Magic's help

WASHINGTON — The White House said Tuesday that President Bush has asked Magic Johnson to deliver his "very important message" about AIDS as a member of the National Commission on AIDS. "The president would like to have Magic Johnson on the AIDS commission. (He) has a very important message that will be very useful to this commission," White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said. Johnson, in this week's issue of Sports Illustrated, said he'd "like to volunteer for the vacancy" on the commission. Bush said last Friday that he regarded the 32-year-old Los Angeles Lakers star as "a hero" for the way he announced that he was HIV-positive, was retiring from basketball and was planning to devote himself to spreading awareness about the disease and safe-sex.

Hopefuls debate

DETROIT — The six major 1992 Democratic presidential hopefuls on Tuesday portrayed President Bush as callously indifferent to the recession's toll and each painted himself as the best hope for economic revival. The economy was by far the dominant issue in the first major debate of the late-starting 1992 campaign. /8A

PHOENIX — Pulitzer Prize-winning political columnist George Will on Tuesday took "Doonesbury" cartoonist Garry Trudeau to task for portraying Vice President Dan Quayle as the subject of a drug probe. "I don't see where he gets standing to condescend to Dan Quayle," Will said of Trudeau.

Speaking to reporters before accepting Arizona State University's Walter Cronkite Award, the columnist turned Trudeau's favorite criticism of Quayle against the cartoonist: "He's probably smarter than Trudeau," Will said of Quayle.

Banks trim card rates

■ Banks reduce interest on credit cards for some of their customers.

By Michael Quint
N.Y. Times News Service

Banks are reducing the interest rates they charge on credit cards for some customers, but many bankers would just as soon not advertise it.

So rates are going down as the banks try to keep their best customers, many of whom have wondered why interest rates on their bank cards had not fallen along with the prime rate, mortgage rates or the interest they receive on their deposits.

Frustrated by the stubbornly high rates, card holders have been doing comparison shopping for the best credit card deals and turning in their most costly cards.

First National Bank of Chicago, Banc One of Columbus, Ohio, and a growing number of others are now offering cards with annual interest rates of around 14 percent, far below the 19.8 percent that has been the standard at the largest banks for years.

The availability of the lower rates is often jumbled, and sometimes the price of a rate cut is a higher annual fee. Many small banks that offer lower-rate cards do not advertise them outside their local market, while the largest banks that do advertise widely are trying to stick with higher-rate cards.

Some banks are trumpeting lower rates to snare more customers, while others, like Citibank and First National of Chicago, are granting the lower rates only to their most creditworthy customers. First National is not taking any applications for the lower-rate cards and is not advertising them.

U.S., Kuwait take part in maneuvers

By Diana Elias
Assocoated Press writer

GIBB'S RANGE, Kuwait — About 150 U.S. Marines flew to a remote desert area Tuesday for joint exercises with the Kuwaiti military — a mission that evoked memories but lacked the drama of the Persian Gulf War.

"Last time there was definitely a cause that made it worthwhile to be away from home," said Chief Warrant Officer Tim Hoffman of Wheaton, Md. "The same excitement and enthusiasm are not there, but I have a job to do, and I am proud to do it."

The Marines were transported by five helicopters from the USS Saipan moored off Kuwait City to Gibb's Range, 50 miles northwest of Kuwait City. The 12-square-mile range was developed by American forces on an area that was heavily bombed when a U.S.-led coalition drove Iraq from Kuwait.

Baylor professor pleads for unity

By Jim Jones
N.Y. Times News Service

WACO, Texas — Baptists must unite and rid themselves of an addiction to controversy, a speaker at final session of the Baptist General Convention's state convention said Monday.

"We are a divided camp in Baptist life," said Baylor University professor Robert Sloan. "There's no amount of pious language that can cover up that fact."

Warring Baptist moderates and conservatives on both the national and local levels must unite around their common belief in Jesus Christ, he said.

The plea for unity came at the close of the two-day convention in which the 2.5 million member Baptist General Convention of Texas relinquished official control of Baylor University, the nation's largest Baptist-supported school.

A record 10,800 voting representatives approved a compromise plan in which Baylor — for the first time — will not be controlled by the state convention.

Baylor favored the plan, saying it needed independence to protect itself from a takeover by Baptist fundamentalists who have said the school is too liberal.

Now Baylor will have a self-perpetuating board of regents with 75 percent elected by Baylor and 25 percent by the state convention. In the past, all of Baylor's governing board was elected by the

Gorbachev says he ignored Bush's coup warning

By T. Elaine Carey
N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev acknowledged Tuesday that President Bush had warned him of a possible coup attempt, but that he dismissed it on grounds that "only a madman" would try to overthrow his government.

Gorbachev made the disclosure as a news conference unveiling his new book about the abortive uprising, entitled: "The August Coup — the Truth and the Lessons."

Gorbachev referred to a recent article in the Soviet magazine Novoye Vremya (New Times) asserting that Secretary of State James A. Baker III, during a June meeting in Berlin, had alerted then-Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh that U.S. intelligence operatives had information that a coup was being planned.

"Yes, and there was a call from the president of the United States himself," Gorbachev recalled. "He said that 'information has reached us, I apologize, but I must tell you, I cannot just ignore this information.'"

Gorbachev told reporters that he assured Bush that he "needn't worry. Everything's fine."

"I was deeply convinced that only a paranoiac, a madman, can attempt a coup, go to that extreme," Gorbachev said. Despite the many difficulties confronting his government, Gorbachev added, he was "convinced that it (a coup) was not a solution to the problem, that was clear to any sensible person."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater confirmed that Bush had called Gorbachev in June.

"We did give them information that we were concerned about a possible coup," Fitzwater told reporters in New

Firm announces experimental pneumonia drug

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — The maker of the AIDS-fighting medication AZT on Tuesday announced the development of an experimental drug to combat pneumonia, a leading cause of death among patients afflicted with AIDS.

Burroughs Wellcome Co. said the Food and Drug Administration has authorized wider use of the drug, now called 566, through physicians for the treatment of Pneumocystis carinii pneumonia (PCP) in people with AIDS.

The company said the medicine should be available by 1992.

PCP, an infection that usually remains dormant in the lungs but becomes active when the immune system weakens, affects more than 80 percent of people with acquired immune deficiency syndrome during the course of the disease,

JOINT: Soldiers use damaged Iraqi tanks for target practice

(From 1A)

About 2,300 Marines, airmen and sailors who arrived in Kuwait aboard three Navy ships on Sunday are taking part in an 11-day joint military exercise dubbed "Eager Mace."

The exercise, which began Monday, falls under a recently signed defense pact between the United States and Kuwait. The agreement calls for the positioning of military equipment, training and maneuvers.

The troops began setting up their guns and making other preparations at Gibb's Range for the training phase of the exercise.

Hoffman said about 70 Kuwaiti soldiers will practice marksmanship, mostly by shooting at targets like damaged Iraqi tanks and trucks.

Lt. Dutch Berthoff of Camp Lajeune, N.C., a Gulf War veteran, said he would like to visit Kuwait City and meet Kuwaitis on this trip.

"Last time we didn't see any Kuwaitis except for those who were waving at us on the roads," said the 26-year-old Marine.

"It's a lot more pleasant now, but the desert is still the same — cold at night, hot during the day and a lot of sand," Berthoff said.

Besides the visiting troops, there are about 1,500 American troops in Kuwait. The soldiers are scheduled to leave in December.

The U.S. military presence has given a feeling of security to Kuwaitis, who say they fear Iraqi President Saddam Hussein will once again send troops into their country.

Western military sources say those fears are unjustified because Iraq's military capabilities were crushed in the war that ended the seven-month Iraqi occupation Feb. 26.

The emirate is trying to rebuild its 16,000-man army, which crumbled in the face of Iraq's invasion in August 1990. Military experts estimate it will take five years to put Kuwait's army into reasonable shape.

Kuwait and other members of the Gulf Cooperation Council have signed or are expected to sign defense agreements with the United States and other Western countries. The council groups Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Qatar, Oman and the United Arab Emirates.

Included in postwar security arrangements are plans for a rapid deployment force of 100,000 men drawn from gulf countries. The gulf council also plans to spend billions of dollars on planes, missiles and other military hardware.

COUP: Bush called Gorbachev

York, where Bush was featured at a political fundraiser.

Gorbachev's book, being published in Russian and translated for distribution in more than 20 countries, does not mention Bush's call. At his news conference, Gorbachev said most of his aides were learning of it for the first time.

Gorbachev confirmed reports that he will receive at least $500,000 for the book from its English language publisher, Harper Collins.

He joked that it was proof the Soviet Union is on the road to a market economy. However, he said most of the proceeds would go to charity.

Russian President Boris Yeltsin is considered the hero of the coup. He is widely thought of as the man who saved the nation's infant democracy. Yeltsin's English language book on the failed overthrow reportedly will command a million dollars.

At Tuesday's news conference, Gorbachev warned that conservative Communists had not been totally defeated.

state convention.

Moderates defeated conservative candidates to retain control of the top elective positions of the state convention. The Rev. James R. "Dick" Maples of Bryan, Texas, was elected president. Other officers are the Rev. Harry Lucenay of San Antonio, first vice president, and Carolyn Cole Bucy of Waco, second vice president.

The outgoing president, the Rev. Phil Lineberger of Richardson, also made a plea for unity in his presidential message.

"Whatever our differences, we all need one another and we all belong to one another," he said. "We have allowed certain issues to divide us."

propriated $28,000 in hotel-motel tax money to get the group going.

"This is a very exciting time for the southeast side, these people coming together," said the Rev. Michael DeVaughn, the area's representative on the City Council. He showed his support at a press conference the group conducted to announce the beginning of their work.

They did not reveal specific development plans, but members said they plan to work with local chambers of commerce, Midland College, businesses and citizens who share their mission. The coalition will work under the direction of the Northeast YMCA.

"Historically, the YMCA has been involved in community development," said YMCA director Dale Andrews, who has joined the coalition. "When they approached me about doing something for economic development, it kind of got me back to the roots of the YMCA, the reason I started to work for it in the first place."

They plan to target youth with job training and creation programs, and hope employment will ease drug abuse and alcoholism. They want to support community crime prevention as well as industrial, commercial and retail business.

"We all know our own business," said Richard Cornett. "We came together to offer what we know to the whole southeast side."

"We believe a lot of opportunity went down the drain that was available," Brooks said. "We didn't want to see that continue."

They hope to operate for the first year with $40,000 — a figure that, with the city's initial investment, will require additional sources. Andrews said they have some ideas, some possibilities, and a lot of hope.

"We know it's not going to be easy," he said. Indeed, development for the area has been the target of other groups whose efforts have had limited success.

Tuesday's announcement of the council action "is a statement to the people of Midland that these people are serious about what they're doing," DeVaughn said. "We believe there's a chance."

The Figure

"Matt, that figure is just your imagination." "But Mom it's real!" "Don't argue with me son! Now go to bed now!!" "But Mom!?" "Don't be scared honey, I'm right down the hall." "Now good night" "Good night Mom" "Now go to sleep and don't listen to the radio." "Ok, Mom." After Matt had been asleep for about 20 minutes he came from the window. Right then a strem of sun light burst through his window. It went around the bed. Matt could not find the figure. He looked and looked but could not find him. That night when Matt saw the figure he turend on the light. The man said, "Come with me." "But!" "Just come with me." "What is your name sir?" "my name is Sir World of Books." I came to show you how the world and books work together." "But how do they work together?" "They work together by what the book or the story is about. See the world is a place were problems show up uninvited. By books you can find the answers to most of your problems." "Wow! But so many peple don't read books so they don't know how the world and books work together." "Matt," called his mother. "You need to clean your room." "Ok. Bye Sir. World of Books." "Bye Matt."

Baker, Asian ministers meet face-to-face on trade issues

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III opened a face-to-face campaign Wednesday to convince some of America's toughest trading partners to relax their formidable barriers against many U.S. products.

"Major trading nations, the United States and Korea included, benefit from an active and viable and healthy multinational trading system," Baker said at the opening of a meeting with South Korean Foreign Minister Lee Sang-ock.

Baker and Lee met privately an hour before the opening of the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation ministerial meeting.

Closed markets, nuclear proliferation and a proposed Asian economic alliance that would exclude the United States were the most prominent issues facing Baker as he led the U.S. delegation to the APEC meeting.

The secretary of state planned individual sessions with several of the ministers attending the conference.

As Baker and Lee posed for photographers in advance of their meeting, the secretary of state was asked if he thought it fair that nations with open access to U.S. markets continued to exclude American products.

Baker said he intended to make the point in his discussions that "it is important that all countries that are interested in free and open trade do what they can" to ease restrictions.

A senior State Department official traveling with Baker conceded that the administration was concerned with the domestic political implications of signs of discord between the United States and the Asian countries.

He referred particularly to a Malaysian proposal for creation of a grouping of Asian nations that would exclude not only the United States but also Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

"We would be troubled by any effort to form a group that sought to cut out the United States," said the official, speaking only on condition of anonymity.

He noted that the United States was the largest trading partner of the Asian nations and added that "it would not be a good sign to Congress and the American political scene to be suggesting there is a division between the United States and the Pacific countries on economic matters."

After reports that the administration pressured Japan not to join the new group, Malaysia downgraded its representation to the APEC meeting. Most nations sent their foreign and trade ministers.

The administration is under strong pressure from Congress to do more to persuade Japan, South Korea and China to open their markets to more U.S. exports.

Baker spoke of the need for "more balanced trading relationships" in a speech in Tokyo on Monday and bluntly told the Japanese that without a more open economic relationship "we will not be able to sustain our political partnership."

Researcher discovers Nazi files in France

The World

PARIS (NYT) — A prominent hunter of Nazis announced Tuesday that after more than 40 years of looking, researchers had found a comprehensive file of the names of 150,000 Parisian Jews that the French police compiled during World War II and used to round up tens of thousands of Jews.

The Nazi-hunter, Serge Klarsfeld, said the files, which were missing since 1944, were discovered in the archives of the Ministry of Veterans Affairs.

The fate of the files has been a mystery for decades, and Klarsfled and many other French Jewish figures have suggested that some government officials had hidden the files to avoid embarrassment about France's collaborationist role with the Nazis in World War II.

Judge Jean-Pierre Getti, who is overseeing inquiries of two people suspected of deporting French Jews, began legal action on Tuesday to seize control of the files to help his investigation.

"The importance of these files comes from their having played such a sinister role," Klarsfeld said in an interview. "They were used to arrest tens of thousand of Jews, and people have been searching for these files for 47 years."

Klarfeld said that about 76,000 French Jews were deported during World War II, about one-fourth of the 300,000 living in France at the time.

Klarsfeld asserted that veterans ministry officials knew they had the files, but repeatedly denied it.

"I think someone was hiding them," he said.

The statue of Dubrovnik's patron saint is silhouetted against the evening sky Monday as the famous Hotel Imperial burns during shelling. The European Community announced Monday that its 14 monitors planned to leave the city Tuesday.

Serbian-led forces pound embattled Yugoslav cities

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Weary Croat rebels huddled in shelters with food and ammunition running low Tuesday as Serb-led forces drove to capture Vukovar and Dubrovnik — embattled cities that have become symbols of Croatian resistance.

In the port of Dubrovnik, Yugoslav gunners shelled the medieval center of the city, killing at least 20 people, Croatian TV said. Thousands took to underground shelters as the shells hit targets such as tourist hotels and the gynecological and coronary wards of Dubrovnik's hospital, a city resident said.

"I think that Dubrovnik has hours left now, not days," resident Kathy Wilkes told BBC-TV by telephone from the port.

To the east, troops advanced toward the center of Vukovar along the Danube River.

The two Croat strongholds have great symbolic and strategic importance in the 4½-month-old civil war, which has claimed nearly 2,000 lives since Croatia declared independence June 25.

The fall of Vukovar, besieged for nearly three months, would give the Serb-dominated forces near complete control over eastern regions of Croatia.

Dubrovnik, under attack for five weeks, is a key Adriatic port and is an important cultural and historical site. As one of Croatia's main tourist centers, it was a major source of foreign currency.

The European Community dispatched its chief peace negotiator, Britain's Lord Carrington, to Yugoslavia in the latest attempt to broker a truce. The EC last week imposed sanctions on Yugoslavia in an attempt to halt the fighting.

The Red Cross urged Yugoslav, Serbian and Croatian authorities to "spare innocent lives."

Stipe Mesic, the Croatian chairman of the defunct federal presidency, appealed for U.N. peacekeeping troops on the Serbian-Croatian border. In Belgrade, the four members of the presidency loyal to Serbia requested U.N. forces in Croatia.

But the EC, meeting in the Netherlands, said no peacekeeping troops will be sent to Yugoslavia until a lasting ceasefire is in place.

The Serb-dominated federal military moved against Croatia in July to back ethnic Serb rebels opposed to secession. The Serb forces have captured about a third of the secessionist republic.

Haitian police arrest protesting students

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Police armed with automatic weapons stormed a university auditorium Tuesday and arrested about 80 students who were protesting the ouster of President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, witnesses said.

The students were herded into a corner of the auditorium and at at least four were beaten, the witnesses said.

About 10 Haitian journalists covering the protest also were detained. Most were quickly released but three of them, including a reporter for the Voice of America's Creole service, were taken away by police.

Anti-Aristide demonstrators, meanwhile, rallied outside a hotel where an Organization of American States delegation was meeting with lawmakers, politicians and community leaders.

Police did nothing to stop the protesters, who have dogged the OAS delegation since its arrival Sunday.

Cloudy skies forecast

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for cloudy skies with fog and a 50 percent chance of showers with a possibility of thunderstorms. Highs in the mid-60s with south winds at 10 to 15 mph. Tonight should be cloudy with a 40 percent chance of showers and lows in the upper 40s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be mostly cloudy with a 40 percent chance of showers and a high in the upper 60s.

After an overnight low of 42, Tuesday's high was 48 compared to the record high for that date of 84 set in 1938. The record low for that date is 15 set in 1976.

STATE

A weather system from the Pacific that kept most Texas skies cloudy Tuesday was expected to bring rain across the state later this week.

A high-pressure mass over North Texas combined with tropical moisture to bring considerable mid- and upper-level cloudiness, which stretched south to Killeen and west to Abilene.

The National Weather Service reported drizzle and fog over the Concho Valley and Permian Basin, reducing visibilities to about one mile.

Warm, moist air pushed its way across Mexico into west and central sections of South Texas. Patchy areas of light rain and drizzle dotted western and central sections of the region.

High temperatures ranged from the 40s at Guadalupe Pass in West Texas to the mid-70s in the lower Rio Grande Valley.

Winds were northerly to northwesterly at 5 to 10 mph in North Texas, and easterly to southeasterly in the south. Speeds were variable at less than 10 mph in West Texas.

The weather service forecast a chance of rain through Thursday in North and South Texas, with thunderstorms possible in western regions of the state.

Today's highs were expected from the 50s in West Texas mountains to 70s in the south, with overnight lows from lower 40s in the Panhandle to high 50s in North Texas and 60s in the south.

Highs on Thursday should range in the 60s to 70s across most of Texas.

NATION

Snow and rain were widely scattered Tuesday from the Midwest into the Northeast, and the week-long cold wave was dwindling with only one reported record low temperature.

At midday, snow was falling over northern Maine. Snow, snow mixed with rain and rain extended over much of the Ohio Valley and Michigan. Sleet and snow fell over parts of the Ohio Valley and New England.

Snowfall during the six hours up to 1 p.m. EST included 1 inch at Caribou, Maine, and in Ohio at Akron, Mansfield and Zanesville.

Rain was scattered over east-central Wisconsin.

Elsewhere, rain was scattered over northwestern Texas and the Pacific Northwest.

After more than 600 record lows in just over a week from the northern Plains into the South, the only record low reported Tuesday by the National Weather Service was 44 at Hollywood, Fla.

Tuesday's low for the Lower 48 states was 18 at Gunnison, Colo., Jackson, Wyo., and Watertown, N.Y.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EST ranged from 31 at Hibbing, Minn., to 88 in California at Long Beach, Oxnard, Thermal and Van Nuys.

House to vote on jobless benefits bill

■ Legislation provides up to 20 extra weeks of benefits for the long-term unemployed.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Bush administration officials and top House Republicans said Tuesday that they had all but reached a pact with House Democrats on a $5.1 billion bill providing up to 20 weeks of extra benefits for the long-term unemployed.

The agreement, which the House could vote on as early as Thursday, would begin to defuse the four-month political battle between Congress and President Bush over unemployment benefits.

Democrats have tried to turn Bush's opposition to the measure into a major campaign issue, arguing that it shows he cares little about domestic woes and the nation's 8.6 million jobless people. Bush has killed two earlier benefit bills since last August, arguing that the extra benefits were unneeded or too expensive.

But the two camps drew together late Tuesday after House Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., gave his newest version of the plan to House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill.

Rostenkowski expressed cautious optimism about the measure's fate, saying, "Every time I'm up I come down." But he tentatively planned to have his tax-writing committee approve the bill on Wednesday.

Michel and White House budget chief Richard Darman said they were awaiting an analysis of Rostenkowski's plan from the Department of Labor before giving it their final seal of approval.

"The sides are getting close enough that I think you can say it's in settlement range," Darman said after a meeting of top administration officials and GOP congressional leaders.

"I have to feel good about where we are at the moment," said Michel.

After opposing the Democratic effort to extend the benefits since early summer, the administration shifted two weeks ago and indicated it was willing to make a deal.

But Democrats, sensing that they have been winning the political war over the issue with Bush, are not unanimously ready to let him off the hook easily.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, is heading an effort in that chamber to send Bush a bill that would give the president the option of paying for the benefits by cutting foreign aid. That measure, which Bush opposes, would help Democrats make their point that Bush is more concerned about overseas crises than he is about domestic problems like unemployment.

The Democratic effort is aimed at extending unemployment benefits for the 300,000 people who use up the standard 26 weeks of coverage each month.

Rostenkowski's $5.1 billion plan would provide six, 13 or 20 weeks of extra benefits, depending on a state's unemployment rate.

The first two bills Bush killed provided a minimum of seven weeks of extra coverage. Rostenkowski's proposal represented a bow to the administration, which had tried to reduce the package's coverage to save money.

Second peace meeting expected

■ U.S. might host one round of Mideast peace talks.

By Michael Wines
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Almost two weeks after Arabs and Israelis met at a peace conference in Madrid, the United States is preparing to announce a second major Middle East conference to discuss trade, water rights and other regional issues, Bush administration officials said on Tuesday.

The regional conference could be announced as early as next week, and would likely be held next month somewhere in Europe, said the officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

But, they said, the United States has not formally proposed convening the regional conference, and it could be delayed if the Madrid peace process develops further snags.

The regional conference, planned months ago, is the idea of Secretary of States James A. Baker III, who has viewed it as a broader adjunct to the Middle East peace talks that began in Madrid last month. The regional meeting was originally scheduled to begin shortly after the first round of the Madrid talks was completed.

But the Madrid negotiations have been snarled by disputes among Arabs and Israelis over when and where the next round of peace talks should be held, and it is unlikely that plans for the regional conference will be announced until those disputes are settled.

A senior administration official said Baker might propose next week to hold the next round of the peace talks in the United States, probably near Washington. Should the parties in the peace process accept his offer, an announcement of the regional talks would probably follow quickly.

Two of the major parties in the peace talks, Israel and the joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation, have indicated that Washington would be an acceptable compromise site. On Tuesday, The Associated Press quoted an unidentified Syrian official as saying a Washington locale "poses problems," in part because the United States still includes Syria on a list of nations that sponsor international terrorism.

Syria will be reluctant to meet with Israel in Washington as long as Syria remains on that list and the United States refuses visas to senior officials of the Palestine Liberation Organization, the Syrian official was quoted as saying.

While those talks will focus exclusively on trying to find peaceful solutions to the Middle East conflicts, the regional negotiations are expected to range across an array of issues, from trade to the environment to arms proliferation.

As many as 40 nations within and outside of the Middle East have expressed interest in joining the talks. Initially they would be conducted by the foreign ministers of the countries in attendance.

All of the Arab and Persian Gulf countries are expected to attend the regional conference with the exception of Syria, which has said it will not join the talks until it sees substantial progress in the peace negotiations.

566: Drug to help pneumonia in AIDS patients

doctors said.

The company said there was no correlation between the timing of its announcement and the revelation last week that basketball star Magic Johnson had tested positive for the AIDS virus.

"None whatsoever," said Burroughs Wellcome spokesman Thack Brown. "This has been under study for a long time."

Still, the announcement seemed to reflect a heightened sensitivity by the drug industry toward publicizing progress in treating AIDS, which captured renewed attention after Johnson's revelation.

For example, Belmac Corp., a pharmaceutical company in Tampa, Fla., said Tuesday it plans to seek federal approval this spring to test a new antibiotic, called Azaquinone, to battle AIDS-related tuberculosis and other illnesses common to AIDS sufferers.

Burroughs Wellcome said about 400 patients have received 566 at 39 sites throughout the United States, Canada and Europe. They expect thousands to apply for the free, orally ingested drug in the month or so before awaiting approval for marketing by the FDA.

"Nobody has an idea what the need will be," said Dr. Judith Falloon of the National Institute of Health in Bethesda, Md. "I think the need being in the thousands is not unrealistic."

Patients intolerant or unresponsive to other drugs, including trimethoprim and sulfamethoxazole, are eligible to receive the new test drug, company officials said.

"I do think it is an advancement in terms of quality of life and for some people it can have an impact on survival," Ms. Falloon said. "We have been needing other therapies for PCP and this fits a part of that bill."

Company officials expressed optimism that the drug would hit the market by year's end.

"Traditionally, FDA insisted that every 'I' be dotted and every 'T' be crossed about the safety of the drug before it was approved," Brown said. "But with the coming of diseases like AIDS, where people don't have the time to wait for all that, there has been a change in thinking."

Brown conceded the drug may be rushed to market before it's perfected: "If there is some evidence that it does some good it is better to give it to people who have no hope than to allow those people to die while you do all the detailed studies."

Brown declined to say how much the drug would cost if approved by the FDA.

"At this point 566 is the project number at Burroughs Wellcome. It doesn't have a name, let alone a price," Brown said.

Stephen LaFon, a spokesman for the company's infectious disease department, said 566's unique feature is it kills the parasite that causes PCP, as opposed to other drugs which prevent it from growing.

Brown said the company has established a toll-free number where physicians and patients can call requesting 566.

"It's not approved for marketing," Brown said. "We can't go out and sell the product. But what we can do is make it available to people who don't have any other options to use in attempting to control the disease."

Burroughs Wellcome is best known for the development of Retrovir brand zidovudine (AZT) in 1986, the first antiretrovial drug for use in adults and children with the human immunodeficiency virus.

Physicians interested in enrolling a patient in the 566 treatment program should call 1-800-755-2020.

CARDS: Bush had urged cut in interest rates

(From 1A)

competitors each year, from the Universal Card issued by American Telephone and Telegraph Co. to ones affiliated with corporations like Ford Motor Co., banks face growing competition in a market already saturated with cards.

Many of the new rivals have tried to make their cards more attractive to consumers by touting no annual fees, or low fees, discount-buying programs and slightly lower interest rates.

"Many large banks are suffering because the rate at which they are losing customers has nearly doubled" said David Robertson, vice president of the Nilson Report, a newsletter for the credit card industry. He said some banks were losing more than 10 percent of their customers annually to cards offered by competitors.

And if competition was not enough, bankers are feeling increased pressure from Washington. On Tuesday, President Bush, noting the declines in other interest rates, said, "I'd frankly like to see the credit card rates down."

In New York for a $1,000-a-plate fund-raising luncheon for Republicans, Bush said lower rates on credit cards could help strengthen the economy by encouraging more consumer spending. Until now, the strongest criticism in Washington of high credit card interest rates had come from Democratic members of Congress like Charles E. Schumer of New York and Joseph P. Kennedy II of Massachusetts.

"The banks can make money at lower interest rates," Robertson said. "They just can't offer the lower rates to everybody."

He noted that it is now much cheaper for banks to keep their good customers by lowering rates than it is to replace them by advertising for new customers or buying the credit card businesses of other banks.

Wachovia Corp., a big banking company in Winston-Salem, N.C., currently offers three types of cards, including one that charges the prime lending rate plus 2.9 percentage points, or 10.4 percent — but a higher than usual fee of $39. Ray S. Costner, a senior vice president of Wachovia, said,

"A little over a year ago, our consumer research showed growing interest for lower-rate cards."

He added, "We think a lot of people are coming to realize that they had too darn many credit cards, and are deciding to keep just one or two instead of four or five."

Bankers have said they need to keep rates high to compensate for increased losses from defaults during the recession. Losses are running at about 5 percent of all card loans this year, up from 3.8 percent last year, according to the Nilson Report.

Boat people denounce repatriation

HONG KONG (AP) — About 6,000 Vietnamese in detention camps chanted anti-Communist slogans Tuesday and denounced the force used to return boat people to their homeland against their will.

More than 4,000 Vietnamese demonstrated at the Tai A Chau camp on a remote islet, the first time there was a demonstration in that camp. Officials said about 1,500 Vietnamese also demonstrated at the Whitehead camp, the territory's largest detention center, and 400 marched in protest at the Nei Kwu Chau camp.

Officials reported no violence at any of the demonstrations.

Government officials said the Vietnamese criticized the force used by police and security officers on Saturday, when 59 Vietnamese were forcibly returned to Hanoi.

Some of the returnees had to be dragged aboard the chartered plane. One man was arrested in Hanoi for a theft committed before he fled to Hong Kong last year.

Vietnamese Foreign Ministry spokesman Ho The Lan reiterated a government promise not to punish the returnees for fleeing Vietnam.

"They are not punished, but enjoy help so that they can quickly reintegrate into their lives in their homeland," he said in a telephone interview from Hanoi.

Under an agreement signed by Britain and Vietnam on Oct. 29, Hanoi has promised not to persecute or harm the returnees.

However, most of the boat people in Hong Kojng are skeptical and thousands have demonstrated almost daily since the agreement was signed.

Also Tuesday, Hong Kong's government-owned radio station reported it received a letter smuggled out of one of the detention centers from a group that identified itself as "Vietnamese Victims of Communism." The group said it feared the returnees would face "killings, persecution and imprisonment."

Officials believe about 50,000 of the 59,000 Vietnamese in Hong Kong will be forced to be return to Vietnam. Since 1988, the Hong Kong government has granted refugee status — and thus the chance of resettlement in the West — only to those who prove they fled persecution from Communist authorities in Vietnam.

Officials expect the next batch of Vietnamese to be repatriated either late this month or early in December.

U.S. closes 71 bases in Europe

BERLIN (AP) — Another 71 U.S. military installations will either be closed or partially closed as part of the massive reduction of American troops in Europe, the U.S. European Command said Tuesday.

The new closings bring to 381 the number of U.S. military bases in Europe affected by the reductions that began in January 1990, an overall cut of more than 25 percent, the command said in a statement.

Navy Cmdr. John Woodhouse, a European Command spokesman, said the latest closings will affect about 3,646 military personnel and an undetermined number of civilian military employees.

The reductions include one installation each in the Netherlands, Italy and Britain, and 68 in Germany.

Most of the facilities will be shut down and returned to the host country, although four installations only will be partially closed, the military said.

The overall drawdown will bring the number of American troops in Europe to 150,000 by 1995, said Woodhouse, less than half of the 321,000 troops stationed here at the end of 1989.

Currently, he said, about 290,000 U.S. troops are stationed in Europe.

Seventeen of the bases had not been part of any previous announcement, although some of the closings — such as the famed U.S. border crossing at the Berlin Wall, Checkpoint Charlie — were widely publicized.

The drawdown reflects the reduced threat of the Soviet Union to Western Europe.

The massive U.S. military presence in Germany, once the front line of the Cold War, has long been a target of protesters. With the large troop withdrawals, however, many of the protests now focus on the effects the drawdown will have on economies dependent upon American troops.

Estonia establishes NATO ties

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Estonia will become the first of the newly independent Baltic nations to establish diplomatic contacts with the NATO military alliance, the NATO secretary-general announced Tuesday.

Estonia will join the Soviet Union and other eastern European countries in setting up a channel for informal contacts with the alliance, Secretary-General Manfred Woerner said, after Estonia's foreign minister, Lennart Meri, visited NATO headquarters.

"The three Baltic states are very aware of their rights but also about their responsibilities in creating a better Europe for the future," Meri said after daylong talks at the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Estonia, Lithuania and Latvia, dominated by the Soviet Union for more than 50 years, became independent after the failed coup in Moscow last August.

Woerner said Meri had accepted NATO's invitation to attend a meeting next month of the North Atlantic Cooperation Council, newly formed to include the Soviet Union and eight other east European nations.

President Bush and other NATO leaders agreed at a summit last week in Rome to set up the council as a way of drawing the east Europeans closer without granting them full membership.

Magic's smile can save lives

Magic Johnson's disclosure that he is infected with the HIV virus that causes AIDS and that he is retiring from professional basketball stunned the nation more-so than any recent celebrity "scandal." Part of that shock factor is directly attributable to the fact that Johnson is a heterosexual and a role model for young people, while the AIDS virus has primarily been transmitted by homosexuals and intravenuous drug users.

The disclosure by the 12 season superstar for the Los Angeles Lakers even brought President George Bush to the admission that he has not done enough in the fight against AIDS and that he's now ready "to go the extra mile" to help defeat the epidemic.

Although Lakers physician Dr. Michael Mellman noted that at this point it is not known specifically how Johnson contracted the virus, some critics do not feel that Johnson went far enough in his press conference by merely promoting "safe sex" as a means of avoiding the HIV virus. His role model status, they say, demands that he speak out in favor of sexual abstinence except within a marital or single sexual partner relationship.

There's no question that Magic Johnson's sports prominence gives him a decided advantage in talking to young blacks, the group among whom the AIDS epidemic is spreading fastest. Physicians also assert that sexual abstinence is the only sure-fire way to avoid contracting the virus.

But Johnson's promotion of safe sex is still, according to physicians, the next safest route behind abstinence for the sexually active. In that regard, his call for that alternative is potentially the best route for influencing thousands of people.

Johnson now says he's going to become an AIDS activist. That's good; we hope he follows through with that plan. AIDS is a deadly, horrible disease and only the actions of prominent spokespeople who bear influence with the general public, and medical researchers, can win the battle against it.

Hopefully Magic Johnson's crusade will lead to intelligent sexual practices by other people, particularly the young who may not recognize the danger they face.

LETTERS

Volunteers, staff made 'Airsho' great!

We wish to publicly commend and salute the organizers of the Confederate Air Force (CAF), in particular Col. Richard "Ish" Ingram, Col. Wallace Athley, Col. Joe and Van Mabee, Col. Ed Jones, Col. Peggy Vaughn and all of their committees and staff, for the wonderful and exciting "Airsho '91."

We thank them for the opportunity to sponsor and coordinate the "Survivors Party." We fed approximately 800 "coroneles" and their ladies and other Airsho participants. By the remarks we received we do believe everyone had a great time. It was a pleasure to share our culture, our fajitas, our mariachis, the Ballet Folklorico of Midland, and for a little West Texas flavor, "Showdown" country & western band also helped entertain the troops. "Chiquita Banana" was their favorite special guest.

It was so good to see at the food line the four restaurants that donated, prepared and served the delicious variety of many Mexican dishes which included not only fajitas but cabrito, too. Casa Blanca, Casita Gerardo, El Jalisco (now known as Guadalajara) and Memories worked hand-in-hand to the delight of the international group that enjoyed the fruit of their labor. Our hats off to those restauranteurs and to all of our volunteers for the great work. We know by the wonderful letters and comments that we have received that our Midland visitors received a good taste of West Texas hospitality and will return year after year.

On behalf of Tony Valadez, the chairman, and the board of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, we pledge our hard work, our resources and our commitment to the CAF to make "Airsho '92" an even bigger and better event.

Gracias again for the opportunity to participate in the economic growth of Midland.

WASHINGTON — Today, as they do every weekday, 200 children of the Puyallup Tribe will crowd into the Chief Leschi School in Tacoma, Wash. — a massive five-story building that the Bureau of Indian Affairs has been warned could collapse in an earthquake or even high winds.

Anderson

The 50-year-old school ignores a handful of building codes. It is an unsound mishmash of concrete, rubble, clay tiles, plaster and bricks. Diagonal cracks from water and past earthquakes mark the corners of the building. Several walls are visibly bowed.

In March, a consulting firm warned the tribe that "large sections of brick could fall off at any time." The tribe asked the BIA to put a fence around the building so children mingling around the school at least couldn't stand close enough to be injured by the falling debris. But nothing has been done.

Last month, another building consultant reported that the school does not meet minimum wind or earthquake standards. If an earthquake rattled Tacoma, the consultant said, "it is our opinion that major damage to the existing school would result." Still, nothing has been done.

Sen. Brock Adams, D-Wash., has asked the BIA to "take immediate steps" to move the children to another school. The BIA says it is doing its best to find another building, but its best is marginal. BIA officials appeared surprised when Adams told them late last month that the fence the tribe asked for "immediately" seven months ago has not been delivered.

Obliviousness is standard operating procedure for the BIA. The agency rarely does anything "immediately," especially when it comes to repairing its wobbly schools. As a BIA spokesman told us, "Too many of them are old and not built for schooling children."

The Chief Leschi School began life in 1941 as a hospital. Then it was used as a facility for juvenile delinquents before it was converted to a high school/middle school complex and tribal government offices for the Puyallups.

The Interior Department's inspector general was tipped off to possible BIA deathtrap schools last spring and investigated the backlog of maintenance problems. The report, obtained by our associate Jim Lynch, concluded that despite the fact the BIA spends $70 million a year repairing its buildings, the agency has "failed to correct the life-threatening safety deficiencies, code violations and hazardous health conditions existing in Bureau schools, dormitories and other buildings."

The report cited a pattern of buck-passing that shows little hope of reform. Examples of hazards include:

■ The Teec Nos Pos School in Arizona, which is "imminently hazardous" because it has no fire doors, fire protection or working fire alarm system;

■ The Many Farms High School in Arizona, where the inspectors found that the boys' dormitory roof leaked, windows were broken, light fixtures were dead and restrooms were unsanitary with corroded and broken toilets;

■ The San Ildelfonso Day School in New Mexico where the main classrooms are in an adobe structure built in the 1920s. One wall of the building was found to be cracked and in danger of collapsing into a classroom.

STOPPING NORTH KOREA — The United States is arranging behind the scenes to bring intense international pressure on North Korea to halt its nuclear program and allow United Nations inspections. The Soviet Central government has joined in trying to put the pressure on the Koreans, but they are resisting. As we have reported recently, North Korea has new allies among the hardliners in the Soviet Union who are trying to slip nuclear technology out of Russia and into North Korea. One intelligence report warns that North Korea could become a nuclear power in another year.

MINI-EDITORIAL — You can't always count on your friends in Washington. Rep. Harley Staggers, D-W.Va., found that out when he threw in with the National Rifle Association. Staggers has been a big NRA supporter and thought he could call in the favor when he needed help. The Washington Post recently reported that he thought wrong. The 1990 Census means a redrawing of congressional districts in West Virginia, and Staggers wanted the NRA to support him when he lobbied with state authorities to save his district from being carved up. Instead, the NRA went to bat for other West Virginia congressmen who had been equally gung-ho about gun issues.

KGB will remain cesspool until it tells truths

MOSCOW — "This work is not for me," said Vadim Bakatin, 54, the handsome and well-liked Gorbachev man, chosen with Yeltsin's approval to reform the KGB. "I don't like secrets, but here you are dealing with secrets all the time."

Safire

The way to dispose of the burdensome secrets of the monstrous past is to reveal them, I suggested during a 2½-hour session in his office on Lubyanka Square. So I asked him about the KGB family jewels.

Did the KGB train Lee Harvey Oswald in Minsk and send him to Dallas to kill President John F. Kennedy? "I checked it. I did not find any evidence to support suspicion that he was our man." Where is the Oswald file? "I wanted to give the file to American journalists, but your networks are competing and I will do it through Soviet television."

Celestine Bohlen of The New York Times promptly offered to take the dossier then and there, ending the CNN-ABC rivalry, but Bakatin demurred. Then why not just release it to everyone at once and cut cut the media manipulation? "We will do that — in two or three months."

Follow-up to the JFK murder: Did the KGB send Yuri Nosenko to the U.S. as a false defector to assuage FBI suspicions about Soviet involvement? A debate about his bona fides has raged within the CIA for a generation, costing careers and perhaps lives.

The KGB chief professed to be ignorant about the whole affair. Either Bakatin has a great poker face, or has not been briefed by his veteran KGB handlers, or does not want to know.

Then what about the attempted murder of the pope — did the KGB run that through its Bulgarian subsidiary? "This information about the pope was not in the archives," he replied, then derogated the search with, "I am not interested in studying detective stories." He wants to look ahead to reputable counterespionage, crime-fighting and anti-terrorism, cooperating with the CIA on "some rules of the game, not barbaric."

No; first let's look back. The KGB and its successors will remain a cesspool of evil until it comes clean. That does not mean holding up a dusty file and saying "See? Empty." This man could call a half-dozen operatives into his office, demand that answers be found from living sources and present the damning, cleansing truth in a week — if he were so inclined. He is not. (Why doesn't President Bush ask his friend Gorbachev for the answers?)

Let's try another line of questioning to see if the new boss of the KGB deserves his media reputation as dismantler of the brutal agency of repression. What happened to the half-million people in the KGB network?

He was admirably forthcoming: about half were border guards, spun off into an independent command. Another separate agency was created to protect leaders in wartime, and one for "communications," which I take to include a Big Ear. Some 20,000 are moving to the Russian republic's own KGB, and foreign spying was made a separate agency.

He whipped out an organizational chart, pointed to a figure at the bottom — 39,492 — and snatched it back (unaware of my photographic memory). That's what's left to him, and he says half are cooks, mechanics and clerks. Behold — a KGB a tenth of its former size.

But of the original half-million, how many were actually fired? "Several dozen who were involved in the putsch. Also, veterans with 25 years' service, on an individual basis." And he won't fill vacant slots.

William Safire's column is distributed by New York Times News Service.

End of Cold War put lot of spies out of work

Robert Gates' confirmation to head up the CIA was meaningless, according to Duncan Blackwater, formerly known to insiders as "Monkey Wrench."

"No matter who heads the agency," he told me, "they're still going to dump half the agents into the Potomac. There isn't enough intelligence work to go around now that the KGB is out of business. It isn't just the U.S. — every spook organization is cutting back.

Buchwald

"Finnish lottery tickets have more value these days than Kremlin secrets."

"What are the agents doing since they were laid off?" I asked.

"The lucky ones have been recruited for industrial espionage. Come with me. I'll introduce you to some of the boys." We drove over to a badly lit bar in Fairfax, Va., where a woman was standing on a small stage singing "Lili Marlene." The place was filled with men in tweed suits and Burberry raincoats.

"You are looking at the cream of the world's secret services," Blackwater declared. "This is Kaminsky, formerly of the KGB North American Tundra Division, and now in charge of pilfering the Gatorade formula for a soft drink client in Brazil. This is Chauncey from Britain's MI5. He broke the AT&T collect code and sold it to MCI for $15,000. This is Francois Lapete, the French secret service's top man who has been hired by Tylenol to find out why extra-strength Excedrin makes you lose your headache twice as fast as any other pain killer."

I shook hands all around. "You men have come a long way out of the cold since the Berlin Wall."

Graustark, an East German agent said, "We were the best and the brightest. We thought we would have a job until we died. Now they have unification and they say, 'Take a powder, Graustark, and take your phone tapping machines with you.' Is that a way to treat someone who killed 10 men with the tip of his umbrella?"

I asked him, "Aren't you working at all?"

"I can't get a job. Everyone who was in his country's secret service is out trying to land an industrial espionage assignment. The last one I had was passing on McDonald's secret French fry recipe to Burger King."

Chauncey joined in, "We're just not in demand the way we used to be. Last year I acquired the military plans for a Soviet submarine base in Vladivostok. They were handed over to me by a Soviet defense ministry clerk after I bought him lunch at the Savoy.

"Then all the republics broke off from Moscow, and Downing Street said they wouldn't give a soggy tea bag for the plans. I requested a reimbursement for the lunch and they told me, 'MI5 doesn't pay for lunch during perestroika.'"

Blackwater said, "Each man has a story. Brustein over there defected from Romania at the height of the Cold War. He spilled his guts to the CIA and they gave him a pension and a new identity. Then came the budget cuts and they informed him that, while he could keep his new identity, the pension would be cancelled."

"Is he in industrial espionage?"

"No, he's only good at spilling his guts. He never did much work in the field."

I remarked, "It's sad to see so many spies out of work. Maybe with the European Common Market we'll see the industrial spy business picking up. After all, Chrysler has to know what Mercedes Benz is putting in their airbags. By the way, how come everyone gathers in this place?"

"It's a way of passing on secret information about what work is available. They put it on a piece of microfilm and hide it behind the jukebox. It reminds them of the good old days when spooks walked the earth, and even Orson Welles trembled."

U.S., Lebanon hope to curb violence

BEIRUT, Lebanon (NYT) — The United States and Lebanon are discussing ways to halt an increase in violence in southern Lebanon before the next round of Middle East peace talks begins, government officials said Tuesday.

Faris Bouez, the Lebanese foreign minister, said after a 90-minute meeting with the Ryan Crocker, the U.S. ambassador, that ideas were exchanged "for finding a solution in stages" to the problem in southern Lebanon.

Security officials said 10 more people were injured during the night when Israeli gunners and their Lebanese militia allies pounded several villages north of the so-called "security zone" that Israel occupies in southern Lebanon.

A joint force of the Israeli army and the South Lebanon Army, the 3,000-member militia that is allied with Israel in the 440-square mile enclave, reportedly entered three villages on Monday and blew up several houses.

The Voice of the South radio station, which speaks for the South Lebanon Army, said the houses were used by guerrillas belonging to the Party of God in staging attacks inside the zone.

The Party of God leads a coalition of Moslem fundamentalist groups calling itself the Islamic Resistance Movement that stepped up hit-and-run raids two weeks ago. Six Israeli soldiers were killed in the raids.

The Moslem Shiite hard-liners, who are backed by Iran, have vowed to increase action against Israel to demonstrate their opposition to the Arab-Israeli peace negotiations.

Israel and the South Lebanon Army retaliated to the raids with 10 days of artillery bombardment of Shiite villages north of the occupied zone that were believed to be hideouts for the fundamentalist militants. Lebanon said the bombardment eased after personal intervention by Secretary of State James A. Baker III.

There is concern in Beirut the situation will deteriorate again before the resumption of peace negotiations, in which Lebanon is scheduled to take part. The Lebanese government said the only reason it agreed to join the next round of the talks is to press for Israel's withdrawal from the security zone.

Beirut newspapers carried stories Tuesday about a U.S. proposal calling for Lebanon to remove Party of God guerrilla bases in southern Lebanon in return for a withdrawal of Israeli and South Lebanon Army forces from Jezzin, the largest Christian town in the south of the country.

The daily newspaper Ad Diyar quoted unnamed government officials as saying that the United States has asked the Lebanese government to strike at Party of God as a price for recovering Jezzin.

Fear of Khmer Rouge ruins Sihanouk's homecoming

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — After Cambodia celebrates Prince Norodom Sihanouk's return from 13 years of exile, another exile is expected back in this capital city.

But there will be no euphoric welcome, no traditional dancers for Son Sen, an architect of the Khmer Rouge's mass murders in the mid-1970s.

Sen will be the first representative of the fanatical Communist movement to come here since the Khmer Rouge was overthrown by Vietnam in early 1979.

The Khmer Rouge left deep psychic wounds among millions touched by death, terror and slave labor during its rule. The Khmer Rouge now says it wants a parliamentary democracy and capitalism, although the movement is led by Pol Pot, Sen and other leaders who fled the capital to wage a guerrilla war after its ouster by the Vietnamese.

A U.N. peace plan signed in Paris last month provides for the Khmer Rouge to share power with its enemies until U.N.-supervised elections are held to form a new government.

Diplomats, relief workers and Cambodian leaders from other factions fear that the Khmer Rouge could end up taking full power again if measures are not taken to avoid economic collapse, official corruption and neglect of the peasantry, which allowed the movement to flourish in the 1970s.

A coalition of 13 international aid agencies issued a statement Tuesday expressing fears over Khmer Rouge participation in the interim council, saying Khmer Rouge members should instead be brought to trial for human rights abuses during their rule.

"The international community has an obligation to the (Cambodian) people to prevent a return to the human rights abuses of the 1970s," the International Cooperation for Development and Solidarity said.

Few believe the new, democratic Khmer Rouge line is anything more than a change in tactics.

"Even though we are in a new political situation, that is in a capitalist system, our ideals remain unchanged and we are still fighting the same fight," a top Khmer Rouge leader, Ieng Sary, told followers in 1988.

The group fields some 30,000 well-armed guerrillas, who say they will all come out of the jungle and give up their arms to a U.N. peacekeeping force. Guerrillas of other factions inside Cambodia say all sides, including the Khmer Rouge, will cache some of their weaponry for possible future use.

But according to official Khmer Rouge documents and other sources, the group has at least temporarily abandoned its quest to regain power through arms in favor of building political support that will guarantee it representation in an elected government.

Khmer Rouge officials say the movement may regain popular support by capitalizing on the country's economic problems to pick up support from disaffected peasantry.

BBC reports Chinese document denounces Bush

LONDON (AP) — A confidential report being circulated among Chinese officials accuses President Bush of seeking the collapse of Chinese Communism, the British Broadcasting Corp. reported Tuesday. It says Western talk of human rights is "rubbish."

The Chinese document, written in October, notes that Bush successfully opposed attempts this year by members of Congress to deprive China of its most-favored-nation trading privileges with the United States, according to the BBC.

But the document quotes Bush as saying he supported a continuation of trade agreement because broader contacts with China would help export the ideals of democracy and freedom, the report said.

The Chinese government argued strongly for the renewal of its U.S. trading privileges. It was unclear if the document quoted by the BBC represented widespread private suspicions over the trade agreement within the Chinese leadership, or was the work of hard-liners who opposed broader contacts with the West.

The report of the document came in advance of a visit to China this week by Secretary of State James A. Baker III.

The document charged that Bush and domestic critics of his China policy actually share the same aim of trying to turn China capitalist, according to the report by the BBC.

Democratic presidential hopefuls debate

The Nation

More nation news/5B

DETROIT (AP) — The six major 1992 Democratic presidential hopefuls on Tuesday portrayed President Bush as callously indifferent to the recession's toll and each painted himself as the best hope for economic revival.

The economy was by far the dominant issue in the first major debate of the late-starting 1992 campaign. The candidates agreed in many areas but also revealed some of the lines of attack they'll be using as the campaign evolves.

The 90-minute forum was hosted by the AFL-CIO for delegates to its national convention.

The national federation is unlikely to endorse a candidate during the primaries, but local union leaders are likely to pick sides. Their support could be crucial to the candidates in key primaries, but at the same time could be risky to the independent-outsider images they are trying to build.

Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin, who demonstrated early appeal to labor, was the clear audience favorite. He made the most direct bid for union support, brushing aside any potential liability of a close association with labor.

"There are some who say you're the problem," Harkin said. "I'm here to tell you you are part of the solution."

Not participating in the debate but a presence nonetheless was a longtime labor favorite who is nearing his decision on whether to join the 1992 field, New York Gov. Mario Cuomo. Harkin has the most to lose if Cuomo runs.

Nebraska Sen. Bob Kerrey and Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, Harkin's chief rivals for the nomination at this point, appealed for labor support while trying to explain their position on trade with Mexico. They were almost apologetic about having supported Bush's request for fast-track authority to negotiate a treaty, which labor strongly opposed.

Kerrey won applause when he said the president elected to lead the nation into the next century must "be willing to put it all on the line for the children."

Clinton boldly told the union leaders that "whether you like it or not," many rank-and-file workers were voting Republican in presidential elections because they believed the Democratic Party had shopworn economic policies and had abandoned the middle class.

"You should accept as Democrats the challenge to change so all of us can be part of an economic revival," Clinton said in depicting himself as a change-oriented outsider ready to re-energize Washington. He vowed he would "give you an America that can and will compete again."

Virginia Gov. L. Douglas Wilder joined Clinton on the outsiders' bench, telling Harkin and Kerrey that as senators they must share the blame for inaction on economic-growth plans and national health care.

"George Bush isn't the only person responsible for this," Wilder said. "You were there, too."

Jury acquits man of killing infant daughter

■ An 11-person jury announced a not-guilty verdict in the trial of a man accused of killing his 9-month-old daughter.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A 23-year-old Midland man was acquitted in the death of his 9-month-old daughter by an 11-person jury Tuesday.

Tears came to the eyes of Jesus Manuel Vidana as the jury announced the not-guilty verdict after deliberating about three and a half hours.

Following the trial in Judge John Hyde's 238th District Court, some of the jurors said the decision was made because of "insufficient evidence."

Vidana was accused of killing Maritza Vidana, who died from head injuries on Jan. 10.

The prosecution alleged that Vidana forcefully swung or threw the infant resulting in the fatal injuries.

The defense maintained that the young girl sustained the injury as a result of an accident, possibly a fall from a couch.

Testimony indicated Vidana was taking care of his daughter when the injuries occurred.

On that day, Vidana, his common-law wife, Maria del Carmen Castor, and their daughter went to the home of Elvia Chavez, Vidana's sister.

Ms. Chavez, her 5-year-old son and Ms. Castor left for about a half hour, leaving Vidana to watch his daughter and Ms. Chavez's sleeping 2-year-old daughter.

When the two women and the boy returned to the 922 N. Weatherford St. home, an ambulance was taking the infant to the hospital.

The baby, who suffered a fracture to the right side of her skull, died a few hours later as a result of brain edema, or swelling.

After the injury, Vidana told police and others that the young girl apparently fell from a couch while he was getting a drink of water, according to testimony.

Forensic pathologists gave conflicting opinions about whether a toddler can sustain the massive injuries suffered from such a fall.

Dr. Linda Norton, a private pathologist from Dallas, said the infant was injured from being accelerated into a surface and not from being struck while stationary. This point was not disputed.

Ms. Norton likened the phenomenon to being in a moving car that hits a telephone pole. The car, like the skull, comes to a stop yet the passenger, as with the brain, keeps moving within the vehicle, she testified. The forceful brain movement led to the swelling.

An infant would have to fall from two or three stories to cause such injury, Ms. Norton said. The necessary force could

MISD sets slate for town meeting

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Midland school board trustees are ready to hear from the public on such hot topics as boundary changes for the new junior high school, grandfather clauses and bus routes for the district's cluster integration system.

Trustees set the slate of issues to be addressed at community meetings which will begin 7 p.m. Thursday at Quanah Parker Elementary School in District 7.

"Boundaries will also have to be drawn for the new Barney Greathouse Elementary School," noted Joseph Baressi Jr., superintendent of Midland Independent School District.

"We want to listen to what the community has to say and take note," said board president Ken Marks.

MISD trustees recently met at a retreat to discuss planning issues which will impact the district in the next two school years.

Items suggested for discussion include:

- BOUNDARIES for MISD junior high schools — Alamo, San Jacinto, Goddard and Abell (projected to be open September 1993) junior high schools.
- BOUNDARIES for Greathouse Elementary School.
- GRANDFATHER CLAUSE for the new boundaries.
- CLUSTER ASSIGNMENTS for the district's 23 elementary schools.

Argument spurs store shooting

Staff Report

ODESSA — An argument among co-workers at an electronics store in Odessa has left one man in critical condition at the Medical Center Hospital and another facing attempted murder charges, Odessa police officials said.

Richard Lee Brooks, 39, is in custody under $20,000 bond after allegedly shooting 28-year-old Mark Wayne Sartain once in the chest Tuesday afternoon. The shooting occurred at Harold's Electronics store at 2809 Andrews Highway. Both men are employees of the store, officials said.

Sartain was listed in stable condition after undergoing surgery immediately following the 12:15 p.m. shooting.

According to officials, the two men had been arguing about "something of a business nature" when Brooks brandished a .45 long colt revolver and fired one shot. The bullet entered Sartain's left mid-torso and exited the left back area, officials said.

The incident remains under investigation by the Odessa Police Department.

Midland City Councilmen gave a nod to increasing the cost of animal control services Tuesday.

An ordinance, approved on first reading, would increase the fees of several animal control services, including pet pick-up, boarding and impoundment. It also requires pet owners to keep waste off city sidewalks and addresses housing certain exotic animals.

A second reading of the rule is expected at the council's next meeting, Nov. 26.

The council favored the proposal 6-1, but District 1 representative James Devenport said the percentage increases are too high.

"If we raise our fees so high, especially the impoundment, people are going to leave their pets there," Devenport said. "We need to get to where we adopt out 90 percent of our animals. We need to get our fees down to where more people can afford them."

In addition to some fee increases, the ordinance will force pet owners to prevent dogs, cats and other animals from dropping waste on public property or private property belonging to others. If waste is dropped, it must be immediately removed — scooped — by the pet owner.

Failure to comply with the provision, known as the "animal nuisance" rule, would be a class C misdemeanor, said Assistant City Manager Susan Thorpe.

Impoundment fees — charged per sheltered pet — would be restructured under the new ordinance, designed to penalize the repeat offender.

Dogs or cats held at the shelter for the first time will cost the owner $40; but proof of spaying or neutering will cut that fee by $15.

Second offenses will cost owners $50, a fee that increases by $10 the third time.

"All our fees are below market study standards," said Community Services Director George Logan. He said the increase plan was designed to help the department recoup its costs, transferring the responsibility for city pets from taxpayers to pet owners.

"We're trying to recover what it really costs," said At-large Councilman J.D. Faircloth, who had earlier requested a review of the department's fees. "I think they've done a good job of designing these."

Faircloth said comments he had received from citizens were almost entirely supportive of fee increases rather than reductions.

In addition, the ordinance makes it illegal to keep an ostrich or emu in a residential area. The birds are classified as livestock, officials said.

A change in the licensing requirements for ferrets is included in the ordinance. Previously there was no accepted rabies vaccine for the ferrets, but the FDA recently approved such a vaccine. Ferrets will now be licensed in the same manner as dogs and cats, issued

Sheriff, court at odds over budget

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter and members of the Commissioners' Court are once again at loggerheads.

Tuesday, the sheriff asked the Commissioners' Court to reinstate $99,000, which had been cut from his department's budget, to purchase several new patrol cars.

The commissioners said "no."

The sheriff contends his patrol vehicles are wearing out and becoming dangerous. Reducing his request to two new cars did not satisfy commissioners.

But the sheriff, citing a $24,000 line item for cars in his 1992 $4.49-million budget, made his proposal.

The court said that money was for repair and replacement.

"There is no money to buy new cars?" the sheriff asked.

"That is my recollection (from budget study)," replied Commissioner Guy McCrary.

"Then," said the sheriff, "I am spinning my wheels."

In a countywide budget trimming this summer, commissioners reclassified the sherrif's department manpower and authorized a 40-vehicle fleet.

Twenty-four of the 64 department vehicles — patrol cars, vans, and pickup trucks — had been purchased from a fund of seized drug money or were seized in drug raids.

The court authorized funding to maintain, fuel, service and insure only 40 vehicles. Any vehicles beyond that and the sheriff would have to come up with his own funding.

Judge Seltzer had requested a list of those 40 vehicles which the sheriff selected for the county to maintain, fuel, service and insure. As of Tuesday, the sheriff had not delivered the list.

Neither would the sheriff discuss the 24 "surplus" vehicles.

"I am not going to discuss it here," said the sheriff, who said he would defer that issue to his attorney, Hal Upchurch of Monahans.

That issue will be dealt with in the trial of the lawsuit brought by the sheriff against the commissioners for unduly restricting his operations, Painter said.

Painter said "none of those 24 vehicles" was suitable for patrol work.

"I don't have any concept whatsoever what happened to those 24 vehicles," lamented Wright.

Painter said that it was necessary that his force be equipped with eight to 12 new vehicles "to keep the fleet rolling." He wants group to be added to the cluster system which will include Greathouse Elementary School.

MISD: Meeting will cover many topics

■ EARLY CHILDHOOD CENTERS at neighborhood schools. All early childhood programs currently meet in two schools.

"If time is remaining after we discuss the agenda items, then we will open up the meetings for other concerns," said trustee George Staley.

Plans for the Alternative High School also moved ahead Tuesday when board members awarded a $1,654,190 construction contract to Campbell Construction to build the school.

"The low bid was awarded with alternates," said Wilson Heidelberg, MISD executive director of auxiliary services. Trustees debated the scope of construction, including a sprinkler system and storage building.

The low bid of $1,675,000 — with additions and subtractions, ended up approved with a net reduction of $20,810.

Heidelberg noted that the high school was bid to be constructed at $62.92 per square foot, a reduction from the budgeted $63.35 per square foot.

"Our budget did include contingencies and anticipated change orders, however," he said.

The MISD executive announced that John Bushman had offered to donate 8.3 acres of land to the school district for the Alternative High School.

"He gave us all the acreage on the site for the total campus," Heidelberg said.

The new high school will be located near the intersection of Tilden Street — which parallels Fairgrounds Road — and East Golf Course Road.

Trustees approved the land donation and discussed changing the name of the school, which has caused some confusion with the public.

Public perception has labeled the school a center for unmanageable or deliquent students rather than as a high school for students who can t attend school during regular hours.

The school will accommodate students who must work or students who are parents. It will include an on-site day care area.

"I would like to propose that we name the school for Dr. Viola Coleman," said trustee James Fuller. The longtime Midland physician and leader in the black community has "demonstrated tenacity against all types of odds. If we examine her record, we would realize we couldn't find a better person."

Following the dinner break, Pease Elementary School supporters — decked out in bright red t-shirts with white lettering reading: "Promote Pease Pride" and "I love Pease" — filled the board room.

Parents of children at Pease came to plead their cause of funding the construction which will add four classrooms and a multipurpose room to the school.

Trustees rejected a bid for a construction package — to complete additions to Pease, Fannin and Washington elementary schools — at the Oct. 29 board meeting.

After considering various options, trustees agreed that because the architectural design phase has been completed it is too late to consider using a construction manager approach.

Heidelberg said other school districts — which use the team management approach of building, rather than a general contractor — advised him the project was too far along to begin implementing a new approach.

"I think we can work faster if we sit down with existing architects and engineers and change the scope of the work," Heidelberg said.

Benita Baker, a parent, addressed the board about music, physical education and other classes being taught at the same time in the cafeteria at Pease.

Board members acknowledged that the new classroom space is a necessity.

"I am concerned that a noisy environment can hinder our children's learning abilities and the teachers' teaching abilities," Ms. Baker said.

Ms. Baker also questioned cutting costs if it meant cutting quality.

"Cutting the scope of construction means that we may use a $16 carpet rather than a $20 carpet," Marks said. "The carpet may not last as long, but it will be good carpet. We are trying to equalize the schools across the district."

Rudolph Whitley said he has had three children attend Pease. "While I have made additions to my house over 17 years, Pease hasn't changed at all," he said. "I look over my back fence and see Pease, then I see other schools like Ben Milam in better condition."

"It's no secret that we have a number of schools over 30 years old," Baressi said. "The board has committed $1.5 million per year for renovating the schools."

"It's ironic," Fuller said, "but there was a lack of interest in building when there were periods of prosperity."

In other action, trustees approved changing graduation for both Midland and Lee high schools to daytime Saturday, May 30.

The high schools will host graduations at Midland College's Chaparral Center. Greenwood High School students will have their graduation ceremony that night.

Gilbert Garcia was approved as an additional district personnel performance appraiser.

Trustees accepted a $5,000 donation from Team Bank to LHS boosters for new basketball scoreboards and almost $11,000 of playground equipment, sprinklers, trees and a chain link fence donated to Quanah Parker Elementary School by the school's Parent Teacher Association.

also come from being swung or thrown, she added.

Dr. Charles Odom, a medical examiner for the Dallas County Medical Examiner's Office, disagreed.

Odom presented medical articles that stated such injuries had occurred from short falls — as from a couch.

Ms. Norton discredited the articles as based on non-medical information gained from caretakers of killed children.

During closing arguments, defense attorney Thomas Hirsch criticized Ms. Norton's failure to recognize the medical studies.

Hirsch also pointed out to jurors that Ms. Norton was paid $2,000 a day plus expenses to testify for the prosecution, whereas Odom made available his professional opinion at the cost of expenses.

The case was heard by an 11-person jury, one juror short, after a 32-year old man passed out during graphic medical testimony on the first day of the hearing on Nov. 4.

A 20-year-old Midland man was treated and released from Memorial Hospital and Medical Center after an unknown assailant stabbed nim in the right shoulder Sunday night.

Joe Drake, 902 N. Edwards St., was walking behind the Sundown market at 703 E. Front St. when someone approached him from behind with a knife. Drake only saw a black hand and there are no leads in the incident, police said.

city tags with proof of a rabies vaccine.

Other fee adjustments included in the plan are a $2 increase in the boarding fee per day, now at $3. Sick pets, who must be separated from others at the shelter, will be boarded at a rate of $6 per day.

The department will dip dogs and cats for $10 per animal, a fee that will increase to $12 under the proposal. The department dips pets daily — no appointment required.

Man with record of sex crimes gives alternative

DALLAS (AP) — A man accused of sexually assaulting two young girls only a few months after his parole says he would prefer castration to another term in prison.

Andrew Jackson, 52, made the offer Monday in an interview with the Dallas Times Herald.

"Jesus said, 'If thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out and cast it from thee,'" Jackson said. "It is a lot to give up. It's a certain kind of death, but if it's a cure-all situation and your freedom's involved, that's more important than sex itself."

Civil libertarians call the idea barbaric.

And others wonder whether castration would curb rapists' violent tendencies.

"There's no unanimity in the medical profession that castration would be an effective deterrent to that kind of behavior," Tom Krampitz, executive director of the Texas District and County Attorneys Association said. "Nobody's really given it too much credence."

Jackson is the first person in Dallas to propose such punishment. But two Houston judges endorsed castration in September as a punishment to deter violent crime.

Jackson insists he is not guilty of the latest charges, which accuse him of sexually assaulting a 9-year-old girl he was babysitting and of abducting a 13-year-old girl and repeatedly raping her during several days while he kept her in a car in a wooded area.

He said he would undergo castration because he believes a jury would be skeptical if he pleaded innocent.

Jackson's criminal history goes back to 1967 when he was given seven years' probation for statutory rape of a 16-year-old girl. He later was named in other sexual assault and indecency cases, but most of them were dismissed in 1978 when he received a 99-year sentence for raping a 15-year-old girl.

He served 12 years on that conviction and was paroled in November 1990.

ODDS: Painter, Seltzer still disagree over budget to auction off a comparable number of cars that have more than 100,000 miles on them.

Following the Commissioners' Court meeting, the sheriff decried that the Commissioners' Court "has set a vehicle policy strictly for the Midland County Sheriff's Department."

"They said I can keep 40 vehicles, and then they decide where the vehicles go and how they are to be used," Painter said.

And for "safety reasons," Painter said that he wants "to change them (the high-mileage cars) out."

"In my opinion, that is a liable situation that could cause undue liability in the event of an incident or accident," the sheriff said. "We would buy new vehicles and rotate out the ones with dangerous (high) mileage."

"My intention was to protect the public and to protect the officers," Painter said. "What I'm interested in today was to transfer the liability as much as I could from myself to the Commissioners' Court. If they choose the responsibility, then they should assume the liability."

However, Judge Seltzer said that the sheriff "cannot shift" his responsibility to the Commissioners' Court.

"I'm elected by the people to be elected sheriff of Midland County," Painter said Tuesday. And as the sheriff, I write policy for the Midland County Sheriff's Department — the way I want it to operate. And I assign the vehicles. And now it appears that the Commissioners' Court decided to take over that role."

However, noted Seltzer, "That's not true. As policy-makers, what we are doing is exercising our statutory and constitutional duties to be fiscal managers of county government and the watchdogs over the taxpayers' dollars."

The Commissioners' Court "will support 40 vehicles, period," Seltzer said. "The taxpayer is not a bottomless pit," Seltzer said.

Midland County has "limited funds and limited ability to provide funds," Seltzer said. "And we do not have unlimited deep pockets to satisfy (the sheriff's) desires."

Additionally, Seltzer said that "law-enforcement is not and should not be a growth industry — not at the expense of the taxpayers and especially not at a time when most local businesses are suffering financially and are being required to either cut their budgets, reduce operations and/or lay off employees."

In previous years, the sheriff and the Commissioners' Court have "always been able to work together, and there are differences," Painter said. "In the past, we have been able to work them out, but now, there's a barrier there."

Lewis hearing scheduled

AUSTIN (AP) — On the eve of a preliminary court hearing for indicted House Speaker Gib Lewis, another House member said Tuesday the speaker will be an issue in election races next year.

"The people of Texas have lost confidence in his leadership," said Rep. Glen Maxey, D-Austin, in announcing his re-election bid.

Maxey said he would not support Lewis, if the Fort Worth Democrat seeks re-election to an unprecedented sixth term as leader of the 150-member House.

Despite the two misdemeanor indictments against Lewis, he easily won a record fifth two-year term as speaker in January. The speaker is elected by the House members. Lewis, however, has yet to announce whether he will seek re-election next year.

"The perception is that change will not occur unless there is new leadership at the helm," said Maxey, a freshman lawmaker who was frequently at odds with Lewis during the legislative sessions.

John Bender, a spokesman for Lewis, said, "I don't think the speaker ever counted Glen Maxey among the hundred or so members who have indicated that they would support him for re-election."

Concerning Maxey's call for reform of House rules, which many critics say give the speaker too much authority, Bender said a majority of the House can change those rules.

Meanwhile, Lewis will appear before State District Court Judge Bob Perkins on Wednesday.

Justice department rules Texas house plan invalid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department Tuesday ruled invalid the Texas state House redistricting plan, forcing the state to go back to the drawing board to develop a map that provides for increased Hispanic representation.

Assistant U.S. Attorney General John R. Dunne, in a letter to Texas Secretary of State John Hannah, said the map approved earlier this year by the Democrat-dominated Legislature did not treat minorities fairly as required under the Voting Rights Act.

"Our analysis shows that the proposed Texas House redistricting plan exhibits a pattern of districting decisions that appears to minimize Hispanic voting strength through packing or fragmenting Hispanic population concentrations unnecessarily," the letter said.

The decision pleased Texas Republicans and minority groups, who have filed lawsuits in state and federal courts to overturn the House plan.

"It's never over 'til it's over but this is a great first step," said Texas GOP Chairman Fred Meyer.

"We're delighted," he said of the ruling. "We have said all along the plan the Democrats passed was illegal (and) it violated the Voting Rights Act."

The Justice Department cited specific instances in El Paso County, South Texas and Dallas County where the plan discriminated against Hispanics.

Judith Sanders Castro, an attorney with the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, said the ruling closely paralleled the objections raised by MALDEF.

"It looks like we've gotten overall the biggest part of our concerns addressed," she said, with the exception of objections raised about Tarrant and Harris counties.

The state did not immediately comment on the ruling.

"Unfortunately, we did not get a copy of that until late this evening," said Bill Cryer, a spokesman for Gov. Ann Richards. "The governor hasn't had a chance to really review it yet ... so it would be premature right now to say anything about it until we've analyzed it."

Both Meyer and Ms. Castro said the Justice Department ruling likely will strengthen their hand in court.

"I would think that it does because this is exactly what we had said at the time the plans were passed and at the time we filed our lawsuit," Meyer said.

Noting that the deadline for qualifying in the March primary is Jan. 2, Dunne said the state still has time to submit a revised plan for approval.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales has asked a three-judge federal panel in Washington, D.C. to allow the state to use the plan for the 1992 elections until the various lawsuits can be resolved.

That court has scheduled a Dec. 2 hearing to review the House plan along with redistricting maps for the Senate, U.S. House and state Board of Education.

The four plans have been challenged by various groups, including MALDEF and the state GOP, in South Texas state district court and federal courts in Austin, Brownsville and Washington, D.C.

On Nov. 25, State District Judge Mario Ramirez Jr. will hear a trial on charges the state plans are unconstitutional because they relied on the 1990 census, which missed about 500,000 Texans, mostly minorities.

In August, Ramirez ruled the plans discriminatory. The state appealed to the Texas Supreme Court, which ordered the trial.

Currently in the 150-member House, 20 members are Hispanic and 13 black.

Officer joins A&M cadet investigation

HOUSTON (AP) — A West Point training officer has joined the investigation into charges of sexual harassment within Texas A&M University's Corps of Cadets.

Lt. Col. Robert McDannell, who revamped West Point's traditional discipline system two years ago, spent three days at A&M investigating women cadets' charges of harassment by their male counterparts, the Houston Chronicle reported Tuesday.

McDannell said he would mail recommendations to the university, but A&M officials said they did not know when that would happen.

McDannell investigated West Point's discipline system after a cadet was expelled for refusing to haze freshmen under the "fourth class system" of regulations.

Col. Donald Johnson, the deputy commandant for the Texas A&M Corps, said McDannell's probe is one of several efforts to resolve harassment problems. He said the school also has added Air Force Maj. Becky Ray to its four-officer training staff.

The Corps has been under fire since a female cadet reported in September and October that she was physically assaulted by male cadets who didn't want her in the cavalry unit. She later recanted the charges, but other female cadets had come forward, claiming rampant verbal abuse and physical harassment by male cadets.

Texas A&M President William Mobley has named a special committee of students, school officials and community leaders to investigate the charges.

Couple faces kidnapping indictment

FORT WORTH (AP) — A North Texas couple already accused of nearly starving their teen-age son will also be charged with aggravated kidnapping if Tarrant County authorities get their way.

Prosecutors say they plan to seek a kidnapping indictment against Jay and Linda Hill. The White Settlement couple has been jailed since Nov. 4 and face charges of injury to a child.

A Dallas radio station reported Tuesday that an agreement has been reached between the state and the Hills that would give the state temporary custody of the couple's two boys.

Gloria Corder, a child protective custody supervisor working on the case, told station WBAP the boys probably will remain in state custody until a court decides whether they should be allowed to return to their parents.

Stephen Hill, 13, remains in a coma in critical condition in a Fort Worth hospital, and is also suffering a blood infection caused by malnutrition. The bruised, 55-pound teen had a heart attack Nov. 3.

Douglas Hill, 12, has been in the protective custody of child welfare officials since his parents arrest.

Mrs. Hill has told police that she and her husband, an engineer for General Dynamics, disciplined Stephen by chaining him inside their trailer home and depriving him of food.

Mrs. Hill's court-appointed attorney admitted that accusations against the Hills made them "the most hated people" in the area.

But the move to press kidnapping charges was a publicity stunt, Charles Baldwin said.

"Kidnapping charges were never intended to punish parents for keeping a child in their own home, for whatever reason," he said. "Maybe they're trying to make new law."

Authorities appear to want to "strike while the iron is hot and publicly convict these people in the press, instead of the courtroom," Baldwin said.

Hearing addresses mental health complaints

In one case, a patient's account was charged for twice the maximum daily recommended dosage of the medicine Prozac. In another case an account was charged for up to 12 hours of therapy in one day.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A state Senate committee heard more complaints Tuesday about the mental health field and asked doctors and insurance industry representatives to help solve the problem.

Sen. Chris Harris, R-Arlington, asked that Gov. Ann Richards call a three-day special session to address the issue. Harris said Texans can't afford to wait until after the 1993 regular session for new laws to take effect.

The three senators conducting the public hearing questioned witnesses about involuntary commitments to psychiatric hospitals, inconsistent billing for medication and other abuses.

Scott Waychoff of New Braunfels described his experiences in 1990 with Colonial Hills Hospital in San Antonio. Waychoff said he was involuntarily committed because of an alleged alcohol problem, which Waychoff said didn't exist.

The doctor in his case later was determined to have obtained his medical license in Texas using forged documents, and Colonial Hills officials said he was dismissed in May.

"He was able to get the state to hold me without any due cause, without any reason," said Waychoff of his commitment hearing. Waychoff said he remained at Colonial Hills 24 days, at a cost of approximately $38,000 to his insurance company.

Colonial Hills officials Tuesday referred all questions from The Associated Press to the hospital's parent company, Psychiatric Institutes of America.

PIA spokesman David Olson declined to respond to Waychoff's allegations because of privacy laws, but said Colonial Hills follows state law when committing patients against their will.

Olson also said while PIA doesn't plan to testify at any of the Senate committee hearings around the state, it will work with the committee on changing mental health laws.

Also testifying was a San Antonio School District trustee who has received reports from parents that teen-agers were lured to a private psychiatric hospital for admission by hospital counselors working for free with the district.

Sen. Mike Moncrief, D-Fort Worth, chairman of the interim committee on health and human services, said psychiatric abuses in Texas are part of a nationwide problem.

And Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo, said private corporations in the psychiatric field have an obligation to work with the Legislature to correct abuses.

Lynda De La Garza of San Antonio told the senators about her family's experience with Texas Biodyne Inc., a company that contracts with Humana Health Plans to provide mental health services.

She accused the company of not allowing hospital treatment she claimed her suicidal son needed. It was only her constant letters, phone calls and interviews with news reporters, she said, that persuaded the company to permit hospitalization covered in her insurance plan.

Lane Melton, director of special claims for the non-profit Blue Cross-Blue Shield of Texas, said his company is carefully scrutinizing bills to ensure unreasonable amounts of money are not paid to psychiatric hospitals.

Melton said abuses in the psychiatric field are contributing to high insurance rates.

Moncrief told Melton about previous evidence the committee received showing a hospital charging from $11 to $46 for the same tablet of medication on different days. Melton said his company would not have paid that bill.

Navratilova sues former attorney

FORT WORTH (AP) — Martina Navratilova sued her former attorney and his corporation Tuesday, alleging that they misguided her when she signed a non-marital contract with Judy Nelson she says she didn't fully understand.

Jerry Loftin now represents Nelson, who brought a "palimony" lawsuit against the tennis celebrity in June.

Navratilova's malpractice suit claims "heedless and reckless disregard" for her rights and welfare.

"Not only was the agreement not what I was led to believe it was, but I thought Jerry Loftin and BeAnn Sisemore were my lawyers and protecting me," Navratilova said in a prepared statement.

The conduct of Loftin was made an issue during a preliminary hearing in September.

Loftin did not immediately return phone calls Tuesday made to his Fort Worth office by The Associated Press.

Nelson, 45, and Navratilova, 34, signed a "non-marital cohabitation agreement" in 1986 that was drafted by Sisemore, a paralegal working for Loftin. In the agreement, Nelson was to get half of the estimated $5 million to $9 million earned during their relationship. Nelson contends the nine-time Wimbledon women's singles champion broke the pact.

Nelson and Navratilova lived in Fort Worth from 1984 through 1989, and then moved to Aspen, Colo. The couple's relationship ended earlier this year.

During pre-trial hearings in September and October, the women said they agree on financial terms of a settlement. But they remain apart on other issues, including Nelson's refusal to agree to a no-publicity clause that would stop her from selling her story.

The malpractice suit Navratilova filed Tuesday alludes to mental anguish and a loss of business opportunity caused by the case.

She claimed that the pact she signed was not what she believed it was at the time.

Business gets off the ground

MANOR (AP) — Two California stockbrokers have started a new business that's getting off the ground.

The two have launched a bungee jumping operation northeast of Austin that features a plunge of more than 100 feet from the gondola of a hot-air balloon.

"It's a rush you'll never forget," said Dave Halley, 38, who last week opened the business, called Bungee Madness with his partner, Steve Austin, 29.

The two men also run a bungee jumping operation in the California town of Victorville. For $60, thrill-seekers dive from a tethered balloon situated about 200 feet up in the air.

Plan to divert funds for Soviet aid appears dead

By Eric Schmitt
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — A plan to divert $1 billion from the Pentagon budget to aid the Soviet Union appeared all but dead Tuesday, the victim of political miscalculations by two of the most powerful lawmakers in Congress and a growing public perception that Washington is putting foreign aid ahead of domestic problems.

Efforts to salvage the Soviet proposal, which seemed headed for approval two weeks ago, were virtually exhausted Tuesday as the Bush administration failed to offer a public endorsement of the plan.

Democratic leaders in Congress had said that without that public support from the White House, they would drop the proposal rather than bear the political heat alone.

The House speaker, Thomas S. Foley, said Tuesday that he expected the proposal to be "postponed," clearing the way for final passage of the Pentagon's $291 billion budget bill for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

Usually among the most astute deal makers and power brokers in Washington, Rep. Les Aspin of Wisconsin and Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, the plan's main architects, did not fully consult with Democratic colleagues until the last minute.

More important, they evidently failed to anticipate the storm of bipartisan criticism against retraining Soviet officers, among other things, when Americans were homeless and out of work.

The demise of the Soviet aid plan is a rare political embarrassment for Nunn and Aspin, both Democrats. Nunn is chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee; Aspin leads the corresponding committee in the House.

Although both contended that U.S. security would be enhanced by using $1 billion to help the Soviet Union avoid further political instability and keep control of its 30,000 nuclear weapons, they never showed that the plan could lead to direct financial savings for Washington.

"I look at this as a down payment on greater savings, bu those savings are only really possible if the reform elements stay in power in the Soviet Union and continue to unwind their military-industrial complex," Aspin said.

The idea was condemned, and eventually undone, by Senate and House colleagues from both parties

Blood banks ban donations by Gulf vets

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon and U.S. blood banks on Tuesday banned blood donations from Persian Gulf War veterans and visitors to prevent a potentially fatal disease carried by sand flies from contaminating the nation's blood supply.

The precautionary action was taken after military physicians diagnosed 22 cases of parasite-borne leishmaniasis infecting Army troops who served in desert encampments in northeastern Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and southern Iraq as well as in developed areas such as Dhahran and the Saudi capital of Riyadh.

None of the infected soldiers donated blood since returning from the war, officials said. Nor have the two strains of illness identified so far ever been transmitted by contaminated blood.

The blood donations were halted because a related strain of the disease has been transmitted through contaminated blood in five previous cases, according to medical literature surveyed by military researchers.

Army Col. Charles Oster, chief of infectious diseases at the Walter Reed Army Medical Center and a consultant to the Army Surgeon General, said the ban on blood donations from 541,000 GIs who served in the gulf was ordered because officials wanted to prevent "any chance for contamination of the blood supply."

Army Brig. Gen. Ronald Blanck, director of professional services for the Army Surgeon General, called the risk of contamination "very, very low," but added: "It is theoretically possible indeed that there are other cases out there who could have donated blood and who therefore could have transmitted this parasite. But it's very, very slight."

Donald Doddridge, president of the American Association of Blood Banks, which represents 2,400 community, regional and Red Cross blood banks, said civilian blood banks also were suspending donations from civilians who visited the Persian Gulf at least until Jan. 1, 1993.

A total of 40,000 units of blood are donated to civilian blood banks daily. Between 12 million and 14 million units of blood are used annually.

"We want to reassure the public," Doddridge said. "This is just a precaution that we are taking. There is no known transmission through the blood supply at this time."

Doddridge said questionnaires given to prospective blood donors would detect service in the Persian Gulf.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Although morning hours may be trying, things take a turn for the better later today. You are fascinated by a good friend's actions. A personal goal moves within reach. Be persistent.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Avoid distractions by isolating yourself at place of employment. Consider plans for a new project but also get caught up on your other work. Be alert to malfunctions if operating machinery.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may have to force the issue to get things moving at your place of employment. Others are apt to be wrapped up in their own thoughts. You cannot succeed without their cooperation.

Opening lead: King of ◇ South came close to making the spade slam on this deal from a team match. Unfortunately, that counts only in horseshoes, not in bridge.

North's four hearts was a cue-bid in support of spades. It showed a maximum no trump in support of spades and first-round control of hearts, while denying any lower-ranking ace. South elected to take a shot at slam despite the fact that there was a sure loser in diamonds.

West led the king of diamonds and continued with the ace, ruffed in the closed hand. Declarer had to bring in the trump suit without loss, and the percentage play was to take a finesse. A low spade to the queen won, but when East failed to follow declarer was stranded with a spade loser and suffered a one-trick setback.

At the other table the contract was a more modest four spades, and here, too, the lead was the king of diamonds, followed by the ace. Declarer ruffed and elected to take the spade finesse. But instead of leading a low spade, South led the jack!

Had West played low, declarer would have run the knave and then taken another finesse to pick up the king, so West covered. That proved to be equally unavailing. The ace won, and the trump position was revealed when East showed out. Declarer returned to hand with the king of hearts and led a spade, taking the marked finesse for the ten. Making four-odd with two overtricks.

Knowing the percentage play when holding 10 cards in the suit missing the king is only half the problem. Leading the right card is as important to solving the puzzle.

During series he was kung-fu fake, David Carradine says

SYDNEY, Australia — David Carradine says he was a kung-fu fake during his popular television series in the 1970s.

While fans of "Kung Fu" looked to Carradine's character as a perfect disciple as he wandered the West studying the mysteries of the Tao, Carradine said he had no understanding of the Shaolin discipline.

"I was a fake," he said. "When I left the series after four years I knew nothing about kung fu. At the time I did not understand it at all and I was faking it all the time even though I knew the moves. I am an actor. We just thought we had a good story."

Carradine, in Australia to promote his new book, "Spirit of Shaolin," said it was not until six months after the series' cancellation in 1974 that he came to fully appreciate kung fu.

"For some reason I decided to go back and take a class and then entered into what will probably be a lifelong disipline," he said.

NEW YORK — Bob Hope is miffed at Marlo Thomas because she didn't appear at a benefit for her late father's favorite charity, St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital, a newspaper reported Tuesday.

Hope flew from Los Angeles to the benefit near New York City on Friday despite his wife's ear operation the previous day.

Thomas

Miss Thomas, the daughter of Danny Thomas, lives less than 30 minutes away.

Hope was one of Thomas' closest friends.

The Daily News quoted a friend of Hope's who had dinner with him after the benefit as saying the Memphis, Tenn., hospital "is Danny Thomas' legacy, and that the least Marlo could do was put in an appearance."

A publicist for Miss Thomas told the newspaper: "Marlo can't make all of the many St. Jude's events, and no one expected her to be at this one."

The Thomas family sent a telegram to the benefit saying they were sorry they weren't able to attend, the newspaper said.

LOS ANGELES — Harry Belafonte will be honored for his civil rights work at a Dec. 6 dinner.

The singer will receive the American Civil Liberties Union of Southern California's annual Bill of Rights Award for significant contributions to the growth and understanding of civil liberties and civil rights.

"From the days when he marched alongside Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., to his work as an organizer of the 'We Are the World' project and the creation of USA for Africa, Belafonte has always fought for a vision of social justice," said a statement from the group.

Belafonte, perhaps best known for his classic Calypso song "Day-O (The Banana Boat Song)," was a cultural adviser to the Peace Corps under President Kennedy and was the second American to serve as UNICEF's good will ambassador.

NEW YORK — The trendy Tribeca Grill, which counts Robert De Niro and Sean Penn among its celebrity backers, could suffer if a drug treatment center opens nearby, the managing partner says.

Drew Nieporent, who runs the restaurant, said Monday anything that hurts businesses costs the city tax dollars.

"That's why you don't want to put something that's going to scare businesses like mine away from the city," he said. "The threat is not from us, the threat is from the city in placing a program like that in the neighborhood, that threatens the tranquility of the neighborhood."

The proposed 160-bed center for recovering addicts would be run by the government-funded Project Return Foundation.

Nieporent, whose partners also include Bill Murray and Mikhail Baryshnikov, denied a report in Monday's New York Post that they were considering moving the eatery.

De Niro said he and his Tribeca Film Center, located in the same converted warehouse, are "not opposed to Project Return and never have been. ... We believe that each community must do its part for the betterment of New York City."

AUSTIN — Whether your musical taste favors rock or Bach, the state has a deal for you.

An autographed photo of Elvis Presley and a 1736 handcrafted violin are included in property being auctioned this weekend by the Treasury.

Those items, a four-carat diamond and 125,000 other things being sold are from the contents of unclaimed safe deposit boxes. Total estimated value is $320,000.

"This year's auction promises to be among the best ever held by the state Treasury. We will be auctioning everything from pocket watches to fascinating historical documents to rare gold coins and jewelry," Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison said Tuesday.

The auction will be held Sunday at the Austin City Coliseum. A preview of the goods will be held Friday and Saturday.

Under state law, safe deposit boxes are turned over to the Treasury after they have been abandoned by the owner for five years or longer.

Gates sworn in, begins job as CIA director

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Robert M. Gates, who was criticized by supporters and detractors alike during his confirmation hearings for his tough management style, started his tenure as director of Central Intelligence on Tuesday with a joke.

"Twenty-six weeks ago today, the president announced his intention to nominate me for director of central intelligence," Gates said, smiling broadly. "In the interval, the entire Soviet empire has collapsed."

In contrast to his serious demeanor throughout the confirmation process, Gates exuded joy on Tuesday as Justice Sandra Day O'Connor swore him in as the country's 15th chief of the intelligence agency.

The standing-room only crowd in the bubble-topped auditorium of the CIA headquarters in Langley, Va., greeted Gates' statement about the Soviet collapse with laugter and warm applause.

Among those attending the ceremony were President Bush; Vice President Dan Quayle; Gen. Colin L. Powell, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; Brent Scowcroft, the national security adviser, and much of the Cabinet.

Gates' brief, upbeat remarks offered no hint of the changes he will make as head of the CIA and its fellow intelligence agencies.

In an apparent effort to show that he had mellowed, Gates praised the agency's analysts and agents on Tuesday.

Whitefly infestation sends produce prices soaring

N.Y. Times News Service

The poinsettia whiteflies that have eaten away at winter produce in Southern California's Imperial and Riverside counties are taking a bite out of consumer pocketbooks, too.

The harvest from those counties is not even due in the supermarkets until December, but the retail price of fresh vegetables from other areas has soared in anticipation of a slackening supply.

Also affecting the costs are smaller-than-expected harvests from the San Joaquin Valley and other regions.

Growers are charging steeply higher prices, and the supermarkets in turn have pushed up the price of iceberg lettuce nearly threefold, while prices of broccoli and cauliflower are double what they were just days ago. Cantaloupe, virtually wiped out, is unavailable at many stores.

The cost of the destruction wrought by the tiny bug could reach $200 million, according to agriculture experts.

The depleted crops from Imperial and Riverside counties, once they reach the supermarkets, could actually ease the panic somewhat. "As we get into the next three or four weeks, we'll see what prices will settle out at," said Bob Krauter, a spokesman for the California Farm Bureau Federation.

"As more product comes in, we could even see prices come down."

At San Francisco area branches of Lucky Stores, iceberg lettuce jumped from 59 cents a head last month to $1.49. Broccoli is up to $1.29 a bunch from 59 cents. Cauliflower prices have doubled to $1.99 a head from 99 cents.

Prices have risen as quickly and sharply at other chains. Iceberg lettuce is $1.49 a head at Safeway and $1.39 at stores operated by Save Mart. Less than a week ago, lettuce sold for 59 cents. A bunch of broccoli that cost 59 or 69 cents a few days ago now goes for $1.09 at Safeway and $1.19 at Save Mart and Fry's.

Arch rivals collide

FSU, Miami play for nation's top spot

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Florida State coach Bobby Bowden can count many successes in his 16 seasons with the Seminoles. Beating archrival Miami when it matters most isn't one of them.

No game in Florida State history has meant more than Saturday's noon EST contest between the top-ranked Seminoles and No. 2 Miami in Tallahassee.

"We've been here a few times, and we've always come out the loser," Bowden said Tuesday. "Maybe that's why we won't panic, because we've never won in the past and we can't go downhill."

Since the 1976 season, Bowden has lost 10 of his 15 meetings with the Hurricanes, including five of the last six. Twice — in 1987 and 1988 — a loss to Miami marked the lone blemish on the Florida State schedule, robbing the Seminoles of likely No. 1 finishes.

"They've cost us a few championships," Bowden admitted. "I think they've probably had more star players than we've had. They've sure deserved everything they've gotten."

Miami won national titles in 1983, 1987 and 1989. Ironically, Florida State's 24-10 victory in 1989 didn't stop Miami from taking the championship that year.

"The biggest thing about the rivalry is the way it's grown on a national scope. It's not just a backyard brawl like it was in the first 20 years or however long it's been going on," Bowden said.

Actually, the two schools have met 34 times, with the Hurricanes winning 20. Miami coach Dennis Erickson said the rivalry continues in the off-season.

"The state of Florida's probably got as many big-time football athletes, or more,

Carr honored

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech's Steve Carr has been named Southwest Conference Defensive Player of the Week by the Associated Press.

Last Saturday Carr caused a fumble and blocked a punt to help set up two touchdowns in Tech's 38-21 rout of Arkansas.

"There's no doubt I am better offensively playing defense," Carr said who played tight end last year and made just one catch. "I am making up for lost time."

Carr, who also made 16 solo tackles and assisted on three others against the Razorbacks, joins Texas A&M quarterback Bucky Richardson with SWC honors. Richardson earned AP SWC Offensive Player of the Week honors for leading the 13th-ranked Aggies in a 44-7 blowout of Texas Christian on Thursday.

Richardson threw for two touchdowns and ran for two other scores while passing for a career-high 321 yards against the Horned Frogs. This marks the third time this season Richardson has won player of the week honors.

Carr is Tech's second leading tackler with 67 solos and 35 assists.

Tech coach Spike Dykes said Carr is the ultimate team player.

"Steve will do whatever you ask of him," said Tech's fifth-year coach. "He's unassuming. You never know he is there until the ball is snapped. And then he is all over the field."

Carr said his performance Saturday was especially gratifying because it came against Arkansas, which is leaving the SWC for the Southeastern Conference after this season.

Cowboys try to shake loss

■ Dallas attempts to regroup after dropping an overtime thriller to Houston.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Jimmy Johnson's psychology background is coming in handy this week at Valley Ranch.

His beaten and beaten up Dallas Cowboys are trying to shake the hangover from an overtime loss to the Houston Oilers in time for Sunday's game in the Meadowlands against the New York Giants.

"We can't afford to linger with the previous game," said Johnson, a psychology major at the University of Arkansas. "I think our guys will handle this much better than we did the week after Philadelphia (a 24-0 loss). Our young guys aren't rookies anymore."

He added, "We have a good football team; much better than a year ago when we were 3-7 at this stage. But I'm concerned. Unfortunately, our schedule the rest of the way is against good teams. We've got to find a edge. We've got to get an edge in effort, special teams, takeaways or a scheme. We need an edge."

Johnson got some good news. Offensive tackle Nate Newton just has a severe knee sprain not torn ligaments and defensive back Ike Holt's ribs are bruised not cracked. Rookie Erik Williams will start for Newton at right tackle. Rookie Mike Sullivan, a free agent from the University of Miami, has been activated off the practice squad as a backup.

"We're not sure how long Nate will be out, but at least it's not torn and he'll be back," Johnson said. "Holt is less than 100 percent, but hopefully he can play against the Giants."

The Cowboys (6-4) defeated the defending world champion Giants 21-16 in Texas Stadium on Sept. 29.

Johnson said the Cowboys have positive reinforcement from the victory.

"Having won before not only helps us but puts some doubt in the Giants mind," Johnson said Tuesday. "It helps our confidence to know we have beaten them before. We've got a good group. I like our guys and I think they'll keep things in perspective and respond."

Dallas running back Emmitt Smith, whose lost fumble led to the Oilers' winning field goal, was on Johnson's mind.

"The best thing when a player has adversity is to stay active and we'll make sure he's active this week," Johnson said. "Those things will eventually fade off. We had 150 to 160 plays in the game that could have won for us."

Oddsmakers rated the Giants 5-point favorites in the 3 p.m. game.

Glavine

Cy Young honor goes to Glavine

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Tom Glavine, who won 20 games and led the Braves to the first World Series in Atlanta's history, won the National League's Cy Young Award on Tuesday.

The 25-year-old left-hander became the youngest pitcher to win the award since Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets did it at age 20 in 1985.

"I'm excited. It hasn't really set in yet," Glavine said during a news conference at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium. "In a couple of weeks it will probably hit me as to what happened."

Glavine, the NL's starter in the All-Star game, was 20-11 with a 2.55 ERA.

"I think I put up some pretty good numbers," he said. "I'm just happy some other people recognized it. The only thing that could have made this year any better than this would have been winning the World Series."

Glavine got 19 of 24 first-place votes and five second-place votes for 110 points in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. St. Louis Cardinals reliever Lee Smith, who led the majors with 47 saves, was second. Smith got four first-place votes, 12 seconds and four third-place votes for 60 points.

John Smiley of the Pittsburgh Pirates, the only other 20-game winner in the NL, finished third with four second-place votes and 14 thirds for 26 points.

Jose Rijo of the Cincinnati Reds was fourth with one first-place vote, two second-place votes and two third-place votes for 13 points.

"Getting this award ... puts me in some pretty select company," Glavine said. "Twenty-five years from now when I'm talking to my son or grandson, I can say I was the best pitcher in the National League one year."

Glavine, the only pitcher named on all 24 ballots, became only the second Braves pitcher to win the award. The other was Warren Spahn, who did it in 1957 when the Braves were in Milwaukee.

"It means an awful lot to be the first Atlanta Brave to get it," Glavine said.

Glavine said he called his parents first after learning he had won.

"They've been sweating this out more than me," he said.

Glavine, in his fourth full season with the Braves, tied Smiley for the league lead in victories, was third in ERA and first with nine complete

Keith Boyd victim of true brain death

For the most part, offensive linemen toil in obscurity, making key plays that go unnoticed by the masses. I know. I've been down that road before as a youth.

Williamson

But this corner carried obscurity to new heights in a story written about the Midland Lee-San Angelo game in last Saturday's paper.

There was no question that Lee's offensive line was a key ingredient in the Rebels' 29-22 win over the Bobcats Friday. The Rebs marched for an awesome 25 first downs and gave San Angelo the ball only four plays in the final period of play. You don't do that without the offensive line making mash out of its opponent.

Well, I was smart enough to recognize that the offensive line was totally dominant. That really took some smarts. But the fingers didn't tell the same story as the mind.

I just happened to change the name of Lee offensive guard Keith Boyd to Justin Firkins in the story. Firkins, a two-time all-state player for Lee, has graduated. I'm sure he was thrilled to see his revival while Boyd got the raspberry treatment from his teammates.

How could such a mistake be made? Well, I could blame deadline pressure since the game didn't even end until 11 p.m. This is one reason writers across District 4-5A have been yelping for 7:30 p.m. starting times. I could blame some proof reader for not catching the mistake. Or I could say that I was just checking to see how many people are reading the sports section.

OK, so a lot of people ARE reading the sports section. I think I heard from them all — and they all know Keith Boyd. But the real reason for the mistake must ultimately fall to the truth — simple brain death. Some will say that happened years ago and some others will say you have to have a brain before it can die. I understand both feelings and would have to agree.

In fact, Keith Boyd deserves much better treatment. Besides, he is much bigger (taller and stronger) than I am. I am truly in his corner as long as he never invites me over for french fries.

The attempt at a public apology has been made, but mistake or not, Lee's offensive line deserves some mention this week. Center K.C. Jones and Boyd put on a blocking clinic against San Angelo. Senior Max Stuart, who has played at both guard and tackle this year while hobbling on a bad ankle, has been one of the line's most productive members. He wasn't even listed a pre-season starter, but injuries forced him into the lineup and he's been there ever since. Senior tackle Danny Smith has quietly done a great job this year. And sophomore Rafeek Haseeb has moved into a starting guard slot the past three weeks.

Lee will live or die with these young men in the playoffs, and that's no secret.

But we also saw something else Friday against San Angelo. Senior running back Brett Sullivan, for my money, had the best game of his career, rushing for 122 yards. Sullivan is the fastest of the Lee backs, but producing up the middle has not been his strong suit. He has never run harder than Friday night and this is a great time for him to find his full potential. He may be a big treat in the playoffs.

Junior Sherman Dedrick had 119 yards to give Lee its first 1-2 100-yard punch this season in a single game.

Lee appears to be playoff ready, coming off its finest overall game of the year in a 9-1 season.

But before this year is over, forgive me if I happen to bring back some glory players of the past. Who knows? I just might have Tyrone Thurman or Farris Strambler running again for the Rebels. But Keith Boyd will be Keith Boyd from now on. His talents really don't need any embellishments from a brain dead sports writer.

UIL comes down on West Orange Stark coach

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The University Interscholastic League on Tuesday placed West Orange Stark football coach Dan Hooks on probation for one year for verbally abusing officials at an Oct. 11 football game with Port Neches Groves.

Hooks, whose teams have won state championships in 1986 and 1987, also drew a public reprimand from the UIL state executive committee. But he said he was relieved that the penalties were not more severe.

His team has a first-round Class 4A playoff game Saturday against Houston King at Pasadena. West Orange Stark has an 8-2 record, and King is 9-1.

Hooks was suspended by school officials for two games, after an investigation revealed that Hooks had verbally abused game officials at halftime and after the game.

He will coach in the playoffs.

Superintendent Glen Neswick noted Tuesday that Hooks' new contract will include a provision that any violation of UIL rules may be grounds for termination, and that dressing facilities for officials will be relocated to avoid contact between officials and coaches.

The UIL committee supported those local actions.

"I think this guy did wrong," Neswick said. "I'm asking you to let me take care of it."

The UIL committee also placed Iowa Park football coach Lucky Gamble on probation for one year, after finding that Gamble had made game films and play books available at the field house on a Sunday.

The committee also penalized Gamble by unanimously voting for a public reprimand.

Gamble said he was familiar with the UIL rule against athletes meeting on Sunday for films or instruction.

But he told the committee the assembly was voluntary and was scheduled to accommodate 16 of the 22-member varsity football team because players had conflicts such as college entrance exams on Saturday, Oct. 12.

Iowa Park Superintendent Glen Mitchell noted that after he had investigated an anonymous complaint received by the UIL, he suspended Gamble from coaching or attending the Iowa Park-Bowie varsity game on Oct. 25 and issued a verbal and written reprimand.

"I feel we have taken the proper action," Mitchell said.

Gamble acknowledged under questioning that as a coach he had been involved in a previous UIL probation action 12 years ago, for an off-season rule violation. He told reporters that the incident occurred at Lancaster, but he thought it was "very unfair" for the committee to have brought that up.

The state committee supported the superintendent's actions, and added probation and its own reprimand, after the case had been referred by the District 4-3A executive committee, which issued a private reprimand.

In other action Tuesday, the UIL committee:

— Placed El Paso Austin High School football coaches Hampton Hurt and Brent McCuiston on probation for one year, with a public reprimand, for verbally and physically abusing an official at a game with El Paso Andress on Oct. 4. Hurt was accused of using foul, abusive and threatening language. McCuiston was accused of using similar language and pushing the official, Patrick Cottman.

Mentor faces lewdness charge

Associated Press

HOUSTON — A Wheatley High School coach accused of performing a sexual act with a teenager on campus has been charged with public lewdness.

Basketball coach Lonnie O. Reynolds, 44, was charged Friday. A juvenile told police she saw Reynolds making sexual contact with an 18-year-old female student in his office on Aug. 26.

Wheatley Principal Eddie Orum said Reynolds and the 18-year-old have denied the incident. Orum said Reynolds has been reassigned to an administrative job, pending the outcome of his case.

Orum said Houston Independent School District officials also investigated the allegation, but he said he had not received a report on the findings.

Free agent market busy already

Associated Press

NEW YORK — General managers didn't even wait for the free agent market to begin before they started agreeing on big contracts.

Bill Wegman, a pitcher with a 51-51 career record who has spent 306 days on the disabled list in the past five seasons, re-signed with Milwaukee for $9.5 million over four years. And first baseman Glenn Davis, who played in only 49 games this season because of a nerve injury in his neck, re-signed with Baltimore for $6,665,000 over two years.

Those deals came late Monday night in the final hours of the period in which players could deal only with their former clubs. The pursuit of the 98 players who filed began on Tuesday, with the New York Mets saying they're ready to go after Bobby Bonilla, the most prized free agent in the group.

"I'm not sure how many teams there will be, but I'm sure they'll be plenty of us," Mets general manager Al Harazin said. "If there aren't eight or 10 clubs interested, I'll be surprised."

Baseball

California general manager Whitey Herzog had the same opinion.

"I think everybody's interested in Bobby Bonilla," he said. "But I'm not going to get into what we're going to do, what our plans are. I'm not going to conduct a negotiation in the newspapers."

General managers wouldn't say so for attribution, but some said they were stunned by Wegman's deal. The right-hander, who will be 29 next season, made $440,000 in 1991 and went 15-7 with a 2.84 ERA, lowering his career ERA to 4.25.

His new deal calls for a $500,000 signing bonus and salaries of $2.25 million a year.

"We were going after three years and I thought that would be tough to get, considering some of the things that have happened the past couple of years," Wegman said. "I was really surprised when they offered four years."

It was the first player move for Milwaukee general manager Sal Bando, who replaced Harry Dalton after the season. Bando defended the deal, comparing it with the $10 million, four-year contract last winter between left-hander Bud Black and the San Francisco Giants.

"I think the price was set last year and will continue to go up for different players," Bando said. "We felt we wanted to keep our own player rather than go out into the market and try one of the ones out there. My opinion was he was always a quality pitcher and last year he was finally healthy and he went out there and proved that."

Davis, 30, spent 116 days on the disabled list following an April injury to his spinal accessory nerve. He hit .227 with 10 homers and 28 RBIs, all personal lows.

"I know for a fact I could have went out and gotten far more dollars than what was being offered here," Davis said. "But the No. 1 issue was the support and encouragement from the community and fans here, and how great they've been to me and my family."

games.

His 246 2-3 innings were second behind Chicago's Greg Maddux (263) and his 192 strikeouts were third behind New York's David Cone (241) and Maddux (198).

Glavine became the Braves first 20-game winner since Phil Niekro won 21 in 1979 and the winningest Braves left-hander since Spahn won 23 in 1963.

Glavine, drafted by the Braves in the second round of the June 1984 draft out of Billerica (Mass.) Memorial High School, also was a fourth-round pick of the Los Angeles Kings of the NHL.

He has a 53-52 career mark despite playing on last-place teams from 1988 through 1990. He was 7-17 in 1988, 14-8 in 1989 and 10-12 in 1990. In nine starts as a rookie in 1987, he was 2-4.

than anyplace in the country," Erickson said. "It's an in-state game and we go against each other in recruiting."

Bowden said he's just happy to get to the game and not have to worry about being distracted by it while preparing for lesser opponents.

"There was pressure last week to win when you're favored by 25 points. As far as coaching's concerned, there's not that much pressure. There's no chance of looking ahead," he said.

This year's game, which will be shown nationally by ABC-TV, will have a major impact on the New Year's Day bowl picture. The winner is likely to head for the Orange Bowl. Florida State would probably go to the Cotton Bowl if it loses.

Maxwell leads Rockets past Mavs

Associated Press

DALLAS — Vernon Maxwell scored 28 points including a pair of 3-pointers in the fourth period Tuesday night to carry the Houston Rockets to a 98-92 victory over the cold-shooting Dallas Mavericks.

Houston is off to a 5-1 start, only the fourth time in the Rockets history that the franchise has opened that quickly. Dallas is 1-6 and off to the second worst start in franchise history.

Maxwell's second 3-pointer with 1:18 to play killed a Dallas rally that had brought the Mavs to within two points.

Maxwell's shot, which gave Houston a 90-85 lead, was followed by Hakeem Olajuwon's block of a Rodney McCray shot. Kenny Smith was fouled and hit two free throws to put the Rockets out of danger.

Smith scored 17 points, Olajuwon had 16, and Sleepy Floyd produced 15, including 10 in the fourth period.

Rolando Blackman led the Mavs with 30 points followed by McCray with 18 and Derek Harper with 16.

Dallas trimmed an eight-point deficit to 80-78 on Fat Lever's 3-pointer with 5:17 to play but Maxwell hit a 3-pointer.

The Mavs got a three-point play from Blackman but Olajuwon and Floyd came back with Houston buckets for an 87-81 lead with 3:12 to go.

Smith hit six straight free throws to close out the Houston victory. The Rockets only held a 65-61 lead after three quarters with McCray keeping Dallas close with 10 points in the period.

Houston led 40-38 in a low-scoring first half behind Maxwell's 15 points. The Rockets shot 42 percent to 32 percent for the Mavericks.

NBA Roundup

Hawks 118, Hornets 100

ATLANTA — Dominique Wilkins scored 25 points and rookie Stacey Augmon 17 as Atlanta never trailed in rolling to a victory over Charlotte.

The Hawks snapped a three-game losing streak against the Hornets, who had won five of the previous six meetings with Atlanta.

Rumeal Robinson opened the scoring with a three-point play in the opening minute and the Hawks built leads of 12 points in the first quarter and 16 early in the second.

The Hornets, led by rookie Larry Johnson's 19 points and 14 rebounds in 29 minutes, cut Atlanta's lead to 58-54 on two consecutive 20-footers by Rex Chapman early in the third period.

Bulls 110, Pistons 93

CHICAGO — Scoring the first 12 points of the second half and withstanding a melee at the end of the spree, the Chicago Bulls defeated rival Detroit.

The Bulls had run off the first eight points of the second half when Horace Grant broke loose and scored while colliding with Bill Laimbeer. As Grant fell over, Laimbeer leg-whipped him and Grant went after Laimbeer. The officials broke it up as Grant and Laimbeer drew technicals. Detroit's Isiah Thomas also drew a technical for pushing Scottie Pippen.

Grant and Jordan each made a technical free throw to complete the 12-point run for a 56-41 lead before Joe Dumars converted a three-point play with 8:39 left in the period to halt the slide.

But it was all over for the Pistons as the Bulls went on a 10-4 run to open a 68-48 lead and on to an 81-59 advantage after three quarters.

It was the first meeting of the two rivals since the Bulls swept the Pistons four straight in last season's playoffs on their way to the NBA championship.

Cavs 119, Bucks 113

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Mark Price, playing for the first time in nearly a year, hit his first three shots and inspired two critical surges as the Cleveland Cavaliers won their home opener.

Price missed most of last season and the first five games this season because of a torn anterior cruciate ligament in his left knee sustained last Nov. 30. He was activated for Tuesday's game several weeks ahead of doctors' original expectations, and had 11 points and four assists in 15 minutes.

Brad Daugherty scored 25 points and Craig Ehlo scored 22, including four 3-pointers, helping Cleveland build a 26-point second-half lead. The Bucks hit five 3-point shots in the final three minutes to whittle the margin to six at the end.

Magic 95, Bullets 82

LANDOVER, Md. — Dennis Scott and Nick Anderson each scored 24 points and Orlando overcame another poor shooting performance to give Washington its fifth straight loss.

Scott Skiles had 18 points and six assists for Orlando, which shot only 38 percent but never trailed after taking a 17-16 lead. It was the Magic's first-ever victory at the Capital Centre in four tries.

Orlando, which shot 33 percent in a 31-point loss to Chicago last Saturday, snapped a three-game skid. Washington, which made only 28 of 83 field goal attempts, has not won since opening the season with victories over Indiana and Boston.

Michael Adams led the Bullets with 30 points and 10 assists and Pervis Ellison had 12 points and 12 rebounds.

Knicks 98, Nets 96

NEW YORK — Xavier McDaniel scored 28 points and Patrick Ewing had 24 points and a key block of a shot by rookie Kenny Anderson as New York beat New Jersey.

The victory was the 12th straight at home for the Knicks over the Nets, who last won at Madison Square Garden on March 13, 1987.

But New York had to overcome a 15-point fourth quarter — including just three in the final 6:20 — to defeat the Nets for the sixth consecutive time since the 1989-90 season.

The Knicks led 65-51 three minutes into the second half, but 10 points by Drazen Petrovic in the final 5:19 of the third period helped the Nets close to 83-75.

Travis Mays out for season after ruptured tendon surgery

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Atlanta Hawks guard Travis Mays will miss the rest of the season after surgery Tuesday to repair two ruptured tendons in his right ankle, the team announced.

The 23-year-old Mays was obtained in a July 1 trade from the Sacramento Kings for Spud Webb.

Mays, who attended the University of Texas, had been placed on the injured list on Nov. 8 after sustaining a strained right calf muscle in a Nov. 6 game at home against Utah.

Paul Graham, who had been in the Hawks' training camp, replaced Mays on the roster.

Mays missed all of the preseason with weak ligaments in his right ankle, but was cleared to play in the Hawks' regular-season opener against Detroit. He played seven minutes, scoring 2 points.

He followed that with a 15-point, 25-minute performance in a 98-94 victory over the Jazz before the injury in the second half.

The surgery was performed by Dr. Donald Baxter in Houston. Mays is expected to be in a cast for six weeks before undergoing rehabilitation.

Baker-Finch grabs one-stroke lead over Woosam at PGA Slam

Associated Press

KAUAI LAGOONS, Hawaii — Ian Baker-Finch, the reigning British Open champion, played a steady if unspectacular round of 4-under-par 68 on Tuesday and took a 1-shot lead over Masters champion Ian Woosnam in the $1 million PGA Grand Slam of Golf.

Baker-Finch had four birdies and no bogeys during his tour of the 7,035-yard Kiele Couse at Kauai Lagoons Golf Club, and could have scored better had several birdie putts not lipped out.

Woosnam birdied No. 17 to pull within one shot of the lead after an erratic round of six birdies and three bogeys.

Payne Stewart, the U.S. Open champion, was two strokes back at 70, capping his round with a birdie on 18.

PGA champion John Daly rebounded from a miserable start to shoot a 3-under 33 on the back side for a 1-over 73. Daly had five bogeys on the first eight holes.

Stewart tied Baker-Finch for the lead at 2-under when he birdied No. 11, but dropped back with a bogey on No. 12. Woosnam birdied No. 13 to tie Stewart.

Baker-Finch extended his lead to two shots with a birdie on No. 14 and added a birdie on No. 16 to go 4-under. He just missed a birdie on No. 18 when the ball lipped the cup.

Baker-Finch birdied the third and fifth holes to stand at 2-under 34 at the turn. Woosman and Stewart were one shot behind at that point, with Daly far back at 4-over.

The 36-hole tournament, which brings together the winners of the year's four major toyrnaments, pays $400,000 to the winner, $250,000 for second, $200,000 for third and $150,000 for fourth.

NCAA sues governor of Nevada

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The NCAA, in a case that could test its ability to enforce its rules, is suing the governor of Nevada, UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian and three others over the constitutionality of a new state law.

"We have very reluctantly instituted action in federal court seeking declaratory judgment and injunctive relief," NCAA executive director Dick Schultz said Tuesday. "I say reluctantly because the association since it was founded in 1906 has been in court many times, but this is only the third time the NCAA has ever instituted legal action. We're doing it only as a last resort."

The NCAA will challenge the statute, enacted earlier this year ostensibly to force the NCAA to guarantee due prodcess, on four legal points. Schultz admitted that if the NCAA loses, its ability to pursue other cases in other states could be compromised.

The suit, filed in federal court in Reno, Nev., names as defendants Nevada Gov. Robert F. Miller; Tarkanian, who has agreed in a deal with university officials to step down after this season as basketball coach; UNLV assistant coaches Tim Grgurich and Ronald Ganulin, and Shelly Fischer, a former academic advisor at UNLV.

NCAA officials said the governor was named because he is the chief law enforcement officer of the state. The others were named, they said, because their attorneys have indicated they will use the law to thwart the investigation.

The NCAA will claim the law is impeding the NCAA's pursuit of its current case against UNLV, which involves 29 allegations and centers on the recruitment of former New York prep star Lloyd Daniels, who never did play for the Rebels.

"In fact, we find ourselves dead in the water. We're unable to proceed without violating Nevada law and subjecting ourselves to legal action and to significant punitive damages required by the law," Schultz said. "Do we process this case or do we forget about it and go away?"

"You hate to see litigation involving UNLV and intercollegiate athletics under any circumstances," UNLV legal counsel Brad Booke said. "Clearly from the university's point of view the most important thing is to get this infractions case behind it. I hope this litigation can help in that direction."

Phillips to eliminate more jobs

■ Review panel to decide which jobs are uncessary.

Associated Press

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. — Phillips Petroleum Co., in keeping with a plan to boost its cash flow by $200 million a year, will cut some jobs that a review panel deems unnecessary, the company said Tuesday.

"We cannot control the prices of our products or the state of the nation's economy," said C.J. Silas, chairman and chief executive officer of the nation's 11th largest oil company.

"We can only control the costs of our operations by the way we organize and perform our activities."

A team comprised of 25 Phillips employees — middle and upper management — will spend the next five months analyzing the value of various activities at Phillips' headquarters in Bartlesville.

"There will be job cuts, but we do not have a target number," spokesman Jere Smith said. "The first thing they will do is the activity analysis. At that point in time, they come up with a number."

New York-based McKinsey & Company will work with the team in analyzing the value of various functions, but Silas said the final recommendations will come from Phillips' employees.

The streamlining project is "to eliminate unnecessary work and fundamentally change the way we work so only higher value functions are performed," Silas said.

Since Phillips announced in September its goal to improve cash flow, a number of cost reductions have been identified and jobs eliminated.

Smith could not say how many jobs were cut from which departments because those employees will not be told until the end of the month. Severances related to those cuts will result in about a $15 million pre-tax charge against fourth-quarter earnings, the company said.

No special early retirement plan is expected to be offered with the job cuts related to the streamlining project, Silas said, but enhanced severances will be developed.

NEW YORK — Oil prices fell Tuesday for a seventh-straight session, with plunging gasoline and home heating oil futures dragging them down.

But after the market was closed, the American Petroleum Institute reported that the nation's supply of gasoline had fallen to its lowest level since 1973, making some traders wonder whether the prices would stop falling.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in December had settled at $22.50 per barrel, down 8 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. Since the beginning of last week, oil has fallen $1.32 per barrel.

After the oil markets were closed for the day, the American Petroleum Institute reported that the U.S. supplies of gasoline and home heating oil fell last week, while crude oil stocks were higher.

The gasoline supply fell by 4.1 million barrels, to 200.2 million, well below the 205 million barrels considered by the government to be the nation's minimum operating level. The supply had not been that low since the week of May 25, 1973, when it stood at 198.4 million barrels, the API said.

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar was mixed against other currencies Tuesday as traders continued to speculate about the direction of interest rates in the United States and overseas.

The dollar was little changed against the mark in New York, edging up to 1.6400 marks from 1.6399 late Monday.

The dollar slipped against the Japanese yen, falling to 129.95 yen in New York from 130.05 yen on Monday.

State DQ restaurants sue parent company

■ Texas franchises sue American Dairy Queen Inc. over the advertising and menu.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Dairy Queen, the fast-food chain that made Peanut Buster Parfaits and "The Dude" hamburger standard fare across the state, is broiling deep in a franchise squabble.

Operators of the more than 800 DQ restaurants in Texas have sued Minneapolis-based American Dairy Queen Inc. to protect various rights they feel are in jeopardy.

"The Texas franchisees have been in charge of their own advertising and their own food system for years and years," said Homer Price, the attorney representing the Texas Dairy Queen Operators Council.

"But (ADQ) doesn't like Texas being any different from the rest of their system," Price said.

Texas operators like having control of their $7 million marketing campaign, which they say has proven more successful than national ads. Texas DQs use a

Trade deficit will likely widen by $5 billion to 10 billion, official says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit, which has been improving for the past four years, will worsen next year as sluggish world demand dampens American export growth, the Bush administration said Tuesday.

Treasury Undersecretary David Mulford, testifying to Congress on the administration's semi-annual trade and exchange rate report, said that the merchandise trade deficit was likely to widen by between $5 billion and $10 billion next year.

Mulford said the administration was expecting this year's deficit to drop to $65 billion. That forecast, which is in line with private economists' expectations, would represent a decline from last year's $101.7 billion deficit and mark the first time since 1984 that America's trade deficit has been below $100 billion.

The Treasury report noted with concern that trade imbalances are rising again in Japan. The deficit with Japan is likely to account for two-thirds of America's total imbalance this year.

While the total U.S. trade deficit is expected to fall by 36 percent this year, the deficit with Japan is expected to show little if any improvement.

The administration also singled out China for criticism in the trade report, noting that the Chinese government is engaged in a variety of practices that make it difficult for American products to be sold in the country.

Mulford said the deficit with China would likely hit $12 billion this year, the second biggest imbalance of any country.

Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md. and chairman of the Senate Banking subcommittee on international finance that held Tuesday's hearing, accused the administration of failing to do enough to pressure Japan and China to purchase American products.

Sarbanes complained about a complicated system of licensing and other restrictions China employes to keep American exports out of the country while targeting the U.S. market for

A reception honoring West Texas travel agents is scheduled for Thursday at the Dobbs Houses Restaurant in the Midland International Airport, beginning at 5:30 p.m.

Sponsors are Midland and Odessa Convention and Visitors Bureaus, Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, Midland International, Dobbs Houses, Pecan International and American Airlines.

Midland chamber officials note that "Tourism and conventions are multi-million dollar industries in the Permian Basin. Some of the 'unsung heros' of this vital economic effort are the travel agents and other tourism and hospitality professionals who are welcoming and serving visitors to West Texas every day."

Companies learn lay-off tact

By L.M. Sixel
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — When Tenneco Oil Co. had a mass layoff a few years ago, it was a public relations disaster.

The company, a former subsidiary of Tenneco, passed out taxi vouchers to the employees it had laid off minutes earlier. Since so many belonged to car pools, the company provided a way home during the middle of the day.

But taxi drivers got wind of it, and soon cabs were lining up in front of Tenneco to transport the laid-off workers home. It was a vivid scene captured by television cameras.

Last month, when Tenneco's corporate headquarters laid off 230 employees, it approached the problem with more tact, planning and communication.

"It was very dignified," said Veronica Wissing, a secretary who was called into her boss's office and told of her layoff.

"They went out of their way to make sure I was well taken care of for the next 12 months," Wissing said. Tenneco will continue to provide medical and dental care for the next year and gave Wissing six months of severance pay.

WISSING IS among hundreds of people who have lost their jobs in Houston in recent months as one company after another has laid off people from the secretarial pool to the executive suite.

Years ago, news of such layoffs came in pink slips stuffed into pay envelopes.

But, stung by criticism for their insensitivity, companies have become much more conscientious about how they handle job cuts.

Today, many companies hire consultants to learn the right approaches, survey other companies to ensure they offer a competitive severance package and try to boost morale of the employees who stay.

A thoughtful send-off goes a long way toward fostering good will with former and current employees, helps prevent lawsuits from angry former workers and makes future recruiting easier.

"A well-planned, well-executed downsizing protects productivity over the long term," said Michael King, a partner with King Chapman Broussard & Gallagher, a management and outplacement consulting firm in Houston. "If people are indiscriminately thrown out the windows," King said, the remaining employees are left wondering about their own fates.

AFTER TELLING employees for months that normal attrition would take care of any necessary job cuts, Frito-Lay closed its Dallas headquarters Sept. 16 and told each employee in individual conferences whether they had a job, said one mid-level manager who got the ax.

The company offered reduced severance benefits for employees who would not sign an agreement not to sue the company or say anything unfavorable about it, Frito-Lay spokeswoman Beverly Holmes said. Employees can appeal the agreement in seven days if they feel they were unfairly selected.

"It was handled so poorly," said the manager, who asked not to be identified.

Deciding how to tell employees about layoffs has become as important for many companies as deciding who to lay off.

Supervisors want to soften the blow and say things like, "You've been here for 35 years, and we really appreciate your years of service. However . . .," said King of King Chapman Broussard & Gallagher.

But that nice talk only adds to the pain because the employee's first thought is, "Then why are you firing me?" he said.

A MORE humane way is to say, "I regret to inform you that your job has (been eliminated)," he said. That way, the event is quickly out on the table.

King recommends companies tell employees individually, not in groups.

Instead of keeping layoffs secret until the minute they occur, some companies are notifying employees a week or two in advance about possible layoffs. Compaq, for example, announced it would lay off 12 percent of its work force, representing more than 1,400 employees, but would not notify the specific individuals for two weeks.

Compaq decided to split up the announcements because it thought the move would catch too many employees off balance, said company spokeswoman Nora Hahn.

Consultants are divided on the effectiveness of that technique.

"I hate that," said Brent Longnecker, a partner with KPMG Peat Marwick in Houston. "The minute you do that, productivity starts rocketing down" as employees sit around the lunchroom talking about the news.

During the one-week lag between the time Tenneco announced it would lay off employees and when individual employees were told, some say they did little work.

To ease an employee's financial strain, many companies offer severance pay, which can vary from a week to more than a year.

Continental Airlines, which has sought protection from its creditors in bankruptcy court, laid off 265 employees in Houston this summer and gave them all two weeks of severance pay.

At Union Texas Petroleum, employees received a minimum of 3½ months of salary after the company sold its domestic onshore, offshore and gas processing businesses. William Ocel, who worked for Union Texas for five years as a corrosion engineer, is eligible for nine months of severance pay.

Employees were treated in a "first-class" way, Ocel said.

Union Texas Petroleum also is providing outplacement help. The University of Houston Career Resource Center is teaching laid-off Union Texas workers how to write a resume, call prospective employers, answer interview questions and handle a sagging ego.

TRADE: Administration critical of practices employed by China

many Chinese exports.

"We are being taken to the cleaners in U.S.-China trade," he told Mulford.

Mulford said the administration still believed the best way to deal with the various problems confronting American producers was through the five-year effort to overhaul global trade rules under the auspices of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Those negotiations, known as the Uruguay Round for the country where they began in 1986, have been essentially deadlocked since the end of last year over the issue of farm subsidies. The United States has been pressing for near total elimination of trade distorting agricultural subsidies over a decade but has met stiff opposition from the 12-nation European Community.

However, U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills told reporters Tuesday that she was somewhat encouraged following discussions over the weekend between EC officials and President Bush.

The United States had been demanding that export subsidies be reduced by 90 percent over the next decade with cuts of 75 percent in domestic supports and border protection.

Hills, during a conference call from South Korea, refused to confirm news reports that the United States had lowered its demand to a 35 percent cut in export subsidies and 30 percent reductions in the other two areas over five years.

But she did tell reporters that the United States had suggested to EC negotiators, "If you can't take it in one bite, what would you think of two bites."

DQ: Company wants menu consistent in all states unique slogan — "This is DQ country" — promoted by folksy television personality Bob Phillips.

(From 5C)

But the franchisor in 1986, according to court documents, "fraudulently" lured 164 of 200 Texas franchise units to sign agreements allowing ADQ to direct the advertising fees to Minneapolis, rather than to regional councils, in effect stymying state advertising efforts.

Texas operators also fear for the fate of their menu, which is heavy on Mexican selections and boasts "Hungr Busters" hamburgers larger than standard DQ varieties.

"American Dairy doesn't have a quarter-pounder, and our research shows Texans prefer a bigger burger," said Greg Regian, president of Regian Advertising, which handles the Texas operators' campaign.

Mike Sullivan, president and chief operator of the franchisor, said the Texas council is trying to overstep its bounds. ADQ has 4,600 units across the country.

"The council is interfering with our ability to run a franchise system in Texas," Sullivan said. "(The council) is trying to expand its activities, and they are trying to do it through a lawsuit funded by dollars that should be spent on advertising."

The franchisor wants more coordination among menus in various states, Sullivan said.

Three of the four lawsuits brought in August 1990 will be heard in a Fort Worth federal district court beginning in February. The fourth will be heard in a state district court in Tarrant County.

Hearty Grains is easy bread from can

By Linda Anderson

Pillsbury seems to have adjusted its philosophy for the '90s: If "nothin' says lovin' like something from the oven," then whole-grain, low-fat and no-cholesterol goodness can only make it healthier.

Anderson

Hearty Grains from Pillsbury is a variation on a theme. The company has become known for its canned and otherwise convenient quick-cooking breads and pastries. Two or three generations of cooks have learned how easy it is to make "homemade" biscuits, breadsticks, pie crusts, cinnamon rolls, pizza crust and donuts from Pillsbury canned biscuits.

Hearty Grains canned biscuits have the same convenience as regular canned biscuits, but with healthy additions (whole grains) and subtractions (low fat, no cholesterol).

We tried a can of Hearty Grains for taste, price and advertising accuracy. Hearty Grains are available in four varieties — multi-grain biscuits, oatmeal raisin biscuits, country oatmeal twists and cracked wheat and honey twists. We tried the cracked wheat and honey twists for two reasons: (1) I'm partial to wheat breads; and (2) the only two varieties available at the time were cracked wheat and honey, and oatmeal raisin biscuits, and there's no way in the world I could have conned my children into eating oatmeal and raisin anything.

An 11-ounce can of Hearty Grains cost $1.69 and made 10 twists. This particular shape is handy because, not only can it be twisted into sticks as directed on the package, but it can be made into cinnamon rolls or plain biscuits or even long, skinny, not-twisted bread sticks. It's a very versatile shape for canned dough to come in.

Information from the company claims Hearty Grains are "a new line of refrigerated biscuits and twists, the first to provide satisfying whole grain taste and crunchy texture in quick, ready-to-bake form. The four Hearty Grains items also offer an excellent nutrition profile: low fat, no cholesterol, and a good source of complex carbohydrates, the starches in our foods which give us energy, vitamins, minerals and fiber."

Nutrition information on the label lists each twist as containing 80 calories, 2 grams fat (that's 18 calories from fat) and no cholesterol. I'm not so sure about them being a "good source" of the complex carbohydrates that give us "vitamins, minerals and fiber," since each twist also is listed as containing only 4 percent of the protein, thiamine, niacin and iron; and 2 percent of the riboflavin and phosphorus suggested in the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance of these nutrients. Dietary fiber is listed as 1 gram per serving.

In the taste test, the Hearty Grains were very tasty, for canned biscuit dough. One small taste-tester, who doesn't really like wheat bread, actually did finish her twist — but it took her a while. The other young tester ate three of them. I thought they tasted a lot like canned biscuits with some cracked wheat thrown in.

Canned biscuits can be a real time-saver for cooks in a hurry, and, as I've mentioned before, they are very versatile. But will I buy them again? Maybe. They weren't bad, but for canned biscuits they were kind of expensive.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Price at other locations may vary.

Holiday Baking Hotline on line to help with any culinary crisis

Staff Report

Your fudge is failing, your dough is dry and your gingerbread house is caving in. What can you do when baking blunders turn your "Ho, Ho, Ho's" into "Oh, Oh, No's?" Just pick up the telephone.

This year, the Land O'Lakes Holiday Baking Hotline can answer all of your cookie baking and candy making questions. Whether you're facing a culinary crisis, or simply need to know about ingredient substitutions, help is just a phone call away.

By dialing 1-800-782-9606, you'll be connected to an expert team of home economists. And you'll receive a free leaflet entitled "Sweet Treats," which offers mouth-watering recipes and photographs for holiday goodies, such as "Best Ever Butter Cookies" and "Buttery Pecan Caramels." This leaflet also provides useful tips to help you ensure successful baking all year.

"Many of the questions we received related to common baking and candy making concerns, such as how to avoid separated toffee or how to make a batter the proper consistency," said Lydia Botham, director of consumer affairs/test kitchens for Land O'Lakes Inc. "We did have some unexpected calls, such as a bachelor who was trying his hand at cookie baking. His smoke detector kept going off and he was afraid if he opened the oven, his cookies would fall."

This year, home economists will be on call 8 a.m.-6 p.m. Dec. 1-22, to answer all of the season's baking and candy making questions.

Brochure helps people to 'Eat Right with the Dietary Guidelines'

Staff Report

DALLAS — How should consumers eat to stay healthy? "Eating Right with the Dietary Guidelines," a new brochure, helps answer this question.

The brochure was developed by Food Marketing Institute (FMI) in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) and U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS).

It is a condensed version of the USDA/HHS booklet "Nutrition and Your Health: Dietary Guidelines for Americans."

According to a recent FMI consumer study, two-thirds of shoppers believed their diet could be at least somewhat healthier. The new brochure offers a variety of sensible eating tips recommended by the federal government.

The guidelines give healthy Americans the best, most current advice from nutrition experts: eat a variety of foods; maintain a healthy weight; choose a diet low in fat, saturated fat and cholesterol; choose a diet with plenty of vegetables, fruits and grain products; use sugars only in moderation; use salt and sodium only in moderation; and if you drink alcoholic beverages, do so in moderation.

This eight-panel brochure will be made available to supermakets for distribution to their customers.

Reproducible slicks also are available for sale from FMI, so organizations may personalize the publication with their names and additional information.

For more information on ordering quantities of the color brochure or camera-ready copy, write to: Consumer Affairs Department, Food Maketing Institute, 1750 K Street, N.W., Washington, DC, 10006-2394.

Consumers can obtain a free copy of the "Nutrition and Your Health: Dietary Guidelines for Americans" through the Consumer Information Center, Department 514-X, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

DEAR ABBY

Neither Kent State nor its memories are peaceful

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I must take exception to your response to Karen A. Tamura of Cerritos, Calif., concerning the Vietnam War.

Van Buren

You said that National Guard units fired into a group of peaceful demonstrators at Kent State University, killing four and wounding nine.

Mobs are seldom "peaceful." These "students" confronting the National Guard at Kent State that day in 1970 constituted a mob. Their zeal for a cause led them astray. Four had to die before reason regained the upper hand. They were armed with bricks, rocks and clubs, and were scarcely in a mood to exercise discretion. It is ever so easy, after the fact, to declare what was should not have been. — ALLAN E. BOVEY, SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

DEAR ALLAN: Read on:

DEAR ABBY: For years I have fumed as I read the sob stories about the "peaceful anti-war demonstrators" at Kent State. I know Vietnam wasn't a popular war — I hated it, too. It is too bad these demonstrators were killed — but peaceful? NO!

1. These "peaceful" demonstrators burned the ROTC building.
2. These "peaceful" demonstrators had been ordered to leave, but refused.
3. These National Guardsmen were about the same age as the "peaceful" demonstrators. They were there obeying orders. Wouldn't you feel your life was threatened if you were a member of a small group facing a large crowd who was pelting you with stones and other missiles? Small wonder someone panicked and fired.

Everyone has heard about the "peaceful" demonstrators who were injured or killed, but the public has never heard about the guardsman who phoned his young wife and cried as he told her what he had seen, and who today, at age 48, still has problems as a result of what happened that day, and the subsequent questioning and harassment these innocent young men were subjected to because of the Kent State riots!

No, I wasn't there — but my 22-year-old brother was an Ohio National Guardsman protecting his country, his state and the taxpayers' lives and property. — HAD IT WITH KENT STATE IN OHIO

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps being attacked with bricks, bottles, etc., is a peaceful demonstration to you, but those 18-year-old guardsmen were scared into retaliation. Where, oh where, has the truth gone? — PHYLLIS GOLLESLIN, MELBOURNE, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: The governor of Ohio did not send for the state National Guard because of "peaceful anti-war demonstrators" at Kent State in May 1970. Mobs of raging students were roaming the campus — pillaging and burning everything in sight (including whole buildings). Local authorities were terrified and helpless. Blame the issuance of live ammunition to a group of frightened soldiers, completely inexperienced in mob control, who were being shouted at, spit on, or hit by bricks and rocks. These guardsmen were no older than the students.

Abby, please read current accounts (unbiased) before wrongfully reporting this terrible tragedy. — DAVID PAIGE, PUYALLUP, WASH.

DEAR DAVID AND DEAR READERS: My source for the explanation of the Vietnam War and reference to Kent State came from the World Book Encyclopedia. I felt that this was an unbiased account, and it was in no way intended to mislead or inflame. Referring to it as a "peaceful" demonstration was my mistake. I now know the truth.

Holiday side dish is eye-catching

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

This red and green duo makes an eye-catching, taste-pleasing holiday side dish. Radishes, like onions, have a milder flavor when cooked.

VELVETY PEAS AND RADISHES

1 cup radishes, sliced
1 cup frozen peas
2 tablespoons water
½ cup milk
1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon dried dillweed
⅛ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon lemon-pepper seasoning

In 20-ounce microwave-safe casserole combine radishes, peas and water. Cook, covered, on 100 percent power (high) for 5 to 7 minutes or until vegetables are tender, stirring once. Drain. Cover to keep warm.

In 2-cup glass measure stir together milk, flour, dillweed, salt and lemon-pepper seasoning. Cook, uncovered, on high for 1½ to 2½ minutes or until thickened and bubbly, stirring every 30 seconds; stir into hot vegetables. Makes 3 side-dish servings.

Even best cooks take shortcuts

By Anne Byrn
N.Y. Times News Service

There is no shame in a shortcut — especially when it's 5 p.m., you've worked all day and everybody wants to know "How soon is dinner?"

So stop feeling guilty and take the advice of a growing number of serious foodies who have started to understand your workday reality. Many of them have been taking shortcuts behind closed kitchen doors for years. Now they're confessing to them in public — and in cookbooks.

Michele Urvater, a New York professional cook, wrote the "Monday to Friday Cookbook," (Workman, $14.95) so people like her — with "complicated lives and sophisticated tastes" — could cope.

Her survival tactics include:

- A well-stocked pantry.
- Advance planning.
- Cooking double batches on Sunday.

At General Mills, the home of Betty Crocker, home economists call weekday cuisine "assembly cooking." Recipes that mix canned, deli, frozen and fresh foods are included in "Betty Crocker's 40th Anniversary Cookbook" (Prentice Hall, $22).

"You might stop by the deli for some meat, pick up sliced fruits for dessert and vegetables at the supermarket salad bar for a quick stir-fry, or have a from-scratch meal stashed in the freezer at home," says Marcia Copeland, Betty Crocker's director of food and publications.

Even professional chefs with hectic schedules are feeling the time pinch. Jacques Pepin, nationally known cooking instructor and author of "The Short-Cut Cook" (Morrow, $19.95), says, "Without question, my goal is to prepare delicious food with the least amount of cooking and cleaning."

That might mean tossing frozen hash browns into a pot of soup instead of peeling and chopping fresh potatoes. Or, for unexpected guests, whipping up a hot fruit gratin with frozen raspberries and poundcake.

Pepin admits he has drawn the ire of colleagues for suggesting shortcuts. "Just because you're saving some time to get a good hot meal on the table during the week doesn't mean you'll never cook from scratch again."

California attorney files lawsuit over lead levels in fine china

N.Y. Times News Service

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — State Attorney General Dan Lungren filed a lawsuit against 10 makers of everyday and fine china, saying the companies failed to warn consumers of potentially hazardous lead exposure from the tableware.

"What's in the dinner plate may well turn out to be more of a health hazard than anything on the dinner plate," said David Roe, a lawyer for the Environmental Defense Fund, which filed a separate lawsuit to stop the companies from selling their products in California without warning labels.

Gil Weill, a spokesman for the Coalition for Safe Ceramicware, an industry group, said that the lawsuit was "disappointing and a disservice to the consumer."

The products of the 10 defendant companies are "totally safe," he said.

Lungren and Roe stressed that not all china contains dangerous levels of lead and added that some of the products made by the 10 companies named in the lawsuits are lead-free or contain levels so low as to not require a warning label.

"We do not want to start a nationwide panic with respect to lead levels in tableware," Lungren told reporters at a Capitol press conference on Tuesday. "We want to raise a level of concern."

The lead in ceramic tableware such as china plates, saucers, pitchers, bowls and cups is contained in the glaze used to seal and protect the clay. Some foods can interact with the glaze, causing the lead to leech into them.

Lungren said he was bringing the lawsuit under Proposition 65, the 1986 initiative that requires warning labels on products that contain substances known to cause cancer or birth defects.

Lead can damage the brain development of a fetus or of young children and also affects ovulation and sperm production. More than half of the lead an individual ingests remains in the body for 20 years or more.

Airlines drop fares to lure winter travelers

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. airlines, still staggering from the recession, announced fare sales Tuesday that they hope will lure more passengers during the traditionally slow winter months.

Despite some fine-print limitations, the discounts promise savings of hundreds of dollars on destinations many potential flyers may have dismissed as unaffordable in these tight economic times.

But industry analysts said the tickets were so cheap that airlines cannot make money on them, and are largely a way for the carriers to cut their losses.

USAir was a main catalyst for the discounting, offering domestic fares for as low as $138 round trip. Trans World Airlines offered half-price international business fares, although Northeast travelers won't be able to exploit them because that competitive region is excluded from the promotion.

Three airlines, American, United and Northwest, quickly said they would match the USAir sale, but were still studying TWA's offer.

Selling cheap seats to business travelers is particularly painful for the airlines, because those travelers pay the most and tend to travel regardless of price.

"Carriers like American make money from international operations, so they've got to think hard about that one," said Mark Daugherty, a securities analyst who follows the airlines for Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

Continental Airlines said it would match both sales, although it was excluding Houston-London and Denver-London because the airline believes it could lose too much on those routes.

Other major carriers, including Delta, Pan Am and America West, said they were scrutinizing both offers.

The sale comes as the airlines are concluding another devastating year, following the record losses absorbed in 1990.

Senators join to press law protecting kids

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Senators from the left and right joined Tuesday in pressing for a law to protect children in day-care facilities from abuse, a topic brought dramatically to their attention by talk-show hostess Oprah Winfrey.

Winfrey, who has said she was sexually abused by a distant relative when she was 9 years old, told a hearing: "I am speaking out on behalf of the children who wish to be heard, but whose cries, wishes and hopes often fall upon deaf or inattentive ears."

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., heard Winfrey and other witnesses on a bill the senator intends to introduce that was drafted with the help of Winfrey and former Illinois Republican Gov. James Thompson, now a lobbyist.

A similar bill by Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., is part of the omnibus crime bill that has passed both houses and is in a House-Senate conference committee.

If approved and signed into law, the legislation would set up a nationwide registry of information on convicted child abusers and other offenders. Day-care centers could check the backgrounds of prospective workers through the registry, even when the workers moved from state to state.

Texas is one of a few states that have their own similar background check, but it stops at the state line.

Gordon Hardy, inspector general for the Texas Department of Human Services, told the committee the legislation "is a very positive thing for us, (because) it expands the ability to get at criminal histories."

In the Texas fiscal year that ended Aug. 31, more than 115,000 people were screened through Department of Public Safety records. The checks turned up 860 with "relevant criminal history," he said.

States can get national criminal history information through the FBI, but only in a cumbersome and slow process with a $23 fee for each person checked, Hardy said. The Biden and McConnell proposals would computerize the process and deny some federal funds to states that do not participate.

Winfrey said it was not her own experience that moved her to draft legislation, but rather the story of Angelica Mena. The 4-year-old Chicago child set out last winter from her second-floor apartment to visit an aunt on the first floor and was abducted by a man in an adjacent room. He molested and strangled her and threw the body into Lake Michigan, Winfrey said.

He was "a repeated, convicted child molester," Winfrey said. "I wept for that child I never knew."

She said she researched the issue of child abusers, found there is "no reliable way of screening potential child-care workers" and sought Thompson's help in drafting suggested legislation.

Winfrey's child-abuse experience and the Mena case did not involve day-care situations, she said, but she pinpointed day care in the legislation as "one small part of the picture" that she thought could lead to effective regulation.

Winfrey said there are 2.5 million reports of child abuse and neglect annually in the United States. "But the experts tell me ... there are millions upon millions of silent victims in this country."

Some witnesses cautioned that the federal legislation should not raise false hopes. Associate Professor Linda Williams of the University of New Hampshire Family Research Lab said her research shows children are as likely to be sexually abused in their own homes as in day care centers.

Gordon G. Martin, Washington representative for two large, private, child-care providers, said the "vast majority" of child abusers have never been arrested, so they would not have a record that would show up on a national registry.

MOONLIGHTING!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.
OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:
Is it worthwhile for adults also? Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
• ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
• MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
• COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
• SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.
How much money can I make as a distributor?
Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!
How long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!
When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.
Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!
