure of 194 bottles of beer and manufacturing apparatus. These two were also lodged in jail and will be transferred to federal authorities.

As the officers were returning from the raid, they recognized a man driving a coupe as one who had been arrested on liquor charges before and gave chase. The man attempted to elude the officers but Detective Fountain punctured three of the tires on the pursued car with four shots from his pistol and the fugitive was forced to stop, but not until he had succeeded in breaking several bottles of whisky which were in the car. Police succeeded, however, in saving enough of the liquor for evidence, they said. The man was also jailed and held for federal authorities.

The large quantity of beer seized at the two raids necessitated the calling of the patrol wagon from police headquarters to haul the evidence to the station. City Detective Chris Jensen was detailed to take old "Black Maria" to the address of the raids. As he was returning with the haul, the patrol car ran out of gasoline at the corner of Eighth street and Scott avenue, in the center of the business district, attracting a large crowd of spectators.

Smoot Replies To Mrs. Norton

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1. (US)—Women wage earners are being betrayed by Rep. Mary Norton, Democrat, of New Jersey, when she opposes the Republican tariff bill, Senator Reed Smoot, Republican of Utah, declared in a statement issued today.

Mrs. Norton's recent assertion that women will have to pay from 10 to 75 per cent more for "everything that goes to make a woman comfortable" if the proposed duties become effective, drew fire from the finance committee chairman.

Although the measure has been under fire from numerous Democrats, it was the first time that Senator Smoot has replied to an individual protest.

Declaring that Mrs. Norton had "set up the usual tariff Punch and Judy show," Senator Smoot insisted that the "ancient claim of Democrats that a tariff adds to the cost of living has long since been exploded."

Leading Democrats of Massachusetts have assured him that they want a tariff on shoes because of the large importations, Senator Smoot declared, adding:

"Representative Norton strikes at an important industry and its employes when she undertakes to arouse hostility to protection by charging the Republican tariff with 'taxing' the wearers of women's shoes.

"A tariff of 20 per cent on imported shoes will not raise the price of American shoes appreciably but it will keep employed the thousands of American women in American shoe factories. Neither Mrs Norton nor the women in her district of New Jersey will be 'taxed' by the duty, but they will help keep thousands of women wage earners in employment at regular wages.

"The same thing applies to stockings, dresses, coats, hats, underwear, toilet articles and every thing else used by women either on their persons or in their homes.

"Mrs. Norton is simply repeating the false tale told by the Democrats for many years, and is actually working a great harm to the thousands of women employed in the American factories already languishing because of unfair foreign competition in the American markets.

"The argument for or against a tariff cannot be settled with sole reference to the effects upon the living costs to consumers of the articles placed in the protected list.

"If Mrs. Norton will consult the thousands of women employes in the mills, shops and establishments of New Jerrey and New York, she will find that she is betraying their interests."

Parachutes Save Pair As Wings Collapse

CURTISS FIELD, N. Y., Sept. 1. (UP)—Lieut. John L. H. Trunk, Curtiss flying school instructor, and his pupil, Miss Fay Gillis, 20, of New York City, saved themselves by parachute jumps today when the wings fell from their plane at an altitude of 2,000 feet. Trunk dived from 5,000 feet. At 2,000 feet he tried to straighten out and the wings were whipped from his small biplane.

Judge Montgomery to Disqualify Himself in Trial of Bearden Suit

Hearing on Plea of Man Held Legally Dead Set for Present Term of 30th Court

Judge Allan D. Montgomery announced Sunday that he is disqualified to sit as judge in a group of three law suits to be called Tuesday morning in the 30th district court at Graham, involving the inheritance of around 600 acres of oil land and filed after the re-appearance in Young county of Lee Bearden, held legally dead by a Young county court several years ago.

Attorney for Company

Judge Montgomery explained that during his years of practice as an attorney-at-law here he was employed by the Reno Oil company, named as one of the defendants in the suits, in connection with some of the property involved in the present litigation. The judge said that he would declare himself disqualified when the case was brought to trial, leaving it to Judge P. A. Martin as presiding judge in this judicial district, to appoint another magistrate to act in his stead.

The controversy arose when Lee Bearden came back to Young county and claimed his part of his father's estate, already divided by the courts among his children and other claimants. The children had previously introduced evidence into the court leading to a legal declaration of his death after an absence of seven years. Around 30 defendants, including oil companies to whom the property has been leased at various times, are named in the suit. Bearden is seeking to recover title to the land and the rentals on the property which have accured since the land was partitioned.

Mother Enters Suit

Since the filing of the suit by Lee Bearden, his mother, Mrs Anna Bearden, around 58 years old, has entered suit through her guardian, E. B. Ritchie, seeking to set aside the former judgments of the court partitioning the land and claiming a share of the property. She names all her children, including Lee Bearden, in the petition to set aside the judgments, as well as a number of in-laws, grandchildren, and other persons.

The case will be among the first called when the civil docket in the Young county 30th district court is opened Tuesday morning.

TALK DWELLS UPON PRAYER

Sartin Tells of Common Language of Heart

"Prayer is the common language of men's hearts. It is human to pray, and the time comes into every life when its longings, sorrows, and hopes must be poured out to one closer even than a friend," said Judge B. D. Sartin, teacher of the men's Bible class of the Highland Heights Christian church, Sunday morning.

Judge Sartin's address dealt with the return of a second contingent Hebrews from Babylon under the leadership of Ezra, after the order established by the first returning group, under Zerubbabel, had capitulated. Zerubbabel, the speaker said, had been content to build a new Jerusalem of brick and stone. From the outset, it was said, Ezra considered himself a man of God, with the hand of God directly guiding his conduct of the reconstructive mission assigned him.

The journey involved was one of more than 900 miles, the speaker said, and for a task so difficult in that day, Ezra carefully prepared with fasting and prayer. "Great men of history have been men of prayer," Judge Sartin continued. "The most glorious and sacred scene of earth was the prayer by the Master in Gethesemane, and the men and women who have contributed most to the Christianizing and upbuilding of the world have been followers of that praying Master."

Ezra's success in replanting the Hebrews in their native land near Jerusalem and in fixing their roots solidly in righteous living as a people, were due to the fact that Ezra began his life with a definite purpose and with the unfailing habit of prayer, Judge Sartin said.

"Finally," said the speaker, "we have been taught to pray; to 'pray without ceasing;' to 'ask, that it shall be given us;' to 'seek that we may find.' The least any man can do is to pray unceasingly."

Helms Taken To Death Row Cell To Await Friday

EASTLAND, Texas, Sept. 1. (AP)—His last ordinary legal resort lost, Henry Helms, Cisco bank robber, left here early today in custody of officers for Huntsville, where he is scheduled to be electrocuted Sept. 6.

Helms, condemned to die for participation in the "Santa Claus" robbery of the Cisco National bank Dec. 23, 1927, in which two officers and one bandit were shot to death, was found sane here yesterday by a jury which deliberated only 10 minutes.

The robber's lawyer refused to say whether a motion for a new sanity trial will be filed. It was believed that step would not be taken. An appeal for executive clemency, however, might be made.

Montgomery to Charge New Young County Jury

Judge Allen D. Montgomery will impanel and charge the 30th district grand jury for Young county at Graham at 9 o'clock Monday morning. The investigating body is to be presented with less than one dozen routine complaints and is expected to complete its work for the early part of the month within three days, George Berry, assistant district attorney, has announced. Judge Montgomery will call the civil docket for the term Tuesday morning.

2,000 HEAR PASTOR'S TALK

Story of St. Paul Told In Moreland's Sermon

A crowd of 2,000 persons heard the Rev. Patrick D. Moreland, pastor of the Grant Street Methodist church, in the beginning service of the second week of the citywide young peoples' revival Sunday night at the First Methodist church, when he used as his text the following passage from II Timothy, Chapter 4:

"I have fought a good fight. I have finished my course. I have kept the faith . . . For Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world."

Paul Superman

"There is something about St. Paul that reminds us of a mountain," said Mr. Moreland. "There is a vastness that makes other men smaller as we study his life. The largeness that we find in St. Paul is his great intellect, his marvelous love, his dynamic energy, his ceaseless serving of Christ.

"He seems to be restless always for Athens, for Corinth, for Rome. He never loses an opportunity. Here is one of the world's supermen. He is a well rounded man. He came from a great home. He was educated in a great school. He was brought up in a great city. Suddenly the Lord laid his hand on Paul and these great qualities fused and blended to serve the purposes of Christ.

"As Paul wrote these words, the shadow of death was already gathering about him. The footsteps of the executioner were echoing in the street. Out there on one of the seven hills of Rome he must go to his death in a few minutes. As he writes these last words to the young Timothy he tells him the things that are worthwhile in life.

"The character contrast is extreme in the lights and shadows that it throws upon these two men. There was Demas who had turned his back upon these two men. There was Demas who had turned his back upon Christ. Demas the coward who could no longer stand the gaff. Demas the quitter who had gone home. Demas the failure who had given up.

World Despises Quitter

"The world despises a quitter. There are other names besides that of Demas written upon the same tablet that is subjected to the blazing white light of eternity. Eternal warfare goes on between the soul bound for distant enternities and the human desires that would wallow that soul in the mire.

"Let us not waste our sympathy on the dying Paul. Let us pity Demas the quitter, who was facing an infinitely worse death."

Dr. Gaines B. Hall, pastor of the First Southern Presbyterian church presided over the service and L. F. Aldrich, educational director of the Floral Heights Methodist church, was in charge of the congregational singing. A quartet number, "I am the Door of the Sheep," written by Mrs. W. L. Underwood, was sung by Mrs. Stanley M. Raub, Mrs. Underwood, Mr. Underwood and Lester F. Aldrich. Organ numbers by Mrs. J. W. Akin Jr., preceded the service.

New Forum Hostess To Open Clubhouse Today

By MRS. L. N. CASON

Members of the Woman's Forum have known for several months that Mrs. Ruth Alkin Kirksey would be their new hostess in the beginning of the autumn season. But save for a few members who knew her personally, the club personnel was at sea as to her personality.

Mrs. Kirksey comes to the forum with an experience in catering that is remarkable when one considers her youth. She is a C. I. A. graduate. She had charge of the high school cafeteria in Denton and was dietician at C. I. A. summer school.

Through the past season, she attended Columbia university summer school, going there to get her master's degree. She had special food courses under Miss Shapley, a teacher of fine cooking probably unsurpassed in America. Under other teachers, she had classes in special serving and she also worked in "quantity cooking classes."

The quantity class serving, which will especially help Mrs. Kirksey in her forum work, was in preparing menus and serving luncheons to the instructors in Columbia university, from 175 to 200 per day.

Mrs. C. P. Burton, president of the Woman's Forum for the coming year, has a sister, Miss Beason, who is a member of the house committee of the largest clubhouse in America, the American Woman's association's $8,000,000 building, accommodating 1,250 residents and catering to thousands.

Miss Beason made it a point to entertain Miss Kirksey while she was in New York in this ideal woman's building and to have her shown the inner workings of the dining room and kitchen. All the delicacies of a French cuisine tickle the tongue in that gay dining room, seating 285. All opportunities for observation have been seized by Mrs. Kirksey so that it would not seem unwise to forecast that the forum dining room will prove a most popular place for luncheons and dinners in the coming season.

The building is shiningly clean and ready for its opening on this day.

EL'PHUNTS

El'phunts walk
Like this and that.
They're ter'bly big
And ter'bly fat.
They have no hands
And have no toes,
But goodness gracious!
What a nose!
Their noses could—my uncle tells—
Just pick up me like peanut shells!

Look out for me or I'll get you,
For I'm a great big el'phunt too!

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS L. N. CASON

To those who at times love solitude, there could be no lovelier place to loiter in a summer twilight than on the forum grounds. The trees are dark green against the sky and the little silver green spruce, bending so slightly in the evening breeze, are lovely enough to make one's heart ache.

◆ ◆ ◆

Ivy is growing in clinging masses against the creamy walls. It has folded one chimney in its embrace.

◆ ◆ ◆

The sky is mauve and misty blue with blue clouds in the rosy west. For the first time in months, we hear the birds singing at twilight. Just a soft twitter, sounding like the love notes in a mother's voice.

◆ ◆ ◆

We wonder if everything is so fresh and green in special deference to the new hostess! We expected, somehow, to find a staid and dignified personage. But she is young and blithe and bonny. She has a sence of humor that will help her over hard places.

She is a little person, but has alert vigor and a personality that will lose no color in contact with other personalities.

We were speaking of horizons and, going back to that subject, we believe that the A. W. A. clubhouse in New York is something that vision seeing eyes glimpsed on a far horizon and made come true.

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, Sept. 1 (US)—From England comes the news that at Wicken Fen, Cambridgeshire, 500 acres of wild butterfly farm was swept by fire. "The entire farm is a vast expanse of charred shrubbery and blackened fields"—and butterflies.

Imagine trying to keep our butterflies on a farm!

They get burned on Broadway too.

About the last word in weddings took place on the Riviera this month. A girl from Kansas City and a man who hailed from Constantinople, married in bathing suits dripping wet and barefoot. Twelve friends all in bathing suits accompanied them. The mayor of Antibes, who married them, said he didn't know any law against such wedding costumes, but he was of course, like all of us, entitled to his own opinion.

Imagine anyone making a serious or a sacred promise with water dripping off the chin.

A Mrs. D who probably is in dire distress, sends a personal to eastern paper, and it heads the column in this fashion:

These pie-eyed compositors.

Pittsburgh's motor club secretary has issued a warning to men against petting while driving automobiles.

That shows who it is that does the petting—a man driving a car doesn't instigate anything, he submits and tries to keep his amateur standing by a slight reciprocity. But it is why cars fall off cliffs—run into posts and otherwise misbehave.

It was gallant of him to issue the warning to men. He kept his standing by his suggestion.

The new road signs should read —"Park and Pet." You can always reform people if you suggest something just as good.

A Chicago man was arrested for sitting on a fence watching the swimming pool on ladies' day at Dvorak park. The Chicago police thought he was crazy. The doctors said he was nothing of the sort.

That's a Chicago policeman's idea of crime.

A Kentucky woman married a man she thought was without matrimonial experience. For their honeymoon trip he took her to Detroit and showed her his nine children.

She turned around and went straight back to Kentucky.

Half of the women marry men they know very slightly, and the other half look them up in Dunn and Bradstreet. Honeymoon lane is even more revealing than Bradstreet.

Few Women Run True to Form, Says Dorothy Dix

How Can Women Be Called Standardized When a Lifetime Isn't Long Enough to Find Out What Any One Woman Is Going to do or Be or Say Next, Queries Dorothy Dix.

William J. Locke says that women are becoming standardized. What nonsense! Not only are no two women alike but no one woman is like herself at two different times. Every woman changes her looks, her age, her character and her disposition as often as she does her clothes, and that is why she is never a safe bet. You never can tell what she is going to be or do next.

It is men who run true to form, not women. It is men who fit themselves to the pattern of their fellow men. Look over any assemblage of men and they are as much alike as peas in a pod. They all have on the same kind of clothes, the same stripe of shirts, the same cut of collar, the same sort of shoes. Indeed, such a cult do they make of the art of understudying each other that nothing short of dire necessity induces them to appear in public in trousers that are a hairsbreadth wider or narrower than those that every other man has on.

Formerly you could distinguish one man from another by the variety he introduced in landscaping his whiskers, but now even that mark of distinction has been shaved off and nothing short of intuition enables a woman to pick out her own husband in a crowd.

When a clerk wants to sell a man a coat he tells him that it is what everybody is wearing, but when he wants to sell one to a woman he swears to her that it is an original model and that no other woman in the world has one like it. Men may like to look other like it. Men mak like to look like other men, but no woman wants to resemble a sister woman. Look about you at any feminine convention and it is like a kaleidoscope of changing, shifting colors and forms.

Men are also much more mentally like each other than women are like other women. They think along the same lines, whereas every woman has a different individual opinion. That is why you can unionize men and herd them into political parties where they will stay put and vote straight, but every woman is a law unto herself and liable to change her convictions at a moment's notice and be first on one side of the political fence and then on the other.

It is ridiculous to talk about women being standardized when the individual woman changes so from time to time that if you don't see a friend for six months or so you are liable not to recognize her when you meet her.

For when you parted with dear Sally she may have been a fat lady with a billowy figure and triple chin, but when you encounter her again she has become a slim creature who is a perfect 38. Or she may have had sandy hair that was straight as a poker and now her face is framed in wavy locks of Titian red, and likely as not the next time you see her she will have changed into a brunette. Or she may have been frankly middle-aged, with saggy cheeks and crow's feet around her eyes and tired lines about her mouth, but now you behold her with the round and unmarked face of a child.

And it is the same way with women's characters. All of us have known puritanical women who suddenly turned into racketeers and frequenters of night clubs and who boasted of getting drunk. We have known domestic women, staid mothers of families, who, after walking the colic for 20 years, faced about and went mad over having wild parties.

And we have known the reverse of this. Fool women who in some crisis acted like Solomon himself; wild women who settled down into being the sheet anchors of their homes. Extravagant women who turned into dime-nursers and penny-pinchers.

We have all seen women who would go into hysterics over any strife go through some great ordeal with the calmness and courage of a hero. We have seen sick, neurotic women, who have made a profession of invalidism, get up from their couches and go to work and support their husbands and children, if the necessity arose. We have seen silly, selfish women with apparently no more heart or brains or character than a rag doll, rise to the heights of sublime self-sacrifice.

So how are you going to standardize these creatures who are contradictions in themselves? Why, there isn't even any type of woman. We speak of good women and bad women, of society butterflies and business girls, of domestic girls and flappers, but these terms mean nothing. There is no class of girls upon which we can really pin these labels with any assurance that they will live up to their brands, for a girl may be one thing today and another thing tomorrow, or what is more likely she may be in herself all of the various outputs of her sex.

It is because women are not standardized that makes marriage such a gamble for a man, because there is no possibility of his knowing beforehand just what is in the little surprise package of femininity in which he is investing his all. It doesn't do him a bit of good to decide beforehand that what he wants in a wife is an old-fashioned girl, or a home-loving girl, or a girl who is a good cook, or a thrifty girl, or a girl who knows how to make her own clothes.

Nor does it profit him to pass up as a wife the girl who is gay and frivolous, or the girl who dances holes in her slippers, or the girl who dresses like a fashion plate, for likely as not the girl who has had a wild time is tired of dancing and wants to settle down, while the girl who has never had a chance to step out can't get enough of running about and never wants to stay at home.

Likely as not the girl who has never cooked a meal in her life will be crazy over having a kitchen of her own and learn to be an expert cook, while the girl who has always had to cook is sick of pots and pans and comes out of the kitchen to stay when she gets married. And often as not the girl who has spent papa's money like water holds on to her own with a death grip.

And there you are. Every man is not married to one woman, but a hundred women, and he never knows which one is going to meet him when he comes home. Which, perhaps, explains why men understand their wives so little. A lifetime is not long enough in which to get acquainted with all the different varieties of lady to which they are united. Hence we needn't worry about women becoming standardized like canned goods and automobiles. It is one of the things that can't be done.

—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—In one of your recent articles you say: "Love is a gift of the gods. You cannot make that, no matter how hard you try." I distinctly object to all statements maintaining the involuntary character of the emotion of love. Love is not a gift of the gods but the fruit of a sound personal character. The argument that love cannot be controlled by the lover is only a libertine's argument, constantly used as an excuse for conjugal worthlessness. It is possible and highly advisable and necessary to control not only the emotion of love but every other emotion as well by action of the will. Otherwise morals are piffle, self-control a myth and growth in grace a figment of a silly imagination. L. R.

Answer: I agree with you that it is highly advisable and necessary to control the emotion of love and every other emotion as well, but if you have found out how to do it you have discovered more than any other human being knows and you should pass this great discovery on to a passion-ridden world.

There is sorrow, for example. It is useless to grieve over our dead. Not all of our tears will bring them back to us. Tell us how to put the memories that break our hearts out of our minds. Teach us hoy to forget by an act of the will. There is anxiety. And despair. And regret. So many things that sadden our lives that we would like to put from us if we only knew how.

As for love being a matter of the will and subject to control, I am afraid all experience goes against you. Nobody knows why he loves or why some particular person is just "it" with him. After we fall in love with some man or woman we wrap him or her up in the mantle of our imaginations and endow him or her with every virtue and charm. But, as a matter of fact, I doubt if any man ever fell in love with a girl just because she was good or intelligent or domestic or if any man ever fired a girl's fancy because he was honest and honorable and a leader in the prayer meeting.

If love could be made to order, John would be smitten with that nice, sensible, homely girl, with a tidy fortune who is a good cook and a good housekeeper and would make a splendid wife that his mother has picked out for him. He knows she is the kind of girl he should marry, but the one he feels he will die if he doesn't get is some little creature who is fire and quicksilver and who hasn't a penny to bless herself with or a single domestic quality.

And who can tell what makes one fall out of love? Who can tell why we get bored, why we lose interest, why the charms that once allured us fall flat? All we know is that they do, that we get fed up on a person as we do on a dish and lose our taste for it.

Very few married people would fall out of love if they could help themselves, because that always means trouble and heartache and the breaking of bonds that are not easy to sever.

We can control our actions, but not love. DOROTHY DIX.

We Women

By BETTY BRAINERD

Air-Minded

Every women who has a child is faced with the problem of flying, that is, unless she wishes to be relegated by her family to the shelf where reposed those old ladies who balked at the steam-cars and more recently their sisters who regarded the horseless-carriage as the work of Beelzebub himself.

A number of women realize this and yet I am told on good authority that the chief sales-resistance in aviation comes from women.

Women forbid their husbands to go up in aeroplanes, they ignore the enthusiasm of their sons and daughters and come out with a flat refusal when the youngsters want to know if they may adopt aviation as a profession. They avow that rather than fly they would use a pistol as a means of shuffling off this mortal coil!

In short, many ardent devotees notwithstanding, most women are afraid to fly.

According to Miss Amelia Earhart, who was a passenger on my glorious flight from New York to Los Angeles, this is all a matter of early training.

Your girl baby is brought up along lines that tend to stress her femininity and render her awkward in those accomplishments her brother just naturally has forced upon him. Tea-sets, dolls, cook-stoves and miniature sewing-machines remain the principal toy-fare of little girls. Women are conventional, unadventurous, and nothing in their early years tends to make them less so.

Nowadays I cannot understand the reason for specific "woman's work" and "man's work." I have never fathomed why the hammer, the screw-driver and the monkey-wrench should be mysterious to a woman, or why a man should not upon necessity sew on a button or wield the broom.

But women aren't brought up to be mechanical-minded. They know little or nothing of the natures of pistons, motors and such things. And it is the unknown that we most fear.

It's all in the training. The generation of air-minded women will have had their training, according to Miss Earhart, before they are 5.

Of course that doesn't help us of this generation. We must just give up or else fly and perhaps suffer—suffer until the idea of transportation by air shall have become so much a matter of course that it is acceptable even to those untrained, timorous and tradition-bound spirits.

Miss Brainerd wishes to help her readers whenever possible. Write her, sending stamped, self-addressed envelope for personal reply.

'SECESSION' OF SNYDER LOOMS

Town May Join Jackson County

Special to The Record News

ALTUS, Okla., Sept. 1.—Details of the possibilities of Snyder being annexed to Jackson county from Kiowa county will be drawn up by a committee of Snyder business men and submitted to the county attorney and commissioners here for further considerations as the result of a meeting held in Snyder Thursday afternoon.

Jackson county commissioners and a committee from the Altus Chamber of Commerce conferred with Snyder on the feasibility of the proposition and it was decided that detailed information should be given up and presented to the Jackson county officials for investigation.

Snyder and a vicinity of from 75 to 81 square miles is considering the withdrawal from Kiowa county in order that a better road program may be worked out for the town. Snyder townspeople and farmers complain that Kiowa county commissioners have been negligent in helping to construct roads in that part of Kiowa county.

In the hopes that the highway conditions may be improved Snyder residents are making an appeal to both Tillman and Jackson counties for aid. Propositions are being made to both counties and Snyder plans to accept the best offer.

The territory property and farm land has a valuation of $2,000,000.

Information that is drawn up concerning the Snyder territory will be submitted to Lonnie Yates, county attorney, and an investigation will be made as to the costs of transferring records of Snyder community from Kiowa county records to the records of this county.

If Jackson county approves the plan, permission will be asked of Gov. W. J. Holloway to call a special election in Snyder and an election in Jackson county. A majority vote favoring annexation must be cast before the proposition could be legally effected.

According to the plans of the Snyder committee, the information will be drawn up as quickly as possible and sent to officials here. The Snyder committee is hoping to have the matter definitely settled before the first of the year.

Seymour Teachers To Meet Sept. 5-6

Special to The Record News

SEYMOUR, Texas, Sept. 1.—The county institute, including the Seymour schools, common schools and Westover and Bomarton independent schools, will meet in the high school building Sept. 5 and 6. County Superintendent J. T. Frederick Cotton Man Sees 68,365 Bale Crop

Special to The Record News.

FREDERICK, Okla., Sept. 1.—After spending part of each day the past week visiting cotton fields in the various parts of Tillman county, B. Robey, local cotton dealer, estimates this year's ginning at 68,365 running bales.

In order that he might not be influenced Robey took no one with him when he inspected the various cotton fields.

Last year Robey estimated Tillman's crop at about 55,000 bales, whereas 68,586 bales were ginned, according to the federal report. This is the greatest mistake he has ever made in his estimate for the county. The only time his estimate was too high was in 1924 when he was off about 700. Actual ginnings that year were 96,487 bales.

PAVING STARTS AT GRAHAM

Mayor Dumps First Shovel Of Dirt in Project

Special to The Record News

GRAHAM, Texas, Sept. 1.—Mayor A. B. Eddleman of Graham dumped the first shovelful of dirt as the initial step taken in Graham's $150,000 paving program, last Thursday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Besides the mayor, Dr. H. E. Griffin, president of the chamber of commerce, Secretary Ed C. Burris, and Councilmen A. A. Morrison, C. B. Hockaday, T. O. Calvin and R. M. Williams; City Clerk R. F. Fowler, City Engineer J. P. Tackett, and a number of other Graham citizens were present for the ceremony Before the entire paving program is completed Graham will have some five miles of paved streets in the most popular residential districts, as well as all of the business district. The next street to be under construction will likely be East Fourth street so as to connect the east and west highways giving a hard surfaced connection through the city of Graham. All the streets leading off the square will be from 51 to 54 feet wide for the first one or two blocks, after which they will be narrowed down to 36 to 40 feet. All pavement will be of bitulithic type on a concrete base.

H. L. Markland of the West Texas Construction company, which company has the paving contract, states the work is progressing nicely.

The city is re-locating all the water mains in the streets that are to be paved and in many instances are putting in new and larger pipes so as to take care of the increased growth of the city. J. P. Tackett, city engineer, is in charge of the work for the city.

BENJAMIN'S MARROW BONES

Daily Editorial

CONSIDER Benjamin Franklin, who thought of almost everything and made the most of nothing.

Opportunity showed him a larger line of samples than any prospect since Roger Bacon.

With the most fertile mind of his century, he was forever hatching possibilities and deserting the chicks in the nest.

Statesman and author, editor and scientist, inventor and philosopher, mechanic and publisher—he sprayed his industry and buttered his genius over so many fields that his talents could not completely saturate any.

His imagination had the appetite of a dozen intellects, but it was a roving, nibbling curosity—a munching knowledge-hunger—with little preferential voracity. His brain was, incurably polygamous, constantly wedding a new interest; enamoured in turn of each, and everlastingly devoted to none.

He drew the Lamp of Aladdin from the clouds but did not give it a solitary rub. Radio, telephone, incandescent light and rapid transit were pass-keys on his kite—within the scope of his ingenuity.

Present storehouses of power and energy were at his finger-tips, as they were available when Archimedes angled for fleets from Hero's walls, and Chaldea made magic at Ur.

◇ ◇ ◇

HE DESIGNED the first practical coal stove, constructed the best pre-cylinder printing press, produced bi-focal spectacles, conducted a sprightly but thunderless newspaper, left behind an indelible collection of aphorisms (muchly cribbed from the Ancients), wrote an important biography, originated our postal service, and brilliantly filled two ambassadorships.

He might as easily have been a president of the United States, a Marcus Aurellus, a Horace Greeley, A Watts, Darwin or Edison. And with no great effort, all of them in one.

But history inclines to regard him rather as a map-maker than explorer; fame prefers to place him with the scouts of achievement. He does not quite rank with Galileo or Newton, or the sires of astrolabe and compass.

His personality shoulders his performances from the spotlight. He looms among sober, Puritan-minded contemporaries like a vivid portrait on a wall of monochromes. Picturesque, colorful, glib and nimble-witted—his naive shallows and diplomatic depths inspired European enthusiasms that still largely decide the dimensions in which celebrity paints him.

Had he focused his gifts on a single objective, he should have become an acetylene torch. He had much more fun being a skyrocket.

The grim, dull battles to be waged upon the quandaries which beset the quests of science (much as fabulous dragons beleaguer fairy castles), were not in his mood. He did not fancy the St. George lance. He was hardly of Bell's patient breed, or Ford's pertinacious stripe.

He was too versatile for doggedness. If the bone was overhard, he had plenty of others with easier reached marrow.

Most of us are like that—we regularly abandon feasible projects because they are not immediately seizable.

No track is so full of pickups as the trail to yesterday. Search it for "marrow bones."

DAVID BRANCH'S DAILY FILOSOFY

"He who violates his conscience pays the penalty." Deep, deep within our consciousness, we discover the gentle promptings of The Still Small Voice, ever urging us upward to higher and nobler thoughts and deeds. This is the voice of God to mortal man and always leads to victory, those who have the courage and faith to follow.

What this country needs is some method of increasing the price of everything without adding to the cost of living.

Sacrificed—for What?

THE TWO Swiss flyers, apparently, are lost. Like so many other airmen who tried the perilous Atlantic crossing in a plane that was not quite up to the job, they have vanished without leaving a trace.

A great deal is being said and written about the needless sacrifice of it. We are hearing again that these flyers, like their predecessors, have thrown away their lives for no good purpose.

Now all of that is perfectly true; yet it is necessary to emphasize, once more, that none of these tragic aerial ventures is ever a total loss. The world can never be reminded too often that there are men to whom ease, comfort and a long life are unimportant things.

Go to a library some day and read the journal of the Greeley arctic expedition, sent into the northland by the U. S. army a matter of four decades ago.

You will read there the simple, unvarnished account of a little group of soldiers, marooned on a desolate ice-bound island, without food, without boats, without any hope of escape. Week after week they stayed there, uncomplaining, averting starvation by eating shrimps and a wretched variety of moss. One by one they died. Storms beat upon them; occasionally the journal remarks that one or another member of the party died in the night, but that "we were too weak to bury his body until two days later."

Rescue finally came—when all but seven of the party were dead. The survivors, crippled and emaciated, were brought back to this country.

Not one of us is in any material way better off for the work of that expedition. It hasn't added to our comfort, security or happiness. But was it, then, a total waste? Did the men who died in the frozen north die for nothing?

Of course not. They were followers of a grand old tradition, just as the too-hopeful aviators of 1929 are its followers; men who, in the old phrase, "despised the world," and welcomed a chance to risk all they had for a tussle with mankind's oldest enemy, fear.

The world has always had men of this type, and it has used them prodigally. They have left their bones on lonely ice floes, in burning deserts, in savage wilderness; they have struggled and cursed and died on distant sea lanes, on cannibal-infested islands, on remote mountain peaks; they have gone out with banners and trumpets, and they have gone out unsung and unnoticed; and sometimes the stay-at-homes have profited by their sacrifice and sometimes they have not.

But one thing we have always gained from them. They have proved, again and again, in peril and pain, that there is something in man that is higher than the ape and tiger; something that cannot be content with easy days and quiet nights, but that demands combat with the wild force of nature itself.

And there is that to remember when you think of the lost Swiss fliers.

Fairness Is Good Business

SOME little time ago the famous Rocky Mountain Fuel company sought to insure industrial peace in its coal mines by introducing more liberal wage scales, working rules and methods of dealing with its employes. A recent report from the president of the concern indicates that the effort has been highly successful.

After citing increased sale stonnage and production under the new regime, his report says:

"The men employed in and around the mines of the Rocky Mountain Fuel company received an average wage of $7.95 per day during the first quarter of 1929. While the wage contract increased the earnings of the men, as we desired it should, it has not resulted in increased production costs zecause of the cooperation and increased efficiency which have characterized the new relationship.

"The effective working of the contract is further shown by the fact that the pit committees and mine superintendents are satisfactorily settling complaints. Only two cases in 11 months have been appealed from the decisions of the pit committees and superintendents."

This is extremely gratifying news. It is becoming increasingly evident that a humanitarian policy is, after all, onlyl good business.

The Changes of 70 Years

IT IS interesting to note that just 70 years ago the 25th of this month the first producing oil well in the United State swas drilled in Pennsylvania.

Seventy ycars—precisely the scriptural "three score and 10" of the average lifetime! The results that have followed on the drilling of that first well are almost incalculable.

We are a motorized nation—which means, of course, tht our economic and social machine could not function without oil. That one well has multiplied to more than 325,000. Oil has completely changed our entire life. Somehow, it seems as if that first well ought to have some kind of tablet in memorial. It was the beginning of a new era.

The Dangerous Weakling

THE CHIEF TROUBLE with the modern desperado is that he doesn't look the part. Willie Doody was captured in Chicago recently. He was wanted for all kinds of violent crimes, was labeled "extremely dangerous" by the police. Yet his pictures show him as a juvenile, weak looking chap, seemingly too timid and spineless to be a menace to anybody.

It was the revolver that transformed him, of course, making him the equal of the huskiest policeman on the force. Probably he bears out the old police contention that the coward, who shoots through fear, is the most dangerous man of all.

READ THIS FIRST

Charlotte Chatterton, nicknamed Chatty, is a born gossip. Her mother, a widowed dressmaker, through a wealthy customer gets Chatty a position as telephone operator at the Van Nuys Co bonds. Chatty with her incessant chattering and gossip, creates havoc. She falls in love with one of the up-and-coming bond salesmen, David Jordan. He is interested in her, but when her gossip causes Agnes Herford to lose her position David passes her up. Later Chatty listens in on all of David's phone conversations and he finally "calls" her down in front of the office people. Chatty's girl friend, Billie Langenau, a file clerk, and Winnie Talcott, Mr. Van's secretary, have some lively parties. Chatty has dates with a newcomer to the office, Bryant Dunning, who is married but says his wife has left him. Chatty goes with Bryant more to spite David.

Chatty overhears a phone conversation and learns that David is going to leave Van Nuys and go to work at the Midas bank. Chatty believes David is copying the bond-buyers' names at Van Nuys' and runs to Mr. Van with the story. Mr. Van knows all about it, and tells Chatty she can apologize to David or leave her position. Chatty quits rather than apologize to David. Later, she meets David as he is leaving, and secretly apologizes to him. Chatty looks for a new position.

Now Go on With the Story

CHAPTER XLI

Chatty had checked half a dozen advertisements in the help wanted column; four of them called for P. B. X. operators, and two for filing clerks. All of them were "apply in person."

Chatty's confidence in getting a job was due to inexperience; she had so easily stepped from her first to her second and only other position, that she had no idea of the difficulties she was to encounter.

The first place to which she applied was a large department store. She asked a floorwalker where to go. He sent her to some one called a "personnel officer." Chatty had to pass a telephone girl and a secretary before she was finally admitted to the presence of this august official; to Chatty's surprise "he" was a woman!

"I called to apply for the position of switchboard operator!" began Chatty, confidently.

The woman looked at her appraisingly. Then she handed Chatty an application blank. Chatty had to fill it out; her name, age, address, married or single; if married, living with husband or not, children or not; previous experience; last place, reason for leaving, references, religion.

Chatty wrote happily until she reached "last place" and "reason for leaving." What could she say? But hesitation would never do! The woman was watching her. She wrote "Van Nuys, Bonds" as her "last place" and "desire for new opportunity" as reason for leaving. Then she was faced with the problem of giving references; Van Nuys of course, would not do. Chatty wrote "Bryant Dunning," and gave his home address, and "Robert H Haddon," who was the family grocer!

The "personnel" officer looked over her sheet, nodded casually and said: "If we want you, we will send for you, Miss Chatterton. Good morning."

And Chatty knew, without telling, that she would not hear further from this application. What she did not know was that too much powder, rouge and lipstick had told the personnel officer that Chatty was not the mental type desired on a busy switchboard.

Her next application was in a busy law office; Winnerton, Winnerton, Hastings and Glover was the name on the door.

Mr. Glover, the junior partner, interviewed her. He asked only her name, address and experience at first. When he heard that it was limited to a few months in one place he turned away.

"Sorry. We want a girl of at least two years' experience!"

So that was that.

Chatty began to feel a little discouraged. But she plodded faithfully to the next address, which was a commission house, selling food supplies. It was in the market section of the city, and Chatty turned up her little sharp nose at the fishy meaty smells.

Mr. Gorham was a fat little man with nervous, pig's eyes; he was almost entirely bald, and his ears stood out from his head. Chatty took an instant dislike to him.

"File clerk, eh? Pretty young, ain't you?" he asked. "But maybe you'll do—"

Chatty's heart leaped.

"What kind of a girl are you? Like to stay home with mother and read? Or do you like a little party now and then?"

Had Mr. Van Nuys asked such a question, Chatty would have known the answer. But there was a leer behind the question, and a flash of the narrow little eyes that told Chatty that if she wanted his job she'd better like parties and a good time.

Something inside her turned upside down; she felt sick.

"I never go on parties!" she answered shortly. "I am a home girl."

Mr Gorham turned away indifferently. "Too young!" he stated.

Chatty left with her head high and her cheeks burning!

But it was an easy experience compared to the next place she tried for. This was in a bank. Chatty had not visualized the address, and when she found herself in the great banking room of the Second National her heart leaped again—for David was to work in a bank! Suppose it was this bank! Even if it wasn't, didn't bankers visit each other's banks?

Chatty was directed to the second assistant office manager; to her great surprise she found that the part of the bank which didn't show was bigger than what did. Upstairs were dozens of great rooms and, apparently, hundreds of clerks.

"If you can qualify, can you go to work right away?" was the first question. "We need another operator now, this minute—"

Indeed she could! She'd begin at once! Chatty began to draw off her gloves!

"Just a minute. Where did you work last?"

Chatty told him.

"Oh, I know Mr. Van Nuys well!" The officer drew a telephone to him and called the familiar number. Chatty froze in her chair. What could she do? Where could she turn? Mr. Van Nuys would say!—Oh, what wouldn't he say!

But there was nothing to do but sit there and take it.

She heard her name spoken, then a long silence. Then "Thank you, Van!" and the phone clicked.

Chatty's face flamed red. She rose without waiting to be dismissed.

But the bank officer was very gentle. He said only: "I am sorry, Miss Chatterton, but Mr. Van Nuys tells me that you were only on the switchboard a short time. I am afraid we need someone with more experience!"

Chatty blessed him in her sore heart for being a gentleman.

Of course Mr. Van Nuys had torn her reputation to pieces! She could hear the words in imagination: liar, tale bearer, trouble maker—

At the end of the day, having answered her six advertisements with no success, and having listed her name with two employment agencies, to one of which she paid a two-dollar fee, and to the other of which she promised her first week's salary in any position she accepted through them, Chatty returned home, dispirited and blue.

She found a note waiting for her: "Call me, six-thirty. Bryant." She sighed in relief. Just a little ride. Oh, yes, David and his smile! But a girl must have some fun! And Chatty wanted sympathy.

She got it—and many kisses—from Bryant, when she went riding with him. She also had several unwise drinks of gin, not mixed in a cocktail, but straight from the hip flask. By 10 o'clock Chatty had forgotten her blue day, her jobless state, her longing for David, her shame at her discharge, her troublesome tongue.

"Give me another driving lesson, Bryant, darlin'!" she begged. "And then—Oh, then take me home to your diggings and let's have a little private dance and another lil' drink!"

Chatty missed the flash in Bryant's eyes. He was all attention in the driving lesson; and Chatty, keyed up by her excitement and the poisonous liquor, responded well to his efforts. When she finally succeeded in shifting gears without a clash, not once, but again and again, Bryant applauded wildly. His words were punctuated with kisses.

"Now let's go home!" he suggested. "I can show you something there, too, about steering—in a dance!"

"All right!" agreed Chatty. She had sobered a little, and rather regretted her offer. She remembered she had agreed with herself that she had better not go to Bryant's—

But fate, in the form of a police officer, interfered with Bryant's plans, if any. In a great hurry to get home, Bryant "stepped on her" so hard that he did not hear the gatling gun explosions of a motorcycle. Only when a khaki-clad arm waved him over to the curb did he realize that he was arrested.

"What do you think you are, an express train?" demanded the officer. "Drive to the second precinct, young fellow, and if you're wise you'll do it at twenty an hour or less! I'll be right with you—"

"Aw, officer, Have a heart and give me a ticket. Don't you see I got the little lady with me?"

"Sure, I see! You can put her in the first taxi we pass, for all I care! But we don't give tickets for 40-mile-an-hour driving! On your way—"

Bryant pleaded and begged, but the officer was adamant. To the station he drove. Chatty refused to leave him and go home in a taxi. It wasn't sporting. But she found the station rough and uncouth, and the men who stood around in it eyed her impersonally as if she had been an insect.

Luckily, Bryant had the collateral they required—twenty-five dollars.

"You were a decent sport to stick around!" Bryant said, as they started home. "Let's forget it now and—"

But Chatty had changed her mind.

"I don't feel like it now, Bryant, and neither do you. Take me home, please."

It was after two in the morning when his car drove up in front of her home. Knowing that her evening was innocent more by chance and good luck than firmness on her part, Chatty kissed the "boy friend" good night very soberly, and crept into the apartment on tiptoe, hoping her mother would not hear.

Being jobless and a good sport at the same time was not as easy as she had thought.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—I had a highly interesting taxicab ride the other day with Vincent Youmans, the composer. As befits a man of his position, he was on his way from the theatrical district to Wall street. Youmans is very young, very modest and very earnest. He says he likes jazz in its place, and one of the places it shouldn't be heard is in a symphony orchestra. That, to him, is a waste of musicians, like putting an airplane motor in a tiny roadster. He doesn't look down on jazz, but he feels that a small orchestra, with a piano, a few strings and some brass, can do all that is necessary to play jazz well.

Youmans was working on a new musical comedy. I asked him how he worked. He told me that when he gets an assignment to do a musical comedy, he goes to his stock of tunes, chooses a few, and makes them the basis of his work. He is always thinking of tunes and setting them down, so there is usually a plentiful supply at hand. The first care is to get some song hits—numbers that the audience will hum and whistle as it leaves the theater. A good show should have at least three such numbers, with two or three more almost as striking. A song hit, he told me, is almost invariably in four-four time, and waltzes are only exceptions to this rule.

One of the shows he has been working on was intended originally to be an operetta—considerably more dignified than a musical comedy. But the producer who engaged him decided to make it a musical comedy. That meant that all the music must be changed. A musical comedy requires different types of singers, and the score had to be rewritten to fit the voices of the stars the producer had in mind.

Feminine Secret

The other day a truly charming woman confided to me a secret that should be the despair of perfumers whose scents cost $25 to $100 an ounce. She has been, she said, the envy of all her feminine acquaintances, who have been wondering where she finds the distinctive, elusive and disturbing perfume that she uses.

"I used to tell them what it was, when they asked me," she said, "but none of them seemed at all grateful for the tip. I'll tell you, however, even though you didn't ask me, because it will interest men. It's a barbers' talcum powder—the kind that comes in big tin cans.

"About a year ago I had to catch a train in a hurry, and I forgot to take any face powder along. I dashed into the railroad station barber shop, and asked if they had any powder. They sold me one of those big cans. It isn't as good as women's face powder, but you men certainly do know your perfumes."

◇ ◇ ◇

More Fish

The goldfish, they tell me, is coming back in style. A generation ago, every house had its aquarium in the parlor, and it was usually a very elaborate aquarium. Then goldfish passed from popularity, and the parlor aquarium found its way to the junk shop or the trash heap. But now the shiny little fish are in greater demand than ever. Instead of being put on display in the parlor, however, they are put in private outdoor ponds and pools. Nearly every suburban home has at least a bird bath set in the lawn, and lily ponds are to be found even in small yards. These places, naturally, are fine housekeeping sites for mosquitoes. Goldfish simply dote on mosquito larvae—hence the present demand. There is, I am told, one goldfish for every five persons in the United States.

It's Free

Wide-eyed New Yorkers, who are really more awe-struck at their own great city than visitors from Dubuque, are still merrily announcing lists of the seven or eight wonders of the metropolis. They include, as I have indicated before, nearly everything from the Metropolitan museum to the water supply system. And I think that no list is really complete unless it includes the opportunity the city offers for getting something for nothing.

There are ways, for example, of "crashing" the Metropolitan Opera house and Carnegie hall. Many theaters do not issue door checks to patrons who come out for a sniff of air during intermission and it is possible, by mingling with the crowd on the sidewalk and drifting indoors with it, to see a charming variety of second and third acts of plays, and second acts of musical shows.

Nor is amusement all that is offered. Leave out food, clothing and lodging, anything else can be obtained free. Expert legal advice may be had for the asking, and so may nearly any kind of education. One has a choice of eighty-seven trades that are offered in vocational schools. Free libraries (including those of the colleges, which may be "crashed" with the right approach) offer one the choice of 6,500,000 books.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

The Fact About the Voice With a Sob

(A Broadway orchestra manager, Bert Lown, is suing Rudy Vallee, alleging that he taught him the sob, which has made his singing such a hit over the radio).

Q.—Now then, Mr. Lown, when did you first see Rudy Vallee?

A.—In the year of 1927.

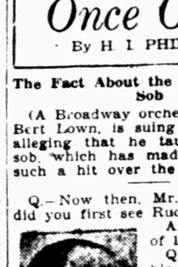

Q.—What was his condition at that time?

A.—He was just a Yale boy with a dented saxophone and all the words of "Boola-Boola."

Q.—What did he want?

A.—He wanted a job in an orchestra.

Q.—Did he express any desire to sing?

PHILLIPS

A.—No, that came later.

Q.—How was his voice?

A.—It was fair, but it had no sob.

Q.—Now then, where did Mr Vallee get the sob, which has since made him a great radio star?

A.—I taught it to him.

Q.—How?

A.—I'd sob and then he'd sob after me. We put in long hours at it.

Q.—How did he sob at first?

A.—He was terrible. There was a time when I thought we'd have to cut out the sob and put in a gurgle.

Q.—How was he at gurgling?

A.—Not much better. I had him go back to the sob after a couple of trials.

Q.—What made you so persistent in your efforts to put a sob into his voice?

A.—I thought the time was ripe for it. Orchestra leaders had tried everything else.

Q.—Up to the time you and Vallee got together there had been no great night-club sobbers?

A.—Only among the customers.

Q.—How long was it before Mr. Vallee acquired a sob sufficient to meet with your requirements?

A.—Well, it was a long hard struggle. I was getting pretty discouraged and one day I decided to have it out with him. I called him into my private office and talked to him straight from the shoulder, I said, "Rudy, you're not giving me your best sob."

Q.—What did he say?

A.—He said, "Mr. Lown, I am giving you the best sob in my system."

Q.—Then what did you say?

A.—I said, "You're holding out on me, Rudy, but I'll give you one more chance. Give me the best sob you've got or out you go."

Q.—What happened then?

A.—Nothing. But a few days later he came bounding into my office with his face aglow and shouted, "Bert, I've got it!" "Got what?" I asked him. "The sob," he replied. "Are you positive?" I asked. "It came to me all of a sudden in the night," he said.

Q.—What did you do next?

A.—I locked all the doors and I said to Rudy, "Kid, lemme hear you." Well, I never heard a better sob in my life. The minute I heard it I knew he was made. I had him sign a contract at once giving me a percentage of his earnings for five years. The rest is history.

Q.—Has he carried out this alleged agreement?

A.—No.

Q.—What effect has this had on you?

A.—Every time I listen in on the radio I hear somebody making big money sobbing. If it isn't Rudy it's one of his 5,000 imitators. It's just about killing me!

Q.—Just one more question: Do you consider that Mr. Vallee has improved on the sob you taught him?

A.—No, but I have.

Q.—Since when?

A.—Since I realized how much he is getting per week!

Health and Diet Advice

Hip Reduction

Those who have a tendency to collect fatty weight around the hips have a hard problem on their hands to eliminate this unsightly deformity. Here are some of the principal causes: Overeating, lack of exercise, and glandular derangements.

The cure of any case of obesity depends upon a proper regulation of both exercise and the food intake.

A deficiency of thyroid secretion or of the secretion of the gonads may give one a tendency to the growth of excessive deposits of fat around the hips and buttocks, but even this cause must be remedied through the true curative and regulating methods of dieting and exercising.

Among office workers who sit all day there is a tendency to enlargement of the hips, as though the bank of nature insisted on making all fat deposits right in that region. In women this tendency has the result of making them appear settled and matronly long before they actually feel that way, and it becomes increasingly difficult to find patterns and clothes to fit, since dresses which are perfect everywhere else are too tight across the hips. It is almost pathetic to see these middle aged fat women trying to force themselves into little jaunty sweet sixteen dresses because they cannot bear to wear the conspicuously plain lines of the stylish stouts. As for the men, their figures are so designed that their shoulders should be far larger than their hips, but many men even under 40 who have good figures in every other way, will show the need for special tailoring around the hip line.

Much aspiration toward reduction has come from the moving pictures, since the slim heroes and heroines of the silver screen influence our ideas of what a perfect male or female form should be.

Many remedies have been tried for making special reductions in certain parts of the body. Rubber reducing garments have had a large scale, but with very indifferent results. Taking fat remedies containing thyroid extract will in some cases reduce the hips more than any other part, but this is always at the expense of the heart, and much serious heart trouble has been caused through the use of these remedies.

The electric vibrators and vibrating belts have come into popular use and are helpful as long as they are being used, but, of course, this vibrating, massaging effect can only be of temporary help.

The best exercises to take for hip reduction are swimming, walking, dancing, rope skipping, tennis and kicking exercises. Walking and swimming are probably the best and most effective for this kind of special reduction.

The diet should be in conformity with that required for any other kind of reduction—not over two meals a day, no sweets nor starches, but small amounts of proteins and plenty of green vegetables.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(Head Shakes)

Question—J. K. asks: "What causes the head to shake violently from side to side when one gets nervous? What is the cure for this condition?"

Answer—The head-shaking is due to a form of palsy and comes from a degeneracy of the nerves. The cure is to improve your health by hygienic measures, and to remove every mental or physical cause which may produce nervousness.

(Saccharin)

Question—Miss H. writes: "My father has diabetes and I want to know what kind of food this saccharin is that is being used as a substitute for sugar. The doctor has told him to abstain from all fruits and most vegetables (those that have sugar or starch in them) so to my mind, that leaves out the best foods.

Answer—Saccharin is often recommended to be used as a substitute for sugar, although it has no food value. It is one of the coal tar products and its continued use is unquestionably injurious. Practically all fruits may be used by the diabetic, as the fruit sugar alone is not sufficient to produce trouble as long as other sugar is not used. There are very few vegetables which are starchy. Potatoes contain from 14 per cent to 20 per cent, and Hubbard squash as high as 15 per cent. The rest of the vegetables are only medium starchy or non-starchy. Most of the starch which we use comes from the cereal foods and everything made from flour.

Water-brash

Question—Mrs. I. N. asks: "Will you please tell me what causes water brash? It bothers me through the night. Is it some kind of indigestion, and what do you think would stop it?"

Answer—Water-brash usually comes from overeating or using liquid with your meals. Try cutting down on the amount of food you are using at dinner, and do not use any liquids at all after 3 p. m

Old Highway Near Quanah Is Reopened

Special to The Record News.

QUANAH, Texas, Sept. 1.—The old highway No. 3 roadbed has been opened for travel pending the "seasoning" of the pavement on the new grade west from Quanah to the Childress county line. The last concrete was poured on this strip of road Wednesday. Detours south to the Paducah road from Acme and west have been abandoned. It will take about three weeks before travel will be allowed on the pavement. The old grade goes west out of Quanah on Second street.

SPUDDERS LOSE 7-6 AND TIE WACO CUBS 7-7 IN NIGHTCAP

BRUINS RALLY TO COP FIRST

Home Runs Again Feature In Band Box Park

WACO, Texas, Sept. 1.—Waco won the first one from the Spudders today by a score of 7 to 6 and hung on in the second to get a draw, 7 to 7, depriving Payne of his 27th victory.

The first game found Bill Harris in the box for the Cubs, despite his arm, while Lefty Wiltse was doing the hurling for the visitors. Wiltse got into trouble in the very first inning. After he had walked Mellano, Rye grounded to the pitcher but Wiltse threw too quickly to second, and also pulled Turgeon from the bag, both runners being safe. Blackerby shot a single over third, scoring Mellano, and when Turgeon kicked the throw to second around, Rye, playing heads up baseball, scored. Stuvengen hit into a double play and Warwick arched a fly over the left field wall for the Cubs' third run of the inning.

Harris' wildness got him in trouble in the second stanza. Turgeon led off with a single, and Gullic fanned. Bettencourt walked. Crouch popped out, but Wiltse caught Sanguinet playing far over toward center, and popped a double into left, scoring Turgeon. Then Harris walked two men, forcing in a run. With the bases full, Fitzgerald smacked a triple to center, scoring three men and giving the Spudders a lead of two runs.

Waco Takes Lead

With one out in Waco's half of the third, Rye walked. Blackerby surprised the boys by laying down a perfect bunt. The ball bounced from Stapleton's glove into right and Rye went all the way home while Blackerby ambled to third, tying the score as Stuvengen singled. Stapleton's high fly over the right field wall with none on in the fourth gave the Spudders a run lead. Turgeon robbed the Cubs in the fifth when Mellano led off with a single. Rye followed with a sizzling line drive which Turgeon reached out and took with his gloved hand, thereby choking off an impending rally for he turned it into a double play. Harris settled down and retired the Spudders without trouble in the fifth, sixth and seventh innings, while Wiltse retired the Cubs in the sixth in order. In the seventh, Piet doubled with one out but both Harris and Mellano were easy outs.

Rye opened Waco's eighth with a double, which lacked less than a foot of being a home run. Blackerby doubled into left, scoring Rye with the tying run. Stuvengen grounded to third, the ball getting by Bettencourt, and Blackerby moved to third, scoring on Warwick's sacrifice to deep center. That proved the winning run of the game although the Spudders threatened seriously in the ninth. Bettencourt, first up, was hit by a pitched ball. Bennett batted for Crouch. The first two pitches were balls and Harris was taken out in favor of Thurman.

Polly Falls

Thurman finally walked Bennett and then Tobin, batting for Wiltse, sacrificed the runners a notch. The winning run was on second and the tying run on third. Now Thurman gave a remarkable exhibition of relief hurling by forcing Stapleton to pop to Mellano and Sullivan to pop to Rye to end the ball game.

The second game found Wayne Pollan, recruit from the Cotton States league, and with the Cubs in the spring, in the box for the home team. He joined the club Sunday after being given his release early in the spring. He retired the Spudders in order in the first inning. George Payne, who has an opportunity to shatter all modern Texas league pitching records in matter of victories won, started the nightcap for the Spudders, Jeems Galloway being determined to make it an even break for the series. Joe Mellano hit a home run to start the game for the Cubs, and Blackerby singled, but was tossed out in attempting to go to third on Stuvengen's Texas leaguer to center.

Fred Bennett, starting his first game for the Spudders in some time, opened the second with his 26th home run of the season, a mighty smash a mile over the left field wall. In Waco's third with two out, Blackerby was hit by a pitched ball.

Stuvengen followed with a home run over the deep left center wall, and Heath cracked one over the right field wall to give the Cubs a three-run lead. Lapan claimed he caught a foul tip for Vigare's third strike, but umpire said, "Nay, nay." Galloway protested vigorously, while Lapan protested with too much emphasis and out of the game he went. The Spudders got a run in the fourth when both Fitzgerald and Bennett walked. Benton's single to center scored Fitzgerald, but as Rye fumbled momentarily, Bennett became too ambitious, tried to go to third, and was out on a perfect throw to Vigare.

Spudders Score

In the fifth with one out, both Crouch and Payne singled, while Stapleton doubled, scoring Crouch. Pollan gave the Spudders a run when he caught Sanguinet's throw after the latter had caught Sullivan's short fly. The play at the plate would hardly have been close had it not been for Pollan's brainstorm. The play gave the visitors the tying run.

With two out in Waco's sixth inning, Vigare singled over short, and Bob Sanguinet hit the first ball pitched for his 27th home run of the season. Bettencourt opened Wichita's seventh with a home run and Crouch singled. That was enough for Pollan. Thurman went to the rescue again. He fanned Payne, but Stapleton shot a double to center, scoring Crouch. Sullivan's fly to right hit against the wall for another double, Stapleton going to third. Fitzgerald was purposely passed, jamming the bases. It seemed good strategy but didn't work for Bennett singled giving the Spudders the lead.

In the seventh, Payne fanned Pinchhitter Pratt and Mellano. Then with the ball game apparently over, little Gene Rye hit a home run over the right field wall, a mighty wallop, but fair only by inches. That put the game into an extra frame. Brancheau went to the box for the Cubs, and Bettencourt shot a single past Mellano, but time had been called, and he was called back, then grounding out to the pitcher. Though the Spudders got two on after two were out in the eighth they could not score, and Waco did not reach first, the game being called on account of darkness.

Wichita Amateur Nine Wins Opener

Producers Creamery Defeats Fort Worth Team

By JACK ALLEN

Producers Creamery defeated the Kelsey Lumber Co., Fort Worth amateur champs, yesterday afternoon in the opener of a three-game series at Athletic park by a score of 8 to 4. Bunching hits in the fourth and fifth rounds, the Wichita nine piled up a seven-run advantage and were never headed. Lefty Robertson hurled for the victors and kept the hits well scattered in addition to fanning six batters. Sparkling support for the pitchers was the order of the day with several sensational stops and catches.

Neither side threatened to score until the fourth. Bowen led off for the visitors with a two-base smash to right. Young flied to center with no advance, and Brown grounded out third to first, Bowen still holding second. Garner singled over third to score Bowen.

The Milkers tallied three in their half. Francis tripled to left to start the inning and scored on Connally's sacrifice fly to center. Hinds drew a life when Ryan threw wild to first on the shortstop's grounder. Windham singled past third, scoring Hinds, and he scored a minute later on O'Neal's double to left. The Creamery athletes put the game on ice in the fifth with five tallies. McMahon was safe when Ryan booted his grounder. Roberts drove a bingle into right field, McMahon going to third. Francis flied to left and McMahon scored after the catch. At this stage Hunter replaced Garner on the mound. Connally greeted the wronghander with a double to center which tallied Roberts. Hoehn and Hinds singled in quick succession to score Connally and put Hoehn on third. Windham rolled out third to first but Hoehn scored on the play and Hinds went to second. O'Neal beat out a tap to the box to score Hinds who had gone to third on a passed ball.

The visitors spiked the platter twice in their half of the seventh.

Ryan singled to center and went to second on Baker's one-base knock to the same territory. The scoring was delayed for a time when Hinds, Roberts and Hoehn turned Peck's grounder into a double killing, Ryan going to third. Bowen worked Robertson for his third free pass, and Young scored both runners with a three-base smash to right. The losers played their last card in the eighth when Ryan clouted his third single of the day to send Benton, who had walked, to second from where he ambled home on Baker's single past third.

Both teams gathered 11 hits. Francis with a triple and single, and O'Neal with a double and single were the batting leaders for the home nine. Every man on the Producer team gathered at least one hit. Ryan was the big noise in the attack of the visitors with three singles in four times at bat.

The same two teams meet today at Athletic park at 3 o'clock to play a double-header. If the local nine should win the first game, a second would be unnecessary. The team that wins two out of three games will be allowed to go farther into the eliminations of the Texas Amateur Baseball eliminations.

The team that wins two games out of three will play the Employers Casualty company nine of Dallas for the North Texas crown. Score:

The Twenty-Year Span

"Any number of men have starred or stood high in competitive sport for 20 years," writes M. M. B. "But how many have any prominence at all in the game today who were even fairly well known 20 years ago"? Jack Quinn of the Athletics is one of the best known, and Quinn has been around over 25 years. Alexander broke in with the Phillies in 1911, so he has another year to go to round-out his 20th season. Hagen made his first bid in golf back in 1913, so he isn't a 20-year star. Mac Smith tied for the United States open championship in 1909, so he qualifies. Tilden was playing intercollegiate tennis around 1914. Tilden has been a high grade tennis player for nearly 15 years. There are few 20-year stars around. Cobb lasted 23 years; Speaker, 21 years; Lajoie and Wagner over 20 years. John Ball of England won his first and last championships 24 years apart. Vardon, Taylor, Braid and Herd have been star golfers for over 30 years, but they began slipping badly two or three years ago, although Taylor played remarkable golf in a British open less than three years ago. Of those playing golf in championships 20 years ago MacDonald Smith is easily the leader. Max Carey of Brooklyn, was a fine ball player 20 years ago, but Max has spent most of his time on the bench this season and by next season should make some club a first class manager. He has all the ingredients a good manager needs.

Babe Ruth has served only 16 years in the big league, so the Babe has four years to go before making the 20-year grade.

When you check back over the list, few who were competing in 1909 are still part of the parade. Modern competition has been keyed to a killing pace and 20 years as a chunk of time is a longer period than most competitors can stand the strain and the grind—not only of play, but of getting ready and keeping in necessary shape.

The Game for Time

Few tennis players and fewer fighters are any good, comparatively, after 20 years of competition. Not when sent against first class stars of younger years. Baseball has known more 20-year stars than tennis. Far more than boxing. Few fighters are well known until they have reached and passed 20, and few amount to much after they have passed 32 or 33.

Golf, being on the lighter physical side, demanding nothing in the way of speed, offers a longer road than any other sport. There were eight or 10 entries above 50 still good enough to play in the last British open, and some of them played well.

"Harry Vardon," says Tommy Armour, "can still hit a golf ball better than any one I know, but he hasn't the old power and his putting touch is completely lost." And Vardon is around 60.

Chandler Egan, Bob Gardner, Jerry Travers, Francis Ouimet, Bobby Jones and Jess Sweetser all won championships at 21 or younger, and this happens in few sports. Walter J. Travis won four championships after he had passed 39, and this also happens in few sports. Golf offers the player a longer stretch of time for first class play than any other game. One needs fast speed for tennis, baseball, track, football, boxing and basketball—but not for golf.

Ball players, tennis players and boxers usually begin to lose the old elasticity that operates in the legs. They slow down and so drop back. Leg-power is a factor, but not a big one. The wearying part of tournament golf is the mental side and the nerve strain, resulting from continued and increasing tension.

No one feels tired after playing well. But four or five bad holes in a row bear down with the weight of centuries and the pressure of granite boulders.

After Fifty

All of which recalls an argument opened a short while ago as to who should be named the greatest athlete among those who had passed the fiftieth year.

CUBS TROUNCE CARDS

CHICAGO, Sept. 1. (AP)—An overflow crowd of 50,000 saw Chicago trounce St. Louis 10 to 3 here today and maintain its pace in the National league pennant race.

Kiki Cuyler, with three hits, led the Cub assault on Jesse Haines and Carmen Hill who pitched for St. Louis.

Hack Wilson hits his 34th home run of the season.

Chicago and St. Lois play a morning and afternoon game here tomorrow and then both clubs go to St. Louis for four games. Score:

Runs Tourney

Bill Strachan, professional of the home course, again will act as starter and referee in the second annual invitation tournament of the Wichita Falls Golf and Country club, opening today. It was Strachan's direction of the affair last year that contributed so much to its success. He is one of the veteran and leading golf professionals of the Southwest, and held the post as starter-referee of the Greenbelt tournament held in mid-summer at Vernon.

Coleman Beats Midland, 11-9

Overflow Crowd Sees Ponies Rally to Win

MIDLAND, Texas, Sept. 1. (AP)—Before overflow crowds Coleman defeated Midland today 11 to 9, to go in the lead in the West Texas league playoff, two games to one.

The Ponies had come from behind in the fifth to score 3 runs and tie the game and added counters in the sixth and seventh for an apparently safe lead. Melton pitching to right handed batters and Kallina to left handers seemed to have the situation in hand until Kowalik, pinch hitting, in the 9th touched big Ed for a home run. A Coleman uprising followed and when the inning was finally over 6 runs had come across the plate.

Midland made a great effort to rally in its half but after King and Kallina hit home runs and the bases were filled off Halbert and Harris, manager Holloway rushed big Steve Meyers to the hill. Meyers struck out Boken, forced Rose to foul out and Lewis to roll to the box for a great bit of pinch pitching. The same teams play here tomorrow.

GUS MORELAND IS COMPETITOR

Dallas Star Among Experts Seeking Title

By LARRY DAILEY
Record News Sports Editor

More than 150 golfers of north and west Texas and Oklahoma will compete in the second annual invitation tournament of the Wichita Falls Golf and Country club. Stars of the links had registered yesterday and other leaders were to play their qualifying rounds by the time of closing today at 2 o'clock.

Gus Moreland, the sensational Dallas youngster, winner of the recent southwestern championship held recently at Shreveport, is the outstanding "foreign" entrant. But he will meet the best of the local defenders.

Tommy Cochran, Bobby Burns, E. P. "Doc" Bass, Fred T. Couper Jr., Roscoe Davis, Joe H. Greenwood of River Oaks club, Houston; Horace Gooch of Amarillo, Bon Peck of Lubbock, Jack Hale, Paul Landes and Charles Keirsey all of Wichita Falls, are among foremost contenders.

The tournament will get under way this morning at 8 o'clock, but Bill Strachan, professional of the home course, starter-referee of the meet, says that entries will be received up to 2 o'clock this afternoon. This will assure the late entries of several local and out-of-town players.

E. P. (Doc) Bass, tournament chairman, reports greater interest in the event than previously. W. G. Eads, secretary and Polly Gebert, assistant professional, also are doing much to make the tournament a success.

Among entries received up to late yesterday were Bob Alexander, Munday; Bobby Burns, M. E. Blair, E. P. Bass, J. D. Bright, J. M. Bradshaw, B. F. Bowman, B. F. Caldwell, B. E. Cranfill, Earl Clayton, E. B. Clark, Art Clark, Fred T. Couper Jr., M. B. F. Campbell of Chickasha, F. F. Cady of Jacksboro, I. A. Cotton, Eddie Connor of Dallas Country club.

C. O. Davis, Roscoe Davis, R. L. Dillard, A. R. Dillard, E. L. Douglass of Jacksboro, L. H. Estes, W. G. Eads, W. E. Fitzgerald, J. Alvin Gardner, Horace Gooch of Amarillo, Gene Granberry the noted Amarillo tournament star, Bill Parker of Abilene, Bob Peck of Lubbock, Dan H. Rubsam, J. G. Rowe, Horace Robbins, Walter Robbins, W. Henry Rogers of Vernon, Bud Rainer of Stamford, W. L. Scott, W. H. Sanford, A. L. Holliday, E. B. Sewell of Jacksboro, Judge H. F. Weldon, G. Clint Wood and Chester Wynne.

PIRATES WIN IN TWELFTH

CINCINNATI, Sept. 1. (AP)—Red Lucas, star of the Red pitching staff, forced the Pirates to go 12 innings today to score their first victory over him in two years, but the Buccaneers, fresh from their astounding success over the Cubs, tripped him up and took the one-day stand, 9 to 7. Lucas was working for his 18th victory of the season. Score:

The Curtiss Aeroplane Export corporation now is included in the newly formed Curtiss Wright corporation, a holding company. It was incorporated in 1921 for the exportation of aeronautical equipment to South America. In March 1928 the concern entered into a 10-year agreement with the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor company Inc., by which the export corporation was given exclusive selling rights throughout the world except the United States and England.

The company does a business in aviation instruments, hangars, parachutes, ordinance ammunition and special oils as well as in aero plane and motors not in direct competition with those produced by the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor company. The company also has additional export and royalty agreements. The first year of the company's corporate existence was spent largely in surveying the export fields and building up organizations. Sales this year have been good, it is announced. Total income in the period from March 11 to Dec. 31, 1928, was $19,200 and net income was $937.

There is no funded debt. Capital stock outstanding includes $370,000 in 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock of $100 par and 81,775 shares of no par common. Dividends on the preferred are guaranteed by the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor company, Inc. It has equal voting power share for share with the common. Each preferred share carries a warrant entitling the holder to buy 5 shares of common at $20 a share up to Dec. 31, 1932. Dividends are being paid on the preferred but none has been paid on the common.

As of Jan. 1, 1929, total current assets were $382,615. Current liabilities were $26,745 and net working capital was $355,870. Book value applicable to the preferred amounted to $96.34 a share.

Editors Invited To West Texas Fair

Special to The Record News.
ABILENE, Texas, Sept. 1.—Every newspaper man and woman in West and Central West Texas is invited to attend the West Texas fair in this city on Press day, Sept. 27, as guests of the fair association and the Abilene Chamber of Commerce.

Executives of the exposition are preparing to entertain at least 500 newspaper people on that day. Full details of the arrangements will be announced shortly.

At the annual meeting of the West Texas Press association in Sweetwater on July 12-13, that organization endorsed the plan for a Press day and a large part of the members pledged themselves to attend.

Spur Farmers Meet

SPUR, Texas, Sept. 1.—Two hundred farmers assembled in a mass meeting called by the Spur Chamber of Commerce and county agent for the purpose of interesting farmers in sowing barley or other small grains. Nine thousand pounds of barley was delivered to farmers for sowing winter pasture to supplement the short feed crop in the Spur country.

CHILD WELFARE SUNDAY TOPIC

Floral Heights Classes Hear Mrs. G. C. Johnson

In 1902 we find that the state of Georgia had a law which provided, "The hours of labor by all persons under 21 years in all cotton and woolen mills or other manufacturing establishments, or machine shops, shall be from sunrise to sunset." It was indeed a dark age when people thought they were doing something for children by enacting such a law. But even that law indicated progress for the time. Other states had not done anything prior to this time, and little children seven years old and up were employed for any length of time that their employers saw fit.

Now for 25 years the campaign for child labor law has been directed toward the removal of the grosser forms of child slavery. The campaign has been accompanied with almost continued success. Beginning with conditions that are at this day almost unbelievable, the standards of child labor have steadily risen until in most of the states certain occupations are closed to children. In others there are rigid limitations and in nearly all of the states a minimum standard of age and scholarship, approaching 14 years and the seventh grade in school, has been attained. Some have raised the minimum to 16 and a few states carry partial control of children up to the 18th year and even through their minority. In Texas the age has recently been raised to 15.

The enforcement of the laws and rigid adherence to the standards are needed today. Greed is just as active as ever. Stop the enforcement and lower the standards and we automatically slip back. It is hard to enforce the law when business and professional men hire boys to go with them to the golf courses and caddy all day, while school is in session and they know they are supposed to be there. While probably some working mother thinks the boy is in school. This isn't a story of what happened elsewhere — it is happening right here. It has been ascertained that during last year there were in Wichita Falls 1,000 boys and girls between the ages of 7 to 17 who should have been in school, but were not—there was a cause. It seems that a truant officer working with our juvenile officer would be the busiest man in town.

Education Needed

We take children out of industry to protect them against physical and moral deterioration. What happens to them after we take them out, has come to be of great concern to those who deal in the broad aspects of child welfare. What does it profit children to be kept from industry and allowed to deteriorate outside?

Education has been for many generations the boon provided for youth. Free education has been available for three-quarters of a century. Education has been compulsory in most states for more than a quarter of a century. In Texas since 1915. Texas was a little slow in adopting this measure, being next to the last state to adopt it. Alabama was last.

The movements for child labor law and compulsory education went along side by side. Progress has been definite and far reaching. There has been a long road to travel since the opening of the present century even to attain the goal of the minimum standards which a generous and cultured people ought to have.

To prohibit child labor, without making sure that it will result in child education is to give us only one of the real purposes of reform. We take children out of industry to protect them physically—then we must see to it, that in schools and on playgrounds they have a chance to develop physically. We say we take children from industry to protect them from moral dangers. Then we must see to it, that they are not subjected in the community to moral dangers equally great.

We prohibit child labor. We compel children to go to school. We assume guardianship in this respect at least to the age of 14 to 16. If we then cast the children adrift, we probably lose a great part of the advantages we have fought to gain. We may even have spoiled the prospects of some children by keeping them in an ill-adjusted school against their will between the ages of 14 to 16. At any rate it is important that we think in terms of opportunity at this point and give a helping hand to the children as they leave the school and attempt to establish themselves in industry. If we provide for vocational education and thus give the opportunity for a variety of preparations for life and if we offer an opportunity through part-time schools for contacts between school and industry, we have done about all that socially can be done. We cannot force children into uniform molds; we can safeguard such opportunity as they wish to seize. That much we are socially obligated to do.

The next question is what provision has been made whereby children may be permitted to take advantage of the opportunities we offer them. We are meeting the problem of the poor children in some respects in an unprecedented way at this time. Practically every state in the union has some system under which mothers with dependent children of school age are entitled to receive a sufficient amount to maintain their families. Workmen's compensation laws have entered to protect the families from the necessity of driving their children into the factories. Eventually we will provide that children will not be deprived of opportunity because of the incapacity of their parents.

Thus we see how one responsibility leads to another. There is no stopping place short of the full realizations of the means for child protection and child opportunity, extending from child labor laws up through the educational system and its preparation for life, the safe guarding of our youth when they enter industry, and the provision of the economic means for the promotion of the rights of the poor. We have put our hands to the plow, surely we will follow to the end of the furrow.

Poverty's Pinch

Who are the children who leave school for the factory at 14 or 15, if the law allows? Surely the great majority are the children of the poor. What does this mean? Everything from the physician's point of view. Suppose, a preposterous thing, that a mother or father of the well-to-do-class, should bring a 14-year-old child to their physician and ask him to certify the youngster for factory work. There is no question that the physician would do his best to dissuade the parent from such a course, that he would urge the necessity for greater maturity of mind and body, before the strain of factory work were faced. Yet in all probability the child of such parents would be robust, normal height and weight—a background of healthy living, abundant food, carefully balanced, plenty of sleep, outdoor play, medical, dental, and if need be surgical care of the best.

But that is not the sort of boy or girl who actually seeks work. Those who come, usually come from homes where there has never been enough to go around. Not enough eggs, milk or meat, not enough rooms, not enough parental attention. The house is crowded and the mother shouts at the children and hustles them about. There is no quiet spot. For amusement or for refuge from the jar of family life, there is only the noisy street. Now what does industry do to a product of life like this? I've just read Howell Cheney's impassioned appeal to our educators to send the children to the factories for schooling, because the factory was better equipped than the schools. How absurd! I have never made a special study of child labor law. I do not speak as an expert, but I did work with children in public schools for nine years, and I've visited factories, canneries, mercantile establishments and offices where boys and girls were employed, and I cannot think of one which I would regard as an educational institution for a 14 or 15-year-old boy or girl. A few places where there are well-worked-out apprenticeship systems would qualify but these are not for children under 16. Industry in general takes the youthful worker and fits him to the machine. It does not fit the machine to the worker.

Consider what the industry is now, compared with what it has been for all the aeons of man's life on earth. Up to the introduction of the machine, man worked with his whole body, at labor, which had both sameness and variety. He might plow all day but each furrow differed from the last, he might chop trees all day but no two could be felled alike. The woman in her housework and care of children, her garden, her spinning and weaving, had even more variety than he. Hard work left them at the end of the day hungry and weary, craving food and sleep. Compare this work with the tending of a machine where only a few muscles are used all day and where the necessary skill may be obtained in a few days and there are no cause for pride except perhaps an increase in speed. Such work does not cause a normal healthy tiredness with longing for food and sleep, but a nervous restlessness, which craves motion and excitement.

In the past 18 years you have seen the great development of labor-saving machinery of which our country is so proud, and you have seen it bringing about a disappearance of skilled work and the substitution of mere feeding of the machine, which can be done with a minimum of intelligence. Take for instance the making of cardboard boxes—the skill of fingers is no longer needed. Machines act as fingers and all that is needed is a stupid little girl to feed and a skilled machinist to keep it in order. Surely the educational value of such work is nil.

Modern machine-made industry has come to stay. More than that, we know that it is growing and destined to grow until it swallows almost the whole of life. We cannot go back to an earlier, pleasanter and perhaps a saner kind of life. That is over and no William Morris or John Ruskin can call it back. But surely it is our bounded duty to ask ourselves what this new kind of life is doing to our children.

Take a child brought up in a poor and narrow and ugly environment until he has reached 14 and put him, before he has learned anything of what life has to offer into a deadening round of machine work, the product of which has no interest for him and what does the future hold for him, in growth of mind and body? He is robbed of his heritage, he, "the heir of all ages in the foremost files of time." The factory for work, the movie for pleasure, what kind of men and women does such a program promise us?

If we cannot turn back the wheels of time, if we cannot give the worker's child what the child of the farmer and craftsman use to get, what can we do? We can postpone as long as possible the entry of child into industry. We can enforce child labor laws.

By intelligent training in school we can give the child someway of using his leisure that will let him share in the beauty and richness of modern life. If we do not do this, we shall find that gradually there will appear in our great country a separation of classes which is altogether contrary to our ideal of democracy; on the one side, the well to do whose life is fuller and richer than ever before; one the other the poor, who are shut off from the great gains of modern life because they are incapabable of appreciating them.

As honest upright citizens, please let us give every child a chance.

McBride Says He Is Now in Fine Shape After Taking Orgatone

"For over a year now I have been looking for something that would relieve my troubles and have found it at last in Orgatone," said A. J. McBride, 2206 Broad street, Wichita Falls, Texas.

"For the past year," he continued, "I have suffered constantly from stomach and liver trouble, and although I tried different kinds of treatments I kept getting worse all the time. My liver was so sluggish that it wouldn't act at all without my taking some kind of strong purgative. I had a sallow, unhealthy look and would get up in the morning feeling so dull and languid that I didn't have a bit of life about me. My food almost always gave me indigestion, and I would have a miserable feeling in the pit of my stomach as though what I had eaten had formed a heavy lump there. I was badly constipated, and if I ate any lunch at noon I would always have a mean headache right afterward, and felt so drowsy and out of sorts that I could hardly do my work. I had always taken good care of myself and could not understand what was the cause of my trouble.

"Some few weeks ago I read a notice in the papers about Orgatone, and I decided I would investigate it. Well, I have taken two bottles so far and I am actually feeling better today than I have for the past year. My appetite is so much better that I enjoy all I eat and I can eat anything I want without having the least touch of indigestion afterward. All that mean, sluggish feeling is gone. I get up in the mornings feeling fine and do work without suffering from headaches or anything else. My liver is working right and that constipation has been removed. I have never taken a medicine that did me so much good as Orgatone and am glad to recommend it to everybody."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called secret or patent remedy but a new scientific bile preparation and is sold in Wichita Falls exclusively by the Allison's Drug Store, under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative.—Adv.

Today At the Theaters

By W. L. UNDERWOOD

MAJESTIC: "The Cocoanuts," with the four Marx brothers. Comedy which breaks out with new meanings for a week after you see it. Johnny Arthur and Pauline Garon in talking-comedy. Movietone news.

STRAND: William Boyd in "The Flying Fool." Button, button, who's got the button? Southern song feature and Hatton-Hardy team in Vitaphone vaudeville acts. Paramount sound news—Mr. Hoover cracks a joke.

OLYMPIC: Jack Holt in "Sunset Pass," Zane Grey story. Comedy. Pathe news.

GEM: "The Gay Retreat," with Ted McNamara and Sammy Cohen. Chapter 5 of "The Tiger's Shadow." Comedy.

A type of music which is distinctly sectional in theme but unquestionably national and international in appeal furnishes the subject for one of the Vitaphone vaudeville numbers on the current Strand theater program. The folk songs of Stephen C. Foster, recognized the world over today as the most typically American music thus far produced by this continent's white conquerors, will make this too short sound-film one of the most popular shown in the city.

◇ ◇ ◇

Entitled "In a Music Shop," the sketch introduces a quartet of excellent male voices, grouped about a reed-organ in an 1864 setting, and uses a number of Foster's melodies, including his best-seller, "Suwanee River." The atmosphere of the civil war era has been effectively reproduced both in costumes and character, to lend creditable reality to the brief story, which is based upon the facts of Foster's life. The extreme simplicity and sweetness of his music have brought greatness to the name of a man who died in obscure poverty. These qualities are uppermost in the closing number of "In a Music Shop" when a rich baritone impersonates Foster's novice singing "My Old Kentucky Home" in an effort to make a sale of the score.

◇ ◇ ◇

Another Raymond Hatton-Sam Hardy comedy, also at the Strand, further indicates that this strangely mated pair intend to contest Edward Everett Horton's threatened domination of the short-comedy field in the talkies. Raymond and Sam lack the subtlety of Mr. Horton. Their humor is somewhat more blatant, but ripples and gusts of audiable laughter may gladden the heart of a comedian as quickly as the amused smiles which Horton comedies constantly play to.

◇ ◇ ◇

According to presidential sentiments caught by an alert Paramount sound news recorder as they were trundled out at Mr. Hoover's fishing camp for the entertainment of some hundreds of neighborly Virginians, his outings will be democratized by wise-cracking, rather than by the serio-comedy role so blandly played by cooling Calvin. The Virginia type of laughter was well into a crescendo passage when the tactless operator changed the subject.

◇ ◇ ◇

Now what else was it we saw at the Strand? Oh, yeh, sure—William Boyd in—what did they call it? "Flying Fool?" But then, what's in name? A plane with any other OX-5 motor would roar as loud. But William Boyd is always a good, healthy specimen to look at, and he appears quite as well around an airport, and airplanes zooming and booming noisily, playing tag against the heavens, and all that. We knew William took us some place in that T-model Ford while Marie Prevost was having new pictures made.

◇ ◇ ◇

The young lady who said a good, hard fearful laugh is worth $5 any time immediately acknowledged her debt of something more than $100 to "The Cocoanuts," now being thrown about at the Majestic by Groucho Zeppo Harpo and Chico Marx. The first time through with the boys makes a definite impression of having been exposed to highly refreshing nonsense, but so rapid is the skipping from one branch to another, in true monkey fashion, that new bits of hidden comedy break into one's mind to furnish new entertainment for at least another day or so.

◇ ◇ ◇

Aside from Chico's piano solo and Harpo's amazing performance on the harp, three particularly telling flashes classify as high-lights. The sudden resolution of three clowns into a booming, tootling "Spirit of '76" procession, with the grandeur of the old hero's bearing nobly reproduced; Harpo's unbelievable grimaces of disgust as more after-dinner entertainment is announced and the superb performances of the dancing chorus behind Mary Eaton—these are features, if features may be found.

LETTER TELLS OF MASSACRE

Writer Slain After Mailing Interesting Dispatch

(The London bureau of Universal Service has just received a letter written in Jerusalem on Aug. 21 by Dr. Wolfgang von Wiesel, noted German correspondent in Palestine. Dr. Von Wiesel was killed in the Holy city during the Arab attack on Tuesday, Aug. 27. The letter details Dr. Von Wiesel's personal view of the situation in the Holy land.)

By DR. WOLFGANG VON WIESEL

(Slain in Jerusalem by the Arabs on Aug. 27)

JERUSALEM, Aug. 21. (By mail)—Jerusalem is shuddering with fury and rebellion. Blood flows freely, but the fury of the rebellion in Palestine is not directed against the Arabs, who attacked the Jews, nor against the grand mufti, who fostered the religious fanaticism of his people as a means of fulfilling his ambitions.

The holiest place of the Jews—in fact, the only one holy to the Jews—the Wailing Wall—has been raided and desecrated by order of the grand mufti with the sanction of the government.

The Jews are fighting the mufti with the slender means at their disposal—they do not hate him and his Arabs; they hate the English officials who play into the hands of the mufti.

Why the English play this game—whether as a threat against the American multimillionaires who sit in the Jewish agency using their influence to better effect, regarding the changing of the present regime in Palestine, than the Zionists are able to do alone, or whether as political insurance, with the understanding between the mufti and the government working on the principle "we aided you to become president for nine years—you help us rule the land quietly"—the Jews of Palestine care little.

They see what has been happening in Palestine in the past year; they see the country undergoing unparalleled development—and how the governing Englishmen are swindling and insulting Jews, particularly at their holiest place—the Wailing Wall.

The conflict between the Jews and the government—for the fight against the Arabs is really a fight against the government—began in earnest on the day of reconciliation last autumn, when the English police, by command of an English government official and by order of the grand mufti (who threatened that otherwise 200 Arabs would throw stones), raided the Jewish religious service.

The Wailing Wall has always been a place which Arabs delighted to defile.

The many sympathies which English has at present in Palestine are being beaten out of the Jews. Unless there is a quick change in the system and the ruthless punishing of the guilty officials, the anger of the Jews—which is at present directed against the officials of the Palestine government—will turn against England.

And England has not so many friends in Asia that it can afford to lose any of them.

Education Judge Martin's Theme In Address at Iowa Park Church

Judge P. A. Martin, addressing the congregation of the Methodist church at Iowa Park at the 11 o'clock service Sunday, made an appeal for the education of the heart in connection with the re-awakening of public interest in schools and colleges at this time of the year. Judge Martin occupied the pulpit of the church in the absence of Rev. O. P. Kiker who was the visiting pastor at the Floral Heights Methodist church here Sunday morning. The address in the church took the place of the usual Sunday morning lecture to the Men's Bible class of the Floral Heights Methodist church.

Judge Martin took the subject of the Sunday school lesson as the theme for his discussion. He quoted from the seventh chapter of Ezra: "For Ezra had prepared his heart to seek the law of the Lord, and to do it and to teach in Israel statutes and judgments." An outline of the address is given below:

"Just at this time the subject of education is paramount in the minds of both old and young. It is the problem of the hour, the all absorbing subject for morning, noon and night in the homes of the people. In a few days the public schools will open for the fall term, the colleges and universities will throw wide their doors and our children and our young men and maidens will bid us farewell and all again at the feet of the masters of learning in stately halls devoted to education of the young. In a few more days there will be goodbyes and farewells from the trembling lips of thousands of fond parents, as their sons and daughters leave the parental roof and depart for distant institutions of learning, there will be prayers and tears and heartaches, as there will be more sacrifices than the world will ever know or appreciate. Many a father will wear his last winter overcoat and many a mother her old last winter dress and cloak and hat in order to save and scrimp together enough money to put a son or a daughter through the next year of college, for the times are hard and money scarce with us all. Yes, this is an all-absorbing subject just now and I am going to talk to you about education today.

Best Educated Man

Ezra, the subject of the lesson today, was the best educated man of his age I am thinking. No one was in his class. He was a priest of the house of Aaron and a scribe of Israel. He was a codifier of the law of Moses and there are those who believe that had it not been for him we would have lost that wonderful part of the Bible called the Old Testament almost entirely, for it was Ezra who while a captive in Babylon, gathered the scattered manuscripts and put them together and edited the Pentateuch, the Kings and the Chronicles and preserved the Old Bible in its purity. He lived some 500 years before Christ and 600 years before there was ever a codification of the Roman law. Like Moses, he was born while his parents were in captivity; and like Moses and Joseph, he was educated in a foreign land among foreign people with an alien religion and alien customs and manners and like them he was able to rise far, far above his surroundings and write his name high among the great of ancient history. Like Moses and Joseph he became influential with his royal master and like them was enabled to deliver the people of God from the perils and dangers that surrounded them.

There was a basic reason for the success of Ezra to which I want to direct your attention particularly and peculiarly today. The text says he "had prepared his heart to seek the law of the Lord." He had "sought first the kingdom of God and his righteousness" and all these other things were added to him. The words imply that there is a necessary preparation of the heart to enable the mind to grasp the things of the law of God. He had made this preparation. Another thing he was prepared in heart to do; that was to do the will of God, as he saw it and understood it. And the purpose for which he was making this preparation was not for selfish aggrandizement or vain glory but that he might "teach in Israel statutes and judgments." His whole purpose was high and lofty; his mind was fixed upon the remnant who had gone back to Jerusalem, where surrounded by heathen influences and the hordes of idolatry they were rapidly falling away from the worship of the true and living God. His call was to teach them the statutes and judgments of the Lord and bring them back into the fold of God.

Now I want to say to young and old, to parents, as well as to their children, that this is the most important step in an education; the preparation of the heart to understand and do the will of God: in fact all education is a menace and a danger without it. Israel's wise man knew what he was talking about when he said "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." Education of the mind and the muscle of man is necessary and proper, of course, but without this education of the heart it is a vain thing.

I have known many failures in life; men and women whose lives were worthless to themselves and to all who knew them; the worst of the human failures I have ever seen have been the educated failures. I have in mind now a young man I once knew well. He was a graduate of Yale with high honors and several degrees. On the day of his graduation his fond father gave him a check for $2,000 and told him to take a trip around the world and see the world. He went around the world, drawing drafts on his father from various ports and when he returned his father found him wholly unfit for business and profession; so he placed him on a monthly allowance of $200 which lasted him on an average about two days each month. He was utterly miserable and utterly worthless. His education was of the mind only. And I was once closely associated with the son of a very great statesman. He was educated for the bar, after a finished literary college education. He was a follower of Ingersoll, or claimed to be and was at times the most miserable man I ever saw. I and other friends had occasion to have to sit up with him and watch him after his drunken spells to prevent his suicide. He often prayed a drunken prayer like this "Oh God, if there be a God" let me die and end my worthless existence." I have heard him say this a hundred times.

Prepares Heart

All honor to the boys and girls who are striving to get all the education afforded by our schools and colleges. They ought to go and get all the education they can get. And all honor to the parents who are making noble sacrifices in order that their children may get all the education the country affords, but as I am seeing to it that this education of the heart is afforded them first and foremost of all? "Is the young man, Absalom safe?" Is the daughter of the house a devoted Christian girl? If not, then the college or the university is but an added danger in life, for they will not have the restraints of the home there.

And how is the heart prepared, educated, if you please, for the battles of life? First of all in the Christian home. Then in the church of God. This building is educated to the highest and best education the world ever had and there are thousands of them like it all over the country; in fact there are so many and so common that we are disposed to take them as a matter of small moment and yet not one of us would attempt to live long if they were not here. Education of the heart? You have read in recent years of crimes committed by youths for what they call "a thrill" and you have seen thousands traveling up and down the earth seeking some new thrill or new amusement, while right here at our very doors is a place devoted to a preparation to know and to do the will of Almighty God and where there is a pearl of great price for everyone who asks and where the "peace of God which passeth all understanding" furnishes the greatest thrill of the human heart ever felt and where the fellowship of His saints is sweeter than the music of any of the masters. The magic touch of the divine hand upon a human life; the miracle of a soul's salvation surpasses any other human experience, and yet we are all too often placing it secondary to the education of the mind.

One thing more we gather from the lesson of the day—a high purpose—a mighty incentive. Ezra made this preparation that he might alleviate the condition of his fellowmen by teaching statutes and judgments to Israel. Young man, young woman, what is your purpose? Do you strive for an education just for the satisfaction it will give you to understand the arts and sciences? Do you study in order to fit yourself for high rank or position in the things of the world, to attain great wealth, to get an advantage over your fellow men by reason of your superior attainments and make them serve your selfish purposes? If so, be at once undeceived. There is no real satisfaction in life except that which comes from service to our fellowmen.

Whether it be in the professions or in trade and commerce or in the ranks of labor, in whose honor we will all pause tomorrow, the man who does most for his fellowman is the one whose life is the greatest success. Nearly 20 centuries have passed since the days of Ezra and yet we do him honor today in this service. Nineteen centuries have passed since the carpenter of Nazereth wandered over Judean hills, having no place to lay his head, serving his fellowmen, curing their ills of mind and body and raising their dead and yet today and tomorrow 10,000 public speakers in America will call attention to Him as an outstanding example in the field of labor because "He went about doing good."

Caprock Union Holds Meeting at Silverton

Special to The Record News

SILVERTON, Texas, Sept. 1.—The Caprock Union, Epworth league organization composed of units along the caprock of the plains, held a union meeting here Saturday afternoon and night, with many leaguers from surrounding towns present. Chester Strickland is president of the Caprock union.

The feature of the evening was the league social, directed by Mrs. A. L. Kelsay, union recreational leader. A 6 o'clock dinner in the form of a spread was served the visitors by the Silverton league as host.

Childress Rail Survey Begins

Special to The Record News

CHILDRESS, Texas, Sept. 1.—Permanent surveys for the routing of the Denver-Northern railway from Childress north through Wellington, Shamrock and to Pampa got under way here Friday, A. P. Briggs, locating engineer for the Burlington system, arrived in Childress a few days ago to take charge of the work. Thirteen men are employed in the final work.

Mr. Briggs has spent years in the service of the Denver and was prominent in the construction of the new South Plains line. He will open offices here in the Chrysler building pending the work on this end of the line.

The engineer was optimistic in his belief that the Denver would be granted a permit by the Interstate Commerce commission to construct the north line.

"Our company has been the pioneer in this territory," he said. "Any construction in this section rightfully belongs to us, and I believe the Denver's permit will be granted."

Quanah Buys Athletic Field

Special to The Record News

QUANAH, Texas, Sept. 1.—An athletic field for Quanah high school has been purchased from E. B. Caskey and W. C. Howard. The tract covers 11 acres and is located on the paved highway No. 5 about a mile east of the city limits. The purchase price of $5,000 was underwritten by 26 business men of Quanah, pending the financing by the school board and the contributing school societies. The senior class of 1928-29 voted not to put an annual last year, but to divert all proceeds from their class plays, carnival and other activities to the athletic fund. Several hundred dollars were thus created in the fund by this class, and it is expected the future classes will follow the same precedent until the field is completely financed.

A grandstand is to be constructed immediately. Bids have been advertised for, and award will be made within the next week.

Frederick Club Winners To Go to State Fair

FREDERICK, Okla., Sept. 1.—As a result of winning in style show contests and awards at the county fair 11 Four-H club members have been awarded trips to the annual state fair, according to L. H. Beaty and Mrs. Susan B. Gray, county agents. Boys were entered in poultry, crop, dairying and engineering contests; girls were enfered in style show and food judging contests.

Winners: Flovd Flood, Frederick, and Quilla Mashburn of Hollister, who will take the trip because Misses Helen Faye Wearmouth and Agnes Laurent, who scored highest in food judging contests, were under the proper age.

First place in the style show contest was won by Miss Virginia Slack of Grandfield who will go to the state fair; second place was awarded Miss Juanita Laing of Tipton.

Boys' contest winners: Poultry—Clarence Harper and Clyde Neumeyer; crops—Ferris Bynum and Rodney Longacre; dairying—Oliver Newsom and Theodore Schreiner; engineering—Olen Stone and Willard Simpson. They were judged on basis of their exhibit at the fair, number of points won in first, second and third prizes, and judging ability.
